29th Inf. receives excellence award

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Department of Army Award for Maintenance Excellence was presented to the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, Monday at 1:30 p.m. at the battalion's motor pool on Kelley Hill.

This marks the fifth consecutive year the battalion earned the award in the Army-wide competition. Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, Fort Benning commanding general, presented the award.

The U.S. Army Ordnance Center selected the 1st Battalion for its sustained excellence in maintaining some 286 vehicles, including 181 Bradley Fighting Vehicles and 20 M-113 armored personnel carriers.

The 1st Battalion is responsible for training infantry soldiers and leaders in the operation and maintenance of infantry weapons and equipment, providing training support to the U.S. Army Infantry School and developing infantry weapons and land navigation doctrine to prepare the Army for its combat role.

The motor pool, with 125 military and 28 civilian personnel, is responsible for the maintenance and repair of the vehicles required to support that training.

The Ordnance Center evaluates maintenance facilities Armywide, to include active, Reserve and National Guard and further categorizes them into light, medium and heavy. The 1st Battalion was selected in the heavy category.

The battalion twice previously received the Department of Defense Phoenix Award for excellence in the maintenance of its vehicles. It is the only Army unit to win this award.

MG White accepts post ACOE award

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning's commanding general, command sergeant major and a team of 10 representatives from various post activities were at the Pentagon May 20 to receive Fort Benning's Army Communities of Excellence award.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, Command Sgt. Maj. William H. Acebes and other post representatives were among the 76 Army awardees gathered at the Pentagon to share honors in the annual ACOE awards ceremony.

A strong advocate for Army communities where soldiers, Army civilians and their families live, work and train, Sullivan marked the occasion as "the culmination of a very important effort.

"ACOE symbolizes your commitment to quality — the quality of life as reflected by your facilities and services," he said, according to an Army News Service release.

Fort Benning won the Chief of Staff's $1 million ACOE award for the best large installation in the continental United States.

The funds, which will become available in fiscal 1994, will be used for community programs approved by the commanding general.

"We competed with other bases and posts all over the world for this award," said Sarah McLaney, Fort Benning's Communities of Excellence coordinator with the Directorate of Resource Management.

"We were one of five that received $1 million awards," she said.

The other awardees, McLaney said, were Redstone Arsenal, Ala., for the best medium-sized continental United States installation; and Schofield Barracks, Hawaii; Vilseck, Germany and Grafenwoehr, Germany for the best large, medium and small installations overseas, respectively.

Nominated as best small continental United States installation, White Sands missile Range, N.M., won the commander-in-chief's award of $1.5 million.

McLaney was part of the group from Fort Benning, and she said attending the ceremony made her "very proud of Fort Benning and what we have accomplished."

White was also very proud of Fort Benning, she said. "You could tell — he was beaming."

"I wish everyone could have been a part of the ceremony and felt what we felt," McLaney said.

Celebrate summer with Riverside concert

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White and his wife, Linda, invite you to celebrate summer at their home.

The Whites will host a concert, featuring the Infantry Band and Infantry Chorus, from 5 to 6 p.m. at Riverside Sunday.

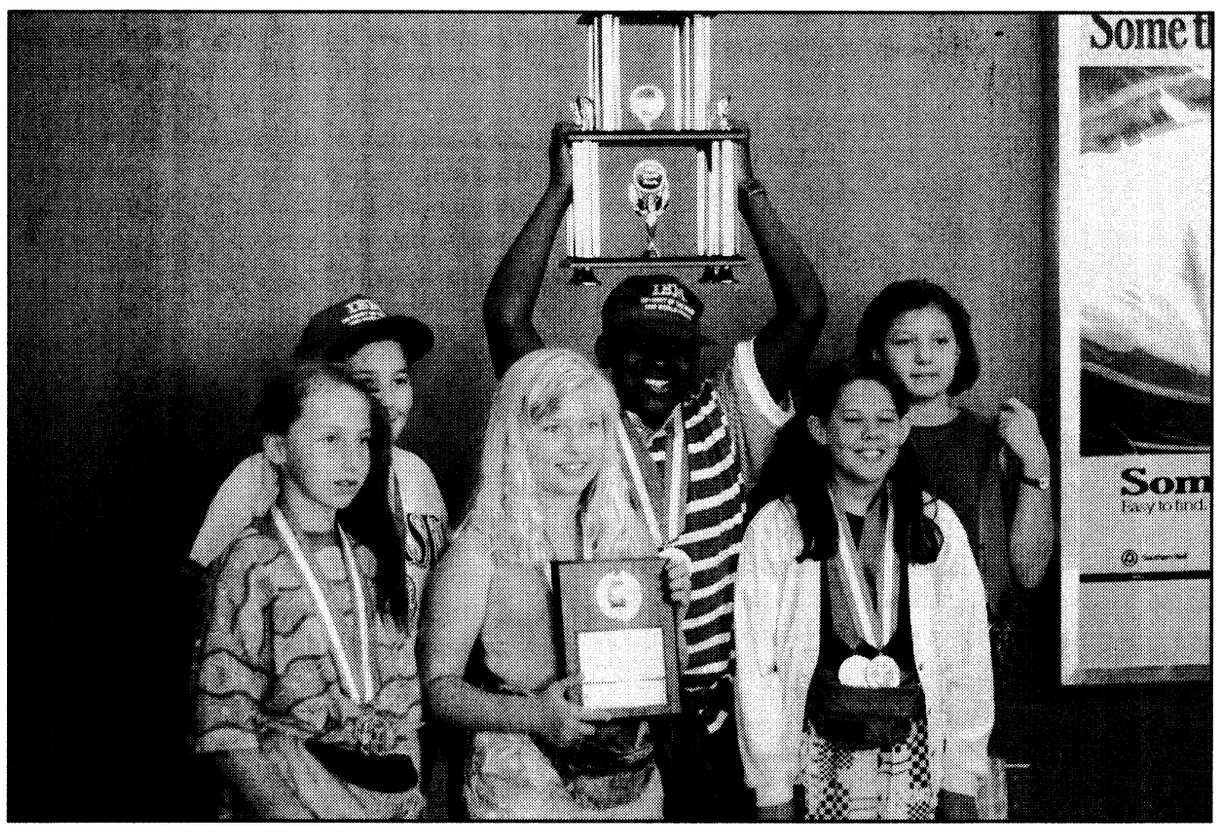
The public is invited, and attendees are encouraged to bring blankets, lawn chairs, coolers and picnic baskets to the outdoor concert.

Dexter, Faith schools bring home the prize in 'Odyssey of Mind'

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Students from Fort Benning's Herbert J. Dexter Elementary and Don C. Faith Middle schools are back home from the University of Maryland following World Finals for Odyssey of the Mind competition last week.

The Dexter team won first place in the World Finals Division I Folk Tales Problem, while the Faith team took second place for the problem in Division II. Dexter students also won the Renatra Fusca Creativity Award.



Odyssey of the Mind, a problem-solving competition, was developed by New Jersey college professor Dr. Sam Miklus. The program provides a mental challenge through problem-solving activities, according to a Fort Benning Schools spokesperson.

There are two categories of activities: long-term problem solving in which students have several months to find a solution and short-term problem solving in which students must find a solution during the competition.

This is the seventh time Faith Middle School's team has gone to the World Finals and the first trip for Dexter Elementary.

Members of the Faith team were eighth-graders Jerry Edwards, Carrie Parker, Jeff Quick, Lakisha Ladson, Jennifer Swihart and Amy Wilson. They were coached by Cindy Givens and Libbie Kurinec. Team member Erin Meade began with Faith in district competition but was unable to participate in all levels because of injuries from an automobile accident.

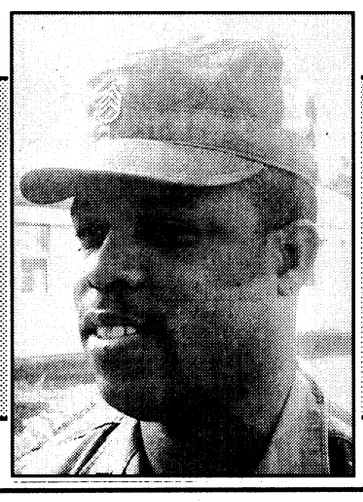
VARIOUS VOICES

What was your best or worst vacation?

Karen Manns, family member — "My husband's and my trip to Panama City (Fla.) was the best. There was the beach and the strip — just a lot of things going on at once."

Spc. Scott Manns, Detachment D, 24th Finance — "Our trip to Panama City (was best) because we had just gotten married and came straight to Fort Benning, so we took time off and spent the whole weekend together."



Christina M. Brown, family member — "I'm a mother, so I've never had a real vacation!"

Adrienne Jones, military personnel clerk — "Just going home to visit family when you haven't seen them in a while is best."

Spc. Franco O. Santiago, School of the Americas — "I had both at the same time. My fiance and I were going on a cruise, but she called 30 minutes before and said she had a boyfriend who wouldn't let her go. I went by myself and met a girl I've been seeing ever since."

Staff Sgt. Tym Garrett, 586th Engineer Company — "When I came home from Germany was the best. It was good to see my family after such a long period of time."

Soldiers can do anything!

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

COMMENTARY

When married soldiers get back from a tough training exercise, they are usually greeted by spouses glad to see them back.

And once their gear is squared away, they have a home to go to.

When single soldiers get back all they have to look forward to are fellow single soldiers who are probably just as despondent as they are over the lack of things to do and their living conditions.

Post officials are trying to rectify these situations. Soldiers are being asked what kind of activities they'd like for their off-duty time. And just recently commanders and senior noncommissioned officers saw ways soldiers can improve their living conditions.

It's part of a "U-Do-It" project. Key players are the Directorate of Public Works and the 36th Engineer Group. But the stars are soldiers.

I've always known soldiers are inventive. Heck, we find all sorts of ways to get into trouble. But now I see soldiers are also pretty handy with tools.

Radio operators, clerks and infantrymen have actually constructed buildings and remodeled day rooms, offices and barracks rooms.

Sure, the experts are there to give them advice and tell them what to do and how to do it; but when it comes to cutting boards, putting up sheet rock, pounding nails, installing lighting fixtures, the soldiers are the ones doing the work.

They are also planting things on the outside of buildings to make their work and living areas look better. And those planted things are actually surviving.

It's wonderful what soldiers can do. At least most soldiers. Journalist soldiers must come from a different cut of cloth.

As for improving our work areas, we did paint the office once. After a few brush strokes I was assigned the job of moving furniture.

Afterwards I tried to hang a picture. It stayed on the wall until I turned my back, then came tumbling down.

Fortunately, journalists are a small minority in the Army. Fortunately, we don't work at the NCO Academy where bushes and trees flourish or in the Airborne Department where new harness sheds still stand and offices are being renovated, nor in the 36th Engineer Group where day rooms take on the aura of a downtown athletic club, offices resemble what you would expect to find in a place like AFLAC and a model barracks room looks like what you would expect in Whisperwood Apartments.

By the way it didn't take one NCO long to decide the room was strictly for show, that there was no occupant -- "where's the stereo system?" he asked.

Another NCO scoffed at the work, saying the soldiers he was used to dealing with would trash it immediately.

"Nope," the first NCO said, "they ain't been raised right. They grew up destructive, lived like pigs when they were home and they bring those habits into the Army."

"Then I guess we have a leadership problem here," the other NCO answered, walking off to continue his inspection and decide how he could make life better for his troops.

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning is conducting a person-to-person campaign during June for the 1993 U.S. Savings Bond Campaign.

According to Minit Robertson, installation savings bond officer, the two points she wants to stress to canvassers and potential bond owners is that bonds are virtually risk free and a painless way to save.

Anyone who is interested in purchasing bonds should contact their unit representative or call Bertha Brown at 545-4731 or 545-4729.

The following are 12 good reasons for buying U.S. Savings Bonds as published by the Department of the Treasury:

1. Competitive interest rates

Series EE U.S. Savings Bonds held five years or longer earn market-based interest or a guaranteed minimum rate, whichever is higher, compounded semiannually. Semiannual rates are announced May 1 and Nov.1.

2. Guaranteed minimum return

Once you have held your March 1993 or later Series EE U.S. Savings Bond for six months it is guaranteed a minimum annual rate of four percent, compounded semiannually. Interest is added to the value of your bond every month.

3. Tax exemptions

Interest earned on U.S. Savings Bonds is exempt from all state and local income taxes.

4. Deferred reporting of interest for federal taxes

Interest earned is not subject to federal income taxes until the bonds are cashed or reach final maturity in 30 years.

Taxes may be deferred further if bonds are exchanged for Series HH Bonds.

5. Peace of mind in retirement

Or, you can produce regular income by exchanging Series EE Savings Bonds for Series HH Bonds, which pay interest semiannually.

The annual yield on HH Bonds issued March 1993 or later (see note) is four percent, taxable annually but exempt from state and local income taxes.

6. Cash on demand

One of the best benefits of U.S. Savings Bonds is cash when you need it. You can cash Bonds any time after six months from purchase.

Interest accrues monthly for 18 years and there are no penalties associated with cashing Bonds before maturity.

7. College costs made easier

U.S. Savings Bonds may provide tax savings when used to finance higher education. See Treasury Department publication "U.S. Savings Bonds for Education" for details.

8. Easy to buy

You can buy Series EE Savings Bonds through the Payroll Savings Plan where you work or through over-the counter purchases or the bond-a-month plan where you bank.

9. Strengthening America

Buying U.S. Savings Bonds is patriotic. You earn interest while you help your country.

Savings bonds sales reduce borrowing costs for the Treasury and taxpayers.

10. No commissions or fees

You pay no fee or commission to buy or redeem savings bonds.

11. Guaranteed safe

If lost, stolen or destroyed, U.S. Savings Bonds can be replaced, without charge. Remember to keep a record of the serial numbers of your bonds.

12. Unsurpassed reliability

U.S. Savings Bonds are backed by the full faith and credit of the United States.

LETTERS

Ex-MP: Traffic lights need be fixed

I guess ex-military police officers are the worst kind; but, up until now, my comments have fallen upon deaf ears.

Hopefully someone with reason will understand this letter and FIX it.

I'm speaking about the three way traffic light at the hospital.

Someone told me once that it was set for rush hour traffic control.

Well, that just is not true. To review, the light offers traffic crossing Marne Road off the I-185 exit and out of the hospital individual green lights.

During the morning rush hour, there is little if any OUTGOING traffic from the hospital to warrant an unimpeded traffic flow from the I-185 exit turning right or left.

You see, traffic flows in the opposite direction. Ever notice how traffic in the evening backs up on Marne Road — sometimes to the other hospital exit?

There is no need for three single, dedicated green lights at that intersection unless the intent is to make traffic in three directions wait needlessly for the fourth.

OK now, who is going to fix it? Not justify it as is — FIX IT.

Sgt. 1st Class Jeffrey F. Stone
Fort Benning

Military Police Activity answers the call

In response to your letter to the editor of The Bayonet, the following information is provided.

The Military Police Activity conducted a survey of the traffic light located at Martin Army Community Hospital to determine if an adjustment is required.

Based upon the results, it is recommended the light be adjusted so as to accommodate the lane that has the higher volume of traffic for that specific time of day.

Coordination is being made with the Directorate of Public Works, which controls the traffic signals on the installation, requesting an adjustment be made.

The Military Police Activity welcomes suggestions from the public that we serve and will respond to suggestions and ideas that are submitted.

In addition, we will conduct a study to determine if the suggestion offers a better way of doing things, and if warranted, implementation will be made.

If you have any other questions, contact the traffic non-commissioned officer, Staff Sgt. Jeffrey Bishop, at 545-2338 or 545-2520.

Commanders learn about U-Do-It

DPW, 36th Engineer Group host seminar on how units can improve quality of life

By David Greer
36th Engineer Group

The Directorate of Public Works and the 36th Engineer Group hosted a seminar on the "U-Do-It" program for unit commanders and directors May 4 at the Follow Me Golf Course.

According to Col. William Brown, director of Public Works, the U-Do-It program allows a unit to upgrade the quality of life of its soldiers and personnel through renovation of work areas, living areas and landscaping.

"This Fort Benning program will form a partnership between DPW, the 36th and the unit requesting the project," said Brown.

"DPW will provide the resources and part of the expertise, the 36th will provide the other half of the expertise and the unit will provide the supervision and labor to do it," continued Brown.

The need for this program was explained by Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White.

"The reason we are doing this is that it is the only way we have to get ahead — the only way, no other way," said White. "We are not going to have the money except for the major projects already funded for fiscal 1994. After '94, I don't know what we'll do except self-help. It's frustrating at times to see how our soldiers have to live. I believe we can fix it. Self-help is the way ahead."

White said barracks not scheduled for complete renovation would have to be rehabilitated using the U-Do-It concept.

Brown announced that his department would establish a review board, meeting every six months to go over and prioritize projects submitted by Fort Benning units.

"We will have to do things like this to survive," said Brown. "My intent is to make $600,000 available next year, and my preliminary guidance says I can do this.

"During the first board meeting in August, I want to make $300,000 available. I won't order the materials until the fiscal 1994 budget is finally approved, but we will have everything set and ready to go for the October or November time frame," he said.

According to Brown, DPW and selected senior personnel qualified in construction from the 36th will provide units expertise to draw up the plans for the projects and order the necessary supplies.

"The role of the 36th is going to be to provide the technical expertise to help the other major subordinated commands execute their U-Do-It program" said Anderson.

"In many of our major subordinate commands," he said, "we have sufficient people to do sufficient U-Do-It projects but they don't have the carpentry, the electrical or the plumbing skills to satisfactory complete that project.

"Our role," said Anderson, "will be to provide that technical expertise so that the other units can do more sophisticated self help projects. We won't do the work for them but we will be on the scene to provide that advisory skill and the information they need to do the technical part of the project so that they can complete it successfully."

Brown summed up the meeting by saying, "This is a great opportunity to expand DPW dollars and a great way to improve the quality of life for the soldiers at minimum cost."

But, Brown cautioned, "This is a real partnership — not a DPW program, but a Fort Benning program. We will have to have a commitment from DPW, the 36th and from the units out there that we are going to do quality work, take pride in our work and take ownership of our work.

"If all of us have a commitment to this, we will have a super program — if one of us doesn't, we will not receive the maximum benefits from it," Brown said.

VA Q & A

Department of Veterans Affairs

Q: What is the current interest rate on VA-guaranteed home loans?

A: With the signing of new legislation Oct. 28, the Department of Veterans Affairs will not be setting the interest rate on VA loans.

The Veterans Home Loan Program Amendments of 1992 authorized VA to permit veterans to negotiate interest rates on VA-guaranteed home loans with lenders.

Veterans also can negotiate the number of points the lender charges for making the loan. The program will be in effect through Dec. 31, 1995.

This new law also authorized a three-year program for VA-guaranteed adjustable rate mortgages, which will be similar to FHA adjustable rate mortgages, with the interest rate index corresponding to the specified national interest rate index.

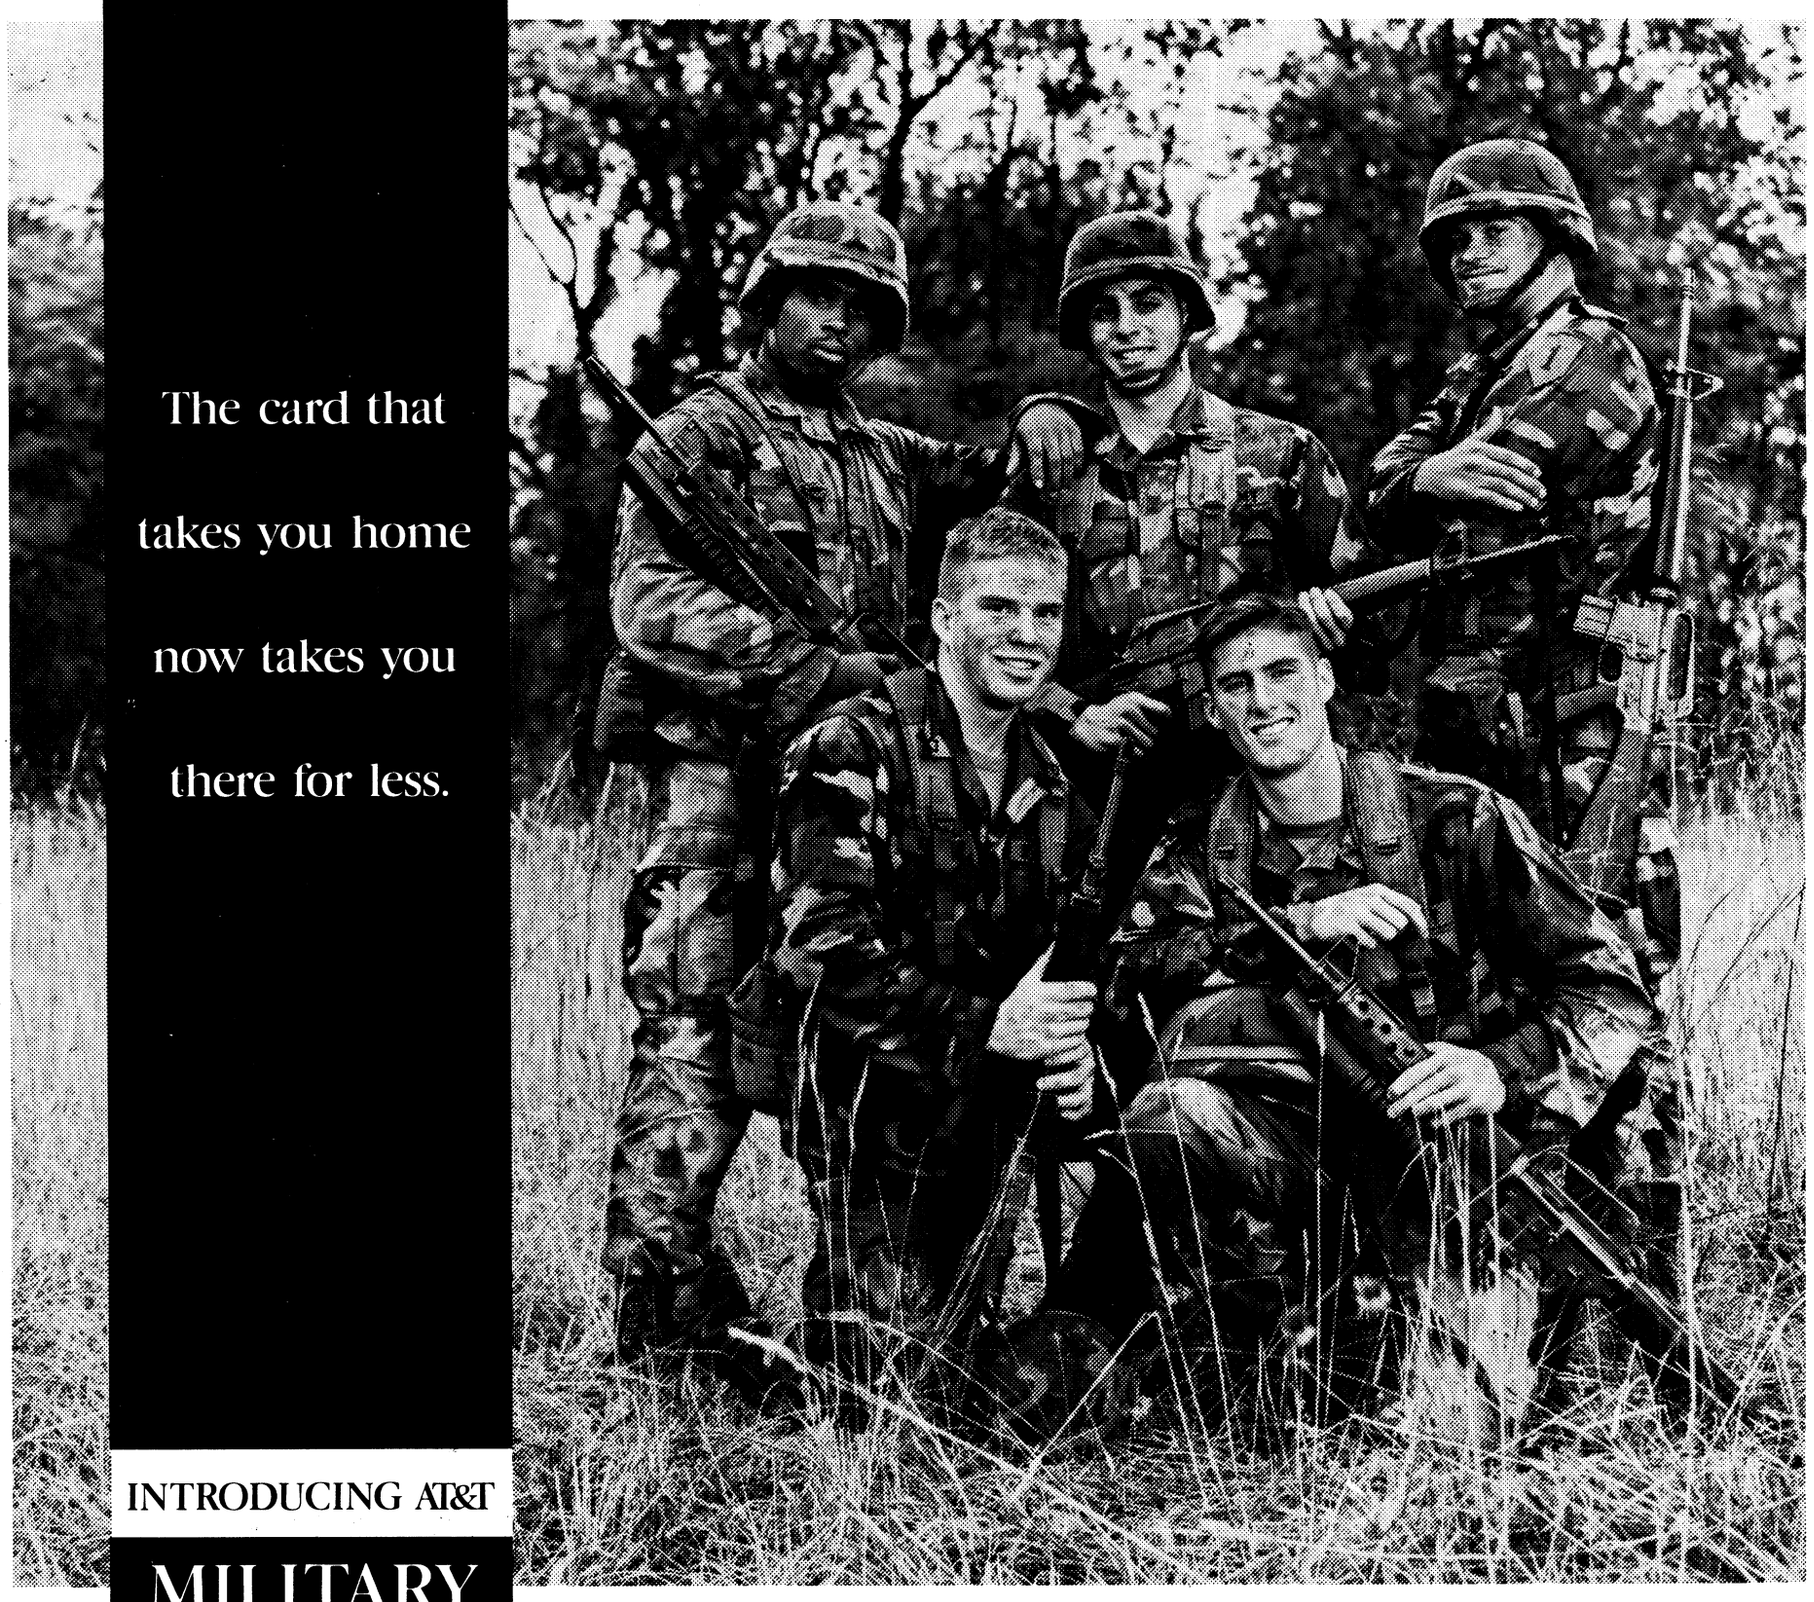
The rate may be adjusted annually (limited to one percent), with adjustments to the loan rate limited to a 5-percent increase for the life of the loan.

Adjustable rate mortgages may be used to refinance existing loans.

Q: What is the funding fee for interest rate reduction refinancing loans?

A: Legislation signed into law Oct. 28 reduced the funding fee from 1.25 percent to .5 percent.

Q: I was in the reserves for six years. I recently heard that reservists are eligible for VA-guaranteed home loans. Is this true?



A: A new program for members of the Selected Reserve was signed into law Oct. 28.

Individuals with six years of service in the Selected Reserve will now be eligible for the VA's loan guarantee benefit. Individuals no longer in the Selected Reserve must have served at least six years and have received an honorable discharge.

Reservists will pay the same funding fee as other veterans for manufactured home loans (one percent), and interest rate reduction refinancing loans and assumptions (.5 percent). You may apply for a certificate of eligibility for this program using VA Form 26-1880, Request for Determination of Eligibility and Available Loan Guaranty Entitlement.

Contact your nearest VA regional office for information. You may call VA's new nationwide number (800) 827-1000; or, if you live in the local calling area, continue to use the local phone number.

Ex-Ms.Olympia visits installation

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

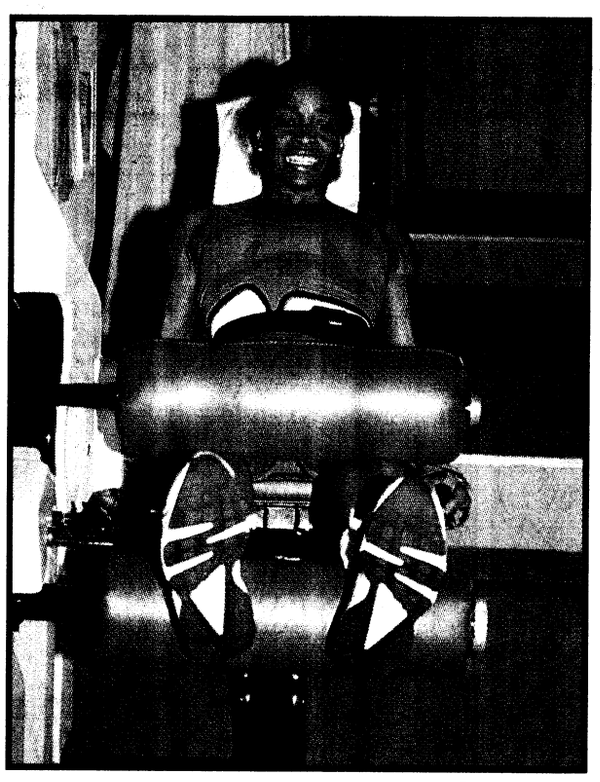
Former Ms. Olympia and Ms. World title holder Carla Dunlap-Kaan visited Fort Benning June 3 and 4 to talk about bodybuilding, fitness and exercise.

As part of her visit, Dunlap appeared at the Infantry Hall Fitness Center where members of the All-Army Track Team, instructors from the Army Physical Fitness School and other bodybuilding enthusiasts gathered with questions, cameras and pens for autographs.

Dunlap, whose professional bodybuilding career peaked in 1983 when she won her Ms. Olympia title, the World Professional Bodybuilding Championship and the Caesars World Cup Invitational, no longer competes but is still committed to fitness.

She is still training, she said, but has taken up competing in triathlons and has adapted her workout routine accordingly.

Dunlap, now married and living in Massachusetts, is doing personal training at the gym in her home, working for Highbar productions — she is now appearing in the show "Bodyshaping," doing commentating for ESPN and touring with Danskin to conduct fitness seminars.



Asked why she has given up bodybuilding competitions, Dunlap, now 38, said she "just doesn't have that fire" anymore.

"You get to a point where you don't have that drive," she said. "I'll do anything, but I won't do drugs — and some of the younger competitors will."

"If I were in the kind of condition I was when I won Ms. Olympia," Dunlap said, "I might still be up in the classes competing today, but I couldn't break the top 5."

As a natural bodybuilder, steroid use really bothered her as a competitor, Dunlap said.

"But, " she said, "you can either sit in the gym and gnash your teeth or you can train to be the best you can be."

Ruth J. Spaller

Carla Dunlap Kaan works out on the leg extension machine at the Fitness Center.

Working to be the best you can be seems to be Dunlap's prescription for success.

Fitness, she said, is the level that allows each person to function at their best.

It's important to do enough to be fit and feel good, she said, but not everyone needs to work out at the same level that a professional athlete does.

"Assess your own lifestyle and see where you can fit time in — fitness should alleviate stress, not create it," Dunlap said.

"Most people are looking for a quick answer ... but everything is synergistic — it all works together," she said.

Making fitness a regular part of your life, learning about nutrition and understanding the value of good food and exercise are Dunlap's keys to success, she said.

Benning chooses best-built bodies

For Leon Johnson, the third time was a charm.

The 10th annual Mr. and Ms. Fort Benning Bodybuilding championships Saturday at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center brought Johnson his first post title in three tries.

"I'm very pleased with the outcome," said Hart. "This was unexpected. I trained for eight months with Leon Johnson and he was very helpful. I'm still a little shocked."

Johnson, a three-time veteran of this event said he had hoped to see a bigger turnout for the competition, but was pleased with the overall showing.

Some spectators among the crowd of more than 150 and some of the competitiors showed their displeasure with the judges' final decision.

Johnson said he felt that this type of response will hurt the sport more than anything.

"As in any competition that is judged by individuals, there will be people with opposing views, but to show your emotion or displeasure on stage is wrong," said Johnson. "If you have a beef with the judges, take it up with them after the show not in front of a large crowd, like the one that was here today."

Listed below are the top three places from the men's and women's divisions along with the best poser.

Army runs away with track, field title

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Army came away a winner at the 1993 Armed Forces Track and Field Championships at Emory University in Atlanta June 3 and 4. The meet pitted the Army against the Air Force, Marine Corps and Navy.

The Army pulled out wins in the men's 4 x 400 meter relay, triple jump and high jump to outdistance its closest rival, the Air Force, 83.5 points to 69 to win its second straight Armed Forces title.

In the women's division, the Army once again proved to be too strong for its competitors, running away from the field 78 points to the Air Force's 61, the Marine Corps' 18 and the Navy's 7.

First year All-Army coach Willie Davenport, said he was a little apprehensive on the final day of competition with the Army team clinging to a slim lead over the Air Force.

"With three events still in progress I sent people to each event to see what the status of our people was," he said. "When Charles Swindell won the triple jump, my eyes went to the high jump and to James Barrineau. He pulled out a win there and then the men's 4x400 team finished with another win for us."

"I got more than I expected from my athletes," said Davenport. "They gave 100 percent all the time, everytime."

For Davenport and his team, the Armed Forces title may be the last for any of the four services in the future. There has been talk of discontinuing the track and field program and the Conseil International du Sport Militaire, or CISM, championships may not field anyone from the Army.

"In most cases a qualifying time or distance will allow an athlete to participate at the championships, but now the higher ups are saying that the athletes had to make that qualifying time or distance at the Armed Forces championships," said Davenport. "If we had known this at that time, our athletes would have been prepared to go that extra step to qualify."

In the National Collegiate Athletic Association, more than one race can be used as a qualifier for the Olympic trials or for the nationals as long as the individual meets or exceeds the qualifying time or distance, according to Davenport.

"We are now preparing for the nationals and I don't know if the times or distances that my athletes get at this meet, if they meet or exceed the qualifying standards for CISM will allow them to participate against the best that the world has to offer," said Davenport.

Children need PFDs

By Emerson E Addington
U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary

Are you planning a trip to Destin Recreation Center, Panama City or elsewhere in Florida?

If you plan on boating in Florida waters and have small children under 6, you should be aware that Oct. 1, the law regarding children and personal flotation devices changed.

The Florida state law applies to infants and young children aboard all private and commercial motorboats, sailboats and other vessels measuring less than 26 feet in length, when such vessels are "under way" meaning at all times except when anchored, moored or aground.

The personal flotation device must be type I, II, or III Coast Guard approved. All parents are responsible for purchasing proper-fitting PFDs for their children, boat owners and operators ultimately will be held responsible for compliance. Violators face a $35 fine for each infraction.

For more information concerning the law regulating use of PFDs or other boating safety regulations for Florida, contact the Florida Marine Patrol at (904) 488-5600.

Bible school begins

By Jacqueline Feagin
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Protestant Vacation Bible School will begin Monday at 10 a.m. at Dexter School. Vacation Bible School is open to children ages 4 through junior high school students.

This year, the children will learn how God used animals to help his people understand an important concept. The teachers will combine crafts, recreation and music with the Bible to help the children understand the theme "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son."

Volunteers are needed to assist in all areas to ensure a quality Bible school. Free child care will be available to all volunteers.

Vacation Bible School will provide an outlet for children to be introduced to their faith.

Buses will be provided to transport children to and from Vacation Bible School.

Chaplains graduate pastoral education

By Jacqueline Feagin
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Five chaplains graduated June 1 from Fort Benning's Clinical Pastoral Education program.

Chaplain (Capt.) Timothy L. Bartlett, Chaplain (Maj.) Paul Buck, Chaplain (Capt.) William Laigaie, Chaplain (Capt.) Charles Walker and Chaplain (Capt.) Donald Wilson will hopefully go on to their next assignment equipped with the knowledge to provide soldiers and their families spiritual leadership and assist their command in ensuring that each soldier and family member has free exercise of religion.

The chaplains, selected by Department of the Army Chief of Chaplains Office for the program, attend the course for a year. During that year, they are individually supervised as they go through professional on-the-job training.

They learn the skills and disciplines of theology, pastoral care, counseling, behavioral science and interpersonal relationships. The chaplains assigned to the program practice ministry at Martin Army Community Hospital, the counseling center for alcohol and drug abuse, the confinement facility, the Family Life Center and Custer Terrace Chapel.

Each chaplain has become a part of the congregation at Custer Terrace and has been given the opportunity to minister.

CRIME WATCH

Military Police Activity

The following entries were taken from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from May 11 to 17.

Such entries may be incomplete and are not the adjudication of the guilt or innocence of any person.

This week's hot topic concerns the responsibilities of parents in regard to supervising family members.

Desk sergeants have received several complaints in recent weeks involving small children being unattended in the housing areas.

Post garrison regulation 210-5 requires that all children 12 years of age and younger be under the direct supervision of an adult at all times, regardless of whether they are indoors or out.

• A retired specialist was charged with shoplifting after he placed four packs of cigarettes in his pants pocket and exited the Commissary without paying for them.

• A private was charged with wrongful appropriation of government property and failing to judge proper clearance after striking a pole at the First Union Bank drive through in a government vehicle.

• A private first class reported that persons unknown stole his motorcycle from the parking lot adjacent to his barracks.

• A sergeant was charged by civil authorities with disorderly conduct after he hit a woman in the face during an argument.

• A private first class reported that persons unknown entered his secured barracks room and removed several blank checks from his nightstand.

He and a passenger were traveling on a two-laned road when he failed to maintain control of the motorcycle and exited the left side of the roadway.

He attempted to steer back into the right lane but overcompensated, causing the motorcycle to fall on its side. He and the passenger were thrown from the motorcycle, resulting in several fractures and lacerations to both riders.

The driver was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol and failure to drive on a roadway laned for traffic.

Other activities included 10 traffic accidents and four reports of shoplifting a facilities on post.

There were four cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, 15 cases of larceny of private property and two cases of larceny of government property.

• Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best — Give Crime Arrest." Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5223 or the "Crime in Progress" line at 545-2222.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Michael H. Lane
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Q: I own a Department of Veteran Affairs mortgaged home that has been hard to sell in the recent economy.

My real estate agent says it will sell easily if I allow a buyer to "assume," or take over, my VA loan.

He says if I do this, the buyer doesn't have to worry about credit checks, and I can find more eligible buyers.

I would like to use VA entitlement to buy a new house at my next duty station. This looks like my best chance to sell. What is your advice?

A: VA loans are attractive to veterans looking to buy a new home because they typically require less money down than other types of home loans.

The VA loan entitlement is a government guarantee of repayment to the mortgage lender of amounts up to $36,000 for each eligible veteran, and a mortgage lender will lend up to four times this amount, depending upon your income level.

There is a hitch, however. Once you have used your eligibility to buy a home, you may not use it again until the prior loan is paid off in full.

Since you want to buy again soon, this may not be the best option for you.

You have three major choices in this situation: find a buyer who can buy your house using a conventional or Federal Housing Administration loan in his own name; find a veteran buyer with VA eligibility; and assumption.

The first choice is easiest since your loan is paid in full and your entitlement is restored.

If a veteran buys the home, you must apply for a "release of liability" from them.

In this process, the buyer-veteran substitutes his eligibility for yours, and your entitlement is restored.

The third option, assumption, is potentially dangerous for two reasons: failure to get the VA release of liability can result in a VA collection from you if the buyer fails to pay; and, even after release, entitlement to a VA loan cannot be used again until the loan is paid in full by the buyer.

When a buyer "assumes" your loan, he or she takes over the loan for you, by contract.

The buyer promises to carry out your loan as you did and under the same terms such as making your payments, carrying insurance and so forth.

You remain "secondarily liable" for the loan. That is, if the buyer ever defaults on the payments, you will remain liable for the loan.

If you must use assumption to sell the home, get a release of liability from VA.

You may secure a release form liability from the VA if three conditions are met: the loan is current at the time of assumption, the buyer qualifies as credit worthy and the buyer assumes all of your financial obligations.

Most realtors are knowledgeable concerning this option and can help you arrange the paperwork.

After securing the release, the seller may sell the house without worrying about late liability.

But this is not the last consideration. If you allow assumption, your right to use the VA loan program in the future, that is, your "entitlement", will be affected.

So long as the assumption is in effect, your ability to get a new VA loan will be impaired.

The only ways to have the assumption and use your entitlement again before the loan is paid off is to have the loan assumed by a person with VA entitlement, or use any unused part of your eligibility to buy a new home.

Whether you should use a VA mortgage assumption to help sell your house is an economic decision, not a legal one.

However, failure to realize the consequences can lead to surprise and disappointment later.

The Veteran's Administration has a toll-free number to answer your questions at (800) 827-1000.

The Legal Assistance Office, Building 5, is available to assist you by appointment.

Office hours are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.; the telephone number is 545-3282.

Fruits, vegetables, fight cancer

American Institute for Cancer Research

If we eat nutritiously, we can lower our cancer risk. That's what scientists are finding out as they study the link between diet, nutrition and cancer.

As more evidence of the cancer-fighting properties in fruits and vegetables is found, the more hope we have for fighting America's second deadliest disease.

June is National Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Month, a great time to start eating more delicious fruits and vegetables — at least five servings a day, as urged by organizations like the American Institute for Cancer Research, the National Cancer Institute, and the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

In the 1980s, fiber made news when researchers discovered it could help protect us from cancer by reducing our exposure to carcinogens in the digestive system.

Now, along with the fiber in whole grains, fruits, and vegetables, scientists are finding that vitamins, minerals and other elements in plant-based foods also have cancer-fighting abilities.

You may have heard of enzymes in high school biology class. They are among the food elements that scientists are discovering may protect us against cancer.

Other examples include sulphoraphane — found in broccoli, cabbage, and other vegetable s— that helps generate enzymes that protect against carcinogens.

And genistein, in soy foods and cruciferous vegetables, has discouraged tumor growth in experiments.

More familiar nutrients, like vitamin C and beta-carotene, also show cancer-fighting potential.

Put together, nutrient studies like these, many funded by the American Institute for Cancer Research, are indicating that the healthiest diet we can eat is rich in fruits and vegetables.

But does five servings a day sound like too much? It isn't really.

One serving equals only about half a cup of most vegetables (for leafy greens, one cup), or one whole medium-sized fruit or half a cup of small fruits like berries.

Even a three-fourth cup of juice counts (although it lacks the fiber of whole produce).

The recommended balance is three servings of vegetables and two servings of fruit each day.

So five a day really isn't that much. But if you're still worried about how to fit fruit and veggies into your daily schedule, here are some helpful tips.

r Keep fruit on hand at home and work for snacks or, when you're headed out the door, take a piece of fruit to eat on the way.

r Add raw, grated carrot or apple to ground meat dishes, or mix chopped vegetables with pasta or rice during the last few minutes of cooking.

r Keep bags of frozen, chopped vegetables and fruits on hand so you can use as much as you want per meal and not worry about spoilage.

r And take advantage of supermarket salad bars, which stock ready-to-eat vegetables and fruit salads of all kinds.

To order a free brochure with more than a dozen tasty fruit and vegetable recipes, send a self-addressed, stamped (52 cents postage) envelope to the American Institute for Cancer Research, Dept. FV, Washington, D.C. 20069.

Toll-free hot line answers diet, cancer questions

American Institute for Cancer Research

Can garlic help prevent cancer? Which vegetables have the most vitamins?

June is National Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Month, and with all the advice we're hearing about eating lots of fruits and vegetables each day, it's easy to wonder what the health benefits are — or why we can't just take a few vitamin pills instead.

Dial (800) 843-8114, and you'll reach the American Institute for Cancer Research nutrition hot line, a free public service of the American Institute for Cancer Research.

Today, with increasing scientific evidence about diet's link with cancer and heart disease, the hot line is an easy and reliable source for information about good nutrition.

Hot line dietitians research answers to callers' questions before phoning them back, using sources including federal agencies like the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the National Cancer Institute and studies on diet and cancer.

The dietitians, however, cannot give medical advice.

So can vitamin pills replace vegetables and fruits?

"No way," says hot line dietitian Clara Schneider. "We need the nutrients and fiber we get from vegetables and fruits. They're vital to a nutritious diet that protects us from diseases, including cancer."

Do you have a nutrition question? Call (800) 843-8114, Monday through Friday and a dietitian will call you back.

Loyd students discover science

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Loyd School students were given the opportunity to fire on the enemy, walk on the moon and soar with eagles — at least in their imaginations June 4.

The school's annual Discovery Day, according to principal Dr. Judy Gilliam, is designed to give students hands-on experience with practical science.

"What we try to do," she said, "is let the children see how various people work with and use science in their daily lives."

The all-day events included a presentation on space by Drs. Ernest and Dutchie Riggsby of Columbus College. The program included the display of some moonrocks.

An aquarium display, a natural history presentation and a "Birds of Prey" exhibit all featured animals, from water fowl and indigenous wildlife to an iguana, monitor lizard, python and American bald eagle.

The animal exhibits all included instruction on conservation and the environment. Dent Williams, local paleontologist, presented the natural history program. He displayed fossils and discussed some indigenous wildlife and man's impact on the animals' environment.

Steve Hoddy and Robby Sinkler, who conducted the Birds of Prey exhibit, explained to the students that an impact on one species of animal can affect the whole ecosystem.

"If we destroy what an animal eats, that animal will eventually die off," said Hoddy. "Then a beautiful, irreplaceable part of nature is gone forever."

The birds shown in the exhibit were a redtailed hawk, harris hawk, barn owl, screech owl, peregrine falcon and American bald eagle. The birds were allowed to fly, displaying their speed and maneuverability to the children.

Hoddy explained the habitat, anatomy and eating habits of all the birds and reptiles displayed. The children, who were allowed to touch the python, seemed especially impressed when the falcon swooped from a tall tree to take a small piece of meat from its trainer's glove.

Military exhibits included a UH-60 Blackhawk helicopter, a Bradley Fighting Vehicle, a road scraper and a Military Police Activity K-9 unit.

"I've never been to Discovery Day before," said Bequita Bell, a fifth-grade student. "So far my favorite is the Blackhawk helicopter."

"Discover Day seems to grow every year," said kindergarten teacher Cathy Joyner, founding coordinator of the annual event. "This is our fifth year, and I think this was the best ever."

DOC wins award

Directorate of Contracting

Fort Benning's Directorate of Contracting was named "Most Improved Contracting Activity" by Headquarters, Training and Doctrine Command, May 14.

This is part of the annual Barbara Jones Acquisition Award competition held each year by the Director of Acquisition, Col. O. Wayne Downhour, at Fort Monroe, Va.

The Directorate of Contracting at Fort Benning was recognized for dramatically improving management relations with employees and supported activities, according to John M. Machovec, director of Contracting.

DOC employees developed a "can do" attitude and improved customer relations, he said, and use of the team approach to resolve issues and provide recommendations was noted as having significantly improved these relationships.

In spite of many challenges, the directorate was able to eagerly develop and adopt new initiates in the acquisition arena, Machovec said.

These included the establishment of a viable credit card system and aggressive in-house training program for newly assigned personnel.

Machovec said this was a great honor for him since he has only been at Fort Benning since March 1992.

He attributed the recognition to the people in the directorate and their willingness to step outside their assigned roles.

He said they plan to win the award for the Best Contracting Activity in TRADOC next year.

BAYONET'S CLASSIFIEDS REALLY WORK!

ARMY FAMILY PLAN ISSUES

Garrison Commander's Office

More than 100 issues and questions were presented for action, comment or status to the garrison and installation staff at the Fort Benning Family Action Symposium recently.

The issues were broken down into functional areas and each directorate, activity or area was asked to respond.

The following are the questions posed to the Fort Benning Schools and Spencer High School.

Q: What's being done about improving the playground equipment around Dexter School? Additional equipment must be purchased and existing equipment must be repaired.

A: New playground equipment was purchased for Dexter School this year and has been installed. Included in that order were three new swing sets, a fitness center for intermediate grades children, a log truck fitness center for primary children, a merry-go-round and two new basketball goals.

The school staff believes that the existing equipment meets the needs of the school program.

Q: When will parents who live in Bouton Heights and Davis Hills be notified where their children will be attending school?

A: Changes in school attendance zones have resulted from the construction of the new Stowers Elementary School in the Bouton Heights and Davis Hill community.

Each of the schools that currently enrolls children involved in the change will publish the information in their parent newsletters this spring.

Notification of the change was published in The Bayonet Jan. 22 and in The Benning Leader Jan. 29. Another article concerning the change will run in The Bayonet in the near future.

Additionally, school information will be distributed this summer that advises parents of the attendance zones.

Q: What are the on-post guidelines covering the release of pupils to nonparents? How are they enforced?

A: Children are released by the school only to parents unless permission is granted by the parent to release the child to another individual.

Normally, permission is given in writing; although, in emergency situations when permission is granted by telephone by a parent known to the school, the child will be released.

School compliance with this policy is supervised by the superintendent and the staff.

Q: Are school counselors trained to deal with child abuse?

A: Counselors are well trained to deal with child abuse and do so on a regular basis.

All school personnel receive annual training on the reporting of child abuse.

Counselors are also taught to provide follow-up care as a part of the training to be a counselor.

Q: Is there a plan to expand Dexter School? It is too crowded for the number of students.

A: Action was taken on this issue with the construction of the new Stowers Elementary School that will open in August. With the opening of that school, the enrollment at Dexter School will decrease.

The change of the McDaniel Manor area to White School and the movement of the second class of gifted at each grade level, assuming that a second class is needed, to White will help with this decrease.

It is anticipated that no temporary classrooms will be required at Dexter School next year.

A: We do not have teachers that blatantly deviate from the Spencer Student Handbook. Teachers that do not enforce the rules have been dealt with accordingly.

A: Counselors in all Muscogee County schools are trained extensively to deal with child abuse.

This training is required for certification and is an on-going process as counselors are required to complete staff development courses yearly to maintain a high level of competence.

Q: How will security at Spencer change now that police officers will be present in schools?

Having a police officer in the school is just another way to keep undesirable characters from coming onto the campus.

The police are under the direction of the principal at all times and are simply there to lend assistance to problems of a criminal nature that may arise.

'Chatters' bar, grill opens

Directorate of Community Activities

If you are looking for a place to hold a casual meeting, visit with an old friend, or listen to some good music, Chatters Bar and Grill is the place to go.

Located in the Mall Bowling Center, Chatters has the perfect atmosphere for just about any occasion, according to Jim Cantrell, the bowling center's manager.

Closed off from the bowling center, it offers active duty and retired military personnel, Department of the Army civilians and family members the opportunity to unwind after a long day.

Chatters' bar is stocked with a variety of beverages. And bartenders can make mixed drinks ranging from screwdrivers to margaritas.

When the munchies or meal times come around, patrons can stay in their seats and order from Chatters' menu. The bar serves anything offered at the bowling center's snack bar.

Soon Chatters regulars will be able to dance when they visit the club. Within a year, Chatters will be expanded to include a disc jockey booth and a dance floor.

The laser beam juke box is stocked with a variety of the latest hits. Patrons can select anything from country to '50s tunes to rock 'n' roll.

Chatters is open when the Bowling Center is open: Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to 11 p.m.; Friday, 9 a.m. to 3 a.m.; Saturday, noon to 3 a.m.; and Sunday, 11 a.m. to 11 p.m.

For more information, contact Cantrell at 544-1985 or 682-7781.

Soldier show coming to post

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

The tenth annual performance of the U.S. Army Soldier Show will take place at the Sand Hill Theater June 26 at 2 and 8 p.m.

The 90-minute show, a presentation of the Army's Community and Family Support Center Entertainment Division, will feature a variety of acts including dancing, singing, skits and a laser light show.

Music selections will include country, rock 'n' roll, patriotic and rap. Entrance to the performances are free, but 800 seats are reserved for soldiers of the Infantry Training Brigade for the 2 p.m. show.

Many open seats will be available at the 8 p.m. show. No tickets will be distributed, so all seats are available on a first-come, first-serve basis.

The 26 members of the crew and cast are all active-duty soldiers gathered from Europe, Korea, Alaska, Panama and throughout the country.

These soldiers are normally cooks, truck drivers, medics or mechanics, but they were selected for casting after auditioning for the show.

The soldiers/entertainers will travel more than 15,000 miles and visit more than 50 Army installations across America and Europe during their tour.

The show's birthplace was the 1984 Association of the United States Army convention where the first show was performed. The show went on to perform at the National Theater for President Ronald Reagan's second inauguration.

The show has evolved into an international, Army-wide tradition of entertainment.

COMMISSARY CORNER

Fort Benning Commissary

Did you know that you can make your shopping at the Commissary much easier and faster by using the Plan-O-Gram.

The Plan-O-Gram was developed by Larry Bentley, Commissary officer, and Mike Waksmonski, deputy Commissary officer, and it is basically a map of the store by aisle showing what is stocked in each aisle. The reverse side of the Plan-O-Gram is a alphabetic listing of all major items including their aisle location. It also has the store hours and a handy telephone reference for all Commissary departments.

To save time, the patron can make out his or her shopping list and put coupons in the same order as the Commissary.

Plan-O-Grams are available at the identification stand or just ask a member of the Commissary staff for one.

Child safety

A trip to the Commissary with Mom and Dad may be a treat for children, but the Commissary can be a dangerous place.

The Commissary has had incidents of children falling into the freezers, infants in infant carriers have been placed on checkout stands and fallen off.

Running in the aisles and running into a fully loaded shopping cart can cause serious injury and standing in a shopping cart is an accident waiting to happen.

A trip to the Commissary can be a enjoyable trip for the children and the parents if safety is practiced.

Dental plan covers orthodontics

U.S. Army Dental Activity

Orthodontic coverage is paid differently than other kinds of dental services because orthodontic treatment usually extends over many months. The Delta Dependents Dental Plan makes an initial payment for approved orthodontic claims after bands or other appliances are placed in the mouth (the "banding fee"). After the initial payment, the plan makes monthly progress payments over the duration of treatment.

• Orthodontic care is payable at 50 percent (with a 50 percent patient copayment) of the allowed fee. The allowed fee for a Delta dentist is the submitted fee or his or her usual fee (up to the Delta customary charge), whichever is less.

The allowable fee for a non-Delta dentist is the actual fee charged or the regional prevailing fee (the midpoint for dentists' fees for the procedure in the region), whichever is less.

• There is a lifetime orthodontic maximum payable by the plan of $1,200 per patient — the most the plan can pay for any one patient's orthodontic care.

• Orthodontic coverage and payments cease the month after the patient's 19th birthday.

If you go to a non-Delta dentist, you will have to pay any difference between Delta's allowed amount and the non-Delta dentist's fee.

• The initial banding fee payable by Delta is 30 percent of the total amount payable.

• The remaining 70 percent of the total amount is payable in monthly progress payments, based on the estimated duration of treatment.

• The patient must be enrolled during each month for which payment is made.

• Delta's orthodontic payments and schedule are based on calculation of initial and monthly progress payments allowed by the plan. The patient's payment amounts and schedule of payments, as agreed to by patient and dentist, may be different from Delta's payment schedule.

Predetermination

Before treatment begins, it is a good idea to request predetermination of the dental plan coverage for orthodontic treatment. Predetermination gives both the patient and the dentist a written estimate of payments.

Delta customer service can also help answer questions about orthodontic payments. If the treatment began before the patient became eligible for Delta Dependents Dental Plan orthodontic coverage, refer to the section on "in-process" orthodontic payments below.

'In-process' orthodontics

Delta Dependents Dental Plan orthodontic coverage takes effect the first of the month after the active duty member enrolls his or her dependents or April 1, 1993, whichever is later. If the patient was not enrolled when the treatment began or if the treatment began before April 1, the banding fee is not payable by Dependents Dental Plan, but some or all monthly progress payments might be payable, depending on enrollment dates.

The total amount payable is prorated according to the remaining portion of the total scheduled treatment, as of the eligibility date.

To ensure that each patient receives the largest amount possible toward in-process orthodontic care, these cases are calculated differently for routine orthodontic claims.

Once the patient becomes eligible for the plan, the dentist should submit a claim for the in-process orthodontic treatment, including diagnosis, treatment plan, total fee, banding or appliance placement date, and the estimated total duration of treatment. Delta then calculates the amount the plan will pay for the remaining treatment in monthly payments.

The dental explanation of benefits indicates the amount the plan will cover for the remainder of the in-process treatment.

Example

A 12-year-old patient, who is already enrolled in the expanded Delta Dependents Dental Plan but has not filed a previous orthodontic claim begins orthodontic treatment scheduled over 24 months. The total allowed fee is $3,400.

Delta calculates payment as follows:

1. Multiply allowed fee by coverage level ($3,400 x 50 percent). $1,700

2. Take lower of balance ($1,700) or ortho maximum ($1,200). This is the "total amount payable." $1,200

3. Initial (banding) fee ($1,200 x 30 percent). $360

4. Subtract initial payment from total amount payable ($1,200-$360). $840

5. Monthly progress payment ($840 divided by 23) $37

(Note: the final monthly payment compensates for any rounding off; in this case, the final monthly payment would be $26.) Total patient copayment: $2,200

(This example is intended only to show how payments are calculated: actual fees, duration of treatment and payments will vary case by case.)

New child care center to open

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

School age children 5 to 12 years will have another option for child care on post beginning Monday with the opening of the Santa Fe Child Development Center.

Located next to Dental Clinic No. 1 on Santa Fe Road, the center will open to other age groups July 15, according to Jennifer Williams, acting child development coordinator. At this time, no dedication date has been set for the facility, which will have a capacity for 198 children.

A phone call can get someone on the waiting list, which ranges from two to eight months. Older children take less time. Infants to pre toddlers are on the longer end of time.

As of Jan. 2, 1990, a child care card is required in order to enroll in child centers on post. Parents may obtain these cards at the central office, Building 11302, on Custer Road, and children must have an up-to-date shot record and current health assessment.

Currently, there are four other facilities open: Tot Town, McGraw Child Development Center, Main Post Child Development Center and Custer Terrace Child Development Center.

In addition to the centers, quarters-based or family child care is another alternative.

This is in-home care provided by an adult family member occupying government quarters. These care givers are trained and certified by the Office of Child Development Services. More information on these programs can be obtained by calling 687-4038.

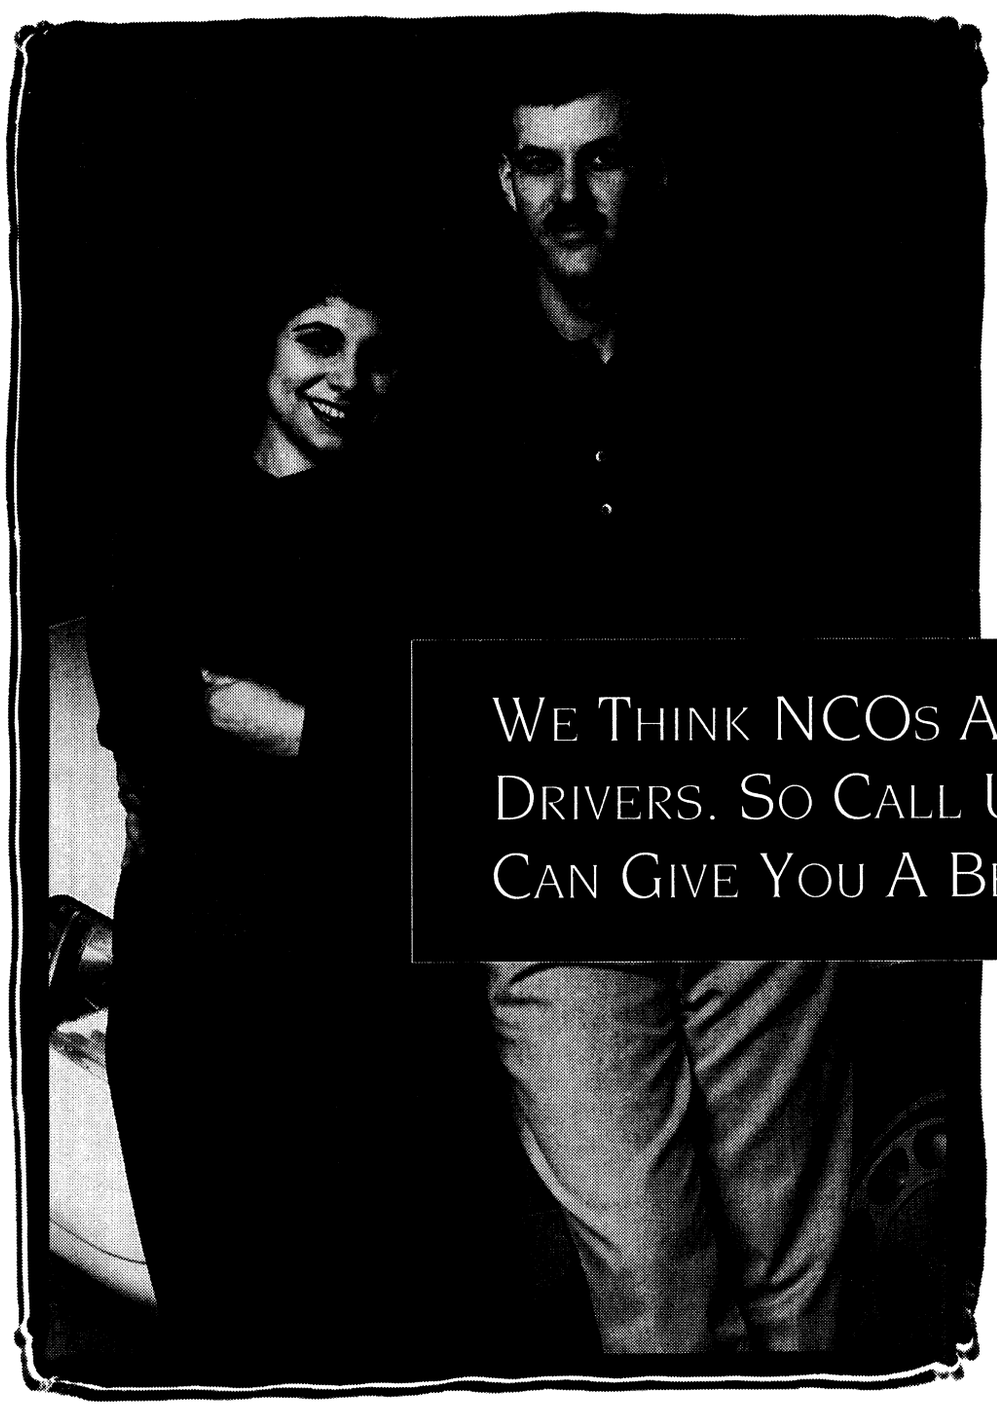
Test platoon reunites



USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Airborne Test Platoon's reunion at Fort Benning began Wednesday and ends today.

While on post, platoon members presented parachutist badges to soldiers graduating from the Basic Airborne Course. The ceremony was at the Airborne Walk on Eubanks Field Thursday at 10:30 a.m.

Test platoon members will also participate in the presentation of black hats and Master Parachutist Badges to airborne instructors of the 1st Battalion, 507th Infantry (Airborne), 11th Infantry Regiment today at 9 a.m. The site is located at the bleacher area on Eubanks Field near the C-47 Airplane. The presentations will be part of the 507th's Organization Day opening ceremony.

The Airborne Test Platoon, with the first paratroopers in the U.S. Army, was activated July 1, 1940 at Fort Benning with one officer and 48 enlisted soldiers. They made their first jump Aug. 13 and when inactivated Oct. 6, formed the nucleus of the 501st Parachute Battalion.

Anyone can offer you an auto insurance policy. But at Family Protection Plus,SM we believe NCOs tend to be better drivers. So we provide highly competitive rates on policies geared to the realities of NCO family life.

For example, when you're transferred, your coverage follows you to most of the states where military installations are located. All it takes is a toll-free call, and we'll handle the details.

You'll also find our other features very attractive.*Like special savings if you keep your car in a storage facility while you're on a TDY. And a waiver of deductible if someone in your household has an accident while you're deployed in a war or combat zone.

WE THINK NCOS ARE BETTER DRIVERS. SO CALL US TO SEE IF WE CAN GIVE YOU A BETTER RATE.

If that seems like a sensible approach, there's a good reason. Family Protection Plus, created by Academy Life Insurance Company, was designed specifically for NCOs and their families. And it's recommended by NCOA®.

So if you'd like us to quote you a rate, call us. We'll be glad to put you on the road to a more sensible car insurance policy.

Patch School closes doors

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

A ceremony was held at Alexander M. Patch Elementary School June 3 to commemorate its closing to elementary school students.

The formal ceremony began as the colors were presented by the 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment.

After the welcome and remarks by Miriam Aiken, Patch teacher, and Rolla Baumgartner, school superintendant, the children of Patch school entertained the crowd with a rendition of "The World is a Rainbow" as Norma Green played the piano.

"The closing of Patch Elementary School is a significant event in the history of Fort Benning," said White. "This school was built more than 60 years ago in 1931. As the oldest of four Fort Benning Schools, the closing marks an end of an era, just as the opening of the new Stowers School marks the beginning of an era.

"The closing of any institution such as Patch School is an important part of our history and it is fitting that today we honor it by this ceremony," he said.

Other speakers included retired Command Sgt. Maj. Edward Garrett, the former post sergeant major, and Jean Phillips, parent teacher organization president.

Patch School was named in 1959 after the Distinguished Service Cross recipient Capt. Alexander M. Patch Jr., who received the award posthumously for action against the enemy northeast of Sailly, France, Aug. 27, 1944.

Patch was the son of Lt. Gen. Alexander M. Patch, commander of the 7th U.S. Army in World War II.

Also, William H. Wilbur School will be closing its doors to students at the end of the year. A farewell tea was in its cafeteria May 18, where several teachers, principals and superintendents gathered.

Established in 1951, Wilbur School has served the children of Fort Benning for 42 years.

The school building will become the district offices for the Fort Benning school system at a later time.

Wilbur students created a video of the history of their school that was shown to students and staff on the last day of school Wednesday.

Seminars target training

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning's 18th annual Federal Employees' Week, sponsored by the Fort Benning Federal Womens' Program Committee, offered a variety of seminars providing information on personal and professional development.

The theme for the week, which started Monday and ends today, was "Total Quality of Life for Federal Workers."

To help improve employees' quality of life, seminars and workshops were offered on subjects such as coping with job stress, planning for retirement, fitness, health and wellness and improving communication skills.

Duncan focused on the appropriateness of wardrobe and discussed the importance of making a good first impression.

"Research shows people who are well dressed and well groomed earn more money, are promoted faster and are more confident," Duncan said.

"When you feel confident in yourself, you project a more professional presence," she said, "and others see you as competent."

She said each person is the best judge of what is appropriate for their environment, but she gave some general guidelines for looking professional.

She warned against getting caught up in fads, saying classic styles or updated classics are best.

For women she recommended matched skirt-suit sets or unconstructed jackets with skirts, and closed-toe pumps with no higher than three-inch heels.

For men she recommended two-piece suits or jackets with contrasting trousers for more casual environments.

The best colors, Duncan said, are black or grey, blue, beige or cream, burgundy or red and brown or taupe.

Federal Women's Program Manager Winifred B. Torain said she was very pleased with participation in the seminars.

"People attending really seem to be enjoying all this information — that's the most important thing," Torain said.

"We looked at the kind of training and development employees have been getting, and tried to offset that here with information the employees would not normally get," she said.

Civilian personnel who attended the seminars were excused without charge of leave pending mission requirements.

"We really appreciate managers and supervisors allowing people to come," Torain said.

All of the speakers, who donated their time as volunteers with no cost to the government, she said, "have been great."

"This is the 18th time we have done this, and I still learn something new every time," Torain said.

The last workshop, "Communicating with teens and Abusive Behavior," will be 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. today in Classroom 20, Infantry Hall.

Education Center has it all

Army Learning Center

Free self-paced courses are available at the Soldiers' Plaza and Kelley Hill Army Learning Centers, Buildings 2611 and 9005.

Introduction to computers, computer literacy, basic programming, effective writing, high school GED preparation, college level test preparation, speed reading, reading improvement, math improvement and English improvement are just a few of the free courses available.

All courses are free and self-paced. Computer literacy, English as a second language, keyboarding, blueprint reading, GED preparation, algebra, geometry, BASIC programming and many, many other courses are offered.

In addition to active duty and civilian members, family members are eligible to use the center. Certificates are provided for completing most courses. Family members less than 14 years old must be accompanied by an adult.

Many courses are available over the Cybis, formerly Plato, mainframe system and can be accessed from your home or work computer.

Bring a replacement disk to exchange for your access disk. An instruction handout is also provided.

The Georgia Career Information System has also been installed at the Soldiers' Plaza learning center.

This computer-based career and education information system is free to Fort Benning personnel and assists personnel in making informed occupational and educational choices.

English as a second language for Spanish speakers is available in the Soldiers' Plaza learning center. A Spanish- speaking staff member is available for assistance.

This course, available on the Cybis computer-based instruction system, is approximately 64 hours long and is divided into two separate courses of instruction.

The Soldiers' Plaza Army Learning Center is open Monday through Thursday from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and Saturday, 8 a.m. to noon.

The Kelley Hill learning center is open 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Call Soldiers' Plaza at 545-1436 or Kelley Hill at 544-2603 for more information.

COMMUNITY BRIEFS

Adults in college — The Adult Re-Entry Program will sponsor a free seminar June 24 at 7 p.m. titled "Adults in College: Welcome to Columbus College." The seminar will provide answers to the questions most asked by adult students who return to college. For more information, call Linda Gabrielson at 568-2330.

Asthma Day Camp — Registration is now being accepted for the American Lung Association's Asthma Day Camp, which is open to any child with asthma between 6 and 12.

The camp will be at Columbus College July 12 to 16. Children will have the opportunity to do regular day camp activities and will learn about asthma.

For more information, call 569-1098.

Summer matinees — The Main Post Theater is showing summer matinees at 10 a.m. every other Monday. The next showing is "A Cop and a Half" (PG) June 21. The cost is $1.50 for adults and $1 for children. See the movie schedule in The Bayonet weekly for listings.

School examinations — It is mandatory that any child entering Georgia schools for the first time be given a dental, eye and hearing examination

The results of the exam will be entered on a Georgia Department of Human Resources Certification of Ear, Eye and Dental Examination, which must be presented to the school upon enrollment.

For a screening appointment, call 544-3350 at Martin Army Community Hospital or your county health department. Also, the child's immunization record must be up to date.

Parents should take the immunization record to the hospital or health department at the time of the screening exam.

For more information, call Cathy Hatfield at 544-1503.

Cardiac, diabetic support group — A meeting of the cardiac and diabetic support group will be June 21 in the Baugh Conference Room on the second floor of Martin Army Community Hospital at 6 p.m.

For more information, call Thomas E. Valitzski at 561-3077.

Blood drive — There will be a blood drive June 18 in Classroom 5, Infantry Hall, Building 4, from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Blood donations are down during the summer as people go on vacation and children get out of school, according to Deitra Russell, American Red Cross assistant station manager. Your support will mean a lot, she said.

Child care referrals — Need information about child care? The Columbus Child Care Resource and Referral Center is a nonprofit, free service provided to Muscogee County residents and employees and Fort Benning personnel.

Referrals made are to child-care facilities and care givers in Muscogee County, officials said.

For parents, referrals are made to licensed and registered child-care facilities depending upon stated needs and preferences; also information is provided on quality child care.

For child-care facilities, free training for care givers is provided, along with the most current information and resources on many aspects of child care.

For more information, call 569-3109. Hours of operation are Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Cub Scout day camp — The Fort Benning Cub Scout Day Camp will be June 21 through 25 at the Harmony Church Recreation Center. All boys ages 7 to 10 are invited to join the activities each day from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Activities will include games, crafts, nature, swimming, archery and marksmanship. The cost is $25 through today. Late entry fee is $30.

Columbus College — Summer quarter at Columbus College begins June 23. Interested students should visit the Fort Benning office in Soldiers' Plaza, Building 2603, or call 689-8668 or 545-1085 for application deadlines.

Citizenship classes — Fort Benning's International Wives' Club is offering free citizenship classes. For more information, call Olga Kelly at 568-3374 or 687-6471.

La Leche meeting — The La Leche League meets the second Tuesday of each month from 10 a.m. to noon and 7 to 8:30 p.m. at St. John United Methodist Church, 6507 Moon Road, Columbus. For information, call 563-0684 or 568-7315.

First steps for expectant parents: Wednesday and June 22, 6 to 8 p.m., $15.

Lifeguard instructor class: Saturday and Sunday, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., $86.

Baby-sitting for youth: June 19, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., $15.

Cardiopulmonary resuscitation: June 23, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., $25.

For registration information, call 545-5194 or 545-5117.

Summer tutorial program — Eastway Elementary School on Buena Vista Road will offer free classes emphasizing reading and math in grades two through eight, 8 to 10 a.m. beginning June 21 and ending July 16.

Register at Eastway Tuesday through June 18 from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m.

Volunteer teachers and aides are needed. Volunteers may register at Eastway Tuesday through June 18 from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m. Aides are defined as high school graduates, seniors, juniors and college students. Teachers are needed in reading, math and other fields.

Engineers to meet — The Society of American Military Engineers will be Thursday at 11:30 a.m. at the Fort Benning Officers' Club. Dr. Seward Smith, chief of the Fort Benning field unit of the U.S. Army Research Institute for the behavioral and social sciences will speak about "Night Vision Research."

Youth registrations — Youth Services soccer, football and cheerleader registration will be June 16 to Aug. 6, Monday to Friday, from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

The soccer program will be open to children ages 4 to 15. Flag football is open to 6- to 8-year-olds, and tackle football is for 9- to 15-year olds with a maximum weight of 160 pounds. Cheerleading is open to 6- to 15-year-olds.

Parents may register children at the Youth Activities Center, Building 1056, located on McIver Street. Tackle football players must be present at the time of registration.

Practices will begin Aug. 16 and the first games will be Sept. 11. The season will run from Sept. 11 through Oct. 30.

Also, coaches for the upcoming season are needed. Anyone interested may call 545-3070 or 545-3913.

Summer camp — Youth Services is offering camp throughout the summer from 8 a.m. to noon each day. Each week a new camp will start. Children 6 to 12 can attend for $25 per week. Activities include field trips, sports and fitness, creative activities, social interaction and snacks.

The schedule is as follows:

- Week one - June 21 to 25.
- Week two - June 28 to July 2.
- Week three - July 6 to 9.
- Week four - July 12 to 16.
- Week five - July 19 to 23.
- Week six - July 26 to 30.
- Week seven - Aug. 2 to 6.
- Week eight - Aug. 9 to 13.

Operation transition — Operation transition is a Department of Defense outplacement system available to separating service members and their spouses to assist them in the civilian job search process.

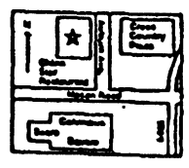
The Defense Outplacement Referral System and the Transition Bulletin Board are two automated programs that link defense job seekers with potential employers nationwide.

For more information, call the Transition Assistance Office at 545-4892, or come by Building 2617, Soldiers' Plaza.

Boy Scout summer camp — Four weeks of summer camp for Boy Scouts will be June 20 to 26, June 27 to July 3, July 18 to 24 and July 25 to 31. Boy Scouts will go with their troops to spend a week at Camp Pine Mountain just outside West Point, Ga.

Many Scouting activities will be offered, including canoeing, sailing, swimming, hiking, fishing, nature studies, handicraft, sports and more. The $110 fee includes all meals and activities for the week. Contact your local Boy Scout troop for more information.

Swimming lessons — Registration is under way for swimming lessons for youth 5 to 18. The two-week sessions cost $20 per student and are limited to 20 students.



The sessions are as follows: June 21 to July 2, July 6 to 16, July 19 to 30 and Aug. 2 to 13.

EO teaches OCS a lesson

Equal Opportunity Office

The training, requested by Lt. Col. Kevin Shea, 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment commander, was deemed necessary in light of the many changes occurring in the Army today, said Sgt. 1st Class Jennifer McNeil, equal opportunity adviser for the 11th Infantry Regiment.

Shea said he wanted to ensure that cadre members were in tune with current issues pertaining to equal opportunity in the Army.

"These men and women are training the future leaders of our Army," said Shea. "They must be knowledgeable of the issues and concerns they'll have to teach OCS students about leadership challenges."

McNeil helped to organize the class with Shea. Subject areas covered during the training included objectives of the equal opportunity program, racism, extremist groups, sexism, and institutional discrimination. All questions were openly brought up in small group discussions.

"This type of training is beneficial to everyone, especially leaders," McNeil said.

According to McNeil, the open, small group discussion in the classroom helps leaders understand some of the issues or concerns their subordinates often face. It is the leaders who must resolve these types of discriminatory problems when they arise, Shea said.

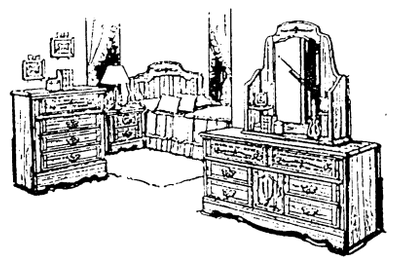
Benning soldier makes Sports Hall of Fame

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Maj. David W. Munyon, battalion executive officer with Headquarters and Headquarters Company at the School of the Americas, was one of five athletes and a coach selected for Rowan College of New Jersey's spring induction into their Sports Hall of Fame.

According to a Rowan College sports information release, Munyon, a 1979 graduate, was all-conference in cross country for four straight seasons and held several school records.

Munyon earned eight varsity letters in cross country and track and was the first cross country runner to earn All-America honors at the college, according to the release.



Munyon, who was a member of the Spanish National Honor Society and Sigma Delta Pi, was featured in the 1975 edition of Outstanding College Athletes of America and received the George C. Marshall Award as one of the nation's top ROTC graduates.

Munyon, who lives on Fort Benning with his wife, Sharon, has been awarded the Meritorious Service Medal, Army Commendation Medal and the Army Achievement Medal.

He has attended Ranger School, Airborne School and Pathfinder School, as well as the Infantry Officer Basic and Advanced courses and the U.S. Army Command and General Staff College.

10-month deployment ends

498th Medical Company

Fourteen soldiers of the 498th Medical Company (Air Ambulance) comprised a forward support medical evacuation team that deployed to Kuwait April 2, 1992.

The return of this team May 29 concluded a 10-month deployment which began in early August and involved more than 50 members of the unit.

Soldiers from the 498th Medical Company deployed as part of a field training exercise intended to demonstrate the United States' commitment to the security and stability of the Persian Gulf region, according to officials.

Crews provided real-world medical evacuations and training support for a 2,400-man joint task force that was conducting joint, combined and special operations.

The crews from the 498th were under the operational control of the Army Readiness, Training and Security-Kuwait; and the Joint Task Force-Kuwait. Crews also trained with other government agencies in preparation and support of former President George Bush's recent visit to Kuwait.

The deployment was a rare and outstanding training opportunity to conduct desert operations under a wide range of scenarios, according to Maj. Kenneth Crook, the unit's commander.

The medical evacuation crews evacuated more than 75 patients and flew more than 125 (360 total) hours of evatuation and training support—most under night vision goggles.

They also maintained an exceptionally high operational readiness rate while in the austere desert environment, said Crook.

The 498th Medical Company frequently deploys to provide real-world evacuation and training support throughout the continental United States and around the world.

Crew members and support personnel departed for Kuuait following a four-month deployment to support Joint Task Force-Bravo in the Honduras.

Col. Phillip Anderson, commander of the 36th Engineer Group was on hand to welcome the soldiers home.

Anderson said that the no other medical evacuation company maintains the high operational tempo sustained by the 498th Medical Company and as a result, the 498th is one of the best trained and combat ready units in the Army.

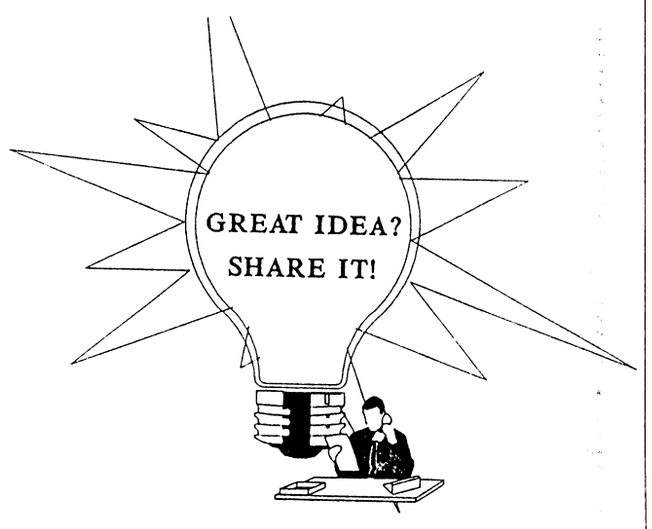
TRADOC commander: Give me a call

TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — The commander of the Training and Doctrine Command, Gen. Fredrick M. Franks Jr., will use a telephone idea line to obtain fresh input from "our most valuable resource — our soldiers."

The idea line begins a 30-day trial period July 1, coinciding with the command's 20th anniversary, to determine TRADOC soldiers' and civilians' response to the program. If it is successful, the program will be expanded Army wide and will even be accessible by personal computer.

Although ideas on any Army subject are acceptable, the focus is on those relating to TRADOC's points of main effort — doctrine, training, leadership, organizational excellence, modernization and soldier support.



The phone numbers of the idea line are (800) 445-IDEA (4332), (804) 727-IDEA, or DSN 680-IDEA. An automated answering system will accept calls continuously, with directions on how to record suggestions.

"Today's Army is confronting great changes and challenges and we need to take full advantage of every resource we possess to meet those challenges. Most of all we need to leverage our most valuable resource, our soldiers," Franks said.

"Throughout American military history, the individual soldier has been a traditional source of innovative and imaginative ideas. They are often our best problem solvers.

"We successfully tapped the collective wisdom of our Army in past programs, including our new Field Manual 100-5, "Operations," and we are seeking to do the same thing here," Franks said.

The general hopes soldiers, NCOs, officers and civilian employees will take full advantage of the opportunity the new idea hot line provides. Their ideas will be heard and feedback given.

"Every caller who leaves their name and address will have a postcard mailed to them within two working days from the time they make a call," said Maj. Art Rousseau, who oversees operation of the idea line. "The postcard will tell them which TRADOC headquarters element is investigating the idea.

"We want soldiers to know that their suggestions are being seriously considered," he said.

As the Army architect of the future, TRADOC has continuously sought input on a wide range of issues affecting the Army. In the past it has been done largely through communications and visits with staffs of major commanders.

"With today's technology and quality soldier, we can broaden our source of ideas greatly," Rousseau said. "It's a matter of teamwork. Bottom line — both soldiers and Army civilians can let their ideas be known to those who can best use them in meeting the challenges of change confronting our Army."

WORLD WAR II — A LOOK BACK

50 years ago this week ...

• In Western Europe, Britain's Royal Air Force Bomber Command, commanded by Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur Harris, intensified its 'Battle of the Ruhr' campaign initiating a 20-day effort in which it dropped more than 15,000 tons of bombs on cities throughout Germany. The RAF directed its first such raid against Dusseldorf, expending more than 2,000 tons of munitions before moving on to other target cities to include Bochum, Oberhausen, and Cologne.

• The RAF's raids came in the wake of the issuance of the Pointblank Directive by Britain and America's Joint Chiefs of Staff. The directive outlined the formal priorities and goals of the Allied air forces, while allowing both countries the flexibility to execute the given tasks in a manner best suited to their tactical and strategic beliefs. Thus, the directive prompted the British to intensify their area bombing campaign, while the Americans pursued their precision bombing philosophy.

• In the Mediterranean, Allied forces steadily advanced towards the Italian garrison on Pantelleria, motivating its 11,000 defenders to capitulate without resistance. The seemingly quick surrender followed a month of constant pounding by Allied aircraft which dropped more than 5,000 tons of bombs on the island.

• At Fort Benning, professional trainers contributed to the war effort by teaching carrier pigeons to act as messengers for Allied forces throughout the world.

Somalia recovery challenges 43rd Engineers

By Allen C. Estes
43rd Engineer Battalion

War is hell — but recovery is worse, according to the 43rd Engineer Battalion. Even though the battalion has been back from Somalia for more than two months, they remain deeply immersed in the recovery process.

"The vehicles have trickled in by rail car after being offloaded from ships in Charleston and Bayonne," said Lt. Col. Larry Davis, commander of the 43rd.

"We drove the vehicles hard in Somalia; parts were often not available and the equipment took a beating at port and on the ships. Every truck, trailer and piece of construction equipment needs a technical inspection, parts ordered and mechanics to install the parts. It's definitely a challenge."

The recovery process was made more challenging with the downloading, inventorying, and turn-in of more than 250 equipment containers. The 20- and 40-foot containers, each with their own chassis, holds the unit's tools, supplies and field property as well as the leftover construction material sent back from Somalia.

"Because of the budget crunch when we returned it was critical that we assembled all the construction material and tried to turn as much as possible back to vendors for credit," said Maj. Kevin Wall, battalion executive officer. "This involved downloading it all into a separate building, inventorying it, separating it, banding it and trying to convert it into money that we can return to the government."

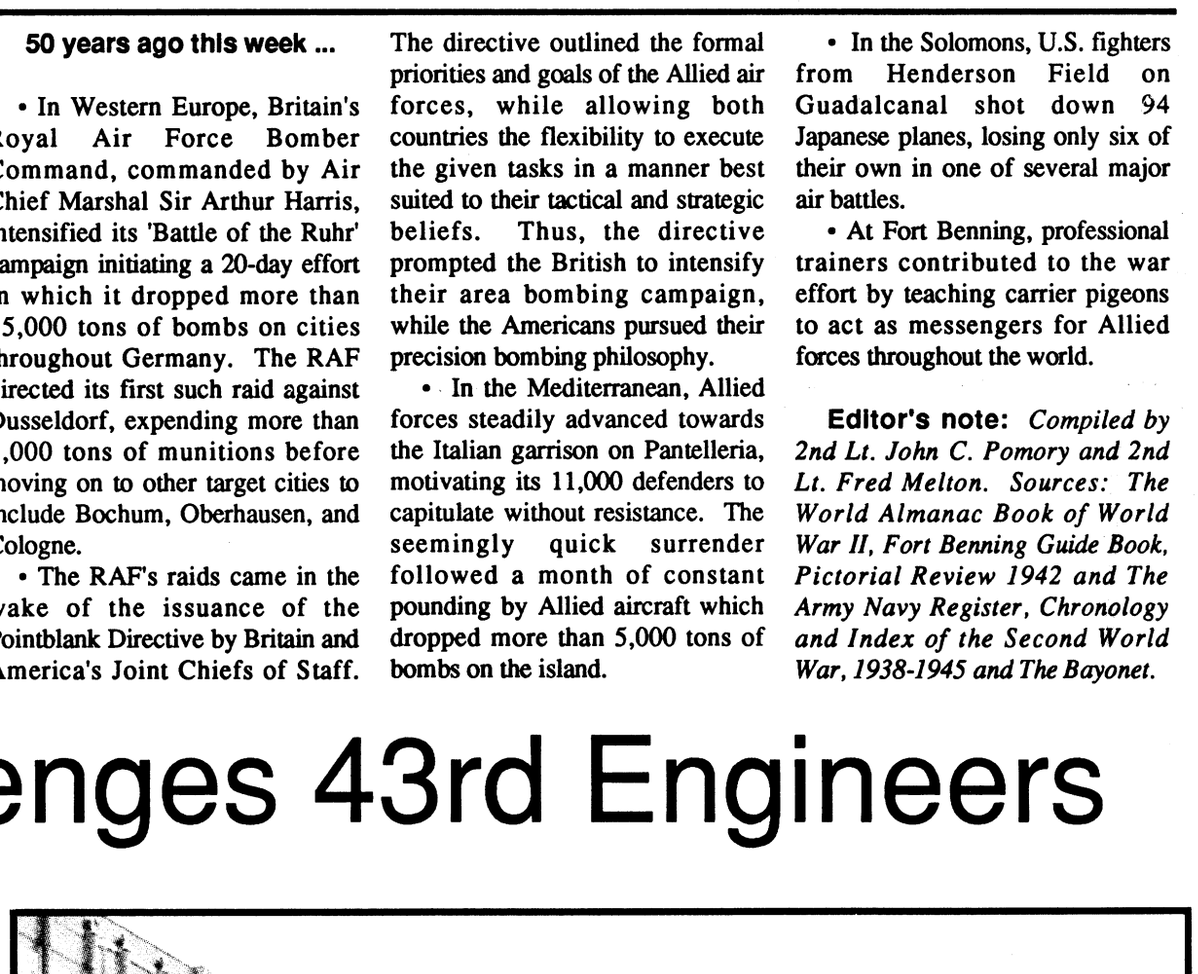
Upon return from Somalia, the recovery process began with the obvious critical tasks of reopening the barracks, returning privately owned vehicles to soldiers who had stored them with the unit, cleaning and accounting for all weapons, and transferring property back from the rear detachment to the returning unit.

"A well organized rear detachment is critical to the smooth transition back," said Davis. "We learned a long time ago the importance of leaving good, reliable people behind to look after the families and represent the unit's best interests in our absence."

With the help of post agencies, the battalion completed a reverse soldier readiness preparation where soldiers could again adjust pay allotments, make dental appointments, get new ID cards, and update their records. Each soldier was required to give a blood sample due to the high risk of disease in Somalia and everyone continued to take malaria pills for the four weeks following their return.

"Everything else associated with recovery depends on the arrival of the equipment", said Sgt. David Hubert, the battalion training noncommissioned officer. "You can't conduct inventories, clean tools, reestablish training records, set up computers or repair equipment until the vehicles and equipment containers return to Fort Benning."

As a result, the units initially focused on individual training such as common task testing and reestablishing a physical fitness program.



Once the equipment began arriving, the battalion sent teams to the various ports to assist in accountability and offloading the ships. Company A has devoted the last two months to receiving equipment at the rail head and transporting it back to the motor pool.

"A lot of equipment had to be towed on the ship, off the ship, onto the railcar, and dragged back to the motor pool," said 1st Lt. Brett Bowman, executive officer for Company A. "We saw everything from flat tires and dead batteries to crushed quarter panels and broken windows. It was a mess."

Most of the basic recovery is now complete.

"We are definitely looking forward," said Davis. "The companies have reestablished routine operations, training schedules and schools are on track, and when we can get our equipment running, we look forward to completing some critical construction projects on Fort Benning."

"The equipment remains the biggest challenge," said Walls. "It is old and after deployments to Saudi Arabia, Costa Rica, New Mexico, Florida for Hurricane Andrew and Somalia, some of it is ready for the junk heap."

Allen C. Estes

The battalion is working to get the troop construction program moving again.

"We have some great projects in the planning stage," said Capt. Al Reed, battalion construction officer. "In concert with Directorate of Public Works, we are hoping to complete construction on Red Cloud Range, two heavy equipment transport truck ramps, and some squad bays for the rangers in Dahlonega before the end of the year."

The 43rd is currently working to complete the Infantry Training Brigade Welcome Center, Custer Terrace Chapel, and the Eubanks field latrines — projects in progress prior to the Somalia deployment.

"I would like to stay home for awhile," said Davis. "We have deployed a lot, which is hard on our soldiers and their families. I will be content to put our talents to work serving the Fort Benning community."

30th AG changes hands

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Command of the 30th Adjutant General Battalion, Infantry Training Brigade, will change hands June 17 during a 9 a.m. ceremony on Wetherby Field in Harmony Church.

Lt. Col. Bobby A. Little, formerly the chief of the Conference Team, office of the Chief of Staff of the Army, will take command from Lt. Col. Thomas M. Brady.

Brady took command of the 30th AG Battalion in June 1991. He is a Distinguished Military Graduate of the ROTC program at Niagara University in 1972, and holds a master of science degree in personnel management from Pepperdine University and has completed the U.S. Army Command and General Staff College.

Brady's awards include the Defense Meritorious Service Medal, three awards of the Meritorious Service Medal, three awards of the Army Commendation Medal, the Army Achievement Medal and the Parachutist Badge. Prior to assuming command of the 30th AG Battalion, he organized and later commanded the U.S. Army Infantry Center Replacement Center in support of Operation Desert Storm. He has held numerous command and staff assignments.

He and his wife, Alison, have five children

Little was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Adjutant General Corps, graduating from Hampton Institute in 1975. He served as an infantryman early in his career with the 172nd Light Infantry Brigade in Alaska and the 101st Airborne Division. He has held a number of command and staff positions both in the United States and overseas, including command of the 20th Replacement Detachment at Fort Campbell, Ky. During Operation Desert Storm, he commanded the 257th Personnel Service Company, 5th Personal Group, and deployed to Kuwait with that unit.

Among his awards and decorations are the Legion of Merit, the Bronze Star, Meritorious Service Medal with one oak leaf cluster, the Army Commendation Medal with one oak leaf cluster, the Expert Infantryman Badge, the Parachutist Badge and the Air Assault Badge.

He and his wife, Sheila Rene, have five children.

NTC presents challenge for 3rd Brigade soldiers

By Nicholas A. Minecci
22nd Mobile Public Affairs Detachment

FORT IRWIN, Ca. — Training for war — that's why the 24th Infantry Division's (mechanized) 3rd Brigade came to the National Training Center for Exercise Desert Hammer V, April 26 through May 23.

Third Brigade soldiers endured not only hot, windy days under the Mojave Desert's sun, but rocky, hilly terrain that can be hard to navigate.

Adding to that the Opposing Force, considered by some the best maneuver warfare unit in the world, the soldiers were pushed to their limits, testing their ability to fight a war.

Col. Robert J. St. Onge Jr., 3rd Brigade commander, said the NTC offers a chance for soldiers to conduct training on a larger scale than they get at their home stations.

Soldiers deployed from Fort Stewart, Ga., Fort Lewis, Wa., Fort Drum, N.Y. and Fort Bragg, N.C. to complete the 3rd Brigade combat team,.

The first troops arrived April 19 to coordinate the arrival of the brigade's main body of troops. By April 26, almost all of the soldiers had arrived, according to St. Onge.

After three days spent drawing equipment and ensuring they were ready to withstand the two weeks of punishment they would get in the field, the soldiers loaded their gear and moved into the maneuver box, where the rotation is split in to phases.

Maj. Don Carnes, Brigade logistics officer, described the first phase of "force-on-force" action as "two groups pitted against each other in simulated battle. The two forces converge ... and the winner is whoever has the most men alive at the end."

All soldiers used the Multiple Integrated Laser Engagement System to record near-misses and kills, according to Carnes.

"This gives the feeling of realism without the danger,' said Staff St. Robert Carter, a tank commander with 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment.

"Here, the soldiers get the reality of combat," said Maj. Ronald Robinson, a Forward Support Operations combat trainer here. "There is an uncooperative enemy, not just a target sitting there.

"An uncooperative enemy causes (the soldier) to think before acting. It adds that extra element of realism, and that's very important for training," he added.

"The OPFOR is renowned around the world as the best there is," said Pfc. Daniel Pisani, a soldier with Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 22nd Infantry Regiment, 10th Mountain Division (Light Infantry).

The other phase of training consists of live-fire operations. On the live-fire range, the soldiers use live ammunition on simulated targets.

'Triple Deuces' soldiers had a chance to practice trench-clearing operations and breaching obstacles during live-fire training, according to Sgt. Louis Mantrom, a fire support sergeant with Company C, 2nd Bn., 22nd Inf.

But infantry and tankers are not the only ones who test their skills on the live-fire range, according to Maj. Dean Faller, 317th Engineer Battalion executive officer. He said the training his engineers received during live-fire is vital to maintaining proficiency.

"It takes a lot more concentration (than simulated operations during force-on-force)," he said. But, he added, safety is continually stressed, and soldiers must review all safety procedures.

"There is more action (for the soldier) packed in live-fire ... it's more thrilling for the soldier because he's actually using real, live ordnance," he said.

During force-on-force training, engineers do not get a chance to use actual explosives as they do in the live-fire portion, said Faller. "This is the closest thing to actual combat," he added.

The stress of combat is not felt only by the combat arms soldiers while at the NTC. Support soldiers earn their pay making sure all soldiers have the supplies needed to keep the battle moving.

"We're here to get the bullets and beans out to the soldiers," said Sgt. 1st Class Joseph Whalen, support operations noncommissioned officer in charge, 87th Maintenance Battalion.

He said the battalion ran numerous resupply missions daily, both by road and sling-loading with helicopters.

"This is a great chance for the soldiers to train," he said. "They get to do things other than the training they would get at (home station).

"For a planner, it's an excellent opportunity, because it involves everything we would normally do in a wartime situation," Carnes said. He said the troops have to move fuel, ammunition and food over difficult terrain.

"Training here forces us to think about what it really takes to resupply the troops. Simulation exercises don't do that," he said. "It's really the only way to test our ability short of war," he added.

Training for war is the reason that soldiers come to the NTC.

Harsh weather and "real" enemy soldiers conspire to push soldiers to their limits, testing their ability to fight under the worst conditions.

But soldiers come away with new knowledge — knowledge that can be used in the future.

Connie Chung launches new CBS news magazine

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

Becoming Dan Rather's "CBS Evening News" partner wasn't enough.

She wanted another prime-time CBS news magazine, too.

SPOTLIGHT

Actually, plans for the latter program were in the works well before Connie Chung recently — and surprisingly — was appointed as the first woman since Barbara Walters' mid-1970s ABC stint to serve as a permanent, weeknight broadcast-network news anchor.

On the heels of her June 1 debut in her new role next to Rather, "Eye to Eye with Connie Chung" premieres Thursday, produced by CBS News veteran Andrew Heyward ("48 Hours") ... and it has some differences from her previous effort in the genre, "Face to Face With Connie Chung," most notably in that she won't be the sole correspondent this time.

She plans to contribute at least one story weekly, but other segments will be provided by regular correspondents including Bernard Goldberg of "48 Hours," Edie Magnus (formerly of ABC and the syndicated "USA Today" series) and Russ Mitchell, who has co-anchored CBS' overnight "Up to the Minute" newscast.

Additionally, "Sunday Morning's" Charles Kuralt and Bill Geist and "CBS This Morning" staples Harry Smith and Robert Krulwich will be members of the on-air team for "Eye to Eye," which will retain its summer time period when the new TV season officially begins in September. Slated for the first edition are interviews with President Clinton's mother, Virginia Kelly, and his half-brother Roger.

Connie Chung

Though "Face to Face With Connie Chung" had been planned as a starter in CBS' fall lineup in 1990, following an earlier tryout run, its title personality opted out upon announcing that she and her talk-show-host husband Maury Povich were "aggressively" aiming for parenthood. However, the pleasant and charismatic Chung reports that she and Heyward have been working on "Eye to Eye" actively since the end of last year.

What: "Eye to Eye"
When: Thursday, 9 p.m. on CBS

"Before Christmas, we began making decisions about who we wanted to hire and how the program would be shaped, so we've been nurturing this along for a while," she said. "We've been shooting stories for several months now, trying to build up a bank of them. That started even before the 'Evening News' deal came up. Bernie and Edie and Russ have been shooting steadily, too. Both Andrew and I have done magazine shows for a long time, so we knew that to start off on the right foot, we needed a lot of stories banked so that we could choose."

Chung concedes that her sudden double duty on "Eye to Eye" and the nightly CBS newscast is providing her with a huge learning experience, especially in scheduling terms, extending even to her private time with Povich. "I just don't know how it's going to work out," she says, "but that's actually the marvelous charm of television news or any form of journalism ... the unpredictability."

Fort Benning's bodybuilders bring out big guns

By Lawrence K. Hughes
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Kelley Hill Recreation Center hosted the 1993 Mr. and Ms. Fort Benning Bodybuilding Championship June 5. The contestants varied in experience with some winners having only a few months of competitive training. The field was rounded out by some seasoned veterans and former champions from other installations.

Monday, "Fort Benning Today" will bring you highlights of the competition that featured a changing of the guard as the defending champion of the men's category was bested by the new Mr. Fort Benning. A woman from the lightweight division took the title of Ms. Fort Benning 1993.

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel highlights post events and lists classified advertisements on the Fort Benning Community Bulletin Board featuring news and music from Soldiers Radio Network.

If you are a subscriber to Fort Benning Cable, you can watch USAIC TV on Channel 3, 24 hours a day. Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:26, 7:56, 8:26 and 8:56 on WLTZ TV-38.

For more information or to make suggestions, write or call the Broadcast Section of the Public Affairs Office, Infantry Hall, Room 602, 545-2201.

Bradley's offers music, dancing

By Kimberly Bennett
Directorate of Community Activities

The lights are low as couples and groups of people eager to enter the club. The air is filled with the hum of conversation interrupted only by the clink of glasses from the bar. On the dance floor, partners move to the intoxicating sounds of a Latin beat pumping through the speakers as lights flash red, yellow, blue, and green like the pulse of the song.

It is Saturday night at Bradley's, the Officers' Club's night club. This is the place to be for conversation, refreshments and dancing, according to Laura Colom, Bradley's manager. Bradley's is open to Officers' Club members, School of the Americas cadets and civilian guests.

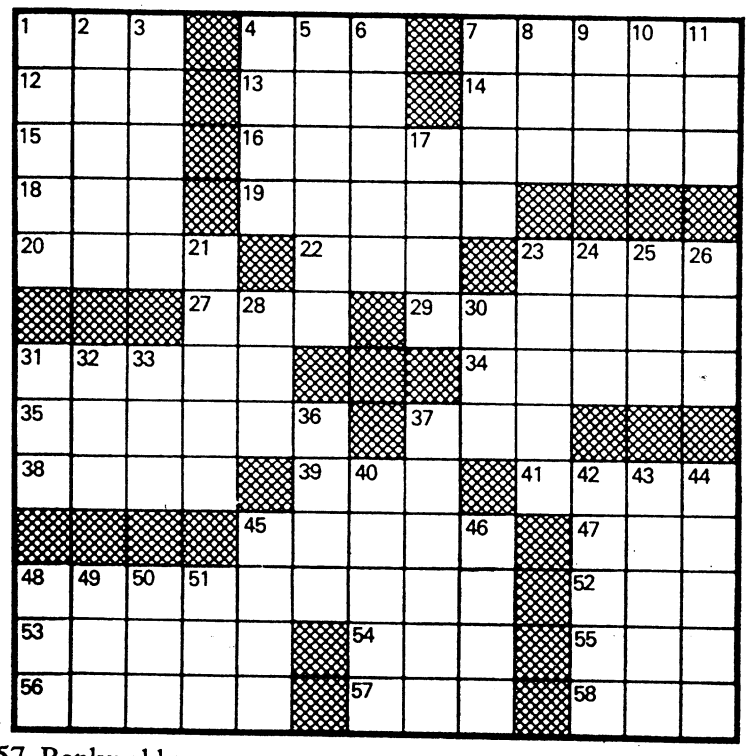
Every Friday and Saturday night, Bradley's opens its doors at 8 p.m. and does not close until 3 a.m. The club, located at the back of the Officers' Club, also features a different theme each night.

On the first two Fridays of each month, Bradley's features top 40 hits. The third Friday brings aspiring performers to the club for Karaoke night, and on the fourth Friday, Bradley's is transformed into a 1950s and 1960s hangout with dancers twisting to oldies-but-goodies.

The DJ plays a mix of music two Saturday nights a month. The songs range from rock to country and never fail to draw a crowd to the dance floor, Colom said.

The other two Saturdays, however, are the most popular nights at Bradley's. These two nights are Latino nights. The Latino songs and dances cater to Columbus' and Fort Benning's large Latino community. Colom started the Latino parties in February, and they have been gaining in popularity ever since, she said.

Even though Bradley's is regularly open only on Friday and Saturday nights, its room can be rented for private parties anytime outside regular operating hours. Wedding receptions, retirement parties and teen birthday parties are frequent events at Bradley's.



The Officers' Club will even cater parties in Bradley's; and, if a club member has the event sponsored, Bradley's will not charge a room rental fee. Even for non members and non catered events, Bradley's is the perfect place for a party because the club charges as low as $25 per hour for its rooms, Colom said.

The club is also a very popular place for teen functions. Bradley's has been the site of several youth dances and parties. "The youth like it because they can sit at a bar and dance in a real club setting," Colom said.

Bradley's has something for everyone. Whether the DJ is playing country or Latino dance music, Bradley's is the place to be.

For more information contact Laura Colom at 687-8000.

Springer offers drama classes

Springer Opera House

You won't find any horseback riding, canoeing, swimming or three-legged sack races, but summertime begins officially at the Springer Opera House July 19 when Drama Camp opens with four sessions for children, teen and adults.

Ready-set-grow - Ages 5-7

Storytelling, music, movement and visual arts and crafts are combined in a creative dramatics camp designed to give the expressive youngster a positive, fun-filled introduction to the performing arts.

Time: Monday through Friday 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Date: July 19 to 30

Place: Springer Actors Arena 1022 1st Ave.

Instructor: Amy Bishop

The sky's the limit - Ages 7-13

Characterization, improvisation, role playing and scene making will be the focus of this course designed to bring out the best in a creative youngster.

Time: Monday through Friday 1 p.m. to 3 p.m.

Date: July 19 to 30

Place: Springer Actors Arena 1022 1st Ave.

Instructor: Janet Duckworth

On a role - Ages 9-13

A dramatic discovery class with an emphasis on building a theater ensemble with dynamic stage skills and the confidence to tackle a wide variety of performance challenges. Creative cooperation, personal and artistic expression and oral interpretation are the fundamental processes used to mold acting skills and develop natural talents.

Time: Monday through Friday 3 p.m. to 5 p.m.

Date: July 19 to 30

Place: Springer Actors Arena 1022 1st Ave.

