The law is designed to prevent hardships such as those suffered by service members when thousands of household goods shipments worldwide were stranded during the Gulf War. After a major carrier went out of business, some agents refused to release the goods until monies owed them were paid. MTMC staffers located the shipments and provided for the goods' continued transport.

Drug war

Services' anti-drug efforts earn awards

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — In the time it takes you to read this paragraph, somewhere in the United States a youngster drops out of school.

The statistics are ominous. Every eight seconds, a student calls it quits. Only 40 percent of poverty-level students get their high-school diplomas.

Since last May, volunteers at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, have been working hard to reverse this trend, and on Aug. 16 their efforts paid off when their program was named the best in the Army in a Pentagon ceremony.

The recipients of the Secretary of Defense's Military Services Community Drug Awareness Award were praised by Deputy Defense Secretary William Perry.

"What you (in the Army, Air Force, Navy, Marines and the Reserve components) are doing is saving the future," Perry said as he handed out the award plaques. "You all can be proud of the work you've done here."

For their part in that work of countering the drug menace, the volunteers represented by Sam Houston's Garrison Commander Col. Edward G. Bradshaw, now have $100,000-plus to continue funding their programs. The additional money accompanies the award for each recipient.

Bradshaw noted that Sam Houston's success with its two separate, but related, programs drew on postwide volunteerism, from private to colonel.

Focusing on fifth-grade students in the environs of San Antonio, the first program, La Salida ("the way out"), seeks to help students transition to middle school. Its projects center on building and improving students' self-image and self-confidence.

Students spend two days and one night at nearby Camp Bullis, where they receive hands-on instruction in first aid, cardiopulmonary resuscitation, dental hygiene and home safety.

They receive anti-drug, anti-gang and anti-crime discussions and are physically challenged with an obstacle course, rappelling and athletics.

More than 500 children have attended in five sessions, which have involved some 250 military and civilian volunteers.

The second program also relies heavily on support from volunteers. Called the Community Mentor Program, it provides volunteer mentors on a one-on-one basis to "at-risk students" in local schools for 60 to 90 minutes per week.

Program developers chose to focus on the transition period to middle school because they say it is a critical point in a child's life — the period where a child begins to succumb to the pressures of gangs, drugs and crime, or finds "a way out."

Also on hand for the occasion was Army National Guard Maj. Gen. Ansel M. Stroud, adjutant general of the Louisiana National Guard.

Trial Defense Service serves soldiers' legal needs

Editor's note: This article is the first in a series of 21 articles about various legal matters of interest to soldiers written by a team of judge advocates about the U.S. Army Trial Defense Service, Region II.

The articles will deal with nonjudicial punishment, courts-martial, administrative eliminations, administrative reductions and other matters. This first article is about the Trial Defense Service itself.

U.S. Army Trial Defense Service

Trial Defense Service is an organization of Army lawyers whose mission is to provide defense counsel services to soldiers.

A Trial Defense Service counsel's primary duty is to represent soldier-clients as zealously as possible within the bounds of the law.

Every counsel is an Army officer and a fully qualified and practicing attorney, admitted to practice law before the highest court of a state or territory of the United States.

He or she is also certified by the judge advocate general of the Army as qualified to practice military law and has received specialized, formal schooling and continuous training in military law.

Counsel have no other job than to assist or represent soldiers. Counsel are military law specialists.

Think of TDS counsel as public defenders for soldiers. Counsel serve soldiers free of charge.

Though counsel and support personnel are soldiers or Department of the Army civilians, Trial Defense Service is organized in a special way to ensure that serving the client is most important.

While prosecutors and most other Army lawyers work for line commanders, TDS counsel work for no one other than another defense counsel and the client.

The local Trial Defense counsel works for a senior defense counsel, who is a captain or major. Senior defense counsels work for a regional defense counsel, who is a lieutenant colonel.

Regional Defense Counsels work for the chief, U.S.Army Trial Defense Service, a colonel.

Defense counsels do not work for line commanders and do not work for anyone for whom prosecutors work. Defense counsels serve their soldier-clients doing what is in the best interest of those clients.

There are about 150 lawyers of the TDS serving soldiers wherever soldiers are stationed.

TDS Headquarters is in Falls Church, Va., near Washington D.C. TDS represents soldiers, depending on where the soldier is stationed, without regard to the soldier's unit of assignment.

There are more than 100 enlisted soldiers, paralegals and civilian support staff helping TDS counsel deliver their services.

Services offered at Trial Defense Service field offices vary from post to post, but all Trial Defense Service offices provide assistance or representation in the area of military justice and representation before administrative elimination boards.

Future articles will discuss of the right to consult a lawyer when being questioned, the right to counsel at courts-martial or administrative boards and the right to consult with counsel when faced with an Article 15.

That lawyer is usually a member of the Trial Defense Service unless the soldier exercises the right to request an individual military counsel (in a court-martial) who is not a member of the Trial Defense Service or retains a civilian lawyer.

How the law applies in a particular situation always depends on the facts.

Soldiers who have questions about the law should ask someone trained in the law. Do not rely on legal advice from a friend.

Soldiers with questions about military justice or an administrative elimination can call the local Trial Defense Service office.

Rod run, custom car show Sept. 11 on Stewart-Watson fields

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning and the Noncommissioned Officers Association invites the public to participate in the first Rod Run and Custom Car Show Sept. 11 at Stewart and Watson Fields.

Registration on the day of the show will take place from 9 a.m. to noon and costs $12.

Assistance will be provided to those who need it during registration. The preregistration fee is $10.

A Car Corral where people can sell their own used cars will be available for an $8 fee.

Trophies will be awarded to the top three entrants in 27 different classes ranging from street rods and antiques to Volkswagons and mini-trucks.

Special awards will be given for the auto with the longest distance, the best engineered auto, best paint job, best interior and the hard luck award. The trophy for best of show will be the people's choice.

Judging for the show will be from 1 to 4 p.m., with awards being presented at the latter time.

Between 250 and 300 entrants are expected to register from all over the tri-state area.

Lots of games with prizes, food and refreshments and music from the '50s and '60s will be available. Door prizes will be given away to car show entrants.

The "Silver Wings," the U.S. Army Infantry Center's command exhibition parachute team, will perform a demonstration.

A "kiddie jumptower" will also be on hand for children's entertainment.

In case of inclement weather, the car show will be moved to the East Parking Lot of Infantry Hall.

For more information, call Sgt. 1st Class James Prince at 545-1970.

PET OF THE WEEK

Bayonet reporter Richard Brill holds this weeks' pet, a 5-week old female mixed-breed puppy.

For information on how to adopt her, or another pet, contact the Veterinary Services Office in Building 265 at 545-1127. Hours of operation are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:30 a.m. and 12:45 to 3 p.m. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

If you have lost a pet, check the stray impoundment facility in Building 283.

Animal control on post is a function of the Military Police Activity.

Stray pets are given three working days to be claimed from the time they are picked up by animal control personnel.

If the pets are not claimed, they become government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies tags are the only way that Veterinary Services can identify the owner of a lost pet. Pet owners are reminded that they are required to register their pets and update their records if changes occur.

Your Guide to Prime-Time TV: Cable and Broadcast Schedules

Chevy Chase returns with late-night show

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

What: "The Chevy Chase Show"
When: Tuesday, 11 p.m on FOX

He's still not a player in prime time; but, as he returns to TV, Chevy Chase definitely is making things interesting at a later hour.

The "Saturday Night Live" alumnus largely has concentrated on feature-film work since his days as one of that NBC staple's original "Not Ready for Prime-Time Players," but he's now helping Fox Broadcasting to establish its first serious bid for late-night viewers since the very first program it scheduled, the ill-fated "Late Show."

A week after CBS positioned David Letterman as a rival to Jay Leno and NBC's venerable "Tonight Show," Fox is unveiling "The Chevy Chase Show" opposite both of them on Tuesday, promising a fresh mix of conversation, music and comedy. In the latter vein, Chase will do a nightly variation on the "Weekend Update" news parodies that he virtually patented during his "Saturday Night Live" era ... and it's being timed for the approximate midpoint of his program, so that it will air in most markets directly against Leno and Letterman's opening monologues.

TV-variety veteran Steve Binder is an executive producer of the new vehicle, which will be taped at Hollywood's former Aquarius Theatre — now rechristened the Chevy Chase Theatre — and the creative staff also includes two Emmy-winning former writers for Letterman, Ron Richards and Joe Toplyn.

Chevy Chase

Chase has found it hard to ignore the pomp that has surrounded his debut as a talk-show host, and having a theater named after him is arguably the biggest sign of that. "It's the oddest thing in the world," he muses. "I don't know what to make of it. It's awfully public, but it's probably the same way Merv Griffin felt about having the Merv Griffin Theatre. I'm used to seeing my name up (on marquees) because of my movies, but I'd feel a lot better just being in a little studio somewhere."

Since he also plans to display his piano-playing skills on frequent occasions, "The Chevy Chase Show" is being designed expressly to let its star do what he does best. "I can't think of any other way to do it," he reasons. "What I've done is to make the decision that I'm an artist of television comedy, and I'm going to do it the way I've always done it. That's how I approached 'Saturday Night Live,' and I can't really imagine doing it any differently here, because my sensibilities haven't really changed."

His view of his competitors? "Let 'em have at it," he says with a chuckle. "If I were a businessman, I'd probably be concerned ... but it's the kind of thing where I have to say, 'Hey, listen, that's not my concern.' My concern is simply to do my thing and do it as best I can. I can't be concerned with the other stuff, because I can't be responsible for it. It's always hard to tell what will make people tune you in."

Fort Benning bids farewell to last UH-1 helicopter

By Lawrence K. Hughes
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The UH-1 helicopter is being retired from duty on Fort Benning. Since 1965 the UH-1 has been the pack-mule of Army aviation, serving as gunships in hostile fire suppression, cover and rescue missions, as well as medical evacuation in Vietnam. The last UH-1 is scheduled to be sold at an auction in the future.

Tune in to "Fort Benning Today" beginning Monday to hear from crew members of the helicopter and see highlights of the chopper's final flight.

Women's Equality Day was celebrated Aug. 26. Featured was a symposium in Room 21 of Infantry Hall with speakers from several installation proponents presenting topics such as "Political Power for Women," "How AIDS Affects Women," and "Violence Against Women." Tune in to "Fort Benning Today" beginning Monday to see highlights of the event.

USAIC TV Schedule
Fort Benning Today: 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 1:30 to 2 p.m.
Specials: 2 to 4:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 4:30 p.m. to 8:30 a.m.

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel highlights post events adn lists classified advertisements on "Fort Benning Update," a community information service.

If you subscribe to Fort Benning Cable, you can watch USAIC TV on Channel 3, 24 hours a day. Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:26, 7:56, 8:26 and 8:56 on WLTZ TV-38.

ANSWERS ON D-6

HOROSCOPE

King Feature Syndicate

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Family and business talks are highlighted this week. Someone in a high place is happy to extend you a favor. Shared togetherness is the week's happy theme. You could go overboard in making plans to have guests over this weekend.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You will have success now with a work project. Artistic endeavors are favored. You will begin to warm up to a strange new idea. Taking a fun chance now and then won't hurt. It is a romantic time for those who travel. Benefits come from in-laws.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) It is an excellent time to shop for the home and family. You will be doing your share to help the less fortunate now. This week's financial developments are positive, but you tend to spend unwisely now. You may be confused about a romantic situation.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your mental perceptions are very sharp this week. Communicative skills are tops. A note of the unexpected makes romance a delight now. The weekend may bring some disarray at home. Try not to let things get out of hand.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) It is a week of delight for those who can travel now. Good news comes by phone or letter. Buying and selling are favored. An unusual business move pays off. Those who exaggerate and fabricate can leave you feeling a bit bewildered later in the week. Take this in stride.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) A stimulating exchange of ideas occurs between you and a friend. You will be receiving some good financial news this week. The week brings excitement in romance and perhaps a fascinating flirtation. However, be sure to keep your wits about you when it comes to spending money.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) It is best to see what develops before going overboard about a possible career opportunity. A stroke of inspiration now leads to decorative changes at home. A private talk is of a business nature. The weekend is a time of special closeness between you and a family member.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You will enjoy a lecture, class or seminar this week. Doing something different together is the key to happiness in romance now. You are happy about a little secret shared by just the two of you. The weekend finds you mulling over a question without getting any answers.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Business interests are favored this week. Artistic types meet with commercial opportunities. Career developments are exciting and have moneymaking potential. Guard against excesses when socializing. Judgment may be off about money this weekend.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) You will feel that things are finally breaking for you in your career. Partners are in agreement about mutual concerns. It is an exciting week where romantic interests are concerned. The weekend proves to be very romantic. However, your usual practicality deserts you now.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) New insights come to you this week about career concerns. Benefits come through travel. You will be making some innovative decorating changes at home. Privacy abets romance, and family members are very close now. Too many things on your mind may compete for your attention this weekend.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20) The financial picture brightens for you this week. A good understanding is reached between you and a child. Enjoy good times this week with newly met friends. At the same time, don't become financially involved with people that you really don't know very well.

H & R BLOCK INCOME TAX COURSE STARTS SEPTEMBER 13

Thousands of people learn how to prepare income tax returns from H & R Block and then earn money as income tax preparers. H & R Block, the world's largest income tax preparation service, offers its Income Tax Course starting September 13, 1993. Morning, evening, and Saturday classes are available.

Experienced instructors teach tax law, theory, and application. Classroom discussion and practice problems provide students with a thorough understanding of each tax topic included in the course. Students learn how to handle increasingly complex income tax situations as the course progresses.

Ideal for people who want to increase their tax knowledge, the course teaches students how to save money on their taxes and also prepares them for a rewarding career.

The affordable fee includes textbooks and supplies. Graduates receive Certificates of Achievement and continuing education units (CEUs). Qualified graduates of the course may be offered job interviews with H & R Block but are under no obligation to accept employment.

Those interested in more information about the H & R Block Income Tax Course may contact the H & R Block office at 2511 Airport Thruway, Columbus, Georgia. You may also call

SOAP UPDATE

ALL MY CHILDREN: Ted stopped Tad from ousting a nasty reporter from the Orsini press event in New York. Edmund told Ted the time wasn't right to propose to Dixie. Later, Dixie realized she was really still in love with Tad, while Tad told Joe he really wanted Dixie to come back to him. Kendall thought Anton was an intruder and called the police. Dimitri explained he was an exchange student from Hungary who would be living with them. Jamal told Livia and Tom he was an orphan. Gloria broke down under Adam's continuing abuse. Trevor began to accept Timmy and Laurel's close relationship. Wait to see: Anton has his own ideas about his future in Pine Valley.

ANOTHER WORLD: Vicky and Steven escaped from the clinic. A furious Grant learned Ryan was in Switzerland and that Donna knew about it. Paulina stowed away on Ian's flight to Mexico. She told him she planned to learn more about her father and mother and was sure she would find proof of Mac's innocence in San Cristobal. C arl lied to Rachel about not knowing where Ian and Paulina were. Kevin confronted Lorna about the photos Carl took of her. Later, he warned Carl he would make him pay for what he did to Lorna, only to have a nonplussed Carl respond with a warning of his own. Wait to see: Paulina confronts Mac's past.

AS THE WORLD TURNS: Unaware of Iva's pain over her decision to give Aaron to Holden, John left town to deal with a problem with Duke. Linc told Debbie it would be best not to tell Hutch they had made love. Lucinda broke down on the stand over Royce's devotion to Neal. Holden became passionately attracted to Janice. Julie told Emily Royce made advances to her and advised her not to marry him. Later, as Emily testified, Tom and Margo brought in Cynthia Linders, who stunned the courtroom with her reaction to Emily's testimony. Lucinda and Kirk whisked Mary away before Evan could speak to her. Wait to see: Royce makes a startling announcement.

BOLD & THE BEAUTIFUL: Against his better judgment, Kevin got into Macy's car. While trying to persuade him not to tell Keith he saw her drinking, she lost control of the car and crashed into a tree. Meanwhile, Sally told Jack she wanted to marry him after all. Before Jack could tell her he was emotionally involved with Stephanie again, Thorne called to tell her Macy had been in an accident. The doctor told Sally, Thorne and Keith that Macy was stabilized, but Kevin was in surgery in critical condition. Brooke ordered Sheila to order Stephanie out of her office. Stephanie told Sheila that would happen "over my dead body." Wait to see: Brooke makes another potentially risky move.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES: Kristen told a shocked John they had to keep their relationship a secret. She then told her brother, Peter, she had no feelings for John and would marry as planned. Kate told Lucas, Jennifer and Jack's sick baby evoked memories of when she fled her abusive first husband with her two children, who later died in a car accident. This made her realize she had to marry for love, not money. After Victor assured Kate he truly cared for her and hoped one day he could love her, she agreed to marry him immediately. Fearing Nikki will soon no longer need her, Vivian set out to win Victor back for herself. Lucas feared Brandee would tell Carrie how he made her think Austin slept with her. Wait to see: Jack is faced with a new dilemma.

GENERAL HOSPITAL: At Crystal's gravesite, Jagger saw his brother, Mike (Stone), and embraced him. Although he was happy to see his elder sibling again, Stone was uneasy when they ran into Karen at Kelly's diner. Sean reassured a worried Felicia and Mac that Ryan was too well guarded to try to escape from General Hospital after his foiled suicide attempt. Fuming after seeing Alan with Rhonda, Monica decided to invent a lover of her own. On what would have been their first wedding anniversary, Scotty read a card Dominique had written before her death. Later, in a touching moment, he responded lovingly to Lucy, who was carrying his and Dominique's child. Wait to see: A decision to retum to Port Charles could spell trouble for someone.

GUIDING LIGHT: Josh arrived for Dylan and Julie's wedding. Josh told Harley he missed her, but she insisted she had all she could ever want in her life with Mallet. Saying he knew she had slept with Alan Michael, Ross walked out on Blake. He later tossed Alan Michael out when he tried to reason with him on her behalf. As he prepared to leave on his honeymoon with Jenna, Roger was rattled by an unexpected phone call. Bridget found Julie's letter to Hart thanking him for not telling Dylan what happened. Nick overheard Macauley asking Mindy to come to Chicago with him. Wait to see: A new shocker awaits Roger.

LOVING: Ally kidnapped Tyler after Cooper was awarded temporary custody of the baby. Shana made the decision to have in utero surgery on her unborn child. Trucker and Jeremy caught Frankie, Angie's son, who was trying to rob the cycle shop. Against Angie's wishes, Trucker refused to press charges. Frankie later stole Dinah Lee's wallet. Curtis pressured Dinah Lee to sell PINS, then arranged a secret offer. Clay used videos of their lovemaking to blackmail Tess into leaving Trucker alone. She trumped his efforts with Curtis' secret past in Kuwait, and the gun Curtis used to kill her husband. Wait to see: Trucker faces a disturbing revelation.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE: Max found Powell, who, although he cleared Luna in the attack on Todd, refused to confess to raping Marty. Despite his protests, Cain was unable to stop Tina from breaking their engagement because she believed he was having an affair with Angela. Nora, beset by blinding headaches, finally decided to consult Larry. Nigel returned to work for Asa. Todd regained consciousness. Dorian agreed to help Angela seduce Cain in exchange for Angela helping her to exact revenge on Sloan for implying in his book that she might have killed Victor. Wait to see: Nora must make an important decision.

YOUNG & THE RESTLESS: Ryan told an angry Nina he didn't want to end their relationship, but he was unable to make a commitment for marriage. Neil insisted Lillie Bell was using her depression as a way to manipulate Olivia. Cricket's plans to join Danny in New York were derailed by bad news on the Rainbow Gardens situation. The judge ruled in Jack's favor as CEO of Newman Enterprises, with the stipulation that Brad oversee the company to ensure the interests of Victor's children. Later, Lauren told Paul she felt trapped in her marriage to Scott. Victoria realized Nikki must be the "mystery woman" in Cole's life. After learning Jack had been named CEO, Victor told Hope, Jack is in for a big surprise. Wait to see: Jack makes plans to get rid of Brad.

OCS to induct 97 into Hall of Fame

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

The 1993 Officer Candidate School Hall of Fame induction ceremony will be in Infantry Hall's Marshall Auditorium Sept. 17 at 11 a.m.

Ninety-seven people will be inducted during the ceremony, which honors past OCS graduates. All military and civilian employees and their families are welcome to attend.

Those inducted into the Hall of Fame must have been commissioned at Fort Benning or the Ground General School at Fort Riley, Kan., and accomplished one of the following: been awarded the Medal of Honor (regardless of rank), attained the rank of colonel, been elected or appointed to an office of prominence in national or state government, or been recognized and recommended by the commandant of the Infantry School for outstanding service.

A dinner honoring the inductees will take place in the Officers' Club Thursday from 6 to 9 p.m, and a no-host breakfast will be available for inductees and their families at the Follow Me Golf Course clubhouse from 7 to 8:15 a.m. Sept. 17.

The OCS Hall of Fame has inducted 21 Medal of Honor recipients, 1,062 colonels, 104 brigadier generals, 95 major generals, 20 lieutenant generals, three generals and 84 prominent civilians who graduated from OCS.

This year's ceremony includes two retired major generals, two retired and three active duty brigadier generals, 88 colonels and two civilians.

Wigle Hall, which houses the OCS Hall of Fame, was dedicated in June 1958 to honor graduates of the infantry OCS program who have distinguished themselves in military or civilian pursuits. It is named for 2nd Lt. Thomas W. Wigle, a 1943 graduate of OCS and a Medal of Honor recipient.

Fall concerts begin at Riverside

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The first concert of the fall season is scheduled for 5 p.m., Sept. 19 at Riverside.

Post Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White and his wife, Linda, invite everyone to join them at their historic home to hear the Infantry Band perform.

Everyone is invited to bring blankets, lawn chairs and coolers to the outdoor concert to enjoy the music.

David Greer

Can you dig it?

Pfc. Ryan Buttner (left) and Spc. Matt Dobberke of 2nd Platoon, Company C, 43rd Engineer Battalion, continue the upgrade currently in progress on the Follow Me Fitness Trail by clearing out mud from a trench prior to the emplacement of a rain drainage culvert and catch basin. The 43rd will enhance the 20-station, 32-exercise fitness trail, which is located at the intersection of First Division and Dixie roads, by installing the culverts and side ditches. The project is expected to be completed by Sept. 30.

Post pays tribute to American POWs

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning will pay tribute to all former American prisoners of war, those still missing and their families in a ceremony 2 p.m. today in Infantry Hall's Marshall Auditorium, Building 4.

Retired Col. Benjamin H. Purcell, who spent more than five years as a prisoner of war in Vietnam, will be the guest speaker.

Purcell, then serving in Vietnam as the deputy commander, DaNang Sub Area Command, and executive officer, 80th General Support Group, was a passenger on a helicopter shot down south of Quang Tri City, South Vietnam, in February 1968.

Purcell escaped from his prison cell twice; once in December 1969 and once in March 1972, but was recaptured each time. In one attempt, he made his way into Hanoi hoping to gain political asylum at the French Consulate, but was recaptured at a precinct police station.

He spent 58 months in solitary confinement — longer in solitary than any other American POW — before he was finally released March 27, 1973.

Purcell's awards and decorations include the Silver Star with oak leaf cluster for his two escapes, the Legion of Merit with oak leaf cluster, the Meritorious Service Medal, the Army Commendation Medal, the Purple Heart and the Republic of Korea Presidential Unit Citation, among others.

Today's ceremony honors Purcell and all the other American POWs, soldiers missing in action and their families for the sacrifices they have made. Everyone is invited to attend.

Uniforms not substitute for civilian attire

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Short-haired young men in Army dress green uniforms are not an unfamiliar sight in Columbus — especially around local malls, where trainees flock while on pass from one station unit training.

But before you decide to hit the mall in uniform, make sure you know the regulations.

All versions of the Army green uniform, the dress blue uniform and all other formal or semi-formal uniforms may be worn off post at any time in accordance with Army Regulation 670-1, "Wear and Appearance of Army Uniforms and Insignia."

Battle dress uniforms and other Class C uniforms such as aviation flight suits and food service or hospital duty uniforms may be worn anywhere off post to eat or run short errands, according to post policy.

The policy states that the Class A or B uniform is the appropriate uniform for any business, military or personal, that requires more time to complete.

Also, soldiers wearing BDUs or other Class C uniforms may not drink alcohol during duty hours on or off post and may not drink off post at any commercial establishment during nonduty hours.

The Army-issued physical fitness uniform, including sweat shirt, sweat pants, shorts and T-shirt, is to be worn for physical training or organized athletics only, according to the policy.

The PT uniform may be worn en route between quarters and the physical training site, but neither the PT uniform, nor individual parts of it should be worn as off-duty casual attire by military personnel, according to the policy.

The intent of the policy, according to the policy letter, is to allow soldiers to make necessary shopping trips conveniently, but not to treat utility uniforms as a substitute for civilian attire.

Rangers, riggers gather to dedicate new facility

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Riggers and rangers gathered Tuesday at a hangar on Lawson Army Airfield to mark the official start of construction on a new building.

Construction on the rigging facility will begin later this month and is slated for completion in September of 1994. Projected cost of the project is $3,673,000, with a square footage of 47,435.

According to Col. James T. Jackson, commander of the 75th Ranger Regiment, the facility will provide a centralized location for packing, storing, maintaining and drying of parachutes for all the airborne units on post.

Col. Walter F. Wojdakowski, commander of the 11th Infantry Regiment, also spoke at the ceremony.

"This facility will put all packing by all riggers under one roof," Wojdakowski said. "It will increase our daily packing capability by 20 percent, and will give us all-weather capability. Formerly, we had to send our parachutes out for drying; now, we'll be able to dry 372 chutes in eight hours."

Wojdakowski said the building will also serve as an alert ready hangar for training and contingency mission and deployment use for the 75th Ranger Regiment.

"This facility will increase safety and allow us to serve our soldiers and the community better," Wojdakowski said.

Brig. Gen. Roger F. Yankoupe, commanding general of the U.S. Army Engineering Division, South Atlantic, was guest speaker at the ground breaking.

"This project is a great example of teamwork," Yankoupe said. "It shows what our Army engineers (who contributed to the design of the building) are capable of."

Yankoupe said the facility was originally designed in 1987, but didn't receive funding until 1992. "We spent a year updating and redesigning the facility to meet current needs and standards," he said, "and we're ready to go with it now.

"These are the guys who make it happen," Yankoupe said, indicating the riggers in the audience, "and they deserve everything we can do to make the job easier and more efficient."

Army gets 'lean and mean'

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

COMMENTARY

The new plan for downsizing the military, called "bottoms up review," (isn't that one of our calisthenics?) is said to require the military to be leaner and meaner.

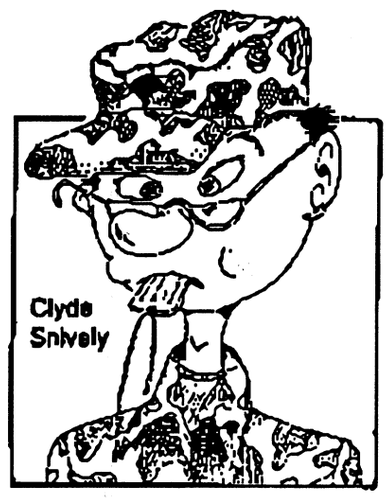
Well, I guess so.

Take away our food and we certainly will become leaner, and the leaner we get, the meaner we get. But whoever heard of fighting on an empty stomach?

In fact, back in the old Army (don't ask me which old Army, World War I, World War II or maybe just pre-1974, or pre "kinder and gentler" basic training days, and certainly pre Fitness 2000 days) there was a saying about an army traveling on its stomach.

I don't think they meant low crawling to war. They just meant having enough food in your belly so you could fight.

But in our case, leaner and meaner really means fewer of us. But not in the case of the Marines. I heard their numbers will actually go up.



Does that mean the Marines are already mean enough, but the Army isn't?

You want mean, just hang around the parking lot of the Hidden Door Club and you get mean. Why soldiers want to pick up girls, ooops, female units, that hang around there is beyond me. They bring too much baggage into the club and it's usually the soldier who gets the short end of the stick.

But seriously, I think our Army's fighters can hold their own with the Marines any day. But what the Marines got that we ain't is their very own Navy to take them and their gear places.

We have to rely on the Air Force, or even one of the contract airlines to get us places. How do you think soldiers in the 36th Engineer Group got to Somalia? Rich Airlines and World Airlines.

One nice thing about going commercial, besides the inflight food, is usually the commercial flights come and leave on time.

Not to say the Air Force isn't timely. It can be, but when bullets aren't flying, it seems its taxi service can get all screwed up.

Tied in with the downsizing of the military is the vice-president "discovering" new ways to cut cost in the federal government.

I've got a clue for him. Discovering that the military has a laundry list of specifications for everything from floor wax to fruit cake is not new.

Federal employees have been saying it for years. As for our procurement system, that got the way it is thanks to Congressmen wanting something for everyone.

But oh, by the way Mr. Vice President, have you noticed the way we're starting to use credit cards to make purchases?

Sure, there's still a lot of red tape involved and you've got to know what you're doing, but if this catches on, the system should certainly get streamlined and more competitive.

My question, though, is, if the government wants us to save money, why can't we use these credit cards in the Post Exchange? Then we save twice, once on the low cost of the item, then again when the "profit" gets turned back over to the soldier in the form of the "One Fund" for such things as new enlisted clubs, day-care centers and the like.

Just a thought. But now I need to eat the last piece of cake someone brought by before I go on my diet to become leaner and meaner so I can still have a home in this person's Army.

SOMALIAGRAM

Well, this is day 14 of our Somalia adventure and everyone is healthy and in high spirits. We have experienced no illness or injury among the advance party personnel, with the exception of Capt. Steve Bolton (Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment Commander) who suffered a slight ankle strain during a morning run. He is fine now.

We are all looking forward to the arrival of the rest of the battalion's soldiers sometime this week. I plan to meet each aircraft and welcome our soldiers to what will certainly be an interesting if not "highly stimulating" tour of duty.

Our ship is still scheduled to arrive this week, which means that supplies, equipment and personal items will be here to be received by the main body personnel in a timely manner. The advance elements of the battalion's companies have been working hard inventorying and signing for equipment, performing route reconnaissance, arranging living quarters for their companies' main elements and learning the ropes with respect to perimeter and convoy security.

HHD, 13th Corps Support Battalion took over command and control of Sword Base and all battalion missions at noon Aug. 10 — just three days after arriving in country. HHD, 68th CSB is now happily back at Fort Carson, Colo.

First Lt. Henry Sanders and his soldiers of the 926th Medical Detachment are already gainfully employed preventing the spread of any food-, water- or insect-borne diseases for more than 4,000 U. N. forces. You notice I didn't say anything about airborne. Welcome rangers!! Hooahh!!

First Lt. John Kelly and his 26-soldier "Rolling Thunder" advance element just completed a challenging six-day round trip to the city of Beletuen as part of their orientation.

Chief Warrant Officer 2 Cliff Allen states that the 608th Ordnance is ready to assume the theater ammunition mission upon arrival of the remainder of 1st Magazine Platoon.

First Lt. Wilt Ransom and his contingent of 19 soldiers are not only ready to assume the direct support maintenance mission, but have already branched out to help renovate some unused rooms and buildings to improve the quality of life here at Sword Base. It looks like the battalion's U-Do-It program simply changed location from Fort Benning to Somalia. With the help of Staff Sgt. Thomas K. Hendrix (598th) and a team of Somali laborers, we are beginning the renovation of a building that will more than triple the size of our currently small unit-run Post Exchange operation. Our plans call for completion of the Post Exchange salesroom within six weeks with the addition of a small Somali handmade goods shop shortly thereafter. We are even thinking of a small Anthony's Pizza concession but that remains to be seen. After safety and security, soldier-comfort is one of our top priorities. In our minds and imaginations, Sword Base will become an Army Community of Excellence.

Lt. Col. Murray J. Rupert
Commander, 13th Corps Support Battalion

Proclamation

The period of Sept. 15 to Oct. 15 is proclaimed Hispanic Heritage Month at Fort Benning to recognize the contributions of Hispanic Americans. This year's theme is "Hispanics: A diversified work force to change the future."

The military and civilian contributions of Hispanic Americans reflect a deep commitment to the principles of freedom and democracy, which are the strengths of the United States. The Hispanic community has given us generals, admirals, philosophers, statesmen, musicians, athletes and Nobel Prize-winning scientists. The various Hispanic cultures continue to contribute significantly to our American society.

I encourage all personnel on Fort Benning and in surrounding communities to participate in this observance through the planned activities by units, staff and other agencies.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White
Commanding general

CG thanks installation

You made me very proud to be the commanding general of Fort Benning last week during the Training and Doctrine Command Communities of Excellence team visit. COE is an attitude! Your positive attitude and your enthusiasm for Fort Benning was evident to the team and to me. I personally thank each and every one of you for your hard work, your dedication and your commitment to excellence.

We have come a long way with COE. We are winners and have trophies to prove it. But the greatest rewards are the benefits received by our soldiers, their families and our civilian workforce. This is what COE is all about. It is not just getting ready for an evaluation by higher headquarters, but it is a continuing effort to make our community a better place to live, work and play.

Again, I thank you for sharing in our celebration of excellence with the TCOE team. Let's continue to make the best even better.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White
Commanding general

Hispanic Heritage Month

Benning sets events

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

The Equal Employment Opportunity Office is planning events to celebrate Hispanic Heritage Month Sept. 15 to Oct. 15.

According to EEO officials, Hispanic Heritage Month is observed to promote cross-cultural awareness and harmony among all military personnel, their family members and the civilian work force.

The theme for this year's celebrations is "Hispanics: A diversified work force to change the future." EEO, along with other various units and agencies, will be scheduling various events for the month.

Among the activities, EEO has planned an "Evening Fiesta" Oct. 2 at 8 p.m. in the Supper Club of the Fort Benning Officers' Club. The purpose of the fiesta, said EEO officials, is to promote camaraderie among all people through celebration.

The fiesta will provide a diverse display of decorations and culinary specialties from various Latin American countries.

The Rev. David Santiago from the Adonai Spanish Church of God in Columbus is scheduled as the guest speaker for the closing program Oct. 12 from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. in Marshall Auditorium.

Santiago was born in San Juan, Puerto Rico, where he resided until he enlisted in the U.S. Army in 1982 as a fire support specialist.

After an honorable discharge, he returned to Puerto Rico to attend the Church of God Pentecostal Bible College. Along with his pastorship in Columbus, Santiago is the minister of the Church of God in Cleveland, Tenn.

Allowance outfits Army

Army News Service

ALEXANDRIA, Va. -- It's a fact of life that nothing lasts forever.

In recognition of that fact, a little-understood reimbursement is paid annually to active-duty enlisted soldiers to match the replacement cost of uniform items that have reached the end of their useful lives.

The clothing replacement allowance, which is paid on a soldier's anniversary month of enlistment, is also intended to finance the purchase of new uniform items as they are added to the Army's standard "clothing bag" — the most recent addition being the physical fitness uniform.

The current CRA for male soldiers, $270, and for female soldiers, $306, represents one year of Army uniform wear-and-tear for troops with more than 36 months' service. For soldiers with between six and 36 months' service, the amount is $190.80 and $216, respectively.

Officers, on the other hand, are paid a one-time amount upon their entry into service, and are responsible for financing their own clothing requirements thereafter.

According to Pat A. Decatur, a logistics management specialist at the Pentagon whose job it is to compute the allowance, a number of misconceptions exist among soldiers who say the CRA isn't sufficient to cover the cost of uniform upkeep.

"The most common misunderstanding is what the allowance is meant for," Decatur said. "It's not intended to cover the cost of cleaning, starching, repairs or alterations. It's also not meant for things like sewing on patches. In other words, it's not a maintenance allowance."

The effective lives of clothing bag items are determined at the U.S. Army Research and Development Center in Natick, Mass.

"They determine how long — based on 'worst case' wear — these items will last," Decatur said.

For example, Natick estimates for useful life of some items include: temperate battle dress uniform, two years; combat boots, 18 months; dress socks, six months; men's necktie, five years; and women's handbag, 34 months. The longest useful life of all initial issue items is that of the duffel bag, which is estimated at 10 years.

"The cost of each item is then divided by the number of months the item has been determined to last. The quantity of each type of item in the clothing bag is factored in, then added to determine the exact annual allowance.

"Some soldiers may argue that items wear out more quickly than is estimated," Decatur said. "That may be true if a soldier trains in one type of uniform exclusively. But what they need to remember is that they are also being paid to replace the uniform items they rarely wear, which are not wearing out and don't need to be replaced nearly as often as estimated.

"It also isn't meant for the purchase of optional footwear, such as jungle boots or jump boots," Decatur said. "The CRA is only intended to replace the two pairs of speed-lace combat boots that are part of the initial clothing issue."

Decatur said that when new uniform items are added to the clothing bag, soldiers are paid the full purchase price before they are required to possess the items.

"If an item has a useful life of 24 months, the possession date of that item cannot be sooner than 24 months in order for the soldier to accrue sufficient dollars to make the purchase," she said.

Some soldiers have unique clothing and uniform requirements over and above what is in the clothing bag, such as military band members and those in ceremonial-type units. They are compensated for these additional expenses by allowances such as the civilian clothing allowance and supplemental clothing allowance. The CRA does not figure in the computation of these allowances.

Decatur recommends soldiers use their CRA to purchase only items stocked in Army military clothing sales stores.

"Beware of look-alikes," she said. "The uniform you buy must have a Defense Logistics Agency certification label. Anything in the MCSS has been approved for wear.

"We warn soldiers about going off post to Army-Navy surplus stores, where it may look like they're getting the right thing — and it may even cost a little less. Nine times out of 10, they're going to be rejects that have failed a quality inspection," she said.

Post to test site security

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Looters beware! Fort Benning has been chosen as the test site for a sophisticated security system that will help protect the post's many historic and archaeological sites.

Named the HIProtect (HI for Human Intrusion), the system combines several technologies into one package that can sense, see and hear intruders 24 hours a day.

The system was developed by Lawrence Livermore National Laboratories of California.

According to Post Archaeologist Dean Wood, Fort Benning was chosen by the Department of the Army as the ideal test site because of problems in the past with looters, particularly grave robbers who ransack Indian graves for valuable artifacts.

"In the past, we have had some severe looting of gravesites, but the problem is gone for the present," Wood said. "The new security system will aid us in apprehending any isolated cases and should help prevent any further outbreaks of large-scale looting."

The system does not employ any new technologies, but combines several existing ones, Wood said. Seismic sensors to measure ground vibrations, infrared sensors to detect body heat and a magnometer to detect metal, such as shovels and probes used by grave looters, will be concealed in artificial rocks.

The battery-powered system will include a computer that will analyze the data obtained by the sensors and determine whether or not to sound a silent alarm, via cellular phone, to the Military Police, who can then turn on a camera located on the site to look for illegal activity. A microphone hidden at the site will allow them to issue verbal warnings to intruders.

Wood said the computer will be programed so it will only sound the alarm if the readings on the sensors reach the levels for an average human intruder.

"That way the alarm won't sound every time a deer crosses the sensors," he said. "The camera will also allow the MPs to see if the intruder is really a looter or just a hunter passing through."

The system is scheduled to be in place in the fall, Wood said, just in time for the "looting season" that begins each year when the weather begins to cool.

"We would like to extend a cordial welcome to any looters who would like to try their luck to test out our new system, if they are foolish enough," Wood said. "We can see you, we can hear you and we will prosecute you to the fullest extent of the law."

Recycling

Post takes steps to begin curbside pick-up program

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

As completion of Fort Benning's Material Recovery Facility (Recycling Center) grows nearer, the post is taking steps to begin its new recycling program.

Distribution of thousands of brown plastic bins to post housing units, which will be used for the new curbside pick-up program, began last week and should be completed by Oct. 4, said Mo Armstrong, post recycling coordinator.

The bins, which are similar in size and shape to laundry baskets, will be used by residents of post housing to place recyclable materials in for weekly pickup. The bins will be collected weekly on the same day that the trash is collected, Armstrong said.

The schedules for the collection of the bins will be coordinated through the Mayor's Council, and a newsletter will be sent to post residents to inform them of pick-up times when they have been determined, said Armstrong. Pickup of large quantities of cardboard, such as large boxes used to transport household goods and appliances during moves, will have to be coordinated by the resident through the recycling center, he added.

> "...instead of throwing everything in the trash, throw recyclable materials in the bin."
> — Mo Armstrong
> Post Recycling Coordinator

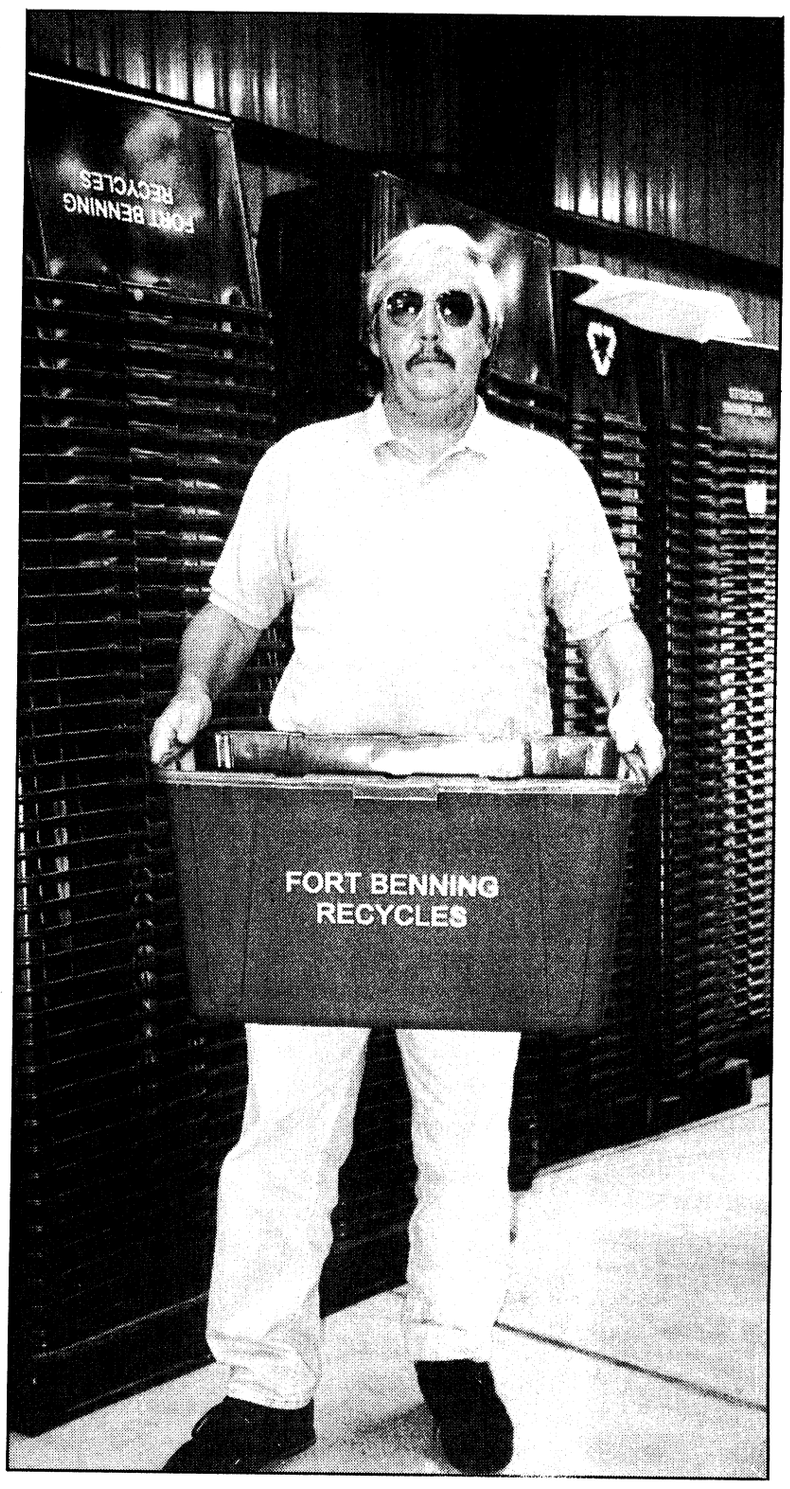
Every bin that is delivered will include an information sheet that explains what types of items can and cannot be placed in the bin for recycling.

Armstrong said that using the bins is easy.

"All the residents have to do is place the bin near their trash can and instead of throwing everything in the trash, throw recyclable materials in the bin," he said.

According to Armstrong, the slight amount of time necessary to separate recyclable items is well worth it, not only because it will create more space in resident's trash cans by diverting the larger recyclable items that take up more space than other trash, but also because of the amount of money that can be generated for the post through the recycling program.

"Recycling is extremely important for the post not only in terms of the money the post can earn, but because it's the right thing to do environmentally as well," he said.



"In addition, recycling will help us meet our goal of reducing the amount of solid waste in our landfill by 25 percent by 1996, which is required by Georgia State law."

Armstrong said that the beginning of the curbside pickup program represents a great milestone in Fort Benning's recycling program.

"We're proud of the progress we have made and encourage everyone to participate in making the program a success," Armstrong said.

"The curbside pick-up program, plus opening of the new Recycling Center, will give the post an edge into the next century in making this a better place to live and work."

The Recycling Center is scheduled to open near the end of September.

What materials can, can't go in recycle bins?

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

If you are a resident of on-post housing, you will soon be receiving a brown plastic bin to place recyclable materials in for weekly curbside pickup.

Here is a list of the items that can and cannot be placed in the bin for recycling.

• Glass: Clear green or brown bottles and jars including soda, beer or liquor containers may be placed in the bin. All caps must be removed before placing the bottles in the bin. Glass items such as light bulbs, window or automobile glass, mirrors and drinking glasses cannot be placed in the bin.

• Metal: All metal cans (the labels do not have to be removed) can be placed in the bin after rinsing them. Metal foils, such as aluminum foil, cannot be placed in the bin.

• Plastic: Soda bottles, milk containers and water jugs can be recycled but the caps must be removed and the bottles crushed by stepping on them before placing them in the bin. Styrofoam, plastic bags and caps from recyclable bottles and containers cannot be placed in the bin.

• Paper: Newspaper can be placed in the bin if it is bundled or placed in a brown paper bag and placed to the side of the bin at the curb on collection day. All glossy paper, such as that used in catalogs, brochures and advertisements, cannot be recycled.

Oct. 1: "Employers' Day"

Job assistance workshop

Time: Wednesdays, 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Location: Infantry Hall, Building 4

The workshop is conducted every Wednesday at Infantry Hall. Topics discussed include objective setting, resume preparation, expanding opportunities, networking, interviewing, salary negotiating, stress management and financial planning. The workshop is for anyone in federal service (both military and Department of the Army civilians) and their family members, whether leaving voluntarily, involuntarily or retiring.

Education Opportunity Center

Time: Wednesdays, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

Participants will receive information from all over the country about college and university admissions requirements and proficiency exams. Education counselors can also discuss student loans and grants.

Mock Interview Practice

Time: Thursdays, 2 to 4 p.m.

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

Participants will learn how to interview effectively by rehearsing and practicing interview techniques with an experienced JAC counselor. The mock interview will be videotaped to provide the client with a visual learning tool.

Employers' Day

Time: Fridays, time varies

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

Employer day is scheduled each Friday at the Job Assistance Center. The program is designed to allow employers to recruit qualified candidates for their companies.

Employers normally will give presentations on their organizations and set up interviews with qualified candidates.

A variety of manufacturing and service companies take advantage of this opportunity. Public sector organizations are also well represented.

Focus Hour

Time: Tuesdays, noon to 1 p.m.

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

Weekly video program that provides additional information on the key areas in the job search process — networking, dressing for success, interview process and negotiating techniques. Counselors will assist with any additional questions.

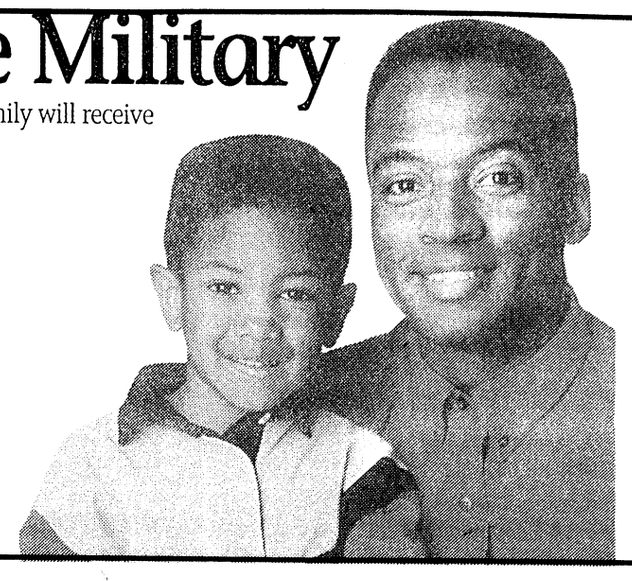
Small Business Development

Time: Monthly, 2 to 4:30 p.m.

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

A short, free, monthly seminar is offered by the Small Business Development Center of the University of Georgia. It is designed to provide assistance and training in starting a new business.

The seminar serves as a focal point for linking together resources of the federal, state, and local governments and the private sector.



For additional information and registration, call Army Career and Alumni Program Job Assistance Center, located in Building 2634, at 545-2308 or 545-2309 .

Cena Tipica

SOA celebrates Hispanic heritage

School of the Americas

In observance of Hispanic Heritage Month, the School of the Americas will host its annual Cena Tipica display from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., Sept. 24 in the Supper Club of the Fort Benning Officers' Club.

Cena Tipica, meaning typical dinner in Spanish, is dedicated to the secondary mission of the school; providing a cultural exchange between Latin American personnel assigned to the school and the residents of the Fort Benning, Columbus and Phenix City communities.

Initiated seven years ago, Cena Tipica will transform the Supper Club into a small portion of Central and South America. The SOA guest instructors, personnel and their families will have booths displaying food, art, crafts and clothes represenative of their countries.

This year, school children from throughout the tri-community will tour the displays and receive information from residents of Costa Rica, Venezuela, Chile and Brazil.

Information from SOA sent to area schools states that Cena Tipica will give children a chance to "experience displays of crafts, clothing and other items representative of the 19 Latin American countries" that send students to SOA.

In addition to the educational opportunity Cena Tipica provides, the celebration can be a valuable tool for bringing the tri-community and Latin Americans together.

According to Cecilia Alexander, director for SOA's International Military Student Organization and one of the organizers of Cena Tipica, last year's observance resulted in additional sponsors for the school's sponsorship organization.

Admission to the display is free but interested parties are encouraged to call Alexander at 545-1285 to schedule a tour time so a guide can be assigned.

Test measures individual NCO self-development; not unit training

TRADOC News Service

FORT EUSTIS, Va. — Nearly two months after the Army chief of staff approved implementation of self-development tests for non-commissioned officers from sergeant through sergeant first class, there are persistent rumors that SDT is "dead."

"Feedback from field units indicate that some NCOs are still being told by their chain of command, 'Don't worry about SDT, it's going away,' " said James Tripp, deputy director of individual training evaluation for the Army Training Support Command.

Actually, about 95 percent of the Army's NCOs in 614 military occupational specialty skill levels will be tested "for the record" in fiscal 1994, beginning in October.

Fiscal 94 test results for active Army NCOs will be part of the Enlisted Personnel Manage-ment System and will have an affect on promotions and school selections.

Comprehensive validation of the SDT was conducted during Fiscal 92 and 93. NCOs who were tested, as well as senior NCOs, were surveyed for their opinions on the tests.

Reserve component NCOs are in the midst of a two-year validation period. SDT results will be part of the Reserves EPMS in October 1994.

"For the first time, NCOs have had an input on a test that will affect their careers," said Sgt. Maj. Paul A. Quesnell, ATSC sergeant major. "That was not so with the skill qualification test and even the old pro pay tests.

"During the active component validation period, NCOs were able to comment on the quality and appropriateness of individual test questions.

"SDT is objective. It is something you've got to do for yourself. When you're looking for qualifiers, for promotions or school selection, SDT results will stand out," Quesnell said.

Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan, Army chief of staff, underscored the individual responsibility SDT places on NCOs in his letter to the field announcing implementation of the program.

"Leaders mentor and support NCOs in the SDT efforts," he said. "But the SDT must remain a measure of individual NCO self-development. SDT is not a unit training responsibility."

Commanders will receive copies of SDT results for their units, but they are to be used for mentoring and training purposes by commanders and supervisors. "They must not become unit 'report cards' on NCO training," Sullivan said.

Implementation of SDT does not relieve senior NCOs of their responsibility to train junior NCOs, Quesnell said. "The test results will show senior NCOs these areas of training their NCOs need to concentrate on," he said.

Each SDT is a three-part multiple-choice answer examination. Leadership and training management sections each have 20 questions. Then military occupational specialty portion will have 60 questions.

Test results for active component NCOs will be available from as early as the same day to no later than 30 days after taking the examination, according to Tripp

"There are 64 training standards officers around the world who have local test scanning capabilities," he said. "They can scan a soldier's answer sheet and send test answers to us electronically. We will scan the test answers and send test results back to the TSO in an electronic burst the same day."

Even when results are mailed to ATSC for scoring, the entire process normally takes 12 to 15 days.

Tripp feels that eventually 80 percent of soldiers will be tested at sites with scanning equipment. Sites that test only a few NCOs will continue to send and receive results by mail.

Tripp also pointed out that there will be a few MOSs and skill levels without tests every year.

"Because of the constant turbulence in career management fields — new MOSs are created or MOSs are merged — there will be a lag time in developing the soldiers' manuals and tests for some MOSs," he said.

"We have also recommended to Department of the Army adding to the Army regulation that governs SDT, that for the first year of a new MOS test, it will be treated as a validation period. Test results will not count for EPMS," Tripp said.

SF changes requirements

Fort Bragg, N.C., Public Affairs Office

Enlisted soldiers now face fewer obstacles at getting the chance to earn the Special Forces Tab.

At the same time, senior noncommissioned officer applications will no longer be accepted.

Potential applicants from Fort Benning will be given a chance to talk about these changes and the Special Forces career field with recruiters, Monday through Sept. 18.

Special Forces recruiters from the Fort Bragg, N.C., SF Recruiting Team will meet with interested soldiers in Infantry Hall, Building 4, Room 25. On Monday and Wednesday briefings will be at 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday briefings are scheduled for 1 p.m. at the same location.

Special Forces recruiters are no longer accepting volunteer packets from sergeants first class, according to Sgt. 1st Class James Zapp, non-commissioned-officer-in-charge of the Special Forces recruiting team.

However, recruiters are still taking applications from soldiers in the grades of specialist through staff sergeant. Packets are now being accepted from specialists who have not attended the Primary Leadership Development Course, according to Zapp.

"A lot of soldiers have misconceptions about what they need to do to get into Special Forces, " he said. They think they have to be a PT (physcial training) nut and swim around with a rifle and ruck sack. That's not true.

"We are looking for guys who have exceptional commitment, initiative and drive."

According to SF recruiters, all candidates must pass a PT and swim test given by SF recruiters; unit PT and swim tests are no longer valid. Uniform for the PT test is battle dress uniforms and running shoes. The minimum overall score for the PT test is 220. The PT test consists of push-ups, sit-ups and a two-mile run, graded on the 17-to 21-year-old scale, regardless of age.

Candidates are required to swim 50 meters in a pool wearing their uniform and boots with no time limit imposed.

Sapp also encourages soldiers to have a SF physical scheduled before the recruiting team's arrival. Copies of Department of the Army forms 2-A and 2-1 should be brought to the briefings.

"We (recruiters) are more strict during screening than when candidates get to Special Forces assessment," he said. "We weed out the weak before they go."

Those who pass initial screening are eligible to attend Special Forces Assessment and Selection, a demanding 23-day program to evaluate candidates' physical, mental and teamwork potential to make it through the Special Forces Qualification Course.

Candidates must have U.S. citizenship and have a high school diploma or GED. All applicants must pass the physical; be airborne qualified or volunteer to go to Airborne School; and, be able to get a secret clearance. Specialists no longer need PLDC to apply for SFAS.

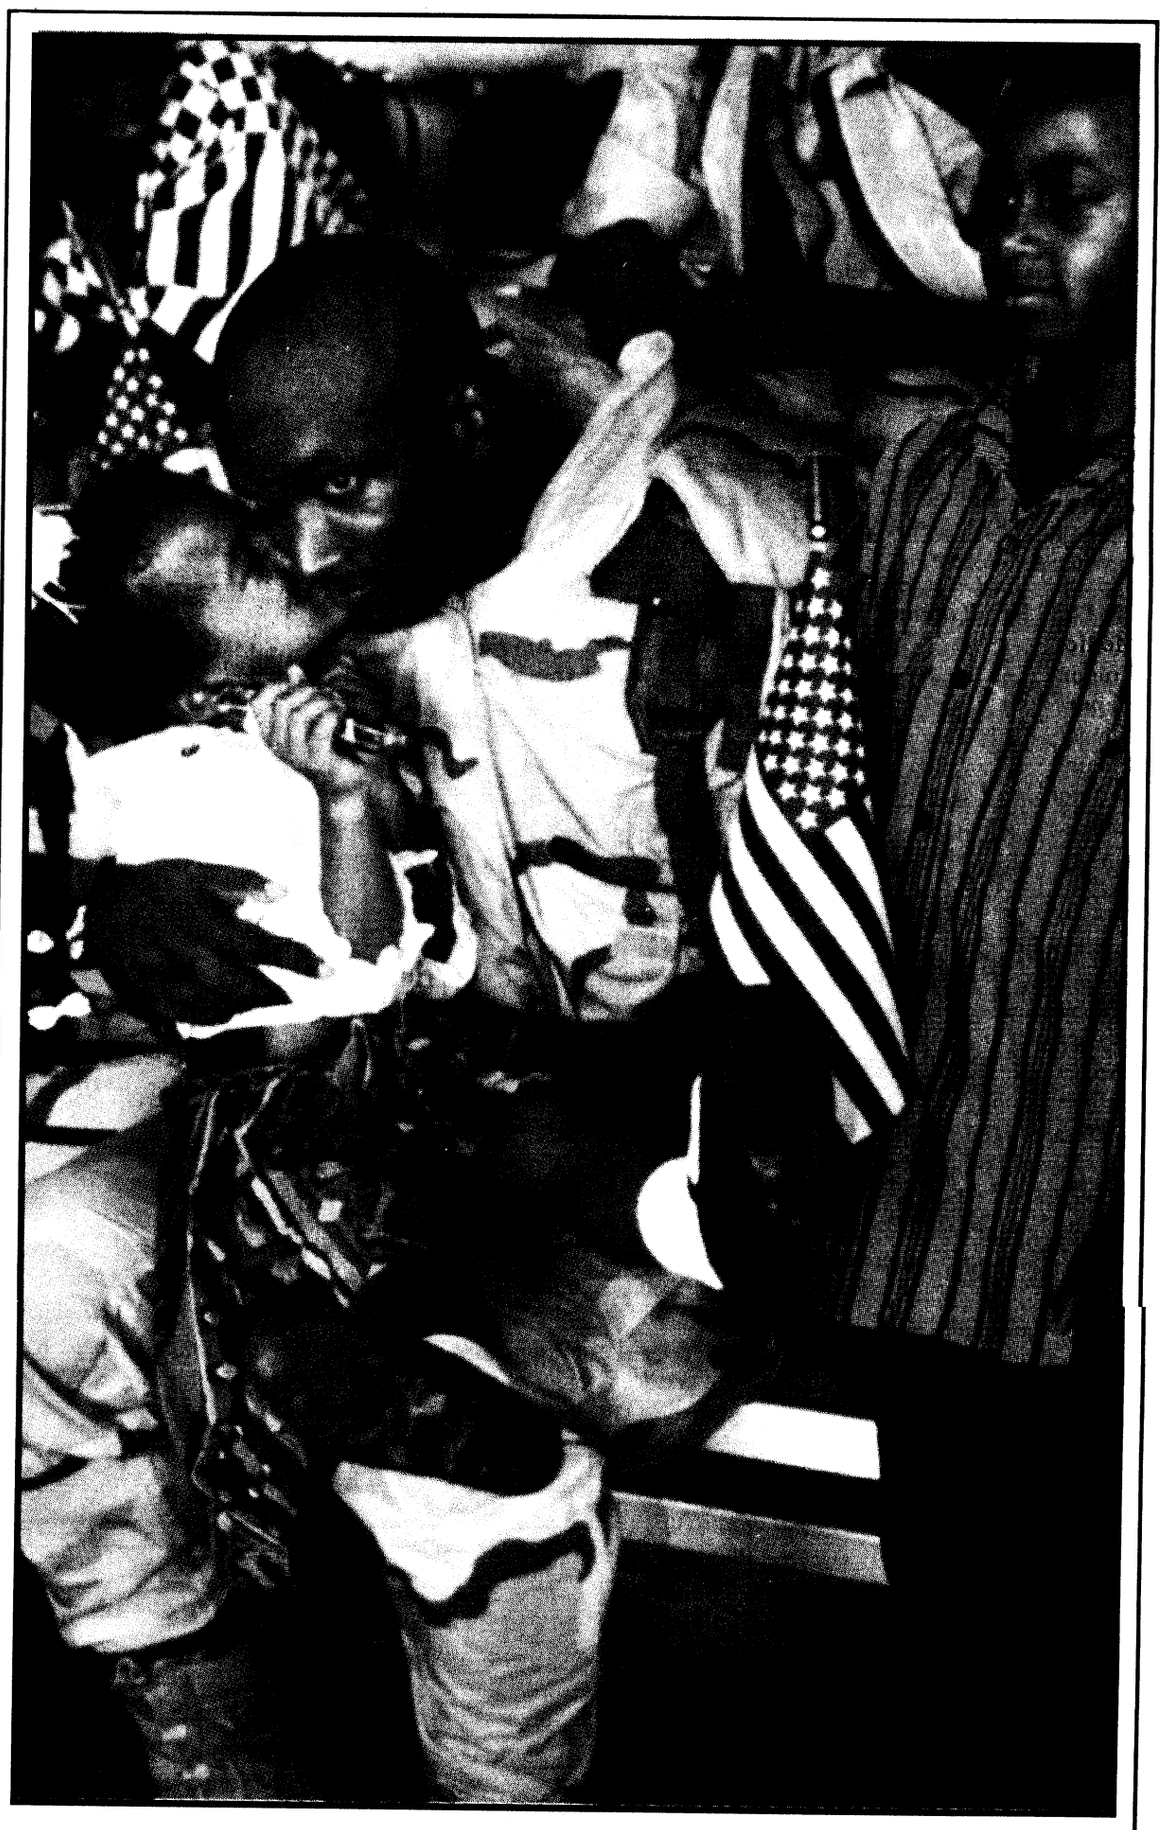
A minimum score of 110 on the Army General Technical test battery is also required.

While working on a packet for SF, candidates are encouraged to prepare for SFAS physically and mentally. Recruiters issue handbooks that stress a five-week, progressive physical training program. They also recommend that candidates get in the habit of regularly caring for their feet and fitting their boots properly.

After they meet all the prerequisites, candidates can pick their date to attend SFAS. The SF recruiting team is recruiting for January and March sessions now.

Though not guaranteed, candidates can choose from the four military occupational skills in the Special Forces Career Management Field (CMF18) — engineer, communications, medical and weapons sergeant. However, the soldier's preference and ability as well as the needs of SF are used to determine the placement in one of the four MOSs.

Recruiters said they continue to be busy because SF appeals to soldiers throughout the Army.



"A lot of them (candidates) are already in combat arms, but they aren't getting promoted. In Special Forces, they will," Zapp said. "About 85 percent of eligible Special Forces staff sergeants were selected for sergeant first class. The Army overall average was somewhere near 20 percent."

Zapp added that many soldiers are attracted to Special Forces because of the chance to travel to more locations, attend additional schools and learn foreign languages.

To learn more about Special Forces, soldiers and their souses are encouraged to attend the briefings. Applicants may call Zapp, Special Forces Recruitment Team at Fort Bragg DSN 239-1639, commercial (919) 432-1639 or the local recruiter Master Sgt. Carlos Bernardini at 545-7387.

At a glance

- Noncommisioned officers sergeant first class and above can no longer apply for Special Forces
- Prerequisites for application include U.S. citizenship and high school diploma or GED
- Applicants must pass swim and physical training test given by Special Forces recruiters — unit tests are not accepted

ARMY BRIEF

Fort Gordon to offer new teaching careers

Army News Service

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — New career opportunities for soldiers leaving the Army will soon be available through the Fort Gordon, Ga., based Fast Track Teacher Certification Program.

Available to soldiers Army-wide with a bachelor's degree and a one-year remaining service requirement, the program is designed to provide full teacher certification in the middle grades or selected secondary school subject areas, according to program chairman Dr. Richard L. "Chip" Schuster.

Under Fast Track, qualified soldiers are placed in a competency-based program where they are mentored and evaluated in one of six local public schools. Soldiers are placed on permissive temporary duty status at Fort Gordon for 120 days to be certified. They may apply, beginning in October, for the program's start date of Jan. 7.

Schuster describes the program as a step forward.

"The whole idea has been a situation of building a special curriculum that does the course work and the student teaching at the same time," he said. About 80 soldiers will qualify through the program each year, he added.

The program was conceived and developed by Fort Gordon Commanding General Maj. Gen. Robert E. Gray, won Department of the Army approval in 1982, and was later accepted by the Georgia Professional Standards Commission.

Augusta's Paine College was recently awarded a $100,000 contract to develop the program curriculum.

Fast Track will be marketed through the Army Career and Alumni Program, the Army Continuing Education System and the Service Members Opportunity College networks worldwide, Schuster said.

Vietnam

Countries begin joint search for POW/MIAs

Army News Service

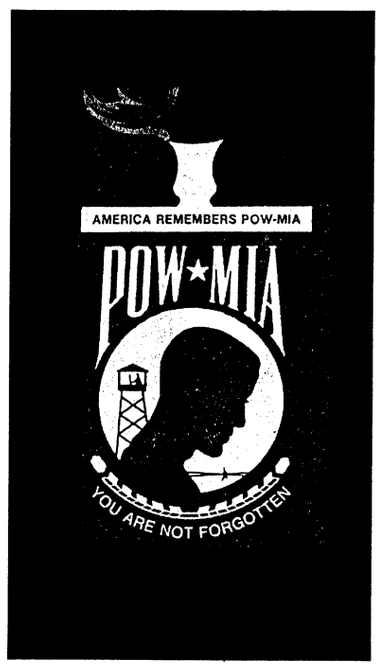
Technical representatives from Vietnam and the United States began another joint investigation and remains recovery operation Aug. 19 pertaining to Americans missing and unaccounted for in Vietnam.

This is the fifth joint field activity conducted by U.S. and Vietnamese representatives this year, and the 25th since September 1988.

Operations were to be conducted in the Vietnamese provinces of Quang Binh, Quang Tri, Quang Nam-Danang, Phu Yen, Khanh Hoa, Ba Ria-Vung Tau, Quang Nai, and Thua Thien Hue and were scheduled to last 32 days.

The joint team plans to investigate and survey as many as 179 cases of unaccounted-for Americans. The team will also excavate at least four sites.

The 71 U.S. team members will be under the operational control of Joint Task Force Full Accounting and will be joined by Vietnamese officials.



The team consists of POW/MIA specialists with experience in investigations and recovery operations, and includes forensic specialists from the U.S. Army Central Identification Laboratory in Hawaii. U.S. elements of the team will be led by Army Lt. Col. John C. Cray, formerly commander of the 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, now commander of the joint task force's Detachment Two in Hanoi.

There are 2,248 Americans still listed as missing or otherwise unaccounted-for in Indochina. Of that total, 1,648 are listed as unaccounted-for in Vietnam. Since the end of the war, 280 Americans previously listed as missing in Vietnam have been accounted for.

During the most recent operation in Vietnam, which was conducted from June 24 to July 20, a joint U.S. and Vietnamese team conducted investigation, survey, and recovery operations in seven provinces.

The team investigated and surveyed 122 cases and excavated six sites. Some remains, which may be those of Americans killed in the Vietnam War, were recovered during the operations. Those remains are currently being analyzed at CILHI in an effort to determine individual identification.

Accounting for Americans still missing in Southeast Asia as a result of the Vietnam War is a matter of highest national priority for the United States, and officials said they welcome and appreciate the cooperation of Vietnam in this operation.

Bottom-up review

Aspin releases results

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Secretary of Defense Les Aspin released Sept. 1 the results of his bottom-up review of the Department of Defense.

The review, a recommendation to Congress, is, according to defense officials, a process that will get us from today's force, based on the Cold War requirements, to a force that is based on the requirements of the post-Cold War, post-Soviet era.

According to another official, the review put "everything on the table" and "opened up the whole set of force assumptions to see if they're the right ones, to see the differences they make, and to build our forces against that."

The Army, along with the other services and the Joint Staff, participated in the review. The review determined the necessary Army force for the future to be 10 active-duty divisions; and 15 enhanced Reserve component brigades equating to five plus Reserve component divisions. This force structure cuts an additional two active Army divisions and one Reserve division from the current force between fiscal years 1995 and 1999. According to a senior Army official, the two active divisions have not yet been identified.

Aspin said the review began with identifying the dangers that our national security will face in the future. These dangers fall into four categories: dangers posed by nuclear weapons and other weapons of mass destruction; regional dangers posed by the threat of large scale aggression along with smaller, often internal conflicts; dangers to democracy and reform in emerging nations and elsewhere; and economic dangers if the United States fails to build a strong and competitive economy.

According to Aspin, the review initially focused on the capability to deal with these dangers and not the budget. Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Gen. Colin Powell said, referring to military missions, "You name it. We can do it...but we must not forget the primary mission of our military is to fight and win the nation's wars."

Powell said a fundamental principle guiding the review is for the military to be able to handle two nearly simultaneous major regional conflicts.

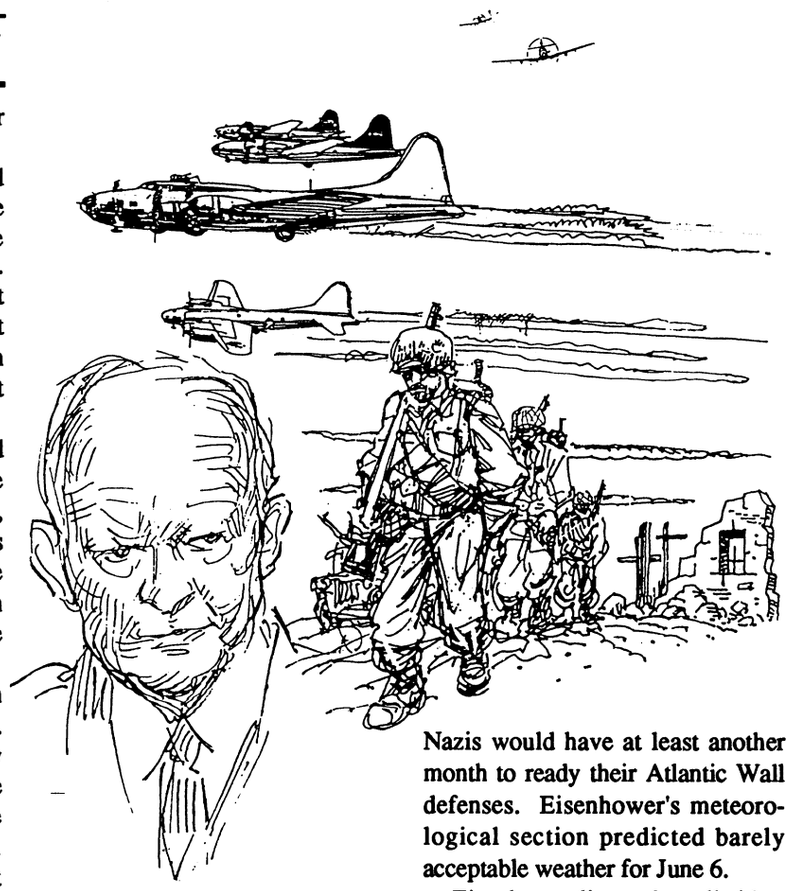
American Forces Information Service

COMMENTARY

At the beginning of the war, he was totally unknown. A local newspaper covering the Louisiana maneuvers in 1941 identified him as "Lt. Col. D.D. Ersenbeing." But it wasn't just journalists who got it wrong. In the White House appointments book, he was called "Lt. Col. Eisenhaur."

Yet Dwight David Eisenhower did more to shape World War II in Europe than any other Allied leader. After Eisenhower was appointed the supreme allied commander, an American officer called an annoying associate a British son-of-a-bitch. If the American had just called him an SOB, he would have been fine. But since he made a point of his nationality, the officer found himself relieved and on a plane back to the states. Eisenhower did not tolerate divisions between the Allies.



Eisenhower was the right man at the right time. His efforts in the Louisiana maneuvers attracted the attention of Army Chief of Staff Gen. George C. Marshall. Right after the attack on Pearl Harbor, Marshall brought Eisenhower to Washington at the War Plans division. Within another year, Eisenhower was a four-star general.

The United States contributed the most men and materiel to the war effort, so the supreme commander would be American. President Franklin D. Roosevelt wanted Marshall for the job, but believed he couldn't spare him from Washington. Roosevelt called on Eisenhower for the job.

Eisenhower was ideally suited to the rigors of holding the coalition together: His patience, tact, fairness and persuasiveness were instrumental in welding the Allies together and making men and women of many diverse backgrounds work together.

Eisenhower led the American invasion of North Africa in 1942. He oversaw the invasions of Sicily and Italy in 1943. In 1944, he assumed the responsibility for the invasion of France at Normandy. Operation Overlord was the largest amphibious invasion of World War II, and Eisenhower earned his money for the war with just one decision.

On June 4, 1944, all the preparations for the invasion were in place. Ships were in motion and three divisions of paratroopers were standing by their C-47 transport planes. Everything was set to go but one thing — the weather. It was atrocious. Eisenhower had to cancel the scheduled June 5 invasion.

If the troops didn't go soon, the Nazis would have at least another month to ready their Atlantic Wall defenses. Eisenhower's meteorological section predicted barely acceptable weather for June 6.

Eisenhower listened to all sides, then decided: "I'm quite positive we must give the order. I don't like it, but there it is." Then, slamming his right fist into his left palm: "OK. We'll go."

With those words, the Allies began their "Crusade in Europe."

WORLD WAR II — A LOOK BACK

50 years ago this week ...

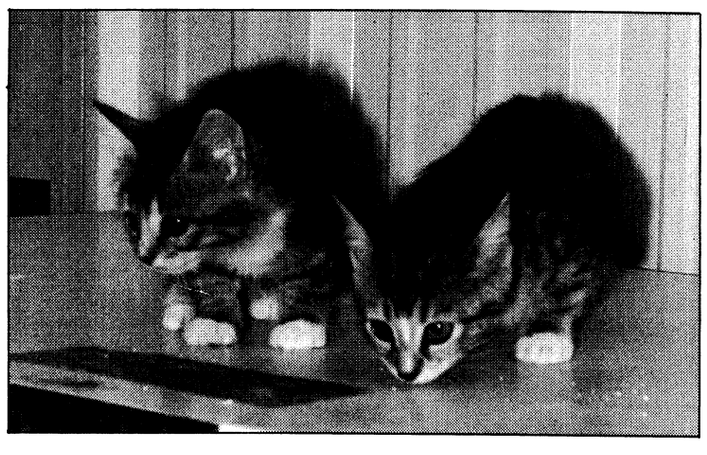
• The Allies captured Salerno, ending a vicious week of fighting for the city.

The converging U.S. 5th and British 8th armies advanced after repelling several earlier German counterattacks. Spearheaded by the 16th Panzer and 29th Panzergrenadier divisions, the German actions had forced the Allies to drop Gen. Matthew Ridgway's 82nd Airborne Division in to secure the embattled American beachhead. Eventually, however, the vast Allied manpower and naval artillery superiority dictated the outcome of the battle and allowed them to continue driving through Italy.

• Elsewhere in Italy, a crack team of German soldiers led by Otto Skorzeny parachuted into the Abruzzi Mountains to rescue Benito Mussolini from a Gran Sasso prison cell. The daring mission succeeded, allowing the deposed Mussolini to once again proclaim his authority as the country's ruler.

• On the Eastern Front, the Germans abandoned Kuban after the Soviets launched attacks in every sector, capturing Novgorod, Seversky and Romny on their way to Kiev. Additionally, Soviet forces secured several important railroad junctions in Nezhin and Lozovaya.

• In China, Chiang Kai-shek, an opponent of both the Japanese and the Communists, assumed the presidency of the country.



• On New Guinea, the advancing Australian force made significant gains as its 7th and 9th divisions captured Lae after taking Salamaua.

• In the Solomons, U.S. forces, aided by New Zealand troops on Vella Lavella, made slight progress in the face of fierce Japanese resistance.

• On Fort Benning, the Army unveiled its two new potent secret weapons, the "Bazooka" and "Anti-tank Rifle Grenade," on Bickford Range.

PET OF THE WEEK

These curious kittens are just two of the many cats and dogs available for adoption on post. For more information, contact the Veterinary Services Office in Building 265 at 545-1127. Hours of operation are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:30 a.m. and 12:45 to 3 p.m. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

If you have lost a pet, check the stray impoundment facility in Building 283.

Stray pets are given three working days to be claimed from the time they are picked up by animal control personnel.

If the pets are not claimed, they become government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies tags are the only way Veterinary Services can contact the owner of a lost pet. Pet owners are required to register their pets and update their records when changes occur.

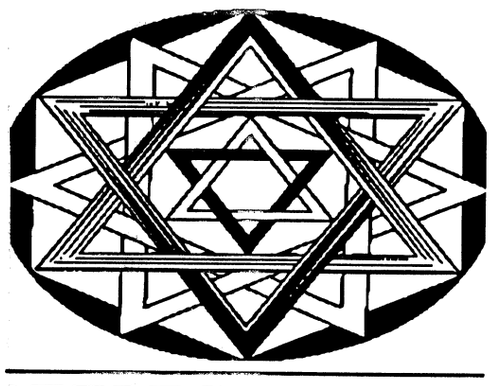
JEWISH NEW YEAR

Rosh Hashanah heralds period of celebration



By Arthur Rutberg
USAIC Chaplains' Office

"Awake ye slumberers from your sleep. Arise and return from your sinful ways." According to the great sage Moses Maimonides, this is what the shofar (ram's horn) is saying to us when its loud blasts are heard on Rosh Hashanah.

The holiday of Rosh Hashanah is the beginning of the Jewish New Year. No, I am not referring to 1994 but to the year 5754. The Hebrew calendar counts the years since the Biblical account of creation.

Yet the New Year's celebration that the Jewish people begin Wednesday evening is not like the secular New Year's celebration. There is joy, merriment, eating and drinking but there is a very serious side as well. This is reflected in the blasts of the shofar.

Rosh Hashanah begins a 10-day period of introspection and repentance. It is incumbent upon every Jewish person to consider their deeds of the past year. We must judge our deeds as God will judge them. Did we act righteously? Did we act morally? Were we kind to others? Were we caring and compassionate those in need? Did we respect our parents ıd provide for our children? Did we love our ighbors as ourselves? Did we honor God and e divine in all people?

These and many more are the questions we ust ask ourselves. These questions show us the iidelines by which we must judge our actions. e do not expect to find ourselves free from sin wrongdoing. After all, we are human.

We admit that we have sinned and we repent and ask for forgiveness. We seek forgiveness and atonement from our fellow human beings during these 10 days of repentance. And on the 10th day, we seek it from God during Yom Kippur, the day of atonement. A day of fasting and prayer. A day of worship and solemnity.

Our hopes for the new year are spelled out on Rosh Hashanah. We beseech God to grant us a good year, a year of health and happiness, prosperity and peace. To express our desire for a sweet year, we eat many sweet things like apples and honey. It's traditional to eat grapes, drink wine and to receive a new piece of clothing.

Resolutions are not uncommon on this New Year as well. This holiday has many elements of joyful celebration but the root of it all is the awareness that now is the time to think about the past year and our actions during it make a concerted effort to repent and change.

They say that a sin is truly forgiven not when you beat your breast and repent but when you cease to do it anymore. That is the ultimate goal of repentance and of this 10-day period known as the High Holidays of Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur.

Don't hide your light at first impression

By Carl Young
USAIC Chaplains' Office

One of the things I love is to meet people. I have discovered that we all are different. Yet at the same time, I see a lot of similarity.

It amazes me of the importance of our first impression. With some people, when we meet them, we immediately prepare for war. Others we see will always be our friends. What is the difference? I believe the difference is a smile — something as simple as a smile.

I love to see a smile. Not that false smile that says "you expect me to smile, so I am smiling."

REFLECTIONS

The smiles t I enjoy seeing are the type thaght up a room. A warm smilthat conveys the message of t goodness of God for all his pple. It is a caring smile to lets know someone cares.

Have youver walked into an office for t first time, not knowing whavill happen, and the first person o meets you has a great big sme? I have. That smile seem to remove all apprehensions

We Christis seem to put a lot of our energy into trying to tell fellow believers about the correct way to worship God. We wage heated debates and try to convince those we think are not committed to change their ways and serve God.

Sometimes our efforts seem to work. However, are these forced conversions the reason the church is a revolving door with people leaving as fast as they enter? I believe the message that Christ desires for his followers to give to the world is found in John 13:35 where Jesus says, "All will know that you are my disciples, if you have love for one another."

This is the love Christ has placed in our hearts. It causes us to express our joy in such a great way that it causes our smiles to fill the room with hope and peace.

Life gives us many options. One of them is whether or not to smile. No one can force us to smile and you must decide what kind of impression you will give others. But, wouldn't it be great if you were known by the joy you bring to those who know you? All it takes is a smile. What greater fruits can you offer than the life you live for Christ? You are the light of the world. Please don't hide that light — take time and smile.

High Holy Day observance schedule

Bucks stop here with muzzleloader

By Kevin L. McIver
USAIC Public Affairs Office

COMMENTARY

There's something about blackpowder hunting for whitetail deer. I'm not sure exactly, but when you're packing a muzzleloader, you feel like you've been transported back in time.

Perhaps I saw too many reruns of The Kentuckian with John Wayne, or the epic battle scene in The Last of the Mohicans. Back in those days you only had one shot, and you had to make it count.

Today, however, modern blackpowder shooters can rely on new technology to fill the gap between the end of their barrel and a trophy whitetail.

If you're not a blackpowder hunter, then you've missed out. I killed my first buck with a muzzleloader, and that one still holds a special place in my memories. Even today, I'll switch to a "firestick" when I want a more challenging hunt.

Muzzleloaders are legal hunting arms in both Georgia and on Fort Benning. In fact, many states have special attractions for blackpowder shooters. Some of these include separate seasons (usually between archery and gun season), higher bag limits, and special hunts for the blackpowder enthusiast.

The principal advantage here is you get a crack at some of the best hunting lands before the onslaught of gun hunters converge on an area.

Although Fort Benning has yet to get into the act, the state of Georgia has set aside special blackpowder provisions this year, and a separate season is most likely right around the corner.

What the Georgia Wildlife Resources Division (formerly named the Game and Fish Division) has done is set aside special primitive weapon hunts on selected wildlife management areas throughout the state.

The good news is that blackpowder shooters can hit the woods one week after the start of archery season and five weeks before the beginning of gun season. This means that you don't have to compete with gun hunters and you don't have to use any of your big game tags.

How does this work, you're probably asking yourself? First, you have to dig out your copy of the Georgia 1993-94 Hunting Seasons and Regulations. Next, find the section on primitive weapon hunts in the WMA section. The key here is to identify those that offer no-quota, check-in hunts.

Quota hunts are those where you compete for a specific area; in essence, it's the hunting equivalent of the Georgia Lottery. By going to no-quota areas, of which there are plenty, you just have to show up.

Next, look for those WMAs that are "check-in" only, as opposed to "sign-in." Here you have to physically check-in and out with the WMA station. If you bag a deer, Department of Natural Resource personnel will tag it for you using a "special" WMA tag; thus, you don't have to use any of your deer tags.

According to Venessa Hall, wildlife technician for the Georgia Wildlife Resources Division in Atlanta, this is done to "attract hunters to state lands by giving them the opportunity to harvest more deer."

Hall added, "this way, hunters can use their tags for "sign-in" archery hunts, and still be able to hunt during the scheduled gun season."

Supporting the "Hunters for the Hungry program" is also one of the reasons that you don't have to use your tags at check-in hunts.

"This program helps feed Georgia's homeless and the hungry by collecting harvested deer at various WMA hunts," said Hall. "The venison is then processed by the Department of Corrections and distributed to nonprofit agencies feeding the needy throughout the state."

Overall, Georgia offers you a total of 25 primitive weapon and muzzleloading hunts of which 19 are no-quota, check-in. You can add it up for yourself, but when you add up the five deer tags that you already have, I come up with a total of 24 deer you could possibly bag. And this doesn't even include the no-quota, check-in gun hunts later on in the season.

Of course, few of us have the time or the stamina to harvest this many deer. What it does mean is that you don't have to compete with gun hunters, you can get out and do some hunting in different areas, and you have a better chance of bagging that trophy buck.

Most of the WMAs that I plan to blackpowder hunt between archery season and gun season are located only two to five hou away: not too bad when you colder it takes about an hour to geover to the Alabama side of Fort nning.

A WMA stamp oy costs $19 for an entire year and seems well worth it. If you ce hunting whitetails with a nzzleloader, then, unfortunately u'll have to head off post unlesyou want to compete with gun hurs.

Anyway, I've gn you just enough information to get started. If you're interested in organizing a trip to one of these primitive weapon WMA hunts, give me a call at 545-2211 or 660-1959.

Fort Benning offers some of the best deer hunting in the state, but until they come up with a muzzleloader season or special provisions, then it's to the WMAs you must head. Good luck and see you in the woods.

Master iron competition set

Newnan-Coweta Chamber of Commerce

Newnan and Coweta County are hosting the 1993 World Masters Weightlifting Championship and the 1993 Women's Invitational World Masters Weightlifting Championship through Sunday.

The events will be at the White Oak Athletic Center, 6 Shenandoah Blvd., just off Highway 34 east of Newnan, Ga. From I-85, take Exit 9 eastbound.

About 350 weightlifters from 30 countries worldwide will compete. The masters is for weightlifters from age 40 in five year segments up to age 70 and above.

This will be the ninth World Masters Weightlifting Championship. Many of the competitors participate in the Olympics as referees, coaches and officials. The competing group includes former world and Olympic champions.

The oldest lifters will be 81-year-old Walter Glaus of the United States and 80-year-old Rudolph Pflugfelder, a former Russian, now of Germany.

The five daily events will be 10 a.m. to noon, 2 p.m., 4 p.m. and 6 p.m. today with an extra Saturday event at 8 p.m. Sunday events are at noon, 2 p.m. and 4 p.m.

Spectators are welcome. There is no charge for admission. Ben Green of the White Oak Athletic Center and Bill Nicholson from Atlanta are co-chairmen for the event. Green won his weight division in the first championship at Colorado Springs, Colo. and Nicholson has competed in world and national championships.

Thousands of visitors from the United States and worldwide are expected in Newnan, Coweta County and the Atlanta metropolitan area for the five days of the World Weightlifting Championship.

CRIME WATCH

Military Police Activity

The following entries were taken from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from Aug. 18 to 24. Such entries may be incomplete and are not the indication of the guilt or innocence of any person.

This week's hot topic concerns U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 210-40, Section VI, Pet Control. No privately owned animals except horses (housed at the post stables), domestic dogs and cats, and small, caged animals may be kept on post without written permission from the installation commander. Only three pets per family are allowed in family housing areas, except for small, caged animals and nursing litters. Pets will be kept indoors or secured outdoors on the owner's premises. Owners are responsible for providing them with adequate shelter, food and water.

• A staff sergeant was charged with larceny of private property and forgery after he borrowed a pick-up truck from an individual to determine if he would like to buy the truck. He found the truck's title in the glove compartment, forged the owners' signature, and sold the truck to another individual.

• A civilian was charged with trespassing after he was observed by the MPs attempting to open the door of the Mall Bowling Center at 3 a.m. Further investigation revealed that he had previously been issued post ejection orders for removing cans from an aluminum recycling bin.

• A specialist reported that persons unknown removed her checkbook, military identification card and driver's license from her unsecured car parked adjacent to her quarters.

• A juvenile family member was charged with shoplifting after placing an audio cassette tape in his shirt pocket and exiting the PX without paying for it.

• A family member was charged with assault after biting her husband on the wrist and burning his neck with a curling iron during a domestic dispute.

This week's booby prize is awarded to the staff sergeant who was stopped by the MPs for operating his car during darkness without the headlights on. He could not produce proof of insurance or a valid vehicle registration and was charged with driving without headlights, no insurance, and driving a vehicle with expired license plates. The car was impounded.

Other activities included 20 traffic accidents and two reports of shoplifting at facilities on post. There were two cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, nine cases of larceny of private property and five cases of larceny of government property.

Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best — Give Crime Arrest." Report any activity that seems wrong to the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5223 or the "Crime in Progress" line at 545-2222.

Article 15: A commander's tool

U.S. Army Trial Defense Service

As members of the military, we are often confronted with the Article 15 process, either as supervisors, friends or personally.

Most soldiers know that nonjudicial punishment or Article 15s exist, but few really know much about them. This article will explain what an Article 15 is and how it differs from a court-martial.

In the military, we have one system of military justice followed by all branches of the armed forces. This body of law is called the Uniform Code of Military Justice. Any violations of the UCMJ, even minor ones, are criminal violations. The term "Article 15" comes from a section (Article) of the UCMJ.

An example of this is if you were 10 minutes late for work this morning without justifiable excuse, you violated the UCMJ. You have committed a criminal act. And since you committed a criminal act, you could be court-martialed for that offense. A conviction at a court-martial results in a federal conviction. But courts-martial are time consuming and costly, so it is not in the interest of the soldier or the Army to always court-martial soldiers who violate the UCMJ.

Since good order and discipline are so important to an effective defense of our country, though, criminal acts cannot simply be ignored.

That is where Article 15 comes into play. If your commander believes you should be punished for being late to work, he or she could initiate an Article 15 proceeding. An Article 15, unlike a court-martial conviction, does not result in a criminal record or a federal conviction but it can affect your military career.

Article 15s are meant to correct soldiers who have committed minor offenses so they can learn from mistakes; they are not meant to affect the rest of the soldier's career and civilian life.

Since an Article 15 is not a court conviction, it is called "non-judicial" punishment. ("Judicial" means that it is given to you by a court of law, and since an Article 15 is not given by a court, it is considered "nonjudicial.")

Just like the judicial system, the nonjudicial punishment system has rules and regulations governing it. A person accused of a crime at an Article 15 hearing has many of the same decisions to make as an accused at a court-martial. The Trial Defense Service can help a soldier make those decisions.

If you have a legal question, get your advice only from a lawyer. If your question is about military justice or an administrative elimination, call your local Trial Defense Service office.

Editor's note: This article is one of a series of articles that will deal with nonjudicial punishment, courts-martial, administrative eliminations, administrative reductions and other matters.

Cycle safely this summer

American Forces Information Service

With more and more bicycles appearing on streets and paths, a few common sense habits can make the road a safer place. Here are some tips from safety experts:

• Travel with traffic and obey all traffic signs.

• Wear a helmet in case of spills and make sure bicycles are visible during dusk and dark by using front and rear lights or reflectors.

• Wear light-colored clothes for visibility.

• Before making a right-hand turn, motorists should check their blind spot for bicycles, and leave plenty of room before pulling back over when passing.

• Register bikes with the installation or local police department.

Nutrition

Snack smart for health

General Mills

Most of us love to snack. And by making smart choices, we can include snacking in a healthy eating plan, says Karen Wilder, registered dietitian and staff nutritionist for Total cereal.

She offers these ideas for nutritious nibbling:

• Add fiber to your diet with a snack of whole-grain toast. Dress it up with an all-fruit spread.

• Reach into the refrigerator for some lowfat or nonfat yogurt — a good way to add some calcium to your diet.

• Another source of calcium is lowfat or nonfat cheese cubes. Enjoy them with lowfat, wholegrain crackers, a tasty source of complex carbohydrates, including fiber.

• Munch on an apple or a pear. Have some carrot sticks, broccoli florets or other fresh vegetables. Your snack will provide vitamins and minerals as well as fiber.

• Sip real fruit juices for additional vitamins and minerals. They'll help fill you up without adding fat or many calories to your diet.

• Enjoy quick-to-fix snacks that provide a variety of nutrients. Hawaiian snack mix is an example. It features Whole Grain Total cereal plus the flavors of pineapple, banana and coconut.

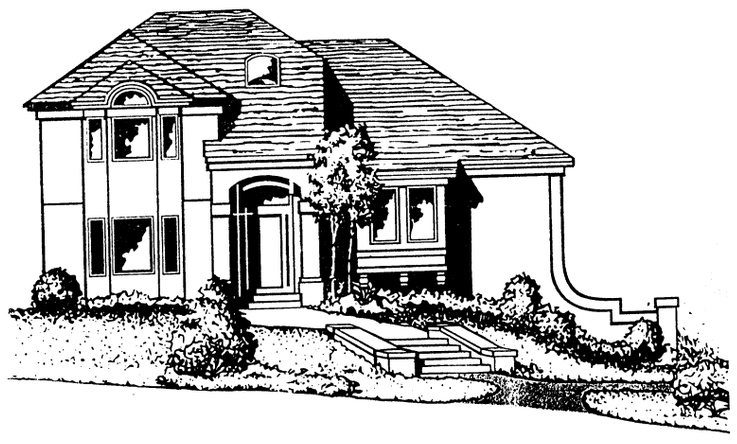
Interest rates can vary when buying homes

Better Business Bureau

Low interest rates have convinced many consumers that now is the time to begin shopping for their first home, which also means they will be shopping for a home mortgage.



An adjustable rate mortgage is popular because of its initial interest rate, which is often lower than interest rates for fixed-rate financing. An ARM is a mortgage with an interest rate that changes periodically during the life of the loan, according to a certain index and time schedule.

The initial interest rate can be in effect for a few months or for several years depending on the terms of the ARM. When the initial interest rate period ends, interest is then determined on the basis of an index. Not all indexes are the same.

Generally, an index that follows long-term market interest rates changes less frequently, which means the borrower has a better chance at more consistent interest rates. However, regardless of the index, an ARM does not allow the borrower to anticipate precisely what mortgage costs will be over the life of the loan, and it may be more difficult to plan your finances.

Loan documents should indicate how often interest rate changes may occur. Although the rate change could occur every month, it is more likely that the rate will change every several months or once a year.

Also, most ARMs have limits on the percentage amount that the interest rate can rise at each adjustment period and over the life of the loan. These periodic and overall caps protect the borrower from a large payment increase when adjustment is made to the interest rate.

To protect borrowers, the Truth-in-Lending Act requires a lender to provide borrowers with a disclosure statement about the cost of credit and an information booklet on adjustable rate mortgages.

The law also requires mortgage advertisers to give specific information about the terms of the loans they advertise, including the annual percentage rate.

For more information on ARMs, send for the Council of Better Business Bureaus' recently published booklet, "Tips on Adjustable Rate Mortgages."

For a copy, consumers should send $1 and a self-addressed, business-size envelope to CBBB, Department 023, Washington, D.C., 20042-0023.

Shop carefully for best buys at going-out-of-business sales

Better Business Bureau

To many consumers, "going-out-of-business sales" indicate big savings and limited-time offers. But, the Better Business Bureau warns that in some cases, such sales may not offer the best buys.

There are instances when a store must close its doors and liquidate any remaining stock quickly. According to the BBB and state and local laws, these sales should be held only if their stated or implied reason is a fact. Sales should be limited to a stated period of time and offer only merchandise that is affected by the emergency.

Bankruptcy, liquidation and going-out-of-business sales usually provide consumers with opportunities for big savings. However, unscrupulous businesses may run "final closing" sales regularly, ringing up big sales because the stores imply a sense of urgency and consumers believe they are purchasing the merchandise at greatly-reduced prices. In fact, a store may post artificially high prices, just so it can claim big savings. For instance, the $1,000 item marked "half-off" may normally sell for less than $500.

Instead of closing down, a store may reopen under a new name in the same or a new location. Once it reopens for business, it may run another going-out-of-business sale.

Another ploy is a going-out-for-business sale, a play on words used to lure customers with the implied promise of savings.

While big savings may be found at a legitimate "everything must go" sale, such savings shouldn't automatically be assumed. Consumers should compare price and quality, and read warranties carefully to find out if the item can be taken to a service center or other facility, since the store is closing and won't be able to offer service on its merchandise.

By comparing prices and understanding the truthful meaning of advertising promotions, consumers can avoid misleading come-ons and take advantage of stores offering truly good deals.

Beware: Dining out can be health risk

By Sarah L. Flash
Martin Army Medical Center

For most of us, dining out at a restaurant is an enjoyable experience because it is a social activity, and it may involve special foods not usually prepared at home.

It is estimated that Americans eat at least one of every three meals out and whatever the reason, dining away from home has become a national pastime. However, the person trying to eat a lowfat diet may be faced with difficult challenges. Menu items may not be prepared or served in a way that is compatible with the lowfat eating many people are trying to pursue.

Dietary recommendations from the American Heart Association give us guidelines for choosing more lowfat or fat-free foods, like fruits, legumes, vegetables and grains. First, watch how your food is prepared. Next, learn to recognize foods high in fat. Choose more starches, fruits and vegetables. Lastly, reduce or eliminate salt.

One basic guideline includes planning ahead. Contacting the restaurant in advance may allow for many answered questions including special requests or availability of healthy options. Is skim milk offered? Can the sauce, butter or gravy be omitted? Is there fruit for dessert? The menu can also tell a lot about a food item.

Look for: Steamed, broiled, in its own juice, garden fresh, poached, roasted or grilled.

Avoid: Butter, cream or cheese sauces, deep-fried or panfried, basted or stewed (in oil), casseroles, hollandaise sauce, hash or pot pie.

For breakfast, juice or fruit is a good start. Ask for whole grain breads or cereals, with lowfat margarine on the side. Request skim or 1 percent milk for cereal or coffee rather than cream or whole milk.

At lunch, appetizers such as raw fruits and vegetables, or steamed seafood may be a better choice than salted nuts, buttery crackers, or tortilla chips. Your best entree choices include poultry or fish prepared without added fats, and vegetable dishes. Be selective and put the dressing on the side. Avoid high-fat extras such as cole slaw or potato salad.

DR. FIT

U.S. Army Physical Fitness School

Recently, a woman forwarded a letter to The Bayonet requesting information concerning reading a nutritional label. Presently, our government is in a transition between the current nutrition label and the newer version. The newer version will be the law sometime in 1994. How-ever, because you can now see the current version, I will explain it.

Initially, the "serving size" is the suggested size for one serving. The "servings per container" is the number of suggested servings within the container. "Calories" is the number of calories per serving size. The protein, carbohydrate and fat amounts are presented in grams. Each gram of protein contains four calories. Each gram of carbohydrate contains four calories, and each gram of fat contains nine calories. Sometimes the total percentage does not add to or is higher than 100 percent. This is the result of a rounding error. However, the total percent will be around 100 percent.

For example, I have chosen a Light 'n Healthy, Pasta and Garden Vegetables dish.

Serving size: 7.5 ounces
Serving per container: 1
Calories: 150

Protein: 5 grams x 4 calories per gram = 20 calories divided by 150 = 13.3 percent.

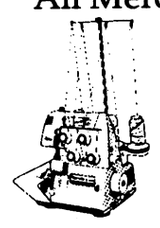
Carbohydrates: 30 grams x 4 calories per gram = 120 calories divided by 150 = 80 percent.

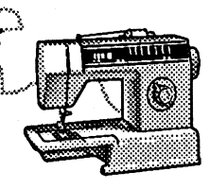
Fat: 1 gram x 9 calories per gram = 9 calories divided by 150 = 6 percent

Total: 99.3 percent
Cholesterol: 0 mg
Sodium: 630 mg

Q: What is a good method to decrease the calories in chicken, ham, or other salads?

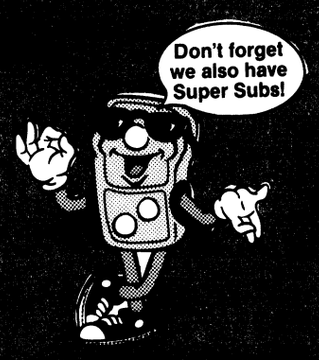
A: When you substitute 1/2 cup of plain nonfat yogurt for mayonnaise in a recipe for chicken or other salad dressings, you'll save 736 calories and 89 grams of fat!





Q: What percent of the calories come from fat in 2 percent milk?

A: The percent in milk refer to the weight and not the calories derived from milk. Would you buy 48 percent or 37.5 percent milk? Probably you would not purchase this product.



In one cup of regular milk, there are 150 calories with 8 grams of fat. Therefore, the fat content is 48 percent. In one cup of 2 percent milk, there are 120 calories, 5 grams of fat, or 37.5 percent fat. In 1 percent milk, there are 100 calories, 5 grams of fat, or 27 percent fat. Skim milk contains 85 calories and a trace of fat.

Do not restrict milk to growing boys and girls. It is also an excellent source of calcium for growing bones, particularly growing girls who wish to avoid weak bones when then grow older. Give the younger children whole milk because they need the fat to grow, but as they approach adolescence, gradually switch to 2 percent then 1 percent milk.

Customs, classics to compete

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning and the Noncommissioned Officers Association invite the public to participate in Fort Benning's first Rod Run and Custom Car Show Saturday at Stewart and Watson Fields.

Registration will take place the day of the show from 9 a.m. to noon and costs $12.

Assistance will be provided to those who need it during registration. The preregistration fee is $10.

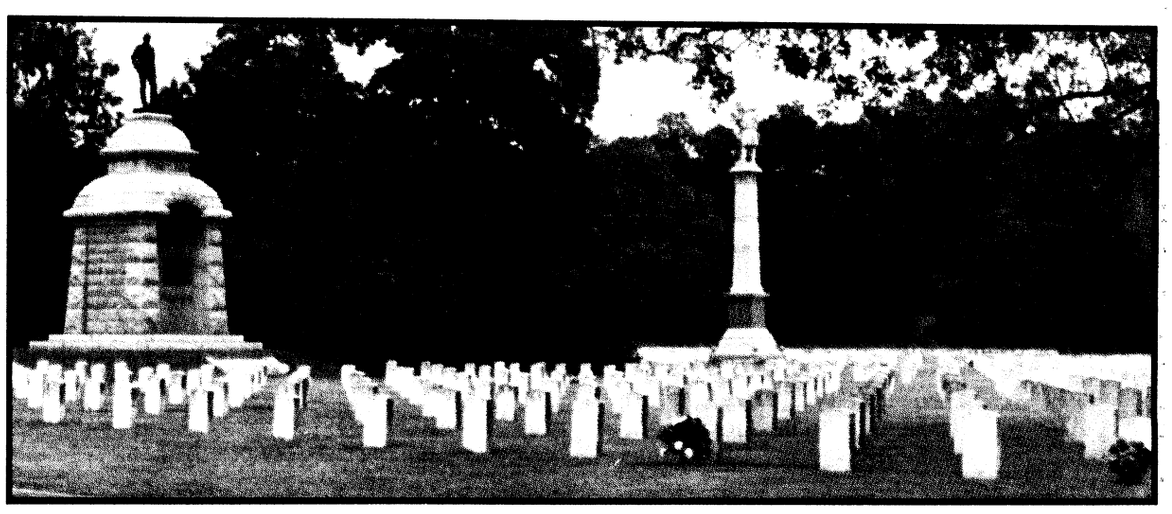
A Car Corral, where people can sell their own used cars, will be available for an $8 fee.

Trophies will be awarded to the top three entrants in 27 different classes ranging from street rods and antiques to Volkswagons and mini-trucks.

Special awards will be given for the auto with the most miles logged, the best-engineered auto, best paint job, best interior and the "hard luck" award. The trophy for best of show will be the people's choice.

Judging for the show will be from 1 to 4 p.m., with awards being presented after judging.

Between 250 and 300 entrants are expected to register from all over the tri-state area.



Lots of games with prizes, food, refreshments and music from the '50s and '60s will be available. Door prizes will be given to car show entrants.

The "Silver Wings," the U.S. Army Infantry Center's command exhibition parachute team, will perform a demonstration.

A "kiddie jumptower" will also be on hand for children's entertainment.

In case of inclement weather, the car show will be moved to the East Parking Lot of Infantry Hall.

For more information, call Sgt. 1st Class James Prince at 545-1970.

Andersonville to add POW museum

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

The museum's purpose will be to give visitors a genuine feel for the total prisoner-of-war experience

Visitors to the National Prisoner of War Museum, to be built in Andersonville, Ga., will not fail to notice its prison-like exterior.

The similarity is intentional, for the museum's purpose will be to give visitors a genuine feel for the total prisoner-of-war experience.

"The museum is going to be much more than just a warehouse to display artifacts," said Alan Marsh, lead park ranger at the Andersonville National Historic Site. "The intent will be to provide a truly interactive experience in which visitors will learn to appreciate their own freedom even more."

Discussions between museum planners and former POWs led to the designing of exhibits that will focus on elements common to the experience of American POWs from all wars, including capture, the definition of a POW, physical conditions, communications, living conditions, those who wait, morale and freedom.

In addition to the exhibits, the museum will include a courtyard with a stream from which a bronze statue of a POW will be drinking. Behind the statue, a brick wall will display a bas relief of three POW scenes depicting crowding, death, deprivation, isolation and the role of minorities and women.

And then, there is Andersonville itself, the site of the Civil War's largest and perhaps most infamous prisoner-of-war camp. A total of 45,000 Union soldiers would languish at Andersonville during its 14 months of operation, and nearly 13,000 would die from overcrowding, lack of food, disease and poor sanitation. The rows of gravestones marking the final resting places of Andersonville's dead can still be seen today.

Because Andersonville represents the plight of all American POWs throughout history, it is the ideal location for a national museum, Marsh said. "What the prisoners at Andersonville suffered is what all prisoners of war everywhere have suffered," he said.

Marsh added that education will be one of the most important goals of the museum. The museum will feature oral history presentations by ex-POWs, and there are also plans to expand the current museum's computer data base to include the names of all American prisoners of war. Visitors will be able to access the computer to look up the names of friends and relatives.

The designing of the 10,000 square-foot museum, which will replace the two existing museums built in the 1930s, is being done by the National Park Service Design Center in Denver, Colo. The designing is nearly finished but the actual construction of the museum cannot begin until the necessary funds are raised. Museum planners hope to cover the projected $9 million in construction costs with private donations and federal grants.

In the meantime, Park Service personnel are interviewing ex-prisoners of war and conducting a search for artifacts. The park has already acquired what it considers to be one of the most outstanding mementos of World War II: a large cement cross, handmade by American POWs to honor their fallen comrades at Camp O' Donnell in the Phillipines in 1942.

Anyone desiring information or who would like to send a donation to the museum construction fund can write to Fred Boyles, superintendent of the Andersonville National Historic Site at Route 1, Box 800, Andersonville, Ga. 31711.

Andersonville is located 60 miles from post. From Fort Benning, take Highway 27 toward Cusseta, turn left on to Highway 26 and continue through Buena Vista and Ellaville before taking Highway 49 south to Andersonville. The park is open daily from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Bash: Students have back-to-school party

By Reuben Warren
Directorate of Community Activities

More than 500 youths attended a Back-to-School Party at the Youth Services Center Aug. 27.

Magic 98.3 FM was on hand to give away prizes and broadcast the party live from the Youth Center.

Also present was Al Curry, an education coordinator with the Army Drug and Alcohol Prevention and Control Program. Curry handed out pens, stickers, buttons and T-shirts with drug-free slogans imprinted on them.

The evening was highlighted with a live performance by DE-VO-Te', a group of five local girls ranging between 15 and 16 years of age. All are students at Spencer High School, and have been singing together since January.

According to their manager, Vanessa Holmes, they are expecting to release their first single, "Apple of My Eye," later this year.

Through the Commercial Sponsorship program, event publicity and refreshments were provided free and the entire event was provided to area youths at no charge. Magic 98.3 provided a live broadcast with on-air personalities Darryl J and George G-Man-G.

Ricky Jordan, of Jordan Sausage Company, provided 1,000 hot dogs, and Lincoln Malphrus of Colonial Bakery provided the hot dog buns.

'Penny pinchers' to resume meetings

Consumer Affairs & Financial Assistance

"Penny Pinchers Make Cents," a coupon and consumer information exchange, will resume monthly meetings Sept. 23 in Building 2643, Soldiers' Plaza. One of the Army Community Service volunteers will share information that helped her family get out of $30,000 in debt.

She will share her experience determining family income and expenditures, finding ways to shop smarter, negotiating with creditors, getting interest rates reduced and finding agencies that can assist.

"Penny Pinchers" was initiated last year by volunteer Judy Deeter. Sally Pearson, another volunteer, is continuing the program while Deeter attends school. The progam is sponsored by the Consumer Affairs and Financial Assistance Program.

Pearson said she has been an avid coupon user for many years and even swaps by mail with her mother, sister and brothers.

Pick up some coupons you use. If you are already a coupon clipper, bring those you won't use, so that someone else may use them.

Future meetings are Oct. 28 and Nov. 18. All meetings are in Building 2643, Soldiers' Plaza. For more information, contact Ann Pratcher at 545-7517.

SatoTravel offers leisure travel options

By Linda Cobb
Sato Travel

Anyone with access to Fort Benning can purchase airline tickets and other leisure travel services at SatoTravel.

Leisure travel refers to vacations, leaves and other personal trips. SatoTravel guarantees that every customer will receive the lowest available price at the time of ticketing on airline tickets, or the company will refund double the difference.

A percentage of every leisure travel purchase made at SatoTravel, regardless of who the purchase is made for, is contributed to the Morale, Welfare and Recreation fund at Fort Benning.

Many community services are provided by MWR, such as recreation facilities, youth services, installation clubs and other programs that soldiers and their families use every day.

Call 687-4900 for more information, or stop by one of SatoTravel's three locations: Building 247, Ingersoll Street; Building 2628, Soldiers' Plaza; or Building 3245, Hanson Drive on Sand Hill.

Help available for bereaved parents

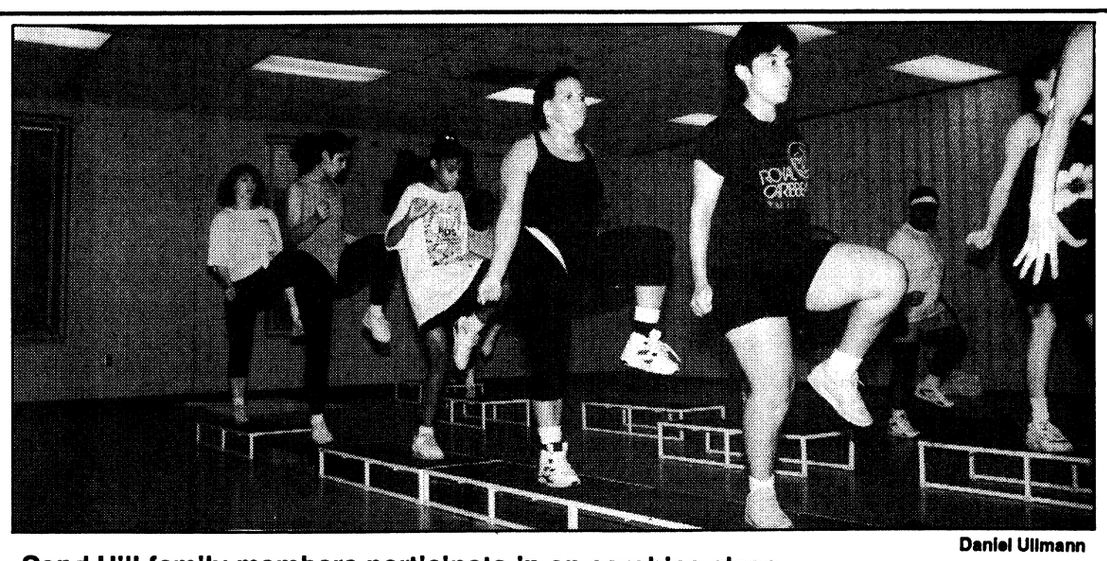
The Medical Center Inc.

The loss of a baby is one of the most devasting events any parent can suffer. Columbus Regional Healthcare System and The Medical Center want parents in this situation to know they are not alone, and have started a new support group just for bereaved parents.

This group, called Silent Footprints, meets on the fourth Tuesday night of each month at The Medical Center in the Laboratory Classroom at 7 p.m.

Helping professionals such as the director of Pastoral Care, and Obstetrical and Nurseries social workers will be on hand. However, the parents will decide the direction the group will take so that it can best assist them to deal with their particular situations.

To learn more about Silent Footprints, call Health Connections at 571-1111, Category 4372. If you would prefer to talk with someone directly, call The Medical Center and ask to speak with the director of Pastoral Care, the Rev. Larry Tee.



For more information, contact Nancy Williams at 571-1482.

Sand Hill family members participate in an aerobics class.

Stressed out? Try steppin' out — aerobically

By Daniel Ullmann
2nd Bn., 54th Inf. Regt.

How do some of the spouses and cadre of Sand Hill contend with some of the stress of a training environment? Aerobics.

Regular exercise programs have been proven to strengthen the cardiovascular system and improve circulation, which has the added effect of improving thought processes and memory retention.

Aerobics is also a great stress reliever, which can be very important to the cadre and family of cadre in training battalions, said Command Sgt. Maj. Willie G. Wells, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment.

Since early May, the battalion has sponsored an aerobics workout lead by Gladys Johnson, who has been involved with aerobics for more than 12 years.

Johnson, wife of Company A 1st Sgt. Andrew Johnson, said she runs the program so that each person can work at his or her own pace.

"It's a self-paced program where you can just let loose," she said.

The group meets Tuesdays and Thursdays at 5:30 p.m. at 2nd Bn., 54th Inf. Regt., Classroom 1.

Also, there is a walk aerobics class Saturdays at 8 a.m. for beginners. Steps are provided or participants can bring their own.

Babysitting is provided. For more information on these free classes, call Johnson at 544-1551 at work or 682-4123 at home.

PROFILE OF EXCELLENCE

Name: Sgt. Clyde W. Mitchell Jr.
Award or recognition: Noncommissioned officer of the fourth quarter
MOS: 92Y20
Unit: Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment
Job Title: Supply sergeant for Aviation Division, Directorate of Operations and Training
Years on the job: 6 1/2 years

Mitchell

What were your reasons for joining the Army?

It was the ultimate opportunity to gain recognition. The military could prove to be an investment that would allow me to enhance my character and build a better future for my family.

Define your style of leadership.

I have a participative leadership style. A good noncommisioned officer should be able to help develop competence in his subordinates by accepting recommendations before he makes the final decision.

What person has most influenced your military career?

My parents have most influenced my military career. I was taught to put God first and always give my best in all aspects of life.

If you were the sergeant major of the Army for a day, what improvements would you make?

I would stress to all service members the importance of assuming a leadership position. Then I would go into detail, focusing toward the noncommissioned officer, the bearing and lasting effect he or she will have on all soldiers that are influenced by his or her actions.

What were your reasons for choosing your MOS?

The Logistician plays an important role in the military. It is a very interesting field of occupation and I will be able to use all my duty positions in an effective way that will continuously prepare me for the changes in the civilian industry upon retirement.

Describe a memorable moment in your career.

While assigned to HHC, 7th Battalion, 6th Infantry, I deployed to Southwest Asia to participate in Operations Desert Storm, Shield and Sabre. I made the cut-off score for promotion to sergeant. I worked as Advance Logistical Operation Center noncommissioned officer in charge during the entire deployment.

What are your future plans?

To continue to progress in the military and retire after attaining the rank of command sergeant major. I will also have a master's degree in general education.

What others have to say :

Mitchell is an outstanding NCO. His personality, moral values, and enthusiasm are worthy of special recognition. His integrity, proficiency and devotion to duty reflect great credit on himself, Aviation Division, DOT and the U.S. Army.

Dental residents complete training

Speaker's advice: 'Always treat every patient as you would treat yourself '

By Paula V. Dansereau
Dental Department Activity

Not only does the Fort Benning Dental Activity provide quality care to its patient population, it is also one of three remaining one-year advanced general dentistry residency programs within the Army, according to Dental Activity officials.

The five current residents completed their postdoctoral training Aug. 26. They were honored with a dinner the preceding night at the Officers' Club and with a graduation ceremony and reception at the National Infantry Museum.

The guest speaker for both events was Col. Charles W. Wakefield, who is a former director of the residency program at Fort Benning as well as the two-year general dentistry residency program at Fort Hood, Texas.

Wakefield's dental and military career has seen him assigned to Alaska, Germany, Texas and as an exchange officer with the British army, Royal Army Dental Corps.

He holds diplomas from both the Federal Services Board of General Dentistry and the Certifying Board of General Dentistry. He is a fellow in the American and International Colleges of Dentists and holds the prestigious Surgeon General's "A" designator.

Wakefield is an associate professor and director of the residency program in the Department of General Dentistry at the Medical University of South Carolina's College of Dental Medicine.

In his speech during the graduation exercise, Wakefield cautioned the residents, "You're thinking it's finally over, but the real truth is it's just beginning."

He went on to say, "I would be excited about a career if I were in your shoes. You are embarking on careers when dentistry is undergoing growth and change in several areas — education, ethics and licensure.

"Stay current and seek out continuing education wherever you can. Always treat every patient as you would treat yourself. Never compromise your determination to excel.

Paula V. Dansereau

"As military officers and highly trained professionals, you are leaders. Never ask a subordinate or co-worker to do anything you wouldn't do yourself. Too many people are ready to carry the stool when there's a piano to be moved."

The graduating officers are: Maj. Alexander K. Deitch, who will be assigned to Hanau, Germany; Capt. Robert W. Herold, who will be stationed in Grafenwoehr, Germany; Capt. Jose A. Velazquez, whose next duty assignment is Vilseck, Germany; Capts. Phoebe K. Johnson and Gloria J. Stingley, who will remain assigned to Fort Benning.

