The 1991 Fort Benning hunting season has begun and with it will come the all- too familiar phrase "I thought it was a deer," when in all actuality it was another hunter walking through the woods.

Now is the time to refresh your memory on what a deer looks like not when your'e on a tree stand out in the middle of the woods. Safety should be on the minds of everyone who will venture into the great outdoors in search of the wily whitetail deer.

Brian Smith, marketing director for the Directorate of Community Activities, and an avid hunter on the Fort Benning Reservation explains,"When going into the woods on post, make sure you check the range maps for the area you intend to hunt that day and all subsequent days to follow. Training schedules change every day, so the area you want to hunt one day may not be open the next."

Post regulations also require the hunter to use the call-in, call-out system so range personnel know who is in a particular area on any given day.

If you are like most hunters you want to be in the area you plan to hunt well before daylight.

For those who are not familiar to this part of the country, there are critters out and about at this time of year that if you walk up on one in the dark, your hunting trip will be over quickly Rattlesnakes, water mocassins and copperheads are indigenous to this area and do not go into hibernation until sometime in November, so carry a flashlight and watch where you step. Better yet, invest in a pair of snake chaps; they could be the best item you'll buy for a hunting trip.

Stay away from the "Dud" areas there are unexploded rounds in these areas That's why they're off limits, not because the big deer hang out in these areas. Exclusion and development areas are also off limits.

When you start your trip out to a range area, you will also need to wear your hunter orange vest or coat along with an orange cap of some type. Post and state laws require that you wear it at all times while in the woods.

See and be seen should be on your mind any time your'e in the woods how many times have you heard the story when someone got shot, "I thought it was a deer".

Identify your target before you think about squeezing the trigger; it could be your best friend walking up to tell you he'd just shot the biggest buck of his life and he needs you to carry it out for him.

After five years of hunting on the Fort Benning reservation, Smith states,"It's very easy to get lost on this post due to the simple fact that it is so large Carry a compass to help find your way in as well as out. If you don't have a compass and become confused about where your'e at, walk until you come to a dirt road, stay on the road and walk until the road starts to look well worn, then stay put someone will come along and help you get out."

Accidents have a way of just happening, If we all take a little extra time to see what it is were shooting at or condition ourselves to look at what's around us our hunting trips will go a lot smoother and maybe we won't hear the story,"I thought it was a deer."

CBS covers World Series

By JIM GAFFNEY
Tribune Media Services

"I knew that our second season would be easier than our first," says baseball analyst Tim McCarver. "For a broadcast team, that's just natural."

Having successfully passed through a "growing-pains" stage not uncommon in new partnerships, McCarver and play-by-play man Jack Buck will be in the home park of the American League champion Minnesota Twins on Saturday, when CBS televises game one of the 1991 World Series. Should the best-of-seven Series go the full distance, the final game will air Oct. 27. (Broadcast time for all games is 8 p.m. ET.)

McCarver admits the problems he and Buck had last season were expected ... as were the improvements the team has made since. "I wouldn't say the work last year was tedious," he says, "but getting used to each other's styles was something (Jack and I) had to work on, and I think that learning process unfolded this season in fine fashion. Jack uses the word 'perking,' and I agree that's the proper term for (our work) this year."

Fellow CBS announcer "Jim Kaat worked over 100 games for the Twins this season," says McCarver, "and he told me that the work ethic of that club is as solid as any he's ever seen. The players enjoy going to the ballpark.

"That's one of the problems with the 'modern' ballplayer," McCarver adds. "As the money has gone up, the enjoyment of the game has gone down. I don't see the guys having fun playing anymore. Oh, some still do, like Spike Owen, Jay Bell and Bobby Bonilla. They just exude enthusiasm. Unfortunately, that kind of player is a dinosaur in baseball. As Willie Stargell said, "'They don't say 'Work ball,' they say, 'Play ball.'" The refreshing thing about this season was seeing Minnesota — and the Atlanta Braves, too — enjoying themselves like they have."

On the senior circuit, the Pittsburgh Pirates defended their NL East crown in impressive fashion, clinching the division on Sept. 22. McCarver says much of the credit should go to the coaches: "One of the things that (pitching coach) Ray Miller and (manager) Jim Leyland have done in Pittsburgh, is to get as much out of their pitching staff as any coach and manager team has done in quite some time. name' players in the bullpen and few 'name' players in the starting rotation, it's been remarkable."

As this publication went to press, the Atlanta Braves and the Minnesota Twins were battling to determine who would represent the National League in the World Series.

After the World Series, McCarver's attention turns to his next assignment: the Winter Olympics, telecasts of which begin Feb. 8. When CBS offered him the prime-time co-host role last September, McCarver found it too good an opportunity to turn down, despite his acknowledged lack of experience.

"I don't like to use the word 'chal-lenge,'" he says, "because it implies that the job might be too big for me, and I don't think this one is. While I haven't worked as much in the studio as I have in the field, I learn quickly, and I've always been a fan of the Winter Olympics."

Fair, arts & crafts and cook off set

Visitors to Lumpkin on Nov.. 2 can experience three big events rolled into one.

Westville's Fair of 1850, the Stewart County Historical Commission's Heritage Arts and Crafts Show, the Stewart County Wildgame and Fish Cookoff will be combined into one major event called Heritage Days.

Westville's Fair of 1850, a perennial favorite for history buffs, will take place from Wednesday through Nov.. 5. Special activities include the operation of the only existing animal-powered cotton gin still in operation, cane grinding and syrup making, lace making, and special music of the 1850 period. Original paintings of the area and Westville's master garden plan will be on display. The resident craftsmen will be working in and around the 25 restored buildings of the re-created village of 1850.

The Stewart County Historical Commission's 25th arts and crafts show will be moved to Westville's parking area and will be called the Heritage Arts and Crafts Show. For the first time, this will be a juried show and the displays and demonstrations will be limited to traditional arts and crafts in keeping with the historic nature of Westville. Special features of the show will be a country store filled with donated handmade items, canned goods, needlework, and a Tea Room where homebaked goods will be sold. All proceeds will be used for preservation and civic projects. The date is Nov.. 2

Also on Nov.. 2, the Stewart County Wildgame and Fish Cookoff, the official Georgia cookoff, will take place at the Stewart County Campground adjacent to Westville. Sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce, cooking teams from far and near compete in three categories: big game, small game and fish. More than $2,500 in cash and prizes will be awarded. A turkey calling contest and other entertainment will add to the day.

Food in keeping with the Heritage Days theme can be obtained at all three areas. Special discount tickets that include all three events will be available at the gate. Free shuttle and parking will be provided.

Faculty concert series starts Thursday

Columbus College

The Columbus College Quartet will perform at the opening concert of the 1991-92 Faculty Concert Series Thursday at 8 p.m. in the college's Davidson Student Center auditorium.

Sponsored by the Schwob Department of Music, the concert will feature faculty artists Patricio Cobos on the violin, Anne Diaz on the piano, Manuel Diaz on the viola, and Martha Gerschefski, on the Opening the program will be two works by Bohuslav Martinu, a 20th century composer who moved to the United States from Bohemia in 1941 to accept a teaching position at Princeton University. Sonata No. 2 for Cello and Piano is among the first works he composed after coming to America, and is one of three which Martinu composed for cello and piano. It will be performed by Martha Gerschefski and Anne Diaz.

Performing Martinu's Three Madrigals for Violin and Viola will be violinist Patricio Cobos and violist Manuel Diaz.

Following intermission the four artists will join to perform the Piano Quartet in C Minor, the least known piano quartet composed by Johannes Brahms.

Showcasing the college's artist faculty and guests, the Faculty Concert Series provides ar opportunity for Columbus audiences to enjoy the talent that abounds in the Schwob Department of Music. The series also generates income to support music scholarships for talented students.

The 1991-92 series will include six concerts, and tickets for the season can be purchased for $20 for an individual and $45 for a family. Tickets for the concert are $7, and both season and single admission tickets can be purchased at the door or in advance at the Schwob Department of Music's office in the college's Fine Arts Hall. Columbus College faculty and staff each receive two complimentary season tickets, and all students are admitted free.

The Davidson Student Center auditorium is accessible to the physically impaired, and persons requiring special assistance are requested to telephone the Schwob Department of Music for advance arrangements.

For additional information and ticket requests, contact Columbus College Schwob Department of Music at 568-2049.

Top female singer to perform

The 1991 "Top New Female Vocalist," Academy of Country Music Winner, Shelby Lynne will perform at the Dallas Club in Columbus Nov. 22. Showtime is 10 p.m.

Lynne's initial Nashville recognition came in late 1987 when —on the strength of a demo tape — appeared on TNN's "Nashville Now." The next morning she had offers from four record labels and a call from Billy Sherrill to produce her music.

She signed with Epic Records in 1989, Sunrise, her debut album was released. Her second album, Tough All Over, was released in 1990. Her performance on both albums received rave critical reviews.

The first two singles from Tough All Over, "I'll Lie Myself To Sleep," and "Things Are Tough All Over," were accompanied by videos and both songs went top twenty.

Her new disc, Soft Talk, is a combination of great songs and excellent vocals. The up-tempo "Dont Cross Your Heart," is -the brand new single from Soft Talk.

Seldom do young performs create the "buzz" that Lynne has. At the New Faces Show during Country Radio Seminar, Lynne received a standing ovation after both songs she performed from what is considered as one of the toughest audiences for a young artist to perform before.

Army offers early out

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

Soldiers with at least three years of active service can apply to leave the Army during fiscal 1992, whether they have three months or three years left to serve in their current enlistment.

The Army's latest early-out program began Oct. 7 and is intended to "comply with Congressional intent to draw down the force through voluntary separations," according to an Oct. 1 Total Army Personnel Command message. Release dates approved under the program must be before Aug. 31, 1992.

Some soldiers will be ineligible for the program, including those pending involuntary separations for disciplinary reasons and those with critical skills or those in high priority units who must be retained for purposes of operational readiness.

Separation requests must be filled out on a Department of the Army Form 4187 and can be approved by the first lieutenant colonel in the soldier's chain of command. Requests must be submitted by March 30, 1992.

Many Fort Benning soldiers are eligible for the early-out program, including Spec. Ron Nesbitt, currently assigned to Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment. Nesbitt has decided that an early release from active federal service would be beneficial to his goals.

"I feel that I have done what I can accomplish in the Army," said Nesbitt. "I want to get out and start a different, better career for my family."

Nesbitt, who has a fiance and a 1-year-old daughter, said that it would be best for his family to remain in his hometown of Macon, where the majority of his family still resides.

Soldiers getting an early-out will not lose their Montgomery GI Bill benefits, since the requirements for early-out state that soldiers can only transition out after their initial three-year enlistment.

The program does not apply to soldiers awaiting disciplinary action, such as trial by court-martial, involuntary separation, or if they are being investigated.

Any questions should be directed to your company commander or first sergeant to begin processing.

Haz-Mat program gets under way

Firefighters learn how to handle hazardous material emergencies

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Army firefighters from across the United States came to Fort Benning to attend the Hazardous Materials Training Program taught by members of the Fort Benning, Columbus and Phenix City fire departments.

About 50 personnel, some from as far away as Fort Irwin, Calif., are attending the two-week program that started Monday and continues through Nov. 1.

According to Monte Simonton, chief of training for the Fort Benning Fire Department, the Fort Benning program, which is the largest of its kind in the Army, will train personnel to respond to emergencies involving hazardous materials, such as a chemical spill.

The program is taught twice a year and is open to civilians and members of other branches of service.

Once attendees finish the classroom and "hands-on" training and a final examination, they will be qualified at what is known as the technician level.

"They will be qualified to confine and contain hazardous materials until additional resources can be brought in," Simonton said.

Classroom instruction includes training in recognition and risk assessment of emergencies involving hazardous materials, chemical terminology, control procedures for spills, decontamination, and the use of monitoring and protective equipment.

Next week will begin the "hands-on" phase in which students put their knowledge to the test in mock emergency situations. Col. Patrick Kenny, director of Engineering and Housing, is confident the program will have far reaching benefits.

"By the time you finish here, I think you will have the tools, the knowledge and the ability to safely handle hazardous materials," Kenny said to those in attendance during his opening remarks Monday.

"The training you receive here will be beneficial to you as an individual and to the community in which you serve," he said.

Quick Pay to speed up civilians' pension pay

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Army civilian employees who are close to retirement can ensure their first pension check is on by participating in the new Quick Pay Program, said Bettie Mabry, retirement coordinator with the Directorate of Civilian Personnel.

According to Mabry, the program is designed to eliminate long delays between the time employees retire and receive their first retirement check.

"There used to be delays as long as 2 1/2 to three months before they got paid. Now there won't be that big break," said Mabry.

Under the quick pay system, retirees will receive their first check on the earliest date that payment is legally authorized, which is normally 30 days after retirement.

Mabry said that in order to be eligible for the program, retirees must submit a retirement package to the civilian personnel office at least 30 days prior to their date of separation.

"We ask though that employees submit their package 60 to 90 days in advance to ensure that everything will be ready when they actually retire," she added.

Mabry also noted that employees who are retiring with disabilities are not eligible because their retirements need special handling.

Retirees are also eligible to receive direct deposit of their retirement checks to a financial institution, Mabry said.

In order to receive direct deposit, they must obtain an SF-1199A Direct Deposit Sign Up Form from their bank and submit the form with their retirement package.

Supply Bn. sends advance party

10 soldiers, family members arrive

USAIC Public Affairs Office

An advance party of 10 soldiers of the 13th Supply and Service Battalion arrived at Fort Benning Oct. 11 and 12.

The unit, which is being relocated from Ludwigsburg, Germany, will be reassigned to the 36th Engineer Group.

"The 10 soldiers and 11 family members are currently in-processing and house hunting," according to Chief Warrant Officer Julious Parker, a 36th staff officer and coordinator for the unit's relocation.

Thirty-six soldiers will make up the main body, which will arrive here Nov. 7 and 14.

Along with the advance party, the soldiers will comprise the Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment of the 13th.

Once operations are established and personnel are in-processed, the 13th will become a subordinate unit of the 36th and will assume command and control of the 533rd Transportation Company , the 608th Ordnance Co. and the 598th Maintenance Company.

Total strength of the battalion will be 722.

Life on post complicated, hectic

COMMENTARY

Life around here is getting too complicated for me.

People have my phone number and keep calling about their woes. Like am I in the chain of command? Do I look like a captain?

All right. Let's take it from the top.

Three calls came in from people who all live in the same apartment complex in North Columbus.

They were calling about the surprise, more like shock, that came to them when they opened their rent notices this week. The landlord was announcing an increase of $100 a month to begin with the next bill (due in three days).

This is the same apartment complex that had yellow ribbons out and signs up saying "We support our soldiers."

Yeah, sounds more like the soldiers are supporting the owner of that complex.

Further research shows that it's only the families with kids getting the $100 a month increase. Being a person never short on advice I told them to call the Better Business Bureau, the Board of Realtors, and the Housing Referral Office.

But what're we going to do, put the place off limits? Not with all those families from Germany pouring in. Columbus is already short of rentals.

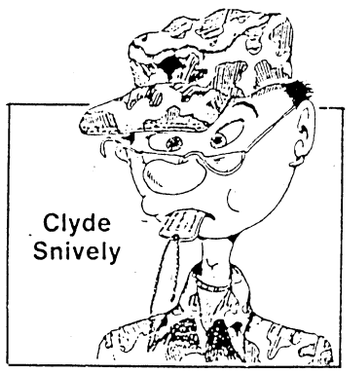
So we continue to be gouged? Hopefully someone a lot smarter than me has an answer.

Another apartment issue came from a family in Battle Park.

Seems they got a notice with a list of "dos and don ' ts ."

This caller was concerned because the notice warned residents about leaving wading pools, furniture and swing sets in the front yard .

"We don't have backyards . We don't have playgrounds for the children. So what are we supposed to do? Where do we put their play things? " she asked .



I had the standard, "I don't know," answer for that. I asked her to bring in the note—delay them at any cost.

She did. I noticed the note concluded with the statement: "If you have any questions, you can reach me at the rental office ."

It was signed "The Management. " Might try that, I suggested weakly .

Next call came from an individual who couldn't believe, "I can charge everything in the world inside the PX garage store, but have to pay cash for my gas. What ' s the deal?"

"They ' re doing it to reduce costs? " I ventured .

"I can get gas for less with a credit card on the economy, " he said . "Then why don't you go there all the time?" I wanted to say, but instead came up with, "It helps speed up the lines?"

"Wrong, four eyes, " he said, "the machines they've got now are nearly as fast as cash. Plus there are machines that let you pay at the pump. That has got to be a time and money saver, " he said .

I obviously didn't have an answer for him, so bowed out with an "Oops, got a call from my boss. Gotta go."

My next challenge came from people who keep track of civilian time.

Apparently there's a new system going into effect that does away with those little swiss cheese cards.

My visitors came in because they're concerned. They're concerned because the new system relies on...are you ready for this...a computer program.

Okay, no big problem. Surely there's a backup if the system goes down. I mean like civilians will still get paid, right?

Maybe.

Under the old system, it assumed you worked 40 hours a week, so if the cards didn't get in to tell the finance people differently, you got paid for 40 hours work.

Under the new system, it assumes you work zero hours. So no transaction, no pay.

I didn't believe any of that, so I went back to ask the person who handles the time for our civilians.

"I have a question about civilian time keeping," I said, in my most cheerful voice.

I got a low growl. You know the kind. Like when you try to steal a bone from a dog and the dog lets you know, "touch that bone and lose your hand."

I took a step back.

"I understand there might be some difficulty with the new system."

I ran out the door as a tape dispenser crashed against the wall where my head had been.

So much for research on that subject.

Next week I move my office. No phones, doors with locks and above all, no computers.

Maybe once we get our lost hour of sleep back this Sunday, the world will be saner.

Commander approves post energy week

Monday through today has been designated Fort Benning Energy Awareness Week.

The theme of the energy campaign is "Choices for the Children." These are choices that adults need to make now to ensure energy is available for our children, and choices the children need to be prepared to make to ensure a high quality of life and energy availability for their future.

This week is an opportunity for us to renew our commitment to the conservation of energy for the present and to teach these lessons to our children.

Energy conservation is important to our military effectiveness, our economic security and our standards of living. With budget reductions at all levels, less money is available to purchase energy.

Fort Benning energy funds are budgeted only to the amount of goals set by higher headquarters. All energy used above that amount must be funded from other sources. This means that the installation's ability to provide services and facility maintenance and improvements may be severely hindered by energy waste and abuse.

On a larger scale, we as a nation face a serious dilemma in our dependence upon oil from other nations. Our increasing reliance on a continuous, plentiful supply of imported energy makes us vulnerable to unfriendly countries and organizations.

We must learn to change our attitudes and habits to meet this threat and protect our standards of living. By reducing our reliance on the supply of imported energy sources, we can become a more independent nation.

I encourage your sincere efforts to eliminate all forms of energy waste and abuse. The success of the Fort Benning Energy Program cannot be attained by the efforts of a few individuals. Everyone living and working on Fort Benning is challenged to play a positive and significant role in the Energy Program.

Cyclists urged to practice safety, precautions on post

Infantry BranchSafety Office

Bicyclists on Fort Benning are required to follow certain safety regulations when riding on post.

All cyclists must wear highly visible, reflective vests or sashes and protective helmets which have been approved by either the Snell Memorial Foundation or the American National Standard Institute.

Bicyclists have "rules of the road" to follow, just like motorists. These rules include keeping to the right of the road, riding with the traffic, and riding single file. All traffic signals, signs, and devices must be obeyed. Bicycles should not be ridden on running tracks, sidewalks, or other areas usually reserved for pedestrians.

Riders should ensure that their bicycles have good reflectors, front and rear. In addition, bicycles ridden at night will be equipped with headlights and tail lights which are visible from a distance of 300 feet.

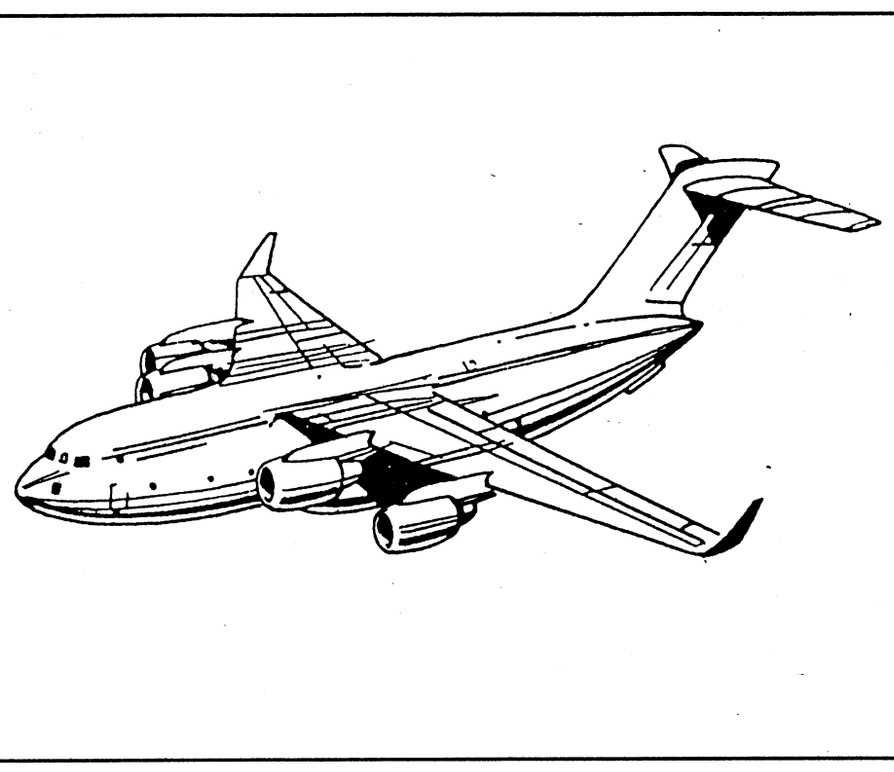
Airlines reduce fares



Army News Service

WASHINGTON — At least 25 major and regional airlines are offering reduced Christmas air fares to soldiers, according to the military traffic management command.

Basic trainees and advanced individual trainees are eligible for the savings through what is called the "Holiday Exodus 1991" program. Some air carriers are offering as much as 50 to 70 percent off of the full coach fare.

Military travelers are reminded that "Welcome Home" discounts are still available through Dec. 15 for soldiers who were on active duty during Operation Desert Storm.

All personnel should check with their installation transportation offices for more information.

CHAMPUS deductible started over Oct. 1

Martin Army Community Hospital

The Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services deductible for outpatient care started over for the new fiscal year on Oct 1.

For services CHAMPUS patients receive from Oct 1 through Sept. 30, 1992, most will pay the first $150 (for one person) or the first $300 (for a family) of allowable outpatient medical bills.

The only exceptions are the eligible family members of active duty military sponsors in the pay grade of E-4 or below.

These families will pay an annual outpatient deductible of $50 for one person or $100 for the whole family.

CHAMPUS claims processors keep track of claims sent in for outpatient care, until the deductible has been met.

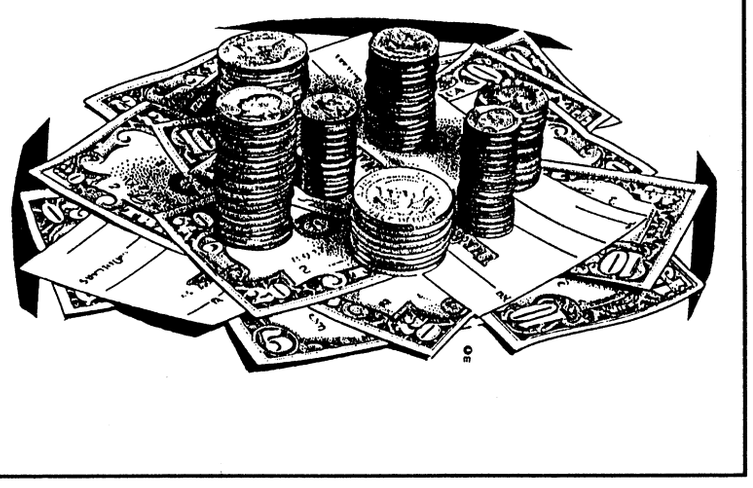
The explanation of benefits will tell the other processor how much the family has paid toward satisfying the deductible for the year.

If you have any questions about CHAMPUS, you may call the health benefits adviser at Martin Army Community Hospital at 544-3461.

Credit trouble

Do you know the warning signs?

Army Community Service



Many families think that credit cards and the use of credit is somehow bad, but the use of credit is not a problem. Getting too deeply into debt or not using credit wisely can be a problem. How can you tell if you are headed for credit trouble? Here are some clues:

Do you hide your monthly credit card statements, or the things you buy, so your family won't discover them?

Do you spend more than 20 percent of your take-home pay on debt payments?

Do you put off paying some bills or living expenses so you can pay others bills?

Have you applied for a second VISA or Mastercard from a different bank and/or with a higher credit limit?

Do you only pay the minimum payment each month?

Do you charge more each month than you make in payments?

Do you use the cash advance on one credit card to make payments on other credit cards or other debt?

Have you seriously thought about getting a consolidation loan to pay off all your debts and have one payment?

Have you received a telephone call about your delinquent account?

Do you find that you pay your bills on time, but you are forced to continue to use credit because you run out of cash?

Do you know how much you owe total?

Is the balance in your savings account shrinking?

Do you borrow from friends or relatives to make ends meet each month?

Consumers must make choices, take advantage of opportunities

Week highlights awareness of financial decisions

Army Community Service

Today's choices; tomorrow's opportunities is the theme of this year's National Consumers Week, which began Sunday.

This theme reminds us that every decision we make is a choice, and that every choice we make determines what tomorrow's opportunities will be.

This is true in many areas of our lives, and it is very true in our financial lives.

In the military we have unique opportunities. Each one presents us with another choice, which presents us with another set of opportunities. And so it goes over and over.

We choose to buy a new car. The type of car we choose determines our payment, our insurance costs, our gas, oil, and maintenance costs.

We decide to save one-half of every pay raise. That determines how much money we will have at the end of our military career. We decide to live in government quarters. That determines the amount of our shelter expense.

If we do not keep up with how much money comes into or goes out of the house, we will surely be caught by surprise by not having enough to meet our needs.

We decide to write a check before payday. We may pay exorbitant interest, pay bank charges, or pay fines, or all of the above.

You may be given a military reassignment. You must choose whether to take your family with you or have them wait until you are settled to come.

Employment and educational situations will usually be considerations in that decision, as will housing availability and affordability.

Everything in life is a choice. Sometimes we must make choices between accepting a situation or being miserable.

But it is always a choice, and every financial choice will give you the opportunity to be financially sound or financially troubled.

AUSA holds its national meeting in Washington, D.C.

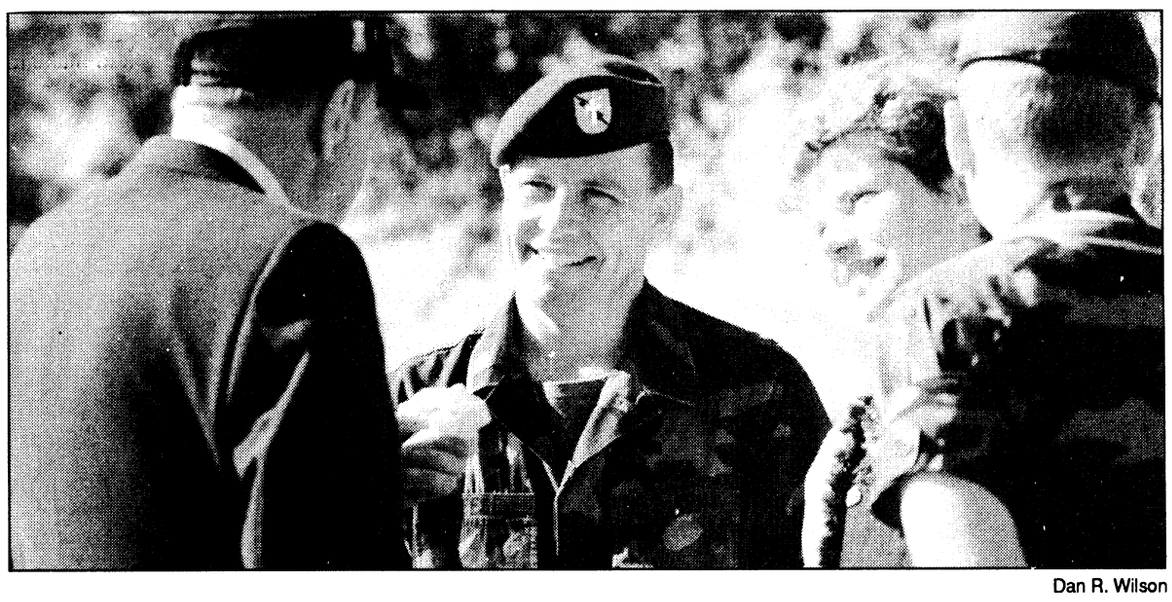
Local chapter receives recognition

By Dan R. Wilson
School of the Americas

The Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the U.S. Army was named "The Chapter Most Active in Pursuit of AUSA Objectives" at the AUSA national meeting in Washington, D.C., Oct. 14 through 16.

The chapter competed against more than 25 other worldwide chapters with more than 1,200 members. It took second place for the chapter with the largest overall membership.

Secretary of the Army Michael P.W. Stone addressed the audience. He praised the soldiers on the excellent job they accomplished in the desert and the support of the soldiers who were not deployed.



After Stone's address, soldiers from Fort Benning and local AUSA corporate members attended many events where they met with Stone and other key members of the Army and AUSA staff.

"I was very excited about going to the AUSA convention," said Cpl. Tracy Moorman. According to Moorman, who was the Fort Benning Non-Commissioned Officer of the Year, she was well received and enjoyed representing the post.

Spc. George R. Leard Jr., Fort Benning Soldier of the Year, said he was impressed with the entire convention. "I learned how important AUSA as an organization is to us on the national level," he said.

Between meetings, there were tours of the capital for delegates and opportunities to talk to soldiers from other posts.

"The best part of the conference for me was meeting so many soldiers from all over the Army and sharing ideas with them," said Staff Sgt. Thomas Vajentic, Fort Benning Drill Sergeant of the Year. "I also had the opportunity to see the Vietnam War Memorial. While that had nothing to do with the conference, I enjoyed it," he said.

Trick or treat tips, rules outlined

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Halloween trick or treating will be in effect from 6 to 8 p.m. Thursday — the only day trick or treating is permitted on post.

Activities for trick or treating are limited to children under 13 years old. Preschool children must be accompanied by an older person (14 years or older).

Children are limited to trick or treating in the housing area in which they reside only, and they should approach only residences with lighted entry ways.

For a safe and enjoyable Halloween, follow these tips:

•Light-colored, non-flammable costumes, short enough to prevent tripping, should be worn by children. Costumes can be marked with reflective tape or glow spray paint so they can pick up auto headlights and other lights.

•Observe all basic safety precautions. Use sidewalks and crosswalks; don't cut through yards. Look in all directions before walking across the street.

•Wear masks or head coverings which do not restrict vision. Use colorful facial makeup as much as possible.

•Ensure pet owners take measures to prevent pets from being a nuisance or a menace to children, and caution children about the wrongs of vandalism and causing damage to the property of others.

•Ensure children carry flashlights after dark. If a pumpkin is carried, it should be lit with a battery device, not a candle.

•Never let your child eat anything until you have inspected the treats. Give your child a full meal before he or she goes trick or treating .

Make Halloween safe, enjoyable

Infantry Branch Safety Office

It's almost Halloween — the magical time when kids dress up as clowns, witches, or television characters and happily run from house to house, filling their bags with candy. However, this holiday has many "dark pitfalls."

Your daughter has been talking excitedly about her costume as a witch. She has put together a long black dress with black high-heeled boots. Add a mask and a pointed hat to finish the costume.

Now she is ready for an enjoyable trick or treating evening, right? Wrong. It's more likely that she is set up for the number one cause of Halloween injuries — falls.

Children are generally not used to walking in long dresses and high-heeled shoes. They will be walking over lawns and steps of different height. So be sure that the dress is short enough to avoid tripping. Outfits that have pants are even safer. Comfortable, old tennis shoes that can be colored to match the outfit greatly reduce the chance of falls.

Many kids have been victims of accidents because masks blocked their vision. Painting disguises on your children's faces with cosmetics is a much safer alternative than wearing masks. Ask them to help design the "faces" they want to wear.

A flame-resistant costume is also a good idea. You can make a cotton costume flame resistant by dipping it into a mixture of 7 ounces of borax, 3 ounces of boric acid, and 2 quarts of water. Let the fabric drip dry and then iron it. If the material gets wet or is washed, repeat this process.

Darkness comes unnoticed by the marauding halloweeners. They can get tired and careless, especially when crossing streets. Cars pose the most serious threat to your children after dark. If your children are out after dark, responsible adults should accompany them. brightly colored costumes with retroreflective material or tape can make children more visible to drivers. Let your children cut out designs to wear on their fronts, backs, and sides.

Flashlights greatly increase safety at night. In addition, commercially available chemlights pinned to your child's clothing are fun for the kids and help others see them.

Halloween parties can be a safer activity than trick or treating. Entertainment, such as clowns or magicians, can amuse the kids and keep them from feeling deprived of trick or treating. Provide plenty of refreshments and candy. Give bags of candy for various contests.

The fun and excitement of Halloween is one of the year's big events for children. A little planning on your part can make it a safety and enjoyable evening.

Ranger students get first taste of new Ranger School program

USAIC Public Affairs Office

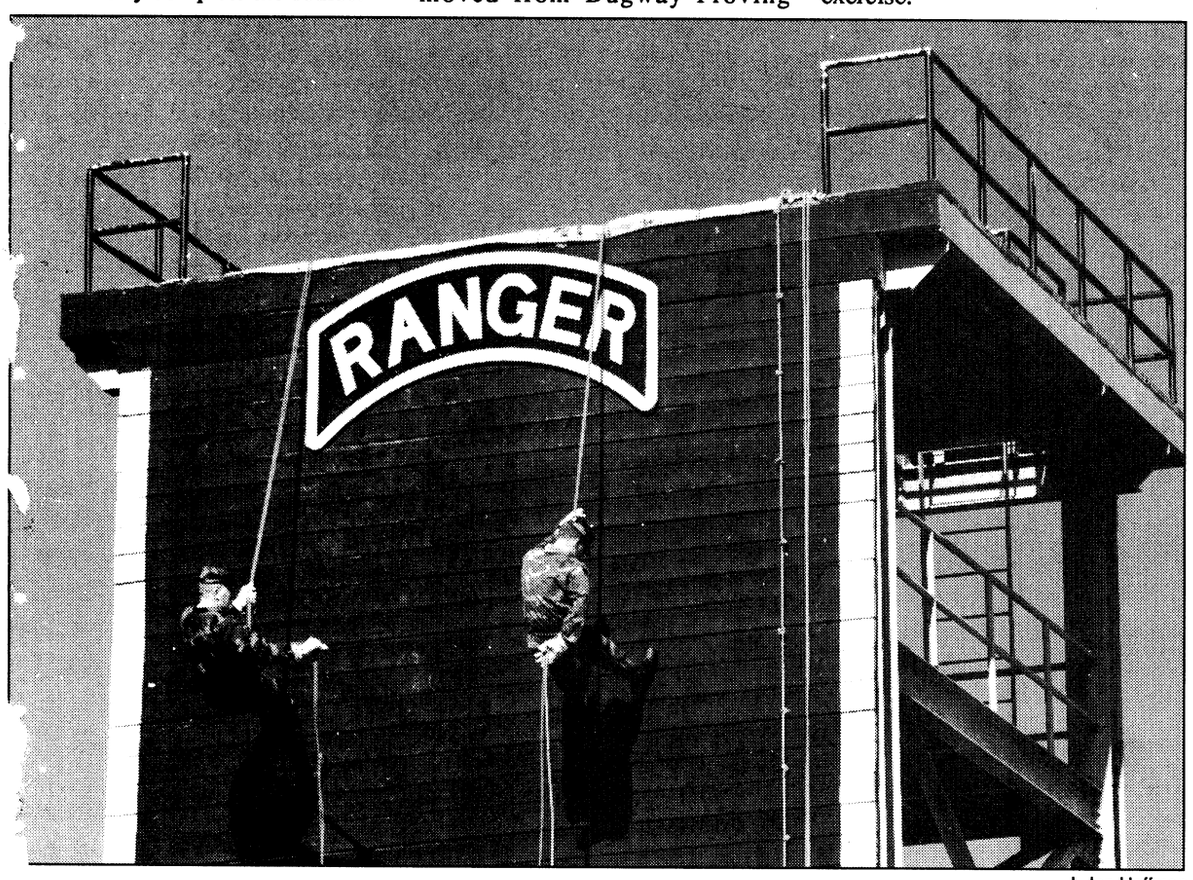
For nearly 40 years, the Infantry School has been training rangers. This month, as a result of the most recent look at the training program, a number of adjustments are being put into the course.

The first class to go through Ranger School under this new curriculum kicked off with a Rangers in Action demonstration on Oct. 18 at Victory Pond.

The Rangers in Action demonstration is routinely presented to incoming ranger students and other interested groups. The presentation depicted the skills and training routinely undertaken by U.S. Army rangers.

The adjustments will not affect the length of the course. They are designed to modernize the program of instruction and to enhance the students' opportunity to successfully complete the course.

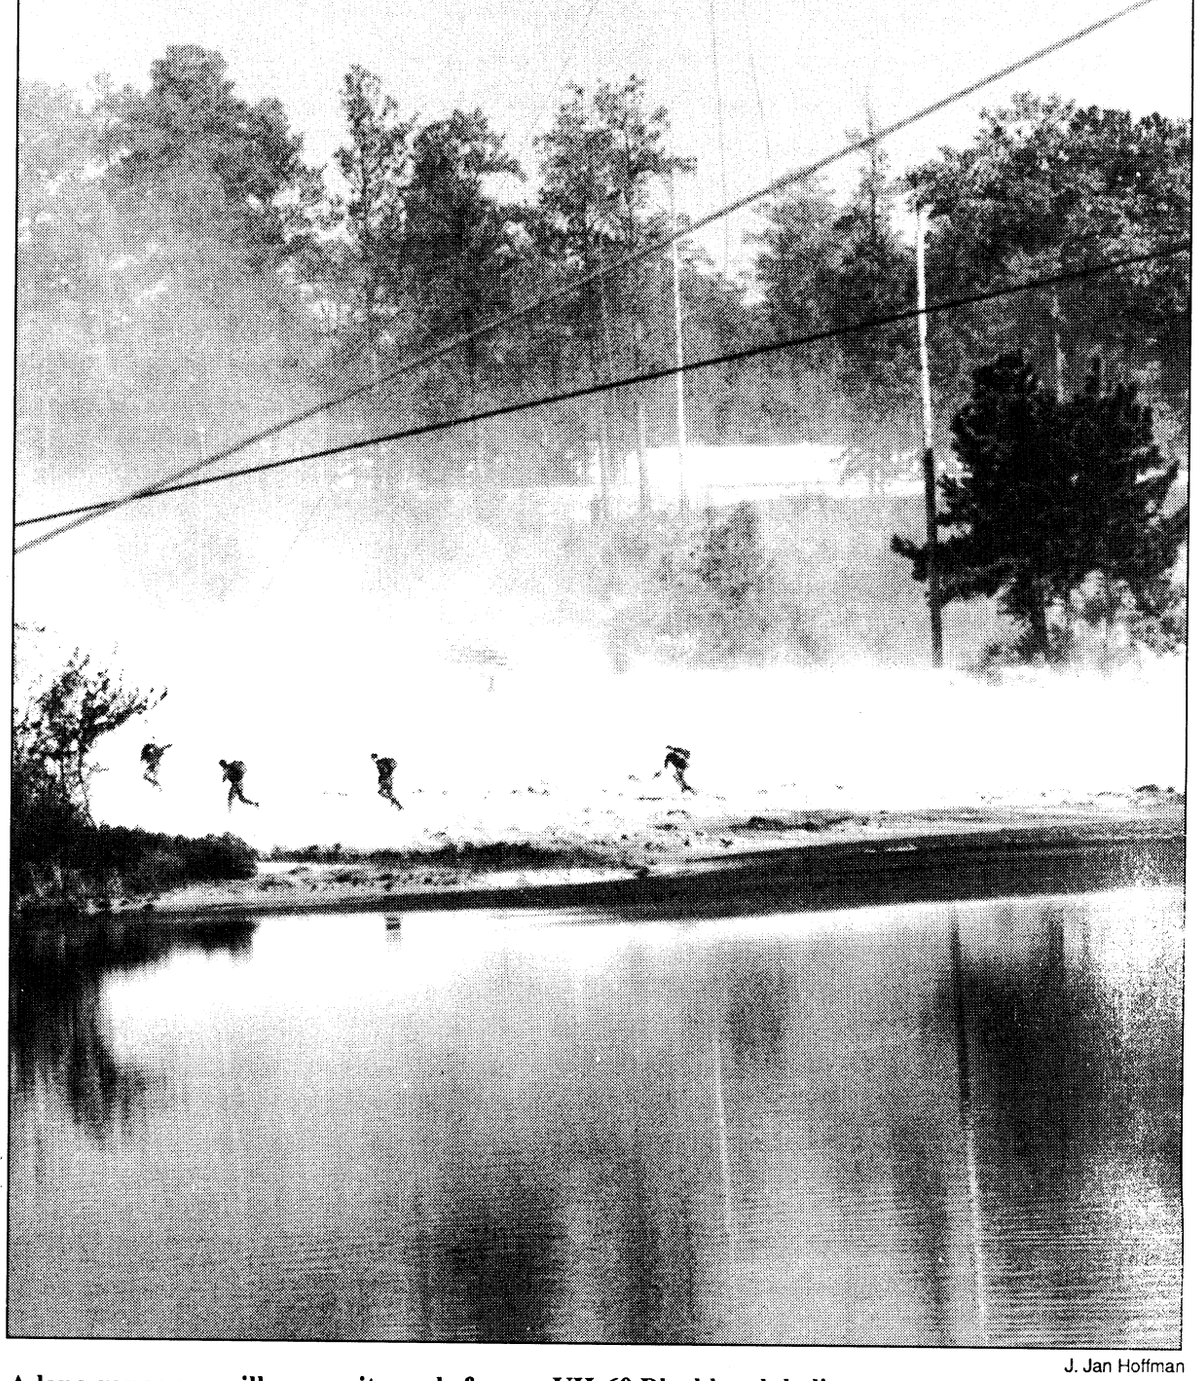
Adjustments include: During the first, or Benning phase, the course will begin on Monday instead of Friday, with a four-day assessment period — the ranger assessment phase — so the Ranger Training Brigade cadre can better determine an individual's readiness to complete the program successfully.



This phase will include the Army's Physical Fitness Test, the Combat Water Survival Test, a five-mile run that must be completed in less than 40 minutes, day and night land navigation testing, an eight-mile road march and the Ranger Stakes (an evaluation of 10 Soldier's Manual tasks. Soldiers must successfully complete these events to continue the course.

The desert training phase, formerly the fourth phase of the course, will now be the second. This training phase has recently moved from Dugway Proving Ground, Utah, to Fort Bliss, Texas, to improve operating costs, increase training support and avoid Utah's extreme winter weather conditions.

Once students complete their desert training, they will return by military aircraft to Fort Benning, where they will make another jump.



Following a short recovery period, the students will then be transported to Camp Frank D. Merrill in Dahlonega, Ga., to be trained in basic mountaineering skills and a continuation of platoon combat operations.

Finally, the ranger students will move to Camp James E. Rudder at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., for the fourth and final phase of their training. There they will face waterborne training, a mid-cycle night jump and swamp infiltrations in their 13-day field training exercise.

Combat just as tough for medics

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

The squad had been on patrol for nearly three hours. Luckily, thought several of the soldiers, there had not even been a hint of enemy confrontation during this mission.

Things were certain to change. They always had.

The point man was the first to go down as the ing broke loose. He was hit without warning. The hing he remembered was a loud ringing in his before he fell to the ground. Two more men went wn immediately afterward before a single shot could fired in retaliation.

Medic!," said more than one wounded man.

Charging from the rear was the medic who found nself stuck on this patrol simply because there asn't any combat lifesavers in the squad.

His job immediately became to save the lives of ee people he didn't even know, as well as dodge llets to save his own life.

More than 300 soldiers in the medical field were ut in this mock-combat situation Oct. 7 though 18. The mission for these soldiers was to successfully complete diagnosis and treatment of casualties on the battlefield.

Fort Benning's 34th Medical Battalion hosted the Expert Field Medical Badge testing. A badge that, according to Sgt. 1st Class Ralph Santiago, non-commissioned officer in charge of the testing, is not as easy as it might sound to acquire.

"This badge is every bit as hard to get as the Expert Infantryman Badge," said Santiago. "We use a lot of the same standards and same tests; but, ours encompasses, in addition to physical endurance and weapons, a lot of medical knowledge that the candidates have to put to practical use."

A 12-mile road march, testing on various medical emergencies, emergency medical technician lanes and treatment under nuclear, biological and chemical warfare conditions are just a few events the medics must go through.

Santiago said that normally there is only a 10 to 12 percent pass rate due to the extreme physical requirements of the testing.

This particular testing, which is held annually by Fort Benning, allowed less than 50 to pass, according to Santiago. "Most of them will have the opportunity to try their skills again next year," said Santiago.

29th Infantry Regiment soldiers get a shot on TOW, Dragon systems

U.S. Army Missile Command

REDSTONE ARSENAL, Ala. — Twelve soldiers from the 29th Infantry Regiment were at Redstone Arsenal Sept. 23 to 27 to test fire Tube-launched, Optically tracked, Wire-guided Missile, and Dragon missiles.

It was part of the Army Missile Command Product Assurance Directorate's regular testing of smaller anti-tank missile systems to ensure their reliability, according to Phil McGregor of the Redstone Technical Test Center.

Through the stockpile reliability program, missiles stored in desert, arctic and tropic environments are brought in and test fired on a yearly basis, McGregor said.

"They're typical samples of the overall (missile) population brought in from the three sites," said McGregor. "We've had good results with past tests. The missiles show very little degradation after storage."

The TOWs contained live warheads while the Dragons tested had inert warheads, McGregor added.

The soldiers, all TOW and Dragon-qualified gunners, were offered the opportunity to come to Redstone to participate in the firings as a training exercise, McGregor said.

Most of the 12 soldiers are cross-trained on both TOW and Dragon. For several, it was the first time to fire the TOW from a Bradley Fighting Vehicle.

"This is a good chance to get training," said Spc. Jeffrey Bingham. "We do lots of maintenance, but this is my first live firing."

Some 30 TOWs and Dragons, 10 each from the three environments, were fired by the soldiers.

"The missile firings were highly successful," McGregor said.

The TOW and Dragon missiles were developed by and are managed at Redstone Arsenal — Dragon by the Army Missile Command and TOW by the Air Defense Program Executive Office. Both were deployed with U.S. forces in the Persian Gulf War.

A soldier prepares to fire a Dragon missile.

The tank-killing TOW, a mainstay of the U.S. Army, has been credited with destroying numerous Iraqi tanks and armor.

The TOW missile is a crew-portable, vehicle-mounted, heavy anti-armor weapon system consisting of a launcher and one of five versions of the TOW missile. It is designed to defeat armored vehicles.

After firing the TOW, the gunner must keep the crosshairs of the sight centered on the target to ensure a hit. The system will operate in all weather conditions in which the gunner can see a target throughout the missile flight by using either a day or night sight.

The TOW system is used on the high-mobility, multipurpose wheeled vehicle, the M-151 jeep, the armored personnel carrier, the Bradley Fighting Vehicle, Cobra helicopters, and the U.S. Marine Corps' light-armored vehicle.

The TOW is also used by 40 allied countries.

The Dragon is a medium-range, man-portable, anti-tank weapon used against gun emplacements and fortified positions. It has an expendable round and reusable tracker with a day/night sight.

The Dragon is deployed in airborne and infantry divisions, both light and mechanized; armored cavalry and ranger regiments; and special forces. It is used by the Army, Marine Corps and about 14 allied countries.

Marksmen get royal visit

By John Ulrich
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit was honored recently by a visit from King Mswati III, from the kingdom of Swaziland.

His royal highness was afforded the opportunity to witness first hand what goes on in some of the competitive shooting events. Since royalty ared use to nothing but the best, AMU's top shooters put on demonstrations for him.

One of the highlights of his visit was the demonstration given by the Action Pistol Team headed by Capt. John T. McNally, officer in charge, and Sgt. 1st Class Jimmie McCoy, noncommissioned officer in charge. In the past year both men have competed in the nation's top action pistol matches to include the Tin Cup, Steel Challenge, and the Bianchi Cup. Last month the two competed in the Soldier of Fortune Match held in Las Vegas, Nevada, where McCoy won top honors in the military category.

The two shooters set up their own course of fire based on a hostage stage type of scenario. Mock doorways were erected to serve as entrances to imaginary rooms. Inside these "rooms" were positioned a multitude of targets, some representing terrorists and others hostages.

"The name of the game is to enter as quickly as possible and take out all the bad guys without hitting any of the hostages," said McNally.

Although the procedure may sound simple to most, it was still a difficult event.

"Most of the hostage targets were in very close proximity to the enemy targets. In some cases they were placed directly in front or behind the enemy leaving only inches to spare for a shooter's error in judgement or technique," said McCoy.

McCoy also added, "Once you get to a point where your concentration is so focused that all you see are the targets you're supposed to hit...the hostages aren't in any danger."

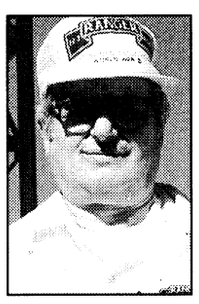
Prior to the arrival of the royal party, McNally and McCoy ran through the course several times with live ammunition. They also timed themselves to see how fast they could clear two rooms full of hostile and friendly targets. Their fastest trial time was 9.46 seconds, this includes the time it took for them to reload running from the first room to the second, a 20-yard distance. Time was stopped when the last target was knocked down.

"There's no doubt about who was getting hit," said McNally. "The enemy targets were constructed of steel plates that made a loud metallic clank when hit. The hostage targets were made of cardboard cutouts that remained stationary, but would exhibit tell-tale scars if hit by gunfire."

With all systems go, the king arrived surrounded by his entourage. During the display McNally and McCoy beat their rehearsal time blasting through the course in a lightning 7.42 seconds, knocking down all 12 terrorist targets, leaving hostage targets unscratched. The king was so impressed with the show, he wanted to try his royal hand at knocking down a few steel plates. With assistance and coaching from McNally, his highness took to handgunning quite readily. He enjoyed himself so much he reloaded three times.

After the royal party left, McNally and McCoy were reloading to do some practice runs.

"You can never get enough of this," said McNally. "It gets in your blood and you're always faced with the challenge of being better."



Private visits ranger reunion

By J. Jan Hoffman

Pvt. Harry Perlmutter, "United States Ranger." That's probably not a name most people around Fort Benning know. But, if you were around in World War II, you might be one of the lucky ones who actually knew him and knew of his exploits behind enemy lines in Europe.

After being captured by the Germans, Perlmutter took advantage of a German soldier letting his guard down. Perlmutter escaped but he thought it might only be temporary because he found himself face to face with another German who had a rifle in his hand.

Knowing he had to do something quick, Perlmutter pulled a roll of toilet paper out from under his jacket. Waiving it at the German, Harry continued walking away from the prison camp while the German laughed and continued on.

Perlmutter

Thus started the 101 days of Perlmutter living behind German lines in World War II Europe.

When Perlmutter finally emerged, more than three months after walking out of the prison camp, he simply walked in on the British.

After Perlmutter told them where he crossed their lines, the British soldiers told him that he had just crossed a mine field, stepped over a pipeline that was being used for mortar target practice, and had just come down a hill that was now being shot up by British artillery.

Perlmutter was the subject of a 1945 story in the Saturday Evening Post titled "The 101 Days of Private Perlmutter." It continued, "The odds against this Bronx Ranger, 250 miles behind German lines in civilian clothes, were too long to count - so he just walked out..."

Permutter still lives in the Bronx in New York City. He still attends every World War II Ranger Battalions' reunion he can. And he still enjoys reliving his experiences of his 101 days behind enemy lines.

Editors note: The April 21, 1945, edition of the Saturday Evening Post is available on microfilm at the Columbus Public Library.

Oct. 18 was a special day for 12-year-old John Wilson of Dothan, Ala. He was the special guest of the Ranger Training Brigade for the brigade's Rangers In Action demonstration.

Wilson recently wrote a letter to RTB Commander Col. John. J. Maher III telling Maher of his dream to be a ranger.

Maher responded by inviting the boy and his family to come to Fort Benning to watch a demonstration.

With several hundred people in attendance, Maher introduced Wilson to the spectators prior to the demonstration. Afterwards, Wilson thanked Maher and left Victory Pond with a very big smile on his face and a desire as strong as ever to be a ranger.

CFC supports volunteer groups

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

"Volunteers are the lifeblood of any post community, but their value comes especially clear at this time of year when the Combined Federal Campaign kicks off," said Kathy Case, installation volunteer coordinator.

According to Case, at least 22 Fort Benning organizations are helped by volunteers so this makes the Fort Benning Soldier and Family Support Association, Code 5001, crucial to the volunteer program.

Without it, there would be no American Red Cross volunteers at Martin Army Hospital working in the clinics, setting up appointments, filing, doing distribution or staffing the "warm and fuzzy" cart. There would not be 450 people helping to coach Youth Services sports, no Santa's Castle giving toys to the needy on post at Christmas, and no Officers Wives Club /Enlisted Wives Club scholarships, just to name a few.

"Last year 2,500 people volunteered $3.8 million worth of time on this post," Case said. "That is a tremendous investment for the community. I can't imagine life on Fort Benning without volunteers. Services and programs would have to be radically changed."

Why do people volunteer?

"For a myriad of reasons, but the two most common are to help other people and social interaction," said Case.

By its very nature, Army life means relocating, leaving friends and families behind and starting over. Volunteerism is an answer to that.

"That's why post volunteers are representative of the population. It's not just one group that offers their time," Case said.

She added that the only people who do not participate in the volunteer programs as much are single soldiers and newcomers to the Army because they're not as familiar with what's out there.

One reason

a all ranks are able to volunteer is the Child Care Program for those who donate their time. Each agency has a budget that allows for this.

One case in point was a junior enlisted soldier's wife who saw a commercial for Santa's Castle and offered her time. "Last year, she was instrumental in an organization that gave out about 5,000 refurbished and new toys at Christmas," Case said. " This year she is in a leadership position there. The total impact is immeasureable."

First step volunteer training Nov. 9

First Steps, the volunteer agency that supports and educates first-time moms, will train prospective volunteers on Nov. 9 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., in Martin Army Community Hospital's conference room on the second floor.

"First Steps volunteers are anyone who wants to help," said Summer Harms, First Steps coordinator. "The volunteers let the new mothers know that someone is there for them and cares."

According to Harms, First Steps is not a babysitting service. It is for support and education of the new moms.

"We let the new moms know it is ok to be angry; just don't act out that anger," said Harms.

At the training, four specialists will speak; someone from pediatrics on child development, someone from maternity on depression, head of social work services and a nutritionist.

The training will include a free lunch. There is no need to preregister, and attending the training does not commit the volunteer to the program.

As a First Steps volunteer, you are entitled to 10 hours of free child care each week in exchange for your volunteer time. Unique to First Steps, the child care you choose does not have to certified.

"These women are 1,000 miles from home having a baby. First Steps makes having that baby a little easier," said Harms.

For more information, call Harms at the Volunteer Resource Center at 545-5602.

Dexter kids learn computers

Fort Benning Schools

October marks the fifth annual Computer Learning Month. Dexter School uses this event to teach and learn computer care and computer language and to participate in various contest. Dexter's teachers, however, are not the only ones to teach during this special time. Students also teach other students. Pictured is fourth grader, Brandon Baker, teaching his kindergarten buddy student, Ashley Holthus, how to use the school's new MacIntosh computer.

"Dexter is excited about its growth in technology over the last five years," says Lynn Harp, Dexter School's media specialist. "We now have a lab set up in the Library Media Center as well as a computer in classrooms. A new Reading for Success Lab is equipped with a MacIntosh computer and software, and a videodisc player, CD-ROM players and a scanner are used to round out our computer program."

According to Vicki Rogers, Dexter's principal, "We are constantly seeking new ways to use technology to improve the quality of education and to prepare our students to meet the President's National Goals by the year 2000."

Doughnuts

Teachers know that senses other than vision and hearing can be used to help students learn and remember what they have learned. Several White School fifth graders and their parents will remember a book called Homer Price, especially a chapter about Homer's misadventures with a doughnut machine. With the help of volunteer parents instead of the tempermental machine used in the book, these students followed Homer's doughnut recipe.

CAP pilots train at Dobbins

By Emerson E. Addington
Civil Air Patrol

Training was the key word for Maj. Charles Chamberlain of the 36th Engineer Group and 20 other Georgia Wing Civil Air Patrol check pilots at the National Check Pilot Course Oct. 12 to 13, at Dobbins Air Force Base, Ga. But, before the course was over the students received a non-programed practical exercise—a U.S. Air Force search mission from the USAF National Search and Rescue Coordination Center, Scott Air Force Base, Ill.

The National Check Pilot Course program of instruction provides a combination of classroom work and practical flying exercises. The course curriculum covers such topics as Federal Aviation Administration regulations, Civil Air Patrol and USAF regulations, pilot judgement, practical flight test standards, flight evaluations and flight check pilot workshops. Flight evaluations checked each prospective check pilot's flying performance under actual flight conditions.

The National Check Pilot Course is conducted to improve the skills of CAP pilots and certify selected CAP pilots to be check pilots who evaluate other pilots who wish to become rated CAP pilots. In addition, check pilots must hold a Federal Aviation Administration rating as a certified flight instructor.

During the course a non-programmed event was added—a real Air Force search and rescue mission. The mission was an electronic emergency locator (ELT) search.

Each aircraft flying in the United States is required to have an ELT on board. In the event that the aircraft crashes or makes an emergency landing at a location other than an airport, the ELT is activated, sending out an electronic signal that is picked up by other aircraft or by a satellite, normally the Soviet Union satellite, and the electronic signal data is relayed to Scott AFB. The USAF then alerts the CAP Wing of the state from which the ELT signal is located to conduct a search mission using unit direction finding equipment.

In this case the signal was being received from somewhere in the vicinity of Kennesaw Mountain northeast of Atlanta. After climbing to approximately 5000 feet, the air crew picked up the signal and tracked it to a small airport north of Atlanta. Upon landing, the signal was tracked to a maintenance shop. The ELT was located and deactivated and Scott AFB was notified.

The students received a second mission during the course; this one was also an ELT signal in the vicinity of Rome, Ga. Chamberlain flew as observer on this mission.

The aircrew flew to the area of operations and, upon picking up the signal, tracked to an area near Rome. Low-level passes over the area revealed a helicopter parked near a farm house. The air crew made a number of low-level passes, gunning the engine, until an individual came out of the house.

Using standard visual signals they requested the individual attempt to contact the CAP aircraft by radio. The individual, upon entering the helicopter, discovered the ELT had been activated and turned it off. So with a wave of the hand and a wag of the CAP aircraft wing the second mission was completed.

Chamberlain, signal officer for the 36th Engineer Group, is a CAP senior member and pilot with the Fort Benning Squadron. Chamberlain is one of many active, reserve and retired military members serving in the volunteer Civil Air Patrol program. Chamberlain's military experience provides a valuable asset to CAP and the Fort Benning Squadron.

CAP not only offers valuable training, such as the Check Pilot Course, which improves his flying skills but, also offers opportunities to attend other key training courses such as the National Search and Rescue Course, flight clinics, leadership and management courses, and the Regional and National Staff College at Air University, Maxwell AFB, Ala.

Senior member status is open to any person 18 years or older. Member status does not require the individual to be a pilot or to have a military background. The Fort Benning Squadron meets each Thursday, 7 p.m., at Detachment 1, 317th Tactical Airlift Wing, Building 2403, Lawson Army Airfield.

Learn finance terms and save

Army Community Services

Have you ever wondered why it takes so long to pay off your credit card balances? Credit costs vary. By remembering two terms, you can compare credit prices from different sources. Under the Truth in Lending Act, the creditor must tell you—in writing and before vou sign any agreement—the finance charge and the annual percentage rate.

The finance charge is the total dollar amount you pay to use credit. It includes interest costs, and sometimes other costs, such as service charges, some credit-related insurance premiums or appraisal fees. For example, borrowing $100 for a year might cost you $10 in interest. If there was also a service charge of $1, the finance charge would be $11.

The annual percentage rate is the percentage cost of credit on a yearly basis. This is your key to comparing costs regardless of the amount of credit or how long you have to repay it.

Let's suppose that you have a $1000 balance on one of your credit cards. You have just received your statement and the minimum payment due is $35. Naturally, if you send in the $35 payment, you would think that your new balance would be $965. Wrong! You forgot to consider the interest charges. Most credit cards charge an annual interest rate of 18 percent, that's 1.5 percent monthly. Interest is charged each month on the unpaid balance not on the amount you send in. If you owe $1000 at 1.5 percent for the month, the interest is $15.00. Subtract $15 from the $35 payment, and you've only paid off $20 on the $1000 debt. Your new balance will be $980.

Different types of establishments charge different rates of interest. Comparison shop!

Soldier aces qualification test

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

After this year, matching his score on the annual qualification test will be difficult for Sgt. Thomas Miller, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 36th Engineer Group.

Why? In August, Miller scored 100 percent —a rare happening — on this test for his military occupational specialty, legal specialist.

The Skill Qualification Test must be taken annually by every non-commissioned officer. This year was the last time that the test, in its present form, was given.

The new test will feature more soldier-oriented skills, as well as the appropriate military occupational specialty material.

Miller

Miller said he believes that the key to doing well on the test was using the manual to do his everyday tasks, not taking shortcuts, not deviating from installation to installation, just doing his job the Army way.

"Also, it's not so much what you know, it's knowing where to find the answer." Miller added, "Research for me is an important part of the job."

Taking the three-hour test, he said he used good test-taking techniques he'd read about, as well as common sense.

Good test results then benefit a soldier with promotion points and indicate to superiors that he knows what they are talking about.

Miller has been in the Army for ten years. A native of Baltimore, MD, he and his wife, Suzie, are the parents of two sons, Tommy, five, and Mikey, one.

After this semester, he plans to have his associate's degree in general education with a business concentration. Then it's on to a bachelor's degree in resource management, he said.

New guidelines for heartworm medication

Veterinary Services

In order to purchase heartworm preventative medication at the Fort Benning Veterinary Treatment Facility after Nov. 15, one of the following requirements must be met:

•Annual heartworm testing performed at the Veterinary Treatment Facility for all dogs 6 months and older, along with continuous preventative medication administration.

•Or, a recent and verified negative heartworm test not more than two weeks old and an appointment at the Veterinary Treatment Facility to verify general health of the dog.

Heartworm is a common problem and the preventative medicatlon is not 100 percent effective.

Administration of preventative medication to heartworm infected dogs can cause shock and death. Annual testing assures all concerned that your dog has not contracted the disease over the past year.

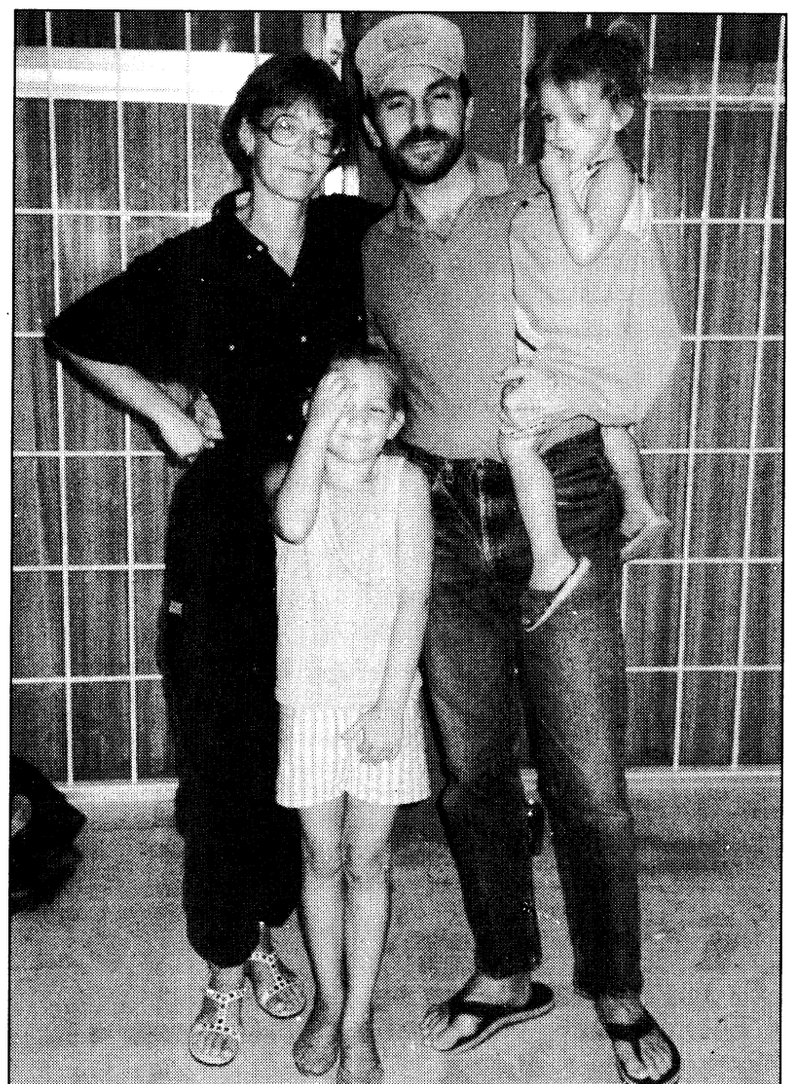
Family recalls exodus from Baghdad, hostage ordeal

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

A year ago when many Fort Benning families were worried about their soldier being in Saudi Arabia, Chris Hart and her daughters had just returned from Baghdad, where they'd had to leave her husband as a hostage.

In July, 1989, Army Maj. Fred L. Hart began a two-year assignment as a military adviser to the Kuwaiti Army.

They had been in Kuwait a little over a year when on Aug. 1 he came to their home about five miles from the embassy and said, "We need to watch out for this weekend."



On Aug. 2 at 5 a.m., they woke up to the sound of planes circling over head. His mother was able to make one phone call to them making sure they were all right, and then the embassy told them to stay put.

For five days they remained in their home. Food was not a problem, Chris said, because all westerners she knew stockpiled food there in the event of emergencies. Neither was water.

From the beginning of their tour they had been given a two-way radio for their "safe room," a place in every Middle Eastern home to go in the event of missile attacks.

For the Harts, this was their large master bedroom. After five days, the embassy called in its staff and provided an escort to get them there.

From Aug. 6 to 23, the Harts and their two daughters, Natasha, 8, and Mary, 2, lived in a room in the Marine House building at the embassy.

Connie Bridges/Special to the Bayonet

The Hart family the night before they left him.

Chris and another woman took charge of the kitchen and preparing three meals a day for 60 to 70 people at a time.

On Aug. 23, embassy families began a 17-hour convoy road trip to Baghdad. At the Kuwait/Iraq border, there was a four to five-hour wait in 110 degree heat.

Their 2-year-old began suffering from dehydration with vomiting and diarrhea, but there was no choice but to continue on.

Arriving in Baghdad about 2:30 a.m., they stayed in embassy houses until Aug. 25. The following day everyone was told that the 52 wives and children would be allowed to leave. The men would have to remain as "guests" of Iraq.

That night, Chris got four hours sleep and spent the rest of the time talking to her husband about what to do when she returned to the states, not knowing if she would ever see him again. The 2-year-old slept in his arms.

The girls cried for their father for the first two hours out of Baghdad on the way to the Turkish border. It took 21 hours in the heat for what should have been a five-hour trip, stopping at checkpoints, with 14 cars getting gas at the same time, making toilet stops by the side of the road, all in an embassy car with thick window glass that couldn't be rolled down.

Near the border bridge into Turkey, their cars were surrounded by thousands of Pakistani, Indian, Turkish and Philippino workers waiting to leave the country.

The Iraqi soldiers took them to a hillside and counted them again to make sure none of the workers had attached themselves to the group.

Then the college-age male children were told they would have to return to their fathers at the embassy. They would not be allowed to leave the country either.

Still, no one broke down, Chris said. "And we had short tempers, but not with each other."

One of the college boys had been driving a truck that carried extra baggage, so the women drew to see who would drive the truck across the border.

On the Turkish side, Chris gathered her carrying bag and her children's backpacks, that held three changes of clothes each, and her vital papers -- passports, birth certificates and medical records.

Then they were driven four hours to a hotel and put on a plane to Insurlik, Turkey, where they stayed overnight at an American military base.

On Aug. 28, the group landed at Andrews Air Force Base, Washington, D.C. Families were then booked on flights to go wherever home was.

Chris came to stay with her mother, Betty H. Phillips of Columbus.

Periodically, the Iraqis allowed her husband to phone her. She also received a couple letters through the diplomatic pouch and limited messages through the embassy.

His Leave and Earning Statements from the Army simply said, "temporary duty Baghdad."

Mostly, Chris said she lived by the telephone until her husband was released before Christmas.

Then in January of this year, he went to Saudi Arabia continuing in his job being attached to the U.S. Liaison Office to Kuwait. By March, he was back in Kuwait, and in August, he came to Fort Benning to stay.

Now he is an ordnance officer working with Bradley Fighting Vehicles at Fort Benning.

Would they go back to that part of the world again as a family?

Chris said yes, after the oil fires are out. "My husband is career Army. I understand that. The thing that was difficult was his being a hostage. There are no rules for that."

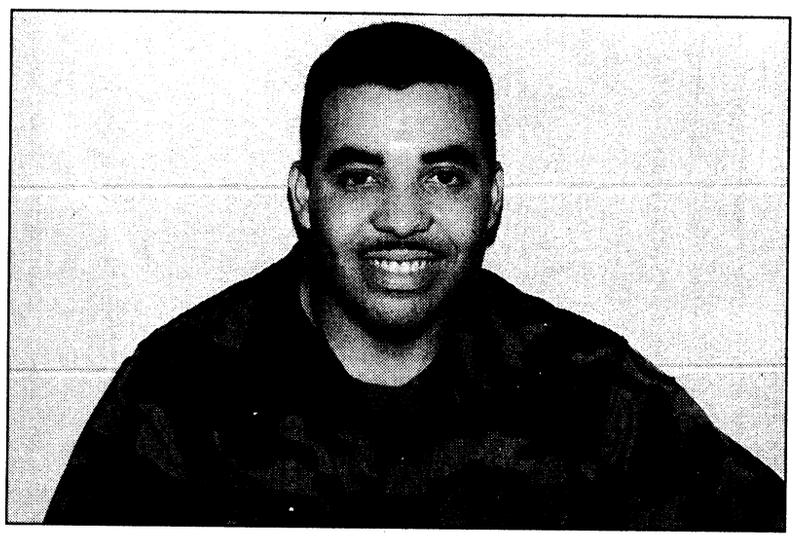
Soldier makes perfect score, lands at SOA

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Spc. Frank Sabater had his eye on a job at the School of Americas before he left for Saudi Arabia in August, 1990. It took him a year and a perfect score on the Defense Language Lab Test, but now he's where he wants to be.

Perfect scores on both parts of this test are hard to come by, according to the person who gave Sabater his results.

The first part is an oral comprehension test using a tape in Spanish which must be translated into English. The second part is a reading comprehension test in which a Spanish text must be read and written questions answered in English.



An ammunition storage specialist, Sabater took the test in early July when he was with the 608th Ordnance. He and two others from the 36th Engineer Group were being considered for School of Americas positions.

Sabater found out he was selected a few weeks later on the same day that he re-enlisted.

Born to parents native to Puerto Rico, he was raised in New York City until he was five. At this time, his parents "returned to the island".

In Puerto Rico, Sabater said it took him until he was seven to speak Spanish fluently.

Since his father owned a business and conducted most of it in English, Sabater still grew up exposed to both languages. The result is that he can be speaking in one language and thinking in another and come out with what he called "hispanglish" occasionally.

Connie Bridges/Special to The Bayonet
Spc. Frank Sabater is happy with his perfect score and his new unit.

Though he doesn't deal directly with foreign students most of the time, the ability to be bilingual is key, he said.

"Much of the training at School of Americas involves ammunition."

Since he is responsible for the storage, issuing, receiving, maintenance and accountability of ammunition, as well as its destruction if necessary, Sabater delivers ammunition to the ranges and explains its safe handling.

He began work there July 14, and so far so good. He also likes the stability because he knows he will be there one to two years.

Sabater joined the Puerto Rico National Guard in 1986 and went active duty in 1987. He was first sent to Fort Stewart with the 24th Infantry Division, then to Hunter Army Airfield with the 24th Ordnance, then to the 1st Battalion, 24th Aviation, then to Korea, then to the 608th Ordnance with which he went to Saudi.

Now, he said, he likes where he's at and plans to stay there awhile.

Bible groups study God's word

By Gabriele Sonnenberg
USAIC Chaplains Office

Christian Military Fellowship ible study sharing group meets t 7 p.m. at the McGraw Manor Community Log Cabin on Custer Road, every second and fourth Friday of the month.

The CMF is a non-enominational fellowship of elievers, building up individual embers to spiritual maturity in heir walks with God, according o members.

The fellowship is dedicated o encouraging, training and quipping for Christian service.

CMF is committed to the great commission of the Lord esus Christ, who said, "All uthority in heaven and on earth has been me.

Therefore, go and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, teaching them to obey everything I have commanded you." (Matthew 28:18-20 NIV).

These objectives are emphasized by the CMF motto: "To win, to discipline, to equip, to win."

CMF is an outgrowth of the Christian Servicemen 's Fellowship which existed under the National Association of Evangelicals. In May 1977, the CSF ceased to exist and its members became part of Christian Military Fellowship.

CMF is a separately incorporated organization and was established May 1, 1977.

Today, CMF has more than 2,300 members at hundreds of Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps and Coast Guard bases, stations, and ships all over the world.

It developed into a peer ministry to military people by military people within the military society.

Therefore, the support for chaplains and participation in the military chapel program is encouraged.

During the semi-monthly fellowship at Fort Benning, each prayer request is honored and each praise report is joyfully shared by the group.

The bible is the primary tool for this fellowship and everyday application of scriptures is discussed in detail.

The coordinator of this group is Staff Sgt. Kenneth Harper and the chaplain advisor is Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Robert McCrory.

For more information, call 545-2050 or 689-6090.

SOA's religious education program benefits Hispanics

By Gabriele Sonnenberg
USAIC Chaplains Office

The Hispanic Catholic Christian Doctrine Religious Education rogram has grown considerably ver the last couple of years.

This program was established by he School of Americas chaplain as response to the religious needs of he children of Latin American guest instructors and students.

Since the Latin American amilies return to their countries of rigin after one or two years at the SOA, it is important that they eceive religious instruction in Spanish.

This program has evolved into a biannual religious education rogram.

Since many Latin American amilies arrive at SOA in January, he Hispanic CCD program ommences the first week of February and ends in June with a First Communion and confirmation iturgical ceremony.

Those children, who are not ufficiently prepared to receive the acraments at the end of this period f time, are required to attend the econd CCD instructional program, which begins in August and ends in November with another First Communion and confirmation liturgical ceremony.

Aside from preparing Latin American children for the reception of first penance, first communion, and confirmation, the Hispanic CCD program has also led to the formation of a Hispanic Catholic Youth Group which consists of those youngsters who receive the sacrament of confirmation.

This program would fall well short of its goals if it were not for the outstanding efforts of our dedicated catechist, parents, and the complete cooperation of Phil Reilly, the Catholic religious education director, according to church officials.

The Hispanic Religious Education program is currently at the Religious Education Center immediately after the 10 a.m. Hispanic Catholic Mass at the SOA Chapel on Sunday.

The 1991 Hispanic CCD program will end with a Hispanic Mass of first communion and confirmation. This liturgy will be presided over by Bishop Oscar Andres Rodriguez at 7 p.m. on Nov. 13 in the SOA chapel.

Rodriguez is from the Central American country of Honduras and is president of the Latin American Episcopal Conference in Central America.

He is also a well known scholar and religious writer in Latin America and is fluent in English, German, French, Italian, and Latin as well as his native Spanish language.

All Saints Day Wed.

By Bob Helton
36th Engineer Group Chaplain

At noon Oct. 13, 1517, on the eve of All Saints Day, a rather obscure monk and professor at the University of Wittenburg posted 95 theses for debate on the door of the castle church.

This door served as a bulletin board for faculty and students at the university. Little did he realize it would become a worldwide debate that would change the shape and place of the church in the world.

The invitation to debate began thus: "Out of love and zeal for truth and the desire to bring it to the light the following theses will be publicly discussed."

Most of the document discussed how a Christian receives repentance. For example, he says: 'When our Lord and master Jesus Christ said, 'Repent' (Matt. 4:17).

He willed the entire life of believers to be one of repentance, yet it does not mean solely inner repentance; such inner repentance is worthless unless it produces various outward mortifications of the flesh.

Luther opposed, as the entire Church today opposed the idea that a petty religious act performed by a believer can set us straight with God. It is God alone, and his unbounded love for us, who can grant us forgiveness.

We experience this grace solely through our faith in God, and its effects are life changing.

This theme is echoed throuahout the ages. Abraham was declared righteous because he believed. David was faithful because he knew God went with him. Saul became Paul because God changed him.

The message rings true in the words of a 19th century hymn, "No merit of our own we claim, but wholly lean on Jesus name."

Today we talk of allowing God to be at the center of our lives. Assessments of Martin Luther vary widely depending on the stance of the assessor.

To Pope Leo X, he was a stiff-necked, notorious, damned heretic; to Philip Melanchton and many of his contemporaries, a second Elija, a new Paul; to Goethe he was a genius and to Nietzsche, a vulgar peasant.

Luther regarded himself as a tool in the hand of God. As such his message was to return to the central truth of the scriptures. It is God who redeems and reforms us.

On the eve of All Saints Day, which is Reformation Day and also Halloween, spend some time doing some good old-fashioned soul searching.

How is your relationship with God? Is he at the center of your life or is your life centered around your own selfish motives and desires? Does the devil or the desires of the flesh control you or have you surrendered your life to God?

The central truth of the Reformation remains the same today as forever. God calls us to turn away from our sinfilled lives, to resist the devil and all his empty promises, and to live and grow in his never-failing love, or in words borrowed by the infantry, to deny yourself and follow me.

Are you in debt?

Army Community Service

There is a way to tell if you are too far in debt.

Take your monthly take-home pay. Add all debt payments that are made by allotment to your take-home pay. Then add all your monthly debt payments, including those made by allotment. Divide the total monthly debt payments by the total take home pay.

Example: John is a sergeant first class. He is paid $1,000 at mid-month and $1000 at the end of the month. He has an allotment of $80 to U.S. Savings and Loan Company. Therefore, his total take-home pay would be $1,000 + $1,000 + $80, or $2,080. His debt payments are:

allotment.....$80
Car Plaza.....250
VISA.....70
Sears.....25
Gayfer's.....25
Penney's.....25
TOTAL.....$475

To find out if he has too much debt, or too high a "debt load," he divides $2,080 into $475 which equals 22.8 percent.

Is John in trouble? Maybe. Here is a guideline:

10 percent: You have a firm hand on your spending. You are a good credit manager. Continue as you are doing.

15 percent: You are in the high average group. Try to get closer to 13 percent.

20 percent: Put on the brakes fast, and do not add any new debt until you have reduced your debt to 13 percent. Call ACS for debt liquidation assistance.

25 percent: Red alert! Call ACS immediately to get your spending under control!

ASK THE JUDGE

By Capt Evelyn Britt
Staff Judge Advocates' Office

Q. Last week, as I was walking to my front door, I was approached by a man dressed in an oversized raincoat and hat. In a low voice he said, "psst, hey lady, wanna buy some magazines?" Immediately, he flashed me dozens of beautiful glossy magazines hidden underneath his raincoat. Well, I'm a fool for magazines, so I immediately invited him in.

He told me that he represented a magazine publisher, and overcome by his suave sales pitch, I soon signed a contract for thousands of dollars worth of magazines. The very next day, when I came to my senses, I realized I didn't want or need the magazines. Do you think I can plead insanity?

My neighbor told me that I could have cancelled the contract within three days and would owe nothing. Is that true?

A. First, the Judge must note that inviting this raincoated gentleman into your home was unwise, at best. And although insanity is a defense that would void the contract, I don't think your love of glossies qualifies.

But your neighbor is correct. When you buy something at a store and later change your mind, you may not be able to return the merchandise. But the Federal Trade Commission's Cooling-Off Rule gives you three days to cancel purchases of $25 or more if you buy an item in your home or at a location that is not the seller's regular place of business. Much like the FTC's Cooling-Off Rule, the Georgia Home Sales Act provides that a consumer may cancel a contract by midnight of the third business day following a sale, if the seller was away from his home or principal place of business at the time of the sale. Under the Cooling-Off Rule and the Georgia Home Sales Act, the salesperson must inform you of your cancellation rights at the time of the sale. The salesperson also must give you two copies of a cancellation form (one to keep and one to send) and a copy of your contract or receipt. The contract or receipt should be dated, show the name and address of the seller, and explain your right to cancel. You can cancel the sale within these three days for any reason, even if it is just because you changed your mind. Because the sale took place in your home, the Georgia Home Sales Act applies.

To cancel the sale, sign and date one copy of the cancellation form. Then mail it to the address given on the form before midnight of the third business day. Business days are considered to be Monday through Friday. So if the sale took place on Friday, you would have until midnight the following Tuesday to cancel the contract. The date of mailing, and not the date of receipt applies. It is suggested that you send the cancellationnotice certified mail and keep a copy of the notice and the certification. The seller must then cancel and return any papers you signed within ten days, refund your money, and tell you whether the magazines left with you will be picked up.

While it may already be too late to cancel your magazine contract, if you were not given the forms to cancel, you should contact the FTC. As a final word of advice, always be sure to read your contract carefully before signing anything.

If you have any questions about the Home Sales Act or any other consumer law problems, contact the Legal Assistance Division at the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate. Their phone number is 545-3282 or 545-3281.

Bird lovers told to keep feeders out til late Nov.

As the days shorten and fall approaches, Georgia's ruby-throated hummingbirds begin to migrate south, but the Georgia Department of Natural Resources' Non-Game-Endangered Wildlife Program is advising Georgians not to remove their hummingbird feeders yet.

Feeders should remain up at least until the end of November, said Terry Johnson, supervisor of the Non-game-Endangered Wildlife Program.

During October and November, hummingbird feeders provide a rest stop" for late migrating hummingbirds where they can feed and restore their energy supply during their long journey to Mexico and Central America.

Keeping the feeders up may also provide a chance to see a rare hummingbird, such as the rufous or blackchinned. In fact, it is likely that any hummingbird seen at a feeder in November is a rare hummer migrating through Georgia. These hummingbirds come from as far as Alaska, which explains their appearance in Georgia in the fall and winter.

One of the myths surrounding hummingbirds is that they will not migrate as long as feeders are available. Because of this myth, many Georgians remove their feeders in October to discourage the hummingbirds from lingering in Georgia. This is not necessary, however.

Migration is triggered solely by day-length and not by availability of food," said Johnson. Some hummingbirds even begin migrating while flowers are still in full bloom.

Some Georgians are becoming aware of the myth, however, and are leaving their feeders up longer. This past year, 32 percent reported keeping feeders up until November, a significant increase from the 3 percent in 1989. One Georgian, who left his feeder up through December, sighted the first rnale black-chinned hummingbird on Christrnas Eve.

We believe that the discovery of a new hummingbird species in our state and the increased number of potential rufous hummingbird sightings is directly related to Georgians having their fe~ders out in November, said Johnson.

The non-game program wants to know of any hummingbird sighting from November on. Georgians can notify the program by writing to the Non-Game-Endangered Wildlife Program, Route 5, Box 180, Forsyth, Ga., 31029, or by calling (912) 994-1438.

General Motors Is Rewarding Your Efforts With An Opportunity.

The divisions of General Motors are proud of America's Armed Forces.

That's why from now until the end of the year, your Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile, Buick, Cadillac and GMC Truck dealers are offering a Special Military Program to all active U.S. Military personnel and reservists called to active duty during the Persian Gulf War or their spouses.

While these GM divisions already have incentive plans in place that help make it easy to buy a new car or light truck, the Special Military Program makes it even easier.

Under the program, you get three hundred dollars in down-payment assistance, plus any additional down payment you make is matched up to five hundred dollars when you buy a new GM car or light truck and finance it through GMAC. That can mean as much as eight hundred dollars toward your purchase. Add that to existing GM incentives, and you can save even more. The Special Military Program is not available with the college graduate, first-time buyer or overseas vehicle purchase programs. See your participating GM dealer for qualification details.

Many of your comrades in arms have already taken advantage of the GM Special Military Program. So visit your GM dealer today, and see how much we appreciate your efforts.

Post men's team triumphs; takes 1st in Army 10-Miler

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

The Fort Benning men's 10-miler team took top honors at the seventh annual Army 10-Miler in Washington, D.C., Oct 13.

The Commander's Cup was presented to the team by Maj. Gen. William Streeter, commander of the Military District of Washington. Fort Benning Commander Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White was on hand to congratulate the team on their record-breaking victory.

The team included Charles W. Dent Jr., who placed third overall and first among military personnel with a time of 49 minutes and 53 seconds.

Capt. Curtis K. Southern placed sixth overall and second to Dent for military personnel with a time of 51 minutes and 21 seconds.

2nd Lt. Kyle A. Rambo Jr. placed eighth overall with a time of 51 minutes and 56 seconds.

Sgt. 1st Class Lloyd McDonald Jr. placed fourteenth over all with a time of 52 minutes and 28 seconds.

2nd Lt. Billy Woodward finished the fifth spot for the team with just over 57 minutes.

The four best times combined to give the team an overall time of 3 hours, 25 minutes and 38 seconds, breaking the old record by 4 minutes and keeping the Commander's Cup at Fort Benning for the second straight year.

Fort Benning women's team finished fourth overall among military teams.

1st Lt. Kimberly Guthrie finished with a time of 71 minutes giving her the best time for the team.

Sgt. 1st Class Carolyn Wilkinson finished number two on the team with a time of 75 minutes.

Sgt. 1st Class Catherine Dugdale placed third on the team with a time of 76 minutes.

Sgt. 1st Class Florencia Rogers took the fourth spot on the team with a time of 78 minutes.

Capt. Ivette Rodriguez claimed the fifth best time for the team with a time of 79 minutes.

3rd Brigade sends runners to Washington, D.C.

Sledgehammer Striders run the Army 10-Miler Oct. 13

By Tom Wilkinson
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

Six soldiers from the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division "Sledgehammers" recently made the trek to Washington, D.C., to "Run the River Bridges."

The seventh annual Army 10-Miler was Oct. 13 in the nation's capital with more than 340 Army teams competing for the win.

The team, nicknamed the Sledgehammer Striders, was made up of a myriad of soldiers throughout the brigade, both officer and enlisted. The team members were 2nd Lt. Charlie Brown, Spc. Fred Dolan, 2nd Lt. Bill Gibson, Spc. Kenneth Kalsem, Capt. Carlos Pignato and Capt. Jonathan Robinson.

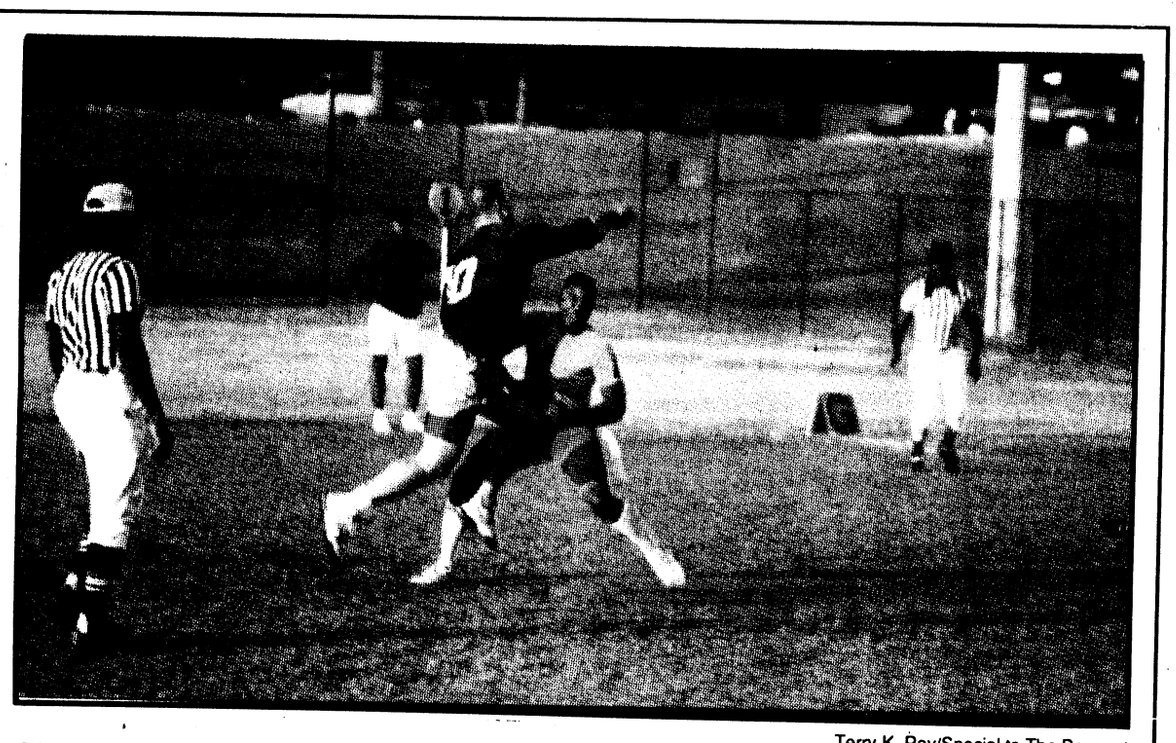
"Out of seven teams that competed from the 24th, here and Fort Stewart, we took 2nd place in the division," said Lt. Col. Eric T. Olson, the commander of 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry and coach of the 3rd Brigade team.

"Our team time for the race was 4 hours, 1 minute and 27 seconds," said Brown, a platoon leader with Company A, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry. "We averaged 60 minutes, 8 seconds for our four best runners. We lost first place within our division by only 45 seconds to the Victory Brigade of Hunter Army Airfield in Savannah."

"It was a great day for the race," said Kalsem, an M-113 driver in 2nd Bn., 18th Inf. "The weather was sunny and temperatures were in the low to mid-50s and a nice breeze was coming off the Potomac River."

"There were more than 6,000 runners in the race, and running with so many people was a strong motivation for everyone to do their best," he said.

With Operation Desert Storm, and a rigorous training schedule since their return, the team did the best they could to train up for the event.



"We got together in August, " said Brown, "and practiced once a week as our schedules allowed. We began pace running at about 75 percent of the distance of the actual race. It was the biggest race I've ever done, and it was really an experience."

"I started running when I was 12," said Dolan, an M-60 gunner in Co. D, 2nd Bn., 18th Inf. "I ran throughout high school and competed in the Boston Marathon in 1986, '87 and '88.."

"I didn't do as well in this race as I had hoped," he said, "but there's always next year. I'd definitely like to enter this race again because it's one of the few — maybe the only — patriotic race I know of. You don't win any big prizes, but the pure sportsmanship is what appeals to me, as well as the inspiration I get when the route is lined with people shouting 'Go Army!'"

The team has plans to stick together and enter other team runs in the future.

"Everybody was really psyched up for this race," said Brown. "Given our training constrictions, once we can rebuild our running training bases, I think we can win in the 24th Infantry Division."

The Rock flattens the Wild Boars 21 - 0

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

When the 4th Battalion, 30th Infantry Regiment, "Wild Boars" met "The Rock" from 1st Bn, 19th Inf. Regt, Oct. 18, at Roberts Field, the thought of getting shut out probably never crossed their minds. But, that's what happened when The Rock blanked the Wild Boars 21-0.

The Rock's offense came out smoking on their first set of downs. Quarterback Ray Bentley moved the offense for a first down on their first three plays. Running back Richard Webb got the call on the first two plays then Bentley kept the ball on a bootleg left for the first down. A motion penalty on the offense moved them back five yards, then Webb was dropped for no gain on second down.

On third down Bentley rolled left found wide receiver Wimphus Reitzell all alone down the left sideline for The Rock's first score of the game. The extra point try was good on a Bentley quarterback keeper. The score was then The Rock 7, Wild Boars 0.