Instructor: Lisa Brinker

Dance Camp - Steppin' Out - Teens and Adults

"Guys and Dolls" choreographer Janet Roddy will lead a jazz and musical comedy dance class designed to give actors an edge on the "Guys and Dolls" auditions this August or just to brush up on dance skills and get in shape in a way that's fun.

Time: Monday through Friday 7 to 8:30 p.m.

Date: July 19 to 30

Fee: $30

Class size is limited so pre-registration is important. To register, mail a check to: Springer School of Theatre Arts, P.O. Box 1626, Columbus, Ga. 31902 or call (706) 324-1100.

Springer Society members receive a 10 percent discount on tuition as well as families with with two enrollments.

Families with three or more enrollments receive a 15 percent tuition discount.

Georgia parks look at local Indian sites

Georgia Dept. of Natural Resources

Florence Marina State Park will host a program Saturday at the Rirbo Center. Representatives from the six major Indian mound sites in Georgia will take a close look at mounds and their significance to the early American Indian tribes.

Each representative will be giving insight into their particular site with slides, artifacts, lectures and question -and- answer sessions.

The schedule is as follows:

10 a.m. - Billy Adams - Rolomoki Mounds

11 a.m. - Sylvia Flowers - Ocmulgee Mounds

1 p.m. - Libby Forehand - Etowah Mounds

2 p.m. - Rick Estelage - Rock Eagle

3 p.m. - Frank Schnell - Singer-Moye Mounds

4 p.m. - Andy Dominy - Guided tour of Rood Creek Mounds

All activities are free and the public is invited to attend. The park reminds everyone of the mandatory $2 parking fee for all vehicles.

For more information, contact the park at (912) 838-4706 or (912) 838-4244. Florence Marina State Park is located 16 miles west of Lumpkin, Ga. on Hwy. 39.

The park offers cottages, camping, fishing, boat rentals, tennis, miniature golf, picnic facilities and the Rirbo Interpretive Center.

Ga. town is 'Bavarian' village

Helen Welcome Center

The city of Helen, Ga., has been designed to look like a Bavarian village moved from Austria or Germany to the North Georgia mountains.

The character of the town is displayed in the red roofs, gingerbread trim, hand-painted signs, cobblestone alleys and shop owners dressed in lederhosen and dirndl.

With a population of 300, Helen and the surrounding White County host an estimated 3 million vacationers yearly. A gold and timber boom town in the 1800s, Helen was remodeled as an Alpine village more than 20 years ago. The town's atmosphere is maintained by prohibitions against neon signs and modern-style buildings.

Possibly the two most popular pastimes in Helen are dining and shopping. Schnitzel, sauerbraten, rouladen, wurst, strudel and imported beer and wine are standard fare. Southern staples are also available, as are American standards.

Dozens of shops offer items ranging from imported cuckoo clocks, steins and collectibles to American and European antiques. Within a few minutes' drive of Helen is a handmade pottery shop. There is also a country store museum more than 115 years old and 29 brand-name manufacturers' outlets.

One of the biggest attractions around Helen is Mother Nature. There are more than 21 waterfalls in the Brasstown, Chatooga, Chestatee and Tallulah ranger districts. Ruby Falls, located just inside the Chattahoochee National Forest, is the most-visited waterfall in Georgia.

A paved trail winds up Smith Creek to twin waterfalls dropping 153 feet. There is a separate trail designed especially for wheelchair-bound or nonsighted visitors. Braille signs explain the sounds, smells and textures of the surrounding forest.

The 2,000-mile-long Appalachian trail starts near Helen and winds along nearby Unicoi Gap.

A variety of white-water rafting, canoeing and kayaking trips are available near Helen. The Ocoee, Chattahoochee and Chatooga rivers offer opportunities for beginners and professionals.

Summer festivals scheduled for the Helen area include:

- The 16th annual Appalachian Music Festival at Unicoi State Park will be July 10 through 12. It will feature regional musicians performing Appalachian, British Isles and string music.
- The 42nd Georgia Mountain Fair at Hiawasee will be Aug. 5 through 16. The fair offers rides, mountain music, crafts and food.
- The Sautee/Nacoochee Valley Pow-Wow and Festival will be Aug. 27 through 30 in Helen, featuring traders, sports, songs, dances, story telling and inspirational and interpretive messages.

For a complete list of events, dates and other information, write the Alpine Helen/White County Convention and Visitors Bureau, P.O. Box 730, Helen, Ga. 30545, or call (706) 878-1218.

Cherokee Historical Association

The Cherokee community is commonly known as the Cherokee Indian Reservation and is host to hundreds of thousands of visitors each year.

The Museum of the Cherokee Indian, located on highway 441 North, features exhibits, audio-visual displays and multi-media presentations on the culture of the Cherokee people. A new exhibit room recently opened in the museum, which is open year round.

The 44th season of the outdoor drama "Unto These Hills" opens Saturday, and the 5 millionth paid visitor is expected some time before the end of the month, according to officials of the Cherokee Historical Association.

The drama portrays the history of the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians, including the"Trail of Tears" to Oklahoma.

The drama is produced by the Association, an organization founded in the late 1940s to produce the drama and preserve the history of the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians.

The Cherokee Historical Association also sponsors the Oconaluftee Indian Village and operates the Cherokee Cyclorama.

The 1993 season will include nightly performances, except Sundays, through Aug. 21. Reserved seat tickets are available for $10; general admission tickets are $8 for adults and $5 for children.

Stay safe while camping, boating

Infantry Branch Safety Office

While camping, keep these points in mind:

- Boil water thoroughly, use disinfectants such as iodine or chlorine, or plan ahead and bring water from home.
- Match footwear to hiking conditions — athletic shoes are adequate for smooth trails, but longer hikes require comfortable, sturdy boots that provide ankle support and traction. Be sure boots are broken in.
- Bring rain gear (poncho, rain parka and pants, gaiters) in case weather turns bad.
- Pack dried, canned or fresh food.
- With fresh food, ensure you have the capability of storing it so it won't spoil.
- Don't depend on "living off the land" by hunting or fishing. Bring food in case fish aren't biting or game is scarce.

When boating or fishing, these rules of safety should be followed:

- Before setting out in a boat, make sure you know how to handle it properly.
- A life preserver should be provided for, and worn, by each passenger.
- Too many people in a boat can send it straight to the bottom. Check the maximum capacity of the boat, usually on the data plate, and do not exceed it.
- Check weather forecasts and watch for storm clouds.
- Sit, do not stand, while boating.

Don't make waves — boat smart.

Bahamas say, 'Welcome to the islands'

SatoTravel

The Bahamas consist of more than 700 islands and islets.

Grand Bahama Island, on the northern fringes of the chain, is 96 miles from Miami. More than 80 percent of visitors to The Bahamas choose New Providence, Paradise or Grand Bahama islands, which combine casinos, shopping districts and sporting and recreational activities.

The Family Islands or "Out Islands", more than 20 of which offer visitor amenities, are geared to activities such as diving, swimming, boating and fishing.

New Providence and Paradise islands

Nassau, located on New Providence Island and the capital of The Bahamas, is home to almost 200,000 people. New Providence and Paradise Islands, connected by a toll bridge, offer discos, bars, restaurants and casinos, while sports such as golf, tennis, scuba diving, fishing and sailing are available. Points of interest include:

- Cloister, a Middle Age structure shipped to Paradise Island stone by stone, located on the southeastern side of the island.
- Fort Charlotte, built in the 18th century, is located a mile west of downtown Nassau on Bay Street.
- Government House, overlooking Nassau and the harbor, is the site of a changing of the guard ceremony by The Royal Bahamas Police Force Band every second Saturday.
- Straw Market on downtown Bay Street offers straw goods, carvings and souvenirs.

Grand Bahama Island

Site of the twin settlements of Freeport and Lucaya, the island is home to the International Bazaar, which offers 65 shops with wares from 50 countries. The duty-free limit for Americans returning after a 48-hour stay is $600 per person.

Features of Grand Bahama Island are:

- Rand Memorial Nature Center, three miles east of the Bazaar, a 100-acre forest with a variety of plant and animal life.
- Garden of the Groves, 15 miles east of Freeport, is set on 12 acres of manmade waterfalls, streams and landscape.

The Family Islands

The outlying islands, ranging from large to small and developed to uninhabited, offer a range of experiences for visitors.

- Abaco, the northernmost Bahamian land area, is a 130-mile long boomerang-shaped chain of islands. Abaco offers tennis, golf, snorkeling, fishing and sailing.
- Bimini, once host to Ernest Hemingway, focuses on watersports and fishing.

For more information on a vacation in The Bahamas, call SatoTravel at 687-4900.

The earliest inhabitants of The Bahamas were the Arawak Indians, who migrated from South America in the 9th century. Within a few decades after Christopher Columbus landed on the western island of San Salvador in 1492, the Spaniards had shipped all the Arawaks to slavery in the mines of Hispaniola and Cuba, where they died by the thousands.

The first English claim to the islands was recorded in 1629 when Charles I granted possession to his attorney general, Sir Robert heath. It wasn't until 1648, however, that the first permanent settlement was established on Eleuthera by a group of English Puritans from Bermuda seeking religious freedom. In 1670, the islands were granted to the six Lords Proprietors of the Carolinas by Charles II.

Piracy flourished in The Bahamas during the late 17th and early 18th centuries until it was abolished by Woodes Rogers, the first Royal Governor, who established order in 1718. In 1776, U.S. Naval units and Marines twice captured Nassau in bloodless invasions. After the American Revolution, about 7,000 British Loyalists and their slaves settled in The Bahamas, where slavery was abolished Aug. 1, 1834.

The U.S. Civil War brought prosperity to the islands, which served as a transfer point for munitions and medical supplies to be run through the Northern blockade of Confederate ports. Cotton from the South was the main commodity of exchange.

The islands again prospered during Prohibition, serving as a liquor supply point for American rum-runners. During World War II, Allied air forces used the islands for flight training.

FLORIDA

Summer set with sand, sun

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The following is information about various Florida vacation areas and resorts:

Daytona Beach

The Daytona Beach area is located in Florida's Central East coast region. It includes seven communities stretching 27 miles along the Atlantic coast.

There are three major rivers in the area, including the St. Johns River at the western boundary of Volusia County, the Tomoka River leading from the resort area through Tomoka State Park, and the Halifax River or Intracoastal Waterway which runs parallel to the coastline.

The beach is 23 miles long and up to 500 feet wide at low tide. Automobile access is possible on the packed sand nearest the ocean, while sand dunes further from the waterline can reach as high as 25 feet.

The beach was used as a proving ground for developing the automobile engine. That technology was also put to use in developing aircraft engines for World War II fighters.

Activities available in Daytona Beach include fresh-water and deep-sea fishing, canoeing, camping, golfing, sailing, water skiing, jet skiing, surfing, scuba diving, racquet sports, horseback riding, Jai Alai, dog racing and beach activities.

Points of interest include:

• The Daytona International Speedway — The 2.5-mile speedway is involved in some type of "high-speed" activity more than four months of the year, from stock cars to sports cars to motorcycles to go-carts.

• The Casements — The former winter home of mutimillionaire John D. Rockefeller now serves as a cultural center and museum for the city of Ormond Beach.

• The Museum of Arts and Sciences — The museum offers a variety of permanent exhibits including the skeleton of a 13-foot ground sloth; a Cuban Museum including pre-Castro art from the collection of Gen. Fulgencio Batista; and "Arts in America."

• The Ponce De Leon Inlet Lighthouse — Located at the southernmost point of the area, the lighthouse serves as a guide to mariners off the Atlantic coast. Historical displays and a gift shop are on the grounds, and a climb to the top of the tower provides a view of the resort area.

For more information, contact the Convention and Visitor's Bureau, P.O. Box 910, Daytona Beach, Fla. 32115 or call (904) 255-0415.

St. Petersburg and Clearwater

In a state noted for theme parks, Florida's Pinellas Suncoast features natural attractions. The area includes Clearwater Beach, St. Petersburg, St. Pete Beach, Treasure Island, Madeira Beach, Indian Rocks Beach, Dunedin and Tarpon Springs.

The parks feature diverse ecosystems, ranging from white sands and sea oats along the Gulf of Mexico to stands of pine, cypress and mangroves and inland trails weaving through jungle-like hammocks.

More than 11 million people visited the 14 county parks last year. Nearly another million explored Honeymoon Island and Caldesi Island, state recreation areas near Dunedin.

Located south of St. Petersburg, Fort DeSoto Park is comprised of five islands, 900 acres and seven miles of undeveloped beaches.

The beaches, fishing piers and 235-site camping area are available for visitors year round. The campsites have water and electrical hook-ups that can accommodate travel trailers and other self-contained recreational vehicles.

Fort DeSoto, located on Mullet Island, is an artillery installation built in 1898 to protect Tampa Bay during the Spanish American War. The fort is listed in the National register of Historic Places, and counts Ponce De Leon and Robert E. Lee among its visitors.

Other parks in the area offer facilities for wildlife photography, bicycling, boating, camping, canoeing, fishing, softball games and swimming.

For more information about public parks and nature trails on the Pinellas Suncoast, contact: St. Petersburg and Clearwater Area Convention and Visitor's Bureau, Florida Suncoast Dome, 1 Stadium Dr. Suite A, St. Petersburg, Fla. 33705.

Cypress Gardens

Cypress Gardens will host a Fourth of July celebration with live entertainment and fireworks.

Highlights of the celebration will include musical acts featuring tunes from the '50s, '60s and '70s, as well as patriotic music. The children's rides, Island in the Sky, and the park's museums will remain open until 9:30 p.m. Then, Cypress Gardens will kick off a fireworks display over Lake Eloise.

A discount admission rate of $4 will be given after 4 p.m. July 4.

Cypress Gardens is open daily from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. The regular single admission price is $22.95 plus tax, admission for children age 3 to 10 is $16.45 plus tax.

Children 2 and under are admitted free, and parking is free.

For more information, call (813) 324-2111, Ext. 297.

Swimming safety

- Before diving, check water depth, and remember the ocean floor is continually shifting.
- Don't jump or dive into the water from a pier or rock jetty.
- Don't run from the beach and dive headfirst into the water.
- When bodysurfing, keep your arms out in front of you to protect your head and neck.
- Beware of waves. They can knock you down and roll you under the water. A series of waves can knock a raft or inner tube away from you.

Military courtesy signals honor

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

As the afternoon comes to a close, the patriotic sound of the bugle is heard echoing throughout post as the colors are lowered.

What are you doing at this moment? Well, if you're not rendering proper honor to the flag, post officials say you're wrong.

All soldiers, family members and government employees have the responsibility to show proper courtesy and protocol when necessary, said Post Command Sgt. Maj. William H. Acebes.

"Regulations are simple and easy to follow," Acebes said. "Only soldiers who are lazy have trouble abiding by the rules."

Regulations say that on the first note of "Reveille" in the morning or "To the Colors" in the evening, soldiers must come to attention, face the flag and salute. If no flag is near, face the music and render the proper salute.

Anyone in civilian clothes should stand at attention and place the right hand over the heart. All vehicles in motion should stop; persons should dismount and render the proper courtesy.

When you pass or are being passed by colors that are being presented, paraded or displayed, salute when the colors are six paces from you. Hold the salute until the colors are six paces beyond you.

"Military courtesy says a lot not only about the individual, but it reflects on the whole installation," Acebes said. "Soldiers who do not follow the proper courtesies show a lack of discipline in themselves and their units."

According to regulations, soldiers should salute all officers in official vehicles identified by special plates or tags.

A salute is not required by or to personnel driving or riding in privately owned vehicles.

When saluting an officer, always give a proper greeting such as, "good morning" or "good afternoon," followed by "sir" or "ma'am."

"Soldiers need to take pride in who they are," said Acebes, "because they are part of a proud Army that has maintained this country's freedom for more than 200 years and is looked up to by the rest of the world to also maintain their freedom.

"One soldier who fails to render the proper courtesy or follow regulations gives a bad name to all others who worked hard to establish honor in the Army."

Welcome home

The remaining soldiers of the 63rd Combat Support Equipment Company, 36th Engineer Group, arrive at the Columbus Metropolitan Airport from Somalia Monday at 2:30 p.m. The returning soldiers wore the blue berets of the U.N. peacekeeping force. The 63rd deployed to Somalia as part of the 36th Engineer Group and constructed base camps for soldiers, hospitals and schools for the Somali people, while there. The majority of the 63rd returned May 26, but these soldiers were part of a "trail party" left behind to ship the unit's equipment and to maintain the roads and facilities constructed by the 36th. That mission will now be accomplished by the 568th Combat Support Equipment Company of Fort Carson, Colo.

Soldier Show arrives

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

The 10th annual performance of the U.S. Army Soldier Show will take place at the Sand Hill Theater June 26 at 2 and 8 p.m.

The 90-minute show, a presentation of the Army's Community and Family Support Center Entertainment Division, will feature a variety of acts including dancing, singing, skits and a laser light show.

Music selections will include country, rock 'n' roll, patriotic and rap. Entrance to the performances are free, but 800 seats are reserved for soldiers of the Infantry Training Brigade for the 2 p.m. show.

Many open seats will be available at the 8 p.m. show. No tickets will be distributed, so all seats are available on a first-come, first-serve basis.

The 26 members of the crew and cast are all active-duty soldiers gathered from Europe, Korea, Alaska, Panama and throughout the United States. These soldiers are normally cooks, truck drivers, medics or mechanics, but they were selected for casting after auditioning for the show.

The soldiers will travel more than 15,000 miles and visit more than 50 Army installations across America and Europe during their tour.

The show's birthplace was the 1984 Association of the United States Army convention where the first show was performed. The show went on to perform at the National Theater for former President Ronald Reagan's second inauguration.

The show has evolved into an international, Armywide tradition of entertainment.

Concert provides rest, relaxation

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

It was like an old-fashioned Sunday evening. Children played on the lawn, laughing and dancing, as their parents sat on blankets watching the frivolity with a smile as they ate a picnic under the large oak trees that provided cool relief from the steamy Georgia sun.

The whole atmosphere was one of fun and relaxation with old friends and family. It was the final concert for the season on the lawn at Riverside.

Home of Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White and his wife, Linda, Riverside was the meeting place for a crowd of people Sunday evening where the Infantry Band, conducted by Chief Warrant Officer 3 Larry G. Hyatt, and Infantry Chorus, directed by 1st Lt. Lorraine Ferrell, performed there for the last time this summer.

As the program came to an end, White presented Hyatt with a coin of appreciation for his service at Fort Benning. Hyatt is being transferred to Berlin, Germany.

Hyatt was also presented a plaque from Columbus Mayor Frank Martin in appreciation of the Infantry Band's support of Columbus.

Riverside joined a long list of significantly historic structures when it was added to the National Register of Historic Sites in July 1971.

Post practices sports medicine

By Jennifer St. Onge
Special to The Bayonet©

The Primary Care Sports Medicine Clinic of Fort Benning is open and is the first Army clinic of its kind.

Dr. (Capt.) Todd Dombroski, the clinic's director, said the clinic opened in February to provide nonoperative orthopedic care to soldiers and their family members.

"We're not here to replace the good quality care provided by physician assistants and family practice doctors," he said, "and we're not here to take the place of orthopedic surgery care."

The clinic will expand the capabilities of the assistants and family practice doctors, he said, and will help the orthopedic clinic decide which cases require surgery.

Currently the orthopedic clinic might see 15 patients and only find one who needs surgery, he said. The sports medicine clinic physicians will see those patients first and direct the operable cases to the orthopedic clinic, he said.

Sports medicine deals with chronic problems such as knee and back pain, Dombroski said. Care includes injections, physical therapy, exercises and drugs, but not surgery. "What I do, I do with these hands," he said as he held them up.

The clinic, located at Winder Clinic, Building 3306 on Sand Hill, has three other doctors: Maj. Ramon Amador, Maj. Clark Cobb and Maj. Ken Bates.

Dombroski

Two of those doctors are currently fellows at the Houston Sports Medicine Hospital in Columbus.

"They (Houston) have always had an Army doctor who takes a year off of active duty service for an intensive study of sports medicine," he said. "They have made it a policy to make that doctor available on a limited basis to the sports medicine clinic at Fort Benning."

In July, Dombroski will become the fellow at the Houston Clinic and Cobb will replace him as director, he said.

Dombroski got the idea for the clinic because of the numerous sports medicine injuries he saw at Winder Clinic in 1991, he said. He thought there should be a facility somewhere on Fort Benning that would link up hospital resources, Houston Clinic resources and the input of commanders, he said.

The secondary goals of the clinic include soldier-athlete research and providing physicians for the All-Army sports teams located at Fort Benning, he said.

A soldier-athlete is basically any soldier, he said, because of the rigorous physical training that soldiers endure.

"All soldiers are athletes under a lot of pressure," he said. "If a regular athlete makes

Twenty members of the Love family were present at the dedication including Love's daughter, Jane, and his son, retired Col. William D. Love, a member of the Dental Corps. The keynote speaker, Maj. Gen. Thomas R. Tempel, chief, Army Dental Corps said unity was the spirit of the event.

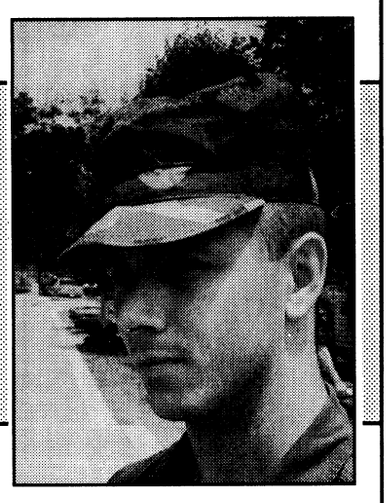
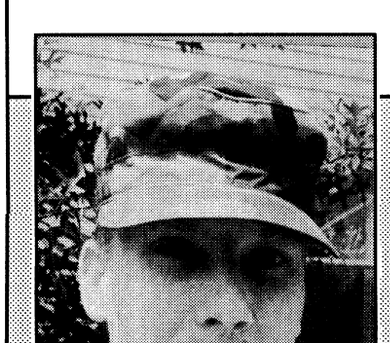
What do you do to beat the heat?



Staff Sgt. James H. Moss, Infantry Training Brigade — "I drink plenty of water, and know what the heat category is. NCOs need to make sure they drink water, too, when they tell their troops to."



Cheryl A. Dimitroff, family member — "I stay inside to keep cool — and wear as little clothing as possible."

Capt. Joseph Legiec, U.S. Army Medical Department Activity — "I stay close to the swimming pool and the air conditioning."

Spc. Raymond L. Branch, Company D, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment — "Heat doesn't bother us (at my unit) — at least until we get to category five. We get acclimated before we go to the field."

Pvt. 2 Mitchell L. Corn, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment — "I drink a lot of water and use the air conditioner."

Pat Harris, Retirement Services — "My co-worker and I have been walking two miles every day in the heat. When we're finished, we drink cold drinks and fan ourselves a lot."

COMMENTARY

Hot enough for you? That can be a particularly irritating question this time of year, especially in Georgia. If it's not hot enough for you, take your little red horns and your little red pitchfork and trot on your little cloven hooves back to where you belong.

Summertime in a climate like this is trying at best. The outdoors, even before dawn, wraps a blanket of humidity around you, and the indoors never seems cool enough. The bugs bite, the weeds make you sneeze, and your car will roast you medium rare five seconds after you get in it.

There are, thankfully, a few things that make the heat bearable — the cold drink of your choice, a little breeze now and then, and loose, cool clothes, for example.

And, maybe most of all, water. To drink — gotta stay hydrated — but also to cool off in, to play in, to give your children something to splash in so they can play outside without melting into little puddles.

Of course, we don't always realize how precious something is until we're threatened with losing it. The people in Smiths, Ala., could probably write poems about the raptures of water right now, since the Smiths Water Authority has asked customers to restrict their water usage — even-numbered houses watering on even-numbered days, odd-numbered on odd-numbered days, and no watering on weekends — for the rest of the summer.

Karen S. Morarie

Harris County, Ga., has its problems, too. A spokesman for the Harris County Waterworks said residents there have also been asked to restrict their outdoor watering, to perhaps one or two days a week.

Lack of rain has been cited as one major reason for the shortage of water, along with new residences — with new grass and shrubs — in both areas. Spokesmen recommend that when customers do water, they do so early in the day — Smiths advises watering before 10 a.m., Harris County likes 1 to 5 a.m.

I've heard no complaints about the availability of water on Fort Benning, but I've sure seen waste. I've seen people fill — and empty — large wading pools for their children every day, and water their lawns daily and at all hours.

I know, we're not paying the water bills, but water is not an unlimited resource, and if we waste too much of it, we'll all pay for it. Stay cool, have fun, but be responsible.

Date rape

Taboo subject needs examination, discussion

By John C. Pomory
Rape Crisis Intervention Program

Editor's note: This article appears as part of Fort Benning Rape Crisis Intervention Program's efforts for Rape Awareness Month in June. Additionally, the Rape Crisis lecture series continues as Jackie Titus, assistant professor of Mental Health at Columbus College, will discuss active listening during her presentation of "Asking Open Questions" at 7:00 p.m. Wednesday in Room 22 of Building 4, Infantry Hall.

Date rape is a crime of sexual violence generally directed against young women by assailants who are known to the victims. Also known as acquaintance, social, silent and cocktail rape, this crime often occurs in settings that belie their dangers because of the victim's comfort with the environment and trust in the perpetrator.

Although the term date rape has become a greater part of the American consciousness in recent years, statistics indicate the crime itself remains largely misunderstood and on the rise. For instance, many college campuses seem to be plagued by the occurrences of date rape in part because of the greater frequency of social gatherings, dating and the abundance of alcohol.

But the deeper causes of this crime, as well as most, are not situational. Date rape is not a product of passion, nor is it the result of a "simple" mistake on the assailant's part. It is a devastating crime that violates a women's body and spirit as the perpetrator either desires to, or at very least is willing to, humiliate and hurt a victim because of the need to satisfy his own aggression. It is neither justified nor directly precipitated by any degree of sexual enticement.

COMMENTARY

In fact, many of the misunderstandings of date rape trace their roots to traditional stereotypes of men and women. For years, both worldwide and Western societies firmly regarded sex as a more or less "male prerogative." This led to the only recently reversed laws that seemed to characterize male gratification as a "wifely duty" and, as such, protected a husband from the charge of rape of any sort, while further reinforcing the notion of a woman's subservience to any man — lover, friend, co-worker or casual acquaintance.

Even today, many men are socialized to believe they are supposed to be competitive, "take charge" conquerors who solve problems through an array of aggressive tactics that may include violence. In contrast, women are routinely perceived in a much more passive, submissive light. This leads to the males' fragile identities that cannot accept "no" for an answer.

To this already unbalanced equation, add the frequent depiction of a woman's objections as a perfunctory veil to protect her honor and hide "what she really wants." This idea in itself seems to be both a cause and effect of the further incidence of date rape.

A further troubling aspect of date rape is that many women do, in fact, seem to quietly reinforce the stereotypes by either yielding to male aggression or not reporting their own victimization. Often this is because of the heavy burdens of guilt, loss of trust, alienation, fear and shame victims may experience in the crime's aftermath.

These feelings can become even more devastating coupled with the attitudes reflected by not only men but some women who may wish to deny their own vulnerability by unjustly placing the blame for date rape on the victim.

In fact, many assailants often cite a list of reasons for their expectations and demands to include: having paid for the victim's dinner, a prior sexual relationship between victim and perpetrator, the victim's sexual history, the woman's provocative style of dressing or speaking, or a woman's indecision concerning sexual activity.

Of course, no excuse can justify a perpetrator's actions or assuage a victim's sorrow. And while many male myths seem to be designed to allow men to avoid responsibility for their own actions — which are often portrayed as mere "indiscretions" — there is no escape from reality for any person victimized by a violent crime such as date rape. If there is to be any comfort, it will come only from communication and understanding.

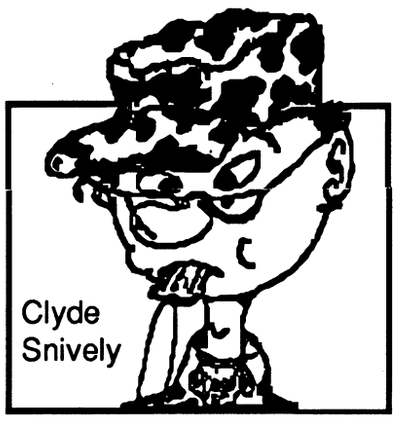
By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

CALFEX. It stands for Completely AnnihiLate Foe EXpertly, or something like that.

With most Army acronyms, I'm never sure of their precise meaning, but that never stopped me from tossing them around as if I did know what they meant.

What I do know is that at CALFEXes, or combined arms live-fire exercises, you get a taste of the real Army. You feel the overpressure of the big guns firing, eat the dirt of Bradleys as they nimbly scramble past, and even choke on smoke and oil as they demonstrate their unique way of masking their exact positions by burning oil.

I refer to these dedicated professionals of the 29th Infantry Regiment and the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division as the "real Army," remembering the reaction of a noncommissioned officer from the 29th as he unloaded his Bradley from a low boy in front of the Airborne Department's 250-foot towers one day a few years ago.



He was there as part of a photo shoot for the cover of "Army Times" that would feature paratroopers, air assault, mounted and dismounted infantry.

Looking around, he said, "the real Army comes to Disneyland." I'm sure he has nothing against the airborne or air assault, but he knew, in his heart of hearts, that the heart and soul of the infantry are the soldiers who drive, maintain and ride into combat in those fire breathing beasts of his.

Well last week, it seemed as though Disneyland had come to Cactus Observation Post. For there among the soldiers in their battle dress uniforms were moms, pops and kids from every walk of life. Most came to see the Air Force's B-1 bomber in action, but the real show belonged to the mech infantry.

The CALFEX is designed to demonstrate combined arms warfare to infantry officers. But it does more than that. It shows the results of what professional soldiers can do.

Of course they rehearse these exercises so things will come off perfectly once a class of advanced course students and spectators are in the stands. But you also rehearse for combat actions. It's part of wanting to do things right, of wanting to save lives in combat.

But no matter how good the crews, they still have to deal with the vagaries of equipment and Pfc. Murphy.

During last week's exercise, Pfc. Murphy was alive and well. First a mortar round failed to fire, a nasty habit apparently common when mortar tubes are exposed to the hot sun for long periods of time.

And the crew responded just like they were trained to do. No heroics to look good. Instead, old-fashioned, life-saving immediate action drills ... kick the tube to try to get a round to drop and fire and when that doesn't work, abandon ship and wait for the cool off period.

Later, a TOW missile failed to fire. (William O'Riley said that stands for Tube Launched, Optically Tracked, Wire Guided. I know that's not right because then it would be TLOTWG).

In this case, a back up track rolled into place, the crew set up the missile launcher, sighted on a 50-gallon drum of FooGas some 3,000 meters away, and wham, direct hit by this crew of heroes.

Talk about pressure. It's akin to sinking an eight-foot putt to win the U.S. Open.

Yes, the B-1 bombers were there with their 500-pound bombs. And yes, A-10 Wart Hogs rolled and cavorted like lazy eagles waiting for an unaware rabbit to go bounding across an open field. And there were the helicopters launching rockets and mini-guns with deadly accuracy.

Plus the lumbering behemoths, the M-1 tanks and the field artillery.

Widow donates Medal of Honor

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

The national flag is raised and lowered in front of Infantry Hall every day, but the retreat ceremony held a special significance June 11 when the 18th Infantry Regiment was there to render honors during a Regimental Command Retreat.

As part of the ceremony, Marian G. Brown, widow of Medal of Honor recipient Capt. Bobbie Brown, presented the Medal of Honor awarded to her husband to Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White.

Brown was awarded the medal for his courage, fearless leadership and outstanding skill while commanding Company C of the 18th Infantry Regiment during an attack on Crucifix Hill, a key point in the enemy's defense of Aachen, Germany, October 8, 1944.

"It is with great honor," White said, "that I accept this award and have it placed in our National Infantry Museum."

He then presented Brown with a copy of a painting depicting her husband's actions at Crucifix Hill. The original painting hangs in the National Infantry Museum.

Guest speaker retired Col. Edward W. McGregor, the first honorary colonel of the 18th Infantry Regiment, recalled serving with Brown and making a final reconnaissance of the hill with Brown before the battle.

"He received several awards for bravery, but none can compare with this award, the highest honor — the Medal of Honor," McGregor said.

Also present at the ceremony were the unit's honorary command sergeant major, retired Command Sgt. Maj. Bobbie Sanchez, and the 18th Infantry Regiment's honorary colonel, retired Maj. Gen. Herbert J. McChrystal, the reviewing officer.

Col. Robert J. St. Onge Jr., commander of the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, (Mechanized), was the commander of troops for the ceremony.

Check CHAMPUS coverage

Martin Army Community Hospital

If for any reason you're admitted to a civilian hospital, chances are the hospital participates in the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services. It's required by law to do so if the hospital accepts Medicare patients.

But hospital-based individual professional providers of care such as pathologists, radiologists and anesthesiologists who help care for you in that hospital may not accept CHAMPUS assignment — even though the hospital does.

What this means to you is they'll provide the care you need, but they may charge more for their services than what CHAMPUS allows. This difference between what they charge and what CHAMPUS allows is totally your responsibility.

Providers who do not accept CHAMPUS assignment will not receive payment from CHAMPUS, and you will be required to pay the providers yourself.

This does not mean that CHAMPUS will deny payment for this care; rather, you will generally have to file the medical claim yourself and the CHAMPUS payment will come directly to you.

If possible, check with the hospital before being admitted to see if those who will provide professional services to you will accept CHAMPUS assignment.

If you would like advice on how to save money on your medical bills, call the hospital's Gateway To Care office at 544-1447 or 544-1591. If you have questions about CHAMPUS, call 544-3461.

The portrait and a historical photo collage will remain on display in the dental clinic.

Maj. Gen. Walter D. Love was born June 5, 1892, in Elmont, Pa. and died May 22, 1991, in Washington, D.C.

He was awarded a doctor of dentistry degree in 1915 from the University of Pittsburgh and spent three years in private practice.

In 1918, he reported for duty as a Reserve officer at Camp Greenleaf, Ga. and in 1920, he was commissioned a first lieutenant in the regular Army Dental Corps. Between World Wars, he served tours of duty at Walter Reed Army Dental School; Carlisle Barracks, Pa.; Medical Field Service School; West Point, N.Y.; Tientsin, China; Scott Field, Ill.; Schofield Barracks, Hawaii; and Fort Knox, Ky.

During World War II, he served as chief of Dental Services for the General Hospital in India.

Love received his first star in 1948 and his second star in 1949 while assigned to the Office of the Surgeon General. During the eight years that Love served in the Office of the Surgeon General, he worked in support of incentive pay for Army dentists.

During his tenure as chief of the Dental Corps (1950 to 1954), the first woman dentist was commissioned in the Army Reserve.

Love spent his time golfing, traveling, staying active in his church, and playing tournament bridge.

According to his daughter, Jane Duffy, Walter Love was a "modest man and quiet in leadership. He instilled deep love of family in his two children, five grandchildren and 12 great-grandchildren. He attributed his longevity to moderation in all things and his success in the Army to being in the right place at the right time."

POST BRIEFS

Civilians to get awards

The Civilian Awards Luncheon will be July 27 from 11:30 a.m. to 1:15 p.m. at the Supper Club at the Fort Benning Officers' Club. The Directorate of Resource Management will serve as host.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland and range areas will take place through June 25.

If the weather permits, the following compartments may be affected: A-12, BB-1, BB-3, BB-4, C-1, CC-2, D-3, D-14, D-17, E-4, G-5, G-7, I-1, I-5, J-3, J-6, K-8, K-11, K-18, K-20, M-2, O-6, Q-6 and U-3.

The following compartments will be affected June 26 and 27: A-6, D-3, D-17, E-4, G-5, L-3, J-3 and J-6.

Burning will occur in pine stands within these compartments to enhance endangered species habitat and training areas.

People using these areas for recreation must vacate the areas before 9:30 a.m. daily.

Training units using compartments adjacent to these areas may experience drift smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while traveling in these areas because of the potential for reduced visibility.

11th Infantry Regt. to get new commander

The 11th Infantry Regiment will conduct a change of command ceremony July 9 on York Field in front of Infantry Hall, Building 4, at 9 a.m.

Col. Walter D. Wojdakowski will assume command from Col. Lawrence K. White Jr.

In case of rain, the ceremony will be in Marshall Auditorium in Infantry Hall.

MEDICINE: Sports clinic opens

a mistake, he gets someone hurt or killed."

The clinic will be the clearinghouse for soldier-athlete research projects, he said, with Houston assisting in the projects. Some of those projects include:

- Back pain in Naval pilots.
- An air-mobile trauma station.
- A form of isometric exercise soldiers can do, while deployed, to maintain upper body and abdominal strength without the use of equipment.
- A study of a new bandage that produces a small current of electricity to promote healing of sprains and bruises.
- Using medicine to promote white blood cell activity, which helps prevent infections.
- Muscle strength testing with the University of Texas at Dallas.
- An electronic device to measure body fat, which would eliminate the 'pinch test.'
- Experimenting with pain medications other than morphine for traumatic injuries in soldiers.

The clinic will also test testosterone level in urine for the International Olympic Committee, Dombroski said.

Random tests will be conducted to determine the normal hormonal range.

School sports physicals and care for retirees are not currently available at the new clinic, but they might be included in the future, Dombroski said.

Commanders were briefed about the clinic Monday, and the official ribbon-cutting ceremony will be July 26, he said.

The most efficient way to obtain an appointment at the clinic is through primary care doctors, he said, but other appointments will be filled as available.

Gift shop has a 'piece of history'

By Kimberly Bennett
Directorate of Community Activities

If you are shopping for a memorable gift or if you just want a little piece of history, take a trip to the National Infantry Museum Gift Shop.

The Gift Shop, located inside the museum, has everything from the Ranger Ration cookbook — a collection of recipes from wives Armywide — to silver coins commemorating every war since World War I, according to Jodi Italiano-Davidson, manager of the Gift Shop. Shoppers do not have to have military identification cards to purchase the items.

Some of the most popular items at the Gift Shop are prints. The Gift Shop has a wide variety of prints depicting different battles. Each print is created by a well-known artist and is a collectors' item.

The shop's featured print is Don Stivers' "The Battle of Crucifix Hill." The print captures the intensity of Medal of Honor recipient Capt. Bobbie E. Brown as he leads his troops against enemy forces at Aachen, Germany, in 1944.

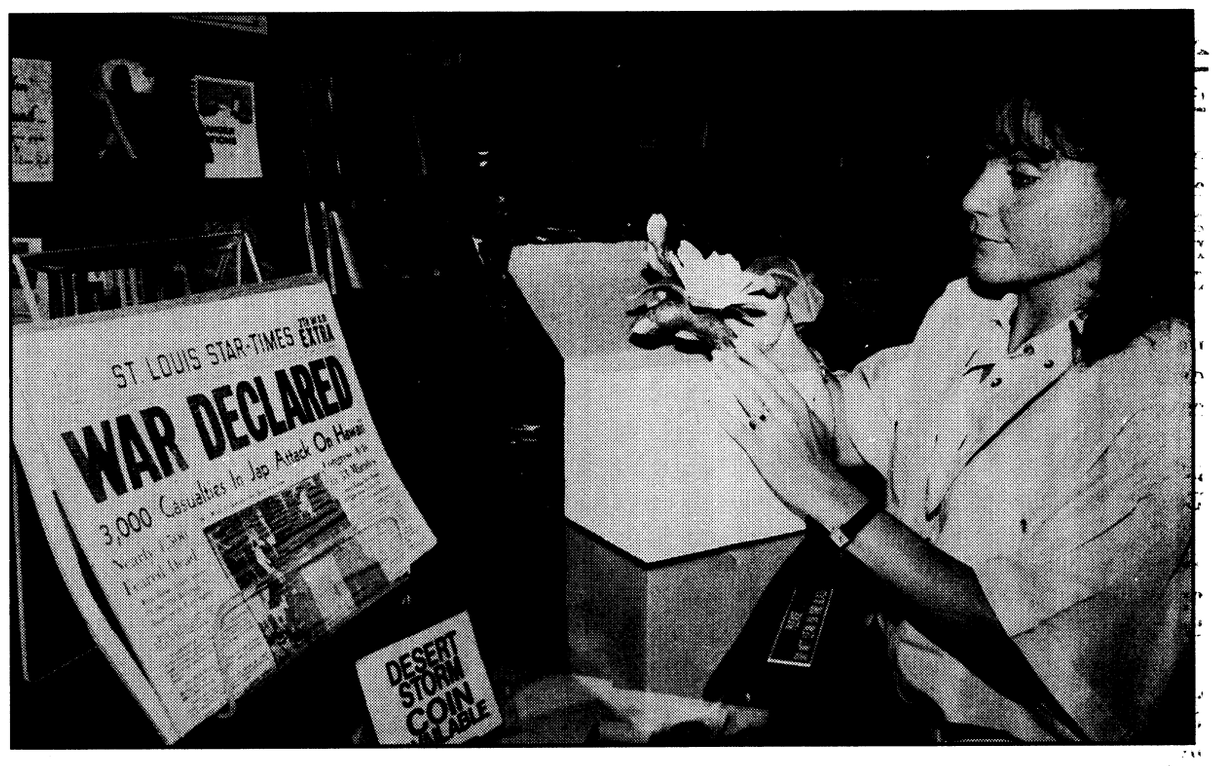
The original painting hangs on the second floor of the museum.

The Gift Shop has a small stock of framed prints, but any print in the store can be ordered with a frame, Italiano-Davidson said.

For history enthusiasts, the Gift Shop has a large selection of history books and videotapes. The books cover every military action since the Civil War, and if the Gift Shop does not have a desired book, it can order it. Videotapes on sale document the history of weapons.

The Gift Shop also sells replicas of historical documents. The Bill of Rights, important speeches and Confederate currency are among the items printed on parchment paper.

In addition to historical items, the Gift Shop also sells many items that are popular as gifts for graduates, guest speakers and hails and farewells.



Delicate porcelain magnolia and dogwood blossoms are fast sellers along with the store's wide selection of pewterware.

The Gift Shop has pewter baby cups, bowls and plates, and although the Gift Shop does not engrave the items, each piece is ready for engraving and perfect for special occasions, Italiano-Davidson said.

The store also has reproductions of Frederic Remington bronze sculptures and Tiffany lamps, crystal pieces, collectible wooden and lead soldiers, jewelry marked with the infantry, airborne, and "Follow Me" insignias, hats, T-shirts and sweatshirts.

The Gift Shop is open Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., and Saturday and Sunday, 12:30 to 4:30 p.m.

For more information, contact Italiano-Davidson at 687-3297.

ARMY FAMILY ACTION PLAN ISSUES

Garrison Commander's Office

More than 100 issues and questions were presented for action, comment or status to the garrison and installation staff at the Fort Benning Family Action Symposium recently.

The issues were broken down into functional areas and each directorate, activity or area was asked to respond.

Q: Is it possible to keep the Winder Family Practice Clinic open longer hours and open on Saturdays?

A: We are exploring ways to extend the hours of care not only for the Winder Clinic patients but for all patients of the command.

We need to find ways to have professional and paraprofessional personnel available after routine hours.

This problem includes not only personnel assigned to the clinics but those in the laboratory, pharmacy and radiology as well.

Q: How can we get back-to-back appointments?

A: The only way to get two consecutive appointments for the same family is to book the appointments far in advance.

Q: It is difficult to call Winder Clinic. Can additional phone lines or numbers be installed with additional operators?

A: There is an order to install two new phone lines for the Winder Clinic. These new lines will be only to make follow-up appointments. Hopefully, the new lines will increase telephone access to the clinic. Additional operators are not presently required.

Q: Can the pharmacy at Winder Clinic be expanded?

A: There is no pharmacy at Winder Clinic. The only medications at the clinic are those that can be handed out by clinic providers. This is a limited stock for only the most frequent problems.

Q: It is too difficult to get appointments and follow-up appointments at Winder Clinic.

A: At the opening of the clinic, it was hard to get appointments. Now you can get an appointment for routine care or follow-up within one week.

For acute problems there is an acute care phone line with a provider screening patient calls. If the patient needs to be seen, an appointment will be made for the same day.

Q: Why doesn't the Primary Medical Care for the Uniformed Services computer show the same data as the Defense Eligibility Enrollment Reporting System computer at Martin Army Community Hospital?

A: The PRIMUS computer and DEERS computer are both linked to the DEERS line in Virginia.

The difference is based on the amount of information provided by the link on a need-to-know basis. For example, the PRIMUS clinic is limited to information about the eligibility of a patient while the hospital DEERS link provides more information, such as details for a statement of nonavailability.

Q: The patient affairs liaison does not give a timely response to customer complaints.

A: In the past year, the Patient Affairs Liaison office has undergone several changes.

The office is currently trying to catch up on responding to complaints brought to the attention of the office late last year.

When a patient presents a concern to the PAL office, it is sent to the chief of the department involved. A response cannot be given until received back from that department.

We are doubling our efforts to streamline the response time by getting more proactive involvement from our department chiefs.

Q: Why can't a patient go to the Emergency Room during duty hours if the Troop Medical Clinic is too busy to see walk-in patients?

A: The emergency room is for bona fide emergencies. If patients have emergencies, they will receive care. If not, they will be referred after proper screening to their primary care clinics.

In order to assure prompt and accurate care to our patients with emergencies, it is important that emergency room personnel focus on the care of true emergencies.

Q: Records are not being sent to different departments in time for appointments and are taking too long to be returned to files.

A: Records for appointed patients are pulled the day prior to appointments and sent to the clinic. Records are refiled as soon as they are returned to the records room.

Q: What is being done to eliminate the four-to five-hour waits in the Emergency Room?

A: Seldom is there a four- to five-hour wait in the ER. When this occurs it is because of multiple true emergencies showing up at once and taxing the system beyond its capabilities.

When this occurs, there is a system to call in extra help to expedite patient care. The command monitors daily the waiting times in the ER to ascertain prompt patient care.

Q: Why is there a restriction of only one ultrasound per pregnancy? Can this be changed?

The standard of care derived by the American College of Obstetrics does not recommend any ultrasounds during pregnancy.

The cost of an ultrasound downtown is $250 per session.

Our chief of obstetrics and gynecology recommends one ultrasound per pregnancy. However, because of technician constraints, we cannot accommodate all of our pregnant patients.

A: PRIMUS has been contracted by the government to provide a family practice level of care, including prescription drugs, for its patients.

If PRIMUS does not have a medication in stock at the clinic, a prescription is given to the patient to fill at Big B Drugs at no cost to the patient. (PRIMUS has a contract with Big B Drugs to do this).

The government is already paying PRIMUS to provide prescription drugs to patients seen there, so filling PRIMUS prescriptions at MACH would be paying twice for the same service.

Q: Can another smoking area be designated other than hospital entrances?

A: The deputy commander for administration is currently re-evaluating our smoking policy with the union.

Q: Where are procedures for appointments published?

A: Published procedures for appointments can be found through the primary clinics, Family Practice, MACH, PRIMUS, the Outpatient Clinic, Winder Family Practice Clinic, Aviation Medicine and the Pediatric Clinic.

Appointments in the specialty clinics have to be made through a referral or consultation.

Q: When is the best time frame to be seen with a routine illness?

A: If patients are enrolled in Gateway To Care, they should seek this information directly from their health-care delivery site. If they are not enrolled, they can contact the clinic during normal duty hours.

A: When the lines to turn in or pick up prescriptions get excessively long, a second window is opened to speed service to the patients if personnel are available.

It takes time to receive prescriptions. Eligibility must be verified, prescriptions checked to ensure medications are available, all necessary information must be on the prescription and a claim check must be issued.

To dispense prescriptions, verification that the correct patient is picking up the medication must be made and necessary instructions provided to the patient to ensure the medications are taken correctly.

A: A physician-pediatrician does presently support the EFMP. The role of the EFMP physician is to screen medical records of family members of active duty soldiers to see if they have a condition that requires enrollment. Patients are screened by appointment only. All family members of a soldier going overseas are automatically screened.

In addition, patients are referred by physicians when an EFMP enrollable diagnosis is identified during routine medical care. All physicians should be screening during routine care as mandated by EFMP Army Regulation 600-75.

Once an enrollable condition is identified, the patient's physician must complete a medical summary defining the patient's needs. The EFMP physician is willing to complete medical summaries on pediatric patients if the care plan is clearly stated in the medical record. However, the EFMP physician as a pediatrician cannot complete medical summaries for adult patients or subspecialists.

Q: Why are there such long waits at PRIMUS even with an appointment?

A: This problem is being addressed. There has been dramatic improvement in the waiting time at PRIMUS.

Occasionally, PRIMUS has an emergency case that takes one physician and one nurse away from their duties to stay with a patient until the patient is transported.

Several other occurrences could delay appointments, for example the patient prior may have been a case that took longer than the doctor anticipated.

A: The Red Cross is constantly working to improve visibility of Red Cross emergency services. The Red Cross is currently working with the emergency room to see if a poster advising of emergency services and telephone numbers can be displayed in the ER.

This poster, titled, "Emergencies Just Don't Happen During Office Hours," will have the telephone numbers to contact Red Cross on a 24-hour basis. Also, a fact sheet will be distributed to doctors and hospital staff regarding the type of emergency services Red Cross provides and how to contact the Red Cross office when patients are in need of services.

The Red Cross is looking for ways to educate soldiers and their families about Red Cross emergency services. Red Cross personnel also do a series of speaking engagements to the first sergeants for the post, as well as at newcomer and spouse orientations.

Q: Can lab support on weekends be made available?

Q: How long should someone wait before making a follow-up appointment?

A: Instructions regarding follow-up appointments are generally determined by the health care provider. Questions regarding follow-up care should be resolved before leaving the clinic.

Q: Why must billing of health care to retirees older than 65 to Medicare be filled out as a third party?

A: We do not bill Medicare nor do we bill Medicare supplement for outpatients. We do bill supplement for inpatient care.

As required by Department of Defense directives, our beneficiaries who have supplemental third party health insurance are also billed.

The intent is to provide more services and does not negatively impact on patient insurance cost.

Don't pass 'go' without transition assistance

Army Career and Alumni Program

Did you know that all service members getting out of or retiring from the military must process through the Transition Assistance Office, Building 2617, Soldiers' Plaza, prior to attending the Transition Assistance Program class in Infantry Hall?

The National Defense Authorization Act fiscal 1991, Public Law 101-510 states that soldiers within 180 days of expiration term of service are required to attend a Transition Assistance Program class.

For more information, call 545-4902 or 545-4892.

Transition Assistance Classes

Date	Type of Class
July 12 to 14	Retirement
July 19 to 21	ETS
July 26 to 28	ETS
Aug. 2 to 4	ETS
Aug. 9 to 11	Retirement
Aug. 16 to 18	ETS
Aug. 23 to 25	ETS
Aug. 30 to Sept. 1	ETS

All classes will be in Classroom 30, Infantry Hall, Building 4, from 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Veterans:

Good reasons to consider the Army Reserve.

If you enjoyed your military service, why not continue? The Army Reserve offers you that opportunity, and a lot more. Look what's waiting for you:

- A good part-time income
- PX and commissary privileges
- Low-cost life insurance and retirement benefits
- Opportunities for promotion

Not a bad deal for training that usually takes just one week-end a month and two weeks a year. Give it some serious thought. Then call us.

Headhunters head up doubleheader

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

With the softball season well under way, most teams are looking to play one and get out of the sun.

Former Chicago Cubs great Ernie Banks coined the phrase "Let's play two," and the team from Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment (Headhunters) took the words to heart, splitting a doubleheader against two different teams at Harmony Church Field.

In the first game, the Headhunters defeated the Bradley Instructor Company 9-7 in six innings of play.

The Headhunters opened the scoring in the bottom of the first inning with six runs on four hits and three walks.

In the bottom half of the second inning, the Headhunters added two more runs to go up 8-0 on an inside-the-park homer by second baseman Dwhan Herrell and a run-scoring single by first baseman Tracy Davis after pitcher Roy Davies doubled to center.

The top of the third inning was the bright spot for BIC, as it scored five runs to pull within three at 8-5. Lead-off singles by catcher Jennifer Rose and shortstop Stasik Vaughn set the table for leftfielder Ken Varnes after right center Curtis Bryan flied out to right. Varnes came to the plate and cleared the bases with a three-run shot to the left-field fence for BIC's first score of the game.

One out later, a single and two walks off of Headhunter pitcher Davies loaded the bases for outfielder Michael Massey, who promptly lined a single to right to drive in two runs. BIC coaxed a walk out of Davies before he got Rose to ground out to second to end the inning.

BIC inched ever closer with a single run in the top of the fifth inning to cut the lead to 8-6 on a walk, a single and a fielder's choice run batted in by right fielder Michael Willis.

In the bottom half of the inning, the Headhunters got their final run of the game on a lead-off double by third baseman Raul Guillent and a sacrifice fly to center by rightfielder Radames Mendoza to go up 9-6.

With the one-hour time limit looming close, BIC got one more shot to tie or take the lead in the top of the sixth inning.

A two-out double by Bryan and a single to left off the bat of Varnes cut the lead to 9-7, but that would be as close as BIC would get, as pitcher Gerald Ransom flied to left to end the game.

In game two, the Headhunters couldn't keep the Dogs of Company D at bay, dropping a 12-7 decision in the nightcap.

A line drive to left off the bat of rightfielder Malik Burse put runners in scoring position at second and third. Third baseman David Childers smacked a double to left center to score both runners, then was caught in a rundown between second and third for the third out of the inning.

The Headhunters didn't wait for the phone to ring to answer the bell in the bottom of the first, scoring six runs of their own to take a 6-3 lead.

Herrell opened the frame with a double. Outfielder Lewis Crain slapped a single to left.

Davies flied out to left center, scoring Herrell from third. Davis lined a single to right center to score Crain. Davis moved to third on a throwing error by right center fielder Steve Deets.

Mendoza doubled to center, driving in Hughes and moving runners to second and third. Leftfielder Anthony Gordon lined a single to left to score both Reams and Mendoza. Strode ended the inning with a flyball to right. After one full inning, the score was Headhunters 6, Dogs 3.

In the top of the third inning, the Dogs scratched out a single run on a triple by Karns and an RBI fly out by leftfielder Clyde Parker to cut the lead to 6-4.

The Dogs cut the lead to one at 6-5 in the top of the fifth inning on a walk to pitcher Donald Nunnally, a fielder's choice by first baseman Thomas Barnes and an RBI single by Karns.

In the bottom of the sixth inning, the Headhunters tallied their final run of the evening on a bases-loaded walk to Davis to score Herrell from third and push the lead up to 7-5 with one inning to play.

In the top of the seventh inning, the Dogs roared to life, scoring seven runs to take a 12-7 advantage. Two walks to start the inning gave Karns a chance to drive in his third run of the game and go four for four at the plate. Karns lined a single to right, scoring one run. Parker doubled to center driving in two runs and putting another runner in scoring position.

Wiley lined to center for the first out of the inning. Jones popped out to the Herrell behind first base for the second out and Parker moved to third on the play.

Yoshukai Karate Club

Nine members of the Yoshukai Karate Club of Fort Benning brought home 12 trophies from the Covington, Ga., Open Karate Championships last month.

The club, according to coach Ron Ziss, made an impressive performance considering that five members of the team, who ranged in age from 6 to adult, were participating in their first tournament competition.

Second place in the 9- and 10-year-old blue-and-green-belt kumite division was taken by Jeremy Gomez.

Stephanie Gomez won fourth place kata honors in the 9- and 10-year-old yellow-belt division.

Scott Pruitt won second place in kata in the 14- and 15-year-old green-belt competition.

Brian Lee Guy won first place in kumite and first place in kata in the 16- and 17-year-old green-belt division.

Destin offers saltwater fishing thrills

By Kevin Lee McIver
USAIC Public Affairs Office

COMMENTARY

If you're ready for some of the best fishing action you've ever experienced, it's time to head south to the warm waters of the Gulf of Mexico.

Saltwater fishing is some of the most exciting fishing there is, and Destin, Fla., offers it all. From bottom fishing with live bait in the Choctawhatchee Bay to trolling artificial lures some 20 miles off the coast, you can limit out on red snapper, mingos and bonitas.

Diversity is the greatest thing about saltwater fishing — you never know what's going to strike. The first time you drop your line, you might reel in a 5-pound trigger fish. The next time you might catch an eel or an octopus. It is this element of the unknown that makes saltwater fishing truly exhilarating.

Located about 220 miles from Fort Benning, Destin is an easy drive during any long weekend and reasonable accommodations can be found at the U.S. Army Infantry Center's Recreation Area or at nearby Eglin Air Force Base.

During Memorial Day weekend, I had the opportunity to do a little saltwater fishing over the four-day holiday. I gotta tell you that this was some of the best action I've seen in a while. To best describe the type of fishing down there, I'll give you a day-by-day breakdown.

On day one, we fished inside the Choctawhatchee Bay from one of the rock points off Eglin Air Force Base. My wife and I arrived late but decided to fish anyway. We fished for most of the afternoon and caught a lot of pinfish (similar to bream) using squid and shrimp for bait.

Most of the fish we caught were small, but we did get some hard strikes. The most exciting action came from a stingray that kept hitting my bait and chasing it to the shore as I would reel in each time.

The next day, things began to pick up. After renting a pontoon boat from the USAIC Recreation Center for $50, we headed to the middle of the bay. Now as an old country boy, I've caught a lot of catfish, but never knew that a saltwater species existed. Using squid and cut-bait we pulled in about 15 cats and one blowfish in four hours.

Now I have to tell you that blowfish was probably one of the ugliest critters I've ever seen, but he put up a good fight.

The best fishing seemed to be in the middle of the bay, even though we did try right under the Bay Bridge by the U.S. Coast Guard station.

On the third day, we decided to head out into the Gulf on an afternoon fishing trip with one of the local commercial operators. Departing at 1:30 p.m., it took about an hour to reach the first fishing area, some eight miles offshore.

If you haven't tried one of these trips, it's a good way to go. For about $27 per person, they'll take you out for half a day and they do most of the work from cutting up your bait to taking your fish off the hook and putting it in the cooler.

After maneuvering the boat, which holds 20 to 40 anglers, the crew sounds a horn and everybody drops their lines. If you aren't catching anything, the ship's captain will blast the horn again to reel in, and then the boat moves to another location.

We were fishing in water about 80 feet deep and pulled in five trigger fish and one red snapper that weighed in at 20 pounds altogether. We also caught a few eels but after taking one look at them, you know that's not something you want to keep since they're even uglier than a blowfish.

After returning to the dock, members of the crew clean and bag your fish for you. Not a bad deal at all considering you're worn out by that time.

On the last day, we decided to head out on an all-day fishing trip with the Eagle Ark II, Eglin Air Force Base's vessel. We left port at 7 a.m. and returned at 5:30 p.m. This costs $35 per person.

On the all-day trips, you'll head out to about 20 miles offshore in 150-foot water. This is where the excitement really begins. Now we pulled in a lot of fish, mostly mingos and queen snappers, but some 10-pound groupers were caught. After hearing someone yell "shark off the starboard bow," I quickly dropped my line over the side of the ship and instantly three fish were attacking it. Although they were about three feet long and looked like sharks from the top, in reality they were suckers that attach themselves to sharks. Anyway I pulled one in and it proved to be quite a fight.

All in all, we caught some 40 fish and had a great time. I kept looking for that "big one" but maybe next time.

If you decide to take a fishing trip with one of the commercial operators, there's no need to buy a Florida fishing license. In the event that you decide to go it alone, you can buy a non-resident seven-day permit for $17. If you do decide to go it solo, then ensure you know what type of fish you put in the basket as the Florida Marine Patrol conducts random checks and any violation can result in stiff penalties. In other words stay legal and you'll be OK.

Destin offers you a great place to catch some saltwater fish without the hassles of the "younger" crowd at some of the other tourist hot spots. It's a great place to relax and have some fun with the entire family.

If you haven't headed south for some sun 'n' fun, then maybe you should consider it for your next vacation. There's some fun things to do and the fishing is terrific. Good luck and see you at the fishin' hole.

Army wrestlers go national

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The All-Army Wrestling team placed six members onto the U.S. National team with top three finishes at the United States World Team Greco-Roman trials June 10 through 13, in Rochester, Minn.

Spc. Shon Lewis of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 29th Infantry Regiment claimed a spot on this year's World team with a first-place win and will represent the Army and the United States in international competition in Varsovie, Poland, Aug. 6 through 8, then at the World championships in Stockholm, Sweden, Sept. 7 through 20 and finally at the World Cup of wrestling in Heinola, Finland, Oct. 31 through Nov. 8 .

Spc. Martin Strmiska, Spc. Kenneth Owens, Spc. James Demos, Sgt. Derrick Waldroup and 1st. Lt. Jerry Jackson also of the 29th Infantry Regiment will join teammates Staff Sgt. Edward Mitchell of Fort. Drum, N.Y., and Spc. Keith Idleburg of Fort Polk, La., on the U.S. National team which will be heading for Colorado Springs, Colo. for the World team training camp Aug. 2 through Sept. 4 and then the National team training camp Jan. 26 through Feb. 5.

The National team will be competing in international tournaments in Cuba, Sweden, Bulgaria, Hungary and Greece beginning in February and ending in March.

The last All-Army wrestler to make the World team was Waldroup in 1986 and 1987. The most the Army has ever put on the National team at any one time was four. Last year Lewis and Olympic Bronze Medal winner Rodney Smith each won Silver Medals at the World Cup.

Wheels will turn to fight MS

National Multiple Sclerosis Society

ATLANTA—One-thousand cyclists are expected to ride 150 miles in two days Sept. 18 and 19 to help conquer multiple sclerosis. Last year, nearly 800 cyclists raised $205,000.

Jim Kennedy, chairman and chief executive officer of Cox Enterprises, is honorary chairman of the 1993 MS 150 Bike Tour. Kennedy was captain of the four-man bicycling team, which set a world's record in the 1992 Race Across America (Irvine, Calif., to Savannah, Ga. in six days, 37 minutes).

"The MS 150 Bike Tour is a great way to have fun, get some exercise, and help a lot of people and their families cope with multiple sclerosis," said Kennedy. "I hope everybody of any age who can cycle will join us in September."

The MS 150 is a fully catered tour which provides rest stops every 10 miles along the route, bike mechanic vans, qualified medical personnel, communications, overnight accommodation, luggage transportation and all meals.

The tour departs from Atlanta and travels to Lake Jackson, near Covington (where "In the Heat of the Night" is filmed). Participants spend the night and travel back to Atlanta the following day. Cyclists collect pledges for every mile they ride and a minimum of $150 in pledges is required.

Multiple sclerosis is the most common neurological disease of young adults aged 20 to 40. It short circuits the central nervous system causing paralysis, blurred or double vision, slurred speech, muscle weakness, unusual fatigue and bladder and bowel dysfunction. There is no known cause or cure, yet.

Money raised from the MS 150 Bike Tour will fund medical research seeking the cure for multiple sclerosis and provide programs and services for the 4,000 Georgians with MS.

Sponsors of the tour include: WSB-TV, AM 750-WSB and B98.5-FM, The Atlanta Journal/Constitution, Nabisco, Gorin's, Lt. Helmets, Creamette, Power Bar, Bally's, Teledyne, Backroads Bicycling Touring, Belca Food Service, Good Ol' Days, Continental Airlines, 10-K, Crystal Springs and Miller Lite.

To register or volunteer for the MS 150, call the National Multiple Sclerosis Society Georgia Chapter at 984-9080 (in Atlanta) or (800) 822-3379.

Coast Guard Academy News

Karate classes are being offered on post.

Yoshukai black-belt instructor Ron Ziss trains approximately 40 people, including some adults. Training is at two locations - the Youth Activities Center and at the Officers' Club Fitness Center. The Officers' Club Fitness Center also accepts nonmilitary students.

Youth Services karate classes are Mondays and Wednesdays from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

The Officers' Club Fitness Center holds classes for children Saturdays and Sundays. Classes for beginners are from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. or from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. on both days. Advanced classes are from 1:15 to 3:15 p.m. both days. A summer program is scheduled with day classes being given Monday through Thursday.

Adult classes at the Officers' Club Fitness Center are Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

The children's programs are designed to build up both their mental and physical talents. Students are taught the value of patience and perseverance. Self-discipline is stressed as the way to achieve their goals and no short cuts are allowed.

Ziss is a member of the Mike Foster Yoshukai International Karate Association, which has groups throughout most of the continental United Sates as well as in Germany, Puerto Rico, New Zealand and other countries.

For more information, contact Youth Services at 545-3070, the Officers' Club Fitness Center (Lulu Stone) at 687-0871 or Ziss at 324-3113.

Fatherhood means giving love, values

By Jon Maas
USAIC Chaplains' Office

REFLECTIONS

Father's Day has been celebrated since the early 1900s but only became law when President Richard Nixon signed legislation decreeing the holiday in 1973.

On Father's Day, we seek to honor our fathers and remind them of their importance in our lives.

This holiday is also an excellent time for fathers to review the calling and responsibilities of their role.

Consider the following story:

A few years ago, a minister received an urgent and unusual invitation to visit a military academy, in which the students had mutinied. The students had struck in everything, to include lessons, study hours and drill.

The principal handed the minister a large number of telegrams that had come from the parents who had been wired regarding the situation. These messages gave insights into the various boys' homes and the parental relationships connected with them.

One father wired his son, "I expect you to obey." Another said, "If you are expelled from school, you needn't come home." Still another, "I'll send you to an insane asylum if you are sent home." Another said, "I'll cut you off without a shilling if you disgrace the family." But the best message was couched in these laconic words: "Steady, my boy, steady! Signed, Father."

The last was a man who believed in his son and there is probably no greater influence upon a child than a father who respects the spirit of his son and treats him like a man.

Today our country is in need of fathers who will devote themselves to raising children who are confident of their relationships with their fathers. This confidence doesn't come from giving children money, gifts, inheritance or even a good education. Rather, this confidence comes from sharing time and values with children.

Consider the following example as a possible way to be a father to your children.

A young successful attorney said, "The greatest gift I ever received was a gift I got one Christmas when my dad gave me a small box. Inside was a note saying, 'Son, this year I will give you 365 hours: an hour every day after dinner. It's yours. We'll talk about what you want to talk about, we'll go where you want to go, play what you want to play. It will be your hour.'

"My dad not only kept his promise," he said, "but every year he renewed it and it's the greatest gift I ever had in my life. I am the result of his time."

The nature of Army deployments and separations may prevent you giving your children an hour in the same way each day, but you understand the general idea.

All fathering requires is the giving of your time, thoughts and self to your children. You are much more important to them than your money or your list of rules. In other words your children need your values, your love and your companionship. They need you to appreciate them as children who can be trusted to carry on the family name and reputation.

And lastly, this Father's Day, remember God our Father. His loving acceptance of us forgives us for our sins and draws us back to his love and help. He demonstrates the true nature of the perfect father. He always has time to listen to our prayers, he always is willing to wait for us to ask him for help and he never condemns us when we fall short of his expectations.

On Father's Day, we who are fathers should seek to be more like our heavenly father. Then our children will truly be able to enjoy showing their love and appreciation for us.

Integrity's not for sale

REFLECTIONS

Recently I had one of those ethical dilemmas that force us to make difficult choices.

I went to get my van's condenser serviced locally. The service manager told me where I could pick up a condenser myself, instead of the staff at the store getting it for me. He told me to get it and the store would install it; thus saving me a considerable amount of money. I agreed.

When I went to the other place to purchase the condenser, the staff also offered to install it for me and save me even more money. That is where the dilemma occurred.

I could have accepted his offer and saved about $50. But, not only had I promised to have the other company install it, but I realized that the service manager had saved me money by informing me where I could buy the part, saving his own self-interest in the process. He did not have to offer me that information.

After he did that, could I in good conscience refuse the service I had agreed he would perform, because he wouldn't do it as inexpensively as at the place I purchased the part?

Sometimes, integrity is costly. Most of the time it costs lots more than $50. In the Old Testament, Daniel and his three friends put their lives on the line by refusing to bow down and worship the king as a god. The politically correct action would have been to bow before the king but the right thing was to worship no one but the Lord. They chose the latter, knowing God always vindicates a person who walks in integrity. They were prepared to die to do the right thing.

Proverbs 22:1 says a good name is more desired than riches. In a world of schemers who devise plans to get rich quick, to outwit the system, to advance at someone else's expense, it is refreshing to see someone walk with integrity, not trying to parlay every opportunity to his or her own personal advantage. I am attracted to such people and can always count on them to do the right thing.

Everyday you have numerous choices to do the right thing. By the grace of God go ahead and do them, knowing in the long run you will find favor not only with man but with God.

PRIMUS
PRIMUS IS CHANGING

On February 1, 1993, the Columbus PRIMUS Clinic became the PRIMUS Family Practice Clinic. As of this date, the clinic will be open to non-active duty military beneficiaries registered in the Army's Gateway To Care Program and enrolled to receive their primary health care at PRIMUS. As a Family Practice Clinic, PRIMUS will expand its services and offer its enrolled members:

- Comprehensive family practice medicine, including routine physicals, treatment of a wider range of acute and chronic conditions, and extensive laboratory and radiology testing.
- Guidance for all healthcare treatment, including diagnostic testing, speciality referrals, and follow-up care.
- Both scheduled appointments and walk-in visits.
- Telephone consultation with qualified healthcare personnel to determine whether and when to seek medical care.

To enroll as a member of the PRIMUS Family Practice, active duty family members and retirees and their families should attend one of the Army's Gateway To Care briefings or contact the MACH Health Care Finder at 544-1447/1591. Enrolled members can receive more information on our Family Practice services by calling the clinic at 561-7066.

Savings bonds make sense — and dollars

By Patti Herron
Army Community Service

It makes good money sense to buy U.S. Savings Bonds when saving accounts are earning between 2.5 percent to 3 percent and certificates of deposit are earning between 3.75 percent and 4.93 percent. U.S. Savings Bonds are now earning a fixed 4 percent. Before March 1, they were earning a guaranteed 6 percent.

The change was brought about by the slumping interest rates in financial markets.

The change will not affect U.S. Savings Bonds purchased before March 1. U.S. Savings Bonds purchased before the change still have a 6 percent guaranteed minimum rate if held at least five years.

Even though the guaranteed rate has been lowered, new bondholders might still earn more than 4 percent. Why? Because on the first of each May and November, the Treasury sets what is called the semi-annual rate, which is based on market interest rates. U.S. Savings Bonds held five years or longer pay either the guaranteed rate or an average of the semi-annual rates, whichever is higher.

Because of the lower interest rates, U.S. Savings Bonds will reach face value in 18 years, instead of 12 years at 6 percent. U.S. Savings Bonds can be cashed in six months after issued date for purchased price plus interest earned.

For more information about U.S. Savings Bonds write to: U.S. Savings Bonds Division, Treasury Department, Washington, D.C. 20226.

Ask for either "The Savings Question and Answer Book" or "Questions and Answers About the Education Savings Bond."

You can also ask for a copy of the redemption-value table for U.S. Savings Bonds purchased since 1980.

SUMMER SAFETY

Treat sprains with care

By Manuel Gonzalez
Martin Army Community Hospital

Sprained ankles are one of the more common injuries medical professionals treat during the summer because of increased activity in outdoor sports.

This injury, though generally not critical, is of particular concern when treating children and young adults.

The growth plate on young people may not be fully developed, and could lead to abnormal bone growth if fractured.

When the ankle is sprained, the application of one's weight may cause extreme discomfort and may even cause the individual to fall, causing further injury.

Ankle sprains can be categorized as either first, second or third degree, depending on the severity of the injury.

First-degree ankle sprains are usually mild, with minimal swelling, rarely bruised, and minor pain with weight bearing.

The ankle should be iced immediately and probably treated with a wrap.

Additional treatment would include acetaminophen or aspirin for pain, and elevation or rest for the first 24 hours.

Mild or first-degree sprains can usually be resolved within two to four days without any problems.

Second- and third-degree ankle sprains are more serious. In a second-degree ankle sprain, there is usually a partial tear of the supporting ligaments that hold the ankle joint together.

The swelling is more noticeable with apparent bruising on the side of the ankle.

Third-degree ankle sprains usually involve a complete tear of the supporting ligaments and a small fracture can also occur.

Swelling is worse with almost immediate bruising and moderate to severe pain with minimal movement of the ankle.

Second- and third-degree ankle sprains should be handled with great care, so as to reduce the risk of further injury.

The ankle should be immobilized as well as possible and generous amounts of ice used to reduce the swelling.

No weight should be placed on the injured ankle, and the person should be taken to receive immediate medical attention.

CRIME WATCH

Military Police Activity

The following entries were extracted from the Fort Benning Military Police blotter May 18 to 24. Such entries may be incomplete and are not the adjudication of the guilt or innocence of any person.

This week's hot topic concerns illegally connecting television cable to your quarters in order to receive cable service without paying for it. This is known as theft of services. This crime is similar to shoplifting in the sense that honest consumers eventually pay higher price for the service.

The Cable Commission Act of 1984 states that any interception, reception, or assistance in the interception, reception of cable services without the consent of the cable company is illegal. The maximum punishment is $1,000 in fines and/or six months in jail. Don't be a thief. If you are illegally receiving cable service, disconnect it and contact the cable company to have it installed legally.

• A family member was charged with making terroristic threats and destroying property after she telephoned another family member and threatened to inflict serious bodily harm against her. She then drove to the victim's quarters and tore her mailbox from the wall.

• A specialist was charged with failure to drive on a roadway laned for traffic, failure to report a traffic accident, and no proof of insurance. She fell asleep while driving, struck a drainage ditch and flipped the car twice. She then left the scene of the accident without reporting it to the MPs.

• A sergeant was charged with obstructing law enforcement, drunk and disorderly conduct, and failure to obey a lawful order. He was causing a disturbance at his quarters and refused to comply with the MPs or his unit charge of quarters.

• A family member was charged with simple assault after she bit her husband on the back during an argument.

• A civilian employee reported that persons unknown broke in to an arcade game machine and removed the money from it.

• A sergeant first class was charged with making a fraudulent claim when she falsified receipts of damages to her household goods.

• A private was charged by civil authorities with disorderly conduct and possession of a dangerous weapon after he pulled a lock-blade knife on a customer at an off-post lounge.

• A staff sergeant reported that persons unknown removed two basketball goals, three speakers, and several other items from a gymnasium.

• A captain reported that persons unknown broke into a government truck and stole approximately $4,000 worth of tools while it was en route from California to Fort Benning.

This week's booby prize is awarded to the civilian who was selling stolen government tools. Local authorities received a tip that he was selling the tools from the trunk of his car. Three large boxes of government tools were found in the trunk and he admitted to pawning several tools at a local pawn shop. The total value of the stolen property is approximately $3,000.

Other activities included 16 traffic accidents and five reports of shoplifting at facilities on post. There were eight cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, 20 cases of larceny of private property and four cases of larceny of government property.

Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best — Give Crime Arrest." Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5223 or the "Crime in Progress" line at 545-2222.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Lloyd N. Bell
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

"Open your wallet, knucklehead. You broke it, you pay for it." To the many soldiers who have had the misfortune of damaging government property, this reproach from the commander should sound quite familiar.

What often begins as an innocent mishap on the part of the soldier ends as a dreaded Report of Survey. The damning survey can cost you more than your self-respect; it can cost you up to a full month's pay. Now, you may ask, "What are my rights? How can I fight this? What if I just apologize to my commander for losing my M-16?"

You can only be found financially liable for lost or destroyed government property if you were negligent, and your negligence was the proximate cause of the loss. Negligence is the failure to act as a reasonable person would have acted under the circumstances.

For example, if you loan your PV-7 night vision goggles to your second cousin, Jimbo, to use for deer hunting, and the goggles are damaged, the commander will probably find that you were negligent. That is, a reasonable person would not loan someone his night vision goggles.

But who is this so-called "reasonable person" who sets the standard? He is an average person in the same or similar position as the soldier accused of damaging government property.

If the accused soldier is a private first class, his actions must be measured against what a reasonable private would do under the circumstances.

Even if it is determined that you were negligent, before you can be held financially liable for the loss or damage of government property, it must be shown that your negligence was the proximate cause of the loss.

COMMENTARY

Proximate cause is perhaps the most difficult concept to grasp in the entire Report of Survey. The best way to think about proximate cause is to think of the old board game "Mouse-Trap."

If you recall, a ball is placed at the top of a ramp that sets in motion a chain reaction where the ball hits levers, triggers and catapults and eventually drops a trap on an unfortunate mouse. Arguably, the initial placing of the ball on the ramp caused the trap to fall on Mickey, but the proximate cause of the trap falling was the ball hitting the lever that actually triggered the trap.

Unless the soldier's negligence was the proximate cause of the loss or damage, he cannot be held liable for the loss. The following is a good example of soldier's negligence being the proximate cause of a loss. Private Snuffy places his M-16 against a track vehicle and goes to sleep.

The vehicle drives away, crushing the rifle. The negligence is obvious (leaving his rifle unsecured) and the proximate cause of the damage was the soldier placing the rifle against the track. Most surveys are not this obvious.

The most common question soldiers have about the survey is, "How can I get off the hook?" The best way to rebut the survey is to show that you were not negligent. Alternatively, you should argue that even if you were negligent, your negligence was not the proximate cause of the loss or damage.

My experience has been that the most successful rebuttals are those that lay responsibility on a third party. You must understand that commanders want complete accountability of all equipment, and are often reluctant to let you off the hook.

The best way to avoid a Report of Survey is to do your job safely and exercise good common sense.

Officers' Club makes fitness a family affair

By Kimberly Bennett
Directorate of Community Activities

Physical fitness is a family matter at the Fort Benning Officers' Club.

The Family Fitness Center, located in the Officers' Club, is open to all club members and their guests and offers physical activities for every member of the family, according to LuLu Stone, the center's manager.

It is offering special youth programs aimed at all Fort Benning children who want to stay active while they are out of school.

Each children's program has a registration fee for members and an additional fee for nonmembers.

The children's programs include a one-week swimming course for infants, toddlers and preschoolers as well as two-week courses for beginner and advanced swimmers.

Tennis lessons are available as well. Children 8 years of age and older can take a two-week class from tennis pro Pete Bacerra.

Children will have their own aerobics class this summer. Instructor Lyn Belleau will teach the two-week youth aerobics course and will be the only adult in the room.

Ziss is the instructor of the Fort Benning Yoshukai Karate Club, which earned 12 trophies at the Covington Open Karate Championships in May.

For the adults in the family, the Family Fitness Center has activities to suit every interest.

The center has a complete set of Nautilus equipment and free-weights and, after the workout, members can return to the locker rooms and unwind in the sauna or whirlpool.

For an aerobic workout, members can work out on treadmills, life cycles and step machines.

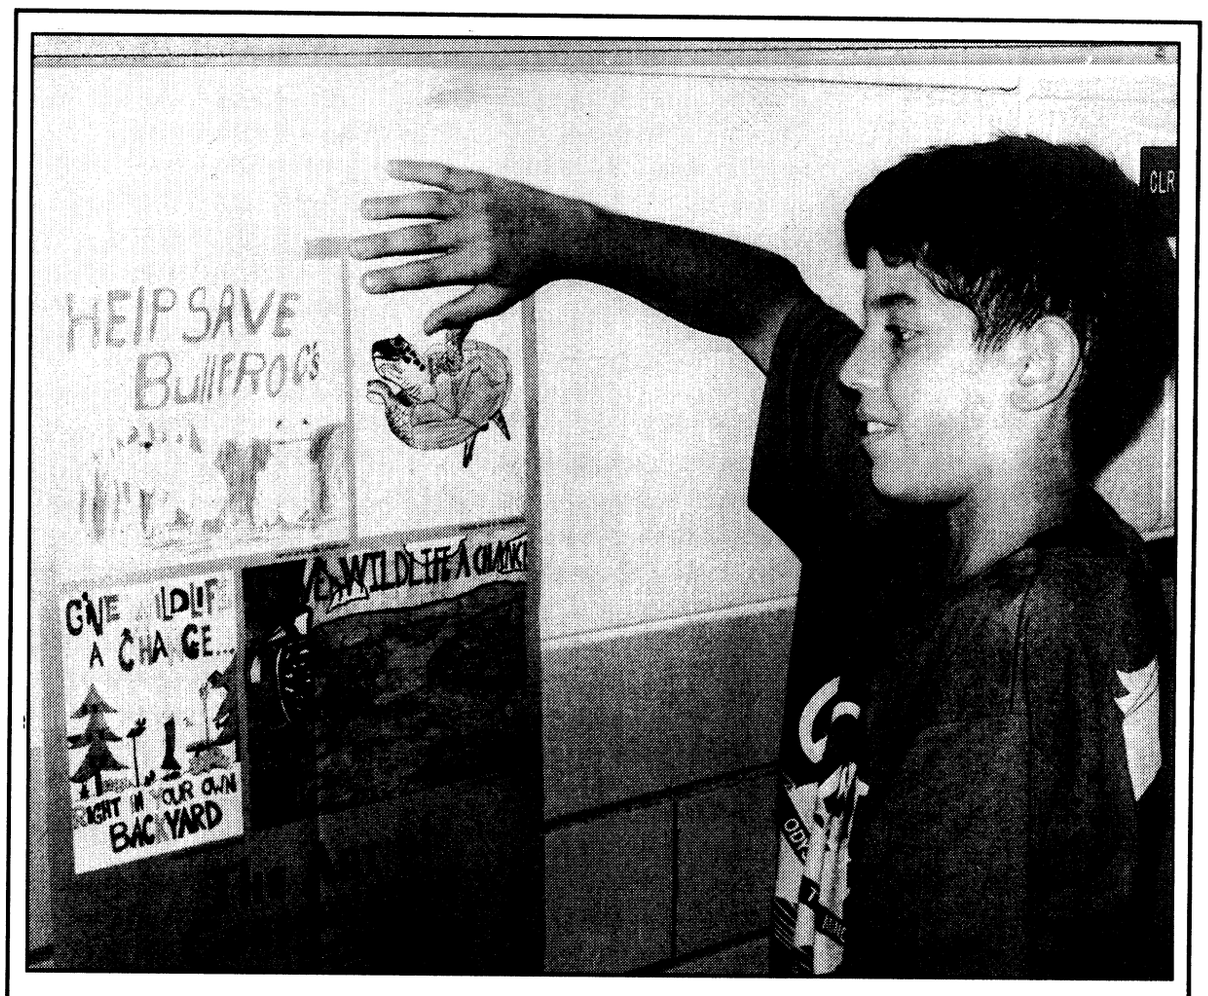
Classes can be paid for by the class or with special discount booklets that include 15 classes for members and 12 for nonmembers.

For outdoor activity, the Family Fitness Center has eight clay tennis courts open daily from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., a family pool, an adult pool and a kiddie pool.

The pools are open Tuesday through Friday from noon until 6 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m.



The adult pool is open for lap swimming daily from 6 to 8 a.m., 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., and 6 to 7 p.m.

The center also offers adult tennis and swimming lessons for members and nonmembers.

The center is open Monday and Wednesday, 6 a.m. to 9 p.m.; Tuesday and Thursday, 6 a.m. to 10 p.m.; Friday, 6 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Saturday, 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.; and Sunday and holidays, 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.

For more information, contact Stone at 687-0871.

5th-grader wins poster contest

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

A student at Dexter Elementary School was selected as the state winner in the third annual "Give Wildlife A Chance" poster contest co-sponsored by the Georgia Department of Natural Resources' Nongame Endangered Wildlife Program and The State Botanical Garden of Georgia.

Frank Walsh, a fifth-grader, received a plaque, a matted copy of his poster, and a bird house at a ceremony in Forsyth, Ga., as his family looked on.

"The purpose of the contest is to spread the word about conservation," said Walsh. "Since I've won, the word is spreading to the students, and the programs here are great," he said. How does he feel about having the best poster in the state in his division? "I feel great!" Walsh replied.

"He is enthusiastic in everything about school," said Vicki Rogers, Dexter principal, about Walsh. "He always gives his best."

Walsh was also a member of the Dexter Odyssey of the Mind team that recently won the national competition in Washington, D.C.

The poster contest was open to all public and private schools in Georgia for students in kindergarten through fifth grade.

Winners were chosen from four divisions: kindergarten, first and second grade, third and fourth grade, and fifth grade.

Inspect car prior to vacation

Better Business Bureau

When your family loads up the car and hits the road for a vacation, you don't want to make any unexpected detours to a repair shop. To help you stay safely on course, here are some tips from the Better Business Bureau.

A pre-trip, preventive maintenance check by a reliable mechanic is your best assurance against unexpected breakdowns on the road. This check should include the oil level, the fluid levels of the brakes, power steering, cooling system, battery, transmission and windshield wipers. Check the car's tail and head lights, turn signals, brake lights and flashers. Also, have tire pressure adjusted and tires inspected, including the frequently neglected spare.

Despite your best preventive measures, your car may still break down while you are on the road. If that happens, get the car off the road and out of the flow of traffic. Make a quick check of the obvious, but often overlooked causes of engine failure. Is the car out of gas or oil? Are there loose connections? Are there wet engine parts?

If you must have repairs done away from home, ask the mechanic for a written estimate itemizing the parts and labor before any work is started. Specify that no repairs, other than what you originally authorize, should be done without your approval. Whenever possible, stay with your car while it is being serviced and don't be afraid to ask the mechanic questions. Insist on being given a repair order that lists all parts by description, number and cost, as well as the labor cost for each repair.

To best protect yourself, pay by credit card and be sure the credit slip contains the name and address of the business and makes reference to the itemized list or repair order you receive. Keep the receipts in a safe place in case problems develop later.

VOLUNTEERS NEEDED

Volunteer Resource Center

• The Concharty Council of Girl Scouts needs a community director, co-director and an assistant Daisy leader.

• Spouses of enlisted soldiers are invited to become actively involved in the Enlisted Spouses' Club.

• Volunteers are needed in the Thrift Shop Tuesdays and Thursdays and the first Saturday of each month. Individuals will gain retail experience while helping others.

• The Fort Benning Tae Kwon Do School needs volunteer instructors for children ages 5 to 17 years. Interested individuals must have a black belt in tae kwon do.

• The Directorate of Public Works needs individuals to assist with clerical tasks. Some assignments will provide word processing and data base experience.

• Fort Benning Red Cross needs adult volunteers to supervise the Youth Volunteer Program during the summer.

• Volunteers with library experience are needed at Sayers Memorial Library to assist the staff with shelving books, data entry and story time for children. Training and child-care costs are provided.

• The Rape Crisis Intervention Program is looking for volunteers. Training and child-care costs are provided.

• Several agencies need individuals to assist with clerical tasks. Some assignments will provide word processing and data base experience.

COMMISSARY CORNER

Fort Benning Commissary

How is it possible to have four months in July? Just ask your Defense Commissary Agency commissary officer.

In July, the Commissary not only celebrates Independence Day but also National Baked Bean Month, National Blueberry Month, National Hot Dog Month and National Ice Cream Month.

Also, July 18 is National Ice Cream Day.

All these items are available at your DeCA Commissary for the Fourth of July or any day during the month.

For the health and weight conscious, all of these items are available in 'lite' or reduced-calorie varieties.

Coast Guard wants 'seaworthy' cadets

Coast Guard Academy News

Applications are being accepted for both men and women. Appointments are tendered solely on the basis of an annual nationwide competition with no congressional nominations or geographical quotas. Applications must be submitted to the director of Admissions before Dec. 15.

Candidates must arrange to participate in either the College Board Scholastic Aptitude Test or American College Testing Assessment no later than the December ACT and SAT test administrations.

Appointments are tendered based on the candidate's high school record, performance on either the SAT or ACT, and leadership potential as demonstrated by participation in high school activities, community affairs or part-time employment.

Most successful candidates rank in the top quarter of their high school classes and have demonstrated proficiency in both the mathematical and applied science fields.

Candidates must be unmarried at the time of appointment, have no legal obligations resulting from a prior marriage, and must have reached the age of 17 but not 22 by July 1.

All candidates must be assured of high school graduation by June 30, 1994. All candidates must have completed a minimum of three years of English, and three in mathematics to include algebra and plane or coordinate geometry or their equivalents, and must fulfill basic physical requirements.

Coast Guard cadets obtain an undergraduate education at no personal expense. In addition, they receive pay and allowances. The constantly-updated academy curriculum leads to a bachelor of science degree with an emphasis on engineering and science.

Graduates of the academy are commissioned as ensigns in the U.S. Coast Guard. Selected officers may pursue further postgraduate education and specialized training at many civilian and military graduate or professional schools, in such fields as aviation, business administration, electronics, engineering, law and oceanography.

Under the Department of Transportation, the Coast Guard performs a variety of missions. These include search and rescue operations by ship and plane, maintenance of advanced electronic and other aids to navigation around the globe, operation of icebreakers that clear the way for all polar expeditions, and enforcement of marine law and all aspects of merchant marine safety.

In addition, the Coast Guard has responsibility for boating safety and marine environmental protection.

To obtain an application or further information write: Director of Admissions, U.S. Coast Guard Academy, 15 Mohegan Ave., New London, Conn. 06320 or call (203) 444-8501.

Community honors ITB, schools

Fort Benning Schools

The Fort Benning Schools and the Infantry Training Brigade were honored by the Combined Communities of Southeast Columbus, Keep Columbus Beautiful and the Chamber of Commerce Litter Awareness Committee June 7.

In a meeting at the Government Center, Lonnie Jackson, founder of the Combined Communities of Southeast Columbus, presented a plaque to the Fort Benning Schools and to ITB for participation in Operation Esprit de Corps.

Accepting the plaque in the name of the Fort Benning Schools were Dr. Dell Karr, assistant superintendent for curriculum, and Dr. Beth Middlemiss, director of staff development. Accepting the award for the ITB was Command Sgt. Maj. Sylvan B. Bauer Jr., brigade command sergeant major.

Students in each of the eight Fort Benning schools participated in Operation Esprit de Corps by taking its anti-litter pledge March 29. At that time, teachers and students also discussed the importance of an awareness of the environment and the responsibility that citizens have to promote a clean, litter-free environment.

ITB soldiers in One Station Unit Training recently picked up trash in an area off old Cusseta Road. The soldiers were with Company C, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment.

29th Infantry Regiment gets new commander

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Command of the 29th Infantry Regiment will change hands today in a 9 a.m. ceremony on Dickman Field on 1st Division Road, Harmony Church.

Col. Robert L. Jordan Jr., will assume command from Col. Gregory C. Camp.

Camp has commanded the 29th Infantry Regiment since June 1991. While commanding the 29th, the second largest major command at Fort Benning, Camp directed the training of tens of thousands of infantry soldiers from both the United States and foreign nations.

Camp was commissioned a second lieutenant from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., in 1968. He has held a number of command and staff positions both in the United States and overseas, including command of an infantry company in the 1st Cavalry Division in the Republic of Vietnam. He also had been assigned as the senior trainer for the Mechanized Infantry, Brigade Staff, and Live Fire Training teams, National Training Center, Fort Irwin, Calif.

In addition to his degree from West Point, Camp holds a master's degree from Georgia Institute of Technology. His military schooling includes the Armed Forces Staff College and the Army War College.

Among his awards and decorations are the Bronze Star with "V" device, Meritorious Service Medal, Air Medal, Army Commendation Medal with "V" device, the Vietnam Cross of Gallantry with Palm, the Combat Infantryman Badge and the Parachutist Badge.

Jordan was commissioned a second lieutenant of infantry from the U.S. Military Academy, West Point, N.Y., in 1968. He has been assigned to a number of command and staff positions both in the United States and overseas, including command of the 1st Battalion, 52nd Infantry, at the National Training Center. He served with the 173rd Airborne Brigade and 101st Airborne Division in Vietnam.

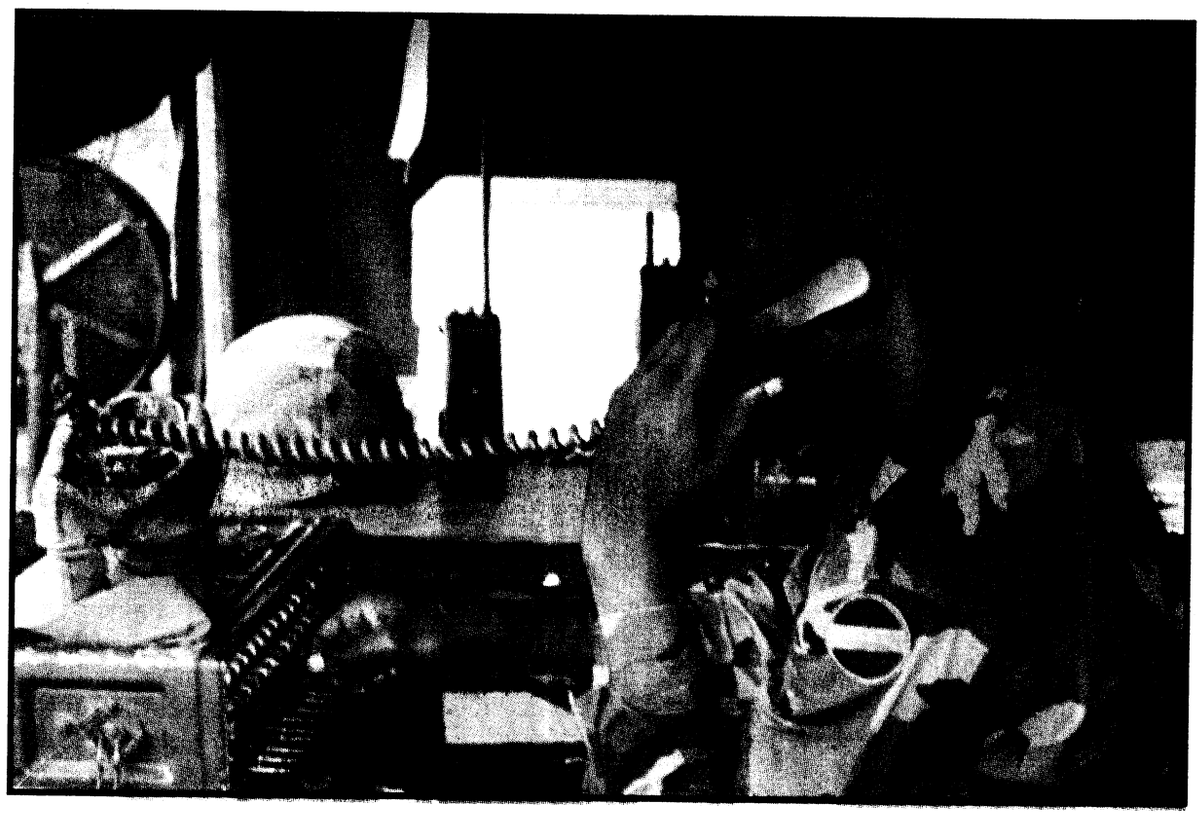
Jordan holds a bachelor's degree from Troy State University and a master of military arts and science degree from the Command and General Staff College.

Among his awards and decorations are the Legion of Merit, Bronze Star, Purple Heart, Meritorious Service Medal with four oak leaf clusters, Air Medal, Army Commendation Medal with two oak leaf clusters, five awards of the Army Achievement Medal and the Combat Infantryman Badge.

1st Battalion changes hands

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Command of the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment changed hands Wednesday at a 9 a.m. ceremony on Dickman Field on 1st Division Road, Harmony Church.



Lt. Col. French L. MacLean assumed command from Lt. Col. Robert M. Leon Jr.

Leon commanded the 1st Battalion since June 1991, which won top Army honors, the "Award for Maintenance Excellence," for the fifth consecutive year.

MacLean was commissioned an infantry officer in 1974 from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y. He has held numerous command and staff positions from rifle platoon leader to battalion executive officer. During the Gulf War, he was the operations officer for the 5th Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment of the 3rd Armored Division.

MacLean is a graduate of the Army Command and General Staff College and the School for Advanced Military Studies at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

Rangers support staging base

By Garrett Sheller
13th Corps Support Battalion

A remote marshalling and intermediate staging base was recently set up and operated at Lawson Army Air Field by the 13th Corps Support Battalion's Ranger Support Element in support of the Fort Lewis-based 2nd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment.

The unit deployed to Fort Benning and then to Puerto Rico as part of the training exercise Ocean Venture.

The marshalling and staging base was operational for seven days, providing rangers and support soldiers with a complete field bivouac and training site.

Support provided by the Ranger Support Element included tents, cots, two hot meals per day, electric lights and power generation, sanitation, transportation, vertical construction, maintenance, ammunition, materiel handling, land-line communications, bath and site security.

Lt. Col. "Spike" Rupert and Capt. Keith Hawkins, mission commander and support element commander respectively, said they were thoroughly pleased with the superb execution of the exercise by the Ranger Support Element soldiers.

"The soldiers did an outstanding job in support of the rangers," said Hawkins. "Although we conduct extensive training to make certain that we are well prepared to execute this kind of mission, this is the first time we have actually set-up and supported a ranger exercise of this magnitude.

"This successful mission revalidated our support procedures, and we remain completely confident that we can deploy and support ranger forces anywhere in the world."

Army leaders focus future on quality amid change

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Continuity amid change and growth — that's the crux of today's Army, said Army Chief of Staff Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan.

In their first joint interview, Sullivan and Army Sgt. Maj. Richard A. Kidd discussed the status of the Army drawdown with Soldiers Radio and Television and Soldiers magazine at the Pentagon May 28.

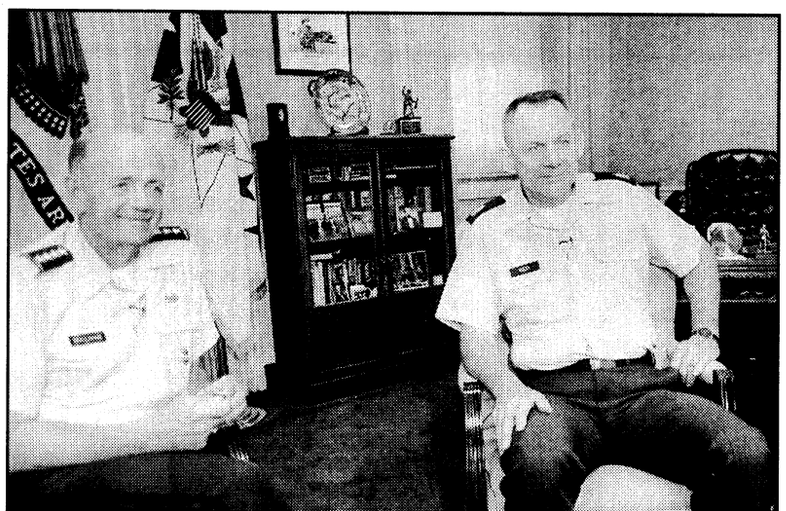
In the past two years, the Army has changed "in a very fundamental and significant way," Sullivan said. He cited five areas of change:

• The Armywide drawdown, from almost 1 million soldiers after the Gulf War to about 580,000 on active duty now.

• The reduction in Europe, from about 230,000 soldiers two years ago to about 100,000 today.

• The transition to a nonnuclear force. "All the nuclear weapons came back from Central Europe without a mishap or an incident. Most people didn't even know that the Army did it," said Sullivan.

• The removal of chemical weapons from Europe, "as if it were never going on; we're making it look easy."



• Budget cutbacks. "Almost 40 cents of every (Defense) dollar has ... gone to other national priorities (since 1991). You can't take these kinds of losses and not have an impact," Sullivan said.

Yet, as the Army draws down, its missions grow into humanitarian arenas such as Operation Restore Hope in Somalia. In addition to the troops permanently assigned overseas, more than 20,000 soldiers are serving in 65 countries worldwide, the chief said.

Despite the changes and growth, soldiers are "continuing to perform all of the missions given to them, regardless of the type of mission, very successfully," Kidd said. This is the continuity Sullivan spoke of — the Army's abiding service to America.

The key to continuity is keeping troops informed, so they can understand the changes and make personal and career decisions wisely, Kidd said.

"Communications are essential," he said, explaining that timely information reassures people and enables them to accomplish their missions. With information, soldiers "feel confident that they know what's going on and that they and their families are being taken care of."

Kidd takes to the road with his belief in communication, speaking to enlisted soldiers from the ranks of private to sergeant major around the world. Among all, he's found that one word encompasses the greatest issue concerning the Army: quality.

He said soldiers are concerned about quality training. And they want a high quality of life, quality transition services and quality retirement benefits. So, with one word, Kidd can discuss a wealth of issues with the range of soldiers he represents.

Besides having face-to-face discussions, the two leaders communicate through the latest installment of chain teaching, due out later this summer, Sullivan said. Chain teaching uses the chain of command to keep all soldiers and Army civilians up to date on the drawdown.

It will "provide a framework for discussion and dialogue at the company level," the chief said.

Communication helps soldiers concentrate on their missions, rather than the uncertain future, Kidd said. But only training can keep them ready to perform their missions.

Training grounds, such as the National Training Center at Fort Irwin, Calif., the Joint Readiness Training Center at Fort Chaffee, Ark., and the Combat Maneuver Training Center at Hohenfels, Germany, provide the arena for realistic practice of soldiers' skills. And, judging by the standards of these centers, the Army is "doing remarkably well," Sullivan said. "The level of performance is up."

In view of the Army's past and its current competencies, the two Army leaders are confident of the Army's future. And they say soldiers can look forward to good careers.

"We are going to exciting places," Sullivan said. "We're doing exciting things, and we are performing to standard. We're a disciplined organization, and this is going to be a great Army into the future.

"The United States Army is committed to remaining the best army in the world," he concluded. "And it'll stay the best army in the world because of ... the men and women who are out there serving in uniform and those who support us — whether they be family members or professional civilians."

WW II — A LOOK BACK

50 years ago this week ...

• Elements of the Naval forces assigned to support the Allied invasion of Sicily embarked from the British Home Fleet base at Scapa Flow as part of Operation Husky.

• The Royal Air Force Bomber Command conducted the first 'shuttle service' attack, dispatching planes to raid Spezia on their way back from a stopover in North Africa after bombing Friedrichshafen.

• The British command removed Gens. Sir Archibald Wavell and Sir Claude Auchinleck from posts after Winston Churchill lost faith in them. Both generals officially accepted promotion. Wavell became the viceroy of India, and Auchinleck took over as the nation's commander-in-chief.

• In Europe, England's radio service, the BBC, began broadcasting warnings to the French to avoid German production factories in France.

• In New Georgia, the 4th Marine Raider Battalion landed on Segi Point without meeting any resistance.

Soldier support, training high priority in TRADOC

TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — As Training and Doctrine Command officials work to prepare the Army for the future, everything they do — developing weapons systems, doctrine and training — is done with soldiers in mind.

The last of the "main points of effort" set down by Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr., TRADOC commander, is focus on soldiers.

"It's a responsibility of the leaders to see to it that our soldiers receive the training and skills needed to execute their mission. That's a matter of trust between leadership and soldiers," Franks said.

An example of such training is the recent addition of basic leadership combat skills to combat support and combat service support courses in the Noncommissioned Officer Education System.

It is expected that future battlefields will have no set front lines and no secure rear areas. Consequently, combat support and combat service support soldiers normally located behind the lines could find themselves engaged with enemy forces. Adding combat skills training to the NCOES courses will help those troops survive.

Superior equipment is also essential to soldiers' survival and victory on the battlefield. Equipment such as the new Paladin, the new M-109A6 155 mm self-propelled howitzer. With the Paladin, a crew can stop and fire on minutes without having to leave the vehicle.

With the older versions of the M-109, crews have to get out of the vehicle and prepare the howitzer for firing. The quickest firing times are 10 to 15 minutes slower than with the Paladin.

Today's Army leaders agree that soldiers must have more than top-notch training and equipment. TRADOC is leading the way in developing "soldier communities."

"If you ever lived in the barracks, you always had someone else telling you what color your room would be, how to make your bed, the order of clothing in your locker," said TRADOC Command Sgt. Maj. Walton Woodall.

But things are changing. Soldier communities will still have barracks, but there will be no more than two people per room for soldiers in grades below sergeant and one in each room for sergeant and above. Rooms will feature semi-private baths, cable television and telephone outlets.

In addition, these communities may include post exchanges, cafeterias and medical facilities.

"TRADOC is committed to not repeating the mistakes of the past," Woodall said. "We will now redesign rooms, replace furniture and provide services that reflect the values important to their (soldiers') health and welfare."

Communities will be developed with soldier involvement. Posts are surveying their troops to learn what they want in the barracks and the communities. The commands will then explore ways to provide soldiers the facilities they ask for.

"Regardless of who you are, you are a human being first; and, if you treat men and women as such, you get a better soldier," Woodall said.

"It's a matter of trust to see that our soldiers have equipment that gives us the edge, that our training is relevant and that there's a sense of family and command climate that promotes teamwork and a sense of ownership in the organization," Franks said.

Ammunition specialists keep marksmanship units shooting

By Anthony Jackson
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

As training is to force readiness, ammunition is to marksmanship. But, how many people realize all that is involved in the day of an ammunition specialist?

"I've been at the Marksmanship Unit since 1983," said Wilder, "and since that time I've helped the unit in its mission accomplishment every day. From the units' day-to-day activities to the numerous shooting matches hosted here (Conseil Internationale du Sport Militaire '84 and '92, U.S. Army Combined Armed Matches '92 and '93, and national matches), I've seen more rounds than I can remember shipped in and distributed to their respective shooters."

The AMU ammunition section is responsible for supporting the unit's shooters in their efforts to become the world's top shooters. AMU, however, is not their only responsibilty. They also provide ammunition and support to the U.S. Reserve shooting teams, the National Guard Marksmanship Training Unit and the U.S. Military Academy at West Point.

> "Without ammunition, shooters can't win the gold, soldiers can't train and the enemy can't be killed."
> — John Wilder
> U.S. Army
> Marksmanship Unit

Accountability is the name of the game when it comes to ammunition, said Wilder. "We annually forecast how much ammo will be needed to support the unit.

"The AMU is a unique unit," he said, "in that its mission is to shoot and win in competition. To do that, the shooters must practice daily. That means I've got to handle, manage and account for more than 500,00 rounds a month — more than 6 million rounds a year."

In terms of manpower — the section is two persons strong — that works out to a wealth of ammo.

"A wealth of ammunition is exactly what we deal with," said AMU ammunition specialist Spc. Diane Lowe. "We're responsible for more than $800,000 worth of Department of Defense Ammunition Code ammunition."

The ammunition is used not just for competition, but also for research development, test and evaluations said Wilder.

To ensure the rounds meet AMU standards, the ammunition is evaluated and tested to match certain lots with individual shooters.

There's more to ammunition, however, said Wilder, than the complete packaged bullet we see every day.

"We're required to account for loading components as well," he said, "such as the powder, primer, cartridge case and bullet. It goes without saying that to do that your books have to be right on the money."

Without ammunition and the proper accountability of it, shooters can't win the gold, soldiers can't train and the enemy can't be killed, said Wilder.

"I've seen several of our shooters return home with medals and awards." he said. "I've even seen some return home from conflicts. It's a satisfying feeling knowing my job and the work I do is the foundation from which a shooter's world springs."