The residents for FY 94 are: Capts. Nikki L. Smith, Grace M. Aileru, Donna R. Garrett, Michelle T. Icasiano, Todd E. Nielsen, Rodney H. Jones, Gregory S. Cook and David M. Fallah.

Medal of Honor winner passes down infantry blue

By Ed Taylor
2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment

On Aug. 12, Pvt. 1 Brian D. Murray Jr., along with the rest of the soldiers of Company C, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Training Brigade, earned his infantry blue shoulder cord.

It was an especially proud moment for Murray because his grandfather, Medal of Honor winner retired Col. Charles P. Murray, attended the ceremony and placed on his grandson's shoulder the very infantry cord he wore while on active duty more than 20 years ago.

The elder Murray is not a stranger to Fort Benning. He entered the Army as a private in 1942, but soon after received a commission as a second lieutenant after completing Officer Candidate School here.

Murray served as a rifle company commander in the 3rd Infantry Division as a first lieutenant and was awarded the Medal of Honor for actions in France Dec. 16, 1944.

He also served as an infantry brigade commander before he retired in 1973 after serving more than 30 years.

In addition to the Medal of Honor, his more than 30 military decorations include four awards of the Silver Star, four awards of the Legion of Merit, and two awards of the Bronze Star Medal.

His foreign decorations include the French Legion of Honor, the French Croix de Guerre, and the Republic of Vietnam Cross of Gallantry. Both of Col. Murray's sons, including Pvt. Murray's father, served in the military and are veterans of the Vietnam War.

Earlier in the day, the 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Battalion Commander Lt. Col. Bruce D. Grant gave a presentation to the friends and families of the graduating soldiers, describing the different facets of the soldiers' training.

Afterward, Col. Murray commented how similar the training was to what he went through in the 1944. The training is still 13 weeks long and the same fundamentals needed to survive and win on the battlefield are still taught, he said.

TIPS FOR MAKING YOUR AD MORE EFFECTIVE

- Start Your ad with the item you are selling, service you are offering, or job title you are looking to hire.
- Be descriptive. The more information you provide to the reader, the better the responses will be to your ad.
- Use bold type, white space of decorative characters such as stars, to bring attention to your ad.
- Run your ad for an ample length of time. Remember, as soon as you get results, you can cancel at any time during regular business hours.
- Always include the price of your item.

'New Adventures of Superman' soars on ABC

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

It's still not a bird ... it's still not a plane ... but it IS a new twist on one of the most enduring characters ever to spring from comic-book pages.

In addition to animated versions of his exploits, the planet Krypton's number-one son launched a radio program, two 1940s' movie serials, a classic 1950s' TV series that now is a staple of cable's Nick at Nite, and a quartet of feature films that starred Christopher Reeve.

The legend gets a '90s retelling in "Lois & Clark: The New Adventures of Superman," an ABC series that begins Sunday and stresses — as the title should imply — the relationship between Daily Planet reporters Lois Lane and Clark Kent, with the latter's alter ego as the Man of Steel creating considerable complications for the couple. The super-powered hero now is played by Dean Cain, who appeared last year as Brenda's (Shannen Doherty) Paris fling in several episodes of "Beverly Hills, 90210"; the role of Lois is assumed by Teri Hatcher, who has been featured in such movies as "Soapdish" and "Tango & Cash."

For all of its new trappings and modern sensibilities, "Lois & Clark" will remain true to the traditions of the Superman franchise according to series creator Deborah Joy LeVine, who shares executive-producer status with David Jacobs ("Dallas," "Knots Landing,"

"Homefront"). However, she adds, "We're not going to have situations the way they did in the 1950s (version), where it was, 'Gee, Clark, where's Superman?' When Lois Lane falls in love with Clark Kent and says to someone, 'Gee, I think he looks a lot like Superman,' I think the response will be, 'Well, ALL women in love think their man looks like Superman.' We're taking this show in more of a realistic fashion. I believe that the whole Superman idea represents the most unrequited love story of our time, and I think you can keep that going for a while. Lois falling in love, Clark liking Lois, Lois finally liking Clark, Clark being attracted to Lois, Lois being attracted to someone else ... are these two ever going to get together?"

If they do, it will be coordinated between the TV show and the comic-book equivalent, LeVine reports; that would be a multi-media event for the Time Warner conglomerate, which owns both Warner Bros. Television (which is making the series) and DC Comics (the character's figurative birthplace).

As for the latest man who would be Superman, genial actor Cain admits that he wasn't a comic-reader in his younger years, but he reflects, "I've run into a lot of people who really are well-versed in Superman's background. There was a guy here (on the set) who listed all the kinds of kryptonite for me. I guess I have a little homework to do, but I think we're creating a bit of a different background, so it's almost to my benefit that I don't know everything. I sort of discover it as Deborah writes it."

What: "New Adventures of Superman"
When: Sunday, 8 p.m. on ABC

Fort Benning breaks ground for a ranger rigging facility

By Lawrence K. Hughes
USAIC Public Affairs Office

A groundbreaking ceremony for a new parachute rigging facility took place at Lawson Army Airfield Tuesday. According to a project officer, the new facility will replace an older building currently in use and fulfill all Fort Benning's needs for packing, maintaining, storing and drying of parachutes. Tune in to "Fort Benning Today" Monday for highlights of the dedication ceremony.

A four-person team from the Training and Doctrine Command Communities of Excellence program recently toured Fort Benning. The team came to validate information submitted in the nomination of Fort Benning in the competition for the Department of the Army Communities of Excellence, Commander in Chief Award for Best Army Installation. Highlights of the visit, which featured a Silver Wings' parachuting exhibition and the Commander's Excellence Breakfast at the Officers' Club will be shown.

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Infor-mation Channel announces post events, post movie listings and offers free classified advertisements on "Fort Benning Update," a community information service.

If you subscribe to Fort Benning Cable, you can watch USAIC TV on Channel 3, 24 hours a day. Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:26, 7:56, 8:26 and 8:56 on WLTZ TV-38.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) The signals you receive in business may be unclear. Make sure you know what is expected of you. A friend asks for your help. Guard against extravagant shopping on impulse and overspending on pleasure interests.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Read the fine print on travel brochures when making plans for a vacation. Advice you receive this week seems contradictory. Avoid domestic quarrels.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Be down to earth and practical where money interests are concerned this week. Resist fly-by-night propositions. A date may be cancelled now or a trip may have to be postponed.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Mix-ups in communications impede collaborative efforts this week. Couples should listen to each other carefully. Self-discipline and hard work bring gains. Home-based activities bring joy.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22). Concentrative powers may not be at their best, and work performance may be erratic. A change in your daily routine is likely now.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) Work progress may be less than you had hoped for this week. You may take issue with what you feel is unmerited criticism. Guard against wasteful spending.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) An expected home delivery may not be on time. A relative's unconventional behavior surprises you. Real estate dealings aren't favored. A friend may be out of sorts. Responsibilities in connection with children take priority now.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Things seem to be in a muddle regarding a career endeavor this week. An important paper may be misplaced. You are better off doing things yourself now than counting on the cooperation of others.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Use good judgment when shopping now or you may purchase something you really don't need. Interruptions may interfere with getting down to work. Try not to rush things when you finally get started.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) Try to keep a relative abreast of your schedule this week. Don't keep family members waiting if possible. You may be upset this week about a financial concern. Try to be levelheaded in business now. Keep your feet on the ground.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) Facts are hard to come by now. Someone is not telling the truth or doesn't know what they are talking about. Your moods tend to vary this week. At first, you seem down, then you are overly exuberant.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20) Unexpected expenses could crop up now. An undependable friend shouldn't be counted on. It is best to do things yourself this week rather than to rely on others. An argument is sure to erupt if you are not more patient with a co-worker. Be skeptical of big money propositions.

Daisy fest to bloom today

Georgia's Stone Mountain Park

The 25th Annual Yellow Daisy Festival offers a colorful weekend of fine arts, homemade crafts, foot-tapping entertainment, festival foods and a celebrated flower show at Georgia's Stone Mountain Park today, Saturday and Sunday.

If last year's attendance of more than 350,000 guests is any indication, Yellow Daisy '93, already recognized as the South's largest outdoor arts and crafts show, is an event not to miss this fall.

The Yellow Daisy Festival, corresponding with the blooming of the dainty and rare Confederate Daisy, which only grows within seeing distance of Stone Mountain, features more than 400 juried arts and crafts exhibits, including a special fine arts section. Additional offerings feature music and clogging continuously throughout each day.

The Yellow Daisy Festival has its home in the Coliseum Meadow and Pavilion area of the park — an open expanse of grassy meadows, woods and paved trails. The location provides ample space for adults and children to roam at their leisure, enjoying a day or two at one of the park's most popular events.

Back again this year is the Great American Potato Salad Contest sponsored by Kraft Miracle Whip. Dust off great-grandma's treasured recipe or polish up your own favorite, and bring that masterpiece to the Coliseum to compete for your share of the $1,000 in prize money. Judging will begin at 1:30 p.m. Sunday. For full contest rules, call the park Information Center at 498-5702.

Fun awaits at the Children's Creative Corner. Balloon animals, story telling, face painting, sand creations and arts and crafts provide youthful guests with a variety of artistic outlets.

Nearby, don't miss the Standard Flower Show in the Plantation Room of the Stone Mountain Inn. The flower show is the oldest and among the most popular of the Yellow Daisy Festival offerings. See exotic and native species of flowers and plants, pick up arranging and growing tips from the award winners and enjoy the beauty of it all at this annual competition and exhibition.

Do you have a talent for arts and crafts? To enter, call (404) 498-5634 for information on both yearly shows.

Florence Marina State Park to honor Native Americans

Georgia Dept. of Natural Resources

Florence Marina State Park is sponsoring its third annual Native American Days today and Saturday.

Today's program is geared to students. Saturday's programs are for all ages and the public is invited.

This program is a celebration of Native American cultures. These include Cherokee, Creek, Sho-Shoni, Seminole and Seneca.

The demonstration area will be filled with people of each tribe dressed in authentic dress. Different types of dwellings will also be set up in the demonstration area.

Saturday's programs will be from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. There will guided tours of a nearby mound village at 10 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Admission to the program is $2 for adults and $1 for youth 6 through 18. The fee for students Saturday will be 50 cents.

H & R BLOCK INCOME TAX COURSE STARTS SEPTEMBER 13

Thousands of people learn how to prepare income tax returns from H & R Block and then earn money as income tax preparers. H & R Block, the world's largest income tax preparation service, offers its Income Tax Course starting September 13, 1993. Morning, evening, and Saturday classes are available.

Experienced instructors teach tax law, theory, and application. Classroom discussion and practice problems provide students with a thorough understanding of each tax topic included in the course. Students learn how to handle increasingly complex income tax situations as the course progresses.

Ideal for people who want to increase their tax knowledge, the course teaches students how to save money on their taxes and also prepares them for a rewarding career.

The affordable fee includes textbooks and supplies. Graduates receive Certificates of Achievement and continuing education units (CEUs). Qualified graduates of the course may be offered job interviews with H & R Block but are under no obligation to accept employment.

Those interested in more information about the H & R Block Income Tax Course may contact the H & R Block office at 2511 Airport Thruway, Columbus, Georgia. You may also call

SOAP UPDATE

King Features Syndicate

ALL MY CHILDREN: Tad ripped up Palmer's post-dated check and began the process of taking over Cortlandt Electronics. Charlie feared Hayley might start drinking again after seeing her in a bar with Alec. Later, Alec reported to Adam that he and Hayley had a date and he'd look after her with Adam's blessings. Wait to see: Ted and Tad make a shocking discovery about the past.

ANOTHER WORLD: With Ryan at her side, Vicky told Grant their marriage was over. Although devastated, Grant vowed to get her back. Paulina met Rosa who led her to her mother's grave. Jake stole the contents of the safety deposit box from Paulina and Ian's room. Later, he tried to get Rosa to give him information on Mac Cory. Carl tried to ingratiate himself with Rachel by telling her where Paulina was. Hank proposed and Iris accepted. Wait to see: Paulina's jungle quest turns dangerous.

AS THE WORLD TURNS: After Cynthia testified, Royce, realizing he might have a twin brother after all, got on the stand and astonished everyone with his testimony. Caleb was upset when he learned Julie rented Neal's apartment. Iva covered her pain as she gave Aaron to Holden. Jason comforted Iva. Jessica was concerned when Duncan suddenly hung up on his call from Istanbul. Wait to see: Lyla makes a decision about the tour.

BOLD AND THE BEAUTIFUL: Macy's blood tests proved she was drunk when she crashed her car. Shaken, she asked Thorne to call Alcoholics Anonymous for her. Connor was upset when Brooke turned down his proposal. Eric was upset with Sheila for agreeing to help Brooke throw Stephanie out of her office, and announced he'd sleep in the guest room. Later, Sheila and Connor met at the Bikini and traded insults while Karen and Sly wondered what these two "enemies" were talking about. After Sheila left, she secretly snapped a photo of Karen comforting Connor with an embrace. Wait to see: Sheila's surprise is about to be sprung, and Brooke might be caught in it.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES: With Victor's discarded confidential diskettes in his possession, Jack was sure he had the goods on Kiriakis. Later, he and Jennifer were crushed when they saw Kate give the "Spectator" to Victor, her new husband. Jamie told Roman about Sami's bulimia, causing Sami to lash out at Marlena and reveal she knew her mother had slept with John. Vivian crashed Kate and Victor's wedding, and grabbed the bridal bouquet while vowing the marriage won't last through Thanksgiving. Wait to see: Lawrence makes a life-changing decision.

GENERAL HOSPITAL: A baffled Mac and Felicia tried to deal with Sean's confession to Jessica's murder. While they tried, unsuccessfully, to accept it, a troubled Tiffany remained catatonic from the news. Lucy remained skeptical of Katherine despite her attempts to develop a friendship between them. Stone and Karen each confessed to the other that living a double life was getting to them. Wait to see: Mac and Felicia find something more to baffle them.

GUIDING LIGHT: Acting on what she believed was the right thing to do, Bridget interrupted Julie and Dylan's wedding ceremony. When Julie admitted how she really felt, a furious Dylan brought her to the Jessup farm and told Hart, he could have her. Eve defended Bridget after Ed chided her for what she'd done. Josh, meanwhile, hinted to Marley about something that happened while he was in Italy. Wait to see: Josh carries a painful secret.

LOVING: Cooper agreed to stop seeking Tyler's custody if Casey would agree to stop seeing Ally. Casey got Steffi to help him create a scene that would turn Ally off once and for all. Ava and Jeremy agreed to let themselves enjoy their newfound love. Trucker was caught in the middle as Tess and Mac accused each other of trying to defraud him. Wait to see: Curtis is forced to face his past because of an unexpected development.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE: Marty managed to tape Todd's confession about raping her. After telling Nora the truth about Marty's rape, Powell returned to the frat house to plan his suicide. Tina, along with the children, went off to Bermuda with Cord, unaware that Cain was following her. Wait to see: Luna gives Max some reason to worry about their relationship, while Viki is concerned about Sloan's reaction to Dorian's story.

YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS: Hope told Clint she wouldn't marry him. Danny was upset when Cricket delayed going to New York with them until she can help resolve another problem with Rainbow Gardens. Steve called Cole to come to New York to discuss his book. Jack was unable to get Miguel to tell him anything about Nikki's new "boyfriend." Victoria was determined to get Cole away from his "other woman." Nikki, meanwhile, began to fret that she might be a little too old for Cole. Wait to see: To the "Victor" belongs the spoils.

Man dies in on-post crash

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

A man was killed in a car accident on U.S. Highway 27, south of First Division Road in Harmony Church at 11 a.m. Sept. 10.

Eric Gonglach, former owner of Malone's Bar and Grill in Columbus, was killed when his car struck a broken-down moving van parked on the side of the highway, according to a Military Police report.

The moving van was unattended at the time of the accident, according to the report.

Gonglach was extracted from his vehicle, a 1992 Toyota, by Fort Benning Fire Department personnel using the jaws of life.

He was transported to Martin Army Community Hospital by Emergency Medical Service personnel where he was pronounced dead due to injuries sustained in the accident, according to the report.

Gonglach, 50, of Midland, Ga., owned and operated Simon's in Albany, Ga. He was not wearing a seatbelt at the time of the accident, according to the report.

The Criminal Investigation Division is continuing to investigate the accident.

Taxi service

Don't let the wrong cab take you for a ride

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Some soldiers on Fort Benning are using unauthorized taxi services and may be overcharged.

Two cab companies, Independent and American, have a contract with Fort Benning to provide exclusive service on post. They charge special rates for traffic to, from and within the post, and pay a fee for every cab operated.

The problem, according to Sgt. Maj. Allen Thrower of the Directorate of Community Activities, is several companies not under contract are picking up fares on post. Also, some soldiers may not know which companies to call if they need a ride.

"Any cab can pick up soldiers downtown and bring them to Fort Benning," Thrower said, "but they're supposed to take the most direct route off post after they drop off the soldiers. Instead, they'll drive around slowly and hope a group of soldiers will flag them down."

It's to the soldiers' advantage, Thrower said, to use the contracted taxi companies.

"Before we had Independent and American under contract," he said, "some soldiers were being ripped off. There were no set rates, so they could be charged whatever the driver wanted to charge the soldier."

Another reason for the contract, Thrower said, is to protect the soldiers' safety.

"Every American and Independent taxi operating on post has to undergo a safety inspection before getting a permit," he said. "This ensures soldiers aren't riding around in dangerous vehicles."

For more information or to register a complaint on any taxi service, call Thrower at 545-3485 or Roger Garrity at 545-4917.

Taxi zone fares

Each zone has a set fare, from pickup to discharge:

- Within Main Post — $3
- Within Kelley Hill — $1
- Within Sand Hill — $1.50
- Main Post to Uchee Creek — $8
- Sand Hill to Main Post — $5
- Kelley Hill to Main Post — $4

Each additional person is charged an additional $1

The first concert of the fall season is scheduled for 5 p.m. Sunday at Riverside.

Post Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White and his wife, Linda, invite everyone to join them on the lawn of their historic home to hear the Infantry Band and Infantry Chorus perform.

This concert will introduce the new commander of the Infantry Band, Chief Warrant Officer 3 Ronald Bucher.

Everyone is invited to bring blankets, lawn chairs and coolers to the outdoor concert to enjoy the music.

In case of rain, the concert will be canceled.

Fort Benning colonels to join OCS hall of fame

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Two Fort Benning commanders will be among this year's inductees into the Officer Candidate School's Hall of Fame.

Col. Robert L. Jordan Jr., commander of the 29th Infantry Regiment, and Col. James Crockert, commander of the Military Police Activity, will be among the 97 OCS graduates who will be inducted into the Hall of Fame today in Marshall Auditorium in Infantry Hall at 11 a.m.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, Fort Benning commanding general, is scheduled to be the speaker.

The OCS Hall of Fame has inducted 21 Medal of Honor recipients, 1,062 colonels, 104 brigadier generals, 95 major generals, 20 lieutenant generals, three generals and 84 distinguished civilians who have graduated from OCS. This year's inductees include two retired major generals, two retired and three active duty brigadier generals, 88 colonels and two distinguished civilians.

The ceremony honors past OCS graduates. Among this year's inductees are:

- Terry Sanford, who has served as a senator in the North Carolina State Senate, the governor of North Carolina, president of Duke University and U.S. senator for North Carolina. Sanford was commissioned as an infantry officer upon graduation from OCS in November 1943.
- Retired Maj. Hershel W. Gober, commissioned as an infantry officer in September 1962, and is currently serving as the second-ranking executive in the federal Department of Veterans Affairs.
- Jordan was commissioned in the infantry after graduating from OCS in 1971.
- Crockert was commissioned an infantry officer upon graduation from OCS in April 1967. He is also the provost marshal of U.S. Army Infantry Center, Fort Benning.

COMMENTARY

Procrastination. It's a fancy word for a common failing: putting things off.

Sometimes it's because there's just too much to do. My office, which is full of hardworking people who produce a quality product every week, is still riddled with examples of procrastination.

Some of us put off going on diets, paying bills or completing necessary but tedious paperwork.

Snively puts off writing his column — this week he wandered in 15 minutes before deadline, with some story about how he was too busy to write.

He's no match for me, though. I'm a world-class procrastinator, and I have the mail to prove it. I get no letters, because I haven't written to my friends and family in living memory. On the other hand, my faithful bill collectors write me constantly with gentle, red-bordered reminders of my forgetfulness.

The state of my house also reflects my tendency to put things off. It's hard to explain to people why I still have Christmas ornaments up, but after all, there are only three more months until next Christmas, so it would be a waste of time to take them down now. Right?

Obviously, it's necessary to set priorities, and I do this every weekend. First, make a list:

- Do laundry
- Go grocery shopping
- Research the history of the world for a story due next week that was assigned to me five years ago — and that I haven't started yet
- Clean the house — really, I mean it, I'm finally going to do the whole thing this weekend
- Catch up on my sleep

Next, prioritize the list. I do this by first eliminating anything with an action verb — go, do, clean and so on. If there's anything left on the list, I resolutely put it aside and make a definite decision to deal with it. Later.

I think we're dealing with more than one factor here, though. Procrastination, in most cases, comes partly from having too much to do, partly from disorganization and partly from laziness.

So I'm going to stop putting things off. I'm going to reduce my commitments so I don't have so much to do, and I'm going to set up a system for every little thing in my life, so I'll be organized.

And I'm going to do all of that right after my nap.

SOMALIAGRAM

As you can certainly see on the television news, peace-making efforts here in Mogadishu continue to be very intense. Even though we at Sword Base are in close proximity to all this activity, we continue to exercise extreme caution in the performance of our missions and are maintaining a high state of readiness within our compounds. Thankfully, soldiers at the Ammunition Supply Point at Mogadishu Airport continue to enjoy relatively peaceful living and working conditions.

We continue the process of transitioning our companies, both here at Sword Base and at the ASP. Both these areas were bursting at the seams as our transition population hit a high of 1,179 soldiers on Sept. 4. Now, the population has begun to drop again as the 183rd Maintenance Company has departed Somalia for Fort Carson, Colo. Other units will also depart this week, which should bring us down to our normal operating strength of 650 soldiers. This whole transition process has been a challenge for all concerned, but has gone very smoothly due to excellent planning, execution and cooperation on the part of staff, commanders and hundreds of soldiers.

Sgt. 1st Class Walter Phillips arrived with the last flight from Fort Benning and is busily engaged in making videos to send back for all the families in the states. He plans to produce video letters from soldiers to their spouses and children and will produce special videos on some of the unique aspects of the battalion's mission and living conditions in Somalia.

I will now take this opportunity to thank all the fine people at Fort Benning and in the Columbus community whose efforts were so critical to the successful deployment of the 13th Corps Support Battalion. You not only gave us a great send-off, you also planned, equipped, supplied, clothed, trained, briefed and prepared us. Thank you all!

Finally, a special thanks to Capt. Chris Wilson, group communications officer, who just returned to Fort Benning. He volunteered to accompany the battalion to Somalia to set up our communications network. Not only did he do a superb job for us in that arena, he also worked in the battalion Tactical Operations Center where he performed with distinction on two separate occasions when Sword Base came under attack from mortars. Well done and thanks!

Commander
13th Corps Support Battalion

LETTERS

Soldier feels living conditions unlivable

This letter is written to express not only my feelings, but the feelings of all the occupants I had the opportunity to encounter during my stay at the Billeting at Fort Benning.

Let me start by saying that the staff was very professional in all their duties, as far as arranging and assigning quarters. Unfortunately, this is where professionalism stopped. The living conditions were very far from living.

The first reason for this statement would be the outrageous pest problem in the rooms. Visitors should not have to tolerate fighting roaches from their suitcases, briefcases, showers, beds or refrigerators.

The second reason would be the smell. The smells I encountered were of mold and mildew.

The last reason for this statement is the sight or condition, which was that of dirty walls, stained ceiling, plaster falling from both ceiling and walls, and dirty microwaves.

Fort Benning, being the home of airborne training, sees many personnel from all walks of life. The impression they receive from the temporary living quarters should not be that of a run-down ghetto.

Staff Sgt. Thaddeus Bowden
New Equipment Training Team

Fort Benning Billeting response:

I was sorry to hear about the unpleasant conditions you encountered during your stay at Fort Benning.

We appreciate your kind comments regarding the professional and courteous staff. Fort Benning Billeting is committed to providing you, the soldier, a professional and courteous staff, as well as a clean, safe and secure environment.

Regarding the pest control problem, Georgia has a hot and humid climate; and, because of this, we do have a pest control challenge. The rooms are sprayed on a regular basis; and, each time a work order is received, they are sprayed again.

Regarding the condition of your room, we recently renovated that particular section of Building 399, to include carpeting, and we are in the process of renovating the hall and stairways. Because you departed before we could meet with you, it was difficult for us to coordinate the corrective action you indicated.

Fort Benning Billeting is open to our guests 24 hours a day, and we welcome opportunities to resolve complaints.

Billeting rooms are provided to all soldiers at rates far below any hotel or motel in the Columbus area, and our goal is to make their stay as pleasant as possible. We apologize for any inconvenience you believe occurred during your stay. We sincerely hope that you will not let this keep you from visiting our facility again.

Raymond H. Wagner
Billeting officer

Show respect for superior officers

I have been on this post for over a year now and I think that I am qualified to comment on what I believe is a serious scar on the quality of soldiers here on Fort Benning.

Without exception, the most basic tradition in the Department of Defense calls for every enlisted soldier or officer to salute a commissioned officer of higher grade. This goes without saying for most of us. However, more and more, I have witnessed gross neglect from junior enlisted soldiers all the way to senior NCOs.

I perceive the problem as being that too many times we are caught up in what we are doing and not paying attention to our environment. So, as a commissioned officer approaches, we fall prey to just pretending we didn't see him or her. A good remedy would be to adhere to that old Army adage, "Stay alert, stay alive." Next time it may be an enemy sneaking up on you and he'll cut your throat.

Another problem along the same lines comes when soldiers are around the flag. The flag is a remarkable symbol of freedom, strength and pride. Yet so many times people will walk by an uncased flag outdoors (such as the flag flying in front of Infantry Hall or the one above the Airborne Walk) and not render any type of salute. I cannot even begin to describe how I feel when I think about how our fallen and captured comrades would feel if they witnessed such an act. The brave young men and women who fought to protect our freedoms and way of life, I am sure, would act with outrage at the disregard for everything they laid their life down for.

In conclusion, I would like to charge each and every soldier and family member here in Fort Benning to help one another to respect our military customs and our flag just a little bit more. Military courtesies (to officers and our flag) aren't there to make our lives hell. They are there to enrich each and every one of us. Let's all take part!

Cpl. Frederic S. George
U.S. Army intelligence analyst

Command sergeant major response:

I am in agreement. There is an awareness of the lack of military courtesy displayed by soldiers, noncommissioned officers and officers at Fort Benning.

The chain of command has been made aware of the problem and necessary information is being disseminated to the lowest level. Saluting is a requirement. Remember, it shows respect both ways, with the exchange of the salute.

As far as the colors, you are correct. The colors are a remarkable symbol of freedom, strength and pride, and are deserving of our utmost respect and courtesy. Army Regulation 600-25 Appendix A outlines proper rendering of military courtesy to the colors.

Respect to colors on a flagpole are rendered once in the morning during reveille and at the end of the day at retreat.

However, there is no requirement during the rest of the day to render the hand salute while the colors are displayed on the flagpole.

Everyone should be aware of the procedures of rendering proper military courtesy in any situations, such as, reveille, retreat to the colors or national anthem, when uncased colors pass by or when passing uncased colors, cannon salutes, vehicles and military funerals.

Thanks so much for your concern regarding military courtesy at Fort Benning. It is well shared with the chain of command of this wonderful installation.

New 75th commander plans excellence

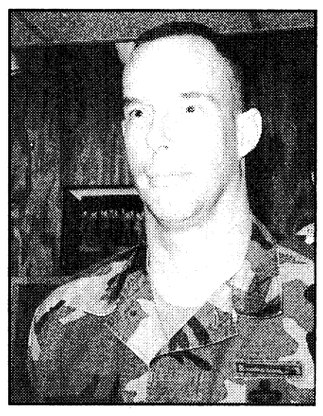
Maintains reputation as best

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

Excellence is a hard act to follow. Just ask Col. James T. Jackson, commander of the 75th Ranger Regiment since July 21; he'll know.

Jackson's challenge is to live up to the leadership standards set by Col. David E. Grange, former regimental commander.

"We have the Army's finest here (in the 75th)," said Jackson. "My first order of business is to try to maintain the reputation of this organization.



"Specifically, we are the best light infantry force in the world. To maintain that reputation, we will have to continue to train at the high levels we've been training at and make sure we provide the Army with the capabilities it wants to have," Jackson said. "That's the tough part."

So what is Jackson looking forward to the most?

"Working with the people," he said. "I get to work with the best people, and we all get to do what we came in the Army to do. You can't really ask for much more than that."

Jackson knows that even though his team is the best, the road ahead will be a tough one.

"Being able to meet our obligations — which are to be the best — that's my number one challenge," he said. "In order to be the best, you have to maintain the very highest standards; and that in itself is a challenge because there are many times when you'd like to violate those standards, but the bottom line is that you cannot do that."

"Being able to meet our obligations — which are to be the best — that's my number one challenge."

— Col. James T. Jackson
Commander, 75th Ranger Regiment

But, Jackson is no stranger to a challenge, and he has his experience backing him up.

"All I've ever done is light infantry work, and I've been jumping out of planes since 1972," he said.

Jackson has served with, along with many others, the 82nd Airborne Division, the 2nd Ranger Battalion, the 7th Infantry Division and commanded the 75th's 3rd Ranger Battalion.

This self-proclaimed "Army brat" (his father retired from the Army as a colonel after 33 years, including combat in World War II and Korea) had a tough time as a child trying to call anywhere his home.

"I kind of bounced around all over the world and lived in many places," he said.

Jackson's taking command of the 75th finally brought him to a place he can claim as his own. "Fort Benning is the infantryman's home, and it's always nice to come home," he said. His first introduction to Benning was while attending the Infantry Officer Basic Course in 1971 after graduating from Kent State University.

"It's great to be back at Fort Benning," Jackson said. "I can't think of a better installation, a better place to raise a family (he and his wife, Nancy, have three daughters: Kristen, 10; Angela, 7; and Sarah, 5), or a better place to do a job — I've got the best of both worlds.

"I can't believe there's an infantryman anywhere else who wouldn't love to have my job."

DoD trains future civilian execs

By F. Peter Wigginton
American Forces Information Service

The Department of Defense Executive Leadership Development Program is the only civilian joint training program in the department.

It began in 1985 to identify future executives and provide them essential leadership training.

The program has an intermediate program for General Schedule and General Management grades 12 and 13 and equivalent military ranks and a senior program for grades GM 14 and 15 and military equivalents.

Competitively selected participants represent every major DoD component and a diverse range of occupations. The one-year agenda emphasizes problem solving and includes classroom exercises in traditional management courses plus field activities.

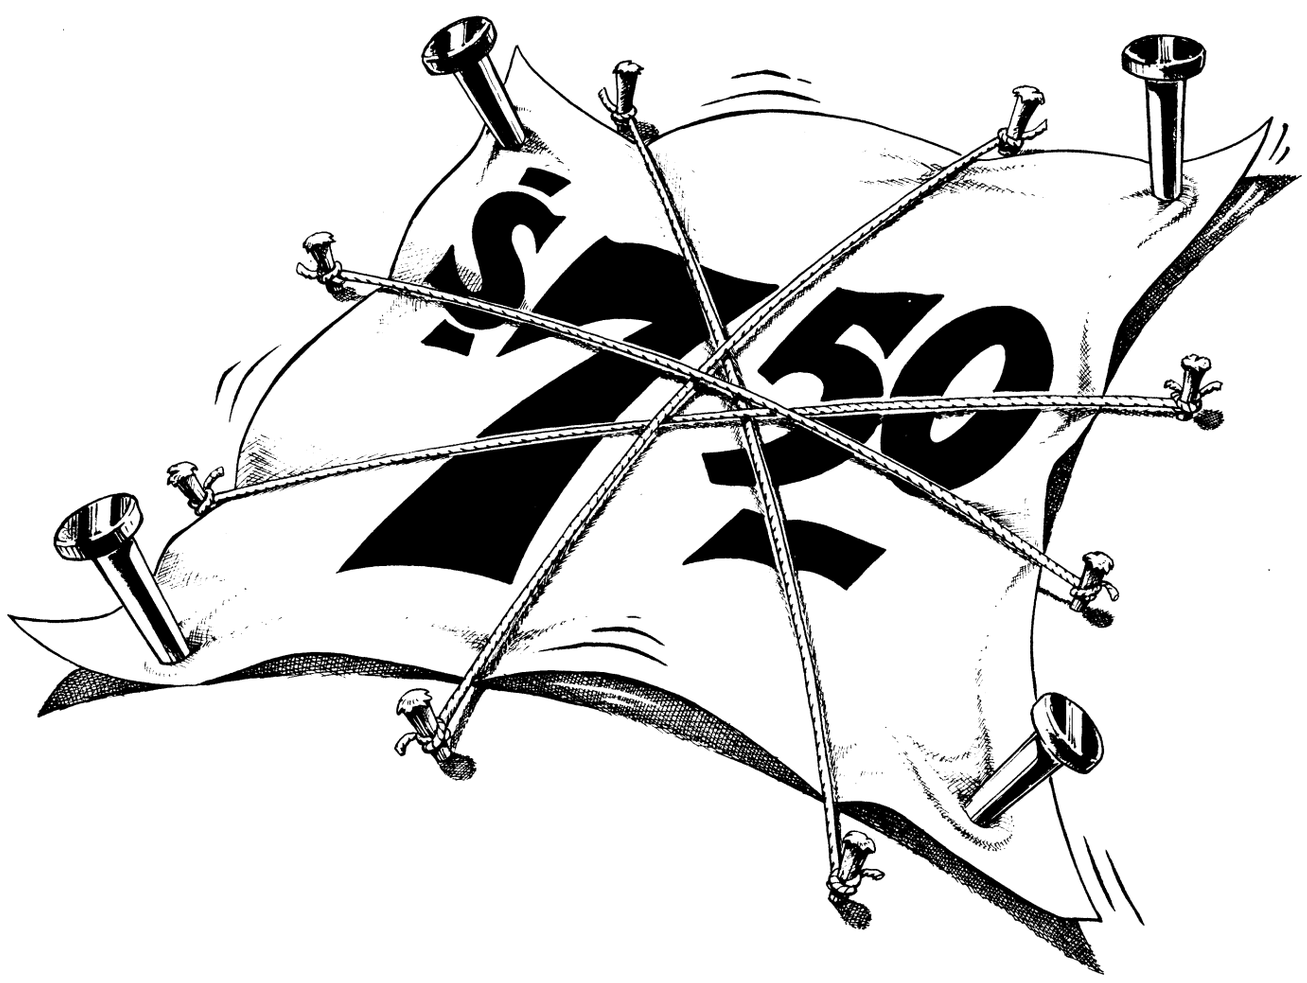
Field activities include learning to fire an M-60 heavy machine gun and a 250-foot controlled parachute drop. Trainees charge over land and water in assault vehicles and lie on their stomachs in the tail of a tanker as it refuels planes in mid-air. They spend about one week a month away from their regular jobs to learn first-hand about DoD operations.

They also devote one week with each military service. Exercises with the Air Force, for example, have included a day in Altus Air Force Base, Okla., where participants flew and crashed aircraft in simulators.

A Navy experience involved nuclear submarine visits, living and working in confined space, learning how pilots are trained to land on aircraft carriers and observing Marine air and land assaults.

Army experiences included firing weapons, driving tanks and observing training exercises.

"Before this year, we learned of new world threats by reading local and national newspapers. Now, because of participation in this program, we've learned first-hand of the state of these threats and how the United States is prepared to respond to them," said participant Mary Studevant, from Defense General Supply Center, Richmond, Va.



"Over this past year, we've had a close-up look at our armed forces. We're proud of what we saw," she said. "We believe these men and women deserve the very best support we civilian executive leaders can provide. We're now more aware of the dynamics and competitive environments in which they operate. We're better able to go out, find and deliver this support.

"We walked in their shoes. We ate the cold MREs in the rain. We drove their vehicles, fired their weapons and wore their clothes. At one installation, we were issued Kevlar helmets. While camping, we discovered the snap on the helmet headbands wasn't 'user friendly' at all. In fact, it took us an inordinate amount of time to attach them to the helmets.

"These are items my agency buys for the armed forces. So when I returned to work, I talked to the technician responsible for their purchase to see if we could redesign the snaps to make them work better. Because of my experience in the field, it's become a personal commitment."

Those interested in either program can contact their training offices.

Post dedicates new school

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

The recently opened Stowers Elementary School in the Bouton Heights and Davis Hill housing areas was dedicated in a ceremony Tuesday.

The school was named in honor of Medal of Honor recipient Cpl. Freddie Stowers, who distinguished himself by exceptional heroism Sept. 28, 1918, while serving as a squad leader in Company C, 371st Infantry Regiment, 93rd Division, in an attack on a hill in the Champagne Marne sector of France during World War I.

The citation for his award reads: "Faced with incredible enemy resistance, Corporal Stowers took charge, setting such a courageous example of personal bravery and leadership that he inspired his men to follow him in the attack."

"Just as those soldiers were inspired by the example of Corporal Stowers," said Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, who spoke at the ceremony, "I am inspired by the quality of education we have in our school system."

White said people take first priority on Fort Benning, so he places great emphasis on quality services and support systems.

"What better way (to take care of soldiers and their families) than to provide a quality education in a facility such as this, where they know their children are being cared for by first-class professionals," he said.

Dr. Rolla Baumgartner, the superintendent of Fort Benning Schools, called Stowers School a world-class facility, and said he was proud of the new building and the top-notch staff.

Col. Gregory Camp, president of the School Board and deputy assistant commandant of the U.S. Army Infantry School, said he found it only fitting that the school be named for Stowers' achievements. He welcomed Mary Bowens, Stowers' sister, and other members of the family who attended the dedication.

Angela Sloan, who said Stowers was her great-great-uncle, came from Anderson, S.C., to attend the ceremony.

"It's wonderful to have this school named for him," she said. "The school is fantastic — there are a lot of unique things here."

JROTC

Command seeks instructors

Army News Service

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — The U.S. Army Cadet Command is looking for retired officers and non-commissioned officers to serve as Army Junior Reserve Officer Training Corps instructors in 35 states and some overseas locations.

JROTC instructors teach high-school students military skills and a range of other subjects such as public speaking, citizenship, first aid and patriotism.

Instructor pay approximates that received while on active duty, officials said. Retired officers must hold a bachelor's degree to be eligible.

Retired NCOs need not meet any particular civilian education requirements at present.

All applicants must meet Army height and weight standards and be certified and hired before reaching their fifth year of retirement.

The largest numbers of instructors are needed in Alabama, California, Florida, Michigan, Mississippi, North Carolina, New Jersey, New York, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia and West Virginia.

The number of unfilled positions varies by state. Retirees seeking information on teaching positions west of the Mississippi River, in Hawaii, Guam and Samoa can call (206) 967-3102 or write to: U.S. Army Fourth Region; U.S. Army ROTC Cadet Command; Attn: ATOD-HS; Fort Lewis, Wash. 98433-7100.

For locations in the Midwest and Middle South, call (502) 624-6455 or write: U.S. Army Second Region; U.S. Army ROTC Cadet Command; Attn: ATOB-HS; Fort Knox, Ky. 40121-5610.

For the East Coast and in Puerto Rico, call (919) 396-8706 or write: U.S. Army First Region; U.S. Army ROTC Cadet Command; Attn: ATOA-HS; Fort Bragg, N.C 28307-5000.

AAFES recalling buddy toys

Army News Service

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Army and Air Force Exchange Service officials have announced a U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission hazardous recall of two types of "Buddy L" toys sold in exchange outlets in the continental United States, Alaska and Hawaii.

The voluntary recall by "Buddy L" involves the red, white and blue "My First Buddy's Police Car," and the red, white and yellow "My First Buddy's Dumper."

The toys' components may separate, causing a potential choking hazard with small children, AAFES officials said.

The price of each toy was $4.50. Officials said patrons should return the merchandise to their exchange for a full refund.

Customers can call (800) 260-1398 for more information on the recall.

Post honors prisoners of war

Vietnam POW shares his story

"They placed me into a little cell about 3 feet by 7 feet and didn't bother to tell me it would be 58 months before I would be able to speak to another American."

— Retired Col. Benjamin H. Purcell
Prisoner of war in Vietnam,1968 to1973

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

"I took freedom for granted until I lost it."

That is what retired Col. Benjamin H. Purcell, who spent more than five years as a prisoner of war in Vietnam, told the audience at Fort Benning's POW/MIA Recognition Day ceremony Sept. 10.

The ceremony, honoring all former American prisoners of war, those still missing and their families, honored "soldiers who suffered harsh treatment, malnutrition, starvation and brutality at the hands of their captors, (as well as) unsanitary living conditions, loneliness and despair," said Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White.

Purcell, who spent all but four months of his years as a POW in solitary confinement, is no stranger to those experiences — especially the loneliness.

In a recent trip to Vietnam, Purcell returned to the cemetery south of Quang Tri where the chopper he was a passenger on crashed in February 1968.

He remembers being stripped of his personal possessions when he was taken prisoner following the crash.

"They even stripped the combat boots from my feet," he said.

His hands were tied behind his back and he was forced to march into the mountains.

After being moved from one camp to another for several months, Purcell was taken to a camp near Hanoi, where, he said, "they (his Vietnamese captors) placed me into a little cell about 3 feet by 7 feet and didn't bother to tell me it would be 58 months before I would be able to speak to another American."

During that time, he said, he learned the truth of the saying "the man who cannot live with himself cannot live with another man."

Purcell remembered one brief moment of contact when another prisoner sweeping outside his cell stuck a hand under the door.

"I grasped that hand offered in friendship and realized how lonely I had been ... for 3 1/2 years I had not even touched anyone."

One of the things that kept him alive during those long, lonely days, Purcell said, was faith. "Prayer became the glue that held the shattered pieces together," he said.

He also survived, he said, on the love of his wife, Anne, who he knew waited for his return home.

To all those who still have loved ones missing in action, Purcell said that he is "convinced that loved one can survive so long as he or she knows that there is someone waiting for them at home who loves them and who cares."

Purcell attemp.ed two escapes during his imprisonment. In the first, in December 1969, Purcell fashioned a drill from a stick and a chisel from a nail wrapped in hardened bread dough, and drilled out a panel in the wooden door of his cell.

He was on his way to Hanoi, hoping to seek asylum at the French Consulate, when he was offered a ride by a bicyclist, who, he said, pedalled him straight to the precinct police station.

After being returned to the prison, Purcell was locked in stocks for two weeks, only let out twice a day for 15 minutes to eat and use the toilet bucket.

When he was moved to the prison where he spent the last year and three months of the war, Purcell's captors would let him out every morning into a cage in front of his cell to get some fresh air.

The cage was a walled area with barbed wire laced over the top, and Purcell said when he saw the wire, he knew he could get through it.

So he said to himself, "Purcell, when are you going? Not if," he said, "but when."

He again managed to escape in March 1972 but was ambushed on the road heading for the coast two nights after he escaped.

Purcell was finally released March 27, 1973, with 32 other POWs at the end of the war.

"My years of loneliness and Anne's long vigil were over," he said.

Purcell and the other 32 POWs were turned over to American authorities and returned to the United States, where he was asked to say a few words on behalf of the group released that day, he said.

"My first comment," Purcell said, "was 'Man's most precious possession, second only to life, is freedom.'"

POST BRIEFS

Command College sets registration

The 3294th U.S. Army Reserve Forces School, Command and General Staff College, will have registration for its 1993-1994 school year at the Army Reserve Training Center at 3001 Macon Road in Columbus on the following dates and times: Sunday and Sept. 26 from noon to 3 p.m.; Monday and Sept. 27 from 7 to 9 p.m.

The prerequisites for all interested officers is a copy of the advanced course diploma or Combined Arms Service Staff School Course diploma and Department of the Army Form 2-1 or Officer Record Brief.

Officers already enrolled in the program via correspondence option may be eligible to transfer to the U.S. Army Reserve Forces School option.

Request for transfer or option may be obtained during registration.

For more information, contact 480-3639 (voice mail) or Lt. Col. Edwin W. Summey, area commandant, at 596-1665.

Property auction set

A property auction will be Oct. 19 beginning at 10 a.m. at the Outdoor Recreation Office, Building 1704, Gillespie Street.

All bidders must register before the start of the action. Anyone can bid on the items for sale.

Items include refrigerators, air conditioners, office furniture, cash registers, computer terminals, draperies, sleeper sofas, bedspreads and more.

Preview of the items will be Oct. 15 and 18 from 9 a.m. to noon. All sales must be paid by cash or check with a bank letter guaranteeing checks up to a certain amount and the date.

Payment will not be refunded for items not claimed. For more information, call John Dorsey at 545-2348.

Food service course available in October

An Applied Food Service Sanitation course, which is certified by the National Institute for Food Service Industry, will be conducted Oct. 18 to 22 from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in Infantry Hall, Classroom 23.

Only 50 spaces will be available because of limited textbooks.

To enroll, contact Mary Boyett at 545-3750 or 545-7970.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland and range areas will take place through Sept. 26. If weather permits, the following compartments may be affected: A-6, C-1, C-2, C-3, E-7, K-8, O-6, O-7, Q-2, S-1, T-5 and T-6.

Burning will occur in pine stands within these compartments to enhance endangered species habitat and training areas. People using these areas for recreation must vacate the areas before 9:30 a.m. daily.

Training units using compartments adjacent to these areas may experience drift smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while traveling in these areas because of the potential for reduced visibility.

1994 SDT dates set

The fiscal 1994 self-development testing dates have been set. By-name test schedules and SDT notice pamphlets have been distributed for the October through December test period.

Primary military occupational specialty and skill levels to be tested are 13M2/3/4, 73C3/4, 76J2/3/4, 83E2/3, 91R2/3/4, 91S2/3/4, 92B2/3/4, 95C2/3/4 and 98C2/3/4. The test dates for these specialties are scheduled for Dec. 1, 2, 13, 14, 15 and 16 in Brown Hall, Building 328.

Soldiers are to report no later than 8:30 a.m. on the date scheduled in military uniform with a valid identification card.

Soldiers who need to be scheduled or those who cannot report as scheduled should notify their unit first sergeant or training noncommissioned officer.

Soldiers who fail to test because of their own negligence may receive an official zero.

Exchange, Commissary require proper attire for admittance

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Next time you make a stop at the Post Exchange or Commissary, you might want to take a look at what you are wearing.

Improper clothing can mean no admittance to certain post facilities.

Sgt. Maj. Allen Thrower of the Directorate of Community Activities said U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 600-5 specifically states that "civilian attire will be in good taste and repair, appropriate to the occasion and worn as the manufacturer intended."

The regulation applies to all military personnel, whether active duty, Reserve, National Guard or retired, and to family members, civilian personnel and any other authorized visitors to post facilities.

"Because Fort Benning is the home of the infantry, we want to ensure that we are a notch above everyone else," Thrower said. "We want to maintain an image of excellence, and the dress code ensures that soldiers and other personnel on post live up to that standard."

Thrower said it is the responsibility of the noncommissioned officers and other command channels on post to ensure that soldiers understand and abide by the established clothing standards.

Here is a summary of the regulation:

Shirts, pants or shorts and footwear must be worn in all Fort Benning facilities. Items specifically prohibited in on-post facilities include:

- Underwear worn as an outer garment.
- "Mesh" or "see through" shirts that expose the skin of the upper torso and any other garments that do not cover the upper torso, such as garments that expose the midriff or expose the underarms, such as "tank tops."
- Bare feet or shower shoes except at swimming pools and shower rooms or when sunbathing.
- Hair curlers or shower caps.
- Modified items of military clothing or mixed civilian and military clothing.
- Summer physical training uniforms, except at gymnasiums.
- Clothing that is disreputable or in extreme disrepair.

Additionally, the regulation states that male personnel may remove their shirts when in the yards of their quarters and when running, sunbathing or using post swimming pools.

Most post exchanges feature placards listing the appropriate clothing standards, including photographs of inappropriate dress, at their entrances, Thrower said.

ACAP schedules workshops, events

Army Career and Alumni Program

The following is the Army Career and Alumni Program Job Assistance Center calendar of events:

Today: "Employers' Day"

Tuesday: Noon to 1 p.m., focus hour; interview techniques

Wednesday: 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., job assistance workshop; 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Education Opportunity Center

Thursday: 1 to 3 p.m., mock interview practice session

Sept. 28: Noon to 1 p.m., focus hour; negotiating techniques

Sept. 29: 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., job assistance workshop; 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Education Opportunity Center

Sept. 30: Noon to 2 p.m., mock interview practice session

Oct. 1: "Employers' Day"

Job assistance workshop

Time: Wednesdays, 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Location: Infantry Hall, Building 4

The workshop is conducted every Wednesday at Infantry Hall. Topics discussed include objective setting, resume preparation, expanding opportunities, networking, interviewing, salary negotiating, stress management and financial planning. The workshop is for anyone in federal service (both military and Department of the Army civilians) and their family members, whether leaving voluntarily, involuntarily or retiring.

Education Opportunity Center

Time: Wednesdays, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

Participants will receive information from all over the country about college and university admissions requirements and proficiency exams. Education counselors can also discuss student loans and grants.

Mock Interview Practice

Time: Thursdays, 2 to 4 p.m.

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

Participants will learn how to interview effectively by rehearsing and practicing interview techniques with an experienced JAC counselor. The mock interview will be videotaped to provide the client with a visual learning tool.

Employers' Day

Time: Fridays, time varies

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

Employer day is scheduled each Friday at the Job Assistance Center. The program is designed to allow employers to recruit qualified candidates for their companies.

Employers normally will give presentations on their organizations and set up interviews with qualified candidates.

A variety of manufacturing and service companies take advantage of this opportunity. Public sector organizations are also represented.

Focus Hour

Time: Tuesdays, noon to 1 p.m.

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

Weekly video program that provides additional information on the key areas in the job search process — networking, dressing for success, interview process and negotiating techniques. Counselors will assist with any additional questions.

Small Business Development

Time: Monthly, 2 to 4:30 p.m.

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

A short, free, monthly seminar is offered by the Small Business Development Center of the University of Georgia. It is designed to provide assistance and training in starting a new business.

The seminar serves as a focal point for linking together resources of the federal, state, and local governments and the private sector.

For additional information and registration, call Army Career and Alumni Program Job Assistance Center, located in Building 2634, at 545-2308 or 545-2309 .

Retrain: ACAP to host skills seminar

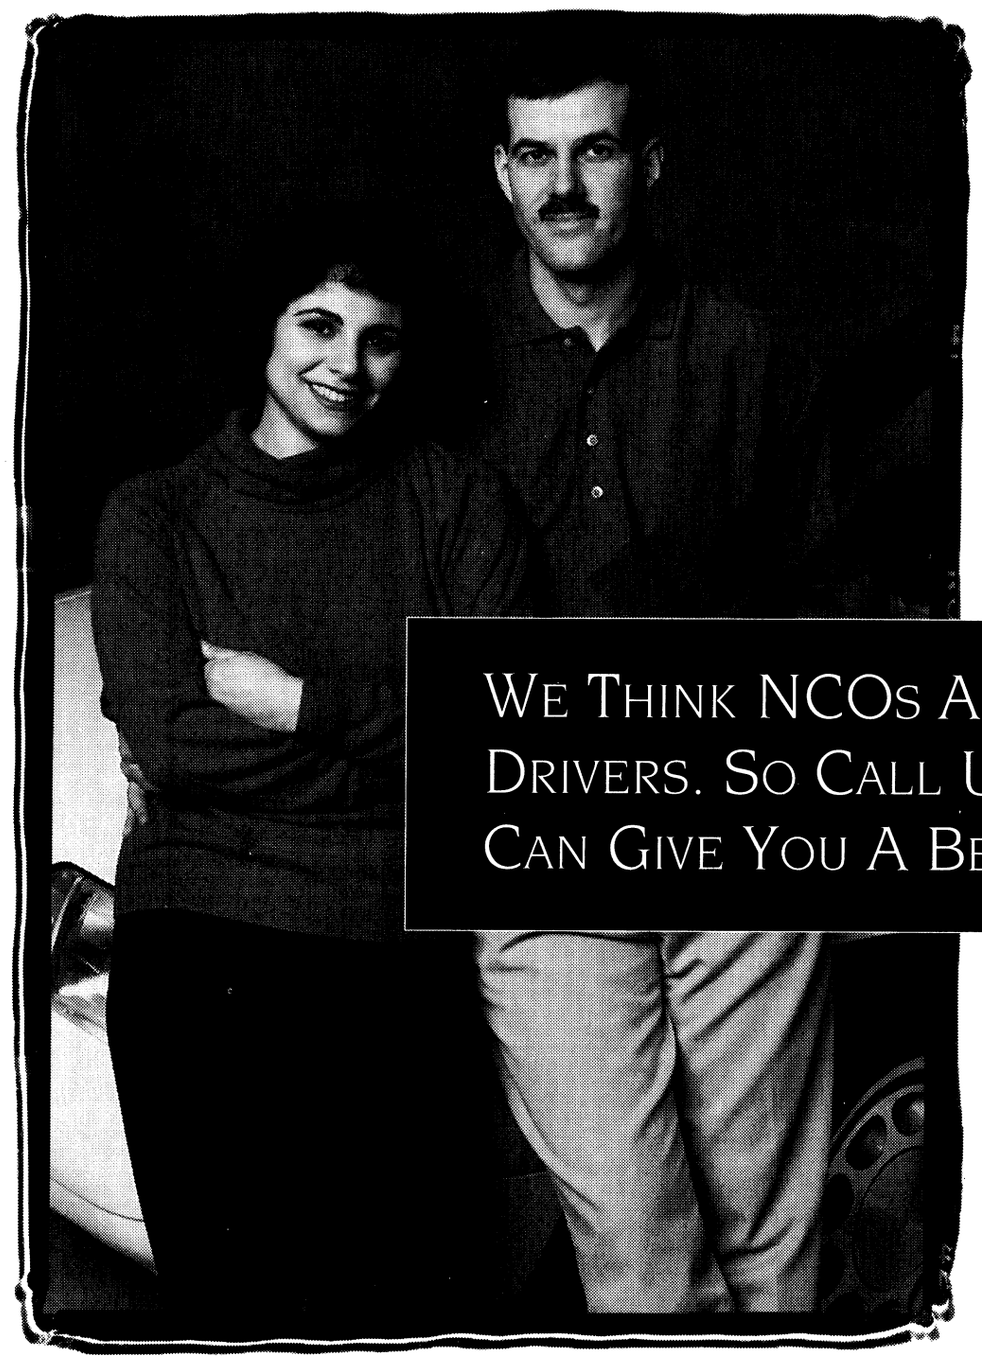
Army Career and Alumni Program

The Fort Benning Army Career and Alumni Program Office in conjunction with the Georgia Department of Labor will co-host an "educational seminar" on new skill development Thursday from 8 to 11 a.m. at Infantry Hall, Classroom 30.

All personnel interested in participating in the Georgia Department of Labor Job Retraining Program, or who are just interested in what educational resources and sources are available, are invited to attend.

Georgia Department of Labor and Training provider representatives will be in attendance and will be available to provide information regarding the job retraining program.



Anyone can offer you an auto insurance policy. But at Family Protection Plus,SM we believe NCOs tend to be better drivers. So we provide highly competitive rates on policies geared to the realities of NCO family life.

For example, when you're transferred, your coverage follows you to most of the states where military installations are located. All it takes is a toll-free call, and we'll handle the details.

You'll also find our other features very attractive.*Like special savings if you keep your car in a storage facility while you're on a TDY. And a waiver of deductible if someone in your household has an accident while you're deployed in a war or combat zone.

If that seems like a sensible approach, there's a good reason. Family Protection Plus, created by Academy Life Insurance Company, was designed specifically for NCOs and their families. And it's recommended by NCOA®.

So if you'd like us to quote you a rate, call us. We'll be glad to put you on the road to a more sensible car insurance policy.

The 1993 post flag football season is under way.

Monday evening games were played at four different locations — Essebagger Field on Kelley Hill and Gowdy Field, Engineers Field, and Sergeants Major Field on Main Post.

Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment's Cougars went up against the Bradley Instructor Course's instructors at Sergeants Major Field and were taught a lesson by the Instructors 12-0.

Instructor quarterback Michael Jones connected with running back Stacey Vaughn on a 50-yard touchdown pass late in the second half to give the Instructors a 6-0 lead. An interception by defensive back Ken Varnes set up the next score for the instructors at the 38-yard line of the Cougars.

On the first snap, Jones handed off to Vaughn up the middle. Vaughn broke past the line of scrimmage, cut right and headed for the end zone for his second touchdown in less than three minutes. The extra point was missed, but with less than 10 seconds left in the game, the damage was done. At the final whistle, the Instructors had pulled out a 12-0 opening game victory.

In other action Monday night:

Stars make Chattanooga sing the blues

Columbus' semi-professional team puts Blues down 38-6 and improves record to 4-3

The Columbus Stars put the Chattanooga Blues into a funk Saturday night at Memorial Stadium with a 38-6 pasting. The victory improved their record to 4-3.

Stars quarterback Donald Stroy threw touchdown passes of 3 yards and 25 yards, and running back Michael Bailey scored touchdowns on runs of 9 yards and 99 yards.

An interception by Stars strong safety Kelvin Thomas set up the Stars at the Blues' 43-yard line early in the first quarter. Five plays later, fullback Brian Spikes plowed into the end zone for a 6-0 lead at the three-minute mark of the first quarter.

Bailey put the Stars up 12-0 with less than three minutes left in the first half on a pitch from Stroy around the left side from 9 yards out. The Stars only had to go 14 yards for the score when they took over on downs after a high snap sailed over the head of the Blues' punter on fourth down.

A 19-yard punt by the Blues set up the Stars at the Blues' 21-yard line late in the first half. Six plays later, Stroy hit wide receiver Jeff Siedel with a 3-yard scoring pass with 11 seconds left in the second quarter for an 18-0 lead.

In the third quarter, Stars linebacker Terrence Perry picked off a Blues' fake punt, giving the Stars good field position at the Blues' 40-yard line. The Stars were unable to put the ball into the end zone and gave up the ball on downs at the Blues' 17-yard line.

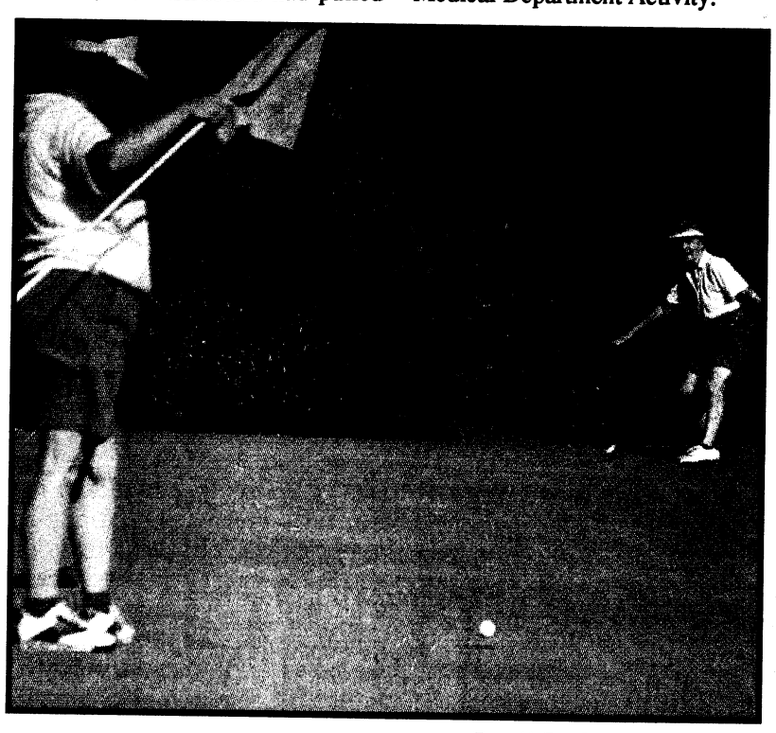
A fumble by Blues running back Joe Cool was recovered by Stars linebacker Frank Lewis, giving the Stars the ball at the Blues' 18. Six plays later, fullback Jamon Smith exploded into the end zone for a 24-0 advantage with just over five minutes left in the third quarter.

On the ensuing kickoff, Blues kick returner Patrick Posted broke loose from the coverage on a reverse and scampered up the right sideline for an 80-yard touchdown, cutting the lead to 24-6.

The Stars opened the fourth quarter on their own 36-yard line. Four minutes and 25 seconds later, Stroy hit running back Eddie Mitchell at the Blues' 20-yard line; Mitchell turned up the right side and rambled into the end zone. The extra-point attempt by Pedro Cardnenas pushed the score to 31-6 with 10 minutes left in the game.

An interception by safety John Shull at the Stars' 1-yard line killed a Blues drive late in the fourth quarter and set up the Stars for their last score of the night. Bailey took the first snap off the left tackle and broke past the defense, which had set up for a short-yardage play. Ninety-nine yards later, Bailey was in the end zone for a Stars' record run. Cardnenas added the extra point for a 38-6 lead with less than four minutes to play.

"We had called a 33-dive in the huddle," said Bailey. "The defense had one linebacker on me all night, and I knew that if I got by him it would be a race to the end zone. I had pulled a groin muscle a few plays earlier and it tightened up on me. When I glanced over my shoulder and saw this big Blues lineman coming up behind me, I thought he was going to catch me. I would have never lived that down if he had caught me."



Bailey ended the evening with 196 yards rushing on nine carries and two touchdowns. Stroy completed seven of 19 passes for 79 yards and two touchdowns and no interceptions.

"Tonight we were able to keep our minds focused on the game and not allow the mental mistakes to keep us from scoring some points," said Stroy. "We have the talent at the skilled positions to get the job done — we just need to concentrate."

The Stars did not commit any turnovers, while taking the ball away from the Blues three times.

The Stars outgained the Blues in total yardage 373 to 134.

The Stars' next home game will be 8 p.m. Saturday at Doughboy Stadium against the North Georgia Wolfpack. A victory would give the Stars a foothold on a playoff spot with two games left to play on the road.

Sudden-death playoff decides golf champion

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The 1993 Fort Benning Women's Golf Association's club championships concluded Tuesday afternoon at Follow Me Golf Course.

The two-day tournament came down to a sudden-death playoff hole between Diane Benton and P.J. Threatt. Benton claimed the title, parring the par 4 first hole on the Lakeside course.

"Going into sudden death, I felt I needed to par the hole to have a chance to win," said Benton. "After P.J. hit her tee shot into the trees on the right side of the fairway, I knew I had a chance to win."

Threatt's tee shot put her in a hole she couldn't get out of. Her second shot put her in the sand trap below the green. Her third shot went over the green leaving her in an almost impossible position to par the hole.

Benton meanwhile put her tee shot down the middle of the fairway leaving her in good shape for her second shot, which hit just below the green. This put her in solid position to par the hole. A short chip shot put her within four feet of the cup. Benton sank the putt giving her the 1993 crown.

"Starting the day tied with P.J., I knew I needed to have a good round to win," said Benton. "I was looking at shooting in the 70s but that didn't happen. It was a tough win."

Listed below are the first, second and third place winners for each flight and their two-day scores.

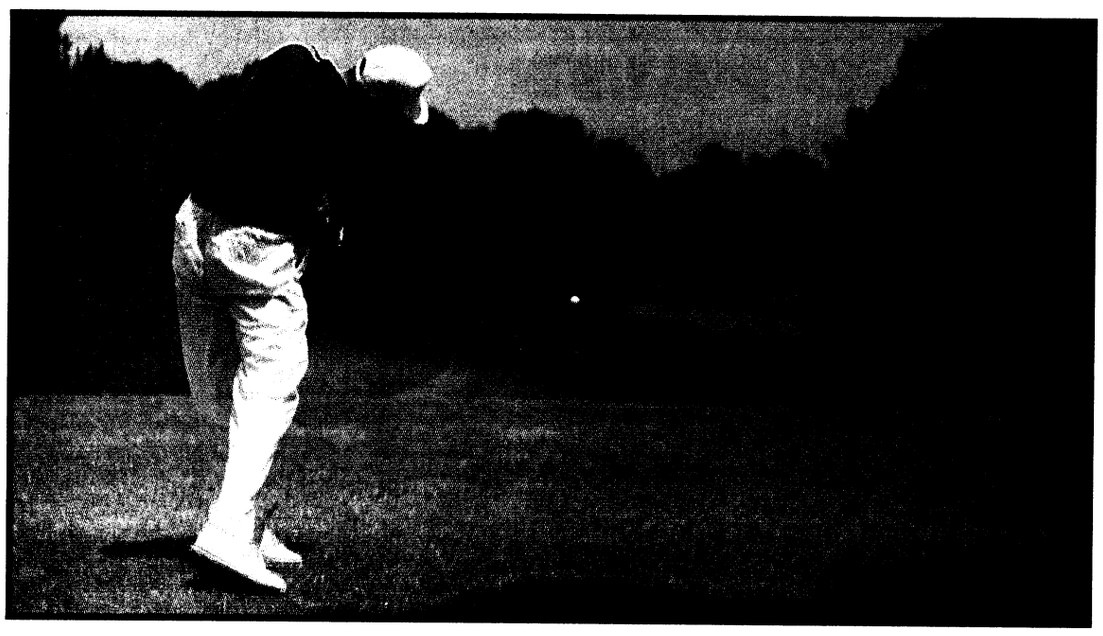
Angler club snags 49 lbs.

Fort Benning Bass Club



The Fort Benning Bass Club conducted its monthly tournament Aug. 15 at Lake Point on W.F. George Lake. The club fielded 12 fishermen for the event.

Despite hot muggy weather, the club totaled 49 pounds of fish caught and released alive. The big fish of the day weighed in at 7 pounds, 4 ounces, and was caught by Bob Billman. Billman said his prize catch was tempted into biting just 45 minutes before the tournament ended.

The winners were Billman, 13 pounds, 10 ounces, first place; Gene Clark, 12 pounds, 6 ounces, second place; and George Mendez, 10 pounds, 2 ounces, third place.

The club meets twice a month, with one tournament per month.

For more information, call David Moore at 298-5955 or Steve Ward at 569-5705.

Benning to host summer biathlon

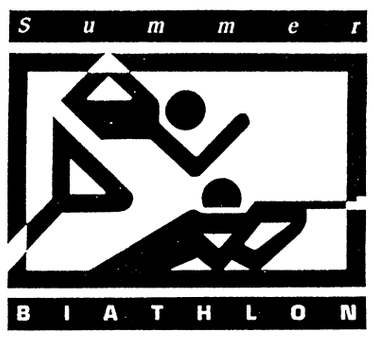
By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

As part of the Summer biathlon Series, Fort Benning's 1993 Doughboy Summer Biathlon will be Sept. 26 at English Range and Olive Field.

The Directorate of Community Activities and the Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club will host the two-event competition.

The race begins with a one-mile run, which will bring you to a shooting range where you walk to a firing lane, pick up a rifle and fire five shots at the metal knock-down targets from the prone position (lying down). After firing, the competitors will head out to run their second-mile run, then take another five shots at the targets from the standing position. The competition ends with a final dash to the finish line.

The total run distance is five kilometers, and targets are at a range of 25 meters. For each target hit in the prone position, a 15-second deduction in overall finish time is awarded, with a 30-second deduction rewarded from the standing position.



A .22 caliber biathlon rifle is used for the competition. Personal rifles are allowed, but must be .22 caliber, bolt action and magazine fed. All equipment will be furnished to competitors.

All competitors must attend a shooting safety class, given by the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, on English Range at 1 p.m. Sept. 25 or at 8 a.m. on the day of the competition. A certification card, good for two years in all Summer Biathlon Series races, will be issued after classes.

The competition is open to anyone 14 or older who completes the mandatory prerace safety clinic. Awards will be presented to the top three competitors in all the six age groups. Age groups run from 14 to 19, 20 to 29, 30 to 39, 40 to 49, 50 to 59 and 60 and up. Beginners are welcome.

Preregistration will continue until Sept. 24 at the Outdoor Recreation Center on Gillespie Street.

The preregistration fee is $12; late registration fee, which begins Sept. 25 at the competition site, is $16. Registration fees include equipment use, T-shirts, clinic, awards and refreshments.

The Summer Biathlon began as summer training for regular biathlon (a skiing and shooting event) athletes. Since its growth in popularity, the Summer Biathlon has now become its own sport.

To get to English Range, enter Fort Benning from I-185, turn right onto Dixie Road and go three miles west. English Range is located on Dixie Road across from the water tower.

For more information on the event, contact James Graham, Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club, at 689-3371, or James Brown, Physical Activities Branch director, at 545-7978.

Runners get set for 10-miler

Army News Service

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Registration is under way for runners worldwide participating in the ninth annual Army 10-Miler, the largest race of its kind in the United States.

The "Run the River Bridges" event will be Oct. 17 and is sponsored by the Association of the United States Army, in conjunction with its annual meeting.

The mostly flat 10-mile course begins and finishes at the Pentagon, and winds through metropolitan Washington and Potomac River parks. Army Recreation Services headquarters and the Military District of Washington are co-hosting the race.

A Commander's Cup trophy will be awarded to the top finishers from the following team categories: Active Duty Military Open Men, Active Duty Military Open Women, Active Duty Military Masters Men, Active Duty Military Masters Women, Active Duty Military Mixed, National Guard, Reserve, Military Academy and Reserve Officer Training Corps.

Other team categories are: Open Men, Open Women, Open Mixed, Masters Men, Masters Women, Mixed Masters, Government Agency and Corporate.

Teams will consist of up to eight runners with the top four scores counting toward the final team tally. An entry fee of $12 will be charged to runners who register before Oct. 1, and a $20 fee will be charged thereafter. The first 7,000 runners to register will receive a race T-shirt.

Awards will be presented following the race to runners including the overall winners, masters winners, the top finishers in each age category, team winners and top wheelchair finishers. A random drawing for a $500 U.S. Savings Bond will follow.

A number of area hotels are offering special rates for the event, in effect Oct. 14 through 20. Reservations must be made by Oct. 1.

For more information on registration, hotel reservations and pre- and post-race activities, call AUSA at (800) 336-4570, Ext. 582, or Army Recreation Services Headquarters at (703) 614-1551 or DSN 224-1551.

Deer limits: Post changes regulations

By Kevin L. McIver
USAIC Public Affairs Office

If you read the "Know Your Limits" section printed in the Aug. 20 issue outlining Fort Benning hunting seasons and bag limits, you'd better throw it away — because there's been a change.

The change affects some 1,700 whitetail deer hunters. Two weeks ago, post wildlife officials published information stating, "A total of five deer, three of which must be antlerless, can be taken on the entire Fort Benning reservation per season." This, incidentally, coincided with the Georgia state regulations.

As soon as I read this, I was overwhelmed, as this was great news for the deer hunters out there. It meant you could harvest two bucks with antlers, and also bag three deer of either sex as long as they didn't have a rack, just as you can statewide.

Upon reading the news, I immediately ran to the store, bought another box of shells, built two more deer stands, and made space on my "trophy" wall at the house for another mount.

Post wildlife officials have since informed me that the previous bag limit information was a mistake. This season, you can only harvest two bucks, regardless of whether they sport headgear or not. This is the same bag limit that's been in effect for the last several seasons. Maybe I can return that extra box of shells?

Basically what this means is that if you shoot two bucks, you'd better be "very" careful of that next shot since a button buck looks exactly like a doe (unless it's in close, say, 30 yards, on a clear day, no fog or rain, standing in an open field).

COMMENTARY

I know what you deer hunters are thinking out there. It's virtually impossible to tell the difference. About half of the hunters on post, this is my estimate from frequenting the rifle range, use a high-caliber weapon during gun season.

A flat-shooting .30-06, .308 or 7mm Remington magnum topped with a scope allows you to take 250-yard-plus shots, which is why we hunt on large, open fields, and why we choose that particular weapon in the first place.

At that distance, if you can tell the difference between a button buck and a doe, you should change your name to "Hawkeye." I do a lot of deer hunting, and I can tell you, it's virtually impossible. Guess I'd better exchange my 4x scope for an astronomy telescope.

Anyway, enough crying over spilled milk. This is the regulation and we hunters have to stick to it. But let's look at the rationale behind the post's bag limit.

The bag limit of only two bucks is a "method to improve the age structure of the deer herd," according to Tom Brooks, wildlife biologist, Natural Resources Management Branch.

"This is needed due to the high numbers of immature bucks being harvested on Fort Benning," said Brooks. "With so many young bucks being harvested, they're just not able to reach maturity. This is a necessity for bucks to reach their maximum size."

Charles Ford, chief of the Natural Resources Management Branch, added some insight into this phenomenon.

"Another reason bucks on Fort Benning aren't reaching their full antler growth is that enough does aren't breeding during the first cycle," said Ford. "Those that wait to breed will have fawns much later in the year. When this occurs, these deer seldom reach their full maturity (body weight and antler growth)."

This year's regulations are being printed at this time and will be released soon. Until that time, Tim Brown, who manages the post's hunter control program, said the bag limit will be "posted on the hunting information boards so that hunters will be aware of the limit."

As archery season begins tomorrow, between this article and the notices that will be posted, you should know the regulations. So be sure when you take that third deer. You don't want to be the unfortunate hunter who illegally harvests a deer. Besides the stiff penalties, you set a bad example for the rest of us. Good luck and see you in the woods.

SPORTS SHORTS

Tuskegee - Morehouse football — The 58th annual Tuskegee University vs. Morehouse College Football Classic will be Oct. 16 at 7 p.m. at Columbus Memorial Stadium.

This annual classic is a tradition in the city. Last year, more than 20,000 fans attended; this year the event is expected to draw 29,000.

Tickets are $10 in advance and $12 at the gate. It is said by officials that the half-time show will be bigger and better than ever before with the high-stepping bands and majorettes.

For ticket information, call the A.J. McClung Branch YMCA at 322-2579 or 596-3472.

Raquetball tournament — A raquetball tournament will be conducted 6 p.m. Oct. 1 through 8 at Briant Wells Field House. The event is open to active duty military, Department of Defense civilians, retirees and family members 18 years and older.

Awards will be presented to the top two finishers in each event. The tournament will consist of two divisions, for both male and female participants.

There will also be a doubles competition and participants may enter either the A or B division and the the doubles.

Entry deadline is Thursday. For more information, call Lula Mitchenor at 545- 4388.

Yom Kippur — holiest of High Holy Days

Special day is for prayer, repentance

By Arthur Rutberg
USAIC Chaplains' Office

REFLECTIONS

On Rosh Hashanah, it is written; on Yom Kippur it is sealed. So says the Jewish liturgy in the special prayerbook called the mahzor used on the High Holy Days.

The 10-day period of repentance, begun on Rosh Hashanah Wednesday, culminates in Yom Kippur. This is the holiest and solemnest day of the entire Jewish year.

This year it begins on the evening of Sept. 24 with a service called Kol Nidre. The haunting melody of Kol Nidre, a prayer composed in the days of the Spanish Inquisition and made famous by Al Jolson and Neil Diamond, captures the hearts of people in synagogues.

They feel the awesome power of the day and the frightening nearness of God. This is the moment of truth — the day of reckoning. Today your fate is being sealed in the Book Of Life. Today judgment is being made — who shall live and who shall die, who shall know peace and who shall be troubled, who shall prosper and who shall be needy.

On Yom Kippur, Jews are forbidden from doing a number of things. As on the Sabbath, they are not allowed to work. They are forbidden from eating, drinking, swimming, wearing perfumes or leather, or engaging in sex.

Anything that raises our spirits and sense of well-being is denied us on Yom Kippur for 24 hours.

This further reinforces the importance of the day, since it allows us to concentrate fully on the intensity of prayer and repentance. When we are denied pleasurable things, we are reduced to a humble, lowly position acknowledging the supreme power of God and our own relative insignificance.

Yom Kippur is a tough day but it is not a day without hope. For at the close of the day, when everyone cannot wait for a sip of juice or a taste of bread, when emotions are drained and patience is worn thin, the shofar or ram's horn is blown one last time. At the end of the day, we have a service called Neilah, meaning "the locking." We imagine the gates of heaven being closed and locked, the Book of Life being sealed with our fates inside. And at the last possible minute, when the sun has almost totally set, we blow the shofar one more time to push our prayers through the gate.

When we blow the ram's horn, we remind God of Abraham who demonstrated his complete faith in God by being willing to sacrifice his son Isaac — yet he sacrificed a ram instead. We also remind God that we were the people that God brought out of Egypt to reveal his commandments on Mount Sinai. The ram's horn was blown loud, long and strong when the Ten Commandments were given.

The Jewish people today, being the descendants of Abraham and Isaac and of the Israelites who stood at Mount Sinai, remind God of this through the shofar blast with the hope of a similar judgment.

With fasting and prayer, confession and repentance, we hope to avert a stern decree and gain a judgment of life for this year and years to come. And we pray that all people will have a year of health, happiness, prosperity and most of all, peace.

CRIME WATCH

Military Police Activity

The following entries were taken from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from Aug. 25 to 31. Such entries may be incomplete and are not a judgment of the guilt or innocence of any person.

This week's hot topic concerns Georgia Law 40-8-73.1, affixing of materials that reduce light transmission through windows or windshields.

It is unlawful for any vehicle registered in Georgia to have window tint applied that reduces light transmission to less than 32 percent or increases light reflection to more than 20 percent.

Also, window tint should only be affixed to the upper six inches of the front windshield.

If you have window tinting on your vehicle and are unsure if it meets state laws, contact the Military Police Activity Traffic Section at 545-7241 or 545-2520.

• A family member reported that persons unknown removed a lawn mower and barbecue grill from a secured storage shed.

• A specialist reported that persons unknown broke the passenger window of his car and removed a stereo and radar detector.

• A sergeant first class was charged with indecent assault after he intentionally squeezed a woman's buttocks without her permission.

• Two civilian juveniles were charged with theft after they were identified as the two individuals who were checking door handles of vehicles at 1:30 a.m.

The MPs saw the individuals at a telephone booth and approached them, at which time they attempted to flee on foot.

They were apprehended and a search of the area near the phone booth revealed a canvas bag with stereo equipment and a knife.

• A private was charged with simple assault after butting another soldier during an argument.

• A private was charged with wrongful distribution of marijuana after selling approximately one gram of marijuana to an undercover agent.

• A soldier was charged with assault on a child after hitting the child nine times in the lower back with a belt.

• A civilian contractor reported that person unknown damaged a tool box on his truck and broke the passenger side window. The only items missing from the truck were several keys.

TAKE A BITE OUT OF CRIME®

This week's booby prize is awarded to the private first class who was involved in a fight at an off-post club.

He was asked to leave the club because of his intoxicated condition, but he refused to do so.

When local police officers arrived, the soldier agreed to leave the club, but he returned approximately 10 minutes later demanding entrance.

After refusing to accept a taxi ride, he stated he would rather go to jail than leave the premises.

The police officers returned to the club and arrested him for disorderly conduct while intoxicated.

Other activities on post included seven traffic accidents and five reports of shoplifting at facilities on post.

There were seven cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, 14 cases of larceny of private property and two cases of larceny of government property.

Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best — Give Crime Arrest."

Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5233 or the "Crime in Progress" line at 545-2222.

ASK THE JUDGE

Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: What is bankruptcy, and what is the difference between Chapter 7 and Chapter 13?

A: Many people with financial problems seek guidance from the Legal Assistance Office on bankruptcy. Often they mistakenly believe bankruptcy is the easiest way to avoid paying their debts.

Bankruptcy is a procedure that reduces or wipes out debts when it is impossible for the debtor to fulfill his or her financial obligations. The purpose of bankruptcy is to give the debtor a "fresh start."

There are federal bankruptcy courts established by Congress in each state that deal exclusively with these matters. All petitions for bankruptcy in the Columbus and Fort Benning area are filed with the U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Columbus.

For individuals, there are two types of bankruptcy. Under Chapter 7, the court takes most of the debtor's property, sells its, divides the proceeds among the creditors and discharges the remaining debt.

Some debtors could pay their debts if given more time, and a Chapter 13 bankruptcy is designed for them. Chapter 13 allows the court to establish a realistic repayment schedule that gives the debtor more time to repay his or her debts.

Under Chapter 13, the debtor's income is paid to a court-appointed trustee who gives the debtor enough to live on and pays the rest to the creditors according to the court's plan.

Once a petition for bankruptcy is filed, all creditors are automatically prohibited from making further collection efforts without the permission of the bankruptcy court. The court has broad powers to prevent harassment by creditors.

Bankruptcy is not an easy way to avoid paying debts. Under Chapter 7, the debtor loses most of his or her property. Even under Chapter 13, life becomes a no-frills experience because most of the debtor's income is paid to creditors. On top of this, bankruptcy makes it difficult to get credit and it may remain on credit reports for up to 10 years.

Bankruptcy does not necessarily affect security clearances. The debtor's commander decides whether it is appropriate to restrict or withdraw access to classified material.

Actually, because bankruptcy provides relief for the debtor, a person who files for bankruptcy may be less vulnerable to blackmail than one trying to keep his or her financial problems a secret.

Some debts cannot be discharged by the bankruptcy court. These include taxes, child support, alimony and student loans guaranteed by a government entity.

Bankruptcy should be a last resort. If you have further questions about bankruptcy, call 545-3281 or 545-3282 to set up an appointment with an attorney.

Article 15s are corrective measures

U.S. Army Trial Defense Service

When and how do commanders initiate Article 15s? What other options do they have?

Article 15 proceedings are initiated when a commander becomes aware that a soldier may have violated the Uniform Code of Military Justice and believes the soldier's misconduct, if proven, should be punished nonjudicially.

The commander may become aware of the misconduct through an individual who reports it directly to the commander, a blotter report, a military or civilian police report.

Once the misconduct is reported, the commander must decide what is the appropriate means to correct the soldier.

The commander does not have to use Article 15 proceedings every time a soldier makes a mistake. There are other ways for a soldier to learn from errors.

One option a commander has is to personally, or through the chain of command, counsel the soldier. This is often done in writing.

Effective leaders can often correct soldiers through counseling. The soldier is usually given a copy of the counseling statement so that it can be referred to later as a learning tool.

Another option a commander has is to give the soldier corrective training. An example of corrective training is to have a soldier who misses a formation report to the next formation 15 minutes early.

Other examples are: someone who does not keep his or her area of the room clean may have to clean the common area for the next week; someone who makes racial or sexist remarks may have to attend Equal Opportunity classes; and someone who overindulges in alcohol and breaks a window may have to replace that window and teach an alcohol awareness class.

Corrective training takes the specific problem the soldier has and teaches the correct way to handle the situation.

It is a powerful and effective means for a commander to correct misconduct of soldiers. More importantly, it concentrates on the specific problem or deficiency a soldier has.

There are many other forms of administrative action a commander can take, such as moving a soldier into the billets or pulling pass privileges.

If a commander believes these forms of addressing and correcting a problem will not be effective, the commander may decide to initiate an Article 15 proceeding.

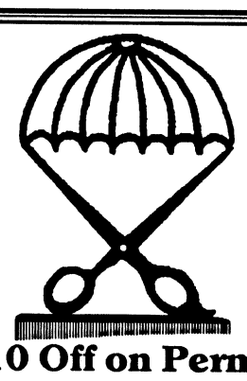
This does not mean that the commander will impose Article 15 punishment. All it means is that the commander has determined that if the misconduct is proven, then the best way to handle the misconduct is through Article 15 proceedings.

The soldier will have an opportunity to show he or she is not guilty at the Article 15 proceedings. If the commander makes the decision to initiate an Article 15, the Article 15 will be typed, and the commander will review and personally sign it.

The commander can then direct a sergeant first class or above to read the Article 15 to the soldier, or the commander can call the soldier in and personally read it to the soldier. This is called the notification.

At the notification, the soldier will be informed that he or she has an opportunity to consult with legal counsel. A defense counsel from the Trial Defense Service, or a civilian lawyer if the soldier chooses, is the soldier's legal counsel when facing an Article 15.

Most Article 15s are called "company grade" or "field grade" depending on the rank of the officer who initiated it.



There is also a "summarized Article 15" that permits very limited punishment for enlisted soldiers and no filing of the record of proceedings in a permanent file.

If a summarized Article 15 is imposed, the soldier does not have the right to use the services of a trial Defense Service counsel for consultation.

This information is very general and may not answer all questions. Soldiers who have a legal question should get advice only from a lawyer.

If the question is about military justice or an administrative elimination, call the local Trial Defense Service office at 545-1520.

ASK DR. FIT

U.S. Army Physical Fitness School

Without a doubt, what you eat and when you eat affects your soldiering (and athletic) performance.

Do not be fooled into believing that food will substitute for effective, physical training.

Eating the proper food supplements your training, and may permit you to get the most from your hard training.

What is the best fuel source?

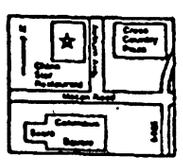
The best fuels are carbohydrates, simple or complex. Some example of simple carbohydrates are fruits, juices, candy and table sugar.

Some example of complex carbohydrates are whole wheat bread, any pasta, rice, potatoes, rice, cereal, pancakes and other grains.

Is sugar a quick source of energy?

Eating candy and sugary food for "quick energy" will actually hurt your performance.

After you eat concentrated sugar, your body releases insulin to carry the sugar to the muscle.



Exercise also helps carry the sugar to the muscle. This combined effect actually lowers the reserves in the blood, which results in light-headedness, fatigue and low blood sugar for sustained operations.

PRIMUS

PRIMUS IS CHANGING

On February 1, 1993, the Columbus PRIMUS Clinic became the PRIMUS Family Practice Clinic. As of this date, the clinic will be open to non-active duty military beneficiaries registered in the Army's Gateway To Care Program and enrolled to receive their primary health care at PRIMUS. As a Family Practice Clinic, PRIMUS will expand its services and offer its enrolled members:

- Comprehensive family practice medicine, including routine physicals, treatment of a wider range of acute and chronic conditions, and extensive laboratory and radiology testing.
- Guidance for all healthcare treatment, including diagnostic testing, speciality referrals, and follow-up care.
- Both scheduled appointments and walk-in visits.
- Telephone consultation with qualified healthcare personnel to determine whether and when to seek medical care.

To enroll as a member of the PRIMUS Family Practice, active duty family members and retirees and their families should attend one of the Army's Gateway To Care briefings or contact the MACH Health Care Finder at 544-1447/1591. Enrolled members can receive more information on our Family Practice services by calling the clinic at 561-7066.

Roy Garner, one of the mechanical engineers responsible for the Multiple Delivery Mine System (Volcano), shows two soldiers from the 317th Engineer Battalion how to arm the system.

Engineers field Volcano system

317th Engineer Battalion

The 317th Engineer Battalion, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized), recently became the first mechanized engineers in the Army to field the new M-139 Volcano mine dispensing system.

This new system employs the latest family of scatterable mine technology. It provides the maneuver commander with a significant countermobility asset on the battlefield.

In the past, engineer sapper squads put mines in by hand, which was a time consuming process. For example, a platoon could spend 10 hours placing a one-kilometer minefield under ideal conditions. The new Volcano can lay the same minefield, mechanically, in less than 10 minutes with only three soldiers.

"It is a simple system that allows more flexibility, allows more speed, and allows more mines to be put on the ground in a shorter time," Sherrard, supply officer (and officer in charge of fielding the system for the battalion.

The Volcano is mounted on the M-548 ammunition carrier. It consists of 160 mine cannisters attached to a launching platform. Each mine cannister contains one anti-personnel and five anti-tank mines. These mines arm themselves automatically once discharged. They detonate when a change in the magnetic field is detected, such as a vehicle passing over the mine or a soldier moving the mine. The mines self-destruct after a set time period.

The battalion had received six Volcano systems as of Aug. 27. Each sapper company spent a day with the fielding team going through classes and mounting the systems. Training concluded with a demonstration and test of each system.

Col. Michael Deegan, 3rd Brigade commander, and Col. John O'Neil, 24th Infantry Division Engineer Brigade commander, watched as each operator laid a 300-meter section of minefield using practice cannisters and inert mines. They both said they were impressed with the capabilities of the Volcano.

Command Sgt. Maj. Richard LaSalle, the battalion command sergeant major, said, "We can stop sweating at NTC (National Training Center) now."

1st Bn 11th Inf marks change of command

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Command of the 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, will change hands today, during a 9 a.m. ceremony on York Field in front of Infantry Hall.

Lt. Col. Florian K. Rothbrust, formerly the chief, Leadership Division, Combined Arms and Tactics Directorate, United States Army Infantry School, will take command from Lt. Col. Timothy G. Bosse.

Bosse, commissioned a second lieutenant of infantry from the Virginia Military Institute in Lexington, Va., in 1974, will be assigned as the chief, Current Operations, Directorate of Operations and Training, United States Army Infantry School.

Rothbrust, a native of Heidelberg, Germany, is a 1976 graduate of Santa Clara University, Calif. He has served with the 1st Bn., 509th, and the 4th Bn., 325th Airborne Battalion Combat Teams in Vicenza, Italy, XVIII Airborne Corps and several assignments with the 82nd Airborne Division, Fort Bragg, N.C. He has also served with the British army's Parachute Regiment and the 5 Airborne Brigade.

Rothbrust is married to the former Gabriella Fracasso of Vicenza, Italy. They have two children.

WORLD WAR II

50 years ago this week ...

• On the Eastern Front, the Soviets continued to drive the German forces out of both well-established and hasty positions throughout the front. This week alone saw the long list of recaptured Russian cities top 20, as Soviet forces pressed on with their unyielding advance toward Kiev.

• In Italy, Britain's X Corps faced difficult terrain and intense, though limited in terms of manpower, German resistance as it began its effort to clear the path to Naples. Meanwhile, the 5th U.S. Army pushed inland as the 8th British army, reinforced by two divisions including the 8th Indian Division that landed at Brindisi, advanced along the coast.

• In Greece, the Italian Acqui Division surrendered only after 1,500 of its members died while valiantly resisting the German attacks on Cephalonia. The Germans accepted the surrender, then killed 5,000 additional resisters, before dooming the rest to labor camps.

• In the Central Pacific, land-based Liberator bombers and aircraft from the carriers USS Lexington, USS Princeton and USS Belleau Wood attacked Japanese positions on Tarawa.

• In the Aegean, British forces took Simi, Stampalia and Icaria, after occupying Castelrosso, Leros and Stamos and establishing an airfield on Cos in the Dodecanese the week before.

• On New Guinea, Australian forces overran Japanese positions, capturing Kaiapit while advancing up the Markham Valley.

• On Fort Benning, the commanding general of the Airborne Command, Joseph Swing, personally pinned the wings on the chest of Pvt. R.R. Daly in honor of his completion of the 200,000th jump in the two-year history of the post's Parachute School.

Fort Benning ranger is Special Ops NCO of year

By Keith D. Butler
U.S. Army Special Operations Command Public Affairs Office

FORT BRAGG, N.C. — A ranger topped fellow noncommissioned officers while a psychological operations soldier beat junior enlisted competitors for titles as NCO and Soldier of the Year for the U.S. Army Special Operations Command recently.

Staff Sgt. James D. Pippin, a 75th Ranger Regiment instructor at Fort Benning, Ga., nabbed the top NCO honor after scoring 295 on his Army Physical Fitness Test.

The Soldier of the Year win went to Spc. Clare L. O'Shaughnessy, an interrogator at the 6th Battalion, 4th Psychological Operations Group, at Fort Bragg. Competing as the only female soldier, O'Shaughnessy scored a perfect 300 on her APFT. She represented the U.S. Army Civil Affairs and Psychological Operations Command (Airborne).

Both winners were presented Department of the Army Certificates of Achievement from ceremony host Maj. Gen. Sidney Shachnow, commanding general of the U.S. Army Special Warfare Center and School. The winners received Class-A uniforms, dress-blue uniforms and $1,000 Savings Bonds.

The winners and runners-up also received plaques, memberships and trophies from local chapters of the Association of the United States Army, the Noncommissioned Officer Association and the Special Forces Association.

NCO of the Year

During the ceremony, Pippin jumped from his chair when the narrator called his name.

"I'm pleased that I won, considering the company on this board," said Pippin, a 7 1/2 year ranger veteran, of fellow competitors. "USASOC is probably one of the most elite commands in the Army. These soldiers represent the best."

Pippin prepares candidates for the 72-day Ranger School at Fort Benning. Students endure training in a variety of terrains, including the mountains of Georgia, desert heat in Texas and Florida's swamplands.

Being a ranger is all Pippin, sporting a traditional high and tight haircut, could see while growing up. His father, Presley, wore a black beret to work.

"In my eyes, my dad was a true soldier. Of all things he did, being a ranger was his top achievement," said the Archer City, Texas, native.

Flexibility is key in a job that could take Pippin and fellow rangers anywhere in the world. In December 1989, Pippin and the 2nd Ranger Battalion were deployed to Panama for Operation Just Cause.

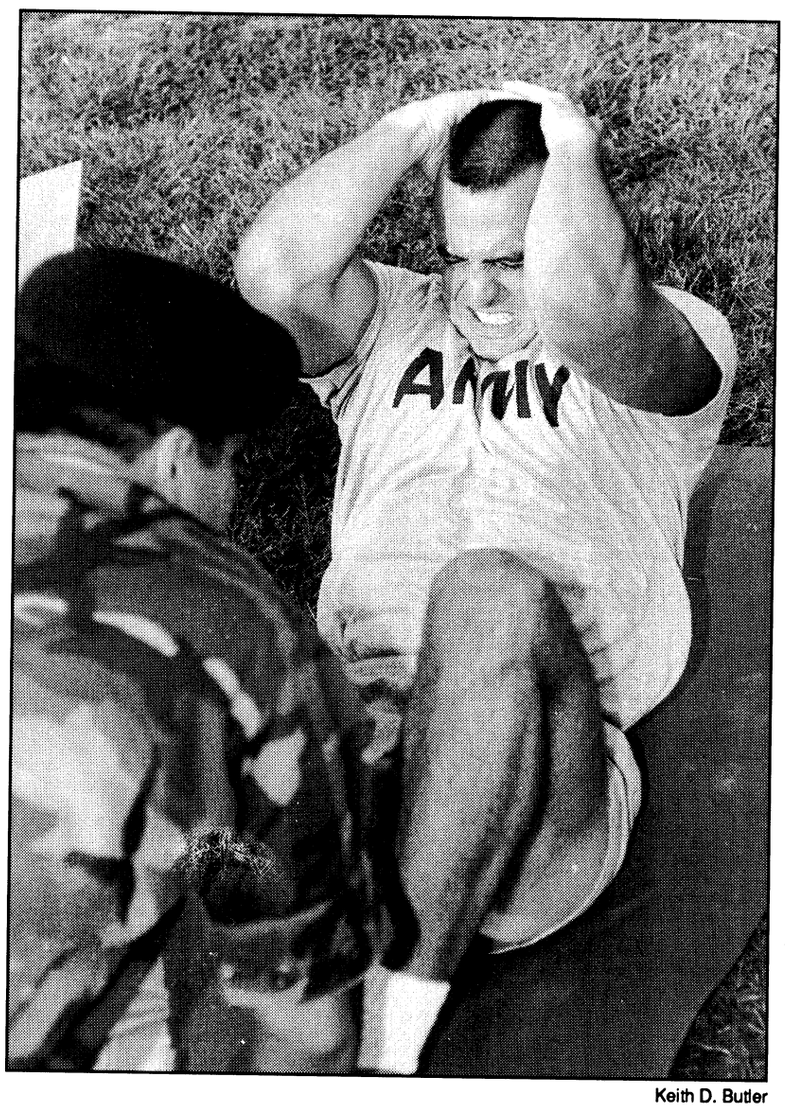
"NCOs set the example whether in garrison or on an actual mission. Things are constantly changing, so (you have to) be on your feet. Rangers have to be prepared 100 percent of the time," Pippin said. "The most difficult thing is instilling motivation. You have to get subordinates to choose the hard right over doing the easy wrong."

Though Pippin keeps a tight schedule as a ranger instructor, he earned his associate' s degree from Fort Benning's Troy State University campus.

Soldier of the Year

College was a big part of O'Shaughnessy's life before she joined the Army two years ago. She completed a bachelor's degree in English and graduate degrees in English and education from the Virginia Institute and State University in Blacksburg.

Just shy of 30 years old, O'Shaughnessy decided on a more physical lifestyle. She enlisted as a Czechoslovakian interrogator.



When O'Shaughnessy asked to appear before a board for promotion to sergeant, NCOs told her she should prepare first with a soldier-of-the-month board. She did. O'Shaughnessy just continued winning. "My friends and my chain of command helped me a lot," she said.

Excelling runs in O'Shaughnessy's blood. The Chesapeake, Va., native has nine brothers and sisters.

Her brother, Chief Warrant Officer T.J. Larz, encouraged her to become a green-suiter.

O'Shaughnessy plans to become an officer, as well.

Spc. James D. Seley, 75th Ranger Regt., also represented Fort Benning during the competition.

Lts learn attack skills in live-fire exercise

By Taylor Wilken
2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment

Second platoon moved silently through the woods, searching for an unknown enemy somewhere ahead. Suddenly, a staccato burst of automatic weapons fire sounded directly to their front.

"First squad, on line!" the platoon leader yelled as the lead members of the platoon dove for the nearest cover. Soon, the crack of M-16s returning fire could be heard, along with sharp commands from the team leaders.

The entire platoon was quickly in motion, one element firing on the enemy position to pin them down while another element moved to the right to close with and destroy them.

This was not a battle from a past war, but the first of several live-fire exercises in the Infantry Officer Basic Course. The 16-week course teaches newly commissioned second lieutenants how to lead infantry platoons into combat.

Capt. Barry Hull, the second platoon trainer, said the purpose of this exercise is to teach the students how to conduct a platoon attack, one of the infantry's basic missions.

"We give them exposure to live rounds to make training as realistic as possible, as close to the combat environment as we can," he said.

The four-day exercise, which culminated in the live-fire, was the first time the students had worked together as a platoon.

"We began in the classroom last week, starting with troop leading procedures and estimating the situation," said Hull.

The students were then given a company-level operations order from which they wrote a platoon order. Once in the field, a student was selected to give his order and lead the platoon on the mission.

"The big things I'm learning right now are control and communication, how difficult they are at platoon level," said Eric Hefner, the student platoon leader, before the mission. "On a scale of one to 10, it's a 14. You have in your mind what you want to happen, but it's hard to mind-meld with your platoon and make them understand that plan."

The IOBC students will take the lessons they learned here and build on them during an offensive operations exercise and the culmination exercise, which will include everything they will learn in IOBC.

Hull said this mission is a starting point for the more complex missions later in the course.

"For many of these men, this exercise is the first opportunity they've had to move a platoon in a tactical environment," Hull said. "It's tough."

Hefner said the training he is getting in IOBC will help him in his career, especially in Ranger School, the next stop for him.

"This is where I learn how to do my job," Hefner said. "When I go to Ranger School, I'll perfect it; then when I get to my unit in Germany or wherever, I'll be squared away. This is a great start."

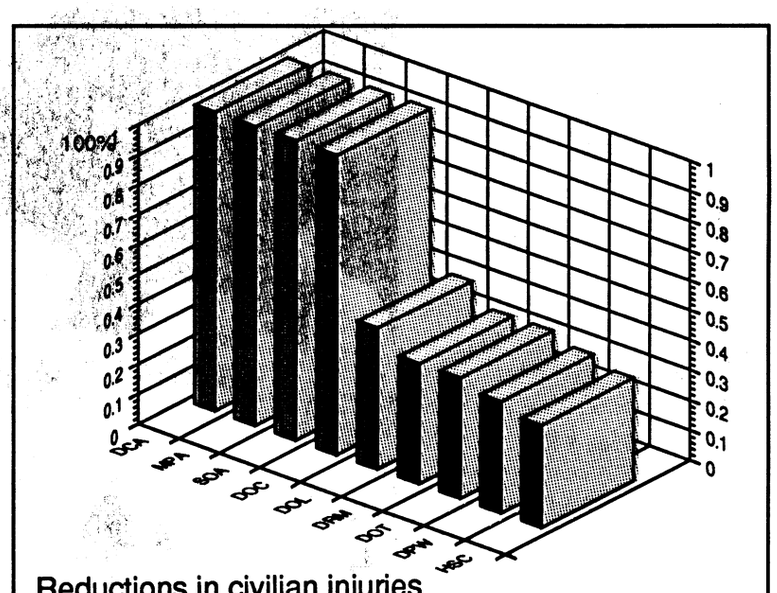
Safety

Civilians receive awards for injury reduction



By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Regis Beighley of the Infantry Branch Safety Office and Col. Burnet R. Quick, chief of staff, presented civilian injury reduction awards to several post directorates Sept. 8.

The awards recognized a reduction of 20 percent or more in the number of civilian injuries each directorate reported, or zero injuries reported.

The reduction in injuries, according to Beighley, was the result of work done by a process action team appointed by Quick. The purpose of the team, Beighley said, is to remove safety hazards and improve working conditions for civilian employees.

Directorates receiving awards were:
Inspector General
Directorate of Threat and Security
USAIC Chaplains' Office
Public Affairs Office
Staff Judge Advocate
Internal Review and Compliance
Equal Employment Opportunity Office
Directorate of Community Activities
Military Police Activity
School of the Americas
Directorate of Contracting
Directorate of Logistics
Directorate of Resource Management
Directorate of Operations and Training
Directorate of Public Works
Health Services Command

COUPON SWAPPERS

set to meet Thursday in Building 2643 Soldiers' Plaza

Consumer Affairs, Financial Assistance

"Penny Pinchers Make Cents," a coupon and consumer information exchange, will resume monthly meetings 7 p.m. Thursday in Building 2643, Soldiers' Plaza.

Sponsored by the Consumer Affairs and Financial Assistance Program of Army Community Service, Penny Pinchers was initiated last year by Army Community Service volunteer Judy Deeter.

At Thursday's meeting, an Army Community Service budget counselor will share information that helped her family get out of a $30,000 debt.

She will discuss determining family income and expenditures, finding ways to shop smarter, negotiating with creditors, getting interest rates reduced and finding agencies that can provide assistance.

"Anyone who is interested in saving money and hearing a dynamic true story in a relaxed and informal atmosphere is invited to attend," said Ann Pratcher, manager of the Consumer Affairs and Financial Assistance Program.

Although Deeter is away at school, Sallie Pearson, another volunteer, is continuing the program.

Pearson said she has been an avid coupon user for many years and even swaps by mail with her mother, sister and brothers.

Meeting participants may be able to pick up some coupons they use; or, if they are already a coupon clipper, they should bring those they won't use with them, so someone else may use them.

Future meetings are Oct. 28 and Nov. 18. All meetings are in Building 2643, Soldiers' Plaza.

For more information, contact Pratcher or Pearson at 545-7517.

NCOA hosts custom car show

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning and the Noncommissioned Officers Association hosted the post's first Rod Run and Custom Car Show Saturday at Stewart and Watson fields.

More than 100 persons from the tri-state area entered their automobiles, ranging from a brand new Corvette to a 1901 electric car.

Trophies were given to the top three automobiles in 27 different categories.

Special awards were presented to the auto with the most mileage, the best engineered auto, the best paint job, the best interior and the "hard luck" award. The trophy for best of show automobile was the people's choice.

"Even though it was our first effort, the show turned out to be a great success," said Sgt. 1st Class James Prince, event coordinator. "We had a real good turnout, and it wouldn't have run so smoothly without all the help I received. I realize the mistakes we made this year, so next year we will be able to avoid them and have an even better show."

The judging panel was made up of volunteers from the cadre of the 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment, the Twin Cities Car Club and the Boll Weevil Car Club.

A "kiddie jumptower" was on hand to provide entertainment for the children present.

The tower was run by members of Company B, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry.

A refreshment stand providing soft drinks, hot dogs and hamburgers, was run by Company E, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment.

A stand was also set up by the 36th Engineer Group to provide soft-serve ice cream to the crowd of spectators.

The whole show was set with a festive atmosphere, with music being played from the '50s and '60s, and retired Sgt. 1st Class Bill Ryan was the disc jockey.

Numerous door prizes were given away to the car show entrants.

The car show is planned to be an annual event on Fort Benning.

Do-it-yourselfers can make most repairs at post's

AUTO CRAFTS SHOPS

Directorate of Community Activities

People who know how to fix their own cars but who do not have the equipment no longer have to settle for high mechanics' bills. They can have all the repair and body work done at Fort Benning's two auto craft shops, and they can do the work themselves.

Both the Main Post and Kelley Hill shops have 34 bays for active duty and retired military personnel and their family members to try their hands at auto mechanics.

The Main Post shop is open Wednesday through Sunday while the Kelley Hill shop is open Monday, Tuesday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Each shop has state-of-the-art computerized engine analyzers that help pinpoint problems.

The shops also have air conditioning repair and recycling systems as well as an antifreeze recycling system.

Engines and transmissions can be rebuilt through an exchange program with parts dealers in the Columbus area. The shop will contact the dealer and make a trade. The customer pays only for the cost of rebuilding.

The auto craft shops have a variety of body work equipment. Customers can weld or paint to get their vehicles looking brand new.

Bay fees are $1 per hour and equipment use is charged by the hour or by the use.

At Fort Benning, eligible personnel do not have to worry about high repair bills. The auto craft shops allow them to do the work themselves and save their money. Call the craft shops at 545-2337 (Main Post) or 544-3101 (Kelley Hill) for more information.

Enlisted wives make donations

Enlisted Wives' Club

The Enlisted Wives' Club recently made several donations to organizations on post.

The club contributed $1,000 to Army Community Service for the Emergency Food Locker and $1,000 in cash, toys and other supplies to the Early Intervention Program. The Early Intervention Program contribution was broken down as follows: $250 worth of toys and learning aids and $250 worth of baby formula, juices and disposable diapers; $250 for use at Tot Town; and $250 for use at the American Red Cross.

The majority of the money raised by the club comes from bingo games at the Main NCO Club during regular bingo nights.

Officials said the $1,000 donated to ACS will be used to purchase food items that are in short supply at the food locker.

Currently, the food supply is low, and donations are needed to continue to support and provide assistance to Fort Benning soldiers and their families, officials said.

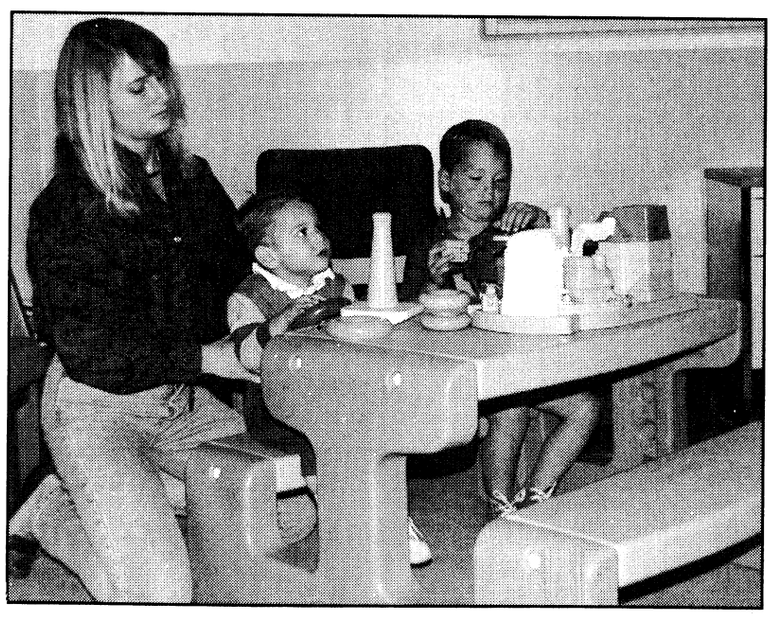
Donations can be canned goods or money to purchase food items for the food locker.

The Emergency Food Locker is designed to assist Fort Benning soldiers and family members by providing three days of emergency food assistance.

The first time a soldier receives assistance may be through self-referral or he or she may be referred by a social worker, chaplain, his or her chain of command, the Consumer Affairs and Financial Assistance Program, or the Army Emergency Relief loan officer.

The emergency food program is located in Soldiers' Plaza, Building 2642.

The Army Early Intervention Program is for children up to 3 years of age who have special needs and may require help in reaching developmental milestones in walking, talking, learning, seeing and hearing.



Any military family who has a child up to 3 years old who may benefit from the program can contact the office.

For more information, contact Mindy Butler at 545-3835.

The purpose of the Enlisted Wives' Club of Fort Benning is to plan and promote activities that contribute to the support and operation of nonprofit charitable organizations within Fort Benning and to promote other club-related activities that are in the interest of the club.

The EWC of Fort Benning is open to spouses of all enlisted soldiers, active duty and retired and of all branches of service. The club is also open to active duty female enlisted soldiers assigned or stationed at Fort Benning.

For more information, contact Christine Hurley at 687-1261 or attend a membership meeting, the second Wednesday of every month at 7 p.m. at the EWC club house, Building 2626, Soldiers' Plaza.

Open house

Military retirees to get latest Army information

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Military retirees and their families from Alabama, Florida and Georgia are invited to the 12th annual Military Retiree Open House Oct. 14, 15 and 16 at Fort Benning.

The open house not only provides retirees an opportunity to transact personal business concerning their rights, benefits, privileges and entitlements, but it also gives them a chance to learn about the latest developments and concepts of the modern Army. Also, it provides a chance to make new and renew old friendships.

Open House Military Health Activity Days are Oct. 14 and 15 for retirees and their family members. Physical examinations will be available at the Physical Exam Section, Building 323, for retirees residing more than 40 miles from Fort Benning, while a health fair is open to all retirees at Martin Army Community Hospital's Family Practice Clinic. Tours of the National Infantry Museum will also be available.

Registration is 7 a.m. Oct. 16 in the lobby of Infantry Hall, followed by comments in Marshall Auditorium from retired Maj. Gen. Robert Sullivan, co-chairman of the Fort Benning Retiree Council, Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, commanding general of Fort Benning, and Col. Michael J. Kussman, Martin Army Community Hospital commander.

Maj. Gen. James C. Pennington, president of the National Association of Uniformed Services, is the keynote speaker.

Trick or treat is limited to children under 13 years of age. Preschool children must be accompanied by an older person (14 years or older).

Parents should inspect all "treats" prior to children eating them. Flashlights should be carried and every safety precaution taken when crossing the streets.

Motorists should be especially alert on Halloween during trick or treat hours.

Girl Scout roundup — McGraw Manor housing area will host a last-chance Girl Scout roundup Sunday at the Girl Scout hut on Custer Road. Girls in kindergarten through 12th grade can register from 3 to 5 p.m. At least one parent should be present, officials said.

For more information, call Rosa Hamilton at 689-6072 or Cheryl Johnson at 327-2646.

Santa's Castle — Santa's Castle, which provides free toys to financially needy military families at Christmas, will have an open house for commanders and first sergeants Sept. 28 and 29 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Those attending will receive a tour and an information packet outlining the procedure for referring soldiers who need assistance.

A toy donation box is located at Santa's Castle, Building 2639, in Soldiers' Plaza. Anyone interested in more information can call 545-1233.

Classes available — Youth Services is offering adult piano classes, Wednesdays through Fridays, from 2 to 3:30 p.m. Tap and jazz classes will be available Tuesdays from 5 to 6 p.m

Ballet classes are still open on Tuesdays from 2:30 to 3 p.m. for children 3 years old and Wednesdays from 5 to 6 p.m. for 6-7- and 8-year-olds.

For more information, call 545-3070.

CHADD seminar — Two spokesmen for the Muscogee County School District will speak about current policies on education and answer questions at the next meeting of Children and Adults with Attention Deficit Disorders.

The meeting will be Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the Medical Center Auditorium.

Percy Griffen, assistant superintendent of student services, and Dr. Robert Smith, lead psychologist with the Muscogee County School District, will be the featured speakers.

Admission is free for CHADD members, $1 for nonmembers. For more information, call 561-1337

Basketball tourney — Youth Services will sponsor a father and son basketball tournament Oct. 9 at 1 p.m. in the youth gym, Building 1055.

The three-on-three teams will consist of one adult and two children, ages 10 to 13. The entry fee is $3 per family.

Girl Scouts — The Fort Benning Girl Scouts are looking for a community director for the 1993-94 school year. Those interested may call 327-2646.

Support group meeting — The Diabetic and Cardiac Support Group will meet Monday at 6 p.m. in the Baugh Conference Room (second floor) at Martin Army Community Hospital.

The group will bowl Sept. 28 at 5:30 p.m. at the Mall Bowling Center.

For more information, call Tom Valitzski at 561-3077.

Weight loss group — Take Off Pounds Sensibly, a non-profit support group for people trying to lose or maintain weight loss, will have a free motivational meeting Monday at 7 p.m. in Building 2521 on Main Post. For more information, call 689-8069 or 568-7111.

Adults in college — Columbus College is sponsoring a free seminar, titled "Adults in College: A Re-Entry Seminar," Thursday from 9:30 to noon and 7 to 9 p.m. at the Elizabeth Bradley Turner Center for Continuing Education.

Administrators, deans and currently enrolled adult students will be available to answer questions and provide information about admission financial aid and other services available to adult students.

For more information, call Linda Gabrielson at 568-2330.

AER — Army Emergency Relief processes clients' requests for assistance on an appointment basis.

Commanders and first sergeants are requested to ensure clients make their scheduled appointments and have all the required paperwork when reporting.

When a soldier is unable to keep an appointment, a courtesy call is required in order to make the time available for someone else.

The office phone numbers are 545-2536, 545-7517 or 545-4357.

Transition assistance classes — Transition assistance classes are from 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m in Infantry Hall, Classroom 30.

• Retirees — Nov. 15 to 17 and Dec. 13 to 15.

• For others getting out of the service — Nov. 22 to 24, Nov. 29 to Dec. 1 and Dec. 6 to 8.

Soldiers within 180 days of getting out of the service are entitled to preseparation counseling before separation or retirement.

Before attending preseparation or counseling classes, all military members must process through the Transition Assistance Office, Building 2617, Soldiers' Plaza.

For more information, call 545-4902 or 545-4892.

Volunteer teachers, aides needed — The Combined Communities of Southeast Columbus organization needs volunteer teachers and aides for its tutorial program, which is at Eastway School on Buena Vista Road across from Wal-Mart.

Each instructor will be asked to tutor for one, two, three or four weeks on Saturdays from 10 a.m. to noon.

Instruction will be core type education, second through eighth grade.

Aides are defined as high school graduates, seniors, juniors and college students.

Teachers are needed in reading, math, science and other fields.

For more information, call Lonnie Jackson at 687-5357 or Daisy Honor at 687-8808.

THE 1-800-COLLECT $5,000 DAILY GIVEAWAY

*1-800-COLLECT $5,000 DAILY GIVEAWAY. NO PURCHASE NECESSARY. ALL ENTRANTS ARE BOUND BY COMPLETE RULES WHICH ARE AVAILABLE BY CALLING 1-800-RULES4U. FOR EACH DAY FROM 8/30/93 THROUGH 9/28/93 (30 DAYS), 1-800-COLLECT WILL GIVE AWAY A GRAND PRIZE OF $5,000! 1. TO ENTER BY MAKING A 1-800-COLLECT CALL: Each time you make a 1-800-COLLECT domestic telephone call (within the U.S. and Puerto Rico) during the promotion period indicated, and the collect calling charges are accepted, you and the individual or company whose name appears on the telephone bill for the number called (hereinafter referred to as Call Recipient) are eligible to be randomly selected as potential winners to share a daily prize of $5,000. Calling day is 12:00 midnight EDT up to the following 12:00 midnight EDT. 2. No purchase or telephone call necessary. TO ENTER BY MAIL, hand print your name, address, zip code and daytime telephone number on a plain piece of 3" x 5" paper and mail in a hand-addressed 4 1/8" x 9 1/2" (#10) envelope, with first class postage affixed, to: 1-800-COLLECT Giveaway, P.O. Box 4396, Blair, NE 68009. IMPORTANT: ON LOWER LEFT HAND CORNER OF MAILING ENVELOPE, YOU MUST PRINT THE SPECIFIC DATE OF THE PRIZE GIVEAWAY (FROM 8/30 THROUGH 9/28/93) FOR WHICH YOUR ENTRY IS DESIGNATED. Enter as many times as you wish for as many days as you wish, but each entry must be mailed separately. No mechanically reproduced entries permitted. Entries must be received by 5 business days after prize giveaway date indicated on your mailing envelope to be eligible for that daily prize. 3. SELECTION OF WINNERS: Each daily winner will be randomly selected from among all eligible 1-800-COLLECT telephone call entries and all eligible mail-in entries received for that day's giveaway. Random selection will take place 6 days after the specific prize giveaway date. Odds of winning a prize will depend on the number of eligible 1-800-COLLECT telephone calls completed each day and the time of day the call was made, and on the number of mail-in entries designated for each day's prize award. Odds will vary each day of the promotion based on the above factors. Odds of winning via mail-in entry will be as good as odds of winning via telephone entry. 4. PRIZES: 1 Grand Prize per day of $5,000, divided equally between Caller and Call Recipient. Call Recipient portion of the prize will be awarded to the individual or company whose name appears on the telephone bill for the telephone number called. If potential winner has entered via mail, he/she subsequently will be required to give name, address and telephone number of individual with whom he/she wishes to share prize equally. 5. GENERAL RULES: To be eligible, callers/mail-in entrants must be 16 years or older as of 8/30/93. Sponsor's employees directly involved in the planning and implementation of this promotion and employees of its advertising and promotion agencies, and their immediate family members and/or those living in same household of each are not eligible for any prize, either as an entrant or designated recipient. If either potential winner of a daily prize is not eligible, per the above, that entire $5,000 prize will not be awarded. Void where prohibited by law. No substitution or transfer of prize permitted. All federal, state and local taxes are the sole responsibility of winner. All federal, state and local laws and regulations apply. Not responsible for malfunctioning or breakdown of telephone systems, for faulty telephone transmission or for lost, late or misdirected entries. In the event that technical difficulties prevent selection of a winner for any daily prize of the promotion, that prize will be awarded on the following day. Random selection of winners will be under the supervision of D.L. Blair, Inc., an independent judging organization whose decisions are final. By participating in this promotion, entrants agree to be bound by the Official Rules and decisions of the judges. COMPLETE rules are subject to any requirements or limitations that may be imposed by the Federal Communications Commission.

