THE BAYONET

Home of the Infantry

Heroes coming home

By Agatha Hudson James
Bayonet editor

Fort Benning's Desert Storm heroes are coming home.

The first of several planeloads of Benning soldiers redeploying from Southwest Asia was scheduled to arrive Thursday night, and eight others carrying approximately 2,700 soldiers are scheduled to arrive today and Saturday.

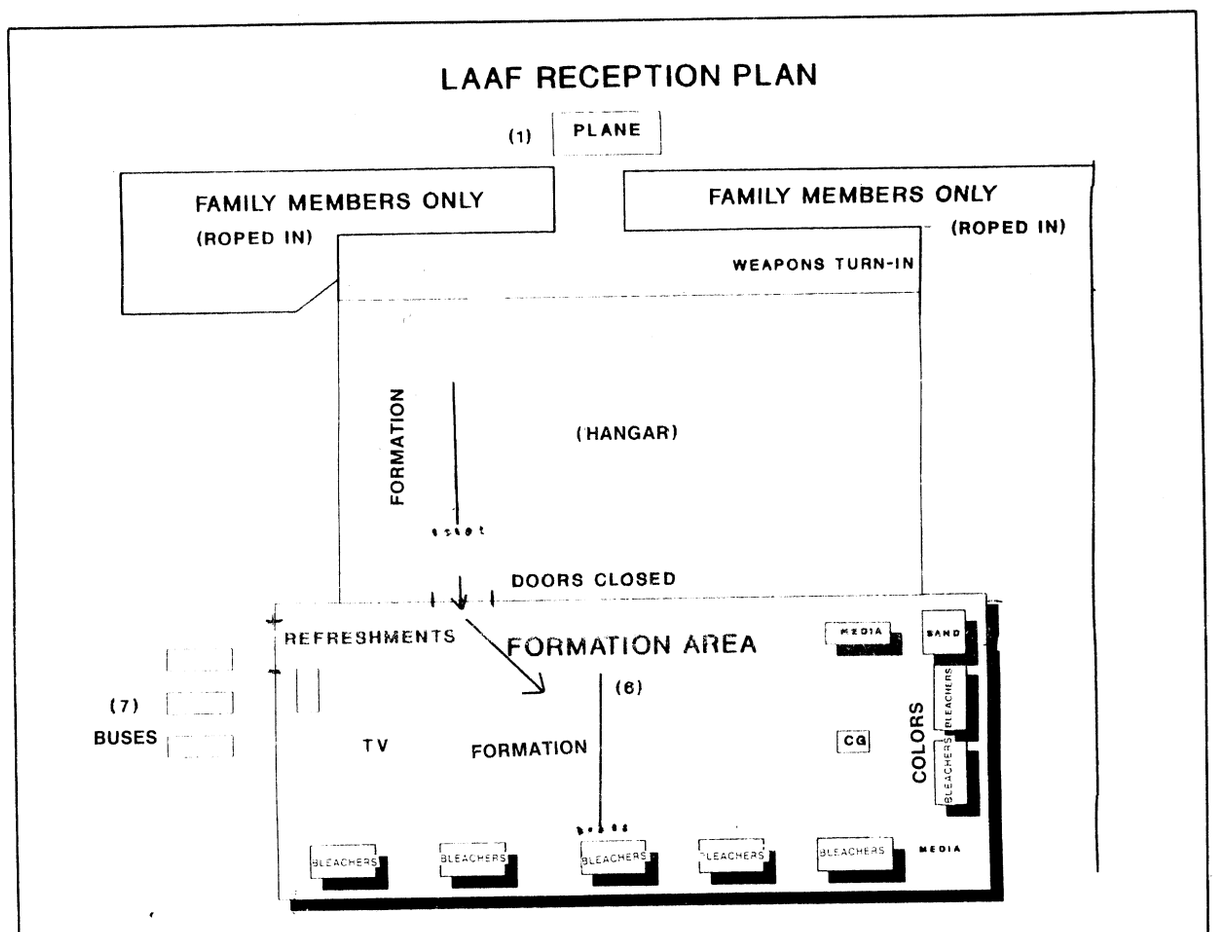
According to Lt. Col. Tom Brady, chief of Plans and Operations, Directorate of Plans, Training and Mobilization, the troops coming in are elements of the 197th Infantry Brigade, 36th Engineer Group and 215th Finance Support Unit.

As The Bayonet went to press, no information had been received about the 34th Medical Battalion. Lt. Col. McDonald Plummer, post Public Affairs officer, said the dates and times on the arrival schedule are tentative and subject to change.

Six flights are scheduled to arrive today between 10:10 a.m. and 9:15 p.m. and will be carrying soldiers from 1st and 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry; 197th Headquarters and Headquarters Company; 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor; 72nd Engineer Co.; 197th Support Battalion; 215th Finance Support Unit; and the 36th Engineer Group.

Three more flights are tentatively scheduled to arrive Saturday.

Manifests for each flight will be sent to rear detachment commanders two hours after liftoff, Brady said, and family members will be notified.



When the soldiers arrive at Lawson Army Airfield, a brief welcoming ceremony, including refreshments, the Infantry Center Band, and an address by the post commanding general, will take place.

Family members and friends wanting to welcome the soldiers should plan to arrive at the airfield early, officials said. And, in case of rain, the ceremonies will be moved inside the hangar.

While the planes are coming in, the families will be kept behind the gate for safety purposes until the engines are shut down, according to Sgt. 1st Class Robert Wiese, briefings and ceremonies non-commissioned officer in DPTM's Plans and Operations Office.

Then, the Military Police will open the gates, and family members will be allowed in the roped-off areas, Wiese said. Once the soldiers come into the hangar, they will turn in their weapons, have manifest call, be put in a formation, and march out to the formation area for the ceremony.

Family members are advised to move to the bleachers after the soldiers move into the hangar and wait for the ceremony to begin, Wiese said.

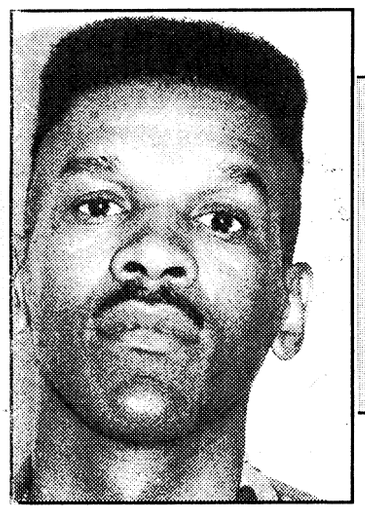
OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES:

What's the worst place and the best place to eat at Fort Benning?



Staff Sgt. David Townsel, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "The best place is the dining facility in Martin Army Community Hospital. Burger King is the worst place because like many other fast food restaurants, the food is not as nutritious as it should be."

Pvt. 1 Christopher L. Hall, Company A, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry — "The worst place to eat is the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry dining facility. For one thing the eggs are runny, and the food is greasy. The best place is Burger King because I like the bacon double cheeseburger, and you get it quick."

Spec. Pamela A. McCoy, Medical Department Activity — "The best place on post is the dining facility in Martin Army Community Hospital. The food is tasty and nutritious, and they offer a wide variety. I really have no comment on the worst place."

Sgt. 1st Class Phillip D. Sasser, Nuclear Biological Chemical School — "The best place to eat is the cafeteria in Building 4. The cooks take a lot of time and pride in preparing the food. The worst place would be the Airborne School snack bar. Frozen food is microwaved or deep fried, then served."

Spec. Kerry L. Whitley, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 197th Infantry Brigade Support — "The best place to eat on post would have to be the Main NCO Club. The worst place is the cafeteria in the main mall. The food there is rather bland."

Staff Sgt. Judy K. McGuire, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "Anthony's Pizza on Main Post is the best place to eat. It has a good atmosphere. There is an outside area for nice days and inside you can watch television. The food is good, also."

COMMENTARY

Nation welcomes desert heroes

By Clyde Snively

Welcome back, you grunts.

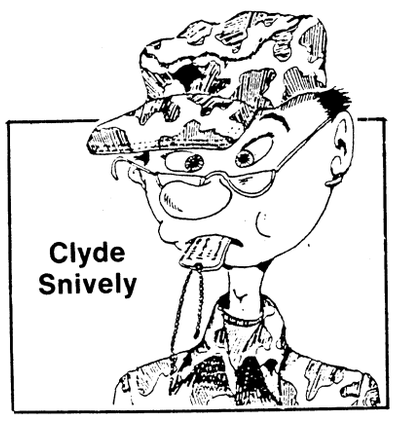
You're bona fide, certified, genuine heroes.

I don't care if you'd never gone into combat. You'd still be heroes in my book.

I can't begin to imagine what living in the sand for seven months could be like. I don't know what would be worse, not having a hot shower or not having a cold beer. I'll stop right there because everyone knows what the third "not having" is.

You guys have a grateful nation out there waiting to heap its love and affection on you, not to mention quite a bit of largess. This ranges from discounted luxury hotel rooms, free bed and breakfast lodging, discounts on theater tickets, cars, household goods, and free tickets to Disney World (apply in person at the fun park).

I hope you have the opportunity to make the best of it. The guys coming home from Vietnam didn't. And while our guys were heroes after Grenada and Panama, the American public didn't think they'd done all that much.



But you guys and gals put in the long, lonely hours. You sweated. You froze. You did without. But when the chips were down, when your commander called you into action, you responded and you responded in a way that had never been seen before and may never be seen again.

You troops are real pros. You kept your equipment in tiptop condition despite the severe environment in which you were living. That was proved by your maintenance rate.

Maintenance rates can be pencil drills, but yours survived the true test, the test of combat. Your tanks and tracks ran, your weapons fired, your radios communicated.

I've seen units that couldn't make it out of the motor pool, units where the most valuable piece of equipment was a wrecker, the hardest worker, the battalion maintenance officer, and this with units that parked on concrete pads with overhead cover.

The zoomies put a hurt on Saddam's boys in the trenches, but it was you guys who went eyeball to eyeball with them, who went in and mopped up the battlefield.

The sky jockeys face death every time they go up. But, how often do they see the face of the man they're about to kill? You infantrymen run that risk every time you go into battle.

The American nation is proud of you. You showed them that all that talk about the great American Army was not idle boasting. You're "best by test."

At the risk of putting a damper on your "coming out" parties, I do want to add a few words of caution.

First, just because you survived Desert Storm, doesn't make you invincible. Just ask the mother of the Desert Storm veteran in Detroit. He was shot to death on a downtown street.

Alcohol and gas still don't mix. Your tolerance level is down, and you aren't driving 113s or M-1s on a trackless desert anymore.

Finally, don't spoil it for those guys who are still over there. Loud, boorish, behavior wears thin real fast. There are going to be folks out there who want to do everything for you, but if you take advantage of their good nature, these same offers won't be extended to the guys and gals still over there.

Yeah, I know, I'm just another four-eyed, pencil-necked geek. What do I know? Who am I to be telling you war heroes how to act.

That's true, but there are a lot of other soldiers on this post who busted their butts to help the war effort. There are a lot of soldiers still there, doing their job. And I know you don't want to spoil it for all of them by acting obnoxious on your first night on the town.

God bless you.

Holy days: Easter, Passover is time for spiritual renewal, remembrance, rededication, quest for growth

The Jewish celebration of Passover and the Christian festival of Easter coincide this year in the observance of these holy days.

These two great world religions and their messages of liberty, deliverance, and hope are the touchstones for religious and individual freedoms from which most of our national heritage has developed.

We are a people and a nation bound together to proclaim, defend and exercise the highly prized sanctions that a free people hold so dear.

Our nation's commitment to the most cherished beliefs of the holy season is best expressed in our participation in Operations Dester Shield and Desert Storm.

During these operations, we ensured the liberty of a sovereign nation, their deliverance from oppression, and the abiding hope to choose their own future.

Consequently, by our commitment to and sacrifices on behalf of others, we protect our faith and freedom so that it will be preserved as a true hope and promise for future generations on earth.

As a means for God's purpose in fragile, yet challenging and opportune times, may this holy season be a time of remembrance, renewal, and rededication to the quest for spiritual growth.

May it also be a time in which we emphasize human dignity and freedom for our world, our nation and our Fort Benning community.

I am proud of all members of the Fort Benning community and for the sacrifices made on behalf of Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm.

We celebrate the victory and rejoice that our nation's service members are returning to their loved ones.

I thank God for his care and protection over our community during these turbulent times. I extend my best wishes for this holy season.

Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza
Fort Benning commander

Gen. Powell sends congratulations

Please accept and forward to all service members my personal congratulations for their superb performance during Desert Shield and Desert Storm.

Their courage, valor, and dedication during the preparation and execution of combat operations have earned the respect and thanks of the people of the United States, Kuwait, and coalition nations.

This conflict was fought with unprecedented speed, resulting in mission accomplishment with minimum loss of personnel and equipment.

The speed and alacrity of the men and women of Forces Command in responding to U.S. Central Command requirements were instrumental in our ability to build combat power in the region rapidly.

The superb training programs in the command have been fully validated.

Kuwait is now free and the success of Desert Storm is historic.

The competence displayed by each member of FORSCOM is a source of pride for all Americans.

Day care system needs improving

In the Feb. 22 issue of The Bayonet, your Various Voices question was what would you change here at Fort Benning. Well, my answer to that would be the day care system here at Fort Benning.

I am a working mother of two. Like many working mothers, I work until 9 p.m. to include weekends. Also, I work rotating shifts.

Since October, I have gone through five baby-sitters for various reasons — some won't baby-sit after 6 p.m., some don't work weekends, some don't like a partial week's work, or quality care is not given.

I have tried to adjust by using a baby-sitter instead of day care, but with each passing day, it continues to get worse.

I don't work full time, and I cannot afford full day care for my children, considering that is all that is offered on post, except for Tot Town. But then, they close at 6 p.m. unless there is a special function.

I think the day care system on post should be re-examined to fill the needs of working parents. I especially would like to see hourly care.

Day care centers have a lot to offer. The children are with their own age groups. Day care centers offer activities that are educational, and children receive tender loving care.

I hope this letter is printed so maybe other working mothers can respond. Then maybe post officials will evaluate the day care system.

Reader questions Bayonet's DUI list

As long as I have been reading The Bayonet, I have yet to see any names of officers listed for DUIs in your paper.

I am certain they get them, too.

Is there a reason their names are not listed? If so, I would like to know.

As far as I am concerned, it is discrimination for only the names of enlisted men and women to be listed for DUIs.

If you can't list all ranks, don't list any!

Carol D. Hill
Fort Benning

Editor's note: The Bayonet lists all names received from the Military Police Activity. We contacted Maj. David J. Buzzell, deputy provost marshal, for clarification about the report.

Buzzell said the report is a listing of those people who are found guilty of driving under the influence of alcohol and not necessarily all those arrested. It is not an arrest report; it's a conviction report, he said.

Buzzell said one reason for the disparity could be the fact that more people are arrested than are convicted. He also noted that in the March 15 issue of The Bayonet, an officer – a second lieutenant – was listed.

TV commercials are just a lot of hype

By Trixie Wadsworth

COMMENTARY

I really hate commercials.

When I was a teen-ager, I bought an AM/FM radio because I was sick of the commercials on AM radio, and I naively thought there were none on FM.

Wrong.

As I got older (but not wiser) and tired of the commercials on network television, I decided to get cable so I wouldn't have to watch any more commercials.

Wrong.

I absolutely hate television commercials. And I watch a lot of TV. I watch so much television that once they had to use a crowbar to remove my fingers from the remote control.

My husband, the illustrious Pfc. Arnold Wadsworth, goes out and leaves me alone all the time. He says it has nothing to do with the fact that all I do is sit around in my ratty bathrobe, fuzzy slippers, with my hair in curlers, watching TV while I stuff my face full of Scooter Pies.

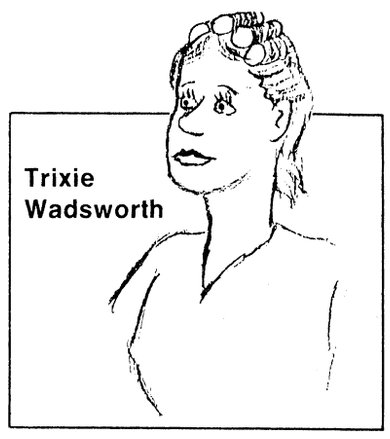
He claims he's either working at Fort Benning or visiting his disabled elderly mother who is wasting away in an overpriced, roach-ridden nursing home.

Actually, I think he's out playing poker, drinking beer and smoking cigars with his hoodlum buddies, like our next door neighbor Clyde Snively.

But enough about that. Back to TV commercials.

TV commercials are the worst. They insult the intelligence of anyone with an IQ higher than a soap dish.

First, Pepsi-Cola wants us to believe if you drink Coke you'll fall into a coma deeper than Charo's cleavage, and if you drink Pepsi you'll be more hip than Roseanne Barr.



Second, commercials would have you believe that if you don't use Close-up toothpaste, Scope, Listerine, Breath Spray, Clorets, and Tic Tacs, even your dog won't kiss you.

Are they kidding? Anyone who has watched a dog for more than 10 minutes can tell you that a dog would kiss, lick or sniff anything that comes within two feet of it. What I want to know is, when are they going to come out with a product that will stop your dog from kissing you.

I think it's all a lot of hype, anyway. Every morning I wage war against tooth decay. I brush with a fluoride, a tartar control, and a plaque-fighting toothpaste; then I rinse with a germ-killer, a plaque-fighter, a tartar-reducer, fluoride and mouthwash. I also use dental floss, a Water Pic, a gum massager, and an electric toothbrush.

After my morning ritual, my mouth is cleaner than a latrine after a GI party. And yet, when I go to the dentist, I still have cavities. I'm beginning to think the American Dental Association's ads have as much credibility as the headlines in the National Enquirer.

Third, some commercials are completely misleading. Michael

Trixie Wadsworth

Jackson doesn't drink soda much less drink Pepsi, and I heard that Ronald McDonald is a vegetarian. Plus, I could never figure out why Charlie the Tuna wanted to be caught by Star Kist, and why can't Lite have great taste and be less filling simultaneously ... and I still don't know what the heck Fahrvegnugen is.

Ever try to pick out a breakfast cereal these days? It's impossible with all those cereal commercials haunting the very depths of your subconscious.

First there's a cereal with total nutrition; that means if you have a bowl of this, you might as well eat junk food for the rest of the day so you don't overdose on vitamins.

Then there's another that will make you throw like Joe Montana and shoot like Magic Johnson; but I guess you can only eat this if you're planning on running the Boston Marathon that day.

There's another that will help you keep the muscle and lose the fat (possibly if you only eat this and nothing else and do 100 sit-ups a day). There's also one that's all natural — no artificial colors or flavors or preservatives...it's called brown stuff.

Then there's one that is low is sugar, fat and cholesterol (and tastes like the box it's packaged in).

You have to have whole wheat. But oat bran is better. Brown rice cereal will make you live longer. But watch out for those calories...and cholesterol...and on and on and on. Yeeeech!!! Who cares? Just give me my Fruit Loops and leave me alone!

Commercials are driving me insane. Ever really listen to some of those inane jingles and slogans? "Ring around the collar. . .We do chicken right. . .Wimpy, wimpy, wimpy. . . And it keeps going, and going, and going. . ."

It's all enough to make you want to throw yourself off your couch and scream, "Help! I've fallen and I can't get up."

Anyway, to solve my problem, I've given up watching TV. I bought myself a videocassette recorder. I stopped by the video rental store and got a tape — "Teen-age Bikini Slasher Psychos from Hell." I popped it into the VCR, settled down onto the couch, and sighed, "Thank God, no more commercials."

Wrong.

Infantry School to get assistant commandant

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The U.S. Army Infantry School will get a new assistant commandant.

Col. Carl F. Ernst has been selected by the Army chief of staff to be the school's next assistant commandant.

Ernst replaces Brig. Gen. William M. Steele who was reassigned to the 8th Infantry Division in Europe in December.

Ernst, who was also selected for promotion to brigadier general, is currently the commander of the Battle Command Training Program at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., but most recently served as the deputy operations officer, Army Central Command, Desert Storm.

No date for his arrival at Fort Benning has been announced.

The 47-year-old native of Louisiana is a graduate of Louisiana State University and A&M College, where he earned a degree in history. He holds a master's degree in public administration from Shippensburg University of Pennsylvania.

Ernst is no stranger to Fort Benning, having attended the officer basic and advanced courses, airborne and ranger schools here.

From June 1984 to January 1987, he was the chief of the Tactics Division and later, director of the Combined Arms and Tactics Department of the Infantry School.

He was a company adviser and later senior adviser to the 25th Reconnaissance Company, 25th Infantry Division, Army Republic of Vietnam, and a ground operations officer for U.S. Forces Korea.

Other assignments include assistant operations officer of the 1st Brigade, 101st Airborne Division; battalion operations officer of the 1st Battalion, 503rd Infantry (Air Assault), 101st Airborne Division; commander, 3rd Battalion, 10th Infantry Regiment, 5th Infantry Division, Fort Polk, La.; inspector general, 5th Infantry Division; and commander of the 2nd Brigade, 5th Infantry Division.

Ernst is a graduate of the Command and General Staff College and the Army War College.

AER

Begins Monday

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

The 1991 Army Emergency Relief Campaign is set to kick off Monday.

Unit representatives or major command representatives will solicit donations, either by cash, check or check allotment from active duty soldiers. Civilians will not be solicited because AER does not assist them, although cash donations, but no check allotments, will be readily accepted.

The money collected is for more than just Fort Benning soldiers, officials said.

"The money collected doesn't stay here at Fort Benning," said Sam Duggins, an executive with the AER Campaign. "It goes to a central location to help soldiers all over the world."

The AER fund was created in 1942 to support soldiers in time of need. Since that time, more than 2 million soldiers have gotten something out of AER.

Also, since its creation, AER has given out more than $350 million in loans and grants to soldiers and their family members.

"It seems like we keep asking soldiers for more and more," said Col. John D. Fuller, post chief of staff, at an AER unit sponsor instruction meeting March 22 in Building 4, "but it's a great program for soldiers."

Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza, post commander, has set this year's goal to meet or exceed 1990's total contributions of $202,539. This money will be used to help other soldiers, both active and retired in times of financial crisis.

Spring cleanup begins

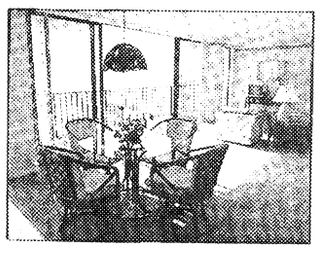
By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning's Spring Cleanup Campaign begins today and continues until April 5.

All soldiers are required and all family members are urged to get involved in this postwide effort to beautify Fort Benning.

Areas of concentration include the family housing areas and post cantonment areas.

Commanders of soldiers who live in on-post housing areas are requested to release soldiers for one-half of a duty day during the cleanup period to report to their quarters and participate in the cleanup, according to a Feb. 12 memorandum released by Col. Ted C. Chilcote, director of Plans, Training and Mobilization, in conjunction with the Community Life Office.



"We're asking commanders to release soldiers for at least half a day," said Darlene Perry, Community Life officer.

Civilian employees are not excluded from plans for cleanup.

"Civilians should get involved by cleaning and beautifying the offices in which they work," said Perry.

According to Perry, spring cleanup is a tradition at Fort Benning.

Soldiers to return quicker than they left

By Jon R. Anderson
Bayonet staff writer

The return of personnel and equipment from Southwest Asia will go much quicker than the buildup during Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm, according to Directorate of Logistics officials.

Dale Ellis, director of Fort Benning's Logistics Directorate, said the concern during departure was to "marry up troops with their equipment." That will not be necessary during redeployment, he said.

Ellis said the lengthly buildup was due primarily to tactical considerations of not wanting "soldiers sitting in the desert without their equipment," explaining that now the primary concern is to get the troops home as soon as possible.

DOL has been responsible for a wide range of supply and transportation missions.

While many of the tasks assigned were rehearsed in previous exercises, said Ellis, the opening of the Port of Jacksonville was "a completely new experience."

With the help of the 36th Engineers, the Logistics Directorate established the port as one of the major points of embarkation to Southwest Asia, said Ellis, being responsible for the shipment of such units as the 197th Infantry Brigade and Fort Campbell's 101st Airborne Division (Air Assault.)

Most personnel were shipped from Lawson Army Airfield, as part of the massive airlift operation, said Ellis, but equipment that was too heavy or massive for air transport took the 12 to 28-day sea journey instead.

To date, 58 sealift cargo ships have disembarked from the port, said Ellis.

"The tide is about to turn, so to speak," said one logistics official, referring to the influx of equipment and materials that would now be returning to the port as part of Operation Proud Return.

Ellis also indicated that he hoped to see all of Fort Benning's troops back by the end of the month.

Post readies for homecoming

By Tom C. Hockaday
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Signs welcoming the soldiers home are scattered all over Fort Benning, and anticipation is running high.

Ann Newnam, whose husband is Maj. William Newnam of the 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery, and some other spouses of Miller Loop, recently took the time to commemorate the soldiers' arrival.

Newnam organized a group of spouses in her neighborhood. Together, they purchased more than three-quarters of a mile of yellow ribbon, and placed it with giant bows on 93 of the 60-year-old oak trees that line the street. They also placed ribbons and bows on the numerous street lamp poles along the loop.

Newnam said once the project got started, the entire neighborhood got involved. Some spouses donated money to offset the cost of the ribbon, others provided refreshments and even the children helped wherever they could.

Newnam added that it really made the job a lot easier when several neighbors helped out with the project.

35 years

Marksmen celebrate anniversary

By Charlene L. LaDay-Hill
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

It was a day of food, fun and memories for more than 360 old and new U.S. Army shooters and their families.

The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit celebrated its 35th anniversary March 2 at Hook Range.

Charlene L. LaDay-Hill

Dehaviland Glisson prepares to add another piece of barbecue chicken to his plate.

Although the day started foggy with a heavy chance of rain, that didn't stop the huge crowd. The former USAMU soldiers came from all over the United States to be a part of this event.

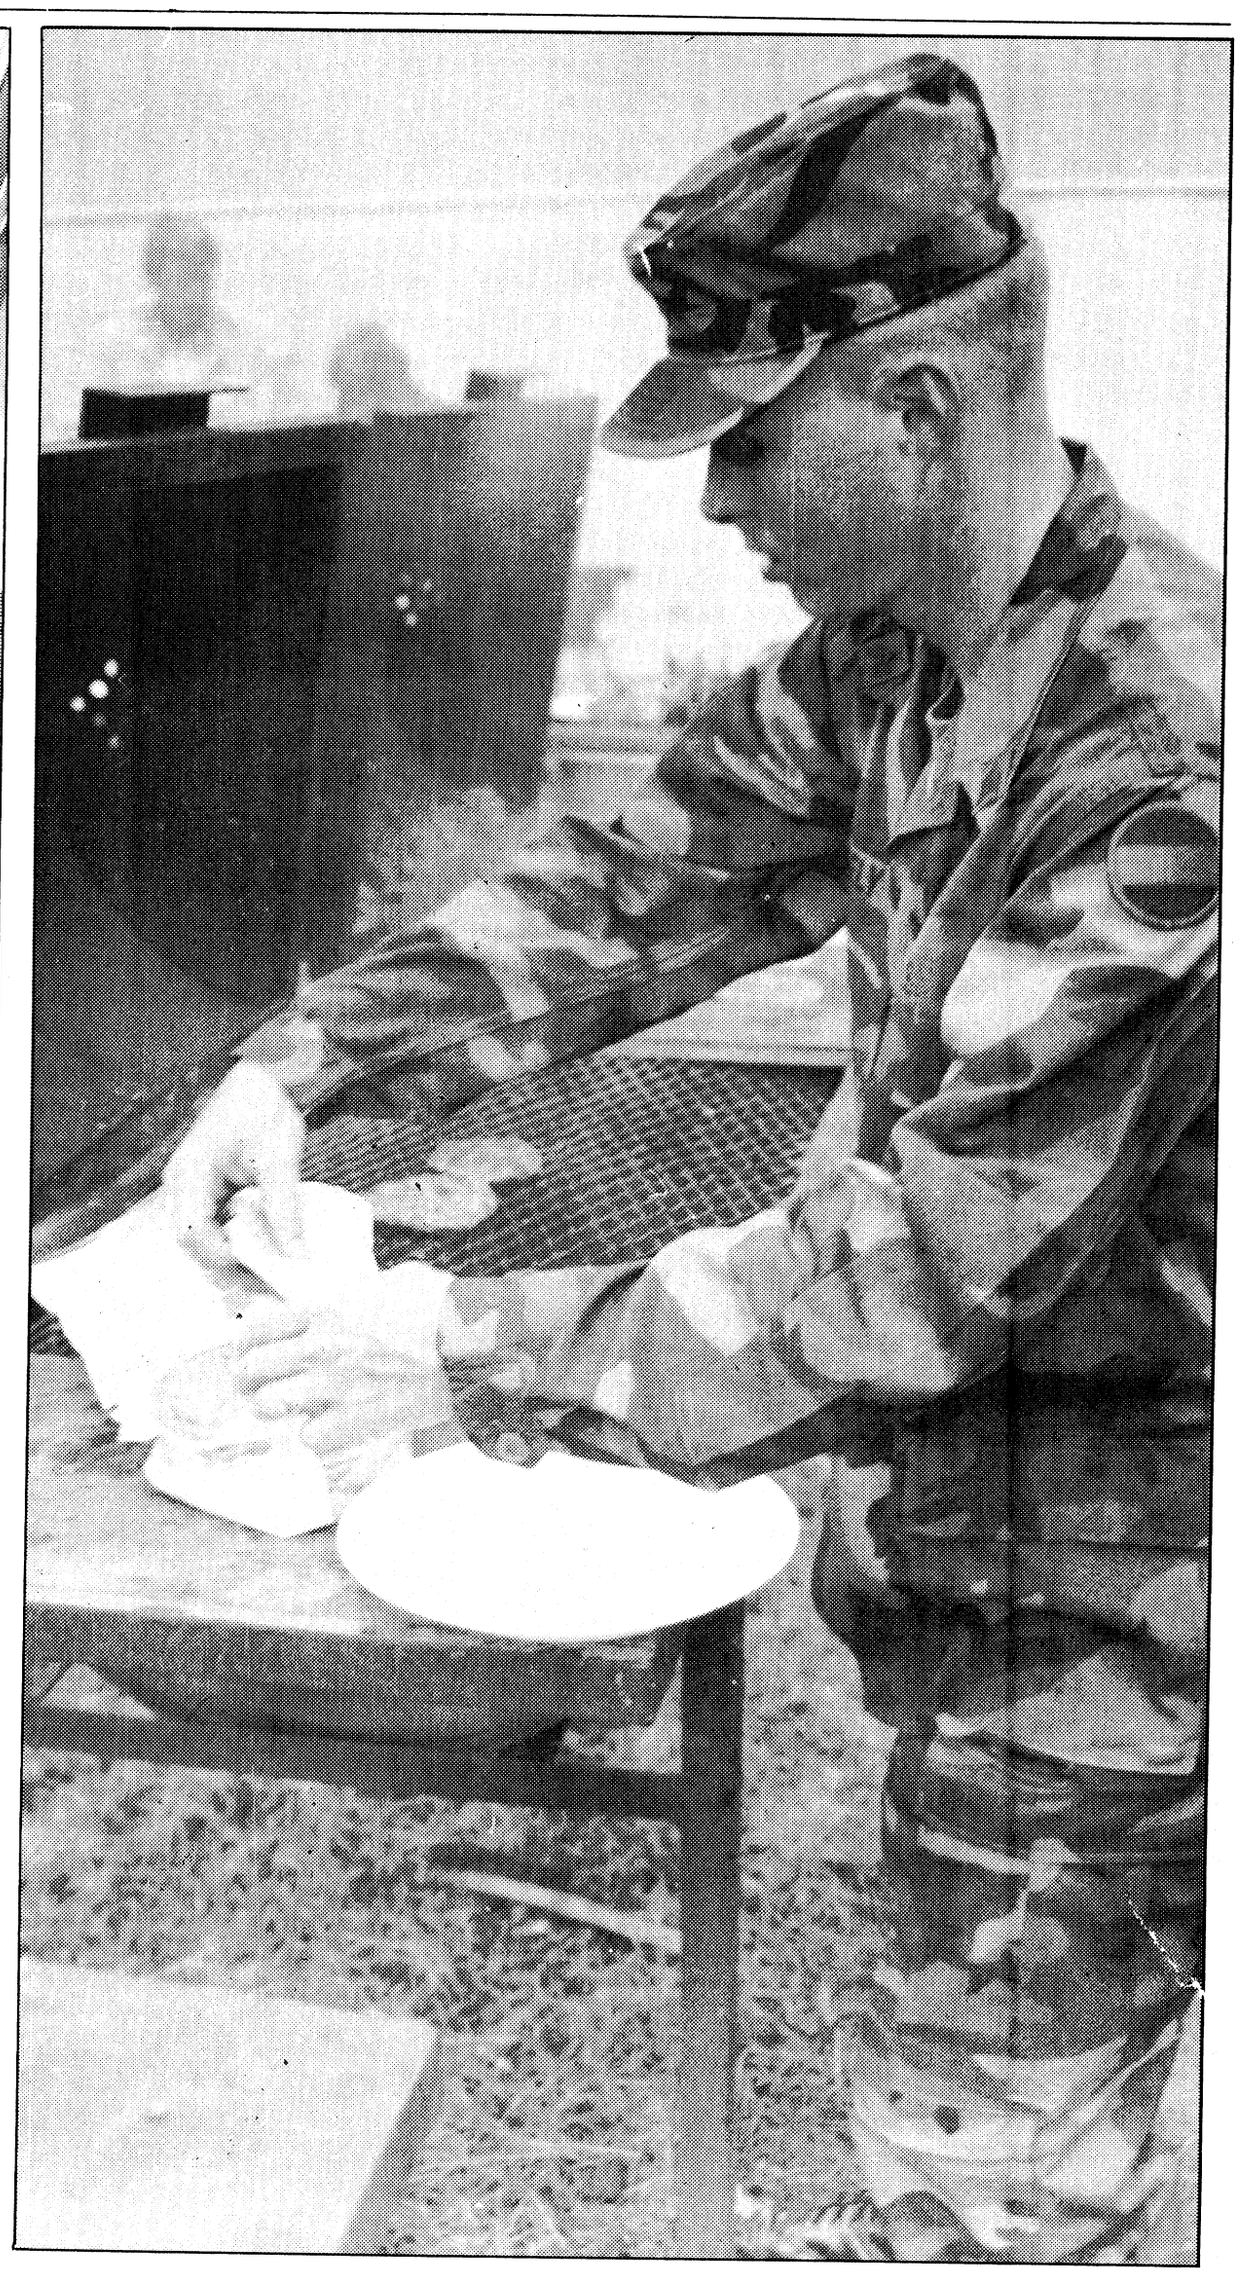
The morning began with an opening ceremony, in which Barbara Hile, one of few female shooters of her time, donated her Distinguished Shooter Badges to the unit. The ceremony also recognized the achievements of Spc. Thomas A. Tamas, international rifle shooter. Tamas was presented the USAMU "Hall of Fame" award.

Following the ceremony, Capt. John T. McNally, international pistol shooter, gave an action pistol demonstration.

As the day cleared up, the festivities continued. In addition to chatting the day away with old friends and making new ones, the former shooters and their families got to shoot skeet and trap, rifle, and pistol events.

"I think this reunion was a good idea," said Chris Q. Akers, son of Byron T. Akers, former skeet shooter. "It shows that retired shooters, like my dad, are still thought about."

"This event give me a chance to share my shooting experiences with my son," said Akers, Chris's father. "I'm really enjoying this, I got to see the old ranges I used to shoot on. It's good to see old friends and be updated on what the unit is doing now."



As the 1992 Olympics draw near, a lot of the current shooters got the chance to meet and talk with former Olympic marksmanship legends.

Joe Benner, Olympic gold medalist and six-time national pistol champion, was on hand to talk with USAMU's young shooters. Benner was winning pistol matches before and after USAMU was formed in 1956.

"I'm really having a great time. The shooters have a much better shooting facility now than when I was competing," said Benner.

"The best thing that's happened for the pistol shooters of today is the dramatic improvements in the competition pistol," he continued. "The gunsmiths here and the overall shooting program is 10 times better now than back in my day."

At the end of the day, the group exchanged numbers and addresses. Now they don't have to wait five years for the next reunion to see how each other is doing.

Rifle team outshoots competition

Army's Gold Team wins Snowbird Open

By Charlene L. LaDay-Hill
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

Outshooting their competition, members of the U.S. Army Service Rifle Team dominated the 1991 Snowbird Open high-powered rifle match recently.

The three-day event Feb. 23 through 24 put the team's shooting skills to the test. Each shooter had to fire 20 shots, the maximum individual score was 200 with 20 Xs.

The Xs represent the accuracy of the shooter because it is located in the center of the target. Although it isn't worth more than 10 points, the X is the determining factor in the event of a tie.

The first day of competition began with the four-man team match.

With 20 teams entered in this event, the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit's Gold Team came out the winners with 1,952 and 67 Xs.

Team members were: Sgt. 1st Class Terry Duling, Sgt. Vince Greiner, Sgt. 1st Class John Chubb, Sgt. 1st Class Bruce Gilbreath, and Sgt. 1st Class Richard Wyckstandt, team coach.

Pfc. Grant Singley won the 200-yard slow fire standing match with a 196 and 8 Xs.

Singley shot his way on top again with a 200 and 10 Xs in the 200-yard rapid fire match.

The 300-yard and 600-yard matches also belonged to the Army team. Sgt. 1st Class Terry Duling had the only clean shot score of 200 and 10 Xs in the 300-yard competition.

Also, Duling's 199 with 13 Xs at 600-yards was untouchable.

At the end of the day, Duling had a two-point lead over Gilbreath with a final 20 rounds to be fired on last day of the match.

The final day, the shoot-off began with Gilbreath completing his 20 shots to score a 199 and 9 Xs over Duling's score of 197 and 9 Xs. But, it wasn't enough because Duling's combined aggregate score of 986 — 45 Xs — outscored Gilbreath's 986, or 34 Xs.

"I was pleased with my performance for this match," said Duling. "Although my first match of the season usually doesn't kick off this well, I was happy to get off to a good start this year.

"If I can continue to maintain the same level of concentration, I'll be good to go for the rest of the season," he said.

Marksmen dominate international matches

By Charlene L. LaDay-Hill
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

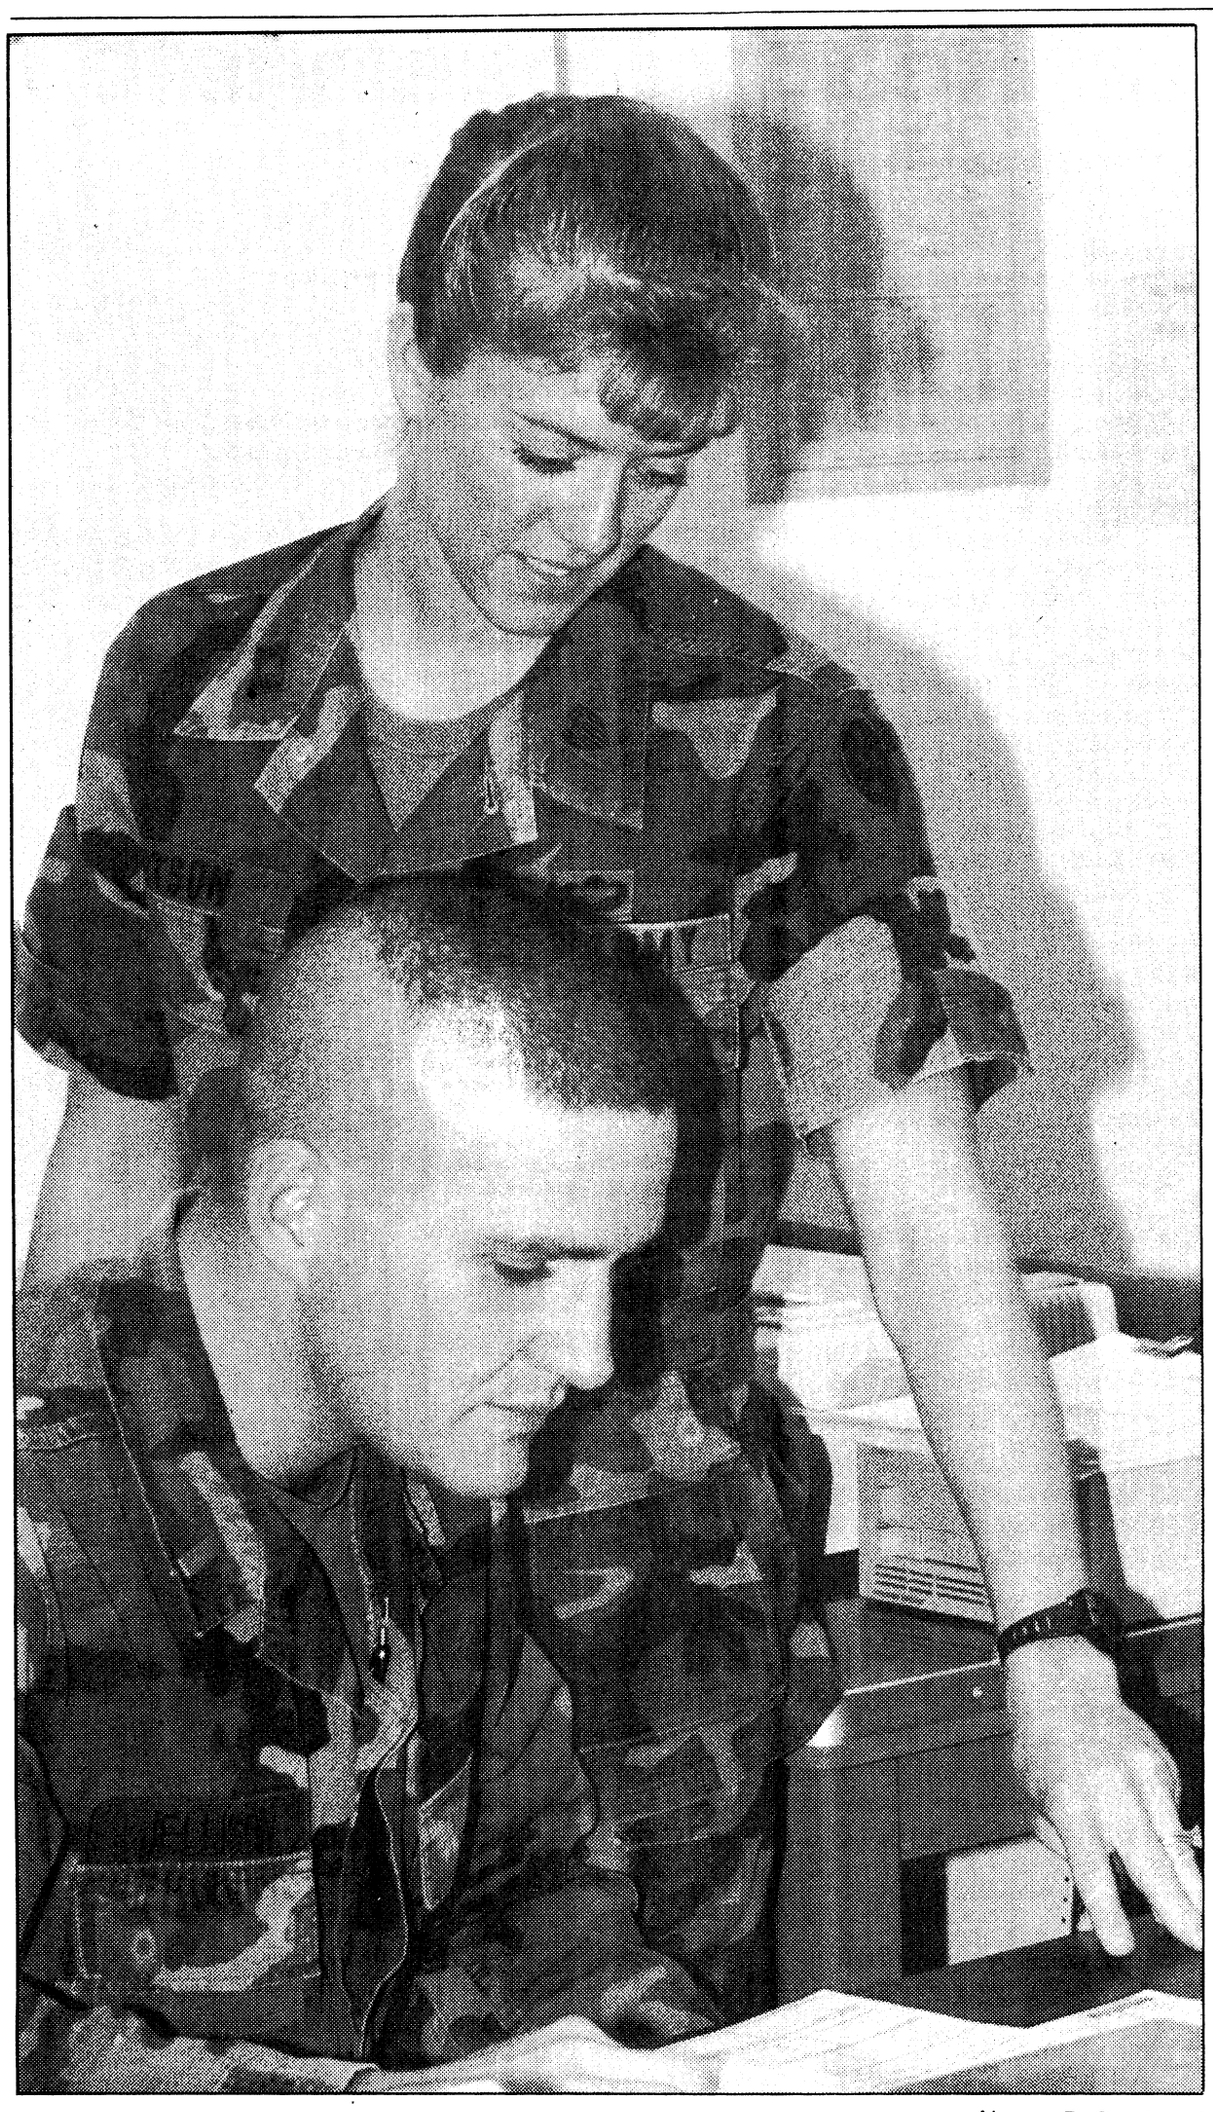
Shooters of the U.S. Army Trap Team had their hands full this month with the Zone 3 International Matches March 15 to 17 at Hook Range, and the Benito Juarez World Cup Championships in Mexico City, Mexico, March 14 to 16.

For the Zone 3 matches, the shooters had to compete under cool, rainy condition; while the World Cup shooters dealt with warm temperatures as high as 85 degrees.

The Army Marksmanship Unit soldiers dominated Zone 3, taking all three top spots.

Winning the Zone 3 was Sgt. Bret E. Erickson with a 185. Placing second was Spc. Todd Graves with a 182; and Spc. Richard Shrode came in third with a 175.

In the world cup event, the team didn't dominate the competition as easy.



Pfc. Jay Waldron shot his way up to fourth place with a combined score of 217. This was the highest spot a USAMU shooter took during the worldwide competition.

Spc. William Roberts tackled a 21st place spot with a 186; and Pfc. Daro Handy was the only junior shooter to compete.

Women

What's their role in the armed forces?

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

With Operation Desert Storm at the forefront of the nation's attention, the role of women in combat, women being deployed, and women in the military altogether has surfaced once again as a major issue.

How do female soldiers feel? What do they think their role should be?

At Fort Benning, today's female soldiers are feeling good about their part in today's Army.

Female soldiers, non-commissioned officers and officers are confident in their ability to carry out missions as well as their male counterparts.

"I don't feel that the criteria to judge someone's ability should be based on sex," said Spc. Zetar Corbia, Company B, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment. "We're all soldiers here. As long as a soldier can carry out the mission, what difference does it make?"

Those who can remember the days of the Women's Army Corps denote the change of attitude regarding women in the Army.

"Having been a member of the Army for 10 years, I see the advances female soldiers have made in regard to advancement, leadership possibilities, and things of that nature," said Capt. Lillian Common of the Infantry Conference staff. "Granted, we still have some ways to go, it's encouraging that these problems are being addressed," said Common.

"The Army has been a great experience for me," said Pfc. Keri McLane of Co. B, 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. "I've gained confidence in the fact that I can do everything a male soldier in my military occupational specialty. I really enjoy being in the Army," said McLane.

As for the question for women in combat, the feelings are mixed.

Capt. Deborah Hollis, an air defense artillery officer has experienced much success in what is not a traditional field for women.

"I trained one of the units that was a part of the Operation Desert Storm's "Scud-busting" Patriot missile team. I would have loved to have commanded them during the conflict," said Hollis. "And to other females that are considering a non-traditional field, I say go for it and do the best you can," said Hollis.

Staff Sgt. B.J. Craig-Davis feels differently.

"No, I don't feel that women need to be involved in front-line combat operations," said Craig-Davis. "It's just not the place for women. We can serve more efficiently in the rear in support roles," said Craig-Davis.

Staff Sgt. Laura Fludd, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt., said she feels optimistic about women's future in the Army. "I think we will continue to advance, to take on more leadership roles, and to play a major role in today's Army," Fludd said.

Army releases Individual Ready Reservists

Army News Service

All Individual Ready Reserve soldiers will be released as expeditiously as possible with the exception of those individuals who have been identified by commanders as being mission essential.

According to Lt. Col. Alan Sepe, Office of the Chief, Army Reserve, the IRR soldiers will be released as quickly as possible.

Release from active duty entails out-processing from the active component and returning to a reserve component status.

Here are some questions and answers:

Q. How will Individual Ready Reservists be released from active duty?

A. In some cases,IRR soldiers deployed to U.S. Army Europe and southwest Asia will return either with their assigned unit to a demobilization station, or to the home installation.

Q. What does out-processing consist of?

A. Out-processing is the correction and adjustment of all records prior to release from active service. Out-processing includes such activities as return of government equipment, paying the soldier, updating the soldier's personnel, medical, dental and all other records.

Q. How are deployed IRR soldiers released?

A. IRR soldiers who are no longer mission essential, will be transported back to a designated U.S. transition point. After out-processing from the transition point, the IRR soldier will be provided transportation home.

Q. How are stateside IRR soldiers released from active duty?

A. The appropriate command processes and releases individuals from active service as they are no longer needed. Each installation provides transportation arrangements for individuals to return to their home of record.

Q. How long will it take IRR soldiers to out-process and return home?

A. Out-processing can take up to five days, but the goal is to process IRR soldiers in much less time. Transportation time to the home of record varies with distance and means of travel, but is expected to take no more than three days.

Q. Can the IRR soldier volunteer to continue on active duty beyond the involuntary call to active duty? What is the impact on their civilian employment.

A. A soldier may volunteer to continue on active duty., If there is a need in the soldiers's military specialty and grade, the soldier may be extended on active duty beyond their involuntary call up period. The soldier continues to be covered by the veterans reemployment rights act. The act does not differentiate between whether the soldier was voluntarily or involuntarily ordered to active duty.

Q. Will IRR soldiers be permitted to take leave during out-processing?

A. No. Ordinary leave will not be authorized during out-processing. Exceptions to this policy, including emergency leave will be granted on a case by case basis by the out-processing station commander.

Final payment at the end of out-processing will include the option to receive payment for any accrued leave, or to take terminal leave.

Q. If any current period of active duty and my previous period of active duty exceed 18 years, am I required to be released from active duty?

A. No. IRR soldiers whose current period of active duty when combined with previous active duty will exceed 18 years of Armed Forces Services may not be involuntarily released from active duty unless the release is approved by the Secretary of the Army. Individuals who fall into this category must be identified immediately for appropriate actions.

Q. Am I required to have a physical examination before being released from active duty?

A. All RC soldiers supporting Operation Desert Storm will undergo a physical examination prior to release from active duty.

Q. As an IRR soldier, am I required to undergo a dental examination prior to release from active duty?

A. All IRR soldiers being released form Operation Desert Storm will undergo dental exams and receive the necessary dental work to bring the individual's records up to satisfactory condition.

Q. Will someone be at the transition point to counsel me on my medical requirements and benefits and my reemployment rights?

A. RC soldiers will be instructed on how to report and receive treatment for any military related illnesses, symptoms associated with endemic diseases with long incubation periods, and the limitations of individual and family medical and dental benefits following separation. RC soldiers will also be briefed on their reemployment rights at the transition point.

Q. If a soldier is injured or ill during redeployment and out-processing where will he be treated?

A. Soldiers injured or ill during redeployment and out-processing will be treated at the appropriate medical facility and then continue to redeploy and out-process.

Q. What do IRR soldiers do if they are hospitalized or still under medical treatment when their active duty ends?

A. Soldiers who are hospitalized or still under medical treatment when their active duty ends may request to remain on active duty by extending their orders beyond current expiration date.

Extension of active duty status is not automatic. Soldiers must request an extension before the initial orders expire.

Soldiers receiving medical care at government expense are in a patient status following termination of their active duty orders. Patient status is not active duty. Requests require an investigation proving that the illness or injury occurred while the soldier was on active duty. Additionally, veterans administration medical care is available for service-connected injuries.

Q. Can the Army extend an IRR soldier on active duty if he has UCMJ action pending?

A. Yes. Further, if an offense committed by an IRR soldier while on active duty is discovered after the soldier is released from active duty, the IRR soldier can be recalled to active duty if deemed appropriate by the IRR soldier's unit when he was on active duty.

Q. Will IRR soldiers be able to get their jobs back after having been gone for so long?

A. The Veterans' Reemployment Rights Law (38 U.S. Code Sections 2021-2026) protects the reserve component soldier from discharge from employment because of their military obligations.

Reserve component soldiers must be allowed to return to their employment without loss of rate of pay, status or seniority provided that the employment prior to call to active duty was not temporary, and that the soldier's service was characterized as "under honorable conditions."

The national committee for employer support of the Guard and the Reserve will assist, and can be reached at 1 (800) 336-4590. Reserve component soldiers will be briefed on their re-employment rights prior to leaving the transition point.

Q. How does the Army retrieve the active identification card from IRR soldiers who were called to active duty?

A. The identification card will be turned in as the soldier out-processes. In exchange for the active identification card, the reservist will be issued the reserve identification card.

Q. After an IRR soldier departs active duty, will CHAMPUS pay a family member claim incurred while the soldier was on active duty?

A. If treatment was rendered during the period of active duty and if the family member was enrolled on the sponsor's file, the CHAMPUS will honor the claim.

Q. Who can I call to ask a question?

A. Army Reserve families can call (800) 874-8451 for information

For information on military coverage call (800) 538-9552; in Hawaii/Alaska, call (800) 527-5602; in California, call (800) 334-4162.

For information on survivor benefits, call (800) 428-2290, except in Virginia, call (703) 325-9158.

Q. Where will IRR soldiers receive awards?

A. When possible, IRR soldiers will receive awards from their unit prior to redeployment. Otherwise, IRR soldiers will receive any awards due at the out-processing station.

Easter bunnies visit Benning community

Youth, adults enjoy egg hunts, barbecues and holiday fun as Easter Sunday draws closer

By Tom C. Hockaday and Cynthia Barnes
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Yes children, there really is an Easter Bunny, and he was seen on Fort Benning several times Saturday.

The children of the members of the International Wives' Club had a chance to visit with him Saturday when they were treated to an Easter egg hunt and party.

Eggs, candy, prizes and other assorted goodies were the order of the day.

"We do this every year for the children," said Olga Kelly, the club president. "The children seem to enjoy it and it gives the ones who come from other countries a chance to celebrate Easter in a fashion that they are not accustomed to. Some countries like Korea and Panama don't celebrate Easter like we do here in America," Kelly said.

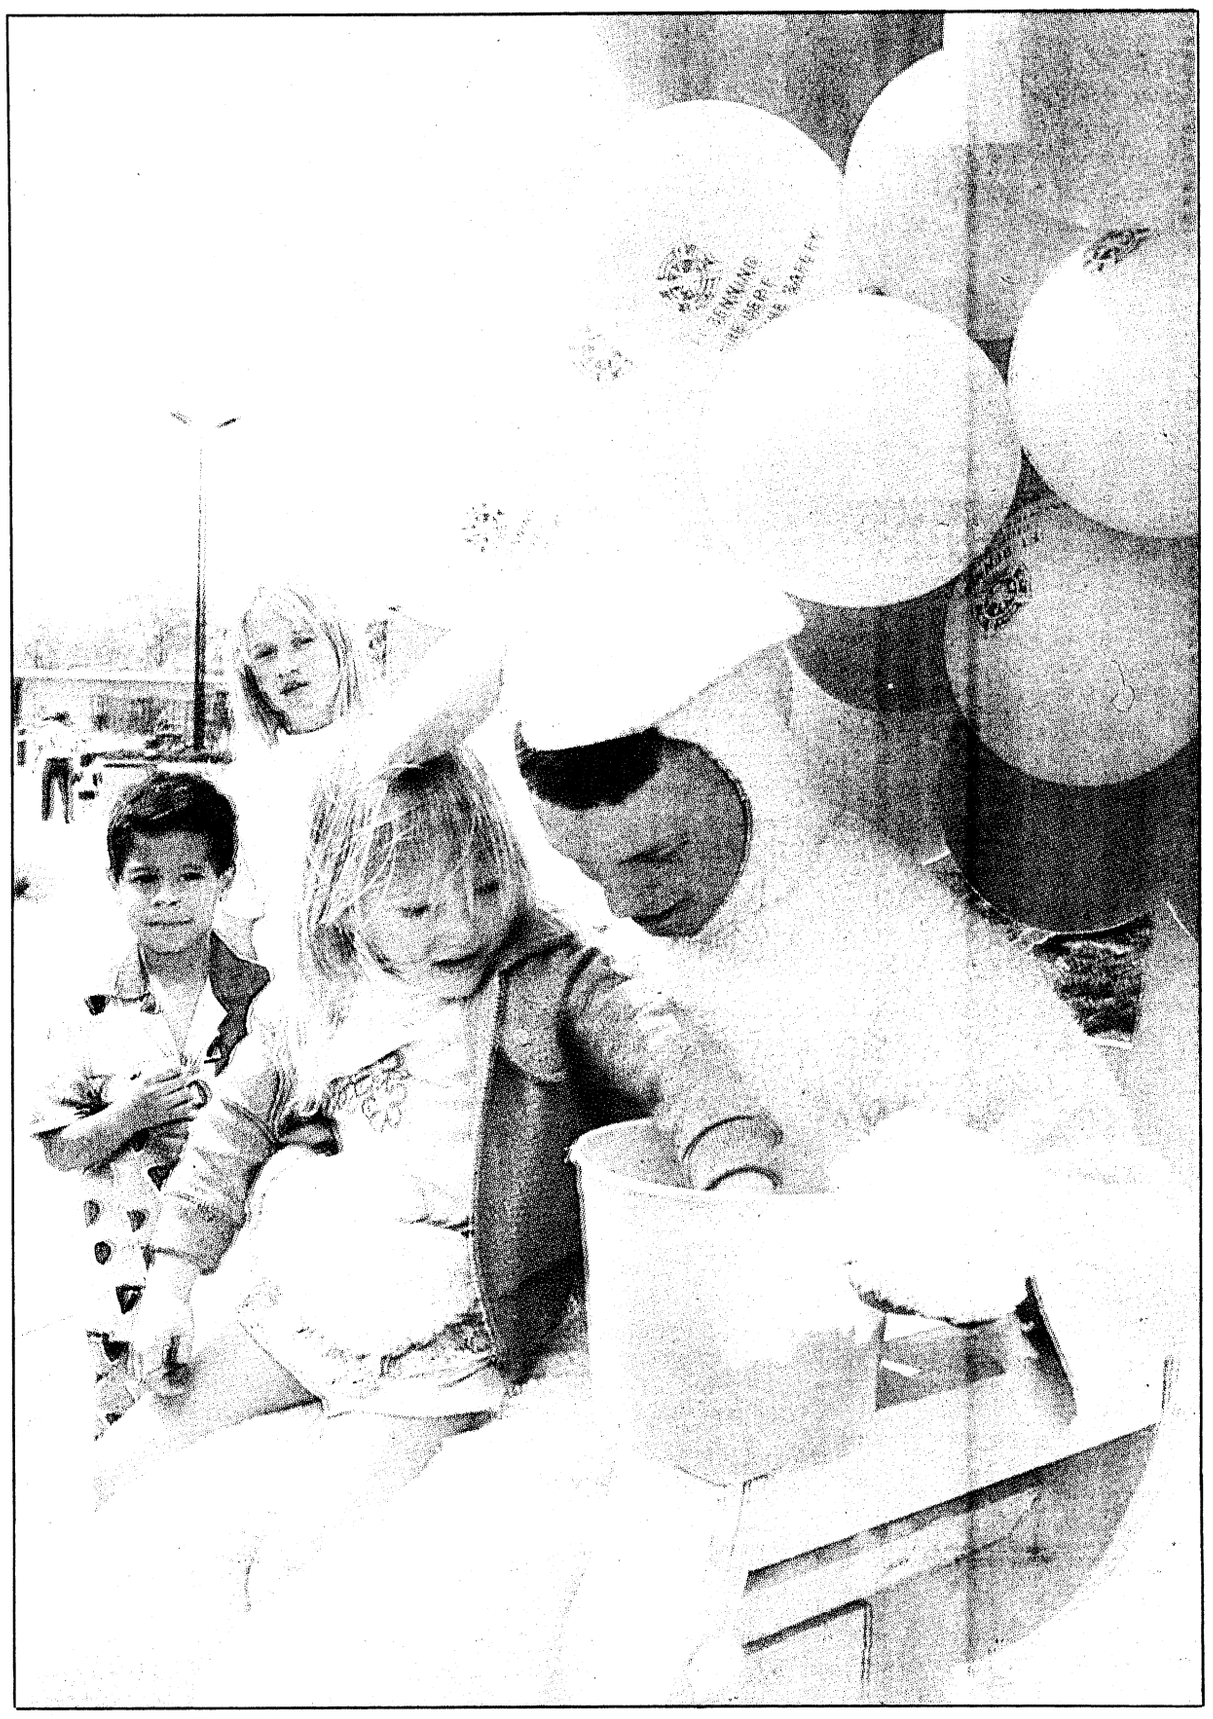
After the children had found all of the eggs, they were taken into the club house for hotdogs, cake, beverages, candies and drawings for prizes.

"The wives always go all out for the children," Kelly stated, "and this year was no exception."

Two other bunnies and an Easter duck made an appearance throughout post riding on one of the post's fire engines. The group of holiday animals traveled from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. through five family housing areas throwing Easter goodies to all of the children who gathered around.

The event was made possible by the participation of family housing mayors, the Fort Benning Fire Department, the Military Police, the Commissary, the Main Exchange, Springer Theatre, Winn Dixie, Arcco, Wal-Mart, Family Mart and Ranger Joe's.

Youth Services also had a visit from the Easter Bunny while sponsoring two egg hunts Saturday. Volunteers hid eggs in French Field for younger children at 10 a.m. and then set out more eggs in front of the Youth Activities Center for the 9 to 12-year-olds at 11 a.m. The bunny was on the scene to pass out candy.



The 586th Engineer Group turned their visit of the Easter Bunny into an all-day event with something for everybody to include games like the balloon toss for the children, a softball game for the adults and a barbecue cookout for everyone.

SPORTS

Army retains top spot, wins wrestling championship

By James C. Rupp
Bayonet staff writer

The annual Armed Forces Wrestling Championships have drawn to a close once again, and once again the Army holds the championship title.

The championships, held March 21 and Saturday at Briant Wells Field House, were a special victory this year to the Army team and their coach, Sgt. 1st Class Anthony Thomas.

This year's team, according to Thomas, was not as strong as previous teams he has seen. He accredits this to the massive deployment of troops to the Persian Gulf for Operation Desert Shield. The deployments resulted in a majority of the more-experienced wrestlers not being able to attend and instead the team was forced to rely on younger, less experienced wrestlers.

The victory of the Army team surprised more than a few observers and participants, and according to Spc. Rodney Smith, third place finisher in both Greco- Roman and freestyle events and a returning member of last year's champion team, "I guess it gets sweeter each year.

"The first year nobody expected us to do it, but this year it was the same thing, because we had a lot of guys over in Saudi Arabia.

"The guys that we had really dug deep, because they knew the sacrifice that others are making over there in Saudi, and we had to make a sacrifice here and do the best with what we had," Smith said.

This tournament was a reflection on the caliber of athletes present in today's military.

Floyd Winter, former All-Army Wrestling coach, said "The Armed Forces Wrestling Championship has always been a great tournament. The competitors are all world-class professional athletes competing against one another, and there's a great rivalry between the services.

"We also have the best officials here in the United States," Winter went on to say of the referees, a few of which have officiated in the Olympic tournaments, "so all of that makes for a great tournament. Some of these wrestlers will also be going on to the Olympic trials and national and world, championships."

Thomas himself expressed his feelings on his team's second title. "It feels good. It feels real good, the young guys pulled through for us real well. They showed a lot of heart and they've got something to show for it."

The place winners in each event for both days are listed below.

Improper hooking, playing can lose bass

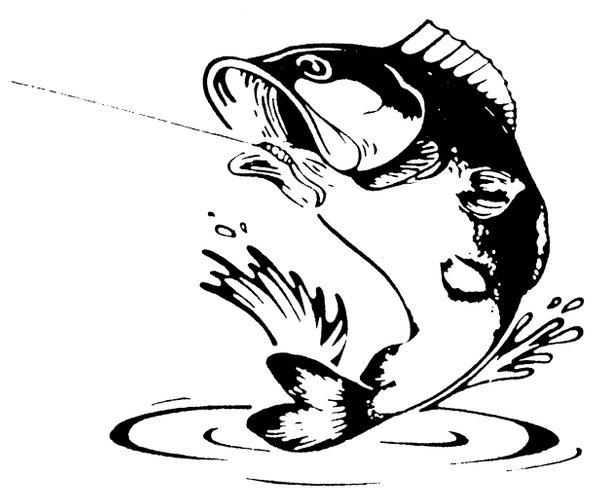
By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

Some things never seem to change, according to bass pro Larry Nixon.

Such as improperly setting a hook and then mis-playing a bass. These are the two most common mistakes Nixon sees in fishing, and he watches them in virtually every tournament he enters.

"One of the main reasons is because many bass fishermen have changed to lighter rods and lines because the equipment is more versatile and catches more fish," explained the Evinrude Outdoors Pro Staff member, "but they have not adjusted to the different techniques the lighter tackle requires.

"In the past, we used much heavier rods and lines and simply overpowered bass. With the lighter tackle, you have to finesse the bass much more."



Hook-setting must be matched to the lure being used, Nixon advises. Single hook lures like spinnerbaits can be set hard because the lure is usually moving rapidly when the bass strikes and the fish often hooks itself. The same is true with crankbaits.

"When you set the hook with these lures, all you really need to do is pivot your body, bring the rod back with you at waist level, and keep reeling," he explained.

Although a jig is a single hook lure, it requires a slightly different hook set because of its design and because it is usually moving very slowly when a bass bites.

"I use a sweep-set with a jig," said the Evinrude pro, "and I never stop reeling. You don't jerk the rod or snap your wrists suddenly because you'll pull the jig right out of its mouth. Just start reeling when you feel any pressure and sweep the rod back in one smooth motion."

Once a bass has been hooked, Nixon advises holding the rod low to try to keep the bass from jumping or even rolling on the surface. When bass jump, they often throw a lure free, and if they roll on the surface they can break line.

"Use your rod to bring the bass close to the boat where you have more control over it," explained Nixon, "then simply guide it from side to side to tire it. Keep your rod tip low so the fish doesn't jump, and when the fish does tire, reach down and land it by hand."

Many anglers, Nixon included, often swing bass on board, and there is a proper technique for this, as well.

"Let the bass swim out with six or seven feet of line," he says, "then apply pressure so the fish has to turn and begin swimming back toward the boat. When it's coming to you, simply lift your rod and swing the bass on board. Keep your motion as smooth as possible, and let the momentum of the fish itself help you."

Students show their support at Faith family night

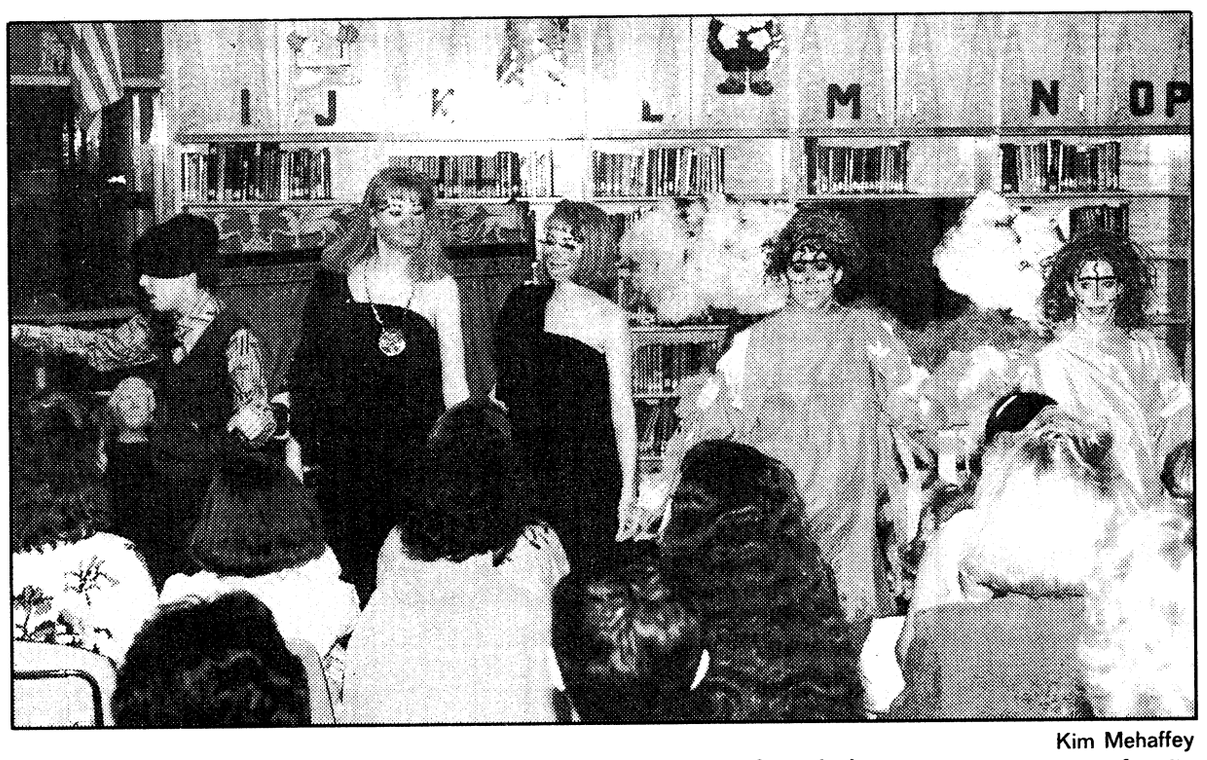
Fort Benning Schools

It was an evening of fun, food, music and games when Faith School held its annual Family Night Supper on March 14. There was a feeling of excitement and togetherness as Faith honored its families and the return of its soldiers with a family supper reminiscent of small town school meetings.

There was plenty of food and fellowhip. Betty Hardy, Faith School's cafeteria manager, said she stopped counting after serving 800 hotdogs, and Olin Harp, principal, and David Murray, assistant principal, poured soft drinks as fast as they could for an hour and a half. The 283rd Army Band Jazz Combo performed, to make the cheerful atmosphere in the cafeteria complete.

The school was open to everyone. The students had decorated their classroom doors displaying their pride in the soldiers and their joy in the end of the war; so there was red, white and blue everywhere. Students showed their families around and participated in the various activities provided by the school. Col. Joseph Trez, Fort Benning Schools' School Board President and Faith parent, said how great it was to have so many families in attendance. "I'm proud of the showing, considering we have so many troops still in Saudi. The families felt it was important to do things to pull them together, and everybody seemed pleased with the evening."

The media center was open for families to enjoy, the Odyssey of the Mind team performed their award-winning problem-solving skit twice to large audiences. Families also had a chance to view the award-winning art on display from Faith School students.



Many family night participants spent the evening adorned in a variety of "tatoos" that were painted by several of the eighth grade art students.

The Physical Education department had volleyball, basketball, table tennis, chess and checkers set up in the gym. Families stayed busy in the gym throughout the whole evening.

In the computer room, each computer station stayed busy with students explaining and showing parents how to use the many software programs, used during the school day.

The Faith Chorus also performed for the families with a moving rendition of "American Salute" and "We Go Together."

The evening was an event that will be remembered for a long time. In fact, Richard Skinner, Fort Benning Schools' Assistant Superintendent for Logistics, summed it up when he said, "This is one of the best family nights I've seen during my thirty years of working in schools."

Desert Storm reunites former classmates

By J. Jan Hoffman
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Desert Storm has had an effect on many lives. It has brought families together. It has brought friends together.

This is the story of two such people.

In 1966, Willie Alexander and Larry Pratt met at the Field Artillery and Missile Officer Basic Course at Fort Sill, Oklahoma. The two of them became fast friends. They did a lot together — studying, working, and socializing. Six months later they went their separate ways.

Alexander was assigned as a Training Officer at Fort McClellan, Alabama. Pratt stayed at Fort Sill as a battery commander.

In 1971, they were reunited when Alexander returned to Fort Sill and the two of them attended the FA Advanced Course. They also renewed their friendship.

Again Pratt stayed at Fort Sill and Alexander returned to Alabama. He joined the Alabama National Guard and attended school at Alabama State University in Montgomery.

Pratt remained in the Army until 1973, when he joined the Georgia National Guard and went to law school at the University of Georgia in Athens.

Since 1971, the two of them have not communicated with each other. Then Desert Shield/Storm brought them to Fort Benning last February.

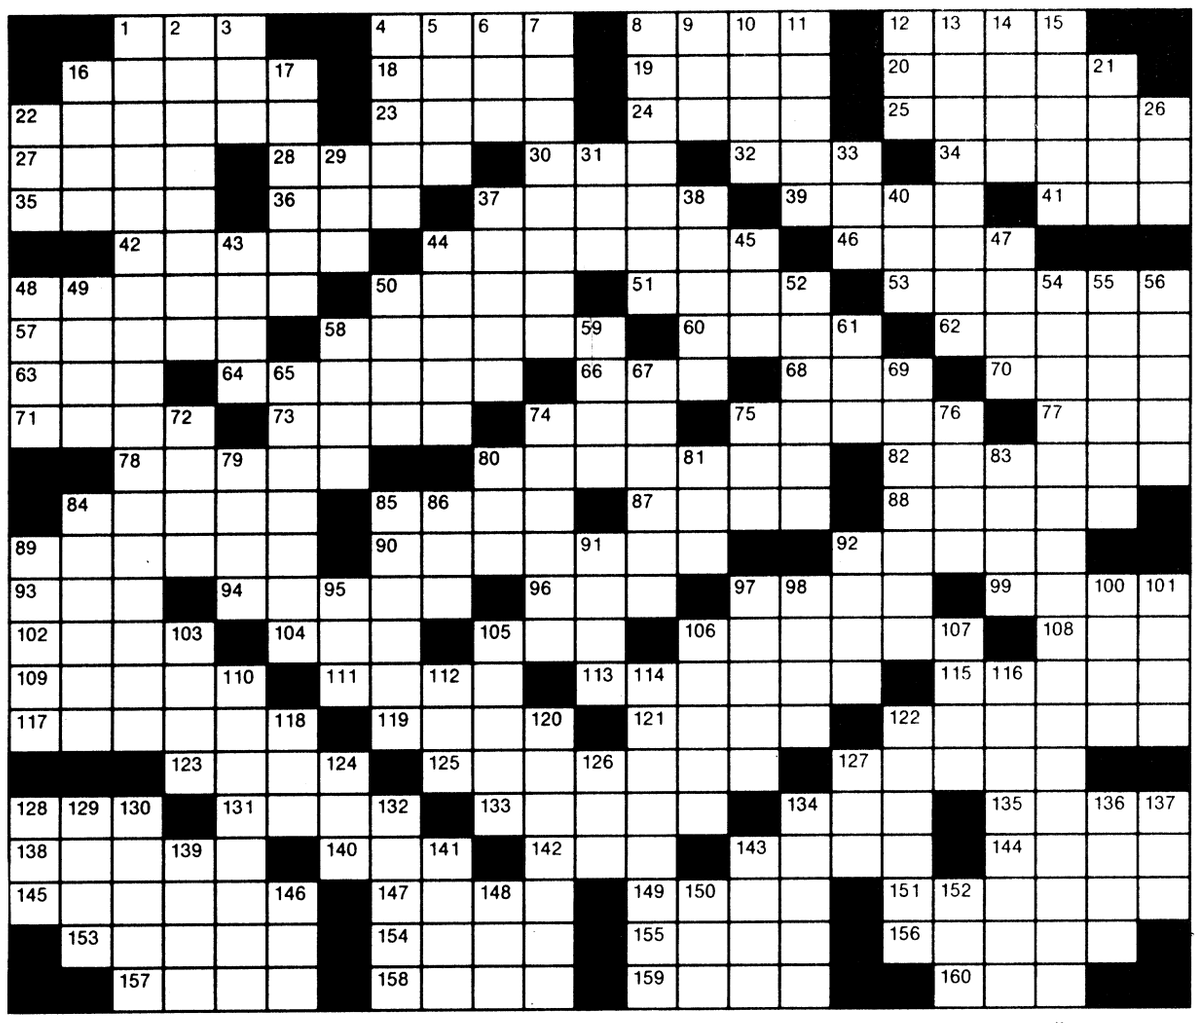
The day after they arrived at the CONUS Replacement Center (CRC), Pratt, now in the Maryland National Guard, asked a fellow officer, "Who is that tall guy? I think I know him." Pratt was told Alexander's name and that began the discovery of some strange facts.

Both Alexander and Pratt are lieutenant colonels. Pratt has a daughter who is a premed student at Spelman College in Atlanta. Alexander lives in the Atlanta area and has a daughter attending medical school at Emory University. She previously attended Howard University in Washington, D.C. Pratt lives in the D.C. area.

Alexander has been to the D.C. area many times to visit his daughter. Pratt has made several trips to Atlanta to visit his daughter. Neither knew just how close they were to each other.

Alexander is the Executive Officer of the 31st Support Group in Montgomery. Pratt is the Education Officer for the Maryland National Guard in Baltimore.

Alexander is a Senior Internal Auditor for AT&T in Atlanta, while Pratt has a private law practice in the tri-state D.C. area. After arriving at Fort Benning, Pratt learned of his appointment as a District of Columbia Corporate Counsel, which is equivalent to a judgeship.



Alexander and his wife, Irmogene, have three children. Pratt and his wife, Clarelle, have five children.

According to Alexander, "We are really excited about seeing each other again. Its been great fun reliving the past 20 years. My wife and I are looking forward to visiting with Larry and his family in Washington."

Since finding each other after 20 years, the two have spent most of their free time together while awaiting further orders. They have been to Alexander's home several times and plans are being made for a visit in the Washington area when time and Army assignments permit.

Benning propane plant passes test, makes grade

By Jon R. Anderson
USAIC Public Affairs Office

With the winter months past, Fort Benning's propane peak shaving plant has proven itself a valuable asset in economic effeciency.

Built in the 1950s, the plant was originally designed as an emergency back up system in the event of a natural gas line rupture. Recently, however, the plant has grown into a much more important role.

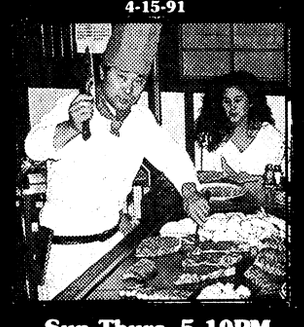
Because natural gas provides Fort Benning with heating and hot water, it is very important that not only is there a constant supply, but that it is purchased in the most cost-effective way, said Directorate of Engineering and Housing officals.

Since the propane peak shaving plant has come on line, Fort Benning has saved well over $128,000 and it is projected that more than half a million dollars will be saved by years end. This was made possible because DEH was allowed to incorporate the plant in the yearly analysis of the post's daily demand for natural gas.

Each year, DEH must provide its supplier, United Cities Gas Company, with a rate of how much natural gas it is going to need on a daily basis. This rate is called the firm demand and is guaranteed to the post. DEH attempts to set this rate as low as possible because all gas purchased above it is done so at a much lower cost.

DEH can't just set the firm demand at zero and buy all of it's gas at the the reduced rate because of what is known as penalty gas. According to Mark Fincher of DEH, penalty gas "comes into play when the local gas company has notified Fort Benning to hold their consumption within the firm quantity."

This curtailment is usually the result of severe cold weather and occurs only a few times a year. The penalty gas that is purchased, however, must be kept to an absolute minimum, because it costs approximately eight times as much as the firm gas.



With the propane plant operating as an active participant in the overall supply system, (as opposed to being used only in times of extreme emergency) the post can reduce its use of penalty gas to almost nothing.

More importantly, its purchase of the reduced price gas is optimized, because the post's daily rate can now be lowered without running the risk of being forced to use penalty gas during winter months.

Before the plant went into operation in December of last year, Fort Benning's firm demand had to be rated at 55,000 CCF (hundred cubic feet) of natural gas per day, because it had to be guarenteed it would have ample supply during colder periods. Now with the plant in operation, it can reduce its firm demand to 37,000 CCF per day. According to Fincher, the rate has not been so low since the 1940s.This winter the plant was put to the test. After careful reorganization and centralization of the plant by operators Glen Todd, Mickey Livingston and Tony Riles throughout last year, Fort Benning was asked to curtail twice. According to Fincher, both times the plant "passed with flying colors," saying that he believed the rate could even be lowered again next year.

Reunions are a time for joy, stress

By Debra Galle
USAIC Chaplain's Office

Yellow ribbons wrap nearly every tree on Fort Benning. After the celebrations, families will return to normal, daily living, and the reunion will be complete.

Many programs are designed to help families through any problems in adjusting to the major changes in their lives.

Some of the tips on homecoming, as defined by a unit ministry team handbook are:

Agree on plans for homecoming day and the next few days or weeks. Where do the children fit in?

Realize the day of homecoming is very stressful. Returning spouses have had little sleep and lots of food.

Perhaps you haven't slept a great deal or feel worn out preparing for homecoming. Children are excited and tend to act up.

Acceptance and discussion of physical, attitudinal, mental, emotional changes.

Plan time as a couple and as a family with the children. Communicate about events during the deployment.

Re-read letters or discuss questions about the deployment and home life. Give each other time and space to adjust to one another.

Respect each other and the job each did. Avoid the "I had it worse" game. Make time to rest.

Negotiate number of social events to attend.

Assess how you handled the deployment: what went well and what you want to change the next time. Explain new rules or changed in family's schedule.

How will the children act with their parent returning? Many parents worry about this. The main feelings of children during and after a long separation from a parent are worry, fear, guilt, happiness, excitement, anger.

Parents dream of their babies or preschoolers shouting "daddy, daddy" or "mommy, mommy" and running down the pier or across the deck into their parent's arms.

This dream may not happen. If you imagine a "perfect" reunion for your child, you may be disappointed.

Separation from a parent is stressful for a child. During the early part of the deployment, your children might have acted out this stress by behaving in ways that you found difficult or worrisome.

After 8 to 10 weeks into the deployment, your children should have started returning into more normal behaviors for them.

Family life should have calmed down, and children should have adapted to a parent being gone.

Now when a parent returns to the family, all the members will have to adjust to new interactions.

This adaptation, or change, can be very stressful for a family, especially for the children.

Families are always changing, and how parents and children interact with one another should change as the members grow. Everyone will have changed physically, emotionally and socially.

Parenting class set

A special class offered by the Chaplains' Family Life Center begins April 18 and focuses on discipline without shouting or spanking for preschoolers.

According to studies, the highest risk of child abuse is within two weeks of the return of the soldier.

Here are some reasons for not spanking children:

- Breeds hostility and anger.
- Leads to revenge and retaliation.
- Doesn't stop the unwanted behavior.
- Creates new problems, as now the child is angry.
- It is a violation of the child's rights. If the same action was taken against an adult, you could be charged with assault and battery.
- It fails to teach appropriate behavior.
- It leads to fear and avoidance. The child becomes sneaky.
- The child wants to strike back.
- As the child grows older, the spanking must become more severe.
- You become a model for aggression.
- The spanking doesn't stop when the lesson is learned; it stops when the spanker is tired.
- If more than one child is involved, the innocent one may be spanked.
- Child may "opt" to take spanking and risk getting caught if the only reason for behaving is to escape punishment.
- Can lead to child abuse.

Classes in effective parenting will be April 18, 25 and May 2 and 9 from noon to 1:30 p.m. Call 545-5301 or 545-1760 to register.

Reservist leads sunrise service

By Debra Galle
USAIC Chaplains Office

Sunrise services hold special meanings for many, and the Field of Four Chaplains will again be the meeting place for hundreds this Easter.

Speaking at the 7 a.m. service will be Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Paul Cassibry.

Cassibry has the unique distinction of being called to active duty from retirement. He was in the Army for 20 years and has been in the reserves for the past five.

Before being called back to active duty, Cassibry was settled into a job as a high school counselor in Clinton, Miss.

His topic Sunday will refer to our personal relationship with God. People need to remember that their personal relationship with God is what makes the difference in life.

Chap. Paul Cassibry

"It is not the things of the world, the tangible things that we have," according to Cassibry's sermon.

His assignments include three tours of duty including Vietnam and Korea.

Cassibry was born in Whistler, Ala., and is an ordained minister of the Southern Baptist Convention.

The Easter Sunrise Service has been an annual Fort Benning event for many years. Music will be provided by the 283rd U.S. Army Band and Brenda Pace.

Baby-sitting will be provided in the chapel annex. Refreshments will be served on the annex patio following the service.

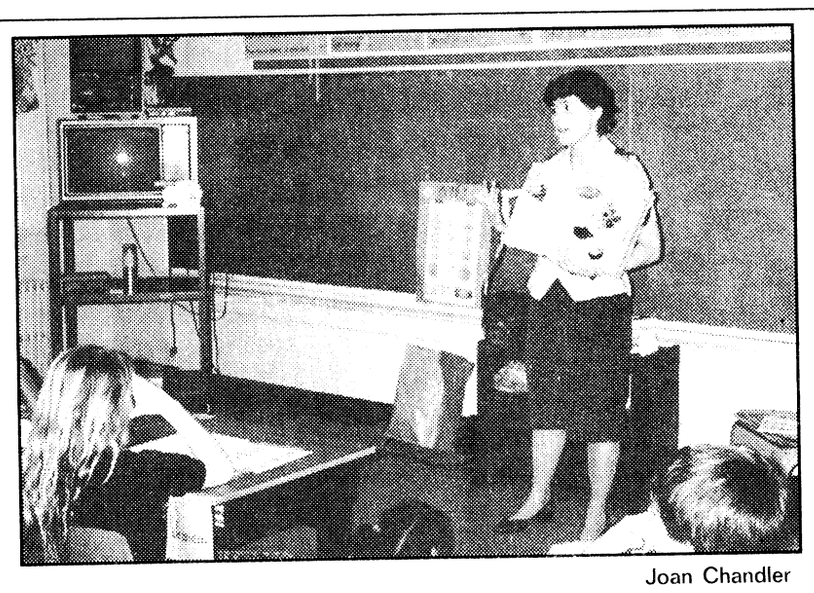
Nutrition's in order at Wilbur School



Fort Benning Schools

The celebration of National Nutrition Month took place at Wilbur School as third graders met with 2nd Lt. Karen Schultz and Raette Schafer of the Nutrition Care Division of Martin Army Community Hospital. The third graders considered the types of snacks that they eat, and made posters about those snacks. The posters were then displayed at the MEDDAC Health Fair at the Main Post Exchange Mall.

Schultz stated that most adults were brought up believing that snacks spoil appetites and pile on unnecessary calories. However, as children go through their busy days, they may not be able to get all the necessary nutrients in just three meals. Healthful snacks can provide the extra nutrition for active, growing bodies, said Schultz.

During the visit to Wilbur School, the Martin Army dietitians brought several recipes for healthy snakes that students could take home to either prepare for themselves or to show to their parents. Some of the items suggested were:

- Toasted rice or popcorn cakes with peanut butter.
- English muffin with tomato sauce and cheese melted on top.
- Apple and cheese wedge.
- Bagel with strawberry cream cheese.

Joan Chandler

2nd Lt. Karen Schultz discusses healthy snack alternatives with third graders at Wilbur School.

"They taught us we could make snacks without adding things that are bad for us like butter and salt," said third grader, Reggie Waldroup. "They made popcorn for us by adding sugar and cinammon, and it was good and good for us."

Protein dangerous, harmful in high doses

By Karen Schultz and Elizabeth Charles
Martin Army Community Hospital

You are trying to increase your muscle mass and your friend told you about the protein supplements. Will they help? Probably not.

Since our muscles are made of protein, it would seem that extra protein would help to make them stronger. The truth is that most Americans, including athletes, eat almost twice the amount of protein they need daily. Excess protein will not enlarge your biceps and it may actually contribute to unwanted bulges. Any extra calories you eat, whether they come from protein, carbohydrates, fat or alcohol, will be stored as fat. Also, muscle tissue will not increase in strength unless it is exercised.

Protein supplements come in many forms, usually as powders or pills. They may be a complete protein or a single amino acid, a building block of protein. Usually they are high cost items, much higher in cost than dietary sources such as eggs, milk or meat.

High doses of protein supplements may not only affect your pocket book, but may also lead to side effects such as dehydration, gout or kidney damage. They may even cause drainage of calcium from your bones. Also, your body's natural balance of amino acids may be disturbed because single amino acid supplementation can interfere with the absorption of other amino acids.

If you are trying to imporve your athletic performance, increase strength or just feel better, protein supplements will not help and may actually hinder your health. It is better to eat a well balanced diet which includes lean meats, low-fat dairy products, eggs, legumes and nuts or seeds and to incorporate exercise into your routine.

Crime prevention — everyone's business

Military Police Activity

Each member of the Fort Benning community help is needed to enhance the installation's crime prevention program. Currently, there are more incidents of damage to private and government property in the housing areas this fiscal year as compared to the same period last year.

In order to turn this trend around widespread community action and individual involvement is needed now. The residents of Fort Benning can take steps to prevent crime in their homes and neighborhoods.

The most important step is for all residents, soldiers and family members to report suspicious activity or suspicious strangers to the military police desk sergeant immediately at 545-5222.

If a crime is observed in progress or one may be imminent, call the "MP Crime in Progress" number at 545-2222.

Everyone must become actively involved and interested in the community's welfare if it is to truly be a safe place to live.

Military people are often relocated to new and different installations. As new residents, frequently new neighbors are met. We should each make a positive effort to establish supportive relationships with our neighbors and get involved in community life.

Remember — it pays to be a good neighbor. If you have ideas or simply want to discuss a crime conductive condition in your neighborhood, contact the Crime Prevention Section, Military Police Activity, at 545-7154 or 545-1146.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Michael H. Lane
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q. My husband and I have been married for 30 years, and own our home outright. Our children are grown and living independently, and the only real assets we have are the house and insurance, along with some savings for emergencies. If something should happen to one of us, we want to minimize expense and paperwork for the survivor. We have heard that if our house is owned by both of us, we can avoid probate and save money. Is this true? Can your office help?

A. You will need a personal interview with a Legal Assistance Attorney to address your specific situation, because each family's needs are unique. However, I can furnish you some guidance. The first step in my discussion of planning to simplify your affairs is the preparation of a will for both you and your spouse. If you want your spouse to be your sole beneficiary, a will formally records your wishes concerning the disposition of your property. It is very difficult to challenge if properly drawn.

Assuming that you have prepared a will leaving your property to your spouse, we would then consider your life insurance policies. A contract of insurance naming your spouse or any other person (except yourself) as beneficiary is not within the jurisdiction of the probate court, and passes directly to the named beneficiary. It avoids probate and provides the surviving spouse with funds needed to pay outstanding debts, and financial security.

Personal property such as household goods clothing is presumed to belong to both spouses. Where personal property is titled, such as in the case of automobiles, state laws generally make it possible to transfer title to the surviving spouse without a formal probate. Bank accounts held in the names of both spouses automatically go to the survivor. Planning in this area might involve joint titling of automobiles and bank accounts.

Once these matters are considered you are ready to consider the disposition of your home. If you desire to pass immediate title to real estate to the surviving spouse without involving probate, you and your spouse may do so by holding title as Joint Tenants with Right of Survivorship. In this joint tenancy each party owns an interest in the entire property, and the survivor automatically becomes the owner of the entire property without the necessity for further legal action. The deed specifically states recites that it is the intention of the parties that this immediate, full legal ownership will occur upon the death of the other party. If it is appropriate, the Legal Assistance Office can prepare such deeds for you and your spouse, which you can record at modest cost in the Office of the Clerk of the Superior Court where your property is located.

To discuss this or other legal problems with an attorney, you may contact the Legal Assistance Office at (404) 545-3281 for an appointment to discuss your specific situation. The office is located in building 5, and hours of operation are from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

TIME CHANGES

Don't forget time springs forward. Clocks should be set ahead one hour 2 a.m. Sunday.

THE BAYONET

Home of the Infantry

Benning community welcomes heroes

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

As of Monday, 4,065 Fort Benning soldiers returned home from their participation in Operation Desert Storm, according to post officials.

