The Infantry Officer Basic Course graduated a class Nov. 23.

A Largo, Fla., native was the distinguished leadership graduate.

Walmsley

John K. Walmsley, a second lieutenant with Company D, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, had the highest scores in his class that consisted of 214 lieutenants.

"The most important thing to remember when delegating authority is to always give the task, condition and standard," Walmsley said.

He also said that a leader should never take anything for granted.

"It is extremely important to know what your men are thinking," he said. "If you know what they are thinking, you'll understand how your leadership style affects them."

Before becoming a second lieutenant, he served with the 10th Mountain Division. He will attend Ranger School in December and then become a platoon leader with the 25th Infantry Division in Hawaii.

Other distinguished graduates:

Honor leadership graduate: 2nd Lt. Christopher C. Cerniauskas*

Honor leadership graduate: 2nd Lt. Dennis J. Geyer*

Honor leadership graduate: 2nd Lt. Scott D. Nader*

Honor leadership graduate: 2nd Lt. Mark D. Nutsch*

Scholarship program selects DOC workers

Directorate of Contracting

Three employees from the Directorate of Contracting were recently selected for the Army Acquisition Work Force Tuition Assistance Program.

They are Sabra Boynton, purchasing agent, Cena Hartman, procurement clerk, and Nilsa Summey, contract specialist.

This program, now in its second year, was instituted by the Department of the Army in response to the Defense Acquisition Work Force Improvement Act of 1991.

This act requires that positive education be obtained to be in the contracting job series and before promotions take place.

The act mandated that programs be set up by Department of Defense agencies to provide assistance to deserving personnel.

With these three personnel, the Fort Benning Directorate of Contracting now has seven individuals receiving scholarships under this program.

PROFILE OF EXCELLENCE

Felton

Name: Staff Sgt. Anthony Felton
Award or recognition: Post Noncommissoned Officer of the Quarter
MOS: 52D30P5, Power generation equipment repairman, master fitness trainer
Unit: Adjutant General Replacement Detachment, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment
Job Title: Assistant chief of Personnel Processing Center
Years on the job: 8 1/2 years

What were your reasons for joining the Army? I joined the Army to continue my education and for job security.

Define your work and your style of leadership. "Situation leader" — I change my style to fit the situation.

What person has most influenced your military career? The most influential person in my career was my basic training drill sergeant — Staff Sgt. Barkely, Fort McClellan, Ala., May 1985, Company E, 2nd Battalion. I wish I could find and thank him.

If you were the sergeant major of the Army for a day, what improvements would you make? I would take recommendations from the lower enlisted personnel and then use the problem-solving method if I felt it was a valid recommendation.

What were your reasons for choosing your MOS? I chose to repair power generation equipment because electrical diagramming would blend in with my drafting and design trade.

Describe a memorable moment in your career. One of my most memorable moments was a "STABO," or a sustained tactical airplane operation in July in Germany at the U.S. Army Air Assault School. I was flying through the air while harnessed with three other personnel while hanging from a UH-60 Blackhawk. It was like nothing I had experienced before. It gave me a legal "high."

What are your future plans?
I'd like to attend Officer Candidate School and obtain a degree in physical fitness and hope to work at the U.S. Army Physical Fitness School.

Students focus on reading, writing ... and exploring South Pole?

Bedtime stories didn't put them to sleep

Youngsters dressed in sleepers arrived the evening of Nov. 26 at White School clutching teddy bears and blankets and, of course, favorite bedtime stories.

However, these students were ready for anything except sleep. The "pajama party" and book fair were part of the school's celebration of National Children's Book Week.

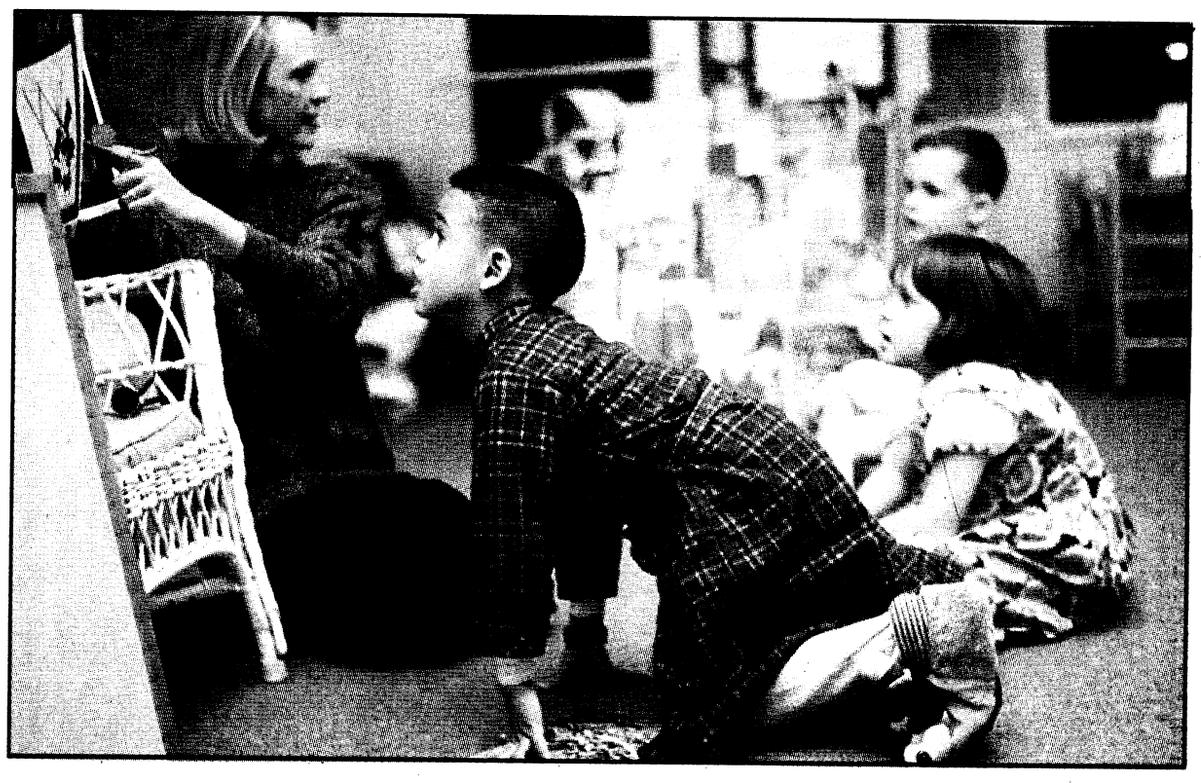
The three-part celebration included the pajama party, book fair and a reading challenge, which emphasizes nightly reading for 30 to 40 minutes. National Children's Book Week, in conjunction with American Education Week, is designed to promote reading "for the fun of it," said Janet Wynn, principal.

While children participated in various reading activities, parents browsed through selections of favorite childhood books. Parent volunteers coordinated the book fair and, in conjunction with the cafeteria staff, arranged snacks for the evening.

A total of 13 educators offered reading activities that included interactive stories, singing, crafts and flannel board stories. Many teachers used visual aids, including puppets, to enhance their selections.

A mime's performance illustrated that good stories don't necessarily come from books.

"Some little ones don't read yet," said Owen Ditchfield, media specialist. This shows them some stories can be told without words, he said.



Activities also included a reading quiet time where children enjoyed their own bedtime favorites they had brought with them.

In addition to the book fair and pajama party, the school issued a "reading challenge" to parents. This challenge is designed to enhance reading and language skills over a several-month period.

Beginning Nov. 15, White School asked participating parents to turn off the television and read with their children 30 to 40 minutes per night. This six-month challenge is designed to help children become "automatic readers" who are more likely to read faster, score higher and perform better in high school and college.

Turning off the television to read "is not a sacrifice; it's an investment in your child's success, achievement and future," Wynn said.

The school faculty believes parents' efforts will succeed, and is planning a spring picnic celebration to conclude the reading challenge.

Students link up with polar explorers

By Jerrie Macintire

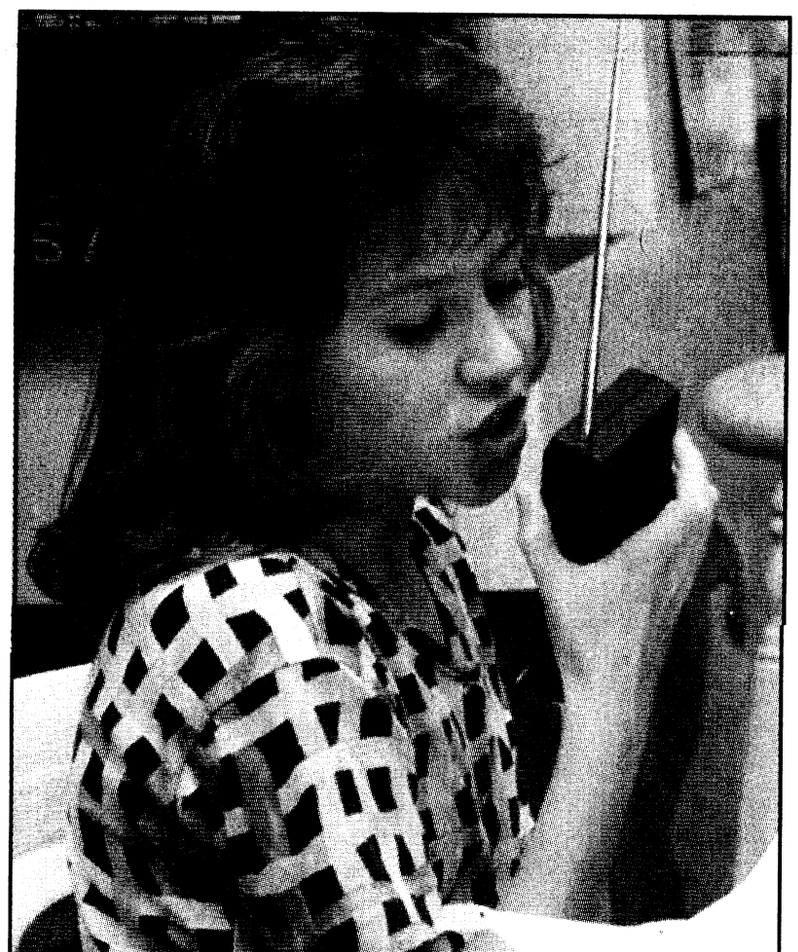
Fort Benning students are expanding their horizons and their awareness of the world around them as they monitor from afar the Mount Vaughan Antarctic Expedition currently under way in the globe's coldest region, the South Pole.

Dexter and Faith schools' youngsters are closely following the expedition of international adventurer Norman D. Vaughan through a modem, or telephone link, with the Prodigy information service.

Students across the country, including those at Fort Benning, can transmit and receive information about the expedition through this communications link.



For approximately one month, students will track the exploration team as it traverses the icy region toward Mount Vaughan.

The exploration leader, Vaughan, who gained international fame while accompanying Adm. Richard Byrd during the historic exploration of the region in 1928 to 1930, plans to celebrate his 88th birthday atop the mountain named for him.

"This expedition is especially meaningful to the students at Fort Benning who remember Vaughan when he visited here two years ago," said Faith assistant Principal Glenn Hughes.

Students have reviewed the video of Vaughan and his discussion period with Fort Benning students, Hughes said.

Some skills youngsters will sharpen with this unit of study include map reading, math, science, writing and navigation. In addition to the educational benefits, students of the difficulty the these students "are learning lots of lessons in life," Hughes said.

Morgan Harmon of Dexter School communicates with a walkie-talkie as part of the unit on arctic exploration.

As these students follow the current expedition through Antarctica, they gain a new appreciation for the resilience of the human spirit and the difficulty of surviving in the South Pole. One example of hardship they have discussed is the problem of communication. The explorers speak twice daily via radio through the windswept Antarctic to a base camp 1,000 miles away.

Dexter School youngsters paralleled this procedure by using walkie-talkies in their classrooms to communicate with their own "base," a representative in the media center who was using the modem-linked computer to follow the expedition.

As the walkie-talkies crackled, teacher Virginia Wilcox reminded expedition members face as they communicate through radio signals over miles of frozen desert.

"Think of how hard it must be for them to hear, with the wind blowing," Wilcox said. The wind can gust up to 200 mph in the Antarctic.

Other hardships Fort Benning students have discussed include the need for extra calories from meals each day, the difficulty of obtaining water, navigation problems and the special care required in dressing for such a harsh environment.

Students plan to follow the expedition to its conclusion, estimated to occur Dec. 19 when the team should reach the summit of Mount Vaughan.

Youngsters are documenting their activities so they can present a video and photo scrapbook to Vaughan after the expedition.

Buddy teams: Seventh-, second-graders work on author project

By Jerrie Macintire

Seventh-graders at Faith Middle School are helping younger friends feel like celebrities as the adolescents begin writing books featuring their younger buddies at nearby Dexter School.

This mutually beneficial program helps bolster the first- and second-graders' self-esteem while providing the older children with educational opportunities.

"This is a really terrific project," said Faith teacher Anne Trawick. Her students work in groups interviewing their young charges and making notes of favorite foods, activities and interests.

Once the interviewing process is complete, the middle-schoolers will collaborate on a manuscript featuring the youngsters at Dexter School. The stories will be fictional and will revolve around a winter theme.

However, these fictional stories will include details about Dexter students that are factual.

Stories will be written and printed on computers at Faith School. The students will illustrate their manuscripts using free-hand skills or arranging preprinted graphics. Next, Faith students will bind the volumes using the school's binding machine.

Dexter first-grader Caroline Grant responds to interview questions from Faith students Kristen Bradley, Derrick Mixen and Michael Woods.

"The children work in groups, and every area of their lives benefits from this," Trawick said. Some skills they use include language arts skills like composition, writing, editing and proofing. The students also hone skills in computer use, layout, design and drawing.

An estimated 400 children are involved in this young authors project.

Not only is the entire process educational but fun too, Trawick said.

Faith students will present the Dexter youngsters with their books at a party Dec. 15.

Stowers hosts book-based harvest festival

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

Students at Stowers School don't just read a novel — they really live it.

Four classes recently organized a "mini-harvest festival" designed to reflect aspects of pioneer life the students had read about in a children's book, "Sarah Plain and Tall."

Fifth-grade teachers Sue Ann Dixon and David Murray pooled talents and resources with teachers Rosalyn Smith and Miriam Aiken of the first grade for a celebration featuring animals and foods important to pioneer families.

Students sampled pies and other treats, shucked corn and stroked goats, rabbits and hens while discussing what life was like "in the old days."

"Animals were an important part of pioneer life," said Murray, who provided his own farm pets for the occasion. Food crops, especially corn, were necessary for survival in the pioneer days, he said.

A bushel of farm corn provided the activity of shucking for many children who had only seen the vegetable cut from the cob and prepackaged in neat boxes in the freezer.

In fact, the study of corn provided a series of valuable lessons in all areas of the curriculum during the unit on early American life. Individual corn kernels provided math activities, and corn's impact on society and diversity of uses were themes in social studies and science units of study.

The children used creativity and thinking skills in predicting future uses for this valuable resource, Murray said.

Some teachers and students enjoyed "dressing the part" of pioneers. Many wore farm clothing while others donned their "pilgrim" costumes created in celebration of Thanksgiving.

Parent volunteers helped with the feast as children nibbled and sampled a variety of dishes donated by faculty and parent volunteers.

Scouts

Organization teaches skills, leadership

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

Since 1910, the Boy Scouts of America have helped shape the lives of millions of boys who have joined its ranks.

Tracing its roots to late 19th-century England, the goals of Scouting remain essentially the same today — to train members in citizenship, character development and personal fitness.

These goals are achieved through a multifaceted training program that includes learning outdoor and leadership skills and providing service to the community.

Fort Benning Scouts have been busy in recent months developing such skills. In October, area troops gathered at Twilight Pond for a weekend of training and fun. They learned techniques like building fires, and they participated in various activities geared to build self-esteem and leadership skills.

Scouts must demonstrate proficiency in specific areas to advance within the ranks of the organization, according to Boy Scout officials. Through the demonstration of certain skills, Scouts can earn merit badges in more than 100 areas like first aid, citizenship, safety and camping.

Beginning at the rank of tenderfoot, a Scout has the opportunity to someday achieve the prestigious rank of Eagle Scout, a title earned by only 2.5 percent of all Scouts.

Attaining the rank of Eagle Scout requires many years of hard work and perseverance. In addition to earning the required 21 merit badges, the Scout must also serve the community and hold leadership positions within his troop.

In our nation's recent history, the rank of Eagle Scout can be found listed among the achievements of many famous men. In addition to 26 astronauts, others earning the honor include former president Gerald Ford, businessman H. Ross Perot and film director Steven Spielberg.

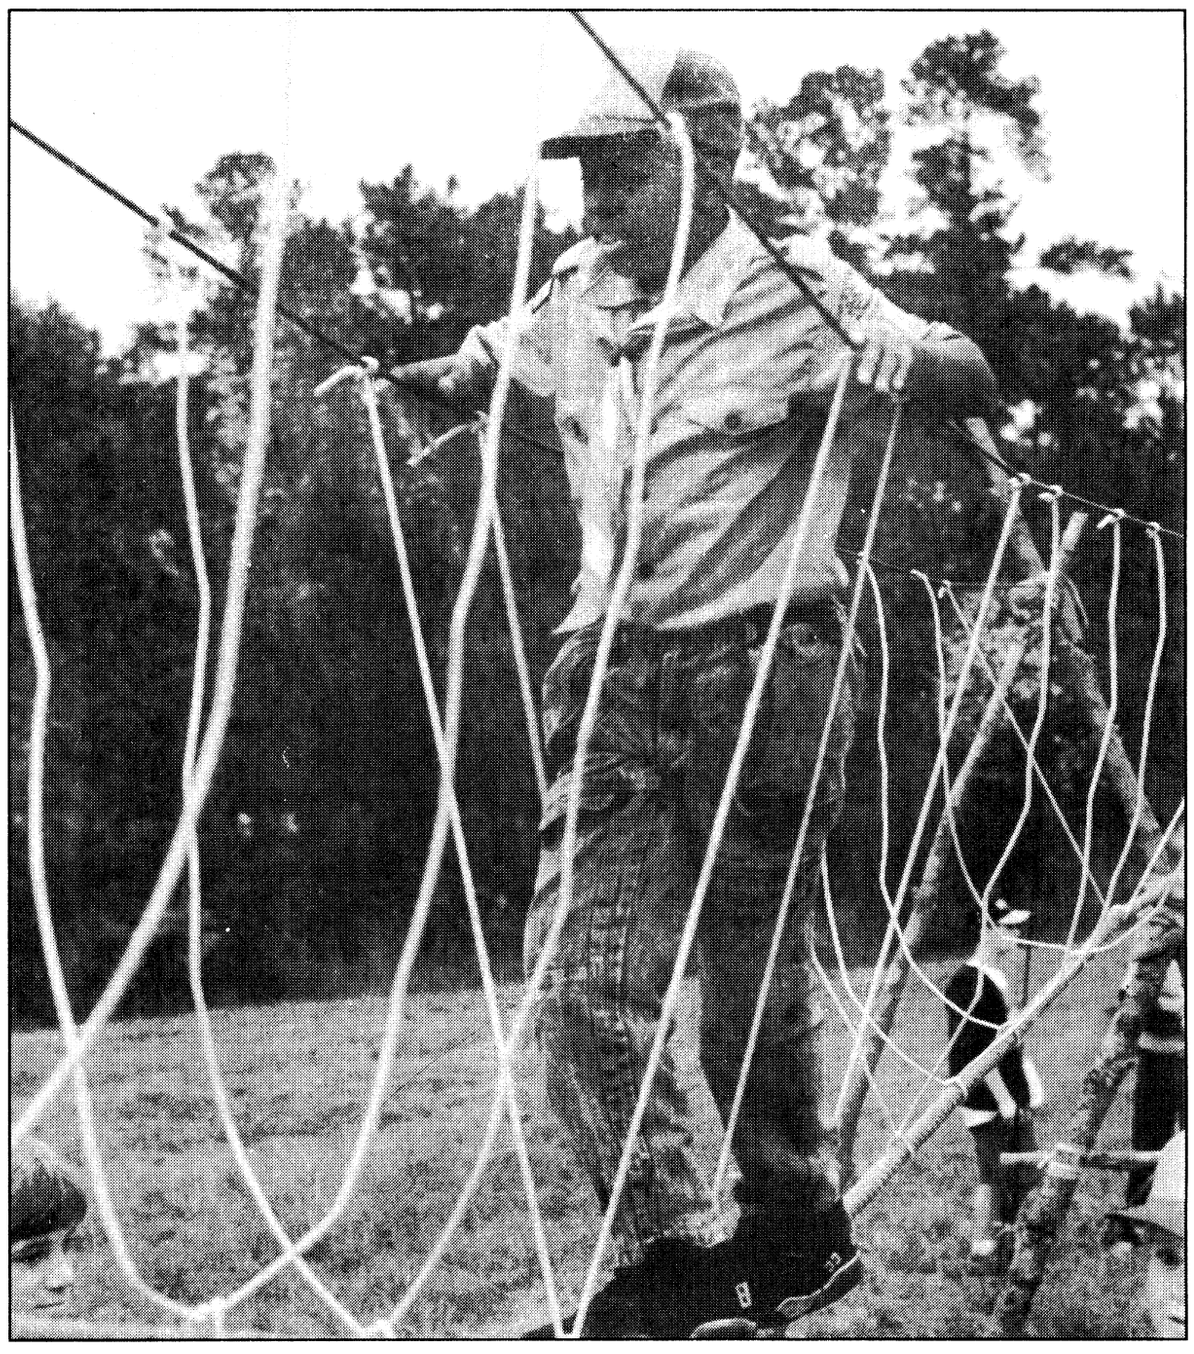
The Fort Benning community can also credit itself with having several Eagle Scouts.

Damien Currier, 17, is junior assistant Scoutmaster for Fort Benning Troop 227. Earlier this year, he earned the title of Eagle Scout after more than seven years of hard work.

Currier began his Scouting career while stationed with his family at Fort Devens, Mass. Shortly after joining the organization, he set his sights on becoming an Eagle Scout and began the lengthy process of achieving the goal.

After completing the required merit badges and advancing through the ranks, the final hurdle for Eagle Scout hopefuls is successful completion of the eagle service project.

"I chose to clean up Russ Pond as my project," Currier said. The area around the pond had become badly overgrown."



After gaining approval from Fort Benning officials, Currier led the effort of his troop to clean up the site.

"The two requirements of the project are that it must benefit the community and you must display leadership while completing it," Currier said.

In February, Currier finally received his Eagle Scout badge. He credits his stepfather, who is also an Eagle Scout, with inspiring him to achieve the goal.

Currier's troop and three others from Fort Benning will conduct a recruiting drive at Faith Middle School Thursday. The event will begin immediately after school and will give interested boys an opportunity to participate in Scouting activities.

Individuals interested in becoming a Boy Scout can sign up at the recruiting drive or call the Chattahoochee Council of Boy Scouts at 327-2634.

Need a tree? Visit your local Scouts

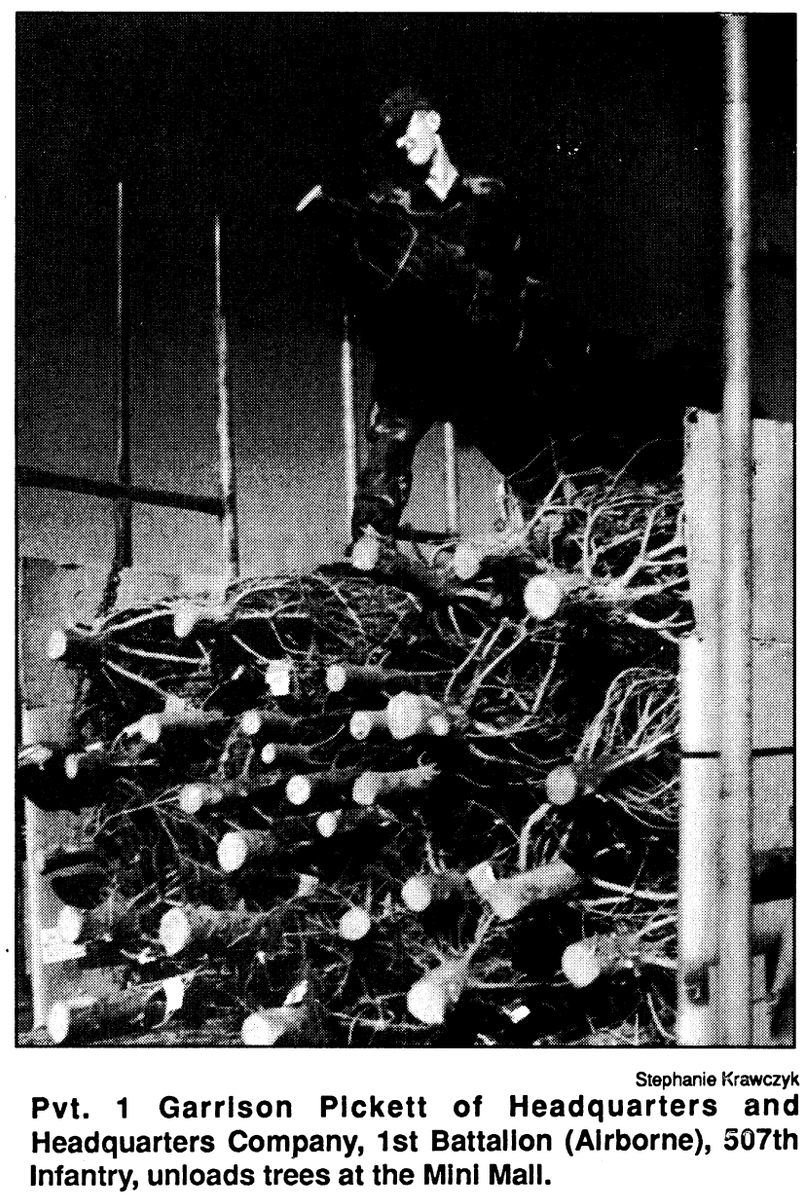
Fort Benning Scouts were busily preparing for their annual Christmas tree sale Monday afternoon.



Members of Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment, were on hand in front of the Main Post Exchange to unload the truckload of trees after it arrived from Wisconsin.

The fresh trees, some having arrived with snow on their branches, are now set up in the display area and ready for sale.

Volunteers will man the sale during the day until Scouts are released from school in the afternoon. Soldiers from the 507th Inf. will guard the trees at night.

The Scouts are offering seven varieties of trees ranging in price from $8 to $45. Proceeds from this event will be used to pay their yearly membership fees.

The sale is located at the entrance to the Main Post Exchange. It will continue as long as the supply of trees last. Other fund-raisers planned for the coming months are a popcorn sale and the Scouting Festival, a show featuring the talents of area Scouts.

Magazine gives students look back at World War II

'Profile' offers comparison of Army then, now

Department of Defense

NORFOLK, Va. — Students from middle school through college throughout the United States are getting a crash course in World War II thanks to the publication of the November 1993 edition of "PROFILE: A Guide to Military Lifestyles."

The November issue is entirely dedicated to World War II and gives students information on why the war was fought and who the people were who fought it. One of highlights of the 24-page issue is a section that compares the way military people performed specific jobs 50 years ago to the way they are tackled in today's military.

"That's some of the most interesting reading in the magazine because it gives you an appreciation of the obstacles that the World War II veterans had to overcome to get the job done," said Cmdr. E.H. Lundquist, director of Department of Defense High School News Service, Norfolk, Va., which publishes PROFILE.

"At the same time, you get a better feel for the different challenges faced by contemporary service members," he said.

There are also articles on the history of World War II, the contributions of women and minorities and a technological comparison of the weapons of World War II to those of today.

"The idea was to give students a better understanding of the war in a way that was educational and interesting," Lundquist said. "The magazine makes an important era in history come alive for today's generation."

The PROFILE World War II commemorative issue has been sent to junior high and middle school history departments and libraries, high school libraries and guidance counselors and college libraries or placement centers. Junior Reserve Officers' Training Corps, ROTC units and Department of Defense dependents schools based overseas also have the special issue.

The special issue, which features a distinctive red, white and blue cover, was the result of a collaborative effort between DoD High School News Service and the Navy-Marine Corps 50th Anniversary of World War II Commemorative Committee.

"Their support was instrumental in allowing us to produce an issue that benefits students and educators alike," Lundquist said.

Students can find the special issue at their school library or guidance counselor's office.

COMMUNITY BRIEFS

Alzheimer's disease conference — The Chattahoochee Valley conference on Alzheimer's disease, titled "Hope and Care for the Disease of the Century," will be Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The conference is jointly sponsored by the Greater Columbus Chapter, Alzheimer's Association, and the Turner Center for Continuing Education at Columbus College.

The most up-to-the-minute information on the identification, care and treatment of Alzheimer's disease will offered by a panel of regional experts. Information will also be offered on legal, financial and health-care planning for those care givers interested. The public is invited. Registration fee is $25 with lunch being provided for all registrants.

For scholarship information, contact the Greater Columbus Chapter at 596-9717.

SatoTravel birthday celebration — SatoTravel is celebrating 40 years of continued service to the military and government employees by having a grand prize giveaway consisting of two round-trip tickets on Delta Air Lines to anywhere in the United States.

The drawing will take place Dec. 15. Refreshments will be available between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m.

SatoTravel offices are located on Main Post in Building 247 on Ingersoll Street, Building 2628 in Soldiers' Plaza and on Sand Hill at Building 3245 on Hanson Drive; or call 687-4900.

Holiday travel — SatoTravel can help with travel plans to the snowbird climate of Arizona or to the snowy mountains of Colorado, Utah or elsewhere. Visit one of the offices located on Main Post in Building 247 on Ingersoll Street, Building 2628 in Soldiers' Plaza and on Sand Hill at Building 3245 on Hanson Drive; or call 687-4900.

College mixer — The Officers' Wives' Club will have its annual college mixer Dec. 19 from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. at the Ranger Training Brigade recreation center (Harmony Church area).

There will be pizza, drinks, music and a $3 cover charge. The party is open to all college students regardless of parent's rank. Participants must be between 18 and 23 years of age with a valid college identification or other proof of college status. Call 687-5620 to make reservations.

Faith Middle School holiday breakfast — Parents from Faith Middle School are invited to attend the annual parent and teacher holiday breakfast.

The meal is free to parents of Faith students, and it will provide an opportunity for the parents to have breakfast with the school's teachers.

Breakfast with the sixth grade is Monday, the seventh grade Tuesday and the eighth grade Thursday. Times for each are 8:15 to 9 a.m.

The Faith School chorus will provide holiday music, and the school's home-living students will prepare breakfast.

Reservations are required and should be made as soon as possible by calling Faith School at 545-5524.

OWC luncheon — The Officers' Wives' Club will sponsor "Shoebox to Showcase and More," a program about how to take photos during the holiday, how to get photos out of shoeboxes and into an album Dec. 15 at 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. The luncheon will be in the Regimental Room at the Officers' Club.

Motorcyclist meet — A group of motorcyclists will meet Saturday at 8 p.m. at the Wynnton Road Burger King to form a chapter of the Christian Motorcyclist Association. All motorcyclists are invited. For more information, call Wendell Newman at (205) 291-9491.

Child care certification class — All persons interested in enrolling in the Family Child-Care Certification Class in January must attend orientation. For more information, call Judy Cobb at 544-1623 or 687-4038.

Preschool openings — McGraw Child Development Center part-day preschool program has a number of openings for the two-and three-day programs. The three-day program meets Monday, Wednesday and Friday 8:30 a.m. to 11:45 a.m. for 4-year-olds.

The two-day program meets Tuesday and Thursday 8:30 to 11:45 a.m. for 3-year-olds. If interested, contact Meta Bush at 544-2521.

Christmas blood drive — The American Red Cross has teamed up with the 1-800-Collect to offer free long distance phone calls anywhere in the United States to persons who donate blood Dec. 17 at Fort Benning.

The free calls will be available to anyone who comes to the blood drive who gives blood or reads information about the blood supply.

The drive will be in Infantry Hall, Building 4, Classroom 6, from 10 a.m. until 3:30 p.m.

The goal for the drive is 200 units of blood. For more information, call 545-5194.

Patch Preschool openings — Openings are available for 3- and 4-year-olds in morning and afternoon classes. For more information, call 687-2404.

Volunteers needed — The Valley Rescue Mission needs volunteers to help sort and repair toys and bicycles for the annual Christmas giveaway to needy families in the Chattahoochee area.

For more information, call Philip Tisdale or Debra Rogers at 322-8267.

La Leche meeting — The La Leche League will meet Dec. 14 from 10 a.m. to noon and 7 to 8:30 p.m. at St. John United Methodist Church, 6507 Moon Road, Columbus.

For information, call 563-0684 or 568-7315.

Scholarship — Columbus College is seeking applicants for an international study scholarship now being offered.

The scholarship will provide an opportunity for a student enrolled at Columbus College to gain experience in foreign language and culture. It is open to graduate and undergraduate students, with preference given to students who have completed at least two quarters of a foreign language at the college level.

For more information, call Jacqueline Konan, Department of Language and Literature, at 568-2054.

Eat, drink — and be healthy this Christmas

General Mills

The holiday season is here and so are the parties with all their festive and taste-tempting foods. When planning your holiday gathering, do your guests a favor by serving favorite foods prepared in more healthful ways, suggests Karen Wilder, a registered dietitian. She offers these tips:

• For cocktails, serve hot mulled apple cider or a specialty spiced tea. Offer smaller portions of higher calorie cocktails, such as eggnog and cordials. Or create a special "mixed" drink of half eggnog and half low-fat milk.

• Arrange fresh vegetables in the shape of a wreath, stocking or tree. Serve with a low-fat sour cream or low-fat yogurt dip.

• Offer low-fat crackers to enjoy with a dab of colorful chutney or salsa. A rule of thumb for selecting crackers and other snacks: Choose varieties that contain 3 grams or less of fat per 1-ounce serving.

• Serve mini bagels with light cream cheese flavored with spices, such as garlic powder or dill weed. Offer other specialty breads, too, such as whole-grain pumpernickel and rye.

• Make soup or a main dish salad with whole-grain pasta or rice. Toss the salad with a light, lowfat or nonfat dressing.

• Prepare bite-sized versions of traditional favorites, such as peanut clusters and butter cookies. Use as a garnish or accompaniment for a light dessert, such as a fruit cup.

Ideal for your more healthful holiday menu is this recipe for Easy Chicken Nuggets. It calls for just three ingredients, including cereal as a breading for the chicken.

These ideas will help your holiday guests eat, drink and be merry — in moderation.

Easy Chicken Nuggets

1 pound boneless, skinless chicken breasts, cut into 1-inch pieces

1 1/2 cup honey mustard or Italian salad dressing

4 cups Total cereal, crushed (about 1 1/2 cups)

Heat oven to 425 degrees. Spray jelly roll pan, 15 1/2 x 10 1/2 x 1 inch, with vegetable cooking spray. Dip chicken pieces into salad dressing, then roll in cereal. Place in pan. Bake about 10 minutes or until juices run clear. Serve with prepared mustard, if desired. Makes 4 servings.

• High altitude directions (3,500 to 6,500 feet): Heat oven to 450 degrees.

BBB: Beware if you buy by mail

Better Business Bureau

As the holidays approach and many gift-givers turn to catalogs as a convenient, time-saving way to shop from home, the Better Business Bureau once again offers tips on buying by mail.

Read the product description first, don't rely solely on a picture for information about the product's size or quality.

If the merchandise is intended as a holiday gift, be sure to allow for delivery. Remember, some companies do ship up to the last minute if you agree to pay the extra delivery charges. Also, note the company's return policy. If it isn't stated in writing, ask about it.

Every year, Better Business Bureaus receive thousands of inquiries and complaints regarding mail order companies. Local bureaus note that if a problem should arise, it will be easier to solve if you have paid for the order by charge card, check or money order. Also, keep a record of your purchase, including the name and address of the company, the date you placed the order and the number of the money order or bank check. Examine the merchandise thoroughly when it arrives to make sure it's what you ordered and that it hasn't been damaged.

The Federal Trade Commission has a mail order rule to protect consumers who shop by mail. If a company doesn't specify a shipping time, it is required to send the merchandise within 30 days. If there will be a delay, the company must give you the option to either agree to the delay or cancel the order.

If you decide to cancel your prepaid order, the seller must mail your refund within seven business days of receiving your notice of cancellation. If you charged your purchase, the seller must adjust your account within one billing cycle.

The rule will be extended to items ordered by telephone, fax and computer beginning in March.

Make sure toys are 'user friendly'

Egleston's Children's Hospital

The sights and sounds of the holidays are magical for children. Ensure your family's holiday season is joyous by avoiding preventable injuries caused by unsafe toys. Use the following guidelines to choose safe toys your child will treasure for years.

Remember, toys designed for older siblings can be dangerous for younger children.

Avoid the following types of toys for these specific age groups:

Eight and under:

• Electrically operated toys with heating elements (miniature oven sets)

• Toys or art supplies with hazardous chemicals (oil paints, chemistry sets)

• Toys with sharp edges or points (bow and arrow, darts)

• Toys able to trap tiny fingers (mechanical toys)

• Shooting toys that do not have blunt tips made from soft materials such as rubber, or plastic suction cups (air gun, b.b. gun)

• Shooting toys capable of firing dangerous articles (nails, pencils)

• Toys that make loud noises (cap guns)

• Toys that contain lead paints, especially older toys found at flea markets or garage sales

• Toys manufactured in other countries which may not adhere to U.S. standards

Three and under:

• Small toys or toys with small removable parts that can become lodged in a child's throat (teddy bear with loose eyes, marbles, game piece, batteries)

• Toys with unsecured, breakable parts that cannot withstand uses and abuses

• Latex balloons

Infants:

• Hanging crib and playpen toys with strings longer than 12 inches that can cause strangulation

• Although mobiles encourage visual exercise, they can become a strangulation hazard once a child is old enough to pull the mobile to himself or herself.

• Squeeze toys and teethers small enough to become lodged in a child's throat.

Gifts

Food baskets are always in good taste

General Mills

Gift baskets of food get an especially warm welcome during the holidays, says Karen Wilder, a registered dietitian. To create healthful holiday gifts of food, start with nutritious recipes.

Select recipes that are high in complex carbohydrates and low in fat. As you pack your holiday food basket, use the recipe to help create a theme for your gift. Wilder has these ideas to get you started:

• Assemble a pasta basket that includes a jar of prepared pasta sauce, a selection of specialty pastas and a pasta serving utensil. Tuck all the items into a large pasta-cooking pot.

• Collect chopsticks, rice bowls, fresh ginger root, rice vinegar and a Chinese cookbook. Pack them all into a basket lined with red and gold fabric.

• Team pancake mixes from a specialty shop with a selection of fruit syrups. Arrange the items on a wicker breakfast tray.

• Arrange a bag of dry beans, fresh vegetables and your favorite bean soup recipe in a large bean pot.

• Place a fresh-baked loaf of whole-grain bread on a bread board and wrap in a colorful checkered napkin with little jars of assorted jams or jellies.

• Pack an assortment of herbal teas and a tea ball in a brand new teapot.

• Give the traditional fruit basket a new twist by presenting an assortment of dried fruits in a decorative fruit bowl or nut dish.

• Line a basket with cloth napkins and tuck in fresh-baked muffins or scones plus all-fruit spread or honey and hot cocoa mix.

• Assemble a selection of specialty coffees and holiday gingerbread on a decorative serving plate.

Or, suggests Wilder, present friends or family with an invitation to your home for a healthful holiday meal.

Egleston Children's Hospital

Make sure your holidays are fun and festive by protecting your family from injury. The holidays bring added risks not found year round. Help make this holiday season memorable by following these guidelines.

• Water a live Christmas tree frequently to prevent it from drying out and keep it away from fireplaces and items that could catch on fire.

• Anchor your tree to keep it from tipping over and hang ornaments and tinsel out of reach of very young children. Avoid glass ornaments if young children will be in your home.

• Don't use tinsel containing lead if children will be in the home.

• Don't use Christmas tree lights with frayed or damaged wiring. Never decorate your tree with candles and avoid the "octopus" — too many plugs in one outlet. Make sure holiday lights display the "UL" (for Underwriters Laboratories) label.

• Make sure young children can't reach seasonal plants that could be poisonous if eaten, such as holly and mistletoe.

• Avoid tablecloths. A child can be injured if he or she pulls on the overhanging edges of the tablecloth.

• Never leave burning candles unattended even for a few minutes. Place candles where they cannot be knocked down or blown over.

• Avoid serving small, round foods such as nuts, hard candies, cocktail wieners, peanuts, popcorn, grapes, small candies and pieces of raw carrots if children under the age of 4 will be present. These kinds of items could easily choke a child of that age since they are very similar to the width and diameter of a child's windpipe, making them potentially deadly plugs in a child's throat.

• Never leave alcoholic drinks unattended. Alcohol can have serious effects on children. If alcohol poisoning is suspected, call the Georgia Poison Control Center (616-9000) immediately.

• Move hot drinks away from table edges where they could be knocked over and scald children. Don't serve hot drinks on tablecloths where scalding injuries occur if a child pulls on the cloth edges.

Boating life jacket requirements change

U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary

Small recreational boats, including canoes and kayaks less than 16 feet long, will be subject to new life jacket rules beginning May 1995.

Under the new Coast Guard rules, boats under 16 feet must have a wearable life jacket for each person on board in order to satisfy Federal Safety requirements.

The Coast Guard continues its federal exemption for sailboards, racing shells, rowing sculls, racing canoes and racing kayaks. The rules for vessels 16 feet and over remain unchanged.

Under the new rules, having a "Type IV" throwable flotation cushion in a small boat will no longer be sufficient. Boaters must have on board a Type I, II or III wearable life jacket or be wearing a "hybrid" type V float coat.

The Type I, II and III life jackets still are not required to be worn under the new rules, but a wearable life jacket must be on board and readily accessible.

Another change in the new rules will allow states to set their own requirements on life jackets for children and for requirements for sailboards and personal watercraft — jet skis and wave runners, canoes and kayaks.

Already, 19 states have some form of life jacket requirement for children.

Florida is one of these states. Children under 6 years of age must wear a life jacket while boating in Florida waters. The Florida law applies to infants and young children under 6 aboard all private and commercial motorboats, sailboats and other vessels less than 26 feet in length, when such vessels are "under way." Violators face a $35 fine for each infraction.

Small boats were targeted in the new life jacket rules because boats less than 16 feet long are involved in the majority of boating accidents resulting in capsizing, sinkings and falls overboard.

Statistics have shown that 40 percent of boating fatalities occur in small open boats.

For additional boating safety information, contact your local U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary representative, J.R. Addington, at 545-7649 or the Infantry Branch Safety Office.

Drinking

Figures in almost 1/2 of traffic fatalities

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

Every year, traffic accidents are the leading cause of death in Americans between the ages of 6 and 33 and almost half of these deaths involve alcohol.

To highlight the problem, the Department of Defense and national safety officials designated December as National Drunk and Drugged Driving Prevention Month. The theme for the month is "Let's Take a Stand: Friends Don't Let Friends Drive Drunk."

The percentage of DoD motor vehicle fatalities involving alcohol continues to decline, said John Lemke, DoD assistant director for occupational safety and occupational health policy.

During the first three quarters of 1993, traffic fatalities took the lives of 316 military members. Of these, 65, or 19.2 percent, stemmed from alcohol-related accidents, Lemke said. For the first three quarters of 1992, alcohol was a factor in 55, or 19.6 percent, of the 280 military highway deaths.

Lemke said the continued decline is because of DoD prevention efforts as well as a change in society's attitude toward impaired driving. DoD will continue to emphasize the designated driver program.

"It's a good idea for friends to buy the designated driver's soft drinks and food," he said. "Also, some clubs on base and restaurants outside offer discounted sodas for the designated driver." In addition, many installations sponsor programs for people needing rides.

Maj. Joel Oswalt, provost marshal at Fort Belvoir, Va., said he'll place the remains of a car demolished in an alcohol-related accident in a strategic place on post.

"This is mainly to get the attention of teen-agers, who can benefit from the shock value," he said. "We'll also have electronic signboards reinforcing the messages put out by local police and national safety organizations. They'll remind people to wear seat belts, use a designated driver and not let friends drive drunk."

Oswalt said fighting drunk driving is a three-pronged effort involving education, prevention and enforcement.

"I prefer the first two because enforcement is unpleasant for everyone, but we will step up enforcement during the holiday season," he said. "We'll have checkpoints, and I can guarantee that people who drink and drive on our post will get caught and will be punished.

"I urge everyone not to take that first drink if they are going to drive," Oswalt said. "You may think you can drive well after one or two drinks, but your judgment is impaired. It's not pleasant for me, for the doctors who try to put someone together after they've been in an accident or for the family to deal with the loss or injury of a loved one."

Nationally, drivers and pedestrians impaired by alcohol accounted for 17,700 deaths last year, or about 45 percent of the nation's 39,235 traffic fatalities, according to Tarry Hess, a National Highway Traffic Safety Administration spokeswoman. As bad as these figures appear, they are an improvement from 1972 when 54,589 died on U.S. highways, half in alcohol-related crashes.

The proportion of teen-age drivers involved in fatal crashes while intoxicated has dropped significantly, from 31 percent in 1982 to 17.1 percent in 1992. Still, Hess said, 2,452 youths aged 15 to 22 died in alcohol-related crashes last year, about eight every day.

"That is a lot of parents who will never see their children again," she said. She said surveys show fewer eighth-graders today believe underage drinking is bad than a similar survey in 1989. "This means that without prevention efforts, we may see more teen-age fatalities in the near future."

The safety administration is urging states to adopt a "zero-tolerance" policy for youthful drinking, Hess said. As of July, 16 states had established lower blood-alcohol levels for youth to be declared legally drunk.

A coalition of public and private organizations sponsors the month. They include the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, Mothers Against Drunk Driving and International Association of Chiefs of Police.

VA Q & A

Department of Veterans Affairs

Q: I am currently serving on active duty in the Army, but I will soon be discharged because of a reduction in force. Can I change my current education benefits entitlement under Chapter 32, the Veterans' Educational Assistance Program, to Chapter 30, the Montgomery GI Bill?

A: Yes. You should submit an Application for Education Benefits (VA Form 22-1990) requesting the change from Chapter 32 to Chapter 30.

You also may be due a refund for your contribution to VEAP and also should submit an Application for Refund of Educational Contributions (VA Form 4-5281). Call the Department of Veterans Affairs' Regional Office nearest you at (800) 827-1000 to get the forms and instructions on where to submit them.

Q: Who is eligible for student work-study benefits?

A: A student enrolled on a three-quarter or full-time rate under Department of Veterans Affairs educational programs is eligible to apply for work-study under Department of Veterans Affairs education programs, including Chapter 30 (Montgomery GI Bill-Active Duty), Chapter 31 (Vocational Rehabilitation), Chapter 32 (Veterans' Educational Assistance Program), Chapter 35 (Survivors' and Dependents' Educational Assistance) and Chapter 106 (Montgomery GI Bill-Selected Reserve).

Q: My husband, who was a veteran, died before our first anniversary. Am I entitled to any kind of widows' benefits from the Department of Veterans Affairs?

A: Generally, to qualify for death benefits, a surviving spouse must have been married to a veteran at least one year or for any period if they had a child. However, the marriage date requirement varies depending on the benefit involved.

You should apply for benefits so a determination of eligibility can be made. Call the VA regional office nearest you at (800) 827-1000 for assistance.

Q: Will the VA pay me an allowance if I have my spouse, who is a veteran, buried in a state-owned cemetery, even if he was not receiving VA compensation or pension benefits at the time of his death?

A: No, but if your husband had qualifying service and he was buried free of charge in a section of a state-owned cemetery reserved solely for veterans, VA may be able to pay a $150 plot allowance directly to the state.

For further details, contact the VA Regional Office nearest you at (800) 827-1000.

Q: Does the Department of Veterans Affairs have a publication that defines the benefits I may be entitled to as a veteran?

A: Yes. Each year, VA publishes a booklet entitled" Federal Benefits for Veterans and Dependents."

This year's 105-page handbook describes these benefits, such as medical care, education, disability compensation, pension, life insurance, home loan guaranty, vocational rehabilitation and burial assistance.

It explains requirements for eligibility and outlines claims procedures. It includes a directory of all VA offices, medical centers, and other VA facilities, all listed by state.

For copies, request GPO stock number 051-000-00-200-8 from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402, and enclose a check or money order for $3.25 per copy. To order with VISA or MasterCard, call (202) 783-3238.

Q: Does VA have publications on its home loan guaranty programs?

A: There are several pamphlets, titled Pointers for Veteran Homeowners, the Home-Buying Veteran, VA Guaranteed Home Loans, and VA Direct Home Loans for Native Americans Living on Trust Lands. They can be requested by calling the nearest VA regional office at (800) 827-1000.

Q: What is the easiest way for me to find out what benefits I am entitled to receive from the Department of Veterans Affairs?

A: Veterans and family members from throughout the country may obtain information on VA benefits by calling (800) 827-1000.

Callers are automatically connected to the VA regional office serving the area from which their call originates.

VA has a number of other nationwide toll-free telephone services, including: Life Insurance, (800) 669-8477; Radiation Helpline, (800) 827-0365; Debt Management Center, (800) 827-0648; Education Loan, (800) 326-8276; Telecommunication Device for the Deaf (TDD), (800) 829-4833; CHAMPVA, (800) 733-8387.

Scholarships available

By Linda Lee
American Forces Information Service

Twenty-five college scholarships will be awarded in May to family members of active duty service members.

For the fifth year, the United Service Organizations is joining Anheuser-Busch Inc. to award $1,000 scholarships, said USO officials.

To be eligible, a family member must have graduated from high school within the last four years or be a graduating senior. The program is open to sons and daughters as well as spouses.

Applicants must include a narrative. It should outline the individual's activities that stress leadership, teamwork, citizenship and dedication.

Scholarship packets must be received at USO headquarters by March 1. Documents must be complete or officials will disqualify the applicants.

For more information or an application, contact the nearest USO or write to:

USO World Headquarters, Budweiser/USO Scholarship Program, 601 Indiana Ave., NW, Washington, D.C. 20004.

Hume Cronyn, Jessica Tandy 'dance' on CBS

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

She owns an Oscar, an Emmy and three Tony Awards.

He has two Emmys, as well as two Tonys.

SPOTLIGHT

Together, they have earned the Kennedy Center Honors ... and any tandem appearance by them qualifies as a true event.

Husband-and-wife performers Hume Cronyn and Jessica Tandy are among the most esteemed acting couples of this century, and a new TV-movie yields them another opportunity to work side by side. The spouses starred six years ago in the "Hallmark Hall of Fame" adaptation of the play "Foxfire" (for which Tandy received her Emmy) and they're under the prestigious Hallmark banner again with Sunday's CBS drama "To Dance With the White Dog," based on the 1990 novel by Terry Kay.

Appropriately, Cronyn and Tandy portray long-married people, though a tragedy sparks the story: The wife dies, leaving the husband struggling to carry on despite the best intentions of their adult children (played by Christine Baranski, Amy Wright and Frank Whaley). When the man begins talking about the attachment he's made to a stray white dog, his offspring fear the animal is only a figment of his imagination brought on by age and loneliness, though his devoted grandson (Harley Cross) believes him. Produced and directed by Glenn Jordan ("Promise"), the film also features "Good Times" alumna Esther Rolle as a family friend.

Hume Cronyn and Jessica Tandy

"To Dance With the White Dog" has certain other ties to "Foxfire," since Susan Cooper — who co-wrote the latter piece with Cronyn — did the teleplay for Sunday's feature, which seems to put a reverse spin on the same basic theme, since it was Tandy's character who was left alone by her mate's passing in "Firefox." Nevertheless, Cronyn asserts that "Really, the two stories are entirely different. It's me and Jessie again, and it's set in the South again, but that's all sort of coincidental. This is a gentle story of the kind I don't think we see enough of. There are no car chases and no murders — none of that."

What: 'To Dance With the White Dog'
When: Sunday, 9 p.m. on CBS

Other professional Cronyn-Tandy collaborations have included the two "Cocoon" movies and the Pulitzer Prize-winning play "The Gin Game."

"We've (worked together) so long, it's almost second nature," Cronyn said. "I've done three films this year and so has Jessie, which is an unusually heavy schedule for us. We aren't kids anymore; but, in two out of the three we've each done, we've played together." Their other shared venture this year was "Camilla," due in theaters early in 1994. "She plays the central role," he said, "while I play the small part of her lover. In ('White Dog'), I have the major role and she has a smaller part. That's always a more pleasant option than one of us being in California and the other on the East Coast (for different projects)."

Fort Benning breaks ground for new enlisted club

By Caejar A. Cox
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning's enlisted soldiers are getting a new club, and post officials conducted a ground-breaking ceremony Tuesday.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, Fort Benning's commanding general, participated in the ceremony as did Spc. James Shoemaker, president of Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers, and Spc. Pamela Jackson, president of the Enlisted Club Council. Tune in to "Fort Benning Today" Monday for highlights.

USAIC TV Schedule

Fort Benning Today: 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 1:30 to 2 p.m.
Specials: 2 to 4:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 4:30 p.m. to 8:30 a.m.

President Bill Clinton recently honored soldiers who were wounded in Somalia at Arlington National Cemetery and the White House. The president talked about the outstanding job the rangers did while in the besieged nation. Watch "Fort Benning Today" for highlights of the commander in chief's comments.

A new automated call-forwarding system, "Dial Services Attendant" goes into effect Dec. 10. Watch "Fort Benning Today" to find out how this change will affect you.

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel announces post events, post movie listings, and offers free classified advertisements on "Fort Benning Update," a community information service.

'Cinderella' comes to Springer

Springer Opera House

The legendary composition team of Rodgers and Hammerstein has given the world its most magnificent musical theater treasures — "Oklahoma," "South Pacific," "The King and I," "Carousel" and "The Sound of Music."

But one of their most inspired works, Cinderella, often goes unnoticed in the theater firmament and is very rarely produced. True, it had its origins, not on Broadway, but on television when Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II unveiled their stunning musical score in 1957 in the CBS special presentation. That program was seen by more than 107 million people making it the most widely-viewed television show in the history of the medium.