On the Wild Boars' first possession the offense could not move the ball and had to punt after three plays. The Rock offense had similar problems on their second series with three incomplete pass attempts and a bad snap. The Rock offense turned the ball over on downs.

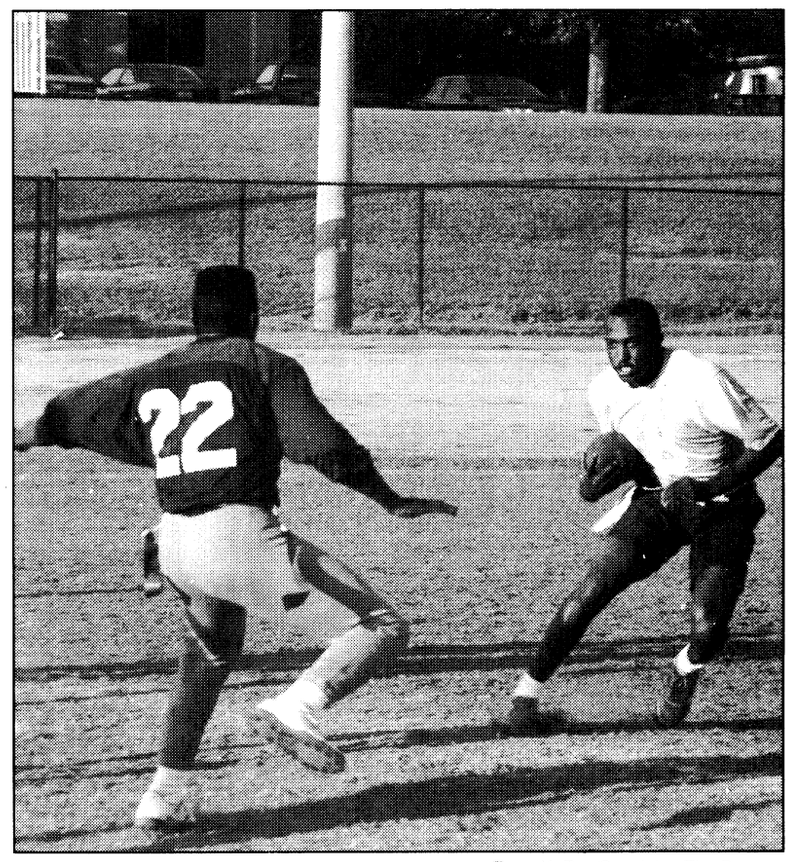
The Wild Boar offense took over but quarterback Ken Goodlow couldn't connect on his first two passes and on a third down pass play, running back Mike Ryan was tackled short of the first down marker by nose guard Ken Villalobos. The offense had to punt again.

On their third possession of the half, The Rock offense started from the shotgun set but Bentley's first down pass to wide receiver Dallas Hogan was incomplete. A short pass in the flat to wide receiver John Souter left The Rock with third and long. A long pass from Bentley to Reitzell was incomplete but Reitzell was flagged for offensive pass interference,. On fourth down Bentley tried to hit Reitzell again and this time the defense was called for pass interference setting The Rock up at the goal line with a first and goal. On the last play of the half Bentley rolled right and broke into the end zone. The extra point was good and The Rock led 14-0.

The Wild Boar offense started the second half with a pass from Goodlow to tight end David Jacoppo for a Boar first down. Running back Ryan got the next play up the middle for a short gain. Goodlow dropped back to pass on second down then rolled right and threw deep downfield. The pass was picked off by safety Reitzell, but Reitzell was called for pass interference, giving the Wild Boar offense their first chance to score.

On the next play Goodlow's pass was intercepted by linebacker Souter, killing the Wild Boar drive.

Starting deep in their own territory The Rock offense quickly moved the ball upfield. Running back Daniel McGee took a hand off up the middle for a first down. On second down Bentley hit Webb in the flat for another Rock first down.



A first down pass play by Bentley went sour, but Bentley scrambled around until he found McGee in the backfield. McGee broke down the right sideline with the defense on the left side and scampered into the end zone untouched for The Rock's final score of the game. The extra point attempt was good and the score was now The Rock 21, Wild Boars 0.

Due to the score and the time left in the game the referee called the game at the two minute warning. Final score was 21-0.

Fort Benning boxers battle for Olympic spots, must get past FORSCOM championships

By Willie Hay
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

You can find them fighting every day, but their battle ground is Kelley Hill gym, not the streets.

And for many of them, the ring they're reaching for is not the brass ring, but the five rings that symbolize the Olympic Games.

They're the quartet of amateur boxers — four 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division soldiers — and the soldier who hopes to coach them to victory at the Forces Command Boxing Championship Nov. 4 to 8 at Fort Bragg, N.C.

"The Sledgehammer Brigade's four competitors are all experienced amateur fighters," said Michael Dunn, a sergeant with 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery. "We've been training every day for the last three months, and I think each of these guys stands an excellent chance to win in their weight class at FORSCOM.

According to Dunn, a 26-year-old native of Washington, D.C., who was a member of the Fort Hood, Texas, boxing team in 1984-85, every military post is authorized to send one competitor in each of the 12 weight classes, along with a coach and an assistant, to the FORSCOM competition.

"Fort Benning hasn't had a boxing team for several years, so the 3rd Brigade decided to recruit the best amateur boxers we could find to represent the post, " Dunn said. "Next year, we hope to send a full team to FORSCOM."

"Winning at FORSCOM is pretty much your ticket to the all-Army training camp scheduled to run from Jan. 5 through Mar. 10, 1992, at Fort Huachuca, Arizona," he added. "The top Army boxers who are chosen at the camp have a shot at the 1992 Olympics in Barcelona, Spain."

"I definitely want to win at FORSCOM and all-Army and make it to the Olympics," said Prince Jones, a 72nd Engineer Company soldier who boxes at 147 pounds.

"I also coach a novice team of five guys in the 72nd, and my unit has been really supportive by letting us train together during regular PT times and allowing us to get off duty at 4 o'clock every afternoon to train in the gym," added Jones, 27, who boxed in the Golden Gloves competition in New York City and went on to win the VII Corps title in the 139 pound weight class in Germany in 1990.

"Coach Dunn is the back bone of our brigade's boxing program, and with the right coach and proper training, there isn't anything we can't do as a team at Fort Bragg," Jones said.

Another boxer with his sights set on Olympic gold is Michael Jamison, 24, who like Dunn, is assigned to 4th Bn., 41st Field Arty.

"For me, boxing is an individual challenge because it's just between me and the other guy whenever I step into the ring," said Jamison, a native of Birmingham, Ala., who won State Golden Gloves titles in three states while he was still in his teens and took second place at 156 pounds in the all-Army championships in 1989 and 1990.

"My personal goals are to win FORSCOM and all-Army and to get a shot at the 1992 Olympics," he added. "Someday, I hope to turn professional."

His teammate, Carlito Vasquez, has also boxed since his teen-aged years, but said family considerations weighed in his decision to choose a military career.

"I could have gotten out and turned professional, but I decided that staying in the Army is best for me and my wife and two kids," said Vasquez, assigned to Company D, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor. "I just reenlisted for three years and my wife, Beth, has changed her mind about my boxing after 10 years of marriage."

"He handles himself like a pro in the ring, and I like to watch and cheer him on," she agreed.

Vasquez has given his family a lot to cheer about. This year alone, the Desert Storm veteran returned from the Persian Gulf to win the Georgia State light heavyweight title at 178 pounds in July at Georgia Technical Institute in Atlanta.

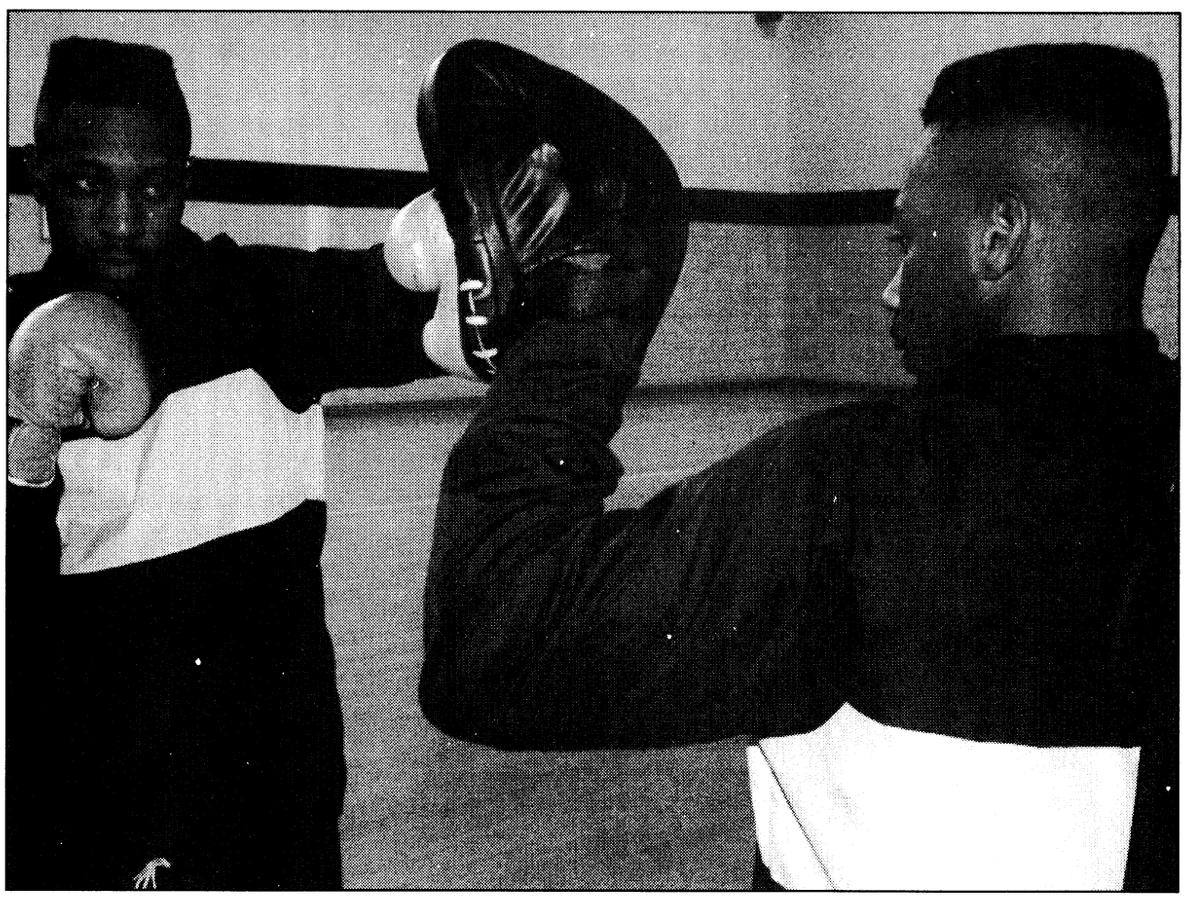
"After the FORSCOM championship, I plan to enter another Georgia state tournament and, if I win that, compete in the U.S.A. Amateur Boxing Federation's five-state regional championships in Nashville, Tenn., at the end of the year," Vasquez continued. "During my free time, I'm also involved with trying to teach young people to keep fighting off the streets and in the boxing ring right where it belongs."

The FORSCOM championship represents a comeback for Frank Ritchie, the final member of the Fort Benning slate, who volunteered for assistant coaching duties nearly four months ago when Dunn began organizing the first Sledgehammer Brigade Smoker, Oct. 3 on Kelley HIll.

"I waited 2 1/2 years for Fort Benning to have a boxing team," said Ritchie, a 24-year-old soldier assigned to 3rd Brigade's Headquarters and Headquarters Company. "Now that we've had our first smoker and scheduled another smoker Dec. 18 on Kelley Hill, I decided to get back into the ring myself to see if I really can come back and win."

Believe it or not, Ritchie said he started boxing at the age of 5.

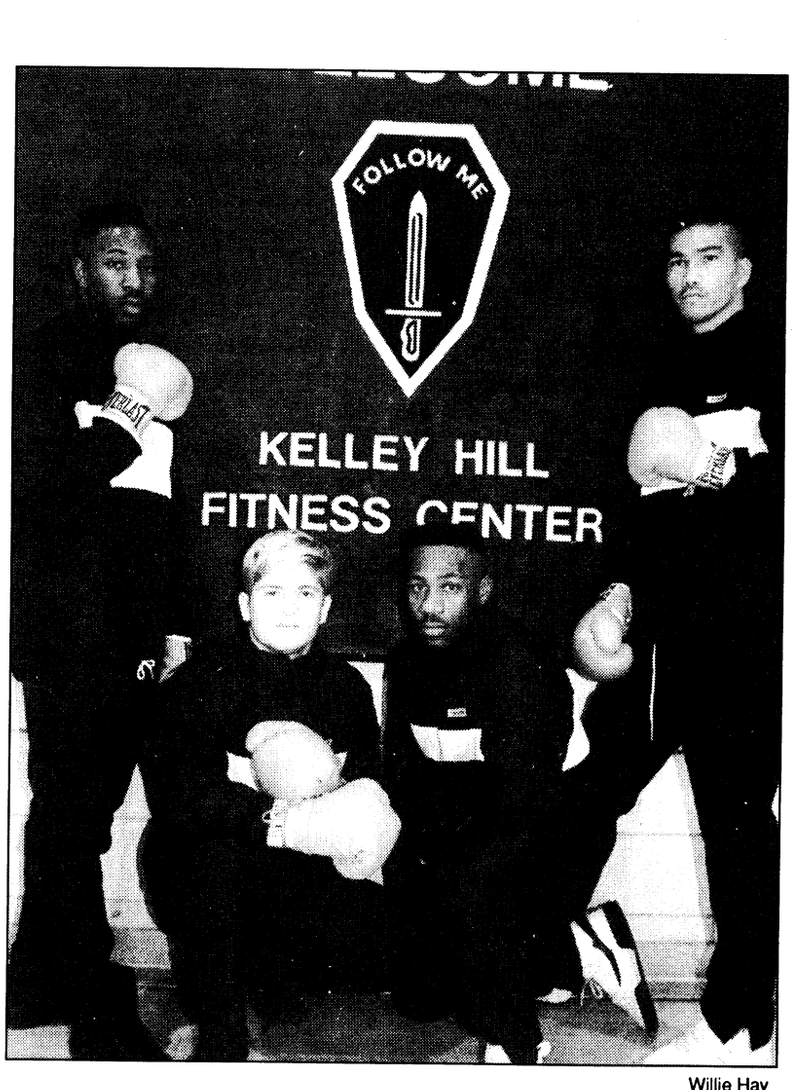
"Boxing was a big sport when I was growing up in Charleston, S.C., and they started you out young there. By the time you're 7, you're expected to be able to hold your own in the ring," he added.



Ritchie went on to win Junior Olympics state championships six times between the ages of 10 and 17

"Before I joined the Army, the highlight of my career was fighting in an international match between the United States and Canada in 1985 at Myrtle Beach, S.C., where I won the 119 pound title," he said.

According to Dunn, self-confidence and a commitment to training are essential to success in the ring.



"This is my first chance to coach a team and I'm doing my best to keep these guys' confidence up, point out their mistakes in the ring, and help them make it to the all-Army competition — and beyond," Dunn said.

"I think they have a bright future in boxing, if they stick with the sport, and so does Fort Benning."

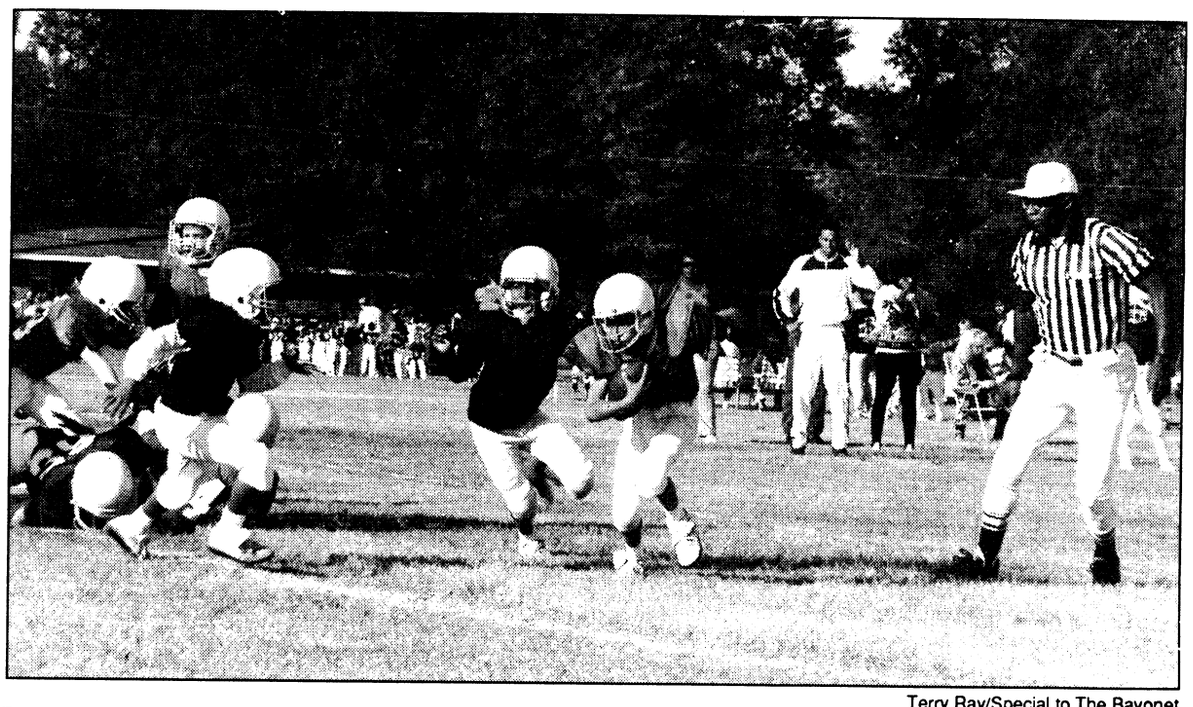
Today's baseball leagues lacks yesteryear's friendship

By Hank Aaron

Commentary

Baseball has given me many things, but none do I value more than the warm friendships formed during my playing years. The world seemed just a bit smaller back then and moved at a slower pace. When I broke into the majors, teams were still traveling by train, and that meant hours of swapping stories, trading tips on how to bat against the next opposing pitcher and general kidding around.

The baseball world certainly was smaller. Unlike today, where each league is divided into divisions, there were fewer teams and everyone played each other the same number of times. The results were far greater opportunities to get to know players on opposing teams. As hard as we'd play against each other during the game, there was no barrier to solid friendships. If the Braves were headed into Chicago, I could look forward to seeing friends like Ernie Banks or Billy Williams.



One of the sad results of our current era of jet travel, multimilliondollar salaries and free agency will be fewer friendships. Let's face it, the chances of two good players teaming together for five, 10 or 15 years are very slim. It used to be that a team would never trade a star, except perhaps at the very end of his career. Eddie Mathews and I played together for 13 years. We broke the record set by Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig for most home runs hit by teammates.

What are the chances that an Aaron-Mathews or Gehrig-Ruth combo would last today, season after season? Very slim. If the team resisted the temptation to trade, the chances are excellent that the players themselves would go for free agency and sign a contract with the highest bidder.

No matter how much you guard against it, the "here today, gone tomorrow" aspect of today's baseball has to put a damper on friendships. And when teams are flying across the country to get from a night game in Houston to a day game in Chicago, there isn't much energy left over for chatter and horseplay.

With the multimillion-dollar salaries being paid today, a player is more likely to become buddies with his agent or his investment counselor than the guy playing second base.

Hank Aaron is the top home-run hitter of all time with 755 homers. A member of baseball's Hall of Fame, Hank is senior vice president of the Atlanta Braves.

Memories of First Deer Hunt the Fondest

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

Remember when you were 10 or 11 years old and your father told you that this year you could go on your first deer hunt. You were so elated that the magical time had finally arrived. This was the year that you became one of the party not to be left behind ever again.

Your father said you would be able to go with him when it was time to scout the area that was to be hunted this year; you knew that this was special because no one ever went with Dad on scouting trips. Dad would teach you about looking for certain signs that would tell you if there were deer in the vicinity, or where they might be at a certain time of the day.

You would learn how to be quiet while in the woods and how to survey an area a bit at a time instead of looking everywhere all at once. Then would come target practice. Dad's old single-shot shotgun would be yours to use during the hunt. You would learn how to hold the gun up to your shoulder and sight down the barrel and squeeze the trigger and feel the recoil down to your toes. Dad would always say never shoot at anything you cannot see; make sure of your target before you fire because you can't pull the bullet back once it's left the barrel.

Going deer hunting for the first time with your dad and his friends made you feel a little more grown up, and you wanted to do everything just right to show Dad that you had indeed grown up a little more this year.

In the past when dad would go on the annual deer hunt he would say that it wasn't whether you got a deer, but the enjoyment of being with friends and the peace and solitude of the woods.

The eventful day finally came with dawn still far beyond the horizon, Dad woke you up with a hardy shake, although it wasn't necessary because you hardly slept a wink all night. Mom was in the kitchen making breakfast and packing lunches. Dad sat at the table with a steaming cup of coffee in his hand talking quietly to Mom.

You ate so fast you couldn't remember what it was you ate. Dad announced that it was time to go, and with, hugs and kisses, Mom waved us good luck as we climbed into Dad's old pick-up.

The drive to the woods gave Dad time to check up on the things he had taught you earlier in the year. You assured him that you still remembered everything he had said.

The still dark of the morning and the woods looming before you brought a chill up your spine you shook it off, and, with your father and the rest of the party, you moved into the woods on your first of many more deer hunts to come.

The Deer Check Station (Building 5883, Harmony Church) will be open beginning Oct. 26 through Nov. 30 to weigh , age , and examine deer harvested from the installation. Hours of operation will be : Monday through Friday , 7:45 a.m. to 4:15 p.m., weekends and Veteran's Day , 9:00 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. . Valuable information is obtained from the aging and measuring of the deer which is used in determining overall population trends, herd health , and establishment of the following season limits. Successful hunters are requested to cooperate in this effort by bringing all deer harvested to the Check Station for examination during the dates indicated.

M and M Deer Processing Stands Behind Community

By Kimberly Wood

You may have heard about the 2nd Annual Big Deer contest going on right now, but you may not have heard much about who is responsible for it. M and M Deer Processing and Taxidermist has been in business over 16 years and is an avid supporter of the Fort Benning/Columbus community.

M and M Deer Processing and Taxidermist located off Macon Road on Elm Drive.

Last year M and M donated 250lbs of meat to the House of Mercy in Columbus. In the past several years they donated hats and t-shirts to the Children's Foundation of Fort Benning. This year they have organized their 2nd Annual Big Deer contest which will benefit the Eastern Little League. Participants will be judged in three categories: Big Buck-Boone and Crockett scoring, Big Buck-field dress weight, and Big Doe-field dress weight. There is over $3,000 worth of prizes including guns, equipment and mounts. The contest will last through Feb. 15, 1992, and judging decisions will be made by M and M.

Not only is M and M a charitable organization, they also provide a valuable service to area hunters. Basically they are a custom cut shop for wild game processing. They will skin, wash and cut your game in a state-inspected cutting room for as low as $32. Your meat will be neatly packaged in a cellophane tray with double wrapping and a label (like it came from the grocery store). It will be kept in a freezer basket for you to pick up at your convenience. M and M processes your meat with no additives and it is actually cut by professionals from food stores such as Lewis Jones and Winn Dixie.

For complete one-stop service, M and M will have your game mounted if you like. They refer to three area taxidermists who have over 40 years of experience. M and M will deliver and order your mount for you, so you only have to drop off your carcass at one location.

At M and M your satisfaction is guaranteed or you do not have to pay for services. Owner Jay Willard says, "Customer satisfaction has got to be the most important thing " M and M stands behind their work and as a result they have several "old timers" from Fort Benning who have been coming back regularly for over ten years.

You can also receive advice from an experienced local hunter at M and M. They will teach field dressing and other techniques to new hunters at no extra cost. Willard says, "It is best for hunters to field dress their deer while they're still in the woods. That way it prevents bacteria from infesting your meat." He also says bringing along a rope, a sling and some water is helpful for a hunter to prepare their deer.

So when you set out to find a deer this season, be sure to register for M and M's 2nd Annual Big Deer contest. You will be helping out the community and getting trustworthy, home-town service at the same time. M and M Deer Processing and Taxidermist is open seven days a week from 9 a.m.- "until the job gets done." They are located at 2248 Elm Drive, off Macon Road (Exit 4 off I-185).

How to make money in three easy steps.

Step 1.

Sell a solution! Your old rattle trap is a teen's dream machine. That old set of golf clubs is sure to be a big hit with a beginner. Here's the point: Your former treasure can bring another pleasure. And if you've got a skill to market or service you'd like to provide—there's someone looking for you in classified.

Aim for an audience. After you've selected a solution for another to seize, bring that person to life. Think about your product or service and its original value to you, then detail its features and benefits to another individual. When you put those benefits into words, others like you will find value too. And that's of value to you!

Step 3.

Contact classified. Give us a call. You'll cash in on the speed and effectiveness of the dynamic classified marketplace. Carol Burnett back in variety

By JAY BOBBIN
Tribune Media Services

After a prelude on a different network, one of TV's most enduring stars is going back to a familiar home ... and a familiar format.

During the past two seasons, Carol Burnett tried a new approach by playing different roles in different stories each week on NBC's "Carol & Company." That series' notable ratings proved she still had a big following among viewers, many of whom should be pleased to see her revisiting the specific comedy-variety genre that kept her a Saturday-night staple for 12 years (1967-79). Friday now will be the night for "The Carol Burnett Show," starting this week, and it also marks Burnett's return to CBS. Though such former sidekicks as Vicki Lawrence, Harvey Korman and Tim Conway aren't regulars this time, Burnett — who doubles as co-executive producer — has surrounded herself with another cast of repertory co-stars. The seven-member group includes two "Carol & Company" players, Meagen Fay and Richard Kind, along with such additions as Jessica ("Over My Dead Body") Lundy and Rick ("Ghost") Aviles. Holding to tradition, Burnett also will continue to feature weekly guests, with actor-comedian Martin Short and blues-music legend B.B. King booked as this Friday's visitors.

In explaining her switch back to her former network, the open and warm Burnett reflects on the status of "Carol & Company" when the fall schedules were set last May. "It was doing well," she says, "but it was also like root canal every week for the writers and me. You'd have just gotten one story done, then you'd have to start all over again on Monday with a brand-new set of blank pages. The anthology idea was interesting, but it became very, very difficult to come up with an original play every week. We didn't really realize how hard it was until we got into it, so toward the end of the second season, we started doing theme shows that had two separate sketches. That's when I started thinking it was really easier, and more fun, to do a one-hour variety show. Besides, I missed having music and takeoffs on news stories and movies. I had really wanted to do a spoof of 'Twin Peaks,' since we were scheduled directly against it ... but we couldn't, because that wasn't the type of show we were doing, and that was a little frustrating."

One day after NBC's pickup date for another season of "Carol & Company," Disney called CBS, which picked up the contract, said Burnett, who feels very much at home back at her old network.

Post jams at music festival

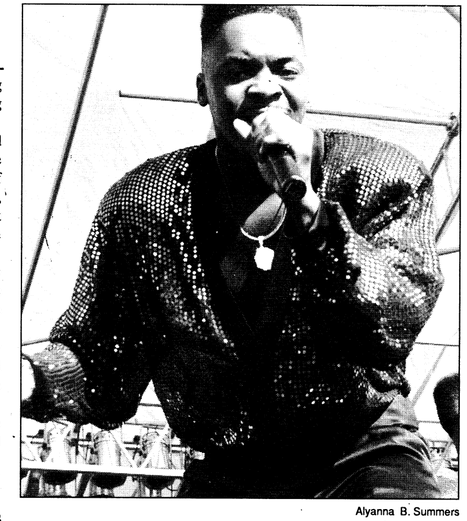
Alyanna B. Summers

Damian and Deah Dame of the duo Damian Dame belt out their top ten single "Exclusivity."

By Alyanna B. Summers
Bayonet Staff Writer

There was a whole lot of shaking going on around Fort Benning Saturday at Doughboy Stadium.

Members of the Fort Benning and surrounding communities were treated to the soulful stylings of Levert, B Angie B, Damian Dame, the Rude Boys and Keisha Jackson at the Musical Festival sponsored by the Directorate of Community Activities.



The Military Police Activity provided several military police personnel for extra security during the five–hour concert.

"I think that the crowd was very controlled during the event ," said Maj. Robert Pellegren, executive officer of the MPA.

Performers expressed positive feelings about the concert and performing for a military audience.

"This place is like home for me," said Keisha Jackson.

"I love it, I love it, I love it!" said B Angie B when asked about performing at Fort Benning. " The crowd is so friendly and really great!"

Reporter turns comic at Comedy Cow

By Alyanna B. Summers
Bayonet staff writer

By day, I'm just your average Lois Lane type of girl reporter – sniffing out stories, hunting down facts, just regular stuff.

But every other Saturday night, I'm neither a reporter nor am I a private. Every other Saturday night, I'm Back Allie – a comedienne that got her big break at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center's Comedy Cow Amateur Hour.

Comedy Cow is the brainchild of 1st Lt. Nabile Hage, executive officer for Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, also known as Papa Doc, the "Brother Man From the Motherland."

"The Comedy Cow is a way for soldiers and their families to come out and see good entertainment right on post. It's also a good way for soldiers with talent to utilize their talents in a constructive manner," said Hage.

COMMENTARY

The audience decides the winning comic of the show by applauding if they are pleased and by "mooing" and jingling their car keys like cow bells if they aren't.

I called and signed up for the show. I was very nervous and my husband, Vernell, was no help. The only thing he would say was, "You'd better be funny. I'd hate to 'moo' my own wife." I threatened to take away his car keys for life if he acted up that night.

My competition was fierce, but, low and behold, I tied for first place that night!

Subsequently, I went back for the next show and won first place. If you have never seen my act, please come and be prepared to laugh – or moo.

Callaway offers educational video

Calllaway Gardens

PINE MOUNTAIN, Ga. - Butterflies—you have probably enjoyed their bright colors and flashing wings many times. Yet how much do you really know about these spectacular members of the animal kingdom?

Through a new educational video designed by the Callaway Gardens Education Department, teachers and students will discover the world of butterflies.

You will learn the differences between butterflies and moths, how the colorful patterns on butterfly wings are created, and follow the action as a zebra longwing butterfly developes from a tiny egg into an adult.

This exciting 15-minute video entitled "Butterflies" was made possible through the support of the Coca-Cola Foundation and the donors of the Ida Cason Callaway Foundation. For information on renting or purchasing the video, contact the Callaway Gardens Education Department at 404- 663-5153.

Callaway Gardens, a man-made landscape in a unique natural setting, was conceived and created by Cason J. Callaway and his wife, Virginia Hand Callaway, for the benefit of mankind.

The purpose is to provide a wholesome family environment where all may find beauty, relaxation, inspiration and a better understanding of the living world.

Callaway Gardens, a public, educational, horticultural and charitable organization, is owned and operated by the non-profit Ida Cason Callaway Foundation.

I'ts wholly-owned subsidiary, Gardens Services, Inc, a regular business corporation, operates the recreational, lodging, and retail facilities at Callaway Gardens.

After-tax proceeds go to the foundation to support its efforts.

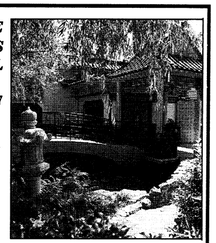
Dangerous Liaisons opens Oct. 31st

Christopher Hampton's icy and irresistible LES LIAISONS DANGEREUSES (Dangerous Lialsons), the Laurence Olivier award-winning adventure set against the lavish backdrop of 18th Century France opens Oct. 31 at 8 p. m. in Emily Woodruff Hall.



The boudoir is the battleground for the conniving Marquise de Merteuil and her charming ex-lover, the Vicomte de Valmont. These wolves in lambs clothing scheme to seduce, deflower and humiliate any number of innocent victums for their own amusement. But cross and double-cross occur when the Vicomte finds himself in love.

Director Roger Mays said LES LIAISONS DANGEREUSES presents us with characters we love to hate and hate to love. "The play is about human drives and the way people get what they want," Mays said. "The staging combines the very civilized, sumptuous textures of the set with the classic lines and colors of the costumes which will emphasize the very uncivilized manipulations and reversals in the story. The viewer will find himself transported into the sensual world in which these characters exist, a world of passion and intrigue, seduction and betrayal," Mays said.

Mays makes his Springer directorial debut for Dangerous Liansons, although he knows the theatre, its volunteers and programs from his year as State Theatre's production coordinator, where he is vitally involved in every show the Springer produces.

"Acting as both the director of the show and the production coordinator has provided me the luxury of artistic expression and the burden of near-total responsibility," Mays said.

Country music winner to perform

The 1991 "Top New Female Vocalist," Academy of Country Music winner, Shelby Lynne will perform at the Dallas Club in Columbus Nov. 22. Showtime is 10 p.m.

Lynne's initial Nashville recognition came in late 1987 when —on the strength of a demo tape — she appeared on TNN's "Nashville Now." The next morning she had offers from four record labels and a call from Billy Sherrill to produce her music.

She signed with Epic Records in 1989, Sunrise, her debut album was released. Her second album, Tough All Over, was released in 1990. Her performance on both albums received rave critical reviews.

The first two singles from Tough All Over, "I'll Lie Myself To Sleep," and "Things Are Tough All Over," were accompanied by videos and both songs went top twenty.

Her new disc, Soft Talk, is a combination of great songs and excellent vocals. The up-tempo "Don't Cross Your Heart," is the brand new single from Soft Talk.

Seldom do young perfcrmers create the "buzz" that Lynne has. At the New Faces Show during Country Radio Seminar, Lynne received a standing ovation after both songs she performed, from what is considered as one of the toughest audiences for a young artist to perform before.

Post holds 1991 Bradley Conference

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Building 4 exhibited a flurry of activity this week as more than 400 attendees, ranging in rank from sergeant first class to major general, gathered for the 1991 Bradley Fighting Vehicle Conference, hosted by the U.S. Army Infantry School.

According to Maj. Peter Helmer, assistant Training and Doctrine Command systems manager of Fighting Vehicle Systems, the conference, whose theme is "Sustaining the Excellence of the Bradley Fighting Vehicle into the 21st Century," provides a forum for attendees to discuss and develop positions on a wide range of issues related to the vehicle.

"The intent is to continue improving open dialogue between members of the worldwide Bradley community in the identification and resolution of issues," said Helmer.

Monday saw briefings for Bradley Master Gunners, but the conference as a whole kicked off on Tuesday with opening remarks by Post Commander Maj. Gen. Jerry White and a short film that chronicled the history of the Bradley Fighting Vehicle.

Formal briefings, workshops, and seminars on specific issues constituted the remainder of the conference, with discussions focusing on such areas as training, doctrine, combat developments, and organization.

Lessons learned from Operation Desert Storm were also tackled, including ways to prevent the sometimes fatal mistake of confusing friendly forces with those of the enemy.

Future technological advances for the Bradley were another focus, as Col. William Hixon, Training and Doctrine Command systems manager of Fighting Vehicle Systems indicated in his conference overview on Tuesday.

"We're not only going to sustain, but we're going to improve our mechanized infantry systems," said Hixon.

Planned improvements for the near future include a laser range finder, an upgraded navigation system, enhanced thermal vision for the driver, an Identification Friend or Foe system, upgraded equipment stowage, and a missile countermeasure device.

Attendees were also treated to a live fire demonstration Thursday on Red Cloud Range and displays by some of the biggest names in the defense industry, including General Dynamics, Hughes Electronics and Texas Instruments. The displays demonstrated high-tech developments ranging from computerized training aids to improved camoflauge that resembles carpet and is glued to the vehicle.

The four and 1/2-day conference ends today with closing remarks by Assistant Commandant Brig. Gen. Carl Ernst.

American Flag Run begins

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The fourth annual American Flag run began Wednesday at the Arlington National Cemetery in Virginia.

Runners will carry the colors through various states and is scheduled to end in Phenix City, Nov. 11. Fort Benning's participation will include six members of the Ranger Training Brigade, who will run the last leg of the run.

Post Commander Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, will receive the national colors for the final mile of the 1,000-mile run in front of the Columbus Government Center at about 3 p.m. that day.

White will then carry them across the bridge into Phenix City where an arrival ceremony will be held in front of City Hall at about 3:30 p.m.

At the conclusion of the run, White will pass the flag to representatives of the 900th Combat Services Company of Phenix City, recognizing its soldiers for their duty in Southwest Asia.

The public is invited to participate in the final, "Run a Mile for America" leg. Runners are asked to donate a dollar for the Chattahoochee Valley Arthritis Club.

Upcoming holidays change The Bayonet deadlines

Due to the Veterans Day holiday, the deadline for submitting items for the Nov. 15 issue of The Bayonet will be noon Thursday. Also, because of Thanksgiving, The Bayonet will be published Nov. 27 instead of Nov. 29. The deadline for submitting items for that issue will be Nov. 19. For more information, call Paula J. Randall at 545-2201 or stop by Building 4, room 601.

317th Engineer Bn. arrives

More than 200 soldiers of the 317th Engineer Battalion arrived with their families Tuesday at Lawson Army Airfield.

The unit attended a welcome ceremony at the airfield and were introduced to their military sponsors who will assist the new arrivals at their new duty station.

The unit, which is currently in Eschborn, Germany near Frankfort, is being sent to Fort Benning as part of the Army's drawing down in Europe. Under this plan, 57 units are being transferred to installations in the U.S.

The soldiers and their families will began inprocessing Wednesday at Soldier's Plaza, and complete the task at Kelley Hill Thursday.

Headquarters Company, along with Companies A and C will be stationed at Fort Benning as part of the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division. Companies C and D will be assigned to Fort Stewart.

The battalion will be headquartered with the brigade and will consist of approximately 450 soldiers.

3rd Bde. command changes hands

By Tom Wilkinson
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

The 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized) conducted a change of command Wednesday on York Field in which Col. Robert J. St. Onge Jr. assumed command from Col. Theodore W. Reid.

Maj. Gen. Barry R. McCaffrey, commander, 24th Infantry Division, Fort Stewart, passed the brigade colors from Reid to St. Onge.

"This ceremony not only marks the departure and arrival of commanders, but it is more a recognition of the continuity of command of these soldiers," said McCaffrey.

As Reid looked out at his soldiers for the last time he said, "Today, my emotions are running between honor and pride. One need only look out at these soldiers on this field to understand my feelings. I've been blessed to command such great soldiers. You've always done everything I asked of you.

"I challenge you to continue your professionalism and be prepared to deploy anywhere in the world and to fight and win," he added.

McCaffrey said, "I can't imagine a soldier who is better qualified to take command than Bob St. Onge.

Col. Robert St. Onge Jr. accepts the colors from Maj. Gen. Barry McCaffrey as Col. Theodore Reid and Command Sgt. Maj. Jimmie Bowles (left) stand by.

In St. Onge's address to the soldiers of his new brigade he said, "Your reputation is excellent. You look magnificent standing out there, and we are honored to become a part of your team."

St. Onge comes to the Sledgehammer Brigade from Carlisle Barracks, Pa., where he completed the Army War College.

Reid will become the deputy director of training, J-3, Forces Command at Fort McPherson, Ga.

DoD defers tours for new parents

Policy allows four-month family stabilization period for dependent-restricted, some accompanied tours

By Alyanna B. Summers
Bayonet Staff Writer

A new policy is in effect to provide less disruption for military families undergoing transition.

The Department of Defense has established a new policy to authorize a four-month deferment from assignment to a dependent-restricted tour or an accompanied tour when concurrent travel is denied for affected personnel, according to a Department of the Army release.

Military mothers can be deferred for four months after the birth of a child and a single soldier or one member of a dual-military family for four months after the effective date of the adoption of a child. Soldiers may waive the deferment.

For the purpose of this policy, the effective date of adoption is the date a child is placed in the home as a part of the formal adoption process. This time is given to allow for the child and family to stabilize the family relationship, similar to the adjustment period allowed after the birth of a child.

The deferment policy also applies to deployment on temporary duty or temporary assignment away from the permanent home station or port, as well as reservists who are involuntarily activated.

"Fort Benning will adhere to this policy as well," said Sgt. Maj. Burkhard W. Berger, sergeant major of the Adjutant General.

"This policy is especially helpful for single military mothers who may need time to make arrangements for their child before leaving for an overseas assignment, said Berger.

"Dual-military couples may not take advantage of the policy, because only one soldier in the family may stay with the child while the other one must go to the overseas assignment as ordered. Most dual military couples just take the child with them and leave as scheduled, so the family is not split up," he added.

Fort Benning has no known cases of soldiers taking advantage of this policy to date, said Berger.

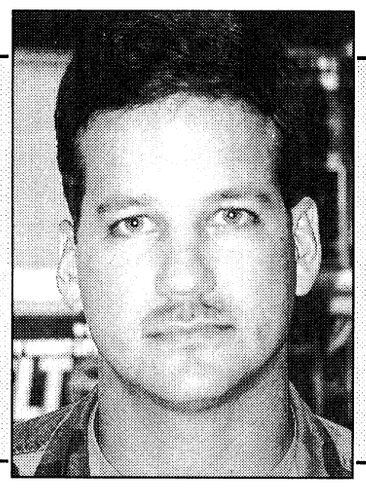
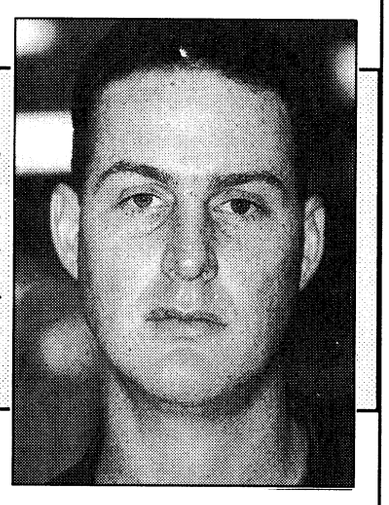
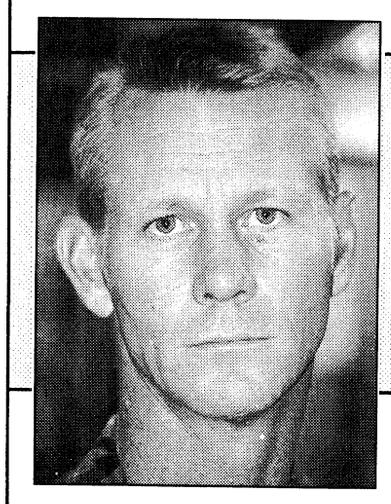
VARIOUS VOICES



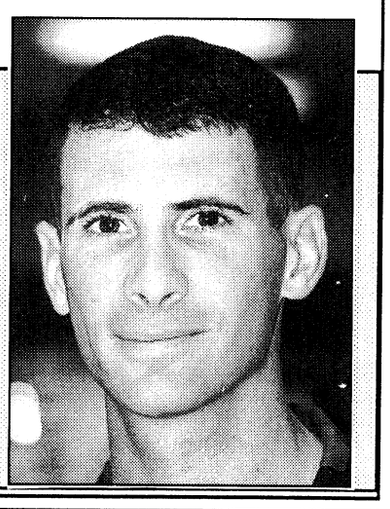
What are your feelings toward the Army's voluntary 'early out' program?



Staff Sgt. Ivor Griffiths, 72nd Engineer Group- "I think it gives people who need to get out a chance to do so, without getting a less than honorable discharge. It will also keep in the people who want to stay in, and improve the quality of the service."



Spc. Don Vicaux, Headquarters, Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry- "Right now, the Army needs to cut down on people, and it gives a lot of soldiers an opportunity to go to school earlier, if that's what they want."



Sgt. Scott Kirk, Company A, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment.- "I think its a great idea for people who want out, and meet the requirements and standards for an early separation. It will cut costs for the Army, while maintaining the soldiers who would like to make the military a career."

Sgt. Dennis Szczepniak, Headquarters, Headquarters Battery, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery- "The program allows people who want out, to get out without a bad mark on their record. I also see that it would save a lot of paperwork and time."

Staff Sgt. Steven W. Franklin, Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 4th Battery, 41st Field Artillery- "It sounds like a good deal to me, those soldiers who are planning to go to college can get started in a timely manner."

Staff Sgt. Stephen C. Foster, Co. E, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Training Center- "I believe it will make the Army stronger, and I believe it will help out those soldiers who made a mistake by enlisting two to three years ago and give them a chance to excel. It will also make the Army stronger by keeeping the people in who want to keep the Army as a career."

Eye in sky on you in PX, on road

COMMENTARY

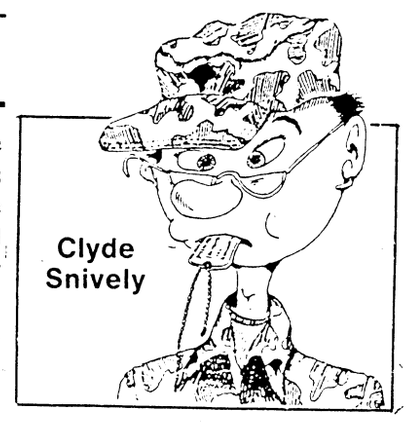
Ever get the feeling you're being watched?

If you're inside a post exchange facility or driving on a Fort Benning road, you might be.

The main exchange is so sophisticated that television cameras can track an individual's every step he or she takes while in the store (they leave you alone when you're in the dressing room, however, the person monitoring the cameras will make sure you come out of the fitting room with the same number of items visible as when you went in).

The camera can zoom in on a person to see what he or she's doing, such as stuffing jewelry into a purse, or Skoal into a battle dress uniform pocket, or zoom out to follow the person as he or she moves about the store.

The average number of shoplifters stopped by security is 80 a month. That's more than two people a day caught going for a five-finger discount.



Security officers with the post exchange say most items that are taken are penny ante stuff, like a can of snuff, football cards, maybe some jewelry or perfume.

As a military policeman noted, losing a career over a $1.50 theft is a tough way to go.

Kids who shoplift are assigned to various types of community service, such as cleaning the hunt club's stables on Saturdays. And all shoplifters have their shopping privileges taken from them for various stretches of time.

Military policemen note that once a person is taken to the station and a sponsor or unit commander comes down, the suspect usually has a story about, "I didn't mean to take it. It was an accident. I had my hands full, put the item in my pocket (or purse) and just forgot about it.

"In the old days, a commander or sponsor would probably believe the suspect. But once we show the video, there's not doubt in their mind about where the truth lies.

"They see the person looking for a place to stuff their pockets or purse, they see the furtive looks, all doubt is soon erased."

So for those planning on shoplifting on post, the best advice is—don't. The eye in the sky will get you.

The eye on the road belongs to the military police's new radars. An old Army expression is "the hawk is up," or "the hawk will get you."

It's definitely true today since the Hawk in this case refers to the new radars.

These radars are so accurate, they can tell the operators to within one mile an hour how fast a person is going.

MPs say they can track four cars at once and track in all directions—360 degrees.

People who figure they can get by with going just a few miles over the speed limit might be right. However, if their car's speedometer isn't calibrated, the 5 mph over the limit they think they're going might actually be 8 or more and 8 might actually be closer to 15 mph over the speed limit.

A military policeman noted that a car older than a year old probably needs its speedometer calibrated. But don't be concerned about the radar's calibration. They are calibrated, the MPs say. MPs are especially watchful in housing areas, noting this is where most of the speeding is done—by residents too—they note. Speeders forked over $162,000 in fines during September. So, as you go about your business on post, don't get paranoid, just comply with the law.

Seatbelts can save lives in accidents

By Jonathan Pierce
Army News Service

On Sept. 28, I survived a head-on collision with a Ford Panel Van. I was driving my Ford Escort. Both vehicles were totalled by the nearly 90-mph crash.

I'm typing this with my right hand. My left is swollen and not very responsive — one of the thumb's smaller bones may be broken. One of my right ribs hurts whenever I laugh; it's fractured. My left shoulder aches, and elevating it past 45 degrees in any direction is unbearable. Around my neck I'm temporarily wearing a flexible neck brace — the doctor wants to give my neck muscles some time to relax.

On my left side, from the base of my neck running forward and diagonally downward for about eight inches is the visible evidence of how my daughter and I survived the collision. Not visible to the public are similar six-inch marks running horizontally across my lap at the hips.

The two-inch wide marks are where my seat belt did its work, placing welts and abrasions on my skin but protecting me from any apparent serious injury. My daughter's seat belt apparently kept her in even better shape than I am although we both have muscle aches everywhere.

Twenty-three years ago I was driving my mother home from work when another driver tried to beat me through an intersection; I had the right-of-way. There wasn't time to respond, except to hit the brakes and begin a sideward slide.

Mom wasn't wearing a seat belt. She broke her ankle. The other driver got the citation, a banged-up truck and a car repair bill.

From the experience, I developed a real respect for seat belts — a respect that saved my daughter and me our lives.

The details of this latest accident are pretty clear. The other driver was coming toward us. A dog ran out onto the country road in front of the van. He swerved, and all four wheels missed that dog. He lost control.

To my right was about six feet of shoulder before a steep hillside. I couldn't swerve onto his lane; he was still out of control. Off the left shoulder was a stand of trees and a 20- to 30-foot drop into a stream. All that was left was to stand on the brakes.

My daughter says she offered the quickest prayer. A blink. The hood of his van filling my vision. The silent collision. That's right, I didn't hear it.

Changing attitudes cause military men, women to promote equal opportunity

By Sally Roberts
Tripler Medical Center

The war in the Persian Gulf has proved that there are some provisions of the Combat Exclusion Act that need to be revised or updated. However, now is not the time to force upon the military changes in those provisions that exclude women from direct combat-arms specialties.

Greater strides for the equality of women have been made within the military than in any other organization in the United States. Service members have a much more professional attitude about working relationships with members of the opposite sex.

This isn't just a question of a woman's right to be afforded opportunity. It's a question of changing the attitude of Americans about women.

A simple history lesson in civil rights teaches us that the laws can be changed on paper, but in order to make them work, the attitudes of the people have to change.

Instead of risking the security of the nation by thrusting this experiment upon the military, efforts to change the attitudes of Americans about women in combat should begin in the communities from which the future military will draw its strength. The military, however, may have a great influence on such a process.

As soldiers, sailors, Marines and airmen return from the Gulf region and have a chance to digest their experiences there, attitudes will change. Eventually, these people will leave the military and return to their communities.

The feeling of camaraderie that develops while serving your country in the military, especially in combat, isn't lost when you take off the uniform. These are convictions that are so strong, they remain a part of your values for the rest of your life. Values influence what we are, and when we return to our communities, our values will influence those around us.

No doubt, there are some women in the military who are physically and mentally ready, right now, to serve along with men in direct combat. But if legislation is enacted too soon, the bars on women in combat won't be only for the benefit of those few. All people who are affected by that legislation have to be prepared to make it work. Start with our schools and churches. Start with our communities.

Just as we are teaching our children not to judge people on the color of their skin, teach them not to limit themselves.

It's not easy to make children understand the importance of an attitude that won't really affect them until they become women and men. But it is easier to teach them what's right from the start, rather than to try and change what they have become.

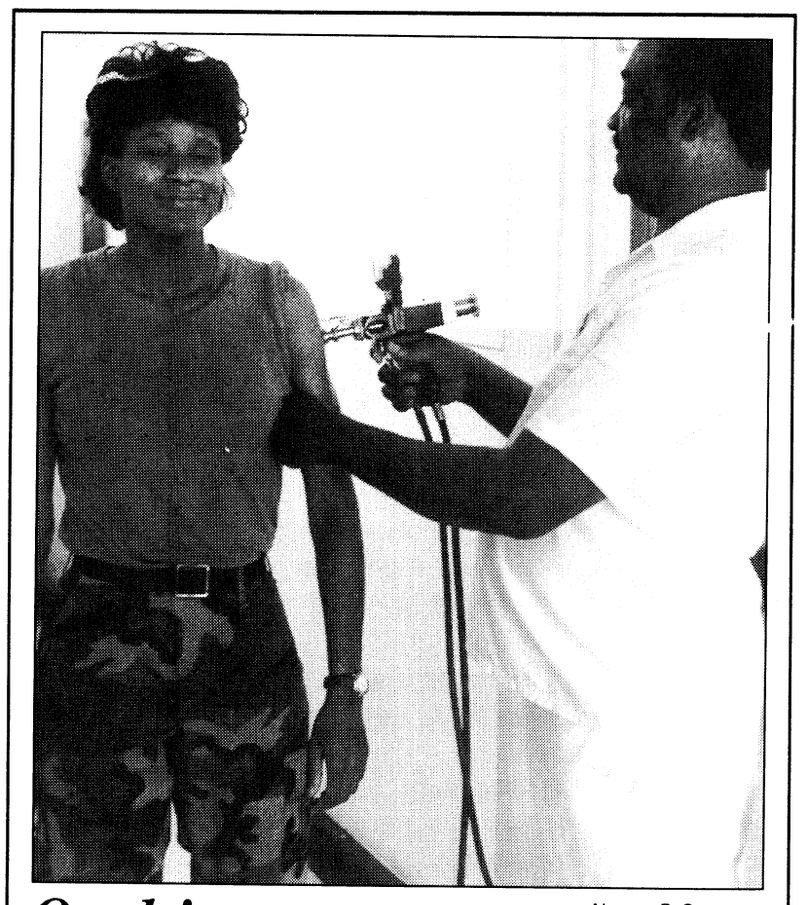
Post gets annual beauty treatment

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning soldiers and family members participated in a post cleanup Oct. 21 through 25 in the post housing areas.

Residents of all housing areas were released by their commanders to cleanup quarters and yards.



Post cleanup is done every six months to ensure that the post remains clean, according to officials of the Community Life Program.

Soldiers and family members mowed lawns, picked up debris and disposed of rubbish via the help of major unit commands.

Each command was responsible for a section of the post, and detailed subordinate units to take responsibility for the supervision and guidance for the cleanup.

"We have no idea what kind of turnout we had, as far as numbers of people participating is concerned," said Darlene Perry of the Community Life Office.

Perry said, however, that the turnout seemed to be good judging by the amount of trash collected.

TDY travelers must reserve housing quarters in advance

By Alyanna B. Summers
Bayonet staff writer

Transient housing facilities on several Army installations have experienced difficulty in maintaining a high occupancy and usage rate according to a recent Department of the Army joint message.

In an effort to improve the use of transient housing and reduce the number of non-availability statements issued, a change has been made to the current reservation system.

The new system has been developed with the assistance of several major Army commands in conjunction with the assistant Secratary of the Army.

Army Regulation 210-50, dealing with the installation housing management reservation system, will be changed as follows:

Billeting officers will establish a reservation system that will enable temporary-duty status personnel to confirm reservations at least 30 days prior to actual travel. The reservations will be kept in a locally-designed ledger to record confirmed reservation, or in the Housing Operations Management System.

TDY travelers must make reservations at the TDY installation's transient facility within 30 days of the projected arrival date. If quarters will be available, a reservation will be made and travelers will be given a confirmation control number.

If quarters will not be available, travelers will be told to call for a non-availability statement number control number two days before arrival to the TDY installation. Travelers will not be reimbursed for off-post housing accommodations without the statement of nonavailability.

This revised policy does not apply to students attending Army service schools if other group reservation or assignment orders are used.

This requirement will be noted on all TDY orders by the issuing authority. All TDY travelers with statements of non availability will be subject to recall.

Fort Benning has always had a 30-day policy in effect for transient housing facilities, and low housing facilities usage is not a problem on post, according to Ken Hankins, chief of the housing division of the Directorate of Engineering and Housing. "We are at almost 90 percent strength as far as transient housing is concerned, due to the number of Army service schools Fort Benning has," said Hankins.

1st Division to dedicate war memorial Nov. 8

A bronze plaque commemorating the participation of the 1st Infantry Division, the "Big Red One," will be dedicated Nov. 8 at the National Infantry Museum at 11 a.m.

The plaque will be placed on top of the Division Memorial currently at the museum. A wreath will also be placed at the memorial in memory of the soldiers of the "Big Red One."

"It is my belief that memorials should be teaching vehicles," said retired Maj. Gen. Albert H. Smith Jr., project coordinator. "This tells the story of going to war and coming home. All ages can get a feel of the 1st Division's contribution to history here. Now, they may not know everything about the division or these wars, but it will excite their imagination and bring them into the museum," said Smith.

If you are planning to attend Troy State University at Fort Benning as a beginning freshman who is under 21 years of age, who has never attended another college or who is transferring less than 30 quarter hours/20 semester hours of credit, you must submit an acceptable ACT/SAT test score. For more detailed information, please contact your Servicing Education Center or the Registrar's office, Building #2603, telephone number: 689-4709.

TDY soldiers may be eligible for SWASM

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

Soldiers who may have thought they were not eligible for the Southwest Asia Service Medal may be eligible after all.

Officials at the Department of the Army released information in mid-October stating that any soldier serving in a military capacity in defense of Saudi Arabia, the liberation of Kuwait or Operation Provide Comfort for a period of one day or more is eligible to wear the medal.

Sgt. David Maldonado from Fort Benning's Adjutant General's office stated that memorandums were sent to all major unit commanders to place individuals on a list for the award.

"Because we sent out the memos," said Maldonado, "most of the records on post, for individuals who served, should be updated."

Maldonado said that soldiers who are new to Fort Benning or were individual replacements may, or may not, have their records updated simply because AG was not notified that these individuals have served.

"The soldiers," said Maldonado, "just need to bring in some kind of documentation, preferably a copy of their orders, with them to AG and we will sit down and try to help the soldier out."

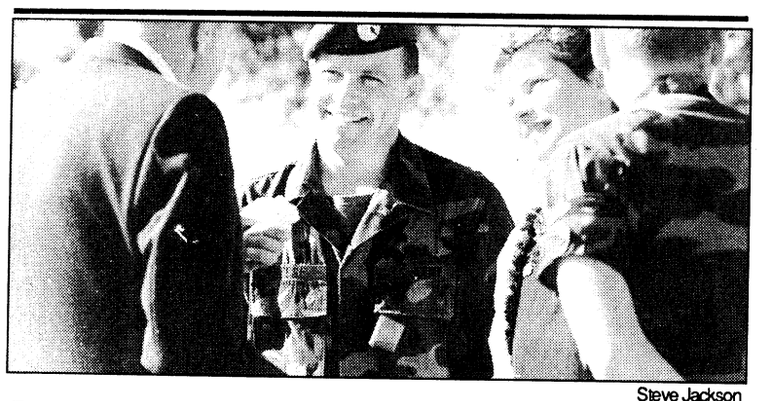
MACH offers 'Gateway'

Installation hospital gets new approach to military medicine

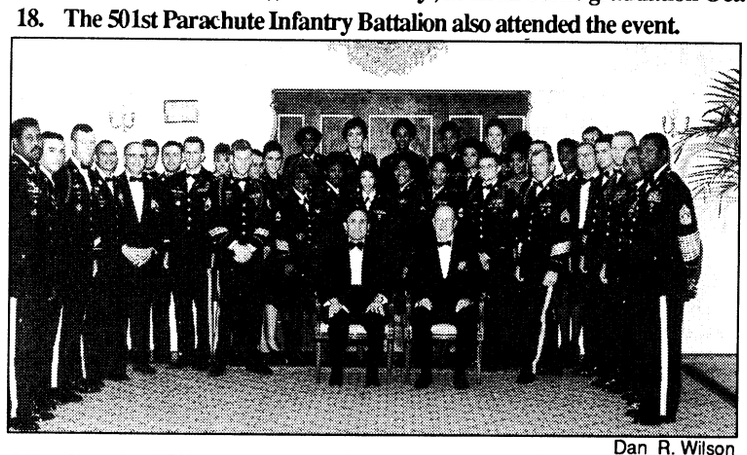
By Carolyn E. Bradley
Martin Army Community Hospital



The Army's coordinated health care program, Gateway to Care, will serve as the Army's pathway to a future coordinated-care system encompassing all of the U.S. armed forces, say Health Services Command officials.

This is a new approach to military medicine resulting from a decision by Dr. Enrique Mendez, Assistant Secretary of Defense for Health Affairs. Eventually, a DOD-wide coordinated care system will emerge, and all the services will follow certain standard practices and share resources.

At Martin Army Community Hospital, a new division, Coordinated Care, has been established to manage this creative approach to health care.



At a later date, active duty soldiers, their family members, and CHAMPUS eligible beneficiaries will be asked to voluntarily empanel themselves into the program. By doing this, patients will be assured of being assigned a specific medical professional that will coordinate their medical care. Today, patients must largely determine their own health care needs and make their own arrangements for that care. Under the Gateway to Care program, Martin Army Community Hospital will assign a "guardian angel" to guide each patient and oversee his or her care, totally and continuously. This guardian angel may be one family physician or a panel of several physicians. Either way there will be a continuing and personal relationship between the primary care physician and the patient, providing the opportunity for them to really get to know each other. Gateway to Care means the efficient integration of Army and non-Army health care resources. Local control is the KEY to success of this program. Here, at Martin Army Community Hospital, Colonel Vernon Spaulding, the Hospital Commander, will provide guidance concerning civilian health care options, and will manage health care resources and funding to maximize benefits for all categories of beneficiaries. As a result, patients and taxpayers will benefit from reduced health care costs. Gateway to Care will mean less frustration for the patients as all aspects of their health care will be coordinated for them, using a variety of available resources. Our program goals at Martin Army Community Hospital will focus on improved patient care, easier access, and more convenient care. As time gets closer for empanelment, beneficiaries will be provided with additional information through the Martin Care column and other media resources.

Red Cross volunteer comes back to Chattahoochee

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

There is an old Indian saying that if you swim in the Chattahoochee, you will always come back to it.

Post Red Cross Volunteer Doris Willis swam in the Chattahoochee as a child when her father was stationed at Fort Benning. She came back as an adult, and Coordinator Linda Scourgie is happy she did.

Willis has been a Red Cross volunteer for five years, but in June of 1990, she became the Health and Education Coordinator for the Post Red Cross.

Trained to be a Red Cross instructor by Russell County's office, she donates about 40 hours per week to see that classes are held and instructors are trained.

Why does she do it? Willis said that when she was 25 she almost died, but she promised God if she could live and raise her children she would do something for Him. When she recovered, she couldn't recall what that one thing was so now she volunteers hoping that maybe that was it.

Her job involves taking care of all of the health education equipment, making sure the mannequins are all in good repair, seeing that orders are filled and keeping the records on all classes held.

Since Health and Education is not a budgeted department, all of her instructors are volunteers too, but Willis knows how to treat them right.

She asks, she doesn't order.

"Also, I encourage them to teach with humor so people don't dread taking required classes."

Willis said that when she started there were about five active instructors, not counting water safety. Now there are about 50, and they're offering new classes.

Next month will start one on "Stress Management," with a "Child Care" course to begin in December, and "Healthy Pregnancy, Healthy Baby" slated for February.

Up to now she has been able to get by with not charging for classes by selling snake bite kits, first aid kits, and masks for Basic Life Support classes, which help rescue personnel prevent against contagious diseases.

However, beginning Oct. 1, there is a charge for taking Red Cross classes on post. This provides for servicing the equipment, and buying disinfectant.

Willis' goal when she first started was to get past the standard first aid classes and community CPR classes needed by the military police and offer more to the civilians. She's excited she's finally getting there.

It has meant strange hours some days, but she said her husband supports her.

"I think he's proud of what I do."

New Shoppette opens on Main Post

By Alyanna B. Summers
Bayonet staff writer

The new 24-hour Main Post mini mall shoppette held its grand–opening ceremony and festivities Oct. 25 at 10 a.m. at the the site of the shopette.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, post commander, his wife, Linda, Col. John D. Fuller, post chief of staff, and Eugene Wheeler, post exchange manager, were among the officials on hand to join in the ribbon-cuting celebration.

"This is another great facility available to serve the soldiers," said White at the event.

The mini mall, which until recently had been closed, was revamped to the tune of $760,000, all of which came from profits generated by the old shoppette and other post exchange facilities, according to Wheeler.

"The around–the–clock operating hours are being set up on a trial basis," said Wheeler. "We have to see if the Fort Benning community will take advantage of the hours."

Parents register for 'Talks About Children'

Fort Benning Schools

It is time to consider registering for the second session of Talks About Young Children (Ages 0-5), the series of lectures that are being sponsored by the Fort Benning Schools for Fort Benning parents, caregivers and educators.

This second session will take place on Nov. 20 from 7 to 8:30 p.m. at Dexter School.

Participation in the session is free, and is open to all Fort Benning parents, caregivers and educators. Participants can choose to attend any or all of the lectures, however, a phone reservation for each session will be required since space in each session will be limited.

This second session of Talks About Young Children (Ages 0-5) will feature Rosalie Streett from Baltimore. Her subject will be "All The World's A Stage: The Stages that Young Children Pass Through and What to Expect." In this presentation, Streett will talk about stages related to young childrens' physical skills, language development, thinking skills and social skills.

Streett is a recognized authority on young children. She is the founding executive director of Friends of the Family, a public/private partnership in Baltimore, which works with young parents, their children 0-3, and teens. Prior to her work at Friends of the Family, she was director of health and parenting education at Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine.

Talks About Young Children (Ages 0-5) is a series that is bringing recognized experts in the field of early childhood to Fort Benning on five different evenings.

The first session of the series took place in September. A large group of Benning parents and educators heard Dr. Barbara Howard, a pediatrician from Duke University. Howard's message was on discipline for young children and the way young children develop emotionally. Following the meeting a large group of parents stayed to continue the discussion with Howard.

Upcoming sessions will cover other issues directly related to the needs of young children and the adults who care for them. Topics, presenters and dates for these sessions are:

Jan. 14 — Preparing Your Child For Kindergarten- Dr. Dell Karr, assistant superintendent for instruction; and Barbara Hutchins, Peggy Gindville, Gwen Grubb, Carolyn Phillips, and Marianne Smith, Kindergarten Teachers-Fort Benning Schools.

Feb. 6— From Cradle to Comics: Instilling The Love of Reading in Your Child- Brenda Weitzberg-early childhood training coordinator, Friends of the Family, Baltimore.

Recycling explodes onto Fort Benning

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

"This administration wants the United States to be the world leader in addressing environmental problems, and I want the Department of Defense to be the federal leader in agency environmental compliance and protection."

Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney made this statement to Department of Defense leaders in October of 1989. Due to this emphasis, in May of this year, Fort Benning's Environmental Management became a division in its own right. Prior to this, it had been under the Engineering Division with some services provided by Natural Resources.

Thus for the first time, Fort Benning is participating in R-Day (Recycling Day), Nov. 9, this year to a greater degree than ever before.

This year aluminum, newsprint, glass and telephone books can be brought to the drop-off site at Building 326.

"We are on the verge of an explosion with regard to recycling," Maj. Joe Orosz, chief of Environmental Management, said.

He foresees a day when the post will be so committed to recycling that curbside pick-up will become a reality.

Recycling began at Fort Benning in the late 1970s when primarily items like office paper and cardboard were turned in with funds from it being turned back into the U.S. Treasury.

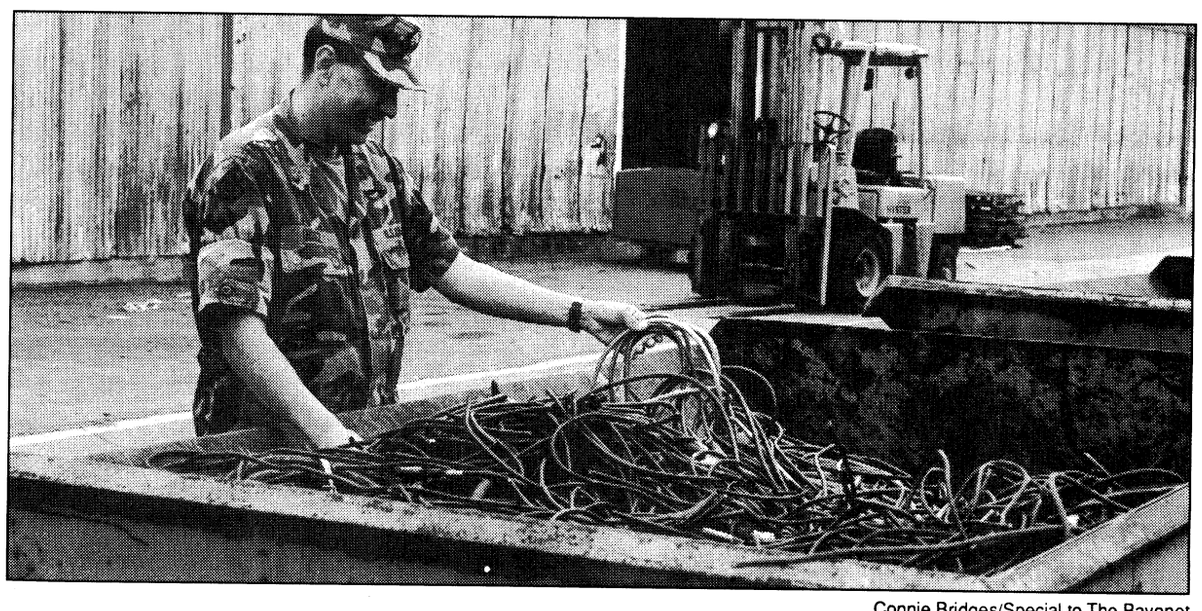
In 1985, a more-inclusive program was started involving industrial recycling with the funds from selling industrial salvage coming back to the post.

By 1988, $1 million was returned to Fort Benning through recycling. Up to $2 million may come back to the post. Over that amount is returned to the U.S. Treasury, as it was in the beginning.

After expenses in running the program, up to 50 percent may go for pollution abatement, energy conservation and safety projects on post. The balance must then be placed in the Morale, Welfare and Recreation Fund. Nevertheless, up to $2 million all remains where is was raised.

Orosz said that in addition to industrial recycling, the Directorate of Community Activities has a separate aluminum can program, and the Family Housing Recycling Committee in the last two years has also started to get involved, venturing into other areas like newspapers.

"There has been so much growth in this area," Orosz noted, "that we are in the process of hiring an environmental specialist to oversee the recycling program in all three areas, as well as identifying other sources of recycling materials. I anticipate having this person on board by December."



The national goal for 1992 is to reduce the amount of municipal solid waste to landfills by 25 percent.

Orosz said that the motivation to intensify recycling is three-fold: to prevent pollution, to reduce the amount of material wasted and to conserve our natural resources.

Fort Benning's landfill is projected to be filled by the year 1995, and it can cost as much as $6 million to build a new one.

Currently, the DCA aluminum can program is a way that everyone can participate.

Cans should be rinsed out, and about 24 cans, the minimum to be processed, make a pound of aluminum. Prices are based on current market conditions. Cans for recycling should be brought to the building adjacent to Building 2288 on Alenko Street.

R-Day offers schools way to earn cash

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Aluminum, newsprint, glass and telephone books can be brought for recycling on post Nov. 9, R-Day (Recycling Day).

The drop-off location for Fort Benning will be the Defense Utilization and Marketing Office at Building 326 on 10th Mountain Division Road.

According to Maj. Joe Orosz, Fort Benning coordinator, there will also be a Pre-R-Day collection of phone books at the following schools and days:

Nov. 6 -- Wilbur, Lloyd and McBride Schools

Nov. 7 -- Building 4, Classroom 7

Nov. 8 -- Wilson, Dexter, White, Patch and Faith Schools.

The three schools in the Columbus/Fort Benning area that bring in the most telephone books will receive a cash award from Southern Bell to buy environmental education materials.

In addition, bins at the drop-off site will be divided by housing areas for cans. The funds raised from the aluminum will then go back to the housing areas.

CFC helps soldiers in times of crisis

Walls

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Last fall Combined Federal Campaign funds helped 197th Infantry Brigade families to cope while their soldiers were deployed.

A good deal of the help was indirect through Youth Services programs or child care for wives to be able to volunteer on post.

Some needy families also received Christmas food baskets around the holiday season.

According to Maj. Chuck Walls, who was the Rear Detachment Commander for the unit at the time, when the family car would break down or other financial emergencies, families were also helped with Army Emergency Relief funds.

With the soldier gone, so were his mechanical skills and having to pay to have vehicles in working order put a drain on many a family.

Walls said after they were notified of a financial problem such as this, the Battalion Rear Detachment commander would interview the wife about the problem, sign off an application for assistance and send her to the Army Emergency Relief office.

AER would then do their own investigation of the situation, check on the previous loan history, etc. In some cases of extreme need, an outright grant was given to families. Most of the time a loan was arranged with a repayment plan that would allow them time to get back on their feet.

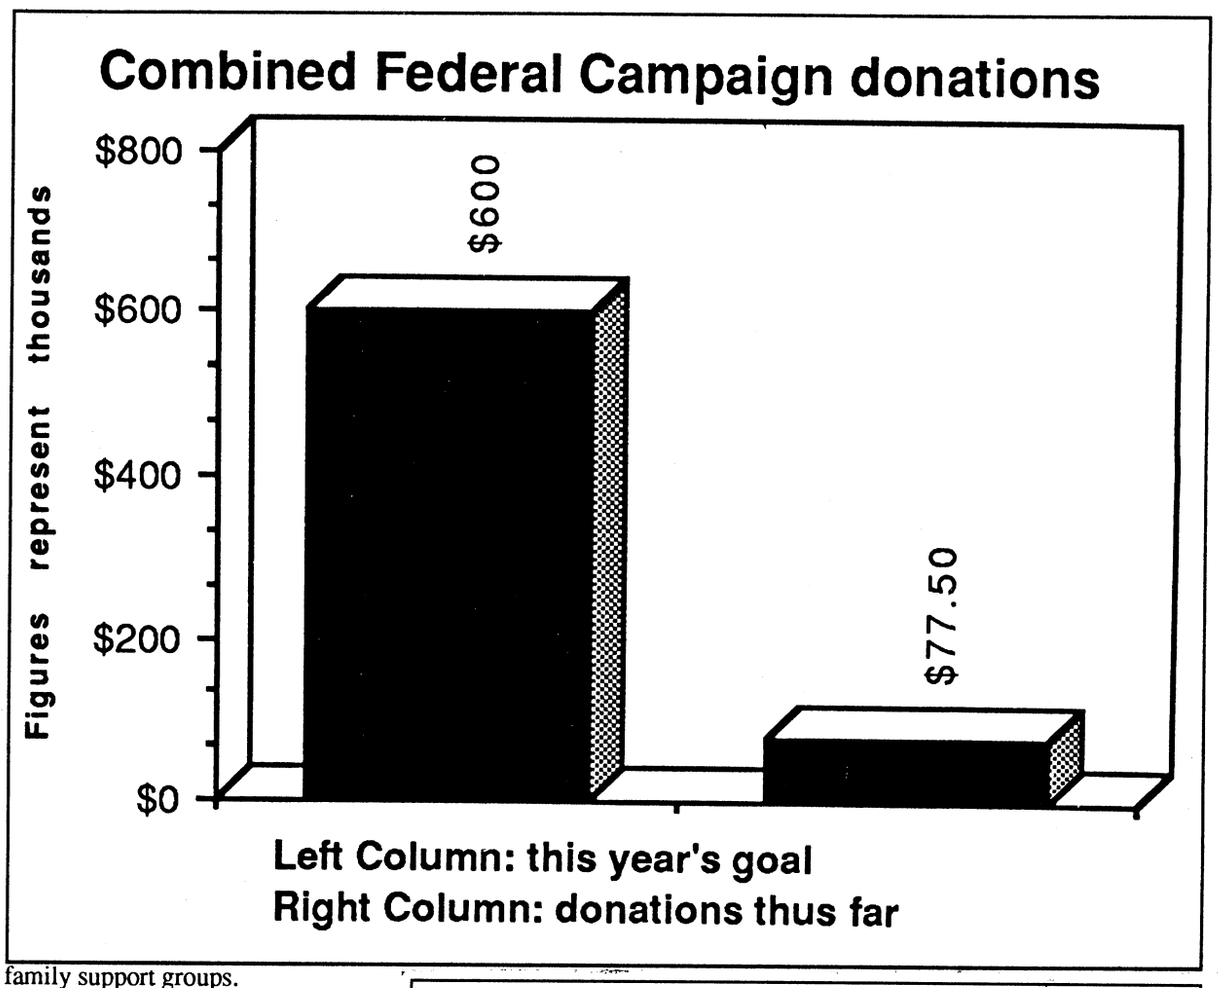
Walls said other areas that proved to be problems were large phone bills from Saudi Arabia and wives over-spending because they'd never before been involved in the family budgeting.

A budget counseling session was required before any loans were given.

"It was our job to help with family problems throughout the deployment," Walls said. "The depression difficulties seemed to ease up after the first two months when families learned how to cope. However, the financial difficulties continued throughout the time the soldiers were gone."

He added that many young women grew up very fast last year when all of the responsibilities were dumped on them.

The Rear Detachment for the 197th was also responsible for taking care of the property the soldiers left behind and some 300 soldiers still on Kelley Hill due to medical or emergency reasons.



There were six Rear Detachment commanders, one for each of the five battalions deployed and one for the three separate companies deployed. In addition, Walls' staff included Capt. Cathy Wilson, S1; Capt. Mike Clemmons, executive officer; 1st Sgt. Willie Thames and the Brigade Commander's secretary, Betty Garrett.

Walls said he also worked closely with Eileen Reid, wife of the Brigade commander, often because of her involvement with the family support groups.

"Support groups and their ability to help solve problems took a big load off the Rear Detachment," he said.

Col. John Fuller, post Chief of Staff, was another he credited with "making things happen" for the families in crisis situations.

"I was fortunate to have a good team and support from the post," Walls said. "Every office from the Judge Advocate Office to Army Community Services went out of their way to help and overcome stumbling blocks. I felt free to call anyone on post. It made an enormous difference and allowed us to concentrate on the 'hot' issues."

Everyday 'saints' deserve a day

By Orlando R. Fuller
248th Forward Support Bn.Chaplain

There are two kinds of saints - the saint with a capital "S" and the saint with a small "s." The former refers to those holy men and women canonized by the church because of their heroic virtues. The latter refers to anyone whose life story is ordinary or unknown, and yet merited eternal life for leading a holy life, or at least, for struggling to live a moral life.

Every canonized saint has a designated feast day (memorial), usually held on the day of his/her day of death, considered the time when he/she was born into eternal life. For example, popular Saints in the month of November are St. Martin of Tours (Nov. 11, whose life story has something to do with the word "chaplain"), St. Albert the Great (Nov. 15), and St. Cecilia (Nov. 22).

How about those saints with a small "s"? Don't they deserve to be commemorated as well, at least as a group?

This is the rationale for All Saints' Day. The church set aside one day in the liturgical year to honor them, to rejoice with them on the first day of November. It originated in a fourth century Eastern feast of all martyrs attested to by St. Ephrem. Pope Gregory VI later established their commemoration in 884 for all the Roman Church.

One may wonder about the relevance of such a commemoration? I think that the church is teaching us that we do not have to be extraordinary to be great; we can be great by being ordinary.

The church is also reminding us of the most important business in this life: to save our souls. We often lose sight of this in this messy life. This commemoration gives hope to us ordinary people that one day this feast may be ours, too!

MCCW offers activities for community

By Gabrielle Sonnenberg
USAIC Chaplains Office

The Fort Benning chapter of the Military Council of Catholic Women invite women to actively participate in the process of the Catholic Church and to share through eucharistic celebration, spiritual development programs and community activities.

The MCCW offers various programs, like Bible studies, rosary crafting, visiting the hospital and the monthly fellowship.

The women meet for a Bible study from 9:30 to 11 a.m. every Wednesday at the Infantry Center Chapel Annex. The theme of the Bible study is "Share the Word" and is taught by Father Joe Piskura, Main Post Catholic priest.

During the study, the group discusses not only biblical principles, but also how to implement those principles into daily living.

After the Bible study, from 11 a.m. to noon, the women craft rosaries in various colors.

"The green and black colored rosaries are for the soldiers, since Army regulation requests camouflaged colors," Mildred Lopez explains while displaying rosaries.

The main purpose for the crafting of rosaries is to fulfill a need for rosaries at Fort Benning. At 12:30 p.m., the group visits the Martin Army Hospital to comfort the sick and lonely. Additionally, the women usually meet on every first Friday of the month at 10 a.m. at the Main Post Catholic Chapel for their monthly fellowship.

Today the group will invite women from the Holy Family and Our Lady of Lourdes church for a potluck luncheon, door prizes and a special guest speaker.

On Nov. 24, the women will gather to make advent wreaths.

Other events and speakers planned for women of the MCCW are designed to offer something for everyone.

For more information, call Joni Scott at 689-2725.

Community gives invitation to all

By Kerry M. Steedly
USAIC Chaplains Office

COMMENTARY

The word community often implies a geographical place and a group of people. It also has for me a sense of belonging and identity. Most of us come from small rural communities; others, from large urban area. Many of us grew up in poor or middle-class communities. A few of us are privileged to go home to a rich community.

Today, some of us live in communities which are predominantly one race. We are all members of a military community, however, some of us own homes or rent apartments in the civilian community as well.

What does the word community mean to you? Where is the place that has a special sense of belonging for you? Who are the people with whom you share an identity?

I am a clinical pastoral education student here at Fort Benning. The word community has taken on a new meaning for me. My supervisor, Herb Marbury, is much more than that. He has become my pastor, my mentor and my friend. My fellow students, Nils Juarez-Palma, Dan Moll, Gary Norris and Gary Sexton have become brothers to me.

In my present environment, community means people who accept me, love me and support me. These five chaplains form an extended family for me since I am here as a geographical bachelor. They provide a caring community in which I live, work and play. In my relationship with them, I understand who I am, where I came from and where I am going.

Recently, a seminary professor asked a group of chaplains to describe their image of God. All of the responses were related to love.

We celebrate World Community Day today. I would like to remind the chapel community here at Fort Benning that we are a people of faith and hope; but first and foremost, we are a community of love. We are called by the God who is love, to love one another.

Do you have a place or group of people who accept, love, and support you outside your immediate family? We invite you to become a member of the chapel community at Fort Benning. You are welcome! You are wanted! Most of all, you

3rd Bde. soldiers get EIB, EFMB

By Willie Hay
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

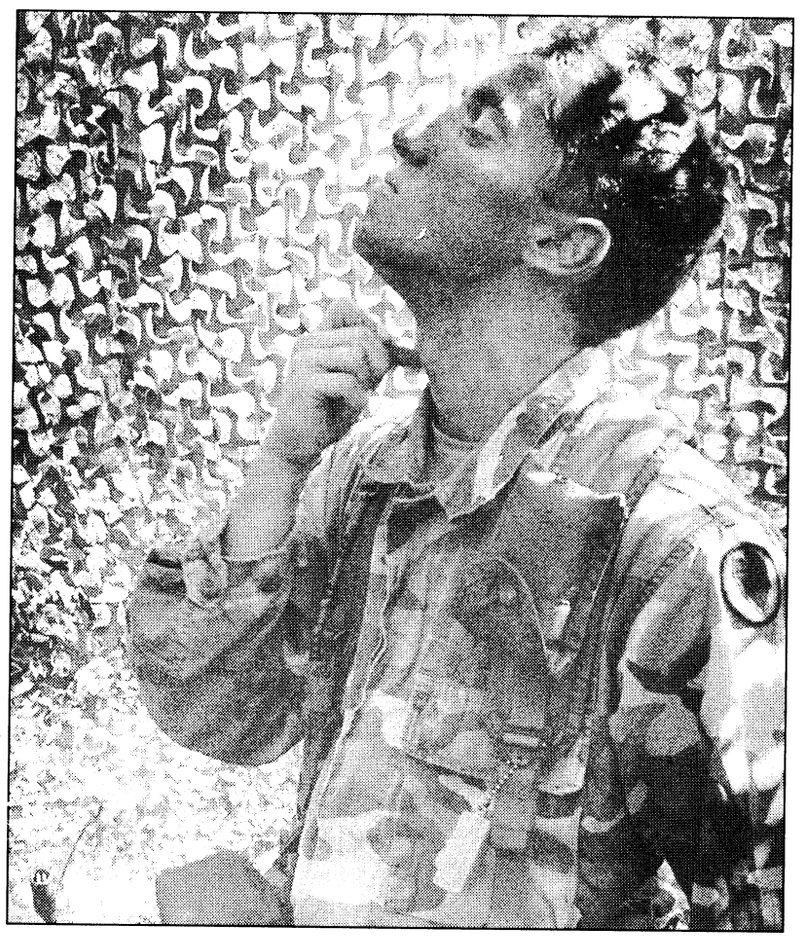
Only the best of the best earn the Expert Infantry Badge and the Expert Field Medical Badge.

In one of his last appearances before the soldiers of 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division as their commander, Col. Theodore W. Reid awarded the EIB to 37 infantrymen and the EFMB to seven medics Oct. 25 on Treadwell Field outside the brigade headquarters.

"When we crossed the border on Feb. 24 and went into Iraq, all the infantrymen in the audience automatically received the CIB (Combat Infantry Badge), and those medics assigned to the combat maneuver units automatically received the CMB (Combat Medical Badge)," Reid said. "The tougher test was when they came back here, and we put them through the EIB and EFMB testing."

Reid thanked all the non-commissioned officers who put together "the most professional EIB test" he had seen in 25 years of military service. "They set exacting standards, and they didn't waiver at all," Reid said.

The 3rd Brigade conducted EIB train-up and testing for Fort Benning's infantrymen in September and October. The 34th Medical Battalion administered the EFMB test to medical specialists from 3rd Brigade and other units on main post.



Although infantrymen of all ranks are eligible to earn the EIB, Reid reserved special praise for the specialists and privates, many of whom pinned on the badge after successfully passing the test on their first try.

"That's a heck of an accomplishment, and you guys need to stick your chest out about another five inches," Reid said.

"The EFMB is probably a more difficult test than the EIB," he added. "I take off my hat to you seven soldiers who earned the EFMB because you went through heck to get it."

In addition to the individual awards, Reid presented the Sledgehammer Brigade's Best Mortar Platoon trophy to the 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry's Mortar Platoon.

Reid noted that competition for the rotating trophy was fierce between the mortar platoons of the 1st and 2nd Battalions, 18th Infantry, and 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor.

Willie Hay

Spc. Antonio Yiris applies camouflage to his exposed skin during Expert Infantryman Badge testing. Yiris, assigned to Company D, 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regment, succeeded in earning the badge.

"In my opinion, the three mortar platoons in this brigade are the best in the 24th Infantry Division," he declared. "Two-18, you're the best of the best right now, but I think you've got a heck of a challenge because 2-69 and 1-18 want to take that away from you."

Reid announced that he had signed authorizations for EIB streamers for the guidons of the line companies of 1-18 and 2-18 and for the mortar platoon of 2-69 Armor.

"Now you have a challenge because you can only maintain that streamer for one year," he added. "Next year when the test comes up, you're going to have to do better to maintain that streamer because you'll have fewer CIB winners. It's a challenge, but I think you can do it."

Reid urged the soldiers to continue to excel.

"You have a reputation in the 24th Infantry Division of being the best, and I'm very proud of the entire brigade," he said. "You're truly expert."

Recipients of the EIB from 1st Bn., 18th Inf. were: 2nd Lt. Kimo Gallahue, Cpl. Joseph Perez, Spc. William Carol and Pfc. Christopher Pearce of Co. A; Sgt. Mariano Pidloan, Spc. Garrett Gadd and Spc. Female NCO shining example of one of Army's best

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

"Squared away" -- it's a term used in the military to mean having everything in order.

That's the way Master Sgt. Jacquelyn Braswell strikes a person from the first meeting.

Braswell is the senior female non-commissioned officer on post, and with 16 years in the Army is considered a "fast-tracker."

An "Army brat" born in Tacoma, Wash., she is currently a logistician for the Infantry Training Center.

Her career in the Army has been "challenging," she says, but different from what she originally intended.

In 1975, Braswell was majoring in nursing at Columbus College when she ran out of funds and joined the Army to get the money to finish college.

At the time, there were no open slots in the medical field so she selected logistics for her military operation specialty.

After basic training at Fort McClellan, Al., Braswell's first duty station was Fort Bragg, N.C., where she served as a supply clerk for 2nd Battalion Supply and Services from 1975-78. She discovered there wasn't any opportunity for her to continue her education there.

From Fort Bragg, she moved to Germany from 1978-80, where she became the non-commissioned officer in charge of the Direct Exchange Facility that repaired and issued parts for tanks and automotives for the 3rd Armored Division. Here she was able to take a few college courses.

In 1980, Braswell came to Fort Benning and went to work as the senior supply supervisor at the Material Office for the 36th Engineer Group.

Then it was Korea time. From 1984 to 1985, she served as the NCOIC at the Class 7 Facility with the 2nd Infantry Division at Camp Casey, Korea.

After ten years in the Army, Braswell said she decided to make the military her career.

From Korea, she was assigned to Fort Lee, Va., for three years to take an assignment as a subject matter expert for the 76P Series military occupational specialty.

In late 1988, Braswell moved once again, this time to Camp Zama, Japan, to serve as the equal opportunity adviser.

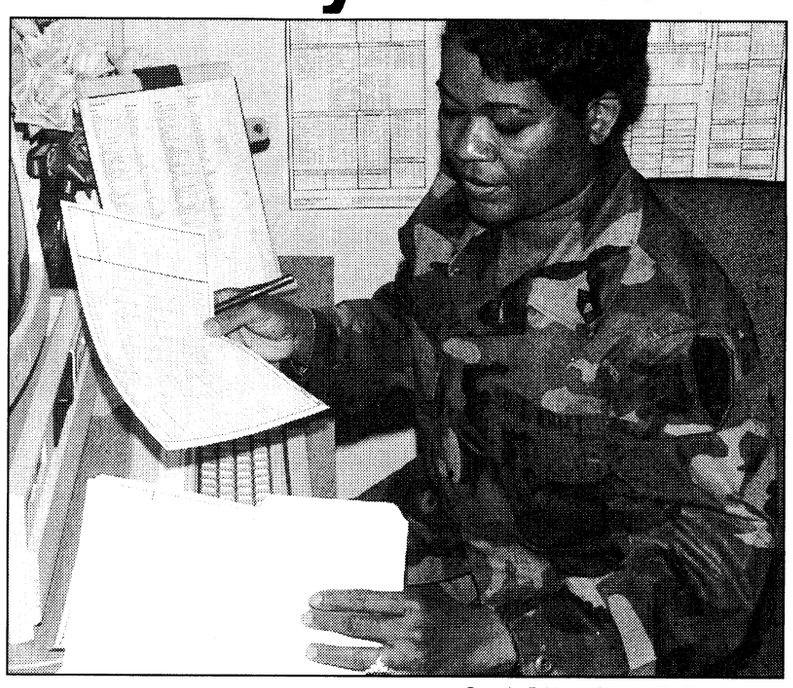
Finally, in June of 1990, she returned to Fort Benning, and in May, 1991, assumed her present job, where she is responsible for the requisitioning and issuing of all supplies for ITC.

She has demonstrated her competency in a male-dominated profession, yet Braswell is meticulously feminine in her appearance, even in the basic dress uniform -- as much as the Army will allow.

With regard to women in combat, she believes we are socialized to protect women. However, if women volunteer knowing the possibilities, they should be allowed to serve in combat military operational specialties.

"I think over time it will come," Braswell said. "I have seen females perform well on the range and in the field. Some handle the stress better than men."

She has kept in touch with others who joined the Army at the same time she did. She said no one seems to have been transferred as much as she, but about 75 percent of the females she started with are still in the military. However, they haven't made rank as quickly as she.



Braswell believes she has promoted below the zone every time for a number of reasons.

"In Germany, I actively started looking for jobs that would help with promotions."

Not office positions, all of her assignments until 1985 were with fighting units, as opposed to training units meaning a lot of field time -- something most females don't enjoy, she noted.

However, she believes that the leadership positions of platoon sergeant and squad leader with combat service support units are the ones where ability can be best demonstrated.

Of course, Braswell also has had Skill Qualification Test scores in her MOS of 96-99 percent. She has attended her share of schools too: Basic Non-commisioned Offers Course, Advanced Non-commissioned Officer Course, Divisional Logistic Schools, Repair Parts Supply Course, division level supply computer courses, Defense Equal Opportunity Management Course, Army Logistics Management Center Logistics Course, 7th Army NCO Academy and the Instructor Training Course.

"Also, I have had good assignments and people willing to work with me," she said.

Her lifestyle has required being away from her children a great deal though. She said the most difficult thing was leaving her kids with her mother when she took the hardship tour to Korea.

A divorcee, Braswell has three children, Brittany, 6; Karlynn, 10; and Tarron, 22.

Early in her career she married an Army non-commissioned officer. They moved from post to post with assignments together until their separation just before the Fort Lee move.