The soldiers returned home on 12 flights altogether, the first fight returning the evening of March 28. The returning units included members of the 197th Infantry Brigade, 215th Finance Support Unit and 36th Engineer Group.

A hero's welcome greeted the first wave of soldiers upon their return to Fort Benning from Southwest Asia in support of Operations Desert Shield and Storm.

A cheering, banner-carrying, flag-waving crowd shouted greetings and sentiments as the 200 heroes disembarked the 767 airplane at 11:40 p.m.

Once off the plane, the soldiers were personally congratulated and welcomed by Post Commander Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza and 24th Infantry Division Deputy Division Commander for maneuvers Brig. Gen. Terry Scott.

The troops were quickly taken through a weapons turn-in point inside of the hangar and formed up to march to a ceremony point outside of the hangar, where loved ones and well-wishers were waiting. At one point, the crowd became impatient for their heroes to appear and began to chant, "We want the troops!"

The national anthem was played by the 283rd Army Band, and Cavezza expressed his pride to the troops in a brief speech.

Tom C. Hockaday

Sgt. Mark White of Service Battery, 4th Bn., 41st FA, 197th Inf. Bde. receives a special welcome home.

"The community of Fort Benning is proud of the outstanding job that you have done," said Cavezza. "You were told when you deployed that you were combat-ready and you were. You were told that if you have to go and fight you would kick their rear ends and you did," said Cavezza.

The enthusiasm of the crowd threatened to express itself in an unruly manner as the family members strained impatiently under the restraints of the military police barriers.

Then, all ceremony was over and the real homecoming began.

"I'm just so relieved that the entire ordeal is finally over," said one happy wife. "To have him home, and home safe is all I have been hoping and praying for over the last seven months. I can only thank God," she ended emotionally, as tears threatened to spill from her eyes.

Tom C. Hockaday

The anxious anticipation on the face of this small one portrays the emotions of the crowd as she searches the formation for that special soldier.

Post's Military Police seek information

Fort Benning's Military Police Activity is looking for information concerning an incident which happened March 22 in the vicinity of Yano Court in Bouton Heights family housing area.

At 11:15 that evening, the MPs received a call from someone who said that shots had been fired. The immediate investigation produced two witnesses who heard loud pops about that time.

An expended bullet and bullet hole were discovered by the residents of 2A Yano Court the next morning. The bullet entered the quarters from the outside and was found in a bedroom.

If anyone has any information, they are encouraged to call the MP desk sergeant at 545-5222.

AER converts loans to grants

Army News Service

Thousands of Army families will have one less bill to pay next month.

The balance owed on all Army Emergency Relief loans issued between Aug. 1, 1990 and Feb. 28, 1991 will be considered grants and will not have to be paid back, the organization's director said March 26. The change took effect Monday.

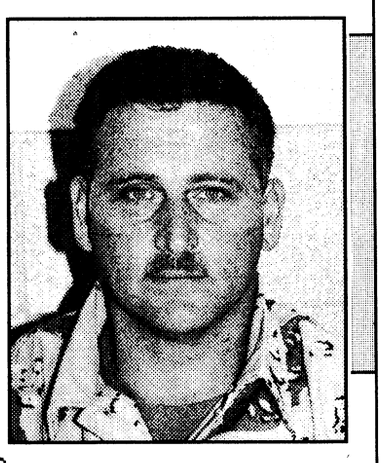
Close to 31,000 Army families received loans during the seven-month period. Each of the service members will receive letters from AER "telling them if you're paying your loan back through allotment, we will ensure the allotment is stopped," said retired Lt. Gen. Nathaniel Thompson, director of AER. "If you're sending cash, stop sending it."

Leonard Harmon, deputy director of AER, said soldiers making loan payments by allotment will have their last payment collected at the end of March. He said AER converted the loans into grants because "it was in the best interest of soldiers, their families and the Army."

Harmon said the organization could afford the move "because of contributions from the American public" and funds available in AER's contingency reserve.

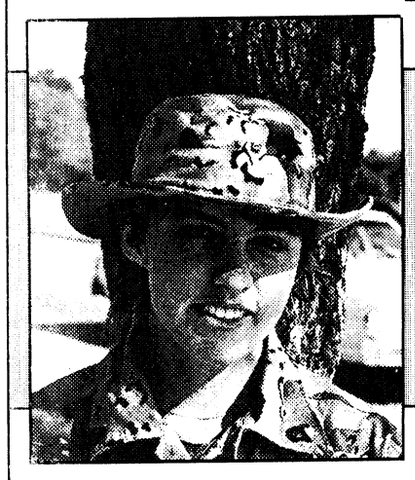
"AER's ability to convert these loan balances to grants does not mean that AER does not need soldier support during the 1991 fund campaign," said Harmon. "AER depends on the small donations, by allotment, to continue assisting soldiers."

"I think its one more way of AER meeting the needs of the soldier," said Samuel Duggins, chief of Army Community Services at Fort Benning. "Contributions will gladly be accepted during the campaign which began Monday and will continue through June 30."



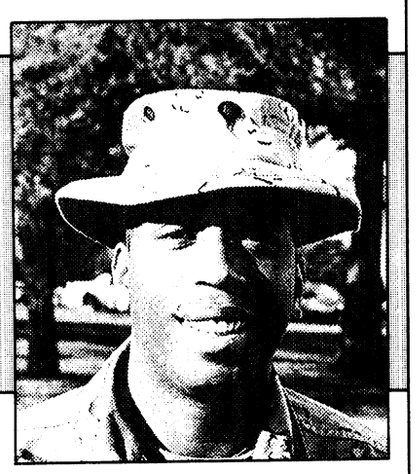
AER provides financial assistance to soldiers, their families and needy spouses and orphans of deceased soldiers. Over the years, AER has helped soldiers pay for food, rent, utilities, emergency transportation, essential vehicle repairs, funeral expenses and medical and dental bills. AER also provides tuition assistance for undergraduate study for spouses and dependent children of active, retired and deceased soldiers.

Last year, AER provided an all-time high of more than $31 million to about 72,000 Army families.

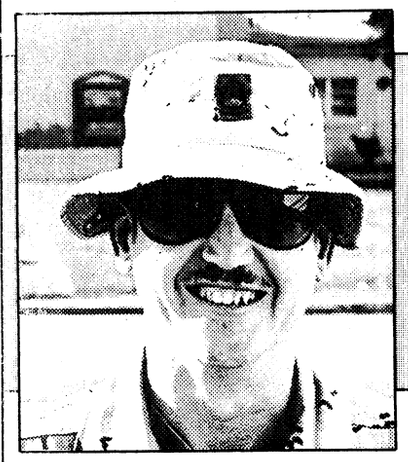


OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES:

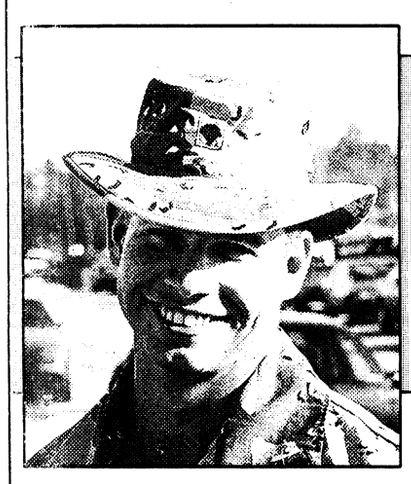


What is the one incident that you remember most during your participation in Desert Storm?



1st Sgt. Anthony B. Clark, Co. A, 2nd Bn., 69th Armor — "We were on a road march toward a probable place of engagement and a complete sense of pride almost overwhelmed me — pride for my men, my leaders, and the U.S. Army. To me, that emotion will never be duplicated."

Spc. Michelle F. Bretzius, 810th Military Police Company — "We flew into Iraq to pick up prisoners. The first trip up, an artillery round went off beside one of the choppers. Even though I was nervous, I was more worried about my prisoners.



Spc. Richard W. Sebree, Co. C, 2nd Bn., 69th Armor — "I was impressed with the togetherness that occurred, not only within the platoon, but also in the whole company. Knowing that we were an effective fighting force seemed to pull us all closer together."

Sgt. 1st Class Robert E. Roberts, Co. C, 2nd Bn., 69th Armor — "The amount of destruction that we witnessed while passing through Iraq was awesome. That was the most impressive thing to me."

Pvt. 2 John Roquemore, Co. C, 2nd Bn., 69th Armor — Because I was just out of basic training, I had no hands-on training of any significance. My tank commanders did an excellent job of training me fast with a lot of detail and because of this, my confidence level increased."

Spc. Clinton E. Johnson, Co. A, 2nd Bn., 69th Armor — "When we had to do a quick move toward Basra, and there were dead bodies all over the six-lane highway on our way there. That sight was quite thought-provoking."

COMMENTARY

Snively fondly remembers a friend

By Clyde Snively

Mary Joan Leighton died this week.

Joan was the secretary for the Public Affairs Office. Correction. Joan was public affairs.

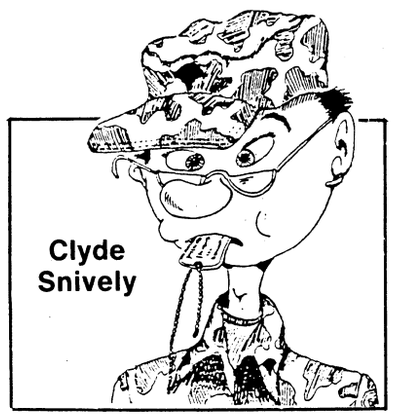
She served on the front line for Fort Benning. For the Army. When the public wanted answers, the Public Affairs Office was the place they called. Joan was the person they talked to.

Her cheerful voice could calm and disarm the most irate and impatient caller. Her knowledge of the military and Fort Benning would put anxious callers at ease.

Mothers who hadn't heard from their sons undergoing One Station Unit Training would call to get status reports. Joan would run down the unit, the company commander and the first sergeant, so that mother would know her soldier was doing just fine.

For parents calling about coming down for family day, she'd give them time, place, directions and make sure packets of information were mailed to them. No matter what the question, Joan would get the answer. And if she couldn't come up with the answer immediately, she'd promise to call back when she did know. And she always did.

The Civilian Military Council, a group of key civilians and leaders who met once a month to ensure continued good military-civilian relations in the Chattahoochee Valley, has been in existence for more than 40 years and it will be in existence 40 years from now.



Chairmen and past commanding generals may long be forgotten, but Joan will long be remembered.

When Joan came to public affairs, she took CMC under her wing, ensuring members and chairmen alike knew what their respective roles were, checking to make sure reservations for lunch were made, that people acknowledged their invitations, and that things went smoothly.

To some of the young folks in public affairs, Joan was known as "The Colonel," although they wouldn't dare call her that to her face.

The reputation was earned. She took no nonsense from them. Couldn't understand it when they wouldn't put forth a 100 percent effort. And she let them know when they'd transgressed.

Joan Leighton was military to the core. Cut her and she'd bleed O.D. And it cut her to the bone when she saw people not fully committed to the job.

As any good secretary will do, she kept her bosses straight. She made sure they got to the appointed place at the appointed time. When she typed correspondence or speeches for the command group, she'd let the author know "this isn't the way the general would say it." And if the writer had any sense, he'd accept her input because she was generally right.

Joan had a legion of friends. It wasn't at all uncommon to see three and four star generals coming out of the Public Affairs Office because they just stopped by to "see Joannie while I'm in town."

She had friends because she cared about people. Shared their joys and sorrows. There was never a request too large nor too small from a friend that she wouldn't honor. She was there when she was needed. Just like her friends were there for her in the last days of her life.

They say cigarettes killed Joan. She was a three-pack a day smoker when the doctors told her she had emphysema. Joan quit, but the disease that turns breathing into a struggle, saps a person's strength and sets her up for one disease after another, didn't.

Joan suffered her disease like the good soldier she was. Never a whimper. But I think she knew the end had finally come when she couldn't go out on the golf course anymore. Besides her friends, golf was her life. She wasn't a long ball hitter, but she kept her ball in the center of the fairway and carried a 27 handicap.

God's going to have to set apart a special place in heaven for Joan and all her friends. Hopefully it'll be a place with a fairway view.

A memorial service will be held at 11 a.m. today at St. Anne Catholic Church.

One of Joan's last requests was donations be made to Army Emergency Relief.

LETTER

70th commander expresses thanks

To the Fort Benning community:

This is to express my gratitude, on behalf of my soldiers, for the magnificent way the leaders, staffs, soldiers and civilian employees all pulled together to make the mobilization of the 70th Division "Trailblazers" such a great success.

For the first time in our unit's history, we implemented our mobilization plans, not as an exercise, but as the real thing. Many lessons were learned during this experience. One thing our plans did not prepare us for was the overwhelming concern for our welfare shown by the Columbus and Fort Benning communities.

Although this mission was short, I feel our division has been greatly strengthened because of it. The one Army concept is alive and well at Fort Benning.

Train tough!

Maj. Gen. James H. Mukoyama Jr.

70th Division commander

National Days of Thanksgiving

I, George Bush, President of the United States of America, do hereby proclaim April 5 through 7, 1991, as the National Days of Thanksgiving. I ask that Americans gather in homes and places of worship to give thanks to Almighty God for the liberation of Kuwait, for the blessings of peace and liberty, for our troops, our families, and our Nation. In addition, I direct that the flag of the United States of America be flown on all government buildings. I urge all Americans to display the flag, and I ask that bells across the country be set ringing at 3 p.m. Eastern Daylight Time April 7, 1991, for the celebration of the liberation of Kuwait and the end of the hostilities in the Persian Gulf.

Students discuss air-land battle techniques during a wargame in the U.S. Army Doctrine Instructor course.

SOA officers learn air-land battle doctrine

by Keith F. Johnson
U.S. Army School of the Americas

Twenty-one officers from both the United States and Latin America assigned to the U.S. Army School of the Americas graduated from the U.S. Army Doctrine Instructor course Mar. 22.

The 21 officers, 16 from Latin America, are instructors at the School who took the two-week course to update their knowledge of current U.S. Army doctrine, specifically pertaining to air-land battle doctrine.

The instructors of the course were Maj. Jerry D. Hatley and Maj. Jan Lekander, who are also instructors at the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth.

According to Hatley, he and Lekander travel to many training institutions throughout the United States each year to give the course so instructors can remain current on their knowledge of U.S. Army doctrine.

Hatley said the students spend a good portion of the two weeks assuming staff positions at brigade and division level and working together through a Command Estimate Process, or what Hatley termed as "the Army's version of how to solve a problem."

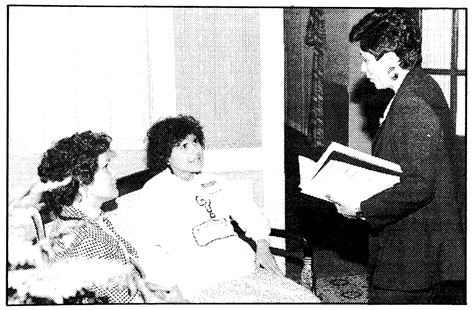
The process first step is mission analysis, then the students develop two courses of action followed by wargaming those two courses of action before finally giving a decision briefing to the commander. Hatley and Lekander play the roles of commander. The commanders then choose a course of action and the students write a corresponding operations order.

"When the students are finished they have covered every detail and have a complete understanding of what they have done," Hatley said.

Hatley said the course was not changed to meet the needs of the Latin American guest instructors because the course is specifically designed to teach U.S. Army doctrine.

"The doctrine itself can be applied anywhere, whether you're in South America or Europe, whether you have light forces or heavy forces," Hatley said.

Latin American wives learn American customs



by Keith F. Johnson
U.S. Army School of the Americas

The wives of enlisted guest instructors assigned to the U.S. Army School of the Americas met at the Fort Benning Officers Club March 14 as part of a program that introduces the wives to the United States culture.

The meeting was sponsored by Deyanira Legoas, wife of Command Sgt. Maj. Carlos E. Legoas, SOA command sergeant major, who spoke to the wives about certain customs such as shopping habits and traffic violations, specifically the harsh penalties for driving while intoxicated. Legoas said the meeting also gave the wives an opportunity to get to know each other better.

"I was always going to receptions for officer 's wives and I thought we should have them for the enlisted wives as well," Legoas said.

In addition to the approximately 15 guest instructors' wives in attendance, Deborah DePalo, wife of SOA Commandant Col. William A. DePalo, Jr., and Elda Lara, wife of SOA Assistant Commandant Col. Alfredo Lara, also attended the meeting.

Depalo

SOA PAO: Why is it a responsibility of SOA to promote human rights awareness?

DEPALO: "Who else is going to do it? Who else has the audience that the School has? The answer is no one, so we are ideally situated and structured to do that. We would, in fact, be deficient in our duties if we didn't stress it. That's part of conducting successful military operations. If you have an army that commits human rights violations in an insurgency, that army will lose. It will never gain the support of the population."

SOA PAO: What do you consider your greatest contribution to SOA?

DEPALO: "I think my greatest contribution to the School will be the organization I leave behind because anyone's legacy to the armyis the people that individual has trained. Organizations can be changed, courses can be changed, but the people and their attitudes one leaves behind is the most important aspect and I think I leave behind a very strong organization composed of highly motivated, disciplined personnel who feel good about themselves and their organization."

SOA PAO: How has the image of the School changed since you've been commandant?

DEPALO: "I've seen a change in the image of the School throughout Fort Benning particularly and I've traveled to all Latin American countries during my two-plus years here and the image of the School is very high right now."

SOA PAO: What have you enjoyed most about being the commandant of SOA?

DEPALO: "Being in charge, being able to do all the things that a commander of an organization gets to do. All the way from assigning people to changing the organizational structure to developing a long range vision and watching that vision come to fruition. I've gotten good support out of my chain of command, a lot of latitude to do the kinds of things I've needed to do.

"I guess the freedom of action that I've had in this job has been the most pleasing. I haven't been suffocated by excessive supervision or guidance. It has given me the liberty to go out and visit all the countries and check the azimuth down range. That's really the most important thing, go down and find out from the people you are training is the training the School is providing satisfactory. If it isn't, what do we need to do to change it? What modifications are required? We've accomplished that, I've received good feedback.

DePalo reflects on career at SOA

by Keith F. Johnson
U.S. Army School of the Americas

Col. William A. DePalo, Jr. will turn over command of the United States Army School of the Americas to Col. Jose R. Feliciano May 3. The following interview contains some of DePalo's views about the School and his accomplishments over the past two years.

SOA PAO: What is the School of the Americas?

DEPALO: "The School of the Americas exists to train Latin American officers, cadets and sergeants, but equally important is it commences military to military relations between people from seventeen different nations and also provides an opportunity for all of the students to see the United States. Those three components of our mission is really what the School is all about."

SOA PAO: What do you consider SOA's most important mission?

DEPALO: "The School builds greater relation's between the United States and the various Latin American militaries and demonstrates what the United States is all about. That's the advantage of the School being here in the United States and the tie-in to the Informational Program where not only do the students have the opportunity but it's actually a mandatory part of the course that they go and see selected areas of the southeastern part of the United States. They leave with a good appreciation of what the United States is all about that they wouldn't get if the School were located somewhere else or if the School didn't exist at all."

SOA PAO: What was your image of SOA before you became commandant and how has that image changed?

DEPALO: "The relocation of the School from Panama to Fort Benning was probably the single biggest improvement that has occured since I left in 1976 and I took over here in 1989. It relocated the School to a TRADOC post and gave the School access to better training facilities. The School became part of the TRADOC system, therefore we have TRADOC resources to draw upon. We are also held to the TRADOC standard meaning we have to fall under the same curriculum development methods, the same school model methods, the same logistics and administration procedures and we have a budget that we have to operate under."

SOA PAO: How have the people of Fort Benning helped SOA?

DEPALO: "The people of Fort Benning have helped marvelously, magnanimously, providing all kinds of support. Generating the action necessary to get the building 35 renovation project into the budget of the whole army and providing us the temporary facilities while the building is being renovated. And the day to day support we get, even though we are a tenant unit we get treated as though we were part of the Infantry Center itself."

SOA PAO: When you first became commandant, what were your goals for the School?

DEPALO: "I wanted to build upon the foundation that had already been established by my two predecessors since the School came to Fort Benning. I didn't know that much about how the School was organized or what courses we were teaching so I waited until I got here to see what was going on because it's kind of foolish to come in and organization you know nothing about and make a lot of changes. My game plan was imply to fall in on the flow and see how things were developing and base my judgements on that. Once I got a feel for the organization and its people and mission then I was able to develop the agenda and publish objectives for the School. I also got some very definitive guidance from General (Maxwell R.) Thurman when he was TRADOC commander and what he wanted done in the School. That also went into developing the objectives that constituted the guidelines for the School the first year I was here.

"General Thurman wanted to turn the School into a premiere military training institution. To do that you need good people. He was responsible for having assigned to the School a lot of good officers who were competitive, good linguists and knowledgeable. With that kind of a base you can do almost anything you want to because these are smart people, imaginative people and all they need is some mission type guidance and off they go.

"I listened to the people who were in the School and followed some of their advice on what direction they thought the School ought to go. It became very clear to me alter on that low-intensity conflict was where we really should focus our attention. In order to focus on something you need to concentrate your resources on one area. The best way to do that was to create a department out of existing resources and focus on low-intensity conflict and special operations. That was really easy to do, as long as you're not asking for more money or more people it's easy to reorganize. The harder part was getting up the courses to support that department, some of which already existed. Courses such as Counternarcotics Operations and Strategic Intelligence had to be created from scratch."

SOA PAO: How do guest instructor's help?

DEPALO: "The guest instructor's fill billets that would ordinarily be filled by U.S. personnel, since there aren't enough U.S. military personnel to go around these would be vacant positions if it were not for the guest instructors. We have forty-one officers and noncommissioned officers we would not otherwise have.

"The second benefit, and probably the most important, is that we are able to draw upon the expertise and experience of all Latin American militaries. The Latin American countries send only their best people to the School.

"Third factor is that it also gives us the opportunity to influence the guest instructors. They get to live here in the United States with their families for two years, that's pretty significant because they go back with a very good appreciation of the U.S. and a better understanding. What we're doing in this program, in addition to getting good teachers, we are creating an environment which each country can learn more about the other, the Latin Americans learn more about the U.S. and we learn more about them."

SOA PAO: How has SOA promoted human rights awareness?

DEPALO: "The first thing we did was to codify all our policy letters which is fine, you can put anything you want to in a policy letter, but unless you put your teeth into it and make it work, it's worthless.

"I consider the important components of the human rights program to be the Informational Program in which all the courses visit various sights which acquaints the students with democratic institutions. Second, the guest instructor program, living here for two years with families in a democratic system exposes them to the importance citizens in this country place on individual freedoms.

"Thirdly, we have instruction in the curriculum. Every course has some human rights awareness training, be it Geneva Convention or specific case studies.

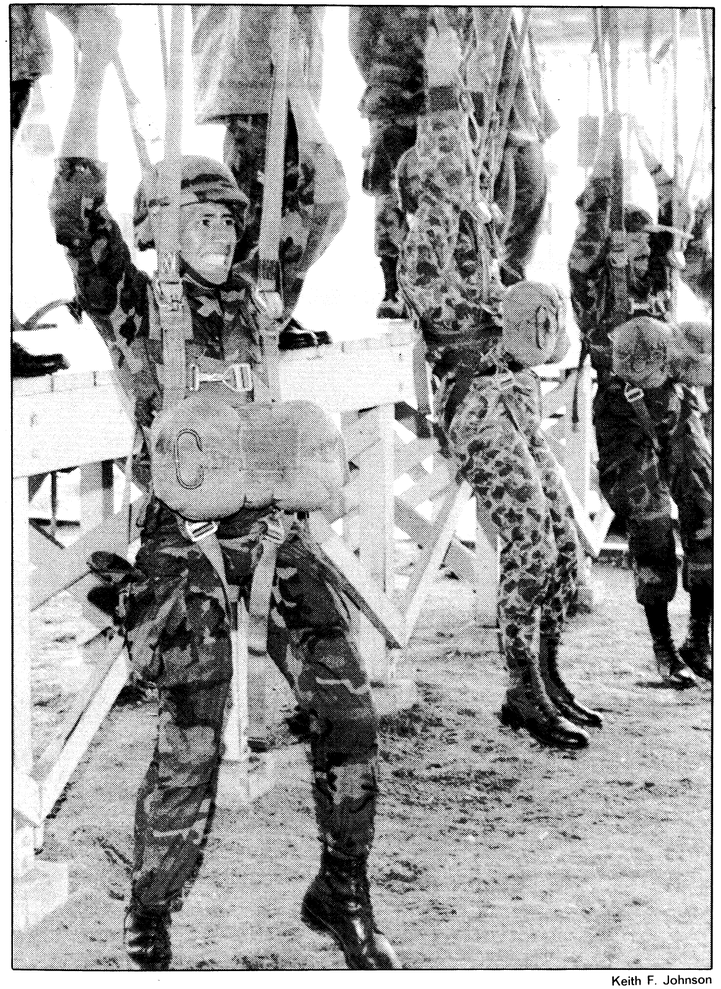
Sgt. 1st Class Ubiel A. Valencia receives his plaque and a handshake from Col. William A. DePalo, Jr. and Command Sgt. Maj. Carlos E. Legoas.

SOA course profile: Commando

The Commando course is designed to train officers and noncommissioned officers in the leadership skills required to lead units in high stress environments characteristic of Commando operations.

Training is oriented toward realistic and strenuous field operations. Students develop leadership skills through performance as patrol leaders and are subjected to stressful conditions simulating combat where they learn to operate in difficult terrain, over extended distances, with minimal sleep and under constant enemy harassment. Training consists of three phases over wooded, mountainous and swamp terrain. Specialized training includes advanced mountaineering techniques; improvised demolitions; waterborne, airborne and airmobile operations; and patrolling operations. All instruction is taught at the U.S. Army Ranger training sites in accordance with U.S. doctrine.



Each applicant for the course must be a bona fide volunteer and in excellent physical condition able to achieve 52 push-ups in two minutes and 62 sit-ups, be able to run two miles in less than 14:54 minutes and do six chin-ups.

The three phases of training consist of the Benning Phase, the Mountain Phase and the Florida Phase. The Benning Phase prepares the student to function as a member/leader of a patrol. The student will receive training in physical fitness, combat lifesaving, land navigation, communications, weapons, fire support, movement techniques, airborne operations, patrol operations, leadership and demolitions. Additionally, the student will acquire the ability to train small units and plan for and lead small unit operations on independent dismounted, airborne or air assault operations against an enemy in rolling, wooded terrain. The Mountain and Florida Phases also develop the student's ability to train and lead small units in mountainous and swampy, tropical terrain. The students also receive five hours of instruction on the Law of Land Warfare.

Combat pay tax exempt

By James C. Rupp
Bayonet staff writer

Combat pay earned by soldiers in the Persian Gulf has been declared Federal tax exempt by an executive order signed by President George Bush Jan. 17.

All combat zone pay earned by warrant officers and enlisted soldiers is totally excluded from all federal taxation. Only the first $500 of combat zone income is exempted for commissioned officers, according to Bobby King, military pay officer for the finance division.

Also according to King, the Joint Military Pay System was programmed in February to halt the deduction of federal and state taxes from the payments of soldiers serving in the Middle East during Operation Desert Storm and to refund the deductions taken away in January's payment.

The full reimbursement, however, applies to enlisted soldiers only. Warrant and commisioned officers are only allowed up to $100 in refunds.

This may cause some problems for commissioned officers as their income is taxable and no taxes are being witheld. Any personnel encountering difficulties with the payment situation can direct questions to King at 545-3919, or Capt. Mary Wallace, chief of Pay and Examination Branch, 545-4419 or 545-5819.

By James C. Rupp
Bayonet staff writer

Soldiers returning from the Persian Gulf will be receiving the mail that was sent to them just before they departed the Middle East.

There will be a slight delay, according to a message dated March 18 from the commander of Army Central Personnel Command.

Mail that has been sent to a location in Saudi Arabia from where the unit has departed will be collected by that unit's rear detachment. It will then be forwarded to that unit's new location.

For the most part, all soldiers will be receiving their retrograde mail with the exception of soldiers whose new location information is unavailable. In these cases, the mail will be returned to sender.

Post names Drill of Year

By James C. Rupp
Bayonet staff writer

Staff Sgt. Thomas Vajentic is a soldier who has always sought to set a good example for those around him.

After stints in other "example setting" environments, including being an instructor in both the Jumpmaster and Pathfinder courses and a drill sergeant at the Infantry Training Center, he will now have a chance to set an example for instructors across the Army community.

In December, Vajentic, still acting as drill sergeant for ITC Company B, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry, was named Drill Sergeant of the Year for the post.

That honor also qualifies him for the Training and Doctrine Command competition to be held at Fort Belvoir, Va. April 15 through 19.

Vajentic feels confident of his abilities and preparations for the TRADOC competition, believing that winning the post award was a good representation of himself and the challenge he faces.

James C. Rupp

Staff Sgt. Thomas Vajentic moves troops.

"The competition was excellent... I believe we have the very best drill sergeants in the Army, but one has to win," Vajentic said.

"When I first entered the competition, I just felt an ambition to accept the challenge, but felt sure of myself at the same time," Vajentic continued, "I just went about it, having made up my mind about that challenge. I guess that I'm an overachiever. I do it all the way, once I decide to do it. If I don't win it the TRADOC competition, it will not be because I am not prepared.

"When I appear before the board in April, I hope to make a lasting impression for myself and for this post."

Infantry Board goes

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

The Army has said goodbye to another old friend.

The Test and Experimentation Command Infantry Board, commonly referred to as the TEXCOM Infantry Board, was officially inactivated March 21 at Building 76, Main Post.

Many distinguished guests were present to bear witness to this historic event, including not only the guest speakers, Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza, post commander, and Lt. Col. James C. Grugin Jr., president of the TEXCOM Infantry Board, but also many soldiers who were assigned to the board in the past.

Established in 1903 by Headquarters of the Army, this board had its first home at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

Dec. 15, 1919, War Department orders were issued constituting the present Infantry Board with permanent station at Camp Benning, Ga. This was the first and only agency created by the War Department whose sole function was to consider the improvement of the infantry.

The Infantry Board tested equipment for the infantry soldier during its 88-year history. During this time, many honored and distinguished infantrymen have served as members, including Gen. Fred K. Mahaffey, former commander-in-chief of Readiness Command and Gen. Colin L. Powell, current chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

In front of a nostalgiac audience, the Infantry Board's colors were retired and cased.

"I feel sad about it," said retired Lt. Col. Robert L. Wisor, a former member of the Infantry Board. "It was something I didn't expect after all these years."

Throughout its years of existence, the Infantry Board has adhered to its motto of "only the best for the finest."

To all the fathers who missed the births of new babies and all the mothers whose bedtime stories weren't possible,

To all the newlyweds whose honeymoons were cut short,

To all the big brothers who couldn't be there for pick-up games and all the sisters whose help with homework was really needed, and to all the sons, daughters, relatives and friends who enrich our daily lives, we salute you.

As Georgians who served our country in Operation Desert Storm, you kept thoughts of home and Georgia on your minds, and we have kept you in our hearts. Now the entire nation knows of your skill and bravery.

West Point Prep seeks students

USAIC Public Affairs Office

For anyone who has ever dreamed of attending the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, but thought that dream was unattainable, the U.S. Military Academy Preparatory School just might be for you.

The school prepares and trains active and Reserve soldiers to qualify for admission to the military academy, and provides training that will assist them after they arrive at West Point. Approximately 95 percent of the graduates receive appointments to the military academy.

The prep school is open to enlisted soldiers who are in the regular Army, Reserves or National Guard, and to civilians who are authorized by the Department of the Army to enlist in the Army Reserve specifically for the purpose of attending USMAPS.

Active duty and Reserve soldiers interested in applying to USMAPS should go through their commanders, and submit an application in accordance with Army Regulation 351-12. Applications must be submitted no later than April 15 of the year applicants wish to attend USMAPS. Because of Operation Desert Storm, this year the deadline is May 15.

Information about application procedures can be found in Army Regulation 351-12, Nomination to USMA, Enlisted Categories — Army.

Capt. Linda Bray

Post honors women's history

By Paula J. Randall
USAIC Public Affairs Office

"You've come a long way, baby."

More than just a cigarette slogan, those were the words Capt. Linda Bray told a group of 273 people at the Women's History Month Luncheon March 29 at the Officers Club.

"We've come a long way but we still have a long way to go," she added.

Bray, the chief of Fort Benning's Military Police Investigations, was the keynote speaker at the luncheon, sponsored by the Fort Benning Federal Women's Program Committee.

Addressing this year's National Women's History Month Observance's theme, "Nuturing tradition, fostering change," Bray told the crowd that "the times, they are a changing," referring to women's growing role outside the home and in the workforce.

Ellis Dandy, equal employment opportunity officer, who introduced Bray at the luncheon, informed the crowd that Bray wears a combat patch on her shoulder — a patch she received for serving in Operation Just Cause in Panama where she was the commander of the 988th Military Police Company.

Addressing the luncheon attendees, Fort Benning Chief of Staff Col. John Fuller said three out of six company commanders in the Conus Replacement Center, which was vital to Operation Desert Storm, were women. He said he believes that women in the Army will continue to move into leadership positions and jobs previously held only by their male counterparts. He also predicted that by the year 2000, women will hold every military occupational specialty in the Army including combat arms; "women have earned the right," he said.

In her speech, Bray encouraged everyone to continue to support the equal opportunity and equal employment opportunity programs and to combat discrimination. "I strongly encourage professionalism, and support the changes that may occur," Bray said.

After The Storm.

World-class pistol shooter follows family tradition

By Charlene L. LaDay-Hill
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

In most father-son relationships, the son usually follows in their father's footsteps. Even in the world of marksmanship that theory holds true.

James H. McNally, former two-time Olympic pistol shooter, retired from the United States Army Marksmanship Unit in 1974 after 13 years. His two sons, Capt. John McNally, U.S. Army International Pistol Team member, and Spc. Kenneth McNally (currently stationed at Fort Dix, N.J.) have kept the tradition going strong.

During the USAMU 35th Anniversary celebration, James got to watch his son conduct a number of action pistol demonstrations for the crowd. His other son, Kenneth, was unable to make it to the reunion.

Capt. McNally is currently gearing up for the 1992 Olympics. He recently won the Center-fire and Standard Pistol categories of the 54th Mid-Winter Pistol Championships in Tampa, Fla.

"My ultimate goal is to get the gold medal in the 1992 Olympics," he said. "My dad has always taught us to think positive and set high goals for ourselves."

As a father, James has quite a few memorable experiences of his son's shooting.

"I remember when John was 6 years old he hit a tin can for the first time with his rifle. He had the biggest smile on his face," said James proudly. "I see that smile a lot whenever he competes."

Before joining the Army and becoming a member of USAMU, John shot for the United States Marine Corp for four years. He won many Interservice Rapid Fire Pistol competitions for the Corps. After leaving the Marines, John took on the challenges of the U.S. Army's Ranger School.

"The Marines and Ranger School taught me that I could push myself further than I'd ever dreamed," said John. "Also, putting everything my dad has taught me to use, is the key to my success in marksmanship."

John's success in international pistol competitions have covered everything from world cup matches to Olympic and Pan-Am games.

"I feel that a record needs to be broken every time I compete," said John who has set another new record this time in the National Indoor Rapid Fire event with a 593. "I always want to be the one holding a record in whatever event I shoot in."

Although James is very proud of both his sons, some may wonder how does he feel when they compete against each other.

"There was a time when Ken and John were both on the All-Army Shooting Team together. Each would have his day of victory," said James. "Other shooters would try to tease them and say: 'oh, you've been beat by your brother.' But we'd say that's alright, a McNally beat you all."

For the McNally, no matter what the event, it will always be a family affair.

W.D. Crowley's — cozy and reasonable

W.D. Crowley's, conveniently located inside Peachtree Mall, specializes in delectable prime rib steaks, lobster and fresh seafood delicacies at reasonable prices.

Serving a variety of other continental and international dishes in a cozy, pub-style setting, there's something for everyone at W.D. Crowley's.

This full-service restaurant offers meeting and banquet facilities, a private family room for larger gatherings, Sunday brunch, special children's menus and carry-out service.

Helpful features have been added to the restaurant's structure to provide better access for guests with physical limitations.

Although entrees are in the low to moderate price ranges, the atmosphere and impeccable service make diners feel they have entered an upscale eatery where they will probably spend a small fortune. Not so.

The average price of an entree cooked to perfection ranges from $5 or less for lunch and up to $12 for dinner, making W.D. Crowley's an appropriate dining spot for singles, small or large groups and families.

It's quite common to enter W.D. Crowley's and hear the sounds of tinkling glasses and flatware and the hum of conversation. A young couple whispers at a corner booth; a married couple and their children share the day's events at a small table; a group of co-workers laugh heartily over a round of drinks.

The restaurant's atmosphere is further enhanced by the multi-level dining areas, dark wood interior and early to middle 20th century artifacts, which all add to its social and international auras.

Manager Robert Willingham and his friendly staff are ready and eager to serve you. Although they aren't required, reservations are accepted. You can use cash, MasterCard, Visa, American Express, Diner's or Discover.

The restaurant is open Monday through Thursday from 11:30 a.m. to 10 p.m.; Friday and Saturday from 11:30 a.m. to 11 p.m.; and Sunday from noon to 9:30 p.m. ■

197th medics accept challenge in Mideast

By Aurelio Feliberty
197th Infantry Brigade

SAUDI ARABIA — It's not easy for a company to support an entire brigade, but the medics of Company B, 197th Support Battalion have accepted the challenge.

"Our mission is to provide medical support to the brigade by breaking the company down into mobile trauma teams consisting of a doctor, a physician's assistant, and seven medics," said Dr. (Capt.) D.L. Davis, family medicine doctor for the unit.

> "This training could mean the difference between life and death in combat."
> — Bruce Whitehead

"Each battalion has a trauma team assigned to augment our Battalion Aid Station," he continued.

"We are only able to sustain patients for a short period of time, depending on their injuries. Patients who require further treatment are taken by air ambulance choppers from the 498th Medical Company, based at Fort Jackson, S.C., to the field hospital for further care."

According to Davis, as the possibility of combat increased for the soldiers of the 197th Infantry Brigade, the medical company trained non-medical personnel to serve as combat lifesavers. Combat lifesavers can administer IVs and perform more advanced first aid techniques than the average soldier until medical help arrives.

"Approximately 85 percent of the Support Battalion soldiers and at least one soldier from each squad in our line battalions are combat lifesavers," Davis said.

Spc. Bruce A. Whitehead, the armorer and orderly room clerk for Co. A, 197th Spt. Bn., is a combat lifesaver.

"I took my combat lifesaver course at Fort Stewart, Ga., before we came over to Saudi Arabia," Whitehead said. "I'm also Red Cross certified, and our company conducts refresher training all the time. I'm glad I have all this training, because it could mean the difference between life and death in combat."

"Because of the experience of our three medics who are Vietnam veterans and our program to train medical specialists to perform physician's assistant duties, we're more ready than ever for the possibility of treating combat casualties," said Davis.

CRIME STOPPERS

Columbus Police Department

Crime Stoppers and the Columbus Police Department are looking for persons responsible for two burglaries that occurred in February involving the theft of high performance automobile parts.

Approximately 9 a.m. Feb. 26, Mike Brown reported to police that sometime during the night an unknown person entered his place of business, Mike Brown Heating and Air, located at 5918 Coca Cola Blvd.

Police investigation revealed that the suspect smashed out the front west window. Once inside, the suspect went to the petty cash box, which was hidden, searching for cash. The only property reported taken was one set of cylinder heads and one Edelbrock intake manifold, valued at approximately $2,000.

A burglary was reported at T & P Garage at 1654 Elvin Ave. on Jan. 19. Entry was made by sawing through the east window burglar bars. Once inside, approximately $4,000 in property was taken, which was two Brodax Chevrolet racing heads with the number 17 stamped on the front.

If you have any information concerning these incidents, call Crime Stoppers at 571-5858. If the information given leads to an indictment, you could receive up to $1,000 in reward money.

Crime Stoppers also pays for information on other criminal activities, wanted persons and stolen property. The Crime Stoppers lines are open Monday through Friday from 10 a.m to 10 p.m. Crime Stoppers serves the Columbus, Fort Benning, Phenix City and Russell County areas.

Smoking: not pretty picture

By Stanley B. Kahane
Preventative Medicine Service

Some years ago, I was impressed by an "ad" campaign which approached smoking in a sort of down to earth way. The pictorial ads showed men and women, obviously at the lowest end of the social spectrum, with cigarettes dangling from their lips and accompanied by the slogan, "smoking is so sophisticated" or "smoking is so glamorous" and other like descriptive phrases.

Well, I thought that campaign was very effective because it countered the very essence of smoking ads which let you know with certainty that if you smoke you are the quintessential sophisticate — indeed enhancing your youth, vitality, body appearance, and potential for advancement. You are instantly more attractive to the opposite sex and a subject for universal admiration.

Not every cigarette smoker is a "down and outer." But, I don't believe that a woman is necessarily more lovely to look at because "She's Come A Long Way Baby!" by smoking cigarettes which become longer and longer while containing less and less tar and nicotine. Nope, to me the smoker is just another poor unfortunate soul.

There are so many smoking disadvantages, social as well as health-related, that it may require a kind of summary statement to be made.

Simply stated, the risks are just too great to be ignored by anyone who has the ability to reason and to realize their full potential for long life.

Believe it or not, we are not immortal, and I don't think we should rush headlong to the inevitable. Instead, reasonable and prudent people should weigh and assess the risks as they do all risks and avoid them. Live as long as you can.

A subsequent article will address the impact on health.

If you need help in stopping smoking, call 545-1144 for additional information.

Bradley Instructor Company trains commanders

By Beau Springer
29th Infantry Regiment

The Bradley Instructor Company was organized in 1984 as the Bradley Instructor Detachment of the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment.

Originally its mission was to instruct the Basic Bradley Transition Course, Master Gunner Course, and function as the Bradley Proponency Office. In 1985, Company A, 1st Bn., 29th Regt., absorbed the BIC's basic Bradley course commitments.

The Bradley Instructor Company teaches the Bradley Fighting Vehicle Commander's Course, Master Gunner's Course, and the BFV Pre-Command Course.

The Bradley Fighting Vehicle is a combat force multiplier introduced to the U.S. Army arsenal in 1983 as a replacement for the M-113 Armored Personnel Carrier.

The BFV carries 9-man squads into combat and is manned by a crew consisting of a driver, gunner, and commander.

The BIC conducts the aforementioned classes in conjunction with the individual Conduct of Fire Trainer, (or ICOFT), a $1.5 million console which provides a video-simulated BFV turret, and the Hands on Troubleshooter Trainer system (HOTTS), a three-dimensional cutaway of a BFV turret which allows the student to troubleshoot the turret using simplified test equipment. The ICOFT and HOTTs are integrated into the Commander's and Master Gunner Courses for 28 hours of instruction.

The BFV Commander's Course is normally a six-week course offered to active or reserve component infantry officers or non-commissioned officers in the rank of sergeant promotable through lieutenant colonel, who are assigned or on orders to a BFV equipped battalion. Its purpose is to develop soldiers capable of operating and maintaining the Bradley Fighting Vehicle as well as using it during combat at the appropriate level.

The BFV Master Gunner's Course develops soldiers capable of designing and implementing a BFV gunnery program, diagnosing and troubleshooting turret weapons and supervising turret weapons systems maintenance. It is offered to active or reserve component soldiers with a 11M or 19D Primary Military Occupation Specialty in the ranks sergeant promotable through Sgt. 1st Class who are recommended by the first lieutenant colonel in the soldier's chain of command.

The BIC also conducts two to three demonstrations and briefings per week for National Foreign dignitaries. The list of recent guests includes foreign general officers from France, Germany, Israel, Great Britain, delegates from the Swiss Military Acquisition Committee, the Chairman of the Hungarian Joint Chiefs of Staff, Sen. Sam Nunn, and the U.S. Secretary of the Army. The BIC's workload has increased to nearly 160 percent due to the addition of instruction for more than 450 soldiers from Georgia's 48th Infantry Brigade and the RT12, or Ready to Train (those civilians who have been discharged from active duty within 365 days), soldiers.

The BIC is located at the Collins Training Center, Headquarters of the 29th Infantry Regiment. It is commanded by Maj. David Smith and headed by First Sergeant Loreto Olano. It has 75 instructors who train approximately 700 soldiers annually. Further questions regarding the BIC, the BFV Commanders Course, Master Gunners Course, Pre-command Course, ICOFT or HOTTs can be directed to Sgt. 1st Class Eaglin or Capt. Daniel, BIC Operations, 544-6330.

MARTIN CARE

By Jeanne Dickerson
Martin Army Community Hospital

With the cease fire in Saudi Arabia, the need to prepare for war casualties at MACH is past. The Pediatric Ward, which had merged with another ward on the seventh floor, will now return to Ward 3A. This more than doubles the number of beds available for pediatric patients and separates them from other patients.

The Pediatric Clinic is now open from 7:30 a.m. to 4:45 p.m., Monday through Friday. These hours were extended to benefit working parents who may want to bring their children to the clinic before going to work.

Another change that should increase access to care is allowing parents to bring their children directly to the clinic without calling ahead. Parents may either call from home prior to coming to the hospital or may use the telephone in the Pharmacy Lobby that is a direct line to the Pediatric Clinic.

Parents who come in without calling will be seen based on medical urgency and will be worked in between scheduled appointments. Unless it is a true emergency, those who come without calling for an appointment should expect longer waiting times in the clinic.

To schedule follow up or routine appointments, it is suggested that parents call in the afternoon. The telephone lines are less busy and easier to reach in the afternoon.

Babies under two years old will be given immunizations in the Pediatric Clinic. Children in this age group will no longer be seen in Immunization Clinic. Pediatric immunizations will be given by appointment only and will be scheduled for Tuesday mornings and Thursday afternoons.

Well Baby examinations are also available, by appointment, for babies at two, four and six months of age. These changes in the Pediatric Clinic are being made to make Martin Care more accessible in meeting the needs of our patients.

If you need any information on any services provided by the Pediatric Clinic, call 544-1795.

For appointments, call 544-1086/1087 or 1088.

All-Army wrestlers maintain grip on championship

By Rodney Smith
29th Inf. Regt.

For the second consecutive year, the All-Army wrestlers have successfully maintained their stranglehold on the Armed Forces Championships. The All-Army wrestlers, through adversity, accomplished a fantastic feat. Team unity and individual sacrifice would ultimately become the nemesis of the Marine Corps superstar team.

Sgt. 1st Class Anthony Thomas was the choreographer of this scenario. "I'm very pleased at what took place here at the Armed Forces Championships. We don't have as many talented individuals as the Marines. Talent did not win this tournament, heart did," Thomas added.

The greatest prophets could not have predicted more accurately.

Tony Demos is a prime example of the self-fulfilling prophecy. He stated prior to the Armed Forces Championships that this year would be gold for himself and his team mates. In the way of Demo's mountainous goal was the mountain himself, Greg Pittman of the Marine Corps.

It would take a sudden-death overtime match before the mountain would crumble. "It's the best feeling in the world to win in overtime. When I heard all the fans cheering my name, I dug deeper inside myself to win. Not for myself, but for them," said Demos

Demos contends that he could not have done it alone. He thanks God, wife Cynthia, Coach Thomas and Derrick Waldroup.

"No one is great by themselves. I'm only as good as my training partners."

At the helm of the All-Army wrestling team is no other than the "General" Derrick Waldroup. Derrick is no stranger to Armed Forces victories.

"Winning an individual championship doesn't mean half as much as winning back to back team titles. We have a lot of heart on this team. I'm just proud to be a part of it,"said Waldroup.

Following in the footsteps of the "General" is Shon Lewis. His extraordinary display of wrestling earned him two gold medals. Making his own path, Lewis is the only wrestler in Armed Forces history to win double gold as a first-year wrestler.

"I wanted to win for my birthday. I knew I could win in my heart. I feel I'm the best wrestler in my weight class for the fact that I work twice as hard," said Lewis. Lewis' major influence in his life is his mother. "My mom is responsible for this. She encourages me and lets me know things are OK," Lewis added.

After last years disappointment of not making the team, Ryan Jibben of Korea is estatic about this year's results. "It's like something you have always wanted to do and then you finally do it. I feel great knowing that I helped the team,"said Jibben.

" A lot of people didn't think I could do it. Winning the Armed Forces Championships has helped me prove my worth to Coach Thomas. I worked hard in practice and it payed off," said Jibben.

Double goal winner Martin Strmska of Fort Campbell is the epitome of strength in the human spirit. Suffering a career-threatening injury last season, he was eager to get back on the mats this year. Unfortunately, after the second practice he injured his knee again.

"I didn't want to jeopardize my knee because I feared further injury to it," said Strmska.

" I talked to Coach Thomas about it and after we talked, I wanted to give all that I could for the team. In the finals I didn't think about the pain. The crowd got me pumped and ready to go," said Strmska.

Voted Most Outstanding Wrestler of the tournament, there is no doubt that Strmska is outstanding. Although Strmska was plagued by physical and emotional hardships, he continues to set the standards on and off the mat.

Night fishing riprap rocks successful, produces big bass catch

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

If you're looking for a way and a place to catch a big bass, consider fishing riprap rocks at night with a noisy crankbait.

It's paid off many times for Evinrude Outboards Pro Staff angler Cliff Craft, a former Lake Lanier, Georgia, bass guide and now a highly-respected tournament pro. Craft has caught jumbo-sized largemouths, smallmouths and spotted bass with the technique, including a 9-pound, 10-ounce Lake Lanier largemouth.

"Riprap rocks around bridges, railroad trestles and dams usually holds a lot of crayfish and small minnows that attract bass," Craft explained "All you have to do is start at one end of a long wall of rocks and cast your way down it."

The key, says Craft, is using a deep diving crankbait with a lot of rattles. He believes the noise helps attract the bass.

"Make your casts at about a 45-degree angle so the lure gradually works down to eight or 10 feet," he explained, "and use a steady, slow to medium retrieve. You don't have to do anything special, just cast and crank. The fish will do the rest."

Although corners, indentions and other changes in the rocks often attract and hold bass on riprap during the day, the fish may be anywhere along the rocks at night. They're usually roving, feeding fish that have moved up from deeper water. Craft has caught them in water as shallow as a foot.

Riprap fishing is usually a late-night technique, too, the Evinrude pro notes, but the pattern can be used from spring through the summer and into the early autumn.

Craft's big bass came during an otherwise slow night of fishing, and provided him with one of his greatest fishing thrills.

"I'd made a long cast and started reeling back when the fish struck," Craft remembered, "and it seemed like it took forever to land the bass. I heard it jump and splash out in the darkness and I knew it was a big fish from the way it pulled, but I didn't know just how big until I boated it and weighed it."

Craft released the bass then, and continued fishing, because, he says, he thought there just might be a 12-pounder on the next rock. It's a technique that can certainly produce fish that big.

"It works well for spotted bass and smallmouths, too," said the Georgia pro. "On Lake Lanier, which is one of the best spotted bass lakes in the nation, I've caught a lot of fish in the four to five-pound class, and in some Tennessee lakes I've fished the riprap and caught smallmouth just as large."

The service experts at OMC recommend bass boaters install a water pressure gauge on their boats. Outboards can lose water pressure if the water intake is covered with weeds or mud, which can lead to overheating and more serious damage.

Family Shield helps soldiers, families

Directorate of Community Activities

Columbus Operation Family Shield is an all-volunteer coalition of citizens who would like a continuing bond between their city and Fort Benning.

Operation Family Shield is committed to the pursuit of helping the troops and their families who served in the Persian Gulf War as well as remembering the veterans of previous wars.

The Yellow Ribbon campaign, which has covered Columbus in yellow ribbons, is the most visible facet of the organization. But, Operation Family Shield's main goal is to provide whatever support is needed by programs such as the Army Family Services Food Locker that directly helps military personnel and their families.

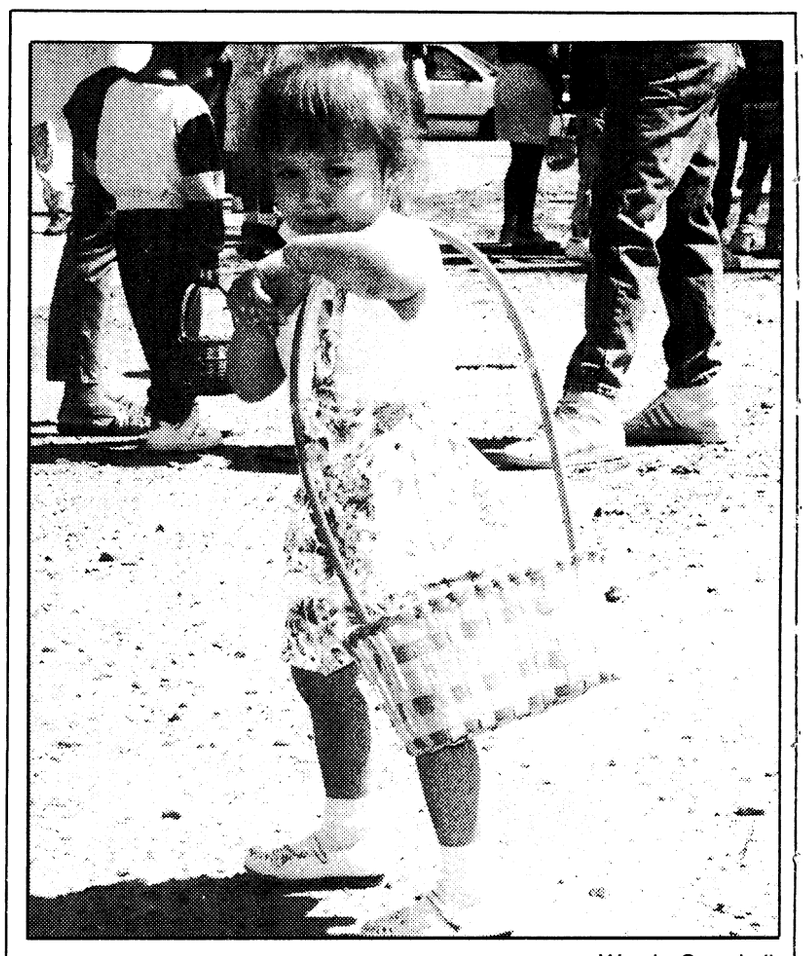
Operation Family Shield is funded strictly by contributions. The organization uses no monies whatsoever for administrative costs. Donations of goods and services are used as well as financial contributions.

Operation Family Shield has contributed more than 1,000 pounds of food to the ACS Food Locker and has donated $2,000 to provide child care to allow many husbands and wives a day together as the husband or wife returns from the Persian Gulf. The co-chairpersons of these projects, Donna Rice and Toni Emanuel, are currently working with Family Services to determine what other programs they can plan.

IOBC students, families celebrate Easter

By Kathy Cray
Bayonet community writer

Members of 2nd Battalion (IOBC), 11th Infantry Regiment, had an Easter party at Russ Pond March 24. The Easter bunny (2nd Lt. Michael Kenealy) met the families at the IOBC building and proceeded to lead the caravan of cars to the party. To the children's delight, they found the Easter Bunny had hidden eggs with candy and prizes in them.



The Easter egg hunt started with the blowing of a whistle, and the children were off, finding lots of goodies, along with the hidden eggs. Everyone received candy as the Easter bunny and 1st Sgt. Robert Riggin, dressed as a clown, went around and passed it out to the children who didn't find treats on the hunt.

There were also live bunny rabbits at a petting area, which was arranged by Katy Bair. The children were excited at the chance to pet, hold, and love real bunnies.

Games were planned for both children and adults. During the water balloon toss, the children were paired up with a parent for a water balloon throw, as well as the bean bag toss and ring toss for the smaller children.

While the children's games were going on, the adults had a game of volleyball. Sgt. 1st Class Norma Rodriguez led the way in showing the guys how to play. Also enjoying the activities of the day were the single soldiers, parents with older children, and those without children.

After the hunt and games, hungry and thirsty battalion members feasted on mouth-watering cookie platters which were set up by Lois Riggins, Debbie Powell, Lynne Vaughn, Susie Maloney, Vivian Callaghan, Charlotte Fowler, Peggy Marshal, Jean Maisel, and Laverne Tredway.

EWC sponsors egg hunt

By Wanda Campbell
Bayonet community writer

Nearly 75 children gathered on the playground at Faith School on Saturday to hunt for the eggs hidden by members of the Enlisted Wives Club.

Hilda Johnson, acting president of the Enlisted Wives Club, said volunteers hid nearly 30 dozen eggs and the club offered prizes in several categories as their way to show support for the families in the community.

Hiding the eggs on three fields at the playground were Bertha Lewis, Wanda Jones, Wanda Goodman and Trynetta Goodman. Sandy Whitney was on hand to make sure everyone had a chance to talk to the Easter Bunny.

Terrell Johnson, a third grader from Dexter School, and Rafael Vargas, age 3, were the winners of large Easter baskets for finding the golden eggs that were hidden on the playground.

Brent Vargas, 3, and Vonshell Vann, 2, found the most eggs in the 1-to 4-year-old age group. Ben Cropper, in kindergarten at Patch, and Shelley Whitney who will start school in August, found the most eggs in the 5-to 8-year-old category. William Harris, sixth grade at Faith, and Jessica Thomas, fourth grade at Wilbur, found the most eggs in the 9-13 age group.

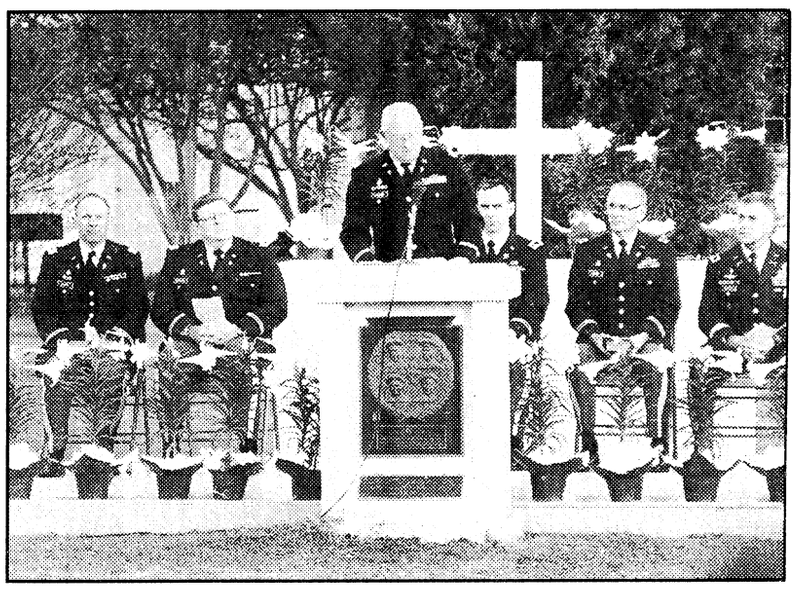
Post holds Easter services

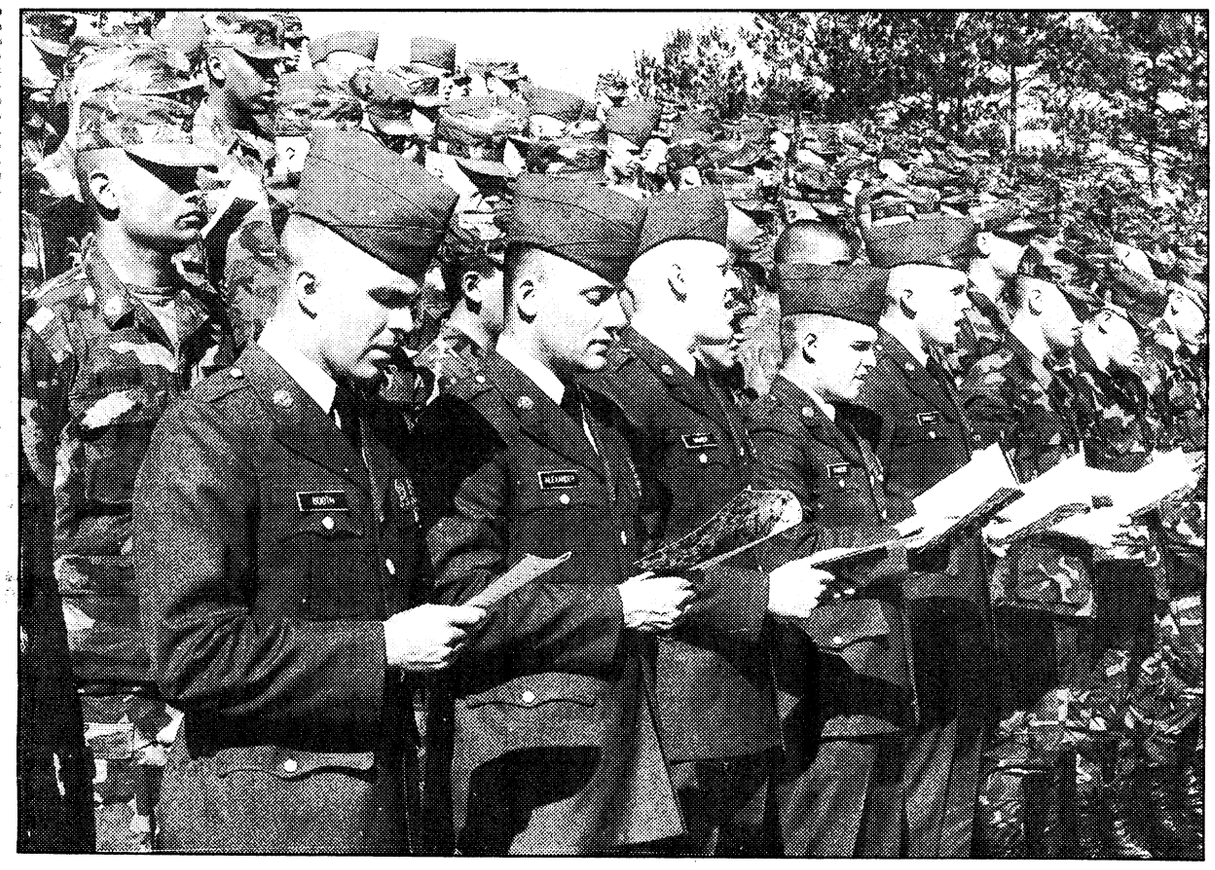


By Debra Galle
USAIC Chaplains' Office

More than 11,000 people attended religious services, programs and concerts on Fort Benning during Holy Week and Easter.

Annual Easter Sunrise services were held at the Field of Four Chaplains and at the Infantry Training Center Duck Pond. Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Paul Cassibry was the guest speaker at the service.

"God meets man at his greatest point of need," said Cassibry, by relating the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ to our lives now. "The most important relationship in life is one's relationship with God. Easter Sunday is not important because of things, but is important because of our relationship with God in Christ." said Cassibry



Bible readings from John 11:25, 26; Mark 16: 1-6; and II Corinthians 5: 16-21 were included in Cassibry's remarks. He said that we can invite God in Christ to be that source of experience we need to be alive and to have the strength to be his person wherever we are in the world.

Passover answers questions of freedom

By Chap. Barry R. Baron
USAIC Chaplains' Office

What is freedom for? Are people supposed to be free only so that they can do whatever they want, or is freedom for people to fulfill a higher purpose? Passover, the Jewish festival of freedom, provides answers to these questions.

Passover commemorates God's miraculous deliverance of the Jewish people from Egyptian slavery. According to the biblical account, God brought plagues to convince Egypt's king to free his Israelite slaves. The tenth plague was the death of all Egyptian first-born children and animals. While the Egyptian first-born died, the Israelite first-born were spared. As this was about to occur, God commanded that the Jews observe an annual festival in memory of their liberation. The festival was named "Passover" because God "passed over" the houses of the Israelites when he slew the Egyptian first-born.

Passover is an eight-day festival. On the first two evenings, Jews participating in a Seder, a communal meal at which the story of Passover is told and the meaning of freedom discussed. Throughout the eight days, Jews refrain from eating bread or other leavened products. This abstinence commemorates the haste of Israel's exodus from Egypt. Since, in the haste of departure, unrisen dough was snatched from the oven, the Israelites ate unleavened bread.

The message of Passover is one of freedom for a purpose. In the Bible, the Israelites are reminded continually that they were freed from slavery to do God's work in the world. Jews are directed to remember their origins and respond appropriately. "You shall not oppress a stranger, for you know the feelings of the stranger, having yourselves been strangers in the land of Egypt (Exodus 23:9)."

Freedom has a purpose. As free people, we in America have an obligation. That obligation is to remember the conditions of suffering which accompany servitude and to work to further God's plan for humanity by alleviating those conditions.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Howard O. McGillin Jr.
Legal Assistance Division

Q. I went downtown about six months ago and bought a new stereo system. I could not come up with the cash, so I decided to apply for credit. The manager said I could only get credit if I filled out a military pay allotment form. They had the forms right there in the store, so it was real easy to do.

I stopped making payments about two months after I bought the system. The store manager has been calling my company commander. The commander is really steamed about the debt. He is also threatening to chapter me if I do not pay. What can I do?

A. You have several major problems. Unlike some of our questions, this one requires answers from a couple of the Divisions at the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate and the U.S. Army Trial Defense Service.

Within the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, the Legal Assistance Division normally handles advice to soldiers on personal legal affairs such as debts while the Administrative Law Division assists the commander in interpreting laws and regulations. The Trial Defense Service is not a Division within the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, but is a separate organization staffed by judge advocate personnel. It would handle counseling on chapter actions against a soldier. Before answering your question, I have consulted with both of the other two offices.

First, you have entered into an apparently valid credit contract. I strongly suggest you make an appointment with Legal Assistance to have the contract reviewed by an attorney who can inform you of consequences associated with your contract. Most of the businesses who sell to soldiers are in full compliance with the federal and state laws regulating credit contracts. There are some exceptions, so you should have your contract reviewed by an attorney.

The better solution is to have the contract reviewed before you sign it. If it is really a "good deal on Saturday, it will still be a "good deal" on Monday after a quick review of the contract by Legal Assistance. Since Desert Shield/Storm are winding down, the Legal Assistance Division is scheduling appointments with only a one or two day wait. I strongly suggest you take the time to have the contract reviewed before you sign.

The second problem is the Army's response to requests for assistance from your creditors. Make no mistake, Army policy makes it clear that soldiers are responsible for paying their just debts. If you fail to pay your debts, the commander can consider giving you a reprimand, chaptering you out of the service, or under some conditions, recommending you for Court-Martial!

One of the points in your question, however, was very troubling. You stated that the creditor required you to fill out a military pay allotment form. I asked the Administrative Law Division about this and they gave me the following information.

Army Regulation 600-15 states that creditors that require soldiers to pay their debts by military allotment may lose their privilege of requesting any Army assistance in collecting the debt. The Army is not a debt collection agency, however, the commander can counsel you for failure to pay debts.

If the creditor is violating Army policy on just debts, the commander may legitimately refuse to provide any assistance in resolving the debt problem. In order to obtain any assistance, the creditor must send a number of documents to the commander. Most creditors fail to comply with this provision, and consequently should be denied assistance from the chain of command. Commanders and leaders should refer to AR 600-15 to determine the exact requirements for documentation. If commanders or leaders have any questions about their role in this process, they should contact the Administrative Law Division at 545-3285.

This failure by your creditor, does not however, relieve you of the obligation to pay the debt if it is just. If you fail to pay this just debt, your commander may recommend you for an administrative or "chapter" discharge. If you face this consequence, you should contact the Trial Defense Service at 545-2176.

Credit problems are one of the most common matters we handle in the Legal Assistance Division. As you can see, however, the consequences extend quite far. If you must use credit, seek qualified Legal Assistance before signing the contract. Encourage the soldiers who work for you to do the same. If you get in too deep, request assistance from the Army Community Service Budget Counseling Office, or contact Legal Assistance. You cannot ignore your credit obligations.

If you have questions about credit, or your rights, call and ask for an appointment with a Legal Assistance attorney at 545-3281.

Safety a necessity with sports

By Infantry Branch Safety Office

Play Ball! From spring training to the World Series, we Americans exalt our "national pastime." Baseball isn't limited to the national level, nor are the players limited to those in the National and American Leagues.

Those leagues don't have a corner on the baseball market, by any means. Youth in little league and local school teams have carved out a fair-sized chunk of the baseball scene.

Granted, little Joey who lives down the street isn't gunning for Dale Murphy's job, and cute Sally with the pony tail doesn't throw 90 mph fastballs. They're pouring out all they have into the sport, though.

The fans in the stands cheer them just as loudly as they cheer the big leaguers. They perch at the edge of their seats in anticipation of the close call at third and jump to their feet in response to homers. These fans are rooting for their friends, their neighbors, and their children.

The kids on the field aren't playing for multimillion dollar salaries or athletic shoe endorsement contracts. They're playing for fun, and their fun should be safe.

Many athletic injuries can be avoided. Parents and coaches owe it to little leaguers to make their sport as safe as possible.

Personal protective equipment can prevent baseball related injuries. Wild pitches are the greatest threat to batters. Therefore, batting helmets are an essential safety item for protection. To be effective, the helmet must fit well and be approved.

Catchers are around most of the action on the field. Thus, they are more vulnerable to injuries. They require extra protection, to include helmet with face mask and chest, knee, and shin pads.

The youth of the players presents a potential hazard. Youngsters often have short attention spans, especially if the game isn't proceeding at a blistering pace. Inattention and distraction are two primary causes of baseball injuries.

To alleviate boredom and prevent accidents, idle fielders should be encouraged to chatter during lulls in the game. Players on the sidelines should be observing and studying those on the field to learn playing tips.

Collisions on the playing field often result in injuries. Establishing zones of defense will help fielders avoid collisions, especially when chasing high fly balls. Fielding players should always call out their intentions.

Throwing the bat while running to first base is a major source of injury among young players. Coaches should inform players exactly what to do with the bat after hitting the ball.

Some leagues have players drop the bat in a specially marked area near where they start running. Another practice is calling players "out" if they fail to drop the bat correctly.

Baseball offers players recreation, competition, and athletic and sportsmanship training. Spectators are offered entertainment and excitement. Safety is an element both players and spectators must be committed to.

Constant attentiveness, correct teaching of skills, and mandatory use of protective equipment are important ingredients. Awareness of safety hazards and proper instruction in accident prevention will avert many baseball accidents and injuries.

Families make videos for TV special

Montgomery Ward & Co.

Officials for Project "Better Than A Letter," the Montgomery Ward and USO video communications program for Persian Gulf troops, are inviting families and friends to share their taped messages for a possible ABC television special, according to Bernard F. Brennan, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Montgomery Ward & Co.

The video messages could be used as part of an ABC television special to be aired during the network's Fourth of July programming saluting the U.S. troops and their loved ones. Whether the special becomes a reality depends on the quality and quantity of video tapes submitted for consideration.

If the special is produced, those families whose tapes are included in it will be awarded a $1,000 shopping spree at Montgomery Ward as well as a free tape of the program.

"We want to share with the American people a special insight into how our troops and their loved ones dealt with the emotional ups and downs associated with the military deployment and long-distance separation during the Persian Gulf crisis," said Brennan.

Project "Better Than A Letter" continues to provide free videotaping and viewing services to the families, friends and military personnel of Operation Desert Storm through each of its 346 retail stores in 39 states nationwide. Additionally, the troops remaining in the Persian Gulf area still have the opportunity to tape messages to mail home and to view tapes from their loved ones.

Montgomery Ward initiated the program in conjunction with the USO in September 1990, with a donation of more than $2 million worth of videotaping and viewing equipment to the troops of Operation Desert Shield/Storm, and free taping and viewing services in each of the company's retail stores for families and friends in the states.

To date, more than 250,000 videocassettes have been distributed through the program to the military in the Persian Gulf region to tape messages to send home, and more than 10,000 families and friends have sent taped messages to their loved ones stationed in the Gulf.

For those wishing to share all or segments of their videotape, the tapes are being collected at any Montgomery Ward store location and can be dropped off to the attention of the Store Manager. Tapes may also be mailed directly to Montgomery Ward & Co., Montgomery Ward Plaza, Chicago, Ill. 60671, Attention: Charles A. Holland, Corporate Communications Dept. 8-A. The deadline for submitting tapes for consideration is Saturday.

Since video tapes submitted for the purpose of this collection cannot be returned, duplicate tapes may be made free of charge at any Montgomery Ward store. The store will forward the duplicate and return the original.

"Whether or not you wish to share your tape," Brennan said, "I would like to thank you for helping make Project 'Better Than A Letter' such a success for the people who needed it the most — our service men and women of Operation Desert Shield and Operation Desert Storm."

Treasure-hunting dangerous for children

Infantry Branch Safety Office

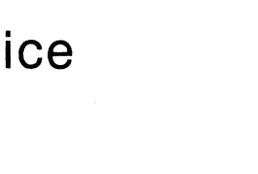
Picture your children roaming the fields and woods, in search of elusive treasure that sets their imaginations ablaze. Perhaps they're searching for arrowheads, which transport them to Western Plains covered by buffalo herds and Indian hunters.

Adventurous, inquisitive children are constantly on the lookout for discoveries that carry them to distant lands and times. Playing on a deserted construction site, they may happen across a tiny, silver tube. They may unearth an artillery shell in an area adjacent to a military range.

Such finds may be considered a stroke of good luck. Actually, their discovery may be the least fortunate event of their young lives. These items can explode, causing injury or death.

Blasting caps, or fuse detonators, are packed with dense, high strength explosive. They can be as short as one inch long. They're sensitive to flame, heat, friction, and shock. They're used to detonate explosives and may be found around quarries and construction sites.

Duds are munitions that have not exploded. Duds may be unexploded rockets, missiles, mortar rounds, artillery shells, or grenades. Just because these munitions didn't explode the first time, that doesn't mean they can't explode. On the contrary, any handling or motion could cause an explosion. Again, these deadly dangers are often small enough to fit in the palm of your hand. However, they are still as deadly as the reason they were made.



Beware of duds in and around current and historic ranges and impact areas. They may also be present in any military training area. Be cautious in areas adjacent to ranges and training grounds.

The key to protecting children from these lurking dangers is education. Children must be made aware of the hazards, where they may be found, and what to do if they find or suspect they've found one.

Their immediate reaction must be, "Don't Touch." Then they should contact the military police. If police aren't nearby, they should contact a parent or teacher.

Children love to search and discover, but they need to be trained about the treasures that will blow up in their faces.

Infantry conference begins

By Jon R. Anderson
Bayonet staff writer

Lessons learned from Operations Desert Storm and Desert Shield were among the highlight discussions of this year's Infantry Conference, said attendees.

The conference, which is hosted annually by the United States Army Infantry Center at Fort Benning, began Tuesday and ends today.

"The purpose of the Infantry Conference," said Maj. Lawrence Pallotta, conference coordinator, "is to bring field commanders and parts of their staff together at the focal point of infantry operations so that they can get updated and briefed on what is happening in the world of the infantry."

The conference also provides arms and equipment manufacturers an opporunity to display their products to the military community.

"This allows us to show our potential customers what our products are, but more importantly, it allows us the opportunity to find out what his requirements are so we can better our designs," said Ed Schumacher, who formally headed the service rifle section of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, but now represents a firearms training equipment company.

Retired Maj. Gen. John Cleland Jr. said the things that most stood out in his mind from this year's conference were the discussions led by officers who commanded units during Operation Desert Storm.

"What each of them said was that the Army's doctrine is right, that we've got the finest soldiers they've ever seen, that leadership knows what they're doing and that our training is right on," said Cleland, who now lectures on leadership principles.

Lt. Gen. Gary Luck, XXIII Airborne Corps commander, explained there was a "recipe for victory," the high quality of today's soldier being the "biggest ingredient in that recipe."

Luck also attributed the overall theater strategy as an important factor in the allied victory, saying not only was it successful on a military level, but on a political one as well.

"To be honest," said Col. Ted Reid, 197th Infantry Brigade commander, "this was the first time I was able to have a complete understanding of what other units did," explaining that through much of the conflict he was operating without any source of news.

Reid summarized the feelings of much of the attendees in saying, if for no other reason, the conference was important because it provided a forum to exchange ideas and observations. "It's also nice to see old friends," he added.

197th commander speaks on unit's Desert Storm role

By Jon R. Anderson
Bayonet staff writer

Rumors that the 197th Infantry Brigade might be moving to Fort Stewart are completely unfounded, said Col. Ted Reid, brigade commander, in a press conference at Fort Benning April 4.

Plans are being made for the unit to become part of the 24th Infantry Division, said Reid, which is based at Fort Stewart, but "we will stay right here at Fort Benning.

Reid explained that a move to Fort Stewart wouldn't be feasible because of a lack of troop and family housing facilities on the post, as well as limited training areas. "It just wouldn't be cost effective,"he said.

With the last of his troops and equipment expected to be back by the April 20, Reid said his primary concern now is to get his men some rest and relaxation time.

"Since Aug. 10, which is when we went on alert, we haven't had a single day off," said Reid, going on to explain that blocks of leave time are being scheduled for the brigade through the spring and summer.

Despite the heavy, long work load during operations in the Mideast, Reid expressed his admiration for his men and their accomplishments in a strange land.

"We took a bunch of young soldiers away from fast food, all female companionship, absolutley no alcohol, no cars and put them in the middle of the desert for seven months and they performed admirably," he said. "They rose to the occasion every time."

Reid said the hardest part of the conflict for him personally was the uncertainty, explaining that he "really didn't know how tough the fighting would be until we actually made contact. If we were unprepared on any level, it was for the ease in which the campaign went — we were prepared for a much harder war."

"We had a philosophy,' he continued, "that all roads home led through Iraq," and with that road now traveled, Reid said that the hardest part for him, and he suspects for his troops as well, is seeing green again.

"It's just real good to be home," he said.

535th returns to Benning

By James C. Rupp
Bayonet staff writer

The 535th Engineer Detachment arrived back at Fort Benning April 4 after being deployed to the Middle East since Nov. 21. The detachment is now permanently located at Fort Benning.

The unit, consisting of approximately 15 soldiers, has taken up headquarters in Building 5347 in the Harmony Church area.

The mission of the 535th is the operation of generators which produce 750 and more kilowatts of power. It was these generators that provided power to the Patriot missle stations, backup power to hospitals in Saudi Arabia and electrical power to the site of the cease-fire talks in Iraq. The unit also evaluated electrical damage to networks in Kuwait.

After being mobilized, the two companies trained at Fort Benning and departed for Saudi Arabia Oct. 30.

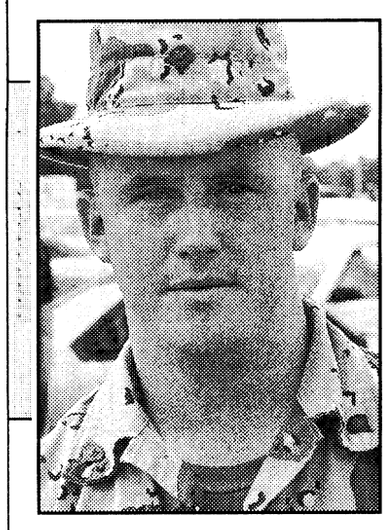
OPINION

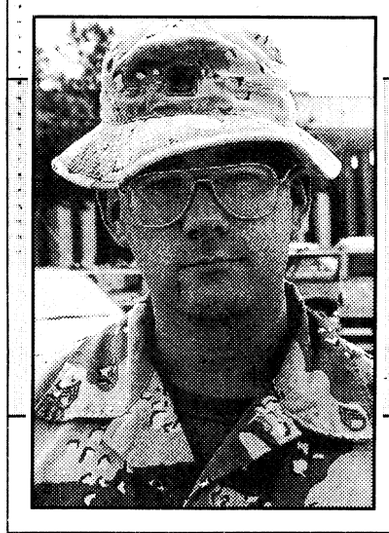
VARIOUS VOICES:

If you could change anything about the military uniform, what would you change?



Sgt. Gerard Wilson, Troop D, 4th Cavalry — "I'd flatten the pockets. I know they are supposed to be cargo pockets, but I know a lot of soldiers who would prefer sewn-down pockets while in garrison."

Sgt. 1st Class Troy G. Carrol, Company E, Conus Replacement Center — "I'd change the cap; maybe introduce one which holds its shape better."



2nd Lt. Laura Favand, Walter Reed Army Medical Center, Washington, D.C. — "I believe that I'd change the hats; perhaps go back to the old hats that looked like baseball caps."

Spc. Jeffrey Berrong, 72nd Engineer Group, 197th Infantry — "I'd prefer to stay in DCU's (Desert Camouflage Uniform); especially if we're really moving to Fort Stewart. I also think that shorts would be good, especially in warmer climates."

Sgt. Jean Chouloute, Company D, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor — "I'd bring back the old tanker uniforms. It's more convenient and it would set the tanker apart in the same way that Rangers are set apart by their black berets."

Staff Sgt. Edward Marchinsky, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry — "I'd add more pockets to the uniform and set them in less awkward positions."

Bayonet editors appreciate letters

By Clyde Snively

Stress day in the Bayonet office is Friday.

Oh sure, Wednesday we smash computer equipment as we try to send late-breaking news stories down to the Ledger-Enquirer where our paper's printed.

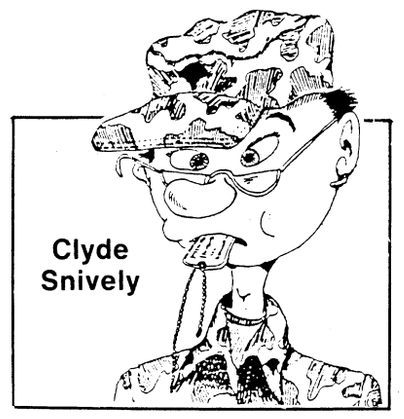
On Thursday, we beat one another over the head with pica sticks as the L-E staff comes through and re-arranges pages because someone managed to sell more ads than we had planned for.

But Friday's the day the Bayonet hits the street. That's when the calls come in. Not the calls you like to receive that say, "hey Sergeant Barnes, you did it again!" or "great story, Allie, sure do appreciate the coverage."

Oh, those calls come all right — about the time the caller wants another article printed. But the early callers are people whose articles either didn't run, got cut, mangled, or what have you.

Like I'm still reading the headlines on the front page when the calls start.

This past week I was the designated complaint taker. It's just one of those nice extra duties we all get stuck with.



From Directorate of Community Activities, we got a call about a story that ran, but shouldn't have. And about a story that should have but didn't.

This was the week when the ad lady ripped our paper to smithereens and basically anything "below the fold," as we journalists like to say, went into a black hole.

Another caller wanted to know why a picture of a check presentation didn't run. I waffled. I tap-danced. I skated the issue. I sweated bullets. I did all that because I didn't know the simple answer to that question — namely, Army regulation states: "Editors, thou shall not publish check-presentation photos in your Army newspapers."

I did finally get a question I could answer. It came from a nice lady up in Security Division. She wanted to know why we insisted on running non-military abbreviations for ranks.

I did tell her that was the second commandment of Army newspaper editors: "Thou shall follow the Associated Press Style Guide." I also told her I liked it better too (not that that matters).

I mean if I were a major general, I'd rather be a "Maj. Gen.," than an "MG." I always thought of MGs as sports cars.

As for my rank, SPC, no one outside the Army has any idea what that is and inside the Army, especially if you're looking at message traffic that's been reproduced umpteen million times, you're never sure if the person is really an SPC or an SFC.

I mean, I wouldn't mind being confused for a senior non-commissioned officer, but how do you think an SFC feels when he or she is mistaken for a lowly SPC.

In the newspaper business, we Spcs. would never be mistaken for an SFC.

But I must say, calls of praise or calls laced with poison, at least we know you're out there and doing something with the newspaper besides lining bird cages and wrapping fish (also makes a great window cleaner).

I would like to make one recommendation. As much as we appreciate your phone calls, letters would be even better.

By phoning, you're making your feelings and thoughts known to one person, the one you're talking with. But by writing, 30,000 other soldier and civilian Bayonet readers get to see what you think.

This could result in even more people writing. Then we'd have a true editorial page on page two and our editors would be so happy.

Spc. Clyde Snively is a Bayonet columnist.

Army chief of staff welcomes troops home

On behalf of the entire Army and a grateful nation, welcome home.

For each of you, this day marks the end of an operation of historic significance — an operation that will help define the very soul of the community of nations for decades to come.

Under some of the most demanding conditions ever faced by America's Army, you have won a monumental victory — a victory that will be honored for as long as Americans remember their past. You have restored freedom to a nation brutalized by a ruthless dictator; you have brought peace to a region that is vital to the health of the entire world; and you have rekindled a deep sense of national pride that wells in the hearts of the American people. This pride is evident in all the flags and yellow ribbons that cover our landscape from coast to coast. And it shines in the eyes of your sons and daughters, your husbands and wives, and your friends and neighbors who now welcome you back with open arms.

Equally important, you have shown to a watching world what the trained and ready Army of the United States can accomplish. Your magnificent victory in the desert will give a powerful lesson to the renegade regimes of the world that might be foolish enough to contemplate aggression. Above all, you have shown the character and the mettle of American people: courageous in war, compassionate in peace, and committed to the service of the nation.

Even as we celebrate your triumphant homecoming, let us never forget those soldiers who will never return, the valiant men and women who have given their lives in the name of freedom. They now join the sacred roll call of brave Americans who have fallen in battle in the defense of this nation and our way of life over the past two centuries. Their sacrifice — and yours — has not been in vain. For in a land thousands of miles away, the children of Kuwait are now awakening to a new day, a day free from repression and fear, a day bright with renewed hope for the future.

Your mission is now over. Your task is complete. As you now rejoin your friends and families, you should each carry with you great pride in the contributions you have made to a peaceful world. Wherever you go in the years ahead, and whatever course your life may take, you will forever be known as a soldier of Desert Storm.

Welcome Home.

Gen. Carl E. Vuono
Army chief of staff

Commander shows support for Desert Storm victory

As the nation expresses its joy and gratitude for our great victory in Operation Desert Storm, all members of Forces Command can note with pride their important role in this historic achievement.

You have successfully executed the largest mobilization and development since World War II. You have called into duty more than 139,000 reservists and National Guardsmen from more than 2,000 towns and cities from every state throughout the Continental United States, District of Columbia, Guam, Germany and Puerto Rico. You have mobilized more than 1,000 reserve component units and prepared them for service at more than 40 mobilization sites throughout this great country. You deployed more than 60,000 of these outstanding citizen soldiers overseas through a multitude of airports and seaports with great courage, . . and with tactical brillance you crushed the enemy and brought liberty to an oppressed people and in so doing captured the hearts and respect of freedom loving people everywhere, particularly in these great United States of America.

To achieve this stunning victory, we presented the enemy a sudden onrush of relentless, overwhelming combat power — but this singular event was in fact the culmination of years of professional planning, through training and work. As civilian, military, and family members of active and reserve units, Continental United States armies, and a network of extraordinary training centers, you forged a total force of unprecedented readiness. Although you knew that the future would test us, you could not know that the test would come so soon. When it came, you were ready.

Although we met our national objectives at a minimum cost in suffering and loss of life, some have made the ultimate sacrifice. Their legacy is a vision of a world of international order, justice and morality. Their legacy is the irrefutable demonstration that the United States has the total force necessary to make that vision possible. Their legacy is the gratitude of the nation and freedom-loving peoples all over the world.

Ensure every serviceman and woman, civilian and family member in the Forces Command understands the critical role they played in this historic event and the undying admiration and appreciation we have for their magnificent effort.

Gen. Edwin H. Burba
Forces Command commander

LETTER

'Sledgehammer' says thank you

As the 197th Infantry Brigade completes it return to Fort Benning and our soldiers are once again reunited with their families, we want to personally thank everyone in the Fort Benning community who contributed so much to our success in Operation Desert Storm.

The entire installation did an absolutely superb job in helping the Brigade and our family members during our seven-month deployment. Some worked with the 197th on an almost daily basis to support both our operations here as well as abroad, initially in Saudi Arabia and later in Iraq. Others worked diligently and made enormous sacrifices to assist the rear detachment in performance of their mission. The Brigade is extremely fortunate to be part of such a caring and concerned military community.

We also need to recognize and thank the spouses and families who prevailed throughout this deployment with, as always, one of the toughest jobs — taking care of the home front while still maintaining the morale of a loved one deployed overseas. You did a job under tough conditions.

There is just no way that we can adequately express our tremendous appreciation and gratitude to everyone who , in so many ways, made the Sledgehammer Brigade's participation in Operation Desert Storm such a resounding success. We could not have enjoyed the success we did without your help. You who stayed behind are the true heroes. Thanks for a job well done.

Col. Theodore W. Reid
197th commander

More come home!

The last members of the 197th Infantry Brigade returned from Saudi Arabia Wednesday, as well as the advance party of the 34th Medical Battalion, according to public affairs officials. Nearly 400 soldiers arrived at Lawson Army Airfield, at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday to a crowd of waiting family members, friends, and loved ones.

36th commander talks about Gulf

By Jon R. Anderson
Bayonet staff writer

Some smaller units may not be able to return to Fort Benning until "as late as October," said 36th Engineer Group Commander Col. Henry S. Miller Jr.

Many family members are concerned that units are not returning in the order in which they left, said Miller, but explained that because of their specific functions, they are still considered mission essential in the Mideast theater of operations.

The 43rd Engineer Battalion, 598th Maintanance Company, 608th Ordnance Co., 533rd Transportation Co., and portions of the 215th Finance Support Unit are some of the units Miller identified as being necessary for the ongoing post-combat operations.

Miller elaborated, however, clarifying that these units would be redeployed as soon as possible.

Miller reflected on the war as a memorable experience, saying that he was thankful to see the training, equipment, and soldiers come together and work sucessfully. "It was magnificient," he said.

Miller also pointed out that it was important the soldiers of his rear detachment not go without recognition. "There were many times when the rear detachment here at Fort Benning probably had harder days than we did in the desert," said Miller.

Memories

Howard Melvin points out equipment of the original paratroopers of World War II. To him it's not just another display at the Infantry Museum, he made four combat jumps during the war and then another during Vietnam. Melvin was part of the 549th Aerial Delivery Co. which celebrated it first reunion at Fort Benning. Melvin remembers one jump into Sicily when the weather was particularly bad. "We thought it was hailing, but once we started seeing the holes appear in the plane, we realized it was shrapnel.

AER

Giving helps Army take care of its own

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

Candace didn't really have a family to rely on.

Unfortunately, neither did her husband Jim.

Candace's family was very poor, and Jim's parents died when he was 17.

Jim was deployed to the Middle East in August and lost his seperate rations. This left Candace and their 2-year-old son, Bric, with not enough money to buy food. Sure, the danger pay or combat pay would kick in eventually, but for the first few months the financial strain would be unbearable.

Candace also learned she was pregnant.

> "Whatever the emergency is, we base our decision on the severity of the situation."
> Lois Terry

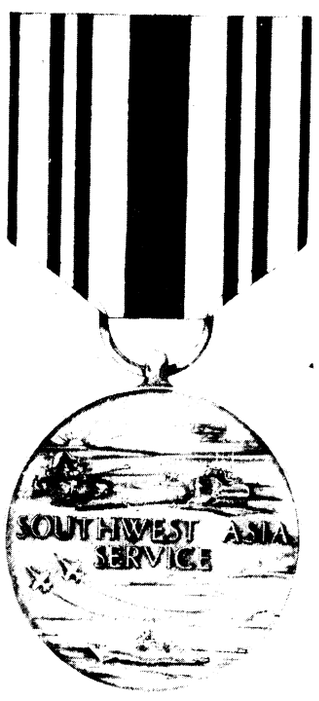
Since financial trouble had hit them with such a fury, they didn't know where to turn for help.

Candace remembered someone mentioning the Army Emergency Relief Fund and contacted her husband's unit representative. The representative then helped Candace make arrangements to recieve aid.

"Unfortunately I wasn't able to make rent payments for my off-post housing," said Candace, "because I had to spend part of the money on food for Bric, so I was coming up short on the rent."

"After a few months, I received an eviction notice from my landlord saying that I had to make payment immediately or my lease would be terminated and I'd be without a home," said Candace.

"Luckily I was able to get help from AER. They helped me fill out my paperwork and pushed it right through the system," she said.



According to Lois Terry, Fort Benning's accounting technician for AER, the hypothetical case described above can receive up to $1,500 for rent and utilities and in a more extreme case, more may be authorized.

"Each case we look at differently to determine what amount a family is to receive," said Terry.

"Whatever the emergency is, we base our decision on the severity of the situation," said Terry. "We have paid up to $2,000 for funerals or other extreme emergencies."

If someone is in need of emergency help with no other way to get assistance, AER will be there.

Fort Benning's AER's campaign will continue until June 30.

Army awards new medal

Soldiers receive recognition for Desert Storm

By Tom C. Hockaday
USAIC Public Affairs Office

A new medal has been designed and authorized for those soldiers who were deployed to the Persian Gulf.

Lt. Gen. Donald Jones, deputy assistant secretary of defense, Military Manpower and Personnel Policy, said "the Southwest Asia Service Medal specifically recognizes those men and women who deployed to the Persian Gulf and participated in this complex, demanding and highly successful operation."

The basic medal will be awarded for the period of Aug. 2, 1990 through Jan. 16, 1991. A campaign star will be authorized for the period Jan. 17, 1991 until a date yet to be determined.

The individual services will determine the actual eligibility and award instructions.

"In general, those service members who deployed to the Southwest Asia theatre of operations, and that will be defined by the joint staff, will be eligible for this award," said Jones.

Now that the Southwest Asia Service Medal has been authorized by the president, it will take about three to four months before the medals will be ready to be distributed to those individuals who have earned them.