It has a familiar fairy-tale storyline and follows in the Rodgers and Hammerstein tradition of spiriting the audience away to far-off, exotic locations.

The music is Rodgers and Hammerstein at their best: "In My Own Little Corner," "'Do I Love You Because You're Beautiful'?" "Ten Minutes Ago" and "Impossible" are among the memorable tunes in the score.

So why isn't Cinderella produced more often?

"Simple," said Roger Mays, Springer associate artistic director who is staging the musical for a holiday run in Columbus. "The scenery, costume and special effect demands of Cinderella make this show extremely expensive and a technical challenge that most theaters are anxious to avoid. Even Oklahoma and Carousel can be done with representational or minimal scenery. But Cinderella is part musical comedy and part medieval pageant. It has to be a visual feast."

"We've put the show into our mainstage series so that we can give it the budget that it needs," he said. "Even so, our costume and scene shop personnel have been working seven days a week, 14 hours a day, to get the work done. Fortunately, we've got a first rate artistic team on the job, including nearly a hundred volunteer technicians."

Paul R. Pierce, Springer Opera House managing artistic director, believes that Cinderella will be a benchmark production for the theater.

"Most producers wouldn't think of trying to mount a show like Cinderella. But in the past five years, we've tackled some of the biggest shows in musical theater — 'Big River,' '42nd Street,' 'The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas,' 'Guys and Dolls.' Look around. We've got the designer, we've got the technicians, we've got the artists and we've got the experience. I believe that our ability to present Cinderella is a measure of how far we've progressed. I'm extremely proud of our great team."

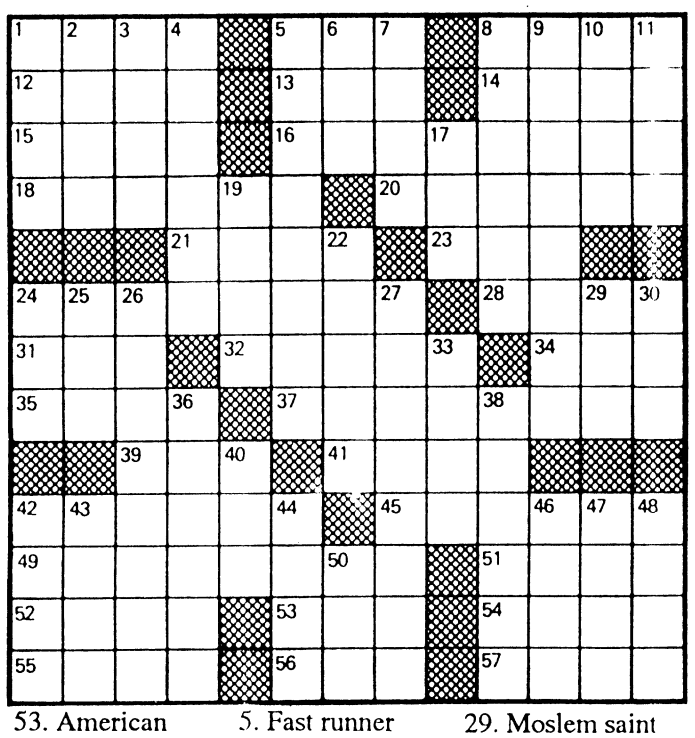
Audiences will be treated to the lavish costume designs of Springer newcomer Daniel Hanafan whose expertise in fantasy costuming will bring an exaggerated dimension to the fairy tale world of the play.

Resident costumer Joanne Middlebrooks has supervised the mammoth construction process engaging scores of stitchers, drapers, cutters and specialty artists in the project.

Scenic designer Peter Cranton has teamed up with scenic artist Dona Pierce to create the innovative sets for Cinderella including a full-scale pumpkin coach for the trip to the prince's ball.

Springer technical director William Rich has designed the show's lighting and magic effects and coordinated the massive scenic construction.

"I started out with four aces in my hand and a fifth up my sleeve", joked the director. "Janie Lee Bullock is our choral director, Michele Rogers is the choreographer and Dr. Paul Vandergheynst is musical director. And then, there's the cast."



Performances are Saturday and Dec. 10, 11, 17 and 18. Tickets are $14, $12 for senior adults and $7 for students. Group rates are available.

To reserve seats, call the Springer box office at 327-3688.

Christmas comes to mountains

Towns Chamber Of Commerce

The fifth annual Mountain Country Christmas Celebration will usher in the holiday season in the communities of Hiawassee and Young Harris with many family-oriented activities. The Festival of Trees, an exhibit of beautifully decorated Christmas trees, will be on display in Sharp Hall on the Young Harris College campus through Sunday. More than 30 trees, 12 miniature trees and several children's trees will be exhibited.

During the Mountain Country Christmas weekend today, Saturday and Sunday, there will be a tour of homes and historic sites.

One of the historic sites on the tour will be the Hiawassee United Methodist Church that was established in 1835. All the homes and sites will be decorated for the holidays.

The famous "Christmas House" of local antique dealer Jane Head, a tour all by itself, will be decorated with feather Christmas trees as well as antique trains and dolls. Visitors will be treated to refreshments at the Fieldstone Inn located on the shores of Lake Chatuge. A lake front home and mountain home will also be on the tour.

Saturday evening, an old-fashioned Christmas supper with all the fixings will be served in the Grace Rollins Dining Hall from 4:30 until 7 p.m. The Nutcracker will be performed at 8 p.m. in the Clegg Fine Arts Building.

For ticket information, contact the Towns County Chamber of Commerce at (706) 896-4966.

Help others when you order Cable TV this holiday season.

Dear Neighbor:

There is an old proverbial saying, "I expect to pass through this world but once; any good thing therefore that I can do, or any kindness than I can show to any fellow creature, let me do it now ... " What an appropriate thought during this season of giving. Especially at a time when countless people among us are so in need.

At CVI, we're more than just a provider of Cable TV service. We're a friend in the communities we serve. Every year, in 18 states across the country, in towns similar to ours, we join forces with local charities to help people in need. Together, we collect toys for children, canned goods for the homeless, and so much more.

This holiday season please join us in the spirit of giving. Make a contribution toward our holiday drive and help those in our community who are less fortunate. When you do, we'll return the favor with a special installation offer.

Sincerely yours,

Your Friends at CVI

SOAP UPDATE

ALL MY CHILDREN: Ted found an injured Dixie and took her to a shelter. Dixie begged an armed Ted for compassion and reminded him that he's Nola's son. Moved by Dixie's plea, Ted walked away. Tad told Dixie he'll ask Brooke for a divorce. After Edmund asked Maria's father for her hand in marriage, she agreed to remain engaged to him.

Wait to see: Dimitri faces a difficult emotional decision.

ANOTHER WORLD: Brett was sure Morgan was telling the truth about his innocence and persuaded him to appear at the trial. Grant rushed to the hospital after learning Vicky had been in a car crash. After voicing his concern for the baby, he and Ryan came to blows, and Grant suddenly realized his argument with Vicky may have led to the crash.

Wait to see: Rachel reacts to Carl's stunning admission.

AS THE WORLD TURNS: Margo received the autopsy report on Linc. Iva refused John's request for custody of M.J. when she moves to Washington with Jason. After arguing with Caleb, Julie met with Royce. Rosanna was puzzled by Evan's strange behavior. Holden overheard Damian and Eduardo argue over a large payment.

Wait to see: Damian prepares to deal with Holden's preoccupation with Lily.

BOLD AND THE BEAUTIFUL: Stephanie was thrilled when Charlton Heston asked to have Forrester Creations put on a fashion show to benefit the American Film Institute. Thorne told Macy he wanted her back, but only if she fired Anthony. When Macy tearfully refused, he walked out on her.

Taylor was puzzled that there was a local listing for James Warwick's dead father, but none for his living mother.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES: Ballistic tests proved the bullet from the gun found in Billie's apartment killed Curtis and she was arrested. After she was bailed out, she learned Bo had mortgaged his boat to come up with the money. During questioning by John and Roman, Peter made a slip about the family's connection to Curtis. John realized the plastic snap found near Curtis' body matched the clasp on Stefano's hospital identification bracelet.

Wait to see: John faces a possible life-and-death decision.

GENERAL HOSPITAL: Scott told both Katherine and Lucy that he wanted them out of his life. Katherine asked Mac to help her prove she's Dominique's half sister. The Quartermaines were furious with Jenny when they learned she had sold her ELQ stock to an outsider.

Wait to see: There may be trouble in Alan's immediate future.

GUIDING LIGHT: Roger had reason to believe Bess might double-cross the Spauldings at the hearing. Bess anxiously waited for Roger to turn up at the potting shed. Bridget and Dylan realized they were overheard when she said she would love to tell Roger he had insulted the mother of his only grandson.

Wait to see: The hearing produces a surprise.

LOVING: Buck invested through a broker who was secretly working for Dante. Jeremy helped Tess develop a promotional campaign for Steffi. While distracting Charlie and the FBI, Alex, posing as Clay, met with Dante. However, Dante suspected a trap, and set one of his own.

Wait to see: Dante strikes another blow at Tess' emotions.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE: Max and Luna parachuted back to Llanview and borrowed Asa's horse to get to Serenity Springs in time for their wedding. Andrew and Sabrina, a New Age priestess, officiated. Asa and Alex crashed the wedding. Asa caught Luna's garter. Cassie grew increasingly depressed over the death of her baby. Todd made plans to escape from prison.

Wait to see: Dorian makes a desperate decision.

YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS: Jill blamed Jack and Ashley for John's collapse. Ashley told Blade their wedding plans may have to change. Victor bowed out of Thanksgiving dinner with Nikki, claiming he had a cold. Cole proposed to Victoria. Dorothy got a busy signal when she tried to reach April to tell her of Robert's call. Meanwhile, April tried to call Robert to say she was staying a few more days with her mother.

HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21 to April 20) This is an excellent time for reaching agreements with others. Partnership interests are favored.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) If seeking someone to help you out part time around the house, you will find a person to your liking now.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You'll derive great joy from hobbies and activities with children. Avoid risky new investment schemes and overspending on pleasure.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You will be pleased with this week's family developments. Try not to get overly upset about a domestic concern.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) Make important phone calls and answer letters. Think twice when shopping, lest you purchase something you really don't need.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) A chance to make extra money arises now. You are charismatic and others are drawn to you. However, you still need to be levelheaded where romance is concerned.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Your powers of persuasion are tops. Positive thinking opens doors for you. Don't get carried away with home decorating.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) A private discussion bodes well for your financial interests. Higher-minded pursuits bring serenity. Though you are inspired and articulate, some crossed signals are still likely now.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Reaching an agreement with another may be difficult. Don't let a "what, me worry?" attitude toward money take hold while socializing.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) It is a good time for interviews and asking favors of higher-ups. Unconventional business moves aren't favored.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) Catching up with an unfinished task will be a priority. Time by yourself later in the week leads to important insights.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20) Happy news pertains to your financial interests. You are quite popular, and you will be enjoying good times in the company of others.

Army's secretary to visit Benning

Army chief of staff, TRADOC cdr to accompany him

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

The new secretary of the Army, Togo D. West Jr., will visit Fort Benning Wednesday and Thursday.

West, who was sworn in as secretary of the Army Nov. 22, will be accompanied by Army Chief of Staff Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan, Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr., commander of the Training and Doctrine Command, and Sgt. Maj. of the Army Richard A. Kidd.

As secretary, West is responsible for determining Department of the Army policies and programs consistent with national security objectives and policies established by the president and the secretary of Defense.

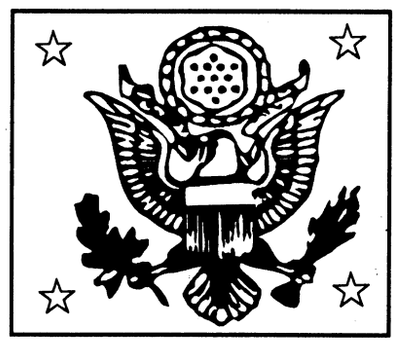
This visit is intended as an orientation to Fort Benning, and the secretary's proposed itinerary includes visits to the Infantry Training Brigade, the U.S. Army Infantry School, School of the Americas and other post units to observe and discuss tactics and training.

West received a bachelor of science degree and a juris doctorate degree from Howard University.

He was commissioned in the Army's Judge Advocate General Corps and served on active duty with the Office of the Assistant Secretary of the Army (Manpower and Reserve Affairs) from 1969 to 1973.

He has worked in private law practice and served in public positions ranging from associate deputy attorney general for the Department of Justice to general counsel for the Department of Defense.

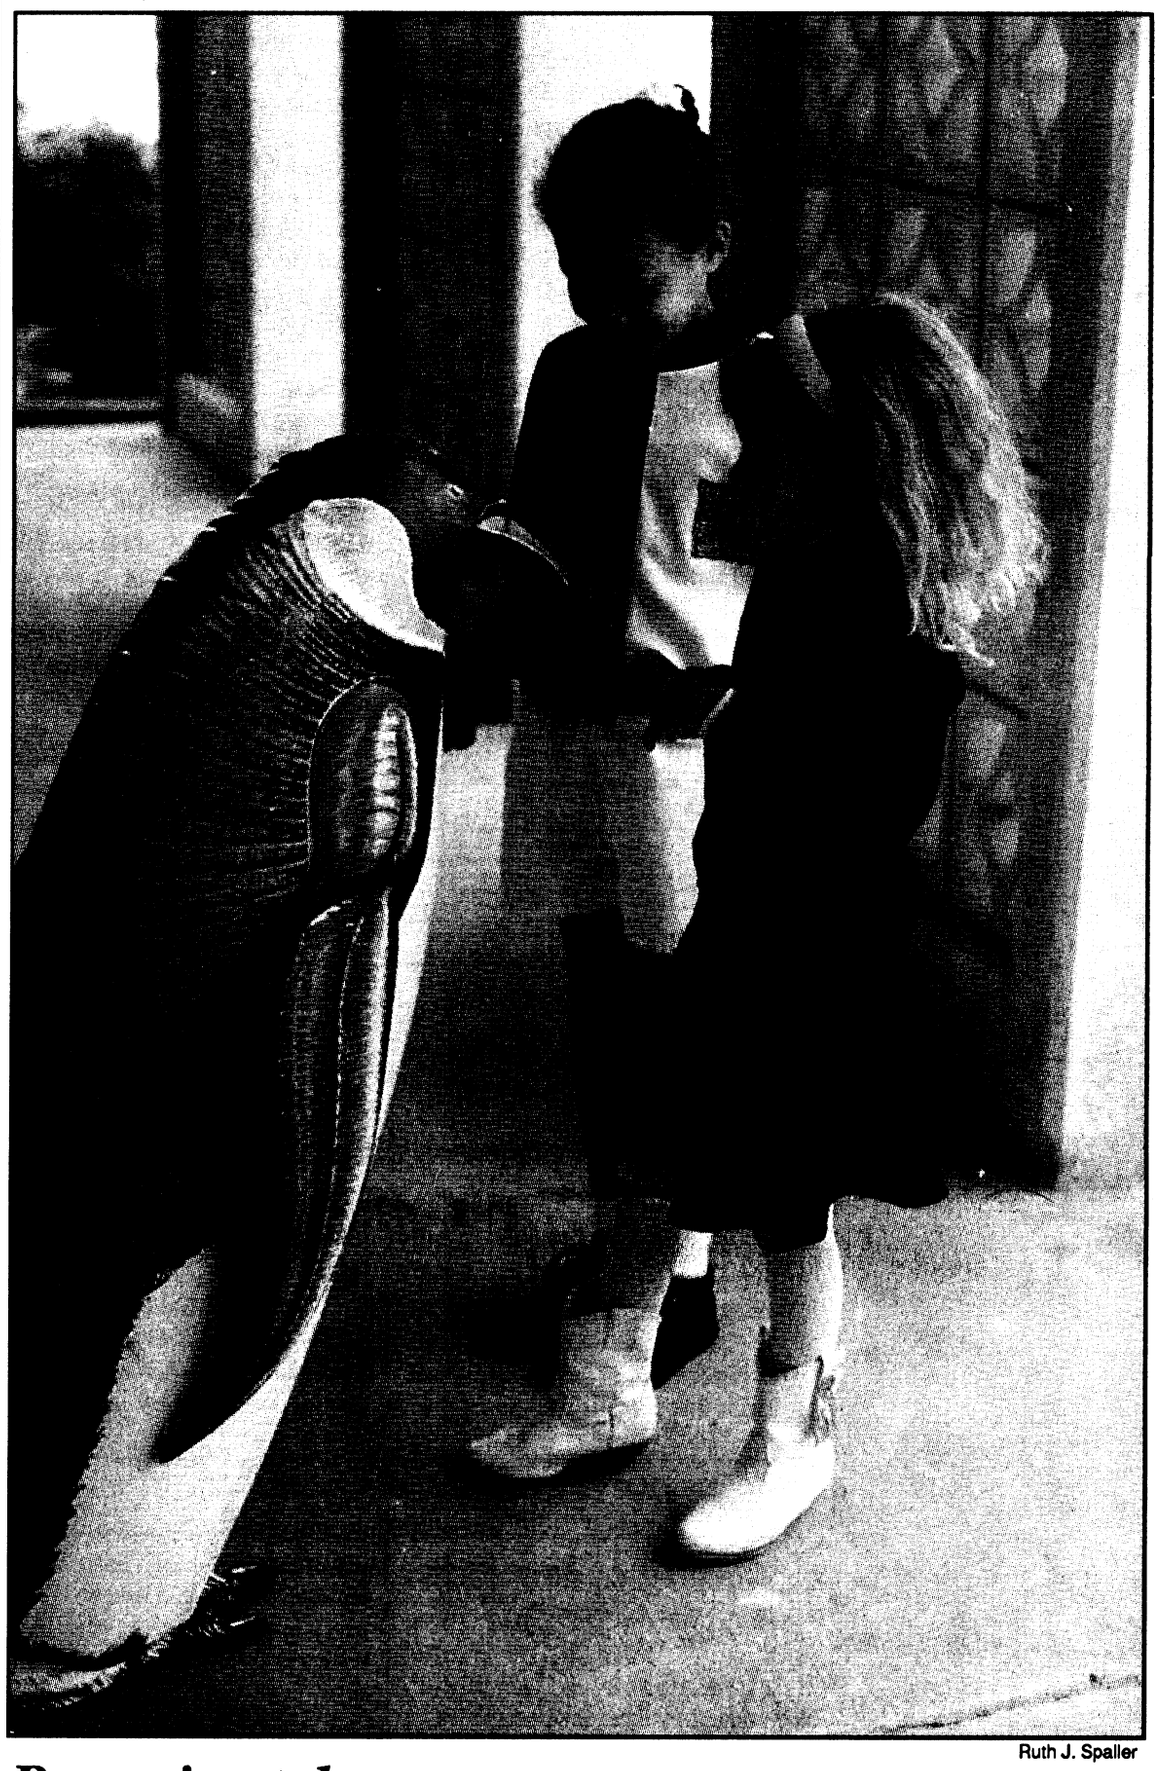
For his military service, he received the Legion of Merit and Meritorious Service Medal; and, for his public service, he was awarded the Defense Medal for Distinguished Service.



West's wife, Gail, is also an attorney. One daughter, Tiffany, attends Yale University School of Law, and their other daughter, Hilary, attends Connecticut College.

Salute to be courteous

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet Staff writer



The Office of the Secretary of the Army is represented by this flag and automobile plate.

The flag is scarlet with the U.S. coat of arms centered in the middle and white five-point stars in each corner.

Army Regulation 600-25, Salutes, Honors and Visits of Courtesy, states that "the practice of saluting officers in official vehicles (recognized individually by rank or identifying vehicle plates or flags) is considered an appropriate courtesy and will be observed."

Soldiers should remember this regulation during the secretary of the Army's visit to Fort Benning Wednesday and Thursday.

690th returns

By Denise Howell
36th Engineer Group

The 690th Medical Company of the 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital, along with some 60 family members and friends, celebrated the return of the company's 4th Platoon Monday.

The platoon, which deployed to Egypt Oct. 14, went to support the 24th Infantry Division and the 47th Combat Support Hospital and to perform field surgery as part of Operation Bright Star, according to company commander Capt. Peter V. Marks. He called it a "wartime evacuation mission."

Platoon Leader 2nd Lt. Kelly Simonis said the platoon's duties included removing incoming wounded from medical evacuation helicopters and transporting them to field hospitals. They also sent patients back to combat zones, or in some cases, back to the states.

"Deployment — there's nothing better," Marks said. "The only way you can figure out how to do all that stuff is to do it. And we do it!"

Sgt. 1st Class David Young, platoon sergeant, said, "It gave us an outlook on how to do our mission effectively in a Third World country."

Young and Simonis described a life-threatening situation in which a patient required emergency evacuation, but Egyptian officials forbade it.

"Despite language, religious and other differences, we finally got passes," Simonis said, and the patient was eventually evacuated safely.

Operation Bright Star is a yearly joint exercise that includes about 20,000 Egyptian and American troops.

Installation to compete for ACOE

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

The Department of the Army has once again selected Fort Benning to compete for the Communities of Excellence "best large installation" award for the continental United States.

Fort Benning will compete against Fort Campbell, Ky., and Fort Sill, Okla., for the award. The three posts were chosen from a total of 12 CONUS installations, according to Sarah McLaney, COE coordinator.

"We've also been selected to be considered for the Commander in Chief Award," McLaney said. "It recognizes one installation, from all the posts worldwide, for the pursuit of excellence."

The ACOE award for best large installation, which Fort Benning won this year, brings with it a $1 million prize, while the CINC award winner will receive $1.5 million, McLaney said.

The Department of the Army COE team is expected to visit post around the first of April, she said.

Fort Benning COE History

1992 — Installation won: First place, Training and Doctrine Command, extra-large installation category

Activities won: Best in TRADOC for Strategic Planning (directorates of Public Works, Community Activities and Resource Management), Civilian Personnel, Equal Employment Opportunity, Adjutant General, Staff Judge Advocate, Resource Management and Community Activities

1993 — Installation won: First place, Training and Doctrine Command, extra-large installation category

First place, Department of the Army, best installation in the continental United States, large category — $1 million award

Activities won: Best in TRADOC for DPW (Engineering Services), DCP, EEO, AG, Chaplain, Public Affairs, DRM and DCA

Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel: Best in the Army (world titles) for DCP, best civilian personnel services; AG, best military personnel services — additional $50,000 each.

Bright Star

MPs come home

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

Soldiers from the 988th Military Police Company returned Monday afternoon from Egypt where they participated in Operation Bright Star.

Not all soldiers from the 988th returned with this main group. One platoon is still completing its mission and is expected to arrive home within the next two weeks.

The returning MPs were greeted by family members and fellow soldiers as they arrived by bus from Atlanta.

This was the first trip overseas for many of the young troops, they expressed happiness to finally be home after three weeks in the desert.

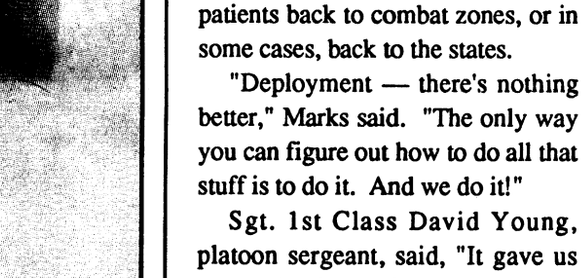
"It was good to see another country," said Pvt. 2 Pete Farley from 3rd Platoon, 988th. "It made me glad to be an American and absolutely glad to be home."

During the exercise, the soldiers had an opportunity to experience Egyptian culture and see some of the country's famous sights such as the pyramids and the sphinx.

"The pyramids were remarkable," said Pvt. 2 Elizabeth Alcantar from 2nd Platoon. "I will never forget them."

The MPs had a number of various missions during Bright Star, including convoy security, perimeter security and customs inspections.

All areas of their operation ran smoothly, according to Capt. Michael Walker, 988th company commander.



The customs checkpoint, through which all departing soldiers and equipment had to pass, saw no major problems.

"For the most part, everyone was polite and professional," Walker said. "We had a job to do and everyone understood it."

Col. James Crockert, post provost marshal, was also on hand to greet the returning soldiers.

"Many people have called Fort Benning to tell us what a good job you did," he told the group. He also gave them two days off so they could enjoy a belated Thanksgiving holiday with their families.

Operation Bright Star is a yearly joint exercise that includes about 20,000 Egyptian and American troops.

Merry Christmas

'Tis the season for wishes

COMMENTARY

People around this office wasted no time in getting up the Christmas decorations. Now they're bringing in catalogs to swap. It's like, "my catalog has better, cheaper, more unique, more novel, more useless stuff than your catalog," one-upmanship.

So while they hunker down to study the merchandise on the slick pages, I study them and decide what I think would be the perfect gift for them.

For Bubba Mac, our outdoors writer, I wish he'd get his big buck so he could stop justifying why he hunts: "Yeah, it's like this: I may get skunked, but, hey, I get to slosh 1,500 meters through the swamps, get ripped by wait-a-minute vines, sleep on the ground, eat a cold meal of beef jerky and watch animals do their thing. I was one with nature. It was a great hunt."

For Ms. Janice, the office dictator, I would give her a mall that stays open 24 hours a day. She was one of the few people who shopped on the day after Thanksgiving and is ready for next year.

She was there from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m., found the bargains she wanted, didn't have a parking problem, didn't have to wait in any of the food lines and loved every minute of it. She's the Bubba Mac of bargain hunters.

For Caejar Nicklaus, I'd line the woods with golf balls. After all, that's where he plays golf from; so give the guy a break and put some balls out there for him to find.

For Professor Moriarity, I'd get her a wind-up car. That way, when the beast started to slow down, she'd know it needed rewinding. As it is, her stupid car gets tired, comes to a stop wherever and whenever it pleases and leaves her stranded until it has had a chance to rest up and is willing to put in a couple more slow miles before repeating the process.

Even the experts at the Auto Crafts Shop can't figure it out, and the bills keep piling up.

For my bud, William O. Riley, I'd get him a food card. This card would allow him to buy food at any restaurant at any time of the day or night and never have to pay for it.

William O. is kind of like a land shark. He's always seeking out food; and, once he finds it, he eats it until it's gone or until the owner of the food realizes what's going on and chases him off.

For Madam editor, I'd get her a red pen that never ran out of ink. That way, she could make corrections on my copy until her eyes glazed over and never have to replace her pen.

If you think newspaper pages don't bleed, come up and look at one after she's finished reading it.

For Dr. Crabgrass, back in our Community Relations section, I'd wish for a weedless yard. Stop by his house any summer evening and you'll see him out there with his bottles of herbicide, pacing the yard, looking for broad-leafed and narrow-leafed weeds, squirting each offending weed with the appropriate bottle. It looks something like the sheriff in the Old West going after the bad guys, six shooters blazing.

For Ms. Nattie Bumpkin back in Public Information, I'd hope she too could get a deer. After a great start a few years back, she's been pretty much deerless and is taking a lot of kidding from the entire staff. As a result, we don't see much of her since she's starting to take more and more leave time so she can bag the elusive prey.

Finally, I hope we get our troops back from Somalia in time for Christmas or as soon to it as possible. I further hope that between now and Christmas some new emergency doesn't develop that calls our soldiers away.

And I hope each of you get what you want for Christmas and not necessarily what you deserve (which I suspect will be my case).

Congratulations Fort Benning — CG

Congratulations, Fort Benning! For the second year in a row, we have been selected as one of the finalists for the prestigious Commander-in-Chief Award for best installation in the Army. There are 13 communities throughout the world remaining in the competition. All are very aggressively trying to win this coveted award. I am confident that we will bring home the CINC award to Fort Benning.

The success we are enjoying is a direct result of the teamwork and pride that is easily recognized the moment a visitor arrives at our installation.

The great people we have here cannot be found at any other installation in the Army. Thank you for the superb job you are doing in taking care of our soldiers, their families, our retirees and the civilian work force.

You have made me very, very proud to be the commander of an installation that continually pursues excellence.

The Department of the Army Communities of Excellence team will be visiting us in the near future. This will be an evaluation visit. The judges will look at how we take care of our people, the enthusiasm with which we carry out our responsibilities, how we accomplish our mission, how we encourage innovation, how we use our Self-Help/U-Do-It Program, and the overall appearance of our installation.

I am committed to our vision of being acknowledged as the best installation in the Army. With your help and support, we will make this vision a reality.

Let's continue to pull together and make it happen for Fort Benning. We deserve the title of the "Best Installation in the World." This is our chance and our year to do it. Hooah!

Children's bus behavior concerns parent

I am a parent, and I am very concerned about the behavior of our children who ride the school bus.

First of all, their attitudes reflect on their parents and the home teaching they have received.

I have been hearing so many different stories about some of the children, that I had to see for myself. I am very angry!

First of all, (riding) the bus is a privilege and a luxury for the parent. If a child is deleted from the bus list, that means the parent or guardian has to drive the child to school. For most parents who work, that would be a hindrance.

My whole point is that children don't have much respect for the bus driver or themselves. They are cursing, and they are hitting one another. Some of them are making out with each other on the back of the bus while other children watch.

When I was told this, I couldn't believe it. Then I saw it for myself when the bus pulled up to drop off my children.

One parent asked me, "Why doesn't the bus driver do something?" My answer is that it is very difficult for a bus driver to watch the road, ensure our children's safety and watch everything that is going on on the back seat of the bus (all at the same time).

I believe we need to start taking charge, as parents, and help try to control these children starting with our own. Our children may be sweet little innocent angels at home, but some of them are little demons once they walk out that front door and get on the school bus in the morning.

I am tired of wishing things were different, and I am even more tired of hearing we have to accept things as they are because this is the '90s. I totally refuse to accept things I know are wrong and immoral.

Discipline, respect and obedience have been around for centuries, and it is in our Bible — "Spare the rod, spoil the child." Whether its the '90s or 2020, a child is a child and should always respect his or her parents and adults. I believe that is the way it should be, and that is the way it will be as long as my children are in my household.

Parents, start talking to your children. Find out their daily activities. Ask how things went at school. Ask what happens on the bus. Communicate with your children. They are young adults reaching out for guidance, but some of them ask for attention in many ways — even if they have to get into trouble to get it.

We were young once; and, in reality, it wasn't that long ago.

Yvonne Watkins
Fort Benning

Fort Benning Schools' response:

We appreciate Yvonne Watkins' concern. A safe and comfortable ride to school is a right all students have until they abuse it.

Fort Benning Schools' principals work closely with our bus drivers to follow up on any reports of misbehavior on school buses. We are always on the alert for any condition that might bring harm to students or to those with whom the bus comes into contact.

We encourage all parents to talk with their children about appropriate bus behavior. We also encourage parents to notify the school principal or Donna Ford at the Fort Benning Schools' administration office (545-2500) when they observe a bus with obvious inappropriate behavior or if their child has an unresolved concern.

Parents should be sure to include bus number, time of the incident and specific concern when making the report.

Parents can rest assured that incidents reported by students, drivers or parents are investigated, and students who abuse bus riding privileges risk losing the right to ride a bus to a Fort Benning school.

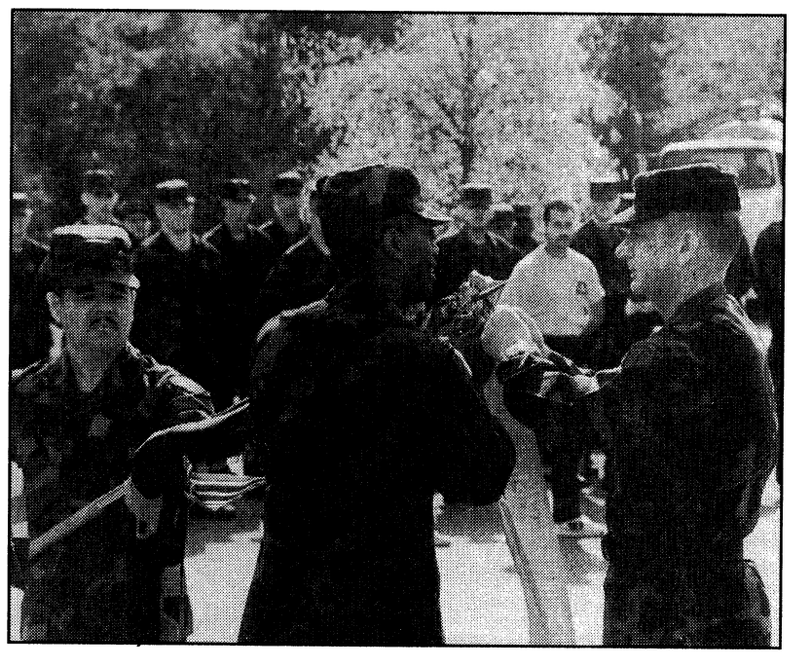
30th AG Bn gets streamer

By Shelby Carr
Infantry Training Brigade

The 30th Adjutant General Battalion (Reception) recently received a streamer for 100 percent participation in the Association of the United States Army.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, commanding general, presented the streamer to the battalion during the 30th AG Family Day activities.

"This is the first time during my time at Fort Benning I have had the honor to present a streamer for 100 percent participation in AUSA," White said.



The last battalion to have all of its soldiers to join AUSA was five years ago, said Command Sgt. Maj. Oscar R. Geraldo, command sergeant major of the battalion.

The 30th AG wanted to distinguish itself by being at the top and living up to the battalion motto of "Meeting the Challenge, Always First," Geraldo said.

"We set short-term goals of 100 percent and long-term goals of maintaining 100 percent," he said.

Geraldo said he continues to recruit the soldiers coming into his battalion and has recruited civilian members of the community to become members of AUSA.

Geraldo said the entire chain of command and senior noncommissioned officers helped to achieve 100 percent participation.

Post's utility center celebrates birthday

Program provides one-stop service

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

The Utility Coordination Center celebrated its one-year anniversary with a gathering of Fort Benning leaders and utility company officials Dec 1.

The center, located in Soldiers' Plaza, provides a one-stop service for soldiers to hook up or disconnect their basic utilities in on or off-post housing.

"This is a real success story," said Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, Fort Benning commanding general. He cited both Fort Benning officials and the utility companies in Columbus for, "their commitment to help soldiers and their families."

Four Columbus utility companies are represented at the center including Georgia Power, Southern Bell, Columbus Water Works and United Cites Gas Company.

Anne Pratcher, Consumer Affairs and Financial Assistance Program manager, pointed out that more than 7,500 soldiers have passed through the center since it opened.

"Deposits for the utilities are waived as long as the person has good credit," she said. Connection fees are then charged with the soldier's first bill.

In addition to the convenience of the center for soldiers, it also has benefited the companies involved. More than $82,000 in owed fees have been collected from soldiers who were out-processing.

The center is part of the outprocessing checklist requiring soldiers to settle their bills before leaving Fort Benning.

Feedback on the center has been overwhelmingly positive, according to Pratcher.

"The only complaint we get is that more people wish they knew the center was here when they were hooking up their utilities."

Fort Benning officials have been working toward expanding service in the center by including representatives from companies in other surrounding towns like Phenix City. However, Phenix City utility companies currently have no plans to open at the site, officials said.

Soldiers can go home for Christmas via VTC

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

If you can't make it home for the holidays, then why not sign up for a free, 30-minute, phone call in which you can not only hear but see whomever you are calling.

For the fourth year in a row, Fort Benning military personnel, their family members and Department of Defense civilians are being offered the opportunity to schedule a holiday video teleconference with their faraway family members.

A video teleconference is a live video conversation from one military video teleconference center to another. The Fort Benning VTC is located in Infantry Hall, Room 207, and can be reached at 545-5552.

Conferences can be between 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. through Jan. 8, except for Christmas Day and weekends. Reservations are being taken now and it is best to sign up early. Sgt. Romualdo Segarra, will be facilitating the holiday video teleconferences.

Segarra said this is an excellent opportunity for those who cannot make it home for the holidays to see and hear their friends and family almost face to face.

During the conference, it is possible to display artwork or a drawing that one family member might want to show to another, or even play a videotape that someone might want to show, according to Segarra.

If you plan to schedule a video teleconference, it is up to you to explain to whomever you will be calling where the nearest military teleconference center is and what time they need to be there.

The communities of interest may vary their participation time. For example, the Headquarters Department of the Army network will operate the "Video Visits" through Jan. 8; however, the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization will participate Dec. 20 through 30.

Here are some other guidelines to keep in mind when you schedule a teleconference.

• You must be present 15 minutes prior to the starting time of your conference. Holiday teleconferences can be pre-empted by regular, mission-essential calls. You will be notified in the event of any schedule changes.

• The conference can be taped if you provide a videotape.

• The VTC must be informed of a cancellation at least 24 hours in advance.

• All calls are limited to 30 minutes.

For information or assistance in scheduling your "Holiday Video Visit," call Segarra at 545-5552.

FROM NOW UNTIL DECEMBER 31, CB&T'S EQUITY LINE HAS NO CLOSING COSTS TO HANG YOU OUT TO DRY.

And that's no line.

If you apply now for CB&T's SpeciaLine®, our equity line of credit, you'll pay no closing costs and you could qualify for a credit line from $10,000 up!

Better yet, the interest is, in all likelihood, tax deductible. Of course, you'll have to check with your tax advisor to be sure, but no closing costs and a possible tax break? You can't beat it. Plus, you can use the money for whatever you need. New car. College expenses. Name it. And you'll have personalized checks that work just like your regular checks. It just makes sense, if you're going to borrow anyway, why not do it where it costs you less?

Just think. Before you know it you could be paying for your daughter's braces, buying a jet ski, adding on to your house...

You could even buy an electric clothes dryer.

Get complete details at any CB&T office or call for SpeciaLine information at 649-2500. But do it now. This no closing costs offer ends December 31, 1993. And you need to pin this one down before your time runs out.

Operation Holiday to kick off

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Each year, Operation Holiday comes to the rescue of soldiers who have to spend the Christmas season alone on post.

The program offers soldiers a variety of free activities.

Transportation to and from various events will be provided as well as the cost of admission. However, any additional items, such as refreshments at sporting events, must be paid for by the soldier.

The list of events has not been finalized. Unit representatives will be given the final schedule when it is finished and soldiers will be able to register through their units at that time. Space for many events is limited.

This year, a special Christmas party, which will be at the Main Post Bowling Center, is being planned for the families of soldiers deployed to Somalia.

Former MACH commander makes BG

By Denise Howell
36th Engineer Group

A former Martin Army Community Hospital commander was promoted to brigadier general Dec. 3 in a ceremony at Infantry Hall, Building 4.

Col. Vernon C. Spaulding, the hospital's commander from June 1990 to March, received his star during the ceremony from Lt. Gen. Alcide M. LaNoue, surgeon general of the Army.

Spaulding had remained assigned to the hospital after relinquishing command of the hospital to Col. Michael J. Kussman in March. Since that time, he has worked on President Bill Clinton's national health-care reform task force committee.

He will assume command of the Eisenhower Medical Center at Fort Gordon, Ga., Monday. Also, he will remain an active member of the president's health-care reform task force.

In his introductory speech, LaNoue praised Spaulding as "a soldier, a caring (and) professional physician, a teacher, a mentor ... a writer, a speaker ... a leader."

Citing Spaulding for "the kind of leadership we need ... to take us through this very difficult time of (downsizing)," LaNoue, also a former MACH commander, pinned the Army's second African-American brigadier general in the active component of the Army Medical Corps.

Spaulding was "overwhelmed, excited .. speechless." He credited his switch from actual practice to leadership management to mentor Brig. Gen. Guthrie Turner, commander of Madigan Army General Hospital at Fort Lewis, Wash., and the first African American to hold such a position which was conferred in 1980.

During his 25-year Army career, Spaulding, 50, has been awarded the Legion of Merit, Meritorious Service Medal, Army Commendation Medal and the Order of Military Medical Merit. He is a graduate of the Command and General Staff College and the U.S. Army War College. He has also earned the Expert Field Medical, Airborne and Air Assault badges.

Spaulding is a board-certified internist and gastroenterologist and is a member of the American College of Physicians, the American Society of Gastrointestinal Endoscopy.

His mother; wife, Paula; son Raymond; and daughter Rebecca assisted in the ceremony. Spaulding dedicated his star to them.

Spaulding's father, deceased in 1991, was also an Army officer — the World War II company commander took part in the historic Normandy invasion.

Post officials work to reduce incidents of DRUNKEN DRIVING

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

During this holiday season, the Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Program is working with the Infantry Branch Safety Office and post officials to reduce incidents of drunk driving.

Alcohol is a factor in 45.1 percent of all fatal traffic crashes and one-fifth of all crashes involving injury, according to information from the National Highway Traffic Safety Association.

In 1992, about 39,235 people died in highway crashes. About 17,700 of them were as a result of alcohol-related accidents.

During the holiday season last year on Fort Benning (from Dec. 11 to Jan. 1), there were 14 arrests for driving under the influence of alcohol and two alcohol-related accidents, according to information from the Infantry Branch Safety Office.

To help reduce those numbers, several programs have been implemented, according to Al Curry, an education coordinator for the Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Program.

"We are encouraging commanders to push designating a driver who does not drink or using the Safety Cab program," Curry said.

SafetyCab provides free taxi rides home with no questions asked to anyone in the tri-community area who has too much to drink.

The program, sponsored by local businesses, will begin Dec. 17.

"It's free, and it saves lives, dollars and careers," Curry said. "I'd like to see people use it."

Curry stressed that designated drivers should not drink at all.

Many drivers and pedestrians, although aware of the safety and legal risks of impairment, do not know that their abilities may be impaired at levels of alcohol consumption lower than those established by the states for convictions of driving under the influence or driving while intoxicated, according to the NHTSA.

Many do not recognize that important skills can be diminished before a person reaches illegal consumption limits.

"If you wait until you feel drunk, you are long past being able to drive properly," said Curry.

Even decisions about the amount of alcohol to be consumed and whether to drive after drinking can be impaired in some people by relatively small amounts of alcohol.

"People confuse tolerance with not being impaired," Curry said. "Just because you can drink six or eight beers and feel OK doesn't mean you are not impaired," he said.

"Your ability to drive decreases with every drink you take."

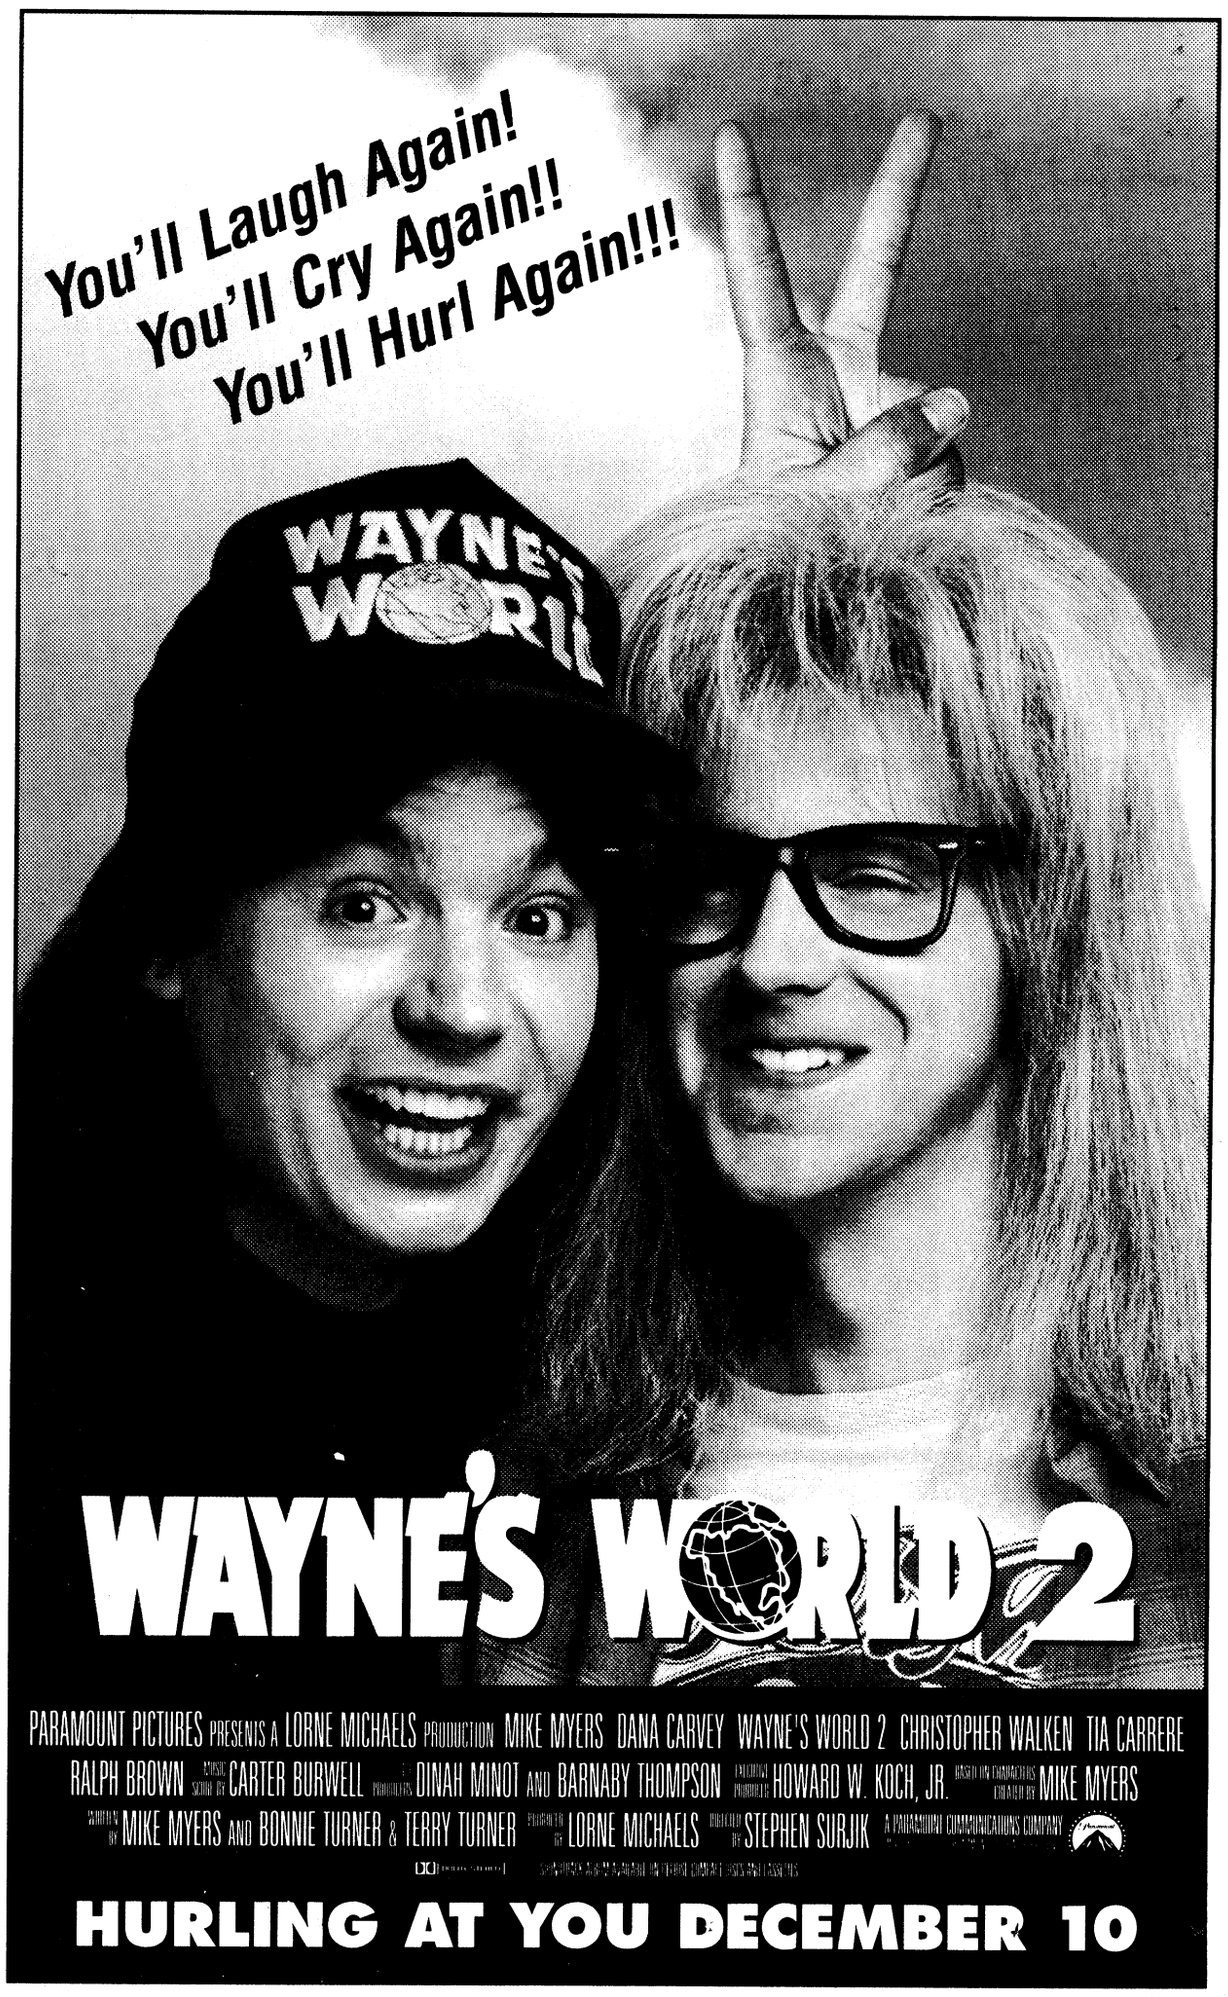
Operating a motor vehicle safely and efficiently requires full, unimpaired use of several mental and physical abilities acting in harmony, capable of split-second adjustments. Alcohol impairs that capability.

"By using SafetyCab or designating a driver, there is no reason to get a DUI," Curry said.

Curry has wallet-sized cards with the SafetyCab number available for distribution. For more information, call 545-4993.

CID investigating AAFES theft

USAIC Public Affairs Office



Nine Army and Air Force Exchange Service employees are facing theft charges as the result of an undercover investigation by the Criminal Investigation Division, FBI and AAFES.

The three-month investigation turned up evidence that employees were taking high-dollar items from the Post Exchange at the Main Mall.

Searches of four residences at about 3 a.m. Tuesday turned up more than $35,000 of stolen PX merchandise.

The CID and FBI are continuing to investigate the case.

DOL: No strangers to good service

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Employees of the Directorate of Logistics are no strangers to providing good customer service, said Glen Hall, industrial engineer and Communities of Excellence representative.

Hall said over the past year, DOL employees have really taken a personal interest in providing quality service and making Fort Benning the best.

"We are trying to get our employees personally involved in making Fort Benning a community of excellence," he said. "From the bottom level to the top, we want everyone involved in the process."

Many of the employees have made suggestions or have volunteered for self-help projects.

"We look forward to letting the members of the ACOE team talk to our personnel so they can see for themselves the personal interest our employees have in providing quality customer service."

Hall said the directorate has accomplished several important projects during the past year, including a variety of self-help projects.

The Machine Shop constructed a customer service area where customers can comfortably wait for services; and, through process action teams, it created ways to yield faster more efficient service. Inspections Section One of the Quality Assurance Branch renovated its entire work area at almost no cost by using self-help and materials that were not being used by other organizations.

Among DOL's other accomplishments and services:

• Movement of the laundry facility to a more convenient location. The interior of the new facility was designed for the most efficient work flow for faster service, and renovation was done almost entirely through self-help.

• Expansion of the services offered by travel clerks, who are now available to go anywhere, anytime to brief soldiers and issue bus and airline tickets. Also, an express ticket booth was opened for pick up of tickets, family travel orders, passports and port calls.

• Expansion of the services offered by the personal property section. Clerks now go to the units to provide briefings on shipping and storing personal property. Installation of fax machines at both the Transportation Personnel Movements Section and the SatoTravel Travel Office allow customers to fax travel information and orders. Once travel arrangements are made, the offices can fax an itinerary to the customer.

• Completion of the new Petroleum and Lubrication facility, which includes improved environmental and safety systems.

• Implementation of the Benning Weapons Inventory Control System at the Equipment Pool, which uses bar codes on all weapons to computerize the entire, issue, receipt and inventory process.

• Closure of the Self-Service Supply Center and redesigning of the entire process for providing general office supplies to post organizations. Customers can now fax or telephone orders and supplies are delivered to them directly.

• The addition of new cash registers to promote speedier service at the monthly Reclamation Clothing Sale.

•Shuttle-bus service that was used by more than 350,000 riders last year and that has a standard of never being more than five minutes off schedule.

Hall said the employees of DOL are proud of their accomplishments and will work hard to make the best even better.

This is the second year in a row that Fort Benning has been named a first-place winner in the extra-large category of the Training and Doctrine Command Communities of Excellence competition. The Army-level COE team is expected to visit post sometime in early April.

ACAP gives maximum benefits

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Fort Benning's Army Career and Alumni Program is a "no-nonsense, highly effective and efficient operation," said Director Ted Craig.

What's more, the post's ACAP has come up with several innovative approaches to maximize customer service.

"My job is to raise as much money as I can in any way that I can to give the soldiers and their families the maximum benefit," he said. "We look forward to showing the Communities of Excellence team the great things we've been doing with the ACAP program at Fort Benning."

Craig said the ACAP team has used Total Army Quality principles to implement a three-pronged approach to provide, at no cost to Fort Benning, approximately $2 million in services besides those traditionally offered to people getting out of the Army.

The first prong was an eight-month survey of more than 5,000 people to find out what kinds of services they needed most.

"We found that approximately half of those surveyed were going directly into the job market, about 30 percent needed retraining because they had no transferable military skills, and 20 percent wanted to go back to college," said Craig. "With this information, we were able to tailor our programs to meet the needs of all three groups, including creating some nontraditional programs that are unique to our office and really make our program special."

