"Currently, the system in the M-1A2 tank cannot communicate digitally with either field artillery or aviation systems," Funk said. "We have modified the software so that it can communicate with those systems."

The modification allowed the spectators to watch visual images on several television screens set up in a briefing tent. Images were sent from an AH-64 Apache helicopter flying over the "battlefield." An unmanned aerial vehicle also provided immediate video feedback to commanders.

Not only were the video images available to the spectators, the images were also transmitted to a ground station video van. Then, command and control aircraft received the video information, as they would under battlefield conditions.

"This allows us to coordinate the operation with the aviation commander while he is en route to the area of operation," said Col. David Porter, director of the Mounted Warfighting Battlespace Lab.

"This system allows the task force to get nearly real-time intelligence of an objective area as well as an immediate bomb damage assessment from aviation elements," he said.

That precise and timely exchange of tactical information is one of the benefits of the computerized communications systems displayed. Increased situational awareness, reduced fratricide rates, electronic target handoff, and the ability to rapidly man and move combat support units to essential positions are other benefits discussed during the synchronization.

Funk made it clear that the complete computer communications techniques demonstrated are not being built into production tanks.

"Because of certain work-arounds we have had to make, the capability demonstrated ... is not ready for production tanks," he said. "Additional software development is required before the ability to talk across combined arms is incorporated into the M-1A2."

Maj. Tom Wilson, branch chief of the battlefield synchronization branch, Mounted Warfighting Battlespace Lab, explained the importance of the demonstration to the future of armor.

"(With the system) the tanks can talk to one another and pass information digitally," he said. "The problem is, tanks don't fight by themselves — they fight with infantry, they fight with artillery, they fight with aviation. What we've done here is change the system so we can talk digitally with this computer to the artillery. We put the system in the infantry Bradley, and we modified the software so we could talk to a helicopter.

"We have taken the speed and accuracy of the micro-processor and integrated it across the combined arms."

Although the system was a key player in the demonstration, Wilson noted all of the elements combined made the communications system more accurate.

"There are other systems in this demonstration that also have great applicability. You saw where we took an image from AH-64 optics and sent it down here and showed it to the crowd. We want to investigate those things further," he said.

"It would be of great utility to us for a ground scout to be able to capture an image (from the AH-64) or to capture an image from an unmanned aerial vehicle ... and send it to the company commander. (With that) he can see what the enemy looks like in the objective area — not just get a verbal report on what someone saw. Those are the kinds of things that we are doing.

"We want to take technology and use it to our best advantage so we will win, as we are accustomed to doing, on our next battlefield," Wilson said.

Camp learns from March snow

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

With the arrival of spring and warm, sunny days, the "Blizzard of '93" has been all but forgotten.

But the sawed ends of tree trunks lining the roads around Camp Frank D. Merrill attest to the fact that the effects of the storm have not yet been completely erased.

A multifunctional staff visit on the quality of life at the camp April 14 covered some of the "lessons learned" from the storm.

Camp Merrill, located about nine miles out of Dahlonega, Ga., in the Chattahoochee National Forest, is Fort Benning's most remote tenant unit, said Lt. Col. Ralph F. D'Elosua, commander of the 5th Ranger Training Battalion at Camp Merrill.

When March's snowstorm left the camp without power for five days, disabling water and telephone systems, the rangers were left to perform many of the recovery operations on their own.

"It took us four days to reach a satisfactory status despite the hard work by our cadre," said D'Elosua.

"We experienced blizzard-like conditions from about 9 a.m. March 13 until about 5 a.m. the next day," he said.

"When we did our assessment, we found trees blown down in every direction ... some were completely uprooted and found 30 meters from their original locations.

"After the snowfall ended March 14, we had no lights, no heat in any building, the roads were impassable and the only generator running was in the Troop Medical Clinic," D'Elosua said.

Priorities were set on re-establishing communications, power for the mess hall, heat, water and sewage support for the troop buildings and mobility on major roads.

Help came from a National Guard unit in North Georgia in the form of borrowed generators, and nine Fort Benning mechanics flew in to help get broken generators running.

"We had heat and lights to all troop buildings by noon March 16, and powered the camp with 18 generators until the power came back on at 6 p.m. March 18," D'Elosua said.

The rangers organized into tree-cutting crews to clear the roads, opening the main camp road to all traffic by 3 p.m. March 15.

The rangers also pitched in to help their neighbors.

"Our company commander authorized us to go out and help clear civilian roads," said Sgt 1st Class Dean Daghita, a ranger instructor from Company B.