The Department of Defense plans to purchase about 540,000 of the medals. Those soldiers authorized to wear it will be given the first medal free.

Benning's one-stop employment office relocates

Directorate of Civilian Personnel

The Directorate of Civilian Personnel and the Directorate of Community Activities has announced the relocation of their One Stop Employment Information Office and Army Community Services Family Member Employment Assistance Office.

The office has moved to Cross Country on the Hill at the intersection of Auburn Avenue and 21st Street, Columbus, Ga.

Fort Benning is dependent upon competent and capable personnel to carry out its mission and embarks on this move as a positive step to improve job information services to potential applicants, according to DCP officials.

Officials also state that the move is done as an effort to provide better support not only to the general public but also military and civilian family members. This approach toward improved visibility is a step to provide a more competitive edge in the recruitment of top quality candidates which will be required as the army prepares for the build down and approaches Civil Service 2000.

Representatives encourage community businesses to avail themselves of the services in the ACS Family Member Employment Assistance Office and use this recruiting source when a vacancy occurs within their organization.

Services available in the DCP Employment Office are:

- Counseling and assistance to applicants concerning all matters of federal employment with particular emphasis on the qualifications required for various positions
- Current statewide job information by the Georgia State Employment Service
- Recruiting bulletins are posted on the bulletin board. Additionally, a copy of a specific bulletin may be obtained upon request.

A 24-hour recorded message listing all appropriated fund recruiting bulletins issued by Fort Benning open for the receipt of applications may be heard by dialing 545-7084. Changes are made to the recording on Monday on an as needed basis.

ACS Family Member Employment Assistance services include:

- Total information on local employment, both federal and non-federal opportunities;
- Individualized career assistance and counseling;
- Job search, employment, and personal development training workshops;
- Help and advice in completing employment applications such as SF-171, Application for Federal Employment; DA 3433, Application for Non-appropriated Fund Employment, resumes, etc.
- Education and job skills training resources in the local area
- A job bank containing current vacancies in the private sector
- Job skills training information and classes

An annex will be maintained in Building 2634, Soldiers Plaza each Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Call 545-7510 or 545-4357.

Interested individuals are encouraged to visit the office at Cross Country, the telephone number is 563-3833. Job information concerning civil service, non-appropriated fund, and Post Exchange is available.

Applications for PX employment are accepted each Wednesday from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. Civil Service and non-appropriated fund applications are accepted Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 4:45 p.m.

Representatives state that this relocation is a trial and that surveys will be conducted to determine the public's receptiveness to the move.

According to officials, through the combined and cooperative efforts of these services, the future of a quality work force is assured not only for the federal government, but also in the placement of family members of active and retired military and civilian employees.

Illinois sets special election

Illinois has set a special election to elect a U.S. Representative for the 15th Congressional District. This seat is vacant due to the resignation of Rep. Maddigan who has been appointed to the Department of Agriculture. The primary for this election is scheduled for May 21 and the general election is July 2. The counties involved are Dewitt, Ford, Grundy, Kankanee, Iroquois, Livingston, McLean, Piatt, and some portions of Champagne, Lasalle, Logan, Will and Woodford.

Illinois waives registration for U.S. service members and their spouses and dependents. Persons may request a ballot by completing the federal post card application (FPCA) and sending it to the local election official in the county of voting residence not later than 10 days before the election.

For more information, contact your unit voting assistance officer.

There are times when there's just not enough you can say.

Right now, for instance, as we search for the right words to salute you, the men, women and families of the U.S. military.

For now, we'll have to make do with "Thank you." But we also want to do more.

So on Armed Forces Day this year, we're lowering our prices on long distance calls. We want to give you a very special 24 hours.*

You have a lot of sharing to do with family and friends, and we want to help.

Army weapons systems earn high marks in Gulf war

Army News Service

In a report presented to budget committees on Capitol Hill, Army officials have begun circulating preliminary accounts of the technology — and the soldiers who applied it — that ultimately liberated Kuwait.

The early reports they say, are almost unanimous: the M-1A1 Abrams tank, the Bradley Fighting Vehicle, the Apache attack helicopter and other recent additions to the Army's inventory far outfought anything Iraqi forces could throw against them.

Among the accounts:

Abrams tank

●During a night move by the 3rd Armored Division, more than 300 tanks covered 200 kilometers without a single tank breaking down.

●Rounds fired form Soviet-made T-72 tanks struck seven M-1A1s; none of the U.S. tanks suffered damage.

●Thermal sights on the M-1A1 were able to find enemy tanks through the smoke from oil field fires and other battlefield obscurants; the Iraqi T-72s could not.

●Overall, M-1A1s maintained operational readiness rates over 90 percent before and during combat.

Bradley Fighting Vehicle

●Bradley readiness rates stayed over 90 percent both before and during combat.

●No transmission failures were reported during combat. Problems with the Bradley's transmission were widely reported during the Desert Shield build-up to war.

AH-64 Apache helicopter

●Apaches from the 101st Aviation Brigade fired the first shots of the war. Early Jan. 17, eight Apaches fired 27 Hellfire missiles at two Iraqi early-warning radar sites deep in western Iraq. The attack completely destroyed both sites, creating an air corridor used by the Air Force to begin its bombing campaign.

●In a single battle, the 229th Aviation Brigade's 4th Battalion destroyed 50 Iraqi tanks.

Patriot air defense system

●Patriots were fired against 47 incoming Scud missiles, intercepting 45 of them.

●Patriot readiness rates stayed above 95 percent throughout the deployment.

●An Air Force officer said, after Scud attacks on Dhahran and Riyadh during January, that "no one should underestimate the value of the Patriot system in this war. . .in the historical analysis and stories of this war, Patriot will be one of the key systems which influenced the outcome."

Other equipment drawing praise from Army officials includes the UH-60 Blackhawk, CH-47 Chinook and OH-58D Kiowa helicopters, the Joint Surveillance and Target Attack Radar System, and the Single-Channel Ground and Airborne Radio System.

Along with the successes, some needed improvements are finding their way into the early accounts. For example, reports presented to legislators said better identification, friend or foe, equipment is needed to reduce friendly fire casualties.

The Army is also studying an apparent need for improved night vision equipment for aviators flying over featureless terrain, and a similar need for better helicopter communications during nap-of-the-earth flying.

SPECIAL MILITARY PROGRAM

With Grateful Appreciation General Motors Salutes The Men And Women Of Our Armed Forces, And Offers Them Something Special:

An Easier Way To Buy A New Car Or Truck.

Your Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile, Buick, Cadillac and GMC Truck dealers have incentive plans already in place that make it easy to buy a new car or light truck.

But now through the end of the year, the divisions of GM are offering a Special Military Program to all active U.S. military personnel and reservists called to active duty during the Persian Gulf War or their spouses.

Here's how it works. You get three hundred dollars in down payment assistance, plus any additional down payment you make is matched up to five hundred dollars when you buy a new GM car or light truck and finance it through GMAC. That can mean as much as eight hundred dollars toward your purchase. Add that to existing incentives, and you can save even more. The Special Military Program is not available with the college graduate program, first-time buyer program or overseas vehicle purchase program. See your participating GM dealer for qualification details.

It's a small gesture on our part in partial exchange for the tremendous gesture each of you has made. And our way of expressing thanks for a job well done.

Q. How can I borrow money and still deduct the interest?

A. With a CB&T SpeciaLine or Fixed-Rate Home Equity Loan!

- No Origination Fee
- No Points
- No Annual Fee
- Low Closing Costs

Did you realize that beginning with 1991, the interest you pay on most consumer loans is no longer tax-deductible? However, you still may be able to take this tax-deduction with a CB&T SpeciaLine® or Fixed-Rate (2nd Mortgage) Home Equity Loan. That could save you hundreds, maybe even thousands, of dollars on your taxes! (Your regular tax advisor is, of course, your best source of information on what is tax-deductible for you.)

A CB&T SpeciaLine or Fixed-Rate Home Equity Loan can be an excellent way for you to finance such items as a new auto, a vacation, your child's education, or home improvements. And, at CB&T, there's no origination fee, no points and no annual fee to pay...along with low closing costs. (For example, on a $10,000 loan, your closing costs would be only $190.)

Why pay more taxes than you have to? Come to CB&T and let your home give you some needed credit... and deduct the interest! For more information, call (404) 649-4779 or come by the CB&T Mortgage Lending Office at 5650 Whitesville Road, Suite 102, in the Landmark Building.

Rifle team catches the 'early bird'

By Charlene L. LaDay-Hill
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

It's said that the early bird always catches the worm. In the case of the U.S. Army Service Rifle Team, they captured a win in the Early Bird Highpower Matches March 16 at Camp LeJeune, N.C.

Wiping out a "few good men" on their own turf, the Army team dominated all areas of the competition.

Shooting against 52 competitors, Spc. Lance S. Hopper won the 200-yard Standing Match with a 198 and 9Xs. He also took second in the Rapid-Fire events with a 199 in the 200-yard and a 194 in the 300-yard sitting categories.

Winning the Rapid Fires was Pfc. Grant L. Singley with a 200 - 13Xs in the 200-yard and a 200 - 11Xs in the 300-yard Sitting matches for an exceptional aggregate of 400 and 24Xs.

In addition to those victories, two team members were tied with a 196 in Standing and a 198 in the Rapid Fire events.

Sgt. 1st Class Bruce W. Gilbreath tied for the lead with Sgt. 1st Class John O. Chubb. Chubb was leading going into the final event at the 600-yard line. The event gave Chubb problems and opened the door for Gilbreath to take the win with a 782 and 26Xs.

The Army shooter's day continued to get better with the team matches. As the U.S.Army Marksmanship Unit shooters took first and second places over the Marines. The winning team members were: Hopper, Singley, Gilbreath, Chubb, Sgt. Vincent Greiner (team captain), and Sgt. 1st Class Harrison (team coach).

USAMU captain: 'hot as a pistol'

By Charlene L. LaDay-Hill
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

The U.S. Army International and Service Pistol Teams turned up the heat on its competition during the National Mid-Winter Pistol Championships in Tampa, Fla., March 12 through 17.

More than 290 shooters came out for the event. A total of 16 U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit shooters (six from International and 10 from Service) participated.

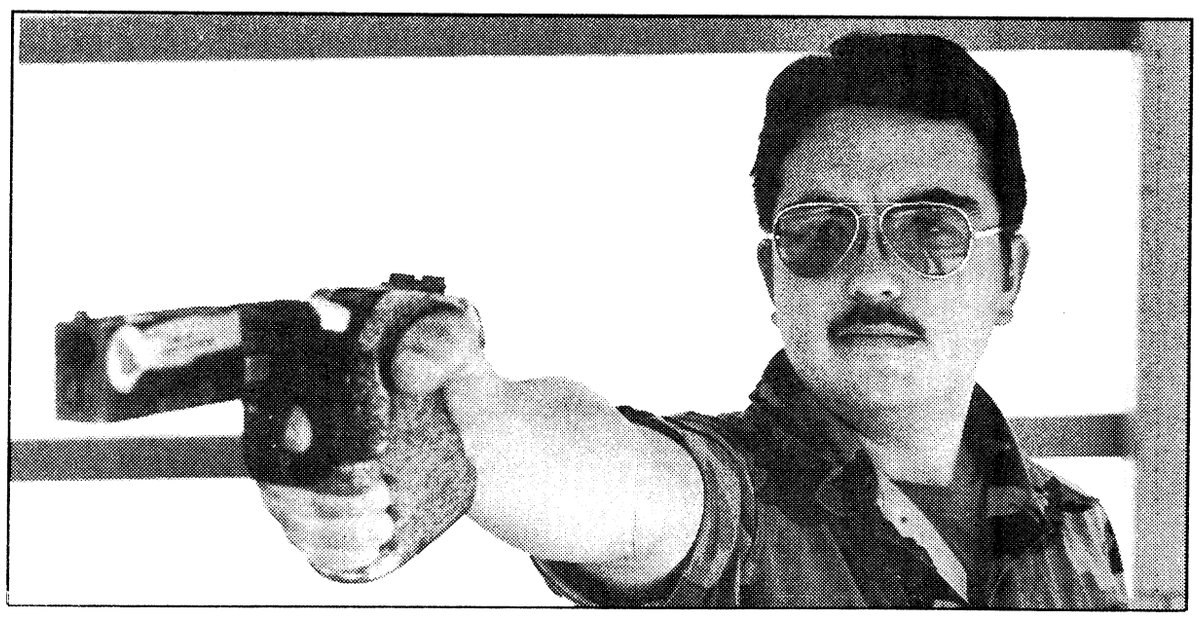
Victory became the middle name for International Pistol Shooter Capt. John T. McNally who won the Standard Pistol, Center Fire, and Rapid Fire Open events. In Standard Pistol, he scored a 563; Center Fire — 577; and Rapid Fire — 583. (McNally also placed fourth with an 868 in the Rapid Fire event of the Prado California World Cup in Ontario, Calif., March 24.)

Service Pistol shooter Sgt. 1st Class Gray W. Marsh won the Free Pistol with a 529. He also placed second in Center Fire with 873.

Another service shooter placing in Free Pistol was Master Sgt. Ronald D. Hale who got first sharpshooter with a 478.

For the International Pistol Team, Staff Sgt. John Ulrich placed fourth with a 508 and Spc. Donald C. Carl came in sixth with a 489 in the Free Pistol event.

Ulrich and Carl also placed in the Air Pistol, Standard Pistol, and Center Fire events.



In the Air Pistol, the International shooters took first, and third through seventh place spots.

Pfc. Philip R. Haynes got first expert with a 540. Ulrich placed third with a 560; following in fourth place was Carl with a 556. Spc. Ronald A. Watts, Pvt. 2 Army Freouf, and Pfc. Kimberly Wilson, took fifth, sixth and seventh places consecutively. Watts scored a 539, Freouf a 517, and Wilson a 480.

In the Standard Pistol event Ulrich came in sixth place with a 541; Carl shot a 521 for eighth place; and Watts came in 10th with a 507.

Ulrich, Watts, and Carl also placed third, seventh, and eighth, in the Center Fire event, respectively. Ulrich shot a 573, Watts a 563, and Carl a 559.

"The competition to me wasn't as up to par because the Reserve and National Guard shooters didn't attend," said Ulrich. "However, it was an excellent training match for the new shooters on the team. The competition level was challenging for them."

International Rifle shooters compete in World Cup matches

By Charlene L. LaDay-Hill
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

Three U.S. Army International Rifle Team shooters represented their service and country proudly during the Mexico City World Cup March 10 through 17.

Sgt. Troy C. Baker, Capt. David E. Chesser, and 2nd Lt. Kristin Peterson, all went up against the world's best shooters.

This event provided these United States Army Marksmanship Unit soldiers the chance to achieve the minimum qualifying score necessary to make the U.S. Olympic Tryouts.

In the Men's Air Rifle event, Baker placed fifth with a total score of 575. Chesser followed him finishing sixth with a 571. Both of them qualified for the Olympic tryouts in the air rifle.

Chesser also made the Olympic tryouts in the 3 x 40 Rifle event by placing 20th out of 61 shooters with an aggregate of 1,143. Baker came in 43rd with a 1,124.

In the English Match, Chesser fired his way to second with a 589; Baker placed fifth with a 582.

Making the 3 x 20 Rifle Gold Medal Team was Peterson, who placed fourth in the event with a total score of 573. She also placed second in the Women's Air Rifle with a 389. In addition to those events, she came in 11th in the Women's Prone Free Rifle with a 576.

No matter what the odds or the caliber of competition, these Olympic hopefuls are taking one match at a time.

Broken records fall easily

International rifle team conquers top scores

By Charlene L. LaDay-Hill
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

They came, they saw, they conquered.

That phrase best sums up the U.S. Army International Rifle Team's participation in the Three-Position & Prone Regionals, and the 38th Annual Sawgrass Championships in Florida.

During the regionals held March 8 through 10 in Hollywood, Fla., several national records were set in the Three-Position matches.

Capt. Rhonda Barush set a 195 record in the Open, Women, and Service Metallic Sight 20-shot Kneeling events. She also set the Women's Metallic Sight Half-course record with a 568.

"I was surprised when they told me I had broken all of those records," said Barush. "I try not to look at the score until it's over."

Barush's recent victory is one of many she hopes will help her toward her goal.

"My goal for this year is to get back on the national team in June. If I do that, I can have a chance to compete in the Olympic Tryouts," said Barush.

Spc. Thomas A. Tamas shot a record score of 187 in the Service Metallic Sight 20-shot Standing match. He also set a 575 Service Metallic Sight Half-course record.

1st Lt. Michael E. Anti set the Any Sight 20-shot Kneeling record 196 and Any Sight Half-course of 580. In addition to setting his record, he also became the overall winner of the regionals.

The team record was also set by U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit soldiers. Tamas and Anti set the Metallic Sight and Any Sight team records of 1,148 and 1,156 respectively.

After taking over the regionals, the shooters headed for Fort Lauderdale for the Sawgrass championships.

Every match was won by an Army shooter. Barush won the English match, Tamas won the overall 3,200-meter and both 1,600-meter prone events. Also, Maj. Boyd D. Goldsby won the Three-position aggregate.

Former POWs kick off daisy drive

Rex Ellis presents the first daisy to Col. John D. Fuller.

By James C. Rupp
Bayonet staff writer

The Columbus Valley Chapter, American Ex-Prisoners of War kicked off their annual daisy fund drive by presenting daisies to Col. John D. Fuller, post chief of staff.

This event was also held in honor of National Recognition Day for Former American Prisoners of War, April 9.

The daisies will be available at malls in Columbus and at Fort Benning. Contributions earned through the sales will go to veterans and former POW s who cannot help themselves. The funds will go to the Tuskegee Veterans Hospital, Fort Mitchell National Cemetery, Sara Spano Clothing Drive and the Andersonville National Cemetery and National POW Museum.

According to Rex Ellis, former POW and member of the Columbus chapter, the daisy was chosen as the official flower of POWs because of the age-old saying that "daisies never tell," and neither do Americans when captured.

Fort Benning from a Silver Wing's view. Staff Sgt. Mark Jackson stares out over the post just minutes before leaping out into the air above it.

Silver Wings master the skies

By James C. Rupp
Bayonet staff writer

The wind blows cold through the open doors of the UH- 1H Iroquois helicopter and Fort Benning seems to shrink as the aircraft climbs higher into the morning haze.

Inside the helicopter, one man points hurriedly to seven others, shouting out numbers in sequence. Then, he gives a simple command and the first man takes a step through the doors of the craft, hangs in the air for the briefest of instants... and is gone. Within the space of a few moments the Huey is empty, save for the pilots , who are already beginning to take it back to the ground. And in the space between ground and sky, hang eight royal blue parachutes.

The Silver Wings are Fort Benning's elite demonstration parachute team. According to Staff Sgt. Mark Jackson, non-commisioned officer in charge of the team, he is the only soldier actually assigned to the "unit." The remainder of the 18-member team act as instructors at either Ranger School or Airborne School.

The team is all volunteer, and Jackson says that 50 percent or more of those that apply to the Silver Wings do not meet the standards for the team.

"We try to pick people who not only are capable of doing the job, but present themselves well," Jackson says. "We're pretty high profile, we do a lot of work with kids, like baseball games and scouting events, so we want to be sure to present a good image for the Army."

The team jumps mostly at Airborne School graduations and community gatherings. They jump wtih a message as well.

"Each of the Army's jump teams have a message that they present whenever they jump. Ours is 'Say No to Drugs'." Jackson says.

"One of our biggest problems is funding," Jackson notes. "We are given just enough of a budget to jump safely. We' ve got no extra money to put into anything else, despite the fact that we're really a public relations group. But, we do the best with what we' ve got.

"It's a lot of work for everyone involved, it takes a lot of personal time from everyone, but they all know it's for a good cause and are willing to make those sacrifices."

The Silver Wings, for the most part, jump year round and sometimes go as far as Pennsylvania or Indiana for their demonstrations. However, it's easiest to see them on a sunny Friday morning descending on Main Post just a stone's throw from the Airborne Walk.

Jackson makes last-minute adjustments with the approaching helicopter crew.

The Silver Wings team packs up their equipment after making their last jump of the day while their helicopter crew looks on.

SPIRITUAL

Quality time helps children

By Donald Taylor
JSAIC Chaplain's Office

As I was thinking during this break between Mother's Day and Father's Day, I came up with the obvious question that should disturb all kids (or the kid in us all), and that is, when is "Kid's Day?"

Perhaps part of the answer is discovered in one of the Peanuts cartoons when Linus raises this very question to his grandmother, only to be informed that, "every day is Kid's Day."

The inner workings of the adult mind often baffle us with sheer simplicity and over eagerness (eager responsiveness), even if the answer is not too satisfying and does not guarantee a gift.

If every day is "Kid's Day," then how does each day take on a special meaning and tradition that greeting card companies should help us celebrate. If it does not have a special section in the card store, can it really be a special day?

Although I may have started out tongue-in-cheek, I think that the question demands a serious answer. Especially when we consider that as our society continues to change, families are faced with more demands on their time.

More and more the norm is working parents and "latchkey" kids. This isn't a criticism — it is reality. The burden for many parents is the ability to spend time with their children and to give themselves to their children.

There is a teaching from the word of God that says, "Train up a child in the way that he should go and when he is old, he will not depart from it."

It is the prayer of every parent from infancy through the "terrible two s" to the "impossible teens," that our children "turn out" well.

Such a thought means different things to each parent, but I think that it includes appropriating those values that parents hold dear — be a credit to the family name and perhaps a "chip off the old block," that they be successful and achieve those things that would make their parents proud.

It is not an original thought, but it "ain't easy being a parent." This may seem all too real when we are called into conferences with teachers or the kids are thrown out of school, or just the daily confrontations that we go through with our children. However, our children may respond (with the appropriate response), "it ain't easy being a kid."

Sometimes such sentiments produce from deep within our hearts our war stories. "Why, when I was your age, I had to. . .

Ever notice how the passing of years increases the distance from the school, the depth of the snow, climatic conditions, the amount of chores, and the significance of the accomplishments.

If we really want to give our kids a gift each day and make the day special, then we must focus on the time spent together, the investment in the child as a distinct and important human being, and above all, letting the child know that he or she is loved.

The way that we "train" a child is through the personal investment of time — being their for the child and clearly demonstrating and modeling for the child the important areas of life.

If we want our children to consider church an important area of life, then attend church and consistently live the requirements of such a lifestyle.

Our children do not live in a vacuum. They are acutely award of the world around them. They are attuned to gesture and word that is communicated.

Therefore, if we want our kids to "turn out" right, a great deal of it depends on how we treat and train them.

This is not designed to have parents feel guilty, but rather the opposite. It is tough being a parent — and a struggle to be a good one.

However, our children must become a priority, not an afterthought, and be given top billing in our lives.

Children can learn to open eyes to faith

By Debra Galle
USAIC Chaplain's Office

Children's eyes see the world with eager openness.

The Unit Ministry Team of Fort Benning hopes that parents take the opportunity to help their children learn about their faith as well as the world around them.

Many religious education and special children's worship opportunities are available.

Catholic Confraternity of Christian doctrine classes are each Sunday from 10 to 11 a.m. at Dexter School. Sacramental instruction may be scheduled through Phil Reilly at 545-5508.

A summer CCD program is scheduled for June.

Special children's liturgy masses are held throughout the year and are sponsored by CCD classes on a rotating basis. The masses include offertories in which the children bring canned goods to the alter as gifts. The food is then donated to Army Community Service.

The Infantry Center Chapel offers a children's church service each Sunday at the Infantry Center Chapel at 11 a.m.

Main Post Sunday School is held at the Religious Education Center, building 229, Crain Hall, from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m.

Sunday School is also offered at Lavoie Manor Chapel at 10 a.m., Sightseeing Road Chapel at 9:30 a.m., and Kelley Hill at 10 a.m.

Custer Terrace Chapel has Sunday School at 10 a.m. with Junior Church at 11:20 a.m.

Children of the Jewish Faith may attend Religious Education Class at the Sand Hill Education Center Annex, building 3008, Sunday at 10 a.m.

Vacation Bible School is held for one week each summer for Catholic and Protestant children. This year, VBS will be June 17-25.

For more information on any of the Religious Education programs, call the REC at 545-2771/2366.

Religious education gives a child something they can keep forever: their faith.

Ceremony honors FDR

Georgia Department of Natural Resources

The 46th commemorative ceremony honoring President Franklin D. Roosevelt will be held on the anniversary of his death, April 12, at 2 p.m. at the Little White House Historic Site in Warm Springs.

Judge Robert W. Tisinger, long time resident of Carrollton, Ga., and friend of the late President will deliver the keynote address. Tisinger has served the Georgia Electric Membership Corporation for more than 50 years as its attorney.

He helped charter the GEMC's forerunner, the Georgia Rural Power Reserve Electric Membership Corporation in 1937 and was instrumental in stating the publication, Rural Georgia in 1945. In nominating him for the GEMC Pioneer Award, an unknown admirer said of Tisinger,

"He has not sought high honors of lofty recognition; rather, he has sought to improve the life of his fellow man. He's truly a pioneer, one who goes first and prepares the way for others."

Other activities will include performances by the U.S. Marine Corps sentry and color guards from Albany, Ga., and the Fort Benning Infantry Center Band.

The bill that created the Rural Electric Administration , Executive Order 7037 was signed by FDR at the Little White House on May 11, 1935. REA provided the opportunity to bring electricity to farms and home in rural America.

So, it might be said that FDR's rustic little cottage in Georgia was the birthplace of the REA. FDR's bill did indeed provide the opportunity for electricity. Ahead lay the task of seeing that the miracle of electricity actually happened. Tisinger saw that it did.

When FDR signed the REA bill no more than 10 percent of American farms had electricity. Now most do. His order brought about a revolution that changed rural America's lifestyle. It was but one of many bills signed by FDR in an effort to bring the country out of the depths of the Great Depression.

Americans had faith in FDR and in his programs. They were fearful of what would happen to them when FDR died at 3:35 p.m. April 12, 1945, in Warm Springs.

The public is invited to attend the ceremonies which begin at 2 p.m., and to tour the house, the museum, and the other historic buildings before or after the ceremony. There will be no admission charge the entire day.

The Georgia Department of Natural Resources operates the site which is located on Georgia Highway 85W in Warm Springs. Operating hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. seven days a week. Plan your arrival no later than 4 p.m. to allow time for a full tour.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Virginia L. Carlton
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q. I am a Reservist who was called to active duty during Operation Desert Storm. Before being called up to serve, I was employed by a manufacturing company.

I have been deactivated from active duty, and I notified my employer that I was ready to return to work.

My employer told me that he may put me back to work in a month or so. Can he wait that long to reemploy me? Just what are my Reemployment Rights?

A. The Veterans' Employment and Training Service of the U.S. Department of Labor administers the Veterans' Reemployment Rights Act.

This law entitled you to be reemployed in your civilian job under certain conditions.

First, your former job must have been one which was "other than temporary." A temporary job is one that was mutually understood to be limited to a brief and nonrecurrent project or period of time.

Neither partnership nor joint venture relationships nor independent contractor relationships are covered by the act.

However, Congress intended that the statue be liberally construed in determining the existence of an employment relationship.

The characterization that the parties give to such a relationship is relevant but not dispositive of the issue.

Second, you must have left that job for the purpose of entering military service. You must not remain on active duty longer than four years unless the period beyond four years is "at the request and for the convenience of the Federal Government," in order to receive reemployment rights.

Active duty served by Reserve component members under the President's 10 U.S.C. 673 call-up does not count toward the four year active duty limit.

Also, if you left your job with the intent to report for purposes of being inducted into or entering active duty, you are still covered by the Veterans' Reemployment Rights Act even if you are subsequently rejected or delayed entry.

However, military academies' candidates and ROTC candidates are not covered by the law.

Third, you must be discharged or released from active duty under other than dishonorable conditions. DD-214 forms, if received, are evidence of discharge under other than dishonorable conditions.

You have up to 90 days after your release to apply for reinstatement in your civilian job if the orders cite 10 U.S.C. 673.

Reserve Component members whose duty was for initial active duty training have 31 days after release to apply for reinstatement.

Returning veterans completing active duty have 90 days to apply for reinstatement.

You should provide the following information to your employer, preferably in writing:

- I used to work here.
- I left to enter military service.
- My discharge was other than dishonorable.

Reinstatement in the job should be immediate, or take no more than two weeks, depending on the circumstances of your employer.

You must be restored to the same job you left or one with like seniority, status, and pay. Essentially, you should be treated as if you never had left. Benefits such as health insurance should be resumed immediately upon your application.

You also may be entitled to benefits that are generally based on seniority, such as pensions, pay increases, missed promotions, and transfers.

If you were disabled while on active duty and can't perform your preservice job, the employer must offer a similar job with the same seniority, status, and pay, or one as close as possible.

If you are hospitalized due to injury suffered during military duty, your rights are extended for up to one year. The 90 days to apply for reinstatement starts when you are released from the hospital.

If problems arise, you can call the Department of Labor Information number at 1-800-442-2838 which can direct you to the Office of Directors for Veterans' Employment and Training Service (also called DVETS) in the state where your employer is located. The DVETS is the enforcement arm of the Department of Labor in reemployment rights cases. You may also seek help and information at the Legal Assistance Office concerning your reemployment rights.

U.S. Navy

Female Athlete of the Year — OM3 Renita K. Garnett, Track & Field

Male Athlete of the Year — CWO4 James W. Servis, Bowling

1st Lt. Julia M. Turing
United States Army
Track & Field

Turning is a Chemical Corps Officer with the 11th Chemical Company currently stationed in Saudi Arabia as part of Desert Storm. At the 1990 Armed Forces Track & Field Championship, Lt. Turing captured six gold medals, more than any athlete in the 39 year history of the event.

The comments surrounding this athlete said it all. "She's a highly fined-tuned athlete," "She was the superwoman of the event!" were all directed to Turing's performance by the other competitors at the event.

She placed first in the 100 meter, 200 meter, and 400 meter events, the 4 x 100 and 4 x 400 meter events, and the javelin throw. She was directly responsible for almost half of the points her team accumulated in the competition.

According to Remi Korchemny, former national coach for the USSR Track & Field Team (now an American citizen and coach), Turing could very easily make the finals in the 1992 Olympics.

Spc. Bradley T. Martinez
United States Army
Boxing

Martinez is a tanker with the 10th Armored Division currently stationed in Saudi Arabia, asfsigned to Desert Storm. After the 1989 Armed Forces Boxing Championship, the Army lost its reigning light flyweight (106 pounds) champion.

There was concern at the Army Sports Office as to who would fill this void. Martinez was invited to the All Army Boxing Trial Camp in December 1989. He promptly established himself as the All Army light flyweight champion in February 1990.

From there Martinez won the 1990 Armed Forces Championship in his weight division and placed second in the United States of America Amateur Boxing Federation National Championship. Martinez was then selected to be a member of the U.S. National Team which competed in a dual meet against the USSR.

Martinez went on to participate in the U.S. Olympic Festival where he won a gold medal. Martinez also competed in the 1990 Goodwill Games, making it as far as the quarter finals.

He is currently ranked as the number two light flyweight in the country, with his prospects for the 1991 Pan American and 1992 U.S. Olympic Teams looking very promising.

Benning schools to hold board elections

Fort Benning Schools

Parents of the children attending Fort Benning Schools set the direction for the schools their children attend through an elected school board.

A 10 member board, elected by parents of children attending the schools, meets monthly to set district policy and provide general direction to the system.

Members are elected for two-year terms, with each of the eight schools having a representative on the board. In addition to the eight elected school representatives, the board includes an elected president and chaplain.

Member's terms are staggered to that the board will include experienced board members each year.

School board elections will be held May 21. Board seats up election for two-year terms are the representatives from the Faith, Dexter, Loyd and White Schools.

The "at large" seats for president and chaplain representative and the representative from the Wilson School are also up for election; these positions are for one year to fill unexpired terms.

To be eligible to run as a candidate representing a school, an individual must be the parent or guardian of a child enrolled in the school at the time the candidate is elected to the board. The candidate must not be an employee or related to any school system employee.

Those interested in running for election should contact the school principal of the school for which they wish to run or the Assistant Superintendent for Logistics, Richard Skinner, at 545-2500 not later than the close of business April 30.

The board meets on the last Monday of each month at 1 p.m. in the administrative conference room of the school administrative building on NCO Drive.

The board considers school policies, approves the budget, approves curriculum changes and functions in much the say way as do school boards in civilian communities.

Current board members are: Col. Joseph Trez, president; Maj. Richard Garrison, Chaplain; Terry Maschek, Dexter School representative; Kathleen Meade, Faith School representative; Capt. Barry Washington, Loyd School representative; Sgt. Richard Hott, McBride School representative; Usa Iverson, Patch School representative; Gerhea Chuber, White School representative; Technical Sgt. Students become authors

Fort Benning Schools

Students at Edward A. White School don't just read books. . .they publish their own.

Two fifth grade classes and one third grade class are deeply involved in writing, illustrating, and producing original stories as part of the "Written and Illustrated by. . ." contest held by a national book publisher.

The annual winners in each age level are published and sold by the company.

At White School, each of the three teachers used a step-by-step manual to guide the students through the various steps — thinking up a story idea, rough draft, illustrations, editing, rewriting, typing, final artwork, and binding.

A "Meet the Author" party allowed the student-authors to present their creations to parents and friends before some were selected to be mailed off to the contest.

Other books were displayed in the media center, where they attracted the interest of other White School students.

Some students will be reading their books to children in the lower grades.

"It's been a wonderful experience for the boys and girls," said teacher Evelyn Braman, "since they get to learn so many language arts skills while producing something of lasting value to them."

34th Med. comes home

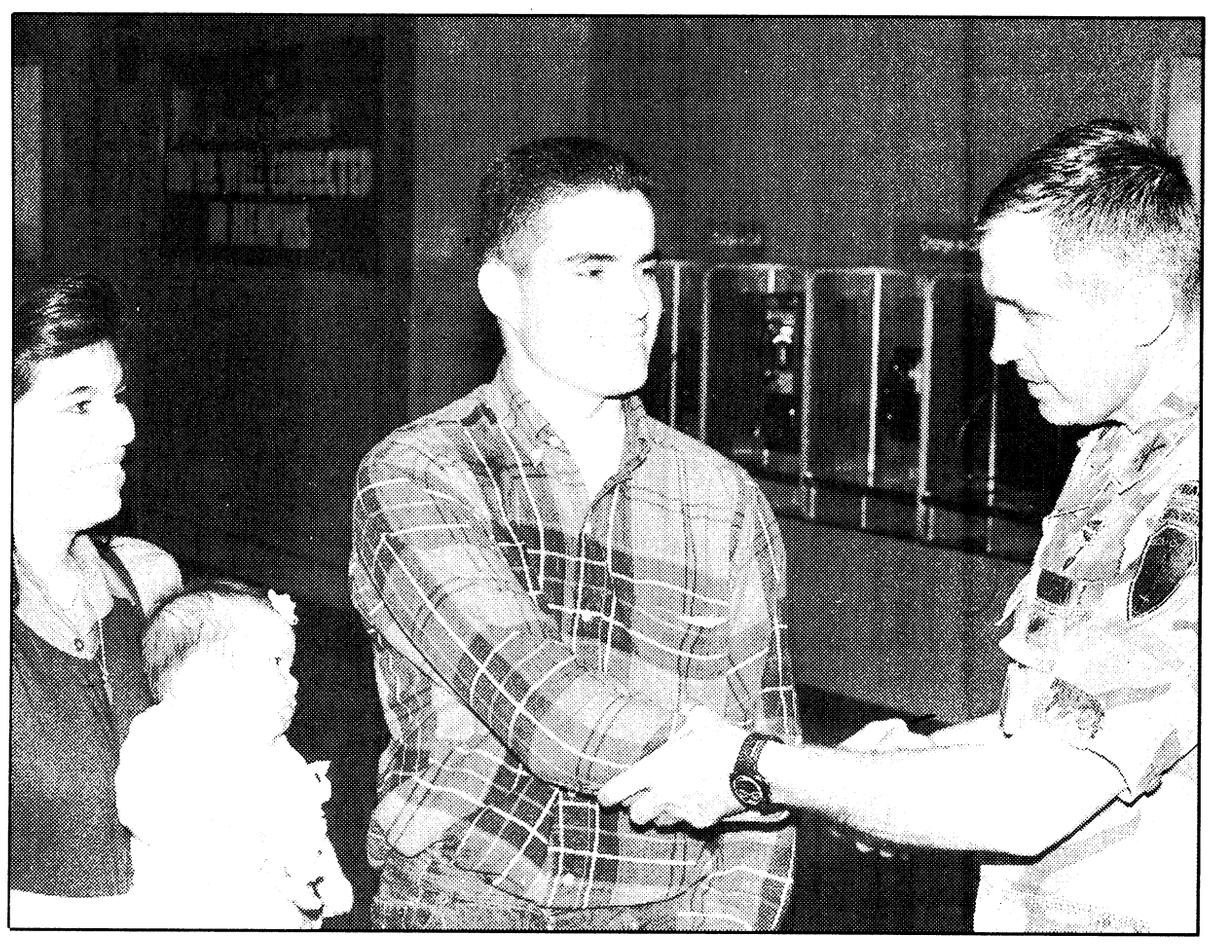
Jon R. Anderson

Spc. Carlos Thompson holds his son for the first time.

By Jon R. Anderson
Bayonet staff writer

As the redeployment of soldiers from the Middle East continues, the 34th Medical Battalion welcomed home more than 400 of its soldiers at Lawson Army Airfield, Wednesday and Thursday.

Spc. Carlos Thompson, of the 498th Medical Company, said the hardest part of the entire conflict was being away from his family. That pain of separation was increased all the more, he explained, with the birth of his son, Rhylie.



Rhylie was born at Martin Army Community Hospital March 15 while his father awaited redeployment with his unit.

"It feels good," said Thompson as he held his baby for the first time, "undescribable."

Chief Warrant Officer John Crosby, also of the 498th Med. Co., agreed that the most difficult part of being away was the separation from family, but added now the hardest thing to do was deal with the culture shock.

"Just yesterday," said Crosby, "we had no running water or flushing toilets," explaining that just getting on the plane was "like moving up to Beverly Hills."

More returning soldiers are scheduled to arrive at LAAF tonight at 5:10 p.m.

Post riggers leave for Turkey

By Jon R. Anderson
Bayonet staff writer

Eight Fort Benning riggers departed Columbus Metropolitan Airport Tuesday, to join with a Kurdish relief mission in Incerlik, Turkey.

The all-volunteer rigger team, from 1st Battalion, 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment, will conduct airborne resupply operations to provide Kurdish refugees with "food, shelter and clothing," said team leader, Chief Warrant Officer Ray Snell.

Snell speculated that a larger multinational force is being put together at the NATO Air Force base in Turkey and said that "it's a good possibility that this could be a long drawn out operation."

"From what I've seen on TV, the effort is going to be massive," said Snell.

The soldiers received word of the mission April 12 and most said they were glad to be part of the humanitarian effort, despite the short notice.

"I can't believe what Hussein is doing to the Kurds, his own people," said Sgt. Jeffery Luvisi one of the departing riggers. "He ought to be chased out of the country himself," he continued.

Lt. Col. Marcel Lettre, 1st Bn., 507th PIR commander, said he thinks his soldiers will play a "direct role in saving a lot of lives," referring to estimated 800,000 Kurdish refugees massed along both sides of the Iraq and Turkey border.

Sergeants Maj. Academy commandant visits Benning, talks about training

By Jon R. Anderson
Bayonet staff writer

The commandant of the U.S. Army Sergeants Major Academy, Col. Frederick E. Van Horn, visited Fort Benning during the Infantry Conference April 9 through 12.

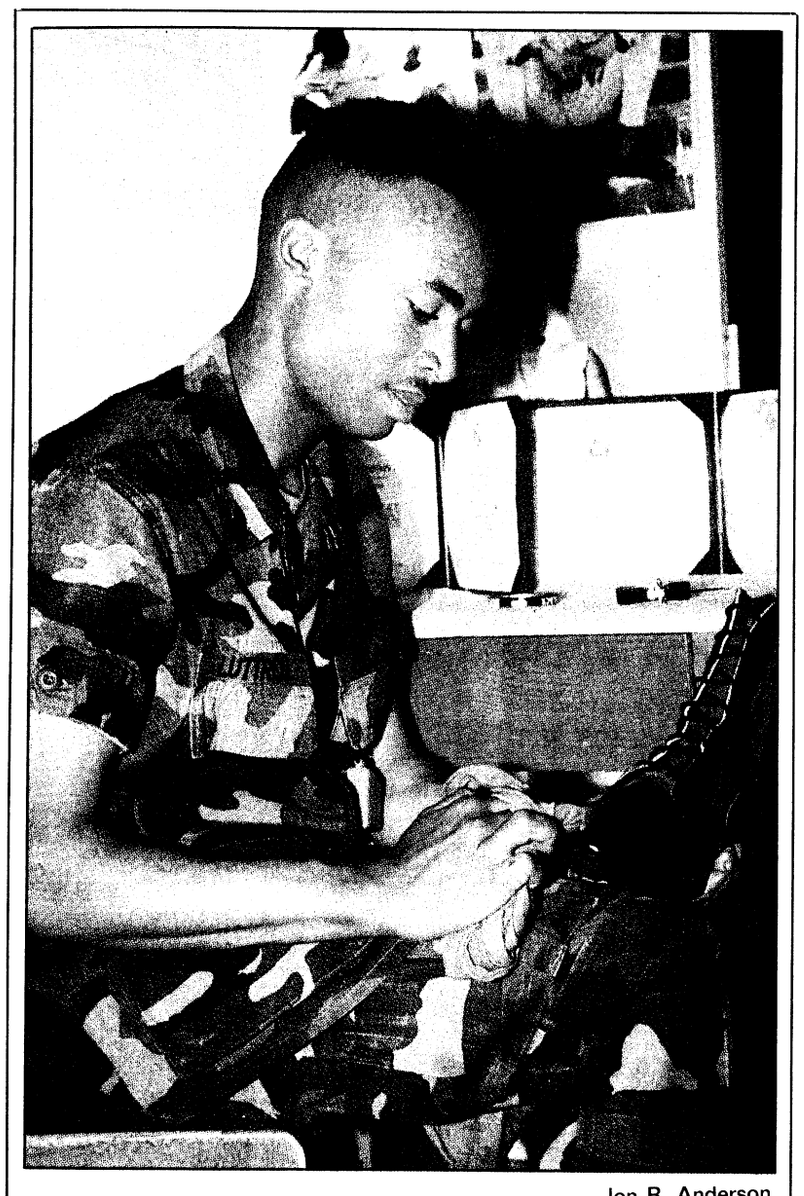
During his visit, Van Horn took the opportunity to discuss developments in Army training.

The Skill Qualification Test will be replaced by an improved assessment test, sometime next year, said Van Horn.

The new exam, called the Skill Development Test, will be fielded experimentaly in October, then assessed and reworked before being released for official record next year, he said.

The new development test, indicated Van Horn, will consist of 100 questions, 60 of which will be Military Occupational Specialty related, with the remainder covering leadership principles from Field Manual 22-100 and training management skills from FM 25-101.

Common Task Training will still remain the primary assessment test for soldiers ranked E-1 to E-4, he said.



Van Horn also commented on the status of those soldiers who were waivered for promotion during Operation Desert Storm without the required leadership development courses, saying those soldiers would now have to attend the respective courses as soon as possible.

Another "change in the making," said Van Horn, was that first time first sergeants would soon be required to attend a short class refreshing them on training management doctrine before taking over their new companies, just as new command sergeants major must now attend a similar course before going to their new battalions.

The NCO Journal is another new develpment, which Van Horn described as a "way for the non-commissioned officier corps to express their conscience, their vision, and their needs."

"War in the Gulf" was the theme for the first issue of the quarterly journal, explained Van Horn, with upcoming issues centering on "The NCO and Training" and the "NCO in Combat."

Added to the curriculum at the Sergeants Major Academy, said Van Horn, was the Battle Staff NCO Course, which he described as training for administration, security, operations, and logistics positions. What set this apart from previous courses, he said, was that the training is now done collectively, as an integrated staff, as opposed to individual section training.

Installation prepares for savings bond campaign

By James C. Rupp
Bayonet staff writer

The post is preparing to kick off the 1991 U.S. Savings Bond Campaign which begins May 1.

The program is designed to familiarize Army personnel, both active and retired, with the benefits of purchasing savings bonds and to encourage them to purchase bonds, according to Army officials.

Throughout the month, selected personnel from platoon, company, battalion, command, section, office, division or directorate levels will act as project officers for the campaign. In turn, each officer will appoint project canvassers who will be responsible for their respective units and activities.

Each canvasser, who will be responsible for no less than 50 people, will be asked to see those people face-to-face and share with them the benefits of purchasing savings bonds.

Further instructions will be given at a savings bond lecture 2:30 p. m. April 26 in a Building 4 classroom to be announced later.

DEH seeks to improve housing maintenance

The Directorate of Engineering and Housing is seeking ways to improve its services to family housing occupants.

Call 545-2607 for this type of service. All efforts will be made to schedule these appointments between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. Monday through Friday. After-hours appointments will be approved on a case-to-case basis.

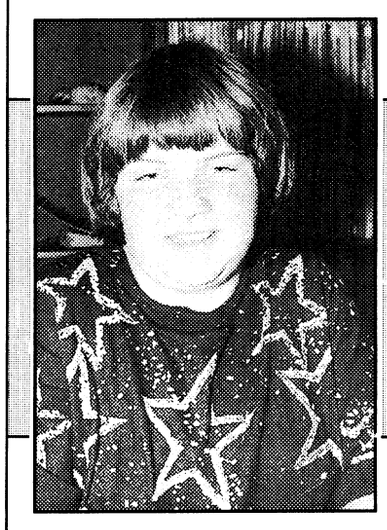
OPINION



VARIOUS VOICES:

How do you feel about being a military child?

Editor's note: All of the children asked are third-graders at Fort Benning's McBride school.

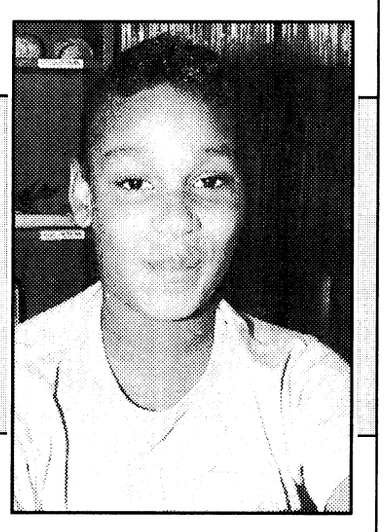
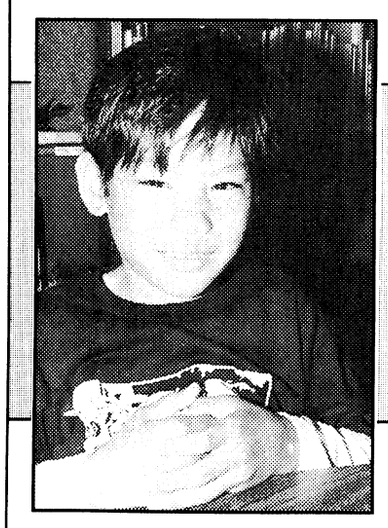
Marqus Fobbs, 9 — "I feel pretty good. I get to have an ID card and go to the PX to get whatever I want for my mom."



Kacie J. Keller, 9 — "You make a lot of friends around where you are. Sometimes I don't like it when he has to leave, like when my dad went to Saudi Arabia."



Brandon W. Borden, 9 — "Sometimes I'm kind of scared, like when Dad went to war. They (soldiers) stand up for our country and that makes me proud. I like living on post because I can explore a lot."

Jennifer M. Mansito, 9 — "I like it when my dad stays at work and I get to stay with my mom. If Dad wasn't in the military, he would get to stay here longer."

LaSaundra D. Anderson, 8 — "I don't like it because sometimes Dad has to leave us behind. But, I do like to travel and meet new friends."

Marcus L. Vasquez, 8 — "I feel good about it because my dad takes care of us. Sometimes when he goes somewhere I don't get to go with him, but we do get to go to places like Kentucky."

COMMENTARY

Snively: How come we can't get our soldiers back home on time?

By Clyde Snively

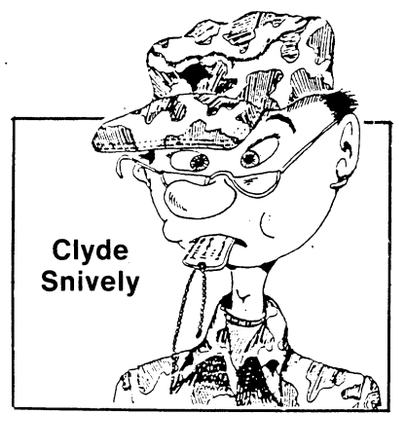
Remember when an Air Force general bragged how the Air Force could win the war by itself? And after the war he said, given two more weeks of bombing, the Iraqis would have surrendered without any help from the Army, thank you very much.

What I want to know is where is that Air Force dude now?

I'd like to meet him. And here's the question I'd ask: "If the Air Force is all that great, how come we can't get our soldiers back on time?"

How'd you like to be a family member sitting on the tarmac at oh-dark-thirty and told to come back in an hour. Make that three hours. Make that tomorrow.

If my spouse were coming and it was just me doing the waiting, I'd probably be able to handle it. But if I had two infants, one under each arm, infants too young to understand all this, infants slipperier than Jello, infants who know how to catch a person's attention — by screaming at the top of their lungs, I wouldn't be too pleased.



I'll grant the Air Force this, those planes bringing the troops back ain't Air Force aircraft, but they are under contract to the Air Force and it seems to me the Air Force should have some control over them.

If the civilian air industry can fly thousands of flights a day and 90 percent of the time be within an hour of announced arrival times, why can't these contract folks who sport such familiar insignia as United and Pan Am do the same?

Who's in control here?

Or are the airlines having trouble finding Lawson Army Airfield? The other day an airline managed to get 43rd Engineer (or "Engineering" as the TV folks like to say) Battalion soldiers to Atlanta. Then they couldn't figure out how to get them the 80 miles to Columbus.

Guess who gets the bad rep. It's us Army folks who have no control over the whole schmere. I've recommended that we take projected arrival times and add three hours. But then what happens when a plane shows up only a couple of hours late, or even on time?

There's good news and bad news at Infantry Hall. The good news is the Infantry Conference is over and we can find a place to park again within Chattahoochee County. Next time they ought to set up a park and ride for Building 4 denizens.

The bad news is we'll have to wait a while longer before the air conditioning comes back on.

The good news is the downstairs post office is back in business after being closed for several months so we once again have a convenient place to buy stamps and mail letters and packages.

The bad news is they aren't selling books of stamps, at least not yet.

The good news is the stamps they sell don't need to be licked, they're self-adhering.

The bad news is, if you have fat, uncoordinated fingers like I do, then you'll never get the stamps off the sheet without help.

Most of you probably think the execution of Desert Storm must have been the greatest feat ever performed by Gen. Colin Powell and Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf. Well, I can add an even greater accomplishment. The U.S. Congress, without dissent, voted both of them gold medals.

When's the last time you recall Congress voting on something without a recorded dissension? I say "recorded" since one war critic merely voted "present.'

Each coin will have the likeness of the respective general on one side. My recommendation for the obverse is a show of the vote total cast over an engraving of the Capitol.

Post commander recognizes volunteers

Fort Benning Volunteer Appreciation Week will be celebrated April 21 through April 27.

I wish to take this opportunity to recognize and extend my appreciation to the volunteers who selflessly support the many needs of the Fort Benning community.

These outstanding individuals will be honored at the Fort Benning annual Volunteer Recognition Reception 6 p.m, April 25 at the Fort Benning Officers' Club Supper Club. Many of the agencies that use volunteer power to accomplish programs and services for soldiers and their families will sponsor separate activities to honor their volunteers throughout the week. I encourage all commanders to recognize their unit Family Support Group volunteers at an appropriate occasion during this week.

Volunteers are always there to lend a helping hand, to support, and to maintain valuable community services. Volunteers are an integral part of the Fort Benning team. Therefore, I ask that everyone take this time to publicly thank our volunteers for their efforts to make Fort Benning an excellent community to live, work, and play.

LETTER

Reader questions post speed limits

My comments are mostly addressed to the Post Provost Marshal, but the paper is the only place I know of to get my message across.

My concern is over the new speed limits imposed on Custer Road and on the Kelley Hill side of Marne Road. Marne Road has always been a notorious "speed trap," even when the speed limit was 30 mph. Now, here come our soldiers home from seven months in the Persian Gulf to a brand new 25 mph limit.

Thirty mph always seemed too slow for that road in the first place. Of course you need to slow to 25 mph when you get to the top of the hill and come to the sharp curves, but wouldn't a caution sign work for that?

Our latest "speed trap" is on Custer Road. This one I don't understand at all. I've lived just off Custer Road for more than six years and the speed limit has always been 45 mph. Finally, the road is resurfaced and widened and the speed limit is dropped to 35 mph. This just doesn't make sense.

The only way to maintain 35 mph on this street is to ride your brakes all the way down the large hills. That's rough on brakes. Another problem is older cars than have a hard time climbing the hills at 35 mph.

After having lived on Craig Court for six years, and being accustomed to driving 45 mph all that time, it sure is hard to remember the limit is now only 35 mph. After driving a certain road at a certain speed for so long, it's just automatic to accelerate to the old speed. I'm a law abiding citizen of Fort Benning who has never gotten a speeding ticket, but since the new speed limit on Custer was imposed, I've purely just been lucky.

FOR THE RECORD

The Bayonet regrets the headline in a March 8 story that implied two soldiers died in a trash fire in Iraq.

The soldiers were killed while fighting a fire in an ammunition trailer when the ammunition exploded. Details of how the fire started are still under investigation.

Army chief of staff discusses Army's future

By Jon R. Anderson
Bayonet staff writer

"The violence that we unleashed in Desert Storm is only a shadow of what we have the potential for," said Gen. Carl E. Vuono, U.S. Army chief of staff, in an address to members of the Infantry Conference held at Fort Benning April 9 through 12.

Vuono encouraged attendees, who were mostly infantry commanders, to not "rest on your laurels," from victories in Panama and the Mideast, but rather to prepare for an expansion of the "New National Military Strategy," which President George Bush introduced to the American public on the eve of the Gulf War.

One of the primary points that the new strategy is based on is a decline of resources that will be devoted to national defense, said Vuono. This, plus the "unambiguous success in the Cold War and collapse of the Warsaw Pact" required a change in the emphasis and direction of the military, in, what he called, a "world of revolutionary change."

Commanders, after reconstituting their forces, said Vuono, should prepare for a 20-division Army, while maintaining near global readiness to "respond without notice."

To do this, explained the general, there will be an improvement of quickly deployable forces, adding that although the conditions will change, "the standards will not."

"I don't know where the next war is going to be," said the general, "I don't know if it's going to be a big war or a little war - but sometime in the next decade we'll put men on the ground again."

Vuono also elaborated on points he felt were important to the success of American forces in the Mideast. One of the most important of which he said was the quality of soldiers, decribing them as "courageous in war, compassionate in peace and committed to win."

"We committed the power, prestige, and honor of the United States of America," said Vuono, " by drawing a line in the sand with the bayonet of an 82nd Airborne trooper."

Vuono closed encouraging leaders to "create a dynamic atmosphere that soldiers will want to be part of," adding that the modern infantryman must be master of a wide variety of skills and that it was their "sacred obligation" to see that they are trained to meet awaiting challenges.

4th Bn., 41st FA gets new commander

By Willie Hay
197th Infantry Brigade

Lt. Col. William F. "Bill" Engel became the first Operation Desert Storm commander in the 197th Infantry Brigade to relinquish command when he passed the colors of 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery April 9 on Kelley Hill to Lt. Col. Donald C. Bell.

Engel, who led the "Redlegs" of 4th Bn. since March 1989, has been reassigned to the Military District of Washington. Bell joined the battalion in Saudi Arabia during Operation Desert Storm, after serving in the Office of the Chief of Staff of the Army.

"None of your accomplishments over the last two years could have happened without the superb leadership of Lt. Col. Bill Engel," Col. Ted Reid, commander of the 197th told the Redlegs.

Reid cited their performance in two National Training Center rotations, daily support to the Infantry School, training assistance to two National Guard field artillery battalions, and successful fire support missions for the brigade during Operation Desert Storm.

"Bill has been an inspiration and an example to every soldier in the battalion and for the other leaders in the brigade," declared Reid, who was equally lavish in his praise for Engel's wife, Linda.

"The support you provided to Bill and the family members of this battalion, especially during Operation Desert Shield and Desert Storm, fits the epitome of a loving, caring wife who willingly joined her husband as a member of the command team," said Reid, who presented her a 197th Certificate of Achievement.

Reid went on to salute the Redlegs for their performance in the gulf war.

"I want to thank each and every one of you for the outstanding job you did in the deserts of Saudi Arabia and Iraq," Reid said.

"I'm terribly proud of the job you did and the fire support you provided to the maneuver battalions. Be proud of what you did — you're true professionals."

Engel echoed Reid's sentiments, calling his soldiers "genuine American heroes" whose training had fully prepared them to deploy to the Persian Gulf and win.

"We incorporated the latest high-tech weapons and equipment into our training program and continued to train hard in Saudi Arabia. At the commencement of hostilities, we stood ready to provide first-round, effective fires in support of the brigade," Engel said.

"Early on, during reconnaissance operations, and later, during the attack on Fighting Position 101 (in the Euphrates River Valley) and the armor raid on Tallil Air Base, we were called upon to fire all these high-tech weapons — and they worked perfectly.

Engel noted that to perform their missions his soldiers drove on through the desert for more than 100 hours "with little or no sleep, in most cases," over rough terrain during a sandstorm with visibility limited to 10 meters.

Calling himself "a very lucky man," Engel singled out his battery commanders, first sergeants, and key members of the battalion staff for "performing miracles against all odds and never letting me down." He went on to salute members of his family for moral and spiritual support throughout Operation Desert Storm.

In his speech, Bell praised the Redlegs for their performance during the war, vowing to keep them combat-ready for their fire support missions.

"In addition, I hope to be able to take care of you and your families and make sure that you have a good time while I'm in command," he said.

"That's very important, and I think Colonel Reid really zeroed in on that," Bell added. "You've got to enjoy your job. Let's enjoy our jobs and get the mission done."

Bell comes to Fort Benning with his wife, Terry; daughter, Maren, 8; and sons, James, 6, John, 5, and Charles, 2.

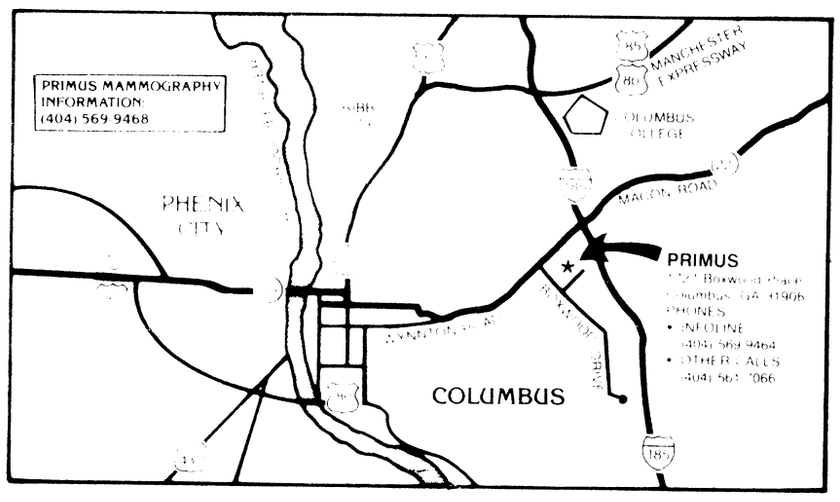
AER drive progresses

By Jon R. Anderson
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning's Army Emergency Relief campaign is still in progress and will continue until June 30.

"Ten percent of Fort Benning's $203,000 goal has been reached for this year's AER fund-raising campaign," said Samuel G. Duggins, Fort Benning campaign coordinator.

"Historically, the fund raising campaign is a slow starter, but tends to build momentum as time goes on," said Duggins.



To encourage a faster start, Duggins advises unit campaign officers to use whatever means available to them to invigorate contributions. In the past, said Duggins, bake sales have provided a fun route for money raising, but indicated that unit campaign officers are free to organize any special event that is acceptable to their chain of command.

Duggins also indicated that this year's campaign was especially important because "it allows us to replenish the large amounts of funds that were used during Operation Desert Storm."

"We want every military person and retiree to be afforded the opportunity to give," said Duggins.

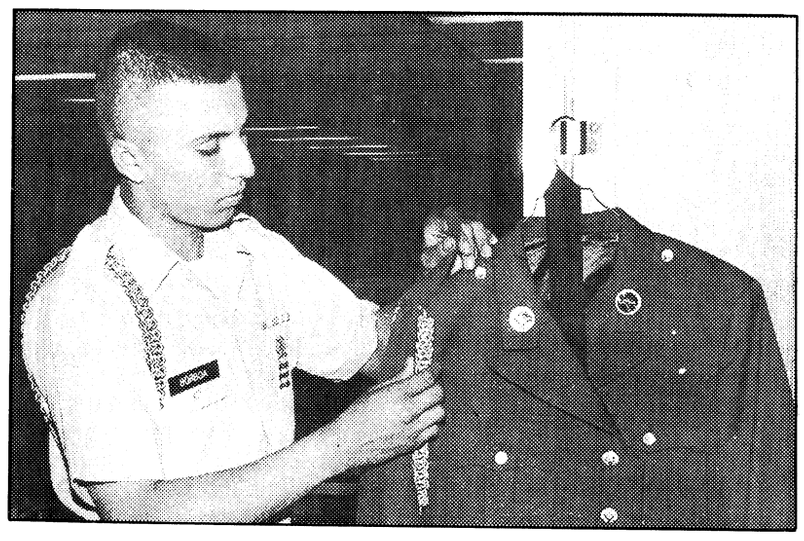
Soldier graduates basic, becomes Eagle Scout

By Marilyn Balzarini
Infantry Training Center

April 12 was a day Jose Borboa will probably remember for the rest of his life.

In the morning, he became an infantryman when he graduated from Infantry One Station Unit Training. He and his fellow soldiers of Company C, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry, participated in a graduation ceremony on Wetherby Field that made it official.

That afternoon he became an Eagle Scout when he received his Eagle Scout Badge from Fort Benning's Post Commander Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza.



Borboa and his mother, Sylvia Borboa, joined the general and Columbus area Boy Scout officials, Dean Sims, and Retired Col. B.J. Maynard, for the presentation in the general's office.

Along with becoming an infantryman and an Eagle Scout, Borboa also became a part of Boy Scout history. He is the first Boy Scout ever to receive his Eagle Scout status while serving as an active duty soldier.

Eagle Scout is the highest "rank" attainable in the Boy Scouts. Statistics show that only 2 percent of all Boy Scouts become Eagle Scouts.

The requirements for Eagle Scout include earning 21 merit badges, conducting a public service project, and successfully appearing before the Eagle Board of Review, which is similar to the Army's promotion boards.

Borboa had completed everything, but joining the Army kept him from appearing before the board.

Marilyn Balzarini

Pvt. 1 Jose Borboa

Because Eagle Scout status has to be earned by age 18 and Borboa will be 19 soon, the Chattahoochee Council of Boy Scouts of America agreed to conduct an Eagle Board of Review for Borboa here at Fort Benning. The Board was conducted in Co. C's day room and, according to Sims, Borboa passed the board with no problems.

A graduate of Santa Fe High School in Santa Fe Springs, Calif., Borboa joined the Boy Scouts when he was 12. He was a member of consolidated Boy Scout Troops 803 and 557 which is sponsored by the Santa Fe Ward of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints.

Borboa's public service project was assisting a man whose wife is an invalid.

"I spent well over the project requirement helping this man clean up his yard. It was about to be declared a health hazard by the city," Borboa said. "He had to take care of his wife by himself plus work two jobs to pay her medical bills, so he needed my help."

Borboa feels that the Boy Scouts helped prepare him for being a soldier in many ways. He said he had already learned land navigation, first aid, and other soldier skills in the scouts. "I was one step ahead of the game by already having training in certain areas," Borboa said.

I was also familiar with working in an organization that has a leadership chain of command and where team work is necessary for success."

Borboa says he joined the Army for the adventure and the challenge. "I could have gone to college right after high school and then taken a job like everyone else," Borboa said. "But, I wanted to do something more exciting. Something not everyone can do — like becoming an Eagle Scout."

Airborne School is the next challenge for Borboa, after that it's Ranger School and then "every Army school I can get," Borboa said.

Major command leaders speak out

By Jon R. Anderson
Bayonet staff writer

In two separate interviews during the Infantry Conference held on post April 9 through 12, Gen. Edwin H. Burba Jr. and Gen. John W. Foss touched on some common themes relating to the Army.

Burba, Forces Command commander, described the future of the Army in terms of budget cuts and force reductions while maintaining a viable combat force.

"We are not going to have a hollow Army," said Burba, echoing the words Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney.

"Cuts will not be Draconian," Burba continued, "they will give us a balanced force, Enough active force to respond on day one of a crisis and then later backed up by the reserves when needed."

Although force and personnel reductions were neccessary, he explained, they were still "painful."

Foss, Training and Doctrine commander, explained the reductions in terms of reconsolidation. With facilities closures and cuts in the military budget, Foss indicated that the limited resources mandates reconsolidation to the "bigger and better posts."

Foss also explained that with the reductions would come a lessening of the training load. He did, however, speculate that certain Army training programs, such as the School of the Americas, may be enhanced.

The Bradley Infantry Fighting Vehicle was a source of vindication for both generals, who were the object of much criticism during its introduction into the Army.

Burba described those early years of the Bradley as "a trail of tears," but explained, "that the great thing about the American system is that it works."

"We were convinced that the Bradley was a good infantry fighting vehicle and it demonstrated that in Operation Desert Storm," said Foss. Concerns that the Bradley would not be able to withstand enemy fire or that the soldiers were not confident in its abilities, he said, proved to be unfounded through the test of combat.

Foss also commented on upcoming changes in the Basic Rifle Marksmanship course taught to infantry basic trainees, explaining that there would be a rise in the level difficulty, both in standards and tasks.

Foss expects the changes to be fully implemented by October.

43rd Engineers build the road home for deployed troops

By S.A. Yons
43rd Engineer Battalion

Spc. James Stockdale of Company C , 43rd Engineer Combat Battalion waves to a passing convoy of United States Army VII Corps M1A1 tanks traveling south on the road from Kuwait City. The crews return the greeting and continue toward their rear-assembly areas in preparation for redeployment. Stockdale gets on his bulldozer and continues filling in road craters left by the fleeing Iraqi Army.

Eight hours later, that same armored unit arrives at a military base in northern Saudi Arabia. The soldiers travel on a newly-constructed 14-mile road to the Aerial Port of Embarkation where they will find a plane waiting to carry them home. Here Spc. Steven Allgood, Company B, 43rd Engineer Bn. gives the lead vehicle a "thumbs up" as he passes the convoy. Allgood is putting the finishing touches on APOE Road with his road grader.

When the tankers arrive at the APOE they will secure their air cargo at a pallet staging area that Company A built and that Headquarters and Support Company paved. This hardstand will allow re-deploying personnel to meet agricultural and customs requirements prior to re-deployment.

In two days, they will process through a complex of troop re-deployment centers, temporary K-Span buildings constructed by Company B, 43rd Engineers. Other maneuver units are staying in transient quarters constructed by Company A. The soldiers are eating their meals in Fest Tests erected by Headquarters and Service Company and on tables and benches fabricated by Company A.

Long after the main body of VII Corps re-deploys, their trail party will be washing those same M1A1 tanks on a washrack constructed by Company C. This facility is critical to the redeployment of forces and will speed the transition of military equipment and personnel back home.

"Our fight is before, during, and after the battle," says Lt. Col. Philip M. Jones Jr., the battalion commander. "The efforts of the 43rd Engineers are shepherding the re-deployment, just as they spearheaded the movement of forces forward. Not to worry moms and dads, wives and kids, the 'Power For Service' Battalion is working hard to prepare for its own Operation Desert Farewell."

Re-deployment planning meetings are conducted twice weekly to orchestrate the movement by land, air, and sea of more than 400 pieces of equipment and over 500 soldiers home to Fort Benning.

Definitely a tall order. Add to that stringent customs requisites and a mass exodus of more than 300,000 soldiers (speaking more than 20 different languages) and the entire scenario has all the makings of a momentous challenge.

"More like a nightmare," reflected Capt. Brent Schvaneveldt, newly designated Movements Officer for the battalion. Simply transporting the unit's 21 bulldozers, 12 earth moving scrapers, eight bucket loaders, and other rolling stock from the forward base camp to the port will be a significant effort. Leaders are putting a concerted emphasis on operational safety during the re-deployment phase.

As the line units charge their focus toward the re-deployment phase of the operation, it's business as usual for the Command and Staff sections of Headquarters and Support Company. "We won't pick up this phone wire 'till the last unit leaves," says Spc. Brian Bell of the communication sections.

Mess facilities, personnel actions, medical service and maintenance support will also compete for last out of the base camp. These sections' contribution to re-deployment is an essential one also.

The battalion Personnel Action Center is busy finalizing manifests for the trip home. Additionally, they have the sizable task of completing all evaluation reports and awards for the Operation Desert Storm period. "Business as usual is right," said Sgt. 1st Class Lawrence Riley, the PAC noncommissioned officer in charge. "Just a lot more business, a lot faster than usual."

Sgt. Arlene Hall, the unit Retention Noncommissioned Officer, is back in business too. Many of those soldiers disillusioned with the monotony of garrison life are ready to give the Army another chance through re-enlistment.

"This operation gave soldiers a chance to do their jobs and that's what they came in for," says Hall. "We've got some great soldiers in this unit and we're going to keep them."

To date, those great soldiers of the 43rd Engineers have completed almost 200 engineer combat and combat support missions in support of all phases of Operation Desert Storm. No other engineer battalion deployed to Southwest Asia can claim nearly as much. "Each soldier can see his or her contribution to the mission," says Maj. John J. Orosz Jr., the battalion S-3. "Everyone has a profound sense of accomplishment."

The road home to Fort Benning is surveyed and staked out but construction is just beginning. The battalion has more than 20 missions as detours along the way. Engineer support to the force continues and along with its many implied tasks, maintenance being one of the most critical of those.

Most units are running around-the-clock operations to keep up with the pace of construction. Spc. Scott Coffey, an engineer equipment repairman tells of a general shortage of parts and his platoon's efforts to get the job done. "If there's no parts, we make them," he says. "We take a lot of pride in keeping everything running,".

SPECIAL MILITARY PROGRAM

With Grateful Appreciation General Motors Salutes The Men And Women Of Our Armed Forces, And Offers Them Something Special:

An Easier Way To Buy A New Car Or Truck.

Your Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile, Buick, Cadillac and GMC Truck dealers have incentive plans already in place that make it easy to buy a new car or light truck.

But now through the end of the year, the divisions of GM are offering a Special Military Program to all active U.S. military personnel and reservists called to active duty during the Persian Gulf War or their spouses.

Here's how it works. You get three hundred dollars in down payment assistance, plus any additional down payment you make is matched up to five hundred dollars when you buy a new GM car or light truck and finance it through GMAC. That can mean as much as eight hundred dollars toward your purchase. Add that to existing incentives, and you can save even more. The Special Military Program is not available with the college graduate program, first-time buyer program or overseas vehicle purchase program. See your participating GM dealer for qualification details.

It's a small gesture on our part in partial exchange for the tremendous gesture each of you has made. And our way of expressing thanks for a job well done.

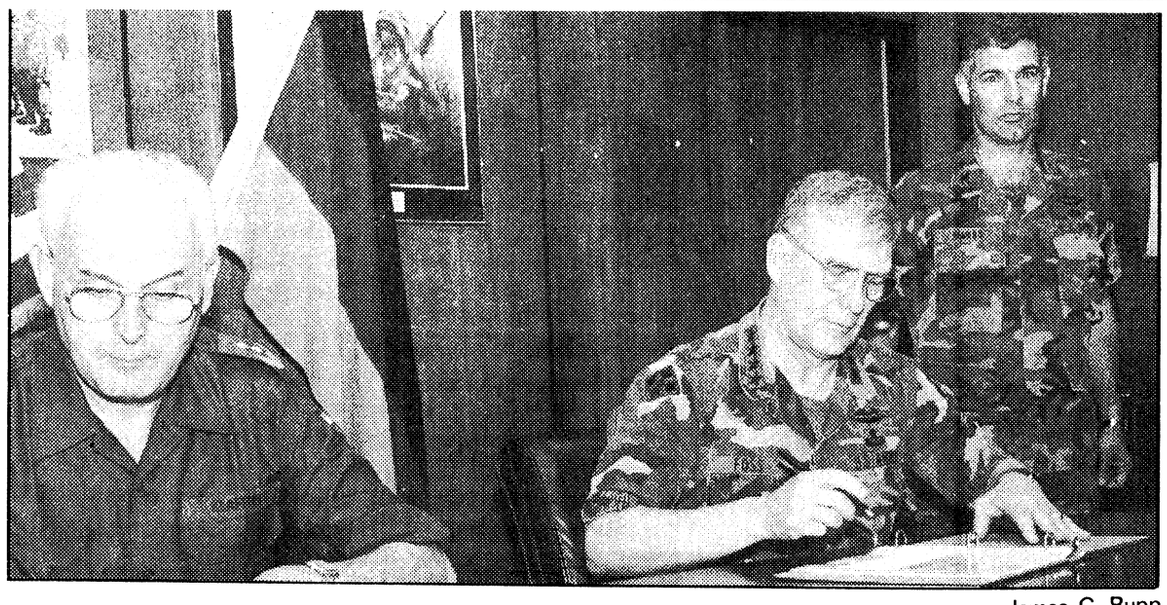
Army ups shipping allowances

Army News Service

Some single and unaccompanied soldiers now can take a little larger piece of home with them on an overseas assignment.

The Army has increased household goods shipping allowances for overseas-bound soldiers in eight grades — private one and two, privates first class, specialists, master sergeants, sergeants major, captains and warrant officers one.

According to the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel, the increase also applies to soldiers moving between overseas assignments and those headed back to the states from overseas.

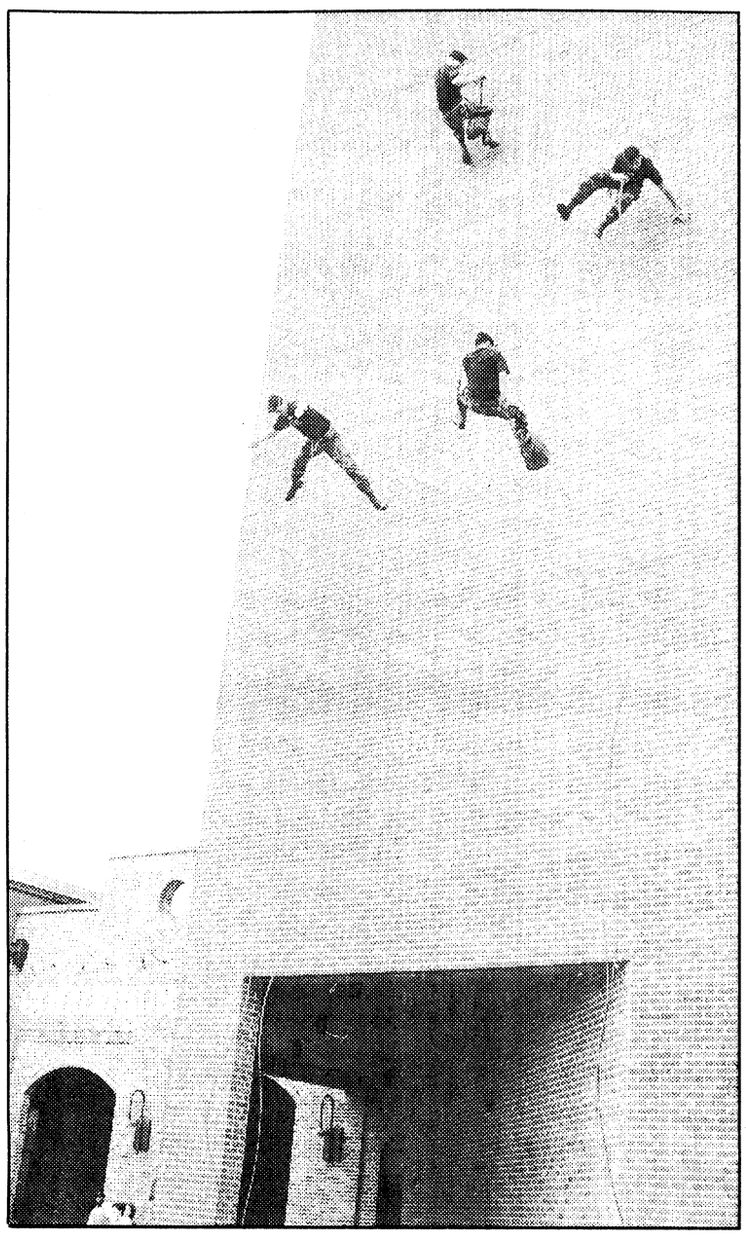


On their way to and from short-tour areas, single and unaccompanied specialists and below can now ship 500 pounds of household goods — an increase of 150 pounds for specialists and 350 pounds for soldiers in the three most junior enlisted grades. The increase sets the total short-tour shipping allowance for all specialists and below at 1,000 pounds.

The other grades received increases in single and unaccompanied long-tour shipping allowances. Master sergeants can now ship an extra 200 pounds of household goods; sergeants major got an extra 300 pounds. The increase brings their total shipping allowances to 2,200 and 2,400 pounds, respectively.

Single and unaccompanied captains and warrant officers one can add 400 pounds to their long-tour household shipments, giving them both a total shipping allowance of 2,500 pounds.

Weight allowances for the remaining grades will stay the same.



Soldiers should still be careful not to ship more than they can use. The government will not pay for storage of household goods outside of the continental United States. Thus, soldiers who ship more belongings to their new overseas assignment than they can keep in their quarters must store the excess at their own expense, or dispose of it.

Adoptive parents pick up rights

Army News Service

Army civilians in the process of adopting children are now allowed some of the same rights to time off as pregnant workers.

The Office of Personnel Management is testing the feasibility of providing sick leave to civilian employees for adoption-related purposes. The test will be in effect for the rest of fiscal 1991.

"The purpose of this measure is to put adoptive parents in the federal workforce on a more equal footing with biological mothers who are currently allowed to use sick days for prenatal doctor visits," according to a recent OPM bulletin.

The bulletin states that adoptive parents can request sick leave for court proceedings and appointments with adoption agencies, social workers and attorneys. Sick leave for other activities related to an adoption may also be granted "since adoption procedures and requirements differ from locality to locality and from adoption agency to adoption agency."

Activity commanders are also required to maintain records for the rest of the fiscal year on the number of male and female employees who use sick leave for adoption purposes, and the number of hours of sick leave used. OPM will then evaluate the findings and determine whether to continue allowing adoptive parents to use sick leave.

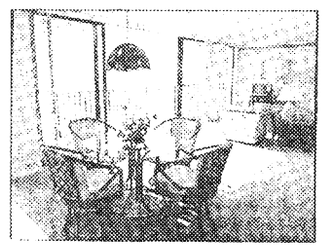
"This test provides a wonderful opportunity to affirm our interest in and commitment to helping Army families by supporting leave policies that respond to the needs of prospective parents," an Army official said.

For more information on the test, call Don Hall, DSN 221-1331 or commercial (703) 325-1331. Questions can also be directed to Joyce Bridgeforth, DSN 227-1822 or commercial (703) 687-1822.

MACH says goodbye to 334th

Martin Army Community Hospital

The 334th Medical Detachment left Fort Benning for their home station in Perrine, Fla. March 22 and were deactivated March 27.



The staff of Martin Army Community HospitalH greatly appreciated their contributions to MACH's Desert Storm efforts, according to hospital officials.

The unit is an 11-member blood collection team from Perrine, which is about 50 miles south of Miami. The unit's mobilization station is here at Fort Benning.

In January and February of 1990, this unit participated in what may have been the last Reforger exercise during which they spent three weeks in Germany.

The unit was mobilized in Perrine Jan. 25, and convoyed from there to Fort Benning. They reported to Martin Army Community Hospital for duty Jan. 28. The unit, consisting of one officer and 10 soldiers, processed more than 1,000 donors during 15 blood drives on Sand Hill.

Child abuse can hurt, kill

By Tom C. Hockaday
USAIC Public Affairs Office

In 1983 President Ronald Reagan, by presidential proclamation, declared April as "Child Abuse Prevention Month."

This was a time when child abuse was becoming more and more recognized as an immense social problem. The problem had always been there, it had only been embedded within the four walls of the home.

A song of the '80s has some lyrics that tell a grim story about another child born who will never get to go to school, never get to fall in love, or never get to be cool.

As negative as that may sound, the lyrics of the modern day song of life echo even more harsh realities over the social airwaves of America.

Each year, more than 2.4 million children in this country are reported to suffer from abuse. In 1989 alone, 1,237 children died from child abuse. This is an average of three children a day. These estimates tend to be low since many abuse-related child deaths are not reported.

By bringing attention to this massive problem publicly at least once a year, attention is focused on what adults are doing to children.

Rebecca Welch, Family Advocacy program manager at Army Community Services, states that the theme for this year is "Partners for prevention".

"This is a way of saying that none of us can do it alone," she said. "Child abuse prevention is everyone's business."

Welch explained that abusers can be friends, neighbors and relatives. The truth is that many abusers truly love their children, but they find themselves caught in life situations beyond their control, she said.

"The effects of the mobile military life style are so woven into the daily activities of the armed forces, that it is easy to overlook the powerful impact that mobility has on our day-to-day lives," Welch said.

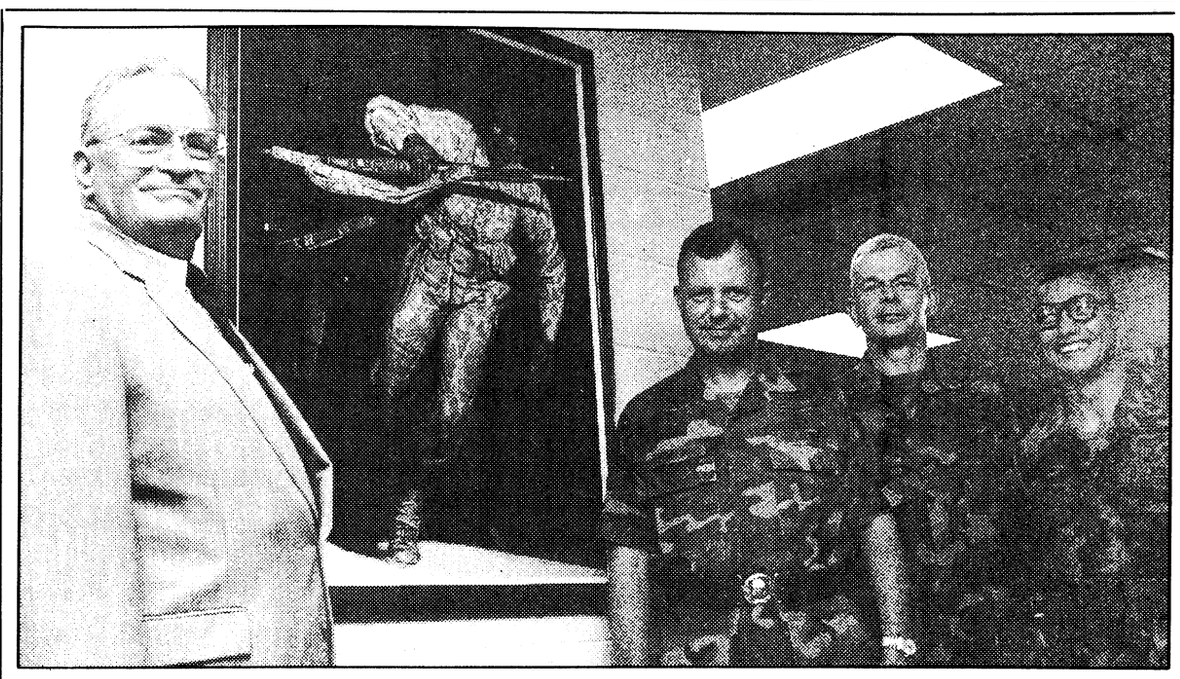
Some of the major contributing factors which often lead to abuse are isolation from family and friends who can provide emotional support; being young and inexperienced; financial problems; and lack of self-control.

Whether it is one stressful circumstance or a number of crises that actually trigger abuse, people sometimes cannot cope any longer. It is in this climate that the lives of children are in the greatest danger.

This is where prevention enters the overall scheme of things. According to Welch, prevention is a matter of saving lives. The effects of violence on children and families are physically, mentally, and emotionally harmful. They can last a long time or they could become permanent.

The earlier intervention takes place, the better the chances are of a more structured family life. Each person can take responsibility for his or her own feelings. There are certain questions that you can get into the habit of asking yourself from time to time, especially during highly stressful periods, said Welch.

For instance, a good question to ask yourself is; "What do I really need?" Another one would be; "Whom am I trying to please?" Or, a really good one, "What do I need to make me feel good about myself?"



Once you identify that area that you are experiencing the most difficulty in, then you should realize that help is available to you. For counseling, call Social Work Services at 545-3212 or 545-1661.

if you suspect child abuse, you should report it at once. If you wait for someone else to report it, you may wait too long and it will become too late.

The places that you can report your suspicions are; Social Work Service, Family Advocacy, or Child Protective Services. You can also contact Becky Welch at Family Advocacy. The phone number is 545-7517 or 545-5516.

Child abuse is not necessarily on the increase, the cases are only becoming more numerous in identification. That is because people are becoming more aware that there is help out there.

Child abuse does not have to happen. It can be prevented. It can be prevented by parents willing to learn why abuse happens, by parents who care, by you.

The Atrium — classy ambience

One of the finest dining spots in Columbus is The Atrium at the Sheraton-Columbus Airport Hotel, 5351 Simons Blvd.

This spacious, contemporary restaurant, full of beautiful, live greenery and skylights, is known for its delightful American, family-style dishes and outstanding seafood buffet.

The Atrium is further enhanced by its classy atmosphere and service rendered by competent chefs, preparers and servers.

It's not unheard of for the manager or chef to approach the guests and inquire about their meals and the service they have received.

"We have excellent food and service," said Markus Rutz, the new food and beverage manager. "Our goal is to please everyone, if we can. We really listen to our customers." Although suggestion cards are available, he prefers to talk with guests.

Prices at The Atrium range from moderate ($6-$12) to upscale (more than $12). Children can enjoy the same items on the regular menu for half price.

Rutz said the restaurant does not avoid trying new dishes and adds items to the menu regularly.

From Thursday to Sunday, you can sit back and relax to the sounds of a disc jockey while you enjoy your meal.

If you like to sleep in on Sundays or eat out before or after church service, The Atrium serves a delicious, "just right" brunch which will probably keep you satisfied until dinner.

For privacy and a more homey atmosphere, there is a room for larger parties or family gatherings. There are also meeting/banquet facilities to accommodate 400 standing people or 250 people seated. Catering is available.

Bill MacDonald is general manager; Mike Owens is director of sales.

Students need host families

Pacific Intercultural Exchange

Foreign high school students will be arriving soon into the Fort Benning area for homestay programs, and the sponsoring organization urgently needs local host families.

According to Pacific Intercultural Exchange Area Coordinator, Donna Grimm, the students are all between the ages of 15 and 18 years, have their own spending money, are fully insured and are anxious to share their cultural experiences with their new American families. P.I.E.'s academic homestays range in length from one semester to a full academic year, where the students attend local high schools.

P.I.E. representatives match students with host families by finding common interests and lifestyles through an informal in-home meeting. Prospective host families are able to review student applications and select the "perfect match." As there are no "typical" host families, P.I.E. can fit a student into just about any situation, whether it be a single parent, a childless couple, a retired couple or a large family.

Grimm says that the situation in the Persian Gulf created a drop in student participation, but now that the conflict is over, the organization has received many applications for students wanting to take part in the program.

This year P.I.E. has students from Spain, Germany, Japan, France, Denmark, Yugoslavia, Italy, Argentina, Brazil, the Soviet Union, Colombia, France, New Zealand and other countries. P.I.E. is a non-profit educational organization that has sponsored more than 12,000 students from 18 countries since its founding in 1975.

Fort Benning area families interested in learning more about student exchange or arranging for a meeting may call Donna Grimm at 912-985-3079 or the International Headquarters toll-free at 1-800-245-6232.

SatoTravel service speeds up journey for Storm soldiers

SatoTravel News Service

An Arlington, Virginia based company is providing emergency travel service systems to cut precious hours from the trip home for U.S. service members returning from the Persian Gulf.

SatoTravel, which provides travel services to the U.S. government and military, is owned by 13 major U.S. airlines. It has set up fully-equipped, automated emergency "field offices" of 20 passenger ticketing positions each at Philadelphia International Airport's Overseas Terminal and the Charleston, S.C. International Airport. In addition to airline ticketing, the emergency services will include short-term hotel arrangements, simplified billing procedures, and even the packaging and handling of weapons.

Michael J. Premo, SatoTravel president, said his company was selected by the Military Traffic Management Command to provide the service "based on our more than 35 years' experience working with military customers, including many emergency situations." He added, "It is exciting and gratifying for us to help bring the heros and heroines of Operation Desert Storm and their families back together as quickly as we can."

Premo said SatoTravel will have a staff of nearly 40 at each location, and although no passenger figures have been released, "we are prepared to handle up to 3,000 passengers a day in each city for as long as we are needed."

SatoTravel has a network of about 700 travel service offices on military bases and in government facilities around the U.S. The company provides both official and leisure travel services under contract, and a portion of its commissions on leisure travel is returned to the military Morale, Welfare and Recreation services.

Bike safety can save lives

National Safety Council

Bicycling is a popular summer activity for recreation, sport, and transportation. Since an estimated 57 million Americans cycle on roads occupied by millions of motor vehicles that are larger, heavier and faster than bikes, the National Safety Council believes that bicyclists should always be defensive drivers.

Approximately 1,000 bicyclists are killed and some 50,000 suffer disabling injuries every year. Taking the following precautions and wearing protective equipment are a cyclists' best defenses:

- Obey traffic rules. Get acquainted with ordinances. Cyclists must follow the same rules as motorists.
- Know your bike's capabilities. Remember that bicycles differ from motor vehicles; they're smaller and can't move as fast. But, they can change direction more easily, stop faster and move through smaller spaces.
- Ride in single file with traffic, not against it. Bicycling two abreast can be dangerous. Bicyclists should stay as far right on the pavement as possible, watching for opening car doors, sewer gratings, soft shoulders, broken glass and other debris. Remember to keep a safe distance from the vehicle ahead.
- Make safe turns and cross intersection, using the correct hand singles (left arm straight out for left turn; forearm up for right turn). When traffic is heavy and the cyclist has to turn left, it is best to dismount and walk the bicycle across both streets at the crosswalks.
- Never hitch on cars. A sudden stop or turn could send the cyclist flying into the path of another vehicle.
- Before riding into traffic: stop, look left, right, left again, and over your shoulder.
- Always be seen. During the day, cyclists should wear bright clothing. Nighttime cycling is not advised, but if riding at night is necessary, retroreflective clothing, designed to bounce back motorists' headlight beams, will make cyclists more visible.
- Make sure the bicycle has the right safety equipment: a red rear reflector; a white front reflector; a red or colorless spoke reflector on the rear wheel; an amber or colorless reflector on the front wheel; pedal reflectors; a horn or bell; and a rear view mirror. A bright headlight is recommended for night riding.
- Wear a helmet. Head injures cause about 75 percent of all bicycling fatalities. The Council strongly urges all cyclists to wear helmets. The first body part to fly forward in a collision is usually the head, and with nothing but skin and bone to protect the brain from injury, the results can be disastrous. Look for helmets with Snell Memorial Foundation or American National Standards Institute approval stickers.

A properly designed helmet has four characteristics:

- a stiff outer shell designed to distribute impact forces and protect against sharp objects;
- an energy-absorbing liner at least one-half inch thick;
- a chin strap and fastener to keep the helmet in place; and,
- it should be lightweight, cool in hot weather and fit comfortably.

There is no limit to the fun and healthful exercise gained from bicycling. May is American Bike Month, a time for reviewing the safety emphasis on bicycling, although in many areas bike riding is a year round activity. Being careful, always, will give riders safer trips and greater peace of mind.