The Job Assistance Center meets the needs of the first group by providing soldiers who are getting out of the service with the skills needed to find and secure a job, from how to dress to how to prepare a resume.

The second prong involved addressing the concerns of those who wanted to return to college. A partnership was entered with Fort Valley State College to provide an education specialist every Wednesday who can supply interested soldiers with information on more than 3,300 colleges and universities. In another partnership among ACAP, the Fort Benning Army Continuing Education System and Columbus College, ACAP clients are offered a special teacher certification program.

The third prong, which Craig said is unique to Fort Benning, was the creation of the job retraining program to help soldiers who need refresher training or whose military skills are not directly transferable to a civilian job. The program was created after 14 months of coordination between the Georgia and U.S. departments of Labor and ACAP.

"It's not enough just to know how to look for a job and prepare a resume," Craig said. "Soldiers also need skills that are marketable. For soldiers who are eligible for the program, and the majority of them who are getting out because of the downsizing probably are, the training is provided at no cost to them to get their certifications in the fields they choose."

Among ACAP's other accomplishments and services:

• Job placement services through the Georgia Department of Labor. As of Sept. 30, at least 450 Fort Benning ACAP clients have been placed in registered companies.

• A one-of-a-kind computerized appointment system to identify, notify and process soldiers through the program.

• Plans to establish, by mid-1994, a state-certified police academy at Fort Benning through the cooperation of Troy State University and the state of Georgia. The academy will offer a basic police course and specialty training for parole and corrections officers.

• Access to the National Job Information System, which ties the job listings of all 50 state employment agencies into the Job Assistance Center. Users can also access worldwide federal jobs listings.

"We are also proud of the tremendous amount of support from volunteers and the self-help teamwork of the staff in renovating our facilities and grounds. We have had soldiers think so much of our services that they volunteer to help us in return," Craig said.

"No one else I know of has done a survey to determine the needs of the soldiers, and many of our services are offered by no other ACAP office. We are also lucky to enjoy tremendous support from the commanding general and the entire senior chain of command," Craig said. "We have had some great success stories and look forward to even more."

ACAP CALENDAR

Army Career and Alumni Program

The following is the Army Career and Alumni Program Job Assistance Center calendar of events:

Thursday: 2 to 4:30 p.m., Small Business Development Seminar, Job Assistance Center Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza.

Job assistance workshop

Time: Wednesdays, 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Location: Infantry Hall

The workshop is conducted every Wednesday at Infantry Hall. Topics discussed include objective setting, resume preparation, expanding opportunities, networking, interviewing, salary negotiating, stress management and financial planning.

The workshop is for anyone in federal service (both military and Department of the Army civilians) and their family members, whether leaving voluntarily, involuntarily or retiring.

Career program plans seminar

Federal jobs to be explored

Army Career and Alumni Program

A seminar about federal employment will be Thursday from 8 to 10 a.m. in Infantry Hall, Classroom 30.

Sponsored by the Army Career and Alumni Program and the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, the seminar is designed to provide information on the opportunities of federal employment with primary emphasis on Fort Benning.

Available to soldiers who are retiring from the military and family members, the seminar will cover the basics of how the federal employment system functions, the various agencies, where to find job announcements and veteran's preference.

Participants will be given a detailed explanation of the federal employment application, Standard Form 171.

James Fleming, a 20-year veteran of the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, and Cathy Murray, an instructor with Conwal Inc., will be available to answer questions.

Murray assists the Georgia Department of Labor with the ACAP Transition Assistance Program workshop, and she conducts personal assessments Thursday and Friday of each week from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the ACAP office in Soldiers' Plaza. The assessments include instruction in the use of an automated Standard Form 171.

To obtain an appointment, call 545-7073 or 545-4892 and ask for Judy McKibben, or stop by Building 2617 in Soldiers' Plaza.

HIV screening

Officials advise test for German blood recipients

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

U.S. military officials are recommending HIV screening for Americans who received plasma in German hospitals since 1985.

Authorities allege a German company, UB Plasma, failed to properly screen its products for the deadly virus. Two Germans who received the company's plasma have tested HIV positive. Now, another German company, Haemoplas, is accused of inadequate testing. Haemoplas distributed plasma to 64 hospitals in Germany.

Still, U.S. military officials stress the risk of HIV infections is small.

"Most patients who receive blood transfusions are transfused with packed red blood cells," said Army Dr. (Lt. Col.) Everett "Mike" Newcomb, 7th Medical Command medical consultant. "Only when patients lose so much blood that they need eight to 10 units of packed cells would they need plasma."

Barbara Slifer, public affairs officer for the 7th Medical Command in Heidelberg, said plasma is the liquid component of blood containing the clotting factors.

But Navy Cmdr. David Reichman, deputy director of the Armed Forces Blood Program Office in Falls Church, Va., said it's better to be safe.

"I would advise our people who got any transfusion in a German hospital to go to the nearest military hospital for an evaluation," he said.

At a press conference, Air Force Dr. (Maj. Gen.) Vernon Chong, command surgeon at U.S. European Command, also encouraged people to come in.

"If they know they had a transfusion, then definitely we want them to be evaluated and tested," he said.

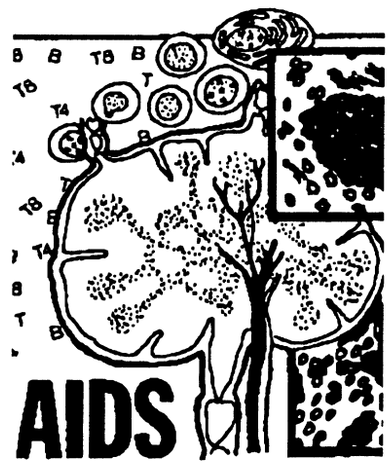
The 7th Medical Command issued a list of German hospitals using UB Plasma. Only 17 have treated military patients, but others may have treated DoD civilians.

Military members and family members normally use military hospitals. However, they are sometimes sent to German hospitals for certain conditions, including maternity.

DoD and other federally employed U.S. civilians overseas can use either military or civilian hospitals.

Military hospitals use blood products from the military blood program, which meets or exceeds all government and American Association of Blood Banks standards, said officials.

Still, officials are screening records back to 1985 to see if the military purchased any blood products from German sources.



Newcomb believes the military purchased only a small amount of such products. The command is reviewing medical records so it can notify people to come in for testing.

"We've had several hundred thousand people coming through Europe in the past couple of decades, so we have many, many records to go through," he said.

Many patients who may have been exposed are no longer in Germany and some are no longer part of DoD.

Dr. Edward D. Martin, acting assistant secretary of Defense for health affairs, asked service surgeons general to see such people in military medical facilities for evaluation and testing.

Patients, including family members whose sponsors are no longer in the military, should bring identification showing their prior military link.

The 7th Medical Command is examining records to find if any Haemoplas-using facilities treated military patients. The command will keep beneficiaries informed, Slifer said.

The 17 hospitals using UB Plasma that treated military family members are: Ockstaetter Hospital, Friedberg; Stadt Hospital, Bad Nauheim; Evangel Hospital, Giessen; Stadt Hospital, Hochst, Frankfurt; Paracelsus Klinik, Marl; Stadt Hospital, Offenbach; Stadt Hospital, Hanau; Stadt Kliniken, Fulda; St. Agnes Hospital, Bocholt; St. Vinzens Hospital, Datteln; St. Elizabeth Hospital, Wadern; Hohe Warte Hospital, Bayreuth; Kreis Hospital, Burglengenfeld; Kreis Hospital, Crailsheim; Albertinen Hospital, Hamburg; Klinikum Bayreuth, Bayreuth; Klinikum Steglitz, Berlin.

Vets' compensation to rise

Department of Veterans Affairs

The Department of Veterans Affairs has announced that disabled veterans will receive a 2.6 percent increase in their compensation payments effective Dec. 1.

The cost-of-living allowance was included in legislation signed by President Bill Clinton on Veterans Day, Nov. 11. Veterans will begin receiving the higher payments in their January checks.

Almost 2.2 million veterans are affected by the increase. Their monthly payments will now range from $87 for a single veteran with a 10-percent disability rating to $1,774 for a single veteran with a 100-percent disability rating.

Also affected are more than 340,000 survivors of veterans or service members who died from service-connected causes.

Veterans whose service-connected disabilities are rated 30 percent or higher may receive additional allowances for family members, based on the number of family members and extent of disability.

Shalikashvili calls for U.S. to remain involved

New Chairman Joint chiefs of staff vows armed forces to continue to play decisive role in post-Cold War era

By Jim Garamone
American Forces Information Service

The new chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff called for the United States to remain committed worldwide while saying U.S. power is finite.

Gen. John M. Shalikashvili told those gathered to witness his official swearing in at the Pentagon that the United States must make hard, painful choices in this new world.

"Now that the simpler world of bipolar confrontation has entered the pages of history, we must have strategic priorities to order our efforts, our expenditures and our risks," he said.

These choices do not mean the United States must step back from the world but just the opposite.

"We need to remain active and vigilant, but we must invest our energies, our efforts, our resources and our good will where they will do the nation and the world the most good."

He said President Bill Clinton has made it clear the United States will not waste the opportunities presented by the end of the Cold War nor avoid the challenges of the new era.

This policy will enable the United States to remain a beacon of hope, freedom, opportunity and human dignity throughout the world, Shalikashvili said.

He said the armed forces will continue to play a decisive role in the U.S. journey to greatness.

"America's men and women in uniform were there when our forefathers turned a dream into a nation," he said.

"They were there to fight for this 'more perfect union.' They were there as we pushed westward into a new continent. And they were there to help rescue the world from tyranny no fewer than three times this century."

For more than 200 years, the military's task has been to be prepared to fight, he said. "And so it is today.

We who wear our country's uniforms have the responsibility to be ready, to answer the call, whenever it should come. All Americans are enormously proud and confident of their armed forces. But it is a trust we must continually earn."

Shalikashvili also said the country owes its service members its support.

"When we must ask them to go in harm's way, as we will, let us do so in the certain knowledge that we have done all in our power to make them ready and that the families they leave behind have the care they so richly deserve," he said. "We owe them no less, for they are our most precious asset. They are America."

POST BRIEFS

Discontinue sending mail to 'any soldier'

Mail to Somalia addressed to "Any Soldier" is no longer requested, according to post officials.

Recently, post officials distributed the addresses to Fort Benning units so concerned individuals could send the mail. Because units do not have the manpower to handle the volume of mail received, officials ask that individuals discontinue that practice.

CFC still accepting monetary donations

Donations to the Combined Federal Campaign can still be turned in through the end of December, according to Cathy White, CFC coordinator.

Completed donation forms can be brought to the Family Unit Network, Building 359.

Excellence breakfast is today at O'Club

The quarterly Excellence Appreciation Day breakfast will be today at 8 a.m. in the Supper Club at the Fort Benning Officers' Club. Breakfast will include scrambled eggs, bacon, sausage, grits, biscuits, jelly, orange juice and coffee. The cost is $4 per person.

Military and civilian employees will be recognized and honored for superior job performance, task achievement, contributions to customer service and quality over and above normal expectations.

Eight first-place Training and Doctrine Command Communities of Excellence awards will be presented.

1st Bn 11th Regt plans holiday safety fair

A safety fair will be Dec. 17 from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. in Infantry Hall, Building 4, Classrooms 60 and 61.

Sponsored by the 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, the event will include hands-on exhibits, demonstrations and health screenings. Pamphlets and fliers will be available. Classes about preventing drinking and driving, drug abuse, water safety, fire prevention and more will be presented.

TRADOC IG to visit

The inspector general for the Training and Doctrine Command, Col. Floyd Perry, will visit Fort Benning Jan. 24 to 28 for an assistance visit.

A team accompanying Perry will visit most directorates, the U.S. Army Infantry Center and the U.S. Army Infantry School, major support commands and tenant units. An itinerary will be provided when more information is available.

For more information, contact Robert H. Raab or Maj. Don Craig at 545-3961 or 545-7127.

Self-Help Store to close for inventory

The Self-Help Store, Loan Equipment Section and Venetian Blind and Shade Shop will be closed Dec. 21 to conduct inventory. The store will reopen for business Dec. 22 at 8:30 a.m.

Luncheon to recognize outstanding civilians

The Civilian Awards Luncheon will be Jan. 27 from 11:30 a.m. to 1:15 p.m. in the Supper Club at the Fort Benning Officers' Club. The Directorate of Public Works will host the event.

TMCs to be closed Christmas, New Year's

Troop Medical Clinics will be closed Dec. 25 and Jan 1.

Soldiers with urgent medical needs can report to the Emergency Room at Martin Army Community Hospital. Soldiers with routine needs may attend regular sick call. Weekend sick call at Troop Medical Clinic 5 will be open Dec. 24, 26 and 31 and Jan. 2.

Warehouse moves

The compressed gases and packaged petroleum, oil and lubricants warehouse, Building 1724, has moved to Building 13.

Compressed gases will be issued from 8 to 11 a.m. Monday, Wednesdays and Fridays. Packaged POL products will be issued from 12:30 to 4 p.m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

AAFES to collect delinquent accounts

The Army and Air Force Exchange Service processes involuntary deductions from service members' pay for bad debt, according to Mary Babbitt, general manager.

Service members experiencing financial problems can contact the AAFES Customer Service Center at (800) 826-1317 to work out payment arrangements that will fit the soldier's budget.

The arrangements can range from skipping one payment for temporary problems to working out an extended repayment plan, Babbitt said.

Multimedia, equipment demonstration is set

A multimedia and classroom equipment demonstration will be Monday to Dec. 17 in Classrooms 20, 21, 22 and 23 in Infantry Hall, Building 4. The classes are for all instructors and personnel who present briefings and instruction. The times are: Monday, 1 to 4:30 p.m.; Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; and Dec. 17, 9 to 11:30 a.m.

For more information, call Leigh Smith at 545-5296.

VA Q & A

Department of Veterans Affairs

Q: Does the Department of Veterans Affairs publish a pamphlet or brochure explaining the benefits available to veterans and their family members?

A: Yes. Each year, VA publishes a booklet entitled "Federal Benefits for Veterans and Dependents."

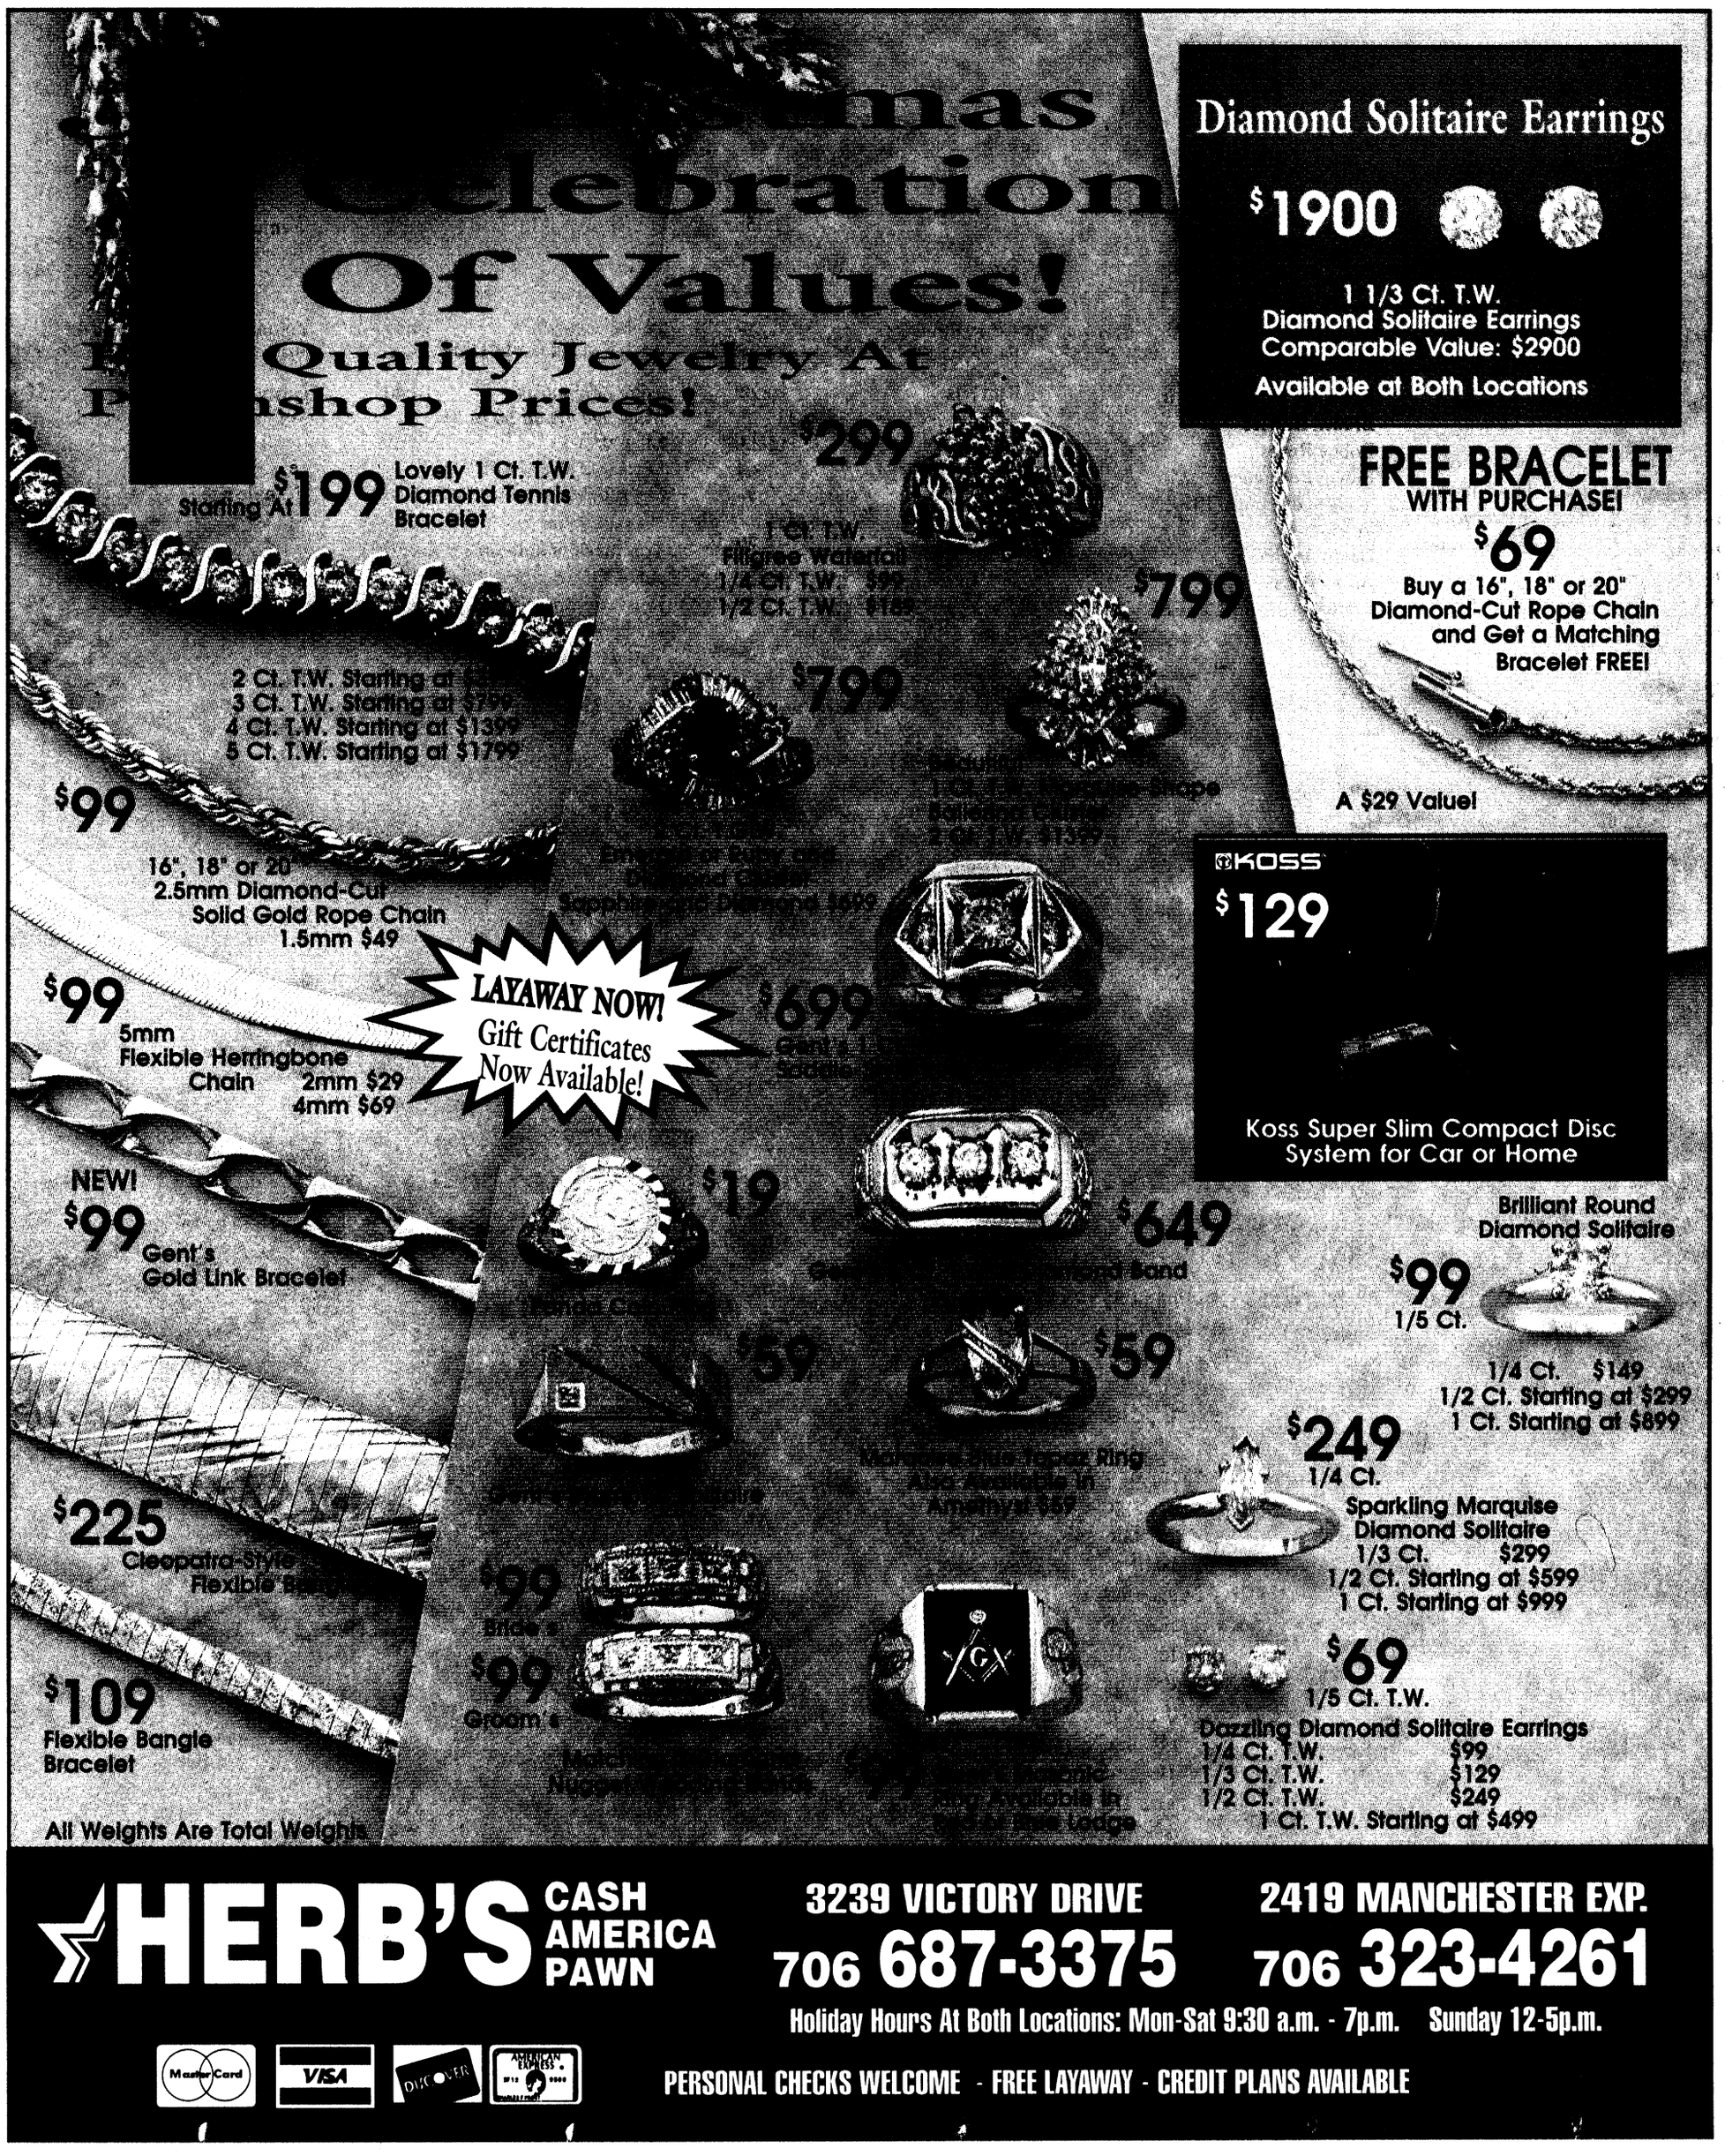
The booklet is available for $3.25 from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. The stock number is 051-000-00-200-8.

A variety of free pamphlets providing information about VA benefits also are available at VA regional offices or may be obtained by calling (800) 827-1000.

Q: I heard on the news that the National Academy of Sciences said exposure to Agent Orange and other herbicides may cause conditions not previously recognized by the Department of Veterans Affairs for disability payments. What are those conditions?

A: VA already recognizes soft-tissue sarcoma, non-Hodgkin's lymphoma and chloracne and has been paying compensation to Vietnam veterans for these conditions.

Based on the study, VA Secretary Jesse Brown has announced Hodgkin's disease and porphyria cutanea tarda will be recognized by VA for disability payments based on Vietnam service and presumed exposure to Agent Orange and other herbicides.



However, payments for those conditions cannot be made until final publication of regulations in the Federal Register. That is expected to occur by the end of the year.

Q: I believe I may have health problems related to being exposed to Agent Orange when I was in Vietnam. Can VA assist me in determining my current health status?

A: All VA medical centers provide a special examination to assist Vietnam veterans who were exposed to Agent Orange in determining their current health status.

To date, more than 226,000 veterans have participated in the Agent Orange Registry examination program. In addition to the registry examination, you may be entitled to priority health care at a VA health-care facility for health conditions possibly related to your service in Vietnam and exposure to Agent Orange.

Contact your nearest VA medical center to schedule an examination.

Smith Station keeps the 'Faith' Saturday

Alabama's runners capture 17 medals at holiday race

By Terry K Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The 15th annual Faith Holiday Race Saturday drew more than 1,600 runners for the one-, two- and five-mile runs.

The big winners came from the Smith Station, Ala., cross country team that totaled 15 medals out of 17 runners.

Two more runners from the Smith Station area also claimed medals in their age group, bringing the total to 17 out of 19 medal winners for Smith Station.

Angela Jones and Anthony Lane, both of Smith Station, broke records in the two-mile run.

Jones broke her own record of 11 minutes, 55 seconds set last year with a run of 11:31 while Lane eclipsed the old mark by three seconds with a run of 9:58.

"This course is made for us," Jones said. "We train on some fairly rough terrain. With this race being mainly set up on a flat course, we were able to put more speed into our run."

James Chapman also shattered the course record for the five-mile wheelchair division with a sizzling 26 minutes flat. Chapman trimmed a full 2 1/2 minutes off the old record.

In the five-mile team relay, first place went to Faith School with Loyd School taking second. Times were not posted. The best participation award went to the 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment, with more than 1,200 soldiers running in the five-mile formation run.

"We were a little down in our numbers for this year, but all in all it was a great turnout for everyone involved," said Sue Emerson, one of the race coordinators.

Listed below are the top three female and male finishers for each race and the top three in each age group, along with their times.

The South wins this one 16-8

Youth Services sponsors Holiday Bowl football

By Terry K Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The first Youth Services North South Holiday Bowl played Dec. 3 at Doughboy Stadium saw the South pound out a 16-8 victory over the North.

Comprised of players from the 12 and under age group, the South, which consisted of players from the Vikings, Eagles, Bulldogs and Falcons, put the first points of the game on the board late in the second quarter when South quarterback Brian Lucas rolled out to the right and scampered 23 yards into the corner of the end zone for the South's first score.

Lucas hit wide receiver Keneke Burkes with the two-point conversion for an 8-0 advantage.

The North, comprised of players from the Cowboys, Falcons, Giants and Redskins, knotted the score at 8-8 on their next possession when South quarterback Kiki Mister found wide receiver Luis Ryfkogel in the left flat.

Ryfkogel turned on the jets and streaked to the end zone for a 64-yard touchdown pass. Mister hit tight end Brandon Martin for the two-point conversion tying the ball game with under a minute to play in the first half.

The third quarter of play went by the boards with both defenses keeping the offenses from putting any points on the board.

On the South's only possession of the fourth quarter, Lucas drove the South down to the North 8-yard line setting up a first-and-goal situation for the South.

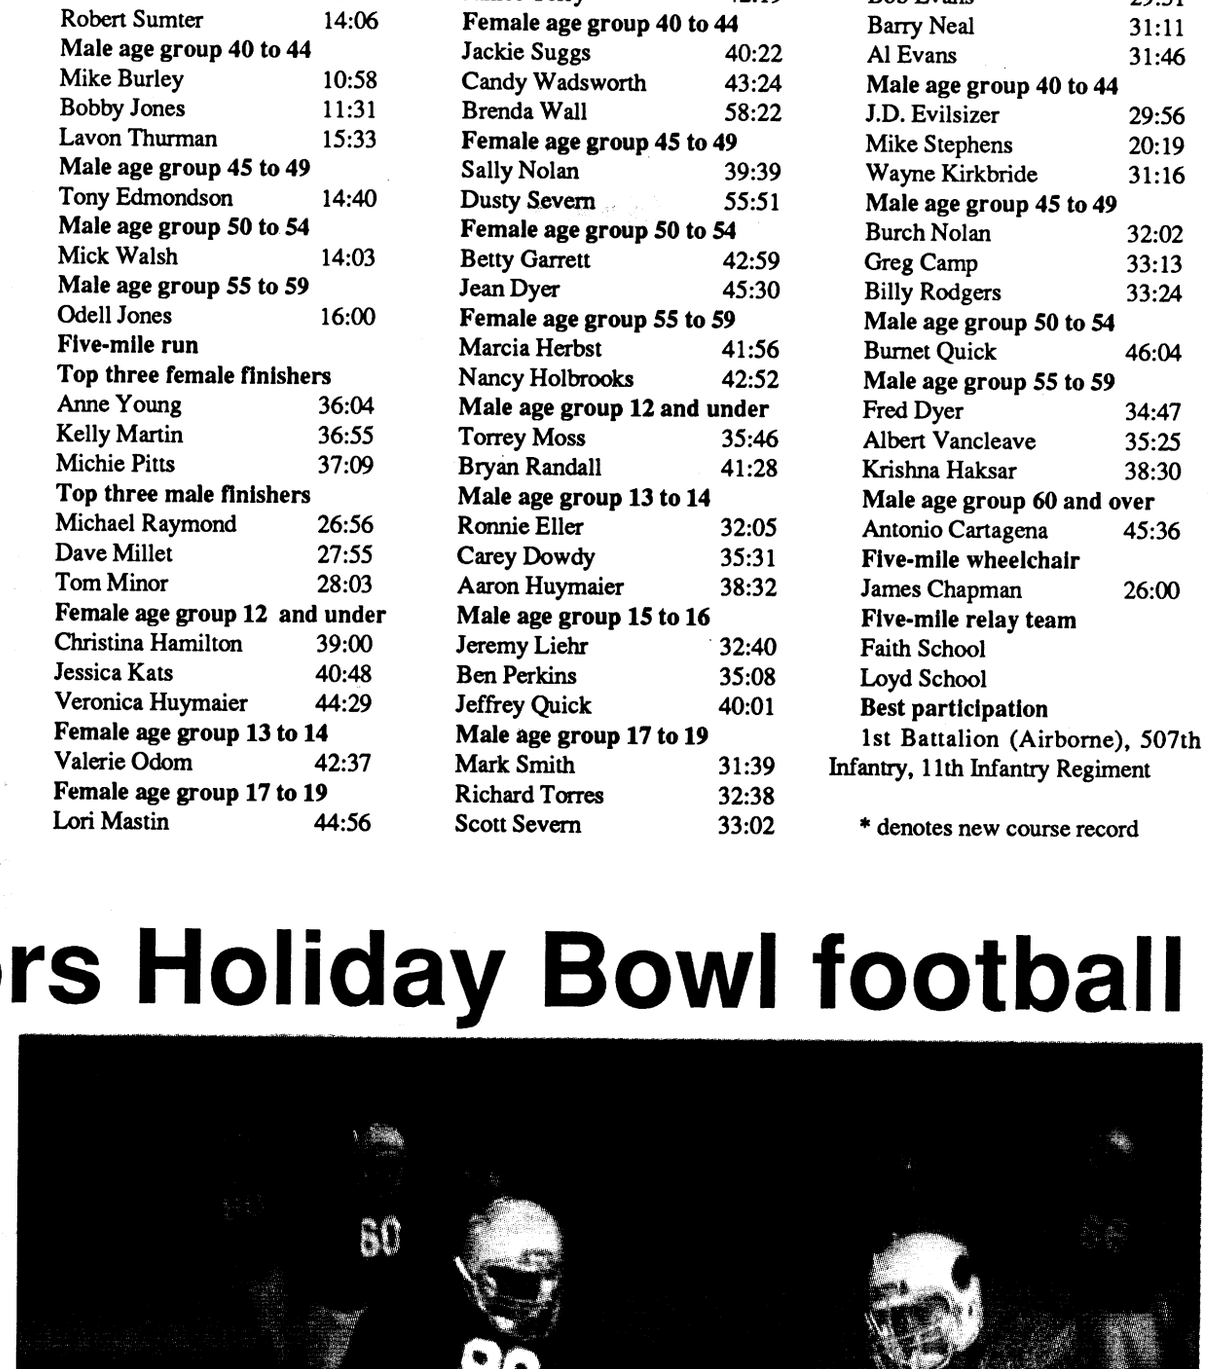
Two plays later, Lucas tried a quarterback draw for four yards. Lucas was injured on the play. On fourth and goal, backup quarterback Roland Lusan found running back Aaron Lucas all alone in the end zone for a 6-yard scoring strike. Lusan pushed the lead to 16-8 with a two-point conversion pass to Burkes.

With under four minutes to play in the game, the North mounted one final drive to try and tie the game. Starting at its own 46, the North moved the ball down to the South's 18, but time ran out before the North could put the ball into the end zone.

Seminoles and Raiders

In a make-up game between the Seminoles and the Raiders of the 13- to 14-year-old age group, the Seminoles got three touchdowns from Joel Driskill to bury the Raiders 26-0.

Driskill scored on a 3-yard run in the first quarter after teammate Cecil Rodgers recovered a fumble on the Raiders' first possession of the game.



After a fumbled punt return by the Raiders was recovered by Tyrone Robinson, Driskill scored his second touchdown on a swing pass from quarterback Diallo Pauling that went for 40 yards.

A 10-yard interception return gained Driskill his third and final touchdown of the game late in the second quarter giving the Seminoles a 20-0 lead at the half.

In the second half, the Seminole defense shut down the Raider offense with hard-hitting tackles and timely turnovers.

Rodgers recovered his second fumble of the game, setting up the final score of the night for the Seminoles.

Running back Desmond Artis tacked on the last touchdown on a one-yard plunge up the middle for a 26-0 final score.

Fifty-seven shooters participated in the Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club's tactical pistol match Saturday afternoon at English Range.

In the competitor class, James Odom outpointed Jim Kotto for first place, 100 percent to 92 percent. Eric Woodson claimed third place with 90 percent.

Barry Flood captured first place in the standard class with 94 percent. Danny Stearns placed second at 92 percent, and David Best rounded out the third spot at 86 percent.

In the military class, Michael Steele outdistanced Lawrence Cox, 84 percent to 76 percent. Walter Summers finished third at 62 percent.

Darlenda Cox took the top spot in the female division with a final score of 67 percent. High service revolver went to Jason Olson at 58 percent, and Bryan Busby captured the high law enforcement trophy with a score of 50 percent.

Charles Rolling won high rifle honors in the side rifle match.

The next match will be Feb. 4 and will be sponsored by Glock Firearms.

"Glock will provide G17 nine millimeters for use by people who do not own handguns," said Jim Graham, match coordinator.

Soccer goals can be dangerous

U.S. Consumer Product Safety Comm.

WASHINGTON, D.C. — A warning label and safety information program to address the hazard of mobile soccer goals tipping over when children climb on or hang from the goal has been issued by the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission and the Coalition to Promote Safe Soccer Goals.

The commission knows of 17 deaths that occurred since 1979 as a result of mobile soccer goals tipping over. The victims ranged in age from 3 years to 22 years and generally were not involved in the game of soccer when the incident occurred.

The typical incident happened when a child or young adult climbed on or hung from the crossbar of a soccer goal that was left unattended or improperly anchored. The heavy goal toppled onto and crushed the individual.

In one case, the unanchored goal was blown onto the victim by a gust of wind. The goals were constructed of wood, metal or plastic and were either homemade, nonbranded or produced professionally by soccer goal manufacturers.

Mobile-style soccer goals are used by private and public elementary and secondary schools, colleges and municipal playgrounds and recreation areas.

To help avoid these incidents, the commission and the coalition urge consumers, school officials, soccer coaches, players and organizers to follow these safety guidelines:

- Securely anchor goals at all times.
- Never climb on the net or goal framework.
- Remove nets when goals are not in use. Tip an unused goal onto its face or chain goals to nearby fence posts, dug-outs or any other similar sturdy fixture.
- Check all connecting hardware before every use. Replace damaged or missing fasteners immediately.
- Ensure safety labels are clearly visible.
- Fully disassemble goals for seasonal storage. The coalition is distributing free warning labels for placement on all mobile soccer goals, safety bulletins to be placed in schools and municipal recreation facilities, and proper anchoring and securing instructions for goals in use and in-storage.

Consumers, school officials, soccer coaches and organizers may obtain labels by writing to: Safe Goals, c/o SICA, 200 Castlewood Drive, North Palm Beach, Fla. 33408, or call any of the members of the coalition:

- BSN Sports, (800) 527-7510
- Jayfro Corp., (800) 243-0533
- Goal! Sporting Goods Inc., (800) 334-4625

- Kwik Goal Ltd., (800) 531-4252

The commission is announcing this warning label program as part of its mission to protect the public from unreasonable risks of injury and death associated with consumer products.

The commission's objective is to reduce the estimated 28.5 million injuries and 21,600 deaths associated each year with more than 15,000 different types of consumer products.

To report an unsafe consumer product or a product-related injury, consumers may call the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission hot line at (800) 638-2772.

A teletypewriter for the hearing impaired is available at (800) 638-8270.

SPORTS SHORTS

Racquetball — A racquetball tournament will be conducted at the Briant Wells Field House Jan. 21 through 23. Games will begin at 6 p.m. Friday and 9 a.m. Saturday and Sunday.

The event is open to active duty military members, Department of Defense civilians, retirees and family members 18 years of age or older.

Awards will be provided to the top two finishers in each division with an open division for male and female. Entry deadline is Jan. 14.

For more information, contact, Lula Mitchenor at 545-4388.

Christmas

What really makes it merry?

By Clarke McGriff
USAIC Chaplains' Office

With Thanksgiving past, much of the world's attention has turned to the season of Christmas. At Fort Benning and throughout the world, you see decorated trees, homes, stores and offices.

The frenzy of Christmas activity begins the day following Thanksgiving and endures through New Year's Day. Someone said that it is a most wonderful time of year. Perhaps this is true, but one thing is certain; it is a peculiar time of year.

People spend more money and consume more food during this season than any other. Stores extend their hours and even hire additional help. Even our workplaces and academic institutions are affected by the Christmas season. Most schools close, and the military work day is shortened because of Christmas.

The season also affects people's attitudes toward each other. Folks tend to be happier and their spirits brighter during the Christmas season. Organizations collect canned goods to distribute to the needy because it is Christmas — "the season to be jolly." Everywhere you go, every card you receive, every commercial on television says the same thing, "Merry Christmas."

But why is this so? What is it about this time of the year? Why isn't the Fourth of July merry, or Labor Day? Why the carols, the giving, the eggnog? What really makes Christmas merry?

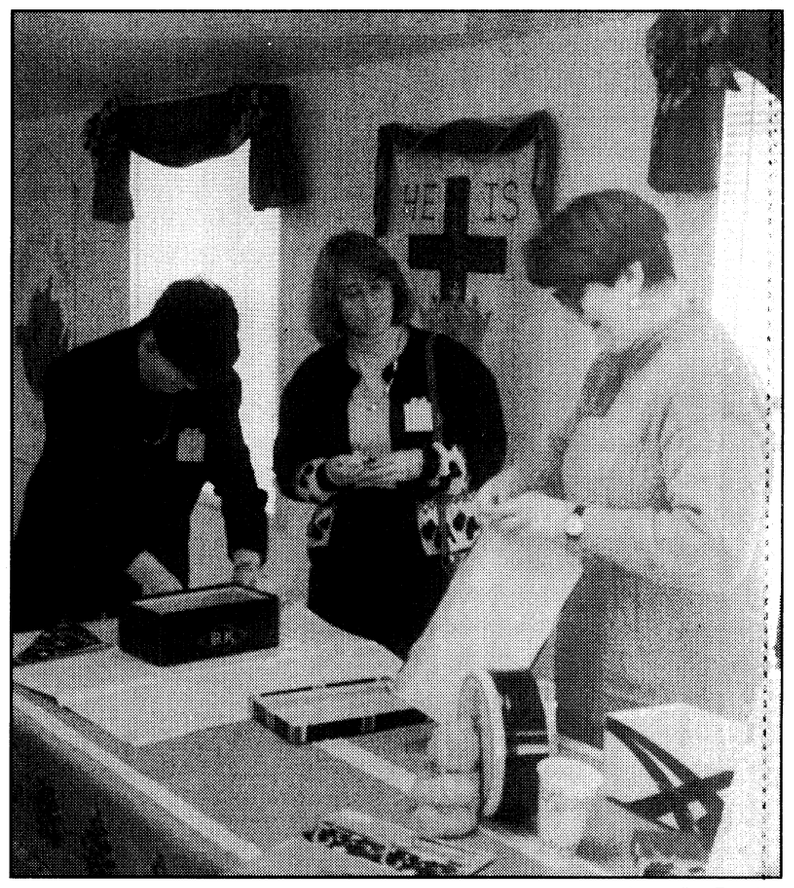
For me, it's not about presents or the half-day schedules or the bowl games. Christmas is merry to me because of what is said in Luke 2:10 and 11: "The angel of the Lord said to them, 'Do not be afraid. I bring you good news of great joy that will be for all the people. Today in the town of David is born a Savior, who is Christ the Lord.' "

I'm merry at Christmas, first, because I don't have to be afraid.

REFLECTIONS

There are so many things in the world that can put fear in you — unsafe streets, gangs, unstable economy, racism and more. But God's word is true, and it says that even in the valley of the shadow of death, I need fear no evil because God is with me. I'm not afraid.

Christmas is also merry because there is good news. I like good news. Each time you turn on the television or read a newspaper, there is more bad news: a killing, a theft, a divorce or child abuse. The message about the Christ child, however, is good news, and that makes me merry.



The news is not only good, but it is of great joy. The joy is great because God is joyful about it. Since God is a great God, certainly the joy must be great. Not just a little, or partial, but great joy!

I'm also merry at Christmas because this good news that is of great joy has come to all people. It did not come specifically to any group. Rather, it is for black and white, rich and poor, enlisted and officer, male and female. That's a pretty good deal and that is cause to be merry!

I'm merry because this good news of great joy is for all people and available today. I don't have to wait until Christmas or until I get promoted or until the economy gets on the right track. I can have it today. That is reason to be merry.

Finally, I'm merry at Christmas because of what these things represent. There is someone who contains my fears, gives me good news, great joy and who is for all people — the savior, Christ the Lord. That is the only reason I need. That causes this to be a merry season.

If you are trying to find the merry of Christmas this year, be sure to read Luke 1 and 2 to discover the merry that God has for you.

Group gives new meaning to 'gifts'

By Jacqueline Feagin
USAIC Chaplains' Office

"The Gifts He Gave Us" was the theme at this month's Protestant Women of the Chapel general meeting Dec. 2 at the Religious Education Center.

Marti Maas, president of PWOC, spoke about the "gifts God gave us."

She mentioned seven God-given gifts — perception, service, teaching, exhortation, giving, administration and compassion.

Maas encouraged the women to look at themselves and others to find people who possess these God-given gifts.

"All the gifts are equal in the sight of God," she said, "and they must come together to do the work of Christ. If any gift is not in operation, there is a void."

At the meeting, the Protestant women put together Christmas gift boxes for the Valley Rescue Mission in Columbus.

The Valley Rescue Mission will provide these gift boxes to needy women for Christmas, according to Elizabeth Smith, outreach coordinator for the PWOC. The gift boxes contain women's toiletries, luxury items and a special gift to provide cheer to the needy, Smith said.

Members of PWOC are also providing gift boxes to the Battered Women Shelter in Columbus.

"The shelter has put in a special request for dolls," Maas said. "We've collected several for the shelter and can use your donations. New or used dolls will be accepted."

1/29 has success in great 'supply'

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

The supply system of 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, has been selected to represent Fort Benning at the Training and Doctrine Command level for the Army Chief of Staff Supply Excellence Award competition.

This is the first year the battalion has competed as a whole, although the Bradley Instructor Company won the same award last year at the individual company level, according to Sgt. 1st Class Dentist Harvin, noncommissioned officer in charge of the battalion's supply and logistics.

"I'm surprised we did so well our first year of competition," Harvin said. "It's indicative of the quality of our soldiers and their work. They put a lot of effort and free time into this."

"We prepared a little differently for this year's competition," said 1st Lt. Joe Dixon, battalion supply and logistics officer.

"This year the whole battalion was involved. We evaluated each company, which we're required to do biannually to validate the Command Supply Discipline Program."

Categories covered by the program, Dixon said, include general management, property accountability, requesting and receiving process, property accountability, load management, inventory and storage, as well as several other categories.

"We have one to three people handling supply for each company," Dixon said, "and five people in logistics at the battalion S-4. Our equipment, besides the usual individual soldiers' gear, includes 170 Bradley fighting vehicles, 14 M-113 armored personnel carriers, 26 high-mobility, multipurpose, wheeled vehicles, 20 2 1/2- and 5-ton trucks, and 6 M88 recovery vehicles. We're responsible for keeping a lot of equipment serviceable and accounted for.

"Up and down the chain of command, there's an emphasis on supply and logistics in this battalion," Dixon said. "We know what we have, where it is, how to get to it and how to get more, whether it's fuel or toilet paper."

Sgt. Marta Garner, supply sergeant for the battalion's Headquarters and Headquarters Company, has been in supply for 10 years, although she started with HHC only recently.

"Everything was squared away when I got here," she said. "We have three property books, so things are more complicated to keep track of than in some other places I've been, but the system works. We take care of the commander — make sure everything he's signed for is signed for, serviceable and where it's supposed to be.

"Supply is two years older than the Army," Garner said. "They can't do anything without us."

"Basically, we have to be available all the time," said Sgt. Terence Thompson, supply sergeant for Company C. "My company provides support for the basic and advanced infantry officer courses and noncommissioned officer courses, and the School of the Americas. When they're in the field, we provide cots, tents, stoves and on-site support."

Thompson said working in supply for infantry soldiers is demanding. "They have an ego thing," he said. "I've road marched with them, and gone to the range and the field, so they accept me. For these guys, though, you have to prove you can keep up with them."

The next step of the competition, judging of the battalion at the TRADOC level, will include an on-site inspection, Dixon said. The battalion expects to know the results of the competition around the end of January.

Equipment

Soldiers may keep issue for duration of careers

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Soldiers in the not-too-distant future may receive selected clothing and equipment at the end of one station unit training or advanced individual training that they will keep for the duration of their military careers.

If adopted, the proposed plan will have a major impact on Fort Benning, said Mike Ware, chief of the Directorate of Logistics' Supply and Services Division.

"Phase one of the plan will begin with infantry soldiers," he said. "The goal is to issue every single infantry soldier who comes through initial entry training at Fort Benning a set of brand new or like new equipment, called the 'varsity suit,' that he will keep for the duration of the soldier's military career."

Included in the issue will be such items as a helmet, load bearing equipment and other standard items soldiers now receive from the Central Issuing Facility.

The incentive for the plan, said Ware, is to eliminate the long lines at CIF and the tedious cycle of issue, turn-in and reissue soldiers must endure each time they change duty stations.

"The other idea behind the plan is soldiers will take pride in having one set of equipment that they keep and will therefore take better care of it."

The plan will also ease the burden on units and other central issue facilities.

"CIFs won't go out of business, but some of them might have their workload decreased," said Ware. "Fort Benning's CIF will work just as hard, if not harder, if the plan goes into effect. Simply finding the space to store the incredible stock of clothing and equipment will be a big challenge."

If the plan is adopted, it will take several years before all soldiers receive the full issue of equipment. Phase one, which is slated to go into effect in late fiscal 1994 or 1995, will include infantry and combat vehicle crewmen.

Phase two (fiscal 1995 to1997) will expand to include full issue for infantry and armor personnel.

Phase three (fiscal 1998 to 2000) will expand to include common issue items for all soldiers.

"Everything is really just in the planning stage right now," Ware said. "We really don't know if or when the plan will go into effect."

WORLD WAR II

50 years ago this week ...

• The previously stalled U.S. Fifth Army regained momentum as it began another phase of its renewed offensive directed against German defensive positions in Italy as both the II and VI corps drove forward.

• Elsewhere in Italy, the British Eighth Army, under the command of Field Marshal Bernard Montgomery, successfully completed its crossing of the Moro River.

• In Europe, Air Marshal Sir Arthur Harris began an intensified area bombing campaign after convincing British leaders of his claim that he could quickly win the war by destroying German industry housed in several nonmilitary targets.

• On the U.S. homefront, President Franklin Roosevelt approved a bill concerning revised draft regulations.

• Gypsy Lee Rose, a famous actress, author and striptease artist, scheduled two performances at the post's main theater.

SDT scores may be used to determine college credit

Army News Service

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Self-Development Test scores may now be used to determine credit for college, according to the American Council on Education.

ACE recently reviewed the SDT and found that "colleges and universities reviewing a noncommissioned officer's military occupational specialty experience for (the) purpose of granting credit should feel confident in granting credit for SDT scores of 70 percent or more."

However, ACE concluded by cautioning educational institutions against using only SDT scores for recommending academic credit.

In its upcoming newsletter, "The Center Update," ACE will include an article that tells colleges to check soldiers' record to verify SDT scores are 70 or better before granting academic credit.

That information will also appear in the next update to the "Guide to the Evaluation of Educational Experiences in the Armed Services."

The handbook is available in military education centers and educational institutions.

Soldiers can find which course or program credits are recommended for their MOS skill level by turning to the appropriate "MOS exhibit" in the handbook.

For more information on using SDT scores for college credit, contact the U.S. Army Training Support Center, Fort Eustis, Va., at DSN 927-4534 or commercial (703) 804-4534.

24th, 82nd fight together in peacetime

By Tom Clementson
49th Public Affairs Team

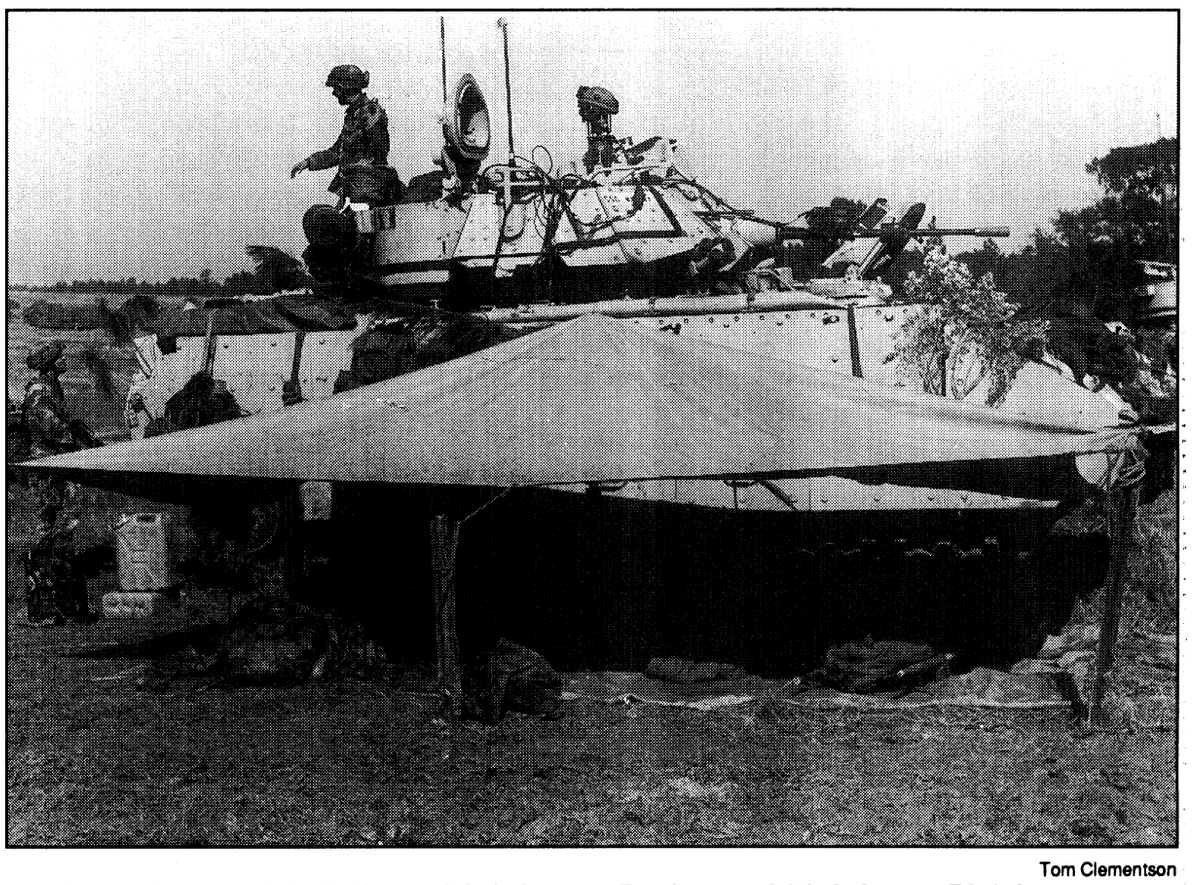
FORT POLK, La. — Some 3rd Brigade soldiers from Fort Benning recently participated in training exercises at the Joint Readiness Training Center at Fort Polk, La.