President speaks to West Point cadets

Army News Service

The futures of 1,003 newly commissioned second lieutenants were recently intertwined with the future of the Army — an Army their commander-in-chief promised to support in his address to West Point graduates.

President Bill Clinton was the guest of honor at the May 29 graduation at the U.S. Military Academy, at West Point, N.Y., handing out diplomas and shaking hands with cadets as they crossed the graduation stage of the academy's Michie Stadium before a crowd of 30,000 spectators.

The president pledged his continued support to the cadet class of 1993, saying his "commitment and that of the Congress and the American people is to stand by you.

"That means before we ask you to put your life and the lives of those whom you command in harm's way, it is our solemn responsibility to take your advice, to give you the tools you need and then to give you our complete support.

"That is our pledge to your as you enter this career," he said.

He coupled his pledge to the cadets with a challenge of what lies ahead, saying that, "Someday, some of you here will be sitting in the situation room at the White House, or with the president, or with the secretary of Defense .... At that moment you will be called to give your advice on an issue that ... may be large and of incredible significance to the future of this country.

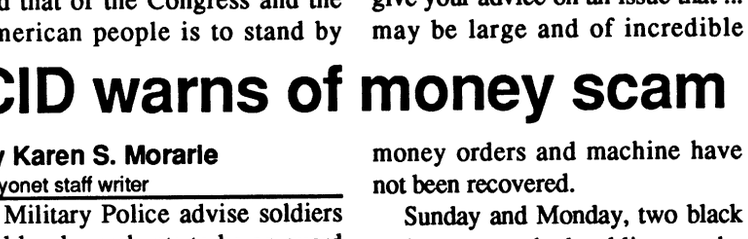
"I am proud of the work you do, honored to serve as your commander-in-chief, confident that all Americans join me in saluting your achievement, and very, very optimistic about the future of our nation in your hands," he said.

CID warns of money scam

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Military Police advise soldiers and local merchants to be on guard against a scam involving stolen money orders.

According to a spokesman for the 3rd Military Police Group (Criminal Investigation Division), 1,000 money orders and an imprinting machine were stolen from a local gas station between 11:30 p.m. Saturday and 4 a.m. Sunday. The money orders were drawn on the North American Money Order Company and are numbered 3351500 through 3450670.



Columbus Police have arrested a suspect for allegedly attempting to negotiate one of the stolen money orders, but the remaining money orders and machine have not been recovered.

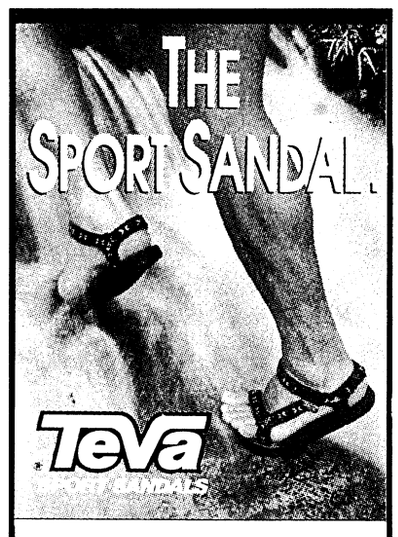
Sunday and Monday, two black males approached soldiers at the Post Exchange at the Main Mall and at the Sand Hill Post Exchange, requesting that soldiers cash money orders for them.

The individuals reportedly claimed they had lost or forgotten their military identification and needed money to fix a broken-down car. The soldiers cashing the money orders were offered between $20 and $25 for doing so.

Stolen money orders have also been cashed in the local community. CID advises anyone approached with a request to cash a money order to contact the Military Police immediately.

PET OF THE WEEK

This very affectionate and playful female tabby is looking for a home. She is approximately 1 1/2 years old, and is just one of many cats and dogs awaiting adoption at the Veterinary Services Office, Building 265.



For more information, contact the Veterinary Services Office at 545-1127. Hours of operation are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:30 am. and 12:45 to 3 p.m. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

If you have lost a pet, check the stray impoundment facility in Building 238. Animal control is a funtion of the Fort Benning Military Police, which pick up stray animals and take them to the impoundment facility.

Stray pets are given three working days to be claimed from the time they are picked up by animal control personnel.

If the pets are not claimed, they become government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies tags are the only way Veterinary Services can contact the owner of a lost pet. Pet owners are required to register their pets and update their records when changes occur. There is no charge to register pets on post unless a rabies vaccination is required, in which case the pet owner must pay the fee for the vaccination.

TIPS FOR MAKING YOUR AD MORE EFFECTIVE

- Start Your ad with the item you are selling, service you are offering, or job title you are looking to hire.
- Be descriptive. The more information you provide to the reader, the better the responses will be to your ad.
- Use bold type, white space of decorative characters such as stars, to bring attention to your ad.
- Run your ad for an ample length of time. Remember, as soon as you get results, you can cancel at any time during regular business hours.
- Always include the price of your item.

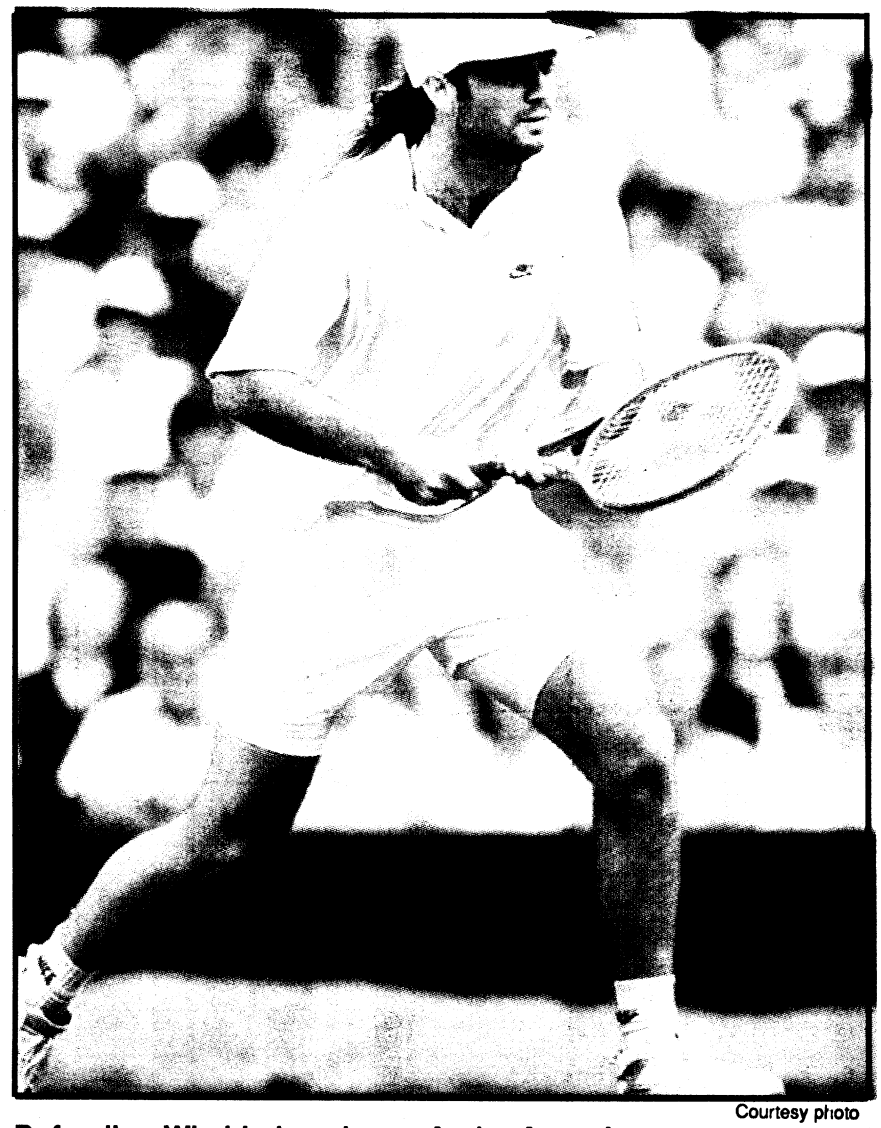
Get set for Wimbledon championships

By Jim Gaffney
Tribune Media Services

As strange as it sounds, Bud Collins wasn't thrilled about going to Wimbledon last year.



"I sort of dreaded showing up," he admits, "after the terrible final between Michael Stich and Boris Becker the year before. I was worried that Wimbledon was starting to suffer from those awful rackets the players were using, (which) make for such short points. But then, along comes Andre Agassi, who gave us the best final we've had in 10 years."

Agassi's five-set win over Goran Ivanisevic brought excitement back to the All-England Lawn Tennis and Croquet Club, reminiscent of the Borg-Connors-McEnroe battles in the early '80s.

This year's tournament begins on Monday and runs through July 4, when NBC presents — for the 15th consecutive year — its "Breakfast at Wimbledon" coverage of the men's singles final. Collins is joined for the fortnight by Dick Enberg, Chris Evert, John McEnroe and Hannah Storm.

Collins doesn't hesitate when asked where Wimbledon rates on his list of favorite events: "It's absolutely the pinnacle of my year. Doing television work there is the height of the game."

Defending Wimbledon champ Andre Agassi

What: "Breakfast at Wimbledon"
When: Monday through July 4 on NBC

It's not just 107 years of history that makes Wimbledon special, Collins claims. According to him, the event owes a lot to the people who stage it, and it's to their credit the tournament doesn't seem like the media and commercial circus the other grand slam stops have become. "Wimbledon is probably the most commercial of them all, (but) it's just that the English know how to do it so that nobody notices," Collins reasons. "It's very subtle. You won't see groups of sponsor representatives handing the trophy to the winner, like you do at the U.S. Open."

Indeed not, for the trophy presentation at Wimbledon is nothing if not time-honored. Watching the Duke and Duchess of Kent stroll across center court may not be very exciting, but tradition seldom is. Collins wouldn't have it any other way. "It's great because there's no public address system on the court," he says, "so the Duke and Duchess go out there to talk with the champions. It's probably the most banal conversation in history, but most people think with all the bowing that it must be very profound. It's not.

"The best line I ever heard," Collins continues, "was in 1967, when John Newcombe won and the Duchess of Kent asked him what he was going to do that night. Newcombe replied, 'Ma'am, I'm going to go out and get good and drunk.' It was a good Australian answer. God knows what Agassi said last year, but he looked and acted like Sir Walter Raleigh. That's the way they should keep it, with a little mystery."

Hoping for a great final this year, Collins doesn't expect Agassi to still be playing on the Fourth of July: "If he is able to defend his title, he'll be a miracle worker. He just hasn't played enough."

Dental clinic dedicated to late retired general

By Lawrence K. Hughes
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning's Dental Clinic No. 1 will now be known as the Walter D. Love Dental Clinic, following a dedication ceremony June 11. The clinic was named for the late retired Maj. Gen. Walter Love who was chief of the Dental Corps from 1950 to 1954. Monday, "Fort Benning Today" will highlight the ceremony that featured guest speaker Maj. Gen. Thomas Tempel, Dental Corps chief and deputy surgeon of the Army Medical Department, Washington, D.C.

June is Rape Awareness Month. Tune in to "Fort Benning Today" to see highlights of a lecture series offered by the Rape Crisis Intervention Program.

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel highlights post events and lists classified advertisements on the Fort Benning Community Bulletin Board featuring news and music from Soldiers Radio Satellite Network.

If you are a subscriber to Fort Benning Cable, you can watch USAIC TV on Channel 3, 24 hours a day. Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:26, 7:56, 8:26 and 8:56 on WLTZ TV-38.

For more information or to make suggestions, write or call the Broadcast Section of the Public Affairs Office, Infantry Hall, Room 602, 545-2201.

O'CLUB NEWS

Fort Benning Officers' Club

The Fort Benning Officers' Club has a variety of events planned for June.

Sunday — Father's Day Super Sunday Brunch

June 25 — Oldies-But Goodies, Bradley's, 8 p.m. to 2 a.m.

June 26 — Latino Night, Bradley's

June 26 through 27 — Sixth annual Bi-City Invitational Tennis Tournament; entry fee is $12 per singles, $20 per double; entries must be phoned in no later than Monday. Call 687-4516 for details.

June's feature menu item, beer and beef, includes a slice of roast beef, baked potato or french fries, salad and mug of beer for $5.

Summer youth activities are available at the fitness center. For a fee, children can take swimming, tennis, martial arts lessons or aerobics classes. Classes are available for adults as well. An additional $5 fee is required for nonmembers. All instructors are certified. Register at the fitness center from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. or call 687-0871 for details.

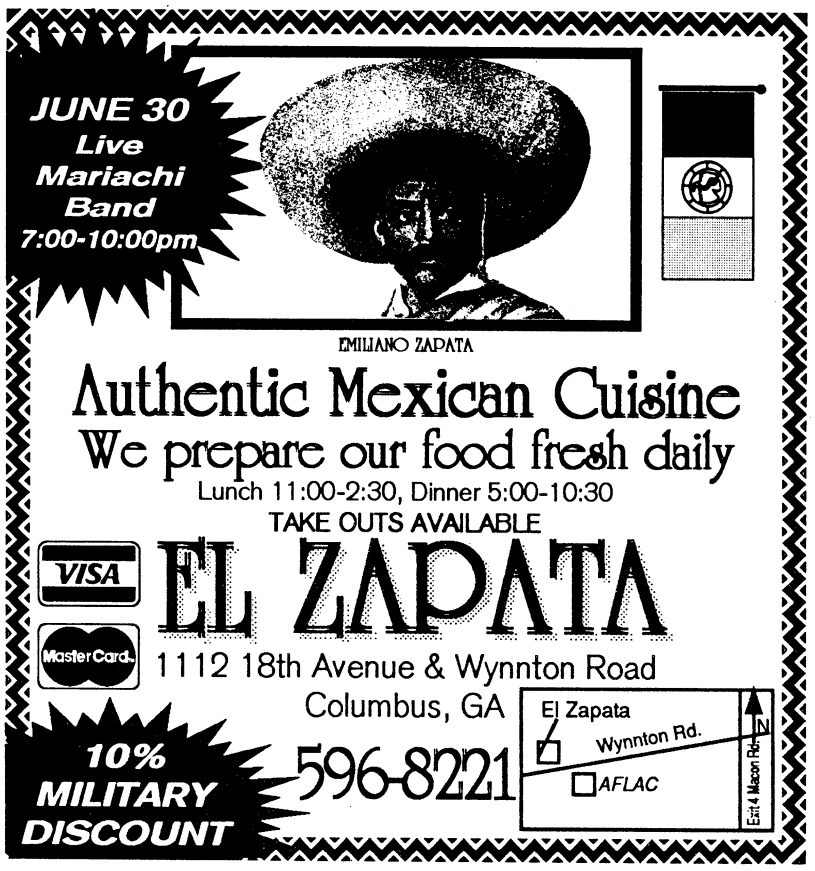
The prime rib special has been moved to Friday evenings.

Westville celebrates nation

Westville Historic Handicrafts, Inc.

Westville will celebrate the 75th anniversary of our nation's independence, while the rest of the country is celebrating the 217th.

The reason is that Westville will present a first-person composite of what West Georgians thought and felt on Independence Day 1851.



Since July 4 falls on a Sunday this year, all events will begin in the afternoon. The village will open at noon for those who wish to get a plate of barbecue (which will include side dishes prepared in the 1850s manner).

The parade will begin at 2:30 p.m. The parade route ends at the courthouse in Westville, where a reading of the Declaration of Independence and a "mythically accurate" oration will commence.

Following the program will be a variety of games.

On July 3, barbecue plates will be available at noon and blacksmithing, spinning, weaving, potterymaking, and cooking will be taking place.

Westville will be open July 5 with regular activity. For more information, write Westville, P.O. Box 1850, Lumpkin, Ga. 31815 or call (912) 838-6310.

UPCOMING EVENTS

DeepSouth play — AT&T Universal Card will present Tongues of Fire, winner of the DeepSouth New Play Contest held annually at the Springer Opera House.

First-place winning playwright Michael Maschinot has woven a suspense-mystery set in Florence during the Italian Renaissance. An artist is killed in a duel with an evil Dominican monk and the master's apprentice is forced to complete the fresco on the walls of a monastery.

The play will run Saturday through June 27 at Springer Opera House Actors Arena, 1022 First Ave., Columbus.

For tickets and information, call 327-5714.

Chet Atkins visit — The legendary Chet Atkins returns home to Georgia for two live performances at the Springer Opera House today at 8 p.m. and Saturday at 2:30 p.m. The event is sponsored by Poland Spring with additional support from Kissin' 99.3 FM. All seats are reserved and cost $25 plus tax. For more information, call 327-3688.

Aviation Reunion - The 174th Aviation Company will have a reunion Oct. 8 through 10 at Fort Walton Beach, Fla.

Pool Party — The Fort Benning Officers' Club will host a Pool Party Barbecue July 4 from 2 to 5 p.m. Bradley's will also be open during Independence Day.

Cavalry Bivouac — The U.S. Cavalry Association will hold its 1993 annual Bivouac at Manhattan, Kan., and Fort Riley, Kan., Sept. 24 to 26.

For hotel reservations, write to the Holiday Inn, 530 Richards Drive, Manhattan, Kan. 66502-3143 or call (913) 539-5311.

For additional information, contact the USCA's Headquarters, P.O. Box 2325, Fort Riley, Kan. 66442-0325 or call (913) 784-5797. All are welcome.

Drama classes — The Springer School of Theatre Arts is registering now for the spring quarter. Classes in acting, creative dramatics, auditioning, stage and costuming are being offered for children, teens and adults.

For more information, call the Springer Opera House at 324-1100.

Bluegrass jam session — A bluegrass jam session will be the last Sunday of every month at the Uchee Creek Lodge on post.

The sessions will begin at 2 p.m. Donations of $2 per person older than 16 years will be accepted to help pay the rent.

Call 298-4870 for details.

Quilts to cover Barnsley Gardens

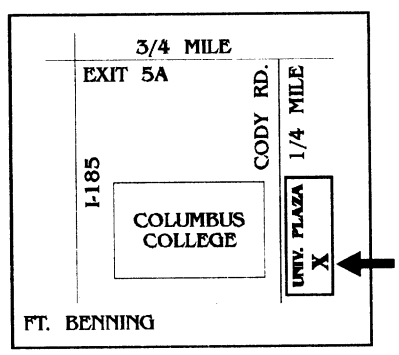
Barnsley Gardens

"Quilts in the Garden" is scheduled for the week of Aug. 7 through 15 at Barnsley Gardens at Woodlands, Ga.

In this show, quilts from historic to modern will be on display against the backdrop of the restored gardens. Quilting experts will be on hand to answer questions. Attendees may even be invited to take a stitch or two at a real quilting bee.

This year's goal is to display quilts from more than 100 different homes. The garden opens Tuesday through Saturday at 10 a.m. and Sunday at noon and is closed Mondays. The last ticket is sold at 5 p.m. and admission is $6 for adults and $5 for students and seniors. Children 11 and under are free with paying adults.

Barnsley Gardens is located at 597 Barnsley Gardens Road, off Hall Station Road between Adairsville and Kingston. Coming from I-75, take Exit 128, go west on Georgia Highway 140 and follow the signs.



For information on including your quilt in the show, call (404) 336-5269. For general show and gardens information, call (404) 773-7480.

Fair, art festival to include talent search

Coweta Festivals Inc.

The first-ever Great Talent Search will be staged at the 23rd edition of Powers' Crossroads Country Fair and Art Festival.

Entries will be accepted through July 15. Twenty different performances will be featured from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Labor Day, Sept. 6.

All types of creative performers are encouraged to enter. Each entry should be accompanied by a five-minute videotape of the performance. Prizes for the talent search winners will be $300 for first place, $200 for second place and $100 for third place. Entry fee for the contest is $50, due by Aug. 1.

A maximum of 20 acts will be selected to perform with five acts selected as alternate. Applicants desiring to have their videotapes returned should enclose a check for $4 to cover postage, made payable to Coweta Festivals Inc. Videotapes received without a check for return postage will become property of Coweta Festivals.

Performers who have contracted to work at Powers for the Labor Day Festival are ineligible.

Recognized as the largest event in the state of Georgia during the holiday weekend, this nonprofit community event attracts visitors from all over the Southeast and beyond to view the work of 300 artists and craftsmen. Other features include entertainment and "down home" country cooking.

This year's festival will be Sept. 4 through 6 at the Powers' Plantation, located 12 miles southwest of Newnan on Georgia Highway 34.

Recalling an era when most tasks were performed by hand, many displays at the festival are working demonstrations of actual farm life as it existed circa 1850. A mule turns the grinder at the sorghum syrup mill and dust billows as corn and wheat are ground at the original Powers' Grist Mill.

Visitors can sample wares in the turn-of-the-century Country Store and watch as "moonshine" is produced at the whiskey still. Youngsters can enjoy a tree house built in a 150-year-old oak tree and participate in other activities once performed by their grandparents and great-grandparents. All activities are under adult supervision. Entertainment at the festival is continuous at the Summerhouse Stage area.

Back for its 21st appearance will be the the Bullsboro Bluegrass Band as well as the Georgians Gospel Group.

The festival gates are open from 9 a.m. until 6 p.m. daily. Admission is $5 for adults; $2 for children 12 and under; and no charge for children 4 and under. Senior citizens and military personnel pay $4. For groups of 25 or more, a group rate will be available.

Advance tickets are available by sending check or money order to: Coweta Festivals Inc., P.O. Box 899, Newnan, Ga. 30264. Parking is available with free shuttle bus service from the parking lots to the main gate.

Medics train first women

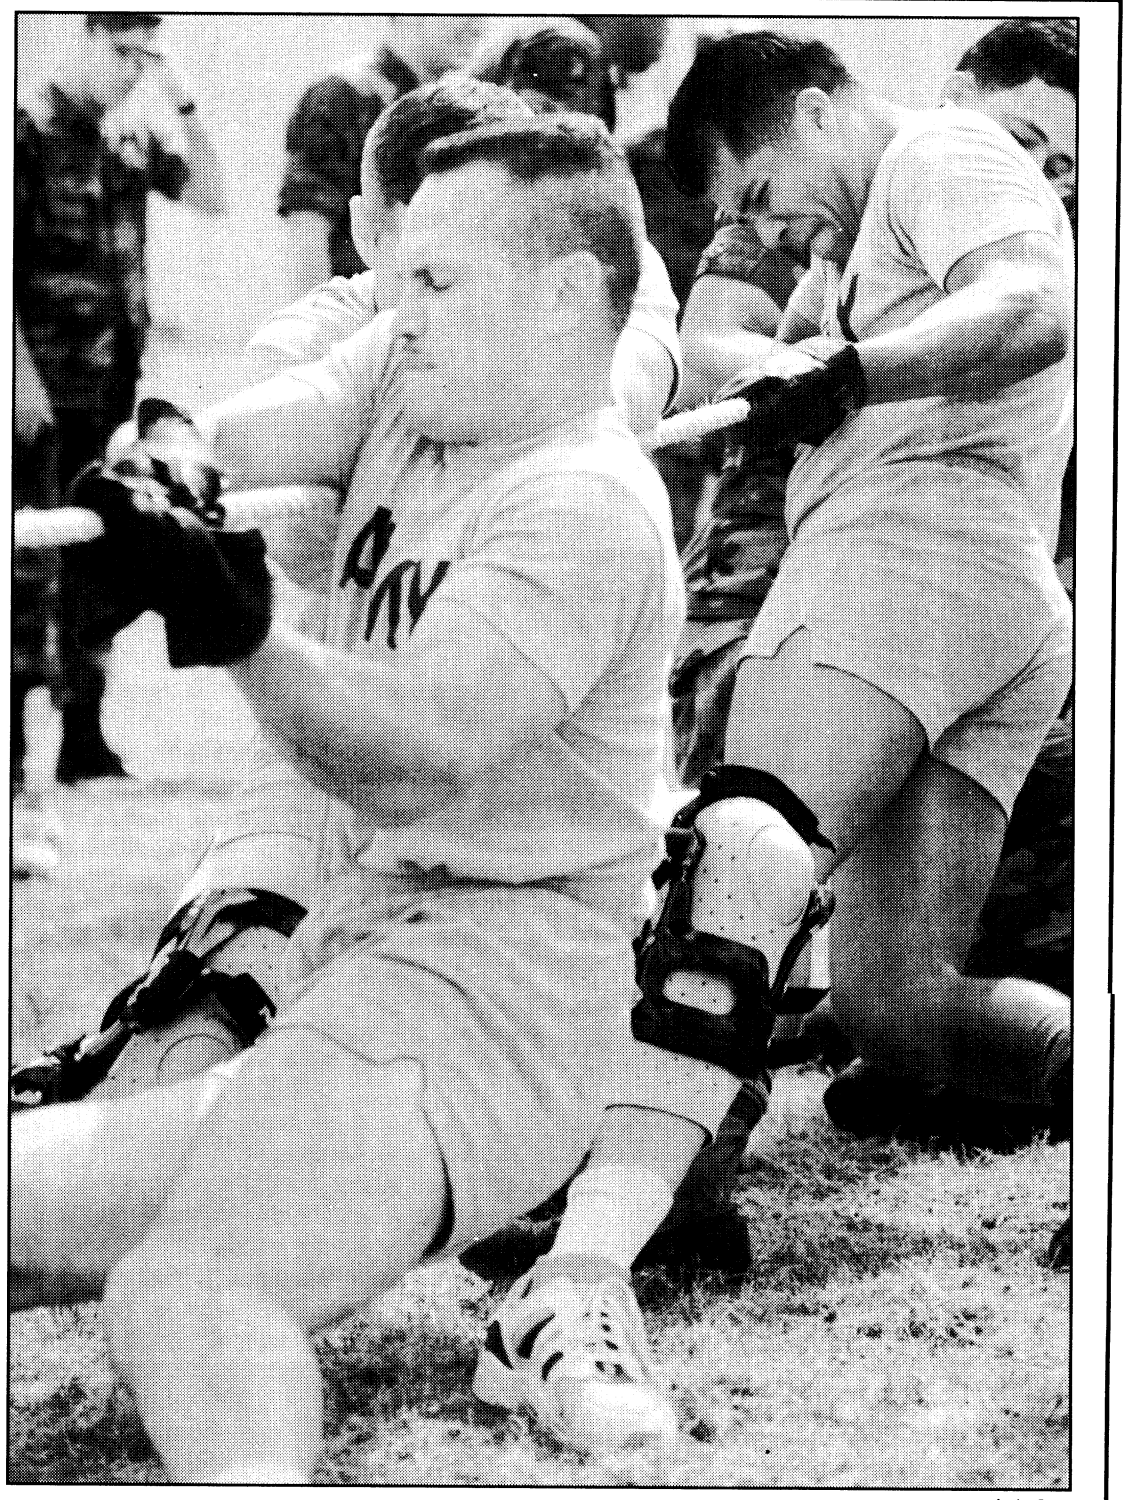
By Devon Kerbow
School of the Americas

Why would two women leave their families in Bolivia and travel thousands of miles to Fort Benning?

To make history. They're the first women to participate in the School of the Americas' Combat Medic Course.

Staff Sgt. Ana Villarreal and Cpl. Maruja Quispe didn't expect to be groundbreakers. In fact, they expressed surprise at being the only women to take the course. They said they thought there would be a lot more women.

Sgt. 1st Class Pedro L. Guerad, a course instructor said, "It's about time they sent women." As Guerad put it, medical skills go beyond race or gender barriers. Treatment is the same whether it comes from a man or a woman, he added.



Villarreal and Quispe, both police officers who specialize in anti-terrorist work, said there's a lack of training in their department. They said it's their responsibility to learn the lifesaving techniques taught to them and put them to use in their everyday missions.

Through mission proficiency and teamwork, Villarreal and Quispe distinguished themselves and earned the opportunity to attend the medic course at SOA.

Do Villarreal and Quispe feel challenged?

They said the hands-on part of the course hasn't been difficult. But they admitted, the academic portion is harder, mainly because

SOA NCO course conducts live-fire exercise

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

The School of the Americas Noncommissioned Officer Development Course recently conducted a squad level, live-fire exercise at Pierce Range to test the students' ability to fire and maneuver.

The exercise was led by Detachment 3, Tactics Division, Department of Tactics and Combined Arms.

According to Sgt. 1st Class Guillermoa Colom, non-commissioned officer in charge of Det. 3, the students used techniques of team and individual movement to reach their objective.

"They moved from the assembly area, in a wedge formation using traveling overwatch; when they reached the tree line, they received hostile fire," Colom said.

At this point, Colom said, the squad, already in teams, conducted the fire and maneuver.

With the weather imposing a threatening environment as well, the students took up positions behind cover, as the rain poured down.

Team A provided fire support as Team B advanced to the objective. Once in position the fire support and maneuver switches with Team A moving up

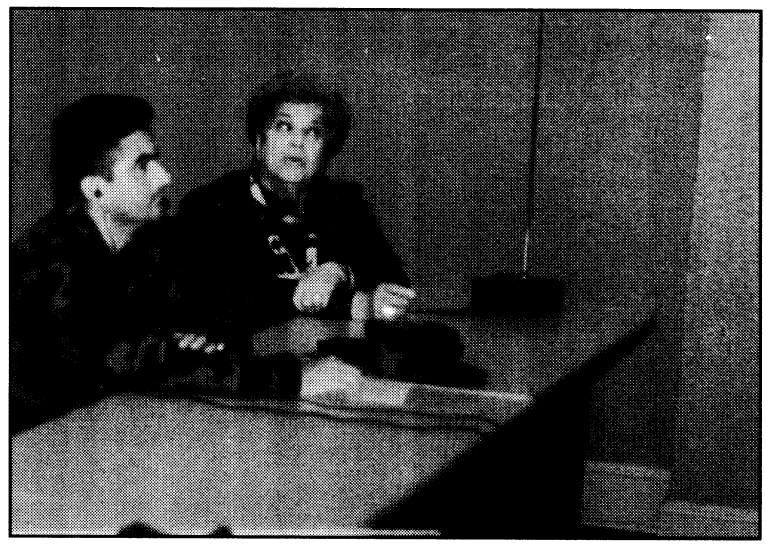
SOA civilian translator, sponsor retires

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

The School of the Americas said farewell recently to one of its civilian employees who spent her entire career with the school.



Margarita Barcenas started her career in Spanish-language translation and interpretation July 9, 1956, when SOA was still the U.S. Army Caribbean School stationed in Fort Gulick, Panama.

"I love the school; it has been my whole life," Barcenas said.

Barcenas, a native of Colon, Panama, was initially assigned to the Language Services Division, where she eventually stayed her entire time at SOA.

From editing to translating, Barcenas has seen the school change names, move to Fort Benning and increase its span of influence throughout Latin America.

Through all of the changes, Barcenas remained steadfast in her loyalty to SOA and especially the people she encountered.

Daniel Maloney

Margarita Barcenas interprets a class on counterdrug operations for the school's Counterdrug Operations Course.

"I love to see the students and the uniforms, the flags, everything about the school. Everyone has been great from the first commandant to the current commandant."

Although Barcenas retired in April, her reason for leaving SOA and government employment had nothing to do with military budget reductions.

After 37 years apart, Barcenas remarried the man she married in Colon in 1953.

Three years after Barcenas and Donald T. Geddie, a licensed electrician and plumber, married they decided to go their separate ways and divorced; soon after, Barcenas started working at SOA.

When the school moved to Fort Benning in 1984, Barcenas moved to the United States and eventually earned her citizenship. It was during her time here at SOA that she was informed of the death of Geddie. However, later Barcenas found out it was not her ex-husband, but his brother that had actually died.

Last year she received a Christmas card from Geddie; they met and decided to remarry. They now live in Florida and according to Barcenas, the plan is to "take things easier and keep each other company for the rest of our lives."

Looking back on her career at SOA, Barcenas seemed most fond of the friendships she developed among students and personnel at SOA.

An active member of SOA's sponsorship organization, Hosts of Latin Americans, Barcenas still keeps in touch with a family she sponsored from Brazil.

Of her translating and interpreting career, Barcenas remembers the many high-ranking U.S. and Latin American officers for whom she has interpreted and the knowledge she has gained of different countries and cultures.

In addition to the knowledge she gained of Latin America, Barcenas saw the U.S. Army up close and personal riding in helicopters and, during a visit by the chief of the Colombian armed forces, in a Bradley Fighting Vehicle.

For Barcenas, working for the Department of Defense and SOA has been, as she put it, "a beautiful life."

"It was a good way to educate my daughter; it brought me to the United States and I was able to become a citizen. I owe everything I have to the school."

HOLA summer cookout brings sponsors, families together

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

The School of the Americas Hosts of Latin Americans organization sponsored its first summer picnic for 1993 May 22 at the Lumpkin Family Farm in Lumpkin, Ga.

The picnic featured a barbecue, clowns and games for the children and adults.

According to Cecilia T. Alexander, director of SOA's International Military Student's Organization who planned the event, the picnic was the "first summer get together.

"With the warm weather came the chance to have a down-home American barbecue and show the students and their families part of the American way of life," Alexander said.

Everything from three-legged and sack races for the children, to pudding-feeding contests and hula hoops for the adults, set the tone for fun and games, Alexander said.

"The picnic gave the children a chance to get away and play in a recreational area outside the home," she added.

One of several functions throughout the year, the picnic gives the HOLA sponsors and the families they sponsor a chance to meet each other in addition to the functions they hold independently, such as meals at each other's homes or shopping trips.

Cadets learn air-mobile operations

Colombian quartermaster cadets prepare a load for transport in an air-mobile operation during an exercise June 4.

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

The School of the Americas Cadet Logistics Orientation Course conducted a training exercise June 4 to familiarize 31 Colombian quartermaster cadets with the intricacies of the logistics side of air-mobile operations.

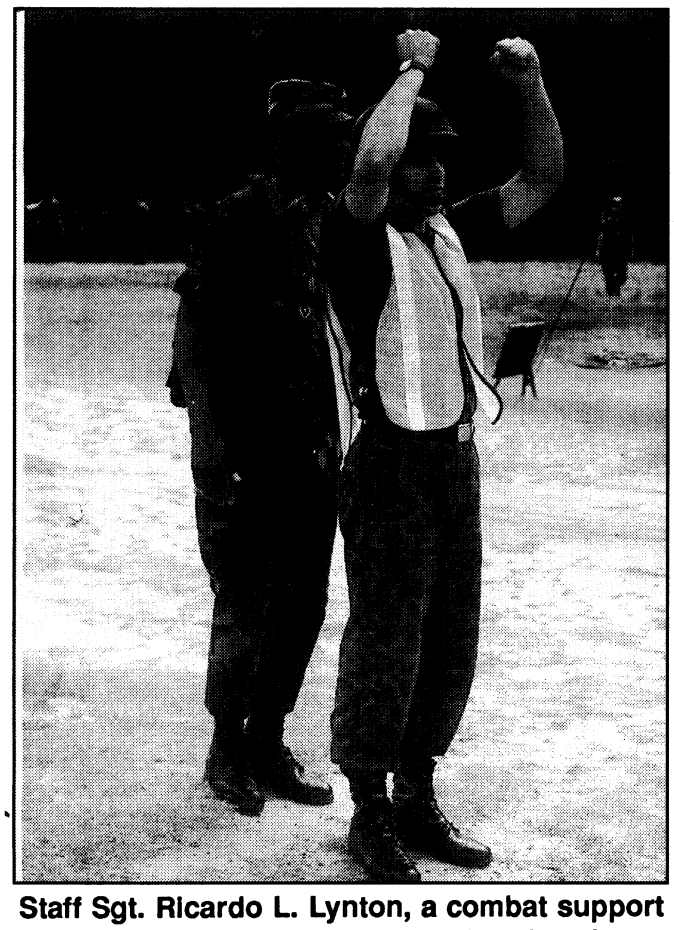
The exercise included sling-load operations, hand and arm signals for directing helicopters onto a landing zone and preparing a load for transport.

According to Staff Sgt. Luis A Flores, an instructor with Combat Support, Department of Tactics and Combined Arms, the course taught, in addition to signals and rigging loads, how to "hook up" loads and use signals in conjunction with that aspect of air-mobile operations.

The skills taught during the exercise are crucial to completing the logistics mission during combat or peace time, put simply, "moving supplies," Flores said.

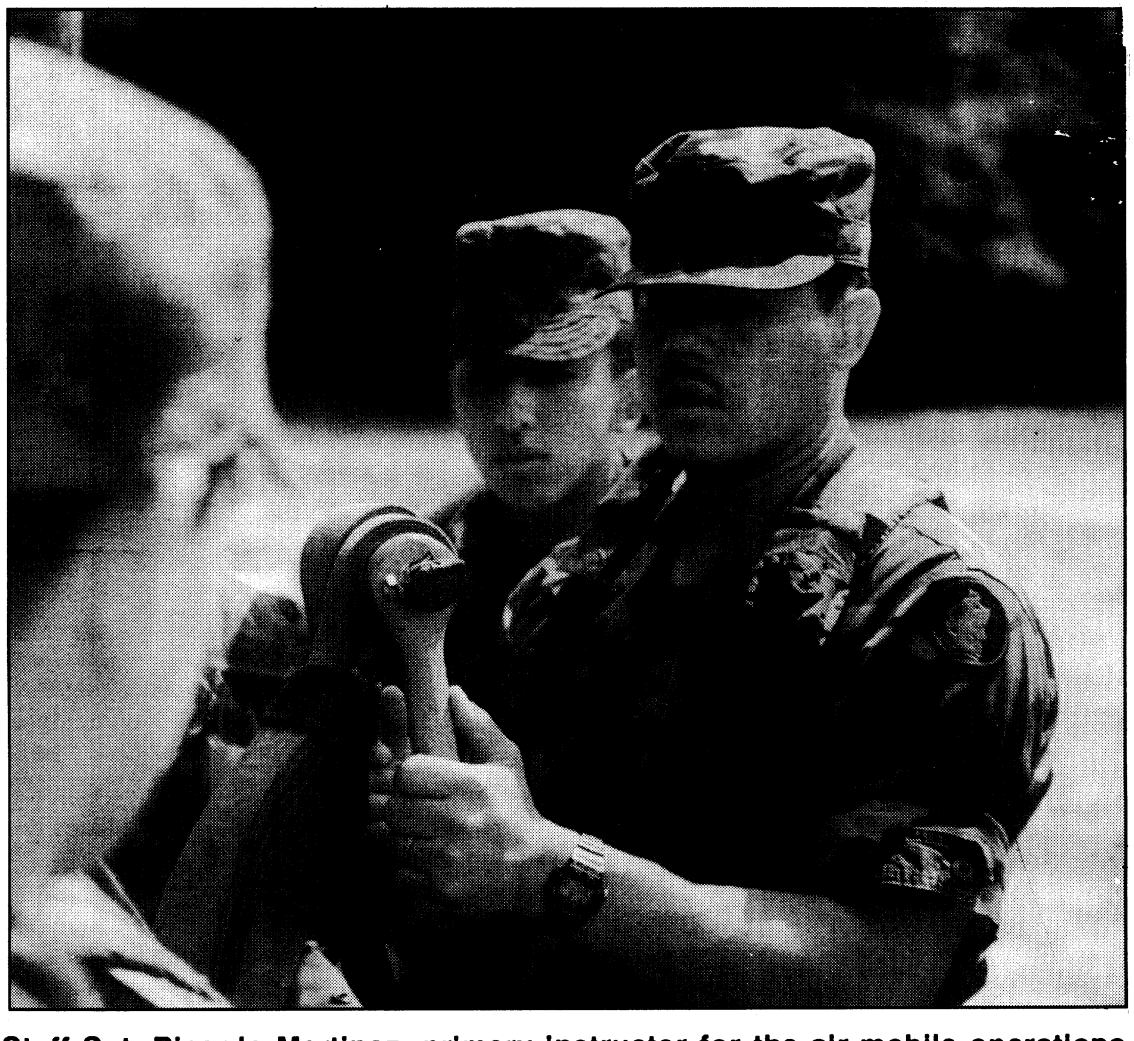
The importance of getting supplies to the battlefield or areas in dire need of medicine and food required the exercise, according to Staff Sgt. Carlos L. Olivares, also an instructor with Combat Support.

The cadets "have to know the different ways of transporting supplies, fuel, rations," Olivares said.



In addition to the various operational requirements of conducting air-mobile operations, the instructors stressed safety.

"Safety is one of the main things, especially when it comes to hooking up the lines to helicopters," Olivares said.



The four-week course is open to Latin American cadets in their third or fourth year of training.

The course introduces them to the requirements of logistical operations in a combat environment.

Areas covered that specialize in the logistics side of the military include: combat logistical support, supply procedures, maintenance operations, transportation and medical support and training exercises without troops.

into position, Colom said.

When the squad reached the objective, Colom said, the scenario called for an enemy pull out and prepared counterattack.

After the students swept the objective, they positioned themselves in hasty firing positions to repel the counterattack, Colom said.

The exercise was one part of the 11-week course designed to train Latin American soldiers to lead, instruct and direct soldiers at the squad and platoon level.

In addition to the live-fire exercise, the course teaches training management, counterdrug operations, engineer operations, communications, land navigation and battle staff operations.

The course initiated by SOA, answers the need for a noncommissioned officer education system comparable to what U.S. soldiers are taught at NCO academies.

According to school literature, the course focus is on weapons, training management, battle staff planning, counterdrug operations and squad and platoon tactics.

The weapons portion introduces students to rifle marksmanship skills necessary to qualify with the M-16. They also receive training on the 60mm and 81mm mortars and tactical employment of mortars.

Daniel Maloney

Training management focuses on U.S. Army techniques for training and the philosophies behind those techniques.

The counterdrug operations expose students to the various guidelines for handling evidence and prisoners in a counterdrug operation as well as the characteristics of drug dealers.

The Latin American NCOs also learn to operate as tactically proficient squad leaders and platoon sergeants by using the tactical environment to measure and grade progress.

The engineer portion of the course covers military demolitions and mine warfare.

The course's portion on fire support trains students to operate as forward observers.

In addition to these portions of the course, Latin American NCOs learn aspects of civil military operations to include internal defense and civil affairs operations.

As with all courses at SOA, the NCO course also conducts mandatory human rights awareness training to expose students to human rights issues.

MEDICS: Students learn vital health skills

U.S. military training is new to them.

A special physical training program was developed for them and, according to Guerad, they're asking for more.

Sgt. 1st Class Nelson Arellano Jr., who's teaching his fourth Combat Medic Course, said the women were motivated and doing well.

Arellano said one of their biggest challenges will be near the end of the class when they have to run an obstacle course in full combat gear while carrying a litter.

He added that although the women were weak in pushups and situps, they kept up with the men during the runs.

Villarreal and Quispe agree that competing with younger men in physical training has been a challenge. Regardless, they both state they are determined to pass this course.

Guerad said Villareal and Quispe are working hard to prepare themselves for the end-of-course 12-mile road march and final Army Physical Fitness Test.

The course instructors said with the extra work on PT and the passing of the first written test, the women should have no problem graduating from the class.

George H. Salazar, an instructor's assistant for the course, said the quality of Villareal's and Quispe's work has been equal to the 24 men in the class.

Arellano said that the only difference he's noticed was when the class was practicing extricating a wounded person from a car. One of the women was concerned that it was being done too quickly and the victim would suffer because of it.

Salazar said there was less horseplay among the men with Villareal and Quispe around. Arellano said that was probably a good thing.

From the students lighthearted banter after bandaging each others simulated chest wounds, it was apparent the women and men are in good spirits.

According to Arellano, the medic course is orientated for civil military operations.

Often the medic will be the only one within miles that has any medical knowledge, Arellano said.

Some of the skills taught in the course are basic first aid, how to give shots, evacuation procedures, improvising an ambulance, treating shock, triage or deciding which victims need to be helped first, loading and unloading a helicopter, delivering a baby, and suturing.

Stitching up a wound isn't taught to the U.S. Army medics, Arellano said. It was added to the course when he realized how valuable it would be to victims who might not have access to a doctor, he added.

Other classes are given on starting immunization programs, nutrition, exercise and human rights.

So far Villarreal and Quispe have taken all of this in stride and seem unimpressed with their unique status at SOA.

They said they were most impressed by Fort Benning's cleanliness, organization and punctuality.

What's next for this dedicated duo?

They said they just want to return home and prove what a couple of crime-fighting female medics can do.

HOLA: Functions form lasting friendships

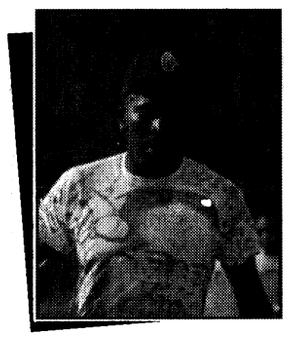
The school's guest instructors and the officers in the Command and General Staff Course, who are here for at least one year, usually bring their entire families.

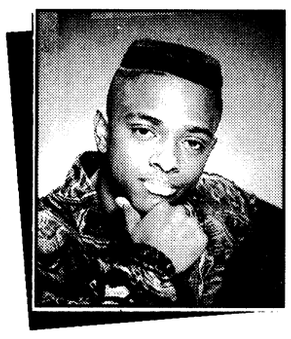
HOLA sponsors help them adjust to life in America; and, through HOLA functions, the school's mission of cultural exchange among students and U.S. personnel is achieved.

Alexander, who has been a sponsor in the past, said the program develops "long lasting friendships; and, if you are ever in the country of a family you sponsored, you are taken care of."



According to Alexander, the little things a sponsor does are sometimes the most important. During her time as a sponsor, she remembers showing one student's wife how to coupons at the store.

Little things like that are important because "they don't know the system" in the United States, she said.



"The first impression they get is the one that counts, and it's a lasting one.

Anyone interested in sponsorship can call Alexander at 545-1283 or 545-1285.

Deputy CG heading to Europe

Replacement to arrive mid-July

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning's deputy commanding general and assistant commandant of the U.S. Army Infantry School is scheduled to leave Fort Benning next month for a new job.

Brig. Gen. John W. Hendrix, who arrived at Fort Benning last August and is slated for promotion to major general, will become the deputy chief of staff for operations, U.S. Army Europe, headquartered in Heidelberg, Germany.

A combined departure and arrival ceremony is scheduled for 4:30 p.m., July 16 in front of Infantry Hall.

Brig. Gen. Jack P. Nix Jr., currently the assistant division commander of the 82nd Airborne Diviion, Fort Bragg, N.C., is slated to become Fort Benning's next deputy commanding general and assistant commandant of the Infantry School.

Hendrix

The 45-year-old Nix is expected to arrive on post about July 12.

Prior to his becoming assistant division commander, he was the chief of staff of the 82nd Airborne Division.

A native of Gainesville, Ga., Nix was commissioned a second lieutenant upon graduation from the Georgia Institute of Technology where he was a distinguished military graduate and earned a bachelor of science degree.

He also holds a master's degree in business administration from Adelphi University.

Nix's military education includes the Infantry Officer Basic and Advanced courses, Armed Forces Staff College and the Army War College.

Past assignments include the military adviser to the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations; company commander in the 503rd Airborne Infantry; liaison officer, operations officer and executive officer of the 1st Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment; and commander of the 1st Battalion, 508th Airborne Infantry.

He also commanded the 1st Brigade of the 82d Airborne Division.

His decorations and badges include two awards of the Bronze Star Medal, four awards of the Meritorious Service Medal, four awards of the Army Commendation Medal, National Defense Service Medal with gold star, Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal with bronze star and arrowhead device, Southwest Asia Service Medal with two bronze stars, the Combat Infantryman, Master Parachutist, Pathfinder and Air Assault badges; and the Ranger Tab.

29th Infantry changes command

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

The 29th Infantry Regiment stood tall and proud on Dickman Field June 18 to say goodbye to one commander and welcome another.

The ceremony marked the changing of command from Col. Gregory C. Camp to Col. Robert L. Jordan Jr.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, post commanding general, addressed the regiment and guests at the ceremony.

"Greg Camp has provided our Army with the most finely trained infantry soldiers ever, and he deserves much of the credit for the success we have enjoyed," he said.

"He led his regiment to unprecedented levels of excellence in soldier and leader development, in weapons design, in testing and fielding and in doctrine development.

"He has been the total commander. He led our soldiers with great distinction, and with concern for their welfare and quality of life. He and his wife, Joanie, have always been out front in caring for families and soldiers," White said.

"As you move on to greater heights," White said to Camp, "remember that you have made a difference."

White then welcomed Jordan, who has served for the past year as chief of tactics for the U.S. Army Infantry School here.

"Most of us know the Jordans," White said. "With previous tours at Fort Benning and two tours at the National Training Center under his belt, I can think of no one more prepared to command this great regiment."

Camp, with a trace of emotion in his voice, thanked the post commanders, his colleagues, battalion commanders, non-commissioned officers, family and finally, the soldiers of the 29th "for the privilege of walking among you."

Camp has commanded the 29th Infantry Regiment since June 1991. He will become the acting deputy assistant commandant for the U.S. Army Infantry School.

Jordan accepted the regiment's colors in the ceremony symbolizing the passing of command and pledged to the 29th's soldiers, families and chain of command that he will give all of his energy to their service.

Jordan joined the Army in 1967. He served with Company H, 75th Ranger Regiment in Vietnam and returned as a staff sergeant to become an instructor at the U.S. Army Infantry School here.

He has been assigned to a number of command and staff positions both in the United States and overseas, including command of the Opposing Forces Infantry Battalion, 1st Battalion, 52nd Infantry at the National Training Center.

Jordan holds a bachelor's degree from Troy State University and a master of military arts and science degree from the Command and General Staff College.

His awards and decorations include the Legion of Merit, Bronze Star, Purple Heart, Meritorious Service Medal with four oak leaf clusters, Air Medal, Army Commendation Medal with two oak leaf clusters, Army Achievement Medal with four oak leaf clusters, Combat Infantryman Badge and Senior Parachute Wings.

Jordan and his wife, Nancy, who is from Columbus, have two daughters, Rebecca Kelly and Amy Elizabeth.

29th's new commander comes home

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

For Col. Robert L. Jordan Jr., assuming command of the 29th Infantry Regiment was like "coming home."

Jordan, who took command of the regiment in a ceremony June 18, said he had returned "home to the 29th Infantry, home to Fort Benning and home to the great community of Columbus."

Jordan was first stationed here as an instructor with the U.S. Army Infantry School when he returned from Vietnam as a staff sergeant in 1969.

It was while working as an instructor that Jordan met his wife, Nancy, who grew up in Columbus, and was working in Infantry Hall.

His history at Fort Benning also includes positions as a tactics team chief with the Infantry School and as an operations officer for the 29th Infantry Regiment.

His most recent assignment has been as chief of tactics for the Infantry School. After four tours here, one with the 29th itself, it seems natural for Jordan to call the 29th "home."

"I am extremely proud to be going back to the 29th," Jordan said.

"I am looking forward to the challenge of making a contribution to the diverse spectrum of training missions and requirements of the 29th ... and looking forward to working with soldiers in a more direct capacity."

Jordan said the most important thing he wants to do, once he has a fix on the organization's short- and long-term goals, is to "ensure there is no degradation in the quality of life and family programs supported by the organization."

This, he said, is his biggest fear with downsizing.

"I also want to be innovative and use a bottoms-up assessment process with the soldiers and commanders. We can use the Total Army Quality process to facilitate change. I want to try to be proactive in guiding the changes ahead, rather than just being reactive," Jordan said.

"Philosophically, I believe that as leaders at any level if we do a proper job taking care of soldiers, soldiers will always get the mission done — no matter what the mission is," he said.

Jordan thanked the 29th's outgoing commander, Col. Gregory C. Camp, for making him and his family feel taken care of when they arrived here in July 1992.

"The sponsorship and welcoming we received from Greg Camp and his wife was the best I've ever had in 26 years in the Army," Jordan said.

Environmental crews clean up post oil spill

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

The Environmental Management Division is working to clean up an oil spill discovered on post Monday.

The spill occurred when a waste oil tank at an old converted boiler plant here overflowed, according to John J. Brent, chief of the Environmental Management Division.

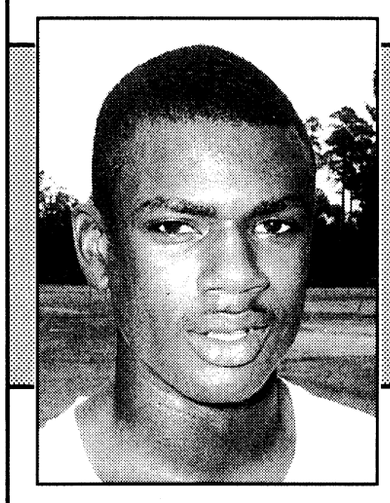
Storm water and condensation from a cooling tower caused the tank to overflow, Brent said, carrying the oil through a storm drain and into a stream where most of the oil has been contained. Some of the oil, however, has flowed into the Chattahoochee River.

Brent said he did not know how much oil has gone into the Chattahoochee, but estimated the total amount of oil spilled into the stream to be about 100 gallons.

Fort Benning's Hazardous Materials Response Team has put down absorbent pads to soak up the oil and booms to contain it in the stream and prevent it from flowing out into the Chattahoochee.

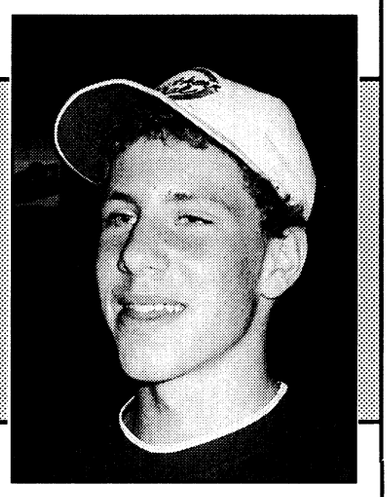
Kent Howell of the Georgia Environmental Protection Division Emergency Response Team said Tuesday, "Our people were on the Chattahoochee this morning. They got a good look at the river and there is no apparent impact on the ecosystems there."

James Webster, a federal on-scene coordinator for the Environmental Protection Agency, said there is a light sheen of oil on the Chattahoochee. The oil seems to be dissipating rapidly, he said, "which indicates a small body of oil."



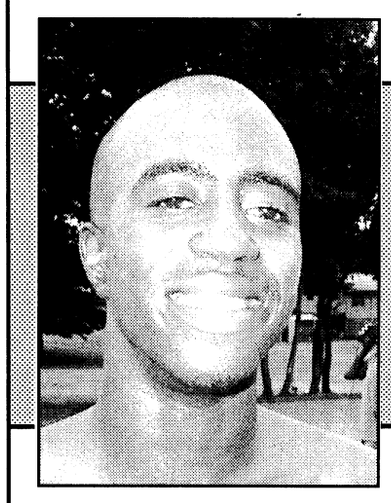
Brent said the tank has been identified as the source of two other spills, one May 20 and another June 16. The EMD, which has been searching for the source of these spills, confirmed the tank as the source Monday and immediately began pumping the oil from the tank.

"We removed about 10,000 gallons of waste oil and water ... and have closed the inlets coming into the tank ... so we will have no further problems," Brent said.

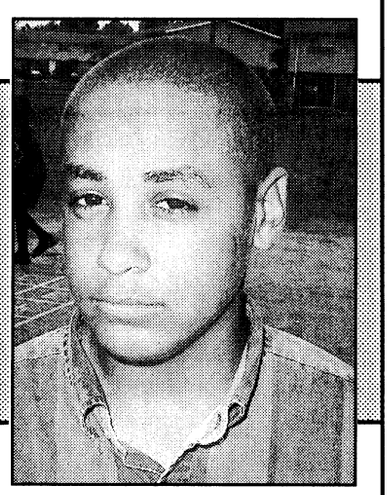


Brent said the EMD is currently investigating further causes of the spill and assessing the environmental damage caused by the spill.

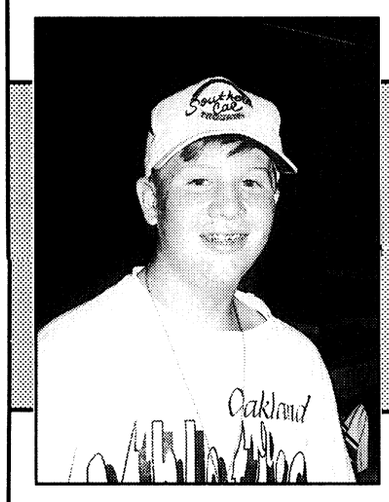
VARIOUS VOICES



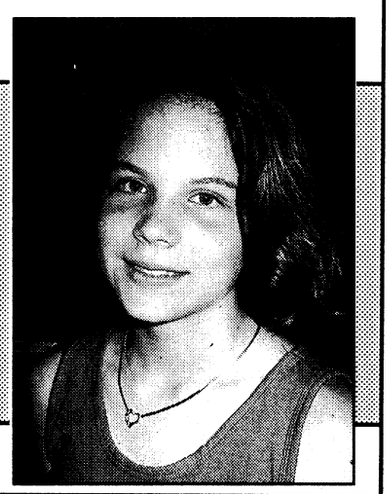
What activities would you like available to you this summer?



Brandon Jackson, 16, family member — "I'd like to see a three-on-three basketball jam and barbecue here in Indianhead Terrace."



William Tarpein, 14, family member — "I'd like to see a youth bowling league or baseball league."



Terrence Darnell Flowers, 18, family member — "Every Friday they should hold a party at the pool behind the NCO Club, they should hold 'Say No to Drugs' rallies with sports pros as speakers and they should hold a dance every other Saturday at the Youth Activity Center with a rock or rap band."

Gammy Gomez, 15, family member — "Every month they should hold slam dunk contests and pool tournaments in the gyms."

Matt Hodges, 13, family member — "We should start a basketball league."

Beth Phillips, 13, family member — "They should have a co-ed archery club."

Teens just want something to do

COMMENTARY

Want to become rich and famous? Come up with a solution to the age-old complaint of teen-agers: "There's never anything to do."

The problem with teen-agers, most of them, is they have too much energy. Their hormones are bouncing off the walls like crazy, they think all adults (parental units in particular) should be committed, and they want absolute freedom.

They want to break the mold, yet they all dress alike. They want to go off on their own and do their own thing, but they want mom or pop to foot the bill.

They cruise until they're run off so they go to the mall. They soon get bored because Suzi and Tom aren't there, or are there, so they leave.

They check the movies, but that calls for more cash, and besides, they've seen them all dozens of time.

Well-meaning adults put together teen clubs but insist on rules. The teens try that for a while, but it's not cool if there's supervision. The teen clubs fold, the teens complain about nothing to do.

Some adults know what they'd like to suggest for some teens — "Johnny, why don't you try skateboarding on the interstate," or, "Sally, I know of a nice sink hole where you can take your boom box."

This solves nothing. What teens need are places to go where there are no adults and where they can be daring, and maybe even a little destructive.

My thoughts would be to turn them loose in the Sand Hill or Harmony Church areas where we're tearing down old buildings. Mark off a few hundred acres and let them hang out there, unmolested by the law or adults. They can play their music as loud as they want, cruise among the nails and broken glass in their cars, batter one another's ears with foul and abusive language, and perhaps even get into a few fights.

If they wanted to throw rocks through the windows or even tear down the buildings, that's cool; they're coming down anyway.

Cars abandoned on post could be parked there. Teens could spray paint them, key them, slash the tires, smash the windshields.

Or, if they liked a car, they could work on it and it would be theirs.

Enterprising business people would soon be out there with their pogey trucks, selling food and drink, so the kiddies wouldn't go hungry or get thirsty.

But this would be a place they could call their own.

There's many problems with this of course. First is liability. We live in such a litigious world that someone's going to get hurt and sue, even if we post signs warning: "Enter at your own risk; you assume all responsibility for your actions."

The second problem is that even without the adult supervision and even without rules, teens might stay away because adults have said this is a place they can go.

I mean who wants to go where they're welcome? Not teens.

So they will continue to complain about not having anything to do. Barkam Saddat was unhappy because his parents wouldn't let him cruise the Nile in 2223 B.C., Flavius Sphinctum got mad because his dad wouldn't let him have the chariot whenever he wanted it, and Paul Revere's kid couldn't believe it when Paul took the horse away on April 18, 1775.

I can tell you, I'm glad I don't have to deal with this problem.

Here are 21 positive things teens can do

By Agatha Hudson Debrow
Bayonet editor

COMMENTARY

"Mom, I'm bored." I've heard that statement at least 10 times since May 27 (the day my 16-year-old daughter got out of school for the summer).

Teens don't have to be bored. Here are some positive things teens can do during the summer.

1. Get a job. I know jobs are scarce. (My daughter has applied for a job at every fast food restaurant, department store and grocery store in town, and she has placed baby-sitting ads in the local paper as well as The Bayonet. No one has hired her yet.) We parents would love for teens to have their own money to go to the movies or shopping with.

2. Clean the house. It sure would be nice for teens to clean the house and their parents not to have to do it.

3. Make dinner. Working moms and dads would love to come home and have dinner ready when they arrive.

4. Mow the lawn.

5. Study algebra, U.S. history or any other subject they need to brush up on.

6. Do the laundry.

7. Visit grandmother, grandfather, an aunt or uncle. Most of them like it when their grandchildren or nieces or nephews stop by.

8. Befriend an elderly person who lives alone or in a nursing home. Most elderly people would love to have a young friend. Also, you could learn a lot from an older person.

9. Go to the library. There's a wealth of information there.

10. Read a good book.

11. Write a short story or a poem. Let your imagination soar; see how creative you can be.

12. Paint or draw a picture or do both. If you don't know how, learn how.

13. Go fishing. You'll be amazed how relaxing it is.

14. Clean out your closet.

15. Clean out your dresser drawers or your chest of drawers.

16. Volunteer. Volunteer opportunities abound. To volunteer your time and receive valuable experience, call the installation volunteer coordinator at 545-5602.

17. Go to Vacation Bible School. (Teens who feel they're too old for this can be a teacher or a teacher's aide.)

18. Clean the fish tank.

19. Organize your closet; it sure would make finding your clothes a lot easier.

20. Organize your shoes in your closet. You'd find your shoes a lot easier, too.

21. Do something you've never done before — go hiking, make a craft, bake something or build something.

How to get your information into The Bayonet

Editor's note: Many people call us with questions about how to get their information in the paper or to find out about deadlines, so we have compiled the following.

Our mission

The Bayonet is here to serve you — our audience. Our mission is to provide timely, accurate and truthful information that supports Army goals and directives.

We get a lot of feedback from readers, and we appreciate your letters, story ideas and comments.

As Fort Benning's authorized newspaper, we are dedicated to giving you the most complete coverage possible. In order to do this, we rely on members of our audience to keep us informed about their units' activities.

Requesting coverage

The staff of The Bayonet enjoys covering newsworthy events on post that are timely and pertinent to our readers. Some events we cover include brigade-level changes of command, changes in post policies or procedures and other postwide events. We have a limited number of personnel; and, since we can't cover everything on post, we focus on the events that affect most of the post.

Some events we do not send a reporter to cover are parties, dinners, dining events, dances, balls, teas, coffees, club and organization meetings and elections, award presentations, changes of command below the brigade level, check presentations and group photos.

The frequency of such events on post and small number of photojournalists on The Bayonet staff prohibits us from covering these sorts of events.

Also, Army Regulation 360-81, which governs the production and content of Department of the Army newspapers, states covering such events is not a function of the post newspaper.

If you need a photographer to record events for official purposes, call the Training and Audiovisual Support Center at 545-4417.

Deadlines

Film, photos, stories, letters to the editor and other news items intended for The Bayonet must arrive in our office no later than noon Friday prior to the next week's publication.

Copy must be typed and doubled-spaced. The only hand-written items we will accept are letters to the editor. Everything else must be typed.

Use civilian dates, times, the name of the building as well as the building number. You may include the street or road if desired. Also, be sure to include the first and last names of all individuals mentioned in the story, and spell out all acronyms on first reference.

If you submit an announcement for post briefs or community briefs, check it when it appears in The Bayonet. Then, if you must resubmit it at a later date, submit it as it ran in the paper.

Story ideas, submission

If you believe you have a good story idea and want to write the story yourself, call us to see if we're interested. If you don't want to write the story, call us and we'll arrange a time for you to talk with a reporter.

We reserve the right to edit all stories for publication, and we cannot guarantee if or when submitted stories will appear in the paper. Stories that are submitted after the deadline will be published in the next week's paper.

Stringers

Stringers are people belonging to various units who write about and take photos of unit activities for The Bayonet.

Without stringers our coverage of unit activities would be decreased. Unit commanders who would like to arrange for a stringer should call 545-2201.

Stringers need not be trained or have experience as journalists; The Bayonet will provide training and materials including film and photo processing.

Letters

The Bayonet welcomes letters to the editor and readers' responses to the paper's contents. Letters should be typed, if possible, and should include name and telephone number. Names may be withheld on request.

Photos

We will accept photos that are black and white glossy prints or color prints. We also accept black and white negatives and color negatives and color slides. We prefer action shots — people doing their jobs or interacting with other people. Head and shoulder shots of individuals are also acceptable.

Complaints

If you have a complaint, question or comment about The Bayonet, call the editor or the command information officer at 545-2201.

Corrections

We strive for accuracy, so if we make an error, we will correct it in the next edition of The Bayonet. Call us at 545-2201.

Heberling Award

Fort Benning Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White and Kathryn Heberling present Sarah McLaney of the Directorate of Resource Management the Heberling Award for Distinguished Civilian Service. The award, which is named for George Heberling, who was the first civilian director of Resource Management, is sponsored by the Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army and is presented annually. It was presented to McClaney at the organization's general membership meeting June 17 at the Supper Club at the Officers' Club. Heberling retired with 34 years of government service. A vestibule in Meloy Hall is named for him. He died in 1987.

USAMU activates detachment

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit was activated at 9 a.m. Wednesday at Fort Benning's Phillips Range.

The detachment, commanded by Capt. Catherine N. Wilson,was established to perform the administrative duties and responsibilities for the soldiers assigned to the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit.

The soldiers will be provided with a more traditional chain of command to ensure they are better able to accomplish their mission — to compete and win in national, international and interservice competitions, according to a unit spokesperson.

Activation at a glance

What: Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment Activation

When: Wednesday at Fort Benning's Phillips Range

Why: To perform administrative duties and responsibilities.

Wilson is a graduate of Methodist College in Fayetteville, N.C., with degrees in business administration and social work.

After being commissioned, she completed the Finance Officer Basic Course at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind.

She has served in finance units in the United States and Germany. Wilson was also a platoon leader in those units.

Wilson comes to the Marksmanship Unit from the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized), where she was brigade comptroller.

She also served as brigade adjutant for the 197th Infantry Brigade (Mechanized) Separate and assisted in the redesignation of the unit to the 3rd Brigade.

She is married to Capt. Thomas C. Wilson. They have two children.

EEO features hot line

The post Equal Employment Opportunity Office will activate an equal opportunity/sexual harassment hot line coming in July. The 24-hour hot line was implemented by the secretary of the Army to provide people clarification on what is an act of sexual harassment and provide procedural information to callers for filing complaints. The phone number will be officially posted at a later date.

Post to celebrate independence July 3

The annual Independence Day celebration will be held July 3 on York Field in front of Infantry Hall. Events will begin at 2 p.m., and will last until after dark. Food, games, drinks and rides are featured along with performances by the Infantry Band and the Infantry Chorus, the Silver Wings command exhibition parachute team and a ranger demonstration. A fireworks display will be presented after dark. The celebration is open to the public.

Steam, hot water to be out July 2

There will be a steam and hot water outage affecting all buildings on Kelley Hill from 1 a.m. to 6 p.m. July 2. Department of Public Works personnel will be installing a new boiler in Building 9029.

Self-Help Store to close for holiday

The Self-Help, Loan Equipment Section and Venetian Blind and Shade Shop will be closed July 3 to observe the Independence Day holiday. The store will reopen July 6 at 8:30 a.m. for normal business.

Recruiter to visit post

A recruiter from North Georgia College will visit Fort Benning July 15 and 16 to provide information about the Green to Gold program, financial aid and degree programs available at the college.

Second Lt. Michael Acord will be available in Building 2611, Soldiers' Plaza, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. both days.

For more information, call Acord at (706) 864-1801.

Civilian luncheon set

The Civilian Awards Luncheon will be July 27 from 11:30 a.m. to 1:15 p.m. at the Supper Club at the Fort Benning Officers' Club. The Directorate of Resource Management will serve as host.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland and range areas will take place through July 4.

If weather permits, the following compartments may be affected Monday through July 4: A-6, C-1, D-3, D-11, D-14, D-17, E-2, E-4, G-5, J-1, J-3, J-6, K-20, L-3, O-6, O-15, P-1, P-2, P-3, T-2, U-3, V-1, W-1, W-2, X-5, Y-1 and Z-2.

The following compartments will be affected Saturday and Sunday: A-6, D-3, D-17, E-4, G-5, L-3, J-3 and J-6.

Burning will occur in pine stands within these compartments to enhance endangered species habitat and training areas.

People using these areas for recreation must vacate the areas before 9:30 a.m. daily.

Training units using compartments adjacent to these areas may experience drift smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while traveling in these areas because of the potential for reduced visibility.

11th Infantry Regt. to get new commander

The 11th Infantry Regiment will conduct a change of command ceremony July 9 on York Field in front of Infantry Hall, Building 4, at 9 a.m.

Col. Walter D. Wojdakowski will assume command from Col. Lawrence K. White Jr.

In case of rain, the ceremony will be in Marshall Auditorium in Infantry Hall.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White and Col. David L. Grange pose in World War II uniforms.

Leaders gather for Infantry Ball

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

The attire for the evening was formal: dress blues, party gowns, and Ike jackets.

In honor of the campaigns of 1943, this year's Infantry Ball June 18 had a World War II theme.

The Infantry Training Brigade worked with members of the National Military Historical Association to set the scene for the evening by re-creating a World War II map room, displaying World War II equipment and dressing in period uniforms.

Fort Benning Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White wore a World War II officer's uniform — the uniform he wore as a captain here in 1968.

"We are here to honor the glories of our Army and our infantry through their past, present and future. We are here to remember fallen comrades, and their ultimate sacrifice we must never forget. With their blood they preserved democracy in this great nation, making us stronger and giving us a legacy for the future," White said.

White cited battles in Italy in 1943 that claimed the lives of more than 20,000 soldiers.

"These," he said, "are truly heroes — infantrymen who did not ask for glory, did not ask for reward, but instead gave their full measure of bravery, courage, and physical and mental toughness."

White then introduced the evening's guest speaker, Lt. Gen. Neal T. Jaco, commanding general of the Fifth U.S. Army and Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

Jaco told the stories of three infantry soldiers whose exploits spanned from World War I to Desert Storm, and who, Jaco said, characterize the infantry.

The oldest of these soldiers described the infantry, saying, "We in the infantry have a common bond. We know the true meaning of eating mashed potatoes in the rain. We understand being tired and dirty. We know how blessed sleep is, no matter how short it might be. We appreciate empty boots at a memorial ceremony ..."

"When you are of the infantry," this soldier said, "it is about friends, leadership, comrades, esprit and discipline."

The second soldier was a young man who displayed some of the qualities of the infantry when he walked through a mine field to clear a lane so a task force could pass through to accomplish its mission.

When Jaco asked him why he did it, the soldier said he had not thought of the danger involved, he had just done what needed to be done.

The last soldier was a company commander who rose every day to see the sunrise.

This commander was moving from position to position to check on his men before a battle in Korea, asking them how they were.

Most of the soldiers said, "We're fine, sir," and "We're ready for them, sir."

But one soldier surprised him. When the commander asked if there was anything he could do for him, the soldier responded, "Sir, you can make sure that I see another sunrise."

That soldier did not make it through the night. He did not live to see another sunrise.

The commander swore that he would get up to see the sunrise every day for the rest of his life for that young soldier; "Because," he said, "I now know how important a sunrise is."

Jaco ended the story saying, "All of those who have gone before us have given us a very simple mission ... to train soldiers well so they have a chance to see another sunrise."

Savings Bonds available over the counter

TRADOC News Service

The Department of Treasury has extended to Army bond issuing agents the authority to sell $1,000, $5,000 and $10,000 denominated Savings Bonds.

Effective last August, this option offers soldiers and civilian employees an alternative to check or cash payments.

It also provides the capability of securing and safeguarding large cash payments. This authority was given in view of the number of military and civilian employees separating from government service who are receiving large separation payments and who may be looking for a way to invest a part or all of their separation pay.

Separatees, as part of their outprocessing, may request that the cost of a larger denomination bond be deducted from their final separation payments.

Savings Bonds offer soldiers and civilians significant benefits and are very competitive when compared with alternate investments.

Total government Savings Bond sales for fiscal year 1992 reached $13.6 billion and for the first four months of fiscal year 1993 totalled about $9 billion.

The value of Savings Bonds outstanding at the end of January was $159.9 billion.

The Army's participation in the sale of these larger size bonds has totalled 287 Savings Bonds in the amount of $604,200.

The basic features of Series EE Bonds guarantee bond owners a competitive return under all market conditions.

Series EE Bonds held five years or longer earn the higher of the guaranteed minimum rate (4 percent) or the market-based rate (4.78 percent) effective May 1.

Also, interest on Series EE Bonds is exempt from state and local taxes, and federal tax may be deferred until a bond is redeemed or reaches final maturity.

Moreover, interest on the bonds may be exempt from federal income taxes altogether if qualified educational expenses are paid during the same year the bonds are cashed and the holder's family income is within certain limits.

The original maturity period for series EE Savings Bonds issued on or after March 1 has been lengthened from 12 years to 18 years in order to preserve the characteristic that, with interest accruing at the guaranteed minimum rate, Series EE bonds double in value from issue date to original maturity date.

New issues of Series EE bonds held less than five years will earn interest at a fixed rate of 4 percent (the minimum rate required by law).

Because of the statutory floor of 4 percent, the redemption values of new Series EE bonds will increase each month, rather than semiannually.

The redemption values on outstanding Series EE bonds will continue to increase semiannually.

For more information, contact Department of the Army Savings Bond project manager Tim Ryan at DSN 699-3270 or (317) 542-3270.

Check personal credit report for accuracy

American Forces Information Service

How's your credit?

Department of Defense transition office officials recommend service members getting ready to leave the military check their financial reports to avoid possible shocks.

Service members need to spend time on money management, said Paula Davis, a DoD transition specialist. Money management includes credit history as well as pay or earnings, she added.

"When you leave the military, whether active duty or civilian, it's a good time to look at every aspect of your life," she said. "This includes where you are financially, and a big part of that is your credit history."

Loans for homes, cars and other purchases, bill paying, credit cards and other financial transactions all go to making up a personal credit history.

"It's never too early to look at your credit history. My advice is take a few minutes to check it out, even if you're not making a career change," she said. In fact, military financial experts recommend you check the reports from your credit files at least once every year, Davis added.

The three main national credit bureaus that compile financial data are Equifax, Trans Union and TRW. Credit card companies, car dealers, banks and other institutions with a legitimate need to know ask one or more of the companies for whatever information they have. A bad report based on your credit history can prevent you from buying a house or car and getting a credit card or loan, or any number of other things, said Davis.

The national credit bureaus post more than a billion credit transactions and several million court actions, like tax liens and judgments, to their records each month.

Davis said the bureaus have made mistakes. For example, if someone skips out on a loan, consistently makes late payments or defaults on car payments, it could end up in your file by mistake.

The best way to protect your credit, said Davis, is to get copies of your credit history files from each of the three companies.

Davis said once you receive the credit reports, check them thoroughly. If you find inaccurate or missing information, or that someone else's information has been posted to your file, contact that credit bureau immediately for details on how to fix the report.

Under the Fair Credit Reporting Act, if you have been denied credit because of a credit bureau report, you are entitled to a free copy of that bureau's report.

However, you must request it within 30 days of the denial. If you haven't been denied credit, the average cost for each report is $8 to $12.

For information on requesting a file, check the local telephone directory for credit bureau listings. If you write to the credit bureaus, include your full name, Social Security number, current address, addresses for the previous five years, date of birth, current telephone number and, if applicable, spouse's name.

Here are the big three credit bureaus addresses:

Beware of travel scams

Better Business Bureau

With money tight, many hopeful vacationers are looking for discounted airfares and accommodations to make their summer travel plans possible.

But, the Better Business Bureau warns that some travel offers may never get off the ground and only end up costing you a lot of money and grief.

BBB reports that travel scam operators use many different devices to draw in victims, including postcards, direct mail letters, 900 telephone numbers and false newspaper and television advertisements.

The most popular ploy operators use is a mass postcard mailing that may state, "You have been specially selected to receive a free trip."

The postcard instructs the recipient to call a phone number, sometimes toll free, but possibly an expensive 900 number.

What the "winner" receives is a vacation certificate that almost always includes hidden costs, such as registration fees, an expensive club membership, or requirements to buy high-priced products that the company is selling.

Other questionable offers may include multi-day travel packages that prove to be greatly over-priced when costs are figured out separately.

Provisions of these travel packages and vacation certificates may include one free airline ticket with the purchase of a second highly priced ticket. Or, if airfare for two is offered, hotel accommodation prices may be greatly inflated. And in many cases, travel is restricted to a very limited time.

Even worse than receiving highly restricted travel arrangements, many consumers report receiving nothing at all when the company closes down and skips town with their money.

These operators often use high-pressure tactics to make a sale. Consumers should not be afraid to press the salesperson for exact answers, such as what additional charges are required and the names of specific hotels and airlines.

Consumers should ask for detailed written information, compare that to what the salesperson promised, then contact the airlines and hotels directly to see what kind of deal is being offered.

Also, in an effort to make a quick sale, the salesperson may ask for a consumer's credit card number, the card's expiration date or a checking account number.

This information should not be given out. To check out the company, consumers can contact the BBB or their local consumer protection office.

DTS announces quiz winners

Directorate of Threat and Security

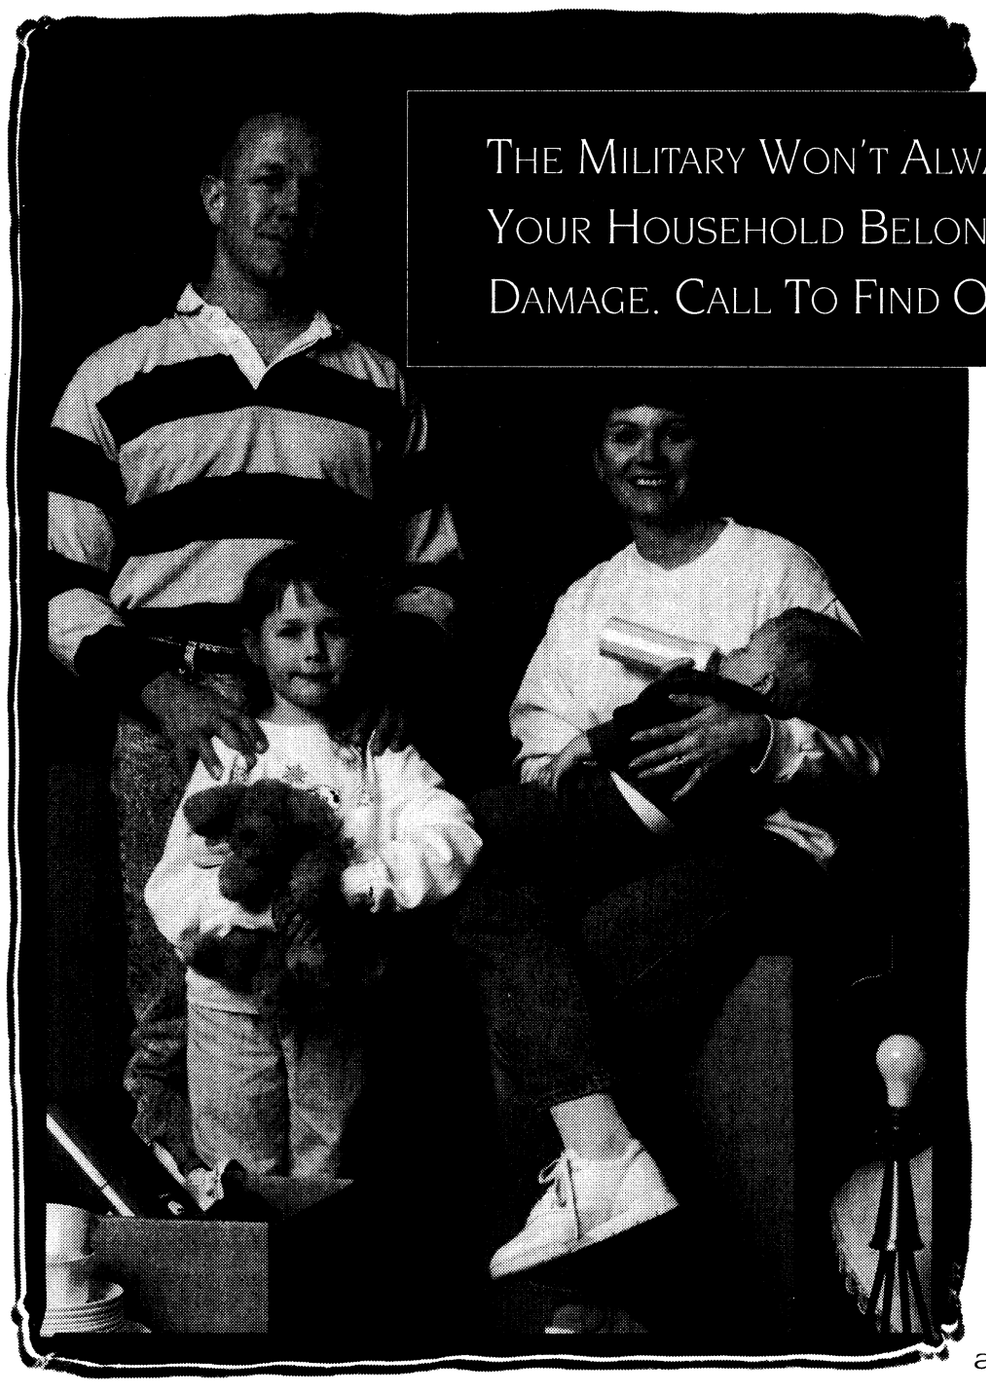
Do you practice safe security? That was the question asked by the Directorate of Threat and Security the week of June 13 in the Display Room of Infantry Hall.

The directorate put together a display with 26 security violations and a subversion and espionage awareness quiz.

Many activities conducted a contest to see who could come up with the most violations. The winners are:

Lorrie Vickery - Directorate of Logistics

Colleen Martin - Directorate of Logistics



Here is a list of the violations in the display:

- Combination recorded improperly on a piece of paper in a major's hand.
- Document left on top of safe under newspaper.
- Classified in recycle box.
- Secret in trash can.
- Not a General Services Administration approved container.

Many NCO families assume that the government will reimburse them for personal items that are stolen or destroyed. But that's not always the case. And even if the military does pay, the check rarely covers the full replacement cost.

That's why policies offered through Family Protection Plus℠ provide renter's and homeowner's coverage that costs a lot less than you might think. Comprehensive coverage that protects your belongings against fire, smoke and water damage, plus theft, weather, and other perils.

THE MILITARY WON'T ALWAYS PROTECT YOUR HOUSEHOLD BELONGINGS AGAINST LOSS OR DAMAGE. CALL TO FIND OUT HOW WE CAN.

These policies offer up to 120 days of protection when your property is being moved. Or even indefinite coverage if you've stored your belongings while waiting for a housing assignment. Plus up to 179 days of automatic coverage if you're on a TDY anywhere in the world. If that seems like a sensible approach, there's a good reason. Family Protection Plus, created by Academy Life Insurance Company, was designed specifically for NCO families. And it's recommended by NCOA®.

Program rehabilitates basic trainees

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

Army basic training is tough, ask anyone. The days are long, the training is hard and demands are made to push yourself physically and mentally. No matter what precautions are taken, injuries will occur.

The Fitness Training Unit of the 30th Adjutant General (Reception) Battalion, Infantry Training Brigade, has taken on the mission of rehabilitating soldiers in One-Station Unit Training who have received injuries while training, said Capt. Lisa Latessa, commander, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 30th AG Bn.

"The primary mission of FTU," said Latessa, "is to decrease the fitness-related attrition in the Initial Entry Training environment by providing selected receptees who fail an initial assessment program an opportunity to increase their physical condition prior to infantry training.

"In January of this year, the FTU began a new mission — the rehab program. Motivated soldiers with profiles extending over two weeks in duration are now given the opportunity to rehabilitate from their injuries.

"In the past, if a soldier became injured during training there was little alternative but to separate him from the Army. In addition to separating a prospective infantryman, the funds spent training and processing these soldiers were lost.

"The solution was to provide an environment where soldiers can heal, continue to train and return to duty and complete their training," Latessa said.

All trainees are interviewed prior to being assigned to the FTU to check their motivation level and desire to be retained in the Army, said Latessa. The program is very successful in its new mission so far, and a lot of that is due to the outstanding cadre of the program, she said.

Staff Sgt. Mark C. Downey, along with staff sergeants Hulie Reynolds and Alton Hyman, helped develop the rehab program.

"The time the soldiers remain in the program varies depending on the extent of the injury," said Hyman. "The majority of trainees have lower body injuries, so we do a lot of low-impact type exercises like aquatics, treadmills, bicycles, walking or running at individual pace, and weight machines. The programs are tailored to the individual. All we ask is that the soldiers remain motivated and do their best."

"This program was begun in the Infantry Training Brigade," Latessa said. "It's a promising program that will hopefully retain good soldiers in the Army."

Pfc. Daniel Mocciolo is presently in the rehab program at FTU. "While I was training I broke my shoulder," he said. "If it wasn't for the rehab program here, I would have been sent home for an injury that can heal in eight weeks.

"All the training here is based on positive motivation, and when you finally succeed you feel good about yourself. But the program here needs to be increased in size because there's not enough drill sergeants or facilities. It should be adopted Armywide because there are a lot of good soldiers who get kicked out who really want to be in the Army," Mocciolo said.

Do financial homework for easier transition

American Forces Information Service

If you are thinking of leaving military or federal service, make sure your finances are straight.

Job searches can take several months, said Paula Davis, a Department of Defense transition specialist. Landing a new job depends on numerous factors, she said, including an individual's willingness to relocate, type of job, salary expectations and experience.

"You are spending your time and energy trying to find a new job," Davis said. "You don't want to have to worry about every penny, taking a job you don't want just to pay the bills or to hold off bill collectors."

Ensuring that you straighten out your finances and set up a budget before looking for a job won't prevent money problems, said Davis, but it may make life easier while you do look.

A few financial moves you should take include:

• Drawing up a list of income and resources.

• Calculating a bare bones budget that covers necessary items, such as utility expenses, mortgage or rent payments, minimum credit card payments, car payments and food costs.

• Determining costs for job hunting, including costs for telephone calls, printing and mailing resumes and applications.

• Paying the minimum amount monthly, if you can't pay off credit card bills.

• Cutting down on expenses.

• Avoiding major purchases and expensive vacations.

• Contacting credit card companies, mortgage companies and other agencies to predetermine their policies concerning late or delayed payments.

Davis recommended developing at least three budget plans to cover all possibilities. "There's the best scenario, one where a person finds a job right away and has that paycheck coming in.

"Second, there's the next best, which is finding a job in about six months," she said. "Worst-casing it, one should set up a third financial strategy to cover a job search that takes a year or so."

Army Community Service provides monthly financial seminars on cash management, financial planning and other topics, and transitioning soldiers may attend, according to Chris Smith of the Army Career and Alumni Program.

"We provide transitioning soldiers with a checklist," Smith said, and we recommend they visit the Staff Judge Advocate's Office to get all their legal and financial papers in order.

For help in setting up a workable budget, check with the Army Career and Alumni Program or Army Community Service.

ARMY FAMILY ACTION PLAN ISSUES

Garrison Commander's Office

More than 100 issues and questions were presented for action, comment or status to the garrison and installation staff at the Fort Benning Family Action Symposium recently.

The issues were broken down into functional areas and each directorate, activity or area was asked to respond.

The following are the questions posed to the U.S. Army Dental Activity and the answers provided by Lt. Col. Andrew D. Chandler, chief of pediatric dentistry.

Q: Can a procedure be set up for call-in dental appointments?

A: Exam visits are currently being made over the phone for active duty annual exams and space-available family care. Other visits are made on the basis of this exam.

Q: Is there a procedure set up to ensure patients attend their follow-up appointments?

A: Missed appointments present continuing barriers to efficient delivery of dental care. A limited receptionist staff allows minimal tracking of negligent patients.

Allowances are made for reasonable failure to attend appointments, but both active duty and family members receive counseling for multiple missed appointments.

Q: Why is there no periodontic care provided under the Delta dental program?

A: Sixty percent of periodontal care is funded under the current family member dental plan. At present, providers are not listed by dental specialty.

Q: How does the new Delta plan affect retirees and their families?

A: Retirees and their family members are not eligible to enroll in the present Delta Dependent Dental Plan. Emergency care on a space-available basis continues to be provided to this group of beneficiaries.

A dental plan to cover retirees and their family members is a political issue that must be addressed by the Department of Defense and Congress.

Q: What is the procedure for families with less than two years left on active duty to get dental care?

A: Family members whose sponsor will remain on active duty for less than two years are not eligible for the Dependent Dental Plan unless they express an intent to re-enlist through their command channels.

Some space-available care in their military clinic continues to be provided to these beneficiaries.

Q: The lack of Delta dental coverage for soldiers and family members who have less than two years of service remaining is an issue of great concern. It has been recommended that the government subsidize the program to ensure dental care.

A: Soldiers are not covered under the Delta Dependent Dental Plan and suffer no loss of dental care up until their Expiration Term of Service date.

Family members continue to receive space available care, and some family members whose sponsors have less than two years remaining on active duty may enroll. (See previous question)

An insurance plan for this group needs to be addressed to the Department of Defense.

Heat injury prevention

Summertime is fun but excessive heat can be dangerous

Infantry Branch Safety Office

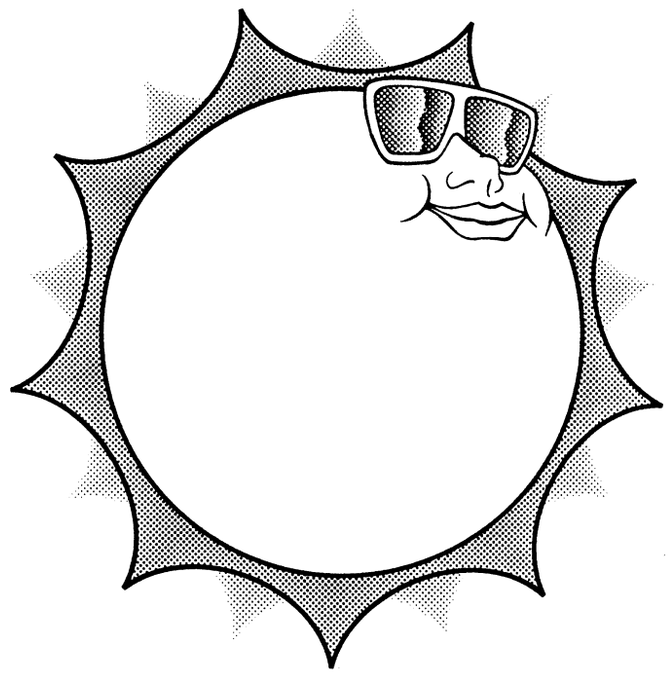
The heat of the Georgia sun makes itself felt. Everyone must know the dangers of excessive heat and the first aid to be given for heat injuries.

Here are some factors that affect your ability to withstand heat:

Physical condition: Conditions that weaken the ability to withstand heat include acute and chronic infections, recuperation from illness or injury, reaction to immunization, fever, sunburn and severe heat rash.

Overweight, very large persons are particularly susceptible to heat injury.

Acclimatization: Soldiers who are not accustomed to high temperature and humidity should be gradually acclimatized to work in hot weather.



During this period, usually 14 days, the workload should be gradually increased.

Cause: Heat injuries result directly from the loss of body fluid.

Heat stroke occurs in persons who are 80 percent depleted of body fluids so that they can no longer control or reduce their body temperature by perspiration.

The temperature of their body rises out of control, with derangement of the temperature control center in the brain. Heat stroke often results in death.

Prevention: The prevention of heat injuries is not easy, but the following can greatly reduce the number and severity of heat injuries.

Water: Water lost in perspiration must be replaced while it is being lost.

The minimum water that should be consumed during strenuous activity in hot weather is one quart per hour.

Clothing: Clothing should be worn loosely allowing circulation of air which assists cooling by evaporation of perspiration. Proper headgear should be worn to protect against sunburn.

Exposing large areas of the upper torso to the sun can accelerate heat injuries.

Diet: The human body reconstitutes itself with normal food and drink, which contain water and adequate amount of minerals including salt.

These are selectively retained by the kidney according to the body's needs.

This vital kidney process, like perspiration, depends on an adequate supply of ingested water. Salt tablets or other salt supplements are not needed except as directed by a doctor.

Observation: Leaders at all levels must observe their personnel for symptoms of heat injury.

Every soldier must be familiar with the symptoms of heat injury.

The buddy system of mutual observation can assist leaders in recognizing heat injuries. FB Card 126 should be carried by every soldier.

Wet bulb globe temperature: Activity should be strictly monitored by this index whenever the dry bulb temperature is predicted to reach or exceed 80 degrees Fahrenheit.

Call 545-5281 for current reading.

Sunburn: Each year, many soldiers receive hospitalization for severe sunburn.

This condition can put a strain on the kidneys, cause acute illness, burn eyes beyond recovery, or even cause death.

The prevention for sunburn is limiting the amount of exposure or using a sun block lotion on exposed areas.

Doctors have found more evidence linking skin cancer to sun exposure.

Special training: Training, such as, ranger, airborne, firing ranges or retreat parades requires extra attention because of the great physical stress involved in such training in the summer heat.

Curtailment of work and scheduling strenuous training activities for the cooler parts of the day yields greater efficiency and less disruption of training than ignoring the weather in attempts to complete a heavy training schedule.

Strict adherence to curtailments of activity according to the wet bulb globe temperature reading will prevent most heat injuries.

Rules of Heat Injury Prevention:

• Ensure that all personnel drink enough water, hour by hour, to replace body fluid.

Thirst alone will not call for sufficient water consumption.

• Personnel must continue a full, normal diet to maintain resistance to heat injury.

• Loose clothing should be worn to protect soldiers from the sun.

• Treat the first signs of a heat injury immediately.

• Train all personnel to recognize and treat heat injuries.

Call the Infantry Branch Safety Office at 545-3267 for more information.

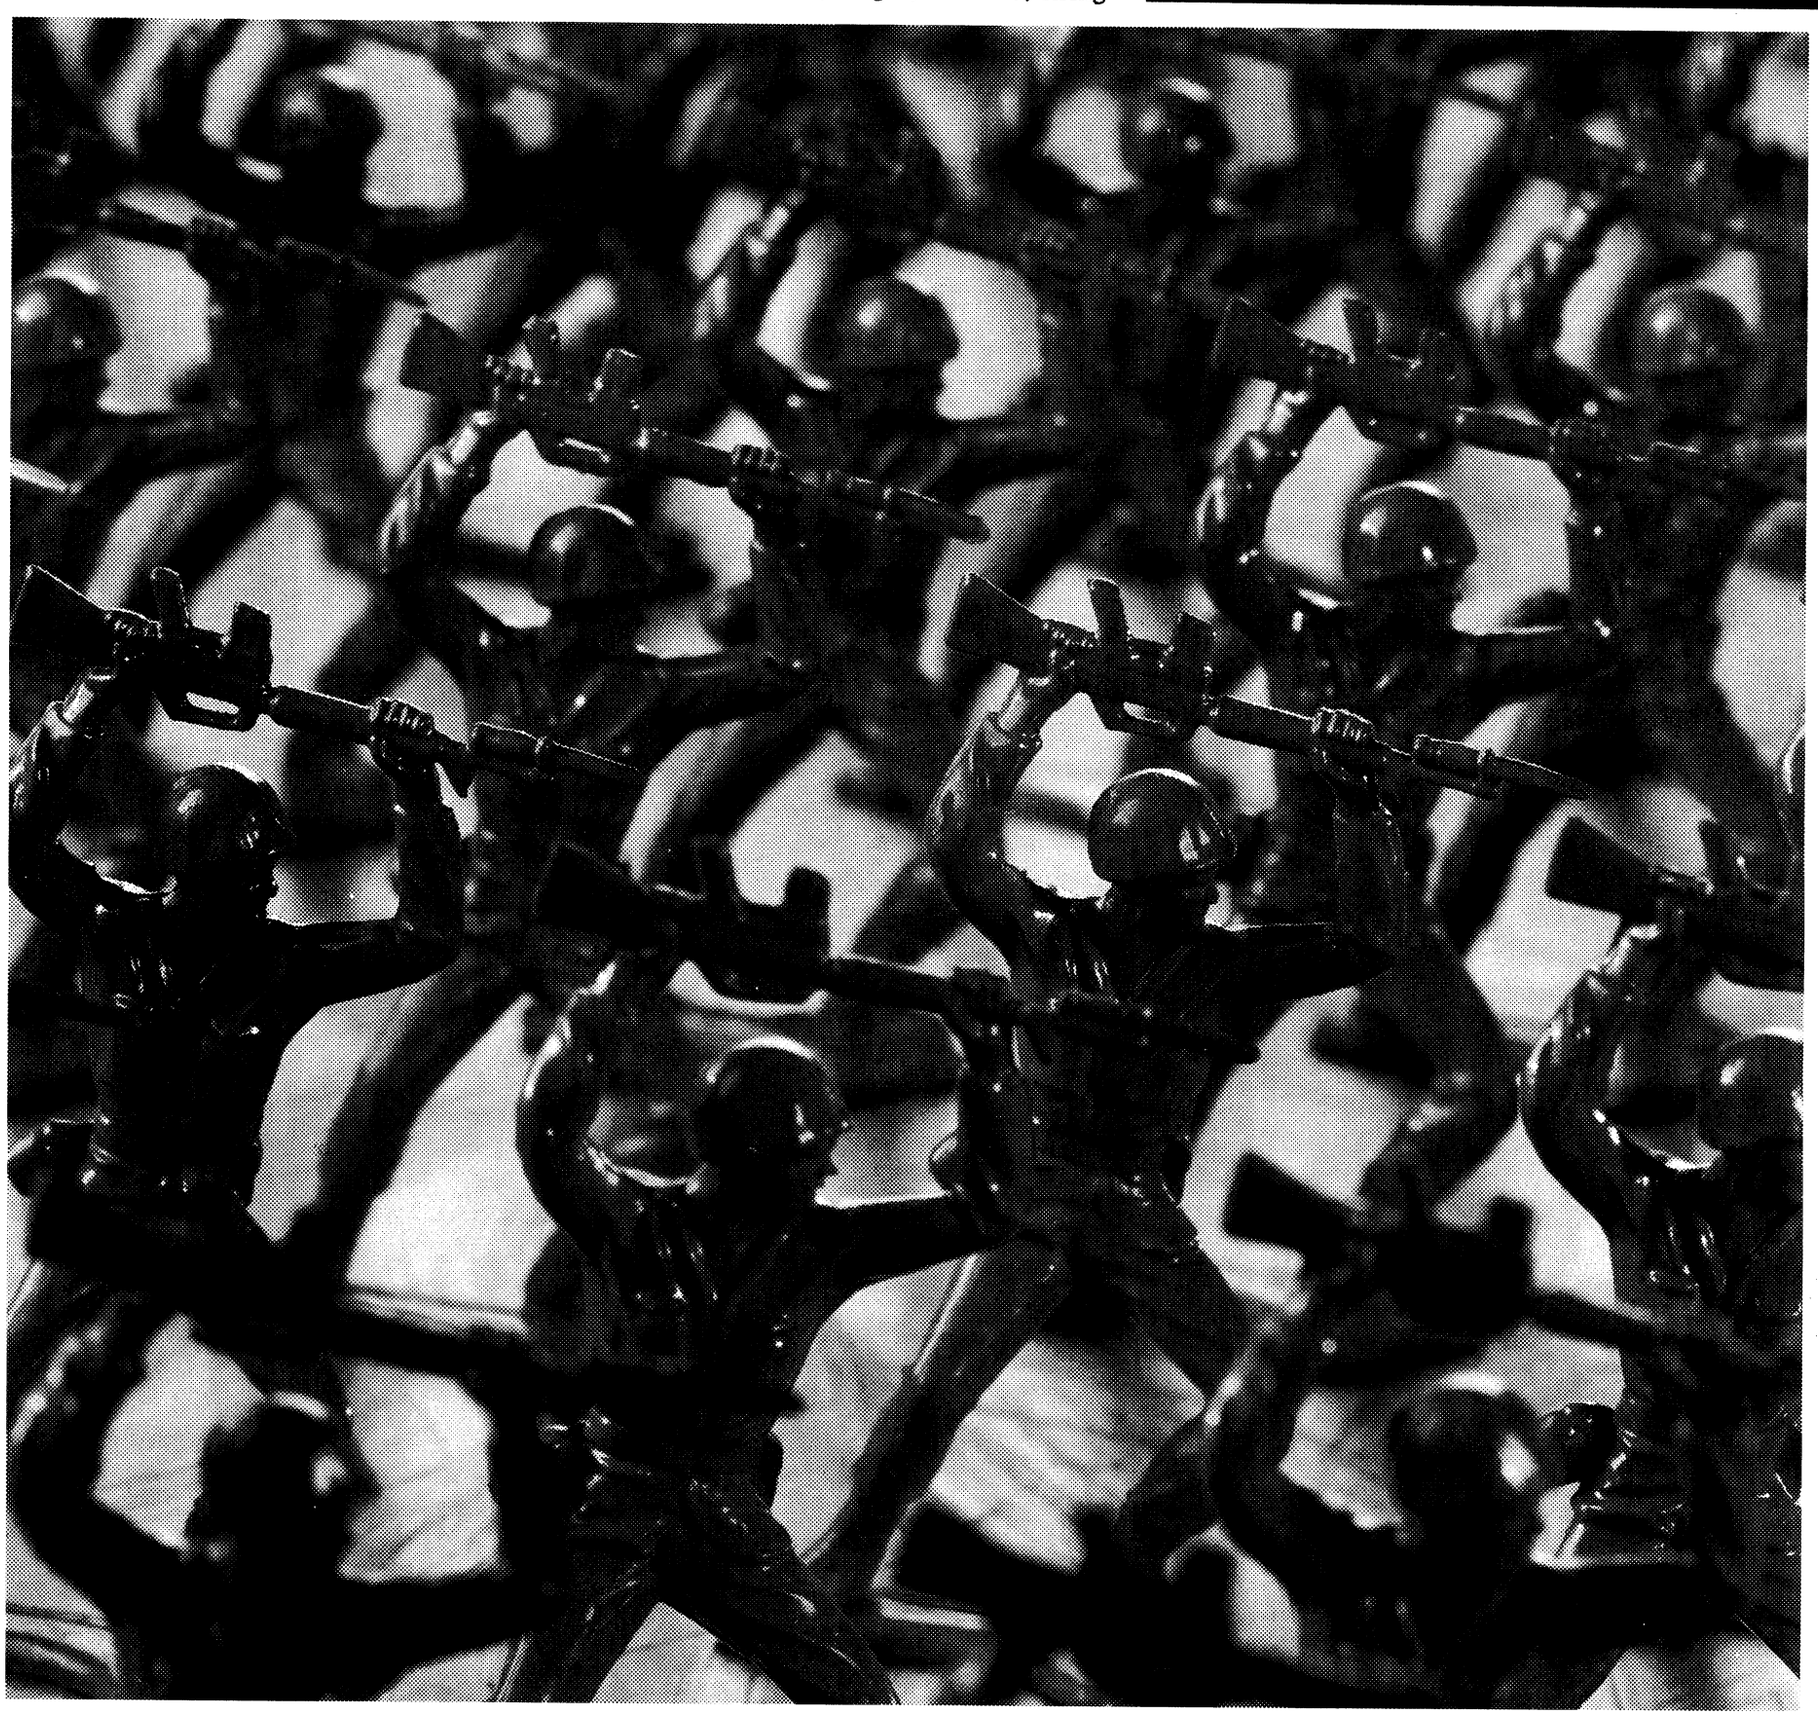
Training teaches healthy use of display terminals

Directorate of Civilian Personnel

A course on "Being a Healthy User" of video display terminals will be conducted by the Occupational Health Services and Preventive Medicine divisions of the U.S. Army Medical Department Activity July 9, 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. The course will be conducted in Building 2509.



The course objectives are to provide information on the use of visual display terminals, to reduce eye and musculoskeletal complaints associated with display terminal usage, to increase use awareness of individual ergonomics in the workplace, such as screen placement, chair and workstation positioning, posture and to provide intermediate screening for each display terminal user.

The projected audience for the course is employees who devote 20 hours or more per week to display terminal use.

Casual display terminal operators who develop persistent complaints when operating display terminal equipment and supervisors of display terminal users are also encouraged to attend.

Nominations should be made to the Training and Development Division, Directorate of Civilian Personnel, no later than July 7.

For information, call 545-5656 or 545-5580. No Department of Defense Form 1556 is required for this training.

18th Inf.'s Gators chomp down on Eagles

Fort Benning's intramural softball action continues

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The post softball season is fast approaching the halfway point, and teams are striving to stay near the top in their respective leagues. The following is a recap of two games played at Essebagger Field No. 1 June 18 between companies of the 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division.

In game one, the Hawkeyes of Headquarters and Headquarters Company went up against the Cobras of Company C, and were beaten 10-5.

The Cobras took the early lead in the top of the second inning at 1-0 on a lead-off walk to Brunton Brown. Brown moved to second on a fly to left field by Steve D'ostroph. A single by first baseman Robert Swift moved Brown to third with one out.

In the top of the third inning, the Cobras struck for another run and had a chance for more.

An appeal play at third base was upheld by the home plate umpire and Webb was out for missing third base, canceling out his run and a chance for a big inning for the Cobras.

The Cobras added two more runs in the sixth inning to go up 4-1, on a lead off double by Frazier and an RBI double by Tyler. Two outs later an error on Hawkeye centerfielder Kenneth Sherman off a fly ball by D'ostroph scored Tyler from second. D'ostroph was caught in a run down between first and second for the third out of the inning.

The Hawkeyes broke the scoring drought in their half of the sixth with two out. Pitcher John Nichols singled to right center and scored on an error by West in right.

In the top of the seventh inning, the Cobras bit the Hawkeyes for six runs. An error on Klose at short and a walk to Thurman put runners on first and second with no one out.

West singled to right moving the runners up a base. The bases would have been loaded with no outs, except West got caught too far off first and was thrown out for the first out of the inning.

Designated hitter Arturo Cantu drew a walk to load the bases for the top of the Cobra order. A pitching change by Hawkeyes didn't help. Browning singled to left to drive in one run and keep the bases loaded. Webb drove in two more runs with a single up the middle.

With men on second and third, Frazier hit a double to left to plate two more runs. Tyler doubled down the left field line to score Frazier for the final run of the inning. A fly out and ground out ended the inning for the Cobras, but not before they took a 10-1 lead.