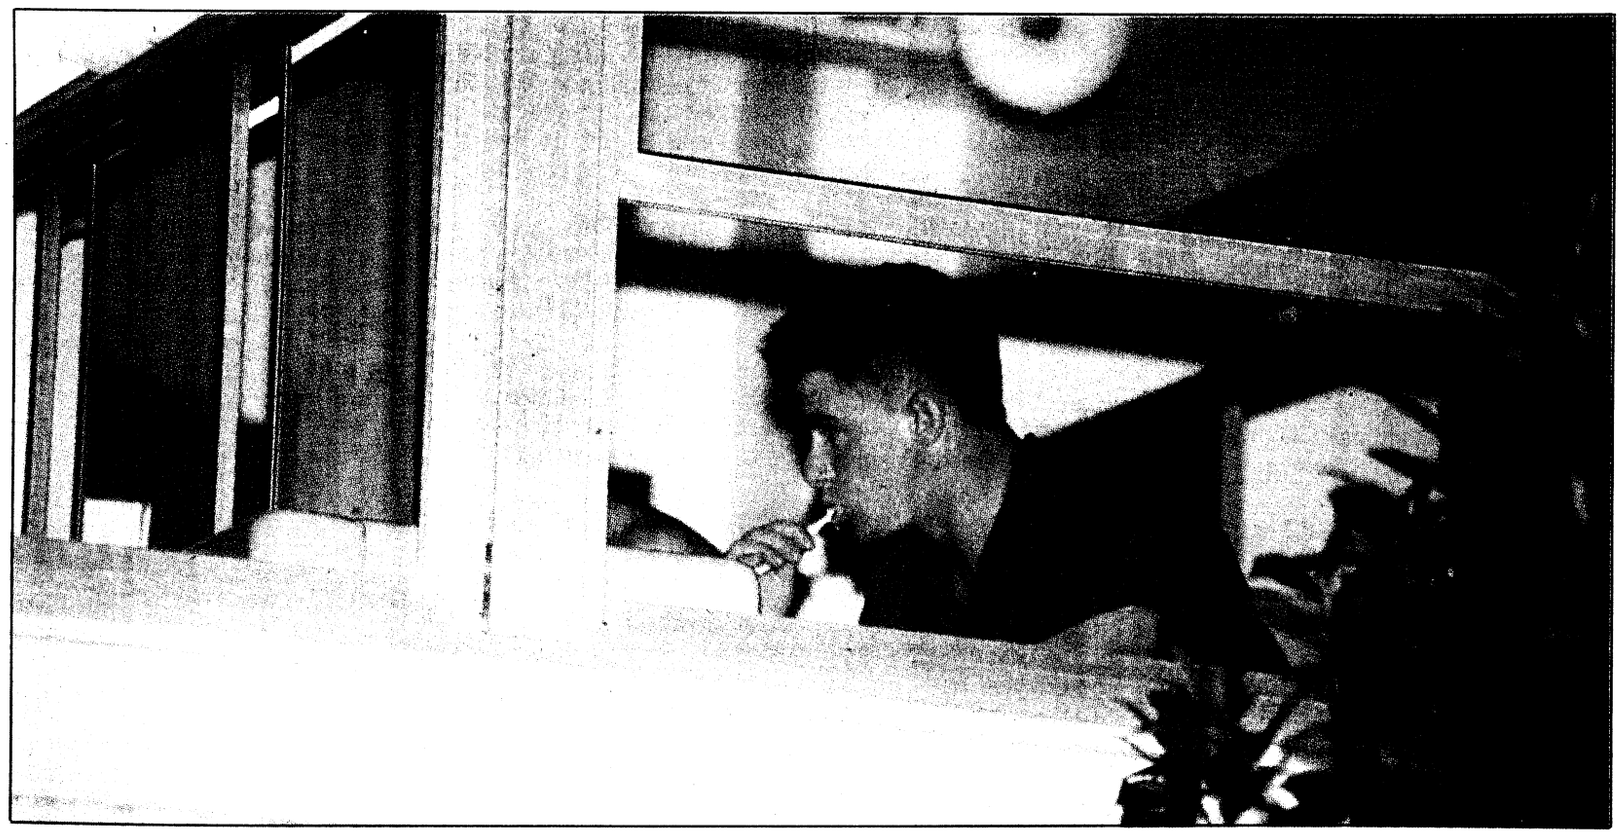
Living in the barracks has its ups, downs

By Jon R. Anderson
Bayonet staff writer

From Homer to Neil Simon, the daily life of the soldier has certainly been romanticized throughout the ages.

It is this sense of romance that often draws men and women to today's modern Army. The romance, however, is quickly replaced with reality.



Nothing, perhaps, exemplifies this reality as well, as a look at life in the barracks.

When a person decides to join the active duty Army, he or she usually realizes the commitment being made is to no part-time profession. In fact, the saying is probably as old as the Army itself: "When you're a soldier, you're a soldier 24 hours a day."

For married soldiers, there is a certain amount of mental reprieve in the sense that when the duty day is over, they can go home to spouse and family. For the single soldier, however, the end of the duty day only brings an extension of the military environment. According to one first sergeant in the Harmony Church area, it is here that commanders and first sergeants must work together to provide an atmosphere that fosters discipline as well as a sense of home.

Soldiers residing in the barracks at Fort Benning have both positive and negative things to say about their off-duty lifestyle.

"For what it's worth, this is my home," said Pfc. Chris Smith of his barracks in the Kelley Hill area. "Not too long ago, my first sergeant came into my room on a Saturday morning and reamed me out for having a messy room," said Smith, who explained he understood the necessity for cleanliness and discipline, but thought there should be a balance of privacy during off-duty hours.

Jon R. Anderson

Taking part in the daily morning ritual that soldiers have in common , Pfc. Edward Cooney brushes his teeth after a "shower and shave," in his Kelley Hill barracks.

Smith's complaint of privacy was echoed by other soldiers around Fort Benning. Spc. Dustin Swindle said that you can walk into his Harmony Church barracks at any given time and listen to two or three different types of music competing for attention, in what he calls "the stereo wars."

Smith attributes the problem not so much to high volumes as to thin walls. "I can hear the guy next door talking in a normal voice, like he was standing right next to me," explains Smith.

Smith, as well as other soldiers, concedes that the conditions are not unbearable, but illustrates his frustrations in describing seeing his motor pool parking lot being repaved "when basic maintenance isn't taken care of where we live."

Charlie Orr, chief of Facilities Maintenance for the Directorate of Engineering and Housing, empathizes with the soldiers, but said his office can only do so much.

"We have a backlog of more than $121 million worth of repairs and maintenance projects," said Orr.

Post command sergeant major Edward Garrett, compares the issue to his own childhood: "When I was a child, I always thought that my mom and dad could do better, just like my children think I can do better. It wasn't until I became a senior sergeant that I realized we are doing the best we can. The mindset of the soldier will have to become understanding of why things are the way they are."

According to Orr, the underlying problem with most of the barracks on Fort Benning is their age. He said that many were constructed as far back as 1958 and are equipped with outdated plumbing, insulation and fittings. However, many units, he said, take full advantage of the Repairs and Maintenance program, correcting the problems themselves.

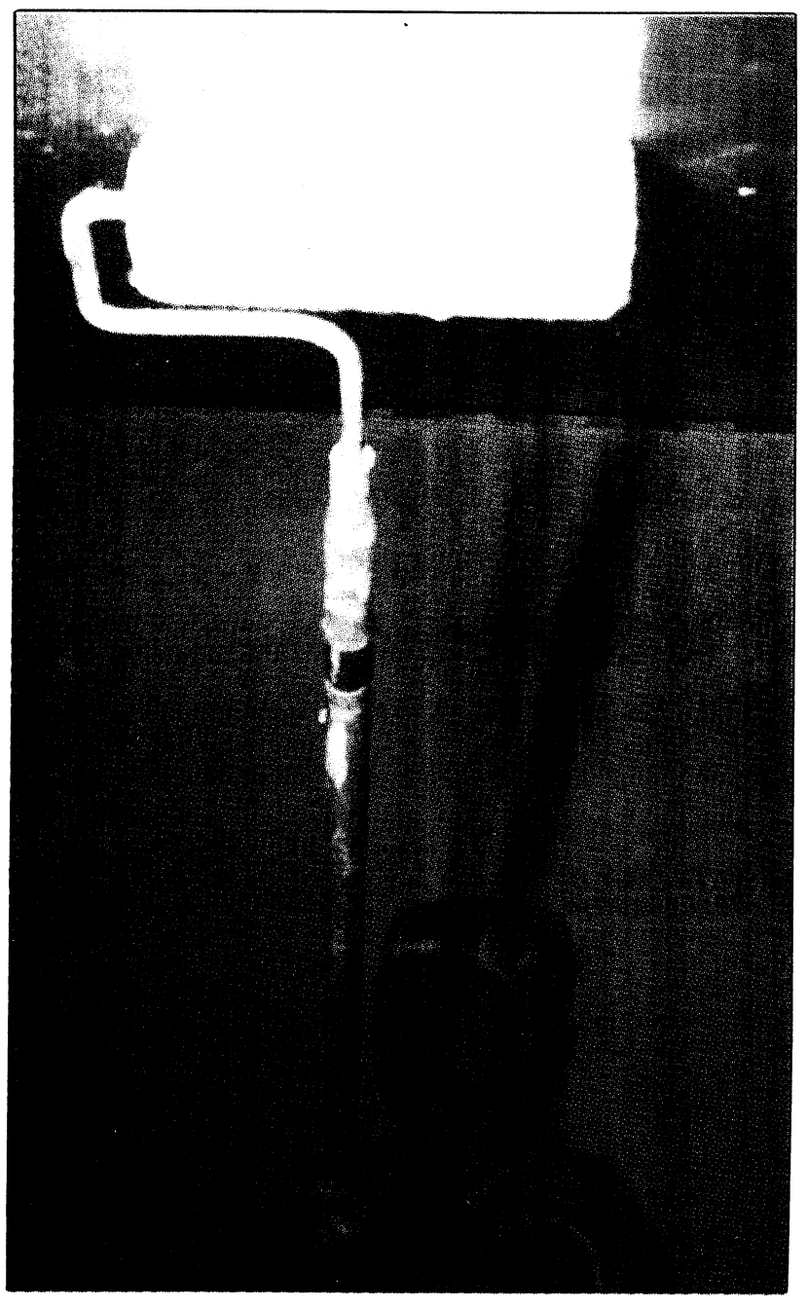
Garrett said, that if the quality and cleanliness of a facility aren't kept to standards as well as if "the physical needs of a soldier aren't totally taken care of, it's a lack on the leader's part."

While some soldiers voice their dissatisfaction, others maintain a very positive disposition concerning their life in the barracks.

Cpl. Rickey Cheek said that when he lived in the barracks he loved it, describing the ease he enjoyed in not having to deal with the added problems and bills involved in living off post.

Pfc. James Hartler, who resides in Main Post barracks, said he has no problem with living in the barracks, explaining that he believes that living with the people he works with makes his unit more effective and adds to its esprit de corps.

Pfc. Eric Sciubba, of the same unit, said "we spend so much time in the field, we really value what we have."



Some single soldiers, however, opt to live off post and cover the expense without the aid of basic allowance for quarters. Two female soldiers found life in the barracks so unbearable that they jumped at the opportunity when it was made available for them to live off post.

"It's worth paying money to get out of there," said one, explaining that it was a lot easier to manage her money a little better than to worry about room inspections, having to do extra details and the constant noise problem that she said was present in her unit barracks.

Staff Sgt. Arthur Snider, who is one of the senior soldiers residing in his Harmony Church barracks, said that although he thinks the soldiers don't have enough room to relax when off duty, and that more should be done to improve the living conditions, his unit does as good a job as it can.

1st Sgt. Joseph Donahue, first sergeant of Snider's unit, said that he tries to make it as comfortable as possible for his troops, but that it bothers him he can't offer them more.

One soldier concluded that if the Army could offer more along the lines of what the Air Force provided in barracks conditions, it could retain more of the quality soldiers who opt to get out at the end of their contracts. By that time, he said, soldiers care little for the romance, but are very concerned with the reality.

Self-help is the word at 29th Inf. Regt.

By Jon R. Anderson
Bayonet staff writer

When Capt. Jon Astor took the helm of the 29th Infantry Regiment's logistics shop, Col. Richard L. St. John, the regimental commander, called him to his office and detailed to the new supply officer a mission he wanted started to improve the physical conditions of the regiment.

"Jon, I want to see what can be done," said St. John, "to improve the quality of life in our living and working areas."

The first part of the program, explained the commander, would be a complete renovation of all the regiment's barracks in Harmony Church, bringing the single soldier's housing on par with the rest of Fort Benning.

> "If we can make this place a little nicer for the next soldier who has to live here, I'll feel like I've done my job."
> — Benning soldier

The second part, he called "cooling the regiment," and would involve providing new air conditioners to not only the barracks that were without, but to the various work places as well.

Seven months later, the regiment is only weeks away from being completely cooled and with a full team of soldiers specially tasked to quarters renovations, the barracks should be ready by the end of the summer.

The key in making the plan come together, said Astor, was using the Directorate of Engineering and Housing's self-help program.

By training and equipping the unit's own soldiers to perform the renovations, the Army has saved "well over $200,000," according to Staff Sgt. Chuck Black, the non-commissioned officer in charge of the program.

Many of the soldiers currently involved in the project reside in the barracks and look forward to being able to move into the improved quarters.

During a break in the work, Sgt. Robert Bermudez said that he is "happy to see beautification projects" around the often-forgotten Harmony Church area.

Agreeing, another soldier added, "If we can make this place a little nicer, a little more comfortable for the next soldier who has to live here, then I'll feel like I've done my job."

Soldier takes humorous look at life in barracks

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

Barracks life.

Need I write more?

For those of us soldiers who live in the barracks, the answer is an overwhelming "NO."

For those of you who are fortunate enough to live in on-post housing or off post someplace, maybe you've forgotten what it's like.

No privacy? Sure there's privacy sometimes, like when you're in the latrine (and sometimes then I'm not too sure).

Staying along the lines of privacy, it is an impossibility to entertain members of the opposite gender (even platonically) because we are required to sign them in at the Charge of Quarters desk, which is reasonable to me for security reasons, but is it really necessary to require soldiers to leave the door open while having guests in the rooms?

Chow time is a hassle. There are some soldiers (including me) whose jobs prohibit them from eating at the dining facilities and are drawing separate rations. How are we to cook if the fire marshal says we can't have anything in the rooms with which to cook? Our separate rations don't even begin to cover what it would cost to pick up something to eat from a restaurant.

We barracks dwellers are faced with a tough decision: Should we break the rules and buy some cookware and eat well or shall we all follow the rules and starve? Tough decision, eh? I'm willing to bet that the latter of the two choices is not the one that is most commonly chosen.

Inspections are probably the worst thing about the barracks, besides the aforementioned starving ("starving" of course is an exaggeration for effect). I suppose everyone has their opinion on how clean is clean. It amazes me that a few specks of dust can make something dirty to an inspecting first sergeant or his or her subordinates. I suppose they are correct, in a sense.

However, I suppose all in all, barracks life isn't an extreme hardship. I like most of the people in the barracks. Heck, I even get along well with my commander and first sergeant for the most part (unless I'm being counseled for my dusty room). I also suppose that a private shouldn't be so nit-pickey. After all, I'm just a private.

All-Army wrestlers rise to meet, beat challenge

By Rodney Smith
29th Infantry Regiment

As the season progresses, the All-Army wrestling team faces many challenges. The University Nationals held at Pennsylvania State University Saturday proved to be their first challenge since the Armed Forces championships.

Meeting the challenge head on are the "young guns" of All-Army wrestling. "We have a well-rounded team. Not only do we have depth and experience in our veteran wrestlers, but we also have raw talent and motivation in our new recruits," said Coach Anthony Thomas.

Gunning for a second national title, Spc. Bart Mease is no joke despite his uncanny since of humor.

"Whether it's wrestling, doing my job as a soldier or just clowning around. I give a part of myself to everything I do," said Mease.

As the 1990 Espoir National Champion and Olympic Sports Festival runner-up, Mease is favored to do well. As a native of Pennsylvania, Mease is elated about being the hometown favorite.

"This tournament is special because not only will I be representing the Army but also the folks at home who supported me throughout my wrestling career," said Mease.

Spc. James Novak of Korea is more at ease with himself and his goals prior to the tournament.

"My goals are to win the tournament. I hope to use this experience to prepare myself for the Open Nationals. Coach Thomas has exceeded all boundaries in preparing us physically and mentally," said Novak.

Spc. Norman Golden didn't make the team last year, but this efforts were not a total waste.

"I learned a lot last year about myself and wrestling. Last year I didn't know what to expect. With a year under my belt I came back prepared to make the team," said Golden.

Feeling that Greco-Roman is more exciting than freestyle wrestling, Douglas Greenlee for now has put freestyle on the back burner.

"I am a better wrestler over all because of Greco. Coach Thomas has exposed me to a variety of new and advanced technique. Hopefully what I've learned will put me in the top three at the nationals," said Greenlee.

Making the grade as a newcomer is Pfc. James Connors of Germany. Having a competitive spirit, he contends that his close friend and teammate Pvt. Keith Seraki will not outdo him this time.

"It doesn't look good when your teammate drops down into your weight class and outperforms you," said Connors. I can't let that happen. I've worked too hard to let it happen," he added.

Modesty is not his forte, but hard work and dedication are his left and right arms. "Coach Thomas has given me tools to be a great wrestler, the rest is up to me," said Connors.

Pfc. Brian Papenfuss of Germany is an exceptional wrestler. Each year, Coach Thomas gambles on a blue chipper who didn't make the team.

"Coach Thomas has a perfect average. Spc. Rodney Smith, Spc. Bart Mease, Spc. Shon Lewis and Spc. Ryan Jibben have all become Armed Forces Champions and national place winners," said Team leader Tony Demos. "I want to see what I can do against competitors my own age."

"I have not always been a confident person. I've found a new confidence in myself because of Coach Thomas. This year has been a learning experience for me. I want to feel things out this year so I can come back next year with more realistic goals," said Papenfuss.

In his first Greco-Roman tournament ever, Spc. Anthony Terrance Brockman of the 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt., placed third at the Armed Forces championships.

"I feel good placing in Greco-Roman because it was my first time. Making weight proved to be the biggest factor. I did not place at all in freestyle because of an improper diet," said Brockman.

For this tournament I'm wrestling at my natural weight. I want to see how I perform at a higher weight. Now that I'm on a better dieting program, I hope to do well," said Brockman.

Bassing now easy with spring bait

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

For years, the willow leaf spinnerbait with its distinct blades shaped like weeping willow leaves has been a tournament-winning lure of the bass pro. It was in use in a few areas long before the pros "discovered" it, but its success in professional fishing has put it into tackleboxes everywhere.

"I think it looks more natural in the water," said former world champion Charlie Reed, who has used willow leaf spinnerbaits for many years.

"They produce more flash than a standard spinnerbait, but you don't get quite as much throbbing action," the Johnson Outboards Pro Staff angler explained. "Their main advantage is that they come through vegetation better than other spinnerbaits.

If you're fishing especially thick vegetation, such as milfoil, all that's needed is to change to smaller willow leaf blades, and the lure will slide through the greenery like a lawn mower, said Reed.

"I've used small number three willow leaf blades on a heavy three-fourths ounce spinnerbait," he noted. "It looks funny, but it works."

Willow leaf blade options are as varied as they are for other spinnerbaits. Many anglers use tandem willow leaf blades that produce even more flash.

When Reed fishes a tandem willow leaf, he prefers to use two smaller blades, such as number fours, because they have less drag and are easier to retrieve.

"I'll also mix blades," explained the Johnson pro, "putting a small Colorado-style blade ahead of a large willow leaf. It gives the appearance of a big baitfish chasing a smaller one, and at times seems to make difference."

Reed prefers to fish gold willow leaf blades in off-colored water because he thinks they appear more natural, while in clear water he changes to nickel blades. He rearly uses anything but white skirts.

"You don't have to limit your use of willow leaf spinnerbaits to thick vegetation," advised Reed. "They're excellent lures to use around any type of heavy cover, like fallen logs, stumps, and even boulders.

"They come through cover easily, and have the added advantage of producing a very natural flash in the water. I'm convinced bass strike them because the blades look like baitfish."

Service experts at OMC recommend a frequent check of the gearcase lubricant in your outboard motor.

If any water has worked its way into the gearcase during the summer, it could freeze, expand and crack the case during the cold winter months.

When draining the fluid, also check for metal filings, which could also signal trouble.

River run sets rapid pace

By Armed Forces Staff College

The annual 10K Elizabeth River Run, one of the largest races in Virginia, will take place May 4.

Now in the race's 13th year, thousands of participants — new runners and veterans alike — have taken the challenge of the ERR. Thirty-two hundred participants are expected to finish the race this year.

The race has many divisions. Males and females compete separately, but have the same age brackets: 12 and under, 13-19, 20-24, 25-29, 30-34, 35-39, 40-44, 45-49, 50-54, 55-59, 60-64, 65-69, and 70 and above.

There are also team competitions in military, women's, and open categories. Open teams may include church, business, and fraternity organizations. Teams must consist of five to seven runners, and entries must be mailed together.

Costumed runners are also welcome to run the ERR. The best costume will win the runner a pair of airline tickets to Orlando, Fla., and Universal Studios.

Following the race, some awards will be presented to the top runners, while the rest will be mailed. They include cash prizes up to $1,000, merchandise certificates, trophies, plaques, mint julep cups, and tankards.

All finishers' times will be published in The Virginia-Pilot and Ledger-Star, the Norfolk-area newspaper, as well as mailed to runners out of the area.

Entry fees are $12 for adults and $5 for children 12 years old and younger. Entry forms must be received before April 26, or entry fees for adults will increase to $15. Contact your local public affairs office for a form, or write to the Armed Forces Staff College PAO (one of the co-sponsors of the race), at 7800 Hampton Blvd., Norfolk, Va. 23511-6097, phone (804) 444-5431.

Registration will take place at the Armed Forces Staff College May 3, from noon to 6 p.m., and May 4, from 7 to 8 a.m. Everyone who registers for the race may pick up a race packet and a T-shirt on the day of, or the day before, the race at the prescribed registration times.

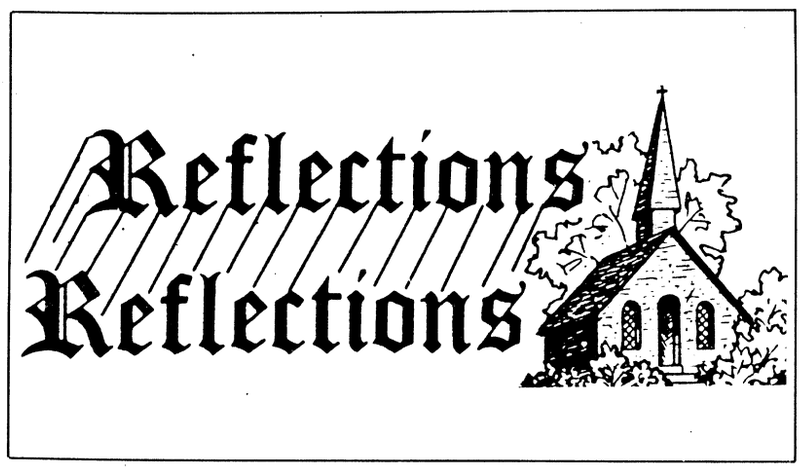
SPIRITUAL

The act of forgiveness must be a two-way street

USAIC Chaplains' Office

Some years ago, a man by the name of Samuel Holmes was serving a life sentence in a Kentucky prison. A friend of his, Lucien Young, was a very respected and well-known man. Mr. Young went to Gov. Blackburn of Kentucky and pleaded for a pardon for his friend. The Governor consented and signed the pardon. Lucien Young put the pardon in his pocket and rushed to his friend in prison at Frankfort.



When he walked in the cell, he said, "Sam, if suddenly by some miracle you were released from here, what's the first thing you'd do?" Without hesitating, Sam said, "First, I would find the judge who sentenced me, and I'd kill him. Then I'd find the prosecuting attorney, and I'd kill him."

Lucien Young turned and slowly walked out the prison. Outside the walls he took the pardon of his friend and tore it in pieces. Samuel Holmes lost his pardon.

There is an ironic parallel to this in the New Testament. In teaching his disciples the Lord's Prayer, he included "forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us."

When we pray this, we are asking to be forgiven in the same manner as we forgive others. In reality, if we are unforgiving of others, we are asking God not to forgive us.

The difficult thing about forgiveness is that the person who gives it is the one who is hurt. The natural thing to do is lash back or withdraw; to hurt back.

But there is no other one thing that can scar our souls like the piercing arrow of an unforgiving spirit.

The one thing never cured by nursing is a grievance. Whether right or wrong, we can allow our hate to become an obsession which poisons our whole attitude toward life and rob us of our maturity.

In the end, we might discover our pride has cut us off from those we love.

A young man had left home after a heated confrontation with his parents, even though he knew he was wrong. Some months later he decided to return home but wasn't sure he was welcome.

He sent a telegram to his parents saying, "Tomorrow I'll be on the train that runs by the house. If I can come home, put a sheet on the clothesline so I'll know."

The closer the train came to his home the next day, the more nervous he became wondering if the sheet would be there.

When he passed the house, he saw that his parents had put every sheet in the house on the clothesline!

His parents went to the limit with sheets to show their forgiveness. God went to the limit with Calvary to show his love and forgiveness.

Even as they nailed him to the cross, Christ could say, "Father, forgive them." If God is so willing to forgive us, we have to honestly ask ourselves why are we so reluctant to forgive those who have wronged us?

Ephesians 4:32 says "forgive. . .even as God has forgiven you." Remember that real forgiveness is unconditional. It is not threatening and requires nothing of the forgiven.

It is not miserly and given in portions. When you're not happy with the tense relationship you have with someone else, run the risk.

Hang out all the sheets and you may learn that they're as eager to be forgiven as you are to forgive.

'Showtime' comes to Benning

By Debra Galle
USAIC Chaplain's Office

"The Best Things in Life" will be free at Fort Benning

"The Best Things in Life" is actually the title of a unique, professional musical program presented by a group called "Showtime."

The USAIC Staff Chaplains Office and the Family Advocacy Center has arranged this opportunity for families to enjoy a night out together. In the wake off soldiers returning from Operation Desert Storm, families might need to take an opportunity to have meaningful time together.

"It is a privilege to present this program to Fort Benning families at no cost to them," said Chaplain (Maj.) Richard Roggia, Chaplains Family LIfe Center Chief. "The show is designed to be a fun-filled evening for the whole family."

The Showtime Company is described as one of the finest college performing groups in the United States.

Showtime Company has performed throughout the United States, Canada, South Africa and the British Isle since 1979. Last summer, the group completed a five-week tour to England, Scotland, Ireland and the Isle of Man.

Touring southeastern United States, the company is performing in 13 states this Spring.

Russell Bice, Showtime Company Director, says the 13 singers and dancers, who are backed by a nine-piece orchestra, "present a professionally produced entertainment package that is fully choreographed and costumed."

"Their show is a musical exploration of some of the most fulfilling times in a person's life. 'The Best Things in Life' is a show designed to reach out with warmth, humor and friendship."

The childhood medley includes songs from "The Little Mermaid." A Broadway medley includes hits from "Gypsy", "Funny Girl", and "Les Miserables". Romantic tunes from old favorites and a tribute to the 1960's is included. The show will conclude with a salute to freedom.

A free performance will be given on May 13 at 7 p.m.

Request for tickets must be made in advance by calling the Chaplains Family Life Center at 545-1760, 545-5301, or 545-2071.

COMMUNITY

Post celebrates Volunteer Week

By Wanda Campbell
Bayonet community writer

Nationwide, as the amount of federal funding for programs is lowered and the need for services is increased, volunteers are stepping in to fill gaps in the system. Fort Benning is no exception.

Operations Desert Shield and Storm saw a tremendous surge in volunteers. Family Support Group volunteers organized coffee groups, telephone trees, and held workshops. Many rear-detachment soldiers mowed grass, held auto check-up clinics, and acted as big brothers and sisters for the children.

Operations Desert Shield and Storm also saw many individuals and companies holding fund raisers and collecting food for the Army Community Service Food Locker. Many are businesses sponsored events and services for families of Operations Desert Shield and Storm.

According to Kathy Case, installation volunteer coordinator, nearly 2,000 volunteers at Fort Benning gave more than 300,000 hours of service to our community. Based on estimated wage earnings, that is a savings of more than $3.8 million.

Who is a volunteer?

Just about everyone will volunteer sometime in their life. Volunteers are ordinary people who give pocket change when someone is collecting for flowers at the office, write letters to the editor to express opinions, stop in the mall to answer the market surveys.

Volunteers are also youth group leaders, ham radio operators, members of cooperations, like the Farmers CO-OP and neighborhood baby-sitting exchanges.

Traditional volunteers are working for crisis hot-lines, disaster relief, and in hospitals. They also work on club boards, at museums, and in the schools.

Many volunteers don't call themselves volunteers. Linda Collins, president of the Wilson School Parent Organization, said "Jill Bachman is our vice-president and she never turns in hours because she does everything at home. She doesn't think she is a volunteer."

The need for volunteers is not new. President John F. Kennedy at his inauguration in 1961 dared America to "ask not what your country can do for you, ask what you can do for your country."

Today, volunteers are not just handing out magazines at the hospital, or baking cookies for church fund raisers. Today's volunteers are tackling such problems as homelessness, the environment, and drug abuse, according to Scholastic Update.

There are many things that need doing in our community. Youth Services need coaches, the Religious Education Center needs workers for Vacation Bible Schools, the scouting programs need volunteers for camps, First Steps needs people to contact new parents, and the list goes on and on.

If you would like to help, contact Kathy Case at the Volunteer Resource Center.Call 545-5602, or come by the office which is located on Baltzell Avenue in Miller Hall, building 241, next to the Infantry Museum.

Teens 'lock-in' for workshop

Youth Services

Youth Services conducted a teen "lock-in" April 6 and 7 for an "All-Night Activity Workshop." Eighteen teens participated in the program.

Workshops presented by Dr. Sidney Levine, from Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Program, and Maj. Loretta Burl, from Martin Army Hospital dealt with topics of self esteem, drug abuse, and sexually transmitted diseases.

A session on hair care was presented by Deborah Paris from the Post Exchange Beauty Shop. Several participants were given helpful hints along with trims and haircuts.

T-shirt painting classes allowed each teen to create and design his or her own shirt. During the "wee hours of the morning," teens took part in a "Moonlight Scavenger Hunt," pool tournaments, and viewed movies. Some teens took to the stage performing improvisations based on topics related to earlier workshops.

Most teens found the evening filled with so much to do that they did not take the time to sleep. However, some managed to get in a few winks. Teens munched on pizza, tuna salad, chips, and fruit cups throughout the night.

At the close, the teens gathered for breakfast before saying their good-byes to friends and the Youth Services staff.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Rick Parker
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q. I own a home here in Columbus, and also have a lot of credit card debt. I have seen some advertisements for "Home Equity Loans" which sound attractive. They say that I can consolidate my debt using a home equity loan, get lower monthly payments, and at the same time get an additional tax advantage because the interest will be deductible. Are the home equity loans a good idea?

A. A home equity loan is one type of a loan in which the equity of your home serves as collateral. "Equity" is the amount by which the value of your home exceeds or is greater than the balance of any existing mortgages and liens on the home. As an example, if your home is presently worth $60,000, and you currently owe $40,000 on the mortgage, then you have $20,000 of equity in your home. Banks, savings and loan associations, finance companies and other lenders will often make loans against this excess value, and in many cases, you can use the money from the loan for whatever purpose you want.

These loans usually come in two varieties, the second mortgage and the home equity line of credit. In a second mortgage, the lender gives you a check for the entire loan amount (although where you are consolidating debt, the lender may cut checks payable to the creditors you are paying.

The terms of repayment and interest rate for a second mortgage are usually fixed; that is, the mortgage will call for the interest rate to be fixed for the life of the loan, and the monthly payments remain the same.

Most second mortgages are scheduled to be fully paid anywhere from five to 15 years. With the home equity line of credit, the lender sets up a credit limit, just like a credit card account, and you write checks to actually get the funds.

In the home equity line of credit, you use as much of the line of credit as you like, up to the credit limit. The interest rate is usually variable, with changes in the rate occurring annually or quarterly.

The rates are typically tied to the rate of return on government securities. The monthly payments will change depending on changes to the interest rate and how much of the credit limit you use.

The biggest argument you usually hear in favor of second mortgages is the ability to deduct the interest you pay on them for tax purposes.

For the past few years, your ability to deduct interest on so-called "consumer credit" (credit cards, auto loans, signature loans, and the like) has been reduced. For tax year 1991 and beyond, you will no longer be able to deduct that interest at all.

However, you can still deduct (and probably will be able to for the foreseeable future) interest on a home mortgage, subject to certain limitations.

As a result, many home equity lenders stress the tax advantage of consolidating non-deductible consumer debt by getting a second mortgage.

You need to be aware of the possible pitfalls to these loans.

First, unlike the consumer and credit card debt, these mortgages are liens against your home. If you fail to pay the home equity loan, the lender can foreclose on your home.

Second, even though interest on mortgages is generally deductible for tax purposes, there are limitations. The rules on mortgage interest deductibility vary depending on when you took out your mortgages, the total amount of the mortgages, and the purposes for which you took them.

Before taking out a home equity loan to consolidate debt, you should obtain advice on the tax consequences. It is possible that the interest on the loan you are obtaining will not be tax deductible.

Third, make sure you understand what interest rate you are getting on the new loan. Some of the interest rates charged on home equity loans are either the same as or higher than the rates you might be paying on your present consumer debt.

This is particularly true of lenders who make loans to people with credit problems.

Make certain you understand who will be responsible for paying the closing costs on the home equity loan and how much those costs will be.

Just like any other mortgage, there will be expenses for obtaining credit reports and appraisals (usually anywhere from $200 to $300).

Some lenders require you to pay for the credit report and appraisal when you apply for the loan. Typically, if the loan is not approved, these costs are not refunded to you.

Shop around — there are lenders who will pay these costs just to get your business, and who will not expect you to repay the costs if the loan is not approved.

If you are going to use a home equity loan to pay off your present credit card balances, think about cutting up those credit cards after you pay them off. Unless you are extremely disciplined, an open line of credit on an account with a zero balance is mighty tempting to use.

To run up a new balance on the account defeats the purpose of having obtained the home equity loan, and potentially endangers your home.

There are times when you can make the value of your home work for you by taking a loan against the equity in the property. However, whenever you consider doing something like this, you need to carefully consider all of the possible consequences.

Is the reason for getting the loan worth putting your home at increased risk? If the loan is to consolidate debts which you are having trouble paying, can you make the monthly payments on the home equity loan?

Ask yourself these questions, and before closing on one of these loans, consider seeking legal advise on the possible consequences, advantages and disadvantages. You can contact the Legal Assistance Office at 545-3281/3282.

ENERGY WATCH

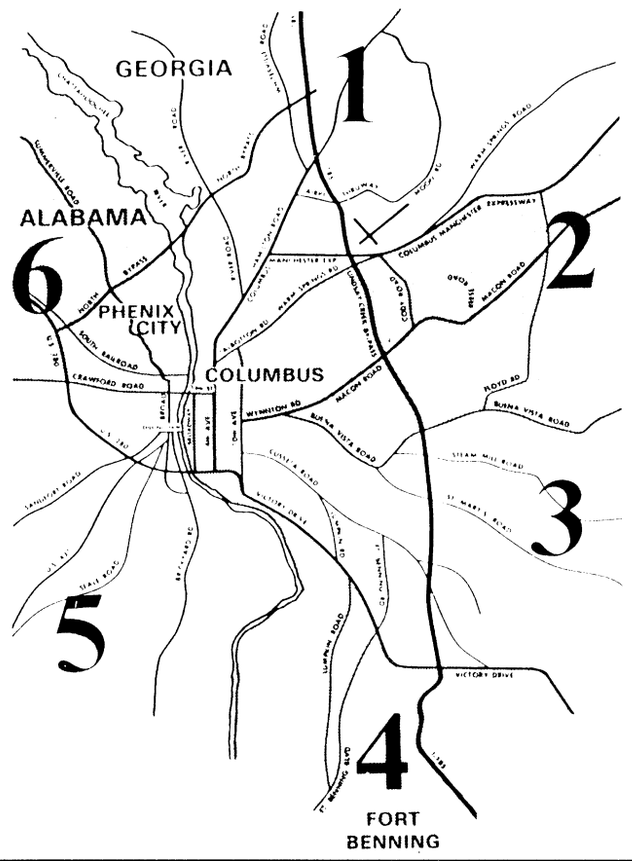
By By Tina Cook
Energy Branch

Geothermal energy is a renewable source of energy that comes from the heat deep within the earth. The word geothermal comes from the Greek words geo (earth) and therme (heat).

Geothermal energy is generated in the earth's core, almost 4,000 miles beneath the earth's surface. The double-layered core is made up of very hot magma (molten iron) surrounding a solid iron center. Red hot temperatures are continuously produced inside the earth by the slow decay of radioactive particles that is natural in all rocks.

Surrounding the core is the mantle, which is about 1,800 miles thick and made up of magma and rock. The outermost layer of the earth, the land that forms the continents and ocean floors, is called the crust. The crust varies from about three to five miles thick under the oceans to as much as 15 to 35 miles thick on the continents.

Compared to other energy sources, geothermal energy does little damage to the environment. Most power plants have to transport their fuel to the plant site, but geothermal plants sit on top of their fuel source. Geothermal power plants have been built in deserts, in the middle of crops, and in mountain forests. Motor vehicles and fossil fuel (coal, oil) power plants are major producers of the air emissions that cause global warming and acid rain. But geothermal power plants produce almost none of these emissions.



The use of geothermal energy is growing worldwide because it costs about the same as energy from coal, it's reliable, and it doesn't burn any fuel.

If you have any questions about this or any other energy-related subject, contact the Energy Office at 545-7928 (Save Watts and Therms).

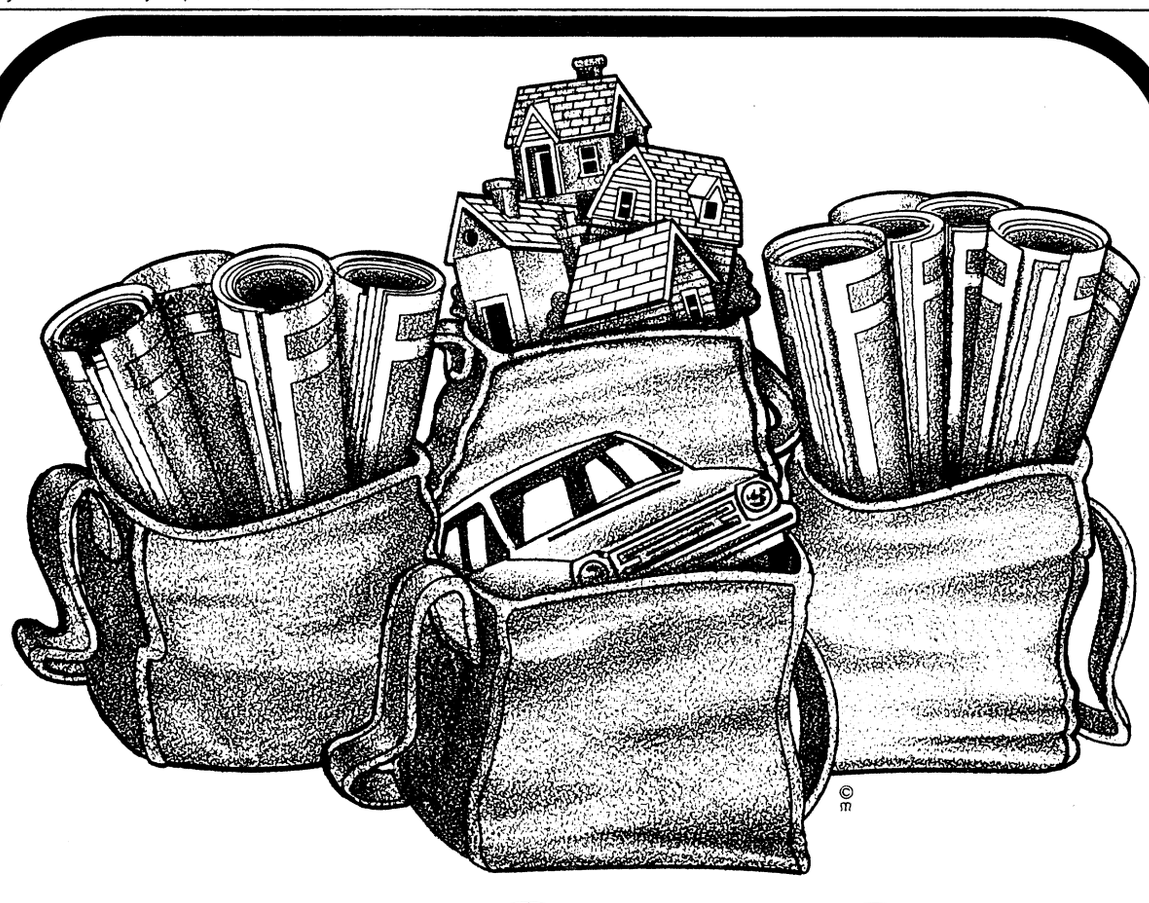
HONEST. MORE FOLKS FEEL THAT NEWSPAPER MOST BELIEVABLE MEDIUM.

We can't lie.
A recent study showed that more people feel newspaper is the most believable medium.
Not television.
Not radio.
Not magazines.



But why?

It's probably because we know that a newspaper lays it all out in black & white.
Right in front of you.
The places, the people, and the prices.
The offers, the promises and the claims.
It's all there to read, think about, and keep. And that goes for the advertisements, too.

When people turn to their Columbus Ledger-Enquirer they turn here with interest. Which means this is where your advertising message needs to be.
With all the choices available, it's difficult deciding how best to advertise your business.
But everything becomes a little simpler when you remember one rule.

YOU GOTTA BE IN THE PAPER.

2.15%

Annual Percentage Rate financing on Saab 900s.

GET A CAR THAT'S WELL ABOVE PRIME AT RATES THAT ARE WELL BELOW

Now you can buy a Saab without giving a free ride to a bank. Thanks to special factory incentives, Saab is offering some of the lowest Annual Percentage Rate financing in its history. And what makes these rates even more atrractive are the cars they come with. Like their pricier competitors, all Saabs feature anti-lock braking systems, driver's side air bags and stirring performance. Unlike them, Saabs also offer plush interiors that double as roomy cargo carriers, our 6-year/ 80,000-mile limited warranty, and some of the best safety records in their class. So instead of settling for a lessler car, consider a lesser loan. For complete details and an exhiliarating test drive, see us by April 30.

*2.15% Annual Percentage Rate available on Saab 900 models only. Financing to qualified and approved retail buyers through March 31, 1991 through Saab-Scania Financial Services Corp. Subject to availability. Available on 48-month contracts. Down payment required. For example: Payment for a Saab 900 3-door 5-speed would be $299.00 per month for 48 months totaling $14,352.00, plus 20% down payment. Manufacturers Suggested Retail Price $18,712.00 (including destination charge), excluding taxes, license, registration and other dealer charges. See your participating Saab dealer for complete details. Limited warranty covers major components of engines, transmissions and other systems. See your Saab dealer for complete details. 988th MPs home from Honduras

Sgt. Prentice Marsh reunites with son, Lloyd Austin.

The 988th Military Police Company has returned from its four-month support mission in Honduras, with flights arriving at Lawson Army Airfield April 17 and Thursday.

The soldiers provided convoy security, VIP escort, and routine law enforcement to Sotocan Air Base, Honduras, according to Command Sgt. Maj. Arthur L. Wilcox, Fort Benning Military Police Activity.

"We live in a dangerous world," said Fort Benning Commander Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza, "and while the focus may be on one particular area, we still have have to maintain our security and have ready forces in other areas."

Cavezza, who was on hand to greet the arriving military police, continued by praising the soldiers for being a key asset in sustaining global security and readiness.

1st Lt. James H. Mullen, executive officer of the contingent, agreed with the general saying although his company wasn't involved in the Persian Gulf War, its mission was still "very important," in an area that is known for its turbulence.

Mullen said that one of the unit's most important missions while deployed was to ensure security for multinational forces involved in cutting roads through the jungle countryside.

"It's definitely in the favor of Honduras that the U.S. has an interest there," said Sgt. Prentice Marsh, a returning soldier. "We're doing a lot for them and I think they appreciate it."

Spc. George Swartzfager, another returning MP, said the mission that most stuck out in his mind was escorting medical teams to remote villages. After flying in by helicopter, explained Swartzfager, the teams would set up clinics to render medical aid not only to villagers, but provide vaccinations and care to livestock as well.

As Fort Benning soldiers returned from Honduras, MPs from Fort Lewis, Wash. replaced them to continue support for the air base.

197th soldiers receive silver, bronze stars

By Tom Wilkinson
197th Infantry Brigade

"I wake up smiling at night, I'm so damn proud."

That's what Col. Theodore W. Reid, commander of the 197th Infantry Brigade, had to say to his soldiers about their role in Operation Desert Storm, during an awards ceremony held April 19.

The ceremony recognized those soldiers who performed valiantly during the operation.

The recipients included 1st Lt. Larry P. Aikman, who received a Silver Star "for conspicuous gallantry as Scout Platoon Leader of Task Force 1-18 Infantry in Iraq on Feb. 26, 1991."

While encountering fierce resistance from elements of the 3rd Commando Regiment, Aikman fearlessly exposed himself to enemy fire in order to maneuver his platoon. This resulted in the total collapse of the enemy's forces.

Other awards included 17 Bronze Stars for valor, Army Commendation Medals for valor, and a Meritorious Service Medal for Maj. James A. Walls, the Rear Detachment commander.

The Bronze Stars, which singled out those individuals for gallant valorous actions in the face of the enemy, were awarded to: Capt. Edward Agee, Capt. Stefan J. Banach, 1st Lt. Rembert A. Edwards, Spc. Robert J. Fegley, 2nd Lt. Michael R. Fenzel, Capt. Eric T. Grasman, 1st Lt. Christopher R. Hupp, Capt. Brian D. Jones, 1st Lt. Robert J. Labbs, Capt. Thomas A. Malone, Sgt. Alan R. Mendez, 2nd Lt. David L. Oste, 2nd Lt. Christopher J. Porter, 2nd Lt. Robert F. Price, 1st Lt. Richard S. Redman, Capt. John L. Salvetti and Capt. Leslie W. Yother.

The Army Commendation Medals for valor were given to Sgt. Donnie Bartunek, Spc. David M. Blackbird, Sgt. Sylvester J. Boylen, Pvt. 1 Frederick E. Dolan, Staff Sgt. Curtis J. Edwards, Pfc. Andrew T. Keaveney, Cpl. Matthew Luchko, Cpl. Patrick R. Patton, Cpl. William H. Smith, Pfc. Sean R. Tonner and Sgt. 1st Class Andrew Wigley.

Just as it is said that every soldier's spouse is part of a team, Reid recognized several spouses for their outstanding role in the deployment with Certificates of Achievement.

"We couldn't have done it without your help," he said of all the brigade spouses. "Through all your efforts and others like you, I felt confident that the family members were being taken care of back here, and that takes a burden off our mind, and the soldier's mind when he gets ready to cross the LD and go into combat."

"I think you all had the harder job," he added. "Ours was easy, we trained and fought, while you fought on a daily basis."

Reid went on to address his soldiers from the grandstand.

"You guys are the heroes," he said. "You did the job and everything I asked of you. In 51 hours we attacked 362 kilometers into Iraq. That battle is going to be studied in the annals of history long into the future."

"We realized that all roads to Fort Benning were through Iraq," he added. "It was you that did that job, and I'm awfully proud of you."

"A grateful nation has welcomed us back, and believe me, the nation is grateful of what you've done," he added with a smile.

Some people say Reid smiles a lot.

"Well, the reason I'm always smiling is because of you soldiers," he said.

New Army chief of staff nominated

Army News Service

Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan, currently Army vice chief of staff, has been nominated as the Army's 32nd chief of staff.

Sullivan, whose career spans more than 30 years, is a native of Boston and is a 1959 Reserve Officers' Training Corps graduate of Norwich University. He has a masters degree in political science from the University of New Hampshire.

Sullivan has served in a wide variety of challenging command and staff positions which include multiple overseas tours in Vietnam and Europe. Prior to his assignment as vice chief of staff, he served as the Army's deputy chief of staff for Operations and Plans in the Pentagon. In this position he was a principle architect of the plans to forge the Army for the post-Cold War era.

"I look forward to working with Gordon Sullivan. He is an accomplished leader of soldiers and has been instrumental in designing plans to reshape our Army of the future," said Secretary of the Army Michael P.W. Stone.

"General Sullivan has played a crucial role in shaping the trained and ready Army we have today. His leadership will ensure our Army remains fully capable of meeting the needs of the nation in the critical years ahead," said Gen. Carl E. Vuono, Army chief of staff.

Sullivan has commanded soldiers at every level from platoon to division, including command of the 1st Brigade, 3rd Armored Division in Germany and command of the 1st Infantry Division at Fort Riley, Kansas.

Sullivan has also served on the international NATO staff as the deputy chief of staff for Support of Central Army Group in Europe followed by an assignment as the deputy commandant of the U.S. Army Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

Sullivan attended the Army Command and General Staff College and the Army War College. His many awards include the Distinguished Service Medal, Defense Superior Service Medal, Legion of Merit, Bronze Star, Purple Heart and the Combat Infantryman's Badge.

Post plans fest

By Jon R. Anderson
Bayonet staff writer

A gala festival, dubbed Operation Red, White, and Blue, celebrating a wide variety of programs that have been ongoing through the month of April is planned for Saturday at Doughboy Stadium.

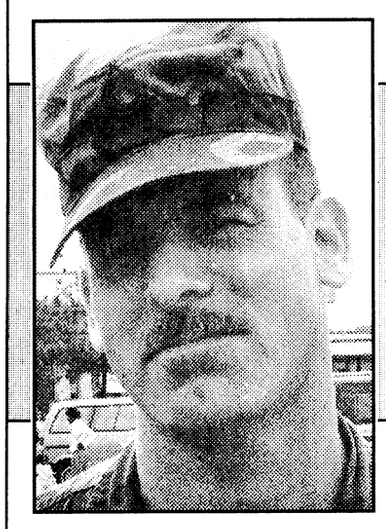
The event is a culmination for Month of the Military Child, Child Abuse Prevention Week, and a celebration of the return of the troops from Desert Storm, according to Linda Laine, coordinator of the festival. The event also provides a way to recognize the support of military family members and the civilian community, said Laine.

"If you want to get out and really enjoy yourself in some family fun, this will be the day to do it," said Laine. "We're going to have something for everyone."

Mason Dixon, announcer for South 106 radio station, will be master of ceremonies for a variety of performers scheduled to play throughout the day, including local recording artist Jeff Goldwin.

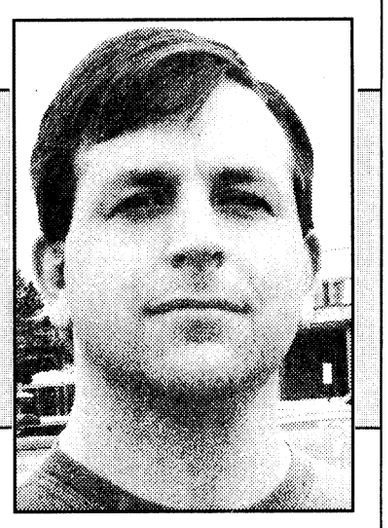
Carnival games and rides will also be available for children of all ages.

Operation Red, White, And Blue, which begins promptly at 2 p.m., is free of charge and open to the public.



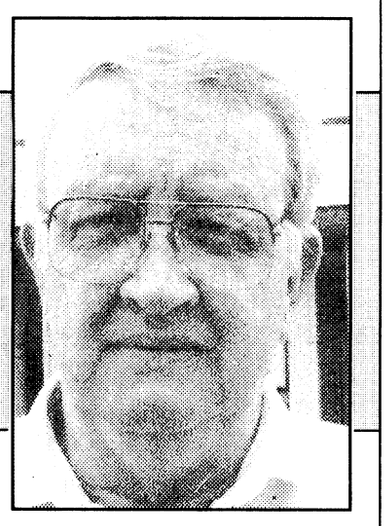
OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES:



What do you think of possible legislation to grant benefits to the participants of Desert Storm?

Maj. Gladys Gaillard-McBride, U.S. Army Medical Activity — "I think we should. We uprooted these people and should offer them some sort of compensation for it. No matter how short the war was, they are all still heroes and we should try to show our gratitude for their efforts."



Sgt. 1st Class Jonathan Mann, 535th Engineer Detachment — "Any benefits we receive will be greatly appreciated and deserved."

Bill Watt, air traffic controller — "I support it all; the guys that were over there deserve this recognition and our support for the time that they were over there."

Spc. Melodie Ingram, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 197th Inf.— "I think that it would be great, because they risked their lives and should receive something, however small, in return."

M. T. Williams, former Air Force Airman 1st Class — "I'd feel good to have something like that passed. But I hope it's not something that is given and then taken away."

Pfc. Ronald Fenderbruk, Headquarter and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry —"I feel we should get recognized for our efforts. I think that it's fine. It shows the support and that everyone was behind us."

COMMENTARY

Clyde says motorcycles dangerous

By Clyde Snively

Ranger Doug is one of those Copenhagen-chewin', snuff-dippin', hard-core troops who thinks he's invincible.

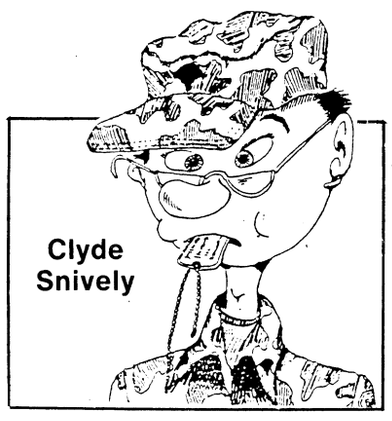
He's one of those macho, "wimmen bore me after two weeks," Yankee red necks.

Up until recently we figured he'd die a slow death, you know, cancer of the tongue from chewin' the weed. But lately he's talking sudden death. He's talking buying a motorcycle.

Not just a Harley Hog where he can strut his stuff in his macho motorcycle boots and leather jacket, or one of those yuppie BMWs or Honda Golden Wings where he can zoom about in a coat and tie letting people know he drives for pleasure, not out of necessity.

No, he wants one of those speedy jobs with plastic fairing that wraps around your body to cut wind resistance but won't protect you from a gnat.

Ranger Doug says he's trading in his Mustang because his auto insurance is too high. Probably the only reason motorcycle insurance is cheaper is the insurance company figures if he gets in a wreck, there ain't gonna be no medical bills. Just funeral expenses.



Now I've known motorcycle riders in the past. Haven't known any of 'em for any length of time though, seems they usually end up in the hospital or worse — although the "or worse" might be a better place to be than in a hospital.

One guy I knew was a stud basketball and football player in high school and had just started college. He figured a motorcycle would be cheap transportation.

He was wrong. That transportation landed him in a hospital room for two years. His mistake was "trusting" the other driver. Only problem was, the other driver was in a semi and when the semi swerved into his path, Mike flew 125 feet in the air, landed on his face, then slid another 100 feet down the California highway.

Besides having his face erased from his skull, Mike broke his neck. But Mike's story had a happy ending. After extensive plastic surgery and hanging in traction from a bolt screwed into his skull, he recovered and returned to college although he never played football or basketball again.

R.J. was another friend who came out of his motorcycle accident OK. He was saved because he was only going 35 mph when the driver in an on-coming car decided he had enough time to make a left turn in front of R.J.

R.J. hit the foot brake, the hand brakes and when both of those failed, jammed his legs into the pavement to keep from flying over the handlebars and into the path of the car.

R.J.'s only problem is he walks like an old man. R.J. is 22.

It took me three minor accidents to convince me a cheap car was better than a fancy motorcycle.

I also quickly learned that while motorcycles are fun to ride on warm spring days, they can be miserable on hot days, miserable on cold days, and unbearable on rainy days. Plus, they are doubly unsafe when the streets are wet.

They're also very inconvenient.

Where do you carry golf clubs or groceries if you drive a motorcycle? If you're carrying stuff around with you, where do you store it when you go in to visit people. If it won't fit in your saddle bags, you have to risk losing it or take it inside with you. I know Doug will have to take the motorcycle safety course. I know Doug will learn about defensive driving, that he'll have to wear a helmet over his hard head and wear reflective clothes when driving on post.

This is all very good for Doug, but he still has to be wary of the other guy and without being a mind reader, that can be a tough.

Motorcycles need to go the way of the Dodo bird. The Dodo bird wasn't smart enough to survive, and is now extinct. How much longer do we have to wait for the bike to be enshrined in the Smithsonian with a suitable inscription noting it has finally passed noisily from the scene.

Army chief of staff congratulates TRADOC

As we look back on the historic triumph of Desert Storm, I want to extend to the soldiers, civilians, family members of the Training and Doctrine Command my appreciation for their invaluable contributions to the Army and to the nation.

As the nation rejoices at the return of its victorious Army from Southwest Asia, we should take note of the years of hard work that went into preparing that Army for combat.

TRADOC was a major force in this effort.

TRADOC deserves recognition for developing the competent, confident leaders that planned and executed Desert Storm with such skill and compassion, as well as the dynamic air-land battle doctrine that guided our victory.

TRADOC was also instrumental in the preparation of our forces with the state-of-art equipment that proved so effective in combat.

In particular, credit must be given to the tough, realistic training that is the hallmark of our Army.

On the battlefields of Iraq and Kuwait, we have seen the payoff of more than a decade of investment in training. It is no exaggeration to say that the fate of the Iraqi army was written long ago in the classrooms of our Army schools and in the manuever areas and after-action reviews of our combat training centers. Every soldier and leader owes an enormous debt of gratitude to all the troops.

I extend to every member of the team at TRADOC, my deep admiration and thanks for a job well done. I also want to remind the magnificent soldiers, cilivians, and families that they, too, own a piece of Desert Storm and share in the respect of the American people.

Vuono, Stone send Volunteer Week message

April 21 through 27 has been designated this year as National Volunteer Week. As the nation continues to celebrate the tremendous victory of our volunteer armed forces during Operation Desert Storm, there could be no better time to honor the unsung heroes on the home front who, in their own way, contributed to the success of our trained and ready Army.

Volunteers have always had an important role in our units, posts, and organizations and have served as an important link with thelocal community as well. Their presence has been felt in community service, youth and family programs, and in our hospitals.

However , Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm demonstrated the critical difference that volunteers make in the active Army, Army Reserve, and Army National Guard. Volunteer efforts were a major force in making family support groups an extra dimension of readiness by offering emotional support, information, and assistance to soldiers and their families.

We fully support programs designed to recognize the numerous and significant contributions of volunteers to improve the quality of life for our soldiers and their families.

On behalf of the total Army, we extend our sincere appreciation to the thousands of soldiers, civilians, and families members who have so freely given of themselves. Thank you, and may you have continued success and fulfillment in your association with the United States Army.

Georgia resolution salutes Desert Storm troops

The Georgia House of Representatives recently passed this resolution:

Expressing support for the men and women of Muscogee County serving in Operation Desert Storm; and for other purposes.

WHEREAS, the swift response of the United States to Iraq's aggression against the sovereign state of Kuwait sent thousands of American men and women in the armed forces to Saudi Arabia in an operation which came to be known as Operation Desert Shield; and

WHEREAS, those first troops stood bravely in harm's way, greatly outnumbered by Iraqi forces massed in Kuwait, and prevented the almost certain invasion of Saudi Arabia; and

WHEREAS, in the months since that initial response, more than four hundred thousand American men and women in all branches of the service have left their families and homes for the hardships and dangers of the Saudi Arabian desert to give credibility to their country's efforts to achieve peace through diplomatic means and, if necessary, to confirm the verity of their leaders' promise, ratified by the United Nations, to use force to liberate the Kuwaiti people if all other means fail; and

WHEREAS, among those responding to their nation's call to arms are numerous citizens of Muscogee County; and

WHEREAS, on January 16, 1991, hostilities began in an operation known as Operation Desert Storm involving American men and women together with the armed forces of several allied nations in the ouster of Iraqi forces from Kuwait and a readjustment of the leadership of Iraq; and

WHEREAS, when Iraqi forces are removed from Kuwait, when Saddam Hussein has been appropriately dealt with, and when peace has been established in the Middle East through whatever measures the future may bring, the world will owe an inestimable debt to the courageous men and women of the armed services of the United States of America.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED BY THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES that the members of this body unanimously express their support for the men and women of Muscogee County involved in Operation Desert Storm and offer our heartfelt prayers for their safe return from the Persian Gulf.

Post celebrates Law Day May 1

Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Law Day has been set aside to reserve a special day of celebration by the American people in appreciation of their liberties under the law and to provide an occasion for rededication to the ideals of equality and justice under law.

Law Day was first established by presidential proclamation in 1958 and was reaffirmed as an annual event by a Joint Resolution of Congress in 1961.

This year's theme is "Freedom Has a Name: The Bill of Rights." The celebration focuses on the individual and collective freedoms guaranteed by the first 10 amendments to the United States Constitution, with an emphasis on their implementation in modern American law.

The emphasis of the Fort Benning celebration is on the protections of the Bill of Rights as they relate to soldiers, family members, and civilians within the Army family.

The celebration is orchestrated by the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate in conjunction with the Columbus Lawyers' Club. Plans for the celebration include contests for students in the post schools during the month of April, a luncheon May 1 at the Officers' Club, a golf tournament May 3, and informational displays in various iocations on the installation throughout the latter part of April.

For more information about the Law Day celebration, contact Capt. Doug Dribben at 545-3285 or 545-1130.

Proclamation

WHEREAS, May 1 is Law Day U.S.A. in the United States of America, and;

WHEREAS, The theme for Law Day 1991 is "Freedom Has a Name: The Bill of Rights," and;

WHEREAS, The United States of America has been the citadel of individual liberty and a beacon of hope and opportunity for more than 200 years to many millions who have sought our shores, and;

WHEREAS, The foundation of individual freedom and liberty is the body of the law that governs us, and;

WHEREAS, The Constitution of the United States of America and the Bill of Rights are the heart of that body of law, which guarantees many freedoms — including freedom of religious belief, freedom to have and hold property inviolate, freedom of assembly, freedom of speech, freedom of press, freedom of petition, and due process of the law, among others, and;

WHEREAS, This year marks the 34th annual nationwide observance of Law Day, and the Congress of the United States and the president by official proclamation have set aside May 1 as a special day for recognition of the place of law in American life;

NOW, THEREFORE, I, as commanding general of Fort Benning, do hereby designate May 1, 1991 as Law Day U.S.A. and call upon all citizens, schools, businesses, clubs, and the news media to commemorate the role of law in our lives.

Girl Scouts thank leaders, volunteers

April 22 marked the beginning of National Volunteer Week and the annual observance of Girl Scout Leader's Day. In observance of this special day and week, area Girl Scouts would like to say "thanks" to Girl Scout leaders for a job well done.

Being a Girl Scout leader is not a "one-shot deal," it is a commitment of an entire year, and in many cases, several years, to girls. It is also more than planning activities. It is investing in a girl's life by building a positive relationship with her. Through the troop leader-Girl Scout relationship, a respect is established and a positive role model is perceived. Girls look up to, believe in and emulate their leaders. We can only commend individuals who are willing to accept so great a resposibility.

Girl Scout leaders come from all walks of life. Many of them manage professional careers, families and community projects, yet still find time and energy to lead a Girl Scout troop. In a society where it is easy to have one's priorities confused, Concharty Council of Girl Scouts is extremely grateful to more than 1,000 area Girl Scout volunteers who still place the girls first. By realizing the tremendous impact our girls can have on our community, Girl Scout leaders assure all of us a brighter tomorrow.

Thank you, Girl Scout leaders and volunteers, not only on this day or week, but throughout the year, for allowing today's girls an opportunity to become tomorrow's leaders.

We salute you.

608th troop speaks about unit's mission

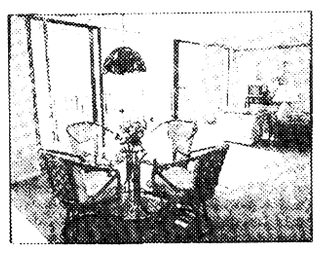
As the sand blows across the vast Arabian Desert and U.S. tanks roll onto the ships that will carry them back home, the 608th Ordnance Company is still doing what they do best, maintaining accountability and control of millions of dollars worth of ammunition at Theater Storage Area One. The war may be over, but the 608th's mission still remains.

It was only three days after the 608th Ord. Co. stepped off the various Air Force transports, that they had ammunition operations underway. As these ordnance soldiers were taking in tons of munitions from the ships and planes that carried it into country, they had to store it, maintain accountability, and then push it forward to the front lines, during which time the unit was shuffled to and from various compounds.

Living areas were not the only things shuffled around on 608th. Since the company has been in Saudia Arabia, they have also changed the unit commander as well as higher headquarters. This was due to the fact that the unit arrived in Saudi Arabia before its headquarters did.

From the 608th's third day in country to the present, they have conducted operations every single day, to include Thanksgiving, Christmas, New Years and Easter. TSA-1 has not been the only operation under the 608th's command. 608th soldiers could be found at the Port of Dammam storing, accounting for, and organizing the munitions coming off the ships. Troops of the 608th could, at various times throughout their stay, be found at two other theater storage areas and two corps storage areas. Operations from all these areas has enabled the 608th to handle more ammunition then any other ordnance unit in country.

Not only was it enough to 608th's soldiers to be operating three different storage areas at one time, but on occasions found themselves strung out having to pull perimeter guard on these vast areas.



The 608th arrived Aug. 26. They were the very first unit from Fort Benning to step foot on the rugged Saudi dessert. Since the third day, the unit's forklifts, cranes, trucks, and various other heavy equipment has maintained around the clock operations sustaining only one minor injury. Safety is very important when working with tons of explosive ammunition and these ordnance soldiers apply safety to every aspect of their job.

Looking around the 608th Ordnance Company you will find many different races, nationalities, religions, and beliefs. You will also find a never-say-die team of professional soldiers who are willing to go above and beyond to carry out their mission. As the 608th was the first Fort Benning unit to arrive in country, due to their mission at hand, these courageous, hard working men and women will probably be the last from Fort Benning to return home to awaiting families and friends.

Hospital unit leaves Benning

By Tom C. Hockaday
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning started bidding farewell to the soldiers of the 1207th U.S. Army Hospital April 19. The 1207th is a reserve unit from Tuskegee, Ala.

The first soldiers in the unit were mobilized in January, and arrived for duty at Martin Army Community Hospital. There are approxamately 230 soldiers in the unit.

Forty-one soldiers were released at the ceremony. There are still 69 essential medical personnel being retained at MACH. They will be released over the next several weeks.

The commander of the 1207th, Col. Stanley B. Kahane, thanked his troops for the sacrifices they made and for a job not only appreciated but also well done. Kahane is deputy commander for Reserve Affairs as well as the chief of Preventive Medicine while in residence at Martin Army Hospital.

In his remarks to the soldiers of the 1207th, the commander of MACH, Col. Vernon C. Spaulding, praised the soldiers for their dedicated and professional service. He wished them well upon their return to Tuskegee.

During the ceremony, numerous awards were presented to many members of the 1207th.

MACH nurse wins Nurse of the Year

Martin Army Community Hospital

Lt. Col. Kathryn B. Scheidt, chief of Nursing Education and Staff Development, Martin Army Community Hospital, has been chosen by the surgeon general as the U.S. Army Nurse of the Year.

The Daughters of the American Revolution presented the Dr. Anita McGee Award to Scheidt at the DAR annual convention in Washington, D.C., April 17.

This award is named for Dr. Anita Newcomb McGee, who was vice president of the National Society of the DAR in 1898. McGee was responsible for selecting graduate nurses for the Army in April of 1898, at the start of the Spanish-American War.

Military nursing had been almost dormant since the Civil War when McGee suggested that the DAR act as application review board for military nursing services. As a result, the DAR Hospital Corps was founded and Dr. McGee was appointed director.

In August 1898, the surgeon general established a Nurse Corps Division in his office, with McGee in charge as acting assistant surgeon. At the surgeon general's request, McGee wrote a bill establishing a Nurse Corps.

Scheidt, a native of Coventry, Conn., is married to Col. Michael J. Scheidt, commander of the Fort Benning Dental Activity. They have two sons, David, 14, and Robert, 12. She worked in civilian hospitals after specialty training under socialized medicine in England. She was recruited by Josephine Goligoski, who was recipient of the Dr. Anita Newcomb McGee Award in 1969, while a captain in the Army Nurse Corps. Scheidt entered the Army in 1970 with a direct commission.

There were more than 200 nominees for this year's award. Scheidt has earned degrees from the University of Connecticut, Frostburg State College in Maryland, and the University of Texas at Austin. Scheidt also earned a certificate in neurological and neurosurgical nursing from the National Hospital for Nervous Diseases in London, England.

She has organized and provided training support to the Fort Benning Combat Lifesaver Training Program. Scheidt was active in evaluating large U.S. Army Reserve and National Guard hospital units and developed a training package for the clinical staff of the 109th Evacuation Hospital before their deployment to Saudi Arabia.

Scheidt is a member of the American Nurses' Association, the Association of the United States Army, National Association of Quality Assurance Professionals, Order of Military Medical Merit, Phi Kappa Phi National Honor Society, Sigma Theta Tau National Nursing Honor Society and the 38th Parallel Nurses' Society.

Not limiting her contributions to professional accomplishments, Scheidt is active in the Fort Benning community as honorary president of the Medical/Dental Activity Auxiliary and chairperson of the Officers' Wives Club Scholarship Selection Committee. She is also secretary for the post Boy Scout Council, Troop 27, and has been recognized by the post commander for her support of the military family. The Scheidt family will be leaving Fort Benning this summer to meet new challenges in Berlin, Germany.

Capt. Joice A. Promisee and Spc. Yvette T. Promisee

Reservists keep it 'all in the family'

By Tom C. Hockaday
USAIC Public Affairs Office

April 19 was a significant day in the lives of Capt. Joice A. Promisee and her daughter Spc. Yvette T. Promisee .

That was the day that both soldiers headed home after serving together with the Tuskegee, Ala.-based 1207th U.S. Army Hospital reserve unit. The unit served at Martin Army Community Hospital during Operation Desert Storm.

Both women live with their family in Tuskegee and both agreed that it was a unique experience and the memory of it will remain with them always.

Capt. Promisee will be returning to her job as head nurse at Tuskegee Veterans Hospital and Spc. Promisee will be returning to Auburn University where she was a full time student before being called up to serve.

While here at Martin Army, Capt. Promisee was a nurse in the Army Nurse Corps and her daughter, Spc. Promisee, worked in finance.

Hero finds rest

Loved ones hold memorial service for retired soldier

By Jon R. Anderson
Bayonet staff writer

As the Saturday morning fog began to lift on the countryside surrounding Lawson Army Airfield, the loved ones of Retired Sgt. 1st Class Howard G. Miller gathered on the tarmac to pay their final respects.

As the memorial service drew to a close, mourners looked on as a helicopter slowly taxied by. Minutes later, the helicopter hovered over a patch of Alabama farmland and, as requested in his will, the retired hero was layed to rest.

Almost 27 years earlier the same patch of land was the crash site of C-119 "Boxcar" on a routine training mission for the Airborne School. After developing engine trouble shortly after take off, the pilot was forced to crash land. As the wreckage blazed, Miller, then an airborne instructor on board the plane, calmly evacuated and pulled free trapped students.

It was Miller's "sound judgement, courageous actions, and professional skills," before, during, and after the crash that Fort Benning officals later credited "to preventing the loss of a great many lives among his fellow soldiers."

The fact that Miller's life was spared that day, and the knowledge that two other soldiers had lost their lives, led Miller to ask that his ashes be spread over the crash site after his own death.

At the request of the family, and with the help of Fort Benning officals, the last request of Miller was honored.

"It gives me a real good feeling to know that the Army still takes care of its own," said Sgt. 1st Class Israel Rodriguez, the survival assistance officer.

Army transition program gears up

By James C. Rupp
Bayonet staff writer

The Army Career and Alumni Program will soon be prepared to go into full swing, according to Barbara Youngs, transition assistance program manager.

In the face of upcoming military cutbacks, voluntary separations and the deactivation of activated Army reserve units, as well as the reduction of militarily employed civilian workers, the Army, in conjuction with the Departments of Labor, Defense and Veterans Affairs has implemented the new ACAP operation, which should be fully operational by June 30.

The program is designed to assist departing personnel with finding employment in the civilian world, according to Youngs. She describes it as a "civilian outplacement program."

"What we are trying to do," Young explains, "is to find outside jobs for people once they leave the Army. Often times the only job some people have had, has been with the Army. Once they leave it, they have no experience with the civilian job market.

"What we will do, is walk the soldier through to help them find employment, and meanwhile take care of their family. The idea is to help them gain experience in the 'real' job market."

Youngs also explained that with the reduction in the military size, many soldiers will be back on the street, some unable to find a job due to the fact some employers see them as inexperienced.

"What we try to make them see," she said "is that soldiers are special people and the world outside must see that. Military people are extremely adaptable and they're used to getting the job done."

Currently, the people who will helm the new program will be training for one week in Washington, D. C. Youngs said of those people, "It was so important to find people who care about others, because they will be working closely with others and doing their best to help them."

Youngs firmly believes that "this is the most fantastic program that the military has ever done."

Another person working closely with the project is Chuck Blankenship, Veteran's Benefits Counselor of the Department of Veteran's Affairs in Atlanta.

Blankenship arrived in Fort Benning in the latter part of March to aid soldiers whose enlistment is expiring when his department saw the need for direct assistance on this post. His duty is to provide direct services and answer questions about veteran benefits for the departing soldiers.

"This program is just such an improvement from ten years ago. Back then, they basically showed you the gate. Now, soldiers have the opportunity to see what is out there and get some help with it all," he said.

"The transition from the military to the civilian world can be traumatic, and we are here to ease that change. There are so many homeless veterans out there, and I hope that this program will reduce this problem.

"We're here to help. Just call us."

Youngs and Blankenship are available at 545-4887 or 545-7642.

Benning soldiers visit Capitol Hill for salute

By Jon R. Anderson
Bayonet staff writer

Soldiers representing various units of Fort Benning attended a special congressional salute dinner in Washington, D.C. April 16.

The dinner was congress' way of showing appreciation for all the troops involved in Operation Desert Storm, said Pfc. Sean Tonner, a representative of 197th Infantry Brigade.

In an address to the more than 500 soldiers, airmen, seamen, Marines and Coast Guardsmen, Secretary of the Army Dick Cheney praised the important role the 24th Infantry Division played in the offensive ground operations during Operation Desert Storm.

Later, Army Chief of Staff Gen. Colin Powell outlined points contributing to the success of the American forces in the Persian Gulf, emphasizing the importance of modern weapon systems, quality soldiers, and family support.

Several celebrities were on hand, as well, to show their appreciation and perform readings of letters written by service members while stationed in the Mideast.

"I felt very proud that the celebrities and congressmen would come to honor us like that," said Tonner.

Army rifle team feels thrill of victory

By Charlene L. LaDay-Hill
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

The U.S. Army Running Target Team knew the thrill of victory, while the other services felt the agony of defeat during the 1991 Interservice Running Target Championships held April 1 through April 4 at Hibbs Range.

Eighteen shooters competed in the championship. The U.S. Army Reserves, National Guards, and Air Force services were represented for this event. Still, two out of the three individual events were won by a U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit shooter. Also, all team events were won by the U.S. Army.

Spc. Martin D. Edmondson won the 10-meter (30 + 30) with a final aggregate of 1,302; the 50-meter (mixed) with a 768 aggregate. He placed second in the 50-meter (30 + 30) event finishing with a 1,163.

"I was pleased with my performance. I had been shooting well all year," said Edmondson, who set a new national record in the 10-meter back in February. He was also a member of all three winning teams.

Placing second in the 10-meter (30 + 30) and the 50-meter (mixed) was Sgt. Troy Lawton with respective aggregates of 1,296 and 767. He also trailed behind Edmondson for third in the 50-meter (30 + 30) shooting a 1,157.

"The championship went very well, not just for me individually, but for my team as well," said Lawton, who was a member of all three winning teams. "We all knew that we were going to do as well as we did, because we trained hard for this moment.

"Since Running Target isn't a big sport, we basically compete against the same shooters every year," added Edmondson. "I consider sergeant Lawton to be my toughest competitor. To me he's one of the best Running Target shooters around. Even when I beat him in a match, he's still there pushing me to do better."

Other Running Target shooters that did well individually were Spc. Colin D. Windows, Spc. Bruce A. Bright, and Sgt. 1st Class Michael W. Delk.

Windows placed fifth in the 10 meter (30 + 30) with a 1,227; sixth in the 50-meter (mixed) with a 731; and ninth in the 50 meter (30 + 30), scoring 1,101. He was also a member of the U.S. Army 50-meter (mixed) team with Edmondson and Lawton.

Bright started off the 10-meter (30 + 30) with a 996 aggregate for 12th place. But, in the 50-meters (mixed) and (30 + 30) events he placed in the top 10. He shot a 727 for ninth place in the 50 meter (mixed). In the 50-meter (30 + 30) event he shot a total aggregate of 1,101 for 10th place. (Windows hit more Xs on the target which knocked Bright down to 10th place.)

Delk placed sixth in the 50-meter (30 + 30) with a 1,132 aggregate; seventh in 50-meter (mixed) with a 730; and eighth in the 10 meter (30 + 30) with a 1,125. Delk was also a member of the U.S. Army 50-meter event teams.

In the team events, Edmondson, Lawton, and Delk scored a total of 1,131 to win the 50-meter (mixed) event. They won the 50-meter (30 + 30) with 1,725 combined points.

The 10-meter (30 + 30) event was won by Edmondson, Lawton, and Windows with a total aggregate of 1,629.

As the team continues to compete all over the world, they all strive to reach one common goal — to win a gold medal in the 1992 Olympics.

Spc. Martin Edmondson waits for his target.

Post Civil Air Patrol wins Squadron of the Year

Civil Air Patrol

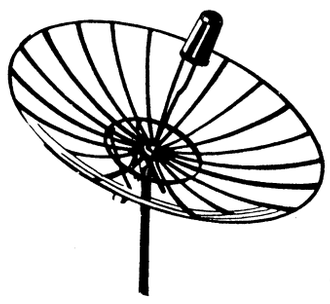
The 09098 Squadron, Civil Air Patrol from Fort Benning, one of 35 squadrons within Georgia, was selected as Georgia Wing, Civil Air Patrol Squadron of the Year for 1990.

This major recognition was announced at the recent Georgia Wing Conference held at Robins Air Force Base.

The selection is based on evaluation of the squadron's performance against the Wing Commanders' Special Emphasis Items in the various mission and mission support areas and the Civil Air Patrol — Management Analysis Program. Primary selection is based on the squadron's final annual standing in CAP-MAP.

Georgia Wing uses 21 Commanders' Special Emphasis Items to evaluate the capability, performance and unit readiness to effectively perform all of a squadron's missions, as established by law.

Georgia Wing CSEI's include an analysis and evaluation of the squadrons membership growth, encampment attendance, cadet awards, cadet orientation flights, senior training, communications (radio), ground and flight safety, aerospace education, activities and the chaplain's program.



For 1990, the Fort Benning Squadron scored 2359.14 points of a total possible 2645.0 or 89.19 percent achievement of Wing goals for the year.

Civil Air Patrol, an auxiliary of the Air Force, is a large organization with major missions of aerospace education, emergency services and the cadet program. Each of these missions consists of several component programs conducted by the squadron volunteers, on a state and national scale and under diverse demographic, social and economic conditions. The CAP management analysis program helps gain both statistical and functional unit progress to goals set within the priorities established by CAP governing bodies. Recognition of achievement such as the Squadron of the Year is a prime factor in assuring program effectiveness.

The results in the CAP-MAP program achieved by the Fort Benning squadron was also the major factor in Wing Group V, the squadron's higher headquarters being selected group of the year for 1990.

The Fort Benning squadron located at Lawson Army Air Field has 22 senior members and 45 cadet members. The squadron is commanded by 1st Lt. Thomas Casciaro of Columbus. The cadet program commander is 1st Lt. Michael J. Karabasz. Twenty-seven of the cadets are family members of soldiers and live on Fort Benning. The squadron meets each Thursday from 7 to 9 p.m. at Building 2403, LAAF.

Patch School puts on patriotic parade

Fort Benning Schools

Patch Elementary School celebrated the month of the military child with an olympic-style parade at Doughboy Stadium. One hundred and forty kindergarten and first-grade students, their parents, and their teachers lined up behind flags and banners representing their birthplaces. The students represented six countries and 35 states. Following the parade, the Patch students sang three patriotic songs for the audience in the stadium.

A plaque was presented by Ken Stettes, principal of Patch School, to Staff Sgt. Larry Beverly who represented Troop D, 4th Armored Cav. Sqdrn. of the 197th Infantry Brigade. Troop D, 4th Cav. was the Fort Benning unit that Patch School adopted while the unit was in Saudi Arabia.

The program ended as three members of Fort Benning's Silver Wings team landed in front of the students on the field in Doughboy Stadium.

Students, parents and teachers had a picnic on the lawn at Doughboy Stadium before returning to their studies at Patch School.

School 'rallies' around post military child month

Fort Benning Schools

April is the month of the military child, and Edward A. White School celebrated it with a school support rally April 18. The rally was a celebration of the children and their contributions to their families and their school.

Maj. Gen. Carmen Cavezza, post commander, was the featured speaker. He focused on the task that had been accomplished by the troops during this school year and the wonderful support that the students at White School had provided not only to family members but also to the 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment of the 197th Infantry Brigade, the Fort Benning unit that White School had adopted.

Lt. Col. Richard Sanchez, battalion commander of the 2nd Bn., 69th Armored Regt., told students how much their support had meant to the troops while they were in Saudi Arabia. He mentioned several things that the students had sent but said that the audio tape with student messages had been very special.

He told the students how much their individual spoken message on the tape had meant to the troops.

Sanchez accepted a scrapbook from White School on behalf of his battalion. The scrapbook commemorated the battalion's time in Saudi Arabia and the activities that had taken place at White School as part of its adoption of the battalion.

Eileen Reid, 197th Family Support Group leader, discussed ways in which military children are unique. She spoke of the hardships that children overcome as well as of the opportunities that come their way because they are military children.

Cristina Pulignani, White School Parent-Teacher Organization president, spoke with the students and expressed her pride in their accomplishments this year.

Winners of White School's essay contest read their poems and essays about being military children. The speakers were:

Second Grade — Shirley Hackney

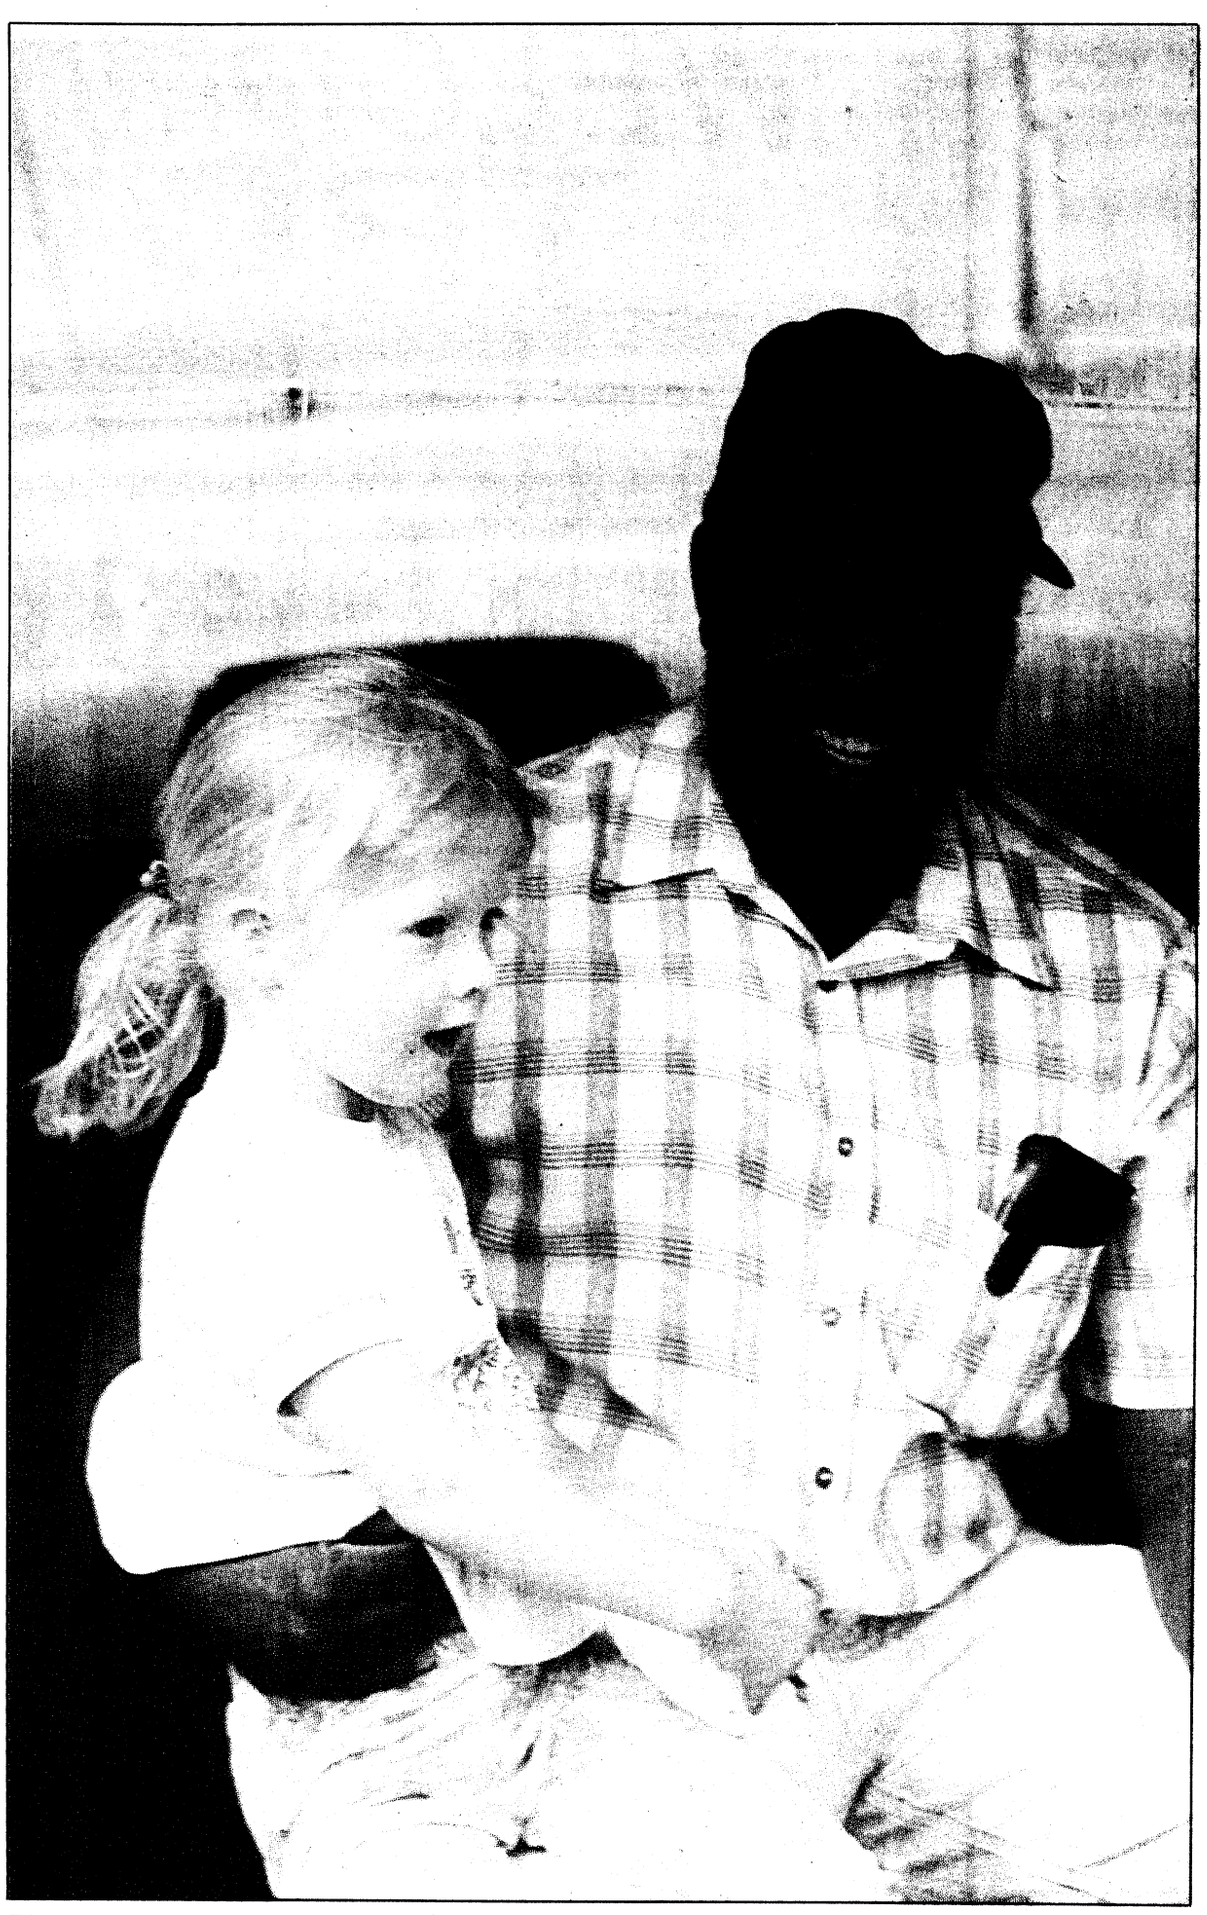
Third Grade — Frank Walsh

Fourth Grade — Brendaliz Guiterrez, Matthew Upperman

Fifth Grade — Akia Wilson, Scott Deloera

Music for the rally was provided by the 283rd Army Band and by classes of White School second graders. The Army Band played a medley of patriotic songs. The second graders performed two songs with original lyrics written by their teacher, Dawn Sweder. The songs were "Yankee Doodle Children" and "Fort Benning Kids."

The lyrics of "Fort Benning Kids" reflected the sentiment and the purpose of the celebration



"We're a grand group of kids.
We are Fort Benning kids.
We're unique in our own special way.
We're the image of The parents we love
who fight for our freedom each day.
Let me say my friend
Again and again
We greet life with a great big smile.
Should old acquaintance be forgot,
Keep your eye on that military child!"

Following the rally, students, teachers, and parents continued the celebration with a picnic lunch on the lawn at French Field.

"It was a day that we'll all remember," said Janet Wynn, White School principal. "Our students work hard all year long. They learn about the people in the community, in the nation, and in the world. This year has been a special year in which they also focused their energies on supporting the troops in Saudi Arabia," said Wynn. "Today, during the month of the military child, it was a day to honor the children for their many fine qualities and for their many acts of support and caring for others."

COMMUNITY

Benning salutes, honors volunteers at ceremony

By Wanda Campbell
Bayonet community writer

In honor of National Volunteer Week, a ceremony was held to recognize the contributions that are made by volunteers in the community.

At the Officer's Club Supper Club Thursday, several of Fort Benning's special volunteers were acknowledged for their part in over 300,000 hours of service given to our community. These few are representative of the nearly 2,000 volunteers who help staff more than 20 volunteer agencies on post. Their efforts have resulted in a savings to Fort Benning of more than $3.5 million.

Volunteer of the Quarter

Denise Mercado received the Volunteer of the Quarter Award for her work with Girl Scouts for the past two years. She has serviced that organization as secretary and coordinator of the Main Post Girl Scout troops. She is also involved with Red Cross and the Parent Teachers Organization at Dexter.

"Her 'what do you want me to do' attitude and enthusiasm show that she is a person who can be counted on," said Alicia Hyk in her nomination statement.

There were 27 volunteers who were selected for Certificate of Achievement signed by the Post Commander Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza. They were Jean Campbell, Donna Wilson and Terry Walls from the American Red Cross; Janel Nash, Capt. Barry Nash and Mary Wilburn from Religious Education Center; Linda Childress from the Enlisted Wives Club; Summer Harms from the First Steps Program; Anne Price, Rosa Rosario and Karen Yepez from the Fort Benning Schools; Patricia Corning from Fort Benning Girl Scouts; Cristel Graham from International Wives Club; Patsy Chilcote from Leadership Seminars; Sally Dover from the Community Life Mayors' Council; retired Lt. Col. Lee Jones from the National Infantry Museum; Hanne Collyer from the Officers' Wives Club Thrift Shop; Kathleen Meade and Christine Turner from the Officers' Wives Club; Beth Pidgeon from Patch Preschool; Susan Eckhart and Cathy Blackwell from Santa's Castle; Nina Garcia from the School of the Americas; Shari Harniss and Pvt. Theodore A. McConnell from the Volunteer Resource Center; and Becky Burns and Karen Goff from the Youth Services.

The efforts of the Family Support Groups were also recognized as certificates were given to Sherri Bunyea from 197th Infantry Brigade, Mary Miller from 36th Engineers Group, Sylvia Novier of the 34th Medical Group, Joan Cramer from 75th Ranger Regiment, Aretha Van Horn of U.S. Army Infantry Training Center, and Mary Renteria from the International Student Training.

The Certificate of Appreciation for Patriotic Civilian Service Award was given to Sandra Sykes of the 36th Engineer Group Family Support Group.

OWC enjoys 'milling around'

By Tom C. Hockaday
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Fort Benning Officers' Wives Club held its monthly meeting Wednesday at the post Officers' Club. The menu consisted of chef's salad, good conversation and a special presentation by two of the club's members.

This month's theme was "Milling Around."

It was explained by the two guest speakers, Eileen Reid and Patsy Chilcote, that the term, milling around, was simply in reference to different places one can go to find old or unusual artifacts, or as they said, "some really neat stuff."

Reid and Chilcote have co-authored a book called "Milling Around.' In it are all sorts of different places where interesting things can be found. Some of those places are antique shops, specialty shops, craft shows, and special points of interest.

The authors shared their "finds" and gave a few helpful hints on how to authenticate objects for purchase. "The book identifies different places to shop for old, handmade, or unusual artifacts or places to visit within a 75-mile radius of Columbus," said Reid.