Today he is still a sergeant first class. She passed him up.

Braswell plans to retire shortly after putting in her 20 years. Why? She still has her sights on that nursing degree.

Infantry School instructor receives Bronze Star

"It had been so long, I never expected it to catch up with me."

Sgt. Michael D. Polk was warded a Bronze Star Oct. 25 for is actions capturing Iraqi isoners during the 100-hour ound war of Desert Storm.

At the time he was a company ire support sergeant for Company , 4th Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Armored Division in Germany.

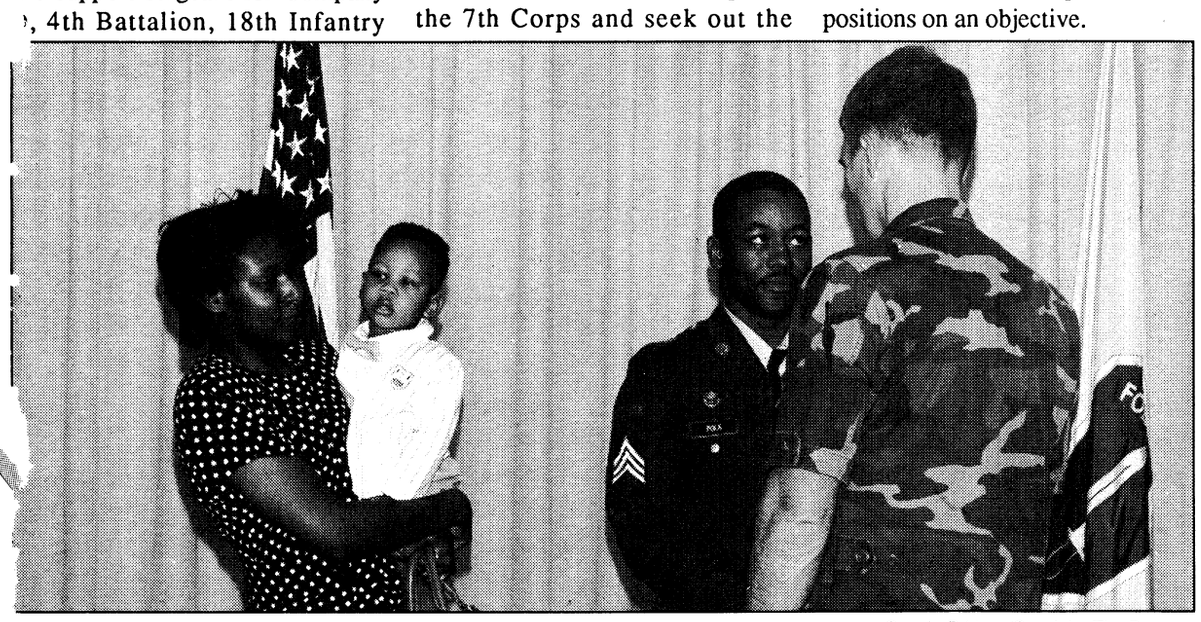
He left Saudi Arabia May 17, and departed Germany on emergency leave on July 24. So although he had written orders for his award, he never expected to see a ceremony.

Sgt. Polk said that his unit's mission during Desert Storm was to move north into Central Iraq with the 7th Corps and seek out the Tawacana Division of the Republican Guard.

They made contact with the enemy the night that the ground war broke out. They maintained contact for about 16 hours about 70 miles west of Basra. The next day his brigade went in reserve for 24 hours.

The following morning, they moved out and set up defensive positions on an objective.

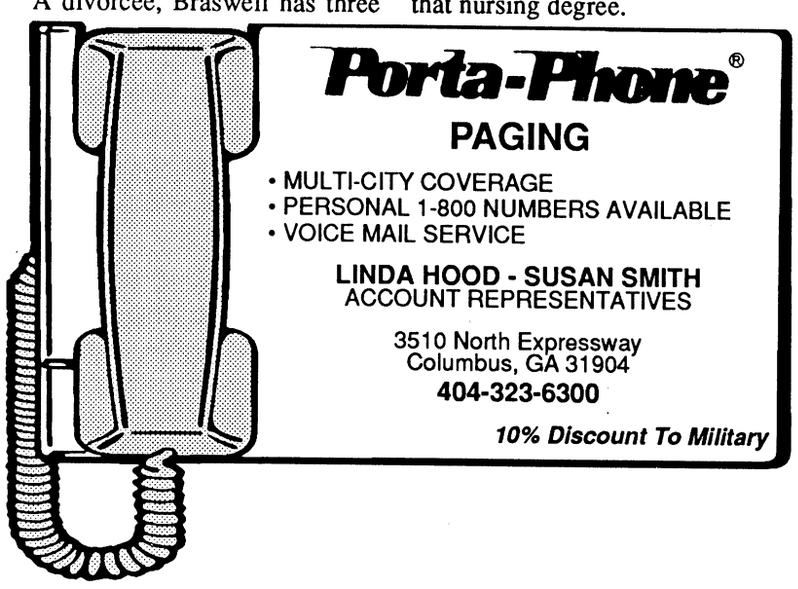
At 6 a.m., word went out that a ceasefire was to go in effect at 8 a.m., so they stopped in place to receive new orders.



Those orders were that each task force was to have a 50-square-mile sector to clear.

A forward observer, Polk was part of a group assigned to clear some Iraqi bunkers.

While his lieutenant covered him, he and two of his men captured an enemy officer and other soldiers in one of the bunkers.



Currently, Polk is an instructor at the Infantry School.

He and his wife, Ruby, are the parents of one son, Michael, 18 months.

Dismounted Training

'Bears' hone skills as infantrymen on the battlefield

By Tom Wilkinson
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division PAO

"White Six, this is Bear Six, Sitrep, over."

To be effective, a unit must be able to shoot, move and communicate.

Company A, "Bears," of the 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry, recently conducted dismounted training to hone their skills as infantrymen.

"We're conducting platoon situational training exercises with live ammunition," said Capt. Scott Denney, the company commander. "There are a number of tasks that the platoon train on, which they rehearse, then train and are evaluated in an after action review."

"The emphasis for this training is on the platoon level," he said. "Our last training exercise concentrated on squad level training, and our next exercise will concentrate on company level."

The 2nd Platoon crosses the line of departure and begins moving tactically through the woodline. BANG! An enemy observation post is spotted and the platoon goes into immediate action. A team of soldiers maneuvers on the OP, as the commander requests a situation report from his platoon leader.

"Engaging a two-man OP, over," comes the reply from 2nd Lt. Dennis Rasdale.

The commander responds by telling the platoon leader to continue the mission to the objective.

The platoon moves onward, only to come under enemy fire.

M249 squad automatic weapons and M16A2 rifles from the support element spew a deadly hail of bullets on the enemy position as the maneuver element begins its assault to the objective.

The objective is secured in the assault and the platoon begins its consolidation.

"Once they're on the objective, they secure it by using the clock method," said Denney. "Each squad will pick up positions using direction like on the face of a clock, 10 to 2, 2 to 6, etc."

"This was my first live-fire exercise with the platoon," said Rasdale. "I think we did really good."

With the addition of the Bradley Fighting Vehicle, the unit faces many new challenges. The battalion will begin Bradley transition in mid-January through early April.

"As we come up on the Bradley transition, we're focusing more on dismounted infantry skills," said Lt. Col. Eric T. Olson, the battalion commander. "We're going to have to know the same skills even with the Bradley."

As the platoons continue to hone their skills, the battalion readies itself to become an even better combat ready team —through the Bradley and trained soldiers who know how to shoot, move and communicate.

Separated members get insurance

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

Separated service members and certain dependents who lose their eligibility for military health care can now buy U.S. VIP health insurance for up to a year.

The Uniformed Services Voluntary Insurance Program, U.S. VIP for short, gives former military health care beneficiaries time to shop for permanent private insurance or to find a job offering health benefits. The optional insurance previously was good for only 90 days, but policies now can be renewed quarterly three times.

Negotiated by DoD and the Mutual of Omaha Insurance Co., policy holders pay the entire U.S. VIP premiums. Policies cover separated military members and their dependents, which include pre-adoptive children, wards, dependent grandchildren, children reaching age 21 (or 23 if students). Policies also cover babies born to beneficiaries while the policy is in force. Unremarried former spouses also may buy coverage.

The change is especially important to two groups of persons who are eligible for extended military health benefits, said Navy Cmdr. Carol West, DoD's U.S. VIP manager. These persons are certain unremarried former spouses, and involuntarily separated members and their dependents who are eligible for transition-assistance benefits.

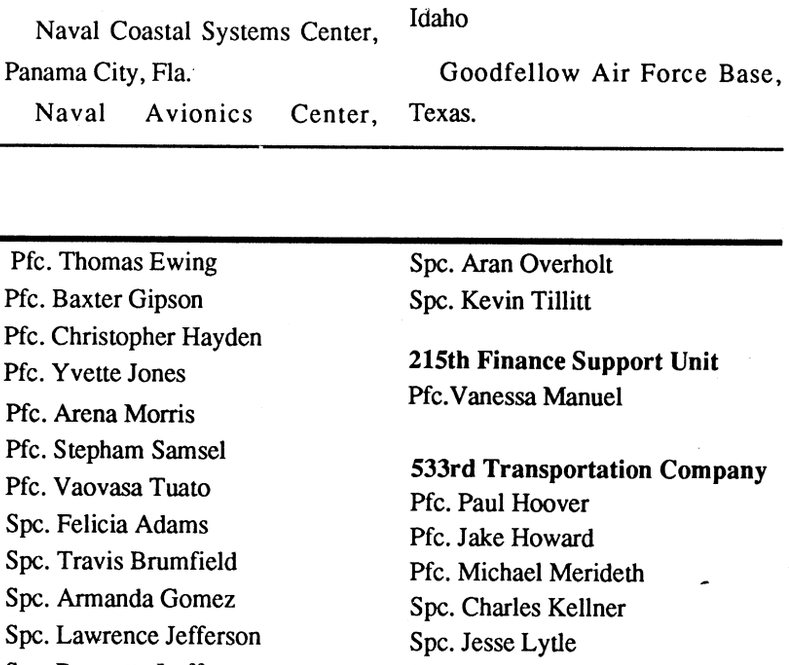
If these people purchase one year of DoD negotiated conversion health insurance when they leave the military health care system, they will be eligible for one year of DoD provided coverage for preexisting medical conditions, West explained. U.S. VIP does not cover these conditions, which include pregnancy and resulting normal childbirths.

Service members generally must buy their policies within 30 days after they separate or lose their eligibility for extended military medical benefits. Certain others who can buy coverage have up to 90 days of a "qualifying event" such as a divorce or birthday.

Persons entitled to up to 30 days of extended DoD health care benefits include reservists ordered to active duty to serve in Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm, service members held on duty by the stop-loss program and members voluntarily retained on active duty.

Involuntarily separated members with less than six years of service receive 60 days of coverage; those with six or more years of service receive 120 days of extended DoD health care benefits.

Unremarried former spouses receive one year of extended military medical benefits if they belong to the "20-20-16" category, which means they were married at least 20 years to a military member who served at least 20 years, and 15 to 20 years of marriage overlapped with the member's service.



West emphasized that persons with extended military health benefits should ensure their U.S. VIP application shows the number of months (one, two, four or 12) they're supposed to get care and the date their DoD coverage ends.

That way, they won't have to pay for coverage they don't need," she said.

Full details, premium schedules and brochures are available in military personnel offices, by calling Mutual of Omaha at 1-402342-7600 or by writing to:

Museum run starts slow, finishes fast

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

The 10th annual National Infantry Museum 5-Mile Run held Saturday morning at Fort Benning, was not up to the standards of past runs, according to Don Plotner.

Less than 1,000 runners participated in what turned out to be a fairly fast race, according to Lloyd McDonald, last year's winner and second runner-up to Charles Dent.

"I don't cut any slack, but he got in front and stayed there. I just couldn't catch him, " he said.

Dent, fresh off his third-place finish in the Army 10-Miler in Washington, D.C., ran the course in 24 minutes and 39 seconds, just 13 seconds off the course record set by Theodis Abston in 1981.

McDonald finished with a time of 25:42 and Michael Raymond took the third spot with a time of 26:40 to round out the top three men's places.

Elizabeth Maddux took the top spot for the women with a time of 32 minutes and 8 seconds. Kimberly Guthrie captured second place with a time of 33:37 and Cathrine Dugdale placed third with a time of 36:29.

Best Fort Benning team:

1. 3rd Ranger Battalion combined time of 2:20:30.

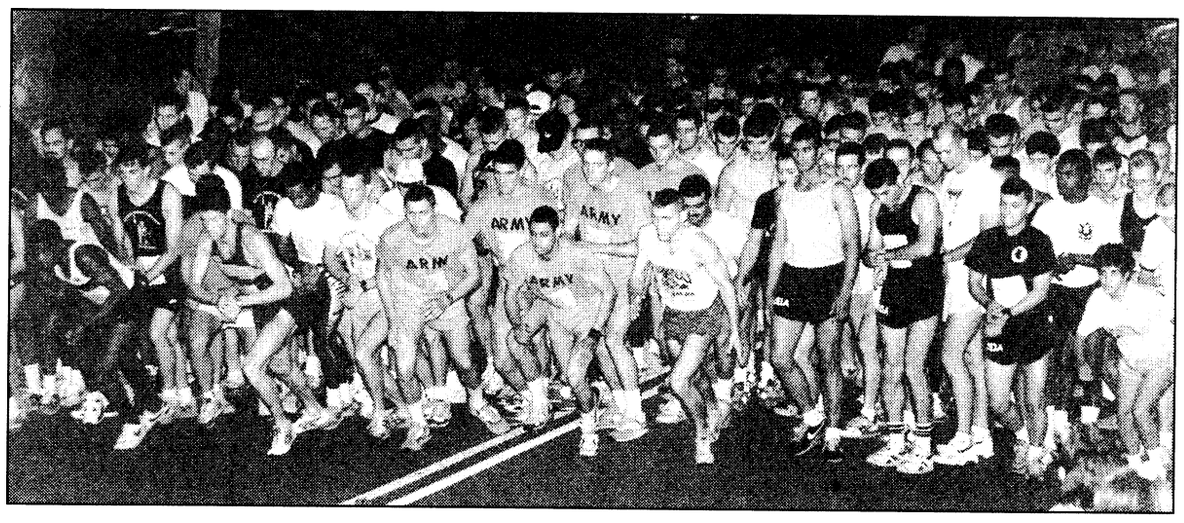
2. Dental Activity Team A combined time of 2:28:08.

3. Bravo Backbone 1 combined time of 2:37:38.

Best Army Training Center team:

1. Hard Rock combined time of 2:30:59.

2. Blue Knight combined time of 2:32:41.



3. Headquarters and Service Company combined time of 2:54:42.

Barracuda swim team helps keep youth active, confident

Alyanna B. Summers

Marie Lyttel, a member of the Fort Benning Barracuda Swim Team, waits for the gun during a Columbus meet on Sunday.

By Alyanna B. Summers
Bayonet staff writer

One of Fort Benning's best-kept secret has kids from 6 to 17 years old swimming, splashing and staying out of trouble.

The Fort Benning Barracuda Swim Team is a fairly new organization designed for children who are interested in swimming, competitively, or just want to learn a new sport and meet new friends, said Margie Ferriter, the team's publicity chairperson.

"Three of my children are involved with the Barracudas," said Ferriter. "They have a lot of fun and they train hard four days a week," said Ferriter.

Theresa Morse-Hill, the team's coach and a former competitor in the sport as well, is optimistic about the team's chances to go all the way.

"The Barracudas have been very fortunate," said Morse-Hill. "The club started in February with eight members. We've now increased our membership to 38 and several of the kids are competing and making "A" times, which are very good. We've been very lucky," she added.

2nd Lt. Joel Roberts, Jr. , a student going through the Infantry Officers' Basic Course, has been volunteering his spare time between classes to assist in coaching the team.

"I swam competitively in college," said Roberts. "I like to coach and I like kids. Even though I've only been involved for a couple of weeks, this is a lot of fun for me," said Roberts.

Col. Mayo "Biff" Hadden III is president of the Columbus Aquatics Club, which sponsors several meets and invitationals in Columbus and surrounding areas. Hadden has nothing but praise for the program.

"This is basically an accident-free sport for kids that will stay with them for the rest of their lives," said Hadden. "I'm a firm believer in anything that will keep kids out of trouble.

There are 65 area children currently involved in the CAC, 38 of them belonging to the Fort Benning Barracudas, said Hadden.

"I believe in youth sports," said Hadden. "The kids compete individually, while at the same time, learn the value of a team effort and esprit de corps. It's a good program," said Hadden.

Along with swimming two hours a day, the training also consists of nutrition and some weight training, as well as muscle conditioning.

And how do Barracuda members feel about the program?

"It's a lot of fun, and a lot of hard work," said Danny Ferriter, a 9-year-old 3rd-grader at Dexter School. "I started swimming when I fell into my grandpa's pool and I didn't know how to swim. Now I do," Danny said. "I've been with the Barracudas since July, and we train hard but also have fun. If there are any kids who like to swim, work hard and have fun, they should join us," said Danny.

Danny plays soccer and is a Cub Scout member with Den 1 on Fort Benning as well as swimming with the Barracudas.

"This program really gives children self-confidence and that confidence spills over into other areas of their lives," said Ferriter.

Fort Benning will host an invitational meet Nov. 23. For more information on the team, contact Margie Ferriter at 687-8928 or Theresa Morse-Hill at 682-7611.

Charlie 'rocks' the Eagles

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

When the Company E, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, "Eagles," took on "Charlie Rock," of Company C, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, Oct. 25 at Doughboy Stadium, a 13-0 defeat was not on their minds.

Charlie Rock, on their first set of downs never got past first down. Two offensive penalties moved Charlie Rock backward instead of forward. Then on the next play Charlie Rock quarterback Maurice Talley launched a long pass downfield in the direction of wide receiver Henry Flint, but safety Matthew Lochko stepped in and picked off the pass, ending Charlie Rock's first drive before it ever got started.

The Eagle offense fared even worse. After two pass plays that were broken up by defensive back Charles Montgomery, Eagle quarterback Gregory Brenst tried to hit wide receiver Lochko in the flat but Montgomery took the ball away from Lochko and raced for the end zone putting Charlie Rock up 6-0.

The Eagle and Charlie Rock offenses traded possessions for the rest of the half with no more scoring. Charlie Rock went to the sideline at the half leading 6-0.

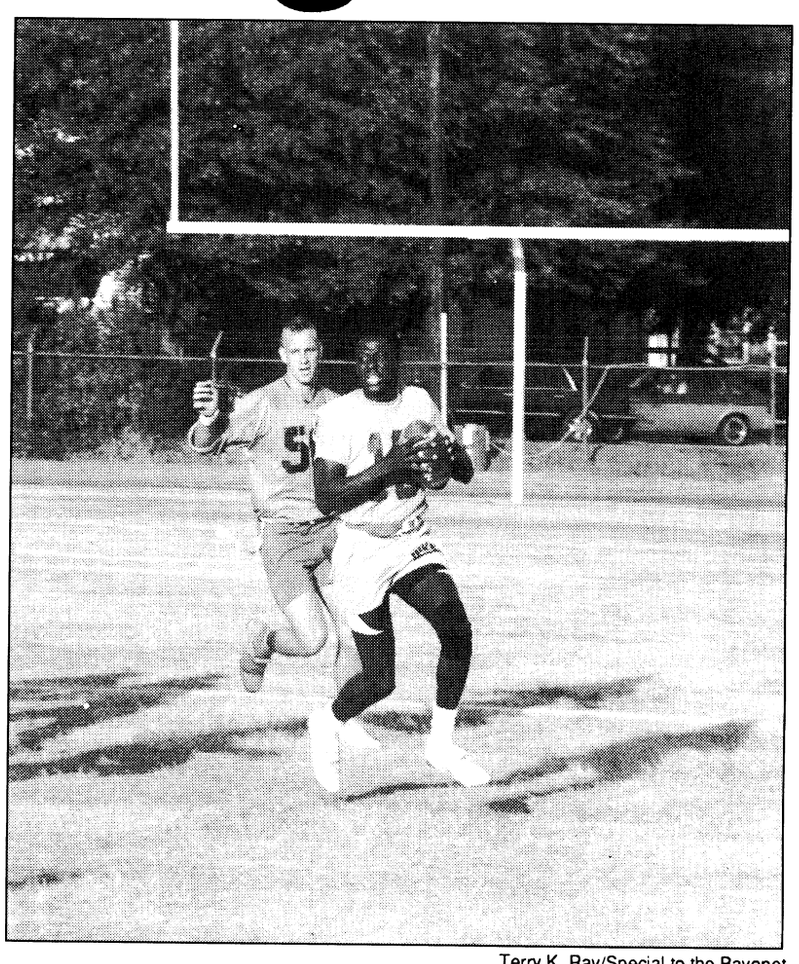
The Eagle offense started the second half with Rodney Pryor at quarterback. On their first play of the half, Pryor pitched to Lochko on an option play, but safety Reggie Brown tackled Lochko for a loss.

On second down, Pryor from the wishbone offense tried to go left but was stopped for no gain.

On third down, Pryor's attempt at a pitch to his running back was snatched away by Montgomery for his second interception of the game.

Charlie Rock quarterback Talley moved the offense deep into Eagle territory, with a pitch to running back Rodney Brown. Then Talley, on a sweep right that was well defended, broke back to the left to set up third and short.

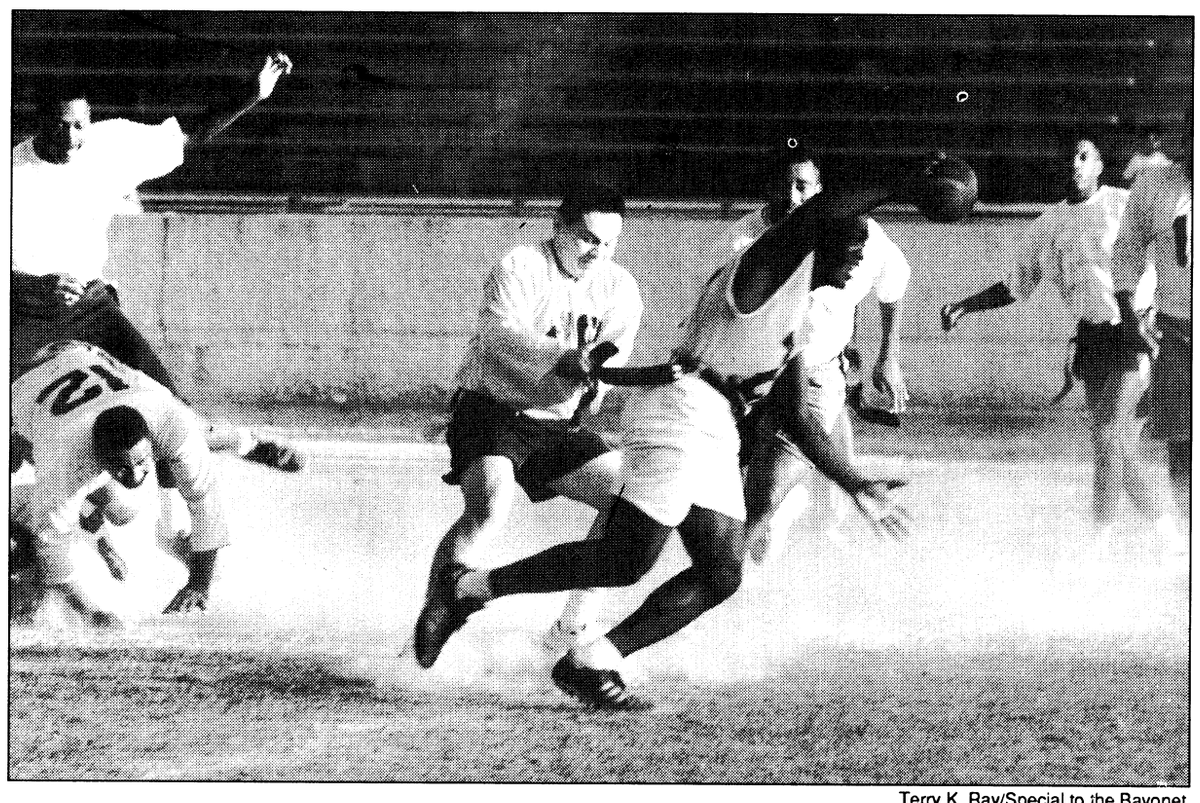
A long pass downfield was short of the mark and left Charlie Rock with a fourth down and short yardage situation. Talley kept up the middle for the first down giving Charlie Rock four more downs.



Talley hit Flint on a slant play for good yardage, but then a bad snap moved Talley and company back.

On third down, Talley's end zone pass was knocked down by safety Lochko, but a defensive penalty moved Charlie Rock closer to the goal line.

On their next play, Talley hit tight end John Solomon over the middle for Charlie Rock's second score of the evening.



The extra point was good on a pitch to Lennon Sowell, and Charlie Rock's final point pushed the lead to 13-0.

The Eagle offense seemed to be out of sorts the rest of the half and couldn't move the ball against the Charlie Rock defense until late in the game. But the defense held and Charlie Rock walked away with a 13-0 win over the Eagles.

Cusseta Deer Processing offers free food

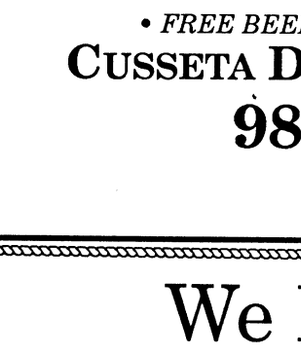
"We guarantee happiness," says Ken Presser, joint owner of Cusseta Deer Processing. What more could hunters want? Service is their number one concern when dealing with customers. They will even offer you and your buddies free beer and deer stew when you come in.

Cusseta Deer Processing is conveniently located right in the middle of the Chattahoochee County hunting grounds (where most Fort Benning hunters hunt). They have a state-inspected meat cutting room and all meat is cut by professionals with 10 years of experience.

Quality service is important at Cusseta Deer Processing so there is no mass processing, each deer is done individually. Your own deer is prepared as you want it and then double-wrapped. It is kept in a freezer for three days before cutting. Choice cuts at Cusseta are the Special Cut (which includes: roast, cube steaks, deer burger, soup bones, and ribs), and the Standard Cut (includes: T-bone steak, sirloin, roast, stew meat, deer burger, and soup bones).

Cusseta Deer Processing is an affiliate of D and K Meats which features every kind of meat available in the area. All meat is state-inspected and the prices are better than a regular grocery store. D and K offers many "bulk specials" with several kinds of meat for one low price.



So if you feel like a beer and some stew after a long day of hunting stop by Cusseta Deer Processing on your way home. It is open seven days a week and is located off Highway 280 (Victory Drive). Make a left turn at the blinking caution lights and go around the block.

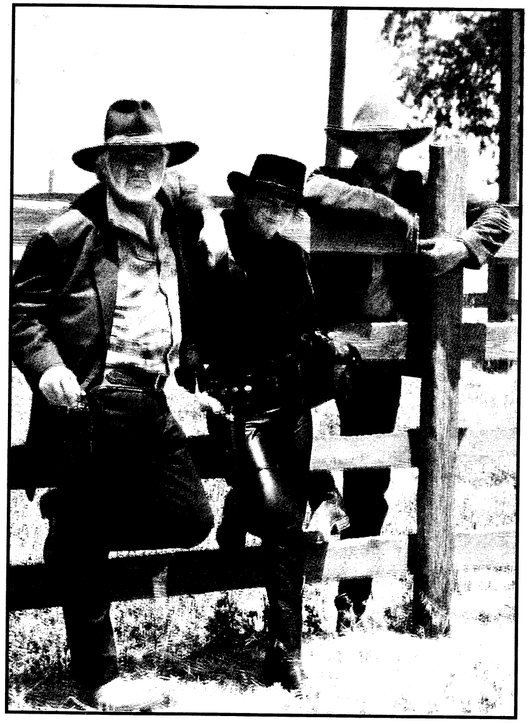
McEntire joins 'Gambler' cast

By JAY BOBBIN
Tribune Media Services

If Kenny Rogers didn't foresee a TV-movie when he recorded his hit tune "The Gambler," he certainly couldn't have predicted FOUR such projects.



The popular singer's three previous acting ventures as cardsharp Brady Hawkes were made for CBS, but he switches networks with the newest chapter, as NBC televises the miniseries "The Gambler Returns: The Luck of the Draw" Sunday and Monday. In the latest outing, fellow country-music artist and Grammy-winner Reba McEntire co-stars as Burgundy Jones, an ex-madam who saves Hawkes from being executed in Mexico, then enlists his special skills for a San Francisco card tournament boasting the biggest jackpot in history. Bruce Boxleitner was unavailable to reprise his part from the other "Gambler" films as Hawkes' sidekick Billy Montana, but he has a surrogate in Rick ("Top Gun," "Sons and Daughters") Rossovich, who portrays another longtime ally of the title character. En route, the partners run into a number of famous Old West figures ... and they should be of special note to television buffs, since most are played by the same actors who had the roles originally in various series.

SPOTLIGHT

Among them: Gene Barry as Bat Masterson, David Carradine as Caine ("Kung Fu"), Chuck Connors and Johnny Crawford as Lucas and Mark McCain ("The Rifleman"), Brian Keith as Dave Blassingame ("The Westerner"), Jack Kelly as Bart Maverick, Hugh O'Brian as Wyatt Earp and Clint Walker as Cheyenne Bodie. Additionally, Linda Evans does an encore from the second "Gambler" tale (1983) as sharpshooter-turned-sheriff Kate Muldoon, while former "Virginian" regulars James Drury and Doug McClure appear as helpful horse wranglers. Moreover, the obviously large cast also includes Mickey Rooney, Claude Akins, Jere ("Dear John") Burns, Patrick "The Avengers") Macnee and Park ("Empty Nest") Overall.

A notable behind-the-scenes returnee is director Dick Lowry, who also guided all of the preceding "Gambler" stories.

"We were trying to pay homage to these characters," the amiable Rogers explains of the inclusion of so many TV-western actors in this week's saga. "The concept is that Brady Hawkes is fictional, where a lot of the others are based on real people, like Bat Masterson and Wyatt Earp. In context, it's not as absurd as it might appear, because these 'angels' keep dropping out of the sky to solve our problems for us."

Springer offers chance at getting head start in playwriting contest

The State Theater of Georgia, Columbus' Springer Opera House, has announced details of the second annual DeepSouth New Play Contest, which seeks a script for children this year.

"At the Springer, we are committed to nurturing the creative spirit for both artists and audiences, and this year's decision to promote a new children's playscript accomplishes both," said Managing Artistic Director Paul R. Pierce. "Combining the talents of our venerable theater with the work of an up-and-coming author develops both the author and young arts-lovers in our region. We all win."

The DeepSouth New Play Contest was established in 1990 to foster innovative dramatic writing in the Southeast and to feature new voices in Southern Theater. All writers living in Georgia, Alabama, South Carolina, Florida and Mississippi are eligible to enter.

This year, The DeepSouth New Play Contest seeks an original script for youth to be produced as the final show of the Springer Children's Theater 1991-92 series, May 15-24.

The first-place playwright will receive a $500 cash award plus full production of the play by the Spring Children's Theater.

The second-place winner will receive a $200 cash award plus a staged reading of the play open to the general public; and the third-place winner will receive a $100 cash award plus a staged reading of the play open to the general public.

To meet regulations of the DeepSouth New Play Contest, scripts should be original, full-length plays intended for children or young audiences with 10 characters or fewer, or produceable with eight actors with doubling of roles.

Sets should be unit or monoscenic. No musicals, no adaptations and no previously produced scripts will be considered for entry in The DeepSouth New Play Contest.

All manuscripts must be postmarked no later than Nov. 30 to be accepted into the contest. Entries should be double-spaced and neatly typed on one side of the page, with generous margins on each side. Dot-matrix prints are acceptable only if legible. Each play should be bound and have a durable cover. Manuscripts will only be returned if the author encloses a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

According to Pierce both last year's first and second place scripts have used the DeepSouth New Play Contest as a spring board into other productions and continued exposure for the plays. Rafeael V. Blanco's "The Fall", went on to its second successful staging at a Miami theater in September, and Bric Barker's two man comedy "Turn in Your Hymnal" launched a new theater company and is slated for an extended run at a prominent Atlanta theater.

More Bradleys arrive

By Richard C. McInnis
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

Twelve M-2A2 Bradley Fighting Vehicles arrived at the Sand Hill railhead Monday.

The soldiers of the 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry, 24th Infantry Division will be the recipients of this latest installment of Bradleys.

Soldiers from the 29th Infantry Regiment moved the vehicles from the railhead to the Deprocessing Center on Main Post, where they will remain until the 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry picks them up in January.

"The fielding of the Bradley is the most dynamic force modernization event in the brigade's history," said Capt. Mike Ryan, the brigade's assistant operations officer. "It will drastically improve the firepower, survivability and maneuverability of infantrymen on the modern battlefield."

The 2nd Battalion is currently preparing its M-113 armored personnel carriers for turn in and is scheduled to begin its transition to the Bradley in January.

The Sledgehammer Brigade will receive a total of 108 Bradleys, 54 of which have already been shipped to Fort Benning; six vehicles per day are expected to arrive at the railhead, Ryan said.

New officers' quarters open on Fort Benning

Buildings named in honor of 5 former post commanders

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

The newly renovated Unaccompanied Officers' Quarters, located on Main Post behind the Officers' Club, were dedicated with a ribbon-cutting ceremony Oct. 31.

Buildings 972 to 976 comprise the quarters, which are named in memory of five former Fort Benning commanders: Gens. Courtney H. Hodges and Paul L. Freeman; Lt. Gens. John W. O'Daniel and Robert H. York and Maj. Gen. John. H. Church. Each received the Distinguished Service Cross for his actions during World War II.

Church's daughter, Martha Kennedy, was present at the ceremony to help Chief of Staff Col. John Fuller cut the yellow ribbon, thus officially opening the new quarters.

"They were the standard setters of their day, just as these buildings will hopefully serve as standard setters for future projects," said Fuller, speaking of the accomplishments of the five.

The buildings, originally constructed during the 1950s and '60s have undergone a complete transformation, both inside and out, to the cost of around $6 million, according to Col. Patrick D.J. Kenny , director of Engineering and Housing.

Newly refurnished, the buildings now contain individual kitchenettes and bathrooms.

Design and construction was done by a civilian contractor, Conner Brothers of Auburn, Ala., and the Directorate of Engineering and Housing.

"I can assure you they look 1,000 percent better," said Kenny. "We are returning to the philosophy that a building should not only be functional, but attractive as well."

Kenny said that the renovation of the officers' quarters is one of many that the post will see, including improvements to housing areas and barracks, that will make Fort Benning a better place to work and live.

Noted author visits post

Who: William F. Buckley Jr.
What: Visits Fort Benning
When: Oct. 30
Why: Officers' Professional Development Program

Former Army officer, author, lecturer, host of television's "Firing Line" and editor of "National Review" magazine, William F. Buckley Jr. visited Fort Benning Oct. 30 as part of the commanding general's Officers' Professional Development Program.

Students from the Infantry Officers' Basic and Advanced Courses packed Building 4's Marshall Auditorium to hear Buckley's "Reflections on Current Contingencies," a collection of personal insights on topics ranging from the demise of the Cold War to caring for the elderly.

Operation Desert Storm elicited several comments from Buckley, who felt the war was justified but not entirely successful.

"What we thought of as a conclusive victory appears to be less than that; Hussein is still in power," he said.

To those who argued that the loss of human life made Desert Storm unjustifiable, Buckley posed the question, "Is it or is it not historically the case that society needs to defend its freedoms?" Buckley also addressed U.S. foreign policy regarding the Soviet Union.

"Although free market principles have in theory been accepted, they have yet to be instituted," said Buckley, speaking on the condition of the Soviet economy.

Regarding the amount of aid the U.S. should give to the Soviets, Buckley said, "Other than provide emergency food and medicine, the U.S. is best off not doing much of anything."

Fort Benning Commander Maj. Gen. Jerry White praised Buckley for what he felt was a thought-provoking lecture and presented Buckley with a small replica of the Infantryman Statue that adorns the entrance to Building 4.

Fort Benning soldiers arrested

DALEVILLE, Ala . – Four Fort Benning soldiers were arrested here Sunday and charged with rioting and weapons possession stemming from an alleged assault involving two motorcycle clubs.

The four are: Sgt. First Class Merrill W. Davis, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment.; Specs. Thomas H. Heiskanen, Co. C, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt. and Colby J. Hanf, HHC, 1st Bn., 29th Regt.; and Pvt. First Class Tony R. Chapman, HHC, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt.

The four were charged with possession of brass knuckles, carrying a concealed weapon and carrying a pistol without a permit. Along with the Fort Benning soldiers, two Fort Rucker soldiers and a civilian pilot instructor were also arrested.

According to Daleville Police Chief Wess Etheredge, because of the types of weapons used, the attack was classified as a commando-type raid.

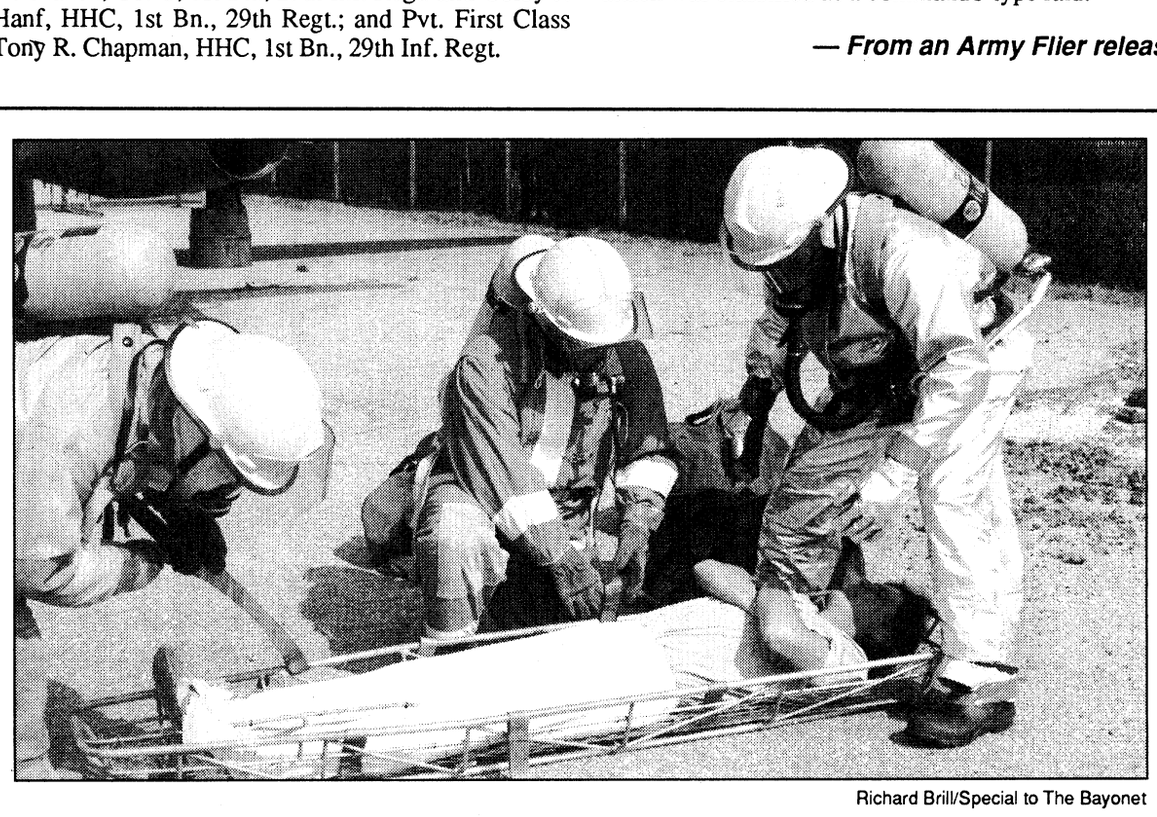
Post participates in R-Day activities

USAIC Public Affairs Office



Fort Benning is participating in "R-Day" activities this week along with the cities of Columbus and Phenix City.

R-Day is a recycle drive within the Tri-community of Phenix City, Columbus and Fort Benning, designed to extend the life of the existing landfills, as well as to conserve resources. The recycle effort coincides with the publication and distribution of Southern Bell's and Bell South's new telephone books. Fort Benning offices and post schools are turning in old telephone books as part of the recycle effort.

Fort Benning, which has an active recycle program, is providing a permanent recycle collection point for post residents. Current programs consist of recycling aluminum, office paper and brass. The post is also developing an expanded program for such items as glass and newsprint.

On Wednesday, telephone books were turned in for pick up at Wilbur, Lloyd and McBride schools. On Thursday, telephone books were brought to Classroom 7, Infantry Hall. Today, books will be picked up at Wilson, Patch, Dexter, Faith and White schools beginning at 1 p.m.

On Saturday, the Defense Reutilization and Marketing Office on 10th Mountain Division Road, the site of the permanent recycle collection point, will be open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. to receive glass, newsprint, and aluminum. Glass should be rinsed and newsprint should be bundled and tied.

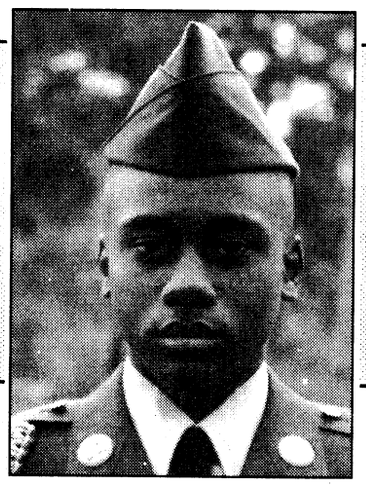
Training to be ready

Firefighters Justin Smith (left), Ron Maddox, and Nathaniel Scott practice removing a "victim" from a simulated chlorine gas leak during the Hazardous Materials Training Program, which was a joint effort of the Columbus, Phenix City and Fort Benning fire departments, Oct. 21 through Nov. 1. Students were taught how to respond to emergencies involving hazardous materials, such as chemical spills.

VARIOUS VOICES

What was the most challenging part of One Station Unit Training?

Pvt. 1 Victor Lee, Company B, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment – "The most challenging part was transferring from an individual to a team principle. They taiught us how to work and think as a team."



Pvt. 1 Jeff Croegaert, Company B, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment – "The 18-mile road march after a five-day field training exercise was challenging for me"

Pvt. 2 Keith Thompson. Company D, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment – "The hardest part for me was not expending all my rounds on the first day of the field training exercise."

Pvt. 1 Anthony Baughn, Company A, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment – "Taking orders from others, especially peers put in leadership positions, was difficult for me. . It was also hard being a leader."

Pvt. 1 Altran King, Company A, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment – "Taking orders, and attitudes from drill sergeants and peers who were put in leadership roles was hard."

Pvt. 1 James Linen, Company A, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment – "The hard part was accepting transition from civilian to the military and being put in a leadership position, because you can't associate with other soldiers like you did at first."

COMMENTARY

A warrior from the 3rd Brigade was hanging out in the office the other day mooning over one of our women soldiers.

In an effort to impress her, he began talking about his exploits in the great war.

We were pretty much enthralled.

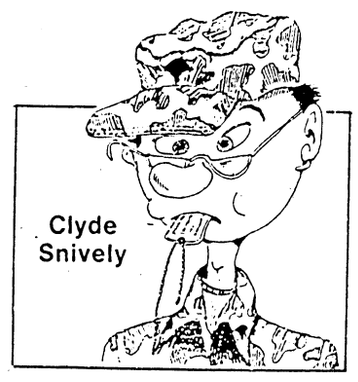
Listening to him go on and on, I wished I'd had the opportunity to spend some time kicking sand in Saddam's face. Not because I'm heroic or enjoy living under severe conditions — no showers, no beer, no phones, too much sand, too much of not enough.

But if I'd been, then on days like these when things around post seem pretty routine, I'd have war stories I could write about, just like that specialist.

Unfortunately, the closest I ever came to combat was the infiltration course during basic training at Fort Jackson, grossly restricting my ability to overwhelm people with tales of my exploits.

So what do columnists write about when the well goes dry?

According to Professor Thistlebottom, column-writing instructor, a good source for for columnist worldwide is Cleveland, followed closely by Buffalo.



"Not even people in Cleveland like Cleveland," he'd tell a bunch of fledgling columnists. "You can lump them all into two categories – those who didn't like Cleveland and left, and those still in Cleveland who wish they could leave."

I think the professor has a point there. My mother, God rest her soul, was from Cleveland. She was one of nine sisters. I think all but one left Cleveland as soon as they could.

By the way, I assume everyone knows we're writing about Cleveland, Ohio. Not Cleveland, Texas; Cleveland, Tennessee; Cleveland, Mississippi or even Mount Cleveland.

I mean, what does Cleveland have? Lake Erie? Sure does, along with all the snow and wind that comes with Lake Erie every winter.

The Cleveland Indians. Yep. They're trying to get out of town, too. In fact, this is the only thing the fans support them in. Problem is, who wants them?

We thought Atlanta had losers. Cleveland ain't won in the American League since 1954. And even then, their timing was as bad as their baseball since the Giants beat them four games to zip in the World Series.

The Atlanta Braves might not have won anything before this year, but at least the Milwaukee Braves did, back to back in '57 and '58.

Then there are the Browns. They used to be quite the ticket when Paul Brown was coaching and Jimmy Brown was running. But that was the Stone Age.

I don't know, there might be something to cheer about in that city, at least it's not Buffalo – but if there is, it escapes me.

Thus, I was surprised to learn that there are two ex-Clevelandites here at Fort Benning.

Oddly enough, both are still loyal to those two semi-pro teams I mentioned earlier. Both are lieutenant colonels and both drive Mustangs – one even goes so far as advertising his support for the Browns and Indians by sporting bumper stickers– meaning he doesn't embarrass easily. The other pretends he's from Virginia.

I guess that's the great thing about being in the Army. You aren't judged by your race, creed, color or what ball teams you root for.

Instead, we're an equal opportunity employer and you get ahead based on merit, on how well you do your job.

Of course, if I were doing a background investigation and someone told me he supported those two teams, I may want to delve a little deeper into his psyche and see if we have a well-balanced soldier here.

After all, just because the Soviet Union is no longer a world power doesn't mean they don't have agents in the field. And who better to target than those with delusions of grandeur?

Commander calls for safety over holidays

The month of November will provide this command with two holidays.

This signals a special need to alert our soldiers to a very real threat of motor vehicle accidents and instill in them a general sense of safety awareness.

Last year, more than 500 Americans were killed on our nation's highways during the Thanksgiving weekend.

This calendar year, five Fort Benning soldiers and two family members have been killed in vehicle accidents.

The most common causes of traffic fatalities are speeding, not wearing seat belts, driving after drinking beer or other alcoholic beverages, and fatigue.

To emphasize the dangers of privately owned vehicles , commanders should inspect POVs and brief soldiers concerning POV safety.

My goal of protecting the force includes eliminating off-duty accidents. I want your wholehearted support to protect our soldiers from accidental injuries.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White
Fort Benning commander

LETTERS

Parent concerned about child on street

This morning, on our way home from walking my daughter to McBride School, my three-year old and I waited for traffic to clear before crossing Moon Street. A female motorist, on our left, was at the end of Magrath Street where it meets Moon.

In trying to be nice, without noticing traffic coming down Moon Street, she motioned my son and me across. I pointed to the oncoming car and then crossed after it passed while she waited.

My concern is that a motorist might motion a child across, without first checking for traffic from all directions, and that child, being accustomed to trusting adult instruction, would cross also without checking for oncoming traffic.

Name withheld by request

Editor's note: The post's Safety Office provided this response:

This letter addresses a real problem, which should concern all Fort Benning personnel. Motorists, who are attempting to be helpful, may actually put pedestrians in danger.

Motorists should think twice before motioning pedestrians across streets unless they are absolutely certain that neither they nor any other vehicle could pose a hazard.

Motorists who do this are, in essence, assuming responsibility for pedestrians' safety.

Are dances available for 13 to 14-year-olds?

Can you answer a question for me?

On post, there are preteen dances and teen dances held at the Teen Center. Children must be under 12 years old for preteen dances and 15 years old for teen dances.

Question: Where are the 13- and 14-year-olds supposed to go?

I have a soon-to-be 14-year-old, who sits around bored because she's too old for one dance and not old enough for the other.

If you could find out the answer for us and let us know, we'd sure appreciate it.

Vickie Dahmer
Fort Benning

Editor's note: Billie C. Smith, director of Youth Services, said:

Youth Services scheduled dances for 13- and 14-year-old teens in June, July and August this year. Due to a lack of participation, the dances for that age group were cancelled.

The Teen Center, building 1796, is now open Friday and Saturday for teens 13 to 18.

Dances for that age group will be held every fourth Friday of the month from 8 to 11 p.m.

This Friday and Saturday schedule is for a trial period to see if the youth of Fort Benning are interested in utilizing the teen facility.

Accidents down, TQM may bring improvement

Infantry Branch Safety Office

The number of accidents at Fort Benning has decreased since fiscal 1985. Military ground accidents have decreased 43 percent, civilian injuries have decreased 14 percent, privately-owned vehicle fatalities are down 60 percent, and Army motor vehicle accidents have fallen 70 percent.

Implementation of Total Quality Management principles could further reduce these accidents, officials said.

An analysis of Fort Benning accident experience for FY 91 was conducted to determine problem areas. The following areas were identified:

• The major causes of military accidents were: airborne training (34 percent), falls (14 percent), physical training/sport (12 percent), and privately-owned vehicle accidents (9 percent).

• The major causes of civilian employee injuries were: falls (29 percent), hits (24 percent), and lifting (12 percent)).

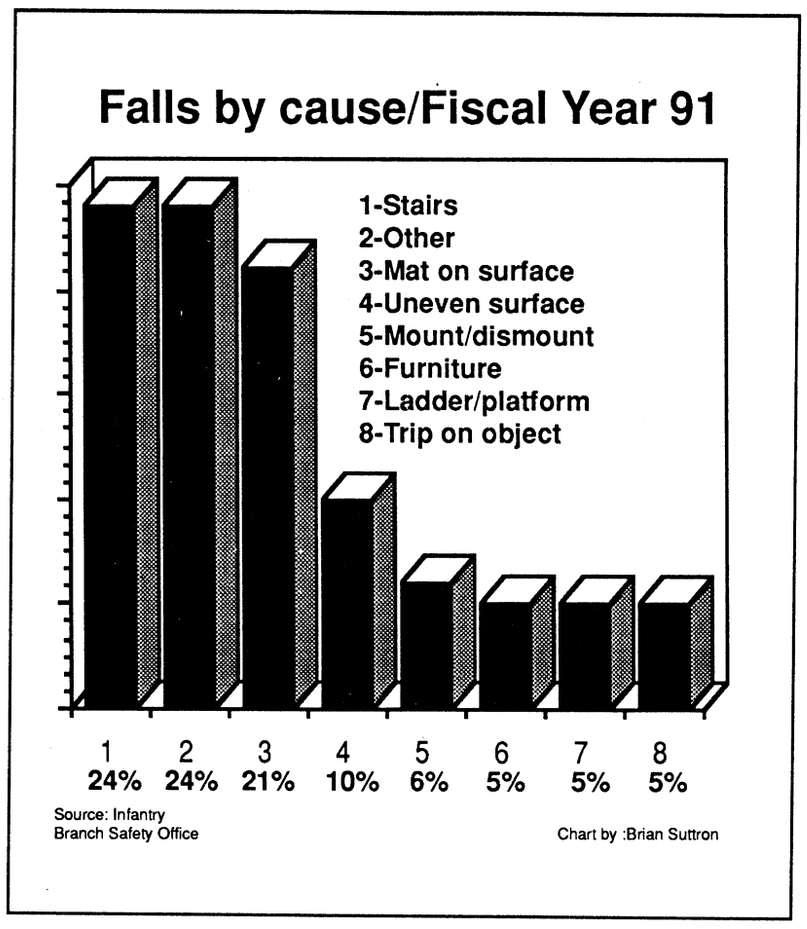
These areas have been selected for special emphasis during FY 92: falls (military and civilian), lifting (civilian), and privately-owned vehicle accidents (military).

The Fort Benning objective is to reduce accidents in these areas by 10 percent compared to last year.

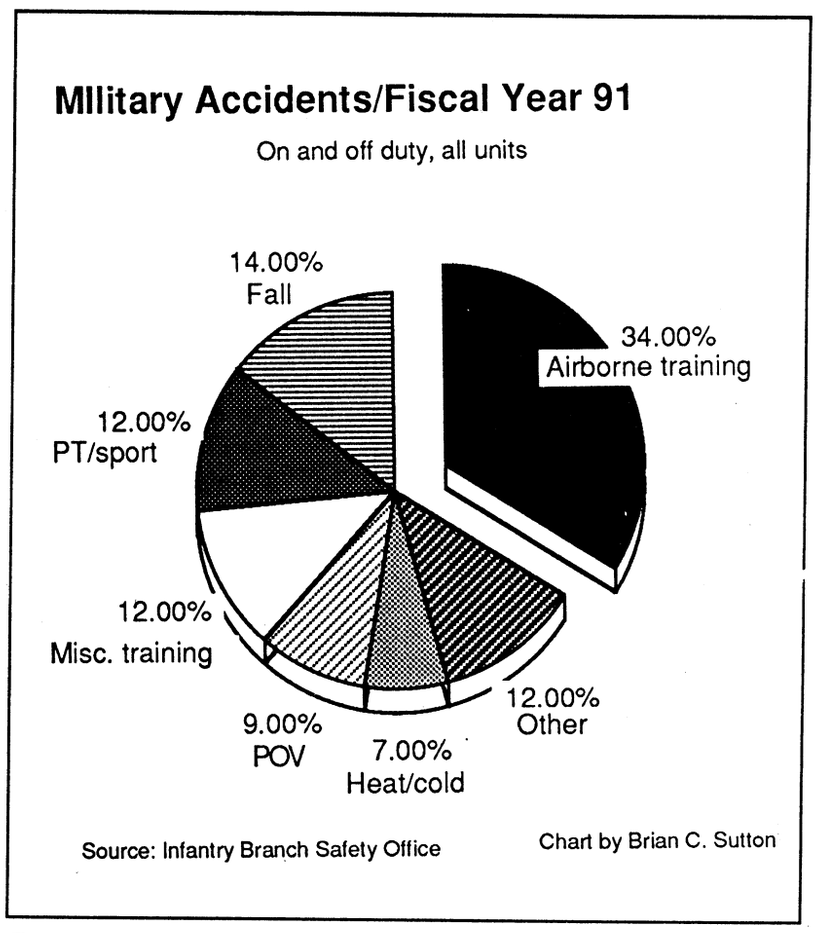
A further analysis of these areas was conducted to determine specific problems and to focus preventive measures. The following was determined:

• Most falls occurred on stairs (24 percent) or when a slippery material was on the surface (21 percent).

• Lifting accidents occurred both in industrial percent and administrative settings (36 percent).



•Motorcycle accidents represented a disproportionately large percentage of privately-owned vehicle accidents (33 percent).



The FY 92 Installation Safety Action Plan will be provided to leaders throughout Fort Benning.

The plan details actions that will be taken by the Infantry Branch Safety Office and provides suggested minimum actions for leaders at all levels.

If you are interested in reviewing the plan, call 545-3267.

The post's progress toward reducing accidents will be monitored each quarter.

1st ID to dedicate plaque

By Rob Moore
1st Infantry Division

A commemorative bronze plaque honoring the 1st Infantry Division's participation in Operation Desert Storm will be unveiled today at 11 a.m., as the newest addition to the 1st Infantry Division (Mechanized) memorial at the National Infantry Museum.

The new plaque will be one of four on the memorial, which commemorates the division's participation in World War I, World War II, and the Vietnam conflict. The memorial, itself, is also a newcomer to the museum, having been unveiled March 15.

Representing The Big Red One at Fort Benning will be Col. Anthony Moreno, 2nd Brigade commander, and Command Sgt. Maj. Timothy Sumpter of 2nd Battalion, 16th Infantry. Also attending will be a five-man color guard from 2nd Bn., 16th Inf.

The memorial is the result of nearly 4 1/2 years of planning, design and fund raising by the First Infantry Division Memorial Fund committee, coordinated by retired Maj. Gen. Albert H. Smith Jr. and retired Col Edward W. MacGregor.

"It all began on Oct. 21, 1986," recalled Smith. "There was a group of 1st Inf. Div. veterans assembled at the National Infantry Museum for the opening of an exhibit to honor a fine soldier of World War II and heroic leader in Korea, Brig. Gen. John T. Corley. As we walked around the outside of the museum afterwards we thought, 'Wouldn't it be nice if the 1st ID had its own memorial?' That was the beginning of the dream."

The memorial was not much more than a dream until late 1989 when the idea was brought to fruition. Early concepts of the memorial were put to blueprint and the non-profit memorial fund organization was formed by MacGregor.

As project fund-raiser, Smith set out contacting World War II and Vietnam veterans of the 1st Inf. Div., to collect the $29,000 needed for the memorial. Once that was done, MacGregor and post engineers from Fort Benning made the final approval of the design, the Department of the Army made arrangements for a general contractor, and in early 1990 the secretary of the Army gave the approval for construction to begin.

Near the end of construction, however, Big Red One soldiers were called upon once more, this time to Saudi Arabia for Operation Desert Shield and Desert Storm. The memorial was completed within days of the Feb. 28 cease-fire, and unveiled at a dedication ceremony two weeks later, without time to add a tribute to the division's mission in Southwest Asia.

The Gulf War addition to the memorial was drafted shortly after 1st Inf. Div. soldiers began redeployment to Fort Riley, Kan., and was cast in a five foot by one foot bronze plaque that lists the events encountered by Big Red One units and will be placed below the Vietnam plaque.

White encouraged those who have collected the donations at the units to turn in everything as soon as possible.

Civilian health plan open season to begin

Annual health fair set

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Civilian employees desiring information on health insurance will have the opportunity for their questions to be answered at the Directorate of Civilian Personnel's annual health fair.

The fair is scheduled to be Tuesday and Wednesday in Building 4, classroom 51, from 8:30 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 5 p.m.

According to Director of Civilian Personnel Theresa Gunter in a memo to be sent to post civilian employees, the fair will feature representatives of health- care plans available to employees at this installation as well as a representative from Civilian Health and Medical Program for the Uniformed Services.

Blood pressure and vision screening will also be available, stated Gunter.

The fair is held in conjunction with the open season for the 1992 federal employees health benefits program Tuesday through Dec. 9.

During this time civilian employees not enrolled in an insurance plan may do so. Those currently enrolled may change from one plan or option to another as well as change from self only to self and family coverage.

Gunter noted that those desiring to enroll or change their enrollment must complete a Health Benefits Registration Form and submit it to Recruitment and Placement Division, Directorate of Civilian Personnel before close of business on Dec. 9.

Employees can find additional information, including comparisons of available health plans, in the 1991 Enrollment Information Guide being circulated through post administrative offices.

Patricia Beasley, a Directorate of Civilian Personnel employee relations specialist, said she hopes this year's turnout will be large.

"Normally we have from 200 to 250 people visit. Hopefully this year we'll have more," she said.

"This year we're holding the fair for two days so that all of our employees will have a chance to visit," she added.

'Ironman' surpasses all expectations

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

Jeff Lang went to the Big Island of Hawaii to participate on this year's Army team in the Gatorade Ironman Triathlon, with the thought of being competitive.

Lang surpassed even his own expectations by taking first place in the Army division, and finishing in the top ten for all military services.

Lang's time of 10 hours and 42 minutes was only 2 hours and 23 minutes off this year's winner's, Mark Allen, time of 8 hours and 19 minutes. The Army team placed last among the four services with the Air Force finishing first, the Marine Corp second, and the Navy third.

Among the 1,495 entrants who started the race, Lang finished 309th, placing him in the top third of all competitors. This being Lang's first Ironman tournament, just finishing the race would have been an accomplishment, he said. Finishing where he did proved that all the training he put in paid off, Lang added.

The heat and humidity during the summer months in Georgia prepared Lang for the task of a 2.4-mile ocean swim, a 112-mile bike ride and the 26.2- mile marathon.

Lang left for Hawaii four days earlier than scheduled and began practicing on the course to acquaint himself with the terrain and to give his body time to adjust to the change in the weather conditions.

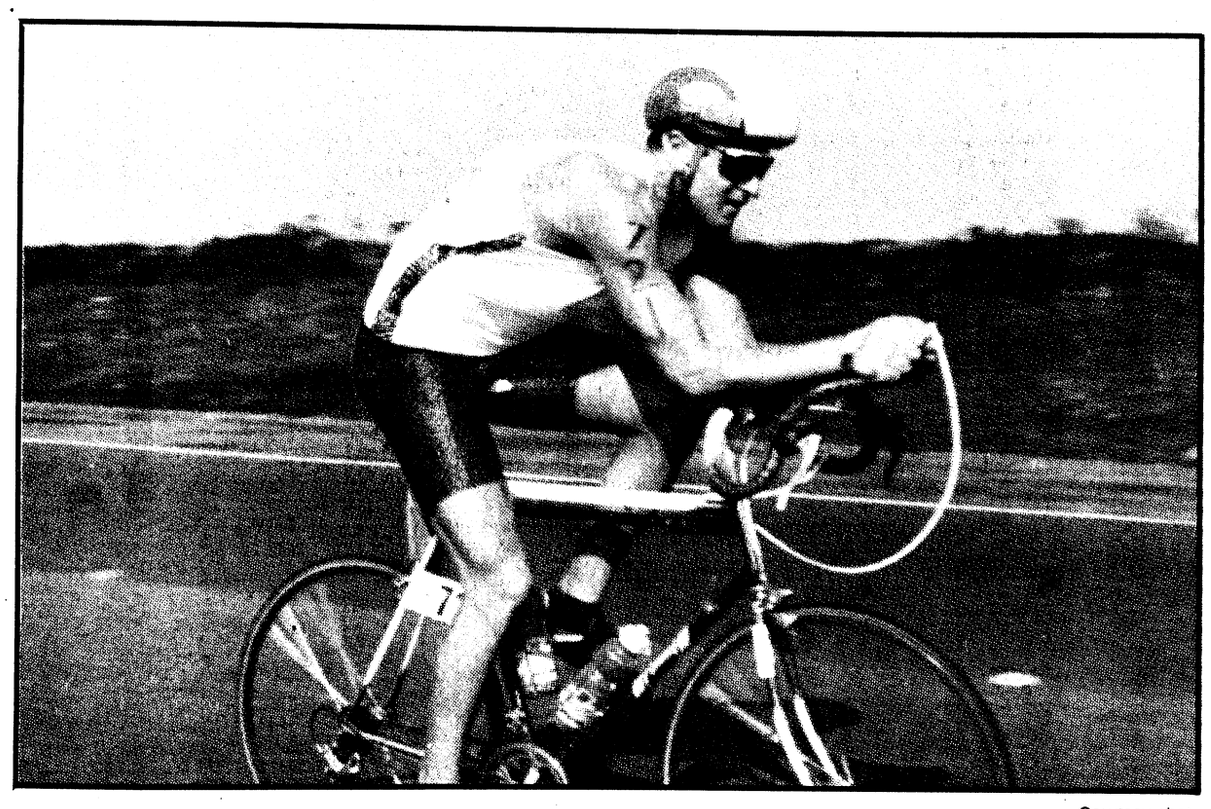
"After running, swimming, and riding the whole course a few times the only question in my mind was how weather conditions were going to affect how fast I was going to be able to do it," said Lang.

"The doubt of if I could finish went away, and it gave me a sense of inner calm so I could concentrate on going faster," he added.

And faster he did go, completing the swim in his best time ever of 1 hour and 7 minutes. He completed the bike ride in 5 hours and 50 minutes and the marathon in 3 hours and 32 minutes, keeping pace with a lot of the professional runners.

"People kept asking me 'Can you win this thing?'" said Lang. "I kept telling them that these are pros I'm competing with. I'm no pro."

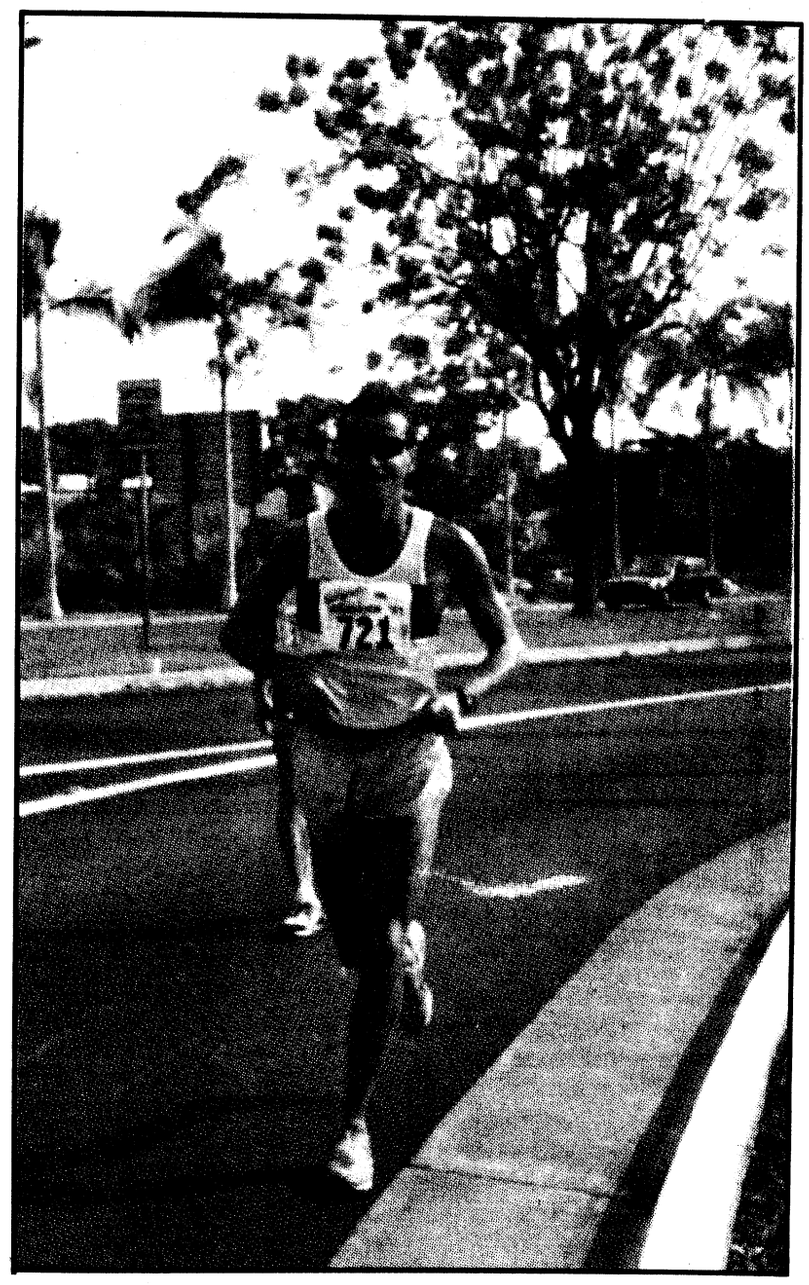
Lang had no idea of where he was overall until a spectator told him at about the 23rd mile.



"I didn't know where I stood in relation to the rest of the Army Team," said Lang.

"I figured with the experience of the other members, I had no idea I would do this well. Frankly, I didn't know I would do this well overall either. Everything just worked. The amount of training I put in should have produced this result but I wouldn't allow myself to get over confident," said Lang.

The emotional feelings Lang experienced at the end of the race came back on him as he relived the finish.



"You could hear the announcer, the music, and the crowd from about two miles away," said Lang. "It makes tears kind of come to your eyes and the emotion takes over."

Lang said he would like the Army to get more involved in the aspects of providing temporary duty or per diem for the runners and hopes this will reach out and encourage better athletes to participate in the event.

Viking soccer team tops in their league

By John W. Peeler
Youth Services

When the 9 to10-year-old Vikings and 49ers took the field Saturday for the second of three scheduled meetings, revenge was in the minds of the 49ers and their fans for an earlier season 24 -0 loss at the hands of the Vikings. But, this would be a day where the Vikings held true to their winning form by defeating the 49ers 22 - 0.

The first two series of plays were a defensive struggle. On the Vikings second set of downs running back Brandon Holland broke free on a 14-yard sweep for a touchdown and with the two point conversion the Vikings led 8-0.

The defensive struggle continued throughout the first half and the Vikings went into the half-time intermission leading 8-0.

The third quarter opened with neither team being able to move the ball until the Vikings' Demitrius Jubilee intercepted a 49ers pass and returned the ball 23 yards to the 49ers 25-yard line. Three plays later Holland broke up the middle behind the blocking of running back Michael Ellerbe for a 20-yard touchdown run. After the two point conversion the Vikings extended their lead 16 - 0.

The defensive struggle continued into the 4th quarter. In the final minutes of the game, tight end Elvis Colon iced the game with a 31-yard touchdown run. The 49ers stopped the Vikings two-point conversion attempt making the score 22 - 0.

The 49ers had one last chance to score, but the Vikings' defense shut the offense down leaving the final score Vikings 22, 49ers 0.

The loss left the 49ers with a 2-3 record and moved the undefeated Vikings to 5-0.

Shooting safety prevents casualties

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Prevention is the solution to hunting casualties. Every hunting accident that has occurred could have been prevented.

Most hunting accidents happen as a result of people ignoring firearms safety rules. Prevention involves knowing and obeying those basic safety rules.

Responsible, knowledgeable, and safe hunters will learn, remember, and follow these simple rules:

• Control the direction of your firearm's muzzle. Carry your firearm safely, keeping the safety on until ready to shoot. Keep your finger off the trigger until ready to shoot.

• Identify your target and what is beyond it. Know the identifying features of the game you hunt.

• Treat every firearm with the same respect due a loaded firearm.

• Be sure the barrel and action are clear of obstructions and that you have only ammunition of the proper size for the firearm you are carrying.

• Unload firearms when not in use. Leave the actions open. Firearms should be carried empty in cases to and from shooting areas.

• Never point a firearm at anything you do not want to shoot. Avoid all horseplay with a firearm.

• Never climb a fence or tree, or jump a ditch or log, with a loaded firearm. Never pull a firearm toward you by the muzzle.

• Never shoot a bullet at a flat, hard surface or water. During target practice, be sure your backstop is adequate.

• Store firearms and ammunition separately beyond the reach of children and careless adults.

• Avoid alcoholic beverages or other mind altering drugs before or while shooting.

Daffin's: The Buck stops here and so do dee doe

By Kimberly Wood

For quality work you can't beat an established business. Daffin's Meat Processing has been around since 1962 and is the oldest deer processor in Columbus. They were originally a grocery store in the early 1940's and decided to specialize in meat processing twenty years later. They have even been in the same location since the beginning.

With a history like that you can only imagine the quality of work you will get there. It is a family-run business and all work is overseen by Mr. John Daffin himself. "Quality is our watchword, friendliness our trade," he says.

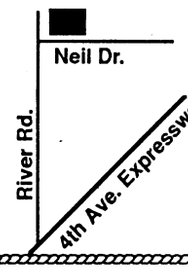
Daffin's Meat Processing is open year-round, seven days a week. They have a state-inspected facility and an expert staff of meat cutters. All meat is double-wrapped and kept in a large freezer.



Because Daffin's was originally a grocery store, they have extensive experience in processing all kinds of meat. During hunting season their main service is deer processing, however they also process cows and hogs. Your game will be cut to order and usually takes about four days to be prepared.

So if you want an established business with a long-standing reputation to take care of your deer, bring it to Daffin's Meat Processing. They are located at 4100 River Road. Take Exit 5b off I-185 River Road, make a left and g four blocks to Neil Drive.

Student wives form new association

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

The Fort Benning Officers' Club is sponsoring a new organization on post called the Student Wives Association. A kick-off party for this new group has been set for Thursday at 2 p.m. at the club, according to Corinna Todd, Marketing.

It is a result of a series of focus groups on how to better meet the needs of student officers' wives.

Those interested in attending and are not yet members of the Officers' Club, will be eligible to attend three activities with no obligation to join.

The kick-off will be a planning session for future events. A play area will be set up so that wives may bring children and toys.

Todd said that the Student Wives Association will be looking at scheduling activities that are free, offering companionship with other wives who could swap baby-sitting duties, meeting people with whom to car pool or run errands and also to just offer a meeting place for some who are house bound.

The first planned special event will be a Membership Thanksgiving Celebration Nov. 16 at 6 p.m. in the Officers' Club Supper Room.

It will be an appreciation event for all members of the Officers' Club, Todd said. There will be a beef and burgundy dinner followed by dancing to the music of Mystique. The dress will be casual.

There will also be a shuttle service provided by Silver Fleet Van & Limo Service for those who live off post. If members show enough interest in this, the club will try to offer this on a more regular basis.

Pickups will be made from Hamilton Station Office, Hampton Place Office, Stratford Lane Office, the Waffle House Exit 3, Whisperwood Spa and Club Office, Milgen Village Office, J.C. Penney's lot on Macon Road and Goolsby's Exit 2.

Other stops can be made when reservations are made. Shuttle service is being offered on a donation basis so donations will tell if this is a worthwhile endeavor.

The cost will be $10.25 per person or $20 per couple with tickets to be purchased at the cashier's cage or by calling 682-0640. Seats may be reserved on your club card.

The membership Thanksgiving celebration will also feature door prizes and 30 special guests from Auburn University.

Volunteer helps moms

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Euphine Culverson has the ability to listen without being judgmental or telling people what to do. It's what makes her a good First Steps Program volunteer.

"First Steps is a support and education program for new moms under stress," according to Summer Harms, First Steps coordinator.

In existence for a little more than two years, Fort Benning's First Steps Program was a pilot effort begun by a steering committee that included people from Army Community Services, Post Red Cross, Social Work Services, the Volunteer Resource Center, the Community Health nurse and the obstetrics floor nurses at Martin Army Community Hospital.

Culverson has been a volunteer for almost a year. She learned about the program from a friend who is a nurse case coordinator in Social Work Services.

Volunteers are given initial training at MACH, where they learn how to make contact with a person either going through a pregnancy or having just delivered under difficult circumstances.

The most common problem is that they are new first-time mothers whose husbands are deployed or on temporary duty, and their families are far away.

Harms said they usually follow the case up through the third month following the delivery, but have continued with some as long as 18 months.

During their training, volunteers are given a referral list so if someone is having a particular problem, they know where to send them for help. Such resources include: the Car Seat Loaner Program through the Preventative Medicine and Department of Pediatrics at MACH, the Women, Infants and Children Program, the La Leche League and Pediatrics After Hours.

"I am a people person," Culverson said, "and I enjoy helping others, one on one."

Being available 24 hours-a-day when the chips are down can be demanding, but she loves it.

Culverson has been a nurse's aide and worked in a funeral home and has found that helping in a crisis situation is fulfilling for her.

Also, now she has the time to help. Her children, Sherry, 16, Whitley Culverson III, 16, and Andrea, 22, are older, and two years ago her husband retired from the military after 20 years in the service.

First Steps volunteers have meetings once a month and keep Harms briefed on each case so that if the volunteer is unable to continue, another could take over.

Harms said that cases are referred to First Steps mainly through the Social Work Services, Post Red Cross, the Community Health nurse and the ward clerk on the obstetrical floor, Frida Greenway.

"Everyone on the obstetrical floor has been wonderful to us and knows we are looking for those with special needs," Harms added.

Harms is excited that the newest class of volunteers includes a delivery room nurse, a psychologist and someone working on her master's degree in social work.

However, if Harms ever feels that they have a case that is over their heads, she turns it over to Social Work Services.

The program went through some difficult cases last year during Desert Shield and Desert Storm.

One woman was going through such a difficult pregnancy that she had to be transferred the Walter Reed Hospital, and making arrangements for her other children, required help.

Harms is happy to see that things have calmed down.

"This can be a full-time volunteer job for me, but Officers Wives Club helps us with funds, and ACS with calendars, and we make a difference. The best part though is being able to hold all of those wonderful little babies."

ALL OVER THE WORLD . . . CHILDREN AT RISK

It seems like some things never change . . .

But they do.

In the 1980's, UNICEF helped immunize 80 percent of the world's children, saving 12 million young lives. UNICEF also helped lower child malnutrition in much of the developing world by 50 percent. UNICEF is saving a million children a year through the spread of oral rehydration therapy, which cures the dehydration caused by diarrhea. And UNICEF is close to eradicating polio forever.

All of this achieved at a low cost with the participation of governments and communities. And all of it achieved not for today, or for tomorrow, but for good.

Where there are children without nourishment, children without water, children without medicine, children without education—where there are children without hope —there is UNICEF. And there is change.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Michael H. Lane
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Q. I have just been assigned to this post after a short tour in Germany and a shorter tour in Southwest Asia. Because of my busy schedule, I have not filed taxes for 1989 and 1990. I know that my service in the Gulf area is tax-free, but what about the time periods before and after my Gulf service? Will I get in trouble for filing late? Is there tax help available here on post, or do I need to find a commercial tax service? Does Fort Benning offer electronic filing and other services?

A. Many other soldiers share your situation, and it is likely that you are in no trouble for late filing. You need to get the 1989 return in as soon as possible, but you may find that there are few if any interest charges or penalties due. It may be that the 1989 return is only a few months late, while the 1990 return is probably not late at all. Of course, the 1991 return is not due until April 15, 1992.

This results from a tax law change which was passed by Congress along with the better-known military pay exemption.

The Internal Revenue Service calls this tax change the suspension of time section. Section 7508 of the Internal Revenue Code not only postpones the time for filing 1990 returns, but delays the due date for paying taxes due, for claiming refunds, or for taking any other action required or permitted under the tax laws.

This means that if you were involved in the early stages of Desert Shield, which began August 2, 1990, for tax purposes, your 1989 tax return is now only about nine months late. The specific effects of your Gulf service are explained in some detail in IRS Publication 945, titled "Tax Information for Those Affected by Operation Desert Storm", which is available now at the Legal Assistance Office.

Since you are new here, you need to know how to get tax help at Fort Benning. The Army has operated a Tax Assistance Program for many years, and it is run on each post according to local needs and resources.

Administration of the program is a cooperative venture with the IRS, and it is called Volunteers in Tax Assistance. Fort Benning has an active VITA program of on-post tax assistance, and beginning in January 1992, will feature electronic tax filing of returns.

The program operates through the efforts of Unit Tax Advisors, volunteers, and personnel from the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate. It is taught by the IRS at Fort Benning, where the UTA will learn elementary tax preparation techniques, and be furnished with forms and information.

The UTA is the first echelon tax preparer, and also coordinates unit tax classes, electronic filing of returns for soldiers in the unit, and refers tax problems which are too complex to the Fort Benning Tax Office.

The Tax Office, which opens on or about February 1, 1992, is located in the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, and is staffed by volunteers and JA staff. It will maintain a broad selection of Federal and State tax forms, and will also offer tax information, preparation and assistance.

Electronic filing will be offered at the Tax Office this year for the first time.

This method is much faster than mailing the return. Refunds can be expected in three weeks or less, and return errors are much less likely.

Those tax matters which cannot be solved at the unit or Tax Office can be referred to an attorney in the Legal Assistance Office by making an appointment.

To seek further information about this or any other legal problem, contact the Legal Assistance Office in Building 5 for an appointment. The telephone number is 545-3281.

Reflections Reflections

I laughed aloud when I first read this story from the First United Methodist Church in Warren, Arkansas:

While on vacation, a church member was caught in a sudden downpour. To escape a drenching he crawled into a hollow log. There, safe from the rain and lulled by its sound, he fell asleep. When he awoke, he found that the rain had swelled the wood of the log and he was held fast. Try as he might, he could not get out and, realized he might die there. His life began to pass before his eyes. And as he thought of his unpaid church pledge and of how little he had given, this made him feel so small that he was able to crawl out of the log with ease.

This story does offer food for thought. I suppose most of us will admit that we are not using fully what God has given us. If we think on this long enough, we may begin to feel "small" like the guy in the log.

But to "feel small" is not what God wants from us. God does not want us to feel bad, but to be good, and to do good. The Lord wants us to use our gifts wisely, and for the glory of God. But God wants even more than that.

Regarding our lives now and in the hereafter, God does not keep a tally of our merits and demerits, put them in a grand, cosmic computer, figure whether we're in the black or in the red, and then based on the results—send us on our merry (or not so merry) way. God is not keeping score, nor does God hold grudges.

Most important is not how much money we've given or how many good deeds we've done, although these are important. The "bottom line" for God is not a number, but a life. God does not want just good deeds or our money. God wants our hearts (which guide all our deeds and giving). God wants "US."

The core of the faith, as I understand it, is not a sum total of all our efforts, however important they are. Rather, one acquires faith when he or she falls in love with God. When this happens, one does not just go through the motions because something wonderful has captured the heart.

What person do you know, when he or she is falling in love, only "goes through the motions?" No way! That person longs to be with the other. When separated it hurts badly, and most of one's time is spent thinking of the other. Whether together or separated, the presence of the other in life is utmost in the mind, the heart, and even the soul. That is what it's like to be in love. And to be in love with God.

Stewardship Sunday is this Sunday, Nov. 10. Remember that the most important stewardship is not to be a good steward of your things, but to be a good steward of your heart. Your heart will then guide how you use your things, your gifts. When you fall in love with God, you will naturally give your heart to him, and desire what he wants. You will eventually want to shower the Lord with gifts, not because you have to, or because you feel guilty, but because you want to, because you are grateful for what the Lord has done for you, and for how he makes you feel. You will want to give of yourself, because—you're in love.

Remember that God is in love with his creation. Ask yourself. Have you fallen in love with your Creator? Give him a chance. Spend some special time with the Lord, and you will fall in love—I guarantee it.

So the most important commandment in Scripture is not something that has to be forced from us. For those who have eyes to see and ears to hear, this commandment is the most natural thing in the world: " . . . you shall love the Lord your God with all your heart, and with all your soul, and with all your mind, and with all your strength" (Deut. 6:5; Mark 12:30).

Now that is what I call good stewardship.

Holiday pays tribute to heroes

By Roger Welsh
U.S. Army Infantry School chaplain

Veterans Day helps remind us of those who fought and those who died for our country. It pays tribute to the many millions of veterans who have defended the freedoms of our great nation.

Originally, Veterans Day was known as Armistice Day, which celebrated the armistice of World War I in 1918. In 1954, the name was changed to Veterans Day.

The U.S. veterans of recent conflicts in Grenada, Panama and Southwest Asia have returned to cheering crowds of friends and families. They fought and stood up for the democratic process of freedom for all people. Unfortunately, the Vietnam veterans were not welcomed with fanfare from cheering crowds.

James McDonough, a platoon leader in Vietnam, wrote of his experience upon returning from the war:

At National Airport in Washington, D.C., a pretty young woman stood waiting in the terminal as I walked up the ramp. By her knee stood a 15-month-old child with curly blond hair, barely able to keep his balance on his chubby little legs. I kissed them both hello. The woman was happy; the boy was confused. I was both. I was also sad. I mourned for the men I had left behind. I grieved that their country would never know what fine men they were. I was proud to have served with them. (James McDonough, Platoon Leader, Bantam Books, NY, 1985)

The returning Vietnam veterans were also victims. Victims of an unpopular war. They were received at home in abashed silence. These veterans were denied the debt of honor experienced from previous wars and burdened instead with a load of guilt and shame.

I think that America has learned the valuable lesson that its most precious resource, the soldier should never again be blamed for the political miscalculations of our leaders.

The U.S. soldier accepts a high calling to defend American freedoms with his or her life if required. This is the validation of a soldier's great love for his country. It follows the same principle that Jesus gave to his disciples:

This is my commandment: love one another, just as I love you. The greatest love a person can have for his friends is to give his life for them (John 15:12-13).

We owe all of our veterans a special debt of thanks for preserving our freedom and the American way of life.

70th's academy trains drill sergeants

By J. Jan Hoffman
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Leadership Academy of the 70th Division (Training) recently conducted the first of many Drill Sergeants schools at Harmony Church.

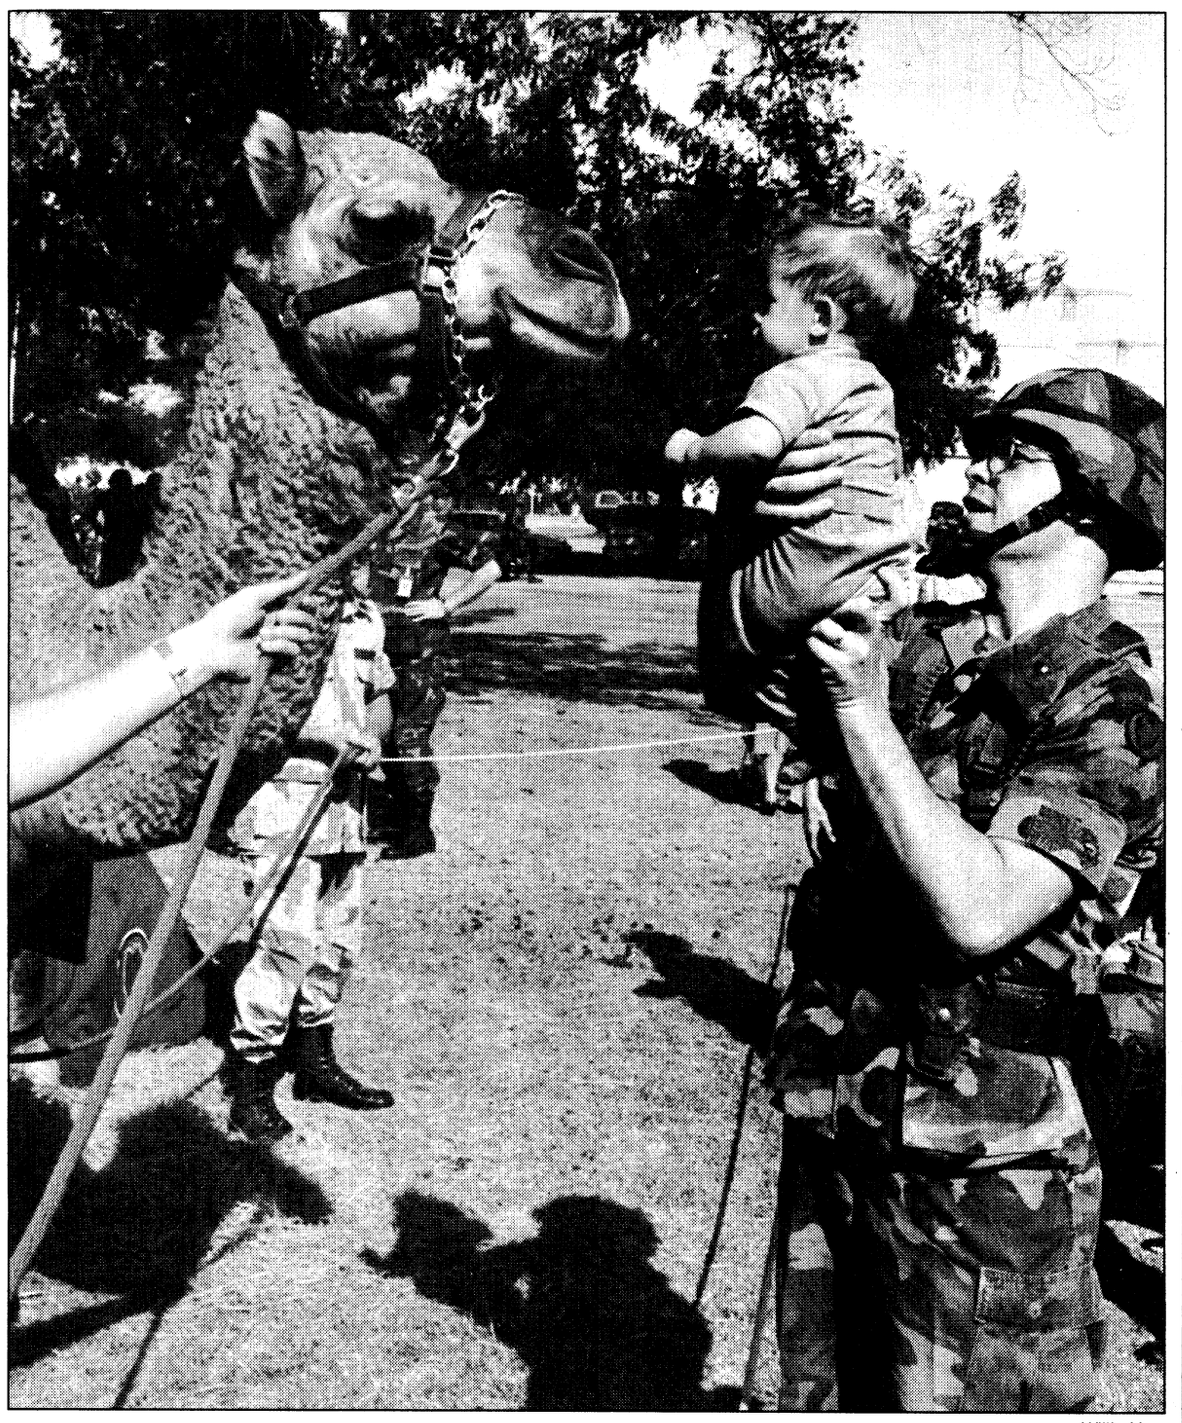
The Academy will be holding 15 day training periods twice a year, one in June the other in October.

The instructors are all members of the 70th, an Army Reserve unit based in Livonia, Mich.

The students are mostly instructors with the 70th, and were here to learn how to be drill sergeants.

The senior class graduated last Friday in ceremonies at Caro Non-commissioned Officer Academy.

The current junior class will return to Fort Benning next June for its final training and graduation.



The Leadership Academy previously went to Fort Knox, Ky., but after the 70th was mobilized for Desert Shield/Desert Storm, it was determined that since Fort Benning was its mobilization station anyway, they would come here for training in the future.

Two months prior to the academy's arrival here, its personnel had to make all of the arrangements for supplies, food, housing, training areas and everything else they needed.

The academy commander is Capt. Jeff Parks, and the commandant is Command Sgt. Maj. Jeffrey J. McCrackin.

McCrackin said that "Fort Knox is nicer (than Fort Benning) because it's closer to home. But for training, there is nothing to compare with being here at Fort Benning."

"Once we got all the assets we needed," said Parks, "this has been a good training period."

SOA inducts Latin American generals in Hall of Fame

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

The United States Army School of the Americas held its annual Hall of Fame induction ceremony at Marshall Auditorium Nov. 1, adding four Latin American generals to the school's illustrious "Galleria de Honor."

As the school's mission is to train members of the Latin American military, all inductees have not only attended the school, but instructed there as well.

Inductees at this year's ceremony were: Gen. Luis Eduardo Roca Maichel, commanding general Colombian Military Forces; Gen. Guido Emilio Sandoval Zambrana, commanding general of the Bolivian Army; Gen. Pedro Edilberto Villanueva Valdivia, commanding general of the Peruvian Army; and Gen. Manuel Alberto Murillo Gonzalez commander of the Columbian Army.

During his opening address to the audience, which included the United States Ambassador to Chile, the Honorable Charles A. Gillespie Jr., Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, commanding general of Fort Benning and current students of the school, Col. Jose A. Feliciano, commander of SOA, aptly explained the Hall of Fame's purpose.

"The Hall of Fame is a tangible means which permits us to recognize the great merit of graduates and members of the faculty who have passed through the classrooms of this institution and continue to have distinguished careers in their respective countries," said Feliciano.

"Seventeen officers representing nine different countries in Latin America have been inducted into the Hall of Fame," Feliciano continued. "Today we add four generals who serve as an example to our students," said Feliciano.

"The careers of these great leaders justify completely their appointment into this Hall of Fame," he added.

Although their appointments lend credence to their professionalism, the Hall of Fame itself represents the ties of friendship between the two hemispheres, he added.

Dan R. Wilson

Command Sgt. Maj. Carlos Legoas, SOA, and Brig. Gen. Jorge Brito Gomez, Peruvian military attache to the U.S., speak at the Hall of Fame Reception at the Officer's Club.

Roca was the first of the inductees to be honored. Graduating from the Military School of Columbia in 1955. Roca was commissioned as an artillery officer. He achieved the rank of General of the Republic Dec. 16, 1989. Roca and his wife have four children; Luis Guillermo, Juan Carlos, Mauricio and Claudia Lucia.

"This ceremony constitutes a high honor which overwhelms me. Even more so, when it takes place in the Marshall Auditorium of Fort Benning, home of the infantry, where the School of the Americas is located," Roca said."I receive this award as something personal and in homage to my country."

Following Roca's acceptance speech, Sandoval was inducted.