The Hawkeyes made a run at the Cobras in the bottom of the inning scoring four times on six hits before Nichols was thrown out at third base trying to stretch a double to a triple. Final score was Cobras 10, Hawkeyes 5.

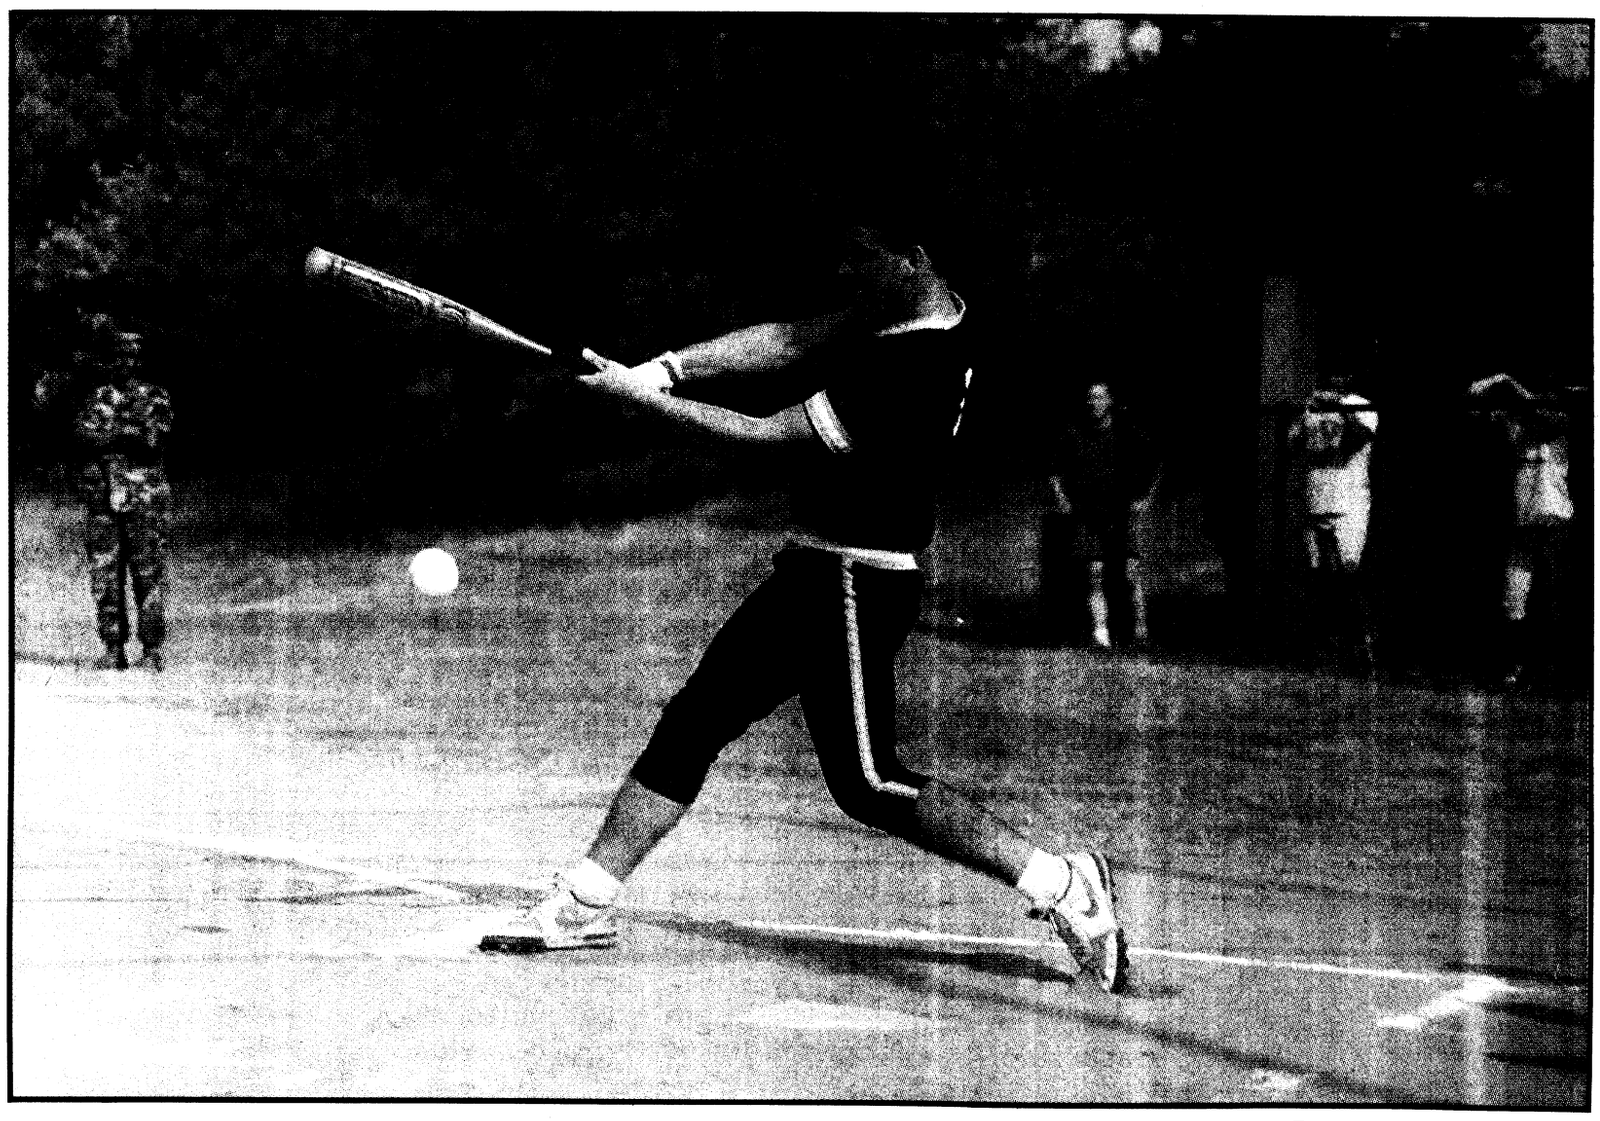
In game two, the Gators of Company A, chewed up the Eagles of Company E, 16-6.

Leftfielder Jose Perez had the big stick for the Gators. Perez went three for three with two home runs and four RBI.

The Gators scored four runs in the bottom of the first to take a 4-1 lead after one full inning. In their half of the second, the Gators thrashed out four more runs to go up 8-1 after two innings.

In the bottom of the fourth inning, the Gators broke loose for eight more runs on eight hits and one walk to take a 16-2 lead after five innings. With time running out on the Eagles, the top of the sixth was their last shot to win the game.

With one out, the Eagles put together four hits around a fly out to score two runs. With two-out singles by Horace White and William Jones, the Eagles scored two more runs to cut the lead to 16-6, but that would be as close as they would get.



Rightfielder Mike Goodwin singled off the pitcher and Jones tried to go to third on the play, a perfect peg to Charles Ward at third from first baseman B.J. Wells cut down Jones for the last out of the ball game.

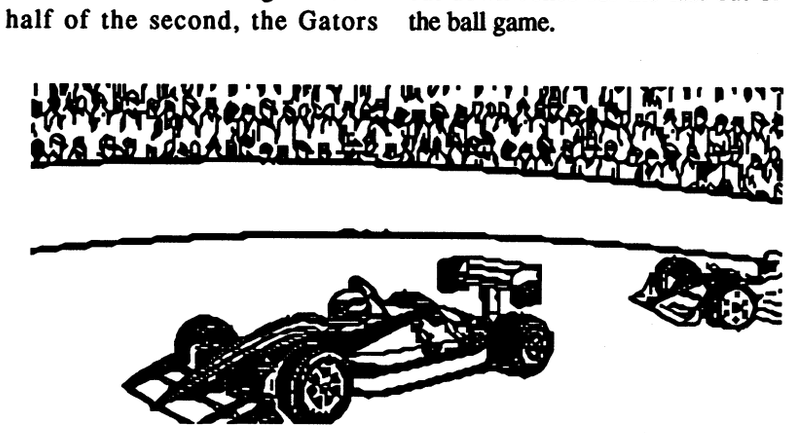
'Intimidator' will go for another 500 win

Talladega Superspeedway

TALLADEGA, Ala. — He's known as "The Intimidator," but when it comes to racing in the DieHard 500 NASCAR Winston Cup Series races at Talladega Superspeedway, Dale Earnhardt might best be known as "The Dominator."



Earnhardt has won the late July classic four times, and joins Darrell Waltrip as the only drivers able to win it more than once. He is also the only driver to win it back-to-back, a feat he has accomplished on two occasions, in 1983-84 and again in 1990-91.

He'll be looking for his latest shot when "Summer's Fastest Weekend" comes to a close with the DieHard 500 July 25 at 12:15 p.m.

"I've always seemed to run good in that race, and I've been lucky enough to come out ahead on some of those wild finishes that Talladega always seems to have," said Earnhardt. "I'll say this, though. With all of the success that I've had in that race, nothing has come easy. You have to battle with a bunch of guys for everything you get.

This includes Earnhardt, who has led more laps at Talladega than any active driver, including 432 laps in the DieHard 500.

In addition to his four wins, Earnhardt has three third-place finishes, and has led at least three laps in 10 of the 14 events in which he has raced. He missed the 1979 DieHard 500 because of injuries he suffered in an accident at Pocono

International Raceway the week before.

Earnhardt slipped badly in last year's DieHard 500, however, losing an engine 52 laps into the race, and finishing last (40th). The misfortune effectively ended whatever chance he still had of winning his sixth Winston Cup championship.

Earnhardt plans to be back in form this July, in both the DieHard 500 and the Fram Filters 500k NASCAR Busch Grand National Series race July 24.

He suffered one of his rare last-lap losses in the Fram Filters 500k last year. After taking the white flag in front of a big pack of cars, he got boxed in and finished fourth behind winner Ernie Irvan, Michael Waltrip and Todd Bodine.

"You can't make the right move every time", said Earnhardt, grinning wickedly, "but we'll give it another shot in July."

Advance reserved seat tickets are on sale now for both races.

Information and seat selection may be obtained by calling the ticket office at (205) 362-9064. VISA, MasterCard and Discover are accepted as payment for advance ticket orders at Talladega.

Rifle club donates to FUN

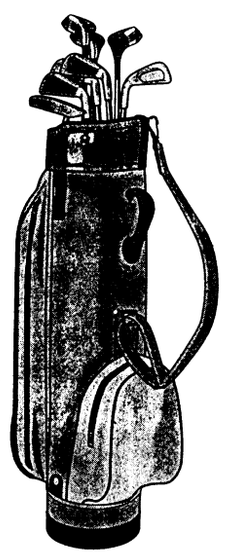
By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Rifle and Pistol Club of Fort Benning contributed $300 to the Family Unit Network from the proceeds of its May tactical match.

"We are very much in support of those unfunded programs that contribute to the quality of life in the Fort Benning community," said Jim Graham, match coordinator. "The next match will be a night match Aug. 14, with the proceeds going to the Rape Crisis Intervention Program."

Persons interested in becoming Rape Crisis Intervention volunteers can call 544-3213 or 545-1661. The program is looking for both male and female volunteers.

Local fraternity to sponsor Purple and Gold Tourney



Omega Psi Phi Fraternity Inc.

The local chapter of the Omega Psi Phi Fraternity Inc. will host the 14th annual Purple and Gold Golf Tournament.

The tournament will be at the Follow Me Golf Course Saturday and Sunday and is open to the public. The format for the tournament is 36 holes medal play with flighting after the first day's round.

Prizes will be awarded for first, second, third and fourth in each flight including trophies. There also will be a women's flight. Flights will be based on entries. Many other prizes will be awarded to include the longest drive and closest to the hole on all par threes for both days.

All entries are eligible for a chance to win an airline ticket to anywhere Delta Airlines flies in the United States. In addition, the first hole-in-one on No. 16 on Pineside Sunday wins an automobile courtesy of Freeway Ford and the Jordan Agency.

The entry fee is $70 per person, which includes green fees, riding cart and refreshments for both days. Proceeds raised from this activity funds the local chapter's scholarship fund.

Bass club teaches new anglers old tricks

Fort Benning Bass Club

Members of the Bass Club of Fort Benning abandoned their search for the elusive bass June 5 and went catfishing.

No, they did not replace their monthly bass tournament with a catfish tournament. Instead, 10 members of the club donated time and expertise to assist the Columbus Parks and Recreation Department with 185 boys and girls to sample the joys of fishing for the first time.

When the first van arrived, it became apparent that these "fishermen" were eager to get started. The city provided each angler with a "rigged" cane pole and a box of slimy, wiggly, yucky worms. The boys did not seem to mind these little catfish foodfair, however, the girls had some trepidations about having to touch them to put them on the hooks. After explaining the scientific method (stick the hook into the worm) of baiting the hooks, comments from the girls ranged from "You want me to do what?" to "I've changed my mind; I don't want to fish now."

The majority of these young people had never been fishing before, however, there were a few seasoned veterans. One of the young "pros" caught close to 40 catfish. He was very gracious in sharing his catch with some of the other participants. Getting the lines in the water was another obstacle to climb. The most difficult task for the club members was trying to untangle the fishing lines.

When the time came to start fishing, 185 boys and girls all wanted to be the first one to get their lines wet and catch the elusive "Moby Dick." The youngsters were yelling, catfish were flying in the air, hooks with worms were caught in clothing and lines were tangled.

It's hard to describe the fun that was had by all of the children and to see the little smiles spread across their face when the bobber danced and was pulled under. Just like the song says "I guess you had to be there.

If any organization or activity needs assistance in introducing children to fishing or if you would like to learn how to bass fish contact Steve Ward at 569-5705 or Larry Jones at 563-0395.

'Triple threat' bodybuilder to visit Columbus

Peachtree Natural Foods

Lee Haney, "Mr. Olympia," actor, entrepreneur and bodybuilder, will be at Peachtree Mall 2 p.m. Saturday.

TotalLEEawesome is the phrase that best articulates the magnitude of Lee Haney. Haney is Mr. Olympia. He has captured and held the world of bodybuilding's most coveted prize for the past eight consecutive contests.

But Haney is recognized in his own right as a "triple threat." He is a world renowned bodybuilder, possesses promising acting skills and is a successful entrepreneur.

Haney's quest to be the "absolute best" in bodybuilding took form after a leg injury altered his professional football dream. He began lifting weights to regain his strength and the rest is history.

Haney held both the Mr. America and Mr. Universe titles as an amateur. His first professional title was the Grand Prix in 1983, which laid the foundation for the Mr. Olympia titles that followed, which were held in New York; Brussels; Belgium; Columbus, Ohio; Gortborg, Sweden; Los Angeles, Calif.; Rimin, Italy; Chicago, Ill.; and Orlando, Fla., breaking Arnold Schwarzenegger's seven-title record.

Mr. Olympia is an annual international bodybuilding competition that represents the world's most "perfect body." The road to Mr. Olympia was not, however, travelled without discipline and hard work.

Haney has the distinction of being the youngest — at 24 — and the largest— at 6 feet and 260 pounds — ever to capture the title, feats that have earned him a place in the Guinness Book of World Records. He also set a new "high" for bodybuilding by scoring two perfect scores in 1986, the very first in the sport.

Haney has set his goals high and therefore demands standards of conduct that are rigorous and enviable.

After a daily intake of 4,000 calories, it is amazing that he maintains a 31-inch waist and 3 to 4 percent body fat while training. However, his commitment is unquestionable; his training never ends.

He begins training for the next year's contest the day after he wins. "When I train, it is like being in a different zone, " says Haney. "It is a teeth gritting pain that takes me into another world, I'm completely absorbed by the experience."

Despite his larger-than-life size, which would be well received for action adventure roles, Haney seems connected with his emotions. He spent the past year developing his ability to deliver sensitive, self-esteem building and inspirational roles.

Haney is already in the passing lane to Hollywood. He recently completed a video with New Kids on the Block, and is currently reviewing several screen plays.

Haney's triple threat nicely includes his entrepreneurial spirit and business savvy. Haney is capitalizing on his success by endorsing nutritional products and other sports related products.

Haney has completed his own fitness book titled "TotalLee-awesome," and his second book, "Ultimate Bodybuilding," will be released this summer.

Most recently, Haney signed with TwinLab, endorsing a complete nutritional and supplemental line for fitness enthusiasts and bodybuilders.

Haney's second endorsement features his signature line of sports leisure wear called Iron Knight Wear, which can be purchased at his new fitness center and other sporting goods stores throughout the United States and other countries.

In March, Haney opened his east coast mecca, a wellness and fitness center for the city of Atlanta, "Lee Haney's World Class Fitness Center." His first fitness center, Animal Kingdom is now a franchise.

He also designed the training program and served as fitness trainer for the Olympic Medalist and world heavyweight boxing champion Evander Holyfield for his title fight against Buster Douglas.

What designates Haney as being a "breed apart" is discovered in the fact that hard work and commitment were demonstrated academically as well.

Haney earned an undergraduate degree in criminal justice and youth counselling from Spartanburg Methodist College and remains married to his second-grade sweetheart, Shirley, and they have two children, son, Joshua and daughter, Olympia.

Catholic women meet, fellowship

By Jacqueline Feagin
USAIC Chaplains' Office

The Fort Benning Chapter of the Military Council of Catholic Women invites women to participate in the process of the Catholic church and to share through eucharistic celebration, spiritual development programs and community activities.

The women of MCCW meet for Bible study each Wednesday from 9:30 to 11 a.m. at the Infantry Center Chapel Annex.

The Bible study is based on the readings of the Sunday Mass.

The group meets with Chaplain (Maj.) Michael Travaglione for their discussions.

Lucy Larkin, the new president of MCCW, said she hopes to attract new members to join the team by offering more activities around the community. Larkin was welcomed at a reception June 9. For more information, contact Larkin at 687-7356 or Chris Smith at 682-9218.

Children need reassurance to fight fear

By Robert E. Locey Jr.

REFLECTIONS

Look back to when you were a child, afraid of the dark and the evil that was "out there" beyond your sight. Every child goes through these fears. Some never quite get past them and it carries on until the day they die.

Were the fears real or just the product of over-active imaginations? Was there really anything we could not see — except from the corners of our eyes? Everyone you ask would give a different answer. Who is right?

Preachers will tell you that there is a spiritual battle being waged every day. We are involved in that battle in some way whether we are aware of it or not. My thoughts are that just maybe it is the spiritual battle that we fight as children when we try to overcome the fear of the dark. It is my opinion that it depends on what we do as children that will dictate which side of that battle we will be on in the future.

Will we allow ourselves to be afraid? Some fear would be necessary — at least enough fear to let us realize we must rely on our savior's power and not our own to overcome the enemy in the final triumph.

Important to this battle is the reaction of the parent. If the parents do not believe the child is truly feeling a real presence (even if it is only real to them), then the child may decide that he or she is less than a whole person because they can't beat this thing that they're afraid of on their own.

These fears are as real to that child as the fear you would feel if a mugger had a knife at your throat. Would you want someone to tell you that he is not there and that it is a product of your imagination?

The child that dreams of a monster or thinks there is something in the room when the lights are out feels the same way — lost and alone because no one will believe them.

If you have ever felt that way, then you know it is not a good thing. It definitely is not the way I would want my child to feel. I don't think any parent would.

Every person that has not overcome the "boogeyman" is not immature. They are only looking for that helping hand of reassurance.

We cannot always be there to reassure our children of the protection around them. We must fill them with the hope and comfort of having a savior to call upon that can defeat any evil that comes their way — one who is a friend in the darkness.

Teach your children money management skills

Georgia Society of Certified Public Accountants Inc.

If you want your children to handle money responsibly and to develop the skills they will need to manage their finances effectively as adults, the Georgia Society of Certified Public Accountants recommends that you begin to teach your children about the value of money during their grade school years and sustain that education by setting a good example in managing your household finances.

The first allowance

Providing children with a fixed allowance is one of the best ways to develop their money management skills. You can start children on an allowance when they are about 6 years old.

By then they are learning about the fundamentals of money in school and already have an understanding of how to make simple purchases on their own.

Designate a specific "allowance day" and stick to it each week. When giving your children an allowance, you must also give them the right to make decisions about how they will use that money.

Emphasize to them that it is their money to manage. Try not to be concerned if your children spend all the money the first day or two after receiving their allowances.

This will help them to better understand the consequences of their spending habits.

Resist the temptation of lending your children money when they deplete their allowances.

Bailing them out doesn't help them develop a responsible attitude toward money, nor does it teach them to live within their means.

Developing savings habits

Nothing makes children feel more in control of their finances than having their own savings account passbook.

Take your child with you to the bank to set up a savings account. Discuss the benefits of depositing money into the account and explain how money can grow by earning interest.

Let your children determine how much of their allowances and other monies will be put aside in savings. Then let them decide when they will withdraw the money and for what purchases.

Even if you don't agree with how your children want to spend their savings, they will learn valuable lessons about managing their money by making their own decisions about it.

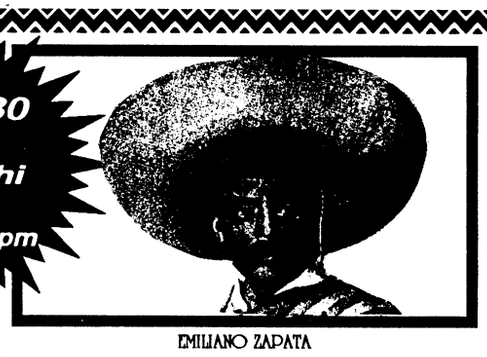
As children get older, you may want to explain the need for creating long-term goals, such as saving for the purchase of a car or college education.

If you expect your child to save for these expenses, don't forget to reward them when they attain their savings goals. For example, you may want to contribute money to their savings account each time they reach a certain savings threshold.

Make money management a family matter

Encourage open discussions about money and be as direct and honest as possible in answering your children's questions about household finances.

By involving your children in family finances, you can enhance their understanding of the role money plays in one's life.



Remember, too, that how you and your spouse handle money influences your children's attitudes about money.

For example, if you constantly use credit cards instead of cash to pay for purchases, as your children get older, they may feel they have the right to do the same without thinking about the ultimate expense of the items they purchased.

Finally, CPAs point out that children who are involved in family financial matters, even to a limited extent, are better equipped to deal with a financial crisis, such as a parent's job loss, should it occur.

CRIME WATCH

Military Police Activity

The following entries were extracted from the Fort Benning Military Police blotter May 25 to 31.

Such entries may be incomplete and are not the adjudication of the guilt or innocence of any person.

Children 17 years of age and younger must be in their quarters no later than 10 p.m., seven days a week, unless accompanied by their sponsor.

Being in the vicinity of the quarters does not constitute compliance with this policy. Juveniles must be in the quarters by 10 p.m.

If your children are going somewhere on post (such as Mini-Mall, Burger King, Anthony's Pizza, etc.), ensure they have ample time to return home prior to the curfew.

• A staff sergeant was charged with dishonorably failing to pay a debt after he made several long distance telephone calls on three different soldiers' telephones and failed to reimburse them for the calls.

• A family member reported that persons unknown removed a mountain bike from their back yard and left a 12-speed bicycle in its place.

• A specialist was charged by civil authorities with disorderly conduct after using profane language in the presence of children.

• A civilian contractor reported that persons unknown entered his secured storage area, broke the window out of this truck and removed an electric circular saw.

• A private reported that persons unknown entered his barracks room and removed his 19-inch television.

• A specialist reported that persons unknown broke the driver side window of his car and removed a compact disc player, a stereo tuner, two speakers and a radar detector.

• A specialist was charged with assault upon a child under the age of 16 after he slapped his 1-year-old child in the face.

• A retired first sergeant reported that an unknown male kicked the side of his truck while he was traveling on Sightseeing Road. He stopped to check for damage to his truck and was kicked in the face by the individual.

• A sergeant reported that persons unknown broke into his secured wall locker and removed a gold bracelet and a gold herringbone necklace.

• A private first class was charged by civil authorities with leaving the scene of an accident, no valid state driver's license and driving under the influence of alcohol.

• A staff sergeant was charged by civil authorities with disorderly conduct, simple battery and criminal trespassing, after he hit an individual with a garden hoe and damaged a window of his trailer.

This week's booby prize is awarded to the private first class who attempted to make it appear as though someone had stolen his 1993 pickup truck, set it on fire and dumped it into the Chattahoochee River.

During questioning, he admitted to setting the truck on fire and pushing it into the river himself. He was charged with false swearing.

Other activities included 11 traffic accidents and four reports of shoplifting at facilities on post.

There were 10 cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, 24 cases of larceny of private property and six cases of larceny of government property.

Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best — Give Crime Arrest."

Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5223 or the "Crime in Progress" line at 545-2222.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Jill Stebbing
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

The Department of the Army established the Qualitative Management Program as a way of improving the enlisted career force.

This program requires noncommissioned officers to demonstrate their professional ability by their performance of duty and standards of conduct.

The bars to re-enlistment imposed under the program are not intended to be rehabilitative in nature but rather are designed to deny re-enlistment to soldiers who fail to meet Army standards.

After a comprehensive review of a soldier's official military personnel file, the selection board determines whether a bar to re-enlistment should be imposed.

A Qualitative Management Program bar can be appealed on the basis of improved performance, material error, or both. Most appeals are based on improved performance.

When a material error is the basis of the appeal, the soldier must show that there is a "reasonable chance that had the error not existed, the soldier may not have been selected for the program."

Some examples of conditions qualifying as material errors are adverse enlisted evaluation reports (or academic evaluation reports) subsequently declared invalid in whole or in part, the adverse document considered by the board belonged to another soldier, an Article 15 that was designated for filing in the military personnel records jacket only was erroneously filed in the performance fiche of the official military personnel file instead, and an academic transcript of 30 college semester hours or more existed that was not recorded on the performance fiche or the qualification record (DA Form, 2A and DA Form 2-1). Army Regulation 601-380, paragraph 10-8 contains a more complete listing of conditions qualifying as material errors.

If a soldier believes his or her battalion commander will favorably endorse the appeal, then the soldier should ask the commander (in the rank of lieutenant colonel or above) to initiate the appeal.

The commander can initiate the appeal to the bar if he or she believes the soldier's current manner of performance and potential for future service warrants retention.

In making this determination, the commander compares the current manner of performance to the data used by the selection board to select the soldier for the Qualitative Management Program.

The success of the appeal depends greatly on the amount of documentation that the soldier can provide that demonstrates his or her improved performance or a material error in the personnel file.

The soldier should ask as many people as possible who have knowledge of his or her duty potential to write supporting statements. The chain of command can assist in drafting, reviewing and typing the appeal. The appeal must be forwarded through command channels no later than 60 days after notification.

A Legal Assistance attorney can review the final draft of the appeal and make recommendations to ensure the appeal meets the legal requirements contained in AR 601-280.

324th changes commanders

By Susan Dutton
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

Amid fond wishes from colleagues, friends and family members, Lt. Col. Robert Dail relinquished command of the 324th Support Battalion (Forward), 24th Division Support Command, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized) June 15.

As the colors of the battalion exchanged hands under the direction of Col. Robert L. Floyd, commander, 24th Infantry Division Support Command, the presence of the guidons of the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division reminded all of the relationship and the importance of the battalion to the units it supports at Fort Benning.

Dail assumed command of the 197th Support Battalion (Separate) July 1, 1991, and subsequently effected its transition to the 324th Support Battalion (Forward) in August of that year.

Since then, the battalion has supported the brigade in two Victory Focus exercises and two rotations to the National Training Center at Fort Irwin, Calif.

Kapinos came to Fort Benning from the 10th Mountain Division, Fort Drum, N.Y., where he was executive officer of the 10th Support Battalion (Forward) and, most recently, the chief of Division Materiel Management Center.

It was during this last assignment that Kapinos deployed with the division in support of the Hurricane Andrew relief effort in Homestead, Fla., and Operation Restore Hope in Somalia.

Among the guests attending the change of command ceremony were Maj. Gen. Paul Blackwell, commander, 24th Infantry Division, Brig. Gen. Paul Kern, assistant division commander (maneuver), 24th Infantry Division.

Col. Robert St. Onge, commander, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, also attended.

29th conducts CALFEX

By Gregory Hart
29th Infantry Regiment

Visitors from the city of Columbus and Germany and other foreign countries went to Cactus Observation Post along with officers of the Infantry Officer Advanced Course to see Fort Benning's weapons demonstration, the Combined Arms Live Fire Exercise June 10.

This demonstration includes the Bradley Fighting Vehicle, the Abrams main battle tank, as well as the M-113 armored personnel carrier, M-901 improved tube-launched, optically-tracked, wire-guided vehicle, M-981 FISTV, M-106 mortar carrier and the Avenger Air Defense System.

Also demonstrated was the OH-58D Kiowa warrior helicopter armed with a .50 caliber machine gun and 2.75-inch rockets. Army artillery effects were demonstrated by a barrage of 155mm rounds in the impact area.

The Air Force brought in two B-1 bombers at the opening of the demonstration and conducted two bomb runs dropping a total of 2,000 pounds of bombs and also conducted strafing runs to demonstrate the aircraft's ability to kill armored vehicles with its nose-mounted 30mm gatling gun.

For the second phase of the CALFEX, the Infantry Officer Advanced Course students moved to another seating area down range where they could observe closely an infantry company, supported by tanks and engineers, attack a bunker complex and breach a wire obstacle.

Afterward, everyone had an opportunity to view the display area where all of the vehicles and their subject matter experts were waiting to answer questions.

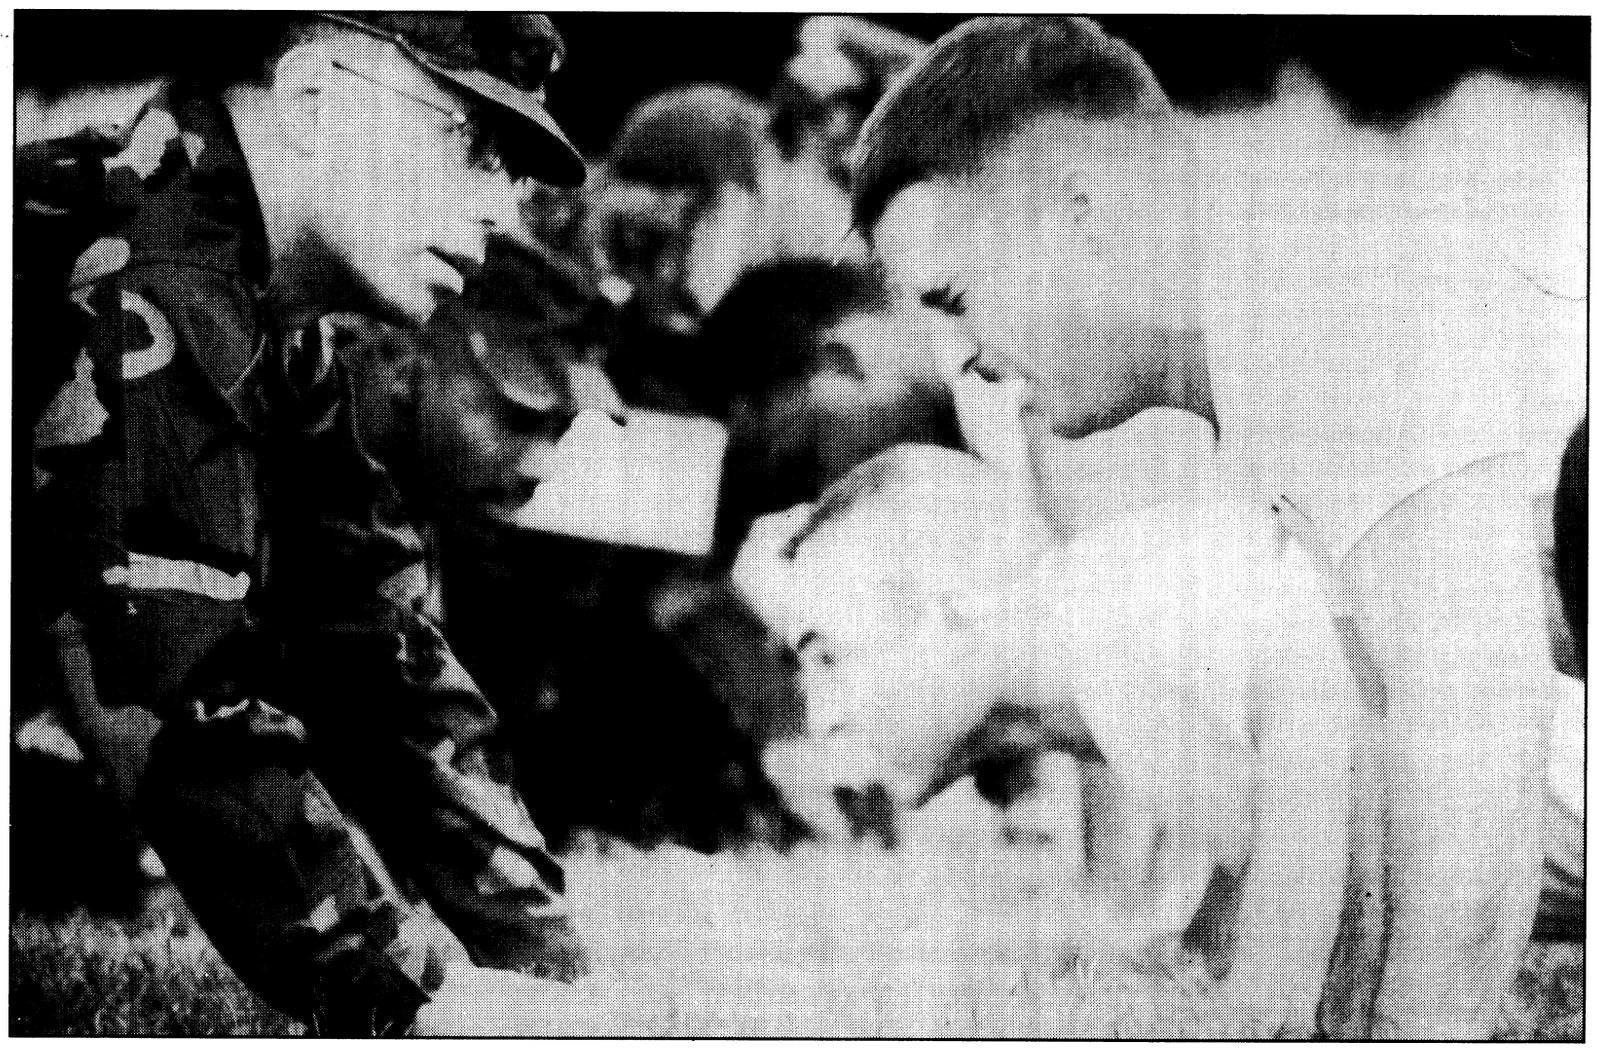
7th RTB changes command at Fort Bliss

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Command of the 7th Ranger Training Battalion, Ranger Training Brigade, changed hands June 15 during a 9 a.m. ceremony at Camp McGregor, Fort Bliss, Texas.

Lt. Col. Steven G. Guthrie, formerly a training analyst in the Program Analysis and Evaluation Division, Office of the Chief of Staff, Army, took command from Lt. Col. Barry E. Willey.

The 7th Ranger Training Battalion is responsible for conducting the desert phase of the Ranger Course.



Willey has commanded the battalion since July 1991. He is a graduate of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., and holds a master of science degree from Indiana University. His assignments include service with the 82nd Airborne Division during Operation Urgent Fury in Grenada and with the 24th Infantry Division during Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm.

Willey's awards and decorations include the Bronze Star with one oak leaf cluster, the Defense Meritorious Service Medal, two awards of the Meritorious Service Medal, four awards of the Army Commendation Medal, the Ranger Tab and the Parachutist Badge.

He and his wife, Barbara, have two children. He will attend the U.S. Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa.

Guthrie was commissioned a second lieutenant of infantry from the U.S. Military Academy, West Point, N.Y., in 1975. He has held a number of command and staff positions both in the United States and overseas, including command of a company with the 1st Battalion (Airborne), 509th Infantry, a separate battalion combat team in Vicenza, Italy. He deployed with the 4th Battalion, 18th Infantry, 1st Infantry Division, from Germany to Saudi Arabia during Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm. Guthrie holds a master of science degree from the University of New Orleans.

Among his awards and decorations are the Bronze Star, Meritorious Service Medal with four oak leaf clusters, the Army Commendation Medal, the Ranger Tab and the Parachutist Badge.

Contestants in the Air Assault Challenge take the physical fitness test.

Become a contestant, meet the Air Assault Challenge

By Wanda Reynolds
U.S. Army Aviation Center

FORT RUCKER, Ala. — They will once again come to meet the challenge. That is, the Air Assault Challenge.

Teams from units worldwide will compete in the third annual Air Assault Challenge, which will be at the U.S. Army Aviation Center, Fort Rucker, Ala., Nov. 17, 18 and 19.

Contestants, regardless of rank, service or gender are invited to enter. Teams of two will compete against each other. Scores of the different events will be used to determine which team is the most proficient in all areas of air assault operations.

The challenge will consist of one day of inprocessing and refresher training and an Army Physical Fitness Test, and two days of tests and exams. This year, up to 70 teams will be able to compete in the challenge.

"This year's competition promises to be a greater success than last year's because of the increase in awareness throughout all branches of service," said Capt. Philip A. Sabatino, commander of Company D, 1st Battalion, 10th Aviation Regiment, 1st Aviation Brigade (Air Assault). Sabatino added that entries from other services, such as Navy, Marines and Air Force, will make it more competitive.

There are eight scored events. The Army Physical Fitness Test consists of push-ups, sit-ups and a two-mile run. Contestants scoring 300 (100 in each event) will receive an additional point for each push-up and sit-up repetition and one point for each six seconds decreased in the run time maximum score.

Teams will then be given a base point, landing heading and stakes to mark a helicopter landing point based on standard distances between markings. The obstacle course includes a confidence climb, low belly over, weaver, a swing, stop and jump and other obstacles.

The slingload inspection event will consist of preparation and rigging of four loads. Teams will be given two minutes to inspect all problem loads and find up to 16 faults.

Participants will then tie a complete Swiss rappel seat and climb the stairs of the 50-foot rappel tower.

The written academic exam will cover all phases of air assault training, including air assault, slingload and rappelling operations. The exam will have 100 multiple-choice questions to be completed in 15 minutes.

Competitors will be required to demonstrate hand and arm signals such as "move aircraft upward," "hover," and "cut slingload."

Teammates must finish the 12-mile foot march within 10 feet of each other. Team time stops when the last team member crosses the finish line. Contestants will be carrying an M-16 rifle mockup and a rucksack with prescribed equipment.

A prechallenge pamphlet and entry information are available by writing: Commander, Company D, Air Assault School, 1st Battalion, 10th Aviation Regiment, 1st Aviation Brigade (Air Assault), Fort Rucker, Ala. 36362-5000. The Air Assault School can also be contacted at (205) 255-6336 or 255-4787 or DSN 558-6336 or 558-4787. Registration deadline is Nov. 6.

WORLD WAR II

50 years ago this week...

• In the Solomons, Allied forces launched successful landings around New Georgia that resulted in the capture of several islands such as Rendova. A U.S. convoy supported the assaults as a squadron of cruisers and destroyers bombarded Japanese positions, particularly the base at Shortland. Despite losing the transport vessel McCawley, the Allies completed the occupation of each island within a day, inflicting significant enemy losses to include 121 planes that opposed the invading force.

• On New Guinea, Australian and American units consolidated to form the McKechnie Force, which then successfully landed at Nassau Bay near Salamaua despite heavy resistance.

• Near New Guinea, U.S. forces occupied Kiriwina and Woodlark islands and immediately began building an airfield.

• On the Eastern Front, Soviet and German forces clashed in a series of small-scale actions initiated by both sides in numerous locations along the entire front. Although neither side made notable gains, the increased activity served as a precursor to more significant operations.

• The Royal Air Force Bomber Command completed another month of heavy bombing of Germany as part of Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur Harris' Battle of the Ruhr campaign. British bombers dropped more than 10,000 tons of bombs during June alone. Additionally, the 8th U.S. Army Air Force expended another 2,400 tons raiding its own western European targets.

• On Fort Benning, 30 selected soldiers from the 176th Infantry Regiment participated in a three-day, 120-mile forced march from Atlanta to Fort Benning, as part of an experiment to determine the fighting capabilities of troops after a long movement.

Lights! Camera! Action!

Fort Benning was the location for filmmaking by the Training and Doctrine Command June 15 and 16.

The filming crew was headed up by Randy Elliott, the project's officer from Fort McClellan, Ala. Fort Benning's Educational Television also joined in the filming.

The film, titled "MPs Support Two River Crossings," featured the making of a full-closure ribbon bridge on June 15 and an assault float bridge June 16 across the Chattahoochee River at Engineer's Landing.

"The film is being made by TRADOC, but it will be used for worldwide distribution," said Sgt. 1st Class Vince Odland, military police adviser from Readiness Group Redstone, Huntsville, Ala.

The crew stayed at Fort Benning two weeks for filming.

Units from the 145th National Guard assembled the ribbon bridge June 15 as part of their annual training. The 166th Engineer Company (Assault Float Bridge) from Centreville, Ala., constructed the ribbon bridge while the 1165th Military Police Company from Butler, Ala., provided all the security for the project.

On June 16, the 586th Engineer Company (Assault Float Bridge) constructed an assault bridge at the same location as the 988th Military Police Company provided security.

The 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment acted as a simulated task force that was assaulting over the river.

"The significance of this exercise is that it involved multi-echelon training," said Master Sgt. James Clifton, adviser on the project for the 988th MP Co.

The difference in the two bridges, said Clifton, is that a ribbon bridge is a more stable, permanent type of bridge. Assault float bridges usually are temporary; after crossing, they are picked up and moved.

The military police's role in the project was to provide an escort for the convoy of equipment transported, secure the engineers up to the crossing point, and provide near and far side security, said Sgt. Charles Garner from the 988th Military Police Company.

The engineers constructed parts of the bridges down the river from the crossing point with the help of Chinook helicopters that flew in bridge pieces. The semi-constructed parts were then ferried down river and fully constructed.

"The operation was excellent," said Clifton. "We met 100 percent of our objectives, and we have extra footage that was shot to use for other activities. Fort Benning did an excellent job; all the different units got along great and everyone cooperated."

Army of future expects more than ever from young leaders

TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — Young leaders in the Army of the future will be asked to do more than they ever have, according to Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan, Army chief of staff.

Sullivan was speaking at a ceremony June 14 marking the release of the new Field Manual 100-5, "Operations," the capstone doctrine for the Army.

He described the first night of Operation Just Cause in Panama, where along with the Air Force, Navy and Marines "we took 26 to 27 objectives from midnight to daylight." There were more than 280 aircraft in operation, including helicopters, stealth fighters and airborne jump planes, he said.

"How do you command an organization in that type of contingency operation?" he asked. "You can expect to see (the answer) in our schools and training centers."

Sullivan called doctrine "the engine of change" and "training is the glue that holds the organization together."

Training and Doctrine Command has been training leaders and developing doctrine for the Army since its creation 20 years ago. The demands made by the latest capstone doctrine will require a new emphasis in leader training.

The training centers where the young leaders of the Army will be trained are in existence today because of TRADOC initiatives in the past.

Gen. William E DePuy, the first TRADOC commander, and Maj. Gen. Paul F. Gorman, TRADOC's second deputy chief of staff for training, proposed a center where Army units could be trained to fight under realistic conditions. The concept was approved in 1977, and in 1982 the first Forces Command units arrived for exercises at the National Training Center at Fort Irwin, Calif.

"That's the number one thing TRADOC has done," said Gen. Maxwell R. Thurman, TRADOC commander from June 1987 to August 1989.

Creation of NTC led to activating the Joint Readiness Training Center, Fort Chaffee, Ark., and the Combined Military Training Center, Hohenfels, Germany.

TRADOC continues with innovations that will keep the Army ready for the future. One is battle laboratories, devised to study and develop materiel modernization and tactical operations.

"In the absence of a particular measurable threat, what we want to do is experiment with capabilities so we can continue to maintain that edge on a wide range of anticipated present and future operational environments," said Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr., TRADOC commander.

The battle labs will work with industry and the scientific and academic communities to try to take advantage of technological breakthroughs. While resources will not allow development of whole new weapons systems, new technology can be "inserted" into existing equipment.

TRADOC must be "the organization that continues to look ahead of change," Franks said.

Another way that is done is through the Commander in Chief Support Initiative. TRADOC teams make annual visits to the warfighting CINCs and Army components commanders to learn of issues that TRADOC agencies can assist with.

"These issues range from the complex — new doctrine — to the commonplace — resolving equipment delivery problems," said Lt. Col. Albert Burckard, CINC Support Initiative program manager. "TRADOC's goal is to assist CINCs in accomplishing their regional and strategic objectives."

Soldier training also continues to evolve. An example is the addition of "battle proficiency" training to the Noncommissioned Officer Education System for combat support and combat service support courses.

In the anticipated nature of modern warfare, there will be no set fronts and rear areas. Administrative NCOs must know how to lead and perform in battle the same as combat arms solders. Combat leader skills have been added to all courses from Primary Leadership Development to advanced NCO courses.

TRADOC continues to lead the Army in resource management, as well.

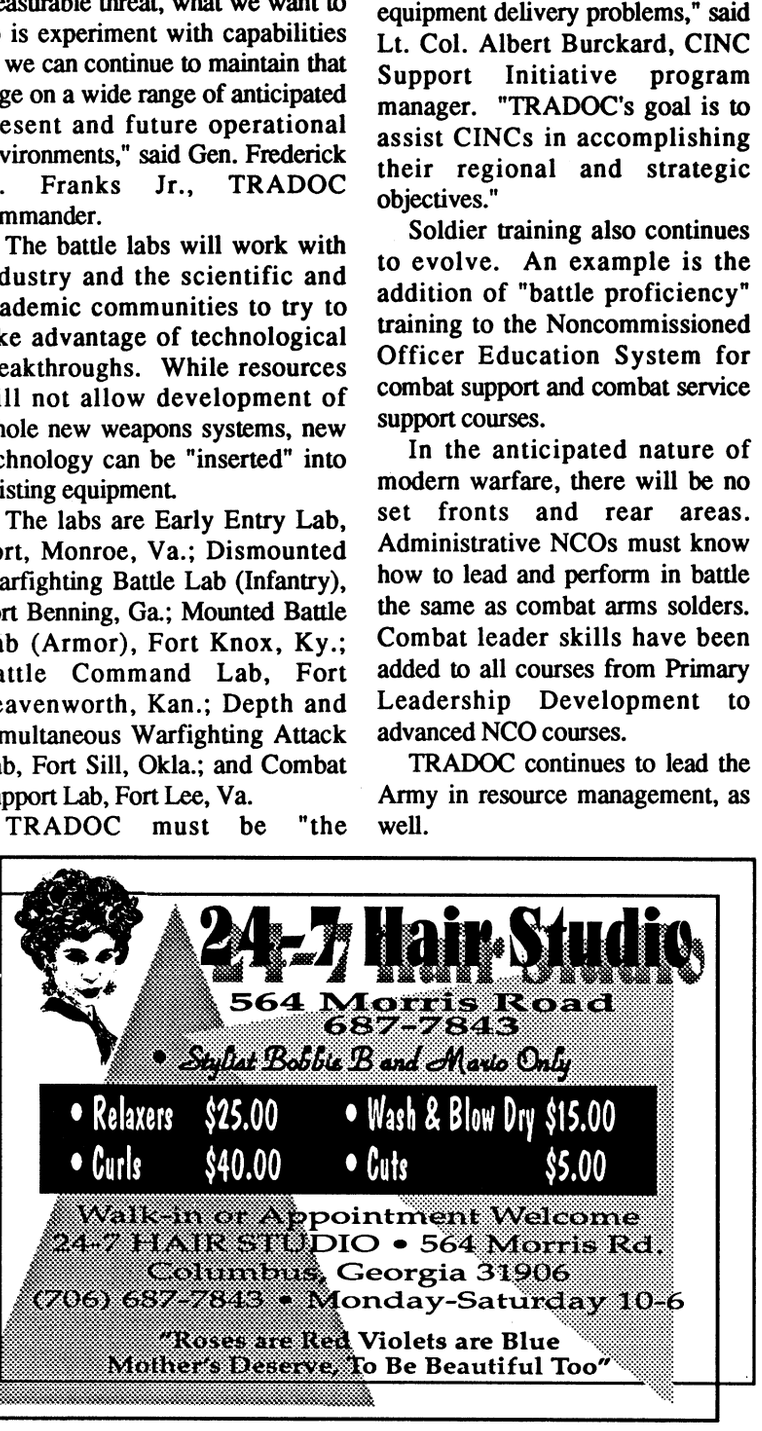
One program is "Good Ideas." Rather than an attempt to solicit suggestions from soldiers, Good Ideas is a collection of suggestions that already save resources and improve operations. The sources for these ideas are various suggestion programs from the Army, other services, private and government agencies and industry.

Good Ideas has become the one place leaders and managers can find actions that work. Department of Defense officials are developing a computer conversation system that will allow all military installations to access the Good Ideas bulletin boards.

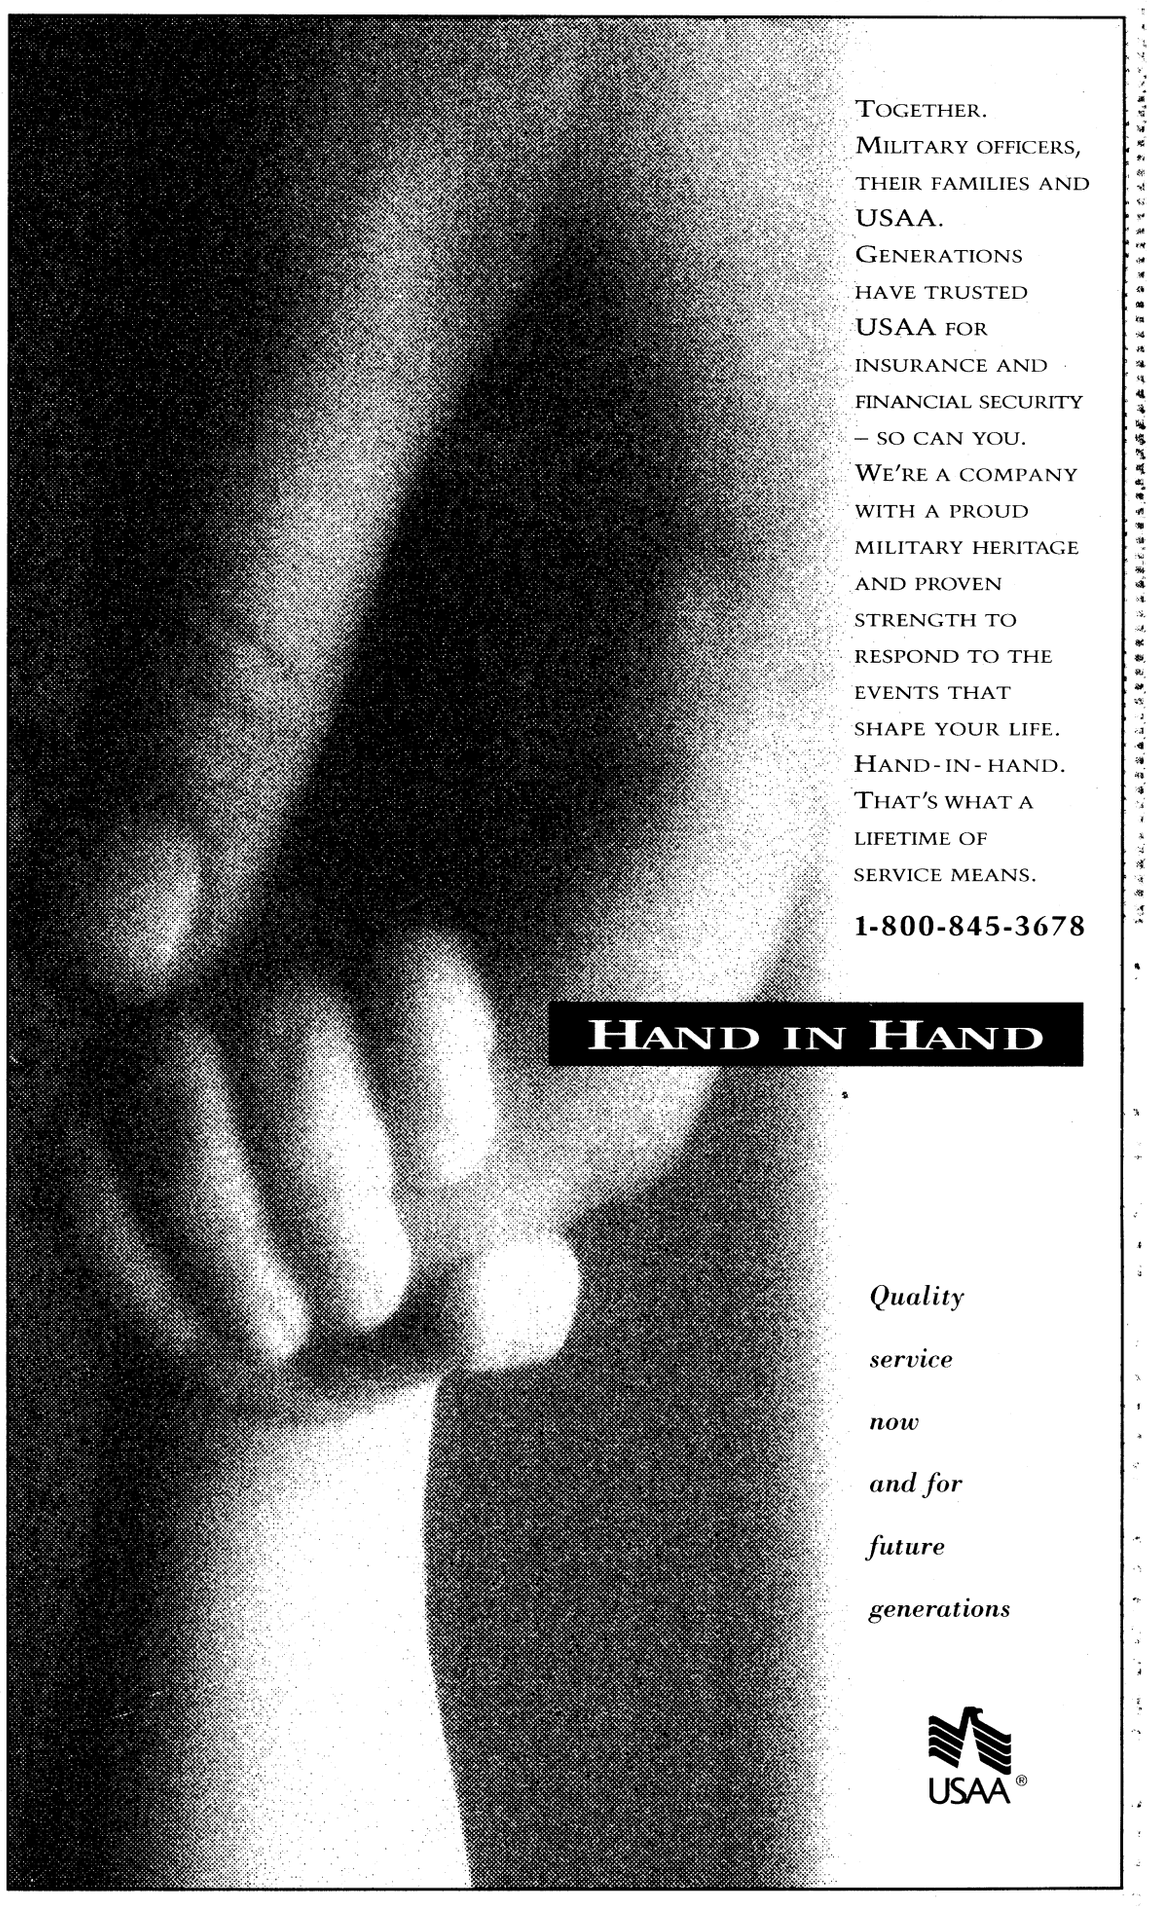
Partnership and regionalization programs attempt to consolidate and share services among installations in shared geographic areas.

Fort Huachuca, Ariz., is one installation that has benefited from the partnership program. The post has made agreements with nearby Davis-Monthan Air Force Base for aircraft avionics repairs, parachute packing and explosive ordnance disposal support. The support means significant savings in dollars and personnel.

Fort Huachuca also performs services for federal installations, such as laundry support for the Air Force and food service and maintenance for the Army's Yuma Proving Ground.



"The work TRADOC does is very serious work because it involves preparing the Army to receive America's most precious assets — the sons and daughters of America," Thurman said.



"The functions of TRADOC are enduring. They will go on in the future no matter who's the boss ... whatever size the Army may be, however much money we may have," he said.

Gen. John W. Foss, TRADOC commander from August 1989 to August 1991, feels that on a day-to-day basis, efforts of TRADOC personnel are not noticed by the rest of the Army.

"It's at the end of an operation or war that people begin to understand that TRADOC really has a role," he said. "Then, everybody says they're glad our soldiers were well trained, our equipment worked, the doctrine was right, the NCOs knew what they were doing, the officers knew what they were doing.

"The people in TRADOC really make a significant impact on the Army in many, many ways.

PEOPLE

50 FUN THINGS TO DO THIS SUMMER

By Agatha Hudson Debrow
Bayonet editor

Summer is here and with it the dilemma for parents and students of what to do.

Well, don't worry. Whether you're a child, a teenager or a parent, there are many fun things to do within and around Fort Benning.

Here are some suggestions for summer '93.

Fort Benning activities

1 Join the Youth Activities Center. Youth Services has a variety of activities for active duty and retired military family members of all ages. The activities include field trips, bowling, craft classes, roller skating and more. Call the center at 545-3070 for information.

2. Cool off and go swimming at one of the post's outdoor pools.

Fort Benning has outdoor swimming pools in Custer Terrace, on Kelley Hill, Sand Hill and Carey, behind the Main NCO Club. Operational hours are:

Lap swimming (except Custer Terrace pool), 6 to 8 a.m. and 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Open swimming, 1 to 8 p.m.

Pools will be closed as indicated:

Carey, Monday and Tuesday; Kelley Hill, Thursday; Sand Hill, Tuesday and Wednesday; and Custer Terrace, Wednesday and Thursday.

3. Learn to swim. Two-week classes are available July 6 to 16, July 19 to 30 and Aug. 2 to 13 through the Youth Activities Center. The sessions cost $20 per student and classes are limited to 20 students. Call 545-7945 or 545-3070 for more information.

4. Learn first aid or how to save lives by taking an American Red Cross course. Classes are available for cardiopulmonary resuscitation, first aid and more. For registration information, call 545-5194 or 545-5117.

5 Bowl the summer away at one of Fort Benning's two bowling centers. One is located at the Main Mall and one on Main Post. The Main Post Bowling Center is open 9 a.m. to 11 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 9 to 1 a.m. Fridays and Saturdays, and noon to 11 p.m. Sundays.

6. Go horseback riding. Stables, rental horses, trail rides, pony rides and riding classes are available at the Hunt Club on Marne Road.

Hours are Monday to Friday, 2 to 6 p.m.; Saturdays, Sundays and holidays from 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Rentals are $12 an hour for nonmembers, $8 hourly for members. Sign up for guided trail rides each Sunday seven days in advance. For information, call 689-3945.

7. Learn how to baby-sit. Contact the American Red Cross at 545-5194 for class information.

8. Learn ballet, tap or jazz. Cost is $15 monthly and registration is Aug. 9 at the Youth Activities Center.

9. Take part in a summer camp. The Boy Scouts and the Youth Activities Center are offering camps.

Youth Services is offering camp throughout the summer from 8 a.m. to noon each day. Children 6 to 12 can attend for $25 per week. Activities include field trips, sports and fitness, creative activities, social interaction and snacks.

The schedule is July 6 to 9, July 12 to 16, July 19 to 23, July 26 to 30, Aug. 2 to 6 and Aug. 9 to 13.

Summer camp for Boy Scouts will be July 18 to 24 and July 25 to 31. Boy Scouts will go with their troops to spend a week at Camp Pine Mountain just outside West Point, Ga.

Many Scouting activities will be offered, including canoeing, sailing, swimming, hiking, fishing, nature studies, handicraft, sports and more. The $110 fee includes all meals and activities for the week. Contact your local Boy Scout troop for more information.

10 Learn to defend yourself. Take martial arts. The Fort Benning Officers' Club will offer a martial arts class for youth on Saturdays and Sundays from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 2 to 4 p.m.

For more information, call 687-0871.

11. Learn baton and flag twirling. The Officers' Wives' Club offers classes through Linda Miller. Call her at 682-5582 or call the OWC at 687-3537.

12. Explore the history of the infantry at the National Infantry Museum, located on Baltzell Avenue on post. Hours are 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and Saturdays and Sundays from 12:30 to 4:30 p.m. The museum is closed on holidays that fall on Mondays. Call 545-2958 or 545-6762 for more information.

13. Volunteer. Volunteer opportunities abound on post. If you can type, file, answer the telephone or have other skills, just call the installation volunteer coordinator at 545-5602.

14. Catch a movie at the Main Post Theater. For information on what's playing, show times and admission fees, call 687-8051 from 9 a.m. until 11 p.m. or 545-1693 in the afternoons.

15 Play softball. Youth Services is sponsoring a mother and daughter softball league. It is open to girls 9 to 15 years old and mothers. Registration ends July 2. Sign up will be at Youth Services, Building 1056, Monday through Friday 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Call 545-3070 for information.

16. Take golf lessons. Private or group golf lessons are available at the Follow Me Golf Course for beginners and advanced players. For more information, call 687-1940.

17. Tumble your way through the summer by taking gymnastics. The Officers' Wives' Club offers gymnastics classes through Kelly Cargill. Call her at 563-8176 for class dates and times.

18. Check out Sayers Memorial Library for some summer reading. A children's room with several thousand books for children is available, and the library has reading material for young adults.

The library also carries videos, magazines and personal computers with word processing. Pop, classical, country and rock music is available on compact discs and records, and listening stations are available to use. Also, books on tapes are available.

19. Preschoolers to middle schoolers can "read and tell" every other Thursday at 2 p.m. for about an hour at Sayers Memorial Library. This is a program where the children come in and talk to a group about a story they read. Also, there is a program promoting reading where children get a certificate for every 10 books they read. For each additional 10 books read, they get a star on their certificates.

20 Preschoolers and kindergartners can hear exciting tales during "storytime" at Sayers Memorial Library on Tuesdays from 11:15 to noon. For more information, call the library at 545-7141.

21. Don't miss Fort Benning's Independence Day celebration on York Field July 3 from 2 p.m. until dark. Activities include airborne and ranger demonstrations, game booths, fireworks, food and drink.

22. Learn to perform. Libbie Kurinec offers classes through the Officers' Wives' Club. Call 322-6942 for more information.

23. Become computer literate by taking computer tutorial classes at the Army Learning Centers on post. Classes are available in MS-DOS, Lotus 1-2-3, dBase III Plus, typing, WordPerfect (5.1) and Multimate. Free self-paced courses are available at the Soldiers' Plaza and Kelley Hill Army Learning Centers, Buildings 2611 and 9005.

Active duty and retired military, civilians, Reservists, National Guard members and family members of these groups are authorized to use the learning centers.

The Soldiers' Plaza Army Learning Center is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The Kelley Hill Army Learning Center is open 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Call the Soldiers' Plaza learning center at 545-1436 or the Kelley Hill learning center at 544-2503 for more information.

24. Take cheerleading by registering at the Youth Activities Center July 26 through Aug. 6 from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Cheerleading is open to 6- to 15-year-olds.

25 Register for soccer or football. The soccer program will be open to children ages 4 to 15. Flag football is open to 6- to 8-year-olds, and tackle football is for 9- to 15-year-olds with a maximum weight of 160 pounds. Parents may register children at the Youth Activities Center, Building 1056, located on McIver Street. Tackle football players must be present at the time of registration.

26. Discover Uchee Creek Army Campground and Marina, located on the Chattahoochee River on the Alabama side of Fort Benning. Uchee Creek offers a full-service marina, a lodge to accommodate 150 people, 16 log cabins with shower facilities, stoves, refrigerators, air conditioning and heat, camping pads, a laundromat, basketball and volleyball courts, a softball field and playground equipment. For more information, call 545-7238 or 545-4053.

Area activities

For more information about most of the following activities, call or stop by the Information, Ticketing and Registration Office, Building 247, on Ingersoll Street, 545-4155 or 545-7535.

27. See nearly 300 wild animals at the Pine Mountain Wild Animal Park, Pine Mountain, Ga. Everything from giraffes to ostriches to rhinos roam the nearly 500-acre park.

28. Experience thrills and chills at Six Flags over Georgia, located on Interstate 20, west of Atlanta.

29. Visit one of several zoos within driving distance from Fort Benning: The Montgomery Zoo, the Birmingham Zoo and Zoo Atlanta.

30 Visit the "Little Grand Canyon" at Providence State Park, seven miles west of Lumpkin on Georgia Highway 39C. Picnic areas, hiking trails and spectacular views provide family fun. Call (800) 542-7275 for information.

Family member signs contract, becomes model

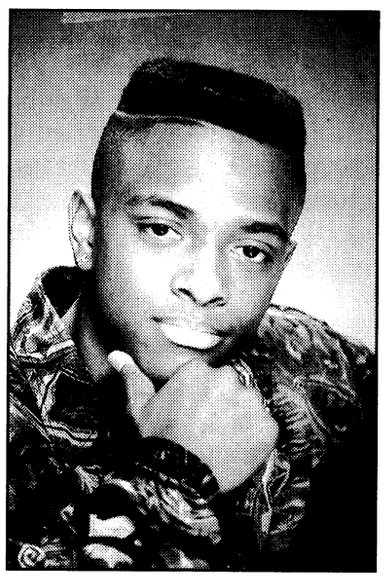
By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

A newcomer to the modeling field, Montrio DeBose, son of Sgt. lst Class Trollis E. of Company A, 317th Engineer Battalion, and Sandra DeBose, recently signed a contract with Studio Modeling Management Agency.

His entry into the modeling world was helped along by Capt. Lillian Common, who first met DeBose when he was at a rehearsal for a musical group called DE-VOTE. The members of the group include his younger sister, Evangaline, and his girlfriend, Nikitia Huff.

Common, a logistics officer for the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, is also an entertainment scout.

She talked to DeBose's parents about his modeling potential and looking for agencies in the area conducting talent searches.



After discovering Studio Modeling Management was making such a search, she, his mother and Montrio made the trip to Atlanta to drop off photographs. When there was no word, Common contacted the agency and arranged an interview.

DeBose, 18, signed his contract the same day as the interview, and has since had his first photography shoot.

At 5 feet, 11 inches and 155 pounds, he is working out and paying more attention to his diet these days.

He recently graduated from Spencer High School.

DeBose's previous modeling experience included the 1990-1991 Germany Model Extravaganza in Hanau, Germany, and in 1989 the Bible Way Church of God in Christ Model Search at Fort Hood, Texas.

In the acting area, he has played the roles of MacBeth and Romeo.

His sports accomplishments include: Bad Krueznach High School all-conference wide receiver and free safety in Hanau, Germany, Bad Krueznach High School Gold Medal in the regional 200-meter dash and Silver Medal in the regional 400-meter dash, Munich, Germany, and runner-up in the Germany High School's Football Conference 12W-1L offensive captain.

He was also a member of the gymnastics team.

Commissary sale shows appreciation

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

The Commissary will be celebrating its second annual customer appreciation sale in July.

Certain selected items will be on sale for the whole month to raise funds for the Fort Benning community, said Larry J. Bentley, Commissary officer.

Manufacturers and sales representatives give the Commissary the best price available on certain products and then agree to donate a certain amount of money for every case of the product that the Commissary receives, Bentley said.

All selected items will be displayed with special signs to clarify what items bought will contribute to the community.

On Thursday to July 3, July 14 to 17 and 28 to 31, the Commissary will feature sidewalk sales that will include additional savings to the customers with coupons. Also, a warehouse sale will be conducted for the month on the most popular sale items, said Bentley.

"The manufacturer is giving us the best possible price plus the donation to the community," said Bentley. "The reason they can do this is we only have this sale once a year, so they can really do some deep cutting in their pricing. It's our sale of the year."

Other activities for the month will include giveaways from companies and product demonstrations.

"What we are doing instead of just having a sale is trying to create a festive atmosphere," said Bentley.

Fort Benning's Commissary raised the most money last year in the Southern Region with a donation of more than $17,000, said Bentley. "We learned a lot of things last year that we could do better this year, so our goal is to raise over $25,000.

"Once we get the word out, and where the money is going to go, I think that we'll have a very good response," he said.

"This is the one time in the year we have a chance to say we really do appreciate the community and the patrons. It's a whole month of telling the customer thank you for shopping with us."

VA Q&A

Department of Veterans Affairs

Q: What is the current interest rate on VA-guaranteed home loans?

A: With the signing of new legislation Oct. 28, the Department of Veterans Affairs will not be setting the interest rate on VA loans.

The Veterans Home Loan Program Amendments of 1992 authorized VA to permit veterans to negotiate interest rates on VA-guaranteed home loans with lenders.

Veterans also can negotiate the number of points the lender charges for making the loan. The program will be in effect through Dec. 31, 1995.

This new law also authorized a three-year program for VA-guaranteed adjustable rate mortgages, which will be similar to Federal Housing Administration adjustable rate mortgages, with the interest rate index corresponding to the specified national interest rate index.

The rate may be adjusted annually (limited to 1 percent), with adjustments to the loan rate limited to a 5-percent increase for the life of the loan. Adjustable rate mortgages may be used to refinance existing loans.

Q: What is the funding fee for interest rate reduction refinancing loans?

A: Legislation signed into law Oct. 28 reduced the funding fee from 1.25 percent to .5 percent.

Q: I was in the Reserves for six years. I recently heard that Reservists are eligible for VA-guaranteed home loans. Is this true?

A: A new program for members of the Selected Reserve was signed into law Oct. 28. Individuals with six years of service in the Selected Reserve will now be eligible for the VA's loan guarantee benefit. Individuals no longer in the Selected Reserve must have served at least six years and have received an honorable discharge.

The program requires a 2 percent funding fee on a no-downpayment loan. Reservists will pay the same funding fee as other veterans for manufactured home loans (1 percent), and interest rate reduction refinancing loans and assumptions (.5 percent).

You may apply for a certificate of eligibility for this program using VA Form 26-1880, Request for Determination of Eligibility and Available Loan Guaranty Entitlement.

Contact your nearest VA regional office for information. You may call VA's new nationwide number (800) 827-1000, or, if you live in the local calling area, continue to use the local phone number.

Q: Is a general discharge a bar to receiving Chapter 30 (Montgomery GI Bill) education benefits?

A: Yes. The law requires that to be eligible for educational assistance under the Montgomery GI Bill (active duty), also known as Chapter 30, a veteran must have received an honorable discharge. No other type of discharge is acceptable.

Q: I have a private pilot's license. I am a veteran and desire to obtain flight training. What is the reimbursement for flight training?

A: The Department of Veterans Affairs reimburses 60 percent of the cost of the course.

Q: I am entitled to benefits under the Montgomery GI Bill. I want to take some courses at a community college to help me decide if I want to return to school full time. Will the GI Bill pay for those courses?

A: No. You must be pursuing an educational, professional or vocational objective.

Scholarships available

By Patricia Pfeiffer
Fort Benning Management Association

Several scholarships will be awarded for the 1993 to 1994 academic year in the following categories: graduate scholarship(s) to Troy State University (Fort Benning campus); undergraduate scholarship(s) to Troy State University (Fort Benning campus), and a scholarship to the awardee's school of choice.

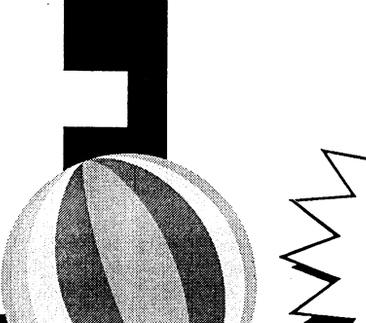
Additional scholarships may be awarded depending upon availability of funds.

All active duty or retired military and active or retired Department of Army civilians and their family members residing within a 50-mile radius of the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning area are eligible.

Scholarships are intended for applicants of the above group who are interested in studying in the field of management or business.

Interested individuals must complete an application form and provide three letters of recommendation, a copy of high school transcripts and transcripts from any college or university previously attended, and a copy of a completed application to Troy State or the college of choice.

Application forms may be picked up from Patty Pfeiffer in Meloy Hall, Building 6, Room 112, and submitted to any FBMA executive board member no later than Aug. 6.



For information, call 545-5580 or 545-5656.

COMMUNITY BRIEFS

Soldier Show — The 10th annual performance of the U.S. Army Soldier Show will take place at the Sand Hill Theater Saturday at 2 and 8 p.m.

The 90-minute show, a presentation of the Army's Community and Family Support center Entertainment Division, will feature a variety of acts including dancing, singing, skits and a laser light show.

Music selections will include country, rock 'n' roll, patriotic and rap. Entrance to the performances are free, but 800 seats are reserved for soldiers of the Infantry Training Brigade for the 2 p.m. show. Many open seats will be available at the 8 p.m. show. No tickets will be distributed, so all seats are available on a first-come, first-serve basis.

Movies — In an attempt to solve the long lines during some features at the Main Post Theater, a new opening policy has been put into effect.

The doors will be open for ticket and snack stand sales 30 minutes prior to the scheduled showings on Mondays through Thursdays.

On Fridays through Sundays, the doors will open one hour before the show after 1 p.m. Shows will start on the poster time. For additional information, contact Ellie Therrell at 687-6939.

Wanted: junk cars — Let the National Kidney Foundation of Georgia remove your junk car free of charge.

Owners may donate a vehicle in any condition to National Kidney Foundation of Georgia. In return, three things will happen. You'll get rid of an old car. You'll get a tax deduction. You'll keep patient and community service programs going.

Call Georgia's Kidney Foundation toll-free number: (800) 633-2339. Arrangements will then be made for the removal of the vehicle. Georgia has the highest rate of kidney disease of any other state in the nation.

Youth basketball — Youth Services Main Gym, Building 1055, will be conducting basketball tournaments during the summer months. Registration will be at 12:30 p.m. and games will start at 1 p.m.

July 3 — Preteen (9 to 12 years old) 2-on-2 basketball tournament

July 10 — Teen 3-on-3 basketball tournament

July 17 — Teen 4-on-4 basketball tournament

July 24 — Preteen (9 to 12 years old) free-throw contest

Aug. 7 — 5-on-5 basketball tournament

Aug. 12 — Preteen (9 to 12 years old) 21-point contest

Participants must have valid military identification or Youth Services card to enter the tournament. For more information, call 545-3070 or 545-3540.

Asthma Day Camp — Registration is now being accepted for the American Lung Association's Asthma Day Camp, which is open to any child between 6 and 12 with asthma.

The camp will be at Columbus College July 12 to 16. Children will have the opportunity to do regular day camp activities and will learn about asthma.

For more information, call 569-1098.

School examinations — It is mandatory that any child entering Georgia schools for the first time be given a dental, eye and hearing examination.

The results of the exam will be entered on a Georgia Department of Human Resources Certification of Ear, Eye and Dental Examination, which must be presented to the school upon enrollment.

For a screening appointment, call 544-3350 at Martin Army Community Hospital or your county health department. Also, the child's immunization record must be up to date.

Parents should take the immunization record to the hospital or health department at the time of the screening exam.

For more information, call Cathy Hatfield at 544-1503.

Child care referrals — Need information about child care? The Columbus Child Care Resource and Referral Center is a nonprofit, free service provided to Muscogee County residents and employees and Fort Benning personnel.

Referrals made are to child-care facilities and care givers in Muscogee County, officials said.

For parents, referrals are made to licensed and registered child-care facilities depending upon stated needs and preferences; also information is provided on quality child care.

For child-care facilities, free training for care givers is provided, along with the most current information and resources on many aspects of child care.

For more information, call 569-3109. Hours of operation are Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Citizenship classes — Fort Benning's International Wives' Club is offering free citizenship classes. For more information, call Olga Kelly at 568-3374 or 687-6471.

La Leche meeting — The La Leche League meets the second Tuesday of each month from 10 a.m. to noon and 7 to 8:30 p.m. at St. John United Methodist Church, 6507 Moon Road, Columbus. The next meeting is July 13. For information, call 563-0684 or 568-7315.

Cardiopulmonary resuscitation: July 28, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., $25.

Water safety instructor class: July 15, 16, 22 and 23 from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., $83. (Must possess current lifeguard, cardiopulmonary resuscitation for the professional rescuer certification and first aid certification.)

Introduction to disaster services: July 13, 9 a.m. to noon, no fee.

Damage assessment: July 13, 1 to 5 p.m. (Prerequisite: Introduction to Disaster course), no fee.

Emergency Assistance to families: July 14, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. (Prerequisite: Introduction to Disaster course), no fee.

Standard first aid progressive: July 29, 9 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

Baby-sitting for youth: July 31, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., $15.

For registration information, call 545-5194 or 545-5117.

Summer tutorial program — Eastway Elementary School on Buena Vista Road is offering free classes emphasizing reading and math in grades two through eight, at 8 to 10 a.m. through July 16.

For more information, call Lonnie Jackson at 687-5357 or Daisy Honor at 687-8808.

Youth registrations — Youth Services soccer, football and cheerleader registration will take place from July 26 through Aug. 6, Monday to Friday, from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

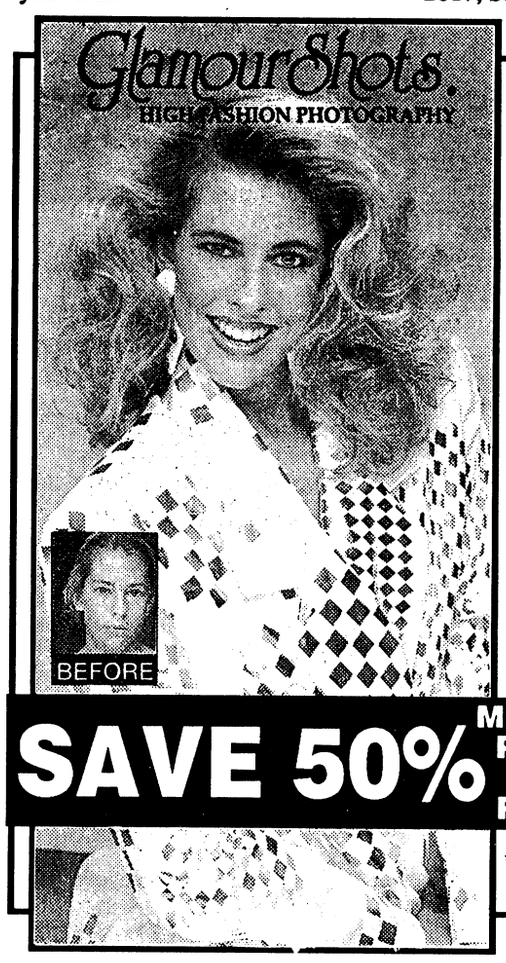
The soccer program will be open to children ages 4 to 15. Flag football is open to 6- to 8-year-olds, and tackle football is for 9- to 15-year-olds with a maximum weight of 160 pounds. Cheerleading is open to 6- to 15-year-olds.

Parents may register children at the Youth Activities Center, Building 1056, located on McIver Street. Tackle football players must be present at the time of registration.

Practices will begin Aug. 16 and the first games will be Sept. 11. The season will run from Sept. 11 through Oct. 30.

Also, coaches for the upcoming season are needed. Anyone interested may call 545-3070 or 545-3913.

Summer camp — Youth Services is offering camp throughout the summer from 8 a.m. to noon each day. Each week a new camp will start. Children 6 to 12 can attend for $25 per week. Activities include field trips, sports and fitness, creative activities, social interaction and snacks.



The schedule is as follows:

- Week two - Monday to July 2.
- Week three - July 6 to 9.
- Week four - July 12 to 16.
- Week five - July 19 to 23.
- Week six - July 26 to 30.
- Week seven - Aug. 2 to 6.
- Week eight - Aug. 9 to 13.

Operation transition — Operation transition is a Department of Defense outplacement system available to separating service members and their spouses to assist them in the civilian job search process.

The Defense Outplacement Referral System and the Transition Bulletin Board are two automated programs that link defense job seekers with potential employers nationwide.

For more information, call the Transition Assistance Office at 545-4892, or come by Building 2617, Soldiers' Plaza.

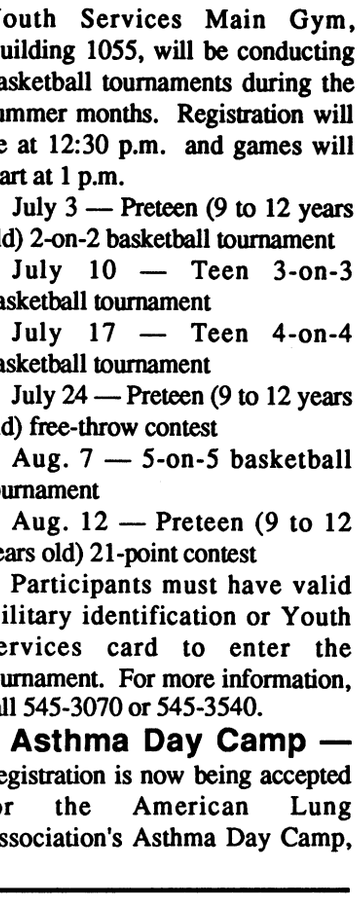
Cycle safely this summer

American Forces Information Service

With warm, sunny weather beckoning people outdoors, more and more bicycles appear on streets and paths.



Just a few street-wise and common sense habits by cyclists and motorists alike can make the road a safer place, said safety experts.

In many states and other countries, a bicycle is considered a vehicle, and cyclists must follow the same laws as motor vehicles. Among other things, said safety experts, this means travel with traffic and obey all traffic signs.

Wear a helmet in case of spills, and make sure the bicycle is visible during dusk and dark by using front and rear lights or reflectors.

Cyclists should always watch for vehicles making right turns. Cyclists should carry briefcases and other packages in a backpack or in a basket. To increase visibility, cyclists should wear light-colored clothes. Pedestrians always have the right of way.

PET OF THE WEEK

This playful mixed breed puppy is looking for a home. He is approximately 12 weeks old and is just one of many dogs and cats of all types and ages waiting to be adopted.

For more information, contact the Veterinary Services Office in Building 265 at 545-1127. Hours of operation are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:30 am. and 12:45 to 3 p.m. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

If you have lost a pet, check the stray impoundment facility in Building 283. Animal control on post is a function of the Military Police Activity. Animal control personnel will pick up stray pets and take them to the impoundment facility.

Stray pets are given three working days to be claimed from the time they are picked up by animal control personnel.

If the pets are not claimed, they become government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies tags are the only way Veterinary Services can contact the owner of a lost pet. Pet owners are required to register their pets and update their records when changes occur.

Teach your child to be safe

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Summer for many means family vacations. Whether you're driving to the beach, flying to Grandma's house or camping in the mountains, it is important to be prepared and make arrangements for your child to stay safe. Follow these guidelines to help plan a safe and fun family vacation.

Water

• Keep an eye on your children at all times when they are in or near the water. It only takes a second for a child to drown, even in as little as two inches of water.

Require your child to wear a personal flotation device, which is approved by the U.S. Coast Guard, at all times while boating.

Nonswimmers should be required to wear PFDs at all times while in the vicinity of a pool, lake or other body of water. Remember to enroll your child in swimming lessons as soon as you and your child feel comfortable doing so. Classes are available from infancy up.

• For a nonswimming child, use a noninflatable type of PFD, to avoid the risk of deflation, which can be fastened securely to the child. Even when a non-swimmer is wearing a PFD, a responsible adult should be in the water with the child, keeping the child in sight at all times.

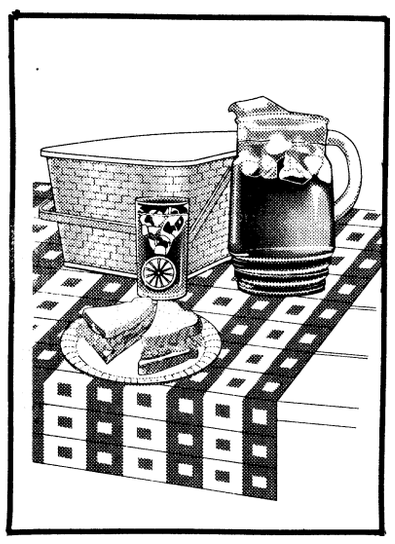
• When vacationing around saltwater, be aware of jellyfish. The tentacles of a jellyfish have many stinging cells that can cause severe pain to a human being. If stung, the tentacles can be removed with moist sand and meat tenderizer will relieve the pain.

Sunburn

• Limit your child's direct exposure to the summer sun. The safest time to be out in the sun is before 10 a.m. and after 3 p.m. However, if your children are in the sun during the hottest hours, make sure they wear a sunscreen with a sun protection factor appropriate for their skin type, at least SPF 15. T-shirts, hats and sunglasses can also protect your child's skin from the sun. Consult your physician before using sunscreen on a baby younger than 6 months.

If you're in the water, reflected sunlight from the surface can increase the skin's exposure by as much as 50 percent. Water washes off sun screening agents so reapply them every 90 minutes when playing in the water.

Insect bites



• Insect repellents can help, but use sparingly on infants and young children. The repellent should contain a very low DEET concentration. Stay inside after dark to avoid insects.

Travel

• No matter how you're traveling or what your destination, secure your child correctly in a child safety seat or safety belt every time he or she rides in a vehicle. It's the law!

• If renting a car, either bring your child safety seat, or arrange with the car agency to provide one for you.

• Check with the airline to determine its policies on the use of child safety seats. If your child is under age 2, some airlines will let you use a safety seat in an adjacent vacant seat without purchasing a ticket.

Follow safety outdoors

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Warm weather, sunshine and the long hours of daylight increase our urge for outdoor recreational activities. A day off or weekend can bring recreation adventure and excitement. They can also bring fatigue, sickness, sunburn and injury if we are not careful.

Many of these activities are hazardous. To think that all the hazards can be eliminated is unrealistic. However, there is much a person can do to recognize the dangers involved.

Safe activity is far more enjoyable for all concerned.

Here are some of the more hazardous activities and safety tips necessary for full enjoyment of picnicking and camping:

• Prepare food requiring little refrigeration. Avoid foods that spoil easily.

• In selecting the picnic or camping site, look for the obvious hazards. If there are any, inform the rest of your party. This is especially important for the children.

• Take a supply of drinking water so it won't be necessary to drink water that might be contaminated.

• Take a first aid kit along. Include necessary items for treating cuts, burns and snake bites. Insect repellent should also be included.

• If planning a cookout, take along a pair of heavy gloves or hot pads for handling hot cooking implements.

• The place to build a camp fire should be free of branches, sticks or other material that can easily catch fire.

• Use paper, small kindling or approved igniter fluid to start fires. Never use gasoline or other highly flammable material.

• Knives, hatchets and other sharp instruments should be kept off the ground and stored in a safe place — out of children's reach.

• Don't leave fires unattended. Completely extinguish fire when leaving so there will be no danger of it being fanned to life again.

50 YEARS OLD

YET NEW EVERY WEEK!

The Bayonet has been serving the Fort Benning community for over 50 years. Published every Friday by the Public Affairs Office, it contains news and information that directly affects Fort Benning's military and civilian population, as well as the vast number of retired military personnel here in the Columbus area.

83% READ THE BAYONET

A recent survey implemented by the PAO shows that of the 55,000 post personnel, 83% are regular weekly readers of The Bayonet, and 85% think The Bayonet is a good/excellent source of their post information.

Ron Silver boards Fox's 'Lifepod'

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

Appearing in a science-fiction movie isn't the norm for Ron Silver, and directing one is a new experience for him, too.

SPOTLIGHT

What: "Lifepod"
When: Monday, 8 p.m. on Fox

An Oscar nominee for his performance as lawyer Alan Dershowitz in "Reversal of Fortune," and a Tony winner for his Broadway stage work in "Speed-the-Plow," the actor has pivotal roles both behind and in front of the camera with Monday's new Fox offering "Lifepod."

Marking Silver's directorial debut, it's an update of Alfred Hitchcock's 1944 classic "Lifeboat" ... but this time, instead of the passengers fleeing from a sinking ship in a sea vessel, they escape from an exploding intergalactic cruiser in a relatively small space vehicle. With a female pilot (CCH Pounder) at the helm, the ship also is occupied by a blind investigator (Silver), a politician (Robert Loggia, seen recently in "Wild Palms") and a journalist (Jessica Tuck, formerly of daytime's "One Life to Live"), among others.

However, the people on board soon find their problems mounting. Not only are their food and oxygen supplies diminishing quickly, with no sign of rescue in sight, but it seems that an unidentified saboteur is among them. With Stan Shaw ("Fried Green Tomatoes") and Adam Storke ("Mystic Pizza") also in the cast, the saga 's executive producer is Trilogy Entertainment, the firm also involved in last winter's short-lived CBS series "Space Rangers" and the feature films "Robin Hood: Prince of Thieves" and "Backdraft."

"It was probably the most noble, courageous and stupid moment of my life," the sincere, analytical Silver muses of tackling a fantasy-oriented project like "Lifepod" — which is replete with special-effects sequences — for his start as a director, after having performed in such other movies as "Enemies: A Love Story," "Blue Steel" and the recent "Married to It."

Still, Silver admits to "a bit of a confusion" in playing actor and director simultaneously for the first time. "I think I know how to do it better now," he said. "Strangely enough, the conventional wisdom might say, 'You have the opportunity to direct yourself. What a tremendous amount of power over your performance. You can give yourself as many takes as you want.'

"Paradoxically, I found just the opposite to be the case," he said. "Because I was given the responsibility of making a film for a certain amount of dollars — and I took that very seriously — I would say, 'Let's get the scene with the other actors first, and leave me for the end. I'll do it quickly.' In a strange way, then, I gave myself short shifts as an actor. In other circumstances, I would normally say to the director something like, 'Please, let me do it again.' In this case, I'd come in a half-hour early and do my scenes just for the cameraman."

DoD executives tackle Leader Reaction Course

By Lawrence K. Hughes
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Leader Reaction Course was host to two teams from the Department of Defense May 21. A group from the Executive Leadership Development Program took on the course along with the Army Materiel Command Field Assistance in Science and Technology junior team. Next week, "Fort Benning Today" will air highlights of the students as they trained.

June is Rape Awareness Month, and the U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel will air special presentations next week at 2 p.m. Monday through Friday, including lectures on "Self Defense and Protection" and "Asking Open Questions."

USAIC TV Schedule

Fort Benning Today: 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 1:30 to 2 p.m.
Specials: 2 to 4:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 4:30 to 8:30 a.m.

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel highlights post events and lists classified advertisements on the Fort Benning Community Bulletin Board featuring news and music from Soldiers Radio Satellite Network.

If you are a subscriber to Fort Benning Cable, you can watch USAIC TV on Channel 3, 24 hours a day. Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:26, 7:56, 8:26 and 8:56 on WLTZ TV-38.

For more information or to make suggestions, write or call the Broadcast Section of the Public Affairs Office, Infantry Hall, Room 602, 545-2201.

Columbus Museum plans July programs

The Columbus Museum

Storytelling, singing, drumming, dancing and games will all be a part of the Much Ado About Wednesdays programs in July.

Children and their parents can attend a different event each Wednesday in the Museum's Patrick Theatre July 7 through 28.

Recommended for children ages 4 and older, the programs will start at 11 a.m. and last one hour.

There will be a time of interactive storytelling and special entertainment to delight children of all ages. Admission is free. Seating is limited and available on a first-come, first-served basis.

For more information, contact Pam Pruett in the education department at 649-0713.

The program schedule:

July 7: Create — Atlanta actor and artist Randy Taylor will present a program of interactive storytelling to entertain an audience of all ages.

July 14: Sing — Join singer and actor Wendy Bennett from Young Audiences of Atlanta in an exploration of the singing voice. From opera to folk and jazz, Wendy will take the audience on a whirlwind tour of different forms of vocal expression.

July 21: The Living Record— Drumming, dancing, singing, stories, quizzes and games are all part of this Wednesday program. Join Baba Raa and Aima Bey of Atlanta as they link the past with the present through their telling of African folktales.

July 28: Animal Talk — Join Meridian, a group of versatile instrumentalists and singers, as they introduce children to folk music through songs about animals.

Admission is free to the Columbus Museum, which is located at 1251 Wynnton Road.

Family Fun Day in Harris County

Harris County Chamber of Commerce

The Agriculture Committee of the Harris County Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring the first Harris County Family Fun Day July 3 at the Agri-Center on Georgia Highway 116 in Hamilton, Ga. Proceeds will benefit various Harris County organizations.

Family events include horseshoe pitching, a sky walk, a greased pig contest, a three-legged race and a ball throw. Some events will be free, others will have a charge.

Craftmakers will exhibit their wares including basket weaving, quilting, spinning, leather and a metalsmith.

The Columbus Guards, a Civil War Re-enactment group, will hold demonstrations and have a display.

The DARE vehicle from the Harris County Sheriff's Department will be present as well as the volunteer Fire Department firetruck.

The Harris County Emergency Medical Service will give away "life kits" and smoke alarms, and various entertainment will be offered including the Dancing Dolls.

For further information, contact the Harris County Chamber of Commerce at 628-4381 or write to P.O. Box 426, Hamilton, Ga. 31811.

Biltmore Estate shares recipe for style

Biltmore Estate

ASHEVILLE, N.C. — When George and Edith Vanderbilt entertained summertime guests at their North Carolina retreat, Biltmore House, they probably took advantage of the cool mountain breezes that seem to make their way up the valley to the loggia all summer long.

While today's host and hostess might not be able to offer their guests a choice of one of Biltmore House's 250 rooms (or the view of the Blue Ridge from a loggia, for that matter), it is possible to entertain at dinner with style and panache, almost as easily as if you had the Vanderbilts' kitchen staff doing the work for you.

Combined with colorfully flavored vegetables and savory chicken breasts, and complemented by America's favorite summer wine — Chardonnay - the following recipe from Biltmore Estate is an elegant and easy entree.

It's so easy, in fact, you can chop all the ingredients ahead of time and assemble the dish when your guests arrive.

Then all you really need to round out the evening is an open door to the porch swing, the flash of lightning bugs and the summer serenade of crickets to live (or feel as though you live) just like a Vanderbilt.

Biltmore Estate's garden-style fettucine with chicken

• Serve with bread, salad and chilled Chardonnay

1/2 pound fresh asparagus spears, cut into two-inch pieces

2 tablespoons butter or margarine

1 pound boneless, skinless chicken, cut into one-inch pieces

4 ounces fresh mushrooms, sliced

1 small red bell pepper, cut into julienne strips

6 green onions, cut into one-inch pieces

2 cloves fresh garlic, minced

1 cup whipping cream

1/2 cup frozen green peas, thawed

1/2 teaspoon salt

1/3 teaspoon pepper

8 ounces uncooked fettucine

Freshly grated Parmesan cheese

Arrange asparagus spears in a small steaming basket; place over steaming water and cover.

Steam eight minutes or just until barely tender.

Rinse immediately under cold running water; drain and set aside.

Melt butter in a large skillet over low heat; add chicken, and cook over medium heat until browned, stirring occasionally. Remove chicken from skillet using a slotted spoon; set aside.

Add mushrooms, red bell pepper, green onions, and garlic to pan drippings in skillet; saute until tender.

Stir in steamed asparagus, browned chicken, whipping cream, peas, salt and pepper; bring to a boil.

Cover, reduce heat, and simmer five minutes .

Cook fettucine according to package directions; drain well, and transfer to a large bowl.

Add chicken mixture to fettucine, and toss gently to combine.

Serve immediately on individual plates, and sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. Serves four to six.

The Yankees are coming; Confederates too!

Atlanta History Center to present 1993 Civil War Encampment

Atlanta History Center

The Yankees are coming — the Confederates too.

During the weekend of July 17 and 18, the Atlanta History Center will become headquarters for both Confederate and Federal troops during Civil War Encampment 1993, when more than 100 interpreters with authentic clothing and equipment stage a living history of Civil War camp life.

Thousands of visitors each year visit this annual event, which is not a battle re-enactment but an encampment, allowing visitors to ask questions, touch objects, talk one on one with soldiers, wives, children and camp followers, and be a part of the action.

Civil War Encampment 1993 will run from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. July 17 and 18 (grounds are open from 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. both days), at the Center, 3101 Andrews Drive N.W. at West Paces Ferry Road in Buckhead. Ample free parking will be available at nearby Buckhead Plaza in the open lot behind Road Show International on West Paces Ferry Road, one block from the intersection of Peachtree Road and just across Slaton Drive from the center.

The encampment will go on rain or shine. For more information, call (404) 814-4000.

Two military bands, the 8th Regiment Band, Georgia Volunteer Infantry, from Rome, Ga. (with period instruments), and the 26th North Carolina Field Music, a fife and drum corps from Asheville, N.C., will play music of the period. The 26th will play outside throughout both days, and the 8th will play at special indoor concerts Saturday at 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. and Sunday at 11 a.m. and 2 and 4 p.m. Atlantan Betty Fowler will sing and play Civil War music on the Celtic harp and the dulcimer.

McElreath Hall will be the setting for a hands-on display of original and reproduction Civil War objects including equipment, uniforms, items carried by the common soldier, muskets and rifles.

Self-guided tours of the Civil War exhibition "Atlanta and the War, 1861-1865" will be offered both days.

• New this year: Saturday at 11 a.m., Sue Vrooman of Doraville, Ga., assistant horticulturalist at the center, will present "Plants That Went to War," a program highlighting the uses of plants for food, medicine, clothing and tobacco during the Civil War and better acquainting visitors with the center's 32 acres of gardens.

• New this year: Sunday at noon, storyteller Kathy Dixon of Marietta will tell a variety of first-person historical tales of the Civil War while accompanying herself on the dulcimer. Her one-woman program depicting the female side of the Civil War was first performed at the 1992 Atlanta Storytelling Festival at the Center. Her characters relate many facets of a Civil War-era woman's experience: love, humor, adventure and tragedy.

• Saturday at 3 p.m., Martha Wilson of Forest Park, Ga., will present a Civil War fashion show featuring men's uniforms and civilian clothing and women's and children's clothing.

• Sunday at 3 p.m., Atlanta's official historian, Franklin Garrett, will speak on "The Destruction of Atlanta" that resulted from the Civil War and the Atlanta campaign, with a focus on how individual neighborhoods were affected.

• Saturday at noon, Myers Brown of Nashville, Tenn., will present "Equipping the Common Soldier: A Survival Guide," a demonstration that, using reproduction clothing and equipment, examines how both Federal and Confederate soldiers adjusted to the rigors of campaigning during the Civil War.

William F. Hull

Living history interpreters outfitted with authentic confederate uniforms display Civil War equipment.

• In the "Most Authentic Soldier Competition," participating interpreters will be inspected for anachronisms in their uniforms and equipment and asked questions designed to "trip up" their 1864 impressions (Federal on Saturday at 1 p.m. and Confederate on ' Sunday at 1 p.m.).

• Civil War-related films and documentaries will be shown continuously.

Civil War Encampment 1993 commemorates the 129th anniversary of the Battle of Peachtree Creek (July 20, 1864) and the Battle of Atlanta (July 22, 1864), both part of the Atlanta campaign (May through September, 1864).

Daily admission prices are $7 for adults, $5.50 for students 18 and older with identification and seniors 65 and older, $4 for youths 6 to 17 and free for children under 6. Atlanta Historical Society members receive $2 off each ticket. Group rates are available with advance reservations; call (404) 814-4089. The entire center, including the 1928 classically styled Swan House mansion and museum exhibitions on "Gone With the Wind" and the history of Atlanta, will be open for tours all day.

Embassy Suites, official host hotel, is offering a special rate for the encampment weekend of $89 per suite, per night (limit four per suite), including breakfast and cocktails. Call (404) 261-7733 and ask for the Atlanta History Center rate.

'Brady Bunch' alive and well in stage re-enactment

Theatre League of Atlanta

"The Real Live Brady Bunch," a staged re-enactment of the '70s sitcom "The Brady Bunch," which has drawn wildly enthusiastic, sold-out crowds in Chicago, New York and Los Angeles, now comes to Atlanta for a limited one-week engagement at Center Stage Theatre July 20 through 25.

With scripts taken directly from the most memorable episodes of one of the most popular television shows of all time, "The Real Live Brady Bunch" is part theatre, part comedy night, part nostalgia and all party

The success of "The Real Live Brady Bunch" has captured national media attention and has been the subject of magazine essays in Time, Newsweek, and New Yorker. People magazine called it "an hilarious expedition," with USA Today touting the show as "hot n' hilarious ... complete with laugh tracks, corny scripts, blue eyeshadow, and '70s kitsch." The Village Voice noted "the great wit of 'The Real Live Brady Bunch' is that they play it straight. Hearing those starchy lines delivered with sincerity by grown-ups is far funnier than any parody."

Created by Chicago sisters Faith and Jill Soloway, "The Real Live Brady Bunch" has become an "event" fueled by audience participation. Spectators sing the title song along with the actors, applaud entrances, howl at the vintage '70s bell bottoms and shout out favorite lines.

"The Real Live Brady Bunch" runs with a comic curtain raiser, "The Real Live Game Show," created and hosted by Eric Waddel, who in the guise of a game show host, Wayne Waddell, invites audience members to compete for fabulous prizes.

Television's "The Brady Bunch" aired 117 episodes on ABC-TV from 1969-1974 (the Nixon administration years) and can be seen in daily reruns on more than 100 stations."The Real Live Game Show" and "The Real Live Brady Bunch," presented by Entertainment Events Inc. and TBOHO, runs Tuesday, July 20 through Sunday, July 25. Show times are: Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings at 8 p.m.; Saturday at 2, 7 and 10 p.m.; and Sunday at 3 p.m. Ticket prices range between $15 and $24.50.

Tickets are on sale at all Ticketmaster outlets including Turtles, Coconuts, Tower Records and Sound Warehouse. To charge, call (404) 817-8700 or 249-6400. Discounts for groups of 20 are available by calling (404) 873-4300.

Baggers stay busy

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

At the height of the rush, the place is close to chaos. Uniformed people handle their work at a dead run, their hands and arms constantly in motion, the pace never slackening.

This scene can be witnessed daily at the Fort Benning Commissary, as baggers move steadily among the 22 cash registers and the parking lot, packing, transporting and stowing customers' purchases.

Coy Fulton, head bagger at the Commissary, said the baggers are self-help workers, and not directly employed by the Commissary.

"We schedule them and supervise their work, but they aren't paid by the Commissary. They work strictly for tips," said Fulton.

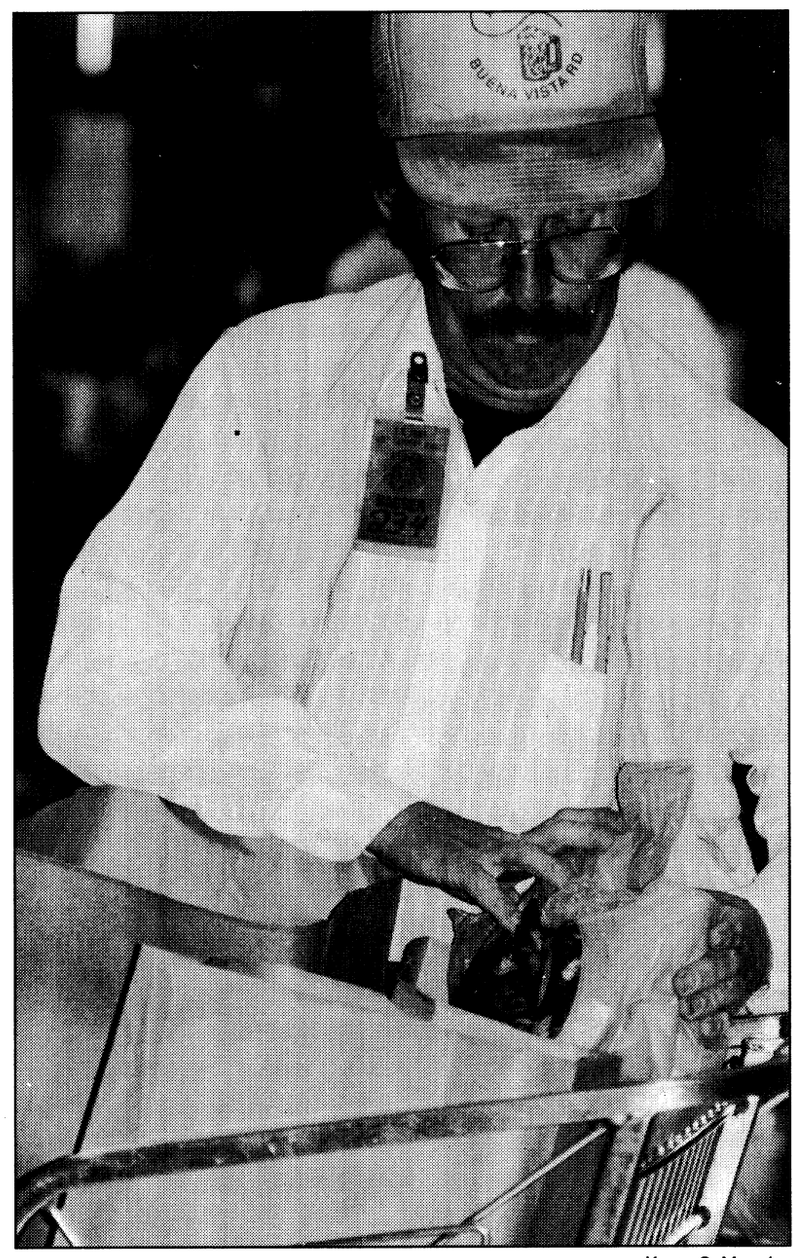
"I tell them they need to work at least an eight-hour shift," he said, "because when you're self-employed, you have to work the hours to make the money."

"We have 62 part-time baggers," Fulton said, "and they're all family members, most of them are soldiers' and officers' children who work after school and on weekends."

Fulton said of the 85 full-time baggers, about a third are military family members who work five days a week. Interested applicants can sign a waiting list during the hours of 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Tuesday through Friday at the Commissary.

He said tips for the baggers normally range from $1 to $2, though extra service or an especially large purchase can mean a larger tip.

The baggers are expected to adhere to a dress code of black pants and white shirt, said Fulton, and are expected to appear and act in a professional manner.



"We stress courtesy to the customer," Fulton said, "but we think customers should return the courtesy, as well."

He added that a customer having a complaint with one of the baggers should, if possible, speak with the manger on duty or a front-end supervisor before leaving the store. "It's easier to pinpoint the problem if they bring it to our attention right away," he said.

The Commissary can revoke a bagger's licensing agreement if his or her work is unsatisfactory, Fulton said.