Reid and Chilcote have been working together since 1988, and wrote their book in August 1989. The two announced at the end of their presentation that upon their departure from Fort Benning, the book will be donated to leadership seminars, a volunteer association here on Fort Benning. The book will be updated periodically.

Other business that was conducted during the luncheon consisted of a drawing for door prizes, and the election of new officers. The club president, Kathleen Meade, gave a presentation on the Month of the Military Child.

New officers that were elected were as follows:

President: Kathy Henderson

First Vice President: Jean Phillips

Second Vice Presidents: Jo-Anne Ferraro

Valerie Westworth

Recording Secretary: Brenda Morris

Corresponding Secretary: Pat Wilkerson

Treasurer: Carmela Trez

Assistant Treasurer: Jeanne Brown

Parliamentarian: Mary Hunter

Hospitality: Jody Davidson

Publicity: Margie Adams

The next club function will be May 15 at 7 p.m. at the Fort Benning Officers' Club. Newly-elected officers will be inducted and scholarships will be awarded.

To make reservations, call Betty Sue Kearney, 659-7048.

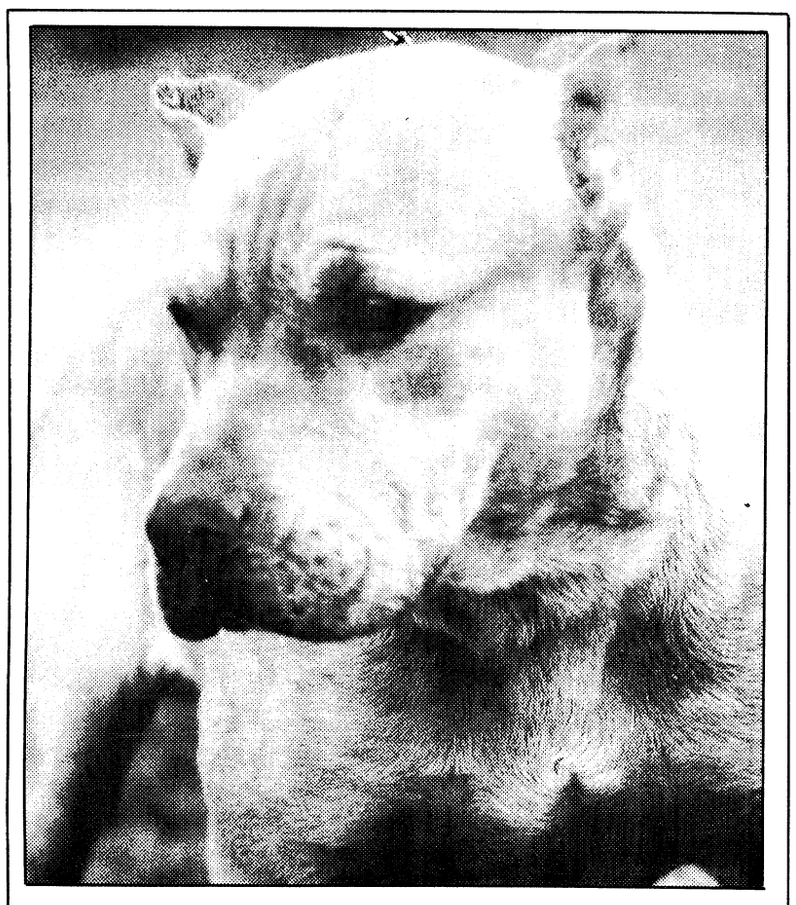
Caregivers receive national credentials

By Carrol Weldy
Fort Benning Child Development Services

Congratulations to Cathy Stokes, Jeanette Cooper and Carolyn Harris, three caregivers at the Custer Terrace Child Development Center, who have earned their Child Development Associate credentials.

The CDA National Credentialing Program is a major national effort to improve and evaluate the skills of caregivers in center-based programs.



The CDA is a national assessment that also insures quality child care.

In order to attain CDA credentials, a person must demonstrate competency in caring for young children during an evaluation by the CDA National Credentialing Program. This evaluation was conducted by a national representative from Atlanta.

These caregivers are the first to receive the CDA credentials at Fort Benning. They have spent the last year preparing resource portfolios that involve the children that are in their care.

They have attended various workshops and training to improve their skills.

Cooper received her credentials in infant-toddler care, while Harris and Stokes received their credentials in preschool-age child care.

SPIRITUAL

Help available for families in aftermath of Desert Storm

By Debra Galle
USAIC Chaplain's Office

"Hello, again!" — A tempting motto for military families.

This greeting may express more than any photograph.

If you use this phrase, it means you must have said "goodbye" at least once before. Military families know about separation, and members could colorfully elaborate on these experiences.

Another word, "reunion," is experiencing a wide range of use and flexibility these days. Now that the troops are coming home, this word may mean anything from joy to anguish.

Consequently, many Desert Storm families are seeking counseling, presenting problems range from financial mishaps to infidelity.

To assist those seeking help, the chaplains of Fort Benning are pro-active. Specialized training for the counselors themselves is part of a major effort.

The Unit Ministry Team (chaplains and chaplains assistants), meet monthly for a prayer breakfast and training conference. Topics for training include all aspects of ministry.

Recently, Lt. Col. Harry Bucnel of Social Work Services, arranged a seminar on debriefing soldiers from war, as well as helping families with readjustment. Bucnel is an Army Reserve officer who was brought on active duty to design and implement a reunification program for Fort Benning.

Soon after their return from the desert, chaplains receive additional training to prepare for reunion classes for families in the 197th Infantry Brigade. Each unit chaplain will provide sessions in the coming months.

In addition to formalized training, UMT members who were deployed to Saudi Arabia will attend a special seminars designed for couples at the Blessed Trinity Retreat Center in Alabama.

The seminar, called "Beyond the Desert Storm," will focus on ways healthy families adjust to reunions, both functionally and spiritually.

These lectures, discussion, and sessions are geared toward helping army families before difficulties explode into intolerable proportions. Chaplains hope that families learn to function in a happy, healthy manner.

When soldiers realize the importance of healthy families, problems such as these will lessen. Knowledge and practice of communication and mutual respect can help families during future deployments — when it comes time to say, "Hello, again."

For more information on reunion seminars, contact your unit chaplain or the USAIC Chaplains office, 545-2288.

Golden Isles

Beaches, golf, tennis, resorts and much more

This lighthouse on St. Simons Island welcomes visitors to the Georgia coast.

From Staff Reports

The Indians called it Guale, this place where the sun casts a golden glow over land and sea.

It is said that when the poet Sidney Lanier sat under an oak tree composing his famous "Marshes of the Glynn," he looked to the Golden Isles and was inspired by the beauty and richness that first brought Europeans to its shores.

The Golden Isles offer golf, the beaches, tennis and luxury resorts. But here are some other coastal activities that might prove interesting.

For more information call a local travel agent or the numbers listed.

Cajun-style crawfish, a low country boil and red beans and rice are culinary delights at the April 27 Crawfish Festival in Woodbine, at scenic Satilla Waterfront Park. Arts and crafts, live bands and runs are part of the fun. (912) 576-3211.

Also on April 27 is the Effingham Expo in Springfield, Ga. Over 70 business and civic exhibits gather under one roof, with a variety of foods, music and entertainment, including clogging and karate demonstrations. (912) 754-3301.

Kicking off the merry month of May in coastal Georgia is the Golden Isles Chamber Music Festival. Lasting May 2-12, numerous events are held in varied "exotic" settings on three islands. Internationally acclaimed performers featured are based in New York City. (912) 638-4818.

A riverfront pageant, the Blessing of the Fleet in Darien, May 3-5, is the oldest and largest of its type on the Georgia coast. Beautifully decorated shrimp boats "bow" at the bridge and receive a blessing for the coming season. (912) 437-4192.

Storytelling of all types by professional tale-spinners from across the Southeast is featured at the Okefenokee Story Telling Festival May 4 at Okefenokee Swamp park near Camden County. An evening session weaves ghost yarns. (912) 283-3742.

Sporting 13 clay courts receiving national awards, the acclaimed Jekyll Island Tennis Center is host to the Jekyll Island Adult Open Tennis Tournament May 4-6. Among whispering pines and a short jaunt from the Atlantic Ocean. (912) 635-3154.

Jazz, gospel, orchestral, band and chamber music, drawings, sculpture, paintings, literary readings and theater make the Tillandsia Festival May 10-19 an art lover's delight. Held on St. Simons and Jekyll islands and in Brunswick. (912) 638-9700.

"Indigo: A Colonial Export" presented May 11 by Sunbury State Historic Site near Midway includes demonstrations of skills used in the colonial period, especially the dying procedure using indigo, a major export during the period. (912) 884-5999.

May 12-18, Brunswick hosts its Harborfest and Blessing of the Fleet. Musical groups from symphonic to popular, train rides, pleasure craft rides and a variety of fresh, delicious seafood make this a popular event. (912) 267-5600.

Costumed soldiers and civilians will be on hand to demonstrate musket-firing and an interpretation of camp life at the Memorial Day Revolutionary War Military Encampment May 25-27 at Sunbury State Historic Site near Midway. (912) 884-5999.

June jumps off with two exciting events in coastal Georgia. On Jekyll Island, the Country By the Sea Music Festival June 1 features the headline performers Ronnie Milsap, and "Pirates of the Mississippi," as well as "TimePiece" and "Z-Band." An entertaining open-air concert at the oceanside beach deck! (912) 635-3636.

Another popular event June 1 is the Mid Coastal Area Silent Witness Program Family Fish Festival and Tournament, held at the Fort McAllister Marina. Fishing, fun and family togetherness make this a summer not-to-miss! (912) 368-4445.

"Drug Awareness for Georgians" is the topic of a lecture by a former Federal investigator on June 8. The event is scheduled at Sunbury State Historic Site and allows participants to learn to recognize drug abuse symptoms and drug types. (912) 884-5999.

Sporting 13 clay courts receiving national awards, the acclaimed Jekyll Island Tennis Center is host to the Tournament Tough Junior Tennis Camp I June 17-21, and the Junior Clay Court Tennis Tournament June 22-24. (912) 635-3154.

Visitors to Sunbury State Historic Site on June 22 can hear how to recognize some of the deadliest plants known and get to see some of these plants firsthand. An especially important lecture for families with small children. (912) 884-5999.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Jane M. Winand
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q. I just got back from Saudi Arabia. While I was there, I had a chance to think a lot about my personal affairs. I am worried that my spouse may spend all of the $50,000 of the Servicemen's Group Life Insurance and not provide for our 6-year-old son. Therefore, I am considering naming my spouse and my son as beneficiaries of the policy to each receive one-half. Is this a good idea?

A. Naming your son as the beneficiary will ensure that he is the legal owner of that portion of the policy proceeds. However, naming a minor child as a beneficiary of SGLI proceeds can cause problems too.

A minor child is usually a child under the age of 18, although the age will vary depending on state law. SGLI proceeds will not be paid automatically to a minor child.

Before they will release the proceeds, the Office of Servicemen's Group Life Insurance must receive a certified copy of the court order appointing a guardian or conservator of the minor's property.

Upon your death, your wife, the child's mother, will service as the child's unofficial guardian unless she declines or is determined to be unfit to serve as the guardian. If the minor child has not inherited any property of any real value, there is no need to have the court appoint the surviving parent as the guardian.

However, a court-appointed guardian is necessary for the release of SGLI funds. Thus, court costs and attorney's fees must be paid to have the Probate Court appoint a guardian.

In addition, the court requires the guardian to post a bond to ensure that he or she will not steal or improperly use the minor's property while the child is still a minor. If the property is stolen or lost by the guardian, the bonding company will reimburse the minor child.

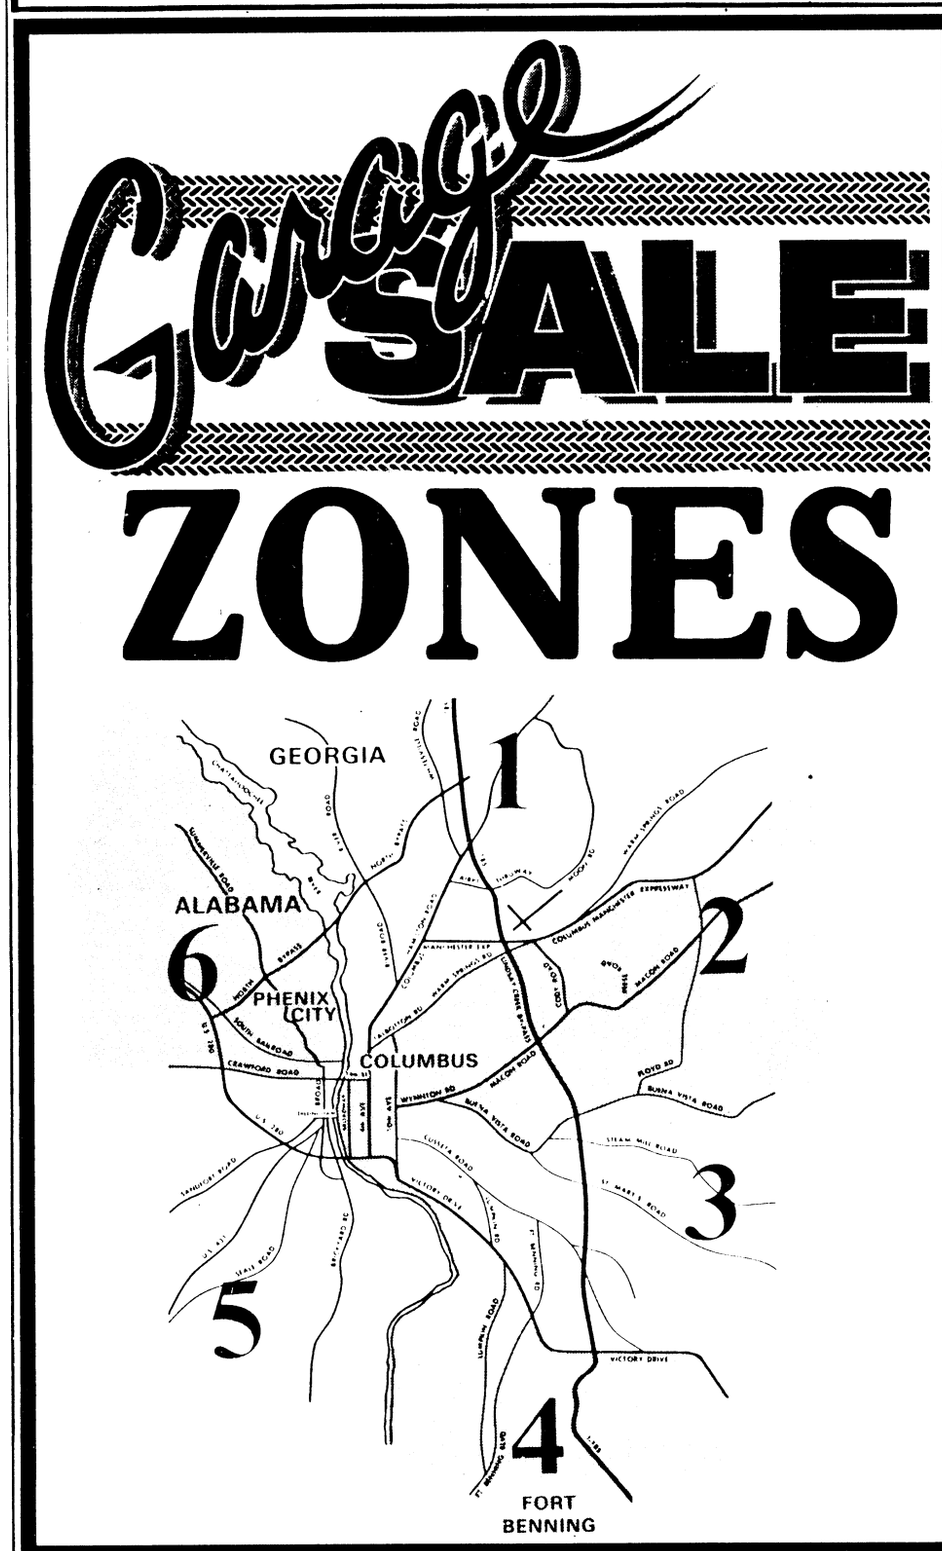
The bonding company then goes after the guardian for reimbursement. The cost of the bond varies depending on the value of the property and the age of the child. If the property is fairly valuable, the bond will be expensive.

If the child is very young, the bond will have to be in place for many years, which will also increase the cost. As an example, the current cost of a bond for $25,000 of insurance proceeds given to a four-year-old child is approximately $1,350. The cost of the bond is not refundable.

If the cost of the guardianship proceeding and the bond have not already convinced you that you may want to consider leaving the proceeds to someone other than your minor son, you may want to consider the limitations placed on the use of the property given to your son.

The state of Georgia does not permit the guardian to use any portion of the original inherited property unless the guardian first petitions the court for authorization to use the property for a specified purpose and the court authorizes such a use.

Without such authorization, the guardian may use only the interest generated by the original principal inheritance. The Georgia law also requires the guardian to file an accounting with the probate court every year, until the child reaches the age of majority. This yearly accounting shows the principal inheritance amount, the interest generated for the year, and the expenditures of the interest for the year.



The accounting will also show expenditures of principal if such expenditures were court-authorized.

Each court proceeding and the preparation and filing of documents will result in fees paid to the court or an attorney, or both. In some limited cases, the Fort Benning Legal Assistance Office may be able to assist in the handling of the estates of minors living in the Georgia counties close to Fort Benning.

Call the Legal Assistance Office at 545-3281 to make an appointment to discuss your estate plans.

HONEST. MORE FOLKS FEEL THAT NEWSPAPER MOST BELIEVABLE MEDIUM.

We can't lie.
A recent study showed that more people feel newspaper is the most believable medium.
Not television.
Not radio.
Not magazines.

But why?

It's probably because we know that a newspaper lays it all out in black & white.
Right in front of you.
The places, the people, and the prices.
The offers, the promises and the claims.
It's all there to read, think about, and keep. And that goes for the advertisements, too.

When people turn to their Columbus Ledger-Enquirer they turn here with interest. Which means this is where your advertising message needs to be.
With all the choices available, it's difficult deciding how best to advertise your business.

Annual Percentage Rate financing on Saab 900*

GET A CAR THAT'S WELL ABOVE PRIME AT RATES THAT ARE WELL BELOW.

Now you can buy a Saab without giving a free ride to a bank. Thanks to special factory incentives, Saab is offering some of the lowest Annual Percentage Rate financing in its history. And what makes these rates even more atrractive are the cars they come with. Like their pricier competitors, all Saabs feature anti-lock braking systems, driver's side air bags and stirring performance. Unlike them, Saabs also offer plush interiors that double as roomy cargo carriers, our 6-year/ 80,000-mile limited warranty, and some of the best safety records in their class. So instead of settling for a lessler car, consider a lesser loan. For complete details and an exhiliarating test drive, see us by April 30.

*2.15% Annual Percentage Rate available on Saab 900 models only. Financing to qualified and approved retail buyers through April 30, 1991, through Saab-Scania Financial Services Corp. Subject to availability. Available on 48-month contracts. Down payment required. For example: Payment for a Saab 900, 3-door, 5-speed would be $299.00 per month for 48 months totaling $14,352.00, plus 20% down payment. Manufacturers Suggested Retail Price $18,712.00 (including destination charge), excluding taxes, license, registration and other dealer charges. See your participating Saab dealer for complete details. Limited warranty covers major components of engines, transmissions and other systems. See your Saab dealer for complete details. 153rd Fla. Guard unit leaves

By James C. Rupp
Bayonet staff writer

The 153rd Florida Army National Guard has left Fort Benning to continue its mission in the forces breakdown from Operation Desert Storm.

The unit, composed of five officers and 38 enlisted personnel and headquartered out of St. Augustine, arrived at Fort Benning Jan. 25 and began its mission Jan. 28. Its mission was to "provide base operational support to the Finance and Accounting Office," according to Lt. Col. Jim F. Melton, commander of the 153rd.

While here, the guardsman performed four major duties in support of the Gulf War, Melton said. The unit performed document control activities, inputted data on processing personnel, processed travel vouchers and in- and outprocessed Desert Storm personnel.

Melton also had a special reason to be proud of his unit during its stay in Georgia. He was recently informed that the 153rd has been chosen to receive three awards for its performance. Two are state level and the third has been given to it on a national scale.

One award is the Superior Unit Award for the state of Florida, granted to the unit for its outstanding training performance for 1990 and the other state award was the Governor's Trophy for the most outstanding performance in a National Guard unit. The national award was the Eisenhower Trophy granted to the 153rd from the National Guard Bureau.

Master Sgt. Douglas Meeks commented that "it has been such a great privilege to be part of the total Army during this time. The people of Fort Benning have been great...they welcomed us with open arms and made it easier for all of us to be so far away from home."

According to Meeks, the 153rd has made 120,000 data transactions since its arrival in addition to having dispensed $3.5 million to deployed personnel through its cashiers.

The 153rd is now headed to Fort McCoy, Wis. to continue its mission, possibly until late August.

Benning celebrates Airborne Awards

By Jon R. Anderson
Bayonet staff writer

More than 500 former paratroopers, including 11 from the original test platoon, gathered for the 14th annual Airborne Awards, held in Atlanta and Fort Benning from April 25 to Saturday.

According to Don Lassen, one of the persons responsible for coordinating the annual gathering, the awards ceremony is designed to give recognition and honor to the members of various airborne associations "who have gone out of their way to promote and serve the airborne community."

Events held at Fort Benning, all on April 25, included presentations at Fryar Field where attendees observed final qualifying jumps of Basic Airborne Course class 23-91 and assisted in graduation ceremonies.

Later that afternoon, memorial services were held at the Airborne Walk on Main Post for fallen paratroopers. Post Commander Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza assured attendees that despite cutbacks and force reductions, "there will always be a need for the airborne."

A contingent from the French Association of Paratroopers was also on hand to render honors.

The Airborne Awards is sponsered each year by the Static Line, a monthly newspaper that covers issues of concern to the airborne community.

DENTAC to cut services

Fort Benning Dental Activity

Health Services Command and Fort Benning Dental Activity will be facing many budget cuts during the next fiscal year, according to officials at DENTAC.

Because of a decrease in staff, there will be a curtailment in specialty services offered to eligible personnel. Specific services and patient population affected have not been fully determined, however due to impending financial constraints at the Department of Defense level, dependent care may become severely limited.

These curtailments are expected to begin in 1992. DENTAC will provide more information as further directives become available.

Meanwhile, it is suggested that service members look toward the Delta Dental Plan for their family members' care. For more information on the dental plan, call 544-3955.

Diver MOS now open to women

All diving teams are echelons above corps units and the combat-risk probability does not warrant continued closure, said officials.

Savings bond drive begins

By James C. Rupp
Bayonet staff writer

The 1991 U.S. Savings Bond Campaign has officially kicked off. As of May 1, all Army personnel are encouraged to look into the benefits of purchasing a U. S. savings bond. The campaign will last until the end of May, but bonds are available at all times.

At a kick-off luncheon April 26, Post Commander Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza joked that he owes his rank to savings bonds.

"When I was a second lieutenant, my first sergeant said to me 'Sir, let me tell you how to make general. Join AUSA, the officer's club, and buy savings bonds.' And I did, and now I'm a general."

On a more serious note, Cavezza said "I don't want to give anybody a day off for buying savings bonds, or go the extra mile if they don't buy savings bonds... because I think that they will sell themselves."

Across the nation, approximately 55 million Americans have purchased savings bonds, adding up to a total of more than $125 billion.

Also, there are savings bonds available that, when held five years or longer, earn interest or guaranteed rates, depending on which is higher. This ensures an exemption from state and local taxes, which can significantly reduce the price of higher education.

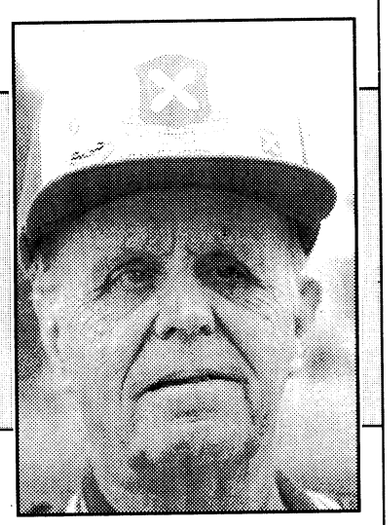
For more information on the benefits of savings bonds or if you wish to purchase them, contact your appointed canvasser at your workplace.

Purchasing a savings bond is a relatively easy way to ensure financial security and support the nation's economy, according to officials.

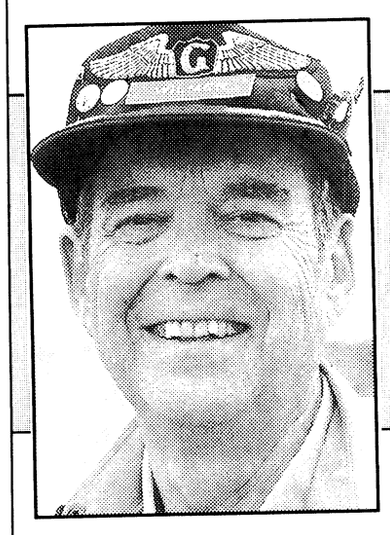
Savings bonds are available to Fort Benning personnel through appointed canvassers at each level.

OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES:



"What similarities do you see in the paratroopers of yesteryear compared to the airborne of today?



Henley P. Woods, former airborne soldier — "Today's paratroopers have the same intestinal fortitude. They have that little something extra that makes them the cream of the crop."

The Rev. George B. Wood, former airborne soldier —"The airborne of today have an extremely high spirit of comraderie and sense of courage to do what it takes. These have always been characteristic of the airborne trooper and this still carries on."

Harold Beinhauer, former airborne soldier — "These days they seem to have a lot more discipline. In my day the Army was glad to have anyone they could get."

Doug Wilmer, former airborne soldier — "I think the airborne of today is every bit as good as the airborne of my day. We were kind of pioneers and I'm not sure we knew exactly what we were doing all of the time. Today, they really have the training and technique down to a science."

Pvt. 2 Lisa Evans, Company A, 1st Battalion, 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment — "From being here today, I see a lot of dedication to being airborne. They (attendees) seem less like a bunch of people with something in common and more like a great big family. It makes me want to be part of it."

Education, proms can be costly

By Clyde Snively

The office savings bond rep and I had an interesting chat the other day.

Actually, it was a distressing session because in an effort to get me to sign up to have another bond taken out of my monthly pay check, she came up with some facts that made me want to put my kids, Bubba and Clydette, up for adoption and have no more.

For instance, 18 years from now, college costs could be as much as $35,000 a year!

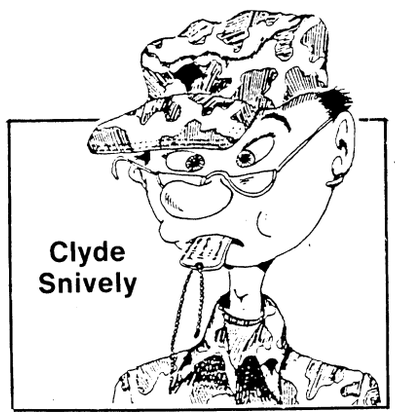
So if I start buying one, $100 bond a month, right now, by the time 2006 gets here, I could have enough saved to pay for one year of college, assuming I don't cash the bonds in and keep buying them for the next 18 years.

I was pondering all that information, moaning about the high cost of education when some of the really old folks in the office told me to stop my whining, that education is already expensive.

I didn't want to hear it from them since I knew that as high ranking officers and civilian employees, they'd be rolling in the dough.

But I heard it anyway.

What brought all this on, was the fact that Monday was the first day back to work after the prom. This meant they had to sit around and compare notes on what it cost to send their kid (one had a girl, the other a boy) to the prom.



They told stories of $300 dresses, and $100 for shoes for the girls. For the boys, there were the $100 tux rentals plus the cost of the limo (yeah some actually rented limousines for the prom), the meal, entertainment after the prom, pictures and, get this, prom T-shirts!

I remember shelling out a few bucks when I went to the prom not all that long ago, but not in an amount to match the national debt. Sure, we guys rented tuxes, bought a corsage, but forget pictures. If you want a picture, get your parents to take it. Limo? Ha, wash and wax the family Bel-Air.

T-shirt? You want a T-shirt babe, be prepared to wear it, instead of a prom dress and I'll split the savings with your parents.

We may not have gone to McDonalds for supper, but the meal sure didn't match the amount of money needed to feed the children of Biafra for an entire year either.

After prom entertainment? Hey, the prom is the entertainment. You want to do something with your buddies? Fine, then we'll go to your house, you can cook while we watch TV. Remember, this was before VCRs.

So while the guy with the son seemed to have to fork out max bucks, the guy with the daughter had a more traumatic time of it.

For instance, all the guy with the son had to do was say, "drive carefully and ask the girl's parents to make some extra pictures for us."

Wasn't that easy for the guy with the daughter. First, he had to calm his wife down who acted like their daughter was getting married and moving away from home, rather than going to a dance.

Plus he had to listen to the scheming and the plotting. How she's going to get him to take her to the restaurant all her friends are going to, how she needs to make sure he's compatible with all her friends (like he's not authorized friends) and on and on. I think he said his phone experienced melt down the day of the prom.

Once they'd both agreed that proms were a way for their parents to get revenge on them for when they were in high school, they shifted to other monetary woes, such as, you guessed it, more "educational expenses."

These included:

Class rings. "C'mon dad, you don't expect me to wear a $60-pewter ring on my finger when ALL my friends will get 14-karat, $240 gold ones!"

Class pictures. Did you know photogs are now allowed on campus twice a year to take "class" pictures? They are. Like just how much does a kid change from September to May?

Year books. Weren't these free once?

I don't need bonds for my kids' college education. I'll need them for high school. I wonder if that expense will be tax deductible.

Better yet. Those two kids of mine can get jobs starting this summer and buy their own bonds. Either that, or it's the adoption agency.

Commander joins in ethnic celebration

In recoginition of Asian American/Pacific Islanders and our nation's ethnic and national diversity, the month of May is proclaimed Asian American/Pacific Islander Month at Fort Benning. The theme for this year's observance is "Asian Americans/Pacific Islanders: education, dignity , distinction and advancement" and marks the 13th anniversary of this observance .

The United States as a nation is comprised almost entirely of immigrants and their descendants. There are now more than 4 million Americans who trace their ancestry to Asia or the Pacific Islands. Their history is one of proud accomplishment with many contributions to the arts, literature, science, agriculture,industry, commerce and the armed forces of the United States.

Asian Americans/Pacific Islanders have contributed significantly in the struggle for America's national goals and in the quest for freedom and opportunity.

Asian Americans/Pacific Islanders Heritage Month fosters an increased national awareness of the history and contributions of these people. It also inspires a renewed sense of pride among Asian Americans/Pacific Islanders.

I encourage everyone to enjoy activities here at Fort Benning during Asian American/Pacific Islander Heritage Month.

Benning salutes public service employees

Monday through May 12 is Public Service Recognition Week.

More than 500 cities around the country are planning observances and special events to pay tribute to government service employees at all levels.

Each federal employee, upon accepting a position in the federal government, takes the oath of office pledging to "...well and faithfully discharge the duties of the office which I am about to enter..." On Jan. 26, President George Bush recognized the outstanding efforts that many federal employees at all levels are making to honor this oath, by carrying out the nation's business in an exemplary fashion. In the president's words "...I've not known a finer group of people than those that I have worked with in the government. You're men and women of knowledge, ability and integrity. You work hard, you sacrifice, you deserve to be recognized, rewarded and certainly appreciated."

"Pride in public service" is this year's theme. Bush issued his message in support of Public Service Recogniton Week, stating "our public servants are all engaged in the same mission: to ensure that the American people are able to live and work in a free, safe and orderly environment."

The Department of the Army takes great pride in honoring both military and civilians who served so effectively during Desert Storm. I take particular pride in honoring the military and civilians at Fort Benning who served and those who provided invaluable support here at home.

Commanders, directors and activity chiefs are encouraged to support and participate in programs which will promote this week honoring those loyal and faithful public servants, both military and civilian.

I, as commanding general of Fort Benning, designate Monday through May 12, as Public Service Recognition Week and since each of you has been an active participant in the renewal of American pride, for your efforts and contributions, I salute you.

Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza
Fort Benning commander

LETTER

Reader states case for motorcycle owners

This letter is an answer, or rather rebuttal, from safe motorcyclists, in reference to your commentary in the April 26 edition of the Bayonet.

I have been operating motorcycles now for about 15 years, never having a traffic accident or as much as "dumping" my bike. This is due to both safe, observant operation, as well as routine motorcycle maintenance being performed within the motorcycle's needs.

I am a military policeman, and in the course of my work, have responded to many traffic accidents both involving motorcycles and autos, some unfortunately were fatalities, but in all "TAs" there is an operator at fault. While the chances of extensive injury is greater on a motorcycle than when encased in metal, both can be equally dangerous.

I do think that a stance against motorcycles rates right in there with "gun control." If you fail to properly operate or maintain your machine, you are asking for problems regardless of what you are operating.

The Motorcycle Defensive Driving Course is a very effective course. Having successfully completed the course, my hat is off to my instructors because I benefited from them.

Clyde, you must realize that motorcycles have many limitations, if you attempt to carry golf clubs or groceries on a bike, you would most likely attempt to tow a 40-foot trailer with a Chevette — same difference.

If more individuals felt that the motorcycle should go the way of the Dodo bird. Well, so should compact and subcompact cars and trucks. In fact, maybe the auto industry should start providing vehicles the size of the M-1 tank. This way we would all be safe — possibly.

Remember Clyde, that machines, whether motorcycles or automobiles, or guns, or sewing machines, don't hurt or kill people — people do!

Sgt. Richard J. Liebau Jr.
988th Military Police Co.

Editor's note: Yes, Clyde supports gun control laws, didn't realize Chevettes are still on the road, wonders how motorcyclists do carry groceries if motorcycles are all the person has, thinks most drivers in the area should be sitting on a one-horse power buckboard, and short of that commends both the Defensive Driving Course staff and the Military Police Activity for helping keep Fort Benning safe.

Faith students have 'their day in court'

By Jon R. Anderson
Bayonet staff writer

Seventh grade would-be attorneys parleyed between one another before Judge William G. Fischer in mock trails held April 23 and 24.

In preparation for the national observance of Law Day, Wednesday, 125 Faith Middle School seventh-graders participated in the notional trials, either as attorneys, court reporters, baliffs, members of the jury, or members of the court.

According to Capt. Doug Dribben, Law Day coordinator for Fort Benning, the purpose of the mock trials was to provide the students with an understanding of how and why the American judicial system operates.

"Now that they've seen how a real trial takes place, not like what they usually see on TV, they have a much better comprehension of how our system works," said Dribben.

With the theme of this year's Law Day centering on the Bill of Rights, Dribben drove home the importance of realizing that with the right to a trial came the responsibility of possibly serving on a jury.

Many of the students involved expressed a newly-sparked interest in pursuing a career in law, admitting however, that reality is much different from what they have been seeing on TV when it comes to the courtroom.

"It takes a lot of patience to listen and really hear what the other attorneys are saying," said student Ray Sarluca, who was a defense attorney during the mock trial.

Dribben, who is an attorney at the Fort Benning Staff Judge Advocate's Office, said that he was "amazed at the depth and complexity of the questions" the students presented during the trials. Some, he said, came up with angles that he and the other attorneys involved hadn't even considered when putting together the case scenario.

Simulator provides valuable battlefield knowledge

By Jon R. Anderson
Bayonet staff writer

Staff Sgt. John Martin tried to get his Bradley into a better position as the T-72 tank began to zero in on him. Martin and his crew had all ready knocked out two of the Soviet's most advanced tanks, but was now out of ammunition.

"Get us out of here!" shouted Martin to his driver, over the drum of the Bradley's engines, "get us out of here!"

Pvt. 2 John Wilson excelerated and maneuvered the vehicle over the rough terrain while the gunner looked on anxiously, frustrated that he could now do nothing.

As the crew attempted it's retreat, the T-72 trained its sights and fired. They knew this was it.

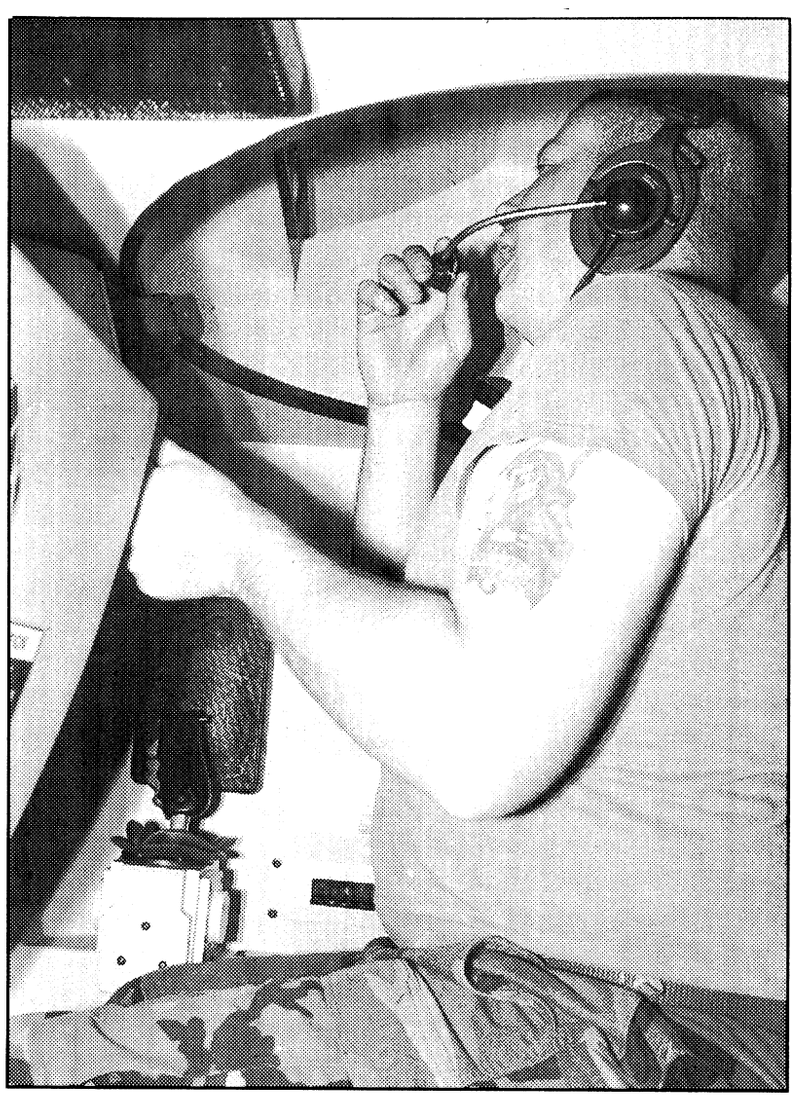
The sound of an explosion rippped through their vehicle and then silence.

"Damn!" said Martin as he and his crew stepped out of their simulator and back into reality.

"It was getting pretty hectic," said Spc. Armando Luciano, the Bradley gunner, of their computer simulated battle which now continued on with out them in a network of simulators filling the room. "It's as close to combat as we've come."

Coming close to combat is what Rick Wagner says Simulation Networking, called SIMNET, is all about.

Wagner, who served 24 years as cavalryman, works now as operations specialist for SIMNET at Fort Benning. Wagner explained that SIMNET provides much of the same kind of important training as a conventional field exercise, without the high cost.



When Company E, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry went through several days of the computer simulated training recently, Wagner estimated the cost at an "easy $1 million" had it not been in the notional environment.

"A real tank or Bradley runs at about $68 per kilometer, a SIMNET simulator runs at about 68 cents an hour," said Wagner.

Despite low cost, soldiers still learn much of the necessary basics, he says, including communication, navigation, the ability to operate effectively as a platoon and company and "bottom line, there're going to learn how to live in combat — you can take that to the bank."

Wagner's statement is not without merit as many of the returning armor and mechanized units returning from the war in the Persian Gulf attribute much of their success to SIMNET training before deployment.

The soldiers of Co. E all agreed on the effectiveness of the training, one concluding, "no matter what, it's better to get killed here on the computer, than on the battlefield, where there's no walking away when it's over.

DENTAC's Reserves bid post farewell

By Fort Benning Dental Activity

The Fort Benning Dental Activity has begun saying farewell to the activated reserve personnel from the 3299th USA Dental Service Detachment who have been assigned to DENTAC since August.

They have been performing duties as dentists, dental assistants and administrative personnel. Through their efforts, the processing of more than 26,000 troops was a smoother operation. They participated in the 16-hour expanded work shifts, ensuring that every soldier leaving Fort Benning for Saudi Arabia or other assignments had a duplicate panorex on file and all possible dental problems treated.

The majority of the 3299th were inprocessed at Fort Benning and immediately attached to other DENTACs, some moving four or five times to other military posts. They were located in 13 states and 19 sites during the eight months they have been activated.

Award ceremonies were held to honor those leaving in April, however, most of the unit will be with the various DENTACs until June or July. As with many reserves returning to their "before-activation" lives, there will be many changes to face, but they take back to civilian life the knowledge that they enhanced the quality of dental readiness and participated in the first large-scale activation in more than 20 years.

Soldier tells feelings of Desert Storm casualties

By Willie Hay
197th Infantry Brigade Public Affairs

"I've been training for this type of mission for 14 to 15 years, but when you hear on the radio that two of your men are down, you feel a kind of numbness when the reality of what happened hits home."

Sgt. 1st Class James Dore, platoon sergeant of the Scout Platoon, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry, was describing his feelings on learning that two of his soldiers had become the first — and, it turned out, only — members of the 197th Infantry Brigade wounded by enemy fire during the four-day ground war with Iraq.

Staff Sgt. Joseph Baker, an M-113 armored personnel carrier track commander, and Sgt. Roy Dooley, Baker's crew chief, were hit by shrapnel when an Iraqi soldier opened fire on their vehicle with an AK-47 on the night of Feb. 26.

The incident occurred during the scouts' reconnaissance mission of a suspected infantry battalion, an artillery site, and the Iraqi 3rd Commando Regiment headquarters east of Tall-al-Lahm in the Euphrates River Valley.

Baker, wounded in the hand, and Dooley, who sustained multiple leg wounds, were medevaced out of the theater. Both men are currently on convalescent leave with their families.

"We knew we had to drive on with our mission, and we were genuinely relieved to learn that their injuries were not life-threatening," Dore said.

According to Dore, the platoon was split into Alpha and Bravo Sections when the shootings occurred. Dore was in charge of Alpha Section, while 1st Lt. Larry Aikman, the platoon leader, was in charge of Bravo Section. Baker and Dooley were part of Aikman's element, which was traveling alongside a six-lane highway when the scouts opened fire with their Mark 19 automatic grenade launchers on an Iraqi truck speeding toward them along the road.

"When the truck stopped, I sent out two soldiers to check it out," explained Aikman, referring to Sgt. Alan Mendez, a combat engineer attached to the platoon from the 72nd Engineer Company, and Spc. Robert Fegley, a forward observer from Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery.

"They killed three Iraqi soldiers who jumped out of the vehicle, but a fourth man hiding under the truck got up and started running away," Aikman continued. "When my soldiers chased him, he turned and sprayed their APC with AK-47 automatic fire before they could get him."

"When we heard the call for a medevac, we stopped our movement to find out what was going on," Dore said. "It was hard to monitor the radio net because higher headquarters wanted to know immediately how many soldiers had been hit and the extent of their injuries."

"I was kind of shocked when I started sending messages that had a direct bearing on the lives of people I know," said Spc. Kurt Priest, Aikman's radioteletype operator.

"But I just tried to gather the information needed for a medevac request as quickly as possible, using a prepared format in our system."

"From where I was sitting in the vehicle, I couldn't see anything," Priest continued. "I got all my information from hearing what everyone was saying — Iraqi commando bunkers were all around us, but no one was coming out of the bunkers."

"Then, suddenly, the commandos started waking up and coming out of the bunkers. At that point, we were called back across the berm of the highway."

According to Dore, the battalion task force was well trained to deal with the possibility of any soldiers falling victim to friendly fire.

"We had aggressed against soldiers from 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry, during a field training exercise in which we were engaged by friendly forces, so we put extra emphasis on communications by installing an additional radio in our track to help us monitor as much radio traffic as possible," Dore said.

At one point during the firefight with the commandos, mortar fire was called in on the scouts, but Lt. Col. Bill Chamberlain, the battalion commander, immediately canceled it.

"He kept a handle on everything and ensured we got back safely before any mortars were fired," Dore said.

Both Aikman and Dore praised Pfc. Paul Vansickle, the driver of Baker's track, for his actions in the absence of NCO leadership for his vehicle.

"He first ensured that everyone was back on the vehicle and then headed back to the other side of the berm," Dore said. "Meanwhile, Pfc. Patrick Stuber, an M-60 machine gunner, was rendering first aid to both of the injured men."

According to Vansickle, the Iraqi soldier opened fire on his vehicle from a distance of 3-5 meters as the track pursued him during his flight.

"I saw him raise up from behind a small depression, hollered 'look out' and dropped down into my hatch," Vansickle said. "He again took cover and began spraying us with automatic fire.

"After I had backed up 40 meters or so, he turned and began running again. I thought we were far enough away, so I popped back up and saw no one in the track commander's hatch. Later, I found out that everyone was in the back, and Stuber was rendering first aid. Meanwhile, soldiers dismounted off another track, opened fire on the Iraqi and killed him.

"Another soldier told me to park behind the berm and drop the ramp," Vansickle added. "Stuber and another soldier helped get Dooley out, and Baker walked down the ramp. Stuber continued to administer first aid to both of the sergeants."

According to Aikman, once the injured men were being treated by the task force medics, the mission task force seized its objective and took more than 1,000 prisoners.

Baker and Dooley will receive Purple Hearts because of their wounds, according to the battalion personnel officer. Aikman was awarded the Silver Star at the 197th Infantry Brigade awards ceremony April 19 on Kelley Hill. Fegley and Mendez, the first to dismount in pursuit of the fleeing Iraqi soldier, received Bronze Stars with "V" Device.

SPECIAL MILITARY PROGRAM

With Grateful Appreciation General Motors Salutes The Men And Women Of Our Armed Forces, And Offers Them Something Special:

An Easier Way To Buy A New Car Or Truck.

Your Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile, Buick, Cadillac and GMC Truck dealers have incentive plans already in place that make it easy to buy a new car or light truck.

But now through the end of the year, the divisions of GM are offering a Special Military Program to all active U.S. military personnel and reservists called to active duty during the Persian Gulf War or their spouses.

Here's how it works. You get three hundred dollars in down payment assistance, plus any additional down payment you make is matched up to five hundred dollars when you buy a new GM car or light truck and finance it through GMAC. That can mean as much as eight hundred dollars toward your purchase. Add that to existing incentives, and you can save even more. The Special Military Program is not available with the college graduate program, first-time buyer program or overseas vehicle purchase program. See your participating GM dealer for qualification details.

It's a small gesture on our part in partial exchange for the tremendous gesture each of you has made. And our way of expressing thanks for a job well done.

197th PMO seeks vehicle owners

197th Infantry Brigade

While the 197th Infantry Brigade and other Kelley Hill tenant units were deployed to the Middle East, 172 unattended personally-owned vehicles parked in open parking lots were moved into the 2nd Battalion, 18th Inf. Regiment motor pool on Ivy Road for safekeeping.

Since the brigade and other units have returned, most of these POVs have been claimed by their owners. However, there are still several cars that remain. Before the remaining vehicles are towed off by a civilian wrecker and salvage company and subsequently put up for resale, one last attempt is being made to identify and locate the rightful owners.

With the aid of computerized law-enforment vehicle registration files, some of the owners' names have been identified but are no longer on the alpha roster and cannot be located. If anyone has information that can help us identify or locate a vehicle owner, contact the 197th Inf. Bde. Provost Marshal Office at 544-1919 or 545-2959.

Parents visit clinic named for son

By Jeanne Dickerson
Martin Army Community Hospital

Dr. and Mrs. Calvin Winder, parents of Pfc. David F. Winder, came to Fort Benning April 8 to visit the clinic named for their son.

The clinic chief, Dr. Herbert Hameister, is a retiree who was called up for Operation Desert Storm. He had been stationed in the same place as Winder at the same time.

Hameister, who was an infantry officer at the time, decided while he was in Vietnam that he wanted to be a physician. He talked to the Winders about the conditions in Vietnam at the time David was there and during the conversation, the Winders and Hameister found that they were from the same area in Ohio and had mutual acquaintances.

David, a medic, was scheduled for rest and relaxation in Japan. He let his brother know that he planned to call home from there Mother's Day weekend in 1970. His brother had the Winders at home, expecting David's call, when they were notified that he had been killed in action.

He had not gone to Japan. His unit had been ambushed and was pinned down. David responded immediately to the cries of his wounded comrades and started across approximately 100 meters of open, bullet-swept terrain to aid the nearest casualty. He was unarmed and crawling most of the distance when he was wounded by enemy fire. David continued toward the nearest casualty, despite his wounds, reached the injured soldier and administered medical aid. He started crawling toward a second wounded soldier and was forced to stop when wounded a second time.

Hearing cries from his wounded comrade, David again started forward in a courageous attempt to reach and assist the wounded man. After struggling to within 10 meters of the casualty, David was mortally wounded.

David was killed May 13, 1970, at the age of 23. The Winders had planned for several years to visit the clinic but their plans were delayed due to a major auto accident. Now that Dr. Winder has retired from the ministry and both have recuperated from their injuries, they have accomplished their goal. The Winder Clinic was dedicated in 1985, with the Winders attending, but they had not seen the clinic in operation.

The Medal of Honor was awarded posthumously in 1974, presented to Dr. and Mrs. Winder by Vice President Gerald Ford. This award is restricted by Congress to persons who perform the most extraordinary acts of heroism and is the highest United States military award.

Way to go, Mom!

Three-month-old Anthony Sanzotta seems unimpressed when his mom, Cindi, receives a 197th Infantry Brigade Certificate of Achievement from Col. Ted Reid, brigade commander. She received her award for her support to the family members of her husband's, Capt. Mickey Sanzotta, unit, Service Battery, 4th Bn., 41st Field Artillery, during Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm.

DS soldiers: beware of 'great deal' scams

Army News Service

Operation Desert Storm didn't leave a soldier in the Middle East with much time for weekend or after-work trips to the mall. Plunking down a big down payment for a shiny new car probably wasn't a top priority, either.

But, the war's over and Army officials are worried.

The way they figure it, a lot of soldiers have had a lot of time to save a lot of money. And officials know there are a lot of bad ways to spend money.

Ike Templeton of the Army Community and Family Support Center in Alexandria, Va., advises soldiers to steer clear of "get rich quick" schemes, and to think ahead before investing in such big ticket items as cars, campers and real estate.

Templeton suggests that soldiers seek financial counseling at their local Army Community Service.

"They need to think down the road," he said. "Consider a savings program and consult financial planners about ways to invest the money."

Sgt. 1st Class Karen Murdock, an Army Central Command spokesperson in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, says local gold markets and stores stocked with Middle Eastern rugs are popular among soldiers in Saudi Arabia. Also popular are the stores operated by the Army and Air Force Exchange Service.

AAFES operates 13 exchanges directly and supports another 82 exchanges run by various units in the Persian Gulf.

'Delta Dawgs' remember desert duty

By Willie Hay
197th Infantry Brigade

The element of surprise, used so successfully by Company D, 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry, to destroy Objective Guard, a major Iraqi supply depot, Feb. 26 and 27 in the Euphrates River Valley, brought out the best in the "Delta Dawgs."

"We were surprised by all the ammunition we found at the objective because the intelligence reports said there might not be anything there," said Staff Sgt. Thomas Robles, platoon sergeant.

The enemy was really dug in, so you couldn't see anything until you were practically on top of it," he continued. "Although we didn't know what we were up against, they were even more surprised, and they didn't hit us in the dark with their mortar rounds, which kept flying over our heads."

"It was incredible, looking back on it now," said Staff Sgt. Gary Stewart, squad leader of third squad. "Radio nets were bogged down with everybody talking, but the squad leaders just did what we knew we had to do — use hand and arm signals, which we could see with our PVS-7 night observation goggles.

"Everything happened fast," Stewart added, "but we made decisions on our own and accomplished our mission."

"I was pretty scared when we found out there were bunkers all around because I thought, as a driver, I had a good chance of getting shot," said Pfc. Richard White, a member of Stewart's squad. "But there wasn't time to think about that. I dismounted and captured a few prisoners myself because I saw there were so many of them after the first Iraqi soldier surrendered."

"Then, when we started clearing the bunkers, I was surprised that most were big enough to hold a deuce-and-a-half, but our training really took over because the first thing we did was search for booby traps," White continued.

"We were trained so well that we cleared one bunker after another, secured them, and moved out without anyone getting injured."

Dealing with the unexpected at Objective Guard brought out something more in the Delta Dawgs — courage. Staff Sgt. Curtis Edwards, squad leader of fisrt squad, earned an Army Commendation Medal with "V" Device for his brave actions when faced with an Iraqi soldier who could have been setting him up for an ambush.

"We had just dismounted on line when an Iraqi soldier started walking toward us with his hands up and stopped about 100 meters away," Edwards said.

"We tried to call him forward, but he refused to move. Then we saw something strapped to his right leg, but it was impossible to identify even with our PVS-7s in the dark from that distance."

"He was acting real jumpy, so I decided to approach him to try to calm him down and take him prisoner," Edwards continued.

"When I got closer, I could see what was strapped to his leg was just a protective mask that had slipped down from his waist. Using gestures and body language, I was finally able to convince him to lie face down so I could cuff his wrists behind his back."

After he had taken the prisoner, Edwards found out he could have easily become a target for other enemy soldiers.

" Sgt. Mark Burroughs and Spc. Andrew Keaveney moved around behind the prisoner and found nine more enemy hiding behind the mound of dirt where the first man had come from," he recalled.

"They all surrendered without any resistence, but it was then I realized how easy it would have been for them to blow me away."

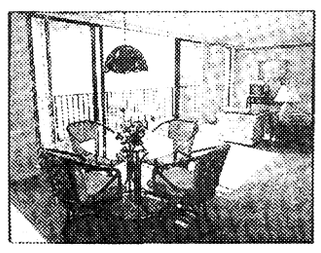
"We really were the 'Vanguards' for the whole battalion task force, who converged on the objectives," said Robles, adding that the platoon continued clearing bunkers throughout the night and the next day, capturing EPWs, and consolidating ammunition in one area to destroy in place.

Elections planned

The State of Iowa has set the dates for its city and school board elections. The school board elections will be Sept. 10 and the city elections Nov. 5.

Members of the U.S. Armed Forces and their dependents may register and request an absentee ballot by submitting a completed Federal Post Card Application to the local county auditor at any time before the election.

Ballots are mailed approximately 40 days before the election and voted ballots postmarked before the election must be received no later than the Monday after the election.



A special state election in Pennsylvania has been set in the 133rd Legislative District, which covers Lehigh County, for May 21 due to the resignation of State Representative Paul Michael. In addition, due to the death of Sen. John Heinz, chairman of the Special Committee on Aging, a senatorial race has been set for Nov. 5.

Members of the U.S. Armed Forces and their dependents may register by submitting a State Voter Registration Mail Application to the Board of Elections in the county of voting residence. A Federal Post Card Application may be used to request a State VRMA and an absentee ballot.

Military members are generally exempted from registration, however, in some instances, members may be required to complete the State Registration Form. Dependents of U.S. Armed Forces members may submit the FPCA anytime before an election to receive a State VRMA and an absentee ballot. Absentee ballots and state registration materials are mailed approximately 45 days before the election. Voted ballots must be received by 5 p.m. on the Friday before the election to be counted.

For more information, see your unit voting assistance officer.

Establishing a pattern produces better fishing

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
OutboardMarine Corporation

The bass pros all agree the way to catch bass is by establishing a pattern of what the fish are doing and how they want a lure presented.

What they don't always agree on is the number of fish they must hook in order to establish that pattern.

"For me, it's from three to five fish," explained Evinrude Outdoors Pro Staff angler Cliff Craft. "I don't feel confident if it's less than that, and I don't usually wait around to catch more than that."

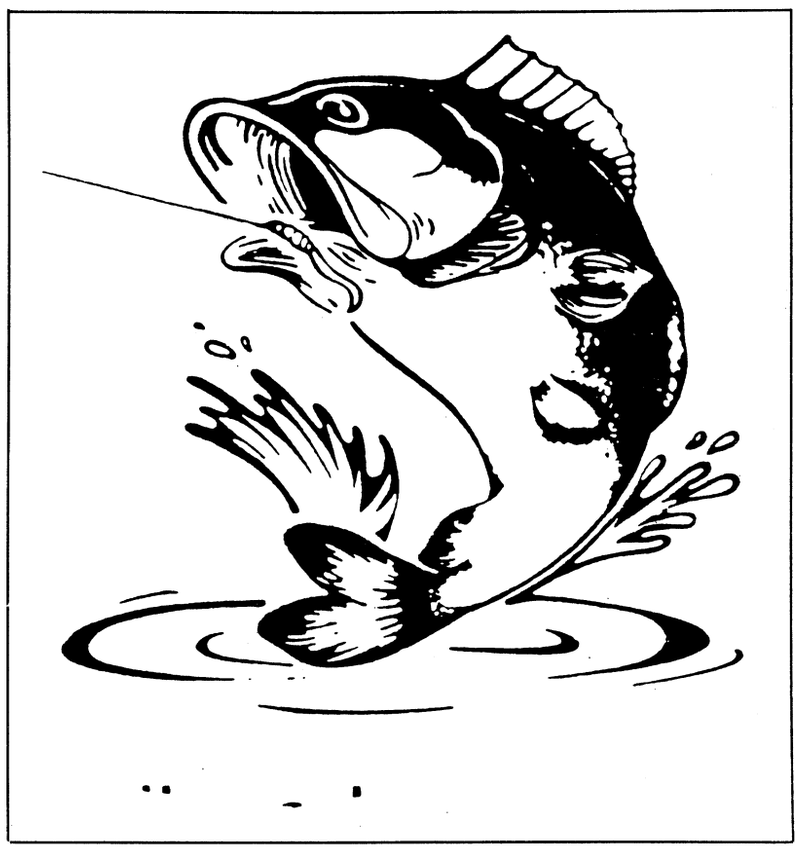
The important thing to keep in mind, said Craft, is that to truly establish a pattern, the bass to be caught under similar conditions with the same lure presentation.

"There are several major keys I look for when I'm putting together a pattern," he explained. "The first thing I try to establish is depth, because that really determines where I'll fish.

"If the bass are shallow, for example, I'll usually concentrate around shorelines and the backs of coves and creeks, but if the bass are deeper, I'll move out into the channels and ledges.

"Once I find the proper depth, I'll try to isolate one particular type of cover the bass may be using. This could be bushes, rocks, logs, grass, or practically anything else available.

"I'll have to fish a lot of different types of cover in the process, but if I can catch three to five bass on the same type of cover and holding at the same depth, I feel like I have a pattern."



For Craft, the size of the fish he catches does not matter.

"They can be six inches or six pounds," said the Evinrude pro. "The important thing is to establish where bass are and how they're biting. If the bass are small, you know larger fish will be nearby, and if the bass are big it's just an added bonus."

According to Craft, it isn't necessary to actually catch and land the bass to establish a pattern, either. All he needs is to feel them bite on his lures. In fact, he often tries not to hook the fish, especially when he's practicing with a worm or jig.

"A pattern is basically the set of conditions that combine depth, cover, and lure presentation," Craft explained. "If you're in the back of a cove with a lot of shallow cover and you see baitfish swimming by, you know bass aren't far away.

"You expect to get a strike from a bass, and when it does happen, it simply confirms what you already knew. If I get as many as five bites like that, I have a pattern.

Timely tips keep the bass biting

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
1988 Outboard Marine Corporation

If you're a bass fisherman, you've probably faced this situation before; it's late, you haven't caught any fish, and you're running out of time, patience and ideas.

What do you do to keep from going home empty-handed?

"There are a couple of things to try," suggested Johnson Outboards Pro Staff member David Wharton, who admits he's been in that situation a few times.

"First, if I've been concentrating in shallow water, such as shorelines or flats, I would move to slightly deeper water. For me, this would nearly always be a major point with a lot of depth variation, and I'd stay there fishing with a worm or jig until I positively had to leave.

"If I'd been working points like this all day without success, I'd move to a shallow bank and simply start covering as much water as fast as I could with a spinnerbait."

Wharton, a former guide on Sam Rayburn Lake in Texas and now a highly-respected tournament pro, emphasized the main thing to do in those final minutes or hours of fishing is to concentrate in one area or on one technique, and keep your lure in the water.

"It's not a pleasant situation to be in," the Johnson pro said, "but we've all been there. You can't panic and start running from spot to spot hoping to stumble into a school of fish, because all you really do is use up your remaining fishing time.

"You need to find one place, like a point, and sit there and work it thoroughly. Or, if you're fishing shallow water, simply fish your way down a long shoreline."

Putting the trolling motor down and flinging a spinnerbait as fast as you can wind it in the final minutes isn't always as desperate as it may seem. During a recent tournament on Alabama's Lake Martin, Wharton began doing just that, and with only 15 minutes remaining in the contest, caught a six-pound, 15-ounce bass, the largest of the tournament.

Runners gear up for race

All recreational runners are invited to participate in the first "Gathering of Eagles" 5K and 1-mile fun run, beginning at 8 and 9:30 a.m. June 1 in front of the Wright Flyer at Maxwell Air Force Base, Montgomery, Ala.

The event is scheduled in conjunction with the annual "Gathering of Eagles" which brings famous aviators to Maxwell each year to share their experiences with the students of Air Command and Staff College.

The 5K course is a flat, fast course and appropriately designed to take runners past Maxwell's historic static aircraft.

The entry fee for preregistration is $10 for the 5K and $5 for the 1-mile fun run. The entry fee on race day is $12 for the 5K and $5 for the fun run. The entry fee for either run includes a "Gathering of Eagles" T-shirt. Registration will begin at 7 a.m. on the day of the race.

Pine Mountain Trail offers challenge

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

A breathtaking valley view and a wonderful picnic atmosphere can be found at Franklin D. Roosevelt State Park, just outside the city limits of Pine Mountain.

A short 45-minute drive north on I-185 will take you straight into FDR park. Following the convenient information signs once in the park will take you to any one of several information centers where one can purchase souvenir items, maps and can get a space for camping for a small fee.

The main attraction at FDR park is the Pine Mountain Trail, a trail that spans countless miles over some grueling hills for the avid adventurer, or other sections of gently rolling hills with scenic overlooks for a person who is just an average sightseer. Traveling to the east from the Main Information Center will immediately take you into a plethera of steep, twisting hills with a few fallen trees here and there to make your trip a little more demanding and interesting.

Several small rock formations allow the novice rock climber to gain a little bit of practice scaling walls of rock that provide little danger.

To the southwest of the Information Center one will be in for a scenic route that is less demanding than to the east. One can hike to several well-maintained picnic areas, such as Pine Knob Picnic Area where a beautiful overlook of the park is located. This area is reported to be a favorite spot of President Franklin D. Roosevelt. He even had a barbecue built that is still standing today.

If hiking is not in the game plan on your trip, it is also convenient to drive around the park to the various major sites. But to truly experience the Pine Mountain Trail, one must travel by foot.

Kelley Hill chapel re-opens

By Debra Galle
USAIC Chaplain's Office

Voices ring out once again on Sunday morning at Kelley Hill Chapel.

Vacant more than seven months due to Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm, the tiny chapel on the hill is now filled with activity and preparation.

Catholic Mass is now celebrated at 9 a.m. and Protestant service is at 11 a.m.

Chaplain (Maj.) Richard Garrison, Kelley Hill Chapel pastor, says that additional ministry is available including pastoral outreach, counseling and a soon to be established children's church. No Sunday school classes are available at Kelley Hill Chapel. Garrison says that those interested in Sunday school are urged to support the continuing Sunday School program at the Religious Education Center, Building 101. Baby-sitters are needed during services. These are paid positions. Those interested should call 544-1692 or 544-3070.

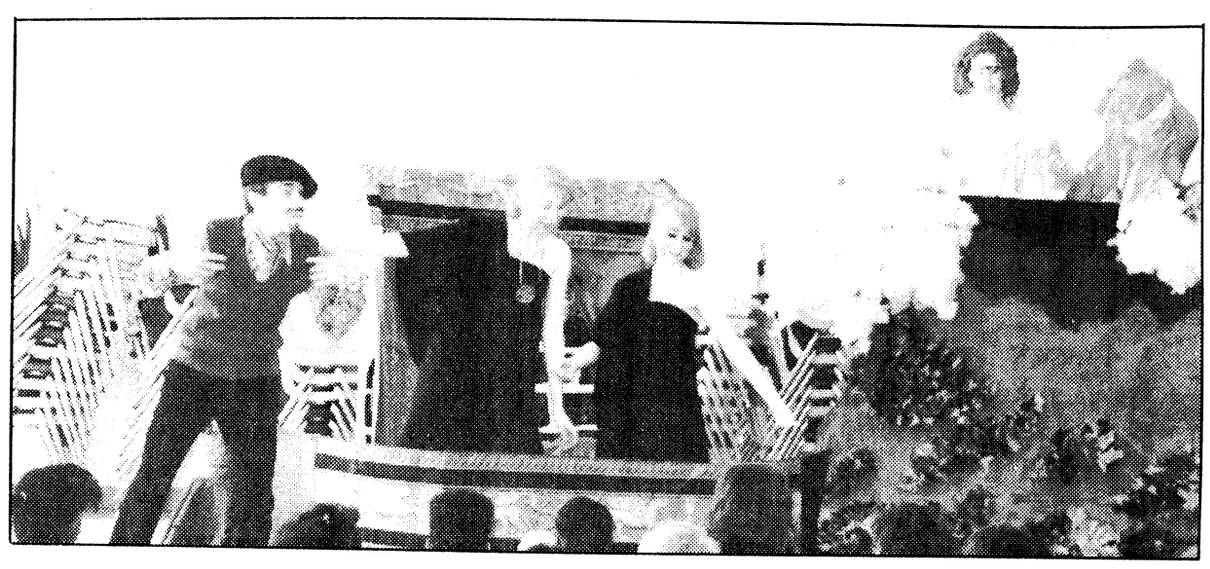
Fort Benning Schools

Faith Middle School's Odyssey of the Mind team took first place in state competition held April 20 in Warner Robins.

This year's problem was "Pompeii." The team had to create and present an original performance incorporating art and artifacts from the time of ancient Pompeii.



The group is now on to world finals in Knoxville, Tenn., May 23 through 26.

Faith has had teams compete in OM World Finals for the five years it has participated.

Odyssey of the Mind is a creative problem solving competition sponsored by IBM.

Team members include: Greg Maschek, Elisabeth Moore, Rae Leigh Dame, Paige Novier, Rachael Novier, Arvis Layton, and Brooke Newey.

Coaches are Cindy Givens and Libbie Kurinec.

Hypertension is silent killer

Martin Army Community Hospital

During the month of May the Community Health Nurses of Martin Army Community Hospital will ask all personnel to become high blood pressure sleuths to help the great internationally known detective, Sherlock Heart, solve the "Case of the Silent Killer."

The culprit is high blood pressure, or hypertension, a killer that strikes one out of every six Georgians without warning. It is called the "silent killer" because it has virtually no symptoms. Yet is is a major form of heart disease and the number one cause of death in the state of Georgia and the nation.

The Community Health Nurses say you can be a high blood pressure detective by taking part in a blood pressure screening at the Post Exchange May 3 at noon to 4 p.m. and May 4 at noon to 6 p.m. Sherlock Heart will be on hand to help solve the case by handing out free information on detection and control of high blood pressure.

"Detection of high blood pressure is elementary," says Sherlock Heart. A simple screening, which takes less than a minute, can test your blood pressure. If it exceeds a reading of 140 over 90, the Community Health Nurses recommend that you see your doctor. "Once detected," says Detective Heart, "this killer can be easily controlled with diet and exercise." More severe cases are treated with drug therapy.

More than 1,000 Georgians have elevated blood pressure readings of 140/90 or higher. Since hypertension has no obvious symptoms, it is estimated that more than 360,000 Georgians suffer from this disease without knowing they have it.

Lloyd honors military parents

Fort Benning Schools

Loyd School held its third annual Soldier's Breakfast April 19 in honor of the school's military parents. This year, soldiers and spouses of deployed soldiers were included in the celebration. This event was a part of Loyd School's activities to spotlight the "Month of the Military Child."

The parents and the faculty and staff of Loyd School heard Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza, post commander, speak about the important roles that soldiers play, not only in the military but in their families as well. Cavezza commended the parents in attendance and the Loyd School staff for their many positive contributions to the lives of Fort Benning children.

Crablegs, oysters, shrimp and a selection of fresh fish are some of the items that attract Columbus area residents to Walt's Seafood in Opelika, AL.

Walt's Seafood — just fresh

Walt's Seafood, 1703 Columbus Parkway in Opelika, has just the right "cure" for diners with seafood-whetted appetites.

For 16 years, this family-style, full-service restaurant has been serving all sorts of fish, shrimp, crab and oysters to the Chattahoochee Valley.

The seafood buffet is complete with just about every item you can imagine. Recently, more dishes have been added for even greater variety.

You don't have to dress up. Just put on something comfortable, roll up your sleeves and eat until you're content. And don't worry about the prices either — they're moderately priced from about $6 to $13.

All week, except Sunday, there are nightly all-you-can-eat specials that seafood lovers can't refuse:

Monday — Have catfish and stuffed crab, along with dressing, french fries, hushpuppies, salad, cole slaw, peach cobbler and a dessert for $4.99

Tuesday — Steak and snow crab legs with all the same fixings for $8.95

Wednesday — Raw oysters at $1.99 per dozen and the $12.95 seafood buffet makes its weekly debut with more than 25 items

Thursday — Fried or boiled shrimp at $7.50, raw oysters included with seafood buffet

Friday — Fried oysters at $4.95 per dozen, raw oysters included with seafood buffet

Saturday — Same exceptional specials as Friday

Walt's Seafood, open from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Saturday, also serves up delicious chicken and beef entrees to offer customers something in place of or in addition to seafood.

The popular seafood gathering spot, which is accessible for guests with physical limitations, has specialized menus for children, carry-out, catering services and banquet facilities for up to 50 people.

Walt's Seafood is owned and operated by Kenny and Charlotte Williford.

"We have some of the best seafood around," said Williford.

With such a variety of tempting choices prepared by cooks with years of experience, there's no question. ■

ASK THE JUDGE

By Michael H. Lane
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q. I was adopted 20 years ago through an adoption agency, and was raised by loving adoptive parents. They do not know anything about my biological parents, and now that I am an adult there are several things that I feel I need to know about them. I know that records of adoptions are not open to the public, but would like to know if there is any way to get information about mine. Can you advise?

A. As you know, adoption records are not open to the public in any state. This public policy is intended to protect the privacy of the adopting parents and the biological parents who surrendered custody, and to aid in the establishing of new family ties within the adopting family. However, the records are available to the adopted person in some circumstances, when a valid reason to know can be established.

In Georgia, an adopted person may seek information about his or her biological parents once he or she reaches the age of 21, or the adoptive parents may seek the information on his or her behalf if the adopted person is under 21. The state has established a central records section called the Adoption Unit for that purpose.

A written request for the information sought may be directed to the Adoption Unit, or to the adoption agency that handled placement of the adopted person.

If the information sought does not involve the identity or the whereabouts of the biological parents, it would be supplied to the adopted person. Therefore, if you desire information concerning your place or date of birth, genetic information, or social and health history, the adoption unit would inform you.

This type of information is most helpful to the adopted person when medical information about the family would be important in diagnosis or treatment of a medical problem.

Where the identity or the whereabouts of the biological parents is desired, the procedure is more restricted. A request for identifying information is made to the adoption placement agency. The agency must then seek to contact the biological parents. If the parent's whereabouts are known, a personal visit from an agency representative is made.

The biological parent is advised that the child has requested identifying information, and is advised that he or she has the right to consent or to object to the disclosure.

If the biological parent gives written consent, the information is released and a contact visit may be arranged. If the biological parent objects to release of the information, the agency will not release the information.

In a situation where the biological parents cannot be located, the agency will notify the adopted person. The name of the biological parent may not be released at this point. To secure the name and last known address of the biological parents, the adopted person may file suit to seek the identity of each biological parent.

The Georgia law provides that the court will order release of the identification and last known address of the biological parents for good cause shown, or if the adopted person can demonstrate that non-disclosure ". . .would have an adverse impact upon the physical, mental, and emotional health of the adopted person. . ."

This is an emotional issue of all parties concerned, and the law in this area will continue to evolve. To seek further information about this or any other legal problem, contact the Legal Assistance Office in building 5 for an appointment. The telephone number is 545-3281.

Home at last!

Members of the 533rd Transportation Company arrive with flags waving, weapons shouldered, and thoughts of home on their minds. Hearty cheers, hugs and kisses were awaiting the unit as they arrived from the Middle East at Lawson Army Airfield April 25. The unit's primary mission is to provide transportation support to the 36th Engineer Group, also headquartered at Fort Benning.

Post takes top spot in SPIRIT

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning won first place at the Training and Doctrine Command level of the Systematic Productivity Improvement in TRADOC project for fiscal 1990. The post will receive an award of $100,000.

The post received the award for initiating 308 money-saving actions that resulted in a savings of $194.4 million, said Sarah McLaney, installation Project SPIRIT coordinator.

"These actions are brought about through three courses of action: suggestions, capital investment projects and management improvements," said McLaney. "They also come from audits, as well as the initiatives from contracting, the chaplains, Directorate of Engineering and Housing, Equal Employment Opportunity, Directorate of Information Management, U.S. Army Information Systems Command, logistics and Health Services Command. Some savings are realized through non-appropriated funds initiatives as well," she added.

This is not the first time the post has taken first place in Project SPIRIT, however. Fort Benning has won top honors in fiscal 1983, when the project was started, and 1987 and 1988 as well. Although this is not the first time the post has won the award, it will be the last. Due to cutbacks in military spending, TRADOC has opted not to renew the SPIRIT project, according to David L. Flo, director of the Directorate of Resource Management.

"We have certainly got the best post in TRADOC in terms of the project," said Flo. "Through everyone's hard work in contributing to the project, Project SPIRIT has returned $3 million to the post for even more post improvement," he added.

"I'm extremely proud of Fort Benning, but not surprised that we won. In fact, it's appropriate that we won. I am sorry that this will be the last year that the project will exist," said Flo.

The post will receive the money at the beginning of fiscal 1992, said McLaney.

The post SPIRIT award winners for the second quarter of fiscal 1991 were announced in a ceremony Monday. The command/major unit winner was the USAISC, which made two management-improvement initiatives and one suggestion. These actions resulted in a $245,000 savings. This was the third consecutive Project SPIRIT win for USAISC.

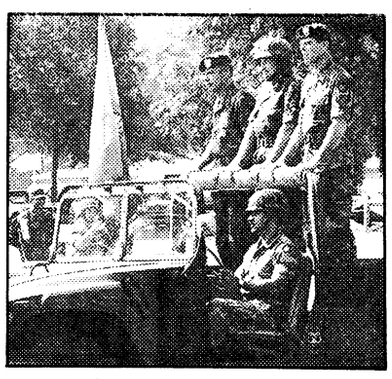
The Directorate of Engineering and Housing won the directorate staff competition with 24 management-improvement actions and one suggestion, and documented savings in excess of $850,000.

The winner of the personal and special staff competition was the USAIC Chaplains' Office with three management-improvement actions resulting in a savings of $174,000.

Individuals awarded for their suggestions were: Ary L. Lucas, Rebecca W. Morris from the USAISC, Master Sgt. Thomas P. Carter from the Adjutant General's office, Arthur E. Simmons, James E. Floyd, James A. Dunn, Wilson Miles, Dan A. Hudson and Amy Vaughn from the Directorate of Engineering and Housing.

SOA welcomes new commander

By James C. Rupp
Bayonet staff writer



The School of the Americas welcomed its new commander May 3.

Col. Jose R. Feliciano, previously commander of Military Group, Honduras from 1989 until this year, succeeded Col. William A. DePalo Jr. who has been the commander at the SOA since January 1989.

Lt. Gen. Leonard P. Wishart III, commander of U. S. Army Combined Arms Center out of Fort Leavenworth, Kan., was on hand as a guest speaker to welcome Feliciano and to say good-bye to DePalo.

After graduating from the University of Puerto Rico in 1963, Feliciano's initial assignment was as a platoon leader in the 1st Battalion, 8th Cavalry Division in the Republic of Korea. He came to Fort Benning for the first time in 1965 as a ranger instructor for the U. S. Army Infantry School. He returned after a tour in Vietnam to take a company commander's postion in 1968 at the Infantry School. In 1969, Feliciano returned to Vietnam as a company commander in the 101st Aiborne Division. After various other tours and commands at other posts, including Fort Gulick, Panama from 1982 until 1986 and Fort Meade, Md. as inspector general and secretary of the general staff for the 1st U. S. Army, Feliciano returned to this post as a battalion commander from 1982 until 1984, and again in 1987 as a brigade commander for the 1st Infantry Training Brigade.

Feliciano's decorations include: Silver Star, two Bronze Stars, Army Commendation Medal, Defense Superior Service Medal and four Meritorious Service Medals, among others. He is also a graduate of the U. S. Army War College and the Armed Forces Staff College.

Feliciano brings his wife, Carol, along with him to this assignment. They have two children, Marc and Marisa, who are both college students.

Sergeants Major course adjusts consideration date

The zone of consideration to attend the U.S. Army Sergeants Major course has been adjusted. The date of rank was established as Feb. 1, 1990, but administrative requirement made it necessary to adjust the date to Jan. 31, 1990.

The adjustment was made prior to the convening of the board, and did not disadvantage any soldier. Those soldiers who were not in consideration zone because of a date of rank of Feb. 1, 1990, will be considered for next year's board.

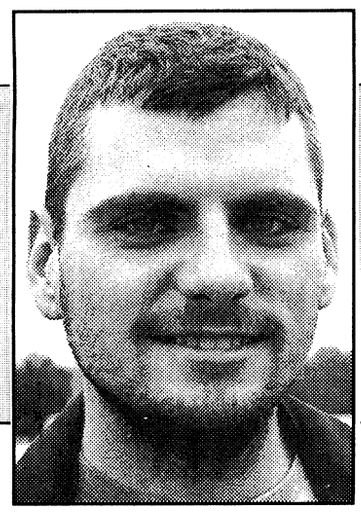
OPINION

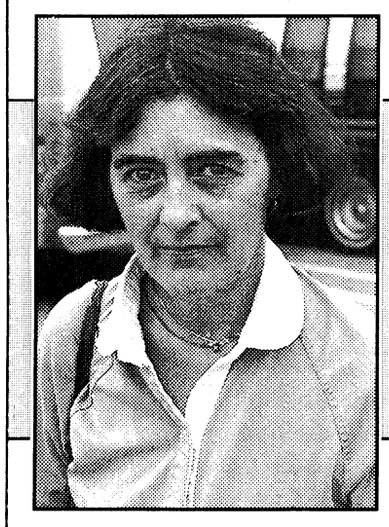
VARIOUS VOICES:

With all the trouble in Columbus with the gangs, do you think the Fort Benning community will be affected?



Sgt. Terry Gage, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 36th Engineer Group — "No, I don't. A lot of people come in the Army to avoid that gang stuff, and the last thing they want to do is get involved."

Margaret Culverhouse, retired — "No, I don't think that they (Fort Benning youth) will be involved in all that stuff. Most are so broad-minded that they harbor no prejudices and they are used to dealing with different people often."



Spc. James Moore, Company D, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment — "It depends on how far spread it is. If it's really bad it's more than likely that Benning will be involved."

Pfc. Bruce Winters, B Battery, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery — "I don't figure it should be a problem with most of the people on this post."

Barbara Beals, family member — "I think it (gang-related crime) will spread if it isn't stopped. Crime is like everything else, if it's not stopped it increases. Kids see crime as an easy way to make money or gain acceptance."

Martha Lowery, family member — "No, I don't think it will affect Fort Benning. Columbus and the post do not interact."

COMMENTARY

Rugby's the 'game' this weekend

By Clyde Snively

Anyone who's been in the Army longer than 10 minutes knows physical fitness is an "in thing."

I mean what other organization can you join where you're greeted with "give me 10," as soon as you step off the bus.

Personally I've always thought that if you were healthy, you didn't need to exercise and if you're sick, you shouldn't. But that puts me into a very small minority around here.

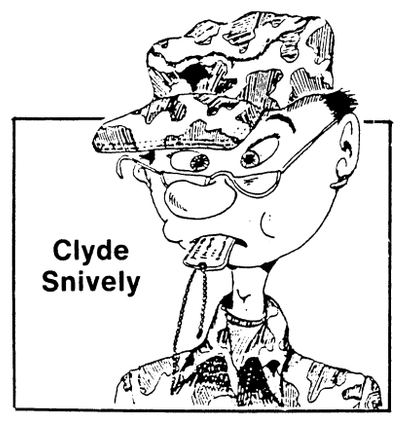
The three sports that seem to be status symbols in the Army are weightlifting, racquetball and basketball. And even to the casual observer, adherents of those sports are easy to spot, especially if the sportsters have their gym clothes on.

The weightlifters will generally be walking around slightly bull legged, with their arms akimbo (to clear their massive lats and thighs) wearing a wide belt and carrying what looks like batting gloves.

The racquetballers also have this manly look about them as they strut about with large sweat spots on their chests, and backsides.

And of course basketball players are the only ones who can dribble and still look neat.

All of them, of course, will tell you what a macho sport they participate in. And I agree. For me, even golf is a macho sport. But when it comes to MANLY, there's only one. And that's rugby.



Rugby players can be identified by the fact they don't walk so good. Mainly because if they still have their knees, chances are they're made of crunched bone.

They'll usually have bite marks on their ears, thumb prints on their cheeks from where someone tried to gouge out an eye and yes, their foreheads are always flat from butting. And if they have a full set of teeth, chances are, they've been put there by a dentist.

I know of people who think football's a rough sport. Rugby is to football what NASCAR is to driving.

Football players wear so much padding it's amazing they can move at all. In addition to helmets, shoulder pads, knee pads, thigh pads, hip pads, rib pads, elbow pads, face masks, teeth pads, and ankle braces some of them are even into kevlar vests.

The rugby player, on the other hand, goes flesh on flesh, bone on bone with his opponents — and sometimes teammates too.

And unlike football where you stand around and rest for 30 seconds every three or four seconds, and have replacements each time you make a run over 20 yards, or replacements whenever the ball changes hands, rugby players go full steam ahead for the duration (40-minute halves).

This weekend, some of the best rugby players in the armed forces will be here to compete for some cup with a German sounding name.

So, if you're the kind who likes to see blood spilled, teeth knocked out and heads bashed in, then French and Blue Fields are the place to be.

For the viewing enjoyment of a novice ruby spectator, I'll run down a few of the rules, just enough for you to ask a semi-intelligent question of an expert (see above for the tell-tale marks).

First, the game is played on a pitch (field) which measures 69 meters by 100 meters with 13 or 15 players.

Anyone who's taken the time to learn to spell rugby is familiar with a scrum — a gaggle of players with their arms interlocked who push, pull and maul one another as a brave referee tosses the ball into the tunnel formed by their bodies.

A line out is used to put the ball into play when it goes out of play. Here, there are no interlocking of arms, but once the ball is tossed at this line of players, a lot of arms and elbows fly.

Teams can score by a "try" touching the ball down across the opponent's goal line, (4 points), by a kicking a conversion (2 points) or penalty kick (3 points).

To learn more about the game, or just get a chance to buy authentic rugby artifacts, or drink authentic rugby beer, French and Blue Fields are the place to be beginning this afternoon and running through Sunday.

MESSAGES

Vuono urges bond drive participation

The Army will conduct its annual U.S. Savings Bond Campaign until May 31. Because of the importance of this effort, I would like each of you to play an active role in it.

Our goal for this year's campaign is to double the existing Army participation rate and to have a substantial portion of our current bond buyers increase their existing allotments. These goals are attainable if we ensure that commanders and managers at all levels support this program and inform all their personnel of the benefits of investing in U.S. Savings Bonds.

The U.S. Savings Bond program is important to every member of the Army team. Its benefits include tax advantages for those using bonds to help finance education, as well as the option to defer taxes until bond redemption. I know that you share my commitment to this vital program and that you will take the lead in providing each of your soldiers and civilians the opportunity to participate.

CG recognizes Energy Awareness Week

The week of May 13 through 20 is Fort Benning's Energy Awareness Week. The President has identified as national energy goals the need to reduce our dependence on potentially unreliable energy supplies, provide a safer, and healthier environment, and maintain a national economy second to none. One of the keys to this national strategy is the willingness by every American to conserve energy.

Fort Benning has made considerable progress in energy conservation efforts in the past years. Improvements in our Energy Management and Control System allow for better control of energy use in an increasing number of facilities. Areas of waste and abuse have been located and corrected. The renovation of energy-inefficient buildings has helped meet decreasing energy goals. Although these measures have proven highly effective, building improvements can no longer be relied upon to further reduce Fort Benning's energy use.

What is needed now, more than ever before, is command emphasis placed on energy management and conservation at all levels. Installation managers should make efficient energy use a priority in their day-to-day operations and training. Changes in our behavior and work practices must be made if we are to continue to operate effectively within Training and Doctrine Command energy goals. Efficient use of energy resources allows more flexibility in using air conditioning and heating and still stay within our goals.

I want to encourage your dedicated efforts to eliminate all forms of energy waste and abuse. The Fort Benning Energy Program cannot succeed without the firm commitment of commanders who capably and responsibly emphasize strong unit energy conservation programs. I ask your continued support of the energy program, not only during this week, but throughout the year.

Post commander warns against heat injuries

Each summer Fort Benning is plagued by heat injuries despite repeated efforts to educate personnel about this injury's causes and prevention. Heat injuries are critical, for they present a high risk of a fatality if the body temperature soars out of control.

During fiscal year 1990, 26 soldiers received recordable heat injuries with an injury cost estimated at $193,551. Once a soldier suffers a heat injury, he or she is more susceptible to additional heat injuries.

All leaders must be actively involved in the prevention of heat injuries. Total prevention of heat injuries is difficult because the heat tolerance of individuals varies considerably and one's tolerance changes from day to day. Leaders must stay alert to ensure that soldiers are not tasked beyond their limits. Each soldier must be taught to recognize heat injury symptoms in themselves and their buddies. Combat effectiveness will be greatly enhanced when soldiers watch out for each other.

Now is the time to educate leaders in the prevention, recognition and treatment of heat injuries. Pocket cards (Fort Benning Form 7, Heat Injury Prevention) providing guidance for the prevention and treatment of heat injuries are available from Post Publications, building 2409. These cards used with the Wet Globe Temperature Index, which can be obtained by measurements taken by the unit or by dialing 545-5281, give definitive instructions on conducting safe operations and training. U.S. Army Iinfantry Center regulation 40-14 provides detailed guidance.

Aggressive heat injury prevention will increase unit readiness and reduce the risk of a fatal injury. Needless losses can and must be prevented!

Military Police Activity

As of Jan. 1, the only valid registration decal authorized on Fort Benning is the standard DOD decal displayed on the windshield of four-wheeled vehicles or on the right front fork of motorcycles. All other registration decals are void and should be removed from bumpers, windows or plates.

With the advent of the war in the Persian Gulf, installation security procedures were increased. These increased security requirements included ready identification of privately owned and commercial vehicles operating on Fort Benning. There was an immediate influx of registrants at the Vehicle Registration Office despite the deployment of a majority of troops stationed at Fort Benning.

In order to accomplish the total registration of privately owned vehicles, as well as preclude a flood of registrants in event of post closure, a six week by-unit schedule for post registration is being established. Designated units will direct personnel with unregistered vehicles to the Vehicle Registration Office, building 2621, during times and dates specified below. A dedicated registration clerk will provide registration service with minimum waiting time.

Following the scheduled registration completion date of June 21, Military Police will cite owners of unregistered vehicles authorized registration for failure to comply with the provisions of Chapter 4, USAIC Regulation 190-5, Vehicle Traffic Regulation, dated April 1, 1985.

All times are from 12:30 to 4:30 p.m.

Youth Activities Service plans Teen Club

By James C. Rupp
Bayonet staff writer

The Youth Activities Services is currently trying to establish a better way to occupy the time of the youth of Fort Benning.

The fourth Friday of every month a teen dance is held at Building 1056 to give teen-agers on post a place to meet, socialize and have a little bit of fun.

Lately though, there have been some problems with these dances. At the past few dances, there have been youth at these dances who could possibly ruin these get-togethers by causing trouble, according to officials.

There has been abusive language directed toward the volunteers helping out at the dances, as well as loitering and people entering the dance without paying.

Becky Carroll, Family Support Division chief, said that the trouble is not widespread, but it is just enough to make people notice — including the Military Police and various Fort Benning officials.

These officials have become concerned with the apparent lack of parental guidance of these young people. To quell these problems, which Carroll cites as possessing the "potential" to worsen, officials are currently working on a particular solution.

That solution is to establish a Teen Club, which would give military family high-school students a place to go and socialize and gain some responsibility, said officials.

"We're not a baby-sitting service," Carroll is quick to say. "We are willing to get these kids a place to go, stuff to do, but they have to show us they can handle what is already being done."

The "baby-sitting" idea also touches another base with Billie C. Smith, Youth Services director. She said that the Teen Club will not be a place for parents to relieve themselves of the burden of their own children.

"We're looking into making the parents register their kids into this program, signing them up with valid military ID cards. They would also be required to sign a letter showing that they understand what is expected of them and their children."

Carroll said, "Sure we could have the MPs come to chaperone every dance, but it would be so much better if it could just be the kids and their parents."

Among the other issues being discussed by officials for the Teen Club are; a possible dress code for members, a special Teen Club ID card, a building in which to house the activities and mandatory parental attendance (possibly one activity a year, or something along those lines).

In the meantime, parents are welcome to attend other activities being held for Fort Benning young people, just to see what their children are doing and what sort of activities the Youth Services' branch has to offer.

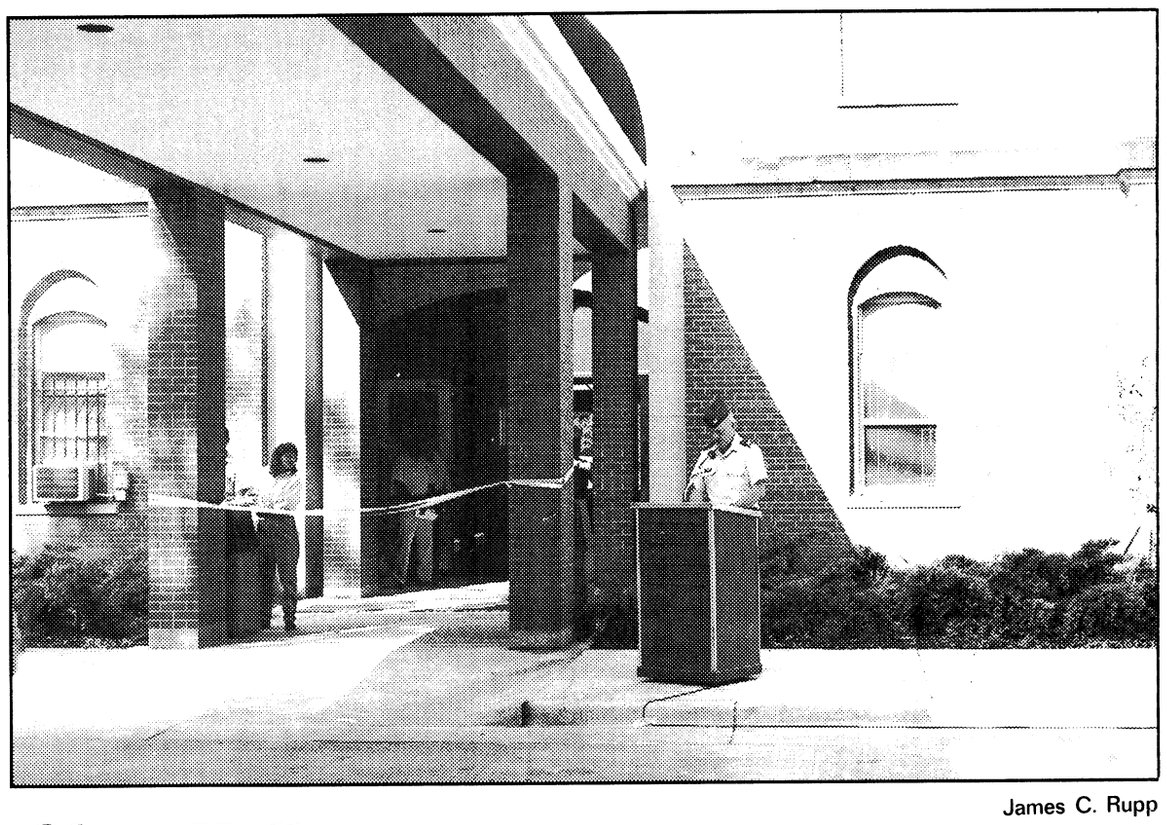
DEH employees, contractors receive identification cards

USAIC Public Affairs Office



The Directorate of Civilian Personnel will issue identification cards to all Directorate of Engineering and Housing employees, according to guidance received by Post Chief of Staff Col. John D. Fuller.

Outward wear of the card, or its possesion, is necessary so that the employee may be readily identified by family housing occupants as DEH personnel performing general maintenanace and repair work in family housing areas.