AUSA hosts fish fry

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

More than 400 people lined up for catfish, snapper, hush puppies, fries and coleslaw at the annual Association of the United States Army fish fry and general membership meeting Sept. 9.

The event, conducted at the Bovinity Pavilion, Chattahoochee Valley Fairgrounds, began at 6 p.m. with a festive atmosphere provided by a Dixie band.

After dinner, retired Col. Jack Harron, AUSA's new president, spoke about the upcoming AUSA National Convention in Washington D.C., Oct. 17 through 20.

Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White took the podium with his remarks on the importance of AUSA to the Army.

"In 25 years, one-half of the infantry force will be in the Reserve components," White said. "We will have fewer soldiers than there are cops on the streets of New York. It's important that we come together with AUSA and represent values that are necessary to maintain a quality force."

Following their remarks, White and Harron presented awards to the following soldiers: Staff Sgt. Joey Wallace, Company A, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment, airborne instructor of the year; Staff Sgt. Darrell W. Devor, Infantry Training Brigade, brigade drill sergeant of the quarter; Spc. Norbert Lewis, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 36th Engineer Group, outstanding support to single soldiers; Spc. Lisa M. Ragan, Company A, 324th Forward Support Battalion, outstanding support in coordinating Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers; Staff Sgt. Blanca Adams, School of the Americas, noncommissioned officer of the year; Pfc. Joseph Richard Roden, U.S. Army Medical Department Activity, soldier of the quarter.

'Home' work may deceive

Better Business Bureau

According to a survey of the nation's Better Business Bureaus, work-at-home schemes are perennial problems, but have been unusually troublesome recently as consumers turn to these supposed job opportunities as an income source in a weak economy. The survey results were released at a recent U.S. Senate hearing on work-at-home and business opportunity scams.

Work-at-home advertisements usually are nothing more than ploys set up by the advertiser to sell information to unsuspecting consumers leading them to believe they can begin their own successful business from their home. No actual employment is offered.

"Last year our Bureau responded to numerous inquiries on work-at-home schemes. Nationwide that figure topped 176,000," said Lou Marcotte, president of the Better Business Bureau of West Georgia and East Alabama, Inc. "But despite warnings and ongoing education efforts, consumers are continually lured by false promises of huge profits for easy, at-home work."

BBBs reported that work-at-home schemes continue to proliferate because of the weak economy and continuing unemployment, the lure of easy money, a popular belief that all work-at-home offers that appear in newspapers are true and the fact that respected local newspapers continue to accept the ads.

The vast majority of "jobs" offered by work-at-home companies are for stuffing envelopes. In fact, 96 percent of the bureaus that responded to the survey regularly advise consumers on the pitfalls of envelope-stuffing opportunities. Other common fraudulent offers include assembling crafts, tracing unclaimed funds, reading books for pay, and selling list and directories of work-at-home opportunities.

The survey showed the largest group victimized by the scam is stay-at-home mothers. Other home-bound groups particularly vul-nerable to work-at-home promo-tions include senior citizens and persons with disabilities. Bureaus reported that the unemployed, people looking for a second-income and college students have also been taken in by scam operators.

Ninety-three percent of the bureaus surveyed said that work-at-home offers appear in classified ads, often in free weekly newspapers. Many bureaus noted that the ads are not placed by local companies. Instead, companies advertise in different states than where they are located to escape the scrutiny of local law enforcement agencies. Other, less-common methods of promotion include direct mail, cable television and directories of work-at-home opportunities.

Despite receiving thousands of inquiries and complaints annually, law enforcement officials rarely crack down on the operators that run the scams, because the amount of money involved is relatively insignificant.

Only 23 percent of BBBs report any actions taken by law enforcement agencies, usually citing crack-down efforts by the U.S. Postal Inspection Service.

While consumers who send away for craft assembly kits may lose fees of hundreds of dollars, the majority of work-at-home scheme victims lose under $40.

"That doesn't seem like a significant amount until you realize that it probably represents the week's grocery money to many victims," Marcotte said. "I often ask, who commits the greater crime — a person who steals $40,000 from one company, say in a bank robbery, or a company that steals $40 from 1,000 individuals, like many work-at-home companies do?"

Most complaints against work-at-home companies allege never receiving the promised product and misrepresentation of earnings possibilities. Consumer complaints involving craft assembly are likely to claim that the company would not buy the product back because it claims the work does not meet the company's "standards."

In the survey, several bureaus attributed the continued success of these fraudulent companies to consumers who do not complain or seek refunds. Consumers often write off the amount as insignificant or they may be too embarrassed to admit to being taken. However, BBBs report that those victims who take the time to complain often receive their money back, if the company is still in business.

"If a consumer has lost money, we encourage them to file a complaint with the BBB," Marcotte said. "More important though, we recommend consumers check out the company before doing business with it. Our motto is to investigate before you invest."

Americans should shake the salt habit

General Mills

Americans have learned to love salty foods. And some health experts say we should "unlearn" this taste for salt, says Karen Wilder, registered dietitian and staff nutritionist for Total cereal.

Salt is a primary source of sodium, which may contribute to hypertension, or high blood pressure, in people who are salt-sensitive. Cutting back on salt may help lower blood pressure for these people.

For other Americans as well, reducing sodium intake will certainly not be harmful. Our bodies need only about 500 milligrams for good health. And most Americans consume roughly twice the recommended maximum of 2,400 mg daily. Keep in mind that one teaspoon of salt contains about 2,000 mg of sodium.

Fortunately, we can reduce sodium without sacrificing flavor by seasoning with herbs and spices instead of salt.

Fresh herbs are mildly flavored; dried herbs are stronger; powdered herbs are most intensely flavored.

As a rule of thumb, one-fourth teaspoon of powdered herbs equals about one teaspoon of dried herbs or two teaspoons of fresh herbs.

• Flavors may be lost during extended cooking so add herbs or spices to foods within one hour of the end of cooking.

SCHOOL LUNCH

Fort Benning Schools

Lunches at Fort Benning schools for next week are as follows:

• Monday — Tacos with lettuce, cheese and tomatoes, baked beans, spice cake and milk.

• Tuesday — Chicken nuggets, hash brown potatoes, garden salad, pineapple cubes, roll and milk.

• Wednesday — Cheeseburger, lettuce, tomato, whole kernel corn, cake and milk.

• Thursday — Pizza with cheese and sausage, coleslaw, cherry cobbler and milk.

• Sept. 24 — Spaghetti with meat sauce, tossed salad, garlic toast, peanut butter cookie and milk.

PET OF THE WEEK

Red Cross Volunteer Brownie Flournoy holds this week's pet, a 10-week old chow. For more information, contact the Veterinary Services Office in Building 265 at 545-1127. Hours of operation are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:30 a.m. and 12:45 to 3 p.m. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

If you have lost a pet, check the stray impoundment facility in Building 283.

Stray pets are given three working days to be claimed from the time they are picked up by animal control personnel.

If the pets are not claimed, they become government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Pet owners are required to register their pets and update their records when changes occur.

Fort Benning first to win 2-for-2 personnel awards

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

In recent years, the command group at Fort Benning has emphasized commitment to quality of life issues for soldiers, civilian employees and family members here.

That commitment paid off Sept. 10 when the Adjutant General and Directorate of Civilian Personnel received awards recognizing special achievement for military and civilian personnel service in 1992 and 1993.

Lt. Gen. Thomas P. Carney, Army deputy chief of staff for Personnel, presented the AG award to Jim Brinson, acting adjutant general, and the DCP award to Theresa Gunter, director.

Carney said this is the first year both awards have been won by the same post.

"This shows what a great institution Fort Benning is," Carney said, "and how it has changed since I reported here 30 years ago. Your inprocessing procedures, your services and your attitude toward customers is excellent.

"Why did Fort Benning stand out? Clearly," he said, "customer service played a role — you care about people. You here at Fort Benning show an energy and enthusiasm, and you have the ability to pull together as a real team."

Carney went on to discuss anticipated personnel reductions Armywide. He stressed the necessity of teamwork and flexibility in the military and civilian personnel fields.

"This is an age of constant change and anxiety," he said. "But I think you're going to find the work force will stabilize at about the number we have now. We're 80 to 90 percent there in our drawdown requirements, and I don't think you'll see much more reduction in force."

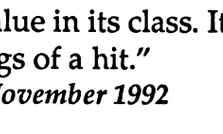
Get to know your teeth

U.S. Army Dental Activity

Although humans have two sets of teeth, some of the lower vertebrates (such as sharks) continuously produce new teeth, while other animals (such as bats and guinea pigs) shed their first set of teeth while they're still in the womb.

Humans begin to lose their first set of teeth, known as baby or deciduous teeth, at the age of 6 or 7.



Before that time, baby teeth play an important role in stimulating and guiding the growth and development of the jawbone and permanent teeth.

Another reason for two sets of teeth is there is not enough room in a child's small mouth for the full set of permanent teeth — there are only 20 baby teeth and 28 to 32 permanent teeth.

At birth, the beginnings of the second set of teeth are already present below the gum line.

During early childhood, permanent teeth develop and start to push through the jaw. When they move, they cause the roots of the baby teeth to dissolve. The baby teeth then fall out, making room for the second set of teeth.

TIPS FOR MAKING YOUR AD MORE EFFECTIVE

- Start Your ad with the item you are selling, service you are offering, or job title you are looking to hire.
- Be descriptive. The more information you provide to the reader, the better the responses will be to your ad.
- Use bold type, white space of decorative characters such as stars, to bring attention to your ad.
- Run your ad for an ample length of time. Remember, as soon as you get results, you can cancel at any time during regular business hours.
- Always include the price of your item.

A FEW TIPS FOR MAKING YOUR AD WORK HARDER FOR YOU

- Start Your ad with the item you are selling, service you are offering, or job title you are looking to hire.
- Be descriptive. The more information you provide to the reader, the better the responses will be to your ad.
- Use bold type, white space of decorative characters such as stars, to bring attention to your ad.
- Run your ad for an ample length of time. Remember, as soon as you get results, you can cancel at any time during regular business hours.
- Always include the price of your item.

TV to salute its best with Emmy Awards

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

It's the television industry's biggest event; but, again this year, the Emmy Awards ceremony is not without its share of controversy.

SPOTLIGHT

Earlier this year, the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences resolved two points on which it was much-criticized: Animated series now are permitted to be eligible in any category, meaning "The Simpsons" finally could be nominated as Outstanding Comedy Series this year (though, somewhat ironically, it wasn't), and guest performers have been separated from series regulars in acting categories again.

However, there's fresh discontent on the TV front as ABC prepares to televise the 45th annual primetime Emmy Awards show on Sunday.

After the commercial broadcast networks had made a collective offer to return to a pattern of rotating the program among themselves on a yearly basis, following the Emmy presentation's term as Fox Broadcasting's property for a while, ABC went forward with a separate bid to secure exclusive rights to the show for the next four years.

The latter pitch was accepted by the academy, prompting CBS, NBC and Fox to decline to provide personnel to assist in various roles at this year's function, and even to make rumblings about joining forces to create a new TV awards venture to rival the Emmys.

Angela Lansbury and the Emmy Award

Nevertheless, the show will go on Sunday — the eve of the official start of the new television season — at the Pasadena, Calif., Civic Auditorium with Angela Lansbury, who's an Emmy nominee for the 13th time herself, serving as host.

What: "The Emmy Awards"
When: Sunday, 8 p.m on ABC

Under the guidance of variety-special veteran Don Mischer, the program will feature the usual parade of familiar faces as presenters, with the following scheduled to appear: Tim Allen, Carol Burnett, Dana Carvey, Farrah Fawcett, Sharon Gless, Jay Leno, Mary Tyler Moore, Craig T. Nelson, Paula Poundstone, former "Cheers" co-stars John Ratzenberger and George Wendt, Patricia Richardson, Jerry Seinfeld, Garry Shandling and Janine Turner.

Filmmaker Chuck Workman, who specializes in "time-capsule" short subjects, has been commissioned to produce "look-back" retrospectives on TV history that will be interspersed throughout the scheduled three-hour telecast.

Enlisting the classy Lansbury as Sunday's Emmy host clearly is meant to signal the return of a certain dignity to the proceedings, something that many critics and industry members felt had been lost lately.

"I think we have a new beginning here," producer Mischer said. "My objectives with this are pretty simple: We want to make a positive statement about television, we want to make a positive statement about the Emmy itself and we're hoping to be a little bit leaner in terms of 'presenter banter.' "

Fort Benning showcases custom 'wheels'

By Caejar A. Cox
USAIC Public Affairs Office

A car show, sponsored by the Noncommissioned Officers Association, was Saturday at Fort Benning. Show cars, both old and new, were on display and in competition in a variety of events.

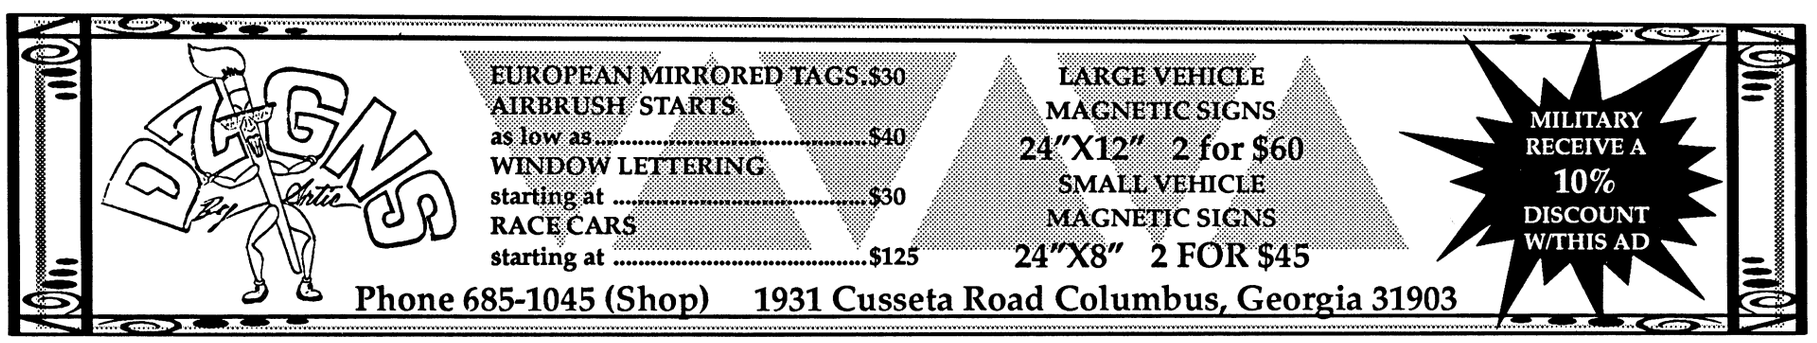
Tune in to "Fort Benning Today" Monday for highlights of the event.

During the post's annual POW/MIA ceremony at Marshall Auditorium Sept. 10, Fort Benning recognized prisoners of war and those missing in action.

The ceremony honored guest speaker retired Col. Benjamin H. Purcell, and all other American POWs, those missing in action and their family members.

The Association of the United States Army conducted its annual fish fry Sept. 9 at the Columbus Fairgrounds. See highlights next week on "Fort Benning Today."

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel lists post events and movies and offers free classified advertisements on "Fort Benning Update," a community information service.



If you subscribe to Fort Benning Cable, you can watch USAIC TV on Channel 3, 24 hours a day. Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:26, 7:56, 8:26 and 8:56 on WLTZ TV-38.

USAIC TV Schedule

Fort Benning Today: 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 1:30 to 2 p.m.

History to 'repeat itself'

Georgia Dept. of Natural Resources

Confederate and Union encampments will be set up at Franklin Delano Roosevelt State Park next to the Liberty Bell pool Saturday and Sunday.

Experience the sights and sounds of a Civil War camp including black powder weapons, bayonet drills, camp cooking, skirmish drills, roll call and mail call.

Activities will run from 8 a.m to 5 p.m. both days. This interpretive event will feature both Confederate and Union regiments.

Anyone interested in finding relatives who saw action during the Civil War can do so with the help of a complete set of war records that will be on hand.

This event is open to the public. There will be a $2 parking fee. The park is located on Georgia Highway 190. For information, call 563-4858.

Harvest Festival

Hamburg to party

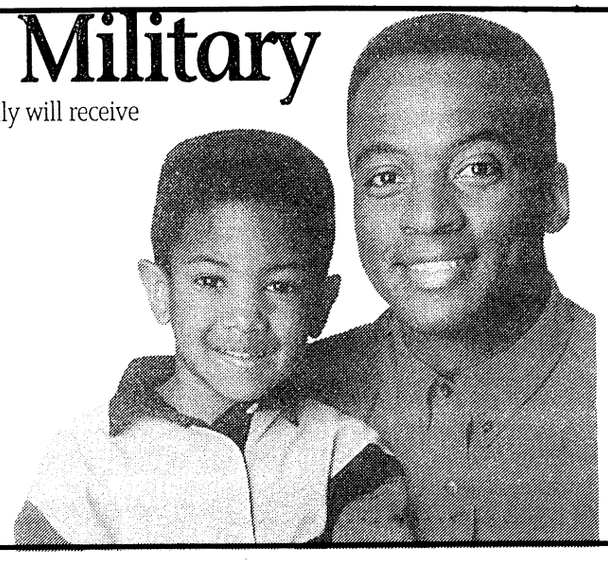
Georgia State Parks & Historic Sites

Hamburg State Park will host the 14th annual Hamburg Harvest Festival Saturday and Sunday.

Dedicated to showcasing the arts, crafts and country music of the South, this festival is a history lesson and an adventure.

For the fourth consecutive year, the 10th Georgia Volunteer Regiment of Mitchell, Ga., will present its Black Powder Program from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sons of the Confederate Veterans will fire cannons at the beginning of each hourly program and Confederate tents will be set up around the festival fairground.

In celebration of traditional gospel music, the Gospel Joymakers from Lilburn, Ga., and the Family Gospel Singers from McDonough, Ga., will sing each afternoon.



Handmade crocheted quilts, clothes, leather goods and ceramic items will be displayed and available for purchase around the festival grounds. Barbecue and homemade fudge are some of the foods that will be offered.

There is a $2 park pass fee per vehicle to enter the park, but all festival activities are free to the general public. For information, call (912) 552-2393.

'Old timers' to kick up heels

Georgia State Parks and Historic Sites

You don't have to be an "old timer" to enjoy the 12th annual Old Timer's Day at Vogel State Park. Vogel State Park will host the event Saturday from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Old Timer's Day will feature live performances of Appalachian and bluegrass music and a special mountain music tribute will be an added bonus to this year's program.

The fiddle, banjo, mountain dulcimer, guitar and songs of the North Georgia mountains will be featured throughout the day.

Storytelling is always a part of the Old Timer's Day festival. Legends from the North Georgia mountains and stories about the Cherokee Indians will be shared by "old timers."

Hamburgers, hot dogs and soft drinks will be available around the festival.

There is a $2 park pass fee per vehicle to enter the park.

Admission to the festival is $4 for adults, $1 for children under 12 and children under 5 get in free.

Vogel State Park, operated by the Georgia Department of Natural Resources, is located 11 miles south of Blairsville on U.S. Highway 19 and 129.

For more information about the festival, call Vogel State Park at (706) 745-2628.

SOAP UPDATE

ALL MY CHILDREN: Taylor cautioned Derek about mistaking her friendliness for anything more serious. Ted was overcome with emotion when he saw the room his mother had kept preserved all this time. Later, he had a nightmare about his kidnapping. After finding a costly error made by Ted, Tad was shocked when Dixie revealed he was illiterate. Wait to see: Laurel faces a new challenge with Timmy.

ANOTHER WORLD: Ryan took Vicky off to a romantic beach idyll. Kevin issued a warning to Carl and later received an anonymous death threat. Carl insisted to Rachel he was not involved in the death threats and was being set up. Wait to see: Carl gets disturbing news about Paulina and Ian.

AS THE WORLD TURNS: Emily was stunned to learn Royce had confessed. Lucinda and Graham, however, felt the whole truth hadn't come out and decided to help him. Royce was stunned by the terrible truth that emerged after he underwent hypnosis. Emily got word that Susan's in vitro fertilization attempt failed. Cal felt uneasy seeing Linc and Connor in a warm moment. Wait to see: Damian gets a surprise visitor.

BOLD AND THE BEAUTIFUL: Sheila overheard Connor invite Karen to his house for dinner. Connor and Ridge had a confrontation that ended with Ridge punching Connor. Karen wrote a letter to Connor and sent it off by messenger. Wait to see: Sheila's plot to destroy Connor creates a problem for Eric.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES: Carly was given a second dose of the herbal antidote and made a stunning recovery but was still unable to recall the past 10 years. Eager to keep Carly an amnesiac lest she reveal her misdeeds, Vivian urged Lawrence to take her to Paris before she recovers enough to remember Bo. Wait to see: Kate is forced into making an unwanted move.

GENERAL HOSPITAL: Jagger and Stone had an angry confrontation, followed by Stone's decision to once again be on his own. Sean kept a vigil over Tiffany's deep depression, unaware that Felicia and Mac found evidence linking her to Jessica's murder. Wait to see: Jagger faces a difficult decision that could change his life.

GUIDING LIGHT: Hart broke up a fight between Bridget and Julie while Dylan, whom Julie left at the altar, told his family he was fine, but he never wanted to hear her name again. In Santa Fe, Lucy checked with her bank on her trust fund. Meanwhile, Buzz, who wanted to pay for Harley and Mallett's wedding, called the bank to arrange for a withdrawal from that account. Wait to see: Lucy creates complications for Buzz and Nadine.

LOVING: Frankie was part of a gang of teens that vandalized an automobile. As he fled from the scene, he was hit by Cooper's car. After learning Cooper was an Alden, Frankie refused to finger him as the driver who hit him. Alex Masters unexpectedly returned to town and joined with Jeremy to protect Ava from a stalker. Wait to see: Ava finds herself in a terrifying situation.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE: Powell threatened to commit suicide but Marty was able to talk him out of it. He then made a full confession about the rape to the police. In Bermuda's beautiful and romantic setting, Tina told Cain she was in love, but with Cord. Wait to see: Luna's chances for marriage wax and wane just like her celestial namesake.

YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS: Hope and Cliff returned to the farmhouse after she called off their wedding. After getting Cliff's message about the canceled wedding, Victor postponed his flight to Genoa City and returned to the farm. Blade proposed, and Ashley accepted. Wait to see: Victor has a surprising "suggestion" for Hope.

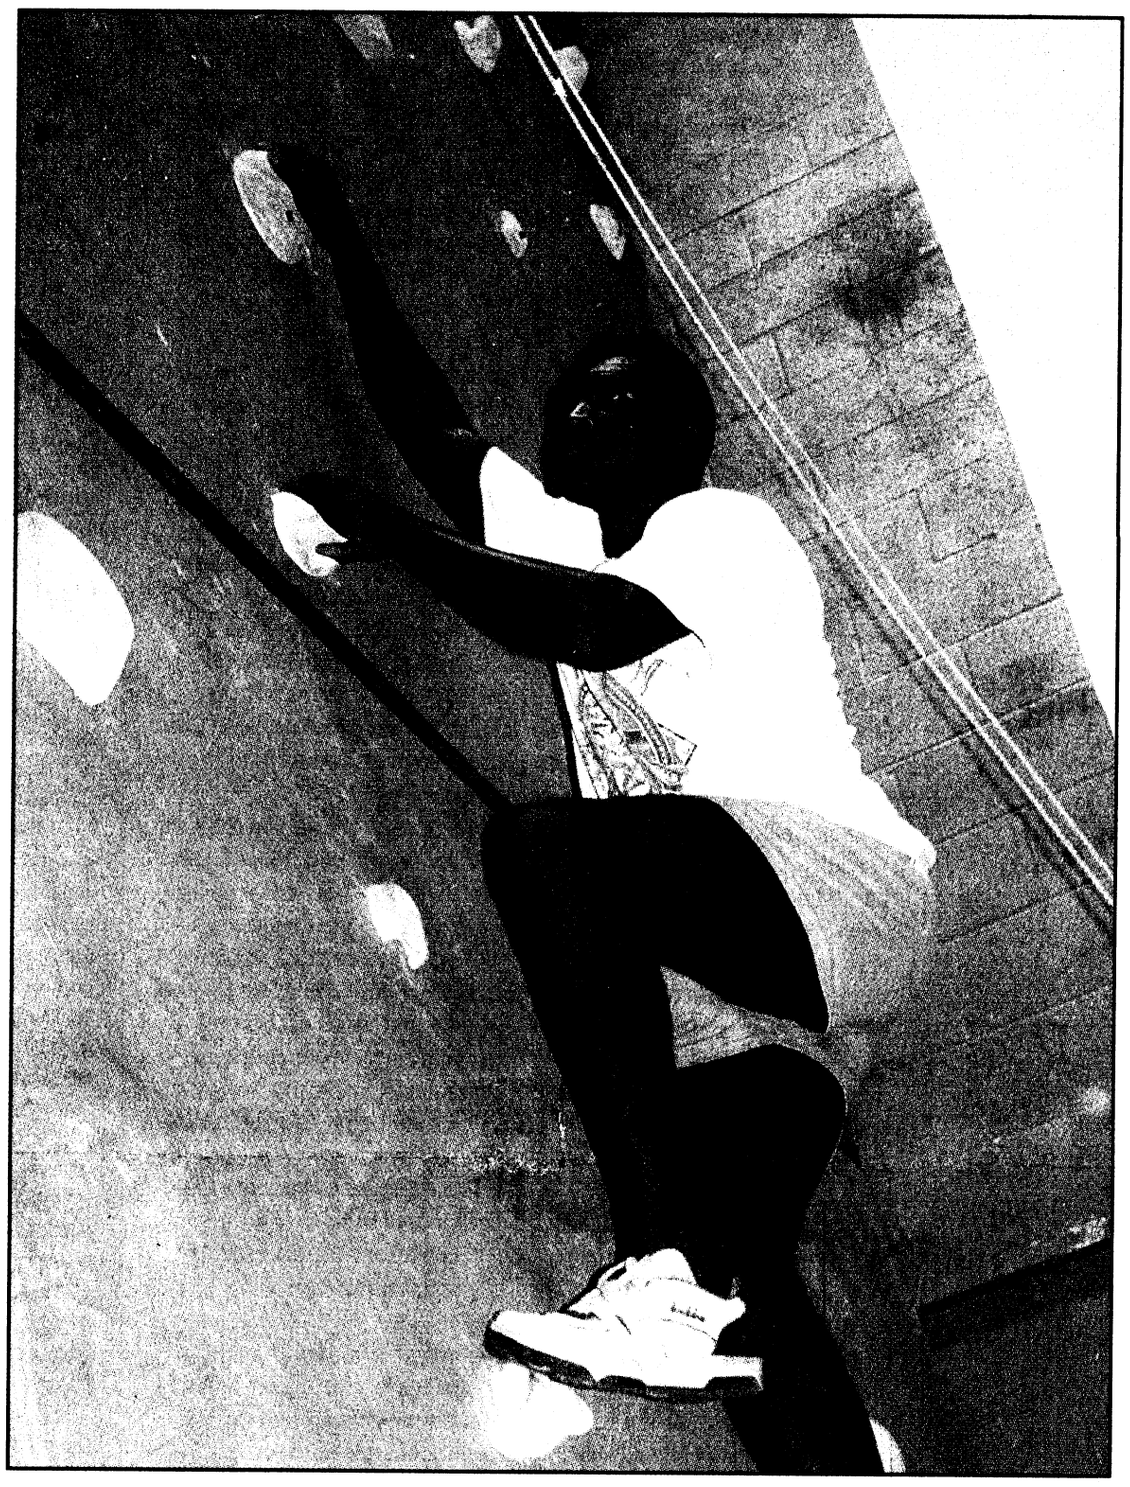
FORSCOM taps 317th soldiers for deployment to SOMALIA

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Elements of the 317th Engineer Battalion, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized), have been identified by Forces Command to participate in a rotation of troops to Somalia. The rotation is part of United Nations Organizations in Somalia II.

The soldiers are scheduled to depart Saturday. The departure ceremony is set to begin at approximately 5 a.m.



A 40-man combat engineer platoon will deploy to join other United Nations organizations in Somalia. United States units will be under the command of Gen. Joseph Hoar, the commander in chief of United States Central Command.

The mission for United States forces in Somalia is to implement the provisions of U.N. Security Counsel Resolution 814 by providing personnel, limited combat support, limited combat service support and a quick reaction force.

The deploying U.S. units will provide combat and logistics-support capabilities to the relief effort and are expected to be deployed to the East-African nation for approximately 16 to 24 weeks.

The 317th element will deploy with M-113 armored personnel carriers, engineer and utility trucks with trailers, earth movers and various other engineer equipment.

The 317th is commanded by Lt. Col. Kenneth S. Kasprisin. The unit's mission will be to clear mines. The unit participated in operations Desert Storm and Desert Shield.

Post readies for Diamond Jubilee

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning will celebrate its 75th Diamond Jubilee Anniversary with activities on Oct. 7, 15 and 16.

Activities include a wreath-laying ceremony Oct. 7 at the grave of Gen. Henry Lewis Benning and the unveiling of a historic marker at the corner of Dixon and Macon Road in Columbus near the original Camp Benning in 1918.

The post will host a golf tournament and a Diamond Jubilee Ball at the Officers' Club Oct. 15.

Activities will culminate at Infantry Hall on Oct. 16 with the annual Retiree Open House and events for the Diamond Jubilee celebration.

A sequence of events follows:

7 a.m. to 2 p.m. — Retiree Open House.
8 a.m. — Three-mile unit formation run.
9 a.m. — One-mile Founder's Day Walk/Run.
9:30 a.m. — Five-mile National Infantry Museum Run and Biathlon.
12:30 p.m. — Awards ceremony for museum run.
2 p.m. — Vendor and static displays.
2 p.m. — Historical tours begin.
2 p.m. — U.S. Army Drill Team demonstration.
2:15 p.m. — The Old Guard Fife and Drum Team.
2:30 p.m. — Silver Wings, Fort Benning's command exhibition parachute team.
2:40 p.m. — Ranger hand-to-hand demonstration
3 p.m. — U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit exhibition (English Range).
4 p.m. — Silver Wings
4:10 p.m. — Ranger hand-to-hand demonstration
5 p.m. — U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit exhibition (English Range)
5:30 p.m. — Military Police canine demonstration
7:15 p.m. — Twilight Tattoo
8:30 p.m. — Fireworks finale

The celebration concludes with a Twilight Tattoo presentation, which includes presentations by the Infantry Band and Chorus, the Old Guard Fife and Drum Corps, U.S. Army Drill Team, a Spirit of America show featuring military vignettes depicting soldiers throughout history and fireworks.

The presentation begins at dusk and concludes at dark, hence the name Twilight Tattoo.

The public is invited to the events.

Combined Federal Campaign to kick off Thursday

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet©

The fiscal 1994 Combined Federal Campaign will kick off at 4 p.m. Thursday at the Follow Me Golf Course Club House with a gathering of unit commanders, special staff, sergeants major and unit project officers.

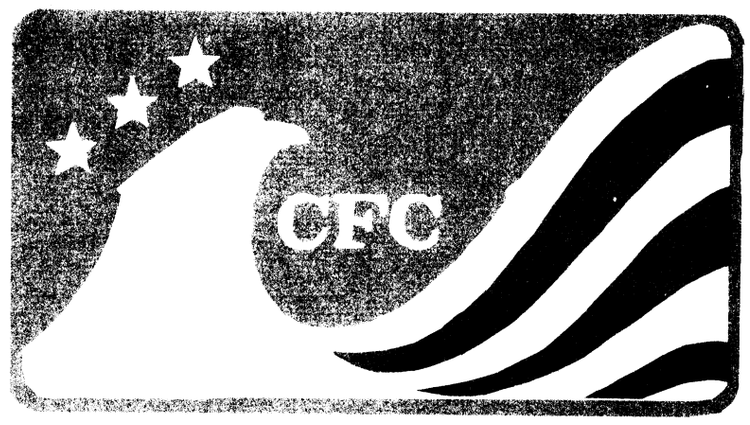
The six-week campaign will begin Oct. 1 with a goal of $600,000.

Those attending the kickoff will hear remarks from Col. Richard Rutledge, garrison commander, and Brig. Gen. Jack P. Nix, Fort Benning's deputy commanding general.

Keynote addresses will be given by retired Maj. Gen. Ken Leuer, chief executive officer of the local Goodwill organization and Bill Thompson, 1993 campaign chairman for the local United Way drive.

The Combined Federal Campaign is a system that allows numerous private volunteer organizations to raise funds through a single campaign effort.

Federal employees and members of the armed forces can choose to donate to one or more of the more than 900 approved agencies through a monthly payroll deduction.



National agencies eligible for donation are approved by the Office of Personnel Management.

Local organizations also appear on the CFC list and are approved by the local federal coordinating committee.

Among the local agencies is the Family and Soldier Support Association, CFC code 5001, which exclusively benefits organizations on Fort Benning.

The fiscal 1993 campaign goal of $500,000 was met and exceeded.

Individuals wishing to donate can obtain Combined Federal Campaign donation forms and the fiscal 1994 national list of eligible agencies from their unit project officer.

How to keep your CFC donations at Fort Benning

- Write "5001" for the agency number on the CFC donation form.
- Turn in the form to your unit project officer.

Donations can be put to work at home

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet©

Donations given through the Combined Federal Campaign this year can directly benefit Fort Benning through the Soldier and Family Support Association, listed as CFC organization code"5001."

"This organization is the only one listed whose funds will stay completely at Fort Benning," said Brian Smith, the marketing director for the Directorate of Community Activities.

This group is comprised of numerous Fort Benning agencies whose programs depend on funding donated through CFC code "5001."

Agencies benefit from these funds in many ways, Smith said. A significant portion of these donations offset the cost of maintaining volunteers that includes training programs and child-care fees. Smith also pointed out that as the civilian work force at Fort Benning continues to shrink, agencies are depending heavily on the time and effort of volunteers.

Youth Services

One of the many agencies on Fort Benning that benefits from CFC funds is Youth Services. This organization operates one main Youth Activities Center and three outreach centers within the communities on post.

"Our goal is to have an outreach center in each housing community," said Billie Smith, Youth Services director.

Youth Services received more than 10,000 hours of volunteer time last year to support the wide range of activities it provides. Donated funds pay for the cost of training programs for the coaches and officials who voluntarily participate in the competitive sports programs.

Youth Services also purchases equipment and supplies needed to maintain its centers and programs with these funds.

The Fort Benning chapter of the American Red Cross also benefits from money donated to "5001."

Volunteers have donated more than 35,000 hours in the past year

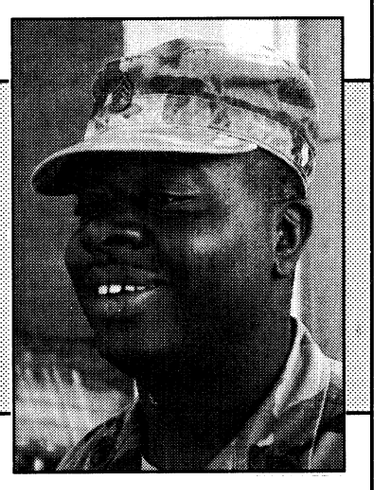
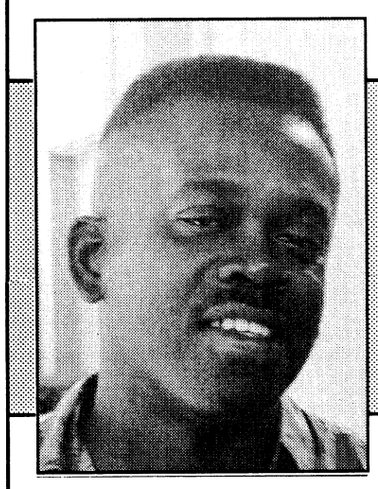
What do you believe about the existence of unidentified flying objects?



Jimmi Boling, family member — "I'm really undecided. Deep down I want to think no, but there are scientists who believe in UFOs and they're no dummies."



Spc. James Lee, Company C, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment — "I believe in them. If you look at the universe, we're just grains of sand. There's got to be more out there."

Staff Sgt. Ray Bolden, 336th U.S. Air Force Recruiting Squadron — "I don't believe in UFOs. I don't think there's any strange, foreign life out there."

Staff Sgt. Johnny Jynes, Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment.— "I don't believe in UFOs. I believe in the Bible and in spiritual things."

Master Sgt. Julian Franklin, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, Division Support Command, Fort Drum, N.Y. — "I don't believe in them. I don't think life exists on other planets."

Pfc. Bjorn Pfeiler-Greene, Company C, 4th Battalion, 325th Airborne Infantry Regiment, Fort Bragg, N.C.— "UFOs may be possible. There's a lot of strange sightings — maybe they do exist."

UFOs — fact or fiction?

UFOs deserve our attention

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

COMMENTARY

With the fall of Communism and the amazing breakthroughs in the politics of the Middle East, it looks like the military might have to divert its attentions to less warlike endeavors, endeavors such as searching for unidentified flying objects.

PRO

Don't laugh. France and Belgium are already doing it, and more and more scientists are finally admitting that the UFO phenomenon involves much more than just the fictitious ramblings of sleazy supermarket tabloids.

The existence of UFOs is an undeniable fact, substantiated by thousands of reports by reliable witnesses and an abundance of physical evidence.

And by "unidentified" I do not mean objects that were simply unidentifiable by the witness but, in reality, were unusual cloud formations or airplane lights; I mean objects that are of nothing we know of on Earth and that are most likely the craft of intelligent life from outer space.

Contrary to what the general public believes, UFO witnesses are not all a bunch of deranged fanatics. Former U.S. President Jimmy Carter filed an official UFO sighting report in 1973, and U.S. astronauts are some of the most ardent supporters of their existence.

UFOs have been sighted on numerous space flights, and spectacular footage of several UFOs was recently taken from a space shuttle flight.

Former astronaut Gordon Cooper once admitted, "NASA and the government know very well that intelligent beings from other planets regularly visit our world to enter into discreet contact and observe us. They have an enormous amount of evidence but have kept it quiet in order not to alarm people."

In fact, it is those who claim that UFOs do not exist who are often members of the lunatic fringe. More than one ardent UFO debunker has been caught falsifying evidence and using less than scientific methods in an attempt to prove that flying saucers do not exist.

In addition to reliable witnesses, there is more physical evidence that proves the existence of UFOs than should be necessary to change the mind of even the most stalwart skeptic, from photographs and film footage that would have been impossible to fake, to depressions and burn marks left on the Earth by alien spacecraft, to mysterious scars and even implants discovered on the bodies of UFO abductees.

Finally, there is the strange behavior of the U.S. government, which has continually denied the existence of UFOs, yet refuses to release thousands of official documents concerning them.

There is also considerable evidence that the government possesses numerous captured alien craft and even the bodies of aliens themselves.

Even more sinister are the tales of those who have worked for the government in UFO research who were harassed and threatened with violence to themselves and their families if they ever revealed what they knew. Some of these workers have even mysteriously committed suicide.

Unfortunately, I do not have the space in this short column to present detailed evidence, but it does indeed exist.

For some of the most incredible examples of photographs of UFOs, I refer you to "The Gulf Breeze Sightings" by Ed and Nancy Walters, a fascinating book that will change forever the way you think about this fascinating phenomenon.

Above all, maintain an open mind. People do not want to admit the existence of UFOs because the thought makes them uncomfortable.

We fear the unknown, and to admit that extraterrestrials exist is to admit that perhaps our narrow, Earth-bound view of ourselves, of life, of science and even of God, are wrong.

Astronomer Carl Sagan estimates there are at least a billion Earth-like planets in our galaxy alone. It is sheer folly to think that humans are the only intelligent life forms in the universe.

Let's have science — not sci-fi

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

COMMENTARY

Look! Up in the sky! It's a bird ... it's a plane ... I don't know what the heck it is!

Humankind has historically looked to the skies in amazement and bafflement. Before science had an explanation for such phenomena as comets, eclipses, planetary orbits and meteors, various cultures had developed their own explanations.

CON

Humans have traditionally explained things beyond their understanding by attributing them to supernatural agencies. Lightning was hurled by Zeus from Mount Olympus or Thor from Valhalla, a goddess named Pele made volcanoes erupt, and Cupid's arrows caused mortals to fall in love. Now, some people believe those little lights in the sky are caused by cruisers from Alpha Centauri.

Eventually, through observation, hypothesis and experimentation — the scientific method of problem solving — men and women began to develop an understanding of the forces surrounding them. They realized the Earth is not flat and the sun is not a chariot pulled across the heavens by magical horses.

There has not yet been a Galileo or Copernicus, however, to hand down judgement on crop circles, alien abductions or mysterious lights in the night sky.

People need their myths, though, and it is human nature to seek excitement. From the Circus Maximus in Rome to the Salem witch trials to today's television, humans have always sought sensationalism.

That hasn't changed, but it's not currently fashionable, except in limited circles, to profess a belief in witchcraft or a desire to burn heretics. Now the fad is to be interested in pseudo-scientific issues. Reincarnation. Crystals. Beings from "outer space."

Yes, there are frequent sightings of unidentified flying objects. Yes, it's certainly possible some of them are aircraft, or even spacecraft, of some kind. It's also possible they're not. The fact is no UFO has ever publicly been identified as being of extraterrestrial origin, and keeping an open mind does not mean accepting the most exciting possible explanation.

Many UFO sightings have been explained as known aircraft, lightning or natural effects of light. You don't hear about these sightings on television, because they're boring and they don't sell advertising.

Of course, people are welcome to theorize as much as they like. But if I see a patch of flattened grass in a field, my first explanation would not be that there must recently have been a spaceship sitting there.

In fact, at least two people in Great Britain have admitted to faking these "crop circles" as a hoax.

In any case, and whatever people believe, it's not the job of the military to search for UFOs.

Our purpose is to defend our country, its allies and interests. If extraterrestrials become a threat to national security, rest assured, we'll know — or at least the rangers will.

What we can do is support scientific exploration of space — not just to find E.T., but to expand our knowledge of the universe. Yes, there are a lot of planets out there, and I certainly would like to believe life exists on some of them.

But if we don't find any right away, if we don't get to drag-race across space with alien hotrods, there's still a lot to learn that could be of use right here on this planet.

Science brought the human race out of the dark ages. If we make contact with alien intelligences, I believe it will be science, not sensationalism, that makes it possible.

Various spacecraft — ours — have carried recordings, pictures, and other items designed to communicate with aliens. Receivers have been set up in space to detect any radio transmissions that come our way. So far, there's been no result, but we can keep hoping.

Meanwhile, the exploration of space has helped bring about new technologies and new knowledge.

I prefer we trust more to our own intelligence and ability and less to speculation and rumor. Before we worry about intelligent life out there, let's work to improve our world. Life definitely exists here, and we could make it better.

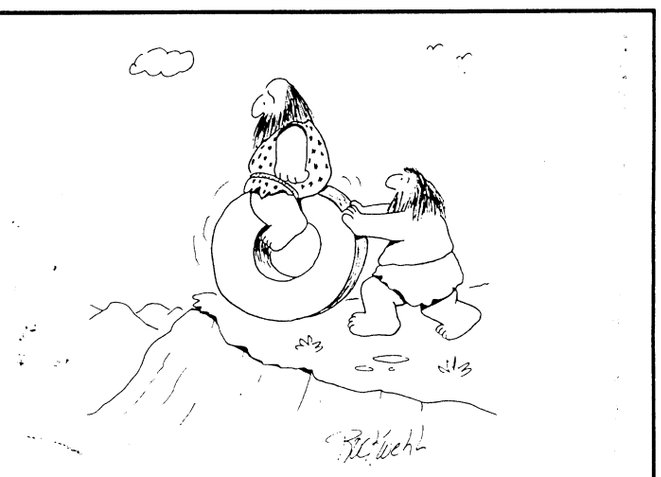
OWC says 'thanks' for sign-up success

The Fort Benning Officers' Wives' Club would like to thank all those people who helped make this year's activities' sign-up a success.

The combined support of the Fort Benning and Columbus communities is greatly appreciated.

Nearly 200 people attended the Sept. 1 event and helped kick off the new year.



A highlight of the evening was King, a 13-week-old black mane lion.

Terri Buckland, the handler, brought the lion cub from the Pine Mountain Animal Park in Pine Mountain.

Several craft and activities classes are now in full swing.

If you are still interested in signing up, contact the Officers' Wives' Club at 687-3537.

Retirees

Benning to host open house

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Military retirees and their families from Alabama, Florida and Georgia are invited to the 12th annual Military Retiree Open House Oct. 14, 15 and 16 at Fort Benning.

The open house not only provides retirees an opportunity to transact personal business concerning their rights, benefits, privileges and entitlements, but it also gives them a chance to learn about the latest developments and concepts of the modern Army. Also, it provides a chance to make new and renew old friendships.

Open House Military Health Activity Days are Oct. 14 and 15 for retirees and their family members. Physical examinations will be available at the Physical Exam Section, Building 323, for retirees residing more than 40 miles from Fort Benning, while a health fair is open to all retirees at Martin Army Community Hospital's Family Practice Clinic. Tours of the National Infantry Museum will also be available.

Registration for the open house is 7 a.m. Oct. 16 in the lobby of Infantry Hall, followed by comments in Marshall Auditorium from retired Maj. Gen. Robert Sullivan, co-chairman of the Fort Benning Retiree Council, Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, commanding general of Fort Benning, and Col. Michael J. Kussman, Martin Army Community Hospital commander.

Maj. Gen. James C. Pennington, president of the National Association of Uniformed Services, is the keynote speaker.

Representatives of various civilian and military agencies will be available in Infantry Hall about 10:45 a.m. to answer questions about retiree rights, benefits and entitlements. For information on the activities, call the Retirement Services Office at 545-2715.

Toll-free number helps transportation problems

American Forces Information Service

You've been reassigned from Germany to Fort Lewis, Wash. Unfortunately, your car was shipped to Zimbabwe.

Service members and civilians who experience government transportation problems can now call a toll-free number for help.

The Military Traffic Management Command established a customer service center to help individuals with property shipment, domestic freight, international cargo and passenger travel problems that haven't been solved through normal channels.

The center, located in Virginia, isn't meant to replace the local chain of command or installation transportation offices, said Air Force Maj. Michael A. Cohen.

"The center will provide customers with the means of referring questions, issues or complaints not resolved at the installation level and to obtain assistance when other actions have not worked to the customer's satisfaction," said Cohen, the center's chief.

Center workers have a goal of solving problems within 24 hours. The center has specialists in each transportation field. For example, one individual handles passenger movement problems while another deals with household goods movement.

Recent cases the center handled include gypsy moths in household goods, a privately owned vehicle stranded at a port for six months, discrimination problems and waste, fraud and abuse complaints.

The center idea developed through total quality management initiatives, Cohen said.

"We are filling a void that has existed for a long time, he said. We take pride in letting the customer know that the buck stops here."

The center is open Monday through Friday, excluding holidays, from 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Eastern time. The number is (800) 756-6862; facsimile, (703) 756-2140. Or write to:

to host annual convention

Association of the United States Army

ARLINGTON, Va. — "America's Army Count on us!" is the theme of the 39th annual meeting of the Association of the U.S. Army to be conducted in Washington, D.C., Oct. 18 to 20.

The forum will host more than 20,000 visitors during three days of professional educational programs including addresses by the secretary of Defense, the Army chief of staff and many of the Army's civilian leaders and senior commanders.

Soldiers of all grades, both active and Reserve, will join with hundreds of civilians concerned about the state of the Army and national defense at the world's premier military gathering.

The meeting will be co-headquartered in the Sheraton Washington and Omni Shoreham hotels where attendees will view more than 500 military and defense industry displays reflecting the latest in military technology and hardware developments.

The three days of events will be preceded by the association's ninth annual Army 10-Mile race. The race, heralded by USA Track and Field as the country's largest 10-miler, will begin at 8 a.m. Oct. 17 at the Pentagon Ceremonial Grounds.

Also Oct. 17, the chapter presidents will conduct their annual dinner at 8 p.m. in the Sheraton Washington Hotel.

Gen. David M. Maddox, commander-in-chief, U.S. Army Europe and 7th Army, will be the featured speaker.

Sgt. Maj. of the Army Richard A. Kidd will host the Sergeants Major Conference at 7 a.m. Oct. 18 in the Omni Shoreham Hotel. Senior noncommissioned officers from Army activities throughout the world will attend.

The 1993 annual meeting officially opens at 9:30 a.m. Monday in the Sheraton Washington Ballroom with a special military pageant by the 3rd U.S. Infantry (The Old Guard) and the U.S. Army Band (Pershing's Own). Secretary of Defense Les Aspin will deliver the keynote address.

The climax of the meeting will be the George Catlett Marshall Memorial reception and dinner Oct. 20. Former President George Bush will be honored with the association's most prestigious award, the George Catlett Marshall Medal, during the black-tie affair.

CG hosts concert at Riverside

Infantry Band, Chorus give Sunday performance

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Many post residents and employees topped off a weekend of beautiful weather at a concert Sunday on the lawn at Riverside.

Sunlight glinted off tubas and trombones as the audience sat back to listen to the Infantry Band and Infantry Chorus perform.

Post Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White welcomed everyone and introduced the band's new commander and conductor, Chief Warrant Officer 3 Ronald E. Bucher.

Bucher, who has just returned from a five-year tour of duty in Berlin, Germany, said it was "wonderful to be back in the good old USA" and complimented the band members on the outstanding job they did during the two months they spent without a commander before he arrived.

Bucher then led the band in a program that included the "El Capitan March" and "Stars and Stripes Forever" by John P. Sousa and "Begin the Beguine," by Genn Osser.

The Infantry Chorus, directed by 1st Lt. Lorraine Ferrell, sang "Georgia on My Mind," "God Bless the USA" and medleys of '60s and Motown songs.

Staff Sgt. Kevin W. Twyeffort helped jazz up the afternoon by leading members of the Infantry Band Jazz Band in Miles Davis' "Mile Stone," and the Dixieland Band played "Clementine" and "Suwanee River."

The band performs about 1,000 concerts a year both on Fort Benning and in the local community, according to the concert program.

They play at parades, public relations events, celebrations and military and other ceremonies.

Playing the concerts at Riverside "is a welcome change," said saxophone player Spc. Jeffrey S. Franks.

"It gives you a chance to breathe and relax," he said.

OCS inducts 97 to Hall of Fame

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

The Officer Candidate School hosted a ceremony Sept. 17 at Marshall Auditorium to induct 97 former OCS graduates into the Hall of Fame.

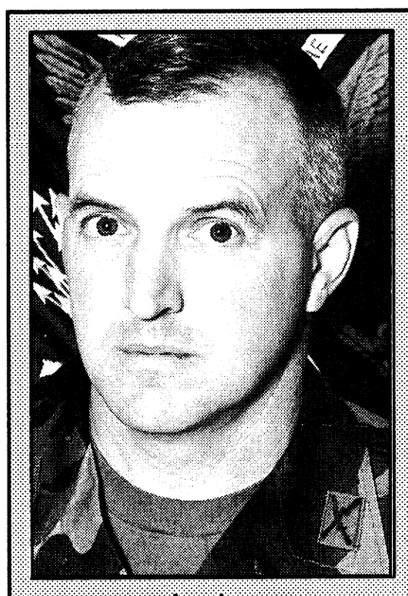
This year's inductees included two retired major generals, two retired and three active duty brigadier generals, 88 colonels and two civilians.

Of the colonels inducted, two are Fort Benning commanders.

Col. James Crockert is provost marshal of the U.S. Army Infantry Center and commander of the Military Police Activity, and graduated from OCS in 1967.

Col. Robert L. Jordan Jr. is commander of the 29th Infantry Regiment, and graduated from OCS in 1971.

The distinguished civilian inductees were:



• Terry Sanford, who has served as a senator in the North Carolina State Senate, governor of North Carolina, president of Duke University and U.S. senator for North Carolina.

• Retired Maj. Hershel W. Gober, commissioned as an infantry officer in 1962, and currently serving as the second-ranking executive in the federal Department of Veterans Affairs.

Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White was guest speaker at the ceremony, which also included music from the Infantry Band, a multi-media presentation of the poem, "I am the Infantry" and a rendition of the OCS alma mater.

"OCS graduates set their goals on service to the nation," White said. "not for money, not for glory, but for love of country alone.

"The spirit of the OCS graduate is a grittier kind of leadership. the OCS graduate is a soldier officer, with experience, maturity and special discipline," White said.

CFC: kickoff set for campaign

to the benefit of many Red Cross programs.

"Volunteering allows young mothers an opportunity to get out of the house, maintain job skills and learn new skills," Linda Scorgie, Red Cross station manager, said. CFC funds make it possible for volunteers to participate in numerous Red Cross programs including Rape Crisis and First Steps.

Army Community Service uses donations for programs like the Food Locker, which provides food to needy military families and for spouse orientation classes.

Other programs assisted by CFC funding include the Family Unit Network, Community Life Office, the Girl and Boy Scouts and Chaplains' Outreach.

Individuals participating in the Combined Federal Campaign, can direct their funds to stay at Fort Benning by choosing CFC code "5001" on the donation form and turning it into their unit project officer.

Hospital blood drive

ITB troops turn out in force

U.S. Army Medical Department Activity

Nearly 700 soldiers from the Infantry Training Brigade joined Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, post commanding general, and Col. Michael Kussman, Martin Army Community Hospital commander, Saturday in what turned out to be the largest single blood drive ever recorded at Fort Benning.

A total of 690 pints were donated, according to John Wynn, hospital spokesman, setting a post record. The number of pints surpassed the previous record, which was set in June when 600 pints were drawn, Wynn said.

The drive was conducted at the Santiago Gym, Building 3350, located in the Sand Hill training area of Fort Benning. White donated blood at 9 a.m.

It was coordinated by the hospital's Department of Pathology with the assistance of medical personnel from Camp Memorial Blood Center and the hospital on Fort Knox, Ky.

Also, several local reservists assisted in the drive.

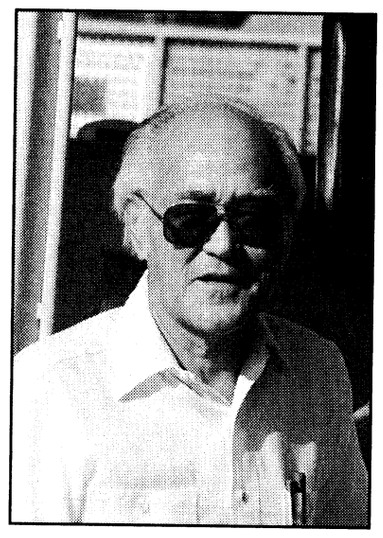
This was the second time a consolidated drive was conducted at Fort Benning.

The blood will support patient care needs throughout the Army.

DRMO gets food to homeless

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Soldiers have been giving away parts of their rations for ages. In World War II, American soldiers gave chocolate bars to European children, in Vietnam they shared C-rations; today it's meals ready-to-eat.



But soldiers are also sharing right here at home — without even knowing it.

Fort Benning's Defense Reutilization Marketing Office recently arranged for the donation of more than $450,000 worth of food products to the Interagency for the Homeless in Missouri, said Mike Tomita, a property disposal specialist there.

The donation consisted of cases of items left over from the buildup for Operation Desert Storm, like fruit cocktail, peaches, instant breakfast, macaroni, beef chunks and other items used in MREs, Tomita said.

The food was allocated by a personnel center in Philadelphia, Pa., which contacted the Humanitarian Assistance Program, a Directorate of Resource Management Service in Battle Creek, Mich., and was issued from the DRMO through the General Services Administration, Tomita said.

This is not the first donation like this, according to Tomita, who said DRMO has made similar donations to other homeless and state agencies in California, New York, Florida and Oklahoma, among others.

Tomita

The Defense Reutilization and Marketing Office started giving away loads of the excess food being kept in contracted storage in December 1991, Tomita said, and has made similar donations several times since then.

"Now we have gotten rid of all (food in) cans and cases," Tomita said.

They still have packaged MREs in storage, but will keep those until they are needed, he said.

"We are always donating things," Tomita said. "That is our primary mission — reutilizing."

His job, Tomita said, is to look for people who want what his agency has to give away. After almost 20 years of working at DRMO, (he will retire Thursday) Tomita said he knows who needs what.

"There is no need for property to sit there," Tomita said. "There is always somebody who wants it."

If they don't find a state or Department of Defense agency to give excess property to, Tomita said, it is sold at auction.

But he likes to see it go back into the system, he said.

He has seen excess clothing from Military Clothing Sales shipped to Moscow, televisions donated to a local prison and medical items donated to university research programs, he said.

"It makes me feel good when we can reutilize it," he said.

ITB honors former soldier

By Shelby Carr
Infantry Training Brigade

A former soldier and father of a retired 30th Adjutant General Battalion (Reception) employee was honored Sept. 16 with a ceremony dedicating a memorial display.

Logan Duff, deceased father of Ann Duff, the battalion's former chief of finance who retired May 14, spent 30 years in the U.S. Army serving as both an enlisted soldier and an officer retiring at the rank of first lieutenant.

Thirteen of the soldier's 30 years were spent at Camp Benning and Fort Benning while serving in a variety of assignments. His career as a soldier and a warrior is one to emulate, said Col. Theodore R. Severn, commander, Infantry Training Brigade.

His first assignment to Fort Benning began in 1917, 17 years after he began his military career. He was assigned to the Infantry School Detachment to test new weapons and equipment. While he was a sergeant, he received a commission from the Field Artillery Officer Candidate School in Tyler, Texas. He retired from active military service in 1930.

Margaret Duff Goodrow, his daughter, said the dedication ceremony was very special for the family and honored a man who deserved credit yet never accepted credit for his actions.

"It is very special to have a man's life encased and on display to be remembered by soldiers for many years to come," she said.

The memorial display includes pictures and personal items belonging to Duff donated by his family.

Duff died in Columbus Sept. 17, 1968, at the age of 83.

In his speech about Duff during the ceremony, Lt. Col. Bobby Little, commander, 30th Adjutant General Battalion (Reception), said Duff did not want to be recognized for his accomplishments. He was the first person to pitch a ball in Gowdy Field at Fort Benning, Little said. Once he pitched a perfect baseball game, then gave credit to his brother for the win, Little said.

The Army did not allow commissioned officers to play baseball when Duff was an officer, so he returned to the enlisted ranks and achieved the rank of master sergeant before retiring, according to Little.

Ida Duff, his widow, said she remembered the first time they were stationed on Fort Benning. They lived in tents for housing that were located where the Airborne School's jump towers are now located, she said.

James Duff, Logan Duff's son, and Lt. Col. Tom Brady, previous commander of 30th AG Bn. (Reception), initiated the memorial display.

Drug war

Task force looks at counterdrug efforts

By Rudi Williams
American Forces Information Service

Secretary of Defense Les Aspin recently formed a task force to review the Department of Defense's counterdrug efforts.

"This is the right time to take stock of our efforts to help stem the tide of illegal drugs entering the country," Aspin said. "First, we have to make sure all DoD resources are used in the most effective way possible, and second, we have to make sure we're making the most efficient contribution to the counterdrug effort."

This marks the first time the department has reviewed its national anti-drug efforts since the DoD program started in 1989, said Brian E. Sheridan, deputy assistant secretary of Defense for Drug Enforcement, Policy and Support. His office falls under the undersecretary of Defense for Policy.

The review comes as some critics question the effectiveness of DoD's efforts, particularly in air and sea interdiction, he said.

Task force officials will discuss DoD's counterdrug efforts with law enforcement agencies, the military services and the intelligence community, Sheridan said. He expects the review to take about two months.

Under Sheridan's leadership and armed with a $1 billion annual budget, DoD's counterdrug program involves all military services, the five geographic military commands, the National Guard Bureau and agencies such as the Defense Intelligence Agency and Defense Security Assistance Agency.

"We'll look at what we've been doing wrong and where we need to improve," said the 33 year-old Schenectady, N.Y., native. "We'll be getting guidance and overall strategy directions from the new national counterdrug director, Lee Brown."

Brown, former New York police commissioner and Houston chief of police, took office in June.

During Brown's swearing-in ceremony, Clinton called drugs "a many-headed monster" and said "fighting drugs requires a multifaceted offensive and the maximum use of the resources we have as a people."

A DoD liaison officer works in Brown's office. Sheridan noted, "DoD's efforts will dovetail with the strategies outlined by him and the National Security Council.

"We're a support agency," Sheridan said, emphasizing DoD isn't the lead department in the drug war. "We support local, state and national law enforcement agencies — Drug Enforcement Administration, Customs Service, Coast Guard, police departments.

"Our main goal," he continued, "is to provide whatever support we can to those agencies in the most cost-effective way we can. But until we complete our review, it's not clear whether we'll see greater participation by active duty and National Guard forces.

"But given the background of director Brown in local law enforcement and a president who is interested in making streets safer, it's possible that we will be asked to provide more support on the local level," said Sheridan, a former CIA intelligence officer and political-military analyst. "We already provide extensive support to police departments."

DoD support includes detection and monitoring of drug traffickers; training federal, state, local and foreign law enforcement officers; supplying and helping maintain excess DoD equipment, such as boats, computers, helicopters and telephones for law enforcement agencies; and providing translators and intelligence analysts.

U.S. Army Physical Fitness School

Q: Recently, there was a newspaper article on heart artery problems early in life. Are young people at risk of heart problems?

A: In a study published recently in a journal devoted solely to heart related issues, there is increasing evidence of artery plaque deposits in young adults in their 20s and 30s.

To reach these conclusions, researchers for American Heart Association at Louisiana State University and the New England Medical Center in Boston, conducted autopsies on almost 1,600 people ages 15 to 34 who died largely of homicides, suicides and accidents.

All teen-agers had signs of fatty deposits in their large blood vessel that carries blood from the heart. Half the young adults had fatty deposits in the smaller vessels that feed the heart directly, such as coronary heart vessels.

Earlier studies conducted on Korean War casualties noted early signs of coronary heart disease in men. The 1993 study showed narrowing arteries in both genders and across race lines.

Women seem to have less incidents of coronary heart disease and this conclusion agrees with previous studies. Estrogen protects the young women until the age of the mid-40s.

Q: Is it true the American Heart Association is sponsoring a Run for Life race in the fall?

A: Yes, the AHA is conducting a 10-kilometer race that is sanctioned by The Athletic Congress (Formerly the American Amateur Association) Oct. 23 in Columbus. The race is open to all walkers and runners. There will be different distances and age groups, and even team relays to benefit the fight against heart disease. This year, there will be corporate teams competing in the relays. In a special category, there will be military teams in the relay. For more information, call the Muscogee County American Heart Association Office at 324-0173.

Q: What is the best way to improve my two-mile run time?

A: Interval training is the proven method to improve your two-mile run time. The preferred interval training distance is one-quarter mile or about 440 meters.

Take your two-mile run time and divide it by eight, then subtract one to four seconds from the one-quarter-mile time.

That is your work time. The rest time starts at double the work time then decreases over time to the work time.

Runners qualify for race in D.C.

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The 1993 Fort Benning Army 10-miler team will boast a veteran team this year.

The qualifying run Saturday at Sand Hill saw Charles Dent, a specialist with 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital, run a time of 54 minutes and three seconds to land himself on the team for the second time in three years.

Three others, Curtis Southern, a captain from Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, made the team for the third straight year with a time of 57:02. Michael Raymond, a specialist from HHC, 75th Ranger Regiment and Dave Millet, a captain with HHC, 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt., made the team for the second straight year with times of 57:30 and 58:24 respectively.

Scott Moore, a specialist with Company E, 2nd Bn., 54th Inf. Regt., will be the new face on the male team, clocking in at 59:46. Alyce Oliver, a master sergeant with the Staff Judge Advocate's Office will return to the team as the only female runner for her second year with a time of 1:21.48.

Joe Janczyk, a second lieutenant with Co. B, 2nd Bn., 11th Inf. Regt., came in at 1:00.39 to place as the alternate if any team member should not be able to make the trip to Washington, D.C., in October.

Dave Millet (left standing), Joseph Janczyk, Michael Raymond, Charles Dent , Scott Moore, Curtis Southern (kneeling) and Alyce Oliver qualified for the Fort Benning 1993 Army 10-miler team. Janczyk is an alternate.

Infantry museum to host biathlon

National Infantry Museum

The 1993 National Infantry Museum Road Races are part of the 75th Anniversary of Fort Benning. The races consist of a three-mile formation run for units, a five-mile run and a 20-mile bike race. The biathlon is a new event just added this year.

To celebrate Fort Benning's 75th birthday, a one-mile Founder's Run/Walk will also be conducted. The 75th finishers in both the five mile run and the biathlon will receive the Fort Benning Founder's Award.

Preregistration is from Oct. 1 to 13 and may be done at either the National Infantry Museum, the Kelley Hill Recreation Center or Outdoor Recreation at Building 1707. Late registration is Oct. 15 and must be accomplished at Outdoor Recreation (Building 1707) only.

Entry fees are as follows:

Sports program more than just playing

By Shelby Carr
Infantry Training Brigade

The motto of 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment — "Play the Game" — covers leisure as well as work activities for the unit.

The battalion's intramural sports program, according to Capt. Edwin Pascua, commander of the battalion's Company E, has led to higher morale, better unit cohesion, and improved esprit de corps.

Lt. Col. Kevin Rice, battalion commander, and Command Sgt. Maj. Gary Hurley, battalion command sergeant major, initiated the program in May of 1992.

During the first year of the program, teams from the battalion placed in the top three for Sand Hill in all sports, and won "top of the hill" in softball. The battalion has competed in the post playoffs in softball, basketball and football.

Honors at the post level include a first-place finish in bowling and third place in football.

Hurley said the sports program has led to better working relationships and more cooperation among the members of the unit.

"Drill sergeants throughout the battalion get to know each other better when they can meet as teammates," Hurley said.

Staff Sgt. Andrew Lee Jr., coach of the softball, basketball and football teams, said, "The battalion is more like a family since the sports program started. Everyone has been working together."

Involvement in the battalion's sports program has resulted in unit members participating in other activities as well, Pascua said. One such activity was a night when cadre and Initial Entry Training soldiers went to a Columbus Redstixx game.

Hurley, who said he has seen significant changes in the battalion since the intramural program began, attributes a reduction in stress and stress-related injuries to the release the sports provide for soldiers and officers of the battalion.

The battalion is definitely "playing the game," said Hurley, and plans to prove it during football season.

Slam gets past The Riggers 13-7

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment (Slam), opened its flag football season with a 13-7 victory over The Riggers of Co. E, 1st Bn. (Airborne), 507th Inf., 11th Inf. Regt., Sept. 17 at Gowdy Field.

Slam opened the scoring on The Riggers when cornerback Oliver Wendell picked off a pass from Rigger quarterback Derek Brannon and returned it for a 20-yard touchdown. Running back Tim Holloman tacked on the extra point for a 7-0 lead early in the first half.

The rest of the half saw the defense of both teams keep pace, until Slam quarterback John Mathis hit tailback Leo Hawkins with an 18-yard touchdown strike. A missed extra point try left the score at halftime in the favor of Slam 13-0.

Penalties and defense ran amuck in the second half on both sides of the ball. Neither team could put the ball in the end zone, until Riggers backup quarterback Cortez Frazier hit Brock Rogers in the end zone for a touchdown.

Rogers added the extra point attempt to cut the lead to 13-7, late in the game.

With the clock running, Slam was able to keep the ball in its possession and run out the clock on The Riggers for its first win of the young season.

Other action took place Sept. 16 and 17 and Monday night around post.

'Bambi killers' serve purpose

By Kevin L. McIver
USAIC Public Affairs Office

COMMENTARY

You know, I hear it all the time from either my wife, co-workers or on television — "Bambi killers" or "poor little deer." Heck, even at my birthday party the other day, a guy sang "squirrel eater" in one of the phrases.

Well, all I have to say is that if you eat meat and you criticize hunters, then you don't have a leg to stand on. Of course, that's not the way I would phrase it if I saw you face-to-face. Stop by and we'll discuss it sometime.

Anyway, what's wrong with you "meat-eaters" out there? I mean, you condone the killing of cows, hogs, chickens and other animals for consumption, but then you crucify people who kill their own game. How do you think meat gets in those nice little plastic-wrapped packages? Something's wrong here.

You can turn on the television during deer season and see anti-hunters protesting at the entrances of many public hunting lands around the country. There they are, throwing rocks, signs in hand, with dummy deer strapped to the hoods of their automobiles.

Heck, they'll probably start murdering hunters before long. Gun them down in front of the check-in station. Then they'll say the culprits did it on their own. The group had nothing to do with it. Sounds like something else that's been going on recently around the country.

I also get this stuff every time I turn in a hunting article for publication. A couple of weeks ago, I asked if we were going to run photos of trophy deer harvested on Fort Benning (harvested is a better word than killed). I got an immediate response, "No!"

With some 1,700 to 2,000 hunters hitting the woods, roughly 10 percent of the on-post population, and hunting being the largest outdoor activity on Fort Benning, I was shocked! I mean, why wouldn't we run tasteful photos of trophy bucks when so many people hunt? Anyway, this has since been rectified, and we will be running good, quality photos.

Hunting license revenues alone bring in some $40,000 a year, and that doesn't include recreation fees. In these days of budget cuts, this translates to about two or three jobs that would have to be cut if hunters didn't support the Outdoor Recreation Division. OK, we'll stop hunting, but two anti-hunters have to first give up their jobs.

But let's get back to the issue. Hunting is a way of life in America. Our forefathers hunted game to feed their families and keep them alive through droughts, harsh winters, and while moving cross country to settle this country of ours.

You anti-hunters are fortunate someone in your family killed fresh game, or you probably wouldn't be reading this article today.

Game was plentiful back then, and until the crops grew, you had very little to sustain yourselves. Fresh meat was the prize of the day, and when great-grandpa brought home that rabbit, deer or squirrel, you can bet great-grandma didn't call him a "murderer or Bambi-killer."

But times have changed. Most people don't have to rely on hunting to feed their families. Does that mean we should stop hunting? Some people would answer "yes." They think it would be far better for animals to take their chances out there.

Well, to counter this, you have to know some facts. First of all, the nation's deer population is currently estimated at more than 17 million.

That's the highest in recorded history; however, 50 years ago you were lucky if you could even find a deer in many states around the country.

In fact, it has only been through hunter conservation and hunter supported programs that the nation's deer herd has increased and sustained itself. And in many parts of the country, wildlife biologists are trying to decrease the size of the herd.

Georgia, for instance, is trying to drop from an estimated 1.2 million whitetail deer to 1 million, and Alabama has a limit of one deer a day to try to drop the herd down from its estimated size of 3 million.

Why would biologists want to do this? Well, there isn't enough habitat for deer to sustain themselves. If left alone, the deer population would definitely increase, but, due to over population, there wouldn't be enough food to compensate for the increase. Thus, what you have are more deer dying of starvation, fewer fawns being born and bucks with smaller antlers.

Yeah, let's forget hunting altogether and allow deer to overpopulate and die of starvation and disease. It's far better to let an old buck live to 8 or 10 years old, when he doesn't have the stamina after the rut to fight off a pack of wild dogs or coyotes.

Plus, more deer would mean more accidents on the highways, better for body shops and insurance companies. With so many deer dying, former hunters could just walk down the street and get that "trophy" buck off the road. Plus, we would have to have so many more of those yellow "deer" crossing signs that the sign industry would also bolstered.

So to the anti-hunters out there, I'll quote one of my favorite actors, John Wayne, who said, "Get off that high horse."

Hunting is here to stay; it's necessary to control the over population of America's deer herd, and it's a way of life that has been passed down from each generation of hunter to the next. Good luck and see you in the woods.

Stars beat Wolfpack

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Columbus Stars turned out the lights on the North Georgia Wolfpack Saturday night at Doughboy Stadium 6-0 in overtime to move their record to 5-3.

With 52 seconds left in overtime, Stars backup quarterback Eddie Mitchell broke past the defense on a quarterback draw on third and 10 and went 51 yards for the only score of the ballgame.

"When the linebacker moved out of the gap, I changed the snap count to first sound, center Eric Thomas snapped the ball on down instead of one and it was off to the races," said Mitchell. "Tight end Tyrone Ivory threw a key block to seal off the defensive back so I could get around him; I didn't think the play would go all the way, but I was glad it did."

The Stars' defense once again rose to the occasion, stopping the Wolfpack offense time after time. Strong safety Kelvin Thomas and linebacker Terrence Perry each had two interceptions to lead the Stars' defense. Cornerback Calvin Adams also had a pick. The defensive line, led by tackle David "Howdie" Teel and defensive end Robert Stroy, caused two fumbles that were recovered by Stroy and defensive end Robert Ames. The last fumble set the stage for Mitchell's heroics.

"We owe the defense one," said Mitchell. "They came through for us again and again. If they don't stop (the opposing team's) offense, we lose. Our chances for the playoffs hinge on our defense. We definitely owe this one to the defense."

The Stars also had their share of turnovers, four altogether. Three interceptions and one fumble kept the Stars from putting any points on the board in regulation play. The Stars also got what seemed to be divine intervention. The Wolfpack set up for a field goal try with 10 minutes and 27 seconds left in the fourth quarter when the lights went out plunging the stadium into darkness. After a 20-minute delay, the Wolfpack attempted a 38-yard field goal and missed wide right.

The Stars' next two games are on the road Saturday with the Forrest Park Vikings in Atlanta and Oct. 2 against the Georgia Thrashers, also in Atlanta. These two games will be critical for the Stars' chances for a spot in the playoffs.

Post observes Religious Education Month

By Jacqueline Feagin
USAIC Chaplains' Office

September is observed nationwide as Religious Education Month. Fort Benning will join in this observation.

What is religious education?

A dictionary type definition might be: any act or process that causes or enables the participant to gain religious knowledge or insight.

Protestants may think of religious education as a children's Sunday school. Some children attend every Sunday for a few years and are then considered sufficiently educated religiously for life.

Religious education can be a continuious process for people of all ages. At Fort Benning, there are numerous forms of religious education for all faiths and for children and adults.

Sunday school provides a complement to the religious education children are taught at home. Confraternity of Christian doctrine provides the teachings of Catholicism for children. These programs provide classroom instruction for children of various age groups.

For adults, many chapels offer Bible study in the evenings to enable fellowship throughout the week.

There are also groups like the Navigators, Protestant Women of the Chapel, Officer Christian Fellowship, Christian Military Fellowship, Military Council of Catholic Women and Protestant Youth of the Chapel that offer fellowship and religious education for their members.

For more information on religious educational programs available at Fort Benning, call Bill Putman, protestant religious education director, at 545-4715 or Phil Reilly, Catholic religious education director, at 545-5508.

Darby Queen

Soldiers battle 'mother' of obstacles

58th Infantry Regiment

Transforming civilians into infantryman is the normal challenge for the drill sergeants and the cadre members of the Patriots from the 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, and their Reserve partners from the 1st Battalion, 291st Infantry Regiment of the 95th Training Division out of Oklahoma.

With the battalion on cycle break, the soldiers wanted to conduct some highly motivated training to enhance unit cohesion and team work. To fulfill this objective, they decided to face a new challenge — the famous Darby Queen, the mother of all obstacle courses. The Darby Queen is normally used by ranger students and contains 25 obstacles spread over eight-tenths of a mile.

The sun greeted the approximately 60 soldiers Aug. 31, as they arrived at Camp Darby to face the challenge. Upon arrival, the soldiers were broken down into four-man teams to negotiate the course.

Lt. Col. Bruce Grant, battalion commander, started with the first group and the other teams followed soon after at 30-second intervals. Leading the Reserve soldiers was their battalion commander, Lt. Col. Bernard McGraw.

After 30 to 40 minutes of crawling, jumping, climbing, traversing and some highly motivated cries, soldiers arrived at the last obstacle — the cargo net climb. Using what strength remained and with the encouragement of the battalion commanders, all the drill sergeants and cadre members ascended the net to complete the course.

Once they completed the course, the soldiers spoke about what they thought of the Darby Queen.

"I love the Darby Queen. I would like to do that again," said Capt. Warren Reavis, the adjutant for the Reservists.

Drill sergeant Roger Nevells from Co. C said he felt likewise.

"I wish we could do it at least once a week," said Nevells. "It enhances mental and physical endurance."

"I would do the Darby Queen anytime, even if I'm on leave," said drill sergeant Darrell Devor of Co. E. All the soldiers from the two battalions met the challenge by successfully completing the obstacle course. They now can return to their normal challenge of training brand new soldiers.

Inexpensive training aids are developed at the Army Research Laboratory in Adelph, Md., to help save soldiers from being maimed or killed by unexploded ordnance in future conflicts. The training submunitions contain electronic circuitry, a buzzer and a flashbulb inside. If picked up or moved, they flash and emit a pulsating sound. Some go off instantly and others are delayed to simulate real field occurrences.

WORLD WAR II

50 years ago this week ...

• In Italy, the British X Corps forced the Germans to withdraw from their positions on the road to Naples as patrols from Britain's Eighth Army occupied Canosa on the Ofanto River and moved into Foggia.

Additionally, Canadian forces captured Melfi, while the U.S. 3rd Division took Teora and attacked Avellino. By week's end, the Americans secured Avellino and the British pushed past Pompeii, reaching the outskirts of Naples.

• In Naples, townspeople staged a brave, but costly, three-day uprising against German forces in the city. Though generally unsuccessful, the uprising did distract nearby German units from preparing as fully for the impending Allied invasion of the city.

• In the Mediterranean, the Germans completed their punishing attack of the Italian garrison on Corfu and took full control of the island.

• In the Solomons, the Japanese evacuated Kolombangara after American gains throughout the New Georgia Island group rendered the garrison there ineffectual.

• On New Guinea, the Australians solidified their position, capturing the airfield at Finschafen and repelling subsequent Japanese counterattacks.

• On Fort Benning, Maj. Gen. Charles Hartwell succeeded Maj. Gen. Leven C. Allen as commandant of the Infantry School. Hartwell's previous assignments included a tour as the commander of the U.N. forces in Iceland.

'Striker' crews bat 1000 in gunnery

By J. W. Sternickle
Fort Stewart, Ga., Public Affairs Office

When you're hot, you're hot; and, Bradley crews from 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry, were sizzling during Table VIII gunnery qualifications that the battalion completed last week.

Twenty-four of the "Striker" Battalion's 54 Bradley crews scored a perfect 1,000 points during gunnery qualifications and one platoon had all four of its crews score perfect 1,000-point runs.

"It's a fantastic accomplishment," said division Master Gunnery Sgt. Maj. Thomas Gowins. "It speaks very well of the training this battalion conducts. Training has to be superior for soldiers to do something like this."

Battalion officials have been checking to see if the qualification run sets an Armywide record, but it has not been confirmed that the battalion's accomplishment sets a servicewide record.

"In my 10 years, I've never seen anything like this," said battalion operations noncommissioned officer in charge Sgt. 1st Class Phillip Staten.

Staten was a senior instructor at the master gunner course at Fort Benning before joining the battalion and stressed that during all his experience as an instructor and master gunner, he had never seen or heard of a battalion shooting a Table VIII qualification like the "Strikers." Staten also reported that the battalion had confirmed that they had set a record for XVIII Airborne Corps gunnery.

The top guns of the battalion clearly belonged to members of Company C's 1st Platoon that had all four of its crews shoot perfect 1,000 scores, said Capt. Scott Sharp, battalion adjutant.

Staff Sgt. Jerry Knight, platoon sergeant, stressed that "training and teamwork" were the keys to his soldiers' success. Every man on a crew knew their job and worked not to just qualify, but to do their ultimate best.

Bradley driver Spc. Aaron Done agreed and said that only as a true team could the platoon accomplish the flawless run. Driver, gunner and Bradley commander had to work as one to put "steel on target."

Company C had the battalion's top scores with nine 1,000s and a 984-point average. Company A was second with eight perfect runs and a 976-point average. Company D had six perfect runs and a 947-point average and Company B had one perfect run, but still had a high 933-point average. The battalion average was 962 points, according to Staff Sgt. Charles Peters, battalion master gunner.

The most important thing the gunnery did was for young drivers and gunners to accomplish the "impossible" and now have high standards to shoot for and push their soldiers toward when they become gunner and Bradley commanders, said Peters.

1st Platoon, Company C top guns were:

Gunners were Sgt. Danny Sims, Sgt. Carl Hontz, Sgt. Charles Coe and Sgt. Kenneth Howe.

Drivers were Pfc. Jonathan Fraley, Pfc. Shane Frazier, Pfc. Craig Cheek and Spc. Aaron Dowe.

Dismount squad members were Sgt. Raymond Small, 1st Squad leader; Sgt. Darry Vanpelt, team leader; Sgt. Noe Fritz, team leader; Spc. Andy Collins, squad automatic weapon gunner; Spc. Robert Lopez, SAW gunner; Pfc. Arturo Canty, platoon radio telephone operator; Pfc. Derek Cox, SAW gunner; Pfc. Keven Inmon, SAW gunner; Pfc. Bryon Westbrook, SAW gunner; Spc. Alvin Minngia, SAW gunner; and Spc. David Janosik, alternate gunner.

Armed forces face world change

By John Peavy
Fort Stewart Public Affairs Office

Over the past few years, the structure of the U.S. armed forces has been altered dramatically in response to world change.

Fifty years of Cold War between the United States and the Soviet Union resulted in a bi-polar military environment, with NATO forces facing Warsaw Pact forces in Europe. But, with the collapse of communism and the fall of the Soviet empire, U.S. military strategy has been shifted to meet the new threats of a changing world, according to senior U.S. military officials.

"In 1986, the Army was pretty much forward deployed," explained Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan, Army chief of staff. "More than half of the United States Army was deployed overseas in Central Europe or Korea.

"We are now changing to (an Army) that will be primarily CONUS (continental United States) based with some forward deployed forces," Sullivan said.

Sullivan said the Army has not "abandoned" the successful doctrine of the Cold War years but has simply changed its doctrine "to reflect the world in which we live and the world that we must accommodate in the 21st century. The Army retains doctrine as the centerpiece of everything we do."

According to information outlined in the Department of Defense's Strategic Mobility Program, the role of the Army in this "new world order," as former President George Bush christened it, will be to maintain a CONUS-based power projection force that is trained, ready, and capable of achieving decisive victory across the full spectrum of military operations.

> "(The review) has produced a lean, mobile, high-tech force ready to protect America in this new time."
> — Les Aspin
> Secretary of Defense

And, American forces have kept very busy since the fall of communism, moving units all over the world, to deal with numerous types of situations, according to Pentagon officials.

"Since the fall of the Berlin Wall in November 1989, American armed forces shouldered the burden in projecting American might during 28 significant military operations," said Adm. David E. Jerimiah, vice chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. "These have encompassed everything from combat operations in Desert Storm to humanitarian relief in Somalia and from enforcement of the embargo against Iraq to disaster relief in Bangledesh, Guam, Hawaii and Florida."

But, along with changing missions has come a smaller Army. With the advent of "downsizing," the Army will have significantly fewer soldiers by the end of the century, and less units to respond with in times of crisis.

In a recent briefing, Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said that in 1990 the Army had 18 active-duty divisions and 10 National Guard divisions.

By the end of the century, though, active duty divisions will have dropped to 10, with the National Guard having the equivalent of five divisions, which will be divided into 15 "enhanced" brigades.

Defense Department officials believe, however, that a smaller Army can still meet the challenges of the future.

Secretary of Defense Les Aspin's recently-released "bottom-up review" of the Defense Department supported the idea that a smaller, streamlined force can indeed project, fight and win.

"(The review) has produced a lean, mobile, high-tech force ready to protect America in this new time," Aspin said.

For the 24th Infantry Division, all these changes place even more importance on its role as the heavy element of the Army's XVIII Airborne Corps, according to Maj. Thomas Allmon, deputy operations officer, 24th Inf. Div.

"Downsizing of forward-based units and deactivation of others, means there are fewer units capable of responding to a crisis," Allmon said. "Because of this, (the national command authority) may call on us (the 24th Inf. Div.) to do those missions that forward based units might have previously handled.

"This division is also capable of moving, by air, a battalion-size force of heavy armor into a theater of operations," Allmon said.

VA programs assist homeless veterans

Report documents successful treatment, rehabilitation

Department of Veterans Affairs

A new report documenting that special homeless veterans programs provide successful treatment and rehabilitation to thousands of homeless veterans is being released by the Department of Veterans Affairs.

"VA is the only federal agency that provides substantial hands-on assistance directly to homeless persons," said VA Secretary Jesse Brown in announcing the release.

"Our two major homeless programs constitute the largest integrated network of homeless assistance programs in the country," Brown said. "While we have a range of benefits and services already in place to assist homeless veterans and prevent them from becoming homeless, this report chronicles the effectiveness of our special initiatives that seek out and help homeless veterans."

The fifth annual report, titled "Health Care for Homeless Veterans," found that, upon discharge from the residential care component of VA's Homeless Chronically Mentally Ill veterans program, more than one-third of the homeless veterans have found employment, one-third have moved into their own housing, nearly 60 percent have improved their psychiatric condition and almost two-thirds have significantly reduced their substance abuse problems.

These results compare favorably with the success rates of similar non-VA programs that serve homeless populations with fewer health and other problems.

The report, prepared by VA's Northeast Program Evaluation Center based at the VA Medical Center in West Haven, Conn., also included the following findings:

Clinicians at VA's 45 HCMI program sites make some 85,000 visits with homeless veterans annually, providing more than 11,000 with clinical assessments and referrals for both VA and non-VA treatment and assistance.

More than 3,000 veterans receive rehabilitation assistance in VA-contracted, community-based halfway houses each year.

While more than half of the homeless veterans contacted by the HCMI program served during the Vietnam era, the fastest growing segment of this population consists of post-Vietnam era veterans.

Most of the homeless veterans are white; less than 2 percent are female.

VA began its specially targeted homeless assistance programs in 1987, when it established its first HCMI and Domiciliary Care for Homeless Veterans programs. VA's Northeast Program Evaluation Center also was established at that time to monitor and evaluate the programs' design and operation.

The Center continually monitors VA's homeless assistance programs to ensure quality, identify unmet needs and prevent or identify waste, abuse and inefficiency.

Past evaluations of the original HCI and DCHV programs have underscored the continuing need to improve homeless veterans' prospects for post-treatment income, employment and housing. VA has developed supplementary programs to help address those needs, including:

Joint Social Security Administration and VA pilot project: SSA and VA staff locate homeless mentally ill veterans and assist them in obtaining social security and VA benefits. Three pilot sites have been established and the initiative is expanding.

HUD-VA Support Housing Program: This joint pilot initiative provides 600 specially designated HUD Section 8 rental assistance vouchers. VA clinicians help homeless veterans obtain their own permanent housing and then provide case management and rehabilitation assistance.

Compensated Work Therapy and Therapeutic Residence Program: This program teaches work and life skills to at-risk and homeless veterans by helping them to work for pay while living in VA-supervised group homes in the community. Two of the eight program sites and six of the 35 residences exclusively serve homeless veterans.

VA currently directs several billion dollars from its regular or mainstream programs to assist hundreds of thousands of homeless and at-risk veterans.

To increase this assistance, VA recently announced new or expanded homeless initiatives at 44 VA facilities across the nation.

Mortar injures soldier

TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — Capt. Lee E. Hansen, a budget analyst with Training and Doctrine Command's deputy chief of staff for Resource Management, became the first TRADOC soldier to be wounded in Somalia.

He was injured Sept. 15 during a mortar attack on his compound in Mogadishu. He has been flown to Army medical facilities in Germany.

He was deployed to Somalia on temporary duty in March and was attached to the 507th Corps Support Group from Fort Bragg, N.C.

Since Operation Restore Hope began, 202 TRADOC soldiers from throughout the command have served on temporary duty in Somalia, augmenting deployed Army units. Currently, there are 88 TRADOC augmentees in Somalia with 13 more scheduled to be sent.

NATO: world changes

threats to light units holding an airfield, he said, and would keep the airfield open for any follow on forces coming by air.

By having this ability to rapidly deploy, Allmon said, the Victory Division can "give its armored punch" to an operation quickly and decisively.

Forces that are not flown to the battle can follow by ship, and help fulfill the Army's "power projection" strategy to be able to place three divisions anywhere in the world within 30 days, according to U.S. Forces Command officials.

The 24th's 3rd Brigade from Fort Benning demonstrated during the division's recent emergency deployment exercise that not only can armored forces be moved quickly and safely, but can be a ready and effective fighting force after completing a deployment.

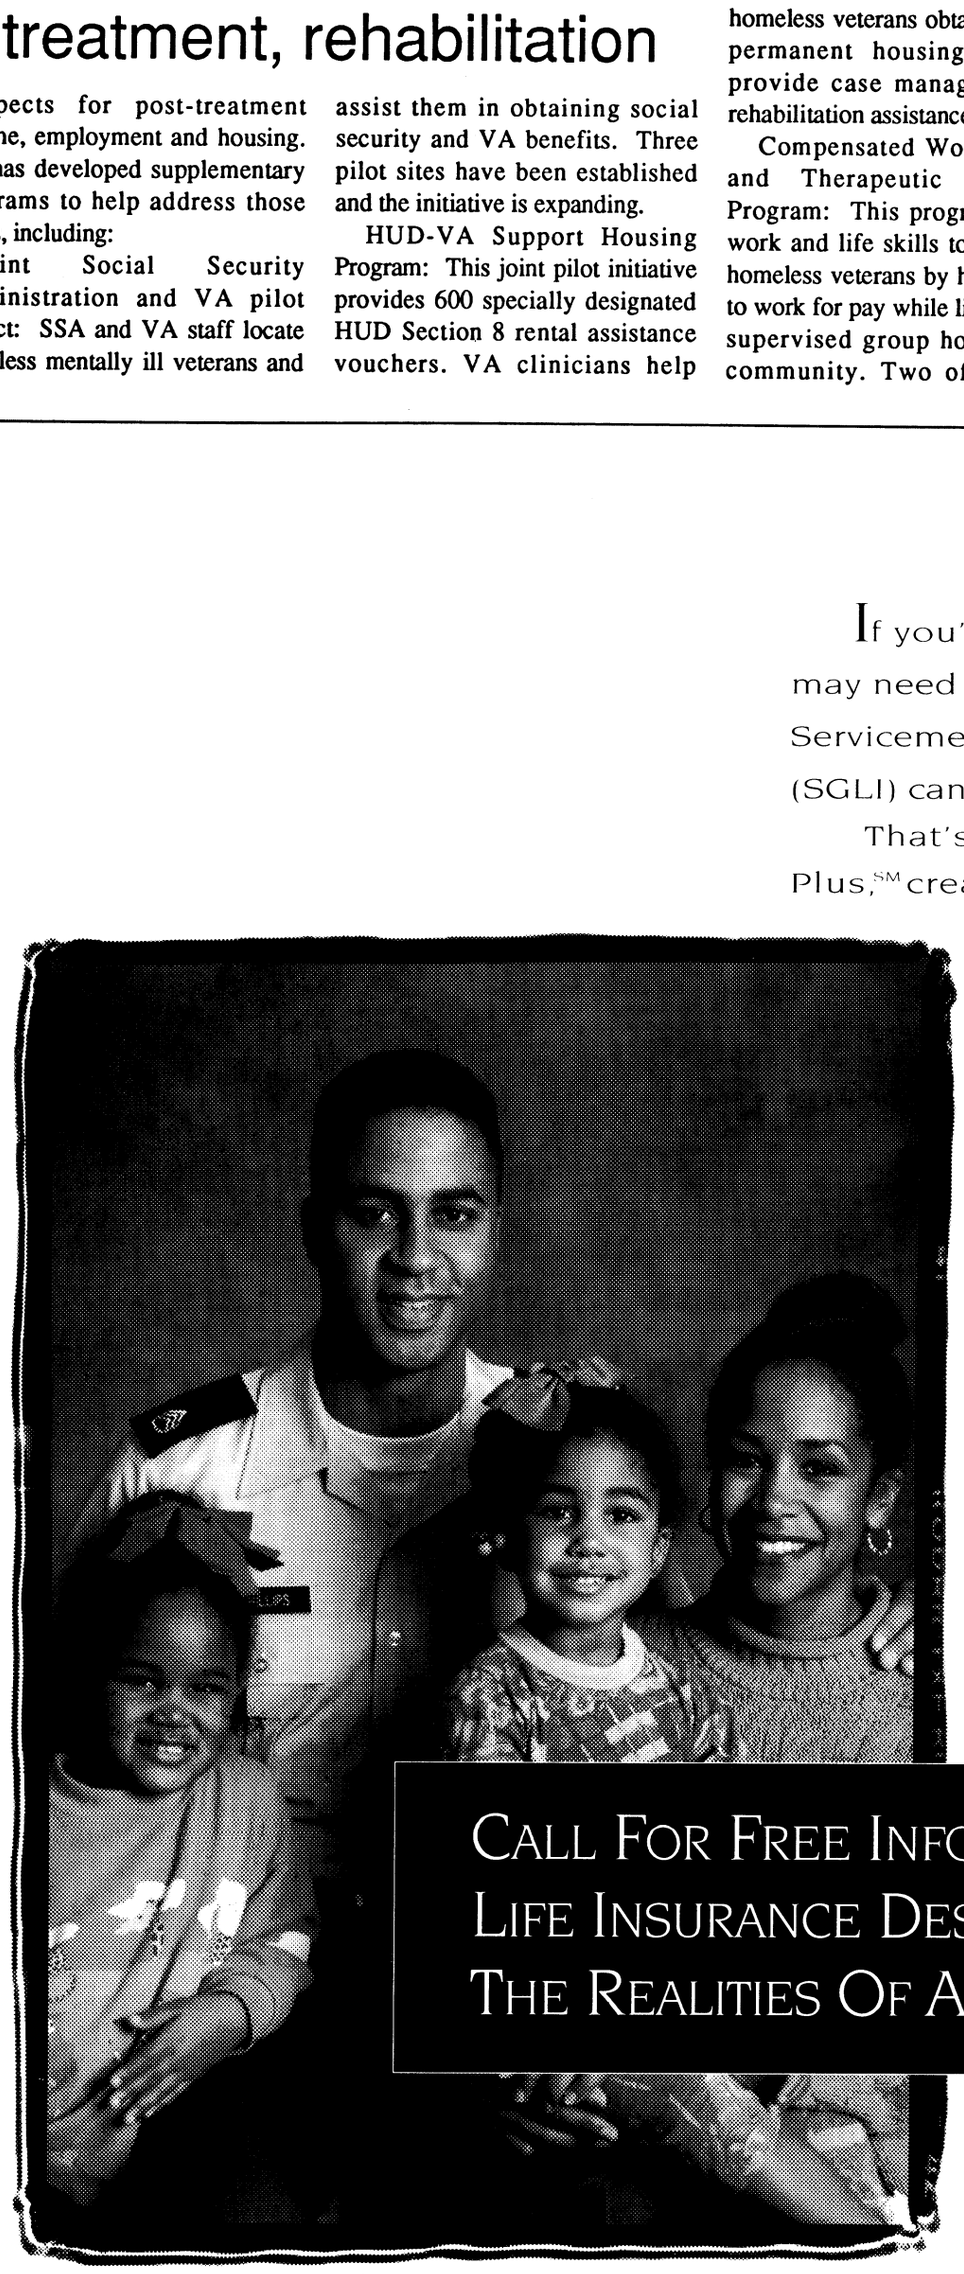
Following the exercise, 3rd Brigade's 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, went straight into its gunnery qualification and scored higher than any division unit in recent history, according to battalion officials.

After traveling nearly 300 miles from Fort Benning and participating in movement to the port 24 of the battalion's 54 Bradley crews scored a perfect 1,000 during Gunnery Table VIII qualifications, according to Capt. Scott Sharp, battalion adjutant.

Battalion officials are checking to see if they have set an Armywide record for Bradley gunnery.

The high scores of the battalion clearly demonstrate that forces can be moving quickly and still, "effectively put steel on target," said 2nd Lt. Christopher Coglianese, 1st Platoon, C Company, 1st Bn., 18th Inf. First Platoon's crews all scored perfect 1,000s during gunnery.

"The Army's Strategic Mobility Program is the blueprint for placing lethal, combat-ready forces at the decisive point in theater anywhere in the world," stated Maj. Gen. Paul E. Blackwell, commander, 24th Inf. Div., in the training videotape Armored Force Projection.



"Combat power must be projected over greater distances given America's far-flung interests and reduced forward presence," he said.

"The 24th Infantry Division is highly deployable," he continued, "and this capability is central to our role as a crisis response armored force.

"As an armored force," Blackwell said, "(the division) possesses great firepower that is highly mobile and superbly protected.

Because of these factors, and others, Blackwell also said the Victory Division's "deployability is a vital capability that provides strategic agility for the national command authority and tactical flexibility to commanders in (a) theater (of operations).

"The 24th Infantry Division has a key role in the new strategic environment and the changing Army," he said.

Soldier 'battles' to All-Army Chess

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Beginning tomorrow, a Fort Benning soldier will command an entire army of only 16 tiny soldiers in a week-long series of all out battles during the Army Chess Championship at Fort Belvoir, Va.

To the victors will go a spot on the all-Army chess team, and Sgt. 1st Class Dhanukumar Ramroop of the 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, is the first Fort Benning soldier to get a chance to qualify for the honor since 1989.

"I'm really excited," said Ramroop. "I hope to do well."

Twelve players and two alternates will be participating in the tournament, which will be Saturday through Oct. 1. The top six players will form the U.S. Army team and will compete in the Armed Forces Chess Championship in October at Andrews Air Force Base, Md.

Ramroop is one of two soldiers representing Training and Doctrine Command. He was selected to participate in the Army Chess Championship tournament after winning the post tournament in June.

This will actually be the third time that Ramroop will participate in the Army tournament, which, with two games per day for nearly a week, he says is a study in mental endurance.

"Many people do not realize how demanding chess is because it doesn't look like you are doing anything. The amount of energy required, however, is incredible. For me, a game of chess is comparable to a five-mile run in terms of mental discipline."

Chess has been one of Ramroop's passions for nearly 15 years. His interest in the game was sparked by watching his older brother play and also by the 1972 World Chess Tournament that saw American Bobby Fischer take the world title.

Ramroop's playing style can be summed up with one word — attack!

"I like to be aggressive," he said. "I firmly believe that the best defense is a good offense."

Nineteen years of active duty as a soldier have contributed to his successes at chess, he added.

"Both the military and chess require a high degree of discipline, and playing chess requires you to apply military tactics because you must constantly try to second guess what your opponent is doing."

Ramroop says that he prepares for tournaments through monthly practice and by being well-rested and mentally alert. He also tries to run a few miles before a tournament to help energize him for what's to come and get in the proper frame of mind.

"Once I sit down at a game, I focus 100 percent on what I am doing. I don't think about anything except what is going on in the game I am playing. It's just one game at a time," Ramroop said.

DOC employee receives award

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

A Directorate of Contracting employee, along with other minority-owned businesses, individuals and corporations, will receive an award today from the Columbus Minority Business Development Center.

Robert Battle, a procurement analyst at the DOC, will receive the 1993 Minority Business Advocate award at a breakfast at the Columbus Ironworks Convention and Trade Center Dining Gallery at 7 a.m.

Battle, among many other things, has served as the small and disadvantaged business utilization specialist for Fort Benning's small business programs to ensure their compliance with regulations and laws, which give small, local and minority-run businesses the opportunity for a government contract.

"This is a great award for the DOC and is based on the hard work we've done to include more minorities in our program," said Battle.

"We're trying to include more segments of America in government contracting," he said.

The awards breakfast is one of the activities of Minority Enterprise Development Week, a week of tribute to the contribution of minority entrepreneurs to our free enterprise system, proclaimed by then-President Ronald Reagan in 1982.

Local activities continue through Saturday and the first week of October starts the national celebrations.

All awards are given out for efforts in minority business developments.

Other awardees include: MTR Medical Equipment, Minority Entrepreneur; Randco Office Products, Minority Small Business of the Year; A.J. McClung YMCA, Minority Community Service Award; Jilly's: The Place for Ribs, Entrepreneurial Service Award; CC Tee's-n-Socks, Most Promising Entrepreneur Award; Harmon Construction, Construc-tion/Industry Growth Award; AFLAC, Corporate Award; and Tim Nolan, Columbus Square Venture Group, Minority Youth Entrepreneur Advocate of the Year.

Teach your children bus rules

Egleston Children's Hospital

The end of the summer can only mean one thing for children and parents — back to school.

Going back to school can get hectic, so don't forget safety when preparing your child for the new school year. To see that your child rides to school safely, teach him or her the following school bus safety tips.

• Teach your child to leave home five minutes before the bus is scheduled to arrive and wait at the bus stop until the bus comes to a complete stop.

• If your child is waiting on the opposite side of the street, teach him or her to stay there until the bus driver signals him or her to cross. Even after the driver signals, your child should stop and look left, right and left again to make sure all traffic has stopped before crossing.

• Know and teach the 10-foot rule. Your child should stay 10 feet from the bus when stepping off the bus so the driver can see him or her at all times.

• Teach your child to use the hand rail when entering the bus and to walk quickly and quietly to his or her seat.

• Tell your child to remain seated at all times while on the bus with head, arms, hands and legs away from windows.

• Explain to your child that passengers must talk quietly so the bus driver can concentrate on driving and getting all students to school safely.

• Purchase a backpack or book bag for your child to keep school materials together and prevent them from blowing in the street or under the seats of the bus.

• Remind your child to never cross the street behind the school bus; always cross in front.

• Become familiar with the rules and policies of your district regarding school buses and assist your child in understanding them.

For more information on safety, call Egleston Children's Hospital at 321-KIDS.

Michael Moore-Brown and other students in Iris Kimbley's third-grade class at McBride School learn creative writing techniques from Alicia Griswold, artist-in-residence.

Artist helps children sharpen creative skills

Students learn to 'free their spirit'

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet©

Students in McBride School have spent the last three weeks sharpening their creative writing and thinking skills through the artist in residence program.

Alicia Griswold, published writer and teacher, has been helping children learn to "free their spirit so they can write more creatively."

As part of her role as artist-in-residence, Griswold encourages her charges to use better observation skills that enable them to use all their senses when writing.

To do this, she uses a multi modal approach, which includes playing word games and doing writing "warm up" exercises.

During warm up, she encourages children to use both hands to doodle or draw. Some children vigorously scribble in their "diaries," while others draw neat spirals and geometric shapes. One child uses a handful of pencils at the same time. Meanwhile, soft music plays in the background.

Griswold walks from desk to desk, encouraging children to feel totally free in expressing themselves, while she waits for the magic words, "Can we write now?"

Griswold believes the gentle music "soothes the small inner voice that tells us we can't write." Children should confront that inner voice with confidence, she believes, in order to write more effectively and creatively.

"This program enhances the language arts program in our schools," said Anne Justice, assistant principal at McBride and Dexter schools.

"The children have been very receptive to the artist in residence, and she to them," she added.

The students weren't the only ones to benefit from Griswold's experience. Teachers participated in a writing workshop last week, and parents crowded into the school Tuesday evening to learn techniques to encourage creativity in their children.

Early creative writing skills enhance a child's education. The chance for students to work with a professional writer is especially helpful since "the reading and writing connection is key to our program," said Dr. Beth Middlemiss, director of staff development.

The goal is to encourage creative writing and thinking skills that will follow children as they progress in school. The children have been encouraged to start and keep a daily diary.

Griswold was inspired to keep a diary at age 14 by the classic story of Anne Frank, a young Jewish girl who kept a wartime diary. Griswold's interest in language continued, and she has published both fiction and nonfiction. She teaches writing at Georgia State, and has worked with the Georgia Council for the Arts.

The artist-in-residence program is sponsored by Fort Benning Schools.

Girls come first in the GIRL SCOUTS

Concharty Council of Girl Scouts Inc.

For 82 years, the girl has come first in Girl Scouting.

"That's especially true today," said executive director of Concharty Council of Girl Scouts Inc., Sally Lasseter as she announced the annual enrollment drive to register all interested girls, ages 5 through 17.

In 1912, Juliette Gordon Low started Girl Guides with only eight members. From that small beginning, Girl Scouting has grown to be the largest voluntary organization for girls in the free world, serving more than 3 million youth and adult members.

Based on ethical values which give girls from all segments of American society a chance to develop friendships, self confidence, and leadership skills, Girl Scouting continues to grow in this area, Lasseter said.

Last year in the Concharty Council nearly 7,000 girls and almost 450 members, benefitted from diverse programs that emphasized the outdoors, well being, people, contemporary issues and the arts.

This year, Girl Scout volunteers hope to attract 5,000 girl members in the council's 12-county jurisdiction, of East Alabama and West Georgia.

As the number of Girl Scouts increase, so does the need for volunteers.

The council is actively seeking new volunteers in a grass roots campaign. Adults, both female and male, can qualify as Girl Scout volunteers.

Any girl, parent or potential volunteer who is interested in finding out more about the many and diverse programs and activities of Girl Scouting can contact the local Girl Scout office at 327-2646.

Post to participate in Indian Cultural Festival

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

With the day-to-day bustle of numerous missions and the steady tread of the thousands of trainees who come to Fort Benning each year, it's hard to imagine that as early as 10,000 years ago, what is now the "Home of the Infantry" was once home to numerous Indian tribes.

The fourth annual Indian Cultural Festival, Oct. 8 to 10 at Columbus College, will give plenty of opportunities for the remembrance of things past, and this year, Fort Benning will demonstrate its commitment to cultural awareness by hosting some of the events at the festival.

According to Dean Wood, post archaeologist, Fort Benning's participation is made possible by a grant from the Legacy Resource Management Program, a Department of Defense program dedicated to the identification and preservation of environmental, cultural and historical resources on DOD property.

"Fort Benning has an abundance of cultural resources, particularly when it comes to the presence of numerous Indian sites, from ancient campfire sites to the remains of highly developed towns that flourished two centuries ago," he said. "We want to increase public awareness of the importance of this heritage and also the important steps we must take to preserve it. The Indian Cultural Festival will give us an excellent opportunity to highlight the Native American cultures that were here in the Chattahoochee Valley long before Fort Benning ever was."

Wood said that the post's contribution to the festival is small, but significant. Several speakers, including Native Americans, folklorists and anthropologists will speak in a forum called the "Council House" to be featured Saturday and Sunday afternoons. A variety of topics and issues, from Southeastern Indian flutes and crafts to such contemporary concerns as the use of Indian names and imagery as athletic team logos will be covered.

"There will also be a session each day on the protection of Indian cultural and historical resources, and this will be an excellent opportunity for us to put out the good word about what Fort Benning has been doing to protect some of the early townsites of the Creek and Yuchee tribes that are located on post."

Joe Belt

Wood added that the festival is an excellent opportunity for anyone to learn about the Indians of the Southeast in a face-to-face, hands-on manner. There will be Indian crafts, food, games, dances, demonstrations, music and representatives from the Creek, Yuchee, Coushatta, Choctaw, Seminole, Cherokee, Chickasaw, Houma, Miccosukee and Alabama-Coushatta tribes in attendance.

"This is truly a festival in every sense of the word, and those who come will surely be entertained and enlightened," Wood said. "We also extend our invitation to any Native Americans who are members of the Fort Benning, Columbus and Phenix City areas community to be our guest at the festival, free of charge. All you have to do is show your tribal membership card at the gate to be admitted free."

The festival will be 6 to 10 p.m. Oct. 8, from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Oct. 9, and from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Oct. 10. Admission for one day is $5 for adults or $2 for children or students. A three-day ticket is $10 for adults or $4 for children or students.

Doctor gives advice on children's shoes

Egleston Children's Hospital

Many parents think children with a wide range of foot and leg conditions should be wearing shoes with special corrective features.

"But the truth is, most foot and leg 'problems' aren't problems at all," according to Dr. William D. Schmitt, chief of pediatric orthopedics at Egleston Children's Hospital at Emory University. "They are normal variations in development that take care of themselves over time."

"During normal development, children are naturally bowlegged and then become knock-kneed," said Schmitt. "Your doctor may be concerned if either of these conditions is severe, occurs only in one leg, or runs in your family. But most children simply outgrow these conditions, with no need for the special shoes or wedges that were prescribed 15 to 20 years ago."

"Flat feet are normal in infancy and early childhood, too," Schmitt said. There's no need for concern unless your child's flat foot is stiff, painful or very severe, or he has a very high arch. An arch will develop whether the child wears shoes or goes barefoot, and certainly without the help of special wedges, inserts or heels."

On choosing kids' shoes, Schmitt has this advice:

• Make sure shoes have plenty of room — too large is better than too small.

• Avoid stiff, supportive shoes.

• Select shoes with soft uppers made of materials that "breathe" (canvas or soft leather, for example) to keep moisture from building up inside the shoe.

If you follow these guidelines, inexpensive shoes are as appropriate for your child's feet as expensive ones.

COMMUNITY BRIEFS

Indian Cultural Festival Oct. 8 to 10 — The annual Indian Cultural Festival will be Oct. 8 through 10 at Columbus College.

The event will feature crafts, games, customs and food. The event needs many volunteers to make this a weekend of learning for the whole family.

If you would like to help with at least two hours of your time, call Lavonda Forbes at 324-7440 and leave your name and phone number on the answering machine.

Entries must be received by 5 business days after prize giveaway date indicated on your mailing envelope to be eligible for that daily prize. 3. SELECTION OF WINNERS: Each daily winner will be randomly selected from among all eligible 1-800-COLLECT telephone call entries and all eligible mail-in entries received for that day's giveaway. Random selection will take place 6 days after the specific prize giveaway date. Odds of winning a prize will depend on the number of eligible 1-800-COLLECT telephone calls completed each day and the time of day the call was made, and on the number of mail-in entries designated for each day's prize award. Odds will vary each day of the promotion based on the above factors. Odds of winning via mail-in entry will be as good as odds of winning via telephone entry. 4. PRIZES: 1 Grand Prize per day of $5,000, divided equally between Caller and Call Recipient. Call Recipient portion of the prize will be awarded to the individual or company whose name appears on the telephone bill for the telephone number called. If potential winner has entered via mail, he/she subsequently will be required to give name, address and telephone number of individual with whom he/she wishes to share prize equally. 5. GENERAL RULES: To be eligible, callers/mail-in entrants must be 16 years or older as of 8/30/93. Sponsor's employees directly involved in the planning and implementation of this promotion and employees of its advertising and promotion agencies, and their immediate family members and/or those living in same household of each are not eligible for any prize, either as an entrant or designated recipient. If either potential winner of a daily prize is not eligible, per the above, that entire $5,000 prize will not be awarded. Void where prohibited by law. No substitution or transfer of prize permitted. All federal, state and local taxes are the sole responsibility of winner. All federal, state and local laws and regulations apply. Not responsible for malfunctioning or breakdown of telephone systems, for faulty telephone transmission or for lost, late or misdirected entries. In the event that technical difficulties prevent selection of a winner for any daily prize of the promotion, that prize will be awarded on the following day. Random selection of winners will be under the supervision of D.L. Blair, Inc. an independent judging organization whose decisions are final. By participating in this promotion, entrants agree to be bound by the Official Rules and decisions of the judges. COMPLETE rules are subject to any requirements or limitations that may be imposed by the Federal Communications Commission.

Bells ring for U.S. Constitution

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet©

Bells rang throughout the nation Sept. 17 in commemoration of the 206th anniversary of the signing of the U.S. Constitution.

Bells Across America, a yearly event sponsored by the Daughters of the American Revolution, celebrated the anniversary by ringing a bell for 206 seconds.

Locally, Fort Benning elementary school students participated in the event by ringing a bell outside the National Infantry Museum at 4 p.m. Sept. 17.

Fifth-graders from White Elementary School participated in the event under the guidance of Frank Hanner, museum curator.

The students, members of the school Safety Patrol and Student Council, lined the steps of the museum, grasping ribbons attached to the bell in eager anticipation of the precise 4 p.m. start time.

After hearing brief remarks from Sarah Simpson, regent of the Oglethorpe Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, as well as Hanner, the students began tugging at the bell, each second representing a year since the historic signing.

Members from the local chapters of both the Daughters of the American Revolution and Sons of the American Revolution gather annually for this event.

Bells Across America has been at Fort Benning for the past several years.

Total Fitness 2000 to kick off Oct. 4

U.S. Army Physical Fitness School

Fitness Day, Oct. 4, will be the official inauguration of the Total Fitness 2000 initiative at Fort Benning.

Activities, which will signal the beginning of a fitness awakening for the total Army community, will begin at 11:45 a.m. and continue to 1 p.m., officials said. It will include the largest aerobics class ever conducted on the installation.

The intensity of the class will accommodate all exercisers, according to Physical Fitness School officials.

Also, a fitness walk will involve participants in either a two- or three-mile distance.

Groups from different agencies are encouraged to walk together, officials said.

All activities will take place on York Field and the one-mile track.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, post commanding general, will make the opening remarks, and the entire community is encouraged to participate, officials said.

Special emphasis will be given to the civilian work force, family members and children.

Several exhibits will display diverse equipment and information, and pamphlets and selected fitness tokens will be distributed.

PX opens Toyland

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Now that Fort Benning children are settling into the school year, parents may be looking ahead at the next big milestone — the holiday season.

If so, the Post Exchange at the Main Mall can be of help. Sept. 11, the PX opened Toyland, an addition to the regular store that will be in operation through Christmas.

The grand opening included visits from Santa and Mrs. Claus, who will return periodically during the holiday season. Barney the dinosaur and some of his friends were also on hand to greet customers.

"Toyland has toys and games for children from infancy through their teens," said Jolene Cook, operations manager for the Post Exchange. "Toyland stocks $2 million more in toys than the store regularly stocks, and we bring in a lot of new toys at this time of year."

Cook said Toyland's hours will be the same as the PX's — 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Sundays.

"After Thanksgiving, the store will be expanding its hours," Cook said.

"Part of everything customers spend at the PX, including Toyland," Cook said, "is contributed to Fort Benning's Morale, Welfare and Recreation fund.

"We also have a best-price program," she said. "We'll meet a competitior's sale price. We try to make shopping as hassle-free as possible for our customers."

Know your rights when faced with an Article 15

U.S. Army Trial Defense Service

The most important right a soldier has during Article 15 proceedings is to consult defense counsel at the nearest Trial Defense Service office.

The command must afford the soldier sufficient time (normally 48 hours) to consult counsel and usually will assist in making the appointment for the soldier to do so. At that appointment, the TDS counsel will fully explain the soldier's rights and discuss the case with him or her.

After consulting counsel, the soldier will then have to make some decisions. While the defense counsel will provide advice, only the soldier can make the ultimate decisions.

The first decision a soldier must make is whether to allow the commander to proceed with the Article 15.

Many soldiers call this "accepting" an Article 15. Be careful of that term. If the soldier permits the commander to continue with the Article 15, it only means he or she is willing to have a hearing in front of the commander instead of demanding a court-martial.

It does not mean the soldier admits to guilt. Except in extremely rare cases in the Army, the soldier has the absolute right to demand a court-martial instead of "accepting" the Article 15 proceedings.

A demand for court-martial stops the Article 15 proceedings. At that point, the commander will consult with his or her legal adviser and, in most cases, will initiate court-martial proceedings.

Demanding a court-martial is a serious decision that could result in a federal conviction and jail time if a soldier is convicted. Therefore, such a decision should only be made after speaking with an attorney.

If the soldier refuses to tell the commander whether he or she demands a court-martial or desires to proceed with the Article 15, the commander may proceed with the Article 15.

If the soldier decides not to demand trial by court-martial, then he or she has several options at the Article 15 hearing.

The first option is whether to request an open or a closed hearing. An open hearing is one that spectators may watch. A closed hearing is one in which no spectators are allowed.

A soldier can only request that the hearing be open or closed; the commander makes the final decision. Regardless of what that decision is, witnesses and members of the chain of command may be present at the hearing.

The next right the soldier has is to request to bring a spokesperson with him or her. The spokesperson can be anyone, so long as he or she is readily available and willing to come to the hearing and does not act as a witness. Instead, the spokesperson will present the soldier's side of the story to the commander.

As a general rule, if the soldier can speak for him or herself, he or she does not need a spokesperson. As with the open or closed hearing, the soldier can only request to bring a spokesperson. The commander has the final decision in this matter.

Normally, the spokesperson cannot be a judge advocate, but the soldier can hire a civilian lawyer if he or she wishes. (At summarized Article 15 proceedings, the soldier does not have a right to consult with TDS counsel, to have an open hearing or to have a spokesperson.)

The final right the soldier has at the Article 15 hearing is to present his or her side of the story. The soldier can bring in witnesses to testify if they are reasonably available; the soldier can submit written statements, letters and documents, whether or not the witnesses are available; the soldier can bring in members of the chain of command to go to bat for him or her; and the soldier can personally tell his or her side of the story.

While the soldier's right to present evidence is not unlimited, the soldier does have the right to present all the reasonably available evidence you can muster.

Often this evidence will be enough to convince the commander either not to punish the soldier or to show leniency.

After the commander has considered all the evidence; and, if he or she believes beyond reasonable doubt the soldier is guilty, he or she may elect to punish the soldier under Article 15.

Soldiers who have legal questions should get advice only from a lawyer. If the question is about military justice or an administrative elimination, call the Trial Defense Service office at 545-1520 or 545-2175.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Kurt A. Mieth
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Q: I'm looking to buy a new car and have heard reports that I may be losing money if I finance my purchase through the local car dealership. A friend says this is because of practice of "indirect lenders." What's this all about?