Company C, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, provided firepower from its tanks and Bradley Fighting Vehicles to support the 82nd Airborne Division in Task Force Falcon.

As elements of Task Force Falcon jumped onto the drop zone and seized the airfield, the opposition forces at the Joint Readiness Training Center had their work cut out for them.

Beginning the exercise in early November, the 82nd provided immediate firepower to the war-plagued country of Cortina, while Company C, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry, 24th Infantry Division, made its way to the area. The mechanized company added fast-moving, heavily-armored firepower from its M-1A1 Abrams tanks and the M-2A2 Bradley Fighting Vehicle.

The Bradley protects up to six dismounted infantry soldiers with its heavy armor, while moving them to or from the battlefield.



The Bradley can employ a 25-millimeter cannon, the tube-launched, optically guided, wire-tracked missile or the Dragon anti-tank weapon. These weapon systems can be used both day and night. Operators use thermal optic sights to target enemy personnel and vehicles.

One of the platoon's assets is a dismounted forward observer. Sgt. Lars W. Vetland of 1st Platoon, Company C, 1st Bn., 18th Inf., has the ability to call for indirect artillery fire from the 82nd Airborne Division's 319th Field Artillery Regiment.

"When a mission calls for heavy firepower and a lot of speed, the 24th has it," said 2nd Lt. Christopher M. Coglianese, 1st Platoon Bradley commander. "When you add to it the speed and power of the 82nd Airborne Division, the opposition doesn't stand a chance.

"Our Bradleys can take on almost any mission. For JRTC, we have been primarily used as a security force, guarding perimeters for some of the 82nd's units and escorting convoys," he said.

As the peace-enforcement mission phased into a more conventional mission, the Bradley platoons spearheaded the armor assault. The men under Coglianese's command got their chance to exhibit their firepower against the opposing forces.

ITB soldiers turn blue

By Shelby Carr
Infantry Training Brigade

Soldiers of Company A, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, took their place among the infantrymen of the world Nov. 19 at a "turning-blue" ceremony.

The ceremony represents the climax of 13 weeks of training — seeing civilians become infantrymen — said Staff Sgt. Jose Cruz, the training noncommissioned officer of Co. A, 1st Bn., 50th Inf. Regt.

The soldiers completed the final requirement of becoming an infantryman — a 15.5-mile road march — at the end of their final five-day field training exercise of Infantry One Station Unit Training. They received the blue cord, blue disks and cross rifles — the infantryman's symbols — for successful completion of OSUT.

OSUT brings together people from various backgrounds, said said Staff Sgt. Fred Mosley, a drill sergeant of Co. A, who has 2 1/2 years experience as a drill sergeant.

"Ethnic groups come together as a family, individuals become a team and the soldiers learn to work together," he said.

Shelby Carr

Staff Sgt. David Shaffer, a drill sergeant with Company A, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, pins the cross rifle insignia of the infantry onto Spc. Benjamin Elser.

During the last few steps of the road march, some soldiers encouraged and assisted others as they made their way into the company area where patriotic music was playing and tables covered with crossed rifles and blue cords awaited them.

"The drill sergeant who trained these soldiers is hard-working, dedicated and puts in a lot of time," said Capt. Hank Kron, commander of Co. A, 1st Bn., 50th Inf. Regt. "They take personal interest in their soldiers, sometimes getting frustrated and angry for the soldiers to do a good job. This ceremony is a great satisfaction for them."

"The turning-blue ceremony is a proud moment for a drill sergeant as he sees the maturity and confidence gained by the soldiers he has trained, especially those who arrive at OSUT training believing they can't do it," Mosley said.

Many drill sergeants ensured they awarded the blue cord and blood rifles, which are cross rifles awarded to soldiers through the drawing of blood, to particular soldiers.

"It feels great,"said Pfc. Shannon Obannon, who will be returning to Oklahoma to serve in the National Guard with the 45th Infantry Regiment. "I'm a little sore, and my body is numb; but, it is a good hurt. I'm glad to be serving my country."

Another soldier said completion of the training showed him what he could achieve.

"This ceremony shows what you can do when you set your mind to do it, even when you thought you were going to fail," said Pvt. 1 Greg Brown.

Kron told the soldiers they have earned the right to be addressed an "infantrymen."

"We are a rare breed ... who fight not with machines but with our feet, legs, backs, our minds and our hearts," he said. "Wear your blue colors proudly."

These soldiers had trainee uniforms with no decorations or awards; now they have infantry uniforms and are now counted as infantrymen, Kron said.

Regiment conducts run

By John Rhodenizer
29th Infantry Regiment

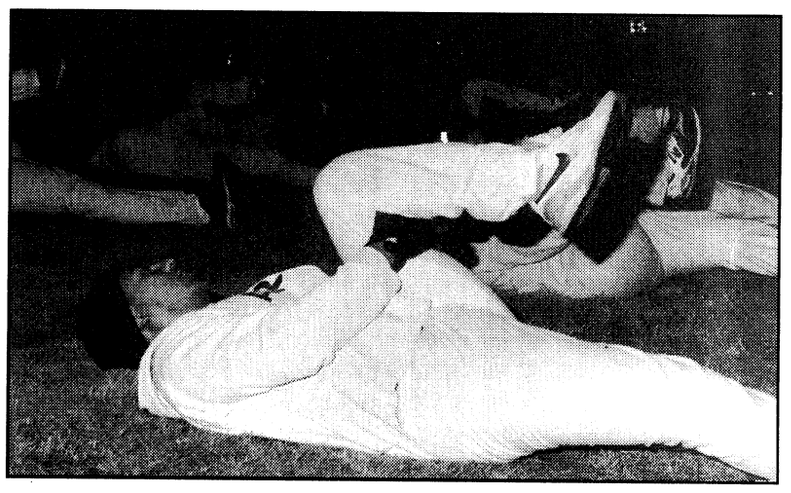
Soldiers of the 29th Infantry Regiment had their quarterly regimental run Dec. 3

The regimental command sergeant major, Command Sgt. Maj. Vincente Mesa, led the run.

Individual companies conducted warm-up exercises and calisthenics on Dickman Field before the five-mile run.

The regiment ran from Dickman Field to Regimental Headquarters, Building 5500, and returned to Dickman Field.

This is the second time the noncommissioned officers have led the regimental run, according to Mesa.



The run was a moderate pace, and the soldiers were highly motivated, Mesa said.

"We'd like to continue this event quarterly," he said. "It builds morale and esprit de corps within the organization."

After the run, he took the opportunity to address the soldiers about the positive aspects of the upcoming holidays.

He told the soldiers how driving under the influence of alcohol can end soldiers' careers and have a damaging affect on their loved ones as well. He encouraged the soldiers to obey posted speed limits and the post's weapons policy and to enjoy the holidays.

Mesa closed by telling the soldiers to continue their outstanding performance, training and support for those soldiers who pass through the 29th Infantry Regiment.

13th CSB opens Somalia post office

By Ellzabeth A. Carlson
13th Corps Support Battalion

Soldiers from the 13th Corps Support Battalion, currently deployed to Somalia, recently completed a quality-of-life project, that improves their postal service.

They opened the Sword Base post office, which will provide full postal service to both Sword Base and Victory Base in Somalia, home of the 43rd Engineer Battalion. The post office officially opened Nov. 3.

Col. James F. Willie, commander, 507th Corps Support Group, addressed the crowd of soldiers who turned out for the opening.

"You all like to get mail," Willie said. "Your family and friends at home do, too. I hate to write, so I send what I call a QN, a quick note. I sit down and fill up one page and mail it. And it works well. People notice. I get regular mail, and I do because I send a lot of quick notes."

Following the ribbon-cutting ceremony, Willie toured the facility and talked to the three soldiers from the 129th Postal Company who are responsible for its operation.

Willie complimented the 598th Maintenance Company soldiers and one soldier from the 364th Supply and Service Company on a job well done.

According to Lt. Col. Spike Rupert, Sword Base and 13th Corps Support Battalion commander, the next quality-of-life project the soldiers will tackle is a club where soldiers can mingle, dance, listen to music, watch videos or just relax.

FOR THE RECORD

In the Dec. 3 issue of The Bayonet, it was reported that staff sergeants in the MOS 62B with 15 years active duty could apply for early retirement. It should have been 17 years.

Sergeants first class in the MOS 74D with 15 years active service, 16D sergeants first class with 15 years active service, and 83F staff sergeants with 15 years active service should have been on the list also.

Joint duty credit

Bill may grant credit for participation in Operations Desert Shield and Storm

Army News Service

Joint duty credit for certain duty performed during Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm was readdressed in the fiscal 1994 Defense Authorization Bill.

The fiscal 1993 Defense Authorization Act enacted into Law Oct. 23, 1992, addressed the same subject. The fiscal 1994 bill will correct inequities in previous decisions and will reconsider new requests from officers who failed to submit a request last year because of an operational mission.

The bill will authorize the secretary of Defense to grant credit on a case-by-case basis for a full or a partial tour of duty in a joint duty assignment for officers who served in Persian Gulf combat zone in a position that provided significant experience in joint matters.

Joint tour credit may be granted even though the service performed does not fall within the definition of "Joint Duty Assignment" under current law.

Duty referred to in paragraph two is service in a position that provided significant experience in joint matters in support of Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm in one or more of the following areas between Aug. 2, 1990 and April 11, 1991, a portion of which must have taken place during the period beginning on Aug. 2, 1990 and ending Feb. 28, 1991:

- The Persian Gulf,
- Red Sea,
- Gulf of Oman,
- Gulf of Aden,
- That portion of the Arabian Sea that lies north of 10 degrees north latitude and west of 68 degrees east longitude,
- Total land areas of Iraq, Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, Oman, Bahrain, Qatar, and the United Arab Emirates.

Officers serving in Israel, Egypt, Turkey, Syria and Jordan (including the airspace and territorial waters) directly supporting combat operations

The purpose is to provide credit in the cases in which an officer truly gained significant experience in joint matters involving the integrated employment of land, sea and air forces between Jan. 17, 1991, and April 1991 in a position providing significant experience in joint matters are also eligible.

The purpose of this provision is to provide for joint duty credit only in the cases in which an officer truly gained significant experience in joint matters involving the integrated employment of land, sea and air forces that took place during Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm.

The law will not set aside the joint officer requirements of the Goldwater-Nichols act and create an opportunity for the circumvention of the bill's requirements by offices undeserving of joint duty credit.

Officers must have performed duty in one or more of the following positions: direct involvement in the planning of joint military operations; direct involvement in the coordination or implementation of joint military plans or operations; frequent professional interaction with units and members of another armed force or an allied armed force.

The secretary of Defense is required to establish uniform criteria that will set the parameters for the purpose of determining which officers are entitled to joint duty credit and whether such officers receive full or partial credit.

Based upon enactment of the law,which should be soon, the services are provided only 90 days to complete the action. This will involve the submission or resubmission of requests by qualified officers, board review and recommendation at the service headquarters staff level, review by service chiefs (including review by OSD and the joint staff) and final approval by the secretary of Defense.

The Army anticipates that upon establishment and publishing of criteria to the officer community, officers will be provided only 30 days (possible cut off date Dec. 31) to submit complete requests for joint duty credit.

The request format will require the following data: officer's name, grade or rank, Social Security number, branch or occupational specialty, dates of service and number of days in the combat zone for which joint duty credit is requested, type of credit requested (full or partial), position title during service in the combat zone, narrative justification indicating position served in supported by factual evidence such as letters of recommendation, awards, officer evaluation reports, etc.

New submissions will need to justify the operational mission constraint that precluded their submission for joint duty credit in fiscal 1993. Additionally, a resubmission will need to justify the reasons for reconsideration of the packet.

Officers who participated in operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm and served in the Persian Gulf combat zone during the period specified in paragraph three should be alerted to their potential eligibility to apply for joint tour credit under this legislative provision.

Upon determining specific eligibility criteria by the secretary of Defense, the Army will publish such criteria in a message to the commissioned officer community and specific information regarding eligibility, application procedures and timelines.

Officer Candidate School students from Class 1-94 fill in as volunteer elves at Santa's Castle as part of their class "real-world" mission.

Candidates lend Santa a hand

By Daniel M. Maloney
Officer Candidate School

The volunteers at Santa's Castle recently received some help from the 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment.

Each Officer Candidate Class plans and executes a "real world" mission that directly affects the Fort Benning Community.

OCS Class 1-94 had the mission to aid Santa's Castle, which resulted in more than 300 hours of volunteer work. More than 100 officer candidates repaired, cleaned or painted everything from board games to dolls and even bicycles.

Whether it was repairing a stereo or stitching the dress on a doll, candidates with backgrounds in everything from electrical engineering to combat arms used their talents to help the Fort Benning family.

For the candidates, it not only meant a short break from training; but, more importantly, it meant an opportunity to share in the holiday spirit at a time of separation from their families, said Candidate Christopher R. Hallenbeck, the 1st Platoon representative for the OCS project.

The volunteer work was a poignant reminder of the importance of sharing the holiday season with family, especially children, he said.

"Nothing can be more important than making sure children have a reason to smile on Christmas morning," he said.

Designed to impact the Fort Benning community, Santa's Castle, which is located in Soldiers' Plaza, ensures every child has a Christmas present.

It is a volunteer organization that collects, repairs and distributes toys on post ensuring all the children in the Fort Benning family have something to open Christmas day.

Units assigned to Fort Benning identify the families interested in receiving toys for their children from Santa's Castle. Santa's Castle compiles the list. Then they distribute the toys.

The memories of OCS for the candidates of Class 1-94 will be many and varied. Among those memories will be the satisfaction of knowing their time and talents brought a smile to children's faces on Christmas Day.

Students catch Antarctic fever

Project includes walking like penguins, eating like explorers

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

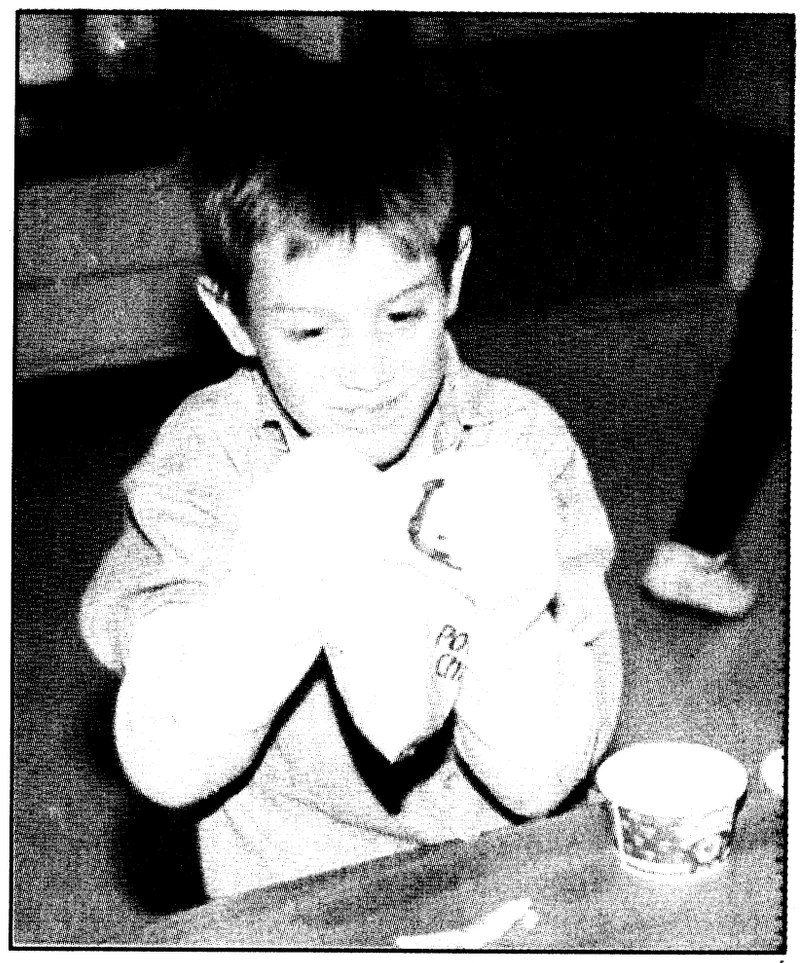
Strange things have been happening in the Fort Benning schools as the temperature averages about 50 degrees fahrenheit.

Recently, students have worn woolen socks on their hands for school work, donned heavy black and white fleeced clothing, raced one another using a penguin waddle, and created high-tech documentaries highlighting the Antarctic region.

Students can tell you the difference between a king and an emperor penguin, they know the vast frozen South Pole is the world's largest desert and they have discussed the fact that no mammals live in the interior of this icy land.

These students aren't obsessed with Antarctica and don't want to move to the South Pole — they are merely enhancing their study of this region through innovative programs in the schools. The core of this unit of study is the current expedition of Antarctica by veteran explorer Norman Vaughan.

Students in classes at Faith Middle School and Dexter School have been participating in enrichment exercises designed to bring the exploration of the Antarctic region to life for them. The exercise of wearing socks on the hands was one way to demonstrate just how difficult it is to explore the South Pole.



Recently, students who wore heavy socks on their hands experienced the frustration explorers often feel when they perform everyday tasks while swathed in layers of clothes and heavy mittens.

"This simulates what it would be like if they were actually one of the explorers. The explorers can't take their mittens off," explained Dexter Principal Vicki Rogers as students struggled to open zip lock bags during lunch.

The explorers must wear mittens rather than gloves because at the frigid arctic temperatures, fingers need the warmth of one another in order not to freeze, Virginia Wilcox told her class at Dexter.

Physical education classes even became involved in the "Penguin Week" activities at Dexter, and youngsters ran relays while balancing brightly colored eggs on their feet to simulate a penguin nurturing an egg.

While Dexter students enjoyed the egg relay and the Penguin Day "waddle race," across the street at Faith Middle School, students were busy in their high-tech, multimedia center creating videos and classroom reports highlighting the Arctic environment and the adventures of Vaughan's team of explorers.

Jerrie Macintire/Special to The Bayonet

Paddy Ferriter, a fourth-grader at Dexter, practices eating with socks on his hands as students learn about explorers' activities.

Vaughan, whom many students remember from a personal visit to Fort Benning two years ago, is currently exploring the South Pole as students follow him from afar using a telecomputing system.

The Faith School multimedia center buzzed with activity as students viewed videos of the 1928 exploration of Antarctica, the adventure that made Vaughan world famous. Faith youngsters selected portions of various videos for inclusion in reports on that region.

"The interest in this program is incredible," said Dr. Wanda Hagler, multimedia coordinator. "The children are here working before and after school," she said.

As they grouped together around dozens of computers, printers and video screens, students discussed the exploration and what it has taught them about the South Pole environment.

There would be no blowing dust from the covers of ancient encyclopedias for these researchers. When they wanted current facts for a report they simply came "on line" with their computer-linked encyclopedia service.

However, some printed material still proved useful to the students, and they "scanned" these graphics to transfer them from a printed page to their computer screens. Some students chose to report on Vaughan's expedition using the HyperCard program, enabling them to merge text, graphics, sound and video into one presentation package through laser disk interaction.

Faith students used the HyperCard as an authoring tool, although the program can also be used as an information organizer.

These researchers also had at their disposal a myriad of high-tech equipment capable of editing and projecting complex computer-generated reports.

Once their reports were complete, these middle-schoolers transferred the data onto disks. These disks could then be transported to the classroom where students could present their research reports. The high-tech media center not only teaches valuable computing skills, but also "opens another door for children to be successful," Hagler said.

A huge map displayed near the media center enables the students to keep track of the expedition, which is scheduled to conclude Dec. 19 when Vaughan should reach the summit of the mountain named in his honor.

Fort Benning students can anticipate the successful conclusion to this piece of history they have studied from the screens of their classroom computers.

Young authors ready to publish

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

The multimedia center at Faith Middle School hummed busily this past week as seventh-graders honed language and computer skills while designing a unique gift for younger students.

These young authors are in the second phase of producing books about their younger buddies at Dexter School.

While the middle schoolers are writing, illustrating and designing the books, they are learning to use state-of-the-art computers and equipment at their school. For example, the students must choose whether to illustrate their creations or use printed graphics.

A "scanner" enables them to copy and print any graphic, including photographs, to the computer screen. The graphic is then ready for editing or alterations, after which it can be placed with the appropriate copy for the book.

The students also have at their disposal a variety of sizes and styles of type.

The books they are laboring over will be fictional stories but will include details that are real, said teacher Anne Trawick. The stories will revolve around winter themes, she said, and will highlight the interests of the book's main character.

The interviewing process was completed first, with students quizzing their younger buddies about their interests.

"What's your favorite food?" one students asked.

"What sports do you enjoy?" another questioned.

After collating and organizing this information, groups of students began work on the mechanics of producing books.

Once the text and illustrations have been written, edited and proofread, the students will finalize the copy and bind the booklets for a professional finish.

"We are really busy the night before these are due," Trawick said with a laugh.

Between the two schools, approximately 400 students are involved with the project.

Program teams first-graders with Spencer seniors who want to teach

By Jerrie Macintire

A program linking one end of childhood with the other involves youngsters at Loyd School as well as seniors at Spencer High School.

This program aims to provide partnership that enriches the education of the youngsters while providing the young adults a taste of what teaching is all about, according to a school representative.

Now in its second year, this mentor program includes 16 honors-level seniors at Spencer who wish to explore teaching as a career. They have been tutoring, encouraging and observing first-graders at Fort Benning's Loyd School.

This mentor program includes 16 honors-level seniors at Spencer who wish to explore teaching as a career. They have been tutoring, encouraging and observing first-graders at Fort Benning's Loyd School

Their help in the classroom "has been wonderful," said first-grade teacher Doris Wamble. As the year progresses, these college-bound seniors will work with Loyd youngsters at each grade level.

The children respond well to the high school students and look upon them as role models, said Loyd Principal Dr. Judy Gilliam.

Gilliam credits award-winning teacher Mike Edmondson of Spencer for the concept of this new and mutually beneficial program.

Gilliam noted that Edmondson, a former "Teacher of the Year" recipient known for his hands-on approach to chemistry and physics, serves as an inspiration to these potential educators.

Each week, Edmondson arrives at Loyd with his students, who are ready and willing to help children with classroom assignments or provide small group tutoring.

The children seemed delighted to receive individual attention as the teen-agers squeezed into tiny chairs and patiently answered questions and provided encouragement.

"How do you spell good?" one boy wanted to know. His next question, "How do you make a G?," prompted his mentor to patiently guide his wrist and pencil in the correct way.

Gilliam said she is excited about the entire program but is especially pleased to see so many young men considering the field of teaching.

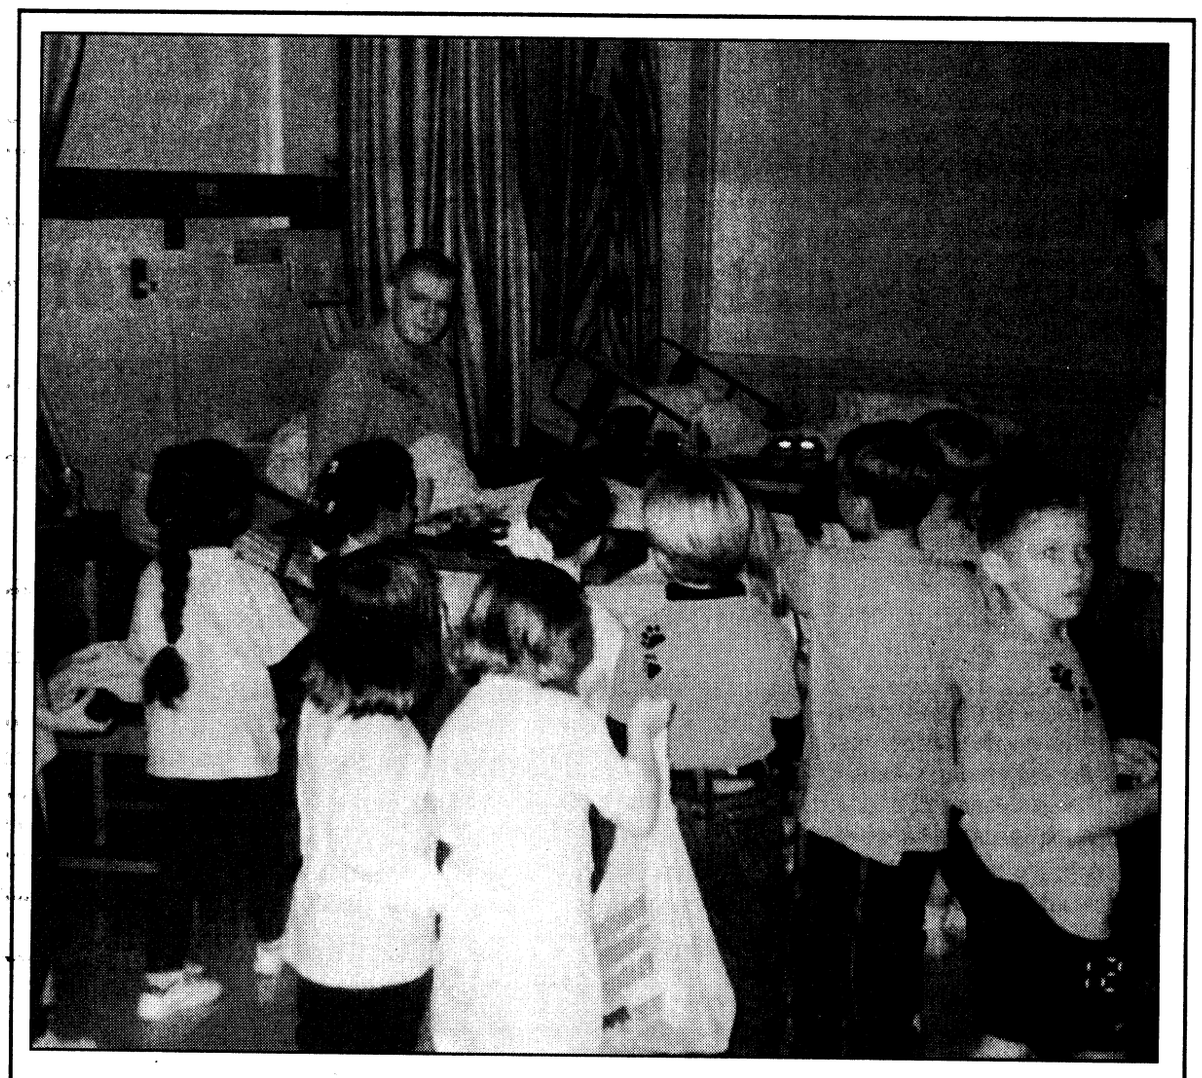
"We really need more male teachers in the schools," she said. "The children are looking for male role models."

Ten young adults in last year's mentor program did choose to study teaching in college.

The children revel in these weekly sessions, and their mentors come away with something as well.

Jerrie Macintire/Special to The Bayonet

Torrie Garner, a "mentor" from Spencer High School, works with Loyd first-graders Johnathan Green and Jenell Moore.



These weekly sessions will provide them with topics of discussions for several days, Edmondson said.

The seniors have discussed the individual attention the children seem to crave and the uninhibited personalities of young children, Edmondson said.

For example, during visits these youngsters frequently approach the teen-agers and comfortably seat themselves on mentors' laps.

The seniors have also noticed how attention spans and levels of concentration differ among various age groups, Edmondson said.

As the high-school students leave their weekly sessions with a sense of serving and teaching, the grade-schoolers eagerly look forward to the next visit.

The Infantry Training Brigade recently conducted Spouses' Night Out at the Sand Hill NCO Club.

Spouses gathered before dinner to greet friends and peruse the prizes on display, said Dusty Severn, wife of Col. Theodore Severn, ITB commander.

After dinner, five spouses were awarded "chair prizes" — awards given to those sitting in certain seats.

Bingo games followed the awarding of chair prizes. Prizes included a hurricane lamp, a glass pitcher, ceramic vase, sweatshirts and a quilted pillow .

Stress: Don't just grit your teeth and bear it

U.S. Army Dental Activity

Continual stress can decrease your body's natural resistance to disease, which can in turn cause gum infection and tooth decay.

For many people, stress takes its toll when they express their tension by grinding their teeth (bruxism).

People can't eliminate the stress in their lives; but, through regular cleanings and exams, your dentist can help counter the effects stress has on your dental health.

Stress is a normal, unavoidable part of life. It is more than just nervous tension; it is the body's response to any demand made on it.

Something as unpleasant as an argument or as enjoyable as a sunset can produce it. Stress is not always a bad thing. Every day, your body experiences two types of stress: "distress," which can be harmful, and "eustress," which can be healthy.

Your ability to adapt to distress can be an important factor in your health. It can be broken into four major types:

• Mental: When you think of stress, you probably think of mental distress — the boss yelling, the bills coming in, the children fighting. The scope of mental distress can, unfortunately, be very wide. Yet, the type of emotional stress, which is the most problematic, is that which is unrelenting, with few prospects for change (like hating your job).

• Physical: Physical distress can be as simple as driving your body past its endurance (such as working too many hours) or as complex as structural problems within the body. Pain itself is a major distress to the body.

• Chemical: Chemical distress is more prevalent than ever in today's society. It comes in two major forms: environmental pollution and contamination or refinement of your food supply.

• Thermal: Thermal distress occurs when your body becomes overheated or chilled.

Prolonged stress, caused by one or more of these types of distress, can be devastating to your health. The problem may be seen as sever fatigue, nervousness, moodiness or an inability to think clearly.

Fight or flight

The direct effect of stress occurs through a "fight or flight" mechanism in your body. This natural mechanism enables you to handle problem situations. It enables you to confront a situation or run from it.

Adrenaline stress

When you're faced with stress, your adrenal glands, which are located above your kidneys, release a powerful hormone called adrenaline. The glands can increase your blood sugar, delivering greater energy sources to your entire body. Quite literally stress can give you additional power and thinking ability.

Effect on your health

While the initial results of stress can be increased power and coping ability, prolonged periods of stress can take a devastating toll on your health, including your dental health.

Combat holiday blues

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet ©

The holiday period is supposed to be a time of joy and happiness; but, for many people, it can be the most stressful and depressing time of the year.

For a variety of reasons, from dislike of social gatherings to being alone or separated from loved ones, the Christmas season can be an uphill struggle.

"Memories of unhappy holidays can also contribute to emotional lows and strange feelings of sadness," said Yvonne Wilbanks, coordinator of the post's Civilian Counseling Services.

She said some signs that a person may be emotionally distressed include: changes in eating and sleeping habits; withdrawal from family and friends; an unwillingness to participate in holiday functions; unusual giving of extravagant gifts or personal possessions for no apparent reason; unexplained, sudden or extreme personality changes; and thoughts of suicide.

Some signs that a person may be emotionally distressed include: changes in eating and sleeping habits; withdrawal from family and friends; extreme personality changes; and thoughts of suicide

Any talk or threats of suicide should be taken seriously, Wilbanks said. Encourage the person to seek professional help or seek help on their behalf.

Wilbanks also gave some helpful hints that can be used to fight holiday depression.

- Get involved in helping others who are less fortunate.
- Talk about your feelings with a trusted friend, counselor or partner.
- Walk 30 minutes daily.
- Avoid alcohol, which acts as a depressant.
- Ask for help if your feelings get out of control.
- Participate in a hobby.
- Eat a low-fat diet.
- Write to and call your friends and loved ones.
- Get in touch with your spiritual beliefs.

Wilbanks also reminded all Department of Defense civilians and their family members that they can take advantage of the confidential screening and referral services offered by the Civilian Counseling Services on post.

COMMUNITY CARE

By Ken Franklin
Martin Army Community Hospital

Martin Army Hospital has two new "native guides" to help patients through confusion in the health-care system.

These guides, called nurse case managers or clinical nurse specialists, have a full-time responsibility to help patients connect with the medical resources they need. They also monitor clinic systems and suggest ways that improve service to customers.

Maj. Judi Rozelle, R.N., and Capt. Mary Hess, R.N., are both nurse practitioners with master's degrees in nursing. A nurse practitioner has extra training that lets them see patients in partnership with a physician.

Rozelle's special training is in pediatrics, while Hess has studies in adult medical and surgical care.

In a typical day, these nurses may be:

• Analyzing emergency room records to look for patients that may need specialty services;

• Reviewing ward records to look for ways to shorten hospital stays or eliminate waste;

• Calling patients who need follow-up care for chronic illness and helping them find a long-term physician; or

• Meeting with doctors or nurses to discuss possible improvements in their operations.

These nurses differ from the stereotypical "efficiency experts" in that they work alongside hospital personnel in making the changes they recommend.

Their experience in dealing with Fort Benning's patients helps them understand what the patient really needs and keeps them from repeating old mistakes.

Nurse case managers are new in the American health-care system. At Martin Army Community Hospital, they are working with and for the patient to continuously improve the quality of care.

Do you have a question about soldier and family care at Martin Army Community Hospital?

Send it to Community Care Corner, Martin Army Hospital, ATTN: HSXB-F, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905-6100.

Don't put off medical care during holidays

Egleston Children's Hospital

Unfortunately, illnesses and injuries don't take time off for the holidays.

Children sometimes get sick or hurt just when our attention is on important family traditions and religious rituals. But don't let your holiday events influence your judgment about whether to seek medical care for your child, advises emergency medicine physician Dr. David McLario of Egleston Children's Hospital at Emory University.

"Whether it's because they are timid about disturbing the child's doctor or because they don't want to interrupt special family time together, some parents tend to put off getting medical care for their sick children during major holidays, even if the exact same symptoms would warrant a prompt phone call or trip to the doctor any other day of the year," McLario said.

So how do you tell whether your child's illness or injury can wait until after a holiday?

"No two children are exactly alike, and every illness is unique," he said. "So there is no set formula to follow, but there are some general rules of thumb that can help you make a decision."

McLario offers these tips:

• If in doubt about your child's condition, by all means call your child's doctor or take your child to an urgent care or emergency center. Don't put it off just because it's a holiday.

• Don't put off seeing a doctor for puncture wounds or deep cuts that could need stitches.

• Most low to moderate fevers in children are not associated with serious illness and can be controlled with nonaspirin fever relievers (such as acetaminophen), making children feel better and act more like themselves. However, always call or see a doctor promptly for any fever more than 100.5 degrees in an infant less than 3 months old.

• Also, when evaluating children's illnesses, do consider their mood and activity levels and look for changes from their usual personality. If they're drinking and eating normally and are playful and smiling, you probably don't need to be as concerned as you might be if they are not eating or drinking or if they are sluggish, sad and crying.

While there are other symptoms that should prompt a trip to the doctor, always get immediate medical attention for your child if you observe:

• Difficulty breathing beyond the simple "stuffiness" of a cold, particularly if the child is under 1 year old.

• Poor circulation (look for noticeable paleness, a bluish tint to the skin, or generalized mottling (a splotchy appearance to the skin).

• Any sudden change in mental or physical function, such as becoming disoriented or unconscious or not being able to move an arm or leg, for example.

Remember to take with you any medications your child needs only on occasion, in case of flare-up of a diagnosed condition.

McLario also advises taking along some information that will help out-of-town doctors treat your child, such as:

• Your pediatrician's phone number.

• A list of medications your child is taking.

• Immunization records.

• Information about allergies or any other medical conditions your child may have or has had in the past. For more information on holiday safety, call Egleston at (404) 321-KIDS.

Fire prevention guidelines are family affair

Egleston Children's Hospital

It's time to think about preventing fires. Make prevention a priority by teaching your family, especially your children, about the dangers of fire.

Review the following guidelines with your family to protect yourselves from fire.

• Install smoke detectors on each level of your home outside bedroom and kitchen. Test the batteries monthly and change them at daylight savings time. Check your fire extinguisher every six months.

• Design and practice a family fire escape plan with two exits for each room. Make sure your children are familiar with the plan and can exit by themselves if necessary.

• Conduct periodic fire drills. Practice your plan with your eyes closed. This will prepare you and your children to escape if your home is filled with smoke. Remember to crawl low, below the smoke in order to breathe clean air.

• Teach your children the difference between safe toys and dangerous household products. They should learn to never play with matches, lighters or electrical appliances.

• Make sure every upstairs bedroom in your home is equipped with a chain ladder. You may need it to escape out of an upstairs window. You can store the ladder under the bed.

• Never smoke in bed or leave burning cigarettes in an ashtray unattended.

• Never leave cooking unattended and keep the cooking area clean. Make sure there are no combustible items that could catch on fire near the heating element.

• Keep your clothes dryer exhaust duct free of lint. Do not leave home or go to sleep with the dryer running.

• Children may react to fire in strange ways. Many children will try to hide from a fire. Teach your children to escape as they have practiced with the rest of the family.

• Always use a fire screen. Have your chimney cleaned every three years or every year if you burn a lot of wood. Keep portable heaters at least three feet from combustible.

• Sleepwear for children up to 12 years old must have a label describing fire-retarding characteristics. Check these labels when washing clothes so that you don't wash out the flame resistant ingredients.

• Store propane for gas grills outdoors, and store gasoline only in an Underwriters Laboratories listed gas container.

• For more information on fire safety or any other area of safety, call the child safety experts at (404) 321-KIDS.

Gift giving: Presents with sharp edges, small parts are safety hazards

Egleston Children's Hospital

The child safety experts with Egleston Children's Hospital at Emory University in Atlanta, Ga., encourage all parents to take extra time this holiday season to thoroughly examine any gifts purchased for children.

Sadly enough, seemingly innocent toys such as tricycles, marbles and balloons are responsible for thousands of injuries each year.

In fact, statistics from the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission in 1992 show there were 142,700 children under the age of 14 treated in hospital emergency rooms because of toy-related injuries.

"No time is a good time for a medical emergency, but the holidays are especially hard when little ones are involved," said Maryann Johnston, a Egleston Emergency Center nurse.

Johnston recommends avoiding toys with small, removable parts for children under the age of 4.

"Infants and toddlers have a tendency to put things in their mouths; toys with small parts can easily become lodged in a young child's throat," Johnston said.

Other recommended tips:

• Parents should watch out for toys with sharp points or edges since they could enable children to unintentionally stab themselves or another person. The item should also be free of glass or metal edges.

• Toys that require electricity are best suited for children 8 years and older.

• Parents of infants and toddlers should be wary of toys with long strings or cords such as necklaces and child mobiles because they could cause strangulation.

"Once infants are strong enough to pull themselves up or pull on the hanging objects, the mobile becomes a dangerous toy that they could get tangled in," Johnston said.

• Avoid dart guns or other toys that might be capable of firing articles not intended for use in the toy, such as pencils or nails.

"Most major toy manufacturers give age recommendations for the use of the toy, which can be a helpful guideline for parents," she said. She adds that parents should also look for safety labels including "flame retardant or flame resistant" on fabric products.

"Watch for the large plastic bags the toy is packaged in because they could be a suffocation device," she said. "Always tie the plastic in a knot and dispose of immediately so children don't play with it and accidentally smother themselves."

To receive a free holiday safety brochure, send a self-addressed envelope to Egleston Children's Hospital at Emory University, Child Safety Department, 1405 Clion Road, N.E., Atlanta, Ga. 30322-1101.

DR. FIT

Q: My husband is in the Army, and he suggested I write to you on the subject of diabetes and exercise. Is it better to exercise or 'take it easy' to control my diabetes?

There is no question that exercise helps most people with diabetes improve their physiological and psychological well-being.

In the early part of this century, British researchers proved that a short bout of exercise could depress blood-glucose levels.

The doctors ignited the strong contemporary interest in regular exercise as a cornerstone of diabetes treatment.

In an on-going study at the Cooper Institute for Aerobic Research, Dallas, Texas, comparisons were made among fit and unfit men with no, borderline, and confirmed diabetes. In all cases, the unfit men's death rates were more than 2.5 times greater than fit men.

The best diet for diabetic patients is one with most calories coming from complex carbohydrates, including potatoes, rice, pretzels, pasta, grains and some simple carbohydrates from fruits and vegetables.

Q: I want to develop the muscles in my legs. What is the single best exercise to accomplish this goal?

A: The squat is the best exercise to develop leg muscles. This exercise recruits the following muscles groups: gluteals, quadriceps, hamstrings, abductors and adductors of the hip and to some extent, the "gastroes" and other muscles in the lower legs.

Another exercise that is not as strenuous and still exercises the legs is the lunge with weight on the shoulders. Do the exercise by stepping forward with one leg until the upper leg is parallel with the ground. Ensure the knee does not travel in front on the ankle. Do repetitions for endurance and add weight for strength.

Q: I love to eat a hearty breakfast to include eggs, bacon, sausage, whole milk and white bread. I was told it is high in fat, calories and cholesterol. Is that true?

A: Yes. Healthful breakfasts will provide you plenty of energy without piling on the calories. Meals with all-fruit preserves on whole-wheat bread, whole-grain cereals served with skim milk, and yogurt or low-fat cottage cheese with fruit are acceptable. You should also remove the egg yolk from the eggs and scramble only the egg whites.

If you must have meat, consider eating Canadian bacon rather than sausage or bacon. Cook these meals with a corn spray like Pam. Incidentally, grits are acceptable for breakfast, but do not load the grits with butter, lard, bacon grease or sausage drippings.

'Cutting the fat' good for children

Egleston Children's Hospital

Typical American eating habits frequently cause arteries to become clogged with cholesterol-laden plaques even in the first years of life. Progressing slowly into adulthood, this clogging of the arteries eventually causes premature disease and death.

You can do your children a favor by limiting the amount of fats and cholesterol in their diets after the first two years of life.

But according to Egleston dietitian Robin Davis, R.D., it's just as important to your child's health not to go too far overboard on the cholesterol and fat watch.

"A certain amount of dietary fat is essential to a growing child's health, providing needed calories and concentrated energy and enabling the body to absorb vitamins A, D, E and K," Davis said. "Even cholesterol is an essential body chemical."

In general, children's fat intake should constitute at least 30 percent of their daily calories unless a physician specifically advises otherwise, according to Davis.

She offers the following tips for maintaining a healthy diet without excessive fat:

• Do not restrict fat intake at all for children under the age of 2.

• Cholesterol is found only in foods of animal origin.

• Saturated fats, found most often in animal fats, tend to raise the level of cholesterol in the blood while polyunsaturated fats and monounsaturated fats, found mostly in vegetable fat, tend to lower it.

• Watch out for fats that harden, or become solids, at room temperature. They are more saturated.

• Serve fish, vegetable sources of protein or small portions of lean meat or poultry, from which all visible fat has been removed.

• Serve low-fat or skim milk.

• Limit consumption of eggs to three or four a week.

• When choosing a margarine, make sure the first item listed on the ingredients list is liquid vegetable oil. Stay away from margarines listing "partially hydrogenated" or "hardened" items as first ingredients.

• Keep an eye on your child's chocolate consumption. Many chocolate candies are made with liquid baking chocolate containing saturated vegetable oils. Candies made using hardened baking chocolate or chocolate powder are better choices.

• Teach your children sensible eating habits. With these habits as a foundation, they'll be able to easily make adjustments to their diet as their bodies' needs change over the years.

Nutrition still has some surprises

General Mills

With nutrition and health studies making the headlines almost daily, it may seem that you've read all the latest news. However, we have still other facts that may interest you, says Karen Wilder, a registered dietitian.

• Studies from the American Dietetic Association show that more than 20 million Americans are dieting at any given time.

• About 44 million Americans are overweight, according to the National Institutes of Health. "Overweight" is defined as 10 to 20 pounds over the appropriate weight for height, age and sex.

• Researchers at the Johns Hopkins Medical Institutions have found that appetite can be triggered by environmental factors, such as warm colors (orange, red and yellow), spirited music, the winter season and changes in work schedules.

• American Heart Association statistics indicate that residents of New York State have the highest rate of coronary heart disease. States with the lowest heart attack rate are Hawaii, New Mexico, Utah and Maryland as well as the District of Columbia.

• Most Americans fall short of the recommended servings of fruits and vegetables by 700 to 800 servings per year, according to Tufts University School of Nutrition. The Dietary Guidelines for Americans recommend three to five servings of vegetables and two to four servings of fruits daily.

• Very low calorie diets can cause the body to burn calories more slowly, reports the ADA. The more calories burn faster the more muscle you develop.

Despite all that we know about nutrition, says Wilder, there are new developments being reported all the time.

Satiety is balance of 'stuffed' and 'starved'

General Mills

There's an empty feeling that often hits a few hours after a skipped meal.

Equally as uncomfortable is the "loosen your-belt-a-notch" syndrome that comes from overeating. In between these extremes is "satiety."

Satiety can be described as the balance between feeling "stuffed" and feeling "hungry" when you leave the table, says Karen Wilder, a registered dietitian. She adds that the composition of your diet as well as the timing of meals and snacks affect satiety

Foods high in complex carbohydrates also can positively affect satiety and contribute to an overall healthful diet. Primary sources of complex carbohydrates include breads, pasta, rice and cereals.

Cooked dry beans and peas, as well as other vegetables and fruits, also are good sources.

Research suggests that a diet high in complex carbohydrates induces a feeling of fullness and usually causes a person to eat less food.

As a result, achieving satiety can help in maintaining a stable weight or in losing weight.

When substituted for foods high in fat, a diet rich in complex carbohydrates can help control your intake of fat.

A gram of carbohydrate provides less than half the calories of a gram of fat.

Complex carbohydrate foods also provide many essential nutrients, such as vitamins and minerals as well as fiber.

It's smart to eat a wide variety of foods high in complex carbohydrates every day, says Wilder.

CRIME WATCH

Military Police Activity

The following entries are from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from Nov. 17 to Nov. 23. Such entries may be incomplete and do not determine the guilt or innocence of any person.

This week's hot topic concerns deer hunting and U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 210-2, Installation Hunting and Fishing Regulation.

Hunters are required to have a Fort Benning area access pass (on the dash with the information visible outside the vehicle, and the vehicle must have a permanent or temporary Fort Benning decal on the dash, also visible to the outside.

Hunters are required to have the following items in their possession when hunting on Fort Benning: Fort Benning hunting permit, hunter safety card (if born after Jan 1, 1961), kill card and Fort Benning deer permit.

Georgia residents must have a Georgia hunting license and a big game license. Alabama residents are required to have an Alabama hunting license and big game license. If you are hunting with a bow, you are required to have a bow and arrow hunting license.

Hunters are also required to have proof of identification in possession at all times. Hunters are required to check in and receive range clearance prior to entering a range area to hunt. Hunters are also required to check out prior to 9 p.m. on the day they are hunting.

• A private reported that a person known to her borrowed her vehicle with her consent and failed to return it. It was discovered at an off-post location.

• A sergeant first class was charged with indecent assault after he fondled a woman's breast against her will on two occasions.

• A family member was charged with carrying a weapon on school grounds after his father discovered the weapon missing and determined his family member had carried it to school to show to friends.

• A family member was charged with shoplifting after removing several necklaces and other jewelry from a display shelf and concealing them in a purse while in a dressing room. The family member then exited the post exchange without rendering payment for the items.

This week's booby prize is awarded to the specialist who, while at the Hidden Door Club, was in possession of two cans of an alcoholic beverage not sold there.

The specialist was escorted out of the club by an employee. He re-entered the club and ran out a side door where he was detained. He was taken to the Military Police station, and it was determined he was underage and was administered a breathalizer test with a result of .20.

Other activities included 15 hunting violations and 11 reports of larceny of private property. There were 10 traffic accidents and four cases of driving under the influence of alcohol. Also, there were five cases of assault reported and five shoplifting cases reported at exchange activities.

Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best — Give Crime Arrest."

Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5223 or the "Crime in Progress" line at 545-2222.

ASK THE JUDGE

Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: I have already received some of the bills for my Christmas shopping. I don't remember making some of the charges for which I am being billed. Is there some way I can check on the accuracy of the charges before I pay them?

A: Yes. The Federal Trade commission advises reviewing all billing statements before making payment, especially after the holidays.

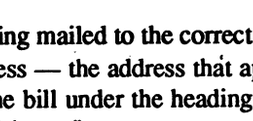
Errors do occur, but they are simple to resolve if you make use of the Fair Credit Billing Act. Under this law, you must send the creditor a written notice about the problem to avoid paying for any disputed charges.

Although you may be inclined to call the company about the billing problems, you must be aware that a telephone call does not trigger the legal safeguards provided under the Fair Credit Billing Act.

To be protected under the law, you must write to the bank or retailer who maintains the account. Your notice must be received within 60 days after the bill containing the error was mailed to you.

In the letter, include your name, account number, the date, type and dollar amount of the charge you are disputing, and why you think there was a mistake.

Keep a copy of your letter for you own records. Ensure the letter is being mailed to the correct office address — the address that appears on the bill under the heading "send inquiries to."



Do not put your letter in the same envelope as your payment. You may wish to send your letter by certified mail to make sure the creditor receives it.

Within 30 days of receiving your letter, the creditor must acknowledge its receipt to you in writing, unless the problem has been resolved within that time.

The creditor must then conduct a reasonable investigation and within 90 days either explain why the bill is correct or correct the mistake. If you requested proof of the bill in your letter, the creditor must provide you with copies of documents such as charge slips and receipts.

The creditor may not close your account just because you disputed a bill under the law.

If problems continue, you may seek legal advice from the Legal Assistance Division at 545-3281 or the Federal Trade Commission, 1718 Peachtree Street, N.W., Suite 1000, Atlanta, Ga. 30367.

PET OF THE WEEK

This female calico kitten is looking for a home. She is approximately 7-weeks old and is just one of many cats and dogs which can be adopted on post.

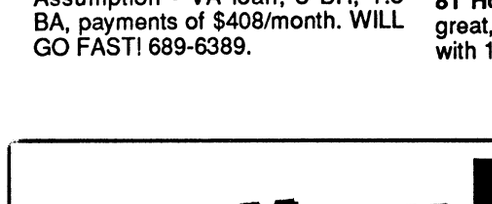
For more information, contact the Veterinary Services Office in Building 265 at 545-1127.

The hours of operation are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:30 am. and 12:45 to 3 p.m. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

If you have lost a pet, check the stray impoundment facility in Building 283.

Stray pets are given three working days to be claimed from the time they are picked up by animal control personnel.

If the pets are not claimed, they become government property and may be adopted or destroyed.



Rabies tags are the only way Veterinary Services can contact the owner of a lost pet.

Pet owners are reminded that they are required to register their pets and update their records when changes occur.

Bette Midler stars in CBS' version of 'Gypsy'

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

It's a solid recipe for holiday-season entertainment: a top entertainer in a classic musical and on television no less.

SPOTLIGHT

"Gypsy," which was originally staged in New York in 1959 with Ethel Merman as its star, then remounted on Broadway in the early 1970s (with Angela Lansbury) and in 1989 (with Tyne Daly), will be shown Sunday at 8 p.m. on NBC.

It gets a new film treatment in a three-hour presentation Sunday on CBS with Bette Midler making her TV-movie debut as Rose Hovick, the ultimate "stage mother" who propelled her daughters Louise (played by Cynthia Gibb) and June (Jennifer Beck) into show-business careers ... with Louise eventually striking out on her own as stripper Gypsy Rose Lee, on whose memoirs the so-called "musical fable" is based.

The book was by Arthur Laurents, music by Jule Styne, lyrics by Stephen Sondheim, and the original choreography was by Jerome Robbins. There was also a 1962 screen version with Rosalind Russell.

Directed by the late Emile Ardolino ("Sister Act," "Dirty Dancing"), the production also features Peter Riegert ("Middle Ages," "Crossing Delancey") as the girls' agent and Rose's love interest, and Edward Asner as Rose's disapproving father. Additional cast members include Michael Jeter ("Evening Shade"), Christine Ebersole ("The Cavanaughs") and Linda Hart.

Bette Midler

Among the score's memorable songs are "Everything's Coming Up Roses" (which became a Merman standard after its debut), "Let Me Entertain You," "Small World," "All I Need is the Girl" and "Together, Wherever We Go."

What: 'Gypsy'
When: Sunday, 8 p.m. on NBC

"I've always wanted to play that character," said the ever-lively Midler of her "Gypsy" role, which she filmed just before launching her latest concert tour. "But, I'd never really thought about where I would play it. I would have played it in stock if I'd had the chance. It's just a great part. The score is extraordinary, and the writing is just incomparable.

"This was treated like a feature film, with the full complement of actors and studio musicians," she said. "We rehearsed for seven weeks before we even set foot on a sound stage, and we did it quickly because everybody knew what they were doing, thanks to Emile Ardolino."

With tongue firmly in cheek, Midler said, "Nothing was skimped on, except my salary."

Her own background in entertainment makes Midler sympathetic to the plights of all the major figures in "Gypsy."

"It's a very hard life, especially if you're not in the big, big, big time," she said. "You're too tall, you're too short, you're too thin, you're too fat, you don't sing high enough, you don't sing low enough. It wears away at your soul after a while."

Fox Theatre offers Christmas 'wizard'

Theatre League of Atlanta

"The Wizard of Oz," a Broadway-style extravaganza for all who are young in heart, will open at the Fox Theatre Dec. 23 and run through Dec. 26. This production is on a national tour of the United States, Canada, South America and Southeast Asia.