Those contractors awarded construction, maintenance or architectural engineering contracting for performance of intertior or exterior maintenance or repair work in family housing areas will be issued a letter of authorization by DEH. This letter will inform family housing occupants of the name of the authorized DEH representative, as well as the nature and duration of the work.

The Housing Division, DEH will inform each occupant at least two weeks in advance as to the nature of work to be performed and the approximate length of time to complete the work.

Family occupants have the authorization and the right to request from any individual working in and around the family housing areas for proof and proper identification.

Weather warnings meant to save lives

By James C. Rupp
Bayonet staff writer

With the arrival of spring, the weather patterns around the Fort Benning area have become extremely unpredictable and sometimes violent.

In the past weeks, the National Weather Service has issued several severe thunderstorm warnings in addition to three tornado sightings.

Capt. James Walker, commanding officer of Detachment 10, 5th Weather Squadron, a 19-member Air Force unit operating out of Lawson Army Airfield responsible for monitoring the weather on Fort Benning, had comments about keeping safe during the season.

As most people know, there is a siren system designed to alert the Benning population about approaching weather fronts which could possibly prove to be dangerous. Walker said that his unit does its best to sound the sirens 20 minutes before the front enters the area.

Walker said that the siren does not exclusively sound in the event of a tornado, but rather, any approaching extreme weather system. These storms usually have winds in excess of 50 knots (60 miles an hour) or possess hail larger than half an inch in diameter.

The best thing to do upon hearing the sirens , Walker said, is to get inside and stay inside until the "all clear" siren has sounded. Once inside, it is best to get to an interior room or basement (basements being preferable).

The siren codes are as follows:
Code Black: tornado sighted or conditions approaching which are favorable to tornadoes; audible warning is a steady sound from telephone or siren blast for five minutes continuous.
Code Green: storm approaching; radio or telephone message.
All Clear: storm threat past; series of three steady two minute sounds interrupted by two periods of one minute of silence.

AMC hosts Storm float

USAIC Public Affairs Office

A military float designed by the U.S. Army Material Command highlights the Army's contribution to several homecoming parades honoring veterans of the Gulf War.

AMC officials said the float will express both the Army's thanks for stateside support and honor many of the specialties that contributed to the success of Operation Desert Storm. These include an infantryman, nurse, recruiter, drill instructor, communicator, aviator, combat medic, cook, mechanic, special forces soldier and civilian worker.

Army officials said every effort will be made to staff the personnel on the float with Desert Storm veterans, preferably from the local community.

In addition to the float, a self-propelled, giant replica of a Kevlar helmet will be used to carry dignitaries, such as a division commander, wounded veteran or former prisoner of war.

The float is tentatively scheduled to participate in a parade in Atlanta July 4.

Student gets Navy scholarship

Atlanta Navy Recruiting

David James Blackman, the son of Lt. Col. William J. Blackman of Fort Benning, has been selected to receive a Navy college scholarship worth more than $70,000.

Blackman, a senior at William H. Spencer High School in Columbus, applied and has been accepted for a Naval Reserve Officer Training Corps four-year scholarship.

NROTC, founded in 1926, offers young men and women an opportunity to qualify for commissions in the Navy and Marine Corps while attending college. As the largest single source of regular Navy and Marine Corps officers, the NROTC scholarship program fulfills a vital role in providing mature young men and women for leadership and management positions in an increasingly technical Navy.

"I applied for a Navy Scholarship in order to get a good education and then serve my country in the United States Navy," says David. "The Navy gave me my choice of options, and provided a job which I have wanted for a long time."

PMO explains modified traffic flow

Provost Marshal's Office

During November, the Provost Marshal's Office Traffic Section surveyed and analyzed rush-hour traffic flow on Benning Boulevard in the mornings. The purpose of this was to determine if the system of re-routing traffic during these peak hours was effective and could be improved.

Based upon the results and analysis of the data gathered during morning rush hours the system was modified in January.

According to PMO, the new system provides the following benefits:

- Reduces confusion for the motorist because outbound and inbound lanes of Benning Boulevard remain normal.
- Provides traffic flow which more closely resembles normal traffic flow, traffic within the installation is not detoured.
- Provides more route options into Main Post. Marne Road, 10th Mountain Division Road and Vibbert Avenue are more accessible.
- Requires fewer policemen to set up, manage and take down, thus allowing more policeman to provide better coverage elsewhere on the installation.
- Requires less time for policemen to set up and take down, thus reducing traffic flow problems and enhancing safety during transition periods.

The current system still provides a dedicated inbound lane for traffic congested at the Custer Road and Benning Boulevard intersection from 7:45 a.m. to 8:00 a.m. Before and after this time, the traffic, while heavy, does move freely. Traffic flow is always heavier on Tuesday and Thursday (non-physical training days) than it is on Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

By departing home a few minutes earlier or using alternative routes you can avoid arriving on post during the peak traffic time or avoid the intersection altogether. Marne Road, 10th Mountain Division Road and especially Dixie Road/ 1st Division Road remain relatively lightly traveled as routes onto Main Post during morning rush hour.

The traffic flow is altered starting at approximately 6:55 a.m. and completely operational no later than 7 a.m. The ending time is not later than 8:15 a.m. and the flow of traffic returns to normal no later than 8:20 a.m.

For further information contact Staff Sgt. Anthony Greer, Traffic Section non-commisioned officer in charge at 545-7241 or 545-2520.

DS soldiers 'living proof' for infantry graduates

By Willie Hay
197th Infantry Brigade

"These soldiers are living proof that you're ready — you can do it. These soldiers — and thousands like them — have had an enormous impact on the world in the last two years."

That's what Lt. Col. Robert J. Hoffman, deputy commander of the Ranger Training Brigade, had to say about nine veterans of the Persian Gulf War.

The soldiers — eight from 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry and one from 1st Bn., 18th Inf. — were Hoffman's special guests when he spoke April 26 at a graduation ceremony on Kanell Field for infantrymen trained in Company B, 4th Bn., 30th Inf. Regiment, and Co. D, 1st Bn., 19th Inf. Regt.

According to Hoffman, each of the 197th Inf. Bde. soldiers graduated from one of the training battalions within the last two years and distinguished himself during Operation Desert Storm.

Here's what Hoffman credited the Sledgehammer Brigade soldiers with doing:

Spc. John Duncan patrolled the order between Saudi Arabia and Iraq and took an Iraqi captain prisoner.

Spc. Michael Spence drove for his battalion commander, delivering water and doing other important things on his own that assured our success in Desert Storm, according to Hoffman.

Spc. Ronald Lloyd, as a TOW vehicle gunner, tracked enemy vehicles and gathered intelligence prior to the start of the ground war.

Spc. Christopher Boggs helped secure an area where ammunition was being stored that the enemy was trying to recapture.

Spc. Francisco Ramos, a platoon leader's driver, chased off enemy trucks during the cease-fire. "And these guys will tell you that the word cease-fire becomes very relative, depending on where you are and when you're hearing about it," Hoffman said.

Pfc. Andrew Lobe conducted patrols just prior to the start of the ground war, gathering intelligence for his battalion task force.

Pfc. Aaron Johnson cleared bunkers, took prisoners, and helped treat Iraqi wounded.

Spc. Mario Lantion assisted in the capture of 11 enemy prisoners of war.

Hoffman's last guest was Spc. Paul Lauer, from 1st Bn., 18th Inf., the only soldier who had not been trained in one of the two battalions represented at the graduation.

"I want to note him because, in the short time since he left this parade field (Lauer trained in Co. D, 2nd Bn., 58th Inf.), he has jumped into Panama and helped take down Noriega," Hoffman said. "Then, during Desert Storm, he was a member of the lead element of 1-18 going across the Iraqi border.

"Ladies and gentlemen, this squad of soldiers I just told you about are seated here today, and I'd like you to give them a warm round of applause," he said. "They took down a drug-smuggling, idol-worshiping, pineapple-faced dictator in Panama, and they freed Kuwait from the talons of an evil, sadistic, ugly little thug."

Others have switched rather than fight, he continued. "You remember the Berlin Wall, I think, and there are lots of smart Russian generals right now who are saying, 'This isn't a good time to mess with the United States infantry.'"

Turning to the new graduates, Hoffman declared, "Whether you stay in the Army for two years or two decades or more, you have a wonderful adventure in front of you.

"Though I truly hope none of you ever sheds blood for your country, I want you to consider this quote, translated from a Sanskrit tablet written at about 200 B.C. It said, 'Having regard for thine own duties, thou shouldst not tremble, for no better thing exists for a warrior than a fight required of duty.'"

Benefits book now available

Department of Veterans Affairs

One of the federal government's all-time best-selling publications, "Federal Benefits for Veterans and Dependents," has been updated for 1991 and is now available from the U.S. Government Printing Office.

Published by the Department of Veterans Affairs, the 92-page handbook describes such VA benefits as medical care, education, compensation, pension, life insurance, home loan guaranty, vocational rehabilitation and burial assistance. It also explains the eligibility requirements for each program and outlines claims procedures.

The handbook, which sells for $2.50, includes special sections on veterans benefits administered by other federal agencies, including the Department of Defense and Labor. VA advises consumers that the handbook is sometimes reprinted, with few or no changes, and sold by non-government-related firms for considerably higher prices.

Addresses and phone numbers of all VA offices, medical centers, national cemeteries, Vietnam veteran counseling centers and other VA facilities are listed by state.

"Federal Benefits for Veterans and Dependents" ranks fourth in total sales of publications by the U.S. Government Printing Office. More than two million copies have been sold.

The handbook is available postpaid from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402-9325, stock number 051-000-00197-4. To order with VISA or Mastercard, phone (202) 783-3238.

Soldiering overcomes language barrier

Willie Hay

Spc. Michael Spence (center) and Pfc. Samir Patel (right) both with HHC, 2nd Bn., 18th Inf. show Cpl. Fabrice Goy of 7th Commando Regiment, French Foreign Legion, how to operate Spence's M-16A2 rifle with M-203 grenade launcher.

By Tom Wilkinson
197th Infantry Brigade

Parlez-vous francais?

The language barrier was not a problem when the French, as part of the multinational forces, brought their light battle tank, the AMX-30, to show soldiers of the 197th Infantry Brigade while in Saudi Arabia.

As the tank arrived, soldiers were quick to look and, using gestures, quickly made conversation with the visiting Frenchmen.

"I've never seen one other than in a picture," said Staff Sgt. Kenneth Myles, a tank commander in Company C, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor. "I'm really glad to know that they're here assisting us."

As the soldiers climbed aboard and made friends with the Frenchmen, Capt. Jean Jacques Klochkoff, the 24th Infantry Infantry Division's French liaison officer and an interpreter from the French Foreign Legion, told soldiers about the tank's capabilities.

The tank, which bears some resemblance to the Soviet T-55, was exhibited to the Fort Benning-based soldiers soldiers to assist them in identifying friendly forces in Operation Desert Storm.

"Seeing it up close, we can learn a lot just by watching them," said Myles. "I can identify it as friendly, and it will be good to use our thermals at night to look at it so there can be no mistake."

Other soldiers displayed small arms with the Frenchmen.

Spc. Michael Spence and Pfc. Samir Patel showed French Corporal Fabrice Goy an M203 grenade launcher, while Goy exhibited the French equivalent. The French weapon, which fits on their 5.56mm assault rifle, is capable of firing rounds which counter personnel, wheeled vehicles and tanks, Klochkoff explained.

"This has a drinking tube — something ours doesn't have," commented Goy as he tried on a U.S. protective mask.

"Your mask is lighter and easier to put on than ours," countered Spence as he donned a French mask.

A French officer commented that like the U.S. mask, the French equivalent can also be worn with a protective ensemble that includes a mask hood, shirt and trousers that afford the wearer chemical protection.

As always, soldiers have been able to breach the language barrier and find the language that binds them together — soldiering!

11th Inf. seeks cadet hosts

11th Infantry Regiment

The 11th Infantry Regiment is conducting a Host-A-Cadet Program for all the cadets attending airborne school this summer and is looking for volunteers from the Officer Corps.

The Host-A-Cadet Program is a volunteer program that provides cadets an opportunity to meet and interact with Fort Benning officers who have volunteered to bring cadets into their homes and to allow them to ask questions about branches, schools, assignments and the Officers' Basic Course.

Not only will there be West Point and Reserve Officer Training Corps cadets, but the program also sponsors naval and Air Force cadets. The hours available for hosting are Monday through Friday and 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Hosts could invite a cadet over for cookouts, bowling, movies, picnic, or water skiing, but the possibilities are endless. The number of cadets one wishes to host is not limited. If you are interested in hosting a cadet this summer, contact Sgt. 1st Class David Zak at 545-7033 or 545-4833 or any of the battalion's Adjutant clerks and pick up an application.

Host applications must be turned in at least three days prior to the class the applicant wishes to host. For example, if a host wishes to host five cadets of Class 31; application must be turned in no later than close of business May 28.

Listed below are class dates and branches of cadets:

MARTIN CARE

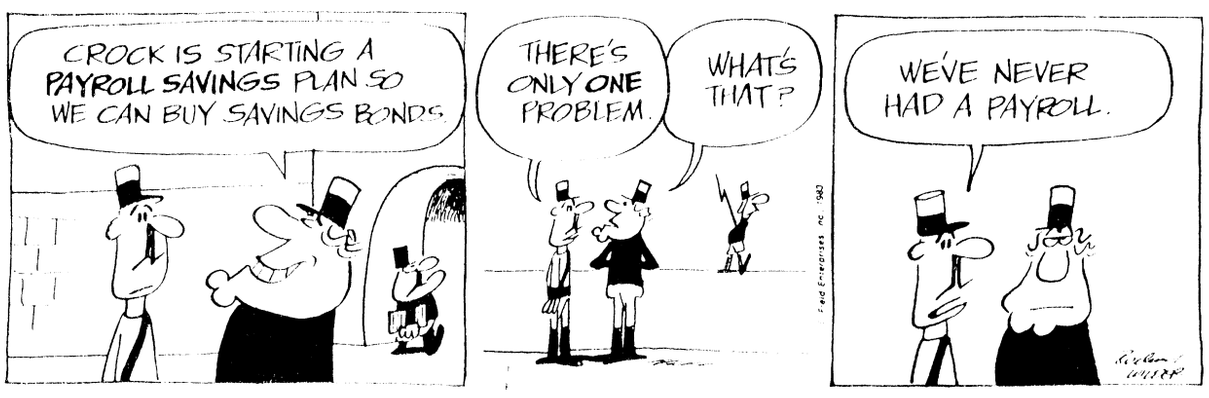
By Laura Brown
Martin Army Community Hospital

Every emergency room, civilian or military, is fraught with frustration at times for its patients and its staff. Martin Army Community Hospital Emergency Room also falls into this category.

If certain procedures are followed patients can obtain appropriate and expeditious medical care.

MACH ER is a Level II trauma center. Any illness or injury that is life threatening is given first priority for medical care. Chest pain, respiratory distress, lacerations, fractures, motor vehicle accident injuries are all considered more urgent medical problems than colds, rashes, or other problems that have existed longer than 48 hours. As a result, the wait in the ER may seem long, but patients with the most urgent problems will be seen first. The wait may also be prolonged by patients coming in by ambulance. These patients will receive priority care.

Proper use of the military medical system will help bypass the long waits or frustration often accompanied with an ER visit. Every unit on Fort Benning is assigned to a medical care facility, a Troop Medical Clinic.



It is the unit's responsibility to inform the soldier and his or her family of the clinic available for their care. Unless it is an emergency (a life threatening event), the TMC is the first stop for medical care. If the medical problem cannot be treated or resolved at the TMC, there are other clinics that can be visited next.

These clinics include the Primary Care for Uniformed Services Clinic located off of Macon Road at 561-7066, the Outpatient Clinic at 544-3777, the Pediatric Clinic at 544-1795 and the Retiree Clinic at 545-5564. At this time there are appointments available at the Retiree Clinic each day which go unfilled.

On the weekends, TMC #5 is open from 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. each Saturday and 7:30 a.m. to noon each Sunday. Active duty sick call is from 7:30 a.m. to noon on both days.

The staff at Martin Army Community Hospital's Emergency Room, is there to meet medical care needs, but to facilitate faster, more appropriate care it is recommended to use the medical care system as described. For any questions, call the ER at 544-1123.

School prepares soldiers for USMA

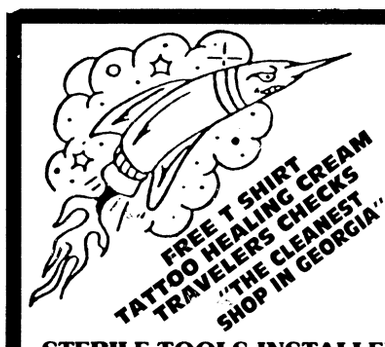
USAIC Public Affairs Office

For anyone who has ever dreamed of attending the U.S. Military Academy at West Point but thought that dream was unattainable, the U.S. Military Academy Preparatory School just might be for you.

The school prepares and trains active and reserve soldiers to qualify for admission to the military academy and provides training that will assist them after they arrive at West Point. Approximately 95 percent of the graduates receive appointments to the military academy.

The prep school is open to enlisted soldiers who are in the regular Army, Army Reserves or National Guard, and to civilians who are authorized by the Department of the Army to enlist in the Army Reserve specifically for the purpose of attending USMAPS.

Active duty and reserve soldiers interested in applying to USMAPS should go through their commanders and submit an application in accordance with Army Regulation 351-12.



USMAPS officials have asked commanders to encourage their best qualified soldiers who are interested in a career as a commissioned officer to consider applying for admission to USMAPS. Information about application procedures can be found in Army Regulation 351-12, Nomination to USMA, Enlisted Categories — Army.

DS soldiers offer Gulf War prisoners kindness

By Willie Hay
197th Infantry Brigade

The sign of the entrance way promised, "Hotel Hilton — Free Room and Board."

But the military policemen and soldiers of the 197th Infantry Brigade offered the enemy prisoners of war who passed through the Hammer EPW Forward Collection Point much more than a night's lodging.

"I saw a medic from Bravo Company, 197th Support Battalion, actually take the boots off his feet and give them to a barefoot EPW he was treating," said Sgt. Eddie Brabant, assistant operations sergeant for the brigade's Provost Marshal Office.

"That's probably the most generous act I've ever seen," he added. "I remember seeing the medic walking around barefoot later and stubbing his toe."

That was not the only instance in which the Sledgehammer Brigade soldiers took the principle, "Handle these military prisoners as you would want a U.S. soldier treated if held captive by the Iraqis," a step further like the biblical "good samaritan."

"We gave them a small stove to heat the MREs the Support Battalion provided them three times a day and a radio to listen to," said Spc. Chris Larsen, an MP who assisted Brabant in training the processing point's 10-man guard force and obtaining food, water, blankets and medical treatment for the prisoners.

"Many of the soldiers gave them socks and other clothing items to wear," Larsen continued. "Basically, we were trying to show them that, in spite of the propaganda they had heard, Americans really are decent and fair-minded. One of the prisoners even told me, 'You're very good people.'"

Brabant contrasted the prisoners' mood on their departure with that displayed on their arrival at the facility.

"The majority of the more than 200 prisoners we processed after they surrendered or were apprehended by our combat units expected us to execute them immediately," he said. "We had to stress over and over again that our job was to protect them from the dangers of the combat zone and send them forward for interrogation and eventual repatriotization."

> "I saw a medic actually take the boots off his feet and give them to a barefoot EPW he was treating,"
> — Sgt. Eddie Brabant,

"Once they realized we weren't going to kill them, they were eager to answer the questions asked through the Kuwaiti interpreter on the brigade's civil affairs team," Brabant added. "Many of the prisoners were very friendly and showed us photographs of their families."

According to Brabant, every prisoner was given a paper tag identifying his name, rank, date of birth, nationality, and the time, place and circumstances of capture or surrender.

"They don't seem to have anything comparable to our Code of Conduct because many seemed eager to tell us more than we needed to know," he remarked. "Some even told us the names and locations of their family members. If we weren't the kind of Army we are, we could have threatened to kill their loved ones."

"A few had to be medevaced because of their injuries, and some who had come forward to surrender were suffering from broken bones that were not healing properly. The treatment they had received from their own medics was comparable to what a soldier might have had during the U.S. Civil War."

"We even processed several Kuwaitis who had been brought to Iraq when Kuwait was invaded back in August. They surrendered because they wanted to go back to their homeland, not because they were fighting on Iraq's side."

Brabant described resistance from Iraq's famed Republican Guards as minimal.

"Most of the 50 or so we processed were liars, and their resistance was more mental than physical," he said. "Many were captured in civilian clothes and claimed to be civilians, but our interpreter determined they were Republican Guards. We denied them a few privileges for lying to us, because we expected honesty from them just as they would have expected it from us."

Most of the prisoners spend 24 hours or less at the Hammer facility before being picked up by the 24th Infantry Division or XVIII Airborne Corps for further processing, but at least two prisoners left a lasting impression on the Support Battalion guards with their artistic talents.

"When I saw an EPW drawing a picture on the wall of a little girl crying with a pencil, we left it in his possession, I asked him if he would draw a couple of pictures for me on a sketchbook one of the MPs had," said Spc. Henry Crago, from Company C, 197th Support Battalion.

"He spent the next two or three hours working on these sketches," Crago said, holding up pencil drawings of a child with teardrops in her eyes and a young soldier. "This was a real positive experience for me, and all the EPWs I guarded were very friendly and cooperative."

"When I asked the man who drew those sketches if he could draw a picture of my wife from a photograph, another prisoner raised his hand to volunteer," said Spc. Trevor Booker, also from Co. C, 197th Support Battalion.

Booker proudly held up the photograph and a large pencil sketch of his wife, Karen.

Booker said he, too, was surprised by the prisoners' cooperative attitudes.

"I wasn't expecting them to be so friendly," he said, "but as time went by, they seemed more like our friends than our prisoners."

"I think our treatment of them will help erase the racial stereotypes these people have of us," Booker added. "I think their experiences in this EPW facility can only help long-term relationships between our two countries."

Termites can be a lot more than just pests

Terminix International

Each year, termites do more damage to personal property than fires, tornadoes, lightning and hurricanes combined, according to Ray Glass, manager of Columbus' service center of Terminix International.

"Most people carry insurance to help recover from other disasters, but it's almost impossible to get insurance against termites," Glass said. "Termites cause more than $500 million damage to homes in the U.S. every year. And termites can be found around the year in almost every state, as well as in Mexico and parts of Canada."

Any wood looks good to termites

Any building is a target for termites, even structures built with slab, basement, or crawl space foundation, according to Glass. "Termites will even invade buildings with steel framing and masonry walls to feed on the wooden door and window frames, or cabinets and shelving inside the building," Glass explained.

"Termites also feed on wood and paper products like books and cardboard boxes."

Not to be confused

"Sometimes people confuse termites with carpenter ants,"Glass said. "Carpenter ants have elbowed antennae and a pinched waist, while termites have straight antennae and a thick waist. Both may have tow pairs of wings, but a carpenter ant's wings are different sizes and shapes, while a termite's wings are all the same shape and size."

Although carpenter ants can cause damage to homes too, they do not feed on wood, Glass explained. "Carpenter ant damage comes from nest building. Termites actually eat the wood."

What you can do

Early detection is essential to minimizing termite damage, Glass said. "You may notice winged termites leaving the nest to swarm and find new homes, usually during the spring or fall," he said."Sometimes you can see wings that have been dropped. And, there may be 'mud' tunnels running from soil outside to the wood of the home."

Besides careful inspection performed frequently, homeowners should also remove scraps of wood from the crawl space area, according to Glass "Wood should not contact the soil anywhere around your house," he added.

If you need professional help

Since termite infestation can already be well established by the time the first signs are noticed, it may be necessary to call in a professional.

If you do seek professional help, Glass recommends that you follow these simple guidelines when choosing a termite control company.

- Be sure the company is reputable and reliable. (If you have doubts, call the Better Business Bureau.)
- Many firms offer free inspections. Ask about this service when you call.
- Get more than one estimate and compare services.
- Read the guarantee carefully.

SAFETY BRIEFS

National Safety Council

Pedestrian Safety

People get hit by cars going backward, as well as forward. Accidents involving backing vehicles occur in streets, in driveways and in parking lots. Typically, both driver and pedestrian are inattentive.

The National Safety Council recommends being particularly alert for backing cars by remembering to listen for engine noise, look for backup lights, watch for moving cars, look for drivers in vehicles, wall in front of parked cars and stay on pedestrian walks when possible. Never assume that you have been seen by a motorist.

Children Can't Fly

To you, home may represent a haven of safety and security. But for young children, it can also be a mine field of potentially dangerous falls. In fact, falls are the fifth leading cause of accidental death among children ages one to four.

The National Safety Council reminds parents that window screens are installed to keep bugs out of the house — not to keep toddlers inside. Keep children away from open windows and never allow them to lean on screens — even at ground level.

Sensible Sunning

Even on overcast days, approximately 70 to 80 percent of the sun's skin-damaging rays can penetrate the clouds.

The National Safety Council reminds you to wear sunscreen with a sun protection factor of 15 or more in addition to protective clothing when working or playing outside this summer. Be sure to reapply sunscreen frequently, especially after swimming or perspiring.

Cool It

Do you know what to do when your car overheats? The National Safety Council suggests turning the air conditioner off and the heat on to carry heat away from the engine.

If this doesn't lower the temperature, find a nearby service station or pull off the road and turn the ignition off. Raise the hood and wait for the engine to cool, but never remove the radiator cap.

Hot weather is hard on tires, too. It's important to maintain proper pressure. But don't check it when the tires are hot. For an accurate reading, check pressure before you go on the road. Tires with low pressure flex more; the resulting heat builds up pressure and increases the chance of a blowout.

Pesticides must be handled with care

Safety Office

Every year more and more pesticide chemicals are being used — not only on gardens and yard areas, but also inside the house to get rid of ants, roaches, and other insect pests.

But, like any tools, modern or old-fashioned, pesticides must be handles with care. The directions and cautions on the container labels must be followed to the letter.

Significantly, about 75 percent of the accidents from misuse of pesticides occurred to children under 10 years of age, and about 90 percent of them were under 5 years old.

Most of these accidents can be prevented by following these precautions:

- Don't store pesticides near foods of any kind — or where children can reach them.
- Read the label — follow all directions, cautions, and warnings.
- Never remove pesticides from their original containers — don't pour them into bottles, gallon jugs, buckets, or any paper containers.
- If the label recommends it, wear a suitable mask or respirator.

Columbus lawyers, Benning Schools and OSJA combine Law Day efforts

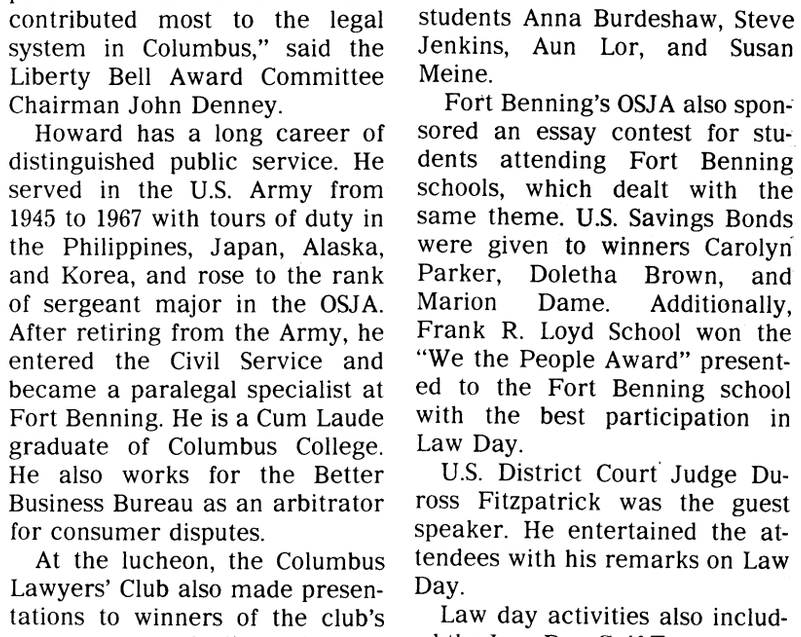
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Charles Howard, paralegal specialist in the Fort Benning Office of the Staff Judge Advocate's Criminal Law Division, has been named the Columbus Bar Association's "Liberty Bell Award" winner.

He received the award at a Law Day luncheon at Fort Benning May 1.

"The award is presented to the person the association feels has contributed most to the legal system in Columbus," said the Liberty Bell Award Committee Chairman John Denney.

Howard has a long career of distinguished public service. He served in the U.S. Army from 1945 to 1967 with tours of duty in the Philippines, Japan, Alaska, and Korea, and rose to the rank of sergeant major in the OSJA. After retiring from the Army, he entered the Civil Service and became a paralegal specialist at Fort Benning. He is a Cum Laude graduate of Columbus College. He also works for the Better Business Bureau as an arbitrator for consumer disputes.



At the lucheon, the Columbus Lawyers' Club also made presentations to winners of the club's essay contest dealing with the theme "Freedom has a name: The Bill of Rights." Winners were students Anna Burdeshaw, Steve Jenkins, Aun Lor, and Susan Meine.

Fort Benning's OSJA also sponsored an essay contest for students attending Fort Benning schools, which dealt with the same theme. U.S. Savings Bonds were given to winners Carolyn Parker, Doletha Brown, and Marion Dame. Additionally, Frank R. Loyd School won the "We the People Award" presented to the Fort Benning school with the best participation in Law Day.

U.S. District Court Judge Duross Fitzpatrick was the guest speaker. He entertained the attendees with his remarks on Law Day.

Law day activities also included the Law Day Golf Tournament held May 3 at the Follow Me Golf Course on post.

Award winner retires

"If we desire respect for the law, we must first make the law respectable."
– Henry Ward Beecher

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

The Office of the Staff Judge Advocate will say goodbye to a trusted comrade.

Charles R. Howard, this year's Columbus Bar Association's Liberty Bell Award recipient, is retiring after more than 45 years of active federal service, both active duty military and civil service.

Howard spent his time in the Army from January 1945 until December 1966 and achieved the rank of sergeant major. His duty assignments include Japan, Korea, Philippines, and Alaska. He finished his active duty career as the Fort Benning U.S. Army Infantry Center Staff Judge Advocate Sergeant Major.

In February 1967 Howard entered the realms of Civil Service as a legal administration aide, a position that was later upgraded to a legal technician. In 1976, he reclassified to a paralegal specialist.

"He had a tremendous background to bring in here," said Maj. Donald G. Curry Jr., chief of the Fort Benning Criminal Law Division.

"When I got here," said Curry, "I realized in very short order that I had a priceless gem. He is not a lawyer, but functions at the level of a lawyer. It was like having an extra lawyer at my disposal."

Howard's knowledge of military law is all-encompassing, according to Curry, because Howard has been working with military law for more than 45 years and has worked extensively with all six updates of the law manuals since the Articles of War and the 1928 Manual for Courts-Martial, U.S. Army.

> "I realized in very short order that I had a priceless gem. He is not a lawyer, but functions at the level of a lawyer.
> — Maj. Donald G. Curry

Howard's knowledge of the law, his ability to communicate his knowledge to others and his dedication to both the Fort Benning community and the Columbus and Phenix City communities helped him to win the highest award given to a member of the legal field by the Columbus Bar Association.

Howard was nominated by office peers to Capt. Doug Dribben, Fort Benning's Law Day coordinator who, in turn, submitted his name to the association for review.

"It was his overall service to Fort Benning and the community that got him the award," said Dribben. "Looking at his service record, there was no question that he would win.

"Everything that his peers, both past and present do is a direct reflection on Mr. Howard," said Dribben.

Making the law respectable is what Howard has attempted to do, according to his peers at SJA. An attempt, they say, that was successful.

Catching bass depends on proper lure presentation

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
1988 Outboard Marine Corporation

"Bass are spooky, a lot more spooky than people think. One loud splash of a lure into shallow water can frighten a fish into not taking that lure."

That's how well-known bass tournament pro Guy Eaker described the elusive quarry upon which his occupation is based, and how the fish's wariness dictates his fishing strategy.

"Catching bass today is not so much having the right lure as presenting that lure properly," emphasized the Evinrude Outboards Pro Staff angler.

"I try to make all my presentations as light as they can be. I don't want the lure to crash loudly into the water; I want it to drop in like a leaf."

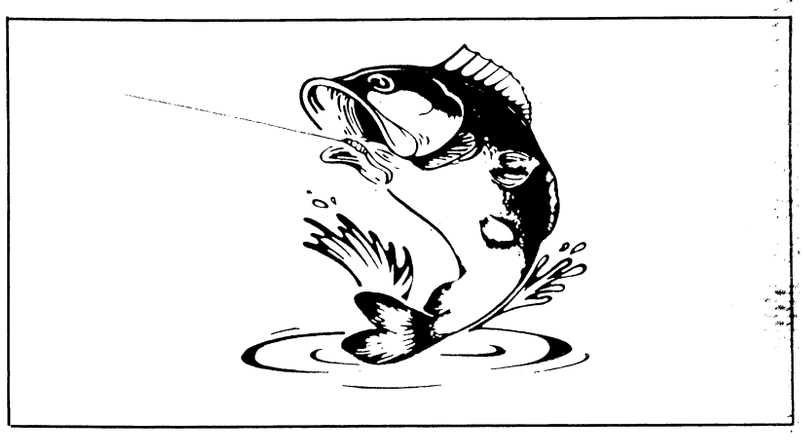
The instant it touches down, however, Eaker started cranking, especially if he's using a spinnerbait, his favorite lure.

"I don't let the lure sink at all," he explains. "To me, a spinnerbait sounds like a shad fleeing from a predator, so I pull it with my rod tip when it first touches the water to make the blades start turning.

"That way, it stays on the surface and sounds much more natural. As I pull, I also start reeling."

Eaker advised fishermen to select an individual target on each cast, but then cast so the lure actually lands beyond that target.

"By selecting a specific twig, branch, or log, you improve your accuracy and increase your awareness," the Evinrude pro explains, "but you cast past it so you don't spook the fish.



"You bring your lure up to and beside the target. I believe 80 percent of the strikes we get from bass are reaction strikes in which the fish never studies the lure at all. It hears the vibrations approaching, the fish either gets spooked and moves, or at least does not bite."

Because he does a lot close-target fishing with spinnerbaits and worms, Eaker does a lot of underhand casting. With his pitch-type casts, the lure remains close to the water and is easier to control.

"As fishing pressure increases, accurate, light-touch casting is going to become more and more critical," Eaker said. "The more pressure bass receive, the tighter to cover they hold.

"Using the right lure is important, but often, several different lures can usually be used in the same situation. What's important is not the lure, but rather, how you present that lure to the bass."

To help keep your outboard motor running smoothly all season, OMC recommends the use of OMC Engine Tuner. Available in a 13-ounce spray can, it removes gum and varnish build-up and cleans excessive carbon deposits from rings, pistons and ports when sprayed through the carburetor of a running motor. OMC Engine Tuner is available at most Johnson and Evinrude dealers.

Tips for fishing on hookless lures

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

In a sport where success is measured by the weight and number of bass caught, it hardly seems reasonable the bass tournament pros would ever consider using lures without hooks.

This is exactly what many of them do at every tournament.

"It's a technique we use in practice simply to locate bass," explains Johnson Outboards Pro Staff angler Randy Dearman. "The bass will hit the lure, but because it doesn't get hooked, the fish isn't spooked and does not move to a new spot.

"Because it does strike, however, we can pinpoint its location and go back during the actual tournament and frequently catch it again."

Dearman and other tournament anglers will take the hooks off any plug the bass seem to be biting, as well as bend barbs back on other lures like jigs and plastic worms.

"If you actually hook a bass, play it and then handle it to release it, you're really putting a lot of stress on the fish," the Johnson pro continues, "and your chances of actually catching the same fish the next day are really reduced.

"A lot of inexperienced tournament anglers get so excited about catching bass in practice they completely wear out the very fish that might win the tournament for them."

Even if they don't see the bass that hits their hookless lures, the pros can often tell the approximate size of the fish.

"With a worm or jig, you can tell if it's a large or small bass by the way it pulls," Dearman explains. "A big bass feels heavy on the line, as if it just sucks in the lure and doesn't move much. A smaller bass has a more active strike and pulls in short jerks."

Dearman has also come close to landing bass on his hookless lures, although he tried not to.

"I was fishing a big topwater plug on Toledo Bend," he remembers, "and a four-pound largemouth hit it. The fish really clamped down on the lure, too, because it jumped several times and never let go.

"I reeled the bass almost to the boat before it finally opened its mouth and dropped the plug."

Fishing a lure without a hook nearly backfired once on the Texas pro, as well. He was leading a bass tournament after the first day, but on the second day when the bass stopped biting his jig, he changed to a spinnerbait.

He made seven or eight casts with it before he realized it was one of his practice lures without a hook.

OMC offers a personal floatation device designed specially for bass fishermen. It features arm holes generously cut for ease of movement, and adjustable side laces to keep anglers cool in any weather. The vests are available in Johnson and Evinrude colors to match your favorite brand.

Dance troupe gives Filipino flavor to performance

By Margaret L. Kambitz
30th Adjutant General Battalion

Members of 30th Adjutant General Battalion, under the command of Lt. Col. Peter R. O'Connor, attended a performance by a Filipino American dance group May 3 in the Battalion Auditorium. This performance was coordinated through the efforts of Gilda Diolosa, William Thomas and the Filipino American Association.

Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza issued a proclamation declaring the month of May as honoring the Asian American/Pacific Islanders, which Thomas read prior to the performance.

The dancers wore colorful Filipino costumes, created and sewed by Diolosa. The narrator for the performance was Joan Cramer, daughter of Gilda and Johnny Diolosa. She gave explanations of the dances, and the accompanying music. The music had a Spanish flavor with a pulsating beat.

The first dance was the "Binasuan," performed by Cramer and Teena Zacarias. This dance is also of Spanish derivation, evolving from the Fandango dance. There are several variations of this dance, some performed with castanets, and some with the balancing of candles or glasses of water. The one performed at the program involved the use of one glass on the head and one in each hand of the dancers.

The next dance was the "Tinikling," performed by Sgt. 1st Class Jimmy Herras and Zacarias. Long bamboo poles were used in this dance, and the bamboo players were the Diolosas. The origin of this dance goes back to harvest time, when it was performed to keep the birds away, and prevent them from eating the rice. Movements are imitative of the Tinikling bird — a bird with long feathers and slim legs.

This dance is performed by dancers jumping in and out of the bamboo poles being clacked together in time with the music. The hands are clapped sporadically, and a noise is made by the dancers, a sort of "yip" or "shoo," to keep the birds away.

There usually is another dance performed by the group, called the "Carinosa," which typifies a Spanish courtship of flirtation, but the dancers who perform this were unavailable.

The Philippine music and dances that contain the Spanish derivations evolves from the history of the islands. It was first visited by Europeans in 1521 and was later named in honor of the future Philip II of Spain. Spanish rule lasted until the end of the Spanish-American War in 1898, when the Philippines ceded to the United States. Occupied by the Japanese during WWII, the country was made an independent republic in 1946.

Languages spoken are Filipino/Tagalog, Spanish and English, but there are numerous dialects so very different that even an Islander from one part finds it difficult to understand the dialect of another section.

After the performance, attendees were treated to a feast of authentic Filipino and Japanese food in the Central Initial Issue Point section. Artifacts, statues, and artwork were on display for viewing also.

Choreographers for the dances were Herras, Zacarias, and Cramer. They, along with the Diolosas, are members of the Filipino American Association, a group that keeps the cultures and traditions alive, and performs in the Columbus and Fort Benning community. There are more than 50 families in the group. The president is Dom Manio, who can be reached at 687-4290, 855-4452 or 855-4423, which is in Seale, Ala., but is a local call. Cramer can be reached at 545-4813 or 545-7411.

The group will be performing Tuesday in the Marshall Auditorium, building 4 at 12:30 p.m. This performance will include more dances and more performers to include Hawaiian dancers.

Benning students 'take to the woods'

Fort Benning Schools

Fort Bennings' fifth graders took to the woods recently as the Outdoor Education program began its fifth year of unique learning experiences for Benning students.

Almost 400 hundred fifth graders participated in the program this year. There were two sessions of Outdoor Education since students from the five Benning schools that have fifth graders were participating. Fifth graders from Dexter, Wilbur and Wilson schools were together at Victory Pond on April 18 and 19. Loyd and White schools went to Victory Pond on April 25 and 26.

There were sessions on nature study, songs about the environment, bird house construction, archery, rocks, using a compass, weaving, art activities using items found in the woods around Victory Pond, team building activities, and first aid. Students were in groups that rotated through all of the activities during their two days in their outdoor program.

The classes were taught by teachers, counselors, and media specialists from the five Fort Benning schools as well as members of the Fort Benning community. Physicians from Martin Army Community Hospital taught the first aid classes.

Classes did not end when the sun went down. There were songs and stories and several evening activities. Students had brought their gear with them, and they spent the night in the Albanese Barracks.

The second day began with a wake up call from a platoon drill sergeant, breakfast in the mess hall, and a return to Victory Pond for more outdoor activities.

"Our outdoor education program offers our students many opportunities to our students that could not occur inside their regular classrooms," said Glenn Hughes, Assistant Principal at Loyd and McBride Schools who served this year as coordinator of the Outdoor Education program.

"The total cooperation that we received from the military community, particularly from representatives of the Infantry Training Center, and the involvement of so many of our Fort Benning Schools' staff is what has made a program like this possible. We believe that the things learned in the program extend far beyond the curriculum of the program itself. These fifth graders have made friendships that will last them into their time at Faith School next year and for many years to come."

Military spouses have their day

By Wanda Campbell
Bayonet community writer

Military spouses face many challenges as they share the lifestyle their spouses have chosen.

The Secretary of Defense Richard Cheney has declared today Military Spouse Day in recognition of the contributions spouses make to the effectiveness of the armed forces.

In the "old days," they loaded muskets and walked into the frontier behind wagons. Today, they still follow their soldiers into new frontiers as they travel to duty stations in foreign countries.

Often, they are called to fill the positions of both father and mother while their spouse goes away for weeks at a time to another duty assignment or to face the threat of war in a far-off land.

In today's military, not all spouses are wives. During the recent events in the Persian Gulf, husbands who were managing families alone were noticed.

As we recognize the heroes of Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm, let us not forget the spouses who ran the support groups, consoled children and kept the home fires burning for our soldiers.

'Rhymes' reasons with youth

By Wanda Campbell
Bayonet community writer

Nursery rhymes set to music provided the backdrop for a look at the contemporary issues facing today's young people when the Youth Ensemble Atlanta presented "Rhymes and Reasons" April 28 at the Youth Services Center Ballroom.

In a two-act production, the ensemble addressed the issues of child abuse and neglect, the drug problem, gangs, and talked about setting and reaching for goals. "Meeka Jones" was about the evils of gossip. "Mary Mac" told of the children who are forced to grow up too fast and too soon. "PK" tried to decide who was to blame when a girl becomes pregnant.

"Let me tell you," said Cheryl Hall, "I cried, I laughed, it was great. It caught the attention of even the little kids. The way they took children's nursery rhymes and turned it into a message, it was something."

More than 150 people attended the production by The Youth Ensemble Atlanta. The group is made up of 22 members ranging in ages from 8 to 18. They are directed by Freddie Hendricks.

"We had a question and answer period after the show," said Rhonda Tillery of Youth Services, "so that the kids could ask the actors about themselves. These children are so disciplined. I know they have to keep good grades to be part of the group."

SPIRITUAL

Counseling available to overcome secret fears

By Debra Galle
USAIC Chaplains Office

A voice in the night whispers her name.

Filled with unexplained terror, the woman jolts out of sleep looking for the origin of the voice. She soon realizes the voice belongs only to the night — part of her own personal puzzle of dreams and distant memories.

Toleration for nightmares is one of her many strengths. She knows the morning will come eventually — filled with sunshine and people to help her hide the frights of the night. She can forget about the seemingly "silly" dreams and put on that familiar happy face.

But lately the dreams are more frequent and disturbing; the happy face needs more preparation and is less convincing. The voices are more aggressive; nightmare dramas are move vivid and realistic.

Days are more tiresome, evenings are impossible.

Some call her an over-achiever. She is one of those busy people who is usually asked to accomplish something because she is known for getting things done.

She is a cookie-baker, group leader, volunteer, career woman, housewife all rolled into one harried figure seen only as she darts from one commitment to another.

Deep inside, there is a scar from the pain of a child. The child trapped within this woman forever laments in pain, shame and torment.

This woman could be a character in a novel or movie. Perhaps she is a woman living in the rough part of a large city. She could be your neighbor, your friend, or your sister.

She could be you.

Statistics estimate that one in three women and one in every six men are victims of childhood sexual abuse.

Many victims of child abuse experience many symptoms which in themselves are cause for pain and worry. They may feel as if they have spent most of their lives thinking they are "crazy."

Perhaps they have sought counsel only to be told that they have no hope for cure, and may only learn how to "deal with" their pain.

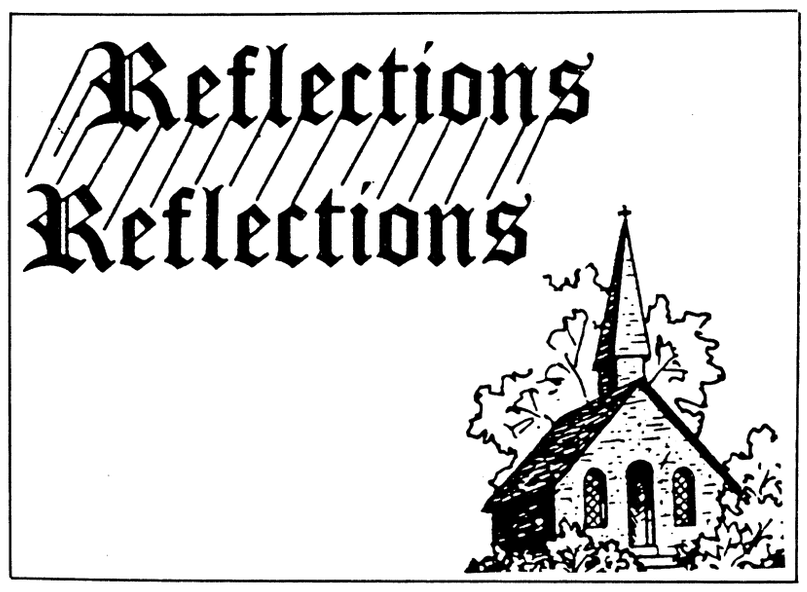
Many have large patches of childhood memory that are completely blacked out. They find it easier to chase curiousity away by ignoring the discomfort of thinking about it.

Self-preservation blocks the memories. The hurting, wounded child within victims does not grow up.

How do you know if the reason for your discontent is a deep problem from the past?

Who is a victim?

Most victims suffer from low self-esteem and self image, problems in relationships and sexuality. They may have difficulties in expressing emotion and have psychologically-based physical symptoms and illnesses.



Victims may also feel ugly inside and have a sense of worthlessness and helplessness. They have a tendency to sabotage their own success because they often believe they don't deserve good things.

Trust is a low commodity among sexually-abused victims. They may have a sense of isolation and difficulty dealing with authority figures.

Although surprising news for many, the hurting can end and healing is possible. Dozens of people have taken the opportunity to join a support group fro adult survivors of sexual abuse, offered through the Fort Benning Chaplains Family Life Center.

Many become survivors instead of victims.

If you or someone you know may benefit from this support group, call 545-1760, 545-5301, or 545-2017. A 10-week abuse group will start on May 21 from 12 p.m. until 1:30 p.m.

'Best Things' free at Benning

By USAIC Chaplains Office

"The Best Things in Life" is actually the title of a unique, professional musical program presented by a group called "Showtime."

The USAIC staff chaplains and the Family Advocacy Center have arranged this opportunity for families to enjoy a night out together.

"It is a privilege to present this program to Fort Benning families at no cost to them," said Chaplain (Maj.) Richard Roggia, Chaplains Family Life Center chief. "The show is designed to be a fun-filled evening for the whole family."

The Showtime Company is described as one of the finest college performing groups in the United States.

Showtime Company has performed throughout the United States, Canada, South Africa and the British Isles since 1979. Last summer, the group completed a five-week tour to England, Scotland, Ireland and the Isle of Man.

Young voices send tunes filled with more than just comfortable melodies; these are the memory making kind.

A free performance will be given Monday at 7 p.m.

This is the last chance to request tickets, call the Chaplains Family Life Center at 545-1760 or 545-5301 or 545-2071.

OPERATION PROUD RETURN

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Soldiers who participated in Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm are getting more than "thank you" from fellow Americans.

Organizations across America are offering returning troops various discounts and perks ranging from vacations to discounts at hotels, motels and resorts.

Here is a sampling:

● Christmas for DS soldiers - It may be late but Christmas can come for the troops who had to wait. Missed Christmas last year? For many "it just wasn't the same" because loved ones were in the Persian Gulf. The Christmas Tree Company, based in Molalla, Oregon, would like to say THANKS to all of our troops who gave up their holidays to answer their country's call to serve in the Persian Gulf, by making available fresh-cut Christmas trees. A fresh cut Christmas tree can be delivered to your home via UPS to be enjoyed when the families are reunited. The Bartels are making this service available for $15 plus shipping. (Shipping costs depends on destination). Normally during the Christmas season the trees are priced at $40 to $45. One dollar of the proceeds of each tree purchased will be donated to the surviving relatives of those who lost their lives in the war. The Bartels have kicked off their campaign by sending a beautiful tree to Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf and family. The Bartels are presently taking orders, and depending on the demand, they will try to make trees available from now until all our troops are home. For more information, phone 1-800-336-7557.

● Hilton International — To celebrate the end of "Operation Desert Storm," Hilton International will offer a 50 percent discount off published room rates at all Hilton International hotels in the United States, Canada and the Caribbean. Called the "Military Great Escpe," the program is available at all Hilton International hotels within the continental United States, all 10 Hilton International hotels throughout Canada, and at the Barbados, Trinidad, Caribe, Mayaguez, Caracas, Margarita and Cartagena Hiltons in the Caribbean.

DS soldiers can 'tie knot' in style

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

Many of the servicemembers who participated in Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm have returned - victorious, and eager to put the last few months behind them, and continue on to resume a routine life with work, friends and family.

The war in the Persian Gulf interrupted several plans, goal and dreams for the hereos - for some, even weddings had to have been postponed.

Now the that the war in the Middle East is all but a memory, several soldier may be ready to pick up where their lives left off when they were called to duty.

Several girlfriends and fiancees went on to plan their wedddings without the help of their soldiers. Even more were determined to wait it out, so that the couple could share in the experience of planning the wedding together.

For those couples who have "weathered the Storm," and wish to enjoy a nice wedding at a moderate price, Always and Forever Wedding Services offers several discouts and specials to Desert Storm soldiers and all military members.

"We are sensitive to the wishes for a lavish wedding and the necessity of a moderate budget," said Betty Jackson, Always and Forever president. "There is a need to have a happy medium between the lavish, television-production type wedding and the five minutes before the justice of the peace. Always and Forever provides that happy medium," said Jackson.

Always and Forever offers to help with all details of the event - from the flowers, minister, invitations and music to the food and music for the reception, even to providing the chapel and reception room.

"I found the service to be extremely warm, friendly and personal. Betty took care of every detail and kept in touch with me about new ideas and special services as she became aware of them," said Alicia Hart, an Always and Forever customer and happy bride-to-be. "All Victor and I have to do practically is just show up," Hart said.

Always and Forever also offers specials on welcome-home parties for returning Desert Storm soldiers, renewal-of-vows ceremonies, anniversaries, birthday parties and other special events, as well as catering.

For more information, contact Betty Jackson or Rosetta Hall at 322-1756 or visit the Always and Forever offices at 2200 Buena Vista Road.

Soldiers to receive free baseball passes

Army News Service

Most major league baseball teams will provide free tickets to military personnel this summer.

The passes are to recognize the contributions made by members of the military, according to Lisa Holland of the U.S. Army Community and Family Support Center.

Teams are providing tickets to active duty soldiers, Army Reserve soldiers and National Guard members who were activated for Operation Desert Shield/Storm. All major league teams were asked by the Office of the Commissioner of Baseball to participate in the military appreciation promotion.

Because each team is privately owned and managed, participation was at thediscretion of the individual ball clubs. 'Executive agents' have been appointed at military installations near participating teams' home parks. Personnel who are interested should call the agents to learn exactly what is available and requirements for obtaining free passes. The executive agent for the ball club and the commercial phone number is:

Springer's red-hot on 'Bixoli Blues'

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

A delightful evening is in store for anyone who attends the Springer Opera House's version of Neil Simon's Biloxi Blues.

As an extra point of interest for the Fort Benning Community, five out of a cast of nine are directly affiliated with Fort Benning, as either civilian employees, reserve soldiers or active duty soldiers.

The play tells the story of a young man, Eugene Morris Jerome (played by Al Cohn), and is struggle to find maturity, discipline, romance, and fantasy within the period of basic training in Biloxi, Miss. in the early 1940s.

Furthermore, Eugene encounters inner conflict because it is the first time he encounters anti-Sematism from his peers and he struggles to determine whether to defend his ancestry or fit in with the platoon.

Sgt. 1st Class Merwin J. Toomey (B.J. Clements) displays the hard-nosed, screaming, obnoxious drill sergeant that thinks he's got the answer to the meaning of life, but is not willing to share it with the rest of the world. Very similar to the drill sergeants of today's Army.

Toomey spends his days and nights harrassing Arnold Epstein (William Ennis), a young intellectual who Jerome suspects of being homosexual, but who ultimately ends up being his only true friend.

Joseph Wykowski (Chris Mulloney) and Roy Selridge (James King) are the two characters in the play that offer a bit more flavor to the atmosphere. The two are obnoxious and are lacking of any type of social etiquette, but are essential to the play's success because they provide the tension, by both verbal racial abuse, and the threat of physical abuse.

Donald Carney (James Rupp) is an aspiring singer whose dream is to sing at Radio City Music Hall.

James Hennessey (Ed Howard) provides the mystery to the play. He is a total loner, hard to completely figure out. Hennessey is called out of formation one day, implying that he had information or was a participant in an incident that occurred in the barracks latrine one evening.

All in all, this play directed by Dennis Friedman, a guest director from Cleveland, Ohio, and teacher at the University of Toledo, is worth catching at the Springer. The play runs through Saturday.

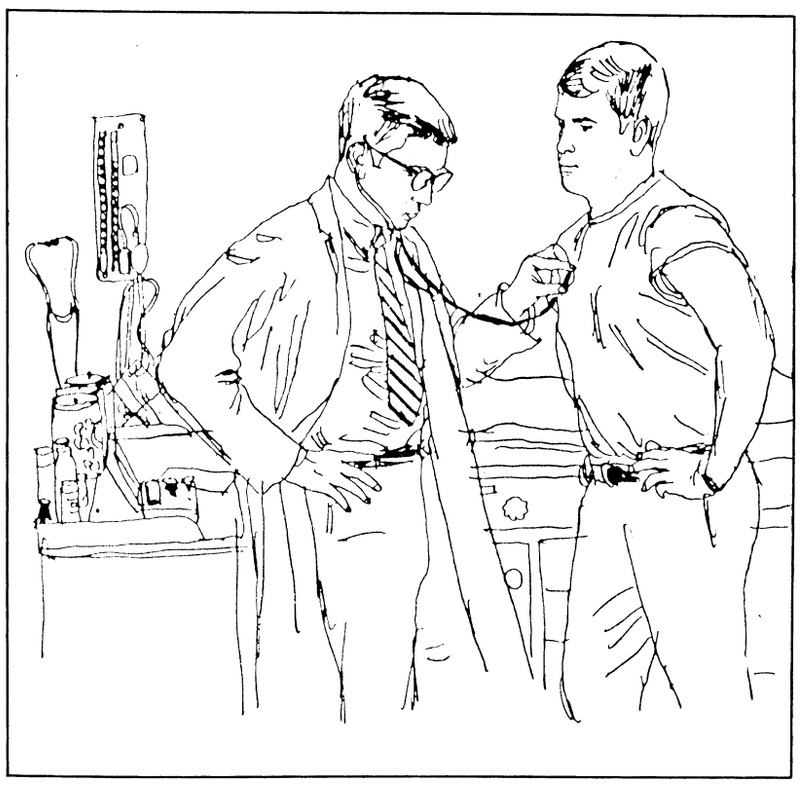
Signs, problems of hypertension

By Jose F. Rivera
Martin Army Community Hospital

Many people have the mistaken notion that high blood pressure, or hypertension, has something to do with "hyper" activity or tense nervous behavior. While there is a correlation between emotional stress and high blood pressure, the word "hypertension" means that the pressure at which the blood is pumped through the arteries is higher than normal.

Hypertension or high blood pressure, is a sign that the heart is working very hard to do its job of pumping blood through the arteries — the blood vessels that carry blood to all parts of the body. Blood pressure is a measurement of the force generated by the heart each time it beats or pumps. In between beats, the heart relaxes.

Thus, there is a measurement of pressure when the heart pumps; this is called the systolic pressure and it is the upper number of blood pressure — when the heart relaxes, there is another measurement called the diastolic pressure, the lower number. For example, you may see blood pressure recorded as 140/80. This means: 140 - heart at work - systolic; 80 - heart at rest - diastolic.



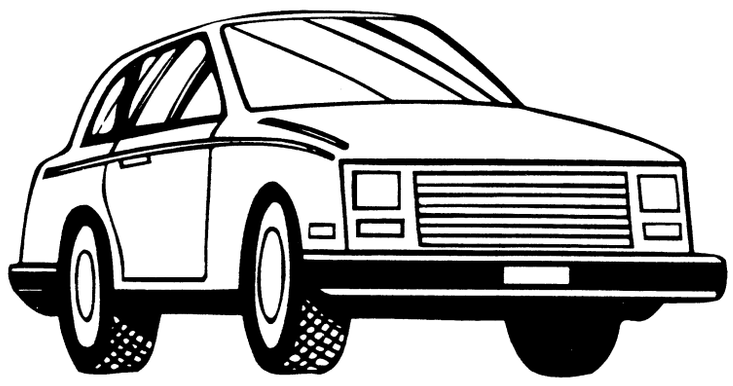
High blood pressure usually has no symptoms. Many people have high blood pressure, but do not know it. Because they feel well, they do not have blood pressure checks. If their blood pressure stays high, or untreated, damage to the blood vessels and organs of the body can occur. It is often at this point that high blood pressure has symptoms. Persistent headaches, fatigue, or dizziness are commonly associated with high blood pressure.

Complications from high blood pressure can be serious. The most severe problems are stroke, heart attack, heart failure, and kidney failure. It is very important to control blood pressure so that these problems do not occur.

No one knows exactly what causes high blood pressure. It is known that certain factors make it more likely you will have a blood pressure. These factors are a family history of high blood pressure, being overweight, smoking, or using tobacco, excessive salt use, little or no exercise, and stress.

You have no control over your family history, but blood pressure can be lowered by avoiding the other risk factors. Statistically, one of six Americans has high blood pressure, but for some reason, one out of four black persons has it.

Although most forms of hypertension cannot be cured, they can be kept under control. A doctor or health care provider may choose to treat high blood pressure through simple changes in diet, lifestyle, and or medications.



The health care provider can help outline a plan, but it's up to the individual to follow it. Adherence is the most important part of treatment.

If high blood pressure is present, take the medications as prescribed, follow a sensible plan of diet and exercise.

If you are at high-risk for hypertension, have your blood pressure checked periodically. Eliminate high-risk factors such as smoking, drinking, high salt intake. If overweight, follow a diet recommended by a health care provider. Adopt a less stressful lifestyle.

Gangs capture headlines

By James C. Rupp
Bayonet staff writer

Gang violence has seized the headlines in local papers.

When Charles Davidson Jr. was shot and killed May 1 in what is reputed by Columbus city officials to be a gang-related skirmish in Baker Village, it was not a fake murder like in the films "Colors" or the more recent "New Jack City", it was real.

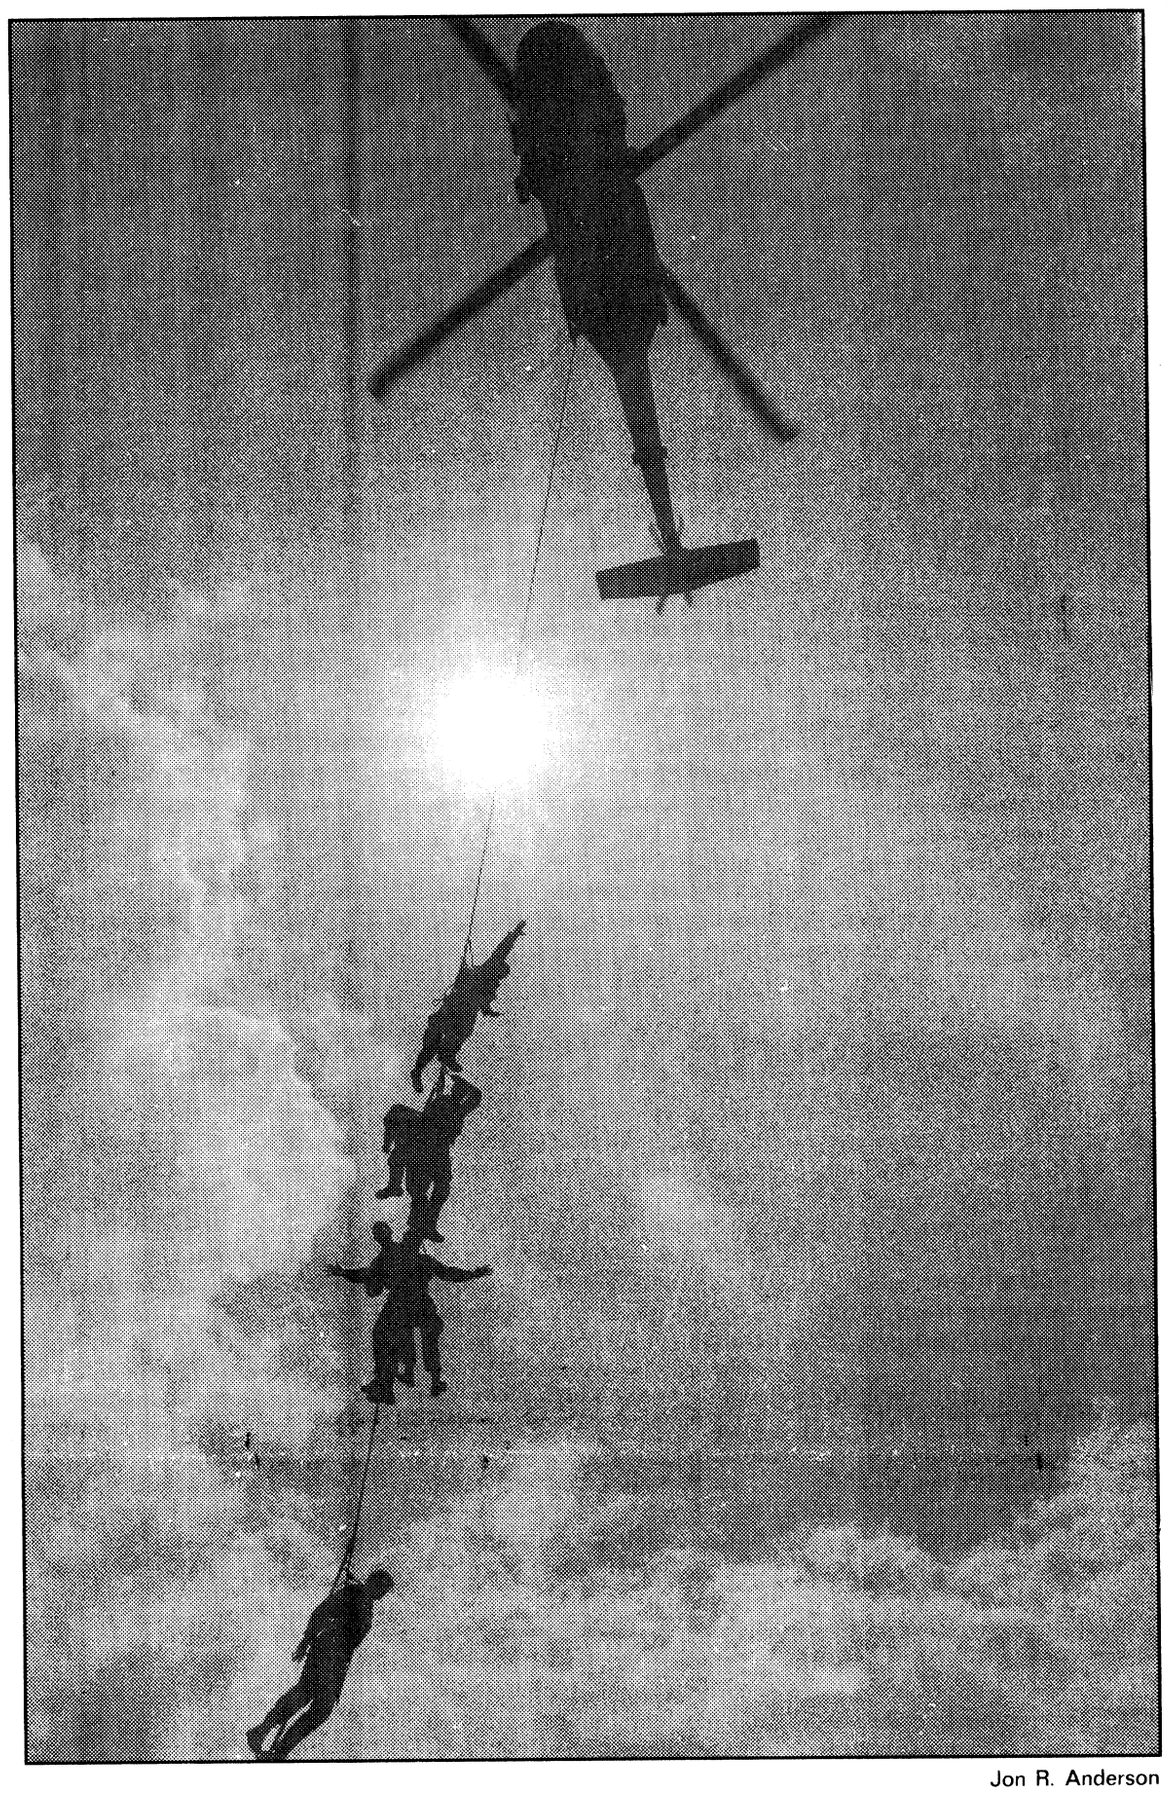
According to investigator Ricky McGowan, team chief for the Military Police Department's Juvenile Task Force, there are as many as 25 different gangs operating in and around Columbus and Fort Benning.

The task force is a three-member team, with McGowan being joined by two other investigators, Vincene Jones and Tony L. Taylor.

The members of these loosely knit bands all bear the same basic structures. Ordinarily, McGowan said, the gangs are formed along the same socio-economic, racial and territorial frameworks, and range in ages from 11 to 25 years of age.

"They join one gang as a form of protection from another," McGowan said. "This gang over here threatens or beats up on one of them, so they join this gang over here."

According to McGowan, joining a gang sometimes requires a rite of passage to prove worthiness and toughness .



Would-be members must sometime endure beatings from more experienced members of the gang or shoplift from a merchant; female members might sometimes be required to perform sexual acts for the males; and in some cases, the fledgling members must do a drive-by shooting on a member of a rival gang, McGowan said. He pointed out, however, that requirements vary from gang to gang.

According to McGowan, some of the primary gangs and their respective traits and territories are:

Benning welcomes asst. commandant

Ernst served as operations chief in Saudi Arabia

By James C. Rupp
Bayonet staff writer

The U.S. Army Infantry School's assistant commandant and Fort Benning deputy commanding general was welcomed to the post in a ceremony at Marshall Auditorium May 9.

Col. Carl F. Ernst was formally welcomed to Fort Benning by post commanding general, Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza, and post chief of staff, Col. John D. Fuller, in the ceremony, which was moved indoors because of inclement weather.

Ernst, who comes to the post with his wife, Linda, and their two children, Erik and Ashley, has just come from temporary assignment overseas. He served in Saudi Arabia as operations chief, Army Central Command, where he was chief of staff for the Third Army Command Post during Operation Desert Storm and Restoration of Kuwait.

Prior to that, Ernst held command positions at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., as commander of the Battle Command Training Program; 2nd Brigade, 5th Infantry Division, 3rd Battalion, 10th Infantry Regiment and 25th Reconnaissance/Long Range Patrol Company in Vietnam.

He has also served as chief of Tactics and director of the Combined Arms and Tactics Department of the U.S. Army Infantry School.

In his welcome speech, Cavezza said Ernst brings a wealth of experience and knowledge to his position, having served as a staff officer at nearly every level from battalion all the way through Army Group.

He was commissioned into the Army in 1966, following his graduation from Louisiana State University, and he holds a master's degree from Shippensburg University in Pennsylvania. Ernst's military training includes the Army War College, Command and General Staff College, basic and advanced infantry officer courses, Inspector General's Course and Unconventional Warfare Course, among others. He also holds a ranger tab, master parachutist's wings and both infantryman badges.

Ernst also comes with a score of decorations, including the Legion of Merit, two Purple Hearts, the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry, two Army Commendation Medals and a Bronze star with 'V' device, to name but a few.

Currently, Ernst is awaiting congressional approval for promotion to brigadier general.

AER contributions coming in slowly

Benning has met only 33 percent of goal

By Jon R. Anderson
Bayonet staff writer

Some units have not turned in any donations to this year's Army Emergency Relief campaign, said Fort Benning AER campaign coordinator, Sam Duggins.

As Fort Benning moved into the final half of the campaign, it had only met only 33 percent of its $205,000 goal, said drive officials. To date, only 17 of the 32 major commands on Fort Benning have reported to AER with donations.

"The campaign is not moving along as fast as we would like to see it," said AER campaign project officer, Master Sgt. John Phelps, who indicated perhaps all soldiers were not being given the opportunity to give.

Duggins encouraged each unit command to provide a way for its soldiers to contribute as soon as possible to avoid a last minute rush to meet the post goal.

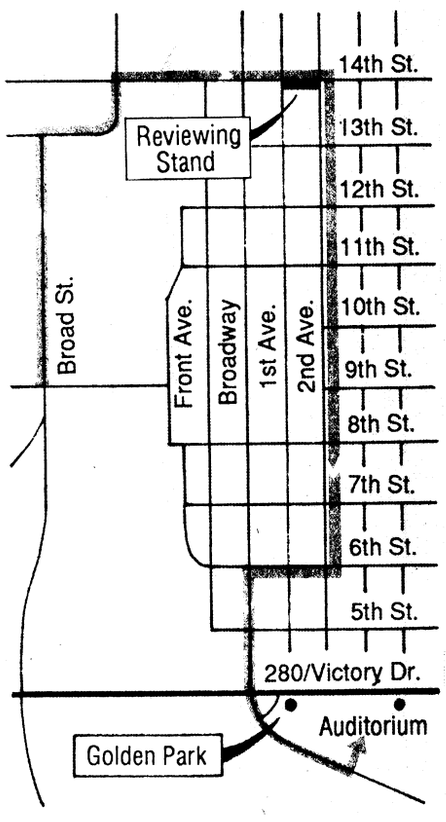
Fort Benning and the surrounding communities will celebrate Armed Forces Day Saturday with what is being called "the mother of all parades."

The event, which begins at 10 a.m., is one of the biggest in Columbus' history, according to parade organizers.

Fort Benning soldiers who participated in Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm will be in the parade as well as some of their equipment. The parade will include elements from the 197th Infantry Brigade – including the 18th Infantry's 1st and 2nd battalions, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor, 197th Support Battalion, Troop D, 4th Cavalry, and the 72nd Engineer Company – along with the 36th Engineer Group (including the 215th Finance and 533rd Transportation), and the 43rd Engineer Battalion.

More than 150 entries – 12 bands, approximately 2,500 military personnel, various types of military vehicles and veterans from World War II, Korea, Vietnam and Operation Desert Storm – are scheduled to participate.



The event starts on Board Street in Phenix City, crosses the 14th Street Bridge to Columbus and continues down Second Avenue.

The grand marshals of the parade will be representatives from four branches of service. Representing the Army is 1st Lt. Larry Aikman Jr. from the 197th Infantry Brigade. The Marine Corps representative is Gunnery Sgt. Antonio Rivera from Fort Benning's Marine Liaison Office.

Petty Officer 2nd Class Michael Caughey from the Naval Reserve Center in Columbus is the Navy's representative, and Airman 1st Class Perdelia T. Jones will represent the Air Force.

At noon, Fort Benning's Armed Forces Day Open House and the Association of the U.S. Army's picnic begin on Stewart-Watson Field.

The open house and picnic will include games, equipment displays, entertainment and food and beverages.

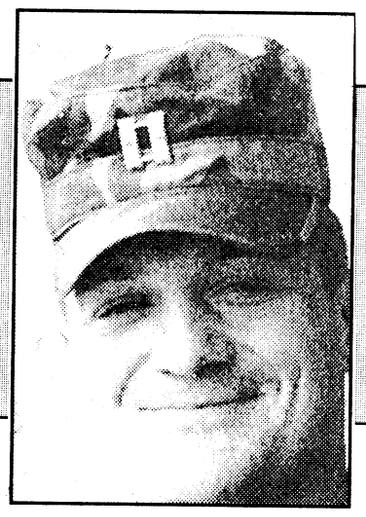
OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES:

Monday began Energy Conservation Week. In what ways do you conserve energy?



Elwin Gilchrist, Force Integration Management specialist, Directorate of Military Personnel — "I keep the electrical use down to a minimum and act responsibly."

Sgt. 1st Class Reginald Gundy, Company B, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "I simply base my energy needs on the needs of my family. When it's hot, I will crank the air conditioning, and when it's cold, I raise the thermostat. My own needs dictate the way I do or don't conserve energy."

Capt. Richard Polley, Company B, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "I use the air conditioner as little as possible during the peak or summer months."

Capt. John C. Allen, Company C, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "I turn off the lights after I use the rest room."

Staff Sgt. Samuel Miller, U.S. Army Medical Department Activity, — "I have no choice – I have to comply with Fort Benning regulations concerning energy conservation."

COMMENTARY

Mother of all parades takes place Saturday

By Clyde Snively

If it's true what they say about "Everybody loves a parade," then "everybody" should be very happy Saturday.

That's when the mother of all parades takes place in Phenix City and Columbus. Two thousand Fort Benning soldiers will be marching.

That's a lot of soldiers. Not as many as deployed from here for Desert Shield, but it's still a lot.

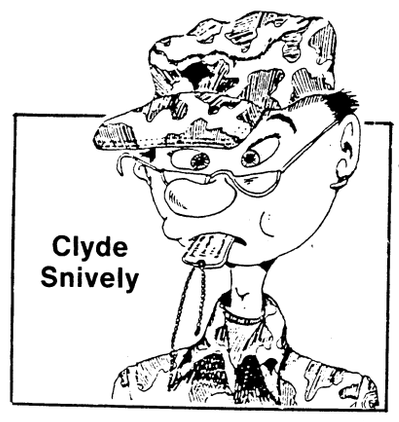
These soldiers will be followed by marching units and floats from the various organizations in both cities, plus several high school bands.

After the parade, everyone's invited to the Armed Forces Day activities on post.

Back to the parade and you can't please everyone category.

There are some soldiers, not many, but some, who say, "If this parade is meant to honor soldiers, then the soldiers should sit in the bleachers and the civilians should march."

I agree that having to march on a Saturday can be a nuisance. But to counter that, Monday's a training holiday so we'll be getting Monday off. I'd rather have Monday off anyway. Not as crowded at the mall.



Also, I get a rush marching in front of a lot of cheering people. It gives me goose bumps. So once the parade kicks off, it's really a lot of fun.

I also know that I'd rather be marching than watching a bunch of civilians march in my honor. Have you ever seen civilians trying to march? Have you ever seen a gaggle of geese? I know I wouldn't attend.

And further, the civilians — both on and off post — are working their butts off making this happen. From where we may be sitting, we don't see a lot of movement. But, I can tell you, there are many, many civilians involved in putting this together. That will become most evident Saturday.

I know there are still some skeptics out there. Folks who think walking three miles with an eight-pound, M-16 in front of thousands of people is a waste of time.

"Too much like work, man," they'll say. But then they'll turn around and carry 25 pounds of golf equipment five miles and call it fun.

I could see not wanting to play a trombone for five miles in hot, sweaty, weather while wearing a Kevlar helmet. But, for the most part, the parade's got to be a fairly painless experience, at least for infantrymen. Now medics and engineers might disagree since walking isn't their thing, but I'll bet they hold up as well as any grunt.

After the parade's over, we can all come to the Armed Forces Day picnic and chow down on knockwurst and draft beer (or draft soda) and watch fellow soldiers — men and women — do their thing in unit games.

I've always enjoyed the unit games because of the thrill I get in watching other people suffer and sweat. The tug-of-war is the best spectator sport since it has more sweating, grunting, aching people in a small cluster than any of the other activities.

Of course, if I had my druthers, I'd add things like combat football and that game you play with the giant ball. Both sports are always good for a couple of broken legs.

And for those soldiers who think civilians should be honoring them, wouldn't that be a hoot to have civilians playing those games. Now that I'd watch. Maybe I could get Bubba and Clydette entered. That would get them to bed early.

Well, like they say on the Armed Forces Day posters, "Eternal vigilance, the price of liberty."

Burba sends Armed Forces Day greetings

On the 42nd anniversary of Armed Forces Day, freedom-loving people everywhere will honor the soldiers of the Forces Command. When duty called many of you to the Persian Gulf, you proudly salute and said, "Sir, I am ready."

Now, as your commander in chief, I salute all of you who have so valiantly fought for freedom on foreign shores and those who have worked here at home in supporting roles.

If eternal vigilance is the price of freedom on foreign shores, readiness is the watchword to assure victory. As the crisis developed, you continued to train; and, when the hour of battle came, you were ready.

In just 100 hours of ground combat, you gave the world a magnificent victory over evil and aggression in one of the most decisive military victories in history.

I also salute the members of our sister services and coalition nations. Military personnel of 29 nations joined you to crush a tyrant who tried to overrun a weaker neighboring country, torture its people and destroy its resources. With your collective devotion and technical skills, you paid the price of freedom for every friend of America.

I also applaud your brave families who have stood by you — the parents who gave you life and values, the spouses who gave unqualified love and support, the children who waited at home while you fought to give other children in other places the precious gifts of freedom and hope.

Finally and most importantly, let us not forget our fallen comrades who gave their lives for a just cause — that others may live in peace and freedom.

Let us always remember the ultimate price these Americans paid and honor them by remaining eternally vigilant in Forces Command as "freedom's guardian."

Gen. Edwin H. Burba Jr.

Thursday is safety day

Fort Benning continues to save lives and preserve resources by fostering safe attitudes and implementing safe procedures. We are on track with our goal of reducing accidental injuries and losses by 10 percent.

To further advance our goal of providing a safe and healthful place for us to work and live, May 23 has been designated as Safety Awareness Day. If essential training or critical events preclude participation on this day, commanders may designate an alternative date.

Commanders and directors will plan and conduct programs relevant to their mission. The program should include a review of accident causes and participation in a variety of safety related activities.

We owe each soldier and employee our best effort in ensuring their safety.

Follow me, safely!

Defense secretary urges soldiers to purchase bonds

In 1991 we will "Celebrate An American Tradition — 50 years of U.S. Savings Bonds." During the past 50 years, Savings Bonds have made it possible for millions of Americans to meet many of their personal goals and to fulfill their dreams.

Much has changed between 1941 and 1991, but many things have not. Still with us are the needs to save money, to finance education and homes, to meet day to day expenses and to plan for retirement. U.S. Savings Bonds can help.

While Savings Bonds have had a long history of success, they are now geared toward the future — the next 50 years. U.S. Savings Bonds are no longer a fixed-rate security. Today's bonds enjoy the advantages of variable rates in a changing market, freedom from state and local income tax, ease of purchase and guaranteed safety. In addition, bonds purchased in 1990 or later offer the benefit to qualified buyers of tax-free interest if used for educational purposes.

When your canvasser contacts you, sign up for U.S. Savings Bonds or increase your current allotment by a small amount. You'll be happy you did.

President honors nation's military

I am delighted to express, on behalf of all Americans, the great pride, respect, and appreciation that we feel for you who serve in our nation's military.

Armed Forces Day is a well-deserved tribute to each of you.

With great courage and devotion, you guard the flame of liberty that was enkindled on these shores by our ancestors and that has continued to shine, ever more brilliantly, around the world.

Those who have gone before you have faced great hardship in bearing this responsibility, and many have paid the ultimate price for the cause of freedom.

Your willingness to put yourselves in harm's way in order to preserve the liberty that we so enjoy likewise merits our admiration and our deepest gratitude.

On this Armed Forces Day, America has added reason to be proud of our men and women in uniform.

The historic triumph of Operation Desert Storm has helped to renew our patriotism, and it has reminded us of something that you have never forgotten — that there are principles worth fighting for, and there are times when we have no choice but to defend them by force of arms.

Your dedicated service stands as irrefutable testimony to all nations of America's strength and of its unshakable resolve to uphold democratic ideals and respect for the rule of law.

I salute all of you in every branch of our military — the Army, the Navy, the Air Force, the Marine Corps, and the Coast Guard — for all that you have done and continue to do for our country.

God bless you.

George Bush

Cheney pays tribute to armed forces

As secretary of Defense, I'm proud to extend a well-deserved tribute to all of you who have been willing to put on our nation's uniform and go in harm's way for your fellow citizens.

This day is set aside each year to recognize the dedication, professionalism and sacrifices of our military. During the Gulf War, those qualities were displayed in a hundred different ways for all Americans to see.

Each of you can be proud of your accomplishments.

You are part of a victorious armed force that saved freedom for the Kuwaiti people.

Your courage and devotion to duty are second to none.

When I visit you stationed throughout our country and around the world, I am constantly struck by your professionalism and enthusiasm.

The all-volunteer force is a success, and the whole world now has enormous respect for your ability to get the job done.

These past months have been difficult and have called upon your reserves of courage and determination.

Your accomplishment in this struggle has brought renewed pride for our military and for our nation.

Your standards of excellence and superior performance have become a model for all Americans.

Driver scoffs at statement about post's traffic system

As one who drives into Fort Benning in the mornings, usually by way of the main gate on Benning Boulevard, I had to scoff at our Provost Marshal's statement in your May 10 issue (page A-4) in reference to how well the new traffic system is serving Fort Benning.

Let's see, now, if no one would use Benning Boulevard in the morning and would only use Lumpkin Road and the Bypass, the system would be great. Or, if I left home at 5 a.m., I might get right on through.

I guess it's all us nasty types who insist on using Benning Boulevard who are creating the problem.

I cannot see where any labor has been saved. At last count, there were three MPs (military and civilian) at the junction of Benning Boulevard and Lumpkin and Cusseta Roads.

There was only one at one time, under the old system. There seem just as many pylons in place now, although in different locations, than there were before.

There are only two lanes into the Main Post rather than the previous three.

I will need more than an "atta boy" to make me believe the new system is better for us drivers.

"Fort Benning Today" anchor Richard Brill (right) prepares for filming along with WLTZ camera operator Sarge Reed.

'Fort Benning Today' airs on TV-38

By Jon R. Anderson
Bayonet staff writer

"Fort Benning Today," formerly called "The Benning Report," is now being aired by WLTZ, channel 38, each Monday morning at 7:25, in between segments of "The Today Show."

The show will also continue to run on channel 32 of Alert Cable, the Fort Benning cable system, and will be aired periodically throughout the day.

According to Paula J. Randall, "Fort Benning Today" producer, managers at WLTZ expressed an interest in airing the program so military people living off post could see the show.

By assisting in the taping and production work, said Randall, WLTZ is able to provide a shortened version that will fit within their time constraints, as well as an improved longer version that is currently being seen daily on Alert Cable.

"Because of their advanced equipment and facilities, the show is beginning to look a whole lot more professional," said Spc. Richard Brill, anchor for "Fort Benning Today."

Brill also said, because civilians would now be seeing the show, he thought it might help bring the Fort Benning and Columbus communities closer together.

Burglar hits Olson Hall

By James C. Rupp
Bayonet staff writer

Olson Hall has a problem.

According to Capt. Richard Gregory, chief of the Military Police Law Enforcement Division, 11 larcenies have been reported in Building 399 since January. The rooms have been divested of cash, personal property and military equipment.

While the thefts on post are not limited solely to Olson Hall, Gregory said it is apparent to MPs the problem is more concentrated in the complex.

Gregory said a large part of the problem is personnel in the quarters are leaving their rooms unsecured, making themselves "victims of opportunity." In fact, during a physical security check of the building, Gregory said he found approximately 30 percent of the interior windows surrounding the building unlocked and, in some cases, open.

Sgt. John Franklin, an investigator currently working to solve the rash of thefts, said out of the 11 larcenies, only one case showed visible signs of forced entry. He said many of these problems could be easily avoided if individuals would simply take responsibility for keeping their valuables secure.

"Crime prevention is not primarily and exclusively a military police function," Gregory said. "It's like a dentist." he said.

"The dentist is going to tell you to brush your teeth, but he isn't going to follow you home and make sure you do. The MPs can talk all they want; they can tell you constantly to secure you valuables, but they can't stand over your shoulder and make sure you lock your doors. The responsibility falls upon the individual."

Gregory relates the case of one person who left his property unprotected. "He had lost his room key. Rather than spend $50 to replace the lock, he left his door open. One day he went to PT. When he returned, his room had been burglarized."

Franklin said a safe is available to soldiers for extremely valuable items (and those items considered "irreplaceable").

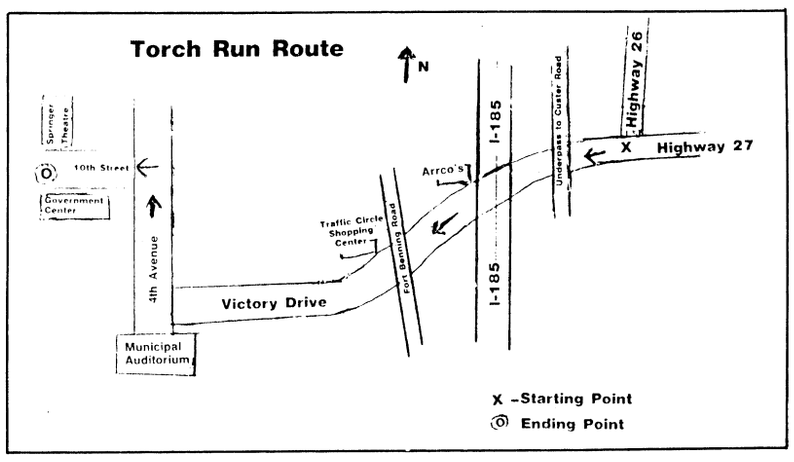
Hospital to observe training holiday Mon.

Martin Army Community Hospital

Martin Army Community Hospital will observe a training holiday Monday and will operate on a reduced basis. Most clinics will be closed, however the Outpatient Pharmacy and the Refill Pharmacy will be open.

Col. Vernon Spaulding, hospital commander, directed the hospital to observe this training holiday, officials said. All clinics will be closed with the exception of TMC 5, which will follow the weekend/holiday schedule, open from 7 a.m. to noon. The Outpatient Pharmacy will be open from 8 a.m. till 6 p.m. and the Refill Pharmacy from 9:45 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Officials said patients are encouraged to use the PRIMUS Clinic for non-emergency medical problems. Patients are seen without appointments from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. on weekdays. The hospital's Emergency Room will be open; but, if the care required is not a true emergency, waiting times may be long, officials said.



Post military police officers to participate in Torch Run Thursday

By Agatha Hudson James
Bayonet editor

Fort Benning's Military Police Activity will participate in the 1991 Georgia Special Olympics Law Enforcement Torch Run Thursday.

The run, which is t raise funds to provide better athletic training and sports competition for people with mental handicaps, begins at 7:30 a.m. at the intersection of Highways 26 and 27. Several military police officers will run one-mile legs of the run.

"We participate in this race every year to help raise funds for the citizens of Georgia who are mentally retarded,' said Staff Sgt. Rickey Williams, re-enlistment non-commissioned officer at the Military Police Activity.

"The Special Olympics is an opportunity for these individuals to enjoy the thrill of athletic competition,and we're happy to be able to help out."

Col. Fred W. Liebe, the post's provost marshal, along with one other military police officer will begin the race, Williams said. Two officers will run each leg, one carrying a torch and the other carrying the Military Police colors.

"When the runners reach Fourth Avenue in Columbus, they will be joined by other military police officers and run as a unit to the Columbus Government Center," Williams said.

A ceremony will be at the Columbus Government Center where the runners will pass the torch on to runners from the Jack T. Rutledge Correctional Institution.

May 24 is the opening day for the Special Olympics, which will be at Emory University in Atlanta.

Williams will be the Fort Benning Military Police Activity representative carrying the torch to open the games.

Staff Sgt. Larry Leutenegger checks over a pistol he just finished making.

Soldier makes pistol, wins Tin Cup match

By Charlene L. LaDay-Hill
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

Winning matches as a shooter for the U.S. Army Action Pistol Team is a tough task. But, it becomes an even tougher ordeal if the shooter is also responsible for making the pistol.

This is the case Staff Sgt. Larry Leutenegger, non-commissioned officer in charge of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit's Custom Firearm Shop Pistol Section and winner of the 1991 Tin Cup Action Pistol Shoot May 4 in Robertsville, Mo.

This event is limited to the top 51 shooters in the United States. Leutenegger shot a 1,190 x 150 for the victory.

"The competition was tough," Leutenegger said. "It makes me feel good knowing I did this well going up against the best in the United States."

Although Leutenegger did not have as much practice time as his competition, he still pulled off the win.

"I practiced everyday during lunch to maintain my shooting skills," he said. "Being a gunsmith and a shooter is like having two full-time jobs. But because I love doing them both, I give each my best effort."

Leutenegger's next major match is the Bianchi Cup in Columbia, Miss., Tuesday through May 25.

"The Tin and Bianchi Cups are the two most prestigious action pistol matches in the country," he said. "I hope to win the Bianchi Cup. I love to compete and win; that's my overall mission as a shooter."

Rifle team springs into competition

By Charlene L. LaDay-Hill
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

Members of the U.S. Army International Rifle Team sprang into spring competing in the Interservice Championship, Champions Match, and the French 300-Meter Grand Prix.

In the Interservice Championships, 16 U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit shooters competed against 14 representatives from the Army Reserves, National Guard, Air Force, and Marines at Hook Range April 30 through May 4.

The USAMU shooters not only proved they're the best in the Army, but they also showed they're the top shooters of the armed forces.

Spc. Thomas Tamas won the men's 3 x 40 with a 1,260.9 aggregate score. He also took second in the men's 50-meter English matches with a 701.4 total.

Sgt. Brad J. Carnes placed third in both the English and 3 x 40 finals with a 699.7 and 1,2655.8, respectively.

In the men's air rifle, Capt. David E. Chesser placed fourth with a 676.5 aggregate.

2nd Lt. Kristin Peterson won both the women's 3 x 20 and air rifle matches with 670.3 and 493.2 respective aggregates.

Capt. Rhonda Barush finished third in air rifle with a 481.3 and fourth in the 3 x 20 with 659.2.

Prior to the competition, the international rifle shooters participated in other events.

Fourteen U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit shooters competed in the Champions 50-Meter Match at Hook Range March 24 through 28.

The match attracted over 40 competitors from the U.S. Army Reserves, the Olympic Training Center, and the civilian sector.

"This event provides excellent competition and training for our upcoming Pan Am and European matches," said Maj. James E. Meredith, International Rifle Branch chief.

At the end of the individual matches, Chesser placed second overall in both the English and three position (prone, standing and kneeling) events. He scored an English grand aggregate of 1,189 and a three-position grand aggregate of 2,315. Also, Tamas won the English match with a grand aggregate of 1,193.

In France, USAMU's officers, Capt. David B. Erickson and Maj. Boyd D. Goldsby competed in the 300-Meter French Grand Prix. They were the only U.S. competitors out of the 63 shooters; 13 nations were represented.

Erickson placed second in the 3 x 20 discipline shooting a total score of 572, only two points away from first. Goldsby placed 20th with a 561.

In the 3 x 40, Erickson took third overall with a combined aggregate of 1,153. Goldsby placed 25th with a 1,128.

Erickson also placed 11th overall in the English match finals.

"I've always been confident about my skills as a 300-meter shooter. That's what I'm best at," said Erickson. "This is one of the two biggest 300-meter matches (the other one's in Zurich, Germany) outside of the world cup. This match was excellent preparation for me when I compete in the Counseil International Sports du Militaire coming up this fall."

As the Pam Am and U.S. team selection matches draw near, the U.S. Army International Rifle Team continues to practice and compete.

Fort Benning Teen Club making plans

Organization gets building

By James C. Rupp
Bayonet staff writer

The Fort Benning Teen Club is getting ready.

The club, first initiated by Fort Benning officials to give the youth who live on post a place to go and socialize, now has a building from which to operate. Now, all that needs to be done is to fix it up.

According to Billie Smith, Youth Activities director, Building 1796 is slated to be renovated to become the headquarters of the Teen Club. Recently, the building passed both the safety and fire inspections.

The club, which is open to all post youth grades nine through 12, is going to be open sometime in the summer, five days a week, Smith said. Those days will be dependent upon which days see the most use of the facility, possibly Tuesday through Saturdays once school ends, she said.

Inside the building there will be a variety of activities available to the teens. Smith said pool tables, board games, video games andtelevision will be at hand to keep the teens occupied. There will also be cassette players so club members can listen to music if they'd like.