A: Shopping for car financing is as important as actually shopping for the car. Consider the example of a $10,000 car purchase being financed with a four-year loan that carries an 11 percent annual percentage rate.

By the time the car is actually paid off, the consumer will have paid more than $2,000 beyond the original purchase price. This makes financing charges one of the biggest costs associated with car ownership.

Car buyers who go to local dealerships often find that they and the salesperson will simultaneously start negotiating the terms and methods of financing their purchase along with the actual purchase price of the car.

While some car buyers may find this "one stop shopping (for both the car and loan)" a convenience, it usually results in greater costs to the customer and increased profits for the dealership.

The way the system often works is as follows: The salesperson will approach the dealership's finance representative who will in turn usually report to the general manager of the dealership.

The general manager will then contact an "indirect lender," such as a bank located in another state. After receiving financial data on the customer, this bank may agree to finance 90 percent of the purchase price (or more than $16,000) at 7.5 percent annual interest.

This bank is called an "indirect lender" because it will not provide the loan funds directly to the buyer, rather the money and the loan papers will be given to and made with the dealership.

The dealership will then provide this same money to the customer and sign a separate financing agreement with the customer.

In practice, many large car dealerships may regularly contact up to eight different "indirect lenders" as they try to arrange for financing for a particular purchase.

This whole arrangement is often never explained to car buyers, who are then left thinking they are negotiating financing directly with the car dealership.

Having received the 7.5 percent quote from the "indirect lender," the customer may then be called into a meeting with the salesperson and dealership finance representative and offered a loan at a higher rate, like 11.5 percent.

If the customer is dissatisfied with this offer, the dealership will agree to "negotiate further" and eventually lower its quoted rate to about 9.5 percent annual interest.

During these negotiations the dealership doesn't make any additional calls or efforts in working with indirect lenders. Pleased customers accept this latest offer feeling that they have won a 2 percent savings (the original quote of 11.5 percent minus the agreed upon rate of 9.5 percent).

However, if anyone can be said to have come out ahead in this deal, it is the indirect lender and the dealership since they are collecting 9.5 percent interest from the customer on a deal being financed by the indirect lender at only 7.5 percent interest.

While customers may question the ethics of such a practice, they can take steps to protect themselves. Most importantly they can make shopping around for a car loan a separate deal from shopping for the car.

While this involves a little extra work, consumer groups agree that the savings can amount to hundreds or thousands of dollars over the time it takes to pay off the car.

Car buyers who arrange for car financing with local banks and credit unions (either on-post or off-post) will often be quoted an interest rate similar to that which the "indirect lender" quotes to the dealership.

National consumer groups estimate that a car buyer is almost always going to receive a better financing rate from a bank or credit union than they would if they arrange financing directly through the dealership.

The rare times when the dealer can beat a bank or credit union's deal is usually the result of a manufacturer's offer designed to move excess inventory.

However, should customers choose to arrange financing terms with the dealership, they can better protect themselves when quoted a rate by asking the salesperson and finance representative questions such as: What is the ultimate source of funds used to finance this purchase? Whose "indirect rate" are you quoting to me? Are you quoting me the same rate that the "indirect lender" quoted to you?

Check breasts monthly

By Richard S. Hollis
The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists

Breast cancer is the leading cause of cancer deaths among women aged 34 to 50. But the statistics are not all grim. Many women can be cured of the disease if the cancer is found and treated early.

Knowing her body is a woman's best defense against breast cancer. Ninety percent of breast lumps are found by women while they are checking their own breasts. Doing a breast self-exam every month is an important way to detect any changes in the breast early, when treatment is most effective.

Perform the breast exam on the same day each month, a few days after your menstrual period, if you still menstruate. By becoming familiar with the normal shape and feel of your breasts, which are usually a bit lumpy, you will be able to distinguish any unusual changes. If you find something suspicious, report it to your doctor without delay.

To examine your breasts, make sure you are in good light and use the following simple steps. Steps 3 to 5 can also be done while taking a shower or bath — it is easy to feel your breasts when they are soapy and wet.

- Looking in a mirror with your arms at your sides, check for dimpling, puckering or redness of the skin, inversion of the nipples, or any changes in breast shape or size.
- Look for the same signs with your hands pressing into your waist and also pushing down on your hips. Repeat with your arms raised above your head.
- Now lie flat on your back with a pillow or folded towel under your left shoulder. Place your left hand under or over your head. Using your right hand, make small, gentle, circular motions on your left breast.
- Start at the top of your breast and move around it in a circle, continuing the gentle, circular massage. Continue to move the circle inward, as you would when peeling an apple, and do the same with your nipple. Squeeze the nipple and check for any discharge. Remember to check below your armpit, too.
- Now repeat the process with your right breast. Do not let the fear of what you might find keep you from doing your exam. The chance is only one in five that any lump you find is cancerous. But early detection of a problem may save your life.

Better Business Bureau

Tough economic times and extended unemployment have caused some consumers to become financially overburdened and unable to pay their bills.

If you find yourself in this situation, the worst thing you can do is to hide from your creditors, according to the Better Business Bureau.

Instead, contact your creditors immediately and explain the problem and the circumstances. Creditors may be able to help you work out a repayment plan that fits your budget. Ignoring the situation won't make it go away. It will only come back to haunt you by damaging your credit record.

To locate a nonprofit credit service to assist you in reworking your budget, write the National Foundation for Consumer Credit, 8701 Georgia Ave., Suite 507, Silver Spring, Md. 20910; or call (800) 388-2227.

The Fair Debt Collection Practices Act was established to make sure you are treated fairly by debt collectors. The act covers personal, family and household debts, including money owed for the purchase of a car, for medical care or charge accounts. The law only applies to collection agencies and attorneys who collect debts on a regular basis, not to creditors who contact you themselves.

Within five days after first contacting you, the debt collector must send you written notice telling you the amount of money you owe, the name of the creditor and what to do if you believe you don't owe any money.

A debt collector may contact you in person, by mail, telephone or telegram, but may not contact you at inconvenient or unusual times or places, unless you agree. And if your employer disapproves, the collector may not contact you at work. The debt collector also is prohibited from making threats of violence, using obscene language, advertising your debt or making any untrue statements, such as falsely threatening to sue you, when collecting the debt.

Your Guide to Prime-Time TV: Cable and Broadcast Schedules

Clint Black to co-host CMA Awards

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

Whatever happens at this year's Country Music Association Awards, Clint Black knows he'll be in a room filled with friends.

What: Country Music Association Awards
When: Wednesday, 8 p.m. on CBS

SPOTLIGHT

A very BIG room.

Nashville's legendary Grand Ole Opry House will serve again as the setting for the ceremony, as CBS televises the 27th annual edition Wednesday in a three-hour broadcast.

Black will share the hosting duties with Vince Gill, who leads the field of nominees with eight bids; Alan Jackson is the runner-up with seven nominations. Like Gill, he's been named in every category for which he was eligible.

Among the scheduled performers on the program will be three other stars who are competing for wins: Reba McEntire (already a five-time CMA Award victor), George Strait and Dwight Yoakam.

Though he has been a host of the Academy of Country Music Awards twice, this week's celebration marks the first time that Black — the husband of actress Lisa Hartman, who now sports her married name professionally — has filled that role for the Country Music Association's big bash.

A recipient of two CMA trophies (the Horizon Award for most promising newcomer in 1989, and Male Vocalist of the Year in 1990), he's currently nominated in the Vocal Event of the Year contest for the concert tour he's been doing with Wynonna, with whom he recorded the hit "A Bad Goodbye."

"It's comfortable for me," the amiable Black says of presiding over award shows, "because I love an audience. I hosted a segment for a Grand Ole Opry anniversary special, and they had technical problems during the taping, so I just stood out there and had fun with the crowd for about 20 minutes.

"Maybe it has a lot to do with who the audience is, but I just love doing that." It also gives Black the opportunity for reunions with many of his country peers.

"When I'm hosting an award show, I'm there for all three days of rehearsal, so I get to see everybody," he said. "Few people realize that we all don't see each other except for these occasions. I think television really takes to (country music) because of the type of wholesome entertainment that it is. "

Though some stars who act as hosts prefer not to have the concern of being nominees at the same time, Black asserts that he doesn't have that worry. "Awards are great," he states. "I'm thankful for the nominations that I've gotten. I feel like I've had my run of them, and although I still feel pretty new (in the industry), there are many newer acts that are doing terrifically."

Indeed, Black acknowledges that the roster of popular country newcomers has become "really thick, and it's getting harder to tour without playing the same town that somebody else (in country) is playing at the same time. It's really, really heavy traffic."

Fort Benning dedicates new elementary school

By Caejar A. Cox
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning's new elementary school was officially dedicated Sept. 14. Stowers Elementary School in the Bouton Heights and Davis Hill housing areas was named in honor of Medal of Honor recipient Cpl. Freddie Stowers.

Tune in to "Fort Benning Today" Monday for highlights of the event.

The Officer Candidate School recently inducted 97 new members into its Hall of Fame. The ceremony honored past OCS graduates.

The 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, conducted its change of command Sept. 17. The outgoing commander, Lt. Col. Timothy G. Bosse, relinquished his command to the incoming commander, Lt. Col. Florian K. Rothburst. See highlights on "Fort Benning Today."

USAIC TV Schedule
Fort Benning Today: 6:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 1:30 to 2 p.m.
Specials: 2 to 4:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 4:30 p.m. to 8:30 a.m.

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel lists post events and movies and offers free classified advertisements on "Fort Benning Update," a community information service.

If you subscribe to Fort Benning Cable, you can watch USAIC TV on Channel 3, 24 hours a day. Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:26, 7:56, 8:26 and 8:56 on WLTZ TV-38.

Music banquet

Ga. Hall of Fame set

Georgia Department of Industry, Trade and Tourism

Doug Stone and Eddie Arnold are scheduled to appear at this year's Georgia Music Hall of Fame Awards Dinner Saturday at the Georgia World Congress Center's Tom Murphy Ballroom. The dinner will be televised live on Georgia Public Television.

During the banquet, four members of Georgia's music industry will be inducted into the Georgia Music Hall of Fame.

The list of nominees, announced recently by the Georgia Music Hall of Fame Selection Committee, includes nomination in three categories: performing, nonperforming and the posthumous award.

Tickets to the awards dinner are $75 and include a reception hosted by Gov. Zell Miller and a gourmet dinner.

For ticket information, contact Reba Lacks, Georgia Music Hall of Fame Awards, Room 236, Georgia State Capitol, Atlanta, Ga. 30334, or call (404) 656-7575. Reservation requests must be received by Wednesday.

Cotton Pickin' Country Fair comes to Gay Ga. in Oct.

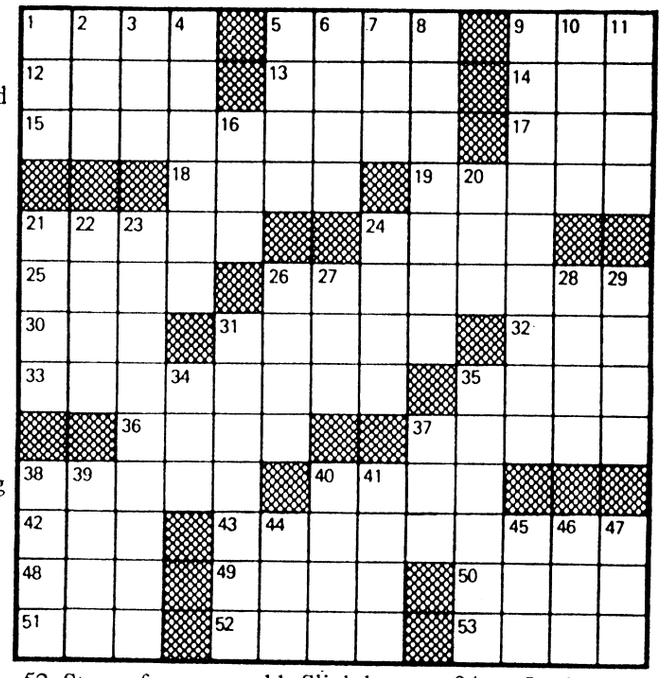
Gay, Ga., Chamber of Commerce

The gates will swing open at 9 a.m., Oct. 2 at the fairground of the Cotton Pickin' Country Fair in Gay, Ga., marking the 29th edition of the event, which features food, entertainment, antiques and arts and crafts.

From its beginnings in 1972, the event has grown to more than 300 exhibitors covering more than six acres at the site of the old cotton gin.

Visitors come early and stay late to browse through exhibitor displays in the old seed houses, hammermill and even Grandpa Gay's 1890 plantation house looking for just the right thing to take home.

Local schools, churches and civic groups spend the weekend preparing home-cooked meals to feed hungry visitors.



Gay, Ga., is located halfway between Atlanta and Columbus on State Roads 74 and 85.

For more information, call (706) 538-6814.

Fair

Military to be honored with free admission

Georgia National Fairgrounds and Agricenter

The Georgia National Fair will be Oct. 8 to 17 in Perry, Ga.

Active duty and Reserve military members with valid identification will be admitted free on "Armed Forces Day," Oct. 15.

The entertainment and programs of the state-sponsored, fourth annual event revolve around a traditional package of livestock events, horse shows, youth exhibits, home and fine arts competitions in the Georgia Living Center, McGill Market Place ("The Shops of the Georgia National Fair"), Reaves Arena concerts, daily free entertainment, midway rides and games, free circus under the big top, food and nightly fireworks.

"The Georgia National Fair offers something for everyone," said Michael A. Froehlich, executive director. "The scope of the fair covers a wide range of programs and entertainment. I encourage all Georgians to enter a competition and participate in this year's fair. You might be the best in the state and walk away with a blue ribbon.

"The Georgia National Fair is dedicated to the family," Froehlich said. "The fair is a great entertainment value for the family's dollar. There is plenty of daily free entertainment plus special admission and midway prices."

During certain periods, transportation will be available for patrons from parking lots to gates at no charge. If you need to leave the fairgrounds and plan to come back that same day, get your hand stamped for a free re-entry.

'Through increased involvement and participation, the Georgia National will grow into the strongest and best fair," Froehlich said.

For information, write the Georgia National Fair, 401 Larry Walker Parkway, P.O. Box 1367, Perry, Ga. 31069. Or call the fair at (800) YUR-FAIR (toll-free in Georgia only) or (912) 987-2774.

HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You'll fight, kiss and make up early in the week when a small difference reveals how much you care for each other. A disappointment in a friendship could dampen your mood for socializing now. Originality and intuition combine to bring you success in business.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Though shopping for the home is a plus, you should guard against extravagant spending on pleasure pursuits. Others are slow in getting back to you this week. Delays in business are likely. Be patient, and concentrate on immediate tasks.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You're especially charming and personable this week and will receive admiration and compliments. Negotiations about financial matters could break down now. It's a poor week to get feedback for your ideas. Don't let someone's indifference discourage you.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) This is not a good week to seek a loan or for shopping. Stay on top of current financial obligations and try to keep expenditures to a minimum. Family matters are highlighted later in the week. For the weekend, loved ones will share time alone together.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) As you're easily distracted now, extra self-discipline will be needed on the job. The end of the week will go a lot better for you if you do not expect to be the center of attention. A partner may seem preoccupied. You may overspend when socializing, but you'll be having fun times this weekend.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) It's best to be low key where business interests are concerned this week. It's not a good time to force issues. However, behind-the-scenes moves bring benefits. The same old routine could be boring to you. Try not to dwell on limitations.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A dispute that arises will quickly be resolved. It's a great week for getting together with your friends for happy social times. News comes from afar. Duties in connection with child-rearing should be a priority this weekend, so set everything else aside.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You're on the right track where business interests are concerned. New opportunities arise now. Concern about a domestic matter may interfere with your concentration at work later in the week. A quarrel while socializing this weekend may disrupt harmony.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You may receive an invitation to someplace special for the weekend. Tension is likely about a career concern. You're a bit unsure of yourself and may not be at your best in getting ideas across to others. Plans involving travel are difficult to bring to final stages this week.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) You may have second thoughts about a financial matter. A co-worker may be envious of your accomplishments. Good will, however, brings you gains in business. Don't let a temporary cash flow problem get you down. Just stick to budgets.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) You should go easy on your use of credit this week. However, you'll have a lovely time at a favorite restaurant or entertainment spot. You could be wrapped up in your own concerns later in the week and may not be as attentive as you could be to others' needs. Try to be there when needed.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20) New chances for success arise in business this week. Minor friction with a partner is quickly abated. A sea of paperwork may seem to be too much to handle. Concentrate on one thing at a time. The weekend favors family interests and having company over.

Park offers horseback trips

Georgia Dept. of Natural Resources

The Roosevelt Riding Stables at Franklin D. Roosevelt State Park will run overnight horseback riding trips through December.

The rides will take place on the second Saturday of each month. Participants will leave the stables Saturday afternoon and return Sunday by 10 a.m.

The stables will provide horses, water and shelter. Participants will be responsible for all food and other equipment.

Contact the stables for more information on reservations and rates at (706) 628-4533.

SOAP UPDATE

King Features Syndicate

ALL MY CHILDREN: Dixie told Tad to stay with Brooke and Jamie. Both Hayley and Dimitri misled Erica when she asked if they were helping Kendall find her father, the man who raped her. Gloria's carefully planned romantic evening with Adam turned into a disappointment when he pulled away from her kiss. Erica realized Giles had influenced Mona to quit her job and plan her move to Willow Lake Acres. Wait to see: Jamal presents Tom with a difficult challenge.

ANOTHER WORLD: Using the power of his love, Ian willed Paulina to recover consciousness. Kevin carefully planted evidence in Carl's apartment and then arrested him. At Carl's arraignment, Victor challenged Kevin about who was really responsible for the explosion. Rachel was forced to explain to Amanda her "deal" with Carl to save Cory. Cass told Frankie, she could have the home birth she wanted, so long as she never mentioned his mother again. Wait to see: Ian makes another puzzling discovery.

AS THE WORLD TURNS: Debbie walked out after telling Hutch she was tired of waiting for him to choose between her and Rosanna. In Montega, Duncan and Sabrina discussed Hans and the dangers they faced. Lucinda told Jessica her stepfather, George Keller, was responsible for Royce's childhood trauma, not her mother. Wait to see: Lily fights her doubts about Damian.

BOLD AND THE BEAUTIFUL: Connor contrived a way to get out of having dinner with Brooke so that he could keep his date with family and friends. Ridge turned down Brooke's suggestion that they discuss the office over dinner. Meanwhile, Karen reaffirmed for Connor she planned to be his friend, nothing more. Sheila gave Brooke the photo she took of Karen and Connor, insisting it was proof that he was only using Brooke for his own purposes. Wait to see: Macy makes an important discovery about friendship.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES: Shots rang out at the safe house, and Kristen was knocked unconscious. When she recovered, she realized her father, Stefano, was missing, and had probably been kidnapped. Later, a shocked John heard Kristen tell the police there had been no trouble in the house that night. Abe, however, suspected the shooting at the parking lot was related to the incident at the house and arrested her. Jack found a copy of 'The Midnight Hour" with clippings about a battered pregnant woman and realized this was Kate's big secret. Wait to see: Jack decides to use Kate's "secret" in his plan to destroy Victor.

GENERAL HOSPITAL: Tiffany came out of her depression and denied she killed Jessica. Felicia and Mac were puzzled over Sean's refusal to recant his confession now that he no longer had to protect Tiffany. Jagger was sure there was still something he hadn't been told about Karen's stripping at the club. Wait to see: Sean presents a new puzzle for Mac and Felicia.

GUIDING LIGHT: Ross and Blake found a new bond growing between them. In Santa Fe, a furious Lucy set out for Springfield after learning her father, Buzz, cleaned out her trust fund. While family and friends planned a surprise wedding for Harley and Mallet, the couple might be planning a surprise of their own. Wait to see: Fletcher gets closer to finding Alexandra.

LOVING: Curtis set fire to PINS out of a jealous rage against Dinah Lee. Louie was trapped inside. Aware that Dinah Lee still loved him, Curtis rescued Louie, and then left town. After reading Curtis' farewell letter, Clay suspected he had set the fire. Ava learned that Alex planned to stay in Corinth and join the police department. Wait to see: Buck makes a decision that will change his life.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE: A package of Bobby's possessions was delivered to Luna, causing her to recall her life with her first husband. Jail sentences were ordered for Todd, Zach and Powell, with Powell receiving the lightest sentence thanks to Nora and Marty's efforts in his behalf. Nora learned something that might prove she was the cause of Sarah's death. Emily was shocked when Dorian, in disguise, hinted that Sloan would want more than just help with his research from her. Wait to see: Marty faces a new crisis in her life.

YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS: A dejected Cliff reluctantly agreed to look after Hope's farm while she returned to Genoa City with Victor. At Victor's suggestion, Douglas sent flowers, anonymously, to Victoria for her birthday. Ashley told Brad she was engaged to Blade. Wait to see: Victoria and Nikki are in for a shock and an aftershock.

TOTAL 2000
U.S. ARMY

FITNESS is focus for day's events

U.S. Army Physical Fitness School

The U.S. Army Physical Fitness School will inaugurate the "Total Fitness 2000" program at Fort Benning with "Fitness Day" Monday from 11:45 a.m. to 1 p.m. at York Field.

The "Total Fitness 2000" program is the Army's answer to promoting fitness, health and well-being in the total Army family, said Maj. Marcus Alexander, director of training at the Physical Fitness School.

The program is aimed at improving the readiness of soldiers, the performance and availability of the Department of the Army civilian workforce and the overall fitness and health of family members and retirees by embedding a life-long fitness ethic.

The Fitness Day activities and celebration will include the largest aerobics class ever on Fort Benning and a two- or three-mile fitness walk, Alexander said.

The aerobics class will consist of a warmup, stretch, aerobics, cool down and stretch. The choreography will be basic to make it easy for all levels of exercisers, from beginning to advanced, to participate. Music will be lively but tailored to allow the total class to be enjoyable and invigorating, Alexander said.

A group warmup and stretch will take place at the beginning of the fitness walk, which will be conducted on the one-mile track at Stewart Field at the same time as the aerobics class. Groups from different installation activities may walk together.

The activities are open to the entire Fort Benning community. "Everyone is encouraged to attend and bring a lunch," Alexander said.

SOMALIA BOUND

ENGINEERS DEPLOY

Soldiers to clear way for UN forces

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

A 40-man combat engineer platoon made up of elements of the 317th Engineer Battalion and other units of the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, (Mechanized) departed from Fort Benning for Somalia Saturday and Sunday.

The platoon will augment a quick reaction force in Somalia, said Maj. Robert H. Vasse, brigade personnel officer.

"These soldiers are going over to clear road blocks and to allow the United Nations forces they'll be with to move more safely in and around Mogadishu," Vasse said.

The deployment is a standard rotation that will last from 16 to 24 weeks, he said.

Three C-5 airplanes were used to transport the soldiers and their equipment, which includes Armored Personnel Carriers, M-9 Armored Combat Equipment Bulldozers, mine-clearing equipment and the soldiers' personal weapons.

Family members of the departing soldiers and most of the 317th Engineer Battalion filled a hangar at Lawson Army Airfield at 5 a.m. Saturday for a departure ceremony before the first of three flights.

Deputy Commanding General Brig. Gen. Jack P. Nix Jr. said during the ceremony that although the unit deploying is small, the mission is not.

He shook hands with all deploying soldiers and promised them their families would be well taken care of while they are gone.

For Sgt. Patrick A. Collins, of Company A, 317th Engineer Battalion, having his family taken care of here means a lot. His wife, Andrea, is pregnant and their baby is due in March.

"She'll be OK," he said. "The only problem I have with leaving is that this is our first child."

Pvt. 1 Robert S. Willard, also of Company A, is not leaving family behind. For him, the chance to go to Somalia is "great."

Photos by Ruth J. Spaller

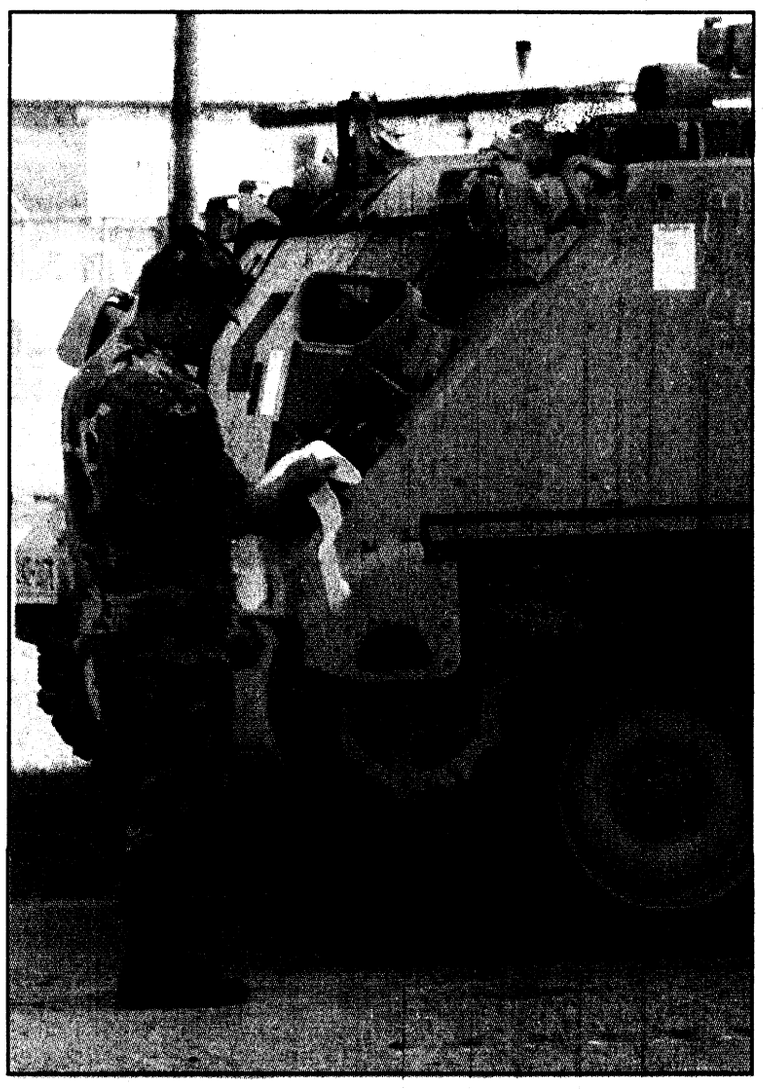
First Lt. Alvin R. Williams (center), who will be commanding the platoon in Somalia, gets some last-minute advice from a friend before getting on the plane Saturday.

He looks forward to going to Somalia, because, he said, "I get to do my job." He works in demolition and feels training has prepared him for whatever might happen in Somalia.

Pvt. 1 Jason L. Yunker, (again from Company A) on the other hand, looked very serious as he sat waiting for the second flight at 9 a.m. Saturday.

"I've been thinking a lot about what is going to happen," he said.

But, he said, he has never been to another country before, and is excited to see a different country and a new culture.



"Not many people can say they have been to Somalia," he said.

Pfc. Rachell Gomez, a mechanic with Company B of the 324th Forward Support Battalion, was the lone female standing in the hangar in desert camouflage uniform.

She was one of the back-up squad members waiting to go in case one of the primary soldiers could not deploy.

She volunteered, she said, because "I didn't come into the Army for the GI Bill. This is what I want to do — I'm a soldier, not (only) a female."

Gomez did not find out she would not be going to Somalia until after the last flight Sunday, but, she said, she would have been ready.

Spc. Paul N. LaRoche of Company A, 317th Engineer Battalion, matches up the identifying vehicle log number on an M11A3 Armored Personnel Carrier before it is loaded on an airplane for Somalia.

Runway to close for repair

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Lawson Army Airfield's main runway will be closed for maintenance beginning around Tuesday.

According to Steve Gibbon, deputy director of the Directorate of Operations and Training, half the runway will be shut down at a time while the other half will remain open for traffic.

"We'll still be able to handle lightly loaded C-130 aircraft, for airborne training, for example," Gibbon said, "but the biggest aircraft, like the C-141s, will not be able to fly in or out of here."

Gibbon said this will affect deployments and other Fort Benning transport requirements.

"We'll have to reroute some travel," Gibbon said. "For instance, when we send ranger students to the desert phase of training, they'll have to fly out from either Warner Robins or Atlanta."

The shutdown of the runway is required for normal maintenance to maintain safety, Gibbon said, and is expected to last for about five months.

Post names off-limits areas

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

Patrol to enforce dress regs

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Customers at the Commissary, Post Exchange and other facilities on Fort Benning are being asked to watch how they dress.

Since Monday, courtesy patrols have been in place at the Main Mall and in other locations to make sure patrons follow the Army and post regulations for military and civilian dress.

According to Command Sgt. Maj. William H. Acebes, post command sergeant major, the Adjutant General will task units with the duty for one to two weeks. The units may then assign the duty to noncommissioned officers in the rank of staff sergeant and above.

"It's up to the units how they want to assign the duty," Acebes said, "as long as someone is serving as courtesy patrol during the hours the PX and Commissary are open."

Active duty military, retirees and family members are all expected to comply with the regulations, Acebes said.

"The NCOs on courtesy patrol aren't there to be vigilantes," he said. "They're there to condition the people who shop there to do it right. The patrols will continue until the regulations are changed or until all PX and Commissary patrons dress appropriately."

People wearing inappropriate clothing will not be allowed inside the facilities, Acebes said, and anyone cited for two violations will be reported.

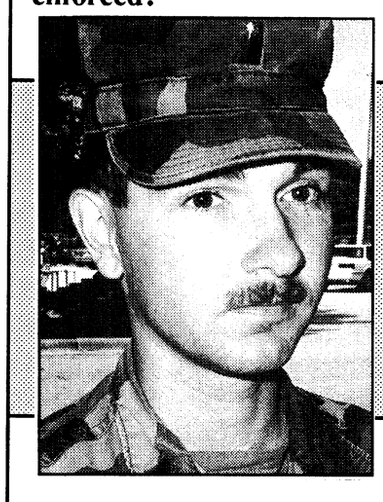
"Any NCO, who is a repeat offender, will be reported to me," Acebes said, "and officers, who are repeat offenders, will be reported either to their chain of command or to the chief of staff.

"I have the NCOs on patrol carry the regulations, so they can prove to the people the corrections they make are right," Acebes said. "Sometimes, it's a matter of judgment — a sundress or shirt may be technically against the regulations, but may be perfectly all right. On the other hand, T-shirts with offensive messages may not be listed as prohibited in all the regs, but they're against policy here."

Clothing Standards

(USAIC Regulation 600-5)

Required

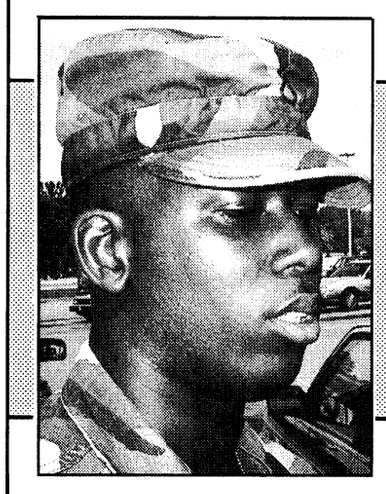


- Shirts, pants or shorts and footwear will be worn in public and all Fort Benning facilities (except as noted below.)
- Shirts, running/gym/exercise shorts and appropriate footwear will be worn when exercising in gymnasiums. Sweatsuits that are neat, clean and in good repair are authorized.

Prohibited

- Underwear when worn as an outer garment
- "Mesh" or "see-through" shirts that expose bare skin of the upper torso. Upper garments that do not cover the upper torso; inappropriate garments include those that expose the midriff or have a large cut-out under the arms.
- Bare feet or shower shoes except at swimming pools and shower rooms or when sunbathing.
- Modified items of military clothing or mixed military and civilian clothing (in accordance with Army Regulation 672-1)
- Hair curlers or shower caps
- Summer physical training uniform, except at gymnasiums
- Clothing that is disreputable or in extreme disrepair

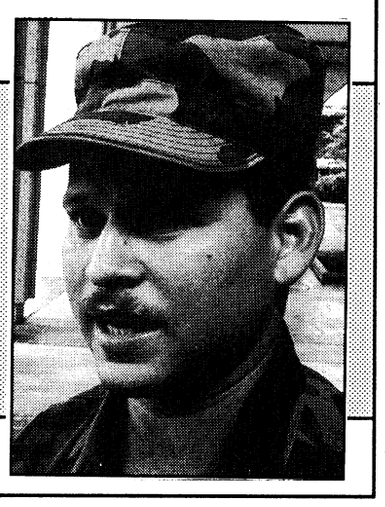
VARIOUS VOICES



Should the dress code at the Post Exchange be enforced?

1st Lt. Russell K. Hamrick, 53rd Infantry Brigade, Florida National Guard — "I think people should use common sense, but I don't think it is up to us to enforce the dress code."

Staff Sgt. Dock A. Newell, Company E, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment — "Yes and no. I think if a soldier is told 'this is the dress code' he or she should follow it. You shouldn't need to enforce that."



Pfc. Timothy L. Locke, Company A, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment — "I think you should be able to wear what you want to wear."

Rhonda Piper, family member — "Yes, I think the dress code should be enforced. There are certain things you should wear certain places and certain things you shouldn't."

Lisa Grover, family member — "I think appropriate clothing should be worn. The PX is a family place and stomachs showing and things like that are inappropriate."

Cpl. Frank Belmares, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment — "They shouldn't really enforce it. A lot of times you come in after a softball game wearing a cut-off shirt or sweats and it's just a hassle."

Post establishes courtesy patrol to enforce dress code policy

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

Post Exchange and Commissary shoppers may have noticed something new at the entrances — large noncommissioned officers with red arm bands that state "CP."

The CP stands for courtesy patrol. It doesn't mean they are there to be courteous to customers; the Army and Air Force Exchange Service and Commissary employees are already courteous.

No, they're there to ensure ragamuffins, boors and derelicts don't shop in our stores ... at least until they clean up their collective acts.

"Why do we need NCOs to enforce dress codes in our stores?" I'm sure you're asking yourself. Good question. Let's provide some answers and see who can score 100 by picking out the correct responses.

a. The post sergeant major likes to keep duty rosters.

b. There were too many NCOs on post without enough to do.

c. Getting to be a CP makes an NCO feel special.

d. The ability to make on-the-spot corrections is a lost art form.

e. Too many parents raised buffoons. These people are now either serving in the Army or are family members.

Anyone who's been in the Army longer than 30 minutes has probably figured out that keeping a duty roster is not a fun thing to do; too many changes. In fact, there are so many changes, it's a wonder that more first sergeants and clerks aren't committed. So rule out response "a."

If you find any underemployed NCOs on post, there are probably a lot of commanders and directors who'd love to get their names. Scratch "b."

A noncommissioned officer worth his or her stripes doesn't need a "CP" brassard to feel special. No to "c."

That leaves the last two responses; and, if these are the one and only's you picked, give yourself a gold star.

We do have too many people in the Army (I include soldiers, officers, retirees and family members here) who think if a tank top and tight-tights (or is that brief-briefs) is good enough to wear around the home, then they should be good enough for the PX or Commissary, or even the downtown mall.

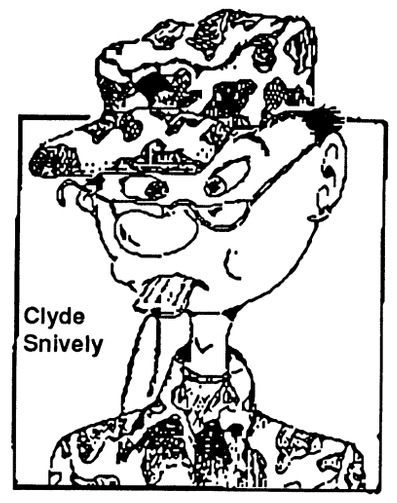
Wrong-O, Calvin Klein wannabe.

Believe it or not, some people are offended by hairy armpits and bare midriffs. If they want to subject themselves to these sights and smells, they'll go to the local gym.

And while we have too many people who don't care how they look, we don't have enough officers and noncommissioned officers who are willing to enforce standards by making on-the-spot corrections.

Until we get enough who care at Fort Benning, there will be CPs at the entrances of our PX and Commissary.

Some of you are now asking, why can't the PX and Commissary enforce these standards? They check identification cards. Let them check for proper wear of uniform, for adherence to the dress code.



Sounds like the possibility for another quiz. But here's a few answers without going through the formalities.

The ID checkers are not police officers; they're not enforcers. Their duty is to ensure that only authorized persons use these facilities. And besides, they are usually way too busy to scrutinize the way a person looks. In other words, it's not their job.

But it is the job of officers and noncommissioned officers. Remember, you're on duty 24-hours a day, to set and enforce standards.

So here's the message: Want to make a fashion statement? — do it somewhere other than the PX or Commissary; and, want to be an officer or NCO? — then act like one and take charge and make corrections (courteously of course).

COMMENTARY

LETTERS

AAFES should be empowered to enforce dress code policy

Many thanks for the long overdue article Sept. 17 on clothing standards in Army and Air Force Exchange facilities.

The military uniform standards and civilian dress code in the Post Exchange and Commisary are travesties.

The acceptable clothing standards for all Army and Air Force Exchange Service customers are posted with accompanying pictures — mere feet away from the identification card checking stations.

It angers me, then, that every time I visit the Post Exchange or Commissary, I see soldiers in muscle shirts, family members in cut-off battle dress uniform pants, people in shower shoes and others in similar violations of the posted clothing standards.

I go to these facilities to shop, not to make corrections on soldiers who are dressed inappropriately. Invariably though, I end up stopping six or seven soldiers.

The real problem with maintaining the clothing policy is that the Army and Air Force Exchange Service has to rely on its customers to enforce its regulations. I witnessed an unshaven soldier in a tank top and flip-flops show his identification card to the Army and Air Force Exchange Service employee at the entrance and walk into the Post Exchange without a word said to him. I asked the employee why she did not deny the soldier entrance to the Post Exchange for being dressed inappropriately. She said she did not have the authority to do so.

How can this be that a civilian Army and Air Force Exchange Service employee can deny any person not in possession of a valid identification card entrance to the Post Exchange or Commissary and not have the authority to do the same for individuals not in compliance with the dress code? This is an absurd contradiction!

The commanding general needs to empower these Army and Air Force Exchange Service employees with the authority they need to maintain the proper appearance of all Army and Air Force Exchange Service customers. If the Army and Air Force Exchange Service employees can't have this authority, then the commanding general should post a duty officer at the entrances to the Post Exchange and Commissary to ensure the standards are enforced.

It is the fault of every officer on this post that the AAFES dress code is so widely disregarded. This is not a "come as you are" Army. It never has been and never should be. Our soldiers and their family members should reflect this.

Any standard or regulation that is flagrantly violated and not even enforced weakens the authority of leaders to enforce even more important regulations. It also detracts from the overall quality of the organization, or, in this case, Fort Benning.

If the Army Community of Excellence team had taken a good look at the appearance of our personnel in the Post Exchange at the Main Mall, I'm sure they would have reached the same conclusion. If we are going to claim to be the best, then let's BE the best and not just pay lip service to our own standards.

1st Lt. Mark A. Viney
Headquarters and Headquarters Company
1st Battalion, 18th Infantry

Garrison commander's response:

Use of the wonderful facilities on Fort Benning is a privilege not a right. The standards of personal appearance for entrance to post facilities are established by the commanding general.

Employees of the facilities, like the Army and Air Force Exchange Service, are not responsible for enforcing dress standards. The Army and Air Force Exchange Service cooperates by posting the dress code at the entrance of their facilities.

The policy is applicable to all military, active Reserve or retired; service members, civilian personnel, and visitors authorized to use or visit post facilities.

All leaders, as 1st Lt. Mark A. Viney points out in his letter, have the duty to enforce the policy. Individuals in violation of the standards of personal appearance can be denied use of post facilities. The standards are described in U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 600-5, dated Oct. 18, 1991.

In par, the regulation states shirts, pants or shorts and footwear must be worn in Fort Benning facilities. Items specifically prohibited in facilities include:

- Underwear when worn as an outer garment.
- "Mesh" or "see through" shirts that expose bare skin of the upper torso. Upper garments that do not cover the upper torso; inappropriate garments include those that expose the midriff or have a large cutout under the arms.
- Bare feet or shower shoes except at swimming pools and shower rooms or when sunbathing.
- Modified items of military clothing or mixed military and civilian clothing according to Army Regulation 672-1.
- Hair curlers or shower caps (either male or female).
- Summer physical training uniforms (Army issue), except at gymnasiums.
- Clothing that is disreputable or in extreme disrepair.

Fire safety week set

Monday through Oct. 9 marks this year's Fire Prevention Week.

Fire Prevention Week was proclaimed by President Warren G. Harding in 1922 to commemorate the Great Chicago Fire of 1871 that killed 250 people, left 100,000 homeless and destroyed more than 17,400 buildings.

The greatest number of fatal home fires occur between midnight and 4 a.m. when most of us are asleep. Fires that occur during this time are most deadly because they can go undetected. Having a working smoke detector is only part of the battle.

While fire prevention is of paramount importance, it is just as vital to know how to escape safely. In a fire situation, you need to understand how quickly a fire can spread and stay out once you are safely out of the building.

I urge all military and civilian personnel to support your fire department during Fire Prevention Week and all year long by following this year's theme "Get Out; Stay Out — Your Fire Safe Response."

What can you do to protect yourself and your family in case fire strikes? Every household should develop a home fire escape plan and practice it with all occupants at least twice a year.

The Fort Benning Fire Department has scheduled several events during the week including a display at Infantry Hall and open house at all post fire stations.

For home fire safety information, call 545-2482 or 545-2484.

8:30 p.m. — Fireworks finale

The celebration concludes with a Twilight Tattoo presentation, which includes presentations by the Infantry Band and Chorus, the Old Guard Fife and Drum Corps, U.S. Army Drill Team, a Spirit of America show featuring military vignettes depicting soldiers throughout history and fireworks.

The presentation begins at dusk and concludes at dark, hence the name Twilight Tattoo.

The public is invited to the events.

Hazardous material course set

Directorate of Civilian Personnel

The defense hazardous materials and waste handlers course will be Oct. 18 to 22, Oct. 25 to 29 and Nov. 1 to 5. Class size is limited to 40 students per session.

The Directorate of Civilian Personnel, in conjunction with the Directorate of Public Works, is sponsoring the course, which will be taught by the School of Materiel Readiness, U.S. Army Logistics Management College, Fort Lee, Va.

The instructor for the first three sessions, which will be taught on site, is Leon Donaldson from the School of Materiel Readiness, ALMC. Each 40-hour session will be taught in Building 2506, Classroom 2 from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

The remaining two session will be broadcast live from ALMC via satellite transmission. The classes will be in Building 2509 from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. each day. Dates are Jan. 24 to 28 and Feb. 14 to 18. Class size is limited to 25 students.

This course is open to all civilian and military personnel (and their supervisors) who handle, package, store, transport or manage hazardous materials or wastes. The course is recommended as an initial hazardous materials and waste training course for personnel in environmental, safety, industrial hygiene and installation support staff whose duties require responsibility for hazardous compliance as required by 40 CFR 260-265, by appropriate state and local requirements and Department of Defense and Army policy.

The content of this course includes the identification and classification of hazardous materials and wastes; health effects and personal safety; packaging, labeling, handling, storage and transportation procedures; contingency planning and release response; and hazardous materials and waste laws, regulations, and policies.

Qualified personnel should contact their activity training coordinator, who will phone in nominations to the Training and Development Division, DCP, at 545-5656 or 545-5580. The DD Form 1556 must be submitted no later than one week prior to course start date for approved nominee. Note that all nominations are considered as firm commitments to this class. Once a nomination is approved, cancellations will not be accepted. Activities must submit a substitution for the course if nominee cannot attend.

You can use it from any phone, it gets you home in seconds, and best of all, it weighs almost nothing.

PROFILE IN EXCELLENCE

Name: Ana Ramos Wallace

Military Occupational Specialty: 71 L (administrative specialist)
Unit: Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment
Job Title: 11th Infantry Regiment adjutant noncommissioned officer in charge
Years on the job: 13 years, 11 months

What were your reasons for joining the Army?
I joined the Army to make a contribution to my country, further my education and wear the U.S. Army military uniform.

What person has most influenced your military career?
Lt. Col. Jesse Boykin, adjutant, 56th Field Artillery Command, (Deactivated), 1987 to 1990. He took care of his soldiers, NCOs and lower enlisted alike. He counseled each one of us in a way that showed us that he is a soldier's colonel. He was concerned about our career progression as well as our personal quality of life. He always smiled and greeted us in the halls and even stopped to ask how we were doing. Boykin is the epitome of what an officer should be like.

If you were the sergeant major of the Army for a day, what improvements would you make?
I would improve a lot of things, but I would begin with the centralized promotion system for the enlisted. I feel that promotions should be based on job performance and duty accomplishments first, then on schooling, assignments, etc. I would then continue with quality of life for the enlisted.

How long have you been assigned to Fort Benning?
I have been here at Fort Benning since June 1, 1990. I was first assigned to Martin Army Community Hospital, then reassigned to 11th Infantry Regiment because of MOS incompatibility at the hospital.

How do you feel about Hispanic Heritage Month?
I feel that there should be more emphasis placed on Hispanics, such as accomplishments, needs, etc. I also would like the public to know that there is a variety of ethnic groups that fall under what we equal opportunity representatives call the "Hispanic Umbrella."

How do you think the month should be observed?
It should and will, in my opinion, be observed the way my unit is hosting it — with a variety of cultural performances such as singing, dancing, fashions, poster and trinket display, live music and a sampling of a variety of cultural foods.

Do you plan to attend any of the post functions?
Yes. I coordinated and organized the 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment Hispanic Fashion and Music Show, which was Wednesday from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Taylor Field. This event was open to the public, and we had more than 12 countries represented in the event.

Hispanic Heritage Month

Hispanics play vital role in military

By Linda Lee
American Forces Information Service

The theme for this year's Hispanic Heritage Month, which began Sept. 15, is "Hispanics — A Diversified Work Force to Change the Future."

Hispanic Americans play an important role in the military services as the Defense Department downsizes. Hispanic Americans are individuals who can trace their roots to Latin America and Spain, U.S. Census Bureau officials said. The three largest Hispanic groups in the United States today are the Mexican Americans, Puerto Ricans and Cubans. Other Hispanic groups include Spaniards, Dominicans, Colombians and Nicaraguans.

In today's Army, there are 1,754 Hispanic officers, which is 2.2 percent of the officer corps; 378 warrant officers, 2.8 percent; and 24,354 enlisted members, 4.8 percent.

A further breakdown of the figures shows Hispanic women play an ever-expanding role in the service as 270 are officers, 20 are warrant officers and 2,169 serve in the enlisted ranks.

The Navy's figures indicate 1,745 Hispanic officers, or 2.6 percent; 52 warrant officers, 1.7 percent; and 32,664 enlisted members, 7 percent. There are 4,201 Hispanic women in the sea service, with 223 officers, one warrant officer and 3,977 enlisted.

The Marine Corps has 14,365 Hispanics on active duty. Statistics indicate 476 officers, or 2.8 percent; 80 warrant officers, 4.3 percent; and 13,089 enlisted members, 7.9 percent. Thirteen Hispanic women are officers, 11 are warrant officers and 646 are enlisted Marines.

Two percent of Air Force officers, or 1,832 people, are Hispanics, while in the enlisted ranks there are 14,202, or 3.8 percent. There are 280 Hispanic women officers, with 1,948 Hispanic women serving in the enlisted ranks.

In the Coast Guard, Hispanics number 158 officers, or 2.6 percent; 20 warrant officers or 1.2 percent; and 1,624, or 5.3 percent, enlisted members.

Hispanics make up almost 10 percent of the U.S. population, currently estimated at 250 million. By the end of the century, Census Bureau figures estimate the Hispanic population will be about 30 million. Also, estimates show that by the year 2020, Hispanic Americans will be the country's largest minority group.

Military and American history detail the sacrifices Hispanics have made in the defense of the nation, starting with the American Revolution and continuing through today.

One well-known Hispanic American in the U.S. military was Navy Adm. David Farragut. A veteran of the War of 1812 and the Civil War, he is remembered for his actions during the Civil War Battle of Mobile Bay. When the battle was going badly, he yelled to his crew on board the USS Hartford, "Damn the torpedoes! Full speed ahead!"

Military historians estimate that almost 10,000 Mexican-Americans served in the Civil War, fighting for both the Union and the Confederacy. Four companies raised in California in 1863 defeated a Confederate invasion into the New Mexico territory. Confederate units with Mexican-Americans on their rosters included the 10th Texas Cavalry, the 55th Alabama Infantry and the 2nd Texas Mounted Rifles.

Thirty-seven Hispanic Americans have received the Medal of Honor, including eight during the Korean War and 13 during the Vietnam conflict. The first Hispanic soldier to receive the medal was Pvt. David Barkley for actions during World War I, but his heritage wasn't discovered until 71 years later.

In World War II, the first Hispanic Medal of Honor recipient was Pvt. Jose Martinez for his heroism during the invasion of the Aleutian Islands in 1943.

Hispanics have lots to be proud of

COMMENTARY

By Harry Rodriguez Jr.
U.S. Army Infantry School

During Hispanic Heritage Month, I would like to rekindle the pride in the Hispanic-American people and to rekindle the identity lost by those who are Spanish and get caught up in the assimilative process called "the melting pot."

By this process, the new Americans, though denying it, exclude from their common identity those who had been Americans before them, the Indians, the Hispano, the Mestizo.

They did not welcome newcomers from south of the border and from the Caribbean Islands either.

Spanish-speaking persons should remember their contribution in the shaping of this country has not been in vain.

The first wheels that rolled upon the land that would become the United States were made and driven by Spanish-speaking people. The first horses ridden by man across the great plains, the first cattle, sheep, goats, pigs and domestic poultry, belonged to the Spanish-speaking people. Also the first oranges, lemons, limes, peaches, pears, apples and apricots grown in the New World were brought over by Spanish-speaking people.

The first European plows and gardening tools in North America were owned by Spanish-speaking people. In fact, the first European feet to touch the shores of what is now the southern United States were those of Spanish-speaking people.

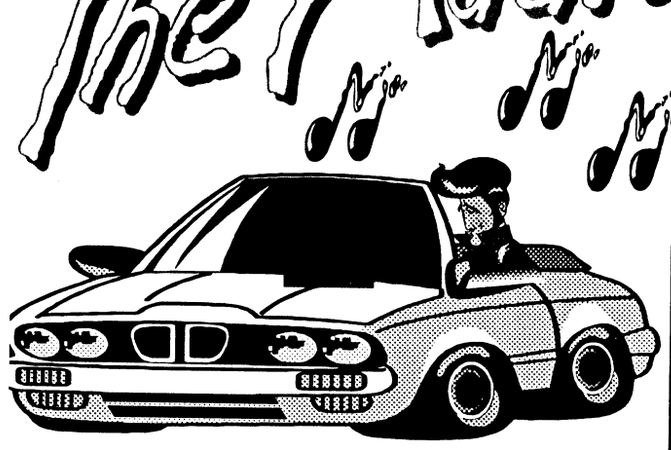
From that moment, probably less than 20 years after Christopher Columbus set sail from Spain on his first voyage, until the discovery of gold in California, more than three centuries later, the dominant European influence across the vast territory were Spanish-speaking people.

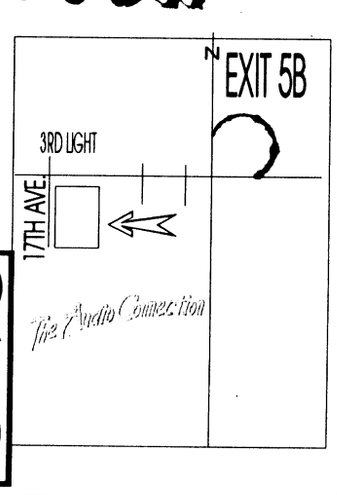
Evidence of this influence still abounds. People of Hispanic heritage, Spanish-Americans, Mexican-Americans, Latin Americans, Puerto Ricans, Cubans and others, are the second-largest minority in the United States today.

With the onslaught of Anglo expansion westward from New England in the late 1800s, Spanish-speaking people became strangers in their own land. They clung to their culture in proud but impoverished enclaves that survived in the Southwest. In the early 20th century they were infused with new numbers from Mexico, Puerto Rico, Cuba and other Central and South American countries.

Often demeaned and discriminated against, they grew in number and became restless.

Anglo-Americans were shocked when some of those first American Hispanos, Chicanos, newcomer Latinos and Mexicanos were unwilling to give up their identity for a mythical one.





They demanded the right to live their own life style, the liberty to learn in their own language and to earn the same wage for the same work! And, they demanded access to the pursuit of happiness in the same public places and with the same respect for personal dignity and privacy, as all other men.

In the 1950s and 1960s, a new breed of militant leadership — Chicanos Cesar Chavez and Corky Gonzales, Mexican-American Henry Gonzales, together with angry young men from the "Barrios" of Los Angeles, Denver, Chicago, and New York — rekindled pride in hispanic-Mexican-Indian heritage.

In the '70s, refugee Cubans began building new careers, Puerto Ricans and Mexican-Americans began surviving the Anglo-oriented school systems and achieving stature in the professions and educators initiated bilingual programs for children.

These all served notice in the 1970s that the proud peoples of Hispanic heritage were a vital and irresistible force. They demand the role of partner, not second-class citizen, in the shaping of the future.

Self-Help project

5th Ranger Training Battalion soldiers improve camp, living areas

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

William Riley Hall
Camp Merrill's ranger students now reside in newer, modern barracks.

Members of the 5th Ranger Training Battalion, Ranger Training Brigade, have been experiencing a better quality of life at their Camp Merrill home, said Sgt. 1st Class Al Brashier, first sergeant for Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 5th Ranger Training Battalion.

The members of the battalion, located in Dahlonega, Ga., have seen the improvements through the use of Fort Benning's expanded Self-Help and U-Do-It programs.

An emphasis on improving quality of life conditions at the camp began a year and a half ago, said Brashier.

"Our first goal for the program overall is to improve the quality of life for our soldiers and family members," said Maj. Mike Bushman, executive officer for the battalion. "The second goal is to improve the appearance of the camp. Since we are a sub-installation of Fort Benning, and the sole representatives of the Army in the North Georgia mountains, we try to mirror Fort Benning's quality of life."

Brashier said that some of the major projects that have already been completed include an upgrade of the transient quarters, where families coming to the camp may stay for up to 15 days while permanent quarters are found; an upgrade of the camp's weight room equipment that includes a rock-climbing wall, a step machine, gravitron, treadmill, olympic weight set and several weight machines; a playground where young family members can play; repairs to the camp's leaky swimming pool and an addition of pool furniture; and many landscape improvements, including a tiered wall.

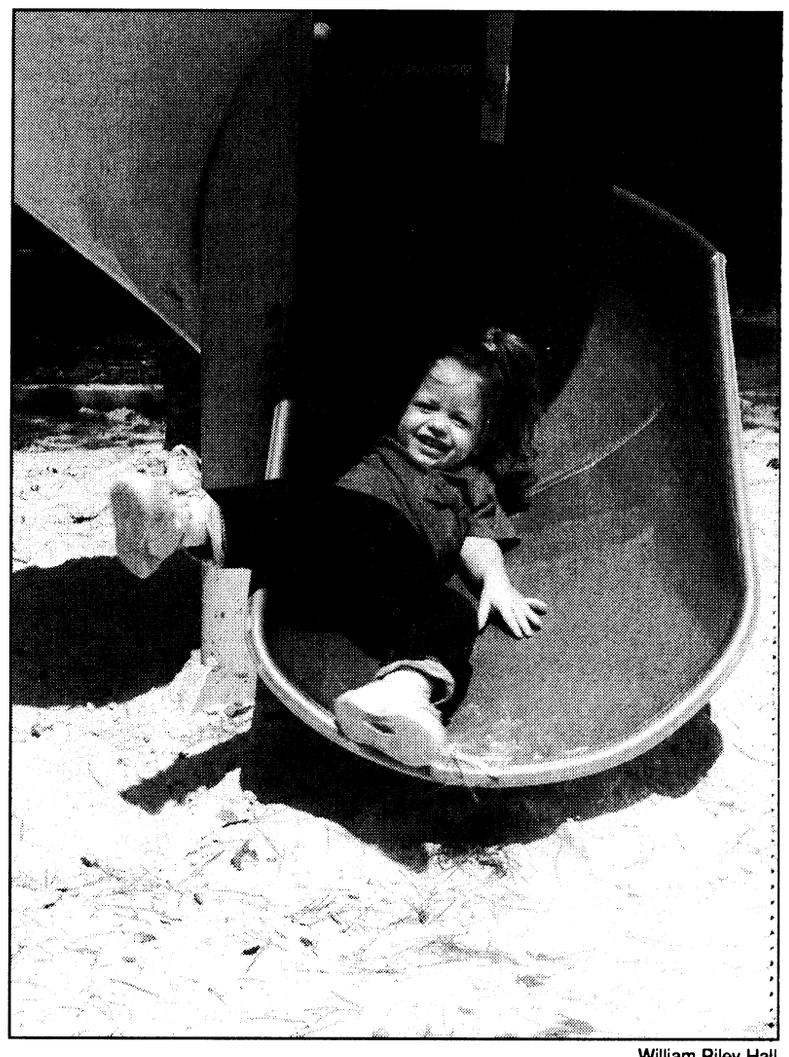
"I think the improvements raise morale," said Spc. Charles McClendon, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 5th Ranger Training Battalion. "If the place looks nice, it makes people feel better. I've only been at Camp Merrill for three months; but, ever since I've been here, there's always been something going on to improve the area."

"The improvements that are being made will just make it a lot easier to live, because we now have a lot more things to do on our off time," said Pvt. 2 Steven Galli, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 5th Ranger Training Battalion.

Some of the more than 30 working projects planned for the near future include new platoon planning bays, built with the help of the 43rd Engineer Battalion; an upgrade of the classrooms, to include baffles to stop echoing and an addition of visual aids; a camp museum in honor of ranger training; and an auto craft shop where soldiers can work on their automobiles, said Brashier.

"The programs seem to be doing really well," said Sgt. 1st Class Bill Cameron, the Self-Help and U-Do-It coordinator. "We've had a lot of money cut from our budget, so doing the work ourselves, instead of having the civilian engineers do it for us, really stretches our government dollars and gets projects done that we otherwise couldn't afford.

"Working on the projects is also very enjoyable. When we build something here, we are not working from 9 to 5 just to get a paycheck and get the work done. There is a lot of pride and interest in seeing a project rise from the ground and seeing that the finished product is 100 percent of what you wanted."



"It has taken us a while to get projects moving," said Brashier. "Sergeant Cameron runs around getting materials and doing most of the work himself.

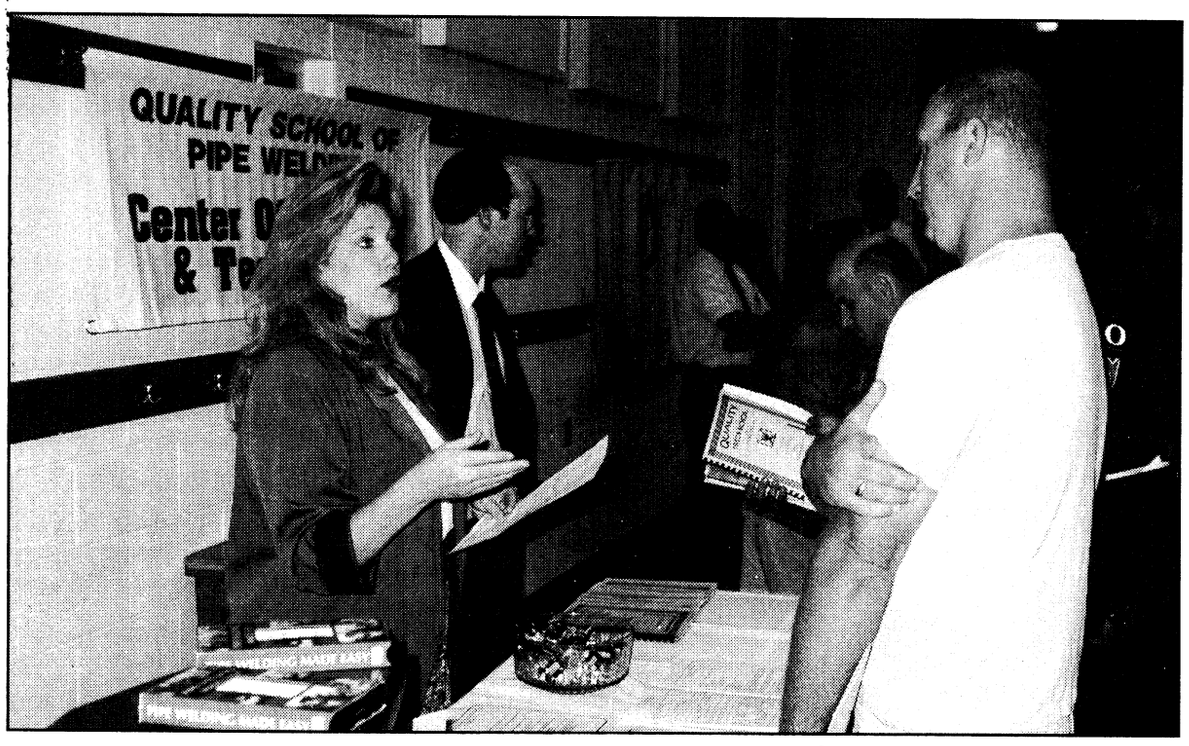
"He does all the phone coordination with the people at Fort Benning, gets the supplies we need and uses a lot of his own resources to get things accomplished," Brashier said.

"Without Sergeant Cameron we'd be lost," said Bushman. "He's an expert at what he's doing, and has saved the Directorate of Public Works a lot of work hours by taking on these projects himself."

Cameron said that with most of the projects, he works by himself or with a five- or six-person detail.

"Two people who have really done more for this program than perhaps anyone else are Dottie White and Dominick DeCarlo at the DPW," Cameron said. "Without them, we wouldn't have gotten anything done."

William Riley Hall
Darla Hall, 2, enjoys the slide at Camp Merrill's playground — a Self-Help, U-Do-It project.



"The troops enjoy being a part of the camp improvements," said Lt. Col. Ralph D'Elosua, the battalion commander. "These programs are making a lasting effect on the way we live and how we do business.

"Years from now, our troops will be able to return to this post and proudly say they played a part in the improvement system," said D'Elousa.

"It may take us longer than what we hoped for, but we're continuously putting in an effort to improve the quality of life here," said Brashier. "I think there has been a tremendous change already.

"For the soldiers who live here now, there's plenty to do. No doubt, it's getting much better," Brashier said.

Job retraining

Soldiers learn new skills

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

More than 100 Fort Benning soldiers attended an education seminar Sept. 23 sponsored by the Army Career and Alumni Program and the Georgia Department of Labor.

The program was specifically designed to provide information to soldiers getting out of the service about opportunities to learn or enhance marketable job skills.

Numerous representatives from various colleges, vocational and technical schools and private industries were available to provide information on skill development programs.

"Our whole intent is to give individuals a basic or new skill that will help them find a career," said Ted Craig, ACAP Transition Services manager.

Soldiers in attendance also learned about a job retraining program that is uniquely available to Fort Benning soldiers.

The Job Training Partnership Act is a program funded by a $1 million grant awarded by the U.S. Department of Labor specifically to aid individuals leaving the Army as a result of downsizing.

Soldiers who meet eligibility requirements can receive free skill training through this fund.

The Georgia Dept. of Labor has statistically identified shortages of skilled workers and will emphasize training of soldiers in these areas.

Among the shortage areas are the medical field, law enforcement, education and skills like welding and plumbing.

Soldiers who project they will be leaving the service can determine if they are eligible for free skill training by speaking with a counselor in the Transition Assistance Office.

Counselors will refer individuals who meet program requirements to the on-site Georgia Dept. of Labor evaluators who grant final approval for funding.

Interested soldiers should stop by the Transition Assistance Office for details. The office is located in Soldiers' Plaza, Building 2617.

Oct. 29: "Employers' Day"

Job assistance workshop

Time: Wednesdays, 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Location: Infantry Hall, Building 4

The workshop is conducted every Wednesday at Infantry Hall. Topics discussed include objective setting, resume preparation, expanding opportunities, networking, interviewing, salary negotiating, stress management and financial planning. The workshop is for anyone in federal service (both military and Department of the Army civilians) and their family members, whether leaving voluntarily, involuntarily or retiring.

Education Opportunity Center

Time: Wednesdays, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

Participants will receive information from all over the country about college and university admissions requirements and proficiency exams. Education counselors can also discuss student loans and grants.

Mock interview practice

Time: Thursdays, 2 to 4 p.m.

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

Participants will learn how to interview effectively by rehearsing and practicing interview techniques with an experienced JAC counselor. The mock interview will be videotaped to provide the client with a visual learning tool.

Employers' Day

Time: Fridays, time varies

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

Employers' day is scheduled each Friday at the Job Assistance Center. The program is designed to allow employers to recruit qualified candidates for their companies.

Employers normally will give presentations on their organizations and set up interviews with qualified candidates.

A variety of manufacturing and service companies take advantage of this opportunity. Public sector organizations are also represented.

Focus hour

Time: Tuesdays, noon to 1 p.m.

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

Weekly video program that provides additional information on the key areas in the job search process — networking, dressing for success, interview process and negotiating techniques. Counselors will assist with any additional questions.

Small business development

Time: Monthly, 2 to 4:30 p.m.

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

A short, free, monthly seminar is offered by the Small Business Development Center of the University of Georgia. It is designed to provide assistance and training in starting a new business.

The seminar serves as a focal point for linking together resources of the federal, state, and local governments and the private sector.

For additional information and registration, call Army Career and Alumni Program Job Assistance Center, located in Building 2634, at 545-2308 or 545-2309.

Fitness: to be day's focus

Several exhibits displaying fitness equipment and information will expose attendees to state-of-the-art fitness programs, Alexander said, and personnel from the physical fitness school will be available to answer questions.

Refreshments will be provided and Total Fitness 2000 decals will be given out.

"Total Fitness 2000 is an innovative program that provides safe, meaningful methods for all age groups to uplift the mind, body and spirit," Alexander said.

Although there are many fitness programs available, they are not directed with a central focus. Total Fitness 2000 will provide that focus by establishing a functioning installation network, he said.

"This event (Fitness Day) is to be shared by all because it marks the beginning of a new era in the Army. Don't miss this opportunity to share in success," Alexander said.

WE THINK NCOS ARE BETTER DRIVERS. SO CALL US TO SEE IF WE CAN GIVE YOU A BETTER RATE.

Anyone can offer you an auto insurance policy. But at Family Protection Plus,SM we believe NCOs tend to be better drivers. So we provide highly competitive rates on policies geared to the realities of NCO family life.

For example, when you're transferred, your coverage follows you to most of the states where military installations are located. All it takes is a toll-free call, and we'll handle the details.

You'll also find our other features very attractive.* Like special savings if you keep your car in a storage facility while you're on a TDY. And a waiver of deductible if someone in your household has an accident while you're deployed in a war or combat zone.

If that seems like a sensible approach, there's a good reason. Family Protection Plus, created by Academy Life Insurance Company, was designed specifically for NCOs and their families. And it's recommended by NCOA®.

So if you'd like us to quote you a rate, call us. We'll be glad to put you on the road to a more sensible car insurance policy.

The 36th Engineer Group flag football league season is under way.

Sept. 23 the 586th Engineer Company River Rats went head to head with the Knights of the 63rd Engineer Company at Engineer Field and came away with a 25-12 victory. Game two went to the Combat Medics of the 690th Medical Company over archrival 2nd Moblie Army Surgical Hospital 7-0.

River Rats quarterback Edward Freeman hit wide receivers Darrell Singleton and Carlos Kimbrough with 40-yard touchdown strikes to power the River Rats' offense. Freeman added a 10-yard touchdown run to his credits, while running back Victor Dortch finished off the scoring binge for the Rats with a five-yard run late in the second half.

The Knights, down 19-0 at the half, scored on their first possession of the second half to climb back into the game when quarterback Al Britton found receiver William Cochran all alone in the end zone for a 10-yard touchdown pass.

The Knights added a touchdown late in the game to cut the lead to 25-12 on a Britton 35-yard pass to wide receiver Leonard Oliver.

The Rats played well on the defensive side of the ball as well as on offense. Singleton had two interceptions in the first half to stall Knight drives.

In game two, the Combat Medics held on for a hard fought 7-0 win over Second to None of the 2nd MASH on Medic quarterback Rafael Del Rio's 35-yard touchdown strike to split end Dwayne Gunther on a post pattern to the end zone. Del Rio added the extra-point attempt on a dive into the end zone to go up 7-0 early in the first half.

In the second half, an interception by Second to None linebacker Bernard Brady gave 2nd MASH its best break of the night. 2nd MASH quarterback Jermaine Willis promptly gave it right back to the Medics when Charles La Porte picked off a pass intended for receiver Steven Rivers sealing the win for the Medics.

Biathlon gives entrants something to shoot for

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

The 1993 Doughboy Summer Biathlon took place Sunday at English Range and Olive Field.

The Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club and the Directorate of Community Activities hosted the event, which consisted of a five-kilometer total run distance and a total of 10 metal knock-down targets at which to shoot.

Paired contestants began the race at one-minute intervals on a one mile run, which led to a shooting range where five shots were fired from the prone position (lying down) with a .22 caliber biathlon rifle at targets 25 meters away.

After the first five shots, the course looped into another mile run, which led to the second firing range. Contestants shot at the final five targets in the standing position.

A final dash to the finish line completing the five kilometers ended the race.

"I thought it was a great race," said Scott Moore, the men's division overall winner.

"There were people in the race who were better at shooting than I was, so I was a little worried," Moore said.

"I had never entered a Summer Biathlon before. I was training for the Army 10-Miler in Washington, D.C., and had made the team.

"It just seemed that it was a real good day for a race, so I entered.

"The course turned out to be really nice. Suprisingly, there were three different mile loops on the course, which made for some real variation during the race.

"I'm definitely going to enter the race again next year if my schedule permits me to," Moore said.

Contestants were awarded a 30-second deduction in finish time for each target hit from the standing position, and a 15-second deduction from targets hit from the prone position.

All competitors attended a pre-race shooting safety class given by the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit.

Golf tourney: father and son battle for first

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The 1993 Fort Benning men's golf club championship, played Sept. 18 and 19 at the Follow Me Golf Course, saw a father and son battle for the title with the elder prevailing to win.

Roger Garrity outdistanced his son, Jarred, by three strokes to win the "A" championship with a two-day score of 146. The younger Garrity came second with a total of 149. Third place went to Al Mauldin, also with a score of 149.

In the "B" championship, Eddie Gunn captured the crown with a total score of 159. Second place went to Frank Sharp with a 160 and Bill Jones finished up in third place with a score of 160.

In the first flight, Juan Bustamante took first with a round of 157. Jerry Tolbert finished second at 157 and Joe Henderson placed third with a 159.

Flight two saw Matt Margotta take first with a score of 158, while David Smith came in second at 160 and Bill Munsey finished off the flight in third at 163.

The third flight went to Richard Williams at 161, with Larry Lepkowski in at 166. A score of 169 captured third place for Steve Kuehl.

The fourth flight went to Tom Gleason with a final score of 164. Richard Parker placed second with a score of 167. Ben Johnson finished off the flight with a score of 168 for third place.

The fifth flight went to the clubhouse with Ray Wagner in first place at 173, and Pete Bush right behind Wagner at 173. A 175 for Mike Gallman took third.

Joe Pearsey's total of 181 took first in the sixth flight, while Ron Martere came in second at 183. Bill McCloskey rounded out the flight with a score of 183 good for third place.

In the seventh and final flight, Ken Poindexter took top honors with a two-day score of 184. A 188 sent Jim Kobeck to the 19th hole in second place and Darryl McDowell rounded off the field with a score of 189 for third.

Shooters match tactics at English Range

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Rifle and Pistol Club of Fort Benning drew 22 shooters to English Range Saturday morning for a tactical rifle match.

In the competitor class, Richard Hopp fired a 172 to take first place. In the standard class, "iron sights," Gregg Long came in first with a score of 144, while Lenny Jones took second with a final score of 138 and Charlie Van Housen rounded out the field for third with a score of 134.

Terry Linander took top honors in standard class optical with a score of 170. James Gavrilis fired a 116 for second and Charles Rolling Jr. finished in third with a score of 109.

The next tactical pistol match will be 1:30 p.m. Oct. 9 at English Range. Entry fee is $10 if paid before Oct. 9 and $13 after that date. Shooters will receive a free T-shirt courtesy of Valiant Bullet Company, sponsor of the match.

For more information, contact Jim Graham at the Rifle and Pistol Club at 689-3371.

SPORTS SHORTS

Chapel sanctuary grows

Arthur Rutberg
USAIC Chalains' Office

For two years, Fort Benning's Jewish community has tried to make the Regimental Chapel up on Sand Hill a truly Jewish home. It began with setting up the kitchen to provide kosher meals for all Jewish personnel on post. Once that job was completed, the sanctuary of the chapel came next.

Many years earlier, an ark had been built to house the two Torahs (five books of Moses) written on sacred parchment scrolls. The bare necessities were there, but the sanctuary lacked those warm, homey qualities one would expect from a local synagogue.

Through the hard work of Golden Hands Studio and the artistic partnership of my wife, Sara Rutberg, and Darrie Schlesinger, wife of Rabbi Laurence Schlesinger, the sanctuary of our Jewish home is now complete. With the Torah covers, the parochet (ark curtain) and the reading table cover, the Jewish community truly has a synagogue to be proud of.

The Torah, held by Darrie Schlesinger, shows the motto of our congregation, "lech acharai," which means "follow me." These words are being spoken by the eagle, the symbol of strength, courage and hope. It reminds us of the words of the prophet Isaiah, "I will lift you up on wings of eagles." The eagle is therefore a symbol of God's redemption of the Israelites and ultimately the whole world.

On the Torah, we see Jerusalem, the eternal city, the city of peace, with the words "im eshkaheh" — "If I ever forget you O Jerusalem," the psalmist said, "let my right hand lose its skill and my tongue stick to the roof of my mouth." Jerusalem the golden, the city that has been Israel's capital since the year 1000 BCE, cannot be forgotten and we pay tribute to it.

Jerusalem and the eagle symbolize out themes of looking forward, saying "follow me" on the path of community and commitment, and never forgetting the past and its lessons of Torah and commandments.

Sept. 16, filled with pride and in deep appreciation, we dedicated these Torah covers, this Tree of Life parochet and this reading table cover to the Fort Benning Jewish community for their permanent and continued use in all its holy endeavors.

World Communion is Sunday

REFLECTIONS

The story is told of a wealthy young man, wanting to make good on his own. He decided to enlist in the Army. He went to a recruiter; and, before he knew it, he was a trainee in the Infantry Training Brigade.

As the days dragged on, he had trouble adapting to group living, the control of his every movement and the concern of drill sergeants. He was pushed, put in lines and rushed for everything. He felt annoyed and irritated, but most of all humiliated.

Finally, one evening after lights out, he whispered to his bunkmate, "I hate this place! I never should have come here. I've always had it so I could do what I wanted. This is the first time in my life I've been forced to do anything."

To which another trainee replied, "Welcome to the family! The only way we are going to make it is for all of us to live together and help each other overcome the hardships."

In this spirit of togetherness, Christians in churches around the world will join together Sunday and help each other celebrate World Communion Sunday.

World Communion Sunday was begun in 1936 by the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America. In 1967, the National Council of Churches accepted responsibility for World Communion Sunday. From the beginning, the plan was that any denomination could participate. Intercommunion was not contemplated and joint services were never encouraged. However, Holy Communion was to be celebrated in each church according to its own practice.

Through the observance of this special day, there is a heightened sense of congregational fellowship and a strong emphasis on each congregation being part of a world-wide fellowship. The Holy Communion Table stretches out 25,000 miles with millions of members from different denominations gathering at the Lord's Table to recall Christ's request, "Do this in remembrance of me" (Luke 22:19).

The multitude of Christian believers represent many different races, customs, languages and nations. In spite of such differences, there is a common loyalty to Jesus Christ as the savior. This gives each Christian a sense of belonging to a larger community of brothers and sisters.

In the words of the psalmist, "Behold, how good and pleasant it is when brothers and sisters dwell in unity." (Psalm 133)

CHAPEL NOTES

Troops earn medal for service

By Linda Lee
American Forces Information Service

U.S. troops who served in Operation Restore Hope in Somalia are eligible for the Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal.

Army Gen. Colin Powell, former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, decided to award the medal after discussions with the joint chiefs. Service must have been after Dec. 4.

The area designated includes the total land and airspace of Somalia. Also included are land and airspace in Kenya east of 38 degrees east longitude, the Gulf of Aden and the portion of the Indian Ocean north of five degrees south latitude and west of 55 degrees east longitude.

In addition, said Department of Defense officials, individuals who served under the commander, Unified Task Force, Somalia, in direct support of the operation are eligible for the medal. Each service will determine eligibility case by case.

Specific time spent in the area to qualify for the medal depends on the individual's participation in Restore Hope, said DoD officials. For example, assignment to a unit deployed 30 consecutive days in the area qualifies, as does 60 nonconsecutive days if the work includes entering the area.

A 1961 presidential executive order established the Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal, with an effective date of July 1, 1958. It's up to the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, with recommendations by the joint chiefs, to award the medal for a military operation.

For an operation to merit the medal, it must fall under one of three categories, said DoD officials. It must be a U.S. military operation, U.S. operation in direct support of the United Nations or U.S. operation assisting friendly foreign nations. Other aspects considered include the threat of imminent hostile action by foreign armed forces and the number of U.S. troops taking part.

The medal has been awarded for 14 U.S. military operations over the years. These include Lebanon in 1958; Berlin in 1961 to 1963; Cambodia and Vietnam in 1975; and Operation Just Cause in Panama in 1989 to 1990.

In addition to Restore Hope, only one other U.S. operation in support of the United Nations was approved for award of the medal — the Congo in 1960 to 1962.

Six operations aiding friendly foreign nations are listed as approved for the medal, said DoD officials. Included are Vietnam 1958 to 1965; Thailand and Cambodia, 1973; Lebanon, 1983 to 1987; and Persian Gulf, 1987 to 1990.

In some instances, a separate award will be issued, like the Vietnam Service Medal, or a service may issue its own expeditionary medal. When two such awards are issued for the same operation, the individual has to decide which to accept. Service members are not entitled to two such awards for the same operation, DoD officials explained.

Specific details for award of the medal are available from local military personnel offices.

Training is top priority

TRADOC News Service

Training will continue to be the Army's number one priority as budget dollars are reduced, according to Sgt. Maj. of the Army Richard Kidd.

"Training will always be the number one priority. It's the best way to take care of the soldier, to have him trained and ready," he said.

"We do, however, need to make some adjustments, to become more efficient."

Kidd was at Fort Monroe, Va., recently to attend the Army's Community and Family Support Board of Directors' Executive Committee Meeting. As he does at nearly every Army post, he talked with soldiers.

"I expected them to ask about pay, budget cuts and the Army getting smaller," he said. "But they wanted to know about promotions, how to compete for promotions.

"Even with the restructuring, the opportunities will remain; in some cases they're even better. We've promoted more specialists to sergeant (this year) than in the past seven years," Kidd said.

"The opportunities will always be there for the great young soldiers. But you've got to train. You have to take the tough jobs and assignments so you can show what you can do."

A major development for sergeants through sergeants first class begins in October when the Self-Development Test will be administered formally for the first time. Individual test results will become part of the Enlisted Personnel Management System and affect promotions and school selections.

"Soldiers should take the SDT seriously," Kidd said. "That is the bottom line."

Also high on the agenda for the Army leadership is to ensure a high quality of life for soldiers and their families, the top NCO said.

"Training is priority one but right up alongside that is quality of life, both for married and single soldiers. This must be a priority if we are going to retain quality soldiers and attract quality soldiers into the service," Kidd said.

He said the nation will always need the Army, and the Army's basic mission to defend the United States will never change. It will always have a need for good soldiers. He offered a suggestion to help young soldiers become more professional and to improve their chances for advancement.

"Young soldiers should seek out a mentor, someone who has the traits you admire, and emulate that soldier."

To the noncommissioned officer corps, he said, "I charge the NCO leaders to make sure you are a leader that these young soldiers can look up to — 24 hours a day."

WORLD WAR II

50 years ago this week ...

• The Allies continued their steady advance through Italy, capturing Benevento, Aversa, Maddaloni, Caserta, Capua and Naples. British commandos successfully linked up with the Canadian 78th Division at Termoli and repelled the 16th Panzer Division, forcing the Germans to abandon their positions near the city. Concurrently, the Fifth U.S. Army pressed toward the Volturno line to prepare for a later attack.

• In the Aegean, the Germans seized Cos, capturing more than 3,100 Italian and 1,400 British soldiers in the process. Two British cruisers did, however, successfully engage and sink seven transports and one escort ship, from a German convoy heading toward the island.

• In the Solomons, the 25th U.S. Division occupied Kolombangara in the wake of the Japanese abandonment of the island. Despite the efforts of the American destroyers that continued to engage transport ships evacuating enemy troops, 9,400 Japanese soldiers successfully escaped to other Pacific locations.

• Elsewhere in the Pacific, Australian forces on New Guinea secured Finshafen and advanced from the Markham Valley, capturing Kumpu before reaching Ramu.

• On the Eastern Front, the Soviets launched a new offensive in the North, taking Nevel to complement the capture of Taman in the Kuban Peninsula.

• In the Arctic, aircraft from the carrier USS Ranger, supported by the battleships Duke of York and Anson, attacked German freighters near Bodo off the Norwegian coast, sinking four and crippling seven others while suffering only minimal damage.

DoD survey

Fewer youths consider military career

By Linda Lee
American Forces Information Service

The Department of Defense asks about 10,000 young men and women every fall what they think of the military and if they would consider making it a career.

The most recent survey shows the military isn't as popular a career choice as it was in the 1980s, said Air Force Lt. Gen. Robert M. Alexander, DoD's top military personnel officer, during a recent interview.

In that study, the percentage of men ages 16 to 21 who said they definitely or probably would enlist within the next few years was down from 29 percent in 1991 to 27 percent in 1992.

The 2 percent drop is a statistically significant decrease, said Alexander. With the exception of the Marine Corps, the numbers were down for specific service enlistments.

The 1992 results for men ages 22 to 24 show 14 percent seriously consider a military career, down from 1991's 16 percent.

When taken alone, the 2 percent drop isn't that bad, but when added to the 6 percent decline between 1990 and 1991, that gives cause for worry, he said.

For women ages 16 to 21, the figures show a 1 percent drop, from 12 percent in 1991 who definitely or probably would enlist, to 11 percent in 1992.

Only 5 percent of the women ages 22 to 24 who participated in the survey would seriously consider a military career. Another area in the survey that indicates future recruiting problems was the enlistment propensity for blacks ages 16 to 21.

The 1992 figure is 37 percent, said Alexander. The percentage has fallen dramatically since a high of 53 percent in 1989. In 1990, it was 44 percent and in 1991, 42 percent.

Also, enlistment in the Reserve components isn't as popular for men ages 16 to 21 as it once was. In 1989 through 1991, between 22 percent and 24 percent said the military was a good choice.

However, 1992's figures indicated a change, with only 19 percent saying they would seriously consider enlistment.

"We were not really surprised by the survey results," said Alexander. "Since 1989, our advertising budget has been cut by more than 50 percent. It is difficult to sustain youth awareness of the military without an effective advertising program."

The 90-question Youth Attitude Tracking Study asks questions "that provide information on the propensity, attitudes and motivations of young people toward military service," he said.

"Research has shown that the expressed intentions are strong predictors of enlistment behavior."

The survey also contains a few topical questions, like the impact of downsizing or Desert Storm.

The study is based on eight demographic characteristics: age, gender, marital status, race and ethnicity, employment status, geographic location, school status and aptitude.

The study plays a large part in DoD's recruiting efforts and themes, explained Alexander. If it looks like the military may have trouble attracting people, DoD uses the survey as part of its justification for recruiting funds.

Sometimes, the results of the survey indicate DoD needs to add specific enlistment incentives, like college funds. On the other hand, the survey may forecast no problems in recruiting.

"The tracking study is a valuable tool for the Defense Department and the services in the development of recruiting policies and strategies," he added.

U.S. engineers escape Somali militia ambush

Pakistani soldier killed, two Americans wounded in battle

By Rebecca Matanic
Army News Service

MOGADISHU, Somalia — One Pakistani soldier was killed, two American soldiers were wounded and a third was treated for heat exhaustion as a result of a Sept. 9 ambush on 21 October Road by Somali militia gunmen.

Spc. Jason Christner of the 362nd Engineer Company, 30th Engineer Battalion, 20th Engineer Brigade, Fort Bragg, N.C., was wounded in the right shoulder by gunfire and Sgt. Roy Malasig, also of the 362nd, suffered a leg injury when a rocket-propelled grenade exploded under a vehicle.

Pfc. Leslie Edwards collapsed from heat exhaustion after providing continuous covering fire for the 362nd's company commander, Capt. Kenneth Crawford. The soldiers were taken to the 46th Combat Support Hospital in Mogadishu.

Christner and Malasig were evacuated to the United States in stable condition. Edwards was treated and released the following day.

Soldiers from the 362nd were working with Pakistani soldiers, clearing roadblocks built by the militiamen to obstruct convoys transporting supplies throughout Somalia. After removing one roadblock, the soldiers encountered a second.

There, the American and Pakistani contingent came under small arms fire from the north and rocket-propelled grenade rounds from the south. The Pakistanis returned fire to the south with .50-caliber machine gun fire from their tanks, supported by MK-19 suppressive fires by the U.S. contingent.

The U.S. soldiers also fired M-60 and small arms suppressive fire to the north and south.

"We positively identified the targets that were engaged," Crawford said.

A crowd of Somalis gathered behind the element and began to set up blockades. Crawford requested suppressive fire from the American Quick Reaction Force Cobra helicopters that were called in to the area to assist the convoy.

Some of the 24 American soldiers who were working to remove the roadblocks said they saw some of the Somali women and children in the mob not only assisting the militiamen, but also actively taking part in the assault.

The Cobras made a pass over the area to confirm locations of friendly personnel and vehicles. On a second pass the positions were marked by smoke, then the Cobras made a gun run on vacant buildings and warehouses from which the hostile fire was detected.

During the Cobra assault, the U.S. and Pakistani convoy began to move northeast. As the convoy moved along, Christner was hit by hostile fire from the northwest. The lead tank was then hit with a 106mm recoilless rifle round and began to burn.

"The fighting was intense. I couldn't think; I just reacted like I was trained to (react). The fire was coming from three sides," said Pfc. Marcie Cole, the lone female soldier in the U.S. contingent.

"Pfc. Cole acted marvelously," Crawford said. "She kept a cool, calm, collected head; she didn't lose her control. She was out there on the ground, providing suppressive fire, and moved when she was told to move."

Cole also assisted in providing first aid to Malasig and Christner.

"We're all soldiers in the U.S. Army. We all wear the same kind of uniform. It is gender-immaterial when you're in a combat situation," Crawford said.

The convoy was halted for about 20 minutes, during which time the engine failed on one of the American bulldozers.

Crawford directed the crew to get off the dozer, which was then swarmed by Somali militia. The bulldozer was later destroyed by two tube-launched, optically tracked, wire-guided missiles fired by American aircraft.

Crawford requested air support to help get his soldiers to a safe location, and was directed to move about 100 meters ahead to the Mogadishu Stadium, located on a Pakistani compound. Crawford then asked for Pakistani assistance getting the remaining American equipment into the stadium.

The soldiers of the 362nd were flown by helicopter back to their compound, Hunter Base.

"After being under fire for almost two hours, you feel almost superhuman," Crawford said, "because your adrenaline is pumping so much, your mind is going a mile a minute."

Crawford sent the troops back out on their missions the next day. "I got them busy, so they wouldn't sit back and contemplate how close the bullets were," he said.

CLINTON

announces nomination for secretary of Army

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — President Bill Clinton announced his intent to nominate Togo Dennis West Jr., a veteran of the Defense Department and a former Army officer, as secretary of the Army Sept. 17.

Also named was Clinton's choice for undersecretary of the Army, Joseph R. Reeder.

"I am pleased today to announce my nomination of Togo West as our new secretary of the Army," Clinton said. He described West as " ... a seasoned veteran of the Defense Department who knows firsthand the challenges facing our fighting men and women."

West served as associate deputy attorney general of the Justice Department in the Ford Administration.

His first major military post was as the Navy Department general counsel, and he later went on to serve as special assistant to the secretary and deputy secretary of defense. President Jimmy Carter appointed him Defense Department general counsel in 1980.

He served as a managing partner of a New York law firm until 1990. He then joined Northrop Corporation, where he is currently the senior vice president in charge of government relations.

Born June 21, 1942, in Winston-Salem, N.C., he earned a bachelor's degree in electrical engineering and a juris doctor degree, both from Howard University.

West is a member of the World Affairs Council and Atlantic Council board of directors. He is a member of the National Advisory Committee of the United Nations Association of the United States of America, and has been a member of the Council on Foreign Relations.

His military awards include the Legion of Merit and Meritorious Service Medal. His public service has earned him the Defense Medal for Distinguished Service.

West is married to the former Gail Berry, an attorney, who at one time served as deputy assistant seeretary of the Air Force.

The couple has two daughters.

Reeder is a former defense attorney for the Army, who has served with a Washington law firm since 1979. He also served as a Texas law clerk, and later as a trial attorney for the Pentagon.

Reeder graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., in 1970 and earned a juris doctor degree from the University of Texas at Austin. He earned his master of law degree from Georgetown University.

Article 15s

Soldiers should know punishment limitations, appeal, filing decisions

Trial Defense Service

The punishment limitations of Article 15s, the right to appeal, and the commander's decision on where to file an Article 15 are addressed in this article.

By accepting an Article 15 (that is, allowing the commander to proceed with the Article 15 proceedings) a soldier agrees to let your commander decide whether he or she is guilty or not. If the commander finds the soldier guilty, the commander can then decide what punishment to impose, if any.

Punishment

If the commander determines that you are guilty of the charged offense, you can be punished. There are limitations on the amount of punishment you can receive. The first factor is the rank of the commander giving it to you and the type of Article 15 you are receiving. If the commander is a major or above, you can receive the following punishment:

(1) Admonition or reprimand

(2) Restriction — 60 days (cannot be combined with correctional custody)

(3) Extra duty — 45 days (cannot be combined with correctional custody)

(4) Correctional custody — 30 days (private 1st class or below only; This includes a specialist reduced to private 1st class)

(5) Forfeiture of pay — one-half base pay per month for two months

(6) Reduction in grade — specialist or below to private 1; sergeant or staff sergeant, one grade only; sergeant first class or above may not be reduced by Article 15.

If the commander is not of the rank that is able to promote a soldier to sergeant or staff sergeant, he or she cannot reduce those soldiers. If the commander is a captain or below, you can receive the following punishment:

(1) Admonition or reprimand

(2) Restriction — 14 days (cannot be combined with correctional duty)

(3) Extra duty — 14 days (cannot be combined with correctional duty)

(4) Correctional custody — Seven days (Pfc. and below only)

(5) Forfeiture of pay — seven days base pay

(6) Reduction in grade — Specialist and below one pay grade; sergeant and above may not be reduced

If the Article 15 is a summarized one, the punishment is further limited in that the commander cannot reduce or impose any forfeitures.

Appeals

Every soldier who has been punished by Article 15 has the right to appeal the finding of guilt and/or the sentence given to the next higher commander. You should be notified of this right to appeal at the conclusion of the Article 15 hearing. You will have to indicate on the Article 15 form whether you are going to appeal. Be careful If you decide not to appeal, the commander does not have to let you appeal at a later date just because you changed your mind. If you decide to appeal, all additional documentary matters must be submitted within five calendar days. If your appeal and additional matters are not submitted within five days, the appeal can be rejected as untimely.

A soldier is not required to state the reasons for his or her appeal; however the soldier may do so. If you are appealing because you were found guilty when you believe you were not, you should submit a statement explaining why the evidence does not show your guilt. If you have additional evidence that was not available at the original hearing, you should submit that too. If you want to personally appear before the appellate authority, you must request to do so in writing; however, the appellate authority is not required to hear from you in person.

Some soldiers appeal not because they were found guilty, but because they feel the punishment given to them was excessive. When you appeal an Article 15, your punishment cannot be increased; it can only be lowered. Of course, there is no guarantee that your punishment will be reduced. In appealing a punishment, you will want to let the appellate authority know any special circumstances surrounding the offense, your personal or family situation, and the effect of the punishment on you. You will have to give the appellate authority good reason to change the imposing commander's punishment. The defense counsel at TDS can help you prepare your appeal.

Filing

The filing of a formal Article 15 is an important part of the Article 15 process. The Article 15 will be filed in your local file. It will also be filed in either the performance fiche of your official military personnel file, or in the restricted fiche of your file. If you are a specialist or corporal or below (prior to punishment), regardless of how many years you have been in the Army, the original Article 15 will only be filed locally in nonjudicial punishment files. Such locally filed originals will be destroyed at the end of two years from the date of imposition of punishment or on your transfer to another general court-martial jurisdiction, whichever occurs first.

If you do not fit into the category just mentioned, the imposing commander will have the final say as to whether the Article 15 goes into your restricted or performance fiche. The performance fiche is that portion of the file that is available to those who decide assignments, promotions and schooling selections. The restricted fiche is that portion of the file that contains information not viewed by career managers or selection boards without special approval.

Even if your Article 15 is filed in the restricted portion of your file, it is available to local commanders for two years after being imposed. Since the filing decision is crucial to your future military career plans, you should do everything you can to persuade the commander to file the Article 15 in your restricted fiche. However, once the commander makes the decision, it is final and cannot be appealed.

A summarized Article 15 can be filed in neither your local file nor anywhere in your file.

There is one special situation that should be noted. If a soldier already has another record or records of nonjudicial punishment (that have not been wholly set aside) reflecting misconduct in the grade sergeant or higher in his or her restricted fiche, then any subsequent Article 15 records directed for filing in the restricted fiche will be directed to the performance fiche. The soldier and his or her commander will be informed of this.

ASK THE JUDGE

Q: With the interest rates on home loans being so low right now, I'm thinking about refinancing my house. What should I be looking for in terms of legal or other problems?

A: From a legal standpoint, refinancing a mortgage is a fairly straightforward process. Unlike the number of potential problems involved when you buy a home, refinancing is strictly an exercise in dollars and cents and what makes sense for you. The first rule is to shop around for your best deal — interest rates may vary by as much as one-half of 1 percent.

The interest rate is not the only important factor. You also have to look at whether or not the lender is charging discount points and the closing costs. "Discount points" are charges a lender assesses to bring the interest rate down.

Points are paid "up font" at the time you go to closing, and are either paid by you in cash or if the lender will allow, financed along with the rest of the mortgage.

If you finance the points, you will pay more than the actual amount of the points over the life of the loan because you will be paying in interest on interest.

Closing costs are the expenses the lender incurs in processing the mortgage application, approving it, and getting the loan closed. Such costs typically include: origination fee (charge by the lender for finding you the money), attorney's fees, survey, appraisal, credit check, document preparation, intangible taxes, title insurance, underwriting fee and recording costs.

Closing costs may run anywhere from 3.3 percent to 4 percent of the loan amount. Some lenders will negotiate some of the costs, such as the origination fee.

If the lender allows you to select the attorney who will handle the transaction, you may be able to negotiate that fee. If you have not been in the home for too long, and have made no changes to the property, some lenders will allow you to use the survey that was done when you bought the property (saving approximately $250).

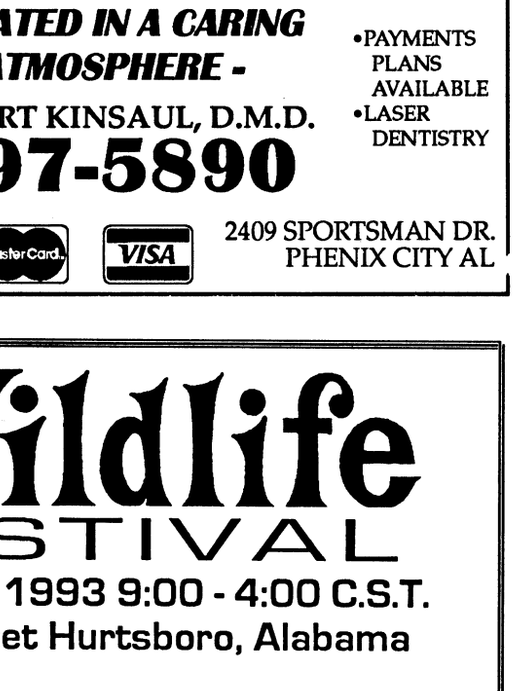
Some lenders are currently offering a "rate reduction loan" featuring "no closing costs." There are closing costs, but rather than charging you for them, the lender pays them.

Is it free? Not when you consider that for the privilege of not paying costs, the interest rate on the loan is going to be approximately a percentage point higher than the going rate. The lender is going to recover the closing costs from you in the form of the additional interest you will pay on the loan over time.

Of course, if you plan on selling the house within a couple of years, this loan may make sense (example: a $75,000 loan at 6 percent may have closing costs of $3,000, while the same amount in a rate reduction loan at 7 percent will have no costs.

Payments on the 6 percent are $4498.66, payments on the 7 percent are $498.98, and the difference between the two is $49.32 per month. Before five years, you are saving money. In about five years, you will have repaid the lender its $3,000 in closing costs.

After 30 years, you will have paid $17,755 more in interest than on the lower rate loan).



If you have questions about refinancing your mortgage, you may want to make an appointment with a legal assistance attorney for advice and guidance. The telephone number is 545-3281 or 545-3282.

Trial Defense office to close Oct. 26 - 29

Because of Defense Counsel's Conference, the Trial Defense Office located in Building 65 will be closed Oct. 26 through 29.

Normal operating hours will resume Nov. 1. In case of emergency, contact the senior defense counsel at 545-2175 or 545-2176.

Group run, awards ceremony today

The 36th Engineer Group will conduct a four-mile group run and awards ceremony today on Engineer Field. The awards ceremony will begin at 6:30 a.m. with the run following. The run will start at building 2827 on Sightseeing Road.

Volunteer crossing guards canceled

Military parents who requested to be school crossing guards will no longer be needed. Crossing guards will be hired by the Directorate of Civilian Personnel.

German National Day to be celebrated

German National Day will be celebrated on Monday at 6:30 p.m. at the Fort Benning Officers' Club Supper Club. Required dress for military personnel is dress blues with four-in-hand-tie, or for civilians, a coat and tie or cocktail dress. For reservations, call 545-6251.

Code B clothing sale today

The Installation Supply and Services Division will conduct a Code B clothing sale today from 7 a.m. to 2 p.m. in Building 224A.

Sale items will be priced 25 percent of acquisition cost rounded up to the nearest dollar. Each customer will be limited to $150 total purchase. Payments will be accepted in the form of cash or personal check.

The following items will be offered for sale: speed lace boots, dress boots, battle dress uniforms, gloves, field jackets, black all weather coats, dress uniforms, sweat pants and shirts and duffel bags.

Persons authorized to purchase personal clothing items at Code B Clothing Sale include all active and retired officers, warrant officers, and enlisted personnel of all branches of the armed forces (active component, Reserve component and National Guard).

Sales to retired members of the armed forces are limited to Class A service uniforms (including accessories), footwear and undergarments.

SJA office to close

The Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, Building 5, will be closed on the last Wednesday of every month from 8:30 to 10 a.m. to allow all personnel to attend customer service training.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland and range areas will take place through Oct. 17. If weather permits, the following compartments may be affected: C-1, C-2, C-3, E-7, K-8, K-11, O-3, O-4, O-5, O-6, O-7, O-8, O-14, Q-2, S-1, T-5 and T-6.

Burning will occur in pine stands within these compartments to enhance endangered species habitat and training areas. People using these areas for recreation must vacate the areas before 9:30 a.m. daily.

Training units using compartments adjacent to these areas may experience drift smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while traveling in these areas because of the potential for reduced visibility.

Property auction set

A property auction will be Oct. 19 beginning at 10 a.m. at the Outdoor Recreation Office, Building 1704, Gillespie Street.

For more information, call John Dorsey at 545-2348.

False want ads lure job seekers

Better Business Bureau

Better Business Bureaus across the country are warning consumers not to be taken in by "Help Wanted" advertisements for "assistant managers" or "manager trainees" that promise huge earnings, but require no experience.

These ads, which never mention that selling is required, may lead job seekers into commissioned sales positions for products such as perfume, cookware, video tapes or vacuum cleaners.

BBBs report that job seekers are not told that selling is involved until after they have been selected for the position. In addition, new hires may be asked to pay up-front fees for bonding, training materials or product samples. Even if the fees are said to be refundable, the conditions may be so strict that it may be hard to qualify for a refund.

While salaried positions are promised or implied, the workers may be required to make an impossible-to-achieve "minimum" number of sales per week in order to be paid the advertised salary. In some instances, companies have asked new hires to sign a contract prior to working so they will be considered independent contractors and not salaried employees of the company.

In another twist, these thinly disguised sales jobs are targeted toward college students as summer internship opportunities. The students also are promised high pay, as well as class credit and scholarships.

What disappointed students have found is that the arrangement for class credit is solely up to them, and scholarship money is tied to the volume of sales of the company's product.

Complaints against these companies by workers include being asked to misrepresent products in the sales pitch, being encouraged to make door-to-door solicitations, in spite of local laws prohibiting such solicitations and being told to bypass "no solicitation" signs posted on businesses.

Job seekers who are considering answering an overly-appealing "Help Wanted" ad should be realistic about what the job entails and what it can deliver. They should watch the ads over a period of time. If the same ad for the same appealing job continues to appear day after day, and week after week, the job probably does not exist, or at least, won't live up to all that the ad promises.

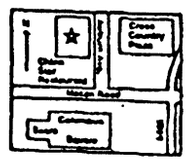
ASK DR. FIT

Recently, personnel from the U.S. Army Physical Fitness School conducted a professional development seminar at the School of the Americas for the professional staff. A question arose concerning the push to eat carbohydrates for optimum physical performance.

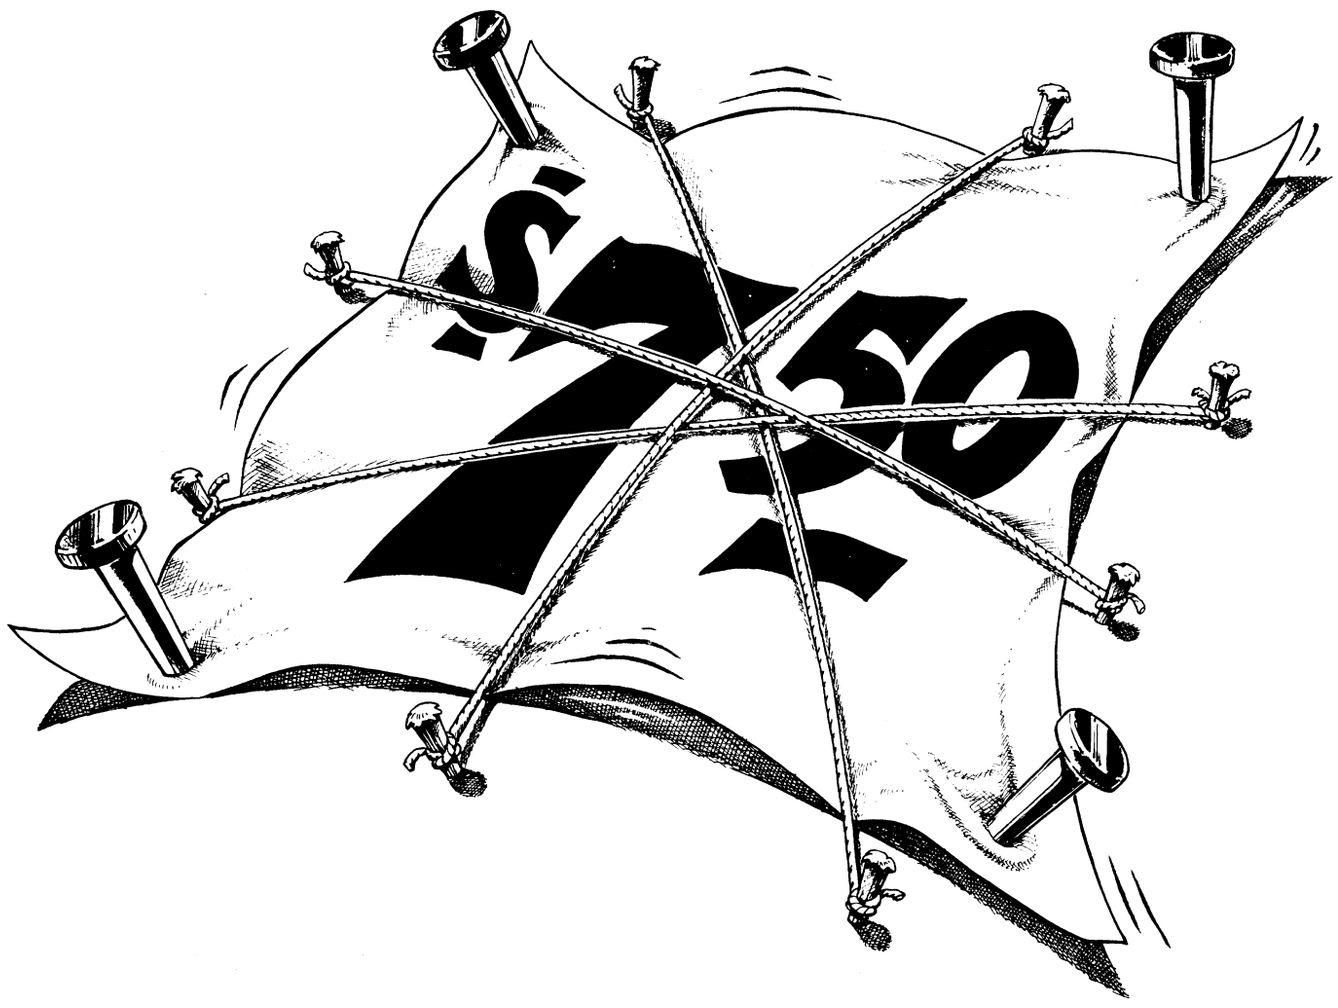
By eating fruits, vegetables, grain products (for example, wheat breads, pasta, corn, cereal and rice) and other things that grow in the ground, you eat carbohydrates. They are stored in the body in either the liver, muscle or blood. Most body tissues like carbohydrates ("carbos"), especially the muscles during exercise and the brain while thinking. The trained athlete stores up to three times the amount of the untrained athlete. Therefore, the storage of carbos is a limiting factor in performance. That's why you want to optimize your carbo stores with a carbo-rich food management program (diet).

When is the best time to replace the carbos after exercise? How much should I eat or drink? The optimum time is as soon as tolerable. A 150-pound person should consume about 16 ounces of apple or orange juice, 8 ounces of cranberry juice, a banana, a bagel or some yogurt. A 200-pound person should consume about 24 ounces of apple juice or orange juice, 16 ounces of cranberry juice, a couple of bananas, two bagels, or a serving of pancakes or waffles.

When performing the push-up event on the APFT, may the soldier do them on the fists? Yes, soldiers may do the push-up event on their fists. This may be necessary due to a prior injury. There is no unfair advantage to be gained by doing so.



I am on a profile, and assigned to do the bike test as an alternate cardiorespiratory event on the two-mile run. May I use my multiple-speed bike? Yes, and you must keep your bicycle in one gear of your choosing for the entire test.



Changing of the gears is prohibited and will result in disqualification.

Interesting stuff: Death rates from all causes for the least-fit men were 3.4 times higher than the most-fit men and for the least-fit women, 4.6 times higher than the most-fit women; Cancer death rates were much lower in physically fit men and women than in non-physically-fit men and women. Moderate levels of physically fitness that are attainable by most adults appear to be protective against early, untimely deaths.

C. stop, drop and roll
D. put baking soda on it

11. If trapped on the third floor of a house, it is best to
A. jump
B. break the window and wait to be rescued
C. wait to be rescued
D. throw pieces of furniture to get attention

12. You should know two ways out from every room
A. at home
B. at work
C. at friends' homes
D. all of the above

Answers:

1. D. All of the answers are right! Every escape plan should include two ways out of every room in case your primary exit is blocked by smoke or fire. When developing your escape plan, be sure to check all exits to see that you can actually get out. Burglar bars without quick-release devices, windows painted or bolted shut and furniture blocking doors, are all dangerous fire hazards that should be corrected immediately. For homes built in the wildland and urban interface, it is also important to know two escape routes from your home, in case one road is blocked by traffic or fire.

2. C. Everyone in the household should participate in developing the home fire escape plan, including little ones. Here's how: Draw a floor plan of your home and show two ways out of every room and a meeting place outside. Then walk through your home and make sure all the doors and windows are clear and open easily. Practice your escape plan, trying all possible exits, at least twice a year. If there are very old, very young, or physically impaired people in your family, try to locate their sleeping rooms on the lowest level and plan to have a family member assist with their escape.

3. D. If fire breaks out, leave the building immediately and be sure everyone else inside does the same. Once safely outside, call the fire department from a neighbor's home and stay out.

4. B. False. Never use an elevator during a fire. Elevators could be trapped in between floors or even take you to the floor where the fire is and stall. Use stairways for fire escape.

5. B. Never go back inside a burning building. If you think someone is trapped inside, immediately inform the fire department or tell firefighters on the scene where you think the person can be found. Firefighters are trained and equipped to safely perform rescues. It is very dangerous to go inside a burning building if you are unprotected by the proper clothing and breathing apparatus or if you are untrained in fire rescues.

6. A. Roughly three out of every 10 home fire deaths occur between midnight and 4 a.m. when most people are asleep. This time is one of the lowest frequency periods for home fires, but because fires can develop undetected, an early morning fire is especially likely to be fatal. This underscores the importance of installing and maintaining smoke detectors on every level of your home, including the basement. They can give you advance warning of a fire and provide extra time to escape.

7. D. In a fire, smoke is heated and rises. It fills the room from the ceiling down. If you encounter smoke or flames on your way out, turn around and use your alternate exit. If you must escape through smoke, crouch or crawl under the smoke, keeping your head about 12 to 24 inches off the floor. This is the safety zone, where the air will be cooler and cleaner.

8. B. This is false. Before you open the door, kneel or crouch and put the back of your hand up high against the door, the knob and the crack between the door and the door frame. If the door feels hot, it means there is fire on the other side and you should use your alternate exit. If the door feels cool, slowly open it with your shoulder braced in case you have to slam it shut. If all is clear, escape carefully, closing doors behind you as you go.

9. B. False! There is no time to do anything but get out of the burning building and yell for others to do the same. Real fires are nothing like what we see on television and in the movies. In a real fire, it is hot, dark, smoky and noisy. You may only have a few minutes to escape safely, so know before you have a fire, two ways out of every room and be sure windows and doors open easily and are clear at all times.

10. C. Stop, drop and roll is the phrase to remember if your clothing should catch on fire. Running will only fan the flames and increase your chance of greater injury. Here's what to do: Stop right where you are, drop to the ground and cover your face with your hands if you can and roll over and over to extinguish the flames. If someone else's clothes catch on fire and you are unable to convince them to stop, drop and roll, try to knock them to the ground, then smother the flames with a rug, heavy coat or other large covering that can be used to extinguish the flames.

11. C. Generally, it is not a good idea to break the window since falling glass can harm people outside and damage fire hoses. It is dangerous to jump from a window higher than the second story. Ideally, you should have a safe escape means from rooms on the second or third stories. If you are trapped and it is dangerous to jump, close the door and cover the cracks to keep smoke out. Call the fire officials and tell them your location, or signal at the window with a light-colored cloth. If the window opens, crack it at the top and bottom to let fresh air in and smoke out. Be prepared to shut the window quickly if smoke is drawn in. Try to stay calm and breath normally while you await rescue.

12. D. You should know two ways out of every room wherever you are. Always be aware of your surroundings and know how you would get out in an emergency. Look for exit signs when you are in restaurants, cinemas and malls, and make a mental note how you would escape. Be sure exit doors are not blocked or padlocked, and if they are, get out and report it to the local fire department. When staying with friends, ask them what their escape plan is and familiarize yourself with exits. At work, participate in fire drills and count the number of desks or doors between your work area and the two nearest exits. If you have to escape in darkness or smoke, you can count your way to safety.

Fire safety must be priority one on post

Directorate of Public Works

Fire authorities agree that hundreds of lives could be saved each year if people only knew in advance exactly how they could get out of their homes in the heavy smoke and confusion that frequently accompany a fire.

Unfortunately, not everyone has the instinct to run from a burning home. Children often panic and hide in closets or under beds.

Knowing what to do in case a fire does break out may mean the difference between life and death.

The answer is an escape plan that is known and understood by every member of the family. Each member should be thoroughly familiar with every step of the plan.

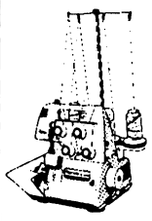
The first thing to do when preparing your plan is to draw a floor plan of your home. Mark an escape route and an alternate route from each room. Pay particular attention to the bedrooms since nighttime fires are usually the most serious. Since it is impossible to get out through a high window, invest in a rope or chain ladder.

Always make sure that doors can be opened and are easily accessible. Explain to each member of the family how to break window glass with a chair or heavy object and how to clear away pieces of glass remaining in the frame with a shoe or similar object.

Come to an agreement on a way in which any member of the family can sound an alarm. Pound on the wall, use a whistle or any method that will awaken those who are asleep. Time should not be wasted getting dressed or collecting prized possessions. Speed is of utmost importance in escaping fire.

Every family member should know how to test a door. If panels or knobs are warm, the door must be kept closed and the alternate escape route used.

If it is necessary to stay is the room, stay near a slightly open window. Place towels or clothes in the door cracks. To reach the other side of a smoke-filled room, crawl with your head about 18 inches above the floor. Hang a sheet outside the window to signal for help. Plan ahead on an outside meeting place where everyone will assemble. Once you have made your escape, never go back inside.



Once your plan is developed, hold a practice drill and then repeat the drill periodically.

For assistance in preparing your family fire escape plan, call 545-2883, 545-1967 or 544-1220.

Installation regulations state children under 12 can't be left alone

The changing face of the American family brings new challenges for some, opportunities for others and some problems.

The traditional home of the past is changing as more parents of school-age children enter the work force. More youngsters than ever get themselves off to school and return home to an empty house where they open the door with their own key. The name latchkey child was coined through this practice; today the practice is often termed self-care.

Fort Benning offers several programs designed to meet the needs of latchkey children and their parents.

Two kinds of child care (home-based and center-based) and a school-age latchkey program, or SALK, serve more than 200 school age children in the Fort Benning community, according to Jennifer Williams, coordinator for Child Development Services.

In addition, Youth Services on post also provides after-school recreation for about 200 children daily, said Billie C. Smith, director of Youth Services.

Installation regulations state children under the age of 12 can't be left alone, according to Williams. The post programs are designed to provide safe places for these children before and after school.

Under the SALK program, children age 12 and under can receive both before- and after-school care on school days, and full-day care during summers and school holidays.

This service is open to children in kindergarten to sixth grades who attend Fort Benning schools, according to Kathy Rondeau, program manager of SALK.

The SALK program runs from 5:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m., and can include breakfast, rides to and from school, and after school activities such as field trips, crafts and study time.

The response to the program has been good, and "a waiting list has been established. We recruit from that waiting list," said Rondeau. A total of 80 children are enrolled at this time.

In addition to the SALK program, Tot Town Child Development Center offers an after-school program that includes transportation to and from the center to some schools. The children have enrichment activities such as crafts, field trips and study time.

Another option for after-school care is the Family Child Care program, or FCC. Through this arrangement, military spouses on Fort Benning can provide care in their homes for up to six children, said Williams.

Spouses interested in joining must attend training classes, agree to background checks, and have a home inspection prior to becoming certified FCC providers.

The certified homes are monitored for health, safety and quality of service.

Once they have been certified, FCC providers may keep up to six children age 4 weeks to 12 years. A list of FCC homes is available through Central Registration, Building 11302, on Custer Road.

Some providers will transport children to and from school, Williams said. Central Registration can help with referrals and will provide three recommendations to those who request it.

There are currently around 50 providers in the FCC program, she added.

Williams noted that preschool children can also receive care at one of six CDC centers on post or through the FCC program.

Children over the age of 12 may stay by themselves, according to regulations, or may use the Youth Activities program.

Williams encourages parents needing before- and after-school care to consider several important points.

• A contract for services is always needed, she said. The exact charge should be stipulated.

• The caregiver should provide or post a daily activity schedule.

• A menu should be posted.

• There should be evidence of children's work and activities.

• Parents should look for cleanliness and sanitation.

• Parents should look for the yellow rainbow symbol displayed in a window. This assures them the home is certified.

Another option for after-school activities is the Youth Services program. One main center, a gymnasium, and two outreach centers are administered by Youth Activities.

The centers, open until 8 p.m. on school days, are open to children ages 6 to 18 years.

"Parents need to sign their children into the facility," noted Smith. That way, center employees will have an emergency phone number, she said.

Effective in January, each child using Youth Services must be registered, Smith said. There will be a $12 registration fee per family, which will enable all eligible children in that family to use the facilities, she said.

Youth Services includes self-directed activities such as sports, games and crafts to organized classes such as ballet and piano. The structured classes may require a fee.

Youth Services also hosts sports tournaments and teen dances. For more information on the programs, call the main center at 545-3070.

Parents preparing to allow their children to remain alone after school can evaluate their readiness by reading the Project Home Safe checklist:

• Can your child:

lock and unlock doors and windows?

prepare a sandwich?

dial the telephone and take messages?

• Does your child:

- tell time?

- understand what "stranger" and "emergency" mean?

- recognize danger and know how to stay safe?

- solve small problems but know when to get help?