The commanding general of the Bolivian Army graduated from the Military Academy of the Bolivian Army in December of 1961 as an officer of the Cavalry branch. Zambrana and his wife have three children: Huascar, Fabiola and Navra.

"In this school we all had a permanent communion between the Latin American military forces." Sandoval said.

"When we were cadets, we liked all those things at the School of the Americas in Panama (prior to 1977 SOA was located at Fort Gulick, Panama). How could we not like this brilliant school."

"There were the Americans guiding us in military instruction and relationship. We strived to improve ourselves so upon returning to our countries we could improve our system of life" Sandoval said.

"It is a great honor to enter into this hall and on behalf of my country I wish to be an example to these cadets who are now at the school," he concluded.

Although not in attendance because of a prior commitment, Murillo, commander of the Columbian Army, was inducted next. Murillo was named to his current position June 15, 1990. Gonzalez and his wife have six children; Juan Manuel, Jose Hernan, Maria Claudia, Carlos Alberto, Ana Maria and Oscar Eduardo.

The final inductee was Villanueva, commander of the Peruvian Army. Commissioned in 1953, Villanueva and his wife have three children; Pilar, Madelaine and Marisol.

The ceremony was concluded with a reception at the Officer's Club.

Phenix City says 'let's be friends' to rangers

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

"We like it here! We love it here! We finally found a home! A home away from home," goes the familiar Army cadence.

For Fort Benning rangers, a "home away from home" can be theirs by participating in the Let's Be Friends Project, sponsored by the Military Affairs Committee of the Phenix City Chamber of Commerce.

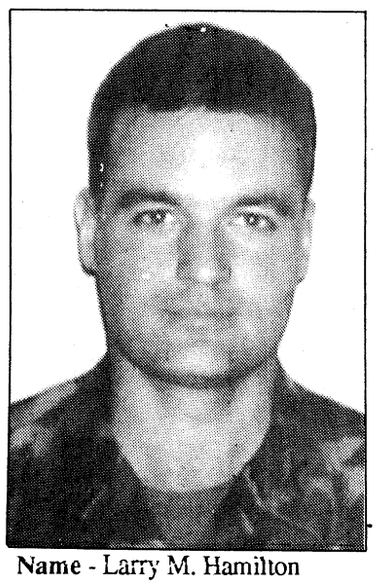
Through the project, citizens of Phenix City/Russell County can invite a ranger into their home during his off duty time to become part of the family, said Bill Spies, one of the project creators.

"We want folks to meet each other and for the soldiers to have good, wholesome activities to pursue in their off time," said Spies.

Spies, an Army veteran of 23 years, said the idea for the project came partly from his own experiences at Fort Riley, Kan., 22 years ago, where he became friends with some of the local residents.

"I still have friends that I write to and see at Fort Riley to this day," said Spies.

Spies emphasized that there will be no pressure on either party.



"There are no objectives, no requirements, just a social invitation for people to meet and hopefully establish lasting friendships," he said. "If the ranger and citizen meet and become friends, that's great. If they don't, we're not going to fuss."

The program is completely voluntary.

Soldiers and civilians who desire to participate will fill out a short biographical sketch. If a soldier reads a sketch and would like to meet that particular family, then the necessary steps will be taken to establish a meeting place.

Spies said the project is currently in the advanced planning stage. The Military Affairs Committee hopes to meet with the commanders and sergeants major of the Ranger Training Brigade and 75th Ranger Regiment to work out the final details on Tuesday and have a formal ceremony to kick off the project later this month.

Stack returns to Ness role

By JAY BOBBIN
Tribune Media Services

To the younger audience, Kevin Costner might be Eliot Ness, but try selling that to fans of one of early television's most popular series.

From 1959 to 1963, the crime drama "The Untouchables" had a very loyal following, ranking as ABC's second-highest-rated show (behind "The Real McCoys") for the 1960-61 season ... and also inspiring initial concerns about violence on the home screen. Though Costner appeared as real-life Prohibition crime-buster Ness in director Brian de Palma's 1987 movie remake, it was the stalwart Robert Stack who kept viewers tuning in weekly for the earlier version. Almost three decades after he last played it, the current "Unsolved Mysteries" host reprises the part that won him a 1959-60 Emmy in Sunday's aptly named NBC drama "The Return of Eliot Ness," set in the year that the government agent's longtime quarry Al Capone died (1947). With that mobster gone and Prohibition long over, Ness finds a new reason to pursue justice when a fellow "G-man" is killed under circumstances that leave the latter's reputation in doubt. The dead man's policeman son ("Dynasty" alumnus Jack Coleman) believes rumors about his father's corruption, so Ness decides to clear the victim's name, with assistance from the moll (Lisa Hartman) of another racketeer (Philip Bosco).

An Academy Award nominee for "Written on the Wind" (1956), Stack still had a thriving movie career when television beckoned. "I didn't want to get into a series in the first place," he maintains. "I was warned not to by the director of the first two-hour episode (of 'The Untouchables,' made as an installment of the 'Westinghouse Desilu Playhouse' anthology), so it was done with great trepidation." Stack then was reassured by executive producer Desi Arnaz, whom the actor credits with saying, "Baby, we gonna make the best telebision (sic) show in telebision." According to Stack, Arnaz tried to make the program "look like small motion pictures, and I was so ragged out at the end of four years, I had a five-year contract and just plain couldn't go a fifth one. It was a very, very difficult show to do, and it took me about a year-and-a-half to get myself back together. Everything worked except the human animal, which eventually falls apart, and that's what happened to half our crew. I turned down things like 'Mannix' and 'Hawaii Five-O,' and I wanted to get as far away from Eliot Ness as I could."

However, as the years went on, Stack kept receiving praise for his "Untouchables" work. He was told by French actor Jean-Paul Belmondo that Ness "was the protoypical hero for his generation," leading Stack to conclude, "This guy could really be fun to play again. I had done some other shows in the meantime, 'The Name of the Game' and 'Most Wanted' and 'Strike Force.' "

Disease from sandfly halts Gulf vets' blood donations

By J. Jan Hoffman
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Soldiers and civilians who were deployed to Southwest Asia have been told by the Defense Department not to donate blood at military blood donor centers because a rare disease was found in 22 soldiers who served in the Gulf War.

According to a release from the Army News Service, the disease, transmitteed by sandflies, has been discovered in the bone marrow of seven of the soldiers. The remaining soldiers have what officials consider a milder, more easily treated form of the disease.

"We don't want to spread panic, because this is not the kind of disorder that would warrant that," Brig. Gen. Ronald Blanck of the Army Surgeon General Office, said in the release. "The chances of a soldier who served in the Persian Gulf being infected are low."

Walter Reed Army Medical Center and Walter Reed Institute of Research discovered that the soldiers had been infected with a parasite that is transmitted by the bite of sandflies. The parasite is known as leishmania.

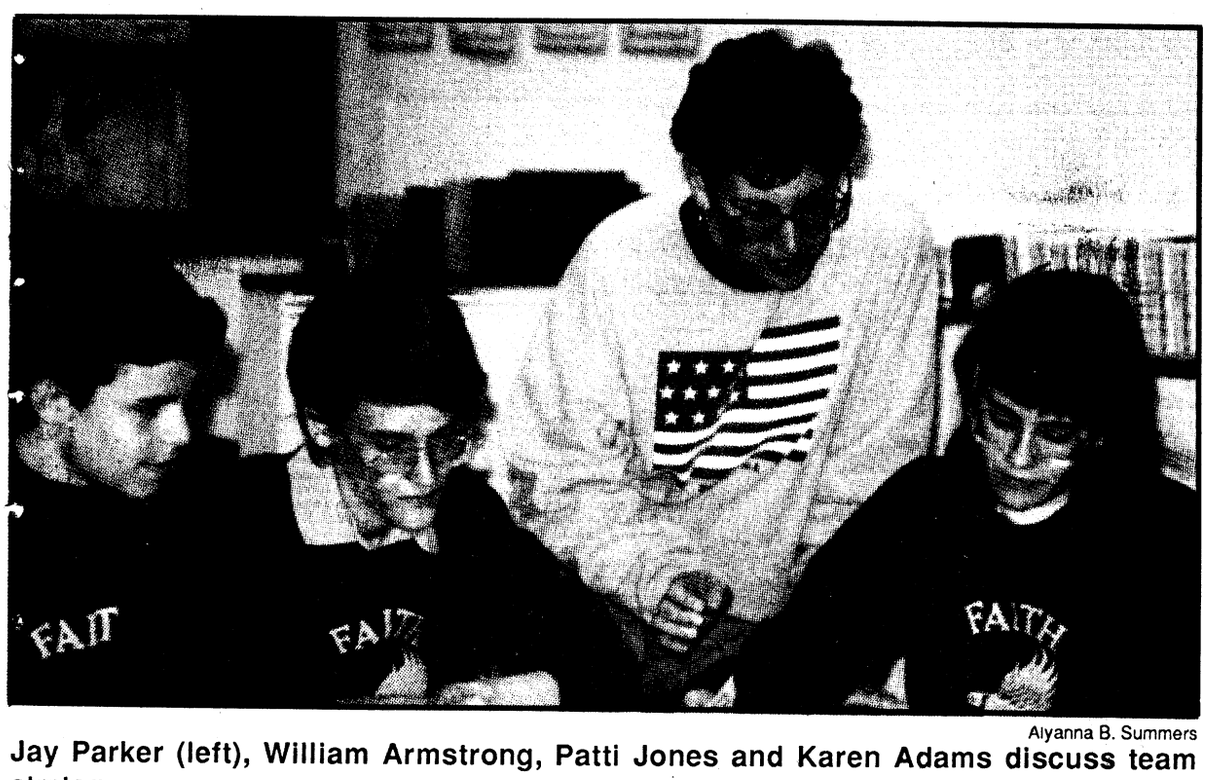
All of the blood supply at Martin Army Community Hospital has been checked to confirm that no blood donated by any soldier or civilian who served in Southwest Asia since Aug. 1, 1990, is on hand.

The Department of Defense has notified all military blood banks, all federal agencies, the American Red Cross, and other community blood collection centers of the disease.

According to Lt. Col. Dennis L. Hayden, chief, Department of Pathology at MACH, most of MACH's blood comes from trainees who are new in the Army. "We haven't been relying on people coming back from Saudi Arabia," he said.

To date, the 22 cases are the only ones known among the more than half million troops who deployed to the Gulf region. All persons who are determined to be infected by the parasite will be treated at Walter Reed.

According to Col. Charles Oster, chief of Infections Disease at Walter Reed and consultant to the Army surgeon general for infectious disease, there is a screening test available and all Defense Department physicians have been sent information on the test. However, it is not recommended that the test be given to all who served in the Gulf.



"Our concern is a clinical concern. We want to be able to identify and treat those patients who are ill with this disease," said Oster.

Patriotic run

Members of the Ranger Training Brigade carry the flag from Fort Mitchell National Cemetery to the Columbus Government Center during the American Flag Run, which began Nov. 1 at Arlington National Cemetery in Virginia and ended Monday in front of City Hall in Phenix City. The rangers handed over the flag to Fort Benning Commander Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, who ran the last leg of the 1,000-mile run.

Faith team wins competition

Fort Benning Schools

Faith Middle School's Head to Head team won in the junior high school division of Channel 9's Head to Head competition. Faith defeated Fort Junior High School, 130-105, in the championship finals that aired Saturday.

Members of the winning Faith team are William Armstrong, Ted Moore and Jay Parker; alternates were Rachael Novier and Karen Adams. The team coach is Patti Jones.

The Faith team competed and won in two preliminary competitions in order to compete in the championship round. The first round of the competition was against Daniels Junior High. Faith competed against Rothschild Junior High in the second round.

"The thing I'm going to remember most is all the preparation we went through," said Parker.

"The cameras and being on TV will be my strongest memory," said Moore, " Armstrong agreed. "The other thing I'll remember," said Armstrong, was the way Mrs. Jones got nervous for us before the show was taped."

The three team members expressed their appreciation for their coach. "She worked with us during her lunch time and her planning periods," said Parker. "She worked so hard for us; we couldn't have made it without her."

"The teachers and students who were still at school were waiting for us when we returned from the TV station after we won the championship," said Moore. "They had banners and they stood outside and cheered when we got off the bus."

"We're extremely proud of our Head to Head team, the team alternates and their coach," said Olin Harp, Faith School principal. "This team just seemed to click from the beginning. They all worked so well together. It was exciting for all of us to watch and be a part of their successes."

Infantry officer to go to 'ultimate high ground'

Barbara J. Ray
USAIC Public Affairs Office

An infantry officer is scheduled to carry a bayonet on his first trip into space when the Space Shuttle Atlantis lifts off Thursday from Kennedy Space Center, Fla.

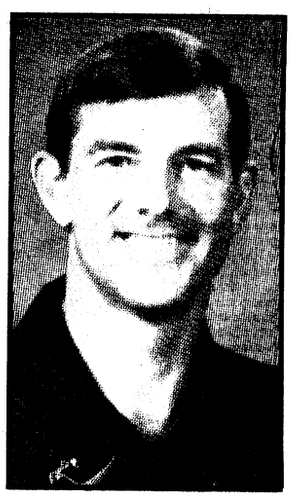
Lt. Col. James S. Voss will present the bayonet to Chief of Infantry Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White sometime next year.

When asked why he decided to honor the chief of infantry on his first mission, Voss said, "I'm going to the ultimate high ground and I've always considered the Fort Benning area my home."

Voss has never had a permanent party assignment to Fort Benning, but he has been here for the Infantry Officer Basic Course, Advanced Officer Course and Ranger School.

In addition to his ties to the Home of the Infantry, he graduated from Opelika High School, Opelika, Ala., and Auburn University, Auburn, Ala.

He was assigned to this space shuttle mission approximately 1 1/2 years ago. The 10-day mission, which is scheduled to land at Kennedy Space Center, is a dedicated Department of Defense flight and the primary payload is the Defense Support Program Satellite.



"As an astronaut mission specialist, I will deploy payloads and work with various other experiments," said Voss.

This mission is a goal he has worked toward since 1978 when the National Aeronautics and Space Administration started seeking Army astronaut candidates. Voss was a platoon leader in Germany then and said, "I didn't feel I was qualified at the time, but I applied and kept applying until I was selected in 1987. "

According to Voss, only eight Army astronauts have been selected and he was the fifth one. Of the eight selected, six are currently serving.

To become more qualified, Voss taught for three years in the Department of Mechanics at the U.S. Military Academy, West Point, N.Y., and completed the U.S. Naval Test Pilot School, Patuxant River Naval Air Station, Md., and the Armed Forces Staff College, Norfolk, Va. He was assigned to the U.S. Army Aviation Engineering Flight Activity, Fort Rucker, Ala., as a flight test engineer and research and development coordinator.

In November 1984 he began working at the Johnson Space Center, Houston, as a vehicle integration test engineer. He supported shuttle and payload testing at the Kennedy Space Center for four space shuttle flights.

James S. Voss

After his selection as an astronaut candidate, Voss completed a one-year training and evaluation program, which qualified him for assignment as a mission specialist on space shuttle flights.

According to Voss, the NASA training was "a lot like military training," it was done at an individual and unit level. He explained that he would spend three to five years assigned to a crew and that there are five to seven people on a crew training specifically for their mission.

Until July 1989 when he was assigned to his current mission, he worked as a flight crew representative in the area of shuttle safety and communications.

Voss and his wife, Suzan, have a daughter, Kristie, age 12.

Uniform policy in effect

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

A warning message has come from Fort Benning's command group:

Don't get caught in your Battle Dress Uniform or other utility uniforms off post in unauthorized areas or after duty hours.

Policy Memorandum 91-18 states that soldiers will not be seen off post in utility uniforms, other than for a quick meal at a fast-food restaurant, getting gas or doing basic grocery shopping on their way home after the duty day or during their lunch break.

The policy letter, as well as Army Regulation 670-1, reflects that uniforms will not be worn at any other type of establishment other than those described above. Off-limit areas during duty hours include any business that sells distilled spirits (any type of alcohol, beer not included).

A soldier may not drink alcohol at any time during duty hours or any off-duty hours while in a utility uniform.

Authorized uniforms for off-post wear include the Army Green Uniform (all versions), the Army Blue Uniform, and all other semi-formal and formal uniforms may be worn off post at any time.

Smoke, ash from fires cause concern on post

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The heavy smoke and ash that hung over portions of Fort Benning Wednesday and Thursday were the result of an off-post fire, according to a Directorate of Engineering and Housing official.

Chris Dunn, chief of Natural Resources Management Branch, DEH, said the fire occurred north of the post in Columbus.

Dunn also said that there have been some other fires on post, but there is no need for concern.

"We've had quite a few wildfires that were caused by dry weather," he said. But, there is no need for alarm, he said.

James Floyd, Fort Benning's assistant fire chief, said spot fires are normal for this time of year.

45 separated in RIF

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Reduction in force actions affecting employees took effect this week.

Fort Benning Directorate of Civilian Personnel officials said a total of 331 Fort Benning employees were affected by the reduction. Of that number, 45 were actually separated between Aug. 30 and Nov. 9; 155 were reassigned to other positions, 106 were changed to lower-graded positions in offices on post, and normal attrition, such as retirements, accounted for the remainder.

Originally, Fort Benning officials expected the reduction might affect 379 employees, with as many as 120 being separated.

All employees involved in the action were individually counseled regarding their employment status, entitlement to other jobs, pay retention or adjustment, placement assistance at other federal agencies and private industry and retirement eligibility, according to officials.

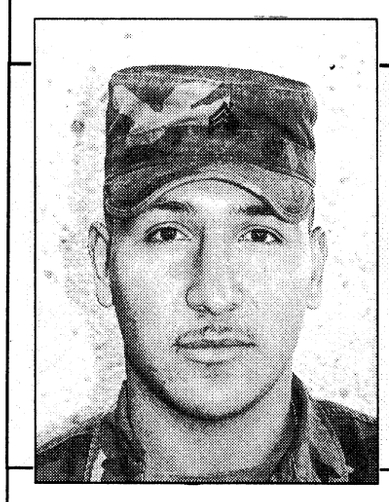
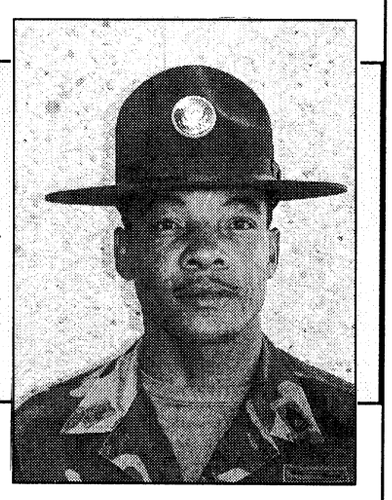
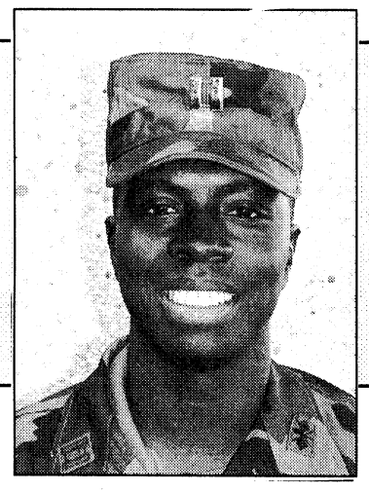
VARIOUS VOICES



What can you, as an individual, do to help enforce post policy regarding the proper wearing of the duty uniform while off post?



1st Lt. Rufus Smith, Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery – "You need to get the word out to soldiers through the chain of command regularly. Once it's out, address the situation in the best manner."



Sgt. 1st Class Joanna L. Bennett, 608th Ordnance Company – "I would walk up to the individual and tell him he was wearing an improper uniform."

Sgt. Robert Villalpando, Company A, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment – "I would make an on-the-spot correction. If you catch them again, find out their chain of command and report them."

Sgt. 1st Class Roy Evans, Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, Henry Caro Non-commissioned Officer Academy – "I would ask if he was aware of the post policy on wearing of the uniform off post. If he is aware of it, I would take his name and call his first sergeant. If not, I would explain it to him and ask him to leave the store."

Capt. Joe Robinson, Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery – "If I were a first line supervisor, I would get my troops together and explain the policy to them. If they got caught violating the policy after that, they would have to (suffer) the consequences. They are all volunteers. The policy is explicit and is for the benefit of the soldiers."

Lt. Col. June Goyne, U.S. Army Medical Department Activity – "I would identify myself and ask if they were aware of the post policy and make them aware of it. I would advise wider distribution of the policy. If something is not constantly emphasized, it tends to be forgotten. The policy needs more emphasis on post."

CFC contributions help soldiers

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

COMMENTARY

The Combined Federal Campaign is nearly over. And frankly, we at Fort Benning aren't doing very well this year.

After all the benefits our soldiers and family members got from CFC, Army Emergency Relief and American Red Cross during Desert Shield and Desert Storm, you'd think people would be beating the doors down to contribute.

Aside from AER, CFC is the only other time we're asked to donate to charitable organizations. And no one can question the good done by charities under its umbrella and there are a lot.

Also, the beautiful thing about it, is you're the one who decides where your money goes.

If you want it all to stay on post and help with youth activities, scouts, ACS, then you so note on your donation card.

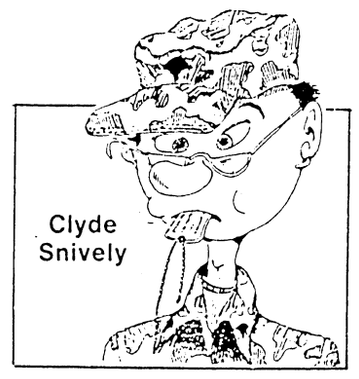
If you want to help fight cancer, or lung disease, you can target your money for Cancer Society or the Lung Association.

If you want to help children in third world countries, American Indians, people with arthritis, there are charities covered by CFC.

Also, if you're into the environment, want to save the trees in Brazil, preserve the ozone layer, or even defend animal rights, again, CFC has charities for you to designate your money to.

You might even want to help Magic Johnson and donate your money to AIDS.

Or, you might be a curmudgeon like me and have definite thoughts about certain organizations and not want to contribute to them. Again, designate your money to an organization that does things you like.



Further, if you want to make sure your money is well spent by the people you donate to, all you need do is go down the list and see what percentage is used for administration and fund raising.

These figures range from less than 2 percent to nearly 50 percent.

What surprises me about CFC are who the donors are.

I figured the big bucks civilians and officers would be leading the way in this department.

A canvasser I talked to said it doesn't necessarily work that way. He noted he got some hefty donations from officers and civilians, but also some who he thought could really afford it, turned him down flat.

On the other hand, he noted, soldiers deeply in debt and struggling to just make it through the month, used the pay roll deduction plan.

"A $10 a month deduction won't really break a person's pocket book, but it amounts to $120 a year and that can do some charity a lot of good," he said.

I nodded in agreement as I made a mental note to switch to payroll deduction and up the ante when I got around to turning in my pledge.

"The other thing," he noted, "is people tend to be dragging their feet. Either money's not being turned in, or just not being donated, I don't know, but we're a lot slower this year than last year when most our soldiers were either in Saudi Arabia or on their way."

I told myself to run, not walk, to my desk and pull out my contribution and get it turned in, as soon as possible.

Heading back to the office I passed a bus load of soldiers and their families who'd just come in from Germany.

I wondered how they'd get along until they found a place to live, until their household goods got here, until their cars arrived in port and once they arrived, how they could get them.

I could imagine a lot of expense for them—living in guest quarters, hotels, apartments, needing taxi service, having to pay to get clothes cleaned.

Maybe, just maybe, I could add another dollar or so a month to my donation, I decided, as I got on the elevator at Building 4, happy that me and my family weren't having to go through the same drill those soldiers and families were facing.

Post soldiers can depend on AFDCB

The Armed Forces Disciplinary Control Board's mission is to advise and make recommendations to the commanding general on matters concerning the elimination of crime or other conditions may negatively affect the health, safety, morals, welfare, morale or discipline of armed forces personnel.

The board receives and takes appropriate action on reports of conditions relating to any of the following: Lack of discipline, prostitution, venereal disease, liquor violations, racial and other discriminatory practices, alcohol and drug abuse, drug abuse paraphernalia, illicit gambling, unfair commercial or consumer practices and other undesirable conditions that may adversely affect members of the military or their families.

The president of the board is the post provost marshal. The president of the board, along with representatives from the U.S. Naval Reserve Center, Preventive Medicine, CID and the 2853 Security Police, Robins Air Force Base, are the voting members of the board.

The AFDCB also has representatives from the following areas: Military Police, Staff Judge Advocate, Columbus Police Department, Public Affairs Office, Directorate of Engineering & Housing, Army Community Services, Directorate of Community Activities and the Better Business Bureau.

It is the AFDCB's responsibility to ensure that procedures are established and that off limits restrictions are made known and applicable to all armed forces personnel who may frequent the area in question.

An "off limits" area is defined as any vehicle, conveyance place, structure, building or area prohibited to military member to use, ride, visit or enter during the period in which it may be declared off limits.

Military personnel are prohibited from entering establishments or areas declared off limits in accordance with Army Regulation 190-24. violations may subject the individual to disciplinary action under the Uniformed Code of Military Justice.

If soldiers and family members have complaints or feel they were treated unfairly or exposed to any of the above listed conditions, they should contact the installation Staff Judge Advocate's Legal Assistance Office. Legal assistance personnel will help register a complaint with both the AFDCB and the Better Business Bureau, which includes the soldier or a family member submitting a written complaint to the president of the board.

Members of the Provost Marshal Office will investigate the complaint and present the case at the next AFDCB meeting. Both the complainant and the persons/business the complaint is about have the option of appearing before the board; this is all done by letters of invitation.

The facts will be presented and the five voting members will vote whether the facility/business in question be placed off limits.

True accounts give witness to seat belt saving lives

Army News Service

In 1983, a safety officer at Fort Eustis, Va., had read all the statistics about the benefits of using seat belts, but he had read or heard very little personal testimony that supported the statistics.

The desire to hear stories from people who had lived through accidents because they wore seat belts, led to the "I Survived With Seat Belts" program at Fort Eustis.

"We asked people going through the defensive driving course if they had experienced vehicle accidents and who may or may not have worn seat belts, if they would write down their stories for us," said Chuck Welcher, the safety officer who is now Transportation Branch safety director at Fort Eustis.

"People who contributed their stories were given "I Survived" T-shirts.

Another reason for beginning the program, was to add positive reinforcement to mandatory seat belt use, according to Welcher.

"We needed people to concentrate on positive aspects."

In the years since the program started, hundreds of stories have been collected. They are from soldiers and civilian employees, and some of the incidents occurred before enlistment or employment with the Army.

A specialist stationed at Fort Carson, Colo., was exiting the interstate near the post. He and his wife in the front seat were belted, and his daughter was strapped to a car seat in back. He was rear-ended by a drunk soldier going over 50 miles per hour. The back seat was pushed up against the front seat, but the baby only received a broken leg. His wife had a sprained neck and the soldier was uninjured.

"The survival stories really remove the incidents from the realm of statistics," Welcher said. "The people in this story certainly didn't expect to be in the situations they were. But, because they wore restraints, they lived through them relatively unharmed."

PM cards out, new system in

DEH implements new plan to improve post housing preventive maintenance schedules

Directorate of Engineering and Housing

Beginning Dec. 2, the Directorate of Engineering and Housing will change the way it performs preventive maintenance on family housing quarters and troop billets on main post.

Family housing quarters will stop using the PM card system and start using a scheduled cyclic preventive maintenance program that conforms to Army Regulation 420-22. Family housing quarters in the Davis Hill/Bouton Heights area are the exception because a contractor performs preventative maintenance.

"All buildings in the Kelley Hill, Sand Hill and Harmony Church areas have recently initiated the program, and it is working well," said Craig Taylor, chief of Buildings and Structures Branch, DEH.

The PM card system is being changed in order to make a fair distribution of the time available for the performance of routine maintenance on family housing units.

"It is anticipated that the workforce can be more productive and improve service by reducing the amount of driving time required under the PM card system," said Taylor.

The new cyclic maintenance program is designed to perform all routine preventive maintenance work on quarters every 180 days.

"It is hoped that this frequency can be increased to three times a year as the work force becomes more experienced," he said. The foreman of the Preventive Maintenance Section, Sherman Callaham, will develop a tentative schedule for all quarters.

The schedule will be given to all mayors and occupants by written notices and followed up by a telephonic confirmation call. Residents may choose a morning appointment, 8 to 11:30 a.m., or an afternoon appointment, 12:45 to 4 p.m.

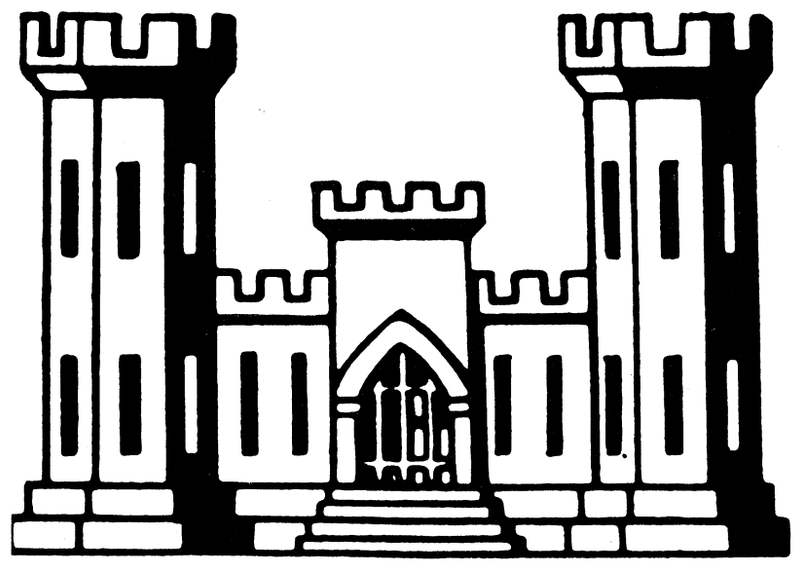
During the visit, the maintenance workers will go through a complete checklist that covers all building components and systems in the quarters. The purpose of the cyclic maintenance program is to correct items at an early state of repair in order to prevent more costly repairs to the government at a later date. This will ensure that no quarters go without maintenance for a prolonged period of time.

Col. Patrick D. J. Kenny, director of DEH said, "I am confident this system will provide better service to all residents."

According to Kenny, it is important that only real emergency service orders be called in to the work order desk and that all residents use the U-Do-It center whenever possible.

"Without this cooperation, DEH workers will be pulled off scheduled work assignments, reducing the effectiveness of the PM system," said Kenny.

"Residents should make every effort to defer routine repair items to the next scheduled cyclic maintenance appointment," said Taylor.



In the case of an emergency, call the Work Order Section at 545-2135; requests will be expedited based on need and priority. Emergency type items include those that affect the safety, health, security and welfare of the occupants as well as items that will cause excessive damage to the facilities if not corrected expeditiously.

According to Taylor, there may be some scheduling conflicts in the beginning. If an unexpected problem occurs, notify the Preventive Maintenance Section, 545-2607 or 545-4326 to reschedule.

"It is imperative that this work be accomplished and that schedules have minimum deviations," said Taylor.

In the event that a household has two working spouses and it is difficult to schedule the quarters during normal duty hours, an effort will be made to perform the work at a more convenient time. These requests will be considered exceptions and not the rule.

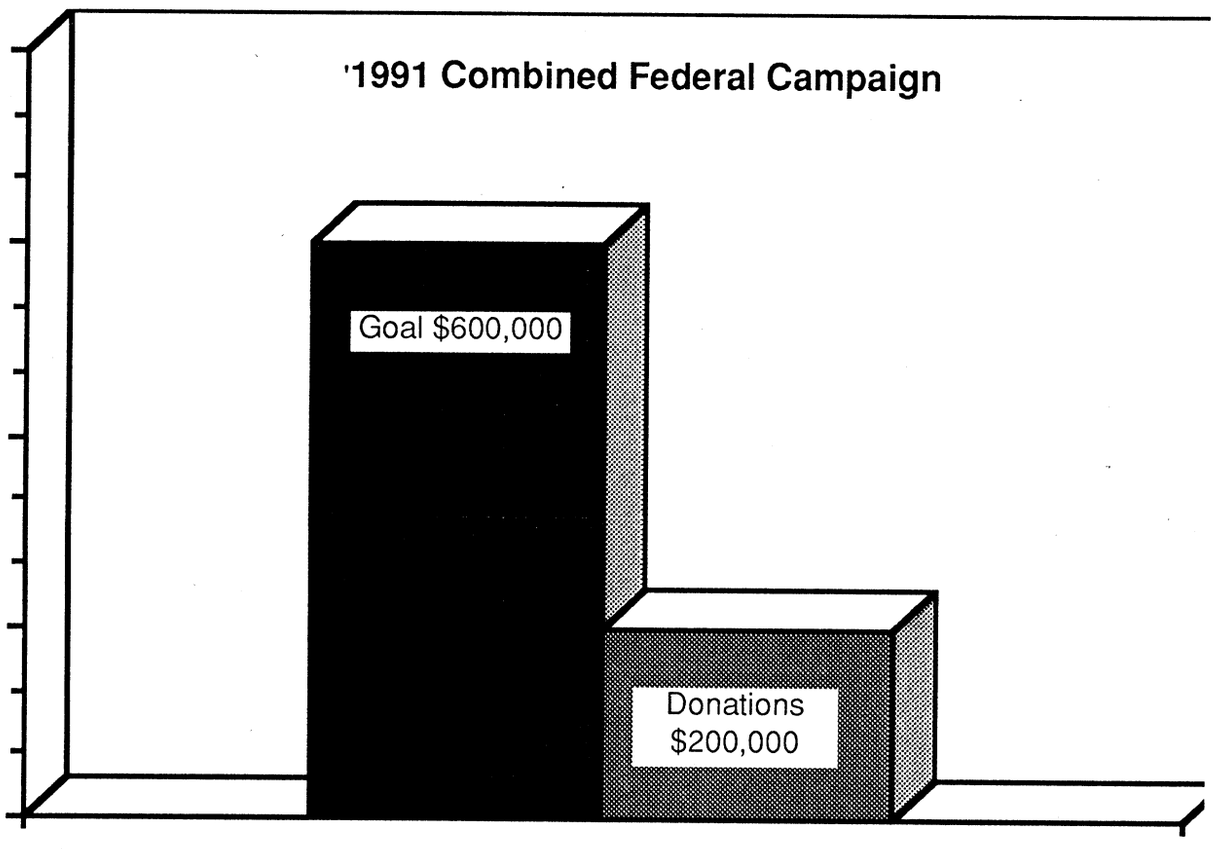
CFC at 33 percent of goal for '91 campaign

Coordinator urges everyone to turn in donations as soon as possible

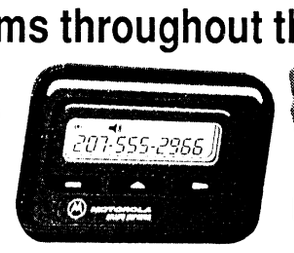
By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet



With a goal of $600,000, the Combined Federal Campaign under way at Fort Benning had donations of $200,000 as of Wednesday.

According to Cathy White, coordinator for the CFC Campaign on post, this is about 33 percent of the goal.

White encouraged those who have collected the donations at the units to turn in their pledges and checks as soon as possible.



The CFC Campaign is the local part of the United Way drive. This year for the first time, a newly-formed association called the Soldier and Family Support Association is serving as the parent organization for the Fort Benning agencies who will benefit from CFC funds, according to White.

"This is a once a year appeal to the soldiers and civilians," according to Brian Smith, marketing director for the Directorate of Community Activities. "Regardless of what they select on the donor designation form, we encourage everyone to give generously to the 1991 CFC Campaign."

By Alyanna B. Summers
Bayonet staff writer

A commemorative bronze plaque honoring the 1st Infantry Division out of Fort Riley, Kan., and its participation in Operation Desert Storm was dedicated Nov. 8 at 11 a.m. at the National Infantry Museum.

The plaque is the newest addition to the museum's memorial to the "Big Red One." The other plaques remember the unit's contribuion during World Wars I and II and the Vietnam War.

The Big Red One memorial was dedicated at the museum March 15.

Retired Maj. Gen. Albert H. Smith Jr. was the guest speaker for the occasion. Smith served with the 1st Infantry Division through eight campaigns in World War II and as aassistant and acting division commander in Vietnam.

Smith retired after 33 years of Army service but continues to work with senior Army officials and Big Red One commanders on special historical projects.

Col. Anthony Moreno, commander of the division's 2nd Brigade and Command Sgt. Maj. Timothy Sumpter of 2nd Battalion, 16th Infantry Regiment, were on hand to assist Smith in unveiling the plaque and placing a wreath at the memorial.

"These soldiers did well. They were dedicated and showed they had what it took," said Moreno.

Fort Valley to compete against Albany State in classic

The Fort Valley State Wildcats and the Albany State Golden Rams are gearing up to quench their thirst at the fountain, the Second Annual Fountain City Classic, in the Columbus Memorial Stadium, Saturday at 2 p.m. The gridiron clash, sponsored by Coca-Cola USA, is expected to attract 15,000 fans to witness a new twist on what is considered one of the biggest and oldest football rivalries in south Georgia.

This year's contest is the second of what will become an annual event in the city of Columbus. While the rivalry between the two teams spans more than half a century, coordinators moved the game last year to Columbus, a regional center, to make it a weekend event. Albany State won last year's first Classic by a lopsided score of 35-0. This year, Fort Valley is out for revenge.

An added attraction for FCC II is Black Entertainment Television. In only its second year, the FCC II will be televised live on BET with a later prime time replay. BET is the number one vehicle in bringing black college sports to the nation, according to officials.

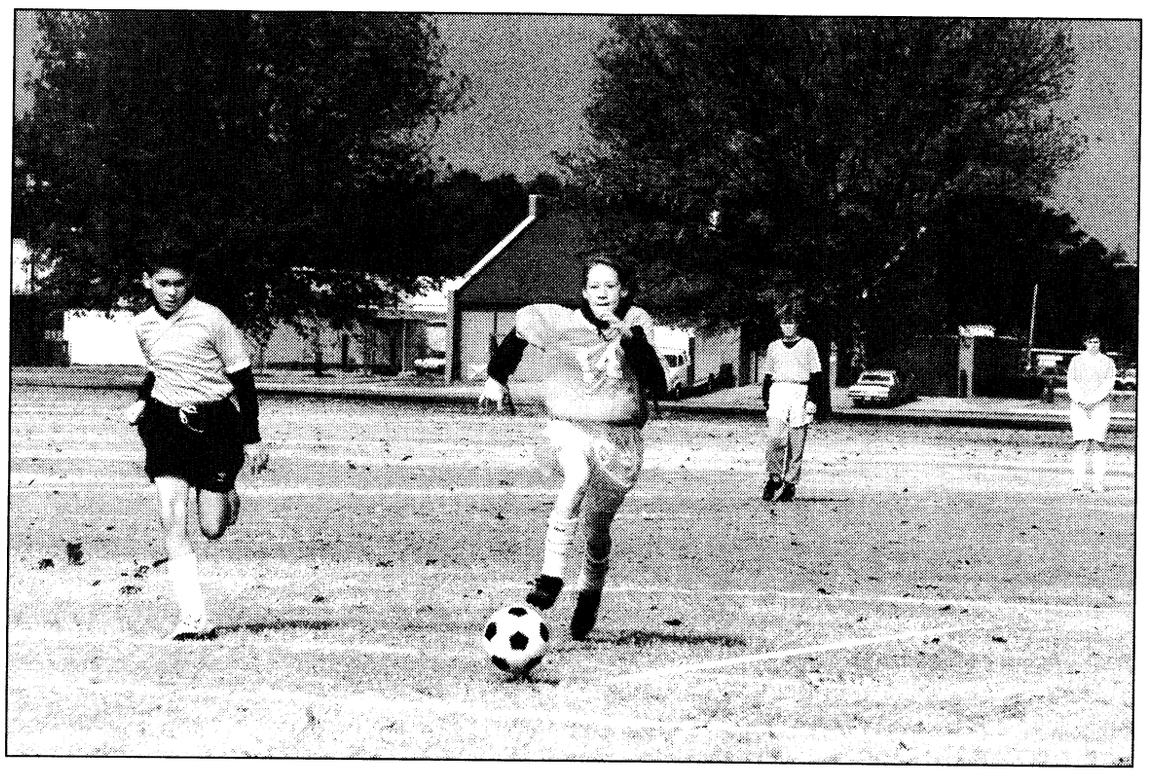
"It makes great business sense to bring the game to Columbus," said State Rep. Calvin Smyre, Fountain City Classic, Inc., chairman. "There are a lot of alumni located in and around Columbus and they are loyal football fans. We are also proud and pleased that BET is broadcasting the game. Having BET and a week of Classic events makes this more than just a football game, its a gathering."

Ted Pooler, Classic Host Committee chairman, said that "with proceeds going to the schools, more funds can be generated from a larger crowd in atendance at a larger facility. It's a win-win situation for the city and the schools."

Fort Valley, coached by 12-year veteran Douglas Porter, has dominated the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Conference over the past decade with four conference championships and three NCAA playoffs. Albany State, led by coach Hampton Smith, now in his 15th season, also has enjoyed the SIAC crown in four conference championships in the 1980s.

"The Fountain City Classic has the potential to become one of the most popular college events in Georgia," said Adrian Green, manager, Community Affairs, Coca-Cola USA. "We are excited about being a part of a great football tradition between two great historic black institutions."

An alumni reception will be at the Columbus Hilton Hotel today. After the game Saturday, there will be a post-game FCC extravaganza party at the Columbus Trade Center beginning at 9 p.m., where fans can enjoy food, fun, fellowship and entertainment.



In addition to the Fountain City Classic, Coca-Cola USA also sponsors the SIAC, the Southwestern and Mid-Eastern athletic conferences and the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association-the country's four historically Black collegiate athletic conferences.

Ticket prices: advance, $10 adult and $6-children, day of game $12-adult and $8-children.

Ticket outlets: A.J. McClung YMCA, MLK Jr. Blvd.; Godfather's Pizza, Airport Thruway, Hatties Florist, Buena Vista Rd.; Music Shack, Brown Ave., Sol and Harry, Broadway; Little Joe's, 310 6th Ave., Booth Drugs, Phenix City, Ala.

The Silver Wings of Fort Benning will perform an Airborne/Parachute demonstration at 1:45 p.m.

Pre-game ceremonies are set for 1:30 p.m.

Big Bucks less wary due to rut

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

If your goal as a hunter is to bag that big buck now is the time to be in the woods. With the onset of the rut the bigger and more elusive bucks become less wary during this period of time.

If you have scouted your area already and have seen signs of a big buck get in early and stay late sooner or later he is going to show up looking for a mate. The bucks have only one thing on their minds at this time so you should be able to get a good shot when he shows up.

These hunters were in the right spot for the big bucks.

M and M Deer Processing Stands Behind Community

By Kimberly Wood

You may have heard about the 2nd Annual Big Deer contest going on right now, but you may not have heard much about who is responsible for it. M and M Deer Processing and Taxidermist has been in business over 16 years and is an avid supporter of the Fort Benning/Columbus community.

M and M Deer Processing and Taxidermist located off Macon Road on Elm Drive.

Last year M and M donated 250lbs of meat to the House of Mercy in Columbus. In the past several years they donated hats and t-shirts to the Children's Foundation of Fort Benning. This year they have organized their 2nd Annual Big Deer contest which will benefit the Eastern Little League. Participants will be judged in three categories: Big Buck-Boone and Crockett scoring, Big Buck-field dress weight, and Big Doe-field dress weight. There is over $3,000 worth of prizes including guns, equipment and mounts. The contest will last through Feb. 15, 1992, and judging decisions will be made by M and M.

Not only is M and M a charitable organization, they also provide a valuable service to area hunters. Basically they are a custom cut shop for wild game processing. They will skin, wash and cut your game in a state-inspected cutting room for as low as $32. Your meat will be neatly packaged in a cellophane tray with double wrapping and a label (like it came from the grocery store). It will be kept in a freezer basket for you to pick up at your convenience. M and M processes your meat with no additives and it is actually cut by professionals from food stores such as Lewis Jones and Winn Dixie.

For complete one-stop service, M and M will have your game mounted if you like. They refer to three area taxidermists who have over 40 years of experience. M and M will deliver and order your mount for you, so you only have to drop off your carcass at one location.

At M and M your satisfaction is guaranteed or you do not have to pay for services. Owner Jay Willard says, "Customer satisfaction has got to be the most important thing." M and M stands behind their work and as a result they have several "old timers" from Fort Benning who have been coming back regularly for over ten years.

You can also receive advice from an experienced local hunter at M and M. They will teach field dressing and other techniques to new hunters at no extra cost. Willard says, "It is best for hunters to field dress their deer while they're still in the woods. That way it prevents bacteria from infesting your meat." He also says bringing along a rope, a sling and some water is helpful for a hunter to prepare their deer.

So when you set out to find a deer this season, be sure to register for M and M's 2nd Annual Big Deer contest. You will be helping out the community and getting trustworthy, home-town service at the same time. M and M Deer Processing and Taxidermist is open seven days a week from 9 a.m.- "until the job gets done." They are located at 2248 Elm Drive, off Macon Road (Exit 4 off I-185).

Scouting for Food

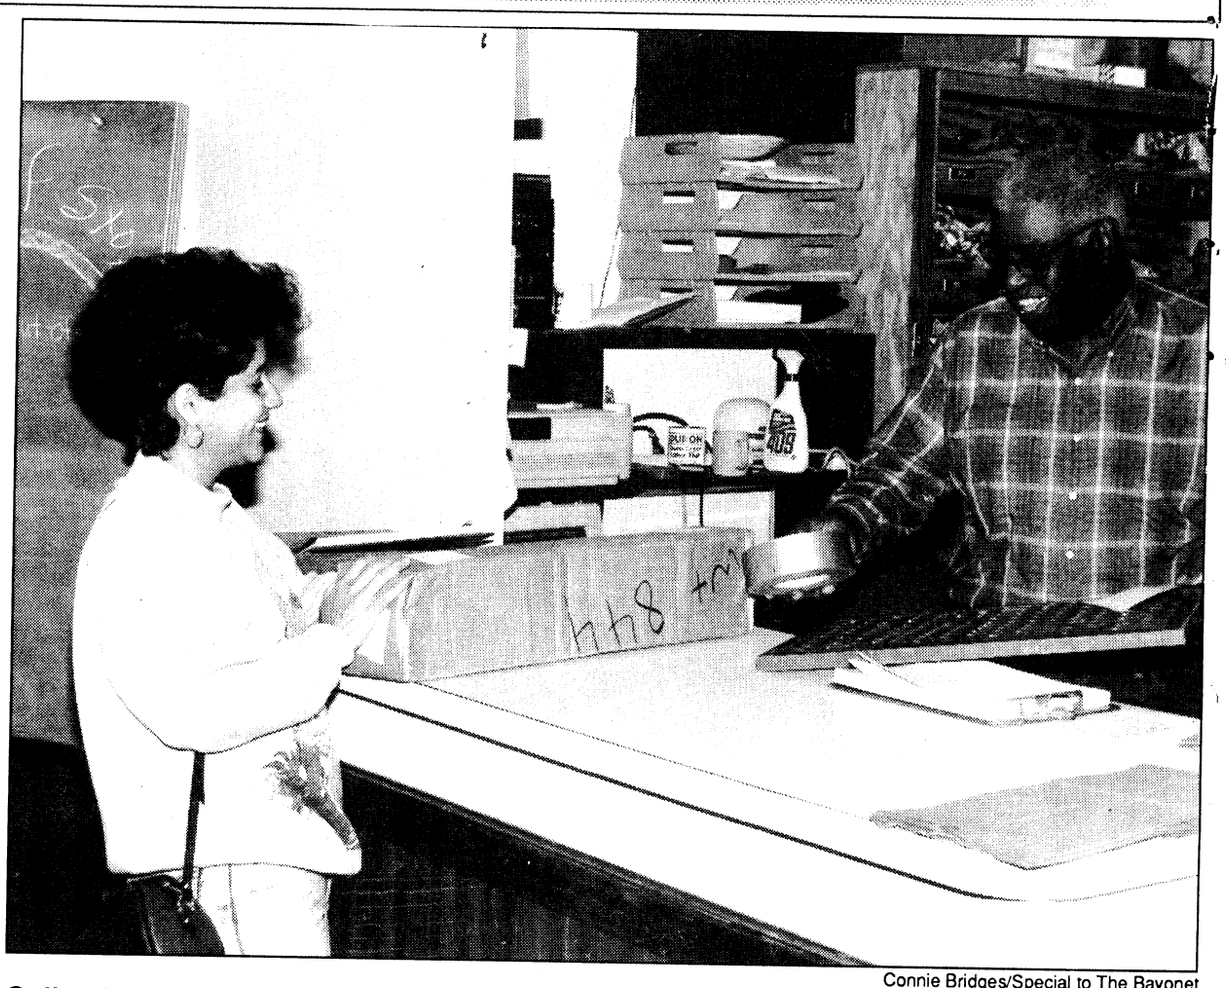
5,000 Boy Scout members to take part in national food drive

Chattahooche Council, Boy Scouts of America

Scouts in Columbus will begin and end their food drive this weekend as 5,000 members of the Chattahoochee Council of the Boy Scouts of America participate in the Scouting for Food national food drive. On Saturday, Boy Scouts, Cub Scouts and Explorers will go door-to-door, picking up bags of food donated for the hungry.

Different from last year's drive which encompassed two Saturdays, this year's drive will only be conducted on Nov. 23 with scouts both delivering the bags and picking them up on the same day. This way people won't have a week's time to forget and can fill the bags immediately.

"Scouting for Food is a dramatic and practical way to combat hunger. It is action, not words," said Tommy Sands, chairman of Scouting for Food. Sands hopes that people will feel the spirit of giving and help their neighbors by making sure they won't go hungry.



The scouts have asked that the donations be placed on front porches by 9 a.m., according to representatives of Chattahoochee Council. Anyone who did not receive a bag can still donate by calling the council at 327-2634 or by dropping off donations at the collection points at Reese Road Elemetary, Wynnton Elementary, Blanchard Elementary and Army Community Services in Fort Benning.

Sands said that the foods that are most needed are nutritional items such as canned baby formula, soup, chili, tuna fish, meats and vegtables.

Collected items will be taken to Interfaith Food Bank, Asbury United Methodist Church Food Locker and Lumpkin United Methodist Church Food Locker where they will be marked as donated, sorted and delivered to food banks serving Columbus and Fort Benning.

The Boy Scouts of America collected a combined total of 217 million cans of food nationally in 1988, 1989 and 1990. Chattahoochee Council collected 89,000 cans last year.

The Boy Scouts of America, with 4.3 million youth members and more than 1 million adult volunteers, is one of the nation's largest youth development organizations.

Self Help takes on major role

Director says cutbacks may have impact on housing maintenance

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Fort Benning's Self Help and U-Do-It Programs are going to become more integral to the upkeep of posts as the military adapts to budget cutbacks, according to Dominick DeCarlo of the Directorate of Engineering and Housing.

Self-help programs are those designed to take care of the basic maintenance and repair of any facility on post.

U-Do-It programs involve the upgrading of facilities on post to go beyond a normal repair mode and enhance them to today's standard of living.

On a regular basis, DeCarlo said that DEH holds classes to instruct post residents on how to use these offerings.

"Family Self Help" is a two-hour class that is given weekly by appointment. All residents on post are expected to attend one of these in order to know their responsibilities with regard to the quarters they occupy.

DeCarlo said that Fort Benning has 4,082 sets of quarters with 55 different styles of dwelling. In addition, there are 814 of these that were built in the 1970s and have different maintenance arrangements than the others.

He noted that because the rules vary from installation to installation (since the missions of each post vary) it is important for all residents to attend the "Family Self Help" whether they've lived in quarters before or not. It is the best way to learn the local regulations on everything ranging from smoke alarms, trash collection, and pet disease control, to phones, fences and preventative maintenance.

There is also a "Building Occupant" self-help class that is for administrative staff, both military and civilian, to learn the basic paperwork that is needed to get maintenance and repair projects accomplished. It is offered by demand, about two to three times per month.

For the soldiers, a "Repair and Utilities" self-help class is available too. It is mandatory for two persons from each company to be certified in this knowledge of hands-on training with regard to minor repairs and construction in offices and barracks.

To accomplish self-help projects DEH has a store with more than 700 line items that may be obtained for use in fixing up post facilities by any person certified through these classes.

The store also has booklets for step-by-step instructions on some repair projects.

DeCarlo said about 30,000 customers per year use this store, and they are looking into expanding space to provide for more services.

Hours are Tuesday through Friday 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Saturday 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The customer service area also has loaner items for repair projects, such as ladders, scaffolding and yard tools.

In the family housing areas, most of the projects involve self-help jobs like painting and taking care of the exterior grounds.

In the offices and barracks, U-Do-It requests for upgrading are approved based upon the capabilities of the project person, as well as a valid signature card from a self-help class. Also, the job must be within the unit's mission requirements, something that can be accomplished through U-Do-It or augmented through the DEH shops and technicians must be allowed to make spot checks for quality control.

DeCarlo said as the Army and its staff gets smaller, the individual will have to do more for himself, and he sees the mission of his office growing.

Persons requiring any of these classes can call 545-1121 or 545-4207.

SOA donates to Santa's Castle

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

The holiday season is quickly approaching and parents are out scouring the shopping malls in search of toys. But these current economic times have forced some parents to put needs before luxuries, at the expense of gifts.

However, there is an alternative for Fort Benning families who are trying to make ends meet.

Santa's Castle is an all-volunteer organization located at Soldiers Plaza, building 2639, whose sole purpose is to collect and, if necessary, buy toys to ensure every child at Fort Benning has something to unwrap Christmas morning.

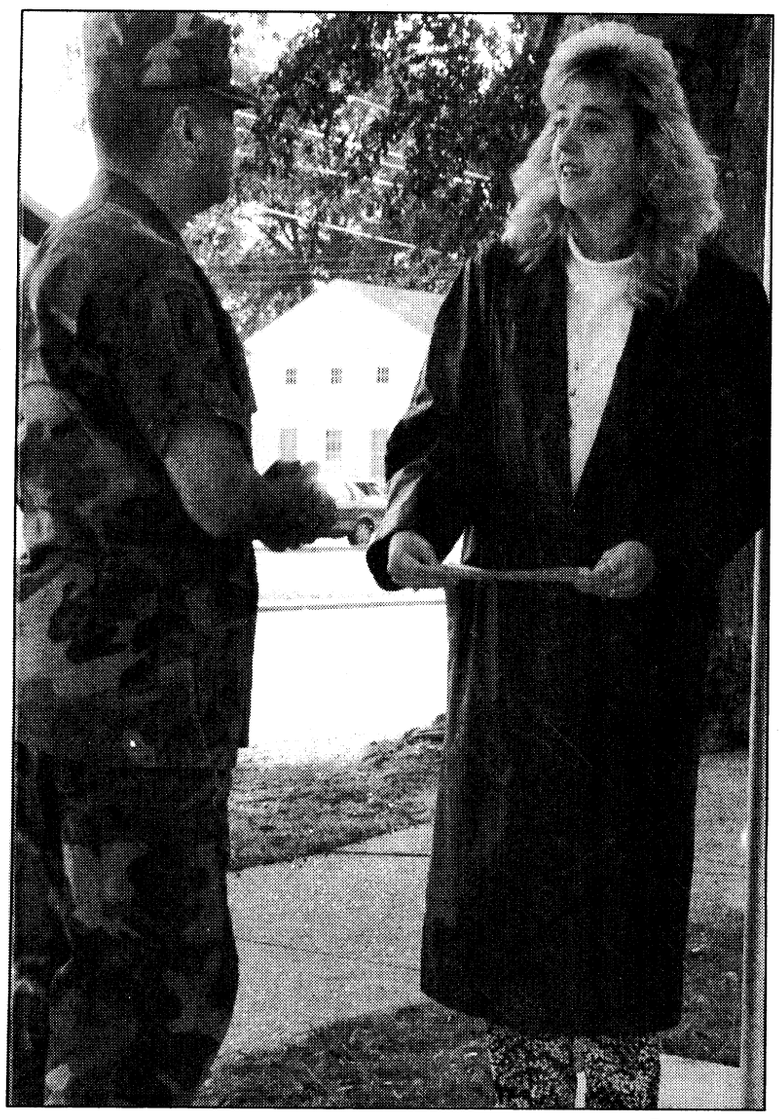
According to Sharon Patton, chairwoman for Santa's Castle, an open house held Oct. 7 put the word out to company commanders, sergeants major and first sergeants about the organizations referral service.

The referral service connects Santa's Castle with families identified by first sergeants as those in need of help. A referral slip is forwarded to Santa's Castle and a subsequent letter is sent to the family telling them when they can pick out toys. Patton estimates seven toys per child will be available.

In addition to the referral service, which gives parents a confidential way of obtaining toys from Santa's Castle, drop boxes are located at the Main PX and Santa's Castle for new or used toys which will be given away.

Although the organization will accept used toys, Patton stressed they must be in working condition.

Santa's Castle is not allowed to officially ask for donations, but funds donated to purchase toys is another way to support their toy drive.



Recently, in an effort to support the organization, Command Sgt. Maj. Carlos E. Legoas, command sergeant major for the School of the Americas, presented Patton with with a check on behalf of SOA for $154.50.

"SOA takes care of their community. These soldiers care and they make a difference," Patton said.

Toys and games have also been donated by many of the wives clubs on post.

According to Patton, the first day of shopping at the castle will be Dec. 2.

For more information, call Santa's Castle at 545-1233.

McBride kindergarten student, Amber Terry, found it nearly impossible to overlook the R-Day efforts of the students at McBride School Nov. 7. McBride School and the other seven Fort Benning schools served as collection centers for last year's phone books that are now to be recycled as part of the R-Day activities.

HCF honors teacher

Fort Benning Schools

Mary Barnette, eighth grade history teacher at Faith Middle School, was recently honored by the Historic Columbus Foundation. This award was given to Barnette for award-winning work in the field of heritage education. The award was presented at the foundation's annual meeting which was Nov. 5.

Barnette has been teaching at Faith Middle School since 1979. In addition to teaching eighth grade history, she has also been the coach of Faith's History Club for the past five years. Her students have researched several local personalities and personalities from elsewhere in Georgia during the years that they have submitted History Club projects.

These projects have consistenly been rated superior at state and national History Day competitions. One of last year's projects was a report on Helen Augusta Howard from Columbus who started the women's movement in Georgia.

The other project was rated first in the nation last June at the National History Day Competition at the University of Maryland. This project was a video on Primus King, the Columbus man who obtained the right to vote for all Georgia blacks in the all-white Georgia Democratic primary in 1945.

Throughout the years Barnette has worked with students on projects about Martin Luther King; the Alday murders; Horace King, the Columbus slave who built the bridges between Columbus and Girard; Christa McAuliff; and parachutes.

"I really do enjoy working with these students," says Barnette. "They are usually so eager and interested, and they enjoy an experience they mey never get again. These students are hard workers. They are achieving in an academic subject, and the school is proud of them."

Mary Barnette

"I still keep in contact with these students," said Barnette. "We build quite a relationship from working so hard together."

Barnette is also proud of the people who have helped her students throughout the years. History students have researched and interviewed several people from the area to get the information they need for their projects.

"I just wish more people realized that there is so much history in Columbus, and there are a lot of people out there who are willing to give time and information to help students learn more about the past," she said.

Hispanics to decorate Christmas tree

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Ornaments with hand-painted flags of Hispanic countries will adorn a Christmas tree on the Columbus Government Center grounds as it is lit in a special ceremony Nov. 29, at 7 p.m.

The event is being sponsored by the Columbus Hispanic Association in a series of celebrations this year honoring Christopher Columbus, according to Maria Ortiz, in charge of of the association's public relations.

Pedro Sanchez is the artist painting the flags on the ornaments, and chairman of the tree-lighting ceremony is Dr. Jose Lopez Lago, a Columbus physician.

Christmas carols will be sung in Spanish and in English, with a local high school band also expected to perform.

The general public is welcome to attend, Ortiz said, but a special invitation goes out to Fort Benning because of its high concentration of people with a Hispanic heritage.

International wives offer buffer to culture shock

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Rank doesn't matter. Finding someone who speaks your language and can help you find the food to fix your native dishes does. Feeling accepted also matters.

These are the things that have been offered by the International Wives Club of Fort Benning since its founding in 1975.

It is an independent group of foreign-born women who are married to active duty and retired military personnel.

According to Olga Kelly, president of the club for the last 17 years, they average about 100 members from 17 foreign countries.

"The impact of culture shock can have a crippling effect on many individuals," Kelly said. "We feel that our group has created an effective buffer for some people."

The function of the organization is mostly social -- family gatherings, celebrating national holidays and fund-raising activities that make them self-supporting.

They have guest speakers, too, who talk about legal services, surviviors' benefits, the drug problem in this country and anything that allows foreign-born people to adapt easier.

However, they also provide a valuable service to the post through offering GED, English and citizenship classes free of charge.

The GED and English classes are held year round, 6:30 to 9 p.m., Mondays and Thursdays, in building 2642, second floor, Soldier's Plaza. There is no registration necessary, and anyone, not just foreign-born wives, may come. This program has been going since 1978 and is affiliated with the Muscogee County School District, which provides the teacher.

"Some of our members already have a European diploma but need a GED to get a job in this country," Kelly said. "Everyone learns at their own rate."

The International Wives Club also recently began another six-week citizenship course. It is being taught by volunteer Julie Pfaff, a former military officer who speaks a number of languages.

Kelly noted that after completing the course, applicants still have to go to the Immigration Service to take the test for U.S. citizenship, but in ten years there has been good success.

"I have not met one person who has not passed the test after the course," Kelly said.

Presently, citizenship classes are being held Tuesdays at 7 p.m. and Wednesdays at 9 a.m., both in Building 2642.

Anyone interested in registering for a citizenship class should contact Lis Blackmon, secretary, at 682-3330 or 327-1194.

ALL OVER THE WORLD . . . CHILDREN AT RISK

It seems like some things never change . . .

But they do.

In the 1980's, UNICEF helped immunize 80 percent of the world's children, saving 12 million young lives. UNICEF also helped lower child malnutrition in much of the developing world by 50 percent. UNICEF is saving a million children a year through the spread of oral rehydration therapy, which cures the dehydration caused by diarrhea. And UNICEF is close to eradicating polio forever.

All of this achieved at a low cost with the participation of governments and communities. And all of it achieved not for today, or for tomorrow, but for good.

Where there are children without nourishment, children without water, children without medicine, children without education—where there are children without hope —there is UNICEF. And there is change.

Teachers share knowledge

Volunteer English teachers show the way

By Gabriele Sonnenberg
USAIC Chaplains' Office

A friendly smile, a caring glance, a moment of patience, these are the most important prerequisites for volunteer English teachers at the Religious Education Center.

This year marks the 21st year of the class designed for those for whom English is a second language.

The class is a rich blend of culture, customs and language, yet students are bonded by circumstance and a desire to learn.

This helps them to make the most of their stay in the United States - whether it's for a few months or for a lifetime.

They come from Central and South America, Puerto Rico, Spain, Italy and hosts of other nations. They explore English and the American way of life, from traditions and history to everyday colloquialisms.

The weekly class seems to enhance the lives of the students. It helps to accept the surroundings better and develop not only a book knowledge, but the required practice as well, a student explained.

With contagious enthusiasm, the students and teachers alike continue to meet and learn together.

More than two decades of special interest in those for whom English is a second language has blended cultures and communicated the international language of caring.

Bible is 'guide' for life

By Robert D. Hester
4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery

The Bible is the best selling book of all time. It serves as a lamp (Psalm 109:105) to guide our way through life's foggy uncertainties.

It serves as a mirror (James 1:22-25) allowing us to see ourselves as we really are. It functions as a hammer (Jeremiah 23:29) that forges out strong character against the anvil of adversity.

It is a weapon of spiritual warfare (Ephesians 6:17) guarding us from the attacks of sin. It also nourishes us with spiritual milk (I peter 2:2) giving spiritual growth and strength.

John Bunyan, who wrote the immortal classic "Pilgrim's Progress," said this about reading the Scriptures: "Although you may have no commentaries at hand, continue to read the Word and pray; for a little from God is better than a great deal from man.

" Too many are content to listen to what comes from man's mouths, without searching and kneeling before God to know the real truth. That which we receive directly from the Lord through the study of His Word is from the 'minting house' itself.

"Even old truths are new if they come to use with the smell of heaven upon them."

If you would like to have a copy of God's Word, see your unit chaplain or chapel representative. Your chaplain will be most happy to provide you free of charge, through the ministry of The Gideons, your own Bible or New Testament.

Soldiers and their families, because of the unique needs and pressures that they face, need the strength, comfort and encouragement that only God's Word can give.

I invite you to make God's Word a part of your life, not just on Bible Sunday, but on every day of the week.

Bible to be honored

By Gabriele Sonnenberg
USAIC Chaplin's Office

Sunday has been named Bible Sunday.

What is the Bible? The English word Bible, derives from the Greek biblica, meaning books. The word that was derived from the name of an ancient town north of present day Beirut, Lebanon, that was the center of papyrus trading, the writing material of the ancient world. The name of the town was Gebal, which the ancient Greeks pronounced Byblos.

With the expansion of the church by A.D. 400 biblia, the word for books, became "The Book", our Bible. The Bible is the mostinfluential book in the history of mankind.

Today's Bible is actually a collection of books that is called a canon. The Old Testament portion is a collection of the surviving literature of ancient Israel. The New Testament portion is a collection of material about Jesus of Nazareth and the early church.

The Bible has survived because it is a book of faith, a spiritual guide for believers across the centuries.

The faith of the people of God, from the partriarchs to the early Christians, is recorded on the Bible's pages. These words provide spiritual food for the soul and light for the believer'sjourney of faith today.

The Bible has survived because what is there seems to transcendall limits, boundaries and obstacles. It transcends the limits of language. In whatever language one reads it, one comes to know God. It transcends the passage of time. In whatever century, God s word is there speaking the truth with power, with love, and with grace.

No matter which of life's problems the believer might be facing, enduring, or being challenged by, the Bible guides and supports them.

The Bible survived because it seems to be the only book that a person can read again and again and each time discovers something new.

Bibles are readily available, and come in all shapes and sizes.

ITC soldiers lauded for heroism

3 receive awards for outstanding acts

By Marilyn Balzarini
U.S. Army Infantry Training Center

Webster's dictionary defines a hero as "a man noted for courageous acts ... especially one who has risked or sacrificed his life."

The Army recognizes heroes with awards like the Soldier's Medal. The Soldier's Medal is earned by performing "voluntary actions above and beyond the all of duty. The performance must have involved personal hazard or danger and the voluntary risk of life."

According to Webster and the Army Sgt. 1st Class Bart Talley is a hero. He prevented a fellow soldier from dying when he was struck by a live electric wire. Talley was awarded the Soldier's Medal on Nov. 8 by Col. Joseph Trez, commander of the Infantry Training Center.

Talley says he does not consider himself a hero. "I didn't do anything anyone else wouldn't have done," Talley said. "When something like that happens you don't have time to think, you just act."

The accident happened earlier this year during a field training exercise. Talley was a platoon sergeant in Company B, 121st Infantry Battalion (Light), 25th Infantry Division, at Schofield Barracks, Hawaii. The injured soldier was the platoon's assistant M-60 gunner.

Company B had just finished a river crossing. Talley's platoon was ordered to set up security positions along a road while they waited for further instructions.

Talley's platoon had no way of knowing that a storm had broken an electric wire. The wire was still live and it dangled from its pole where the soldiers were setting up their positions.

"I saw a bright light and heard a buzzing noise," Talley said. "I remember turning around and somehow I knew someone had walked into a power line."

Talley found the soldier with the power line caught between his back and his ruck sack. Electricity was surging through the soldier's body as he lay helplessly on the ground.

"I remember thinking - someone has to help him," Talley said.

Talley and the platoon medic used a branch to loosen the power line from where it had lodged, and to move it away from the soldier. After they both received severe electric shocks, they tried throwing the branch. Finally, they were able to dislodged the power line. Next, they crawled to the soldier and carefully pulled him away from the line.

"When we got him to safety, we realized he wasn't breathing so we started cardiopulmonary Resuscitation," Talley said. "Luckily he started breathing, but he had sustained serious injuries from what we found out later was over 7,000 volts of electricity."

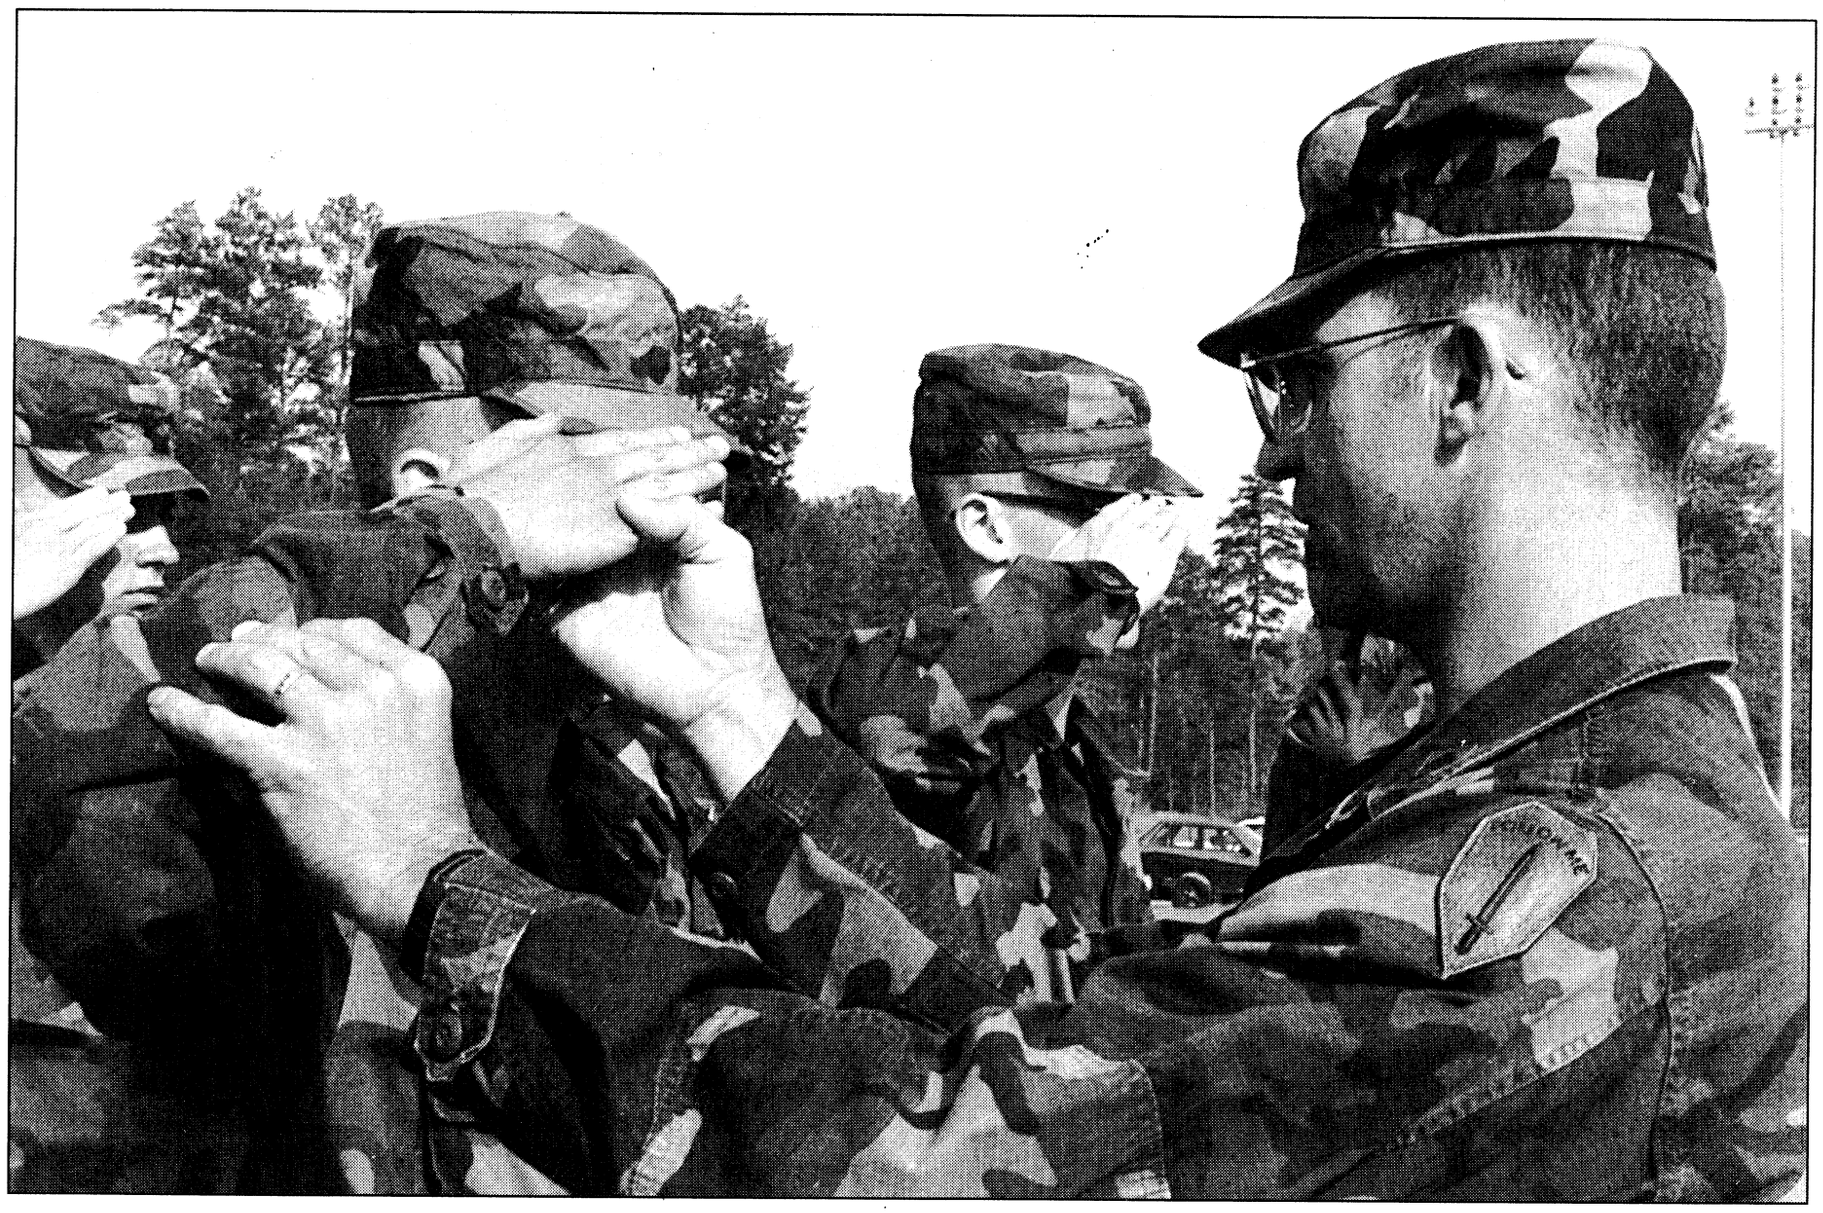
The soldier lost an arm and several fingers on his other hand. Aside from the amputations, he is completely recovered. Medical officials say the quick response of his rescuers is the only reason he is alive.

"I was mainly concerned about his mental condition," Talley said. "They told me that many times victims of electrocution have brain damage, but he's fine!"

Talley said he feels his Army training had a lot to do with his actions. "I've been called a hero, but I don't considered myself a hero."

Talley is assigned to the Infantry Training Center's Headquarters and Service Company and attached to Company C, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry, while he is waiting to attend Drill Sergeant School.

He is married and the father of three children. He enjoys golf, fishing and playing baseball.



Two other members of the Infantry Training Center were recognized for similar actions recently. Pvt. 1 Christopher Bailey and Pvt. 2 Darby Heck, both One Station Unit Training soldiers, assigned to Company D, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment, received Army Achievement Medals for helping a seizure victim.

While waiting for a bus, the soldiers realized that the man sitting next to them was experiencing a seizure. They flagged down passers-by and told them to get help.

"The man was starting to choke on his tongue," Bailey said. "So I put my finger in his mouth and was able to get him breathing more easily."

Meanwhile, Heck held the man's head and arms to keep him from injuring himself on the sidewalk.

"By the time the ambulance got there, he seemed to Museum offers 'hidden treasures'

By Alyanna B. Summers
Bayonet staff writer

Nestled unobtrusively on Wynnton Road is one of Columbus' "hidden treasures." It is a treasure trove filled with such jewels as educational programs, famous works of art, exhibits on regional history and other such "riches."

It is the Columbus Museum.

Featuring such exhibits as Richard Pousette-Dart: A Retrospective, Transformations, a special hands-on center for children, and Chattahoochee Legacy, an exhibit telling the history of the Chattahoochee area, the museum is one of Columbus' best-kept secrets.

"We are here for the entire community, Fort Benning and Phenix City, as well as Columbus," said Patricia Ingram, public relations coordinator for the museum.

The museum originally opened its doors in 1953 as the Bradley Museum. Prior to that, it was the W.C. Bradley Home, built in 1912. In 1989, the museum was renovated with $10 million raised by the community. From this effort, the new Columbus Museum was born.

The 86,000-square-foot structure houses a regional history gallery, a youth-oriented discovery gallery, galleries for fine and decorative arts, as well as a gift shop, meeting room and reception areas, two classrooms, a teaching darkroom, an orientation theater and a 300-seat theater.

"We have several great facilities that are here for the use of the members of our community," said Ingram. "We want to extend ourselves and our services to the community. For groups that would like meet here for guided or self-guided tours, we have facilities to accommodate most requests. We welcome all visitors to come and experience the wonders of our museum."

ASK THE JUDGE

By Rick Parker
Staff Judge Advocate Office

Q: I have a lot of bills that I'd like to consolidate into one loan, but my credit is bad, and I'm afraid that I can't get a loan to do this. I've recently seen some ads in the classified section of the paper that say they will guarantee a loan regardless of the person's credit history. All I have to do is to call a toll-free telephone number, so it doesn't look like it will cost me anything to try it. Do you think this is a good idea?

A: No, don't do it. We at the Legal Assistance Division have seen a number of clients in the past month who have fallen into this trap and lost money they couldn't afford to lose. The facts in each case are pretty much the same. When you call the number, a "representative" listens to your situation and tells you that a loan is no problem. Many of the clients we've seen state that they were promised loans of anywhere from $5,000 to $20,000. The "representative" then tells you that they will send you an application form to fill out which must be returned with a fee of anywhere from $250 to $300, payable by money order. Some of our clients have been told that the fee is refundable if a loan is not approved. All of our clients have sent the money in, and have either never heard from the lender again, or have not secured the loan. In any case, they have never gotten their money back. In some cases, the telephone number for the lender is disconnected, and there is absolutely no way to track down the identity or location of the people who have taken the money.

We cannot state with certainty that every one of these classified advertisers are scam artists, but it appears that there is enough of a problem with this to make all of them suspect. We certainly believe that it is not advisable to do business of this nature by telephone. Clearly, face-to-face contact is preferred.

If you have had a similar experience with one of these toll-free "money lenders," we would like for you to come into the Legal Assistance Division. Given the number of complaints in recent weeks, this would appear to be a problem which should be investigated by the appropriate state and federal agencies.

This will only happen if enough people come forward and give us the information we need to pursue this action.

The Legal Assistance Division is located in Building 5 on main post. Call 545-3281 or 545-3282 for an appointment.

Bertinelli's role dramatic

By JAY BOBBIN
Tribune Media Services

If it hadn't been for motherhood, Valerie Bertinelli might not have taken her newest television role.

The popular actress hadn't worked much since the end of last year's comedy series "Sydney," devoting her time to having and raising her first child by rock-star husband Eddie Van Halen, when she was approached about the miniseries she eventually decided to do. Adapted from the fact-based book by Peter ("Serpico") Maas, Sunday and Tuesday's new CBS drama "In a Child's Name" traces the case that ensued after a dentist (played by former "Twin Peaks" star Michael Ontkean) was convicted of the brutal beating death of his wife (Karla Tamburelli) — though he claimed self-defense, charging he had found her abusing their infant son (Jackson Bunn) under the influence of drugs — and tried to control the boy's destiny from prison.

Refusing to believe the man's accusations, the victim's sister (Bertinelli) then went to court to campaign for legal custody of the youngster, which the inmate already had arranged to be turned over to his parents (Academy Award-winner Louise Fletcher and David Huddleston). Also featured in the story are two of NBC's former "Fanelli Boys," Christopher Meloni and Andy Hirsch (the former as Bertinelli's husband, the latter as her brother); additional cast members include Emmy recipient John ("Cagney & Lacey") Karlen and Joanna ("Class Action") Merlin as Bertinelli's parents, Timothy Carhart as a police detective continuing to probe the murder, and Caroline Kava and Mitchell Ryan as attorneys.

Claiming that being a new parent "is the only reason I decided to do this," Bertinelli explains, "I couldn't see this woman's name being dragged through the mud after she was murdered. She was a wonderful mother, but she never had a chance to prove that, since she was killed when her child was five months old. That was about the age of Wolfie (Wolfgang, Bertinelli's own son) when they came to me to do this, and I thought, 'If he was left without me, I couldn't imagine this happening.' Even without that, I might have taken this (role) because it's such an interesting story, but I was very torn. I wanted to just be a mother for the first year, but they sent me the book and I read it, then I saw a picture of Teresa (the victim) ... and I just had to do it. This man got away with murder and it's too late to do anything about that, but he's only in jail for 30 years, and that's nothing."

Bertinelli

Though she has done many TV-movies since first winning fame on the long-running comedy series "One Day at a Time," Bertinelli hasn't portrayed real-life people often, which she says made "In a Child's Name" a "very difficult" job for her. "I wanted to do justice to Celeste (the actual woman), because she's such a bright, intuitive and fun woman."

'Dangerous Liaisons' held over

The Springer Opera House

"This show is too good to close," said Springer Managing Artistic Director Paul R. Pierce. "It's a show in a million, and we're going to run it."

Pierce was talking about the Springer Theatre's current production of Christopher Hampton's "Les Liaisons Dangereuses" (Dangerous Liaisons) and his decision to hold it over for two performances tonight and Saturday.

"Les Liaisons Dangereuses" is the second mainstage production to be held over in the Springer's still young 1991-92 series.

The boudoir is the battleground for the conniving Marquise de Marteuil and her charming ex-lover, the Vicomte de Valmont. These wolves in lamb's clothing scheme to seduce, deflower and humiliate any number of innocent victims for their own amusement. But cross and double-cross occur when the Vicomte finds himself in love.

Roger Mays makes his Springer directoral debut for "Dangerous Liaisons" he knows the theatre, its volunteers and programs, from his year as the State Theatre's production coordinator, where he was vitally involved in every show the Springer produced.

Scenic designer John Thigpen, who most recently designed the Springer's all-time box-office smash "42nd Street," said he drew sets that reflect the French nobility's tarnished elegance.

"Since the show takes place in eight different locations over several months, we decided on an evolving, undulating visual style which is at once soft but full of sharp angles.

The rooms will slowly transform before the eyes of the audience, just like the characters, who show us their complex personalities through the course of the play," Thigpen said.

"The production relies on the interplay of light and shadow, both in a physical and a figurative sense. What is most compelling about this story is that as human beings, all of us feel the same urges as Valmont and Merteuil, we just don't often act on them to such extreme degrees," Mays said. "

Atlantan George Hiller, a Columbus native, comes home to portray Valmont. Columbus audiences may remember Hiller from his performances in Columbus College's "The Boys Next Door" and the Springer Studio theatre hit, "Greater Tuna."

Kathleen Wiley Kelly brings to life the alternately hot and cold Merteuil, who plays life by the simple rule "Win or Die."

New Yorker Rachel Glass makes her Springer debut as Madame de Tourvel, the woman famous for her strict morals and the happiness of her marriage who Valmont strives to seduce.

Ellen Conger, who last season played Daisy Werthan in "Driving Miss Daisy" is Valmont's aunt, Mme. de Rosemonde. Dena Musil plays Mme. de Volanges, the stern but loving mother of the innocent Cecile, played by Susan Matthews.

Michael Jason Trebony is Danceny, the young knight who encounters unusual obstacles in his quest for the pure love of Cecile. Benjii Bittle, on the other hand, is the scheming Azolan, Valmont's footman who greases palms and uses the most unchivalrous of tactics to get what he wants for Valmont.

Mamie Willoughby, an on-air personality for Rock 103, portrays the courtesan Emilie, who does some unusual secretarial work for Valmont on the side.

Rounding out the cast are Phillip Rodgers as Merteuil's Major Domo, Catherine Perray as the maid, Adcle, and Jim Eagan as the footman.

Reservations are being accepted now for all performances of "Les Liaisons Dangereuses" today and Saturday at 8 p.m.

Call the Springer Box Office at 337-3688 for seats or information.

CATD officer returns from desert tour

Participated in rebuilding, restructuring of Kuwait

By Alyanna B. Summers
Bayonet staff writer

A Fort Benning officer returned to Fort Benning Nov. 15 after a nine-month stint in Southwest Asia.

Lt. Col. Russell Eno of Company B, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment stepped off an airplane at the Columbus airport and was greeted by his family and friends.

Eno, who works as the chief of communicative skills in the Combined Arms and Tactics Division, U.S. Army Infantry School, received orders to deploy to Southwest Asia as an individual replacement Feb. 16. He served in Saudi Arabia for six months and in Kuwait for three months.

In Saudi Arabia, Eno worked as the chief of the Long Range Planning Cell for the 22nd Support Command, and he served on the personal staff of Lt. Gen. William Pagonis, that unit's commander. Eno and his staff, located first in King Khalid's Military City and then in Doha, Kuwait, which is a suburb outside of Kuwait City, were part of the group responsible for writing the operations orders for the defense and restoration of Kuwait.

"We planned the actual restructuring of Kuwait," said Eno. "It was really challenging because of the amount of work that had to be done. Sewage systems, waterway systems, hospitals — everything was in need of reconstruction."

Eno said it was rewarding to see how quickly the people of Kuwait managed to get back on their feet and begin restructuring their home.

"It was professionally rewarding to be involved in the entire operation," said Eno. "I was witness to the largest logistical operation, in terms of moving personnel, materiel, weapons, in history," said Eno.

Eno was greeted by his wife, Libby, and daughter, Mary, who is 17 years old and a senior at Pacelli High School. Eno has another daughter, Lisa, who is a senior at the University of New Hampshire in Durham, N.H.

Military Police get new radar

'Hawk' more accurate, nabs speed demons in any direction

USAIC Public Affairs Office

New, more capable radars are now in the hands of post police.

The new radars are called "Hawk" and will clock vehicles driving in front of or behind radar units. The radars will also clock vehicles going away from them.

Additionally, the Hawk has a "hold" button that allows the radar operator to temporarily stop transmitting the radar signal.

But, once the button is released, the radar unit can immediately pick up the speed of vehicles coming toward it in any direction or going away from it in any direction.

According to Staff Sgt. Anthony W. Greer, Traffic Investigation non-commissioned officer in charge at the Military Police Activity, this capability allows the radar operator to apprehend individuals who have radar detectors in their cars and think they can go as fast as they want until their radar detectors pick up a radar signal.

The new radars are accurate and simple to calibrate.

All radar units used on post are required to be calibrated at the factory no less than once a year. All the units are "tuned" once a day. This requires the use of two tuning forks. The forks are preset to a certain speed vibration that is picked up by the radar. If the radar records a number different from the tuning fork, the unit is not placed in service.

Another quality control check is the training of radar operators. Before an officer goes out in a radar vehicle, he undergoes a 16-hour Police Academy course at Columbus College. Added to that is 16 hours of on-the-job training before he can be certified by the state to operate a radar unit, according to Greer.

In all, Fort Benning will have about 150 licensed radar operators and nearly 40 radar units to operate postwide.

Contrary to what many people think, a person being stopped does not have to be shown his speed on the radar, according to Greer.

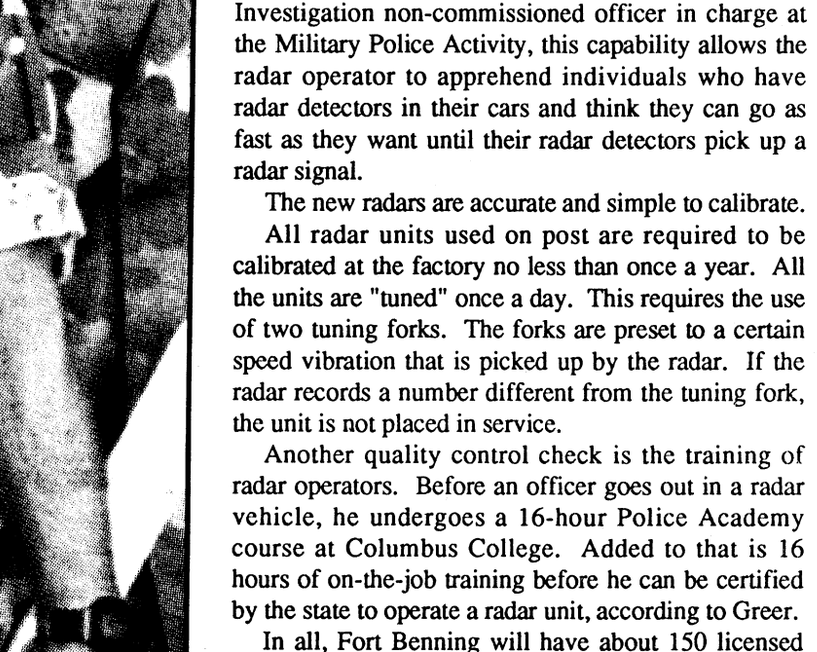
Greer says the use of radar units will encourage drivers to become more aware of speed limits and the fact they are being closely enforced. He says that's a way of ensuring the safety of soldiers, civilians and family members at Fort Benning.

Campaign close to 50 percent of goal

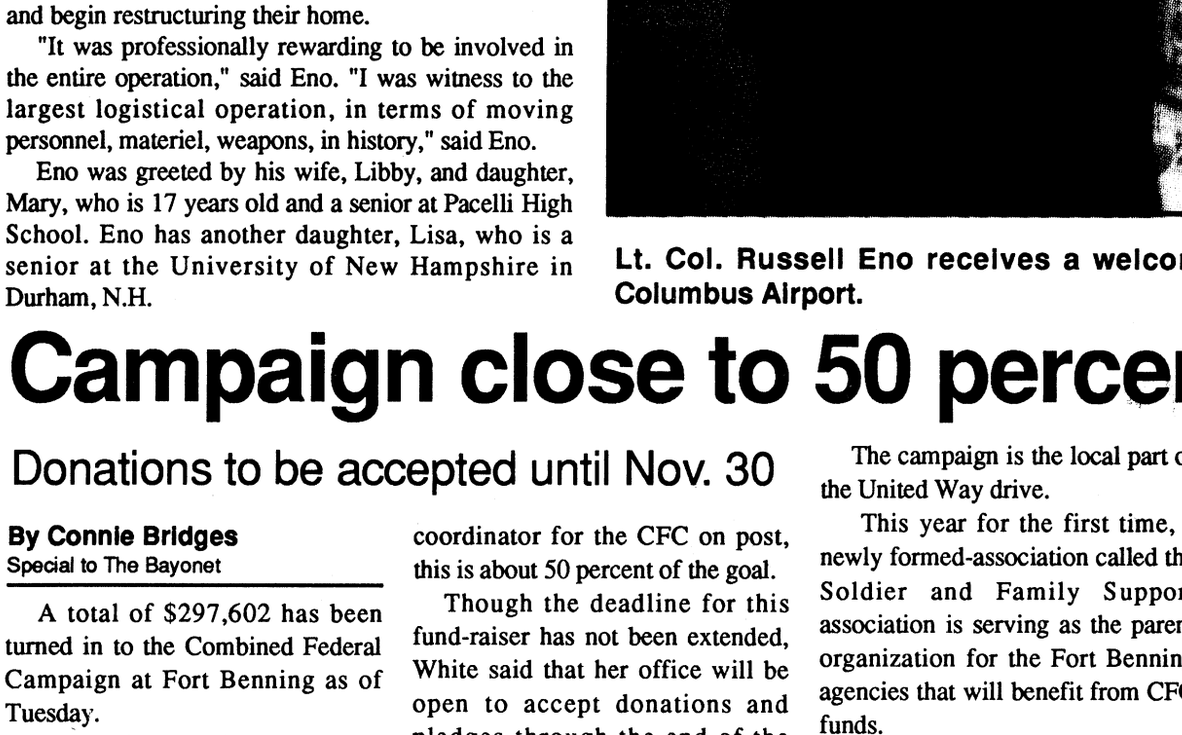
Donations to be accepted until Nov. 30

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

A total of $297,602 has been turned in to the Combined Federal Campaign at Fort Benning as of Tuesday.