"What we need now is teens who are really interested in the club — ones who will stick with it. We have set up a teen advisory council to help us establish some guidelines for the club.

"There have also been some rules already in the process of becoming official," Smith said. They are: a dress code that will be determined, no loitering, members will be required to carry a Youth Services membership card, no use of profane language and parental consent to join.

The last part, Smith said, is integral to the success of the club. She said parents will need to become involved if they expect their kids to remain in the club. For the outside functions alone, such as dances, they need one volunteer for every 18 attendees. Parents will be required to register their teen-agers for access to the club, so that the parents are aware of the standards expected by the Teen Club.

Smith is also looking for the youth to help once the renovation of their building begins. She expressed her belief that the clubhouse should be a place for youth, designed by youth; not adults. Smith also commented that she would be interested in finding a budding artist who may be interested in designing a mural for the building.

Other projects the club is looking into is a possible theater group, competitive events for the teenagers, an educational computer system and anything else they express interest in.

"We are willing to be extremely flexible," Smith said. "As long as the teens show enthusiasm and demonstrate some discipline, they can be left on their own."

Interested teens or parents should contact Smith at 545- 3070 or attend the next council meeting, June 8 at 4:00 p. m. in Building 1056.

29th receives maintenance award

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment received the Army chief of staff's Award for Maintenance Excellence Monday at 1:30 p.m.

Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza, commander of Fort Benning, presented the award to Lt. Col. John Spears, commander of the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment at the battalion's motor pool on Kelley Hill.

This marks the third consecutive year the 1st Battalion has been selected for the award during Armywide competition. The award is for excellence in the maintenance of some 373 vehicles (including 178 Bradley fighting vehicles and 83 M-113 armored personnel carriers). The battalion accomplished this even though a large number of its assigned personnel were deployed or otherwise engaged in support of Operation Desert Storm during this period. Its motor pool, with 175 military and 30 civilian personnel assigned, provided assistance and exchanged unserviceable vehicles with the 197th Infantry Brigade during the brigade's deployment to Operation Desert Storm. Also, the battalion assisted in the Georgia National Guard's 48th Infantry Brigade's mobilization.

The 1st Battalion is responsible for training infantry soldiers and leaders in the operation and maintenance of infantry weapons and equipment, providing training support to the Infantry School, and development of infantry weapons and land navigation doctrine.

The Ordnance Center evaluates maintenance facilities Armywide and categorizes them into light, medium, and heavy. The 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt. won in the heavy category. The battalion recently received the Department of Defense Phoenix Award for excellence in vehicle maintenance.

Gangs

and black as their signature colors: operate in south end of Columbus and Fort Benning, may sometimes wear dog tags with the number of assaults they've participated in emblazoned upon it; female counterparts are Girls In the Hood.

- Phi Sigma Lovers: Red, black and white; south end of Columbus and Fort Benning, tattoo with lightning bolt symbol; Phi Sigma Ladies are their ladies auxiliary club.
- Major Problems: Red and navy blue; operate around Steam Mill Road, Northstar Drive areas; big on drug dealing.
- Crips (several factions); colors vary; all over Columbus, involved in different types of crime.
- Bloods: Red and white; south Columbus, Azalea Gardens, Alpine Apartments.

McGowan said these gangs can be seen in any number of locations, including the shopping malls, teen clubs, parks, school dances, arcades and concerts.

"As far as being on post," McGowan said, "I've talked to a few of the gangmembers, and asked them about their activities on Fort Benning. What they told me was that for the most part they stay off of Fort Benning."

"They said, 'The MPs are everywhere,'" he said with a confident smile.

McGowan did admit, though, that sometimes the gang members will take a temporary refuge on post, falsely assuming that the Columbus Police Department cannot come after them here.

Steps are being taken, both on and off post, to do something about the gang problem. On Fort Benning, a teen club is being formed by the Directorate of Community Activities to give military youth a place to spend their time, and Fort Benning officials are hopeful that the club will keep them away from the gangs.

Individuals who want more information about the teen club should call Becky Carroll, Family Support Division chief, at 545-5931.

Captain Billy's—good eatin'

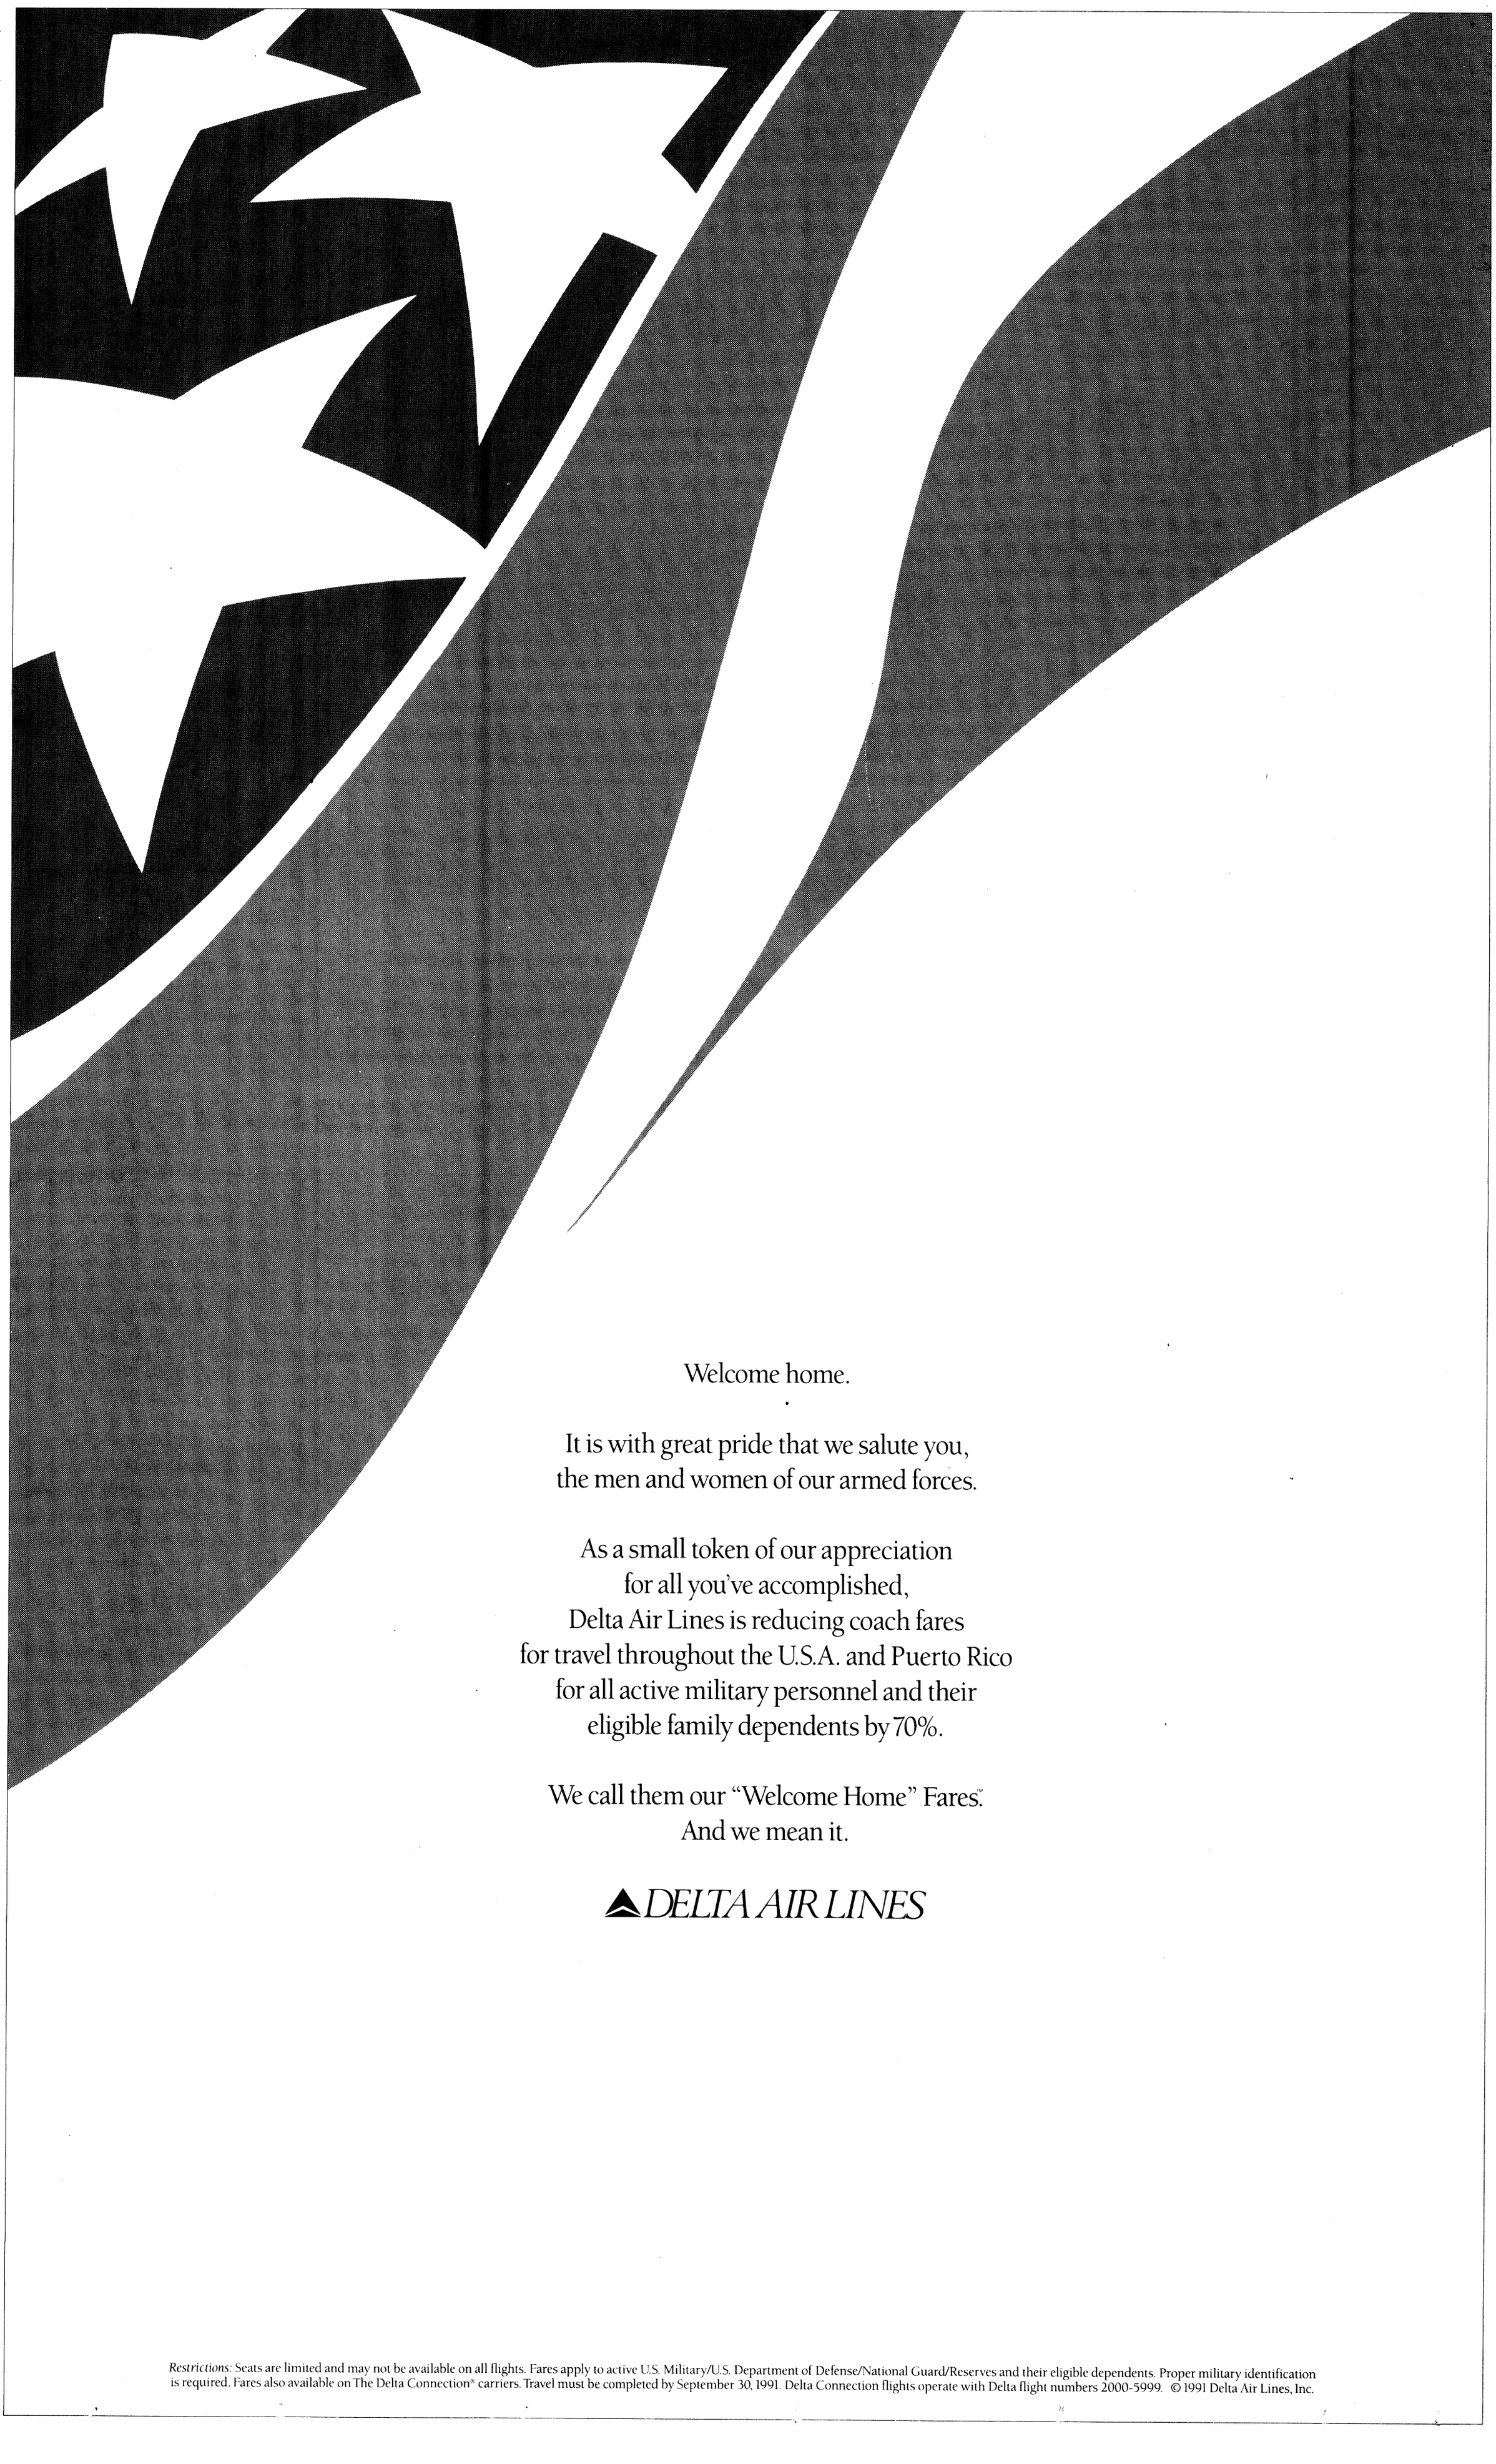
Mmmmm! No one who has ever eaten there would dare say Captain Billy's Fish House in Warm Springs doesn't have some of the best seafood around.

Located in the heart of the historic town, Captain Billy's Fish House brings freshness to the stale phrase "friendly atmosphere and service." It truly is a friendly, easygoing, family-style restaurant that does its best to treat you well and serve you right.

"We have great food, and we love to see our guests enjoy themselves," says Sam Minton, who co-owns Captain Billy's with Marjorie Orth.

Although the cozy, country restaurant is closed on Monday and Tuesday, it's ready to serve you fresh seafood -- most of which comes directly from Appalachicola -- from 11 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. and 5-9 p.m. Wednesday through Saturday and from 11:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Sunday. Senior citizens receive a 10 percent discount on Wednesday nights.

Captain Billy's specialties include catfish, crab legs and the popular Fisherman's Feast buffet, which features more than 20 scrumptious items and large salad bar. New items, including vegetable casseroles chicken, Italian dishes and pasta salad, have been added to the luncheon buffet to make it even better.



In addition to the buffet, there are single seafood entrees as well as entrees for those who prefer not to have seafood.

Considering all that you get at Captain Billy's, the prices are very reasonable — ranging from $3.99 for a child's Tadpole Platter to $5.99 for the luncheon/Sunday buffet and $10.95 for the dinner buffet.

On Friday and Saturday from 7-9 p.m., you can enjoy the live entertainment of a piano player who will play anything from country to Top 40 and even take requests.

Captain Billy's, which offers carry-out service, accepts cash, check, Visa, MasterCard and reservations for parties of eight or more.

As the restaurant's motto goes, quit your "beefin" and visit the Fish House in Warm Springs. ■

ASK THE JUDGE

By Howard O. McGillin Jr.
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q. I recently received a notice from AAFES that I had to pay them for three bad checks. My spouse cashed these checks at the PX. Each check was written by one of my spouse's friend to pay for a car we sold to the friend. Why is AAFES holding me liable when my friend's account did not have enough money?

A. As a soldier, you are given the privilege of cashing checks at the PX. It is important to remember, however, that the Army Air Force Exchange Service is not a bank. It is a Government instrumentality that serves the needs of soldiers and supports the Morale Welfare and Recreation activities on this post and throughout the Army. When AAFES loses money on a bad check, every soldier suffers a loss.

Army Regulation 210-60 governs check cashing abuse in the Army. If a soldier, or a soldier's family member, cashes a check in an AAFES facility that is later returned for insufficient funds, the soldier may be held liable to AAFES.

I recently asked an AAFES employee why they go after the soldier first. Her response was, "because the soldier has AAFES money." She also pointed out, quite correctly, that the soldier could take action against the person who wrote the bad check.

The bottom line, however, is that soldiers can be held liable for checks cashed by them or their family members, regardless of who wrote the check initially. Hopefully, you have seen the signs at the PX check cashing window stating the same thing.

If a family member is abusing the check cashing privilege, and the soldier is unable to control that person's activity, the soldier may file a disclaimer of check cashing responsibility with AAFES. If they are still a family member, and you have not filed a disclaimer, you, as the soldier, remain liable. Disclaimer forms are available from AAFES, or the Legal Assistance Division. Once filed, this disclaimer will cut off any attempt to recover checks cashed after the date of submitting the disclaimer. It is important to note, however, that the disclaimer does not work on checks that have already been cashed.

It is important to keep track of your personal finances. There are a number of Army programs designed to assist soldiers with their finances. One is the Army Community Services Budget Counseling program. If you are having trouble balancing your checkbook, they may be able to help. It is very important to avoid writing "hot" checks. They can ruin your credit rating, and under some circumstances, may even subject you to criminal prosecution.

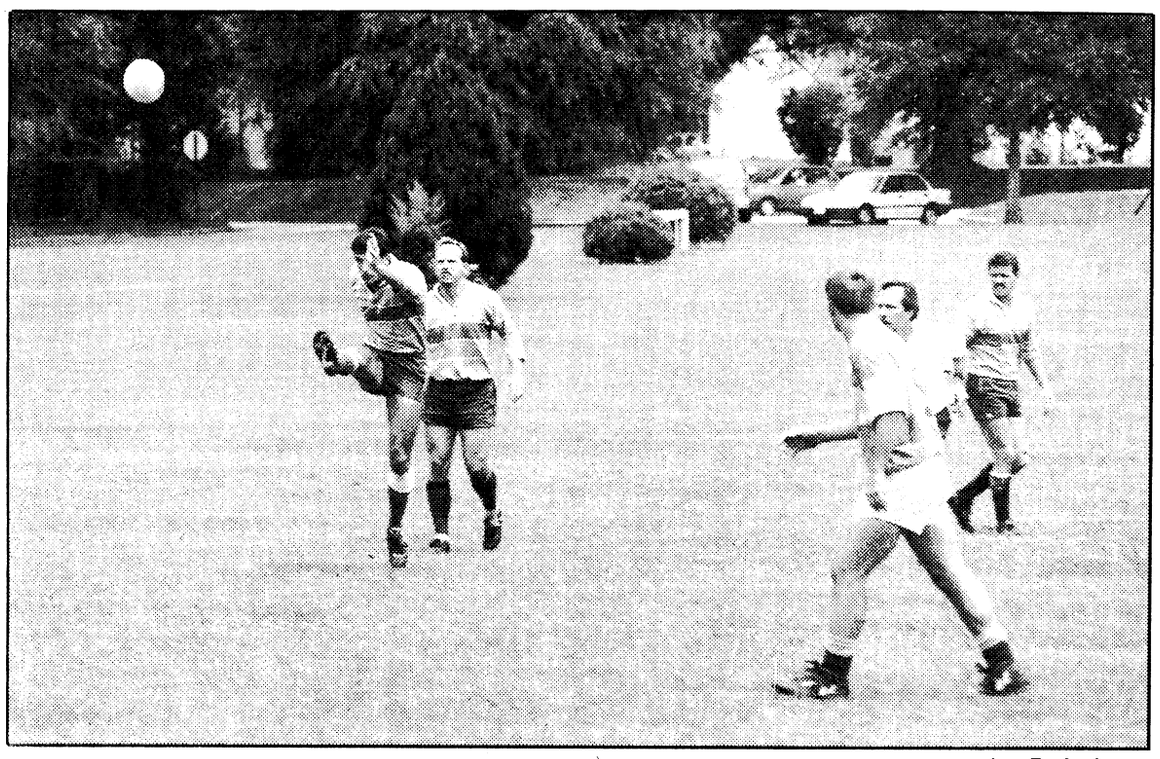
If you have questions, or a problem related to your checking account, you should contact either ACS at 545-5516, or the Legal Assistance Division at 545-3281.

MWR pays dividends to soldiers

Morale, Welfare and Recreation

Fort Benning's Morale, Welfare and Recreation Fund (also known as the Single Fund) is a centrally-administered organization of non-appropriated funds (not taxpayer supported) business activities run for soldiers, family members, retirees, and Department of Defense civilians working on the installation.

Businesses range from self-supporting operations such as clubs, bowling centers, golf course, car washes, equipment rental, the guest house, Distinguished Visitors Quarters and Visiting Enlisted Quarters to child development centers, youth services programs, gyms, two libraries, the Veterinary Activity and the Infantry Museum, which receives some tax support.



Single Fund earnings are paid directly to the soldiers and authorized users in the form of new or improved facilities, services, programs, and rental equipment.

Fort Benning's MWR operation is one of the more successful in the Army, which has permitted the post to reduce the impact of budget cuts, according to MWR officials.

Facilities, services, and programs are established based on the feedback from soldiers, MWR users, and family members. This feedback comes in the form of surveys, direct input from unit commanders, and from soldiers through their representatives on the Installation Morale Support Fund Advisory Council.

During the past year, more than 6.7 million dollars of locally generated non-appropriated funds have been spent on capital purchases or major construction projects for the community.

Post elects housing mayors

By Wanda Campbell
Bayonet community writer

Community mayors were recognized at a luncheon at the Main Post NCO Club May 7.

The outgoing mayors of the five Fort Benning communities were recognized for their efforts as their terms of office were ending and newly-elected mayors and vice mayors were recognized for the job they are about to begin.

Darlene Perry, coordinator for the Community Life Office, introduced the out-going mayors and with Col. John D. Fuller, post chief of staff, handed out certificates of appreciation signed by Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza, post commander.

Leaving their positions as mayors were Dana Pund, of the Custer Terrace, Upatoi, and Battle Park community, and Ann Ramirez of the Indianhead community.

Newly-elected mayors received a letter of congratulations and a gavel as the symbol of their office. They are Janet Bamford from Custer Terrace, Upatoi, Battle Park community, and Linda Matheny from Indianhead community. Mayors Sally Dover from the Bouton Heights, Davis Hill community, Estalla Ondeck from Main Post community, and Jacqueline Parks from McGraw community were elected for second terms. Also re-elected was vice mayor Sirintara Greene from Main Post.

The new vice mayors are Wanda Campbell from Bouton Heights, Davis Hill community, and Debbie Long from Custer Terrace, Upatoi, Battle community.

"The biggest problem the mayors face is apathy," said Fuller. "If we don't beat it, it will beat us. People need to realize it is a privilege to live on post, and they are expected to be partners in our community. We all share the burden."

Representatives from the community sponsor units, chaplains, and members of the Directorate of Community Activities attended the ceremony.

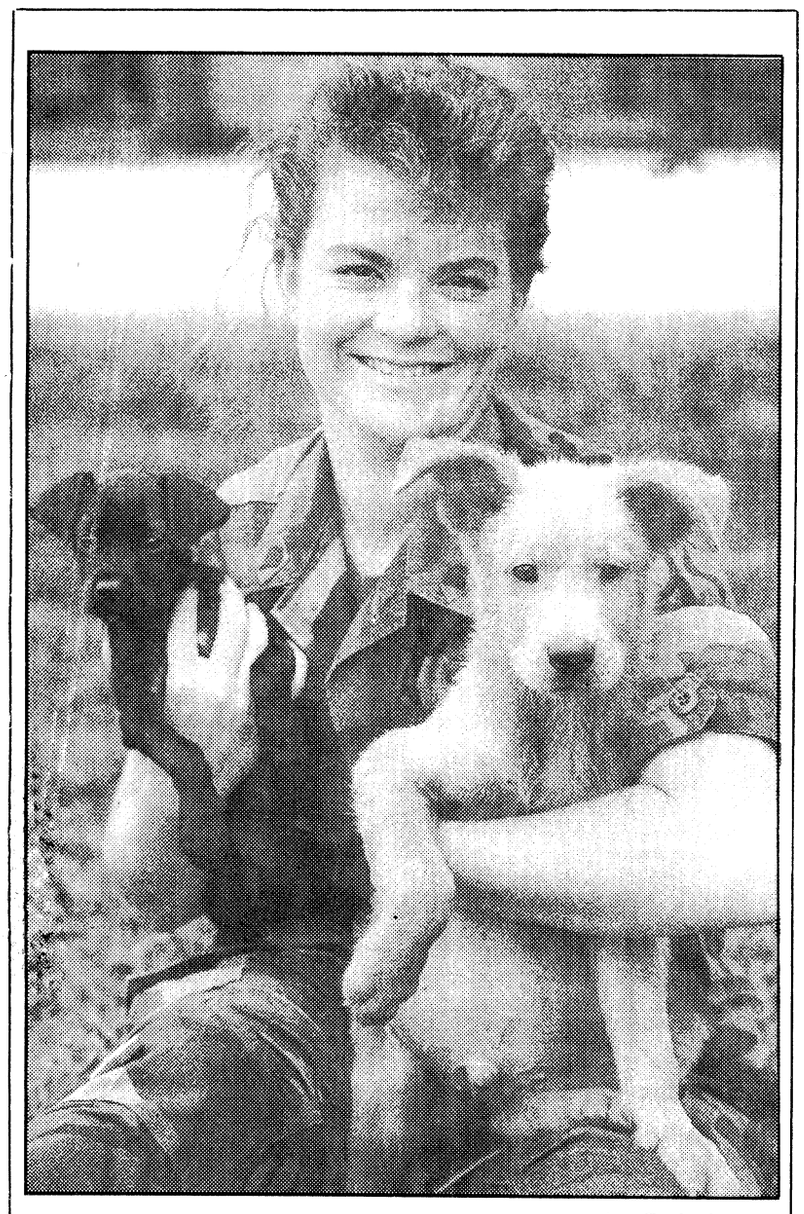
Wilbur students picnic

Fort Benning Schools



Red, white and blue ribbons, American flags, and banners set the stage as Wilbur School paid tribute to the Month of the Military Child. The evening activities included a family picnic, a celebration of the military family and the annual curriculum fair.

Parents, students, faculty and staff enjoyed hotdogs, provided by the Wilbur PTA, and other dishes brought by parents.

The activities continued as everyone was invited inside the auditorium where parents were entertained by students from each grade. The classes presented song, raps, poems and cheers that they had prepared to show their appreciation for Fort Benning's soldiers.

The entertainment ended as Felicia Hamilton, a Wilbur School fourth grade teacher sang, "God Bless the USA!"

After the assembly program, parents were invited to visit classrooms where students and teachers waited eagerly to share samples of the work that they have done during this school year.

Schools plan elections

Fort Benning Schools

Fort Benning parents will be heading for the polls Tuesday, 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. to elect school board representatives for the Wilson, Faith, Loyd, Dexter and White Schools as well as "at large" seats for President and Chaplain Representative. The Wilbur, Patch and McBride School representatives have one more year remaining in their two-year terms of office.

Parents or guardians who live in the student's immediate household are eligible to vote for the school representative in each school where they have a child in attendance. Votes for the "at large" seats may be cast by each sponsor only once.

Absentee ballots for eligible voters who are unable to vote on election day can be obtained if the parent has a legitimate and prior commitment. Ballots can be obtained by visiting the school's office until close of business Monday.

Voting will take place at each school, where a sealed box will be placed in a centralized location. When the ballots are counted, no fewer than three eligible voters will be present.

There are seven candidates running in the upcoming election. All of these candidates will run on uncontested ballots. The candidates are as follows:

President — Col. Joseph Trez

Chaplain Representative — Maj. Richard Garrison

Wilson School — Marvalene King

Loyd School — Capt. Barry Washington

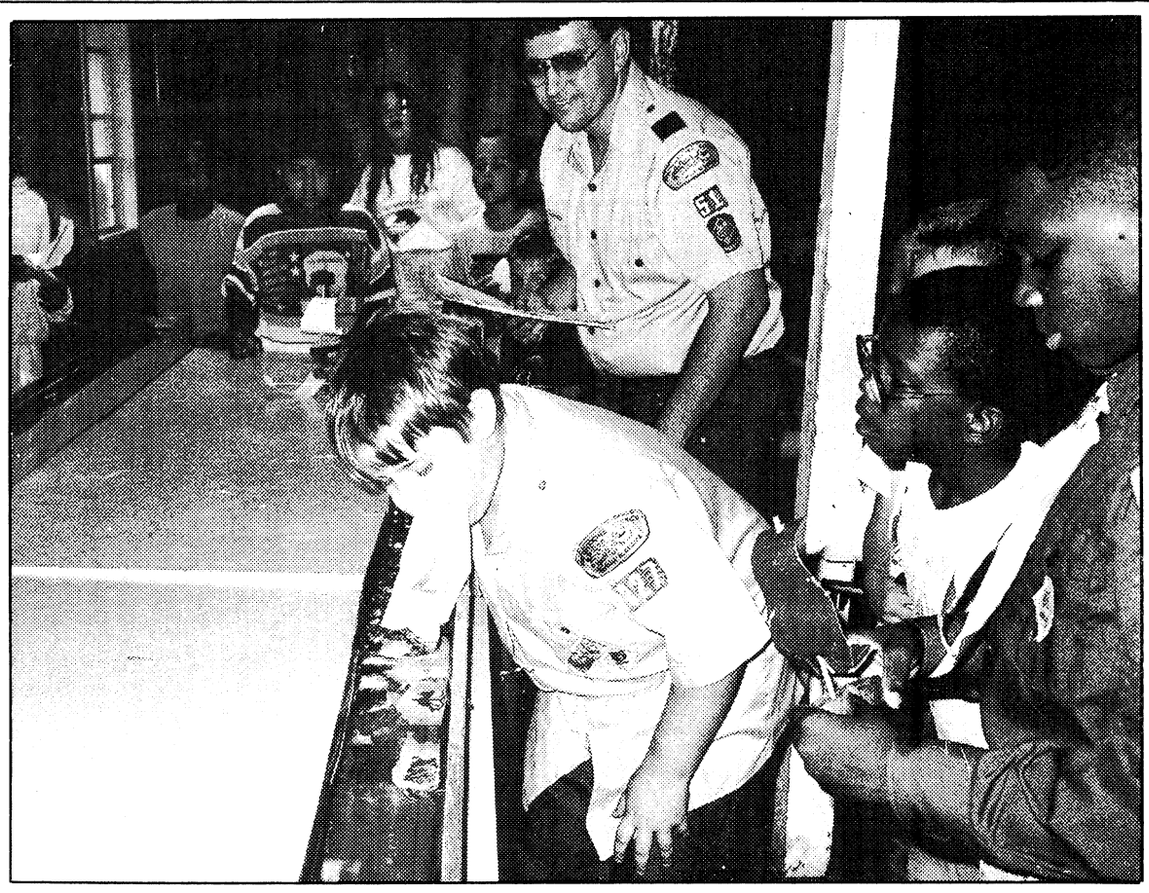
Dexter School — Terry Maschek

White School — Diane Boucher

Faith School — Kathleen Meade

Sixth-graders graduate DARE

Fort Benning Schools



Faith Middle School will graduate 171 sixth-graders from their DARE program Thursday at 11:30 a.m.

DARE is Drug Abuse Resistance Education. This program has been used at the middle school for the past two years. Students in this program, taught by Lt. W.L. Jackson, learn how to handle peer pressure and to say "no" to drugs.

Each student who went through the DARE program will receive a certificate, a DARE bumper sticker, and a DARE pin. The certificates will be presented to the students by Faith School's principal, Olin Harp.

Shelia Gale and Milton Abram from the Columbus Substance Abuse Services will be the guest speakers.

One group of students will share their personal essays on taking a stand against drugs; another group will demonstrate how they role-play the eight ways to say no to pressures to use drugs. All of the graduates will recite lyrics to the DARE song. Parents of those graduating students are invited to attend the ceremony.

SPIRITUAL

World war relief receives attention

By Gabriele Sonnenberg
USAIC Chaplains' Office

May 26 has been designated War Relief Sunday, according to officials at the Chaplains' Office.

World Relief, an Interdenominational Relief Agency of the National Association of Evangelicals is coordinating a massive relief effort in war-torn areas in our world to include assistance to the Kurds in Iraq, Iran and Turkey.

. The church is composed of men and women who have been called to be kind and goodwilled-toward mankind in general and in giving of alms. Since many people are desperately in need of aid, such as money, food and clothing, more fortunate nations are called upon to help.

In turn, realizing the magnitude of the plight experienced by the refugees and others affected by warfare throughout the world, Chaplain (Maj. Gen.) Matthew A. Zimmerman, chief of chaplains, designated the offerings given during May 26, at the military chapels to be donated to the World Relief Agency. Zimmerman encourages to give generously.

Christians celebrate Pentecost Sunday

By Gabriele Sonnenberg
USAIC Chaplains' Office

The Day of Pentecost will be celebrated Sunday.

Pentecost is the great climax of the Easter — Pentecost season. On this day the fullness of God's promises in Jesus Christ are remembered and celebrated.

Before Jesus Christ was crucified, resurrected and ascended, he promised the disciples a helper, the Holy Spirit, who would teach, empower and direct them.

According to the church, the Day of Pentecost changed the earth forever. The Holy Spirit transformed a small group of fearful men into a thriving worldwide church that is ever moving forward and fulfilling the great commission.

The visual environment of the church will reflect the great joy and festivity of the day. This day is also a most suitable time for baptisms, confirmations and renewal of the baptismal covenant.

Columbus Ledger-Enquirer

HONEST. MORE FOLKS FEEL THAT NEWSPAPER IS THE MOST BELIEVABLE MEDIUM.

We can't lie.

A recent study showed that more people feel newspaper is the most believable medium.

Not television.

Not radio.

Not magazines.

But why?

It's probably because we know that a newspaper lays it all out in black & white.

Right in front of you.

The places, the people, and the prices.

The offers, the promises and the claims.

It's all there to read, think about, and keep. And that goes for the advertisements, too.

When people turn to their Columbus Ledger-Enquirer they turn here with interest. Which means this is where your advertising message needs to be.

With all the choices available, it's difficult deciding how best to advertise your business.

But everything becomes a little simpler when you remember one rule.

YOU GOTTA BE IN THE PAPER.

School of the Americas presents

Nations of Latin America

Republic of Uruguay

Area: 72,172 square miles
Population: 3,028,000, almost as many as Los Angeles, Calif.
Religion: Roman Catholic
Literacy: 94 percent
Life expectancy: 74 years
Language: Spanish
Capital city: Montevideo
Industries: meat processing, wool and hides, textiles
Major exports: livestock, sugar, rice, grains

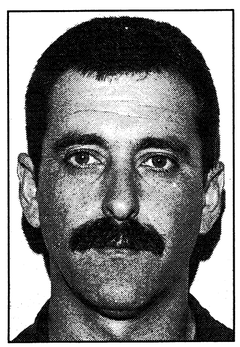
Uruguay long ago achieved the reputation for being a pioneer in advanced political, economic, and social reforms. For this reason, it has been called "the social laboratory of the Americas" and "America's first welfare state." Uruguay established the eight-hour working day long before its adoption by most other countries of the Hemisphere. Public education is free to students at all levels, from the primary grades through the university; thus, it is not surprising that Uruguay has one of the lowest rates of illiteracy in the Hemisphere.

Smallest of the South American republics, Uruguay is situated on South America's east coast, between the broad estuary of the Rio de la Plata and Brazil's southernmost region. With the exception of the northern highlands, the topography of the country is largely level, with well-distributed natural waterways. About 73 percent of the land consists of natural pastures, which support fine herds of cattle and sheep numbering more than 30 million; 12 percent of the land is under cultivation. Despite the scarcity of trees, the plains are exquisitely tinted with blooming verbena, from which Uruguay derived its poetic name "the purple land."

The national culture of Uruguay is a product of the country's native writers, artists, and thinkers, and the cultural influences of Europe transplanted by immigrants from many countries. Successive waves of immigration, particularly from Spain and Italy, account for Uruguay's racially homogeneous and cosmopolitan population. The native Charrua Indians had virtually disappeared by 1830, but they are vividly portrayed in the great epic poem Tabare by Juan Zorilla de San Martin. The works of Jose Enrique Rodo, one of America's foremost literary figures, represent the highest attainment in national literature.

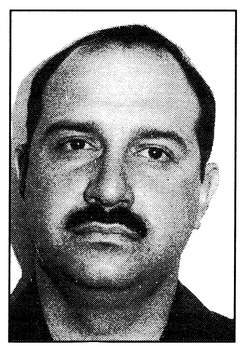
Center of cultural, economic, and political life, Montevideo is one of America's most impressive capitals. Visitors admire its broad, tree-shaded boulevards, magnificent parks and rose gardens, and public buildings – notably the marble and granite Legislative Palace. In the original "Old City," founded in 1726, the chief colonial landmarks are the Cathedral and the Cabilde (former city hall). The capital's main boulevard, Avenida 18 de Julio, begins at the Plaza Independencia and terminates at Battle Park, where the huge Centenary Stadium is located. Spreading along the Rio de la Plata are beautiful residential suburbs and a string of crescent-shaped beaches from Ramirez and Pocitos to Carrasco. Continuing eastward from the capital toward the Atlantic are the famous beach resorts of Atlantida, La Floresta, Piriapolis, Punta del Este, La Paloma, and La Coronilla.

Paysandu, the nation's second city in size, is known as the "Queen of the North." This busy commercial center has many industries, including flour mills, tanneries, sugar refineries, textile mills, breweries, and canning factories. Salto, the third largest city, is a livestock and agricultural center, famous for its orange and tangerine groves and wine grapes. One of the oldest cities in the country, Colonia is an important travel link by ferry between Montevideo and Buenos Aires and contains many colonial landmarks; it is the starting point of the Uruguayan sector of the Pan American Highway.



Republic of Venezuela

Area: 912,050 square miles
Population: 15,030,000
Religion: Roman Catholic
Literacy: 82 percent
Life expectancy: 66 years
Languages: Spanish, Indian languages
Capital city: Caracas
Industries: crude oil, petroleum products, iron ore
Major exports: cocoa, coffee, sugar



Until recently Venezuelans believed their country floated in oil — high grade, easily refined. Now they know reserves may run dry by the year 2000. By then they hope to exploit perhaps 700 billion barrels of tarlike heavy oil in the Orinoco region. Venezuela was a major organizer in 1960 of OPEC, the price-setting Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. In 1976 it nationalized wells, refineries and pipelines. Oil revenues in 1980 reached more than 16 billion dollars. Such windfalls have led to great national expectations. Oil-funded programs have begun to expand agriculture and public works, and develop steel and aluminum industries. Thousands of students are sent abroad for technical education to lessen a dependency on foreign technocrats. Millions of dollars in foreign aid also go annually to Caribbean neighbors. But in Venezuela, services, electric power, and schools have yet to catch up with demand. More than a third of the people live at subsistence level. Only 5 percent of the land is farmed, and much food must be imported.

Native son Simon Bolivar liberated Venezuela from Spain in 1821, making it a cornerstone of his short-lived Republic of Gran Colombia. After becoming an independent republic in 1830, Venezuela lived for 115 years with political turmoil alternating with strong dictatorships. Since the last dictator fell in 1958, five peaceful elections have followed.

SCHOOL OF THE AMERICAS — COLUMBUS SUPPORT GROUP

Guest instructors' wives celebrate Mother's Day

by Keith F. Johnson
U.S. Army School of the Americas

Wives of Latin American guest instructors assigned to the U.S. Army School of the Americas celebrated Mother's Day by gathering for a pot-luck lunch at the Columbus Support Group house May 10.

Although Mother's Day is celebrated the second Sunday in May each year in the United States, many Latin American countries such as Guatemala and Mexico, celebrate Mother's Day May 10 or on other days throughout the year. Since the husbands would be working May 10, the wives called Nina Garcia, executive director of the CSG, to see if they could use the CSG house for their own celebration.

According to Garcia, the Mother's Day lunch is an example of why the CSG house was created.

"What we are trying to do is have a home away from home for our foreign guests," Garcia said. "We try to do anything we can to make them feel at home while experiencing a part of what we do in the United States. Basically we are all the same but we have different customs and cultures."

Garcia cited Thanksgiving and Halloween as holidays that many of our Latin American guests experience for the first time while in the United States.

The CSG house, which is fully furnished, is also used for activities such as coffees, dinners, meetings, cake decorating classes, English and Spanish classes, and many other activities.

Soon after SOA was transferred from the Republic of Panama to Fort Benning in the fall of 1984, the SOA Columbus Support Group was established. The CSG was formed on February 4, 1985 by a group of local civic and business leaders. Its purpose was to assist the School staff and visiting military personnel and their families in the enjoyment of the many cultural, educational, and recreational activities which this area of the south has to offer.

The CSG Board of Directors is a who's who list of Columbus. Elena Amos and Sal Diaz-Verson of the American Family Life Assurance Corporation; Thomas Boyd, III of First Union National Bank; James Yancey of Synovus and Cory Loomis of Kinnett Dairies.

The CSG is a non-profit organization. Operating funds are supplied in the form of contributions by corporations or individuals wishing to assist the students, staff and families from eighteen different Latin American countries assigned to the School.

"The Columbus Support Group is the cornerstone of the School's Informational Program," said Ivy N. Rodriguez, SOA International Military Student Office director. "It is an open channel to our community, without the CSG our program couldn't function to its potential."

According to Garcia, the CSG house will be changing its name and location in June. The new name will be the Columbus International house and will be open to students from countries other than Latin America who are a part of the International Student Training Detachment at Fort Benning.

Other activities scheduled for the year include a Boy/Girl Scouts International Camp Week, International Teen Roller Skating Party, Halloween Party, Childrens' Christmas Party, a Family Picnic, and providing tickets for local events to include the Steeplechase at Callaway Gardens Nov. 2.

For more information please contact Garcia at 324-7787 or 324-7788.

SOA historian speaks to seniors at local school

by Keith F. Johnson
U.S. Army School of the Americas

"When I went to Macchu Picchu for the first time and came up through the morning mist and saw this place, I was awed," said Dr. Richard A. Gorell. "From that period of time on, I was so awed by that experience I knew what I wanted to do, study more about this particular culture."

Gorell, the U.S. Army School of the Americas' historian, recently shared that experience and his enthusiasm for Latin American history with a group of approximately 150 seniors at Jordan High School.

Gorell showed slides from his trips to Macchu Picchu, a hidden city of the Inca civilization in Peru, and talked about the Inca culture and society during the 16th century. The group of history and Spanish students had been studying pre-Columbian Indians in the western hemisphere.

"The students showed a lot of enthusiasm and had many questions," Gorell said. "They were fascinated by the existence of a hidden city."

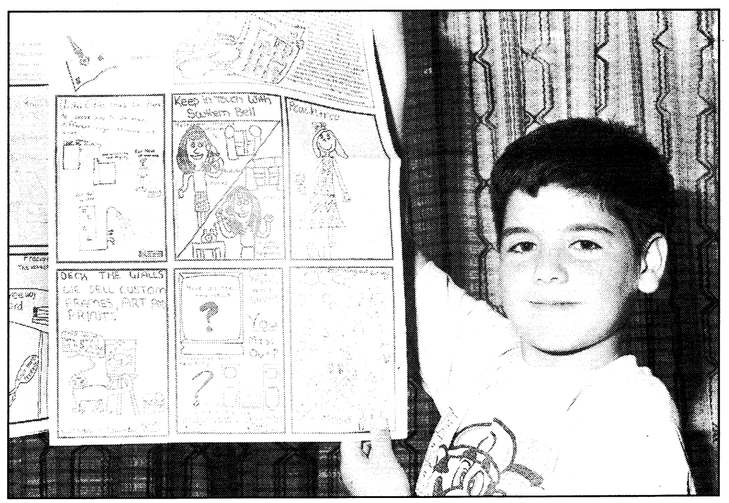
According to Gorell, Macchu Picchu was a city on the top of a mountain that could not be seen from the valley below.

Gorell feels his lecture gives the students a better understanding of Latin American history because the slides, which were taken by Gorell during his visits to Latin America, give the students a visual look at a part of Latin America.

"They see the slides and then they listen to somebody who has been there rather than reading it from a book," Gorell said.

After 25 years of studying and visiting Latin America, Gorell can be considered a subject-matter expert of Latin American history.

After completing his undergraduate degree in history at Quincy College in Illinois, Gorell, fluent in Spanish, joined the Peace Corps in 1964 and went to Colombia. While there he had the opportunity to do some traveling which led to his first visit to Macchu Picchu. Since then, Gorell received his Master's Degree from Georgetown and Ph.D from Kansas University. His studies have taken him back to Latin America three times.



It is this knowledge and experience that Gorell shares with the students.

"While the students learn about the Inca culture they get a better understanding of what history is all about and can make comparisons to their own culture," Gorell said.

"In history education there is a hidden agenda of studying the past and thinking about how our society has developed."

In addition to speaking at Jordan High School, Gorell has also given lectures at Baker High School and Columbus College.

If your school would like the opportunity to hear from Gorell or guest instructors from 16 Latin American countries assigned to SOA, please call the SOA Public Affairs Office at 545-1820.

Change of Command

Feliciano takes over 'reins' of SOA from DePalo

by Keith F. Johnson
U.S. Army School of the Americas

Col. Jose R. Feliciano became the new commandant of the U.S. Army School of the Americas May 3 officially replacing Col. William A. DePalo Jr. in a ceremony held at French Polo Field on Fort Benning.

Guests in attendance included Elena Amos of American Family Life Assurance Corporation; John Kinnett of Kinnett Dairies; former SOA Commandant retired Col. Miguel A. Garcia and his wife Nina; Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza, post commander, and Maj. Gen. Luis A. Luna, assistant secretary of state for the armed forces of the Dominican Republic.

The ceremony included a halo demonstration by Fort Benning's Silver Wings and a Pass in Review of troops representing 16 Latin American countries and the United States and led by the Fort Benning Band; as well as speeches from DePalo, Feliciano and Lt. Gen. Leonard P. Wishart III.

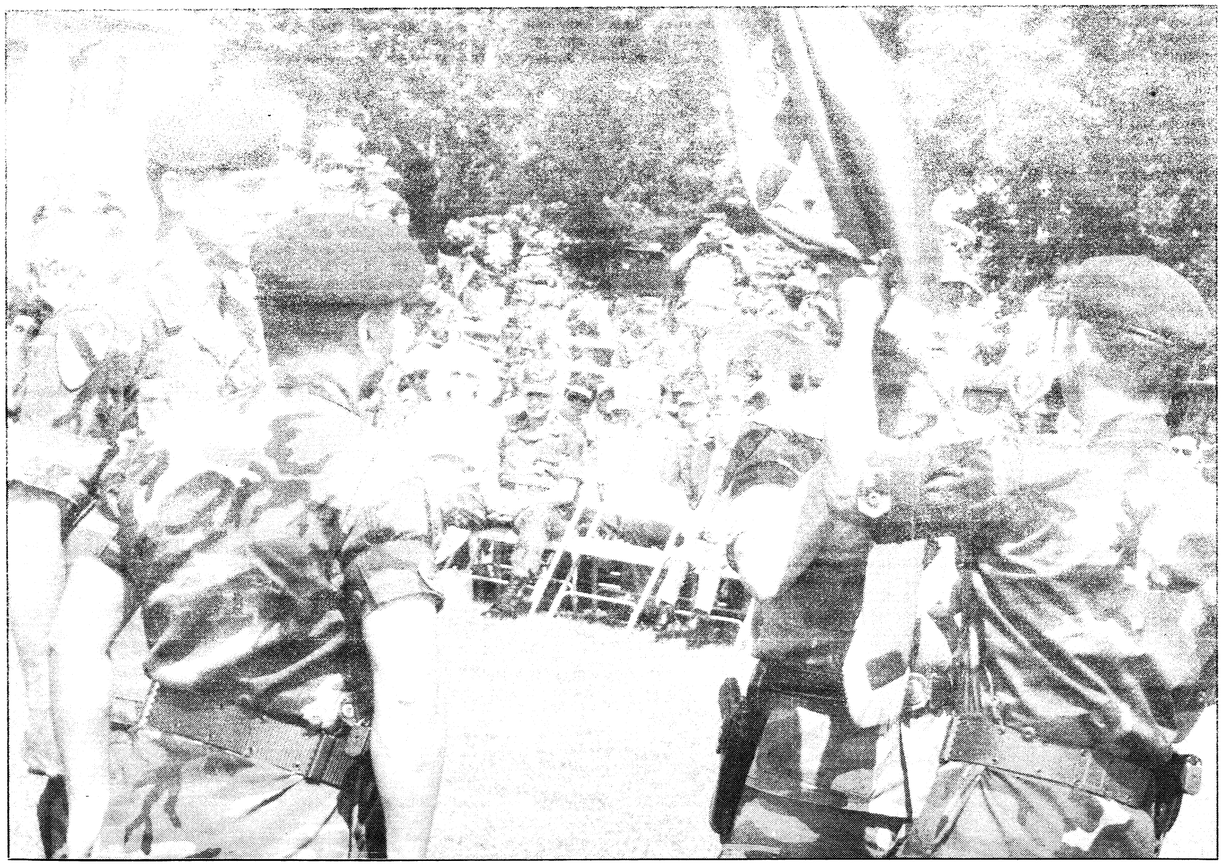
DePalo had a few words to say about the experience of passing on a command.

"This is the third consecutive time I have given up a command entrusted to me by the army leadership. I can assure you that it does not get any easier with practice," DePalo said.

"After twenty-eight months of total immersion in the activities of this splendid multinational institution, it is extremely difficult to give up the reins and fade away."

Wishart then spoke to the crowd of approximately 500 people about what a change of command means to him.

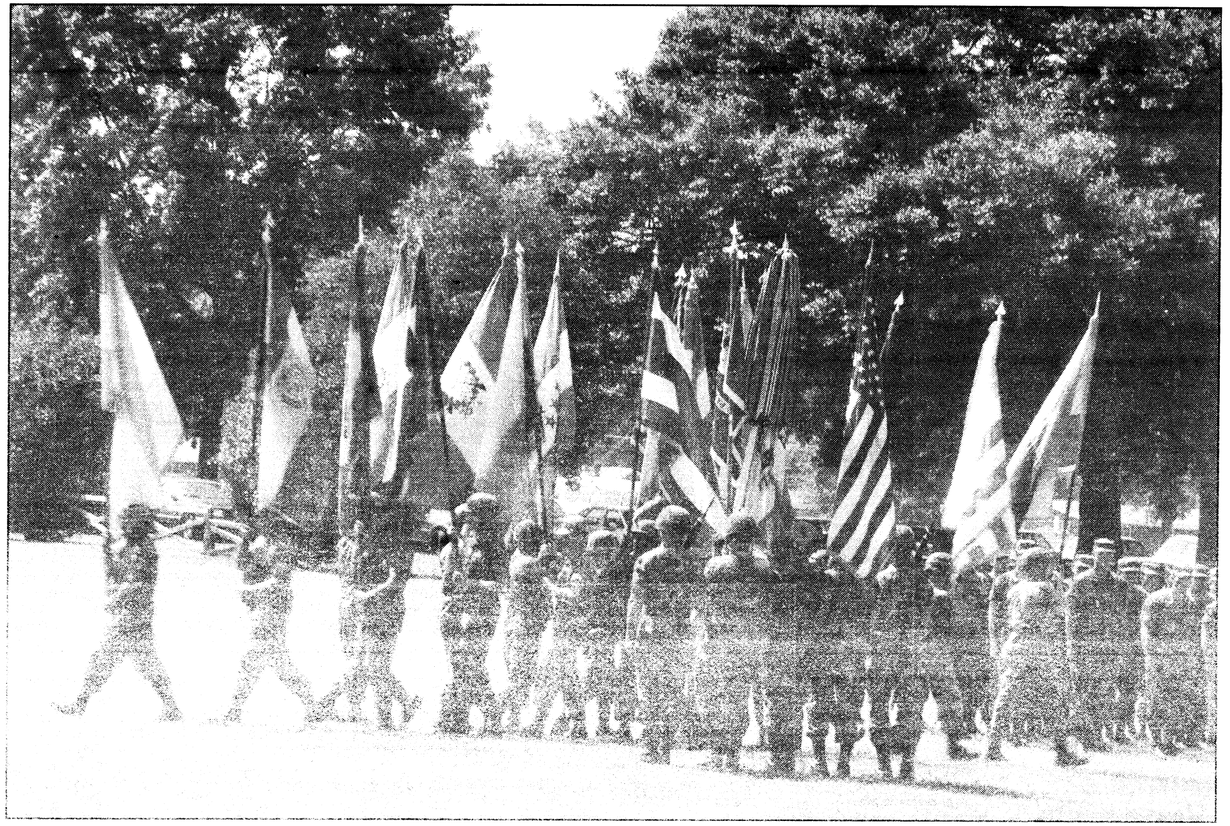
"A change of command is a major event in the life of any organization," Wishart said. "It reminds us of the constancy of purpose in our army, and the continuity of our units and institutions. Commanders come and go; individuals are assigned and depart — but our organizations live on."



Wishart then turned his attention to the new School commandant.

"I can think of no one better prepared than Jose and Carol (Feliciano) for the task of leading this School to more success during a period of tremendous change and transition," Wishart said.

Feliciano is no stranger to Fort Benning. He served as company commander of the U.S. Army Infantry School Student Brigade in 1968. He returned to Fort Benning as commander of 5th Battalion, 1st Training Brigade from 1982 to 1984 and then as commander of 1st Infantry Training Brigade from 1987 to 1989. His most recent assignment was as commander of Military Group Honduras.



In addition to his military experience, Feliciano holds a Master's Degree in Business Administration from the Inter-American University, Puerto Rico. He is a graduate of the Armed Forces Staff College and the Army War College.

"The School of the Americas is a success story," Feliciano said. "From its inception it has made significant contributions in training our military friends throughout Latin America. Each commander has made it better. I hope, with your support to lead the School in creating an environment where students can be trained to be effective members of their armed forces, capable of contributing to the well being of their countries. I can tell you from first-hand experience that the School of the Americas is a key tool in projecting the image of the United States and influencing its students to support democratic systems, respect human rights, and promote regional stability and economic well being."

Parade, picnic highlight activities

By Agatha Hudson James

Fort Benning, Columbus and Phenix City celebrated Armed Forces Day Saturday with a parade, open house and picnic.

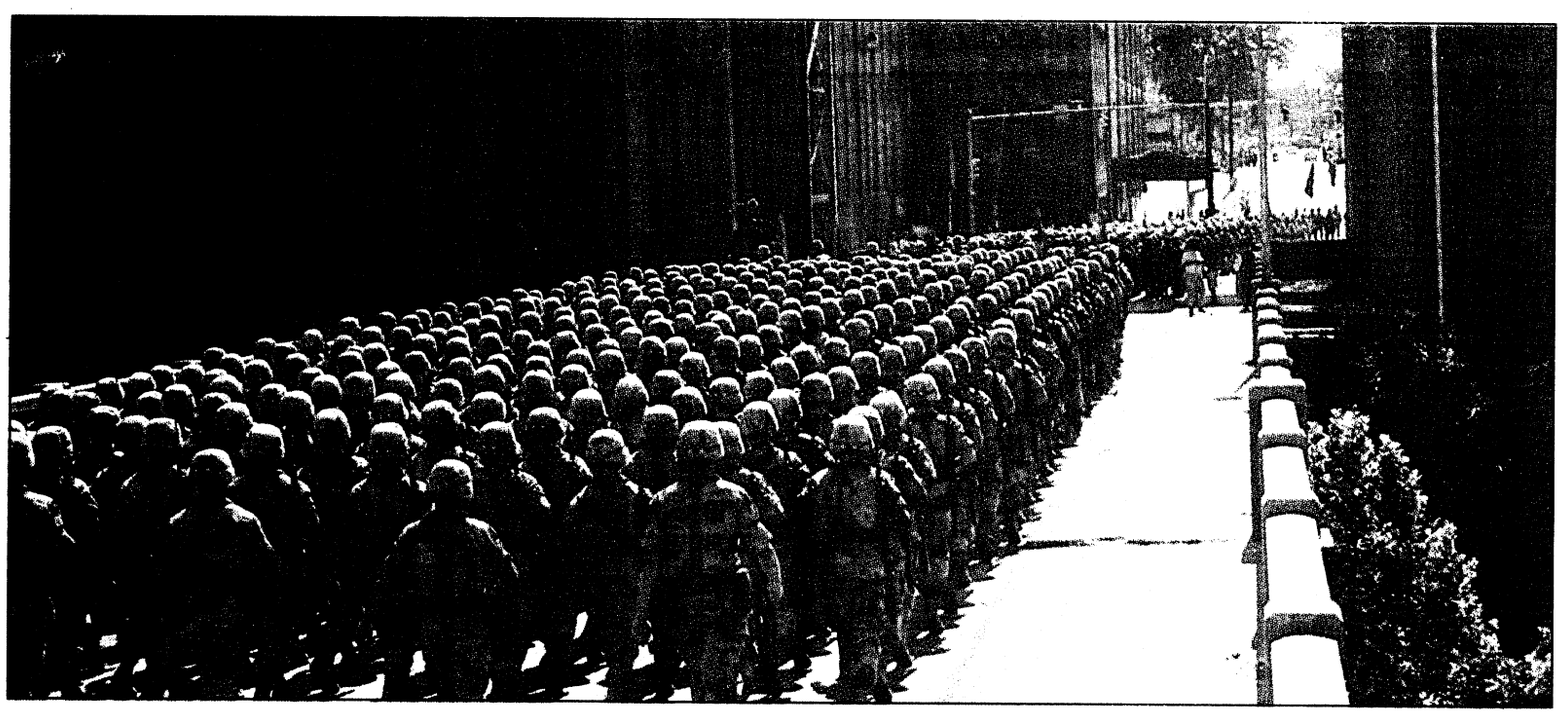
The parade, which was billed as one of the biggest in Columbus' history according to organizers, included Fort Benning soldiers who participated in Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm.

More than 2,000 soldiers from the 197th Infantry Brigade and the 36th Engineer Group marched in the event.

Personnel from the 197th Infantry Brigade included the first and second battalions of the 18th Infantry, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor; 197th Support Battalion; Troop D, 4th Cavalry; and the 72nd Engineer Company.

Personnel from the 36th Engineer Group included the 215th Finance Company, 533rd Transportation and the 43rd Engineer Battalion.

The post's open house and the Association of the U.S. Army picnic was on Stewart-Watson in front of Infantry Hall, building 4. Activities included interunit games, equipment displays, booths and entertainment.



Latawnya Rennick from the School of the Americas was crowned Miss AUSA, and Angela Spears from the U.S. Army Medical Department Activity was runner-up.

Army dentist tests positive for HIV

Free AIDS testing, counseling available to former patients

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

An Army dentist treating children at Fort Bragg, N.C., has tested positive for the HIV, or human immunodeficiency virus, according to recent article in the Army Times newspaper.

The Army is offering free testing and counseling to the dentist's former patients. Parents of any child who received dental care at Fort Bragg between Aug. 1, 1988, and April 30 should call toll-free (800) 927-9901 for more information.

"There is no cause for alarm, but parents with children who were treated during the specific time frame should feel free to call the toll-free number to get more information," said Col. Robert S. Boren, interim commander of the Fort Benning Dental Activity.

The Army standards for infection control procedures in dentistry make transmission of infection highly unlikely, he said.

"The Army Dental Corps policies are in line with policies and procedures set up at the Center of Disease Control in Atlanta and the American Dental Association with regard to infection control," said Boren.

Each dental activity is required to adhere to a comprehensive infection-control program, said Boren. This program is subject to frequent inspections by the Inspector General and scrutinized during command inspections.

The wearing of rubber gloves, face masks, eye protection and surgical gowns affords a physical barrier to disease control, Boren said. Many disposable items are used, and those items not easily disposed of, such as dental instruments, are taken through a heat-and-pressure sterilizing process known as "autoclaving" after use. Also, many strong disinfectants are used to clean and disinfect the procedure area, said Boren.

"Strict compliance with all infection control procedures at DENTACs at every post would make transmission of disease virtually impossible," said Boren.

Free testing and counseling for the HIV is being offered to any child examined at the Fort Bragg Dental Activity during the specified time frame.

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome, or AIDS, is caused by HIV and is a deadly disease that affects the body's immune system, rendering victims susceptible to a variety of infections.

DoD changes civilian hiring freeze policy

American Forces Information Service

A change to the Department of Defense civilian hiring freeze will allow agencies to hire two individuals from outside the department for every five vacant positions.

Local procedures for filling positions have not changed, according to Peggy Hawkins, chief, Recruitment and Placement Division, Fort Benning Directorate of Civilian Personnel. Hawkins said managers should continue to submit written justification for filling positions.

The directorate will monitor the two for five hiring capability for the installation, and it will accomplish the reporting requirements associated with the freeze, said Hawkins.

"The new policy is designed to give the proponents more flexibility than they had in the original hiring freeze," said Christopher Jehn, assistant secretary of defense (force management and personnel). Previously, outside hires were generally disallowed.

He explained that the original freeze was imposed to make sure the department didn't hire people who would face involuntary separation within a few years because of planned force reductions.

The change, he said, should not hamper DoD's efforts to reduce its civilian work force over the next few years.

According to Jehn, the hiring freeze has produced a higher turnover of lower-graded employees, such as clerical and secretarial workers, which results in senior civilian employees and colonels doing their own typing. "That's obviously a little wasteful; and, worse than that, they aren't very good at it," he said.

Additional hiring for vacant appropriated-fund positions is prohibited through Sept. 30, said Jehn, except in certain circumstances, most of which have been in effect since the freeze's early states last year. These are:

- Internal placements within DoD;
- Hiring of civilian nationals of foreign countries authorized after Jan. 11, 1990, by the secretary or deputy secretary of defense;
- A hiring commitment made prior to March 29 by an authorized official based on applicable guidance;
- Positions essential to health, safety or security;
- Positions needed to implement the July 1989 defense management review;
- Positions related to internship, work-study, exchange or 1991 graduate hiring objectives;
- Positions essential for implementing the National Drug Control Strategy; and
- Positions directly supporting military operations or reconstruction assistance in or around the Arabian Peninsula.

Officer Candidate School to induct hall of famers

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

Marshall Auditorium will be a frenzy of activity today at 2 p.m.

The Officer Candidate School is having its annual Officer Candidate School Hall of Fame induction ceremony at Marshall Auditorium.

One hundred twenty-six people — including one civilian aide to the secretary of the Army, one former ambassador and one state senator — will be included in the list of soldiers, both past and present who have performed their duties in such a manner to be immortalized in the hall of fame.

The guest speaker for the induction ceremony will be retired Gen. Donn A. Starry.

A number of current hall of fame members will be in attendance as well as foreign dignitaries, OCS graduates and other prominent local officials for this year's induction.

Today at 6 p.m., OCS will host its 50th anniversary ball. The event will be in the South Hall at the Columbus Ironworks Trade and Convention Center.

The guest speaker for the ball will be John O. Marsh, former secretary of the Army.

COMMENTARY

Memorial Day: Pride mixed with sadness

By F. Peter Wigginton
American Forces Information Service

Memorial Day produces mixed feelings in Americans. It's a time to recall the nation's military victories and to remember those who lost their lives in the armed forces that others might remain free.

One hundred and twenty-five military people died during the Persian Gulf conflict in defense of Kuwait's sovereignty.

Twenty-three gave their lives during Operation Just Cause in Panama so a dictator would no longer harass American citizens and mock democratic principles.

Eighteen service people fell in Grenada to stamp out repression and to halt the spread of communism in the western hemisphere. More than 58,000 died in Vietnam.

Whenever people are deprived of freedom to create a life for themselves, all human dignity suffers. It suffers when, as in the example of the Persian Gulf, a dictator disregards the rightful territory of a neighbor and attempts to eradicate another culture through torture and wanton destruction.

Fortunately for this country — and the world — the United States is a nation whose history has been carved by those who gave of themselves so others might continue to live free in a free nation built on freedom.

These are glorious thoughts. Nevertheless, they cannot silence the bewilderment of those who question why they, and not their buddies, were allowed to live. Nor can they easily erase the memory of seeing comrades fall. Nor can they sweeten the grief of families left behind.

Just before the ground offensive into Kuwait, parents of a tank platoon officer permitted The Washington Post to publish the letter their son wrote prior to the assault. In it, he asked them to "find the families of anyone in my platoon who is killed and try to console them. To a man, they have excelled in a bad situation, and their families should mix some pride with their sadness."

The fact that Operation Desert Storm had so few casualties may seem to be a miracle. But, as Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf said, it will never be miraculous for the families of those people who were killed.

Through all the ceremonies, prayers and speeches of this Memorial Day, survivors should resolve never to forget the freedom servicemen and women have won for them, nor the pain their families have endured.

Possibly the best way to show gratitude is to live fully that life the fallen have earned for those who remain. President Abraham Lincoln expressed the idea at Gettysburg, Pa., on Nov. 19, 1863.

Said Lincoln, "It is for us the living. . .to be dedicated here to the unfinished work, which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced.

It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us, that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion, which we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain. . ."

Most civilizations honor their dead. Greeks and Romans decorated graves of loved ones with garlands of flowers. The Japanese, during their Feast of Lanterns, welcome the souls of the departed and then light their return to the hereafter with lanterns floated across the waters in miniature boats.

In the United States, the war dead have been honored on Memorial Day since the Civil War. Historians dispute the precise date and location of the first Memorial Day in the United States.

Nonetheless, in 1967, President Lyndon Johnson proclaimed that Waterloo, N.Y., was its "birthplace." In May 1866, that community honored its war dead by closing businesses for the day, flying the flag and decorating graves.

The first national Memorial Day — then called Decoration Day — occurred on May 30, 1868.

Among the ceremonies that took place around the country that day was one at Arlington (Va.) National Cemetery. Gen. Ulysses S. Grant and Gen. James A. Garfield presided at the service. Since then, the cemetery, situated on a terrace overlooking the Potomac River and a view of the Capitol, has been the site of impressive services.

According to cemetery historian Tom Sherlock, every president since 1921 has come at least once for Memorial Day observances.

In June 1968, President Lyndon B. Johnson changed the date of Memorial Day to be observed on the last Monday of May.

Memorial Day, following so soon after Operation Desert Storm, is a fitting time to honor such dedication.

Saturday's parade big, grand as promised

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

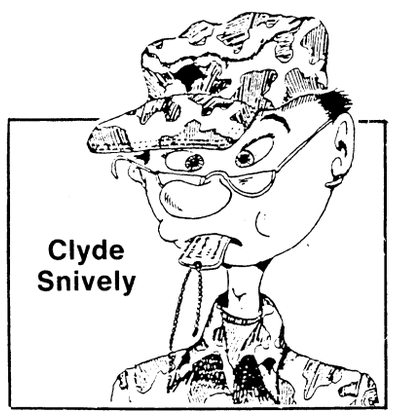
The Armed Forces Day Welcome Home Parade was as big and grand as promised.

Our soldiers looked great, the community supported en masse — they participated, they organized, they lined the parade route and they cheered our men and women every step of the way.

For me, the highlight was the start of the parade, right after two lonely Air Force F-16s from Moody Air Force Base passed overhead and the "move-out" order was passed to the first unit.

At that point, band leader, Chief Warrant Officer Larry Hyatt, passed the signal to his drum major, Staff Sgt. Anias Hassell, who proudly stepped out as the band struck up "God Bless America." It sent shivers up and down my spine.

Hot on the band's heels were the legion of 197th soldiers, looking like a sand dune sifting down the street. They, along with soldiers of the 36th Engineer Group and 34th Medical Battalion were marching proud — heads up, shoulders thrown back, a bounce in their strides, which became even more bouncy with each step of the way as the crowds expressed their appreciation.



Our soldiers in the military vehicles seemed to enjoy their rides too, especially those in the cupola of the Bradley Fighting Vehicle who demonstrated how the cupola could rotate on the chassis while the guns moved independently.

One wag said he hoped they didn't turn too many times. "I would sure hate to see the turret fall off," he said, jokingly, although some nearby spectators weren't so sure.

Waiting for the parade to start, the heat seemed to be on the minds of most soldiers, especially those in the middle of the formation where no breeze could ever hope to reach.

One soldier had his mind on post parade activities. "When I was in Saudi, I was told people would be rushing up to me to buy me a beer when I got back. It hasn't happened yet. Maybe after this parade, someone will offer to buy me one."

A civilian along the parade route told a neighbor how a friend of hers was still in Saudi and how that friend couldn't believe we were holding a welcome home parade "when there's still so many troops still in Saudi."

Some guy who might have been in the military said the way the attention span of the American public is, if we waited until everyone was back, most of the folks would probably have lost their ardor of support.

"There's still the Fourth of July, and I'm sure there will still be individual welcome home celebrations as the troops come back," he told her.

That still didn't satisfy the lady who said, "Well, they should have just called this an 'Armed Forces Day parade' and not a 'Welcome Home Parade.'" Some folks are beyond pleasing.

After I left the parade, I came across a soldier who was walking home in Phenix City. I stopped to give him a ride, asking him if he'd missed the parade.

He hadn't. He'd just been told he couldn't march because of a profile on his leg. The parade route was just over three miles long. I met him about four miles from the parade.

Makes sense to me.

Soldiers in the 29th and 11th Infantry Regiments might not want to hear this, but I thought they should have been marching too. Not only did some of them go to Saudi, but they certainly worked their tails off supporting Desert Storm.

Seems to me they, too, should have received that public recognition — beyond two BFV crews.

Over at the Armed Forces Day picnic after the parade, it was hard to tell if the crowds were larger than usual. But as one sergeant answering questions in front of an Abrams tank said, "Interest in the displays was certainly intensified."

Next on the agenda for patriotic events is the Fourth of July. I wonder what they'll come up with to top last week's festivities.

Take precautions, enjoy holiday weekend

Recently, two Fort Benning soldiers were involved in a traffic accident. They had been drinking beer and were speeding. Their vehicle left the road and overturned.

The driver was in critical condition for about a week. He will recover but is likely to be paralyzed for the rest of his life.

The passenger was treated for minor injuries and released from the hospital the same day.

Was the passenger just lucky? No, he was wearing his seat belt.

To protect our soldiers from injury and suffering, this weekend and all summer, commanders will encourage personnel to:

- Drive sober and stay alert.
- Wear seat belts.
- Obey all traffic laws, especially the speed limit.
- Conduct a safety check of cars.
- Watch out for other drivers.
- Drive during daylight as much as possible.
- Swim only in waters protected by lifeguards.
- Take the above precautions to counteract the increased risks of summer activities and have an enjoyable holiday.

Army issues warning about fatal medication

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

Medication given to troops participating in Operation Desert Storm for malaria prevention contain a substance that is deadly to children.

Parents are asked to be alerted to the potential dangers involved in careless handling of medication given to troops in the Persian Gulf area, according to Gopal Panvelkar, chief of Pediatric Services at Martin Army Community Hospital.

A single tablet of this medication can be fatal to a child, Panvelkar said. The tablets have a candy-like coating that attracts children, and there is no known treatment to help a child who has ingested this medication, he said.

"This medication is very, very dangerous to children," he said. "Parents who participated in Desert Storm are strongly urged to take the proper steps to ensure the medication stays out of the reach of children. If this precaution is not taken, tragedy could result," said Panvelkar.

Because of the imminent danger of possible chemical and biological warfare, the armed forces issued various medications for soldiers for the prevention and/or self-treatment in the event of contamination. The medications were not issued in a child-proof containers, creating the risk of accidental poisoning in the home.

The medications in question are: Chloronique tablets to protect against malaria, Ciprofloxican tablets to protect against germ warfare and Pyridistigmine tablets, a pre-treatment against nerve agents.

If soldiers who participated in Desert Storm are still taking uncompleted portions of those medications, they are asked to store the medication carefully in a child-proof container, in a place unaccessible to children, Panvelkar said.

For soldiers who are still taking these medications, the Pharmacy Service will repackage it in child-proof bottles.

If soldiers are no longer required to take this medication, they are asked not to throw it away, but to return the unused portion of the medication to the Pharmacy Service for proper destruction, said Panvelkar.

The Pharmacy Service is open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Saturday.

The Refill Pharmacy at the Post Exchange at the mall is open from 9:45 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Teen club awaits activation

Program will provide activities for youth during summer

By James C. Rupp
Bayonet staff writer

The Fort Benning Teen Club is still awaiting activation.

The program, started some weeks ago by Fort Benning officials, is currently waiting to get its feet on the ground so that post youth will have a place to go, rather than sitting around during the summer months.

According to Billie C. Smith, Youth Activities director, the club is running into a few problems while still in its early stages. One problem she cited is the seeming lack of motivation from the teens the club is seeking to help.

Smith asked that teens who are interested should attend the Teen Advisory Council meeting to be June 8 at 4 p.m. in Building 1056.

Another problem and one that is now in the process of being solved is getting a building for the club headquarters, she said.

Recently, workers from the Department of Engineering and Housing were ready to start renovations on the building to make it suitable for such congregations, she said.

Smith said some of the problems that need to be fixed to make the building safe include installing fire alarms and smoke detectors, replacing ceiling tiles and getting better inside lighting.

Despite the setbacks, Smith said she remains hopeful about the project. She mentioned that she received a call from a woman whose son was interested in painting a mural for the building.

"There are people who are interested out there," Smith said. "We just hope that the word continues to spread and more and more people become interested."

The club will be sponsoring teen dances, in addition to the activities offered at the clubhouse.

Smith also stressed the importance of parent participation in the club.

"The teens will not be allowed to participate in the activities without their parents understanding all that is required of the members of the club," she said.

Parents who wish to have their children in the club will be required to sign a letter of understanding and possibly be required to offer volunteer help at certain functions, she said. There will be a two- to three-week registration, and the dates will be announced.

July 31 is deadline for voter slogan contest

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

A voter slogan contest is being conducted by the Federal Voting Assistance Program. The contest is open to all members of the U.S. armed forces, civilian employees and their family members.

More than 900 slogans have been received so far. The leading branches of services in terms of percentage of individual participation in the contest are the Navy and the Air Force at this point, with the Coast Guard, Marines and Army not far behind. The contest was originated as a part of the 1992 media campaign to increase voter awareness among U.S. citizens, said Michelle Cox, assistant project officer.

"This contest is geared to increase voter participation among the military population," said Cox. "Often, because military personnel and their family members have moved away from their original homes and are unfamiliar with political candidates in the area where they are stationed, they don't feel obligated to vote. This contest might be a way to turn that around," said Cox.

The winning slogan will be selected by a panel of judges, and the judging will be based on originality and motivational value, according to Cox. The slogan then will appear on posters, voter manuals, publications and other media materials.

The originator of the slogan will receive a certificate of recognition from the secretary of defense. The second-place and honorable-mention winners will receive special recognition.

The branch of service with the highest percentage of individual participation will also receive special recognition.

"There is no limit on the number of slogans a person may submit on one page," said Cox.

The slogans should be submitted on letter-sized paper, and each page should include the entrant's full name, branch of service if military, mailing address and daytime telephone number.

Mail entries to: Federal Voting Assistance Program, Room 1B457, The Pentagon, Washington, D.C. 20301-1155. The deadline for the contest is July 31.

For more information, call Cox at 545-3881 or 545-6353.

New system cuts baggage delays

Transportation officials ready to provide assistance

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

Delays don't necessarily have to be part of the game plan when waiting to send or receive baggage and household goods between duty assignments.

Officials at Fort Benning's Transportation Office urge all military members to contact the office immediately upon notification of a new duty station.

Doing this will minimize or eliminate any delay that may occur during shipment or reception of personal goods.

"Sometimes soldiers wait too long to make the call to our office to make arrangements for their baggage," said Evelyn Brown, chief, Personal Property Section, Transportation Division, Directorate of Logistics.

"That usually means delays when the soldier gets to his or her next assignment."

Some soldiers may have reservations about using the Army's system for moving personal items and may decide to transport the goods themselves, according to Brown.

"There were problems recently because two of our major carriers went bankrupt," said Brown.

"Soldiers who had used the system when this occurred were in for a wait. However, that problem was solved, and now we are on a computerized system."

Brown said the cost of moving personal items at the owner's expense can sometimes become too costly for the soldier to handle, making the new reliable Army system the best route.

Quarters on post use key cards instead of conventional locks

By James C. Rupp
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning has a different way to secure your room.

Instead of the standard lock and key, rooms in Olson, Towle, Wilkins and the Distinguished Visitor Quarters open with a card. Like the key cards used in an increasing number of hotels across the country, the cards operate a computerized, programmable lock system.

The keys were first tested in 1988, according to Ray Wagner, billeting officer for those quarters.

Originally, 50 of the key card systems were bought on a trial basis, he said. When the system proved to be a success, 1,371 were purchased for all the transient lodging facilities.

The key card system is an electronic lock system, and Wagner said they were bought to ensure greater security in the quarters.

Wagner said the keys eliminate the problem of regular key security.

The key card operates in a way similar to a money access card and credit card. Once a person is issued one of the cards, they are permitted access to the room by simply passing the card through a system that reads the information on a magnetic band.

The time span that a card is usable can be programmed onto the strip. A card can be programmed to be usable for 10 minutes, 12 months or even indefinitely.

The beauty of this, Wagner said, is that the card's access can also be canceled at any time. If a card is stolen, its owner can report it to the headquarters. Thus, accessibility to the room can be denied, thereby averting a possible theft.

283rd Army Band works around clock

Infantry center musicians play at varied functions

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

"People just don't realize what we've gone through lately," said Cpl. Michael Cargill, tuba player and assistant drum major for the 283rd Army Band.

The band has been through more than most people probably realize.

Since the beginning of Operation Proud Return, the band has been working around the clock to provide the music for the welcome ceremonies.

"When the troops first started coming in, we would be working through the night on as little as one hour's worth of sleep," said Cargill.

Members of the 283rd spent countless hours playing for the troop arrivals in addition to their normal duties, including playing at basic combat training graduations, Columbus community activities, retirement ceremonies and parades. This does not include the many hours of rehearsal and planning.

"It was tough, but we definitely pulled through with very few problems," said Cargill. "Now that our schedule is slowing down, we can catch our breath."

Not only did the Infantry Center Band work around the clock, so did the Directorate of Plans, Training and Mobilization.

The directorate had many functions, including processing all paperwork for the troops, maintaining the Emergency Operations Center, and training all mobilized troops in basic soldier skills at the Continental United States Replacement Center.

"There was a job that had to be done," said Staff Sgt. Willie Collier, Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment. "Soldiers had to familiarize themselves with the weapon again."

Collier said long days were not unheard of at the replacement center. Days usually started at 8 a.m. and lasted until the last soldier was finished with training.

"In the latter days of training, the soldiers put on the protective masks to fire," said Collier. "We put in a lot of extra hours on the weekends."

Both Cargill and Collier agree that their missions were beneficial to the total Army.

"To me, it was the difference between life and death," said Collier.

2nd Bn., 54th Inf. soldiers attend sex disease seminar

By James C. Rupp
Bayonet staff writer

A seminar on the dangers of sexually transmitted diseases was recently conducted for members of the Infantry Training Center's Headquarters Service Company.

Beverly Willis, a worker at the Columbus-based Alcohol and Drug Outpatient Service, was on hand at the 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry, classroom to provide instruction about the signs and symptoms of STDs, including Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome. Willis also gave tips on how to avoid becoming inflicted with such diseases.

Willis said that the biggest danger with STDs is lack of information. Often times, she said, people have become infected with a disease and are not even aware what their symptoms signify.

With some infections, the exterior symptoms disappear while the disease remains in the body, she said. From there, it is a great likelihood that they will go on to infect others.

Willis said if an individual begins to experience something unusual, no matter how inconsequential it may seem, the best thing to do is to get to a doctor as soon as possible — it may mean the difference between life and death.

Army not swayed to open combat positions to women

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — The Army has no plans to open direct combat positions to female soldiers, despite recent appeals by the Defense Advisory Committee on Women in the Services.

The committee voted overwhelmingly in April to ask Defense Secretary Dick Cheney to push for a repeal of laws that bar women from combat jobs in the Air Force and Navy. While there are no statutory restrictions on the assignment of women in the Army, the Army policy is closely linked to the other services' statutes.

The Army Policy for the Assignment of Female Soldiers excludes women from all direct combat positions. The policy was adopted in 1978 to put the Army "in line with the other services and the statutes that affect them," said of the Soldier Policy Division, Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel.

The Defense Advisory Committee on Women in the Services, or DACOWITS, agreed by a 29-4 vote that Cheney should support repeal of the combat exclusion statutes.

"We think people should be allowed to do the jobs they're capable of doing, regardless of their gender," said DACOWITS Chairwoman Becky Costantino, when reached at her home in Rocky Springs, Wyo.

"The events in the Persian Gulf demonstrated that the entire theater of operation is part of the modern battlefield, where exposure to the risks of combat extended to all members of the armed forces."

About 26,200 female soldiers participated in Operation Desert Storm, all in combat support or combat service support roles, according to Etchieson.

> "The Army's quite satisfied with the status quo."
> — Maj. Marcene Etchieson

Eleven female soldiers died during the war — six of them in accidents unrelated to the fighting — 19 were wounded and two were captured. Army policy permits women to be assigned in all skills and positions, "except those which involve the highest probability of direct combat with enemy forces."

The Army defines direct combat as "engaging an enemy with individual or crew served weapons while being exposed to direct enemy fire, a high probability of physical contact with the enemy's personnel, and a substantial risk of capture."

"The policy doesn't prevent women from becoming prisoners and it doesn't prevent them from being killed or wounded," said Etchieson. "But, it is designed to limit a high casualty rate among women."

Women are authorized in 285 of 331 enlisted military occupational specialties, 69 of 76 warrant officer specialties, and 205 of 214 officer specialties.

Costantino cited career advancement as a primary reason for her committee's vote in favor of repealing combat exclusion statutes.

"Many, many times, the soldier who is promoted is the one with combat experience or command experience with infantry units," she said.

She recommended the Army expand opportunities for female soldiers in several areas, particularly field artillery and air defense artillery specialties. Lance missile batteries and corps-level Multiple Launch Rocket System positions, now closed to women because of the Army's assignment policy, should be opened, according to the committee.

While women currently serve on Hawk and Patriot missile crews, Army policy excludes them from Chapparal, Vulcan and Stinger air defense systems, something Costantino would like to see changed.

"Women served on Patriot missile crews and stood up to the pressure and were competent and capable," she said, in calling for an expansion of artillery positions for women.

She stopped short, though, of saying women should be allowed to serve as infantrymen with front line units.

"There are women drill sergeants who have told us they can't be assigned to an infantry training unit as drill sergeants," she said. "They want that chance. Now, whether to make female soldiers infantrymen in infantry units worldwide — that's a whole different can of worms."

Nation's reservists prove mettle, quiet critics

By Rudi Williams
American Forces Information Service

"This victory belongs. . .to the regulars, to the Reserves, to the National Guard. This victory belongs to the finest fighting force this nation has ever known in its history," President George Bush said of Operation Desert Storm before Congress in March.

"Magnificent," is the way Army Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, described the reserve components' performance to the lawmakers in a congressional hearing.

The performance of the National Guard and Reserve has been "one of the major success stories of the entire operation," Army Gen. Edwin H. Burba Jr., commander of Forces Command, told Congress.

And to dispel any lingering doubt about the quality of the reserve forces, Stephen M. Duncan, assistant secretary of defense (reserve affairs), barraged lawmakers with examples of their outstanding performances during an April House Appropriations Subcommittee hearing.

In a Pentagon interview, Duncan, who spent 18 years as a reservist, said complaints about the reserve components frustrate him because the complaints often reflect a lack of understanding about how the total force works. The quality of reservists today, including National Guardsmen, is dramatically higher than it was 10 or 15 years ago, he said, adding reserve forces can't be compared in general terms because of wide variations in their missions and training.

Duncan noted some guard and reserve units have missions that would put them into immediate combat. "For example, you can match Air National Guard and Reserve pilots against active pilots any day of the week," Duncan said. "Why: Because most of them and their crews have served on active duty and have logged nearly as many hours of flight time as their active duty counterparts. In the other reserve forces, there are people who can perform just as well as their active component counterparts for particular types of missions."

Other units, though, require training — sometimes a significant amount of training — before they can be deployed, he said. "We design it that way. That's the total force," he explained. "We try to integrate the capabilities of the active and reserve components to obtain the most military capability for the least cost."

Duncan touts reserve forces personnel as highly motivated, intelligent and experienced, and he noted hundreds of them went through intense training before deploying to the Persian Gulf.

"They surprised a lot of people by turning out to be smarter than those people expected. That suggests to me you can take a motivated, intelligent reservist, apply some training techniques you didn't use in the past and come up with a soldier who's able to perform a mission in a much shorter time than we realized," Duncan said.

"I continue to urge the reserve components to explore new ways to train their people," he continued. "It doesn't have to be weekend drills. There may be other kinds of training that can be tried."

He said the Persian Gulf conflict's effects on recruiting and retention are unknown. He expects few problems, however, because all the armed forces are reducing in size.

Expanded GI Bill benefits Reserve, National Guard soldiers

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Reserve soldiers will pocket an extra $30 monthly in educational benefits beginning Oct. 1 courtesy of recent congressional legislation.

According to Lt. Col. Julia Cleckley, Reserve Force Incentive Program manager at the Pentagon, the monthly benefit will increase from $140 to $170 for a maximum benefit per soldier of $6,210 over 36 months.

"In October, all new applicants for educational benefits will receive the increased rate," Cleckley said. "Those already in the program will have their benefits automatically raised."

Lt. Col Max Brewer, chief, Incentive Management Team, National Guard Bureau, said a soldier must enlist in the Reserve or National Guard for a minimum of six years to become eligible.

To obtain the maximum benefits, a soldier must also be a full-time student. Unless otherwise continued, the increase in benefits ends Oct. 1, 1993.

In a related development, full-time National Guard soldiers can now participate in the active force GI Bill. The National Guard Bureau will identify all qualified soldiers.

Among other criteria, the Guard member soldiers must have two years of continuous active duty service after Nov. 29, 1989.

"Additional benefits are being considered for Reserve soldiers," Brewer said. "Legislation is being developed to offer bonuses from $2,000 to $6,000 for six-year enlistments in critical skill areas.

The affiliation bonus for first-term active duty soldiers departing for the Reserves may also be increased from $50 to $100."

What to do in Smokies

By Thomas Swick
Fort Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel

With the threat of terrorism abroad and the crunch of the recession at home, the hills of North Carolina look especially attractive this year. They're close, safe and cool and can be explored on a scaled-down budget.

Getting Around

The best way to see the mountains is by car or, for more penetrating views, on foot. The visitor centers in Great Smoky Mountains National Park offer maps of hiking trails; campsites also are listed.

Pleasant excursions can be made on the Great Smoky Mountains Railway, departing from Bryson City, Dillsboro, Waynesville and Andrews. The train runs only on weekends in May and daily June through October. For information, call (800) 872-4681.

Bed and Breakfasts

There are numerous campgrounds and chain motels scattered about; I stayed exclusively in bed and breakfast establishments. Here is a list of some memorable finds:

■ Ragged Garden Bed and Breakfast Inn and Restaurant, Sunset Drive, Box 1927, Blowing Rock, N.C. 28605, (704) 295-9703. This is an attractive old house, just off the pretty main street, with a nearby cottage and a fine restaurant downstairs in a dark, candlelit room. Breakfast was good — sausage and eggs scrambled with melted cheese — and the room was pleasant. Rates: $45-$110.

■ The Inn at the Taylor House, Highway 194, Box 713, Valle Crucis, N.C. 28691, (704) 963-5581. I didn't stay here but stopped in. A lovely house set amid large shade trees in a beautiful valley. Breakfast always includes Swiss cereal, along with a warm dish. Rates: $85-$125.

■ Folkestone Inn, 767 West Deep Creek Road, Bryson City, N.C. 28713, (704) 488-2730. I planned to stay here, but it was full. Nine guest rooms, all with private baths, in a rural setting. Adjacent to the Deep Creek (walking) entrance to the Great Smoky Mountains National Park. Rates $59-$79. Very pleasant hosts, who felt sorry for me and directed me to ...

■ Squire Watkins Inn, Box 430, Dillsboro, N.C. 28725, (704) 586-5244. Queen Anne-style house on knoll overlooking the artisan village of Dillsboro. Emma Wertenberger runs the place with her husband, Tom, and served the best ham-and-cheese omelet I'd eaten in years.

■ Albemarle Inn, 86 Edgemont Road, Asheville, N.C. 28801, (704) 255-0027. You can sip complimentary wine Saturday evening on the front porch and, if you're lucky, get the room where Bela Bartok stayed. Substantial buffet breakfast in the morning. Rates: $58-$74.

■ Ray House, 83 Hillside St., Asheville, N.C. 28801, (704) 252-0106. The breakfasts are standard — rolls and muffins — but the rooms are lovely, the pets (two dogs and seven cats) gentle and the hosts interesting. Alice is a former French teacher who is now trying to learn Russian; Will is editorial page editor of The Asheville Times. A wonderful library. Rates: $37-$57.

Sites

The Blue Ridge Parkway and the Great Smoky Mountains National Park are musts, as is the Biltmore Estate outside Asheville. Note: The first two are much more affordable than the last; a single adult admission to the estate now costs $19.95.

Asheville is an interesting city to poke around in, especially for lovers of American literature. The Thomas Wolfe Memorial — which is the name given to the house he grew up in and wrote about so vividly in "Look Homeward, Angel" — is one of the best re-creations of its type I have seen. (Appropriate passages from his novels hang outside many of the rooms.)