- consider how his or her actions affects others?

• Does your child:

- solve conflicts with peers or siblings with little adult help?

- talk easily to you about what happens at school and his or her feelings?

- feel confident enough to contact another adult if a problem arises?

– seem willing to stay alone?

– know how to handle fear, loneliness or boredom?

– know how to handle responsibility, such as getting ready for school on time or looking out for younger brothers and sisters?

If you answered yes to most of these questions, your child is showing signs of physical, mental, social and emotional readiness for self care. Meg Planz of Project Home Safe suggested having children demonstrate to their parents they have mastered certain tasks.

"Parents may be surprised to learn that the child cannot physically lock or unlock the door," she said. "One child was too weak to lift the portable fire escape ladder a parent had bought. Without asking the child to demonstrate her skills, the parent may never have known."

Besides maturity, Planz suggested other factors to consider when thinking of self care.

"If your family is going through a difficult transition period due to a recent move, death or divorce, or remarriage, now may not be the time to start your child in self care. For children with special needs, self care may never be appropriate," she said.

She also said parents should give their homes thorough safety checks, such as studying fire escape routes and checking smoke alarms.

Emergency numbers should be posted by the telephone.

Project Home Safe will send a packet of free booklets to help prepare parents and children for self care to those who ask. Interested persons should write before Oct. 31:

Alexandria, VA 22314

After Oct. 31, write to:

Santa's Castle prepares for CHRISTMAS

Santa's Castle conducted an open house Tuesday and Wednesday for unit commanders and first sergeants. Volunteers from the nonprofit, all-volunteer organization briefed unit leaders on the procedures for referring soldiers and led tours of the facility.

Unit representatives who attended the open house were able to view all stages of the toy preparation process. The final products, new or like-new toys are divided by age group and displayed on shelves in the "shopping area."

Soldiers must be referred to Santa's Castle by their commander, first sergeant or chaplain and must be in severe financial difficulty, said Lorrie Woolwine, co-chairwoman. Referrals can also be obtained from the Red Cross or Army Community Service. Soldiers or their spouse will receive an appointment to "shop" for toys between Dec. 6 and 17.

Santa's Castle receives both money and new and used toys as donations. The organization provided more than 5,800 toys to 923 children last year. Woolwine said they project the number of children who receive toys will grow to more than 1,200 this year.

The organization is in need of donations to help meet the 1993 projections. Santa's Castle does not receive CFC funding to buy or refurbish toys. Donations are provided by individuals, businesses and units.

There are still many goals to be reached before Santa's Castle will be ready for its first "shoppers" in December, Woolwine said. The "shopping area" has plenty of empty spaces that need to be filled and there are toys that need to be prepared for distribution.

Any group or individual wishing to donate time, toys or money can contact Santa's Castle at 545-1233 or stop by Building 2639 in Soldiers' Plaza.

Yard sales need permits

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Having a yard sale on Fort Benning means more than moving the contents of your garage to the front lawn and slapping on a few price tags.

To have a yard sale on post, you need to have a permit, said Darlene Perry, Community Life officer.

Permits are free and can be obtained from Community Life centers in each of the housing areas, Perry said.

Permits are issued in the sponsor's name only, but may be obtained by any family member with a valid identification card.

The post policy on yard sales is governed by U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 210-5, which states the following:

- Yard sales will not be used as a business venture; only to dispose of unwanted or excess personal property.
- Sales will not interfere with the normal flow of traffic or cause safety hazards.
- Sales may take place only on Saturdays, Sundays and federal holidays.
- Sales will not begin before 8 a.m. and will end no later than 6 p.m.
- Signs advertising sales may not be emplaced prior to the day of the sale and must be removed the same day.
- Signs may not be posted on telephone or utility poles, trees, street signs, fences or buildings.
- Displays of property for sale must not be unsightly in appearance. Any debris from sales must be cleaned up and properly disposed of as soon as the sale is over.

Military Police and Community Life noncommissioned officers spot-check yard sales for permits and compliance with these rules, Perry said.

Those found without a permit will be issued a deficiency notice for violation of USAIC regulations.

The deficiency notices are the same ones used for yard inspections, Perry said, and though the first notice serves only as a warning, copies of subsequent deficiency notices are sent to the sponsor's unit.

"Our purpose for monitoring yard sales is to make sure they are not being used to run a business out of quarters," Perry said.

Yard sales are also monitored "to make sure the community is run according to the Community of Excellence standards," Perry said.

"We want to avoid anything that looks unsightly," she said.

Home-made signs are authorized, Perry said, but they must be free standing, and they have to be neat.

VOLUNTEERS NEEDED

Volunteer Resource Center

- Soldiers who have been Scouts are needed to work with the "Rendezvous with Brownsea" fall encampment 1993 at Fort Benning's King's Pond Oct. 22 to 24. More than 1,000 Scouts in the Chattahoochee Council, Boy Scouts of America will participate in this event.

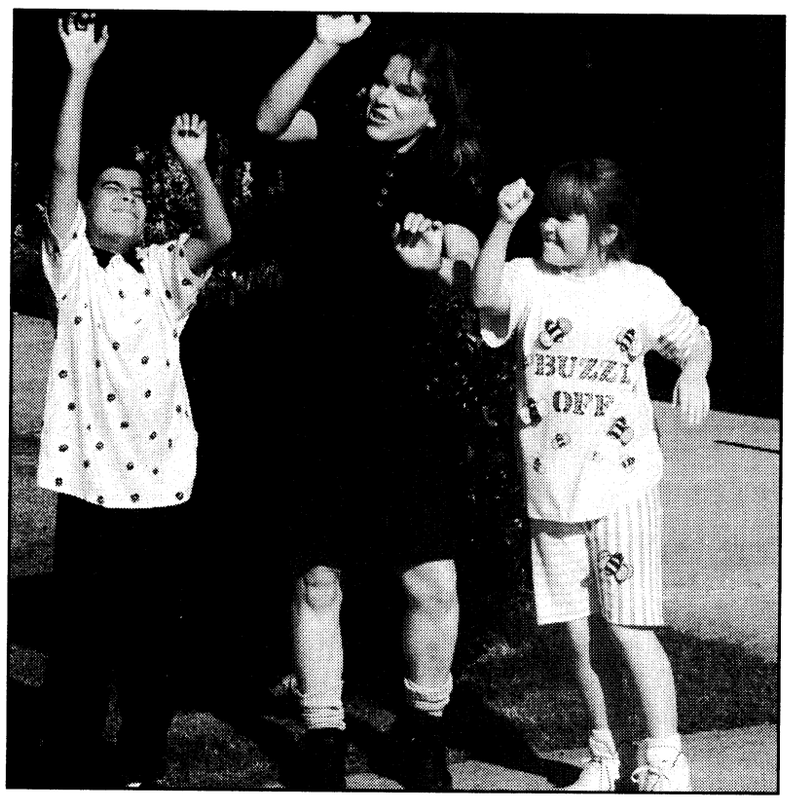
For more information about "Rendezvous with Brownsea" at Fort Benning or to volunteer, call Lt. Col. Howard Willis at 545-5741.

- The fourth annual Indian Cultural Festival will be on the campus of Columbus College Oct. 8, 9 and 10. To make the event successful, volunteers are needed.

Last year, more than 15,000 people attended the three-day festival and learned about the history and customs of the first residents of the Chattahoochee Valley.

The event is planned, organized, and staffed entirely by volunteers. If you or a member of your organization can volunteer at least two hours on one or more of the festival dates, call 324-7440.

Admission to the festival is free for volunteers on the day they are scheduled to work.



- The Concharty Council of Girl Scouts needs adult leaders to work in leadership positions, including a new community director and co-directors, and adults to work with troops.
- The National Infantry Museum needs volunteer tour guides and assistance in the Gift Shop. Tour guides can schedule volunteer time around their paid jobs or other commitments. Training and child-care costs will be provided.
- Army Community Service needs volunteers to assist in budget counseling and the Family Member Employment Assistance Program. Also, clerk typists, receptionists, a volunteer supervisor and assistant supervisor are needed.
- Spouses of enlisted soldiers are invited to become actively involved in the Enlisted Wives' Club.
- Volunteers are needed in the Thrift Shop Tuesdays and Thursdays. Individuals will gain retail experience while helping others.
- Volunteers are needed in each housing area to assist community mayors. For more information, contact the housing area Community Life Center or the post Community Life Office.
- Fort Benning Red Cross needs adult volunteers to supervise the Youth Volunteer Program during the summer.
- Volunteers with library experience are needed at Sayers Memorial Library to assist the staff with shelving books, data entry and story time for children. Training and child-care costs are provided.
- The Rape Crisis Intervention Program is looking for volunteers. Training and child-care costs are provided.
- Santa's Castle needs a secretary and volunteer elves to refurbish toys.
- The First Steps Program needs volunteers to mentor and assist new mothers during the first few days or weeks after the birth of their children. Training and child-care costs are provided.
- Big Brothers and Big Sisters of Columbus needs adults to share love, support and time with children from single-parent families. For more information, call 327-3760.
- Project Voice needs volunteers to serve as tutors, mentors and coaches to work with youths. Individuals working in this program will serve as role models through their efforts in sports, educational and recreational programs. For more information, call Tony Adams at 571-4975 or 571-4976.
- The Fish and Wildlife Management office needs sports-minded volunteers to work at the deer-check station, feed the catfish in Russ Pond and perform other duties.
- The Combined Communities of Southeast Columbus is looking for volunteers for its tutorial program for Saturday mornings. Contact Lonnie Jackson at 687-5357.
- The Judge Advocate General's office is looking for volunteers to work in its reception area. Also, a victim witness liaison is needed. Legal experience is preferred.

The Volunteer Resource Center is open Monday through Friday from 7:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. It is located in Building 359, the Family Unit Network Center.

For more information, call 545-5602.

Wilson School students imitate professional mime artist Mary Ann Smith as she leads them in an interactive story about a bear hunt. The children are from Emily Patton's and Marianne Smith's kindergarten classes.

MIME ARTIST

teaches children self-expression

By Jerrie Macintire

Kindergartners at Wilson School went on a bear hunt recently, but all they bagged was an exhilarating journey over high cliffs and through sticky swamps.

The "bear hunt" was actually part of an interactive story presented by visiting artist in residence Mary Ann Smith, a professional mime. A mime is an actor skilled in portraying feelings or situations with gestures and body movements, but no sound.

Smith, an Atlanta-based artist, has been working with Wilson students for three weeks as part of a series of fine arts residencies sponsored by the Fort Benning school system.

"We have a very good fine arts program anyway, and we wanted to enhance that," said Phyllis Parker, principal of Wilson School.

From the opening program on the first day of the residency, the children were fascinated by the mime artist, Parker said.

In presenting her talent to the children in an exciting and interactive way, Smith hopes children will gain more appreciation for theater. She also hopes to enhance their self-expression and cooperation with others in a group setting.

While the younger students enjoyed interactive story telling such as "The Bear Hunt," the upper classes worked on mime illusions (shape tricks using the hands) and some mask work (facial expression drills).

With mime artistry, every movement is important since no sound is used, Smith said.

Smith studied theater at Case Western Reserve in Cleveland before she moved to Atlanta, where she continued to study and work professionally in theater.

Indian festival set Oct. 8 to 10

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The fourth annual Indian Cultural Festival Oct. 8 to 10 at Columbus College will give plenty of opportunities for the remembrance of things past.

This year, Fort Benning will host some of the events.

Several speakers, folklorists and anthropologists will speak in a forum called the "Council House" to be featured Oct. 9 and 10.

A variety of topics and issues, from Southeastern Indian flutes and crafts to the use of Indian names and imagery as athletic team logos will be covered.

Any area native Americans may be admitted to the festival free of charge by showing their tribal membership card at the gate.

The festival will be 6 to 10 p.m. Oct. 8, from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Oct. 9, and from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Oct. 10.

Admission for one day is $5 for adults or $2 for children or students. A three-day ticket is $10 for adults or $4 for children or students.

Volunteers needed to help at Indian festival

Indian Cultural Festival

The fourth annual Indian Cultural Festival will be on the campus of Columbus College Oct. 8, 9 and 10. To make the event successful, volunteers are needed.

Last year, more than 15,000 people attended the three-day festival and learned about the history and customs of the first residents of the Chattahoochee Valley.

The event is planned, organized, and staffed entirely by volunteers. If you or a member of your organization can volunteer at least two hours on one or more of the festival dates, call 324-7440.

Admission to the festival is free for volunteers on the day they are scheduled to work.

10th grader's poetry appears in anthology

National Library of Poetry

A Shaw High School 10th grader was recently published in a national anthology of poetry.

Alice K. Myrick, the 15-year-old daughter of Carol and Chief Warrant Officer 2 Glen Myrick, (a heavy mobile mechanic with the maintenance division of the Directorate of Logistics), had a poem published in "Distinguished Poets of America," a treasury of today's poetry compiled by the National Library of Poetry.

The poem, titled "First Sight," is about a baby's first view of the world, Myrick said. Myrick has been writing for eight years and says her favorite subjects and ideas are "always straight from the heart."

Myrick

The National Library of Poetry seeks to discover and encourage poets like Myrick by sponsoring contests that are open to the public and by publishing poems in widely distributed hardback volumes.

Poets interested in publication can send one original poem 20 lines or less, any subject or style, to the National Library of Poetry, 11419 Cronridge Drive No. 10, P.O. Box 704NR, Owings Mills, Md. 21117.

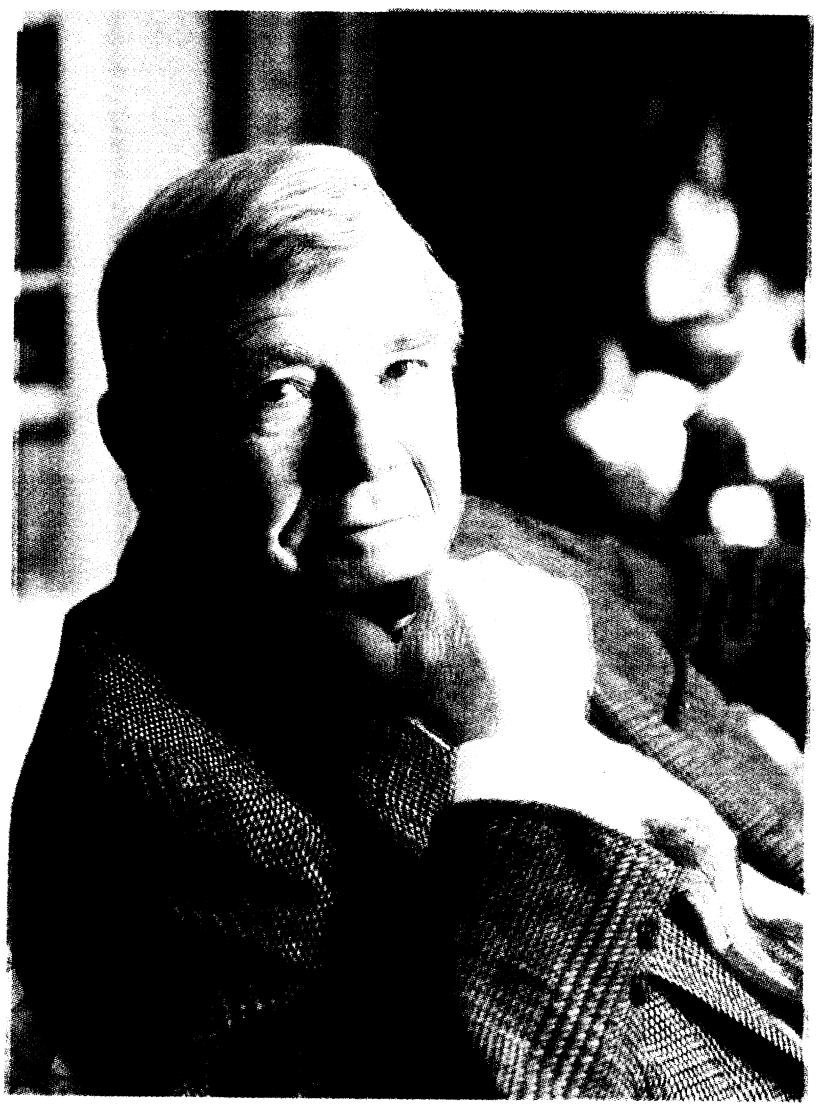
Your Guide to Prime-Time TV: Cable and Broadcast Schedules

'Masterpiece Theatre' gets new host



By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

As in life, most things in television that last a long time are bound to undergo some change.

SPOTLIGHT

That's now true of "Masterpiece Theatre," which has been an esteemed, much-honored staple of the PBS Sunday-night lineup since the 1970s. For the bulk of its run to date, a reliable element of the program was host Alistair Cooke, whose succinct and erudite introductions and closings became familiar trademarks, as well as targets of affectionate spoofing by other shows ranging from "Saturday Night Live" to "Sesame Street."

With Cooke's self-initiated retirement from the series last fall, the challenging hunt for a suitable replacement began; after much speculation and curiosity, the producers finally decided on Russell Baker, the Pulitzer Prize-winning author, humorist and newspaper columnist. He makes his "Masterpiece Theatre" debut Sunday as the anthology launches its 23rd season with "Selected Exits," an adaptation of the memoirs of the late Welsh writer and television personality Gwyn Thomas, who is portrayed in the drama by Academy Award winner Anthony Hopkins.

New "Masterpiece Theatre" host Russell Baker.

Recalling the steps that led to the selection of Baker, "Masterpiece" executive producer Rebecca Eaton said, "We originally had approached him around Labor Day last year. When we made up our master list of candidates, we thought (pursuing Baker) sounded like a very good idea ... but his response was, 'Only a fool or a suicidal maniac would choose to follow Alistair Cooke.' He said he would be interested in following the person who followed Alistair Cooke, but we could tell a 'No' answer when we heard one. Then, resumes and tapes came flooding in for the next few months. We talked to various other people, but we went back to Baker in early December, because word had come through certain channels that it might be a good idea to try again."

What: 'Masterpiece Theatre'
When: Sunday, 10 p.m. on PBS

According to Eaton, that tip was offered by a former journalistic colleague of Baker. "He knows the family quite well," she said, "and he'd been talking to Russell's daughter. She thought it was a very good idea (to approach him again), and she might have been working on him at the same time she suggested that we go back to him. When we did that, he wanted some information and some time to think about it a bit, (to determine) how much time it would take and if he felt he could still do his other job."

Indeed, Baker will continue to write his "Observer" column for The New York Times while also fulfilling his new "Masterpiece Theatre" duties. "We had other possible choices who looked interesting," Eaton said, "but nobody had quite everything that he had. We were looking ideally for a writer, someone who had something to say, and who also had sort of a television presence and a following in this country. When you line up (Baker's) credentials next to Alistair Cooke's, they're remarkably similar."

Tourism

Ga. makes Southeast top 20

Georgia Department of Industry, Trade and Tourism

With thousands of events each year in the South, making the top 20 seems difficult, if not nearly impossible.

For the months of October, November and December, the Southeast Tourism Society has selected its top 20 events in the Southeast. The following seven Georgia events made the grade:

In Vienna Wednesday through Oct. 9 is the Big Pig Jig. Experience some of the barbecue being prepared by contestants while listening to music by Exile and Maurice Williams.

The 24th Annual Sorghum Festival in Blairsville starts Oct. 8 and continues on weekends through the 24th. Experience fall in the North Georgia mountains, taste the boiled peanuts and see such country contests as syrup sopping and "baccer spittin."

A steam train from Atlanta will take visitors to Toccoa for the Harvest Festival Nov. 7 and 8. Watch a Civil War re-enactment and hear dulcimer players.

The Lighting of the Chateau in Braselton Nov. 26 will feature more than 30,000 lights, Santa Claus, choirs and wagon rides creating a winter wonderland at Georgia's award-winning winery, Chateau Elan.

Christmas at Callanwolde Nov. 30 through Dec. 1 has Atlanta's top interior designers decorating the historic old mansion in grand holiday style.

Topping off the list are two more holiday events. White Columns and Holly in Macon celebrates the holiday season in Southern style. Also take a guided walking tour or a jingle-bell carriage ride.

In Atlanta at the Festival of Trees Dec. 4 to 12, experience the enchanted forest at the Georgia World Congress Center with elves and little forest creatures, along with the Secret Shop, the Gingerbread Village and much more.

To find out more about these and other Georgia events, write to the Georgia Tourism Division at P.O. Box 1776, Atlanta, Ga. 30301-1776, or call (404) 656-3590, Ext. 1903.

SOAP UPDATE

ALL MY CHILDREN: Realizing "Eduardo" was a fake, Giles ordered his demise. A thug dumped him in quicksand. As he sank deeper, Brooke, acting on a hunch after losing contact with him, went to Willow Lake Acres and rescued him. Adam fired Maria when she gave him advice on how to deal with his impotence. After Hayley told Julia that Charlie was all hers, Julia put her arms around him and related the sad story of her life. Charlie, for his part, said he was not interested in her. Wait to see: Brooke makes her choice between Edmund and Tad.

ANOTHER WORLD: After Spencer hinted he had information (which had been supplied by Jake) that could bring Cory down, Rachel met with Carl, and was devastated by what he had to tell her. When Amanda told Paulina about Spencer and Jake's claims, she rushed to Ian, who realized that Jake was using information he stole from the safety deposit box in San Cristobal. When Jake burst in on Ian and Paulina to boast that he had information about Mac, Ryan and the police arrived. Wait to see: Dean makes his most difficult career decision.

AS THE WORLD TURNS: Royce was devastated and Emily chilled by the revelation of Neal's murder. In Montega, Sabrina and Duncan faced a desperate situation. John's return created some mixed feelings for Iva. Franco Visconti greeted Hal and Barbara when they returned home. Roger, Royce's insolent personality, emerged and revealed some horrific childhood experiences to Lucinda and Dr. Spiros. Iva asked Holden to meet with a child psychologist to discuss his relationship with Aaron. Larry assured Susan he wasn't stalling on trying the in vitro fertilization process again; he just didn't want them to rush into it. Wait to see: Royce makes another shocking discovery about his past.

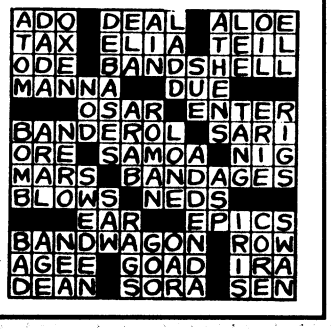
BOLD AND THE BEAUTIFUL: Sheila and Ridge eavesdropped on Brooke and Connor as he confessed to standing up Brooke to keep a dinner date with Karen. But to Sheila's dismay, Brooke embraced him when Connor said they were only friends, and he still intended to marry Brooke when she was ready. Connor walked out on Brooke when she admitted Ridge, not Eric, was Bridget's father. Mike warned Sheila that unless he became head of security, he might tell someone he had seen her switch the vials for Bridget's paternity test. After Jack voiced doubts about her pregnancy, Sally had an expectant employee take the pregnancy test and presented the positive results to him. Wait to see: Macy makes a painful discovery.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES: When Shawn-Douglas said he missed Nikki, Bo went to the Alamain mansion where, unknown to him, Carly had come out of her coma believing she was living in Paris in 1983.

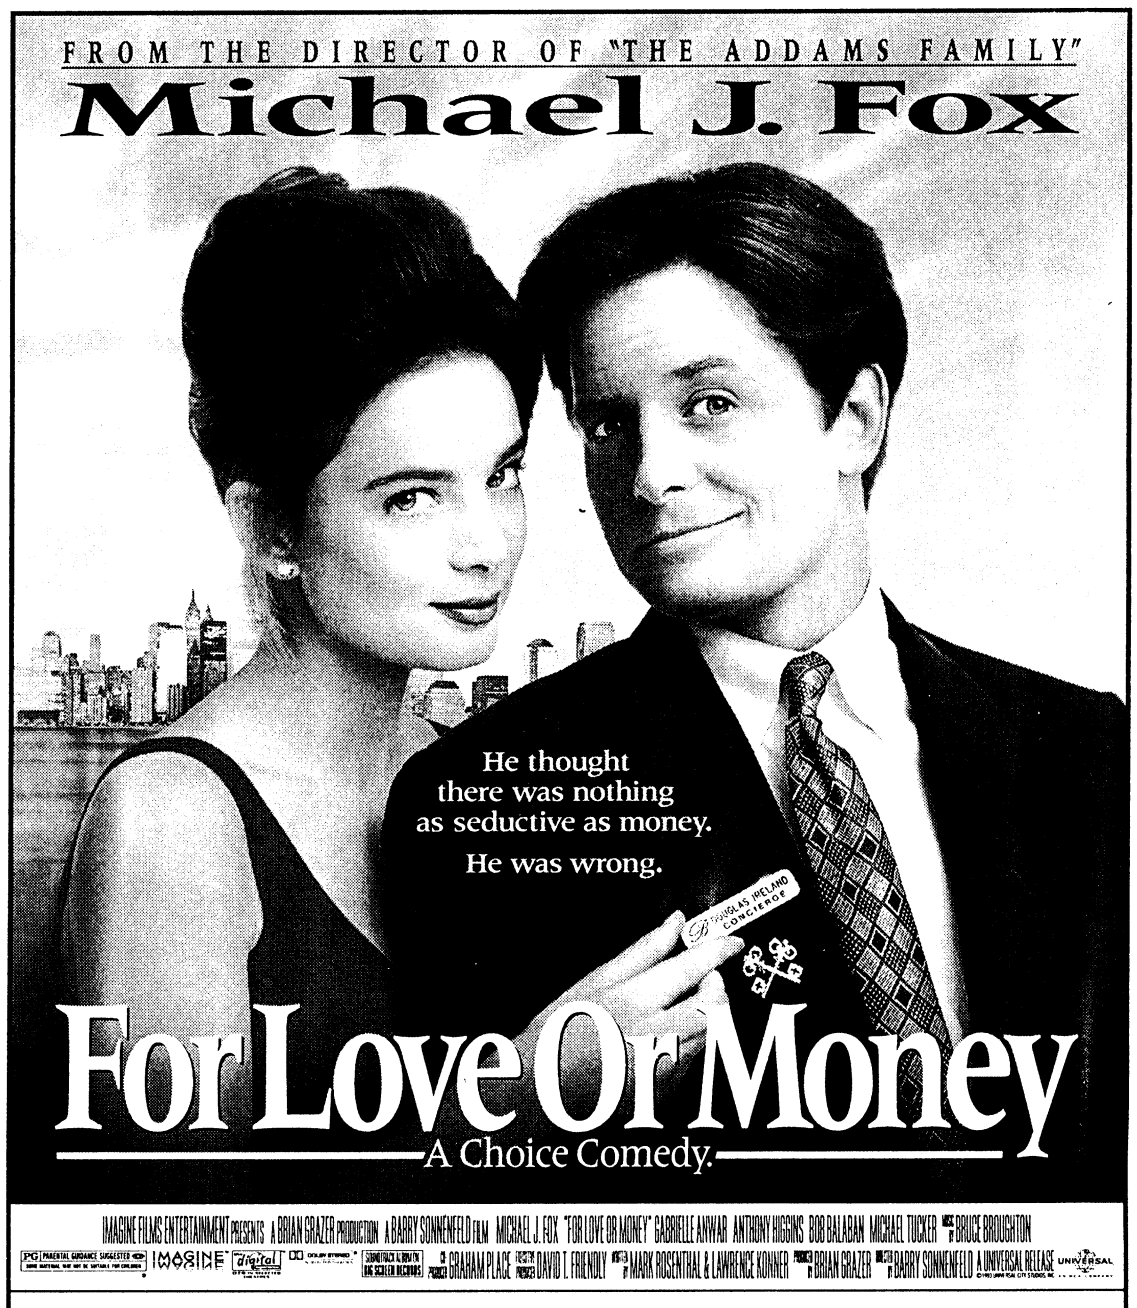
When John agreed with Kristen that there was nobody in the house, Abe threatened him with a perjury charge. Kristen was stunned when Curtis called to say he was bringing Stefano that night. After learning that Marlena was having new blood tests on her unborn baby, Sami went on a destructive eating binge. Wait to see: Lexie is stunned by the way the drug case was turning out.

GENERAL HOSPITAL: Jagger was furious when he found Karen in bed with Sonny. Before Ryan could plead for mercy, Audrey made her statement in court. Meanwhile, Mac, Sean and Felicia had a good lead to proof that Ryan was also the one who killed Jessica.

Damian's stock rose higher as he offered to help ELQ with government contracts. Wait to see: The clue to Ryan's "guilt" in Jessica's murder may backfire.



GUIDING LIGHT: Harley and Mallet were married and left for a honeymoon in the Florida Keys. Just as Fletcher arrived in the village where Alexandra had been living, her spiritual teacher told her it was time to go home. Frank and Nadine were surprised to learn Buzz had another daughter, while Lucy was surprised to learn about her father's first family, and rushed out. Alan Michael was surprised to learn Lucy got a job working for Jenna at WSPR, a gesture that earned Jenna a kiss from a grateful Buzz. Alexandra decided to surprise her friends and family in Springfield and was shocked at what she found when she returned to the Spaulding mansion. Wait to see: Alexandra's serenity is put to the test as she tries to put the pieces together.



LOVING: Casey, Ally, Steffi and Cooper were stranded at PINS during a violent storm. When they had an accident with the car, Alex and Dinah Lee took shelter in a nearby cave where she was surprised to learn he had once been married to Ava. Meanwhile, Shana went into premature labor, and Tess braved the stormy conditions to drive her to the hospital. The baby's birth was delayed. At Heather's birthday party, J.J.'s dog ran off with Clay pursuing him into the cave where Alex and Dinah Lee were sheltering. Wait to see: Ava's emotions go into overtime confusion as she tries to deal with her current feelings for Jeremy.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE: Bo was devastated when his attempt to propose to Nora was cut short by her statement that she might have caused Sarah's death. Asa agreed to a deal where he would invest in Alex's nightclub. Cain and Angela decided they would concoct a con and then leave town together. Dorian was sure she was making Emily believe Sloan was sexually harassing her. Alex learned Cain and Angela signed an IOU in her name for $10,000 in a high-stakes poker game. Wait to see: Luna reacts to the presence of Bobby's ghost.

YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS: John assured Jill that William will have an equal financial share with his other children. Jack was delighted when Brad resigned. Brad reminded him that he held a large portion of Newman stock and was co-trustee for Victor's children. Douglas called Lauren to bring a wardrobe to the apartment for one of Victor's friends. Later, Victor and Hope locked themselves in his bedroom when Douglas arrived to do the grand tour of the place. Nikki was puzzled when Cole drew back from her embrace. Wait to see: Paul realizes he has to deal with his feelings for Cricket.

HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A cycle begins this week that favors pleasure interests. Extra incentive puts you a step ahead of the competition in business now. Proceed toward your goals.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Important domestic moves are on tap for you in the coming weeks. This week accents travel, relationships with children, leisure interests and romance. You'll have to say no to a gift with strings attached.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Upcoming day trips and weekend jaunts will be fun. The week finds you cleaning house and making important domestic changes. The buying and selling of property are favored now. Accent family this weekend.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Creative interests and collaborative efforts are highlighted this week. It's a good week for making important phone calls and for applying yourself to mental work. Signals may be unclear where romance is concerned now.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) An increase in self-confidence marks the coming weeks. This week's money-making efforts will prove successful. Don't place too much stock in an office flirtation. This weekend is a good time for shopping and reaching financial agreements.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) You may soon begin a research project. Go after what you want without coming on too strongly this week. Don't let nervousness about a romantic situation interfere with your concentration at work.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You'll be quite busy socially in the coming weeks. Business talks are confidential this week. Deal with unfinished tasks. Discussions with higher-ups will prove ultimately successful. Travelers should avoid spending money at tourists' traps this weekend.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Recognition and business progress are forthcoming in the coming weeks. You'll be making plans now to give a party and also to visit friends at a distance. You may have to say no to someone's request for financial assistance this week.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) A vacation or a weekend trip will highlight the coming weeks. Initiative will bring you business gains this week. Money talks are productive. A business project on the back burner gains new life. Couples may have a difference about a shopping matter.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) You'll soon be making an important investment decision. Partners are on the same wave length now, but a co-worker is touchy. Distractions may interfere with concentration on the job, and you may also be disappointed in a co-worker's performance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) Partnership interests are highlighted in the coming weeks. Guard against extravagance and look for ways to build up your savings. Joint financial moves are best. You should sidestep a clandestine romantic involvement this weekend.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20) The coming weeks look very promising for your career interests. An awkward situation could arise now with either a friend or family member. Romance, though, is happily highlighted.

Symphony season opens

Handel, Tchaikovsky, Bartok music to be featured with Chilean violist

Columbus Symphony Orchestra

The Columbus Symphony Orchestra will open its 1993-1994 season with a Masterpiece Concert under Maestro George Del Gobbo's direction Oct. 9 at 8 p.m. in the Three Arts Theatre.

The program will include Handel's Water Music in D, Bartok's Viola Concerto featuring guest soloist Roberto Diaz and Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 5.

Diaz's "exceptional mastery of his instrument, his talent for performance ... put him in the forefront of the young musicians in his field. "

Mstislav Rostropovich — A Pre-concert Discussion will be given by Del Gobbo in the Three Arts Theatre at 7 p.m.

This concert is sponsored by AFLAC with additional funding provided by the Georgia Council for the Arts.

Principal violist of the National Symphony Orchestra, Diaz has won numerous prizes including first prize at the Washington International Competition, a prize at the 1989 Munich International Viola Competition, and a prize at the 1991 Nuremberg International Viola Competition.

He has been heard in Europe, the United States, Central and South America, in recital and as soloist.

Diaz has played at the Lincoln Center's Mostly Mozart Festival as well as Marlboro, Newport and many other festivals throughout the United States.

Diaz began music studies at the Chilean Conservatory of Music and continued at the Georgia Academy of Music where he studied both violin and viola with his father, Manuel Diaz.

The concert will begin with Suite II of Handel's Water Music. Diaz will perform Bartok's Viola Concerto, then the concert will close with Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 5.

Tickets range from $11.50 to $17.50 for adults and $5 to $9 for students and are available at the CSO office located in the lower level of the Barnett Bank on First Avenue or at the Three Arts Theatre the day of the performance.

Special discounts are available for groups of 10 or more. You may also purchase tickets over the phone at 323-5059.

UPCOMING EVENTS

Park concert — The Columbus Symphony Orchestra will conduct its annual "Pops in the Park" concert Oct. 12 at 7:30 p.m. in the orchestra shell at Weracoba Park. In case of rain, the performance will be at the Three Arts Theatre at 8 p.m. The program will feature Haymon Pops Hoedown and Gliere Russian Sailor's Dance, as well as music by Dvorak and Borodin. This event is free and open to the public. For further information, call 323-5059.

Clogging — Franklin D. Roosevelt State Park invites the public to enjoy an evening of clogging on top of Pine Mountain.

The Southern Express Cloggers from LaGrange, Ga., will be presented at the stone amphitheater next to the park's information center on Highway 190 East from 8 to 9 p.m. Oct. 23.

All activities are open to the public at no cost other than the park pass fee of $2 per vehicle. For more information, call Sallie B. Lewis at (706) 663-4858.

Fifties dance — A Back to the '50s Mountain Record-Hop Dance will be at Franklin D. Roosevelt State Park, Visitor Information Center's Amphitheater Oct. 16 from 7 to 10 p.m.

Doc Roger and his assistant Rock Dodger are featured as disc jockeys. There will be prizes, dancing and Trivial Pursuit. Special prizes will be awarded to the best "Back to the '50s" attire.

All activities are open to the public at no cost other than the park pass fee of $2 per vehicle. For more information, call Sallie B. Lewis at (706) 663-4858.

Country music — Patty and Paula, country music singers and twin sisters from Carrollton, Ga., will be at Franklin D. Roosevelt State Park Oct. 9 from 8 to 9:30 p.m. at the stone amphitheater next to the park's Information Center on Highway 190 East. Patty's and Paula's singing career has taken them many places, including auditions for the Nashville Network and recording for three original songs.

Wayne Foster, the park's enforcement ranger, will also perform.

All activities are open to the public at no cost other than the park pass fee of $2 per vehicle. For more information, call Sallie B. Lewis at (706) 663-4858.

State park fun — Franklin D. Roosevelt State Park invites all to enjoy an evening of fun for the entire family Saturday.

Horse-drawn carriage rides will be available from 4:30 to 7:30 p.m. for the price of $2 per adult and $1 per child under 12.

A campfire and slide presentation of the park will begin at 8 p.m. A hayride will start at 8:30 p.m. at the Trading Post.

The campfire, slide presentation and hay rides are free to the public. A park pass fee of $2 is charged per vehicle. For more information, call Sallie B. Lewis at (706) 663-4858.

Columbus Day Jam — The Columbus Day Uptown Jam will be presented by the Uptown Business Association Oct. 10 from noon to 11 p.m. and Oct. 11 from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m.

Advanced two-day pass tickets will be available for $7. Regular admission is $5 per day for adults at the gate, and children under 12 are admitted free.

More than 40 acts on four stages will be presented.

The festivities will take place in Uptown Columbus from Broadway to the river. For more information, call 571-6057 or 322-1613.

Dance — The Gallops Center in Columbus will be hosting a dance Thursday. Doors will open at 6:30 p.m. and the dance will be from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. The "big band sound" will be performed by a new band featuring George Corradino. Cost is $2.

Fair — The Andersonville Historic Fair, in Andersonville, Ga., will be 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

There will be Civil War battle re-enactments, a parade led by "Gen. Robert E. Lee" and "Ulysses S. Grant" and more.

For more information, contact Peggy Sheppard, Andersonville Guild, P.O. Box 6, Andersonville, Ga. 31711, (912) 924-2588. Admission is $3 for adults and $1 for children.

For more information, contact Ted Saunders at Box 522, Mary Esther, Fla. 32569, (904) 243-5290.

Fall brings hikers to park

Georgia State Parks

Experience the natural beauty of autumn in Georgia with a Backcountry Weekend Adventure. The Georgia Department of Natural Resources has just released the 1993 schedule announcing six backpacking trips at as many state parks this October and November.

These two-day adventures promise the outdoor enthusiast an experience, hiking through some of the most beautiful terrain in the state.

If you have been looking for a way to enjoy the outdoors and explore Georgia's landscape, hike with a park naturalist, a group of new friends to share the experience, and actually "hit the trail" for a weekend.

The trips are $15 per person and open to anyone 8 years of age and above including couples, singles and families.

The Backcountry Weekend Adventures begin at Amicalola Falls State Park this weekend and take place through Nov. 6 and 7.

The trips range in length from five to nine-mile roundtrip hikes so fitness may be a factor for deciding which trip is right for you.

Park staff will accompany the group on each trip. There is an 18-person limit per trip and participants must supply their own equipment, food and supplies.

Each adventure has an equally exciting schedule. The groups will meet at the park offices at 10:30 a.m. Saturday for a short summary of the trip and an equipment check.

The rest of the day will be spent hiking the trails and learning about the natural and cultural history of the region. Lunch will be eaten on the hike and breaks will be taken as necessary.

Upon arrival at the campsite, campers will pitch their own tents and prepare for an evening around the campfire — complete with storytelling and marshmallow roasting.

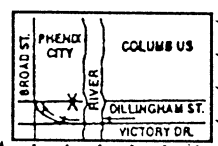
After a Sunday morning breakfast, the group will head back toward the park and reach "civilization" around 3 p.m. Reservations for each trip will be made on a first-come basis. Call (706) 878-1590 to register.

The 1993 Backcountry Weekend Adventure schedule is as follows:

Amicalola Falls State Park, Saturday and Sunday — Located Northwest of Dawsonville, a 726-foot cascading waterfall is the star of the show on this nine-mile hike.

Vogel State Park, Oct. 9 to 10 — Witness the many species of wildlife that inhabit this naturally landscaped mountain cove. This trip, requires five miles of hiking each day.

Cloudland Canyon State Park, Oct. 16 to 17 — This hike is six miles through one of Georgia's most beautiful natural resources.



Fort Mountain State Park, Oct. 23 to 24 — Spend a weekend of mountaintop hiking on this eight-mile trek, rated "moderate" in difficulty.

Located east of Chatsworth, Fort Mountain's fall foliage is some of the most spectacular in the state.

Black Rock Mountain State Park, Oct. 23 to 24 — Georgia's own Mount Everest, Black Rock Mountain is the highest state park in Georgia with an elevation of 3,640 feet. Located just north of Clayton, Black Rock is known for its cool evenings. Bring a camera and don't forget a sweater. This trail is 6.2 miles long.

Unicoi State Park, Nov. 6 to 7 — This five-mile hike also includes a clinic where participants will learn the fundamentals of camping. Unicoi is located just north of Helen, Ga.

Symphony women to sponsor event

Columbus Symphony Women's Association

The Elms, a stately 1844 era classic mansion, will be the scene of the 1993 Symphony Designer House. The Columbus Symphony Women's Association will sponsor the event.

The Elms, loaned to the Columbus Symphony Women's Association by Historic Columbus Foundation, has undergone a metamorphosis similar to that of the cocoon to butterfly. Each room or area has been matched with a talented designer and burnished to a memorable glow. The grounds surrounding this 1844 era house have been beautifully landscaped.

Chairwoman Lois Cohen, along with the CSWA, said they wish to thank the following designers and landscaper for many hours of work and their commitment to this project and the Columbus Symphony:

Nancy Starr Abernathy, Bobby Beal and Forrest Allen, Jan Buracker and Sally Wilder, John Cargill, Jack Collins and Bill Huff, Judy Dykes, Janet Gardner Kemp, Mary Pat King and Virginia Calhoun, Ashley Holt, Melissa Nagem assisted by Becky Mirabella and Teresa Harris, Lanier Oxford, Betty Roberts, Debbie Rose, Meg Russell and Virginia Bonner, Dale Snyder and Jane Carr. The landscaper is Callaway Gardens, which will oversee the transformation with the help of local volunteers. The butterfly motif of the front garden will be highlighted.

The Designer House, located at 1846 Buena Vista Road, Columbus, will be open daily from Oct. 10 through 31, Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.; Sunday, noon to 4 p.m.. Gala events are planned.

A black tie preview party will celebrate the rejuvenated Elms Oct. 8.

Creations of the Chattahoochee Valley Culinary Association chapter of the American Culinary Federation will be showcased. Guests can take a presentation preview tour of the Elms and dance under the tents to the music of the Good Times Band. Tickets are $75, available at 323-5059.

Dates and prices for these special events are available at 323-5059 or 322-5753.

The Elms Cafe will be open for luncheon. Three local restaurants and caterers will supply the food.

Hours of operation are as follows: Monday through Saturday, 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m.; Sunday, noon to 2 p.m.; Oct. 14, 5 to 7 p.m. — dessert and drinks only. Featured will be: Alexander's — Oct. 10 to 16; Butler's Pantry — Oct. 17 to 23; Twelfth Street Deli and Catering — Oct. 24 to 31.

Uniquely matted antique prints, framed and unframed, will enliven the walls of the gallery.

A boutique will also be open.

Items purchased especially for the Designer House Shop will be displayed. Artwork for children's rooms, jewelry, decorative art, handpainted rugs and furniture, and prints will be available.

Tickets are available in advance for $8 and $10 at the door. Call 323-5059 for tickets and information.

Proceeds benefit the Columbus Symphony Orchestra.

Halloween to haunt Jekyll Island

The Jekyll Island Authority

JEKYLL ISLAND, Ga. — Gather the goblins and head to Jekyll Island's "Third Annual Historic Halloween Haunts" Oct. 30.

Parents and children ages 12 and under can enjoy a safe and fun environment from 6 to 8 p.m. in the Historic District.

Costumed greeters with treats will meet trick-or-treaters at stops in the Historic District including the shops on Pier Road.

This family activity begins at Indian Mound Cottage on North Riverview Drive with parking available across the street at The Wharf Restaurant parking lot.

Children are encouraged to wear costumes.

The Halloween fun will include free hay rides and a costume contest.

A storyteller will fascinate listeners from 8 to 9 p.m. Though the Historic District is lighted, flashlights are recommended.

For more information on Jekyll Island's "Historic Halloween Haunts," call the Jekyll Island Recreation Department at (912) 635-2232.

Museum sets classes

The Columbus Museum

Kick-off the fall season by taking an interesting and instructive class at the Columbus Museum. The full roster of art classes and workshops is designed to interest people of almost every age and skill level.

Class registrations are accepted on a first-come, first-served basis until the week prior to the beginning of the class or until maximum enrollment is reached. As classes are limited in size, early registration is suggested.

For more information, call Marjorie Drury in the Museum's Education Department at 649-0713.

For Children

Learning To See — Grades 4 to 6, Tuesdays; Sept. 28 to Nov. 2, 3:45 to 5 p.m. Teacher: Jill Philips. Museum members $25; nonmembers $30

Young artists can take this basic drawing course, which focuses on value, contour, perspective and composition as well as the art elements of line and color. Students provide their own supplies, including 11" x 14" drawing pads, pencils and kneaded erasers.

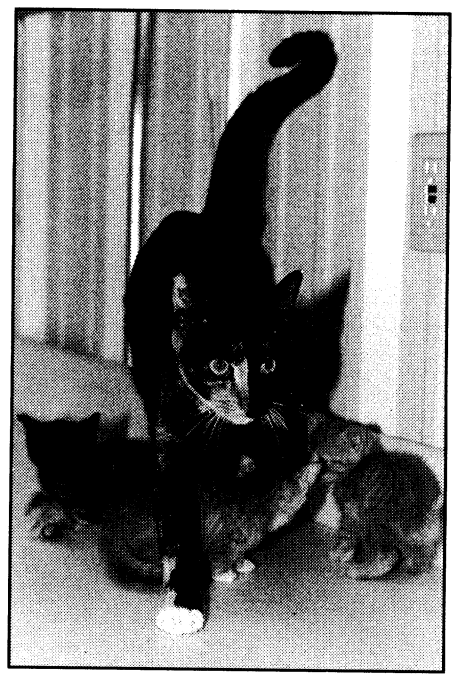
Classes for adults

Archaeology — Saturday, Oct. 16, 23 and 30; 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Teacher: Frank Schnell, museum archaeologist. Museum members $80; nonmembers $85.

Study the prehistoric past of our lower Chattahoochee River Valley region with museum archaeologist Frank Schnell through slide lectures and site investigation of the Singer-Moye archeological site in Lumpkin. Students provide lunches and proper clothing: boots, hat and work gloves. Fee includes transportation. Teachers may receive staff development credit for this course.

Environmental photography workshop — Oct. 10, 24, and 31; 1 to 5 p.m. Teacher: Kenny Gray, museum members $65; nonmembers $70

First Sunday: Take a tour of the exhibition Arnold Newman's Americans with fine-art photographer Kenny Gray as he explains the characteristics of environmental portraits.



Second Sunday: Use Polaroid positive-negative film to produce an environmental photographic portrait of your subject. Work with instructor in- and around the museum.

Third Sunday: Make an exhibition-quality black-and-white enlargement in a supervised darkroom session.

Polaroid camera and lighting equipment will be furnished. Class size limited so sign up today. Call the education department for more information.

PET OF THE WEEK

This calico cat and her four daughters are looking for homes. The kittens are approximately 6 weeks old.

For more information, contact the Veterinary Services Office in Building 265 at 545-1127. Hours of operation are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:30 am. and 12:45 to 3 p.m. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

If you have lost a pet, check the stray impoundment facility in Building 283.

Stray pets are given three working days to be claimed from the time they are picked up by animal control personnel.

If the pets are not claimed, they become government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies tags are the only way Veterinary Services can contact the owner of a lost pet. Pet owners are required to register their pets and update their records when changes occur.

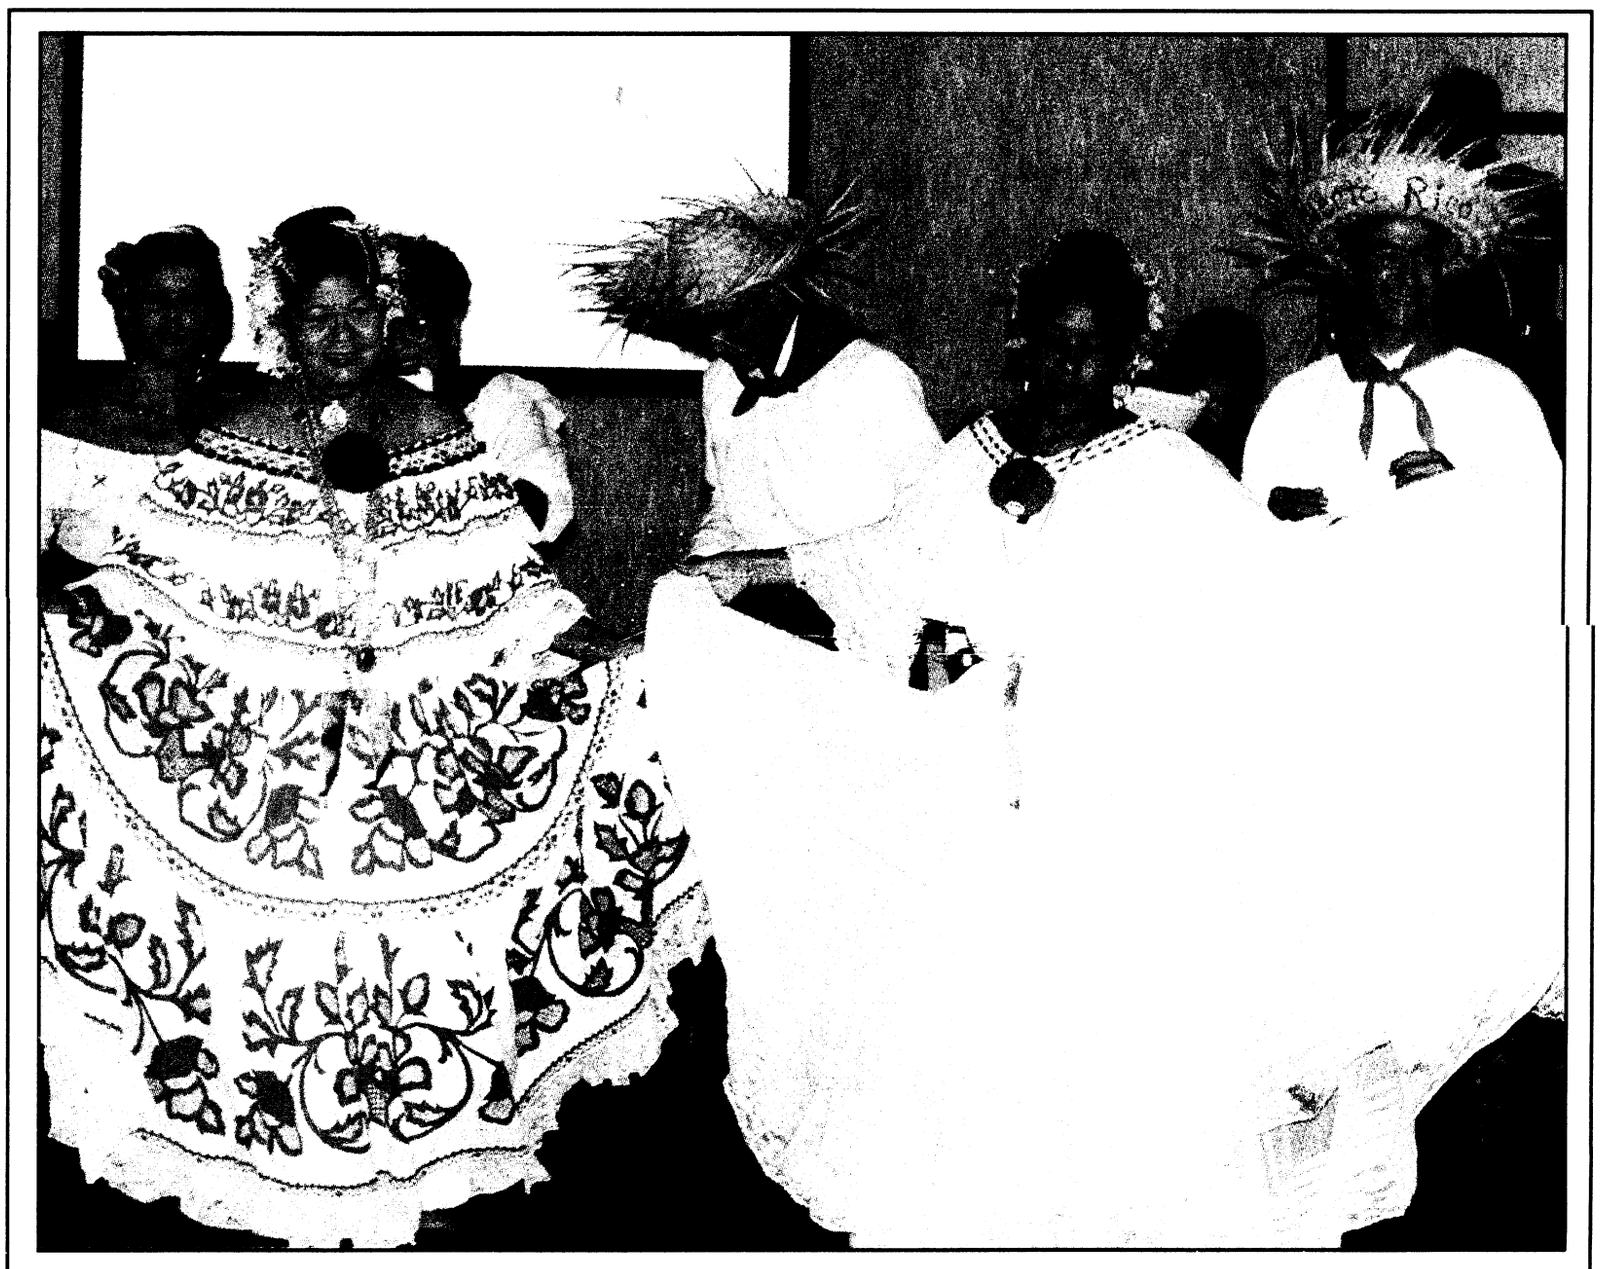
Ft. Benning wins TCOE

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning, for the second year in a row, is a first-place winner in the extra-large installation category of Training and Doctrine Command's Communities of Excellence competition .

TRADOC announced the winners Wednesday at the Commander's Conference.

Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White accepted the plaque for the installation award, presented by TRADOC Commander Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr. White also received certificates of achievement on behalf of Fort Benning directorates that won awards in their categories.



Fort Benning directorates winning first place are:

- Adjutant General (military personnel)
- Civilian Personnel and Equal Employment Opportunity
- Engineering Services
- Morale, Welfare and Recreation
- Public Affairs
- Resource Management
- USAIC Chaplain's Office

"Winning first place in seven out of 14 evaluation categories was no small feat," said Sarah McLaney, Fort Benning's COE coordinator.

"We did this as a team," McLaney said. "I want to thank everyone in the community for their hard work and support. Now, let's go for the Commander-in-Chief Award and the title that goes with it, 'The best community of excellence in the world.' "

Army-level COE on-site evaluations are tentatively scheduled for Feb. 1 through April 8.

Six 75th rangers killed in Somalia

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Six members of the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, were killed Sunday as a result of injuries sustained during a combat operation in Somalia.

Listed as dead were Sgt. James C. Joyce of Denton, Texas; Cpl. James M. Cavaco of Forestdale, Mass.; Spc. Lorenzo M. Ruiz of El Paso, Texas; Spc. James E. Smith of Long Valley, N.J.; Spc. Dominick M. Pilla of Vineland, N.J.; and Pfc. Richard W. Kowalewski of Crucible, Pa., as a result of action against a hostile force near Mogadishu.

As the operation was in progress, two U.S. Army UH-60 Blackhawk helicopters were lost due to ground fire. During this time, ground troops evacuating Somalian detainees came under fire and returned fire.

About 70 rangers surrounded one of the downed helicopters at dusk, forming a perimeter to protect the wounded awaiting medical evacuation, and again, came under fire. A task force that was organized to rescue the downed aircraft came under fire while attempting to reach the crash site.

Elements of the 3rd Battalion were deployed to Somalia in late August to provide a rapid response and greater security to U.N. forces.

Post celebrates Diamond Jubilee

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning began celebrating its Diamond Jubilee anniversary Thursday with a wreath-laying ceremony and the dedication of a historic marker.

Chief of Staff Col. Burnet R. Quick spoke at the 10 a.m. wreath-laying ceremony and 21-gun salute at the grave of Gen. Henry Lewis Benning, for whom the post was named. The ceremony was in Columbus at Linwood Cemetery.

Quick also spoke at the dedication of the marker at Macon Road and Dixon Drive, near the original 1918 site of Camp Benning.

Other anniversary events are planned for Oct. 15 and 16. Events Oct. 15 include a golf tournament beginning at 10 a.m. at the Follow Me Golf Course and a Diamond Jubilee Ball, beginning at 6 p.m. at the Officers' Club.

Events Oct. 16 scheduled from 7 a.m. are:

- 7 a.m. to 2 p.m. — Retiree open house
- 8 a.m. — Three-mile unit run
- 9 a.m. — One-mile founder's walk/run
- 9:30 — Five-mile National Infantry Museum run and biathlon
- 12:30 p.m. — Awards for running events
- 2 p.m. — U.S. Army Drill Team
- 2:15 p.m. — Old Guard Fife and Drum Team

CFC kicks off

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

The Combined Federal Campaign began Oct. 1 to mark the start of the 1993-94 six-week fund-raising effort.

Fort Benning kicked off the campaign Sept. 30 with a gathering of Fort Benning's military leaders at the Follow Me Golf Course club house. Those in attendance listened to keynote addresses given by retired Maj. Gen. Ken Leuer, chief executive officer of the local Goodwill organization, and Bill Thompson, 1993 campaign chairman for the local United Way drive.

Opening remarks were also given by Col. Richard Rutledge, garrison commander, and Brig. Gen. Jack P. Nix, Fort Benning's deputy commanding general.

The dominant theme heard throughout the remarks Sept. 30 was encouragement to increase this year's level of participation.

In 1992, only 30 percent of Fort Benning's civilian work force and 38 percent of its military personnel donated money to the campaign, officials said.

Nix stressed in his remarks that unit and organizational leaders should ensure that time is taken to speak with every individual about the campaign.

"Dollar amounts will take care of themselves if we can increase the percentage of those who participate," he said.

Leuer pointed out during his address to the group that it is not large corporate donations, but "...individual donations, intent and interest that make a difference."

He then emphasized that individuals who choose to donate make a significant difference in the lives of others. Leuer, former Fort Benning commander, punctuated his remarks by asking, "If not you ... who?"

The Combined Federal Campaign is a yearly event that allows individuals to donate money to charitable organizations through a monthly payroll deduction. This year, more than 900 international, national and local agencies are eligible to receive funds through the CFC. A list of these agencies and donation cards are available from unit or organization CFC project officers.

Deployment

498th headed for Haiti

By David Greer
36th Engineer Group

Twelve soldiers from the 498th Medical Company (Air Ambulance) will depart Lawson Army Airfield Sunday at 8:15 a.m. en route to Haiti to support U.N. operations by providing medical air evacuation of U.N. personnel.

The length of the deployment has not been determined, according to Capt. Phillip Pemberton, 498th operations officer.

Maj. James Bobbitt, the unit's commander, will accompany the soldiers to Haiti to set up operations and will then return.

The soldiers are expected to arrive in Haiti Monday. They will be operating under the auspices of the United Nations and at the request of the Haitian government.

The troops "... are not going to be in combat mode," a Pentagon spokeswoman said, but "... they will be in a position to defend themselves."

The complete contingent of U.S. troops will also include engineers, military trainers, civil affairs experts and a headquarters support element.

The mission fulfills a technical assistance commitment under U.N. Resolution 867, following the Governor's Island agreement signed in July by Haitian President Jean-Bertrand Aristide and Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras, the commander-in-chief of the country's military.

VIPs to visit post

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Gay Sullivan, wife of Army Chief of Staff Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan, and Sylvia Kidd, wife of Sgt. Maj. of the Army Richard A. Kidd, will be at Fort Benning today.

The women are scheduled to visit the 36th Engineer Group Family Unit Network Center. They will also attend a luncheon at the Fort Benning Officers' Club.

Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr., commander of Training and Doctrine Command, and Gen. Jimmie D. Ross, commander of the Army Materiel Command in Alexandria, Va., will also be on post today. They will co-chair a meeting on the Combat Systems Program Review.

Should pets be banned from Fort Benning?

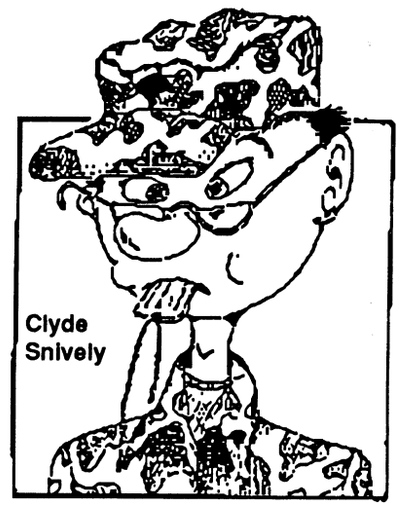
Spc. Alanson R. Willett, Company C, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment — "No. Some people's pets are like their family. If I had a dog when I came here, I wouldn't want to give it up."

1st Lt. Lance Cutsforth, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "I think pets should be allowed as long as they are well cared for and controlled."

Viola Arnold, family member — "No, pets should not be banned, but they should be kept on a leash when they are outside."

Spc. Gene DeWitt, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment — "I don't live on post but, I have a pet and I wouldn't like it if I was told I couldn't have it."

Spc. Ron F. Farver, Company C, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment — "I think pets help with people's morale. Dogs and cats would be a problem in the barracks, but some pets are all right if they are easy to take care of ... like snakes."



Pvt. 2 Robert L. Painter Jr., Company B, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment — "Pets should be allowed. They give people a sense of home and security."

Pets need responsible owners

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

People who don't care for their pets shouldn't be allowed to keep them

COMMENTARY

Some pets shouldn't be allowed humans. It's not that pets shouldn't have someone to love them, care for them and feed them; it's just that some humans are so irresponsible that they're more trouble than they're worth.

Oh sure, pets think it's neat to stay out all night, establishing their territory in other pets' yards, knocking over trash cans and strewing the garbage everywhere.

They think it's great to be able to howl at the moon at midnight, bark at other strays at 2 a.m. and yelp at the dew forming on the grass at 4 a.m.

After all, they have their image to live up to, "Hey man, I'm cool, my humans let me stay out all night, go where I want to go, do what I want to do."

But deep down inside, these pets are wondering if their humans love them as much as the humans who keep their pets either inside or in a fenced-in area. Sure it's boss to have all that freedom, but it's also nice to know you'll be fed when you're hungry, brought in when it's raining or cold and cared for when you're sick.

It's good to know you don't have to be on your own at night proving how macho you are to dogs or cats bigger than you, that you don't have to try and catch some car and be run over in the process, or even defend the neighborhood against raccoons, coyotes and other wildlife.

These can be major concerns for pets; and, if left to roam too frequently, synapses in their little brains tend to misfire and their personalities change from loving pet to "Jo-Jo, King of the Road."

That's when they start to bite people, get into fights with other pets and usually end up in the pound with a death sentence hanging over their mangy heads.

It means that unless another human comes by, falls in love with them and gets them out on parole, their days on this Earth are numbered — in single digits.

At some installations when a person gets a dog, he or she signs an agreement to provide a fenced-in area within a week of bringing the pet home.

And while policies such as these don't entirely eliminate the problem of strays, it does cut down on the number of dogs running loose.

Of course, this can put a burden on a young soldier's pocket book, fencing not being cheap, but that will help the soldier decide just how badly he or she wants a dog.

Stray cats are a problem too, but no fence will keep them penned up. Cats need to be kept in houses, and no, that's not being cruel.

The ultimate solution, of course, would be to just ban pets, period. Oh, maybe birds and reptiles might be allowed, but no four-legged, fuzzy ones.

This would certainly make landlords downtown happy since there would be a mass exodus from post; but, if people can't be responsible for their pets, why should they allowed to keep them?

Bottom line. Pets need humans. But they need responsible humans — humans who know where their pets are at 10 p.m. and at all other times.

Dogs: More than just pets

COMMENTARY

My mother has always wanted grandchildren.

But she was not as ecstatic as I thought she would be when I called her in July to tell her that my husband and I were the proud new parents of a bouncing baby — dog.

She has come around, though, and she tells me that she now proudly displays the wallet-size photo I sent her of our prize mutt — her "grandbaby" — to anyone she can corner.

You might think this is going overboard a little; but, to me, my dog is my child.

When my most esteemed co-worker told us about her 3-year-old daughter writing her name, I told her about my 3 1/2-month-old pup learning to sit (on command).

When the mothers in the office got onto the subject one day of how difficult parenting can be, I chimed in with how hard it is to discipline such a cute little puppy.

It may sound ridiculous, but think about it:

Potty training — house breaking.

Cutting school — escaping from the backyard.

Many of the challenges faced by parents are also faced by dog owners.

Granted, it's not exactly the same thing. I realize that. But having a dog, like having a child, does require a lot of commitment.

Raising a dog, like raising a child, is a huge responsibility. It takes time, work, money and patience. And, like parenting, owning a dog should be a life-long commitment.

It's not always a bed of roses, though. After all, most people like children, but not everyone likes dogs.

To many people, dogs are big, hairy, slobbery things that leave little unwelcome presents on their lawns.

Even as a dog owner, I can understand the difficulty here. I have a whole backyard full of "dog presents," and the last thing I need is more, that's for sure.

And if I get steamed when I find these gifts from secret admirers on my lawn, I can only imagine how people who don't even like dogs feel.

To avoid adding to this problem, my husband and I carry those pesky plastic Post Exchange bags — let it not be said MY dog leaves anyone any unwelcome gifts. It's our version of diaper-changing.

I have to admit though, that I am beginning to have those moments of doubt that must trouble every parent.

Our once lovable little puppy has hit the canine equivalent of "the terrible twos."

All he wants to do is play. I can't even sit down on the couch for a minute without him coming over to bother me until I get up and throw a ball for him.

He chews on everything in sight — including us.

Lately, instead of noticing his big brown puppy eyes, I'm noticing his big muddy pawprints on the carpet.

But, I realize, muddy carpets and chewed-up heirlooms are all part of being a dog parent.

No matter what he does, however, our dog is not one who will find himself on "doggy death row." (Canine college though, for sure.)

After all, do parents put their teen-agers up for adoption because they don't clean their rooms?

Help control the pet population

By Joseph Beuerlein
Tripler Army Medical Center, Hawaii

Each year thousands of unwanted puppies and kittens find themselves abandoned, left to fend for themselves. The odds are against them. Life-threatening diseases, other animals, motor vehicles and starvation make up the gauntlet that faces them. Most do not survive but die slow, lonely and painful deaths.

As a pet owner, you can directly affect this scenario. Having your dog or cat spayed or neutered offers several benefits. You avoid the many problems associated with a sexually intact pet and your pet will enjoy a healthier and safer life.

Most importantly, your pet will not be contributing to the pet population problem. In addition to controlling unwanted litters, having your pet fixed will prevent several medical problems.

Yet people resist spaying or neutering for various reasons. Some think a female pet "needs" a litter to be complete or to settle down. Other see their pets as income sources, turning average animals into breeding units. These reasons are completely groundless.

Having a litter of puppies or kittens does nothing to calm down or "complete" a pet. All it does is create the problem of finding homes for the young ones. To consider a neutered male dog or cat as not a true male is equally unjustified.

Very few pets are true quality breeding stock. For every great-looking dog or cat you see, there are a hundred superior animals with impeccable pedigrees or performance records. Leave the breeding of animals to experienced professionals.

Once all the benefits of spaying or neutering are examined, there is only one logical choice. Ensure your pet a happier, healthier life. Help to curb the pet population by having your pet spayed or neutered.

Editor's Note: Capt. Beuerlein is with Veterinary Services at Tripler Army Medical Center, Hawaii.

Powell sends farewell

As I prepare to leave the chairmanship and retire from active duty, I want to thank all of you — soldiers, sailors, airmen, Marines, Coast Guardsmen and civilians who support our mission worldwide — for all that you have done in the service of this great nation.

You have brought the armed services together as a warfighting team that has earned respect, trust and affection around the world. By your loyalty, your excellence and your spirit of selfless service, you have made the American people one with their armed forces.

My friend, Gen. (John M.D.) Shalikashvili, will soon be taking over the chairmanship of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. I could be leaving the job in no better hands. I know that you will help him tackle the tasks ahead with energy, absolute integrity and an unshakable commitment to succeed.

The times before you will be challenging, but I know that one thing will never change — that's the pride and professionalism of you, the men and women who serve.

You have made me proud to be one of you. If law and nature would allow me I would serve with you for another 31 years.

It's time, however, for Mrs. Powell and me to bid you a fond farewell. May you and your families enjoy continued success in all that the future brings.

New commander at garrison's helm

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

The former chief of the Office of Infantry Proponency is Fort Benning's new garrison commander.

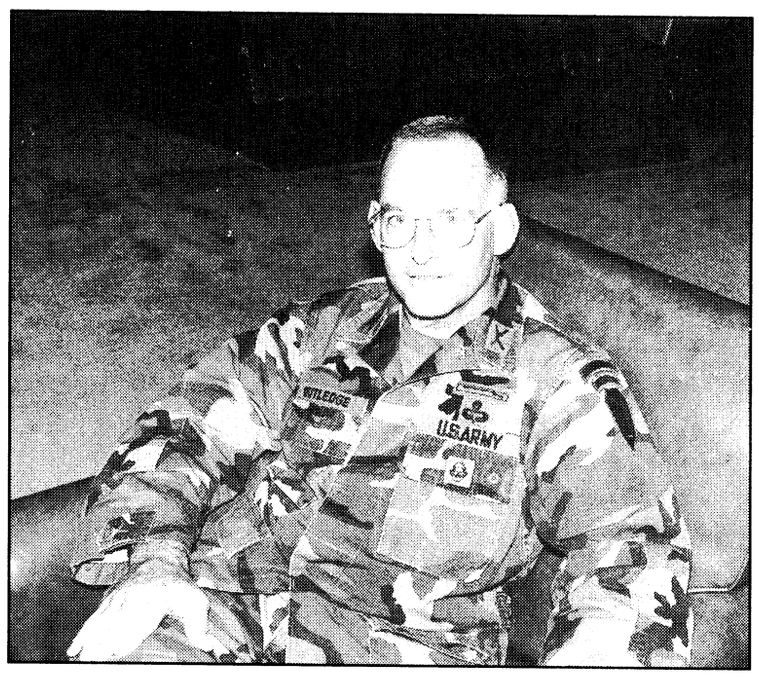
Col. Richard L. Rutledge took the helm Sept. 1.

"The first order of business is to get an education," said Rutledge. "What I mean by that is getting to know the garrison and all the supporting directorates.

"I'm also going to go to an installation management course at Fort Lee, Va., to focus on the skills and techniques that the Army has developed for managing an installation."

Rutledge is a 1992 graduate of the Army War College and has served, along with many other assignments, as a detachment commander of the 5th Special Forces Group at Fort Bragg, N.C.

He has served as a company commander with the 505th Parachute Infantry Regiment, also at Fort Bragg; a tactical officer at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., (his alma mater — Rutledge graduated in 1970); a staff officer in the office of the chief of staff, Department of the Army and as a battalion commander with the 26th Infantry Regiment at Fort Dix, N.J.



"I enjoy working with people, and this (being garrison commander) is certainly a people business," said Rutledge. "I'm looking forward to interfacing with the tri-city community, and getting to know them as our neighbors.

"There are significant challenges though, not because of the garrison, but because of what the Army is going through altogether. As we look at our installation, we can't take anything for granted. We have to change our thinking and be efficient about the way we do business because this is a business.

"What I see as the garrison's mission is to take care of the post — its units, soldiers, family members and all of its workers.

"We take care of quality of life, quality of the workplace, units that are deploying, and again, being a good neighbor to the community around us — each one of those things are so important, I couldn't pick one that was our primary mission.

"My philosophy for command is a power-down philosophy. There are very dedicated military and civilian individuals here who are experts at their jobs.

William Riley Hall

Col. Richard L. Rutledge, garrison commander, took the helm Sept. 1.

"My job is to maintain a climate that provides them with the opportunity to do their absolute best. If I do that, then the garrison will be successful in accomplishing its mission.

"The diverse background I've had will help me in this position. This is a very complicated organization with a multitude of missions.

"My family and I are glad to be here at Fort Benning; this truly is the best post in the Army," Rutledge said. "I'm looking forward to taking part in the continuation of that tradition and in making the necessary changes we need to continue being the best installation."

Personnel Command discontinues drawdown HOT LINE

Army Personnel Command

FORT MONROE, Va. — The Army Personnel Command telephone hot line established to answer questions from soldiers and civilian employees about effects of the drawdown has been discontinued.

There still are other numbers soldiers and civilian employees can call to seek answers that local chains of command cannot provide.

The PERSCOM message announcing the end of the hot line said, "The combination of the hot line along with chain teaching program ... has served their purpose of informing soldiers and DA (Department of the Army) civilians about the drawdown programs."

PERSCOM has a 24-hour line for general questions about drawdown programs.

After duty hours, calls will be recorded and replies will be called back to individuals. The number is DSN 221-7100 or (703) 323-7100.

Enlisted personnel, officers and civilians may call specific numbers during duty hours.

The enlisted number is DSN 221-7792 or 1-800-ALL ARMY. For officers it is DSN 221-7802 or (703) 325-7802. Civilian employees can call DSN 221-1335 or (703) 325-1335.

PET OWNERS must be responsible for animals

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Pets can be a source of great joy and companionship; and, with some 2,000 pets registered on post, it seems Fort Benning residents enjoy the company of animals.

However, according to Sgt. James T. Cyree of Veterinary Services and Community Life Officer Darlene Perry, some post residents are not willing or prepared for the responsibility that comes with pet ownership.

From outright abuse and neglect resulting in the death of pets to allowing pets to become a neighborhood nuisance, violations of the post's pet regulations are occurring all too frequently, both said.

U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulations 40-905 and 210-5 clearly outline the responsibilities of pet owners, Cyree said.

These include:

• Registering dogs and cats within 14 days of arrival on post or upon becoming 90 days of age. When registering, valid proof of rabies vaccination must be presented and the pet owner will be issued a metal rabies tag that must be attached to the collar of the pet as a means for identification.

"There is no excuse for not registering a pet, " Cyree said. "It does not require an appointment and you can come in anytime during our operating hours."

• Pets must be kept indoors or secured outdoors on the owners' premises and must not be allowed to roam outside the confines of the yard or become a nuisance to neighbors. Shelter, such as a portable dog house, is required and pets should not be tied to trees or shrubs.

"A tree or the eaves of a house does not constitute shelter," Cyree said. "I also encourage personnel with dogs to consider putting up a fence around their yard to prevent their animals from roaming free and becoming a nuisance to other residents."

Also, cat owners should refrain from letting their cats roam freely to prevent unwanted pregnancies, the spread of disease and injury that may occur from other animals, he said.

• Animals outside of their yards must be on a leash or kept within voice command. "Voice command means that the animal responds immediately to the owner and returns directly to the owner the first time the animal is called," said Perry. Cyree said that in reality, very few dogs possess the training and discipline to be considered truly under voice command and that he has never seen a cat respond to voice command.

Perry said pet owners are also responsible for any damage to government or private property that their pets cause.

In addition, pet owners are responsible for removing their pet's excrement from not only their own quarters, but from any areas in addition to their quarters.

Furthermore, failure to provide adequate living space and appropriate shelter, food and water daily, abandoning any animal on the reservation or committing any other act, either intentional or from disregard, that causes physical pain, suffering, fright or death to an animal (except for legal hunting) is expressly forbidden.

Perry said that repeated violations of the post pet regulations, particularly cases of abuse and neglect, can result in loss of pet ownership privileges or even eviction from quarters.

"These regulations are enforced," Perry said. "Since the first of this year, there have been 36 pet control violations, five of which resulted in loss of pet ownership privileges and there was one eviction last year."

Fort Benning's reduction in force announced this past summer ended Sunday. There were only eight separations.

The director of Civilian Personnel, Theresa Gunter, attributed the low number to the Voluntary Early Retirement and Voluntary Separation Incentives offered during the year. More than 400 of the installation's employees took advantage of these programs.

The reduction was initiated because of fiscal 1994 budget reduction guidance.

Participants in Monday's Fitness Day activities rev up during the aerobics session.

Aerobics, walking kicks off Fort Benning's

TOTAL FITNESS 2000

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Many of Fort Benning's civilian employees, soldiers and family members spent their lunch hour Monday participating in the Fitness Day activities inaugurating the Total Fitness 2000 program.

More than 120 people revved up their afternoon in a low-intensity aerobics session on York Field while another group headed over to the Stewart Field track for a two-mile walk.

The crowd included fifth-grade classes from Dexter and Wilson schools, soldiers from the 30th Adjutant General Reception Battalion's Fitness Training Unit and civilian employees from different post activities.

The leaders of the aerobics class, Maj. Marcus Alexander and Staff Sgt. Dennis Guaglianone of the U.S. Army Physical Fitness School, got the crowd involved by pulling volunteers up onto the stage to help demonstrate the steps.

One of the Dexter fifth-graders, Laura Paulino, said she really liked the aerobics because it was like dancing.

The cadre of the Fitness Training Unit attended and brought a group of 32 trainees to participate.

"We brought them out to break up their exercise routine and expose them to Fitness 2000," said Sgt. 1st Class Philip Long, the commandant of the unit.

More than 50 employees from the Directorate of Civilian Personnel came out to support the day's activities wearing blue DCP T-shirts.

"Fitness day gave civilian employees an opportunity to become motivated and learn about the importance of physical fitness. DCP employees had 100 percent participation in the fun walk, and everyone seemed to be having a good time," said Theresa V. Gunter, director of Civilian Personnel.

"I was glad to be a part of the event and hope to see additional physical fitness opportunities in the near future," she said.

Directorate of Civilian Personnel employee Kim Parks did the two-mile walk with some friends from her office.

"It was not as bad as I thought it would be," Parks said. "We could do this in a 45-minute lunch."

The Total Fitness 2000 program, put together by the U.S. Army Physical Fitness School, focuses on promoting the overall fitness and health of soldiers, family members, retirees and Department of the Army civilian employees by installing a life-long fitness ethic.

Post Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White said he is very enthusiastic about the Total Fitness 2000 program.

"Physical fitness is what it's all about," he said, "and changing your lifestyle is the road to get there."

"Not only will you live a little longer," White said, "you will improve the quality of life you have while you live."

You too can buy surplus

Defense Reutilization and Marketing

Ever wonder what Department of Defense government surplus sales are all about or how you can become a buyer?

You may have seen stories about surplus property sales on the news recently or seen ads offering to sell information on becoming a buyer of government surplus property for a fee. The fact is that information on government surplus sales is free, and if you're interested in becoming a buyer, it's as easy as dialing a phone.

Although there are several government agencies that sell government property, the Defense Reutilization and Marketing Service is the Department of Defense activity responsible for managing the DoD Surplus Personal Property Sales Program. Personal property is anything other than real estate.

DRMS receives excess personal property from U.S. military units at its Defense Reutilization and Marketing Offices located on military installations around the world.

The property is first looked at for reutilization or reuse within DoD. That redistribution effort saves American taxpayers about $1.5 billion a year.

When property cannot be reused within DoD, it is offered for transfer or donation to other federal agencies and qualified state and local agencies. Any remaining property is declared surplus and is offered for sale to the general public.

All you have to do to get free information on the DRMS sales program is call (800) 222-DRMS. Callers can select from several recorded messages about DoD Surplus Property surplus sales.

In addition, callers may leave their names and addresses and receive a free copy of the brochure, "How To Buy Surplus Personal Property from the Department of Defense." The brochure includes information and the form necessary to register for DRMS national sales and gives addresses and phone numbers of all its field offices, or Defense Reutilization and Marketing Offices. Interested persons can contact a specific DRMO to register for information about its local sales.

What are the requirements to become a buyer? You must be 18 years old and cannot be employed by DRMS, nor can an agent or member of the household of an employee become a buyer.

Buyers who are interested in buying hazardous property must prove that they are environmentally responsible. What kinds of property are available? A variety of things are sold — from typewriters to tents, aircraft to office furniture and clothing to scrap metal.

DRMS does not sell confiscated or seized items (like sports cars, luxury items), most contractor inventory property (property in possession of contractors performing government contracts) or material of primarily military application (such as weapons and items of an offensive, defensive or strategic nature).

Persons looking for an M151 jeep will not find one at DRMS. These jeeps have proven unsafe and unstable when driven at high speeds on paved surfaces.

Department of Transportation and DoD policy requires that these jeeps be crushed after the component parts are remove and sold as scrap.

DRMS sells property through local sales or national sales. Local sales are held at the DRMO either by auction or spot bid. Property may be inspected before the sale. Most DRMOs have regularly scheduled sales and set times.

In addition, some DRMOs have cash and carry sales that offer small quantities of individual items at a fixed price based on the current market value.

National sales are conducted by the National Sales Office in Memphis, Tenn.

The property sold in national sales includes items such as aircraft, ships, hazardous property and property having wide commercial application. National sales methods are sealed bid, national auction and, in limited circumstances, negotiated sale.

The NSO prepares the sales catalogs, administers bid openings, makes awards and concludes contractual agreements. If you are interested in national sales and request to be placed on the bidders list, you will receive sales catalogs. National sales are also listed in the Commerce Business Daily.

Guaranteed payment such as cashiers check or certified check is required. In some cases, credit cards can be used.

DRMS conducts thousands of sales a year in 48 of the 50 United States and in 14 foreign countries. In a typical year, DRMS surplus sales proceeds are about $140 million.

These sales have a wide popular interest and as a result there is a brisk market for information. Just remember you do not have to pay for the information; it's free.

Call 1-800-222-DRMS or contact the local DRMO in your area. Additional questions may be addressed to: Defense Reutilization and Marketing Service Office of Public Affairs, 74 North Washington Battle Creek, Mich. 49017-3092, (616) 961-7015

Questions regarding national sales should be addressed to: Defense Reutilization and Marketing Service National Sales Office ATTN: DRMS-NC 2163 Airways Blvd. Memphis, Tenn. 38114-5297.

Persons interested in Pacific sales can write: DRMS-NP P.O. Box 726 Aiea, Hawaii 96701.

Persons interested in European sales can write: Defense Reutilization and Marketing Service European Region, American Arms Hotel Unit 29263, Box 2000 APO AE 09096.

POST BRIEFS

Self-Help Store to close

In observance of the Columbus Day holiday, the Self-Help Store, Loan Equipment Section, and Venetian Blind Shop will be closed Saturday and will reopen for normal business hours Tuesday.

1994 SDT dates set

The fiscal 1994 self-development testing dates have been set. By-name test schedules and SDT notice pamphlets have been distributed for the October through December test period.

Primary military occupational specialty and skill levels to be tested are 13M2/3/4, 73C3/4, 76J2/3/4, 83E2/3, 91R2/3/4, 91S2/3/4, 92B2/3/4, 95C2/3/4 and 98C2/3/4. The test dates for these specialties are scheduled for Dec. 1, 2, 13, 14, 15 and 16 in Brown Hall, Building 328.

Soldiers are to report no later than 8:30 a.m. on the date scheduled in military uniform with a valid identification card.

Soldiers who need to be scheduled or those who cannot report as scheduled should notify their unit first sergeant or training noncommissioned officer.

Soldiers who fail to test because of their own negligence may receive an official zero.

Trial Defense office to close Oct. 26 to 29

Because of Defense Counsel's Conference, the Trial Defense Office located in Building 65 will be closed Oct. 26 through 29.

Normal operating hours will resume Nov. 1. In case of emergency, contact the senior defense counsel at 545-2175 or 545-2176.

Volunteer crossing guards canceled

Military parents who requested to be school crossing guards will no longer be needed. Crossing guards will be hired by the Directorate of Civilian Personnel.

SJA office to close

The Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, Winship Hall Building 5, will be closed on the last Wednesday of every month from 8:30 to 10 a.m. to allow all personnel to attend customer service training.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland and range areas will take place through Oct. 24. If weather permits, the following compartments may be affected: C-1, C-3, E-7, K-8, K-11, O-3, O-4, O-5, O-6, O-7, O-8, O-14, Q-2, S-1 and T-5.

Burning will occur in pine stands within these compartments to enhance endangered species habitat and training areas. People using these areas for recreation must vacate the areas before 9:30 a.m. daily.

Training units using compartments adjacent to these areas may experience drift smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while traveling in these areas because of the potential for reduced visibility.

MPs get high-tech vehicles, equipment

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Reflective green stripes aren't the only things different about Military Police patrol cars these days.

The Military Police Activity has outfitted its fleet with some of the most sophisticated law enforcement equipment on the market, including new radar systems and mobile video cameras.

According to Staff Sgt. Jeffrey Bishop, chief of the Traffic Section, the new equipment will enhance the effectiveness of the post's police force.

"We are very pleased to be able to use this equipment, not only to enhance our law enforcement ability, but to enhance the safety of post residents," said Bishop. "This is some of the most sophisticated equipment available, and I wouldn't be surprised if some of our civilian counterparts were a little jealous."

The high-tech hardware added to MP patrol cars includes:

• Reflective green striping that makes the cars more visible plus "Dial 911" in large letters on each side of the vehicle.

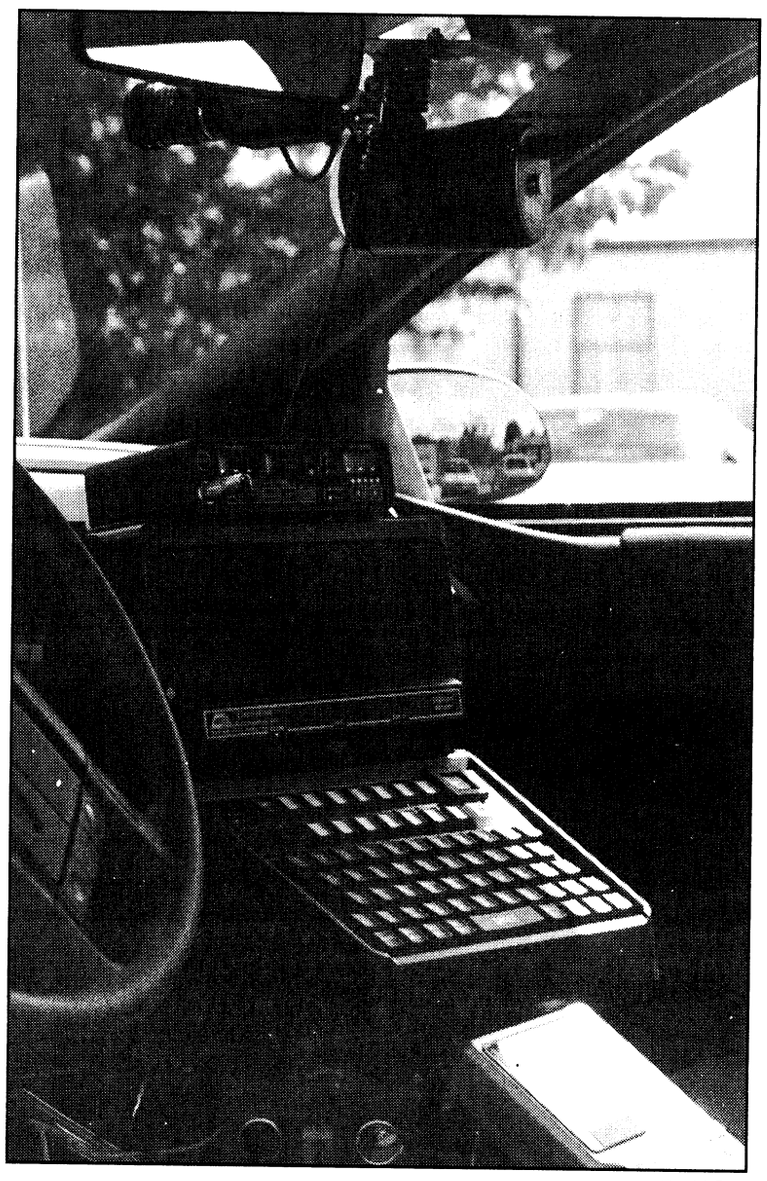
• The eyewitness video system, which consists of a small, color video camera with audio capability that can be switched on manually, by remote control, or when the emergency lights are activated.

The camera allows an MP to create videotape evidence of a traffic stop.

The actual videotape is concealed in the trunk in a locked, bullet-proof, fire-proof, crash-proof, climate-controlled safe so that neither the MP nor the criminal, if the MP is killed or incapacitated, can tamper with the tape.

• New, smaller radar units with front and rear detection capabilities and new radios.

• A mobile data terminal that will allow an MP to receive commands and updates on the progress of a crime from headquarters via computer, thus freeing the airways for radio transmissions.



The terminal can also be used to directly obtain information about a suspect's driver's license or vehicle registration.

In addition to the sophisticated electronic items, each patrol car contains a biological hazard kit — an enhanced first-aid kit that contains items to help protect MPs from contamination from the HIV virus when administering first-aid to someone who is bleeding heavily.

The kits contain protective overalls, heavy-duty gloves, goggles and dual airway devices that allow the user to give mouth-to-mouth resuscitation without actually touching the victim's mouth, as well as such standard items as highway flares, fire extinguishers, splints, bandages and reflective triangles.

Capt. Rebecca Rouse, chief of Law Enforcement Services, said the kits will enhance the safety of MPs and will ensure that they don't hesitate in performing the necessary actions in an emergency situation because of fear for their own safety.

"If an MP arrives at a scene of an accident in which the victims are bleeding heavily, then he or she can don the protective items," Rouse said. "I don't really think we will see these items used all that much, but it's good to have them in case they are needed," said Rouse.

David Greer

The new Military Police vehicles are equipped with state-of-the-art radar units, which are mounted so officers can detect speeding vehicles both to the front and rear of the vehicle.

Job assistance workshop

Time: Wednesdays, 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Location: Classroom 30, Infantry Hall, Building 4

The workshop is conducted every Wednesday at Infantry Hall. Topics discussed include objective setting, resume preparation, expanding opportunities, networking, interviewing, salary negotiating, stress management and financial planning. The workshop is for anyone in federal service (both military and Department of the Army civilians) and their family members, whether leaving voluntarily, involuntarily or retiring.

Education Opportunity Center

Time: Wednesdays, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Location: Job Assistance Center Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

Participants will receive information from all over the country about college and university admissions requirements and proficiency exams. Education counselors can also discuss student loans and grants.

Mock Interview Practice

Time: Thursdays, 2 to 4 p.m.

Location: Job Assistance Center Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

Participants will learn how to interview effectively by rehearsing and practicing interview techniques with an experienced Job Assistance Center counselor. The mock interview will be videotaped to provide the client with a visual learning tool.

Employers' Day

Time: Fridays, time varies

Location: Job Assistance Center Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

Employer day is scheduled each Friday at the Job Assistance Center. The program is designed to allow employers to recruit qualified candidates for their companies.

Employers normally will give presentations on their organizations and set up interviews with qualified candidates.

A variety of manufacturing and service companies take advantage of this opportunity. Public sector organizations are also represented.

Focus Hour

Time: Tuesdays, noon to 1 p.m.

Location: Job Assistance Center Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

Weekly video program that provides additional information on the key areas in the job search process — networking, dressing for success, interview process and negotiating techniques. Counselors will assist with any additional questions.

Small Business Development

Time: Monthly, 2 to 4:30 p.m.

Location: Job Assistance Center Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

A short, free, monthly seminar is offered by the Small Business Development Center of the University of Georgia. It is designed to provide assistance and training in starting a new business.

The seminar serves as a focal point for linking together resources of the federal, state, and local governments and the private sector.

For additional information and registration, call Army Career and Alumni Program Job Assistance Center, located in Building 2634, at 545-2308 or 545-2309 .

Dawgs put bite on Headhunters

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

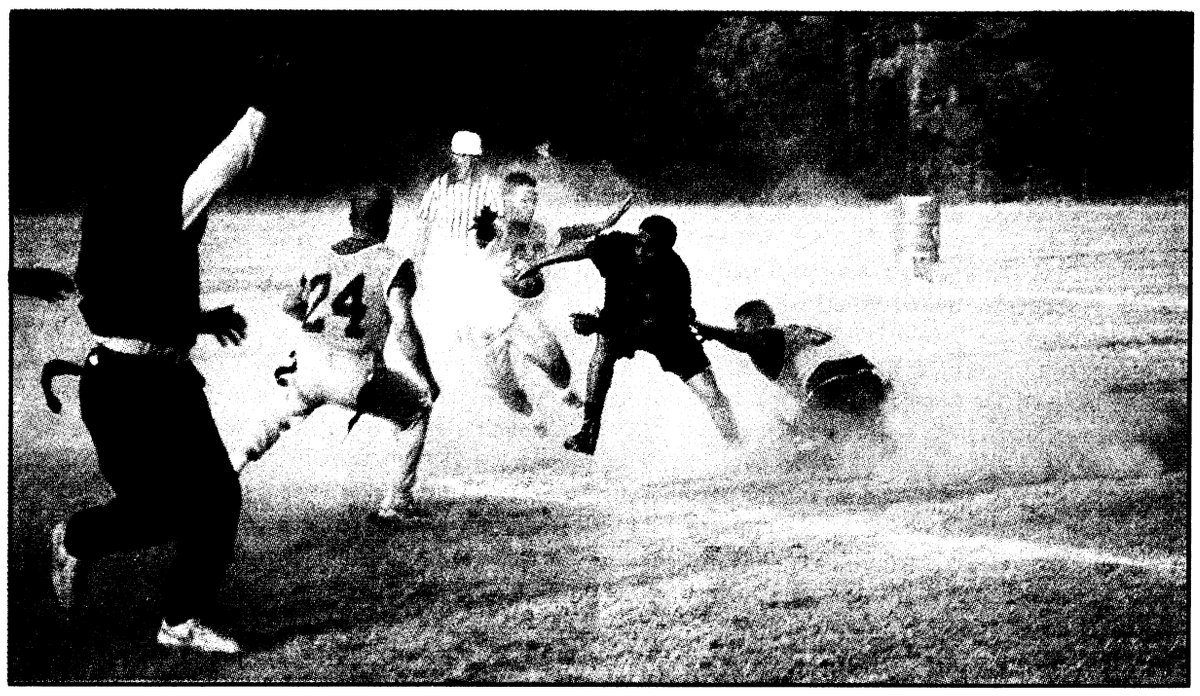
The Red Dawgs of Service Battery, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, culminated their flag football season Monday night with a 24-6 shellacking of the Headhunters of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 4th Bn., 41st FA, 3rd Bde., 24th Inf. Div., at Essebagger Field to finish an undefeated season at 8-0.

"We now have to focus on the playoffs and get ourselves prepared for the teams on Main Post," said Dawgs coach Bertram Bishop, "This is the first time that a team from the battalion has gone through the season without a loss."

Red Dawgs quarterback Curtis Taylor threw touchdown passes for 10 yards, 18 yards and 30 yards to receivers Kevin Sidbury, Hector Espada and Lamonous Bonner. Late in the game, Bonner replaced Taylor at quarterback and hit wide receiver Ronnie Ellington with a 38-yard touchdown strike for the final score of the night.

On defense, Taylor picked off Headhunters quarterback Craig Stevens twice to kill potential scoring opportunities in the first half of play.

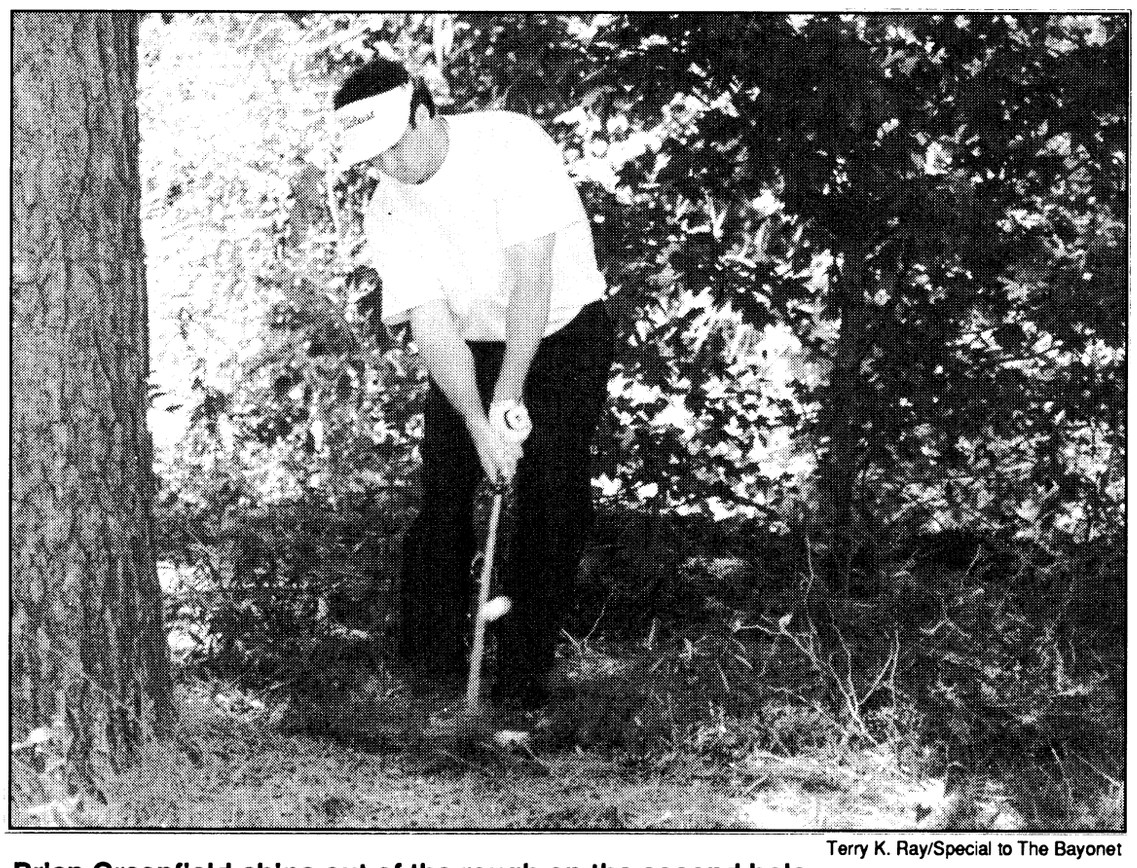
The Headhunters averted the shutout in the second half when Stevens found running back Alonzo Stewart all alone at the 5-yard line. Stewart scampered into the end zone untouched to cut the lead to 18-6 with less than two minutes to play.



In the second game of the night, the Gigolos of Battery A, 4th Bn., 41st FA, 3rd Bde., 24th Inf. Div., danced past the Dogs of Battery C, 4th Bn., 41st FA, 3rd Bde., 24th Inf. Div., 19-6.

In the first half, Gigolo punt-return specialist Jerome Hall fielded a punt at the Gigolo 10-yard line, cut right toward the side line and turned on the speed. Seventy yards later, Hall was in the end zone for 6.

In the second half, Dogs defensive back Eddie Stewart picked off Gigolo quarterback Joe Colbert at the Dogs' 20-yard line and rumbled 60 yards for the Dogs' only score of the evening.



Two possessions later, Colbert dropped back into his own end zone looked down the right side line and hit receiver Michael Harris streaking toward the end zone for a 79-yard bomb and a 13-6 lead.

On the Dogs' next possession defensive back Ramon Walker slipped in front of a Stewart pass and went 30 yards for the Gigolos' final score of the game.

The Commanding General's Payday Activities Golf Tournament brought out 88 entrants to Follow Me Golf Course Oct. 1.

The tournament, sponsored by The Advertiser Company, printers of The Bayonet saw the team of Juan Bustamante, John Jones, Marcia Flo and John Meister capture first place with a score of 61.

Second place went to Eddie Gunn, Fred Casterline, Walter Wojdakowski and Robert Henning also with a score of 61. All ties were broken by low score on the back nine.

Joseph Ogletree, Philip Gray, Royston Hercules and Firmen Sowers fired a round of 62 for third place while Brian Greenfield, Victor Tireman, Ralph Hare and Jeanie Hammond followed up with a score of 62 for fourth.

Fifth place honors went to William Acebes, Terry Yarbrough, Jay Clingenpeel and Paul Leonard with a round of 63. Rounding out the sixth and final place was the team of Bruce Williams, Rich Cisco, Bobby Jones and Lamar Smitherman with a score of 64.

The next major tournament scheduled for the Follow Me Golf Course will be the Fort Benning 75th Anniversary Diamond Jubilee Golf Tournament Oct. 15 at 10:30 a.m.

Anglers set sail at Uchee Creek

Fort Benning B.A.S.S. Club

The Fort Benning B.A.S.S. Club conducted a two-day tournament Sept. 18 and 19 on Walter F. George Lake. Participants launched from the Uchee Creek Recreation Center and Marina.

Despite the continued dry spell and hard fishing conditions, the contestants continued to be successful. The club drew 19 fishermen for the two-day contest and landed 20 fish, for a combined tournament weight of 68 pounds and 14 ounces.

The big fish of the event was 7 pounds and 3 ounces, landed by George Mendez. Mendez said that he caught the majority of his fish using a 20-plus crankbait, fishing the deep ledges.

On Sunday following the tournament, the club conducted its annual family fish fry and picnic at the lodge. Gift certificates were presented to three wives from the Wife Appreciation Drawing. Numerous club members won door prizes sponsored by Leon Jordon Marine, a local sponsor of club and community activities.

The Fort Benning B.A.S.S. Club is open for membership to all active duty and retired military members, federal civil service employees and the family members of each of eligible member.

All eligible anglers are invited to attend the meetings and learn more about the club. You do not need to own a boat to enjoy the benefits of the club. To learn more about the club, call Steve Ward at 569-5705 or David Moore at 298-5955.

Columbus Stars

Team closes out season

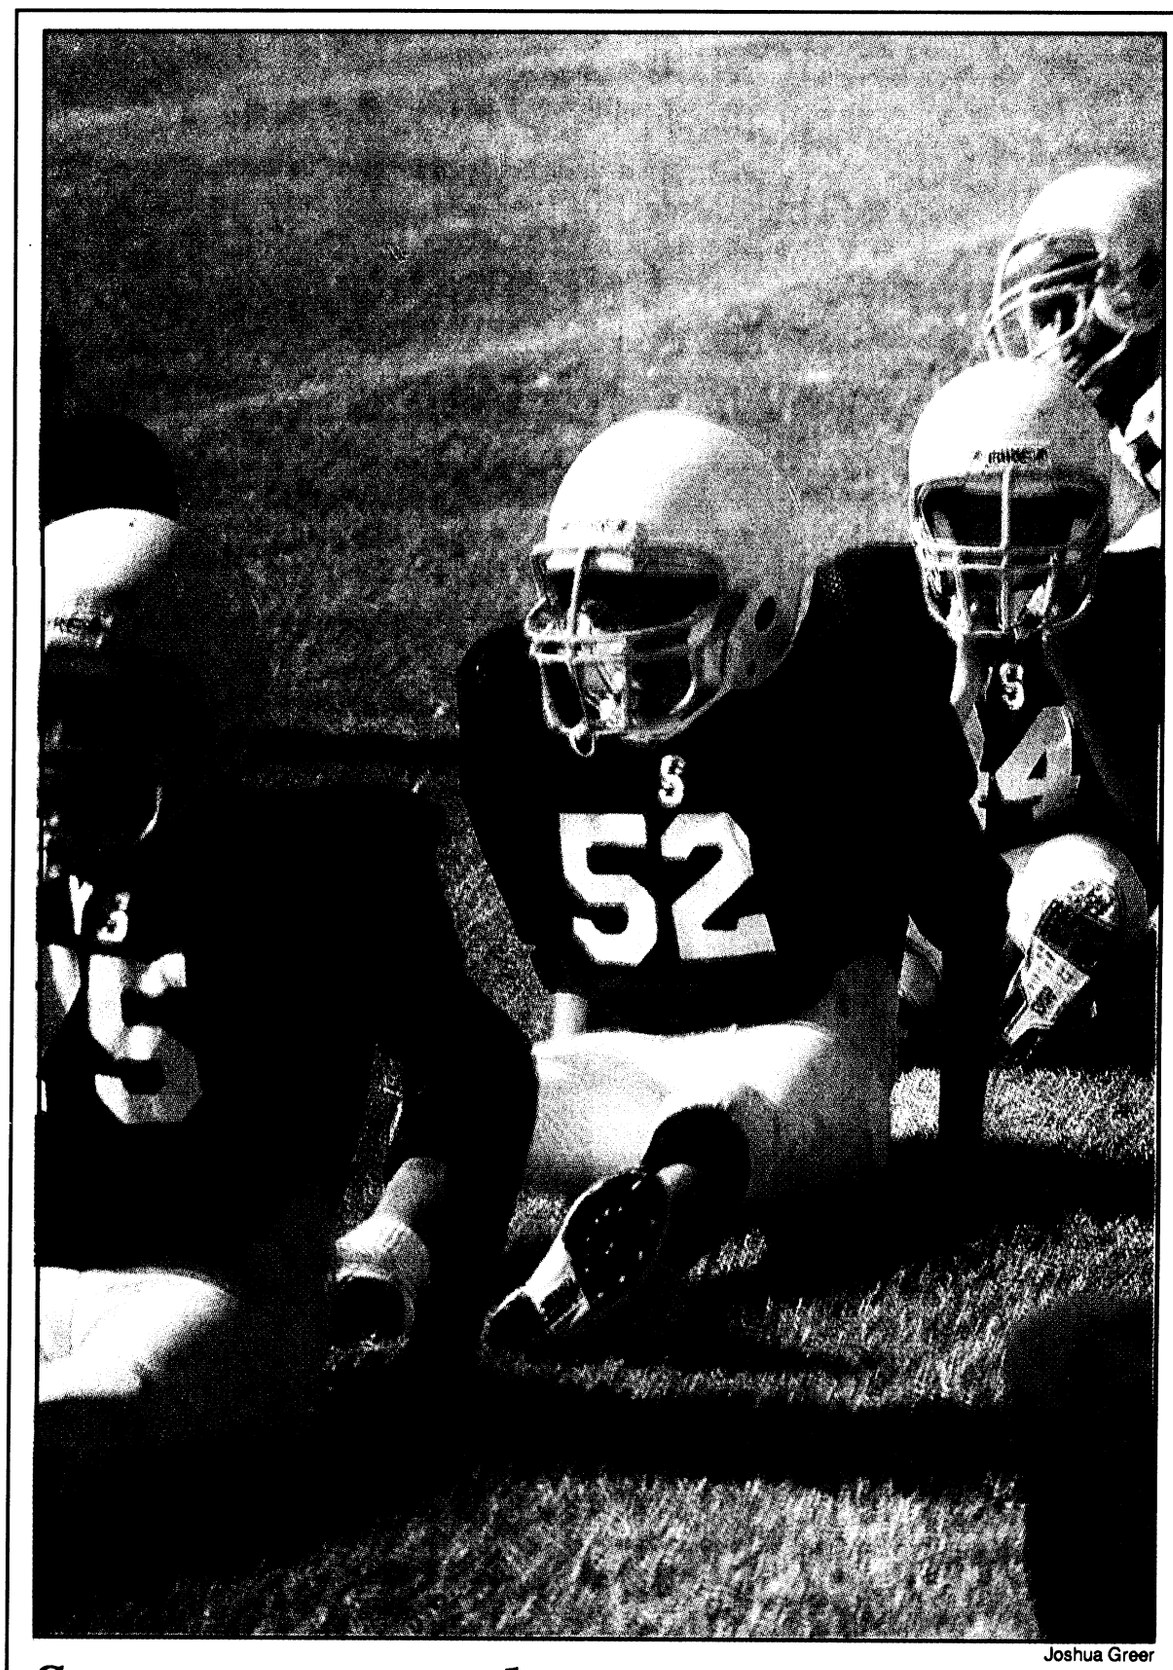
By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Columbus Stars closed out their football season going 1-1 in their last two games. The Stars traveled to the Forrest Park Vikings' homeland Sept. 25 and were vanquished from Viking territory 21-0. The loss put the Stars behind the proverbial eight ball. They needed a victory over the Georgia Thrashers of Atlanta Saturday and a loss by the Decatur Colts to obtain a playoff spot.

The Stars' did their part going to the Thrasher's home field and came away with a 6-0 win. Stars' running back Michael Bailey tallied the only score of the ballgame with a touchdown three minutes into the second quarter.

The Stars' defense, alias the Crunch Bunch, shot down the Thrasher air assault, not allowing a completed pass in 11 attempts. The only completed pass by the Thrasher offense went to linebacker Terrence Perry five minutes into the third quarter.

The Stars' offense outgained the Thrashers 181 yards to 112, and doubled on first downs, 14 to 6.



The Decatur Colts meanwhile were in Chattanooga, Tenn., for their final game of the season against the Chattanooga Blues, an expansion team. The Colts ran roughshod over the Blues 37-0 to gain the final playoff spot.

The Stars finished the season at 6-4, tied with the Decatur Colts. Two losses to the Colts gave the last playoff spot to the Colts by virtue of head-to-head play.

"We played our best game of the season Saturday night," said Stars head coach Tom Staton. "The Thrashers had not been shut out in three years. After the game, their head coach came over to me and told me we were the toughest team they had played all year. "

"We gave away two games early in the season to the Colts — one 9-6 and the other 12-6," said Staton. "The second loss put us in a must win situation in our last two games. Unfortunately we lost to the Vikings two weeks ago in a game that we came out very flat and it cost us.

"I'm real proud of these guys," said Staton. "They played their hearts out against the Thrashers and deserved to make the playoffs. It just wasn't meant to happen."

Deer Hunting

Scouting for good location a must

By Kevin L. McIver
USAIC Public Affairs Office

COMMENTARY

It's less than a month until the start of the Georgia deer gun season. If you haven't done it yet, it's time to scout, get that gear together, build a couple of deer stands, and zero that deer rifle.

Scouting for the proper hunting location is a must. If you're going to spend countless hours in the deer woods, then you might as well make the most of it.

There's nothing like sitting in a stand, asking yourself "where the heck are the deer? "I'm the type of hunter who doesn't like to waste my time. Heck, I could be wasting it doing something else. So when I go hunting, I want to have a very probable chance of success.

Good scouting will do a few things for you. It let's you know where the deer are, where they're moving, the number of deer out there, what they're feeding on, and where you should place your stand.

The first thing you should do is grab your Fort Benning hunting map. A good map recon is a must. Yeah, there are plenty of hunters who just head out to an area they heard was good and hunt. What a waste of time. Today's hunter has more brains (deer knowledge), and more sophisticated equipment available than generations back. So why not use it?

By looking at a good terrain relief map, in this case the Fort Benning map, you can just about pick exactly where the deer will be. Then, it's just a matter of timing. This year, I have bow hunted five spots on post. Every area that I did a map recon on, and followed up with some good scouting time, I've seen deer. Now, it's just getting the timing down.

The first thing you should look for is water. Deer get about 80 percent of their water from the vegetation they consume. However, when the climate is hot and dry, they must rely more on water sources as a lot of the vegetation doesn't survive the summer heat. This is especially true around Fort Benning.

The next thing I look for are densely vegetated areas. These are usually found around the water sources, down along the creek beds. This vegetation provides shade, thus cooler temperatures. Since deer don't sweat (they pant to cool down, just like an old hound dog), they must seek shade when the temperatures climb.

Transition areas are next on the scouting list. These are areas where two or three types of vegetation (or terrain) converge. A good example is a thicket area (along a stream) that borders a field or a woodline. Look there and you'll find deer sign.

Once I've identified these on the map, then it's time to head to the woods. Once you verify the locations you previously identified on the map, then it's time to look for food sources.

Around Fort Benning, and throughout Georgia, acorns are the principal food crop for whitetail deer. Yeah, we all know they'll eat other items, but acorns are the staple here.

Basically, there are two types, white oak and red acorns. I've read that whitetails will pass up red acorns to get to the white oak ones. Anyway, find some acorn trees that are producing, and you'll find whitetails moving through the area.

When you locate the transition areas and food sources, you need to find what trails they're moving on. Older bucks are solitary animals, but younger ones and does will generally follow the same trails year after year.

Locate where several trails intersect and find a good tree for your deer stand. Here you have to judge wind direction and where the sun will be when you're hunting, but the hard part's done.

A lot goes into hunting whitetail deer, but some good scouting will increase your chances of bagging a trophy buck and putting some venison in the freezer. Good luck and see you in the woods.

Intimacy is gift from God

By Daniel M. McEver
2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment

REFLECTIONS

I'll never forget the surge of joy I felt as a boy, whenever I discovered our family was planning a camping trip.

Cedar Lake, nestled among the pines and hills of Eastern Oklahoma, came to be the sacred campground for our family. Frequently we even camped at the same site.

It's where I learned to swim. It's where my brother and I got badly sunburned and made fun of each other's grimaces while Mom was smearing burn lotion on our backs. It's where we got to sit around the campfire late at night, watching endless formations made by the burning coals. The smell of pines and the campfire fill my memories of childhood.

Now that I have my own family, I realize as we continue to build memories, we are also building memories for our children. Some of those memories will stay with them for their entire lives.

Tickling and wrestling with my kids has become a family tradition in the McEver household. Playing the "light game" is a big deal. One kid has control of the light while the other is at the mercy of their Daddy. When the light is on, the Daddy monster is asleep on the bed, but when the light is off, the Daddy monster awakes, and watch out! More hugging, tickling and laughing.

The victim yells "Turn on the light!" The light goes on and suddenly the Daddy monster drops his arms, closes his eyes and falls back asleep on the bed. When the light goes off, the cycle starts all over again. During the light game, laughter fills the house.

Other family activities have included our camping trips, our trip to Disney World, our little trips to Atlanta and Callaway Gardens — all these activities and scenes from home are literally building memories for the future for all of us. Our video camera captures some of it.

What cannot be captured on film are the feelings that were there all along the way. When I reflect on my life — the camping trips, my marriage, and everything that's happened since then, I have begun to understand something of the Scripture, where God says: "It is not good for the man to be alone."

When I think about it, it's not the activities of our lives that give us the real joy. It's the fellowship. It's the intimacy. It's a special kind of closeness that can never be bought, cleverly acquired, or bargained for. It's a feeling that can only come from God's hand.

I define intimacy simply as a special closeness that causes one's joy to be full in the Lord. It's a feeling of safety, of being at ease, of being loved and accepted, and being very alive and at peace with life. Intimacy is a gift from God.

The search for intimacy in our society is revealed in the countless love songs that become so popular. How desperate many people are to find in someone an experience of intimacy — a feeling of safety, the feeling they are loved in spite of themselves, a feeling they can trust the other with everything they possess, inside and out.

That feeling where home is the place for emotional, physical and psychological relief, a place for spiritual food, a place of refuge.

There is no substitute for genuine intimacy. Most of us know when we don't have it. It often comes out in the phrase "something is missing." "What most people fail to realize is that no other human can fully take care of all your emotional, psychological and spiritual needs.

Only God can do that. Only the creator of intimacy can fully provide it. So the very first step toward the experience of genuine intimacy is this: Open yourself to God. Only God can replace closed doors with open ones. So often people look for intimacy with others because they are starved themselves.

If only they would search their own hearts and create some room for God. Then they would have something of substance to offer others. It's back to basics.

Here's a good prayer to get you started: "Dear Lord, you know I have nothing to offer you, except my life. I give it all to you. My confused, mixed up life is in your hands. All that matters to me now is what you want in my life. You know I'm lonely. Fill my heart with your love, that I may find strength and joy."

You've heard of the phrase, "get a life." Well, the only way to "get a life" is to give it away. Give it all away to God. When your priority is to live the life God has planned for you, then you will not be alone.

It goes against God's created order to be completely alone — "It is not good for the man to be alone." That means all of us. Put God first, and your deepest prayers will be answered. That's a promise.

Remember Columbus

By James M. Coindreau
1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment

Christopher Columbus had been rejected by most royal courts in Europe. His vision of an alternate route to India implied a round world. This was utter heresy to the brilliant minds of the Renaissance. The navigator of Genoa had little hope of selling his dream to the impoverished monarchs of Spain. Ferdinand and Isabella had united their kingdoms of Castille and Aragon to fight their Muslim common foes.

Even though the so-called "Catholic Kings" were deeply in debt, they considered financing Columbus' enterprise. Their royal advisers had challenged the round-world theory but Columbus prevailed with his steadfast vision. He purchased three galleons and named them Pinta, Nina and Santa Maria, his flagship under the protection of the mother of Jesus.

Heading to the unknown, the ships headed west into the Atlantic. Soon the crew became mutinous. The Pinzon brothers who commanded the Pinta and the Nina wanted to turn around. Columbus did not surrender his dream and won a three-day reprieve. Who would have said that Oct. 12, 1492, as the Spanish forces celebrated the Feast of Our Lady of the Pillar winning the battle of Granada, Columbus would be discovering our continent.

Having just celebrated the 500th anniversary, the principal motive of this event might be overshadowed. It was the spiritual urge to spread Christianity that led both Columbus and the Spanish kings to embrace so many sacrifices. As the political quagmire engulfed the following expeditions and financial goals stifled spiritual ones, Columbus increased his prayer life and ended his days at a monastery begging God's blessing upon the land he discovered.

Laity Sunday

Church honors those who make a difference

By William G. Lewis
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Laity Sunday is the time of the church year in which the church recognizes all those hard-working individuals who said, "I will make a difference."

In a society that focuses on my rights, my personal time, my choice, my way of life, the lay person makes a conscience decision to invest his or her life committed in the church for the benefit of other peoples lives.

"You are lay persons in the church who possess faith, the greatest of all resources; you have a unique opportunity and crucial responsibility," Pope John Paul II said.

"Through your lives in the midst of your daily activities in the world, you renew the family of man. Even though it is hidden and unnoticed, like the leaven or the salt of the earth spoken in the gospel, your role as a laity is indispensable for the church in the fulfillment of its mission from Christ."