According to Cathy White, coordinator for the CFC on post, this is about 50 percent of the goal.



Though the deadline for this fund-raiser has not been extended, White said that her office will be open to accept donations and pledges through the end of the month.

The campaign is the local part of the United Way drive.

This year for the first time, a newly formed-association called the Soldier and Family Support association is serving as the parent organization for the Fort Benning agencies that will benefit from CFC funds.

A once-a-year appeal to the soldiers and civilians working on post, CFC helps such Fort Benning agencies as the post Red Cross, the supplemental food locker, volunteer services, youth and handicapped programs, Chaplain's Enlisted Outreach, post community improvement, child-care provider certification, family support groups and dental health.

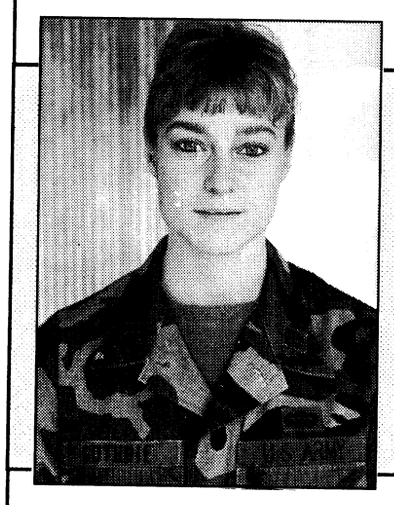
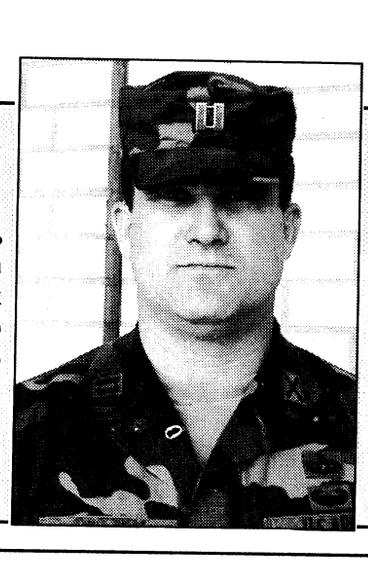
VARIOUS VOICES



The Great American Smokeout was Thursday. Its purpose is to encourage smokers to quit. What are some other ways to help them quit?

Sgt. 1st Class Billy Bailey, Company B, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment– "Its really a matter of personal choice whether someone will stop smoking. Counseling and incentives might be helpful, though."

Spc. Warren Wingate, Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment – "Perhaps raising the price of packs and cartons of cigarettes would help people to stop smoking. Also limiting the number of designated smoking areas would help."



1st Lt. Kimberly A.Guthrie, 519th Personnel Service Company, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division – "It's an individual choice to stop smoking, one based on the amount of self-determination and willpower someone has. It's a personal choice."

Sgt. Reginald Calhoun, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, School of the Americas – "I think that if people became more educated on the dangers of smoking, there would be a lot less people smoking. People need to take classes and become aware of the effects of smoking."

Nancy Ryan, family member – "I feel that advertisments promoting cigarette smoking should be stopped, and that would encourage people to stop smoking."

Capt. Michael S. Patton, Company C, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment – "I don't think that a person who does not want to stop will quit smoking. It's really up to the person."

Former smoker encourages others

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

COMMENTARY

The Great American Smokeout was yesterday.

As a former smoker, I hope some of you used that day not to smoke.

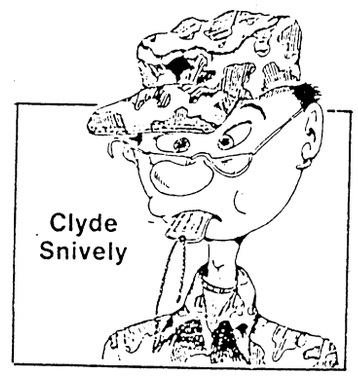
If you did, you stand as good a chance as staying off cigarettes as those who take some of the cease smoking courses offered by various groups.

As a former smoker, I exercise my rights to root for you, while being obnoxious to those who still smoke. Fact is, there probably is not a more obnoxious creature on this planet than a former smoker.

First, we rub it in to all smokers as to how great we are. "If I can quit, so can you," forgetting that some people might not want to quit, that they might enjoy smoking, that smoking helps them relax, or remain alert, helps them tolerate their spouses' cooking, or even regulates their bowels.

And of course, there's the fact that if they've been smoking for any length of time at all...they're addicted. They're addicted to the nicotine, but they're also addicted to the habit...get up in the morning, light up; get in the car, light up; answer the phone, light up; order a drink in a bar, light up; get in a tense situation, light up; go to bed at night, light up.

Smokers are not dummies. They read the reports. They know smoking kills 300,000 Americans a year. They know their smoke contributes to deaths in non-smokers. They know smoking costs this country millions of dollars in time lost from the job, from the damage done to equipment by smoke, from fires caused by carelessly tossed cigarettes and matches.



But they keep puffing away. It's their God-given, Constitutional right, they say.

Non-smokers on the other hand claim clean air and clean lungs as their God-given, Constitutional right.

They say they don't like to go home at night with the smell of cigarettes imbeded in their clothes and hair. They say that is not the price of freedom they should have to pay.

The battles wage.

Non-smokers are changing their strategy. They know smokers think they'll live forever, especially young ones, so now they're attacking the cosmetic and attractiveness aspects of smoking.

"Your lips develop 'suck' lines, the skin under your eyes shrivels up from squinting," they try and tell smokers.

"Who wants to kiss someone with tobacco breath, with yellow fingers and yellow gums?" they ask.

Some people are getting the message that smoking ain't cool. Unfortunately, some of them are turning to smokeless tobacco--that stuff you chew.

They're the ones who walk around with a Coke can in their hands to have a place to deposit their cud, although others swallow the tobacco juice.

If chewing tobacco causes tongue and mouth cancer, think what swallowing it does to the plumbing. But these are hard corps folks and don't need to hear that.

Some of them actually think that walking around with a bulge in their cheeks or under their lower lip makes them attractive to women.

Not the ones I've talked to.

"Yuk," is the most common response to the question, "are you attracted to men (or women) who chew tobacco?"

I may not go around jamming the slots on cigarette machines, or shooting cigarettes with squirt guns, but I am one who strongly supports the no-smoking policy in the work place.

Again, to those of you who decided to quit smoking yesterday, more power to you. I hope you can find the will power to remain tobacco free.

Just take it one day at a time, knowing that if your lungs aren't already infected with cancer or emphysema, eventually they will clear themselves and you can enjoy the same life span as a non-smoker--smell the morning dew on the grass, the subtleness of a rose in bloom and taste the nuances of your food without adding a block of salt.

CG gives message of thanks to post

Thursday we celebrate an honored American tradition which began 370 years ago in Plymouth, Mass., when Governor William Bradford, proclaimed a day of public thanksgiving for the past year's blessings.

Traditionally, historically, and eventually by presidential decree, Americans continued to set aside a special day to thank God for the abundance of his blessings.

Therefore, on this special day in November 1991, we acknowledge with gratitude, that the Lord has looked with favor upon our people and our land.

As we observe this Thanksgiving Day, we give special thanks for the safekeeping of our forces during Operation Desert Shield and Desert Storm. Through the hardships so many endured during this past year, we pause to remember and give thanks for the sacrifices they made so that our country and the world could enjoy peace once again.

In the days since the operation, many soldiers have returned to be united with their families but many are still deployed and we remember all of the families that will be separated this Thanksgiving. Whether far or near we give thanks for all that has been given us.

My prayer for you and your loved ones is for a safe, happy and blessed Thanksgiving.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White
Fort Benning commander

FORSCOM sends holiday greetings

While we celebrate Thanksgiving in 1991, let us reflect on the blessings of the past year and look to the promises of the future.

Our fight for the liberty of the nation of Kuwait was crowned with success. The sacrifices we have made in defending Europe from the communist threat since 1945 have allowed freedom to come to the nations of Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union.

The future from the perspective of this year holds a prospect of peace like no other in recent history. For all of these things we should be thankful.

As soldiers and members of Forces Command, you have made the personal sacrifices that enable these doors of freedom to swing open. The world can be thankful that your dedication and the unwavering support of your families have brought us closer to global peace.

In the long-held tradition of giving thanks at harvest time, let us be thankful that in 1991 the yield was bountiful and let us pray that others around the world benefit from our peaceful harvest.

To all of you, I extend my very best wishes for a happy Thanksgiving.

Vet Services makes a plea for pets

By Kathleen Miller
Veterinary Services

They're cute. They're cuddly. They're irresistible! They'd be the perfect Christmas present for your child — right? Wrong.

Owning a pet– dog or cat – is a big responsibility. You cannot put them on a shelf after Christmas when you're tired of playing. Pets need constant attention and care - and remember that they wlll be with you for the next 10 to 15 years.

At the Veterinary Services Stray Animal Facility, we see so many stray and/or unwanted pets. Every January there is an increased number of these animals — the "after Christmas rush." The owners have decided they cannot handle the new pet. We try to adopt these pets to new families, but most must be humanely destroyed.

If you are considerlng a pet for a Christmas present, please think seriously before you buy or adopt. Does the prospective recipient want a pet? How big will the animal get? How much money will it cost for food, care, etc.?

Think about the kind of pet that would be best dog or cat, big or small, long hair or short. If you've thought it through and still want to get a pet— for Christmas or anytime — visit our Adopt-A-Pet facility or the local Humane Society.

LETTER

Reader questions post's off-duty uniform policy

In response to last week's article, "Uniform policy in effect," I find it hard to believe that this is the information we want to impart to our command.

The article is fine with one exceptional paragraph – "A soldier may not drink alcohol at any time during duty hours or any off-duty hours while in a utility uniform."

This directs that soldiers may no longer go to the NCO, Enlisted or Officers' Club after work for a drink without changining into civilian clothing.

We can no longer hold Right-Arm or Bosses Nights, no more officer or non-commissioned officer leadership training at the club with a little social bonding afterward. Soldiers can no longer stop by the club after work for a friendly drink with their buddies.

We are asking our soldiers to take their business elsewhere when our club systems are in need of our support in these days of self-supported club systems.

Policy memo 91-18 signed by the chief of staff, states that a soldier may not drink on or off post during duty hours or off-post during non-duty hours.

This implies that a soldier may still frequent the club systems after duty hours in utility uniforms.

Somehow, other cooks have jumped into the kitchen and I believe we are misinforming the command.

As the voice of the command, which The Bayonet conveys, what ever happened to going to the source to get the truth?

Thomas P. Wilkinson
Fort Benning

Editors's note: Paragraph D of Policy memo 91-18 reads, "A soldier may not drink alcohol whether or not dining while in BDUs, food service, hospital duty or combat vehicle crewman uniforms, on or off post during duty hours or off post during non-duty hours. A commercial establishment is any entity that engages in the sale of alcoholic beverages of any kind."

Families to share first Thanksgiving after Desert Storm

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

This year Cpl. W. Curtis and Becky Braden and their daughters will spend Thanksgiving together. It sounds like a small thing to be thankful for, but after last year's deployment to the Mideast, military families the world over realize its importance.

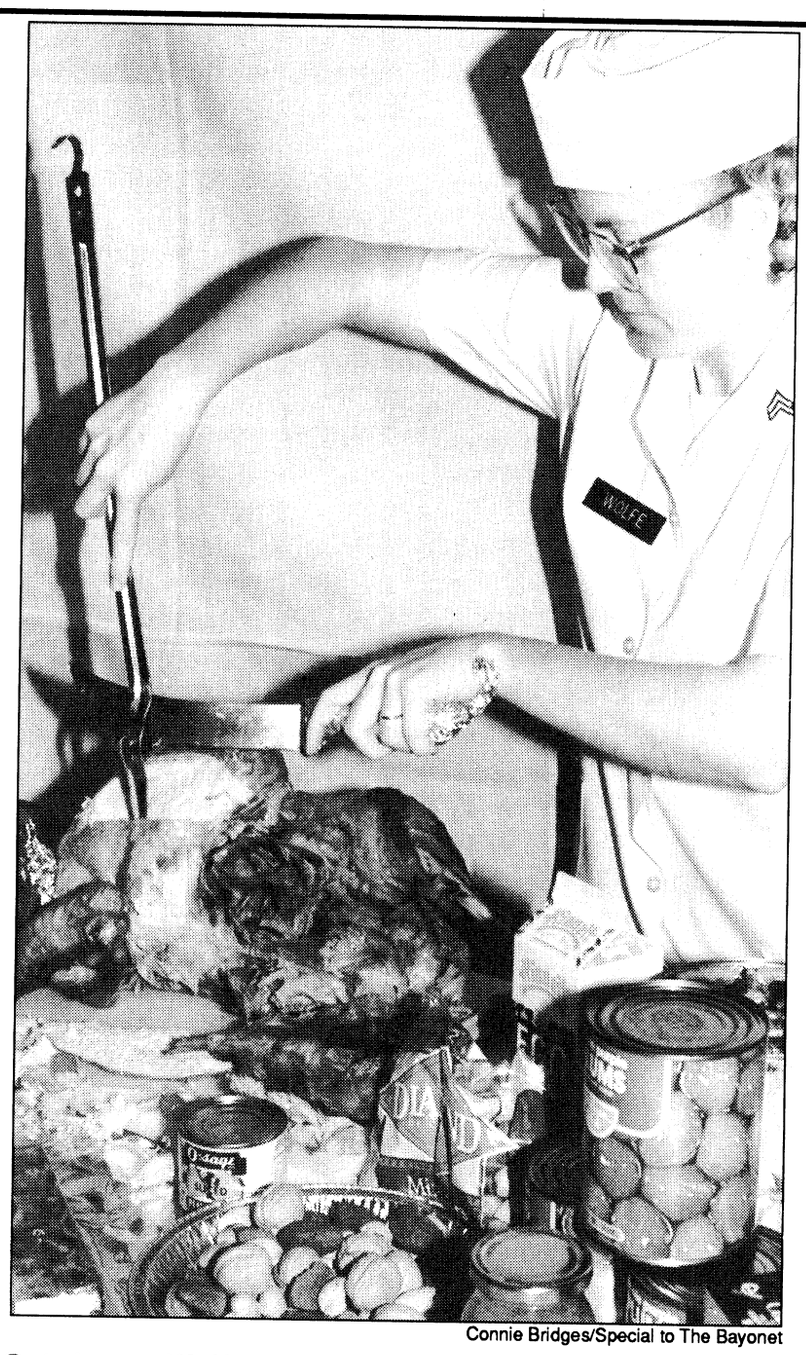
Becky is unsure as to where they'll have their main dinner because Curtis is in the field until Nov. 25 as a Headquarters mechanic for 2ndBattalion, 18th Inf., 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division.

However, one thing she knows for sure is that he'll be making pie and bread no matter what.

"Curtis loves to bake," she said. "It's a form of relaxation for him. He told me last year he didn't eat Thanksgiving dinner in Saudi because he was too depressed. This year we're going to make up for it."

The Bradens and their daughters, Jessica, 7, and Richelle, 3, don't have any family members who will be joining them here. They all live too far away— North Carolina, Missouri and Wyoming.

If they do decide to have Thanksgiving dinner at the battalion dining facility, the Bradens will find the battalion officers taking turns serving dinner to the enlisted, according to battalion executive officer, Maj. Bobby Rayborn.



Edward C. Hilton, Chief, Food Service Branch, in charge of all of the dining facilities on post, said that they expect to feed from 15,000 to 17,000 people on Thanksgiving Day.

Active duty military and their immediate families will pay $3.15 per person. Meals for guests will be $3.15 plus a surcharge of $6.10 per person.

Retired military personnel and their guests interested in dining at Fort Benning are invited to the Follow Me Dining Facility in Building 73.

The serving hours there are 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. The food cost for retirees will be the same as for any guest, $3.15 plus the $6.10 surcharge.

Retirees may make reservations by calling 545-3750, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., weekdays through Tuesday.

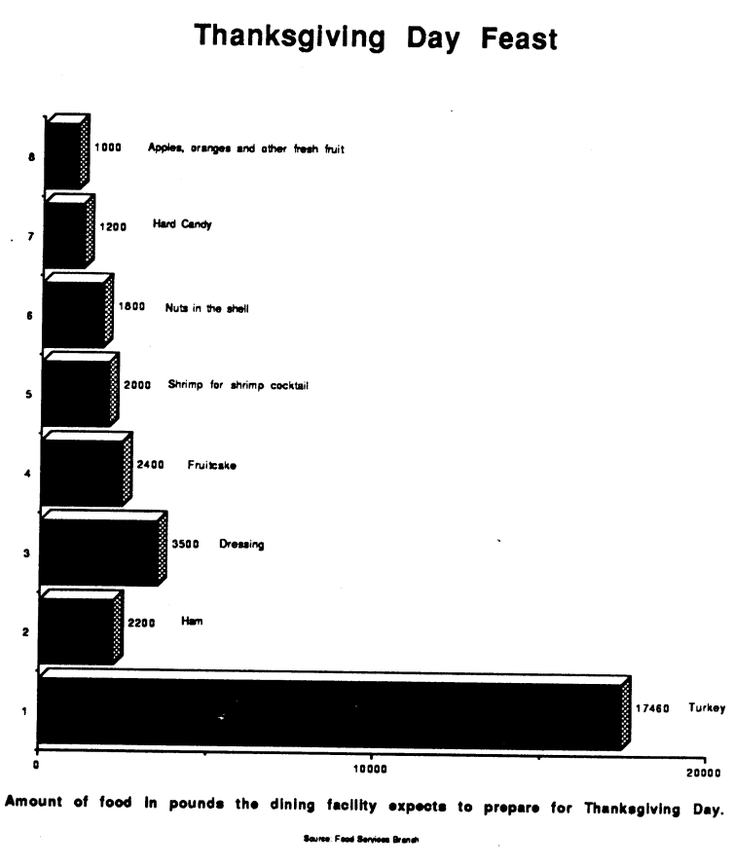
Holiday menu features roast turkey, trimmings



By Connie Bridges

The Thanksgiving menu at the dining facilities on post will be basically the same everywhere, according to Edward C. Hilton, Chief, Food Services Branch.

Hilton added that each dining facility can select two additional meat offerings in addition to turkey. Some chose ham, others Cornish game hens. Also, some of the trimmings may vary.

Nevertheless, soldiers and their families can expect the traditional roast turkey, giblet gravy, cornbread dressing, cranberry sauce, mashed potatoes, candied sweet potatoes, seasoned spinach, cauliflourer au gratin, tossed vegetable salad, zero salad dressing, jellied banana salad, cloverleaf rolls, margarine or butter, pumpkin pie, pecan pie, fruitcake, hard candy, assorted fresh fruit, milk, tea, coffee and soft drinks.

Holiday preparations to start early

Dining facilities will be humming until Thursday

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Preparing for Thanksgiving begins several days in advance, according to Sgt. 1st Class Emanuel Florida, manager for the 34th Medical Battalion's Dining Facility.

"We expect 500 people here on Thanksgiving Day," Florida said. "Work on the decorative cake will begin three days in advance, the ice carvings two days prior, and there will be someone in the kitchen for a full 24 hours before we serve Thanksgiving dinner.

"Chef Laura Wolfe said that there will be four people working Wednesday evening baking pies, making preparations for the dressing and dicing/slicing ingredients.

"There is not enough oven space so a lot of preparing has to be done in advance."

The 34th's dining facility won the award for best decorations for Christmas, 1990.

Dining facilities also compete for a best display contest. For Thanksgiving, it usually includes a horn of plenty, and everything in the display must be edible.

Results will be announced after the holiday.

29th's Alpha Players take top spot

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

The 1991 U.S. Army Infantry Center's intramural flag football championship played Nov. 15 at Doughboy Stadium, matched two similar teams on both sides of the ball.

Company A, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment's "Alpha Players" took on the 43rd Engineers' "Bad Boys" and squeezed out a 6-0 win for the post crown.

Alpha Players first set of downs started off with a run up the middle by running back James Webb for a short gain. On second down, Andrew Bennett took a pitch from quarterback Henry Mitchell, around the right side and raced for the end zone. Bennett reached the end zone for an apparent touchdown, but the referees' flag brought it all back and moved the Alpha Players back 10 yards.

A reverse gained nothing on second down and Mitchell was dropped for a loss on third down and long, prompting the Alpha Players to punt the ball away on fourth down.

The Bad Boys got the ball with decent field position but couldn't move upfield. Running back Daniel Valadez got the ball first on a hand off from quarterback Sheldon Leggett for little or no gain. An incomplete pass and a penalty pushed the offense back on second down. Leggett overthrew wide receiver Johnny Gillings on the second down repeat, then defensive end Lorenzo Haywood sacked Leggett on third down, bringing up a fourth down punt.

Alpha Players next possession proved to be the only scoring of the game. A bad snap on first down, then a penalty on a short run up the middle by Bennett, pushed the Alpha offense further from the end zone.

Mitchell changed all that on the next play, when he hit wide receiver James White with a long pass down the right sideline to set the Alpha Players up a with first and goal. On first down, Bennett went up the middle for no gain. Second down, Mitchell optioned right, but a flag called the play back, and on the second down replay Bennett was stuffed up the middle by defensive end Dennis Dallas.

On third down, Mitchell dropped back and fired a bullet of a pass to the left corner of the end zone and hit wide receiver White for the only score of the game. The extra point try was no good and Alpha Players led the Bad Boys, 6-0.

A set of downs by each team went nowhere and the first half ended with the score unchanged at 6-0.

The Bad Boys started the second half with the ball and could generate only one first down on their initial drive. Three plays later the Bad Boys had to punt the ball away.

The Bad Boy defense stopped the Alpha Players on three straight plays and the offense set up to punt. On the return Leggett took the kick, juked left, broke right and scampered down to the Alpha Players 20-yard line.

The Bad Boy offense set up shop with their best field position of the night, and on first down Leggett hit tight end Carlos Eason over the middle for a first and goal. That would be the closest the Bad Boys would get to the end zone.

A handoff to Valadez on first down went for no gain. Second down was the same as the first except for a penalty on the offense moving them further back. Leggett was dropped for a loss by defensive end Anthony Austin on second down. A third down pass to tight end Chris Mason fell short of the mark and left the Bad Boys with fourth and long. The offense decided to go for it on fourth down and Leggett's pass sailed out of the end zone.

Terry K. Ray/Special to The Bayonet

Bad Boys quarterback Sheldon Leggett attempts to evade Alpha Players linebacker Robert Prewitt.

Mitchell and company took over on downs and controlled the ball long enough so that when the Bad Boys offense did get the ball back, there was time for only one play. Leggett set the offense for trips right and put the ball in play. He dropped back to pass, but before he could release the pass, defensive end Haywood, dropped him for the final play of the game with Alpha Players 6, Bad Boys 0.

After the game, Bennett, also the Alpha Players coach, said, "We went into this game as the underdog because Alpha 2-29 had never won anything — it was always someone else from the regiment that won. We felt that if we stayed close and played within ourselves we could win."

The only problem Bennett had with the game was all the penalties that were called.

"The referees should have let the players play the game, it seemed like there was a flag on every snap," said Bennett. "The double team blocking rule cost us our first touchdown. Penalties happen, but the double team blocking rule needs to be looked at and modified or eliminated."

Anatoly Nazarenko (top) teaches Keith Sieracki a move.

Soviet National Greco-Roman Wrestling Coach Anatoly Nazarenko was at Fort Benning until Wednesday for a world-class athlete wrestling clinic.

"Coming here and teaching young wrestlers new and up to date techniques will strengthen the Army wrestling program," said Nazarenko. "I may show a wrestler every technique, but he will take maybe one or two and polish them to his style."

Tony Thomas, the All-Army wrestling coach was high on Nazarenko's list.

"Coach Thomas has done a superb job of training the All-Army team; and, with what they are learning at this clinic, it will only make them better."

Nazarenko was scheduled to fly to New York then on to the Soviet Union when the clinics were completed.

49ers beat out Raiders

Youth football players avenge an early season overtime loss

By John W. Peeler
Special to The Bayonet

The 49ers and Raiders met on Blue Field No. 2 Nov. 9 with the 49ers hoping to avenge an earlier heartbreaking loss in overtime to the Raiders. And it was the 49ers who came out of the contest with a 14 - 6 victory over the Raiders.

The opening kickoff made it look like it would be a disastrous day for the 49ers when they fumbled and the Raiders' Leroy Holt fell on the ball. Two plays later Raider running back Rolland Lusane rumbled 43 yards to the end zone. The 49ers stopped the two point conversion and the Raiders took an early 6 - 0 lead.

The 49er offense was unable to get on track and the Raiders took over the ball on downs to begin the second quarter. Three plays later, Raider running back Lusane rambled 47 yards toward the end zone, but had it not been for the touchdown-saving tackle of 49ers Michael Fair, the Raiders would have taken a commanding lead. The 49er defense tightened up and held the Raiders and the half ended with the Raiders leading 6-0.

The entire third quarter was stalemated with both defensive units holding the other's offense. It appeared that the Raiders and 49ers were heading into the fourth quarter much the same as their earlier meeting. However, on the first play of the quarter when the Raiders punted, the 49er defense put pressure on the Raiders' punter forcing a punt of only 2 yards. This left the 49ers with the ball on the Raiders 14-yard line.

Two plays later 49er running back Fair punched the ball into the end zone for the score. The two point conversion was successful and all of the sudden the 49ers had the lead 8 - 6.

On the ensuing kick off, Lusane mishandled the kickoff and 49ers' Phillip Comer recovered the fumble on the Raider 28-yard line. Three plays later the 49ers punched the ball into the end zone for their second score of the game. The Raiders stopped the two point conversion and the score with three minutes to go in the game was 14 - 6.

The Raiders had one more chance to tie the score, but on the kick off the Raiders' Lusane fumbled the ball and 49ers Shawn Hawkins recovered on the Raiders 37-yard line. The 49ers ran out the clock and preserved a 14-6 win. The 49ers lifted their record to 3-3, while the Raiders fell to 3-3.

Undefeated Vikings clinch title in 9- to 10-year-old division

By John W. Peeler
Special to The Bayonet

The undefeated Vikings and winless Giants met with the much improved Giants Nov. 9 hoping for the win and to be the first team to defeat the Vikings this season. However, their hopes disappeared as the fourth quarter ended with a 16-0 Viking victory.

The Viking victory, coupled with a 14-6 Raider loss, clinched the 9- to 10-year-old division for the Vikings with two games remaining to be played.

The Vikings opened the game with an on-sides kick that was recovered by the Vikings Brandon Holland. Three plays later the Vikings had marched down the field to the Giants 11-yard line.

Then the Giant defense tightened up. After a 5-yard illegal procedure penalty against the Vikings, the Giants' defense sacked Viking quarterback Scott Deloera for a 3-yard loss. On the next play Vikings' running back Brandon Holland mishandled a pitch and the Giants recovered the fumble on their 21-yard line.

On the Giants' first play from scrimmage, the Giants running back fumbled the ball and the Vikings' defensive end Prentess Burney recovered the ball on the Giants' 24-yard line. Two plays later Viking running back Brandon Holland swept around the left side for a 24-yard touchdown. The Vikings successfully executed the two point conversion making the score 8-0.

On the next kick off Holland covered the on side kick giving the Vikings the ball on the Giants 39-yard line.

The Giants defense held the Vikings to 7 yards on their next series and the Vikings turned the ball over on downs at the Giant 32-yard line. The half ended with a 8-yard Giants run and a Viking 8-0 lead.

The second half opened with the Vikings receiving the kickoff. The Giants pushed the Vikings back to their 22-yard line, after the Vikings had held the ball for most of the third quarter, forcing them to punt. The Vikings' Deloera hit a 25-yard punt and the Giants took over on their 33-yard line. The stubborn Viking defense held the Giants to 5 yards on three plays and forced the Giants to punt.

The Vikings took over the ball on their 20-yard line and controlled the rest of the quarter with their grinding running game that ended with Vikings' running back Michael Ellerbe taking the ball into the end zone as time expired. The two-point conversion was good and the game ended with the Vikings winning 16-0.

Teen-agers 'give back' to post youth

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

The Youth Activities soccer program has grown, according to Linda Laine, Youth Activities sports director.

"Since the early '70s, the soccer program has grown by leaps and bounds," she said. "There were only five teams for all age groups and now we have 22."

A 4- to 5-year-old instructional league was added in the late '80s that now has seven teams. It may grow to 10 teams next year. With the addition of a fall season, the soccer program has overtaken the football program as the leading team sport for children on post, said Laine.

Laine acknowledged three of her coaches because they are teen-agers with a background in the soccer program.

Christian Nahas, a senior at Pacelli High School, wanted to help out as an assistant coach, but when he found out they needed coaches he took the job as a head coach.

"I think the children understand me and I them because I was once in their shoes," said Nahas. "I'm more their age and they can relate to that."

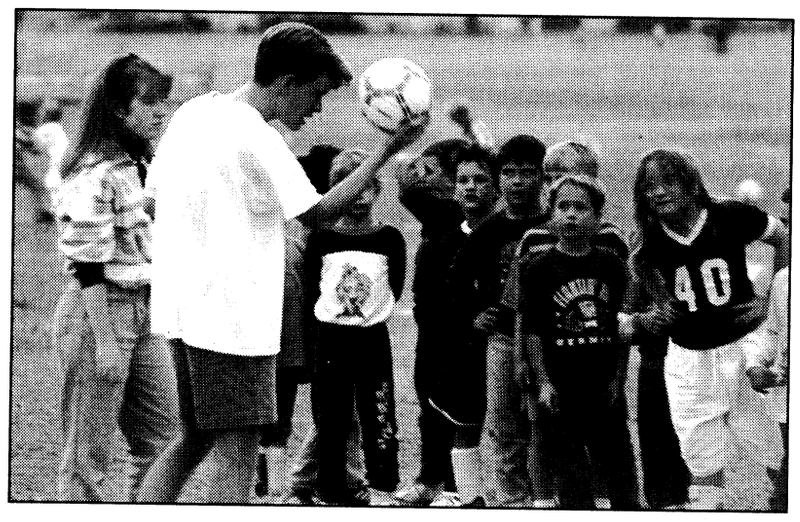
Nahas also plays soccer in a downtown league and at high school. He is involved in the Interact Club, Honor Society, and a drug and alcohol program at school.

Andrew Mead, also a senior at Pacelli, is on the debate team and the tennis team. With his sister, Kerry, assisting him during practices and coaching when he can't make a game, they seem to make a good tandem.

Mead believes that it is easier to mold the younger children because they haven't been playing as long the older kids.

"They're a little more receptive to my teachings and are not as emotional as the older ones if they win or lose," he said.

Pacelli High senior class secretary Kristin Everett, believes that the youngsters are more comfortable working with the teens.



"They don't feel as pressured as they might around an adult coach. I feel I've gained a different perspective and grown as a person while working with these children."

Thanking the parents of these young adults for doing such a fine job of raising their children, Laine stated, "It's a breath of fresh air to have three fine teen-agers as these volunteering their time to help give back some of what they have learned."

Ranger hits the trail, captures 1st place

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

William J. Ulibarri of the 75th Ranger Regiment captured first place at the Pine Mountain Trails Ultra-Run Nov. 9 at Pine Mountain, Ga. The win came after four earlier attempts.

Ulibarri, from Thornton, Colo., who has been running seriously for only five years, won with a time of just under 8 hours, for the 46.2-mile trail race. Ulibarri does very little training except for running every chance he can. He believes he is always training in his job as a ranger in a reconnaissance detachment.

"No matter where I am, all I have to have to train are my running shoes; I can run anywhere," he said.

Ulibarri achieved one goal by winning this race and now he has set his goals a little higher and a lot longer. He wants to compete in a 100-mile race, then he wants to place well or win one.

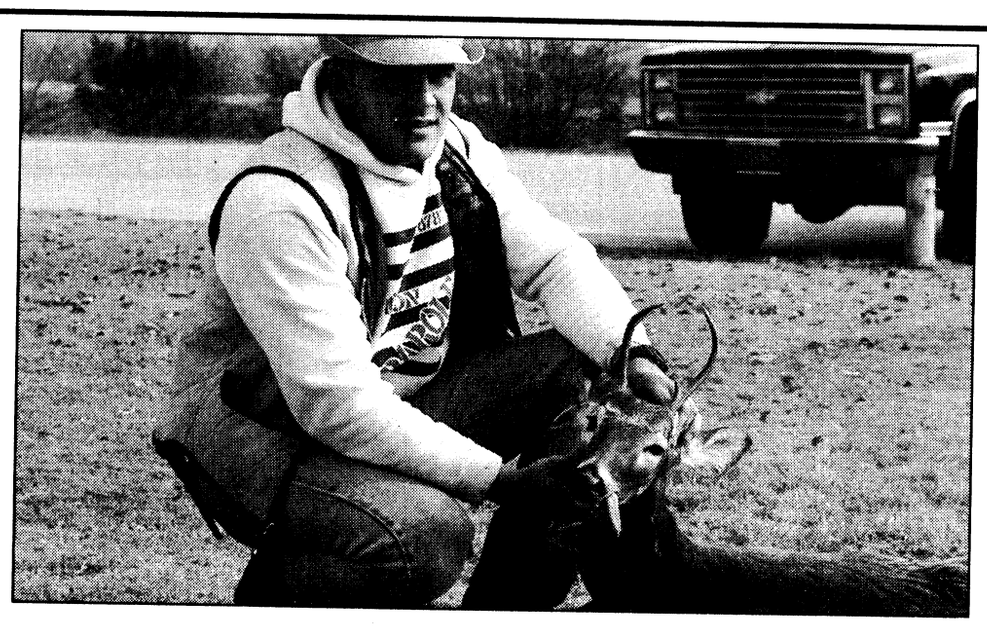
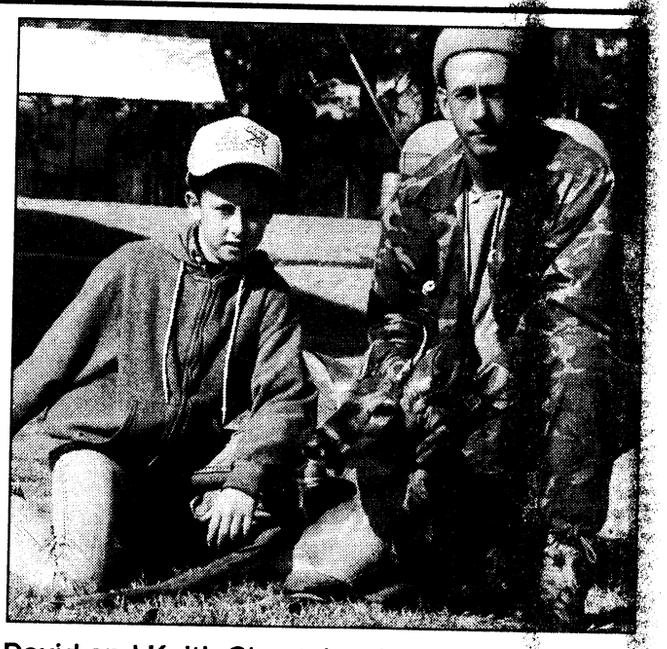
Alabama side of reservation opens for hunting Saturday

Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet



The Alabama 1991 deer firearms season opens Saturday, and the Alabama side of Fort Benning opens for buck only hunting.

All active duty military members with valid Georgia hunting permits may hunt this side of the post. All others must have a Alabama hunting license along with all post permits.



From Saturday to Dec. 26, only bucks can be taken on the Alabama side of the reservation. From Dec. 26 to Jan. 15 deer of either sex can be hunted.

The deer check station will be open before and after Thanksgiving from 7:45 a.m. to 4:15 p.m. weekdays and 9 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. on weekends.

Hunters are not required to check deer in, but valuable information can be gathered from the deer harvested on post, such as deer population, health needsand establishment of season limits.

Cusseta Deer Processing makes hunters feel at home

By Kimberly Wood

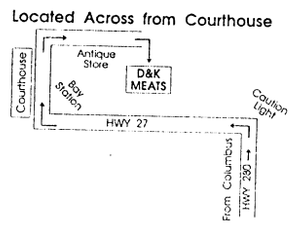
"We guarantee happiness," says Ken Purser, joint owner of Cusseta Deer Processing. What more could hunters want? Service is their number one concern when dealing with customers. They will even offer you and your buddies free beer and deer stew when you come in.

Cusseta Deer Processing is conveniently located right in the middle of the Chattahoochee County hunting grounds (where most Fort Benning hunters hunt). They have a state-inspected meat cutting room and all meat is cut by professionals with 10 years of experience.

Quality service is important at Cusseta Deer Processing so there is no mass processing, each deer is done individually. Your own deer is prepared as you want it and then double-wrapped. It is kept in a cooler for three days before cutting.

Choice cuts at Cusseta are the Special Cut (which includes: roast, cube steaks, deer burger, soup bones, and ribs), and the Standard Cut (includes: T-bone steak, sirloin, roast, stew meat, deer burger, and soup bones).

Cusseta Deer Processing is an affiliate of D and K Meats which features every kind of meat available in the area. All meat is state-inspected and the prices are better than a regular grocery store. D and K offers many "bulk specials" with several kinds of meat for one low price.



So if you feel like a beer and some stew after a long day of hunting stop by Cusseta Deer Processing on your way home. It is open seven days a week and is located off Highway 280 (Victory Drive). Make a left turn at the blinking caution iights and go around the block.

Officer to receive excellence award

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

In December, Capt. Randall G. Anderson, aeromedical evacuation pilot and flight operations officer with the 498th Medical Company, 34th Medical Battalion, will be heading to Washington, D.C., to be presented with the 1991 Chief, Medical Service Corps Award of Excellence.

The Army chose Anderson out of about 3,000 junior officers in the Medical Service Corps who hold positions as pilots, hospital patient administrators, company commanders, etc.

Nominated by Lt. Col. Frank Novier, 34th Medical Battalion commander, Anderson will receive an inscribed Medical Service Corps Medallion, an Army Commendation Medal and his name will be engraved in the Award of Excellence Plaque in the office of the Medical Service Corps Chief.

According to Brig. Gen. Bruce T. Miketinac, chief, Medical Service Corps, this achievement recognizes Anderson as the "best of the best."

In nominating Anderson, Novier said, "With his thorough understanding of the XVIII Airborne Corps medical plan and his grasp of the mission and concept of the 3rd Armored Cavalry Regiment, he developed a complete and concise aeromedical evacuation plan" for the Desert Storm 100-hour ground war.

"Captain Anderson personally distinguished himself by flying over 50 accident-free hours of medical evacuation" in which he airlifted American soldiers, Iraqi prisoners of war and civilians.

He also coordinated the delivery of essential medical equipment, blood and personnel throughout the battlefield sector.

Born in Denver, Anderson claims Bemidji, Minn., as home though he has been in the Army for more than six years.

He graduated as a distinguished military graduate from Bemidji State University when he received his bachelor's degree in computer science with a triple minor in military science, management information systems and speech.

After attending the Officer Basic Course for the Medical Service Corps, Anderson was assigned to the 32nd Combat Support Hospital, 68th Medical Group, Wiesbaden, Germany, where he served as an adjutant and later as a company commander.

While here, he also earned the Expert Field Medical Badge from the 3rd Armored Division.

Curtailing his overseas tour by 13 months, he was selected to attend flight school (the Initial Entry Rotary Wing Course) at Fort Rucker, Ala. Upon graduation, Anderson attended the UH-60 Blackhawk Aircraft Qualification Course.

He was then assigned to the 377th Medical Company (Air Ambulance), Seoul, Korea, where he developed a series of joint training exercises between the U.S. and Korean medical forces and flew in excess of 300 accident-free flight hours, including 35 medical evacuation missions.

Anderson decided to attend the Aviation Officer Advanced Course rather than the Medical Corps' course in order "to get the tactics emphasis and develop a working relationship with the aviation branch."

He was the only Medical Service Corps officer in his class to graduate with superior ratings and was selected as an honor graduate. Concurrent with the Advanced Course, Anderson completed Phase I of the Combined Arms Service and Staff School and graduated from the resident Phase II at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., in October 1990.

Anderson arrived at Fort Benning to serve with the 498th and five days later deployed to Saudi Arabia. He was awarded the Air Medal for his actions during Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm.

The 498th provides support to the Infantry Center on the ranges, makes patient transfers to other military hospitals, offers medical support for the ranger camps at Dahlonega and Eglin when in session, participates in the Medical Assistance Safety and Traffic Program for civilians within about a 100-mile radius and deploys for rotations to such places as Honduras, where the 498th will be going in January.

Desert Storm vet gets Air Medal

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

"His actions were truly above and beyond the call of duty and in this case in a hostile environment," said Col. Craiger C. Parker, director of the Combined Arms and Tactics Directorate, just before pinning the Air Medal to the chest of Maj. Randall P. Maschek in a ceremony in Building 4, Nov. 6.

The Air Medal is awarded to those who distinguish themselves by meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flight.

Maschek received the medal for his actions in the Middle East during Operation Desert Storm as commander of Fort Benning's 498th Medical Company, 34th Medical Battalion.

The certificate reads in part, "Major Maschek's technical knowledge and flight expertise were called upon many times to protect American and allied lives while performing demanding combat missions. His actions significantly contributed to the XVIII Airborne Corps' combat participation in restoring the world security goals of the United Nations."

Maschek said the war caught him by surprise.

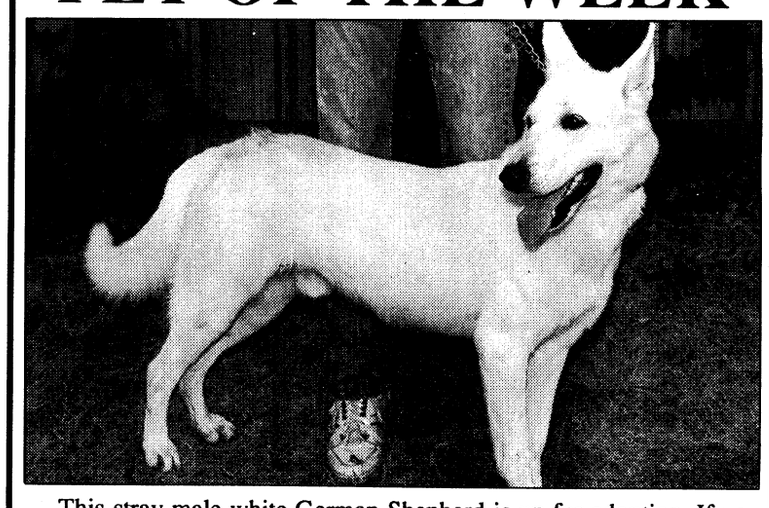
Maj. Randall P. Maschek

"War is something we've always trained and prepared for but I didn't anticipate it ever really happening to me," he said.

"As a matter of fact, when the whole thing kicked off I was on leave and got a phone call. The next day I was back at Fort Benning."

In Saudi Arabia, while assigned to 1st Corps Support Command, XVIII Airborne Corps, Mashchek directed UH-1 and UH-60 helicopters in support missions that included the evacuation of casualties and hospital facilities.

"The desert was a real experience," Maschek said. "Flying in that type of environment at night with night vision goggles was a challenge in itself. The environment was unique and nothing like the National Training Center (Fort Irwin, Calif.)."



Maschek said he credits the success of his missions to the soldiers under his command.

"I can't say enough about the quality of the soldiers. Their drive to accomplish the mission and their intelligence in going about accomplishing the mission — that's what made it work," he said.

"They're the ones who performed the mission and made me look good. People worked together, trained together and fought together. I never had a soldier refuse to fly a mission."

Maschek left command of the 498th in August to become chief of Branch 3 Leadership Division and an instructor at the U.S. Army Infantry School.

324th trains for deployment

By Tom Wilkinson
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

Field Marshal Erwin Rommel once said, "Quartermaster decides the battle before the first shot is fired."

For the officers of the 324th Forward Support Battalion, the idea and focus of training the trainer first is their key to ensuring success on the battlefield.

The "Dependables" recently went to the field with only the officers to instruct and orient the group on its upcoming National Training Center rotation this summer. The event was labeled "Omega Day" by Lt. Col. Robert T. Dial, the battalion commander.

"Omega is the final letter of the Greek alphabet," said Dial. "I borrowed it from my days with the rangers. It represents the final or capstone training prior to execution and full committal of resources."

"This is 27 continuous hours of event-oriented officer leader training," he continued. "The key is to train on command and control skills focused at the platoon and company level."

The event began as the officers road-marched out to their training site. They were then separated into three groups and received missions on a 20-by- 20-foot sand table of the NTC.

Next, the groups scrambled to execute a five-paragraph operations order for their mission with the culmination of briefing their order. The remainder of the day was an exercise in determining ambulance exchange points on the sand table, determining the proper locations to meet wounded soldiers at a site closer to the unit.

As evening turned to darkness, the Dependables paired up and executed a night land navigation course — complete with swamp crossings.

The next morning, the soldiers discussed and identified proper individual and crew-served fighting positions, conducted classes and hands-on training in communication equipment, and concluded with a tactical road march back to their battalion. "When you take officers out and focus on event training, it pays far more dividends than looking at a conceptual event," said Dial. "As the commander, I focus at the platoon level. The best way to do this is to make the platoon leader do it in front of me."

The battalion plans to continue to do this type of training quarterly.

Next quarter, these quartermasters can look forward to rail-load procedures and mounted land navigation at night.

SOA welcomes bishop

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

The School of the Americas hosted a three-day visit by the Auxiliary Bishop of Tegucigalpa, Honduras, from Nov. 12 to 15, who initiated a class designed to open dialogue between the Catholic Church and the future military leaders of Latin America.

Bishop Oscar Andres Rodriguez, who also presides over the Latin American Conference of Bishops , presented a class to Latin American officers enrolled in the Command and General Staff College.

The two-hour session explained the church's concept of Authentic liberation theology and Social Doctrine, concepts designed to increase the standard of living for all Latin Americans.

According to Chaplain (Capt.) Michael Travaglione, chaplain for School of the Americas, Rodriguez explained the church's "official teaching of liberation theology as opposed to an interpretation of liberation theology from the extreme left."

"Liberation theology is an option for the poor so they can be liberated spiritually and humanely, which emphasizes non-violence and dialogue," Travaglione said.

Rodriguez made a clear distinction between authentic and unauthentic liberation theology.

In the case of authentic liberation theology, non-violence is stressed because the message of the gospel is non-violence, Travaglione said.

However, unauthentic liberation theology is based on Marxism and calls for violence, he added, something official church doctrine opposes.

Rodriguez also called for inacting the social doctrine of the church in third world countries, Travaglione said.

The social doctrine of the church applies to oppressed people who cannot speak for themselves, in which case the church speaks for them in areas of education, health or anything else the government should be concerned with," Travaglione said.

The class was well received and seemed to open an avenue of communication between the church and the military.

"A problem in Latin America is the lack of dialogue between the military and the church. Prior to leaving, the Bishop and I discussed this class, and he hopes he will be able to talk more with these military leaders when they return to Central America," Travaglione said.

Before Rodriguez left, however, he conducted a confirmation and First Communion, religious sacramental rites of the Catholic Church, at Lavoie Chapel, and toured Fort Benning.

Rodriguez observed soldiers being trained at the Infantry Training Center, received a guided tour of the National Infantry Museum and attended a briefing on different procedures of the Airborne School.

The airborne tour was particularly interesting for Rodriguez, Travaglione said, because he flies planes.

Rodriguez was offered an invitation to return to the school and extend his class by a day or two; and, according to Travaglione, the Bishop was looking forward to it.

A Marauder's Recollections

"The Bastards of Burma"
By Michael Gabbett
Review by Charles Googe

"The Bastards of Burma" deals with a part of World War II few Americans know- or knew- much about- the China-Burma-India theater.

The "Bastards" in the title are Merrill's Marauders, named by a reporter after Brig. Gen. Frank D. Merrill- officially, the 5307th Composite Unit, Provisional. Later most of the Marauders became part of the 475th Infantry.

Their exploits in driving the Japanese out of Burma are legendary. Albuquerque author Michael Gabbett, who fought with the Marauders,tells not only of key battles for Myitkyina and later for Bhamo and Lashio, but also relayes adventures during their all-too-infrequent rest and recuperation periods.

Surprisingly, Gabbett also gives the Japanese view-point.

For those who love books about jungle warfare, it makes for solid reading.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Jane M. Winand
Staff Judge Advocates' Office

Q: I got a surprise in the mail last week. A debt collector sent me a nasty, threatening letter. He is trying to collect $2,500 that he says I owe to a credit card company. I have never had dealings with that company and do not owe it anything. This week I've been getting nasty phone calls from a guy that works for the debt collector. He calls at all hours of the day and night both at home and at my unit. He won't believe me when I tell him that he has the wrong person. How can I get this guy to stop harassing me? Is my credit life over?

A: You are in luck! The Fair Debt Collection Practices Act protects consumers from certain outrageous practices of debt collectors. You have the right, within 30 days of initial receipt of the notice of the debt, to demand, in writing, verification of the debt. Once you dispute the debt in writing, the debt collector must stop collection activities until the requested information is provided to you. Copies of contracts, promissory notes and other documentation will clearly show either that someone used your name and forged your signature or that the creditor and debt collector have the wrong person. If your name is common, a clerical error may result in someone else's debt being listed under your name.

The act also limits the contact that a debt collector may have with an alleged debtor. Generally, a debt collector may not call you before 8 a.m. or after 9 p.m. Furthermore, if the debt collector knows or should know that your employer prohibits you from receiving communications from debt collectors at work, then the debt collector cannot call you at your place of employment.

Another way to limit your exposure to the debt collector is to have an attorney represent you. Once the debt collector knows or should know that you are represented by an attorney, the debt collector in most cases cannot have any further contact with you but must communicate directly with your lawyer.

The act has some teeth in it for debt collectors who violate its provisions. The act provides for the award of actual damages, court costs, attorney's fee, and additional damages up to $1,000 if the court finds that the debt collector failed to comply with the provisions of the act.

It is suggested that you call the Legal Assistance Office at 545-3281 or 545-3282 to make an appointment to speak with an attorney.

That attorney can dispute the debt in writing on your behalf and then request that all future communications regarding your case be directed to the attorney.

Continental Singers perform 'Set them Free'

By Gabriele Sonnenberg
USAIC Chaplains Office

The Regimental Chapel was the site of a concert performed by the "Continental Singers," on Nov. 10.

They presented the program "Set Them Free,"which is a new and dynamic performance, according to the Continental Ministries, Denver. During their performance, they shared the love of Christ and freedom through Christ with the audience. Several people turned their hearts toward Jesus Christ and many others recommitted their lives to Christ.

The Continental Singers are a group of young people from all over the United States and Canada. They volunteer for four months of the year to communicate their music ministry to military bases and religious communities around the world.

"For close to a quarter of a century, Continental Singers have been providing a life-changing experience which has affected more than 12,000 tour members," said Jim Chaffee, executive vice president for both Continental Singers and Christian Artists Corporation. "A large number of those young people, as a result of the Christian leadership skills they have honed on tour, have gone on to become pastors, missionaries, performing artists, ministers of music, worship leaders and Sunday School teachers."

Chaffee continues, "One of our ministry's goals is to have each Continental return to their home church with a more effective Christian walk - ready to use the skills God has perfected in them through their Continental tour experience."

In 1991, the Continental Singers have 37 groups covering all areas of the globe, including all states, Australia, Asia, Canada, Europe, Soviet Union, South America and Southern Africa.

Hispanic religious program grows

By Michael J. Travaglione
USAIC Chaplains' Office

The Hispanic Catholic Christian Doctrine Religious Education program has grown considerably over the last couple of years.

The program was established by the School of Americas' chaplain in response to the religious needs of the children of Latin American guest instructors and students.

Since the Latin American families return to their countries of origin after one or two years at SOA, it is important that they receive religious instruction in Spanish.

CCD has evolved into a biannual religious education program. Since many Latin American families arrive at the SOA in January, the Hispanic CCD program commences the first week of February and ends in June with a First Communion and Confirmation ceremony.

Those children, who are not sufficiently prepared to receive the sacraments at the end of this period of time, are required to attend the second CCD instructional program, which begins in August and ends in November with another First Communion and Confirmation ceremony.

Aside from preparing Latin American children for the reception of First Penance, First Communion, and Confirmation, the Hispanic CCD program has also led to the formation of a Hispanic Catholic Youth Group which consists of those youngsters who receive the sacrament of Confirmation.

This program has grown significantly because of the outstanding efforts of our dedicated catechist, parents, and the complete cooperation of Phil Reilly, the Catholic religious education director.

The Hispanic Religious Education program is currently at the Religious Education Center immediately after the 10 a.m. Hispanic Catholic Mass at the SOA Chapel on Sunday.

The 1991 Hispanic CCD program ended with a Hispanic Mass of First Communion and Confirmation. This solemn liturgy was presided over by Bishop Oscar Andres Rodriguez at 7 p.m. Nov. 13 in the SOA Chapel. Rodriguez is from the Central American country of Honduras and is president of the Latin American Episcopal Conference in Central America. He is also a well known scholar and religious writer in Latin America and is fluent in English, German, French, Italian, and Latin as well as his native Spanish language.

Episcopalians share beliefs and welcome new members

By Gabriele Sonnenberg
USAIC Chaplains Office

The Episcopal congregation meets Sundays at 11 a.m. for Holy Eucharist at the Regimental Chapel, Sand Hill.

Chaplain (Capt.) George Holston provides pastoral care for Episcopalians at Fort Benning.

The Episcopalians have the same general beliefs as members of the Church of England. They stress the authority of the Bible, accept the apostles and nicene creeds, and observe the sacraments of baptism and Holy Communion.

The Bible, being the principal written source of religious information for all ages, is complimented by the "Book of Common Prayer" and the "Hymnal."

"The Book of Common Prayer" is a manual for worship, and, as such, is both the statement of what Episcopalians believe and their call to ministry. It presents a flexible format for present-day worshipping communities to express their faith, yet links Episcopalians securely to their history and tradition.

Approximately 95 percent of the "Book of Common Prayer" is taken from God's word.

"The Episcopal congregation at Fort Benning welcomes people of all ages to come and be part of this rich worship experience," Holston said.

Newcomers receive help

Post provides housing, briefings for new residents

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

With the arrival of a new battalion of engineers to Fort Benning by December, Army Community Services Outreach and Guest Housing have begun a series of programs to help orient newcomers to the post beginning with their stay in Guest Housing.

According to Mary Allen, Outreach coordinator, the purpose of the program series will be to promote an awareness of community programs so that soldiers' families will feel self-reliant enough to know where to find help when they need it, avoid personal and family crises and have a sense of belonging to the local community.

It is aimed at junior enlisted soldiers, private through specialist, or any newcomers to the military.

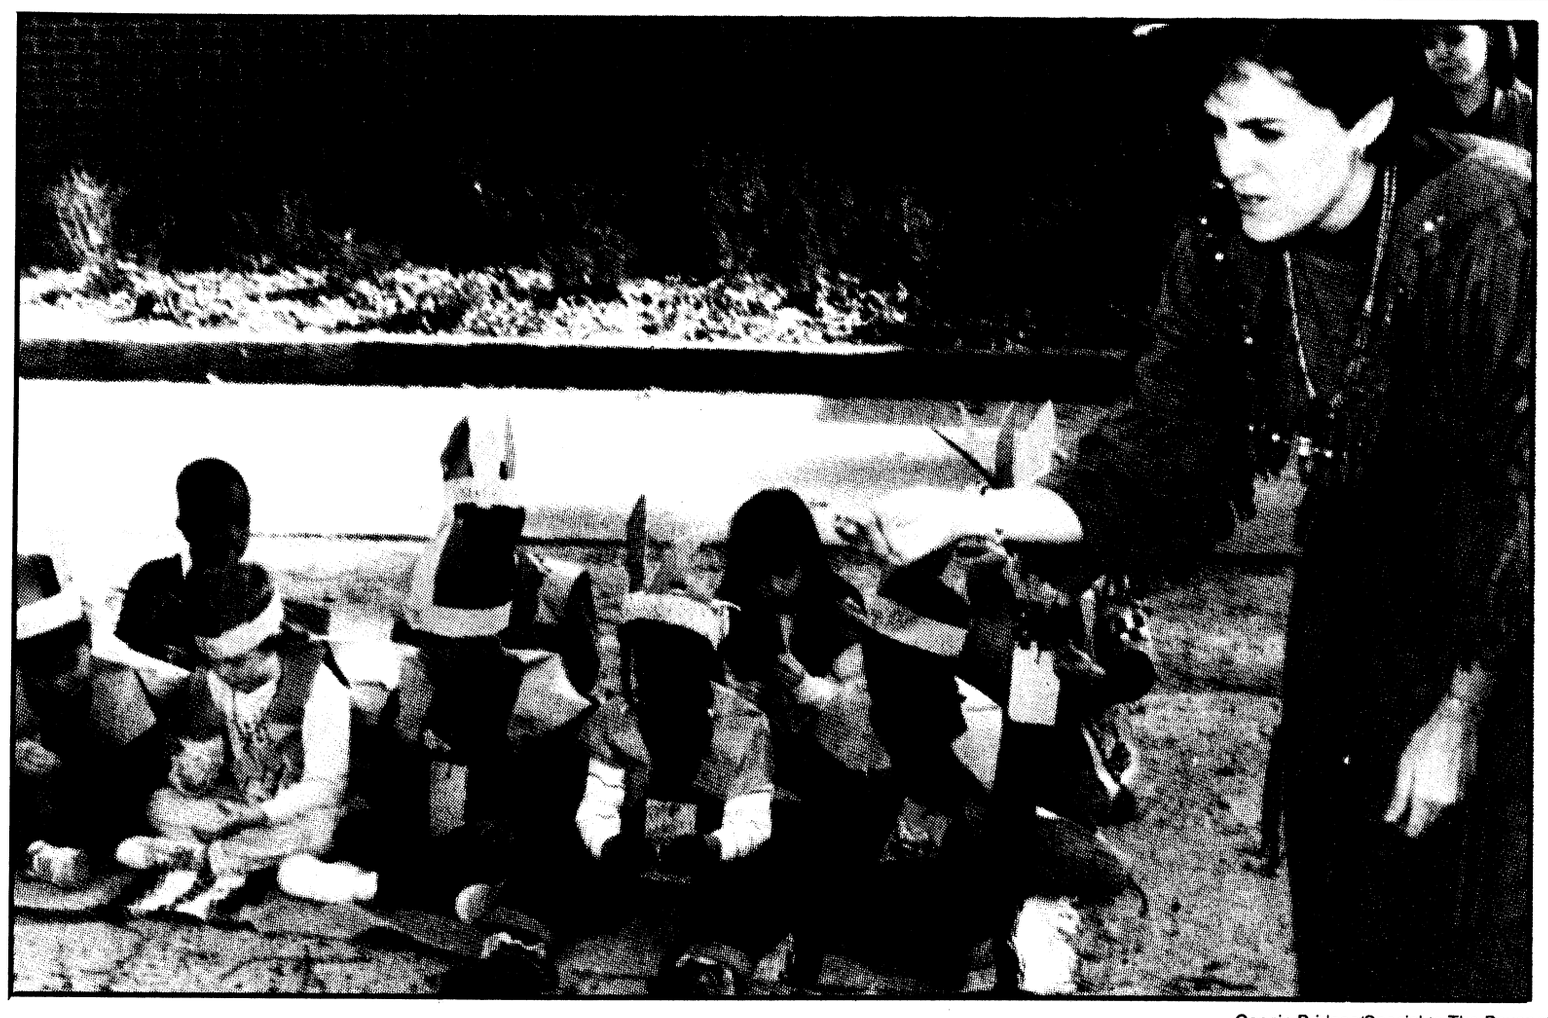
Allen said, "We believe that if we give them the tools to participate in the community, it will set them in the right direction."

The first program Oct. 24 was on "Money Management." This month, Lt. Col. Roberta Dyer, chief of Community Health Nursing, will be speaking on improving access to health care on post. Her talk has been set for Monday from 1:30 to 3 p.m. at Guest Housing, Collins Hall, building 38, Richardson Circle.

Though preregistration is not necessary, anyone interested in more information can call 689-0067, extension 2901 or 4101.

Charlesetta Adams, lodge hostess for the Distinguished Visitors Quarters, and Naomi Harbin, hostess for the Guest House, noted that many wives have no transportation upon their arrival, and holding the programs in Guest Housing answers that problem. Children are also welcome to come with them.

Dyer added that this program fits in with the Army's new coordinated health care program, "Gateway to Care," an approach to military medicine that encourages the patient to largely determine their own health care needs and make arrangements for that care with easier access.



"Many times newcomers don't know how to get into the system," Dyer said. "Knowing where to call for help with abuse, finding a job or working out a budget relieves the stress to work through these problems."

Allen said that they will be surveying families as time goes on to see what subject matter they would like to see addressed.

So far all of the post agencies that have been contacted to help have been supportive of this venture. Ray Wagner, the Fort Benning billeting officer in charge of Guest Housing, has been especially helpful, said Allen.

"It's hoped that showing care and concern for incoming families will make the transition here easier for everyone," Allen said.

The program planned for next month is "Turkey Tips," with Linda Kennedy and her staff from the Georgia Extension Service in charge. She will be teaching young families to properly prepare turkeys for holiday meals. It has been scheduled for Dec. 12 from 1 to 2:30 p.m. at the same location in Guest Housing.

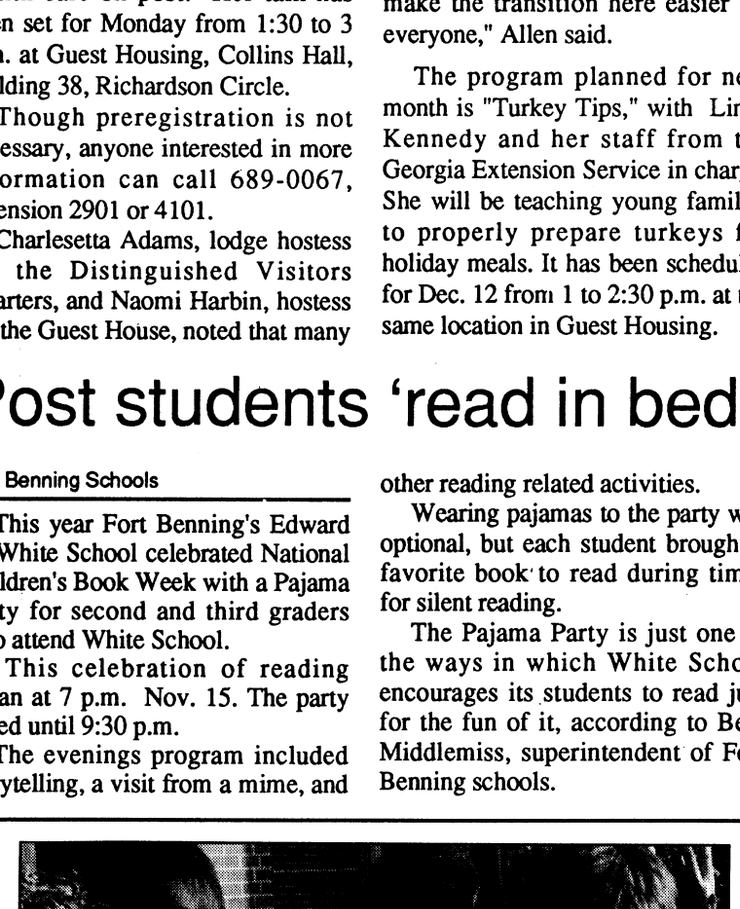
Little Indians

Ann Saunders, kindergarten teacher at McBride School, demonstrates the use of berry dye at an outdoor session at the school Nov. 15. Kindergartners learned about life for American Indians, including how the Indians dyed with berries, made bowls out of clay and made music with the beat of a drum. Saunders taught students about the Indians' many uses for berries, and the students received hands-on experience.

Post students 'read in bed'

Fort Benning Schools



This year Fort Benning's Edward A. White School celebrated National Children's Book Week with a Pajama Party for second and third graders who attend White School.

This celebration of reading began at 7 p.m. Nov. 15. The party lasted until 9:30 p.m.

The evenings program included storytelling, a visit from a mime, and other reading related activities.

Wearing pajamas to the party was optional, but each student brought a favorite book to read during times for silent reading.

The Pajama Party is just one of the ways in which White School encourages its students to read just for the fun of it, according to Beth Middlemiss, superintendent of Fort Benning schools.

OWC hosts post bazaar

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Crowds had to slowly work their way around to all of the booths at the Benning Bazaar Saturdayp because of the large number of people at Faith Middle School.

According to Officers Wives Club President Kathy Henderson, a total of 75 spaces were sold to vendors for this year's event.

"We have a good history," she said as a reason for the large number of people. "Some of the vendors have been coming for a long time. For example, the Columbus Studio and their art have been with us for eight years."

Some of the booths' offerings were new, like the Infantry Museum Gift Shop, the Pacelli High School food booth, and the basket lady making the Greek salads.

There was also the usual abundance of country crafts, some clothing decorated by two wives of students in the Infantry Officer Advanced Course, antique jewelry, stained glass work, and Santa with his sleigh available for photos.

However, the most unique entrepreneur at the event was 12-year-old Joseph Trez, who ran his own food booth featuring his fixed-on-the-spot funnel cakes. After becoming adept with a cookbook, he talked his parents into allowing him to have a booth to work for his tuition at Citadel Summer Camp.

Henderson said that 70 percent of the profit from the bazaar will go into the OWC's Welfare Fund, and therefore find its way back into the community.

Those who contributed much to the bazaar's success included Maria Fuller, bazaar chairman; Kelly Conaway, vendor chairwoman; Melody Davis, country store chairwoman; Scott Champlain, Company C, 4th Ranger Training Battalion, Santa; Katie Jessup, elf; Columbus Bank and Trust Co., donator of the funds for the quilt given away; and Waldrup Printers.

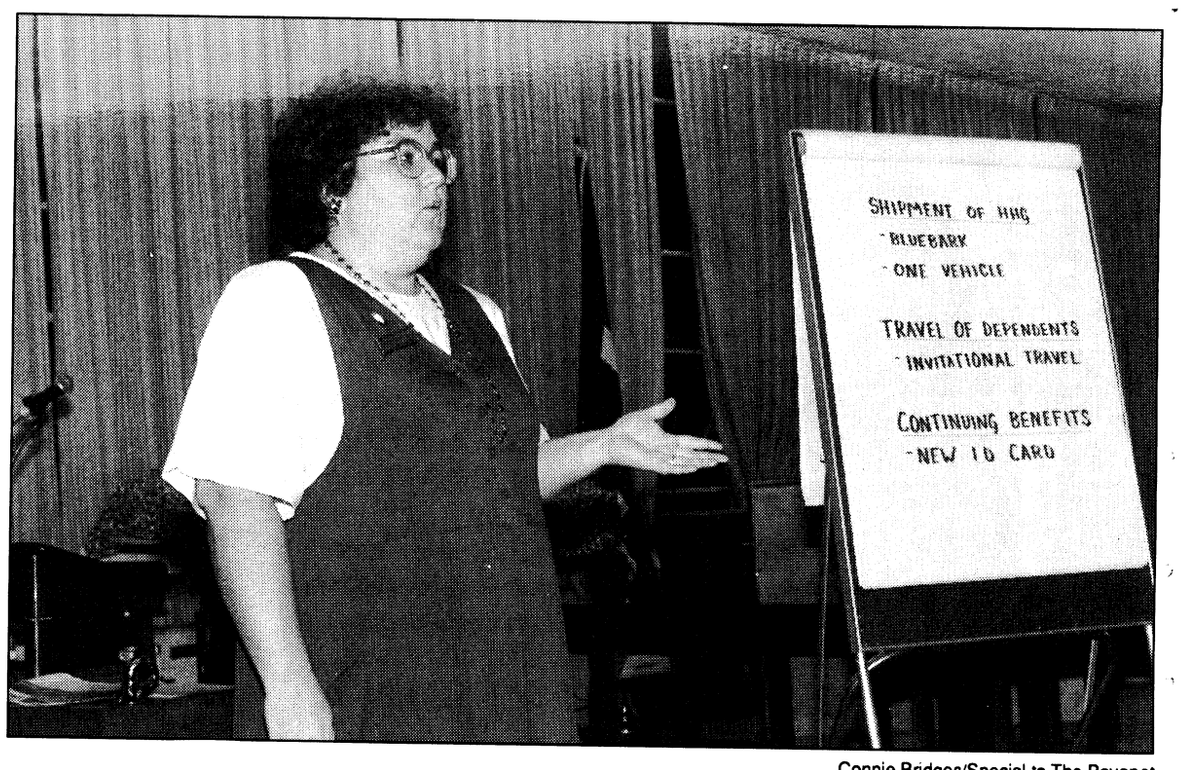
Leadership seminar helps spouses

Officers' wives learn ways to deal with stress, unit trauma

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet



"It used to be that if you were lucky enough to have a commander's wife to take you under her wing, you learned what you needed to know," said Patsy Chilcote, volunteer leader. "Now we're lucky to have the Leadership Seminar."

Chilcote said the course is aimed at spouses of students in the Infantry Officers Advanced Course, though other officers' wives who are permanently assigned to post may attend on a standby basis.

This means that course matter is addressed more on a company level here, though at some posts it is on a battalion level.

Once a year, usually in the fall, the course is held in the evening for five nights over two weeks for working wives. The rest of the year, it is held for five consecutive mornings in the 11th Infantry Regiment Chapel.

Since the Advanced Course students are only here for six months, the majority of the wives do not work and attending in the mornings is not a problem.

Connie Bridges/Special to The Bayonet

Facilitator Kelly Conway conducts a large group lecture on coping with trauma.

The next class is scheduled for Jan. 13 to 17, 8:45 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

Chilcote said that they have about 10 to 11 facilitators for the classes, and last year those people put in 3,000 volunteer hours to keep this program going on post. About 50 people can be accommodated for each class.

Subject matter includes group dynamics, values, communication, situational leadership, coping with trauma in the unit, stress and family support groups, as well as panel discussions featuring wives of non-commissioned officers and commissioned officers.

Chilcote said the time is split up about 50-50 between large group lectures and small group discussions and brainstorming.

Lillie Tutt, Leadership Seminar secretary, said that the sessions help to make the spouses feel more comfortable with the role of a company commander's spouse by focusing on what leadership skills are important.

She added that the understanding of group dynamics that is presented is applicable to any group situation.

Anyone interested in attending the next session should call 545-1936.

Salute to 'M*A*S*H' Monday

By JAY BOBBIN
Tribune Media Services

CBS' second "Classic Weekend" of the year gives more Emmy Award-winning series of the network's past their due.

The three-day event — first staged last February with looks back at "All in the Family," "The Ed Sullivan Show" and "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" — starts with Saturday's retrospective of the 1970s "Bob Newhart Show," and continues Sunday with a new two-hour compilation of Sullivan highlights, as host Burt Reynolds presents clips from the long-running variety program (1948-71) that weren't seen in the first special.

SPOTLIGHT

Then on Monday, Shelley Long presides over "Memories of 'M*A*S*H,'" a 90-minute recollection of the Korean War-set 1972-83 comedy (still seen widely in local, weekday syndication) that includes interviews with virtually all of the principal stars and many of the key creative personnel. Long's presence might be questioned initially, but she made a pre-"Cheers" appearance in a 1979 "M*A*S*H" episode, playing a nurse involved romantically with wisecracking surgeon Hawkeye Pierce (Alan Alda).

"M*A*S*H" continues to hold a special place in the annals of television, since its final episode remains the highest-rated program in the medium's history. Celebrated writer Larry Gelbart, who was a vital member of the show's producing and scripting team during its first four seasons, recalls that the comedy came perilously close to being denied that opportunity early on. "Our ratings were such that none of us were sure we'd be picked up beyond the the first season," he confirms. "Happily, we were, largely because Mrs. William Paley (the wife of CBS' then-chairman) was very fond of the show and spoke up for it a great deal. When we came back the second year, we were put in a much-better time slot behind 'All in the Family,' and we never looked back."

According to Gelbart, CBS executives of the time had enormous concerns about the approach to war that "M*A*S*H" took, since it followed its 1970 movie predecessor by mixing overt irreverence with the harsh reality of combat. "They were quite anxious for us not to dwell on the more dramatic aspects," Gelbart re-

Wind Ensemble concert Sunday

Columbus College

The Columbus College Wind Ensemble will present its first concert of the season on Sunday at 3 p.m. in the college's Fine Arts Hall auditorium.

Under the direction of the college's new director of bands, Paula Crider, the program will feature a wide variety of musical styles including two new works by contemporary composers.

It will open with "Festivo," a 1985 composition by English composer Edward Gregson, and continue with a setting of a chorale by Houseknecht from the Russian Orthodox Church, "Salvation is Created," as a tribute to world events which have led to a resurgence of freedom of religion in communist countries.

The next composition, a seven-movement work by Timothy Broege, "Sinfonia V: Sinfonia Sacra et Profana," is a study in contrasts between the sacred and secular, and it will be followed by "Scotch Strathspey and Reel," a tuneful and spirited representation of folk melodies by Percy Grainger.

What: Wind Ensemble Concert

Where: Fine Arts Hall auditorium

When: 3 p.m., Sunday

"The Italian Polka" by Serge Rachmaninoff will be performed in its arrangement for band, and a second contemporary work, "Of Sailors and Whales" by well known composer Francis McBeth will conclude the program.

The concert will be the first performance of the Wind Ensemble under the direction of Crider. A nationally recognized bandmaster, she previously served as an associate professor of music and assistant director of the University of Texas Longhorn Bands. She also served as conductor of the University of Texas Symphonic Band, Longhorn concert bands, and the basketball, ceremonial, and summer bands.

Crider holds degrees in music and English literature from the University of Southern Mississippi and a master's degree in music education from the University of Texas. She is the recipient of numerous awards and honors, and has been published in several music journals.

She assumed her new responsibilities at Columbus College in September, following the retirement of Col. Hal Gibson, who had directed the college's band program for 15 years.

The premier performance by Crider with the Columbus College Wind Ensemble is free and open to the public.

For further information, contact the college's Schwob Department of Music at 568-2049.

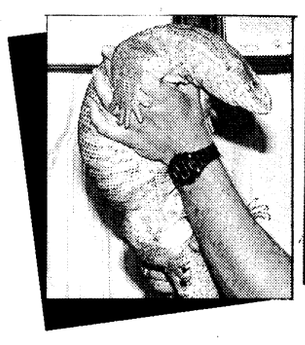
Dear Neighbor:

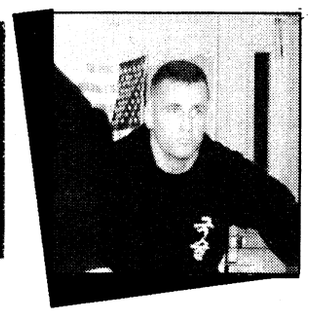
With the holiday season upon us, I'm reminded of sixteenth century English clergyman Robert South who once said, "If there be any truer measure of a man than by what he does, it must be by what he gives." Though spoken long ago, South's words still ring true today.

At CVI, we're more than just a provider of Cable TV service. We're a friend in the communities we serve. Every year, in 18 states across the country, in towns similar to ours, CVI employees and customers join forces with local charitable organizations to help people in need. Together, we collect toys for children, canned goods for the homeless, money to help support athletic programs for the mentally retarded, and much more.

This holiday season please join us in the spirit of giving. Make a contribution toward our holiday drive and help those in our community who are less fortunate. When you do, we'll return the favor with a reduced-price installation.



Sincerely yours,



Ramona Byrd

4th Bn., 41st FA troops get early Thanksgiving

By Willie Hay
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

Thanksgiving came about a week early for the soldiers and families of 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery.

Because of the battalion's scheduled rotation to the National Training Center, Monday through Dec. 22, more than 230 of the soldiers and their family members gathered together Nov. 20 in the "Redlegs" dining facility for the traditional holiday feast.

According to Sgt. 1st Class Percy Cunningham, dining facility manager, dinner was served in two seatings — for single and unaccompanied soldiers in the morning, and for married soldiers and their families in the afternoon. Cunningham and his staff prepared a total of 13 whole and eight boneless turkeys, 144 servings of glazed Cornish hens, 54 pounds of steamship round of beef, more than 40 pounds of ham, and 35 pounds of shrimp.

"We spent the better part of the night preparing for these meals," Cunningham said. "I organized my 17 cooks and five civilian food service workers into teams to prepare the meat, bake the dinner rolls, and set up the display table."

Despite the festive dinner, perhaps Chaplain (Capt.) Robert Hester best expressed the feelings going through many of the soldiers' minds as they prepared for their three weeks of field training at Fort Irwin, Calif.

"You know, each of us could focus on the fact that we'll be gone for Thanksgiving and let ourselves become depressed or angry," Hester said in a special service at Kelley Hill Chapel. "But instead we can focus on the fact that this time a year ago many of us here had no idea when we were going to be back.

"This Thanksgiving we can thank God for bringing us safely through Desert Shield and Desert Storm," he continued. "This year we know that when we come back from NTC we'll be spending Christmas and the holidays with our families."

1st Bn., 18th Inf. returns from NTC

Unit sets record, completing 12 infantry missions

By Richard McInnis
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

More than 400 soldiers of the 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry returned Nov. 20 from the National Training Center at Fort Irwin, Calif.

As the 747 taxied up to the hangar, friends and family members began to edge and stretch to catch a glimpse of their soldiers emerging from the door of the plane.

The soldiers left three weeks ago for NTC to train and serve as the opposing force. During training, while acting as OPFOR, the battalion was given 12 missions.

"Troops in the battalion established a record at NTC," said Lt. Col. E. W. Chamberlain III, battalion commander. "For a total of 12 infantry missions, including air mobile operations, opening and exploitation of enemy defenses, and defending against enemy assaults, the troops successfully completed each individual mission. The folks at NTC wanted us to stay."

After filing off the plane and forming up under the reunited regimental colors, the battalion moved into the reception hangar where Lt. Col Tom Miller, brigade executive officer, welcomed the troops back.

"Welcome home, we're very proud of the great performance at NTC. We are equally proud of the family members and their conduct while the battalion was gone," Miller said.

Following Miller's statement, Chamberlain again congratulated the troops, thanked the families, and released them for a four-day weekend.

Post commemorates attack on Pearl Harbor with presentation, speakers, re-enactment

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

The 50th anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor will be commemorated at the National Infantry Museum Dec. 7 with a program sponsored by the Military History Division of the U.S. Army Infantry School..

According to Capt. Peter Panzeri, commemoration director, a reception for Pearl Harbor survivors at 11 a.m. will begin the commemoration, followed by a formal presentation in the museum auditorium from noon until 2 p.m.

The presentation will feature guest speakers from Georgia and Alabama colleges and universities and a panel discussion.

Topics will include the attack on Pearl Harbor, the U.S. Army Air Corps and the infantry in the Pacific, deployment of the National Guard, Winston Churchill's prior knowledge of the attack and U.S. and Japanese tactics in the Phillipines.

From 2:15 to 5 p.m. there will be several featured events.

What: Pearl Harbor 50th anniversary commemoration
When: Dec. 7
Where: National Infantry Museum

Guided tours of the museum's World War II exhibits will be conducted by the museum staff.

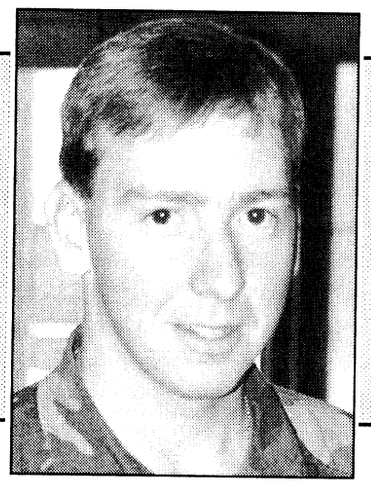
A re-enactment demonstration and a living history display with authentic uniforms, equipment, weapons, and vehicles will be held by the National World War II Re-enactment Society,

The film "Tora, Tora, Tora" will be shown in the auditorium.

The National Historical Miniatures Gaming Society will host wargame simulations, using miniature figures, of the attack on Pearl Harbor and an island battle in the Pacific.

Panzeri said the aim of the program is to present several different aspects of military history.

"We wanted to integrate several different factors: the veterans, the academia, the re-enactment and wargame organizations, and a Hollywood film."



Both soldiers and civilians are invited to attend the commemoration, Panzeri said. Remembering history is important for both, he added.

"For American citizens it's important because it's a part of our heritage. We need to remember our veterans: not only what they did but the cause they did it for," Panzeri said.

"For military professionals it's important because we're obligated to study history in order to apply those lessons learned and mistakes made to future operations."

T-Day can be sad for single soldiers

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

COMMENTARY

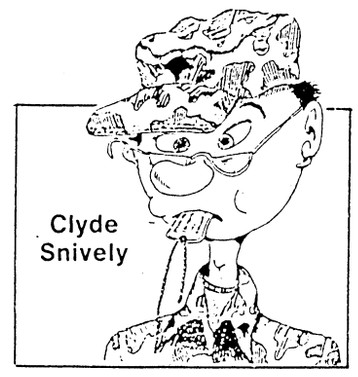
The Big T-Day is tomorrow.

For single soldiers it can be a depressing day.

Sure, no duty for four days (with a few exceptions) but what are we supposed to do?

Yeah, the dining hall puts on a great spread. You can go and eat yourself silly, even see some non-commissioned officers and officers in their dress or mess uniforms eating there with their families.

But all that does is make us miss our families even more. Not only that, no leftover turkey in the fridge for a late night snack or to munch on during the ball games over the weekend.



So just what is there to do with 96 hours of free time?

I guess it depends on how much geld ya got. Ya got the bucks, ya got wheels, you can escape. Still might not have anything to do, but at least you'll be doing nothing somewhere different — a change of scenery always helps.

Few bucks, no wheels, you can still get into town. Hang out at one of the malls, watch the townies come and go. Watch the guys on pass from One-Station Unit Training trying to pick up chicks. But that gets depressing after a while, too. Especially since they seem to be enjoying themselves so much —the herd instinct, they feed off one another.

No bucks, no wheels, you're stuck schlumping around post with your hands in your pockets, trying to pretend you're someone and have somewhere to go and something to do.

If your roommate's out of town, you can put on his head set, flop on your bunk and listen to his Sinead O'Connor collection (remember, we're depressed and want to feel sorry for ourselves).

Naturally, there's always Spc. Goodie who can hardly wait for T-Day.

He's got some family lined up that's going to have him over for the big meal. After that, he'll sit around with the man of the house, picking his teeth and burping manfully as they watch the football game together.

On Friday, he'll be off for a nature trip to Pine Mountain, riding his bike up the trail, visiting the zoo. Then he'll come back to the barracks, where he'll boast about this clean living.

On Saturday and Sunday, he'll work at improving mind and body—visiting the health center in the morning and checking out some historical novels at the library in the afternoon.

Naturally, he'll actually read them and then recap every event with his own interpretation thrown in for my benefit, because he knows the only thing I read is "Jake" and "Farside" in the Atlanta Constitution.

For him, the weekend will have been way too short. For those of us with no imagination, it drags on to eternity—like spending a year in Cleveland.

So, while the post and civilian community go all out during the Christmas holiday season with Operation Holiday—activities in and out of town, tickets to bowl games, pro football and basketball games, tournaments to enter, etc.—that will leave T-Day as a day with not much to do, the day a soldier needs a friend.

Bush thanks soldiers on holiday

On behalf of all Americans, I am delighted to send best wishes for a happy Thanksgiving to the men and women of the United States Armed Forces. Our thoughts and prayers are with you on this occasion.

Today, we give thanks to almighty God for the many blessings that he has bestowed on us, as individuals and as a nation. We thank him for the gift of life itself and for the extraordinary degree or freedom and security that we enjoy here in the United States. Of course, we should not celebrate the blessings of liberty without also acknowledging the courage and the sacrifices of those who have helped to defend our freedom. Thus, we also give thanks for each of you.

Your efforts, along with those of the veterans who went before you, have enabled the light of freedom to burn brightly, not only in the United States, but also in countries around the world. Indeed, many of you serve in places far from home — some spending this holiday away from family and friends, I offer a special salute.

God bless you, and God bless the United States of America.

President George Bush

TRADOC commander gives thanks

A year ago today, many American soldiers spent their Thanksgiving in the deserts of Saudi Arabia, separated from their families and loved ones, prepared to defend freedom.

Other soldiers, in the U.S. and Germany, paused in the midst of their deployment activities, asked for blessing, shared a meal and then returned to loading ships and trains on their way to Southwest Asia.

The soldiers and civilians of the U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command and other organizations in the United States selflessly worked through the holidays to support those who found themselves placed in harm's way. Everyone pulled together and did their duty as a part of the Army family. This teamwork resulted in the liberation of a nation, and others can now be thankful for the gift of freedom that they enjoy.

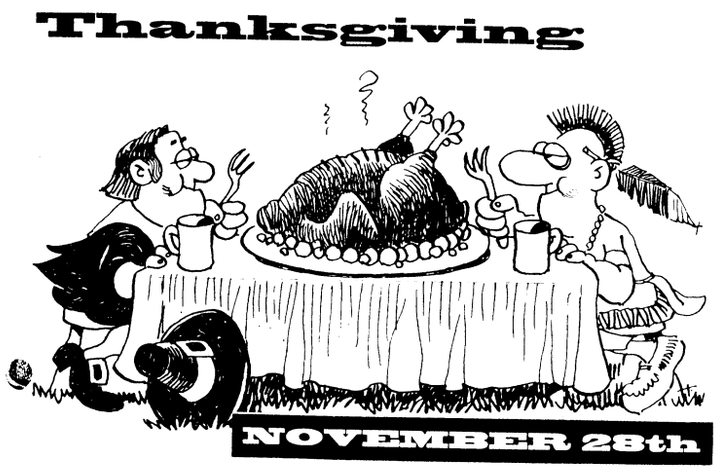
This year as you relax, express your gratitude and share your day with friends and family, I ask that you remember those who still serve at the many camps, posts and kasernes throughout the world. Join me in giving thanks for all the sacrifices that these men and women in the military and their families make to ensure freedom continues to ring throughout this land and the world.

Denise and I are especially grateful and give thanks for the contributions the TRADOC family makes to this organization and the defense of our nation. Thank you for what are doing for our Army and for TRADOC.

Frederick M. Franks Jr.
Training and Doctrine Command commander

Stone sends troops holiday message

Thanksgiving is a time for all of us to reflect on our blessings and hopes for the future. This year, our prayers have a special meaning. All around the world, people faced historic challenges. As the year began, more than thirty nations came together, under American leadership, to defeat aggression in the Persia Gulf. Half a year later, millions of Russians, Lithuanians and others defended tyranny in the very heart of communism's old empire.



Never have the blessings seemed richer. Never have our hopes for a better world seemed more real. For this, America owes a special debt to you, the men and women of our armed forces.

U.S. troops have fought for liberty ever since our small republic declared its people free. This year, once again, our forces were asked to go in harm's way against a dangerous aggressor. Troops in the gulf carried out their mission with professionalism and courage. Others of you watched over American security at bases here around the world. I'm immensely proud to be associated with such a talented and dedicate group of people.

The crises we have faced this year remind us that freedom does not come easy. Our defense takes long years of training and preparation. It takes the willingness of all Americans to stand up for our nation's principles and support our troops. And, in the end, it takes soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines like you, who put on this nation's uniform and pay the price of freedom.

Whether you were in the gulf last winter or doing tough jobs here at home and around the world, you and your families have the gratitude of every American. To all of you, my best wishes for a happy Thanksgiving—and my personal thanks for a job well done.

NCOA holds luncheon on post

CG stresses taking care of soldiers

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

The quality of life for Fort Benning soldiers and their families must be maintained at the highest possible state, said Post Commander Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White in a speech to chapter 295 of the Non-Commissioned Oficers' Association, Nov. 13 at the Non-Commissioned Officers Club.

White, who was the guest speaker, addressed the quality of today's soldier and the need, in the face of military budget reductions, for the Army to make the most of the resorces it has.

Following his remarks, White received an honorary membership in the NCOA from Chairman of the Board Roger Putam.

In his speech, White said that today's soldiers are serving in the best Army the country has ever known.

"The soldiers we had 10 years ago are not nearly the quality of soldiers we have today. The non-commissioned officers and the officers corps were not nearly the quality we have in the Army today, and most importantly, the confidence of the American people in the military was nothing 10 years ago compared to what it is today."

White said the transformation into the world's finest soldiers was a gradual process.

"It didn't happen overnight. It happened because we have many, many dedicated professionals who would not accept that the military had to be less than a quality force."

The success of Operations Just Cause and Desert Storm, as well as the demise of world communism, are a result of the quality of today's Army, said White, who went on to say that with upcoming cuts in the military's budget the challenge for the future will be to maintain that quality.

White used Fort Benning as an example. "The very minimum that you can operate Fort Benning, Ga., is about $170 million a year. In 1992 we're going to get $150 million. In 1993 we're supposed to get $148 million. So what do we do? How do we survive?"

White said that by looking for ways to operate the Army more efficiently, the challenge will be met, but that for the Army to maintain its edge, the quality of life for the soldier must not suffer in order to foot the bill.

"If we really want top quality people to stay in the Army, we must treat them with dignity, and we must provide them with the quality of service that they deserve," he said.

"You're not going to keep a quality soldier if he lives like a bum and the barracks start to fall down, or eats at a dining facility that's sub-standard, or is treated rudely by some activity on a military post," added White.

White concluded his speech with a challenge to the NCOA to fight to maintain the quality of life for the soldier.

"We have plenty of advocates out there for the M1 Tank and the Bradley Fighting Vehicle. I want advocates for the soldier."

Post Commander Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White prepares to present Staff Sgt. Kenneth Carden with the Soldier's Medal during a ceremony Monday.

Sergeant earns Soldier's Medal for bravery in Iraq

USAIC Public Affairs Office

A 34th Medical Battalion soldier received the Army Soldier's Medal Monday, during a ceremony at the battalion's parade field.

Fort Benning Commander Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White presented the prestigious award to Staff Sgt. Kenneth Carden of the 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital, for exceptional heroism in providing life saving first aid to a fellow soldier, during Operation Desert Storm.

Carden crawled beneath an overturned five-ton truck, which was leaking fuel, to provide first aid to the severely injured soldier trapped under the wreckage. The accident occured in Iraq when the truck slipped off a muddy road and overturned. There was no enemy or combat activity at the time, and Carden spotted the wrecked vehicle as he traveled the road about 11:45 a.m. on March 5.

After stablilizing the injured soldier, Carden flagged down a passing wrecker, which lifted the wreckage, allowing him to again go under it and remove the soldier. Afterward he assisted in getting a medical evacuation helicopter to the site.

The Soldier's Medal is presented for heroism to those soldiers serving with the Army in any capacity, involving the voluntary risk of life under conditions other than those of conflict with an opposing armed force.

Field artillery unit from Arkansas helps SOA in unique training mission

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning was the base of operations for a National Guard artillery battery that came here to support a School of Americas exercise

Thirty-six soldiers of the 5th Battalion, 206th Field Artillery of the Arkansas National Guard and their equipment, including three 105mm howitzers, arrived at Lawson Army Airfield Saturday at 10:30 a.m.

The Guardsmen worked the field artillery firing missions with Bolivian artillery cadets from SOA.

The exercise started Sunday with day and night firing and continued through Monday afternoon.

The Guard unit was brought to Fort Benning due to the lack of active component support being available. Normally, the 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery , a component of the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division here, provides assistance for this type of exercise. However, that unit is currently at the National Training Center at Fort Irwin, Calif.

Knowing that the 4th Bn., 41st FA would be in California during the SOA exercise, Maj. Fred Rodriguez of the post's reserve component branch, contacted nearby states' National Guard headquarters 30 days ago to determine if an artillery battery would be able to come to Fort Benning. The Arkansas unit agreed to participate.

The 206th is no stranger to working with South American soldiers, having spent several annual training tours in Honduras, working with Honduran artillery officers.

This training exercise is unique in that there will be foreign soldiers working with a National Guard unit on an active-duty military post.

The Arkansas Guardsmen were at Fort Benning under a National Guard-sponsored program— Key Personnel Upgrade Program— which provides Army National Guard soldiers additional training in their current duty specialties at an active Army installation, while assisting active components with their mission.

SOA receives best dining facility award of quarter

By Daniel Maloney
School of Americas

The School of Americas Dining Facility was named the Best Military-Operated Dining Facility for the 4th quarter.

During a ceremony Nov. 18, a plaque was presented by Col. John D. Fuller, chief of staff for Fort Benning, in recognition of the honor.