The MGM film "The Wizard of Oz," opened in August of 1939; and, according to "Variety," within days the country was "Ozified."

The technical feats, and the cast turned combined for a show that appealed to audiences of all ages. Judy Garland, Jack Haley, Ray Bolger, Bert Lahr and Frank Morgan were magic.

In reviewing the 1949 rerun, Time Magazine reported "... dusted off and re-issued (it) proves that true wizardry, whether in books or on the screen, is ageless. In that magical land of Oz, nothing changes. The whimsical gaiety, the light-hearted song and dance, the lavish Hollywood sets and costumes are as fresh and beguiling today as they were 10 years ago."

Set designer Kent Homchick has created an Oz destined to enchant, startle, amaze and delight audiences of all ages. Munchkinland blooms in technicolor splendor and Emerald City sparkles and glimmers.

The Big Nazo Puppets, of Providence, R.I., have designed a splendid series of "Oz" creatures, many larger than life. They include a 15-foot "Oz" head, three singing apple trees, winged monkeys and a Munchkin chorus.

"Somewhere Over the Rainbow" won an Oscar for Best Song in 1939 and has gone on to become an integral part of American folklore.

The show includes the equally memorable, singable, "The Yellow Brick Road," "Ding, Dong! The Witch Is Dead," "If I Only Had a Brain," "The Merry Old Land of Oz, "Lions and Tigers and Bears, Oh My," and "We're Off to See the Wizard."

Producer Richard Ericson has directed this Broadway-style extravaganza. Lynne Shankel, who garnered praise from critics across the country as musical director of "The Music Man" tour, is conducting.

Show times: Thursday and Saturday at 8 p.m.; Sunday at 2 and 7:30 p.m. Ticket prices are: $22.50, $14.50 and $10.

Tickets are on sale at all Ticketmaster Outlets including Turtles, Sound Warehouse, Coconuts and Tower Records; and the Fox Theatre Box Office. To charge tickets, call (404) 817-8700 or 249-6400. Discounts are available to groups of 20 or more by calling (404) 873-4300.

ANSWERS ON D-6

SOAP UPDATE

ALL MY CHILDREN: Gloria agreed to give Alec his one day of romance if he would then get out of her life. Dean persuaded Timmy to try the LSD, then left him alone in the park. Timmy began hallucinating and rode his bike into traffic, believing he could stop the cars and prevent his mother's (Natalie) death. Laurel spotted him and was hit by a car as she pushed him to safety. Wait to see: Kendall has surprises for Erica.

ANOTHER WORLD: Vicky was outraged when Grant said he planned to take full custody of her baby. Grant learned Vicky might reveal what he had done in Switzerland. Grant began to woo Amanda, who was unaware of his true intentions. Wait to see: Carl has a surprise for Rachel.

AS THE WORLD TURNS: Evan was in a tight spot when he was unable to retrieve the incriminating tapes. Tom and Margo found new clues in the investigation of Linc's murder. Evan rushed to rescue Rosanna from the burning art building as Andy got close-up photos. Wait to see: Damian is upset by Eduardo's plans.

BOLD AND THE BEAUTIFUL: Macy was depressed about Thorne and was about to take a drink. Sally persuaded Charlton Heston that she was Stephanie's liaison for the fashion show and got him to agree to add Anthony Armando Fashions to the Forrester fashion benefit. Wait to see: Karen and Connor make a decision about their relationship.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES: Roman and Marlena were shocked to learn Isabella had been kidnaped. When no fingerprints or other marks of an intruder could be found, John confronted his prime suspect, Stefano. Wait to see: Sami's good intentions could prove dangerous for baby Isabella.

GENERAL HOSPITAL: Scotty barely got Lucy and the newborn baby to General Hospital in time. The baby appeared to be well, but Lucy's vital signs stopped. A body was discovered at the ELQ plant. A.J. recognized a familiar piece of jewelry at the site. Wait to see: Laura has an eerie feeling about the house she Luke and Lucky moved into.

GUIDING LIGHT: Mindy warned Alexandra she'd fight back after the two had a nasty encounter in the powder room. Buzz hid Jenna from Roger. Lucy was startled to see who had the missing Spaulding contract. Wait to see: The Spaulding verdict could cause more trouble for all concerned.

LOVING: Trucker loaned Buck more money so he could double his investment with Malcolm. Dante told Curtis, whom he was holding prisoner, of his plans to destroy Curtis' family and then take Dinah Lee back with him to Kuwait. Wait to see: Curtis realizes Dante is close to fulfilling his plans.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE: Luna and Max took off for a honeymoon trip around the world. Powell thwarted Todd's escape plans. But Todd injured himself so he could be sent to the infirmary where he was able to steal pills. Wait to see: Andrew becomes concerned for Cassie.

THE YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS: Realizing Victoria was engaged, Ryan asked her if she was still frigid. She said the problem no longer existed. Victoria lied to Nikki that she needed her birth certificate for school. Wait to see: Cole and Victoria deal with an unsettling situation.

13th CSB struts its stuff

Elizabeth Carlson
13th Corps Support Battalion

The 13th Corps Support Battalion, currently serving in Mogadishu, Somalia, recently hosted a talent show.

Command Sgt. Maj. Herbert Nicholson of the 13th welcomed participants and the audience to the show.

Lt. Col. Spike Rupert, Sword Base and 13th Corps Support Battalion commander, reiterated the welcome through an original rap number, written and performed by him.

Staff Sgt. Rodney Yelder of the 598th Maintenance Company served as master of ceremonies. He was assisted by Spc. John Crenshaw, also from the 598th Maintenance Company, who acted as the disc jockey during the show.

Taking top honors in the singing category was the J and G Connection composed of Spc. Patricia Johnson from the 598th Maintenance Company and Spc. Derick Garmon of Company A, 43rd Engineer Battalion.

K/J Groove, composed of Pvt. 2 Keith Vandrlaan and Spc. John Crenshaw, both of the 598th Maintenance Company, was chosen as best in the rap category.

The lip sync category was taken by the group Funky Divas composed of Spcs. Tianza Allen and Denise Lumpkin, both of the 364th Supply and Service Company, and Spc. Tatisa Brown and Sgt Debra Brown from the 598th Maintenance Company.

Another talent show is already being planned for the near future.

HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21 to April 10) It is a full week of social activity for you, and you may not get around to dealing with a project you had in mind.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Business leads you hear of this week aren't likely to amount to much. Travel and leisure interests bring happiness now.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You could spend a bit too freely when shopping for the children this week. It may not be the right time to entertain guests.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Bookkeeping this week uncovers an error. A new-found pleasure interest commands your attention later in the week.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) Be sure to share your innermost feelings with a loved one. Financial prospects will improve this week.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) You'll want to follow up on a valuable business lead now. Job pursuits lead to financial gains.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) New money-making ideas come this week. It is another stellar week for you where social interests are concerned.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Some major house cleaning or rearranging of furniture will be going on this week. It would be better to opt for time for yourself than to have company over.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You're liable to hear big talk in connection with business this week. Take it with a grain of salt.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) You're on the right track where business interests are concerned this week. You'll meet with a money-making opportunity now.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) You'll shine now at a group activity. It is the perfect week for local travel and sightseeing. A meeting with an adviser yields valuable insights.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20) Save some time now for record keeping. Extra money or credit becomes available to you now. Problem-solving techniques are excellent now.

DUI TASK FORCE

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning's Military Police are taking extra steps to ensure the roads are safe this holiday season.

The MPs have instituted a "DUI task force" of extra patrols, specially trained and equipped to identify and apprehend people driving under the influence of alcohol.

The task force will be out on the roads nights through the new year looking for drunken drivers.

"Statistics have proved that this is the most dangerous time of the year as far as people drinking and driving," said Staff Sgt. Jeffrey F. Bishop, chief of the traffic section.

"It is a public safety issue," said Maj. Jack Heacock, chief of law enforcement. "People driving under the influence of alcohol pose a significant threat, and it is our job to protect public safety."

"The task force is one of our tools to identify drunken drivers and get them off the road," Bishop said.

Another tool the MPs will be using is safety checkpoints. Checkpoints will be set up at random and will move from night to night, Bishop said.

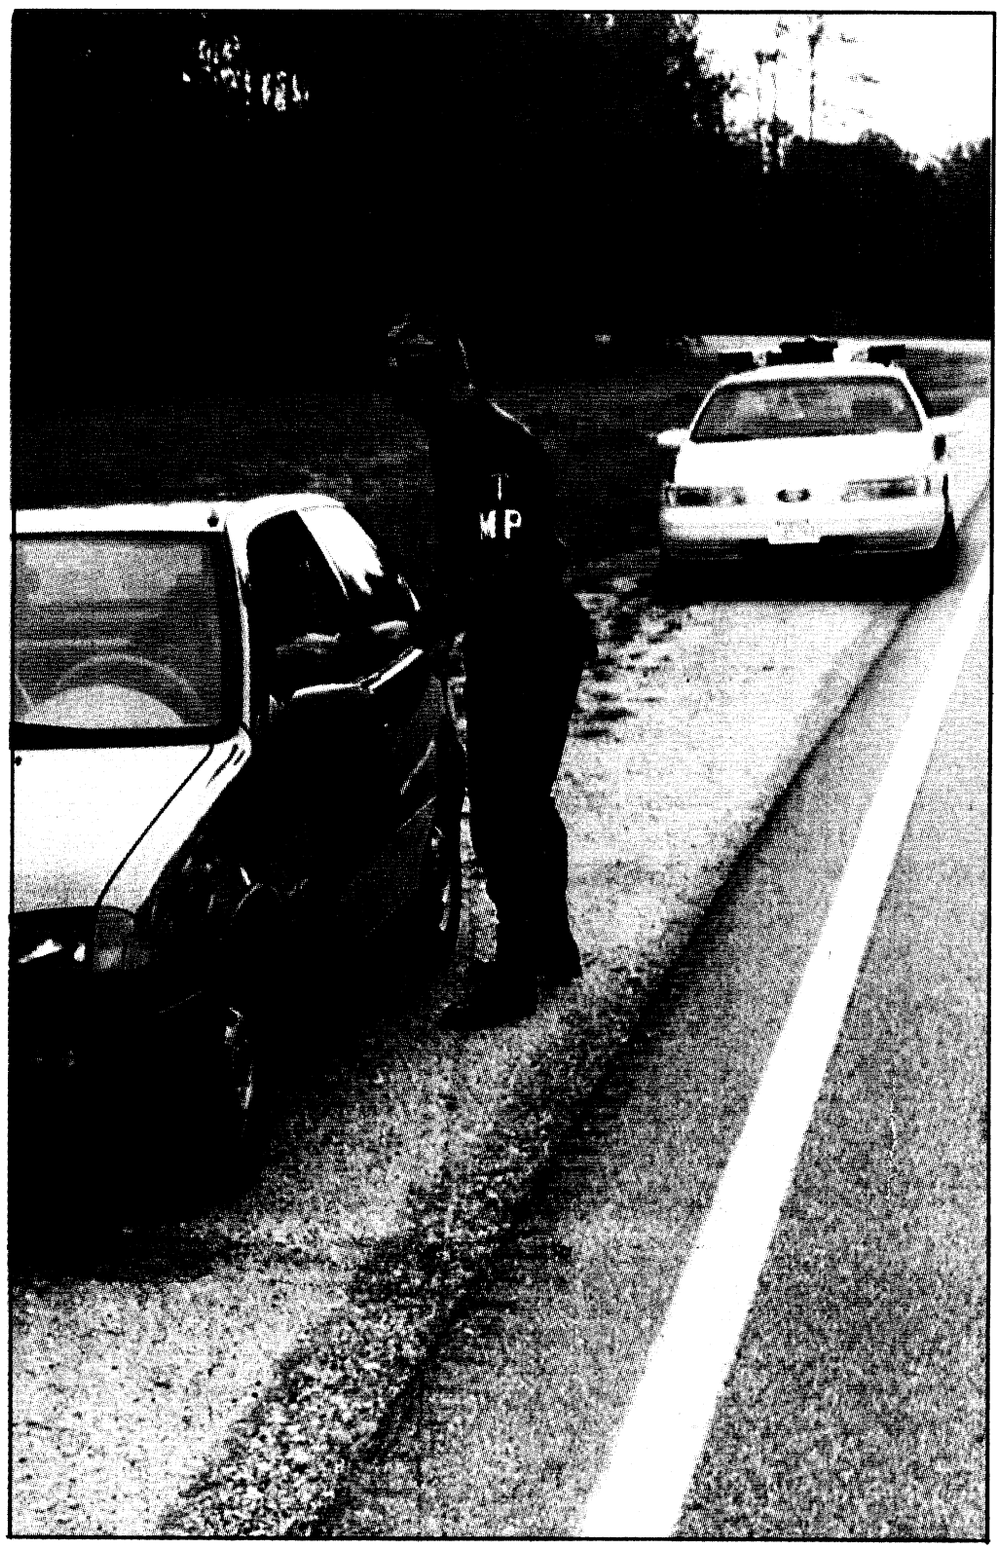
MPs at the checkpoints will be checking to see that people are using their seat belts and adhering to other safety standards as well as looking for drunken drivers, Bishop said.

Since receiving special training from representatives of the state of Georgia on detecting drunken drivers, Bishop said, all MPs are now familiar with the signs that may indicate a drunken driver.

That knowledge, combined with video cameras that provide a visual record of erratic driving and the field sobriety test as it is administered, has helped the MPs double the number of drunken drivers they apprehend and led to a 99 percent conviction rate, Bishop said.

The Georgia State Patrol is also concentrating its efforts and resources on apprehending people driving under the influence of alcohol during the holidays, said Police Sgt. 1st Class Bob Stevens, commander of Post No. 2 in La Grange.

"Driving under the influence of alcohol is a choice people make," Heacock said. "You don't drive drunk by accident. "



Heacock urges post residents to designate a driver who does not drink alcohol when going out or to a party.

If your designated driver "falls off the wagon," Heacock said, call a taxi or call SafetyCab (323-0110), a program sponsored by local businesses that offers a free ride home to anyone in the tri-city area who has too much to drink.

Another option, if you are on post, is the Safe Ride program, Heacock said. "If you become intoxicated and need a safe ride back to your home or barracks on post, the MPs will take you there — no questions asked," he said.

"If you drink," Bishop said, "don't drive. Call SafetyCab, call your supervisor — call anybody. It's better than risking drinking and driving and causing an accident."

"Just one incident," Heacock said, "is one too many."

Fund-raisers fuel Operation Holiday

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Operation Holiday, the annual activity that offers soldiers a variety of free activities during the holiday season, is funded entirely through fund-raisers and donations.

Jim Gallagher, executive vice president of Association of the United States Army's Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter, said funding does not come out of the AUSA's regular budget.

This year, fund raising is being spearheaded by Sam Wellborn, president of both Columbus Bank and Trust and the Ways and Means Committee of AUSA's Fort Benning-Chattahoochee Valley Chapter and other supporters.

"The goal is to raise $15,000 to fund not only Operation Holiday, but other soldier activities throughout the year as well," Gallagher said.

Each year, Operation Holiday comes to the rescue of soldiers who have to spend the Christmas season alone on post.

The program offers soldiers a variety of free activities.

Transportation to and from various events is provided as well as the cost of admission. However, any additional items, such as refreshments at sporting events, must be paid for by the soldier.

This year, two special Christmas parties will be at the Main Post Bowling Center Saturday for the families of soldiers deployed to Somalia. The first party, for family members of the 36th Engineer Group, will be from 1 to 3 p.m. The second party, for family members of the 43rd Engineer Battalion, will be from 4 to 6 p.m.

Both parties will feature free bowling, video games, hot dogs, chips and soft drinks and an appearance by Santa Claus, who will have a gift for each child. Door prizes will also be given away.

"Both the Association of the United States Army and the Main Exchange are major players in making this happen," said Brian Smith of the Directorate of Community Activities. "Similar parties were held during Desert Storm, and they were very successful."

Around 300 family members are expected to attend, he said.

Excellence appreciation

Post honors employees

By Cynthia Cheatham
Bayonet assistant editor

More than 100 Fort Benning employees and soldiers were honored at the quarterly Excellence Appreciation Day Breakfast at the Fort Benning Officers' Club Dec. 10.

Each person recognized received a paperweight engraved "quality employee."

"We've talked a lot about quality and Fort Benning and ... the recognition we've earned throughout the Department of Defense," said Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, who presented the awards. "As you travel throughout the Army, it's really true that everybody knows about Fort Benning and that we are the champs of quality installations."

Two new awards were also presented at the breakfast. Fort Benning has established a post-level Community of Excellence award program in line with the COE theme for this year, "Making the Best Even Better."

Two awards will be presented each quarter — one for excellent customer services and one for the best self-help effort.

During the breakfast, the Adjutant General's Casualty Branch received the customer service award and the 5th Ranger Training Battalion, Camp Frank D. Merrill, Dahlonega, Ga., was recognized for its self-help achievements during the fourth quarter.

Certificates of Excellence awards and plaques were also presented to the activities that won first place in the Training and Doctrine COE competition. The Public Affairs Office; Engineer Services; Military Personnel Services; Civilian Personnel Services; Equal Employment Opportunity; Morale, Welfare and Recreation and Family Support Services; Chaplain Services and Resource Management Services took top honors in that competition.

As the ceremony came to an end, Dale Ellis, director of Logistics, was honored with a special commendation from Gen. Wayne A. Downing, commander in chief, U.S. Special Operations Command, and Gen. Dennis J. Reimer, commander, Forces Command.

Ellis and his staff were cited for "providing excellent support to soldiers."

Georgia recognizes Dexter Elementary

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

Dexter Elementary School is one of 31 institutions statewide chosen for the coveted Georgia School of Excellence title for 1994, the state superintendent of schools announced Dec. 7.

Programs in the school such as the greenhouse and the telecommunications projects emphasizing hands-on learning helped Dexter become the first post school to earn this award.

"All of us in the Fort Benning Schools are proud of Dexter School's recognition by the state of Georgia as a School of Excellence," said Dr. Rolla Baumgartner, superintendent of the Fort Benning Schools.

"The recognition confirms what we have known about the work being done by Dexter staff, parents and students; their joint efforts are providing exciting, quality programs that will bring rewards to Dexter children now and in their future years.

"Dexter School and the other six schools in the Fort Benning System each provide unique, quality programs for their students," he continued. "We are proud of the work that we do together as a system and of the unique attributes that make each school a strong learning environment for students," he said.

A group of Tennessee educators chose Dexter and other recipients through an evaluation of the school's organization, leadership, curriculum, school and community relations, program quality, test scores, staff development and institutional vitality.

The Georgia Department of Education will honor Dexter and the 30 other schools at a spring awards banquet.

Vicki Rogers, principal at Dexter, believes the school's focus on basic skills such as reading and writing contribute to Dexter's overall quality. She cited such programs as young authors' day and the telecommunications projects as enhancing thinking skills.

The school also offers tutoring programs in math and reading as well as an extracurricular fitness program.

The school has 24 teachers and approximately 315 students.

"We congratulate the winners and all the schools that participated in the competition this year," said Werner Rogers, state superintendent.

"Applying for this program is a rigorous process that involves a thorough evaluation of all aspects of each school's programs and requires the cooperation of the school leadership team, teachers, parents, students and community," he said. "Every school that goes through this evaluation can be proud of the accomplishment."

Engineers to be home for the holidays

USAIC Public Affairs Office

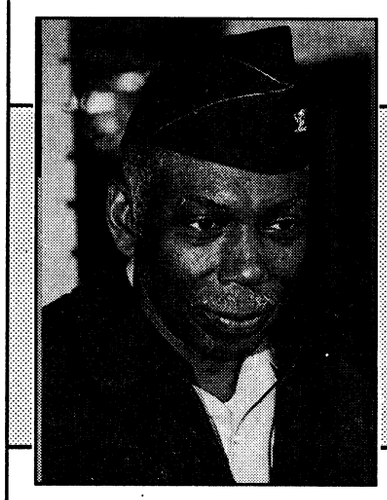
Nearly 500 members of the 43rd Engineer Battalion and the 13th Corps Support Battalion will be among two groups of soldiers returning from Somalia today and Sunday.

Forty-two soldiers from the 608th Ordnance Company and 58 soldiers from the 13th Corps Support Battalion will arrive in Atlanta today and be bused to Lawson Army Airfield, for a return ceremony at approximately 6:30 a.m.

Three hundred and ninety-five soldiers from the 43rd Engineer Battalion are scheduled to arrive in Atlanta Sunday and will arrive at Lawson Army Airfield for a welcome-home ceremony at approximately 9:30 a.m.

A small number of soldiers from these units are remaining in Somalia to process equipment. They are expected to return to Fort Benning by the first of the new year.

More than 1,000 Fort Benning soldiers have served in Somalia during the last six months. Some soldiers will remain in Somalia until March.

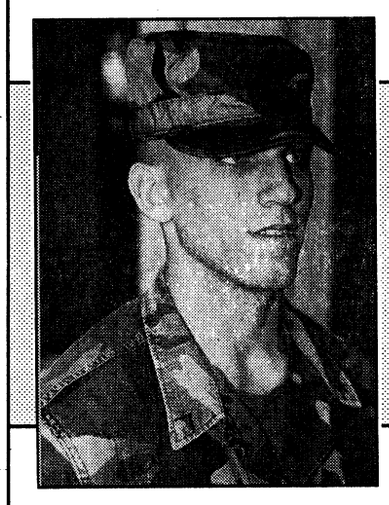


Fort Benning units that served in Somalia are the 43rd Engineer Battalion; 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment; 13th Corps Support Battalion; 533rd Transportation Company; 598th Maintenance Company; 608th Ordnance Company; a platoon from the 317th Engineer Battalion, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division; and the 926th Medical Detachment, 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital.

Other Benning units that served in Somalia are Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 36th Engineer Group; 63rd Engineer Company; elements of the 535th Engineer Detachment and the 498th and 690th Medical companies.

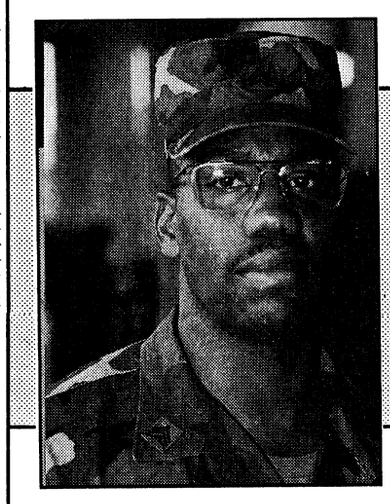
More soldiers are expected to return 7:30 a.m. Tuesday and 6:45 a.m. Wednesday.

VARIOUS VOICES

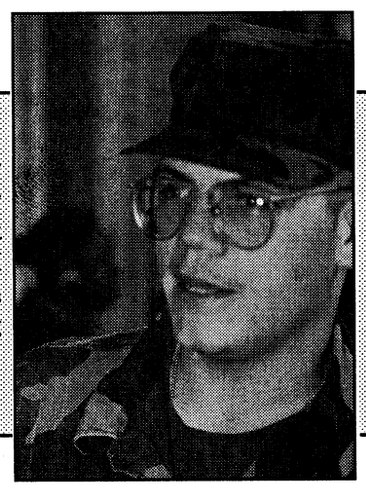


How would you handle a friend who has had too much to drink and wants to drive?

Col. Theodore Allen, U.S. Army Dental Activity — "I wouldn't let him drive. I'd call a taxi or I would take him where he needed to go."



Elaine King, Army and Air Force Exchange Service employee — "I wouldn't let my friends drive. I'd drive them wherever they needed to go."



Pvt. 2 Steven Knudsen, 75th Ranger Regiment — "I'd ask for his keys and do whatever it took to keep him from driving drunk."

Spc. Chris Simcoe, Company D, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment — "I'd be friendly and try to persuade him to let me drive."

Sgt. Zachary Rucker, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "The first thing I'd do is tell them they don't need to drive — you can ruin your military career and take valuable lives that way. I'd drive or call a cab."

Pvt. 1 Vernon Davis, Company C, 3rd Battalion, 32nd Infantry Regiment — "I wouldn't let him. It happened once to me before and I took his keys. You have to cherish friendship; you can't let something like that ruin it."

COMMENTARY

Lincoln once said, "You can fool some of the people all the time and all the people some of the time; but you can't fool all the people all the time."

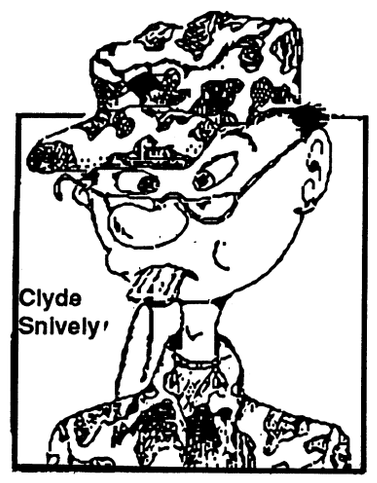
The Snively corollary to that is: "You can please some of the people some of the time and all the people none of the time."

For example, I was told to write gift articles to go along with the Various Voices column. So what do I get? Those I wish gifts for are mad because I did and those I omitted are mad because I didn't.

OK, for Long Blonde and Tall Blonde of this office, I wish I could afford to buy you trips aboard the next Russian space vehicle. Make those tickets one-way.

I don't know if anyone has noticed, but the Russians, to support their space program, are offering trips into space for people with enough bucks.

The Army and Air Force are doing the same. There are tourist packages that get you into the country, then depending on how much money you've got, give you rides on Russian tanks and flights in their aircraft.



A ride in a MIG 29 costs about $6,000 and the pilot lets you take over the contross. If you want to go with a buddy and engage in an air duel, the price goes up to about $45,000.

The Russians defend this practice by saying they need money to keep their war machine going and note that while Mr. Tourist is up in the aircraft tooling around, the pilots are getting in flight time they otherwise wouldn't get, thus keeping their skills sharp.

I once proposed this for our Army, noting all the neat things we do and how I was sure Billy Joe Columbus and Billy Bob Phenix City would probably pay to drive in our tanks and Bradleys, pay even more for helicopter rides and pay to fire some of our high-speed weapons, thus providing us extra bucks to operate our post.

Because doing this is illegal, immoral and unethical, my proposal got as far as the trash bin. But now that the Russians are doing it, maybe we need to rethink our ways.

I can tell you this. I do think we're being taken to the cleaners by the U.S. Treasury. And I don't have a clue who the U.S. Treasury is except they're probably the people who write a paycheck for me once a month.

For example, our hard-working guys and gals at the Defense Reutilization and Marketing Office get all this stuff in. It might be combat boots, mattresses or computers — just about anything.

They then turn around and sell it, usually through an auction. But, before they do that, they clean it up, handle it, store and care for it.

How much money from the sales do you think they get? Nada, nothing, zip, zilch, zero. That's how much. I guess they're just thankful someone is paying their salary to do this stuff. But if they got money back, they could improve their warehouses, hire more people to create even more business and thus generate even more funds.

But sorry, not legal.

Then there's Suzi Speed who does 36 mph past the golf course who thinks she isn't speeding because she never drives that way so since she didn't see the 25-mph sign she shouldn't get a ticket.

Or, consider Joe Drag who thinks because his foot's not on the gas pedal as he goes down a hill at 26 mph in a 15 mph zone that he too isn't speeding. But they are speeding and our alert Military Police nab them. Fine, 50 big ones.

I mean we pull in 3,000 bucks a month or so in traffic tickets, using the energies of our police force and court system to collect this money.

So how much stays on the post? See the answer to above question.

The same goes for money collected in reports of survey. A guy loses or breaks some equipment, and he's found culpable. He pays for it, but the money goes to the Department of Treasury. The local post is out the effort of collecting it, the piece of equipment that it still needs to replace and the soldier is out the money.

Doesn't seem fair to me. I think laws need to be changed. But in the meantime, keep your recyclables coming because that is money we do get to keep (so far).

Housing resident questions project

For the past four years, I have been a resident of the Upatoi Terrace Housing area. I believe Fort Benning to be the finest post my family and I have lived on in my husband's 13 years of service.

It is my understanding that some residents of Fort Benning recently completed a survey on how to improve the living conditions here. The results of the survey indicated that carports and fenced yards are essential to more harmonious living.

Many are aware that Custer and Upatoi Terrace housing areas are undergoing renovations. However, I doubt many, other than these housing area residents, are aware of the frustration caused by the repeated delays in the completion of the project and the seeming ineptitude of the workers.

Residents were notified in April of the upcoming renovations. It was July before I saw any construction in my neighborhood; and, as of Dec. 2, my yard remains unfenced and my carport unfinished.

There seems to be no logical order to the construction of the carports, and the area to be fenced varies from yard to yard.

The wait from the time my post holes were dug until the time they were cemented was so great (almost six weeks) that the holes for my yard, and those of many others, had to be dug over again because they had refilled with soil because of weather conditions.

Both times my post holes were dug, the cuttings from the bushes, which had to be trimmed to put up the posts, were left for me to clear away. When the poles were finally cemented, patches of spilled concrete were left in some of the yards, including mine.

Early on in the construction, residents were given bulletins with the name of the company and a phone number to use in the event of problems or questions.

I went to speak to the representatives of the Gaskins Company, Clarence Kinnaman and Steve Allen, to voice my dissatisfaction with the quality of work that is being provided.

Kinnaman, to his credit, listened patiently and explained the many problems he is experiencing. I was also informed at this time that 34 of the housing units were getting fences but no gates. I asked about the rationale behind this action and Kinnaman informed me tnat it was the decision of the Corps of Engineers.

I don't know about the rest of you, but I wouldn't want to have to either lift my lawn mower over a four-foot fence or drag it through my living room once a week in the summer. And how will we get bikes in and out of the yard?

Allen's reply to my questions was a simple, "We screwed up." No private individual or company would be satisfied with this answer or put up with inferior quality work. Why does the government?

I take pride in my neighborhood and enjoy living on post; but, my quality of life has been steadily declining with the ongoing "improvements."

Jill E. Guerin
Family member

Garrison commander's response:

The construction project ongoing in your neighborhood will improve the quality of housing units available to our soldiers and families of Fort Benning.

The contract for this work, being administered by the Savannah District, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, will improve 441 family housing units. The cost of this project is $6,499,668 with completion of all housing units scheduled for Jauuary 1995.

Some of the construction work is being done while the housing units are occupied. This is to maximize the availability of on-post housing to our soldiers and families.

However, when construction is done while housing units are occupied, some inconveniences may be experienced.

In this regard, the Corps of Engineers and the Directorate of Public Works strive to minimize any inconveniences or disruption to the housing occupant.

The Corps of Engineers project engineer and construction representative inspect the work site daily .

Also, monthly coordination meetings are conducted with the contractor with family housing area mayors usually present. Through these daily inspections and monthly coordination meetings, most complaints have been resolved, making these meetings most beneficial.

The notice Jill Guerin received in April was to inform the housing occupants of these areas of the impending project work.

In order to reduce the overall cost to the government for a project of this magnitude, it is impractical to have a contract that requires completion of all work on one housing unit before beginning work on a subsequent unit.

This results in the perception of a lack of orderly phasing of the work and illogical work sequences or delays.

As with any type of renovation work, there are generally unforeseen problems or differing site conditions. When these occur, the contractor has to reschedule the work plans and phases of work.

For this project, this has occurred, and asbestos in concealed places has had to be removed. Also, contract drawings inadvertently omitted 36 fence gates. This error was discovered in November and the contract modified to include gates in all fences.

The Corps of Engineers and the Directorate of Public Works strive to ensure the finest quality work possible on projects. Inspections are made during the performance of work by the contractor and government representatives to ensure conformance to the project plans and specifications.

Many times, work is disapproved and required to be redone at the contractor's expense to ensure the work accepted by the government is in conformance with the contract.

Moreover, after acceptance of the contractor's work by the government, the work carries a one-year warranty whereby corrections are made if the contractor's work fails after acceptance.

Your concern for the quality of life of soldiers and families living on Fort Benning is appreciated because, I believe as you do, Fort Benning is the finest installation in the Army.

Soldier wants news

Much too often I have sat down inside a full mess hall to feast and, unfortunately, had to endure a radio station picked by someone who has a taste unlike my own.

Whether my taste in music includes classical or rap, I believe one's form of entertainment should be kept to oneself and to off-duty time. For instance, in the barracks, music should be played low with the door closed.

I (think) news would be a happy medium and a source of progression in areas where a conglomeration of troops are and a diversity of tastes collide.

After all, news is essential for personal growth as well as for promotion within our institution.

It is my suggestion that the stations be tuned to 88.1, National Public Radio, for meal hours in chow halls.

POST BRIEFS

Bayonet announces holiday deadlines

Because of the Christmas three-day weekend, The Bayonet will be published Wednesday instead of Dec. 24. The next issue will be published Jan. 7; there will be no paper the week of Dec. 27 to 31.

The deadline for the Jan. 7 edition is noon Jan. 3. Articles, photos and film can be dropped off at the Bayonet office, Infantry Hall, Room 601. Our fax number is 682-0095; our PROFS identification is "Bayonet."

The Bayonet office will be closed Dec. 27 to 31 for the holidays.

For more information, call 545-2210.

CFC at $515,000, still accepting donations

Donations to the Combined Federal Campaign toppled the 86 percent mark recently, and officials say donations can still be turned in through the end of December. Completed donation forms can be brought to the Family Unit Network, Building 359, according to Kathy White, CFC coordinator.

Welcome Center changes hours

The Welcome Center, located in Soldiers' Plaza, Building 2607, will be open as follows for the Christmas holidays: Monday to Dec. 24, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Dec. 25, Christmas, closed; Dec. 26, noon. to p.m.; Dec. 27 to 31, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Jan. 1, New Year's Day, closed; Jan. 2, 1 p.m. to midnight.

Soldiers reporting to Fort Benning should go to Adjutant General Replacement Detachment, Building 2756B, when the Welcome Center is closed.

For more information, call 545-2510 or 545-4149.

Military hearings require appointment

Military hearings will be conducted by appointment only, effective immediately.

Because of the increase in requests for appeals, hearings will be conducted Mondays, Wednesday and Fridays from 9 a.m. to noon and Tuesdays and Thursdays from 8:30 a.m. to noon.

Soldiers requesting a hearing because of a hunting, fishing, traffic or shoplifting violations can contact Capt. Jeri Merkley at 545-5234.

Legal Assistance outlines services

The Legal Assistance Division provides a variety of services for soldiers, and appointments are necessary in many cases.

Estate planning, wills and probate assistance is provided by appointments on Mondays, Wednesdays and Thursdays. Call 545-3281 or 545-3282 for these matters.

All other legal problems, such as landlord, tenant, consumer and military administrative problems, are handled on Tuesdays and Fridays. Appointments are not necessary for these matters.

Clients will be assisted on a first-come, first-served basis, beginning at 8 a.m. on Tuesdays and Fridays.

Appointments will not be made by telephone for these type cases, officials said.

Late arrivals may not be seen if the limited number of counseling slots have already been assigned. Legal Assistance personnel urge clients to arrive early to increase the chance of obtaining a counseling slot.

Notary services and powers of attorney will continue to be handled on a walk-in basis from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday. No appointment is necessary.

For more information, call 545-3281 or 545-3282.

Processing center to close today

The Personnel Processing Center, Building 2622; the Transition Center, Building 2622; and the Main Post Identification Card Section, Building 2638, located in Soldiers' Plaza, will close today from 1 to 4 p.m. for a Christmas party.

For information, call 545-2010, 545-4694, 545-5424 or 545-6858.

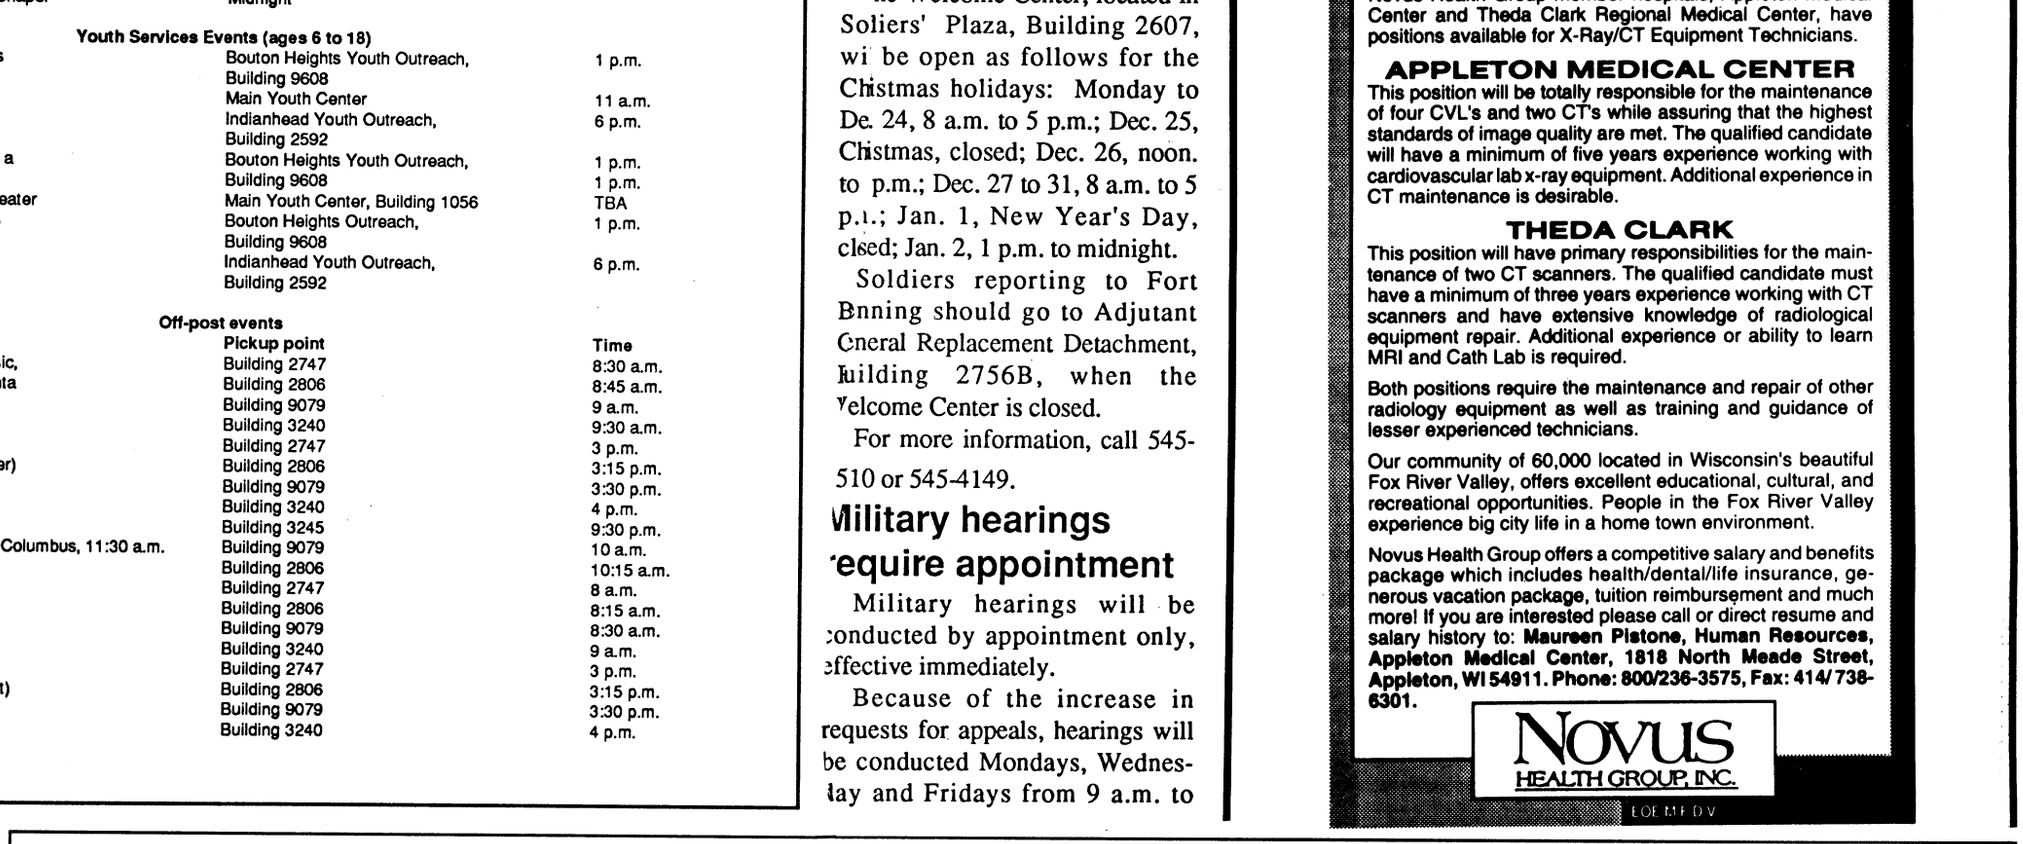
Retirement policies change

By Friede McDonald
Retirement Services Office

Several policy changes affecting voluntary retirement go into effect Jan. 1.

The commanding general becomes the approval authority for all voluntary nonwaiver officer, command sergeants major, and sergeants major retirement requests.

Other changes are:



Retirement submission time requirements for sergeants major have been aligned with those of command sergeants major. This means that voluntary, nonwaiver retirement applications for sergeants major must be submitted nine months prior to requested retirement date.

Retirement requests of sergeants major selectees, submitted within 30 days of selection, will be processed as voluntary, nonwaiver requests and will be approved at Fort Benning.

Retirement requests submitted later than 30 days after selection will be processed as waiver requests and forwarded to the U.S. Total Army Personnel Command.

Officers will submit their requests for retirement using memorandum sample of Army Regulation 635-100, Figure 4-1. A copy of the official military personnel file (microfiche) is also required to verify computation of service.

For more information, call Patricia Harris or Martha Holloway at the Retirement Services Office at 545-3019 or 545-2541.

CB&T'S EQUITY LINE HAS NO CLOSING COSTS TO HANG YOU OUT TO DRY.

And that's no line.

If you apply now for CB&T's SpeciaLine®, our equity line of credit, you'll pay no closing costs and you could qualify for a credit line from $10,000 up!

Better yet, the interest is, in all likelihood, tax deductible. Of course, you'll have to check with your tax advisor to be sure, but no closing costs and a possible tax break? You can't beat it. Plus, you can use the money for whatever you need. New car. College expenses. Name it. And you'll have personalized checks that work just like your regular checks. It just makes sense, if you're going to borrow anyway, why not do it where it costs you less?

Just think. Before you know it you could be paying for your daughter's braces, buying a jet ski, adding on to your house...

You could even buy an electric clothes dryer.

Get complete details at any CB&T office or call for SpeciaLine information at 649-2500. But do it now. This no closing costs offer ends December 31, 1993. And you need to pin this one down before your time runs out.

DENTAC

Activity ready to demonstrate commitment

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

For the second year in a row, Fort Benning has been named a first-place winner in the Training and Doctrine Command Communities of Excellence Competition.

When the Army-level COE team visits in April, the U.S. Army Dental Activity at Fort Benning will be one of many post organizations ready to demonstrate its commitment to excellence.

The post DENTAC has been recognized by Health Services Command for its total quality improvement, budget management and credentials programs, said Paula Dansereau, the activity's COE representative.

Improvements are a result of total commitment by DENTAC personnel in making Fort Benning a community of excellence, she said.

"Our new commander, Col. Richard A. Nurnberg, is 100 percent behind the COE program," she said. "DENTAC personnel are also taking pride in what they do and are bringing about real improvements in spite of personnel and budget shortages."

Dansereau said some of the organization's most successful improvements have been done through self-help.

To improve the atmosphere of the Salomon Dental Clinic on Sand Hill, for example, the waiting room was decorated with historic memorabilia related to post ranges.

"Because of the renovation, there is a completely different atmosphere in the waiting area that contributes to making a visit to the dentist a more pleasant experience," Dansereau said.

Among the other accomplishments DENTAC personnel will show the ACOE team members:

• Patient satisfaction that is a result of Project Concern, a program in which dentists follow up on patients who have undergone complicated dental procedures. Patients are contacted at home by their doctor to check on their recovery and to have their questions answered.

• The contribution to unit readiness as a result of a 100 percent audit of every dental record on post in April that resulted in eliminating any cases of nondeployability because of incomplete dental data.

• The elimination of 768 pounds of disposable waste per year as a result of an employee's suggestion to use cloth barrier garments instead of disposable gowns.

• The education of the Fort Benning community through children's dental health fairs, Armed Forces Day events, retiree open houses, Halloween programs, Great American Smokeout activities and medical fairs. A Delta Dependents Dental Plan question and answer video is being produced to show at the inprocessing center. Also, as new recruits rotate through the post, they view video programs demonstrating the dangers of smokeless tobacco and oral cancer detection and prevention.

Dansereau said DENTAC personnel are also proud of the programs developed by the community health dental hygienist, Cathy Hatfield.

"She is energetic, enthusiastic, exciting and creative," Dansereau said. "She is responsible for many creative programs targeting family members and for efforts to educate the community about the Delta Dental Plan."

Dansereau said the quest for excellence is a daily concern in DENTAC.

"We encourage individuals to create and then reward them," she said. "This approach has been very successful because it gets everyone involved and gives them a feeling of accomplishment."

ACAP CALENDAR

Army Career and Alumni Program

The following is the Army Career and Alumni Program Job Assistance Center calendar of events:

Tuesdays: noon to 1 p.m., Focus Hour, Interview Techniques and Dress for Success.

Wednesdays: 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Job Assistance Workshop; 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Education Opportunity Center.

Thursdays: 1 to 3 p.m., Mock Interview Practice Session

Fridays: Employers Day

Job assistance workshop

Time: Wednesdays, 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Location: Infantry Hall, Building 4

The workshop is conducted every Wednesday at Infantry Hall. Topics discussed include objective setting, resume preparation, expanding opportunities, networking, interviewing, salary negotiating, stress management and financial planning.

Education Opportunity Center

Time: Wednesdays, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

Participants will receive information from all over the country about college and university admissions requirements and proficiency exams.

Mock Interview Practice

Time: Thursdays, 1 to 3 p.m.

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

Participants will learn how to interview effectively by rehearsing and practicing interview techniques with an experienced JAC counselor. The mock interview will be videotaped to provide the client with a visual learning tool.

Employers' Day

Time: Varies

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

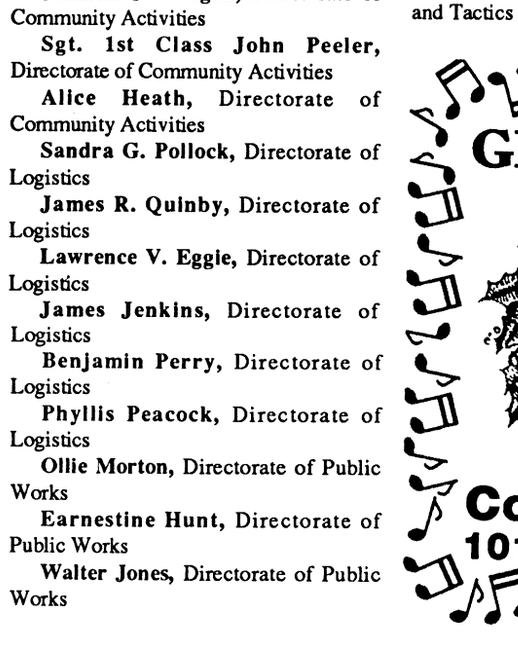
Employer day is scheduled each Friday at the Job Assistance Center. The program is designed to allow employers to recruit qualified candidates for their companies.

Employers normally will give presentations on their organizations and set up interviews with qualified candidates.

A variety of manufacturing and service companies take advantage of this opportunity. Public sector organizations are also represented.

Focus Hour

Time: Tuesdays, noon to 1 p.m.



Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

Weekly video program that provides additional information on the key areas in the job search process — networking, dressing for success, interview process and negotiating techniques.

Keep holidays happy — keep safety first

Overtired drivers should hit the brakes

By Kenneth J. Pfleger
Army Safety Center

It's 5:10 p.m. on Friday. The final formation of the week is over, and the weekend is here.

Joe quickly changes his uniform for "civvies" and swaps his highly disciplined military demeanor for attitude.

He jumps into his car for the drive home — 750 miles away. No problem. And it wasn't ... until he fell asleep behind the wheel 600 miles later at 70 mph.

Time and time again, a trip home or a weekend vacation ends in tragedy. Fatigue is a major cause of accidents, and it is deadly. But it can be prevented. In fact, it is easier to prevent than to cure.

Research shows a marked decrease in mental alertness after two hours, even for fully rested drivers.

Army Regulation 385-55 recommends a 10-minute break after every two hours of driving.

For fatigue caused by lack of rest, though, the only cure is sleep. The outdated and dangerous methods of drinking coffee, singing and opening the car windows do not work; they only promote further high risk behavior.

The bottom line is the only recommended control for fatigue is to stop.

When tired drivers become sleepy behind the wheel of a motor vehicle, they become a threat not only to themselves but to everyone around them. For example:

• The driver of a military truck died when he was thrown from the vehicle as it rolled down an embankment after he fell asleep while driving.

• Four soldiers on a trash detail were injured when the pickup they were riding in was hit from behind. The driver of the car following them fell asleep at the wheel.

• Three soldiers changing a flat tire on the side of the road were seriously injured when they were hit by a car whose driver had fallen asleep.

• A civilian was killed when the car in which he was riding was hit by a military vehicle after it crossed the center line and collided head-on with the car. The driver of the military vehicle had fallen asleep.

Winter driving

❄ Steer steady and slow on ice or snow. Do not make abrupt changes in direction. Anticipate lane changes and turns and make them gradually.

❄ If your car skids, do not brake. Take your foot off the accelerator and turn your car in the direction you want the front wheels to go.

❄ Adjust speed for bridges and overpasses, which freeze before other road surfaces because of the air flow both over and underneath them.

❄ Allow plenty of following distance on ice and snow. Keep your speed slow, and slow down well in advance of intersections in case they are slick.

❄ Keep headlights clean. A film of dirt and grime can coat headlights and cause problems seeing at night.

❄ Keep air circulating inside the car; have the exhaust system checked for leaks periodically. An undetected carbon monoxide leak can be deadly in a closed car.

❄ Carry emergency tools in your trunk, like shovels, chains, snow scraper, brush, sand, salt, blankets and a flashlight.

Celebrate Christmas with care

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Here are some tips to help make your holidays safe ones:

✯ If you use an evergreen tree, select a fresh one. Cut two inches off the bottom of the trunk and place it in a stable tree holder with water.

✯ If buying an artificial tree, choose one that has been tested for safety by a recognized testing lab.

✯ Check labels on lights to be used outdoors to make sure they are suitable for outdoor use.

✯ Never use electric lights on a metallic tree. Instead, use colored spotlights above or beside the tree to illuminate it.

✯ If you have infants or toddlers, avoid placing colorful bulbs or ornaments within their reach. Decorated, edible cookies make safer ornaments at child level. It is best not to leave small children unattended near the tree.

✯ Exercise extreme caution when using lighted candles.

Toy safety tips

🔔 Purchase play things that are sturdy enough to withstand rough treatment.

🔔 Be sure toys have no sharp or pointed edges or corners.

🔔 Look carefully to ensure toys have no wires, buttons or tacks that could come off and be swallowed by small children.

🔔 Make certain movable parts will not endanger children's fingers, eyes or feet.

🔔 Check all plug-in electrical toys for Underwriters Laboratories' approval.

🔔 Get some assurance that paint is nontoxic and plastics are nonflammable, especially with imported toys.

Don't allow alcohol myths to fool you

Infantry Branch Safety Office

The following are some myths and facts about alcohol.

Myth: Coffee, fresh air or a cold shower will help a person become sober.

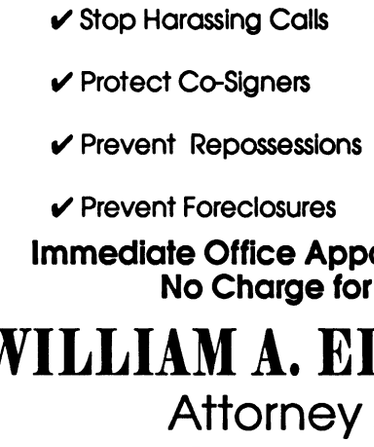
Fact: None of these remedies will decrease the effect of alcohol. The body must be allowed time (one hour per average drink) to eliminate the alcohol.

Myth: Like other food and drink, alcohol must be digested.

Fact: Alcohol is absorbed directly into the blood stream where it is carried to all parts of the body. Twenty percent of the alcohol consumed goes immediately into the bloodstream. Since the brain has a higher water content and a rich blood supply, it is quickly affected by alcohol.

Myth: You cannot tell a driver is drunk unless he or she is weaving or swerving.

Fact: These clues can help you spot the driver who is under the influence of alcohol: unusually wide turns, drifting, inconsistent signals, straddling the center line and excessive or very slow speed. Watch out for drivers who are following too closely, responding slowly to traffic signals or accelerating or slowing down rapidly.



Four sobering facts about alcohol

1. An alcohol-related fatality occurs every 22 minutes.
2. Between 7 p.m. and 3 a.m. on weekends in some parts of the country, 10 percent of all drivers are drunk.
3. Between midnight and 4 a.m. on any night of the week, about 80 percent of fatally injured drivers are drunk.
4. Drinking drivers involved in fatal crashes used safety belts at a substantially lower rate than sober drivers.

Basketballs begin to bounce on Benning

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

Basketball has taken up residence on the hard courts of Fort Benning. For the next two months, round ball will reign supreme.

Here is some action from games played Dec. 9 and 10 and Monday from Harmony Church Fitness Center and Santiago Fitness Center.

Harmony Church Field House Dec. 9

The Headhunters of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, shot down the Tank Killers of Company B, 2nd Bn., 29th Inf. Regt., 54-45.

Forward Darrell Jordan scored 17 of his game high 25 points in the second half to lead the Headhunters to the win. Teammate Kenyatta Mack tallied 14 points to give the Headhunters a one-two scoring punch inside and out.