The lay person has heard the call of God to Isaiah, "Whom shall I send?"

Isaiah replied, "Send me."

The lay person has learned the words of Jesus, that it is more blessed to give than to receive. This means giving of one's time, one's finances and one's commitment to a higher calling for their lives.

The laity make up the church; therefore, they are the active agents of the church. They represent not only themselves, but God.

As a chaplain and a pastor, I would like to thank all the hard-working laity for their faithfulness and all the hard work they do to support the church. Many bulletins list the pastor and the church or chapel staff. Some, and I believe all should, list the ministers as members of the congregation.

CRIME WATCH

Military Police Activity

The following entries are from the Fort Benning Military Police blotter from Sept. 15 to 21.

Such entries may be incomplete and are not the determination of the guilt or innocence of any person.

This week's hot topic concerns Georgia Code 40-1-4 (stickers, decals and emblems on motor vehicles). No person owning or operating a motor vehicle in this state shall knowingly affix or attach to any part of such vehicle any sticker, decal emblem or other device containing profane or lewd words describing sexual acts, excretory functions or parts of the human body.

Any person who violates this code shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine not to exceed $100.

• A specialist reported that unknown persons damaged his car by attempting to remove the driver side key assembly.

• A sergeant first class was charged by civil authorities with battery after he hit another sergeant first class in the lip and forehead with a coffee cup during an argument.

• A government employee was charged with larceny of government property after stealing a government-owned typewriter, desk and chair from a building on post.

• A staff sergeant reported that unknown persons removed his wallet from atop a tackle box in the Post Exchange. He had placed it there while looking at other fishing equipment.

• A sergeant reported that persons unknown forced open the passenger door of her car and removed her stereo.

• A family member was charged with assault after throwing hot water on her husband's chest and shoving his head in a door during a domestic dispute.

• A specialist was charged by civil authorities with driving under the influence of alcohol and stopping in the street after he fell asleep at the wheel of his car and stopped in the middle of an intersection. He registered .17 on the intoximeter.

• A private first class was charged with driving under the influence, driving with a suspended license, no insurance and operating a vehicle with expired plates.

This week's booby prize is awarded to the employee who gave an individual the combination to an on-post facility safe and conspiring with the individual to steal the money contained in the safe. The individual used the combination to open the safe and steal approximately $3,000.

The employee met with the individual the next day and received $500 of the stolen money. During questioning, the employee rendered a sworn statement admitting to the offense and was charged with larceny of government property. The other individual fled the area to an unknown location.

Other activities included 12 traffic accidents and four reports of shoplifting at facilities on post. There were six cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, 12 cases of larceny of private property and four cases of larceny of government property.

Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best — Give Crime Arrest." Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5223 or the "Crime in Progress" line at 545-2222.

Flu season on the way

Hospital has immunizations

By Daniel Davidson
Preventive Medicine Service

The 1993-1994 flu season is approaching fast, and flu shots will soon be available at Martin Army Community Hospital's Immunization Clinic as well as at all family practice and troop medical clinics.

Influenza or "the flu" produces fever, sore throat and a cough that can last for four to five days. It is caused by a group of viruses that are closely related. The flu season begins as early as October and lasts through March.

The flu has caused many epidemics in the United States in this century, and it continues to be a very common reason for clinic and emergency room visits during the fall and winter. People over age 65 and those with certain types of medical problems are prone to having the more severe course of the disease that may last for several weeks or even be fatal.

The flu vaccine is very effective and protects against three different types of influenza viruses, but must be given each year in order to ensure protection. An annual vaccination is important because the viruses that cause the flu change from year to year.

The vaccine is required for all active duty personnel. Those beneficiaries who belong to the hospital's Gateway To Care program should obtain their immunizations from their assigned family practice clinics.

Pregnant women may receive the vaccine in certain situations, but should discuss this with their physicians first.

Other beneficiaries who are encouraged to receive the vaccine include:

• Adults, age 65 and over.

• Adults and children with chronic medical problems such as diabetes, respiratory and heart diseases.

• Personnel who work in hospitals, outpatient clinics or nursing homes.

Though the flu season is nearly upon us, family members can take advantage of the several dates and ways to obtain their immunization. Hospital officials have scheduled several dates for military beneficiaries.

Here are some conmonly asked questions:

Q: What are the side effects of the flu shot?

A. The most common side effect is a sore arm. Some people will have a mild fever or body aches for one to two days following the vaccine. The vaccine cannot cause the flu itself.

Q: Who should not receive the vaccine?

A. Only those persons who have a severe allergy to eggs or to the flu vaccine itself.

Q: If I have had the flu before, can I get it again?

A. Yes, having the flu does not give permanent protection against the viruses.

•Gateway To Care beneficiaries who receive care from the hospital — may get the vaccine Wednesday and Oct. 20 from 9 to 11 a.m. and 1 to 3:30 p.m. or every Tuesday and Thursday from 1 to 3 p.m. (after Wednesday). An appointment is not necessary. If a beneficiary already has an established appointment, he or she may obtain an immunization at that time.

• Gateway To Care beneficiaries the Aviation or Winder Family Prastice Clinic — An appointment is not necessary on every Tuesday and Thursday from 1 to 3 p.m. (after Wednesday). If a beneficiary already has an established appointment, he or she may obtain an immunization at that time.

• Gateway to Care beneficieries who receive care from the Primary Care for the Uniformed Services Family Practice Clinic — An appointment is not necessary Oct. 20 and 21 from 2 to 10 p.m.

• Beneficiaries not in Gateway To Care or Department of the Army civilians — The vaccine will be available from the hospital's Immunization Clinic, Room 956, Monday to Friday 7:30 to 11:30 a.m. (no appointment required).

• Active duty service members — Coordination will be made through their supporting Troop Medical Clinic.

Meeting covers funds, medical issues

By Linda Washington
Infantry Training Brigade

A town hall meeting was conducted by 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, Sept. 28 at battalion headquarters.

Participants were welcomed by Lt. Col. Bruce D. Grant, battalion commander, who said the meeting was designed to promote the family and soldier partnership crucial of today's Army.

The Gateway To Care program was explained by Dr. Andrew Dow, chief of the Winder Health Clinic. He also explained how the clinic works and answered questions asked by the audience.

The Delta Dental Plan was discussed by Maj. Annette Dusseau and Kathy Hatfield.

A lot of key information that was discussed was information that soldiers and family members should be knowledgeable about, said Capt. James Crider, battalion executive officer.

Family support group leaders and family members present also discussed future fund-raising activities, the spending of those funds and upcoming family events.

"We at (the battalion) consider the town hall a success since new information was discussed, problems and misunderstandings cleared up and routes for correcting future problems were provided," said Crider.

"The Patriot Battalion realizes a happy and contented family is crucial in maintaining an effective fighting force and will continue to help this partnership of soldiers and families grow."

WORLD WAR II

50 years ago this week...

• The 8th U.S. Army Air Force sent 291 Flying Fortresses on an unsuccessful raid on the ball-bearing plants in Schweinfurt, Germany. Sixty planes were lost, and an additional 140 suffered significant damage during the unescorted 400-mile round trip from Aachen. Despite its devastating cost, the attack had little effect, due in part to German industrial leader Albert Speer's dispersal production concept, convincing Allied strategists to abandon plans for similar efforts.

• In Italy, the Fifth U.S. Army initiated an offensive against the German positions near the Volturno River, making only slight progress in the face of a stubborn German defense, difficult weather and poor roads. In other areas of the country, British forces captured Larino and Guglionesi, while the Canadians secured Campobasso.

• On the Eastern Front, the Soviets completed their occupation of the Kuban Peninsula, forcing the German Seventeenth Army to evacuate to the Crimea. Additional Soviet gains for the week included Dobrush, Novobelitsa and Zaporozhye.

• On New Britain, 349 Allied planes from the Fifth Air Force launched a surprise attack against Japanese positions in and around Rabaul.

• In the world of diplomatic affairs, the governments of Britain, the United States and Russia agreed to recognize Italy's declaration of war against Germany.

• In the Aegean, the British abandoned their positions on Dodecanese, allowing the Germans to occupy the island only a day later.

• On Fort Benning, Col. William Hobson, formerly the executive officer of the Munitions Assignment Board in Washington, D.C., assumed command of the post.

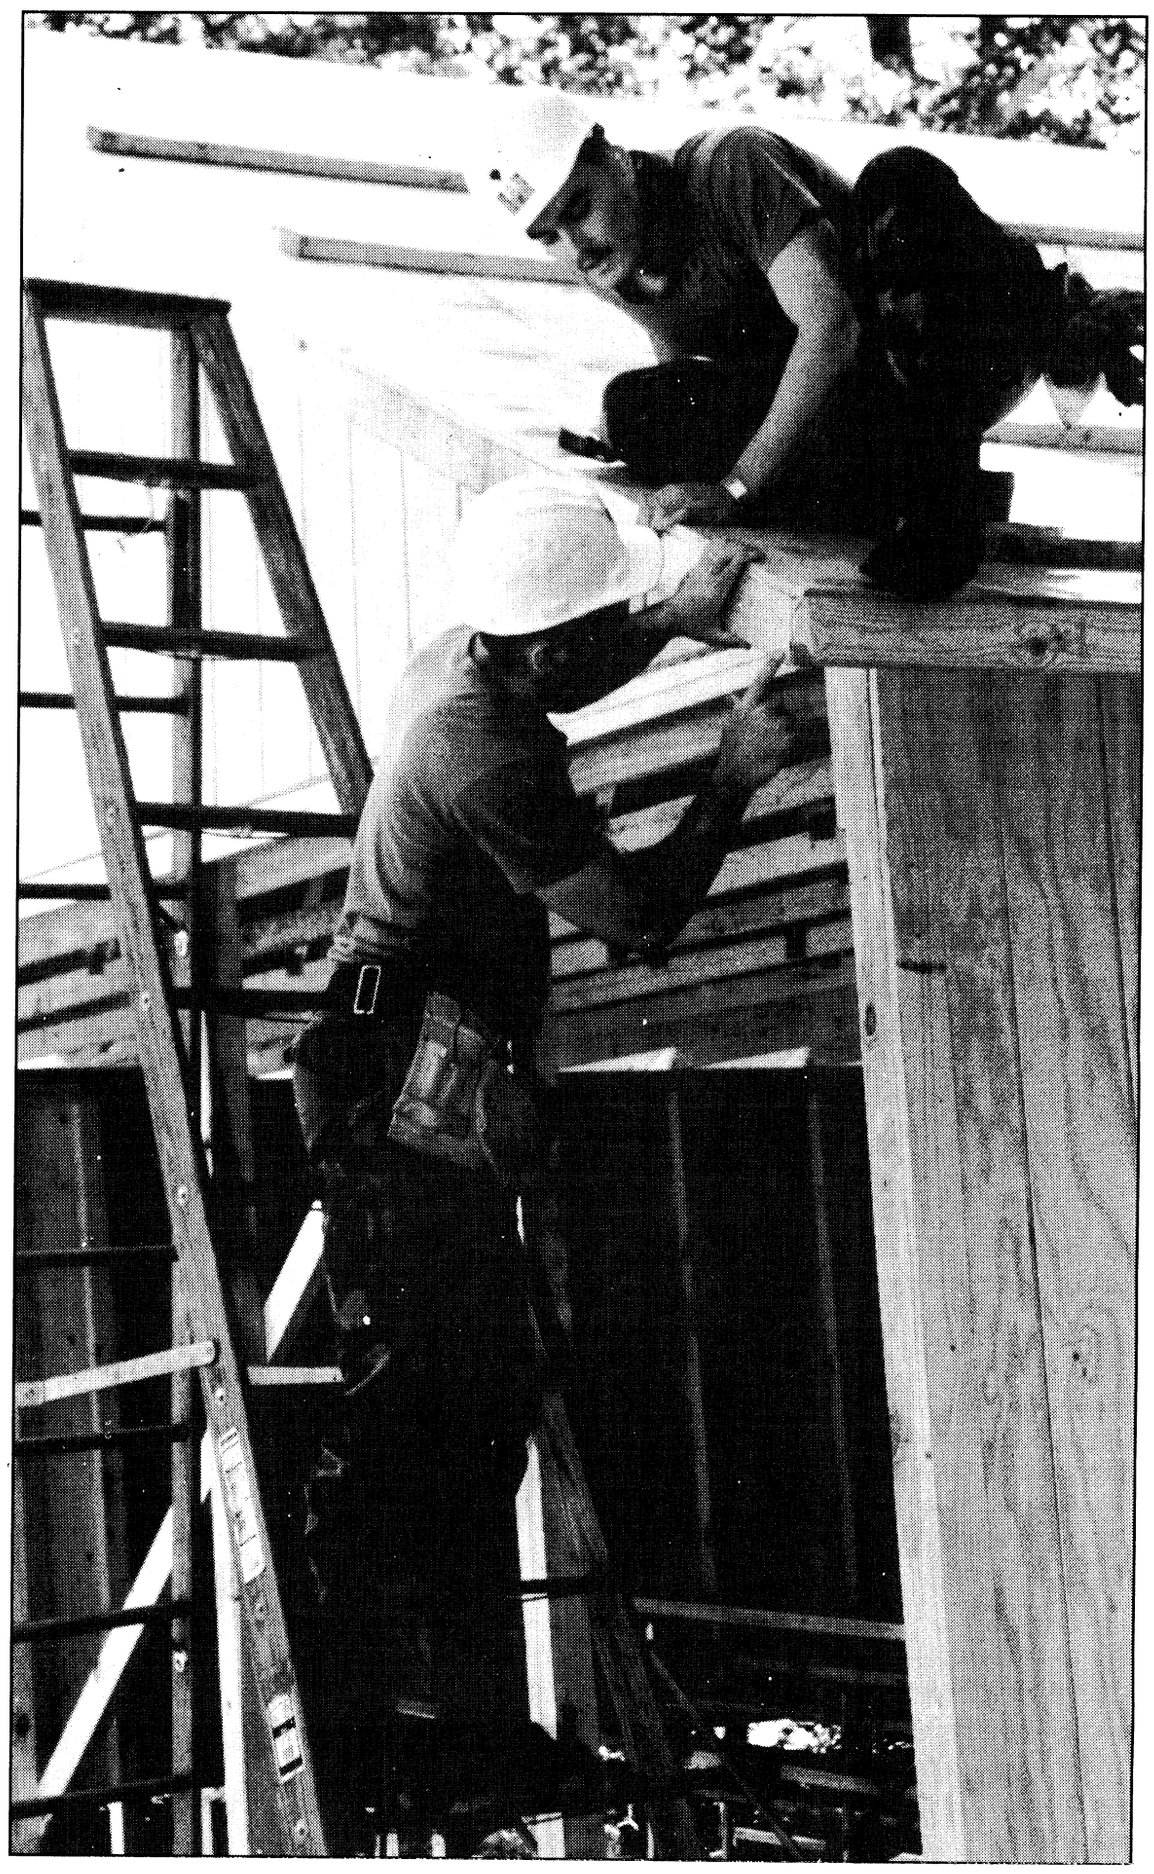
2nd Bn, 54th Inf Regt hosts veterans

Daniel J. Ullmann
2nd Battalion, 54th infantry Regiment

The 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, was recently host to a group of World War II veterans, who visited the battalion as part of its annual reunion that was started in 1975. The reunion is held annually by former members of Company M, 3rd Battalion, 397th Regiment, of the 100th Infantry Division.



The men of Company M fought first in France and later in Germany as part of the Normandy Invasions. They started in Marcey and fought their way to the Rhone Valley. The unit sustained a 25 percent casualty rate.

Bill Wright, a former member of the 100th Infantry, said the surviving members had not seen each other for nearly 30 years until 1975, when they got in touch with one another and decided to meet and plan trips together as part of their annual reunion.

This year, the reunion included a trip to Fort Benning to see what had become of the infantry that they had long since passed on to other hands. The highlight of the visit was a lunch uniting the old soldiers of Company M with the new Initial Entry Training soldiers of the battalion.

Old and new soldiers alike found a common bond in their motivation to serve their country and become infantrymen, said Lt. Col. Gary Dacey, battalion commander. One of the Company M veterans in the group remarked during a group discussion, "I can go to bed and sleep well, having met the young men here today."

Tom Patrick, who attended the reunion with his father and who works for the Chief Operations Division Headquarters Training and Doctrine Command, later wrote in a letter to the battalion that "what came out of the visit was pride, professionalism and excitement about the Army and what they (cadre and trainees) were doing.

Infantrycon to showcase WAR GAMES

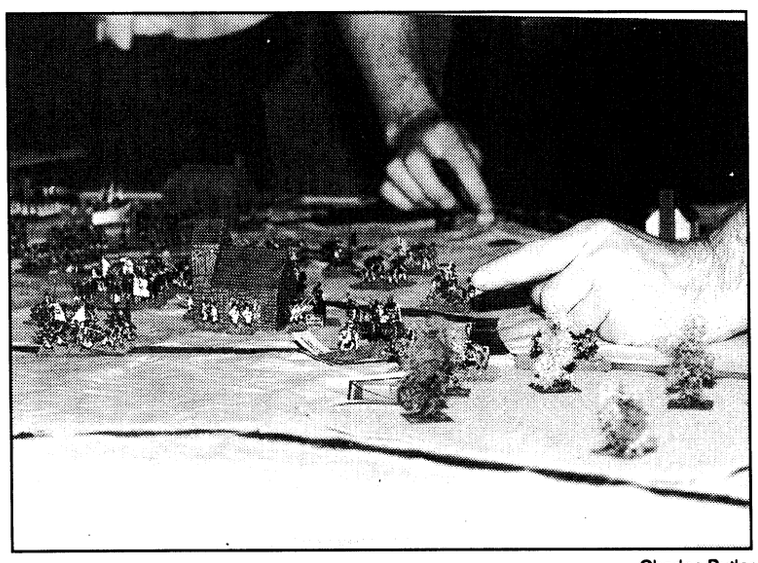
Military History Division

The U.S. 7th Cavalry reaches the bluff overlooking the Little Big Horn Creek. In the distance to his right, Gen. George A. Custer can see dust billowing from a column of blue-clad riders.



"Ah," Custer murmurs to himself; "You're right where I need you. Come on, Crazy Horse, make my day!" Custer signals the trumpeter to begin the charge.

The mass of Sioux Indians, led by Crazy Horse, appears surprised by Custer's charge and the sudden appearance of more "blue-bellies" on their flank. First confusion, then panic, sweeps through the Indians. The U.S. Cavalry closes with the Sioux. Crazy Horse falls dead from his pony, cut down by an Army sabre. The Indians are scattered, fleeing in small groups, chased down by the frontier guardians of the West.

Revisionist history? The way it could have been? See the battle for yourself.

On Dec. 3 to 5, in Classroom 3, Infantry Hall, the Military History Division will be sponsoring the second annual Infantrycon.

Infantrycon is a historical battle simulation seminar.

Wargamers move figures during a re-creation of the 1813 "Battle of Bautzen."

Wargamers and history buffs from Fort Benning and the surrounding states will be refighting many of history's famous (and not so famous) battles. They will be attempting to reverse the fortunes of history or trying to repeat them.

Not only does Infantrycon provide a weekend of entertainment and enjoyment of a popular, rapidly expanding hobby, but it also brings to mind the courage, sacrifice and blind luck that has characterized so many armed conflicts, according to a wargame enthusiast.

Last year, nearly 100 people participated in dozens of re-created battles. Many civilians and military members crossed wits and die rolls in friendly but fierce competition.

Others put in an appearance to bounce a theory of strategy, or current events, or what could have been, off of someone who would listen and provide a spirited discussion. There were also several dealers in miniatures and wargamers who came to sell their wares and advertise their latest products.

Whether you are interested in Hannibal's Carthaginians defeating the Roman legions at Cannae in a classic battle of double envelopment, or in American armored forces destroying Iraqi armor in the desert around Kuwait, you can experience the tabletop re-enactment of classic struggles at Infantrycon.

If you have always wondered what it would have been like to have been there at such and such a battle — Stalingrad, Kasserine Pass, Little Big Horn, Borodino, Champion Hill, Pegasus Bridge — here is your chance. Show up in December and relive history's battles.

Reservists come back to Benning

3rd Battalion, 413th Regiment

Reserve soldiers from the 2nd Brigade, 104th Division (Training), have returned to Fort Benning after nine years to train Infantry One Station Unit Training soldiers with the 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, commanded by Lt. Col. Warren Cate.

Battalions from the 2nd Brigade are the first units of the 104th Division to complete a 13-week Protrain mission at Fort Benning.

Four battalion staffs and seven companies have displaced their active-duty counterparts for a two-week portion of the OSUT cycle.

Members of the 3rd Battalion, 413th Regiment, 2nd Brigade, 104th Division (Training), commanded by Lt. Col. Douglas O'Coyne are conducting the final battalion displacement mission of this cycle.

Company B, 3rd Battalion, 413th Regiment, augmented by personnel from other 104th units, is currently conducting the final two-week increment of infantry OSUT displacing Company E, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, in the one-company Protrain concept.

Company B, 3rd Battalion, 413th Regiment, will train OSUT infantry soldiers in weeks 12 and 13, which will be highlighted by the end-of-cycle field training exercise and the graduation ceremony.

"We have a unique opportunity to train with four active-duty companies within the same battalion.

"This gives us a chance to evaluate our level of preparedness directly with active duty units within the same command," said the commander of Company C, 3rd Battalion, 413th Regiment, who will return next September for his rotation in the Company E Protrain mission.

In 1988 the 3rd Battalion, 413th Regiment and other 2nd Brigade, 104th Division (Training), units conducted the first basic training Protrain at Fort Jackson, S.C., by displacing a battalion staff and five companies' cadre.

Over the years, the 3rd Battalion, 413th Regiment, has also conducted satellite and displacement missions at Fort Dix, N.J., Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., and trained ROTC Cadets at Fort Lewis, Wash.

"The strength of the battalion lies in the experience and quality of its soldiers," said O'Coyne.

Soldiers with a wide variety of abilities and backgrounds are screened and interviewed prior to assignment to the 3rd Battalion, 413th Regiment. The best of those interviewed are accepted as drill sergeant candidates.

Graduates of the six-month course then must successfully complete the 104th Division Drill Sergeant school program in order to earn the right to wear the Drill Sergeant Campaign hat.

The 3rd Battalion, 413th Regiment, will graduate 10 new drill sergeants in February.

Battalion staffs, drill sergeants and support personnel from other 104th Division brigades will continue to cycle through 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, throughout the next training year.

The 2nd Brigade will return next fall led by 3rd Battalion, 413th Infantry Regiment, which will displace Company E, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, for weeks one and three.

The 3rd Battalion, 413th Inf. Regt., Company A, Company B and Company C headquarters are in Spokane, Wash.

The 2nd Brigade, 104th Division (Training), is commanded by Col. Chub Bowers with its Headquarters in Pasco, Wash.

The 104th Division (Training) is commanded by Maj. Gen. Thomas E. Mattson, with its headquarters in Vancouver Barracks, Vancouver, Wash.

The 104th Division (Training) currently consists of 3,160 soldiers in 103 units and is the only Reserve training division on the West Coast. The division was organized in 1921.

It entered World War II in 1944, spearheaded the drive to the Maas River in Holland and fought with the First U.S. Army in Germany.

The division was reactivated in 1959, was realigned to the brigade concept in 1968, and was assigned its present mission in 1978.

The Timberwolf Division has units in Washington, Oregon and California.

Students win ROTC essay contest

U.S. Army Cadet Command

The U.S. Army Reserve Officers' Training Corps honored three high school students for writing excellence as winners in the third annual Junior ROTC Essay Contest Sept. 14 in Charlotte, N.C.

Winners are Anja Staten of Columbus; Shaunda Curtis of Knightstown, Ind.; and Mark Ng of San Diego, California.

The award winning students are U.S. Army Junior ROTC cadets who participated in a nationwide essay contest this past school year relaying their experiences in Junior ROTC.

Cadet Staten, a senior at Carver High School in Columbus, Georgia, was chosen as the winner from the First ROTC Region. Her father, Sgt. 1st Class Philip Staten, is currently assigned to Fort Benning.

Staten had almost forgotten that she had entered the contest but quickly remembered when told she had won from among the cadets who entered in the 15 states, Panama and Puerto Rico, which comprise the First ROTC Region.

Other winners include former Cadet Curtis of the Indiana Sailors and Soldiers Home in Knightstown, Ind., both the Second ROTC Region awardee as well as the national winner; and Cadet Ng, the Fourth ROTC Region winner and a junior at Samuel Morris High School in San Diego, Calif.

The essays were judged by high school English and composition teachers, as well as senior Army officials. Judging criteria included grammar, punctuation, organization and content.

The awards presented to the cadets were provided by the United States Mint. Each regional winner received a one ounce Silver American Eagle Bullion Coin. The national winner also received a one ounce gold American Eagle Bullion Coin.

The cadets were in Charlotte to attend a portion of the U.S. Army ROTC Cadet Command annual Commander's Conference. Maj. Gen. James M. Lyle, commanding general of Cadet Command, presented the coins at the conference banquet the evening of Sept. 14.

"I've never been to a function like this before," said Staten. "It's wonderful to put faces with the names that I've heard before and see that the officers and generals are real people. "I'm overwhelmed by everything — well, almost! "It's a first I'll always remember."

Cadet Command administers both the college and high school ROTC programs. Its goals are to encourage completion of high school, develop leadership potential, and strengthen character by emphasizing the values of integrity, loyalty and dedication.

More than 128,000 high school students are enrolled in the Army Junior ROTC program in 1,100 high schools across the nation. For more information about the essay contest or the expansion of Junior ROTC, call the Cadet Command Public Affairs Office, Maj. Robert Shepherd, at (804) 727-4612 or 727-4617.

Early detection can lead to cure of Breast Cancer

By Richard S. Hollis
American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists

You may be hearing lots of facts and figures about breast cancer during the month of October, which is National Breast Cancer Awareness Month.

Some of those facts are alarming; others are encouraging. Yet the basic message for October is simple: breast cancer, when detected early, can often be completely cured, and you can help detect this disease.

The bad news about breast cancer is sobering. The incidence of breast cancer is going up, and scientists do not know exactly why.

This year, 180,000 American women will develop cancer of the breast. Most will have no known risk factor for the disease — meaning all woman are at risk.

The good news is that, despite increasing incidence rates, the death rate from breast cancer has been fairly stable for many years.

Improvements in early detection of breast cancer and in treatments for the disease help account for this trend.

Also, earlier diagnosis now gives women more options for treatment; approximately 36 percent of women who develop breast cancer do not have a breast removed.

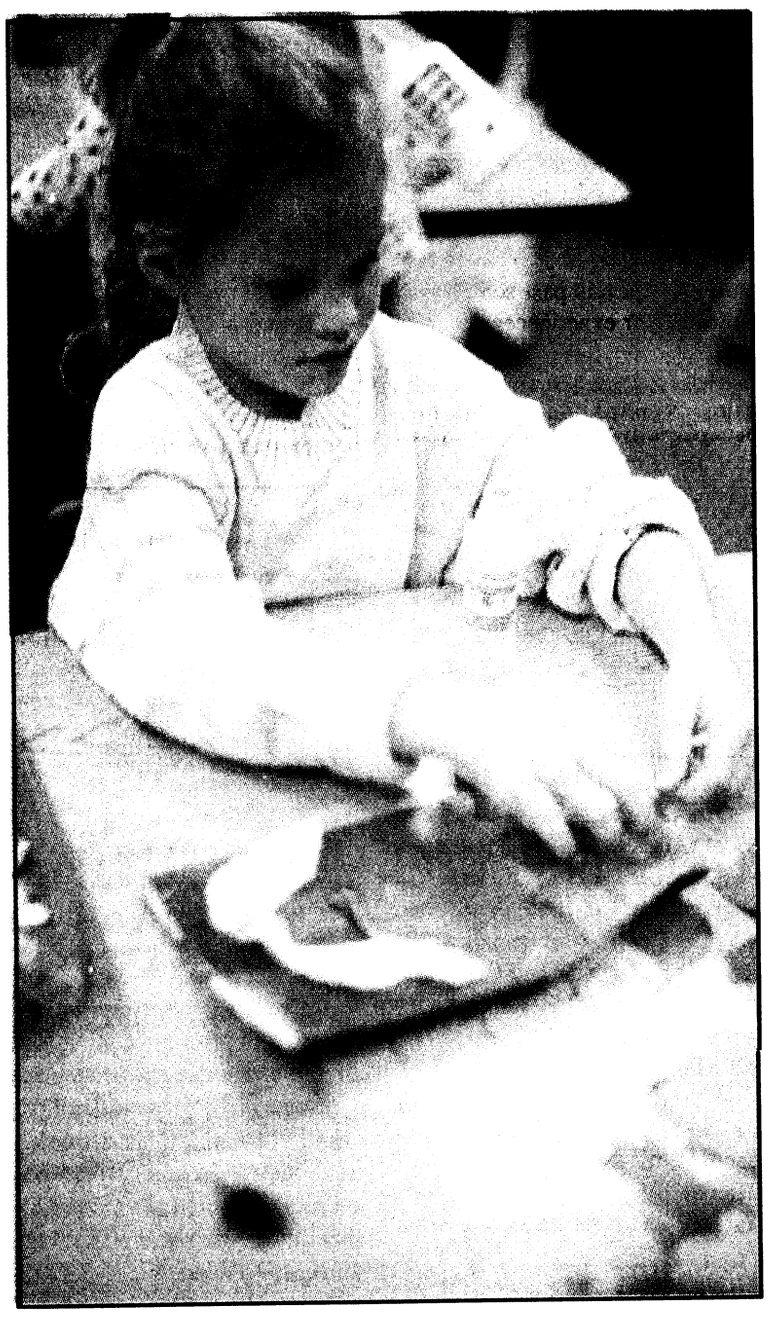
Early diagnosis is the key to treating breast cancer. After treatment for early breast cancer, a woman's survival rate is as high as 90 percent.

Every woman should take an active role in protecting her health by practicing monthly breast self-examination, having a yearly breast exam by a physician, and getting regular mammograms after age 40.

Many women become so afraid of what they might find that they avoid examining their breasts. It is important not to be ruled by fear.

Even if you or your physician find a lump, the chances of it being cancer are small — one in five.

However, if there is a problem, early detection not only improves your survival chances, it may also improve your chances of avoiding a mastectomy.



The risk of breast cancer increases with age: at age 30, women have a one in 2,525 chance of developing the disease; at age 40, a one in 217 chance, and at age 50 the rate jumps significantly to one in 50.

Whatever your age, remember taking care of your breasts is not something to be put off until tomorrow, but an essential and life-long project.

Storyteller teaches children creativity

Storyteller Amy Bishop encourages children to be like light bulbs.

"I want them to use their ears, eyes and brain. By using the three together, they can become a creative person. The combination is like a light bulb," she explained.

Bishop, an experienced storyteller participating in the artist-in-residence program at Dexter School, is one of several specialists working with Fort Benning Schools this fall.

"The artist-in-residence program provides a wonderful opportunity for our students to develop their interest and talents in creative endeavors while they are still eager and uninhibited. Our goal is to nurture life-long participation the arts by our students," said Dr. Dell Karr, assistant superintendent of curriculum at Fort Benning Schools.

Bishop epitomizes this concept as she encourages creativity and enthusiasm for storytelling and drama. She employs different techniques to create excitement such as the mirror techniques, where children work in pairs and emulate one another. Another method is the hidden object; children feel of an object, and must describe it and guess what it is without seeing it. Bishop also uses thinking games, where children listen to various sounds and tell what the sound means to them.

The sound of 20 stamping feet may mean a rainstorm to some; others will think of bullfrogs croaking or a cattle stampede.

"I've tried to get across to children the importance of details," Bishop emphasized. "I encourage them to read and use their creative juices and imagination to add detail," she said.

"I let them imagine, then create things," she added. "It brings out their personality."

Bishop has tailored her dramatic arts program to fit into the teachers' curriculums, noted Laura Feagin, a second-grade Dexter School teacher who was instrumental in recruiting her as artist-in-residence.

"We were absolutely delighted when we realized we had a local person who could come into our school and help with our language arts program," said Assistant Principal Anne Justice.

"Oral communication is a vital part of our program," she added.

Installations trade trash for cash

Army News Service

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Installations Armywide are catching on to an idea that taps a virtually endless money source in an era dwindling dollars: trading trash for cash.

Army installations earned more than $41 million in a two-year period through the Resource Recovery and Recycling Program, which Pentagon financial management spokesman Maj. Steve C. Prangley says is "more than just good business practice.

"The Army strategy is for installations to serve as national role models for environmental stewardship," Prangley said. "The RRRP is an integral part of that strategy."

Revenue made by local Defense Reutilization and Marketing Office sales of recyclables has earned some installations more than $400,000 a year.

That money, after paying for administration of the program itself, can be used to fund other environmental programs and morale, welfare and recreation activities, Prangley said.

Tangible program benefits include improved recycling facilities, building renovations, barracks improvements, the purchase of sports equipment and installation teen center improvements.

Direct return of revenue from DRMO sales of recyclables is only part of the savings the RRRP generates, he said. Less trash going into installation landfills means less money spent processing it — currently about $35 per ton.

Less trash also means landfills will last longer, and savings increase further as future landfill costs are deferred or even avoided.

Prangley said a landfill sufficient to support 20,000 people uses 25 acres of land, costs about $1.5 million to develop and $2.3 million or more to close.

"Those costs, too, will be rising," he said. "Another option being used by some installations to expand the recycling program to include on-post housing areas," he said.

"Households generate a far greater amount of recyclable trash than do offices."

To make recycling work in housing areas, it has to be made "as user-friendly as possible," he said.

"This usually involves scheduled curbside pickups. This works much better than requiring residents to transport trash to a central drop-off point. It has the added benefit of actively involving the community in the effort.

"The first step is to get involved in a big way," Prangley said. "The RRRP has to be a total installation management team effort. Getting started requires changing the way people think about trash and the environment. Once an increased awareness is achieved, recycling very quickly becomes a way of life. The sky is the limit."

Indian Cultural Festival begins at Columbus College today

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning will participate in the fourth annual Indian Cultural Festival today through Sunday at the Columbus College Campus off I-185, Exit 5.

The post will participate with Native Americans, archaeologists and folklore speakers and with public awareness posters, according to Dean Wood, Fort Benning's archaeologist.

The post received funds for the festival from the Legacy Resources Management Program to make the public more aware of Native Americans.

The program was created by the Department of Defense Appropriation Act of 1991 to enhance and expand cultural and natural resource management programs on DoD property.

Among Indian tribes represented at the festival will be the Creek, Yuchi, Coushatta, Choctaw, Seminole, Cherokee, Chickasaw, Houma, Miccosukee and the Alabama-Coushatta. Demonstrations include Indian dances, art, beadwork, finger-weaving, flute music, Seminole patchwork, stickball and storytelling.

Festival hours are 6 to 10 p.m. today, 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Saturday and 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday. Entertainment is continuous.

Craft demonstrations end at sundown today and Saturday and at 6 p.m. Sunday.

Festival admission for one day is $5 for aduits and $2 for children and students. Cost for three days is $10 for adults and $4 for children and students.

Dexter School students, teachers, parents sink their teeth into Hispanic culture, cuisine

Students at Dexter School had a real "taste" of south-of-the-border culture at a banquet Sept. 29 celebrating Hispanic Heritage Month.

A cooperative effort between kindergarten and fourth-grade classes yielded an array of Hispanic dishes that children were able to compare and contrast to their own diets.

The celebration was planned in conjunction with the school's study of people of Hispanic heritage and was designed to advance appreciation and understanding of Hispanic culture, according to Dexter School Principal Vicki Rogers.

"We want to be sure our children are enriched by these special programs," she said.

Children took turns visiting the banquet table, laden with such fare as creamy flan, polvorones, spicy Spanish rice, colorful seven-layer dip and tortilla chips. An array of hot peppers, commonly used in Hispanic cuisine, decorated the table.

Teachers Marge Brasfield and Peggy Gindville worked with parents to plan this finale to the study of Hispanic culture.

"I'm impressed with the parental involvement," said Brasfield, a fourth-grade teacher.

Parent volunteers provided the meal; and, at the same time, forged some friendships while canvassing their neighborhoods for recipes.

Some parents approached Hispanic neighbors for ideas and help in preparing dishes, according to Assistant Principal Anne Justice.

In addition to the ethnic meal, the month-long study of Spanish-speaking people also included such activities as a walking field trip to the School of the Americas, a Hispanic fiesta and a candy-filled pinata.

The school was open to those in the community who could share insight into cultural activities such as dance, songs, fashion, food and language.

"Our teachers pounce on opportunities to help children learn to respect and appreciate differences in others," said Justice.

"We have such a diverse group anyway, we try to celebrate our different cultures," she concluded.

During a Hispanic Heritage Month feast at Dexter School Sept. 29, some children participated in an informal round table discussion on some things they learned about the Hispanic culture and cuisine in South America. Those participating from Marge Brasfield's fourth grade class were Lisa Fry, Hannah McCarthy, Stephen Yackley and Clay Byrd.

The cuisine

"I like tacos because they are kind of messy; and, when it's messy it tastes pretty good," said Byrd.

"I want to taste a small bit of everything. It's like eating food from all over South America," said Fry.

The holidays

"We each studied a country. We learned how they celebrate ethnic holidays, and what their traditions are," McCarthy said.

"They play and work like us. We all have special days," Yackley said.

"They have the same feelings. They have friends like we have friends," Fry added.

The culture

"They like to do woodcarving. They grow a lot of cocoa," noted Byrd.

"There are lots of different jobs. They grow corn, bananas and oranges," said Yackley.

"They also grown sugar cane. They have fiestas to celebrate," McCarthy concluded.

Calendar of Events

Equal Opportunity Office

Units and directorates on Fort Benning have planned a variety of events to celebrate Hispanic Heritage Month.

• 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, will have a static display rotated through its companies featuring Hispanic graduates of Officer Candidate School.

For more information, call Staff Sgt. Roger Bradley at 545-3507.

1st Bn 11th Inf Regt hosts ifiesta!

1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment

The 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment had its Hispanic heritage celebration Sept. 29 on Taylor Field in front of 11th Infantry Regiment Headquarters, Building 76.

There were 16 Latin American regions represented: Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Cuba, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Mexico, Panama, Peru and Puerto Rico.

Participants from each region had the opportunity to show the public their own typical dances, clothing and singing.

There was a variety of cultural foods and a display of trinkets and clothing.

The guest speaker, from the School of the Americas, was Maj. Juan D'Alta, a visiting instructor from Venezuela. He shared past experiences as a military allied officer and mentioned some names of generals, philosophers, statesmen and Nobel Prize-winning scientists from the Hispanic community.

Col. Gregory Camp, deputy assistant commandant of the U.S. Army Infantry School, attended the celebration and assisted Lt. Col. Florian K. Rothbrust, commander of the 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt., with a presentation of a plaque and an award to the two persons responsible for organizing and coordinating the celebration — Staff Sgt. Ana R. Wallace and Carmen R. Flores.

Retired Air Force general: Similarities outweigh cultural differences

By F. Peter Wigginton
American Forces Information Service

Retired Air Force Lt. Gen. Leo Marquez is proud of the contributions Hispanics have made in the United States. Nevertheless, the growing cultural diversity taking place in the country disturbs him

"If you want to make those distinctions, that's fine. But not everybody agrees with being so segregated or categorized. That gets to the point that really disturbs me with this cultural diversity and political correctness going on right now," he said in a recent interview.

He explained that nearly all immigrants came to this country because they wanted to better themselves and enjoy a better life. They were eager to share in the freedom and culture of the new nation. They struggled to assimilate into the American society. They came and worked the mines and laid the tracks and sacrificed their lives for their children. Eventually they and their children became Americans, distinguishable only by their surnames.

For instance, he said, the Irish came and for a long time they were "the Irish." Now they basically are Americans, known as Irish only by their names. "And nobody questions that," he said.

Hispanics, continued Marquez, are no different in that respect.

"This is still the place where they come to better themselves. Then, as soon as they can, most of them assimilate and become Americans, distinguishable only by their surnames," said Marquez.

"However, I believe the reason we remain somewhat segregated is that we are about the only ethnic group that continues to immigrate, legally or otherwise. Many of our cities are flooded with Latin American immigrants who fled the troubles in Nicaragua and El Salvador. And they pour in from Mexico because they are hungry.

"We happen to be next door to one of the largest population blocks in the world. Many of them can just walk over here. Our stats tend to be skewed because we are continually being reinforced at the very lowest rung. That's why we have so many more in the poverty range. They still are struggling. They are our garbage carriers, maids, gardeners and hard laborers. Hopefully their children will do better, once they get educated," explained Marquez.

Following commissioning as a second lieutenant in November 1954 and flight training, Marquez spent the first eight years of his military career as a fighter pilot.

Because of a medical problem, he was removed from flying status. "I had an intestinal hemorrhage and the medics were afraid that if I had a massive one I might pass out and not be able to land the airplane," he said.

The Air Force gave Marquez the option of transferring to missiles or aircraft maintenance. He chose maintenance because of his love of airplanes, and worked the remainder of his career in logistics.

Marquez said he would leave early in the morning, fly a mission, which lasted about two hours, then return to work all day. He said he got shot down a couple of times.

Marquez returned to flying status following graduation as a distinguished graduate from the Air Command and Staff College in 1967. During a tour of duty as maintenance control officer with the 3rd Tactical Fighter Wing, Bien Hoa Air Base, Vietnam, he flew 156 helicopter missions "clandestinely."

"In wartime, things are different," he said. "The common currency is barter." He explained the Army aviation battalion commander at Bien Hoa had airplanes that were shot full of holes and did not have enough resources to fix them. He asked if Marquez could help him with supplies and manpower.

"I had a lot of sheet metal capability. I said, 'Sure, but it's going to cost you.' He said, 'OK. What do you want? Steaks, scotch, what?' I said, 'We'll take some steaks and scotch for the troops who do the work, and I want you to teach me to fly helicopters.' "

Marquez said one sheet of plywood was then worth two boxes of steaks. "The Army had all the food. GIs are very resourceful. And when you're in war, mundane, picky rules you live by during peacetime at home sort of get set aside. They don't seem that pertinent any more. Every army does that. A GI is the most resourceful guy in the world."

Marquez said he would leave early in the morning, fly a mission, which lasted about two hours, then return to work all day. He said he got shot down a couple of times.

"I had to keep that hidden until I retired because I wasn't supposed to do that," he said. "I got ... chewed out once when I didn't return for three days. It took that long to rescue us."

He said the Vietnamese were very good at using a downed aircraft as a trap because they knew a rescue attempt would follow a crash. "They left us alone. But every time (rescuers) would try to get in, they would blast them. They shot down four other planes before we finally got out."

Marquez said he worked the F-111 program for five years during the 1970s. "It was the procurement saga of the '70s. And although we had a lot of technical problems to overcome, it was one hell of an airplane. It's still one of the finest planes we've ever built."

His last position was as deputy Air Force chief of staff for Logistics and Engineering at the Pentagon. During that time, he said, he had to focus on resolving "all the spare parts overpricing horror stories —toilet seats, ladders, coffee pots. It was tough duty, but easier than dodging bullets. Congressmen and the press don't kill you, but sure cause you a lot of discomfort."

Marquez retired in 1987 after 33 years' service. It was at his retirement ceremony that Marquez was honored with the announcement that a new logistics award was to be named after him. Known as the Lt. Gen. Leo Marquez Outstanding Maintenance Personnel Award, it honors outstanding contributions to improve maintenance operations. Seven individuals in four maintenance disciplines representing the "best of the best" within the Air Force maintenance community are chosen annually.

When younger service people discovered Marquez was accessible, many asked for his advice regarding their career development programs. His answer was, "I never planned one step of my career. All I did was go into the Air Force and work. The only choice I made was to go into maintenance rather than missiles. Beyond that, all I did was go to work every day and do my best.

"As I look back, I couldn't have planned it better. The most important job you've got is the one you're in. If you want to go somewhere, you better succeed at that one. Like it or not, the only way out of it is to succeed enough to get you a better one." Minorities or not, people have to take it upon themselves to become qualified to get ahead. It isn't easy, and it doesn't happen overnight, he concluded.

Marquez's military decorations and awards include the Distinguished Service Medal, Legion of Merit with one oak leaf cluster, Bronze Star Medal, Meritorious Service Medal and Air Force Commendation Medal with one oak leaf cluster. He was selected as Air Force Logistics Command Systems Manager of the year in 1974. In 1977 he received the Air Force Association's Executive Management Award.

PET OF THE WEEK

This adult female German shepherd is looking for a home. She is well behaved and has had obedience training.

For more information, contact the Veterinary Services Office in Building 265 at 545-1127. Hours of operation are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:30 am. and 12:45 to 3 p.m. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

If you have lost a pet, check the stray impoundment facility in Building 283.

Stray pets are given three working days to be claimed from the time they are picked up by animal control personnel.

If the pets are not claimed, they become government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies tags are the only way Veterinary Services can contact the owner of a lost pet. Pet ownerswill receive their tags when they register their pets on post, which must be done within 14 weeks of arriving on the installation. Pet owners are reminded update their records when changes occur.

STOP DROP ROLL

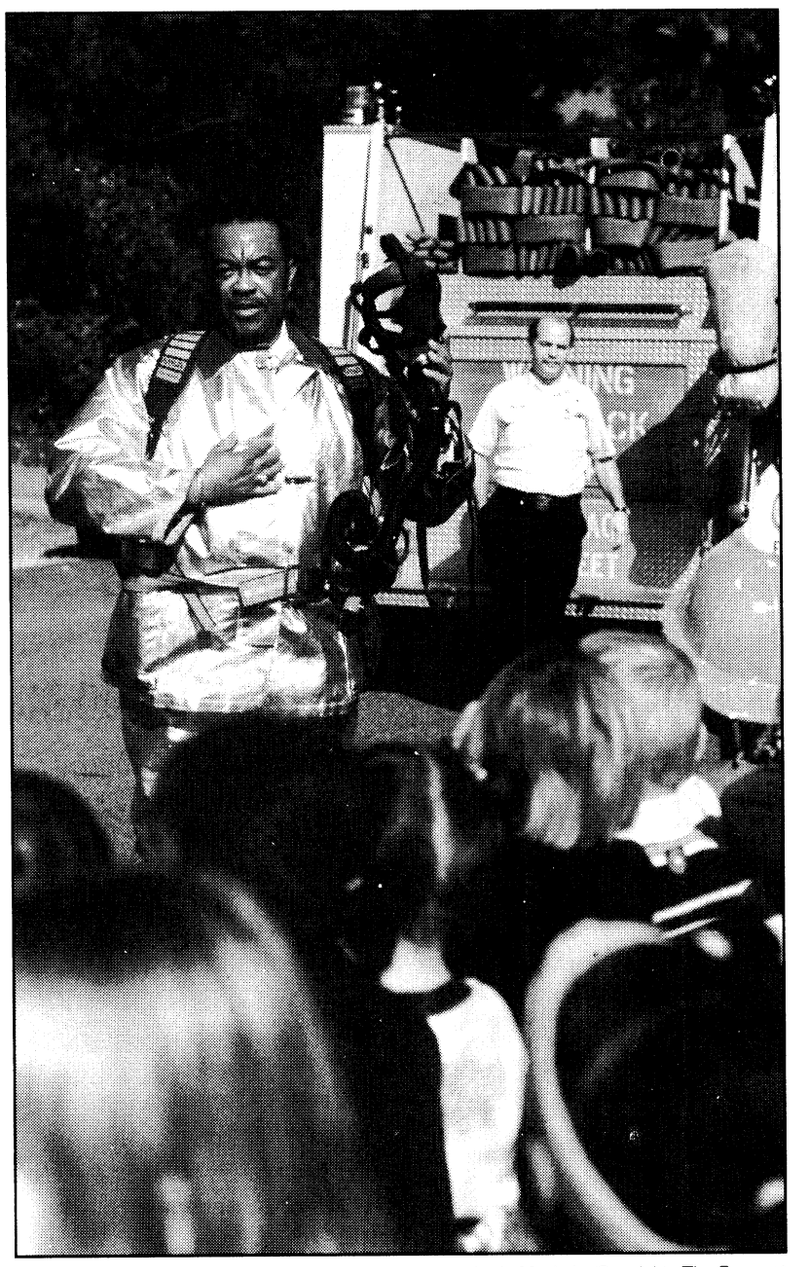
Students learn fire safety

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

Students in Fort Benning Schools got a first-hand look at firefighters and some of the special equipment they use as part of activities planned for fire prevention week, which was Saturday Oct. 3 to 9.

Kindergartners and first-graders at Loyd School lined the sidewalk Tuesday to hear fire safety tips and view equipment used to fight fires.

"This visit will familiarize the children with what a firefighter does," said Loyd School Principal Dr. Judy Gilliam.



"It helps the children to see that firefighters are friendly folks — they are helpers," she said.

On hand to answer questions and speak on fire safety were Lt. Richard Hollis, firefighters Luanda Sloan and Hollis Brown, and firedriver Aduflus Lakes.

Hollis emphasized the need for smoke alarms in all homes and reviewed the safety slogan associated with fire danger, "Stop, Drop and Roll."

He emphasized to children they should stop, drop and roll if ever their clothing catches on fire.

The children also shared with the fire specialists their own views on fire safety and prevention. The fire department made similar visits to all six Fort Benning elementary schools this week.

Spouse abuse unnecesary

Army Community Service

The cornerstones of the Family Advocacy Program's prevention mission are building community support and providing programs and services that positively influence individuals, couples and families to prevent conditions that stimulate family violence.

Child and spouse abuse are complex social problems with multiple causes. There is no one explanation or solution. Strengthening and stabilizing relationships is an underlying approach to preventing distress, spouse abuse and divorce.

Rebecca Welch, Family Advocacy Program manager, said one way to meet the challenge is to teach positive communication as the essential ingredient in the maintenance and enhancement of adult relationships.

Despite everyone's best efforts to promote self-reliance and prevention through education, information and early referral, incidents of family violence still occur.

Welch said a spouse abuse situation may begin with relatively minor acts of aggression (shoving, pushing, wrestling and hitting) and then escalate into a more serious incident involving the use of weapons or the threatening of life.

This is why prevention is so important, she said. Welch stressed that prevention of family violence depends heavily on early referral, support, education and information.

Soldiers and their family members need to know that the family advocacy program and services are developed to provide information, promote awareness, teach skills, create support networks and coordinate treatment.

Through working with families, Welch has found that soldiers avoid the chain of command and family advocacy in times of personal need, because they believe the myth that involvement with the program will adversely affect their careers.

Soldiers are reassured that the command recognizes that everyone experiences hard times sometimes and may need additional support at different points in their lives.

It is very important to know the command prefers to assist soldiers and families early on rather than having the soldier hide the problem until the situation becomes a crisis.

Soldiers and family members can support the Family Advocacy mission by knowing when and how to ask for help and follow through on recommendations.

This shows a willingness to take responsibility for personal behavior.

Welch said we must all remember that prevention toward family violence is a team effort and a community partnership. Resources are out there for families.

Welch said asking for help when you have a problem does not mean that you are a weak person. It goes to prove that you are a strong individual, wanting things to really work out for you and those involved in the situation; reality in the military is that "Strong families support strong soldiers!"

There will be a display in Building 2643 "Army Community Service" during the month of October. Families are encouraged to drop by and pick up free brochures on building healthier, stronger relationships.

Treatment classes offered through social work services

Domestic conflict containment program: This program consist of nine two-hour modules designed to teach skills of conflict resolution and anger management. This group is appropriate for couples.

Communication anger management skills program: This is a four-week group consisting of 1 1/2-hour sessions. The program is designed to focus more on communication and anger management and less on violence.

Parenting program: This is an eight-week program consisting of 1 1/2-hour sessions. The classes are designed to educate parents on effective methods of child discipline and guidance.

Concerned assistance resource educate: This is a support group for women who may or may not have experienced violence in their marriage. The group will meet during weekly two-hour sessions.

Help against violent expressions: This is a therapeutic eight-week group for men only to deal with issues of battering. The group will focus on attitudes, behavior and skills as methods of eliminating violence within a marriage. This group will meet weekly for two-hour sessions.

Spouse abuse prevention classes, briefings, workshops offered by the Family Advocacy Program:

- Anger control
- Personal stress management
- Child and spouse abuse
- Communication skills
- Domestic conflict containment program

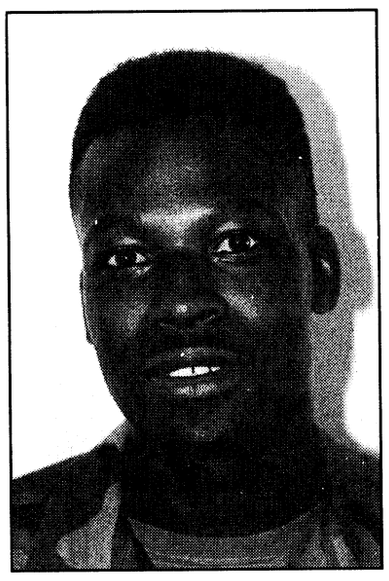
For further information on prevention classes, call Army Community Service Family Advocacy Program at 545-6969.

Army sergeant reaches for top

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

"If someone would have told me a few years ago that I would have 998 promotion points out of 1,000, I wouldn't have believed him," said Sgt. Anthony Felton of the Adjutant General's replacement Detachment.

The 30-year-old power equipment generator repairer said that he is living proof that the achievement is not impossible if you are just willing to work hard.



Felton earned 998 points by earning the maximum scores in nearly every category on his promotion point worksheet. In only one category, the staff sergeant promotion board, was he not able to earn all of the points — he got 198 out of the 200 possible.

He said the secret to success was setting small goals that enabled him to reach larger ones.

"I took each area and set small goals for myself. In the process, not only did I increase my knowledge, but I became a better person," he said.

Felton said in the beginning he never actually set out to maximize his score.

"I never actually set out to max my promotion points," he said. "I just tried to do my best at everything and was constantly trying to improve myself professionally. When I realized that I had 936 points, I got really excited because I knew I had a chance to max my points."

Felton

Felton said some areas are in reality not that difficult to master.

"You don't have to win the Medal of Honor to get a high number of promotion points," Felton said. "It's not always easy to max every category, but it's something that is not out of reach for a soldier who is willing to work hard."

A lot of his points were earned by being aggressive and looking out for chances to earn more points. He took College Level Examination Program tests, correspondence courses and attended various boards to help increase his knowledge and hone his presentation skills.

Felton added he also achieved success by not hesitating to exercise his leadership skills.

"I've always enjoyed meeting people and talking to people," he said. "Before I joined the Army, I was a salesman of everything from encyclopedias to vacuum cleaners and I have used those communication and leadership skills to enhance my military performance."

He added it's not necessary to be a single soldier with a lot of spare time in order to achieve professional excellence. Felton and his wife, Brenda, balance work with raising three daughters, Nireal, Lashonda and Delasha.

Felton also said he got a lot of inspiration from his mother, Jannie Mae.

"I want to give her something to be proud of," he said.

His future plans include submitting a packet to the Officer Candidate School and pursuing a degree in physical fitness and nutrition.

He expects to be promoted to staff sergeant in November.

Sgt. 1st Class Sharryl Martinez, Felton's immediate supervisor, said he is an inspiration to all the soldiers of his section.

"He's an outstanding soldier," she said. "It's great to see a soldier do something like this so that everyone can see it's not impossible. Felton is the type that doesn't wait for the cut-off score to come to him; he goes to it by working hard to increase his points."

ASK THE JUDGE

Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: I just purchased a used Volvo from another soldier. I paid the soldier the full purchase price in cash and expected the guy to sign the title over to me. Unfortunately, the soldier went absent without leave and I'm out $5,000 and don't have a title. I have a bill of sale and that's it. What do I do with the vehicle? How do I get the title it in my name?

A: The certificate of title to a motor vehicle is almost as important as the keys that allow you to start the vehicle.

Without the title in a state like Georgia, which requires such a document, you will have a hard time proving that you are the legal owner of the car.

A title is required to initially register a car in Georgia. It is doubtful that anyone will purchase your car without a title because he or she will not be able to register and drive it here.

Whenever you purchase a vehicle, you must make sure that you get the certificate of title either at the time of sale, if you are paying cash, or at the time that you pay off the car loan, if the title was given to the loan company to hold.

The state of Georgia will not issue you a new certificate of title in your name without specific directions form the previous owner, the AWOL soldier.

It sounds highly unlikely that you will be able to locate the AWOL soldier anytime soon. However, you can get a title from Georgia through a bonding process.

Insurance companies throughout the state, perhaps even your automobile insurance carrier, will assist you in getting a bonded title from the Georgia Motor Vehicle Division.

The insurance company will charge you a percentage of the book value of the vehicle, usually 1 to 8 percent, for the bond.

The purpose of the bond is to protect the true owner of the vehicle should it be determined later that you never had a legal claim of ownership to the vehicle.

Call the Legal Assistance Division at 545-3281 or 545-3282 to make an appointment to speak with one of the attorneys for more specific information.

Commanding general's reflections

Benning looks to quality future

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

"This is a good time to celebrate the 75th anniversary of Fort Benning," according to Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White.

Why? "There's no place comparable to Fort Benning," he says.

Winning the Army's 1993 Community of Excellence Award for the best large installation was evidence of this.

Is White satisfied that we are doing everything we need to be doing for our soldiers and family members?

"No," he said, "I will never be satisfied. When you're satisfied, you get tired eyes, and you become complacent. We've made great progress in the quality of service and support for the soldiers and their families. We will never be perfect, but we've got to continue to move forward."

He still sees the need to make such improvements as upgrading barracks, family housing, gymnasiums and sports fields.

Yet even some of this is already being addressed. Fort Benning will be one of the first installations in the Army to get new barracks, and they will be on Kelley Hill, sometime in the 1994 to 1996 time frame.

In addition, single soldiers are being surveyed so that whenever possible, efforts can be made for single soldiers to have the same benefits and quality of life as the married soldiers.

How does the soldier of today compare to the soldier when White entered the Army 33 years ago?

He said, "The American infantry soldier has not changed a lot over time. Resources put in to modernizing aviation, tanks, the Bradley, but the basic infantry soldiers and how they fight in the field has not changed a lot over the last 30 years or so. What has changed is that we have a better soldier."

The quality of the soldier is much better today than we've ever had before in our history, he noted. The volunteer Army was a great success story for everyone.

"Fears many of us had that we might become an elitist force and not represent America, never materialized." White added that it was because of a lot of right incentives and right decisions to improve the quality of life for the soldier and his family caused the military to be very attractive.

As for the future, White sees the country, the military and the Army in transition.

"The change in world events over the past few years means that the Army is going to be much smaller than we've ever had in the past. "

Pointing to the percentage of the gross national product that goes to the military, he noted that today it is the same as it was in the late 1930s. Even the percentage of people in the Army from the total population is the same as the mid-1930s.

Is this all that bad? White said no. "There is a limit as to how far the military can be reduced. I'm not sure of the right number, but probably around 500,000 in the active Army. What we have to do, however, is make sure we have adequate resources to train properly and modernize."

Sometime between 1995 and the year 2000, he expects that a new "soldier system" concept will be in place.

This will revolutionize how infantrymen will fight. He will be equipped with modern computers and the most lethal weapons systems.

He said the type of soldier who fought in Vietnam, Korea and Just Cause won't be recognizable in the year 2000.

As an example of what the soldier system will mean, White said, "I can envision a soldier riding in a helicopter or in the back of a Bradley, plugged into the side of the vehicle with a video screen in front. This will provide him enemy information, friendly information, tell him exactly where he is and his orders. As he dismounts the helicopter or Bradley, he will unplug, and the information he saw before will light up on his visor. He will be able to see a target and transmit this data directly back to whomever. The soldier will be a complete system fully compatible with other systems on the battlefield.

"I guess what I'm telling you," he summarized, "is that 'Buck Rogers' is here. Soldiers will be communicating with unmanned aerial platforms and will be able to see the enemy and transmit that information accurately."

White noted that the exciting part of all of this is that instead of developing one piece at a time here and there as has been done in the past, all of it is being done at the same time and put together in the "soldier system."

Fort Benning will be responsible for this, and so the changes will be great in this area in the next five years.

From time to time, there are those who have asked the question whether, in the light of new technology, an infantry soldier will be needed in the future.

White calls this a fair question, but also a foolish notion because history has taught us that no one ever really owns a piece of terrain until some infantry soldier stands on it.

"This hasn't changed, and never will," he added.

It's one of the reasons that White believes that Fort Benning will never be on any of the base closure lists.

He said our Army chief of staff once said that to close Fort Benning would be like turning out all of the lights on the entire U.S. Army, and White believes this.

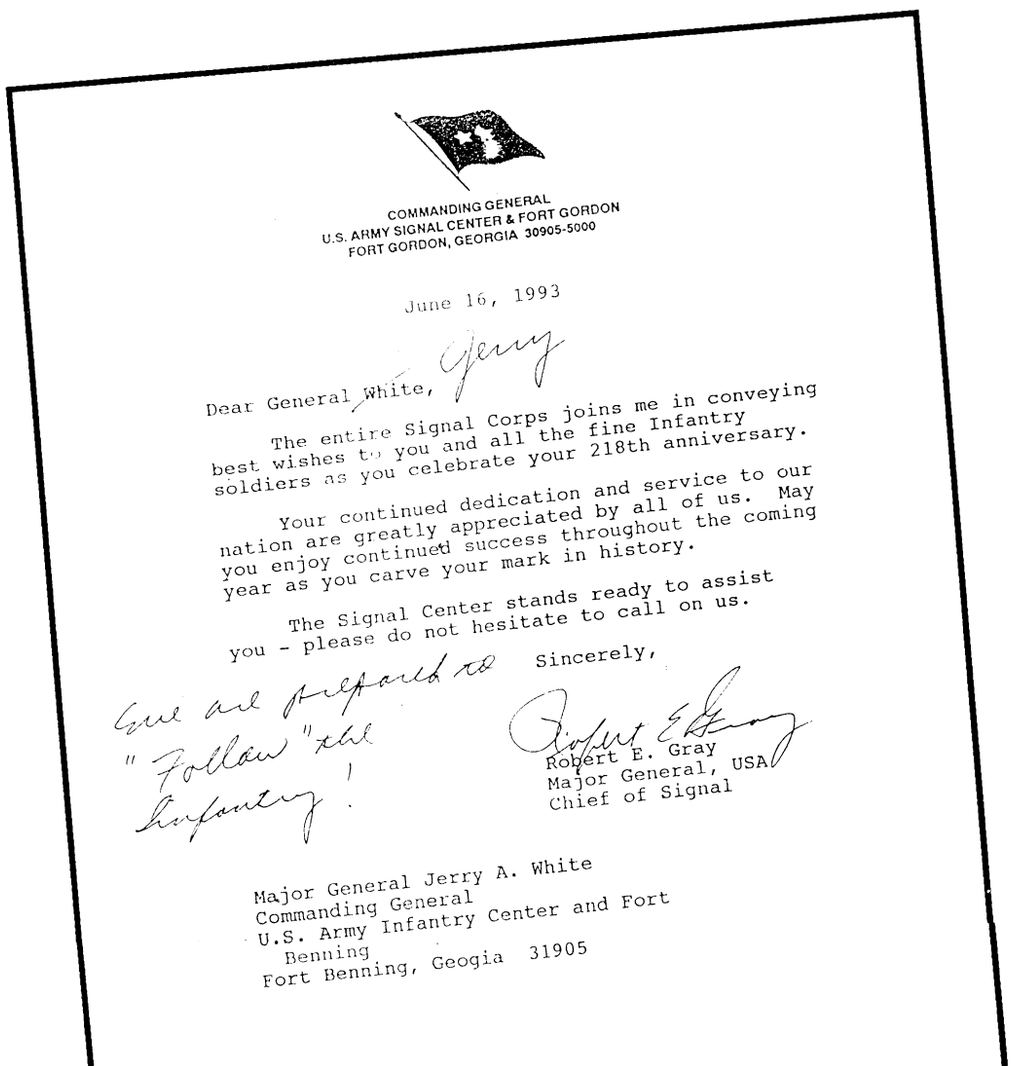
"Fort Benning will have some bumps in the road and ups and downs, but Fort Benning will be here long after I'm gone."

Another project at this post that will affect the future of the military is the Dismounted Warfighting Battle Lab.

"Through the use of simulation, we're able to take ideas and the technology we see emerging and experiment, mixing and matching simulation and actual exercises with soldiers to see what makes sense. Then once we come up with something, we package the concept properly and have a marketing strategy to gather support," he said.

"The beauty of the battle lab is that leadership has a lot of confidence in it. Also, it will enable us in times of tight resources to get modern equipment to the soldier at a lot less cost and much quicker."

"Owning the Night" was the first battle lab project at Fort Benning tasked by the Department of the Army. It is expected that its results will integrate all of the "Owning the Night" pieces across the entire Army.



What else can we look forward to?

White said that as the Army draws down its forces, additional structure will go into the Reserves. So these forces will take on a more important role than they have in the past.

"Then it only makes sense that we're going to train a higher percentage of Reserves in the future than we have previously," he added.

On units stationed at Fort Benning, he expects the 3rd Brigade of the 24th Infantry Division on Kelley Hill to remain.

"We've must have support for the Infantry School, if not from the 3rd Brigade, from somebody else, but I suspect the 3rd Brigade will be here for a long time," White said.

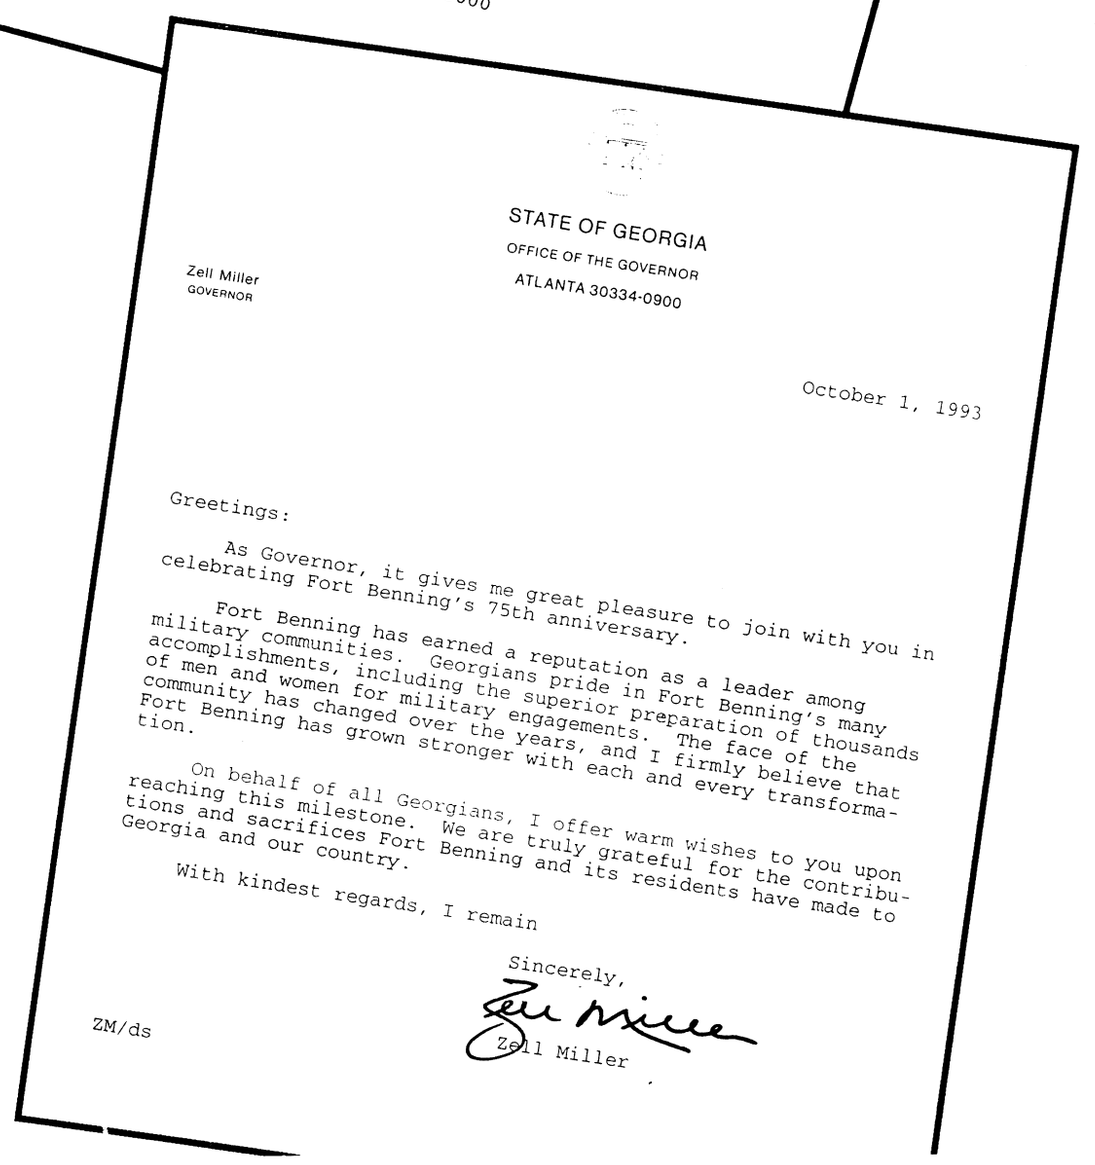
Dear General White:

Congratulations to the dedicated and professional members of the Infantry on the celebration of 218 years of distinguished service in defense of our nation.



It is with a sense of admiration and gratitude that all soldiers in the U.S. Army look on the contributions of the Infantry. As you observe its founding, may you be strengthened in your resolve to preserve the heritage and traditions of the past and continue to be prepared to defend the ideals of liberty and justice.

May they always say with pride, "Follow Me."

Greetings:

As Governor, it gives me great pleasure to join with you in celebrating Fort Benning's 75th anniversary.

Fort Benning has earned a reputation as a leader among military communities. Georgians pride in Fort Benning's many accomplishments, including the superior preparation of thousands of men and women for military engagements. The face of the community has changed over the years, and I firmly believe that Fort Benning has grown stronger with each and every transformation.

On behalf of all Georgians, I offer warm wishes to you upon reaching this milestone. We are truly grateful for the contributions and sacrifices Fort Benning and its residents have made to Georgia and our country.

With kindest regards, I remain

Sincerely,

Zell Miller

ABOUT THE 75th ANNIVERSARY EDITION

Fort Benning's Public Affairs Office and The Advertiser Company have been working since the first of the year compiling what we believe is a historical overview of Fort Benning, the Army post recently awarded the distinct honor of being the best large installation in the U.S. Army. Its history is rich and colorful as it has developed from a small outpost consisting of tents to a facility that has some 55,000 military and civilian personnel and pumps nearly $1 billion into the local economy.

Fort Benning's major units are some of the finest in the armed forces, each with its own proud story to tell.

We are extremely proud of this section. When this project began, we quickly realized that literally volumes and volumes could be written on Fort Benning's history. It is our hope that you will be educated on some of the highlights from the past 75 years and also enjoy looking at the historical photos.

A special thanks goes to The Infantry Museum, Connie Bridges, Richard Brill, Jennifer St. Onge, Terry K. Ray, Paula J. Randall, Agatha Debrow, Lita Clark, Wendy Wilson, George Adkins, Laurie Fielding, Ann Hill and others for their efforts in producing this 75th Anniversary Edition of The Bayonet.

Columbus fought for post

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

The war fever of World War I in 1917 was as strong in Columbus as elsewhere in the United States, maybe stronger, and it served as the beginning of a core desire to support establishing an Army post here.

It was on April 3, 1917, the day after President Woodrow Wilson asked Congress for a declaration of war against the Central Powers, that the Columbus newspaper carried a story on the local Chamber of Commerce seeking to have an Army camp set up here with at least a brigade of troops.

After the formal declaration of war by Congress on April 6, a call went out for reduced consumption of all commodities that would be needed to support the war, especially food; planting home gardens was encouraged.

According to Joseph B. Mahan, a Columbus resident who served as a historic preservation planner for the Lower Chattahoochee Area Planning and Development Commission and as a member of the Advisory Council on Historic Preservation, there was widespread apprehension for the safety of local transportation and power facilities against possible attack by German agents.

The Columbus Guard, Company D, had even been called back April 5 from pursuit of the Mexican guerrilla Pancho Villa to patrol these local facilities.

However, in mid-June, the company was ordered to Camp Wheeler in Macon, Ga., where they received training for overseas duty. By the end of the year, they were in France as part of the 121st Infantry of the 31st Division. The unit was split up as needed among various commands, and Company D was never reorganized.

Congress passed the Selective Service Act April 28, 1917, and by June all men between the ages of 21 and 31 were registered and the first were being called to duty.

Attempts to obtain the Army training camp were gradually all but abandoned as hopeless after several months of vigorous effort.

Originally, an Encampment Committee of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce made a trip to Washington, D.C., to promote Columbus as a site for one of the new camps, but met with no success.

Several members of the committee remained in the nation's capital for a time talking to War department officials and members of Congress until February 1918. They returned home convinced that further efforts were useless.

Unknown to them, on Oct. 21, 1917, Gen. John J. Pershing, commander of the American Expeditionary Force in France, sent a cablegram to the War Department asking for better training for soldiers.

Recommending instruction that prepared the soldier physically, with knowledge of sanitation, discipline and marksmanship, Pershing's request reinforced the idea that the United States needed a permanent infantry school to provide adequate training for combat soldiers.

It was reports from other high-ranking field officers and high numbers of battlefield casualties that led the War Department to create a special board to select a site and determine the type of instruction.

Headed by Col. Henry E. Eames, commander of the training facility at Fort Sill, Okla., the board selected Columbus as one of four prospective sites, thanks to the work done by the Chamber's Encampment Committee.

When Chamber of Commerce officials learned that the school was to be created, a full-time representative was sent to Washington, D.C., to promote Columbus' cause. He telegraphed back home Aug. 17, 1918, that the general staff of the U.S. Army had approved the recommendation of the investigating board that the Infantry School of Arms be located near Columbus.

Maj. J. Paul Jones was assigned as construction quartermaster for the project. Although no funds had yet been allocated and nothing had been formally approved by the secretary of War, Jones received word Sept. 20 that the infantry school staff and trainees from Fort Sill were en route and would arrive Oct. 1.

Therefore, with the help of the Columbus Chamber, finding a site for the training facility was the top priority for Jones and Eames when they arrived here shortly thereafter.

An 84-acre farm belonging to Alex Reid on Macon Road near the intersection of Dixon Drive was selected because it was about three miles from downtown Columbus and less than one mile from the city water supply and the nearest point for streetcar service.

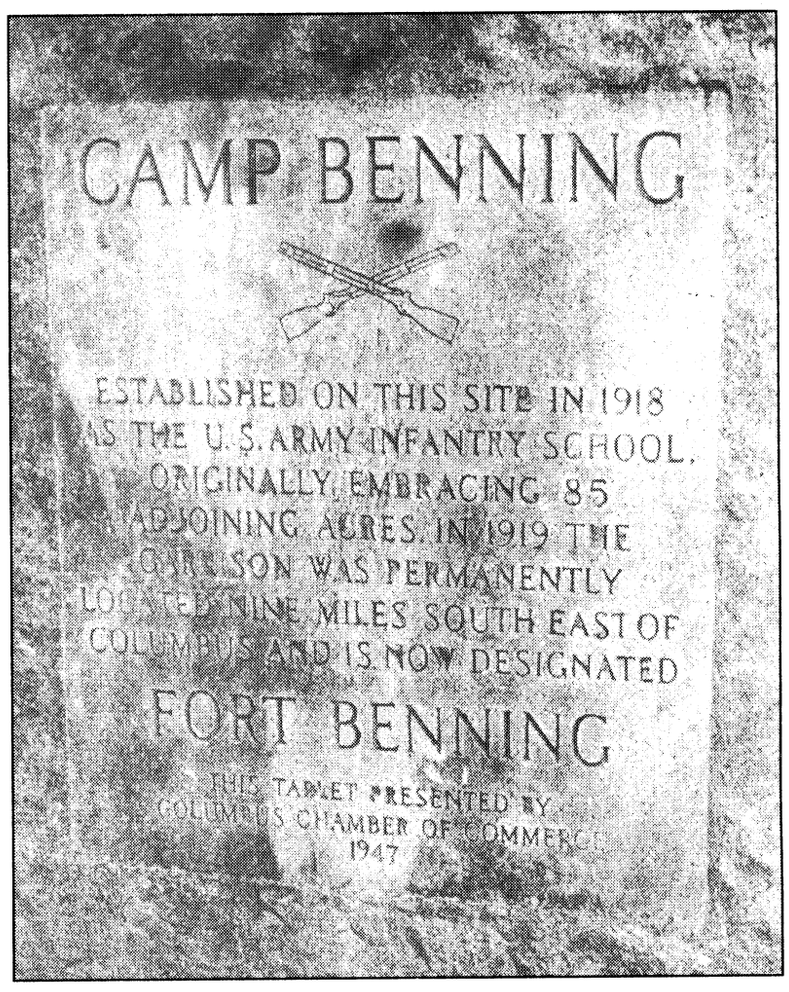
Today a marker at the intersection of Mimosa and Dixon commemorates the existence of this original Camp Benning site near Columbus Square Mall.

Mahan noted in his writings that since no money had been appropriated, and it would take $100,000 to build even temporary mess halls, tent frames, bath houses and water supply installations, Jones' acquiring of plumbing, electrical supplies and lumber is without parallel in military history.

Local civilians were so eager to have the post located here that they were willing to wait for payment until proper authorization could be handled.

A total of 400,000 feet of lumber was hauled to the camp site on Macon Road, and 300 tent frames, mess halls and warehouses were completed in seven days.

The first detachment arrived Oct. 6, and on Oct. 19 the new facility was formally christened Camp Benning in honor of Gen. Henry Lewis Benning at the suggestion of the United Daughters of the Confederacy.



At the formal ceremonies, Anna Caroline Benning, daughter of the general, raised the first flag over the post.

Soon after, it became clear that the post's current location was not large enough or suitable terrain for rifle ranges.

The new site chosen for Camp Benning was a 1,800-acre plantation owned by Arthur Bussey nine miles south of Columbus.

Mahan said that it was upon the initiation of condemnation proceedings in November 1918, that the U.S. Army took possession of the property, and the purchase price in June 1919, was $435,000. On Nov. 2, 1918, condemnation proceedings also began on 115,000 acres adjacent to the Bussey plantation .

Soon afterward, Camp Benning moved to Riverside and construction began.

Marker at the intersection of Mimosa and Dixon commemorates the existence of the original Camp Benning site near Columbus Square Mall. The monument was erected in 1947.

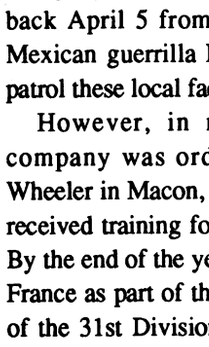
Acquisition of the additional 115,000 occurred with an order authorizing housing for 10,000 peacetime soldiers in training.

This appeared to confirm the permanence of the camp. However, Jan. 7, 1919, an order from the War Department directed abandonment of all new construction and lease options, cancellation of all condemnation proceedings and salvaging of all work already done.

The Columbus Chamber of Commerce representative returned to Washington, D.C., to organize a campaign to present Columbus' case before the Senate Committee on Military Affairs.

In addition, Chamber members visited the new camp commander and asked Col. Paul B. Malone to delay the dismantling of buildings until they had time to settle things in Washington. He agreed to work on the salvage portion of his duties.

In 1920, a bill to establish a permanent infantry school at the new camp in Georgia was defeated by a vote of eight to six.



Several other Chamber members joined their colleague in the capital and had the matter reopened. The second vote that finally established Fort Benning on a permanent basis was seven to six in favor of the post.

The Infantry School is still in operation 75 years later.

Post named after 'Old Rock'

A soldier, attorney, politician and justice of the Georgia Supreme Court, Henry Lewis Benning was a native Georgian whose career began in 1835 when he set up residence and started practicing law here.

Benning

He was born in Columbia County near Sparta, Ga., April 2, 1814, to parents of French-Welsh descent. The third of 11 children, he moved to Harris County in 1832.

His education included Mount Zion Academy, a co-educational school in Hancock County and Franklin College (now the University of Georgia) where he graduated first in his class in 1834.

Before moving to Columbus, he read law in Talbotton for George W. Towns, who later became a member of Congress and governor of Georgia.

In 1836, the governor appointed Benning solicitor general of the Chattahoochee circuit, and in 1838 assembly.

Benning resigned Oct. 30, 1839, to form a law partnership with Col. Seaborn Jones, his father-in-law.

After marrying Mary Howard Jones Sept. 18, 1839, he and his bride lived with her parents on Talbotton Road.

The family home, built during the Revolutionary War, was remodeled by Colonel Jones. Later named St. Elmo after a best-selling novel during Reconstruction after the Civil War, the mansion sat on grounds with springs and lakes. The water supply of Columbus was once carried through wooden pipes from these waters to the city.

In 1851, Benning ran for Congress on the Southern Rights Party ticket. He was defeated. Two years later at the age of 39, he was the youngest man to be elected associate justice of the Georgia Supreme Court.

A staunch supporter of states' rights, he took a prominent part in the conventions concerning secession prior to the War Between the States.

When the Confederacy was being formed, he was instrumental in drawing up the Ordinance of Secession at the state convention and was considered for a cabinet post.

With the start of the Civil War, 17th Regiment of Georgia Volunteers. During the first 18 months of the war, he fought with Gen. Robert E. Lee and was given the rank of brigadier general.

He commanded Toomb's Brigade of the Army of Northern Virginia for awhile, and later Hood's Division of the First Corps.

Benning was involved in the Second Battle of Manassas, Sharpsburg, Fredericksburg, Chickamauga, Thoroughfare Gap, Malvern Hill, Fort Loudon, Knoxville, Lookout Mountain, Petersburg, Farmsville and the Wilderness, where he was wounded in the shoulder.

For his coolness in battle, he was nicknamed "Old Rock."

At the end of the conflict, he was leading the Georgia Brigade at the time of Lee's surrender.

After the war, he returned to his law practice, and in 1866 was defeated as a candidate for judge of the Georgia Supreme Court.

Under Gov. James M. Smith's administration, he was offered the position of chief justice, but Benning said no.

He died July 10, 1875, at the age of 61. His funeral was attended by entire military companies, Confederate veterans, members of the bar, officers of the court and

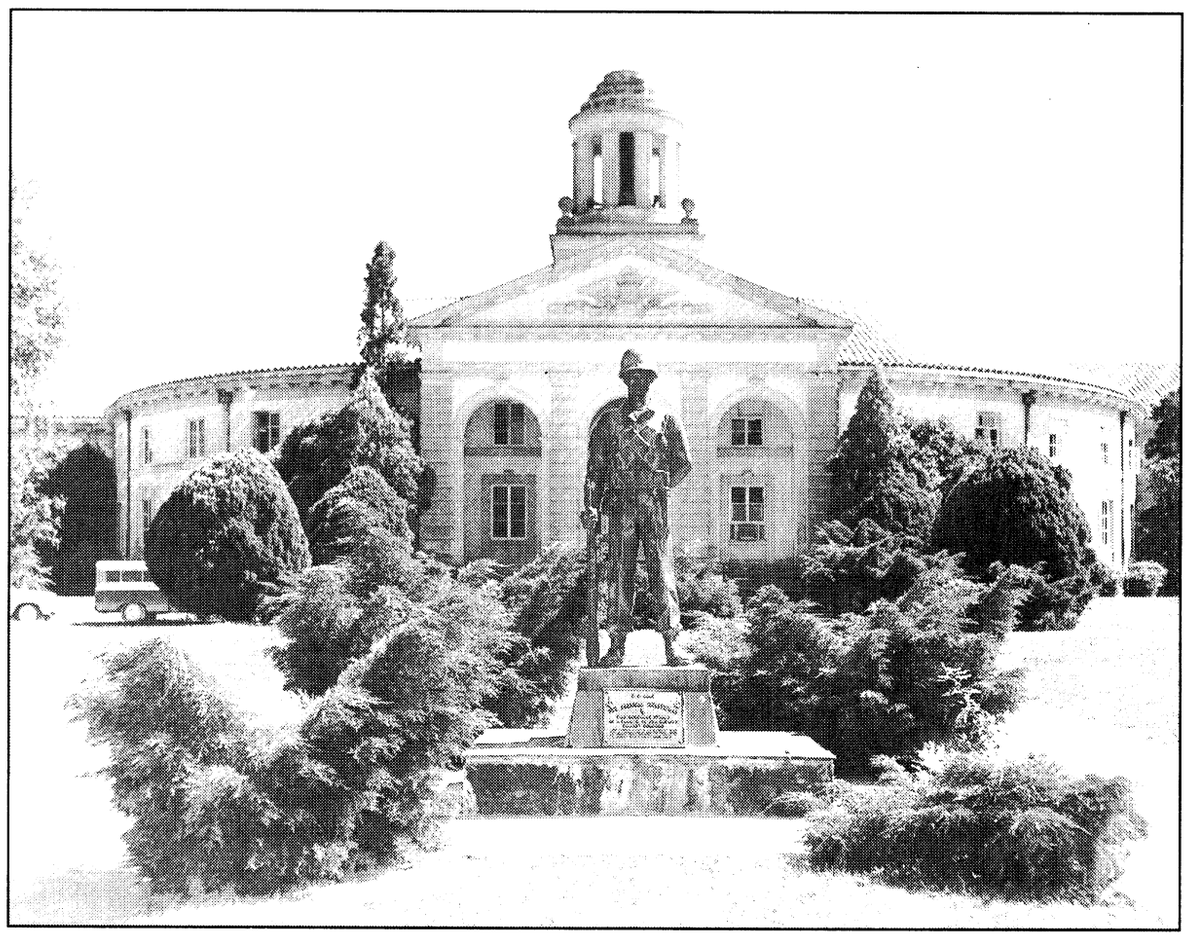
Infantry School trains soldiers to fight, win

School trains more than 60,000 soldiers a year

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

Fort Benning exists today because it is the "Home of the Infantry" and the U.S. Army Infantry School.



Here infantry officers and enlisted soldiers train to fight and win on the battlefield, with emphasis on doctrinal and tactical proficiency, the art of command and leadership.

The Infantry School is responsible for all infantry doctrine, training, leader development and new equipment. It is also responsible for the total infantry force, all dismounted soldiers throughout the entire Army. This includes mechanized, airborne, air assault, light and rangers.

Despite technological innovation, new combat systems and evolving doctrine, the infantryman remains the heart and soul of the Army.

The infantry's mission is to close with the enemy by means of fire and maneuver in order to destroy or capture him, or to repel his assault by fire, close combat and counterattack.

As the United States shifts from relying on forward deployed military forces to a military strategy that relies on troops based in the United States to rapidly deploy in support of national objectives, it is the infantry that causes the Army to be deployable, versatile and lethal.

The Infantry School in the 1950s.

Evolving doctrine, new weapons and equipment, and advanced technology will make the infantry even more lethal and survivable on the modern battlefield.

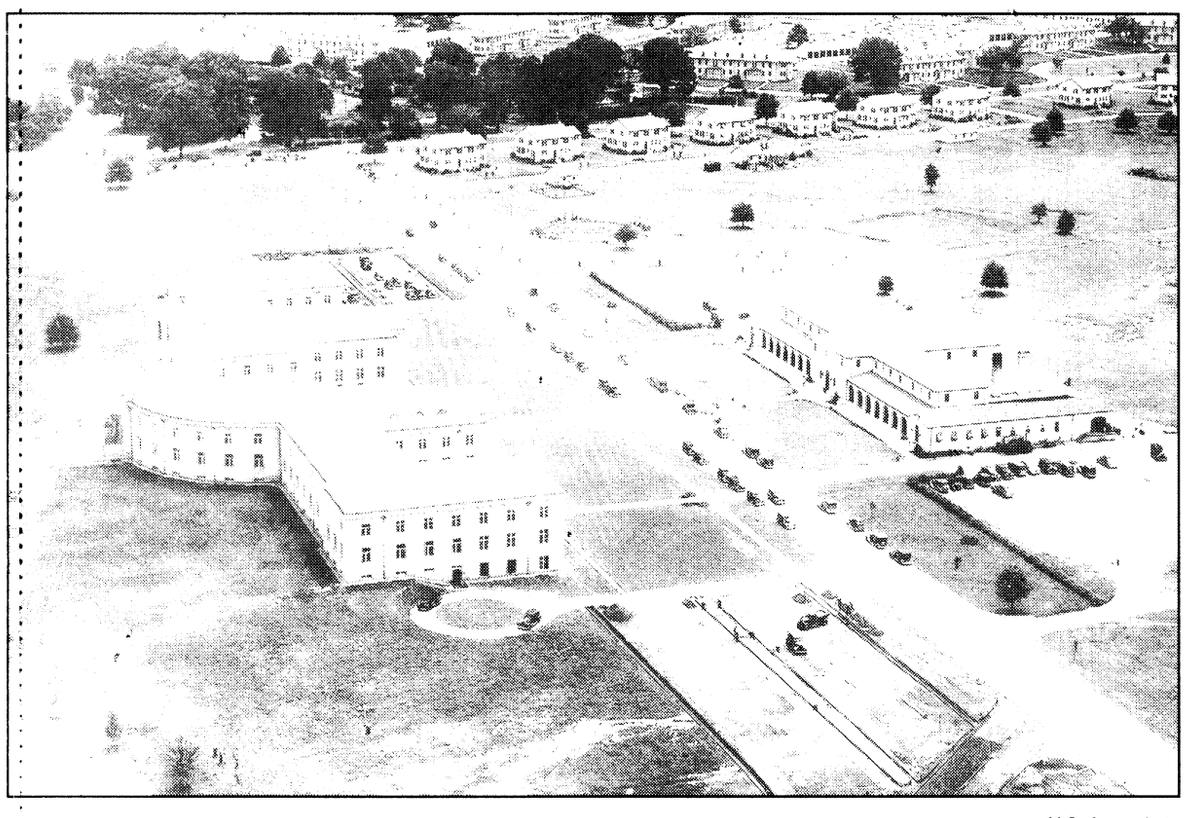
Today the Infantry School trains more than 60,000 soldiers each year in 30 courses that teach professional development and skill progression.

Some of these courses are the Infantry Precommand Course for battalion and brigade command designees, the Infantry Officer Advanced Course, the Infantry Officer Basic Course and the Branch Immaterial Officer Candidate Course. Infantry initial entry training soldiers here attend the One Station Unit Training Course.

There are also professional development leader courses conducted for personnel from the Reserve components.

Special skill courses include the Airborne Course, the Jumpmaster Course, the Pathfinder Course, the Tactical Offensive Weapon Trainer Course, the Infantry Mortar Leader Course, the Bradley Fighting Vehicle and BFV Master Gunner courses, the Ranger Course, the Light Leader Course, the Long Range Surveillance Leader Course and the Sniper Course.

Training military personnel from foreign countries in American service schools is another aspect of the U.S. Security Assistance Program, in which the Infantry School plays a vital role by training between 750 and 800 students annually.



Congratulations, Fort Benning!

U.S. Army Infantry School commandants — 1918-1993

By Connie Bridges

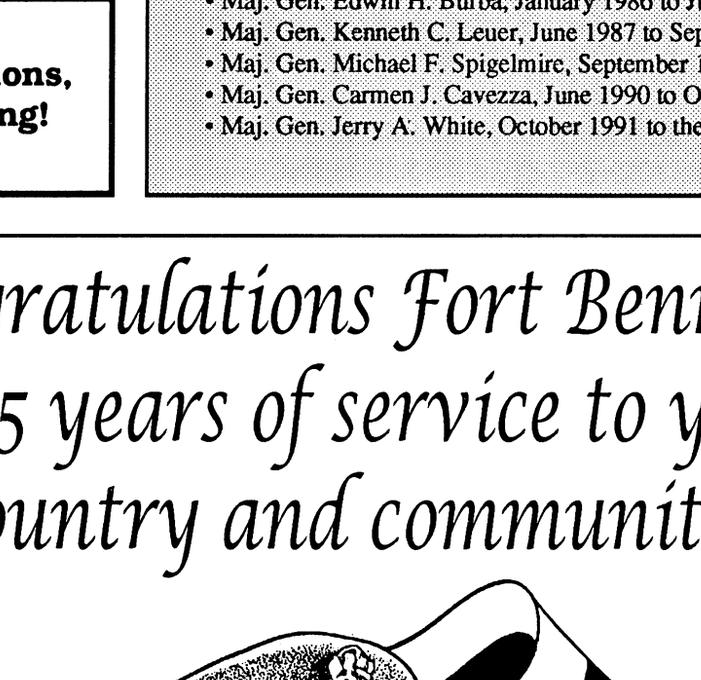
School built in 1935 at $556,321

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

The construction of the former Infantry School Headquarters, now School of the Americas, began in April 1934, and was completed in July 1935.

Built by Dice-Schmidt Construction Co. of Chicago at a cost of $556,321, the facility housed 19 commandants from 1935 to 1964.

The first commandant to occupy the third floor office was Brig. Gen. George H. Estes, who served until September 1936.



Then Brig. Gen. Omar Bradley is also among the distinguished officers who occupied this office. He served as the Infantry School commandant until February 1942.

The interior rooms of the building are named in honor of general officers who were killed in action or died of wounds received in action during World War II.

These names are Patrick Hall in honor of Maj. Gen. Edwin D. Patrick; Walker Hall in honor of Brig. Gen. Nelson M. Walker; Pratt Hall in honor of Brig. Gen. Don F. Pratt; and Wharton Hall in honor of Brig. Gen. James E. Wharton.

Fort Benning
Directorate of Community Activities is proud to be a part of the celebration to honor Fort Benning's 75th Anniversary!

The Directorate of Community Activities is vested with an important responsibility as stewards of your Fort Benning MWR program. Our commitment to you and your family members is that of assuring that Fort Benning continues to be the Home of MWR Excellence as well as the Home of the Infantry.

The Fort Benning community has witnessed the transformation of the old into the new. One notable achievement includes the Uchee Creek Army Campground and Marina. Uchee Creek, once a simple fishing spot with primitive camping, is now one of the finest outdoor recreational facilities in the Army. Log cabins overlooking the Chattahoochee River, fully equipped modern camping facilities, sports fields, play ground equipment, picnic pavilions, and a wide variety of outdoor rentals now compliment this sunny southern outdoor setting.

The Destin Florida Army Recreation Area, always beautiful, has been recently transformed into the ideal vacation spot, and as such, is enjoyed by the Fort Benning community and soldiers and family members from all 50 states. You, as Fort Benning soldiers, have reservation priorities and may choose from a variety of accommodations while enjoying charter boats, a swimming pool, private beach, and party barge and sail boat rentals to name only a few of your options.

Other key quality of life improvements include the complete remodeling and renovation of the Main NCO Club dining room and kitchen. The Main Post and Mall Bowling Center lounges have been remodeled to meet excellence standards. The Follow Me Golf Course now has a lighted driving range to better serve the many new golfers of all ranks who are enjoying this year-round leisure activity.

The following represents current facilities and services offered by Directorate of Community Activities to the military community. We invite you to visit us today!

Information, Ticketing and Registration (ITR)

When planning a vacation or weekend getaway, the ITR office is the place to go. ITR provides information on regional events and attractions and helps make reservations. This office provides military discounts on room rates, tickets for sporting events, attractions and passes for amusement parks.

Outdoor Rental and Leasing Office

Visit our Outdoor Rental and Leasing Office to rent a wide range of equipment from car dollies and barbecue grills to bicycles, log splitters, and even a dunking booth! We rent personal storage lockers and security storage space for recreational vehicles and boats. U-Haul rentals are also available. Hunting and fishing license may also obtained here.

Recreation Centers

There are two recreational centers on Fort Benning – the Sand Hill and Kelley Hill Centers. Recreational activities include movies, game rooms, musical instrument rentals, and a wide variety of social activities.

The Kelley Hill Recreation Center hosts the only chess club in the Columbus/ Fort Benning area recognized by the United States Chess Federation.

Sports Programs

We pride ourselves on offering our soldiers the very finest equipment and sports facilities.

We offer swimming pools, gymnasiums, baseball/softball fields, racquetball courts, squash court, and tennis courts. We also offer a one-mile track with a computerized energy-saving lighting system to provide adequate lighting at night.

Library

The Sayers Memorial Library offers a collection of over 53,000 items and a computer-based reference and research system. This full-service library is staffed with qualified personnel ready assist you.

Arts and Crafts

The Milton E. Long Arts and Crafts Center provides one-on-one assistance and training in woodworking, ceramics, and frame making. We also have a custom t-shirt, trophy, and engraving shop.

Auto Craft Centers

Two auto craft centers on Fort Benning, at Kelley Hill and on Main Post offer paint booths, welding machines, hydraulic lifts, brake honing machines, the most advanced computer analysis equipment in the business, and a complete automobile parts ordering service.
Our instructors are certified mechanics and are to teach you the ins and outs of automobile repair and maintenance. Check with us before you spend a lot on auto repairs.

CLUBS
Fort Benning Officer's Club

The Fort Benning Officers' Club offers a family fitness center-equipped with modern exercise equipment, a tennis complex with eight clay courts, two adult swimming pools and a children's pool. For the junior officers, there is the Rally Point with a CD jukebox and Bradley's Dance Club with the latest stare-of-the-art lighting and sound systems.

NCO Clubs

There are two NCO Clubs on Fort Benning, one on Main Post and one at Sand Hill, with special programs of disco dancing, dancing to Latino rhythms, and oldies music.

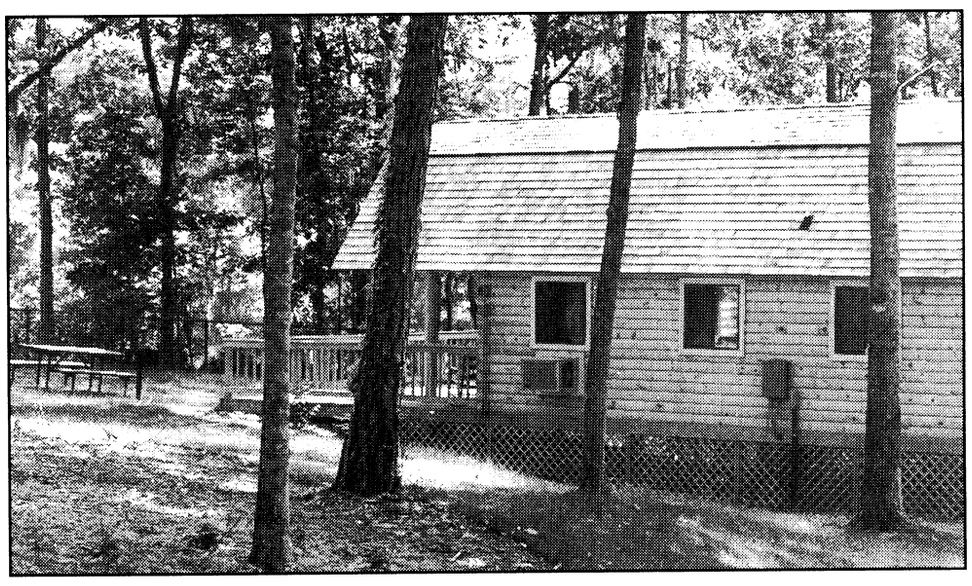
Fort Benning's Junior Enlisted Club, the "Hidden Door", provides a variety of activities to include dancing to the latest tunes spun by a DJ, high tech sound and laser lights, and a game and pool room. A new Junior Enlisted Club is currently under construction.

Both of our centers have a of synthetic lanes and automatic scorers which are the most modern in the Columbus area while our lane fees are the lowest. Fully stocked pro shops recently renovated the lounges, game rooms, snack bars and a variety of specials where patrons may receive free games of bowling.

The "Follow-Me Golf Course"



Offers two 18-hole courses, a clubhouse housing a snack bar, banquet room, and pro shop, and sponsors over 80 tournaments each year.

Destin Recreation Area

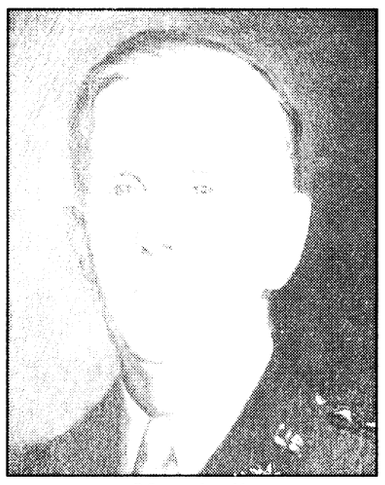
Destin is near what is known as the world's luckiest fishing village. Within minutes are beautiful gulf beaches, a variety of fine restaurants, shopping galore, and a great night life. Our facility offers a pool, 22 duplex/cottages, 34 motel units, 66 RV pads, and 23 campsites available at very reasonable rates. You may rent jet skis, sail boats, pontoon boats, and various other equipment. The "Follow Me", a 48 foot charter boat will take you out 20 miles to enjoy abundant fishing off the Florida coast.

Uchee Creek Army Campground and Marina

This first-class outdoor recreational area offers 16 log cabins, or 65 campsites to choose from. The country store, picnic pavilions, softball field playgrounds, outdoor basketball and volleyball courts and lodge are available to round out your stay. We offer a full range of outdoor rentals such as party barges, bass boats, canoes and campers.

As the installation has grown, so have we.

Eisenhower, Patton, Powell part of post history



By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

• Gen. of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower (then major) came to Fort Benning as executive officer for the 24th Infantry in the 1920s.

While here, he was also asked to coach the football team. Eisenhower later said, "with an enormous effort of will" he told his commander he had just turned down a job to coach for extra money while teaching ROTC at a northwestern university. He really didn't care to do it for free, but he did anyway.

Eisenhower left Fort Benning in 1926 when he was asked by Gen. of the Army John J. Pershing to come to Washington, D.C., and write a guide to American battlefields in Europe.

The Republican Party convinced him to run for president in 1952. His terms from 1952 to 1960 were the last times that America had a balanced budget.

Marshall

• The first professional soldier to become secretary of state, Gen. of the Army George Catlett Marshall also served as the assistant commandant of the Infantry School at Fort Benning from 1927 to 1932, being credited with helping to raise the level of instruction here.

He earned the Nobel Peace Prize in 1953. Marshall began negotiations too that led to the formation of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Marshall resigned this position due to poor health, but went on to serve as president of the American Red Cross from 1949 to 1950.

In 1950, he was made secretary of Defense when an act of Congress set aside the rule that this had to be a military post.

• A 1928 graduate of the Infantry School's Advanced Officers Course, Maj. Gen. Joseph I. Martin is best known for his work in field medicine and his long intimate service in medical military education and training.

Martin, for whom Fort Benning's Martin Army Community Hospital was named, received his medical degree from Chicago Hospital College of Medicine. Later that year, he was appointed a first lieutenant in the Army Medical Corps Reserve.

In addition to the Infantry School, his Army education included the Army Medical School, the Medical Service School, the Command and General Staff College, and the Army War College.

In a span of 36 years of active duty, he saw service in three wars, gaining military experience that qualified him as one of the outstanding authorities in military education and training.

Hodges

• Between 1929 and 1933 at Fort Benning, Gen. Courtney Hodges won the friendship of Gen. Omar Bradley and the confidence of Gen. George Marshall.

In 1940, he was promoted to brigadier general and commandant of the Infantry School. As a major general in 1941, Hodges went to the War Department in charge of the Infantry Bureau.

Hodges was regarded as a professional expert in the infantry, training, equipment, weapons and tactics. He also significantly influenced the preparation of the American citizen-army for overseas ground combat.

• One of the most colorful American generals of World War II, Gen. George Smith Patton Jr., with his 2nd Armored Division were Sand Hill's first occupants at Fort Benning.

It was his toughness and rough speech that earned him the nickname, "Old Blood and Guts." His dramatic manner, outspoken comments on political and military matters, as well as his reckless behavior won him both favor and criticism.

In 1941 as commander of the 2nd Armored Division, Patton's forces trained for a year at Fort Benning on Sand Hill before leaving for Africa.

To accommodate the division's needs, hundreds of temporary buildings were thrown up here almost overnight.

Bradley

• Gen. of the Army Omar Nelson Bradley, who during World War II commanded the largest fighting force ever amassed in battle under the American flag, was in charge of the Weapons Department for the Infantry School at Fort Benning in the early 1930s.

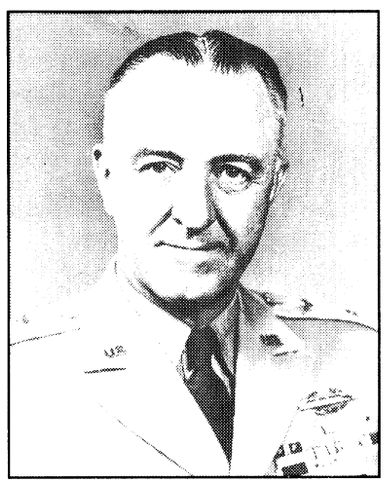
In 1948, Bradley became chief of staff for the U.S. Army, followed by his post as the first chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff in 1949.

That same year, he received an appointment as the first chairman of the Military Committee of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

It was in 1950 that he was made a general of the Army, and in 1951 that he wrote his World War II experiences in "A Soldier's Story."

• Nicknamed "Vinegar Joe" because of his forthright manner, Gen. Joseph Warren Stilwell was the first American general to command a Chinese army.

During the 1930s, he was in charge of the Tactics Department for the Infantry School at Fort Benning.



Singleton

• A veteran with 42 years of Army service, Gen. Asa Singleton served as commandant of the Infantry School from 1936 to 1940 and was a member of the War Department general staff during Gen. of the Army John J. Pershing's term as chief of staff of the Army.

After leaving the War Department general staff, he had two tours at Fort Benning including with the Infantry School demonstration troops and as commander of the 29th Infantry.

Singleton became Fort Benning's commandant after his position with the Office of Chief of Infantry, Washington, D.C., where he served four years in charge of training.

Powell

• "The infantry has a dominant role in any type of war. We strike hard and fast toward deep objectives."

Gen. Herbert B. Powell, who made this remark was the commandant of the Infantry School from 1956 to 1958.

Powell, whose military life began in 1919, returned to Fort Benning for his final tribute, a retirement review of troops at French Field.

Having earned his third star while directing the Infantry Center and Infantry School at Fort Benning, Powell was cited by the mayors of Columbus and Phenix City at the time for furthering the fine relationship between the military and civilians in the area.

During his tour as post commander here, he earned his Army aviator rating at Lawson Field taking his training in rotary wing craft.

Freeman

• Gen. Paul Freeman on the eve of his retirement from the Army in 1967 was paid the highest tribute of the Reserve Officers Association of the United States by being admitted to the "Minuteman Hall of Fame."

Commandant of the Infantry School at Fort Benning from 1958 to 1960, Freeman was born in 1907 in Manila, Philippines, the son of an Army officer.

He was a 1929 graduate of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., who attended the Infantry School's company officers course in 1932 and 1933, and the tank course from 1937 to 1938.

During his years as commandant of the Fort Benning post, Freeman's accomplishments included the Worldwide Infantry Conference, the first Army Leadership Conference, changes in doctrine and tactics necessitated by the organizational changes in infantry units, and the transition in resident and nonresident instruction.

• Gen. Colin Powell, former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, was posted to Fort Benning as one of his earlier assignments in his military career.

Powell returned to the States after serving in Vietnam and was reassigned to Fort Benning for the Infantry Officer Advanced Course. Here, his daughter, Linda, was born.

After serving as senior military assistant to the deputy Defense secretary under President Jimmy Carter in 1979, Powell became executive assistant to the secretary of Energy. By now, he was a major general. He later served as Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger's senior military assistant and later as national security advisor under President Ronald Reagan.

It was in 1988 that he was made commander of the Armed Forces Command and in 1989, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Livsey

• A native of Clarkston, Ga., Gen. William J. Livsey went on in 1984, after his 1977 to 1979 term as commandant of the Infantry School at Fort Benning, to become commander-in-chief of the United Nations Command, commander-in-chief of the Combined Forces Command and commander of U.S. Forces, Korea and commanding general of the Eighth U.S. Army.

His military education included completion of the Infantry Officers Basic and Advanced courses, the U.S. Army Command and General Staff College, the Armed Forces Staff College and the Army War College.

Post schools dedicated to war heroes

• The Don C. Faith Middle School, originally located where the Henry Caro Noncommissioned Officers Academy is today, was built in 1952 at a cost of $300,000. Two years after the school opened, a tornado took the entire roof off the gym. When it was replaced, the name of the school was changed to the east side of the gym.

A new middle school was built in 1987 on Ingersoll to accommodate a growing number of students. The name moved with the school. The new facility, with 84,000 square feet, was built at a cost of $4 million with wings for each grade.

Lt. Col. Don C. Faith lived with his family at Fort Benning from 1932 to 1935 and attended school in Columbus. He came to Fort Benning as an officer candidate, was commissioned a second lieutenant in 1942. In Korea, he was mortally wounded and received the Medal of Honor posthumously.

• Dedicated March 26, 1959, Frank R. Loyd School on Santa Fe Road was named after a soldier who was in the same class at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., as the person for whom William H. Wilbur School was named.

Second Lt. Frank R. Loyd Jr., the son of retired Col. and Mrs. Frank R. Loyd, lived with his family at Fort Benning from September 1937 through May 1939, attending the fourth and fifth grades at Fort Benning Children's School (what became Alexander Patch School later).

Loyd was killed in action in Korea in 1950 and was posthumously awarded the Distinguished Service Cross.

Heroism ran in Loyd's family; his father hid from the Japanese during World War II on Bataan for three years. Loyd was in the Philippines in December, 1941, when the Japanese attacked, and he was cut off from the main body of American troops. After attempting for three days to rejoin his unit, he heard that the Americans had surrendered. He lived in the jungle until 1945 awaiting the U.S. invasion that he was sure would come.

• White School is named for 1st Lt. Edward A. White who was killed in action in the Korean conflict.

White School was once called the "Hospital-Area School" because the hospital was located in what is now the Infantry Museum, and White School was across the street in some Army barracks where the Youth Activities Center is today.

When the school was dedicated Jan. 5, 1962, there were only the main building and two pods. Almost immediately, the school was under construction again because there was only enough room for grades one through four.

• Completed in August 1965, Richard G. Wilson School was built to meet the needs of children in grades one through six from the 158 families living in what was the new noncommissioned officer Capehart housing area, now Indianhead Terrace.

The school is named for Pfc. Richard G. Wilson, who was posthumously awarded the Medal of Honor for distinguished service in Korea in 1951.

• Built at a cost of $500,000, Morris R. McBride School opened in the fall of 1965 with Richard G. Wilson School, but was not completed and dedicated until Jan. 7, 1966.

McBride was the son of retired Col. and Mrs. Otto L. McBride, and had lived at Fort Benning attending grade school on post in 1943 and 1944.

He graduated from the Officers Basic Course, Airborne School and Ranger School at Fort Benning, as well as graduating from the Officers Advanced Course in 1963. During this assignment, he and his family lived on post, where his daughter attended school.

He was mortally wounded in Vietman and was posthumously awarded the Distinguished Service Cross Sept. 10, 1964. McBride was survived by his wife, Anne, and daughters, Charmaine and Kirsten of Columbus.

• Herbert J. Dexter School, dedicated Nov. 10, 1969, was constructed at a cost of $800,000 by Williams Construction Co. of Columbus.

Dexter enlisted in the Army in 1949. After three years of enlisted service, he entered Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning, and upon graduation, completed the Airborne Course and was assigned to the 508th Regimental Combat Team here.

In 1958, he completed the Officer Career Course at Fort Benning. While here, his eldest daughter, Victoria, attended kindergarten in an on-post school.

His heroism and devotion to duty at the cost of his life earned him the Distinguished Service Cross, the nation's second highest award for valor, awarded posthumously.

• This year, the new Stowers School opened for children in the Bouton Heights and Davis Hill housing areas. It was dedicated to the memory of Cpl. Freddie Stowers, a Medal of Honor recipient.

Stowers was posthumously awarded the Medal of Honor April 24, 1991, 72 years after he led an attack on a German machine gun placement and enemy trenches during World War II.

The Medal of Honor was presented to his sisters, Mary Bowens of Greenville, S.C., and Georgina Palmer of Richmond, Calif., by President George Bush.

The school bearing his name accommodates 620 to 650 students.

Post evolves from plantation to modern facility

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

Barracks and family housing at Fort Benning have changed a great deal over 75 years and have been constantly in a state of flux with repair, renovation and new construction.

In 1987, a historic building survey took into account the buildings on post and how they came to be. Presently, the post has 4,000 sets of quarters with 50 different floor plans.

Originally, the Bussey Plantation, which in 1919 became the new site of Camp Benning after its move from the Macon Road location, included:

- The main house called Riverside.
- A brick creamery, now part of Building 5.
- Three barns and a silo in the area of Austin Loop.
- A farmhouse at Lavoi Manor.
- A silo near Lawson Army Airfield
- Other miscellaneous farm structures.

To this inventory of existing structures, Maj. John Paul Jones, in charge of the Quartermaster Corps, began constructing about 450 buildings of semi-permanent cantonment type, as well as utilities and rail lines.

With no rail connections nearer than six miles, troops had to build 11 miles of standard gauge rail line to Columbus and 27 miles of narrow gauge for transportation on the reservation for materials and personnel.

This building program was never fully implemented due to protracted Congressional debates that Camp Benning and several other posts were not needed following the World War I armistice.

When it was about 60 percent complete, the cessation of all construction work was ordered.

Unable to build proper barracks, row upon row of tents were erected as successive waves of student officers and troops continued to arrive for training.

Despite the appropriations problems, the quartermaster made progress in getting the camp functional through natural resources — salvaged materials from disbanded camps, post labor and ingenuity. With 40,000 acres of timber and rich sand and gravel beds to use, structures that were built included a post bakery, signal corps building, laundry, headquarters, gas station, bridge across the Upatoi River, post exchange, cantonment barracks, old officers' club, railroad station and tank and artillery storage sheds and stables. Most of these no longer exist.

While the original scope of instruction at the Infantry School pertained to marksmanship and musketry, by 1920 it pertained to the whole field of infantry weaponry, tactics and cooperation with other arms of the military.

As the scope of the school broadened, the post population grew. With an anticipated garrison strength of more than 8,000, it was necessary to erect a sizeable tent camp for troops and officers. This remained in some part for more than 10 years.

The effect of this temporary housing was that it took away money from permanent construction and represented a physical barrier to the planned development of the camp, and it meant inferior housing that was damaging to camp morale. Housing remained a problem for the rest of the decade.

By the end of 1921, there were a few buildings of permanent construction including the Bachelor Officers' Mess (Building 229) and the Enlisted Men's Service Club (Building 227).

In 1922, a War Department order made Camp Benning a permanent post, and a policy of permanent construction began.

Early structures included the Post Gymnasium, two steel-trussed bridges over the Upatoi, the Main Hospital building, 10 sets of brick noncommissioned officers' quarters (McIver Street), and 50 sets of brick officers' quarters (Wold and Sigerfoos, and Austin Loop).

Under the leadership of Brig. Gen. Briant H. Wells, new commandant of the Infantry School from 1924 to 1926 and then assistant chief of staff for the War Department, Fort Benning took on more of the look that Main Post has today.

A major central campus of public buildings became the keystone of Main Post. To the west of this, where temporary barracks stood, the plan showed a parade ground, which is now Stilwell Field. Beyond that was planned the first of the cuartel-type buildings.

To the north of the central campus were to be officers' quarters, while to the east was the Main Hospital.

In implementing the recreational facilities, a board was created on post by the secretary of War in 1924. Unique to the Army, it was allowed to procure funds, plan and execute recreational developments.

Within four years, it created a complex of facilities that was unmatched at other installations, except at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y.

These included Doughboy Stadium, built with donations from infantrymen throughout the Army; Gowdy Field, named after Capt. Hank Gowdy, catcher for the New York Giants; the Post Theater; and Russ Pool.

In later years the board served as the contractor for other projects including a handball court, bowling center, gymnasium, Patch School and the Officers' Club.

During this period, Wells also placed a value on landscaping, which intensified under Brig. Gen. Campbell King.

Golf started in 1922 with a rough nine-hole course, and by 1927 an 18-hole course and golf chop had been built. Hunting and fishing were popular, and in 1930 the Campbell King Horse Show Bowl was built in a natural hollow north of the warehouse district.

By 1926, the principal deficiency of Fort Benning was proper housing. Congress was aware of the crisis nationwide. In many cases, married and single men of all ranks were living in shanties or tents.

To remedy this, Congress authorized the creation of the War Department Building Program, and 13 posts were targeted for new construction worth $120 million with Fort Benning receiving the second largest amount.

The money was earmarked for cuartel barracks and the hospital.

Georgia B. Ford became advisor to the War Department for this building program, and a new plan for the post was fashioned.

Kenneth Hankins, chief of Fort Benning's Housing Division today, terms Ford as the "granddaddy of master planners."

Not all of Ford's plan was implemented. A major officer housing area behind the hospital was relocated between Baltzell Avenue and First Division Road due to the golf course. It is called Housing Area E.

The student officers' apartments were relocated to Family Housing Area F, also known as the "white elephants."

The Great Depression was one of the major building periods here due to money from the Works Progress Administration, the Public Works Administration and the Civilian Conservation Corps.

The cuartel concept for enlisted men's barracks was continued so that by 1935 2 1/2 of these were completed. These dormitories had complete cross-ventilation and continuous open balconies. In fact today, Building 399 is in the Guiness Book of World Records for the largest continuous porch.

Long-postponed officers' quarters were built in seven new or newly-established "neighborhoods."

In the central campus area were three additions — the Infantry School Building (Building 35), the Post Chapel, and the Officers' Club.

In 1932, the Tank School from Fort Meade, Md., was transferred to Fort Benning. It was housed in a complex still standing opposite the cuartels.