Audrey Hill, who has been a bagger at the Commissary for more than two years, seems no-nonsense as she quickly handles a customer's purchases.

"I enjoy my job," said Hill. "The customers are very nice, and I meet a lot of people."

ACAP is for family too

Army Career and Alumni Program

All family members of transitioning personnel — military or civilian (including retirees) — are eligible for more than $1,000 of transition counseling and training to improve their personal image and job search skills for free.

The Army Career and Alumni Program is a program to help make the transition from the daily military lifestyle to the civilian alumni life.

Military spouses need to be within six months of leaving to begin that new career or, maybe just to relax for some time. If your spouse has already transitioned, ACAP still offers the service 60 days after separation.

ACAP provides a personal transition services specialist at the Transition Assistance Office to answer questions including transportation home, how finances are handled, VA benefits, when spouses start receiving retirement pay, and when must families clear post and how.

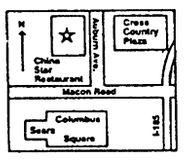
ACAP customers get written information and referrals, so they do not even have to take notes.

The TSS will also provide customers with a referral to obtain training to improve or polish their job search skills.

The Georgia Department of Labor provides a training course every Tuesday and Wednesday — "The Basic Job Search Skills Training Course" — that provides the foundation for all other training to follow. The next step is the "advanced" course taught at the Job Assistance Center as a one-day workshop every Thursday.

The TSS will make all arrangements to reserve a space for customers at both of these courses.

The JAC also assists customers to prepare professional resumes.



All of these services are available to soldiers, their spouses and children if they are of working age.

For more information or to make an appointment, visit ACAP in Soldiers' Plaza, Building 2617, or call 545-4892 or 545-4902.

COMMUNITY BRIEFS

Wanted: Awesome NCOs — The U.S. Army Physical Fitness School, located in Building 468, is looking for replacements for the four noncommissioned officers it will lose this summer.

Instructors will spend much of their time on the road promoting fitness worldwide. If you are interested in earning the right to wear the black and gold, see your chain of command for your eligibility. Qualified soldiers can call Sgt. Maj. Phil Caterina for an interview at 545-6383.

Families needed — Families are needed to welcome teen-agers from Paris, France, in July or August. English-speaking French students from ages 13 to 20 will stay for one month in the host families house. Hosts need to provide room and board for the students.

The program is sponsored by Loisirs Culturels a l'Etranger, a French nonprofit organization. American hosts are often welcomed as guests in France in the home of their French guests, but it is not a part of the official program.

For more information, call Brigette Toon at 685-9605.

Engineers meeting — The Society of American Military Engineers will meet at the Officers' Club, Thursday, beginning at 11:30 for lunch. Allen Bell, senior power marketing engineer for the Georgia Power Company, will speak on energy efficiency programs.

Medal of Honor — March 25 was dedicated by Congress as National Medal of Honor Day. Retired Col. Robert B. Nett, a local resident, will be one of the medal recipients to be honored at a ceremony to be Thursday at 11 a.m. at Mt. Pleasant Memorial Garden Center, Mt. Pleasant, S.C.

Town meeting — The Custer Terrace town meeting will be March 29 at 7 p.m. at the Custer Terrace Community Chapel.

Customer appreciation — The Fort Benning branch of First Union Bank will host its customer appreciation week, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday at 12:30 p.m. There will be a drawing for a free trip.

The winning individuals have a choice out of 10 locations such as Panama City, Fla.; Atlantic City, N.J.; Biltmore, N.C. and Myrtle Beach, S.C.

College office to close for week — The Chattahoochee Valley State Community College office, located in Building 2612 at Soldiers' Plaza, will be closed through Tuesday.

The office will reopen Wednesday, and hours will be 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. during the registration period. Classes begin March 30 and end June 7.

Spring carnival — The Dexter School Parent Teacher Organization is sponsoring a spring carnival from 3 to 5 p.m. March 27 on the school grounds.

Tickets can be purchased in advance at the school's front lobby from 2:10 to 3:30 p.m. today, Monday, Wednesday and March 26. Tickets can also be purchased on the afternoon of the carnival.

Nutrition fair — Martin Army Community Hospital will host a nutrition fair Thursday to celebrate "Eat Right America" Day for National Nutrition Month.

The fair will be from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the hospital by the pharmacy. Dietitians and volunteers will provide nutrition information.

Commissary tours — Martin Army Community Hospital's Nutrition Care Division is offering Commissary tours for National Nutrition Month to promote low-fat, heart-healthy shopping guidelines. Tours will be Wednesday at 8:30 a.m.

For more information or to sign up, call the Nutrition Clinic at 544-1542 or 544-1674.

The Follow Me Chapter of the 1st Cavalry Division is seeking survivors or family members of deceased members of the 1st Cavalry Division in the area.

For more information, call Frank Plass at 561-0774 or Alfred Roberts at 561-6801.

Women's History Month trivia game — The Equal Opportunity Office is sponsoring a Women's History Month trivia game Wednesday from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. in Building 2515. Anyone wishing to appear as a contestant may call 545-3196. Study information will be available prior to the game and prizes will be awarded.

Classes available— The Officers' Wives' Club offers the following classes:

Baton and flag twirling - Linda Miller, 687-5582

Christian aerobics - Rhonda Eggleston, 687-8693 (Monday, Wednesday, Friday, 9:30 to 10:30 a.m.)

Gymnastics - Kelly Cargill, 563-8176

Piano - Diane Swiecicki, 297-6524

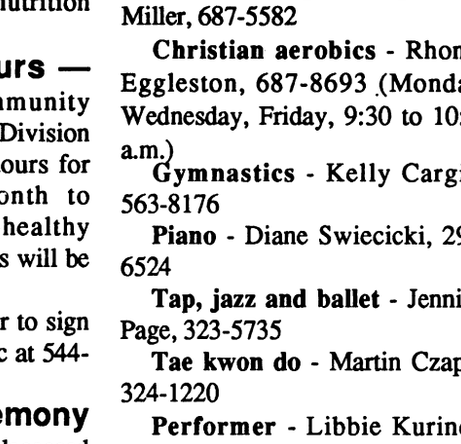
Tae kwon do - Martin Czapla, 324-1220

Performer - Libbie Kurinec, 322-6942

For more information, contact each instructor or call 687-3537.



Talent show — The 690th Medical Company is having a talent and gong show fund-raiser April 17 at 6 p.m. at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center to sponsor Pvt. 2 Lasandra Smith in the 1993 Miss AUSA competition.

Registration fee is $10. Admission is free, but donations are accepted. Refreshments will be served.

Prizes include an all-expense paid trip to Panama City, Fla., for two for first place; $50 and lunch for two for second place; and a $25 gift certificate for third place.

For information, call 545-7147 or 545-4518.

PET OF THE WEEK

This affectionate mixed-breed dog is looking for a home. He is a male and is approximately 6-months old.

For more information, contact the Veterinary Services Office in Building 265 at 545-1127. Hours are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:30 a.m. and 12:45 to 3 p.m. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

If you have lost a pet, check the stray impoundment facility in Building 263.

Animal Control on post is a division of the Military Police Activity. An officer will pick up strays and take them to the impoundment facility.

Stray pets are given three working days to be claimed from the the time they are picked up by animal control personnel. If the pets are not claimed, they become government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies tags are important, too, because it is the only way that Veterinary Services can contact the owner.

Pet owners should register their pets and update their records when changes occur.

Group studies ending gay ban

President calls for executive order

American Forces Information Service

The Department of Defense has established a working group to determine how best to end the military's ban on homosexuals.

President Bill Clinton directed Defense Secretary Les Aspin to draft an executive order ending the current military policy prohibiting individuals from joining or remaining on active duty solely because of their sexual orientation.

Deadline for the executive order is July 16.

The president asked Aspin to include the committee's study results with the draft executive order when he forwards it to him.

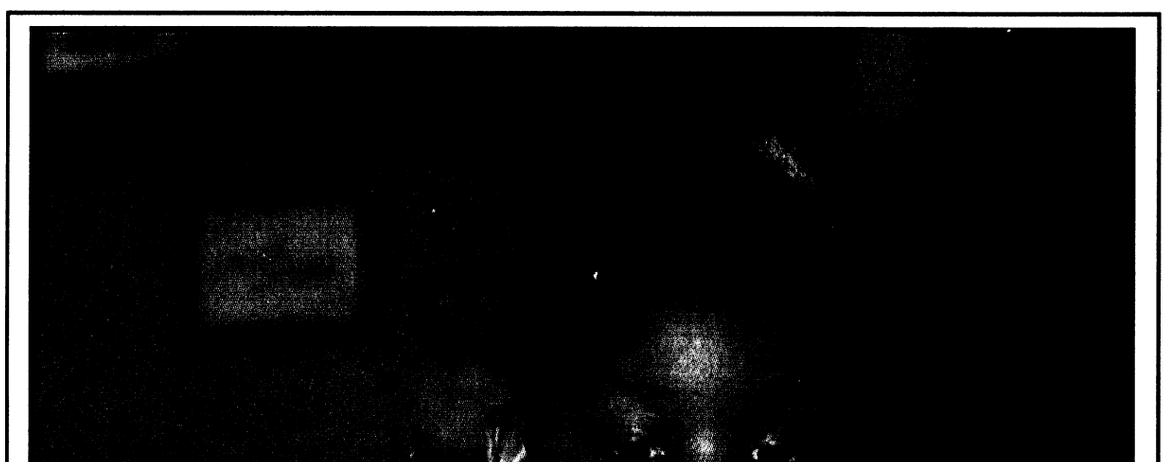
In the memorandum establishing the committee, Aspin said the working group is to provide him with a list of options in order of preference with the working group's assessment of the feasibility of each.

"These policy options must meet the president's requirements to end discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation in determining who may serve in the armed forces and to be practical, realistic and consistent with the high standards of combat effectiveness and unit cohesion our armed forces must maintain," Aspin said.

Overseeing the committee's actions is Air Force Lt. Gen. Robert M. Alexander, deputy assistant secretary of Defense for military manpower and personnel policy.

In developing the executive order and staff study, Aspin expects to consult with the Joint Chiefs of Staff, military services, other government departments affected by the order, individuals concerned with the changes who are outside of the executive branch and members of Congress.

DoD has also commissioned the Rand Corporation to examine the issue. DoD spokesmen said the internal and external reviews will be separate and each will act as a check on the other.



Benning wins ACOE again

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning has been selected as a winner in the 1993 Training and Doctrine Command Communities of Excellence Competition best extra large installation category. Two finalists were selected to represent Headquarters, TRADOC in the 1993-1994 Headquarter, Department of the Army COE competition — Forts Benning and Sill.

The TRADOC COE team is tentatively scheduled to visit Fort Benning Sept. 7 to 10. The post is awaiting confirmation.

"Congratulations to everyone for a superior job on the nomination packet," said Sarah McLaney, post ACOE coordinator. "The evaluators were very complimentary of the fine preparation and the excellent packet that was submitted," she said.

11th Inf. to get new commander

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The 11th Infantry Regiment will get a new commander July 9 during a change of command ceremony at 9 a.m. on York Field in front of Infantry Hall, Building 4.

Col. Walter D. Wojdakowski will succeed Col. Lawrence K. White Jr. as commander of the 11th Infantry Regiment. Should it rain, the ceremony will move inside to Infantry Hall's Marshall Auditorium.

He commanded the 2nd Armor Division's 3rd Battalion, 41st Infantry Regiment (Tiger Brigade) at Fort Hood, Texas, and in Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm from 1989 to 1991, and he was senior infantry task force combat trainer at the National Training Center, Fort Irwin, Calif., until July 1992.

Wojdakowski is a graduate of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., and has a master's degree in business administration from the University of Alaska and a master of military arts and sciences from the Command and General Staff College.

His military education also includes the School of Advanced Military Studies. He is a member of the National Honor Society Phi Kappa Phi.

Among Wojdakowski's awards are the Silver Star and Bronze Star medals, the Meritorious Service Medal, the Combat and Expert Infantryman badges, Ranger Tab and the Senior and Canadian Parachutist badges.

He and his wife, Candy, have two children.

- 7:30 to 8 p.m. — Infantry Band.
- 8 to 8:20 p.m. — Ranger demonstration.
- 8:20 to 8:30 p.m. — Silver Wings Command Exhibition Parachute Team.
- 8:30 to 9 p.m. — 50-gun salute and National Flag Pageantry.
- 9 p.m. to dark — Infantry Band, Infantry Chorus and fireworks display.

Commissary planning major renovation project

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

The Fort Benning Commissary will begin a major renovation project in fiscal 1994 that will expand the facility's floor space from 39,000 to 45,000 square feet, add a bakery and replace display cases and freezers, according to Larry J. Bentley, local Commissary officer.

The upcoming renovation, to be completed in fiscal 1995, will occur with no closure time, Bentley said. It will be done in phases to eliminate any disruption to customer service or store operation, he added.

At a cost of $7.6 million, the renovation contract includes a new lighting package, new floor, new equipment and the installation of customer restrooms, said Michael S. Waksmonski, deputy Commissary officer.

Also, the frequent delivery system, which the Commissary recently adopted, has freed warehouse space that will be converted to floor space.

With the general floor plan remaining the same, "the whole store interior will be redone completely," said Waksmonski.

The deli will be moved from the rear of the store to the right of the customer entrance to become a combined deli and bakery.

In addition, the dairy and produce sections will be "flip-flopped," so the produce section will be at the front of the store, and the dairy section will relocate to the back.

With this renovation, Waksmonski said that patrons will see their surcharge dollars coming back and being used in their own store.

He added that when renovations are complete, the Fort Benning Commissary will be a "state-of-the-art" grocery store, and patrons will definitely benefit.

Earlier this year, the facility completed a $98,000 improvement project involving new shelving and standardizing the layout of products according to new Defense Commissary Agency guidelines.

The reshelving process eliminated four feet of shelf space from the front and back of each aisle, creating more open space near the checkout area in the front of the store and the meat counter in the rear.

"It's more convenient," Waksmonski said, "and no matter what base you go to, the same item will be in the same place."

This was the first time items in the store have been moved since 1983, but the relocation of items has only been an initial inconvenience," he said.

VARIOUS VOICES

In honor of Independence Day, what do you think is the best thing about being an American?

Capt. Vesen Thompson, 3rd Battalion, 32nd Infantry Regiment — "The best thing about being an American is the freedom to choose your own direction in anything you want to do."

Ikeya Jordan, family member — "What I value most is all the freedom we have and the things we enjoy that others don't."

Lt. Col. Mark Collier, School of the Americas — "As Americans, we have the choice to do whatever we want. You are limited only by your initiative and hard work."

Sgt. 1st Class John Sellers, 43rd Engineer Combat Battalion — "The best thing about being an American is having the choice of freedom."

Pvt. 2 Ranee O'Mara, Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "The best thing about being an American is that we have a Disneyland on both coasts."

Sgt. Chad Sell, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Brigade — "Our greatest freedoms are freedoms of choice and the ability to elect officials to support you and to protest peacefully against things you don't support."

What happened to patriotism?

By Clyde Snively

COMMENTARY

Independence Day, more commonly known as the Fourth of July, will be celebrated on post Saturday, with a picnic, band concert, fireworks, etc. and on Monday, with a day off.

And that's the trouble with patriotic holidays. Too many people look on them only as a day off from work. They forget the true meaning of the holiday, forget the hardships and sufferings that our forefathers endured so that we can be a free people and have these days to celebrate.

Nowadays when we think of Memorial Day or Independence Day, we think of the highway patrol, Department of Transportation, Coast Guard, and the Safety Office warning us of the hazards of driving, boating and being in the sun.

We get the predictions on how many of us are going to be killed on the highways or drown in some body of water or get run over by some lunatic in his cigar boat.

When we think of these holidays, we're reminded that the malls will be open for their Memorial Day and Independence Day sales.

Where is patriotism? Where is the reminder of the true meaning of these holidays?

Well, some of the ads will have little U.S. flags in the corners, or even be printed over a flag, both violations of the U.S. code dealing with our nation's colors.

And I guess that's my point. Just like the holidays, our flag is taken for granted. We see it abused and misused so many times, we either don't notice or assume the people using it are doing nothing wrong.

Maybe I'm off base, but whenever I see the flag as a backdrop for an advertisement, I see red (white and blue). Try to call the folks whose wares are being advertised and they'll tell you it's some out-of-town advertising firm.

This drives me nuts. I hate them as much as I hate to see some old, over-weight person wearing an army helmet, presenting a half-cocked salute while he begs us to "come on down" and buy some product that has nothing to do with the military.

And even if it did, I'd still hate it.

I also grind my teeth every time I see our flag being incorrectly displayed in some movie or television show.

Come on folks, if you don't know how it's done, don't do it.

"Yeah, Clyde, get 'em," some of you are saying. But whoa, not so fast partner. Some of you get my goat too.

How many times have you huddled inside a doorway or stayed in a building just before 5:30 p.m. so you wouldn't have to stand at attention during retreat?

Or let's say you are "caught" outside when retreat is being sounded and you're in civilian clothes. Do you just stand there, kind of slouched over, impatiently waiting the few seconds it takes this ceremony to end?

Or do you stand proudly at attention with your right hand over your heart the way you're supposed to? Somehow we take the man or woman out of the uniform and he or she stops acting like a soldier and forgets military courtesy.

What about when you're at ceremonies where the National Anthem is played. What do you do then? Stand at attention with right hand over the heart, or merely stand and gaze out at the crowd or even continue your conversation, or continue eating your popcorn?

And what do you do when you're standing among a bunch of oafs who continue to horse around or who don't have the sense to remove their tattered baseball caps from their heads?

Do you say anything to them (in a nice way of course, especially if they're bigger than you) or just ignore it?

The is the Independence Day weekend. The anniversary of the birth of our nation. Let's resolve to put a little patriotism back into our actions. And of course ... drive, boat, swim and sun safely.

MESSAGE

Be safe this Fourth of July

This year Independence Day and a training holiday provide a four-day holiday weekend.

Many families will plan extended weekends and travel great distances to be with relatives in a traditional renewal of family ties.

Others may prefer to spend the holiday fishing, boating, swimming or enjoying other outdoor activities, such as those planned here at Fort Benning.

We must all be alert to the fact that there are many hazards associated with our summertime holiday activities.

The hazards that cause the most deaths during this period are traffic accidents and drowning.

Ignoring good safety practices costs lives.

Fasten seat belts when you are in a vehicle, take frequent rest breaks and only drive when you are sober.

Swim only in authorized areas with lifeguards on duty; and, for boaters, wear personal flotation devices while on a boat.

Have fun and enjoy a safe holiday.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White
Commanding general

Victims' families grateful for assistance

An automobile accident that involved seven Fort Benning family members occurred April 9.

It was a tragedy, but a tragedy that has had many silver linings.

It gave Fort Benning a chance to prove that "Army families are No. 1" and that the Army truly is a caring community.

Fort Benning came through with flying colors. There are times when a simple "thank you" sounds terribly inadequate. So many people did so much.

It started at the scene of the accident when people like Pfc. Matt Newman, 1st Platoon, Company C, 3rd Ranger Battalion, stopped to help. Thank you, Matt.

It continued when the young people were taken to Egleston Hospital.

Special thanks to Lt. Col. Bill Parker for acting as liaison between Egleston, Martin Army Community Hospital, Faith Middle School and the families involved. You did a super job!

Thank you to everyone who made the trip to Atlanta, who telephoned, who sent cards and flowers.

You will never know how much you helped with the recovery process.

One family member was brought to The Medical Center. Thank you to everyone who helped convert her room into a miniature flower shop. The visits and cards were greatly appreciated.

Special thanks are due to those who helped take care of the families. Maj. Gen. (Jerry A.) White, thank you for your concern and your support. Col. (Dave) Brown, thank you and the Directorate of Public Works for your quick response to the needs of those involved.

Johnnie Smith, Lt. Col. Lester Martinez-Lopez and Martin Army Community Hospital, thank you for helping each person to make a smooth transition from hospital to home care.

Dr. Rolla Baumgartner and Olin Harp and the faculty of Don C. Faith Middle School, thank you for making arrangements that allowed the girls to finish the eighth grade on time.

Thank you to each of the units (U.S. Army Medical Department Activity, U. S. Army Dental Activity, Directorate of Combat Development, 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital, Dismounted Warfighting Battle Lab, Dexter School, Benning Belles, Our Lady of Lourdes parish) and to all of the friends and neighbors who provided meals to each of the families.

Special thank yous to Mary Parker and Lidia Martinez-Lopez who provided wheels, chauffeur services and whatever was needed whenever it was needed.

To the Officers' Wives' Club of Fort Benning, thank you for setting up the accident fund and for your most generous contribution.

Thank you to each of the units and to each of the individuals who made contributions to that fund.

Finally, thank you to every person who said a prayer, who offered a Mass or who just sent "good vibes."

Each person involved in the accident was touched by these things. Each person involved was helped in his or her recovery by them — and recovering they all are.

All casts and braces should be off by the end of July. Everyone is up and walking. Each of the young people fully expects to start school in the fall.

Thank you, Fort Benning, for your tremendous care and concern.

The Meade, Dabbs, Everett, Rodriguez and Stacy families

Bring back live theater to Fort Benning

For several years, I have been trying to discover why the "little theater" ceased functioning here on post.

Between 1980 and 1985, I, along with a sizeable number of military and civilians, presented some really terrific live theater for the Fort Benning community. Suddenly, it simply vanished.

A wide range of shows were presented throughout the year, from adult drama to musicals and children's theater productions.

Of course, Columbus is the home of the Springer Theatre, the "state theater of Georgia," and the military are always welcome to audition for any productions.

I am an active member of that group, but I would love to once again see a resurrected live theater group on Fort Benning.

I suspect that now, as in the past, many soldiers and their families would avail themselves of an on-post live theater, especially from the "pocket book" angle.

Could you please do a little research to see if the possibility exists for such a group again on post.

What a shame that the large installation Army Communities of Excellence award winner has no "little theater"!

Vic Prophet Jr.
Directorate of Logistics

Director thanks post

As I prepare to depart Fort Benning, I take this opportunity to thank all of the commanders, directors and hundreds of staff and action officers and civilians for the terrific support you have provided to the Combined Armed and Tactics Directorate.

You have made my tour here very rewarding, and you all will remain in my thoughts and prayers as my wife and I make our 28th move up to our new assignment in D.C.

Col. Galen Jackman and his wife, Cathy, came from Fort Ord, Calif., to replace us here in CATD.

Please make them feel as welcome as you have made Nancy and me as they transition from brigade command on the West Coast to life as the director of CATD. They have two boys, David and Patrick, and they will be waiting for about 30 days to get into quarters.

Jackman will take command of the Ranger Training Brigade next year.

Thank you again for your kindness and understanding. Until we shall meet again, "Trust in the Lord, work hard and fear not."

Col. Stephen Nash
Director, CATD

Special 'Fort Benning Today' to air Mon.

By Paula J. Randall
USAIC Public Affairs Office

A special edition of "Fort Benning Today" will air on WLTZ TV-38 Monday at 6 p.m.

The half-hour special, hosted by Sgt. Sydni Redmond, will highlight some of Fort Benning's recent experiences with the tri-community.

First the show will take a look at the 36th Engineer Group's deployment to Somalia with Operation Restore Hope. The segment will include two of the group's soldiers who were honored by President Bill Clinton at the White House.

The 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment's participation in Operation Team Spirit in Korea, as well as Fort Benning's training in Kuwait with Operation Intrinsic Action also will be featured.

Also highlighted will be Fort Benning's recognition as the best large installation in the Army by winning the Army Communities of Excellence Award.

The Army Physical Fitness School and the future of Army physical fitness training will also be explored, and Garrison Sgt. Maj. Ireland Pulley will explain Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers' new programs.

Also featured will be a recent combined arms live fire exercise conducted by the 29th Infantry Regiment with the Air Force and Marines for students of the Infantry Officer Basic Course, and an infantry tactics training course conducted by the School of the Americas.

"Fort Benning Today" will also highlight a post program that is getting some national attention — the post's recycling program, which is growing in popularity by turning trash into cash while helping to preserve the environment.

Other highlights will include: the 89th Explosive Ordnance Detachment's recent class and demonstration on explosives; the second annual U.S. Combat Arms Matches which take place in a live-fire combat environment; and Dexter School and Faith Middle School students' participation in the mock trial during the post's Law Day celebration.

The show concludes with an overview of the recent Military Appreciation Week celebration on Fort Benning and in Columbus.

AER provides college aid, helps finance education

Army Emergency Relief

It seems today that the only thing "higher" about higher education is the cost of obtaining it. Many parents all across the country may be wondering how they will finance their children's education.

Military parents are probably no exception, but children of military parents do have an edge on receiving financial assistance for college. That edge is Army Emergency Relief.

AER provides educational assistance to eligible unmarried, 21 years or younger children of retired, active duty, or deceased soldiers. Scholarships and federally guaranteed student and parent loans are available.

Scholarships are awarded based on financial need, academic achievement and individual accomplishment. Students can receive up to $1,500 in aid and the money can be used toward all education expesses such as tuition, living expenses, transportation and books.

AER also provides assistance through federally guaranteed Stafford student loans. From Stafford student loans, eligible children and spouses of soldiers can receive up to $3,500 per academic year for the first two years of study and $5,500 yearly for the next two to three years up to a maximum of $23,000.

The actual amount of the loan is determined by the school. While the money for these loans comes from commercial lending institutions, AER makes obtaining the loan easier. AER pays the loan guarantee fees, which can amount to approximately 3 percent of the face value of the loan. Students must pay a 5 percent loan origination fee.

Parent loans, called PLUS, are available to active duty soldiers for their children's education expenses. Soldiers may borrow up to $4,000 per student each academic year.

Like the student loan, the amount of the PLUS loan is determined by the school, and applications can be submitted any time during the year. Repayment of a PLUS loan begins 60 days after the funds are disbursed.

The advantage to the PLUS loan is that it requires no family income evaluation and no loan origination fee is charged.

For more information on college assistance through AER, visit Building 2643 in Soldiers' Plaza. The hours of operation are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

June seminars target rape awareness

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning observed Rape Awareness Month in June with a series of seminars intended to educate the public on all aspects of the topic.

The first lecture was conducted June 9 by Marcia Wolfe, executive director of Columbus Rape Crisis Inc., a volunteer organization that provides crisis intervention for victims.

"We go to the hospital to provide support during the examination and gathering of evidence," said Wolfe, "and we attend the court proceedings during prosecution of the case."

The focus of the lecture was "Rape Trauma Syndrome," which Wolfe said is a grieving process rape victims go through following an attack.

"The stages are denial, guilt, anger and depression," said Wolfe. "Victims' families go through the same stages, but the victims experience two additional stages — fear and lack of trust.

"I highly recommend that rape victims and their families undergo counseling," said Wolfe. "Polls indicate that 22 percent of victims will actively try suicide, and 80 percent of married victims who report a rape will be divorced within a year. Even though the woman and her husband are undergoing similar grieving processes, they're not doing it together, but experiencing the stages separately. Counseling can help victims and their loved ones to deal with the emotions involved."

A rapist's motivation, said Wolfe, is to humiliate the victim, while sex is the weapon used. "A rapist wants to control and humiliate," said Wolfe, "and when you see the victims, you realize the rapist has succeeded."

The second session in the series was June 16, with the topic of "Rape: Crime and Punishment." Special Agent in Charge Randy Upton of the Criminal Investigation Division outlined the steps involved in building a case against a suspected rapist.

Upton conducted a slide presentation compiled during a serial rape and murder investigation that occurred in recent years near a major military installation. The presentation followed the course of the investigation through a period of about a year, during which nine women were raped and six of them killed.

Upton emphasized the importance of preserving evidence at the crime scene.

"It's important not to disturb anything that's found at the scene," he said, "because footprints and fingerprints, as well as fibers and body fluids that may be found on clothing or at the site can all help establish a case."

Upton recommended that rape victims take care to preserve evidence as well.

"If you are a victim," said Upton, "your body is a crime scene. It's understandable that you would want to remove all traces of the assault as soon as possible, but it's important that you try to preserve evidence. That's one way you can help bring the criminal to justice."

Sgt. 1st Class Hall Solomon, chief of Military Police Investigations, recommended that victims contact police immediately, describe the incident and their location, and take steps to preserve the scene until law enforcement agents arrive.

"It's a hard thing to ask," Solomon said, "but it's best if you don't shower or change clothes before you are examined by medical personnel."

"A case is often made by physical evidence," said Upton. "It's extremely important to educate people on the necessity of preserving this evidence."

Upton also pointed out some behaviors common to serial rapists and murderers.

"It seems the first crime is the hardest," he said. "The criminal typically becomes depressed and withdrawn after the first attack — they can't believe what they've done. Eventually, though, they're driven to repeat the attack on another victim, and the assaults typically occur with increasing frequency after that."

Upton said in the case outlined in the slide presentation, there was a period of six months between the assaults on the first and second victims, but a total of nine victims were assaulted within a one-year period.

"It takes time to develop a psychological profile of the criminal," Upton said. "We don't know, to begin with, who we might be dealing with. The person finally convicted in this case was a family man and a member of the military.

"Serial rapists and murderers, though, do tend to repeat aspects of their crimes with each victim," said Upton. "In this case, location of stab wounds and restraints used took on a ritual aspect. Also, serial offenders tend to get sloppy after a while. They start to believe they won't be caught, and they get careless and leave more evidence."

Capt. Douglas Dribben, a former prosecutor for the Staff Judge Advocate's office, spoke of the rights of victims during a court case and outlined the steps involved in bringing a case to court.

"Our main concern," Dribben said, "is to do everything possible to help the victim recover from the assault. We hope that includes bringing the criminal to justice, but there have been times when we didn't prosecute a case if it wasn't in the victim's best interest."

Dribben said the rights of the victim include courteous and professional treatment, information on arrest, bail and hearing dates, as much pretrial privacy as possible and the ability to determine if they're ready to proceed with a case.

"Victims should understand that the sooner a case is brought to court, the better the chance of conviction," said Dribben. "However, if the victim is not in a state of mind to be able to proceed, she should have the right to say so."

Staff Sgt. Bruce Williams, USAIC Military Police Company, conducted several classes on rape awareness during the month's observance.

"Education is the key to changing society's attitudes," said Williams. "When we scheduled these classes, several company commanders asked if male soldiers should attend — they assumed the focus would be on the females. This is typical of society's tendency to focus on the victim — where she was, what she was wearing, and so forth, all of which is totally irrelevant to the crime.

"Rape is not a sexually motivated crime," said Williams. "It's a crime of violence, motivated by a desire to degrade and humiliate the victim. We need to put the blame on the offender, not the victim."

Williams did suggest ways women can protect themselves from rape. Speaking of the recent serial rapes in Columbus, he said, "In most of these attacks, the guy didn't have to break in. He was able to enter the home through an unlocked door or window.

"It's important to always lock your doors and windows, day or night," said Williams, "especially if you live alone or with small children, as most of these victims did. Be aware of your surroundings and protect yourself — you can't change a rapist's motivations, but you can limit his opportunity."

The series also included "Asking Open Questions," conducted June 23 by Dr. Jackie Titus, associate professor of mental health at Columbus College.

The final session of the series was Thursday, and it consisted of a self-defense demonstration by Cris Weakley, a third-degree black belt and certified instructor of ninjitsu self defense.

Assistance is available to rape victims on Fort Benning through a volunteer organization under Social Work Services. For more information, call 545-1661.

Court Proceedings

Military court

- Article 32 hearing — Command representative, called Article 32 officer, acts as grand jury, recommends whether to go forward with all charges (adultery, sodomy, etc.)
- Trial and sentencing — Accused chooses whether panel or judge will hear case. Sentencing immediately follows trial — range of punishment up to life imprisonment, depending on circumstances of the crime

Federal court

- Grand jury — indictment (victim may or may not be requested to appear)
- Pretrial-trial motions — generally, victim need not appear
- Trial — phase one: opening statements, presentation of evidence (prosecution and defense), cross-examination, prosecution rebuttal
- Trial — phase two: sentencing — range of punishment set by federal guidelines

Rape statistics

The following statistics are based on the reports of law enforcement officials and polls conducted among rape victims :

- 1 in 4 women is sexually assaulted in her lifetime
- Ages of local rape victims have ranged from 2 months to 94 years
- 90 percent of rapes are never reported
- 2 percent of reported rapes are unfounded accusations
- Of rapes reported nationwide, 35 percent result in a conviction
- Of rapes reported in the tri-city area, 70 percent result in conviction
- 20 percent of rape victims will actively try to commit suicide
- 80 percent of married rape victims who report the assault will be divorced within one year

POST BRIEFS

Self-Help Store to close for July Fourth holiday

The Self-Help, Loan Equipment Section and Venetian Blind and Shade Shop will be closed Saturday to observe the Independence Day holiday. The store will reopen Tuesday at 8:30 a.m. for normal business.

Recruiter to visit post

A recruiter from North Georgia College will visit Fort Benning July 15 and 16 to provide information about the Green to Gold program, financial aid and degree programs available at the college. Second Lt. Michael Acord will be available in Building 2611, Soldiers' Plaza, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. both days. For more information, call Acord at (706) 864-1801.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland and range areas will take place through July 11. If weather permits, the following compartments may be affected Monday through July 11: A-6, C-1, C-2, C-3 D-3, D-11, D-14, D-17, E-2, E-4, E-5, E-7, G-5, J-1, J-3, J-6, V-1, W-1, W-2, X-5, Y-1 and Z-2.

Burning will occur in pine stands within these compartments to enhance endangered species habitat and training areas.

People using these areas for recreation must vacate the areas before 9:30 a.m. daily.

Training units using compartments adjacent to these areas may experience drift smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while traveling in these areas because of the potential for reduced visibility.

Civilian luncheon set

The Civilian Awards Luncheon will be July 27 from 11:30 a.m. to 1:15 p.m. at the Supper Club at the Fort Benning Officers' Club.

TSP open season set

The Thrift Savings Plan open season runs through July 31. All elections must be received in the Directorate of Civilian Personnel by July 31.

Only you can prevent forest fires

Natural Resources Management Branch

Extended dry conditions have placed Fort Benning in a Fire Danger Class of 4. Under these environmental conditions, the tendency that any forest fire has to spread is very high.

The major causes of forest fires at Fort Benning are incendiary training aids such as flares, blanks, simulators, pyrotechnics, smoke grenades and firecrackers.

Other causes include incendiary ammunition, careless use of cigarettes and matches, improper control of camp fires, and incendiary and smoke devices dropped from aircraft.

During a Fire Danger Class of 4, the use of open fires, tracers and all incendiary training aids except blanks will be stopped. Exception to this policy must be requested through Range Operations by the major unit's operations office.

Procedures for forest fire prevention, reporting and suppression on Fort Benning are in USAIC Reg. 210-4, Range and Terrain Regulation. All forest fires or range fires on or near Fort Benning will be reported as soon as possible after discovery to the following:

- Post Fire Department, telephone 117.
- Forestry Section, Department of Public Works, telephone 544-6304 or 544-6206.
- Range control, telephone 545-5186, or by radio, 149.625 (range control).

Units involved in fighting a fire will submit a written report to the Chief, Natural Resources Management Branch, within 24 hours to include the following:

- Date and time of fire.
- Location.
- Circumstances surrounding the discovery of the fire.
- Actions taken to extinguish the fire.

For more information, call Robert King, Natural Resources Management Branch wildlife biologist.

Soldiers magazine seeking Army photos

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Soldiers magazine is once again asking photographers from around the world to record a day of Army life for its second annual "This Is Our Army" photo feature.

Amateur and professional, civilian and military photographers are asked to record what's happening on their installation (post, camp, station, depot, etc.) on July 14 for a 32-page photo special feature to appear in the magazine's December issue.

The magazine wants photos that tell a story and capture the faces of soldiers, families and Department of the Army civilians.

The magazine is looking for imagination and creativity — posed shots will be screened out. Interested persons should shoot what is unique to their installation — something you may see everyday but others may never get the opportunity to experience.

Soldiers is looking for the best photos from the field, for a worldwide representation of what makes the Army what it is.

Be dramatic. Use different lenses — wide angles, telephotos and maybe even a fish-eye — to give an ordinary photo a fresh look. Shoot silhouettes and close-ups. If the weather isn't cooperating, too bad. That's part of a day in the Army.

Photos must be shot in the 24-hour period of July 14. Submit processed color slides or 5 x 7 or 8 x 10 black and white prints.

Photos should be printed for magazine quality. Newspaper photojournalists often print photos lighter and with less contrast. Print photos as if you are going to hang them on the wall.

Submissions will not be used without full credit and cutline information. The latter must include full name rank and service, as applicable, of the photographer; the names of identifiable people in the photos and details on what's happening in the picture; and the location of the photo.

Cutlines must be attached individually to the photo or slide. Do not send a sheet of slides and a sheet of cutlines. Photos must be processed and received by Soldiers by Aug. 31, and they will not be returned.

The magazine's mailing address is: Soldiers, Building 2, Door 11, Cameron Station, Alexandria, Va. 22304-5050.

Questions may be addressed to Staff Sgt. Larry Lane or Donna Miles at DSN 284-6671 or commercial (703) 274-6671.

ARMY FAMILY ACTION PLAN ISSUES

Garrison Commander's Office

More than 100 issues and questions were presented for action, comment or status to the garrison and installation staff at the Fort Benning Family Action Symposium recently.

The issues were broken down into functional areas and each directorate, activity or area was asked to respond.

The following are the questioss posed to the Directorate of Public Works and the answers provided by Kenneth Hankins, chief of the Housing Division.

Q: What is the policy concerning minimizing the penalty to break short term leases by soldiers awaiting government quarters?

A: Real estate leases are legally binding documents in which all parties to the document are required to comply with the provisions of the lease.

The military clause inserted in many leases protects the soldier in case of a permanent change of station move to other locations, but it does not allow termination because a soldier wants to accept assignment to government housing.

Because of this, soldiers whose names reach the top of the waiting list while still in a lease period may, upon request and presentation of a copy of the lease to the Family Housing Office, remain at the top of the list until the lease period is complete. The soldier will then be offered the first available set of quarters.

Community Homefinding, Relocation and Referral Services personnel will continue to advise soldiers of the restrictive nature of leases.

Soldiers will continue to be requested to provide copies of their leases to Family Housing personnel who, in turn, will ensure that quarters are offered when the soldier is able to accept them without penalty.

Q: Can the Directorate of Public Works update and increase the items available at Self-Help?

A: U-Do-It (Self-Help) personnel continuously monitor structural and environmental changes that occur on the installation. As a result of this monitoring process, the activity is able to continuously adjust its stockage items to meet the needs of the community.

Quantities of each item available for issue are regulated by supply and demand, but generally adequate supplies are on hand at all times. In addition to issue items, the U-Do-It Center offers a variety of hand and power tools on a loaner basis. Qualified personnel are available to instruct soldiers on the use of this equipment.

The center will continue to monitor changes in the Fort Benning community and adjust stockage items to ensure adequate and appropriate stocks are maintained.

Q: Can you improve the work order system?

A: DPW is currently conducting a survey that addresses the work order system. Completed forms are now being returned from family housing occupants as well as other tenant activlties on Fort Benning.

Once all survey forms are returned, efforts will be made to incorporate all workable changes and suggested improvements to the system.

Q: Can you establish a rotating cutoff schedule for housing air conditioning?

A: All air conditioner compressors on the installation are equipped with a radio controlled switch that can disable the unit when electricity demands exceed available supply. Blower fans continue to run and if the duration of the curtailment is short, the effect is not noticeable.

When a curtailment order is received, all units are initially shut off. As consumption falls below target levels, compressors are cycled on and off, with off periods rotated by housing area.

This procedure is designed to minimize the overall effect to quarters occupants.

Q: In order to improve the reliability of the variable housing allowance database, what can be done to achieve a 100 percent participation in filling out the survey.

A: Soldiers eligible to receive VHA are given a questionnaire when they inprocess with Finance. They are requested to complete and return the form subsequent to renting quarters on the local economy.

Failure to return the form results in curtailment of VHA payments.

Commanders must ensure that all eligible personnel complete and return the forms. One hundred percent participation results in maximum allowable VHA entitlement for all eligible soldiers.

Q: How can we improve communications to family housing occupants so that they are better informed on DPW and Directorate of Community Activities' programs and policies?

A: The spouse orientation, town hall meeting, mayors' meeting and other regularly scheduled public meetings are excellent ways to disseminate information.

Also, there are mayoral, area and building coordinator and Community Life organizations in place to facilitate the widest possible distribution of available data.

Information of general interest to all family housing occupants can be distributed via the Benning Bulletin, The Bayonet and the Professional Office System, or PROFS, message system.

DPW will continue to fully utilize all available means to distribute family housing information.

Q: The present Department of Defense bedroom assignment policy (Army Regulation 210-50) is insufficient. Can we change the regulation to accommodate one bedroom per child?

A: Current DoD policy allows children of opposite sex to share a bedroom up to six years of age; children of the same sex may share up to 10 years of age. Children 10 and older get a bedroom of their own; no more than two children are allowed per bedroom; and no child shares a bedroom with the parents. This policy is used in determining bedroom requirements up to the maximum number of bedrooms available.

If a policy of "one bedroom per child" was adopted at Fort Benning, families with several children could not be adequately housed on post because families with lesser numbers of children would be occupying all of the three-, four- and five-bedroom quarters.

This would force families who can least afford it to seek adequate housing off post.

Because there is a large number of junior enlisted, three-bedroom quarters available and most of the junior enlisted soldiers are a two-bedroom requirement, junior enlisted soldiers wlth two or more children may apply for three-bedroom quarters.

Any vacant three-bedroom, junior enlisted quarters for which there is not an applicant on the three-bedroom waiting list will be offered to the soldier at the top of the two-bedroom waiting list regardless of the number of children he or she has.

We will continue to monitor availability of quarters and soldiers on waiting lists and make necessary adjustments to ensure maximum utilization and soldier satisfaction.

Teams turn up the heat in summer softball

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

Engineer Field was a hotbed of activity June 24 with three games played. With the summer months fast approaching, the heat was not only in the air but also on the diamond.

U.S. Army Medical Department Activity vs. U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

In game one, the U.S. Army Medical Department Activity put their undefeated record on the line against the team from the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit and were blown away 16-3 by the USAMU team.

The USAMU team scored early and often on MEDDAC, touching the plate in the first inning seven times on a run-scoring double off the bat of pitcher Rick Hawkins, a three-run homer from left fielder Joe Buffa and another three-run blast from short fielder Mark Otto.

MEDDAC got on the board in the bottom of the first with a run-producing fielder's choice at second off the bat of designated hitter Sesmi Sulunisu.

In the top of the second, USAMU put up two more runs off the bat of Buffa when he sent a triple down the left field line, scoring teammates David Castellano from second and Mac Johnson from first to take a 9-1 edge.

The top of the third inning saw USAMU tack on four more runs to increase its lead to 13-1. Three consecutive singles after a double play loaded the bases for Hawkins. Hawkins sent a screamer to right center field for a triple and three runs. Buffa drove in his sixth run of the game and the fourth of the inning with a double to left.

MEDDAC tacked on two runs in the bottom half of the inning on a walk and two hits. The second hit by Sulunisu scored teammates Tommy Walker and Ralph Salazar to close the gap at 14-3.

USAMU added their final runs of the evening on one error and three singles. The last hit came off the bat of Buffa for his fourth hit of the night and his seventh RBI.

With the score 16-3, MEDDAC would have one final shot to keep their record untarnished, but MEDDAC couldn't put anything together in the bottom of the fifth inning, and the game ended when the one-hour time limit expired. Final score: USAMU 16, MEDDAC 3.

Military Police Activity vs. School of the Americas

Game two didn't last much longer between the Military Police Activity and the School of the Americas. With SOA leading 3-2 in the bottom of the fourth inning, a close play at third base was the undoing of MPA.

SOA shortstop Luis Cruz doubled to right center. Pitcher Ricardo Linton grounded the ball to shortstop Robert Hoage, who threw to third baseman Daniel Small for an apparent out at third. Third base umpire Eli Barber called the runner safe; and, when Small pounded the ball into the infield dirt, Barber tossed him from the game for unsportsmanlike conduct. Not being able to field a full team caused MPA to have to forfeit the rest of the game and SOA won 3-2.

U.S. Army Medical Department Activity vs. 75th Ranger Regiment

In game three, MEDDAC came back to play the 75th Ranger Regiment in the nightcap and came away with an 18-9 victory.

MEDDAC jumped out to a 5-0 lead in the bottom of the first inning on two singles and then a triple by catcher Sulunisu, driving in two runs. An RBI single by shortstop Gilbert Valez set up a two-run homer by Trent Collins.

The Rangers stormed right back in the top half of the second inning.

With two out and one run already on the board, catcher Jose Marmolejos doubled to center, scoring two runs. Two more singles and a three-run homer by shortstop Steve Long put the Rangers in the lead at 6-5 after an inning and a half.

The Rangers took their second and final lead of the game at 8-7 in the top of the fourth inning on a sacrifice fly by Long and an RBI single off the bat of Travis Blevens.

From the bottom of the fourth inning on, the only scoring done was by MEDDAC. They scored five in the fourth, two in the fifth and four more runs in the sixth inning to take an 18-8 lead.

The Rangers could manage only one run in the top of the seventh inning to make the final score 18-9.

Talladega Superspeedway

TALLADEGA, Ala. — In the 25 years since Richard Brickhouse won the very first DieHard 500 NASCAR Winston Cup Series race by one car length over Jim Vandiver, the finishes of the late summer classics at Talladega Superspeedway have earned a reputation for being the closest and most crowded finishes on the circuit.

It is rare for fewer than half a dozen cars to be in the hunt on the last lap of a DieHard 500, and this year's edition July 25 should be no exception.

"Talladega is the only place where we finish closer than we start," said 1989 DieHard 500 winner Terry Labonte.

While that first race set the tone for what was to come, in the last 13 races, starting in 1980 when Neil Bonnett beat Cale Yarborough, Dale Earnhardt and Benny Parsons by a car length, the finishes have been even closer.

In fact, the total margin of victory for those 13 races has been less than four seconds. And that includes Earnhardt's "runaway" victory in 1984, when he broke free from a pack of 10 cars on the final lap to win by 1.66 seconds, while the others jockeyed for positions behind him.

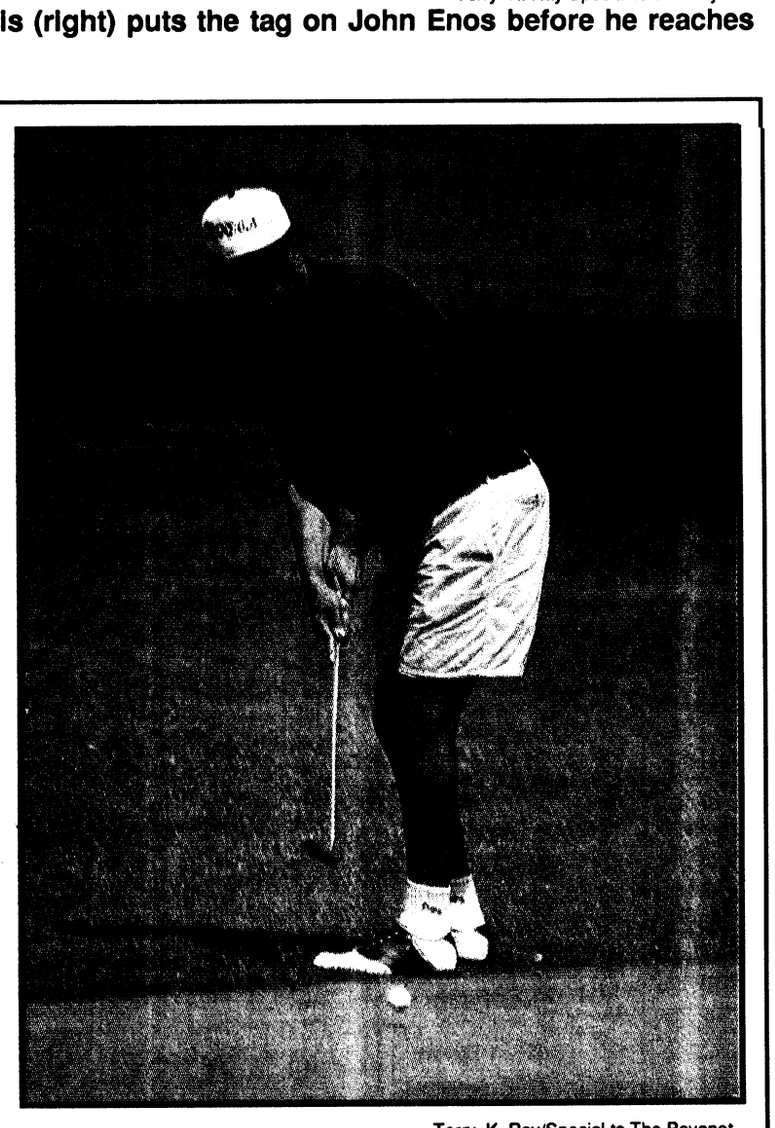
Allowing for a finish-line speed of 195 miles per hour, which is conservative, the cars are traveling at 286 feet per second. They would cover a car-length of 16.5 feet in approximately six 100th's of a second.

Using an elapsed time of .06 seconds for each car length, the total margin of victory for the 13 DieHard 500's since 1980 is a microscopic 3.82 seconds.

One of the most memorable was the 1981 finish in which Ron Bouchard used a highly-effective slingshot maneuver in the final 500 yards to win by one foot over Darrell Waltrip and two feet over Terry Labonte. At the speed they were racing, the margin of victory was less than 1/100th of a second.

During this 13-race span, one other race, Earnhardt's win over Waltrip in 1983, was by less than a car-length; while four others were by a full car-length; and one other was by 1 1/2 car-lengths. On the clock, all of these registered less than one-tenth of a second.

Earnhardt's last lap in 1984 was the widest margin of victory, but behind him things really bunched up. NASCAR's photo-finish camera was needed to determine second, fourth and eighth places.



The lead pack ran so closely all afternoon that, when Earnhardt waved to the crowd as he raced through the trivial to victory, one visiting journalist wrote, "It was the only time all afternoon that a driver in the lead pack could have stuck his hand out the window, and not poked another driver in the eye."

The companion event to the DieHard 500, the Fram Filters 500k NASCAR Busch Grand National Series race on July 24, appears to be following in the same thrilling tradition as the DieHard, if 1992's inaugural race is any indication.

Ernie Irvan beat Michael Waltrip, Todd Bodine and Dale Earnhardt to the line by half a car-length, three 100ths of a second.

Advance reserved seat tickets for both events are available now for both the Fram Filters 500k and the DieHard 500.

Call (205) 362-9064 for information and seat selection, or write to: Ticket Office, Talladega Superspeedway, P.O. Box 777, Talladega, Ala. 35160-0777. VISA, Mastercard and Discover are accepted as payment for advance ticket orders at Talladega.

Water sports can kill; boat smart, boat safe

Infantry Branch Safety Office

National Boating Safety Week was June 6 through 12.

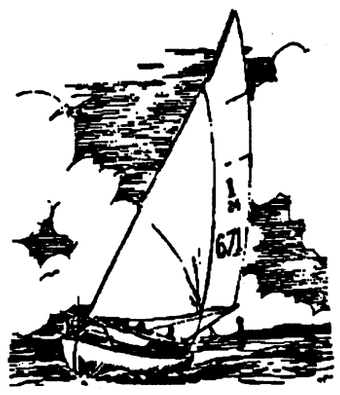
Each year more Army personnel purchase boats and become more involved in all kinds of water sports. A direct parallel can be drawn between increased sales and water accidents.

Water sports rank as the number two killer of Army personnel. Most of these accidents occur because of unsafe practices, lack of knowledge and failure to adhere to established safety rules or practices.

When boating or fishing these rules of safety should be followed:

• Before setting out in a boat, make sure you know how to handle it properly. Think ahead; make sure you and your passengers know what to do if an accident should occur. A life preserver should be provided for and worn, by each occupant.

• Know the limitations of your boat in relation to the type and size of the body of water.



• Too many people in a boat can send it straight to the bottom. Check the maximum capacity of the boat, usually on the data plate, and do not exceed it.

• Check weather forecasts and watch for storm clouds.

• A boat is no place to take a walk. Stay in your seat.

• Use caution on unfamiliar waters — don't go at high speeds until briefed on depth or obstacles or until knowledgeable of the same. Don't go fast in rough water.

• If the boat capsizes, stay with it unless you are very close to shore. Swim to shore only if you are a strong swimmer.

• An anchor with plenty of line should be carried in all boats. A whistle or horn should be carried to signal for help.

• Keep a sharp lookout for bad weather, other boats, swimmers, obstructions, skiers and fishermen.

• If you wade while fishing, be sure of your footing. A walking staff is helpful in swift water.

• A fish hook can cause serious eye injuries. Adequate clothing, safe drinking water, a fire extinguisher and a small first aid kit should be standard equipment.

Georgia to host sailing competition

Michael Parver Associates

"The eyes of the international sporting world will turn to St. Simons Island in August as the first International sailing competition in Georgia history, and the first pre-Olympic event since the announcement of Atlanta as the 1996 site, is set to take place," said Chip Hunter of the St. Simons Surr Sailors Inc.

"The gold, silver and bronze Olympic medal winners of 1992 will be among the participants from six countries competing on the fastest and most exciting boats in sailing," he said.

The event is the St. Simons International Cup and will feature the American silver medalist from the 1988 and 1992 Summer Olympics, the Australian Olympic bronze medalist from 1992, the four-time Olympic finalist from Canada, top sailors from Germany, Italy and France, and many of the leading contenders for the '96 Olympics. These yachtsmen will compete in match races from Aug. 13 to 15 off Georgia's Golden Coast on the innovative Tornado Class catamarans in conditions identical to those for the 1996 Summer Games.

"Our competition is the first of its kind for the state of Georgia," said Hunter. "These sailors are 'tops in their class', and their skill added to the speed and agility of the Tornados will ensure that the St. Simons International Cup will be very exciting and will have something to offer for everyone."

There has been much discussion in the competitive sailing community about the possible conditions of a spinnaker (the large triangular sail that "flies" in front of the vessel), the use of a double trapeze and an enlarged sailplane in the '96 Olympics. The St. Simons International Cup will be the first time the media will be able to cover these innovations.

For more information, contact Hunter, St Simons International Cup, at (912) 265-1346 or Michael Parver Associates at (404) 355-5580.

Bass club conducts monthly fishing tourney

Fort Benning Bass Club

The Fort Benning Bass Club conducted their monthly club tournament on Lake Harding June 11 from 10 p.m. to 7 a.m.

A field of 14 members competed in the night tournament, weighing in 40 bass for a total weight of 76 pounds, 7 ounces.

Miguel Aviles was awarded first place with six bass weighing 15 pounds, 15 ounces. George Mendez placed second with a limit of seven bass weighing 14 pounds, 2 ounces. Third place went to David Moore with five bass weighing 11 pounds, 6 ounces.

First place finisher Miguel Aviles was awarded the Big Bass Award for his 6-pound, 9-ounce tournament lunker.

'Barren' is in eye of beholder

By William G. Lewis
USAIC Chaplains' Office

REFLECTIONS

I often counsel individuals and couples who are going through the "desert experience." To them their lives seem barren and without any hope. If they are in relationships, their lives seems to have become dusty and dried up.

Recently I deployed to the National Training Center, Fort Irwin, Calif., for some desert training. Instead of dreading the experience, I went with anticipation of not only learning combat skills and survival, but also learning about the desert. I awoke each morning before daylight and watched the sun rise over the purple mountains. The rich colors and hues were beautiful to behold. Fort Irwin had received an abundance of rain in the winter and the desert was awash with wild flowers. Wild life abounded if one took the time to look around.

How often are we like many of the people who go to the desert. We look at the landscape that seems so barren and void of life, without taking time to see the life that is there. We limit our view, because we fail to see all of God's creation. When we go through the "desert experiences" in our lives, we fail to see the life and the good that is there. We see only the hard things, instead of trying to learn from the experience.

In both the Old and the New Testament, God used the desert as a place of discipline, a place of testing and a means of growth and instruction. The children of Israel wandered in the desert for 40 years because of their unbelief and doubt. Jesus Christ was tested in the desert to see if he would deny God. Paul the Apostle received instruction and a vision while in the desert.

Will we be like the children of Israel who never left their desert experience because of their unbelief? They remained in bondage to themselves. Will we be like Jesus Christ who when tested to deny God, chose to believe in the Word of God and find comfort? Or will we be like Paul the Apostle, and when we face the desert experience, recognize its worth, and say, God teach me through this experience, and give me a vision for a better life?

When we face the "desert experience" of our lives, let us look beyond the present situation. Let it not be a place we deny God and live in unbelief and rebellion, but let us seek the comfort of his word. Then let us like Paul say, "teach me in my trials and give me a vision for a better life."

Life: God gives gift to mankind

By Kevin B. Weston
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Reflections

Life is God's greatest gift to the world and man is the highest form of expression of that gift. Created in the image of God, man is to be viewed with wonder and awe, for the life of man is precious. God alone can give and create it. Life is precious, sacred and mysterious.

After the first atom bombs had been dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki, it became apparent that the bomb would hang over the heads of men for years to come. Threatening the world with a holocaust that would consume all life, man's ultimate madness is his lack of appreciation of life on earth, especially for the life of his own kind.

His real impossible dream involves an appreciation for life that is expressed by holding people in high regard and loving his fellow man in positive ways. He does not seem able to see life from God's perspective because of unanswered questions. What Cain started out in a field outside the garden of Eden has continued and has been expanded.

If anything, man has refined his methods of showing refusal for his fellow man and for the precious life with which God has endowed mankind. Regardless of war and peace over the many years, the onslaught continues. Man plunders, persecutes, cripples and kills, and the mouth of the earth opens wide to receive the life God gave.

Unless the kingdom of evil is intersected at some point from above by the spirit of truth, there is no hope at all.

That's what God has done through Christ and the gospel. God's purpose for man was revealed in the garden. It was not only to take dominion over the earth and rule it, but to love life, nurture, and preserve it as his precious gift. The Lord God confirmed his intentions for mankind at Golgotha. The cross plunged into the ground at Calvary is the wedge God used to pry open the hardened hearts of men and women so that they might love each other as Christ loved them.

The gospel is still the answer. Christ can penetrate and change the human heart so that man can love again. Only through him can the graveyard be a garden again.

This is Independence Day — a time to reflect on how precious life and freedom can be and how grateful we should be. It is a time to thank others for giving their life to appreciate freedom.

The love of life can't be bought, begged, borrowed or stolen — for it has no value for anyone until it's given away.

U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit activates headquarters company

By Anthony Jackson
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

With the establishment of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit in 1956, a standard was set and the challenge to improve marksmanship skills rang throughout the Army.

Now 40 years later, AMU soldiers have reached a milestone allowing them to accomplish their mission and use their talents like never before.

The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit conducted its Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment activation ceremony June 23 at Fort Benning's Phillips Range, thus bringing in a new era of marksmanship standards to the AMU.

"The HHD element is being established to exercise administrative control over personnel assigned to the unit," said AMU Sgt. Maj. James Guynn. "HHD will serve one purpose — to take better care of the soldiers."

In doing this, the unit can better accomplish its mission of winning in national, international and interservice shooting competitions, he said.

AMU, composed of seven distinctive shooting disciplines, trains assigned personnel in all aspects of their respective shooting styles. From sunup to sundown, a shooter virtually eats, sleeps and trains to be the world's best.

"The Army is a changed world since I first came in," said 1st Sgt. Eddie McClendon. "Budget cuts, personnel cuts and RIFs (reductions in force) make today's Army very challenging. More importantly, however, it requires soldiers to be the very best — elite, combat-ready, mentally focused individuals.

"Because of this, it is my job and responsibility to ensure that AMU soldiers are not only world-class shooters, but world-class soldiers," McClendon added.

With the activation of HHD, officials say the opportunity to produce more world-class shooters is even more possible and in perfect timing with the Olympic Games in Atlanta, Ga., in 1996.

"We have quality soldiers here, and it is my intention to give them every opportunity to excel to the pinnacle of their abilities as shooters and as soldiers," said HHD commander Capt. Catherine Wilson.

"The opportunity and the challenge to lead and serve the Army's elite AMU is overwhelming and a privilege," said Wilson. "We have the chance to help mold the unit, its shooters, the public's view of us, our jobs and our desire to be the very best.

"With such an opportunity I look forward to meeting the challenge and serving with the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit," Wilson said.

Family that jumps together ...

Father, son attend airborne training

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

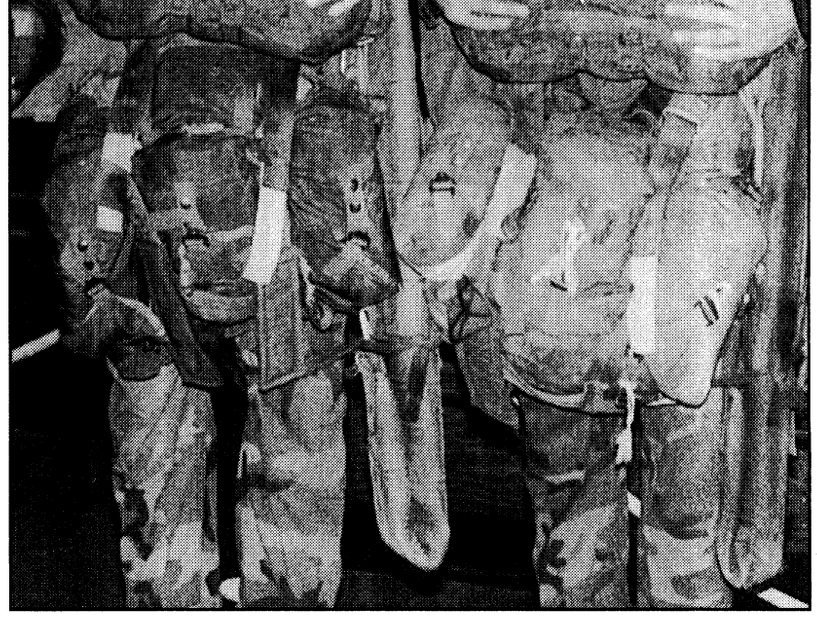
Spending time with family during the summer usually means leisure activities such as camping, boating or traveling. For one father and son however, spending time together this summer meant running, calisthenics, a sawdust pit and parachuting from a perfectly good airplane.

Staff Sgt. Alan J. Upton, 39, who works in the Directorate of Training and Doctrine for the School of the Americas, and his son Christopher M. Upton, 20, a West Point cadet, graduated from Airborne School June 18, after completing the arduous three-week course.

According to Staff Sgt. Upton, going through jump school with his son was an opportunity to spend time together during an otherwise busy schedule.

"Being in the Army there isn't always time to do things with my son," he said. "I thought we could spend some time together and help each other out," he added.

A little more than half his father's age, Christopher Upton found jump school challenging, but said his father had no trouble handling the running and training at jump school.



During the required five jumps to graduate, the Uptons were able to make some jumps in the same "stick" or group. On one occasion they jumped one right after the other and were joined by the command sergeants major for SOA, the 11th Infantry Regiment, and the 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment.

According to Command Sgt. Maj. Vincent C. Sampson Jr., SOA, he, Command Sgt. Maj. Eddie L. Roberts, 11th Inf. Regt., and Command Sgt. Maj. Robert A. McCoy, 1st Bn. (Abn.), 507th Inf., jumped with the Uptons June 16 to signify the role of the NCO as trainer and maintainer of soldiers and their role in support of the officer corps in its command position, as Staff Sgt. Upton jumped with his son, a future officer.

Although some may feel the hardest part of jump school is going out the door, the senior Upton said for him the hardest part was ground week. "The toughest part was the first week with all the body pounding in the sawdust pit."

As for his son, Upton said he was "real proud of him" and even made sure his son jumped out the door before he did so he could have bragging rights as the first to be qualified.

Christopher Upton, who will be entering his senior year at West Point this fall, said he hoped to be commissioned as an aviation officer and was headed to Fort Huachuca, Ariz., following jump school for some additional training before the fall term.

Reservists train with ITB

By Thomas A. Horton
76th Division (Training)

Basic training.

Every soldier in the Army can remember it vividly.

The drill sergeants and the relentless training remain fresh in the mind throughout a soldier's career. Wherever that path may lead — active, Reserve or National Guard — all soldiers learn the same essential skills and receive the same training at the hands of drill sergeants.

This summer, however, basic training for the soldiers of the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry, Infantry Training Brigade, was different.

At the 1st Bn., 38th Inf., the cadre have a challenge — assisting Reserve component units to administer these skills while maintaining the continuity of the training cycle.

Such a situation presents both advantages and disadvantages. Coordinating training schedules, procedures and expectations across more than 1,400 miles can lead to frustration and inadequate training for the people who need it most — initial entry training soldiers.

Working with the 1st Brigade, 76th Division, (Training), a unit from New England, this summer has proven to be educational and rewarding for both the active duty cadre and reserve personnel. In order to combat the problems of four two-week transition periods, thorough preparation was made before the arrival of each of the brigade's battalions at their annual training.

Richard D. Lemieux, operations officer, 2nd Battalion, 304th Infantry Regiment, said that the key to success was preparation.

"Strong home station training, PT (physical training) and close coordination with the active component has proven invaluable in completing the mission," he said.

The preparation began in September. Col. John Heath, 1st Brigade, 76th Division commander, and Col. Theodore Severn, Infantry Training Brigade commander, conducted a pre-training in January. By March, lesson plans, programs of instruction and training support packages arrived at 2nd Bn., 304th Inf. Regt.

Also, two mobile training teams from Company B and C of the 1st Bn., 38th ITB, were dispatched to Maine to evaluate 2nd Bn., 304th Inf. Regt., training and to watch the drill sergeants perform. While the worst blizzard in recent history canceled one day of this training, the team returned in June to finalize the annual training preparation.

Thomas A. Horton

Upon arrival, the advance party of the 2nd Bn., 304th Inf. Regt., along with active duty personnel of the 1st Bn., 38th ITB helped to transition the incoming cadre. As training progressed, each day's events are planned and discussed three days in advance to minimize complications. Pre-execution checks and briefings continue until the exercise is concluded. The training is then immediately followed by an after action review where any errors or problems can be solved for future cycles.

"The active component must ensure continuity," said Lt. Col. Charles N. Cardinal, commander of the 1st Bn., 38th ITB. "Cadre certification is of vital importance to mission success, and the soldiers must be provided with training up to standard."

Cardinal also said that working with the Reserves has given the 1st Bn., 38th Inf., ITB a fresh look at training techniques and provided the cadre with different approaches to training.

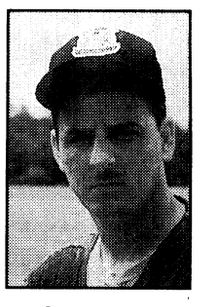
Vigilance, support and an integrated cadre are needed for a successful training mission, and it seems as if the soldiers of the 1st Bn., 38th Inf., ITB, and the 2nd Bn., 304th Infantry Regiment, are on their way to fulfilling those tasks.

AMU shotgun shooter wins international title

By Anthony Jackson
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

The U.S. Soccer Team, World Cup champions; the Montreal Canadiens, Stanley Cup champions; and the Chicago Bulls, three-peat National Basketball Association champions. These teams have attained prestigious positions few have the hopes of ever reaching.

However, another such noteworthy accomplishment does exist. A Fort Benning U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit soldier recently joined the ranks of the distinguished athletes.



Sgt. Todd Graves, a native of Sharon, Miss., and an AMU shotgun team member, was selected as the 1992 International Men's Shotgun Shooter of the Year June 1.

According to the 17-year shooting veteran, the announcement of his selection was an honor, but unnecessary.

"It's an honor to be commended by one's peers, but I just see myself as another shotgun shooter in the sport trying to do his best," said Graves.

However modest Graves may be, his record of accomplishments certainly establish him as possibly one of the best shotgun shooters in the world.

Graves was the only man to make the Olympic team in both trap and skeet during the 1992 Olympic Games. He took the Bronze Medal in double trap and the silver in skeet at the 1993 World Cup in Los Angeles, Calif. He took the gold in trap at the 1993 World Cup in Mexico where he also set a new record. At the 1992 World Cup in Cairo, Egypt, Graves once again took the gold in double trap and the silver in skeet, and his list of achievements goes on.

Graves

"The nominating committee selects the outstanding disciplined athletes based on match performance," explained Burl Branham, AMU shotgun coach. "Todd is one of a kind, and without a doubt in my mind, one of the most deserving shooters of this recognition."

What does it really take to be the best?

"I couldn't really tell you," said Graves. "I love to eat cheeseburgers and fries so I don't think it's my diet. Whenever I'm at a big competition, the biggest thing going through my head is 'don't mess up!' "

"I really believe more than anything there's no rulebook to follow in trying to reach the top," Graves continued. "It's desire and your ability to let nothing keep you from being the best."

It's this type of attitude that led Graves to his enlistment in the Army.

"Burl (Branham) approached me at a match I was competing in and asked if I wanted to join the Army and come to the unit," Graves said. "I knew the Army shotgun team was good, and I knew to be the best I would have to go somewhere that would give me the opportunity to be the very best.

"Eight years, a wife and three children later here I am still doing what I love," he said.

WORLD WAR II — A LOOK BACK

50 years ago this week ...

• On the Eastern Front, German forces launched major attacks in the Orel, Bielgorod and Kursk sectors, thus initiating the largest tank engagement of the entire war, with the hope of driving a wedge through the well-fortified Soviet line in the Kursk salient. The Germans initially made small advances resulting in massive casualties on both sides. The 'Battle of Kursk' drew a total of 6,000 tanks, 5,000 planes and more than two million German and Russian men into the vicious fighting.

• On Fort Benning, Tuskegee graduate Otis D. Goodwin, who had recently earned two promotions in one week, continued to serve as the sergeant major of the 1st Battalion of the Provisional Truck Regiment.

Ribbons, awards represent military excellence

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

The tradition of awarding medals to soldiers for meritorious actions dates back to 1782 when Gen. George Washington created the Badge of Military Merit, according to Evans Kerrigan's book "American Medals and Decorations."

That original medal, which has evolved into what we know today as the Purple Heart, has been joined over time by a host of others.

They range from individual decorations for valor to service medals and ribbons for different campaigns and accomplishments.

The following is a list of military awards and some of the provisions and eligibility requirements listed in Army Regulation 672-5-1:

• The Medal of Honor is awarded by the president in the name of Congress to service members who distinguish themselves above and beyond the call of duty by a deed of personal bravery or self-sacrifice at the risk of their lives.

• The Distinguished Service Cross is awarded to any member of the U.S. armed forces or any civilian national who distinguishes himself or herself by extraordinary heroism not justifying the Medal of Honor. Their actions must have been so notable and involved risk of life so extraordinary as to set the individual apart from his or her comrades.

• The Defense Distinguished Service Medal is awarded by the secretary of Defense to military officers who, while assigned to joint activities of the Department of Defense, distinguish themselves by exceptionally meritorious service in a position of unique responsibility.

• The Distinguished Service Medal is awarded to people who distinguish themselves by performing a duty meriting recognition for clearly exceptional service.

• The Silver Star is awarded to people cited for gallantry in action in military operations involving conflict with an opposing force.

• The Defense Superior Service Medal is awarded by the secretary of defense to service members who, while assigned to joint activities of the Department of Defense, render superior meritorious service in a position of significant responsibility.

• The Legion of Merit is awarded to any member of the U.S. armed forces or armed forces of a friendly foreign nation who has distinguished himself or herself by exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services and achievements.

• The Distinguished Flying Cross is awarded to people who distinguish themselves by heroism or extraordinary achievement while participating in aerial flight.

• The Soldier's Medal is awarded to any member of the U.S. armed forces or armed forces of a friendly foreign nation who distinguishes himself or herself by a heroic performance involving personal hazard or danger and the voluntary risk of life under conditions not involving conflict with an armed enemy.

• The Bronze Star Medal is awarded to any person who, while serving with the U.S. Army in any capacity after Dec. 6, 1941, distinguished himself or herself by heroic or meritorious achievement or service in connection with military operations involving conflict with an opposing armed force.

Soldiers Magazine

• The Purple Heart is awarded in the name of the president to any member of the U.S. armed forces or any civilian national who, while serving in any capacity with the U.S. armed services after April 5, 1917, has been wounded or killed.

• The Defense Meritorious Service Medal is awarded in the name of the secretary of Defense to any active member of the U.S. armed forces who distinguishes himself or herself by noncombatant meritorious achievement in specified assignments after Nov. 3, 1977.

• The Meritorious Service Medal is awarded to any member of the U.S. armed forces or armed forces of a friendly foreign nation who, while serving in a noncombatant area after Jan. 16, 1969, has distinguished himself or herself by outstanding meritorious achievement or service.

• The Air Medal is awarded to any person who, while serving in any capacity in or with the U.S. Army, distinguishes themselves by meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flight.

• The Joint Service Commendation Medal is awarded in the name of the secretary of Defense to any member of the U.S armed forces who distinguishes himself or herself by outstanding performance of duty in any specified assignment after January 1, 1963.

• The Army Commendation Medal is awarded to members of the armed forces who, while serving with the Army in any capacity after December 6, 1941, distinguish themselves by heroism, meritorious achievement or service.

• The Joint Service Achievement Medal is awarded in the name of the secretary of Defense to any member of the U.S. armed forces below the grade of O-6 who distinguishes himself or herself by meritorious achievement or service in any specified joint activity after Aug. 3, 1983.

• The Army Achievement Medal is awarded to any member of the U.S. armed forces or armed forces of a friendly foreign nation who, while serving in a non-combat area after Aug. 1, 1981, distinguishes himself or herself by meritorious achievement or service.

• The Prisoner of War Medal, authorized in November of 1985, is awarded to any person who, while serving in any capacity with the U.S. armed forces, was taken prisoner and held captive after April 5, 1917.

• The Good Conduct Medal is awarded for exemplary behavior, efficiency and fidelity in active federal military service.

• The Army Reserve Components Achievement Medal is awarded for exemplary behavior, efficiency and fidelity while serving as a member of the Army National Guard or Army Reserve.

• The Army of Occupation Medal is awarded for 30 consecutive days of service while assigned to Armies of Occupation of: Germany between May 1945 and May 1955; Austria between May 1945 and July 1955; Berlin in 1945; Italy between May 1945 and September 1947; Japan between September 1945 and April 1952; and Korea between September 1945 and June 1949.

• The National Defense Service Medal, established in 1953, is awarded for honorable active service between June 1950 and July 1954, January 1961 and August 1974, and to service members on active duty on or after Aug. 2, 1990.

• The Korean Service Medal is awarded to soldiers who served within the territorial limits of Korea or its surrounding waters between June 1950 and July 1954, or who served with a unit under operational control of the Commander in Chief, Far East that directly supported military efforts in Korea.

• The Antarctica Service Medal is awarded to any U.S. service member or national who is a member of a direct support or exploration operation in Antarctica, who is a member of the crew of an aircraft flying to or from the Antarctic, or who has served on a U.S. ship operating south of latitude 60 degrees south in support of programs in Antarctica, after January 1946.

• The Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal is authorized for U.S. military operations, U.S. operations in direct support of the United Nations and U.S. operations of assistance for friendly foreign nations.

• The Vietnam Service Medal is awarded to members of the U.S. armed forces who served in Vietnam, Vietnamese waters or airspace; or who served in Thailand, Laos or Cambodia in direct support of operations in Vietnam.

• The Southwest Asia Service Medal is awarded to members of the armed forces who have served or are currently serving in Southwest Asia, Israel, Egypt, Turkey, Syria and Jordan under the operational control of Central Command or directly supporting operations in the theater. This was awarded to soldiers who participated in Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm and the relief efforts that followed.

• The Humanitarian Service Medal is awarded to soldiers who distinguish themselves by direct participation in a Department of Defense approved significant military act or operation of a humanitarian nature.

• The Armed Forces Reserve Medal is awarded for honorable service as a member or former member of a U.S. reserve component, including the Coast Guard or Marine Corps reserves, for a period of 10 years.

• The NCO Professional Development Ribbon, established in April 1981, is awarded to members of the U.S. Army and reserve components for successful completion of designated noncommissioned officer development courses.

• The Army Service Ribbon, established in April 1981, is awarded to members of the U.S. Army on completion of initial entry training.

• The Overseas Service Ribbon, established in April 1981, is awarded to members of the U.S. Army for the successful completion of overseas tours.

• The Army Reserve Components Overseas Training Ribbon, established in July of 1984, is awarded to members of the U.S. Army Reserve Components for successful completion of annual training or active duty training on foreign soil for a period not less than 10 consecutive days.

• The U.N. Service Medal, established by a U.N. General Assembly Resolution Dec. 12, 1950, is awarded to members of the armed forces dispatched to Korea or adjacent areas or having supported military operations there for the period between June 1950 and July 1954.

• The Multinational Force and Observers Medal, established in March 1982, is awarded to soldiers serving with the Multinational Force and Observers for a specified period of time after August 1981.

• The Republic of Vietnam Campaign Medal is awarded by the government of the Republic of Vietnam to members of the U.S. armed forces who served there during a specified period and were wounded, captured or killed in action.

PRIMUS IS CHANGING

PRIMUS

On February 1, 1993, the Columbus PRIMUS Clinic became the PRIMUS Family Practice Clinic. As of this date, the clinic will be open to non-active duty military beneficiaries registered in the Army's Gateway To Care Program and enrolled to receive their primary health care at PRIMUS. As a Family Practice Clinic, PRIMUS will expand its services and offer its enrolled members:

- Comprehensive family practice medicine, including routine physicals, treatment of a wider range of acute and chronic conditions, and extensive laboratory and radiology testing.
- Guidance for all healthcare treatment, including diagnostic testing, speciality referrals, and follow-up care.
- Both scheduled appointments and walk-in visits.
- Telephone consultation with qualified healthcare personnel to determine whether and when to seek medical care.

To enroll as a member of the PRIMUS Family Practice, active duty family members and retirees and their families should attend one of the Army's Gateway To Care briefings or contact the MACH Health Care Finder at 544-1447/1591. Enrolled members can receive more information on our Family Practice services by calling the clinic at 561-7066.

SUMMER PROGRAM makes post children 'happy campers'

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

School's out — summer's here! If your children are already parked in front of the television or are complaining there's nothing to do, Youth Services has the answer.

Youth Services is running a weekly summer camp from 8 a.m. to noon each day for children 6 through 12.

The camp features daily field trips, creative activities and plenty of fun and games.

"The best thing about this is it gives the children a morning out," said camp counselor Sharon Kelly.

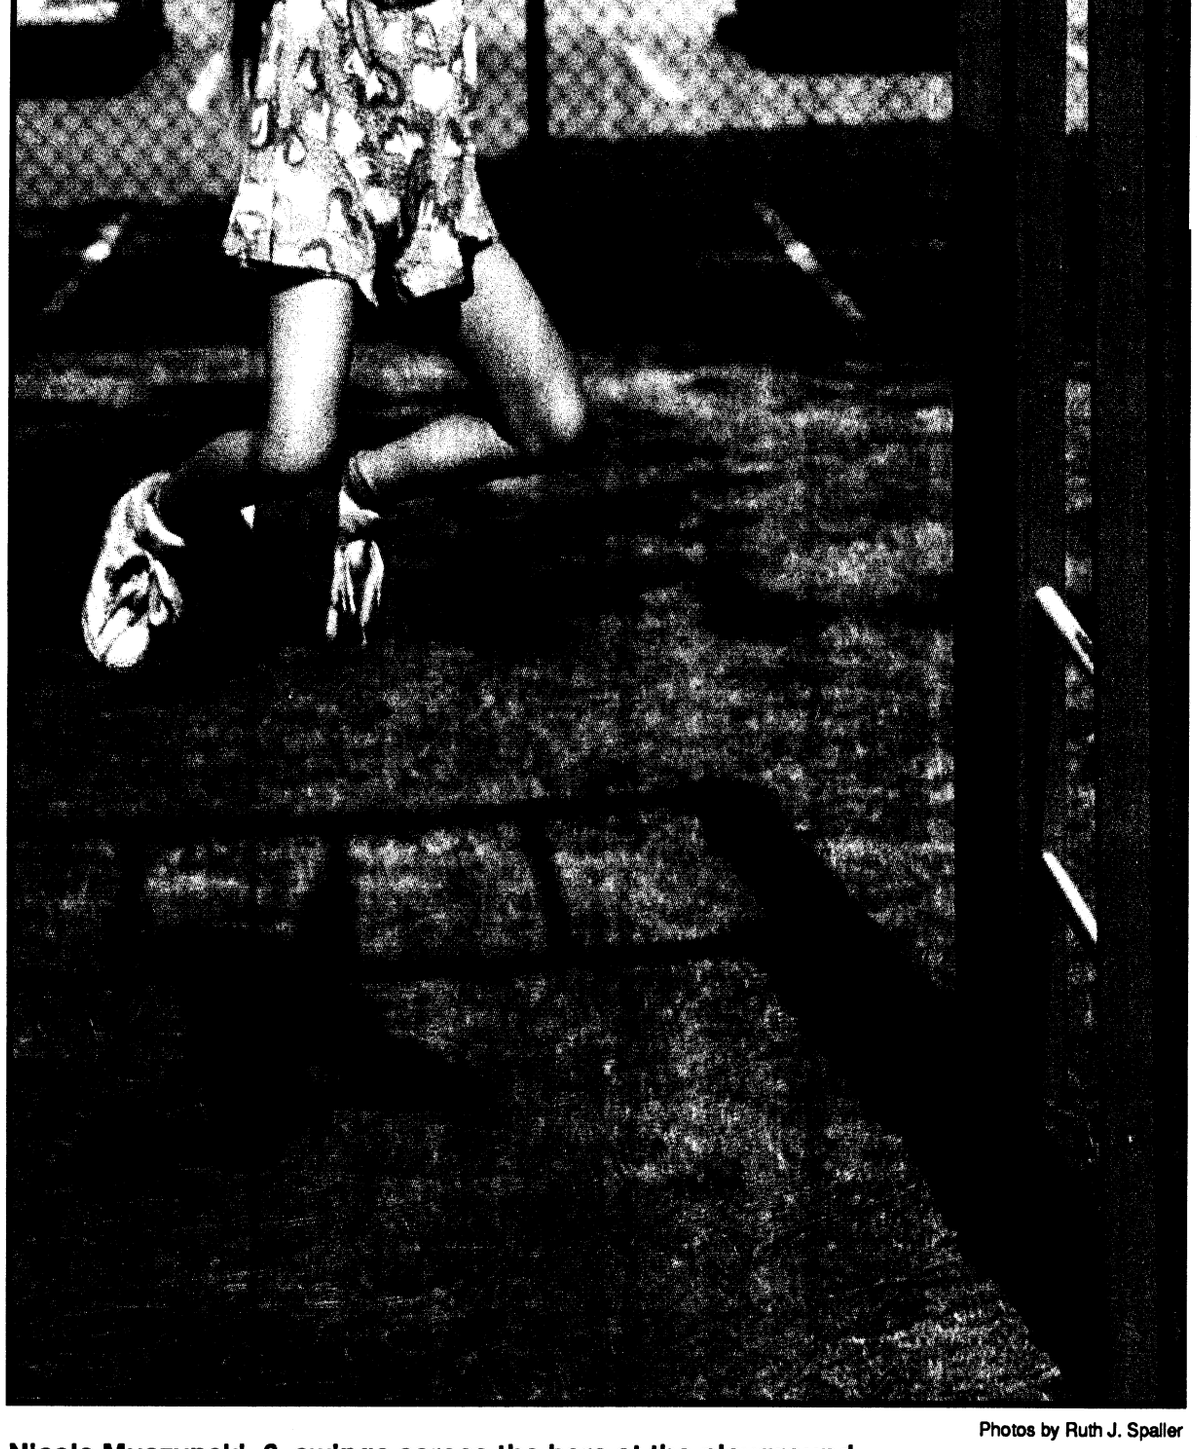
Kelly said she tries to provide the children with field trips that expose them to this area and give them a chance to see what's here.

The first week of camp included trips to the Foxie 105 radio station and the Milgen Road Post Office.

Cyneia Hill, 9, said the disc jockey at the radio station made that trip the most fun by asking the group what song they wanted to hear and playing it for them.

"He asked us what station we liked and we all said 'Foxie 105' over the radio," she said.

Lisa Pugh, 11, said she liked the post office the best. "We made post cards and learned where a letter goes and what it does," she said.



"We will go every week to the Columbus and infantry museums," Kelly said, "and we are planning trips to Westville, Lake Heath and the Springer Opera House."

Tours of Baskin Robbins, Golden Donuts and McDonald's are on the summer's list of things to do, as are some activities closer to home, like an airborne demonstration and visits to the Fort Benning bowling centers.

A variety of art projects like making masks, puppets and folding paper creations, along with games like balloon tag and outdoor sports round out each morning's activities.

There are two sessions remaining. One starts Tuesday and runs to July 9; the next runs from July 12 to 16.

Children can attend for $25 per week, and a morning snack is provided. For more information, call Youth Services at 545-3070.

2/58 celebrates Cadre Family Day

By David M. Hart
2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment

The 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment conducted its annual Cadre Family Day June 12. The event, sponsored by the battalion's Company B, included numerous demonstrations and hands-on activities.

The day's events started at 8 a.m. with a welcoming brief by Lt. Col. Bruce D. Grant, the battalion commander.

Staff Sgt. Juan Rodriguez, a drill sergeant with Company B, followed Grant with a "down and dirty" session of M-16A2 rifle familiarization training and premarksmanship instruction for the family members.

Everyone then boarded a bus and rode out to Malone 2 rifle range where family members aged 19 years and older were given the opportunity to fire ten rounds of 5.56mm ball ammunition at pop-up targets, ranging out to 150 meters distance.

This was the first time in the battalion's history that family members were able to fire live rounds out of the M-16A2, the Army's primary individual weapon.

After firing, everyone returned to the battalion area and participated in more hands-on training. The activities were designed to give the spouses and children an opportunity to experience those activities the soldiers teach to the trainees — including throwing dummy hand grenades with fuses, firing M-16A2 rifles loaded with blanks at silhouettes equipped with multiple integrated laser engagement system, applying camouflage to the face (this seemed to be a favorite of the children), and operating the PRC-77 radio.

The festivities concluded with refreshments provided by the battalion's family support network. Capt. Kenneth C. Sampson, the Bravo company commander, wishes to thank all those who worked together to make the Family Day a success, especially Nanette Pigg and the family support network.

Take care of your teeth during pregnancy

U.S. Army Dental Activity

Pregnancy is a special time when you need to take extra care of your oral health. For many reasons, you should pay extra attention to good nutrition, careful oral hygiene and proper dental care.

Development in fetus

The first development of your baby's mouth begins when the fetus is about 3 weeks old, perhaps before you even know you're pregnant.

The first signs of teeth occur at about 6 weeks. Between 4 and 5 months, the crowns of some of the baby teeth have formed. By the time your baby is born, the crowns (the part of the tooth that will eventually be above the gums) of all 20 baby teeth have formed.

Begin with a good diet

The best way to care for your unborn baby's teeth is to take care of your own teeth and your general health. Good general and dental health begin with a good diet.

The developing baby needs calcium, phosphorous, fluoride and other minerals and vitamins for the forming teeth. These nutrients are supplied from the food you eat.

Contrary to rumor, calcium is not lost from the mother's teeth during pregnancy. The calcium the baby needs comes from your diet and your bones.

Pregnancy treatment

Because of your increased susceptibility, it's important that you come in for regular dental visits during your pregnancy.

If special treatment is necessary, it will be scheduled during the time that's best for your body. In trying to determine a good time, your physician may be consulted.

The number of x-rays will be limited, but sometimes x-rays are necessary. Dental radiographs are important diagnostic tools that we use to help detect dental problems.

Also, the amount of radiation produced in a dental x-ray is small, exposure is brief, the x-ray beam is narrow, and a lead apron protects your abdomen.

Don't neglect your health during pregnancy. Those nine months are a time when your body is more prone to dental problems.

Trash Collection

There will be no trash collection in family housing areas Monday. Trash normally picked up Monday will be picked up Tuesday. Areas normally scheduled for pick up Tuesday will be picked up Wednesday. For more information, call 545-4749.

COMMUNITY BRIEFS

Child care class — Anyone providing child care in post quarters must be certified as a family child care provider. The next certification class will be July 19 to 27. Classes include cardiopulmonary resuscitation, first aid, business practices, child development, safety, fire prevention, preventive medicine, nutrition and child abuse prevention.

For more information, call 687-4038 or 544-1623.

Management association — The Fort Benning Management Association will participate in the annual Independence Day celebration Saturday from 2 to 9 p.m. on York Field in front of Infantry Hall. The FBMA needs volunteers for two-hour shifts. The proceeds will go toward the organization's academic scholarship program.

Call Myrtle Chalkley at 545-4539, 545-7742 or 568-7841 to volunteer.

Auction — The Defense Reutilization and Marketing Office will conduct an auction of government surplus property at 9 a.m. July 12 in Building 470 on 10th Mountain Division Road on Main Post.

The auction is open to the public and will include items such as clothing, household furniture, office furniture, office machines, vehicular parts, hardware and industrial equipment.

A three-day inspection period will begin Wednesday. Hours of viewing the property are 7:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. daily until 9 a.m. the day of the sale.

Hunt club — Stables, rental horses, trail rides, pony rides and riding classes are available at the Hunt Club on Marne Road.

New summer hours are Saturdays, Sundays and holidays from 8 to 11 a.m. and 5:30 to 8 p.m. Rentals are $12 an hour for non-members, $8 hourly for members. Sign up for guided trail rides each Sunday seven days in advance.

For information, call 689-3945.

Movies — In an attempt to solve the long lines during some features at the Main Post Theater, a new opening policy has been put into effect.

The doors will be open for ticket and snack stand sales 30 minutes prior to the scheduled showings on Mondays through Thursdays.

On Fridays through Sundays, the doors will open one hour before shows after 1 p.m. Shows will start at the posted time.

For more information, contact Ellie Therrell at 687-6939.

Wanted: junk cars — Let the National Kidney Foundation of Georgia remove your junk car free of charge.

Owners may donate a vehicle in any condition to the National Kidney Foundation of Georgia. In return, three things will happen. You'll get rid of an old car. You'll get a tax deduction. You'll keep patient and community service programs going. (Georgia has the highest rate of kidney disease of any state in the nation.)

Call Georgia's Kidney Foundation at (800) 633-2339. Arrangements will then be made for the removal of the vehicle.

Basic first aid training (youth): ages 8 to 12, July 12 from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., $15.

Cardiopulmonary resuscitation: July 28, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., $25.

Water safety instructor class: July 15, 16, 22 and 23 from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., $83. (Must possess current lifeguard certification, cardiopulmonary resuscitation for the professional rescuer certification and first aid certification.)

Introduction to disaster services: J no fee.

Damage assessment: July 13, 1 to 5 p.m. (Prerequisite: Introduction to Disaster course), no fee.

Emergency Assistance to families: July 14, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. (Prerequisite: Introduction to Disaster course), no fee.

Standard first aid progressive: July 29, 9 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., $20.

For registration information, call 545-5194 or 545-5117.

Youth basketball — Youth Services Main Gym, Building 1055, will be conducting basketball tournaments during the summer months. Registration will be at 12:30 p.m. and games will start at 1 p.m.

Saturday — Preteen (9 to 12 years old) 2-on-2 basketball tournament

July 10 — Teen 3-on-3 basketball tournament

July 17 — Teen 4-on-4 basketball tournament

July 24 — Preteen (9 to 12 years old) free-throw contest

Aug. 7 — 5-on-5 basketball tournament

Aug. 12 — Preteen (9 to 12 years old) 21-point contest

Participants must have valid military identification or Youth Services card to enter the tournament. For more information, call 545-3070 or 545-3540.

Asthma Day Camp — Registration is now being accepted for the American Lung Association's Asthma Day Camp, which is open to any child between 6 and 12 with asthma.

The camp will be at Columbus College July 12 to 16. Children will have the opportunity to do regular day camp activities and will learn about asthma.

For information, call 569-1098.

School examinations — It is mandatory that any child entering Georgia schools for the first time be given a dental, eye and hearing examination.

The results of the exam will be entered on a Georgia Department of Human Resources Certification of Ear, Eye and Dental Examination, which must be presented to the school upon enrollment.

For a screening appointment, call 544-3350 at Martin Army Community Hospital or your county health department. The child's immunization record must be up to date. Parents should take the immunization record to the hospital or health department at the time of the screening exam.

For more information, call Cathy Hatfield at 544-1503.

COMMISSARY CORNER

Fort Benning Commissary

Single military members who think commissaries are for married people, think again.

Lots of different sizes and kinds of products are available to suit your lifestyle.

A full line of health and beauty aids and deli and produce items for parties are available.

And now that the summer days are here, picnic supplies and suntan products are available.

In July, a special Customer Appreciation Sale is going on, with special sale prices in effect giving you savings of from 20 to 60 percent off already low sale prices on hundreds of items. You don't have to buy a lot to save a lot!

What are the benefits of Commissary shopping?

Commissary patrons buy at cost. When the Defense Commisary Agency buyers negotiate for merchandise prices, that merchandise is then sold at that price.

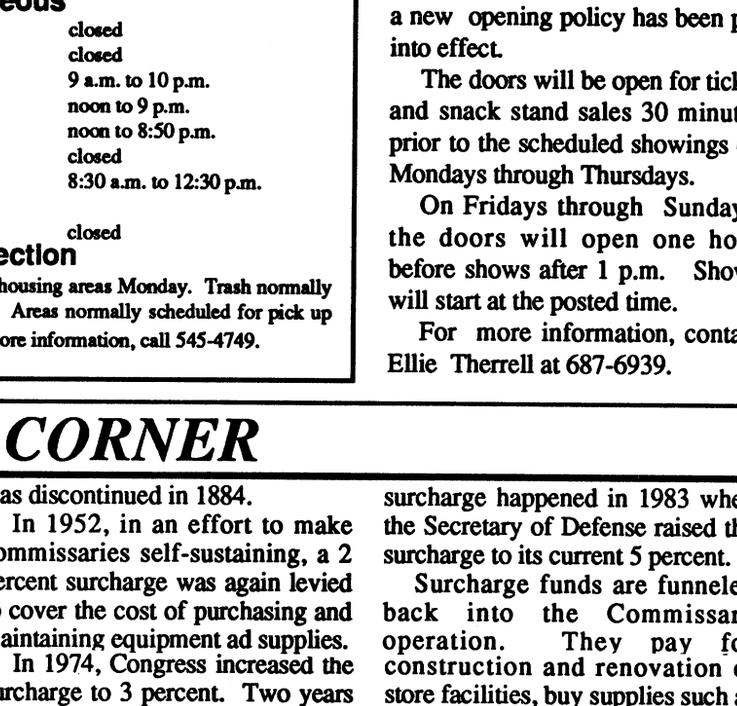
For example, an item bought by the Defense Commissary Agency for 50 cents is then later sold to the customer for 50 cents.

No markup (profit) is made and no taxes are charged — only the 5 percent surcharge is added and that percentage is used to construct, renovate and operate commissaries.

Studies show patrons save an average of 25 percent on their grocery shopping by making all their grocery purchases at the Commissary instead of a commercial grocery.

What is the Commissary surcharge?

The first surcharge began in 1879 when Congress established a 10 percent surcharge to help pay spoilage and transportation cost. It was discontinued in 1884.



In 1952, in an effort to make commissaries self-sustaining, a 2 percent surcharge was again levied to cover the cost of purchasing and maintaining equipment ad supplies.

In 1974, Congress increased the surcharge to 3 percent. Two years later, another one percent was added.

The latest increase to the surcharge happened in 1983 when the Secretary of Defense raised the surcharge to its current 5 percent.

Surcharge funds are funneled back into the Commissary operation. They pay for construction and renovation of store facilities, buy supplies such as paper bags and packing materials and buy and maintain equipment used at the stores.

PET OF THE WEEK

This Siamese cat is looking for a home. She is approximately 2 years old.

For more information, contact the Veterinary Services Office in Building 265 at 545-1127. Hours of operation are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:30 am. and 12:45 to 3 p.m. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

If you have lost a pet, check the stray impoundment facility in Building 283. Stray pets are given three working days to be claimed from the time they are picked up by animal control personnel.

If the pets are not claimed, they become government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Pet owners are reminded that they are required to register their pets and update their records when changes occur.

Label reading ensures healthy eating

By Sarah Van Eden
Martin Army Community Hospital

Nutrition labeling can help you make wise food choices as you begin to reduce your intake of saturated fat, cholesterol, sodium and sugar to reduce the risk of disease and in weight control.

An important part of the food label is the list of ingredients. Listed below are generally acceptable and unacceptable ingredients:

Acceptable Ingredients:

Carob powder, cocoa, corn oil, cottonseed oil, diglycerides, hydrolyzed ingredients, monoglycerides, nonfat dry milk solids, safflower oil, sesame oil, skim milk, soybean oil, partially hydrogenated, sunflower oil

Unacceptable Ingredients:

Bacon fat, beef fat, butter, chicken fat, *chocolate, real, chocolate, imitation, *cocoa butter, coconut, coconut oil, cream and cream sauce, egg and egg yolk solids, hardened fat or oil, hydrogenated fat or oil, lard, meat fat, milk chocolates, palm kernel oil, pork fat, shortening, turkey fat, vegetable fat, vegetable oil, vegetable shortening, whole-milk solids

Ingredients are listed on a label in descending order of amount; that is, the main ingredient is listed first and the smallest last. Read the list of ingredients on nutrition labels. If all the ingredients listed are acceptable, the product is acceptable. Sometimes the amount of an unacceptable ingredient is low enough so the product overall is acceptable.

When shopping choose 100 percent pure fruit juices, rather than "drinks", "punches" or "blends" which may be mainly sugar, water and flavorings. Buy skim or lowfat milk products including cheese which should have no more than 5 grams of fat per serving. Look for meat labeled "select" or "choice" which contains less fat than "prime" cuts.

Bread that is whole grain should have "whole wheat flour" as its first ingredient to ensure that the bran or wheat germ has not been removed.

With frozen entree choices, it is best to choose one with less than 13 grams of fat, 400 calories and 800 milligrams of sodium.

For more information concerning nutrition labels, contact the Nutrition Clinic at Martin Army Community Hospital at 544-1542.

*Acceptable for occasional use.

Beware! It could be palm or coconut oil.

CRIME WATCH

Military Police Activity

The following entries were extracted from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from June 1 to 7. Such entries may be incomplete and are not the adjudication of the guilt or innocence of any person.

This week's hot topic concerns safety restraints for children under 4 years of age. Georgia Code 40-8-76 requires every driver who transports a child 4 years of age and younger in a passenger car, van, or pickup truck, to provide for the protection of the child with a child restraining system approved by the U.S. Department of Transportation. Violators are subject to a fine of up to $25.

• A staff sergeant was charged with a traffic accident, driving under the influence of alcohol, speed excessive for road conditions, carrying a pistol without a license and failure to register a firearm. A search of his car by the responding MPs revealed two loaded weapons under the front seat. Additionally, his blood alcohol level registered .29 grams on the intoximeter, well above the legal limit.

• A captain reported that persons unknown entered an unsecured office and removed a lap top computer.

• A sergeant was charged with disobeying a lawful order and assault after he entered his quarters, from which he had been restricted, and assaulted his wife.

• A civilian was charged with larceny of private property, defective headlights, no license in possession and illegal transfer of license plates.

• A lieutenant reported that persons unknown stole his bicycle by breaking the cable that secured it to the bicycle rack.

• A specialist was charged with assault and communicating a threat after he hit a female soldier in the face and threatened to throw her over a balcony.

• A lieutenant reported that persons unknown damaged his convertible by breaking both rear view mirrors, the center console and the glove box, and removing 45 compact discs and the case.

• A private first class was charged with rape after he forced a woman to have intercourse against her will in his barracks room.

• A specialist was charged by civil authorities with a single vehicle fatality after he lost control of his truck and flipped it several times. A private first class who was riding in the bed of the truck was thrown from the truck and killed. Charges of driving under the influence of alcohol against the specialist are pending the results of a blood alcohol test.

• This week's booby prize is awarded to the private who was charged by civil authorities with driving without a valid license. He was the victim of a traffic accident when his car was struck by another vehicle. After he could not produce a driver's license to the responding police officer, a computer files check revealed that his license had been revoked eight months earlier.

Other activities included 12 traffic accidents and no reports of shoplifting at facilities on post. There were three cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, 21 cases of larceny of private property and four cases of larceny of government property.

Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best — Give Crime Arrest." Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5223 or the "Crime in Progress" line at 545-2222.

ASK THE JUDGE

Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Q: I recently transferred to Fort Benning from Fort Lewis, Wash. We have three cars — one in my name, one in my wife's name, and one in both our names. My wife is from Texas, and I am from Louisiana. My wife bought her car in Texas before our marriage, and it has a current Texas tag.

I bought mine in Louisiana, and it has a current Louisiana tag. The one in both names we bought in Washington state, and it has a current Washington tag. Now that we're here, what do we have to do, if anything, about the tags on our cars?

A: Georgia law requires that any vehicle owned and operated by a nonresident in this state for a period of 30 days or more must be registered here.

The only exception to this requirement is when the vehicle is owned by a person in military service, stationed in Georgia under military orders.

A service member has the choice of either maintaining registration of the vehicle in his or her state of residence, or registering the vehicle here. The exception does not apply to a vehicle which is solely in the name of a service member's spouse.

Thus, in your case, your wife must register her vehicle in Georgia, unless, before the expiration of 30 days from the day you got here, she transfers all or half ownership in the car to you. If she does this, you then have the choice of registering either in Louisiana or Georgia.

The car that is in your name can continue to be registered in Louisiana or you may switch to Georgia. The car in both names should be registered in either Louisiana or Georgia.

The decision about where to register the vehicles is best made by looking at the taxes you might have to pay in your home state.

However, a service member does not have to pay ad valorem taxes imposed by the state where they are stationed.

In your case, you can register the cars that are in your name here without paying the tax imposed by Georgia. Remember though, the car must be either all or partially in the service member's name for the tax exemption to apply.

If you decide to register in Georgia, you will be required to obtain a Georgia title for the vehicle. Additionally, in order to qualify for the tax exemption, you have to provide proof of entitlement.

Usually, this is in the form of an affidavit that you sign, in which you swear that the vehicle is yours, that you are not a resident of this state and that you are stationed here under military orders.

The affidavit is acknowledged by either your commander or by the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate.

Additionally, the tag office requires a recent copy of your leave and earnings statement that shows what state you claim for residence.

Should you have any questions about registration requirements in Georgia, you should contact the Legal Assistance Division, located at Building 5, Main Post, corner of Vibbert and Sigerfoos. The telephone number is 545-3281.

TIPS FOR MAKING YOUR AD MORE EFFECTIVE

- Start Your ad with the item you are selling, service you are offering, or job title you are looking to hire.
- Be descriptive. The more information you provide to the reader, the better the responses will be to your ad.
- Use bold type, white space of decorative characters such as stars, to bring attention to your ad.
- Run your ad for an ample length of time. Remember, as soon as you get results, you can cancel at any time during regular business hours.
- Always include the price of your item.

Entertainers celebrate 'A Capitol Fourth'

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

Again, it's a weekend for holiday traditions to be observed ... including one that's as close as the nearest TV screen.

SPOTLIGHT

The event traditionally draws thousands of spectators to that location (with more than 350,000 expected this time), but millions more are likely to see it via Sunday's broadcast.

E.G. Marshall will return as host, and conductor Erich Kunzel will lead the National Symphony Orchestra once more.

However, each year's edition of the program is given a distinctive texture by the guest artists recruited for the occasion, and a broad range of performing styles is encompassed by the latest group: country-music legend Johnny Cash is scheduled to perform such hits as "Ring of Fire," then to join his wife June Carter Cash for a duet of "It Ain't Me Babe"; current country sensation Mary-Chapin Carpenter, who will render her Grammy-winning tune "Down at the Twist and Shout," among other songs; Rita Moreno, the only female performer to own all of the top awards in American entertainment (the Oscar, the Emmy, the Grammy and the Tony); and veteran pianist Peter Nero.

Also appearing on the show will be the Singing Sergeants of the U.S. Air Force, the U.S. Army Herald Trumpets, the Army's Old Guard Fife and Drum Corps, the U.S. Army Chorus and the U.S. Marine Band.

What: "A Capitol Fourth"
When: Sunday, 9 p.m. on PBS

This year's July Fourth concert in Washington will end with a salute to another band leader closely associated with the holiday: John Philip Sousa, whose music will be paid homage through such selections as "Semper Fidelis" and — of course — "Stars and Stripes Forever."

Deeming him "the greatest band master in history," Kunzel reflects that Sousa "was born on Eighth Street, I think, in Washington, D.C. At 26 years of age, he became the music director of the Marine Band at the White House; it had been a ragamuffin outfit before, without any precision, and he brought to it his expertise and made it what it is.

"It's fitting for this tribute to Sousa that we invited the entire United States Marine Band from the White House, which is called 'The President's Own,' and they'll join the National Symphony when we do that huge fireworks display on the mall. Of course, a lot comes before that."

Having backed such esteemed talents as Tony Bennett, Perry Como and Mel Torme during previous holiday galas, Kunzel says, "These artists get very little money to do these concerts, but that isn't the reason they come. They come to be part of a national celebration, and they are very much in awe of their positions as entertainers. "

U.S. Army Soldier Show entertains Fort Benning

By Lawrence K. Hughes
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The curtain went up Saturday for the 10th anniversary U.S. Army Soldier Show. Twenty-six soldiers make up the traveling troupe of singers, dancers and actors who arrived on a 44-passenger bus, a 16-wheel tractor-trailer and nine-passenger van. They departed Fort Belvoir, Va., in May to begin their two-continent, 21-state, 25,000-mile entertainment odyssey.

"Fort Benning Today" will bring you highlights of the event that showcased broadway, disco, rhythm and blues, pop, country-western, Disney movie themes, a gospel arrangement of the Hallelujah Chorus and a patriotic finale.

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel highlights post events and lists classified advertisements on the Fort Benning Community Bulletin Board featuring news and music from Soldiers Radio Satellite Network.

If you are a subscriber to Fort Benning Cable, you can watch USAIC TV on Channel 3, 24 hours a day. Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:26, 7:56, 8:26 and 8:56 on WLTZ TV-38.

For more information or to make suggestions, write or call the Broadcast Section of the Public Affairs Office, Infantry Hall, Room 602, 545-2201.

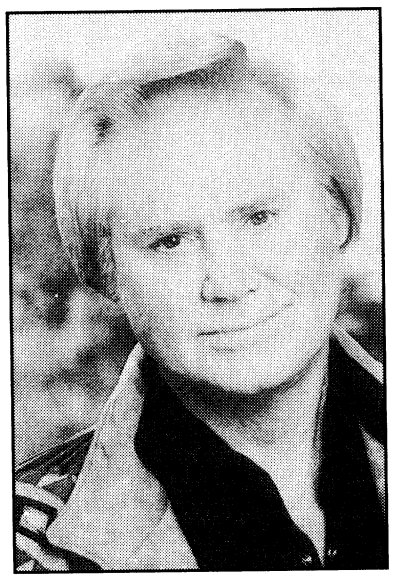
Silver Moon to host singer George Jones



Silver Moon

Classic country singer George Jones will perform at the Silver Moon in Buena Vista, Ga., at 10 p.m. July 9.