The Tank Killers were led by Issac Alexis who hit for 12 second-half points. Phillip Anthony added eight points in the losing effort for the Tank Killers.

In the second game of the evening, the Barbarians of Co. E, 2nd Bn., 29th Inf. Regt., held off a furious charge by the Alpha Players of Co. A, 2nd Bn., 29th Inf. Regt., 57-51.

Barbarian teammates Larry Terry and Douglas Hall each ripped the nets for 15 points, while Craig Amnott added nine points from the center position. Hall picked up the offense for the Barbarians in the second half, hitting four straight three-point shots to keep the Alpha Players at bay.

The Alpha Players kept up a good running attack in the second half, cutting into Barbarian leads of eight and six points late in the half. Robert Horn pumped in 14 points to lead the Players, while Dempson Allen turned in 12 points. Everett Evans tossed in 11.

Santiago Fitness Center Dec. 10

The Red Dawgs of Service Battery, 4th Bn., 41st Field Artillery Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, pounded the Charlie Dawgs of Battery C, 4th Bn., 41st FA Regt., 3rd Bde., 24th Inf. Div., in a dog fight 75-65.

Curtis Taylor scored 22 points, 16 in the second half to lead all scorers for the Red Dawgs. Wilber Cooper drained the nets for 16 points, and Horatio McMillian chipped in 11 for the Red Dawg offense.

On the flip side, Kevin Tiller threw in 19 points, 16 in the first half to keep the Charlie Dawgs close. Teammates Walter Battle scored 16, and Eddie Stewart added 14 points.

The Red Dawgs led 38-34 at the half then slowly pulled away from their counterparts of Battery C, opening up their biggest lead of 10 points late in the game.

In game two of the evening, the Bulls of Battery B, 4th Bn., 41st FA Regt., 3rd Bde., 24th Inf. Div., stampeded the Gigolos of Battery A, 4th Bn., 41st FA Regt., 3rd Bde., 24th Inf. Div., 71-43.

Charles Banning of the Bulls led all scorers with 21 points. Lonnie Mathis added 14, and teammate Baron Ransome chipped in 11 in the 28-point blowout.

The Gigolos were led by Ramon Walker's 15 points and Tony Amerson's 12.

In the final game of the night, the Headhunters of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Bn., 69th Armor Regiment, 3rd Bde., 24th Inf. Div., turned their sights on their brothers of Co. A, 2nd Bn., 69th Armor Regt., 3rd Bde., 24th Inf. Div., (Attitude) and put an attitude adjustment on them, 64-57.

The Headhunters overcame a 34-29 halftime deficit with 14 points by Charles Gregory, 11 points by Thaddeus Turner and 10 points from James Fulks.

Jeffrey Dice ripped the nets for 28 points for the Attitude offense, 17 coming in the first half. In the second half, Dice was held to only 11 points by the Headhunter defense, while teammate Dwayne Darling threw down 14 points in the losing effort.

Santiago Fitness Center Monday night

The Eagles of Company E, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Bde., 24th Inf. Div., swooped down on the Bulldogs of HHC, 1st Bn., 18th Inf. Regt., 24th Inf. Div., 49-40. Brian Waller ripped the nets for 21 points for the Eagles, while James Manning tipped in 13 points and Daniel Brown added 7.

The Bulldogs were led by Donald Mills' 13 points. Joseph Baker added 10, and Anthony Braddy chipped in with eight points.

The Eagles were up by one at the half 23-22. Then they slowly increased their lead to as many as 10 points late in the second half. The Bulldogs cut the lead down to five points, only to have the Eagles make a run and push the lead back up to 10.

In game two of the night, the Warhawks of Co. B, 1st Bn., 18th Inf. Regt., 24th Inf. Div., scalped the Warriors of Co. D, 1st Bn., 18th Inf. Regt., 24th Inf. Div., 53-46. Drico Fuller led the Warhawks with 15 points, and three teammates Allen Fobbs, Kevin Hardin and Warren Williams, each tallied 10 points.

Anthony Battle scored 12 points for the Warriors, while Alvin Harris added eight. Danyell Humphrey tipped in seven points. Steve Robinson and Louis Sheppard each had six points for the Warriors.

Hunters, anglers beware of the 'MURPH MAN'

By Kevin L. McIver
USAIC Public Affairs Office

It never ceases to amaze me how things can go wrong when you're out in the woods hunting or fishing. No matter how well prepared you are, Murphy's Law is in effect.

Murphy's Law is that old wise tale that says anything that can go wrong will go wrong. Many old timers say that Murphy is real and that they have actually seen him. I believe he accompanies me every time I go hunting or fishing.

Take for instance last weekend. I packed up my hunting gear Friday night and laid out my clothes so all I had to do was jump in them. I backed the truck into the driveway so I could get out faster. I was so prepared that things just had to go right.

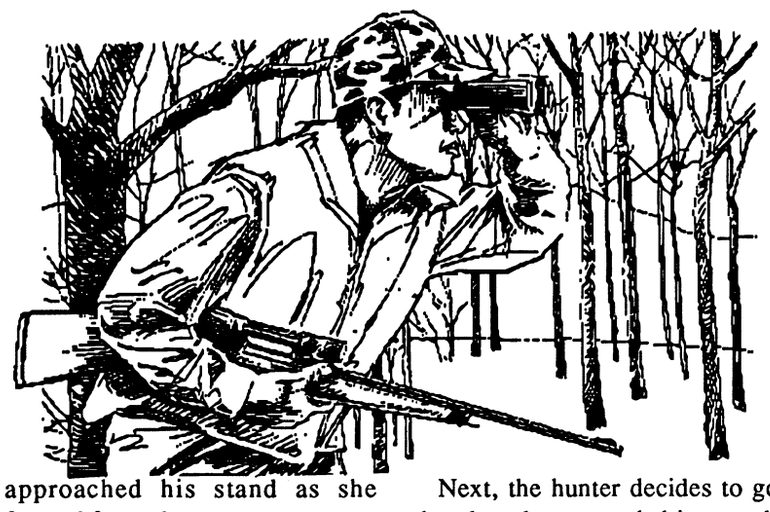
Come Saturday morning, I got up at 4, checked in with Hunter Control, then buzzed out of the house. After linking up with my hunting partner over in Alabama, we headed down south of Fryar Drop Zone.

After dropping him off, I told him I was going to hunt on down the trail a ways, and we both agreed to meet back up at noon. I didn't get 20 yards down the logging trail when my truck bottomed out in a wash out.

Now I had walked this logging trail two weekends ago, but since then, somebody had moved the San Andreas Fault to my hunting area. The crevice was so deep it looked like my truck had been swallowed by the earth.

After several unsuccessful attempts to budge my vehicle, now stuck in sand and mud, we gave up and decided to hunt anyway. We would worry about it later.

It was still dark, but I swear I saw "Old Murph" laughing at me behind some nearby bushes. Needless to say, the remainder of the day proved just as good as the morning.



Here's another one to chalk up for Murphy. While hunting a scrape line north of Buena Vista Road recently, I saw a big bruiser sporting a coat rack for headgear. I continued to hunt the area, but I hadn't seen the big buck since the first encounter.

One afternoon, I was fortunate to get into the woods early (it was a workday). At about 5 p.m., I saw him moving in some thick stuff along the edge of a pine plantation.

Raising my rifle, I waited for a clear shot, then launched a 150-grain, soft point, 7mm Remington Magnum at him. Visions of me holding that rack on the front of Buck Hunters magazine filled my head.

About halfway between us, a big oak limb exploded into tiny fragments, and "Old Buck" trotted unscathed into the undergrowth. My only chance for a big wall hanger disappeared, and all I got was a sore shoulder. Murphy was definitely with me that time.

It seems that I'm not the only one out there affected by Murphy's Law. Recently, I heard a story about a kid bow hunting up in Wisconsin. It seems that during his first hunt, a female black bear approached his stand as she foraged for grub.

Shortly thereafter, two black bear cubs emerged from some bushes and started climbing his tree. When one reached his stand, the kid kicked it, sending it falling to the ground.

Next (imagine this), the mother bolted to his tree, climbed up and pulled him by his leg out of the stand. By the time he hit the ground, the enraged mother had climbed back down.

Fortunately, after a 100-yard chase, the bear gave up the pursuit. I guess she had proved her point: Don't mess around with the young uns. Yeah, the 16-year-old hunter was definitely introduced to Murphy that day.

Here's another one for you. A guy was hunting up in north Georgia, but had forgotten to relieve himself before getting in the stand. A couple of hours later, the thermos of coffee he had drank en route to the hunting area forced him to climb out of his stand.

Returning to his truck, he performed the necessary task and started back. When he got a football field away, he saw a big buck grazing on acorns right beneath his stand. The deer immediately spotted him and ran into the woods.

Next, the hunter decides to go ahead and approach his stand. About halfway there, a buck jumps out of the brush right beside him, nearly running him over.

When the guy finally reaches his stand, he ties his rifle to a rope (to pull it up with) and starts to climb. About halfway up, he looks back toward his truck and sees another deer standing by his vehicle. Old Murphy was pretty bold that day.

Now, don't think this stuff just happens to hunters. A few years back, a couple of guys were fishing Black River in southern Missouri.

While fishing next to some cliffs, they heard a rustling above them, followed by something falling from a tree overhanging the river.

After a "thud" in the bottom of the boat, a big six-foot rattlesnake raised its ugly head, and both men instantly became Olympic swimmers. I think "the Murph" pushed that diamondback off that limb.

It doesn't matter how well prepared you are, how perfect the conditions, how many times you've reconnoitered a route, something will go wrong. And when it does, all you can do is walk away with a smile. Good luck, see you in the woods and watch out for the "Murph Man."

Rock Steady wins its first

By Shelby Carr
Infantry Training Brigade

Rock Steady, the basketball team from the 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, won its first game Tuesday by defeating 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment's Patriots 62-44.

The Rock Steady defense started strong taking them to an early 6-0 lead with 11 minutes and 57 seconds left in the first half. Fighting back and taking the lead with a three-point shot by Alan Tyler, the Patriots began to find holes in the Rock Steady defense until two minutes left in the first half.

The Rock Steady defense, led by Ervin White, shut down the Patriots for the final two minutes of the half, using their fast-break offense to take a 26-21 lead at half time.

Despite four three-point baskets in the second half, the Patriots were unable to close the gap. Rock Steady players hit 50 percent of their freethrows after the Patriots got into foul trouble, taking a 17-point lead with five minutes left to go in the second half.

White led the Rock Steady defense with seven steals, and Tony Harris had nine rebounds and 17 points.

Wayne Cooks led the Patriots with 16 points and two three-point baskets. Tyler was next with 15 points, including three three-point shots. Cassandra Tolbert, who had one three-point shot and five points, rounds out the Patriots' top three scorers. Michael Sampson led the Patriots with 11 rebounds.

"We are improving and will come back," Tyler said. "In January, you will see a different team."

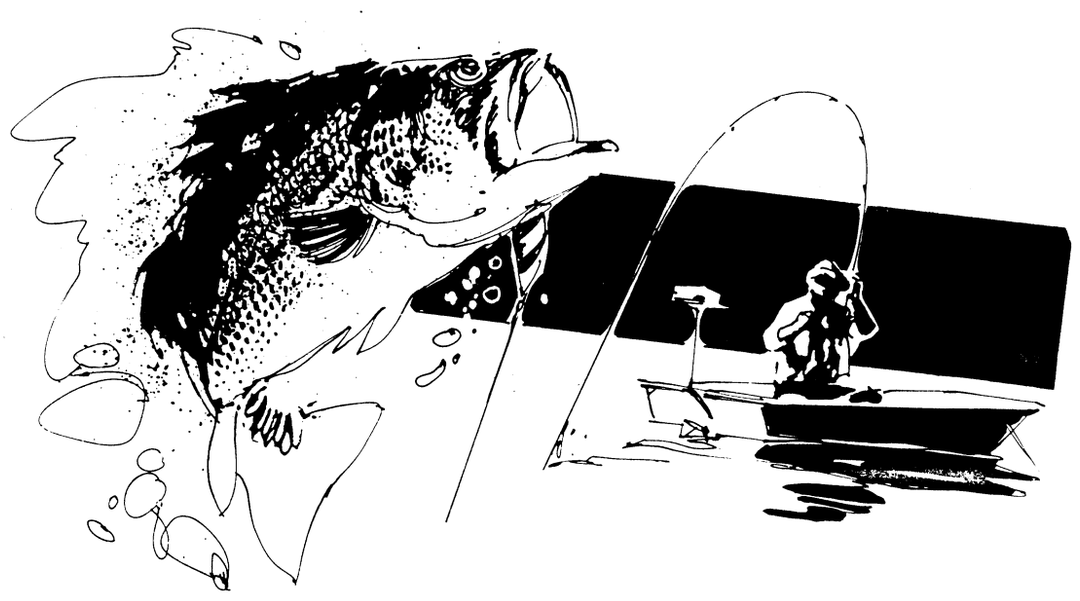
Defense and overall effort allowed the 1st Bn., 19th Inf., to end the game with an 18-point lead. The team had 12 steals and 31 rebounds.

In other games, Headquarters and Service Company defeated 1st Bn., 38th Inf. Regt., 81-47; and 2nd Bn., 54th Inf. Regt., defeated 1st Bn., 50th Inf. Regt., in overtime 73-71.

It's all in the retrieve ratio

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

In recent years, fishing reel manufacturers have introduced numerous new reel designs, some of which represent the first major changes to reels in decades. The most notable change has been in retrieve ratios.



Now, instead of all reels basically having the same gear ratio to retrieve lures the same way, some reels have higher ratios to retrieve lures faster, and others have lower ratios that take up less line with each turn of the reel handle and thus retrieve lures slower.

Ron Shuffield, a professional bass tournament angler, disagrees with some of the other pros who use the faster retrieve reels with gear ratios of 6.3:1 or even 7:1 for worm and jig fishing.

"My style of fishing isn't so much making more casts, but rather, trying to make each cast as productive as possible," he said.

Bass more aggressive when weather Cloudy

Outboard Marine Corporation

Bright, sunny days may be great for suntanning, but cloudy, overcast days are better for fishing.

"Cloud cover seems to make bass much more aggressive," Ron Shuffield of the Johnson Outboards Pro Staff said. "The bass move around a lot more and aren't nearly as spooky.

"In short, cloud cover makes them easier to catch."

When the sun is bright, Shuffield said, bass stay much tighter to cover and generally hold a little deeper on that cover, making lure presentation critical.

With cloud cover, the fish often suspend above the cover and readily come to the surface to hit lures. Other bass may be roaming and actually chase lures.

"That's why spinnerbaits and big, noisy topwater lures are such effective lures on cloudy days," Shuffield said. "These are lures that produce a lot of noise and commotion, and bass respond actively.

"On bright, sunny days, the bass do not respond nearly as well so you have to finesse them with plastic worms and jigs, slowing down your retrieve and usually making several casts to the same target.

"When bass are aggressive, you can fish aggressively, using fast retrieves and simply trying to cover as much water as possible. Because some of the bass are moving, you actually have a much better chance for a strike."

"You can even see how bright light affects bass behavior in an aquarium," Shuffield said. "In a large tank where the bass can swim freely in and out of cover, the fish will always be more active when the lights are turned off.

"When you turn the lights on, however, you can watch the fish swim toward the cover and stay there.

"Once you've actually seen this, it's easy to visualize it happening out on the lake.

Boxing galore

Post to host clinic

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

For boxing enthusiasts, Jan. 13, 14 and 15 will be a boxer's paradise when Fort Benning hosts an officials' clinic, boxing matches and a youth boxing clinic on post.

A boxing officials' clinic at the Kelley Hill Fitness Center will kick off the weekend activities. The clinic will be conducted by USA Boxing instructor Al Robinson of Fort Gordon, Ga. Anyone wishing to attend this clinic will be allowed to officiate during the military bouts Jan. 14.

The Physical Activities Branch will host boxing at Kelley Hill Fitness Center Jan. 14 with weigh-ins beginning at 4 p.m.

Sixteen bouts are set to go with the first eight bouts in the novice class (10 matches or less). The last eight bouts of the evening will be novice and open class.

Jan. 15, a youth boxing clinic at Kelley Hill Fitness Center will get the day started at 9:30 a.m.

The clinic will be conducted by Robinson with the assistance of former Olympic Gold Medalist Eddie Crook, 1992 Olympic boxing coach Joe Byrd and former World Boxing Organization light-heavyweight champion and No.1 heavyweight contender Michael Moorer .

World Boxing Council middleweight champion Gerald "G-Man" McClellen sporting a record of 28 wins, two losses, no draws and 25 knockouts will also be in attendance.

Four junior Olympic matches will follow the clinic. Each bout will be three rounds lasting one minute.

Saturday evening boxing will get under way with weigh-ins at 4:30 pm. and the first bell sounding at 7:20 with the first of two junior Olympic bouts. Bouts three through 14 will be novice class, with the open class to rounding out the night.

SPORTS SHORTS

Cookie run — The 14th annual Cookie Run will be Jan. 29 at Weracoba Park and Lakebottom in Columbus.

Sponsored by the Concharty Council of Girls Scouts Inc., the run is a family-oriented event to encourage physical fitness among youth and to provide a challenging winter activity for the community.

Units that field 20 or more runners will receive a discount price of $6 per person if the unit preregisters by Jan. 25.

All unit members who register will receive a T-shirt. Units that register by Jan. 16 will have their T-shirts delivered to the unit before the run.

For more information or to register, call 327-2646.

Racquetball — A racquetball tournament will be conducted at the Briant Wells Field House Jan. 21 through 23. Games will begin Friday at 6 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday at 9 a.m.

The event is open to active duty military members, Department of Defense civilians, retirees and family members 18 years of age or older.

Awards will be provided to the top two finishers in each division with an open division for male and female. Entry deadline is Jan. 14.

For more information, contact Lula Mitchenor at 545-4388.

Boxing clinic — A two-hour boxing clinic will be Jan. 15 from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. at the Kelley Hill Gym. The clinic, sponsored by Youth Services and Physical Activities Branch, is for family members of retired and active duty military members 8 to 18 years old.

Olympic and professional coaches as well as award-winning boxers will be present at the clinic.

Parents must preregister their children before the class. Registration will be Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at Youth Services, Building 1056.

Christmas tree lighting

Traditional ceremony celebrates holiday

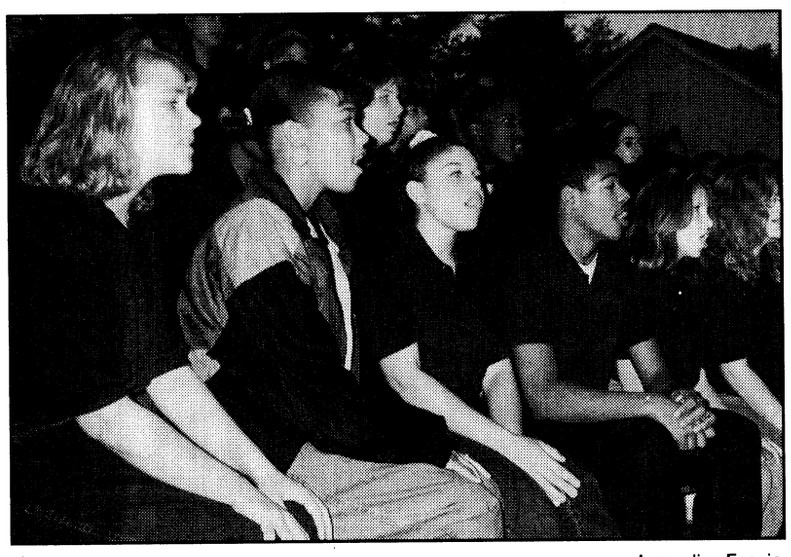
Menorah added to symbolize celebration of Hanukkah

By Jacqueline Feagin
USAIC Chaplains' Office

More than 500 people attended the menorah and Christmas tree lighting ceremony Dec. 9 at the Field of the Four Chaplains on Main Post.

The ceremony was hosted by Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, post commanding general, and was arranged by the Unit Ministry Team.

The tree lighting is an Army tradition that reminds Christians of Christ, according to Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Ford G'Segner.



In recent years, the Army has recognized and valued other traditions, and the menorah was added to symbolize the celebration of Hanukkah for Jews, he said.

The Infantry Band and Chorus presented a concert of Christmas music and sing-along. Marti Maas, president of Protestant Women of the Chapel, presented the invocation. Faith Middle School Chorus sang several carols.

Chaplain (Capt.) Arthur Rutberg gave the blessing while two lights were lighted on the menorah to symbolize the second day of Hanukkah. The serving candle to light the other candles on the following days of Hanukkah was also lighted.

White, with several special assistants, lighted the Christmas tree. Retired Col. Robert Nett, a Medal of Honor recipient, gave the benediction. The Infantry Band director led the audience in "Santa Claus is Coming to Town."

At the conclusion of the ceremony, Santa arrived on a fire engine. He was mobbed by hundreds as he proceeded to the field. He presented White with a huge candy cane and the children with candy and gifts.

Rainbows program helps with transitions

By Jacqueline M. Feagin
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Children and adults who are dealing with a painful family transition will have more help available to them through a program to be offered by the Family Life Center.

The program, called "Rainbows," is scheduled to begin in February. It will offer training and help to establish peer support groups for children and adults grieving a death, divorce or other painful transition in the family.

"This is not counseling," said Chaplain (Maj.) Robert Thompson, the Family Life chaplain. "It is helping children through the normal grief process of death, divorce or deployment."

Children from single-parent homes are more likely to get involved with drugs, suicide, pregnancies or crime, according to the nonprofit international organization (also called Rainbows) that offers the program.

Through peer support groups and an age-directed curriculum, Rainbows is intended to help children and adults build a stronger sense of self-esteem.

The program works to direct the participants toward a healthy resolution of the changes that have taken place in their lives.

Through peer support groups and an age-directed curriculum, Rainbows is intended to help children and adults build a stronger sense of self-esteem

This program will be offered to children in prekindergarten through 12th grade.

The program encourages confidentiality within the groups. Groups will meet for seven weeks in the winter and seven weeks in the fall.

Family members who are interested in this program can contact Thompson at 545-1760 or 545-5301.

USAIS names top instructors

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

The U.S. Army Infantry School named its instructors of the year in an awards ceremony Monday.

Capt. Stephen G. Yackley, Sgt. 1st Class Larry O. Fortune Jr. and Staff Sgt. Milton K. LaValley were selected as the officer, senior enlisted and junior enlisted instructors of the year.

Deputy Commanding General Brig. Gen. Jack P. Nix Jr. presented each winner with an Army Commendation Medal, a certificate of achievement and a memorandum of commendation.

"Teaching is the essence of leadership," Nix said. "What these men do here for us and for the hundreds of soldiers who come before them every year is absolutely critical."

The soldiers also received awards from retired Lt. Col. George M. Osborne, past president of the Chattahoochee Valley Chapter of The Retired Officers Association, retired Col. Jack Harron of the Association of the United States Army, and Command Sgt. Maj. Eddie L. Roberts of the Noncommissioned Officers Association.

Nix Jr., Staff Sgt. Milton K. LaValley and retired Col. Jack Harron of the Association of the United States Army stand together at the ceremony recognizing this year's top instructors.

Capt. Stephen G. Yackley

Yackley, who made the promotion list for major a week ago, is assigned to the Combined Arms and Tactics Directorate of the U.S. Army Infantry School where he teaches offensive tactics and air assault operations from the company through brigade level to students in the Infantry Officer Basic and Advanced courses.

"I like it because I work with a small group (about 16 captains), and I take them from week one through 20."

There are plenty of opportunities to learn from his students, he said, because there is a lot of interaction and participation. Different people have different strengths, he said, and there is not always a right and wrong answer.

"I like soldiers, and I like to be with people. If I can't be with a troop unit, as a captain, this is the best place to be. I have an opportunity to influence the captains who are going out to command a company, and I think, as an officer, that's probably the most important job."

Staff Sgt. Milton K. LaValley

LaValley is assigned to the 6th Ranger Training Battalion at Camp James E. Rudder, Fla., where he teaches a reptile familiarization course and small unit combat patrolling in the swamps to ranger students.

His job also includes caring for the camp's collection of poisonous and nonpoisonous snakes and other reptiles, and he has done a lot of individual research to learn about them.

"I like it because it's a unique subject to teach," he said. "It's not redundant, so you are always learning something new. Also, it's not a very well-understood subject, so I can alleviate a lot of myths about reptiles."

Sgt. 1st Class Larry O. Fortune Jr.

Fortune is assigned to Company C, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, where he teaches maintenance management to students in IOAC, IOBC, advanced noncommissioned officer course and several others.

He teaches everything from basic preventive maintenance checks on a Bradley Fighting Vehicle to the intricacies of maintenance paperwork.

"I like teaching," he said. "I like knowing when I'm done that (my students) understand everything I have taught them. If I can send them out prepared, it makes the Army better.

The best part about teaching, he said, "is having people who have left here come back and tell me they have learned something (from me) that helped them out."

French infantry officer finds brotherhood at Fort Benning

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Soldiers are promoted every day on Fort Benning, but the ceremony in Infantry Hall Dec. 2 was a rarity because the officer promoted was not a member of the U.S. Army.

Col. Laurent J. G. Buffeteau, Fort Benning's French liaison officer, acquired his new rank Dec. 2, when post Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White and Buffeteau's wife, Annie, slid French colonel insignia onto his shoulder epaulet.

"In France," Buffeteau said, "it is a great honor to be promoted by a general officer."

But, to be promoted by an American general officer and the commanding general of the U.S. Army Infantry Center was an even greater honor, he said.

"It's like having infantrymen everywhere pat you on the back."

Buffeteau came to Fort Benning with his wife and three children, Jean, 16, Anne-Fleur, 12, and Henri, 8, 17 months ago.

He asked the chief of the French infantry to send him to America, he said, because he and his wife are both "fascinated by this great country."

Also, he said, "you cannot be fully responsible in the French army without understanding the American Army."

Though he has had to adjust to the language (he has been improving his "Georgian" as well as his English, he said), he has felt right at home among American infantrymen.

"Soldiers are always soldiers," he said. "The feeling of brotherhood is always the same."

It's like a day in the field among new people, Buffeteau said, when it rains and everyone gets wet and suddenly you are old friends.

"There's the same feeling (here) of military fraternity as there is in my army."

His job as liaison officer, Buffeteau said, is to be a strong link between the French and American armies and to help develop and improve relations between them.

He also acts as an ambassador, he said, in that he represents his country at many social activities and formal receptions.

When American officers go to France, he said, he acts as their sponsor. When French officials come here, he acts as an escort.

Much of his time is spent involved in the battle lab process, he said. The French army is developing its own battle lab, and there are a lot of ideas and questions to exchange, he said.

They also have a lot to learn from the Infantry Training Brigade about how to take civilians and turn them into soldiers, he said.

Buffeteau has been learning a lot personally, too, he said. He has a book crammed with notes he has taken while he has been here.

He admires the soldiers here for working hard, being disciplined and being ready to go, he said.

"Sometimes, I have the feeling that American soldiers are working 4 a.m. to 10 p.m.," he said.

He will take these ideals with him when he goes back to France, hopefully to command a regiment in the French Foreign Legion, he said.

Ruth J. Spaller

Col. Laurent J. G. Buffeteau stands while his wife, Annie, and Fort Benning Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White put on his new rank.

His children have also learned a lot here, he said. Especially the youngest two, who "are speaking and thinking in English — they are absolutely fluent."

Buffeteau said he was delighted to learn recently that he and his family would be staying until 1995.

"It's very meaningful to stay as a full colonel," he said, "and we really enjoy it here."

Hygienist recognized for exceptional service

Delta Dependents Dental Plan

A community health dental hygienist at Fort Benning has been recognized for her support of the Delta Dependents Dental Plan.

Cathy Hatfield of the U.S. Army Dental Activity, will receive Delta Dental's Award for Excellence at a ceremony to be announced later, DENTAC officials said.

Delta, the administrator for the dental plan, selected Hatfield to receive the award "in grateful recognition of outstanding support of the uniformed services active duty dependents dental plan," according to a release from Delta Dental .

The award is presented on a very limited basis to uniformed service staff members who genuinely go above and beyond the call of duty in supporting the dental plan at their installation, the release said.

Dependents Dental Plan is a Department of Defense-sponsored voluntary dental insurance plan that covers a variety of dental services from checkups, cleanings, sealants and fillings to oral surgery, root canals, gum surgery, crowns and braces.

Enrolled family members can make appointments with any licensed civilian dentist, but they can also choose one of the more than 110,000 participating Delta dentist offices nationwide.

At present, nearly 2 million family members are enrolled in the plan. Service members can enroll their eligible family members at their military personnel office.

More information about the plan is available from the health benefits adviser at Martin Army Community Hospital or by calling Delta Dental's Customer Service Office at (313) 489-2240.

Faith sixth-graders hook up with California class for cross-country

Video conference

Sixth-grade students from Faith Middle School were ushered into the age of teleconferencing Dec. 10 as they participated in a cross-country social studies exercise.

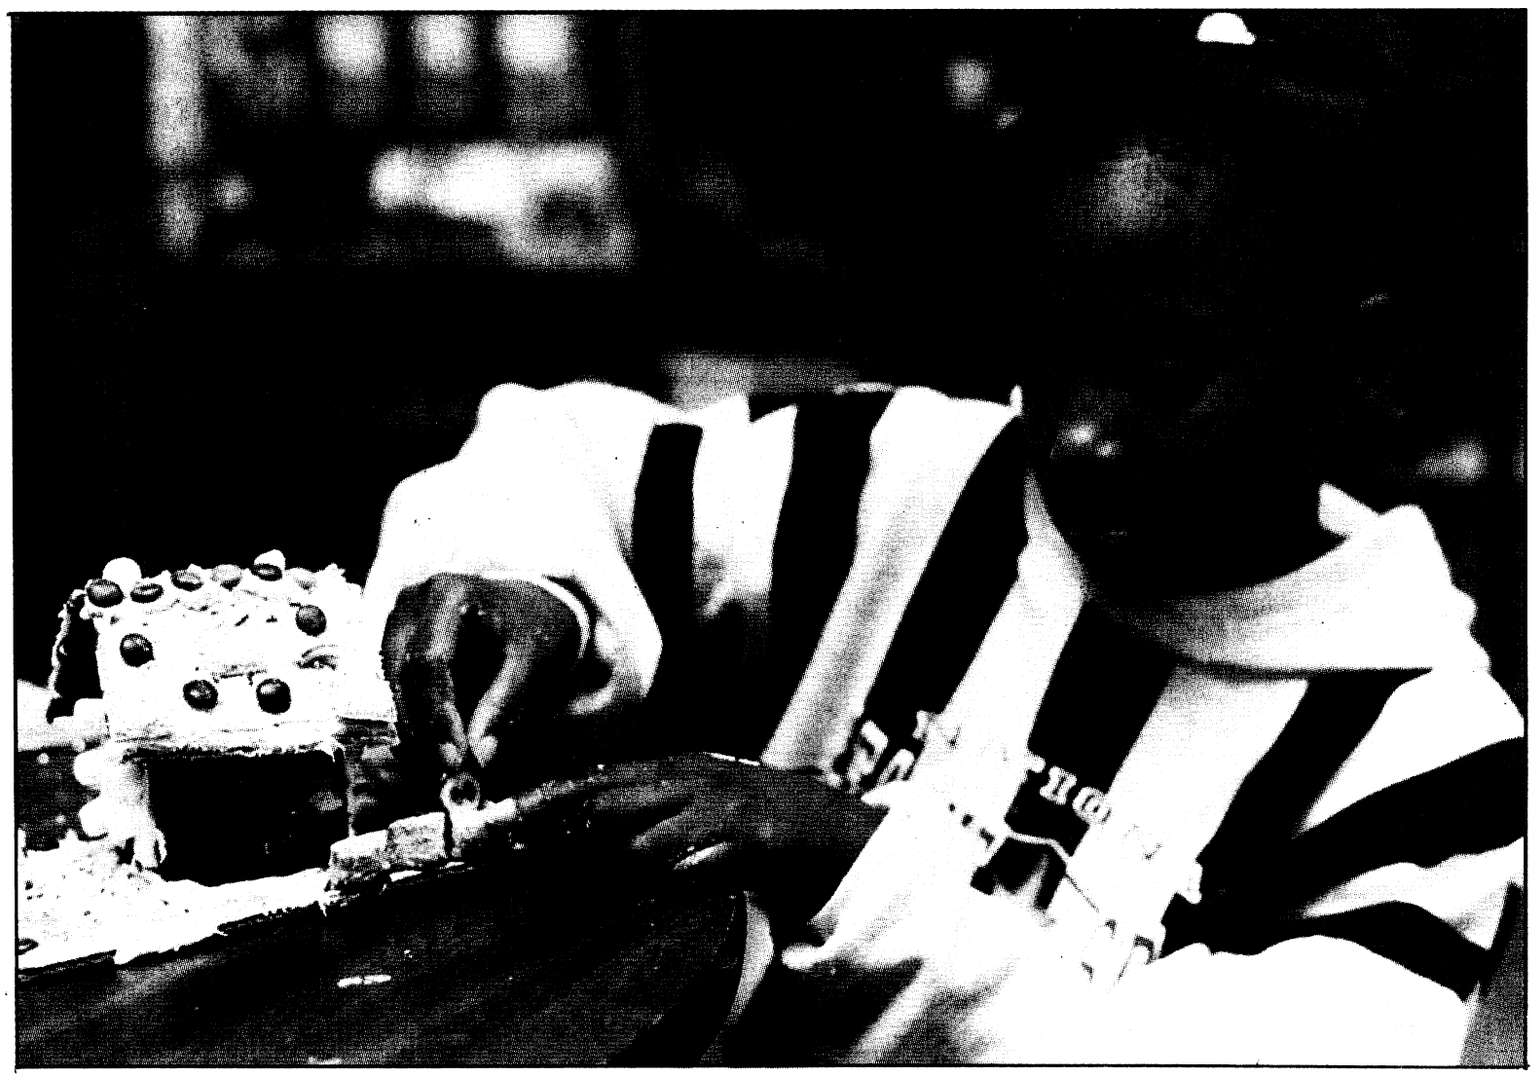
Fort Benning students and their counterparts in California compared schools, climates and extracurricular activities in the hour-long conference in Infantry Hall, the first of several planned for the year.

This initial conference was "an ice-breaking activity" designed to introduce the children to one another as they shared information and artifacts from their regions of the country, said Faith teacher Mary Matthews.

"We would like to do this on a monthly basis and to include some academic lessons," she said.

As the students introduced themselves and spoke of their school, they could see their counterparts in Blackstock Junior High School in Oxnard, Calif., displayed on a large video screen beside an identical screen mirroring their own group.

"We were hoping to introduce students to something new," Matthews said, as youngsters passed a microphone to peers, who took turns asking questions and sharing information with their electronic pen pals.



Among the items shared were a military identification card, a current novel the class was reading, and a hand-carved wooden plaque used as a hall pass at Faith. An overhead projector interacts with the electronic link between the schools, enabling the students to show close-ups of maps and other materials to their counterparts.

A copy machine is linked to the system so either group may send copies or facsimiles to each other as the conference proceeds.

Four roving cameras and one stationary camera enabled technician Hugh Cooper, a telecommunications specialist, Directorate of Information Management, to zoom in on some student or show the entire room of students and visitors.

Cooper explained the teleconference was possible through telephone lines and satellite links that enable the students to talk to each other in "real time" — the time lapse from the electronic link is almost imperceptible.

The schools were introduced to one another through a Faith student, whose aunt is principal at Blackstock, said Glen Hughes, Faith assistant principal.

Just 'so'

Natasha Bills, a third-grade student in Laura Silver's class at Stowers School, puts the finishing touches on a gingerbread house she made. As well as providing an enjoyable project, building gingerbread houses sharpens her students' skill in fractions, science, social skills and sequencing, Silver said.

Program gets parents in classroom

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

Stowers School students have been demonstrating academic skills while enjoying time with their parents through the Very Involved Parents program, which takes place twice each month.

The VIP program, an offshoot of the traditional volunteer program, encourages parents to work directly with their children in regular classroom assignments, said Gail Wilson, Stowers' principal.

Interested fathers and mothers eager to become part of their children's educations came to the school Wednesday.

"The number of parents is really encouraging," Wilson said. The numbers totaled about 100 at the beginning of the academic year but are now at 130 and climbing as VIPs praise the program and invite other parents to try it.

There would be no silent observing for these VIPs, Wilson said, as parents throughout the school broke into small groups and began "hands on" instruction and activities relating to that classroom's current unit of study.

In the computer lab, second-grade students in Edie Ryan's class showed their parents how they could whip through the day's keyboard lesson.

Youngsters in some upper classes participated in group discussions or explained the plot of their latest classroom book to their parents. Some parents explored "star lab," Fort Benning's portable planetarium, erected in the media center.

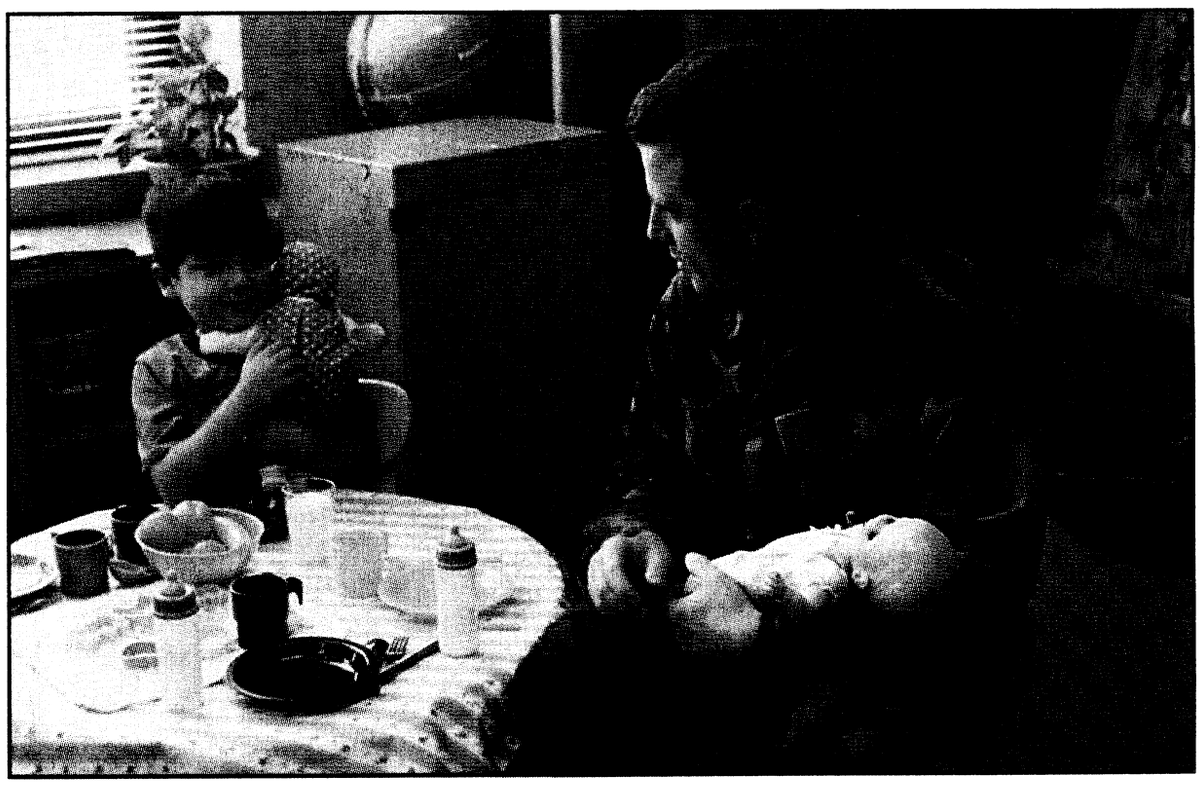
In one kindergarten room, parents got a child's version of the "home living" curriculum as a soldier perched on a small chair patiently took advice on burping baby dolls from his 5-year-old son.

Staff Sgt. Mark Downey, of the 30th Adjutant General Battalion (Reception) at Sand Hill, said he relishes his VIP role.

"I get a chance to work with my son and other children as well," he said, as he helped a small group of kindergartners make holiday crafts.

He said his commanders are very supportive of the program. "My unit allows me to do this," he said.

Teachers said they enjoy the program as well.



"We can't live without it," said first-grade teacher Rosalyn Smith as parents squeezed into group seating arrangements and helped children make puppets highlighting a recent reading assignment.

Wilson said teachers are totally committed to this program, and that has "really made the program work."

Parents are always welcome in the school, Wilson said, but the VIP program offers them a structured time to contribute to their child's education.

Self-esteem is one area in which everyone benefits, Wilson said. VIPs feel wanted and appreciated and the children feel "my parents really care," she said.

Parents can see first-hand some instructional methods and modes of discipline the teacher employs. Parents have expressed gratitude to teachers for exhibiting innovative ways of encouraging and disciplining children.

Jerrie Macintire/Special to The Bayonet

Staff Sgt. Kevin Jones enjoys drinking "tea" and holding a baby doll with son Jonathan, 5, as he participates in developing social and language skills.

Positive reinforcement is a standard at Stowers, Wilson said, and many parents have reported good results at home after duplicating a teacher's style of praise.

Wilson also believes achievement scores will be enhanced by the active participation of parents in the classrooms.

Wilson believes parents and teachers will continue expanding this mutually beneficial program stressing partnership in education. The Very Involved Parent program is conducted the second and fourth Wednesday of each month from 1 to 2 p.m.

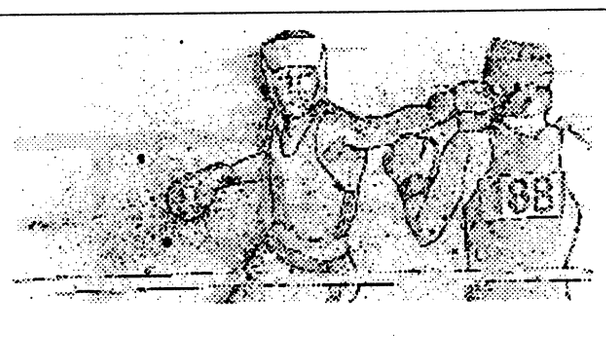
Knock-out

Tourney to make post club circuit

By Sandy Helling
Marketing Department

The "Great Canadian Mist Knock-Out Tournament or "Rock 'em Sock 'em" boxing tournament" is coming to Fort Benning in January.

Coinciding with the launch of the Army's boxing training camp at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., in January, the tournament is scheduled at three clubs on Fort Benning from Jan. 12 to 28.



The elimination-style competitions, using hand-operated tabletop boxing robots, will award prizes to everyone who enters with special prizes for the winners.

The Rock 'em Sock 'em boxing will become the center-stage attraction for three weeks in January Wednesday nights at the Hidden Door Junior Enlisted Club, starting Jan. 12, and Friday nights at the Main NCO Club and Bradley's at the Officers' Club.

The Main NCO Club will have Leader Night Jan. 14, the first evening of the competition at that club.

Registration will take place at each of the clubs for up to 48 contestants per night for the first two nights of the tournament. All contestants will receive a prize, and six semi-finalists will be named at each club each night.

The tournament culminates with a "finals night," scheduled for the third night of the promotion, when the winners from the previous rounds will be pitted against each other at each of the clubs. This final bout will determine the grand prize winner, who will receive a $125 cash grand prize.

Rock 'em Sock 'em Tournament

What: Elimination-style competitions, using hand-operated tabletop boxing robots, in conjunction with the launch of the Army Boxing Training Camp at Fort Huachuca, Ariz.

When and where: The Hidden Door Club, 8 to 10 p.m., Jan. 12, 19 and 26

Main NCO Club, 9 to 11 p.m., Jan. 14, 21 and 28

In conjunction with this tournament, there will be special promotions at the Class Six stores consisting of giveaways, drawings, and the chance to win a new television set with a built-in videocassette recorder.

The event is sponsored by Imported Canadian Mist whisky. As the corporate sponsor, Canadian Mist helps fund travel, equipment and other training expenses for the 65 boxers who will attend the camp.

Directorate of Public Works

The Directorate of Public Works and the Fort Benning Fire Department offer the following suggestions for a safe holiday:

- If possible, Christmas trees should be freshly cut.
- Before setting up the tree, recut the butt end at a 45-degree angle.
- Brace the tree in a sturdy, well-balanced container or tree stand.
- Fill the container with water and a commercial "freshness preservative" or a sugar and water solution (one cup of sugar to each gallon of water). Check the solution level daily.
- Do not use tree decorations that will burn.
- Use only Christmas tree lights that have the "UL" or Underwriter's Laboratories label or marking.
- Do not use any light sets that have splices in them or cracks in the cord insulation.
- Do not use electric lights on metal Christmas trees.
- Do not place trees near a source of heat or flame and do not place a tree where it will block a door, exit, hallway or aisle.
- Candles must only be used in occupied rooms and placed in stable holders. They should not be placed near window curtains or combustible material.
- Candle flames must be extinguished when no one is present.
- Turn off all Christmas lights before going to sleep or leaving the house or place of work.
- Do not let your tree dry out. When it does, dispose of it immediately.

VOLUNTEERS

Volunteer Resource Center

• The Public Affairs Office needs an editorial assistant to assist the print section in publishing The Bayonet.

This product supports Army families through disseminating community news and command information to all Fort Benning families in The Bayonet newspaper, delivered free to all on-post housing units and by subscription to those living off post.

Interested persons must have typing ability, and knowledge of computer word processing systems is preferred but not required. Good communication skills and command of the English language are required. Education or experience in print journalism is preferred but not required. Also, the individual must be familiar with the Army and Fort Benning.

For more information, call Paula J. Randall, command information officer, at 545-2201.

• The Concharty Council of Girl Scouts needs adult leaders to work in leadership positions, including a new community director and co-directors, and adults to work with troops.

• The National Infantry Museum needs volunteer tour guides and assistance in the Gift Shop. Tour guides can schedule volunteer time around their paid jobs or other commitments. Training and child-care costs will be provided.

• Army Community Service needs volunteers to assist in budget counseling and the Family Member Employment Assistance Program. Also, clerk typists, receptionists, a volunteer supervisor and assistant supervisor are needed.

Also, tap classes for adults are available at $15 per month.

For information, call 545-3070 or 545-3913.

Trash collection — Trash will not be collected at Fort Benning Dec. 24 and Dec. 31. For family housing areas normally scheduled for trash pick up Thursday and Dec. 30, trash will be collected Wednesday and Dec. 29, respectively. For areas normally scheduled for Dec. 24, trash will be picked up Thursday.

Recycle collection — Recyclable material will not be picked up Thursday and Dec. 31. The recycle scheduled for family housing areas will be as follows:

• Wednesday and Dec. 29: Norton Court, Indianhead Terrace, Custer Terrace, McDaniel Manor, Bouton Heights and Davis Hill.

• Thursday: Austin Loop, Miller Loop, Perkins Place, McIver Street, Upatoi Terrace, East Main Post and McGraw Manor.

For information, call 545-4749.

Contract managers to meet — The National Contract Management Association will have its charter luncheon Tuesday at 11:30 a.m. at Longhorn Steaks, 3201 Macon Road, Columbus. Anyone in the Fort Benning community can attend. You do not have to be in contracting to participate. Call Sandra Mack at 545-2219 to make reservations.

Youth Services' user fee — Families using Youth Services' facilities will be assessed a $12 per year user fee, effective Jan. 3.

Each family member will be issued a card when the family's fee has been paid. Family members who participate in social, cultural, competitive and educational activities at the Youth Activities Center will need a card.

Youth who do not have a user card can still participate in Youth Services' events. However, they must pay increased fees for participating. For information, call 545-3070 or 545-3913.

Museum offers gifts — The National Infantry Museum's gift shop, the Regimental Quartermaster Sales Store, has Christmas gifts and stocking stuffers.

The museum is open from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 12:30 to 4:30 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays.

Overseas soldiers need letters, too

By Linda Lee
American Forces Information Service

For the first time, "Dear Abby" holiday mail goes to major military mail centers around the world instead of to specific units.

Over the past few holiday seasons, Operation Dear Abby has provided mail to hundreds of thousands of U.S. service members stationed abroad, said Abigail Van Buren, author of the syndicated column "Dear Abby."

Sending a card or letter or taking the time to bake cookies are ways to let service members away from home know they aren't forgotten and their efforts are appreciated, Van Buren said.

Certain units were targeted to receive the letters each year, she said. In 1992, for example, several Navy battle groups and U.S. troops in Turkey were singled out.

Instead of providing addresses for specific units this year, said Van Buren, officials decided to provide a central address for each military area. With the mail centers breaking down the mail on a fair-share basis, more people will get letters, cards or packages, she said.

Van Buren said the Military Postal Service Agency requested "Dear Abby" mail be sent either first-class or priority.

✉ Mail letters, cards and packages to service members in Europe to:
Operation Dear Abby
APO AE 09136.

✉ The address for the Mediterranean Basin is:
Operation Dear Abby
FPO AE 09685.

✉ For service members in Central and South America, address them to:
Operation Dear Abby
APO AA 34085.

✉ Mail for troops in Korea goes to:
Operation Dear Abby
APO AP 96285.

✉ For Pacific Basin military members, mail cards, letters and packages to:
Operation Dear Abby
FPO AP 96385.

Another option for holiday mail to service members is the Mail for Our Military program. This program combines mail from all over the United States. The mail is then broken down into more than 1,000 packages and distributed through units, bases, YMCAs, United Service Organizations and hospitals, both stateside and overseas.

For information on this program, send your name and address, with a first class stamp to:

Habits, attitude can contribute to administrative separation

U.S. Army Trial Defense Service

This article will be about specific types of administrative separation actions.

Alcohol and drug abuse can end a soldier's military career in many ways, ranging from Article 15 punishment up to a general court-martial. Chapter 9, Army Regulation 635-200, gives a commander the ability to "fire" (separate) a soldier he or she believes cannot be cured from alcohol or drug abuse.

Your commander can initiate action to separate you if you are enrolled in the Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Program, and the commander decides that further rehabilitation efforts are not practical and that keeping you in the Army just won't work out.

This type of Chapter 9 elimination is called one for "rehabilitation failure."

Another provision of Chapter 9 lets your commander take separation action even if you are not enrolled in ADAPCP. This is a special situation where the soldier either can't or won't participate in ADAPCP treatment leading to successful rehabilitation.

If you are separated under Chapter 9, you will receive either an honorable or a general discharge. Moreover, you are eligible to receive one-half separation pay if you have six or more years of active military service.

If your commander can show that your performance as a soldier is unsatisfactory and that keeping you in the Army just won't work out, he can take action to separate you under Chapter 13.

There are many aspects of your 24-hour-a-day soldiering that could form the basis for a claim that your performance as a soldier is unsatisfactory.

Your work performance is looked at as well as your personal life. The best way to avoid a Chapter 13 is to maintain a good attitude, do your best in all tasks and keep your personal life in order.

Before you can be separated from the Army under Chapter 13, you first must be told what your deficiencies are and given a chance to correct them.

Generally, this will be done with counseling and maybe even with a transfer to new duties. If you are separated under Chapter 13, you will receive either an honorable or a general discharge. Also, you will not be eligible to receive separation pay.

A different kind of separation, Chapter 16, is a way to separate soldiers who are barred from re-enlistment. Unlike the other separation actions, this is a voluntary, personnel action that usually does not involve lawyers.

Chapter 16 applies where a soldier is barred from re-enlistment and believes that he or she will be unable to overcome the bar. Under Chapter 16, a soldier can request early separation from the Army.

The provisions of Chapter 16 differ depending upon whether the soldier has received a Department of the Army-imposed bar or a locally-imposed bar.

If the soldier has been barred by the Army, the soldier has the option of being immediately discharged. If the soldier barred by the Army so desires, he or she can submit a request for Chapter 16 to the commander.

Approval of the request is mandatory and must be accomplished no later than six months from the date of the request, regardless of existing service or overseas tour obligations.

Soldiers with bars other than a local bar or one by the Army may also apply for immediate separation. Unlike Army-barred soldiers, however, their requests may be denied.

Approval is within the commander's discretion. If the commander approves the request, overseas tour and existing service obligations may be curtailed.

In Chapter 16 cases, an honorable discharge will be awarded unless an entry-level separation is required. Soldiers separated under Chapter 16 will be required to repay unearned portions of enlistment and selective re-enlistment bonuses.

Re-enlistment in the Army at a future date is prohibited, and eligibility for Veterans Affairs-administered educational benefits may be jeopardized. Separation pay is not warranted because separation under Chapter 16 is considered a voluntary separation.

If you have a legal question, get advice only from a lawyer. If your question is about military justice or an administrative elimination, call Trial Defense Service office at 545-1520.

COMMUNITY CARE

By Ken Franklin
Martin Army Community Hospital

For many patients with gastritis, heartburn and ulcer disease, physicians prescribe medicines called "H^2 blockers." Knowing about these medicines can help you take care of yourself.

The most common H^2 blockers are Tagamet (generic name, cimetidine) and Zantac (generic name, ranitidine.) They act by turning down the stomach's acid production. Most patients only need these medicines for a limited time, but some need them for months or years.

As part of Martin Army Community Hospital's efforts to maintain quality care with a shrinking budget, the medical staff looked at these drugs. Both work well; both have similar side effects. Tagamet currently costs 5 cents less per pill.

Five cents may not seem like much. However, the hospital dispenses 1 million tablets of Tagamet and Zantac each year. The potential cost difference is $50,000 per year. Taken with other measures, saving that money allows physicians to maintain quality without deleting services.

Some patients get better relief from Zantac. Some get better relief from Tagamet. Some medical conditions may make one or the other the only choice. Physicians add these considerations to the economic factor in deciding what to prescribe.

One other problem occurs with H^2 blockers. Some patients start taking them for a four- to eight-week treatment, then just keep refilling their prescriptions. These patients may not need to take any H^2 blocker at all. Family physicians and internists try to catch these problems in routine follow-up visits.

Patients taking H^2 blockers should talk with their doctors the next time they follow up. With a doctor's help, patients can get the quality care they deserve at the lowest possible cost.