However, the cooks and employees of the facility are not resting on their laurels.

The SOA Dining Facility has a staff of 10 military cooks and 8 civilian employees under the charge of Sgt. 1st Class Hermenegildo David, non-commissioned officer in charge of the facility, and they are currently gearing up for a traditional Thanksgiving meal.

The facility feeds approximately 325 soldiers, to include Latin American military personnel attending courses at SOA, many of whom will be sampling a Thanksgiving meal for the first time.

"We prepare a traditional American-style menu. It will be a feast, that's a guarantee," David said.

In addition to a roasted turkey, the menu includes a baked ham, cornbread stuffing, macaroni and potato salad, as well as pumpkin, mince meat, cherry and apple pies.

For the students the traditional Thanksgiving fare, David believes, is an opportunity to learn about American culture, part of the school's overall mission.

Actual preparation of the meal is an involved process beginning 18 hours prior to serving time, David said.

The Thanksgiving meal also presents the facility with another opportunity to win an award.

During the "Thanksgiving meal we will compete for best decorated dining facility," he said.

Although Thanksgiving is an important meal for all Americans, for soldiers whose family is far away, the meal takes on added importance.

This aspect is not lost on David.

"It's definitely important. This will be my fourth Thanksgiving meal in a row without my family," David said.

The Thanksgiving meal will be served Thursday from 11 a.m. - 12:30 p.m., for students and personnel on meal cards. Families and soldiers on separate rations will be served from 1 to 2 p.m.

HOLA has committee election

By Daniel Maloney
School of Americas

The School of the Americas Host of Latin Americans Organization held its committee election Nov. 15.

All of the members who were serving on the committee at the time of the election were re-elected, said Ivy N. Rodriguez, director of the informational program for SOA and coordinator for HOLA.

Cory Don Loomis maintained his position as president of HOLA .

Loomis is logistics manager at Kinnett Dairies Ice Cream Plant. He previously served as public affairs officer and chief of tactics at SOA.

Fred Belvin and Cecilia Alexander were re-elected as vice-president and secretary.

Belvin has been a member of the HOLA Committee for nearly three years and a sponsor for four. Belvin was vice-president of the Trust Co. Bank of Columbus before he retired and he is a native of Columbus.

Alexander is secretary for the assistant comandant at SOA. An original member of the HOLA Committee and a sponsor for more than six years, Alexander is also a native of Panama and has resided in Columbus for eight years.

The organization supports a host system for students enrolled in the Command and General Staff College and guest instructors.

The service is vital for these students and instructors because they remain at Fort Benning long enough to bring their families.

Currently HOLA has 60 host families who, Rodriguez said, help the families get settled, find department stores and make appointments, she said.

The hosts also plan social events such as picnics.

They "teach these people the American way of life," Rodriguez added.

It also provides hosts and families an opportunity to exchange cultural customs and traditions.

In the Columbus community itself there also exists the SOA Columbus Support Group, a non-profit organization dedicated to helping assist SOA, Rodriguez said.

The director Nina Garcia, wife of a former school commandant, works out of a house in Columbus that she makes available, free of charge to SOA students, guest instructors and their families so they can have a place to hold parties.

According to Rodriguez, HOLA is always interested in families who want to host students and guest instructors. For more information about becoming a host, contact Rodriguez at 545-3498.

If you are planning to attend Troy State University at Fort Benning as a beginning freshman who is under 21 years of age, who has never attended another college or who is transferring less than 30 quarter hours/20 semester hours of credit, you must submit an acceptable ACT/SAT test score. For more detailed information, please contact your Servicing Education Center or the Registrar's office, Building #2603, telephone number: 689-4709.

Air Force pilot has two loves: flying, martial arts

Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

According to Nate Kelsey, he has two loves. One is flying his A-10 "Warthog" as an Air Force pilot, and the second is the martial arts.

Tuesday and Thursday evenings at the Officers' Club Fitness Center, from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m., Kelsey teaches a form of self-defense, Kuk Sool Won, the national art of Korea and a traditional martial arts form.

Kelsey, has been involved in martial arts for 16 years and has been teaching for the last nine.

"The martial arts classes are very physical. Since February, I have had approximately 62 students start and stop the classes, said Kelsey. "I teach by example and there is a risk involved. There are no rules in defending yourself."

Kelsey teaches form and technique along with meditation and breathing exercises one night and fighting form the next night.

The cost to attend Kelsey's classes are $5 per lesson, with the first lesson free. Due to the physical nature of martial arts, Kelsey's classes are limited to adults.

Retirement:

Will Montana hang up cleats or hang around for one more?

By Gale Sayers

COMMENTARY

With San Francisco 49ers' quarterback Joe Montana out for the entire 1991 season, there has been a lot of attention focused on what the future holds for him.

Many people say they believe Montana should retire, speculating that his recent elbow injury spells the end of his days as a great passer. After all, they say, with four Super Bowl victories to his credit, the highest passing rating in history and an assured place in the Hall of Fame, what would the 35-year-old Montana have to gain from another few seasons?

Fortunately, Montana is the only one in the position to make the decision about when he'll hang up his cleats. Let's face it, he's the master of the comeback. Montana was counted out of the game once before when a back injury required delicate surgery. He came back and won two consecutive Super Bowls.

If his desire to play the game is intact after sitting out a season, why not keep playing? He's a brilliant quarterback and a heck of a competitor. Montana will know pretty quickly if he still has what it takes. After a few 20-yard-out patterns, he'll know if his doctors were right when they said they could repair the elbow damage, and he'll know if the comeback is worth it.

It also is fortunate that Montana's decision will not have to be based on financial concerns. With the salary he has made over the years and his endorsement contracts, if he does come back to play, it will be because of a love for the game, not money. Too often, we see guys trying to come back, bouncing from team to team, injury after injury, because they hadn't planned well enough for the future.

I suffered the first of several knee injuries while playing against the 49ers in 1968—well before Montana's time. The word around the league and in the press was that there was no way I could ever return as the type of running back I had been. I came back the next season and led the entire National Football League in rushing. I was determined that my time to play was not up, and the doubters were wrong.

When I did retire, it was because I simply was no longer able to compete at the same level. What good is a running back who cannot run? It's the same, I'm sure, with Montana. He knows a passer who cannot pass won't help his team.

Don't get me wrong about the 49ers' quarterback situation, though. I do think Steve Young is the future of the team. But if Montana comes to training camp next summer healthy and ready to play, I'm sure he'll get a shot at the job. Until then, I'm not counting out this great competitor.

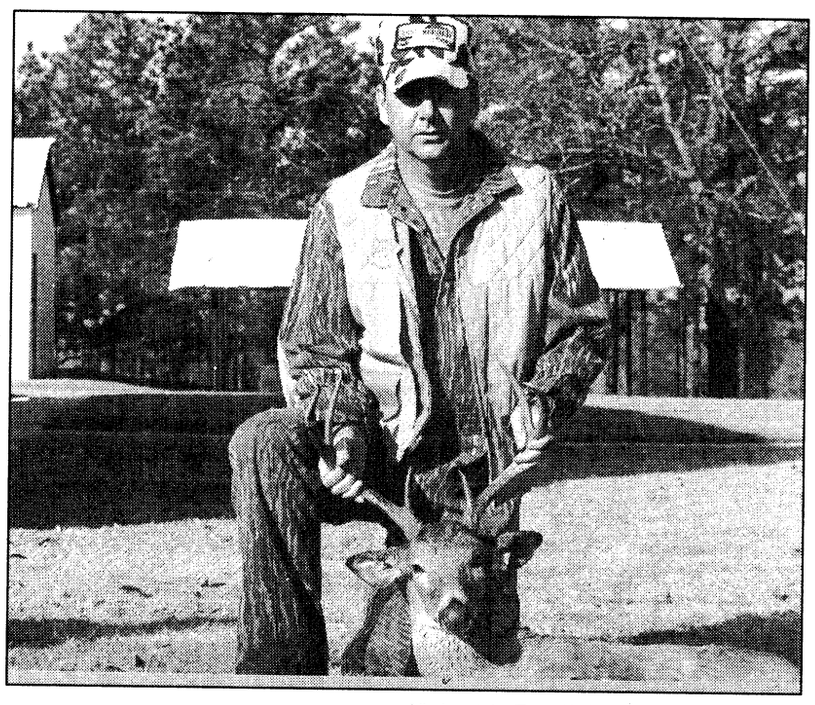
Hunting ethics

Courtesy goes a long way

Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

When you go into the woods to hunt, and you find an empty stand that someone else has built for their use, stop and think how you would feel if you walked up to your stand one morning and found that it was occupied.



We as hunters need to learn a little common courtesy about using other people's deer stands. If you find a stand that's empty early in the morning leave it alone, he may be on the way in. If it is still empty later in the day, it's probably a safe bet that he won't be using it that particular day.

If you are in another hunters stand and he shows up to use it, tell him thanks for letting you use it and give him the stand. This way he's not upset that you're there and you can go hunt another area.

The best thing to do is to just stay out of a stand that does not belong to you, unless you have permission to be there.

The deer check station will be open before and after Thanksgiving, from 7:45 a.m. to 4:15 p.m. weekdays and 9 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. weekends.

Hunters are not required to check deer in, but valuable information can be gathered from the deer harvested on post, such as deer population, health needs, and establishment of seasons. limits.

Soldier collects exotic reptile pets

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Mention the word "pet" and most people think of a dog or a cat. For Staff Sgt. Kevin C. Andreen of the 29th Infantry Regiment's Bradley Nett Team, however, the word has a different meaning.

Andreen, a collector of exotic reptiles, is the proud owner of "Goliath," a 12 foot Burmese Python, and "Rocky," a 4 foot Savanna Monitor lizard. His passion for reptiles, which fortunately his wife Cathy shares, began about two years ago.

"My wife always wanted an iguana and I always wanted a python," said Andreen.

Andreen's collection has grown significantly since he first started. Besides Goliath and Rocky, he owns three Ball Pythons, one other Burmese Python, a Red Tailed Boa, a Reticulate Python, a Texas Rat Snake, two other Savanna Monitor lizards, six iguanas, and a Sudan Plated lizard.

His animals, which are pet store bought and require no special permits to keep, are meticulously taken care of. They are kept in sturdy enclosures that contain special heating rocks and lights that emit Vitamin D, a nutrient essential for reptile growth, said Andreen. They are also perfectly tame.

Andreen said that there's a difference between snakes like his, which are bred in captivity, and those found in the wild.

"Captive-bred snakes don't normally bite. They're used to being handled by people."

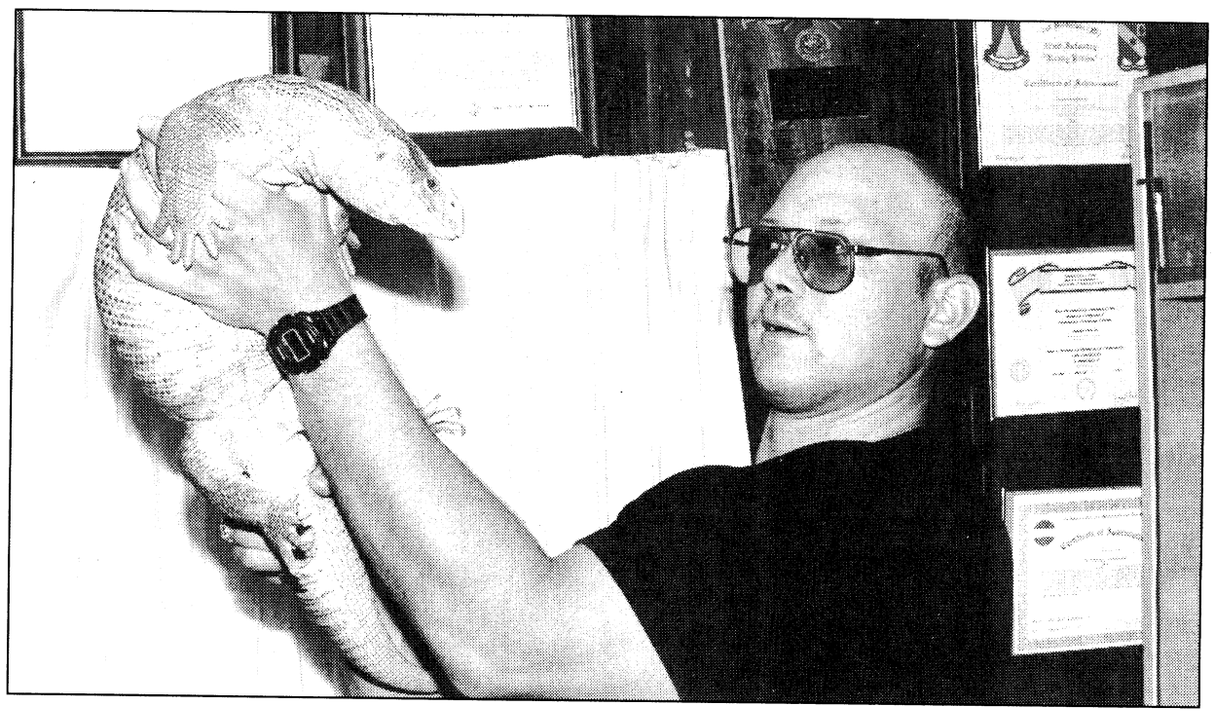
He said that unfortunately many people have misconceptions about reptiles, particularly snakes.

"As soon as somebody hears the word reptile they think of something poisonous or slimy. If a dog bites someone and a snake bites someone the media will blow the snake bite out of proportion. It comes from lack of knowledge."

He cited some statistics from area hospitals and animal control facilities.

"From January to the last week in October, there were reported in area hospitals, including military and civilian, 372 dog bites, 72 cat bites and scratches, nine "others", such as squirrel bites, but only five snake bites, none of which came from snakes that were captive bred."

Andreen said his neighbors don't mind his pets a bit.



"My landlady is really understanding. All the neighbors don't mind either. In fact, when I take Rocky outside to walk him on his leash, the neighborhood children will come over to play with him," he said.

"My neighbors would rather I have the pets I do than a dog. Who wants to hear a dog bark in the middle of the night? My snakes are totally quiet."

Not all people are as understanding though, said Andreen. One of Andreen's friends was recently evicted from his apartment for keeping a snake as a pet.

When he gets out of the Army, Andreen wants to capitalize on his enthusiasm for reptiles to make money.

"I plan to have one of the largest reptile dealerships in the area," he said. "After a hard day's work I just come back here with my snakes and I'm at peace."

Student Wives Association meets

SWA plans many events for spouses of students in IOBC, IOAC

by Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

About 25 wives of students in the Infantry Officer Basic and Advanced Courses made plans for a number of upcoming events at the Kick-off for the group on Nov. 14.

Included in the future dates for the Student Wives Association are a Dec. 5 shopping trip to Opelika's USA Factory Stores and on Dec. 12 hair and cosmetic make-overs at the Officers Club Beauty Salon.

The cost for the Dec. 5 trip will be $5 per person with a limit of 24 people. The bus will leave the Officers Club at 10 a.m. and return about 3 p.m. Reservations must be paid for at the Officers Club Cashier Cage by Dec. 2.

To attend the Dec. 12, 7 p.m. make-overs, interested persons need to contact Corinna Todd, Marketing, Directorate of Community Activities, at 687-8000, by Dec. 9.

Todd said that the purpose for forming the association was to provide opportunities for companionship with peers. Students in IOBC and IOAC are only at Fort Benning for four to five months, but it can seem like a long time with no opportunities to get out of the house.

Kick-off activities for SWA also involved exchanging names for babysitting, and signing up by those capable of offering rides and those needing rides to various events.

Committee representatives for the association will be:

IOBC

Company B - Tricia Grabski (687-4342) and Janet Moore (685-1243).

Co. C - Eva Tohill (687-5331), and one more volunteer is needed.

Co D - Chaunntel Petit (561-7806) and Jamie Leddin (596-0324).

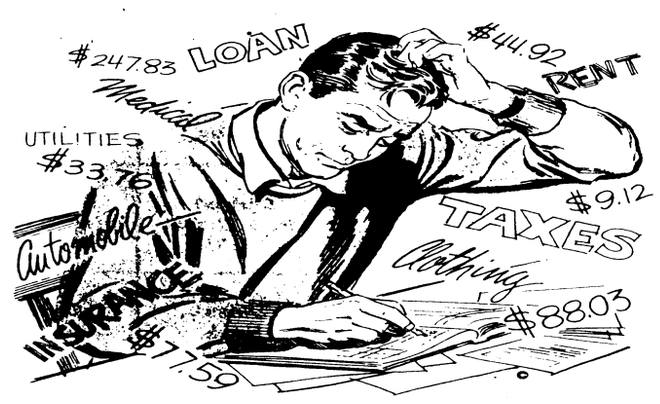
ASK THE JUDGE

By Steve Kaczkowski
Staff Judge Advocate



Q: I was denied a car loan two weeks ago because of bad credit. I usually pay my bills on time and I don't understand why the salesman thinks I have bad credit. What, exactly, is a credit report? What kind of information is contained in a credit report, and for how long? Who gets a copy of my credit report? Can I get a copy?

A: A credit report is an itemization of your personal financial history. It is assembled by businesses which make a profit by gathering information about you and then selling it to those who, in the words of a federal statute which regulates the area, "have a legitimate business need for the information." As you might well imagine, this "need" extends to just about anyone who has financial dealings with you. Thus, the users of credit reports include not only prospective lenders, but potential landlords, employers, and insurers as well.

There is often a lot of confusion as to what kind of information is contained in a credit report. Although the bulk of a credit report is comprised of information relating to one's financial history, they can and do carry additional information, such as the details of criminal arrests, indictments, and convictions.

Another confusing area is the length of time information can stay on a credit report. A safe assumption is that every financial transaction you have ever been involved in will be registered on your credit report. Although some information will undoubtedly be left off, consumers too often rely on the notion that time will erase a bad credit history.

It is true that federal law regulates the amount of time certain information can remain on a person's credit report. For example, a bankruptcy more than ten years old is usually left off a credit report. Paid tax liens, accounts which were placed for collection, and records of criminal activity which are are more than seven years old are usually left off a credit report. However, these time limits do not apply if the consumer is participating in a credit transaction for $50,000 or more, if the consumer is seeking to take out at least $50,000 of life insurance coverage, or if he is seeking a job which pays over $20,000 a year (remember, prospective employers often obtain a copy of your credit report).

Theoretically, negative information about you that is 20 years old can be divulged if you are engaged in one of these transactions. This is the reason why one should never fall into the trap of believing that time will totally blot out the negative aspects of one's credit history.

Since so much information is contained in a credit report, and because so many people see that report, you may wish to obtain a copy of your credit report in order to check it for accuracy. If you have been denied credit within the past 30 days, and a credit report was used in making that decision, you have a right to obtain a copy of your credit report from the applicable reporting agency free of charge.

Even if you have not been denied credit, it never hurts to check your credit report, for they often contain inaccurate information. It is far better to set about correcting any errors contained in your report when you have no immediate need for credit than to go about doing so after you find out that a bad credit report is keeping you from closing on a house.

Let's say you obtain a copy of your credit report and you find that it contains an error. How do you go about correcting it? You contact the credit reporting agency and ask that they investigate the validity of the disputed entry. By law, the agency must investigate, unless the request is patently frivolous. If the investigation reveals that the information is incorrect, the agency must delete the information.

Often, the agency investigates and claims that the disputed information is valid. If that should occur, the consumer is entitled to write a statement of no more than 100 words giving his side of the story. This statement must be included on all future copies of the credit report which contain the disputed entry, as well as to any person the consumer designates who has received a copy of the report within the last six months (or the past two years, if the report had been used for the purpose of determining the individual's fitness for employment).

A consumer who has not been recently turned down for credit must usually pay $10 to $15 for a copy of his credit report. Note, however, that one of the three major agencies, TRW, will provide a consumer with one free copy of his credit report if he asks for it after January 1, 1992. The three largest reporting agencies are Equifax, TRW, and Transunion.

For more advice on correcting an inaccuracy in your report, call legal assistance for an appointment at 545-3282 or 545-3281.

MACH head nurse takes a chance, rescues a patient on Fort Benning

Martin Army Community Hospital

There are times when the Martin Army Community Hospital staff must go to great lengths to deliver health care. On Nov. 7, Maj. Carldine Cisco, head nurse at the MACH emergency room, was talking to friends in the parking lot after work. She and her companions noticed a woman in whites running down the hill and immediately started running after her, thinking there had been an accident in the rush hour traffic.

While running, Cisco realized that the nurse was chasing a woman who was heading down Marne Road toward the Hunt Club. Traffic was backed up and there was no way a vehicle could get through the cars to pursue the running woman. Cisco spotted a man on a motorcycle, tapped him on the shoulder and asked him if he would let her get on and take her to where a crowd had gathered around the woman.

The unknown driver, hidden behind his helmet, did so. He drove in and out around cars and went from hardtop to grass to reach the crowd. He was also conscious that Cisco was not wearing a helmet, a post requirement. The running lady had been stopped and was huddled down, appearing to be afraid of those who were trying to subdue her.

The "Man on the Motorcycle" tells a slightly different version of the incident. Chaplain Gary Sexton, a resident in Clinical Pastoral Education Program, says he was sitting in traffic when Cisco came up to him yelling, "Stop her" and "Let me get on."

Cisco had jumped on the cycle before he could respond. He said she kept telling him to hit the horn as he drove to the site, weaving in and out around the traffic.

On arrival, she jumped off the cycle and told those who were trying to subdue the person that she was head nurse in the ER and knew the patient. She asked them to refrain from their efforts to pick up the unwilling patient and talked to the patient, calming her down. She explained to the patient who she was and that she was going to take her to the ER for treatment.

Cisco succeeded in convincing the woman, a psychiatric patient who had ingested a chemical solution, to get into a van, driven by an unknown passerby who had stopped to help. She persuaded the woman to get treatment in the ER.

Sexton, who is new to cycling, said he's never driven with an adult passenger and kept hoping he could handle the cycle with Cisco on the back. He described Cisco as a "take-charge woman" and is glad that he was able to help, even though it terrified him at the time. While a Yamaha is not exactly a white charger, it did the job.

With the chaplain's help, Cisco reached the patient, who was successfully treated for her medical problem.

MACH lab gets accreditation

Martin Army Community Hospital

The laboratory at Martin Army Community Hospital has again been awarded a two-year accreditation by the Commission on Laboratory Accreditation of the College of American Pathologists based on the results of a recent on-site inspection.

Lt. Col. Dennis L. Hayden, chief, Department of Pathology and the laboratory's director, was advised of this national recognition and congratulated for the "excellence of the services being provided." The laboratory at MACH is one of the more than 4,000 accredited by CAP nationwide.

The CAP Laboratory Accreditation Program, begun in the early 1960s, is recognized by the federal government as being equal to or more stringent that the government's own inspection program.

Inspectors examine the records and quality control of the laboratory for the preceding two years, as well as the education and qualifications of the total staff, the adequacy of the facilities, the equipment, laboratory safety, and laboratory management, to determine how well the laboratory is serving the patient.

Hanukah means freedom for everyone

By Arthur Rutberg
USAIC Chaplain's Office

Reflections Reflections

How do you spell that? Is it Hannuka? Chanuka? Hanukah? Take your pick. The spelling or pronounciation is not important. What is important is the meaning of the holiday.

Within the Jewish festival cycle, Hanukah is one of the least important holidays. It is not mentioned in the Bible. Its observance does not involve a cessation from work. There is no special synagogue service for it. Hanukah has received increased notice in the last few years because of its proximity to Christmas. Although it is a minor holiday, it does have an important message.

Hanukah commemorates a victory won by a band of Judean priests, teachers and soldiers known as Maccabees. It was a miraculous victory of the few over the many. This small band of freedom fighters defeated the mighty Greek army.

The cause of the war was the imposition by the Greeks of martial law over the people of Judea in 168 B.C.E. No longer could the Judeans worship God through holy sacrifices at the temple.

The Greeks forced the Judeans to bow down to Zeus and offer pig sacrifices on the desecrated altar. The righteous people would not stand for it. Through Mattathias and Judah his son called the Maccabee, the people rebelled. They fought for three years, defeated the Greeks, regained their religious freedom and rededicated the temple.

Hanukah means dedication referring to the dedication of the temple in Jerusalem in 165 B.C.E. Before the Judeans could resume worship at the Temple, it had to be cleansed of the pagan altars and Greek idols. The Maccabees rededicated the temple, relit the menorah (candelabra) in the Holy of Holies and celebrated for eight days.

Today we still celebrate for eight days, lighting lights and giving gifts. This year our menorahs will be lit from Dec. 1 through 8 increasing the light each day and displaying the menorah in windows facing out.

The primary significance of Hanukah has nothing to do with gifts or games, candles or candy but with religious freedom.

The story that many know about the oil in the menorah lasting eight days is a nice story but it misses the point.

The true miracle and the key lesson of Hanukah is that no matter what the odds, the people of Judea fought for their religious freedom in opposition to the controlling goverment and they were successful.

Each year, when the menorahs are seen in the windows on Hanukah, it is a reminder of the need to fight for and maintain religious freedom. It is a fundamental human right. It is a right guaranteed to all Americans by the First Amendment to the Constitution. It is one of our highest values. There is an obligation to protect and preserve that freedom.

So, when you see the lighted menorah in the window on Hanukah, remember that just as the Baccabees fought for religious freedom, we must as well.

Dental soldiers take to the field

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Working as an Army dentist or dental assistant leaves little time to concentrate on soldierly skills, so when Fort Benning's Dental Activity conducted a field training exercise, or FTX, Oct. 23 through 25, soldiers who participated got a break from the busy routine of the clinic.

"Going to the field is something that dental clinics don't do very often," said Maj. Thomas Murphy, executive officer of Dental Activity. "When we do go, it's a major undertaking because we don't have any field equipment, weapons, or vehicles assigned to us."

"Thanks to my training NCO, Sgt. 1st Class Aturo Otero, and my first sergeant, Sgt. 1st Class Mary Morris, we were able to get the equipment needed to accomplish the mission."

DENTAC holds one major FTX annually for military personnel, said Murphy. About 48 personnel, officer and enlisted, from the post's six dental clinics participated in this year's FTX.

The purpose was to give personnel the chance to practice and perform common soldiers' tasks they otherwise see very little of, such as weapons qualification, land navigation and first aid.

"Dental personnel must be highly proficient in dental skills and soldier skills because in wartime they might be assigned to field hospitals," Murphy said.

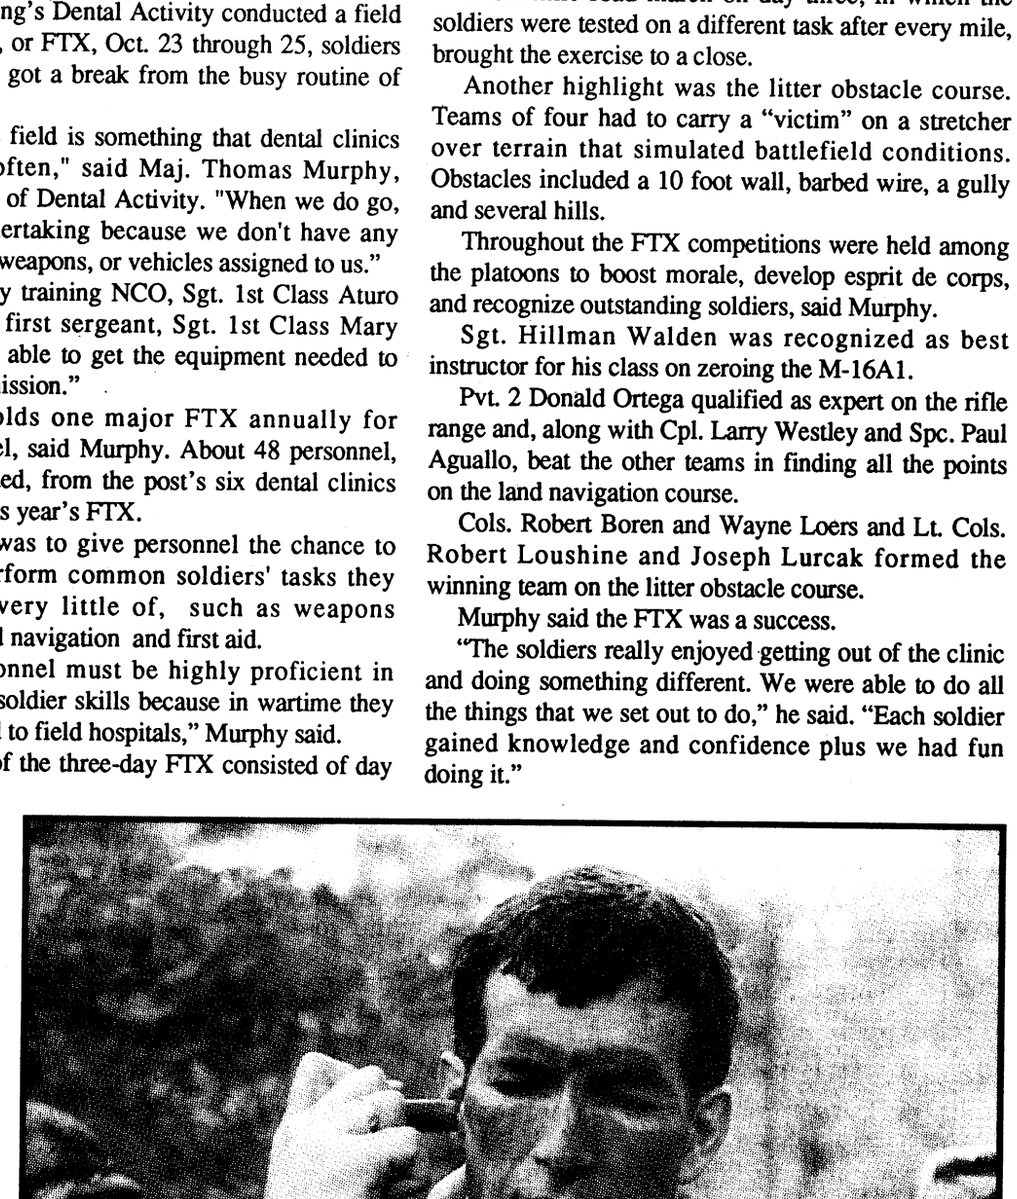
The first day of the three-day FTX consisted of day and night land navigation and common tasks training.

Day two included more CTT training and weapons qualification with the M-16A1 rifle on Martin Range.

A six-mile road march on day three, in which the soldiers were tested on a different task after every mile, brought the exercise to a close.

Another highlight was the litter obstacle course. Teams of four had to carry a "victim" on a stretcher over terrain that simulated battlefield conditions. Obstacles included a 10 foot wall, barbed wire, a gully and several hills.

Throughout the FTX competitions were held among the platoons to boost morale, develop esprit de corps, and recognize outstanding soldiers, said Murphy.



Sgt. Hillman Walden was recognized as best instructor for his class on zeroing the M-16A1.

Pvt. 2 Donald Ortega qualified as expert on the rifle range and, along with Cpl. Larry Westley and Spc. Paul Aguallo, beat the other teams in finding all the points on the land navigation course.

Cols. Robert Boren and Wayne Loers and Lt. Cols. Robert Loushine and Joseph Lurcak formed the winning team on the litter obstacle course.

Murphy said the FTX was a success.

"The soldiers really enjoyed getting out of the clinic and doing something different. We were able to do all the things that we set out to do," he said. "Each soldier gained knowledge and confidence plus we had fun doing it."

36th greets 13th S&S

36th Engineer Group

With the arrival of 14 service members and their families on Nov. 14, the majority of the Headquarters Company of the 13th Supply and Service Battalion, has now been relocated to Fort Benning. Five soldiers will remain in Ludwigsburg, Germany through November to execute rear-party objectives.

Among the soldiers arriving at Atlanta's Hartsfield Airport was the unit commander, Lt. Col. Patrick E. Garren. In his possession were the battalion colors, which will be kept furled until Dec. 10. On that day, the unit will assume command of the 533rd Transportation Company, the 598th Maintenance Company, and the 608th Ordnance Company, three separate units which are currently under the command and control of the 36th Engineer Group. In turn the 13th will become a subordinate battalion of the 36th.

"Lieutenant Colonel Garren is truly happy to be here and is very eager to assume control of our new units", stated the Battalion Executive Officer, Maj. Hector Diodonet. Diodonet went on to list some of the immediate goals for the unit. They include settling the soldiers and their families in permanent housing, occupying office bulldings and outfitting them with equipment and furniture, and finally, continuing the dialogue with the 36th Engineer Group staff in order to execute a smooth transition of command and control for the subordinate units.

In the top spot

Cpl. Tracy Moorman, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment and Spc. George Leard, Headquarters and Headquarters Co., 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, were honored as Fort Benning's top non-commissioned officer and soldier by the Columbus Chamber of Commerce at a Civilian-Military Council luncheon. The luncheon was Nov. 15 at the Harmony Club.

BAYONET TV

Networks commemorate Pearl Harbor

By JAY BOBBIN
Tribune Media Services

If some people don't recall the momentous event that occurred 50 years ago next week, television is about to provide plenty of reminders.

While the PBS series "The American Experience" presented a Veterans Day recollection of the Dec. 7, 1941, invasion of Hawaii's Pearl Harbor by Japanese forces, the major commercial networks have waited until the actual half-century mark drew closer ... which accounts for several related offerings that will air in the coming days, including ABC and CBS documentaries and a dramatic representation that NBC has delved into the past for. Though the miniseries "Pearl" — starring Robert Wagner, Angie Dickinson, Dennis Weaver and Lesley Ann Warren — originally was shown by ABC in 1978 and in local syndication since, NBC has acquired it for a four-part repeat on Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday. Meanwhile, David Brinkley anchors Thursday's ABC News presentation "Pearl Harbor: Two Hours That Changed the World" (produced in association with Japan's NHK Network), and Charles Kuralt will be joined by Operation Desert Storm commander Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf in presiding over Dec. 7's CBS News offering "Remember Pearl Harbor."

In a real sense, the approach taken by the CBS venture isn't unlike that of the much-acclaimed PBS program "The Civil War," in that it traces the pivotal World War II assault largely through the words of those who were involved directly in it. That includes interviews with actual survivors on both the American and Japanese sides, as well as excerpts from letters and memoirs read by noted actors such as Kevin Costner, Richard Dreyfuss, Dustin Hoffman, Jack Lemmon, Robert Mitchum and Paul Newman. Despite that structural comparison between the two shows, the affable Kuralt maintains that "This one does have a bit of a different feel, because a lot of people who were there are still alive. For example, there's the famous spy Yoshikawa, who really made it possible for the attack to go off so smoothly by relaying all kinds of information from Pearl Harbor; he was found in a nursing home in Japan, so we hear from him directly. It's a gripping piece of work, and I can say that because I didn't have much to do with the preparation. It's just the writing and editing I'm involved in.

"While the documentary (element) is the heart of the show," Kuralt continues, "a good third of it will be Schwarzkopf and me discussing aspects that don't lend themselves very well to that kind of treatment, philosophical questions about America's lack of readiness and the famous conspiracy theory that Roosevelt knew about (the attack plan) all the time and wanted it to happen. We're going to deal with those in brief little talks, going in and out of segments." Kuralt likes having the now-retired Persian Gulf war hero as his on-air cohort, calling him "a very agreeable man who's very knowledgeable about this subject, since he once served in Hawaii (1978-80). That adds a lot to analyzing motives and strategies, and it's just a pleasure to have him to work with. It turns out there's only 20 days' difference in our ages, and he's the elder, so we were both 7 when Pearl Harbor happened." Another contributor to Saturday's special will be "CBS This Morning" co-anchor Harry Smith, reporting from the Hawaiian site where the battleship USS Arizona has remained submerged for five decades.

Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf joins Charles Kuralt

One of TV's top essayists, 10-time Emmy-winner and three-time Peabody Award-winner Kuralt also is a specialist at documenting what individuals were doing at key points in history, having done that in such other CBS News efforts as a 1989 program that commemorated the 20th anniversary of the first moon landing. As with virtually everyone else old enough at the time to understand what was happening, he has "a vivid memory" of where he was at the moment he learned of the Pearl Harbor attack. "My dad was a social worker for North Carolina," he reflects, "and we lived there at my grandparents' rural farm. We had one Sunday luxury: We'd go for a ride in my aunt's car to a corner store where they roasted peanuts out back, and you could get a wonderful, big bag for a nickel. My dad went in to get them as always, and we waited in the car as always, and he was a long time coming back. When he finally did, I knew it was serious because of the expression on his face. He had been in there listening to a battery-powered radio, then told us the news ... and I knew how serious it was because he neglected to bring back the peanuts. I suppose everyone who was alive then had a similar story to tell."

Working on this week's show brought added memories back to Kuralt, who also remembers "buying war savings stamps every Friday at school. You'd bring a dime, if you had a dime, and buy a stamp to paste into a book and cover up ugly caricatures of Hitler and Tojo and Mussolini. Our family life wasn't affected too much, since my dad kept on working for the state, but I remember friends going off to war. The general attitude was, 'No sacrifice is too great to win the war,' so I flattened tin cans. I was also an expert at airplane silhouettes, so if any Mitsubishi bombers had come over North Carolina, I was ready. All the boys learned how to make the silhouettes of war planes on both sides, but I never saw any of those foreign planes, of course."

The author of the recent and aptly named best-seller "A Life on the Road," Kuralt admits that getting ready for Dec. 7's CBS program forced him to become a rather quick study."When I was first asked to do this," he says, "I realized that I didn't really know anything about Pearl Harbor. Since then, through intensive reading and by just working with the materials that (executive producer) Andy Lack has collected, I have begun to feel that I do know a good deal about it. It was the worst day in the history of the American military, I suppose, but it is such a compelling story (as told through) the accounts of people who were there and — really more important to me — the accounts of historians who have spent their lives working on this subject.

"At one point," Kuralt reports, "historian Thurston Clark says that as you go through the material, it makes you want to grip the officers by the shoulders and shake them and say, 'Don't ignore this warning! You're on a track where another locomotive is bearing down on you. Can't you see it?' Of course, nobody could."

'Christmas in Dixie' highlights holiday events at state park

Stone Mountain Park

Decorations, seasonal sounds and the Jolly Old Elf himself highlight the holiday celebration at Georgia's Stone Mountain Park beginning Friday. Decorations will be visible nightly through Dec. 31. Special activities are scheduled every weekend during this period.

The holiday celebration begins as the massed choirs of area schools and churches gather on Memorial lawn for a grand lighting of the park and festive holiday sing-along. The words of yuletide songs will be emblazoned across the face of the mountain in laser fire as the crowd joins the choirs in ushering in the holidays and welcoming Santa to the park.

An array of special activities is planned for weekends during the holiday season.

Memorial Depot is 1991 holiday headquarters. Here, Santa and his elves will delight children of all ages. Park staff can take a pictures of guests on Santa's lap, or guests can bring their cameras to capture the moment. Santa and his elves will appear weekends through Dec. 22 from 6 to 9 p.m.

While at the Depot, hop aboard a journey to the "north pole" on the Stone Mountain Scenic Railroad. A ride on the sing-along train costs only $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for children 11 and under. Upon return, holiday shopping can be done at the Depot Gift Shoppe. And, of course, the Depot Fried Chicken Restaurant is open for holiday feasts.

The park's mascot, Buford the bear, appears in the special holiday laser show. The show can be seen on the north face of the mountain adjacent to the Depot. "Christmas in Dixie" and other seasonal events will be presented. The show runs at 6:05, 7:05 and 8:05 p.m. Friday through Sunday until Dec. 29.

What: Holiday celebration
Where: Georgia's Stone Mountain Park
When: Friday through Dec. 31

Across the way, holiday evening weekend tours of the Antebellum Plantation and surrounding buildings add a spark to the nip of night. Lighted walkways add a festive touch. Adjacent to the plantation entrance, the Clayton, House Gift Shop and The Christmas House offer one-of-a-kind gifts for everyone on your list.

During the week there will be plenty of yuletide cheer to go around as well. Tens of thousands of twinkling lights decorate countless areas throughout the park creating a light show which can be enjoyed from the car. Giant greeting cards created by area schools are a special highlight. New for 1991 is Atlanta's "Field of Trees" decorated by Atlanta businesses using their products as decorations.

Whether holiday celebration activities are going on or not, the park is open daily, 365 days a year, until midnight. More than 400,000 lights are switched on each evening from Nov. 29 to New Year's Eve at dusk.

Park entry requires a valid 1991 parking permit which may be purchased daily for $5 or yearly for $20.

For more information and attraction or laser show schedules call (404) 498-5702.

Visit North Georgia to see a mountain country Christmas

Towns County Chamber of Commerce

A "Mountain Country Christmas Weekend" celebration will kick off the holiday season in the communities of Hiawassee and Young Harris on Dec. 6, 7, and 8.

A tour of homes and historic sites will feature the Susan B. Harris Chapel located on the campus of Young Harris College, and the rock home of Governor and Mrs. Zell Miller, built by the late Birdie Miller.

All the homes and sites will be decorated for the holidays. The famous "Christmas House" of local antique dealer Jane Head, a tour all by itself, will be decorated with feather Christmas trees as well as antique trains and dolls.

Visitors will be treated to refreshments at the Fieldstone Inn located on the shores of Lake Chatuge. The Friendship Baptist Church, organized in 1876, is located overlooking Lake Chatuge. The mountain home of Hugh and Anne Mitchell is furnished with a blend of Caribbean and Asian collectibles.

An old fashion chicken-pot-pie supper will be held in the Young Harris College Grace Rollins Dining Hall Saturday evening.

The Young Harris College Sharp Hall will be the site of a two-day craft show, an opportunity to purchase special and unusual Christmas gifts. A parade to collect toys for needy children will take place in Hiawassee on Dec. 7.

There will be free entertainment during the weekend. McConnell Memorial Baptist Church in Hiawassee will present "The Story," a Christmas concert, Dec. 6 and 7. The Rollins Planetarium located on the Young Harris College campus will present "The Christmas Star" show. For young and young-at-heart, there will be two sessions of storytelling by Bob Chaille at Sharp Memorial Fellowship Hall.

Reserve tour and dinner tickets now at the Towns County Chamber of Commerce office.

For more information about the Mountain Country Christmas Weekend, call 404-896-4966 or write to Towns County Chamber of Commerce, P.O. Box 290, Hiawassee, Ga. 30546.

Springer to offer Christmas ticket special for mini-season

The Springer Opera House

The Springer Opera House announced that a discounted mini-season ticket will be available for the remaining three shows of the 1991-92 season through January, 1992.

For $27, a savings of 1/3 from regular box-office admissions, subscribers will receive a ticket good for one seat to any performance of the productions "The Trip to Bountiful," "Sweeney Todd" and "I Ought To Be In Pictures," Springer Managing Artistic Director Paul R. Pierce announced during the curtain speech on opening night of Les Liaisons Dangerous Liaisons (Dangerous Liaisons).

"The Springer Christmas Special is a great gift idea for family and friends or clients and employees. See three incredible shows yourself, or give someone special a gift that will keep on giving throughout the year," Pierce said.

Subscribers receive exclusive benefits including savings (the $27 rate is like seeing a show free), advance sale days which give season ticket-holders three bonus reservation days before tickets go on sale to the general public plus perks like discounts on the Studio series productions and Mailbox Marquee service, which keeps subscribers on the inside track with the BackDrop newsletter and reminders of upcoming productions and special events.

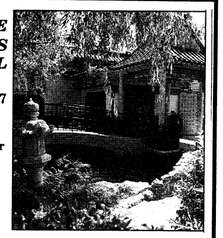
The remaining three shows of the Springer season include something for everyone, Pierce said.

"The Trip To Bountiful" plays Jan. 23-Feb. 1. Southern playwright Horton Foote tells the tale of Carrie Watts, who walks out of her home one day and makes a date with destiny, determined to see her homestead once more before she dies.

The people she meets and the things she sees form the basis for the play, which Pierce compares to the popular "Driving Miss Daisy" for its down-home warmth and broad appeal.

February 27-March 7, a Tony Award-winning Best Musical springs to life straight from the pages of the Victorian penny dreadfuls when "Sweeney Todd" comes to town. A world-acclaimed score by Stephen Sondheim highlights this powerful, bloody good tale of murder, madness and mayhem.

"I Ought To Be In Pictures" will introduce Columbus audiences to Herb Tucker, a has-been screen writer going to seed in his North Hollywood duplex, and Libby, his super-optimistic, wise-cracking daughter who hitchhikes crosscountry and deposits herself on dad's doorstep.



Trouble is, Herb doesn't know Libby. He abandoned his family 17 years before and has not heard from them since. A rollercoaster ride of laughter amid the desperate need for understanding between a father and daughter by America's best-loved playwright-Neil Simon.

For more information or to charge tickets call the Springer Production Office at 404-324-1100.

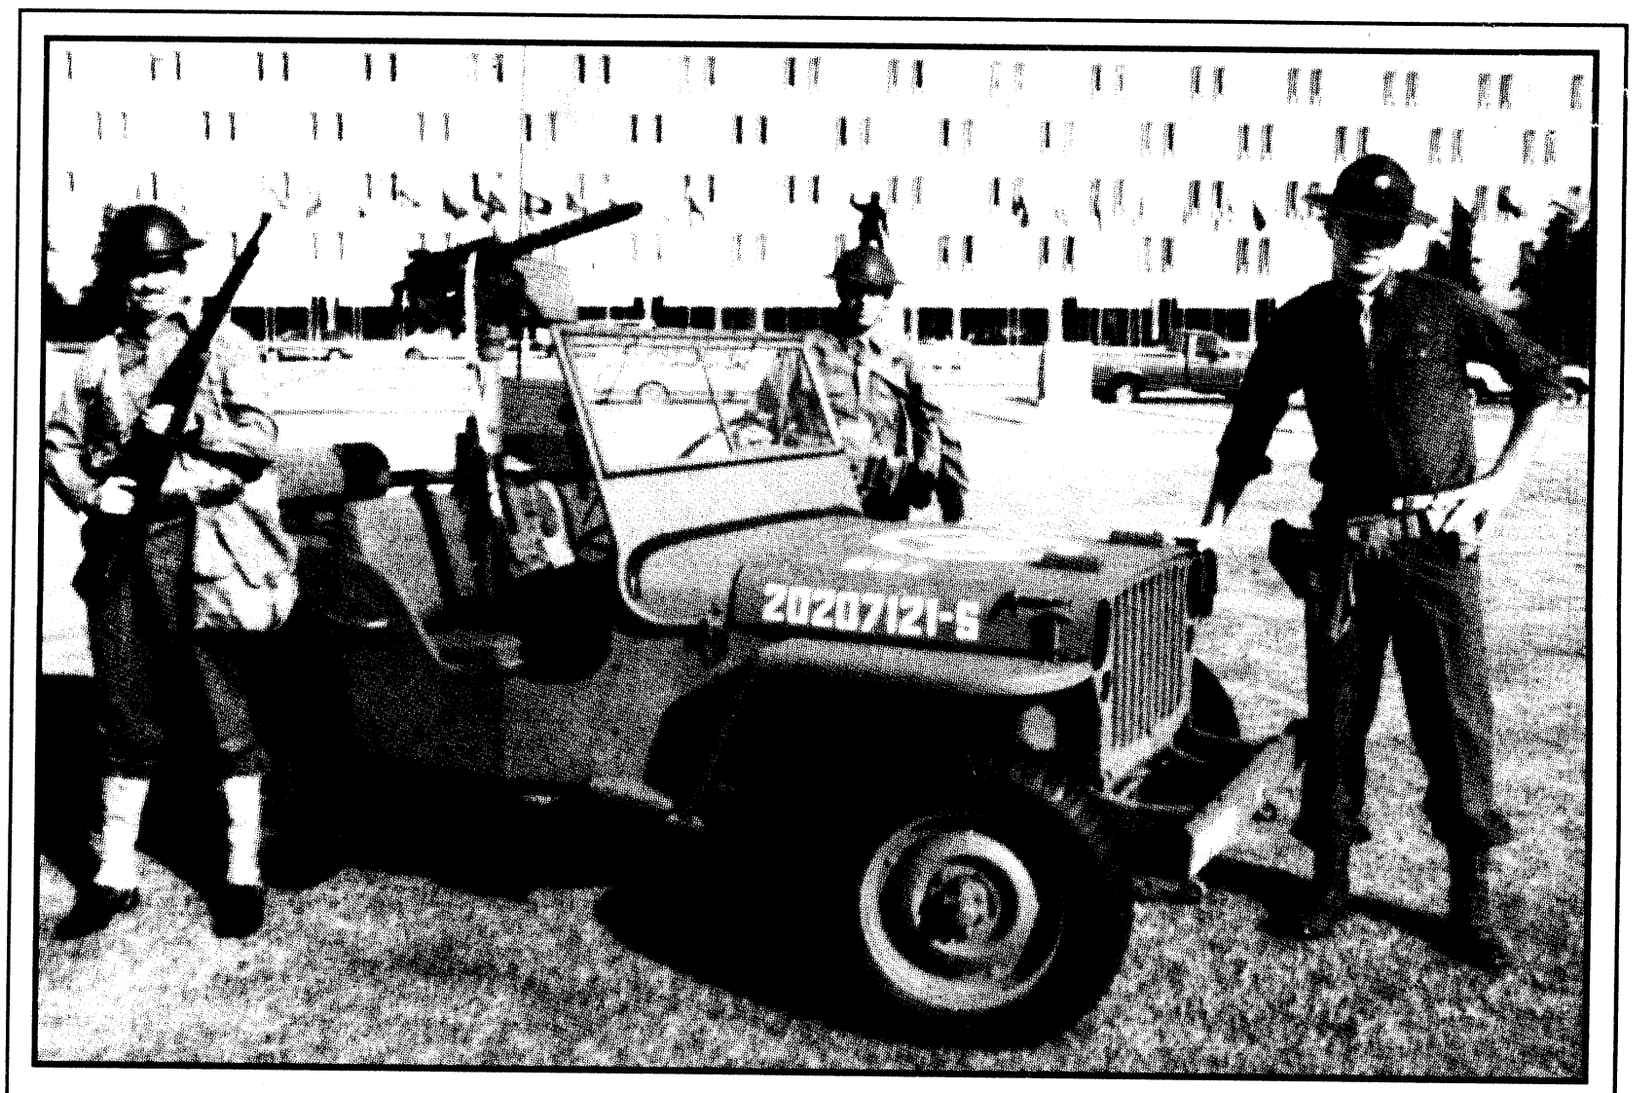
Army program helps soldiers on way out

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

"After World War I and II, the Army downsized its forces by 90 percent within one year's time. After Vietnam, it was 40 percent within a year. This time, it's 25 percent over five years."

That's what Pat Sneed, transition services specialist with the Transition Assistance Office, had to say about the Army Career and Alumni Program that is currently getting on its feet at Fort Benning. She added that because of this caring, organized and dignified approach, maybe those involved in the reduction in force will have a better feeling about having been in the Army than those who were part of drawdowns before them.

The program will now be a regular part of a soldier's out-processing and is located in Soldier's Plaza.



The goal of the program is to provide soldiers leaving the Army with a transition plan that will prepare them for civilian life.

Sneed said that Transition Assistance Office personnel saw 596 clients during the month of October. Office personnel counsels, develops a needs assessment on each soldier as well as a transition plan, refers the soldier to various other offices on post that could help (including the new Job Assistance Center) and does a final survey to find out if the needs were met.

Harold Ericksen is manager of the Job Assistance Center, which is also a part of the Army Career and Alumni Program. Ericksen said that during the third week of November, his office saw 111 people and counseled 90.

The mission at the JAC is fivefold: to conduct a seminar that helps the soldier understand the transition; to conduct a workshop that goes over techniques for a job search plan, resume writing, marketing themselves and role-playing for interview situations; to conduct individual career counseling; to assist in resume writing assistance; and to assist soldiers in using the Army Employer Network System.

Boards to tap officers, NCOs for retirement

By J. Jan Hoffman
USAIC Public Affairs Office

For many officers and E-9s, Jan.14, 1992 may be the beginning of the end. That is the day the Selective Early Retirement Board for officers meets at the Total Army Personnel Command in Alexandria, Va., and the Selective Early Release Board for senior non-commissioned officers meets at Fort Benjamin Harrison.

At that time, many retirement-eligible officers and senior NCOs will be screened for possible involuntary separation.

Because soldiers in the zones to be considered could volunteer to retire before Jan. 31, 1992, the number of personnel to be considered by the SERBs is unknown at this time.

Soldiers who volunteer to retire before then will not be considered by the SERBs. However, soldiers who do not volunteer and are selected by a board must retire before Sept. 1, 1992, or upon reaching 20 years of service, whichever is later.

The NCO board's zone of consideration will include all command sergeants major and sergeants major with 25 through 28 years of service who were promoted to their current rank prior to Jan. 31, 1991.

Selected soldiers will be notified in February or March of next year that they have to retire before Sept. 1. Army personnel officials said they hope after soldiers are notified, they will retire voluntarily.

For officers, the SERB will review colonels, lieutenant colonels, majors and captains of the basic branches; colonels and lieutenant colonels of the Judge Advocate General Corps; colonels of the Army Nurse Corps; and lieutenant colonels of the Chaplain and Medical Service Corps.

The Army will review the files of colonels and lieutenant colonels previously screened by retirement boards, and lieutenant colonels, majors and captains with 18 or more years of service as of Jan. 1, 1992.

Officers selected for early retirement will be personally informed and formally notified by letter as soon as possible after the Secretary of the Army approves the recommended list.

Lt. Gen. William Reno, deputy chief of staff for personnel, said the SERBs are part of the Army's plan to reduce the number of active duty soldiers by 115,000 by Oct. 1, 1995.

Fort Benning has approximately 90 officers and approximately 20 command sergeants major and sergeants major in the zone of consideration, according to the Adjutant General office and the 519th Personnel Services Company.

Officer personnel desiring to submit voluntary retirement applications prior to convening of the board should do so immediately. Applications must be received by the officer's career manager not later than close of business, Dec. 19, for Army Competitive Category personnel, and not later than close of business, Dec. 31, for Chaplain, Judge Advocate General, Army Nurse and Medical Service Corps personnel.

Sergeants majors desiring to submit voluntary retirement applications prior to the board may do so through Dec. 31.

For more information, contact Janie Seldon, Officer Records Section, at 545-3818. Sergeants major should contact Grace Chambless, Personnel Services Branch, at 545-3666.

- Lieutenant colonels of the Army Competitive Category who are not on a colonels promotion list and who, as of Jan. 1, 1992 will be eligible to retire, or be within two years of qualifying for retirement at 20 years.
- Lieutenant colonels of the Judge Advocate General's Corps who are not on a colonels promotion list; have dates of rank of Oct. 31, 1988 or earlier; have been passed over for promotion to colonel; and who, as of Jan. 1, will be eligible to retire, or be within two years of qualifying for retirement at 20 years.
- Lieutenant colonels of the Chaplain and Medical Service Corps who are not on a colonels promotion list; have dates of rank of May 31, 1987 or earlier; have been passed over for promotion to colonel; and who, as of Sept. 1, 1992 will be eligible to retire.
- Majors and captains of the Army Competitive Category who are not on a promotion list and who, as of Jan. 1 will be eligible to retire, or be within two years of qualifying for retirement at 20 years.

New post CSM to come on board

CSM Edward Garrett to retire

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The non-commissioned officer named to be Fort Benning's next post command sergeant major says he's "anxious to get back to the Home of the Infantry and pass on experiences I've picked up in the field."

As he concludes his tour as top non-commissioned officer of the 2nd Infantry Division in the Republic of Korea, Command Sgt. Maj. William H. Acebes said he looks forward to his tour at Fort Benning.

Acebes has more than a passing acquaintance with the post. He served on the Ranger Department's physical conditioning committee in the late 1960s, teaching non-commissioned officers, officers and officer candidates the "correct way" to do Army physical training. In the mid-1970s, he served on the committee that helped "train up" the 1st Battalion of the 75th Ranger Regiment, when that unit was organized at Fort Benning. He would later serve as that battalion's command sergeant major from 1988 to January 1990. Acebes recalled that he just missed deploying to Operation Just Cause because of his assignment to the 2nd Infantry Division .

Prior to his service with the Ranger Regiment's first battalion, Acebes was the non-commissioned officer in charge of the Ranger Regiment's intelligence section. His next assignment was as the battalion command sergeant major of the 5th Battalion, 32nd Armor, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized) at Fort Stewart.

He served two tours in Vietnam where he earned the Combat Infantryman Badge and the Bronze Star Medal. The first was with the 173rd Airborne Brigade from 1965 to 1966. His next tour was in IV Corps with the Military Assistance Command.

Acebes' military education includes the Sergeants Major Academy, Ranger, Airborne, Reconnaissance and Jumpmaster courses, and Jungle School.

The 46-year-old Acebes said he would be coming to Fort Benning sometime in January with his wife, Brenda. "I look forward to seeing many of the people — officers, non-commissioned officers and retirees I served with on other occasions," he said.

Acebes will succeed Command Sgt. Maj. Edward Garrett, who is retiring after 35 years of Army service.

Exterior lights OK one week prior to Christmas

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning has announced its policy for Christmas lighting.

In a Nov. 6 memorandum, Chief of Staff Col. John D. Fuller, says "non-electric decorations will be used in office and operational facilities throughout the post. In the housing areas, exterior and interior lighting should be kept to modest and prudent levels. Exterior lighting in family housing is authorized one week prior to and one week after Christmas Day. Residents are requested not to turn exterior lights on prior to 6 p.m. and to turn them off by 11 p.m."

Controlled burning set

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Controlled burning of woodland and range areas begins Monday and continues through Dec. 13, according to Chris Dunn of the Natural Resources Branch.

Dunn said if the weather permits, the following compartments will be affected: B-4, C-3, E-6, E-7, J-2, K-5, K-7, K-9, K-14, K-19, K-21, M-4, M-5, M-7, O-5, O-98, O-11, O-12, O-14, R-1, T-1 and U-2.

Hunters and other individuals using these areas for recreational or other purposes should vacate the areas prior to 11 a.m. each day, Dunn said.

Remembering Pearl Harbor

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

The 50th anniversary of the bombing of Pearl Harbor tomorrow begins four years of World War II commemorative events.

Fifty years was way before most of our times. Here on post the number of officers and NCOs who were even alive 50 years ago is limited to a handful. And for those few who had been born, memories of the war years are probably based on stories they heard from relatives and friends.

So just what was life like back then?

Fort Benning was training 60,000 soldiers at the time. The post commander was Brig. Gen. Omar N. Bradley, who, when asked what Fort Benning would be doing in the aftermath of the Japanese attack, said he was still awaiting official word from Washington, regarding any actions to take, but that training was continuing "as usual."

One soldier, hearing that Christmas furloughs were cancelled, warned the Japanese to be on the alert for one very mad Yank.

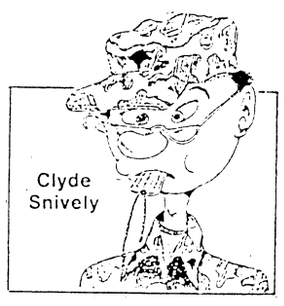
Another soldier, a sergeant, reportedly died from a heart attack as he listened to the war news.

In Phenix City, the parents of a seaman stationed aboard the USS Battleship Oklahoma anxiously awaited word on the status of their son after learning of the attack late Sunday afternoon.

In Columbus you could go to a movie at the Bradley or the Rialto for a quarter where you could see

COMMENTARY

Abbott & Costello in "Buck Privates," or Bob Hope in "Caught in the Draft."



Ice cream cones were a nickel and a chocolate soda was 15 cents.

As the new Howard Bus terminal prepared to open Wednesday, those planning to attend the grand opening were invited to stay for lunch. The fare charged by the bus line, which serviced Fort Benning, was 35 cents.

Cliff Averett was selling Buicks for just over $900, touting the cars' safe, smooth, luxurious ride, while Rotarians, meeting at the Waverly Hotel heard Lon Sullivan tell them that people don't understand the power of automobiles "which can cause many accidents."

Over at the Ralston Hotel, actress Corbina Wright, told reporters she doesn't mind getting up at 5 a.m. in order to get her officer candidate husband to Fort Benning on time. She said she was used to it since she had to be on the set early when she was filming movies.

In a press conference on Dec. 6,

Lt. Gen. Lesley McNair told reporters at the conclusion of massive army maneuvers in the Carolinas, "today's soldiers are inestimably cheerful, of keen intellect and physically strong. "But," he said, "they still needed a year before being thrown into combat."

An unidentified staff officer said, "If U.S. troops were to go up against the Germans today, we would loose 200,000 men in a matter of days." (Eggs were often used as training substitutes for hand grenades.)

At least the Army could be expected to do well in inter-service boxing matches since comic strip hero Joe Palooka had already joined the Army (the draft had been resumed in 1940).

Coeds at Wesleyan College, responding to a survey, said soldiers make the best dates. The ladies said soldiers pay more attention, were more interesting conversationalists and more appreciative. They also noted that despite the meager $21-a- month pay, the G.I.s never asked the girl to pick up the movie tab.

For entertainment, the soldiers could take their dates to dance halls where "Chattanooga Choo-Choo" was the latest hit, or sit in front of the radio and listen to "The Lucky Strike Hit Parade."

In sports, Morris Brown College captured the small college national championship, while the Golden Gophers of Minnesota were the NCAA champs.

In professional football the Brooklyn Dodgers beat the New York Giants 21 to 7, and Boston knocked off the Chicago Cardinals 34 to 24.

Kirvens Department Store was planning "Army Night" for Fort Benning's soldiers for Friday.

However, it was doubtful any of the new-fangled gimcrackery such as garbage disposals, FM radio and television, would be available as those items were just then being test marketed in select communities.

And that's the way it was back then.

CG commemorates Pearl Harbor Day

Pearl Harbor Day, Saturday, is observed nationwide annually as a reminder of the attack that initiated our country's entry into World War II.

This year, the commemoration coincides with the start of the commemoration of the 50th anniversary of World War II. For the next four years we will observe, in many ways and on many occasions, the impact of that war on the world.

We in the Army and at Fort Benning will also focus on how Fort Benning, Home of the Infantry, contributed so significantly to the ultimate allied victory.

More than 600, 000 — to include 100,000 paratroopers and 65, 000 Officer Candidate School graduates — were trained here during the war years.

Fort Benning, in those days, proudly called itself, "America's most complete Army post," because of the many categories of training conducted here.

That tradition has continued through today. Certainly the citizens of Columbus and Phenix City, rounding out our tri-community, were as important and supportive to Fort Benning's mission throughout the war as they are today.

Fort Benning's commemorative activities will start Saturday with events centered at the National Infantry Museum.

A detailed schedule is on page B-3 in this issue of The Bayonet and has been distributed to the public.

I encourage residents of the tri-community to attend these events and participate in observing Pearl Harbor Day while learning more about our role in this part of our nation's history.

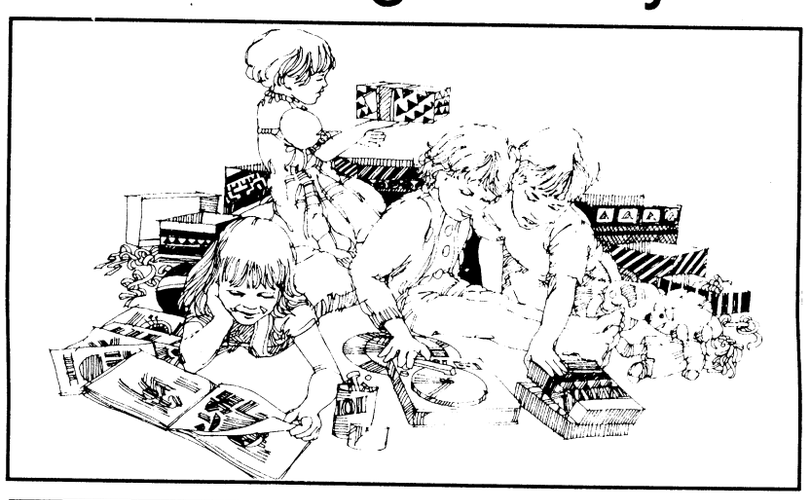
Parents should use caution during holidays

By Alfreta Gibson
Martin Army Community Hospital

Once again, the holidays are approaching, and it's time to start purchasing gifts, particularly for the little ones. Before you and your family venture out to purchase those special Christmas toys, make sure you are properly prepared to make those choices that will keep your family happy and safe.

The average family will spend a sizable portion of the family's budget on Christmas toys. Don't let clever advertising be the basis for your choices.



Try to get get a child's eye-view of the toys and anticipate any potential danger your child may encounter. By doing so, you'll avoid needless accidents which kill 4, 000 U.S. children under the age five each year. An accident takes one or two seconds, but as families have learned from experience, those precious seconds can be a lifetime.

As a community health nurse working with families of accident victims, my goal is to raise parents' safety consciousness. Before becoming a parent, most of you probably never thought about a toy part that could be inserted in the nose, eyes or ears. Watch for sharp edges, loose wires and torn seams. Verify that the toy does not have any toxic chemicals.

Toys should be inspected periodically for safety. Ask yourself the following questions: "What is my child likely to do with this toy?" "Is this sharp edge dangerous?" "If the shiny nose came off a teddy bear, could my chid choke on it?" "Is my child at the level of maturity to appreciate and handle this toy?"

If you have any questions about the safety of a specific toy, call the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, toll-free number, (800) 638-CPSC.

To further assist you in selecting age-appropriate and safe toys, please join Community Health Nursing for a Toy Safety Program today and Dec. 13 at the main Post Exchange from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Fitness school due here

By J. Jan Hoffman
USAIC Public Affairs Office

There will be new faces around Fort Benning in July when the Army's Physical Fitness School moves here.

The school's commandant, Col. Bruce Wicks, says he is looking forward to the school moving to Fort Benning and being co-located with the Army's Infantry School and its Airborne and Ranger schools.

In the meantime, it's business as usual for the school which is still at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind.

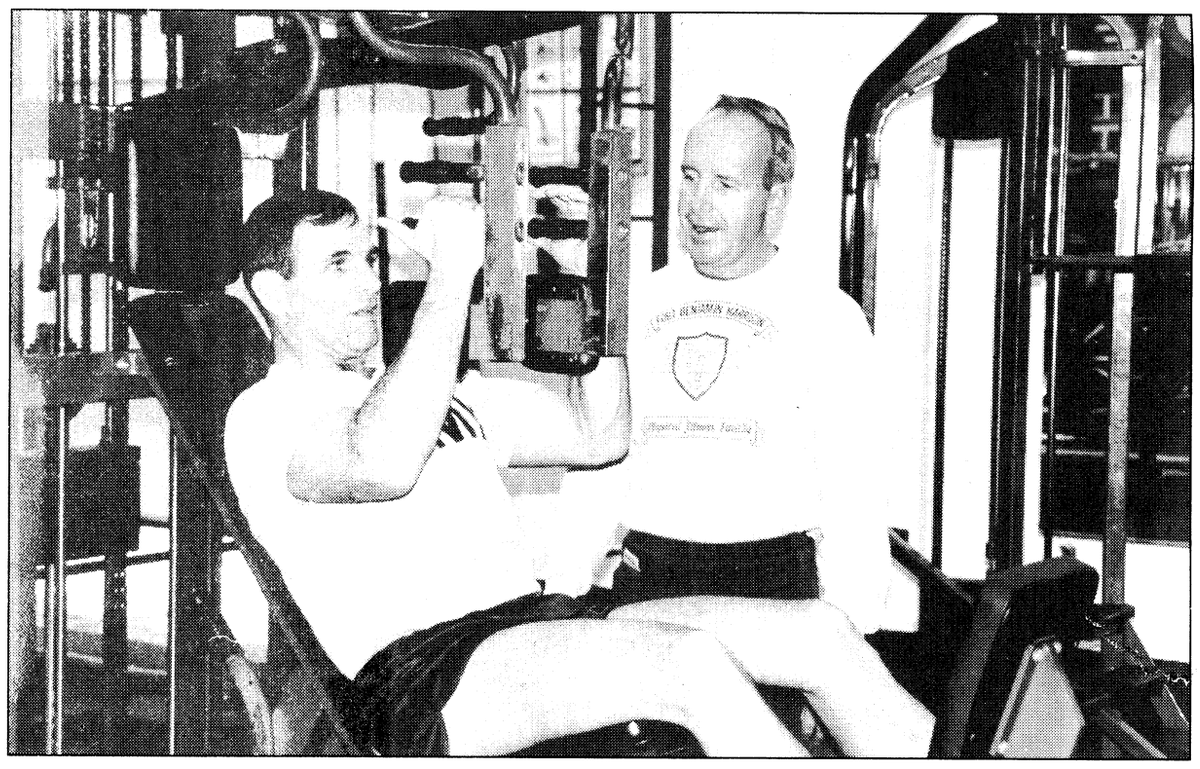
In addition to serving as the Army's proponent for fitness and developing fitness doctrine, the school devotes a great deal of effort to conducting numerous tailored "Train-the-Trainer" courses and seminars as well as the highly sought after Master Fitness Trainer Course.

The active component MFT course is a four week course for non-commissioned and junior officers. The reserve component version is condensed to two weeks by incorporating longer training days along with weekend instruction. Training within the course is approximately 70 percent classroom instruction and 30 percent "hands on."

Currently, the school has classes and seminars scheduled throughout the U.S. and the Republic of Panama until the end of April next year.

With the exception of two RC MFT courses at Fort Harrison, all training will be conducted by mobile training teams.

When the school begins its operations at Fort Benning in July, the Mobile Training Team format will continue.



According to Lt. Col. Sam Pride, director of training for the school, the mobile training team concept is a result of recent budget reductions. It is more cost effective to send a team of instructors to an installation to train 60 to 70 soldiers than it is to send that same number of students to the school's location for an extended period. Units which request the school's MTTs will fund the travel from their training budgets.

In an attempt to supplement the work of the Physical Fitness School, the Training and Doctrine Command has incorporated fitness instruction into all professional development courses. The purpose of the instruction is to provide today's leaders with basic information necessary to design and conduct meaningful physical training programs.

The reduction in the budget has also resulted in a cut in the School's staff. On Oct. 1 the staff was reduced to 15 from its fiscal year 91 level of 32.

The School currently has authorizations for six civilians, five officers and four NCOs.

Additionally, the staff is augmented by one National Guard and one Army Reserve Liaison Officer. The small staff means a lot of time away from home for its members.

Sgt. Major Dean Pulley gets instructions from Col. Bruce Wicks while using the double chest machine in the Building 4 Fitness Center.

In addition to Wicks duties with the school, he was selected as the team leader for the 1992 U.S. Parachute Team, which will compete the world championships in Austria in August.

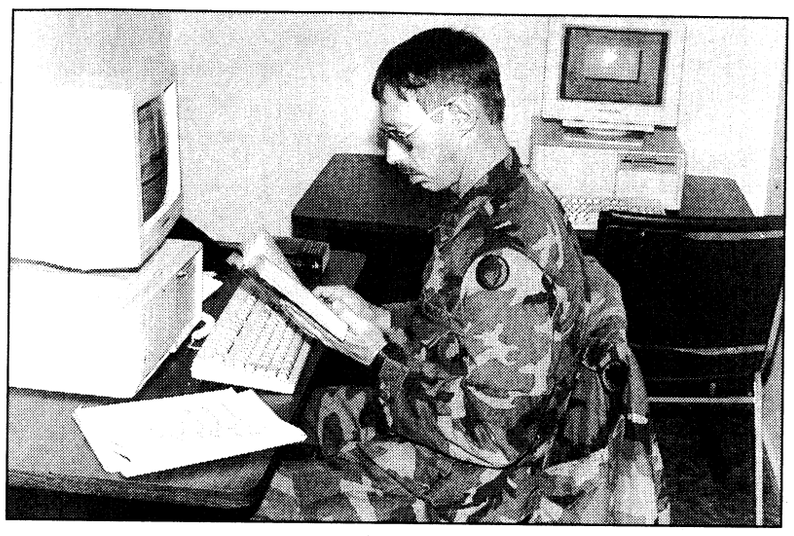
JAC keeps employer network up

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

The Job Assistance Center, which opened its doors Nov. 12, has a fivefold mission, one of which is keeping up to date the Army Employer Network System.

This is a computer network of over 3,400 businesses that is expected to grow by about 200 per month.



These businesses have jobs in a variety of areas and are interested in hiring military personnel by advertising their job information at no cost to them.

The computer program is organized by what's most important to the job-seeker—salary, occupation or location.

It makes the businesses easily accessible by providing comments on what the firm specializes in, a point of contact and telephone number.

The JAC is not a placement service and does not guarantee jobs. Rather it offers life-long skills in job seeking and puts information in the soldier's hands.

Then it is up to the soldier to take ownership in the process and take action.

Connie Bridges/Special to The Bayonet

Sgt. 1st Class Steven Spradley, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor works on his resume at the Job Assistance Center.

ACAP: Planning key to future

"The biggest things that soldiers take from the Army," Sneed said, "are leadership skills, the flexibility of being able to move and take orders and living in a relatively drug-free environment because it's not tolerated here."

She acknowledged that right now the economy is difficult and when changing careers often entry level positions have lower pay.

That's why she emphasizes the importance of starting to prepare early, about 180 days out.

Ericksen pointed out establishing a personal network as soon as possible to see what's available out there is a good idea. "We realize a career change is a very emotional issue."

He has a staff of three counselors and two counselor-assistants.

In the TAO, Ted Craig serves as the office manager. The TAO staff includes five counselors, an administrative person, an office manager and a couple of military personnel who help with the Transition Assistance Program classes.

TAP grew out of a test site program here in May of 1990 that began as a result of efforts by the Departments of Defense, Labor and Veterans Affairs.

Ericksen said his services are similar to "out placement" in the civilian community.

"In the business world when a reduction in force occurs, the firm assists those being laid off in finding positions elsewhere," he said. "It is always easier to get a job when you have a job, and the self-esteem of the person is better."

Quality of leaders focus of Infantry magazine

Infantry magazine

In the October-November 1991 issue of Infantry magazine, Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, in his first article as "Chief of Infantry," discusses the challenges infantrymen can expect to face in the future. He says that "how well the soldier does his job depends for the most part on the quality of his training and the quality of his leaders," and that "today's soldier is certainly entitled to the finest leadership at all levels." Other feature articles in that issue are:

• "Counterinsurgency and Soviet Force Structure, by Graham H. Turbiville Jr. and Maj. James F. Gebhardt. The authors offer an overview of the operations of the Soviet 66th Separate Motorized Rifle Brigade, a combined arms brigade specifically constituted for the most demanding counterinsurgency missions.

•"Operations in an NBC Environment," by Roy D. Williams II, a Chemical Corps colonel in the U.S. Army Reserve. Williams describes the basic functions of the chemical branch and discusses the roles and abilities of chemical units and of the chemical officers and non-commissioned officers who are assigned to positions in other types of units.

•"In Defense of the Lensatic Compass," by Noel J. Botchkiss, discusses the strengths and weaknesses associated with both the lensatic and the protractor type compasses and then concludes that "the lensatic compass presently in service is the one that best meets the needs of military land navigators."

Answers to ACAP questions

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Q: What is the Army Career and Alumni Program?

A: It is a comprehensive system that has been developed to assist personnel leaving the Army with care and dignity while retaining quality.

Q: Is it already in operation?

A: ACAP consists of two offices, the Transition Assistance Office and the Job Assistance Center. The TAO started seeing clients Aug. 31, while JAC opened its doors Nov. 12.

Q: Where do I find these offices?

A: Both are in Soldiers Plaza as essential parts of the in and out-processing of soldiers. TAO is upstairs in Building 2617. JAC is currently in Building 2634.

Q: Who can take advantage of these services?

A: Soldiers and on-post civilians who are part of the Army's reduction in force may use these services, also family members of those being adversely affected and reservists.

Q: How soon do I need to see them?

A: It is recommended that a soldier being released from military service contact ACAP about 180 days prior to the end of time in service date.

Q: Where do I start?

A: A soldier begins by attending the ETS briefing set up by the unit Personnel and Administration Center. From here, there is a referral to TAO for counselling and

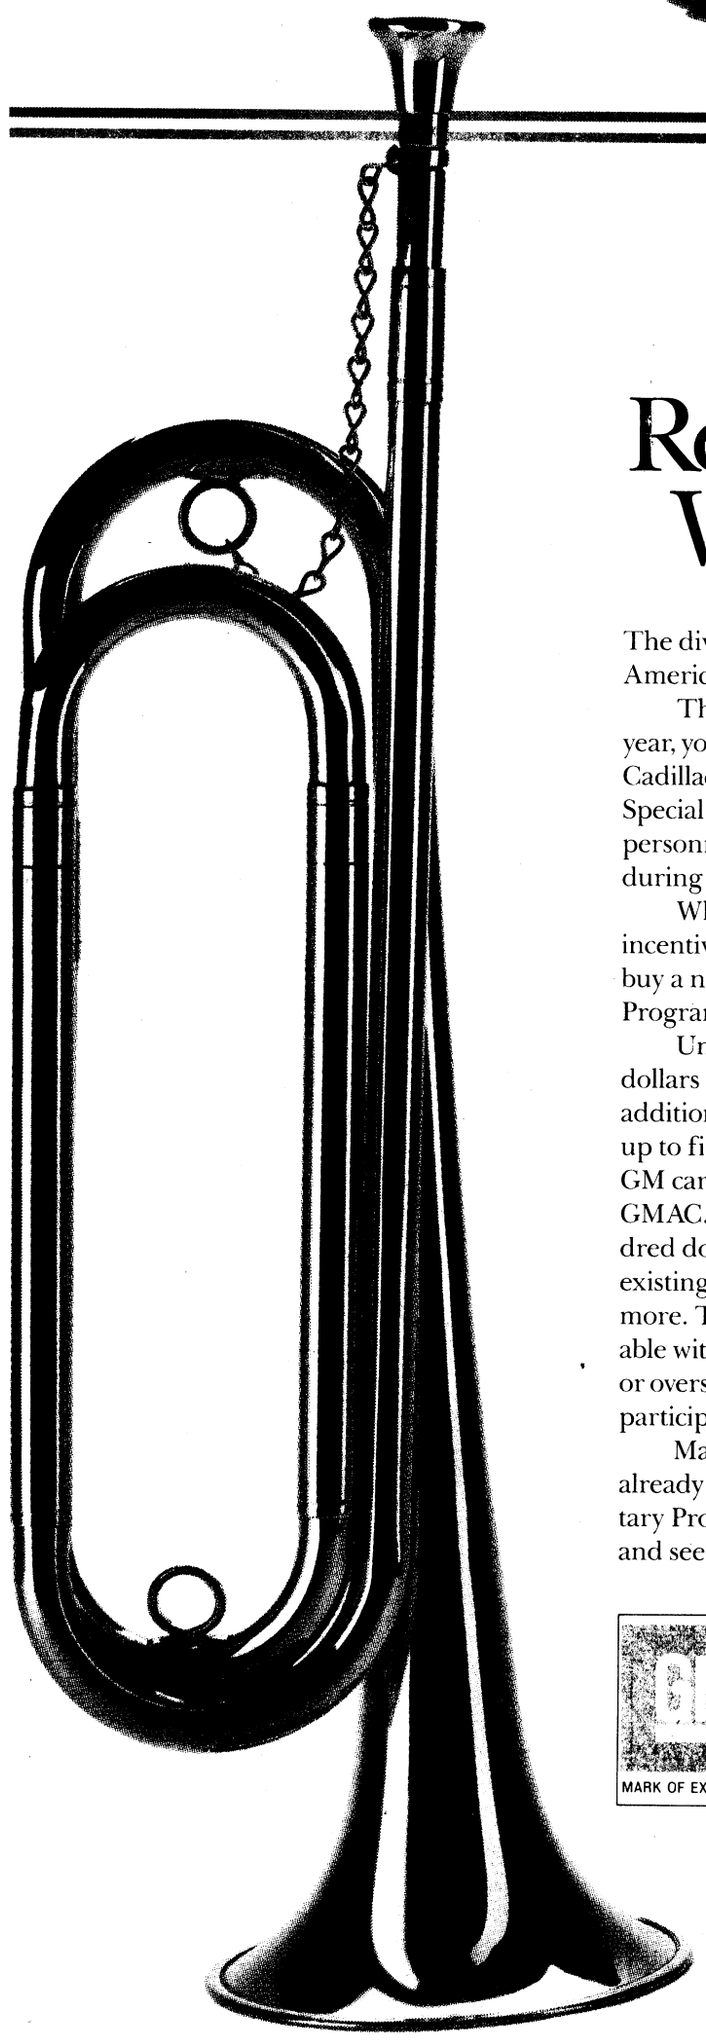
New finance hours go into effect Dec. 10



Finance and Accounting Office

Effective Dec. 10, the Finance and Accounting Office at Building 85 will be closed each Tuesday and Thursday from 7:45 to 10 a.m. for training (except during payday week, when it will be open during normal hours). "Realizing that service to the soldier is our first priority, training our staff in an ideal, unhindered atmosphere is imperative to realize enhanced effectiveness," said Lt. Col. George O. Smith, installation finance and accounting officer.

"Should an urgent situation arise where a soldier requires assistance during the hours of training, time will be made available to him or her," he said. "I rely on your discretion to make every effort to avoid interruption of training classes."

The Military Pay Branch of the Finance and Accounting Office will be transitioning to a new pay system called Joint Service Software in March 1992. The system is a change from current procedures and will require internal and external training prior to implementation.

"If there is anything we can do to improve finance service to the soldier, please contact Capt. Wallace at 545-4419," said Smith.

SPECIAL MILITARY PROGRAM

General Motors Is Rewarding Your Efforts With An Opportunity.

The divisions of General Motors are proud of America's Armed Forces.

That's why from now until the end of the year, your Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile, Buick, Cadillac and GMC Truck dealers are offering a Special Military Program to all active U.S. Military personnel and reservists called to active duty during the Persian Gulf War or their spouses.

While these GM divisions already have incentive plans in place that help make it easy to buy a new car or light truck, the Special Military Program makes it even easier.

Under the program, you get three hundred dollars in down-payment assistance, plus any additional down payment you make is matched up to five hundred dollars when you buy a new GM car or light truck and finance it through GMAC. That can mean as much as eight hundred dollars toward your purchase. Add that to existing GM incentives, and you can save even more. The Special Military Program is not available with the college graduate, first-time buyer or overseas vehicle purchase programs. See your participating GM dealer for qualification details.

Many of your comrades in arms have already taken advantage of the GM Special Military Program. So visit your GM dealer today, and see how much we appreciate your efforts.

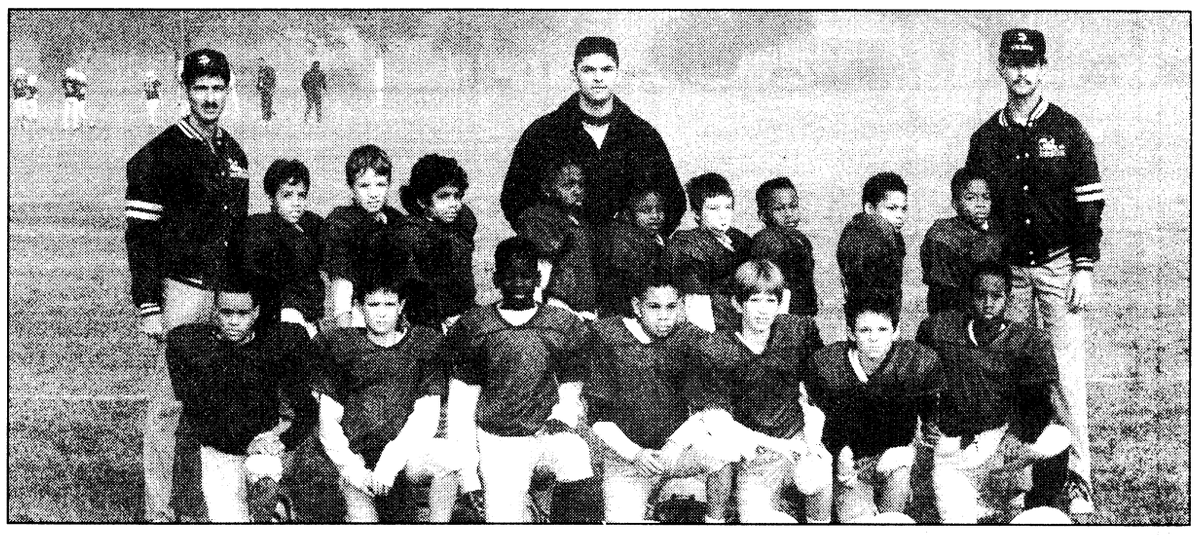
Vikings explode 2nd half, team remains undefeated

By John W. Peeler
Special to The Bayonet

On Nov. 23 the Vikings and 49ers met on Blue Field No. 2, with the Vikings looking to complete a perfect season.

The Vikings were down in the first half but, staged a second half comeback, scoring 26 points in the second half to end the regular season undefeated with a 34 - 14 victory.



The Vikings opened up the game with a grinding running game that resulted in a touchdown and a first quarter 8 - 0 lead. During the second quarter, the 49ers shut the Vikings down and the 49ers were able to move the ball, ultimately scoring on a pass play and pulling to within 2 points after a failed two-point conversion. The 49er touchdown made the score 8 - 6 in favor of the Vikings.

On the Vikings next series of plays, the 49ers picked off a Viking pass and ran it into the end zone for the touchdown. The two point conversion was good and the 49ers went into halftime with a surprising 14 - 8 halftime lead.

This was the first time in the season that the Vikings would have to come from behind to secure a victory and as the second half opened up it was evident that the divisions number one offense and number one defense came onto the field with a different attitude.

The Viking defense shut down the 49er offense in the third and fourth quarters and the Viking offense opened up the game scoring 26 points in the final two quarters to give the Vikings a decisive 34 - 14 victory.

The Vikings closed out the season as the only unbeaten team in the 9-to-10-year-old division, with the 49ers securing second place with a 4 - 4 record.

The Vikings finish the season as the 9- to 10-year-old division champions. Winless Giants shock Raiders

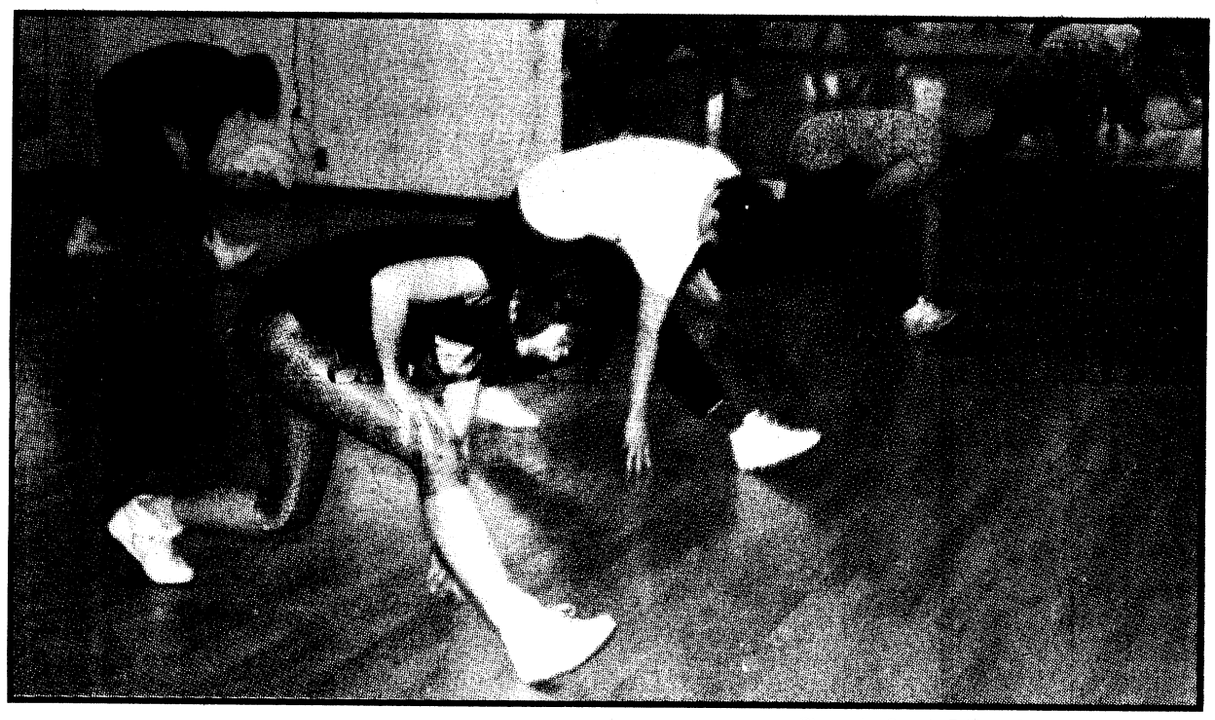
By John W. Peeler
Special to The Bayonet

On Blue Field Nov. 23, No. 2, the winless Giants, met with the Raiders for their season finale.



The Raiders hoped to pull into second place with the 49ers but this would be the day the much-maligned Giants would play their best game of the season and upset the Raiders 8 - 6.

During the first half, the Giants and Raiders shut each others' offense down by playing picture-perfect defense. The first half ended in a scoreless stalemate.

The third quarter belonged to the Giants, who pushed the ball down the field with a punishing running game, made a touchdown that resulted in a scoring drive and a Giant 8 - 0 third quarter lead.

The Raiders scored in the fourth quarter, but failed to convert the extra point making the score 8 - 6. The Raiders had one more chance to win the game in the fourth quarter, but the Giant defense tightened up and shut the Raider offense down, preserving a Giant 8 - 6 upset win.

Workouts not just available for Officers' Club members; adults and teens can attend mornings and evenings

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

"Many don't realize that a person doesn't have to belong to the Officers Club in order to take advantage of the aerobics classes here," said Becky Dietz.

Dietz has been an aerobics instructor at the Officers Club Fitness Center since June.

She said that the classes are something anyone can take advantage of with the reasonable rates.

Dietz's class meets Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. The charge for the class is $15 per month and $2 per day on a drop-in basis. In addition, the first class, to see if you like it, is free.

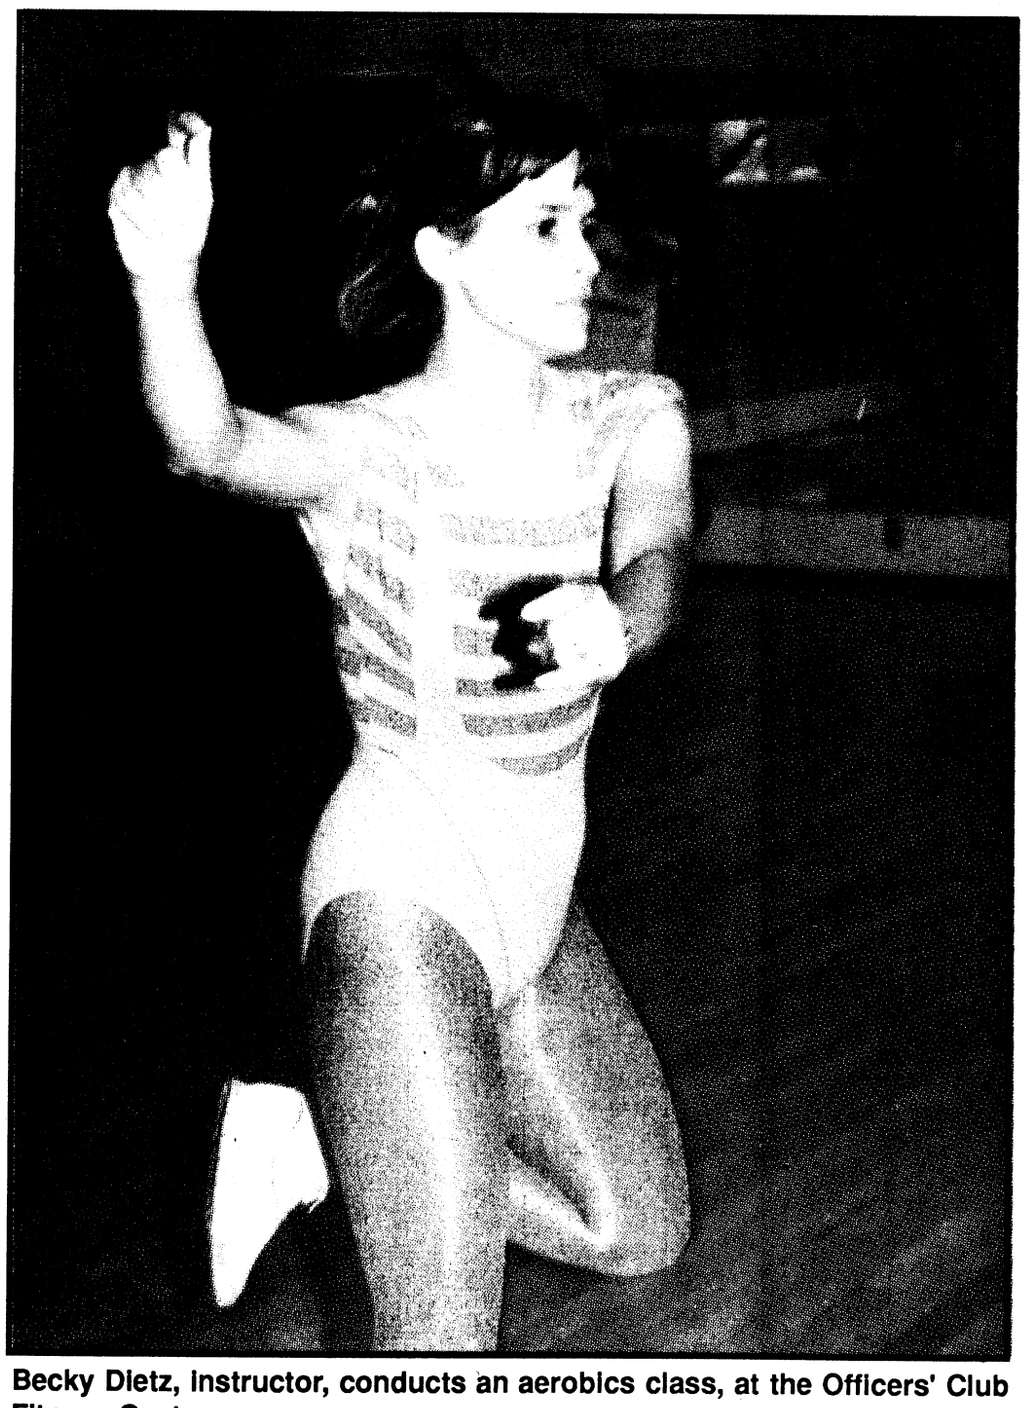
Three instructors teach aerobics at the Officers' Club Fitness Center, and they have recently started a new Junior Fit and Fun Program for teen-agers. This is mostly a low impact workout with their peers, so that they can feel more comfortable.