The 1935 hangar at Lawson Field was built was concrete, steel and glass, yet a new stable and veterinary complex for the horses of the 83rd Field Artillery was also on the agenda that year.

By 1939, a new tent city had been built 10 miles from the Main Post at Kissick Pond. Emergency response to the war in Europe, this camp was to accommodate troop increases reporting to Fort Benning for field training, doubling the post population to 16,000.

Successive orders from Washington brought further increases. Gen. George Patton's 2nd Armored Division became the first residents of Sand Hill, and the last of the major wartime building efforts was the expansion of the Main Post Hospital (now the Infantry Museum).

By 1942, this involved more than 80 one-story wooden buildings and passageways in the large open space in front of the Main Hospital. Only Building 1054 of this group remains today.

It was during World War II that Fort Benning proved its merit and began its modern phase.

Since World War II there have been the following housing construction projects:

- Custer Terrace Housing Area was built at different stages with monies from Military Construction Army funds, the Wherry Act and Capehart.
- Battle Park was built by a private investor on government land with the understanding that the investor could negotiate rents with the government and provide alternative housing for soldiers who would draw their full basic allowance for quarters.
- In the late 1950s to early 1960s, Indianhead Terrace, Perkins Place and McGraw Manor were also built with Capehart funds.
- Since 1968, McGraw Manor, Indianhead Terrace, Bouton Heights and Davis Hill were completed with Military Construction Army funds.

Hankins said his division conducts segmented marketing analyses to come up with a long- range plan for available housing within a one-hour commuting distance, on and off post.

If there is a deficit, the recommendation for major capital construction is submitted to headquarters.

Presently, 40 new units are being constructed at Dahlonega, Ga., for the 5th Ranger Training Battalion camp there.

In the area of renovation, projects are divided into two types.

Minor renovations involve projects up to $1 million. These are handled by Jim Straub, housing engineer, who prioritizes the jobs and works on them with his staff as money becomes available. In addition, regular operation, maintenance and repair for post housing averages $10 to $18 million per year.

Major renovations involve projects more than $1 million, such as the current Custer Terrace facelift of 441 units. These are handled by Ken Holloway, chief of the Real Property Master Planning Branch.

"The Army encourages neighborhood renovation," Hankins said so that everything can be addressed in an area at the same time.

Other projects to be addressed in 1994 are barracks for the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, on Kelley Hill, and the 36th Engineer Group barracks in the 2800 block on Main Post. Holloway noted that these are currently at the top of the Training and Doctrine Command's list before Congress. He doesn't expect any problems.

In the recent past, renovations have included:

- In 1978, 80 units in Norton Court at a cost of $11 million.
- In 1986, 258 units in Custer Terrace at a cost of $30 million.
- In the mid-1980s, Jobs Bill put metal no-maintenance siding on housing outside the historic district, such as McGraw Manor and Indianhead Terrace, at a cost of $10 million.
- In 1990, a pedestrian bridge from Bouton Heights and Davis Hill to the Main Mall at a cost of $586,000.

"We know from customer comments where some of our problems are," Holloway said. "Our biggest challenges are with the historic district that involves 450 sets of quarters, and on which there are limits on improvements."

Nevertheless, within the year, the Housing Division hopes to have an overall family housing master plan completed to give them direction and package projects as to where to proceed next. This will involve a great deal of survey work.

FORT BENNING 75th ANNIVERSARY

Decades in Review

75TH ANNIVERSARY COMMEMORATIVE - Friday, October 8, 1993

Heroism honored

Of the 14 ranger units trained for Korea, only six saw action as units. Maj. Gen. Claude B. Ferenbaugh, commander 7th Infantry Division (left), congratulates Master Sgt. George Raines on July 7, 1951, after being presented the Silver Star for heroism against the Chinese Communists in Korea. The ceremony took place in Todon-ni, Korea. The 2nd Ranger Company, 7th Infantry Division, was composed entirely of black soldiers who were volunteers from airborne units. In continuous combat throughout the conflict, the 2nd Ranger Co. sustained severe losses and was deactivated in November 1951.

Over 50 years old

The Bayonet records Fort Benning history

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Half a century ago, the Nazis were sweeping toward Stalingrad. British and German tanks squared off in the burning sands of North Africa. Allied bombers rained death and destruction over Munich. And here, at Fort Benning, the post's official newspaper was born amidst the cataclysmic frenzy of World War II.

Sept. 17, 1992, marked the 50th anniversary of The Bayonet. Originally called The Benning Bayonet, the paper was renamed simply The Bayonet in November 1943, and was printed by the Columbus-Ledger Enquirer until September 1991, when the contract to print the paper was awarded to the Advertiser Company.

Taking a look at the original issues of The Bayonet preserved in the Donovan Technical Library is like gazing into windows that are frozen in time.

A photograph of Harpo Marx, who appeared on post in the USO's "Hollywood Follies" show that month, adorns the front page of the first issue. Fort Benning was visited by a variety of celebrities that year, including Al Jolson, Burgess Meredith and Mary Martin, who graciously accepted the title of official "Bayonet Girl" and posed for a picture clad in Army fatigues exclusively for the paper. Famed artist Norman Rockwell visited the post in January 1943.

Much like the current Bayonet, the 1942 paper (then only an average of 10 pages) contained a variety of weekly features.

"Through the Peepsight" informed readers of the latest developments of World War II, the event that was by far the subject of the greatest number of articles and cartoons during the first years of publication.

Fort Benning's significance in training troops destined for overseas action was emphasized with weekly articles as well. "Cosmopolitan Benning is crossroads of the Army: America and her Allies prepare to defeat Axis," declared a first issue-headline. On the next page was a large cartoon depicting a grim-faced Uncle Sam preparing to throw a baseball at a target bearing the likenesses of Hitler, Mussolini and Hirohito. The caption: "Let's all pitch in for victory!"

Each week, soldiers and civilians were reminded of the importance of buying war bonds, of conserving gas, oil and rubber for the war effort and of not divulging even the slightest information regarding military matters to anyone, even their closest friends and relatives.

Other weekly treats included "Sgt. McDonald's Wastebasket," a column that featured assorted bits of advice from Sgt. Tom McDonald, who frequently answered the letters of lovelorn GIs. McDonald's advice to a soldier who wanted to know what to do when his mother-in-law moved in? "If I were you," McDonald replied, "I would apply for Officer Candidate School. The Army needs leaders who know what it is like to have been under fire."

"Dayroom Duds" gave readers a weekly dose of humor with catchy jokes and pithy one-liners:

"Halt! Who goes there?"

"American."

"Advance and recite the second verse of the 'Star-Spangled Banner.'"

"I don't know it."

"Proceed American!"

Readers could also learn of the latest community events and radio and movie schedules. In September 1942, one could catch such Hollywood gems as "Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror," "Eagle Squadron," "Gunga Din" and "Somewhere I'll Find You" at the post's movie theaters.

One of the most publicized stories of 1942 was the saga of Max the "parachutist pooch," a boxer who made Fort Benning history by being the first dog ever to be airborne qualified. A special harness was devised to hold the courageous canine, who was "coaxed" out of the aircraft door the necessary five times. After surviving an additional three jumps, Max was struck by a hit and run driver in the pre-dawn hours of Dec. 17.

The saga of Max was not over yet, though. Despite a broken leg, a shattered jawbone, and a veterinarian's hopeless prognosis of certain death, Max survived and was released from the animal hospital in February 1943. During his recovery, Max received letters and cards from all over the nation, and the children of Fort Benning even presented him with a small Christmas tree.

Max was "promoted" to master sergeant and was awarded a wound stripe for his uniform. He left the post the same month to accompany members of the 505th Parachute Infantry Regiment, who had come to Fort Benning to train, to Camp Hofman, N.C., but not before siring six puppies with "Mrs. Max," whose picture appeared on the front page of the Feb. 18, 1943, issue.

When reading those old issues, one is immersed in the culture of an America of half a century ago, but some things still haven't changed. Like today, the most numerous advertisements included those for cigarettes, pawnshops, dancing girls and used cars. Club Matag featured acrobatic and contortion dancers and "sophisticated tap artists" and a 1941 Dodge Deluxe two-door sedan could be yours for a mere $150 at the McMurria Motor Company.

Other highlights of that first issue included the story of 2nd Lt. Frank Irvine, a former illustrator for Walt Disney Studios who drew many of the animals featured in "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." He was drafted in 1939 and stationed at Fort Benning, where he was in charge of the drafting and charts branch of the Infantry School's reproduction plant.

The final article of the first issue was a stark reminder of the importance of being quick on the draw with your gas mask. The scenario is set up as if the reader were a soldier who hadn't gotten his mask on quite fast enough. "Three hours later coughs rack your body....Your skin is bluish....Every cough brings up large quantities of yellow frothy fluid. Your face goes ashen gray. You don't struggle for breath. You just die. Gas never misses."

FORT BENNING IN THE 1920s

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

• Sept. 1, 1923: The premier issue of Fort Benning News, the post's first newspaper, appears. It was published by the post athletic and recreation officer and printed by the Dixie Publishing Company of Columbus.

• Sept. 1, 1922: The Fort Benning News announces the opening of the 29th Infantry Theater, a Main Post movie palace with the largest seating capacity in the South. Admission was 15 cents.

• Sept. 22, 1923: The Upatoi Bridge is officially dedicated and crossed by a procession that included the post commander, the mayor of Columbus, representatives from the post's units, five tanks and a howitzer.

• May 1, 1924: The groundbreaking ceremony for Doughboy Stadium is held. Funding for the stadium, which was officially dedicated on Oct. 17, 1925, came entirely from donations from soldiers and infantry units.

• July 2, 1924: Bidding begins to select a contractor to pave Benning Road, a joyously anticipated event for the denizens of Fort Benning. The poor quality of the pothole laden dirt road was the source of many jokes in the post's early years.

• June 4, 1925: Fort Benning and Columbus are "married" in a mock ceremony held at the Springer Opera House attended by post and city officials. The marriage was prompted by the recent completion of the paving of Benning Road, which provided an official link between the two communities.

• Feb. 19, 1925: Pvt. Joseph Wiggins saves the life of an 18-month-old baby in an amazing display of bravery. Wiggins, who was at the throttle of the post's narrow gauge train, noticed an infant crawling on the tracks ahead and immediately applied the brakes. Because of the angle of the grade, the train would not stop, so Wiggins jumped out and ran ahead of the train to snatch the baby away just in the nick of time.

• Feb. 18, 1926: The silent version of "Ben Hur" is shown at the Main Post Theater with live musical accompaniment and original compositions by Fort Benning Capt. George L. King, who served as the conductor.

• Dec. 23, 1927: The Infantry School News details the efforts of Capt. James F. Hyde, commander of the 7th Engineers who rigged a giant two-ton magnet to a trailer attached to a truck to be used to pick up nails and other metallic hazards capable of puncturing holes in the tires of post motorists. The Post Exchange provided free gasoline for the daily operation of the vehicle.

• Jan. 27 to 28, 1928: The new stage of the Main Theater is officially dedicated. The 40-feet deep stage was the largest in the South. In addition to the stage, there were dressing rooms, a chorus room, property room and musical library.

Calculator — 'He made a better dog of us all'

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Visitors to the National Infantry Museum might find their curiosity aroused by a strange stone monument near the entrance.

Bearing a metal plate inscribed, "CALCULATOR — Born ? — Died Aug. 29, 1923 — He made a better dog of us all," the monument was a tribute to one of Fort Benning's earliest canine residents.

Calculator, a crippled mixed-breed dog, was the unofficial post mascot during the early 1920s. It was rumored that a collision with an automobile severely injured one of the dog's legs and caused him to walk with a curious limp in which he would put down three legs and carry one — hence the name Calculator.

Col. B.A. Byrne, in a letter to The Bayonet in 1954, had a different explanation for the dog's trademark gait, however.

"His habit of traveling on three legs was purely a physical idiosyncrasy," Byrne wrote. "The leg he chose to carry was entirely a matter of momentary whim and he could be observed on a long trip changing from leg to leg to rest one at a time. I knew this character extremely well and was in fact one of his guardians."

Calculator was a familiar sight to soldiers all over post. He wandered from unit to unit and house to house in search of food and affection and was also a familiar sight in downtown Columbus. It was said that he would wait in front of the Ralston Hotel until an officer would give him a ride back to post.

Calculator's untimely death on Aug. 23, 1923, by poisoning shocked post residents. The Infantry School News advertised for 25-cent donations to build a monument in the dog's honor, and received more than 1,000 quarters from soldiers worldwide who had known Calculator.

The monument's simple inscription was authored by Col. Paul Giddings, a 1922 Infantry Field Officer Course student and placed on Stilwell Field in 1929 with these words: "This monument will stand forever, dedicated to the memory of Calculator, a veritable child of destiny , waif of the world, soldier of fortune and post graduate of the Infantry School."

The monument was later moved to the Infantry School, Building 35, but was transferred to its present location when the building became the new home of the School of the Americas in 1984.

As Brig. Gen. William H. Hobson noted in 1947, Calculator, though but an insignificant mongrel dog, shared a unique relationship with those who knew him.

"Calculator was really an important factor in forming the mosaic of what we call tradition in an installation, something of vital psychological importance in developing esprit de corps," he wrote.

FORT BENNING IN THE 1930s

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

• May 8, 1931: The 29th Infantry Regiment embarks on a 235-mile road march to Atlanta. Nine days were allotted for the March northward, with a day of rest before returning to post.

• May 22, 1931: Lawson Army Airfield is officially established with 25 enlisted men and five officers of Flight B, 16th Observation Squadron. On Aug. 7, the airfield is named in honor of Capt. Walter R. Lawson, a World War I aviator who died in an airplane accident after the war.

• Aug. 14, 1931: The 2nd Battalion, 1st Tank Regiment leaves post for an 800-mile road march to Pensacola, Fla., and back. The regiment covered the distance on foot and by motor vehicle.

• Sept. 4, 1931: A post bowling alley is opened in Building 89. The cost per game was 10 cents.

• Sept. 16, 1931: Construction of a new pigeon loft begins for carrier pigeons used in school demonstrations and field exercises.

• Oct. 16, 1931: The Fort Benning Beauty Parlor canary is killed by a rat. An investigation was mounted to find and kill the culprit.

• Oct. 23, 1931: The 29th Infantry Regiment reports the tremendous success of its new re-enlistment policy, which resulted in 65 percent of its soldiers re-enlisting for the month of September. Each man who re-enlisted was given a three-month furlough.

• Oct. 19, 1931: The post begins a special course of instruction for soldiers on the general care of trees and tree preservation in an attempt to save the post's many historic trees.

• Nov. 8, 1931: The post announces an effort to alleviate some of the suffering of the depression by establishing a Community Chest in which a day's pay per month is subtracted from the pay of all post personnel to be contributed to organizations such as the American Red Cross and the Salvation Army.

• Jan. 20, 1932: Planes of the 18th Observation Squadron engage in mock combat over post. The planes were equipped with camera guns that, when pointed at another plane to simulate firing, took pictures of the target in flight.

• Jan. 22, 1932: Post Provost Marshall Capt. William B. Tuttle announces that Fort Benning's military population of 5,000 displayed a high degree of discipline in 1931, including a 21 percent decrease in arrests of soldiers by civil authorities and a decrease in drunkeness and other violations of the prohibition laws.

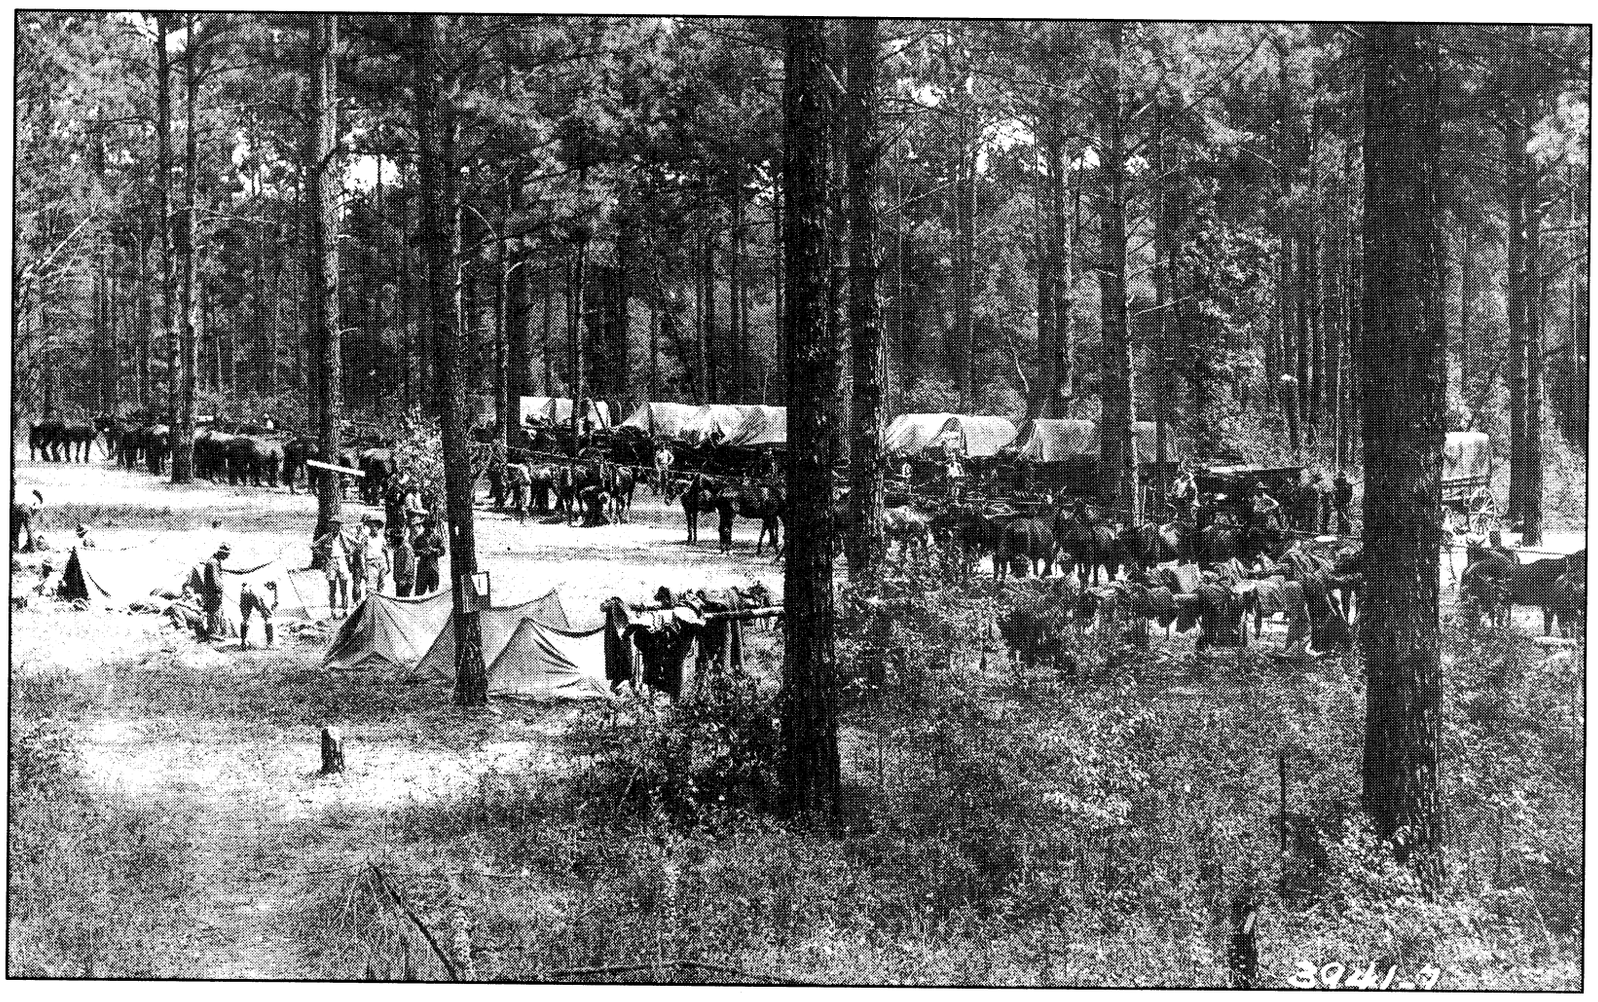
• March 28, 1932: The 29th Infantry Regiment begins a 485-mile road march to Panama City, Fla. The soldiers marched 135 miles on foot and the remaining distance by truck.

• March 28, 1932: Members of the post's Infantry Board announce their intentions to travel to New Jersey to observe a demonstration of a prototype flying tank with detachable wings.

• Aug. 12, 1932: Pvt. John Lytle of the 29th Infantry Regiment arrives on post after riding 795 miles on a bicycle from Cleveland, Ohio, to re-enlist with the 29th. Lytle could not afford the cost of train fare and instead purchased a used bicycle.

• July 5, 1932: Fort Benning completes the training of more than 70,721 men for the Civilian Conservation Corps.

• July 12, 1933: Tanks are used to destroy old wooden officers' quarters that had originally been cabins for black laborers on post plantations. Two tanks could demolish in 30 minutes what a crew of 50 men needed an entire day to accomplish.



• July 12, 1933: The present-day Officers' Club opens. The building had been planned 10 years before and soldier labor was used to accomplish much of the construction.

• Nov. 18, 1933: The cornerstone is laid for the Fort Benning Chapel, which is to be modeled after the historic First Presbyterian Church in Savannah, Ga.

• Feb. 23, 1935: The Infantry School Museum opens. The museum was located across from the Post Office and operated by the Experimental Department of the Infantry School.

• September 1938: The Main Post Theater opens. By 1943, there are 12 theaters postwide featuring 184 performances weekly and hosting 95,000 attendees weekly.

• September of 1942: The Bayonet is founded by Maj. Russell J. Hammargren, post public relations officer.

• Sept. 21, 1942: The Bayonet reports that comedian Harpo Marx will perform on post.

• Oct. 1, 1942: Fort Benning is designated a prohibited zone by the Eastern Defense Command. All post civilians aged 12 and over were required to have permits and identification cards to enter the post.

• Oct. 1 1942: The Bayonet reports that Lt. Frank Irvine, an illustrator who drew many of the animals in Walt Disney's Snow White, is stationed at Fort Benning and assigned to the Reproduction Plant.

• Sept. 17: 1942: The Conservation and Salvage Program is intensified because of the war. All metal, rubber and nonhistorical relics were collected for recycling. More than 6 million pounds of scrap metal was collected April through September.

• Sept. 17, 1942: The Bayonet reports that actress Mary Martin has accepted the title of "Bayonet Girl" and is now the official sponsor of the post newspaper.

• Dec. 17, 1942: Max, a boxer who was the first dog in airborne history to earn his wings, is struck by a hit and run driver. Max was badly injured, but clung to life as letters of condolence and money were sent to him from around the nation. The "parachuting pooch" survived and lived to jump again.

• Dec. 25, 1942: Jazz great Louis Armstrong performs on post.

• Jan. 17, 1943: Artist Norman Rockwell visits post to observe training for a series of military illustrations for the Saturday Evening Post.

• Feb. 4, 1943: The post soda fountain moves from Doughboy Stadium to the Post Exchange on Ingersoll Street.

• Feb. 4, 1943: The Bayonet announces that all post soldiers will be issued khaki underwear by the end of the year, the reason being that the white underwear then in current issue were a danger on the battlefield because they could be easily seen by enemy bombers when hung out to dry in combat zones.

• Feb. 25, 1943: The 43rd Post Headquarters Company of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps begins arriving on post to replace soldiers in nonmilitary assignments such as clerical jobs and jobs at the post's theaters and service clubs.

• March 7, 1943: "Look, It's Fort Benning," a biweekly newsreel devoted to events on Fort Benning, begins airing at post theaters.

• March 8, 1943: Famed concert violinist Jascha Heifetz appears at the Main Post Theater.

• July 8, 1943: The War Department establishes a Prisoner of War camp on Fort Benning for captured Italian soldiers. Many of the prisoners were released to local farmers during the day to be used as laborers.

• Aug. 12, 1943: The Bayonet begins a series featuring local pin-up girls. Models were selected from post civilian employees.

• July 14 to 16, 1943: Fort Benning volunteers donate 545 pints of blood, a record at the time. The blood went to plasma reserves for use by armed forces members injured in battle.

• Oct. 22, 1943: The first airplane crash in Airborne School history occurs. Five Air Corps personnel and 15 paratroopers are killed.

• Jan 26. 1944: Gypsy Rose Lee (real name Louise Hovick) a nationally famous strip-tease artist who later starred in Broadway and movies, appears at the Main Post Theater in some of her old burlesque routines.

• December of 1943: Ray S. Miller, armament foreman at the post ordinance shop, designs and perfects a means for launching antitank grenades from the M1-Garand. He was assisted by Col. Charles H. Coates of the Infantry Board. Their invention was officially adopted by the Army and used in World War II.

• Dec. 19, 1943: St. Huberts shrine is rededicated in a special ceremony. The shrine was built singlehandedly behind the Infantry School stables by a Private Hadnick of the 29th Infantry 21 years earlier to show his gratitude after surviving a devastating illness.

• Jan. 6 1944: The Bayonet announces that "the post will activate the nation's first negro parachute unit, the 555th Parachute Infantry Company and that post officials are asking for volunteers.

• Jan. 20, 1944: Plans are announced to begin work on the Main Post Library, which still exists today. The original post library was located in Service Club Number One and held only 6,000 books.

• Feb. 16, 1944: The first black paratroopers graduate airborne training.

• May 7, 1944: Crack Fort Benning homing pigeons capture the top five positions in a 500-mile race from West Palm Beach, Fla., to Columbus in a competition against civilian birds from the Columbus Pigeon Association.

WWII transforms community

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

The cataclysmic struggle of the second World War transformed Fort Benning into a whirlwind of activity.

The post not only vastly increased its various training missions, but served as a major assembly area for troops on their way to the European and African battlegrounds.

Fort Benning's military population skyrocketed during the war years. More than 600,000 soldiers were trained here between 1941 and 1945, and the post's wartime population fluctuated from 45,000 to as many as 100,000.

Hundreds of temporary buildings were erected virtually overnight in the Sand Hill area in 1941 to accommodate incoming troops. Col. George S. Patton and the 2nd Division were the first residents, spending almost a year there Africa and Europe.

Many of these old barracks survived into the 1970s when they were torn down and sold for scrap lumber. Only four wooden buildings, those which housed Patton's headquarters, remain today.

The war years also saw the creation of what is now known as the Officer Candidate School. During the war, some 65,000 second lieutenants would graduate from what was then simply called the Officer Candidate Course, which was designed to produce the large amount of officers that would be needed for the war effort.

Other students in specialist classes and advanced officer courses made for a total of more than 110,000 graduates from the Infantry School.

An additional 100,000 divisional troops were trained at Fort Benning, including many of the most famous units of World War II: the 1st Inf. Div., 4th Motorized Division, the Second Armored Division (Hell on Wheels), the Seventh Armored Division (The Lucky Seventh), the Tenth "Tiger" Division and the 71st Division.

In addition, more than 100,000 troops would earn their wings from the newly established parachute school.

Post residents felt the impact of the war in a variety of ways from the rationing of gasoline and oil to endless war bond campaigns, but there were always ways to put aside, at least temporarily, the thoughts of war with a 5-cent bottle of cola, an ice cream soda delivered from the tower at Doughboy Stadium, home of the post soda fountain, or a movie at one of the installations numerous movie theaters. In addition, there were United Service Organizations shows featuring well-known Hollywood celebrities.

• Feb. 3, 1950: The Infantry School Detachment mess hall conducts a test to see if black-eyed peas should be added to the menu. Of the 471 soldiers served, 397 ate the peas, thus ensuring the continuance of the popular Southern dish on the menu.

• April 21, 1950: President Harry Truman visits post to witness training.

• Sept. 28, 1950: Fort Benning prepares to receive hundreds of wounded soldiers from Korea. To accommodate the wounded, the post hospital was ordered to increase its number of beds by 2,000 by December.

• Nov. 13, 1950: The first rangers since World War II are graduated from the new Ranger Training Center at Harmony Church.

• Feb. 18, 1951: The Officer Candidate School reopens after being closed since Nov. 1, 1947. The school had originally been established in 1941 to train large numbers of officers for World War II.

• Feb. 2, 1951: Ventriloquist Edgar Bergen and his sidekick Charlie McCarthy perform on post and visit with wounded soldiers from Korea in the post hospital.

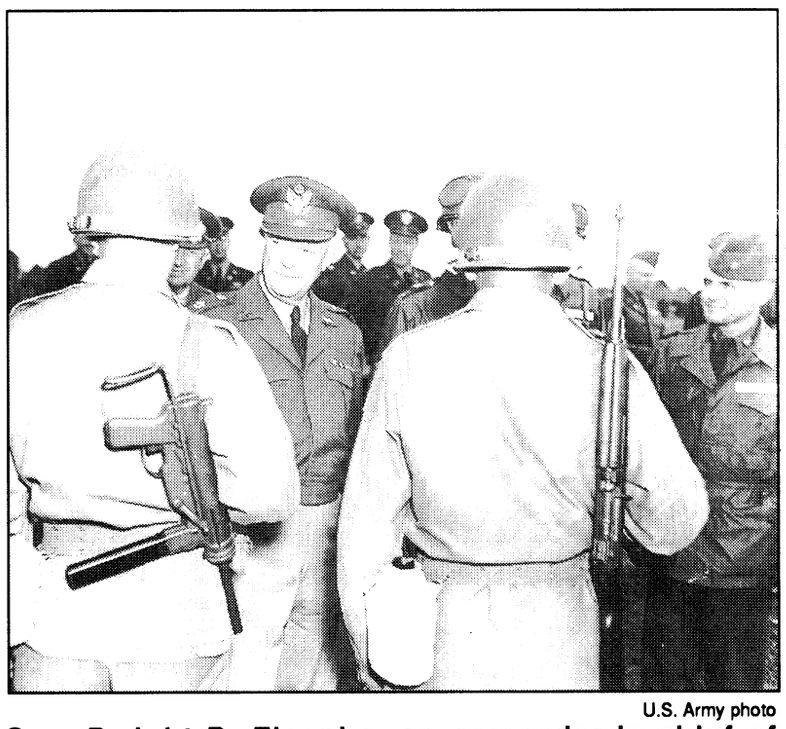
• Dec. 4, 1951: Shooting begins on post for the film, "Jumping Jacks," an airborne spoof starring Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis.

• Sept. 15, 1952: Faith Middle School is officially dedicated. The school was named for Lt. Col. Don C. Faith, who was posthumously awarded the Medal of Honor.

• Feb. 12, 1953: The Patterson Memorial Award is established. The Patterson award, named for Robert P. Patterson, a veteran of World War II and a secretary of War, is given each year to the most outstanding infantry officer candidate.

• March 13, 1954: Fort Benning suffers $11 million in damage from a tornado that kills two post residents and topples one of the airborne jump towers. Lawson Army Airfield was hit the hardest .

• Oct. 22 to 23, 1955: Fort Benning hosts the first national meeting of the Association of the United States Army. In attendance were the secretary of the Army and some 100 general officers, including the Army chief of staff.



• April 1, 1958: The Infantry School celebrates its 58th birthday in a ceremony that included the unveiling of the Doughboy Statue, a nine-foot, German-made, bronze replica of a World War II soldier. The statue originally stood in front of the Infantry School (now the School of the Americas) but was later moved to the Henry Caro Noncommissioned Officers Academy.

• April 9, 1958: Martin Army Hospital is completed.

• June 2, 1958: Wigle Hall is dedicated as the Officer Candidate School of Fame in honor of 2nd Lt. Thomas Wigle, a World War II Medal of Honor recipient. The Hall contains portraits and memorabilia of distinguished OCS graduates.

• Dec. 2 to 5, 1958: The first worldwide infantry conference since 1946 is held at Fort Benning, and is attended by more than 200 of the nation's top infantry leaders.

Benning battles red hordes

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

When the North Koreans crossed the 38th parallel and poured into South Korea on June 25, 1950, the stage was set for Fort Benning's contributions in battling the red hordes.

Among the post's most important wartime actions was the formation of a ranger training company on Oct. 12, 1950. Within a year, 17 airborne ranger units, the first since World War II, were formed at Fort Benning, of which seven were committed to combat.

With the coming of war, the Officer Candidate School was reopened after being closed since Nov. 1, 1947. The school had originally been established to train the large numbers of officers needed for combat in World War II.

Officers and rangers weren't the only Benning residents departing for Korea. The 3rd Infantry Division left Fort Benning for the battlefield in the first few months of the war.

By December 1950, the post hospital had increased its number of beds by 2,000 to accommodate wounded soldiers returning from overseas.

Naturally, the pace at the Infantry School was greatly accelerated because of events in Korea. The school went from a 40- to a 44-hour academic work week; all unnecessary courses were eliminated and most of the remaining courses were intensified and shortened. Among those subjects emphasized were weapons, small unit tactics, physical fitness, night operations, defensive combat and combined arms teamwork.

• May 3, 1960: President Dwight D. Eisenhower visits post to witness Project MAN — a series of massive demonstrations designed to display the effectiveness and abilities of the modern infantry.

• May 3, 1960: The Infantryman Statue ("Follow Me Statue") is officially unveiled and dedicated by the secretary of the Army. The 3,000-pound, 22-foot statue was sculpted by Spcs. Manfred Bass and Karl H. Von Krog with Officer Candidate Eugene J. Wyles as the model. The statue originally stood on Eubanks Field, near the Officer Candidate School Headquarters.

• June 6, 1961: The Bayonet announces that the 1st Infantry Division is looking for someone to adopt its two alligator mascots, Atomic and Alpha, before the unit leaves Fort Benning for Korea.

• Sept. 11, 1961: The Kelley Hill Chapel is officially opened.

• Jan. 5, 1962: The White School is opened on Fort Benning. It was named in honor of 1st Lt. Edward A. White, a Distinguished Service Cross winner killed in action in Korea in 1950.

• June 5, 1964: Building 4, Infantry Hall, is officially dedicated. Construction of the $10 million project began in 1962 and the building was named Infantry Hall in 1965 by General Order Number 149.

• Jan. 7, 1965: Fort Benning personnel of Battery A, 1st Battalion, 15th Artillery Regiment, participate in guerrilla and counter-guerrilla warfare training in anticipation of being sent to Southeast Asia.

• Jan. 20, 1965: 20 Fort Benning sergeants of the 2nd Division march in the honor guard for the inauguration of President Lyndon B. Johnson.

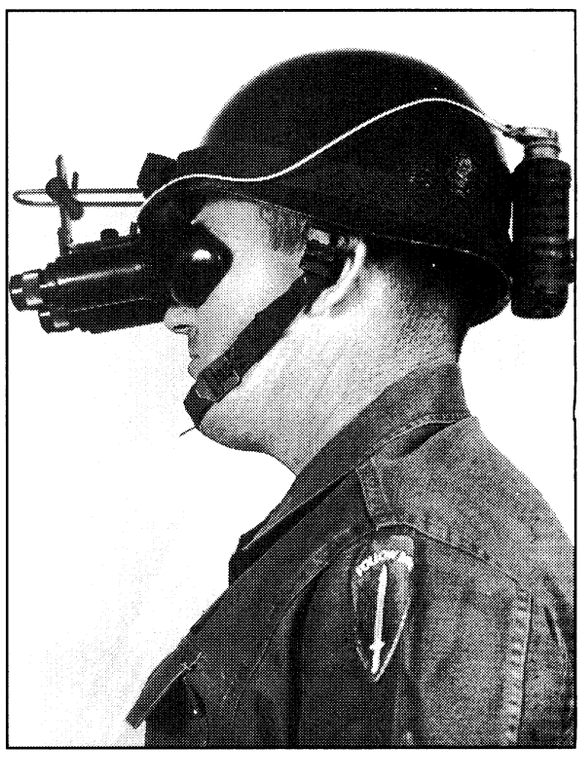
• Aug. 20, 1965: The final elements of the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) depart Fort Benning for Vietnam. The unit was the first division-sized element to arrive in Vietnam, with more than 15,000 men from the division deploying.

• Sept. 2, 1965: The 197th Infantry Brigade begins moving to Kelley Hill to occupy the barracks formerly used by the 1st Cavalry Division.

• Oct. 4, 1965: An Army Basic Training Center is established at the Sand Hill and Harmony Church areas left vacant by troops from the 2nd Division and the 1st Cavalry Division who departed to Vietnam. Facilities were readied to receive and train more than 13,000 trainees per week.

• July 10, 1967: A groundbreaking ceremony for the construction of the Kelley Hill Recreation Center is held. The $400,000 complex was originally supposed to have included a 12-lane bowling alley, craft shop, snack bar, lounge and a photography laboratory.

• Sept. 5, 1967: Fort Benning begins the "Noncommissioned Officers Candidate Course," a 12-week course designed to produce thousands of fire team leaders and rifle squad leaders for combat in Vietnam.



• Aug. 29, 1967: Actor John Wayne appears at the Savings Bond Show held at Doughboy Stadium and is presented with an engraved Bowie knife by the post commander on behalf of the Special Forces. Wayne was on post for the filming of the "Green Berets."

• Nov. 11, 1967: President Lyndon Johnson visits post in honor of Veterans' Day and calls Fort Benning a "community of courage and family of patriots."

• January 1969: Fort Benning basic trainees begin wearing face masks to prevent the spread colds and infectious respiratory diseases. The masks, required by all trainees, were worn whenever soldiers were in close quarters, such as in classrooms, formations and the barracks.

Fort Benning convicts local for My Lai war crimes

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

The Vietnam War and the United States' participation in it became, during the course of the war, one of the most divisive foreign policy issues ever in this country's history.

About 56,000 U.S. soldiers died. Around 303,7000 Americans were wounded, and a total of 780 were missing in action. North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troop deaths numbered about 1,027,100.

Also, as in any war, civilians became victims as well. One incident that particularly stood out was what happened at My Lai, South Vietnam, on March 16, 1968.

It was late 1969 when it was disclosed that U.S. troops had massacred hundreds of civilians in the village of My Lai.

As a result, U.S. military courts-martial tried several officers and enlisted men for war crimes. One in particular, the only soldier to serve time for the incident, 2nd Lt. William L. Calley Jr., was tried at Fort Benning and found guilty of murder.

According to the Boston Publishing Company's series on "The Vietnam Experience," the men of Company C, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Brigade, had endured snipers, mines and booby traps killing their members from December 1967, until that March day in 1968. They were patrolling the lowlands of eastern Quang Ngai Province during this time, yet they had had little direct contact with the enemy.

Intelligence reports had indicated that one of the enemy's best units had established a base at My Lai-4, a subhamlet of Son My, about six miles northeast of Quand Ngai City.

Company C's objective was to destroy them though they would be outnumbered two to one.

The time for the mission was purposely set for 7:30 a.m. when women and children would supposedly be on their weekly trip to market in the provincial capital.

First platoon, under Calley, was to lead the way. Capt. Ernest Medina, company commander, had told his men that based on his orders, they were to burn houses, kill livestock, destroy crops and food. Members of the company later said that Medina implicitly or explicitly stated that nothing at My Lai was to be left alive.

Upon arriving, the men discovered that most of the villagers still there, knowing the Americans would shoot at anyone running, remained inside or out in front of their homes waiting for the soldiers.

No one remembers when or why the killing started. There was no hostile fire and no sign of an armed enemy, but there was panic.

As the 2nd Platoon swept in, soldiers began to fire without warning. Reports said anywhere from 20 to 400 people, mostly women, children and old men, were slain that day at My Lai.

Despite the fact that it was the biggest operation of the day and headquarters had sent two Army correspondents along, it was more than a year later before the truth came out. Medina had originally reported that his men had killed 69 Viet Cong that day.

Calley's trial in the spring of 1971 lasted more than four months and is still the longest running one in military history.

Calley spent 40 months under house arrest in an apartment in Columbus.

FORT BENNING IN THE 1970s

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

• January 1970: The Fort Benning Infantry Board begins testing a new cleaning brush for the M-16 that resembles a toothbrush. The brush was designed to clean the receiver and all external surfaces of the weapon and is still general issue today.

• Jan. 24, 1970: Capt. Buddy Allgood, who lost his left foot in Vietnam when he stepped on an enemy land mine in 1965, completes airborne training with the help of an artificial foot.

• April 10, 1970: The Bayonet announces that Capt. Paul Cahill is looking for a home for his pet lion cub "Damnit." Cahill acquired the lion in Kenya and kept it in his rented house off of St. Mary' Road in Columbus with a pet German Shepherd. Preparing to leave the service to attend the University of Miami, Cahill wanted to find a suitable home for his pet.

• Dec. 14, 1970: The 281st Assault Helicopter Company, 10th Aviation Battalion, 17the Combat Aviation Group, which was activated at Fort Benning in 1965, is inactivated after more than four years of combat duty in Vietnam.

• Jan. 8, 1971: The Bayonet announces that kitchen patrol — KP —duty for soldiers, including the dreaded potato peeling and washing of pots and pans, has been eliminated and will now be performed by civilian workers. The measure was part of the "Benning Plan" for a Modern Volunteer Army, an Armywide experiment to improve the quality of life of soldiers. The plan ended many of the work details performed by soldiers and created approximately 600 civilian jobs on post. In addition, the plan established a welcome booth at the Columbus airport, created a five-day work week for soldiers and civilians, established payday activities, improved the shuttle bus service, eliminated the requirement to wear qualification badges on fatigues, established a club for junior enlisted members, allowed students to drive to classes in Infantry Hall, eliminated the requirement to wear headgear when in uniform in your personally owned vehicle, required all duty rosters to be posted at least three days in advance and eliminated the requirement for sign in and out and possession of an Armed Forces Liberty Pass during off duty hours.

• May 21, 1971: The Bayonet announces the Department of the Army's new haircut policy, which is still in use today.

• Jan. 7, 1972: The Bayonet features a story about the Fort Benning Coffee House, an enlisted club where soldiers can go to recite poetry, speak their minds, listen to music or partake of free coffee and refreshments. The walls of the club were decorated with neon murals done in typical "groovy" style and the club was described as Fort Benning's place for soldiers to go "scream, laugh, rap, sleep, cry or just create."

• Feb. 4, 1972: It's just 55 cents for a Big Mac at McDonald's, as advertised in The Bayonet.

• Feb. 4, 1972: The Bayonet's picks for the five most popular songs in the local area are "Lets Stay Together," by Al Green, "Down by the Lazy River," by the Osmonds, "Hurting Each Other," by the Carpenters, "Never Been to Spain," by Three Dog Night and "Stay With Me," by Rod Stewart and Faces.

• March 16, 1972: Funnyman Bob Hope is the guest speaker at the Officers' Wives' Club luncheon. Hope also did a benefit performance for the National Infantry Museum Development Program and the Eisenhower Medical Foundation that night at the Columbus Municipal Auditorium.

• Aug. 10, 1972: A dozen Fort Benning rangers embark on a 140- mile canoe ride in a joint exercise with eight Canadian soldiers. The rangers paddled from Burlington, Vt., to Tracey, Quebec, Canada.

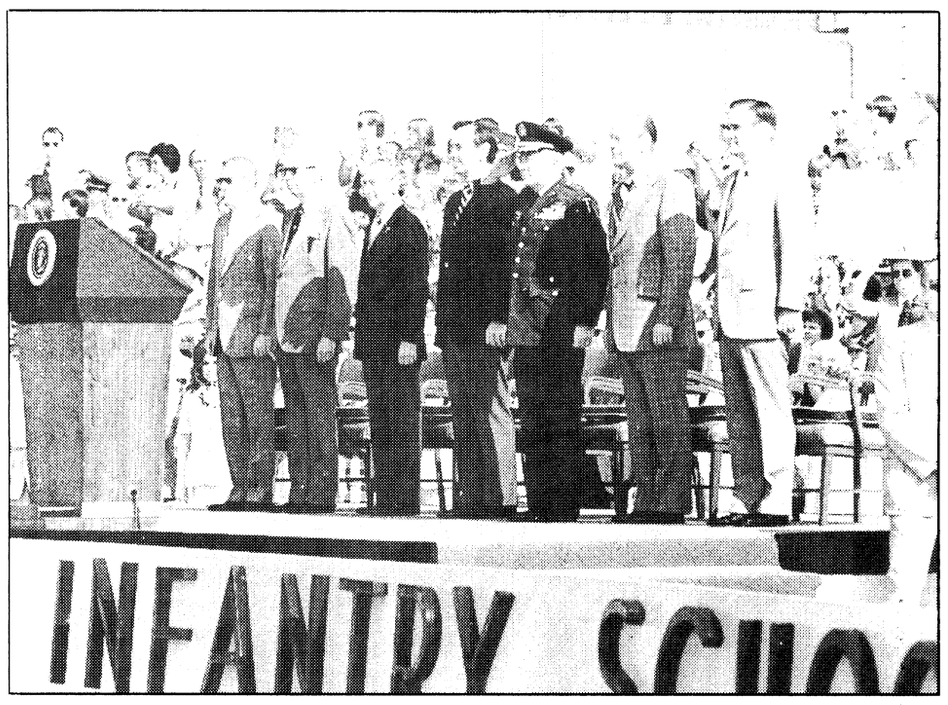
• March 2, 1973: The Bayonet features a story about "the Dap," a controversial handshake popular among black troops on post to express racial solidarity. The handshake was said to have originated in Vietnam, when a black soldier named Dap was shot in the back by a fellow white soldier. The other blacks in the unit originated the Dap in his honor and brought it back to Fort Benning after the war.

• Oct. 5, 1973: The Post Exchange raises its prices on hamburgers. The prices: 45 cents for a large hamburger and 55 cents for a large cheeseburger.

• Nov. 19, 1973: Pvts. Joyce Kutsch and Rita Johnson become the first women in history to go airborne. After completing their training, they attended specialized training to become parachute riggers.

• Feb. 8, 1974: The Bayonet reports that Spc. Sylvia Campos has the distinction of being the first woman in the 36th Engineer Group to be named Soldier of the Month.

• March 28, 1974: The grand opening of the Main Mall and Commissary is held. The mall was built at an approximate cost of $5.5 million.



• Oct. 6, 1974: Riverside, the plantation home used by Fort Benning commanding generals as their personal quarters, is officially dedicated as a National Historic Place. The house was placed on the National Register of Historic Places in June of 1971.

• Nov. 22, 1974: Main Post has no electricity for more than three hours when a squirrel sticks his nose into the electrical wiring of a transformer near Theater No. 1, causing a power surge and a blown fuse at the power station and the electrocution of himself.

• Feb. 14, 1975: Fort Benning announces the beginning of "Action 75," a program to encourage participation in post programs that result in mental, physical and spiritual self-improvement. Participants received points for each activity they completed and were then eligible for various certificates and awards.

• July 1975: Fort Benning's $4.3 million dining facility modernization program begins. Twenty-one dining facilities were renovated to look like English pubs, ski lodges or European restaurants.

• Sept. 5, 1975: Sixty soldiers of the 197th Infantry Brigade depart for Canada to participate in a one- month exchange training program. The Fort Benning soldiers were temporarily replaced by 60 Canadian soldiers from the 8th Canadian Hussars, the 3rd Royal Canadian Regiment and the 2nd Combat Group.

Benning trains for Vietnam

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

While U.S. infantrymen slogged through the jungles and rice paddies of Vietnam in the longest war in American history, Fort Benning was playing a vital part in the events taking place half a world away.

Thousands of the officers, noncommissioned officers and enlisted soldiers destined for combat in Vietnam were trained at Fort Benning, and concepts such as airmobile warfare, perhaps the single greatest tactical innovation of the war, were born at the Infantry School.

In February 1963, the 11th Air Assault Division was organized at Fort Benning to test the concept of large scale use of helicopters for assault operations, aerial reconnaissance, troop transportation, medical evacuation and logistical support. The concept proved so successful that two years later the division was converted into a regular unit and became the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) in July 1965.

The airmobile concept was not the only change seen in the tactics taught at the Infantry School during the Vietnam era. The school worked to formulate new concepts and tactics, especially guerrilla tactics. In January of 1965, personnel of Battery A, 1st Battalion, 15th Artillery Regiment began participating in guerrilla warfare training in anticipation of being sent to Southeast Asia.

As is true with any war, training at Fort Benning accelerated furiously. On Oct. 4, 1965, an Army Basic Training Center was established at the Sand Hill and Harmony Church areas left vacant by troops from the 2nd Infantry Division and the 1st Cavalry Division who had departed for Vietnam. Facilities were readied to receive and train more than 13,000 trainees per week and when the facility was officially closed in 1970, more than 129,000 soldiers had been trained.

The Officer Candidate School expanded rapidly in 1967 with more than 8,000 candidates commissioned as second lieutenants that year.

The high loss of junior noncommissioned officers prompted the creation of the Noncommissioned Officer Candidate Course in September of 1967. After 12 weeks of training, graduates were promoted to sergeant or staff sergeant and sent to Vietnam to serve as fire team leaders or rifle squad leaders.

• January 1981: Three rangers, all with medical profiles prohibiting them from running, chase and apprehend a man who attempts to assault a woman with a knife at the Main Mall while other able-bodied soldiers stand idly by or duck out of the way. The three were approximately 100 meters away when they spotted the suspect running toward Marne Road. They chased and eventually apprehended the armed suspect despite numerous threats of violence from him.

• Sept. 18, 1981: The Bayonet reports that the construction of the McKenna Military Operations in Urban Terrain site has begun. Constructed to provide a modern MOUT facility for realistic training, the site was designed to resemble a small German village and was built by the 36th Engineer Group.

• Nov. 1, 1981: Soldiers Armywide begin wearing the new camouflaged Battle Dress Uniform.

• Oct. 16, 1981: To celebrate the 200th anniversary of the last major battle of the Revolutionary War, Yorktown, the post flies a reproduction of a Revolutionary War flag and a special color guard of soldiers with authentic uniforms and weapons of the era conducts the retreat ceremony.

• Oct. 19, 1981: A nine-member squad of Fort Benning soldiers participate in a christening ceremony for the Bradley Infantry Fighting Vehicle at Fort Myers, Va.

• Jan. 9, 1982: A snowstorm rages across post, leaving one inch of snow. It was business as usual for most of the post although 32 automobile accidents were reported from people who could not control their vehicles.

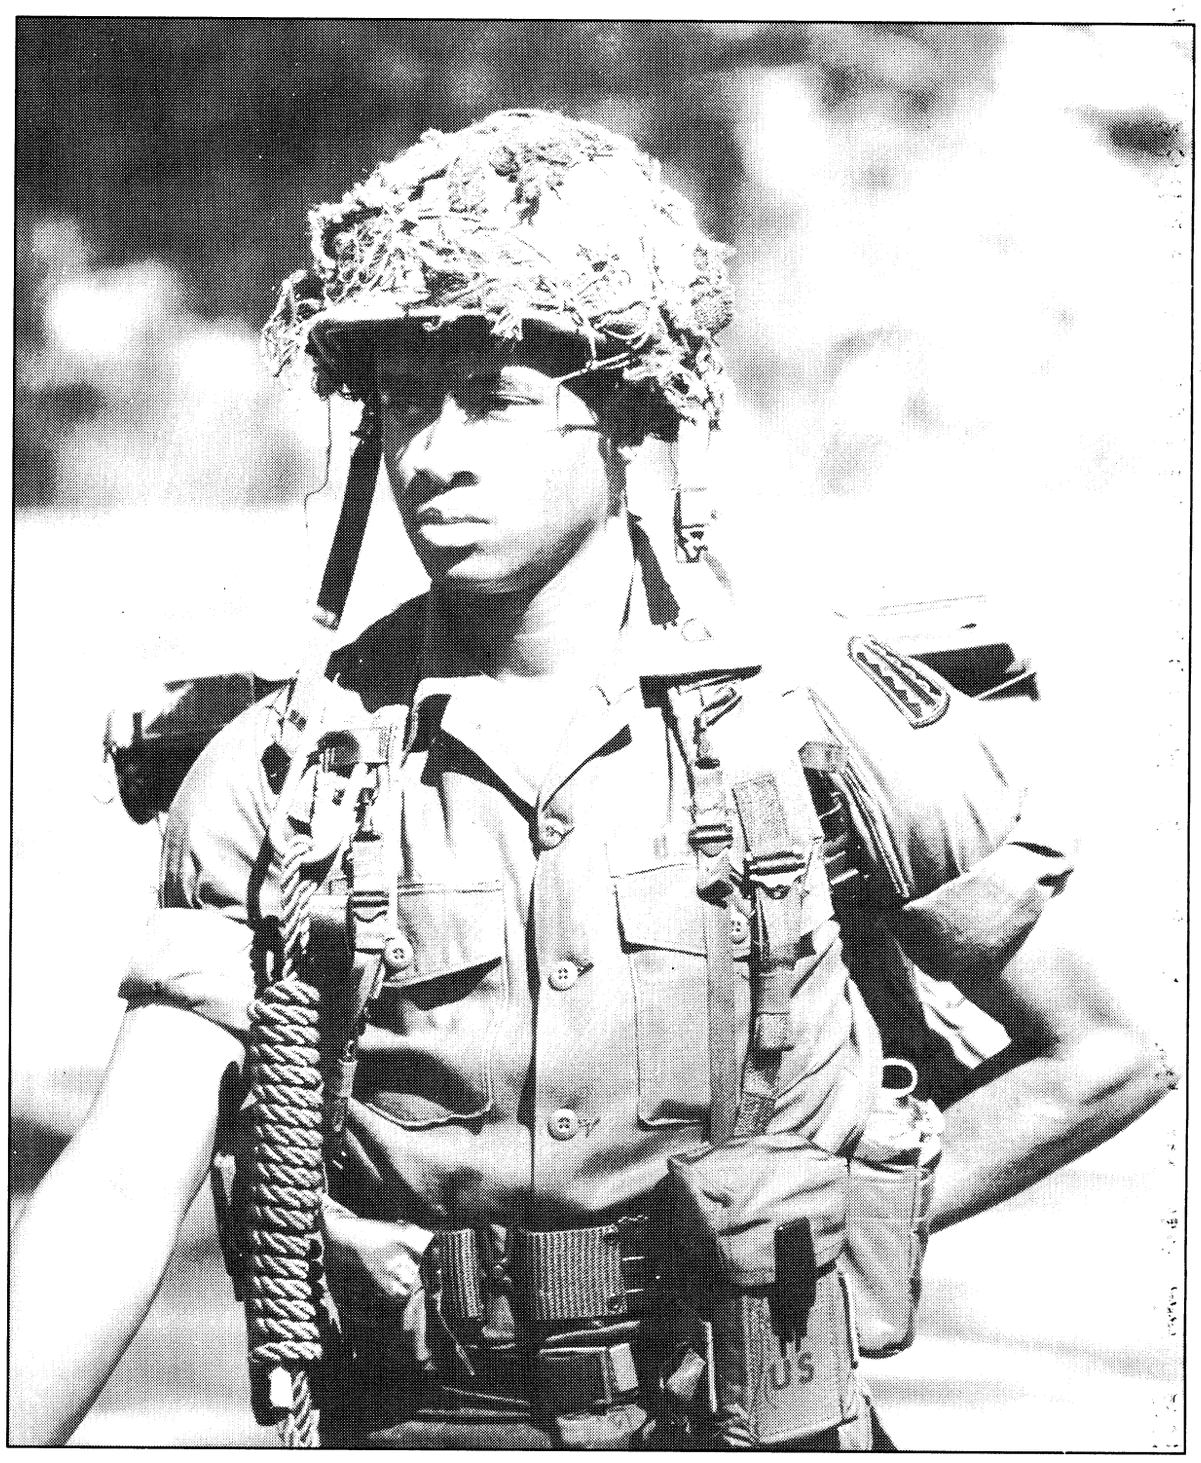
• March 2, 1982: Company D, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, 197th Infantry Brigade (Separate), the Army's first Bradley Infantry Fighting Vehicle company, is activated.

• May 26, 1982: The first two production line models of the Bradley Fighting Vehicle arrive on post and are officially accepted in a ceremony on Red Cloud Range attended by post commander Brig. Gen. Sam Wetzel and FMC Corporation U.S. Business Manager Bill Rutledge.

• April 11, 1983: Filming of the movie "Tank," starring James Garner, begins. Many of the extras were played by Fort Benning soldiers and post locations used for filming included the Custer Terrace family housing area and the 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Motor Pool.

• July 6, 1983: Johnston Hall, home of the Sand Hill Reception Station, is officially dedicated and opened. The station was named for Spc. Donald Johnston, a local soldier awarded the Medal of Honor while serving in Vietnam.

• Nov. 4, 1983: The Infantry School announces a cadence contest open to soldiers and Department of the Army civilians worldwide. A total of 164 entries were received by Feb. 24, 1984, when the contest ended and 12 winners were selected from categories that included mechanized, light infantry and general.



• March 5 to 6, 1984: The third annual David E. Grange Jr. Best Ranger Competition is held. This year's competition marked the first time that rangers worldwide were allowed to enter.

• Feb. 5, 1985: Carmouche Range, a computerized range for use by Bradley Fighting Vehicles, is officially opened. Post Commander Maj. Gen. John Foss was the first to fire on the $5 million dollar range, which features pop-up moving targets representing enemy vehicles.

• Nov. 4, 1986: The "Follow Me" Infantryman Statue is moved to Jacksonville, Fla., for cleaning and restoration by the Atlantic Monument Company. The 24-year-old statue was suffering from extensive oxidation and was returned to post Dec. 30 after being completely restored.

• Jan. 24, 1989: The Henry Caro Noncommissioned Officers Academy is officially dedicated and opened. The academy buildings were originally the old Faith Middle School.

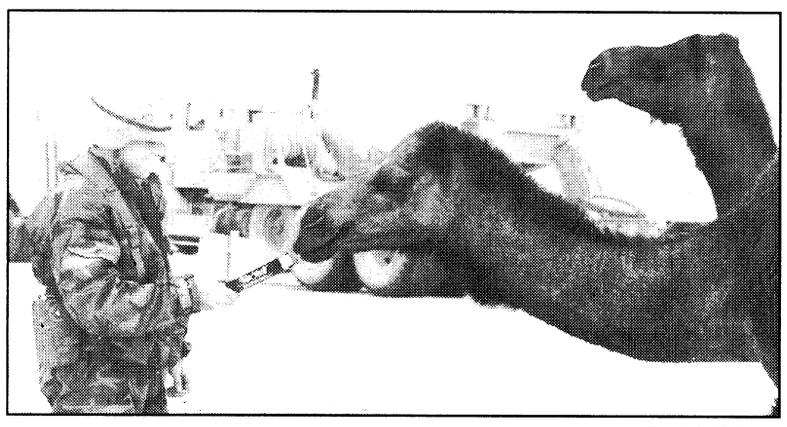
All of post had part in the '100-hour war'

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

The 100-hour fury of Operation Desert Storm, with its victorious conclusion, is the stuff of historic legend.

From the troops who were sent to the tactics that they used, Fort Benning played a major role in the making of one of the most successful U.S. military operations of all time.

Operations Desert Shield and esert Storm saw some of the argest deployments from Fort Benning since World War II.



The first to go was the 608th Ordnance Company of the 36th Engineer Group, followed by the 197th Infantry Brigade, the rest of the 36th Group and finally the 34th Medical Battalion.

Fort Benning units provided a wide variety of functions during the operations, from combat support to combat itself in some of the wars most furious fighting.

The 197th's mission was to attack the Iraqi forces at the Euphrates River and cut off any possible escape routes. To accomplish this, the unit was attached to the 24th Infantry Division and redesignated as the division's 3rd Brigade.

Brigade Commander Col. Ted Reid's comments on his unit's performance during a postwar interview were typical of what commanders of all deployed units on post had to say.

"Outstanding. The soldiers of the 197th made me so proud," Reid said. "When you put a soldier in a harsh environment for eight months without benefit of fast food, alcohol or companionship, it makes it real tough on the soldier. But we experienced no major discipline problems. They were really great."

David L. Bridges
A Fort Benning soldier feeds the "locals" in Saudi Arabia.

Most of the units of the 36th Engineer Group deployed in September of 1990 and initially helped provide command and control over several other heavy engineer battalions and combat battalions. During the offensive, the unit followed the 24th closely.

The 36th also performed a variety of other functions such the establishment of an ammunition storage area for the XVIII Airborne Corps and another storage area for the entire theater by the 608th.

The 215th Finance Unit provided all financial transactions for the XVIII Airborne Corps and also ran the main finance center in Riyahd.

The 533rd Transportation Company and the 361st Trailer-Transfer Detachment provided long haul capabilities to the XVIII.

Providing general construction in King Khalid's Military City and construction of base camps was the mission of the 43rd Engineer Battalion.

Forty soldiers of the 586th Engineer Company deployed to assist in port operations at Jacksonville, Fla., while members of the 89th Explosive Ordnance Detachment augmented other EOD units in the combat zone.

Combat service and support to the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, was accomplished by the 324th Forward Support Battalion.

The 34th Medical Battalion, which deployed Oct. 13 to 17, 1990, provided medical evacuation and first-line treatment to soldiers and prisoners of war. Various elements separated to augment and support the elements of the XVIII. Among those deployed were combat stress psychologists, neurosurgeons, preventative medicine specialists and even a one-man optical-fabrication unit

While Benning soldiers sweated it out on the burning sands of Southwest Asia, units that remained on post, including rear detachments of deployed units, worked hard to support the war effort.

The 29th Infantry Regiment continued its valuable training and support of missions on post and also deployed more than 200 soldiers who augmented other deployed units and formed training teams that went to Saudi Arabia to train other units in the use of the Bradley Fighting Vehicle and other weapons systems. The 29th and the 11th Infantry Regiment helped train many soldiers who deployed to Saudi including infantry officers, soldiers in the Inactive Ready Reserve and other Reserve components called to active duty.

The 283rd Army Band (the Infantry Band) was on hand at every deployment ceremony, as well as the return ceremonies.

A family support network at the unit level was established to keep family members informed of the whereabouts of their loved ones, and the Army Community Service program helped many spouses overcome financial difficulties.

Army mule gets Navy goat

The Bayonet

WASHINGTON 1969 —When the Black Knights of Army meet the Midshipmen of Navy in their 70th annual grid classic at JFK Stadium in Philadelphia on Nov. 29, Trotter, the Army mule mascot, will also be on hand. Trotter is one of a long line of mule mascots at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y.

The mule, known for its strength, endurance and perseverance, has always been considered by the cadets as an appropriate symbol for the Army football team.

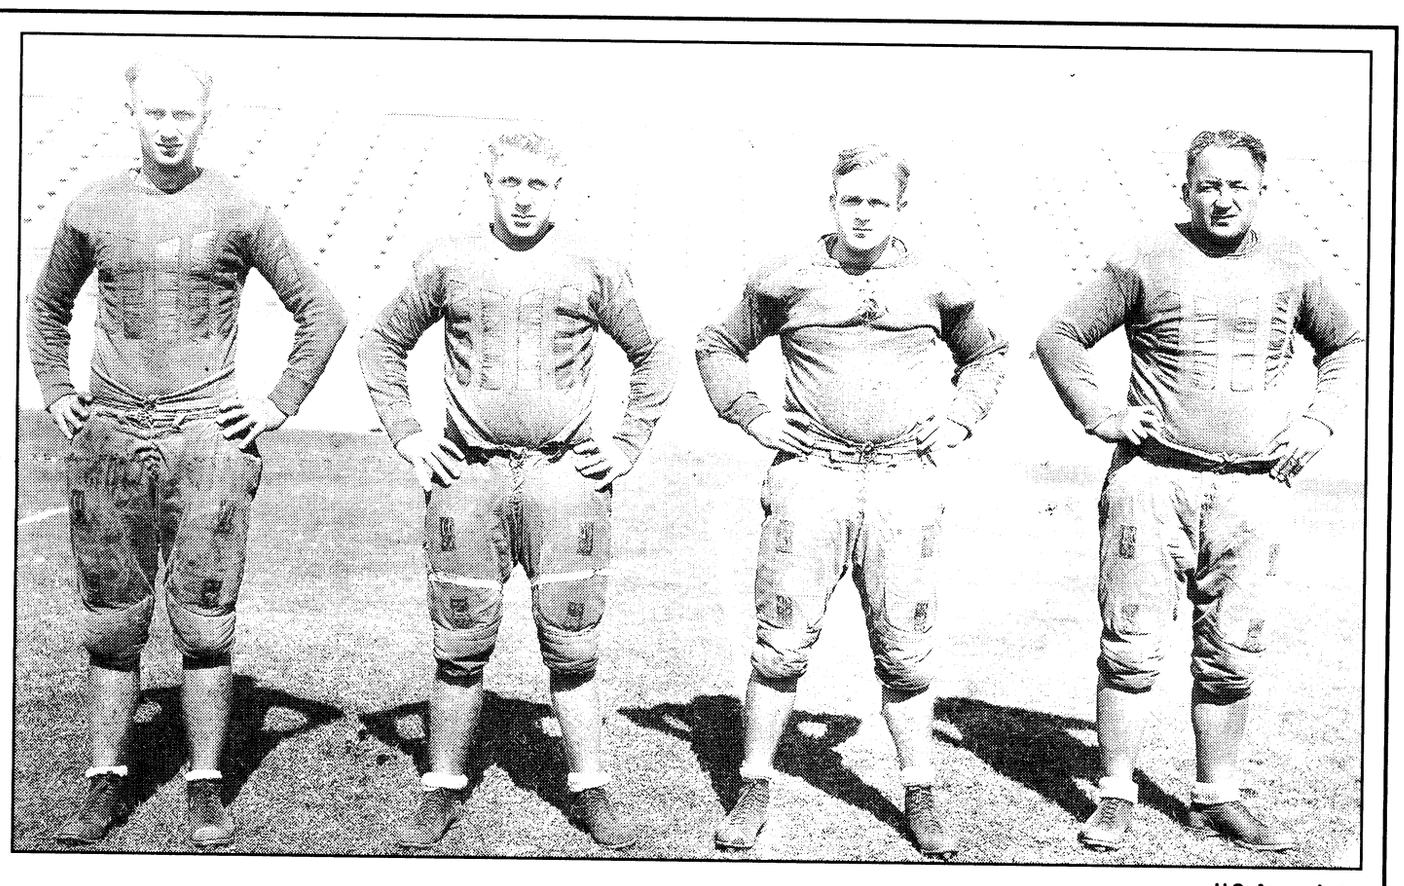
Mules also display other qualities. Some of these were aptly demonstrated when the first cadet mule mascot was introduced to the Navy goat prior to kickoff in 1899.

The goat, being the cantankerous animal it is, eyed his adversary, snorted once, then charged the mule's forlegs. At this indignity, legend has it that the mule whirled and "hoisted that astonished goat toward the Navy stands to the delight of the yelling, laughing crowd."

Apparently spurred on by their four-legged mascot, the Black Knights soared to a 17-5 victory over the favored Navy team.

From its debut as cadet mascot, the legend of the Army mule has grown in length and humor.

One mule mascot, known as Mr. Jackson, was used as a favorite prank played on newly-arrived persons at West Point. A message would be left for them indicating that they had received a phone call from a "Mr. Jackson" and asking them to return the call on a local number.

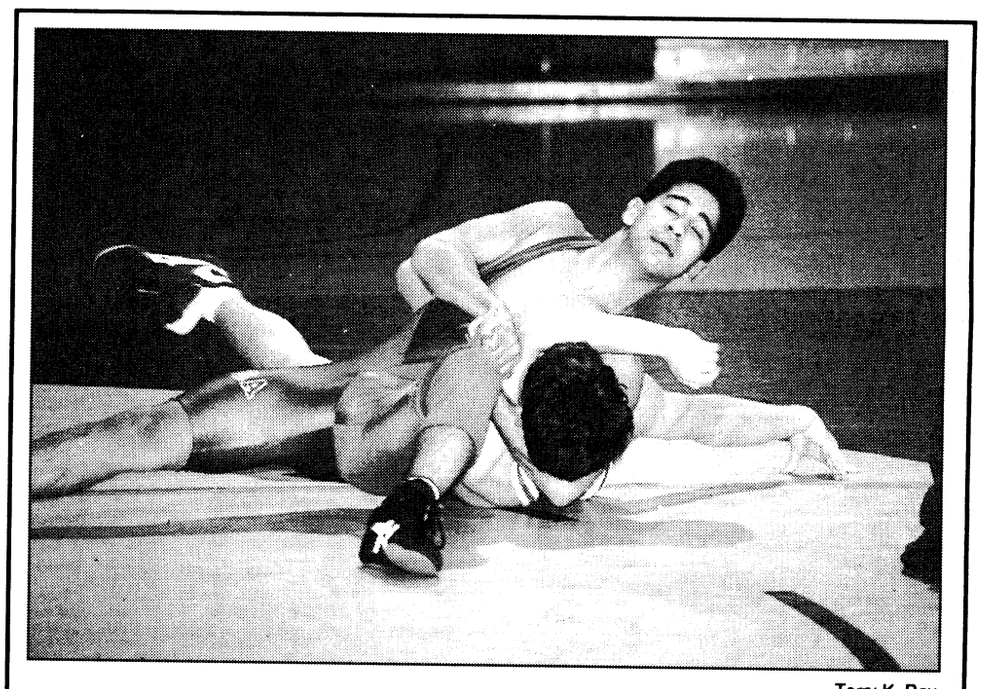


The number called turned out to be that of the post veterinarian.

Hannibal, another hybrid mascot, was the subject of the ever-increasing legend of the Army mule. His claim to fame was his reported dislike of West Point's summer weather.

According to the legend, Hannibal mastered the trick of escaping from his stall and then releasing the other mules from theirs. Not only would he free his fellow heat sufferers, but would lead them through a sliding glass door to a nearby air-conditioned veterinary operating room.

So, if you should happen to be in Philadelphia for the Army-Navy football game this season, or are watching it on television, chances are that all the action may not be on the gridiron.



Trotter, the latest Army mascot, might prove to be the first mule to kick field goal using the Navy goat as a football.

The saga of Lobo badger

The Benning Herald

Fierce Oregon badger arrives for Benning fight

FORT BENNING, May 1930 —The post's annual badger fight, second only to the Kentucky Derby, will be held at the Badger Arena, Sojourners Club, Tuesday night.

Owing to the fact that the fierce, fighting badger hounds from the Infantry School Hunt Kennels have made short work of the badgers during the past two years, a special badger has been imported for this year's fight.

The badger arrived several days ago and is now kept in a large steel cage out at the logging camp.

"Lobo," the name given the badger, is a direct descendant of the murderous oregon black badgers. This species of badgers have been known to openly attack lone hunters. In many cases, the bleaching bones of cougars and mountain lions have been left as the mute evidence of the fierceness of the black badger.

They will fight anything. They show no fear whatever for the largest dogs. In fact, the near presence of a dog in the vicinity of Lobo's cage drives the big animal into a frenzy of rage, and except for the steel bars of the cage, the big cat would tear the dog to pieces.

The badger will be at a slight disadvantage in the coming battle, owing to the fact that when he is pulled into the pit he will mix and mingle with two of the fiercest badger hounds in the country — Rip and Grip.

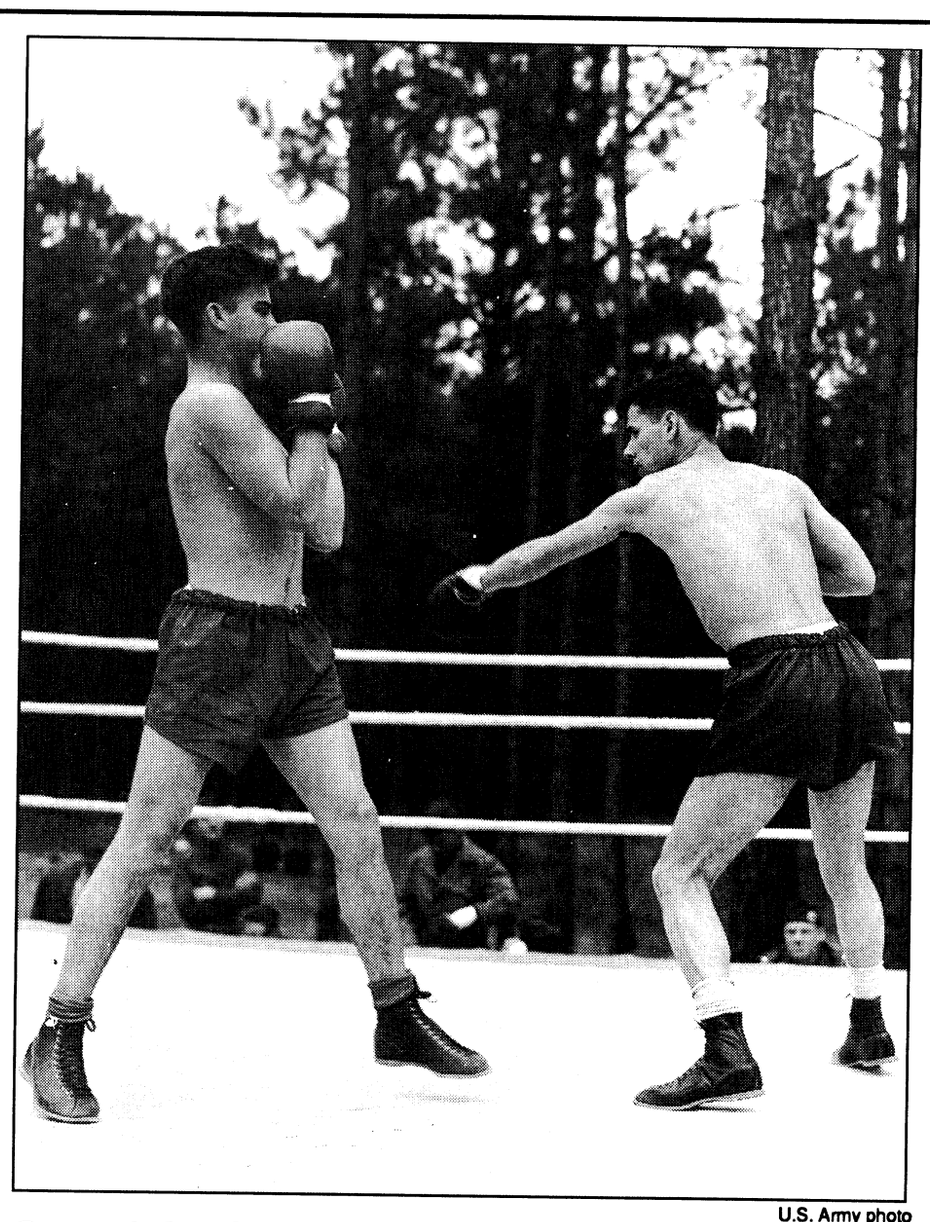
Rip and Grip are pure blood Red Bone hounds, and are past masters at the art of badger fighting. With all of his fierceness, Lobo will face a tough proposition when the trap door to his cage is raised and he is pulled into the pit with this pair of veterans. It is going to be a fierce battle, no doubt, and those who have staked their ducats on the losing badgers for the past two seasons will not make a mistake to lay their mite on the fierce Lobo next Tuesday night.

Military and civilian sportsmen from all over the country will assemble here for what promises to be one of the fiercest battles in the history of badger fights.

Crowd sees dog refuse to fight the killer badger

FORT BENNING, May 1930 — A cleared circle about 20 feet in diameter was surrounded by a seething mass of human beings all fighting for an unobstructed view of the central figures — three men, a dog and a box: one man, master of ceremonies; another holding a straining dog on a leash; a third, dressed in a fencing plastron and gloves, with a catcher's shin guards and mask for further protection, holding one end of a rope in nervous hands while he fixed a cautious eye on the box in which the rope terminates.

The scene was the Fort Benning Sojourners annual badger fight, which was staged at the new logging camp on Tuesday evening. Every eligible male who, could, by plea or bribery, secure the necessary pass, was there to witness this popular sporting bout, and every figure was tense with expectancy as Maj. R.L. Garcia gave a heave on the rope which placed the snarling badger in the center of the ring.



The betting on the event had been heavy, with the odds favoring the badger, but the outcome was a surprise and disappointment to all who attended.

The dog selected for the fight, one of the wild cat pack maintained by the club, had been carefully trained and conditioned by Capt. D.H. Mallan, but when he was suddenly confronted in the ring by his fearful looking antagonist, he displayed the most abject cowardice, and the fight was called off. All bets were canceled.

Because of the danger involved in pulling the badger from the box, and the necessity of having impartial and unbiased officials in the ring, there was some squabbling over who should be given the distinction of pulling the badger.

One group favored Lt. Merrill R. Hawkins, while another proposed that Capt. Herbert J Hennessey be allowed to officiate, with the result that the judges finally compromised on Garcia who is known to everyone in the garrison as an impartial and thorough sportsman.

Following the fight, the assembled sojourners dined on barbecued meat and other delicacies prepared by the committee, and everyone voted it a successful evening, although some of the backers of the badger still insist that the cowardice displayed by the dog did not warrant calling off the bets

1920s

FORT BENNING, A DECADE IN SPORTS

The decade in sports — the 1920s

• The 24th Infantry team entertained the Alabama State Normal School Nine on the local diamond, March 31, 1922. The game was called in the seventh on account of the high wind and severe cold weather. The final score was 14-5.

• The Infantry School meets Piedmont College at the post diamond in March 1922; the Infantry School won the first game of the season 8-0.

• An afternoon in October 1922 witnessed the downfall of the cocky Blue team in the post polo match. This team conceded a two-goal handicap to the strong 29th Infantry team; the final score was 7-2 in favor of the latter team.

• That the continuation of monthly boxing bouts at Fort Benning is welcomed by post personnel was evidenced in October 1922 when a crowd of 1,700 turned out for one of the bouts.

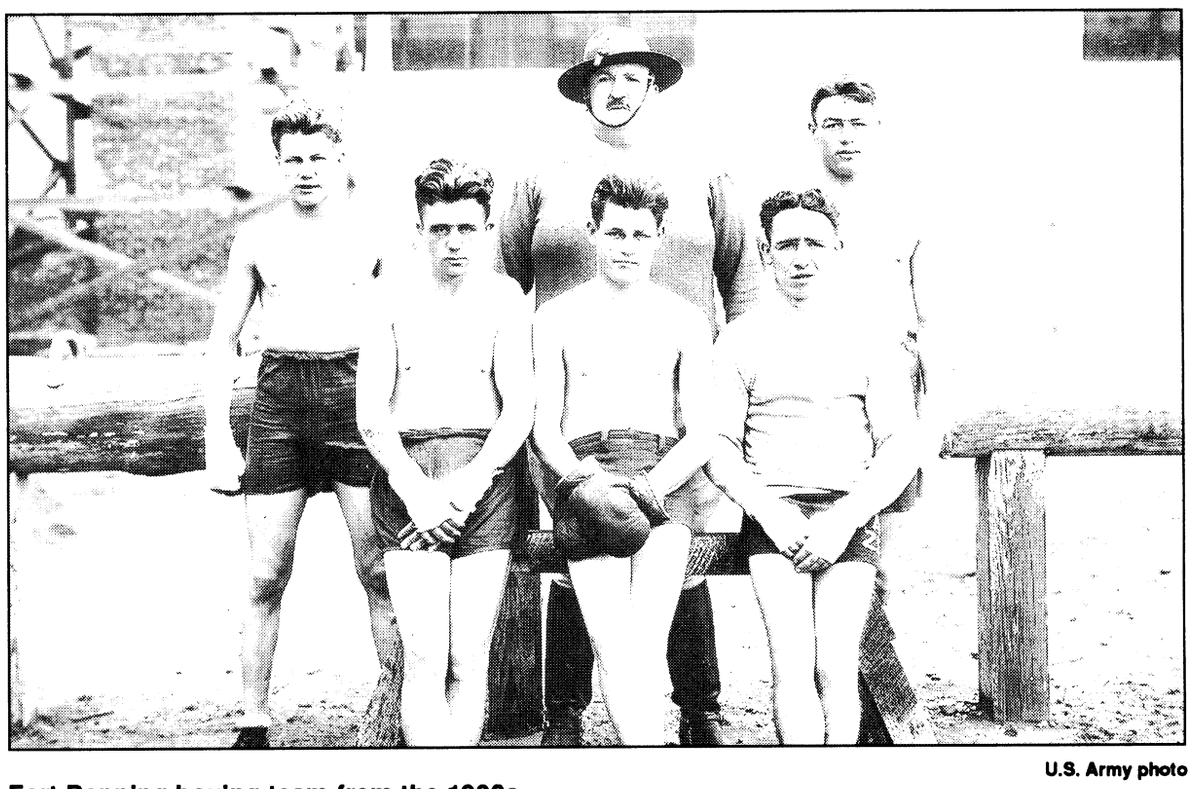
• The Fourth Corps Area Boxing and Wrestling Tourney, which concluded in November 1922 at Fort McPherson, Ga., developed into a marked victory for Fort Benning. With but eight boxers and wrestlers entered in the tournament, six championships were brought home, thereby proving conclusively that Benning leads other stations in the Fourth Corps area in athletics.

• The 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, won the post champion football series on a Wednesday afternoon in 1922 when they defeated the 15th Tank Battalion by a score of 14-12 in a sea of mud before 2,500 cheering fans.

• September 1924 — During a recent visit to the Infantry School, Gen. John J. Pershing inspected the layout of the athletic plants and poured a yard of concrete into the foundations of Doughboy Stadium. He requested that three French coins that he had carried in his pocket since the war be buried in the stadium in commemoration of the lasting friendship between this country and France.

• Fort Benning soldiers win the President's Cup with 12-6 victory over the Atlantic Scouting Fleet. The President's Cup, emblematical of the enlisted men's interservice football championship of the United States, was won Nov. 22, 1924, in Washington, D.C., for the Army when the Infantry School enlisted men's football team trounced the Atlantic Scouting Fleet team.

For the first time in the history of the United States, the president offered a cup to be competed for in a sporting event. The giving of the cup by the President Calvin Coolidge marked the final official stamp of approval and recognition of the title going with it.



The success of the Infantry Team was received at the Infantry School with a great burst of enthusiasm as the final score was read to the 5,000 fans at Gowdy Field.

Infantry officer Maj. Paul Baade, represented Fort Benning and the Army and Staff Sgt. Harry O. Troupe received the cup and deed of gift from the president.

March 1929 — Mrs. Evan E. Lewis, wife of Major E.E. Lewis became a member of the hole-in-one club. The first woman to ever make a hole-in-one on the local links.

March 1929 — The 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry wins garrison basketball championship for seventh consecutive season. The 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry, also wins garrison amateur boxing championship with a total of six first places.

April 1929 — 15th Tank Battalion wins post track meet.

May 1929 — Permanent personnel beat the students in Benning's annual benefit baseball game.

June 1929 — Fort Benning polo team won the Infantry Cup in Washington, D.C.

September 1929 — Tankers retain post aquatic championship.

September 1929 — The intramural baseball league ended in a triple tie with the 83rd Field Artillery, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry, and The Infantry School Detachment, all deadlocked for first place.

September 1929 — Maj. F.E. Hixon won corps area golf championship by defeating Maj. O.N. Bradley in a 36-hole match, 2 up and 1 to go.

September 1929 — The 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry, crowned garrison baseball champions.

December 1929 — The Terrible Tankers, of the 2nd Battalion, 1st Tank Regiment, retain the football championship of the garrison by defeating the 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry, 10 to 7.

World champions play one game here

The Infantry School News

March 1925 — Gowdy Field will exist a long time, but probably no greater baseball teams will ever trod its sod than the two noted squads to appear next Tuesday. On this date none other than Washington's noted aggregation of world's champions and the New York Giants, thrice winners of the National League Championship in as many years, play one game in the infantry's new baseball stadium.

It will be a great day in the athletic history of Fort Benning. It will be a day for which every Doughboy fan has been waiting ever since the announcement was made that the big contest would be played here.

The game will be one of a series the two teams are playing on the spring training trip. These games have been called the "little world series," and the contest thus far played have been replete with interest and filled with the same spirit that inspired the great games last fall.

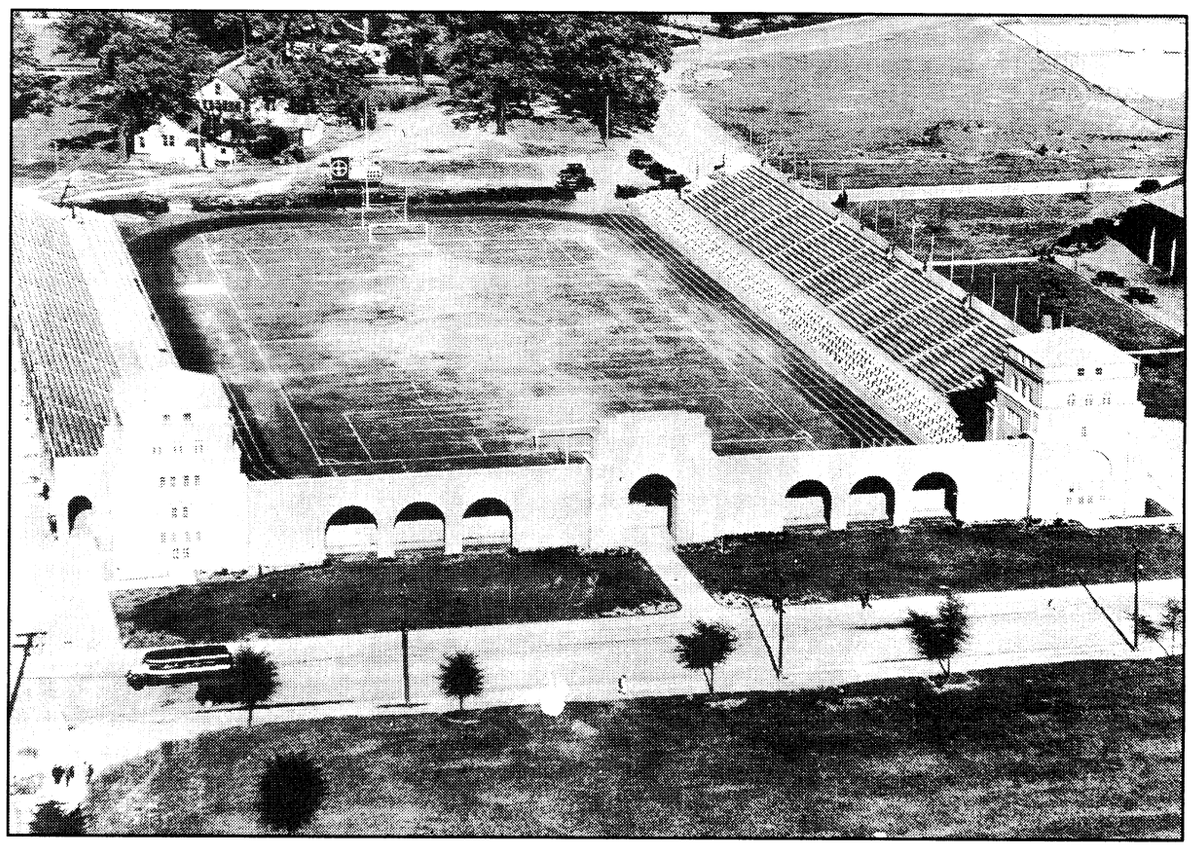
Washington's heroes will be in the lineup of the Senators and as far as it is known, not a first string player will be absent. Muddy Ruel will be in his berth at home plate, Joe Judge, Bucky Harris the great, good old Roger Peckinpaugh and Bluege will comprise the infield, while in the outer gardens McNeely, Goose, Goslin and Sam Rice will hold forth.

John McGraw in person will head his million-dollar collection of Giants. Naturally chief interest in the New York team will center about Hank Gowdy, the backstop for whom Gowdy Field was named.

Everybody knows Gowdy and everyone has heard of his splendid war record. It was because he was the first major leaguer to enlist at the outbreak of the war and because of his splendid record all through the war with the Rainbow Division that the new baseball arena was named for him.

Doughboy Stadium dedicated to soldiers

The Benning Herald



Doughboy Stadium was built by soldier labor, paid for by soldier donations and dedicated to soldier use.

Almost every recruit, soon after his arrival at the Infantry School in the 1930s, learned these things about this largest item Benning's sports machinery. But how many members of the post knew that Doughboy Stadium was built and designed to include an heroic bronze statue over the main gate, and that a model was made, only to fade into forgetfulness, and lie deserted in the artist's studio?

Doughboy Stadium was dedicated to the infantry soldier; in the 1930s it was considered to be an impressive structure, ranking with the best college stadiums in the country. Yet this important adjunct to the athletic life of the Infantry School, which played such a large part in the training of the soldier, had nothing to indicate its name, or the personnel to which it was dedicated, due to neglect of following up a purpose, and to lack of funds.

Originally, the complete stadium was to include a bronze group over the main gateway, showing an infantryman, the main figure, flanked by a football player on his right and a trackman on his left, representing the two main sports that occurred on the field and cinder path.

The idea was started by Lt. Col. Elmer F. Rice, then conductor of the "The Flare," and also commander of the 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry. At his request, an officer designed the group shown in clay model, and also the construction of the gate to the stadium was made to provide a substantial foundation for the group in bronze. Through the lack of funds, the idea was forced to remain dormant.

1930s FORT BENNING, A DECADE IN SPORTS

The decade in sports — the 1930s

• From 1920 to 1930, Polo was among the popular sports at Fort Benning. In 1930, the Fort Benning Polo Club was a member of the Southeastern Circuit of the United States Polo Association. The club's membership was four groups of two teams each; these are the 29th Infantry, 83rd Field Artillery, the Freebooters and the student's teams. Polo matches among several members of the post club were held twice a week.

• "Sad Samuel" Stuart was one excellent mess sergeant and star baseball player. He enlisted as a doughboy and assigned to Company C, 14th Infantry, for duty. In 1916, he rejected an offer from the St. Louis Americans to remain with the Army through the war serving with the 14th Infantry, in Alaska. After the war, he left the service to play professional baseball and hit his stride 1926 to 1928 as a member of the Columbus Foxes of the southeastern league. In 1930, he came back as a member of the Infantry School Detachment as a mess sergeant.

• May 10, 1930, a men's tennis team representing the Atlanta Country Club headed by Jack Mooney, the No. 2 player of the South, played the post team. Mooney, the runner up of the 1929 Benning open tournament, brought a strong aggregation with him from Atlanta, including Mahlon Courts, Jack Simpson and Harry Gault.

• May 1930, Dorothy Ross provided the real upset of the post tennis tournament finals when she defeated Mrs. H.W. Brimmer in two sets of the ladies' singles and became the post champion.

• Lt. Donald Brann was the winner of the post golf tournament when he defeated Maj. Omar Bradley in the finals, one up in 36 holes. Bradley tied for low medal.

• In 1932, 221 permanent hunting licenses were issued, which did not take into account the large number of daily permits that were issued at headquarters; there were at least 300 daily permits handed out.

• A fisherman's club was planned in 1932. At the time, fishing was not an organized sport as hunting was. No licenses were necessary for fishing and there were few organized efforts to preserve fish.

• Lt. Brookner Brady, a new arrival at Fort Benning in 1932 to attend the Infantry School, was one of three Army officers to represent the United States in the Pentathlon, a five-section event of the Olympic games. He placed 11th.

• Football was big in the major sports for the 1932-33 season. There were more than 250 soldiers training in the squads representing the larger troop organizations. The 29th Infantry turned out two squads of 50 men each, and the Tank battalion and the Artillery battalion each had a 50-man squad in the field. The 24th Infantry had 60 men on its football squad.

• Four-thousand fight fans watched "Fighting Bob" Lawson leading "colored" heavyweight contender, take the decision over Seldom Heard, Happy Heart battler, in a gruelling 10-round battle at the Doughboy Arena. Although dropping the decision, the big Army battler gave the "Alabama Bear " one of the hardest fights of his career. But for a bad fourth round, there is no doubt that Heard would have reversed the decision. The 24th Infantry Band also entertained the crowd.

1940s FORT BENNING, A DECADE IN SPORTS

The decade in sports — the 1940s

• 1942 — The Infantry School Service Command baseball team, perrenial winners of the post championship since 1936, repeated this season. The ISSC team represented only the Academic Regiment and not the entire Infantry School Service Command. During the entire season, the team had a record of 29 wins and two losses. 1st. Lt. Frank Shannon, the personnel adjutant of the regiment, was coach of the team.

• The 3rd Armored Regiment's 18-6 victory over the 55th Engineers October 1942 was partially due to the burly, hard-hitting fullback, John "Big Chief" Carney, a descendent of the Choctaw Indians of Mississippi; his teammates call him "Thunder Cloud."

• December 1942 — Mr. Big of Benning football this fall was undoubtedly Roy Cestary, the great tailback and captain of the all-winning 124th Gators who closed their campaign with a resounding win over the 29th Infantry, played before 8,500 soldier fans. Cestary He was assigned to the 124th Regiment and played football for Capt. Red Milton.

• Cpl. Milton "Bib" Falk once pitched an 18-inning, no-hit, no-run game in 1940 when he was playing semi-pro baseball with the Blue Colts of Cicero, Ill. The 1943 candidate of the 10th Armored Division for the baseball's hall of fame joined the Army April 3, 1941. Falk is married, and he says his most ardent rooter is his wife. Sophie, who, not to be outdone by her husband, was a star volleyball player in Chicago.

• February 1943 — Maj. Gen. E.G. Chapman, commanding officer of the Airborne Command, visited the 508th Parachute Regiment, at Fort Benning. While visiting a regimental gym class conducted by Lt. R.I. Fleming, special service officer, weightlifter and bodybuilder. Chapman was delighted to meet the 508th special services officer who held the title of Mr. Physical Culture of Connecticut for 1939.

• Hero of many games in the Negro American League, Cpl. Fredrick F. Beckett Jr. is looked upon as a future mainstay of the Panther nine, taking the diamond for the Service Battalion of the Third Student Training Regiment. He was played shortstop for the Cleveland Giants from 1938 to 1940.

• March 1943 — Seven years ago Candidate Robert Livermore Jr., 16th Company First Student Training Regiment, passed in review before Adolph Hitler and other high Nazi officials as a member of the United States Olympic Games team at Berlin. He was a member of the American team, which placed fourth in the first Olympic Games ski competition in 1936, held in the Bavarian Alps. He hopes to be assigned to the mountain or ski troops upon successful completion of the Infantry OCS course.

• Fort Benning's Midget Doughboys take the field under the arcs when they met the powerful Sixteenth Street Grammar School of Columbus at Doughboy Stadium. This marked the first time in history the Midget Doughs have appeared under the lights and was also one of the few regularly scheduled night games ever to be played in the stadium.

• April 1943 — Fort Benning's 1943 baseball season started with Capt. Hank Gowdy, former big league star and coach, leading his brand new Infantry School all-stars into action against the Columbus Foxes. The game was played at Gowdy Field, which is named after the tall tutor in honor of his exploits as a sergeant overseas during World War I. The famed 29th Infantry Band, directed by Warrant Officer Albert Andrews, entertained at the ball game.

• One of the country's all-time athletic greats received his second lieutenant's commission in the Infantry School. The former Washington Husky halfback who made two All-American elevens, 2nd Lt. Edward Wagner was also a great Olympic performer in both track and winter sports. A great sprinter, Wagner entered the 1932 Olympics at Los Angeles and captured third place in both the 100- and 200-meter dashes, placing behind two such immortals as Jesse Owens and Ralph Metcalfe. In 1936, Wagner returned to Olympic competition and again took third place in both sprint events. He stayed in Europe for the Winter Olympics and skated to "places" in the 1500-meter and two-mile events.

• September 1943 — Boyd Bartley, sensational young shortstop who came right out of the University of Illinois into the major leagues is among a group of sport celebrities who moved into the Third Company of the Third Student Training Regiment. During his last season at Illinois, Bartley pasted the horsehide for a phenomenal average of .471. On May 22 of this year, Leo Durocher signed Bartley to the Brooklyn Dodgers.

• The Infantry School Hunt met for breakfast at the Polo-Hunt Club. Around 50 guests were assembled to welcome the riders on their return from a pig hunt. Maj. Gen. John W. O'Daniel said, "The hunt at present finds itself short of horses. I suggest that jeeps might be converted into same, as they have certainly been used for everything else."

• The fighting men of the Provisional Group, Area Service Unit, scored five victories against one loss in a boxing card at the Main gym to continue their romp to the post intramural boxing crown.

• The Camp Campbell, Ky., Angels whitewashed the Fort Bliss, Texas, Falcons, 9-0, to become the first Armywide baseball champions in history. The contest was the second game of a doubleheader played at Gowdy Field before a crowd of 4,000 fans. In all, 74,000 witnessed the 19 tournament games played over an eight-day period on the Gowdy turf.

1950s

FORT BENNING, A DECADE IN SPORTS

The decade in sports — the 1950s

• FORT BENNING, Ga., 1950 — Post sports official Sam Prophet, 40, had a long sports career in at Fort Benning. It was first interrupted by the war in 1944 when he was ordered to the European theater. Later he was taken prisoner by the Germans in the famed "Battle of The Bulge;" he remained in the custody of the enemy for more than four months, after which time he was released by the Russians.

He was best remembered for his football career. Playing for his old unit, the 29th Infantry Regiment against the Tankers in a contest that involved the post championship in 1928, Prophet, now 40, scored all seven points to win the game 7-2. He gathered in a Tanker punt on his own 35, faked to the right side of the field, reversed and ran the full 65 yards for a touchdown to put his team out in front 6-2. Then he kicked the extra point.

Besides playing football, Prophet also had a baseball batting average of .485, and participated in javelin throwing, pole vaulting, running, basketball, swimming, tennis and golf.

• 1953 —Fort Benning sports activities got a shot in the arm when Special Services sports officials and the six Infantry Center baseball coaches sat down and selected an All-Post team at the conclusion of the Infantry Center baseball tournament. This All-Star squad, composed of 18 players including a coach and manager, was the first all-post team selected for competition since 1949, the final year of Doughboy competition. The 1953 Doughboys had scheduled games with other military installations and represented Fort Benning in the Third Army Baseball Tournament at Camp Rucker, Ala.

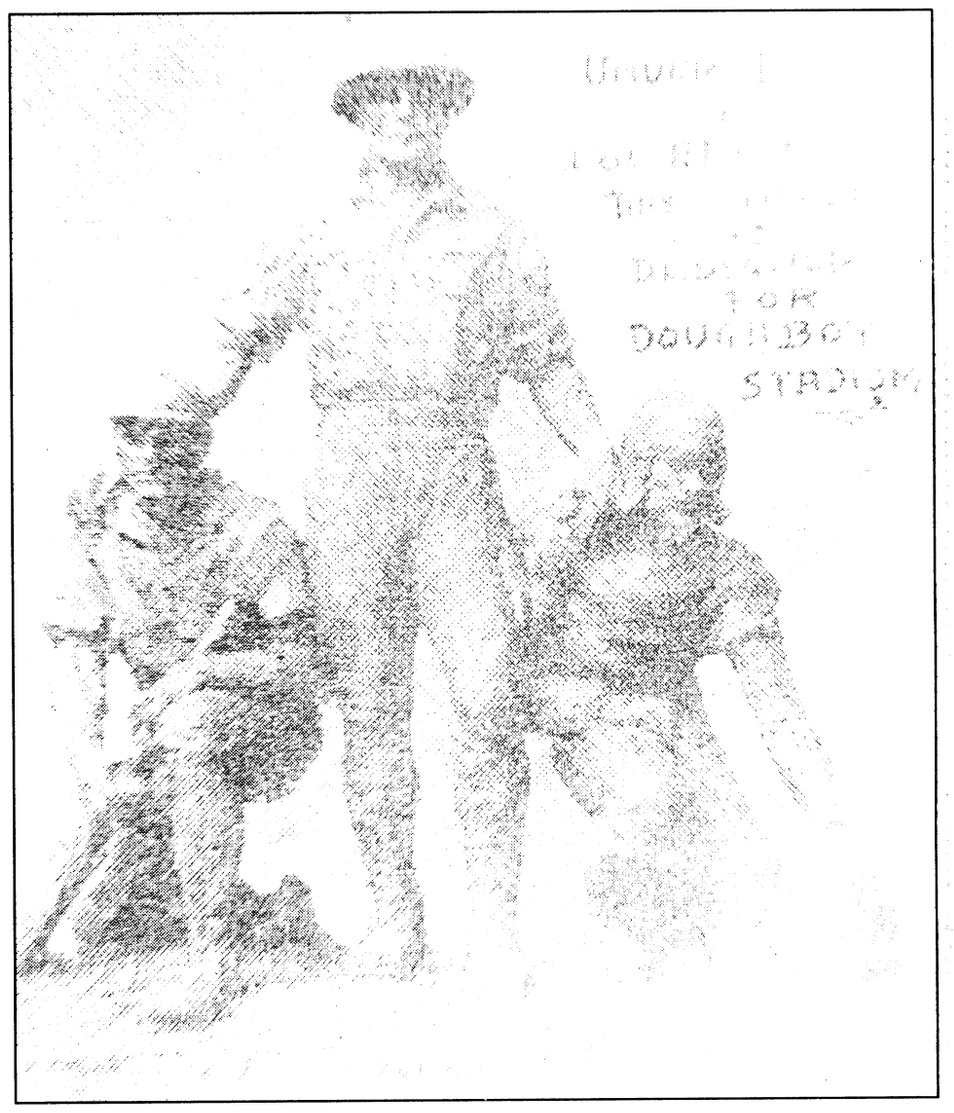
• 1956 — Jim Boyd, Fort Benning light heavyweight, had never seen the inside of a boxing ring before he joined the Army. However, he successfully defended his triple boxing crown this year winning the Third Army, All-Army and Inter-Service, and also won a berth on the 1956 Olympic boxing team. The only major disappointment came when he was declared unable to compete in the New York Golden Gloves because of an Army ruling forbiding Army personnel to fight without headgear as they did in the Golden Gloves.

• 1956 — Two Olympic boxing champions, a no-hit baseball game, two Third Army championship teams and the adoption of a new sports program provided the top sports thrills at Benning for 1956.

Boxers 1st Lt. Pete Rademacher and Spc. Jim Boyd punched their way to victories in the Olympic Games in Melbourne, Australia.

Pfc. Dave Rogers, halfback and leading scorer for the 3rd Division Marne Rockets, and 1st Lt. Dale R. Haupt, a guard on the Main Post Doughboys, were chosen for the Army Times All-Star team.

Before 4,000 shivering fans, the main Post Doughboys won the Infantry Center football championship trouncing the 3rd Division Marne Rockets, 23-7. Touchdowns were scored by Lou Sawchik, Howie Williams and Vince Donato.



With Jim Boyd and Pete Rademacher leading the way with one round KOs, the Doughboys racked up six victories in the finals of the Third Army Boxing Championships to win the crown from defending champs Fort Bragg, N.C.

Placing seven swimmers on the 14-man Third Army All-Star teams, the Fort Benning tankmen made a runaway of the Third Army Swimming and Diving meet. Coach Don Brown and teammates Phil Ware, Don Enos and Don Griffin combined to score a total of 92 points. Brown took firsts in the 100-meter backstroke, 400-meter individual medley and the 100-meter freestyle.

Tom McGroarity wiffed eight batters and allowed but five walks in the year's exciting no-hit baseball game.

• 1957 — Fort Benning's 1957 football season featured a regimental level program consisting of 13 teams with a total of 48 games played on post. The U.S. Army Infantry Center hosted a four-team league comprised of teams from U.S. Army Infantry Center Troop Command, U.S. Army Infantry School (The School Brigade), Special Troops Command and U.S. Army Infantry School (Student Officers Battalion). The Third Infantry Division fielded a nine-team league, which played a 36-game schedule.

1960s

FORT BENNING, A DECADE IN SPORTS

The decade in sports — the 1960s

• Fort Benning Women's Army Corps Cagers opened their defense of the Third Army women's basketball title this week by traveling to Parris Island, S.C., for a game with women Marines; the team was undefeated last year. The 12-"girl" squad on the trip included Sgt. 1st Class Elizabeth Shiloh, team coach, Capt. Dorcas Stearns, officer-in-charge, Pfcs. Rosie Young, Ella Winfield, Bonnie Laird, Marie Gobeil, Iona Stewart, Claudia Echols, Carol Stewart, Annie Davis, Alma Henry and Merlene Wideman and Pvts. Mary Laffinet and Jeraldine Jenkins.

• 1963 — The Youth Activities Club sponsored a Fourth of July carnival to raise funds and to keep as many people as possible on the post during the holiday in conjunction with the post safety program. The carnival included band music, a Doughboy League baseball game, static military equipment display, junior jump tower, special services show and fireworks. During the year, the YAC also sponsored a driver training program for boys and girls of legal driving age, and a learn-to-swim program. Some of the equipment needed for YAC activities was provided by the Army Daughters, the Junior Army Daughters, the Fort Benning Officers' Wives' Club and the Enlisted Men's Wives' Club.

• 1963 — Doughboy halfback Billy Williamson and guard Pat Dye added another page to the post's sports history when they were selected to the Army Times 1963 All-Army football team. Guard Joe Wendryhoski was chosen to the second squad while honorable mention went to ends Fred Murphy and Dan House, tackle Joe Pinckney, center Elliot Moseley, quarterback Marvin Tibbetts and fullback Ron Quillen.

• Edward Crook Jr., first sergeant of Company D, 9th Battalion, 2nd Brigade, Training Center, because of his athletic record, was one of 16 Vietnam veterans selected in 1968 to represent the Army in a national pilot speaking program. In a six-month speaking tour of the Southeastern United States, Crook, 1960 Gold Medal winner in boxing, spoke of the conflict in Vietnam, concerning its history, people, land, villages, our objective there, eventual goal and the enemy we face.

• 1969 — Commenting on the world champion New York Mets' astonishing finish this year was Pvt. Michael A. Cello, one of two outstanding major league baseball prospects currently taking basic training in Company B, 5th Battalion, 1st Brigade, Training Center. A smooth fielding shortstop, Cello is scheduled to try-out with the Kansas City Royals of the American League this spring. Company B's other baseball player is Lee M. Choate, Chattanooga, Tenn., who has played two years in the New York Yankee organization. A member of the 3397th U.S. Army Garrison Reserve unit, Choate is from Chattanooga; Cello is from Bethpage, N.Y.

• Spc. James Mike Ladd, a programming specialist in the office of data systems, Infantry School, won the Georgia Sate All Star Bowling Tournament with a total pin fall of 4,691.

Ladd rolled eight consecutive strikes in the second game for 263 in the final five-game series; he later opened the third game with six strikes. He had a 195 average for the 24-game tournament.

• A doughboy by profession, a parachutist by choice, and a kayak champion by hard work. These are the credits of Lt. Paul J. Beachem of the 9th Infantry. His past laurels in the field of kayak racing have earned him the recent honor of being selected for the Olympic tryouts. In preparation for the keen competition of the Olympic games, Beachem will stick to a rigid training schedule. His daily workout will include 20 miles of paddling of which 15 miles will be continuous rhythmic oaring and the other five miles will be the furious pace required in sprints. His vigorous schedule will also include a daily five-mile road run.

• A perfectly thrown pass in an overtime period gave the 3rd Ranger Company, The School Brigade, an 8-6 victory over 524th Personnel Company, CTC, and the post flag football championship. The rangers who were undefeated in the tournament, had already turned back the 524th team 9-7 in the preliminary round. The 524th won a second life by blanking the Airborne Company 12-0. If they had won, the tournament would have gone down to a showdown on Tuesday. But the ranger machine could not be stopped.

75th ANNIVERSARY 1970s

FORT BENNING, A DECADE IN SPORTS

The decade in sports — the 1970s

• August 1970 — Spc. Michael Jamison of Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery, 197th Infantry Brigade, a former All-Army boxer will represent Fort Benning in the upcoming Army boxing trials. The Kelley Hill boxer attended a boxing camp sponsored by Forces Command with hopes of advancing to the All-Army trials. Jamison faced other boxers in the 147-pound or welterweight class at the FORSCOM camp.

• One of the Army's most distinguished marksman during the past two decades — Sgt. Maj. William B. Blankenship Jr.— retired here on May 1 after 17 years of record shattering performances. A shooter for the "Home of Champions," the U.S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit, Blankenship is remembered as being the only soldier to have held the three highest shooting awards recognized by the United States — the Distinguished Pistol Badge, the Distinguished Rifle Badge and the Distinguished International Badge.

• September 1972 — Three U.S. Army marksmen met the world's best shooters in the Olympics at the Bavarian village ranges and captured for the United States two Gold and one Silver Medal. The talented marksmen, Maj. Lones Wigger and Capt. Lanny R. Bassham, both from the U.S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit, along with Army Reserve 1st Lt. John Writer, Clarendon Hills, Ill., won their medals in the Smallbore Rifle competition. Writer, a former member of the Army Marksmanship Unit, trained with the Fort Benning marksmen and traveled to Europe with the shooters this spring for pre-Olympic training.

• In the first edition of the Youth Bowl, the Doughboy League players of the Youth Activities football program ended their season with an exciting contest between the Doughboy All-Stars and the league champion Cardinals. The All-Stars won 20- 6.

• September 1972 — 1st Lt. Jim Tucker of the 4th Battalion (Airborne), The School Brigade, has been selected as the outstanding judo athlete of the year by the Georgia District of the Amateur Athletic Union. He has studied Judo since July 1971 with the Fort Benning Judo Club, and entered the Florida AAU Open Judo Tournament after only three weeks of study. He joined the Army at Fort Benning in November 1969, and then attended the Infantry Officer Basic Course, Ranger School, Airborne School, and Pathfinder School.

• A four-man Fort Benning team of skydivers won the Southern Conference Championship and represented the Southern United States and Fort Benning in national competition. The four jumpers who have accumulated a total of more than 3,500 free falls were 2nd Lt. Michael Barnes, Sgts. 1st Class Wes Mills and Richard Gibbs, all instructors in the Airborne Department, and NCOC Robert Crenshaw of 84th Company. For the first time in national competition, a relative work event has been included in the "world series" of parachuting. In this event, the jumpers perform various aerial acrobatic maneuvers and formations including the star, diamond, abreast lie, caterpillar, pairs and four-man star. The jumpers are timed and graded from the ground.

• October 1974 — Sgt. Joseph W. Mitchell, a race relations instructor for the 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade, is the post's Tang Soo Do expert. Tang Soo Do is one of the Korean martial arts that's 1,300 years old. Mitchell teaches other members of the battalion and participates in an extensive daily program to maintain his proficiency in the sport.

• Master Sgt. James L. McQuien, 1968 and 1971 All-Army Service Rifle Champion from the U.S. Army Marksmanship Training Unity, blazed a new national record in long range competition and won the Grand Aggregate High Power Rifle Championship of the Southwest Invitational Rifle tournament on Camp Bullis ranges in San Antonio, Texas. Sgt. 1st Class William R. Lee of the Marksmanship Unit broke into the winning circle for the Army squad when he grabbed the top spot in the 300-yard rapid fire match, the third individual contest, after placing all 10 of his shots in the 10 rings for a 100-3X score.

FORT BENNING, A DECADE IN SPORTS

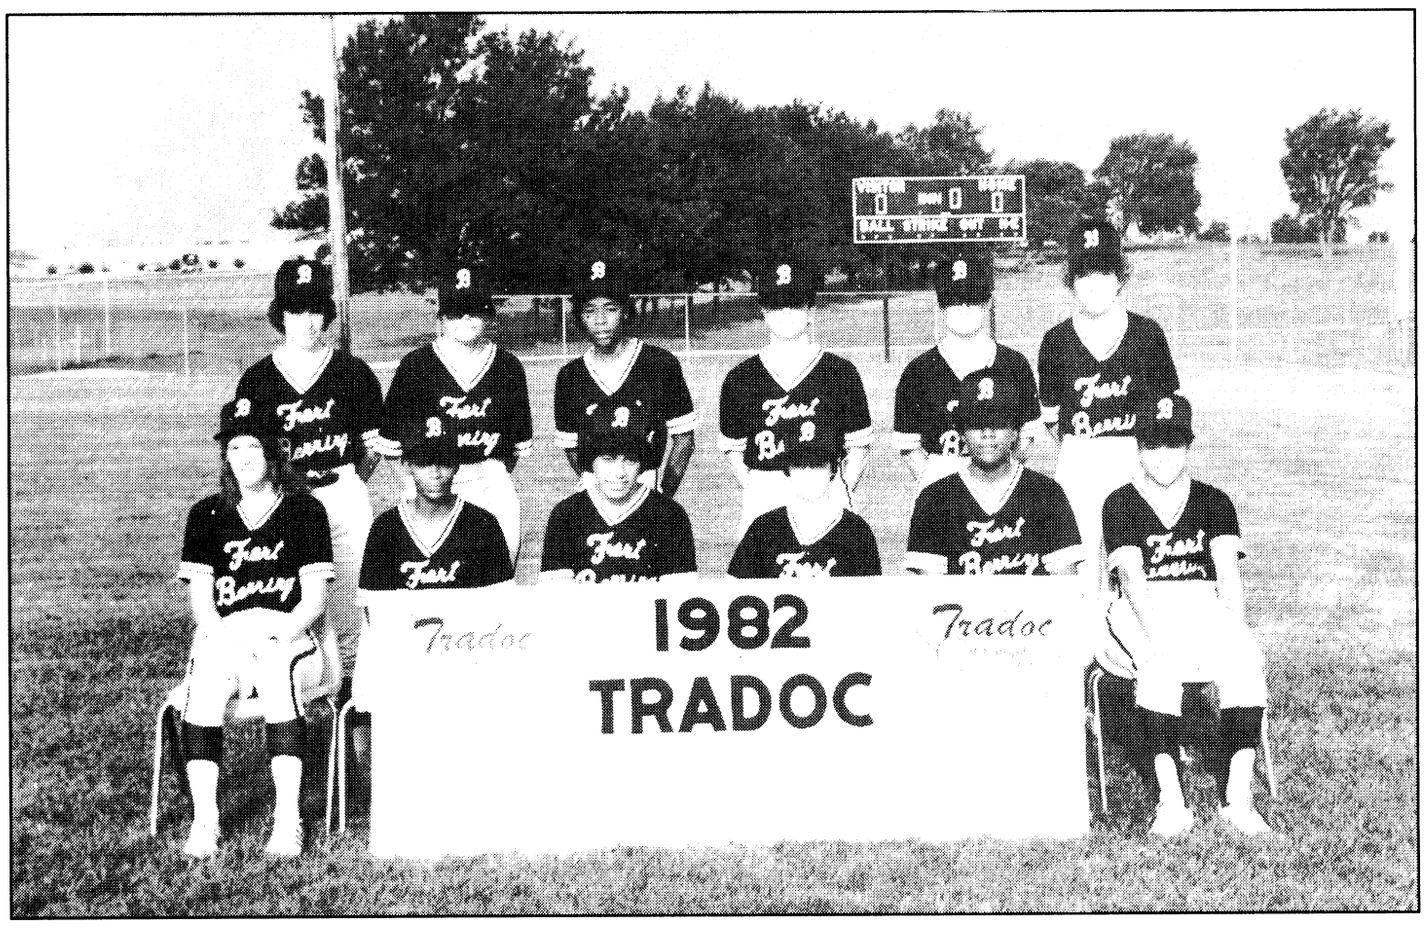
The decade in sports — the 1980s

• June 1980 — Fort Benning's Doughboy football team is gearing up for the season as they wind up their spring practice. A tenative schedule has been set. It includes the Citadel, four Southeastern Conference junior varsity teams and two varsity teams. The two varsity teams are Alabama State and Miles College in Birmingham, Al. The Doughboys are looking to improve on last year's record of 6-4-1.

• June 1980 — In Dependent Youth Activities baseball action last week, slammin' Sam Byrd took on the world with his mighty bat to be named the first DYA player of the week. The first baseman for the Tee Ball Rangers hit four home runs and a single for a grand total of 13 runs batted in during a victory over the Seahawks, 26-25.

• July 1980 — Fort Benning's 12-man boxing team won 11 Gold Medals and one Silver Medal at the Alabama Amateur Athletic Union championships at Maxwell Air Force Base, Ala. The winners were Horace Harrington, Augusta Miranda, Reed Esponge, Robert Allen, Gregory Staten, Broderick Crump, Raynaldo Gonzales, Dwayne Edwards, Troy Stringer, Kelvin Green and Kevin Houston. Eric Wells took the Silver Medal.

• August 1980 — In Capt. Tom Duckett's first competitive swimming meet in four years, he tied the U.S. and World records in the 50-meter breaststoke, beating the national champion, and swimming away with the state championship title in that event. A doctrine writer for the Tactics Division, and assistant coach for the Fort Benning Barracudas, Duckett trains six days a week swimming two to three miles a day during his lunch hour.



• October 1984 — More than $12,000 was raised for the Infantry Museum as approximately 2,500 runners participated in this year's Infantry Museum Run. The Infantry Officers Basic Course students from the 2nd Battalion, The School Brigade, won the distinction of being the best Fort Benning team for the fourth straight year. Also, four age group records were set. Karen Ammons, Mary Mace, Mike Quispe and Alex Bruce all eclipsed the previous record times for their respective age divisions.

• November 1984 — Seven Fort Benning soldiers represented the United States this past summer at the XXIII Olympic Games in Los Angeles, Calif. — Matthew Dryke, Erich Buljung, Glen Dubis, Dan Carlisle, Randy Stewart, John McNally and Gloria Parmentier.

Spc. George Milton of the 598th Maintenance Company, 36th Engineer Group, is working to become one of those selected to the U.S. Olympic Team for the 1988 Olympic Games in Seoul, Korea.

• November 1988 — The Fort Benning men's and women's teams fared well in the active duty team competition in the Army Ten-miler recently conducted in Washington, D.C. The women's team placed fourth in a field of 16, and the men's team placed seventh in a field of 85 teams. This was the first time a women's running team was put together on Fort Benning.

• March 1990 — The All-Army Wrestling Team succeeded in doing what no other team has done in 12 years when they captured the freestyle wrestling competition and the overall wrestling team title at the 1990 Armed Forces Wrestling Championships at Quantico Marine Corps Base, Va. this month. The All-Army Head Coach was Sgt. 1st Class Tony Thomas. The All-Army Team has been based at Fort Benning and was hosted by the 29th Infantry Regiment for this year's trials.