Do you have a question about medical care at Fort Benning? Send it to Community Care Corner, Martin Army Community Hospital, Attention: HSZB-F, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905-6100.

Editor's note: Dr. William J. Yost of the hospital's Internal Medicine Service contributed to this article.

CRIME WATCH

Military Police Activity

The following entries are from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from Nov. 24 to 30. Such entries may be incomplete and do not determine the guilt or innocence of any person.

This week's hot topic concerns travel safety. Make this holiday season safe by taking the following precautions when travelling.

• While driving, keep windows up and doors locked at all times; however, ensure your exhaust system has no leaks.

• Watch out at intersections and stop lights for suspicious people or activity.

• If you think you're being followed, drive to a police station or other public location to seek assistance.

• If you experience car trouble, raise the hood and stay inside your car with the doors locked. Ask anyone who stops to call the police or a service station.

• Avoid picking up hitchhikers, and never stop for a large group hitchhiking together.

• When doing your last-minute Christmas shopping, park in areas that will be well lighted when you return.

• Always lock your car and keep valuables out of sight. Inspect your vehicle and correct all deficiencies before starting your journey.

Blotter entries are as follows:

• A specialist accidentally shot himself in the shoulder while cleaning his .38-caliber pistol. He had consumed six beers before the accident.

• A staff sergeant was charged with rape after he invited a family member to his residence to watch a movie; then he forced her to engage in sexual intercourse against her will.

• A sergeant was charged with assault after choking his wife during a domestic disturbance.

• A sergeant first class was charged with aggravated assault and drunk and disorderly conduct after pointing a loaded rifle at a group of bystanders near his quarters.

• A family member was charged with public drunkenness after Military Police officers saw her walking through a parking lot staggering and attempting to enter the driver's seat of her vehicle. After being instructed not to drive the vehicle, she became belligerent and uncooperative.

This week's booby prize goes to the sergeant who poured red food coloring on the floor, slammed a book against the floor and departed the area.

The sergeant's wife, thinking that her husband had shot himself, notified police. Military Police patrols, ambulances, Criminal Investigation Division agents and a fire rescue squad were dispatched to the scene.

Additional Military Police patrols were dispatched to search for the sergeant's vehicle, and area hospitals were notified that a possible gunshot victim may be en route.

He admitted to playing a practical joke on his wife. He was charged with disorderly conduct and false report of a crime.

Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5223.

DR. FIT

U.S. Army Physical Fitness School

Q: I recently retired from the Army, and I am concerned about osteoporosis in the future. What about my concerns?

A: You may have reason to be concerned. If you add up all the disabilities, pain, deformities and expenses from the bone fractures, about half of all women over 50 years of age will suffer from the progressive disease.

There are certain risk factors and hereditary concerns.

Here are some risk factors: female, Caucasian, especially northern European and Asian, petite frame, family history of osteoporosis, over 40 years old, no children, early menopause with no hormonal replacement therapy, low milk or milk product intake, and low vegetable intake, especially dark greens.

Women need about 1,000 milligrams of calcium per day prior to menopause and 1,500 milligrams a day following menopause.

Here are some calcium heavyweights: One cup of 1 percent milk (500 milligrams), two slices of nonfat cheese (400 milligrams), one cup of yogurt (400 milligrams) and one cup calcium-fortified orange juice (300 milligrams). Also, broccoli, kale and kidney beans are rich in calcium.

Some methods to prevent this debilitating disease are: walk, walk and walk! Other exercises include sitting push-ups, modified sit-ups, prone trunk lifts, pelvic tilts, prone, sitting, and lying leg lifts. Get up and exercise to reduce the effects of osteoporosis.

Shop, look and listen

Egleston Children's Hospital

When the going gets tough, the bumper sticker says, the tough go shopping. Well, even though you may be tough enough to withstand the overwhelming holiday shopping masses, your child may not be so well suited for the task.

The hurried drivers on the road, the endless crowds, the noise and the confusion can all combine to make a dangerous situation.

The child safety experts at Egleston Children's Hospital at Emory University advise you to be especially careful and alert if you take your young child shopping with you this season. These tips may help:

• Hold your children's hands at all times. It's easy to get separated in a big crowd and that can be very traumatic — and dangerous — for a youngster.

• To avoid getting so loaded up with shopping bags that you don't have a hand for your child to hold, make frequent trips to your car to get rid of packages.

• If keeping hold of your children's hands for a long time is easier said than done, keep them buckled in their strollers.

• Plan short shopping trips, if possible. Your children will fare better, and you will stay more alert.

• Remember, most car crashes happen close to home. Use extra caution when driving and be sure all passengers are properly buckled into their seats. (It's the law!)

Does The Bayonet really work?
Just ask the folks at The Audio Connection!

"We used all of the excuses in the book," says owner Mike Hamby, "not to advertise in The Bayonet. We thought we were too far from Fort Benning, and did not think it was important to our business. Soon after our first ad ran, a soldier came in with a copy of The Bayonet in his hand and bought a $1,500 stereo system for his car. That's all I needed to see!"

The Fort Benning market is a difficult audience to reach because the military population is constantly changing. The Bayonet is Fort Benning's authorized publication, and a recent survey shows that 83% of the 55,000 military and civilian population read the paper regularly.

"I am a firm believer that The Bayonet is the best way for me to reach the soldiers and civilians on post," Mike concluded. "It works well for me and I intend to continue taking advantage of The Bayonet's circulation on post to make my business more profitable."

Ritter, Winkler star in 'The Only Way Out'

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

They're both known primarily for comedy; but, in a new television movie, John Ritter and Henry Winkler turn darkly dramatic.

Spotlight

Longtime acquaintances and past co-hosts on the annual United Cerebral Palsy "Star-a-Thon," the two home-screen fixtures act with each other for the first time in "The Only Way Out," airing Sunday on ABC.

Ritter plays Jeremy, an architect who is going through an amiable divorce while enjoying a relationship with his current live-in love (Julianne Phillips). However, matters become complicated when his soon-to-be-ex-wife (Stephanie Faracy) takes up with Tony (Winkler), a man who turns out to have sociopathic tendencies that frighten the children she's had with Ritter. When she tries to expunge Tony from her life, he refuses to disappear from it, ultimately drawing Jeremy into the conflict.

Enraged by what he considers meddling, Tony then turns his rage toward Jeremy, threatening the latter's professional and domestic well-being ... ultimately prompting Jeremy to consider drastic measures to end the dilemma permanently. Directed by television veteran Rod Hardy, the film — adapted from a British movie entitled "One Way Out" — was co-produced by Ritter's company, Adam Productions.

Though "Three's Company" Emmy-winner Ritter isn't a total stranger to drama, as evidenced by such credits as "The Waltons" and 1986's "Unnatural Causes," a project like "The Only Way Out" allows him a big departure from his current CBS series "Hearts Afire."

What: 'The Only Way Out'
When: Sunday, 9 p.m. on ABC

Ritter recalls having seen "One Way Out" a couple of years ago. "I don't know what the stalker laws are in England, but it's a terrifying thing to try to stop someone from harassing you," he said. "There are some people out there who have unhealthy attachments for one reason or another, but what you don't hear about are the people who use emotional blackmail or nonphysical bullying to manipulate others. I think Henry gives a really wonderful, shark-like performance."

Actually, Ritter and "Happy Days" alumnus Winkler were scheduled to team up earlier for an ABC film to have been called "Sob Sisters," which would have kept them in the humorous realm in which they're so established.

"I really loved that and wanted to do it with Henry," Ritter said. "It just changed hands so many times, I don't know what happened to the script. I liked the original one, but ABC had problems with it; and, after being given to three different sets of writers, it finally wrote itself into a museum somewhere. "

After concentrating on producing and directing lately — as with the Burt Reynolds movie "Cop and a Half" and TV's "MacGyver" — Winkler is about to tackle weekly acting work again in "Monty," an upcoming Fox comedy about a Rush Limbaugh-style TV host.

Officials light post's Christmas tree, menorah

By Caejar A. Cox

Cypress Gardens coloring it crimson

Cypress Gardens

CYPRESS GARDENS, Fla. — As snowbirds begin their annual trek south, Cypress Gardens, Florida's foremost tropical showplace near Winter Haven, presents "Color It Crimson," the park's annual poinsettia festival, through Jan. 15.

Color It Crimson features more than 40,000 poinsettia blooms set in towering trees, giant hanging baskets and beds edged by winding streams, sparkling pools and double-sided waterfalls. Reindeer topiaries and holiday music complete the walk-through experience.

The festival is included in the regular price of park admission. For festival information, call (800) 338-MUMS; (813) 324-2111; (800) 282-2123 in Florida; or (800) 237-4826 in the United States.

Cypress Gardens began the Mum Festival in 1985 with 53 chrysanthemum cascades. Today, the festival features more than 750 cascades, 32 poodle baskets and ball forms, several bonsai tree forms, mum arches, three nine-foot gazebos and 18,500 potted mums.

"Thanks to the efforts of our entire staff," Mike Wallace, Cypress Gardens horticulturalist, said, "the Mum Festival just gets bigger, better and more beautiful each year. All 2 million blooms come from only 250 stock plants representing 11 varieties. From planning and design to growing and arranging, the process is a time-consuming task."

More than 40 full-time gardeners and maintenance personnel work eight-hour days for four to six weeks transferring the mums from the greenhouse to the festival site.

From drawing board to finished product, Cypress Gardens' Color it Crimson poinsettia festival is nearly a year-round project. In addition to nurturing the poinsettias for the event, the team of horticulturalists, nursery staff and maintenance engineers develop landscape blueprints, haul tons of earth to the festival site and organize more than 8,000 plants once they are transferred from the nursery.

Adult admission is $24.95 plus tax, children 3 to 9 $16.45 plus tax. Children under 3 are admitted free.

For more information, call (800) 237-4826 or (813) 324-2111.

PET OF THE WEEK

This mother and son feline duo is looking for a home. They are just two of many cats and dogs available for adoption on post.

For more information, contact the Veterinary Services Office in Building 265 at 545-1127. Hours of operation are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:30 am. and 12:45 to 3 p.m. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

If you have lost a pet, check the stray impoundment facility in Building 283.

Stray pets are given three working days to be claimed from the time they are picked up by animal control personnel.

If the pets are not claimed, they become government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies tags are the only way Veterinary Services can contact the owner of a lost pet.

Pet owners are reminded that they are required to register their pets and update their records when changes occur.

SOAP UPDATE

King Features Syndicate.

ALL MY CHILDREN: Kendall told Erica Dimitri seduced her. Erica confronted Dimitri with Kendall's story; and, as she did, she had a flashback of her own rape. Believing she was seeing Richard Fields, she stabbed Dimitri.

ANOTHER WORLD: Kyle's sudden appearance in court resulted in the trial coming to an end. While Morgan had mixed feelings about the outcome, an emotionally wrenched Lorna retrieved the gun she had previously pulled on Morgan.

AS THE WORLD TURNS: John got upsetting news about his medical tests. To Duncan's displeasure, Eduardo and Lucinda came to an agreement. Barbara was upset when Gregory demanded Hal give him the Viconti bags to check for defects.

BOLD AND THE BEAUTIFUL: Ridge got drunk and passed out as he confided to Brooke about his anxieties over Taylor and James. Unable to reach Ridge at home, Taylor called Brooke, who said she didn't know Ridge's whereabouts.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES: Sami met with Steve Miller, the shady lawyer who arranged for the adoption of Karen's baby. Tom refused to go to Europe to have the operation that could open his blocked artery.

GENERAL HOSPITAL: Jagger became the prime suspect in Ray's murder. At Karen's urging, Alan agreed to pay for Jagger's legal counsel. While in Buffalo on business, Ned displayed a wilder side of himself while a woman watched with great interest.

GUIDING LIGHT: Holly and Blake feared Roger had been shot and killed. Frank threw Dylan out of the diner when his presence upset Julie. Alexandra returned, in triumph, to Spaulding Enterprises.

LOVING: Curtis escaped from Dante, only to find Dinah Lee in Trucker's arms. Dante recaptured Cunis. Then, unseen, he shot Charlie. Alex and Jeremy saw a connection between the threats against the Aldens and the scare tactics used against Tess. Casey consoled Steffi when her mother chipped away at her self-esteem.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE: Andrew took legal steps to keep Dorian away from Cassie. Powell was released from prison. He decided to re-enter Llanview University.

YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS: Although Lauren let him out of his contract, Brad offered to stay on to help her through her company's transition. Paul confided to Chris that while he was never in love with April, and he didn't want to see her and Heather in a dangerous situation.

HOROSCOPE

King Features Syndicate.

ARIES (March 21 to April 10) Behind-the-scenes moves are best in business this week. A co-worker may be unduly sensitive or touchy now. Further reflection is needed about a financial concern.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A romantic interest may need reassurances that you care this week. A difficulty between a partner and a friend may surface now. Developments from afar are in your favor. Partnership interests are highlighted in the New Year.

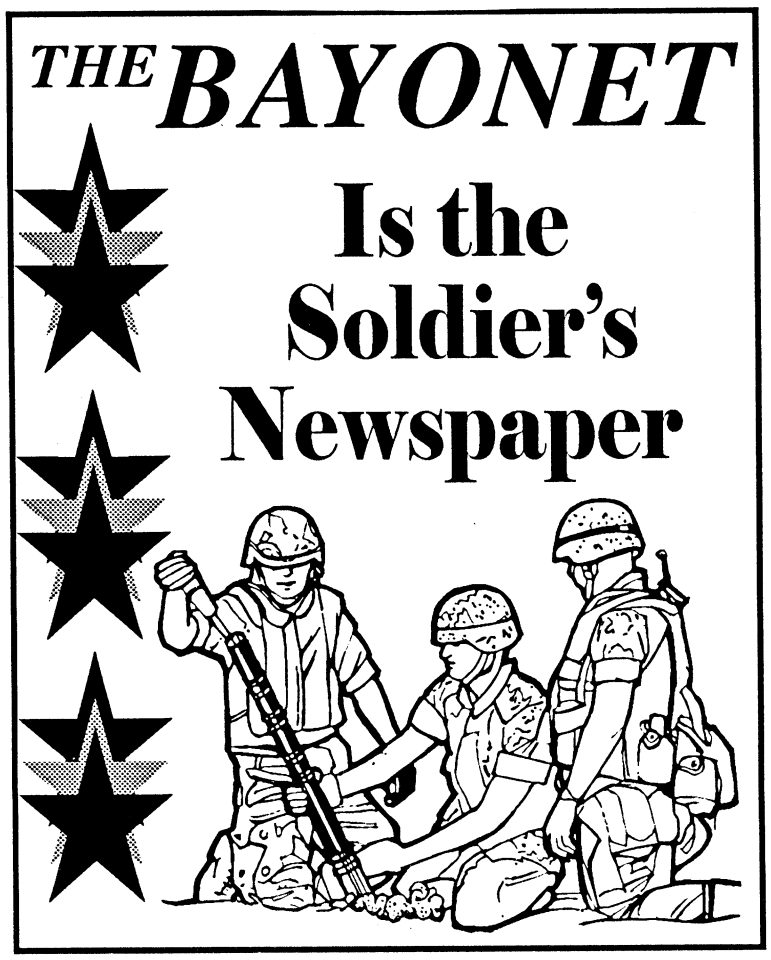
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A family member may need extra consideration during the holidays. Though this week's business developments will lead to future gains, an immediate task may cause you some difficulty. You're not quite in sync with one friend later in the week.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You may feel a child isn't listening to you this week. Try not to get agitated. Plans for travel in the new year start taking shape now. Mixing business and pleasure is not favored for a while.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) You're on the right track where work interests are concerned this week. New developments are in your favor. Instead, kickback and enjoy the simple pleasures of home and hearth.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) To ensure relationship harmony this week, you must be sensitive to a partner's needs. Avoid nagging behavior in your quest to have everything "perfect" for holiday entertaining.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A money situation could be hanging over your head this holiday week. The weekend brings favorable home and family developments as you celebrate the holiday together.



SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Tact and diplomacy are needed in dealings with children who may be asking for a bit too much from Santa this year. Dating for singles is a plus.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) An older relative may need a cheerful holiday greeting from you this week so be sure reach out. You're sharp-witted this week but remember to also be tactful. Finish up home projects now.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) Minor friction is possible on the home front but chalk it up to holiday jitters. New ideas make you feel good about yourself as you take stock for the new year.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) You will resent it this week when someone tries to get you to do work for less than your usual fee. Still, your financial picture will brighten in the long run. Measure words carefully.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20) Some you deal with this week may be temperamental. Avoid getting into a dispute about an ideological matter over the holiday dinner table. A friend entrusts you with a confidential matter.

New secretary of Army visits Fort Benning

Army chief of staff joins him

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

The new secretary of the Army visited Fort Benning Dec. 15 and Thursday.

Togo D. West Jr., who was sworn in as secretary of the Army Nov. 22, said the visit was the first of a group of visits he will make to military installations outside of the Washington, D.C., area.

West, accompanied by Army Chief of Staff Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan, Training and Doctrine Command Commander Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr. and Sgt. Maj. of the Army Richard A. Kidd, visited many of the post's major units to observe demonstrations and talk with commanders and soldiers.

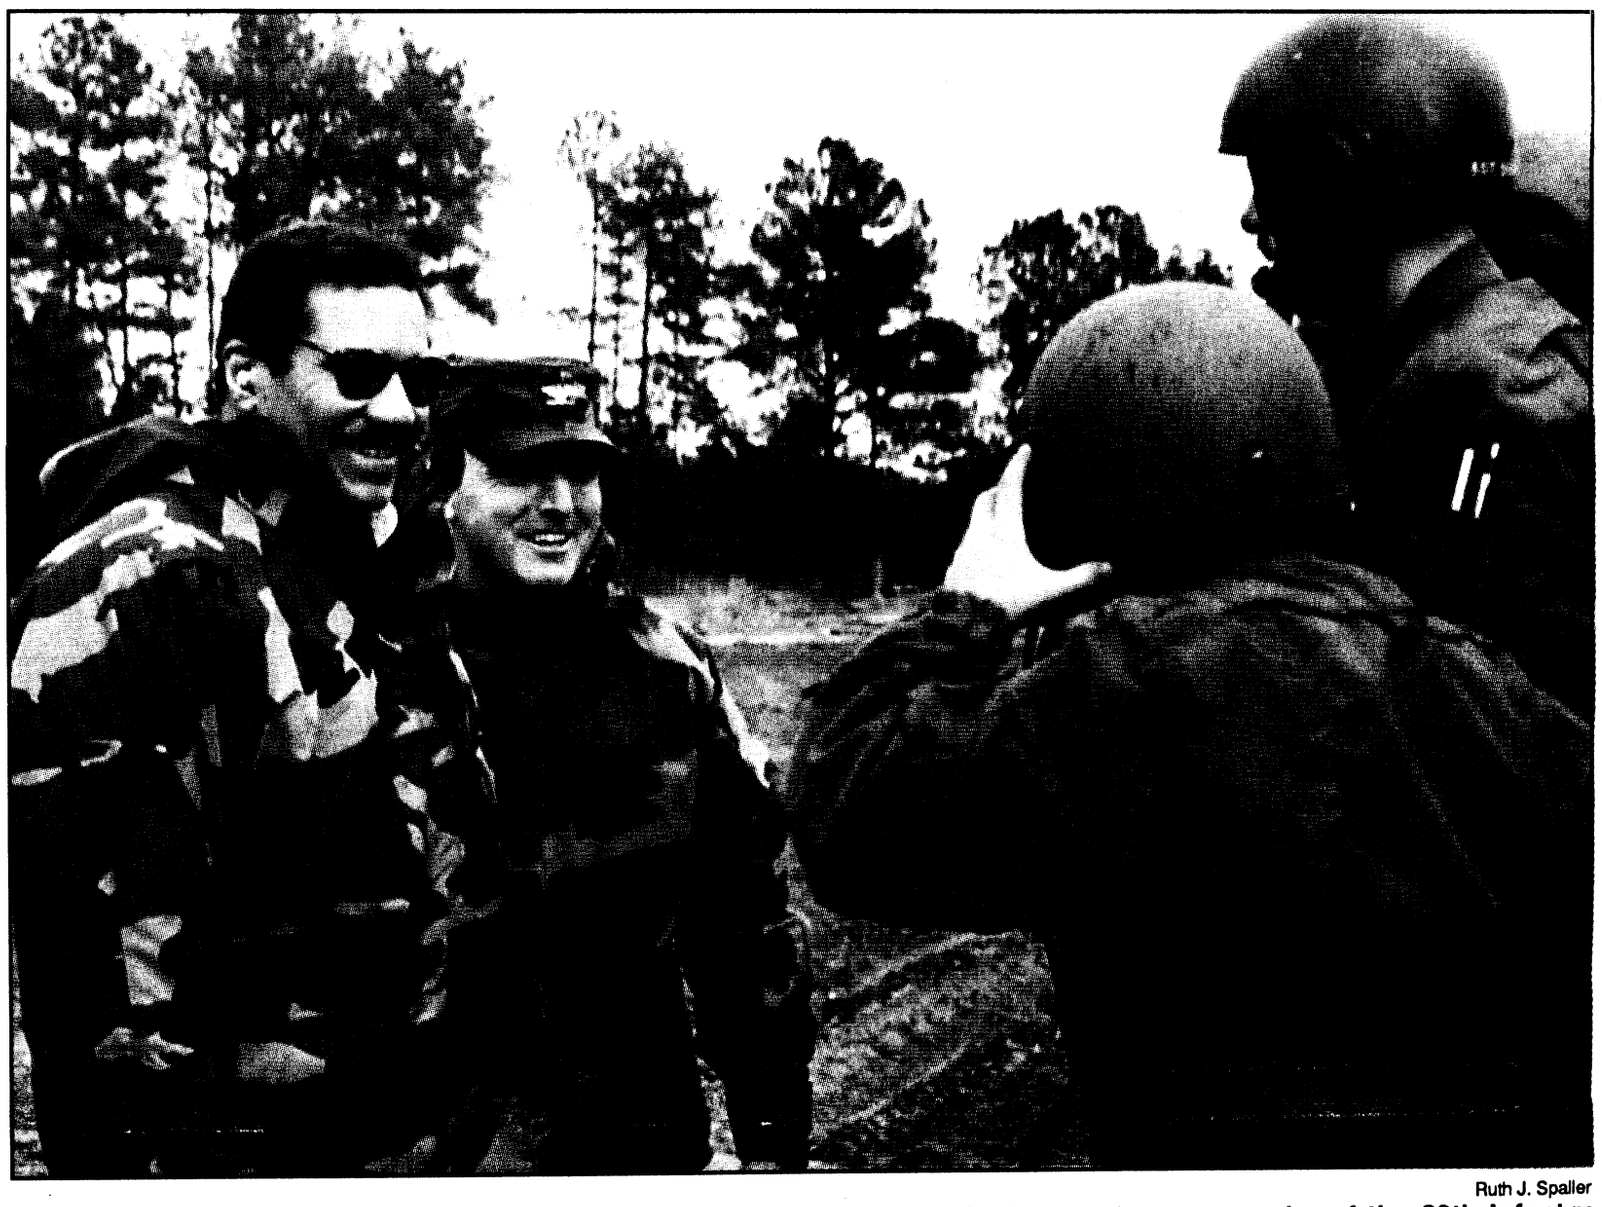
West said it was especially appropriate for him to be visiting Fort Benning "because it, like the Army, is centered on soldiers."

One of his main concerns as secretary, he said, is people. "That's what the Army is, and that's why I am here today," he said.

As secretary, he said, "I will concentrate on the things that are necessary to keep our individual members trained, equipped and able to do their jobs and make sure they don't have to worry about how their family members are doing."

As far as cutbacks affecting Fort Benning, West said, "As long as there is a United States, there will be a U.S. Army; as long as there's a U.S. Army, there will be an infantry; as long as there's an infantry, there will be a home for it, and that is right here at Fort Benning."

West, who was an officer in the Judge Advocate General Corps from 1969 to 1973, said at the end of his visit that the quality of the Army now is as high as he has ever seen it.



"Commanders seem to be happy with the people they have, and everything I have seen says that Army commanders have a reason to think that.

"They are getting good people, they are training them hard and they are getting good results from that training."

Fort Benning, West said, is a place where people come to be turned into "the finest ground fighting force on the face of the earth."

From this visit, West said, "I have learned that if we want to concern ourselves about the future and think about where the future of our fighting force is, it is right here in training.

"The British like to say their battles are won on the playing fields of Eton," West said. "Ours are won on the training fields, ranges and grounds of Fort Benning and places like it."

36th soldiers return from duty in Somalia

By David Greer
36th Engineer Group

Nearly 500 members of the 43rd Engineer Battalion and the 13th Corps Support Battalion returned to Fort Benning from Somalia Dec. 17 and 18. The 13th CSB also scheduled the return of 506 more soldiers by today.

A small number of soldiers from these units are remaining in Somalia to process equipment. They are expected to return to Fort Benning by the first of the year.

More than 1,000 Fort Benning soldiers have served in Somalia during the last six months. Some soldiers will remain in Somalia until March.

For each group of returning soldiers, the Infantry Band has played Christmas carols while families and friends waited to welcome the soldiers home.

"This is the best Christmas gift of all," said Tammy Wisher, wife of Capt. Dennis Wisher. "To have him home safe and to be able to spend Christmas with the children is truly a prayer that was answered."

Welcoming each group was Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White.

"I know it's been a tough mission," White said. "Somalia is not an easy place to serve ... but you know that in the Army, we can't pick our own place. It was our time to serve in Somalia — they asked for the best and we sent the best. You have accomplished your job superbly, and we are all very proud of you. The greatest present we could have is to see you come home."

Col. Dean Kershaw, 36th Engineer Group commander, greeted returning soldiers as they arrived at Atlanta's Hartsfield International Airport and boarded buses for the drive to Fort Benning.

"They are excited, they are proud, they did some great work," he said.

Holiday exodus begins

ITB soldiers leave for Christmas

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

More than 2,800 soldiers left Fort Benning Monday and Tuesday by bus, by car and by plane as part of Exodus '93 - Return '94.

The yearly event is conducted to allow the soldiers of the Infantry Training Brigade to go home for the holidays. All soldiers attending One Station Unit Training have an opportunity to take leave during the exodus.

The exodus requires support from many on-post agencies and civilian contractors. The SatoTravel office was one of the agencies assisting with the mass departure.

The office booked more than 1,700 plane tickets and coordinated for buses to take the troops to and from Hartsfield International Airport in Atlanta.

The office can also guarantee the lowest airfare available, according to Linda Cobb, complex manager for the Fort Benning office. Negotiations between the airlines and the Military Traffic Management Command resulted in special fares for soldiers nationwide, not just the ones stationed at Fort Benning, according to Cobb.

She also pointed out that her office provides a list for the leaders in the Infantry Training Brigade with the names and flight information of each soldier.

"It is broken down by company so each drill sergeant will know the details of each soldier's travel schedule." Many soldiers will also travel home by Greyhound bus or be picked up by family members.

Planning for the event began in July, according to Dave Christensen, assistant operations officer for the Infantry Training Brigade.

Christensen has been a coordinator of the effort for the past nine years. He pointed out that safety and good conduct are stressed to all traveling soldiers.

"They are told that they represent the United States Army everywhere they travel in uniform," he said. The troops will all be wearing their Class A uniforms with raincoats and gloves.

The support network for Exodus '93 includes the cadre from 10 of the 28 companies making up the Infantry Training Brigade. They will be at the Atlanta airport to ensure that soldiers arrive at their check-in points on time and go to the correct airline terminal. They will also be on hand to assist when the soldiers return in January.

The United Service Organization in Atlanta and the spouses clubs from the military installations in the metro-Atlanta area are also a big help, according to Christensen.

Last year, they provided cookies and other snacks at the airport for departing troops. The USO and the Peachtree Plaza in Atlanta also donated more than 3,000 boxed lunches upon their return.

Christensen said he has seen the exodus shrink in size along with the drawdown of the Army.

"We used to move about 6,000 during the exodus," he said. Through his years on the job, he estimates helping nearly 65,000 troops get home for the holidays.

Post MPs best in TRADOC

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Military Police Company was awarded the Brig. Gen. David H. Stem award Dec. 15 for being named the best MP company on a large installation within Training and Doctrine Command.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, commanding general, was on hand to present a trophy to the soldiers.

"You provide a safe environment for our soldiers and families and you do it superbly and better than anybody else," White said.

The annual award is named for Stem, who was commandant of the U.S. Army Military Police School when he was killed in a plane crash.

Judges from the TRADOC Provost Marshal staff evaluated the entries and selected a winner in three categories of large, medium and small installations.

In addition to the company from Fort Benning, other winners included Fort McClellan, Ala., and Fort Monroe, Va.

Capt. James Mullen, commander of the company, said his soldiers are professionals and that their mission is to "assist, protect and defend the community."

Criteria for the award included mission performance and technical and physical proficiency, according to Col. James Crockert, Fort Benning provost marshal.

Fort Benning's winning company will now represent TRADOC in competition for the Brig. Gen. Jeremiah P. Holland Award, given to the best MP company Armywide.

Crockert was also recognized Dec. 15 by the state of Georgia for his efforts to increase safety belt and child safety seat usage.

He was among 50 law enforcement officers throughout the state to receive the honor.

Leaders send holiday greetings

CG says thank you

Great job by all of the Fort Benning community this week.

Because of your diligent efforts and attention to detail, both the battle lab senior officer review and the secretary of the Army visit were world-class performances.

Once again, you have proved that Fort Benning is the best installation in the Army.

Please extend my thanks to all your soldiers and civilians for a job well done. Thank you.

I wish you all a safe and happy holiday season.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White
Commanding general

TRADOC cdr reflects on holiday season

The holiday season is always a social time to reflect on our many blessings, a time to pause and consider our many accomplishments and a time to assess our plans for the future.

Likewise, it is a time to think of others. As you enjoy this holiday season with friends and family, I ask that you pause and think about our fellow soldiers separated from families performing their duty in service to our nation around the world.

As the Training and Doctrine Command concludes another year of service to our nation, I want to express my thanks for the contributions you have made to our Army and our nation.

Our many and varied missions have a large and important impact, and I am very proud of the many accomplishments we have made together this year and look forward to meeting new challenges of the new year with that same sense of pride and teamwork.

Denise joins me in sending our best wishes to each of you for a happy and safe holiday season and new year.

Gen. Frederick M. Franks
TRADOC commander

Holidays are for family

Christmas is always best when spent with family. And for many Fort Benning families, the return of their soldiers from Somalia is the best Christmas gift possible.

Although I couldn't be at Fort Benning to join in the welcoming festivities, the entire Army family is proud of our soldiers' service. They went to Somalia, they did what we asked of them and now they're home safely.

But, we should not forget those soldiers still serving in places far from their loved ones. Today, we have more than 17,000 soldiers that are routinely stationed outside the continental United States.

Let us pray for their safe and speedy return home and for their families' strength during their absence.

Richard A. Kidd
Sergeant major of the Army

JCS chairman wishes safe, prosperous 1994

At this time of the year, it is appropriate to thank those responsible for guaranteeing America's security.

It is because of the armed forces that Americans are able to spend this and every holiday season free from worry over threats from potential adversaries.

This year, as in years past, we saw numerous occasions where our brave men and women — civilian and military, active and Reserve — made personal sacrifices in the name of freedom.

From operations in Somalia, in the skies over Bosnia, off the shore of Haiti, along the demilitarized zone in Korea, and in virtually every region in between, you stand ready and willing to serve. For that, our nation is truly grateful.

During this holiday season, let us acknowledge and thank those people in our lives who are most important to us — our families.

Throughout the year, they often bear the heavy burden of celebrating special occasions without us. Take the time to recognize their selfless contributions, dedications and sacrifice. Make the most of this season of faith and family.

The approach of the new year is also a time of reflection. It gives us an opportunity to examine our successes and failures. Look beyond the holiday festivities with a spirit of renewed optimism and seek the fulfillment of your every dream.

Mrs. Shalikashvili and I wish you a blessed holiday season — one filled with joy, happiness and tranquility. On behalf of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, have a safe, healthy and prosperous 1994.

John M. Shalikashvili
Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff

LETTERS

Benning resident says there's life after cable

As you can tell by my letter to the editor in The Bayonet, Nov. 24, I am quite upset with the cable company serving Fort Benning.

I did terminate my cable service; and, guess what, I am saving more than $450 a year. A few cents a day, as the cable companies advertisements tout, really adds up when you look at the big picture.

As the representative of the cable company said, the cable industry is in a "state of confusion." I personally refuse to take any part or pay for that confusion. He never answered the letters directly; he skirted the issues with rhetorical double talk and gave the Cablevision sales pitch. I saw right through it.

I assessed my family's viewing habits and found that my family is watching television about five hours a day. We mostly watch the local broadcast statiows. Why should I pay for something I can get for free with an antenna?

I purchased an antenna, and I receive those local broadcast channels very well and some channels I did not know even existed, especially a national all-news network similar to "Headline News."

A single investment for an antenna saves me more than $450 of my hard-earned money — money I can better invest on other things.

I honestly will miss some of the sports programming and the Discovery Channel, but sometimes you do have to make sacrifices. I will listen to the Braves' games on the radio and watch more PBS.

Besides the money I save, it seems like my teen-agers do not watch as much TV as they used to. They now spend more time on their homework and school projects —what a parent's and teacher's delight. My daughter does her piano and flute practices more readily, and the computer gets used more for school work and less game playing. Now, instead of my children watching one channel in the front room and the wife and I watching a different channel in the bedroom, we watch the same programs or we play board games like Scrabble, Monopoly and Scattergories. We talk and listen to our children more.

For my family, terminating the cablevision has been a win-win decision; I save more than $450 a year and our family life has improved. Who could ask for anything more?

If it was not for Cablevision gouging me for so much money, I may have never noticed that my family was missing what it was. Thank you Cablevision Industries; you are an unneeded and an unnecessary luxury.

If my family is average, think how many more average children of Fort Benning could possibly raise their grades and have more interaction with their parents if their parents, too, disconnected Cablevision.

Maybe, some children with behavioral disciplinary problems might have the problems discovered and have them corrected. The teachers would be ecstatic to have the students more receptive to learning and less likely to disrupt the class.

I personally challenge all Cablevision subscribers to do what I did. Evaluate your TV watching habits, and notice which channels you are actually watching. Are you watching primarily the things that you could get for free or are you being gouged by Cablevision, a company that only wants to make as much money as it can without regard to the fairness of its subscribers? If you are as unhappy as I am, tell Cablevision by terminating the cable service.

Being a senior noncommissioned officer, I have subordinates who get themselves into dire financial straits.

I get the letters of indebtedness and all the phone calls, too. One way I help them is to find ways of cutting expenses. If you are on the verge of financial difficulties, look around. Terminating Cablevision is a good cost-cutting measure. At Fort Benning, Cablevision is an unnecessary luxury most people could live without .

Trust me, there is life without Cablevision.

Master Sgt. Richard E. Rhodes

Program coordinator expresses gratitude

I would like to thank everyone who took their personal time to make the Boy Scouts' "Scouting for Food" a great success.

Without your help, we could not have met our goal for our community and Fort Benning.

Fort Benning District collected approximately 10,000 items. That's the best in more than five years.

I personally want to thank those who contributed even if (they contributed) only a single item. It helped to fill our food locker for those who really need it.

I just wish everyone who didn't give or who told a Scout I don't have anything in my home to give, but was smoking, or drinking a soda, would think about how much a six pack of soda or pack of cigarettes costs compared to a 59-cent can item. I am sure it would have hurt them really badly to give a can of soup.

I just hope those of you who made that excuse never need the help you said you didn't have time for and need of.

If you had items that were not picked up or would like to contribute food or other items, contact Army Community Service at Building 2630.

Again, I thank all who made it a great success.

13th CSB conveys Christmas message

Editor's note: Most of the 13th Corps Support Battalion returned to Fort Benning this weekend after a 122-day deployment to Somalia. This letter was written by the commander before departing Somalia.

As the soldiers of the 13th Corps Support Battalion prepare to come home for the Christmas holiday, it is easy to reflect on how fortunate we are as Americans.

The experience of living in a country as devastated as Somalia makes one realize that the fabric of any society, even our own, is the result of a delicate balance of social and religious values combined with a great deal of mutual trust, tolerance and cooperation.

It is always sobering to realize this as we return home to the magic way of life that is America. The people of Somalia are left behind to deal with problems so great that even those of us (who have lived here) find it hard to comprehend.

As the new year approaches, it is our hope and our prayer that all of you are happy and well, and that you will keep the home fires burning. May God bless all of you, and may God bless and preserve the United States of America.

Group addresses ITB soldiers

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Cadre of the 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Training Brigade, were presented some of the grim facts concerning driving under the influence of alcohol Dec. 9.

The special class, presented by Fort Benning's Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Program Office, included guest speaker Deena Johnson, president of the Columbus Chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Driving.

Johnson said her hope was to leave the soldiers with an understanding of the cost in human lives resulting from people's choices to drink and drive.

According to Johnson, nearly 18,000 people were killed in alcohol-related automobile accidents.

The term accident, when applied to alcohol-related deaths, is often a misnomer, she added.

"When you make the choice to drink and drive and someone is injured or killed, it is not an accident," Johnson said.

Johnson also told those in attendance not to assume falsely that alcohol-related death or injury won't occur to, or even be caused by, them.

"We all think it won't happen to us, but it can," Johnson said. "You can kill someone the first time you drink and drive ... or you can kill yourself."

Johnson's presentation also included the stories of children and teen-agers who were killed by drunk drivers.

Al Curry, ADAPCP education coordinator, told those in attendance that soldiers in today's Army need to be particularly careful about the career consequences of drinking excessively or driving under the influence.

> "When you make the choice to drink and drive and someone is injured or killed, it is not an accident."
>
> — Deena Johnson
> Mothers Against Drunk Driving

"With the downsizing, the Army is looking for smaller and smaller discriminators to determine who stays in," Curry said. "There are many NCOs who wouldn't be here today if the standards of today had been applied when they first entered the service.

"I hope each of you take a look at your lifestyle," he said. "The career consequences can be devastating as well as the human cost to some of our choices."

Rangers lead the way with gratitude

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

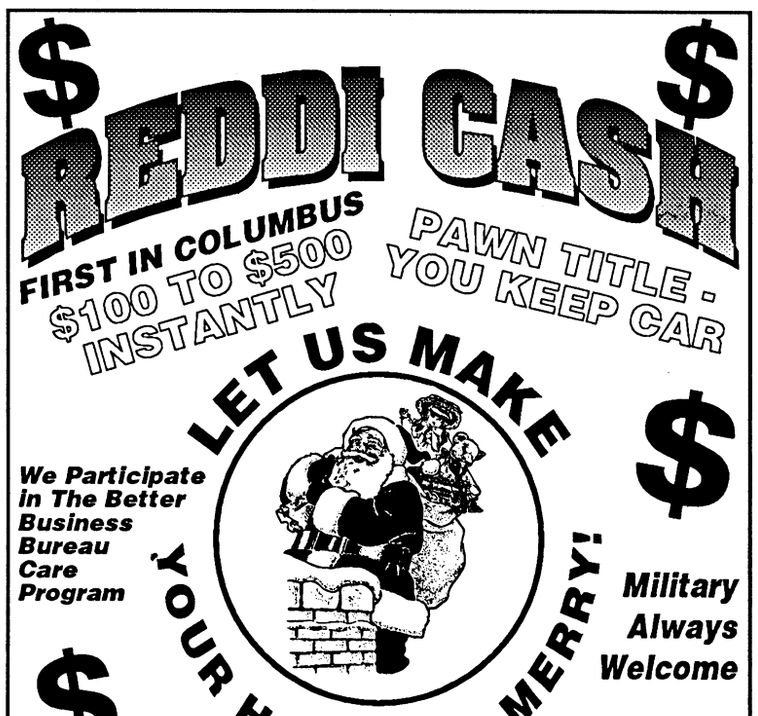
Rangers of the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, took time out Friday to thank personnel across the post for the support they gave the battalion following events in Somalia.

Six rangers from the battalion were killed and others wounded in early October during a combat operation in Somalia.

Col. James T. Jackson, commander of the 75th Ranger Regiment, traveled across post visiting many agencies and presenting certificates of achievement.

Recipients included the American Red Cross, Martin Army Community Hospital, Protocol , the Public Affairs Office, the Commissary, the Directorate of Logistics and its Transportation Division, the Adjutant General's Office and its Casualty Office, the Directorate of Community Activities, the Garrison Commander, the Directorate of Operations and Training and the Emergency Operations Center.

Present at the Commissary to receive recognition were area companies' representatives who donated items for care packages provided to single soldiers who served in Somalia.



Ranger wife, Melissa Helmick, headed the effort to make up the care packages. She contacted Commissary officials who coordinated with companies like Buffalo Rock Pepsi, Edge and Colgate-Palmolive to make donations to the packages.

"There was no hesitation to donate," said Helmick of the companies. "I'm really grateful for their generosity."

The Red Cross also received recognition Friday. They provided assistance to the rangers in areas like financial assistance and communication with family members. Their main effort, however, was providing volunteers at the hospital to man the reception area after wounded rangers were brought to Martin Army Community Hospital.

Linda Scorgie, station manager for the Fort Benning office of the American Red Cross, said their ability to provide support to the rangers was a result of the efforts by Red Cross volunteers.

"The staff would not have any successes if we did not have volunteers," she said.

PEOPLE

Students find education in Gingerbread

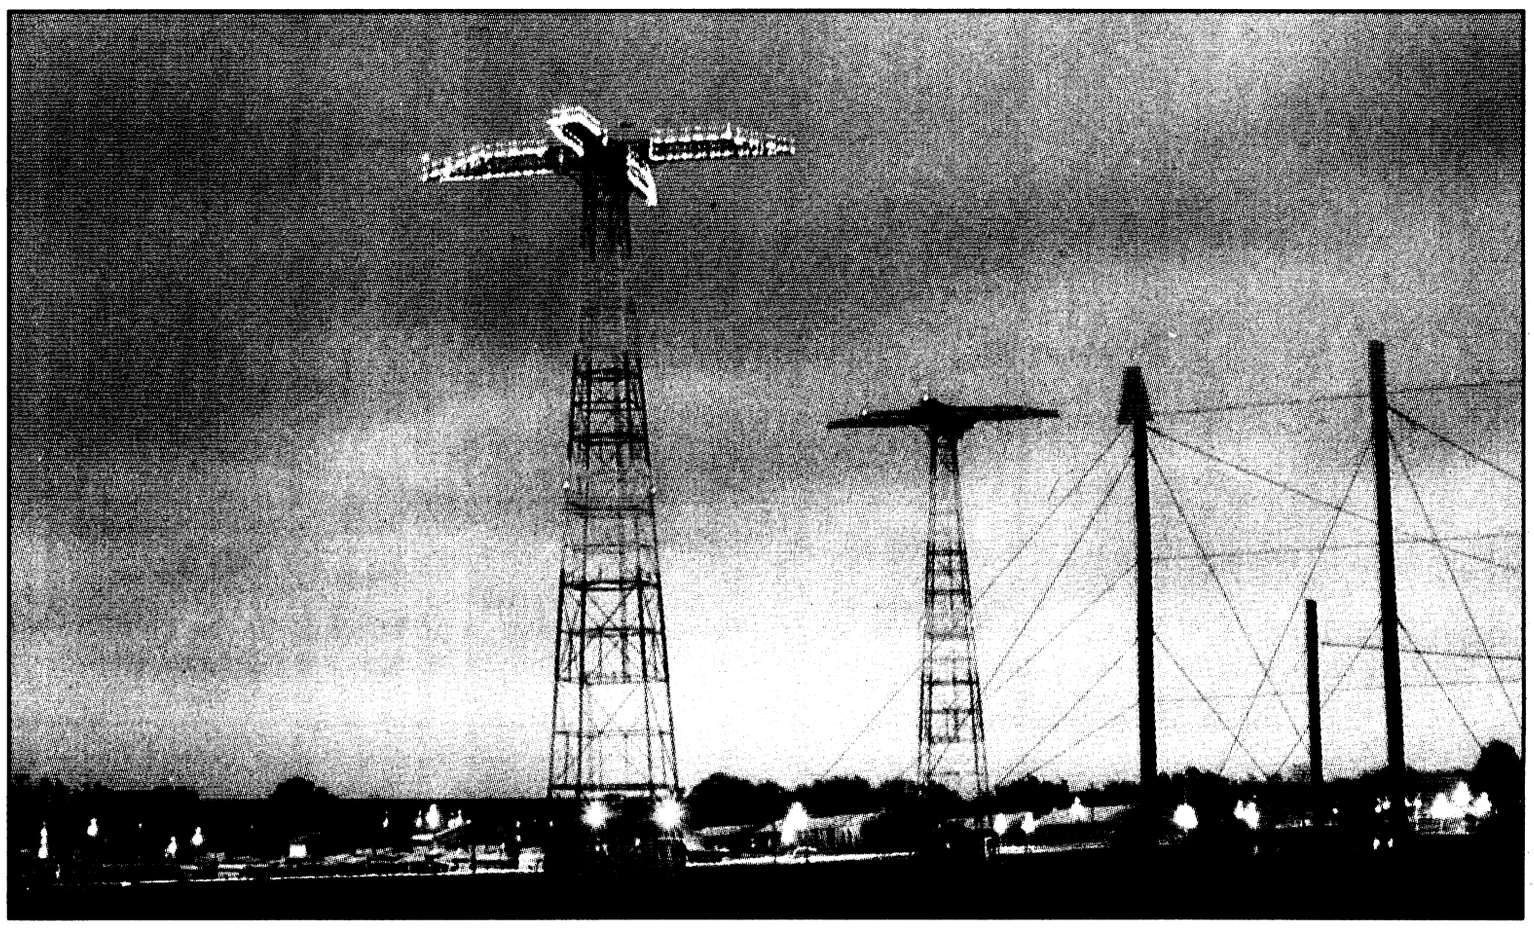
By Jerrie MacIntire
Special to The Bayonet©

To some people, gingerbread is a tasty treat best enjoyed in the chilly months of winter. Not so with teacher Laura Silver, who uses gingerbread for teaching such a variety of skills the youngsters hardly realize they're working instead of playing.

This Stowers School teacher has incorporated gingerbread houses into the third-grade community curriculum as a holiday treat and a way of bringing all subjects together into one project.

Measuring ingredients helped sharpen math skills and reinforced fractions in a practical way, Silver said. Working in groups to mix and bake the bread enabled children to hone social skills and also contributed to a spirit of cooperation.

The youngsters realized the study of science as the sticky dough was transformed into a spicy bread via an oven.



Children sharpened their reading and sequencing skills as they planned the necessary phases for a successful project.

Social studies, which included a unit on the homes of the Plains Indians, inspired the children to choose small wheat squares as a roof thatching for their gingerbread houses.

A rich, spicy aroma filled the air on decorating day as the children "glued" hard candies and colorful sugar confections onto their creations using fudge icing. Vanilla icing offered a contrast for window panes and other details.

As parent helpers encouraged these confectionery artists, the children's excitement for their project mounted.

"I can't wait to take this home and eat it," said one child, as a parent volunteer across the room responded, "I can't wait for these to come home so I can put it up (for display)."

YOUNG AUTHORS

New books 'hit the stands'

By Jerrie MacIntire

From mysteries to fantasies, books by Faith middle schoolers ran the gamut of prose as these young authors perused the final products before presenting them to first- and second-grade buddies.

After two weeks of intense writing, editing and illustrating, Faith students gave their creative works to the excited youngsters from Dexter School at a book presentation party at the middle school Dec. 14.

These books, designed to bolster self-esteem in the younger children while providing writing experience for Faith students, reflected the strong literature-based program prominent in the Fort Benning schools.

"We have a double period for our literature-based program," said Anne Trawick, a teacher at Faith. "That shows how much importance we attach to the process of communication."

Faith students interviewed their younger buddies; then they built a story reflecting their individual interests, Trawick said.

The slim volumes were bound and illustrated with a variety of winter subjects including sleds, snowmen and Santas. Some young authors added creative twists, such as a boldly striped zebra — not a reindeer — blushing with embarrassment over a mistake. The writing also reflected the individual tastes of the main characters, as is evident in a sentence from one of the books: "Heather sat down and ate the yummy broccoli."

Faith students worked hard to personalize the story while developing the story plot, Trawick said.

The youngsters love the gifts of literature and can't wait to show them to their families, said Cynthia Works, a first-grade teacher. "They think this is totally cool," she said, as children read through their books with help from the authors.

"Their parents are going to love this, too," she said.

Trawick said her students felt a sense of accomplishment upon finishing the books, but they also experienced a brief reluctance to part with their work.

As Fort Benning students break for winter holidays, Trawick said she believes the youngsters who received these gifts will have a new and personalized reading challenge to help pass the time.

AAFES improves service for disabled patrons

Army News Service

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Creme rinse on the bottom shelves, shampoo on the top — no problem? Then try reaching the shampoo from a wheelchair.

Holding a shopping basket with one hand and reaching for a product with another — again no problem, unless you need one or both of those hands for a cane, crutches or a walker.

Exchange shopping is getting easier for disabled patrons. The Army and Air Force Exchange Service is adding escorts and wheelchairs at U.S. main exchanges and at selected overseas locations.

The service is part of a new "Customer With Disability Program" geared to improve safety and convenience for disabled shoppers, said AAFES officials.

According to Army and Air Force regulations, customers with disabilities are authorized a person of their choice to accompany them while they shop in exchanges.

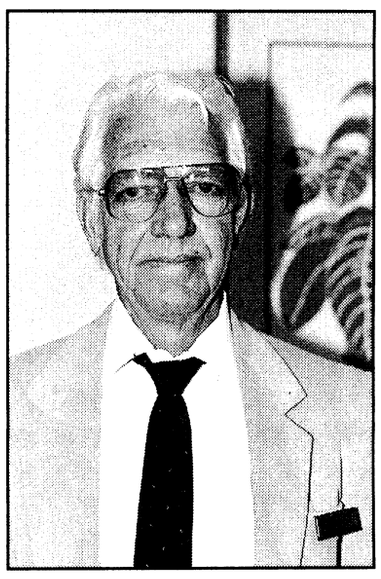
"If the customer's choice is not an authorized patron, the companion must be issued a letter of authorization by the installation commander," said Don Smith, AAFES marketing director.

"Customers with disabilities may also bring their service animals."

For more information on this and other customer service programs, contact the Army and Air Force Exchange office at 682-0826.

New manager pledges quality

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©



The new general manager of Fort Benning's Officers' Club said providing quality service and products is his pledge.

Dave Yates, who took over management of the facility Nov. 18, said the Officers' Club guarantees everything it does.

"If it's not right, we'll work hard to make it right," he said.

Yates said he hopes to bring about improvements that will attract current and potential members to take advantage of what the club has to offer.

"You have to present them with a quality product to accomplish this," he said. "The product has to be very good. If it's not, why should they come?"

Yates

A daily Chinese lunch buffet at Club 22-100 and new menu items at the Officers' Club will be two changes patrons will see after the rush of the holiday season, Yates said.

While serving on active duty in the Army from 1961 to 1984, Yates was sergeant major in charge of clubs worldwide.

After retiring from active duty, his positions included general manager of the Fort Benning Officers' Club until 1985; club and basic officers' quarters director in Gulfport, Miss., until 1989; and deputy director of Morale, Welfare and Recreation at a navy base in Adak, Alaska, until November 1992.

"It's good to be back in Columbus," Yates said. "I enjoy it here. It's kind of home territory for me."

Giving now can save money later

Georgia Society of CPAs

It's not too late to make a contribution to your favorite charity and qualify for a tax deduction on your 1993 tax return, points out the Georgia Society of Certified Public Accountants.

The amount and nature of your gift, as well as your income level and amount of itemized deductions, determines the tax benefit of your generosity.

Qualified organizations

Before making any charitable contributions, be sure the recipient meets Internal Revenue Service standards.

Generally, organizations operating solely for charitable, religious, educational, literary or scientific purposes —such as nonprofit hospitals, churches, synagogues and nonprofit medical research organizations — fit the bill.

Contributions made directly for the benefit of a particular individual are not deductible.

Gifts of cash

You should be able to substantiate gifts of cash with receipts and canceled checks. In most cases, you can deduct the full amount of your cash contribution.

However, contributions of cash and property (excluding appreciated property) to most charitable organizations may not exceed 50 percent of your adjusted gross income.

For certain types of charities, such as private nonoperating foundations and fraternal organizations, the limit is 30 percent of your adjusted gross income.

You may, however, carry over charitable contributions in excess of this amount to the next five tax years.

Gifts of property

Your deduction for a gift of property, such as used clothing and furniture, is limited to the fair market value of the property at the time of your contribution. This amount is generally far less than what you originally paid for the item.

When the value of the property you donate totals more than $500, you must file Form 8283, Noncash Charitable Contributions.

On this form, you indicate what and when you contributed, to whom you contributed, when and how you acquired the property, your cost or adjusted basis and the method used to value property.

If you are donating a single item or group of items valued at more than $5,000 ($10,000 for non-publicly traded stock), you must have an appraisal performed to determine the value of the property.

Gifts of appreciated property are generally limited to 30 percent of your adjusted gross income.

However, if the gift would result in a long-term capital gain had it been sold and the gift is to a private nonoperating foundation or fraternal organization, the limit is 20 percent of your adjusted gross income.

When you donate appreciated property, such as stocks and bonds, you can take a tax deduction for the full market value of the property at the time of the gift, provided you have held onto the property for more than one year.

What's more, you need not pay tax on the gain that has built up since you bought the securities. For stock or other capital assets that you have held for less than a year, your deduction is limited to your cost.

Overall limitation on charitable gifts

Charitable contributions are considered itemized deductions, which are subject to certain phase-out rules. For 1993, itemized deductions must be reduced by 3 percent of the amount by which your adjusted gross income exceeds $108,450 ($54,225 for married individuals filing separately).

In no event, however, can your itemized deductions be reduced by more than 80 percent, excluding medical expenses, investment interest expenses, casualty and theft deductions and gambling losses.