Acclaimed worldwide for the last 30 years as the greatest country singer alive today, Jones' multi-award winning performance of "He Stopped Loving Her Today" was voted the number one country song of all time. Among his classic records are "White Lightnin' " and "She Thinks I Still Care". Jones was voted the Country Music Association's Best Male Vocalist in 1962 and 1963. Nearly two decades later he was still accepting awards for Male Vocalist of the Year and Song of the Year. Formal recognition of Jones' greatness came in 1992 when he was inducted into the Country Music Hall of Fame.

Today, Jones' concert dates are filled with thousands of young people who consider Jones hip and cool. Jones is admired and revered by today's hottest country stars. Randy Travis, Alan Jackson, Vince Gill and Garth Brooks are among the artists who are quick to point out Jones as a major influence on their music and careers.

Jones' life has often been likened to a country song. His first single from his latest MCA album "Walls Can Fall" tells it all. "I Don't Need Your Rockin' Chair" has become the definitive statement about Jones' life and career.

Park puts city folk back in the saddle

Georgia State Parks and Historic Sites

The "City Slickers Overnight Trail Rides" at Franklin D. Roosevelt State Park are a way to get away from the city and get back to nature. Horse lovers of all ages and abilities can trade in their cars for the weekend to take this guided trail ride across majestic Pine Mountain on Saturday, sleep out under the stars on Saturday night and then head back down Sunday morning.

Riders enjoy views of Pine Mountain Valley, which is known for some of the most beautiful scenery in Georgia, and the clean, crisp mountain air is a change from the car exhaust fumes of the city. Experienced trail guides lead each trip and are there to answer questions or handle any problems.

This trail ride adventure costs $60 per person, including horse and shelter, but participants need to bring their own food. Rides are scheduled for the second Saturday of each month from April through December. Pre-registration is required two weeks prior to date of each ride. Riders under the age of 18 must be accompanied by an adult.

In addition to the rides and rentals offered by F.D. Roosevelt State Park, Hard Labor Creek State Park near Rutledge, Ga., also has facilities that provide horseback riding enthusiasts a scenic environment for their activities.

Franklin D. Roosevelt State Park is located just off Interstate 85 near Callaway Gardens. For more information on this program or to preregister, call (706) 628-4533.

'93 Army Soldier Show shines

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

The crowd occupying Sand Hill Theater No. 3 June 26 was treated to a brilliant light show that set the stage for equally brilliant performances of the 10th annual U.S. Army Soldier Show at 2 and 8 p.m.

The bedazzling opening act "I Need a Hero" set the standard for the night of the audience's excitement. Adding to the excitement of the crowd was the large presence of trainees from the Infantry Training Brigade at the 2 p.m. show.

The performance covered the whole spectrum of music variety scale — broadway and disco medleys, rhythm and blues, pop, country, Disney movie themes, a gospel arrangement and a finale of patriotic songs that had the crowd on its feet.

In a special arrangement with the National Crime Prevention Council, McGruff the Crime Dog also made an appearance with his anti-drug message delivered musically for the children present.

The 90-minute show was a presentation of the Army's Community and Family Support Center Entertainment Division. Entrance to the show was free.

The 26 members of the crew and cast are all active duty soldiers gathered from Europe, Korea, Alaska, Panama and throughout the country. These soldiers are normally cooks, truck drivers, medics or mechanics, but were selected for the cast after auditioning for the show.

The soldiers/entertainers will travel more than 15,000 miles and visit more than 50 Army installations across America and Europe during their tour.

The show's birthplace was the 1984 Association of the United States Army convention, where the first show was performed. The show went on to perform at the National Theater for former President Ronald Reagan's second inauguration.

This year the show opened to a packed house at Fort Belvoir, Va., where the audience included the acting secretary of the Army.

The evolution of the show has evolved to an international, Army-wide tradition of entertainment.

The troupe's itinerary comes under management of the U.S. Army Community and Family Support Center in Alexandria, Va.

State parks offer activities for July Fourth

Georgia Dept. of Natural Resources

The Georgia State Parks have a variety of events planned to celebrate Independence Day.

Florence Marina Park to celebrate Saturday

Florence Marina State Park will host a day of celebration Saturday. The day's activities will kick off at 10 a.m. and last until 9:30 p.m.

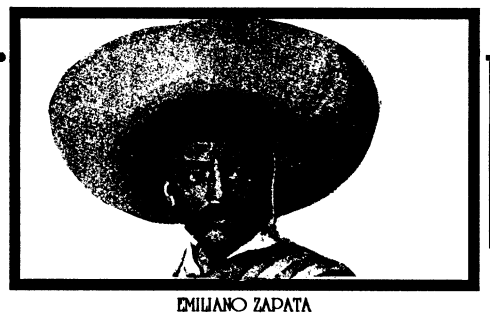
Featured entertainment includes country music by Plain Country, gospel music by the Kingdom Express, line dancing by the Sierra Rose Dance Club, and clogging by the Rainbow Cloggers.

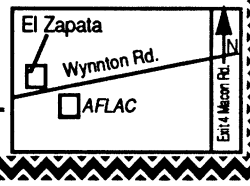
Park staff will offer a tour of the Rood Creek Mounds at 10 a.m. and a movie and hay ride at 8 p.m. Admission to this program is free but remember to pick up your $2 park pass for each vehicle.

For those who wish to get away for the weekend, Florence Marina offers cottages, camping, fishing, boat rentals, tennis, swimming, miniature golf, picnic tables and the Kirbo Interpretive Center. Florence Marina State Park is located 16 miles west of Lumpkin on Highway 39.

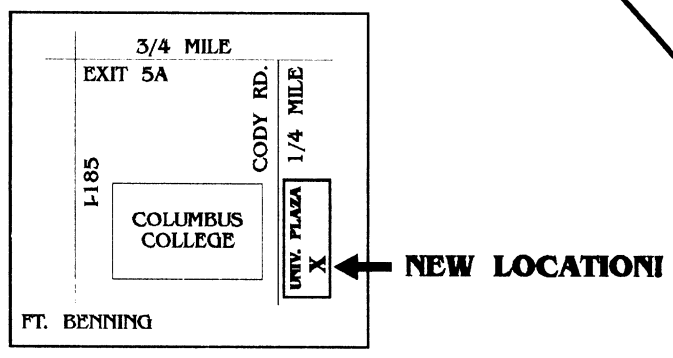
For further information, contact the staff at (912) 838-4706 or (912) 838-4244.

Providence Canyon plans extravaganza





Activities have been planned for Saturday Sunday and Monday at Providence Canyon State Park.



Activities will begin at 10 a.m. each day at the Interpretive Center with patriotic face painting. Special entertainment Saturday will feature cloggers, line dancers and gospel music beginning at noon. July Fourth will be filled with old fashioned fun, games and watermelon cutting. The program Monday will feature games and a scavenger hunt.

For further information, call the park office at (912) 838-6202.

All programs are free and open to the public. Visitors are reminded of the $2 parking fee required. The park is located seven miles west of Lumpkin, Ga. on Highway 39C.

'Cheers' relocates soldiers with smile

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

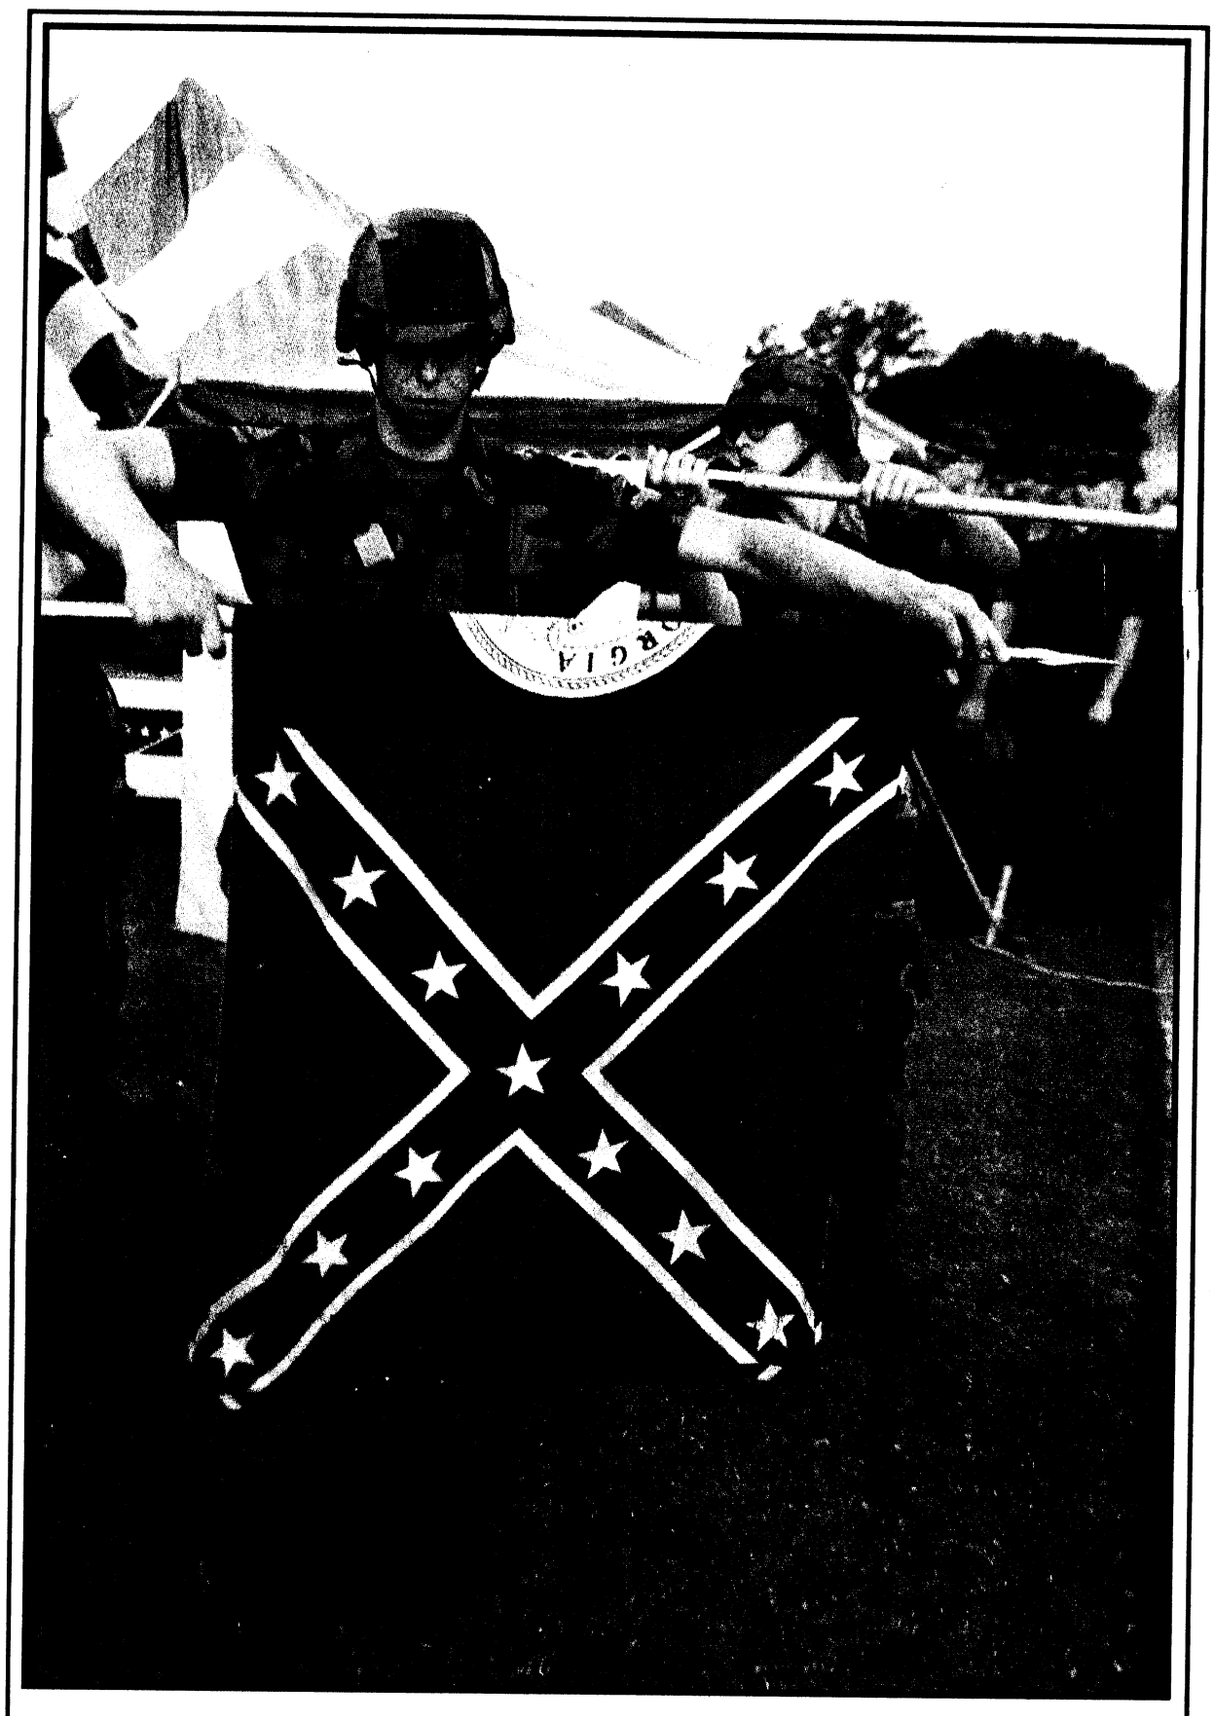
The Housing Referral Office has a new name - Community Home Finding Relocation and Referral Services — or CHRRS pronounced "Cheers."

According to Anna Wilson, CHRRS officer, the new name reflects an expanded mission, which includes two new computer services, the Home Estimate Program and Permanent Change of Station House Express.

Wilson said the first allows her office to help soldiers by discovering what house payment they can afford by feeding into the computer the Basic Allowance for Quarters, salary and bills.

The PCS House Express is a program to help those heading for another post by providing the phone numbers needed for that post, the BAQ and Variable Housing Allowance for that area and a profile of the typical costs for off-post housing there.

These are just a few of the services offered by Wilson's office in Building 2621 in Soldiers' Plaza.



CHRRS is also part of the in-processing briefings that soldiers new to Fort Benning go through everyday.

Newcomers needing off-post housing are given a map and a list of vacancies with some highlighted based on price, location, pets and any other requirements the soldier may have stipulated.

She noted that except for senior noncommissioned officers, there is a waiting list for on-post housing of about one year.

Soldiers in the rank of specialist or below must have a senior noncommissioned officer go over a Housing Adequacy Checklist with the soldier at the apartment or house. Then the company commander must sign the 36th Engr. Group changes hands

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Command of the 36th Engineer Group changed hands Wednesday during a 9 a.m. ceremony on York Field. Col. Dean A. Kershaw, formerly the engineer deputy chief of staff, U.S. Army South, Panama, took command from Col. Phillip R. Anderson.

Anderson took command of the 36th Engineer Group in July 1991. He commanded the 36th Engineer Group during its deployment to South Florida following Hurricane Andrew and to Somalia during Operation Restore Hope.

Anderson was commissioned a second lieutenant of engineers from the Virginia Military Institute in 1970. Since his commission, he has held a number of command and staff positions in the United States and overseas. He has a master's degree in civil engineering from the University of Illinois in Champaign/Urbana and a master's in international relations from Salve Regina College, Newport, R.I. His military schooling includes the Army Command and General Staff College and the Navy War College.

Among his awards and decorations are the Defense and Army Meritorious Service medals, the Army Commendation Medal, the Army Achievement Medal, all with oak leaf clusters. He has been awarded the Ranger Tab, Master Parachutist and Air Assault badges.

He and his wife, Elizabeth, have one daughter, Sarah.

Kershaw was commissioned a second lieutenant of engineers from the Virginia Military Institute in 1968 and holds a master's degree in engineering management from George Washington University. He has held a number of command and staff positions both in the United States and overseas, including command of the 326th Engineer Battalion, 101st Airborne Division at Fort Campbell, Ky. He had previously served with that battalion in Vietnam as a platoon leader and reconnaissance officer. He has attended the Engineer Officer Basic Course and the Armor Officer Advanced Course, Command and General Staff College and the National War College.

Among his awards and decorations are the Bronze Star, Air Medal, Meritorious Service Medal and Army Commendation Medal.

He is married to Maj. Branda M. Weidner, who is attending the Air Command and Staff College. His son, Spc. Dean A. Kershaw Jr., is serving with the 3rd Infantry Regiment (The Old Guard), and his daughter, Kimberly F. Kershaw, is a student-missionary in Toluca, Mexico.

36th to return to Somalia

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Forces Command has tentatively identified elements of the 36th Engineer Group to participate in a planned rotation of troops to Somalia.

The rotation is part of Operation Continue Hope.

No firm deployment date has been established; however, a general time frame is scheduled for August through September depending on the current world situation.

Units scheduled to deploy are from the 13th Corps Support Battalion, 36th Engineer Group.

The units and approximate number of soldiers deploying are: the 533rd Transportation Company, 145 soldiers; the 598th Maintenance Company, 210 soldiers; the 926th Medical Detachment, 10 soldiers; a platoon of the 608th Ordnance Company, 50 soldiers; and Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment of the Support Battalion, 65 soldiers.

Army idea programs keep quality high

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

The Army has suggestion programs to solicit ideas for saving resources and improving methods and living and working conditions.

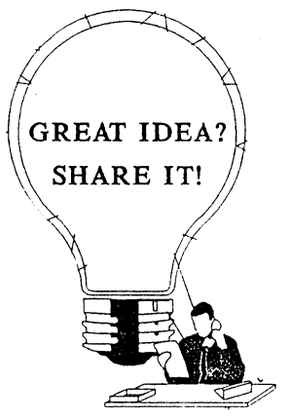
Training and Doctrine Command's "Good Ideas" program has become a repository for more than 40 proven innovations, according to program manager Howard McDonald.

The program reaches outside of TRADOC. It is available to all military services and it is being used by people as far away as Guantanamo Bay, Cuba and the the United Kingdom.

"DoD (the Defense Department) is working to develop computer conversion programs to make TRADOC's Good Ideas available to more people," McDonald said.

Currently ideas are logged and stored in bulletin boards on the professional office system. The boards are also accessible by electronic mail. Both systems are widely used by the Army, but not yet by all sister services. McDonald collects ideas from various sources — TRADOC and other Army installations, sister services, the public sector and even fraternal and community groups.

When those changes have TRADOC and Armywide implications, McDonald adds them to the Good Ideas collection.



"There's a key point to remember about Good Ideas. They are being used by organizations. They work," he said.

The Good Ideas PROFS bulletin boards have one section of the most recently attained ideas. The other sections contain all the ideas gathered since the program began.

"People should look at the older ideas, as well," McDonald said. "There may be actions there thatpreviously they had no need for or some restrictions wouldn't allow them to use. Now they can."

McDonald knows the ideas are used and gives examples.

Early in 1992, an idea he placed in the system concerned a TRADOC installation that had made similar arrangements with federal prisons in its state, and four others are in the midst of adopting the program.

One installation saved about $1 million through the prison labor program.

Local problem solving programs are Army Ideas for Excellence Program and the Total Army Quality Opportunity for Improvement Form, said Sarah McLaney, Army Communities of Excellence coordinator here.

With the AIEP, also known as the suggestion program, anyone can submit an idea, if it has been implemented or not. Ideas should be given to Twyla Shimizu, suggestion coordinator for AIEP.

McLaney said that monetary awards are sometimes given out in the AIEP program when ideas are adopted.

11th welcomes new commander

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The 11th Infantry Regiment is scheduled to get a new commander today during a change of command ceremony at 9 a.m. on York Field in front of Infantry Hall, Building 4.

Col. Walter Wojdakowski will succeed Col. Lawrence White Jr. as commander of the 11th Infantry Regiment.

Wojdakowski has served in various command and staff positions during his Army career.

He commanded the 2nd Armor Division's 3rd Battalion, 41st Infantry Regiment (Tiger Brigade) at Fort Hood, Texas, and in Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm from 1989 to 1991, and he was senior infantry task force combat trainer at the National Training Center, Fort Irwin, Calif., until July 1992.

Wojdakowski is a graduate of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., and has a master's degree in business administration from the University of Alaska and a master of military arts and sciences from the Command and General Staff College.

His military education also includes the School of Advanced Military Studies. He is a member of the National Honor Society Phi Kappa Phi.

He and his wife, Candy, have two children.

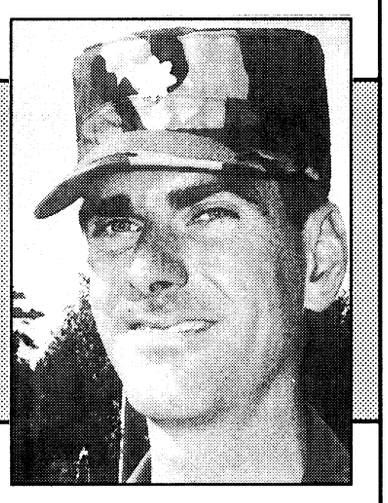
VARIOUS VOICES

Whom would you select as person of the century and why?



Spc. Philip Delzatto, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 11th Infantry Regiment —"I would pick Brig. Gen. Hendrix because he is the most outstanding general officer. He takes notice and makes a difference on Fort Benning in every soldiers' life."

Pvt. 1 Patrick McVeen, 75th Ranger Regiment — "I would pick Stephen King because he's given me a lot of thoughts."

Debbie Ray, family member — "I would pick my grandparents because they endured a lot. They lost two kids and lived through the depression."

Maj. Barry Neal, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 11th Infantry Regiment — "I believe it's a toss up between John Fitzgerald Kennedy and George Bush. Both men were in office during a volatile time and the decisions they made were pivotal."

Darnell Gillespie, Community Service — "I would choose Mother Theresa. She's done a lot to foster peace for humanity."

Pfc. Tu Lam, 30th Adjutant General Battalion (Reception) — "I think Bruce Lee because he always had a positive outlook on life."

Holiday brings god-forsaken reunion

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

COMMENTARY

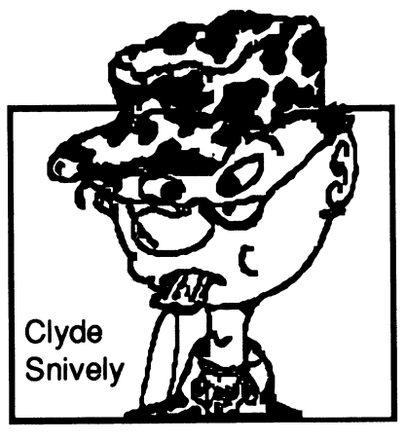
Kolomoki Indian Mounds.

It's a safe bet that not one of you readers have ever heard of the place. It might not be quite south of hell, but it is south of the gnat line.

It's also the place the Nagar family has its reunion every year, the first Sunday after Independence Day.

My wife is a Nagar, so you can guess what the implications for me are.

It means getting in line behind a bunch of good ole boys and their good ole gals and their not-even-close to good brats and tooling down Highway 27 through Lumpkin, and Cuthbert, then over to Highway 39 and just in the vicinity of Fort Gaines, nestled on the Chattahoochee River is this park.



It has an abandoned putt putt golf course, a swimming pool where all sorts of exotic diseases reside and a bunch of pavilions where other just-as-nutty families come for their reunions.

Everyone brings food. One farmer brings a 72-inch fan and after the introductions (I'm introduced as "Emma's friend," by her father to people I'll forget as soon as the next one is introduced) someone says the blessing and we all go through the line to load our plates with more food than we can possibly eat.

Then we sit down and try to eat. I say "try to eat," because your mouth has other things to do than chew food. It's also being used to exhale small puffs of air out of each corner to shoo away the persistent gnats.

That's why the fan is there — to keep the gnats and flies from landing — but only so many people can sit next to the fan.

After three hours of sitting around in your sweat-soaked shirt, you figure you've got enough time in to leave without being ostracized, but that's when Uncle Curtis and Aunt Ella will invite you over to the farm where "just close family" will meet some more and eat some more.

As a Yankee who tries to look at things logically, I will never understand why this family is determined to hold its reunion in such a god-forsaken place at the peak of discomfort season. Ask, and the answer's always the same — "We've always done it that way."

Well hush my puppies. I'd sure hate to change anything that brings so much misery to people.

Much to Emma's credit, she hates going even more than I do. But when you come from one of those patriarchal Southern families, it's difficult to say "no," without a humongous guilt trip being laid on you.

So what's the point?

The point is, I think a first sergeant in the Marine Corps had a great idea.

He said soldiers should be offered bonuses if they agree to stay single throughout their first enlistment. That way the government saves money, the soldier has a chance to get his finances in order (at least he is making more money) and without the worries of wondering if the spouse is being properly cared for, the soldier is more deployable and trainable.

So I support that. And at the very least I would vote for the soldier to remain single at least until he has orders for a new assignment.

Then he, or she, can marry, then move away from the in-laws and live happily ever after, or at least until the next lengthy deployment.

Drawdown leaves soldiers feeling helpless

By Linton Holsenbeck
Fort Carson, Colo., Mountaineer

COMMENTARY

The restructuring of the Soviet Union and sickness of the world economy are forcing painful change on almost every nation. The United States, while not the most deeply affected, has not been spared the difficult challenges of change.

Our Army feels these changes acutely. At the heart of these changes is the "drawdown."

Leadership, and the climate in which it occurs, is a critical factor in determining how organizations react to change. This is important to know, because one typical reaction to change is a feeling of helplessness. Many of the forces pushing change are outside the control of leaders at installation level.

However, while leaders cannot stop those forces or the change they bring, they are definitely not helpless. Our capacity to react, adjust and grow stronger and wiser through these changes is very much within the control of our leaders.

Today, the odds of any given captain making it to a 20-year retirement appear speculative. At this level there is a growing perception that, "If I make one mistake, I'm out." True or not, the perception makes its impact felt down the chain on the lieutenants and junior sergeants who also face dwindling prospects of an Army career.

In this setting, peers and hard-charging subordinates may be seen as competitors, not to be entirely trusted and certainly not to be allowed an edge. This undermines horizontal cohesion and peer support, just when the stresses of uncertainty and rising standards are greatest. Communication across the chain diminishes because "knowledge is power" and provides an edge in the race.

One dares not let superiors, who should be potential mentors, see one's mistakes and uncertainties. Mistakes are covered up, and blame is shifted.

Power is shifted up the chain as leaders at each level fear taking the consequences for subordinates' mistakes. An "invisible wall" develops between junior and senior leadership.

Senior leaders become more aggressive in efforts to discern what is really going on in the organization. These harder looks often uncover some of what has been covered up, prompting senior leaders to redouble efforts to control what happens "down chain."

Junior leaders are increasingly disempowered. Their response is apathy, cynicism and distrust, especially if they feel they will face the "RIF" anyway. Communication is further diminished.

In this environment, mentoring becomes impossible, positive leadership dwindles and a "zero-defects" mentality takes its place. Soldiers are categorized "good" or "bad" according to often unpublished, unstated and unevenly applied criteria.

Any soldier with a problem becomes a "problem soldier" and is tossed onto the discard pile.

Culling the force can be healthy.

But if it's done in a rush, by vaguely defined rules, without care and compassion, "good" soldiers can easily become tomorrow's throwaways. That is what many good soldiers fear.

When the belief takes hold that the chain of command doesn't care about soldiers, cohesion dissolves. "Every man for himself" and "us against them" become the soldier's guiding principles.

What can be done to avoid such a "meltdown" disaster? First, we must acknowledge that it can happen.

The personal, face-to-face brand of leadership has proven itself over and over in battle. Bureaucrats and paper rats don't lead: they only administer.

Competent, caring and honest leadership exhibited through continuous meaningful communication is the most resilient armor against meltdown. It is vital to make maximum proactive use of Army resources, such as transition programs, to help soldiers and families adapt productively to change.

Medical staffs can offer organizational assistance through consultation, training and workshops on stress and stress reactions.

The Army of tomorrow will be leaner and probably even better than today's Army. Many of us won't be around, but we can serve our country by contributing to the Army of tomorrow. Let us act now in a way we can point to with pride in the future.

36th Group commander says goodbye to unit

By David Greer
36th Engineer Group

Col. Phillip Anderson, commander of the 36th Engineer Group, passed the group colors to incoming commander, Col. Dean Kershaw, during a change of command ceremony on York Field Wednesday.

Anderson assumed command of the 36th July 3, 1991 having completed an assignment at Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers Europe, Belgium.

Before assuming command of the 36th, Anderson said he was familiar with the engineer mission of the group having visited and worked with them in 1986 as a battalion commander.

"I was generally familiar with the engineer mission but I did not have an appreciation for the diversity of the organization here at Fort Benning and the capabilities they had to do combat, combat support and combat service support missions," said Anderson.

"My biggest surprise about the group was that almost every unit in the group had deployed during Desert Shield and Storm and had been critical in the success of those operations," he continued.

"I had never before commanded a unit with such diversity and the different range of missions that they had to be trained to perform at a moment's notice."

"This unit has confirmed to me," said Anderson, "that old adage that diversity can be a strength and certainly the 36th's strength lies in its diversity.

"It has the ability to task organize across a lot of different kinds of units to accomplish a lot of different missions — be it here in support of the installation or natural disaster missions like the relief effort following Hurricane Andrew or relief efforts and peace keeping missions in places like Somalia.

David Greer

Col. Phillip Anderson (right) hands an award to a soldier in his unit.

"The 36th is a versatile organization and it is capable of making contributions other than fighting and winning our nation's wars," said Anderson. "Those contributions are important so that the taxpayer gets the most bang for the buck. The taxpayer gets more than strictly a military organization with a limited capability, but instead a military organization with versatility to provide assistance to the nation or other nations."

About the soldiers of the 36th Anderson said, "these troops are the best I've seen in 23 years. There are male soldiers, female soldiers, young, and mature soldiers. They represent 105 military occupational specialities.

"They are dedicated, well trained and mission-focused. The majority are self-starters and look to do well. I feel very good about the soldiers of the 36th Group," Anderson continued.

"The change of command is hard for me because it is hard to say goodbye, but I certainly want to thank and recognize the families and all the soldiers for their contributions and support they have given me over the last two years," said Anderson.

IDEAS: Programs help quality of life

Form should be available through your office. Persons should fill out forms describing problems, and suggested solutions. Forms should be given to supervisors to correct the problems, said Annette Parker, Total Army Quality coordinator.

Ideas submitted through an OIF or the suggestion program are sent by Shimizu to the Good Ideas program every three months if the idea was implemented on post.

McLaney annually compiles ideas from major commands and directorates and sends them to Sharing Good News, a TAQ program at the Department of the Army level.

Ideas submitted may have already been implemented or not, McLaney said.

The Sharing Good News ideas are collected from all posts and combined in the Sharing Good News booklet that is distributed to all posts. In that way, efficiency ideas are shared.

The main difference between these projects, McLaney said, is that in the Good Ideas project, ideas must have already been tested for its legality, feasibility and must have already been put into use.

"It's a continuous improvement program," said Parker. "That's what we want to do is to continue improving everything we do."

Persons interested in submitting an idea to the AIEP or Good Ideas, can call Shimizu at 545-2610.

CHRRS: Housing office gets new services

checklist.

She said all of this is to ensure that the soldier has an adequate place to live so that job performance will not be affected.

With a staff of three in the office, CHRRS is constantly busy, Wilson said. During the summer, they may see up to 100 people a day.

Counseling time varies because some need more assistance than others.

"A smile is important because having a pleasant office makes a good first impression during the stressful time of moving," she said.

The same assistance is provided to Department of Defense civilians. She expects this may increase with base closures.

Wilson has been in the Housing Division for 11 years and in this office for eight years. "We just want soldiers to have adequate, quality, affordable housing."

Anyone with a rental unit can call and get on the vacancy list if the property meets standards. Real estate companies update their rental vacancies with them once a week.

If there are any problems, CHRRS acts as a mediator between the tenant and the landlord.

Wilson said that her office is the first stop for soldiers having problems getting an air conditioner repaired or if they can't get a deposit back after trying on their own.

If it's a legal problem she can't answer, she contacts the Staff Judge Advocate's Office.

She considers settling these disputes a challenge. Making both sides happy is job satisfaction.

Wilson works closely with the Columbus Board of Realtors and the Columbus Apartment Association.

By maintaining a good rapport with the community she finds it easier to work with landlords when a problem does come up.

Powell sets watchwords for leaders

By Linda Lee
American Forces Information Service

Courage. Competence. Sacrifice. Caring. Selfless service.

These are the watchwords for a successful leader, whether military or civilian, said Army Gen. Colin Powell. The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff recently spoke about leadership at the Virginia Military Institute's Gen. George C. Marshall ROTC awards seminar.

"(Your personnel) must see you sacrifice for them. You must set the moral, ethical and the physical standards for them. You must always demonstrate your competence to them," Powell emphasized. "Train them, lead them competently. They must see you put yourself at risk for them. You must be a problem-solver for them.

"You must totally give your loyalty to them and no one else. You must care for them. You must always give them selfless service," he said, adding the young leaders must love their troops with "all your soul and all your mind. Nothing more will be asked of you. You must give nothing less than that."

Powell said Marshall personified leadership as a military officer and U.S. statesman. Marshall was Army chief of staff during World War II and masterminded the mobilization that built the victorious Army. But he was more than a warrior—he served as secretary of state and gave his name to the plan that rebuilt Europe after the war. He then served as secretary of Defense.

Powell also believes that without Marshall there might not have been the NATO alliance and the idea of containment might have been just words, not a policy that proved successful against the Soviet Union and Warsaw Pact. For his efforts, Marshall received the 1953 Nobel Peace Prize.

"Service, service, always service. It was the mission. It was the call of his country. The quiet power of the man lay in his utter selflessness," said Powell. His success as a leader could be found in his integrity, compassion and wisdom, his personal sacrifice and hard work and in his dignity.

Powell

The values that made Marshall a great American leader still apply today, Powell said. "They are the very real measure of a person's worth in every generation, and they will be for as long as there is a human civilization worth defending," he said.

Remember, he added, that upon no other institution does America depend more for values and integrity than it does the armed forces.

"That's why I charge each of you to fight for those values, to make them a part of your character, to make them a part of your life," he said.

Government workers to lunch and learn

Local 54, American Federation of Government Employees will conduct a lunch and learn program Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. This is a membership drive to recruit nonunion general schedule employees and to educate employees concerning benefits, as well as the importance of being a union member during this period of downsizing.

A meeting will be conducted in the regimental conference room, second floor, Martin Army Community Hospital, from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Tuesday and in Classroom 51, Infantry Hall, Wednesday from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Thursday the meeting will be held in the office of Local 54, Building 235, from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Local 54 will provide lunch and refreshments for attendees.

U-Do-It to suspend for overdue equipment

Customers who use the U-Do-It center loan equipment section will be placed on a 90-day suspension from borrowing equipment when equipment is more than 24 hours overdue, not properly cleaned or abused. This action is necessary in order to have equipment on hand and in good order for other customers.

Security awareness seminar set for July 28

A security awareness seminar will be July 28 in Infantry Hall, Classroom 5.

Conducted by the Directorate of Threat and Security along with the 902nd Military Intelligence Group from Fort Rucker, Ala., the seminar will cover topics such as technology transfer, Subversion and Espionage Directed Against the U.S. Army, counterterrorism and building and key security.

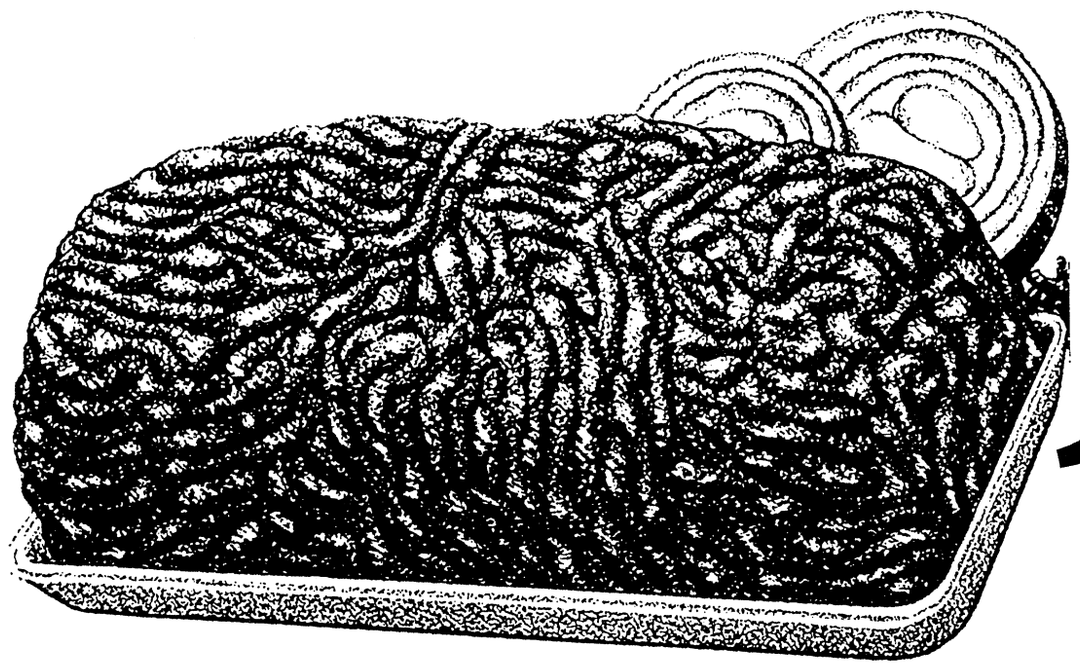
Agencies that will participate in the seminar are U.S. Customs, Federal Bureau of Investigation as well as the 902nd. Security managers are encouraged to attend, but all interested personnel are invited.

For more information, contact Pat Weekley at 545-4772.

Recruiter to visit post

A recruiter from North Georgia College will visit Fort Benning Thursday and July 16 to provide information about the Green to Gold program, financial aid and degree programs available at the college. Second Lt. Michael Acord will be available in Building 2611, Soldiers' Plaza, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. both days. For more information, call Acord at (706) 864-1801.

Controlled burning set



Controlled burning of woodland and range areas will take place through July 18. If weather permits, the following compartments may be affected: E-7, HHC, J-1, J-3, J-6, K-9, K-11, L-3, M-2, M-8, N-2, O-1, O-6, O-7, O-10, O-15, Q-2, R-1, T-2, T-5 and T-6.

Burning will occur in pine stands within these compartments to enhance endangered species habitat and training areas.

People using these areas for recreation must vacate the areas before 9:30 a.m. daily.

ARMY FAMILY ACTION PLAN ISSUES

Garrison Commander's Office

More than 100 issues and questions were presented for action, comment or status to the garrison and installation staff at the Fort Benning Family Action Symposium recently.

The issues were broken down into functional areas and each directorate, activity or area was asked to respond.

The following are the questions posed to the Directorate of Public Works and the answers provided by Kenneth Hankins, chief of the Housing Division.

Q: The local pet policy for family housing is not specific enough and needs revision.

A: U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 210-50, Section VI, Pet Control, contains two pages of very specific policy with respect to the species and number of pets allowed as well as owner responsibilities while pets are on the installation.

Dissemination of the information contained in USAIC Reg. 210-50 is not widespread. Copies of the pet policy could be distributed at public gatherings such as town hall and mayoral meetings.

Q: Why is there inadequate parking in family and single soldier housing areas (reserved parking)?

A: When most of the family housing quarters and barracks were constructed at Fort Benning, few soldiers had an automobile and fewer still had more than one.

Consequently, parking that was more than adequate then is inadequate now. All planned family housing renovation will include two parking spaces for each set of quarters.

Increases in the availability of barracks parking spaces are also planned for all barracks renovation projects.

Also, the post provides a dedicated storage area for oversize vehicles such as boats and recreational vehicles. The storage area is designed to prevent these vehicles from using critically short parking spaces in the housing areas.

DPW will continue to ensure that all renovation of housing areas provide an adequate number of parking spaces.

Q: What are the housing assignment rules, regulations, policies? How do they relate to the number and sex of family members? Can these rules be changed to reflect current demographics?

A: The housing assignment regulations are Army Regulation 210-50 and USAIC Reg. 210-5. Housing assignments are made according to 210-50, Chapter 3, paragraphs 3-3 through 3-9.

Quarters assignment is made based on several factors: assignment priority, rank category, bedroom eligibility and eligibility date (which determines waiting list number).

Number of bedrooms authorized is determined by the number, age and gender of the soldier's family members. Policies and regulations are changed as required to meet new housing requirements, changes required by demographics, and changes directed by higher headquarters.

Q: Can we upgrade quarters, furniture?

A: Quarters furniture cannot be upgraded in the continental United States because quarters furniture is not authorized.

The only exceptions to this policy are furnishings for general officers quarters. Appliances (ranges and refrigerators) are authorized in quarters and may be procured for replacement stockage as required.

Q: Can more phones be made available to single soldiers?

A: At this time, unaccompanied officer quarters and bachelor enlisted quarters have telephone jacks in each room and the assigned soldier can subscribe if he or she wishes. Visitor quarters have telephones provided and costs associated with the service are included in the billing.

Presently, telephone service to enlisted barracks is limited, but all future barracks renovations will include a telephone and cable television jack in each room. Adding jacks to existing rooms is impractical because of insufficient telephone trunk lines to support the load.

Coin and card operated public telephones are available in all locations and will be maintained in sufficient quantities to meet the demand.

DPW will ensure that telephone and cable television service is programmed for every barracks room undergoing renovation.

Q: What is the policy regarding senior noncommissioned officers living in the barracks who wish to move off post?

A: Current housing regulation AR 210-50 authorizes senior noncommissioned officers (sergeant first class and above) and officers to reside off post and receive basic allowance for quarters. Single soldiers in pay grades of staff sergeant and below are required to reside in the barracks.

Single soldiers, regardless of rank, are allowed to live off post and receive BAQ when adequate on-post quarters are not available. Because of the downsizing of the Army, barracks space should be available.

Q: Can speed bumps or rumble strips be installed in family housing to reduce speeding?

A: Speed bumps or rumble strips are not authorized and are prohibited by Army regulation.

This type of road fixture damages vehicles and hampers the efforts of emergency vehicles to reach the emergency area in an expeditious manner. Also, these devices are hazardous to cyclists.

Q: What is the quality assurance plan to ensure that housing inspectors are following current policies and regulations in a standardized and consistent manner?

A: Housing inspectors are kept up to date on policies and regulations on a daily basis by the lead housing inspector.

Also, the Family Housing management and supervisory team (including the branch chief, quarters management chief, lead housing inspector and DPW sergeant major) all perform spot checks to ensure standardized adherence to policies and regulations.

DPW will continue to monitor inspector performance, make corrections as required and ensure inspectors are properly trained and have the latest policy and regulatory information.

Q: How come senior NCOs and officers get three and four-bedroom houses without any children?

A: Department of Army regulations authorize junior NCOs without children or two children under the age of 6 years only a two bedroom set of government quarters.

Through a reallocation action, two-bedroom quarters from senior NCO and officer areas were made available for assignment to junior NCOs.

Also, DA regulations state that certain minimum bedroom requirements shall be extended to officer and senior NCO grades when existing facilities permit.

Q: Who is responsible for the upkeep and maintenance of Battle Park Apartments?

A: Battle Park Homes, consisting of 200 units, was built in the 1940s by a Columbus-based contractor to meet the housing need of Fort Benning's military. It has since been purchased by a private citizen and is managed by Park Properties, a local firm that manages other properties throughout the city.

Because Battle Park Homes is located on federally owned land, an agreement exists between Park Properties and Fort Benning that allows only military personnel to reside in the apartments. Currently, corporal and below receive priority consideration for the housing.

Q: Who is responsible for the upkeep of playgrounds in the housing areas?

A: A recent Directorate of Community Activities policy letter, distributed the week of April 12 to 16, directs the responsibility for maintenance and upkeep of playgrounds to the sponsor units and residents of those housing areas.

However, in cases of major maintenance, DPW shops will continue to provide limited support.

Q: What is the DPW fencing policy, especially in the vicinity to common use playgrounds?

A: Residents must obtain and complete a fence application from Family Housing prior to installation, to include a sketch drawing, type and dimensions of the proposed fence.

When the application is approved, the resident is permitted to install the fence, which is then checked by a Family Housing inspector. The inspection is performed to ensure proper installation of the fence and conformity to established dimensions to prevent overlapping into the neighbor's yard or blocking common areas.

Workshop to help vets

Army Career and Alumni Program

A Veterans Employment Assistance Program job seekers workshop for separating or retiring military personnel will be at Fort Benning July 23 from 8 a.m. to noon in Infantry Hall, Classroom 6.

The workshop is designed to assist separating or retiring military personnel and their spouses in finding meaningful employment.

Topics will cover how to effectively market your skills to industry, successful methods of producing a great resume, the best ways to find meaningful employment, solid hints on how to conduct yourself in an interview, how to negotiate for top salaries and how to get listed in a national data base of job seekers.

The Noncommissioned Officers Association is conducting the workshop, which is sponsored by the Army Career Alumni Program.

The workshop will be conducted by William G. Fitzpatrick, director of Career Programs for NCOA and co-author of the recently revised books "Does Your Resume Wear Combat Boots" and "Does Your Resume Wear Blue Jeans." Fitzpatrick is a retired sergeant major and member of the NCOA International Headquarters staff.

Those attending the workshop will receive help in completing the NCOA mini resume which will be collected and entered into a data bank of job seekers at NCOA headquarters, if the attendee desires. The information is made available to employers wanting to hire separating military personnel.

There are no membership requirements or grade restrictions, and there is no charge to any participant. Spouses are invited to attend.

For more information, call Maj. Charles Shelden at 545-4892.

Teams from 36th put undefeated records on line

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The 36th Engineer Group softball league may end up with two of the best teams on post in the playoffs. Both teams put their undefeated records on the line June 30. Only one would walk away a winner. Here is a wrap up of games played that night.

In game one, the 608th Ordnance Company "Rock Steady" took on the "River Rats" of the 586th Engineer Company and were blown out of the water 16-4, in five innings.

The River Rats opened the scoring in the top of the first inning scoring two quick runs without the benefit of a hit. Catcher Victor Dortch reached base on a throwing error by Rock Steady pitcher Harry Cordy to first allowing the runner to advance to second.

The next hitter, left fielder Jesus Llerena, smacked a grounder to third baseman Richard Morraco who overthrew first baseman Dennis Finn giving Dortch the chance to score from second and moving Llerena to third. A fly-ball out off the bat of left center fielder Mark Hobbs scored Llrena from third giving the River Rats a 2-0 lead.

Rock Steady took its first and last lead of the game in the bottom of the first inning scoring four runs to take a 4-2 advantage.

Moracco bounced a grounder to second baseman Matthew Noonan who forced Hernandez at second then threw to first to try and get Moracco, instead of getting Morraco he threw the ball over the head of first baseman Chris Sutton and Sanchez scored.

With two out, right fielder Michael Asmus singled, putting runners at the corners. A single to center by Finn scored Morracco from third tieing the game at 2 all, and put runners in scoring position at second and third.

Terry K. Ray/Special to The Bayonet

Second baseman Bradley Jones slammed a double to right center scoring both runners and giving Rock Steady a 4-2 lead. Catcher Timothy Tillis grounded back to pitcher Keith Shorter to end the inning.

In the third inning, the River Rats exploded for nine runs to take a commanding 11-4 lead. A lead-off walk to Dortch started the wheels in motion for the River Rats.

A single by Llerena and a double off the bat of Hobbs scored Dortch and put runners at second and third. Right center fielder Dale Jacobson drove in both runners with a single to right.

A single by Sutton put runners at first and second with no one out. Shortstop David Faulkner flied to center moving the runners up a base. Asmus tripled down the right field line scoring both runners and keeping the Rats in scoring position. Third baseman Carlos Kimbrough reached base on a fielder's choice by Morracco at third when he threw home trying to get the runner who had broken for the plate, but stopped halfway and returned to third.

A force at second on Kimbrough off the bat of Noonan scored Asmus from third. Shorter hit a shot down the right field line for the second triple of the inning scoring Noonan. Designated hitter Rodney Flowers ended the scoring binge with a two-run homer to center for the last two runs of the inning and an 11-4 bulge.

The River Rats added another run in the fourth and three more in the fifth to build the lead to 16-4. With the time limit of one hour hanging over their heads and the 10-run rule staring them straight in the eye, Rock Steady players closed out the bottom of the fifth with runners on second and third and hoping for a hit. A line shot to Sutton at first killed their hopes of a two-out rally.

The feature game of the evening went to the teams of Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, 13th Combat Support Battalion, (Warriors) vs. Headquarters Support Company, 43rd Engineer Combat Battalion (Bundy's) in a seven-inning fight for first place.

The Bundy's prevailed with a 6-5 nail biter. The Warriors jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the top of the first inning on back-to-back doubles by left center fielder Patrick Wright and third baseman Therron Hess and a two-out single by second baseman Luis Peterson. Right center fielder Steve Bolton flied to left for the third out of the inning.

The Bundy's were able to cut the lead in half at 2-1 on a double by centerfielder Noah McClinton and a throwing error by Wright that allowed McClinton to score.

In the bottom of the third inning, the Bundy's regained the lead on three two-out hits. Second baseman Wallace Terrell started things off with a single to center.

McClinton doubled to left putting runners at second and third. A single to left by left fielder Sheldon Leggett drove in the tieing and go-ahead runs.

The Warriors fought back to tie the game at 3-3, in the top of the fourth on a RBI single by Bolton.

The Bundy's once again not to be outdone fought back to take a 5-3 lead in the bottom of the fourth inning. A lead-off solo homer down the right field line off the bat of third baseman Tyrone Pearson put the Bundy's back in front 4-3.

A single and an error put runners at the corners with nobody out. Catcher Sam Eoff hit into a force play at second scoring pitcher Al Dyson from third for a 5-3 lead.

In the top of the fifth inning, the Warriors scratched out two runs to tie the game once again, this time at 5-5, on three doubles, two of them with two out. A lead-off double by designated hitter Keith Hawkins, then two quick outs put the Warriors on the brink of losing a scoring opportunity. First baseman Gladwyn Jones changed that when he sent a double to center to score Hawkins. Wright smacked a double to left center to score Jones and tie the game.

Terry K. Ray/Special to The Bayonet
Umpire Eli Barber calls Terrell Wallace of the Bundys safe at third as Therron Hess waits for the throw.

The final lead change for the Bundy's came in the bottom of the fifth inning on two singles and a force play. McClinton led off with a single, then Leggett singled to left to put runners at first and second.

A fly ball out to center by Shortstop Tommy Johnson moved the runner from second to third with one out.

First baseman Donald Payton slammed a grounder to shortstop Kenneth Glynn forcing Leggett at second and scoring McClinton with the go-ahead run.

No scoring was done in the sixth inning. The Warriors would have one more shot in the top of the seventh inning to make something happen. They almost did.

A lead-off single by catcher Jerome Belcher put the potential tieing run on base. Hawkins flied to right moving Belcher to second. Pinch hitter Forrest, hitting for right fielder Anderson Polite, grounded to Terrell at second moving Belcher to third with two out. Glynn came up to the plate and popped to Terrell at second to end the game.

"Its been building up to this all year," said Bundy's coach Charles Johnson. "The pressure was on both teams at the beginning of the game. It seemed like we handled the pressure a little better than they did."

Tae kwon do regional coming up July 16,17

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Second Annual Southeast Regional Military Tae kwon do Championships will take place July 16 and 17 at Briant Wells Field House. The regional is open to all active duty, family members and Department of Defense civilians who are registered with the U.S. Tae kwon do Union or a registered martial arts school.

A registration fee of $15 for one event or $20 for both Kyurugi (sparring) and Poomse (forms) can be paid up to the time of the event.

All participants must have their own safety equipment, which will consist of chest protector, head gear, shin and forearm guard, protective cup and mouthpiece. Safety equipment is mandatory.

There will be a referee and rules seminar July 16 along with a referee certification program.

Elimination bouts will begin promptly at 11 a.m. July 17. There will be first-, second-, and third-place medals for males and females in each weight class and each category.

The championships will be open to all belts from white to black ages 5 and up. Only black belts can qualify to compete in the National Military Tae kwon do Championships. In order to qualify for the nationals, entrants must be black-belt certified and must participate in a regional championship.

The top four finishers in each of the eight weight classes for the black belts will qualify to compete at the nationals.

All black belts and DoD civilians over the age of 17 must be registered with the U.S. Tae kwon do Union. Competitors must show a registration card at the time of registration. All color belts in the military do not have to be registered with USTU. All color belts under the age of 17 must be registered with the USTU or an accredited school. The annual USTU membership fee is $28.

For more information, contact Staff Sgt. Edward Givans at 545-5777 or 545-4300 or DSN 835-5777 or 835-2332.

Talladega driver works to shake 'July jinx'

Talladega Superspeedway

TALLADEGA, Ala.— On July 31, 1982, Davey Allison raced at Talladega Superspeedway for the very first time, in the ARCA 200, He finished third. He came back the following July, again in the ARCA 200, and won.

For the youngster from nearby Hueytown, the future was full of promise, much of which he has fulfilled. His list of accomplishments includes being Talladega's all-time race victories leader with eight.

Little did anyone suspect that he would not win again in July at Talladega for 10 years. But, this is, indeed, the case.

He will try again in the Fram Filters 500k July 24 and again July 25 in the DieHard 500.

Meanwhile, Allison has been a potent force in the month of May at the "World's Fastest Speedway," with three ARCA wins (1983, 1984, 1985), three Winston 500 triumphs (1987, 1988, 1992) and one IROC victory (1992).

The DieHard 500, which has been won by 20 other drivers, including his dad, Bobby, and his uncle, Donnie, has eluded Allison. In seven legitimate tries (he started the 1992 DieHard 500, but was relieved by Bobby Hillin after four laps), Allison has only one top five finish — a second in 1987.

"It's starting to bug me, or at least make me wonder what's going on, but there's not really an explanation for it," says Allison. "It's like trying to explain why that race has had so many surprise winners."

"I don't believe in jinxes," declared Allison. "Bad things happen because of lack of effort, lack of preparation and bad circumstances, like getting caught up in someone else's wreck, but I don't think there is any such thing as a jinx," declared Allison. "We have the team, the car and the engine to win any race on the circuit. We are capable of winning on any given day, and that includes the day the DieHard 500 is on."

"One of these days, we'll win the DieHard 500, and I'd just as soon do it now as later."

Allison will try again to win his first NASCAR Busch Grand National Series race in the second annual Fram Filters 500k on July 24, and his first DieHard on July 25.

Advance reserved seat tickets for both of these races are on sale now at the Speedway Ticket Office. For information and seat selection, call (205) 362-9064.

Coach to serve as grand marshal

Talladega Superspeedway

TALLADEGA, Ala. — Gene Stallings, head football coach at the University of Alabama, will serve as the Grand Marshal of the 25th annual DieHard 500 July 25 at Talladega Superspeedway.

After leading his unbeaten Crimson Tide to the undisputed National Championship in 1992, Stallings won numerous national "Coach of the Year" awards.

Pros say water clarity affects bass behavior

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

The bass pros say finding bass is usually more difficult than catching them, and one of the keys they use to locate fish is studying water clarity.

"I believe water clarity is really the number one factor in determining where bass are located," says Denny Brauer, professional angler. "Water clarity can tell you how deep bass will be located, whether they're active or tight to cover and even lure choice and color."

Surprisingly, he adds, water clarity is often overlooked by bass fishermen when they are hunting fish.

"The basic rule is the more dingy or off-colored the water, the more shallow bass will be," explains Brauer, "while the clearer the water is, the deeper the fish will be.

"At the same time, bass in dingy water tend to be more active, while those in clear water hold more tightly to cover.

"That's why, on some of the clear lakes we fish, we'll run great distances just to find off-colored water. We know those bass will usually be more active and aggressive.

Studying water clarity can also help a fisherman determine lure choice and color, adds the pro.

"In dingy, off-colored water where the bass are going to be more shallow, a lure like a spinnerbait or crankbait that makes a lot of vibration normally brings the best results," says Brauer. "In that type of water, gold and chartreuse are usually better colors, too.

"On the other hand, in clear water, smaller lures like plastic worms and jigs usually work better because the bass see them more readily. Thus, natural colors like browns and blacks are preferred."

Cloud cover and wind can occasionally have the same effect on fish as water clarity, notes Brauer.

"In clear water, wind really helps bring the bass shallow and make them more active," he says. "The ripple on the water cuts down on light penetration and the bass leave the heavy cover and start roaming more.

"Cloud cover can also be a plus in clear water, because it seems to give the bass a sense of security. They move about more and become more active.

"Dingy, off-colored water should not be confused with muddy water, cautions Brauer. Extremely muddy water, in which a lure cannot be seen a foot below the surface, frequently has the opposite effect and makes bass extremely inactive.

"When you have to fish really muddy water, look for vegetation such as moss, milfoil, hydrilla or even shoreline brush, and fish very shallow," he advises.

Fishermen find bass 'shady' characters

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

Most bass fishermen enjoy fishing on warm, sunny days, but often, these can be the toughest of all fishing conditions.

"Bright sun, especially on clear days immediately following several cloudy or stormy days, pushes bass into shady areas and thick cover," says veteran tournament angler Jerry Rhyne. "The only way to catch them is by putting a lure down where they are, and that isn't always easy."

Rhyne, a member of the Johnson Outboards Pro Staff and the organizer of his own tournament circuit throughout the Southeast, says the basic rule anglers need to remember about sunshine is that bass don't really like it.

"Bass like shade because when they look out into brighter water they can see better to ambush they prey," Rhyne said, "but sometimes on bright days you can't entice them out to hit a lure.

"That means you have to use lures that penetrate the cover, like plastic worms and jigs," he said. "You have to flip or pitch lures right into the darkest part of the cover. What you get when you do this, I believe, is a reflex strike. The fish doesn't have to move after the lure. It just falls in front of him and he hits."

Rhyne especially likes to aim some of his casts underneath boat docks and piers, and also around bridges. Both offer abundant shade to sun-wary bass.

"One of the most effective lures you can use under these circumstances is a tube jig," said Rhyne, "one of those hollow, soft plastic lures with the squid-like tails that falls so erratically.

"I like to fish these lures on six- or eight-pound test line with a 1/8- or possibly even a 1/16-ounce leadhead with the hook exposed," he said. "You just cast into the shadows and let the lure fall. It doesn't drop straight down at all. It goes in one direction, then turns and goes in another. Then you can either swim it or hop it back to you."

Rhyne will also use spinnerbaits if the cover is thick enough, but the key with these lures, he says, is working them more slowly than usual and bumping cover with each retrieve. He also reels the lure right up to an object, then lets it fall down beside it.

SPORTS SHORTS

Fitness classes available — The Fort Benning Officers' Club is introducing new classes along with new instructors for a variety of aerobic and bench classes. Included in these are step, high and low combo aerobics, water dynamics and Nautilus circuit training to music.

The new schedule begins Monday and classes are open to all ranks of military members and civilians.

The cost is $16.50 for 12 visits or $3 drop-in fee per visit. The first class is free.

Monday, Wednesday and Friday — 9:30 to 10:30 a.m., 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., 5 to 6 p.m. and 6 to 7 p.m.

Tuesday and Thursday — 9:30 to 10:30 a.m., 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. 5 to 6 p.m. and 6 to 7 p.m.

Saturday — 9:30 to 10:45 a.m.

For information, call 687-0871.

Fishing tournament — The Field of Dreams is once again conducting a series of striper tournaments on Lake Lanier.

It is a team tournament and will be headquartered out of Brantley Marine on Buford Highway in Buford, Ga. Entry fee is $75. Bring two best fish to the scales. Hours are from 5 a.m. until 7 p.m. All boats meet at Brantley Marine and then depart to launch anywhere on the lake. Leave the lake and come back as many times as you like. Use live bait or artificial, but no chumming. There is no off limits. The tourney is open to pros and guides alike.

The dates for the six tournament series are July 17, Aug. 28, Sept. 18, Oct. 16, Nov. 27 and Dec. 11. There are also plans for a two-day "classic" event Jan. 8 and 9. To get a registration form or to get more information, call (404) 683-8680.

Protestant youth group prepares to go to Six Flags over Georgia.

Youth group offers fun, fellowship

By Jacqueline Feagin
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Are you bored? Do you have some free time on your hands? Would you like to meet some teen-agers having a good time?

The Infantry Center Chapel has a Protestant youth group that meets every Monday at 6 p.m. The group offers Bible study, community outreach, fellowship, singing, various trips and activities.

The group consists of teen-agers in junior high through high school. However, the group is broken down into a senior class whose representative is Jennifer Gittings and a junior class whose representative is John Hartman.

Adult supervision is provided by the adult Youth Ministry Team, directed by Roger Cotton. Members of the group have voted on the acronym FOOT as their logo, which stands for Fellowship of Outrageous Teens.

Gittings said that she is a youth leader because she wants to do everything she can to benefit the group. "God blesses my life and I want to share that love with anyone who is willing to accept Christ as their savior."

The main purpose of the group is to introduce young people to the verbal presentation of the work and person of Jesus Christ as revealed in the Scriptures. The group tries to accomplish this goal through fun activities.

The group recently went on a trip to Six Flags and plans to go bowling and putt-putt golfing in the next few weeks. New members are welcome any time throughout the year.

For more information, contact the Infantry Center Chapel at 545-2050.

CHAPEL NOTES

Adult Bible study — The Religious Education Center will host an adult Bible study through Aug. 28 at 9:30 a.m. The study, titled "The Reality of the Holy Spirit," will be taught by retired Col. Bob Williams in Building 2521. For more information, contact Bill Putman at 545-4715.

Christian Military Fellowship — The Christian Military Fellowship will be taking a break during July. Meetings will resume Aug. 13 at 7 p.m. CMF will be available for outside ministry during this time.

For more information, call Staff Sgt. Ken Harper at 689-6090.

Muslim community — Koranic reading classes are at the Religious Education Center, Building 2522, every Monday at 7 p.m. Classes will provide a better understanding of the Koran.

For more information, contact Imam Yahya Ansar Islam at 689-6922.

Protestant Women of the Chapel — "The Practice of Godliness" will be the topic of study for meetings of the Protestant Women of the Chapel during the summer months. Sessions are designed to allow attendance at one lesson or all 10.

Protestant Women of the Chapel meet 9:30 to 11:45 a.m. each Thursday in Building 2521. Free child care is provided in Building 2517. These buildings are located off Indianhead Road and Thorson Street.

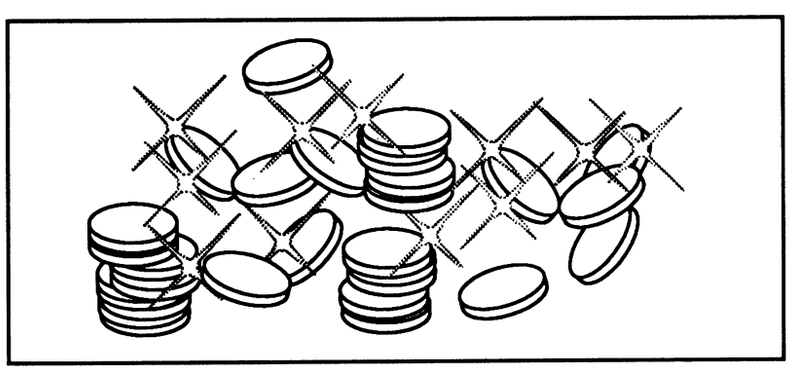
For more information, contact Gwen Chandler at 682-5546 or Loree Smith at 685-0809.

Officers' fellowship — Officers' Christian Fellowship offers all officers assigned to or visiting Fort Benning the opportunity to fellowship with other officers in pursuit of the message of Jesus Christ.

For more information, call Lt. Col. Richard Seim at 545-2745 or 685-9475.

Catholic women study group — The Military Council of Catholic Women invites women to participate in the process of the Catholic church and to share through eucharistic celebration, spiritual development programs and community activities.

The council meets for Bible study each Wednesday from 9:30 to 11 a.m. at the Infantry Center Chapel Annex.



For more information, call Lucy Larkin at 687-7356 or Chris Smith at 682- 9218.

Be dollar smart — stay out of debt

It takes determination, discipline; but saving pays off in long run

By Kenneth Carpenter
USAIC Chaplains' Office

REFLECTIONS

We hear a lot these days about the growing national debt, trade deficit and the difficulties these problems are creating for us and our children and grandchildren.

The national debt has to do with living above our means as a nation. We are spending more in the federal government than we are taking in. The deficit is somewhat similar: we are buying more from Japan, Germany, Saudi Arabia and other countries than we are selling to them.

The drop of the dollar is connected with the deficit and the need to make American goods more competitive in the world market. The question is: will it work? The answers are not easy when we are talking millions and even billions of dollars on national and international scales.

But go back to the simple question: Are we living above our means? If we are spending more than we are earning, if our outflow is more than our income, we are violating a basic principle of economics.

This is particularly true for individuals and families. While the federal government may be setting a poor fiscal example and getting by with it, few families can — at least for long. If they continue to spend more than they make, they will find themselves in severe debt with creditors knocking on the door waiting to be paid. When that happens the effects will be detrimental both to career and relationships.

Soldiers are being put out of the Army every day due to irresponsible behavior regarding finances. According to recent surveys, money is the most argued subject in marital relationships. Many couples, in fact, separate and divorce because of financial problems. They have never negotiated a plan for equitable and responsible distribution of their funds to meet their obligations and needs.

As in the question of the federal budget, answers for individuals severely in debt are not easy, but here are a few suggestions:

• Do not let yourself get in that condition. A young soldier's wife told me recently they were $10,000 in debt with three small children and a modest income. That amount is a formidable obstacle to overcome. Do not let it happen. Live within your means even if it means not having a videocassette recorder or that new stereo.

• Seek counseling before the problem gets out of hand. Do not wait until you are almost bankrupt to get help. Go to Army Community Service for budget counseling now to develop a budget plan and strategy for financial success.

• Begin now to save a portion of your income. Start now and don't say "I can't because..." The list could go on. It is not how much you make but what you do with it that counts.

There are many soldiers with relatively smaller incomes who are more successful than those with greater income due to this one fact: they know how to save. It takes decisiveness, discipline and determination.

Every soldier should have a savings program for emergencies, education, retirement or that big dream. One of the best ways to begin and sustain a savings program is through the allotment system. Start with a set amount and add to it whenever you have a salary increase.

Albert Einstein once stated that what amazed him the most was the compounding of money. Consistent saving can add up over a short period of time. Use 10 percent as a benchmark and work toward it. Such a program will save you and your family grief and pay dividends in more ways than one.

• Give some of your money away. Donate to your church or favorite charity. Taxes and the government cannot support all the needs in the world. We must help and in so doing we will be blessed and find happiness because it is impossible to give with a sincere, liberal heart and not receive something in return. "The liberal soul shall be made fat," the Scripture says, and that's an obesity that will not hurt anyone.

A saving and a sharing program is a vital part of any financial management plan. Rather than spending all your earnings, begin now to pay yourself and God by saving and sharing a percentage of your income and don't be surprised at the results.

Association of the United States Army

The Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army honored Dr. Samuel T. Rice and his wife, Donna, at a membership meeting at the Fort Benning Officers' Club on June 17.

The Rices were recipients of the Cliff O. Livingston award, created in 1984 to honor AUSA corporate members who have given their time and support to the soldiers of Fort Benning.

The Rices were recognized for their hospitality in entertaining and assisting international students attending the Infantry School.

The award was presented by Oscar Betts Jr., the 1992 recipient.

Bass club elects 4 new officers

BASS Club of Fort Benning

The Fort Benning Bass Club elected officers for the 1992-93 year.

The new officers are president Pat Reardon, vice president Jack Pines, secretary David Moore and treasurer Harry Hall.

The club is affiliated with the Bass Anglers Sportsman Society and the Georgia BASS Chapter Federation.

The club, which recently celebrated its 21st birthday, has two monthly meetings on the second and fourth Tuesdays in Building 1796 and a monthly "fish-off" among club members at various nearby lakes.

If you are interested in learning to bass fish, but do not have a boat or much equipment, talk to a club member.

More than 60 percent of the current club members were in this status when they first joined.

For more information, call Moore at 545-7115, Steve Ward at 569-5705 or Larry Jones at 545-1298.

Desire fuels team's efforts to progress

By Anthony Jackson
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

"Practice is certainly a key element in anyone's success, but desire and drive is the fuel that keeps a person enveloped in his efforts and progress," said U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit running target officer in charge 1st Lt. Michael Johnson.

The AMU Running Target Team recently attended the U.S. International Shooting Championships in Prado Tiro, Calif.

Not only did they walk away with four first-place trophies, but they also placed Johnson and Sgt. David Edmondson on the 1993-94 U.S. National Running Target Team.

The match serves as the annual U.S. national championship and national team try-out for running target. According to Johnson the match served as much more than that.

"We prepared well for the match and were determined to leave nothing to chance," explained Johnson. "When you train as we do here at the unit (AMU) you have to be willing to be the best. Even if that means beating your own teammates.

"There is no such thing as second place here," Johnson continued. "It's the gold or nothing."

Leaving nothing to chance, or to anyone else for that matter, the running target team took the gold in the 50-meter 30 + 30, 50-meter 30 + 30 three-man and two-man team and the 50-meter mixed run events.

And if the gold wasn't enough, the team took a handful of silver and bronze titles in the individual events.

"Every match we go to is a chance for us to improve and learn," said Edmondson. "As we improve we set our sights higher and higher until we reach that ultimate goal — the '96 Olympics," Johnson said.

AMU shooter sets sights on Olympic Gold Medal

By Anthony Jackson
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

Many advocate that the youth of the world is its future; so too it seems at the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit. An AMU running target shooter was recently selected as one of the top eight junior shooters in the country.

Pvt. 2 James Hamilton, a junior AMU running target shooter, was picked up for the U.S. National Development Shooting Team June 24 during his participation in the U.S. International Shooting championships in Prado Tiro, Calif.

According to Olympic Training Center officials, the development team was created to give junior shooters of various shooting disciplines and potential the opportunity to train with the best and improve their skills.

To Hamilton however, his selection to the team is his ticket to the Olympics.

"I want to be the best running target shooter there is," explained Hamilton. "To do that, I need to gain exposure to the best of everything from shooting facilities to weapons to coaches."

The sport of running target began in Europe and was created because it could be conducted in a small area. First called running deer, running target became an Olympic event in 1960 and was known as running boar. Now, the 10-meter running target event is worldwide and has produced such greats as Martin Edmondson Sr., Troy Lawton and a number of others.

Since the age of 12, this stocky-built, brown-haired 19-year-old has had one and only one dream — receiving a Gold Medal in the running target event at the Olympics.

A native of Toulon, Ill., Hamilton first encountered shooting by mistake, but since that first chance meeting his desire for the sport has grown so that it was one of the deciding factors in his enlisting in the U.S. Army.

"You always see those TV commercials that tell you to be all that you can be in the Army," said Hamilton. "All I've ever wanted to be was a shooter and I knew I could be one in the Army.

"The first time I saw a shooting match, a friend of mine was taking me somewhere and we drove by a range," he explained. "A competition was going on so we stopped and watched. I had never seen anything like it, but I knew I wanted to do it.

"As I got older, I competed frequently at Camp Perry, Ohio, where I learned of the AMU," he continued. "I knew they were the Army's best and after talking to the unit's coaches I knew I wanted to enlist for the unit."

As one of the top eight junior shooters in the country, Hamilton's selection to the development team will give him the opportunity to travel to New Orleans, La. There he will train for three weeks with the U.S. Shooting Team and coaches to learn, perform and become the best running target shooter he possibly can.

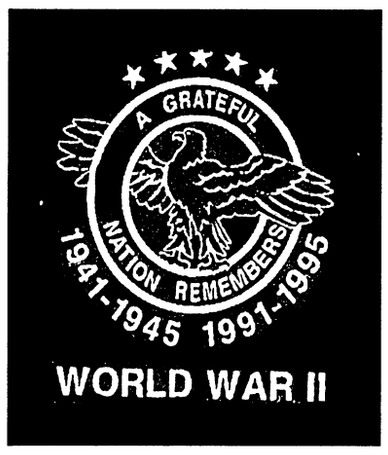
"We picked up Hamilton a few months ago and in his short tenure with us, he has showed an extreme amount of dedication to the discipline and a potential for growth that will most certainly carry him to the Olympics," said running target officer in charge 1st Lt. Michael Johnson.

WORLD WAR II

50 years ago this week ...

• The Allies launched Operation Husky, under the overall command of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, dropping American parachutists from the 82nd Airborne and British commandos and landing the first of more than 480,000 men as part of the invasion of Sicily.

Months of deception preceeded the invasion as a variety of Allied ploys succeeded in turning Axis' attention toward Greece and Sardinia. As such, Adolf Hitler dispatched one airborne and two armored divisions to other areas, leaving mostly ill-equipped, demoralized Italian troops.



The attacking Allied force, which included Gen. George S. Patton's Seventh Army and Field Marshal Bernard Montgomery's British Eighth Army, made steady gains, capturing numerous cities all along the front.

• On the Eastern Front, the bloody Battle of Kursk continued. The Soviets suffered considerable casualties, but succeeded in advancing, seizing and holding the initiative on the front.

Severe resource shortages forced the Germans to consolidate their tank forces into a single unit and limited their offensives to sporadic assaults without the support of the battered Luftwaffe. Even the often irrational Hitler conceded defeat, issuing a formal order to abandon the battle.

• In the Solomons, the Americans sent reinforcements to Rendova and New Georgia, launching a full-scale attack toward Munda on the latter. The attacking force made little progress, however, because of fierce Japanese resistance and difficult terrain.

• On New Guinea, Australian and American forces converged near Mubo, disrupting the Japanese supply and communication lines from the area to Salamaua.

Creative energy marks TRADOC's 20th

TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — The arrival of the 20th anniversary of Training and Doctrine Command has been accompanied by a "burst of creative energy," according to Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr., TRADOC commander.

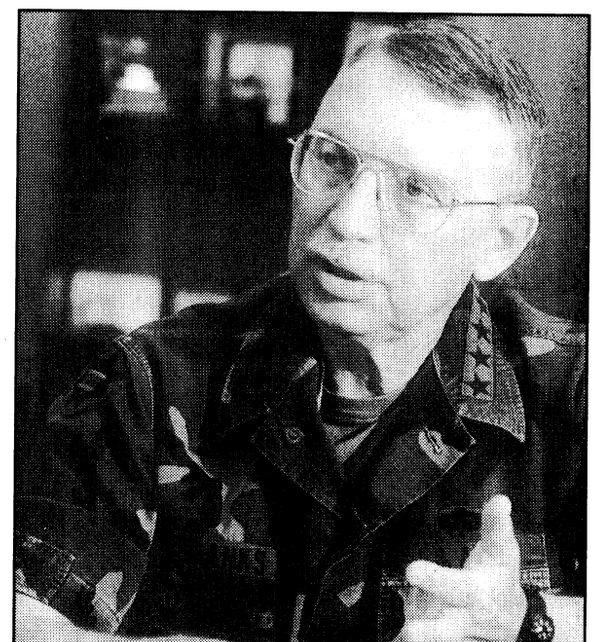
One result of that is publication and distribution to soldiers of Field Manual 100-5, "Operations."

"That's been a total Army effort, but principally led by TRADOC, which is our charter said Franks. "The second is the formation of battlefield laboratories, which is a means to adapt our methods to continue to find and determine requirements for a force-projection Army so our soldiers can continue to maintain the edge in battle."

As the Army's "architect of the future," TRADOC is helping to reorganize a smaller Army to deal with multiple and varied possible threats around the world. Franks feels that, although circumstances are different, TRADOC today faces a situation similar to what existed during the command's early days.

"As we transitioned out of Vietnam, and TRADOC was formed, I think you saw at the same time a burst of creative energy, he said.

Those efforts led to the 1976 revision of Field Manual 100-5, "Operations," creation of the National Training Center and "significant institutionalization" of leader development such as the noncommissioned officer and officer education systems. The specific demands of the times determine the actions that TRADOC must take to lead the Army, the general said. "You don't do it in the abstract," he said.



"I think you see that going on now as you see our Army getting smaller physically, operational tempo is up and, therefore, the requirement is for TRADOC to step up to it," Franks said. TRADOC has also been a leader in developing joint doctrine and training.

"The opportunity to help shape the future in joint doctrine and joint training is as present as it is for us to help shape the Army in doctrine, training and leader development," Franks said.

Development of joint matters will become more efficient with the Air Force and Navy establishing doctrine and training commands in the Hampton Roads area near Fort Monroe. The Air Force command will be at nearby Langley Air Force Base and the Navy's in Norfolk. The Marine Corps Combat Development Command is at Quantico, Va.

"Headquarters TRADOC is perfectly situated at this historic post, (Fort Monroe, Va.) which Dr. Bill Harvey, president of Hampton University, said is a great symbol of the Army past, present and future. Fort Monroe is unlike any other installation in the United States Army," Franks said. He feels that since TRADOC's creation in 1973, both the command and the Army have matured.

"Unlike in 1973, today our Army is a doctrine-based Army. Our Army understands that ideas condition the way we organize and train and equip our Army. There's a sense of shared beliefs in excellence and standards of training," Franks said.

Bob Crocket

"I saw that in Desert Shield and Desert Storm, that common approach that allowed our soldiers in a very short period of time to prepare themselves for that particular combat situation."

Tomorrow's leaders and soldiers are being seasoned at the training centers. There TRADOC teams create scenarios and provide threat tactics to the opposition forces, against which units train. Those scenarios and tactics represent actual situations Army units could encounter in various parts of the world.

"In this way, we condition the noncommissioned officer and officer leadership to be able to handle those responsibilities," Franks said.

"In a force-projection Army, the noncommissioned officer and officer leadership, sometimes in junior grades, will be in positions of significant responsibility."

Based on his observations of soldiers in action during Desert Storm, the general feels the men and women in today's Army are "absolutely capable" of meeting the challenges of an uncertain future.

"The great people we've got in TRADOC have responded to the challenge and are helping the Army during this period of very significant change.

"But we can't stop here. There is no finish line," Franks said.

Assault forces practice MOUT skills

By Gregory Hart
29th Infantry Regiment

The stillness of the morning betrayed every sound to the enemy. As they moved into place, sounds echoed off buildings alerting the waiting opposing force. The enemy had planned its defense well. It had the deck stacked against the good guys. It had fields of fire covering all entrances to the buildings they occupied.

As the exercise continued, the Cougar assault force probed the first buildings and was surprised by the small guerrilla force (two soldiers in civilian clothes). This diversion created the delay the opposing force hoped for, causing the assault force to use up a lot of their ammunition. The enemy waited. Only two of their snipers opened fire on the enemy creating the desired flanking maneuver and drawing the assault force closer to the actual kill zone.

"They reacted just like I thought they would, not knowing that the building they were in had snipers on the second floor," said Sgt. David Adams, Company A, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment. "The great part is that the doors to both buildings we occupied were covered by our primary fields of fire."

"They reacted just like I thought they would

— Sgt David Adams
Company A, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

The Cougar assault force reacted as expected but surprised the opposing force with its speed of maneuver, covering one another and enabling the assault force to get to the objective without sustaining excessive casualties. Finally the call came to end the exercise once it was obvious that the assault force would not kill the remaining opposing forces.

The Cougar assault force were all members of Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment. The Charlie Cougars spent several days out at Fort Benning's McKenna Military Operations in Urban Terrain site which provided a realistic training environment.

The enemy was made up of soldiers from Company A, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment.

Soldiers were scrambling for cover, low crawling past windows, peeking around corners and trying to keep command and control when the chain of command began to be wiped out.

After all training ended and the clean up began, most agreed that tough as it was, the MOUT site was "good training" for everyone.

Aspin calls for more combat roles for women

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

Secretary of Defense Les Aspin said he expects military women to be flying combat aircraft "within weeks" and announced other changes in their roles.

Aspin called the policy change historic.

"Many important military jobs are closed to women," he said. "As long as that is the case, we cannot be sure that we are putting the best person in the job. Women have proved they can contribute to the readiness and effectiveness of the force.

"We know from experience that women can fly our high-performance fighter aircraft. We know from experience that they can perform well in assignments at sea. And we know from Operations Desert Storm and Desert Shield that women can stand up to the most demanding environments."

Aspin proposed opening Navy combat ships to women and tasked the Army and Marines to find opportunities for women in field artillery and air defense. He said the services must justify restrictions they place on women's assignments.

Aspin said he favors restrictions keeping women from direct ground combat. He also supports restrictions where changing physical standards or altering berthing requirements would be too costly or impractical.

He also said the cost of refitting old submarines and small ships or building new ones to provide for women's privacy might be prohibitive, so they may not be opened to women any time soon.

Aspin said the new policy would enable the services to call on a much larger pool of talent to perform the vital tasks military forces must perform in a post-Cold War world.

Congress repealed the law that prohibited women from being assigned to combat aircraft two years ago. "It is time to implement that mandate and address the remaining restrictions on the assignment of women," Aspin said.

He said the services could act quickly on many of the changes. He expects that Army female Black Hawk helicopter pilots may compete for Cobra and Apache gunship assignments within weeks. He said the Navy already has a list of ships that can be opened to women, and the Air Force has named the first seven female pilots it will train for combat aircraft duty.

Aspin said the service chiefs back him on the policy.

Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan, Army chief of staff, said 61 percent of the Army's positions are open to its 72,000 women on active duty. He estimated the policy will open almost 5,000 new officer, warrant officer and enlisted positions to them.

Adm. Frank B. Kelso II, chief of naval operations, said Navy leadership at all levels supports the policy. He said women already fly the service's F-18 Hornet attack fighter. He also expects women serving in Navy electronic warfare squadrons to transition into combat squadrons within months. Kelso said it may take about six months to change the combat exclusion law to allow women to serve on carriers.

About 83 percent of the Navy's positions are open to its 55,000 women.

"We've heard the decision of the secretary. We support it fully and are prepared to implement it immediately," said Gen. Merrill A. McPeak, Air Force chief of staff. The Air Force has more than 71,000 women, and about 95 percent of its positions are open to them.

McPeak, who had opposed air combat roles for women, told reporters he was comfortable with the decision, quipping, "There's always a small chance I was wrong."

Gen. Carl E. Mundy, Marine Corps commandant, said his service has no women pilots, but that will change.

"Their applications will be taken, they'll be processed, they'll go to flight training and they'll compete for aviation slots on a gender-neutral basis in the Marine Corps," he remarked.

A thousand female Marines served in Operations Desert Storm and Desert Shield. The Marines have about 8,000 women, about 4.5 percent of their ranks, according to Mundy.

Ellen P. Murdoch, chairwoman of the Defense Advisory Committee on Women in the Services, said she'd been deluged with calls since the announcement.

"But it's a nice deluge," she said. "We're very pleased with Secretary Aspin's decision. This moves us much closer to being able to select the best person for the job regardless of gender. And it reflects favorably on the performance of military women over the past few decades."

The advisory committee has been recommending for years that more positions be opened to women, she said.

Many NCO families assume that the government will reimburse them for personal items that are stolen or destroyed. But that's not always the case. And even if the military does pay, the check rarely covers the full replacement cost.

That's why policies offered through Family Protection Plus℠ provide renter's and homeowner's coverage that costs a lot less than you might think. Comprehensive coverage that protects your belongings against fire, smoke and water damage, plus theft, weather, and other perils.

THE MILITARY WON'T ALWAYS PROTECT YOUR HOUSEHOLD BELONGINGS AGAINST LOSS OR DAMAGE. CALL TO FIND OUT HOW WE CAN.

These policies offer up to 120 days of protection when your property is being moved. Or even indefinite coverage if you've stored your belongings while waiting for a housing assignment. Plus up to 179 days of automatic coverage if you're on a TDY anywhere in the world. If that seems like a sensible approach, there's a good reason. Family Protection Plus, created by Academy Life Insurance Company, was designed specifically for NCO families. And it's recommended by NCOA®.

Independence Day

Fort Benning celebrates with a bang

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning's Independence Day celebration went off with a bang this year — and not just because of the fireworks.

Between 6,000 and 7,000 people attended the festivities here Saturday honoring our nation's 217th birthday, according to Jim J. Gallagher, executive vice president of the Association of the United States Army.

Families camped out for the day in the shade of the trees surrounding York Field, venturing from their picnic blankets and coolers only for brief trips out to the barbecue, ice cream and soda stands.

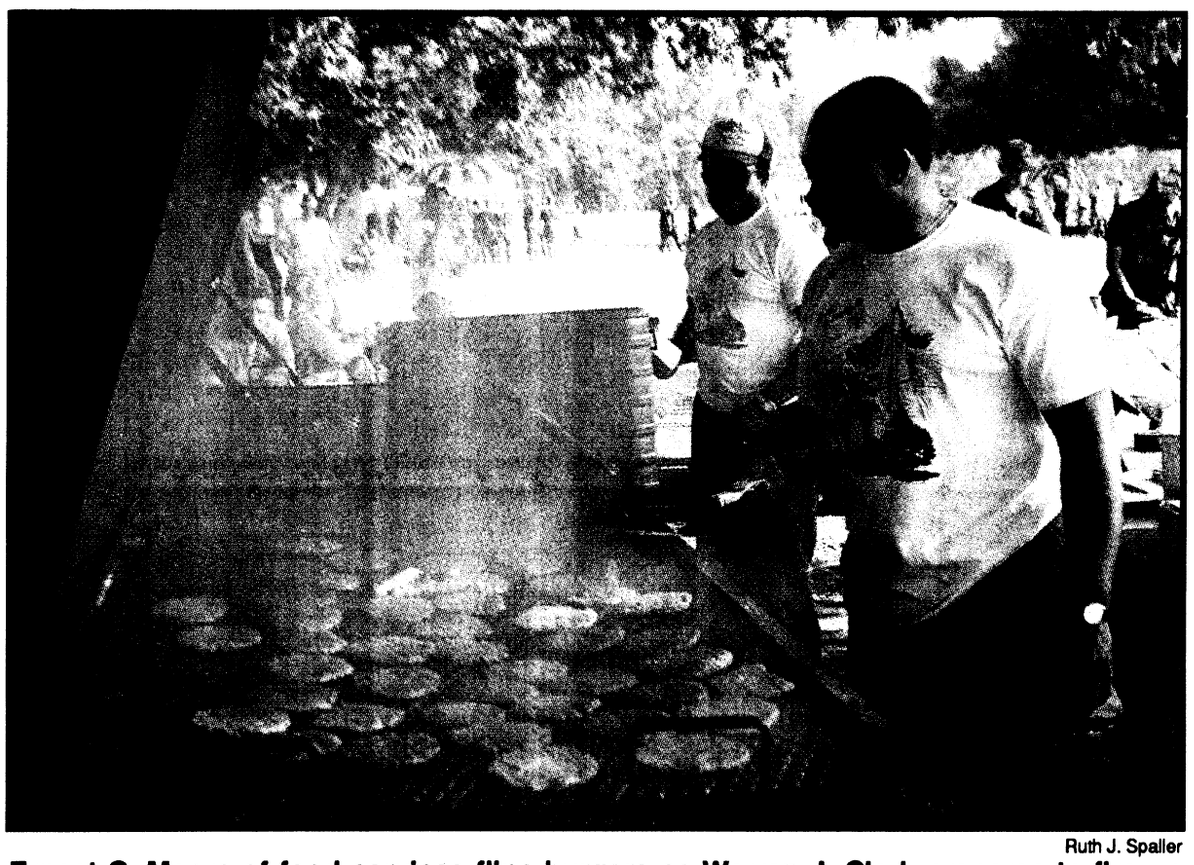
Soldiers from the Infantry Training Brigade, enjoying a day off from one station unit training, mingled with the crowds around the various game and food booths.

Children ran from one game to another with red, white and blue star-spangled balloons bobbing behind them and turned their tongues purple from eating snow cones and cotton candy.

The Infantry Band and Chorus provided musical entertainment throughout the afternoon, and all eyes turned skyward as soldiers from the Ranger Training Brigade performed rappeling and rapid extraction demonstrations.

The Silver Wings Command Exhibition Parachute Team spiraled down to a landing in the center of the field trailing red, white and blue smoke.

Soldiers from the Infantry Training Brigade and the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, (Mechanized), carried state, territorial and national flags in a historical pageant.



The 12 flags that have flown over our country, from the 13-star flag adopted in 1787 to the union that stands today, were displayed with the flags of states that joined the union under them.

Soldiers from the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division manned the guns for an impressive 56-gun salute honoring each of our nation's states and territories in order of admission.

As evening fell, people spread out on the surrounding fields for a fireworks display sponsored by AT&T.

The Infantry Band and Battery A, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment set the stage for the show with a joint performance of the 1812 Overture.

Then burst after burst of fireworks filled the sky with sizzling color, ending with a grand finale that lit up a sparkling flag, and lit up the sky above Fort Benning.

Int'l club is home away from home

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Helen Hilgers has taken her four children back to Australia to see their grandparents for the first time in 4 1/2 years.

With airfare for Hilgers and her children costing more than $4,000, this is the first time they've been able to afford the trip home, she said.

Hilgers, originally from Brisbane, Australia, met her husband, Staff Sgt. Hermann Hilgers, now a course manager with Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, when he was deployed from Hawaii to Australia.

When they married, they moved first to Hawaii, then to Georgia. Leaving her home and family has been difficult, Hilgers said.

"Adjusting when you have no family close at hand is hard," Hilgers said. It's one thing when your hometown is on the other side of the country, she pointed out, but another thing entirely when it's on the other side of the world.

But Hilgers is just one of many military spouses who find themselves far from home.

Fort Benning is temporary home to many spouses from different countries, and many of them have found a taste of home in the International Wives Club.

Hilgers, who has been in the club three years and is currently serving as treasurer, said the club is "like a family — an international family."

"We're all in the same boat," she said, "living in a new country. We have all pulled up our roots and come here."

Olga R. Kelly, who has been president of the club for 18 years, said the club provides foreign spouses not only with a place to go to make friends, but also to share information — from simple things like where the Commissary is to more complicated things like getting an American driver's license.

"Everybody helps each other out until they get their feet on the ground," she said.

Kelly originally came to Fort Benning from Germany 30 years ago. "There wasn't anything here for foreign wives then, not even English classes," she said.

Kelly and two other foreign wives, one from Australia and one from France, started the club as a way to share information about their new home.

The club now has members from Germany, England, Spain, Austria, Italy, Greece, Mexico, Korea, Panama, Puerto Rico and the Philippines, among other places.

Many members are drawn to the club because they share a common language, Kelly said, but even those who don't, often feel more at home talking to each other in English than they do talking to an American.

"If you speak a foreign language you feel more comfortable speaking English with someone who sometimes stutters the same way you do," Kelly said.

"It's easier to talk to someone who doesn't speak the language fluently, because you're not so frustrated and aware of your mistakes," she said.

Besides the obvious language barrier, foreign spouses face a variety of new problems when they come here, Kelly said.

"Many of our members have good jobs where they come from but don't qualify for the same job here due to different rules and regulations," Kelly said.

"There was one lady in the club who was a doctor in Panama, but she couldn't practice here," she said.

"It's frustrating to be told your schooling is not good here."

The club helps ease some of the frustrations of the transition by offering "an atmosphere of support," said Kelly.

Members help each other study for and practice to get driver's licenses, share recipes and places to shop for food from their countries, and compare notes about how they have adjusted to life in the military and in the United States.

The club also provides more formal help in the way of English classes and citizenship classes, translation of documents and guest lectures Kelly invites to talk to the group, like a lawyer who came in to talk to the spouses about their legal rights here.

Mostly though, the club provides a substitute family, Kelly said. "It's a very informal atmosphere. We have monthly membership meetings with coffee and cake, and potluck dinners where everyone brings something from their own country."

Members learn about different cultures and share their own, Kelly said.

At one meeting, a Korean lady brought everything and showed everyone how to make egg rolls, Kelly said.

The group often gets together for informal shopping trips to stores specializing in international foods, and is currently planning a trip to the international market in Atlanta, Kelly said.

"We celebrate many international holidays and go to local schools and talk about how Christmas is celebrated in different countries, " she said.

Everyone is welcome to join the International Wives Club, Kelly said. Meetings are at 7 p.m. the first Tuesday of every month in Building 2642 at Soldiers' Plaza.

The club is currently looking for volunteer English teachers. For more information, call Kelly at 687-3374, or Regina Colon at 682-7221.

Healthy dental care begins early

U.S. Army Dental Activity

Dental care begins at birth. With good home-care practices and regular check-ups, children today can enjoy excellent dental health throughout their lives.

Prenatal

Infants' teeth begin developing months before birth. By the time your child is born, the 20 baby teeth, which will appear during the next 2 1/2 years, are already present in the baby's jawbones. They will remain hidden by the gums until the baby begins teething.

Teething

When a baby's teeth are ready to break through the gums, the gums usually become swollen and irritated. Rubbing your baby's gums with a clean finger or with a small, cool spoon may provide relief. Giving your baby something to bite on may also be soothing. Remember that teething is a natural process and when the tooth emerges, the symptoms vanish.

Bottles and bedtime

If you put your baby to bed with a bottle, the child risks developing 'nursing bottle mouth." This is a dental condition that occurs when a bottle containing sweetened liquid — milk, formula, fruit juice or sweetened water — is given to the infant frequently, especially before the child goes to sleep. It can destroy your child's teeth through early, serious decay. When children are awake, their saliva tends to carry away the liquid. But during sleep, the saliva flow decreases. If your child needs a bottle before falling asleep, use plain water.

Thumbsucking

Sucking is one of a baby's natural reflexes. It's a normal infant habit, which usually decreases after age 2. If vigorous and prolonged thumb-sucking continues past age 4, however, dental development could be threatened. Call us and we'll suggest ways to wean your child from this potentially harmful habit.

Cleaning the teeth

Even before teeth begin appearing, you should start cleaning your baby's mouth with a damp washcloth or gauze pad. This will remove harmful plaque. You should begin brushing and flossing your child's teeth after each meal and before bedtime when the primary (baby) teeth first appear in the mouth.

First dental visit

The best time to schedule that first dental visit is when your child turns 3, or earlier if you think there is a problem with your child's teeth.

Premature tooth loss

If your child loses a tooth prematurely (usually due to an accident), you should consult a dentist immediately. A dentist may recommend using a space maintainer, which can do the work of the missing baby tooth.

Sealants

You may have heard of sealants. These are plastic films that dentists apply to children's teeth to form a protective barrier to decay. The procedure is simple and painless and it can reduce tooth decay by 90 percent.

Juvenile gum disease

About 10 percent of American children suffer from a form of gum disease known as "juvenile periodontitis." This gum disease, which often lacks symptoms, strikes the permanent teeth of otherwise healthy children. When diagnosed early, it can be treated.

Patch adopts 'Latch Key,' accommodates expansion

Child Development Services

The School Age Latch Key program will expand this year. The program will be moving to Patch School beginning Aug. 23. This new location will allow up to 80 children to participate in the program.

The School Age Latch Key program operates 5:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Children are dropped off by their parents in the morning, served breakfast and transported to the Fort Benning schools. At the end of the school day, the children are transported to Patch, served a snack and participate in planned activities.

During teacher planning days and vacations, School Age Latch Key operates full time and will serve lunch. The program is closed Saturdays, Sundays and federal holidays.

Children must be registered for this program through Child Development Services Central Registration, Building 11302, on Custer Road.

Parents should bring children's shot records and school physicals at the time of registration.

The fee for this program is based on combined family income and a copy of the family's last tax form 1040 is required to determine income.

CRIME WATCH

Military Police Activity

The following entries were extracted from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters June 8 to 14. Such entries may be incomplete and are not the adjudication of the guilt or innocence of any person.

This week's hot topic concerns USAIC policy memo 93-1 prohibiting the consumption of alcoholic beverages in all public areas on Fort Benning except for facilities authorized to sell alcoholic beverages.

Such facilities include post exchange snack bars or dining areas and morale, welfare and recreation facilities (Officer, Noncommissioned Officer, Enlisted Clubs, golf course, bowling centers and Uchee Creek recreation area). Government quarters and the surrounding yard area are excluded from this prohibition.

• A juvenile family member was charged with carrying a concealed weapon after she took her father's .45 caliber pistol to school with her. The weapon, which was found to be unloaded, was taken from her by a faculty member without incident.

• A former government employee was charged with theft after he stole numerous items of government property and sold them at several local pawn shops.

• A family member reported that persons unknown shot her in the stomach with a BB gun, then fled the scene.

• A sergeant was charged with filing a false claim after submitting a claim of $13,056 for lost household goods that never arrived after leaving Korea. Later, the household goods were found and delivered. The sergeant kept the payment of $7,341 from the government for the lost goods never informing the Staff Judge Advocate's office the household goods had been found.

• A private was charged with aggravated assault after he hit another private in the face with a combination lock and bit him on the finger during an altercation.

• A staff sergeant was charged by civil authorities with pandering after he offered an undercover police officer $20 to have intercourse with him.

• A private first class was charged by civil authorities with driving under the influence of alcohol, driving with license suspended, no proof of insurance and giving false information, after he was observed driving on the grass while leaving a local restaurant.

This week's booby prize is awarded to the private first class who reported that someone had broken into his truck and stolen his stereo while it was parked on post. Further investigation revealed that he had previously reported the incident to the Columbus Police Department and stated that the crime had occurred off post. He was charged with false swearing and making a false official statement.

Other activities included 16 traffic accidents and six reports of shoplifting at facilities on post. There were five cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, 12 cases of larceny of private property and two cases of larceny of government property.

Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to m Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5223 or the "Crime in Progress" line at 545-2222.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Capt. Jonathan J. Hunt
Staff Judge Advocates Office

Q: It's 1 a.m. and you get a wake up call at your home from an angry bill collector. She tells you that you must pay off your home stereo bill immediately or she will report that you have committed a crime. Can she do that?

A: No. You should report this incident with the bill collector to your chain of command and to the Legal Office as soon as possible in order to protect your rights.

Federal law protects debtors from such harassment under the "Fair Debt Collection Practices Act." Under this 1982 law, Congress sought to eliminate or reduce unfair debt collection practices, but not to wipe out the debt collector's right to collect on any legitimate debts you do owe. This raises three important questions:

• What triggers the FDCPA?

• How does the FDCPA protect me as a debtor?

• What are my remedies if my debt collector breaks the law?

The FDCPA puts several limitations upon debt collectors. First, it restricts the way a debt collector can contact you. Absent your consent, the debt collector may only contact you at reasonable hours of the day and not late at night.

Second, the debt collector must tell you three things:

• The nature of the debt

• The name of the creditor

• That the debt collector must stop collecting if you question the validity of the debt, at least until verification of the debt.

Third, debt collectors must disclose to you that they may use against you any information you provide them. And finally, the debt collector must permit you, the debtor, to stop the attempts to collect the debt by the collector.

As a protection to you, the consumer, the FDCPA forbids a debt collector from any effort to abuse or harass you.

Unless you agree or the court permits, debt collectors cannot do the following:

• Telephone you at an inconvenient time or place, such as after 9 p.m. or before 6 a.m.

• Contact you personally if the debt collector knows you have a lawyer helping you.

• Call your commander or first sergeant (employer) if you tell the debt collector not to call you at work again.

• Call you after you write to them that you refuse to pay and direct them to cease further communication with you. Here, debt collectors may only contact you again to inform you of their final intended action such as a law suit.

If debt collectors treat you unfairly in violation of the FDCPA, you may take them to court. In serious cases of abuse by debt collectors, you, the consumer, can recover any money you lost (actual damages) plus, possibly, additional (punitive) damages up to $1,000 along with attorneys fees and court costs.

In summary, the law permits the debt collector to recover on any and all debts that you, the consumer, honestly owe. But, the collector must act reasonably and not offend the dignity of the consumer in the process.

Do not hesitate to protect your rights as a customer.

If you have any questions on this topic, contact the Legal Assistance Division at 545-3281 or 545-3282.

COMMUNITY BRIEFS

Job opportunities — The following federal announcements are currently open for the receipt of applications. For more information and review, visit the Personnel Services Center, Meloy Hall, Building 6, room 115.

The U.S. Army Community and Family Support Center is accepting applications for the following positions. These positions are open continuous announcements.

Title, series and grade, location, closing date.

Drill rig operator, WS-5729-06, Seoul Korea, close July 21.

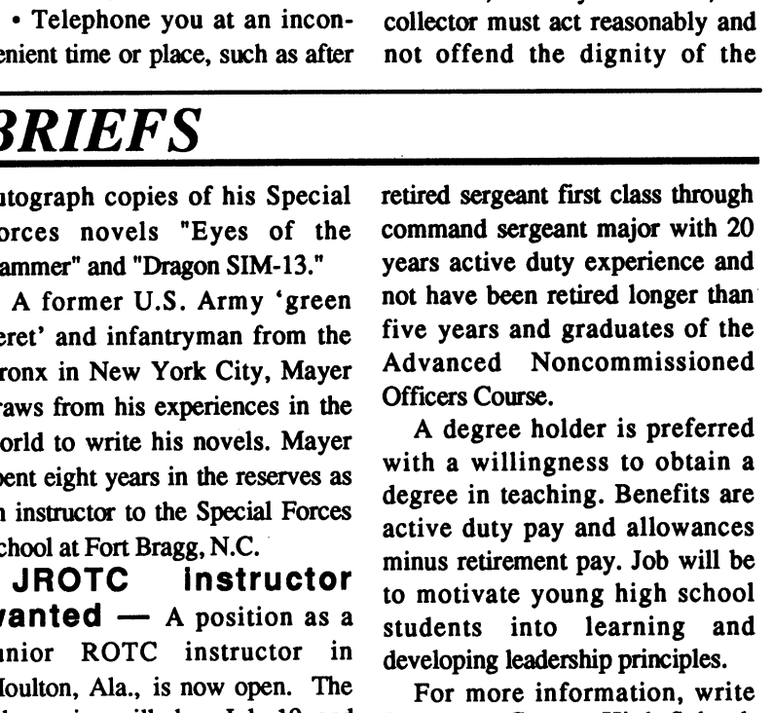
Drug and alcohol rehabilitation counselor, GS-0101-9, Seoul, Korea, close Wednesday.

Social worker (clinical), GS-0185-9/11/12, Heidelberg, Germany.

Wanted: english tutor — Interested in other cultures? Learn about another country while you are helping a foreign born adult student learn to speak, read and write English. Attend a free English as a Second Language tutor training workshop July 19, 20, 22, 27 and 29 from 6 to 9 p.m. at Edgewood Baptist Church. The workshop is sponsored by the Muscogee Area Literacy Association. Call 649-0865 to register or for more information. You do not need to know a foreign language to be a tutor.

Cardiac, diabetic support — A meeting of the cardiac and diabetic support group will be July 19 in the Baugh Conference Room (on the second floor) of Martin Army Community Hospital at 6 p.m. For more information, call Thomas E. Valitzski at 561-3077.

Author to visit PX — Military techno-thriller author Bob Mayer will be at the Main Post Exchange July 17 and 18 to autograph copies of his Special Forces novels "Eyes of the Hammer" and "Dragon SIM-13."



A former U.S. Army 'green beret' and infantryman from the Bronx in New York City, Mayer draws from his experiences in the world to write his novels. Mayer spent eight years in the reserves as an instructor to the Special Forces School at Fort Bragg, N.C.

JROTC instructor wanted — A position as a junior ROTC instructor in Moulton, Ala., is now open. The job opening will close July 19, and applicants must be able to start no later than Aug. 31. Applicants are required to be within the ranks of retired sergeant first class through command sergeant major with 20 years active duty experience and not have been retired longer than five years and graduates of the Advanced Noncommissioned Officers Course.

A degree holder is preferred with a willingness to obtain a degree in teaching. Benefits are active duty pay and allowances minus retirement pay. Job will be to motivate young high school students into learning and developing leadership principles.

For more information, write Lawrence County High School, Attn: Retired Maj. Steve Farris, 102 College St., Moulton, Ala., 35650 or call (205) 974-1121.

PET OF THE WEEK

This playful mixed-breed dog is looking for a home. She is approximately 4 years old.

For more information, contact the Veterinary Services Office in Building 265 at 545-1127.

Hours of operation are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:30 am. and 12:45 to 3 p.m.

The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

If you have lost a pet, check the stray impoundment facility in Building 283.

Stray pets are given three working days to be claimed from the time they are picked up by animal control personnel.

If the pets are not claimed, they become government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Your Guide to Prime-Time TV: Cable and Broadcast Schedules

Robert Vaughn presides over Fox's 'Danger Theatre'

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

As the former "Man From U.N.C.L.E.," Robert Vaughn knows more than a bit about TV action ... but he's about to present it in a different way.

The veteran performer gets a rare chance to spoof his famous image as superspy Napoleon Solo as the host of "Danger Theatre," a new comedy series premiering Sunday on Fox stations. Executive-produced and sometimes directed by Penelope Spheeris ("Wayne's World"), the program makes Vaughn an ersatz Alistair Cooke, since he introduces weekly segments of two satires that send up the familiar conventions of countless adventure shows.

"Tropical Punch" is a direct parody of "Hawaii Five-O," with Adam West — alias the home screen's "Batman" during the 1960s — as the unflappable captain of an elite police unit that also includes a young smart-aleck (portrayed by Billy Morrissette) and an ex-sumo wrestler (Peter Navy Tuiasosopo).

The other half of the weekly double feature is "The Searcher," which partially ribs a previous series created by co-executive producer Robert Wolterstorff, the short-lived "Streethawk;" as in that show, the new hero (Diedrich Bade) dresses in black and rides a motorcycle while attempting to find missing people.

Liberally sprinkled throughout "Danger Theatre"' are jabs at such other well-known examples of the crime-busting genre as "Miami Vice" and "Knight Rider."

Robert Vaughn

In his new television role, Vaughn joins the ranks of other "serious" talents who now play it straight for laughs, as Leslie Nielsen has done in the "Naked Gun" films.

What: "Danger Theatre"
When: Sunday, 7:30 p.m. on Fox

"This is, of course, really a variation on one of those guys ... only a little farther out," Vaughn muses. "I'm probably parodying Robert Stack, who's already parodied someone else, in terms of the seriousness of the hosting (which Stack continues to display on NBC's 'Unsolved Mysteries'). Then, our show breaks from that into semi-farce and slapstick, but you can't tell at the beginning that it's not going to be serious. I know both Stack and Leslie (Nielsen) personally, and oddly enough, they're terribly funny guys; they always have been, though their images on the screen have always been the opposite of who they are in person."