• June 1990 — The Fort Benning Rebels had an undefeated season with the Columbus Youth Soccer Association and won the championship of the Georgia Youth Soccer Association Southwest Region. Their coach was Mike Lydiate, a former Pacelli High School soccer player and now a Columbus College student, and their assistant coach was Robby Alford, also a soccer player for Columbus College. The Officers' Wives' Club sponsored the Rebels in the American Soccer Association Tournament in Atlanta over the Memorial Day weekend where the Rebels won a second-place division title and third-place overall. Their only loss of the year was to an all-star team from south Atlanta.

• SAUDI ARABIA, January 1991 — The 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry recently hosted the first 'Sledgehammer Track and Field Tournament in the deserts of Saudi Arabia during Desert Shield. Soldiers from 1st Bn., 18th Inf., 2nd Bn., 18th Inf. 4th Bn., 41st Field Artillery, and the 197th Support Battalion competed against man, woman and nature for the coveted bragging rights of first place.

First Lt. Darnell Shaw, the, liaison officer for 1st Bn., 18th Inf., was the sports coordinator for the tournament. The final results were 2nd Bn., 18th Inf., leading the way, taking first place in five events. The Redlegs of 4th Bn., 41st FA came in second place, winning two events, and the 197th Spt Bn. took third place winning one event.

• October 1991 — The Fort Benning men's 10-miler team took top honors at the seventh annual Army 10-Miler in Washington, D.C. this month. The Commander's Cup was presented to the team by Maj. Gen. William Streeter, commander of the Military District of Washington. Fort Benning Commander Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White was on hand to congratulate the team on their record-breaking victory. The team included Spc. Charles W. Dent Jr., who placed third overall and first among military personnel with a time of 49:53. Fort Benning's women's team finished fourth overall among military teams.

• Spc. Charles Dent, an operating room technician with the 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital was selected for the Armed Forces Cross Country Team and participated in the Armed Forces Cross Country Championships in Lagos, Nigeria. Besides running the 12-kilometer race in Nigeria, Dent will also train for the Olympic trials.

• November 1991 — Capt. Jeff Lang went to the Big Island of Hawaii to participate on this year's Army team in the Gatorade Ironman Triathlon, with the thought of being competitive. But he surpassed even his own expectations by taking first place in the Army division, and finishing in the top 10 for all military services. Among the 1,495 entrants who started the race, Lang finished 309th, placing him in the top third of all competitors. This was his first Ironman tournament. The Army team placed last among the four services with the Air Force finishing first, the Marine Corps second, and the Navy third.

• March 1992 — The All-Army wrestling team went to Quantico, Virginia this month and came away with its fourth straight Armed Forces wrestling championship. Overall,the team scored for both Greco-Roman and freestyle; the Army had an overwhelming 123 to 58 points for the Navy and 39 for the Marine Corps.

• July 1992 — Spencer High School students — Kanani Morris, son of Col. Rodney W.K. Morris; Carol Lewis, the daughter of retired Sgt. 1st Class Ezra Lewis; Dennis McAbee, the stepson of Master Sgt. James Baker; and Diondre Jackson, the son of Sgt. 1st Class Thomas Jackson — are looking forward to taking part in the 1992 Athletic Congress National Junior Olympic Track and Field Championships. Morris and McAbee were ranked sixth and seventh in the nation in pole vaulting, while Lewis had excelled with the discuss and javelin. Jackson will try to better his qualifying jump of 6 feet, 9 inches in the high jump.

• July 1992 — The 1992 Olympic shooting team will have on its side eight shooters from the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit from Fort Benning to help bring home the gold from Barcelona, Spain.

Anchoring the shooting contingent will be John McNally, a captain with USAMU and a three-time Olympian in pistol competition. Jonathan Frazer, a staff sergeant, will join McNally on the firing line. In rifle competition, Mike Anti, a captain, Tom Tamas, a specialist and Kris Peterson, a second lieutenant, will try to hold their own against the world's best. Tamas and Peterson made the team as Reservists.

In shotgun, Laurel, Miss., native Todd Graves, a specialist, has accomplished what no other American has done. He will be the only athlete to compete in both trap and skeet in the '92 Games. On the trap side, Graves will be joined by Brett Erickson, a staff sergeant, and Jay Waldron, a specialist from Tacoma, Wash., to round out the trap team.

The Olympic wrestling team will also have a soldier from Fort Benning. Rodney Smith, a specialist with Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 29th Infantry Regiment, made the team when he defeated Andy Seras last month in Greco-Roman wrestling.

• Olympic Bronze Medal winner Rodney Smith, a specialist with Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 29th Infantry Regiment, returned to the Columbus and Fort Benning area to a hero's welcome.

A member of the 1992 Olympic Wrestling Team, he won the Bronze Medal in the 149.5 pound weight class at the Summer Games In Barcelona, Spain.

Fort Benning Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White was on hand to welcome Smith at the Columbus Metropolitan Airport. Smith later went to Washington, D.C., for a meeting at the Pentagon with the chief of staff of the Army and President George Bush.

• Aug. 25, 1992 — The 1992 Southeast Military Regional Tae Kwon Do Championships were Saturday at Briant Wells Field House, and a small, but raucous crowd attended. According to All-Army tae kwon do coach Bruce Harris, it will be conducted here again next year.

In poomse, or forms, competition, Lorenzo Arredondo of Fort Benning placed second.

In the welterweight division, David Walter of Fort Benning placed second and Arredondo taking third. Matt Wurstner of Fort Benning took first place in the middleweight division with teammate Brian Steverson placing second.

In the heavyweight division, Edward Givans of Fort Benning defeated Auda Squires of the U.S. Marine Corps at Warner Robins, Ga., for first place.

In the female division, Rachael Ridenour defeated Kay Ostorn for first place. Both were from Fort Benning.

• August 1992 — The Spencer High School football team started a new training regimen — cardiovascular and muscle endurance training — with help from Sgt. Maj. Ireland D. Pulley and Staff Sgt. Dennis Guaglianone of the U.S. Army Fitness School. Coach Collins Jones contacted them at the Fitness School to see if there were any training exercises that would help the team. Pulley and Guaglianone went out to a practice and installed what's known as circuit drills to help team members with their cardiovascular workouts.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White chats with members of the 1993 All Army Wrestling team after winning their fourth Armed Forces championship.

• November 1992 — Sgt. 1st Class Charles E. Kirkland is the boxing coach for the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division. Assigned to Service Battery, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery, he is now passing on what he has learned in almost 20 years of service to the Army and boxing at Kelley Hill Fitness Center.

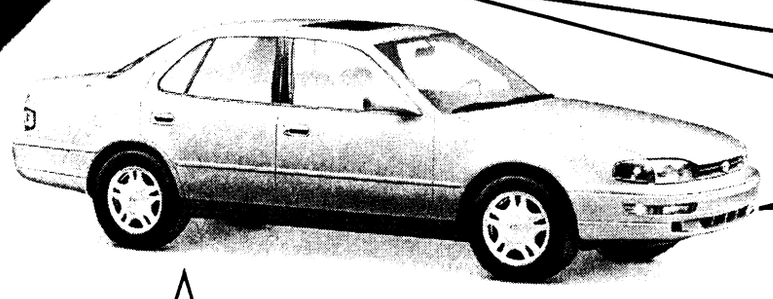
Growing up in Detroit, Mich., Kirkland had the opportunity to fight two world heavyweight champions. In 1975 in an interservice match, he lost a bout on a decision to Leon Spinks, who would go on to become heavyweight champion of the world. In 1976 Kirkland fought Spinks again at the Olympic trials, losing once again on a decision.

At a tournament in Atlanta in 1980, Kirkland fought Evander Holyfield. Kirkland went the distance but lost on a decision to Holyfield. Holyfield is the 1992 heavyweight champion of the world.

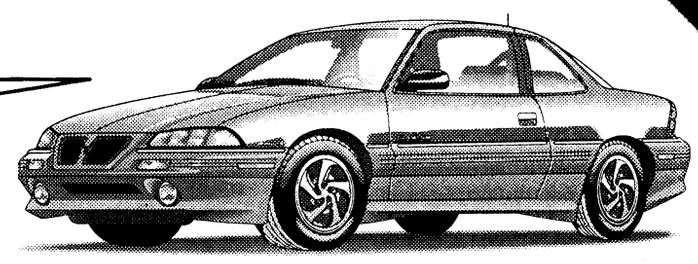
• May 1993 — The 1993 USA Rugby Military Club Championships at Blue and French Fields brought together more than 400 rugby players from 23 clubs around the country. The Fort Benning Cruise-a-matics captured the Seven's crown defeating the Fort Benning Rebels in the championship match 28-17, but lost in the championship match to Pensacola 6 - 3.

• June 1993 — The Army came away a winner at the 1993 Armed Forces Track and Field Championships at Emory University in Atlanta. The meet pitted the Army against the Air Force, Marine Corps and Navy.

The Army pulled out wins in the men's 4x400 meter relay, triple jump and high jump to outdistance its closest rival, the Air Force, 83.5 points to 69 to win its second straight Armed Forces title.



In the women's division, the Army once again proved to be too strong for its competitors, running away from the field 78 points to the Air Force's 61, the Marine Corps' 18 and the Navy's 7.



Willie Davenport was the All-Army coach.

Chaplains help soldiers adjust to military life

By Jennifer St. Onge
Special to The Bayonet©

The U.S. Army Chaplaincy celebrated its 218th anniversary July 29. Since 1775, it has followed its mission of leading worship for soldiers.

"Chaplains are in this system despite the separation of church and state," said Chaplain (Col.) Kenneth Carpenter of the Infantry Training Brigade at Sand Hill.

"The military has a unique situation because of the needs of soldiers," Carpenter said. Having chaplains in the military ensures that people will be able to practice their faith wherever they are deployed, he said.

There are currently 35 chaplains representing the many different religious denominations at Fort Benning, said Chaplain (Col.) Roy Plummer, the U.S. Army Infantry Center chaplain. Services are held for Catholics, Episcopalians, Jews, Muslims, Seventh Day Adventists, Mormons, Lutherans and other Protestant denominations. Samoan and Gospel services are also available.

The chaplain's role in a soldier's life is an important one, different from commanders and all the others who are present during training, Plummer said.

Chaplains do everything that soldiers do except carry weapons because the Geneva Convention mandated that the chaplains' role should be noncombatant, Plummer said. "But by virtue of their role and mission in the Chaplains' Corps, if the soldiers of the unit are in combat, the chaplains are there.

"We run PT (physical training), jump from aircraft and go to the field," he added. "Yet we also provide a conduit or connecting link that no one else can. The chaplain provides the ministry of presence."

Plummer said he believes the chaplains at Fort Benning are "second to none" because of the quality pastoral care and ministry that they give soldiers and their families. "They are everywhere," he said. "The chaplain has an omnipresence."

The Unit Ministry Team works closely with drill sergeants, company commanders and other leaders to help soldiers cope with and understand what is happening when they join the Army. "We want this to be a success for them, " he said. "Some haven't had many successes in life so this can be a big stepping stone for them."

Pastoral care is a 24-hour a day job, Carpenter said, especially in training brigades. Sand Hill alone has seven chaplains.

Chaplain (Maj.) David Reese of the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division was previously assigned at Sand Hill and said that because soldiers in training brigades can't go anywhere else, they come to chaplains with many of their problems. In other types of brigades, they have the freedom to go out with friends to blow off steam, which sometimes helps put things in perspective, he said.

"After services, I used to have 10 or 15 guys lined up," Reese said. Many were homesick or having second doubts about their decision to join the military, he said.

Perhaps the most vital role of a chaplain comes when soldiers are deployed, said Chaplain (Maj.) Richard Roggia of the 36th Engineer Group. "There is no such thing as an atheist in a foxhole," he said.

'Triple Nickels' soldiers focus on black history

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

"Many years before 'black pride' became a popular slogan, a small group of black American soldiers gave life and meaning to those words. This is their story.

Born within an army that had traditionally relegated blacks to menial jobs and programmed them for failure, the 555th Parachute Infantry Battalion, or Triple Nickels, succeeded in becoming the nation's first all-black parachute infantry test platoon, company and battalion."

Retired Lt. Col. Bradley Biggs, the first black officer accepted for airborne duty and a member of the "Triple Nickels," wrote this about the 555th in his 1986 book on the unit: "Some of their remaining members reside in the Columbus area. They include retired Sgt. lst Class Carl Reeves and retired Sgt. lst Class Lawrence Estell."

Both have unique memories of their days with the unit.

Reeves was the earlier member of the unit. He remembers tales of the original test platoon of 20 men, which was whittled down to "Sweet Sixteen."

Even before they were officially approved, they would emulate the white paratrooper in training, double-timing it everywhere they went and 20 push-ups before dinner. Their four instructors were whites, "who tried to bust 'em," Reeves said.

Before the enlisted received their wings in early 1944, other soldiers bet them they wouldn't jump, but they did, and the War Department assigned them the name, "Triple Nickels." Second Lt. Bradley Biggs was one of seven officers who graduated with them.

It was when the first provisional company was formed that Reeves came on the scene. He recalls his orders saying "colored" would serve in this unit.

On the train from New York to Fort Benning, Reeves had to ride in the one coach for blacks, right behind the coal car, where soot blew in their faces.

Once reaching the post, there were no hotels that accepted blacks. He said you had to find a boarding house or know someone who would take you in. Only black noncommissioned officers could get housing in barracks on post, and there were two NCO clubs, one for blacks, one for whites. If a black soldier had a family, he had to find a place for them off post. Also, no blacks were allowed on Main Post without a pass.

Yet still volunteers for this unit came, many from Fort Huachuca, Ariz.

Brig. Gen. Ridgley Gaither, commander of the Parachute School, selected Walter Morris as first sergeant for the company. The first company commander, Capt. William V. Johnson, was white.

Reeves said their instructors were the "Sweet Sixteen," who dished out the same rough treatment they had been given.

Unlike the white paratroopers, the "Triple Nickels" packed all of their own parachutes during training. The white paratroopers had riggers.

After graduation, the 555th grew to battalion-size training to go overseas until it looked like World War II was winding down. Then their orders changed to being "Smoke Jumpers" for "Operation Firefly," an assignment to counter forest fires in the Pacific Northwest started by Japanese air balloons.

Following this assignment, the unit was sent to Camp McCall, N.C., and the 13th Airborne Division in 1945. A year later they were attached to the 82nd Airborne Division, Fort Bragg, N.C., under then Maj. Gen. James M. Gavin.

Reeves termed Gavin "a hell of an officer. If you could do a job, you could be red, white or blue. He didn't care."

In 1947, the "Triple Nickels" were deactivated when President Harry Truman ordered an end to segregated troops. They became the 3rd Battalion, 505th Airborne Regiment.

Two months before this, another soldier who retired in Columbus, Lawrence Estell joined the "Triple Nickels."

He went with the unit to Fort Benning to become one of the first blacks to be ranger qualified. Then his company was attached to the 7th Infantry Division and deployed to the Korean conflict.

Estell was wounded in the arm by machine gun fire three months later at Tangyang Pass and spent 13 months recovering in a hospital at Camp Atteryberry, Ind. The Triple Nickels began to split up after Korea.

He recalls life in the South in the Army not being as bad as he had heard in his native Detroit, Mich., but the tales were bad enough that his marriage split up because his wife was afraid to join him because of the prejudice.

"The post was segregated," Estell noted, "and you had to take a special troop bus or sit at the back of the bus, things like that. However, there weren't blacks hanging from every pine tree in Georgia as we'd been told."

He did recall an instance when a group of 15, on a break from ranger training, stopped at a bakery before going into the Mayfair Restaurant and Lounge in downtown Columbus. After purchasing about $12 worth of cupcakes, they went to the Mayfair to eat. A total of 15 squad cars and two paddy wagons were sent by the bakery owner to arrest them for "stealing a light bulb" when she became nervous of a large group of black soldiers.

Today, both Reeves and Estell feel life is better for black soldiers.

"It started getting a lot better in the late 1950s," Estell said. "However, it's still very difficult for young blacks even today, especially in Ranger School."

Reeves noted that wars help to eliminate the differences between people, and in a time of war or conflict, everyone is promoted.

However, he said that in today's Army, blacks still need to be over-qualified to make rank as a noncommissioned officer.

FORT BENNING'S MAJOR UNITS

11th Infantry Regiment

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

Since its inception in 1940, The School Brigade, now renamed the 11th Infantry Regiment, has been responsible for the training of student officers, student noncommissioned officers and officer candidates.

In recent years, this mission has entailed the support of 10 separate courses of instruction for a student load totalling up to 30,000 per year.

The 11th Infantry Regiment is organized into four battalions.

The 1st Battalion is the largest on Fort Benning with a daily strength in excess of 2,000 personnel. Headquarters Company and Alpha Company, 1st Battalion, provide training and personnel management for the 1,300 permanent party personnel who are assigned as faculty or special and directorate staff for the Infantry School and Infantry Center.

At any given time, there are about 500 students assigned to Company B, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, attending the Infantry Officer Advanced Course.

Additional company-sized units of the 1st Battalion are the Adjutant General Replacement Detachment, the Infantry Band and the International Student Training Detachment.

The AG Replacement Detachment processes all transient personnel being assigned to Fort Benning and out-processing for all personnel departing.

The Infantry Band's mission is promote the morale and esprit of Fort Benning soldiers by taking part in military formations, formal concerts and recreational functions. The band also serves as a community relations asset making frequent appearances in various communities in the Southeast. In a normal year, the Infantry Band will participate in more than 600 performances.

The International Student Training Detachment provides administrative, logistical and cultural support for foreign officers attending Fort Benning courses.

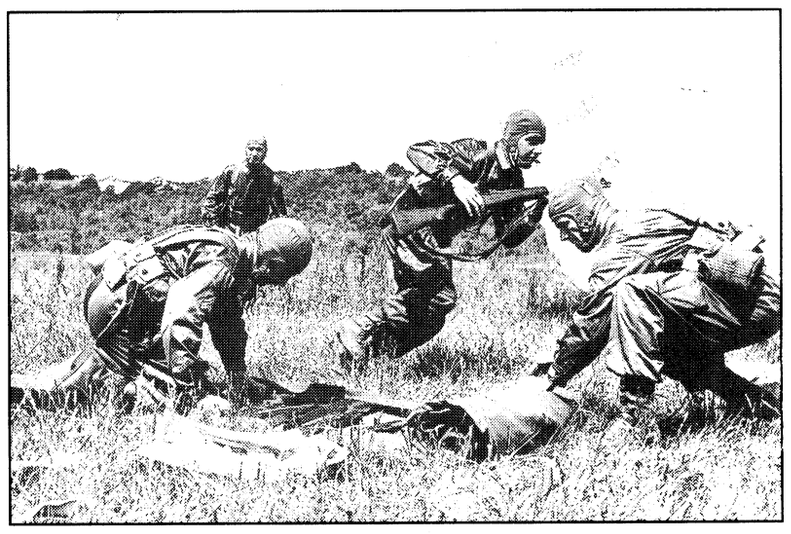
The 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, is responsible for the Infantry Officer Basic Course. The course is 16 weeks long and involves an extensive amount of field training and live-fire exercises. About 1,700 lieutenants branched or detailed infantry attend this course before reporting for additional schooling and their first duty assignment as an officer.

The 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, is the Army's only Officer Candidate School. Created in 1941, OCS has produced more than 100,000 officers. Enlisted soldiers from throughout the Army apply to attend the 14-week course of instruction. OCS assesses their leadership potential, academic ability and physical stamina as part of their training and in preparation for commissioning as second lieutenants. About 450 soldiers, of the 600 who start each year, are commissioned through OCS.

The 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, is the Department of Defense Airborne School and provides DoD with fully-qualified paratroopers.

The battalion also conducts the Pathfinder and Jumpmaster Courses. The 507th annually trains 23,000 soldiers for duty in airborne assignments throughout the world. In addition, the battalion includes the Command Exhibition Parachute Team, the "Silver Wings."

Activated July 20, 1942, at Fort Benning, the 507th was responsible for the basic airborne training of its soldiers, a new approach for moving troops to the battlefield.



Alerted for combat in 1943, the unit moved to Alliance, Neb., to serve as a part of the 1st Airborne Brigade. After a number of difficult precombat tests, the regiment deployed to Nottingham, England, in March 1944.

On D-Day, June 6, 1944, the regiment parachuted into the Contentin Peninsula at night behind enemy lines and suffered heavy losses in the combat that followed. Completing its mission, the 507th tied down the German reserves, disrupted their communications and secured the area behind the invasion beaches.

In January 1945, the unit fought as part of the 17th Airborne (Golden Talon) Division during the Battle of the Bulge. Eliminating all German units in its sector, the 507th was instrumental in liberating the besieged city of Bastogne and units of the 101st Airborne Division.

Then led by the 507th, the division continued its assault across Luxembourg chasing retreating Germans back to their own border. The invasion of the Rhur region followed in March 1945.

The 507th spearheaded the 17th Airborne Division's jump across the Rhine in the single largest airborne drop of World War II, known as Operation Varsity. This operation put more paratroopers into a smaller area than had ever been attempted before.

Fort Benning's Infantry parachute troops undergo squad-level airborne training .

In addition, the 507th conducted the first combat operations using the 57mm recoilless rifle destroying German tanks in its first trial.

Operation Varsity cleared the way for conventional ground troops to continue the push into the heart of the German state. With the Rhur conquered, the war drew to a rapid close.

The 507th spent the last days of World War II aiding former Allied prisoners of war and victims of Nazi oppression liberated from a number of concentration camps.

Coming home in 1945, the unit had received a presidential unit citation and a number of unit awards from Allied nations.

Following the war, the 507th was inactivated and reactivated a number of times until it was finally designated the 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment, at Fort Benning on Oct. 23, 1985.

FORT BENNING'S MAJOR UNITS

29th Infantry Regiment

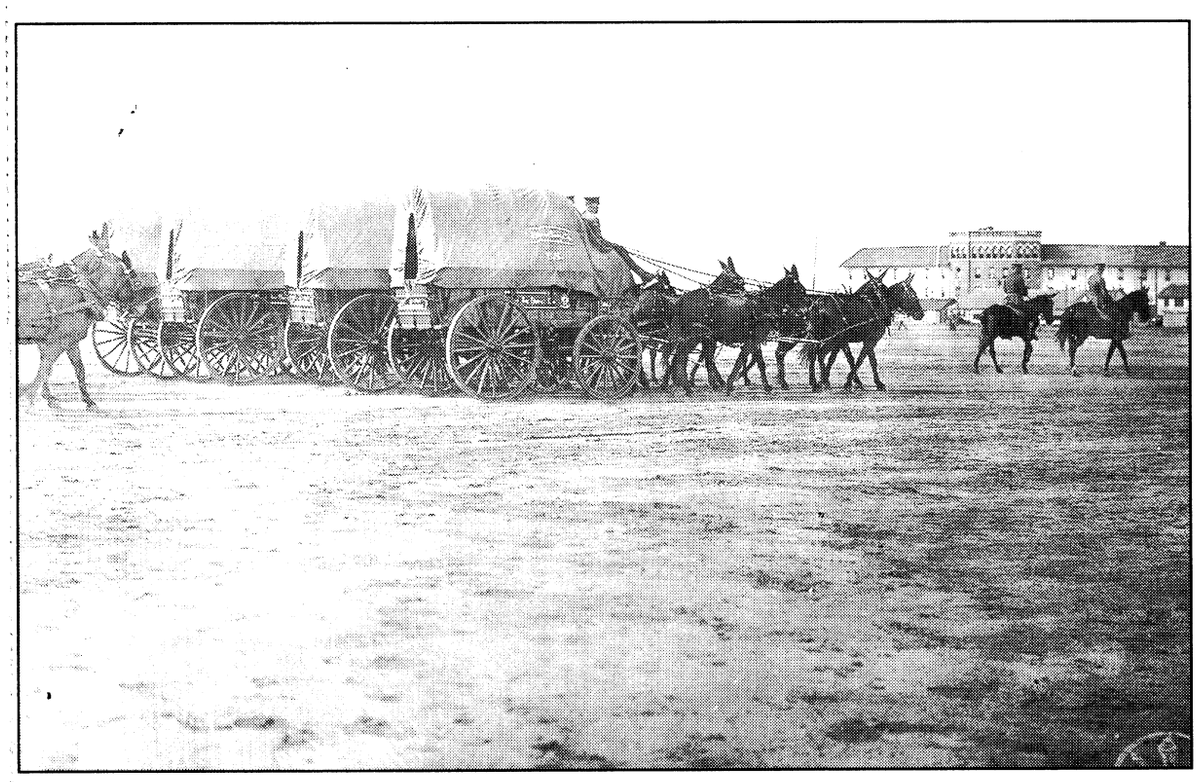
By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

For nearly 75 years, the 29th Infantry Regiment has played a vital role in the successful mission accomplishment of the U.S. Army Infantry School.

The regiment was posted to the newly founded Infantry School following its wartime service guarding the Panama Canal Zone.

The early mission of the 29th, to demonstrate realistically and correctly the doctrine and tactics taught at the Infantry School, influenced a generation of infantrymen who were later to lead the nation throughout World War II.

Following action during both World War II and the Korean Conflict, the regiment returned home to Fort Benning and its mission of supporting the Infantry School.



The 29th now consists of two battalions with the 1st Battalion on Kelley Hill serving as the Army's primary trainers of mechanized infantrymen in today's Army, including all facets of Bradley Fighting Vehicle training.

The 2nd Battalion at Harmony Church is the Army's proponent for tactical offensive weapon, mortar, sniper and land navigation training.

The battalion is also responsible for weapons training throughout the installation's Malone Range Complex.

In addition, the regiment includes a Headquarters Company, and a Maintenance Management Division with a student operations and administrative and logistical support.

"We Lead the Way" is the 29th's motto for the training infantrymen of today and tomorrow.

FORT BENNING'S MAJOR UNITS

36th Engineer Group

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

The 36th Engineer Group is an active unit at Fort Benning that has been called on to assist in such recent missions as Operations Desert Storm, Provide Comfort and Restore Hope.

Organized more than 50 years ago, the group also fought with distinction in World War II and the Korean War.

Its colors carry 19 battle streamers, many earned in combat while reorganized as infantry.

At Anzio, soldiers wearing the seahorse held seven miles of front line for 50 days and earned the distinction of being called the "Little Seahorse Division" is still used by members of the unit.

Today, more than 2,000 soldiers serving in 105 different military occupational specialties are required by the group each day to accomplish mission essential tasks and installation support.

As a major subordinate command at Fort Benning, the group's Headquarters and Headquarters Company consists of a complete staff section that during wartime can command and control up to five engineer battalions.

The peacetime organization of the group under Forces Command has a unique mix of combat, combat support and combat service support units. These include:

- 43rd Engineer Combat Battalion (Heavy)
- 13th Corps Support Battalion
- 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital
- 63rd Engineer Company (Combat Support Equipment)
- 586th Engineer Company (Assault Float Bridge)
- Headquarters and Headquarters Company

43rd Engineer Battalion

The 43rd Engineer Battalion is a construction battalion that can be called upon for diverse missions anywhere in the world.

In the last year alone, this battalion has executed construction missions in Costa Rica, Florida, New Mexico, Somalia and Fort Benning.

With the motto, "Power for Service," the 43rd can claim soldiers' skills in carpentry, masonry, electrical, plumbing and operating numerous types of heavy equipment.

13th Corps Support Bn

Today the 13th Corps Support Battalion is composed of the following units:

- 533rd Transportation Company
- 598th Maintenance Company
- 608th Ordnance Company
- 690th Medical Company (Ground Ambulance)
- 498th Medical Company (Air Ambulance)
- 361st Trailer Transfer Detachment.

Each of these companies has its own unique mission.

Providing transportation services, the 533rd Transportation Company hauls containerized and general cargo. It logged more than 1 million miles across the sands of Saudi Arabia, Iraq and Kuwait during Desert Shield and Desert Storm. The unit also sent a platoon to Somalia.

The 598th Maintenance Company offers direct support level maintenance to nondivisional units on Fort Benning. It also operates a Class IX Supply Support Activity.

A direct and general support ammunition unit, the 608th Ordnance Company operates Fort Benning's ammunition supply point, which provides ammunition to all of the post's units as well as many local Army Reserve and National Guard units. This unit also sent a platoon to Somalia.

The 690th Ground Ambulance and the 498th Air Ambulance companies service the post with life-saving medical support. Supporting the Ranger and Airborne schools, the 690th also answers calls for the ranges and other medical requirements on and off post. The 498th routinely supports the civilian community in transporting injured civilians from areas where civilian medical evacuation is not available.

Offering local support and supplemental support to various units is the 361st Trailer Detachment.

The Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment provides command and control of all units assigned to the battalion while also offering administrative and logistical support, and force protection for battalion headquarters.

The lineage of the 13th Corps Support Battalion began Jan. 13, 1941, when the battalion was constituted in the regular Army as the 60th Quartermaster Battalion. From March 1944 to February 1947, the battalion went through a series of redesignations.

During World War II, certain battalion units participated in the Northern France and Rhineland campaigns.

Then in June 1948, the battalion was inactivated in England. In November of that year, the unit was redesignated as the 13th Quartermaster Battalion.

During the Korean conflict, the battalion received two Meritorious Unit Commendations and a Presidential Unit Citation for its contributions.

In 1966, the unit was redesignated and reorganized as the 13th Supply and Service Battalion in Korea. Then in 1971, it was once again inactivated at Fort Lewis, Wash.

It was in 1977 that the battalion was activated in Germany, where it remained for 14 years. In 1991, the 13th relocated to Fort Benning, and in October 1992, it was redesignated the 13th Corps Support Battalion.

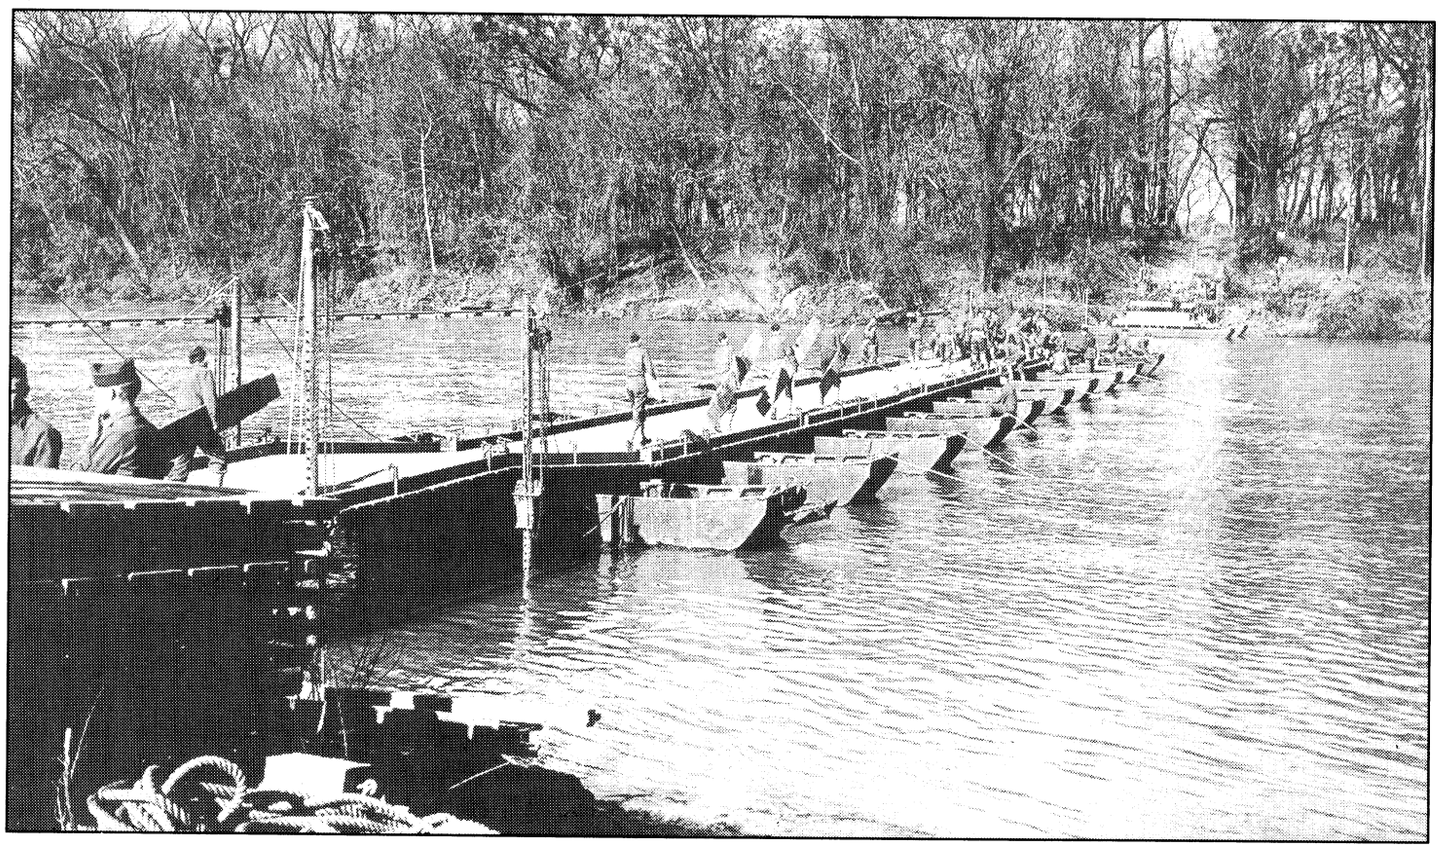
2nd MASH

Consisting of more than 178 soldiers serving in 47 different military occupational specialties, the 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital has a mission to provide resuscitative surgery and medical treatment as needed to prepare critically-sick, injured or wounded patients for further evacuation to definitive treatment facilities.

With its motto, "Rigorous Consistency," 2nd MASH is responsible for maintaining combat contingency mission-readiness and support to the XVIII Airborne Corps and the 44th Medical Brigade.

The 2nd MASH includes its hospital elements and the following subordinate detachments:

- 675th Medical Detachment
- 676th Medical Detachment
- 926th Preventive Medicine Detachment.



63rd Engineer Company

A corps earthmoving construction asset, the 63rd Engineer Company is tasked with such missions as road and airfield construction. This company also deployed to Somalia.

586th Engineer Company

The 586th Engineer Company is a corps ribbon bridge company with a CAPSTONE alignment to the XVIII Airborne Corps.

The unit is versatile and capable of carrying out a variety of missions. During Desert Storm, the 586th provided port operations support. Then in support of Hurricane Andrew relief, the unit hauled life-essential goods to more than 30 relief centers. When not deployed, elements of the 586th may be found training along the Chattahoochee River.

FORT BENNING'S MAJOR UNITS

3rd Bde., 24th Inf. Div.

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

Providing support to the U.S. Infantry School and Reserve component units, the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized), also must maintain a level of readiness to permit rapid upload and deployment with the 24th Division of Fort Stewart, Ga.

The "Sledgehammer" brigade is home-based on Kelley Hill, six miles from Main Post.

The 197th Infantry Brigade had previously served as a school support unit for the Infantry School from the time it was activated in September 1962. Then in May 1974, it became a unit of Forces Command.

Barracks offering a variety of entertainment, recreational and educational facilities are available to soldiers within their own area.

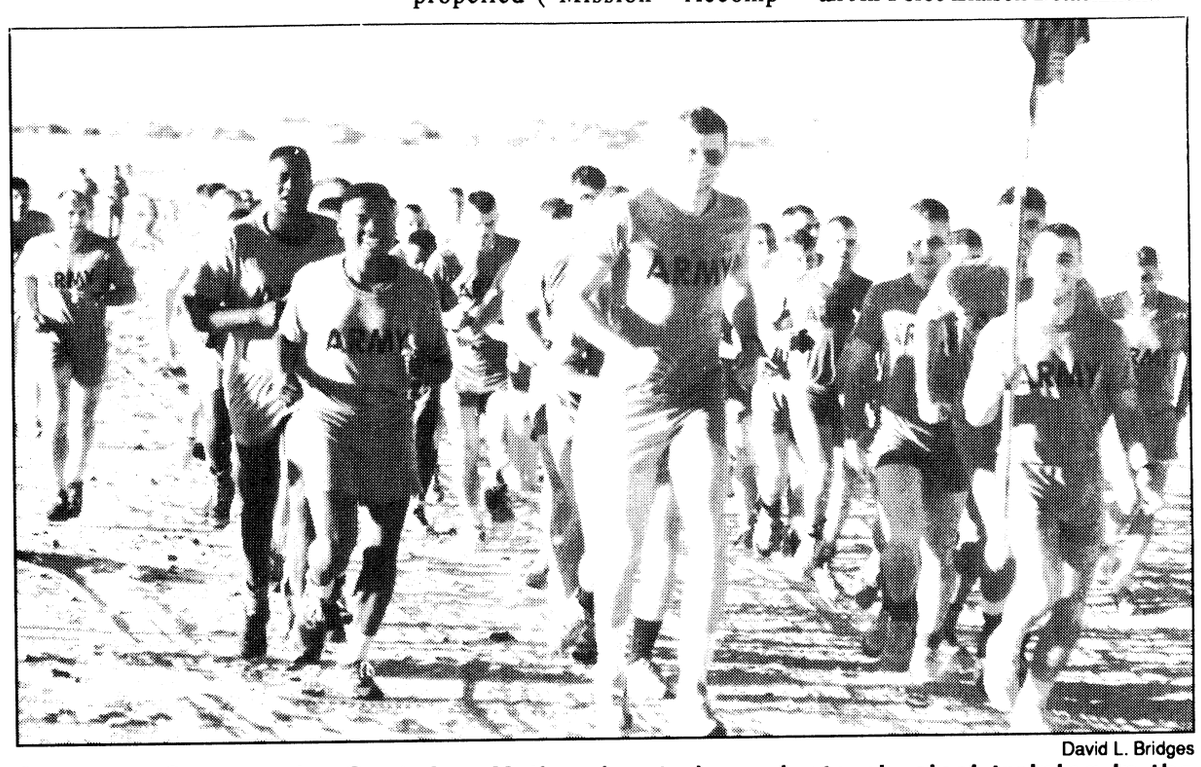
The unit was reactivated into the regular Army on June 14, 1991, when the 197th Infantry Brigade (Mechanized) (Separate) was officially deactivated, and its elements became the 3rd Bde., 24th Inf. Div.

Aug. 10, 1990, the 197th Infantry Brigade deployed with the 24th Infantry Division as its round-out brigade during Operation Desert Shield in the Persian Gulf. The brigade attacked into Iraq on Feb. 24, 1991, as part of Operation Desert Storm.

This unit advanced farther and faster than any other mechanized force in military history. In just 51 hours, the brigade attacked 380 kilometers into the enemy's flank and rear severing the Iraqi lines of communication through the Euphrates River valley.

The history of the 3rd Bde., 24th Inf. Div., before this dates back to June 24, 1921, when Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 190th Infantry Brigade, an element of the 95th Infantry Division, was constituted in the Organized Reserves in Oklahoma City, Okla.

On Jan. 30, 1942, HHC was redesignated the 3rd Platoon, 95th Reconnaissance Troop, 95th Division. The troop was ordered into active service for World War II. After participating in campaigns in Northern France, Rhineland, Ardennes-Alsace and Central Europe, the troop was inactivated Oct. 8, 1945.



The troop was reactivated in the Organized Reserves until 1963.

On Jan. 21, 1963, the unit was reconstituted and allotted to the Regular Army in Munich, West Germany, as Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized).

The formation of the 3rd Brigade, along with the 2nd Brigade and the reactivation of the 1st Brigade, completed the changeover for the 24th Infantry Division from the pentomic battle group organization to the first reorganization of Army divisions in the U.S. Army in Europe. This was considered to be the birth of the most modern and powerful fighting force known to man.

During its existence, the 3rd Brigade was part of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization defense team in western Europe. In late 1967, the 24th Infantry Division was directed to move to Fort Riley, Kan., under Operation Return of Forces to Germany while the 3rd Brigade remained in Germany until April 15, 1970, where it was officially inactivated until 1991.

Today the brigade includes six battalions and one separate company. They are the 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment ("Striker"); 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment ("Vanguard"); 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment ("Panthers"); 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment, self-propelled ("Mission Accomplished"); 317th Engineer Battalion ("Sappers"); 324th Support Battalion ("Dependables"); Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division; and an Air Force Liaison Detachment.

Telling war stories

He keeps others honest

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

As the Infantry Branch historian, command historian for Fort Benning and chief of Military History at the Infantry School, Dr. Charles White has been in the position for seven years and knows a good deal about military history and "keeping others honest" when they talk about how things used to be.

His Military History Division teaches more than 240 hours per year in classes for the Infantry Officer Advanced Courses, the Infantry Officer Basic Courses, Officer Candidate School, the Pre-Command Courses for battalion and brigade command designees and for the International Student Training Detachment.

"We teach more here than almost all of the other branch schools combined," White said.

In addition, he works with doctrinal personnel in the Infantry School on historical concepts making sure that their examples are historically accurate, writes books to be used in classes, and does such out-of-the-ordinary tasks as helping someone from Germany locate where his father, a prisoner-of-war here during World War II, was buried.

White served as the chief of Military History at Fort Benning originally from 1986 to 1989, when he left to become theater historian in Germany from 1989 to 1992, after which he returned here to his present position.

He also goes to many unit reunions and acquires books and photos for the Infantry School to be kept for posterity.

The choices for a new Infantry School were what is now Fort Benning and Fort Bragg, N.C., mainly because the climate allowed training throughout the year.

Naming the post after a Confederate general was not uncommon, he said. "Most of our posts were named after Civil War generals."

Noting what a premier institution the Infantry School was even in the 1930s, White said it was due to strong personalities: Col. George C. Marshall as the assistant commandant, Joseph W. Stilwell in the Tactics Department, Omar N. Bradley in the Weapons Department, and Maj. Edwin F. Harding, who planned and supervised the preparation and editing of the "Infantry in Battle" book for the History Department.

When World War II began to intensify in 1941, it was Gen. George S. Patton, "Old Blood and Guts," who with his 2nd Armored Division, became Sand Hill's first occupants as hundreds of temporary buildings were thrown up overnight. They were there almost a year before leaving for the battlefields of northern Africa and Europe.

The Airborne School also set up here in June 1942, as the 507th Parachute Infantry, and the first time in the United States, basic airborne training was conducted as a new approach of moving troops to the battlefield.

It was in the 1950s that the first formal Ranger School was set up at Fort Benning. Prior to this, training was conducted mostly overseas, at first during World War II, he said. Then during the early 1960s, the air assault concept was tested here, so the post has seen many firsts.

As the home of the Branch Immaterial Officers Candidate School, Fort Benning has also seen many people who have gone on to become nationally known figures including such Hall of Famers as former Secretary of Defense Casper Weinberger, William Buckley and Sen. Robert Dole.

White summed up the importance of the Infantry throughout history by quoting a book by T.R. Fehrenbach entitled, "This Kind of War:"

"Americans in 1950 rediscovered something that since Hiroshima they had forgotten: You may fly over land forever; you may bomb it, atomize it, pulverize it and wipe it clean of life, but if you desire to defend it, protect it and keep it for civilization, you must do this on the ground, the way the Roman legions did, by putting your young men in the mud."

FORT BENNING'S MAJOR UNITS

Ranger Training Brigade

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

Located about 12 miles from Main Post in the Harmony Church area, the Ranger Training Brigade executes missions in support of the U.S. Army Infantry School.

RTB is the proponent agency for the Ranger Course and the Long Range Surveillance Leader's and Infantry Leader courses for the Army.

With an average of 19.6 hours of training per day, seven days a week, the Ranger Course is 65 days long and divided into four phases. Each phase is conducted at a different geographic location:

The first phase, called the Benning Phase, is 17 days long, conducted by the 4th Ranger Training Battalion at Camp Rogers, Fort Benning.

The second phase, the Desert Phase, is 14 days conducted by 7th Ranger Training Battalion at Fort Bliss, Texas.

The third, Mountain Phase, is 16 days conducted by 5th Ranger Training Battalion at Camp Frank D. Merrill, Dahlonega, Ga.

The fourth, Florida Phase, is 16 days conducted by 6th Ranger Training Battalion at Camp James E. Rudder, Eglin AFB, Fla.

Two days of the course involve in- and out-processing and graduation.

Aimed at developing the functional skills of officer and enlisted volunteers who are eligible for assignment to units whose primary mission is to engage in the close combat direct fire battle, the Ranger Course requires students to perform individual as well as collective tasks and missions in a realistic tactical environment under mutual and physical stresses that approach those found in combat.

It provides the student with practical experience in the application of the tactics and techniques of ranger operations in wooded, mountainous, lowland swamp and desert conditions.

Emphasis is placed on the development of individual abilities through the application of established doctrine while further developing military skills in the planning and conduct of dismounted infantry, airborne, air assault and amphibious squad and platoon-size combat operations.

The Long Range Surveillance Leader's Course is designed to train leaders for long range surveillance units throughout the Army. It is 35 days with an average training day of 15 hours, seven days a week. The curriculum includes tactical and technical techniques of communications, insertion and extraction, opposing forces identification, land navigation, surveillance and reconnaissance and employment by using the train-the-trainer method of instruction.

Designed to train (Reblue) the cadre of infantry divisions, the Infantry Leader Course focuses on current infantry doctrine and techniques again employing the train-the-trainer method.

RTB also has several other missions to train outside agencies in infantry techniques by providing mission training teams, subject matter expert exchanges and training Drug Enforcement Agency personnel in small unit operations.

The ILC is 28 days long, with an average training day of 16 hours, seven days a week. The specialized training for outside agencies can be from one to eight weeks depending on the unit's requirements.

FORT BENNING'S MAJOR UNITS

75th Ranger Regiment

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

With a mission to plan and conduct special military operations in support of U.S. policy and objectives, the 75th Ranger Regiment includes about 730 rangers stationed at Fort Benning — 600 with the battalion and 130 at Regimental Headquarters.

The 75th Ranger Regiment and its three battalions conduct intensive training and frequent deployments in order to maintain a combat-ready force.

Evident in three recent contingency operations," Urgent Fury," "Just Cause" and "Desert Storm," the combat effectiveness of the 75th Ranger Regiment have shown how "Rangers Lead the Way!"

On Oct. 25, 1983, rangers of the 1st and 2nd Battalions conducted a highly successful airborne assault to seize Point Salines Airfield in Grenada and the rescue of American students.

Then on Dec. 20, 1989, the ranger regiment and its three battalions spearheaded U.S. forces into Panama for the purposes of restoring democracy. With the rangers conducting two daring airborne assaults and subsequent combat operations, the regiment captured 1,014 enemy prisoners and more than 16,000 weapons.

During "Desert Storm," rangers from the 1st Battalion and the 75th Ranger Regiment Headquarters participated in combat actions as part of the multi-national effort to liberate Kuwait.

The 75th Ranger Regiment and the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, have been activated Oct. 3, 1984, creating the largest unified ranger force in the United States since World War II.

The 3rd Battalion joined two already in existence. They are the 1st Battalion at Hunter Army Airfield, Ga., and the 2nd Battalion at Fort Lewis, Wash.

Ranger Hall of Fame

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

"Rangers go where others do not dare, and because of this, the units that you are assigned to will have the utmost confidence in your ability."

Gen. Carl W. Stiner said this to a ranger graduation class in 1992.

"You will go to your respective units wearing your Ranger Tabs, which show to everyone that you are a cut above the rest. You are prepared to lead men under the toughest of conditions," he added.

Stiner's remarks regarding this specialized training were made a few months before the first inductees were named into a Ranger Hall of Fame, recognizing the different eras of ranger history and 40 years of ranger training.

Located in the Ranger Training Brigade Headquarters Building at Camp Rogers on Fort Benning, the Hall of Fame includes a larger number of inductees from 1992 because it was the first time.

For the next few years there will be a phasing process to recognize substantial, yet an equal number of inductees from each era of ranger history.

This will be followed by a transition era to tailored numbers of inductees and a gradual reduction in focus on specific eras.

To be eligible for nomination, a person must be deceased, separated or retired from active military service for at least three years and must have served in a ranger unit in combat or be a successful graduate of the U.S. Army Ranger School.

The selection board seeks nominations from June 30 to Jan. 1 each calendar year with the basis for nomination being valor, extraordinary achievement or service.

During the transition phase, a major command and unified command category will be added to the units that can submit nominations. These units will nominate in the at-large category.

Once a nomination packet is submitted, the packet will remain active for board consideration for 10 years, unless selected sooner for induction.

More than 55,000 rangers have graduated since the school began in 1952, most of them Army soldiers, though some have been from other services as well.

The Ranger Hall of Fame inductees and their eras of history include:

1992 Pre-World War II

• Capt. Benjamin Church

for outstanding service to colonial America as a ranger-type leader. He commanded an independent ranger company during King Philip's War (1675 to 1678) on the New England frontier against hostile Indians. Church's noted on tactics and operations were published and are methods used by the rangers to this day.

• Maj. Robert Rogers

for outstanding service to colonial America as a ranger-type leader during the French and Indian War (1754 to 1763). His ranger tactics for use by light infantry officers. Many of his "standing orders" are applicable today.

• Col. John S. Mosby

for outstanding service to the Confederate Army commanding the 43rd Battalion Virginia Cavalry Partisan Ranger during the Civil War. His rapport with civilians, discipline within his command, knowledge of ranger tactics and dedication contributed to his unit's success. He gave valuable post-war service as a U.S. government employee.

World War II - Europe

• Brig. Gen. William O. Darby

for gallant and historic service to the nation and U.S. Army as a ranger leader. He was selected to organize and command the 1st U.S. Army Ranger Battalion in 1942 in Northern Ireland. The 1st, 3rd and 4th Ranger Battalions are famous for their endeavors in the Sicilian and Italian campaigns.

• Maj. Gen. James E. Rudder

for outstanding service as a soldier, statesman, educator and ranger leader. He organized, trained and led the 2nd Ranger Battalion, successful on D-Day and throughout World War II. Upon retiring, he served as president of Texas A & M University.

• Col. Max Schneider

for tactical brilliance and outstanding gallantry as a ranger leader. During the Normandy invasion using quick thinking and calmness, he brought his rangers on the beach intact, ready to fight, allowing the U.S. forces to move farther inland.

World War II - Pacific

• Maj. Gen. Frank D. Merrill

for extraordinary valor and outstanding leadership as commander of Merrill's Marauders, the 5307th Composite Unit. He led the Marauders into the Burma jungles behind Japanese lines to cut off enemy communications and supplies. In 1947, he became the deputy chief of the American Military Advisory Mission to the Philippines.

• Col. George A. McGee

for extraordinary valor and outstanding service with Merrill's Marauders commanding a battalion-sized unit of volunteers from the 33rd Infantry Regiment.

• Col. Logan E. Weston

for extraordinary gallantry and service to the nation with Merrill's Marauders during World War II, the Korean War and the Vietnam War as an infantryman. He also served as a unit chaplain and earned the title, "Fighting Parson."

Korean War

• Cpl. Glenn M. Hall

for extraordinary heroism and valor as a U.S. Army ranger while assigned to the 1st Ranger Infantry Company (Airborne), 2nd Infantry Division, during the Korean War. His determination and remarkable bravery in the face of seemingly insurmountable odds exemplify the rangers' resolve to complete the mission though he be the lone survivor.

• Col. Ralph Puckett

for extraordinary valor and distinguished service as a qualified ranger leader during the Korean War with the 8th Ranger Company, for serving as a ranger advisor and helping to establish the Colombian Army Ranger School and for his service in Vietnam.

• Sgt. Martin E. Watson

for extraordinary valor and unyielding determination as a ranger with the 1st Ranger Battalion during World War II in Northern Africa, Sicily and Central Europe, and remaining a prisoner of war for 15 months. He volunteered for the 4th Ranger Infantry Company (Airborne) during the Korean War, during which term of service he was captured and tortured for repeated escape attempts. His iron will and unshakable resolve illustrate that surrender is not a ranger word.

Vietnam

• Spec. 4 Robert D. Law

for extraordinary courage and gallantry in action as a ranger-qualified leader. He was with Company 1 (Ranger, 75th Infantry, when he threw himself on a grenade to save his teammates illustrating the many sacrifices rangers have made for their country, their unit and their fellow rangers.

• Staff Sgt. Robert J. Pruden

for extraordinary courage and gallantry in action as a ranger-qualified leader. He is the second U.S. Army ranger assigned to a U.S. Army Ranger Company in ground combat to be awarded a Medal of Honor while serving in a ranger unit. Pruden served with Company G (Ranger), 75th Infantry. The Ranger Training Brigade Headquarters at Fort Benning bears his name.

• Staff Sgt. Laszlo Rabel

for conspicuous gallantry and indomitable courage as a ranger leader with Team Delta, 74th Infantry Detachment Long Range Patrol in Vietnam. While preparing for a counterreconnaissance mission, he threw himself on a grenade and saved his team illustrating that no matter what the consequences a ranger never fails his comrades.

At-large

• Col. Francis (Bull) Dawson

for extraordinary valor while serving as a platoon leader with Company D, 5th Ranger Battalion, on Omaha Beach during World War II. He also was chosen to command the 8112 Army Unit during the Korean War and served as an early advisor to the South Vietnamese Special Forces.

• Maj. Gen. Kenneth C. Leuer

for numerous achievements and 26 years as a ranger. He was given the Abrams Charter for the formation of the modern ranger battalions. As a "Modern Day Darby," he activated, organized and trained the 1st Ranger Battalion into the Army's premier fighting force and co-authored "The Ranger Creed."

• Col. Arthur D. Simons

for extraordinary valor while serving during World War II. He participated in all three campaigns of the 6th Ranger Battalion in the Pacific, served as an instructor, led the covert White StarMobile Training Team into Laos in 1961, led and trained ground forces to free American prisoners-of-war outside of Hanoi in 1970.

• Gen. Richard E. Cavazos

for distinguished service to the U.S. Army in positions of great responsibility and his contributions as a ranger-qualified leader during Korea and Vietnam. In 1983, he directly influenced the formation of the 3rd Ranger Battalion and the Ranger Regimental Headquarters.

for dedication to duty and contributions as a ranger-qualified leader. He served in World War II, Korea and three tours in Vietnam, as well as director of the Ranger Department.

• Col. Elliott P. Sydnor

for outstanding service as a ranger-qualified leader. He served in World War II and Korea, and in Vietnam was the Ground Force Commander during the daring raid on the prisoner-of-war camp at Son Tay, North Vietnam.

Honorary inductees

• Gen. Creighton W. Abrams Jr.,

in honor of 38 years of foresight, valor and service to his country during World War II and Korea. Abrams commanded the U.S. Army Military Assistance Command in Vietnam from 1968 to 1972 and was appointed chief of staff of the Army in 1972 guiding the rebuilding of the Army after its bitter experience and rapid decrease.

• Richard A. Leandri

for his dedicated support to the U.S. Army rangers. In 1980, he established the "Chairborne Rangers," a group of concerned business and professional men who support the military and sponsor the prestigious "David E. Grange Jr. Best Ranger Competition" annually at Fort Benning. He also established the "Shuffstall Award" that honors the Drill Sergeant of the Year at Fort Benning.

1993 Pre-World War II

• Capt. Nathan Hale

for outstanding service to an infant United States of America as a ranger of the Continental Army. While gathering information behind British Army lines in New York, he was arrested for spying and executed without trial. "I only regret that I have but one life to give for my country," Hale's dying words, have become the classic expression of American patriotism. He is buried in an unmarked Manhattan, N.Y., grave.

• President Abraham Lincoln

for service to his country beginning with his position as the captain of a company looking out for Indian war parties in the 4th Illinois Regiment during the Black Hawk War in 1832. After his military service, he became a prominent Illinois attorney, a popular political leader and president of the United States. He is often considered an example of the best that can be found in a democracy.

World War II - Europe

• Col. Roy A. Murray

for extraordinary valor and heroic service as a ranger leader. Chosen by Col. William O. Darby to command rangers during battles in North Africa and Sicily, he also commanded the 32nd Infantry Regiment in Korea and served as I Corps deputy chief of staff. His selfless dedication to duty and valorous leadership served as an example to others.

World War II - Pacific

• Col. Charles N. Hunter

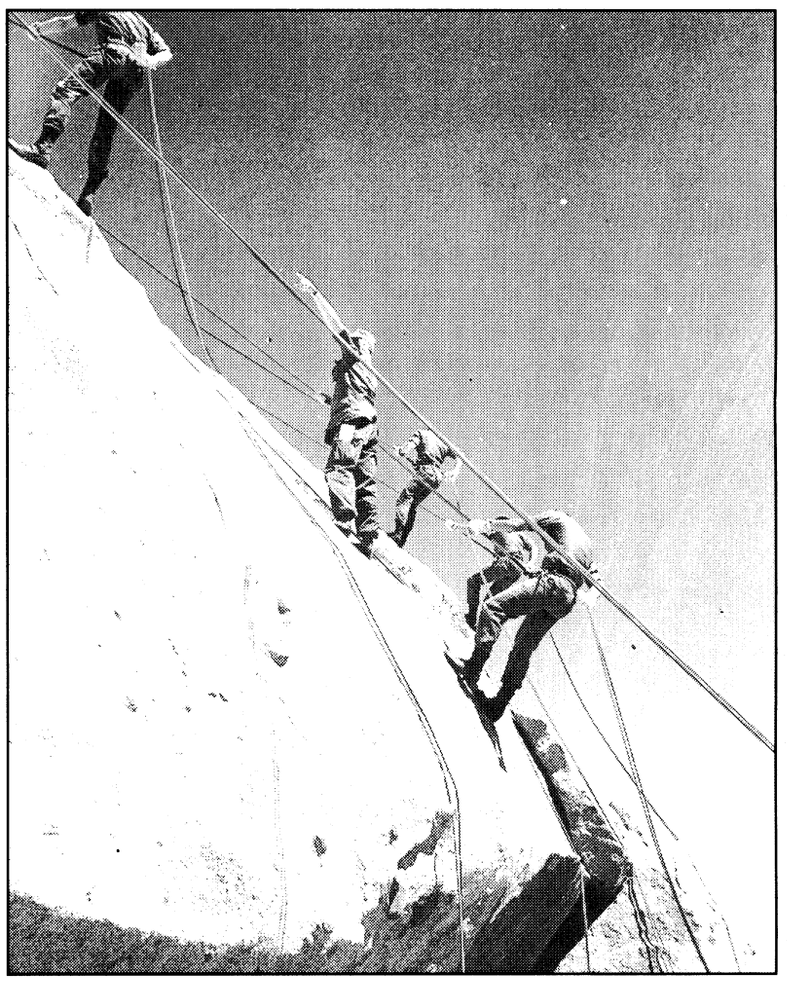
for extraordinary courage and gallantry as a combat leader while serving with Merrill's Marauders. The senior officer among the volunteers, he became commander of the battalion, prepared the men for combat and served as second in command under Maj. Gen. Frank D. Merrill. In five major and 30 minor engagements, they met and defeated veteran soldiers of the Japanese 18th Division.

• Master Sgt. Roy H. Matsumoto

for extraordinary courage and service with Merrill's Marauders. In 1942, he and many other young Japanese Americans in internment camps volunteered for military service. He accomplished many dangerous missions in Burma behind enemy lines severing Japanese communication and supply lines. He also served in the 475th Infantry "Mars Task Force" attached to the Chinese Nationalist Army guerrilla forces doing intelligence behind near the French Indochina border.

• Lt. Gen. Samuel V. Wilson

for heroism, extraordinary achievement and continued service to his country and the special operations community. He began with Merrill's Marauders, and after entering the Army's Foreign Area Specialist Training Program, he was assigned various tours behind the Iron Curtain and in the Soviet Union. Wilson was assigned several high level positions with the Department of Defense and the Department of State. He remains a consultant on special operations.



Korea

• Pfc. Robert L. Mastin

for heroism in military operations as a ranger-trained soldier. He trained with the first 9th Ranger Infantry Company (Airborne) at Fort Benning in early 1951. In Korea, he was later assigned to the 1st Airborne Ranger Company. During extremely heavy action and although wounded himself, Mastin constantly braved intense hostile fire ministering to the wounded and assisting in their evacuation, eventually losing his own life.

• Sgt. Donn F. Porter

for courage and gallantry as a ranger-qualified leader. As cease-fire negotiations started, he was assigned to the 187th Airborne Regimental Combat Team. He died at "Heartbreak Ridge," a key approach into the main line, while in charge of defending a combat outpost. Porter was the only airborne ranger to be awarded the Medal of Honor during the Korean War.

Vietnam

• Command Sgt.Maj. Henry Caro

for extraordinary valor, exceptional gallantry and heroic service as a ranger leader. Culminating three tours in Vietnam, Caro was awarded the Bronze Star with Valor five times and the Vietnam Service Medal with nine battle stars. A ranger who led from the front, he demonstrated distinguished and devoted service throughout his 18 years in the military.

• Staff Sgt. David C. Dolby

for heroism and valor while on patrol in Vietnam. Under intense enemy fire, he moved the wounded men to safety and deployed the remainder of the platoon to engage the enemy. Later, he alone attacked the enemy positions while other able-bodied men covered the withdrawal of forward elements.

• Command Sgt. Maj. Neal R. Gentry

for valor and heroic service as a ranger leader with Company L, 75th Infantry, 101st Airborne Division (Air Assault). Author of "The Ranger Creed," he established a code of ethical conduct in which the ranger of today sets his beliefs. He also was instrumental in the development of the coat of arms and distinguished unit insignia for the Regiment.

• Command Sgt. Maj. Gary L. Littrell

for conspicuous gallantry in action as a ranger leader when serving as an infantry advisor in Vietnam. After his battalion was subjected to intense mortar attack, Littrell singlehandedly bolstered the besieged battalion, directed artillery and air support by day and marked unit position by night. He also redistributed ammunition, strengthened faltering defenses, cared for the wounded. When ordered to withdraw, he prevented disorder and directed airstrikes within 50 meters of their position.

• Lt. Col. Andre C. Lucas

for his career and death epitomize the Ranger Creed and honor of the U.S. Army. An enlisted soldier, he won an appointment to the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y. While commanding the 2nd Battalion, 506th Infantry, 101st Airborne Division (Airmobile), at Fire Support Base Ripcord in Vietnam in 1970, his heroic efforts saved the lives of many fellow soldiers. Lucas was posthumously awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor.

-Col. George A. Paccerelli

for 26 years of leading and serving American artillery, infantry, airborne and special forces around the world. In Vietnam, he was wounded in action but returned to complete a tour with the Special Operations Group, Military Assistance Command Vietnam. He retrained, reorganized and transformed the LRRP/Rangers into a self-confident, skilled, professional military force.

• Col. Arthur C. Stang III

for service in Vietnam, his work with the production of the Land Forces Book, Volume II, Joint Standing Operating Procedures, and demonstrating dynamic, caring leadership culminating as the chief of staff for the 82nd Airborne Division.

• Sgt. Maj. of the Army Glen E. Morrell for 32 years of outstanding service. In 1983, he was sworn in as the seventh sergeant major of the Army, the first ranger-qualified soldier to hold that position. His assignments included three tours of combat duty in Vietnam. His decorations include the Ranger Tab, which he earned at age 41.

Post-Vietnam

• 1st Sgt. Harvey L. Moore

for dedication to duty and contributions to the U.S. Army as a ranger- qualified leader. With his career beginning in 1978, he demonstrated an unparalleled leadership and innate ability to teach and coach rangers. His decorations include the Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal (Grenada) and Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal with Bronze Arrowhead (Panama).

Honorary inductee

• Former Secretary of the Army John O. Marsh

for dedication and service to the nation, the U.S. Army and the rangers. Having served in the U.S. Army beginning in 1945, and the Virginia National Guard from 1951 to 1976, Marsh was a four-term congressman from Virginia's 7th District. He returned to a private law practice in 1977 until becoming secretary of the Army for President Ronald Reagan from 1981 to 1989, the longest such term in the history of the nation. Among his most notable contributions was his revitalization of the special operations community.

FORT BENNING'S MAJOR UNITS

Infantry Training Brigade

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

The mission of the Infantry Training Brigade is to command and control six infantry training battalions, one reception battalion and to process and train more than 21,000 one station unit training soldiers annually for the Total Army.

The U.S. Army Infantry Center was established July 20, 1982. The old brigade headquarters building once served as Gen. George S. Patton's 2nd Armored Division's Headquarters prior to the United States entry into World War II.

The new brigade headquarters building is presently located in Building 3410. These buildings, as well as those housing the Infantry Training Brigade's battalions, are located in the Sand Hill area of Fort Benning.

During the Vietnam War, the 3rd Army Training Center was located at Sand Hill. The mission of the 3rd ATC was to conduct basic training. In 1976, Sand Hill became active again when advanced individual training for infantry was centralized at Fort Benning.

In July 1978, the one station unit training concept was adopted. By 1981, the demands of both basic and advanced individual training required the development of a second brigade and the subsequent creation of the U.S. Army Infantry Training Center in 1982.

The two brigade headquarters were inactivated in 1989. This brought the eight training battalions under the direct control of the Infantry Training Center Headquarters, along with the reception battalion and the headquarters and service company.

In June 1992, the U.S. Army Infantry redesignated as the Infantry Training Brigade, United States Army Infantry School. The brigade's present configuration consists of six infantry training battalions, one reception battalion and a headquarters and service company.

The mission of the Infantry Training Brigade's six training battalions is to train more than 21,000 men a year into skilled, disciplined infantry soldiers for the Total Army. Each battalion is responsible for the health and welfare of the soldier, and for his instruction in basic soldier and infantry skills.

The 13-week infantry one station unit training course produces well-trained, highly-motivated infantry soldiers. The subjects taught range from marching and physical training to the use of the most advanced infantry equipment in the hands of soldiers today.

Carefully selected and experienced drill sergeants use modern ranges and facilities to conduct training.

Upon graduation, regular Army soldiers are assigned to infantry units all over the world. U.S. Army Reserve and Army National Guard soldiers return to their home units to assume infantry soldier duties.

The 30th Adjutant General Battalion (Reception) is responsible for receiving, processing and preparing all regular Army, U.S. Army Reserve and Army National Guard personnel for infantry one station unit training.

The battalion begins the transformation of civilians to infantry soldiers during three days of processing, which includes medical and dental screening, haircuts, the issue of military clothing, the preparation and issue of identification cards and tags ("dog tags"), complete pay and personnel inprocessing, orientation briefings and immunizations.

"Soldierization" begins at the 30th Adjutant General Battalion (Reception). Drill sergeants and cadre assigned to the processing companies instruct new soldiers on basic military subjects during waiting periods between processing stations, in the evenings, on weekends and holidays.

Soldiers who are unable to meet required fitness standards are assigned to the battalion's Fitness Training Unit where they receive instruction on fitness-related subjects and work at increasing their upper body strength and endurance prior to their assignment to a training company.

There are more than 90 military and civilian personnel assigned to this battalion. The tenant activities (medical, dental, finance and clothing initial issue point) have more than 80 personnel assigned. This staff is responsible for the mission of the 30th —prepare the soldier for initial infantry training.

Chattahoochee Valley - Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army

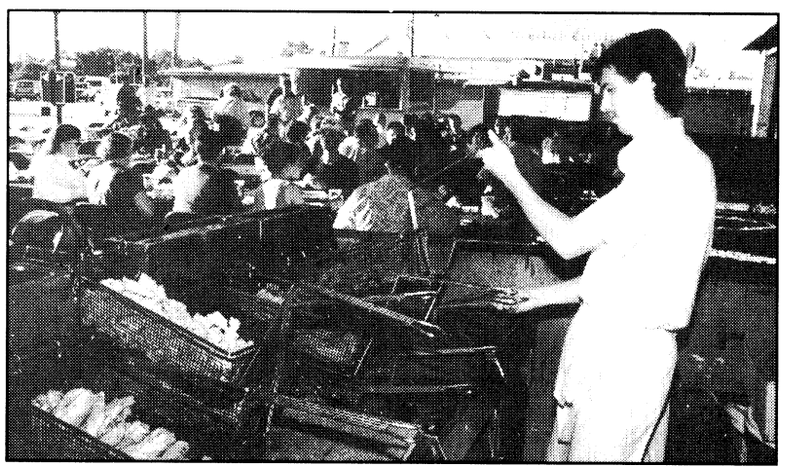
By Jennifer St. Onge
Special to The Bayonet©

The Association of the United States Army began in 1950 as an outgrowth of the Infantry Association, so its national roots stem from Fort Benning. When the national organization, based in Washington, D.C., decided that it needed input from local groups, the charter chapter was established here in 1955.

In the Vietnam days, this chapter grew to be the best and largest of all AUSA chapters. Currently, the 4,000-member chapter is the second or third largest of the approximate 125 chapters existing today, said James Gallagher, AUSA's executive vice president.



Since its creation, AUSA has played an integral role in the lives of soldiers through its services and activities. In 1980, the AUSA chapter ran a campaign to eliminate the cost of utility deposits that Fort Benning soldiers used to pay when living off post. The campaign worked, so now the only deposit that soldiers must pay is one for long distance phone service.

Several other Army installations also initiated this plan after seeing how it worked here, Gallagher said. "We are a pioneer chapter in that our initiatives are often copied by other chapters," he said.

The Fort Benning chapter hosts several events that few other chapters attempt. One of those is Operation Holiday, a program designed to keep soldiers busy during the Christmas season.

During the last two weeks of December, when the Army training facilities are shut down and soldiers are on half-day schedules, AUSA provides trips to businesses, tourist attractions and sporting events. It also sponsors local events such as a three-day bowling tournament and recreational shows that include visits by Miss Georgia and various bands.

"They're like the old USO canteens of World War II," Gallagher said. "These things just brighten up an otherwise drab couple of weeks for soldiers who can't go home to their families."

An AUSA volunteer cooks up some catfish at the AUSA Fish Fry at the Chattahoochee Valley Fairgrounds.

Military Appreciation Week is another example of a Fort Benning-only event, as no other AUSA chapter has ever attempted to host one. Organizing the week's activities involved a lot of cooperation with the Chamber of Commerce and corporate businesses in Columbus, Gallagher said.

The Columbus and Fort Benning relations are strengthened by AUSA connections and activities. Each of the local chapter's nine subchapters are assigned a different ZIP code downtown and the businesses within that ZIP code are then adopted by the subchapter.

The current subchapters are:

- 11th Infantry Regiment, "Follow Me"
- Infantry Training Brigade, "Victory"
- 36th Engineer Group, "Sea Horse"
- 29th Infantry Regiment, "Pioneers"
- 75th Ranger Regiment, "Sua Sponte"
- 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, "Forever Forward"
- Ranger Training Brigade
- The School of the Americas
- U.S. Army Medical Department Activity

The relationship between soldiers and civilians becomes more familiar and knowledgeable when the subchapter includes its civilian counterparts in unit functions such as picnics and changes of commands.

Companies contribute to AUSA events with their dollars and door prizes, but the relationship is reciprocal, Gallagher said, because the soldiers help local business all year round.

Columbus merchants often work with AUSA to provide a little extra for Fort Benning soldiers. When soldiers began returning from Desert Storm, AUSA members greeted them with goodie bags containing essentials such as batteries. While they were still in the Middle East, more than 7,000 watch calendars were sent over for Fort Benning soldiers to help them keep track of the days remaining and to let them know they were not forgotten.

While deployed soldiers received token items, their families were entertained with events such as the nine Christmas parties AUSA helped sponsor, Gallagher said. The chapter also entertains soldiers with Fourth of July fireworks and picnics.

In 1965, Gallagher attended his first AUSA picnic at Victory Pond. Now he runs those picnics. As a sergeant major here in the 1970s, Gallagher was a member of AUSA; in 1980 he was elected to the board of directors, eventually to become president in 1987.

FORT BENNING'S MEDICAL SERVICES

MEDDAC / DENTAC

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

From the establishment of Fort Benning in 1918, there has always been medical services available on this post, according to John Wynn, Martin Army Community Hospital marketing director.

While researching the hospital's history, Wynn learned that in the early days, health services were in the form of mobile dispensaries and in space rented from the hospital in Columbus.

When the Infantry School moved here from Fort Sill, Okla., that same year one military physician was transferred to the post.

In late 1918, the medical facilities, Station Hospital #1, were housed in temporary wooden structures for this singular doctor near what is today the Post Exchange Mini-Mall.

Then in 1924, all post health services were moved into the buildings that now house the National Infantry Museum, Directorate of Community Activities, U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, Physical Exam, and Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Program.

During World War II, a wooden contonement hospital of temporary buildings located just in front and west of the hospital at that time, enabled the facility to expand its capacity to nearly 1,500 beds. In February 1943, Station Hospital #2 opened as an annex, a 1,000-bed facility of identical design located in the Harmony Church area.

By June 1944, the hospital changed status from a station hospital to a regional hospital receiving patients from a 75-mile radius with an ambulance travel time of three hours.

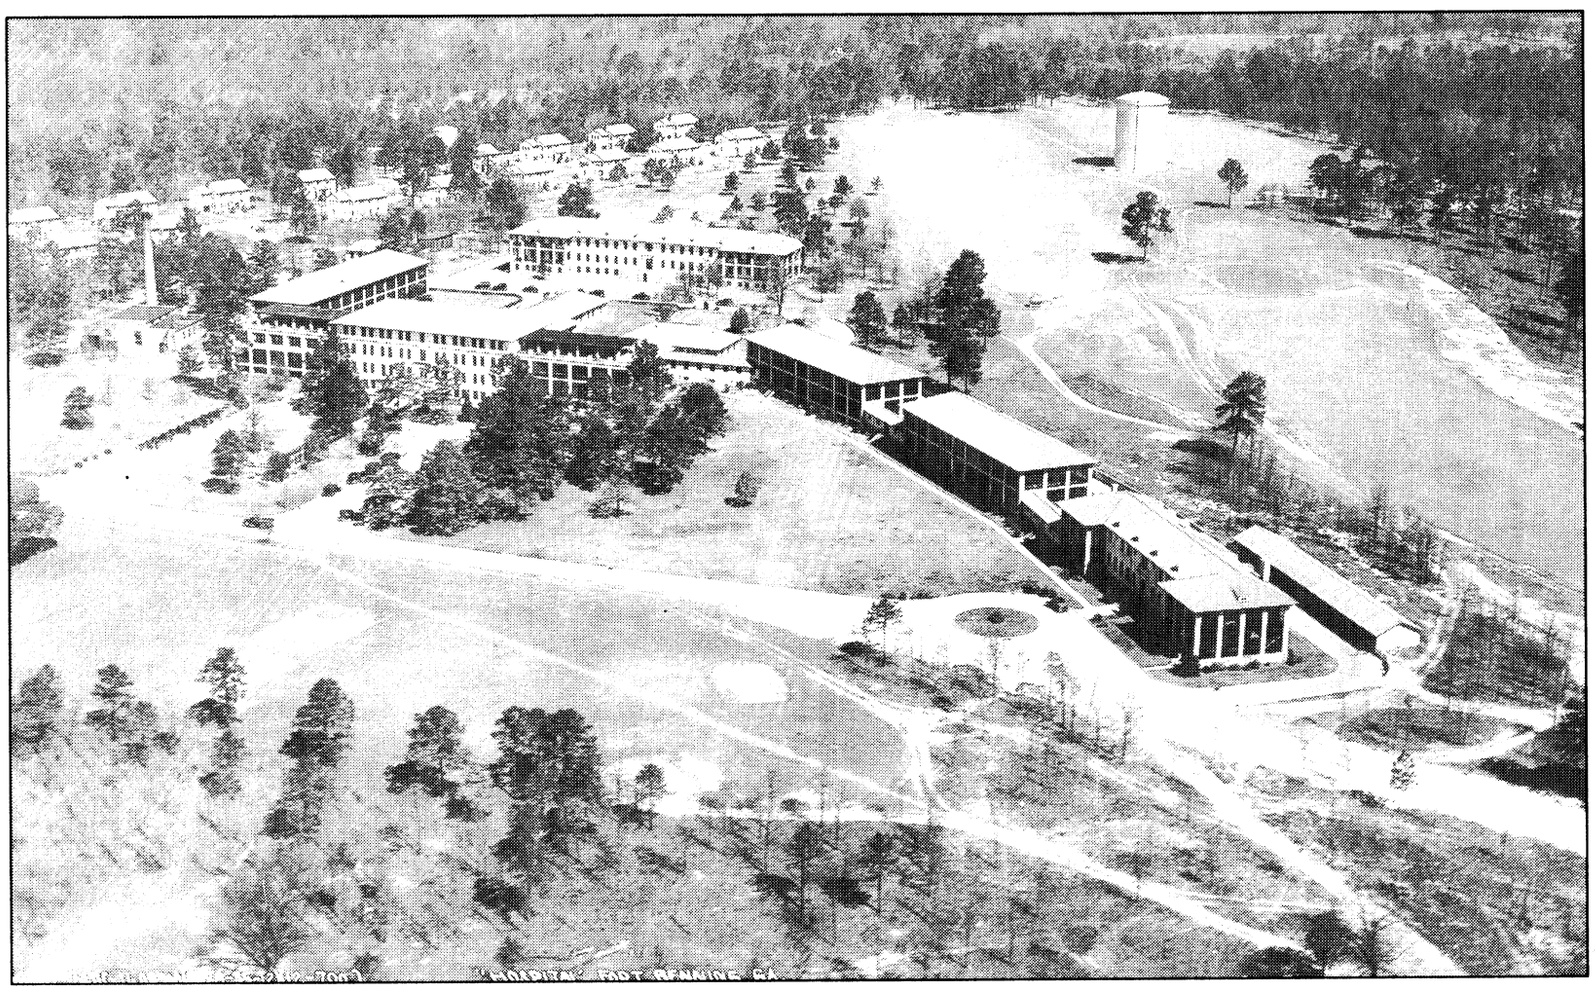
The Harmony Church annex became a reconditioning and rehabilitation program for the wounded. In the last four months of 1944, more than 3,000 patients were discharged from these facilities.

Following World War II, the post resumed a peacetime status, and the annex was no longer required.

However, only five years passed until the outbreak of the Korean conflict in June 1950, which called for another expansion.

The surgeon general authorized an increase to 3,000 beds so the Harmony Church annex was reactivated, but requirements never reached that level.

After the close of the Korean campaign, the hospital developed into one of the most completely equipped installations in the Army, and in September 1956, it was accredited by the newly established Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals.



In July 1955, ground was broken for the hospital where we know it today.

Martin Army Community Hospital was completed April 8, 1958, at a cost of just under $6.4 million. It has a 500-bed chassis in a multi-story structure that was designed to accommodate the needs of 100,000 beneficiaries.

In 1974, a 59,000-square-foot Ambulatory Patient Clinic wing was added at a cost of $3.8 million. This is the flat-roofed structure to the left of the front of the hospital.

In order to support the purchase of modern medical equipment and to ensure the compliance with JCAH standards, an extensive electro-mechanical upgrade project was completed in 1980.

The Emergency Room underwent an $800,000 renovation in 1990. It included an additional trauma room, an enlarged cardiac room, an obstetrical and gynecological room and a cast room. Each has the latest technology with a "service column" containing connections for gases, air, vacuum, electricity, a nursing call system and a staff telephone. All are connected to an intercom system to reduce response time in emergency situations.

Former post hospital at Fort Benning.

Although there was a time when a gurney strapped to a horse was the principle means of evacuation, as treatment facilities evolved so did the mode of transporting the sick and injured. A fleet of modern dispatch emergency medical vehicles are used today.

Wynn said the primary mission of MACH is to provide quality health-care services to about 24,500 active duty soldiers, 26,800 retired personnel and more than 29,000 family members.

In addition to MACH, the Medical Department Activity commander is responsible for the Community Mental Health, Social Work Service, the Alcohol and Drug Rehabilitation Program, Physical Exam, Preventative Medicine Services and Veterinary Services.

Seven troop medical clinics and three Family Practice clinics support training activities on Fort Benning, and two troop medical clinics in Dahlonega, Ga., and Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., support the ranger training program.

The Dental Activity is a separate service with its own command. However, MACH does provide support to the Dental Activity.

The hospital organization is divided into two sections, clinical and administrative, with more than 1,400 personnel and a budget equal to that of the city of Columbus.

The Nutrition Care Division operates the in-house dining facility, which has recently become the first post facility to offer a la carte pricing. The senior dietician is responsible for dietary counseling and patient meals.

The Patient Administration Division is responsible for maintaining medical records and other administrative services for the staff and patients. More than 100,000 patient records are maintained, as well as five years of inpatient charts. More than 7,000 pieces of paperwork are moved everyday in this section alone.

Nearly 2,000 outpatients are seen in the hospital's clinics on a daily basis. On the average, three babies are born at MACH every day, and 125 patients are being cared for in the hospital's 10 wards.

The Army Medical Department's initial Family Practice Residency Program was established at MACH in 1972. Currently, there are about 28 residents enrolled in this teaching program providing care to more than 30,000 patients. It is one of the largest programs of its kind.

Other specialty training programs include a residency in health-care administration, the clinical portion of the Army Medical Department Activity's Physician Assistant Program, phase II training for several enlisted specialties and numerous clinical rotations or externships conducted in cooperation with local colleges and universities.

The Orthopedic Clinic also staffs the brace shop and is responsible for all prescription braces worn by patients. There are four orthopedic surgeons, an orthopedic physician assistant and three podiatrists.

The hospital's laboratory features state-of-the-art equipment to analyze samples and provide valuable information to the health-care provider through an automated system.

MACH's Radiology Department features a computerized axial tomography unit, or CAT scanner. This unit recently underwent a $100,000 upgrade. Additionally, mammography, ultrasound and nuclear medicine services are available.

The Pharmacy is divided into three sections — the inpatient, outpatient and Post Exchange Mall refill centers. About 2,000 prescriptions are filled daily at the Outpatient Pharmacy. This amounts to about $6 million annually in medications dispensed.

Wynn noted that in 1992, MACH received accreditation by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations with commendation, an endorsement that he said has been awarded to less than 6 percent of those hospitals which are inspected. He said that this includes civilian and military hospitals throughout the United States.

Eliminating dental casualties

By Jennifer St. Onge
Special to The Bayonet©

In 1864, the Confederate State Congress passed the first law allowing dentists for troop dental care in Richmond, Va.

1872 brought the first Army dentist to the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y.

Since those days, expanded dental services of all kinds have been available to troops, but not always to their family members.

It was not until July 1, 1985, that expanded dental-care benefits became available for family members on a limited basis, said Col. Gene Withrow, U.S. Army Dental Activities commander.

Family dental services have always been available at overseas duty stations, but stateside care was based on the remoteness of the station, Withrow said.

"Prior to family care being instituted at most forts, camps and stations in 1985, family members basically had to pay for their own treatment in CONUS (continental United States)," Withrow said.

On April 1, family dental care was halted in all Department of Defense CONUS locations, Withrow said. The care shifted to the Department Dental Plan, which is administered by the Delta insurance company.

Changes had to be made because of the general drawdown of the military, Withrow said. Dental care personnel will be reduced approximately 25 percent by 1995, he said.

The cutbacks will not affect the services offered to active duty personnel.

Major emphasis will now be placed on the dental readiness of active duty soldiers for rapid deployment, Withrow said.

"We're trying to move to a pre-war preventive program to eliminate dental casualties," he said.

Dental casualties would include those due to dental infections or lack of concentration because of things like toothaches. "A soldier with a painful toothache isn't the most effective," Withrow said.

Care for retirees and family members of active duty soldiers with less than two years left in service will still be offered on a limited basis because they are not covered by the insurance plan, Withrow said.

This limited care will primarily be for emergency treatments such as the relief of pain, stoppage of bleeding and controlling infections.

In the future, some DENTACs will be reduced to clinic commands and will be administered by a larger DENTAC, Withrow said. For example, two other post dental facilities might be under the command of Fort Benning.

The dental command separated from the medical command in December 1977 and became DENTAC, Withrow said. DENTAC is still supported by MEDDAC in that they "share a common staff in certain areas such as logistics, resource management and information management," Withrow said.

FORT BENNING'S MAJOR UNITS

US Army Marksmanship Unit

By Jennifer St. Onge
Special to the Bayonet©

Former marksman and current international coach Bill Krilling has been an active member of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit for longer than the unit has been an official part of Fort Benning.

Krilling participated in the National Marksmanship Championships here in 1952, four years before the designation of the unit on March 1, 1956. In those days, the headquarters for the All-Army team was located in Soldiers' Plaza, not in its current location behind the Infantry Museum.

From 1959 through his retirement in 1971, Krilling spent all of his active duty time with the unit, the only exception being a Vietnam tour. He returned to the unit in 1973 as the international rifle coach, where he hopes to remain at least through the 1996 Olympics.

The unit was formed by President Dwight D. Eisenhower because the United States did not have anyone to participate in international or national shooting competitions. Its secondary goal was to enhance the marksmanship skills of the military.

Those goals appear to have been realized, as unit members typically make up about 50 percent of the U.S. Olympic shooting team and participate in competitions year-round.

Instructing others used to be a large part of the unit's mission, but that has been lessened because of funding. Members formerly traveled across the country instructing soldiers, but now the major instruction time they have is spent writing manuals.

The instructors available today would have been useful to the shooters of the past.

"In the beginning, it was trial and error," Krilling said. "We didn't have any really good coaches, so we lost a lot of time learning how to shoot correctly."

Teams of the past tended to excel more than today because members stayed longer to develop their skills, he said. Today, shooters only stay one to three years, which isn't enough time to become top Olympic material.

Even so, several members of the unit should be involved in the next Olympic team as medal contenders, he said.

Dedication is a must for shooters because they have to train seven days a week. Between March and September, the unit is scattered all over the world participating in different matches such as the Conseil International Du Sport Militaire, an annual international competition testing the sporting capabilities of the world's militaries.

When CISM began years ago, King Pao of Greece presented a set of silver pistols to the winner of the shooting match. The same pistols are presented to the winner of the match yearly.

The original ruling stated that if the same country won the pistols five years in a row, they would be entitled to keep them. The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit accomplished that feat in the 1960s, but instead of keeping the pistols, it fixed them up and represented them the following year.

The team won the overall CISM shooting championship 11 years in a row, from 1981 to 1992. This year they ranked second.

The success of the shooters often depends on the weapon they use. To ensure success, the unit's gun shop repairs most and makes some of the guns that the shooters use. The guns are improved to suit the shooter they belong to, enabling the gun to be handled better.

The shop has been able to improve the accuracy of several standard guns, which helps the shooters in competition and the general Army.

The unit has been responsible for ensuring the accuracy of the Army's weapons since it started. One of its earliest projects was to ensure the accuracy of the M14 rifle, which is still used in national matches even though the M16 is now the Army issue.

The soldiers assigned to the marksmanship unit want to be the best shooters in the world. They have been recruited from colleges, high schools, local matches and elsewhere specifically for this unit. It is one of the only units that can enlist members for itself.

Years ago they had the best soldiers in the Army because of the draft that enabled them to choose whomever they wanted.

Because people like to stay around the unit for years, promotions tend to be few, despite the number of awards and Gold Medals a shooter might win. But the soldiers do receive some of the best training in the world, which helps increase their morale.

The skill of marksmanship competition has become more mental, Krilling says, because techniques are shared between countries. It becomes a test to see who can hold the rifle more steady.

Shooting is a fairly clean sport because of that need, Krilling said. "Drugs are drinking are not common among shooters because they have to be mentally in the match. Using drugs would be the quickest way to get kicked out of the unit."

FORT BENNING'S MAJOR UNITS

School of the Americas

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

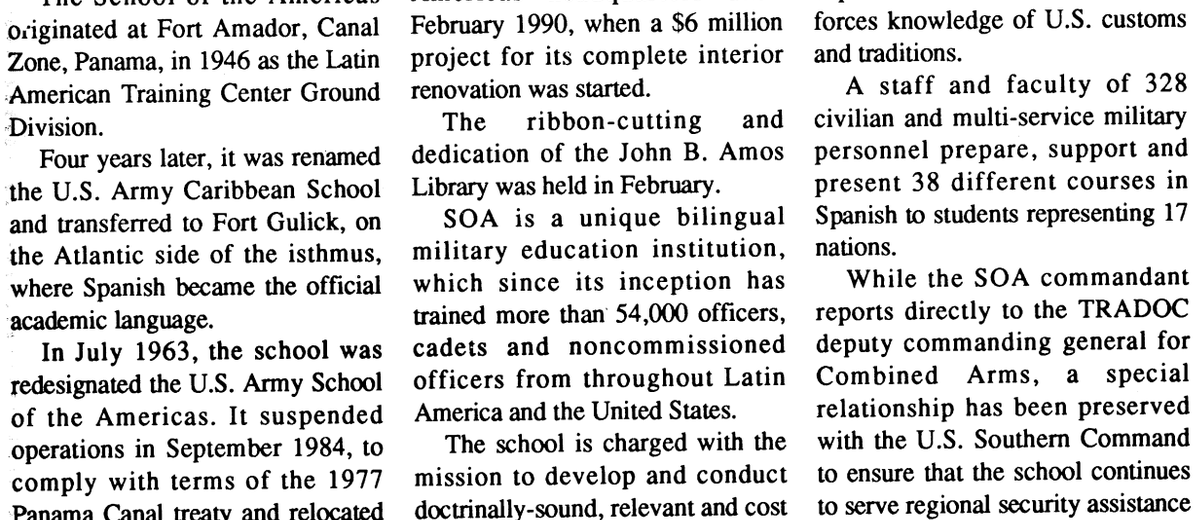
The School of the Americas originated at Fort Amador, Canal Zone, Panama, in 1946 as the Latin American Training Center Ground Division.

Four years later, it was renamed the U.S. Army Caribbean School and transferred to Fort Gulick, on the Atlantic side of the isthmus, where Spanish became the official academic language.

In July 1963, the school was redesignated the U.S. Army School of the Americas. It suspended operations in September 1984, to comply with terms of the 1977 Panama Canal treaty and relocated to Fort Benning, where it was designated a subordinate organization of the U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command.

The former Infantry School building became the School of the Americas headquarters until February 1990, when a $6 million project for its complete interior renovation was started.

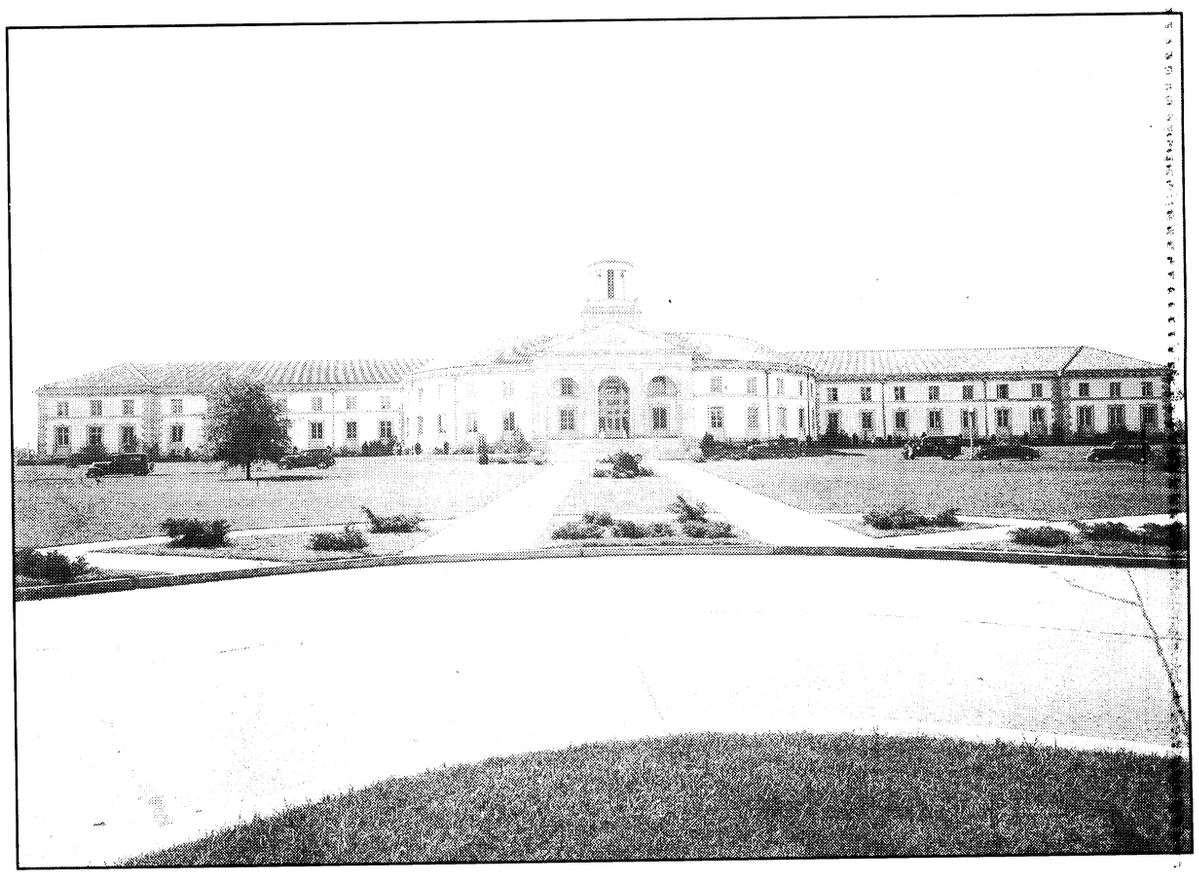
The ribbon-cutting and dedication of the John B. Amos Library was held in February.



SOA is a unique bilingual military education institution, which since its inception has trained more than 54,000 officers, cadets and noncommissioned officers from throughout Latin America and the United States.

The school is charged with the mission to develop and conduct doctrinally-sound, relevant and cost effective training programs for the armed forces of Latin America.

It promotes military professionalism, fosters cooperation among the multi-national military forces, and expands the Latin American armed forces knowledge of U.S. customs and traditions.



A staff and faculty of 328 civilian and multi-service military personnel prepare, support and present 38 different courses in Spanish to students representing 17 nations.

While the SOA commandant reports directly to the TRADOC deputy commanding general for Combined Arms, a special relationship has been preserved with the U.S. Southern Command to ensure that the school continues to serve regional security assistance objectives. As a tenant activity, SOA draws all of its operational support from the installation.

Columbus to 'jam' this holiday weekend

Uptown Business Association

Columbus will be alive with music Sunday and Monday when groups such as The Spinners, Widespread Panic, Three Dog Night, Michelle Wright, Atlanta Rhythm Section, O.J. Ekemode and the Nigerian All-Stars and more than 30 other acts, perform during the Columbus Day Uptown Jam.

The event will take place Sunday from noon to 11 p.m. and Monday from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m.

During the two days, a three-block section of Uptown Columbus will be transformed form a business district and retail shopping area in to the hottest music festival in the valley, according to Chris Losonsky, chairman of the Uptown Jam.

The event, which is spearheaded by the Uptown Business Association, will feature more than 40 acts on four stages over the two days. The UBA hopes that the Uptown Jam will become a signature event for Columbus, much like St. Patrick's Day is to Savannah and the Cherry Blossom Festival is to Macon.

There will be three stages featuring regional and local acts, along with the national acts. For the younger set, a Children's Stage will feature dance companies performing the Walt Disney Revue, African and Pacific dancers, a ventriloquist, puppet shows and storytellers. "There will be something for everyone from the youngest to the oldest," said Losonsky.

In addition to music, the "Jam" will include an Artisan's Mall, which will feature about 16 artists, two military tanks on display, a hand-to-hand ranger combat demo and K-9 demonstration, a birthday cake cutting ceremony celebrating Fort Benning's 75th anniversary, a food court, dedication of the Christopher Columbus Plaza on the Riverwalk, lighting of the Dilingham Street Bridge and fireworks over the Chattahoochee River.

Admission is $5 per day for adults at the gate, and children under 12 are admitted free.

Tickets purchased in groups of 20 or more, will offer a two-day pass for $5. For Corporate Ticket Sales, call Courtney Farmer at 324-6481. Tickets sold at the gate will be $5 per day. Children under 12 accompanied by an adult are admitted free.

For more information call 322-1613 or (800) 999-1613.

Streets to close for Uptown Jam

Several streets will be inaccesible Saturday, Sunday and Monday, due to the Columbus Day Uptown Jam. Beginning at 6:30 p.m. Saturday, the 1000 and 1100 blocks of Broadway and Front Avenue, and the 900 and 1000 blocks of Bay Avenue will be closed until midnight Monday.

In preparation for a fireworks display, the Dillingham Street Bridge will be closed to vehicular traffic from 3 p.m. to midnight Monday. In addition, pedestrian traffic will not be allowed on the bridge from 7:30 p.m. to midnight Monday.

Celebrate heritage, history

Historical Jonesboro/Clayton County

The 23rd annual Fall Arts and Crafts Festival will be on the grounds of historic Stately Oaks in Jonesboro Saturday and Sunday.

There will be more than 100 arts, crafts and food booths.

Participants can enjoy jewelry making, woodworking, pottery, hand-painted shirts and more.

Tours of the 1839 plantation home will be included with the admission fee for the festival.

The home has been restored and furnished with period antiques.

Guides in antebellum attire will be available to lead tours through the home.

Entertainment will be available on the dance floor near the front of the home.

The highlight of the day will be the re-enactment of the 1864 Battle of Jonesboro.

Nearly 500 re-enactors will recreate one of the most crucial battles of the Civil War.

In addition to the battle re-enactment, there will be a military encampment and settlers camp available to tour from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday and 4 to 6 p.m. Sunday.

The Stately Oaks plantation home and grounds are located at 100 Carriage Lane at Jodeco Road.

Jonesboro is located 25 minutes south of Atlanta just off I-75.

For further information, call (404) 473-0197.

Indian Summer Festival features arts, crafts, food

By Carol Keefe
Eufaula Indian Summer Festival

The Eufaula, Ala., Indian Summer Arts and Crafts Festival will be Saturday and Sunday.

A juried show will feature more than 90 artists and craftsmen from throughout the Southeast and there will be a midway of foods, free live entertainment and children's activities.

Artists working in oils, acrylics, water colors, pen and ink, and mixed media are scheduled to attend. The crafts available will include baskets, ceramics, Christmas decorations in many forms, decorated clothing, country florals, decorative woodwork, hand-painted resin, jewelry and accessories, leather work, quilts, sand art, soft-sculpture animals and dolls, T-shirts, wreaths and much more.

Saturday's schedule of free entertainment begins with Shirley Spurlock's "Dance Unlimited," followed by Brent Irby and Chris Shaw in "The Band." The afternoon will begin with a program of Christian music by Scarlett Reddman of Blakely, followed by a magic show featuring Samuel Wilkinson of Clio. Favorite local vocalist Jeff Howerton will end the afternoon's activities.

Sunday afternoon's festivities will include the Lake City Squares, the Eufaula High Jazz Band and the St. Johns A.M.E. Sanctuary Choir.

Hands-on children's activities will be available, and there will be special visitors, including Alabama Power's Louie the Lightning Bug, Shoney Bear, Chattahoochee Poochie from the Historic Chattahoochee Commission, Little Casear and Eufaula High School's Eufie the Tiger.

The admission to the Indian Summer Festival is free.

Festival hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. (Central Standard Time) on Saturday and noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday. For further information, call (204) 687-6664.

HOROSCOPE

King Features Syndicate

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Though a partner is in an upbeat mood, you may have so much to do now that you won't have much time for each other. Don't be picky with a family member. A new business inspiration has you excited. Watch spending this weekend.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A new work opportunity looks promising, but you may have trouble concentrating on what needs to be done. A domestic matter requires your attention toward the end of the week. There's something magical about an outing this weekend.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Extra expenses are likely to arise in connection with pleasure interests this week. Though fun opportunities come now, you may have difficulty making up your mind. Family activity may be a top priority now. A sudden inspiration leads to redecorating.

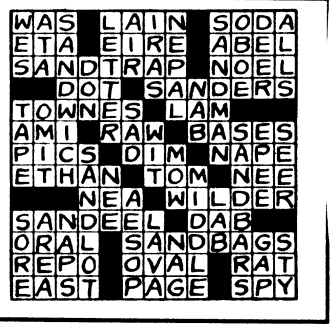
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The week begins on a romantic note. You'll be tackling a home repair also. A partner is a source of inspiration now. Avoid weekend overspending on pleasure pursuits. Do your best not to become moody or temperamental.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) Some good news comes now, but there are mix-ups in communications as well. Concentration still is not at its best in work interests. A business hunch looks very promising. Home life is accented this weekend.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) Good news about a financial matter should not be taken as a signal that you can spend wildly now. Judgment is likely to be faulty this week where money is concerned. You're making progress now on a work-related project. Romance is a plus, but keep your feet on the ground.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You start the week off in a positive frame of mind, but dealing with the idiosyncrasies of people around you can be a handful now. Others want to call the shoots. Romantic introductions are likely for travelers. Social life is iffy this weekend.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You'll get the peace and quiet you seek for a while this week, but then others make demands on your time. You'll find a solution now in a domestic concern. Further thought is needed about a business matter.



SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Judgment may be off this week in spending matters, especially with regard to pleasure. You'll be giving helpful advice to a friend now. You're on a roll where business interests are concerned. Togetherness is the theme this weekend.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) You'll hear of a new business opportunity now, but you're not quite ready to make up your mind about it. Early in the week, you may be a bit restless and unconventional. Your social graces are an asset later in the week where business interests are concerned.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) You'll be dealing with people now who just don't see things the way you do. Try to avoid disputes about ideology. Financial backing is available to you. Don't talk business with loved ones.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20) Some financial benefits come now, but you still need to be careful in your use of credit. Social life may not meet expectations. An unfinished task is easily dealt with now. Couples will be visiting friends.

THE BAYONET CLASSIFIEDS REALLY WORK!

UPCOMING EVENTS

Frontier encampment — Saturday and Sunday, the state park that boasts the highest waterfall in Georgia will become a replica frontier encampment complete with settlers and Indians when Amicalola Falls State Park hosts the Southern Frontier Living Encampment.

There will be demonstrations and exhibits displaying the crafts and tools of frontier life and stories of frontier adventures will be told around the campfire.

The adventure begins at 10 a.m. Saturday and the encampment will be "settled" until 3 p.m. Sunday.

All of the events are free. A $2 park pass fee per vehicle is required to enter the park.

For information, call Amicalola Falls at (706) 265-8888.

Operated by the Department of Natural Resources, Amicalola Falls State Park is located west of Dawsonville on Highway 52.

Season opener — The Human Experience Theatre located at 1037 Broadway in Columbus is now presenting its season opener, "Advice from a Caterpillar," written by Douglas Carter Beane.

Curtain times are 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays through Oct. 23. Tickets are $10, and $8 for students, seniors and military. For reservations, call 323-3689.

Country music — Patty and Paula, country music singers and twin sisters from Carrollton, Ga., will be at Franklin D. Roosevelt State Park Saturday from 8 to 9:30 p.m. at the Stone Amphitheater next to the park's Information Center on Highway 190 East.

Patty's and Paula's singing career has taken them many places, including auditions for the Nashville Network and recording for three original songs.

Wayne Foster, the park's enforcement ranger, will also perform.

All activities are open to the public at no cost other than the park pass fee of $2 per vehicle. For more information, call Sallie B. Lewis at (706) 663-4858.

Park concert — The Columbus Symphony Orchestra will conduct its annual "Pops in the Park" concert Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the orchestra shell at Weracoba Park. In case of rain, the performance will be at the Three Arts Theatre at 8 p.m. The program will feature Haymon Pops Hoedown and Gliere Russian Sailor's Dance, as well as music by Dvorak and Borodin. This event is free and open to the public. For further information, call 323-5059.

Clogging — Franklin D. Roosevelt State Park invites the public to enjoy an evening of clogging on top of Pine Mountain from 8 to 9 p.m. Oct. 23.

The Southern Express Cloggers from LaGrange, Ga., will be presented at the Stone Amphitheater next to the park's Information Center on Highway 190 East.

All activities are open to the public at no cost other than the park pass fee of $2 per vehicle. For more information, call Sallie B. Lewis at (706) 663-4858.

'50s dance — A back to the '50s Mountain Record-Hop Dance will be at Franklin D. Roosevelt State Park, Visitor Information Center's amphitheater Oct. 16 from 7 to 10 p.m.

Doc Roger and his assistant Rock Dodger are featured as disc jockeys.

There will be prizes, dancing and Trivial Pursuit. Special prizes will be awarded to the best "Back to the '50s" attire.

All activities are open to the public at no cost other than the park pass fee of $2 per vehicle. For more information, call Sallie B. Lewis at (706) 663-4858.

SOAP UPDATE

King Features Syndicate

ALL MY CHILDREN: Erica told Kendall to forget about Richard Fields or leave. Timmy said no to Dean's offer of beer and marijuana, then hid the drugs when Trevor walked in and yelled at him for cutting school. After overhearing how Laurel embezzled funds and was indirectly responsible for Natalie's death, Timmy lashed out that he hated her, and that Lily would also hate her if she knew the truth about her mother. Wait to see: Brooke makes a decision, and Ted makes a discovery.

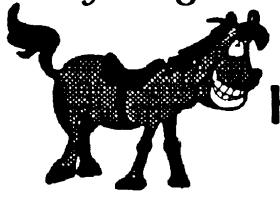
ANOTHER WORLD: Jake showed Amanda and Paulina written proof that Mac had been a robber baron. Dean was upset when Jenna told him how Maggie manipulated her way to New York to see him. At Marley's baby clinic, an angry Vicky berated Grant for having her removed from the Day Care Committee. Jake told Rachel to step down as head of Cory. Paulina passed out at the video loft. Wait to see: Did Jake make a major mistake? Could be.

AS THE WORLD TURNS: Royce told Dr. Spiros and Emily more about his horrific childhood and his beloved dog, Jimmy. Lucinda was shocked to learn her mother had been such a monster. Lily told Holden, she gave Aaron her trust fund because he was Holden's son. Wait to see: Franco makes his next move.

BOLD AND THE BEAUTIFUL: Stephanie sent Jack away after he said he'd do the right thing now that Sally was pregnant. Sheila tried to rid herself of Mike by siccing an attack dog on him, but he triumphed over the situation. After realizing he'd turned the tables, Sheila entered into an uneasy truce with Mike. To her surprise, Ridge asked to design the clothes. Wait to see: Eric's mental health may be deteriorating.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES: After examining her, Marlena said Carly's amnesia might be irreversible. After Kristen offered Curtis jewels in exchange for her father, Stefano, Curtis made sexual advances to her but was scared off by someone coming toward them. Stefano faked an accident and was taken to the hospital where Marlena got the shock of her life when he greeted her in the hallway. Wait to see: Billie's suspicions could be dangerous to her health.

GENERAL HOSPITAL: Jagger may have put his life on the line when he agreed to let Marco manage his boxing career. Meanwhile, Marco made an under-the-table deal to have Sonny control Jagger's ring success. Felicia came up with an idea on how to nail Ryan for Jessica's murder. Monica continued to play out her "romance" in hopes of stirring Alan's jealousy. Wait to see: Marco makes another dubious "deal".



GUIDING LIGHT: Alexandra set off a verbal volcano when she found Roger and Jenna in her bed, and learned of her reversal of fortune. Lucy rejected Buzz's attempt to explain why he never told her about his first family — Nadine, Frank and Harley. After an emotional reunion, Nick told Alex any progress in their relationship would depend on her acceptance of his and Mindy's relationship. Wait to see: Vanessa learns Josh didn't tell her everything about Tangie.

LOVING: Frankie blackmailed Cooper into bribing Delaney to drop assault charges against him. The real problem, however, was Ava's uncertain emotional reactions. Casey decided to get money and power as a way of competing with Cooper. Kate returned from vacation with the sad news of Louie's death. Wait to see: Frankie's growing boldness gives him an exaggerated sense of power.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE: After Luna told Max that Bobby's ghost had returned to haunt her, he assumed she was just trying to get out of marrying him, and told her so. As Tina filled in the missing pieces of Cord's memory, he felt a sense of betrayal by his friends and family. Cain learned Angela had sufficient funds to pay both Dorian and Alex. Angela, however insisted the money was for Rebecca. Wait to see: Is Bobby trying to warn Luna about danger?

YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS: Jill agreed to let Jack be her baby's godfather. Victor invited John, Jill, Ashley, Brad, Mitchell, Jack, Nikki and Ryan to a "surprise" party. Nikki came, but left early. Jack didn't show. When Victor walked in, several pairs of eyes stared and several jaws dropped at the sight of the man they believed dead. Dru and Neil wondered how Neil's support for Jack might affect him at Newman Enterprises. Wait to see: Danny and Cricket make decisions based on their love for each other.

75TH RANGERS

PURPLE HEART HEROES

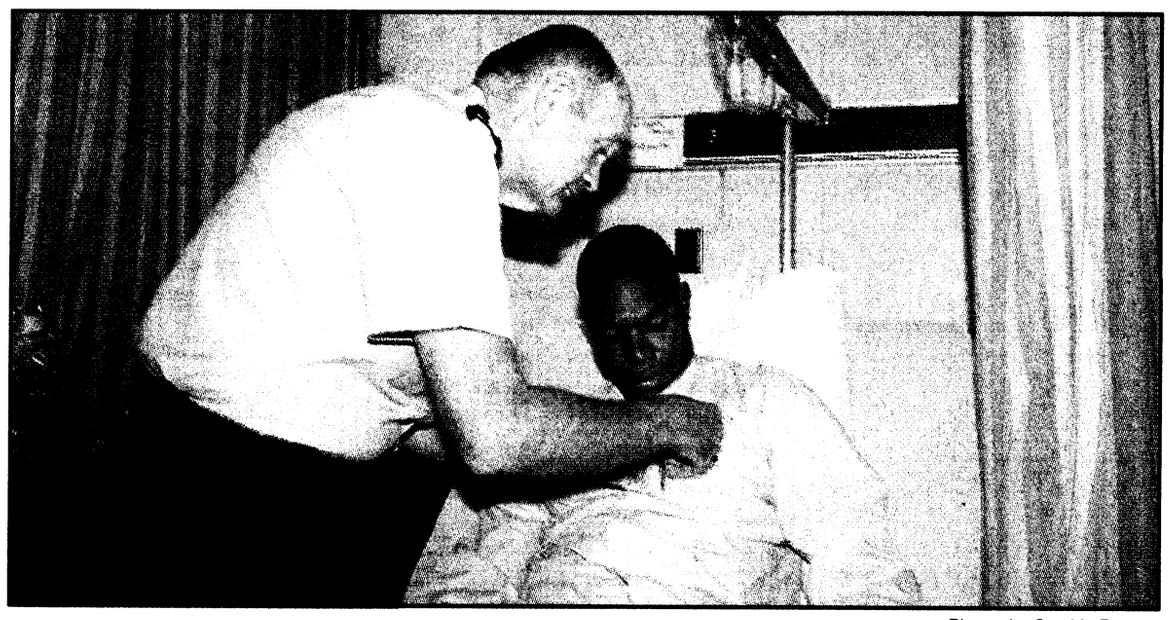
General delivers medals

By Cynthia Barnes
Bayonet assistant editor

Eleven Fort Benning rangers from 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, received the Purple Heart Sunday at Martin Army Community Hospital.

U.S. Army Chief of Staff Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan presented the medals, which are for military members who are wounded in combat, to the rangers who were injured during a combat operation in Somalia Oct. 3. The rangers returned to Fort Benning last week for treatment at the hospital.

Sullivan spoke with each of the soldiers individually; and, after pinning on the Purple Heart, he presented each soldier an Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal.



The general told the soldiers and their families and friends that they were terribly brave soldiers and he and the Army were proud of them. Sullivan also told the group of rangers that the operation in which they were wounded had been the most intense fighting America has seen since Vietnam.

"I can't spell hooah," Sullivan said, "but I know what it means and that's what in this room."

Sullivan emphasized the importance of the family and how brave they are in the support of those in uniform. During the visit, Sullivan also Wounded soldiers returning from Somalia have been bolstered by a show of support from the Columbus community.

Several Columbus businesses have joined the military community in showing caring and support for the wounded rangers by providing restaurant meals, books, games and other supplies meant to ease their convalescence.

"They really appreciate the food, games and magazines," said Capt. Andy Fraser, military liaison at the Family Assistance Center at Martin Army Community Hospital.

Dayton Preston and Joe Beacher of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce have coordinated the community donations, said Fraser.

In addition, Dave Eversman of Chick-Fil-A has donated meals and coordinated the delivery effort for food donations, said Fraser.

The following businesses have donated food, magazines, games, cards, equipment and supplies designed to help the morale of the wounded Rangers: Chick-Fil-A, Red Lobster, The Hilton, Scooters, Little Caesers, Wal- Mart and CB&T Bank.

43rd Eng. to return to Somalia

608th, 2nd MASH also to deploy soldiers

By David Greer
36th Engineer Group

Approximately 480 soldiers from the 43rd Engineer Combat Battalion will redeploy to Somalia.

Soldiers from Company A, 43rd Engineer Combat Battalion, are tentatively scheduled to depart Lawson Army Airfield late Saturday night or early Sunday morning, according to Maj. Allen Estes, 36th Engineer Group operations officer. A departure ceremony will be conducted with the time to be announced.

The 43rd Engineer Combat Battalion will provide personnel and equipment to construct and improve force protection (bunkers, berms, foxholes and other structures that provide soldiers protection from hostile fire) and sustainment facilities such as latrines, showers and base camps for soldiers deployed in Somalia, Estes said.

The 36th Engineer Group (Combat) will also deploy approximately 50 soldiers from the 608th Ordnance Company to augment the Ammunition Supply Point operated by the 13th Corps Support Battalion.

Fort Devens, Mass. will deploy a medical unit to Somalia that will include four soldiers from the 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital.

Riverside concert set

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The last concert of the fall season is scheduled for 5 p.m. Oct. 24 at Riverside.

Post Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White and his wife, Linda, invite everyone to join them on the lawn of their historic home to hear the Infantry Band and Infantry Chorus perform.

Everyone is invited to bring blankets, lawn chairs and coolers. In case of rain, the concert will be canceled.

Diamond Jubilee: Celebration begins with wreath laying

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning's Diamond Jubilee anniversary began Oct. 7 with a wreath-laying ceremony at the grave of Gen. Henry Lewis Benning and the unveiling of a historic marker at the original site of Camp Benning.

The wreath-laying ceremony, hosted by the 11th Infantry Regiment, took place at Benning's gravesite at Linwood Cemetery in Columbus.

Post Chief of Staff Col. Burnet R. Quick said he felt it was appropriate to begin the celebration of Fort Benning's 75th birthday in Columbus (rather than on post) because it was the Columbus Chamber of Commerce that, 75 years ago, asked the war department to locate the school of infantry in the Columbus area.

"We gather here today to honor and pay tribute to Henry Lewis Benning ... the great soldier for whom Fort Benning is named," Quick said.

Benning, a Georgia native and a graduate of the University of Georgia (then Franklin College) established a law practice in Columbus in 1835, Quick said.

"When the war between the states broke out, he entered the Confederate service as a colonel in command of the 17th Georgia Regiment."

He was promoted to brigadier general in less than one year and participated in battles at Chickamauga, Gettysburg and Petersburg.

"General Benning distinguished himself on the battlefield," Quick said. "His orders were always "Boys, follow me."

After the wreath-laying, the group of soldiers and spectators moved to a small triangular park at the corner of Macon Road and Dixon Drive for the unveiling of a historic marker indicating the original site of Camp Benning, established in 1918.

"On the 6th of October, 1918, the first troops arrived at this very site," Quick said, "and on the 7th, the ribbon-cutting ceremony was held."

During the unveiling ceremony, Sarah Simpson, regent of the local chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution founded by Benning's daughter Anne Caroline Benning, presented the DAR history medal to retired Col. Dick Grube, curator of the National Infantry Museum.

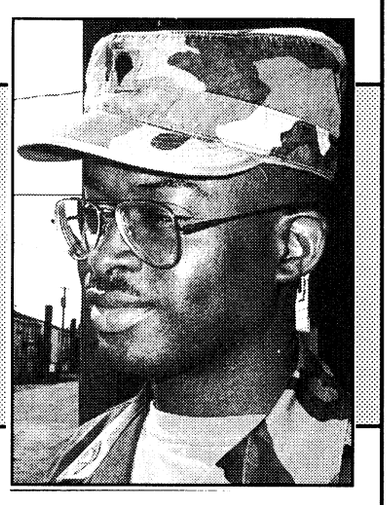
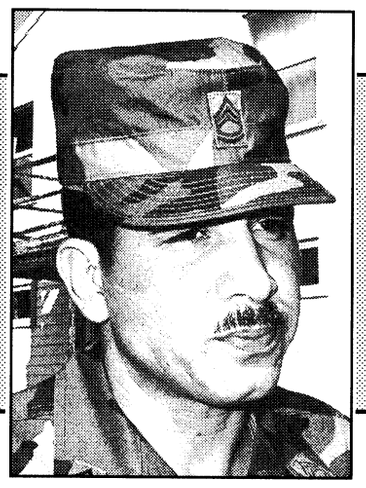
VARIOUS VOICES

What are you doing to stay competitive in the Army?



Pfc. Adrian Lawrence, 519th Personnel Service Company — "I'm going to school and trying to get as many promotion points as possible."



Spc. Terria L. Duncan, U.S. Army Medical Department Activity — "I'm going to school in the evenings and signing up for every military school opportunity that comes along."

Master Sgt. Robert Gaspar, Service Battery, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment — "If you're going to stay in the Army, you've got to go to school to get ahead."

Spc. B. A. Batchilly, Adjutant General Replacement Detachment — "I work on my hobby (I'm an amateur videographer) and my job and try to stay ahead."

Sgt. 1st Class Jorge Rentas, Battery C, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment — "First of all, I compete with senior noncommissioned officers in the battalion. I conduct NCO training to improve Self-Development Test scores, and I continue to go to college."

Spc. Daniel E. Holloway, Company B, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment — "To tell you the truth, I'm not doing anything, as far as the Army is concerned. My concern is where I'll be when I get out in a year, so my main focus is getting accepted into college."