Dietz said her classes vary in size, but usually she has a small group of about 10 people. The afternoon class tends to be larger because that's when the after-work crowd comes.

She makes up the routines as she goes and notes, "It takes about four to six weeks for someone coming on a regular basis to see enough results that people notice," she said. A physical education major in college, Dietz has been doing aerobics for four years though this is the first time she's taught.

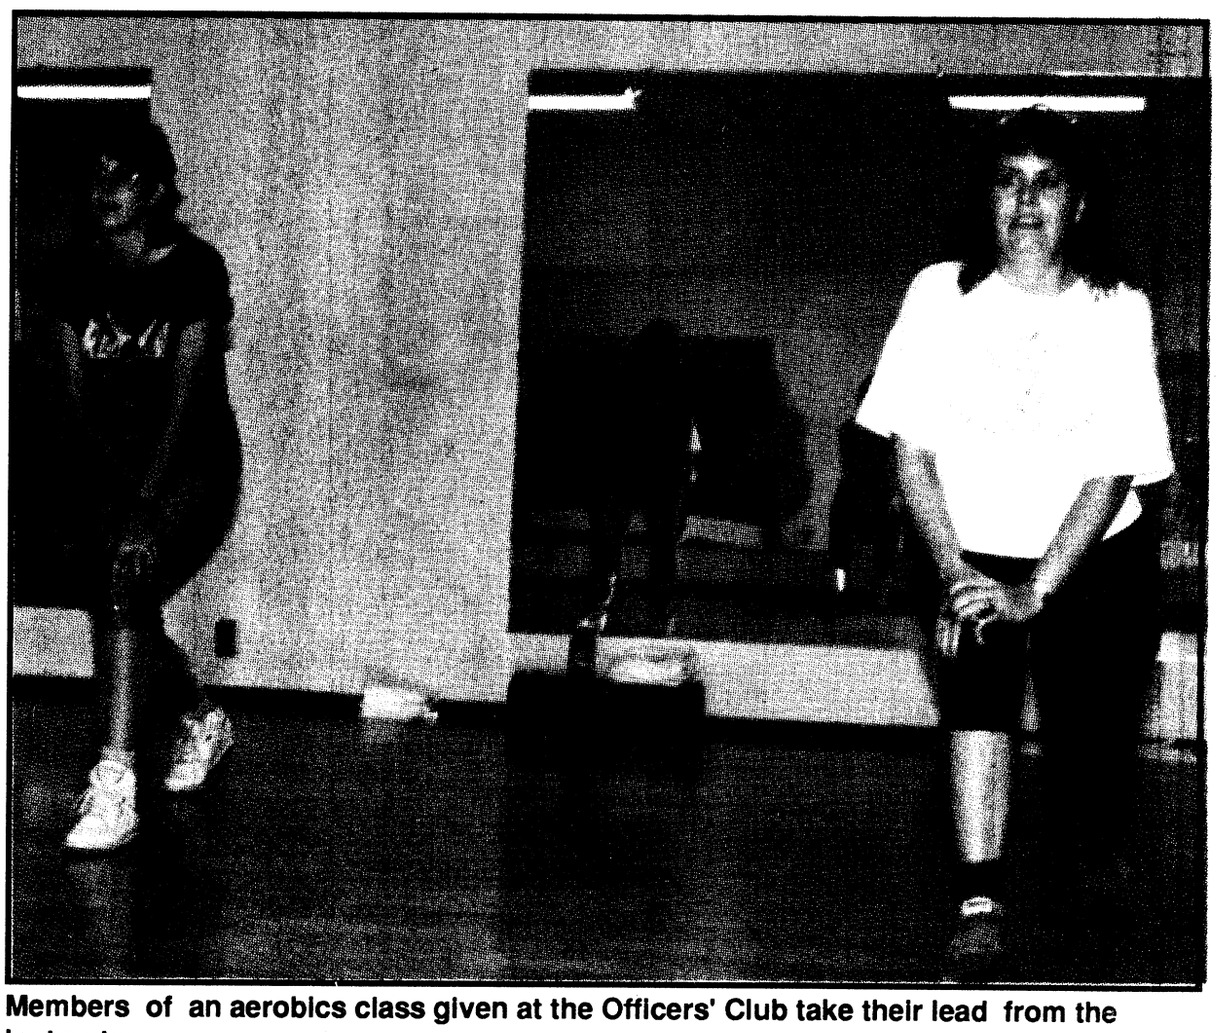
She got involved in it to get back into shape after college when she learned that for her it was more fun to exercise in a group.

"It's also a little harder to slack off when you have a commitment to be some place with others at a specific time," she said.



Dietz recommends that anyone who has not been exercising on a regular basis, have a physical and obtain a doctor's release before signing up for aerobics.

Although instructors are required to be certified in cardiopulmonary resuscitation, it's better to be safe than sorry, she said.



The schedule for aerobics classes at the Officers Club Fitness Center is:

Adults
9:30 to 10:30 a.m. - Monday, Wednesday and Friday.
9:30 to 10:30 a.m. - Tuesday and Thursday.
4:45 to 6:15 p.m. - Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

Teens
5 to 6 p.m. - Tuesday and Thursday.
9 to 10 a.m. - Saturday.

Members of an aerobics class given at the Officers' Club take their lead from the instructor.

White-tailed deer common game, America's restoration success story

By Aaron Pass
PM Editorial Services

The white-tailed deer, commonly known as the "whitetail," is without a doubt the No. 1 big-game animal in the United States. It also is one of America's greatest wildlife restoration success stories.

A little more than a half century ago, deer were scarce or absent in much of the country. Today, the whitetail are thriving in modern America with a current nationwide population that exceeds 20 million animals.

In Colonial times, deer were hunted commercially for their hides and shot by settlers for food and to protect their crops.

This uncontrolled and unrestricted exploitation, coupled with the pioneer clearing of the Eastern forest, continued until the North American deer population nearly was decimated.

By the early part of the 20th century, the whitetail were at their lowest ebb and all but gone from most of their native range. The decline of deer and other wildlife species alarmed sportsmen and spawned a national conservation movement that reversed this trend.

Today, thanks to good wildlife management, restocking and regulated hunting seasons, the white-tailed deer is once again abundant and widespread. Some authorities speculate that there are more deer in America today than when Columbus arrived.

Indeed, in many areas, deer are now too abundant for their own good, threatening their habitat with their voracious appetites and high reproductive potential.

In good habitat, about 90 percent of the whitetail does will produce one to three fawns each year. A whitetail herd can increase its population by about 35 percent each year. Left unchecked, a deer herd will continue to increase until its population exceeds the ability of the environment to support it.

An overpopulated deer herd literally eats itself out of house and home, causing the deer to either starve or fall victim to disease. In addition, the overgrazed habitat may take years to recover. Regulated hunting keeps the overall deer herd in balance.

Each autumn, an estimated 10 million deer hunters take an annual bag of approximately four million animals nationwide. This regulated and controlled harvest not only helps control the deer population but also supports wildlife conservation.

Hardly a wilderness creature, the whitetail favors a forest-edge habitat of woodlots and second-growth forest with brushy undergrowth interspersed with pasture or other grassy openings.

Deer also are quite at home in the back yards of suburban America, where they cause considerable distress to gardeners.

Today, excellent deer populations are found on public hunting land located reasonably near many major population centers in the East, Midwest and South, making the whitetail the No. 1 game animal in many parts of the country. It truly is America's "Backyard Big Game."

Aaron Pass has written hundreds of articles about hunting, fishing and camping for newspapers and magazines.

DAY OF INFAMY

lives in the memories of many

By Jim Garamone
American Forces Information Service

President Franklin D. Roosevelt called it the "day which will live in infamy."

Fifty years later, the phrase still means Dec. 7, 1941, the day the Japanese launched a surprise attack on Pearl Harbor.

Fifty years later, members of the Pearl Harbor survivors Association still recall the day in vivid, minute detail.

The attack blasted the United States into World War II. The Japanese killed more than 2,300 U.S. servicemen and wounded more than 1,100 others. All eight battleships in the harbor were hit; five sank. Eleven other ships were sunk, and 140 aircraft were destroyed.

Navy Yeoman 3rd Class Robert J. Watson watched the first Japanese planes dive on Battleship Row from his barracks on Ford island.

"I was in the screened-in porch on the second floor, shooting the bull with some of my friends," he said. "I saw the planes coming in and thought it was one of the (U.S.) carrier squadrons returning.

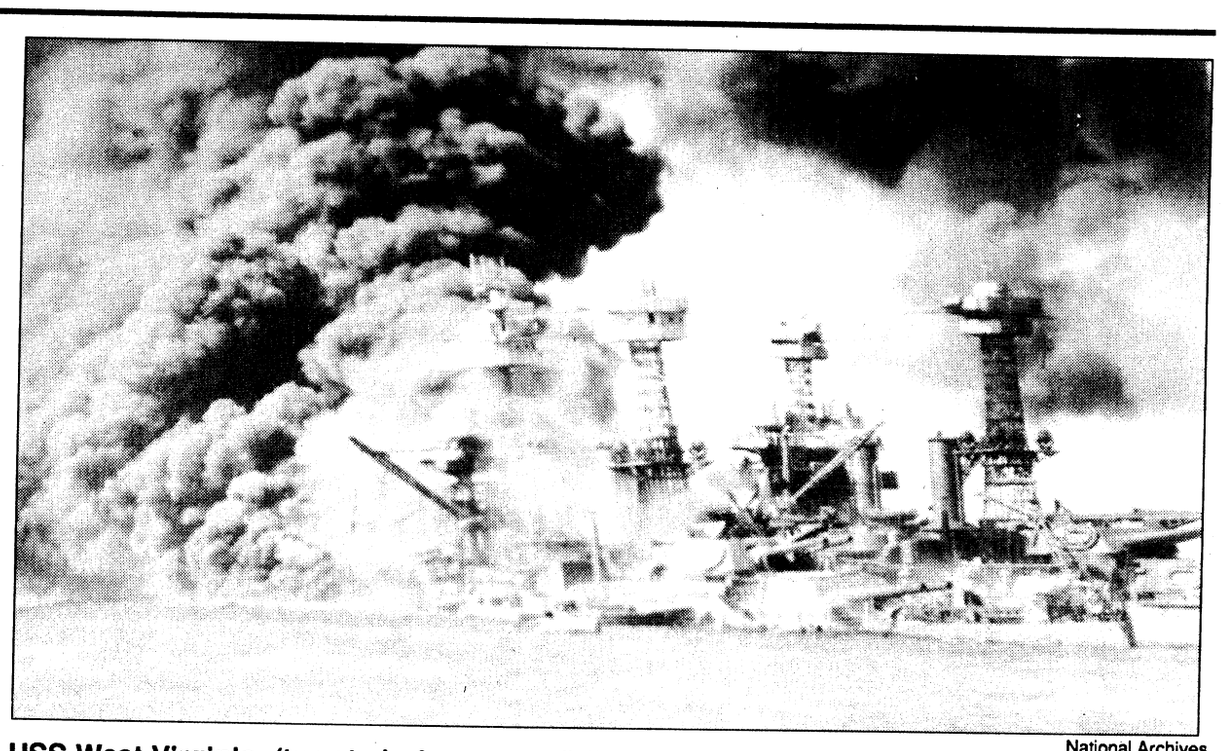
"I saw the bombs falling off the planes like feathers and then the explosions and realized immediately they were Japanese."

Watson ran to his battle station and watched as the Japanese bombed Battleship Row and the hangars and planes on Ford Island.

"It was the perfect spectators' spot," he said . "looking out the windows on one side of the building we saw the battleships getting hit, and on the other we watched as the airfield was bombed."

Smoke and flames covered Pearl Harbor, and Watson manned his battle station through the night and into the next day.

Navy Radioman 3rd Class Adolph Cerwenka was catching some sleep aboard the USS West Virginia when the attack started.



"General quarters sounded, and I ran to my battle station in my underwear and with one sock on," he said. "Someone said it was the Japanese, and I believed them." The West Tennessee, just aft of the USS Oklahoma and just forward of the USS Arizona—right in the middle of Battleship Row.

"We took seven torpedoes in the port side before all the electricity went out," he said. "Funny thing I still remember is that every time a torpedo hit, it would splinter the paint off the bulkhead. There was one radioman who grabbed a broom after each hit and tried to sweep it up as if we didn't have more important things to worry about."

After abandon ship was sounded, Cerwenka helped pass the injured out, then went on the quarterdeck. A blast from the Arizona knocked him under No. 2 turret. He then slid out from under the turret, over the side and into the oil-covered water. "There was an empty motor launch, so we went around and hauled people from the water."

Japanese planes were still making bombing runs on the ships as Cerwenka and the makeshift crew picked up sailors in the water. They also went to the overturned battleship Oklahoma and plucked survivors from the hull.

Army 2nd Lt. Roy Morgan's first intimation something was wrong came when the mirror in his bachelor quarters at Hickam Field fell off the wall. "I saw this airplane making a run on the parked planes. It pulled up, and I saw the red circle under the wing. I thought, "They wouldn't dare." But, of course, there they were."

National Archives

USS West Virginia (turrets in foreground) lies sunk but upright after the attack on Pearl Harbor.

He ran toward the flight line, but was forced to take cover from strafing Japanese planes. "I jumped into this excavation and hugged the corner, but I was on the wrong side," he said.

Morgan watched as a plane flew toward him firing its machine guns. "I could see puffs of dust as the bullets hit the ground toward me," he said. "The last one passed so close it burned my hand."

Morgan ran to the barracks and reached it just as a string of bombs landed on it. "The walls bulged, and some masonry fell on me, and I ran to the parade ground on the other side of the barracks," he said.

"The first person I saw was the officer of the day. He had been killed by the concussion of the bomb blast as he tried to get the soldiers out of the barracks. The whole parade field was covered with dead. One man I remember i particular was leaning against a tree. I thought he needed help and went over. He was dead and pinned to the tree by bomb fragments."

Marine Cpl. Raymond E. Hechler was coming up for a breath of fresh air after breakfast aboard the light cruiser USS Helena when the attack started.

"The Marine color guard was getting ready to raise the flag when I noticed some planes diving over Ford Island," he said.

"I thought at first it was a drill, but then the lead plane dropped a bomb and blew up a PBY (Catalina patrol bomber). It flew up, and I saw the red emblems under the wing, and I knew it was no drill."

General quarters sounded, and Hechler ran toward his battle station. On his way, he heard a plane fly over the fantail and then a torpedo hit. "It passed right under the USS Oglala and hit us. I was knocked down, and when I came to, I kept trying to get to my battle station."

The hit burst the seams of the Oglala which sank later. The Helena had a hole "big enough to drive a truck through," but did not sink. "One of the weird things I remember wasn't about the battle itself, but about the movie we saw on the fantail of the ship the night before," said Hechler. "It was Hold Back the Dawn."

Post plans activities for Pearl Harbor anniversary

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

The 50th anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor will be commemorated at the National Infantry Museum Dec. 7 with a program sponsored by the Military History Division of the U.S. Army Infantry School..

According to Capt. Peter Panzeri, commemoration director, a reception for Pearl Harbor survivors at 11 a.m. will begin the commemoration, followed by a formal presentation in the museum auditorium from noon until 2 p.m.

The presentation will feature guest speakers from Georgia and Alabama colleges and universities.

Hugh H. Rogers, Ph.D., Columbus College, will speak on the possibility of Winston Churchill having prior knowledge of the attack on Pearl Harbor.

Wesley P. Newton, Ph.D., Auburn University Montgomery will discuss the career of U.S. Army fighter ace John T. Moore.

James E. Pence of the National Military Historical Society will elaborate on Army aviatiors in World War II.

Guided tours of the museum's World War II exhibits will be conducted by the museum staff.

A re-enactment demonstration and a living history display with authentic uniforms, equipment, weapons, and vehicles will be held by the National World War II Re-enactment Society,

The film "Tora, Tora, Tora" will be shown in the auditorium.

The National Historical Miniatures Gaming Society will host wargame simulations, using miniature figures, of the attack on Pearl Harbor and an island battle in the Pacific.

"Both soldiers and civilians are invited to attend the commemoration," Panzeri said, adding that remembering history is important for both.

"For American citizens it's important because it's a part of our heritage. We need to remember our veterans: not only what they did but the cause they did it for," Panzeri said.

"For military professionals, it's important because we're obligated to study history in order to apply those lessons learned to future operations."

Both main post chapels will hold special memorial prayers during regular services Sunday.

Supermarket of vet benefits offered today

Georgia Department of Veterans Service

Veterans and their dependents will have an opportunity to acquire information and assistance from some 25 municipal, state and federal agencies about various benefits when the Georgia Department of Veterans Service together with the U. S. Department of Veterans Affairs, conducts a one-day, one-stop service and information session in the National Guard Armory, 2505 Victory Drive, Columbus from 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m., today the eve of the 50th anniversary of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor in 1941.

Georgia Commissioner of Veterans Affairs Pete Wheeler and Atlanta VA Regional Office Director Charles Wickes explained the program during a meeting on Nov. 26 with Columbus Mayor Frank Martin, who signed a proclamation designating today as "Supermarket of Veterans' Benefits day" in Columbus.

In a joint statement, Wheeler and Wickes said, "There may be many veterans and dependents who are eligible for various benefits but who, for some reason, have never applied for them. In this one-day session we will place every agency that has any connection whatsoever with veterans' benefits within easy reach of those eligible veterans and their dependents. This includes dependent parents, wives and children. We will not just answer questions and shuffle people from one agency to another, but we will find out what can be done and, in many cases, do it on the spot. We expect to actually file hundreds of claims."

The 1991 Veterans' Supermarket will be the fourth such event hosted by Columbus. More than 7,000 people attended the "Supermarket" here in 1978. Since the Georgia Department of Veterans Service originated these one-day, one-stop programs 26 years ago in Columbus, more than 113,000 persons have received on-the-spot assistance at "Supermarkets" in Augusta, Rome, Macon, Albany, Atlanta, Gainesville, Waycross, Dalton, Savannah, Athens and Valdosta.

In addition to the Department of Veterans Service and DVA, some of the other agencies expected to participate include the Small Business Administration; the Social Security Administration; the Georgia Department of Public Safety; the State and U. S. Departments of Labor; the Georgia Game and Fish Division of the Department of Natural Resources; the Georgia State Merit System of Personnel Administration; the representatives of state and federal veterans medical facilities; the American Red Cross; and local government representatives.

"All participating agencies are involved with veterans' benefits in some respect," said Wheeler. "By having all in one place at the same time, it eliminates the necessity of a veteran or his dependent having to go several places to have questions answered and to get help with individual problems."

Veterans and their dependents from anywhere in Georgia are urged to attend this free service in Columbus, in the National Guard Armory on Victory Drive, from 10:00 a.m. until 4 p.m. today.

Army spouse writes song about celebrity who tested positive for HIV

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Yvonne Denise Fisher Watkins has been singing for an audience since she was eight-years-old.

Recently she wrote the song, "A Touch of Magic" about Magic Johnson, made a demo tape in a local recording studio and is now looking for an agent to help her market it.

She wrote the song because "Magic has shown that illness can happen to anyone and change their lives forever. However, many don't wake up and want to help until it hits home."

Watkins said she intends to donate any funds generated by the song to various disease foundations.

"Magic has the HIV virus, she said, "and people close to me have other health problems. My father has diabetes; my mother, respiratory problems; my sister, cancer that is in remission; and my cousin has sickle cell anemia. It's difficult to choose one cause."

It was all of the above that

triggered her to write the lyrics for the song.

The music was written for her by Daniel Brake of Hopkinsville, Ky., who is now working in a recording studio in Nashville, Tenn.

This is not Watkins' first attempt at song writing. During Operations Desert Shield and Storm, she and her husband, Sgt. Walter Watkins, were stationed at Fort Campbell, Ky.

While at Fort Campbell, she did a music video for the post using a song she wrote called, "Storm On."

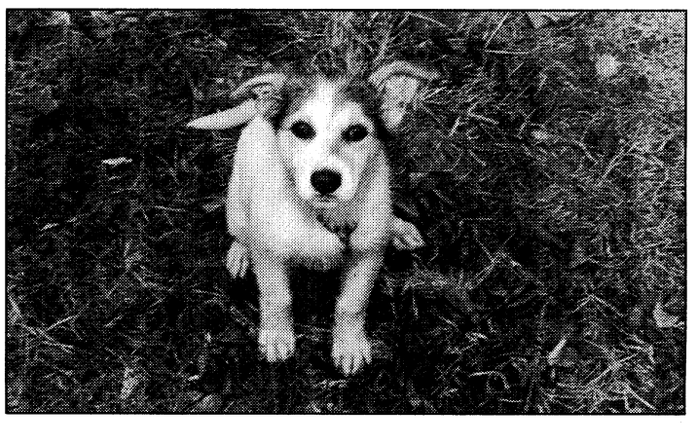
The music for it was written by Charles Brooks, a police officer from Clarksville, Tenn.

She also wrote another song entitled, "We Salute Our Armed Forces," that started as a poem salute to the 101st Airborne Division, was printed on T-shirts, and then became a music video.

Since Watkins is a Kansan by birth, Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas gave this song an endorsement on the "Larry King Show" when he was a guest March 5th of this year.

Both videos were produced by Jerry Mart, who works in Communications at Fort Campbell. Rick Guthrie wrote the music for "We Salute" and also provided free studio time for both of these songs.

The proceeds from her efforts went to family support groups and homecoming celebrations at Fort Campbell.



"A Touch of Magic" was recorded by Maurice Owens of Mr. O's Systems in Columbus. The entire taping took four hours.

Watkins used to sing professionally with a band in Germany, when they were stationed there. However, she gave it up when it started taking too much time away from her children.

She and her husband have two children, Kynesha Evonne, 11, and Walter Watkins III, 9.

Her husband is a drill sergeant for Company B, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Training Center.

ITC donations, volunteers strengthen Santa's Castle

ITC Santa Castle
Special to The Bayonet

The Infantry Training Center has traditionally been one of Fort Benning's strongest supporters of worthy causes. Over the years, the ITC has given as much as 50 percent of Fort Benning's total contributions to causes such as Army Emergency Relief and the Combined Federal Campaign.

Santa's Castle is no exception. This year the ITC's contributions amount to over 58 percent of that organization's cash donations received from Fort Benning units.

According to Sharon Patton, Santa's Castle chairman, the generosity of ITC soldiers has made it possible for Santa's Castle to stock better toys this year.

"In addition to being our highest contributor, the ITC has historically represented only 1 percent of our referrals," Patton said. "The ITC gives a lot, but doesn't use very much and we really appreciated the support."

The ITC is giving volunteer support to Santa's Castle too. Kathy Dykes, whose husband commands the 3rd Battalion, 32nd Infantry Regiment, is one of Santa's Castle's six full-time volunteers. Dykes is Inventory Manager. She has been a Santa's Castle volunteer since September. "I've always been active in volunteer work," Dykes said. "I choose to volunteer at Santa's Castle because it just seemed to be the place for me."

Santa's Castle is a nonprofit organization that was established in 1986 by Karen Chinen. The organization gives Christmas toys, books, and games to families of soldiers who are not able to buy them.

Company commanders and first sergeants select soldiers who are given a day and time to "shop" at Santa's Castle. Each child is given six toys and each family is given a game or puzzle.

Santa's Castle operates year round. Volunteers stay busy collecting and refurbishing used toys, holding fund raising activities, soliciting donations, and shopping for new toys.

Patton expects 400 families to "shop" at Santa's Castle this holiday season. That's over 1,000 happy kids this Christmas thanks to Santa's Castle.

Sappers sponsor project outreach children on tour

By William C. Wagner
72nd Engineer Company

The 72nd Engineer Company "Sappers" recently sponsored five Project Outreach children on a tour of engineer equipment at the unit motor pool. Project Outreach offers educational and cultural opportunities in the Columbus and Fort Benning communities for children ages 10 to 12, according to Sgt. John Keith, a noncommissioned officer in the 72nd who made arrangements for the youngsters' visit to Kelley Hill. "I've been a Project Outreach volunteer for more than a year now, and I really enjoy outings with these kids," said Keith. "As volunteers, we try to instill a sense of pride and responsibility in each of the children that we sponsor."

Members of the group meet once a month with Ron Buckner, a local businessman who serves as the program director. "During the past year, we've taken the children to a cardiopulminary resuscitation class at the Columbus Fire Station, toured the Infantry Museum on post, visited Black History points of interest in the community, and received a briefing on some of the facilities at St. Francis Hospital," Keith said.

During their visit with the 72nd, Derrick Williams, Chaka Jones, John Farrrow, Mitchell Givens and Kariem Berry climbed into an armored vehicle launched bridge, a combat engineer vehicle, an M9 armored combat earthmover, and an M113A2 armored personnel carrier.

Anyone interested in more information about Project Outreach may call Sgt. Keith at 544-2566 during duty hours or 687-3737 in the evening.

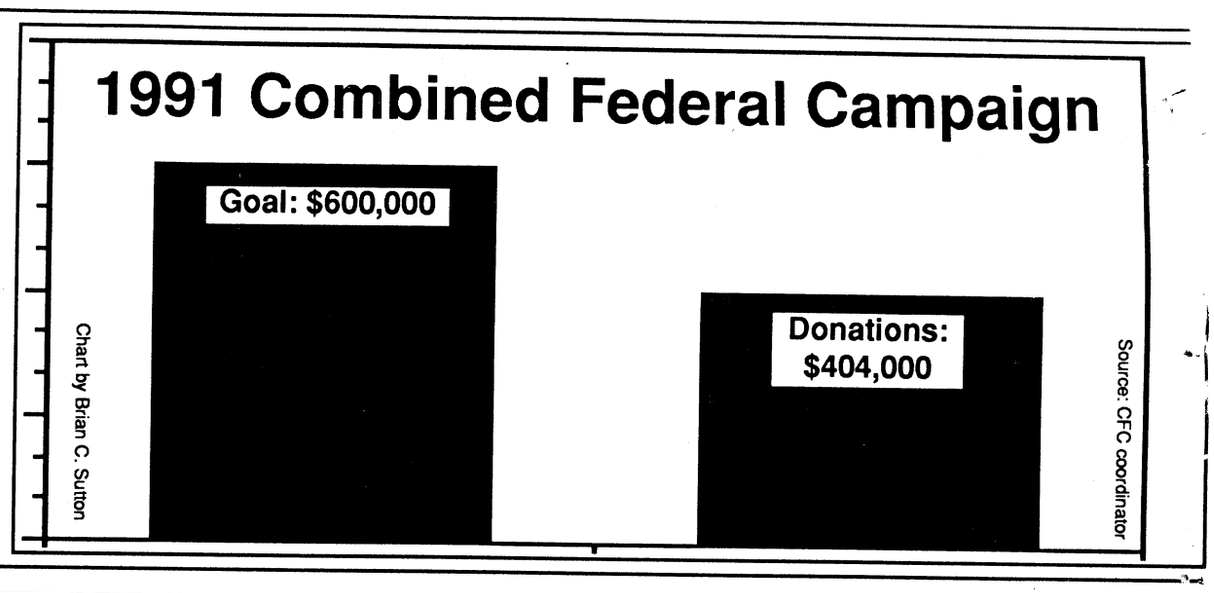
CFC donations short of goal

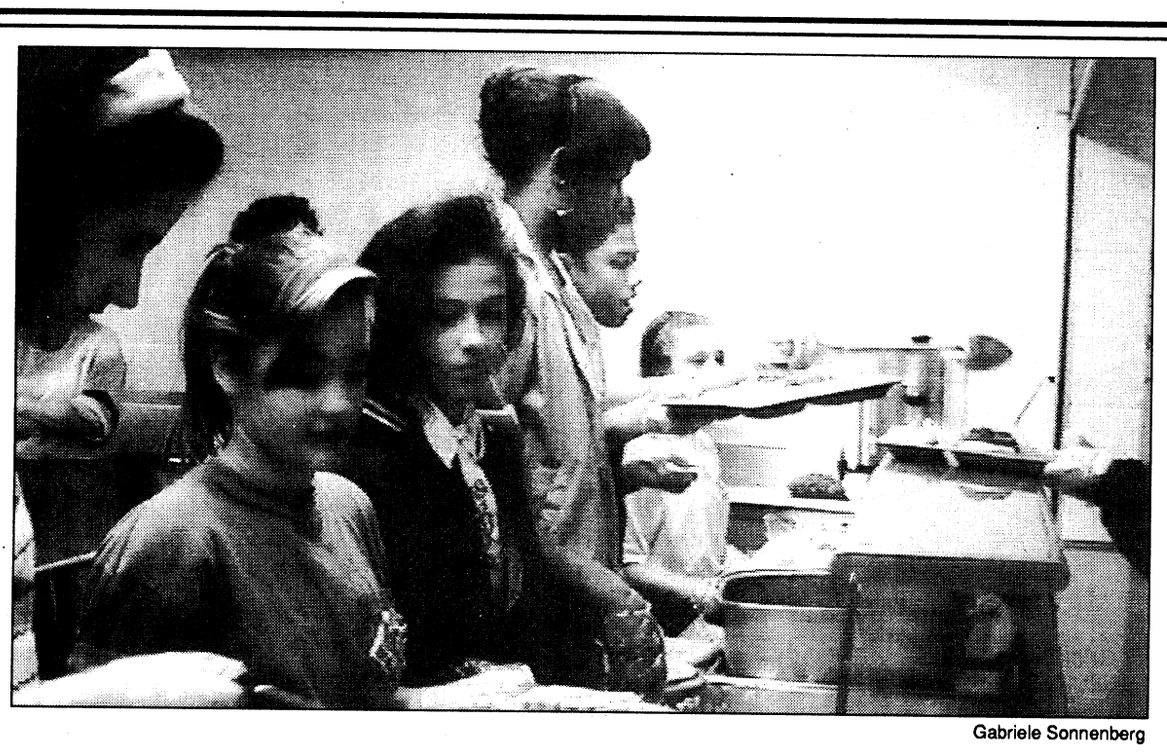
By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

A total of $404,000 has been turned in to the Combined Federal Campaign at Fort Benning as of Monday.



According to Cathy White, coordinator for the CFC on post, this is about 67 percent of the goal.

Though the deadline for this fund-raiser has not been extended, White said that her office will remain open as long as donations keep coming in.



"Some pledge cards we've received recently were dated as far back as Oct. 14. They just weren't turned in to us," she said. "That's why we've been encouraging those at the unit collection points to bring their pledges and checks to us as soon as possible."

The campaign is the local part of the United Way drive.

A once-a-year appeal to the soldiers and civilians working on post, CFC helps such Fort Benning agencies as the Post Red Cross, the Supplemental Food Locker, Volunteer Services, Youth and Handicapped Programs, Chaplains' Enlisted Outreach, Post Community Improvement, Child Care Provider Certification, Family Support Groups and Dental Health.

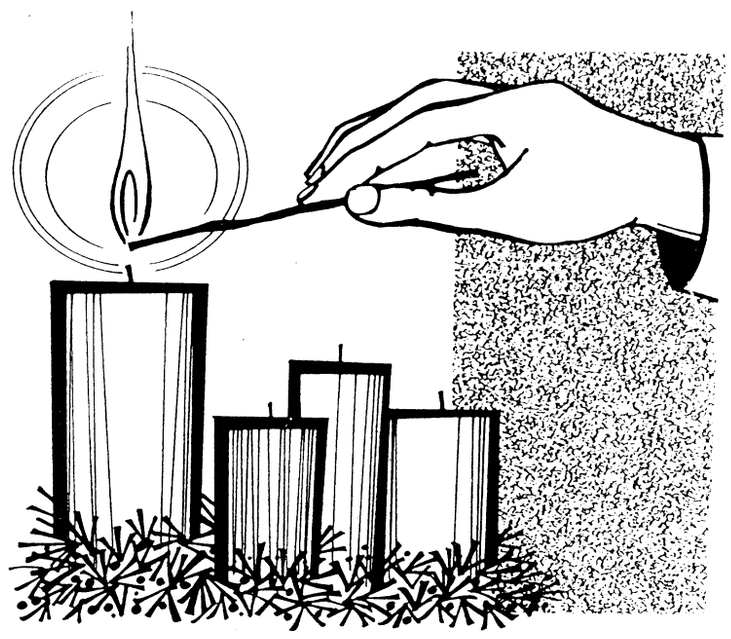
Advent heralds Christ

By John W. Betlyon
2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment

"Advent" is the season of the church year which immediately precedes Christmas. It is a series of four Sundays, which began Sunday this year and culminates Dec. 22.



The name of the season comes from the Latin word adventus meaning coming. This is the time of year when Christians prepare themselves for the "coming" of the Christ child and for the second coming of Christ as judge at the last days.

The first Sunday in Advent is the day on which the liturgical church year begins. The year uses scripture readings to follow the life of Christ from Advent through Christmas, to Lent, Holy Week and Good Friday with Christ's crucifixion and his resurrection on Easter Sunday.

There follows the Feast of Pentecost—the birthday of the church—and the bulk of the church year, known simply as "Ordinary Time."

Like Lent, the 40- day period before Easter when Christians prepare for Christ's resurrection by fasting, praying and doing penitent acts, Advent was originally kept in the same way, though with less strictness.

Today some Christian denominations keep Advent by decorating their churches in either purple or blue paraments and vestments to recall the solemnity of the season.

For us, the main thrust of Advent is to prepare ourselves for the "real" celebration of Christmas. The last four weeks before Christmas are usually a busy time, when all of us are consumed with shopping for gifts, decorating our homes with the children, and going to an endless round of Christmas parties, formals, and dinners.

By the time Christmas arrives, many of us are exhausted and need a short period of block leave to rejuvenate ourselves.

But Advent can be a time of rich blessings if we find a few moments to be quiet with ourselves, and to put the noise and the hustle and bustle out of our minds. Helen Neinast and Sue Ann Steffey Morrow wrote that "the sounds of Advent [include] quiet verses of 'O Come, O Come, Emmanuel,' someone crying in the wildern the silence of an early winte morning's cold dawn, the rustle heavy coats bundled against th evening's chill andthe hushed expectancy of murmured prayers for peace, for reconciliation, for healing." We can only "hear" these sounds in a quiet place.

Indeed, all these things are Advent, when Christians retreat fo a moment inside themselves, light a candle, shut the door and be quiet, put down the noise of worry and work, and listen for Advent to speak to each of us.

It is a time to wait for God to come again into the world. It is time to prepare for the promise of God's nearness. It is a time to hope that God's love will fill our hearts and lead us to a richer, fuller life.

Chaplain discusses importance of Mary's immaculate conception

By Michael J. Travaglione
School of the Americas

At the beginning of the eighth century, we find in the East a feast celebrating St. Anne's conception of Mary. In the ninth century, the feast appeared at Naples and, a century later, began to spread from there.

The celebration began to take on a greater solemnity and, above all, a new doctrinal meaning.

Through a great deal of discussion in the theological schools, clarification was gradually achieved on the special privilege the Blessed Virgin had received of being preserved free from original sin.

It was only in 1854, however, that Pope Pius IX proclaimed the dogma of the Immaculate Conception. The prayers and preface of the Mass of the Immaculate Conception bring out the essential of the dogma: the fact that the Virgin was preserved from original sin by prevenient grace and thus prepared to be a worthy mother for God's Son.

The preface also sees the Immaculate Virgin as prefiguring the church, Christ's bride without spot or wrinkle. We have recourse to Mary's intercession because she was chosen in an unique way from among all women.

Post holds small arms championship

By Alyanna B. Summers
Bayonet staff writer

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Small Arms Championship was Nov. 18 through 22.

"The match is held yearly to emphasize the importance of good marksmanship and esprit de corps," said the match director, Maj. Reinaldo Santiago.

Units and individuals from around post competed in the 9mm pistol, M-16 rifle and M-60 machine gun competition .

"This is a good way to test your marksmanship skills. Everyone should compete at least once," said Staff Sgt. Kenneth Gill, Company A, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry.

"This is the second time we have competed in this competition," said Cpl. Daron Holland of the 29th Infantry Regiment. "We've trained since September for this year's competition, and it's better than ever," he said . Holland was a member of the six-man team from that unit competing in the M-60 machine gun competition.

Sgt. Vincent Greiner, a referee for the match from the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, stressed the fundamentals of the competition.

"Being in good physical condition and having steady control over your weapon are key elements in this competition," said Greiner. "There should really be more competitors in this match, considering this is the home of the infantry," said Greiner. "The troops find this kind of competition challenging, but fun. One motivating factor is that competitors can move on to compete in the XVIII Airborne Corps competition at Fort Bragg and the All-Army matches. Going on to represent the post and unit in that way is a real honor," said Greiner.

Sgt. 1st Class David Cameron of the 11th Infantry Regiment, who competed with the 11th Infantry Regiment's 9mm pistol team, was impressed by the competition.

"I think that this is a real challenge for our team, and all soldiers in general, because marksmanship needs to be stressed more than it is. It would be even better if we could get more command support in terms of time to practice and prepare for the match," said Cameron.

The results of the competition were as follows:

Vanguards go out for victory

By Richard McInnis and Aurelio Feliberty
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

Recently, the 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry conducted platoon live-fire exercises. A mechanized unit, the "Vanguard Battalion" changed the pace by going "light" on this exercise without its usual accompaniment of M-113 armored personnel carriers.

The "Vanguard Victory" exercise was initiated with a road march from Kelley Hill to the Military Operations on Urbanized Terrain site on McKenna Hill, followed by platoon operations in the site. Day two consisted of movement to the Juliet area to conduct more platoon training

The platoon training exercises continued for a total of eight days, culminating in a live-fire exercise and a road march back to Kelley Hill.

"The platoon live-fire exercise started off with the platoon's movement from assembly area one, where they attacked silhouette enemies on objective one," said 1st. Lt Keenan Wynn, battalion chemical officer. "From objective one, the platoon occupied an objective rally point , where the leaders reconnoitered the enemy position, for the final assault."

"Once the assault commenced, the platoon had to breach a wire obstacle with homemade Bangalore torpedoes, constructed with one engineer stake and eight pounds of C-4 explosive," Wynn added.

"After the assault, the platoon reconsolidated and reorganized on the objective and waited for Echo Company to counterattack," he continued. "As soon as that was over, the men returned for an after-action review of the exercise."

Moments later, 3rd Platoon, Delta Company, crossed the line of departure on the way to its objective, led by 2nd Lt. Richard T. Calfee. The platoon moved in a wedge formation on the given azimuth. Approximately 150 meters from the ORP, the group hit its first challenge. Sporadic fire came from an observation post manned by six enemy personnel.

Quickly, the lead element eliminated the opposition with an assault. A quick search produced six dead enemy soldiers, one map, and an assortment of equipment that would be handled by follow-on units. A hasty reconsolidation and movement began.

Once in the ORP, the leaders moved out on a reconnaissance of the objective. Meanwhile, a breach team prepared a set of bangalore torpedoes. The leaders returned, shared a few ideas, briefed the troops and moved out.

As the platoon neared the objective, the C-R-U-M-M-P of mortar preparatory fire could be heard.

The breach team led the platoon up to the wire.

Two soldiers slid the torpedoes under the concertina, initiated the time fusesand joined the assault group.

The troops then began to exploit the new opening like ants at a picnic, securing the objective and accomplishing the mission, the platoon leader said.

Winnie the Pooh celebrates Christmas

By JAY BOBBIN
Tribune Media Services

The holiday season is a time for familiar faces ... including, in the words of his theme song, that of a "willy-nilly, silly old bear."

Though the Disney studio's animated incarnation of A.A. Milne's lovable creation appears regularly on ABC's weekly Saturday-morning show "The New Adventures of Winnie the Pooh," he makes a rare venture into the evening hours in Dec. 14's new ABC special "Winnie the Pooh and Christmas Too," marking the first time a holiday offering with classic Disney characters has been produced specifically for network prime-time. (CBS rebroadcasts "Mickey's Christmas Carol" on Friday, but that was shown theatrically before its TV debut.) The new tale restores ventriloquist Paul Winchell as the voice of Pooh's crony Tigger, which he first supplied for such 1960s movie featurettes as "Winnie the Pooh and the Blustery Day"; other notable vocals are furnished by Jim Cummings — also heard currently as "Darkwing Duck" — as Pooh, veteran British performer Michael Gough (alias butler Alfred in the 1989 "Batman" movie) as Gopher, and longtime character actor John ("The Bob Newhart Show") Fiedler as Piglet. The words of resident human Christopher Robin are spoken by Edan Gross.

In the seasonal story, for which the animation was done by Disney's new cartoon division in France, the friends in the Hundred Acre Wood compose a Christmas wish list and mail it to Santa. They then realize Pooh hadn't asked for anything, so they manage to get the note back, intending to add the bear's request and send it again in time to arrive at the North Pole before Dec. 25. Everyone else suddenly comes up with more wishes, making the revised letter so big, it's virtually impossible to mail. Though Pooh and Piglet try very hard to fulfill the wishes themselves, their efforts come up short, leading Pooh to volunteer to deliver the missive to Santa personally ... though his long and difficult trek might mean he won't be back in time to spend Christmas Day with his close friends.

Winnie the Pooh has his first Christmas special

"Winnie the Pooh and Christmas Too" doesn't occupy the entire hour allotted for Saturday's special, with the remaining time filled by Donald Duck cartoons and highlights of the new Disney theatrical movie "Beauty and the Beast," but developing and executing a 24-minute story was complicated enough. "Just the thought of writing a 60-minute show makes me wake up at night in a cold sweat," confesses producer and supervising director Ken Kessel, who also oversees ABC's ongoing "Pooh" weekend series, "because it's very hard to sustain one animated subject for a full hour. We've always wanted to do a 'Winnie the Pooh' special, but my personal choice was (to do it for) Thanksgiving. I always thought that was a very good, 'Pooh' time of year, but we had talked about it for so long that it was one of those ideas you never thought would actually happen. Miracle of miracles, though, it finally did. It's been a long haul."

Indeed, Kessel reports that the writing of the script by Mark Zaslove and Karl Geurs began in November 1990, "and the recording date (for the voice actors) was in the middle of last January. It's like having a baby, because you end up pacing the halls and waiting. We've been well-trained in being really careful about how the characters are being handled, and a lot of effort goes into the writing, just to guarantee that it's true to the original sense of Milne. Since he was writing for a different era, compromises have to be made, and we've always been very concerned about that." Because of that, Kessel admits that he and his staff "constantly" check their work against the published Milne works: "We're always reading his stuff, all the time, and we're really proud that we've worked our way through without having to compromise the nature of the material.

"You are restrained by what the characters can do and who they are," Kessel continues.

FRIDAY — North Carolina State plays Alabama in the Diet Pepsi Tournament of Champions at Charlotte, N.C., at 9:30 p.m. on WSFA.

'Christmas in Olde Vic' opens at the Springer

The Springer Opera House

The Springer Children's Theatre, under the direction of Artistic Director Paul R. Pierce, has been working on a holiday musical. Playwright Christopher Owens has dug deep into the seldom-told story bag of Charles Dickens for the four yuletide tales that make up his musical, "Christmas in Olde Vic."

"Christmas in Olde Vic should be subtitled 'Monty Python meets Charles Dickens on Saturday Night Live," explained Pierce. "I've got eleven actors who play about forty-five characters. Not only do they change costumes in a matter of seconds, but these characters are wild, eccentric and hilariously funny."

His storytellers are the quirky Camerons— a wealthy, but rambunctious Victorian family that celebrates Christmas in their attic.

"Christmas in Olde Vic" centers around the Cameron family who climb into the attic of their Victorian home each Christmas Eve for a holiday party at which they exchange unusual gifts and act out supposedly true Christmas stories. The stories are retellings of Dickens' "The Five Poor Travellers," "Gabriel Grub and the Goblins," "The True Meaning of Christmas" and "The Wooden Horse," all liberally laced with traditional Victorian Christmas carols.

Dr. Paul Vander Gheynst has provided the musical direction with original arrangements and underscore, while Amy Bishop acts as the production's choral director.

"These are not the songs that immediately pop into your mind when you think of Christmas carols," said Bishop. "Instead of the standing-around-the-piano, 'Silent Night' variety, these carols are more likely music you may have heard in special settings. The music lends itself to a nice ensemble sound in this show."

"Christmas in Olde Vic" opened Thursday. Evening performances will continue tonight, Thursday, Dec. 13 and 14 at 7:30 p.m. with 2:30 p.m. matinees Saturday, Sunday, Dec. 14 and 15. For more information or reservations, call 327-3688.

Dear Neighbor:

With the holiday season upon us, I'm reminded of sixteenth century English clergyman Robert South who once said, "If there be any truer measure of a man than by what he does, it must be by what he gives." Though spoken long ago, South's words still ring true today.

At CVI, we're more than just a provider of Cable TV service. We're a friend in the communities we serve. Every year, in 18 states across the country, in towns similar to ours, CVI employees and customers join forces with local charitable organizations to help people in need. Together, we collect toys for children, canned goods for the homeless, money to help support athletic programs for the mentally retarded, and much more.

This holiday season please join us in the spirit of giving. Make a contribution toward our holiday drive and help those in our community who are less fortunate. When you do, we'll return the favor with a reduced-price installation.

Sincerely yours,
Ramona Byrd

Fort Benning's authorized newspaper — Home of the Infantry

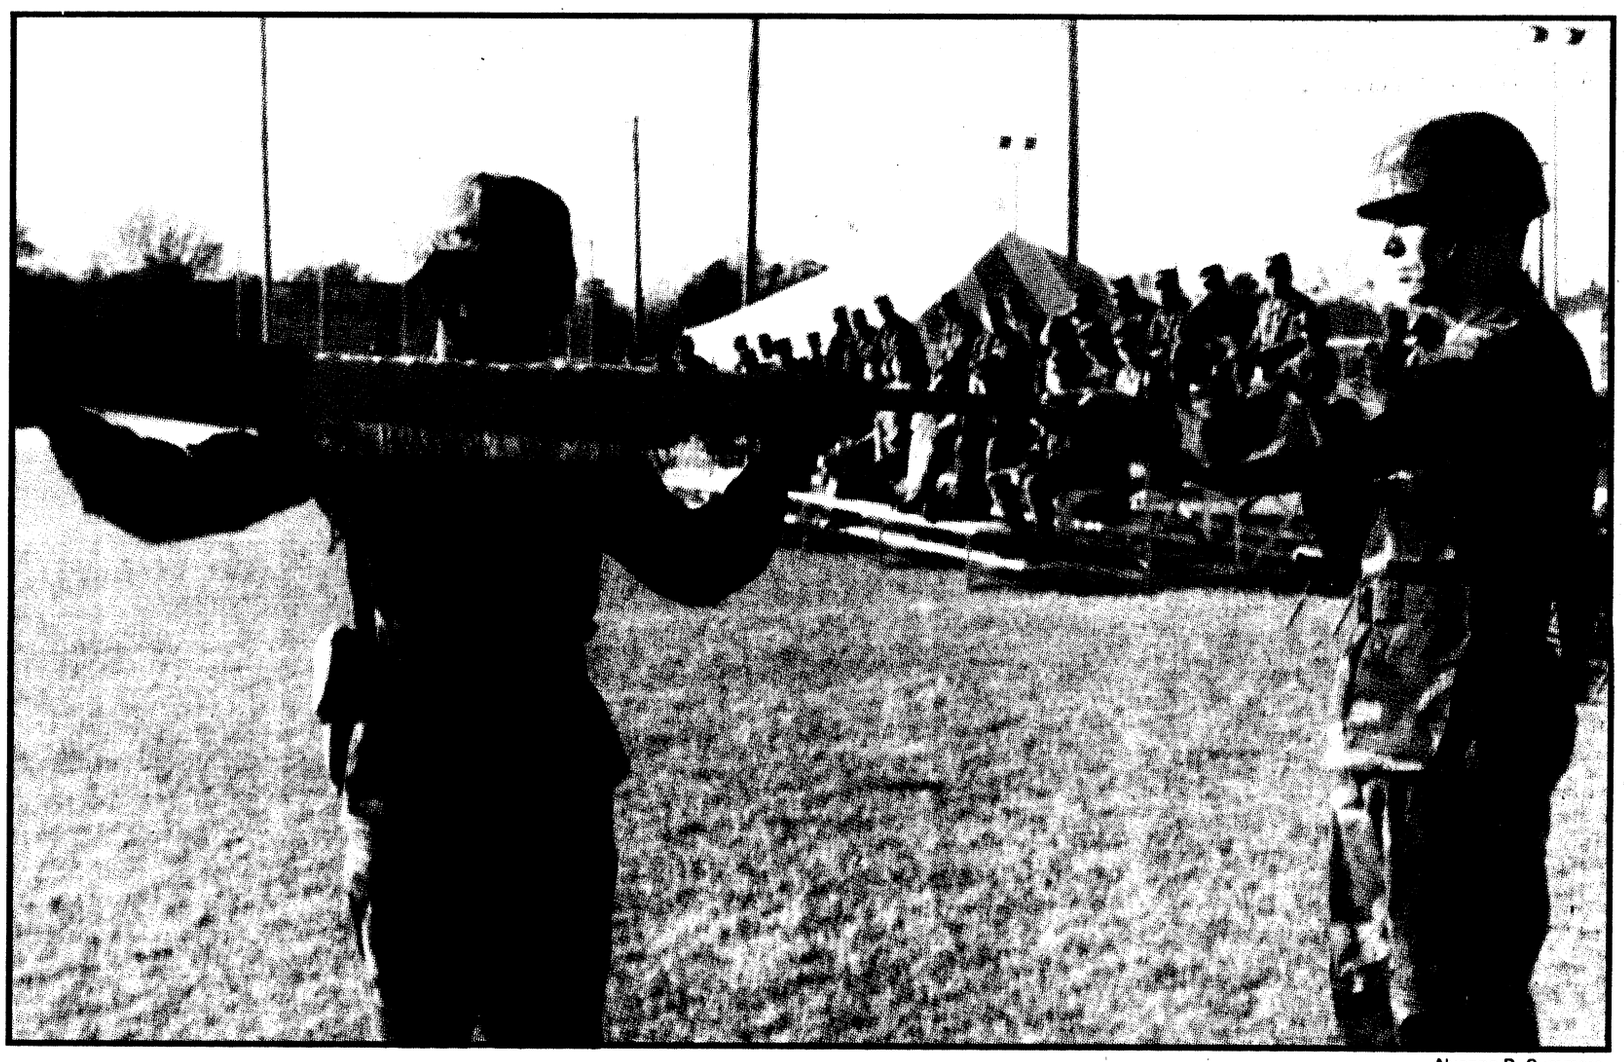
Volume 50, Number 10 — Published in the interest of the Fort Benning, Ga., community — Dec. 13, 1991

13th S&S finds home

Alyanna B. Summers
Bayonet staff writer

The 13th Supply and Service Battalion, a new unit on Fort Benning and the newest member of the 36th Engineer Group, officially uncased its unit's colors Tuesday at 3 p.m. on Engineer Field.



The 65-member unit, which arrived from the Ludwigsburg military community near Stuttgart, Germany, in October and November, will assume command and control of the 533rd Transportation Company, the 598th Maintenance Company and 608th Ordnance Company.

The 13th's history dates back to World War II, when the unit was established and activated as the 60th Quartermaster Battalion (Laundry). Several deactivations, redesignations, relocations and conflicts later, the unit emerges as it currently stands — a member of the Fort Benning community.

Lt. Col. Patrick E. Garren is the battalion's commander. He is a graduate of the University of Houston and received his commission from the Reserve Officers' Training Corps. Garren has served in various staff and command positions, to include commander of the VII Corps Materiel Management Center. He assumed command of the 13th Supply and Service during Operation Desert Storm Jan. 5.

Garren holds a bachelor's degree in business administration and a master's degree in science from the Naval postgraduate school. He is a graduate of the Armed Forces Staff College and Command and General Staff College.

His decorations include the Bronze Star, Meritorious Service and Joint Commendation Medals. Garren and his wife, Linda, and their daughters, Charlene, 19, and Kathy, 13, reside at Fort Benning.

Post allowing amnesty for illegal weapons from SWA

Some equipment OK as war trophies

By Barbara J. Ray
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning is conducting an amnesty period until Dec. 20 for turning in all illegal arms, ammunition and explosives from Southwest Asia, possessed by anyone living on or off post.

Although Army Regulation 608-4 permits certain firearms to be kept as war trophies, General Order No.1, published by the Central Command, prohibited soldiers from taking any firearms or munitions from Southwest Asia as trophies.

Individuals are authorized to possess captured enemy equipment consisting of military uniforms, organizational clothing and individual equipment items. General Order No. 1 also allows soldiers to have bayonets and knives as war trophies.

Violations of General Order No. 1 could be prosecuted under article 92 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

According to Capt. Rebecca Rouse, Military Police Activity project officer, individuals are asked to make every effort to coordinate turn in of illegal items through their units; however, if necessary, individuals may contact the Military Police desk sergeant at 545-5222.

The following are turn-in locations: Arms: Military Police Station, building 215; Free Turn-in Point, building 224; ammunition: Ammunition Supply Point, Surveillance Office, building 6000; explosives, same as ammunition, except that units with suspect explosives should contact the 89th Ordnance Detachment for disposal.

According to Sgt. 1st Class Robert Teague, operations sergeant, 89th Ordnance Detachment (Explosive Ordnance Disposal), caution should be used when handling any captured enemy weapons, ammunition or explosive devices because of the possibility of booby traps.

Former Army secretary visits post

Former Secretary of the Army John O. Marsh visited Fort Benning Dec. 6 to speak at a One Station Unit Training class graduation .

Marsh also spoke to airborne students about to make their third or fourth jump. Marsh has a son-in-law graduating from basic training.

When asked about his feelings on the 50th anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor, which launched the United States into World War II, Marsh referred to the more recent conflict from which the U.S. remained victorious.

"If the United States had the kind of Army 50 years ago that we have today, there would never had been a Pearl Harbor," said Marsh. "We see that demonstrated today with the capabilities shown by the Army and other services during the recent Persian Gulf action. It shows that it is absolutely essential to to keep our level of readiness very, very high.

"The nature of the threat has changed with the fall of the Berlin Wall, and the disintegration of the Soviet Union. But the risk and danger are still there, and the risk and the danger require a level of readiness in the military capability and the capability of to project power to protect the United States' interests," said Marsh.

"During World War II, Fort Benning was the mainstay of the Army," Marsh said.

Soldiers who find themselves on Fort Benning over the Christmas season can take advantage of free sports events and tours of area attractions through "Operation Holiday."

Sponsored by the Association of the United States Army, the events are offered at no cost to the soldier, said Jim Gallagher, executive officer of the Directorate of Combined Arms and Tactics.

Transportation to and from the various events will be provided, as well as cost of admission, but any additional costs, must be paid for by the soldier, added Gallagher.

Soldiers can sign up for the events through their unit first sergeants.

Operation Holiday will kick off at 10 a.m., Dec. 20, with a ceremony at the Government Center in Columbus. Fort Benning Commander Maj. Gen. Jerry White, Columbus Mayor Frank Martin and Phenix City Mayor Sonny Coulter will be among those in attendance.

Gallagher said that Operation Holiday, now in its 12th year, is supported entirely through donations and fund-raisers.

"In fact, the tickets for the the Blue-Grey game are donated by the Air Force Staff College at Maxwell Air Force Base in Alabama in appreciation of the combined arms demonstration given for members of the college by the 29th Infantry Regiment every February, so in this case you can say the Air Force is supporting the Army," Gallagher said.

Gallagher also said that soldiers who sign up for the Blue-Grey game need not worry about missing a traditional Christmas dinner because the Sand Hill Dining Facility will stay open late to accommodate those who go to the game.

Soldiers in uniform may buy alcohol, only at certain times

Wanted for Christmas: respect

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

COMMENTARY

The Infantry Band was up here this week serenading us with Christmas carols.

They sounded mighty good.

Many of the offices on our floor have trees and Christmas ornaments up already.

They look mighty good.

Homes on and off post have their outside decorations up--the on-post dwellers need to remember the season to light up doesn't begin until after the post Christmas tree is lighted and they're restricted to the hours of 6 to 11 p.m.

This latter policy, dictated by the need to conserve energy, is more in line with my philosophy about the season.

Never let it be said I'm not for peace and good will for man. I am. Year around.

What I'm not for are shopping frenzies that begin the day afater Thanksgiving and run through the new year.

I'm not for Christmas tree lots that open the day after Thanksgiving. And I'm certainly not for paying 50 bucks for a dead piece of wood.

Unfortunately, $50 is considered reasonable, even if it's more than a day's wages for some.

What I'm for is a boycott of stores that advertise Christmas sales with obnoxious, off-beat, out-of-tune Christmas songs.

I'm for tree stands that require no assembly, that will hold three-foot Christmas trees as easily as 12-foot Christmas trees, that hold lots of water and won't tip over.

I also would prefer not to have to bruise my thumbs twisting those long screws into the trunk.

I would like to find an easy way to open vacuum packed packages. The plastic on those things is tough enough to deflect M-16 rounds. It will dull the sharpest knife.

Do manufacturers seal things like that to guard against pilferage, or do they never buy their own products and thus, don't know any better?

I'd like to see a ban on all items that carry the statement "some assembly required."

Either that, or make them carry a warning label like cigarettes: "Warning, the attempted assembly of this item could be dangerous to your blood pressure and can result in severe strains being placed upon family relationships."

Sell these items during the non-Christmas season (if there is such a thing) when the pressure to get it assembled in record time is not present.

I'd like to see women's clothes labeled so a man can understand them. What is a size 10?

What's wrong with telling us what the waist size is, the inseam for pants, the length for skirts, the shoulder and chest size for blouses and coats?

Also, the sizes should be permanently affixed to the garments so when the husand forgets what his wife's size is, he can check a similar piece of clothing and then make a wise purchase for which she'll be eternally grateful even as she exchanges it for something more practical or less gaudy.

By the way, fellow men, wives DO NOT want you to buy them practical gifts for Christmas, such as kitchen knife sets, copper-plated pots and pans, new vacuum cleaners, no matter how much they've said, "Boy, I sure wish I had a decent set of knives (pots and pans or a vacuum cleaner that works)" during the rest of the year.

At Christmas, they want the clothes, the perfumes, the frilly stuff.

I know, you as a guy might appreciate a weed eater or chain saw. But that's what makes you a guy.

Finally, I wish there could be one more shopping day before Christmas. It would be Dec. 2X and fall between Dec. 24 and Dec. 25.

That way, when I head to the PX or mall on Dec. 24, I wouldn't be a last-minute shopper. It's amazing how people treat us guys who are so conscientious about shopping that we have to consider all the permutations and combinations up to the last minute so we can select the perfect gift.

And that's what I want this Christmas. A little respect.

Safety required for decorating

Safety Office

The time for Christmas decorating is here.

Decorations serve to brighten homes and hearts at Christmas time.

Just remember, however, that used improperly, these same decorations can result in a tragedy. The Safety Office offers the following tips to help make your holidays safe ones:

If you use an evergreen tree, select a fresh one. Cut two inches off the bottom of the trunk and place it in a stable tree holder filled with water.

If buying an artificial tree, choose one that has been tested for safety by a recognized testing lab (UL).

Check labels on lights to be used outdoors to see that they are suitable for outdoor use.

Never use electric lights on a metallic tree: Instead, use colored spotlights above or beside the tree to illuminate it.

If you have infants or toddlers, avoid placing colorful bulbs or ornaments within their reach.

Decorated, edible cookies make safer ornaments at child level. In any case it is best not to leave small children unattended near the tree.

Exercise extreme caution when using lighted candles.

Most importantly, plan for safety. Remember, there is no substitute for good common sense.

Christmas comes but once a year. Be sure yours is a happy and safe one.

Reader thanks bus driver and family

My family and I recently arrived at Fort Benning following a PCS move from Germany. The flight over was not pleasant, as my whole family was ill.

Arriving at the Atlanta International airport, we boarded a bus from Colonial Charters, based in Columbus.

The driver, John Martin from nearby Hamilton, drove us to the Fort Benning guest house, where we found no rooms available for my family and I.

We were driven into Columbus, and soon discovered no rooms available within 30 miles due to a Auburn football game that weekend.

We were then driven to the Colonial Charters bus station. Martin then made a phone call to his wife Joni, explaining that he had four people stranded at the bus station.

Ending the phone call, he told us that they had room for us at his home in Hamilton, and we gratefully accepted the invitation. Arrangements were then made for us to leave our baggage with the dispatcher at Colonial Charters.

We later arrived at the Martin home, and found beds were made for us, and a hot shower and towels available. The following morning, a hearty breakfast was provided, along with some warm and friendly conversation.

After breakfast, the Martins then drove us to Fort Benning. Before departing I asked if there was someway I could repay them for their hospitality. We were told that they were just happy they were able to help us out.

My family would like to thank John and Joni Martin for the kindness they showed to us, and to the people at Colonial Charters for their help and consideration.

It is good to know that there are still people like the Martins around who don't hesitate when it comes to helping others.

Mayor appreciates volunteers' help

I would like to thank all of those people who helped to make the McGraw Manor first pancake breakfast a success. Without the caring help of volunteers in our community and the support of the main Community Life Office, the event would never have taken place. I look forward to next year and the second annual pancake breakfast.

Guard celebrates 355th birthday

By J. Jan Hoffman
Alabama Army National Guard

Today is a special day for this country's National Guard. On this day in 1636, the Massachusetts Bay Colony divided its citizen-soldiers, or militia, into the North, South and East Regiments.

The colony was seven years old then, and the 5,000 men, women and children who made the two-month crossing from England to the New World, faced a wilderness of dense forests, wild animals and suspicious Indians.

Further north, in Canada, were the French. To the south, in New Netherlands (now New York), were the Dutch. Both were traditional enemies of the English.

The colonists needed a military force for protection, but they had no money to hire a mercenary army. They turned to the English tradition of the militia, those who gathered for training and who could fight when needed.

Compulsory militia service was dying out in England as society became more peaceful. But in the young United States, the citizen-soldier was a necessity.

In Massachusetts, all able-bodied men between 16 and 60, with few exceptions, were required to participate in military service. By 1636, the militia of the Massachusetts Bay Colony was large enough to be divided into the North, South and East Regiments.

The militia's primary mission in the early years was to defend against Indian attacks. When the Indians attacked, the call went out for the militia to assemble. They defended against further attack and "ranging companies" (the forerunners of today's rangers) raided deep into Indian territory.

By 1680, Indians no longer threatened eastern Massachusetts. But when England fought France in Europe, the Massachusetts militia fought the French in the North American wilderness.

Today, the North, South and East Regiments are the 181st and 182nd Infantry, both descendants of the North Regiment— the 101st Field Artillery (South Regiment) and the 101st Engineer Battalion (East Regiment). All four are part of the Massachusettes Army National Guard.

In 1991, the American militia tradition continues. The soldiers of the 181st and 182nd Infantry, the 101st Field Artillery, and the 101st Engineers still gather for military training, just as their ancestors did 355 years ago.

They are part of the Total Force and members of the oldest units in the U.S. armed forces.

Safety Cab to drive folks home safe for holidays

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

If you've been drinking and find yourself without a designated driver while celebrating over the holidays, you can call Safety Cab for a free ride home.

Beginning today and running through Jan.1, simply dial 323-0110 and give your location for a free taxi cab ride home, said Regis Beighley, post safety officer.

The yearly program is sponsored by the Bradley Center, Columbus Bank and Trust, AFLAC, the Association of the United States Army, the Rotary Club, Columbus Jaycees, and WTVM Channel 9.

Beighley also noted that all post clubs, and many off post clubs as well, will offer free non-alcoholic beverages to designated drivers. Participating clubs will have stick-on badges saying, "I'm driving," for designated drivers to wear.

According to Beighley, a total of 1,136 people in the Columbus/Fort Benning/Phenix City area used Safety Cab during the 1990 holiday season. He added, however, that during the same time there were still 27 accidents, 14 injuries and 160 arrests resulting from driving under the influence.

Beighley emphasized that the cabs will only take you back home, not to another club.

"One thing the taxi won't do is take you from one bar to another. Some people tried that last year."

Doctors need volunteers

By Jeanne Dickerson
Martin Army Community Hospital

Two Martin Army Community Hospital physicians, Dr. Peter Torok and Dr. Brian Unwin, are initiating a scientific medical research project. The project is co-sponsored by the Hughston Sports Medicine Foundation in Columbus. They need help from active duty soldiers in order to conduct this project, they said.

Low power laser energy has been shown to improve tissue healing and may be of real benefit to patients with chronic injury or overuse syndromes, the doctors said. This use of laser energy has captured the interest of military and sports medicine physicians because both soldiers and athletes require high standards of fitness.

The project will require approximately 100 volunteers who suffer from Achilles tendonitis (chronic heel cord pain). Volunteers will be interviewed and briefed on the project and be evaluated clinically. Personnel selected will be divided into two groups who will undergo therapy three times a week for six weeks with either a "real" laser or a "dummy" laser. Neither patient nor physician will know until completion of the therapy which randomly selected patients wee in which group. Measurements and treadmill tests will be performed to judge improvement.

The project has been approved by the Food and Drug Administration and the Human Use/Research Committees of both MACH and Hughston Sports Medicine Hospital. You can help discover new ways to treat a chronic problem. If you would like to participate, you must apply before Sunday.

To apply, contact Torok at 544-1946 or 544-1710 or Unwin at 545-2162 or 545-1617.

29th Inf. salutes soldiers

Outstanding soldiers were recognized at the 29th Infantry Regiment's annual Pioneer Leadership Awards Luncheon Nov. 22 at the Airport Holiday Inn.

This year's winners, both from Company C, 1st Battalion, were Sgt. David Pfleger and Spc. Carl Purgerson, who were selected over 12 other candidates.

Selection of candidates for the award is based on the soldier's performance throughout the year in such areas as the Skill Qualification Test, weapons qualification, drill and ceremonies, the physical training test, writing skills, and a regimental board, said Command Sgt. Maj. Edmond Singleton, operations sergeant major, 29th Infantry Regiment.

The competitors earned points based on their performance in each event — 1,000 points being the maximum that could be earned.

The competition was open to all soldiers, but they had to be recommended by their chains of command.

"The soldiers must have already displayed their ability to excel as leaders and will compete against others displaying these traits," said Singleton.

Thirty-five soldiers entered this year's competition, but only 14 made it through all the events because of the rigorous nature of the testing, said Singleton.

The Pioneer Leadership Awards were started by the Regimental Command Sergeant Major Command Sgt. Maj. Gary Cupit in 1988 to recognize the outstanding non-commissioned officers and enlisted soldiers of the regiment.

29th Infantry Regimental Commander Col. Gregory Camp pins the Army Commendation Medal on Sgt. David Pfleger.

"There are only two organizations on this installation that have competitions like this, the 29th Infantry Regiment and the rangers with the Best Ranger competition, where you actually have to do hands-on tasks, not just go before a board and look good and answer questions," said Cupit.

"Every soldier here is a winner bar none, but there are two that have prevailed overall," he said.

The two top scorers received an Army Commendation Medal, plaques from the regimental commander, the Association of the United States Army and the Non-Commissioned Officer Association, a $50 U.S. Savings Bond, a set of dress blues, wristwatches, a trophy, and a miniature covered wagon with desert camoflauge.

The winner of the non-commissioned officer category also received a color television and a plaque from the honorary regimental command sergeant major, retired Command Sgt. Maj. Frank Plass, bearing a 29th Infantry patch that he wore in World War II.

Cupit also recognized the wives for standing by their husbands throughout the competition. Each received a 29th Infantry pin .

National Guard unit goes 'active,' helps SOA train

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

A National Guard unit was mobilized to conduct a training mission for students enrolled in the School of the Americas recently.

On Nov. 23 to 25, students in the School of the Americas Cadet Field Artillery Orientation Course took part in a live-fire exercise and training mission with members of the Arkansas Army National Guard.

Thirty-six Guard soldiers with the 5th Battalion, 206th Field Artillery, 39th Infantry Brigade (Separate) of the Arkansas Army National Guard were put on active duty for a period of six days as part of the National Guard's Key Personnel Upgrade Program .

KPUP is usually designed to bring individuals on active duty for a training opportunity with the regular Army. In this exercise a battery (minus) was called in to train in a live-fire exercise using the M-102 (105mm) howitzer.

The training exercise outlined an opportunity for the Guard soldiers to train and work alongside their active counterparts, while enhancing their military occupational specialty skills.

According to Maj. Pedro Rivera, chief of the Fire Support Division for SOA, the Guard soldiers were called in to train with SOA students when the active-duty field artillery unit, the 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, which usually provides this training was preparing for a National Training Center Rotation, at Fort Irwin, Calif.

The coordination was a combined effort between the National Guard, Fort Benning's Directorate of Plans, Training and Mobilization, and SOA, to include the Directorate of Tactics and Combined Arms and the Fire Support Division, Rivera said.

In addition, Capt. Osvaldo Gonzalez, director for the cadet field artillery course, was the principle projects officer and worked with Capt. Dallas F. Harmon, a firing battery commander of the 5th Bn, 206th FA, during the coordination phase, as well as the training exercise.

The exercise began Nov. 23, when two C-130s touched down at Lawson Army Airfield and three howitzers were off-loaded.

The howitzers provided the students an opportunity for hands-on training with "the same weapons systems they will be using in their own countries," Rivera said.

The training session included three stations. The first station included familiarization and training on the M-102 Howitzer and the procedures in operating a fire direction center .

Station two detailed the forward observation post training the students in areas such as terrain sketches, target identification, call for fire procedures and adjusting artillery rounds.

The final station covered recon selection and occupation of a position. Arriving at a firing point and setting up to fire was the main focus of this station.

According to 1st Sgt. Billie M. Webster, 5th Bn, 206th FA, among the procedures demonstrated for the students was the proper way "to lay a gun" for firing.

Webster explained the term "laying" as properly orienting the aim of the gun using survey data and making sure the gun tubes are "laid on the direction of fire."

Howitzers are the center of the field artillery mission and for the students of the cadet course this opportunity advanced their understanding and appreciation of this crucial war-time mission.

SOA, Guard 'keep up' by using total Army concept

By J. Jan Hoffman
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Because of the National Guard-sponsored Key Personnel Upgrade Program, "keep up," the School of Americas Cadet Field Artillery Orientation Course field artillery exercise went as scheduled.

Maj. Fred Rodriquez of the Reserve Component Branch, Directorate of Plans, Training and Mobilization here, knew how well the Guard could respond on short notice. He called several of the surrounding states' Guard headquarters to locate an artillery unit that could come here to work with the school and participate in the exercise.

The Arkansas Army National guard sent members of its 5th Battalion, 206th Field Artillery, 39th Infantry Division (Separate) to Fort Benning to assist with the exercise.

Under the direction of Battery A's commander and first sergeant, Capt. Dallas Harmon and 1st Sgt. Billie Webster, the guard soldiers brought three M102 (105mm) Howitzers with them.

To assist the SOA project officer, Capt. Osvaldo Gonzalez, 1st Lt. William D. Wartman, an Alabama Army National Guardsman, was brought to Fort Benning, also under the KPUP program.

KPUP serves multiple purposes. It improves the tactical/technical proficiency of the soldier, and fills a Modified Table of Equipment vacancy for a unit.

Under KPUP, the state is responsible for the Guard soldier's pay, while the receiving unit provides normal support. If tactical training is involved, the soldier arrives for duty with all his field gear except for his weapon.

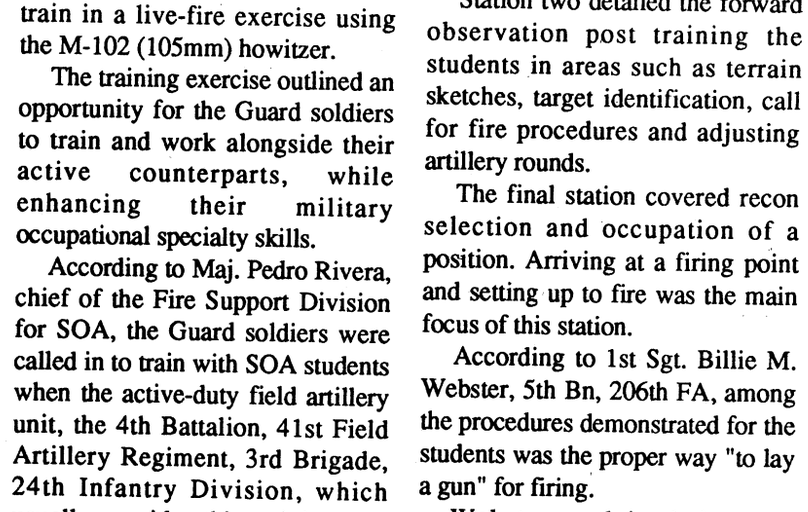
Although not required, an efficiency report can be done at the discretion of the receiving unit.

Once an active unit identifies a training opportunity and projects the date, a request goes through DPTM. An announcement is published and sent to the states' KPUP managers.

Personnel are recruited and selected by the state that publishes the orders for the soldier who then reports for duty.

The response time will depend on the state KPUP budget, state responsiveness and the skill specialty requested.

The receiving unit's responsibility is to assist the soldier with housing, meals and transportation.



The soldier is exempt from additional duties, rosters and detail-type work.

Fort Benning's Reserve Component Branch is the coordinating agency for all KPUP tours.

For any unit or branch that could use a qualified guardsman for temporary duty, contact Rodriguez, RC Branch, DPTM, at 544-6712 or

Top instructors selected

Outstanding instructors to be honored today

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

As the "Home of the Infantry," Fort Benning's job is to teach Infantry soldiers. Today the top instructors in that mission were recognized as "Instructors of the Year" in a special ceremony with the presentations being made by Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, post commander.

The honorees came from three categories: officer or civilian, senior enlisted (E7 to E9) and junior enlisted (E4 to E6).

They are Capt. Larry M. Hamilton, officer; Sgt. 1st Class Leon Carpenter, senior enlisted; and Staff Sgt. Robert R. Dimitroff, junior enlisted.

The three were chosen from the Instructors of the Quarter from the last year. However, anyone no longer on post was disqualified for consideration.

In charge of the Instructor Recognition Program is the Staff and Faculty Development Division of the Directorate of Training and Doctrine.

According to Staff Sgt. Michael Sargeant of Staff and Faculty Development, those eligible to be considered are instructors in the three brigade-size elements within the United States Army Infantry School. These are the 11th Regiment, the 29th Regiment and the Ranger Training Brigade.

Throughout the year those in operations positions contact the Staff and Faculty Development office with the names of persons they would like to be considered for Instructor of the Quarter. An unannounced quality assurance inspection while the instructor is teaching is then conducted.

Leonard Howell, chief instructor for Staff and Faculty Development, looks at the evaluation sheets and makes the final decision.

For Instructor of the Year honors, an instructor must receive high marks for a second inspection, as well as go before a Selection Board of three members headed up by the director of the Directorate of Training and Doctrine, Col. Howard Crawford, who selects the other two members.

Here the nominee is judged on subject knowledge of what he teaches, poise, confidence and communication ability.

Based on the two inspections and the board results, Staff and Faculty Development makes a recommendation for each category, and Col. Crawford certifies the objectivity of the process.

Instructors of the Year receive the Army Commendation Medal, a certificate of achievement and a memorandum of commendation signed by the post commander, and their names are placed on a plaque in the Infantry School.

In addition, all three receive a presentation from the Association of the United States Army, the enlisted receive something from the Non-Commissioned Officers Association and the officer is acknowledged by the Reserve Officers Association.

Hamilton and Dimitroff were instructors from the fourth quarter and will also serve as TRADOC's Instructors of the Year.

'Blackhat' gets 'icing on cake' with award

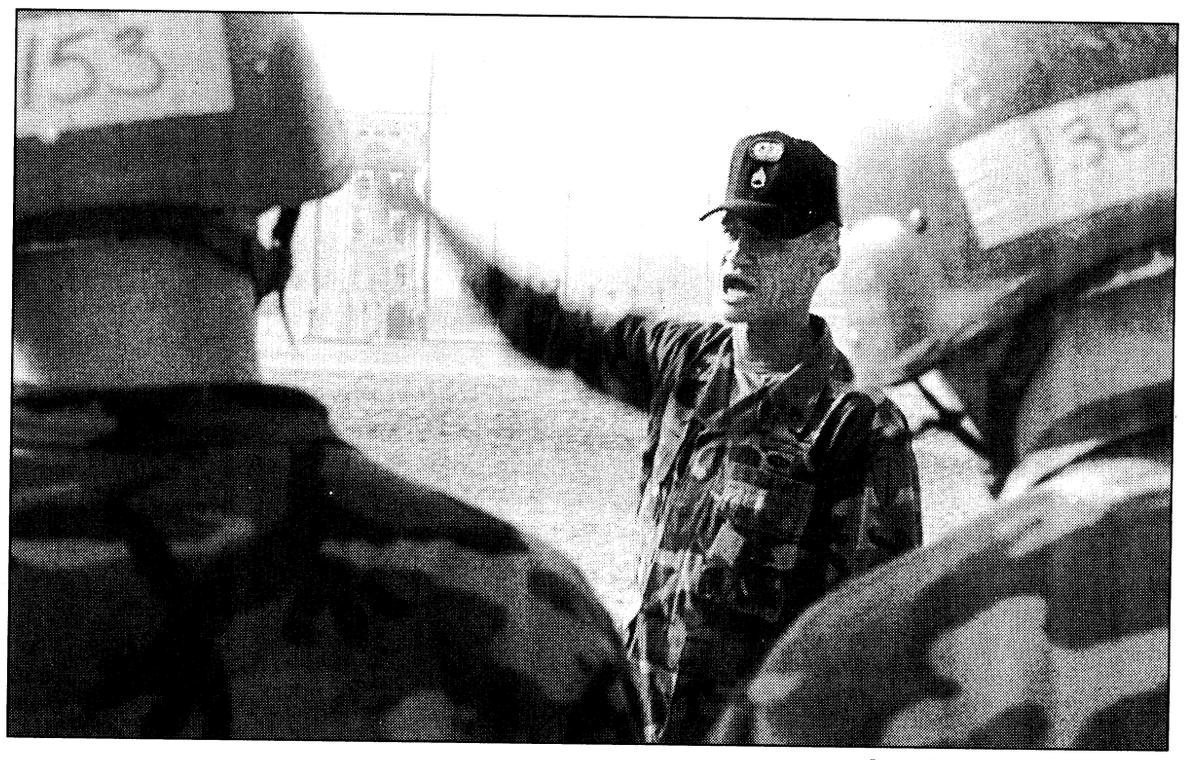
By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

He has earned two kinds of jump wings -- those of the U.S. Army's parachutist badge and those of Panama. Being a "blackhat" instructor for the Airborne School is something he enjoys because he loves to jump, and it's a way to meet military people from all the services and foreign countries.

For Staff Sgt. Robert R. Dimitroff, earning recognition as Instructor of the Year was icing on the cake for something he already loves to do.

Born in Flint, Mich., he originally joined the military as a Marine in 1980.

After three years, Dimitroff believed he had met this challenge and was ready for another one so in 1984 he joined the Army.



He'd decided he wanted to become a paratrooper like his father, George, had been during World War II.

His first stop after basic training was D Company, 1st Special Warfare Training Battalion, Fort Bragg, N.C.

Then it was on to three years with the 1st Battalion, 508th Parachute Infantry Regiment, Fort Kobbe, Panama where he was a squad leader for a scout platoon.

In 1988, Dimitroff came to Fort Benning as a drill sergeant for D Company, 4th Battalion, 30th Infantry Regiment Infantry Regiment.

He moved to the Airborne School in September, 1990, teaching a new class of 25 to 36 about once a month with a three-week break only at Christmas.

As for the future, Dimitroff expects to be at Fort Benning for about one more year. Then he would like to go to a regular Airborne unit, especially the 3rd Bn., 325th Infantry Regiment in Italy.

"I've been stateside long enough," he said.

In addition to his wings, Dimitroff has earned the Expert Infantryman Badge, the Drill Sergeant Badge, two Army Commendation Medals, three Army Achievement Medals, the Army and Marine Good Conduct Medals and the National Defense Service Medal.

He and his wife, Cheryl, are the parents of one son, Matthew, 6.

NCO shares 'know how' with OCS students

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Sgt. 1st Class Leon Carpenter enlisted in the Army in December 1970, because he wanted to go to Vietnam. Instead, his test scores got him branched Signal Corps, and after basic training at Fort Polk, La., and advanced individual training at Fort Gordon, Ga., he found himself with the 8th Infantry Division in Badkreuznach, Germany.

Today, all of his training in communications is something he shares with others so well that he was selected as one of the U.S. Army Infantry School's instructors of the year.

Carpenter instructs in tactical communications and electronic warfare to the Infantry Officer Basic Course (about 200 students each class), Infantry Officer Advanced Course (about 110 students each session), Advanced Non-Commissioned Officers Course (about 200 students each session), the Infantry Pre-Command Course and other specialty classes.

He said he likes instructing because he can have an effect on the outcome of what people do.

"I remember my own professors and the ones I considered good instructors," Carpenter said. "I decided if I became an instructor, I wouldn't waste people's time. I'd begin with the basics and make sure they understood as we went along because communications could save someone's life."

He said he has enjoyed being in a field unit as well because working with soldiers there is also a form of instructing "in a more personal way."

Born in Montgomery, Ala., Carpenter also served as a multi-channel communications operator at Fort Gordon and in Werthheim, Germany.

Then he changed his military operation specialty to tactical communications chief and went to Aschaffenburg, Germany, where he served as the battalion communications chief for the 1st Battalion, 7th Infantry Regiment.

He then held a similar job for the 6th Cavalry Division at Fort Knox, Ky., where he also ran the Scout Communications Certification Course.

Before coming to Fort Benning in 1989, Carpenter served as the communications chief for the 2nd Battalion, 22nd Infantry Regiment at Fort Drum, N.Y.

He has been instructing for the Infantry School since his arrival on post.

Carpenter would like to stay in the Army as long as he can, but if the downsizing of the military means forced early retirements, he plans to do so in Atlanta.

Presently, he is an honor student on the Dean's List at Troy State University.

He holds six Army Commendation Medals, two Army Achievement Medals, six Good Conduct Medals, three overseas ribbons and two Non-Commissioned Officer Development Ribbons.

He and his wife, Ruth, have four children of his from a previous marriage. They are Leonard, 23, Montgomery Ala.; Lennox, 21, Florida State University; Sidney, 20, Germany with the Army; and Sabrina, 17, in Germany with her mother. He also has two grandchildren.

OBC instructor hooked on Infantry and teaching

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

"Teaching makes me feel good in that I have the opportunity to have an impact on improving the Army in a small way."

Capt. Larry M. Hamilton, one of three instructors of the year on post, is a platoon trainer for the Infantry Officer Basic Course.

Every 16 weeks, he turns out 40 lieutenants who go on to become platoon leaders, and if they're good platoon leaders, then Hamilton believes he has made a difference.

Born in Fort McClellan, Ala., he grew up in Augusta, Ga. He said he joined the Army in the beginning because he needed the ROTC scholarship funds to finish college.

"All of a sudden I was hooked," Hamilton said. "I loved it, and I didn't just want to be in the Army. I wanted to be in the premier part of the Army -- in the Infantry."

After completing his own basic course and ranger training, he spent four years in Fort Carson, Colo., with the 2nd Battalion, 12th Infantry Regiment. Here he served as a platoon leader, executive officer and assistant operations officer.

Hamilton

In June of 1990, Hamilton came to Fort Benning for the Infantry Officer Advanced Course. He began teaching for Infantry Officer Basic Course in January of this year.

According to Staff Sgt. Michael Sargeant of the Staff and Faculty Development Division of the Directorate of Training and Doctrine, Hamilton's job includes being a mentor and role model for a platoon of lieutenants.

"I teach them tactics, leadership in the field and 'officership'," Hamilton said. "That means the commitment of being in charge 24-hours-a-day."

During the week prior to their first field problem, he also spends a week in the classroom teaching them what they will need to do, beginning with the basics of how to write orders. He is not their sole instructor for anything but physical training. However, he is their one constant throughout the course.

Hamilton holds two Army Achievement Medals, the Ranger Tab, two Army Commendation Medals, the Parachutist Badge, the Expert Infantryman's Badge and the National Defense Service Ribbon.

He and his wife, Carol, plan to be at Fort Benning until the summer of 1992. Then he is hoping to attain his goal of earning a command with a Table of Organization and Equipment unit.

Officer shares SWA experiences with students

Military service offered as career option

By Daniel Maloney
School of Americas

Soldiers returning from Operation Desert Storm found themselves in the precarious position of speaking not only to the news media, but to an even more vigorous scrutinizer--America's youth.

The School of the Americas recently sent one of its own Gulf war veterans to Thomaston, Ga., to address high school students on his experiences in the Gulf, as well as present the Army as a possible career option.

Lt. Col. William M. Bransford, chief of the Combined Arms and Tactics Division at the Department of Joint and Combined Arms, SOA, was put on the "firing line" Nov. 19, to tell not only his story, but the Army's as well, to students of Upton County High School.

Bransford had a few aces in the hole however; his personable nature, experience as an artillery officer and Thomaston just happened to be his hometown.

"It just happened that way," Bransford said, referring to the scheduling of guest speakers. "And I was very happy to go over there," he added.

Bransford was born Jan. 12, 1952. He attended R.E. Lee Institute in Thomaston and joined the high school Junior Reserve Officers' Training Corps program.

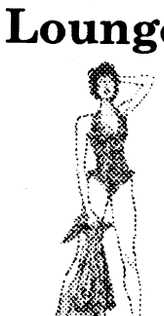
A graduate of the 1974 class at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., Bransford has completed two tours in Germany, returned to West Point as an English instructor, worked on the Multiple Launch Rocket System at Fort Sill, Okla., and most recently served in the Persian Gulf War as the 3rd Armored Division's deputy fire support coordinator.

His presentation to the students included documenting "training experiences from my time as a cadet to the Gulf War." The students' questions ranged from, how much the Army pays to the educational opportunities.

The students responded very well to someone honestly telling them about the service."

Having experienced many of the options an Army career provides from education to instruction and service overseas, Bransford presented to students his career as an example of one way to make a challenging and rewarding future out of the Army.

According to Bransford, if a soldier is interested in meeting people, telling his story and feels he can express himself, then speaking to students should be considered.



"I think it's worthwhile to the Army, especially for soldiers with the attitudes and experiences who can tell the Army story," he said.

The speaking engagements "show we are human beings not machines and can be open and honest," Bransford said. "The public feels better when they can talk to someone close up and ask questions," he added.

Gabriele Sonnenberg
Chaplain (Capt.) Arthur Rutberg prepares for worship.

Post welcomes new rabbi aboard

By Gabriele Sonnenberg
USAIC Chaplains' Office

A new rabbi, Chaplain (Capt.) Arthur Rutberg, along with his wife, Sara and his daughters, Pamela and Raquel, have arrived at Fort Benning.

Rutberg is from New York City and is a graduate of the New York University and the Hebrew Union College.

"During my eight years serving congregations in Ohio and southern Texas, the chaplaincy always appealed to me," Rutberg replied when asked why he chose the Army as a profession. "Therefore, I wanted to experience what the Chaplaincy is all about. Now I am here to do whatever it takes to celebrate with an active community," Rutberg added.

In the United States, there are three major Jewish branches of modern Judaism. The three branches are reform, conservative and orthodox. These groups are divided over how to balance the demands of Jewish religious traditions with contemporary needs.

Conservative Judaism is a movement which believes in a high level of traditional Jewish observance combined with a high level of interaction with the rest of the community.

The reform movement is more liberal. Each individual can decide on the degree of Jewish celebration he wishes to integrate in everyday life.

In orthodox Judaism, the Jewish traditional religious requirements will always come before contemporary needs.

In the military setting, Jewish worship services and education are set to accommodate all styles of Judaism.

Rutberg will be conducting Jewish worship each Friday at 8 p.m. at the Regimental Chapel, Sand Hill.

The religious education program will be held on Sundays at 9:45 a.m. at the Regimental Chapel.

"During the education program, portions of the Torah will be taught," Rutberg said.

The Torah is a holy book that is the basis of all Jewish learning and culture. It begins with the account of God's creation of the world and ends with the death of Moses.

"The Jewish community at Fort Benning invites all Jewish people to be involved in a full functioning community," Rutberg said.

"A full functioning community is possible because of all the Jewish people, and not because of me," he added.

For more information, call Rutberg at 544-9269..

Advent honors Christ's coming

By Gabriele Sonnenberg
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Sunday will be the third Advent which indicates that Christmas is "right around the corner."

Why is Advent important to Christians?

Advent is a time for Christians to look forward to Christmas Day, the commemoration of Christ's birth on earth.

Advent is the season before Christmas during which Christians anticipate the coming of the Savior Jesus Christ. It begins on the fourth Sunday before Christmas Day and extends through Christmas Eve.

Advent is a time for Christians to draw closer by sharing special activities of the season.

Some of the activities are reading from the Bible, saying prayers, and singing hymns.

One of the suggested Bible readings for Advent is Luke 2:8-14.

"And in that region there were shepherds out in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night.
And an angel of the Lord appeared to them, and the glory of the Lord shone around them, and they were filled with fear. And the angel said to them, 'Be not afraid; for behold
I bring you good news of a great joy which will come to all the people; for to you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, who is Christ the Lord.
And this will be a sign for you:
you will find a babe wrapped in swaddling cloths and lying in a manger. 'And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God and saying, 'Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace among men with whom he is pleased."

The prayer can be as follows:

0, Lord make us ready and worthy to receive the joy of Jesus. May we open our hearts to welcome your glory. In the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, your son, who lives and reigns with you and and the Holy Spirit, one God, forever and ever. Amen.

A suggested hymn is as follows:

Joy to the World;
The Lord is come:
Let earth receive her King,
Let every heart prepare Him room,
And heav'n and nature sing,
And heav'n and nature sing,
And heav'n and nature sing,
And heav'n, and heav'n and

Artist shares talent with Loyd School

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

"What he teaches increases the students' self-esteem," according to Dr. Judy Gilliam, principal at Frank R. Loyd School.