Being responsible only for the relatively brief "Danger Theatre" segments that open and close the main action, Vaughn is still available for other work. "I go in and do (the introductions) a group of shows, then go back the next day and do some audio recording, and that's it," he says. "I'd like to have that kind of job for the rest of my life. In fact, the '80s were the best-paying decade I've had. I was very fortunate to come out of a hit television series and not 'die' (professionally), as many of my compadres did."

Parent Involvement Program is a hit at children's center

By Lawrence K. Hughes
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Youngsters at the Custer Terrace Child Development Center had the pleasure of having lunch with their parents during a duty day. A brown bag lunch of hot dogs, potato chips, fresh fruit and more were supplied at no charge to parents attending the event July 1 at 11:30 a.m. "Fort Benning Today" will highlight next week the event, which features an interview with the center's director, Joyce Cassino.

Stay tuned to the United States Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel next week for its special presentations at 2 p.m. Monday through Friday. The special presentation will include full coverage of the change of command ceremony of the Infantry Training Brigade's 30th Adjutant General Battalion.

USAIC TV Schedule

Fort Benning Today: 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 1:30 to 2 p.m.
Specials: 2 to 4:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 4:30 p.m. to 8:30 a.m.

USAIC TV highlights post events and lists classified advertisements on the Fort Benning Community Bulletin Board featuring news and music from Soldiers Radio Satellite Network.

If you are a subscriber to Fort Benning Cable, you can watch USAIC TV on Channel 3, 24 hours a day. Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:26, 7:56, 8:26 and 8:56 on WLTZ TV-38.

For more information or to make suggestions, write or call the Broadcast Section of the Public Affairs Office, Infantry Hall, Room 602, 545-2201.

Park to host Appalachian music festival

Georgia State Parks and Historic Sites

Unicoi State Park will host its 17th Annual Appalachian Music Festival today through Sunday, with all activities taking place inside the Unicoi Lodge and Conference Center.

This festival is dedicated to the traditions of music, dance and oral history from the Appalachian Mountains — such as British Isles and Celtic music, traditional Southern folk tunes, old time string and dulcimer music, Gospel music and Appalachian community dancing.

The festival will begin with a traditional Southern Appalachian and British Isles music concert today at 8 p.m. Admission fee for the evening is $4 for adults, $2 for ages 6 to 12, and under 6 is free.

Featured performers for this concert will be Susan Trump and "Red Plum Jam." Trump is a musician and folklorist from Greenbush, N.Y., who specializes in traditional and contemporary Appalachian music and vocals, performed on guitar, banjo and Mountain dulcimer.

"Red Plum Jam" is an Atlanta based group that includes musicians David Marcus, Doug Murray and Ann Lawing. Its music ranges from traditional Appalachian fiddle tunes to the jigs of the Celtic countries, played on a combination of the hammered dulcimer, fiddle, concertina, banjo, guitar and mandolin.

The festival will continue Saturday at 9 a.m. with a special bagpipe concert and interpretive program presented by Mark Blihovde from Demorest, Ga. Blihovde has spent much of his life mastering and performing the bagpipes, perhaps the most stirring of the Scottish instruments. This concert is open to the public and is free of charge.

In addition to the regular festival events, a mountain dulcimer building workshop will be offered by Bob Thomason, owner of the Dulcimer Shop in Helen, Ga. The fee for this class, which will produce a finished instrument, will be $45. Participants must be at least 16 years old and preregistration is required. Contact the programming unit for more workshop information or to register.

Saturday afternoon activities will begin at 1 p.m. with workshops in advanced mountain dulcimer, hammered dulcimer, Appalachian dance and clogging and clawhammer banjo. Both morning and afternoon workshop sessions are free of charge and limited to a certain number of participants on a first-come, first-serve basis.

A free musical demonstration entitled "Appalachian Street Music with Red Plum Jam" will be presented at 2:30 p.m., with an open stage concert at 3:30 p.m. to round out the afternoon activities.

Saturday evening there will be a traditional British Isles and Appalachian music concert at 8 p.m., followed by an old-time circle dance, taught and called to live music.

Admission for the concert and dance is $4 adults, $2 ages 6 to 12, and under age 6 is free. Featured artists for the concert will be "The Ruffians," a group from Charlotte, N.C. Band members Jon and Karen Singleton, Buddy McManus, Henry Trexler and Albert Dunn will perform a mixture of music from the British Isles and Southern Appalachians. Playing fiddle, guitar, bodhran, keyboards, hammered dulcimer, banjo, bass, bones and whistles, "The Ruffians" have performed at different Celtic and music festivals throughout the Southeast.

Following the concert, dance caller Louis Wild will call an Appalachian community circle dance to live music, also provided by "The Ruffians." Tickets for both Friday and Saturday evening concerts will be available at the concert gate at 7:30 p.m. each night. Specific locations for all the festival activities will be posted at the Unicoi Lodge entrances.

The 17th Annual Appalachian Music Festival will conclude Sunday morning with a gospel hour at 10 a.m., and a "pass-the-hat" donation for the performers. Music for the gospel hour will include traditional Appalachian, dulcimer and British Isles tunes, provided by Bill and Jewell Magee from Stone Mountain, Ga., and Bob and Melody Thompson from Cleveland, Ga.

What: Music Festival

When: Today through Sunday

Where: Unicoi State Park

All the festival activities are open to the general public. Unicoi State Park is located two miles north of Helen, Ga., on Highway 356. For more information on this program, contact Unicoi at (706) 878-2201, Ext. 283.

Lark Quartet performs second Columbus concert

Brookstone School

The award-winning Lark Quartet will perform a concert at 7:30 p.m. July 20 at Brookstone School's Turner Fine Arts Center in Columbus.

The performance by the all-female string group will be a benefit for the Southeastern Music Center. The program will consist of quartets by Schubert, Borodin and Peter Schickele. The Schickele quartet, his second, was commissioned by the Lark Quartet.

Violist in the group is Anna Kruger, daughter of Harry and Natalie Kruger, both of whom are members of the music faculty at Columbus College. Kruger's father is also conductor of the LaGrange Symphony and conductor emeritus of the Columbus Symphony.

The Lark Quartet has earned an international reputation and has given performances throughout both hemispheres. It has received many honors and awards, the one bringing them the most notoriety being winning the Gold Medal in the 1991 Shostakovich International String Quartet Competition in St. Petersburg, Russia.

Tickets in the Golden Circle (reserved section) are $25; general admission tickets are $10 for adults and $5 for students. Patrons purchasing tickets in the Golden Circle are invited to a meet-the-artists reception in the gallery following the concert. Tickets may be purchased at the door. For more information, call 324-1392.

Artist combines fact, fantasy in magical works

Columbus Museum

"Hogs, Dragons and the Big Bad Wolf: Myth and Reality in the Art of Tarleton Blackwell," an exhibition combining fact with fantasy will open at the Columbus Museum July 18.

Highlighting the work of South Carolina artist Tarleton Blackwell, the exhibition features 16 paintings from his acclaimed "Tales of the Green Dragon" series and his "Hog Series." An original exhibition developed by the museum's curatorial staff, Hogs, Dragons and the Big Bad Wolf will be on view in the Shorter and Leebern Galleries until Nov. 7.

Blackwell's "Tales of the Green Dragon" and "Hog Series" are a mixture of autobiographical realism and magical story-telling. Best known for his "Hog Series" — which combines observations from his family's hog farm with imagery from fairy tales, commercial advertising, and the history of art — Blackwell has explained that he seeks to portray hogs from both a personal perspective and in terms of the conventions and misconceptions of popular culture regarding the animals.

"Tales of the Green Dragon" canvases focus on the schoolchildren in the artist's classes, their imaginative classroom activities and school trips. The two series overlap in many respects, as children and pigs migrate and evolve throughout the intricate narrative scenes. In Blackwell's hands, both series manipulate and question the visual vocabularies of modern culture while simultaneously exploring fundamental themes of good and evil, life and death.

Blackwell lives in his hometown of Manning, S.C., where he teaches elementary school art classes for gifted children in Clarendon and Williamsburg counties. He earned a bachelor's degree in art education at Benedict College in 1978 and a master's and master of fine arts degree in painting at the University of South Carolina, Columbia, in 1983 and 1984. He has taught at South Carolina State University, the Columbia Museum of Art and at the South Carolina Governor's School for the Arts.

Blackwell has exhibited widely throughout the Southeast in group and one-man shows and is represented in such Georgia collections as the High Museum and the Coca-Cola Company in Atlanta. In 1990, Blackwell was named "Outstanding Person of the Year" by the Clarendon County branch of the NAACP and in 1991 as a finalist in McDonald's restaurants' "Unsung Heroes" contest.

The exhibition will be accompanied by a video interview with the artist produced by the Museum's curatorial and education staffs. A brochure on the exhibition will also be available.

The Columbus Museum, located at 1251 Wynnton Road, features exhibitions of American art and regional history and includes a hands-on discovery gallery for children. Admission is free. The museum is open from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday and Sundays from 1 until 5 p.m. For more information, call the museum at 649-0713.

UPCOMING EVENTS

Junior rangers — Providence Canyon State Park will offer its annual Junior Rangers Program July 19 through 23 from 10 a.m. until 1 p.m. daily for ages 6 to 14.

The program will be conducted by the seasonal interpreter and will focus on environmental education. There will be many nature-oriented activities to teach the children about the importance of conservation ecology.

The program will begin at the Interpretive Center and Junior Rangers should bring a sack lunch. Participants should register prior to the first program.

Providence Canyon State Park is operated by the Department of Natural Resources and is located on Highway 39C seven miles west of Lumpkin, Ga.

Civilians receive RIF letters

280 affected; 49 or less expected to leave the Fort Benning installation

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Post Training and Doctrine Command and Health Services Command employees affected by the Army's plan to downsize the civilian work force were handed letters July 9 informing them of changes to their job status.

Changes ranged from being moved to other positions on post to being released from employment with the federal government.

Post officials determined that it was necessary to conduct a reduction in the civilian work force because of fiscal 1994 budget guidance. More than 280 employees will be affected; however, only 49 or less are expected to leave the installation, officials said. Directorate of Civilian Personnel credited the Voluntary Separation Incentive for the small number of separations.

Reduction-in-force procedures were used to determine which employees would be affected.

Those employees receiving notices separating them from the federal service will work through Oct. 2. Other actions such as reassignments or changes to lower grade will be affected on Oct. 3.

All employees involved will be individually counseled regarding their status, entitlement to other jobs, pay retention or adjustment, placement assistance at other federal agencies and private industry and retirement eligibility.

Officials said the post is dedicated to protecting the job rights of individuals and is striving to minimize the impact of this RIF. All employees involved should be aware that specific job offers or notices of separation identified in their letters are subject to change.

Survey shows single soldiers want changes

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Single soldiers postwide feel a variety of improvements are needed in their living conditions, according to a recent survey.

The survey, conducted by the Single Soldier Living Community Advisory Board, covered 11 different categories designed to identify the specific needs of single soldiers in each of Fort Benning's five single soldier living communities: North Main Post, South Main Post, Kelley Hill, Harmony Church and Sand Hill.

The categories included recreation, economic, social, political, safety and security, health and fitness, cultural, professional development, spiritual and facilities. On the survey, soldiers expressed their satisfaction or dissatisfaction with the various services and facilities in question and were also free to write in suggestions.

Brian Smith of the Directorate of Community Activities, who helped analyze the survey, said that the results varied widely according to the geographical location, age, and lifestyle of the individual soldiers being questioned.

"This is actually the most valuable aspect of the survey," Smith said. "Because the survey was broken down geographically, we can see exactly how soldiers from different parts of the post feel their needs are being met. Commanders of units in these areas are also able to use the findings as a snapshot of their particular areas to see specifically what the concerns of the soldiers in their commands are."

In general, soldiers located in the post's more isolated areas, such as Harmony Church and Sand Hill, expressed a higher degree of dissatisfaction overall because many goods and services were harder to get to or unavailable in these areas, according to Smith.

Here are descriptions of the results of the first five categories of the survey.

• Cultural: Questions in this category covered how soldiers feel about the number and variety of cultural events on post. Satisfaction was generally not too high overall, particularly with the Infantry Training Brigade. Soldiers felt that the off-post community had much more to offer. Many soldiers expressed a desire for an on-post drama club and others felt that attempts to keep soldiers informed of post events were not adequate.

• Economic: This category was designed to find out how soldiers felt about the banking and financial counseling services and availability of goods and service on post. Overall, soldiers were fairly satisfied with the economic conditions on post. Soldiers in the more isolated areas expressed a desire for more conveniently located 24-hour banking facilities.

•Health and Fitness: In this category, soldiers were asked questions concerning the availability and quality of health and fitness centers on post. Feedback in this category was fairly positive across the board. Soldiers expressed a desire for bigger gyms open more hours, a larger variety of sports activities, and more pool hours.

• Political: This category

Rangers to honor past, present

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

More than 2,000 rangers will participate in the Ranger Rendezvous and Exercise Caisson Warrior at Fort Benning beginning Saturday and running through Wednesday.

The five-day celebration commemorates the 75th Ranger Regiment's involvement in World War II and will be filled with competitions and activities honoring past and present rangers and ranger units, said Sgt. 1st Class Ronald D. Hilston, a spokesman for the regiment.

Exercise Caisson Warrior is the preliminary tactical portion of the 75th Ranger Regiment change of command.

"The operation itself is an event to consolidate the regiment," Hilston said. "It builds the morale and esprit of the rangers.

The exercise will culminate with the change of command ceremony 9:30 a.m. Wednesday on York Field when Col. David L. Grange will turn over command of the regiment to Col. James T. Jackson.

Rangers from the three battalions that make up the 75th will begin the exercise 9 a.m. Saturday with a mass tactical parachute jump at Fryar Drop Zone.

They will depart from airfields here and at Fort Lewis, Wash., and Fort Stewart, Ga., rendezvous in mid-air, and jump from 15 C-141 Starlifters and six C-130 Hercules at 800 feet.

The regiment will then conduct a short field exercise, seizing military objectives and control of the surrounding terrain.

Weapons competitions will select top mortar crews, machine gun, sniper and anti-tank teams, and regimental mass physical training and an endurathon will test the rangers' physical abilities.

Open houses and social events will be conducted throughout the five days.

All ranger associations and members are invited to attend, as are relatives, family members and the general public.

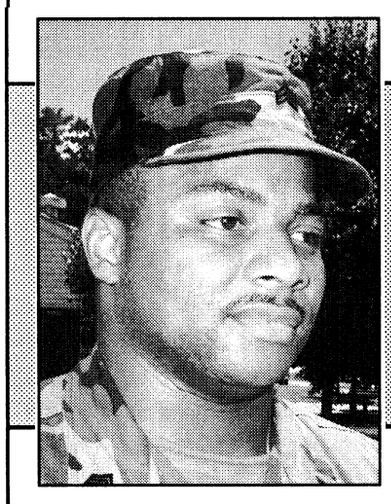
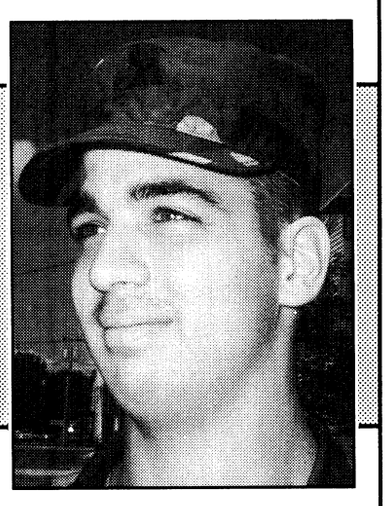
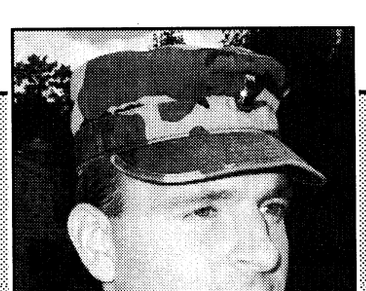
VARIOUS VOICES



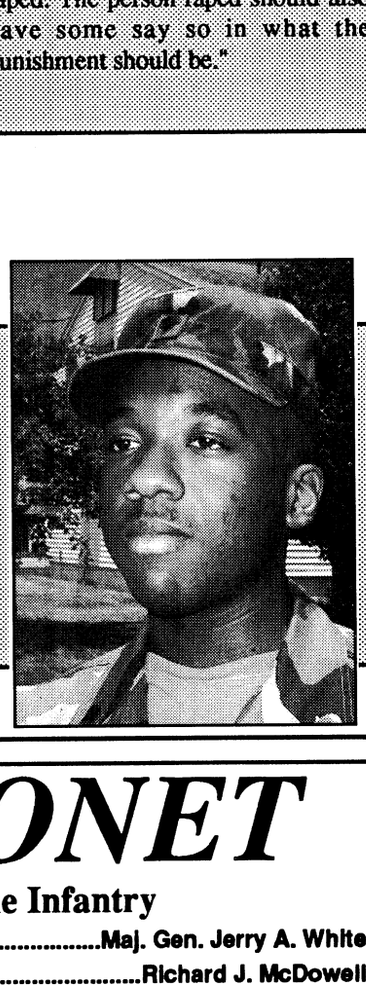
What do you think should be the punishment for a convicted rapist?



Stella Sutton, family member — "I think death. If you had ever been through it, you'd know why."



LeAnn Archer, Wilson School teacher's aide — "I believe prison. I don't think it should be for life, but they should also get counseling. I don't know if it would help, but it should be tried."



Sgt. John Boyd, Adjutant General Replacement Detachment — "I think castration and life in prison. Rapists have no right to violate another person. They are using their bodies as tools to harm other people, and that tool should be taken away from them."

Spc. Chris Sutton, 586th Engineer Company (Assault Float Bridge) — "The punishment should be death. There is no need for that to happen at all."

2nd Lt. Paul Barras, 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital — "The rapist should be required to serve jail time and spend time doing a service to help the person that was raped. The person raped should also have some say so in what the punishment should be."

Spc. Alvin Lumpkin, Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "I think castration is appropriate. They deserve it; there's no excuse for raping. A severe punishment would send a message out to people that it's not right."

Chewing is hazardous to health

COMMENTARY

Ranger Doug was my hero. He jumped into Panama with the rangers as part of Operation Just Cause and got to do a lot of other sightseeing as a member of the 75th Rangers.

Yet when he reported to Public Affairs, he was just a quiet, unassuming specialist. In fact he didn't even cuss.

When he went out, he didn't want for attention. He was just one of those guys.

His one vice, if you can call it that, was the need to carry a soda can wherever he went. Not for drinking but for spitting. He chewed.

Now I know, chewing is the manly thing to do. Carrying a wad of chew nestled between gum and lip gives 20-year-olds that hero look.

Not only that, but I'm sure it drives women crazy. I mean what female wouldn't want to rush right up and plant a big, wet kiss on the lips of someone who chews? Maybe she too could get a taste of Redman or Copenhagen.

Additionally, chewing cures your buddies from trying to steal a sip from your soda can, for who knows what lies in the bottom of a chewer's can?

Chewing also gives one the appearance of recklessness and flamboyance. For chewers are probably the most apprehended of any shoplifters in the Post Exchange.

Everyday someone is getting picked up for trying to pilfer a can of chew from the PX.

So now chewers can be identified with that sterling group too — did he or didn't he pay for his chew?

And finally, chewing is a way to maintain your nicotine fix even in places that don't allow smoking, such as government offices.

Chewers are also very popular people.

The medical profession loves chewers. Chewers provide them a great deal of business. Dentists enjoy scraping gums and replacing teeth of chewers and charging big bucks.

Other doctors repair holes in cheeks and tongues. Well, I don't know if they actually repair them as much as they cut out the bad skin and hope it doesn't turn cancerous.

Oops, there's that "C" word.

And that brings us back to Ranger Doug.

He got out of the Army. Went back to school. Worked part time in the family business. Was dating "the girl back home."

He had a great future lined up.

Then he went in for his dental checkup.

Dentist didn't like what he saw.

Referred Doug to another surgeon, who referred him to yet another doctor.

Naturally they all ran tests. They mulled over the test results and all shook their heads.

The bottom line is how much of Doug's face and tongue and neck do they need to remove to save his life?

And what kind of future does that leave him with?

Preparation, positive attitude vital to landing a job

By William G. Fitzpatrick
Noncommissioned Officers Association

COMMENTARY

Military people beginning a job search are often supremely confident about their ability to land a job.

They make all the right moves getting a company interested in talking to them, then figure they can just go in and baffle the company with their brilliance. Unfortunately, it's not that easy.

Most separating veterans are extremely confident in their ability to sell themselves. Many have said that if they can get in front of a hiring executive, they have no doubt in their ability to get the job because of their positive mental attitude.

This confidence can often be a liability instead of an asset. Everyone involved in job search counseling, outplacement or career transition training has a strong opinion about what is most important in the job search.

Some will say that resumes are critical; others will focus on research. But all of these are important and each gets you closer to the key element in the entire job search.

Resumes, broadcasting (or networking), a slick marketing plan and effective research do not get you hired. While important to the job search, they all lead to one important event. That event is the chance to get face-to-face with a potential employer and present your qualifications.

Corporate recruiters and other hiring officials indicate that most people fail to get hired because they show up for the interview without adequate preparation.

Instead of taking the time to properly prepare, candidates try to rely on their personality and positive attitude to guide their performance.

It doesn't work.

Recruiters and others who make hiring decisions are skilled at evaluating candidates. It doesn't take a professional very long to realize that a candidate doesn't know much about their industry, the company or anything else.

The key to success seems to be rehearsal and preparation. Going into an interview without adequate knowledge is like taking soldiers into combat without adequate intelligence.

Here are some quick tips to help you prepare.

- Gather as much information as possible about the company, its goals and its business posture.
- Prepare sample questions that you may be asked, and rehearse your responses. Pay special attention to weaknesses in your qualifications, and be prepared to offer off-setting advantages.
- Make a list of your positive features, such as loyalty, integrity and a team attitude, then be able to integrate these into your responses.
- Be prepared to tell the company what you plan to bring to the work place, not what you hope to gain.
- Eliminate any personal problems or experiences from your presentation plan.
- Critique your performance after every interview. Effective performance in an interview can be the key to landing a great job. Effective performance is based on preparation, planning, research and rehearsal.

Don't do away with the positive mental attitude, but don't rely on it as your single source of success.

Snively way off base about patriotism

I am an employee of an advertising company. Just last night (July 9) I was looking at The Bayonet as I do every week, and I took a few minutes to read Clyde Snively's column about the commercialization of Independence Day.

Although I agree that unfortunately most Americans have forgotten what the day means, I must admit I took offense to what Snively wrote about using the American flag and other American icons in advertising.

When used in their proper context, American flags and other such emblems are very patriotic and respectful to the country.

I used an American flag backdrop in an ad I designed for a local Chevrolet dealer. In the ad I was promoting the fact that this car is an American-made product and people should be proud of that fact.

So, in this case, I think using the American flag was very appropriate.

When people buy American, it saves American jobs and keeps our country financially independent and competitive in the world market.

I think one of the most patriotic things you can do is to keep a fellow American employed.

Another point Snively touched on was how some people's hair doesn't stand up on the back of their necks every time they hear the national anthem played.

Snively was even criticizing soldiers for not getting mental images of Gen. (George S.) Patton rolling like a juggernaut across the German front in a tank when they hear patriotic music.

Snively needs to get a clue. The basic principle behind independence is the freedom of thought and speech.

What will Snively propose next, a $50 fine for anyone caught not mounting a flag on his or her front porch on the Fourth of July?

So that's my point — patriotic views like religious views can't be forced on individuals and are also much stronger when they are arrived at by a personal decision.

I mean, who is to say what is the right or wrong way to worship the Lord or the right or wrong way to show respect for your country. It all depends on the individual.

By the way "Uncle Sam" Snively, how is your Mazda holding up? All the Detroit auto workers and their children thank you.

Post's Infantry Chorus receives 'thank you'

We at Four County Health Care in Richland, Ga., would like to express a heartfelt "thank you" for the Infantry Chorus of Fort Benning.

Under the direction of Capt. (David) Sutherland, this kind, caring, enthusiastic group shared its musical expertise with the residents and staff at our nursing home July 8. As they sang familiar patriotic and show songs, everyone applauded with delight.

Waving goodbye on our front porch, one elderly gentleman remarked, "With nice professionals like them, our Army is in good shape."

11th Infantry Regiment changes commanders

Ruth J. Spaller

Col. Walter Wojdakowski (left) and Col. Lawrence K. White Jr., incoming and outgoing commanders of the 11th Infantry Regiment, perform an inspection of the unit during the change of command ceremony July 9.

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

The 11th Infantry Regiment changed hands in a ceremony on York Field July 9 when Col. Lawrence K. White passed the unit's colors to Col. Walter Wojdakowski in the traditional symbolic transfer of command.

White, who has commanded the regiment since June 1991, is leaving Fort Benning for an assignment in Belgium with Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers Europe.

"White always led from the front," Post Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White said at the ceremony. "He never asked others to do what he wouldn't or couldn't do himself.

"One of his major responsibilities was the training and safety of our airborne school; and, to ensure the standards were never compromised, he made over 200 jumps during his two years in command," Maj. Gen. White said.

Col. White added an additional jump when he parachuted onto the field at the beginning of the ceremony with the Silver Wings, Fort Benning's command exhibition parachute team.

Maj. Gen. White also thanked "the other half of the command team," Signe White, for the time and effort she devoted to the regiment, its soldiers and their families.

In an informal addition to the ceremony, Signe White presented Candy Wojdakowski with a regimental pin as a gesture of friendship and goodwill.

"People always came first with the Whites," the commanding general said, "and that shows in the character and the spirit of this regiment."

The commanding general then welcomed Wojdakowski, who comes to Fort Benning after attending the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa.

"There are very few officers in our Army with his credentials," Maj. Gen. White said.

Wojdakowski, who said it was "an honor and a privilege to take command of this great regiment," served as the senior infantry task force combat trainer at the National Training Center, Fort Irwin, Calif., until July 1992.

He commanded the 2nd Armored Division's 3rd Battalion, 41st Infantry Regiment (Tiger Brigade) at Fort Hood, Texas, and in Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm from 1989 to 1991.

Wojdakowski was commissioned an infantry officer in 1972. He served in company-grade officer positions as a platoon leader, scout platoon leader, executive officer, ranger instructor and commander at Fort Lewis, Wash., and at the Army Mountain Ranger Camp in Dahlonega, Ga.

As a field-grade officer, he served as chief of tactical operations, III Corps at Fort Hood, and as a battalion executive officer and brigade operations officer.

He has also been an assistant professor of military science at the University of Alaska in Fairbanks.

Wojdakowski is a graduate of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., and has a master's degree in business administration from the University of Alaska and a master of military arts and sciences from the Command and General Staff College.

His awards include the Silver Star, the Bronze Star, the Meritorious Service Medal, the Army and Navy Commendation medals, the Army Achievement Medal, the Combat and Expert Infantryman badges, the Ranger Tab and the Senior and Canadian Parachutist badges.

Soldiers 'pump' some blood at Santiago gym

By Jim Camp
Martin Army Community Hospital

The Department of Pathology, Martin Army Community Hospital, in cooperation with Camp Memorial Blood Center, Fort Knox, Ky., personnel from Noble Army Community Hospital, Fort McClellan, Ala., and personnel from the 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital at Fort Benning, conducted a consolidated blood drive at Santiago Gym June 26 with 541 soldiers of the Infantry Training Brigade.

The "regionalization" approach in conducting blood drives makes good sense for several reasons, officials said.

Consolidating six blood drives per quarter into one weekend uses personnel more efficiently. This makes more time available for things like clinical training.

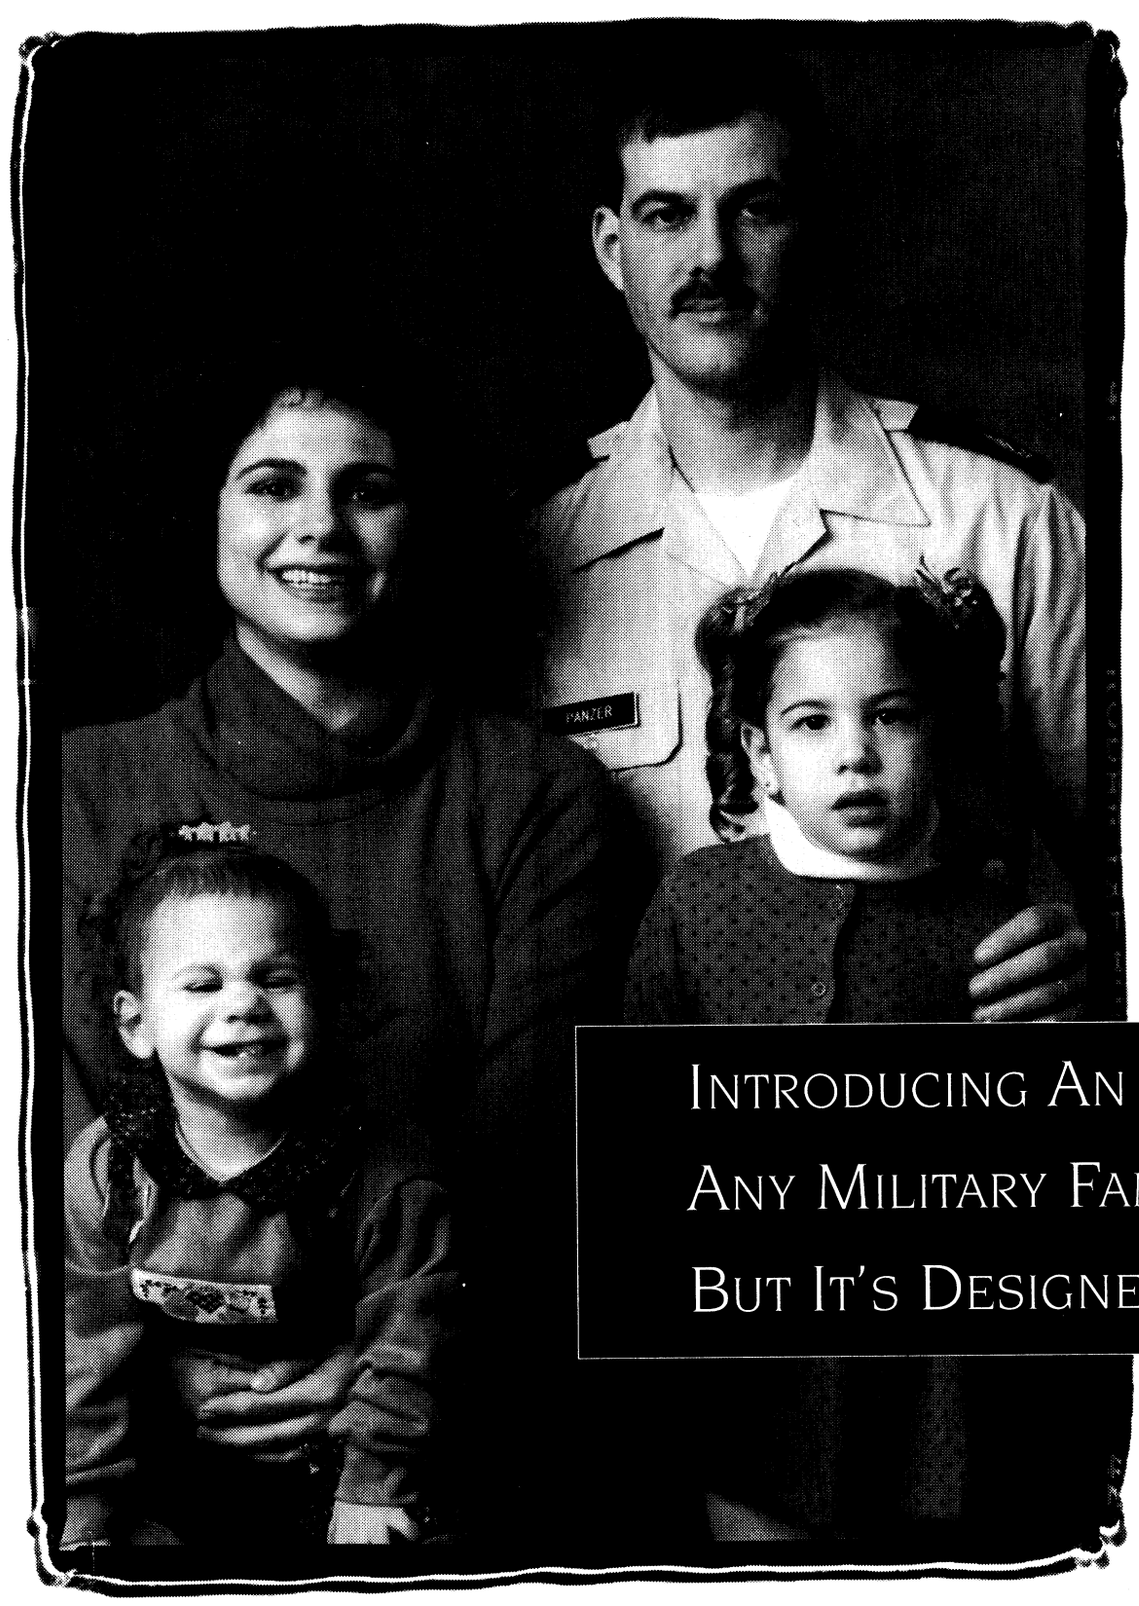
A Health Services Command activity, CMBC is the regional headquarters responsible for managing the blood supply to all Army installations east of the Mississippi.

Along with the blood center's regional quota, it also supplies quotas of blood for the "2004 Initiative" Armed Services Whole Blood Processing Lab.

Processed blood normally has a shelf life of about 35 days. Because of the 2004 Initiatives, frozen blood can be stored for 20 years and transported to any country in the world.

Fort Knox is one of the freezing facilities and is directly involved in the initiative.

"I am very pleased about Saturday's blood drive," said Capt. Frank Rentas at CMBC. "It's not only a smart way of conducting the blood drives at ITB, but it also promotes the success of the Army Blood Program."



Another plus for consolidated blood drives is the needed training for mobilization.

"The number of donors processed through Saturday were about the same number processed daily during Desert Storm," said Capt. Paul Roberts, clinical laboratory officer at MACH. "This is excellent training for mobilization contingencies."

As in every enormous undertaking or venture, this took the concerted efforts of numerous people in many organizations.

Col. Michael Kussman, hospital commander, said he would like to thank the men and women who had a part in the first consolidated blood drive at ITB.

He also thanked the Phenix City Wal-Mart for supplying soft drinks and the Farr Road Dominos Pizza and Victory Drive Papa John's Pizza for providing lunch.

The flag is the same one that flew over the nation's capitol building in early June when Fort Benning was awarded the Army Communities of Excellence award; the flag was received along with a certificate of authenticity.

USAPFS hosts seminar

U.S. Army Physical Fitness School

The U.S. Army Physical Fitness School will host an aerobics workshop and seminar at Fort Benning Aug. 2 through 6.

The workshop will feature Sue Tendy, aerobics coordinator for the Department of Physical Education, U.S. Military Academy, West Point, N.Y. Tendy has worked with the DPE for 15 years. She also frequents the local New York military television channel with her aerobic exercise sessions.

Attendees will learn numerous teaching techniques, proper cueing, and a variety of basic, intermediate and advanced steps.

The goal of the workshop is to teach students to combine and incorporate these skills into a successful exercise-to-music session.

Prerequisites for attendance at the workshop are as follows: you must be a graduate of the Master Fitness Trainer course, be actively involved in fitness, and be working with your assigned unit in that capacity.

If you are qualified and interested in attending this workshop, contact Staff Sgt. Dennis Guaglianone, APFS operations noncommissioned officer, or Capt. Kevin Ziegler, operations officer, at 545-2737 or 545-6385 for further information.

Army SF wants officers

U.S. Army Special Operations Command

FORT BRAGG, N.C. — Officers interested in Army Special Forces assignments will have the chance to talk to Special Forces branch officials Thursday and July 23.

Capt. Scott Peters will give briefings Thursday at 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. in Infantry Hall, Building 4, Room 23. On July 23 briefings are scheduled for 8 a.m. and noon at the same location.

Officers in the 1990 year group must submit applications before Sept. 1 in order to be eligible. Although the Special Forces branch is targeting officers from year groups 1986 to 1990, all other applicants should submit packets as soon as possible in order to maintain eligibility.

Officers generally have one time in their military careers — during their third year of commissioned service — to apply for the Army's newest branch, an official for the Special Forces Proponency Office said of the current selection system.

However, because of attrition in the SF selection process, some officer positions remain unfilled, said Peters, who is SF branch manager at the USA John F. Kennedy Special Warfare Center and School.

The SF branch offers command opportunities at all levels, Peters said. All officers interested in professional development are encouraged to attend the briefing.

By now, officers in year group 90 should have received information packets from the SF branch about applying for the next accession board, which will convene in September.

The SF branch can accept men only and because of aviation training, cannot consider aviation officers. The board is restricted in the number selected from other branches that have officer shortages.

Out of 202 officers selected from year group 89, 63 percent came from combat arms — 44 percent from the infantry, according to Peters.

The Special Forces plans to select 265 officers this year.

A complete application packet, including complete physical examination and Defense Language Aptitude Battery results, is required for consideration, Peters said.

An officer's best chance to apply for SF is the year that first lieutenants are considered for promotion to captain and are in the target year group determined by the Total Army Personnel Command.

For example, the SF accession board in September will review applications for officers who were commissioned in 1990 to fill 135 positions.

If all positions are filled, next year the branch will look to year group 91.

As with most rules, this one has one exception. Officers being considered for promotion to captain before their third year of active commissioned duty should apply during the year they go to the captains' board.

Final acceptance to the branch will depend upon the successful completion of a three-week assessment and selection program and the 24-week Special Forces Qualification Course. Conducted at the Special Warfare Center and School, both programs are mentally and physically demanding.

Not all of those selected are expected to graduate from the courses, so officials developed a formula based on past attrition to arrive at the accession rate of 265 officers per year, Peters said.

Applications are due by Sept. 1. Results will be mailed back by early November.

Prospective SF officers can call Peters at the Fort Bragg Special Forces recruiting office, at (919) 432-2415 or DSN 239-9002.

Toy plane endangers life, limb

USAIC Public Affairs Office

A C-141 Air Force pilot flying a parachute drop mission July 8 over Fort Benning's Fryar Field, reported sighting a remote controlled aircraft in the vicinity of the field.

According to a Fort Benning spokesman, the Air Force pilot reported the remote controlled aircraft was flying in the Lawson Army Airfield control zone at an altitude of about 1,200 feet. The spokesman says flying remote controlled aircraft in the control zone is a violation of Federal Aviation Administration and local regulations, and could result in catastrophic loss of life and equipment.

Anyone knowing those involved in the incident is asked to advise that person or persons to call the Lawson Army Airfield Safety Office at 545-2425 or 545-3418, for safe guidance and information.

PET OF THE WEEK

The members of this frisky feline trio are just 5 weeks old and are looking for homes.

For more information, contact the Veterinary Services Office in Building 265 at 545-1127. Hours of operation are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:30 a.m. and 12:45 to 3 p.m. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

If you have lost a pet, check the stray impoundment facility in Building 283. Stray pets are given three working days to be claimed from the time they are picked up by animal control personnel. If the animals are not claimed, they become government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Pet owners are reminded that they are required to register their pets and update their records when changes occur.

New state-of-the-art battle lab on the way

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Fort Benning will soon be the future home of one of the most sophisticated combat simulations centers in the world. As engineers from the Directorate of Public Works have found out, the first priority is to provide a state-of-the-art facility in which to house the center.

Buildings 2864, 2866, 2867 and 2868 are being renovated to serve as the home of Fort Benning's Dismounted Warfighting Battle Lab, one of six battle labs designed by Training and Doctrine Command Commander Gen. Frederick M. Franks to maintain the readiness of the modern Army through computer simulation, research and analysis and field testing.

The designing of the $683,410 project was done by DPW employees Larry Jones, architect, Don Tucker, electrical engineer, Amy Vaughn, civil engineer, and Joe Franklin, mechanical engineer. The actual renovation is being done by the ATF Construction Inc. of Columbus.

Two of the four buildings are scheduled to be completed this week, Jones said, while the others will be completed by Sept. 12.

Jones said that the work being done ranges from the menial to the challenging.

"Much of the work includes such general things as constructing office space, repairing ceilings, painting, repaving the parking lot and upgrading security," he said. "The most challenging aspect has been planning a facility for equipment that we have never seen or that doesn't even exist yet, because some of the equipment that will eventually be housed here is still in the developmental stage."

"The project has been a very unique experience," said Richard Mize, chief of Engineering Services, "because of the time limits and because we had no 'knowns' to design around. We had to make a lot of assumptions while planning the construction of the facilities."

Franklin said that installing the sophisticated air-conditioning equipment, required to prevent damage to the simulations equipment from excessive heat, was another challenge.

According to Peter Bush, battle lab project officer, the four buildings will house one of the most sophisticated training and development simulations systems used in the Army today.

"This will truly be a world-class, high-tech simulation center where dismounted warfighting weapons systems, equipment and doctrine will be developed and tried before actually 'bending metal'," said Bush. " What's more, Fort Benning's mechanized and dismounted infantry will be able to fight realistic battles simultaneously with units at Fort Stewart, Ga., Fort Knox, Ky., and even in Korea on the same virtual battlefield without leaving their simulation centers."

The four buildings will actually contain several different simulation systems for training and development.

• The Battlefield Distributed Simulations-Development system. The BDS-D will include a computer link with all of the other TRADOC battle labs and will allow computer simulated tinkering and testing of new dismounted infantry weapons systems and equipment.

• The JANUS system. This 16-station system will contain a computer program that will allow students to put their classroom training to the test of computerized combat. For example, students will be able to enter their classroom battle plans into the JANUS system and then watch the computer fight the battle. Instructors will have an after action review capability where students will be able to observe errors in their plans, make on-the-spot corrections and rerun the exercise.

• The Battalion Brigade Simulation system. This computer simulation will allow battalion and brigade commanders and their staff officers to practice tactical command and control.

• The Close Combat Tactical Trainer. This system will be a follow-on to the current Simulation Network system now in use. The CCTT is a full crew simulation system of M-1 tanks, M-2 Bradleys and other vehicles. The system creates a simulated battlefield which gives the participating soldiers the illusion of being on an actual battlefield. The crews can drive, fire weapons and maneuver against each other as if in actual combat.

Bush said that these computer systems are more than just expensive video games. "Participants in these simulations are really challenged and the stress level can be very high," he said. "Computer simulation combined with actual field training will make a powerful combination for maintaining the strength of the modern Army."

He added that the JANUS system should be in place around Jan. 29, while the CCTT is not expected to be ready until fiscal 1998.

POST BRIEFS

Infantry Hall parking lot to close Mon., Wed.

The southeast section of the Infantry Hall (Building 4) parking lot will be closed to normal traffic other than reserved or assigned parking spaces from Michael Street to Ranger Field Monday from 6 a.m. to noon for the Ranger Veteran's March and Hall of Fame ceremony.

The parking lot will also be closed Wednesday from 6 a.m. to noon for the 75th Ranger Regiment change of command ceremony.

Temp. office hours set for trial defense office

Because of the Regional Defense Counsel's Conference, the Trial Defense Office located in Building 65 will be closed Aug. 2 through 4.

Normal operating hours will resume Aug. 5. In case of emergency, contact the Senior Defense Counsel at 545-2175 or 545-2176.

Post to get new deputy commanding general

A combined departure and arrival ceremony for Fort Benning's deputy commanding general and assistant commandant of the U.S. Army Infantry School will be today at 4:30 p.m. on York Field.

Brig. Gen. John W. Hendrix, who is slated for promotion to major general, will leave Fort Benning to become the deputy chief of staff for operations, U.S. Army Europe, headquartered in Heidelberg, Germany.

Brig. Gen. Jack P. Nix Jr., currently the assistant division commander of the 82nd Airborne Division, Fort Bragg, N.C., is slated to become the post's new deputy commanding general .

5th Rgr. Training Bn. plans open house

The 5th Ranger Training Battalion will welcome the civilian community to its annual open house July 31 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Camp Frank D. Merrill, Dahlonega, Ga.

The open house will consist of equipment displays, mountaineering demonstrations, tactical operations demonstrations, hand-to-hand combat demonstrations and special parachuting demonstrations. Refreshments will be available and there is no admission fee.

For more information, contact Capt. Dick Kemp at (404) 864-3327 or 864-3367, Ext. 114.

U-Do-It to suspend for overdue equipment

Customers who use the U-Do-It center loan equipment section will be placed on a 90-day suspension from borrowing equipment when equipment is more than 24 hours overdue, not properly cleaned or abused. This action is necessary in order to have equipment on hand and in good order for other customers.

Security awareness seminar set for July 28

A security awareness seminar will be July 28 in Infantry Hall, Classroom 5.

Conducted by the Directorate of Threat and Security along with the 902nd Military Intelligence Group from Fort Rucker, Ala., the seminar will cover topics such as technology transfer, Subversion and Espionage Directed Against the U.S. Army, counterterrorism and building and key security.

Agencies that will participate in the seminar are U.S. Customs, Federal Bureau of Investigation as well as the 902nd. Security managers are encouraged to attend, but all interested personnel are invited.

For more information, contact Pat Weekley at 545-4772.

Recruiter to visit post

A recruiter from North Georgia College will visit Fort Benning today to provide information about the Green to Gold program, financial aid and degree programs available at the college. Second Lt. Michael Acord will be available in Building 2611, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. both days. For information, call Acord at (706) 864-1801.

Civilian luncheon set

The Civilian Awards Luncheon will be July 27 from 11:30 a.m. to 1:15 p.m. at the Supper Club at the Fort Benning Officers' Club.

The menu is country fried steak, steamed rice, mixed vegetables, rolls, coffee and tea. The cost is $4.35 per person.

Tickets may be obtained by contacting Reba Watson at 545-7410 or Doris Manning at 545-1378 at the Directorate of Resource Management, Parrish Building (Building 66), on Wold Avenue no later than Tuesday.

Retirement, financial planning is available

The Retirement Services Office now provides assistance in retirement planning. Also, a pre-retirement video tape is available for loan. A video tape about financial planning, titled "Making the Right Decision — the Survivor Benefit Plan" is also available.

Call 545-2541 or 545-5369 in advance to reserve the tape. The office is in Soldiers' Plaza, Building 2635.

ACAP seminars set

The Army Career and Alumni Program will host a financial planning seminar Tuesday.

The seminar will be conducted by local financial planners and insurance agents.

The seminar schedule will be: 9 to 9:45 a.m., financial and cash management; 10 to 10:45 a.m., insurance and investments, and 11 to 11:30 a.m., question and answer period with agents and brokers. All seminars will be conducted in Infantry Hall, Classroom 59.

For more information, call Maj. Charles Shelden at 545-4902 or 545-4913.

70th wants soldiers

The 70th Division (Training), a Reserve unit with units throughout Indiana and southeastern Michigan, is looking for soldiers who are looking for challenge.

Drill sergeant and instructor vacancies are available.

Preference will be given to troops who are qualified as 11B, 11C, 11H or 11M with active duty experience. However, those who agree to become military occupational specialty qualified will be considered.

Soldiers can contact the 70th Division's Strength Management Office at (313) 458-6425 for more information.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland and range areas will take place through Sunday. If weather permits, the following compartments may be affected: E-7, HHC, J-1, J-3, J-6, K-9, K-11, L-3, M-2, M-8, N-2, O-1, O-6, O-7, O-10, O-15, Q-2, R-1, T-2, T-5 and T-6.

Burning will occur in pine stands within these compartments to enhance endangered species habitat and training areas.

People using these areas for recreation must vacate the areas before 9:30 a.m. daily.

Training units using compartments adjacent to these areas may experience drift smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while traveling in these areas because of the potential for reduced visibility.

Hispanic committee wants reps

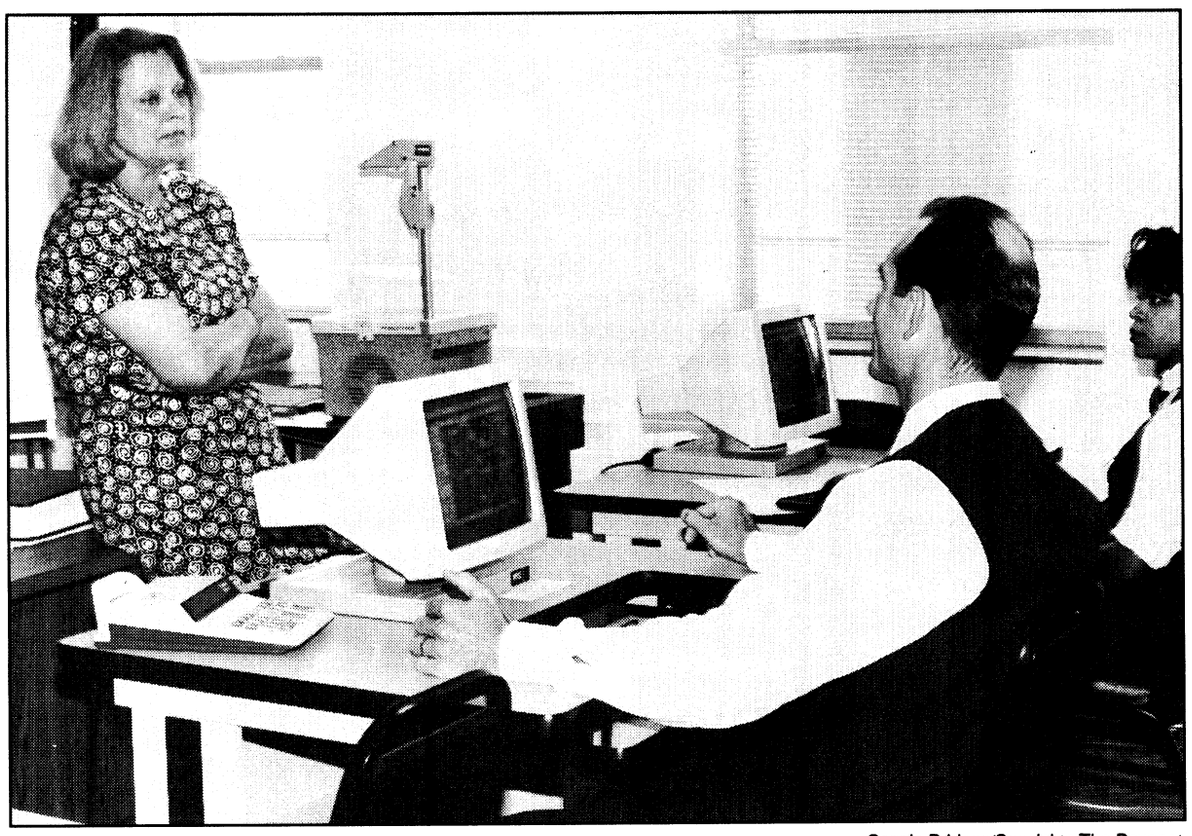
Equal Employment Opportunity Office

Because of recent reductions in force through Voluntary Early Retirement Authority and voluntary separation incentives, the Hispanic Employment Committee has lost several of its members.

This special emphasis committee has been very helpful to the installation and needs to be replenished, according to Equal Employment Opportunity officials.

Nominations are requested from the directors of each organization at Fort Benning of individuals who might be interested in joining a working committee which deals with employment concerns of Hispanic employees as well as applicants.

Representatives do not have to be of Hispanic origin to serve as committee members, just concerned with helping Hispanics and assisting in initiating programs to enhance the career development of Hispanics.



Nominations may be submitted by Professional Office System, or PROFS (DANDYE) or by memorandum to the EEO Office, ATZB-EE. Submit nominations no later than Wednesday.

For additional information, call the EEO Office at 545-1872.

Billeting provides place to stay for guests, transient personnel

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

In August, Ray Wagner, billeting officer and fund manager, expects to see the beginning of the first of several renovation projects to modernize Olson Hall, Building 399, the original cuartels built on Fort Benning during the 1920s.

A total of 96 rooms in the "G" Section will be refurbished from the bottom up.

Also, next month is expected to be the groundbreaking for a 60-unit guest house on the open area between Burger King and the Officers' Club.

Then later this fall, an in-house laundry facility for Billeting will be installed in what was the old mess hall in Building 399.

That's progress for Wagner, who has been in charge of transient and guest housing at Fort Benning for the past four years.

He oversees 1,372 rooms in total. This includes 611 in Olson Hall and others in the two remaining cuartels in Henry Hall, Towle Hall, McVeigh Hall, 54 rooms in the current guest house on Richardson Circle, and others in the distinguished visitors quarters, McIver complex plus the Marshall House.

In 1991, Wilkins Hall, part of the middle cuartel, was turned over to the 11th Infantry Regiment for permanent party residents and the 988th Military Police Company. Before this, it was also part of Billeting. Even so, Fort Benning Billeting is the largest in the U.S. Army.

Recently, Billeting operated under the Morale, Welfare and Recreation Nonappropriated Single Fund even though still a part of the Directorate of Engineering and Housing, now the Directorate of Public Works.

In 1991, Gen. Gordon Sullivan, Army chief of staff, gave Billeting its own budget with the understanding that the funds generated by its revenue must go back into the billeting system. This has allowed Billeting to be more progressive, Wagner said.

He operates his facility for guest and transient housing as a first class hotel with all of the amenities. This includes a renovated lobby, completed in April 1992, that reminds the visitor of just that.

Annually, he receives a schedule from the U.S. Army Infantry School with projections of students to be attending all courses for the coming fiscal year. Wagner bases his needs for staff and supplies on this.

Currently, his occupancy is at around 70 percent due to the downsizing of the military and fewer students. During Desert Storm, they were more than full, he said. Then they were issuing statements of nonavailability and sending people to Columbus. He goes with the flow (up stream, he says).

The Infantry Officer Basic Course students make up the bulk of his customers, but he also handles the majority of the School of the Americas students and other single foreign students.

"Spouses are allowed casual visits of up to seven days without being subject to having their basic allowance for quarters withdrawn."

Guests with families and children are housed in the guest house facilities.

Wagner said his goal has been to get the Billeting rooms modernized and then on a cyclical renovation program every five years. He said it has been a tough challenge, but he's almost there.

Nevertheless, his guest rates are the lowest in the Army, and his transient rates of $14 per night are tied for the fourth lowest. When sent off post, soldiers will be reimbursed up to $47 per day for a room. These are training dollars so every effort is made to house temporary duty travelers and students on post.

About $300,000 per month goes out in operating expenses that include supplies, salary and equipment, and about $500,000 is generated in income. The extra is used for improvements and those capital purchase minor construction projects approved by the installation commander.

Currently, Wagner is authorized 263 employees, but is functioning with 221. A number of his employees are military family members who move with the soldiers.

In addition, he has changed some policies in order to retain employees. There are full-time positions with benefits now, and Wagner budgets for bonuses to be given as incentive awards.

A retired soldier, Wagner originally took the position when a general talked him into it — saying he owed him a favor. He responded by saying, "That's the worst job on Fort Benning." The general said that's why he was needed.

Wagner said, "he tells it like it is." As a retiree who spent six years in Saudi Arabia training its National Guard, he does not rely on his present job the way someone else might. So when he sees something that needs doing he speaks up.

One other advantage is that he taught 33 Infantry Officer Advanced Courses in the late '60s and early '70s, while part of the Brigade and Battalion Operations Department Combined Arms and Tactics Directorate at Fort Benning during his military career. Such recent commanders as Brig. Gen. Carl F. Ernst, Col. Burnet Quick, Col. Gregory Camp, Col. James Crockert and Col. Gary Jones were once his students.

"I guess people either love me or they hate me," he said.

"The Bayonet has all of Fort Benning's news — first."

ARMY FAMILY ACTION PLAN ISSUES

Garrison Commander's Office

More than 100 issues and questions were presented for action, comment or status to the garrison and installation staff at the Fort Benning Family Action Symposium recently.

The issues were broken down into functional areas and each directorate, activity or area was asked to respond. The following are the questions posed to the Directorate of Public Works.

Q: What is the policy regarding curbside recycling in housing areas?

A: A material recovery facility is under construction and nearing completion. Transport and handling equipment and containers for household storage of separated materials are now on order.

A recycling program is scheduled to begin Aug. 23 provided all required equipment is in place by that time.

Q: What is the plan to upgrade and repair historical homes?

A: Historical homes and quarters eligible for placement on the National Register of Historical Buildings are included in Fort Benning's whole neighborhood revitalization program.

Plans to repair or renovate any structure with potential historical significance must be coordinated with the State Historical Preservation Office.

This coordination is presently in progress with good results. Presently, it appears that interior modernization can occur with little or no adverse impact to the exterior design of the quarters.

Q: Are work orders prioritized?

A: Called-in work orders or service orders are prioritized according to the urgency of the required service. Problems constituting an immediate danger to life, health, mission, security or property are classified "emergency" and given priority over all other work.

"Urgent" priority is assigned to required work that could become an emergency, could seriously affect morale or has command emphasis.

An effort is made to correct any deficiency within two working days, however, accomplishment varies from two hours to five days depending on the nature of the problem and availability of craftsmen.

Required work not falling into the "emergency" or "urgent" categories is classified "routine." This work is accomplished on a first-come, first-served basis. Whenever possible, attempts are made to accomplish work within 30 days.

Q: Who is responsible for housing and grounds maintenance?

A: In general, residents are responsible for maintenance of grounds to the surrounding streets not to exceed 150 feet and halfway between their quarters and the adjacent one. Common use areas and tree lines will, in some cases, shorten the distance.

Army Regulation 210-50 defines areas of responsibility for occupants of multi-family dwelling units. Vacant units and common use areas are maintained by a DPW contractor.

Outlaws steal game from Ladyhawks 8-4

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The women's softball league is winding its way toward the playoffs. With only a handful of games left, the teams are battling for playoff position.

Game One

The Bandits gained a measure of revenge on the Silver Foxes with a 14-4 whipping. After four straight defeats dating back to last year the Bandits maintained their hold on first place while pounding the Silver Foxes.

The Silver Foxes put the first runs on the board in the top of the first inning on three singles and a bases-loaded walk to take a 2-0 lead. It would be their last lead of the day.

In the Bandit half of the first inning, centerfielder Tammy White singled to third. Pitcher Vivian Womack moved her to third with a single to center field. Left fielder Valerie Patterson singled home White with a hit to center. Catcher Regina Jackson doubled home two more runs and third baseman Janice Randall tacked on another run with a single to center. After the smoke cleared, the Bandits were up 4-2.

The Bandits tacked on three more runs in the bottom half of the second inning to go up 7-2.

The Silver Foxes cut the lead to 7-4 in the top of the third when right center fielder Mary King led off the inning with a walk. A single to left center by left fielder Monica Soloman and a fielder's choice play at second off the bat of third baseman Dawn Davis drove in King from third and moved the runners up to second and third.

A line shot off the pitcher's glove from Silver Foxes catcher Lisa Bailey drove in Soloman for the second run of the inning, trimming the lead to 7-4. That would be as close as the Foxes would get.

In the bottom of the fourth inning, the Bandits exploded for six runs and a 13-4 tilt. With one on and two out, a single by Patterson put runners at second and third. Jackson drove in a run with a sharp single off the glove of Davis at third. A RBI single by Randall to right field kept the merry-go-round in place.

Right center fielder Sachouco Cyrus singled down the left field line for another run. Bandit shortstop Kim Shawver slapped a hard grounder to shortstop Diane Jennell who over threw to first allowing two more runs to score and let Shawver move to third. Right fielder Debra Pringle hit a pop up between home and the pitcher's mound for a base hit and RBI. Second baseman Annie Felton finished off the inning with a liner to Jennell at short.

Bandit third baseman Janice Randall drives the ball to right field for a base hit.

In the bottom of the fifth inning, the Bandits put the game away with a single run to take a 10-run advantage at 14-4.

Game Two

The Outlaws held up the Ladyhawks and slugged their way to an 8-4 win.

The Outlaws scored four runs in the bottom of the second inning to take a 4-0 advantage. Left fielder Lena Williams got things started with a single to left then second baseman Tina Whitaker walked. Pitcher Carmen McDowell flied to left center for the first out of the inning. Outlaw right center fielder Marcia Garcia drove in the first run of the game with a double to center. One out later and with runners on second and third, catcher Leeann Baldwin drew a walk to load the bases. Designated hitter Cindy Welch made the Ladyhawks pay when she promptly lined a single to center driving in all three runners for a 4-0 lead.

The Outlaws sneaked another run on the board in the fourth inning. A walk to Whitaker opened the frame; a single from McDowell would have put runners on first and second, but Whitaker was waved to third where she was thrown out. McDowell moved to second on the throw. A double to left center by Garcia scored McDowell from second. The Outlaws couldn't put anything else on the board until the sixth inning.

In the bottom of the sixth inning, the Outlaws scored their final three runs of the night. With two out and two on, Garcia slapped a single to center for an RBI. A fielder's choice at third proved costly for the Ladyhawks when third baseman Lechia Jones couldn't handle the throw from shortstop Roni Rhinehardt and two runs scored for an 8-0 Outlaw bulge.

The Ladyhawks waited until the last possible moment to start a rally. In their last at bat in the top of the seventh inning, they scored four times to put a scare into the Outlaws and had a chance for more before Channell Davis ended the game with a force at second.

Benning martial artists make All-Army

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

Three soldiers from Fort Benning participated and made the All-Army Tae Kwon Do team at Fort Indiantown Gap, Pa.

Fort Benning Tae Kwon Do school coach Edward Givans, a staff sergeant with Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, 4th Ranger Training Battalion, along with teammates Rachael Ridenour, a sergeant with the U.S. Army Infantry Center Military Police Company and Jason Del Mundo, a private first class with Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, made the All-Army team.

After accomplishing that, the three soldiers made the Armed Forces team and won Silver Medals in their respective weight classes at the Armed Forces Championships.

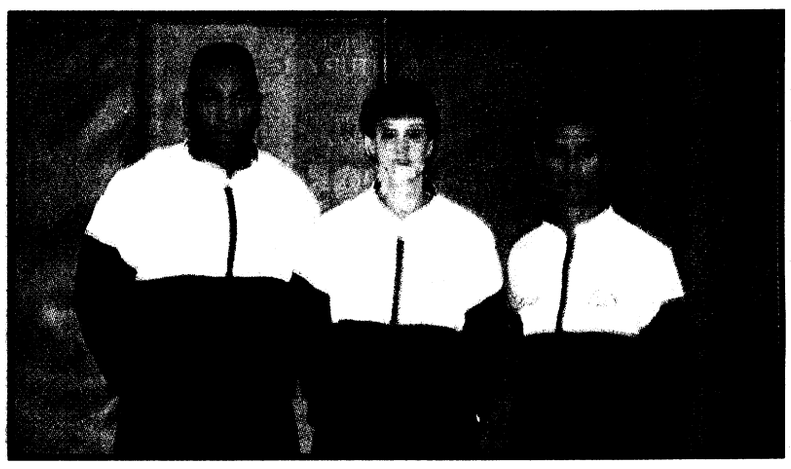
Up next for the threesome were the nationals in St. Paul, Minn., May 27 through 30. Ridenour captured a Silver Medal while Del Mundo and Givans were defeated in the quarterfinals.

In his quarterfinal match, Givans suffered a broken pinky finger on his right hand, causing him to withdraw from the match while leading.

"I wanted to continue the match, but the doctor said no," said Givans. "I was fighting for at least a Bronze Medal. The guy I was fighting eventually went on to win the Gold Medal."

The injury also forced Givans to miss the Conseil International Du Sport Militaire Championships at Kingston, Ontario, Canada June 9 through 13.

Del Mundo, a rookie on the team this year and fighting against a fighter from Saudi Arabia, was defeated in his first match.



"This was my first international match and I was a little intimidated," said Del Mundo, a Los Angeles, Calif., native. "I didn't have my head screwed on tight. I hope to fight him again some day and maybe the outcome will be different.

"I'm looking forward to returning to the camp next year, even after all the beatings I got in practice."

In her third year on the team, Ridenour became the shining star for the All-Army team and Fort Benning. Winning a Silver Medal at the nationals this year was the highlight of the year for her even though she became the first U.S. military athlete, male or female, to win a Gold Medal at the CISM Tae Kwon Do championships.

"Winning a Silver Medal at the nationals means more to me because I was competing against everyone from around the country not just military competitors," said Ridenour. "It was the first time that females were allowed to participate in a world CISM. I'm glad that the U.S. had a strong showing. To see our flag raised and hear the national anthem played was an honor for me as an American," said the Des Moines, Iowa, native.

Next up for the threesome will be the Southeast Military Regionals at Briant Wells Field House Saturday.

Terry K. Ray/Special to The Bayonet
Edward Givans (left), Rachael Ridenour and Jason Del Mundo.

Although Givans will not be fighting, he will be directing the event and Ridenour will probably officiate because there might not be any female black belts for her to compete against.

For Ridenour, a trip to San Antonio, Texas, to attend the Olympic Festival July 24 through Aug. 1, will be her last competition for the year, before the U.S. Open in February.

Old South Regional shootout hits mark

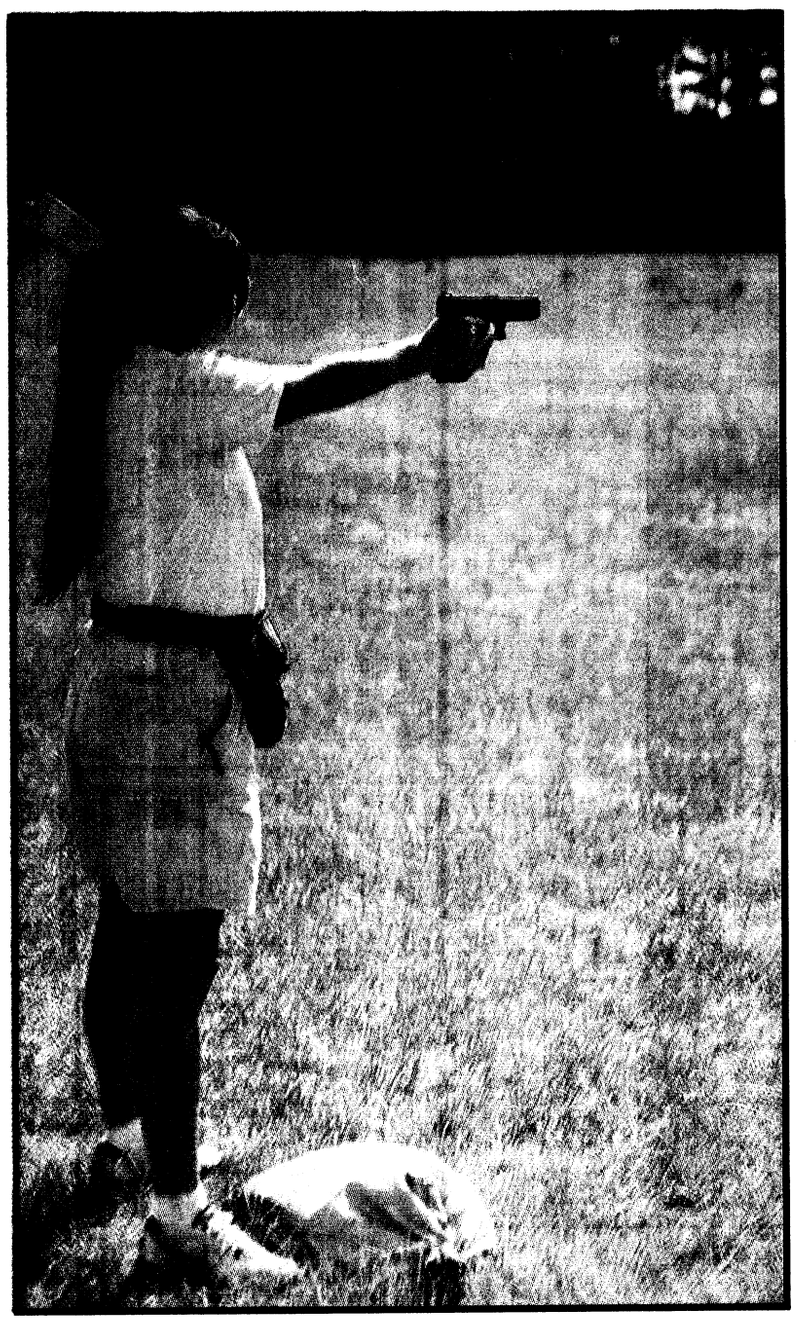
By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Old South Classic Regional pistol match at English Range June 19 and 20 brought more than 200 participants to the range for the two-day event that was sponsored by the Glock Sport Shooting Foundation.

The match was scored using the Lewis system that divides all the competitors into thirds. In each class, the upper third is group A, the middle third is group B and the bottom third is group C.

In the military class, the top shooter from each group won a brand new Glock 9mm pistol. Capt. Harold Christy of Fort Rucker, Ala., won the "A" group, Sgt. Walter Smith of Warner Robins Air Force Base captured the "B" group and William Russell took the "C" group.

Darrell Powell, Michael Clark and Sandra Utasy went home with $125 in each of their pockest for taking second place in each group. Eighteen other military personnel won cash prizes ranging from $50 to $ 100.



Six more pistols were given away in the civilian category and the law enforcement category.

"This type of match allows the average shooter and the experienced shooter an opportunity to win a prize," said Britt Wilkey, a sergeant with Company B, 324th Forward Support Battalion, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division.

Jim Graham, coordinator of the match for the Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club, was enthusiastic about the crowd's participation.

"I believe this was an opportunity for Fort Benning personnel to participate in a national-level match and stand a good chance to win some very nice prizes without leaving post," said Graham. "Despite the extreme heat, the match went very rapidly. We owe a special thank you to Glock and the people who volunteered their time to work this event."

The second annual Old South Classic will be in April at Fort Benning. All military personnel will receive a 20 percent discount on their entry fee.

Rifle and pistol club conducts tactical match

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club conducted its July tactical match Saturday at English Range. Forty-seven shooters turned out to face the heat and humidity.

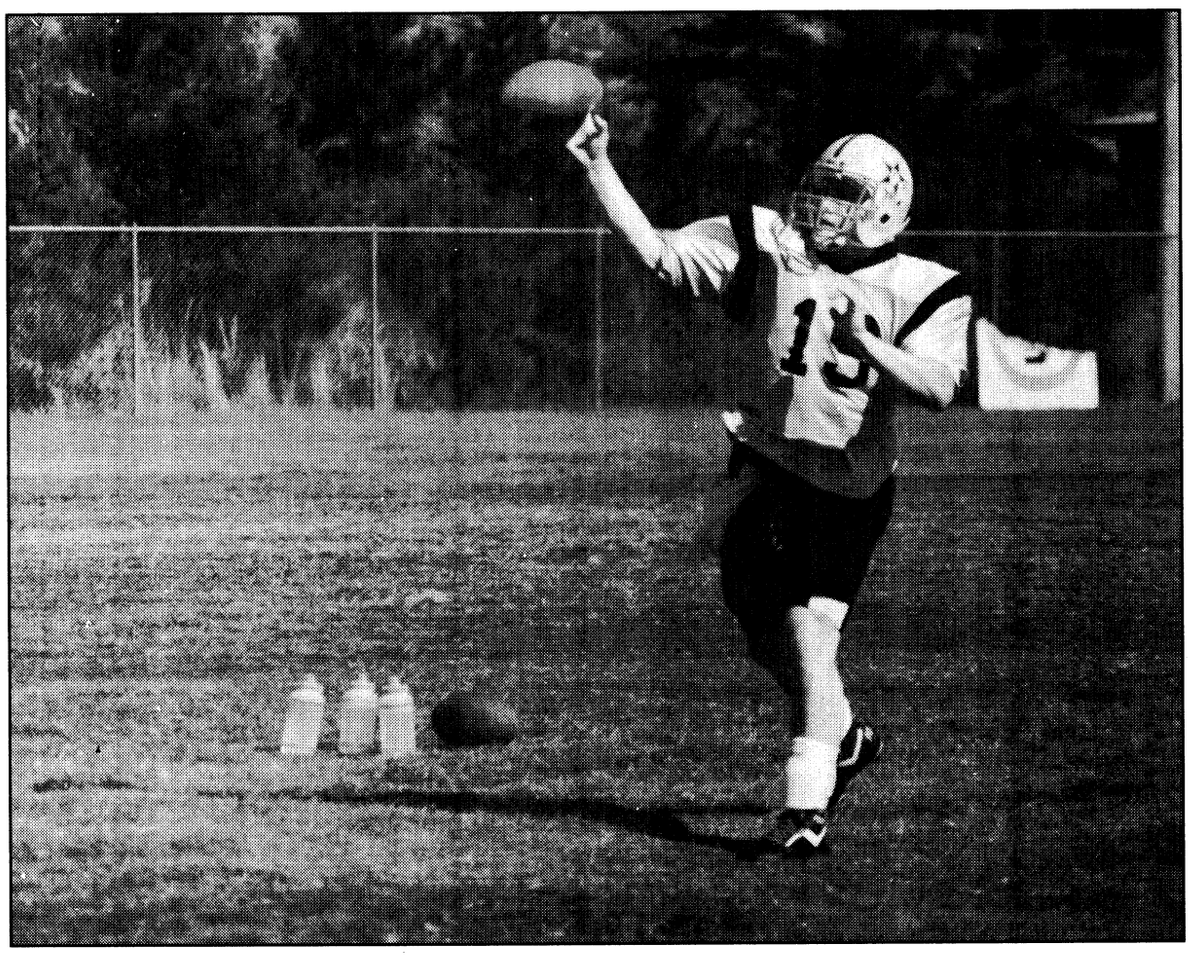
In the competitor class, James Odoms captured first place with an overall score of 329. William Allensworth took second with a score of 280 and Richard Hopp rounded out the top finishers taking third with a score of 237.

Danny Stearns took high honors in the sportsman class with a round of 314. Scott Tiller placed second firing a score of 305 and Bobby Ellis finished third at 285.

The high military award went to Sgt. Bobby Lawrence with a score of 365. Morris Lewark of Jack T. Rutledge Correctional Institute captured the high law enforcement plaque with score of 273. High service revolver went to Mark T. Olson with a round of 263.

The next match will be a night match Aug. 14 at English Range beginning at 8:30 p.m.

Entry fee is $10 if paid before Aug. 8 and $13 after that date. Shooters do not have to be affiliated with the club or in the military to shoot in this match.



For more information contact, the rifle and pistol club at 689-3371.

A handgun safety course for women will also take place at English Range Aug. 14 and 15. The cost for this course will be $15 if paid before Aug. 1 and $20 after that date.

The course will offer four hours of classroom instruction on avoiding criminal attack, controlling violent confrontations and the legal ramifications of deadly force. The afternoon will be devoted to ammunition choice, weapon function, basic safety, care and cleaning and handgun choice. The following day will be a live-fire session.

The instructor for the course will be Don Coleman, a deputy sheriff from North Georgia. Coleman is both a National Rifle Association and Georgia State Peace Officers Standards and Training firearms instructor.

Participants will need hearing and eye protection, a serviceable handgun, 200 rounds of ammunition and note-taking material. The textbook "Basics of Personal Protection" is free with the course. The text "Handgun Primer and Gun Proofing Your Child" by Massad Ayoob is strongly recommended. This book can be purchased at the club for $5.

Stars hope to shine

Semi pro football to begin

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Columbus Stars semi-professional football team hopes to shine in 1993. With the home opener less than two weeks away, head coach Tom Staton has faith that the changes made will make a difference.

"Last year I tried to run the offense and be the head coach. It was a little tough," said Staton. "This year I've moved coach Mike Dunbar to offensive coordinator to take up the slack. He's doing a great job for us at the position."

With Dunbar moving to offensive coordinator and some new blood in the backfield, Staton looks to improve on offensive capabilities.

"Last year we were a little weak at quarterback, " said Staton." We've moved Eddie Mitchell to the quarterback position; he ran the offense for us in the latter part of the season last year.

"We've also beefed up the offensive line this year. The front line should run about 300 pounds from end to end," he added. "The defense is smaller in size, but quicker. We also have more experience at the linebacker and defensive back position.

With the Alabama Raiders moving to the Florida league this year, Staton looks for more parity within the Southern Football League.

"The Raiders totally dominated the western division last year. We finished third in the division at 6-5, which would have been good for second place in the eastern division," said Staton. "If our kicking game had been up to par, we would have won a lot more than we did, but the young man we had as our kicker was also our starting running back. When we needed him to kick a late field goal his legs were too worn out to kick very far."

Fort Benning will help supply some of the main parts for the Stars with at least 18 military personnel on the roster; four are team captains.

"We probably wouldn't have much of a team without the players from Fort Benning," said Staton. "Their leadership along with their ability as football players makes it very easy to coach these guys. They also gel very well with the civilian portion of our team."

Three of the team's captains are returnees from last year's team and agreed with Staton on the overall status of the team.

"I think we have more power on offense," said wide receiver and offensive captain Jeff Siedel, "and the beef up front will open some holes for the backs and keep the defense off the quarterback."

On defense, the "Crunch Bunch" will once again be anchored by the linebacking corps of Thomas Bryant and Connie Burnham; both are defensive captains.

"The defense is basically the same execept for three or four people," said Thomas. "We are a little smaller, but were going to be quicker."

Burnham said he feels the team has improved on offense and defense but the most important factor that will help the team most is leadership.

"The one thing that was lacking from last year was leadership on the offense," said Burnham. "This year some players have stepped up and put more emphasis on the team playing ball together. I think that's going to play a big part, especially in the fourth quarter of a close ball game."

The Stars tangle with the Atlanta Colts 8 p.m. July 24 at Memorial Stadium. For ticket information, call 322-0601.

4/41st FA wins title in football

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Gigolos of Battery A, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division went to Fort Stewart, Ga., June 27 through July 1 to play in the division's artillery flag football championships and came back to Fort Benning with the title.

The Gigolos went 6-0 on their way to the championship, winning three games at Kelley Hill for the right to represent the 3rd Brigade.

The Gigolos defeated the team from the 724th Battalion, 2nd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, 14-0, to keep the title on Kelley Hill .

Fishing tournament — The Field of Dreams is once again conducting a series of striper tournaments on Lake Lanier.

It is a team tournament and will be headquartered out of Brantley Marine on Buford Highway in Buford, Ga. Entry fee is $75. Bring two best fish to the scales. Hours are from 5 a.m. until 7 p.m. All boats meet at Brantley Marine and then depart to launch anywhere on the lake. Leave the lake and come back as many times as you like. Live bait or artificial. No chumming. No off limits. Open to pros and guides alike.

The dates for the six tournament series are Saturday, Aug. 28, Sept. 18, Oct. 16, Nov. 27 and Dec. 11. There are also plans for a two-day "classic" event Jan. 8 and 9. To get a registration form or more information, call (404) 683-8680.

Golf clinic — Those interested in golfing have every opportunity to learn about golf during July and August. The pro shop is offering lessons for women and youth. There will be a women's clinic July 25, 26 and 27 from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. Cost is $20 and like the other clinics includes range balls and rental clubs.

The youth clinics are broken into age groups. They are all held on the same dates but at different times. The dates are July 21 and 22, 28 and 29 and Aug. 4 and 5. Instruction for those in the 7 to 10 age group is from 8:30 to 9:15 a.m. for those in the 11 to 14, from 10 to 10:45 a.m. and for those 15 to 17, 4 to 4:45 p.m.

There will also be instruction for the 15- to 17-year-olds July 23 and 30 and Aug. 9, from 6 to 6:45 p.m. Cost for the youth instruction is $10. For more information, call the pro shop at 687-1940.

Volleyball tourney — The Air Force Sergeants Association Chapter 404 is sponsoring the Summer Slam '93 2-on-2 Beach Volleyball Tournament Saturday at Gator Park on Robins Air Force Base near Macon, Ga.

The cost is $20 per team before the tourney and $25 on the day of the tourney. Each participant will receive a Summer Slam tank top. Prizes will be awarded in each category for top finisher and runner up.

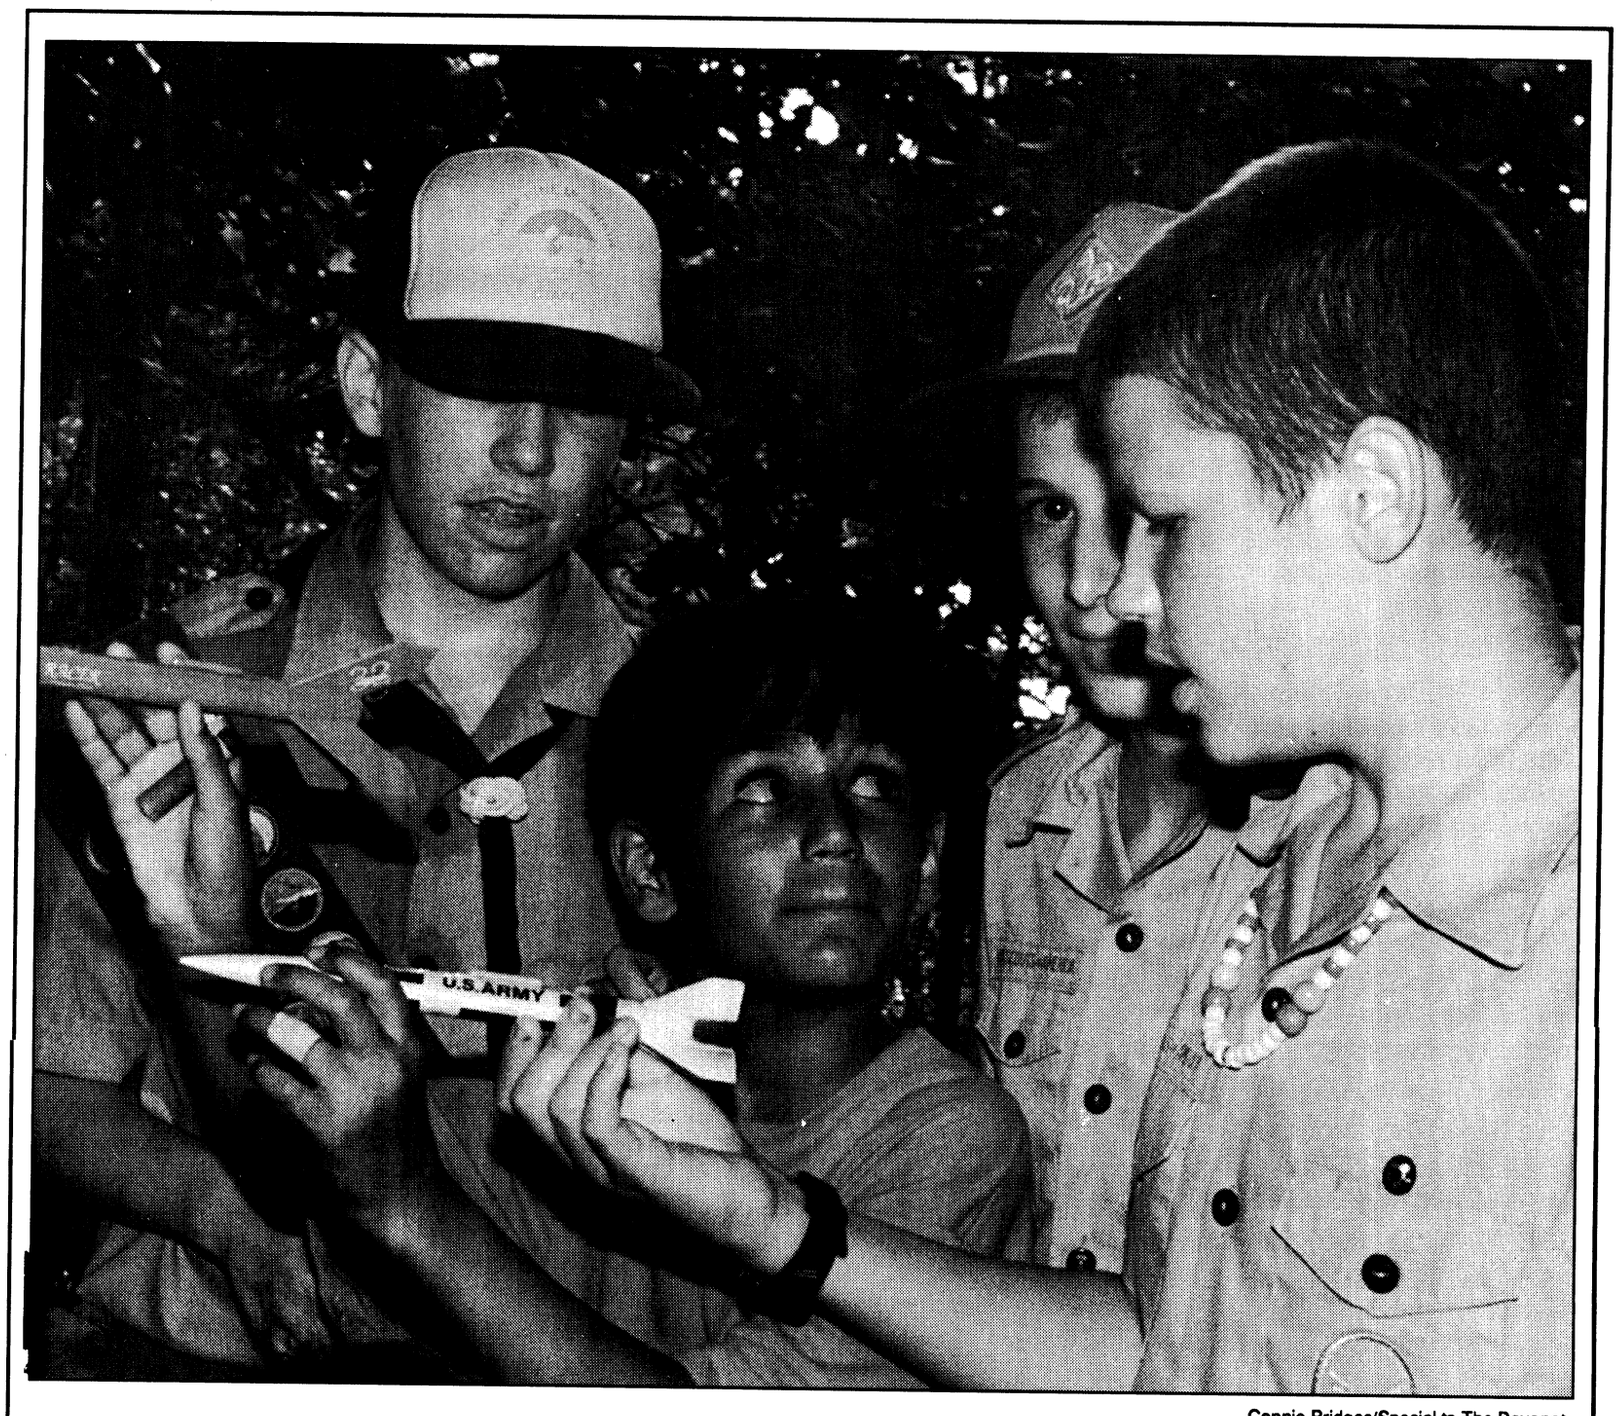
Local girl to attend Girl Scout program

Girl Scouts

The daughter of a Fort Benning captain has been selected to attend "Rocks, Rapids and Ridges" an opportunity sponsored by Catawba Valley Area Girl Scout Council, in Hickory, N.C., Aug. 1 through 16.

Jessica Volkman, daughter of Capt. Robert and Linda Volkman has been selected to attend the program, which brings together Girl Scouts from all over the United States to experience adventures ranging from wilderness expeditions to state history to science and arts.



The program is offered to Cadette and Senior Girl Scouts ages 12 to 18.

Jessica will be with eight girls from throughout the United States selected by Catawba Valley Girl Scout Council. There will also be girls selected from international countries to participate in this event.

The girls were selected on the basis of their interpersonal skills, maturity and desire to interact with girls and adults from around the country.

"Rocks, Rapids and Ridges" participants will visit the Pisgah National Forest that encompasses 92,900 acres of varied geographic recreational land for the broadest range of activities, including backpacking the Appalachian Trail, white-water rafting on a class four river and climbing the face of Looking Glass Mountain.

A variety of trees along rolling terrain and clear streams are accessible by a series of trails, blanketed with thousands of wildflower species.

Smart shoppers save $$$

Get the most out of clipping coupons

American Forces Information Service

Looking for a quick and easy way to save money? Just use coupons when grocery shopping, said Defense Commissary officials.

In the last year alone, commissary shoppers saved more than $240 million by using coupons.

Tips for getting the most out of coupons include swapping coupons for items you don't use for coupons for items you do.

Make up the grocery list and stick to it as closely as you can. Avoid impulse buying. Don't go grocery shopping when you are hungry.

Other tips include:

• Organize coupons into categories, such as soups, detergents and toiletries.

• Use coupons closest to expiration dates to avoid losing the savings.

• Buy only items that you normally use; don't buy something just because you have a coupon for it.

• Comparison shop for items, unless you have a brand preference.

• Check the shelf for items on sale that might provide a better deal than using the coupon, letting you use the coupon at a later date.

• Use rebates when offered.

Make your child's first dental visit an enjoyable one

U.S. Army Dental Activity

Your child's first dental visit can and should be educational and enjoyable. Here are some steps you can take to assure that the first visit is a pleasant one.

Be positive

You can begin by talking about dental care and a visit to the dentist in a confident manner. Children are very impressionable.

If you don't portray dentistry as something to be afraid of; they'll be much less likely to feel anxious.

Your positive attitude can make all the difference in the way your child will view dental care the rest of his or her life.

Get acquainted

When you have a dental appointment, let your youngster know that it's "no big deal." Consider bringing your child with you on one of your routine visits to show him or her what really goes on in the dental office. Let your child know that this first dental visit signifies an important step in growing up.

Prepare for the first visit

When it comes to preparing your child for a dental visit, don't use words like "needle," "shot" or "drilling." Terms such as "a little pinch," "sleepwater for your tooth" and "tooth tickler" are much better understood and accepted by children.

Before you actually bring your child in for the first visit, you might consider a "make-believe" session. One parent can pretend to be the dentist and the other parent or a family member can be the dental assistant. Have your child sit in a chair with a napkin around his or her neck. Use a spoon for the dental mirror. Say things like "open wide, please," then count the teeth out loud and move the tongue with the "mirror." Let your child watch the make-believe session with a hand-held mirror.

Dentists care

Because dentists realize that a child's first dental visit is often the most important one, they take extra time and effort to make the visit a special one. While they check and count teeth and look for cavities, they also demonstrate how dental equipment works, and they teach your child how to brush.

If children are introduced to dentistry in a healthy way, they won't be afraid of dental care.

Help your children enjoy a lifetime of good dental health by starting off with a dental visit before your child turns 3 or at least before all the baby teeth have erupted.

Scholar

Civilian's son receives Fulbright

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

The winner of the first Fulbright Scholarship from Columbus College is Tim Porter, 25, son of Mary Porter, a computer clerk in Nutrition Care at Martin Army Community Hospital.

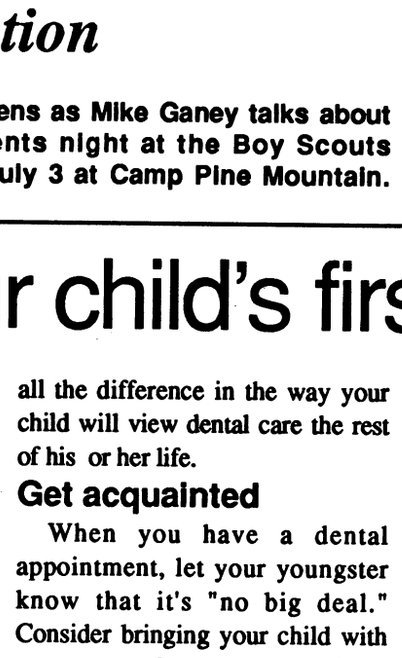
Porter recently returned from a pre-departure orientation in Washington, D.C., where he met other scholarship winners and participated in a panel presentation on teaching and conducting research in Africa.

His $18,000 grant from the J. William Fulbright Scholarship Board will be used to study African politics and the democratization in South Africa as that country's government makes its transition in this area.

Porter said he learned at the Washington D.C., orientation that most of the 150 scholarships appear to have been awarded to graduate students from such Ivy League colleges as Harvard and Yale. He feels very fortunate.

A recent graduate from Columbus College with a major in political science, he said his application proposal first went through a campus committee, which took about one month. His deadline for it to be sent to the national office was Oct. 31. On Jan. 31, Porter discovered he had made it through the screening committee.

However, it wasn't until April 25 of this year that he learned he had been awarded the scholarship.



He said his proposal on research had to be country-specific and required a tremendous amount of background work. At one time, he was considering doing his research in Ghana, but malaria became an issue.

The tentative date for national elections in South Africa is April 27, and he will study the process leading up to this.

English and the tribal language of Afrikaner are spoken in South Africa so he doesn't believe language will be a barrier.

His home base will be an affiliation with the University of Witwatesrand in Johannesburg.

He applied for the scholarship at the encouragement of Jacqueline

Porter

Konan, assistant professor of French at Columbus College. He also had the recommendation of Dr. William Chappell, chairman of the Political Science Department.

Porter intends to pursue his doctorate in political science when he returns.

He wants to specialize in African politics at the university level, teaching, traveling, researching and perhaps writing.

He said he is most grateful to those who have supported him thus far: his mother, his fiancee, Erica Johnson, and Konan and Chappell, the faculty members who helped him apply for the grant.

Clubs cater to bingo lovers

Fort Benning's Main NCO, Sand Hill NCO clubs conduct several games daily, many cash prizes

By Kimberly Bennett
Directorate of Community Activities

Bingo is a popular activity at Fort Benning, and the Main and Sand Hill NCO clubs try to cater to those who love the game, according to Jesse Carter, manager of the Sand Hill NCO Club.

Games are played in the main ballroom of the Sand Hill NCO Club Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 7 p.m. and Saturday at 1 p.m. and in the main ballroom of the Main NCO Club Tuesday and Thursday at 7 p.m. and Sunday at 2 p.m.

Each session lasts 3 1/2 hours, and all military personnel and family members with valid identification cards and club cards can play.

The minimum age for players is 13 and winners must be 19 to claim prizes.

The wide variety of games and cash prizes and the state-of-the-art equipment are what has made Fort Benning's bingo program the best in the Army, Carter said.

"The people involved with the program are always trying to come up with new games and ideas to keep people interested," he said.

On Monday and Saturday at Sand Hill and Tuesday and Sunday at the Main NCO Club, a package of 15 games costs $10. Each game pays a prize of $100.

Special games pay $5,000 for the first bingo with 48 numbers covered, $2,000 for 49 numbers and $750 for 50 or more numbers.

The package price on Wednesday and Friday at Sand Hill and Thursday at the Main NCO Club is two packs of 15 games for $15.

The packs include special games that pay $5,000 for bingos with 48 numbers covered, $2,000 for 49 numbers and $1,000 for 50 or more numbers.

Not included in the packages are three large cash paying games that can be bought separately. The super jackpot pays $5,000.

The prize for the cruise game is a seven-day cruise for two plus $1,000 spending money or $3,000, and the winner of the bonus game takes home $2,000.

These games are played every day and winners are determined by the number of spaces covered.

Pay day means super bingo at both clubs. The special session is played at Sand Hill on the day closest to the first of the month; it is played at the Main NCO Club on the day closest to the mid-month pay day.

For this special bingo session, each game pack cost $25, but cash prizes for regular games triple to $300.

These games are only one reason players keep returning to bingo sessions, Carter said.

Another reason is the computerized equipment used to display the numbers and determine the winners.

After each number is called, it is displayed on several computer monitors throughout the room.

When a player calls "Bingo!", the winning card is put into the computer, which reads its serial number and displays the card on the monitors along with the message, "This card is a winner."

"That way everyone sees the winning card," Carter said.

And everyone has a chance of being the winner, he said. That is what makes bingo fun and challenging for every member of the family, Carter said.

For more information, contact Carter or Bobby McCleland at 687-0843.

Pyramids can mean powerful trouble

If it's too good to be true it probably is

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

You can earn thousands of dollars quickly and easily, whenever you need it. Achieve your dream now. Own that second home.

Sound good?

"If it sounds too good to be true, it probably is," said Brenda Jimenez of the Washington Better Business Bureau. Pyramid schemes lure people with fantastic promises, but rarely deliver. In fact, they sometimes deliver serious legal problems.

On the other hand, military members and Department of Defense employees interested in second jobs now that can become full-time jobs after retirement might consider legitimate multilevel marketing companies. In multilevel marketing, independent business people ("distributors") sell consumer products, usually in customers' homes.

According to Jimenez, a good multilevel company rewards hard workers with fair incomes. Being distributors for such companies is appealing because start-up costs are lower than for starting a business. In addition, workers can set their own hours, and earnings are based on energy and talent.

Jimenez said many people confuse pyramid scams with legitimate multilevel marketing companies such as Amway or Fuller Brush.

All legitimate companies encourage distributors to recruit a sales force and reward them with a percentage of the sales generated by recruits, she said. Distributors have to work hard to recruit, manage and motivate their sales force.

A good company has quality products and supports sales people with advertising and timely product shipment. Success is based on product quality and the distributors' ability to sell the product. Recruiting new distributors is secondary. The company should also offer to buy back unsold inventory for at least 80 percent of cost.

Pyramid schemes are illegal and get their name from the way they pay off. The initial promoter and early players are at the "top" and take money from those "below" who join later. Eventually, the number of people who have to play outstrips the population.

A simple, extreme example: A promoter takes $1 from each of 10,000 recruits. To make the same $10,000 profit, the second level must find 10,001 recruits each—100 million people, who in turn would have to find more than a trillion.

A classic example of a pyramid scheme originated in the late 1960s with Glen Turner and Dare to Be Great. Investors paid $5,000 for distributorships. This enabled them to sell mink oil cosmetics to the public or to participate in a self-motivation course.

At revival type meetings, investors were dazzled by Turner's quasi-religious pitch and promises of enormous wealth.

The company provided limited advertising and product distribution. This encouraged investors to try to recoup their losses by selling distributorships to new investors. The scheme collapsed and thousands lost more than $40 million. Turner went to jail.

A Better Business Bureau and Securities Administrators Association report warns that operators often target close-knit groups such as religious and social organizations to increase peer-group pressure to participate. A prospect is led to believe that if the program is promoted by a religious group or does not use the mails, it is safe.

Because of the current interest in entrepreneurship, the number of pyramid schemes is likely to increase, said Scott Stapf, a consultant to the Better Business Bureau. He said complaints are already coming in from former service members who were cheated out of their separation bonuses by such schemes. To avoid being swindled, the report advises extreme caution. Some tips:

- Beware of promises of quick, easy and unreasonably high profits.
- Be careful if the promoter is more interested in recruiting new distributors than selling a product or service.
- Check state and federal registration agencies; because such schemes are illegal, the business will not be registered.
- Get facts about the company, its officers and its products.
- Get written copies of the company's marketing plan, sales literature and similar material.
- Avoid promoters who fail to provide detailed explanations of their plans.
- Resist the temptation to invest just because the person is a friend, co-worker or member of your church; that person may have been misled.
- Realize that participation in a pyramid scheme could result in closer Internal Revenue Service scrutiny of your tax return.

If you have questions about the legitimacy of an opportunity, contact your local Better Business Bureau. Finally, if you do join a legitimate multilevel marketing company, DoD legal advisers remind you that it is illegal to sell during duty time and to subordinates. Your commander or local ethics adviser can give you more details.

To check on a business, write to: Direct Selling Association 1776 K St., NW Washington, D.C. 20006 or call (202) 293-5760.

New food labels mean smarter eating

American Institute for Cancer Research

Did you ever buy a "lite" version of your favorite food? It's possible that the only lighter thing about it was the color and not the calories or fat you were hoping to avoid.

Luckily, misleading food labels are being forced off supermarket shelves, thanks to new regulations from the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

Food manufacturers are now required to follow uniform standards for food labeling, making ingredients and nutrition information clearer to the consumer.

That means it's easier for you to compare nutrition values of different products and make healthier choices.

For example, on every label you'll find how many grams of fat and milligrams of cholesterol a product contains. Also shown are the percentages of the recommended daily total of fat or cholesterol the average consumer should eat.

Another listing is the number of grams of fiber per serving the product provides.

Virtually every one of the 300,000 food labels found in American supermarkets will be completely redesigned by the summer of 1994, and the changes are already under way.

Meanwhile, don't forget that some of the best food — fresh fruit and vegetables — may be unlabeled, but still contain lots of essential vitamins and nutrients. And many healthful products, like whole-grain breakfast cereals with bran, and whole wheat bread, already list health benefits, such as fiber content, on their labels.

If you have questions about food labels or about how your diet affects your health, call the nutrition hot line of the American Institute for Cancer Research at (800) 843-8114, Monday through Friday; 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and get free answers to your questions from a registered dietitian.

SURVEY: Soldiers speak out

focused on finding out if soldiers were actively trying to improve their quality of life and how much input they felt that they have in determining policies that affect them. Harmony Church, Kelley Hill and Sand Hill soldiers expressed a higher degree of dissatisfaction about soldiers being involved in bringing about change in their quality of life.

- Personal Development: These questions gauged whether soldiers felt they were given opportunities to develop their skills and talents.

The degree of satisfaction varied widely, with Main Post soldiers being the most satisfied and soldiers from the outermost areas of post being the least satisfied. Soldiers said that they wanted more musical equipment at the recreation centers, more educational opportunities and computer and photography clubs.

Smith also applauded the desire of many single soldiers' work to bring about change.

"The Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers Program is the best voice soldiers on post have for bringing their concerns to those who have the power to make changes, and the best thing is that the BOSS program truly possesses real power," Smith said. "I encourage all single soldiers to get involved or to let their unit BOSS representatives know what is on their minds because it is an excellent way to solve many of the concerns that were indicated in the survey."

Now that the results of the survey are known, Smith said, post officials can use the data gathered to plot exactly what needs to be done where.

The goal is to improve the total quality of life experience by empowering single soldiers to communicate and effect change as it relates to their unique style of life, he said.

Editor's note: The rest of the survey results will be run in a later edition of The Bayonet.

Watch out for work-at-home scams

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

The idea of working at home appeals to many retirees, military spouses or anyone who cares for children or other relatives. But, said Brenda Jimenez of the Washington Better Business Bureau, unscrupulous people take advantage of this.

"If you answer an ad that offers huge profits for a work-at-home project but requires no experience, chances are you will end up losing money instead of making any," she said.

There are some clues for spotting a dishonest scheme.

Some work-at-home scams ask for money before telling how the plan works, said Jimenez.

Another sign is no one to talk to for more information. They simply have post office boxes or 900 numbers.

Materials from dishonest companies often run testimonials from satisfied "workers" identified only by initials, so there is no way to contact them.

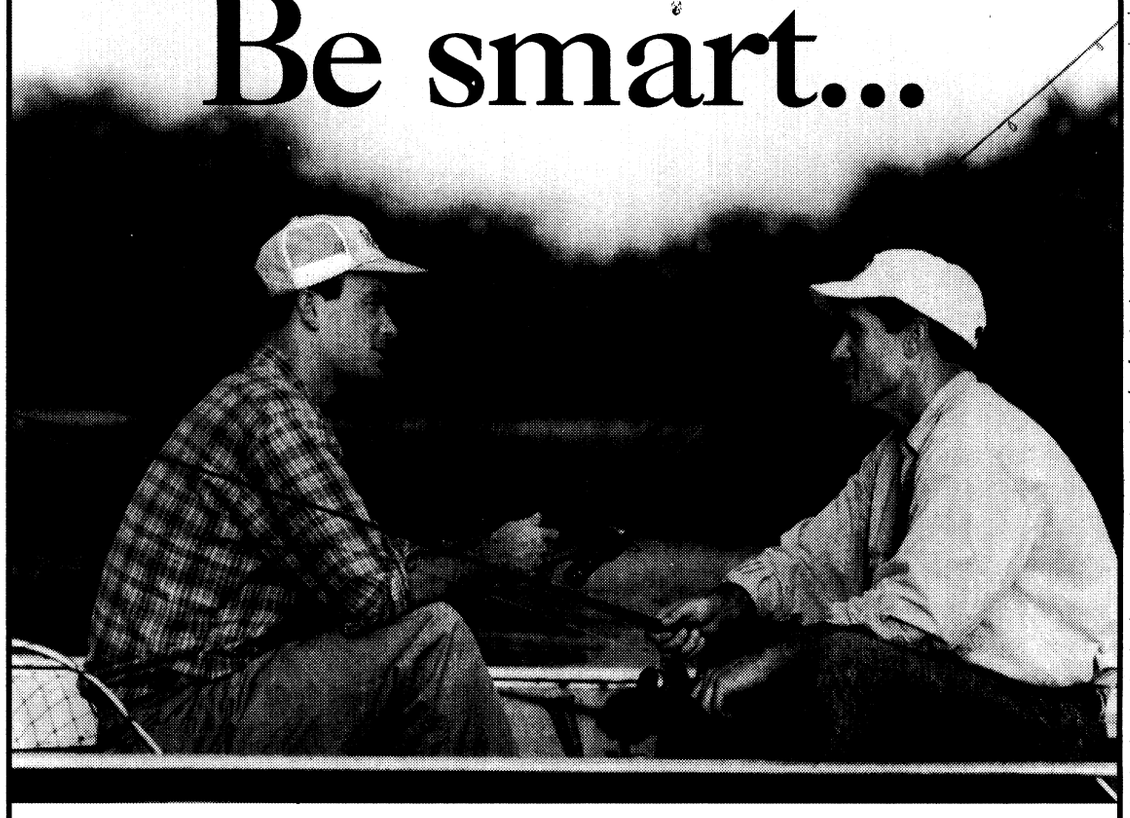
The most common type of work-at-home fraud involves envelope stuffing, according to the U.S. Postal Service. Typically, there are no envelopes to stuff. In return for a processing fee ranging from $15 to $40, would-be stuffers receive nothing. When they try to complain, they find the post office box has been closed.

A variation of the scam tells respondents to invent a company name, place classified ads similar to the ones they answered or buy a mailing list, open a post office box and charge a processing fee to people who respond to the ad.

In short, they send information on how the customer can start a stuffing scheme. The U.S. Postal Inspection Service warned that customers who follow through and start schemes could be charged with fraud. In another variation, customers are told to place ads like the one they answered and send responses to the scam operator, after which the customer will be paid.

The U.S. Postal Inspection Service advised that envelope stuffing is not a high-demand service because most companies use machines to stuff and address envelopes.

In 1991, the postal unit put more than 3,500 work-at-home operations out of business through mail stop orders, consent agreements and criminal proceedings. Jimenez said that investigations by both the Better Business Bureau and the U.S. Postal Inspection Service found none that actually produced income for their customers as promised.



Another scheme involves piecework at home. This ranges from making baby booties to assembling boxes to sewing aprons. The offer asks a prospective worker to invest hundreds of dollars in instructions and supplies. The ad may say "If you meet our standards, you can make ..."

"The trouble is," said Jimenez, "no one meets their standards, and then victims are out the money for supplies and hours of their time with no repayment."