Post-1993 contributions

Be aware that the new tax law left most of the rules affecting charitable contributions intact, so you will not face greater limitations on tax-deductible contributions. However, the Georgia Society of CPAs points out that the new law has more stringent requirements for substantiating donations.

For example, beginning next year, taxpayers may not rely solely on a canceled check to substantiate charitable donations of $250 or more.

Instead, you will need a receipt or other written substantiation from the charity each time you make a contribution of this amount.

Taxes

Time running out for last-minute deductions

By Bryon Elson
King Features Syndicate

Before planning any tax strategy, estimate your taxable income for 1993.

Taxable income is the amount of income remaining after you claim all adjustments, itemized or standard deductions and personal exemptions.

Your taxable income determines the rate at which you will be taxed.

Under President Bill Clinton's economic plan, higher taxes are inevitable, especially if you earn a high income. Single individuals with taxable incomes above $115,000 and married couples with taxable incomes over $140,000 are subject to a new, higher tax rate of 36 percent.

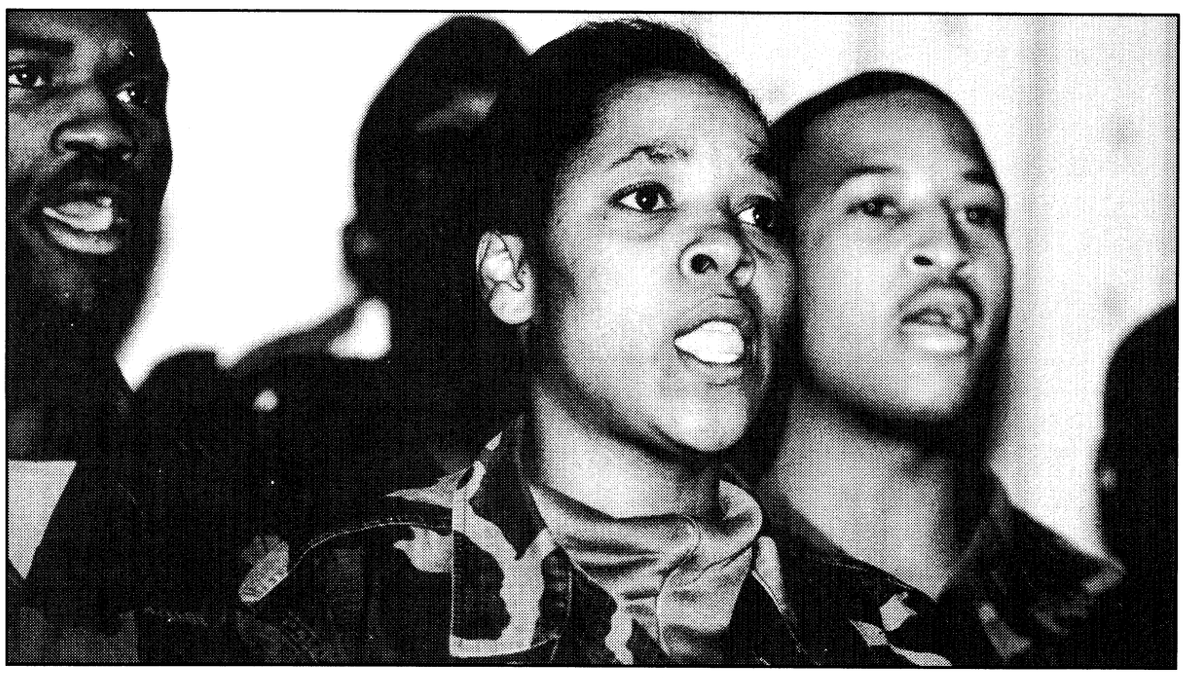
What is more, Clinton has also recommended a 10 percent surtax on taxable income over $250,000, raising the top tax rate to 39.6 percent.

Keep a comprehensive list of your tax-deductible expenses, updating it monthly.

Do not overlook expenses such as charitable contributions, subscriptions to business-related publications, job-hunting costs and medical expenses, including the cost of prescription drugs and insurance premiums.

The value of some of your deductions is tied to your income.

Medical expense deductions are also tied to your adjusted gross income: They are deductible only to the extent that they exceed 7.5 percent of your adjusted gross income.



If you are close to the thresholds, you may want to accelerate as many deductible expenses as you can into 1993.

One way to minimize your tax bill and maximize your earnings is to invest in company-sponsored 401(k) plans, or if self-employed, in Keoghs.

These plans enable you to save pretax dollars for your retirement. Your contributions reduce your gross income and the interest earned is tax-deferred.

Infantry chorus hits right notes

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Karen S. Morarie

Chorus members rehearse for holiday performances.

The closest most soldiers get to singing is chanting various verses with a "left, right, left" refrain. Some on Fort Benning, however, have a range much greater than that.

The Infantry Chorus is a group of about 25 all-volunteer singing soldiers from the ranks of private 2 through sergeant first class. The group is led by Sgt. Marcus B. Carter, the director, 1st Lt. Lorraine Farrell, the officer in charge, Sgt. 1st Class John Coles, non-commissioned officer in charge, and Staff Sgt. Kambra Allen, assistant NCOIC.

At a recent rehearsal that included some Christmas carols, Carter coached the singers through their a capella harmonies until they reached the sound he was listening for.

On a line ending with "is born," Carter told the singers, "Remember, 'i' is one word. The 'z' sound goes with born, so it's 'iiii ... zzzborn.' Otherwise it sounds like you're gasping between the words."

The chorus rehearses regularly Tuesday and Thursday afternoons. According to Spc. Kevin McKie, who sings solo parts in various songs, rehearsal is demanding since most of the songs are performed without accompaniment.

"You not only have to know your own part, you have to listen to other people's parts so you can blend with them," McKie said.

McKie said he would like to see more women in the chorus to add to the range of music the group can perform.

"We're looking for people who want to sing," he said, "who have a natural ability to carry a tune and are willing to put the time in."

McKie said the toughest part of performing with the chorus is making time for it, between his regular job at the Transition Center in Soldiers' Plaza and trying to spend time with his wife, Anita.

It's worth it to him, he said, because he loves the music.

Carter agreed. "I wouldn't be doing this if I wasn't addicted to music," the director said.

Carter and McKie both said they'd like to see the chorus expand its performance schedule.

"I'd like to see us give more performances outside of the Fort Benning and Columbus area," Carter said.

McKie echoed that. "I'd like us to go places we've never been," he said. "I'd like us to be known around the world. We have the talent and the ability, and I'd like to see great things happen for the chorus."

"We get a lot of command support," Carter said, "but I'd love it if we were a unit, like the band is. If our singers could have 12- or 18-month special duty tours with the chorus, we'd have more flexibility, and we could look at trying some new things. I'd like to see us go as far as we can."

Watch candy consumption

U.S. Army Dental Corps

Traditionally, the holidays are a busy time. The days are filled with shopping, baking and celebration. Unfortunately, they are also often filled with stress and overeating.

Here are a few ways you can take care of your dental health this holiday season.

Because continual stress decreases your body's natural resistance, it can lead to increased gum infection and tooth decay. To counter the effects of holiday stress, take a few extra minutes each day to thoroughly brush and floss — no shortcuts.

If you indulge in sweets, watch not only what you eat, but also how often you eat.

Frequency of exposure is a major factor in the dental decay process. Each time your teeth are exposed to a sugary substance, acid is produced for 20 to 30 minutes. That means that if you eat three hard candies in 10 minutes, your teeth will be exposed to acid for about 30 minutes.

But if you eat those same candies 10 minutes apart, your teeth will be exposed to acid for about 60 minutes.

Soldier devotes time, effort to 'mission'

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet

As rangers on Fort Benning train and mentally prepare themselves for challenges, they share the same goal of being the best they can be.

Working toward this goal has been a 19-year job for Master Sgt. Mark Wafler, the civil affairs noncommissioned officer for the Ranger Training Brigade.

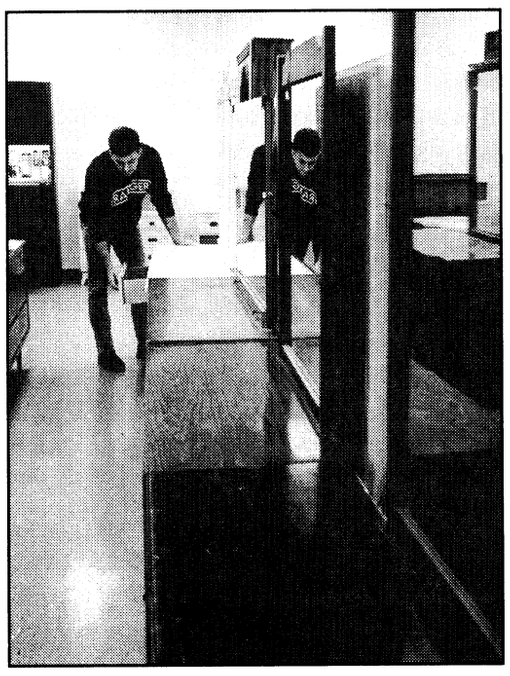
With a clear, steady gaze and physical conditioning, Wafler is every inch the soldier and ranger the Army has molded him to be. Whether working with men or military equipment, he said the mission of the Army is of paramount importance to him. But, there's another mission. It's in another army.

This other army in Wafler's life doesn't have camouflaged uniforms, doesn't march in step and doesn't teach hand-to-hand combat.

However, it does have a mission.

This other army is comprised of dedicated individuals who provide help to others through the Valley Rescue Mission.

"Working with the Valley Rescue Mission is like being a soldier," he said of the mission located near Bibb City. "I believe I'm doing something that means something."



The mission's chapel is marked by a plain cross atop a white steeple, which has surveyed this bit of Columbus for 30 years. This organization seeks to serve meals to the hungry, provide housing to the homeless and to develop spirituality in those who find themselves living on the fringes of society, Wafler explained.

"In life, you have doers and talkers. I want to be a doer," said Wafler as he summarized his work with the mission's board of directors.

"This mission deals with those problems people say 'someone should do something about.' We are doing something," Wafler said.

The mission provides help to hurting and homeless people in several ways; one way is by providing housing. Some 80 current tenants look upon the mission as a haven of security in an uncertain world, according to Philip Tisdale, executive director.

Modern dormitories and a row of small aging wooden frame houses provide homes for men, women and children. Some units need repair or renovation, but funding is a problem.

Jerrie Macintire/Special to The Bayonet

Master Sgt. Mark Wafler looks over furniture at the Valley Rescue Mission Warehouse. The furniture is sold to raise money.

"We do not receive support from any federal, state, county or city organization," Tisdale said. "Private donations are the only means of support."

Many individuals housed at the mission are in transition; this is a stopover for those waiting to get back on their feet, Wafler said.

Others are transients just passing through the area or are individuals who have chronic problems, such as drug or alcohol addictions, Wafler said.

Wafler believes these addictions are symptoms of a deeper spiritual crisis and the underlying problem should be addressed along with appropriate rehabilitations.

"We are helping to fix the problem at the root, not just the symptoms," he said as he discussed the mission's goal of teaching individuals about Jesus Christ.

The mission fills a spiritual void through regular chapel services and teaches life and job skills, Wafler said.

For example, tenants learn furniture upholstering while re-covering donated pieces sold in the thrift shop or given to needy families. They also repair donated appliances and learn business skills, he said.

The mission's farm in Hamilton, Ga., provides a setting away from the distractions of the city for individuals to learn agriculture skills, undergo drug and alcohol rehabilitation and reassess their lives.

Wafler's first contact with the mission occurred at the farm while he was learning to counsel individuals with drug and alcohol problems.

"My pastor asked me to lead some classes," he said. He began moderating groups using a 12-step spiritually based program, and he was "amazed to see the results as tough individuals were transformed into something different.

"I saw this as a way of being able to help," he said.

Wafler recalled one Vietnam veteran who had joined a motorcycle gang following his discharge from the Marine Corps. Through a series of events, this troubled veteran "ended up at the farm" and, within four months, "had turned his life around," Wafler said. This former soldier returned to his home where he "talked about his transformation and what happened when the Lord took charge of his life," Wafler said. The following day in church, 15 members of the motorcycle gang dedicated their lives to God.

This ripple effect of working with the mission gives Wafler and other volunteers great satisfaction, he said.

Wafler hopes each individual he counsels will learn to reassess his or her life the way this veteran did. Though there have been many successes, volunteers still experience sadness and frustration when they think of those they could not help, Wafler said.

Wafler wants to help others find a sense of purpose as he has done.

"I want to serve God's purpose," he said. He believes he is serving that purpose as he strives "to be on the fixing end of things," he said.

Wafler reflects his ranger training to "lead by example" as he remains on the "fixing end" by helping people, one at a time.

Pattern of misconduct may add up to discharge

US Army Trial Defense Service

Chapter 14, Army Regulation 635-200, authorizes the discharge of a soldier who has:

• A history of minor disciplinary infractions;

• Demonstrated a pattern of misconduct; or

• Committed a serious act of misconduct.

A soldier who has a history of minor disciplinary infractions or has demonstrated a pattern of misconduct can be administratively discharged according to AR 635-200, Chapter 14-12(a) or (b).

These acts must be documented, usually by Article 15s or counseling statements, and the soldier must be counseled in writing at least once before separation action begins. The counseling must include:

• The reason for the counseling.

• That separation action may be initiated if the behavior continues.

• The type of discharge that could result from the possible separation action and the effect of this type of discharge.

This counseling must appear in the separation packet and must contain those items stated above. The counseling is required to place the soldier on notice that minor infractions could lead to involuntary separation.

If there is additional misconduct after a separation action is initiated, both the new and old information can be used as the basis for the separation action.

Probably the most widely used provision of Chapter 14 is that which allows the command to administratively separate a soldier for a serious act of misconduct (AR 635-200, Chapter 14-12(c)). A serious act of misconduct is any offense punishable by a punitive discharge (bad conduct or dishonorable) under the Manual for Courts-Martial.

Keep in mind that it isn't necessary for the soldier to actually receive any punishment to be separated under this paragraph, only that a punitive discharge be authorized under the manual as part of the maximum punishment for that offense.

The special counseling required for a separation action for minor disciplinary infractions is not required for a separation action for serious misconduct.

This is based on the theory that a soldier should not have to be counseled to not commit a serious offense. All drug offenses are serious misconduct under Chapter 14.

Because a urinalysis test is evidence of drug use, a single positive urinalysis can be the basis for administrative discharge.

Because of the special emphasis on ending drug use in the Army, there are certain situations in which soldiers must be processed for elimination. If a soldier in the grade of sergeant or above has abused illegal drugs (which can be proved by a positive urinalysis), the commander must process the soldier for separation under this paragraph.

This includes first-time offenders. If a soldier who tests positive for drug use is below the rank of sergeant, it is within the discretion of the chain of command whether the soldier is processed for elimination.

However, second-time offenders below the grade must also be processed for separation under this paragraph. Being processed for separation does not mean that the soldier will be separated.

Being processed for separation means only that separation action must be initiated and the separation packet must be processed until a higher commander either convenes a board, approves the chapter packet or decides to retain the soldier.

Soldiers convicted by a civilian court can be separated on the basis of that conviction. The rules are rather complex, and are not discussed in this article.

Just remember, if you are convicted of a civil offense, depending on the offense or the sentence you receive, you can be involuntarily separated.

Conviction of a single, minor traffic offense does not qualify. However, a conviction for shoplifting or a domestic assault could form the basis for a separation action. The conviction can be from either a U.S. or a foreign court.

All discharges under Chapter 14 can result in an other than honorable discharge, the most severe that can be given administratively.

If you have a legal question, get your advice only from a lawyer. If your question is about military justice or an administrative elimination, call Trial Defense Service at 545-1520.

ASK THE JUDGE

Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: For Christmas, I put a videocassette recorder on layaway at a local store. I was supposed to have paid the balance and picked up the VCR Monday. Unfortunately, I did not have the money and could not make it to the store until later.

When I tried to pay for the layaway, the store told me I was out of luck because they had already sold the VCR to another customer. I was furious and demanded my money back. The store informed me that since I failed to pay, part of the money that I had already paid would not be refunded. I told them I wanted all my money back or the VCR. Who is right here?

A: Layaways can be a problem for many consumers because they do not realize that a layaway is not a purchase. When you place something on layaway, you make payments toward the total price of the goods in advance and only receive the goods when the total price is paid. Therefore, a layaway is similar to a deposit to hold the merchandise.

Abuses can arise when the customer stops making payments and desires a refund, or when he or she pays in full but does not receive the goods selected or is required to pay a higher price.

There is no federal or Georgia law that specifically regulates layaways. As long as the store does not use unfair or deceptive sales practices, as defined by federal law, the store is free to make its own rules with respect to layaways.

The customer is required to follow any reasonable rules that the store has with respect to layaways. In this case, the store's policy was to keep some of your money if you did not pay off the layaway on time. This may not seem fair, but it is legal.

In order to protect yourself, you must make sure that you know and understand all the store's rules on layaways. Request a copy of the rules.

If the store does not have anything in print, have a store employee write something down on your receipt. In addition, have the salesperson sign it.

The store is obligated to hold the specific goods or an exact duplicate chosen by the customer. When full payment has been made, goods identical to those set aside must be delivered, at the price originally agreed upon, to the customer.

As a further precaution, make sure you know the store's refund policy. Keep good records of the description of the merchandise and of all your payments.

Remember, the store owns the merchandise until it is paid for in full.

For more information, call the Legal Assistance Office at 545-3281 or 545-3282.

DR. FIT

U.S. Army Physical Fitness School

Q: I've been told that doing push-ups on your knees causes patella (knee cap) tendinitis.

A: No, this is false. In most cases, this problem is associated with improper running style or poor running biomechanics.

During a push-up improvement session, the Fitness School encourages the soldier to perform as many regular push-ups as possible, then drop to the knees and do a few more.

For example, if the maximum push-up score for your age group is 58 and you can do only 52, then drop to the knees and perform at least six to eight more repetitions. Gradually, the chest and upper arm muscles will get stronger and you will perform 53, 54, 56 and so on.

Q: My wife and I are fitness participants. Do you have any suggestions for a Christmas gift?

A: Here are some suggestions: Buy glow-in-the-dark fitness apparel, rubber-hand strengtheners for the racket-sport participant, wraparound sunglasses, back support for the lumbar area of the back or a gift certificate from a fitness store.

Such a deal: Don't get 'clubbed' by book, movie offers

Better Business Bureau

Has an advertisement for a great deal on books, music or video entertainment caught your eye?

There are many "clubs" that offer books, records, cassettes, compact discs and video cassettes at discount prices with the added convenience of ordering from your own home.

However, the Better Business Bureau warns that comparison shopping may prove these offers are not the best deals in town.

To attract readers or listeners to sign up for membership, the clubs initially offer special introductory deals — for example, 10 compact discs for 1 cent or five hard cover best sellers for $1.

Before you sign on the dotted line, the Better Business Bureau recommends that you compare all of the advantages and disadvantages of such clubs' offerings.

The primary advantage to joining one of these clubs is the convenience of ordering merchandise without leaving home. In addition, some specialty clubs may provide selections not available through most stores.

While those introductory offers may sound great, you might end up buying a number of unwanted items, too. In exchange for the original discount, consumers usually must agree to purchase a minimum amount of the product over a period of time.

Most clubs use what is known as the "negative option" plan. Under this arrangement, a club will notify you that it intends to send a book or CD in a few days, unless it hears otherwise from you. If you fail to cancel the order, the item will be sent; and, you will have to pay for it.

Under Federal Trade Commission regulations, consumers do have safeguards against possible abuses of the negative option plan. Clubs using the plan in promotional literature must: disclose in their literature the terms of the plan, notify the consumer of selected merchandise and enclose a form to use for declining the purchase, allow at least 10 days for the consumer to respond and guarantee to pay return postage and provide full credit for unordered books.

These clubs provide a service to many readers, listeners and viewers. But, the BBB advises you, before joining, to compare the long-term savings and convenience of membership with the cost of similar purchases made at local stores.

Improve diet one day at a time

General Mills

Perhaps you know the "no-more-chocolate" diet that was supposed to begin yesterday. Or the "starting-next-Monday" vow to end constant snacking. There's a better way to begin eating more healthfully, said Karen Wilder, a registered dietitian.

There are seven ideas you might want to make part of your plan for better eating:

• Shop smart — Focus on fresh fruits and vegetables as well as low-fat dairy products, lean cuts of meat, skinless chicken and fish. Other good choices are pastas and cereals.

• Break the fast — Start each day with a healthful breakfast. It will help keep you from ravenous splurging at lunchtime.

• Control portions — Target higher fat items, such as meat and certain condiments. Limit meat portions to 3 ounces or about the size of a deck of cards.

• Make snacks count — Plan ahead for snacks, choosing tasty low-fat ones, such as pretzels, frozen yogurt and animal crackers.

• Cook for health — Grill, broil or bake rather than frying. Steam or poach instead of sauteing.

• Take time to eat — Allow time to enjoy what you eat. It's easy to forget you ate when calories come from munching on the move.

Changing just one habit a day can make it easier to revamp your overall way of eating, Wilder said.

Officers graduate from SOA command course

By Pedro Constante
School of the Americas

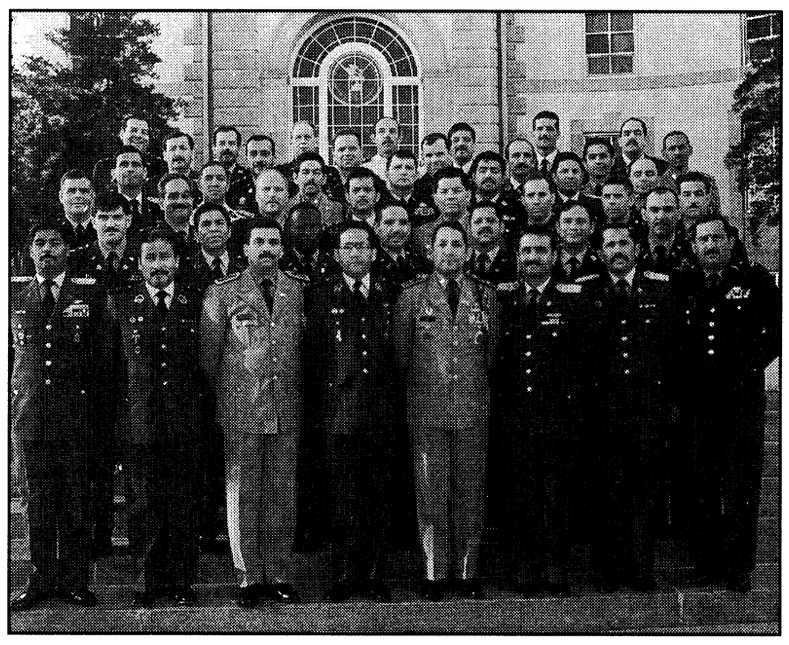
Forty-three officers from 16 Latin American countries and the United States graduated Friday from the School of the Americas' Command and General Staff Course.

After 47 weeks of education and training, officers of all services will return to their countries and be able to command battalions, brigades and equivalent-sized units in peace or war.

The CGSC provides knowledge and skills via the core curriculum and develops student intellectual depth and analytical ability.

This course is SOA's ambassador to Latin America for being the course of the highest level, said Col. Fransico Gil, course director.

The CGSC is a course that sells the image of what SOA really is, and we are helping to form the future leaders of the armed forces in Latin America, he said.



The course has been accredited by the Department of the Army as equivalent to the U.S. Army Command and General Staff College course offered at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

The Command and General Staff Course curriculum combines the doctrine and principles of combat-service support functions. The course also includes an orientation tour of the United States during which the students visit major military installations, service schools and Washington, D.C.

The CGSC objectives are general subjects, officer preparation, integrated course, management, strategic studies, military history, joint operations and planning and a mandatory human rights awareness training.

Prerequisites for this course include the student being a commissioned officer, major and above, with credit for a branch officer advanced course or equivalent. A university or academy graduate is preferred.

Basketball season to take a 'fast break'

NCOA Professionals pull out a 44-40 win

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

With the Christmas holidays just days away, the basketball season will take a hiatus.

The combined league closed out the first half of the season with three games Thursday night at Audie Murphy Fitness Center.

The Professionals of the Noncomissioned Officers Academy pulled out a 44-40 win from the 4th Ranger Training Battalion in game one of the evening.

Robert Jackson scored a game-high 19 points to lead the Professionals. Julius Young added nine points, and Vincent Hawkins tallied five for the Professionals.

Down by one at the half 21-20, 4th RTB built a 10-point lead behind the hot shooting of Lawrence Gooden who finished with a team-high 18 points, 12 coming from four three-point shots.

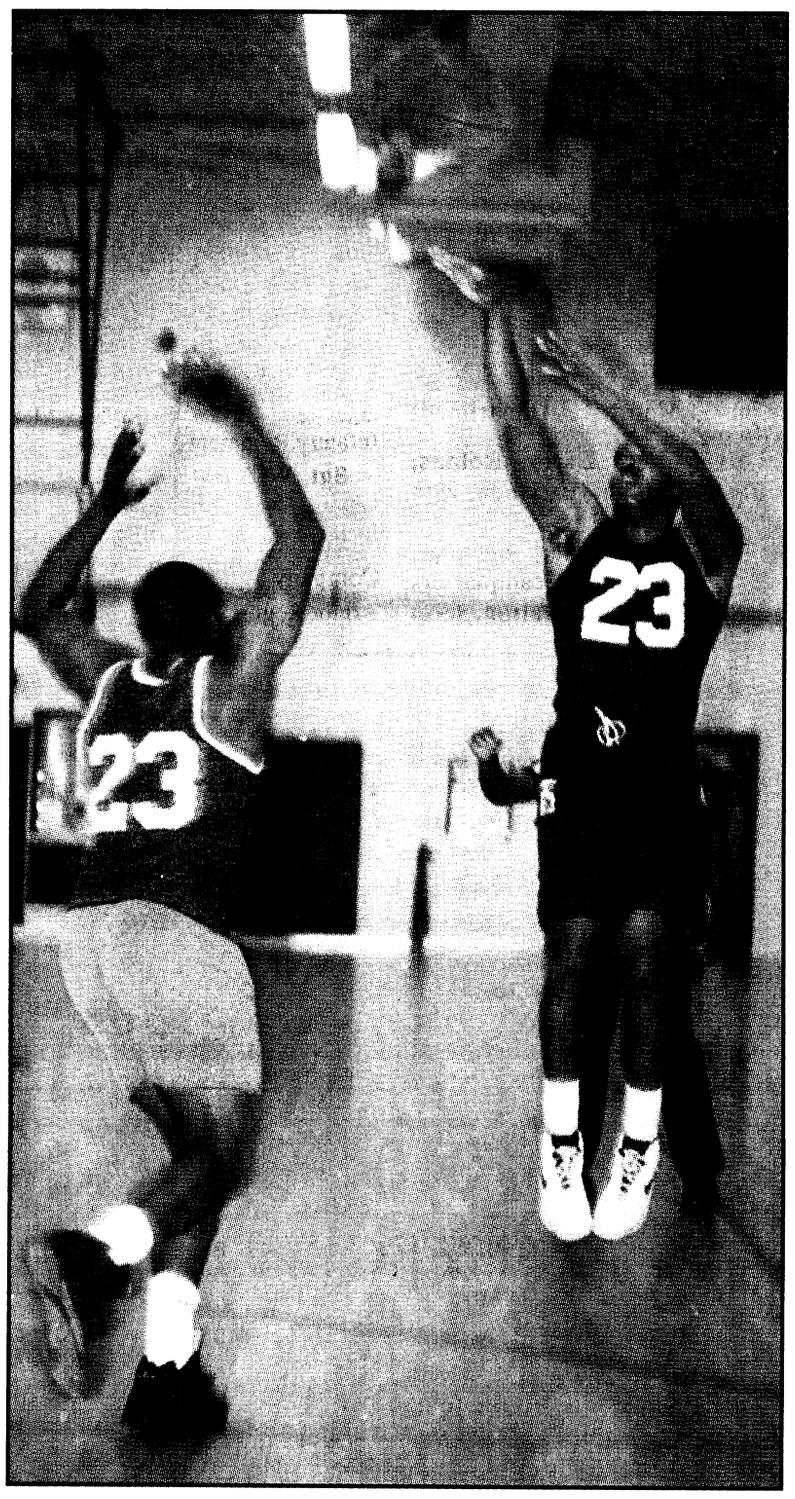
The Professionals tied the game at 37-37 with less than three minutes to play. Then, they took the lead for good at 40-37 on a three-point shot from Jackson. Moments later, Young hit a 10-foot jumper to give the Professionals a five-point advantage at 42-37.

A three-point shot from Gooden cut the lead to 42-40 with less than a minute to play.

A steal by Paul Horton of the Professionals and an intentional foul on 4th RTB put Horton on the free-throw line for two shots. Horton sank 4th RTB when he hit nothing but net on both free throws.

In game two, the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit Sharpshooters shot down the 75th Ranger Regiment 42-33.

The Sharpshooters went on a 9-0 run to start the game. Almost nine minutes later, the Rangers put their first points of the game on the board. The Sharpshooters, led by Burrguss Burrell's 12 points and Anthony Wallace with 10, opened up a 20-6 halftime lead and led by as many as 17 early in the second half.



The never-say-die Rangers cut the lead down to nine, on Vincent Grove's 11 points and teammate Eric Hernandez's 9, all of which came on three-point shots late in the game. However, time ran out on the Rangers before they could do anymore damage.

In the final contest of the evening, the U.S. Army Medical Department Activity outgunned the Military Police Activity 53-49.

Devon Mallard scored a team high 18 points, with teammate Joe Bradley tossing in 11 points and center Mark Keough tipping in 10 for MEDDAC.

MEDDAC controlled the game at the break, up 26-19. Then, the team held off MPA and Kevin Anderson's game high 22 points, 15 of which came in the second half. Orlando Edwards and Charlie Lewis backed up Anderson with six points each.

The second half of the season will continue Jan. 4.

Winter months can provide fishing action

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

The cooler winter months can provide excellent fishing action for big bass and catching them may not be as difficult as you think.

All you have to do is consider the need and wants of the fish — cover and food.

"I believe the most important ingredient is extremely thick, heavy cover," said bass tournament angler and former guide David Wharton. "In my experiences, deep water is not as important as we may have previously thought."

Wharton, who has caught a number of bass weighing more than 10 pounds, spent many years guiding on Sam Rayburn Reservoir in Texas, one of the premier trophy bass lakes in the United States. Although the impoundment has deep water, virtually all big bass there are caught in or around the edges of the lake's shallow hydrilla beds.

"Having close access to deeper water certainly doesn't hurt," said Wharton, "but in my opinion, having thick cover and then a readily available food supply are more important.

"The food has to be the proper food, too. Big bass eat bream and crawfish, while the smaller bass feed more on shad.

Not only is this true on Rayburn, said the pro, but on all lakes that consistently produce big bass. Every trophy bass lake always has heavy cover and plenty of food.

"The Florida lakes are a good example, said Wharton. "Most of them are not very deep, but they usually have thick vegetation or timber in them, and a heavy population of golden shiners."

The winter months can produce good action for big bass, said the former guide, because overall fishing pressure is not as great and the bass are not quite as spooky.

"When bass are heavily pressured, they simply head into cover and stay there," said Wharton, "and this is particularly true of big bass. Trophy-class bass are not that active anyway, so the autumn and winter months are good times to try for them.

"I think two of the best bass lures for this time of year are a big spinnerbait with a size six willow leaf blade or a heavy jig with a pork trailer. Most big bass are caught on large lure, and this is especially true in the winter."

Wharton's first choice for cover is vegetation like hydrilla, milfoil or moss because it attracts the bream big bass eat. If vegetation is not available, a second option may be rocks and boulders, which, he said, attract crayfish.

"When fishing vegetation, try slow-rolling the spinnerbait right over the top of it, then let the lure fall over over an edge. That's a proven technique at Sam Rayburn, and it also works well on other lakes. You can also flip or pitch the jig into holes in the vegetation, or along its edges.

SPORTS SHORTS

Tae kwon do — The Fort Benning Tae Kwon Do School is now accepting male and female adult students. Classes are Wednesday and Friday from 7:30 to 9 p.m. and are free of charge to military personnel and their family members. The school is located on the second floor of the Arts and Crafts building on the corner of Eckel Street and Sightseeing Road. For more information, contact Edward Givans at 544-6604.

Cookie run — The 14th annual Cookie Run will be Jan. 29 at Weracoba Park and Lakebottom in Columbus.

Sponsored by the Concharty Council of Girls Scouts Inc., the run is a family-oriented event to encourage physical fitness among youth and to provide a challenging winter activity for the community.

Units that field 20 or more runners will receive a discount price of $6 per person if the unit preregisters by Jan. 25.

All unit members who register will receive a T-shirt. Units that register by Jan. 16 will have their T-shirts delivered to the unit before the run.

For more information or to register, call 327-2646.

Racquetball — A racquetball tournament will be conducted at the Briant Wells Field House Jan. 21 through 23. Games will begin Friday at 6 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday at 9 a.m.

The event is open to active duty military members, Department of Defense civilians, retirees and family members 18 years of age or older.

Awards will be provided to the top two finishers in each division with an open division for male and female. Entry deadline is Jan. 14.

For more information, contact Lula Mitchenor at 545-4388.

Boxing clinic — A two-hour boxing clinic will be Jan. 15 from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. at the Kelley Hill Gym. The clinic, sponsored by Youth Services and Physical Activities Branch, is for family members of retired and active duty military members 8 to 18 years old.

Olympic and professional coaches as well as award-winning boxers will be present at the clinic.

Parents must preregister their children before the class. Registration will be Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at Youth Services, Building 1056.

For more information, call Linda Laine at 545-3070.

Peach Bowl — The Information, Ticketing and Registration Office, Building 247, Ingersoll Street, has a limited amount of tickets for the 26th annual Peach Bowl. This year's game will be played Dec. 31 at 6 p.m. in the Georgia Dome.

The price of $55 will include passes to the tailgate party, which begins at 6 p.m. and lasts until game time. The peach will drop at midnight.

For more information, call 545-4155.

Basketball screening — Screening for the All-Army basketball team will be 9 a.m to 2 p.m. Saturday at Audie Murphy Fitness Center. Any active duty military member who has an interest in trying out for team can call Robert Shelley at 545-1940 or 545-4592 for more information.

Bus available — The Information, Ticketing and Registration Office has a 24-passenger bus available for sports fans to charter to their favorite games this fall. Call or visit ITR, Building 247, Ingersoll Street, 545-4155.

Deer Check Station — The Deer Check Station, Building 5883, Harmony Church, will continue to be open Monday through Friday, 7:45 a.m. to 4:15 p.m. The weekend hours have been reduced from 8 a.m. to noon.

Information is obtained from ages and weights of deer, which is used to determine population trends, herd health and the following season's hunting regulations.

Hunters are encouraged to bring all deer harvested to the check station for measurement during the times indicated.

TIPS FOR MAKING YOUR AD MORE EFFECTIVE

- Start Your ad with the item you are selling, service you are offering, or job title you are looking to hire.
- Be descriptive. The more information you provide to the reader, the better the responses will be to your ad.
- Use bold type, white space of decorative characters such as stars, to bring attention to your ad.
- Run your ad for an ample length of time. Remember, as soon as you get results, you can cancel at any time.
- Always include the price of your item.

Cheryl Ladd to star in 'Broken Promises'

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

Most of her recent television movies have cast her as women in very emotional plights, and Cheryl Ladd's latest project keeps her in that vein.

SPOTLIGHT

In Sunday's fact-inspired new CBS drama "Broken Promises: Taking Emily Back," the actress plays a woman whose husband shares her desire to adopt a child, though bureaucratic red tape seems to foil their every attempt. Finally, they decide to go through private channels, eventually attaining custody of the child of a less-fortunate couple (played by Ted Levine, the serial killer in "The Silence of the Lambs," and Kathleen Wilhoite). However, the latter duo then decide to take advantage of the situation by asking for more compensation from the adoptive couple ... and threatening to take the child back if they don't get what they want.

Co-written by Emmy-winner Vickie Patik and directed by Donald Wrye ("Amerika"), the film also features "thirtysomething" alumna Polly Draper and D. David Morin as another couple involved in an adoption-related dilemma.

"This particular story really grabbed me," the pleasant Ladd says, "and I think that's partly because there's been so much of this in the news. There are so many true-life stories about these problems with adoption, so when I picked the script up, it really had me.

What I loved about it is that there really no heroes and no villains, just humans with all of their gifts and all of their difficulties. I found the homeless couple (portrayed by Levine and Wilhoite) very, very touching because they constantly seemed to be in their own way. No matter what they tried, it was a pattern of behavior that seemed like it would never change.

Then, you have this other couple who so desperately want to have the child, and you're torn back and forth between them. I was talking to somebody about this recently, and that person said, 'It seems like everybody is considered except the child. Shouldn't there just be a blanket rule that the real parents get the child?' I said, 'You can't do that, because every situation is so different.' "

Cheryl Ladd

Ladd is well acquainted with the rites of parenthood herself. In fact, her daughter Jordan has a cameo in "Broken Promises" as a waitress — so she reasons, "We can't know for years to come the psychological damage done to a child who has bonded with, and loved, a family that he or she is ripped away from. A close friend of mine and her husband adopted a child who was later taken away, and they loved that child so much, they were just devastated."

Because of the power that such a story is meant to have, Ladd is pleased to cite her fellow actors in "Broken Promises" as such a strong cast.

"You really relate to each of the people, and a real ensemble kind of piece in that sense. I think this is some of the best work I've done on television."

Despite such other ventures as "Locked Up: A Mother's Rage" and last January's "Dead Before Dawn," which placed her characters at the center of true-life tales of trauma, Ladd maintains that she's been offered other types of vehicles lately.

"Some of them are more action pieces," she reports, "but I haven't found a wonderful villainess to play yet, a really demented kind of character, but in a piece where that's not given away immediately. I'd like more of a stretch in some area I haven't played yet, so I'm always on the lookout for that. I'd also like a comedy, but think of how few are actually done in the TV-movie realm."

Television films and miniseries have been Ladd's mainstay since she became a star on "Charlie's Angels." While she hasn't thought seriously about doing another weekly show in some time, she says she has altered that view slightly.

What: 'Broken Promises'
When: Sunday, 9 p.m. on CBS

"There have been some discussions," she confirms, "and I always say that I'll never say 'Never' because you never know. That wonderful (project) could come your way."

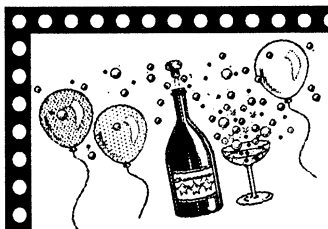
Admitting that her exposure in theatrical films has been limited, Ladd adds that her role in the 1992 psychological melodrama "Poison Ivy" (opposite Drew Barrymore and "Picket Fences" Emmy-winner Tom Skerritt) made people see her in a different light.

"I got amazing responses from producers, directors and other actors who were quite surprised by it," she said.

"It was a strange little film, and that was exactly why I wanted to do it. It wasn't necessarily going to do big box-office, but I thought it was both artsy and commercial enough to be interesting."

Apart from acting, Ladd also has established a career as a spokeswoman for skin-care products, as well as for the exercise device known as the "Body Slide." She credits those venues with being good for her visibility, and she applies the same rationale to TNT's daily cable repeats of "Charlie's Angels."

Ladd mentions a rumor she's heard that a feature-film version of that series is being developed.



"Nobody contacted me officially about being in it yet," she said. "But, if they do, they might have to call it 'Orthopedic Angels.' What's funny is that I'm so far removed from that (series) now and I've done so much other work since that I find the repeats kind of charming.

"There's a difference between how I felt about them five years ago and how I feel about them now, so they're fun to watch."

Generally, Ladd does one or two films per TV season, and she's content with that output. "It's at a really nice level," she concludes, "and I don't think my life has ever been better. I love being my age, and I think that's part of why the roles are getting better."

HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21 to April 10) It's a good time to regroup your forces. Set your sights on the realization of personal goals this new year. Guard against laziness on the job.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) The coming weeks will bring important business discussions. There's an accent on your inner life this week. There could be a mix-up in communications this week with someone at a distance.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) An upcoming work assignment will have you greatly enthusiastic. Though you'll be visiting with friends this holiday, it's not the best time for social interests in general.

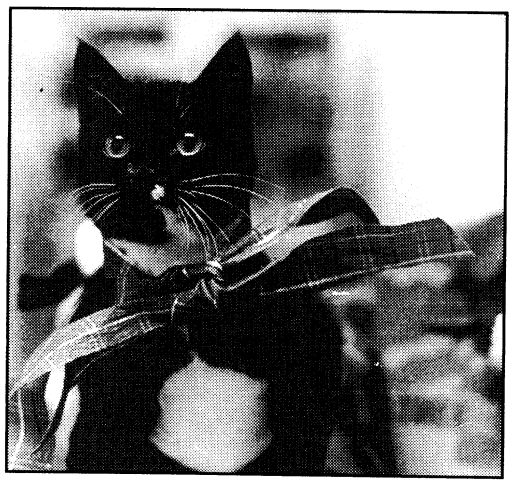
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You'll be reviewing your overall financial position in the coming weeks and may make changes in your investment strategy. Home duties are a priority this holiday.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) Catching up on your reading will be one of your resolutions for the coming year. Advice you receive now may be misleading or garbled.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) It's not a good week for reaching financial agreements with others. However, in-depth thinking will aid you in all your activities in the coming weeks.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Little things could crop up early that interfere with relationship harmony. Do your best to avert misunderstandings and hurt feelings.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You'll be more communicative and less secretive in the coming weeks. A friend may prove to be a distracting influence this week. Work progress is minimal, but this is only a holiday delay.



SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You're entering a reflective period that points to change for the better. An outside entertainment may not live up to your lofty expectations this weekend, but you won't be too disappointed.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) A friend from the past dramatically re-enters your life. A club activity will be of great interest to you in the coming weeks. Stock up on necessities and deal with domestic priorities.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) Though business matters turn for the better in the coming weeks, this week you may find it difficult reaching others or getting them to understand your viewpoints.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20) In the coming new year, you'll be happily signing up for a course, lecture or seminar. Try to save instead of spend.

PET OF THE WEEK

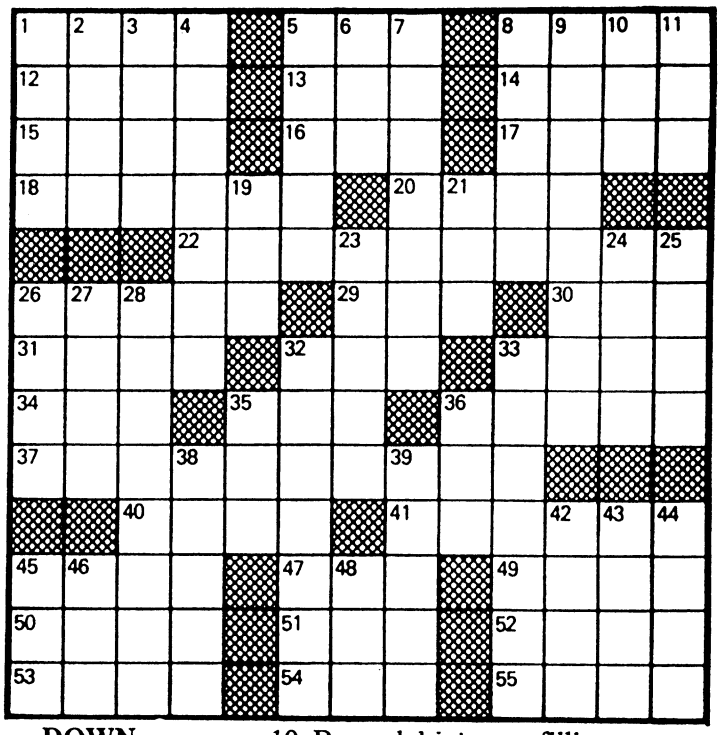
This kitty can still be yours in time for the holidays. She is just one of many cats and dogs available for adoption on post.

For more information, contact the Veterinary Services Office in Building 265 at 545-1127. Hours of operation are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:30 am. and 12:45 to 3 p.m. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

If you have lost a pet, check the stray impoundment facility in Building 283.

Stray pets are given three working days to be claimed from the time they are picked up by animal control personnel.

If the pets are not claimed, they become government property and may be adopted or destroyed.



Rabies tags are the only way Veterinary Services can contact the owner of a lost pet.

Pet owners are reminded that they are required to register their pets and update their records when changes occur.

Biltmore Estate re-creates ambiance of Christmas

Biltmore Estate

Re-creating the ambiance of a season celebrated in such elegance and style by the Vanderbilts nearly 100 years ago is, according to Biltmore Estate floral supervisor Cathy Barnhardt, an easy task at Biltmore House with its spacious rooms, ornate furnishings and magnificent antiques.

"Bringing the same 19th century warmth in a contemporary setting is a bit trickier, but it is entirely doable," says Barnhardt, who also faces the challenge of decorating the set of "Good Morning America" this holiday season.

"The set at 'Good Morning America' is typical of most modern homes," she said. "The seasonal holiday style so prevalent around the turn of the century is perfectly compatible, and, in many ways, the most complementary to almost any interior because it's so diverse."

The holiday tradition George Vanderbilt began in 1895 when he opened the newly constructed chateau to his family for the first time with a Christmas Eve housewarming, continues to evoke "oohs" and "aahs" from the numerous people who visit during the holiday season each year, she said. But a 19th century home is not a requirement for displaying the types of old-fashioned Christmas trimmings used by the Vanderbilts, Barnhardt said.

"Many of the decorations we use are hand-made, whimsical items such as an ice cream cone filled with cotton and rolled in shimmery white glitter," Barnhardt said. "These were often hung side by side with an array of glass ornaments, ribbon and garnishings provided by nature such as dried flowers and berries." The result, she said, is an eclectic mixture that suits almost any decor.

Unlike earlier colonial times, the 19th century saw the advent of ornate hand-crafted ornaments, glass beads, Dresden style wax figurines and plenty of embossed, brass, gilded and colorful decorative objects. But Barnhardt will also tell you that, in most homes, easier to find materials such as candles, silk ribbons, dried flowers, nuts, cones and textured greenery and pretty paper were combined with the purchased decorations to create elaborate Christmas "dressings," as they were then called.

By the 1890s, magazines such as Ladies Home Journal began dispensing advice on seasonal preparations. "Formerly the decorations of rooms consisted of a few branches of evergreen ... now they are of a much more complicated character," one columnist wrote.

In addition to the more than 30 trees, 200 wreaths, 1,500 poinsettias and 10,000 feet of evergreen roping, Biltmore Estate's floral and housekeeping staffs complement the rooms with festoons of ribboned greenery, natural topiaries and creative centerpieces and arrangements typical of the 19th century. Many of these ideas will be readily apparent in the holiday theme used in decorating the "Good Morning America" set, according to Barnhardt.

The key to duplicating the 19th century theme, she said, is to vary the colors, textures, shapes and objects used throughout a room.

Barnhardt suggest choosing a theme for your tree. A children's tree is always popular with antique or reproduction toys gathered around the base. For Biltmore House, Barnhardt re-creates a ladies' tree developing a softer look with paper fans, ribbons, dried flowers and numerous crocheted and hand-made ornaments.

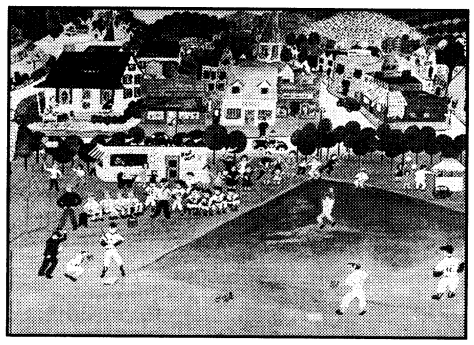
Gardner Galleries features paintings capturing 'Southern values'



The Oxford Agency Inc.

A special collection of paintings by Olivia Thomason is featured during the December holiday season at Gardner Galleries in Columbus.

Thomason's displayed works include oils and watercolors that reflect the artists' remembrances of her childhood in Georgia and western North Carolina.

Janet Kemp, Gardner's director, praised Thomason as a "peerless observer of fundamental Southern values: family togetherness, church activities and a reverence for the earth," adding that the paintings will remind observers of other folk art legends.

"Olivia blends the traditional style of a Grandma Moses with the Deep South passion of a Clementine Hunter, and the synthesis is remarkably unique in its energy and beauty," Kemp said.

"Valleymill Champions" is a watercolor by Olivia Thomason.

Thomason was the 1992 first-prize winner at New York's Great American Artist Awards given annually by the renowned Art 54 Gallery.

According to Dr. Joe Perrin, dean emeritus of Georgia State University's College of Art, and now curator of The Perrin Center For The Arts in Roswell, Ga., "Olivia is a growing and influential presence in fine Southern art — one of our best artists."

Thomason's paintings were exhibited throughout the south this year, including Atlanta, Asheville, N.C., and Birmingham, Ala., and plans for 1994 include Aspen, Colo., Raleigh, N.C., and New Orleans.

According to Thomason, she paints by commission for individual and corporate collectors, and recently did book illustrations for San Francisco novelist Kelley Wilde, the 1990 Bram Stoker Award winner.

Kemp said the collection of folk art paintings at Gardner represents a true cross-section of Thomason's works, including the critically acclaimed "Weighing The Cotton", a watercolor depicting a rural Georgia farm scene in the 1940s.

"Olivia's blue skies promise redemption and hope for tomorrow", said Kemp, adding that "no other artist I have seen can do a creek baptism with so much spirituality."

The exhibition at Gardner Galleries will be open to the public each day to celebrate Christmas and will conclude Friday.

SOAP UPDATE

ALL MY CHILDREN: After Tad and Brooke faced each other over their betrayals, she decided not to tell him the truth about her pregnancy. Terrence was puzzled by Julia's behavior. Lucas gave Mimi a cradle he hand-carved for the baby. Gloria was upset that Alec didn't resign as he had promised. Brian told Dixie he planned to leave Pine Valley. Wait to see: Kendall adds a new twist to Erica's torment.

ANOTHER WORLD: Spencer told Grant he had his full support both in the custody battle, as well as for his presidential hopes. Morgan confided to Cass that he suspected his best friend, Kyle, had raped Lorna. Carl berated Rachel for living in the past when she said her fondest Christmas wish was to have Mac's name cleared but he agreed to help. Kyle asked Morgan to help him should he be charged with rape. Wait to see: Ian makes a stunning discovery.

AS THE WORLD TURNS: Craig bowed out of attending Iva and Jason's wedding. Eduardo arrived at the wedding with explosive news for Damian, while Lily watched and wondered what they were whispering about. John opened up to Lyla and told her he had colon cancer. Margo got information that placed Connor at the murder scene. Ellen told Larry the longer Emily stays at the carriage house, the more attached she will become to Susan's baby. Wait to see: Evan fears what Connor may do.

BOLD AND THE BEAUTIFUL: Taylor told James she would stay with him in Scotland despite her anxieties over Ridge and Brooke. Taylor found Damon unusually charming, until he turned on James and accused him of murdering his mother. Thorne hoped to prove to Ridge that a room shortage forced Taylor and James to share quarters. But when he called the hotel, Maggie said they were together because they were crazy about each other. Ridge was devastated. Wait to see: Taylor is shaken by revelations about James and his family.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES: John unwittingly tipped off Sami about the police stakeout at Miller's office. Meanwhile, Bo and Billie befriended the watchdog who helped them get past a security guard at the store. Austin thwarted Vivian's ploy to stop Laura's Christmas visit. The Hortons prepared for the worst as Tom grew weaker until Tony flew in with the European surgeon. Wait to see: Vivian has another plan to use Laura for her own purposes.

GENERAL HOSPITAL: Scott made a daring escape from his kidnappers, then secretly said goodbye to Lucy as he left the country with baby Serena. Brenda and Karen tried to get A.J. to admit he had set up Jagger as the prime suspect in Ray's murder. Meanwhile, Alan and Monica struggled with finding a way to absolve Jagger without getting their son in more trouble. Felicia hinted at more gifts for Mac on their wedding day in February. Laura worried that Luke's dangerous mission would keep him away from their holiday celebration. Wait to see: Luke confronts an unexpected development.

GUIDING LIGHT: Roger was nearly spotted by Holly when he emerged from his hiding place in her basement. Cutter was not persuaded by Alexandra's lame theory about who shot Roger. In Cross Creek, Mindy outwitted a dangerous thug, only to learn he'd mistaken her for Tangie. Frank told Blake he'll investigate Roger's shooting in return for Eleni's hairbrushes, which he planned to give her at Christmas. Lillian told Eve that it might be Ed, not Eve, who had a problem. Wait to see: Roger stumbles on a clue that could lead him into more danger.

LOVING: An insecure Steffi began a battle with bulimia. Frankie learned Charlie's fiancee had died. Buck learned Dante had set him up to lose the money he invested with Malcolm. Joe (Dante) trapped Dinah Lee in his apartment where she was shocked to find Curtis was being held prisoner. After learning that Tess' husband had a tattoo, Trucker realized Joe and Dante were the same man. Trucker, Jeremy, Clay and Alex found Curtis at the apartment, but they missed catching Dante with Dinah Lee. Wait to see: A surprise awaits Alex.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE: Rebecca questioned her judgment in helping Todd when she learned of his attack on Powell. Todd stowed away in Rachel's car when she visited Nora at the beach house. Blair told Viki and Sloan a copy of Dorian's signed confession of murder in Victor's death was hidden in Cassie's loft. Cassie agreed to go for professional treatment for her depression. Herb tried to help Dorian reconcile with Cassie, while Angela tried to reconcile her differences with Rebecca. Wait to see: Jason has a fateful encounter.

YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS: Cole and Victoria pondered what Eve was trying to tell them when she wrote the letters, S-I-S before she died. Nikki told Hope that Victor had no feelings for her other than friendship. Feeling lost in Victor's world, Hope agreed to go home with Cliff for the holidays. Chris worried that Nina was becoming obsessive over the man at the diner. Wait to see: Victor must make a decision.