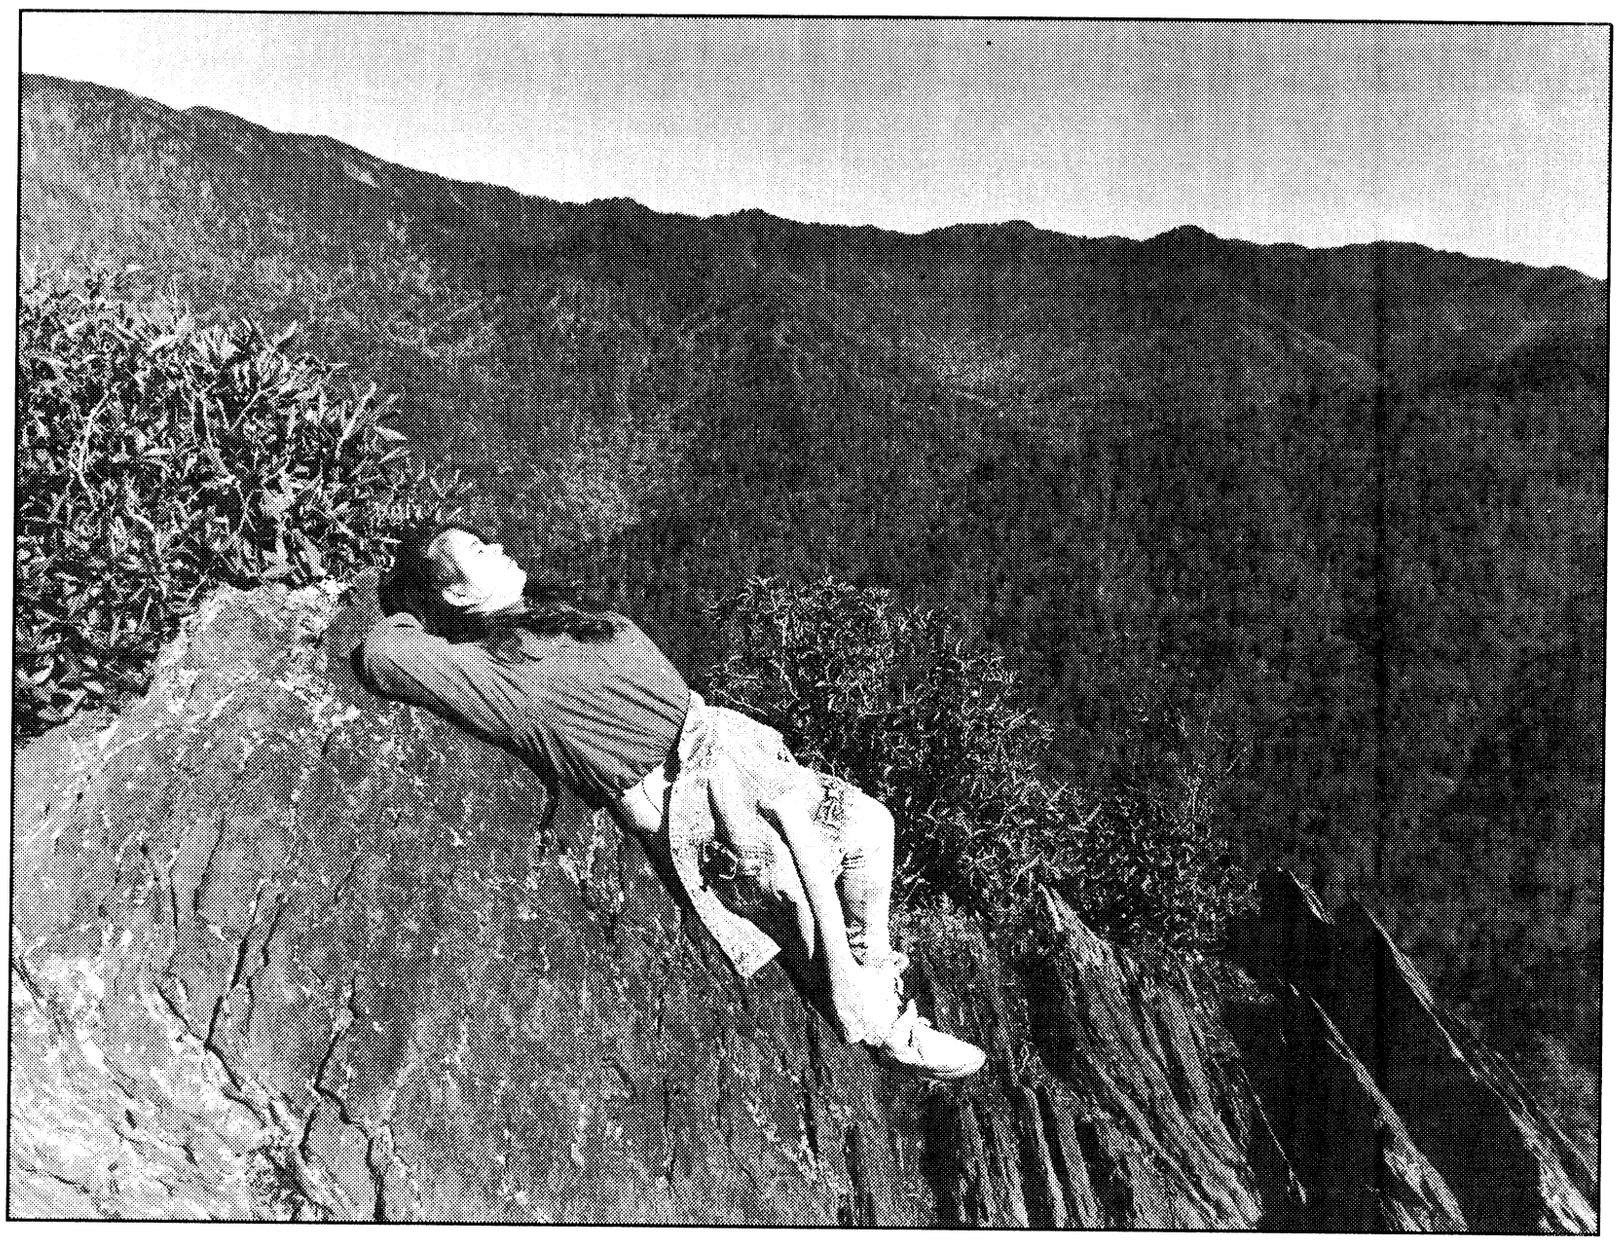
His father's stone cutting shop was replaced in the 1920s by the Jackson building, on Pack Square, where it is believed Walt Disney worked before heading out to California. A good selection of Wolfe's works, as well as many other old books, can be found at the Captain's Bookshelf on Battery Park Avenue. Wolfe is buried in the family plot in Riverside Cemetery, not far from the grave of O. Henry.

Take the walking tour — $7.50, starting in the atrium of the Haywood Park Hotel — for a look at some the art deco buildings and Rafael Guastavino's St. Lawrence Roman Catholic Church.

Also worth a visit is the Grove Park Inn on a hill north of downtown. Even if you can't afford to stay here, you can enjoy a drink by the mammoth fireplaces or out on the patio overlooking the mountains, imagining you're waiting for Scott and Zelda.

Restaurants

In Asheville, Market Place Restaurant on Wall Street is expensive but reputed to be one of the best in the Southeast. A very pleasant, casually elegant place is Cafe on the Square, on Pack Square. Interesting, well-prepared dishes at reasonable prices.



Entertainment

Every night but Sunday and Monday there's clogging and square dancing at Stanley's Barbecue and Bluegrass, between the Asheville police station and City Hall. It's popular with tourists and natives alike.

Stone Soup restaurant on Broadway offers live music on Saturday nights, often with wonderful fiddlers. Here you'll find more of a local crowd.

Smokies: A place to escape

Park visitors get away from city life, survey shows

By Tom Sharp
Associated Press

A survey of visitors to the Great Smoky Mountains National Park suggests escaping real life is the biggest draw, unless the visitors stay in cabins. Nearly half of those folks are there to shop.

The survey of what park visitors expect, what they enjoy most and what they do in the Smokies was presented Thursday at the park's 17th Annual Scientific Research Meeting.

The survey was conducted by Becki Van Cleave of the University of Tennessee. She divided the 1,300 people she surveyed into eight categories.

"There is no such thing as a generic park visitor," she said. "People respond to the park in unique, individual ways."

One of the groups she labeled "experts," a category limited to resource management and science employees who work at the park; some rangers; and ecology and forestry faculty at the university.

The other categories were backpackers; day hikers; people in the campgrounds; picnickers; "windshield tourists" who drive through; users of cabins in the Elkmont campground; and people frolicking at "the sinks," a spot favored for swimming and riding innertubes.

The oldest group was the "windshield tourists," the youngest the day hikers. More than half the respondents in each category were from outside the area.

Escaping the hubbub of city life was favored by at least 75 percent of the respondents in every category, including 94 percent of the experts and the backpackers.

The scenery was listed as a reason to visit by at least 79 percent of respondents in each category, and at least 77 percent of the park to relax.

The scenery was listed as a reason to visit by at least 79 percent of respondents in each category, and at least 77 percent of each group went to the park to relax.

But of those who stayed in the cabins, 44 percent were in the area to shop. Less than 7 percent of the experts and backpackers intended to shop.

Amusement parks, which abound in nearby Gatlinburg and Pigeon Forge, were a positive factor for none of the backpackers and just 1.3 percent of the experts. But 15 percent of the people at The Sinks considered amusement parks a reason to visit the area.

The survey asked visitors to rank their attitudes toward certain things in and around the park.

Among the experts, zero ranked Gatlinburg and Pigeon Forge as a very positive thing. Also left out of the voting of experts were bear-feeding, bears in cages, and squirrel feeding.

On the other hand, 11 percent of the picnickers and 16 percent of the cabin users gave high ratings to feeding bears, which the National Park Service tries to discourage because it is dangerous for both the bears and the people who feed them.

"A lot of times destructive behaviors are not because the person is creepy, but because of ignorance," Van Cleave said.

The Park Service estimates a bear who gets attached to human food has half the life expectancy of a bear who eats like he's supposed to.

Virtually everyone gave high marks to the scenery. Auto tours, predictably, were favored by the "windshield tourists," (46 percent) and frowned on by the backpackers (9 percent).

Camping cuts expenses

Camping out is one way to cut vacation expenses, and it can be an enjoyable way to travel.

Two-thirds of heads of households surveyed by the University of Michigan picked camping as the best vacation a family can take.

For information on how to plan a camping vacation, as well as a calendar of events to build a camping trip around, call 1-800-47-SUNNY for a free 16-page "Go Camping America" guide (or write to Go Camping America Committee, PO Box 2669, Dept. 23, Reston, VA 22090.

Excellent camping facilities in the Great Smoky Mountains National Park are available at Smokemont, just north of Cherokee, N.C.; Elkmont, west of Gatlinburg, Tenn.; and Cades Cove, also west of Gatlinburg.

Information is available at the Oconaluftee Visitor Center near Cherokee and Sugarland Visitor Center near Gatlinburg.

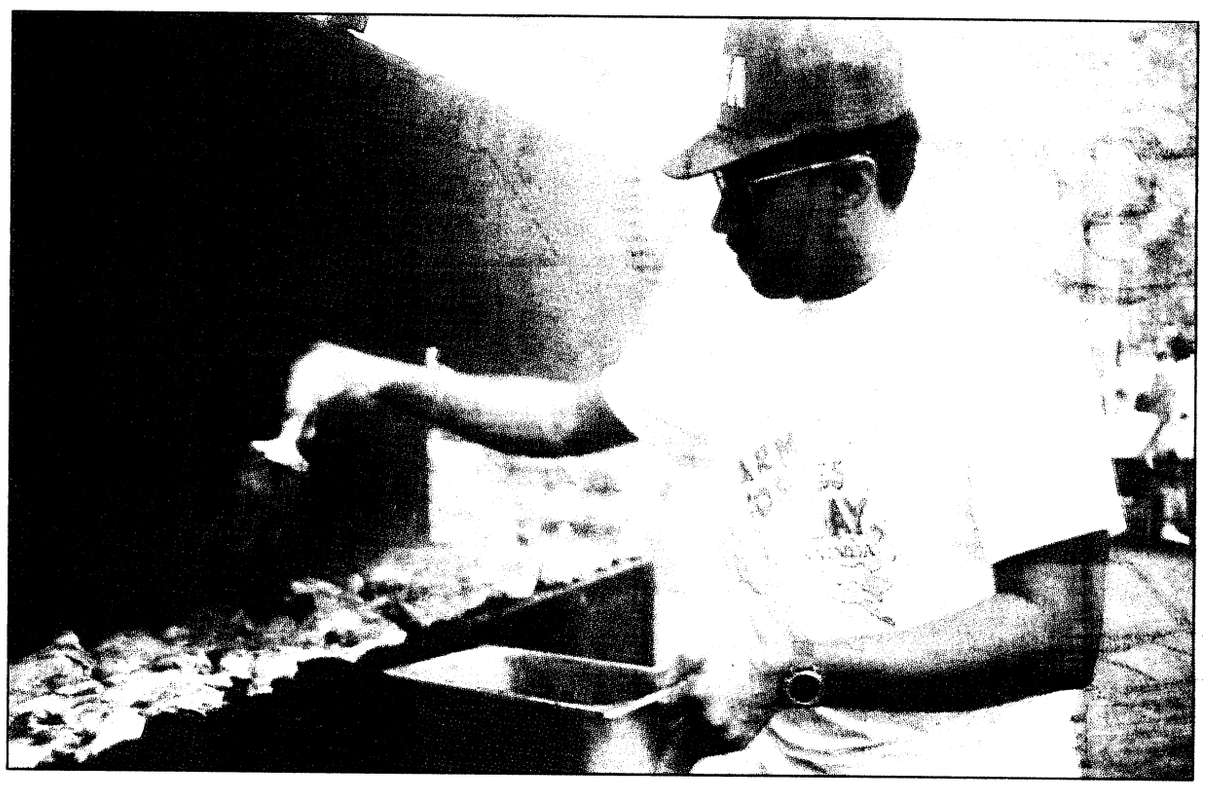
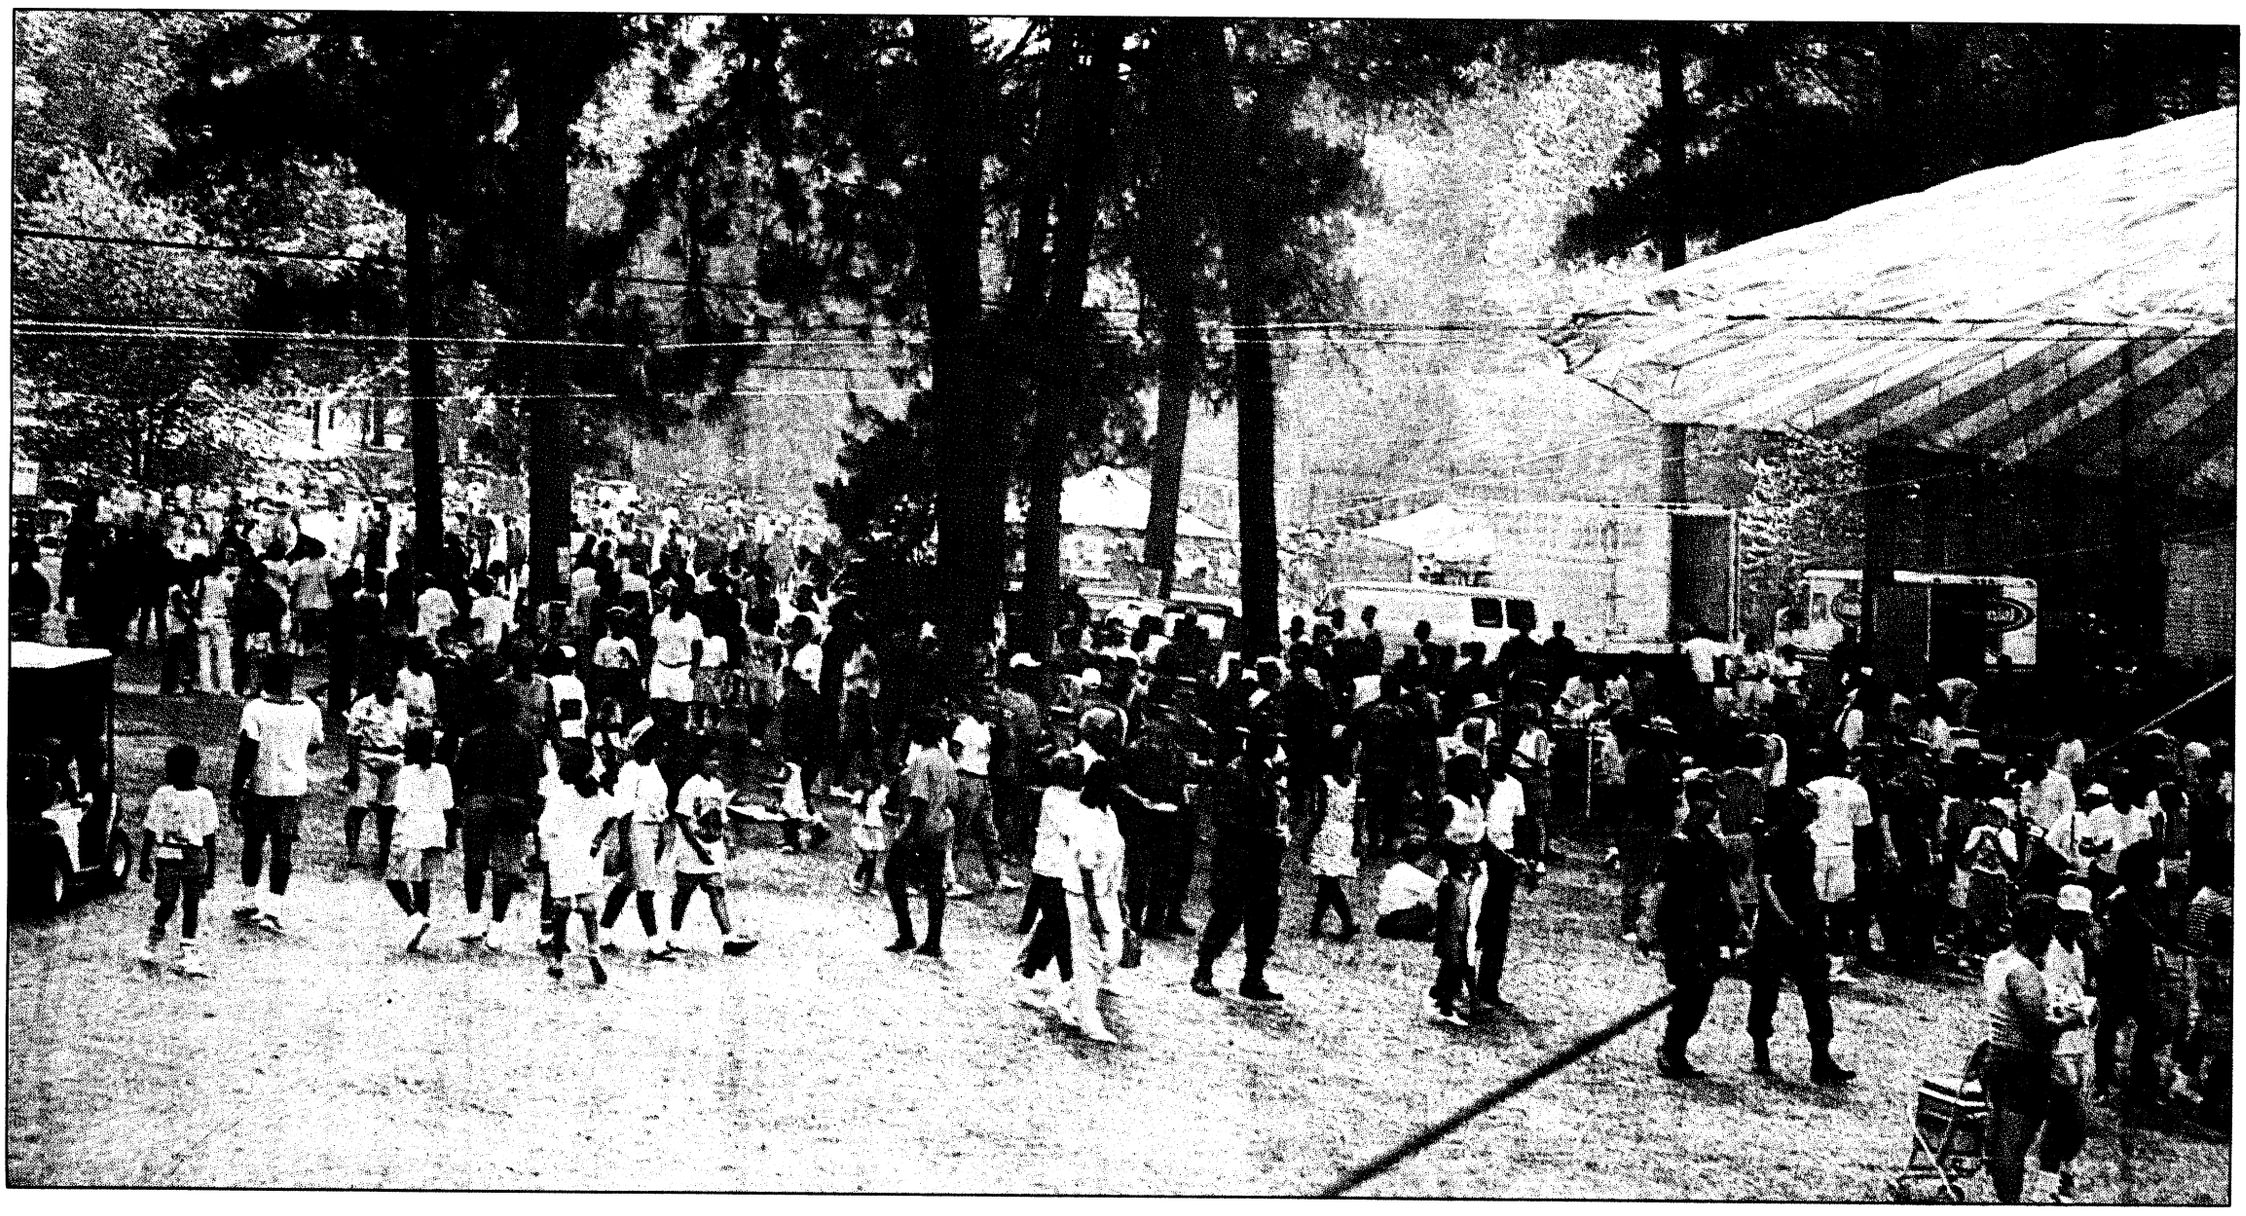
AUSA hosts Benning's Armed Forces Day bash

The community's sizzlin' heat doesn't keep the picnic's barbecue from sizzlin'.



By Jon R. Anderson
Bayonet staff writer

Almost twice as many people were in attendance at this year's Armed Forces Day Picnic as opposed to last year's, said Sgt. 1st Class Martin Boone, Association of the U.S. Army spokesman.



Boone attributes the success of the picnic, which saw more than 8,000 people in attendance, to the support received by the soldiers of Fort Benning and the civilian community, and to the enthusiasm of all in regards to the outcome of the Persian Gulf War.

"Backing from all the agencies on post as well as from the civilian food and beverage companies was absolutely fantastic," said Boone, in reference to organizing the annual picnic.

Highlights of the picnic included sky diving demonstrations, pony rides, a kiddie jump tower run by the Airborne School, performances by the Miss Georgia Superstars and the rock 'n' roll band Slash, as well as the crowning of the Miss AUSA Queen for Fort Benning.

Not all change is for the better

The debate over high salaries for baseball players, free agency and related topics heats up every time there is a new round of contract signings. I don't begrudge any player the opportunity to make the best deal he can. But I have been thinking about some of the less obvious ways baseball has changed as a result of the new economic facts of life.

Until recently, fans were able to identify star players with certain ball clubs. When fans thought of the St. Louis Cardinals, they thought of Stan Musial. During the 1940s, if fans thought of the New York Yankees, they thought of Joe DiMaggio. The then-Brooklyn Dodgers were Jackie Robinson, Duke Snider and their other stars.

Fans no longer can do that. A player like Darryl Strawberry comes up with the New York Mets, but when the Los Angeles Dodgers offer more money, that's where he's going to play.

There's another aspect to it. What is Strawberry going to do when his five-year contract is up? What is Roger Clemens going to do for an encore when his five-year deal is up with the Boston Red Sox? Are teams going to be willing to put out all those millions of dollars again when the players are five years older? Will the players themselves even want to continue playing?

I doubt that many of today's stars will bother playing baseball after 10 years or so of making the big money. They will play their 10 years and then get on with their investments and life after baseball.

Even if they want to play longer, I cannot see teams paying the big salaries to players for 20 years. How many millions of dollars would that take? Until a few years ago, a player would spend 15 years, sometimes 20 years with one team. Even when his batting average began to dip and home runs became fewer, the team would keep an older star player on the roster as long as he could contribute. Today, they couldn't afford to pay his salary.

So here is one final, sad result: I think some players who could have made it to the Hall of Fame are going to be cheated out of that opportunity. They won't have the career statistics to match those already in the Hall. They also won't be challenging some of the all-time records now on the books. Will teams pay a big salary to a player for the 20 years or more it would take to challenge Pete Rose's total-hits record? Or a certain number 44's home-run record?

Hank Aaron is the top home-run hitter of all time with 755 homers. A member of baseball's Hall of Fame, Hank is senior vice president of the Atlanta Braves.

Softball enthusiasts should play it safe

Safety Office

Slow pitch softball is the largest participation team sport in the United States, according to officials. More than 30 million adults and youngsters play annually.

Softball is not as strenuous nor demanding as baseball and because the ball is larger, there is usually more hitting, fielding and running.

How much good does that Saturday afternoon game do? Softball aids digestion, benefits sleep, burns calories, and improves balance, muscle tone, flexibility, and endurance.

Ankle fracture is the most common injury in softball. Most of the injuries occur from sliding, followed by jamming, collisions and falls.

Sliding injuries include fractures, sprains, dislocations, knee injuries and torn cartilage. Most sliding injuries are caused by initiating the slide too late or too close to the base. Proper sliding techniques can prevent these injuries. Rules that ban sliding do not detract from the competitiveness but will prevent injuries.

In the case of an injury, promptly apply the only first aid treatment that is safe without professional advice — ICE; I for ice, C for compression, and E for elevation.

Sports injuries can be prevented. In order to minimize the risk, take the following precautions:

- Participate in a sport with people of similar levels of skill, maturity, size, and strength.
- Be in the proper condition to participate. Non-conditioned athletes run a higher risk of injury.
- Use protective equipment that fits properly and is in good condition.
- Be certain your shoes are designed for the playing surface and activity.
- Don't wear jewelry.
- Always remove obstacles from the field before playing.
- Always follow all the rules.

Softball is an activity that gives players four S's: speed, skill, strength, and stamina. Don't forget the fifth S: safety.

In the Driver's Seat with Emerson Fittipaldi

The Indianapolis 500 at 75

The Indianapolis 500 is the world's richest and most prestigious racing event. I used to dream of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway as a child. I expected it to be huge, with a narrow, difficult track, and filled with challenge and excitement. I was not disappointed.

I have had some success on Indy's 2 1/2-mile oval, winning the race in 1989 and setting the current one- and four-lap speed records (225.575 mph and 225.301 mph, respectively) last May. But nobody ever completely dominates that tough track.

This May is the 75th running of the event in the last 80 years. The first race on the big track, built originally as a testing facility for production automobiles, was run in 1911, with Ray Harroun averaging 74.602 mph on the way to winning it.

Although times have changed, the narrow racing surface has remained almost the same, except that the original brick beyond the start/finish line has been replaced by asphalt.

These days, the cars all have engines mounted in the rear, top straightaway speeds are over 230 mph, and the race's 500 miles are usually covered in less than three hours — a real change from the days when it took more than six hours to complete.

The other thing I find really interesting about the speedway is the level of excitement. We are at the track for three weeks every May, practicing, qualifying, doing interviews and talking to fans. The time just seems to fly away.

Suddenly, it is race day. You walk out to the pit road and there are about 400,000 people at the track. Every seat is filled, and the huge grandstands on the pit straightaway seem to stretch as far as the eye can see.

The intensity in the air makes it hard for the drivers to remain calm and focused on the race. But it is very important to do so because the start of the 500 is one of the most important moments in the race.

You can't win the race on the first lap — but you can lose it by making a big mistake and getting yourself into a crash. It is only at the start of the 200-lap race that all 33 cars, in 11 rows of three, are bunched together on the track. When the green flag waves for the start, there is a tremendous jump in speeds as cars are moving around to find the best lane to move forward.

Concentration and skill are required to get into the rhythm of the race. The pace is furious, gas pedals floored almost the whole time. And fast, efficient pit stops are vital because thousandths of a second can be the difference at the finish line.

Once the race starts, I can rely on my Marlboro Penske Chevy '91 race car and my Penske racing crew. If all goes well, we will be celebrating another victory at the 75th Indy 500.

Emerson Fittipaldi, former two-time Formula One World Champion, is the 1989 PPG Indy Car World Series Champion and 1989 Indianapolis 500 winner. He drives for Marlboro Racing Team Penske.

School 'honors' students

Fort Benning Schools

Celebrating the theme "Honor Through Service," Faith Middle School inducted 107 students into the National Junior Honor Society May 13.

This is the largest number of students inducted in the chapter's history.

During the ceremony, Olin Harp, Faith School's principal, presented information about the chapter's history. He explained that the Faith chapter is named for Hazel J. Scudder, first superintendent of the Fort Benning Schools. He also explained that membership in the society is granted only to those students who have demonstrated outstanding scholarship, leadership, character, service and citizenship.

Dr. Dell Karr, Fort Benning Schools' assistant superintendent for curriculum, described the service project in which the Honor Society participated this year. This project was one in which the Honor Society adopted the 34th Medical Battalion. The society supported the troops by sending personal letters, ornaments, valentines, and other mementoes.

Lt. Col. Frank Novier, of the 34th Medical Battalion, also spoke to students. He thanked them for their efforts and expressed what the project had meant to the soldiers of the 34th Med. Bn.

The Faith School Band performed the national anthem. The Faith School chorus performed two selections, "Wind Beneath My Wings" and "From a Distance." The latter selection was a special salute to the troops, and was accompanied by a video featuring the activities of the 34th during Operation Desert Storm. The video was produced by Genedine Gallo, an eighth grade student and Honor Society member.

The actual induction consisted of the traditional candlelighting ceremony performed by several of the current members of the Faith chapter: Sherlita Bullock, Lawanda Stevens, Jean Gonzalez, Brandi Bailey, Roina Hardiway, and Genedine Gallo.

Dental rep to give information

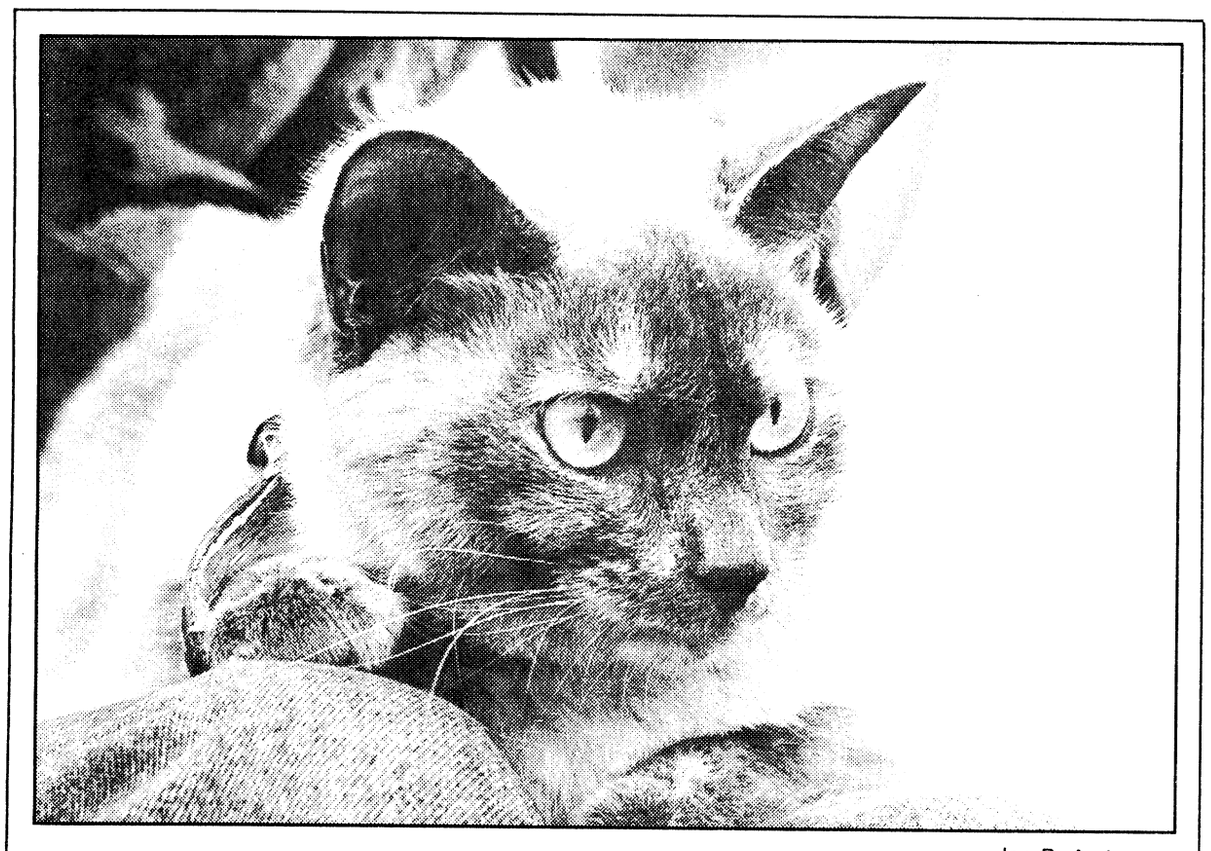
Delta Dental

An information session to discuss the Active Duty Dependents Dental Plan will be given at Sightseeing Road Chapel 9 a.m. Thursday.

The official dental benefit program, also known as DDP*DELTA, is designed to help service families keep their smiles healthy while saving them time and money on dental care, according to Delta officials.

Dental Plan enrollment representative Gail Silva will be on hand to answer questions and give out plan information, dental health tips, and free toothbrushes. This will be an opportunity for family members to learn about the dental plan — what services are covered, how the plan can save money, how to enroll, and how to choose a dentist.

Delta Dental's Dependents Dental Plan is for the spouses and children of active duty service members. No matter where the service member is stationed, dependents can be enrolled if they live in the United States, the District of Columbia, Guam, Puerto Rico, or the U.S. Virgin Islands. Service members must go to their military personnel office to enroll their dependents in Dependents Dental Plan.



The plan features 100 percent coverage of diagnostic and preventive services, such as checkups, routine X-rays, cleanings, fluoride treatments, laboratory tests, sealants and space maintainers (for children under age 14), and some emergency treatment.

Restorative and repair services are 80 percent covered, including fillings, stainless steel and resin crowns on baby teeth, and repairs to dentures. The plan also features partial payments toward some crowns on permanent teeth. (Benefits are subject to certain limitations.)

Dependents Dental Plan has no deductibles and no maximum. Because each service branch pays most of the cost of this dental program, the monthly deduction from the service member's pay is $4.75 to cover one family member (spouse or child) or $9.14 to cover an entire family.

With Dependents Dental Plan, family members can make appointments with any licensed dentist at more than 100,000 Delta participating dental offices nationwide.

Family members who can't attend Thursday's information session can learn about Dependents Dental Plan from the health benefits advise, in the Civilian Health And Medical Program of the Uniformed Services Office at Martin Army Community Hospital. DDP*DELTA can also answer questions at (313) 489-2240.

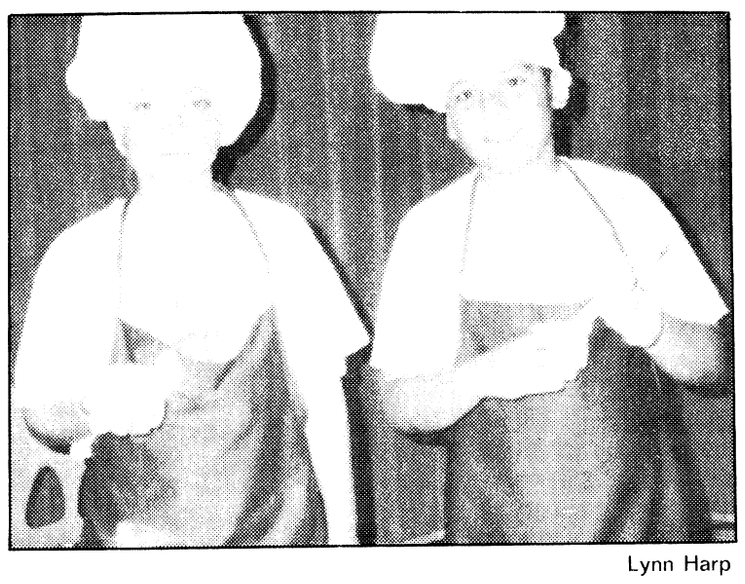
"Operation Appreciation," a program designed to show thanks and support to Desert Storm soldiers for a job well done is well underway at Fort Benning.



"We wanted to show the soldiers that the community appreciated them in a way other than tying yellow ribbons," said Linda Lawrence, Laundry Branch, Supply and Services Division of the Directorate of Logistics. Operation Appreciation was the brainstorm of Lawrence.

Balloons were released April 2 with the names and unit address of each returning soldier of the 197th Infantry Brigade and 36th Engineer Group who participated in Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm.

Balloons were also released May 6 at the Columbus' Indians "Desert Storm Appreciation Night" at Golden Park. These balloons bore the names of troops returning after March 30.

Financial support was provided by the Columbus Serota Club, and manpower support was provided by the 11th Inf. Regiment logistics officer, the 1st Bn., 507th Parachute Inf. Regt., Roberts and Penn Laundry workers, as well as an all-out group effort on the part of military family members, Fort Benning employees and friends.

Yellow balloons were used to represent the troops of the 197th and red balloons represented members of the 36th.

Faith teams represent post in history contest

Fort Benning Schools

Two teams from Fort Benning's Don C. Faith Middle School will represent the state of Georgia in the National History Day competition. The competition will take place at the University of Maryland, June 9 to 13.

The teams won the state history competition that was conducted on May 4 at Agnes Scott College in Atlanta, and they won in two different categories: visual project and media.

Hollen Hayden and Julanne Franklin, eighth-graders, were the visual projects winners. Their project, "Georgia Women: You've Come a Long Way, Babies," focused on Helen Augusta Howard who began the Georgia Woman's Suffrage Association in the late 1800s, and on Rebecca Latimer Felton, the first woman to become a member of the U.S. Congress.

The media presentation was a videotape researched and produced by eight-graders Genedine Gallo, Robbie Pearce, David Denny, David Scheid, and Cesareo Morales, a seventh grader. These students focused on Primus King, the Columbus man who obtained the right to vote for all Georgia blacks in the all-white Georgia Democratic primary in 1945.

Students from Don C. Faith Middle School have participated in the History Day competitions for the last six years. They have gone on to participate in the National History Day competition during five of those six years.

Fort Benning children receive first communion

By Gabriele Sonnenberg
USAIC Chaplains' Office

The first Holy Communion for several of Fort Benning's youth was celebrated Main Post Catholic Chapel May 12.

The communicants receiving Jesus in the blessed sacrament for the first time began their preparation at the beginning of the school year.

Chaplain (Col.) George Gudz and Father Joseph Piskura led the children through the ceremony. First, the table (altar) was prepared by some of the children to relive the Last Supper. Then, because the first communion was held on Mother's Day, the mother of each communicant received a red rose.

After receiving the Holy Communion, the children sang "I am so happy I got the love of Jesus in my heart."

The first communicants were Christopher Bednarek, Sean Brady, Sara Bunting, Brynn Chamberlain, Jonathan Corley, Elizabeth Culver, Shannon Curasi, Krystal Falu, Peter Galle, Brooke Jeansonne, Natasha Lopez, Mary Maschek, Mary Lou Mendez, Miguel Mendez, Meghan McManus, Robert Pidgeon, Jonathan Pignato, Griselle Pizarro, Rebekah Sanchez, Jennifer Schaub, Aaron Scott, Samantha Scrivner, Jaidee Serrano, Kenneth Sierra II, Annaliese Stone, Adam Treadway, Cole Vannucci, Christina Valdez, Felicia Valentin, Brian Valle, Julia Vargas, Patrick Wall.

Covenant Players to visit post

By Gabriele Sonnenberg
USAIC Chaplains' Office

The Covenant Players will be at various locations on post ministering to anybody interested Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

The Covenant Players is a ministry which requires no elaborate sets or costumes or makeup. They are able to perform anywhere there is room for an audience to gather.

When Charles M. Tanner, director, founder and writer, talked about his dream of a touring ministry in drama, his friends smiled and told him the church would never accept it. But more than one million performances later, Covenant Players continue to minister for the Lord with Tanner's leadership.

The themes scheduled for the three-day seminar include military issues, faith and hope, human potential, faith and hope, human relationships, hope, responsibility and commitment, God's love and power, and values clarification.

For more information and registration, contact Chaplain (1st Lt.) Mark R. Alberici, 544-9287 or 544-9764.

Laws prohibit some pine straw harvest

By Patrick D.J. Kenny
Director of Engineering and Housing

Georgia and Federal laws prohibit harvesting pine straw from land you do not own without the landowner's permission and a signed certificate of harvest.

These laws apply if the pine straw is intended for sale for retail or to a pine straw dealer. "Harvesting" pine straw simply means gathering pine straw for preservation, storage, use, or sale.

Violation of the law is a misdemeanor which can be punished by up to one year in jail and/or a $1,000 fine.

A person desiring to sell pine straw to a pine straw dealer within Georgia must present a certificate of harvest signed by the owner of the land where the pine straw was harvested, granting permission for the harvest of the pine straw and stating the date and location of the harvest.

Due to its ecological importance, it is installation policy not to grant permission to harvest pine straw for commercial purposes. Accordingly, any person caught harvesting pine straw for commercial purposes within the boundaries of Fort Benning will be cited with a misdemeanor offense and may be required to appear before the United States Magistrate. An administrative sanction may be imposed in addition to any criminal penalties.

Fort Benning policy allows, however, the harvesting or handling of pine straw for home or personal use on the installation.

6.75 percent rate now effective through Oct.

U.S. Treasury Department

The semiannual market-based interest rate for Series EE Bonds issued between May 1 and October 31, 1991, is 6.75 percent for their initial semiannual interest period. The current minimum rate is 6 percent for bonds held at least five years.

The semiannual rate changes each May and November, based on market average during the preceding six months.

The cumulative rates in the accompanying chart reflect the average of semiannual market-based interest rates applying to bonds issued during the periods shown, including the current semiannual rate.

When 10 or more semiannual interest rates make up the cumulative rate, the average is applied retroactively and compounded semiannually to determine the interest rate and investment yield since the start of the market-based rate program for bonds in each issue period.

Series EE Bonds issued before November 1982, and all Series E Bonds and Savings Notes still earning interest, are now receiving market-based rates, or their current guaranteed rate, whichever is more.

These rates are used to calculate the redemption values of eligible Bonds for interest accrual dates occurring between May and October 1991. Future rates are redemption will reflect changes in the cumulative rate.

Series EE Savings Bonds purchased since Nov. 1, 1982, and held five years or longer earn the average of semiannual market-based rates during the holding period (rounded to the nearest quarter percent for those issued through April 1989) or the minimum rate in effect at the time of purchase, whichever is higher.

The minimum rate is subject to change for future issues if market conditions warrant. Bonds outstanding at the time of any change retain their previous guarantees to original, or next extended, maturity.

*Rate used to calculate value of Bonds redeemed from May through October 1991. Applies from first interest date on or after Nov. 1, 1982. Based on the average rate excluding new period.

These rates help determine the redemption rate between November 1991 and April 1992.

+Certain Bonds in this group yield a rate of interest other than that indicated. For details, call (202) 634-5389.

HONEST. MORE FOLKS FEEL THAT NEWSPAPER IS THE MOST BELIEVABLE MEDIUM.

We can't lie.

A recent study showed that more people fee! newspaper is the most believable medium.

Not television.
Not radio.
Not magazines.

But why?

It's probably because we know that a newspaper lays it all out in black & white.

Right in front of you.
The places, the people, and the prices.
The offers, the promises and the claims.
It's all there to read, think about, and keep. And that goes for the advertisements, too.

When people turn to their Columbus Ledger-Enquirer they turn here with interest. Which means this is where your advertising message needs to be.

With all the choices available, it's difficult deciding how best to advertise your business.

But everything becomes a little simpler when you remember one rule.

YOU GOTTA BE IN THE PAPER.

Benning renovates quarters

Buildings to serve as home for unaccompanied officers

By James C. Rupp
Bayonet staff writer

Permanently-assigned unaccompanied officers will now be able to stay in some newly-renovated quarters.

According to Kenneth Holloway of the Directorate of Engineering and Housing's Master Planning Branch, the buildings were first targeted for modernization when they were deemed sub-standard in fiscal 1989.

The upgrading for the buildings consisted of rewiring of electrical systems, mechanical upgrading, plumbing and interior finishes.

The buildings that have been upgraded are: Buildings 972, 973, 974, 975 and 976.

Holloway said that it was the addition of the School of the Americas to Fort Benning that brought about the justification for the costly modernization.

In 1989, it was determined that the addition of the SOA overloaded the already stressed problem of a billeting deficit.

Holloway said it was made apparent to the Military Construction Army branch that the post indeed had a problem with billeting space for permanently assigned officers, and the addition of SOA worsened the situation; therefore, and it was necessary to direct funding to correct the deficit.

All the buildings are slated to be finished by June or July, Holloway said.

Army extends bond campaign

By Agatha Hudson James
Bayonet editor

The Army has extended the 1991 U.S. Savings Bonds Campaign.

According to Tim Ryan of the U.S. Army Finance Command, the campaign was originally scheduled for May 1 to May 31. However, due to extensive troop movements caused by demobilization from Operation Desert Storm, the Army campaign is officially extended to June 30, Ryan said.

This gives canvassers an extra chance to solicit participation.

"Plus, it gives people an extra chance to sign up," Ryan said. "In addition, since the Army goal has increased significantly from 20 percent participation in past years to 40 percent participation this year, the extra month will allow more time for canvassing."

The extra month should also allow for extra effort in reaching the secondary, but equally important, goal of 20 percent of current bondholders increasing existing allotments, Ryan said.

End of May reports are due by June 10, and the final report as of June 30 is due July 12, he said.

OCS inducts hall of famers

School honors outstanding grads

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

"We can't all be heroes because somebody has to sit on the curb and clap as they go by." — Will Rogers

May 24 was a day some heroes were honored.

The Officer Candidate School Hall of Fame induction ceremony was held to honor those OCS graduates who have achieved the rank of colonel or have made accomplishments making them worthy of receiving this honor.

One hundred twenty-six people — including one civilian aid to the secretary of the Army, one former ambassador and one state senator — were inducted. They join a list of soldiers, both past and present, who have performed their duties in such a manner to be immortalized in the hall of fame.

The guest speaker for the occasion was retired Gen. Donn Albert Starry who spoke briefly about the quality of soldier that comes out of the school and how significant it is to be inducted into the hall of fame.

"We have truly gathered to honor their dedication and leadership," said Starry. "It's a great day for OCS, Fort Benning and the Infantry School," he said.

Starry gave his recipe for total leadership ability, which he noted that all of the 126 inductees have met.

"My total leadership equation requires courage, quality of leadership and excellence in training," said Starry. "These are the three things that win battles.".

A number of current hall of fame members as well as foreign dignitaries, other Officer Candidate School graduates and local officials attended the ceremony.

> "We have truly gathered to honor. . .dedication and leadership. It's a great day for OCS, Fort Benning and the Infantry School.
> — Retired Gen. Donn Starry

This year's induction ceremony marked the 50th anniversary of the school.

The school was created to quickly and efficiently train soldiers to become commissioned officers and instill professional ethics in them.

Throughout our armed conflicts, shortages of officers have prompted the school to open as many as three battalions, compared to its current peacetime capacity of one battalion.

The induction ceremony festivities continued at 6 p.m. May 24 with the school's 50th anniversary ball at the Columbus Ironworks Trade and Convention Center.

Former Secretary of the Army John O. Marsh was the guest speaker.

PERSCOM releases requirements for defense medal

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

Eligibility requirements for the National Defense Service Medal were recently released by Total Army Personnel Command.

All active duty military members who served at least one day of active duty since Aug. 2 are eligible to receive and wear the medal.

The medal should be made available from each soldier's unit supply. Individual purchase is now available from military clothing outlets.

Reserve and National Guard soldiers' eligibility is more complicated to understand, according to the Personnel Command.

The following reserve component soldiers are eligible for the award:

- Any reserve soldier ordered to active duty for federal service in support of Desert Shield or Desert Storm, including those soldiers who had an accelerated entry into training as a result of their host unit's activation.
- Soldiers who were on active duty for special work for a period of more than 30 consecutive days.

If less than 30 days, the soldier needs verification from the first general officer in his or her chain of command for reservists and the state adjutant general for National Guardsmen.

The point when trainees in basic combat training and advanced individual training are eligible for the medal will be determined by the Training and Doctrine commander.

Interchange dedication set

Intersection eases flow of traffic, provides easy access to Sand Hill

By James C. Rupp
Bayonet staff writer

The Eisenhower Interchange on Custer Road in the Sand Hill area will formally open today with a ribbon-cutting ceremony at 3:30 p.m.

The interchange, named for former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, was first proposed in 1983 to ease the flow of traffic and provide easier access to the Sand Hill area, according to Capt. Mike Rabenstein, an operations officer for the Directorate of Engineering and Housing.

Attending the ceremony will be Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza, post commanding general, U.S. Rep. Richard Ray and Frank Martin, mayor of Columbus. Rabenstein also said that relatives of Eisenhower have been invited to attend.

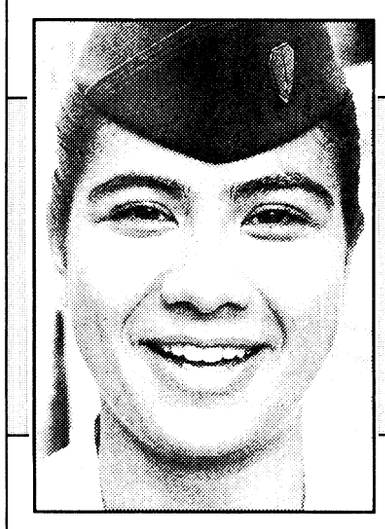
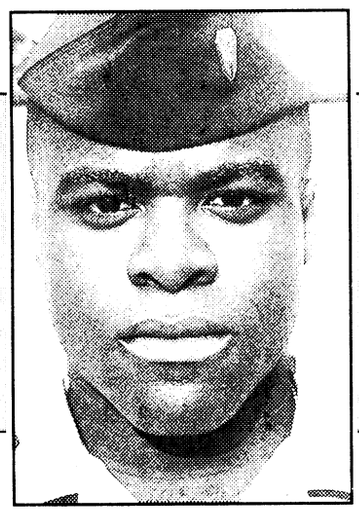
Honoring those fallen

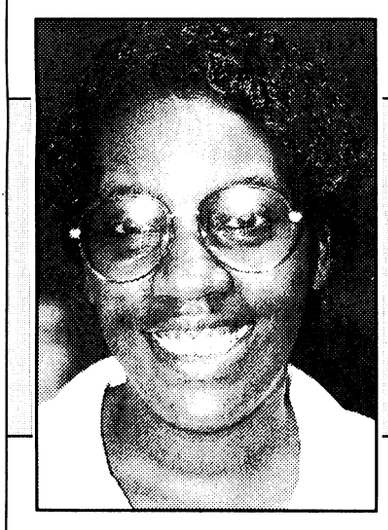


In preparation for Fort Benning's Memorial Day ceremony, Pvt 1. Mitchell Foster, Company A, 30th Adjutant General Reception Battalion, Infantry Training Center, performs the time-honored tradition of placing flags at the headstones of America's fallen. The post's ceremony was Monday at 9 a.m. at Main Post Cemetery.

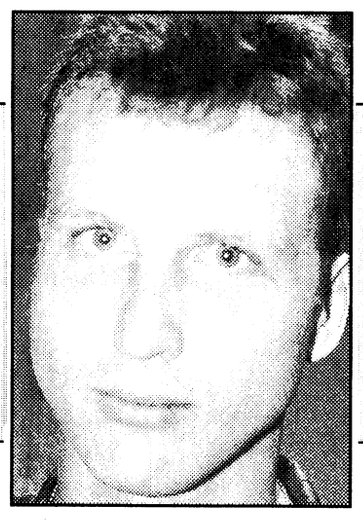
VARIOUS VOICES:



Do you think the names of a rape victim and the accused rapist should be released to the media?



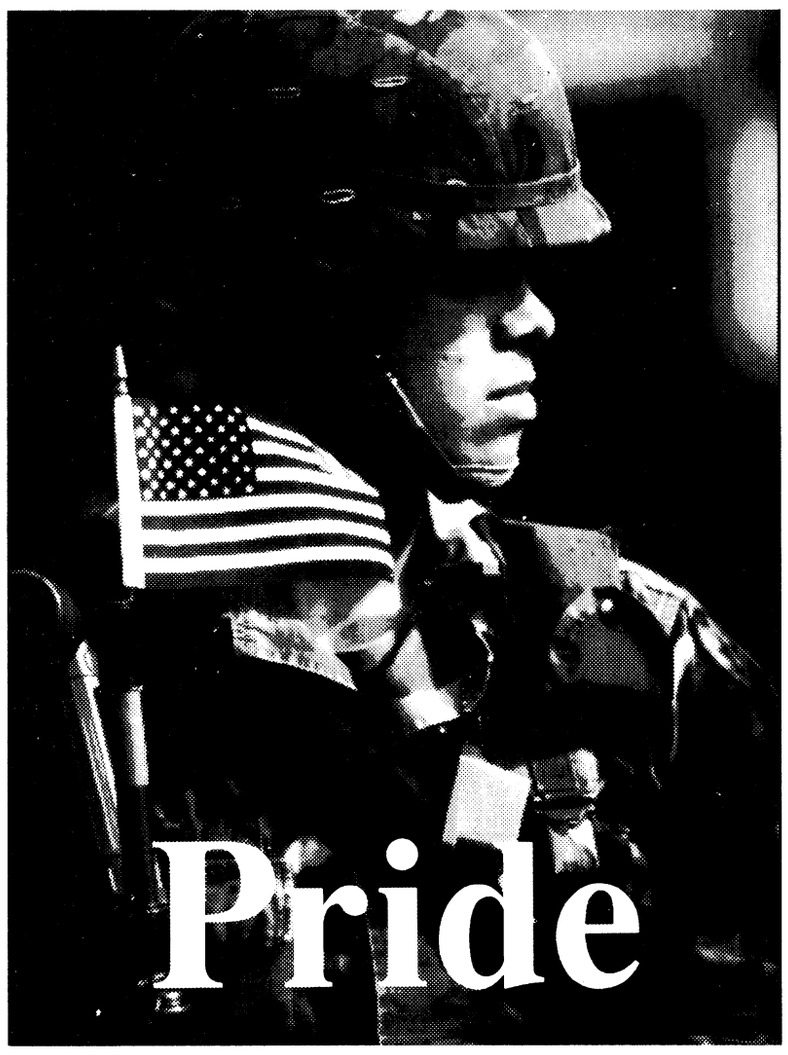
Pfc. Greg Lee, Headquarters Co., 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment. — "No. The victims go through (enough) things that are emotionally devastating as it is. If the accused is found guilty, his name should be released."



Spc. Christine Brashear, 283rd Army Band — "No. It's too personal. People are hurt and embarrassed as it is. Releasing the names would make it worse for everyone."

Cpl. Michael Cargill, 283rd Army Band — "The victim, no. The suspect, yes. Chances are, the victim has already identified the person; and, nine times out of 10, the suspect is guilty."

Barbara Nash, Army and Air Force Exchange Service — "The suspect's should, but not the victim's. If her name was released, it would make her not want to go further with the charges."



2nd Lt. Kenneth Jagusch, Infantry Officers Basic Course — "No, for the simple reason that the suspected rapist is an alleged rapist and hasn't been proven guilty."

Spc. Martha Flores, Protocol — "Yes. I think the rapist should be known, so he can feel blustered. But, I don't think the victim's name should be released."

Desert Storm victory reinforces our nation's superpower status

Armed forces' performance proved once and for all the United States is the most powerful nation on Earth

Association of the U.S. Army

The full dimensions of the Persian Gulf epic are yet to be fathomed. The big-ticket weapons are only half the story.

The truth is that in the past seven months, the United States has emerged as the sole surviving superpower on the globe.

No other country could get the U.N. Security Council to agree to a common economic and military effort on this scale.

No one else could have cobbled together such a heterogeneous group as the coalition in the gulf and coordinated its participation in war.

No other country could have deployed a host of armored, mechanized, airborne and marine divisions, together with huge air and sea armadas, to the other side of the world the way we did, and plunged into battle in such a short period of time.

No one else could sustain a force of over a half million souls in the desert, with everything from full anti-chemical gear to toothbrushes and drinking water — and still deliver the mail and make arrangements for the troops to call home.

No one else. Only the United States — with our first-class armed forces.

Desert Shield and Desert Storm were a set of operations that no other country could possibly replicate. Soviet military leaders may have had some doubts before, but it is certainly clear to them now. The Union of Soviet Socialist Republics is not in the same class.

Whatever prestige they may have won in the 1960s with their strategic missiles — ratified by the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty accords — has now been overtaken by a whole new array of military capabilities that their bankrupt nation cannot afford and that they probably could not build even if they had the money.

While the Voroshilov Academy has been retraining Russian officers to fight defensive engagements, young American officers have been out in the desert executing airland battle concepts against a Soviet-equipped and Soviety-trained army and "cleaning the enemy's clocks," as the troops like to say.

This is not a time for jingoistic chest beating, but neither is it a time to shy from the facts in the case.

America is a great nation. The greatest of all. And, the U.S. Army has played an important part in proving it. We don't have to argue about it anymore. Everybody knows it.

COMMENTARY

Smoking now prohibited in Building 4

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

A breath of fresh air has been blown into Infantry Hall.

Actually, what happened is all the stale air, some caused by people with onion breath, but mostly caused by cigarette smoke, has just about been eliminated.

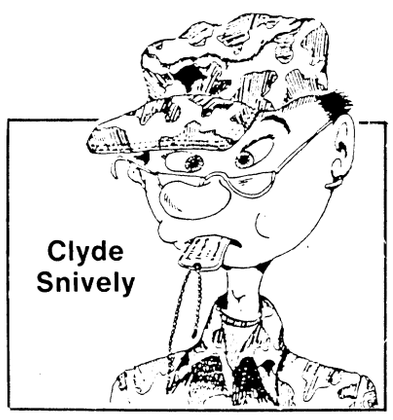
No longer do the outtake ducts in the offices suck up the stale, nicotine-laden air, carry it a few feet to the nearest intake duct then dump it into the lungs of some unsuspecting breather.

The reason is quite simple. There's almost no smoke to suck up, although the onion problem will never be solved.

I say "almost" no smoke because we know that people being people, they will cheat and finagle and find a way to beat the system.

One thing I've noticed is the smokers can actually go quite a long time without smoking if they put their minds to it (or forget about it). Speedy Brad, who's been known for spending the better part of his waking hours behind a cloud of smoke, has gone several hours at a time without a cigarette.

He's also got it down to where he can walk down the stairs from the sixth floor, exit into the inner court yard, light up, walk to the entrance by Marshall Auditorium, snuff out his cigarette, catch an elevator and be back at his desk in 3 minutes, 45 seconds.



Brad's only complaint is he needs to get a stronger cigarette because he doesn't get a nicotine fix on just a couple of hits from his Merit. He's thinking of switching to a stronger cigarette such as Camels or cutting off the filters.

Speaking of Camels, I find the current billboard campaign quite appropriate. You know the one. It features all those ugly camels sitting around bars and oasis, presumably smoking.

I say it's appropriate because recent studies find smoking makes people ugly sooner. I didn't need an American Medical Association study to tell me that.

Next time you're in the presence of a heavy smoker, check out the "suck" lines around his or her lips. Check out the "squint" lines around the eyes.

Supposedly nicotine and tar also cause the skin to dry out faster too and make it more susceptible to cancer.

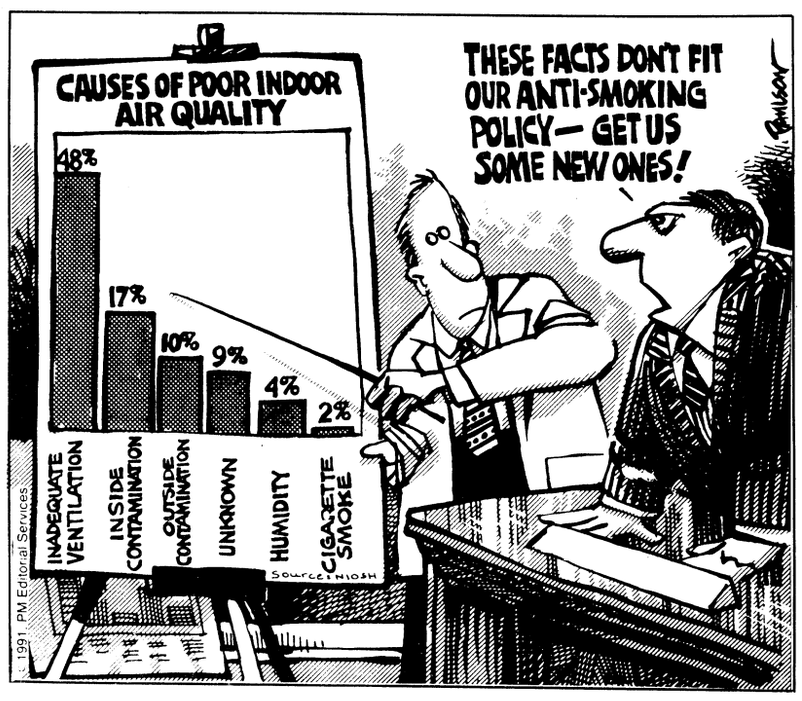
Blondie, another heavy smoker in a nearby office hasn't been seen at her desk since the edict came out. She's presumed to be missing. Hold it, word just in from the front — she's moved her office down to the cafeteria.

She says she's developed quite a relationship with the bus boys.

I wonder if cafeteria business has picked up or if they just have more ashtrays to clean out.

Ally says she smokes her two packs in two increments. "I save my breaks until lunch time and the end of the day. Then I go down to the cafeteria and smoke straight through for 45 minutes," she said through gritted teeth. She added, "If you think women with PMS (pre-menstrual syndrome) can be crabby, wait until you run into a person who hasn't had a cigarette in a while.

One very skinny woman from down the hall discovered she can open the window in her office and stand on the ledge for her smoke.



Just don't walk in on her and scare her because she doesn't have a safety line.

I also want to note that if the daytime smokers in Building 4 can take their smoking either outdoors or to the cafeteria, then the night denizens can too.

Seems that those who come here for night classes think rules only apply to the day people as you see those folks brazenly puffing away at the food tables in the hallway.

We may not be developing a more lean work force, but it certainly could be meaner. I do suggest though the smokers try carrots and celery sticks instead of candy as an alternative to cigarettes. Deep breathing helps too.

Finally, I want to state categorically, before I'm attacked by a biker who smokes, that I have nothing against smokers. In fact they can smoke all they want. Just as long as they don't exhale.

Post gets new directorate

Office will handle matters relating to military personnel

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

A new directorate of the U.S. Army Infantry Center was formed April 17.

Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza, post commander, approved the implementation of the Directorate of Military Personnel as a directorate under the U.S. Army Infantry Center, as outlined in a May 13 memorandum from post Chief of Staff John D. Fuller.

The new directorate combines the Office of Infantry Proponency and the Adjutant General under the auspices of the new directorate.

Some former elements of the Infantry Proponency have been realigned under the different directorates or areas of responsibility.

The Resource Management Division has been realigned under the deputy assistant commandant, the Information Management Office under the Directorate of Information Management, the International Student Training Detachment is now under the commander of the 11th Infantry Regiment and the Administration Office is realigned under the executive officer of the U.S. Army Infantry Center.

This change does not change the locations, office symbols or telephone numbers for the Adjutant General's office.

500 attend OCS anniversary ball

Former Army secretary guest speaker

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

The Officer Candidate School's 50th Anniversary Ball was May 24 at the Columbus Ironworks Trade and Convention Center in the South Hall.

Former Secretary of the Army John O. Marsh spoke to a crowd of approximately 500 people consisting of general officers, Officer Candidate School graduates and students and their guests at the school's 50th anniversary ball.

Marsh spoke to the audience about the accomplishments of our troops in the Middle East and cautioned them about further possible confrontations in other parts of the world.

"Desert Storm must be perceived in the light as the first post-Cold War conflict," said Marsh, adding that the U.S. Army's performance was something that we, as Americans, can be proud.

Marsh's comments turned toward the world's well-being.

> "It's a very sobering thought that there are currently 20 to 22 wars, conflicts and insurgencies in the world."
> — John O. Marsh

"It's a very sobering thought that there are currently 20 to 22 wars, conflicts and insurgencies in the world," said Marsh. "There are many foes that can pose significant challenges to international stability, and I would mention that the situation in North Korea is one of them."

Marsh also stated these conflicts and the suffering that accompanies them are not only found in the Middle East, but also in Africa, other parts of Asia and Latin America, particularly in third world countries.

"It's vital to America that third world (countries) develop a stable environment with a representative government and a higher state of living under the rule of law," Marsh said.

MPs participate in 1991 Torch Run

By James C. Rupp
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning Military Police and local law enforcement officials ran for a good cause May 23.

It was not just to keep themselves in top physical condition, but it was for the 1991 Georgia Special Olympics Law Enforcement Torch Run.

As part of a widespread volunteer organization, the military and civilian police took the symbolic torch across Fort Benning and into the heart of Columbus in an effort to raise money to supply better programs for the athletic competitions of handicapped Georgia citizens.

Col. Fred W. Liebe, Fort Benning provost marshal, began the run at 7:30 a.m. at the intersection of highways 26 and 27 where the post boundary meets Cusseta. He carried the torch for a one-mile stretch then handed it off to a waiting group that carried it for another single-mile leg of the journey, where another group waited.

The torch was taken down Victory Drive to 4th Avenue and to 10th Street until it wound up in front of the Government Center.

The torch was then finally handed from Liebe (who, along with the rest of the previous runners, had rejoined the torch bearers for the final mile of the trek) to Eddie Covington, the Columbus area coordinator for the Torch Run and a coach at Rutledge Correctional Institution.

According to Covington, last year the law enforcement officers of Georgia raised more than $75,000 to donate to the Georgia Special Olympics. This year, Covington said, the current amount of money raised stands close to $90,000.

Army working toward bringing reserve soldiers home by July

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — By July less than 20,000 of the nearly 140,000 reserve component soldiers mobilized worldwide for Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm will remain on active duty, according to Frank P. Weber III, chief of the Army staff's mobilization division.

However, while Weber said it is a top priority of the Army to return reserve component soldiers back to their civilian jobs as quickly as possible, mission requirements continue to drive unit demobilization selection.

"As we drawdown, reservists have an on-going role to play in various areas, such as transportation and civil affairs," Weber said. To date, the Army has demobilized more than 60,000 reserve component soldiers.

"These soldiers are not just sitting around waiting for things to happen," he said. "They are moving ammunition and running port operations — important jobs that must continue. As they complete these missions, though, we are moving them out and back home to their families as quickly as possible.

"There are active duty soldiers available to perform some of these functions," Weber said. "But we count on reservists for 70 percent of our logistical support. They are an inherent part of a mobilized Army. Just as we needed their skills to support the build-up of forces, we also need them to support the drawdown."

According to Weber, major logistics missions remain, such as assistance with Kuwaiti reconstruction and Kurdish refugee support, despite the Army's emphasis on a transition to contract workers and reserve volunteers.

Nevertheless, Weber stressed that since the end of hostilities, the Army's emphasis has been on demobilizing reserve component soldiers in Southwest Asia. In March, 9,000 reserve soldiers demobilized, followed by 17,000 more in April and 22,000 projected in May. He said the Army is working toward reducing the number of reservists in Southwest Asia to approximately 12,000 by July 1.

To date, out of 704 units and 73,084 reserve soldiers deployed to Southwest Asia, 378 units and 42,000 soldiers remain in the theater.

Also, more than 11,500 of the 13,170 Individual Ready Reservists that were mobilized have been released.

Teen club gets help from post community

Program to provide activities for youth during summer

By James C. Rupp
Bayonet staff writer

The Fort Benning Teen Club has found just about all it needs — funding, community backing, official support and leaders from the teen-agers themselves.

The Teen Club Council consists of four members. Joshua Figueroa acts as president with Shawn Porter as vice-president. Yolanda Anderson and Ashwante Amos fill the other two spots as secretary and council treasurer, respectively.

Although the club is still only in its very beginning, the council already expresses things in the club that it hopes to modify. Figueroa said he would like to see more activities focused toward the older group of youths.

"We do a lot of activities with the younger kids, and that keeps us from doing a lot of things we would like to try," he said.

Porter said many of the teens interested in the club would mostly like to see the club do something the youths care for and manage themselves.

He freely admits that teen-agers running a club for teen-agers could cause some problems.

"There could be two people in a crowd that could mess up anything," he said. "It really depends on us whether we're always going to be there to shoo those people away. If that is what we have to do to keep our club going, that is what we'll do."

One other problem council members said they are concerned about is the possibility of people not helping in the organization of the club, but merely coming around to enjoy the benefit of others' work.

"We have some like that," Porter said. "There are some people that follow others. If we can get the right people interested and active in the club, the others will have a tendency to follow along."

He also said they are more than ready to deal with such problems.

"It's our place," he said. "We can't expect anyone else to take care of it, so we'll just have to step in and handle things."

As Figueroa explained, "handling things" would constitute an individual's expulsion from the club.

One other concern of the council's was voiced by Figueroa. "Even though this club is supposed to consist of teens from post, there's a lot of kids from Columbus who are interested in joining," he said.

"They need a place to go, too," he continued. "They have no place to go either. They'd be just like us. . .no place to go but the street."

Council members confront this problem by suggesting the making of special identification cards for non-post youths. The same rules would apply and off-post parents would be required to register their children as well, they said.

Despite some of the seeming difficulties, the council members said they remain optimistic, offering new ideas and problem solutions to their adult supervisors.

"It'll get off the ground,"Porter said. "It's going to take a lot of hard work and time, but I think all of us here are willing to do it."

VA Q&A

Department of Veterans Affairs

Q. I receive monthly service-connected disability compensation payments and have separated from my wife. Can the Department of Veterans Affairs grant an apportionment of my compensation check to my wife and children for an amount greater than that included in the total award because of them?

A. Yes. Such decisions are make on the basis of the facts in the individual case.

Q. I received an "other than honorable" discharge. Am I eligible for Department of Veterans Affairs benefits?

A. An "other than honorable" discharge requires Veterans Affairs to make a special determination on the facts of the case to decide if the applicant's discharge qualifies for benefits. To be eligible for a particular benefit, the veteran must also meet the other eligibility factors which pertain to that benefit.

Q. My husband died in an automobile accident six months ago. He had been receiving compensation for a 100 percent service-connected disability since 1975. Will I receive any Department of Veterans Affairs benefits based on his service?

A. If your husband was receiving compensation for a 100 percent service-connected disability continuously for 10 years or more prior to his death, you may be eligible to receive benefits equal to service-connected death benefits, even though his death was from a nonservice-connected cause.

Q. My husband, who just died, was a veteran of the war in Vietnam. Can we get a flag for his coffin?

A. An American flag to drape the casket of any eligible veteran may be applied for at any Department of Veterans Affairs office or your local Post Office. The flag may be given to the next-of-kin, close friend or associate of the deceased.

Q. Are wartime veterans still considered by the Department of Veterans Affairs to be permanently and totally disabled at age 65 for nonservice-connected pension purposes?

A. No. The Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990 eliminated the presumption of disability at age 65 for pension claims filed after Nov. 1, 1990. Veterans age 65 or older must now establish entitlement to pension benefits based on medical evidence.

Chef Lee's takes you away

When you approach Chef Lee's Peking Restaurant, you're almost tempted to make sure you're in Columbus and not some faraway land in the Orient.

Chef Lee's, at 4248 Buena Vista Road, allows you to "taste of the Orient" without traveling thousands of miles or paying as many dollars.

One of the finest and most recommended restaurants for miles around, Chef Lee's has established an excellent reputation for superb atmosphere, service and authentic Szechwan and Peking cuisine.

The entire restaurant is designed with a distinct Chinese style of decor in vibrant colors, which adds to the total dining experience.

Despite the high caliber of this lovely restaurant, you don't have to worry about spending a small fortune. The lunch and dinner entrees are so reasonably priced that you can dine there for about $6 to $12.

One feature which spotlights Chef Lee's is the willingness of the manager and employees to please customers.

"We will do anything a customer requires to serve the best food," said Chef Joe Lee, who began acquiring cooking skills at an early age by observing his father and grandfather as they worked in their restaurant in Korea.

Customers may request that their food be steamed rather than fried or that MSG (monosodium glutamate) be excluded from their entrees. To honor special requests, the chef and his staff prepare dishes after they have been ordered. This is why every meal is quickly served fresh and piping hot.

Chef Lee's, which recently expanded its dining and parking facilities, has carry-out service, a bar and a meeting/banquet area to accommodate up to 70 people. Cash, check, Visa, American Express, Diner's Club and reservations are accepted. The restaurant is open from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. and 4:30 p.m. to 10 p.m.

If you're fond of Chinese cuisine, you'll love Chef Lee's Peking Restaurant. ■

Customers enjoy wonderful Chinese Cuisine as well as beautiful surroundings when dining at Chef Lee's Peking Chinese Restaurant, 4248 Buena Vista Rd., Columbus.

Crime

2nd quarter stats are in

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

A crime is committed once almost every three hours on post; a violent crime is committed once every day on post; a property crime is committed once almost every five hours.

These figures represent a decrease in crime, according to Military Police Activity officials.

In a recent meeting of the Fort Benning Physical Security/Crime Prevention Council, information on the amount of criminal activities among installation major sub-commands was released in a series of charts and graphs.

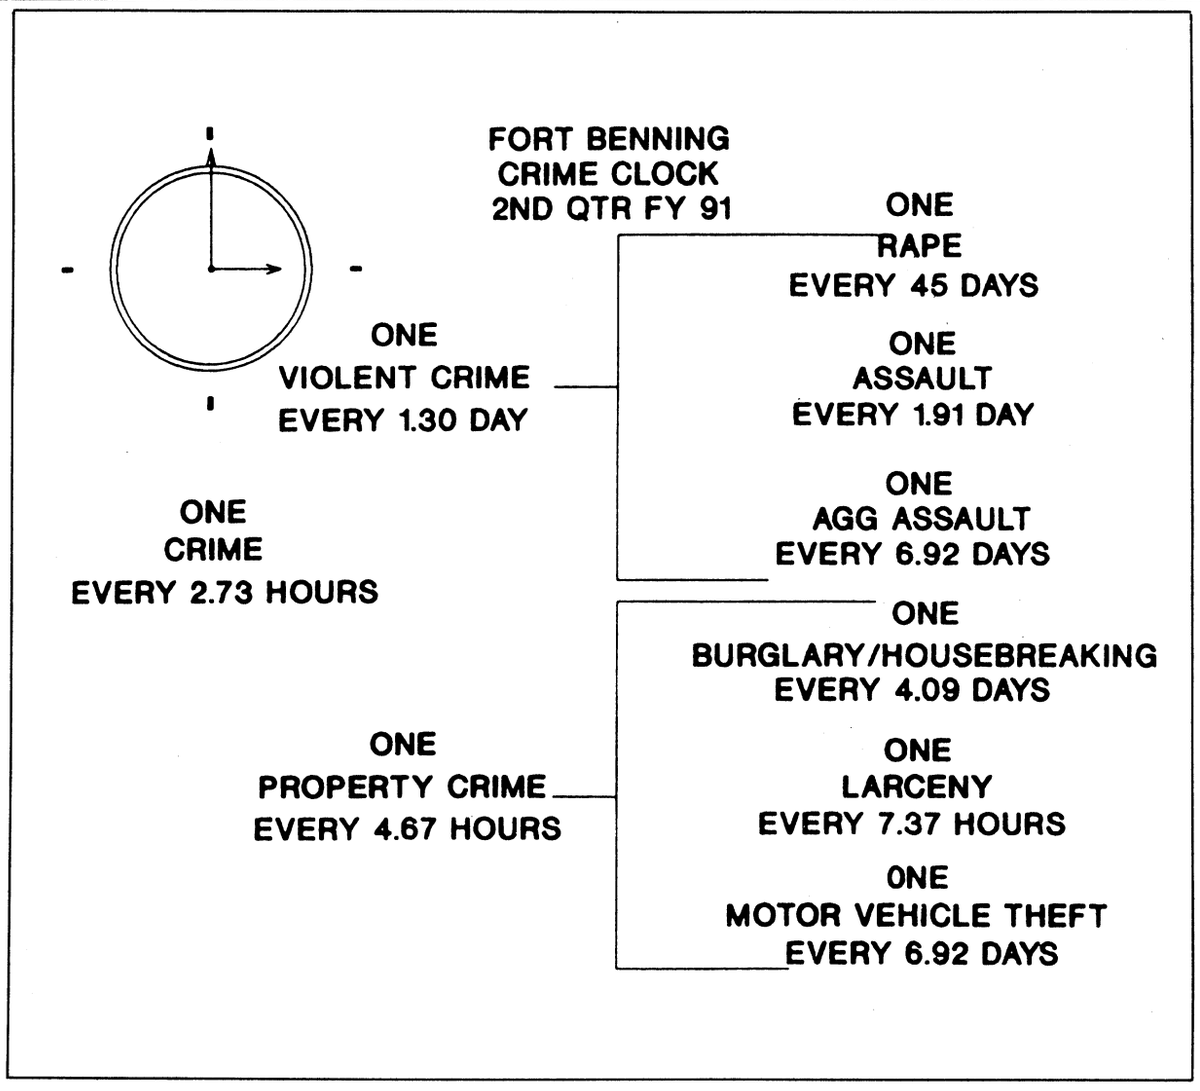
The graphs and charts are a comparative analysis of criminal statistics and a compilation of criminal occurences as recorded in military police records, said Sgt. 1st Class Joe H. Tillery, non-commissioned officer in charge of the Physical Security and Crime Prevention sections of the Military Police Activity.

"The information released in this quarterly meeting showed a marked and appreciable reduction in different types of crimes committed here on post, such as auto thefts," said Tillery.

Fort Benning serves a community of more than 110,000 people a day, to include off-post personnel and retirees, which makes dealing with post crimes and crime prevention a hard job, said Tillery.

The fact that Fort Benning is also an open post and military police must deal with persons not associated with the military has a significant effect on the crime experience, said Tillery.

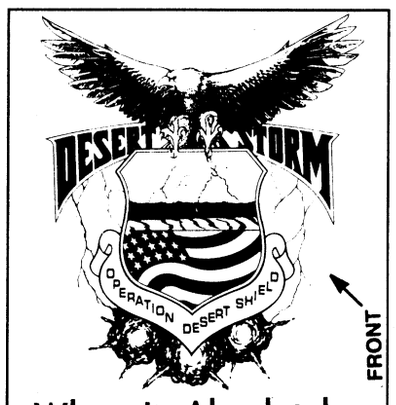
Capt. Richard Gregory, chief of Law Enforcement Services at the Military Police Activity said he believes that there "has been no marked change in the amount of crime on post." Gregory, did remark, however on the increased alleged false reports of vehicle damages on post, and how these false reports might be associated with fraud.



Traffic accidents are down by 3.4 percent, with the highest amount of incidents reported from the 29th Infantry Regiment having 24 counts of traffic accident violations.

Driving under the influence crimes are down by almost two percent, with the highest number of incidents reported from the 11th Infantry Regiment with 18.

Drug crimes are down by almost one percent. The 197th Infantry Brigade had four drug-related crimes during the quarter — the highest number among units on post.



Crimes against property, which include burglary, larceny, grand larceny, auto theft, arson and other types of damages, were down almost three percent.

Statistics for the quarter show crimes of violence, including murder, rape, robbery, aggravated assault, assault and others are up almost one percent. The units with the highest number of incidents of these type crimes was the Infantry Training Center with 11.

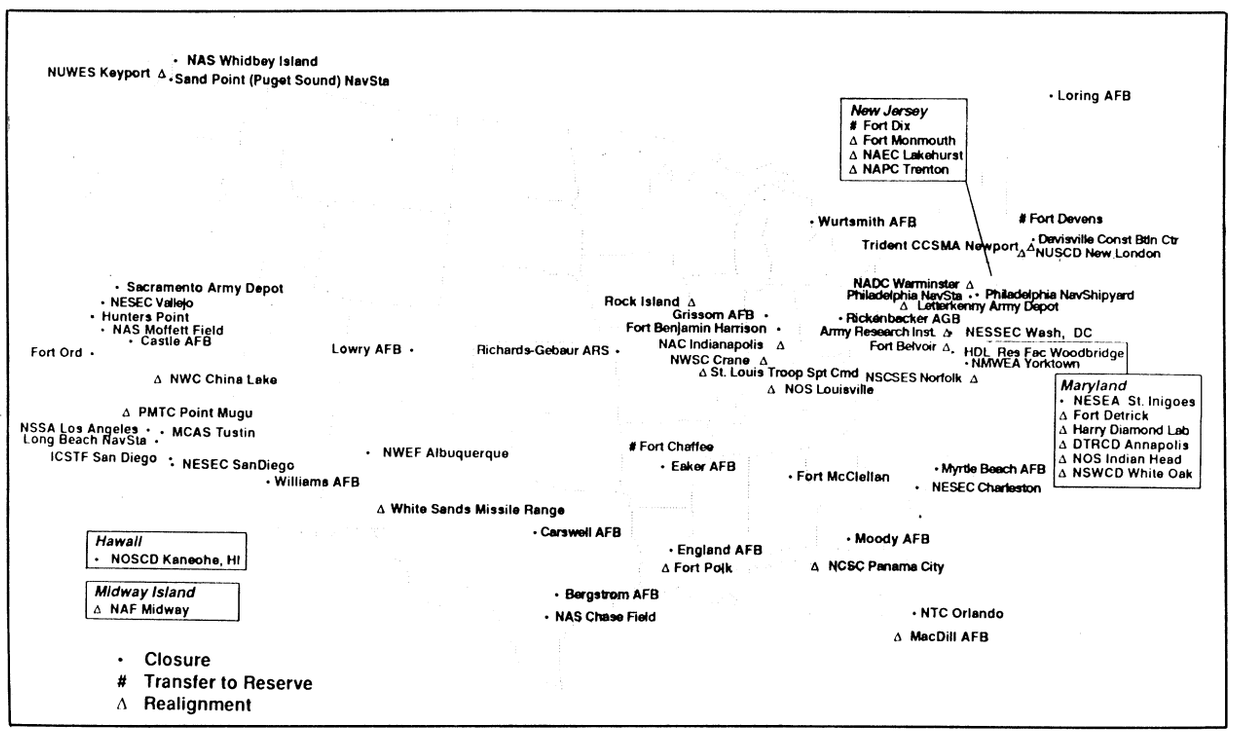
Defense secretary announces base closings

By Linda Lee
American Forces Information Service

Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney targeted 43 stateside military installations for closure in an April 12 Pentagon briefing. He also recommended reducing or realigning forces at 28 other installations.

"By 1995, the number of people in the U.S. military will be about one-fourth smaller than it is today," Cheney said. "Smaller forces need fewer bases. It's as simple as that."

According to DoD officials, the 31 major closures out of the 43 proposed would cost about $5.7 billion during fiscal 1992-1997. Reduced operations would save about $6.5 billion, for a net savings of about $850 million. DoD expects to save about $1.7 billion a year in operating expenses beginning in fiscal 1998.



Installations and facilities recommended to the Presidential Bipartisan Commission on Defense Base Closures and Realignments April 12 for closing are:

DoD criteria that pinpointed installations for closure or realignment included current and future mission requirements, force structure, cost, man power and return on investment, Cheney said.

The eight-member bipartisan panel has until July 1 to make recommendations to President George Bush. The president then has two weeks to respond to the commission, either accepting the report and sending it to Congress or rejecting it. If the president rejects the list, the commission has until Aug. 15 to provide a second one. The president's final deadline to submit the realignment and closure list to Congress is Sept. 1.

Congress has 45 days to enact or reject the list from the time the president submits it. Congress must accept the whole list or none of it; it cannot adjust the list. If Congress does not meet the 45-day limit, the list takes effect automatically.

President OKs military benefits package

By F. Peter Wigginton
American Forces Information Service

A military benefits package was approved by President George Bush April 6.

Increases in imminent-danger pay, family-separation allowance, group life insurance coverage, educational assistance, child care, family education and support services are among the provisions of legislation signed into law by the president to benefit service members.

The Persian Gulf Conflict Supplemental Authorization and Personnel Benefits Act of 1991 authorizes $15 billion for Persian Gulf operations, $400 million to provide a benefits package for service members and $255 million for veterans' assistance for fiscal 1991 through 1995.

Congress also authorized Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney to adjust fiscal 1991 end strength to avoid involuntary separations that might have been necessary to meet previous legislation on personnel cuts.

The provisions include:

Persian Gulf Benefits

Start dates of benefit eligibility differ. Several benefits depend on an "end date" of the Persian Gulf conflict that hasn't been set, so the benefit period is open-ended as of early April.

The legislation temporarily increases hostile-fire and imminent-danger pay from $110 to $150 for each month served in the Persian Gulf area beginning Aug. 1, 1990, and ending 180 days after the end of the gulf conflict.

A family-separation allowance provides a temporary increase in pay to $75 a month beginning Jan. 15, 1991, and ending 180 days after the end of the Persian Gulf conflict.

No provision was made for dual military couples without dependents.

Reserve component personnel called to active will be entitled to the variable housing allowance (if any) authorized for their home of record.

The bill authorizes medical, dental and non-physician special pay for reserve component, recalled or retained health care officers for the time actually served on active duty beginning Nov. 5, 1990, and ending 180 days after the end of the conflict.

Two sections of the package waived board certification requirements for specialty pay requiring prior certification.

Depending on the circumstances, the secretary of defense may grant the waivers or extend the time frame for certification.

Also, certification for foreign-language proficiency pay may be waived for those serving on active duty after Aug. 2, 1990.

The limit on the accrual of savings of members listed as missing has been removed.

Basic allowance for quarters will be allowed for single reserve component personnel who maintain private residences and who were called to active duty beginning Aug. 2, 1990, and ending 180 days after the end of the conflict.

All Military Personnel

Maximum coverage in the Servicemen's Group Life Insurance and Veterans' Group Life Insurance programs doubles to $100,000. Minimum coverage goes from $10,000 to $15,000.

The act provides that survivors be paid for all a deceased member's accrued leave, waiving the current 60-day accrual limit.

The provision applies only when the member dies as a result of injury or illness incurred while serving on active duty during the Persian Gulf conflict and is effective Nov. 5, 1990.

Another provision temporarily doubles a member's death gratuity to $6,000 for death resulting from injury or illness from Aug. 2, 1990, to 180 days following the conflict's end.

Although a "conflict end date" applies, this benefit is for all military members, not just those who served or are serving in the Persian Gulf area.

Retired officers could be recalled in the highest grade they held while on active duty and win 36 months time in grade, and they may be advanced to that grade on the retired list upon release from active duty.

This provision applies only to retirees ordered to active duty on or after Aug. 2, 1990.

Deductibles for the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services are temporarily delayed until Oct. 1, for dependents of members who served on active duty in the Persian Gulf conflict.

Adjustments in CHAMPUS mental health benefits and payments for such benefits from Feb. 15 to Oct. 1 will also be delayed.

Service members and their dependents, including deactivated reserve component personnel and those voluntarily or involuntarily retained in connection with the Persian Gulf conflict, are entitled to transitional health care for 30 days after release from active duty or until covered by an employer's health care plan, whichever occurs first.

Other provisions include authorization to appropriate $20 million to carry out child-care services and $30 million for family education and support services to families of service members on active duty due to Operation Desert Storm.

Congress also recommended that DoD develop an across-the-board policy for deploying members who are mothers of children less than 6 months old. It asked that DoD study its policies on deployment of service members with dependents and those from families with more than one service member.

For Veterans

"Period of war," as it affects veterans' benefits, begins Aug. 2, 1990, and will end on a date determined by presidential proclamation or by law. Surviving spouses of Persian Gulf war veterans now qualify for pensions.

Montgomery GI Bill Educational Assistance increases maximum payments to $350 in the active duty program and to $275 for activated reserve component personnel or for abbreviated periods of enlistment.

Payments under the Selected Reserve Program will be $170 for full-time students, $128 for three-quarter time and $85 for one-half time. After Oct. 1, 1993, annual increases may be granted based on increases in the consumer price index.

The bill also addresses membership on the Educational Benefits Advisory Committee, educational loans, improved re-employment rights for disabled veterans, requalification of former employees and eligibility for housing benefits for individuals who served in the Persian Gulf war.

Shooters from all Army branches get ready to compete on the firing line.

A National Guard team from 1st Battalion, 167th Air Cavalry, Lincoln, Neb. breaks loose to engage its next target in the combat rifle team match.

Army sharpshooters compete to be

Small Arms Champs

By Charlene L. LaDay-Hill
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

While most of Fort Benning was off some place beating the heat, the shooters competing in the U.S. Army Small Arms Championships were feeling the heat out on the ranges May 13 through 21.

The U.S. Army's National Guard, Reserves and active duty personnel came from all over the country to compete in this event.

The championships were divided into seven major events — combat rifle (M-16), combat pistol, national rifle (M-14), national pistol, M-60 machine gun, and sniper rifle.

In the combat rifle match, Staff Sgt. Beverly Spungin, Wyoming Military Academy, won the championship with a 717 - 46 V ('V' means center of the target; only counts in case of a tie). This homemaker and other of two, Fred, 9 and Letitia, 11, competed against 143 shooters (97 percent male). Her winning score beat last year's score of 707 — 53V and was only three points away from 1983's Army Match Record of 720 — 45V.

Spungin's top score was achieved through her performance in the rapid fire and slow fire events, and the excellence in competition Leg Match. In the 100, 200 and 300 yards rapid fire matches, she became the overall winner in the short range aggregate with a 294 — 32V. In the 400 yards slow fire event, she won one match and placed third in another; but, she still managed to get "first open" (first place in the open category, but not the overall winner) in the long range aggregate with a 186 — 3V. Finally, in the excellence in competition match, she placed second with a 237 — 11V.

"When I came here, my goal was to break a 700 and I did it," said Spungin. "I've been shooting combat rifle for seven years. This is my third time competing in the All-Army matches. The overall competition this year was outstanding. They really made me work for my win."

Spungin's husband, Staff Sgt. Mark G. Spungin, also in the National Guard, competed against his wife in the event.

"I'm really proud of her. I knew that she could do it. I just wish that I could have shot as well as she did," he said. "she practiced more than I did for this competition. It's good to see her hard work and efforts pay off this way."

Also taking a fair share of wins in combat rifle was Fort Benning's own Staff Sgt. Kenneth V. Gill, Company A, 1st Battalion, 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment. Gill placed "first novice" in the championship with a 710 — 58V. His scores from the 100, 200, and 300 yards rapid fire matches made him "first novice" in the short range aggregate with a 290 — 24V. In the 400 yard slow fire events, he won a match and placed fourth in another. However, he still was the overall winner in the long range aggregate with a 187 — 11V. In the excellence in competition leg latch he placed fourth with a 233 — 23V.

Another event offering a challenge to shooters was the M-60 Machine gun match. A gunners must go through five stages of fire in both individual and team matches. These stages are the 600-yard bipod, 600-yard tripod, 500-yard bipod, 400-yard bipod, and 300-yard bipod. All of these stages begin with a 20 round belt of ammunition. They also have a time limit for firing; 25 seconds — individual and 35 seconds — team. For the 600-yard tripod stage, shooters are given preparation time to set up their tripod and mount their machine gun on top of it.

Winning the M-60 machine gun was Staff Sgt. Neal R. Mellor, Battery B, 1st Br, 140th Field Artillery won matches 101, 102, and 125 (aggregate from machine 101 and 102). In the first match, he shot an 840; in the second a 753 for a total aggregate of 1593.

Organizing the championship was a major task for the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit. However, it did not stop their top Army shooters from entering some of the individual matches.

In combat pistol, matches 201 through 203 were made up of three tables. The first table was combat firing positions (prone, kneeling and sitting). Each shooter fired 10 rounds from each position within a 40 second time period (two and a half minutes for the prone). Table II was a duel match and Table III was the military rapid fire. Each shooters fires 30 shots per table, 90 shots total. After matches 201 through 203 are complete, the aggregates from each table are also combined forming other individual events.

For the national rifle match, 141 shooters participated, including members of the U.S. Army Service Rifle Team.

Pfc. Grant L. Singley, Spc. Lance Hopper, and Pvt. 2 Laura Kemp, all service rifle shooters, each placed well in their events.

Singley won the championship with a grand aggregate of 1467-51X. He was first open in the slow fire aggregate with a 584-19X; 15th open with a rapid fire aggregate of 394-15X; and placed fifth in national rifle excellence in competition, out of 188 shooters, with a 489-17X. Singley also competed in the president's match (score is not added to grand aggregate for championship); he shot a 286-6X. A total of 189 shooters competed in the president's match.

Drinking and boating don't mix

National Safety Council

In a society where drinking and driving is socially unacceptable, it is ironic that setting sail with a boatload of booze is still considered appropriate by many people.

According to the National Transportation Safety Board, recreational boating is second only to highway transportation in the number of fatalities that occur every year, and it is estimated alcohol is involved in at least half of all boating accidents.

The 70 million people who enjoy recreational boating each year often forget alcohol has the same effect on them whether they are operating a car or a boat. When a person is drinking, the brain's ability to process information slows. Reaction times are longer in situations that demand immediate response.

Everyone who consumes alcohol on a boat is at risk, because when the boat's motion is coupled with reduced coordination, people can fall overboard.

Three functions are impaired when a person is drinking and boating.

● Judgment — The ability to make decisions quickly, particularly in high risk situations, is one of the first things to go. For decisions such as avoiding swimmers or objects in the water, the wrong choice can be fatal.

● Balance — An attack of dizziness or a misstep can lead to disaster. Most boating deaths occur when people fall out of boats, or land in the water when the boat capsizes.

● Hypothermia — Alcohol gives a false sense of warmth. In reality it can help the body lose heat, fatally.

Boating while intoxicated is not only dangerous, but illegal. At the end of 1988, 30 states had set a blood alcohol standard for boating, with stiff penalties. Random spot checks have been set up on some lakes and rivers.

The National Safety Council recommends that recreational boaters follow these rules:

● Don't drink and boat.

● Wear a U.S. Coast Guard-approved personal flotation device, or life jacket, as protection if you do slip overboard.

● Check the weather and water forecasts before leaving shore.

● Limit the number of passengers in a small boat. There might be seating for four, but the capacity might be two or three. Check the capacity plate.

● Have visual distress devices approved by the Coast Guard.

● Use the "one-third rule" of fuel management: one-third of the fuel to go, one-third to get back, and one-third for reserve.

● Tell someone where you're going, and when you'll be back.