The Better Business Bureau advises investigating fees involved and weighing them against potential earnings. Check with the state attorney general's office to see if laws protect you. For example, Maryland prohibits companies from requiring advance money for information, instruction booklets and brochures related to setting up a work-at-home business.

Other ads encourage you to raise chinchillas, rabbits or even worms in your basement or backyard. Doing so could violate local or base laws and regulations. In addition, these schemes are easy ways to lose money because there is no market for the animals.

COMMUNITY BRIEFS

School examinations — It is mandatory that any child entering Georgia schools for the first time be given a dental, eye and hearing examination.

The results of the exam will be entered on a Georgia Department of Human Resources Certification of Ear, Eye and Dental Examination, which must be presented to the school upon enrollment.

For a screening appointment, call 544-3350 at Martin Army Community Hospital or your county health department. The child's immunization record must be up to date. Parents should take the immunization record to the hospital or health department at the time of the screening exam.

For more information, call Cathy Hatfield at 544-1503.

Cardiac, diabetic support — A meeting of the cardiac and diabetic support group will be Monday in the Baugh Conference Room (on the second floor) of Martin Army Community Hospital at 6 p.m. For more information, call Thomas E. Valitzski at 561-3077.

Author to visit PX — Military techno-thriller author Bob Mayer will be at the Main Post Exchange Saturday and Sunday to autograph copies of his Special Forces novels "Eyes of the Hammer" and "Dragon SIM-13."

A former U.S. Army 'green beret' and infantryman from the Bronx in New York City, Mayer draws from his experiences in the world to write his novels. Mayer spent eight years in the reserves as an instructor to the Special Forces School at Fort Bragg, N.C.

While selling the books at reduced cost, Mayer will also be offering for sale his pamphlet: "The Fiction Writer's Toolkit: A Guide to Writing Novels and Getting Them Published," a practical guide for anyone interested in the world of writing or publishing.

JROTC instructor wanted — A position as a junior ROTC instructor in Moulton, Ala., is now open. The job opening will close Monday, and applicants must be able to start no later than Aug. 31. Applicants are required to be retired sergeant first class through command sergeant major with 20 years active duty experience and not be retired longer than five years and a graduate of the Advanced Noncommissioned Officers Course.

A degree holder is preferred with a willingness to obtain a degree in teaching. Benefits are active duty pay and allowances minus retirement pay. Job will be to motivate young high school students into learning and developing leadership principles.

For more information, write Lawrence County High School, Attn: Retired Maj. Steve Farris, 102 College St., Moulton, Ala., 35650 or call (205) 974-1121.

Radio control flyers — The Columbus/Fort Benning Radio Control Flyers organization was organized in 1973 to promote model aviation in the Columbus, Fort Benning, Phenix City and surrounding area.

The flying field is located about 20 miles south of Columbus and Phenix City, or about four miles southwest of Lawson Army Airfield. The five-acre field features a 100 feet by 500 feet bermuda runway and a large pavilion.

The local club offers flight training with membership and recommends that a prospective flyer get supervised training. Membership is open to anyone with an interest in radio-controlled aviation. Dues are $60 per year with a one-time $20 initiation fee for new members. The dues are prorated for those joining after Feb. 1.

For more information, visit the flying field, or contact Larry Phillips, president, at 324-7758, or Larry Corser, treasurer, at 561-1379. For a map to the field, write P.O. Box 8713, Columbus, Ga., 31908, or pick up one at Hobbies Unlimited, 2019 Auburn Ave. in Columbus.

Contract managers to meet — The National Contract Management Association, Fort Benning Chapter (provisional), will meet at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday in the Blue Room at the Fort Benning NCO Club. The group met June 22 for the purpose of establishing the chapter and elected pro tempore officers.

NCMA is a nonprofit association of individuals from industry and government and academe who are active in the fields of acquisition, contracting, procurement and logistics. As of 1991, there were more than 23,000 members in 134 chapters in the U.S. and overseas.

All NCMA members and other interested persons in Fort Benning and the surrounding area are invited to attend. For more information, contact Bob Koper, chapter president (pro tempore), at 563-0226.

ITR update — The Information, Ticketing and Registration office has new hours. The hours are: Monday to Friday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Saturday, 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.; Sunday, closed.

ITR now has discount movie tickets that can be used from Sunday to Thursday at downtown movie theaters. This offer does not apply to no-discount ticket movies. ITR offers Atlanta Zoo tickets at $6.75 for adults and $4.75 for children.

Also available at ITR are tickets to Water Mania at Orlando, Fla. Water Mania has Riptide, a white water adventure and Aqua Xpress, a giant train ride for children with slides, sprays and whistles. Water Mania is open until Nov. 29.

Child care class — Anyone providing child care in post quarters must be certified as a family child-care provider. The next certification class will be Monday to July 27. Classes include cardiopulmonary resuscitation, first aid, business practices, child development, safety, fire prevention, preventive medicine, nutrition and child abuse prevention.

For more information, call 687-4038 or 544-1623.

Employer day — Each Friday the Job Assistance Center invites employers to talk to and interview soldiers who are getting out of the service.

Today, the Vinnell Corporation will be at the Job Assistance Center to interview for the Saudi Arabian National Guard Modernization Program contract. Immediate opportunities exist in Saudi Arabia for former officers, warrant officers and senior enlisted personnel (sergeant and above) as advisers, trainers and instructors, managers and supervisors and doctrine and curriculum developers.

Interested persons may come by the JAC at Building 2634 in Soldiers' Plaza to set up an appointment to interview with Vinnell.

Adult classes — Classes for adults 16 years and older are being conducted at Kendrick high School at no cost.

Late registration is Tuesday. Classes are 6 to 9 p.m., Tuesday and Thursday. Call (912) 838-4963 for further information.

SAME meeting — The Society of American Military Engineers will meet at 11:30 a.m. Thursday at the Fort Benning Officers' Club. Col. Burnet R. Quick, post chief of staff, will speak on "Total Army Quality."

Quick is a graduate of Marion Military Institute plus the Infantry Officer Basic and Advanced courses, Command and General Staff College, National War College and the British Higher Command and Staff College. He has a master's degree in psychology from the University of Georgia.

He has had assignments in Germany; Vietnam; Fort Polk, La.; and Alexandria, Va.

Vocal freedom seminar — Learn how to sing with more freedom and beauty. Join other adults and youth who enjoy singing. Attend the Vocal Freedom Seminar sponsored by St. John United Methodist Church July 23 from 6:45 to 9:45 p.m. and July 24 from 9 a.m. to noon.

Register by calling 561-9391. The cost is $25 per person when paid in advance or $30 at the door.

The seminar will be at the church, located at the corner of Moon and Weems roads.

Anyone can offer you an auto insurance policy. But at Family Protection Plus,SM we believe NCOs tend to be better drivers. So we provide highly competitive rates on policies geared to the realities of NCO family life.

For example, when you're transferred, your coverage follows you to most of the states where military installations are located. All it takes is a toll-free call, and we'll handle the details.

You'll also find our other features very attractive.*Like special savings if you keep your car in a storage facility while you're on a TDY. And a waiver of deductible if someone in your household has an accident while you're deployed in a war or combat zone.

WE THINK NCOS ARE BETTER DRIVERS. SO CALL US TO SEE IF WE CAN GIVE YOU A BETTER RATE.

If that seems like a sensible approach, there's a good reason. Family Protection Plus, created by Academy Life Insurance Company, was designed specifically for NCOs and their families. And it's recommended by NCOA®.

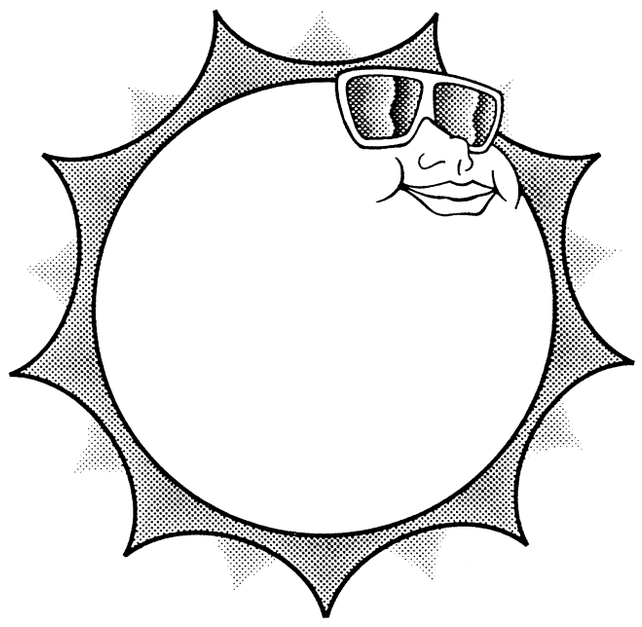
TRADOC surgeon fears 'long hot summer'

TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — The Training and Doctrine Command Surgeon fears that this will be "a long hot summer" as far as heat injuries are concerned.

"We did so well last summer because it was a mild one," said Dr. (Col.) James Bales. "But not so this year; it could be a long hot summer."



Temperatures throughout the southern United States, where most of TRADOC's initial entry training centers are located, have been at record or near-record temperatures.

There have been 16 heat injury cases in TRADOC in fiscal 1993, 11 of them in May and June.

"These injuries range from sunburns to heat exhaustion," Bales said. "Fortunately, there have been no heat strokes."

In all of fiscal 1992, there were 117 heat injuries, down from 169 in '91.

Heat injuries can occur any time of the year — sunburn for example. But one of this year's injuries happened last October when a soldier wore a Spandex outfit under his regular clothing. He became overheated and required treatment.

Greatest emphasis continues to be in the summer, however, when there are greater risks to people training, working and playing outdoors.

Supervisors must remain aware of the wet bulb globe temperature and take proper precautions. As the WBGT increases, personnel must cut down on strenuous activity and exposure.

Wearing mission oriented protective posture gear or body armor will add 10 degrees to the WBGT index.

Experts say that it takes at least two weeks for a fit person to become physically acclimated to working in hot weather. If a person has suffered a heat injury in the past, he or she is more susceptible to re-injury.

Two of the heat injuries during the past two months involved Junior Reserve Officer Training Corps students in summer camp. A factor may have been not being acclimated before engaging in strenuous activities.

"Heat injuries are preventable," said Maj. Gen. John P. Herrling, TRADOC chief of staff. "Monitoring of the heat index, modification of activities when the index is high and attention to acclimation requirements by leaders is imperative to prevention of heat injuries."

"During the Gulf War, we had very few heat injuries," Bales said. "That might be because of the awareness and precautions taken to ensure that soldiers were not victims of the desert heat."

Leaders should be sure that soldiers and employees drink plenty of water, Bales said. Personnel engaged in moderate activities during moderately hot conditions should drink at least a pint of water an hour.

As the pace of activity increases and the temperature goes up, they should drink more water. At the highest WBGT index of 5, a person should drink more than two quarts of water each hour. At that level, individuals should work only 20 minutes and rest 40 minutes every hour.

Sunburn injuries can be reduced by minimizing soldiers time in direct sunlight and making sure they wear proper clothing and use sun block lotions.

Most people's diets provide them with enough salt so they do not have to increase their salt intake. Salt tablets should only be taken when a doctor directs their use.

"Environmental injuries, such as heat injuries, are command problems. After they occur, they are, of course, medical problems, but the frequency of heat injuries is a measure of how well commanders "take care of their soldiers," Bales said.

Resumes offer employers brief look at you

By Linda Lee

American Forces Information Service

Research shows resumes don't get jobs, but they can open doors for applicants.

Paula Davis, a Department of Defense transition assistance specialist, said a good resume provides potential employers enough information about your qualifications that they want to interview you. Without interviews, there is little likelihood of getting job offers, she added.

"Everyone sends out resumes when looking for a job. It's a fact of life. Your resume competes against hundreds of others," she said. "The hardest part of doing a successful resume is making sure that who and what you are comes through clearly. In addition, it has to be neat, concise and easy to understand."

Do a draft resume and ruthlessly edit it, Davis said. Keep working at it until it is no longer than two pages, preferably one. When finished with the draft, ask three people to look at it and make whatever changes they think necessary. Make sure these people are the kind who will give you honest feedback and not just agree with you.

When you feel the resume is the best it can be, have it typed or typeset. It must look professional. Proofread the final resume before making copies, Davis recommended, because misspellings and other errors occur and always seem to stand out.

Make copies on good quality paper. In today's business world, it doesn't have to be white paper, she added. A light, neutral color like cream, light gray or light blue works just as well.

Use cover letters with the resumes when you mail them out, she suggested. "A cover letter offers the opportunity to provide additional information, including your goals, and to show how well you express yourself," Davis said.

There are numerous dos and don'ts when writing a resume, like don't say or claim anything that you can't prove, and don't include superfluous or negative information. Use active voice, action verbs and stick with one tense. Let the prospective employer know your value and what you'd bring to the job.

Keep a positive tone throughout the resume, list your strong points first and stay away from abbreviations and acronyms, Davis said. Be concise, short and direct, stay away from using "I" and double-check grammar, punctuation and spelling.

Just as important as what you say in the resume is how it appears, she said. Make it look professional, balanced and organized, with adequate spacing throughout the page. Davis suggested using all capital letters, underlining or bold letters for special emphasis or to highlight.

"Remember that a resume is only one of the many tools used in finding a job," said Davis. Don't sit back and wait for the resumes you mailed out to result in a job, she added. Follow all other job search avenues, too, like networking and state and local employment offices.

Check local libraries, bookstores and professional military organizations for more information on resumes. In addition, installation transition offices can provide assistance in preparing resumes.

There is no universal agreement on the way to write resumes. Some experts suggest listing all jobs chronologically; others say list some specific jobs and summarize the rest. Some experts suggest listing personal information; others say stay away. Find a method you are comfortable with and follow it.

Training in Florida not fun in sun for rangers

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

After more than 50 long, dirty, hot and hungry days and nights of ranger training, a trip to Florida sounds pretty good.

Ranger students who survive the Benning, mountain and desert phases of their training take a trip to Florida, but for them it doesn't mean fun in the sun — it means swamps, alligators and snakes.

Even so, the students are always happy to arrive at Camp James E. Rudder, located about 25 miles east of Fort Walton Beach, because this is where the last phase of ranger training is conducted.

"Our mission here is to conduct the capstone phase of Ranger School," said Lt. Col. Tony Coroalles, commander of the 6th Ranger Training Brigade that calls Camp Rudder home.

"We conduct a large-scale field training exercise, and put the students through their final paces with the intent of coming out with a ranger who is confident, competent, a team player and mentally tough.

"We develop and evaluate each student's character and technical proficiency in infantry skills," he said.

Training in Florida begins with classroom instruction on survival skills, tracking, booby traps and a reptile class, said Sgt. 1st Class Sheridon R. Richardson, operations noncommissioned officer.

Camp Rudder's snake house and alligator pit provide the students with real-life examples of their soon-to-be swamp neighbors.

They learn about the reptiles they might come across during training, which snakes are poisonous, and how to avoid getting bitten, Richardson said.

Then they study search and attack procedures and practice small boat movement, learning how to operate and patrol in the boats and performing capsize drills, he said.

"By the time the students get here, they already know how to do patrolling and land navigation," he said.

"They spend four days operating in the swamps, and every day involves boat and river operations, using rope bridges and doing stream crossings and things of that sort," said Staff Sgt. Thomas M. Stewart, assistant operations NCO.

The last hurdle in their training is a 10-day field training exercise highlighted by air support from Fort Rucker's (Ala.) aviation school and Eglin Air Force Base, Fla.

Students direct the fire of Spectre gunships from the ground during their operations, and Combat Talons fly in to extract the students in a night operation at the end of the exercise.

"The worst part of training here for me," said Richardson, "was moving through the swamps, because the swamps get really nasty. I've seen the swamps literally suck the boots off of peoples feet when they got stuck in the mud out there."

"The swamps shock a lot of people. You get off the boat and they're like 'Where's the land?' — but you're on it," said ranger student Pfc. Thomas D. Phelan.

But no matter how bad conditions are, the ranger students drive on.

"The students can see the light at the end of the tunnel when they get here," said Stewart, who used to be a ranger instructor.

The lack of motivation that often shows up early in training when students get "tired of being tired and tired of being hungry" with no relief in sight goes away, he said.

In fact, some students go to the opposite extreme.

Ruth J. Spaller

Ranger student Pfc. Rob Guthrie practices search and attack tactics during training at Camp James E. Rudder.

"One of our biggest problems at the camp," Coroalles said, "is students attempting to hide medical problems."

"By the time they get here, they have so much invested in the school they think they can just drive on," Coroalles said.

"But they arrive here already worn down from previous phases," he said, and so are more easily susceptible to sickness and injury.

As a result, students receive daily checks by medics, who perform extensive health screenings, and safety precautions such as monitoring water temperature are routine.

Making it through the jungle phase is not easy, said ranger student Cpl. Derek T. Luttrell.

"One day you can be totally gung-ho, then something bad happens and you lose it," he said. Platoon tactics rely on a team effort to be successful, he said.

"This is like the final exam putting to test all the things we've learned before," said ranger student Capt. Allen G. Brannan. "The ranger instructors expect you to know the techniques and to apply them here."

"The students must get a 'go' here to pass Ranger School," Coroalles said.

"At the end the phase, we review each student's records and recommend him for graduation, if qualified," he said.

If they do get that "go," they return to Fort Benning to graduate, he said.

Then maybe they can take a real trip to Florida.

WORLD WAR II

50 years ago this week ...

• President Franklin D. Roosevelt bridged a potentially crippling gap between the United States and Britain, issuing orders to his staff that mandated closer cooperation between the two countries in the area of atomic research. FDR's order paved the way for an agreement, formally signed at the Quebec Conference in August, to share knowledge, use any such weapons only with the other's consent, and to conceal information from all outside parties. Both countries agreed to further honor the pact in the postwar era.

• In Sicily, the Allied advance continued as Gen. George S. Patton established a provisional corps to drive westward on the island, while the Second Corps, under the command of Gen. Omar Bradley, attacked to the north. Within a week, U.S. forces captured Corleone and Castelvetrano, while the British took Gerbini and the Canadians secured Leonforte.

• On the Eastern Front, the Soviet drive north slowed in the face of resistance from the remaining German tank forces massed near Orel. Meanwhile, German units south of the Kursk salient continued to withdraw.

• In northern Italy, Adolf Hitler met with Benito Mussolini to demand increased Italian participation in future Axis war efforts. Despite Mussolini's realization that Italy could no longer fight, his fear of Hitler, who dominated the conference, prevented him from stating as much.

• Gen. Douglas MacArthur assumed his duties as the Supreme South and Southwest Pacific commander in charge of all Allied operations in the area, after U.S. Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox formally announced his appointment to the position.

• Fort Benning welcomed Gen. Henri Giraud, commander of the French armies in North Africa, as he conducted an inspection tour of the post's infantry and parachute schools.

36th's commander says goodbye

By David Greer
36th Engineer Group

The soldiers of the 36th Engineer Group stood tall under the morning heat July 7 to honor their outgoing and incoming commanders during the unit's change of command at York Field.

The outgoing commander, Col. Phillip Anderson, has been in command of the 36th since July 1991. He has seen the 36th through several major deployments including the humanitarian relief effort to South Florida in the wake of Hurricane Andrew and "Operation Restore Hope" in Somalia, where his unit built roads, bridges and other facilities to help speed relief supplies to the starving people of that war torn nation.

Anderson was visibly moved as he said farewell to the soldiers and their families.

"I want to tell you that the real reason we have assembled here this morning is to honor these soldiers that stand before you, " he said. "The 36th Engineer Group is a diverse array of engineers trained and ready to fight this nation's wars as they so ably demonstrated during Desert Shield and Desert Storm. They are also a versatile group of soldiers ready to respond to situations other than war. During the last two years these soldiers revealed this versatility by nation-building in Costa Rica, counterdrug operations in the southwestern part of the United States, show-of-force demonstrations in Kuwait, disaster response following Hurricane Andrew and peace-making in Somala.

"It is this combination of diversity and versatility that makes these soldiers and this group so important for the defense of our vital interest at home and abroad," he continued. "It has been my privilege to serve as their commander for the past two years," he said.

"When you talk about the many loyal supporters of the 36th" he continued, "you must first and foremost think about the families. The spouses and the children who cheerfully endured the long hours in separation, who willingly volunteered to make the family unit networks a reality and were there with open arms and welcomed home and comforted their heroes, the returning soldiers.

"To all the families, my thanks for your endless patience and untiring love and support."

The guest speaker was Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, Fort Benning's commanding general.

"Colonel Phillip Anderson took command of the 36th Engineer Group two years ago today and he has lead this organization, this great engineer group, during some the Army's most difficult times as we move into a new era in the world," said White. "When he took command, the soldiers had just returned from Desert Storm. In short order, he recovered this engineer group and prepared it for redeployment probably more quickly than any other unit that participated in the Gulf War."

"Colonel Anderson has led soldiers in nation-building from disaster relief to peace-keeping and provided support here that improved the quality of life of all of us at Fort Benning. Many of the things we have here such as sidewalks, running tracks, buildings, ranges and other facilities are a direct result of the great work of this engineer group."

The new commander is Col. Dean Kershaw, arriving from assignment in Panama.

"There is no greater honor for a professional soldier than to be selected for command," said Kershaw.

"(The community is) entrusted with the lives of our nation's sons and daughters and challenged to protect our way of life and to help others at home and abroad. I accept that challenge.

"I stand before you humbled by this honor but excited and proud.

"The 36th Engineer Group will continue to provide their exemplary warrior support to this nation that Colonel Anderson worked so hard to achieve.

"To the soldiers of the 36th: "Hooah! Warrior support!"

Bob Crockett

Happy anniversary

Several of the Army's former chief trainers gathered at Fort Monroe, Va., July 1 to commemorate the 20th anniversary of the Training and Doctrine Command with Army Chief of Staff Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan (left), and TRADOC commander Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr. The retired soldiers beginning third from the left are Gen. Maxwell R. Thurman, Gen. William R. Richardson, Gen. Donn A. Soldiers to become fitness masters

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Reserve Component Team from Fort Benning's U.S. Army Physical Fitness School will conduct the Army's Master Fitness Trainer Course Monday through July 30.

More than 50 soldiers from Fort Benning's active duty Army and Reserve units will attend the Fitness Trainer Course, along with several Army National Guard and Reserve units in the region.

The course is designed to qualify soldiers as master fitness trainers capable of teaching others when they return to their units, and it increases the unit's physical fitness and combat readiness.

The two weeks of instruction include extensive physical fitness exercise as well as academic instruction in nutrition, weight control, anatomy, exercise physiology, physical training injuries, the components of fitness and the principles of exercise.

It emphasizes performance enhancement and the importance of fitness to mission accomplishment, to include maintaining a healthy lifestyle.

The Physical Fitness School conducts the Army Master Fitness Trainer course Armywide using mobile training teams.

The following is the course schedule:

Monday — Army Physical Fitness Test

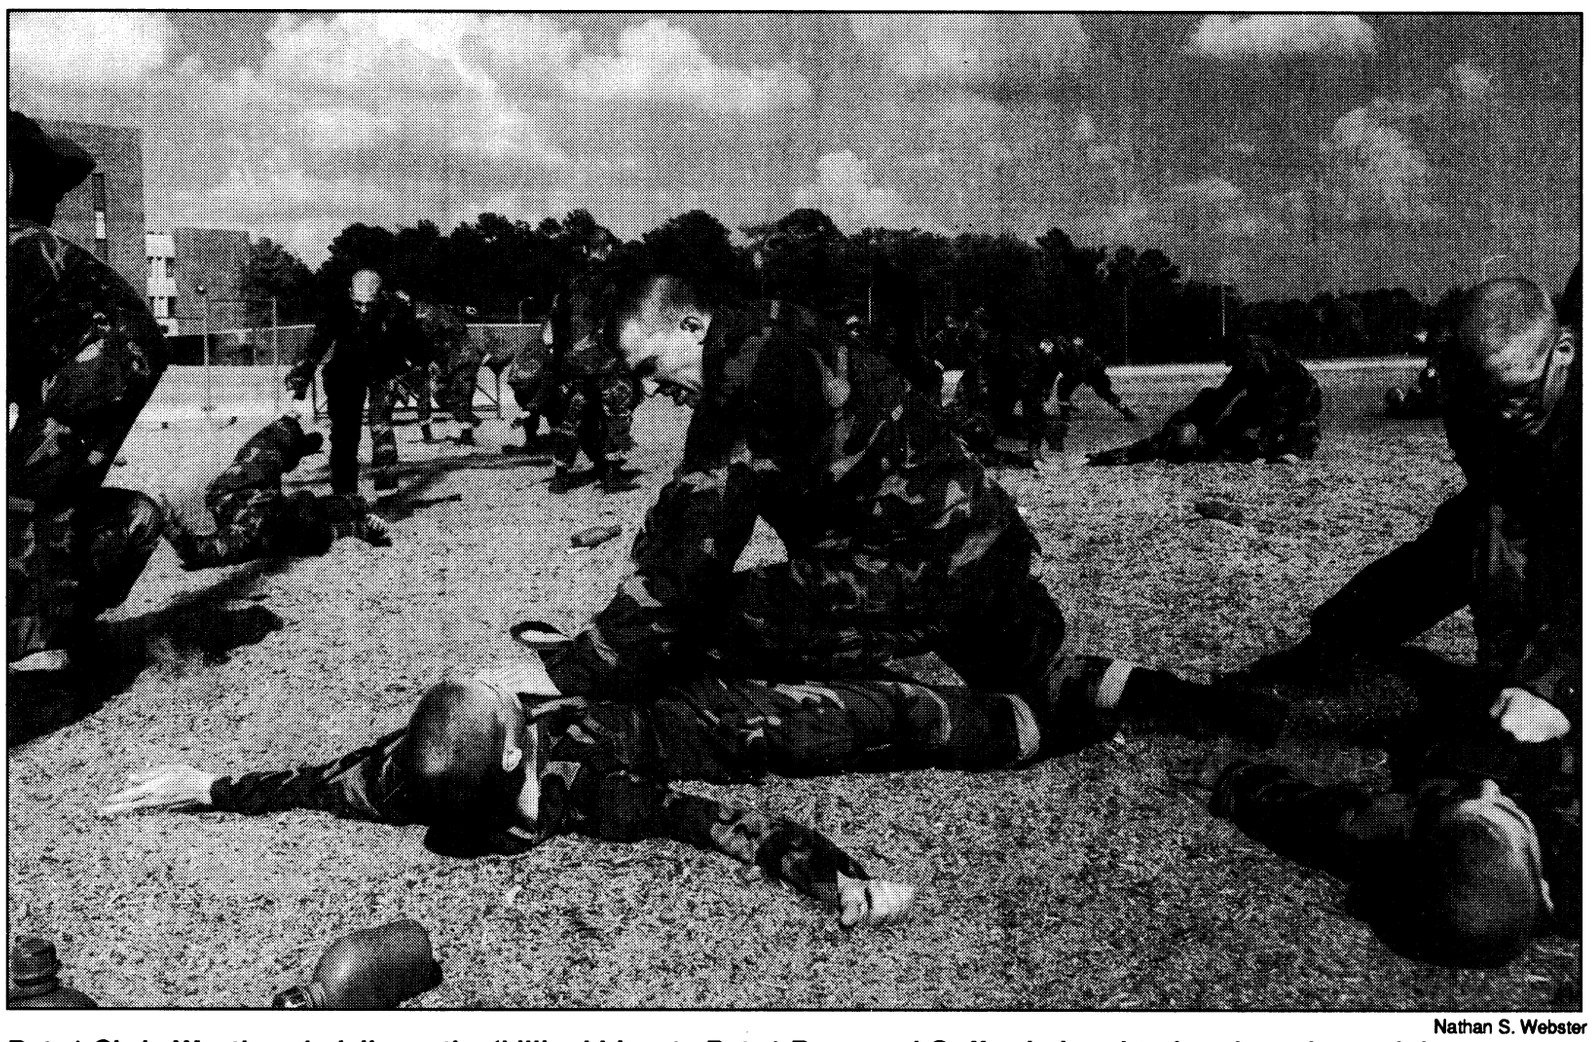
Tuesday — Team events and flexibility exercises

Wednesday — Aquatics

Thursday — Circuit training

July 23 — Partner-resisted exercises

July 24 — Ability group run



July 26 — Exercises

July 27 — Strength training

July 28 — Roadmarch

July 29 — Aerobics

July 30 — Master Fitness Trainer Olympics and graduation

Pvt. 1 Chris Westbrook delivers the 'killing' blow to Pvt. 1 Raymond Guffey in hand-to-hand combat training.

Recruits learn hand-to-hand

By Nathan S. Webster
1st Bde., 76th Division (Training)

Sawdust, mud, sweat and grime.

And somewhere underneath all that was Pvt. 1 Jeff Bacon, who had just been crunched to the turf during hand-to-hand combat training.

It wasn't the first time he'd hit the ground, but he was getting ready to return the favor to his "buddy" Pvt. 1 Chris Keller.

All in a day's work for trainees in Company B, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Training Brigade. And whether it be hand-to-hand, basic rifle marksmanship, or any one of the tasks the new privates are supposed to master, they're shepherded along by the ever-present drill sergeants.

For this cycle, the twist is the trainees are getting new drill sergeants every two weeks as Reservists from the 1st Brigade, 76th Division (Training) rotate through the Infantry Training Brigade. From July 3 to Saturday, it is the 1st Battalion, 304th Regiment's turn.

Staff Sgt. Laurel Hubbard was the drill sergeant in charge of the hand-to-hand combat training.

"Training like this brings a person to the realization that he may have to use close hand-to-hand techniques in combat," Hubbard said.

"The intent of this training isn't to make a private a black belt. It's to show him a few things he can do in a situation."

Hubbard guided the soldiers through some basic falls, as well as some simple offensive moves.

It was basic stuff, Hubbard said, but from the grunts and groans of the soldiers surrounding him in the sawdust pit it was effective.

"These moves are designed so that a soldier with a full combat load can still conduct them," he said. "There's no fancy throws, kicks, or anything that requires a lot of agility.

"The privates have no problem with it. They're motivated," he said. "It's one of their favorite things."

Hubbard isn't a black belt, but he has studied goju ru, Okinawan karate. He's also been training soldiers in hand-to-hand combat since 1987.

"This is the first time we've had the opportunity to teach some of the new methods," he said. "They're basic, but more realistic."

SOA Helicopter Bn. changes command

By Devon Kerbow
School of the Americas

The School of Americas' Helicopter School Battalion at Fort Rucker, Ala., received a new commander in a ceremony at 10 a.m. July 9.

Lt. Col. Joseph E. Peraza assumed command from Lt. Col. Jose L. Hinojosa at Cairns Army Airfield.

Commander of SOA's helicopter school battalion since 1991, Hinojosa's new assignment will be as personnel officer for U.S. Army, Japan.

Peraza was formerly commander of the 1st Battalion, 228th Aviation Regiment at Fort Kobbe, Panama.

Peraza's assignments have been varied since being commissioned as an infantry officer in 1967.

He held the position of personnel assignments officer in Aviation and Armor, 1st Personnel Command, U.S. Army Europe. At Hunter Army Airfield in Savannah, Ga., he was brigade operations officer and commander of Company B, 2nd Battalion, 159th Aviation Regiment. For the U.S. Southern Command exercises he was branch chief and was chief of the Aviation Division for U.S. Army South.

Peraza, who was first enlisted, rose to the rank of sergeant. At Troy State University, he earned degrees in personnel and resource management before attending Officer Candidate School.

76th Division soldiers train on Benning

By Nathan S. Webster
1st Bde., 76th Division (Training)

Staff Sgt. Jonathan Myers had a good feeling about it, and he hasn't been disappointed.

Myers, along with the rest of the active duty cadre of the Infantry Training Brigade's 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment could have felt apprehensive about turning over their mission to a bunch of Army Reservists, but they knew coming in there was no reason to be worried.

In May, several of the 1st Bn., 38th Regiment's drill sergeants traveled to Manchester, N.H., the home of the 1st Battalion, 304th Regiment, 1st Brigade, 76th Division (Training), to check up on the dozen or so Reserve drill sergeants who'd be taking over their company mission. Myers, from Company B, 1st Bn., 38th Regt., was one of them.

"I saw all these young guys running around up there, and I saw they took a lot of interest (in being a drill sergeant)," Myers said. "I figured if all of them were like that, it wouldn't be bad at all."

That was then, though, and it was only an evaluation. Now, from July 3 to Saturday, the Reserve drills have picked up the real-world mission of training new infantrymen. The 1st Bn., 304th Regt. is one of four 76th Division battalions rotating through the 1st Bn., 38th Regt., in two-week cycles.

Though the mission calls for the battalion to completely hand over the mission to the Reservists, most of the active duty drill sergeants are still there, always ready to use their experience to help out the Reservists.

"The Reservists have been really good," said Staff Sgt. Chester Hill, a Company B senior drill sergeant.

"They want to take control. They don't expect us to always be there for them," Hill said. "We can show them little tricks of the trade that we know from having the experience of working steadily at this."

The displacement is from the battalion command staff on down. Two companies, B and C, have been completely displaced, including all cadre members.

Lt. Col. Chuck Cardinal, 1st Bn., 38th Regt. commander, is trying to stay out of his replacement's way.

"I'm really trying to make sure that the Reserve commander has the challenge of commanding and controlling five training units," he said. "The only real challenge is I'm still around, so the active duty commanders sometimes come to me. It's tough to step back.

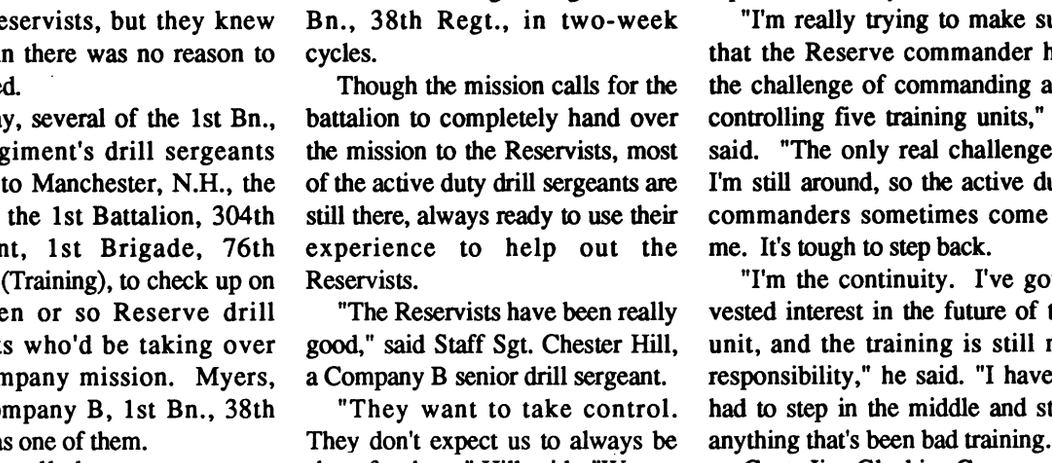
"I'm the continuity. I've got a vested interest in the future of the unit, and the training is still my responsibility," he said. "I haven't had to step in the middle and stop anything that's been bad training."

Capt. Jim Glackin, Company B commander, tries to help his replacements understand the particulars of duty on Fort Benning.

"I help out with the particulars of how this post wants things done, but the Reserve commander is in charge of planning and training, and how he does it is up to him," Glackin said.

"All the 76th Division soldiers have been real sharp," he said. "As far as I'm concerned, they can take off their Reserve patches and put on Fort Benning patches. There has been no noticeable drop in standards."

Maintaining those standards is something that the active duty drill sergeants are also there to ensure.



"At the end of the day, (the active duty and Reserve drills) sit in the office and they ask about the next day's training, and they want to know what to expect and anything special they should do," Myers said. "These guys aren't here just to punch a time clock. They want to see they have made a difference."

Drill Sergeant Staff Sgt. Laurel Hubbard guides trainees in practicing target detection during basic rifle marksmanship.

Reserve drill sergeants instruct ITB basic trainees

By Nathan S. Webster
1st Bde., 76th Division (Training)

Sgt. 1st Class Eric Fraser wasn't happy.

As senior drill sergeant of Company B, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment, he had made sure his drill sergeants had backed off on the trainees during the days preceding M-16 qualification. They wanted the new soldiers calm and relaxed when they hit the firing range.

But it seemed the trainees were taking the opportunity to forget a few fundamentals of military discipline, and a message was going to be sent.

"They start saying 'yeah' to me, and not standing at parade rest," Fraser said. "We're going to tighten them up tonight."

It's what any drill sergeant has to deal with midway through basic training, as the trainees become a little too comfortable. For Fraser and his crew of about 12 drill sergeants, it's their job to make sure the standards of behavior don't drop when the next group of drills arrive at Fort Benning.

Most of the drill sergeants training new privates in Co. B are Army Reservists from the 1st Battalion, 304th Regiment, 1st Brigade, 76th Division (Training), located in Manchester, N.H.

For their annual training, the Co. B soldiers have displaced the active duty soldiers, taking over the training mission. The 1st Bn., 304th Regt., is one of four 76th Division units making the trip to Fort Benning, and the 1st Bn., 38th Regt., this summer.

"We've been welcomed with open arms," said Co. B's Reserve commander, Capt. Jonathan Sistare. "The biggest thing everyone's shared with us is their experience."

From basic rifle marksmanship to hand-to-hand combat, the Reserve drill sergeants have been running the show.

"We only have two weeks in the year to do this," said Staff Sgt. Timothy Higgins. "We hit the ground at night and do physical training at 5 a.m. the next morning. I never burn out."

That state of intensity is something all the drills work hard to maintain through their two weeks.

"When we leave here, we want to be just as pumped up as when we arrived," said Co. B 1st Sgt. Thomas Wiley.

"We tend not to hit that wall and burn out," agreed Fraser. "We keep each other going.

"I'm very lucky to have the drills I have. Sometimes units have to adopt drills or don't have a team. We don't have that problem," Fraser said. "I don't have any low speed drills."

That teamwork translates into successful training, and that's something that never stops. Concurrent training stations are set up at ranges so privates are kept busy and alert.

"All the soldiers are kept busy. There's not much down time," said Sgt. Wayne Lescault, who, at 43, is one of the oldest drill sergeants in the unit. "Being a drill is something I've always wanted to do. It did come at a late age.

"I'm 43 and still running around doing PT and everything. I must be crazy," he said.

Following M-16 qualification, the next big training stage is individual tactical training, where the infantrymen-to-be learn the fine art of crawling through dirt and mud.

"We'll be doing that with them," said Sgt. Stephen Houten. "There's a lot of things we want to do ourselves, because that motivates the privates if they see us getting dirty with them."

They all credited the active duty drill sergeants with easing their arrival, as well as helping out when needed.

"They came up to Manchester and basically explained what was going to be going on," said Staff Sgt. Richard Neely. "It was like I was here before I'd even arrived."

As many briefings as the active duty soldiers could give them, the Reserve drills still had to deal with training real people.

"You start dealing with people who've never picked up a weapon," Neely said. "I've shot expert for 18 years, but when I go to train somebody it's a lot different. If they succeed, then I know I've accomplished my mission."

There's no certainty in anything. Training soldiers isn't something that's limited to a company training stat sheet.

"We can't train for interaction with soldiers. We can't train to counsel soldiers," Higgins said. "There are classes that explain things, but they're all different soldiers with different problems. We have to treat each soldier individually."

"We can never be sure we're ready. We can only prepare," he said.

"(Fort Benning) is it. This is where soldiers are trained," said Staff Sgt. Steven McCarthy. "You can take a new soldier to the beach, and they can't hit the ocean with a rock. We teach them something they don't know and make them successful at it. Everybody will be up to speed, and then I'll know I did my job."

Finally, Fort Benning itself is a prime reason for the success of the mission.

"Fort Benning was made to train," Fraser said. "Everything is set up to train. Every other post I've seen is adapted to train.

"And the active duty drill sergeants here believe in getting soldiers trained without worrying about evaluations, and so the soldiers get trained," he said.

"The privates have come a long way since I got here," Fraser said. "It took one private 250 rounds to zero his weapon, but he's out here knocking down targets. Did we waste that ammo?

"I don't think so."

Army to host history writing contest

U.S. Army Center of Military History

After a hiatus of more than a year, the Army's Military History Writing Contest is back on track. Eligibility for this year's contest will be extended back through 1992 to cover students who missed the competition last year.

Sponsored by the U.S. Army Center of Military History, the history writing contest is a professional development exercise designed to improve young officers' and noncommissioned officers' communication skills and enhance their knowledge of the profession of arms. Winners receive cash awards and Department of the Army certificates of achievement.

Rules for the 1993 contest are as follows:

Eligibility: Participation is limited to students attending officer advanced courses and the Sergeants Major Academy during calendar years 1992 and 1993. Include Social Security number, Sergeants Major Academy or advance course title, course number and a forwarding address.

Entries: Submit two copies of previously unpublished manuscripts, maximum length 3,500 words (approximately 14 pages), typed, double spaced. Documentation is required but footnotes and endnotes are not included in length.

Submit graphics, illustrations or photographs as if article were to be published. Entries that exceed the maximum allowed length will not be judged.

Topics: Essays should develop a limited historical theme related to the Army.

Some suggested topic areas are:

- Analysis of World War II or Korean War battles and campaigns. (Note that this is the period of the 40th anniversary of the Korean War and the 50th anniversary of World War II.)
- The black experience during the Civil War, Spanish American War, World War I or II, Korea, Vietnam, etc.
- Fighting outnumbered and winning, as in Ardennes, Korea, Vietnam.
- Light infantry, airborne, armor, artillery or other forces.
- Logistics, leadership, training, unit cohesion, or stress in combat.
- Desert operations

Deadline: Entries must be postmarked by midnight Dec. 31 to the U.S. Army Center of Military History, ATTN: DAMH-FI (Writing Contest/Bill Arthur), 1099 14th St. NW, Washington, D.C. 20005-3402.

Judging: Papers will be judged by a panel of military historians, using the following criteria: historical accuracy, originality, style and relevance to current Army issues. Contest winners should be announced by the end of April.

Prizes: First - $500 and publication in Army History; second - $250; third - $100, or as the judges direct.

For additional information, contact U.S. Army Center of Military History, 1099 14th St. NW, Washington, D.C. 20005-3402. Call (202) 504-5368 or DSN 285-5368 .

317th Bn. to change command

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Command of the 317th Engineer Battalion, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized), will change hands today during a 9 a.m. ceremony on Dickman Field in Harmony Church.

Lt. Col. Kenneth S. Kasprisin, formerly the deputy commander of the Sacramento District Corps of Engineers, will take command from Lt. Col. Donald J. Whitten.

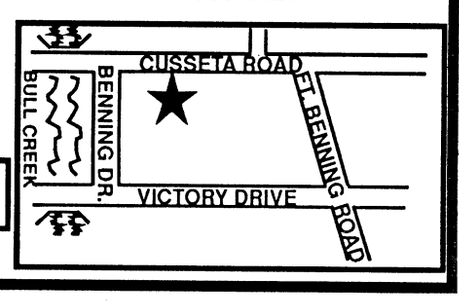
Whitten took command of the 317th Engineer Battalion in Germany and redeployed the battalion to Fort Benning and Fort Stewart, Ga., in November and December 1991, where it was assigned to the 24th Infantry Division.

Field artillery soldiers may go airborne

Army News Service

Field artillery soldiers interested in volunteering for airborne training and assignment have a renewed opportunity to apply.

According to officials of the U.S. Total Army Personnel Command in Alexandria, Va., the Field Artillery Branch is seeking volunteers from the ranks of private through specialist. The selected soldiers must hold a primary military occupational specialty of 13B, 13C or 93F.



If you're one of those soldiers, you'll find details on how to apply in Army Regulation 614-200 (Chapter 6, Section II). In submitting your application through the local personnel action center, you may wish to consult Procedure 3-19 of DA Pamphlet 600-8.

CRIME WATCH

Military Police Activity

The following entries were taken from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from June 15 to 21. Such entries may be incomplete and are not the adjudication of the guilt or innocence of any person.

This week's hot topic concerns a new law requiring children under the age of 16 to wear a Department of Transportation approved safety helmet at all times while riding a bicycle. This law applies to children riding a bicycle whether on or off post.

• A staff sergeant was charged with aggravated assault, discharge of a firearm through neglect and failure to obey a lawful order or regulation. He fired a shot at his wife during an argument as she was attempting to drive away in her car. The bullet struck the window frame and lodged beneath the vinyl covering.

• Two juveniles were charged with making harassing phone calls and violation of the family member curfew after they telephoned another juvenile and made vulgar and profane remarks to her.

• A private was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol, excessive speed, no proof of insurance and no post registration after he was stopped for traveling 80 mph in a 55 mph zone.

• A sergeant reported that persons unknown removed the top of his wall locker and stole a compact disc player.

• A specialist reported that persons unknown removed her purse that contained $800 in cash and her identification card from her unsecured car.

• A sergeant was charged by civil authorities with being disorderly while intoxicated after he was found unconscious on the sidewalk of a local restaurant. Emergency medical technicians attempted to determine his condition, at which time he regained consciousness and became abusive and uncooperative.

• A government employee reported that persons unknown removed the motors from two boats that were secured to the dock at the Uchee Creek marina.

• Two juveniles were charged with wrongful appropriation of private property after they rode two horses without permission of the owner.

• Three civilians who were Reservists called to active duty during Operation Desert Storm were charged with theft after they continued to receive full pay and benefits after being released from active duty.

Each individual received approximately $15,000 in overpayment.

• A private reported that persons unknown entered his room and removed $806 from the ceiling where he had hidden the money for safekeeping.

• A captain reported that persons unknown damaged his bicycle by bending the rim and scratching it in several places.

This week's booby prize is awarded to the family member who was involved in an altercation with her husband. She kicked him in the groin area and then attempted to hit him with her car as he walked away from her.

She fled the scene and left their 15-month old child unattended at a nearby guard shack. She was later apprehended and charged with aggravated assault and leaving a child unattended.

Other activities included 13 traffic accidents. There were two cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, 14 cases of larceny of private property and two cases of larceny of government property.

Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best — Give Crime Arrest."

Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5223 or the "Crime in Progress" line at 545-2222.

Tuberculosis once again a major health concern

By Alfreta Gibson
Community Health Nursing

People don't get tuberculosis anymore, do they? Years ago the answer to this question might have been a simple "no."

Unfortunately, tuberculosis has once again become a major health concern. With more than 20,000 new cases reported annually, tuberculosis continues to be a public health problem in the United States, according to a Centers for Disease Control source.

Tuberculosis, or TB, as it is more commonly called, is an old killer that has come back even more dangerous than before.

There is now multiple-drop resistant TB that does not respond to the old treatment. This poses an urgent public health problem that requires rapid intervention and public awareness.

Since 1984, the expected decrease in deaths to TB has not happened. Instead, there has been a significant increase in new cases of active TB, said the CDC source.

Tuberculosis is a disease that is spread from person to person through the air. Methods of transmission include sneezing, coughing, spitting, laughing or even screaming.

TB usually affects the lungs, but it can also affect other parts of the body, such as the brain, kidneys or spine. An estimated 10 million persons in this country are already infected with the TB germ (tubercle bacilli).

Anyone can become infected with the TB germ. Persons who are particularly at risk include those with human immuno-deficiency virus, people who have close contact with others with active TB, foreign-born persons from high-risk countries, medically underserved low-income people, high-risk minorities, alcoholics, intravenous drug users and residents of long-term care facilities (including prisons).

Symptoms of TB include coughing, fever, night sweats, loss of weight and fatigue. No one can really know whether or not they have TB by the absence or presence of these symptoms; therefore, it is important to be tested.

The standard method for identifying a person with the TB germ is to get the tuberculosis skin test. The test is given by injecting just beneath the surface of the skin and is read 48 to 72 hours after injection by a health care specialist who determines the results.

Those individuals who test positive for having the TB germ may not have active TB. These individuals can't pass the disease on to others. To determine if the individual has active TB requires extensive evaluation to include a history, physical examination, chest X-ray and other appropriate examinations. In either case, the TB skin test is the first step.

After being notified about a suspected TB patient, a community health nurse will conduct a prompt and thorough assessment of the individual and later initiate a contact investigation.

During a contact investigation, all the persons who have had contact with a person with the active disease are evaluated.

The suspected individual will be tested for TB by the community health nurse. He or she will also be scheduled for a medical evaluation and preventive therapy with a physician.

There is evidence that six months of preventive therapy with isoniazid (a type of medication) provides a high degree of protection against the progression to clinically active tuberculosis.

Persons diagnosed with active TB are evaluated and followed monthly by the physician. The physician determines the actual treatment regimen, duration and management best suited for the client.

It is very important for individuals with active TB to comply with the treatment guidelines directed by their health-care provider.

Compliance is defined as the extent to which a person's health-related behavior coincides with medical advice. This can entail taking medication, keeping appointments and following the provider's advice.

Noncompliance is a major problem in tuberculosis control. If a client does not take his or her medicine consistently, treatment failure, drug resistance, continuing transmission of infection, increased disability and death can result.

Martin Army Community Hospital, like most health hospitals, has community health nurses who work with clients to help them identify and overcome obstacles. Community health nurses are faced with providing care to clients of different cultural and linguistic backgrounds.

In the patient's best interest, the nurses make every effort to ensure their patients are able to comply with the prescribed treatment regimen.

Reporting TB is required by law in every state. Community health nurses are responsible for maintaining the tuberculosis registry and all new tuberculosis cases and suspected cases are reported promptly to the health department by physicians and other health providers.

To avoid passing the disease on to an uninfected person, one must cover his or her mouth and nose when coughing, laughing and sneezing, thus preventing the release of bacterial droplets into the air.

For further information on tuberculosis or if you would like to be tested, contact the Preventive Medicine Service, Community Health Nursing at 545-4041 or 545-4603.

Stress big part of life

Change is inevitable

By Herbert L. Marbury
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Death and taxes are not the only inevitable experiences of life; add change or transition to that duo. Change is the dynamic ingredient that disallows the boredom of status quo.

It is the source that contributes to the displacement and instability of the old so that the new can take place. It is the power (sometimes painful) that generates the atmosphere where modification and hopefully growth occur.

Are you the same person you were a few months ago? You have changed physically, emotionally, spiritually and socially. Your values are not what they were 10 years ago. What was top priority then may be relatively unimportant now and vice versa.

Life in today's environment is far more complicated for families and individuals than the environment in which we lived 25 years ago.

Change is inevitable. But if that is the case, then indeed it always has been. In that sense, our age is no different than the age of the Garden of Eden where it all began. What makes our age an awesome one is not the presence of change, but the rapidity and the magnitude of change.

As chaplains doing ministry in the U.S. Army, we see the impact of the stress of change in the lives of soldiers, family members and civilians to whom we minister. We feel it in ourselves as well. It is not only stress; it is stress upon stress, or stress over stress. But as with change, the magnitude of stress becomes overwhelming. Whether building the Army up or downsizing personnel, normal stress already present is compounded. The certainty of uncertainty and the insecurity that breeds touches all. We see its results as we practice our ministries. Physical symptomology, emotional distress, marital conflict, many parent-child struggles, addictions, vocational turmoil — and very few people even care.

In this age of instability and rapid monumental change, we bring to the people whom we shepherd the immutable God and the power of spiritual faith. This is standing operating procedure — we must nourish our own faith even as we walk with those whose faith is being challenged, threatened and tortured.

We must reinforce the foundations of faith, belief and spiritual values. More than ever before, the good news of religion must be translated into the language of needs of our present soldiers and family members. They must know that we care beyond mere words as we walk them through the various crises and transitions.

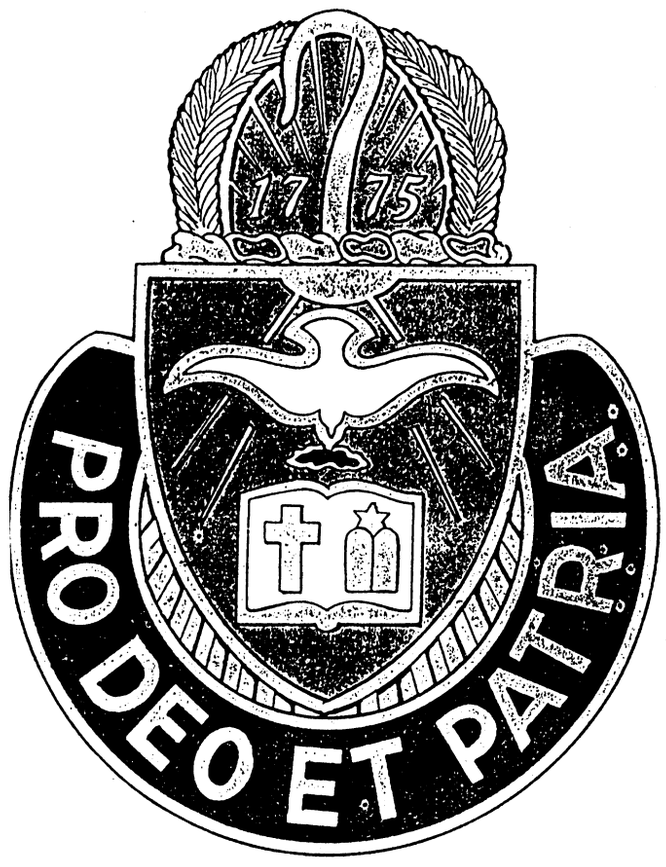
Our only hope in the midst of it all is the support of the changeless God of love and mercy.

Chaplain Corps to celebrate 218 years of service to God

By Jacqueline Feagin
USAIC Chaplains' Office

"Pro Deo et Patria" (For God and Country) is the official motto of the U. S. Army Chaplain Corps and has been since July 29, 1775.

Long before the corps had a motto and the establishment of the chaplaincy, clergymen and women have been filling that motto in the armed forces.



The Unit Ministry Team at Fort Benning invites the community to help celebrate the 218th anniversary of the Chaplain Corp at Uchee Creek 10 a.m. July 29 .

The corps, which was initially made up of four chaplains, has ranged in numbers to as many as 8,117 during World War II.

Soldiers and chaplains have worked together side by side in war and in peace — both working for God and country bringing hope to our nation.

The chaplaincy grows with the need of the soldiers. The chaplaincy also helps such organizations as Army Community Service, Equal Opportunity, Total Army Quality and Army Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Programs.

For more information on the celebration, contact Chaplain (Maj.) David Smith at 545-4964.

Muslim community — Koranic reading classes are at the Religious Education Center, Building 2522, every Monday at 7 p.m. Classes will provide a better understanding of the Koran. For more information, contact Imam Yahya Ansar Islam at 689-6922.

Protestant Women of the Chapel — "The Practice of Godliness" will be the topic of study for meetings during the summer months. Sessions are designed to allow attendance at one lesson or all 10.

Protestant Women of the Chapel meet 9:30 to 11:45 a.m. each Thursday in Building 2521. Free child care is provided in Building 2517. These buildings are located off Indianhead Road and Thorson Street.

For more information, contact Marti Maas at 682-0101 or Janie Hodges at 682-3465.

Officers' fellowship — Officers' Christian Fellowship offers all officers assigned to or visiting Fort Benning the opportunity to fellowship with other officers in pursuit of the message of Jesus Christ.

For more information, call Lt. Col. Richard Seim at 545-2745 or 685-9475.

Catholic women's study group — The Military Council of Catholic Women invites women to participate in the process of the Catholic Church and to share through eucharistic celebration, spiritual development programs and community activities.

The council meets for Bible study each Wednesday from 9:30 to 11 a.m. at the Infantry Center Chapel Annex.

For more information, call 687-7356 or 682- 9218.

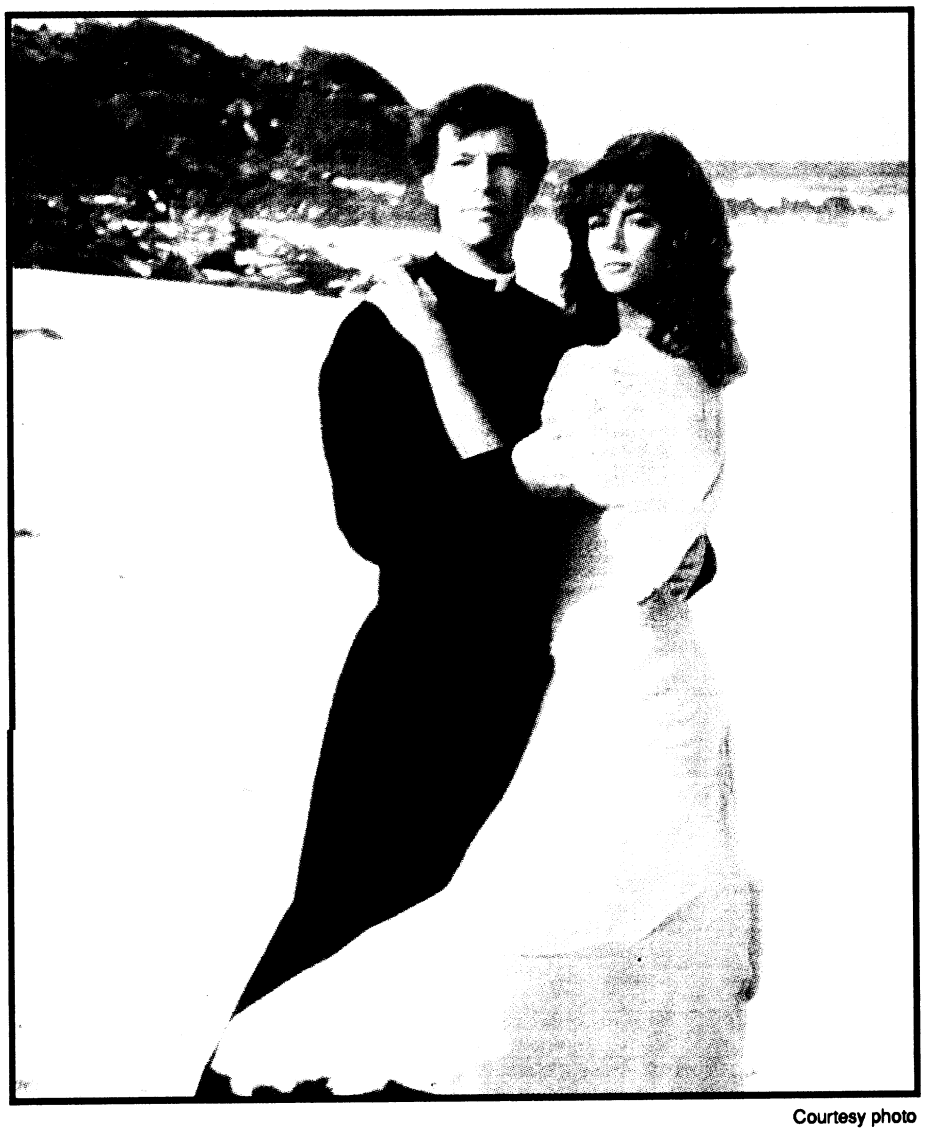
'The Thorn Birds' returns to ABC for 6 nights



By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

A decade ago, one of the most revered love stories in modern fiction became one of the most popular miniseries to date ... and this week, it returns.

The relationship of the stalwart Father Ralph de Bricassart and the beguiling Meggie Cleary thrives again, as ABC presents a six-night encore telecast of "The Thorn Birds," the Emmy-winning drama based on the Colleen McCullough best-seller. It begins with a two-hour installment on Sunday, followed by another on Monday, then by one-hour segments on both Tuesday and Wednesday; another two-hour chapter is slated for Thursday, with the same length finale scheduled July 24.

The holder of the second-highest miniseries ratings to date — topped only by "Roots," which also was produced by TV veterans David L. Wolper and Stan Margulies — the Australia-set saga features Richard Chamberlain and Rachel Ward as the central characters, whose deep emotional connection borders on forbidden passion for many years.

The stellar supporting cast includes veteran talents Barbara Stanwyck, Jean Simmons and Richard Kiley, who earned three of the six Emmy Awards that the project won (out of 16 nominations); additional co-stars include Philip Anglim, Bryan Brown (who married Ward in real life, after playing Meggie's husband Luke), Barry Corbin ("Northern Exposure"), Earl Holliman, Ken Howard, Piper Laurie, Sydney Penny (as the young Meggie), Christopher Plummer and Mare Winningham.

Richard Chamberlain and Rachel Ward

"You never can predict if something's going to be a big hit," reflects Wolper, whose last project was the Alex Haley-inspired "Queen." However, he adds that when the screen rights to "The Thorn Birds" were optioned, he thought it was going to be good.

"Since the book was such a success, we had the feeling that people would want to see it, " he said. Four major directors had developed four different scripts for it, but they could never get it to work right as a (theatrical) movie. I always said the reason was that one of the joys of 'The Thorn Birds' is the relationship between Father Ralph and Meggie, and his holding out (from physical intimacy). In our version, seven hours go by before they make love, so the tension is there. In a two-hour movie, it would have to take only an hour or an hour-and-a-half, so the same tension simply couldn't be there."

Though "The Thorn Birds" has appeared in local syndication since its initial airing and also has been available on home video since 1991, Wolper feels several reasons make the timing of this week's network repeat appropriate. Arguably the biggest one is that a sequel is on the way, with production slated to begin next spring for broadcast the following season, and Chamberlain (who currently is starring in a stage production of "My Fair Lady") and Ward have agreed to reprise their roles.

What: "The Thorn Birds"
When: Sunday through July 24 on ABC

Fort Benning's rangers demonstrate their abilities

By Lawrence K. Hughes
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Rangers in Action is the name of the demonstration and action is what they display. An audience of more than 250 soldiers and family members were entertained and enlightened by ranger instructors and demonstrators at a training area at Victory Pond and Hurley Field in Harmony Church. Beginning Monday, "Fort Benning Today" will show highlights of the event, which featured hand-to-hand combat, rappeling and more.

Col. Lawrence White relinquished command of the 11th Infantry Regiment July 9 to Col. Walter Wojdakowski. Stay with "Fort Benning Today" Monday and see highlights.

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel highlights post events and lists classified advertisements on the Fort Benning Community Bulletin Board featuring news and music from Soldiers Radio Satellite Network.

If you are a subscriber to Fort Benning Cable, you can watch USAIC TV on Channel 3, 24 hours a day. Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:26, 7:56, 8:26 and 8:56 on WLTZ TV-38.

For more information or to make suggestions, write or call the Broadcast Section of the Public Affairs Office, Infantry Hall, Room 602, 545-2201.

Country fair rates top 20

Coweta Festivals Inc.

This year's Powers' Crossroads Country Fair and Art Festival will be Sept. 4 through 6, at the historic Powers' Plantation located 12 miles southwest of Newnan on Georgia Highway 34.

The 23rd edition of the festival has been named as one of the top 20 events in the Southeast by the Southeast Tourism Society. As one of the oldest and largest events of its kind in the nation, this nonprofit community event attracts visitors from throughout the Southeast to enjoy the work of 300 of the nation's finest artist and craftsmen, a variety of lively entertainment and plenty of "down home" country cooking.

Recalling a bygone era when most tasks were performed by hand, many displays at the festival are working demonstrations of actual farm life as it existed, circa 1850. A mule turns the grinder at the sorghum syrup mill and dust billows as corn and wheat are ground at the original Powers' Grist Mill.

Visitors can sample wares in the turn-of-the-century country store and watch as "moonshine" is produced at the whiskey still. Youngsters can enjoy a playful romp in a tree house built in a 150-year-old oak tree and participate in other activities once enjoyed by their grandparents and great grandparents. All activities are under adult supervision.

Entertainment at the festival is continuous at the Summerhouse Stage area with groups such as the Bullsboro Bluegrass Band and Country Cloggers, as well as, toe-tapping country music and gospel singing. Special gospel singing is set for Sunday morning during the festival featuring the Georgians Gospel group. A special highlight at this year's festival will be a talent show Sept. 6 from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Thanks to the work of many local churches and civic groups, there will be plenty of country cooking. Favorites include pork, chicken and turkey barbecue, tenderloin and sausage biscuits, funnel cakes, fried pies and vegetable plates.

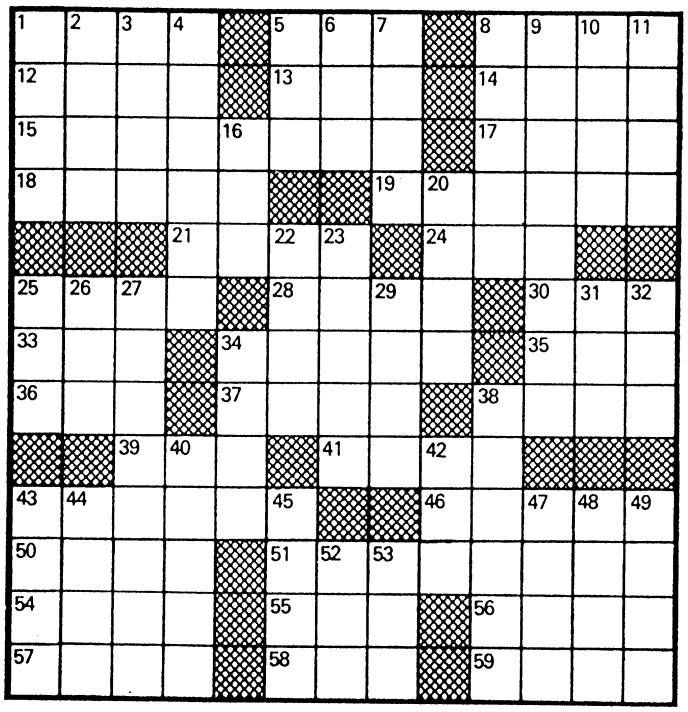
Unique in its organization, Coweta Festivals Inc., the governing body of the festival is composed of six Coweta County civic organizations who volunteer hundreds of hours each year to make the festival a success. Artist and craftsmen in the juried festival hail from as many as 26 states.

The festival gates are open from 9 a.m. until 6 p.m. daily. Admission is $5 for adults; $2 for children 12 and under; and no charge for children 4 and under, senior citizen's and military members $4. For groups of 25 or more, a special group rate is available upon request. Advance tickets are available by sending check or money order to: Coweta Festival, Inc., P.O. Box 899, Newnan, Ga. 30264. Ample parking is available with free shuttle bus service from the parking lots to the main gate.

Newnan and Coweta County also join in the festivities with Festival Days, including road races and sidewalks sales in downtown Newnan. The 17th annual road race Sept. 4 will feature a 10,000 meter and 2.2-mile course through the city of Newnan. The Festival Days sidewalk sale of downtown merchants will take place Sept. 3 and 4. Newnan features antebellum and Victorian architecture and recently restored Coweta Courthouse dates from the turn of the century. Walking tours of downtown and driving tours of Newnan's historic residential districts are available.

Past comes to present

Georgia State Parks & Historic Sites



Take a trip through the past learning American folk skills during Foxfire Folk Skill Days at Amicalola Falls State Park Aug. 14 and 15.

Re-enactors will don authentic clothing and conduct demonstrations of spinning, weaving and guilting, as well as log splitting, furniture building, blacksmithing and broom making. An evening by the campfire includes storytelling, fireside Appalachian music and butter churning. The program takes place Aug. 14, from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m., and Aug. 15 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the park in Dawsonville, Ga. There is no charge. Contact Amicalola Falls at (706) 265-8888 for more information.

Wing cooks to strut stuff

Georgia's Stone Mountain Park

The feathers are flyin' as chicken wing cooks from all over the South flock to Stone Mountain Park to strut their stuff at the fifth annual Wing Fling Poultry Party and Cook-off Aug. 7. The Coliseum Meadow is sizzling with spicy entertainment, the second ever "Wing-lympic Games," and wings that are hot, hot, hot.

Of course, the judges know the wing is the thing as they happily eat their way to naming "Hotlanta's" best bird. The best hot and not-so-hot wings and the most outlandish showmanship antics take home generous cash prizes. Following the formal judging, public sampling is a popular conclusion to the event.

Entertainment is continuous from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. featuring Christopher Hercure, Gopher Broke Band, Southernbred and up and coming recording artist Clay Walker. There are opportunities for the public to grab a microphone on the karaoke stage or in one of the contests — the chicken wing dance or cluck-off. More prizes are in store for the winners of the "Wing-lympics," sling-a-wing, wing chip and wing toss competitions.

In addition to food and entertainment, Wing Fling is a treasure chest of collectibles with dealers offering everything from baseball cards to political buttons and silver and china to tin cars. Browsing through the collectible booths prove once again, that "one man's junk is another man's treasure."

Those who may wish to participate are welcome. For information, contact the Special Events office at (404) 498-5633.

Entry into the event site is free. Park entry requires a valid parking permit, which may be purchased daily for $5 or annually for $20.

Maritime festival to celebrate Savannah's seafaring spirit

Savannah Maritime Festival

SAVANNAH, Ga. - The true seafaring spirit of Savannah will be highlighted for nine days this year with the second annual Savannah Maritime Festival. This year's festival, July 31 through Aug. 8, offers many new events and activities for people of all ages.

Kicking off the festival will be the Maritime 10K Run on Tybee Island. This event will be followed by a sailing regatta, a lifeguard competition, a savage tan contest, and a boat show. The first day culminates with a roaring '20s gala — the Tybrisa Ball. Throughout the nine days, festival participants will delight in more than 28 events.

Club features 2 dance floors

By Kimberly Bennett
Directorate of Community Activities

Between Doughboy Stadium and Gowdy Field is a small brick building surrounded by shrubbery. It is one of the oldest buildings on Fort Benning and finding its entrance is half the fun of visiting the club inside.

This is the junior enlisted club, more commonly known as the Hidden Door Club. It has earned this name over the years because a patron unfamiliar with the bar will start at the front of the building and circle it entirely before finding the door in the back.

The club is open to soldiers corporal and below, their family members and guests, and it operates five nights a week — Wednesday, Thursday and Sunday 6 p.m. to midnight; Friday, 6 p.m. to 2 a.m. and Saturday, 6 p.m. to 3 a.m.

On those nights, the club's hidden door is a gateway to music, dancing and socializing. The two dance floors, the right kind of music and an atmosphere to suit everyone is a rare find.

On Friday and Saturday nights, each dance floor has its own disc jockey. While customers in one part of the club are having a good time to the sounds of rock 'n' roll, those in the other part are listening to jazz.

Wednesday and Sunday nights also bring a variety of music to the Hidden Door Club. During these nights, the customers take to the stage for karaoke.

For those who just want to relax, the Hidden Door Club's game room is the place to go. Here, pool tables and video games offer a way to unwind after a long day.

Soon, however, first-time customers will not have to hunt for the club's elusive entrance. In August, the club will break ground for a new facility located near the Airborne Snack Bar. The club will still have its two dance floors, but the building itself will be much larger with a large, modern game room and snack bar.

Total Fitness 2000

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Fitness is associated with living longer, living better and living healthier.

Fit people, as a result, perform better, do more work and are sick less, evidence shows.

"As soldiers, fitness is part of our professional ethic," said Col. David M. White, commandant of the U.S. Army Physical Fitness School, "but civilian employees traditionally have not had the same fitness opportunities that we do in the military."

Spouses, children and retirees also have not had the same emphasis placed on fitness, White pointed out.

As a result, the U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command nas initiated a test program called "Total Fitness 2000" to promote fitness, health and well-being in the total Army family.

The program is aimed at improving the readiness of soldiers, the performance and availability of the Department of the Army civilian work force and the overall fitness and health of family members and retirees by embedding a life-long fitness ethic throughout TRADOC schools, institutions and programs.

White, who coined the name "Total Fitness 2000," said "total" refers to the fact that the program "will go after all the population groups and all the components of fitness rather than just one exercise or area."

Some of the goals of the program are to reduce the percentage of smokers, reduce alcohol and drug abuse, promote

75TH REGIMENT

Soldiers meet, pay tribute to comrades

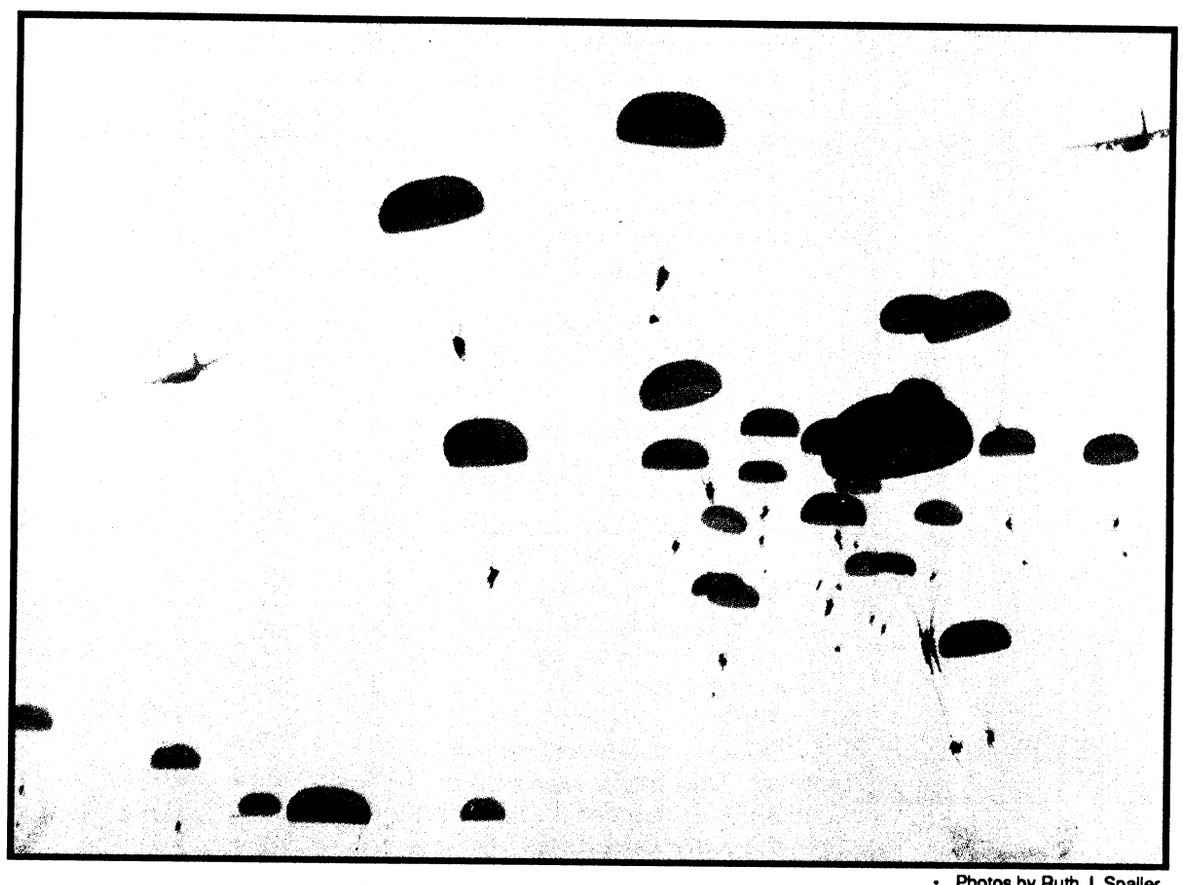
By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Rangers past and present gathered at Fort Benning for the annual Ranger Rendezvous July 17 through Wednesday to honor and celebrate the esprit de corps of the rangers.

Activities began with a mass tactical airborne insertion at Fryar Drop Zone when more than 2,000 rangers threw themselves into the sky from airplanes flying at 800 feet and parachuted down in waves to begin Exercise Caisson Warrior.

Rangers traveled from Fort Lewis, Wash., and Fort Stewart, Ga., to participate in the exercise, bringing together the three battalions that make up the 75th Ranger Regiment.

A short field exercise following the jump and a variety of sporting and weapons competitions tested the rangers' tactical, technical and physical skills and abilities.



The entire 75th Ranger Regiment stood in formation on York Field Wednesday at the change of command ceremony when Lt. Gen. James T. Scott, commander of Army Special Operations Command, passed the command of the 75th Ranger Regiment from Col. David L. Grange to Col. James T. Jackson.

Past rangers came from far and wide to participate in the Ranger Veterans March, Ranger Hall of Fame induction ceremony and Fallen Comrades Dedications and to attend open houses and other social events.

For many of these ranger veterans, it has been a week of war stories, fond memories, brotherhood and pride.

Staff Sgt. Welton Wardell, who served with Company E of the 75th in Vietnam, said he recognized faces of soldiers he served with and went to Ranger School with on the plaques unveiled Tuesday at the Ranger Hall of Fame.

Many ranger veterans said they felt that participating in the Ranger Rendezvous was like "coming home."

Photos by Ruth J. Spaller

Parachuting rangers rain down from the sky above Fryar Field during the mass tactical air assault Saturday.

More than one, including Gen. Wayne A. Downing, commander-in-chief of the U.S. Special Operations Command, described the rangers as a family.

"There is no group of soldiers, past or present, that represents the band of brothers more than the rangers of the U.S. Army," said Downing at the Ranger Hall of Fame induction ceremony.

"We are all made from the same cloth," said retired 1st Sgt. Bonifacio Romo, a ranger veteran of Vietnam. "It's a feeling inside — once you're a ranger, you're always a ranger," Romo said.

"It goes without saying that rangers are a very special breed of soldiers," said Fort Benning Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White.

"Always on the cutting edge, rangers have led the way from the beaches of North Africa and Italy to the lightning strikes in Panama and Desert Storm," White said.

"Never have the rangers failed their comrades, nor have they failed to accomplish their mission regardless of the hardships they encountered," he said.

LES now easier to understand

June leave, earnings statement reflects changes in data

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

Starting in June (the July 1 paydate), changes were made to the Leave and Earnings Statement to make the listings of entitlements, deductions, allotments and remarks easier to understand for the soldier.

The literal symbols have been expanded, abbreviations have been standardized and confusing statements have been clarified, according to Ray Winderweedle, chief of Military Pay, Finance and Accounting Office.

Expanded debt remarks will also be included to inform the military member of the type of debt along with the total debt, current month reduction and balance remaining.

"The changes made in the LES," said Winderweedle, "will allow the soldier to look at the remarks, and any monies that he owes the government will be explained fully."

More data boxes will be added for leave, taxes, dependency and general pay data:

"These changes came about through inquiries by soldiers because (the LESs) were hard to read," said Winderweedle. "Often times when a soldier owed money, he had no idea why he owed those dollars.

"It is now going to be easier for soldiers to read and understand their specific pay account."

Also, the Net Pay Advice form is issued at mid-month.

All active duty soldiers receive the form if they have elected to use the mid-month pay option or not.

The form provides administrative remarks to all soldiers, and mid-month pay data to those who receive it.

The Army adopted the Air Force's Joint Uniform Military Pay System/Joint Service Software military pay system to pay active duty and Reserve component soldiers. The system went into effect for active duty soldiers on Fort Benning in April 1992

According to Winderweedle, the new system will significantly improve the timeliness and accuracy of soldiers' pay.

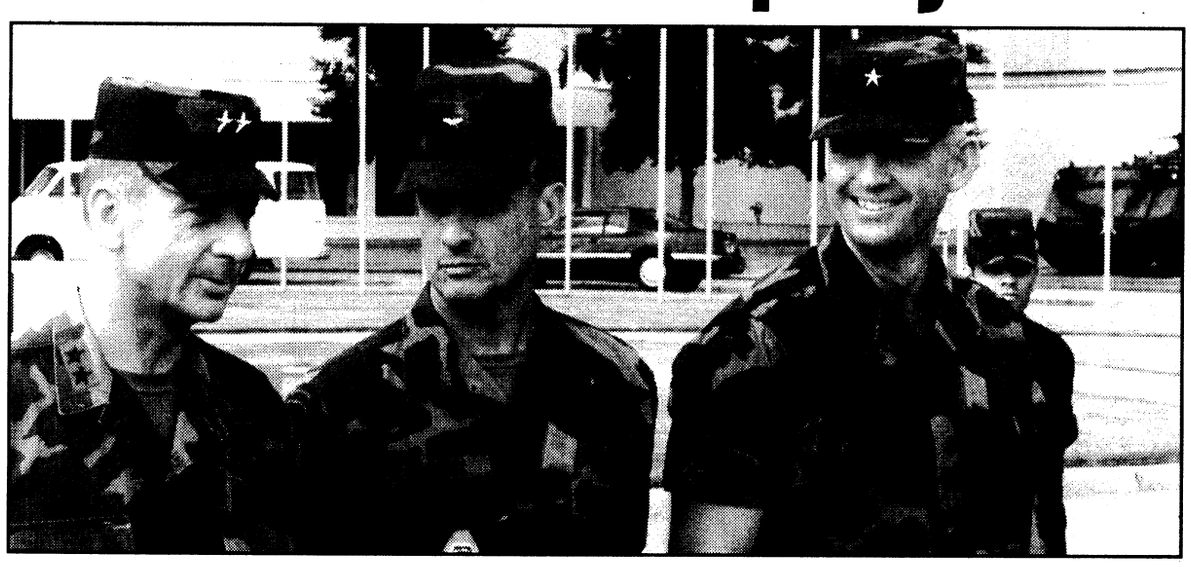
BG Hendrix heads to Heidelberg

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

In a combined departure and arrival ceremony July 16, Fort Benning said farewell to assistant commandant Brig. Gen John (Jay) W. Hendrix and welcomed his replacement Brig. Gen. Jack P. Nix Jr.



Hendrix, who has been selected for promotion to major general, leaves his position as deputy commanding general and assistant commandant of the U.S. Army Infantry School to become the deputy chief of staff for operations, U.S. Army Europe in Heidelberg, Germany.

At the ceremony, Hendrix was presented the Legion of Merit with second oak leaf cluster for his "selfless leadership, expertise and unparalleled accomplishments while serving at Fort Benning."

Post Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White also presented Hendrix's wife, Cheri, the Commander's Award for Public Service for her many contributions to, and her support of, the Fort Benning Community.

White said it was difficult to bid farewell to Hendrix on behalf of Fort Benning and also personally.

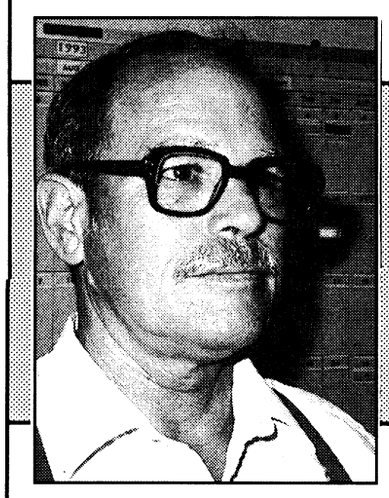
VARIOUS VOICES

Since Fort Benning is the pilot site for Total Fitness 2000, a new fitness promotion program, how many times per week do you exercise and what do you do?

Gary Duncan, logistics management specialist — "I walk during my lunch hour five days a week for half an hour."



Gail Carlsen, classroom and transportation controller — "I work out on Nautilus equipment three days a week."

Linda Kotto, plans and operations secretary — "I exercise twice a week with watersports like swimming and jet skiing."

Lorri Vickery, Directorate of Logistics secretary — "I work out for 20 minutes three times a week in the morning before work, and I take a 20-minute walk during lunch."

Archibald J. Caldwell, logistics management specialist — "I walk three days a week for about a mile."

Elwin Gilchrist, force integration management specialist — "I walk my dog three days a week for three-quarters of a mile."

Physical fitness plan makes sense

We soldiers want company during PT at 6 a.m.

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

Plans are afoot to bring Army physical fitness to retirees, family members and Department of the Army civilians.

Makes sense to me.

If I've got to be out on Stewart-Watson Field doing the daily dozen while it's still dark or running up and down the stairs at Doughboy Stadium, I'd like some company besides fellow soldiers.

I think it'd be neat to see a teen-ager awake at 6 a.m. or seeing the civilians in our office trying to learn the "high-jumper."

After all, isn't comic relief good for the soul? Doesn't laughter make a person well?

As for the retirees, this was probably all their idea anyhow. Just a way for them to show off.

Naturally we won't be seeing

COMMENTARY

lines of teen-agers be-bopping around the track or civilians doing jumping jacks and belly busters at this prediluvian time of day.

Instead, if we see them at all, it'll be during civilized times, such as around the lunch period. And they probably won't be wearing gray shorts and gray T-shirts.

Instead they'll probably be dressed in the latest spandex tights and tops. By the way, if you've got water buffalo proportions, stay away from spandex. Try the baggy look.

OK, so it's your goal, say in 2004, to look like a model for the Sports Illustrated swim wear edition, but until such a time, try the baggy shorts topped by a triple X T-shirt look.

Further, these hardy civilians will probably go at it until the first beads of perspiration dot their foreheads, then sit down and rest, firm believers that where there's pain, there's no gain.

This would be much like the training class they ran with civilians a short time ago.

While some of the civilians were religious about coming to the classes, doing the exercises and eating the prescribed meals, others, as soon as they did a lap or two, would sit in the grass, spending the rest of the class talking. Further, if they suspected the instructor wouldn't be in, they'd cut class altogether.

You know who benefited from this, and who didn't.

There are certain pitfalls.

But I admire the Army for its intent, and I think the benefits would far outweigh the drawbacks.

After all, ya gotta figure, healthy people will be more productive people.

As we trim back the work force, we certainly do need healthy people.

It's also said that those who exercise regularly live longer. I'd always heard that the key to long life was to keep breathing as long as possible, but I guess healthy people have a better chance at this breathing business.

Exercise programs will also help reduce stress. I mean if we can only get the stress causers out of the office for an hour, three times a week, look how much stress that takes off people.

I can hardly wait. I know a few civilian bosses I'd like to see do this everyday ... for several hours a day.

I'm kidding of course. There are no such bosses at Fort Benning.

Anyway, Fort Benning is once again looking at leading the way. This time in the realm of total fitness for the total Army.

If anyone can pull if off, we at Fort Benning and the guys and gals in the Fitness School can.

Benning to lead way in total Army fitness

By Dr. Louis F. Tomasi
U.S. Army Physical Fitness School

The U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command has kicked off a fitness promotion program for the Army community, and Fort Benning was selected as the pilot community for this Total Fitness 2000.

The target audience is active and Reserve components, National Guard, Army civilian employees, Army family members and retirees.

The goal is to encourage physical activity that is aerobic in nature and to lower illness and sickness rates, thereby decreasing health care costs.

In a study funded by the Public Health Service and the National Institute on Aging and conducted by the Research Scientific Advisory Board at the Cooper Institute, Dallas, Texas, the evidence is clear.

Physical activity decreases the risks of chronic sickness and untimely, premature death.

This study shows a strong association between physical fitness and mortality due to all causes including cardiovascular disease and colon cancer.

This study also reviewed other contributing factors such as age, family history, high blood pressure, nutritional considerations and physical activity are associated with longer lifespans and decreased rates of sickness.

A brisk walk of 30 to 60 minutes each day is sufficient to produce the protective effect for both women and men.

More fit men suffered only one-fourth the rate of premature deaths as men in the low-fit category. The more-fit women suffered one-fifth the rate of premature deaths as women in the low-fit category.

Many companies worldwide like Pepsico, Johnson & Johnson, AT&T, plus Tenneco and Mesa Petroleum companies have fitness centers on their locations.

T. Boone Pickens, chief executive officer, Mesa Petroleum, points out the following positive factors experienced by exercisers:

Mesa's health cost savings exceed $1.6 billion a year, 52 percent fewer absentee days, only 10 percent of the employees use tobacco, 35 percent are regular exercisers and an astounding 70 percent participate in wellness programs.

"Costs are contained and eventually reduced when business provides fitness facilities and time for their employees," Pickens said.

He also points that the exercise group's average annual medical costs were one-half that of the nonexercisers.

There is strong evidence relating physical fitness and decreased chronic disease and death rates in men and women. More importantly, to receive these benefits, only moderate levels of fitness are needed.

The strength of the evidence says that low fitness levels are an important public health problem that deserve remedial attention.

Total Fitness 2000 is the vehicle to encourage worksite fitness promotion for the military and now the civilian employees at Fort Benning.

Fitness: Have fun; reduce weight, stress

By Paula J. Randall
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Want to lose weight and reduce stress? And do you want to do it quickly, easily and without a lot of pain and suffering?

That's what I wanted. So when I heard the Directorate of Civilian Personnel was offering a fitness training program, I was the first to sign up.

Now when I first started the class, I thought it would be interesting and fun, but I had serious doubts that I would lose any weight, lower my cholesterol or reduce stress. However, I decided to give it a try and see what would happen.

It is now three months later, and I am about 20 pounds lighter, my cholesterol went from 235 to 197, and both my husband and my boss say I'm handling the stress much better.

What did I have to do to achieve this? I try to eat a healthy and balanced diet most of the time, and I walk for an hour, three to four times a week. That's all. No strenuous exercise. No starvation or fad diets. Just good, healthy food and evening walks in the park. I even eat anything I want to on Saturdays — my treat days.

My husband saw how easy it was and decided to join me. He also has lost about 20 pounds.

The class that I took was part of the "Follow Me to Fitness" Civilian Fitness Training Program; I took the walking course.

The class taught this basic principle: The three major components of a health-oriented lifestyle are good nutrition, regular exercise and stress management; a sound nutrition and exercise plan is among the most important factors in reducing stress levels.

The course included two weeks of classroom lectures by members of the U.S. Army Medical Department Activity, the U.S. Army Physical Fitness School and the Directorate of Community Activities. They taught us about total body fitness, nutrition, stress management and abusive substance avoidance.

MEDDAC also gave us a "before" and "after" physical exam so we'd be able to see our results.

Then we walked every day for an hour at Doughboy Stadium. I started off walking 1 1/2 miles, and a month later I was walking four miles.

Patty Pfeiffer of DCP led the walking portion of the class and was a great inspiration to many of us. My personal goal in life is to someday be able to keep up with her on the walking track.

Besides giving two classroom lectures, Staff Sgt. Dennis Guaglianone of the Fitness School also found time to walk with us. He would motivate me to walk faster by passing me while walking backward and yelling, "You can't catch me!"

So if there are any of you civilians out there who want to look and feel better, give the "Follow Me to Fitness" Civilian Fitness Training Program a try. It's easy, it's fun and it's free. All you have to lose is unwanted pounds.

Drawdown

Civilians have a CARE-ing support system

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — By the end of fiscal 1997, the Army's civilian population is expected to be smaller by some 51,000 personnel slots than the civilian strength at the end of fiscal 1992.

All part of the total-force drawdown, that figure represents the largest civilian reduction within the Defense Department, said Vicki Hines.

Her office at the U.S. Total Army Personnel Command in Alexandria, Va., manages civilian personnel requirements Armywide.

"In fiscal 1993 alone, about 25,600 employees must leave the Army rolls," she said.

What kind of support services are in place to help the displaced? For one, recent legislation authorizes defense officials to offer "voluntary separation incentives."

These consist of lump-sum payments equal to the lesser amount of either severance pay or $25,000.

Hines defines the long-term goal of the incentive effort as encouraging employees to take immediate or early retirement, or to resign so as to avoid or minimize involuntary separations.

The incentives come from CARE — the DoD-administered program called Civilian Assistance and Re-employment.

Basically, CARE seeks to minimize the effects of reduction in force, assist laid-off employees, reshape the civilian force and restore personnel balance.

Hines described another element of the CARE program: Job Swap.

"It allows an employee at an installation scheduled for closure to exchange jobs with an employee who is eligible to retire at a nearby unthreatened installation," Hines said.

She explained that the job-swapping employees must have equivalent jobs and supervisory approval.

"Also, the retirement-eligible person, who will receive no voluntary separation pay, must stay at the closing installation until it actually closes."

Why would a prospective retiree choose such an arrangement?

"Perhaps he or she has relatives in the area of choice, or prefers its climate or economy for retirement advantage," she answered.

A CARE-sponsored provision recently approved by the U.S. Office of Personnel Management allows employees facing involuntary separation but needing a minimal time for retirement eligibility to stay on annual leave until they achieve eligibility.

Services meet recruit goal but quality of soldiers drops

American Forces Information Service

Recently released recruiting figures for the first half of fiscal 1993 show the services met their quotas, but quality was down, said Department of Defense military personnel officials.

However, officials were quick to point out that quality was down for high-quality recruits only when compared to fiscal 1991 and 1992.

DoD considers a high-quality recruit one with a high school diploma who scores in the upper half of the Armed Forces Qualification Test, categories I through IIIA.

The quality of recruits for the last two years was exceptional when compared to 1980's figures, said DoD personnel officials. The numbers just released fit right in with those from the 1980s, they said.

So far this year, high-quality recruits make up about 65 percent of the total recruited. The average for fiscal 1992 was 76 percent.

For the last 10 years, high-quality recruits made up 61 percent of those recruited.

The services recruited more than 98,000 people during the first half of fiscal 1993, which equals 102 percent of DoD's goal for the period. By the same time last year, the services reported a gain of 82,000 people, about 101 percent of the department's goal.

The total recruiting objective for fiscal 1993 is 203,000.

The Army made 106 percent of its objective with 38,300 people; Navy, 100 percent with 27,100; Marine Corps, 101 percent with 16,400; and Air Force, 100 percent with 16,300.

Statistics indicate quality, as determined by high school diplomas, the entrance test categories I through IIIA, and high-quality recruits slipped in all services when compared to the same period in fiscal 1992.

The Army's quality numbers dropped further than the other services. Only 89 percent of the new recruits are high school graduates, as compared to 100 percent last year; 67 percent scored in categories I through IIIA, compared to 78 percent; and 58 percent high-quality recruits, compared to 78 percent.

DoD installations explain key to excellence win

By Linda Lee
American Forces Information Service

Eglin Air Force Base in Florida, where the jungle and swamp phase of Ranger School is conducted, is one of five Department of Defense installations to earn the annual commander in chief's award for installation excellence.

Take care of the people and get the job done the best way possible. That's what the five DoD installations did in 1992 to earn the annual award.

Selected for the honors were the Army's White Sands Missile Range, N.M.; Marine Corps Air Station, Beaufort, S.C.; Naval Station San Diego; Eglin Air Force Base, Fla.; and the Defense General Supply Center, Richmond, Va.

Considered the largest Air Force base in the Free World, Eglin covers almost 725 square miles of land and 86,500 square miles of water ranges. No money award goes with the Air Force title.

Environmental guardianship and improvement in quality of life programs helped Eglin win the award, said retired Maj. Gen. Michael J. Butchko, former installation commander.

The people at Eglin take pride in their work and the base, said Butchko. "I'm sure that pride was evident to the evaluation team as it was to me every day. It reflected positively on the outcome."

White Sands Missile Range, located in the desert near Las Cruces, N.M., is part of the Army's Test and Evaluation Command. It is also one of three landing sites in the United States for NASA's shuttle landings.

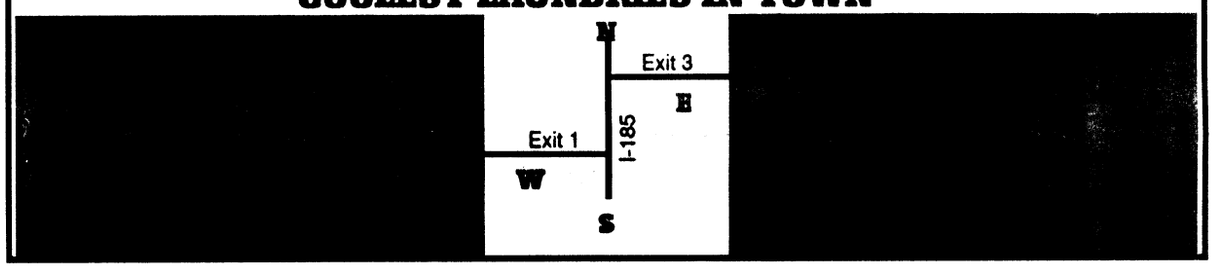
Brig. Gen. Richard Wharton, range commander, said customer service helped the installation take the Army's top prize, worth $1.5 million. The range didn't have the money to spend to improve the overall appearance as did larger installations, said Wharton.

To make up for it, the people worked harder at the things they could improve, like customer service programs and getting the job done.

The range population continually looks for ways to better their environment, he said. They maintain an enormous sense of pride in their community and have continued to look for ways to improve their working and living conditions.

Teamwork is key to the Marine Corps Air Station's success. This award is indicative of the spirit of teamwork that exists here," said Col. Charles Hoelle Jr., air station commander. "Without the co-operation and dedication to excellence of the entire 'Fighter-town' community, it would not have been possible to receive this recognition."

The Beaufort base also won the 1989 commander in chief award for the Marine Corps. The air station will receive $200,000 for its efforts.



Efforts leading to this year's award included the air station's receipt of the Navy's top environmental quality award and a base wide energy conservation program. An installation improvement program that stresses industrial and domestic recycling also contributed to the title.

San Diego Naval Station is another two time winner of the installation excellence award; the base first won it in 1986. The Navy winner receives no cash prize.

Innovative management programs helped the naval station win, said Capt. Martin Collins, commanding officer. These included meetings between ship and tenant commanders and senior enlisted members to determine what was going right or what was wrong and needed to be fixed; an ambitious transition assistance program set up to help those leaving the military; and programs to aid service members and their families with deployments and reunions.

Other areas in which the naval base excelled, said Collins, were bachelor quarters management, a self-help program that saved more than $1.5 million and created a recreation center, and an energy conservation program that saved more than $100,000 in energy costs.

DEPUTY: Post gets new AC

"Although they are leaving us, there will be others out there who will benefit from the leadership and friendship of Jay and Cheri," he said.

"Hendrix," White said, "was the driving force behind many of the initiatives that will ensure our infantry soldiers maintain the edge on the battlefield," such as state-of-the-art Bradley Fighting Vehicles and second generation optics.

"He absolutely will not quit on issues that are important to the infantry and important to our soldiers," White said.

"Future generations of infantry soldiers will benefit from his vision and his persistence."

Hendrix said he was "proud to have been a part" of Fort Benning and its accomplishments.

Hendrix then said he wanted to be among the first to welcome Nix and his wife, Sharon, to the "best assignment in the Army."

"Fort Benning and the things it does to change our doctrine and equipment and to train future leaders is absolutely vital," Nix said.

He said he was "absolutely delighted" to be assigned here, and is looking forward to being part of the work done here.

Nix comes to Fort Benning from the 82nd Airborne Division, Fort Bragg, N.C., where he was the assistant division commander for operations.

A native of Gainesville, Ga., Nix was commissioned a second lieutenant upon graduation from the Georgia Institute of Technology where he was a distinguished military graduate and earned a bachelor of science degree.

He has a master's degree in business administration from Adelphi University.

Nix's military education includes the Infantry Officer Basic and Advanced courses, Armed Forces Staff College and the U.S. Army War College.

His past assignments include serving as military adviser to the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations and as commander of the 1st Battalion, 508th Airborne Infantry and 1st Brigade, 82nd Airborne Division.

His decorations and badges include two awards of the Bronze Star, four awards of the Meritorious Service Medal, four awards of the Army Commendation Medal, the National Defense Service Medal with gold star, the Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal with bronze star and arrowhead device, the Southwest Asia Service Medal with two bronze stars, the Combat Infantryman, Master Parachutist, Pathfinder and Air Assault badges and the Ranger Tab.

Rendezvous

Rangers young and old gather at Fort Benning to honor comrades

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

"Rangers Lead the Way!" was the phrase of the day Monday at the Ranger Veterans March and Ranger Hall of Fame Induction Ceremony.

Darby's Rangers and Merrill's Marauders from World War II, ranger veterans from Korea, Vietnam, Operation Urgent Fury in Grenada, Just Cause in Panama and Operations Desert Shield and Storm marched proudly down Holtz Street next to Ranger Field.

The march provided veterans a moment of glory as they paraded by the crowd of friends, family and black beret-clad young rangers and were greeted with loud applause.

Gen. Wayne A. Downing, commander-in-chief, U.S. Special Operations Command, Post Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White and retired Col. Roy A. Murray, commander of the 4th Ranger Battalion during World War II, were the reviewing officers for the ceremony.

"Ranger veterans, your legacy will be a guide for the rangers of today and far into the future," said Downing, addressing the crowd after the march. "You have set the standard that we continue to try to achieve."

"This really makes you feel great," said retired Col. Francis W. Dawson, a 1992 Hall of Fame inductee and the honorary colonel of the 75th Ranger Regiment.

Dawson, who "led the way on Omaha Beach in 1944," said that as a cancer patient, participating in events like the march gives him the courage to keep going.

"And," he said, "the young rangers treat you like a king."

Hall of Fame

A ceremony inducting 18 heroes into the Ranger Hall of Fame immediately followed the march.

"Today's rangers draw on a legacy of faith and courage," said Downing.

"These inductees are the example that breathes life and reality into the words of the Ranger Creed.

"We enshrine them as a beacon to future accomplishments and as a reminder that we truly stand on the shoulders of giants," Downing said.

The 1993 inductees into the Ranger Hall of Fame were:

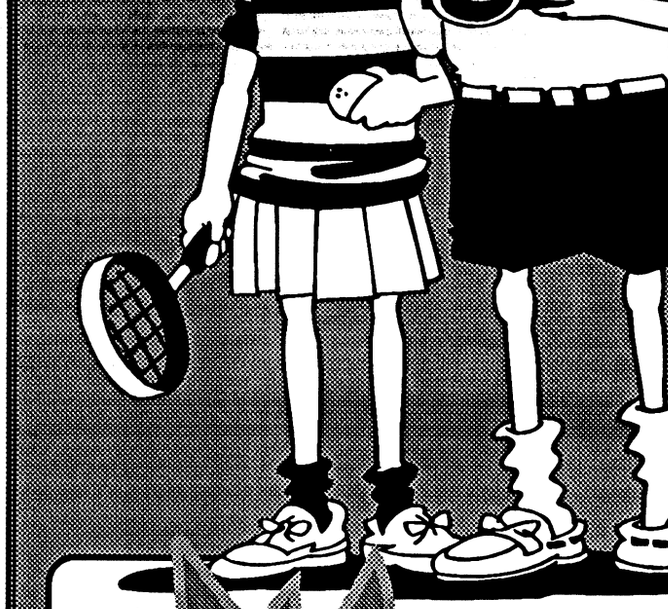
Command Sgt. Maj. Henry Caro, Staff Sgt. David C. Dolby, Command Sgt. Maj. Neal R. Gentry, Capt. Nathan Hale, Col. Charles N. Hunter, President Abraham Lincoln, Command Sgt. Maj. Gary L. Littrell, Lt. Col. Andre C. Lucas, Pfc. Robert L. Mastin, Master Sgt. Roy H. Matsumoto, 1st Sgt. Harvey L. Moore, Sgt. Maj. of the Army Glen E. Morrell, Col. Roy A. Murray, Col. George A. Paccerelli, Sgt. Donn F. Porter, Col. Arthur C. Stang III, and Lt. Gen. Samuel V. Wilson.

There was also one honorary inductee: John O. Marsh Jr.

Fallen Comrades

The Fallen Comrades Dedications at 75th Ranger Regimental Headquarters Monday afternoon struck a more somber note.

More than one tear was shed as a small crowd of family, friends and ranger buddies moved through different areas around the compound named for their fallen friends and loved ones to honor and remember them.



Memorial Court, a place of honor for battle campaigns was dedicated to Hall of Fame inductee 1st Sgt. Harvey L. Moore, a veteran of Operation Urgent Fury in Grenada and Operation Just Cause in Panama who was killed in training during Operation Embryo Stage Oct. 29.

The conference room where operation orders are given for each mission was dedicated to Sgt. Blaine A. Mishak, who was also killed during Operation Embryo Stage Oct. 29.

The regimental athletic area was dedicated in memory of Spc. Jeremy B. Bird, who also died during Operation Embryo Stage. The Memorial Hall and Museum, displaying lineage of ranger battles from World War II through Desert Storm, was dedicated to Sgt. Jeffrey A. Palmer, who was killed in training during Operation Leatherneck Ranger Nov. 17.

The Ranger Indoctrination Program barracks where new rangers are trained and prepared for Ranger School was dedicated to Hall of Fame inductee Command Sgt. Maj. Neal R. Gentry, author of the Ranger Creed.

Whether you live on post or off, rent or own your home, it's up to you to make sure your family's possessions are protected. But that can be easier and cost a lot less than you think with a Renter's or Homeowner's Insurance policy offered through Family Protection Plus℠.

The government won't reimburse you for household and personal items that are stolen or destroyed unless you live in on-post housing, or they are being moved or stored for a PCS. Then you still can't be sure you are fully protected because the government limits the maximum amount it pays for personal property. It also deducts depreciation from the original value of damaged or stolen items. So you may not even get enough money to replace your losses.

Renter's and homeowner's insurance coverage available through Family Protection Plus provides comprehensive protection for all your possessions—at home, in transit, or in storage—with a replacement value option available. These policies give you automatic coverage on TDYs anywhere in the world for up to 179 days. And they also include liability coverage that protects you against law suits and damage claims.

POST BRIEFS

Reminder: Stop DDP before July 31

July 31 is the last day to disenroll in the Delta Dependents Dental Plan. Soldiers were automatically enrolled in the expanded Delta Dependents Dental Plan April 1 and given 120 days to disenroll if they did not desire to participate.

Failure to disenroll by July 31 or use of the program between April 1 and July 31 obligates soldiers to participate in the program for two years.

Soldiers not automatically enrolled may voluntarily enroll if they are eligible to re-enlist and have the intent to remain on active duty 24 months or more.

For more information, contact your personnel administration center.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland and range areas will take place through Aug. 1. If weather permits, the following compartments may be affected: C-1, C-2, C-3, D-3, D-17, E-2, E-4, E-5, E-7, K-8, K-9, K-18, M-2, M-6, M-8, O-1, O-3, O-5, O-6, O-7, Q-2, S-1, T-5 and T-6.

Burning will occur in pine stands within these compartments to enhance endangered species habitat and training areas.

People using these areas for recreation must vacate the areas before 9:30 a.m. daily.

Training units using compartments adjacent to these areas may experience drift smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while traveling in these areas because of the potential for reduced visibility.

Signature needed for AER applications

All Army Emergency Relief applications, Department of the Army Form 1103, are now required to have a statement that it has been reviewed by the soldier's first sergeant. The unit commander's signature is still required for processing.

Band wants members

The Infantry Band is looking for qualified soldiers to become band members.

Currently the band is at 75 percent strength and is in need of soldiers who are proficient at playing the following instruments: trumpet, saxophone, trombone, baritone, tuba and the snare drum.

Anyone interested should call the Infantry Band for an appointment to audition.

Any soldiers who wish to audition must bring a letter of permission from his or her commander to audition.

Included in the letter should be a statement of release from present assignment if accepted by the band.

For more information, call 1st Sgt. Robert Tolton or Staff Sgt. Kevin Twyeffort at 545-5313.

clinical breast examinations and control of high blood pressure as well as to reduce the number of people who are overweight.

Fort Benning was selected as the pilot community for the program, and has established process action teams for each category to come up with specific programs that will begin in fiscal 1994, White said.

"These teams are developing the programs that we then hope to export to the whole Army at the installation level," White said.