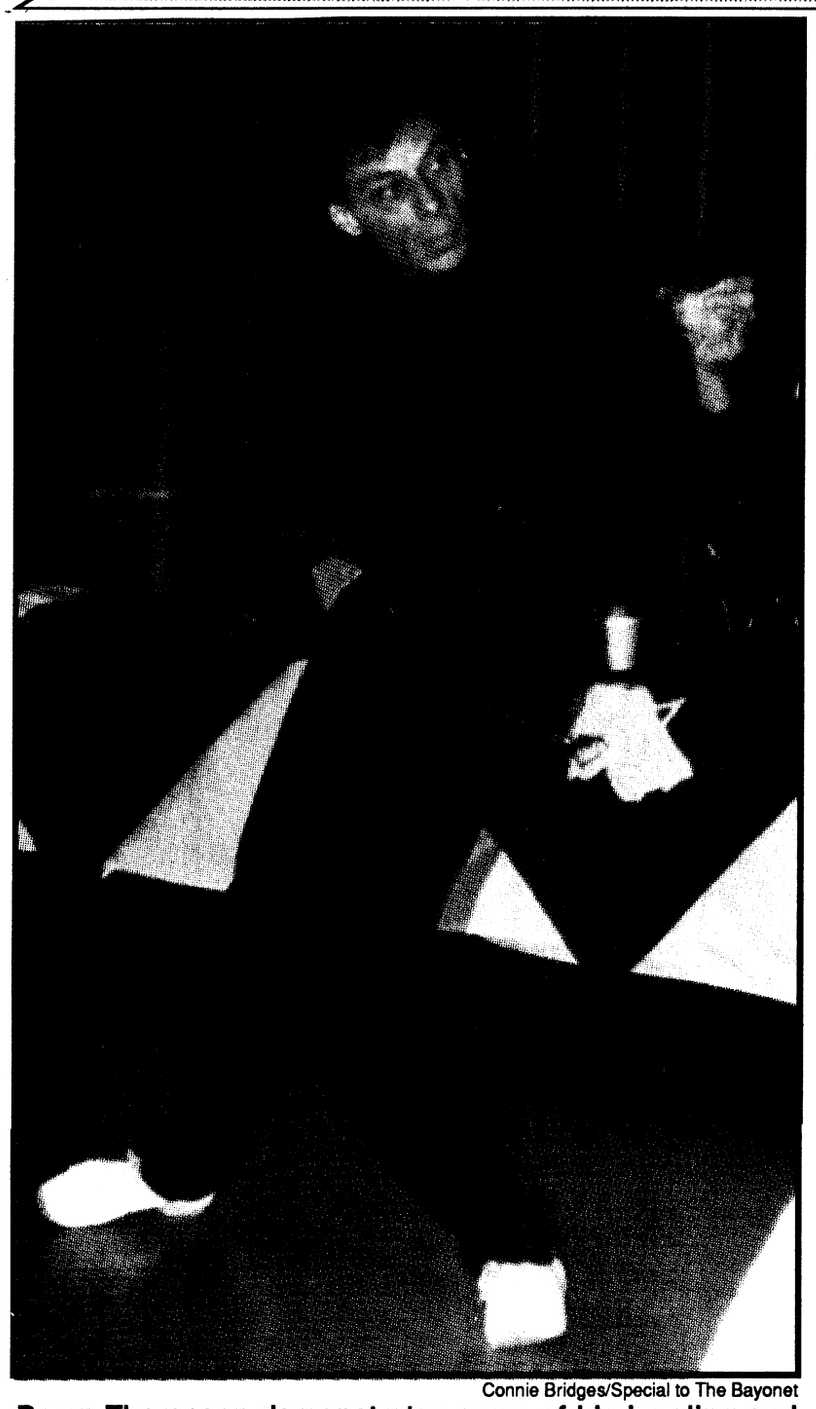
Theatre artist Bryan Thompson will share his skills in juggling, mime and theater with the students at Loyd during a three-week residency, Dec. 2 through 20.

Thompson's residency is part of the Georgia Council for the Arts Artist-in-Education Program designed to bring professional artists into schools and communities.

He will be working with all grades on a limited basis, and during the third week, a couple students from each class will be selected to take part in a program Dec. 20.

"Theater is all cooperation," Thompson said, "and it transfers over to life."

He doesn't believe it takes elaborate sets to do theater because theater takes place in the imagination of the viewer. Therefore, he uses simple props and things like background noises to create the mood.



With mime, Thompson uses certain "building block illusions" to do many things.

He said this form of theater "looks like magic" and reminds them of Michael Jackson so the children connect, and it holds their interest.

Juggling, he noted, takes good concentration and fosters self-discipline.

"I can teach someone to juggle in 10 minutes. If they keep at it, it gives them a skill that sets them apart from their peers."

The man who originally taught Thompson to juggle worked for Barnum & Bailey Circus. Now Thompson juggles various items including balls and "devil sticks."

Connie Bridges/Special to The Bayonet

Bryan Thompson demonstrates some of his juggling and mime skills for parents of Frank R. Loyd students at the opening of his residency.

He said, "The talents is always there. I have even done residencies in schools where they do shakedowns for guns and drugs. The talent is always there."

Thompson came to Fort Benning from a nine-week residency in Tifton, Ga. His staying time has varied from three weeks to two years.

During longer residencies, he has the children write and develop their own shows about topics of importance to them. He then acts as the facilitator.

An artist-in-residence at Faith Middle School several years ago, Thompson is here this time through the efforts of in-school coordinator Cathy Ross.

He has worked in many areas of performance including stage, television and film. His work as a facilitator for play development has involved many groups from elementary school children to convicted criminals with multiple life sentences.

A resident of Atlanta for the past five years, Thompson has worked with the Academy Theatre, Theatre Gael, Horizon Theatre and the Georgia Shakespeare Festival.

He has done voice-over and narration for television and industry including the Ace-Award-winning Larry King's Night of Soviet Television for WTBS.

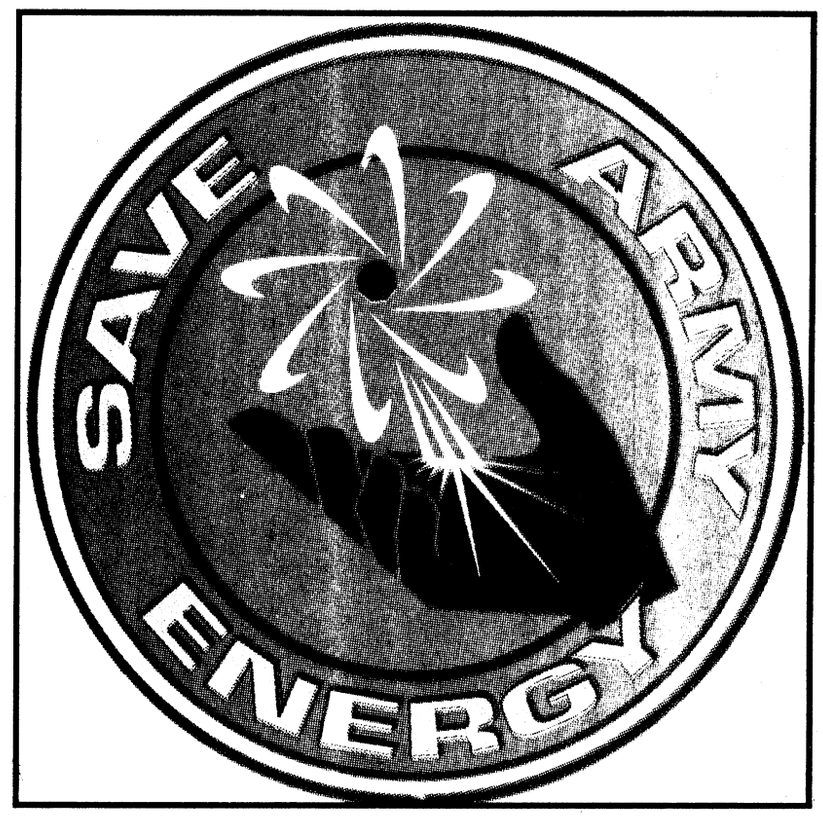
Energy star represents Army

By Jennie L. McRae
Energy Branch

The new Army energy logo is an energy star symbolizing the Army's commitment to the wise management an deficient use of all energy resources.

The energy star is red and white. The vibrant red center expresses the dynamic nature of the energy efficiency by the year 2000. The white rays represent the Army's commitment to clean air and the environment while achieving its energy goals. The eight rays pulse from the heart of the star to symbolize the eight energy strategies to which the Army is committed:

- Improving operations and maintenance of facilities and energy systems.
- Participating in public utility programs.
- Contracting for shared energy savings.
- Procuring energy-efficient goods and products.
- Ensuring energy efficiency in new and old buildings.
- Using alternative renewable and clean energy sources.
- Increasing the cost-effective use of coal.
- Balancing energy and environmental policy objectives.



The rays connecting the energy star to the hand characterize energy as the servant of man to be managed for comfort and productivity. The hand symbolizes the people of the Army and their power to:

- Design, construct and retrofit more energy-efficient facilities.
- Plan and manage wise use of mobility fuels.
- Conserve with comfort and common sense.

The black circle encompassing the hand and the energy star symbolizes the earth and the global challenge to become less dependent upon fossil fuels.

The background is sky blue, symbolizing the heavens and the Army's readiness to explore new ways to conserve.

The letters are yellow, reflecting the power of the sun and the Army's power to shape its energy future.

Fort Benning counselors participate in conference

Seven join 800 other educators from across state of Georgia

Fort Benning Schools

Seven Fort Benning school counselors joined more than 800 counselors and counseling educators from across the state of Georgia, Nov. 13 to 16, at the 1991 Fall Conference of the Georgia School Counselors Association on Jekyll Island.

GSCA is a professional organization with more than 1600 counseling and guidance professionals working at all levels of education. The organization promotes counseling programs, provides inservice training, and provides information about counseling resources in Georgia.

The theme of this year's conference was "GSCA: A tradition of Excellence." Mamie McCullough, author and well known motivational speaker; Ginger Carter, director of the World of Difference project; and Dr. Wayne Huey, an authority on ethics were three of the nationally known speakers who helped celebrate this year's theme.

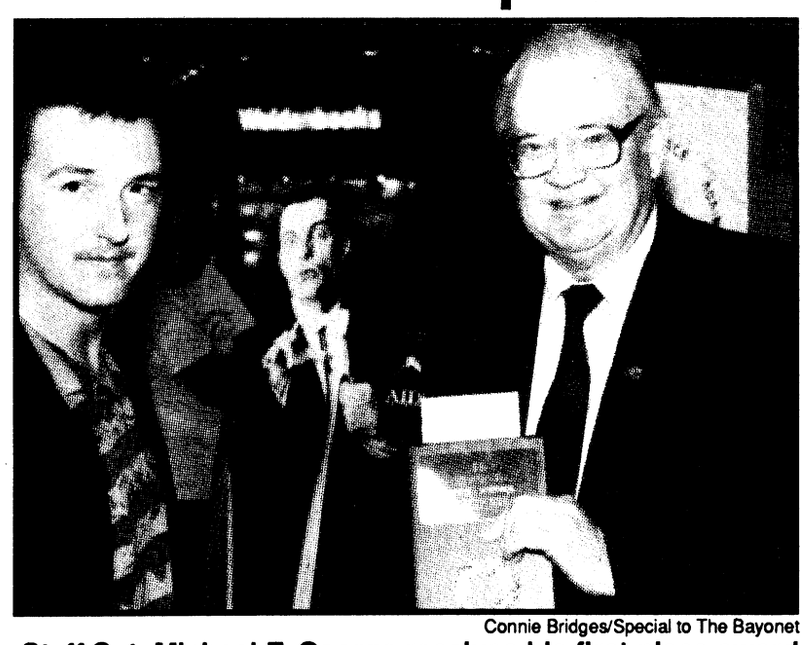
Fort Benning school counselors were invited to make two presentations.

Ann Spencer (Wilson School) and Sandra Wilde (Wilbur School) presented the ABCs of Self Esteem, and Ruth Gay (White School), Bammie Cofield (Loyd School) and Bill Abrahamson (Faith Middle School) presented Hellos and Goodbyes helping students prepare for the losses that accompany moving.

Other programs focused on up-to-date issues and techniques in counseling and human relation.

Ranger receives award for poem about AIDS

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet



Staff Sgt. Michael F. George received the first place award Saturday for his poem on AIDS entered in the local Second Annual World AIDS Day Poster/Creative Writing Contest.

George said the poem's content was purely "an inspirational thing," because he has had no personal connection with the disease. He has just read a lot about it.

A native of Wilmington, N.C., George is with Company C, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment and has been in the Army eight years.

His entry was in the 17 and older category.

The agencies who sponsored the event included the Girls Club of Columbus, the Boys Club of Columbus, DHR Substance Abuse, AIDS Education, Network AIDS, the AIDS Community Task Force, the Red Cross, the Office of Infectious Diseases and the Bradley Company.

Connie Bridges/Special to The Bayonet

Staff Sgt. Michael F. George receives his first place award in creative writing, 17 and older category, for his poem entered in the local contest.

According to Dr. Craig Lichtenwalner, who conducted the awards ceremony at Peachtree Mall, there were more than 300 entries in this year's contest.

He said this year's theme, "Sharing the Challenge," had several goals: to continue to increase awareness about HIV/AIDS, to strengthen the worldwide effort to meet the challenge by showing how it can be spread, to help reinforce AIDS prevention activities at all levels and to promote support and care for those with the disease and their families.

Serving as judges for the contest were Dee Cantrell, West Central Health District; Jack Shiffman, Sylvan Learning Center; Billy Winn, Columbus Ledger-Enquirer; Gary Goterbe, Columbus Technical Institute; and Betty Witzke, Columbus Artist's Guild.

Also speaking at the presentation ceremony were Mayors Frank Martin of Columbus, and Sonny Coulter of Phenix City and Page Penny, Miss Columbus USA.

Musical numbers were performed by Yvonne Denise Watkins, who wrote the song, "A Touch of Magic," about basketball star Magic Johnson contracting the virus.

NIM remembers Pearl Harbor with ceremony Saturday

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Dec. 7, 1941. The end of that fateful day would see more than 2,300 U.S. servicemembers killed and over 1,100 wounded, four U.S battleships sunk, 169 U.S. aircraft destroyed, a nation galvanized for war, and the name Pearl Harbor etched forever in America's memory.

Exactly 50 years later, that momentous event was remembered at Fort Benning's National Infantry Museum with a historical commemoration sponsored by the U.S. Army Infantry School's Military History Division.

Commemoration Director Capt. Peter Panzeri said Fort Benning's observance was chosen by the Department of Defense as the model program for commemorating World War II events because of its comprehensiveness.

The multi-faceted program combined many different aspects of military history, including lectures by college professors, a living history display of authentic military uniforms and equipment, and wargames utilizing miniature figures.

And, of course, there were the actual veterans, those who witnessed first hand the events being commemorated. Thirteen survivors of the Pearl Harbor attack were present, as well as other veterans of World War II.

Col. Craiger C. Parker, director of Combined Arms and Tactics, thanked them for their service.

"We learn from the legacy that you all have left to us...and we hope to add to that legacy honorably," he said.

Many of the veterans swapped war stories and pointed out on a map of Pearl Harbor where they were on that December day half a century ago when the Japanese caught them by surprise.

Survivor Wilbur Beck, 72 years old, recalled what he was doing when the attack began. Assigned to the 7th Air Force, he was in a hangar working on a B-24 that was on its way to Australia.

"We had just got to work and explosions started and we could hear machine guns and anti-aircraft guns. We ran out of the hangar to see what was going on and about then a Japanese bomber came over and let a bomb right over our hangar," remembered Beck, who drove more than 150 miles from Oakwood, Ga., with his wife Bridgette to attend the commemoration.

The commemoration began with a reception that saw Post Commander Maj. Gen. Jerry White greet each of the Pearl Harbor survivors, followed by a formal presentation of lectures by professors of history from Georgia and Alabama colleges and universities.

Topics included naval aviation in the 1920s and '30s, the possibility of Winston Churchill having prior knowledge of the attack, the exploits of Alabama's "Dixie Division" in the Pacific, the creation of the Phillipine Army, the battle for Peleliu, and the career and dissapearance of U.S. Army fighter ace John T. Moore, whose widow, Dorothy, was present among the museum auditorium audience.

Another highlight of the formal presentation was a a discussion of Army aviators during the conflict given by James E. Pence of the National Military Historical Association. Pence donned the authentic clothing and equipment of a typical World War II pilot and seemed to have just stepped from a time machine as he delivered an airman's perspective on Pearl Harbor as if the attack had occurred only hours before.

History was made to come alive by other members of the NMHA as well, who, dressed as soldiers of the 82nd Airborne Division, their uniforms painstakingly accurate in every detail, set up a display of World War II equipment that included a completely restored 1943 Ford General Purpose Wagon, better known as the Jeep, owned by Sgt. Mark Burroughs of Company D, 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry, 24th Infantry Division.

Many of the veterans seemed to enjoy seeing the uniforms and equipment they knew so well and a few insisted that the stuff they had was better than what soldiers of today use.

"I'd say that's a better rifle than the M-16," said Fred Cron, pointing to a World War II issue M1-Garand. Cron missed the war because he was too young, but joined the Army in 1954. He proudly displayed a rusted helmet he found while walking in 1952 on the Phillipine island of Corregidor, scene of bloody fighting. The helmet's most prominent feature was several large shrapnel holes in the front. One can only speculate on the demise of the wearer.

The commemoration also featured a wargame re-creation of the 1943 Marine assault on the Japanese held island of Betio using miniature ships, soldiers, and equipment. The battle was hosted by the National Historical Miniatures Gaming Society.

The wargame saw history rewritten.

"The Marines got a good foothold on the island," Panzeri said. "They did better than in the original battle. Of course the players had the advantage of 20/20 hindsight, but the simulation allowed them to have a better view of what happened."

A showing of the Hollywood film "Tora, Tora, Tora," was the final highlight of the day.

Panzeri declared the commemoration a success.

"It far exceeded our expectations. The enthusiasm shown by the participants and the veterans and other guests and visitors was superb," he said.

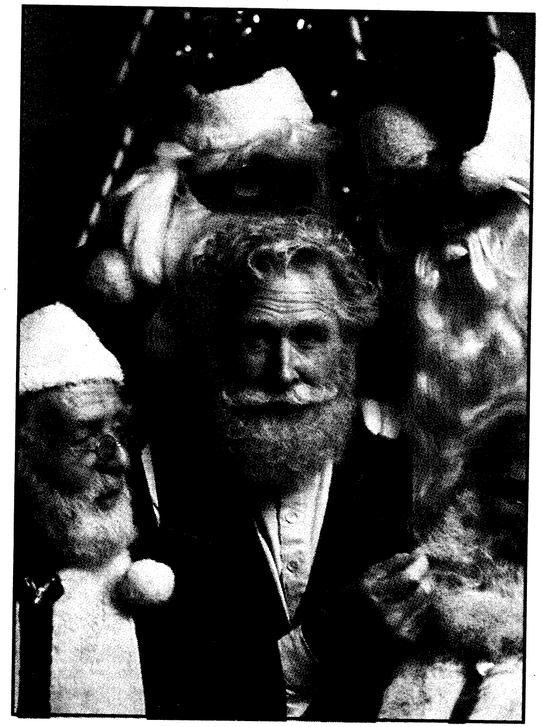
Tucker arrives 'In the Nick of Time'

By JAY BOBBIN
Tribune Media Services



Having just celebrated Hanukkah, Michael Tucker muses that his role in a new Christmas story "may be a milestone in Jewish-American history."

Produced by Walt Disney Television, Monday's NBC TV-movie "In the Nick of Time" casts the "L.A. Law" regular as a cynical journalist affected by a certain aspect of the yuletide. A 1, 200-year-old manuscript known as "The Legend of St. Nick" states that "Each Santa is to reign for exactly 300 years" before finding a successor. The teleplay by actress Maryedith Burrell begins at that point, as the current Kris Kringle — played by acting veteran Lloyd Bridges — desperately combs New York City for his replacement a few days before Christmas ... since if he fails to find one, the holiday will exist no longer. In "Miracle on 34th Street" fashion, few people believe his claim that he's the real Santa, except for the young daughter (Jessica Di Cicco) of a cab driver (Daytime Emmy-winner A Martinez, of the NBC serial "Santa Barbara") who's a friend of the reporter. Those two men eventually help St. Nick in his quest, as do the newsman's editor (Alison LaPlaca, formerly of "Duet" and "Open House") and a homeless man (Cleavon Little, currently appearing in Fox Broadcasting's "True Colors"). The film was directed by George Miller, who also handled the previous Disney productions "A Mom for Christmas" with Olivia Newton-John (which NBC is slated to repeat Dec. 22) and "The Christmas Visitor" with Dee Wallace Stone.

"I think this is a really good movie," says the amiable and sincere Tucker, who made it his only major TV venture this year outside his "L.A. Law" role as attorney Stuart Markowitz.

Lloyd Bridges and Santa's elves

"When the idea was first presented to me, I turned it down but my agent said, 'Read the script. I think this one's special.' Indeed, I thought it was, and the shooting of it (in Toronto) was very special. We had a fabulous time, so I'm kind of high on this one." Though he acknowledges that other performers of the Jewish faith have done Christmas-oriented efforts, Tucker maintains, "Neither Barry Manilow nor Barbra Streisand (both of whom have recorded holiday albums) actually have ... well, I can't give away the ending."

Whatever beliefs an individual viewer might adhere to, Tucker emphasizes that Monday's tale is "certainly not a religious story, but just a humanistic, sweet movie. Seeing it from my character's point of view, it's about coming to grips with yourself, forgiving yourself and accepting the goodness in yourself. That's nice stuff, and there's a beautiful moment in this film that really says what it's all about: One man who is immortal is about to become mortal again, and one man who is mortal is about to become immortal, and they cross paths and sort of discuss that. It's wonderful, kind of like the movie 'Wings of Desire.' I thought that was just incredible, and while this certainly isn't that film, there's a theme similar to that one here. That's what appealed to me when I first read it."

Since filming on "In the Nick of Time" was done in late October and early November, the project coincided with the making of "L.A. Law" episodes for the current season, but Tucker reports that the series' producers "were great" about that scheduling conflict. "They freed me up for this, and they do that (for all the actors on the program), which is why 'L.A. Law' is such a great job." Similar accommodations were made last season for Tucker's wife Jill Eikenberry, who plays his on-screen wife Ann Kelsey, when she did the miniseries "An Inconvenient Woman" for ABC. "I shot a lot (for the show) just before I left," Tucker says, "then I came home for three days in the middle (of 'Nick of Time') and did a little work, and then caught up on the other end so I didn't miss one episode. I remember when Jimmy Smits did the movie 'Old Gringo,' that was about a 15-week period, but they worked it out so that he never missed an episode either. It can be done."

Dear Neighbor:

With the holiday season upon us, I'm reminded of sixteenth century English clergyman Robert South who once said, "If there be any truer measure of a man than by what he does, it must be by what he gives." Though spoken long ago, South's words still ring true today.

At CVI, we're more than just a provider of Cable TV service. We're a friend in the communities we serve. Every year, in 18 states across the country, in towns similar to ours, CVI employees and customers join forces with local charitable organizations to help people in need. Commander visits Home of the Infantry

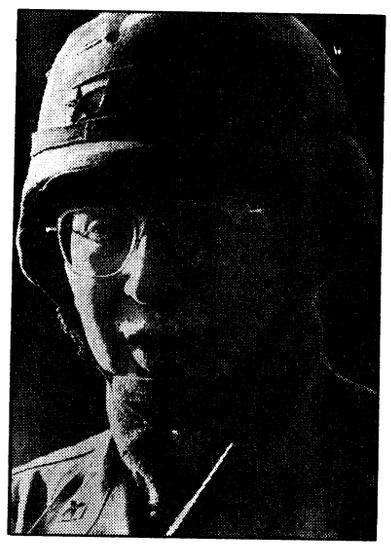
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr., commanding general of the Training and Doctrine Command, visited Fort Benning Dec. 6.

Before assuming command of TRADOC on Aug. 23, Franks commanded VII Corps in Germany and during Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm in Saudi Arabia, Iraq and Kuwait from December 1990 to May 1991.



Under his command, VII Corps conducted a decisive flank attack from Saudi Arabia, through Iraq, into Kuwait. During his Fort Benning visit, Franks was briefed on doctrinal developments and observed a variety of training, from One Station Unit training at the Infantry Training Center to officer-level training.

Before returning to TRADOC Headquarters at Fort Monroe, Franks answered questions for The Bayonet to explain his command philosophy and address areas of emphasis.

Q: What will be your primary focus as the commanding general of TRADOC?

A: The Army is in a different strategic environment than it was in, even a couple of years ago. We are fresh from battlefield success in Just Cause, Desert Storm and success in the Cold War. So what we want to do is to help the Army maintain momentum while accommodating change. We plan to do that by taking our operational doctrine (Field Manual 100-5) and revising it. Our doctrine is never really complete, and we need to revise it in order to accommodate the new strategic environment. We will undertake this revision in a way that the Total Army is involved in the process.

The second thing we want to do in TRADOC is sustain the excellence and relevance in training and leader development that we have in our Army now. I saw great evidence of that here at Fort Benning in talking to soldiers, talking to drill sergeants and talking to commanders. The spirit of that excellence — the spirit of the Infantry — is the kind of tough, hard, realistic training we want to sustain, to keep alive, to keep going.

Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr.

Q: What is your responsibility, as TRADOC commanding general, in helping the Army maintain a proper balance of forces?

A: I believe that derives first from the great advice and recommendations I get from the "Chief of Infantry" and commandant of the Infantry School, Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, and assistant commandant, Brig. Gen. Carl F. Ernst, and the other leadership here at the Infantry Center; the Armor Center, and the others throughout TRADOC. The need for balance, I believe, comes from our operational doctrine and the versatility that our Army must have in the new and changing strategic environment in which we find ourselves. Our Army needs balance, and we need to write that into our doctrine so that it drives organizational design. That ensures we have the right kind of versatility and balance in our force between special operations forces, light and then the armor, mechanized and each of the others.

Q: What is your previous experience with light infantry forces?

A: It was my good fortune to have commanded the VII Corps on a REFORGER exercise in 1990, and the 10th Mountain Division came over and was under the operational control of VII Corps. We had a great opportunity to have a light and armor/mechanized mix in a two-week exercise. That really gave me an appreciation for the expansive capabilities of a light infantry division.

Q: What were your most significant impressions of our soldiers' performance during Operation Desert Storm?

A: The bottom line is that the actions of our soldiers are irrefutable. Their toughness, their competence, their spirit, their feelings for each other, their non-commissioned officer leadership and their willingness to take the fight to the enemy —day and night, through the sandstorms and the rain, I think, will be forever etched in the desert sands of Iraq.

Q: During the period of reshaping, what advice do you have for a new recruit or officer considering making the Army a career?

A: The Army remains an exciting and challenging place to serve our nation as it has been in the past and will be in the future. I would say that a sense of commitment is important — a commitment to the values of the Army, commitment to fellow soldiers, commitment to our country. And then just make the very best of your assignments.

More 317th soldiers arrive

By Tom Wilkinson
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

More soldiers from the 317th Engineer Battalion arrived Tuesday night at Lawson Army Airfield.

A Boeing 727 brought 121 soldiers and their family members from Frankfurt, Germany, on a trip that lasted nearly 20 hours. The soldiers and family members were greeted by a host of well-wishers who provided coffee, tea, hot cider, cookies and soup. The soldiers also got an opportunity to link up with their sponsors, who will assist them in their transition.

"I'd like to welcome you to the brigade and the 24th Infantry Division," said Col. Robert J. St. Onge Jr., commander of the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, in remarks to the soldiers.

The 317th, which is beginning to settle into Kelley Hill, is now complete in getting all its soldiers, minus the rear detachment, to their new duty assignment. There are currently 355 soldiers here and only one more flight scheduled to bring the remaining soldiers of the rear detachment to Fort Benning on Jan. 25.

The newest arrivals have already begun inprocessing and settling back into the reality of being back in the United States.

A year ago, the soldiers of the 317th deployed to Saudi Arabia and provided engineer support to the Germany-based VII Corps during Operation Desert Storm. This Christmas, they can relax with their families and perhaps go home for the holidays.

The unit's relocation to Fort Benning from Eschborn, Germany, near Frankfurt is part of the Army's drawdown in Europe.

2,900 soldiers return home for holidays

U.S. Army Infantry Training Center

The U.S. Army Infantry Training Center's annual Exodus operation began Wednesday when 2,900 soldiers currently in infantry One Station Unit Training returned home for the Christmas holidays.

By Thursday, all of the soldiers had departed either for Atlanta International Airport, where they flew to places as far away as Hawaii, or by direct destination Greyhound Bus.

Soldiers will begin returning to Fort Benning on Jan. 2.

Approximately 75 soldiers have chosen to remain at the Infantry Training Center over the holidays. They will have the opportunity to participate in Operation Holiday sponsored by the Association of the United States Army.

Back injuries for young, old

COMMENTARY

It doesn't snap. It doesn't crackle. But it sure can pop. I'm referring to the back. That collection of huge muscles that holds a person erect, helps him walk, sit, lie down, get up.

Go into a hospital or a troop medical clinic waiting room and chances are you'll see folders that deal with the back.

The folders explain the proper way of lifting. The more elaborate ones deal with exercises to make your back strong.

I've seen them lying around. I've idly thumbed through them to help kill time.

In fact, I know the basics — when lifting, get close to the object, keep the back straight, lift with the legs, don't twist while lifting.

But that stuff doesn't apply to me. After all, I'm a hearty, robust soldier in Uncle Sam's Army.

I do physical training at least three times a week — various exercises from Uncle's dirty dozen plus run.

Hulk Hogan, I'm not. I don't spend a lot of time on the torture machines in the gym, grunting fiercely while I wrestle some weight into the proper position.

But I am an average guy, so I don't need to worry about throwing my back out by lifting heavy objects. I mean that stuff about keeping the item close to your body and lifting with the legs — that's for old folks.

They're the ones who need to be careful. After all, when you hit 40, the body, especially the bones, decay rapidly and one really does need to be careful. In fact, I'm always surprised when I see 40-year-old dudes who not only aren't in wheelchairs, but are actually out beating the socks off of us young guys in racquetball, basketball or some other strenuous sport.

Well, that's what I used to think.

The other day I went to my daughter's soccer game. Before the game, I spotted a hole in the field and, being a dutiful father, I decided to fill it with sand.

I went to the maintenance shed, got a shovel and then headed for the sandpile.

I slid the long-handled shovel into the sand, then, twisting as I lifted, I heard a loud "pop" in my back.

But I was tough. I delivered the load of sand, picked up three more and gutted out back pain for three days before going on sick call.

Once there, the doctor prodded and poked as she had me twisting, turning and bending, all the while asking, "Does that hurt?"

"Durn right it hurts," I wanted to yell at her, "why do you think I'm here?" Instead, I grumbled a "yeah, I guess so."

She then wrote me out a prescription for some little tiny white pills and some very large football-shaped pills, telling me to take them four times a day and go to bed for three days.

She also pointed out that once you pull, strain, pop or damage your back, it'll never back to 100 percent. That, like frostbite victims, you are now prone to more back pulls and strains.

That was certainly heartwarming.

But it isn't all a downer. Do you realize that one of the worse things you can do to your back is vacuum?

Not only do I now get out of lifting and moving furniture whenever Emma gets one of her moving whims, but now I can't even operate the vacuum cleaner.

What's that expression about every cloud having a silver lining?

Merry Christmas and Happy New Year.

HOLIDAY MESSAGES

Nation sends thanks

On behalf of all Americans, I extend season's greetings and the heartfelt thanks of a nation to the dedicated members of the United States Armed Forces at home and abroad.

You and your families have our best wishes for a happy holiday season and for a bright and prosperous new year.

As we celebrate Christmas and Hanukkah and reflect on the dramatic events of 1991, we Americans share a sense of gratitude and joy.

Each of you —wherever your post of duty, whether you served at sea; in Europe, Asia, Latin America; or at bases in the United States; or in the sands of Saudi Arabia and in the liberation of Kuwait — can take pride in the accomplishments of our Armed Forces over the past year.

Today, America is proud, free, and at peace — to a great extent because of you. Yet we know that our freedom and security have been preserved by the sacrifices of our men and women in uniform.

Those of you who must spend this special time of year away from home and family feel keenly the sacrifices that are demanded in the line of duty. Rest assured that you are close in the hearts of all Americans.

Each of you — no matter where you are, no matter what your job — plays a vital role in defending our way of life. Your patriotism and professionalism are a source of pride and strength for our country, and your fellow Americans will continue to keep you in our thoughts and prayers.

God bless you, and God bless the United States of America.

President George Bush

Soldiers can enjoy peace this year

As is true with any holiday period, last year during the Christmas season our Army was defending freedom.

But last year was different; soldiers were preparing for combat far from home. Soldiers I visited last Christmas Day in Saudi Arabia took a break from training to make Christmas trees from coat hangers and tissue, open care packages sent from home, and share a Christmas meal with fellow soldiers.

After their brief celebrations in the sand of port staging areas and desert camps, they continued to prepare for combat. Their high morale and selfless dedication was inspiring. "Peace on Earth" demanded sacrifice and a special brand of teamwork during that holiday season, both for them and their families at home.

Soldiers, civilians and families of the Training and Doctrine Command contributed to this Total Army teamwork; drill sergeants training soldiers through the holidays, ports and mobilization centers assisting deploying units, civilians and soldiers cancelling leaves and contributing in a variety of ways As always, TRADOC was a valuable part of the team, contributing to our nation's readiness.

I thank each of you for your contributions, hard work and devotion to duty during 1991. As you remember the past year and celebrate this joyous holiday with family and friends, take pride in your accomplishments.

And as you observe the season, remember the soldiers who still serve at various remote outposts around the world and their families. They continue to guard the freedom and the values that are so important to us.

Denise and I wish all of you a happy holiday season. May your holiday be a safe one, and may 1992 bring a continuing sense of pride and fulfillment as we serve our Army and nation during these changing times.

Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr.
TRADOC commander

Job well done

As 1991 closes, all members of the Total Army family can look back with pride to a job well done during a challenging, sometimes tumultuous, year. Events in the Middle East touched the lives of all Americans, but especially those in military service, their families, and civilian employees.

As commander in chief of Forces Command, I send you and your families my warmest personal thanks for your sacrifices, unwavering devotion to duty, and excellence in executing your individual and unit missions. I am proud of you and America is proud of you.

As of Dec. 1, approximately 7,300 soldiers of Forces Command continue to serve in the Persian Gulf area. Remember their ongoing sacrifice as you celebrate the holiday season with family and friends.

We look forward to a peaceful 1992 as we hope for the best in our great Army and in the free world we protect. I extend my best wishes to you and your families for a safe and happy holiday season and a wonderful, rewarding new year.

Gen. Edwin H. Burba Jr.
FORSCOM commander

Have a happy holiday

The Christmas season celebrates the birth of the Christ child in Bethlehem nearly 2,000 years ago. For Christians, it is a festival devoted to giving, not only of presents, but of ourselves.It is through this giving to others that the spirit of the Christ Child is shared throughout the community.

The special celebration of Christmas provides us with a time of remembering the hope of peace throughout the world. During this past year, many threats to that peace have occurred and our soldiers have been called upon to meet those threats. It is appropriate during this Christmas season we commit ourselves to continue to seek peace and good will in our world.

May each of you enjoy a safe and happy holiday season and may God's richest blessing be upon you and your loved ones in the coming new year.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White
Fort Benning commander

Holidays, alcohol a dangerous mix

Infantry Branch Safety Office

This is a simple reminder to all holiday party goers. When you celebrate in the holiday spirit, bear in mind that driving and drinking is a dangerous and often fatal combination. (Statistics show that about half the drivers in fatal crashes have been drinking.)

So, if you've been drinking, don t take the chance of thinking you can make it home without trouble. The risk isn't worth the gamble. Death or injury is grim at anytime, so why risk ruining your holiday or the holiday of others?

You are urged to follow these few simple suggestions if you wish to reduce the holiday season accident toll:

• After the party, do not drive after drinking.

• Let someone give you a lift home. It's far better to admit to friends that you've had too much than to tell it to a judge.

• Call Safety Cab at 323-0110.

• Stay with a friend overnight.

• Remember, too, that even though you may be in good driving condition, others may not be.

• Always drive defensively.

• Anticipate what the other person intends to do.

• Have seat belts installed and be sure they're used at all times the car is in motion.

These tips are passed along to you because Christmas and New Year will be with us no matter what happens so make sure you're alive and well enough to enjoy the pleasant days ahead.

Make it a careful, cheerful holiday season and don't give your life for Christmas.

Drug abuse not tolerated anymore

By J. Jan Hoffman
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The words have been around for a long time. They are simple and to the point: DON'T DRINK AND DRIVE!

We have all heard the saying, but for today's soldiers, these words take on even more importance than before.

In the past, the Army treated someone for drug or alcohol abuse so that the individual could stay in the military. This is known as manpower conservation.

With the military manpower being reduced, drug and alcohol law violations can be grounds for the individual's elimination from the service completely, according to Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Program officials.

According to Tom Tennent Jr., Ph.D., chief of ADAPCP, there have been some recent changes to Army Regulation 600-85 pertaining to the Army policy regarding mandatory separation processing for alcohol and illegal drug abusers.

Tennent says that in the past, manpower conservation was the governing factor in ADAPCP. Now, the Army's policy underscores the fact that alcohol and other drug abuse will not be tolerated and that there are serious consequences for such misbehavior. Both unit readiness and mission accomplishment suffer when law enforcement measures, preventive education programs and other demand reduction efforts fail to deter soldiers from abusing drugs.

According to Tennent, officers and non-commissioned officers (sergeant and above) who are identified as illegal drug abusers will be processed for separation. Enlisted personnel who have three or more years of active or reserve military service and who are identified as illegal drug abusers will also be processed for separation.

Soldiers who are involved in serious instances of alcohol-related misconduct will be considered for separation. Repetitive instances of drunk on duty, or instances of operating a motor vehicle while drunk, are examples of such misconduct.

An original part of the change to AR 600-85 that required soldiers enrolled in ADACAP treatment to be flagged will not be implemented, according to Tennent.

Therefore, anyone undergoing treatment will not fall under the new changes unless that individual is in the treatment program because of illegal drug use or alcohol-related misconduct. This does not mean that a soldier who self-enrolls for treatment or counseling would be separated solely on the basis of being self-enrolled.

As a result of this type of separation from the military, Don Conway, ADAPCP specialist from U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command, says that a lot of people who will leave will be good people. If they get caught making one mistake, then that's the way it will be.

Tennent says that the message is getting through - don't drink and drive. He says that this seems to be the situation nationally, too.

Drinking alcoholic beverages may not be on the decline, but driving while intoxicated or under the influence is, says Tennent.

Our soldiers are even more aware of DUI now, adds Tennent, since the state of Georgia has lowered the blood alcohol content limit from .10 to .08. This means that less amount of alcohol in the blood stream can cause you to be legally intoxicated.

In addition to the lowering of the BAC, the Department of Defense is lowering its minimum for illegal drug use.

Tennent says that everyone knows that we test for two types of drugs, THC (marijuana) and cocaine. The previous standard 100 ng/ml (nanogram per milliliter) has been changed to 50 ng/ml for one to be charged with drug abuse.

The military is serious, adds Tennent, and we want everyone to know it. Drug and alcohol abuse can ruin a soldier's career. We want to do all we can to help the soldier, and civilians, too, so that they can stay in the service and work for their own benefit and for the benefit of the service.

Soldiers get early outs

Officials clarify program

By Alyanna B. Summers
Bayonet staff writer

As the Army tries to diminish its ranks through downsizing, several programs are being put in place to help the Army succeed in its mission.

One of the most popular programs to open up is the new early separation program, geared for enlisted personnel, according to Linda Childress, chief of the Transition Point on post.

Soldiers need to know all the facts about the program before taking their 4187s in hand, said Childress.

The program, Childress said, allows active duty enlisted soldiers with at least three years of continuous service to leave the Army on a voluntary basis.

"The voluntary separation will be considered regardless of the soldier's current expiration term of service date and does not have to be in fiscal 1992," said Childress. Under this program soldiers must separate completely no later than Aug. 31, she added.

Once the soldier decides to take this route, there is no turning back, said Childress.

"If a soldier sends that paperwork up his or her chain of command and it is approved, there is no changing the process. It's something for soldiers to really think about before taking that step," said Childress.

Not all enlisted personnel are eligible to join the program, said Childress.

Those active-duty soldiers with less than three years continuous service, those awaiting trial by court-martial or those who are under investigation for Uniform Code of Military Justice offenses are not eligible for the program, said Childress. Other reasons for ineligibility are: soldier not medically cleared by early transition date; soldier convicted by courts-martial and sentenced to a punitive discharge, soldiers serving in a Cohesive Operational Readiness units or Personnel Priority Group one or two units and soldiers currently on assignment to or serving in short tour areas until two-thirds of the tour is completed, said Childress.

Soldiers in critical or shortage military occupational specialities, as announced by Department of the Army Personnel Command, will not be allowed to participate in the program, either, said Childress.

Approval for this action can be obtained from the first lieutenant colonel commander in a soldier's chain of command and is based on the unit's operational readiness.

The commanders must also assure that the soldier is counseled on the consequence of the program, said Childress. Soldiers must be made aware of certain things, such as: recoupment of unearned portions of enlistment and selective re-enlistment bonuses, the soldier's eligibility for the Montgomery GI Bill, no entitlement to separation pay, completion of the transition acknowledgement checklist, eligibility for transition assistance and affiliation with a reserve component unit, said Childress.

Transition leave is authorized with this program, said Childress. If approved, a Department of the Army form 31 must accompany the approved DA form 4187 and the start date of leave cannot be earlier that 30 days from approval of separation, said Childress.

For more information on this and other separation program, contact Childress at 545-1324 or 545-1162.

Police round up violators

Columbus and Fort Benning residents may want to think twice before engaging in the solicitation of prostitutes or purchasing drugs on the streets of Columbus, according to Columbus Police Department officials.

The Columbus police officers are on the streets this holiday season. But not in their normal blue-and-whites. Instead many officers are going undercover to cut down or intimidate the purchasers of drugs or solicitors of prostitution.

"The idea behind it," said Capt. Charles Rowe, Intelligence, Vice Division of the Columbus Police Dept, "is to cut down on the amount of purchasers." Rowe said this will eventually run some drug dealers out of business or force them to move to another town.

Rowe said that if a drug purchaser suspects the person from whom he is buying, he will not buy. The same hypothesis applies to prostitution.

Operations such as this are ongoing, Rowe said, and this season the police department is just targeting these types of activities a little more than normal.

"We've run operations like this in the past," said Rowe. "They seem to be effective."

ACAP to hold grand opening

By Alyanna B. Summers

The Army Career and Alumni Program will celebrate the grand opening of its new offices in Soldiers Plaza Jan. 17 at 3 p.m, according to post ACAP officials.

The new building, located in Building 2617, will house the two phases of the ACAP system, the Transition Assistance Program and the Job Assistance Center, now in Building 2634, said Pat Sneed, transition assistance specialist and one of the five counselors with the program.

Col. Gary Jones, director of Directorate of Military Personnel, will give a welcoming speech at the ribbon-cutting ceremony and The Infantry Band is also scheduled.

"These facilities are much needed," said Sneed. "With the voluntary early separation program in full swing, we're very busy these days," said Sneed. ACAP officials counseled 657 soldiers, civilians and family members separating from the military last month.

Airborne pointers

Col. Enrique Chavez Chiquilla (center), chief of staff, Mexican Airborne Brigade, gets pointers on how to use an American parachute from Lt. Col. Marcel Lettre, commander of the 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry. Chavez visited the Airborne School Dec. 10 to observe U.S. training techniques.

Visit family by video

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

For the second year, soldiers at Fort Benning may take part in Christmas holiday video teleconference visits with their faraway family members.

A video teleconference is a live video conversation from one military video teleconference center to another and must be arranged at least three days in advance.

According to Otis E. Ammons, post VTC facilitator, the first thing an interested soldier needs to do is contact the Video Teleconference Center in Building 4, Room W207, 545-5552.

Ammons or Spc. Vera Fullem will take the vital information such as what day and place are involved, and schedules will be made from that with the soldier then being contacted.

There are several posts acting as clearinghouses for these arrangements and setting up times.

If the soldier is under Training and Doctrine Command, it goes through Fort Monroe, Va. If the soldier is under Forces Command, it goes through Fort McPherson, Ga.

Also, after a teleconference has been set up, the soldier is responsible for explaining to the family where the military teleconference center nearest to them is and exactly where to go.

Holiday VTC visits within the continental United States will be limited to 30 minutes, and must be scheduled for sometime between now and Dec. 31 (excluding Christmas Day and weekends), from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Eastern Standard Time.

Visits with Germany were available earlier, but have already been filled.

All of these teleconferences are free of charge to the soldier and are especially geared to the lower enlisted who have traditionally had difficulty reaching home for the holidays.

Soldiers are encouraged to make arrangements as soon as possible because between today at 11 a.m. to Dec. 25, the central booking office at the Pentagon will be closed. This means that though pre-scheduled video teleconferences can take place during these days, no further scheduling can be done until after Christmas.

CHAMPUS Select now in area

By John Wynn
CHAMPUS Select

The Medical Center and The Bradley Center of Columbus have joined the CHAMPUS Select network of health care providers. CHAMPUS Select is a new Department of Defense program for the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniform Services. It is for CHAMPUS-eligible families in Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi and Tennessee.

CHAMPUS Select is a voluntary health care benefits program that coordinates medical care between military hospitals and civilian health care providers under CHAMPUS, it is not a CHAMPUS supplemental insurance plan.

CHAMPUS Select offers all the benefits available through standard CHAMPUS, plus reduced cost-shares and automatic claims filing. This means less out-of-pocket expense and claims paperwork for eligible beneficiaries.

CHAMPUS Select is a cost-effective option to standard CHAMPUS for beneficiaries whose health care needs cannot be provided by Martin Army Community Hospital or another military hospital. The program encourages more efficient use of available health care resources through a network of preferred health care providers doctors, hospitals and others. CHAMPUS SELECT also offers beneficiaries the flexibility to choose from among the providers who have joined the network, such as The Medical Center and The Bradley Center.

For more information and a current listing of the preferred health care providers, contact the local CHAMPUS SelectT coordinator at 682-5949.

STDs increase on Fort Benning

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

A recent study from the office of the chief of Preventive Medicine at Fort Benning shows that the number of sexually transmitted diseases has more than doubled since December of last year for active duty soldiers at Fort Benning.

Of the total 26,000 or more active duty soldiers assigned here, 1.2 percent have had some type of STD in the past year, according to Lt. Col. Rene Sanchez, chief of Preventive Medicine. This number reflects a .7 percent increase of infected members in comparison to the percentage infected in December, 1990.

This figure, according to Sanchez, does not exclude the married soldier or any soldier that is engaging in a monogamous relationship. Furthermore, these numbers are only reported cases, not actual cases.

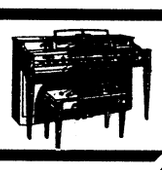
The patients treated at the STD clinic here are mostly male.

Sanchez said the main reason most of reported cases are male is because " many times the diseases for women have no symptoms. The disease simply progresses in the woman's body, unknowingly until she passes it on to her partners."

Two common STDs on Fort Benning are syphilis and Gonorrhea.

It must be noted, according to Lt. Col. Roberta Dyer, chief, Community Health Nursing, both Syphilis and Gonorrhea are potentially deadly diseases if left untreated. Dyer further explained that sexually active military members leave something to be desired when it comes to STD education.

"People just aren't using common sense," said Dyer. "Many patients have either had, or are having, sex with multiple partners with no protection. And if they aren't, their partners probably are."



Both Dyer and Sanchez explained that, from the public health perspective, the patient is not just one individual. It's the entire community.

CFC update

The Combined Federal Campaign at Fort Benning currently has $440,000 in pledges and donations as of Monday.

According to Cathy White, coordinator for the CFC on post, this is about 73 percent of the goal.

Powerlifter warns youth against the use of drugs

By Richard C. McInnis
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

"Stay away from the drugs," says Albert Lee Cauley, a sergeant first class with Battery A, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division. "They only create habits."

To some it may sound as though this non-commissioned officer is supporting the war on drugs--and he is -- but Cauley's message is directed to a different audience than those rhetorical television commercials. He is addressing young and future powerlifters.

Only about 10 percent of today's powerlifters use taboo drugs, known to most as anabolic steroids, according to Cauley. "If you can't buy it over the counter at the commissary or at your favorite health food store, then you should not be using it."

Cauley, 42, started lifting in 1981 to compensate for the few extra pounds he carried. Today, he pushes his body six days a week, 2 1/2 hours a day, in the Kelley Hill Fitness Center. His main exercises are the bench press, squat and dead lift.

"The only way to get strong is to train hard and be dedicated," said Cauley.

Recently, he placed second in the Masters Powerlifting Championship in Daytona Beach, Fla. He attributes his successes to his wife, Carolyn, his children, Cinia, Cypre, and Toney, and his mother-in-law, Areddie. But he said he cannot apologize enough to them for the time spent away from home because of competition and training.

After 20 years in service, Cauley is preparing for retirement in December 1992, after which he intends to work as a Georgia state correctional officer.

However, he also plans to continue powerlifting. His short-term aspirations include the Southeast Powerlifting Championship in January, the World Powerlifting Championship in March, and Region 3 Championship in Hinesville, Ga., in April.

In addition, Cauley is trying to coordinate a "powerlifting extravaganza" with several area gyms to be held in the Columbus area.

Cauley contends that a good weight-lifting program is directly beneficial to improving and maintaining a high Army Physical Fitness Test score.

"Soldiers should be doing more physical training on their own," he said. "All good soldiers should be making a score of 270 or better on their APFT."

ASK THE JUDGE

By Michael H. Lane
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q. My wife and I are having marital difficulties, and we are considering ending our marriage. I have only been in the Army for three years, and don't know what I am supposed to do if my wife and I separate or divorce. My wife is also concerned about what may happen to her and our young son if we are no longer living together. Can we get a legal separation or divorce through the Army? How much money will I have to pay? Are my wife and son still entitled to military privileges?

A. This is a complex and emotional subject, and my answer can only cover the basics. To get more specific advice, get an appointment at the Legal Assistance Office to discuss this matter in detail.

You and your wife will be seen by different attorneys, so your questions can be addressed in private. There are, however, some issues of general interest.

First of all, the Army must be officially neutral in marital disputes. Army regulations provide that a soldier has a duty to support his family members, but the Army cannot serve as a judge.

A legal assistance attorney can give advice about the process, such as how to obtain a lawyer and what a divorce might cost.

The legal assistance attorney can prepare one important document in this process, a separation agreement between the parties.

A separation agreement is a voluntary agreement between you and your spouse, which allows you to settle as many of the marital disputes as you both can agree upon. It does not involve a court. The contract can include child custody, support of children, visitation rights, spousal support, bills, property settlement, life insurance, transportation of household goods, and income tax questions. The parties continue to be legally married, and all military rights and benefits will continue for the dependents. Also, this agreement can be used as the basis of any property settlement during a divorce.

Your support obligations to dependents are set out in AR 608-99. If there is either a voluntary support agreement or a court order of support, then the order or agreement sets the amount you must pay for support. If there is no separation agreement, the regulation sets out rules for support which are quite detailed.

Generally, the soldier is required to support his dependents with the amount of his BAQ, at the with-dependents rate. If the parties are in quarters, the amount of minimum support is an amount of money equal to the difference between BAQ with dependents and without dependents.

The children will continue to be eligible for military benefits as long as the soldier is eligible, and as long as children are considered dependents under the Army regulation.

Residents encouraged to stop crime

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Residents of Fort Benning, Columbus, and Phenix City/Russell County who provide information on criminal activity, stolen property, or wanted fugitives to the Columbus Police Department's Crime Stoppers Program may be eligible for a cash reward.

According to Columbus Police Department's Sgt. Warren Dunlap, regional coordinator for the program, if the information leads to the arrest and indictment of someone who is committing criminal violations, the informant could receive a cash reward of up to $1,000 depending on the severity of the crime.

Dunlap said the program has enjoyed considerable success since its inception in 1986, eliciting 13,141 phone calls that resulted in 555 arrests, 1,035 felony charges, 274 misdemeanor charges, the recovery of $678,822 in stolen property, and the seizure of $673,611 in illegal drugs and drug money. Additionally, a total of $70,600 was given by the department as reward money.

"None of the crimes came from Fort Benning, though," said Dunlap. "I don't think it's because crime isn't happening out there. Maybe a lot of people on post aren't aware of the program."

Crime Stoppers also features a "crime of the week." Each week a particular unsolved crime is re-enacted on film and aired Tuesday during WTVM Channel 9's 6 p.m. news broadcast in the hope of gathering clues that will help solve the crime.

To report information to Crime Stoppers, call 571-5858 between 10 a.m. and 10 p.m, Monday through Friday.

Dunlap said the calls are completely confidential; the caller need not reveal his or her name.

"Our correspondence is secret. The caller is assigned a code number. If the information is successfully used, the caller is told at what bank they can pick up their check for the reward money," he said.

SOA gets new battalion, B-5

Master Sgt. Duane D. Gunderson, 3rd Brigade's transition non-commissioned officer, explains the Reserve service member's contract to Spc. Angelo C. Russell of Company B, 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment.

Outstanding soldiers

TRADOC, FORSCOM announce top transition NCOs

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Counseling soldiers about their options with the Army Reserve and National Guard is something that two Fort Benning non-commissioned officers enjoy and do so well that they were selected as Transition NCOs of the Year by Training and Doctrine Command and Forces Command.

Sgt. 1st Class Robert W. Gowin was recently named TRADOC transition NCO of the year, while Master Sgt. Duane D. Gunderson took the same honor for FORSCOM, because he serves as transition NCO for the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, a FORSCOM unit.

Both are presently assigned to to Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment.

The familiar, and often feared, question and answer type board, conducted by a panel of senior NCOs, was the proving ground for both Gowin and Gunderson.

After competing against each other here at Fort Benning at the post level, Gowin was selected to compete at the TRADOC level and Gunderson at the FORSCOM level. Gowin explained what happened from there.

"I went to TRADOC Headquarters at Fort Monroe, Va., in October and competed against all the transition NCOs who were selected from all the other TRADOC installations. You're up in front of five NCOs.

I think we had three sergeants major, a master sergeant, and a person who took notes, and we were asked various questions pertaining to our job.

They also asked questions in a more relaxed atmosphere about your background. They wanted you to open up and talk about yourself."

Gunderson, who went to FORSCOM Headquarters in Atlanta in November for his board, said the questions he had to answer differed a little from Gowin's.

"We had the same type of questions, with a little more emphasis on leadership and soldiering skills at the FORSCOM board, We also had military occupational specialty-related questions."

Both agreed that the boards were a challenge.

"One of the things that was hard about it," said Gowin, "was was that it was hard to prepare because when you go up in front of these types of boards they don't always tell you what's going to be on them.

As far as the other competitors, they were all as confident as I was. To have two guys beat others who have been in this program as long as 15 years, it makes us feel really good."

They attribute their success to the fact that they both enjoy the job they do. Gowin said that his enthusiasm for what he does naturally gave him the confidence to excel on the board.

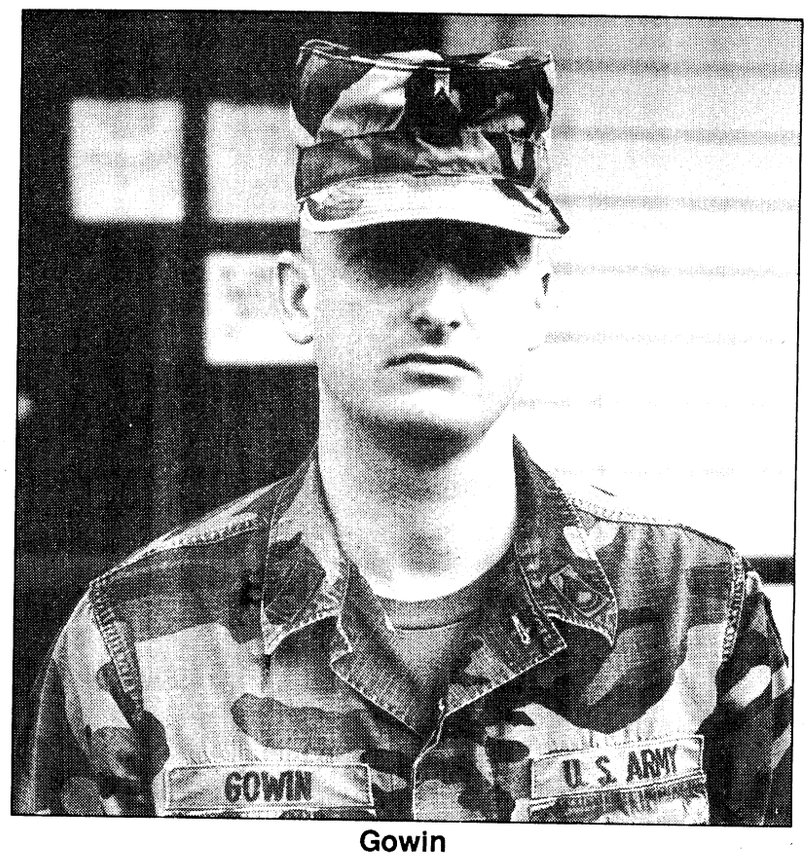
Gunderson agreed.

"This is a very gratifying job. You get to sit down and work with soldiers and help soldiers out who are transitioning back into civilian life," he said.

"It's probably one of the best feelings when you can help someone out who comes in here and he really doesn't know what he wants to do with the Guard or Reserves and you get them the assignment that they want. That's a great feeling for yourself."

Gowin added that the difference between being a recruiter, which both he and Gunderson were previously, and a transition NCO is like night and day.

"We used to be called in-service recruiters, and they took that away from us, thank goodness, because we were being confused as recruiters and we're not. We're career counselors. It's a relaxed atmosphere.



It's not like recruiting, where a guy comes in and is bombarded, pressured and has his arm twisted," Gowin said.

Both Gowin and Gunderson are relatively new to the job of transition NCO. Gowin joined the Army in 1979, served four years as a tank crewman, got out of the Army for a year in 1984, came back as a recruiter, and then switched to his current job, which he's been doing for less than a year.

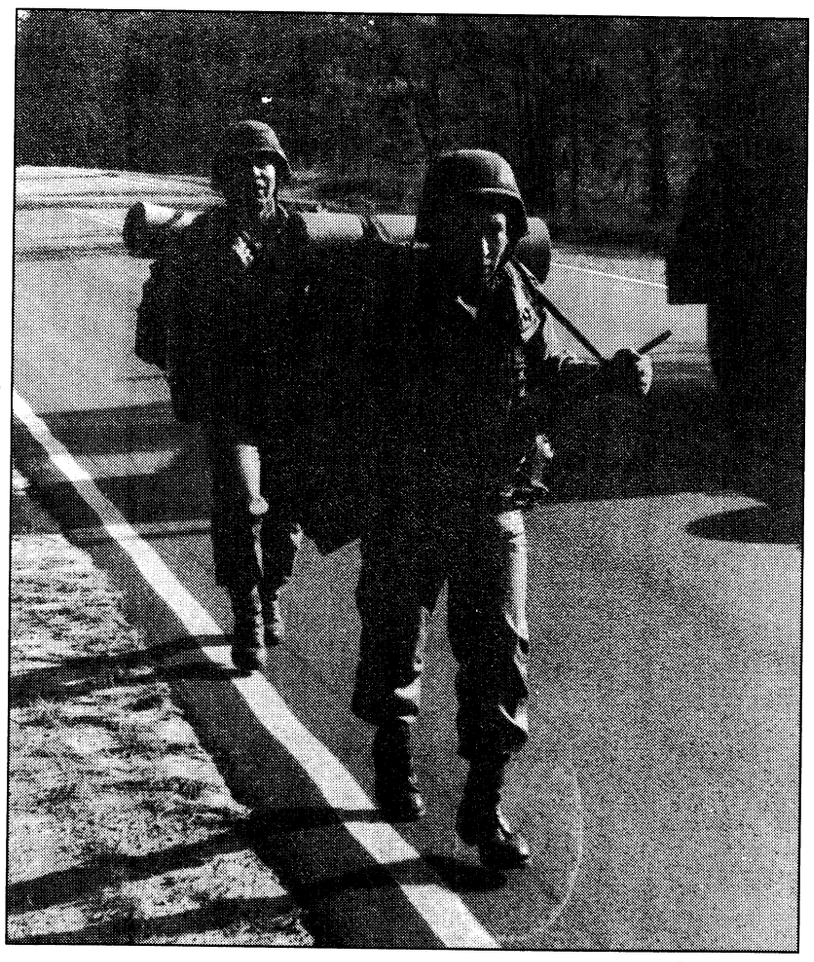
Gunderson, who joined the Army in 1970, started out as a morse code interceptor in Vietnam and Thailand, got out in 1978 and went to college, then came back in 1981 and served as a recruiter until a little over a year ago, when he assumed his present job.

Gowin said it is ironic that two NCOs from the same installation who are nearly brand new at what they do took first place at two different major commands and will now compete against one another at the Department of the Army board in January.

"It's the first time that it has ever happened," said Gunderson.

Gowin

For now, Gowin and Gunderson will have about a month to rest on their laurels and prepare to face off at the DA level.



"There may be the possibility that the DA sergeant major may be sitting on the board," said Gowin. "It could be pretty interesting."

Combat medic skills vital to SOA students

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

Military training designed specifically to enhance combat skills rarely has an alternative use in the civilian world.

The one exception is training of combat medics. The skills learned to save a soldier's life in combat naturally lend themselves to saving the lives of civilians.

Daniel Maloney

At the School of the Americas, the Combat Medic Course brings this aspect of military training to life. Because the Latin American students enrolled in the course are often the only medical support in their respective towns or villages, the skills they learn here may save a life when they return home.

"We train them to provide care in a combat situation and we train them in other medical areas to expand into their community," said Capt. Jose M. Pizarro, chief of the Sapper Division (which includes the medic course).

Helping women deliver babies was among the medical skills taught during the six-week course specifically for use in the community.

According to Sgt. 1st Class Pedro L. Guerad, senior medical instructor, the course also included instruction in physiology, anatomy, suturing, resuscitation, immunizations, water purification and setting up latrines.

In addition, all of the books used in the course were translated into Spanish from Army field manuals and the students take them back for reference, Guerad said.

Of the 33 students enrolled in the course, more than a third were police officers from Colombia and Costa Rica.

According to Pizarro, the students were all hand-picked for the course based on their potential and it showed.

"They came here to learn and train and that is exactly what they did. The students ranged in age from 22 to 46 years. They worked as a team and supported each other."

The final phase of the course was a field training exercise and a modified EFMB qualification test.

The test included litter carrying through an obstacle course with simulated explosions and chest-high water crossings, as well as a 12-mile road march.

This marked the first time the course was taught at SOA and the more than 250 hours of instruction was conducted primarily by Guerad and Staff Sgt. Nelson Arellano, a combat medic. The 34th Medical Battalion also provided "excellent" support, especially during the FTX, Guerad said.

For the students, the course reinforces old skills and develops new ones. For one student the course exceeded his expectations.

Through the translation of Guerad, Sgt. Jorge Estela, from Peru, said the course taught the students not only to care for soldiers, but how to care for their families and people in their villages.

The course began Nov. 4 with the students graduating Dec. 10.

If re-enlistment time is coming, plan ahead

By Aurelio Feliberty
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

"Re -up? Not me!"

That's a common phrase heard mostly from first-termers early in their enlistment before they've thought about the future.

When the big day comes to make that decision on re-enlistment, theses same soldiers suddenly change their tune: "What should I do? What type of job can I get on the outside world? Why is it so hard to get a civilian job?"

Don't wait until it's too late. "Re-enlistment eligibility requirements are changing frequently to meet the Army's drawdown," said Master Sgt. Jack Nelson, chief of 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division Retention.

According to Nelson, beginning Jan. 1, soldiers in one of the 51 over-strength military occupational specialties who fall within 90 days of their estimated termination of service date will not be allowed to re-enlist without approval from their unit commander and from the Army's Personnel Command.

"For this reason soldiers should find out well in advance of their ETS if they are in an over-strength MOS and have to reclassify before they can re-enlist," he said.

"One of the most difficult problems we're facing is soldiers inquiries concerning rumors of changes," Nelson added.

"It's important for commanders to understand these changes, not only to keep themselves informed, but also to keep their soldiers informed of their career opportunities in the Army."

According to Nelson, the retention office is also hard at work trying to reschedule and reassign soldiers who re-enlisted for school and assignment options before the Persian Gulf war.

Nelson warned soldiers about deletion of bonuses for many specialties, except for special skill unit assignments such as special forces and ranger battalions.

"We're averaging two to three changes to re-enlistment options weekly," Nelson said. "Soldiers seeking re-enlistment information should see their company re-enlistment NCO and battalion career counselor for current re-enlistment options and upcoming changes.

USAMU trains on new weapon

By Charlene L. LaDay-Hill
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

Training soldiers to become better marksmen is nothing new for the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit. However, working with U.S. Marines to train Explosive Ordnance personnel on how to properly use the Army's newest weapon is a little different from their usual routine.

Recently Explosive Ordinance Disposal soldiers from all over the United States converged on Fort Benning's Coursen Range to learn the ins and outs of the 50 caliber special application scoped rifle or the Barret light 50 for short.

The classes were given by the U.S. Marine Corps instructors in conjunction with USAMU.

"This training is more of a train the trainer type class for EOD personnel whose units have been issued the new weapon's system," said Master Sgt.Darryl W. Powell, USAMU international coordinator. "The classes included technical research and development of the Barret light 50. The technical classes were given by the Marines Corps instructors, while Staff Sgt. Charles Croley, USAMU range non-commissioned officer in charge and I provided logistical and range support."

Marine Gunnery Sgts. Larry Fobb and Jerry O'Mally were the instructors for the training.

"This is part of a four-day class ensuring that the 50 caliber semiautomatic is functioning properly," said Fobb. "Overall the class familiarizes the soldiers with the weapon and teaches them the proper way to use the weapon effectively. They've learned how to assemble, disassemble, and trouble shoot."

"This has been an informative course. All of the EOD units have the 50 caliber, but not the knowledge necessary for the weapon to be effective with our mission," said Staff Sgt. Shay Bjorkman, 41st EOD, Fort Bliss, Texas.

"We will be using this weapon for the disruption of ordnance. This means that it will be a safer and quicker method of disposing dud ordnance."

"This course has put us in a training atmosphere," said Sgt. Stanley F. Ferguson, 49th EOD, Fort Ord, Calif. "We're getting a chance to interact with other soldiers from outside of our unit. This opens us up to more new ideas and better overall learning of our job." In any event, the overall training of the 50 caliber was a success, said Powell. "It went so well that FORSCOM has directed additional training in the future."

SOA activates helicopter battalion

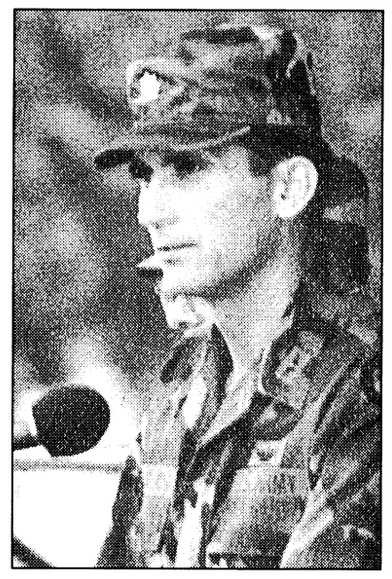
HSB finds home at Fort Rucker

By Daniel Maloney
School of theAmericas

The School of the Americas activated its Helicopter School Battalion during an activation and assumption of command ceremony Dec. 2, at Fort Rucker, Ala.

The battalion, stationed at the U.S. Army Aviation Center, evolved from the training unit of Company E, 1st Battalion, 223rd Aviation Regiment, which to date has trained 442 Latin American aviators and logged more than 22,000 accident-free hours since its inception in April 1987.

The battalion's training emphasis is providing instruction on the UH-1 Huey Helicopter and the UH-60 Blackhawk Helicopter crucial to fighting the drug war in Latin America, as well as providing access to remote areas.



Col. Jose R. Feliciano, commandant of SOA, was on hand to pass the guidon to Lt. Col. Jose L. Hinojosa, the first commander of the HSB.

Following the assumption of command ceremony, both commanders spoke on the importance of the helicopter for Latin America.

According to Feliciano, the decision to activate the helicopter battalion was an important one militarily because of the difference aviation can make in the Americas.

"Our military counterparts need our assistance to focus their efforts to supporting the development of their countries while providing for the safety of their citizens," he said.

"Aviation will make a difference in the Americas as we assist governments to reach the four corners of their countries and support their people, something many of the countries cannot physically do."

"Aviation will make a difference in the war against narco-traffickers, as we teach Latin American pilots tactics, techniques and the procedures required to defeat this enemy that is threatening every single country in the Americas," Feliciano said.

Hinojosa also emphasized the necessity of the helicopter in Latin America.

"In Latin America the helicopter is the single most important resource to help their military in infrastructure improvements and internal defense. Because of the nature of the terrain, the helicopter is indispensable," Hinojosa said.

Hinojosa also called attention to the importance of maintenance, another aspect of the battalion's course curriculum.

A reception followed the ceremony at the Fort Rucker Officers' Club.

America accelerates mobilization of troops

Military History Division

In the weeks following the Japanese surprise attack on Pearl Harbor, America immediately accelerated mobilization.

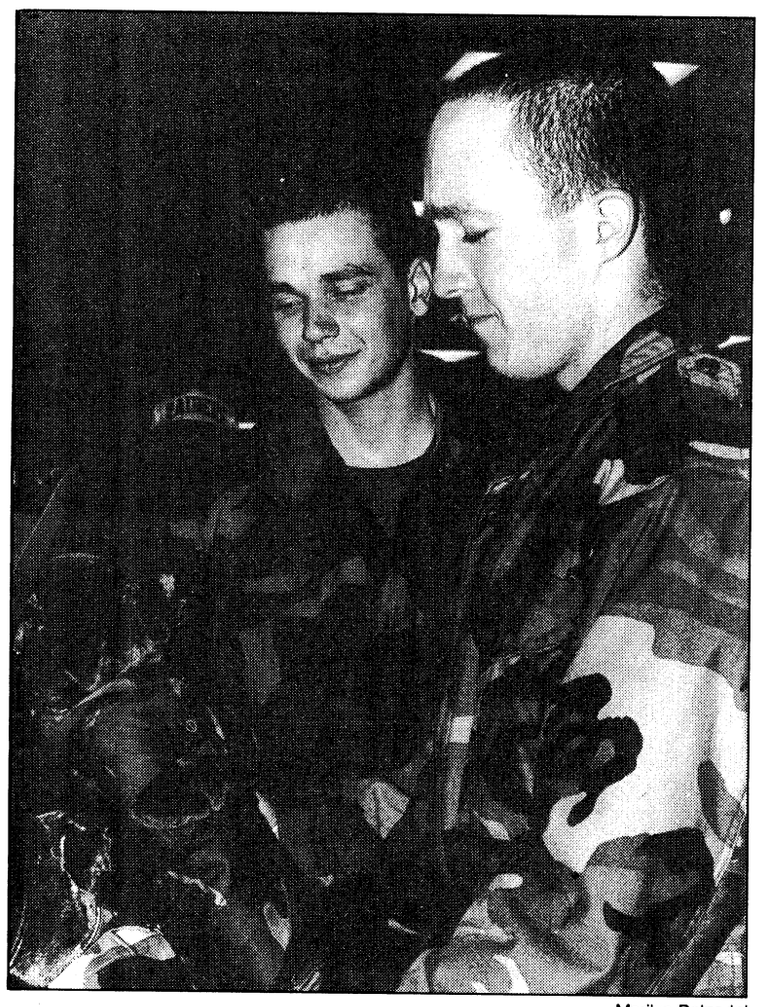
To firmly establish an overall Allied strategy, Churchill and Roosevelt met in Washington at the Arcadia Conference (Dec.22 through Jan. 7, 1942). The conference confirmed the priority of defeating Nazi Germany first, and it placed the combined chiefs of staff in position to guide the whole Allied war effort.

The Japanese still held the initiative in the Pacific theater. They continued their land drab on the Asian mainland and seized Hong Kong on Christmas Day.

From Dec. 10 through 14 Japanese naval landing forces assaulted various portions of the Philippine island of Luzon. Gen. Douglas MacCarthur's mixed force of American and Philippine troops would soon be forced to withdraw the Bataan peninsula.

The situation in Russia showed more promise. During this week, Soviet Army counterattacks and over extended supply lines stopped the German Wermacht at the gates of Moscow.

To the south lay the besieged city of Sevestopol where Soviet troops would hold out until the summer of 1942.



British general Claude Auchinleck launched a desert offensive on Nov. 18, and by Dec. 16 the Axis forces were in full retreat across northern Libya.

The German and Italian allies established a cohesive defensive line on Dec. 31.

After his first setback, German general Rommel, "The Desert Fox," would prepare for his offensive here. Several British commando raids commenced at the end of the week.

Their objectives were arctic fish-oil factories and radio stations on Moskenesoy Island, Vaagso, and Maaloy, Norway.

The raids were considered tactical successes and had the strategic effect of forcing Hitler to station troops in Norway who would remain idle.

Christmas shopping

Pvt. 2 James Thompson (holding bears) and Pvt. 1 Matt Turner, both from Company B, 3rd Battalion, 32nd Infantry Regiment, Infantry Training Center, were two of more than 4,000 One Station Unit Training soldiers that received an early break from training to get some Christmas shopping done Dec. 6 and 7. OSUT soldiers left for the Christmas holidays Thursday.

FOR THE RECORD

In last week's issue of The Bayonet, the story about the U.S. Army Infantry School's top instructors contained an error.

The officer selected as top instructor will receive a gift from the Retired Officers Association, not the Reserve Officers Association.

Fort Benning lights Christmas tree

By Gabriele Sonnenberg
USAIC Chaplains Office

The Field of Four Chaplains was the site of Fort Benning's Christmas tree lighting ceremony Monday. The Infantry Band presented a concert preceding the ceremony.

The ceremony included remarks by Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, post commander and a re-enactment of the nativity scene by children of the Catholic congregation.

The invocation was presented by Chaplain (Maj.) Richard Pace, 11th Infantry Regiment chaplain.

The Cub Scouts of Fort Benning's Troop 227 sang several Christmas carols.

After the benediction, Santa Claus arrived with gifts for the children.

For Christians, the evergreen tree and the decorations are reminders of Christ, who is the tree of life and the light of the world. The Christmas tree was first used by the people of West Germany. It was a combination of two; the paradise tree and the Christmas light.

The paradise tree was a fig tree with red apples reminiscent of the apple eaten by Eve. The Christmas light was a large candle lit on Christmas Eve and kept burning throughout the night.

The Christmas tree spead from Germany to France in 1837, then to Englandin the mid-19th century. It came to the United States in the early 18th century, brought over by German immigrants.

DENTAC screens Fort Benning youth

By Cynthia Barnes
Bayonet assistant editor

Nearly 700 Fort Benning children, along with their parents, visited the post's Dental Clinic No. 1 on Santa Fe Road for a mass pediatric dental screening Dec. 7.

The screening was conducted for three main reasons, according to Lt. Col. Andrew Chandler, chief of Pediatric Dentistry.

The first reason was to enhance parent's awareness of their children's dental needs.

By seeing a large number of patients in a short period of time, parents can easily obtain information about their child's dental condition, said Chandler.

Many parents wait until kindergarten or first grade before they seek a dental examination, he said; and, unfortunately, a lot of unnoticed damage can occur to a child's teeth in his or her first six years.

Another goal was to give clear information about dental care available.

"We wanted to let people know what their options are," said Chandler.

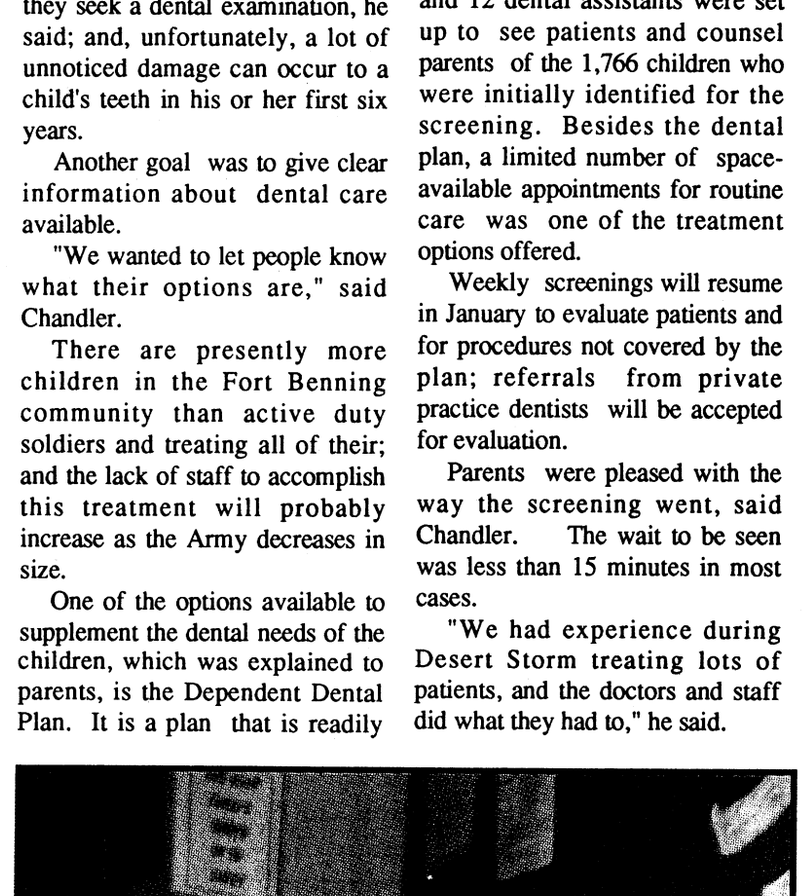
There are presently more children in the Fort Benning community than active duty soldiers and treating all of their; and the lack of staff to accomplish this treatment will probably increase as the Army decreases in size.

One of the options available to supplement the dental needs of the children, which was explained to parents, is the Dependent Dental Plan. It is a plan that is readily available to all family members at a low cost. The plan covers routine treatment such as fillings, cleanings, exams, X-rays, flouride treatments and sealants, all of which can restcre the child's dental health and initiate a measure of prevention.

Chandler said that most children will only need routine care, and it is strongly recommended that parents enroll in DDP.

Identifying children who have extreme dental needs and initiating care for them in hopes of preventing the trauma of pain, infection and possibly tooth loss was another reason for having the screening.

A volunteer staff of 11 doctors and 12 dental assistants were set up to see patients and counsel parents of the 1,766 children who were initially identified for the screening. Besides the dental plan, a limited number of space-available appointments for routine care was one of the treatment options offered.



Weekly screenings will resume in January to evaluate patients and for procedures not covered by the plan; referrals from private practice dentists will be accepted for evaluation.

Parents were pleased with the way the screening went, said Chandler. The wait to be seen was less than 15 minutes in most cases.

"We had experience during Desert Storm treating lots of patients, and the doctors and staff did what they had to," he said.

Brandon Hughes, 9, takes a moment to catch up on his reading while waiting for his sister and brother to finish seeing the dentist.

Contracting director to retire after 40 years

By William D. Hobbs
USAIC Public Affiars Office

The career of Donald Goodroe just may be one for the Guinness Book of World Records — or at least the Fort Benning book of records.

During Goodroe's career that spanned more than 40 years, he rose from a GS-2, clerk typist, to become the director of contracting, GM-l4. This is unusual in itself, but the clincher is that he never left Fort Benning to do it. Goodroe did it his way and beat the odds.

"I was raised on a farm near Columbus," Goodroe said. "After graduation from high school, I just started thinking that the government would be a good organization to work for. My first career goal was to just get a job."

He took a civil service examination at Fort Benning, and the examiner told him they'd let him know.

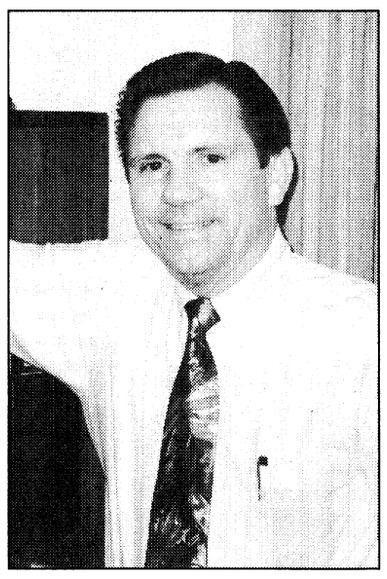
"They hadn't let me know in two weeks, so I went out to the personnel office to let them know I was still there and available," Goodroe said.

Impressed or needing someone or both, the personnel people sent him over to see a man named Lawrence Mosley in the Directorate of Engineering and Housing. He looked over Goodroes's papers, then looked at him and said, "When can you start?"

"Right now," Goodroe shot back. . . and he's been working ever since.

In 1955, Goodroe transferred with a promotion to the Purchasing and Contracting Office. To offset his lack of a college degree, he worked on self-development by reading, taking correspondence courses and campus courses sponsored by the Department of Defense and other agencies at various places throughout the United States.

Today Goodroe is critical of supervisors who restrict their employees from attending training courses "because there are things that have to be done in the office." He sees these supervisors as short sighted and not able to see the whole picture on down the road.



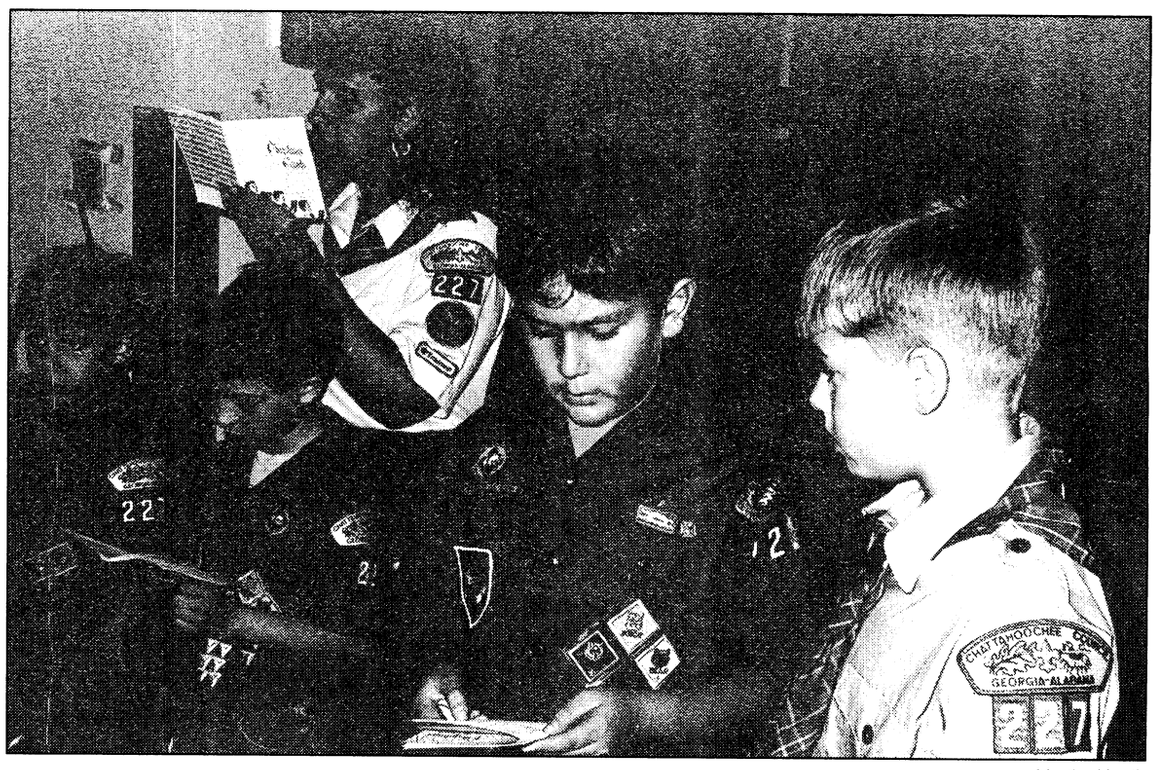
"I'm not any better than the people who work for me," he said. "If they are better trained to do their job, I'll look better in the end."

Another factor influencing Goodroe's career was the expansion of the Purchasing and Contracting Office. It increased from 15 to approximately 70 positions. The organization became known as the Directorate of Contracting. With the expansion came promotion opportunities.

"I've seen the obligating of $10-to-$20 million in contracts in the early days go to more than $100 million today," Goodroe noted. "The downsizing of the military, in general, should reduce the workload of the Directorate of Contracting, but I' not sure of that. One thing that could come out of it is that we may be buying less but more often."

Goodroe said that with more than 35 years in contracting he still finds himself feeling inadequate.

"If a person has arrived at the point he thinks he knows everything about contracting, he'd better wake up," he cautioned.



Goodroe

In this day and time, could a young person fresh out of high school start to work for the government and expect to make GM-l4 in 40 years?

"No," said Goodroe. "Although theoretically it is possible. But if that person is in competition with a college graduate, and both are equal otherwise, the college grad will get the job."

Goodroe and his wife, Margaret, have been married for 36 years. She was the daughter of a career soldier and was born in the post museum which, at the time, was the hospital. They have two daughters, Delilah and Kim and one granddaughter, Miranda. Goodroe said he has mixed feelings about retirement which is scheduled for Jan. 3.

"I'm just going to play it by ear," he said.

Your Guide to Prime-Time TV: Cable and Broadcast Schedules

Lunden visits Disney World again

By JAY BOBBIN
Tribune Media Services

Many people are coming home for the holidays, but Joan Lunden is celebrating Christmas at her traditional December home away from home.

Each year at this time, the popular co-host of ABC's "Good Morning America" heads for Florida and one of the nation's top tourist attractions — Walt Disney World — where she presents television coverage of the site's annual "Very Merry Christmas Parade." She'll be there again for Wednesday's ABC broadcast of the event, with syndicated talk-show host Regis Philbin promoted from his past street-correspondent role to become her full-fledged co-anchor for the first time.

SPOTLIGHT

Seen overseas as well as domestically, the two-hour special will feature several new elements, including a "Surprise Celebration" in the Magic Kingdom, with giant balloons that resemble popular Disney characters. The title stars of the current theatrical film "Beauty and the Beast" and the ABC series "Dinosaurs" also will make their debut appearances, and additional segments will originate from Tokyo Disneyland and the soon-to-open Euro Disneyland outside Paris.

The original Disneyland in Southern California won't be forgotten, though, because that's the locale for a performance of "The Nutcracker." President Bush will deliver a message during the program, and Sandi Patti and Lee Greenwood will sing a duet based on his "Thousand Points of Light" concept.

Lunden usually visits Disney World just before Thanksgiving, to do early preparation for the Christmas gala by observing its various elements and taping promotional advertisements, and she took her three daughters with her last month. "We went on the Disney jet, 'Mickey Mouse One,' which is just great," she reports. "When they hear the pilot saying, 'This is Mickey Mouse One taking off,' my kids crack up. When the crew hits the button that usually tells the flight attendants to get ready for takeoff or landing, you hear Mickey's voice saying, 'Hello, boys and girls! Time to buckle up!' The kids just love that." Lunden adds that she also brought her mother-in-law and a nephew along in November, "and they had us stay in a new hotel we'd never stayed in before, the Dolphin, which is fabulous.

Many of Disney's famous characters are featured in parade

We're creatures of habit and we usually like to stay in the Contemporary (Resort), so we were a little resistant to the change, but it has seven restaurants and a Camp Dolphin for children. They took tennis lessons and worked out in the gym, and we all had a great time."

Youngest daughter Sarah is a perennial Disney fan, and Lunden often gauges what currently is hot in the company's empire by her response. "While I was working," says Mom, "she and her sisters went for the first time to the new 3-D Muppet show, which is almost like 'environment theater,' with things popping up in front of you. They also have a great new stage show inspired by 'Beauty and the Beast,' which Sarah has seen twice (at the movies), but she's still really into 'The Little Mermaid.' The whole time down there, she wore her mermaid outfit ... but also her Minnie Mouse outfit, because that is still her favorite Disney character of all."

With the advent of the so-called "Surprise Celebration," Lunden says that this year's version of the "Very Merry Christmas Parade" actually is "two parades in one. There's the regular holiday parade, then there's the new hot-air-balloon parade, and we'll be cutting back-and-forth between the two. Here's hoping we have the same weather that we had down there that (November) weekend, which was incredible."

Even if the Florida skies turn out to be stormy on Christmas Day, that won't affect the ABC telecast, since the previous two days' stagings of the respective parades will be videotaped as backups. However, there's an additional reason for that pre-recording, which Lunden says has become necessary as more networks around the

Lunden

the Disney yuletide festivities in their respective countries.

"All those people have Christmas before us," she explains of the time differential between America and those foreign locations, "so the (previously taped) parade is a very real show to them, and we've come to accept the fact that we do it twice." Lunden is pleased to have Philbin as her partner in the anchor booth this year, adding it is a logical development since the daily "Live With Regis & Kathie Lee" is produced and distributed by the Disney subsidiary Buena Vista Television. "This year, he really wanted to host the show," she says. "I don't know all the machinations of how it came about, but we've all known each other for years and years, so it's not a matter of having to get used to him."

Bradley's offers high energy fun

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Fort Benning's newest club, Bradley's, an addition to the Officers' Club, held its grand opening Dec. 13, kicking off with Columbus radio station WCGQ, door prizes, and a rose to the first 107 women visitors.

According to General Manager Alex Kovras, Bradley's is open to members of the Officers Club and their guests and is dedicated to fun and excitement.

"Bradleys is a high energy club. We have a state of the art sound system and a state of the art lighting system with a full service bar and a professional staff," he said.

Catering to the dance crowd, the new club's centerpiece is a sunken dance floor featuring a smoke machine and an extensive lighting system. The dance floor is encircled by glass bricks that blink to the beat of the music, which includes contemporary dance music on Friday and Saturday nights, and rock oldies and requests on Sunday.

Bradley's serves both alcoholic and non-alcoholic beverages and munchies like pizza and nachos.

Kovras said Bradley's was designed to be comparable to civilian clubs.Located behind the Supper Club at the Officers Club, Bradley's is open Friday from 5 p.m to 2 a.m., Saturday from 8 p.m. to 3 a.m. and Sunday from 7 p.m. to 12 p.m.

Columbus Museum offers abstract expressionism exhibit

By Va Ebron
Special to The Bayonet

REVIEW

The Richard Pousette - Dart Exhibit is on display at the Columbus Museum of Art. The exhibit will be on display through Jan. 5.

The brilliant colors of the collection remind me of the Alma Thomas colors and exhibit at the museum before its renovations of the late '80s.

Dart, one of the founding members of the Abstract Expressionist Movement of the 1940s and '50s, has spectacular paintings. Quietly intense paintings from small to big explosive paintings that spread into universal states of mind and unconsciousness.

From watercolor, to pencil and oil on panel, oil on linen, acrylic on linen, oil on canvas, acrylic on canvas, oil and metallic paint on canvas, oil on panel, acrylic and mixed media on linen, oil on masonite panel, oil and sand on canvas, to acrylic etchings and home made paper paintings.

I enjoyed much of the symbolisms. Observing some of the paintings such as "Stone Panel" 1948, I couldn't help but think this looks like something a child could have put together as a project. "The Ricardo Collage" painting, 1946-48, seemed to fit the same category.

And when I saw "A Child's Room," 1986, I put it under the same heading as a group of children gathering up anything in sight to put in those paintings and smearing the paint all in fun.

Others looked like pencil scratchings with some color thrown in just to see what the results would look like. Two such paintings are "Descending Birds,"1950-51, and "Golden Dawn," 1952.

Some of Darts paintings are visionary, some inspiring, some peaceful. I was most impressed with the masterful "Radiance," 1973-74. Another is "Presence Byzantium," 1989-90 and "The Edge," 1943. The latter two paintings remind me of patterns and carpeting, but beautiful nonetheless.

Some paintings were not impressive to me, but all and all it was a terrific collection. The colors, the mediums, and the visual symbolisms depicted in some of the paintings, and their size unconsciously created emotionally awe-inspiring sensations.

The collection includes the painting "Head," 1938-39 and "African Head," 1938-39, "River Metamorphosit,"1938-39, "East River," 1939. "Primordial Moment," 1939, to paintings in the '80s and '90s.

There is also a separate glass enclosed collection of hard-carved brass pieces on display, all supposedly figments of Dart's imagination. All are lovely to look at and enjoy.

The Columbus Museum is located at 1251 Wynnton Road. It is open Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m.

Dear Neighbor:

With the holiday season upon us, I'm reminded of sixteenth century English clergyman Robert South who once said, "If there be any truer measure of a man than by what he does, it must be by what he gives." Though spoken long ago, South's words still ring true today.

At CVI, we're more than just a provider of Cable TV service. We're a friend in the communities we serve. Every year, in 18 states across the country, in towns similar to ours, CVI employees and customers join forces with local charitable organizations to help people in need. Together, we collect toys for children, canned goods for the homeless, money to help support athletic programs for the mentally retarded, and much more.

This holiday season please join us in the spirit of giving. Make a contribution toward our holiday drive and help those in our community who are less fortunate. When you do, we'll return the favor with a reduced-price installation.

Sincerely yours,

Ramona Byrd
General Manager