Daghita, who lives in Dawsonville with his family, could not get into camp after the storm because of trees down on the road. He hiked a mile through 1 1/2 feet of snow to check on a civilian neighbor, his "adopted grandmother," and found her stranded. The road to her home in the woods was "annihilated," Daghita said. It was completely blocked by trees.

He carried in food and water that weekend and went back March 15 with a group of other ranger instructors to clear the road

Rangers worked to help civilians clear roads throughout the area, and several participated in rescue missions requested by the Georgia State Patrol and the emergency rescue service from the Chattahoochee National Forestry Office, locating and extracting campers from the Springer Mountain National Recreation Area.

"It was the ranger instructors' initiative that helped clear civilian roads and take care of people in their area," said Capt. James H. Hall, the battalion adjutant.

"They were just being good citizens, as well as doing their own job to restore Camp Merrill," Hall said.

"I am quite proud of the teamwork, sacrifice and cooperative attitude shown by my cadre during this emergency, " D'Elosua said.

Using the lessons learned from the storm and recovery operations, D'Elosua has assigned a group to develop an emergency plan that will get the camp completely functioning within 24 hours of a power outage.

Hawaii senator visits Kelley Hill

By Gregory Hart
29th Infantry Regiment

Soldiers from the 29th Infantry Regiment hosted a tour for Sen. Daniel K. Inouye from Hawaii, April 16.

The senator and his staff were shown the progression of the Infantry Fighting Vehicle from the earliest stage as an M-113A1 through beginnings of the Bradley Fighting Vehicle, M-2A1 model, to the updated M-2A2 model with reactive armor tiles for protection against high explosive anti-tank rounds.

The senator was then briefed on the upcoming improvements of the Bradley that will be incorporated in the M-2A3. After viewing the static display, the senator moved inside to the Unit Conduct of Fire Trainer.

Branch instructors briefed him about how the Army keeps the Bradley crews proficient at crew skills and maintaining good aim.

After the U-COFT briefing, Inouye proceeded to a display of several soldier individual training systems. Subject matter experts were on hand to demonstrate the equipment and answer questions.

Winged pair take post awards for 2nd qtr.

NCO of the quarter

Name: Staff Sgt. Robert Dimitroff

Award or recognition: Post Noncommissioned Officer of the Quarter

Military occupational specialty: Parachute infantryman

Unit: Headquarters, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment

Job title: Battalion assistant operations sergeant

Years in service: 12

What were your reasons for joining the Army? I wanted to be a paratrooper like my father, George Dimitroff.

Define your style of leadership. I have no set style. I adapt to the situation I find myself in.

What person has most influenced your military career? My father, who was in the 82nd Airborne during World War II. He jumped into Normandy and received the Silver Star.

If you were the sergeant major of the Army for a day, what improvements would you make? I would improve the training to adapt to the ever-changing military, to keep us competitive with our allies and with hostile forces.

What were your reasons for choosing your MOS? I wanted a challenge, both physical and mental, and the infantry provides that.

Describe a memorable moment in your military career. I won the Sigholtz Leadership award in 1991 at Fort Bragg, N.C. I represented Fort Benning and won against other airborne units.

What are your future career plans? I am now preparing for a permanent change of station to Fort Myer, Va., to become a member of the Old Guard, 3rd Infantry Division. My long-range plan is to become sergeant major of the Army.

What others have to say about him. : "Staff Sgt. Dimitroff is one of the finest NCOs I have ever had the pleasure of working with. He is a very influential kind of NCO, the kind that any unit would want. He will be missed here in the 507th, as well as in the entire airborne community." — Sgt. 1st Class R. J. Perez, battalion operations noncommissioned officer in charge.

"Staff Sgt. Dimitroff is a superb soldier in every respect. He always accomplishes his assigned mission in a timely and professional manner. Dimitroff epitomizes what an airborne NCO should be." — Maj. Garrie Dornan, battalion operations officer.

Soldier of the Quarter

Name: Spc. Patricia Paquette

Award or recognition: Post Soldier of the Quarter

Military occupational specialty: Parachute rigger

Unit: Company E, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment

Job title: Parachute rigger

Years in service: Two

What were your reasons for joining the Army? Just something that I wanted to do.

What person has most influenced your military career? There is not just one person, there are many people. My platoon sergeant, Sgt. 1st Class Philipo Catalano, is one, mostly because he encourages me to do my best no matter what.

What were your reasons for choosing your MOS? I wanted to be airborne.

Describe a memorable moment in your military career. When I was receiving my promotion to private first class, the commander was pinning on my rank and went to slap it. I jumped back and yelled, so everyone laughed. I was pretty embarrassed. He also ended up pricking his own finger.

What are your future career plans? I would eventually like to become an officer, but my plans for now are to continue what I'm doing.

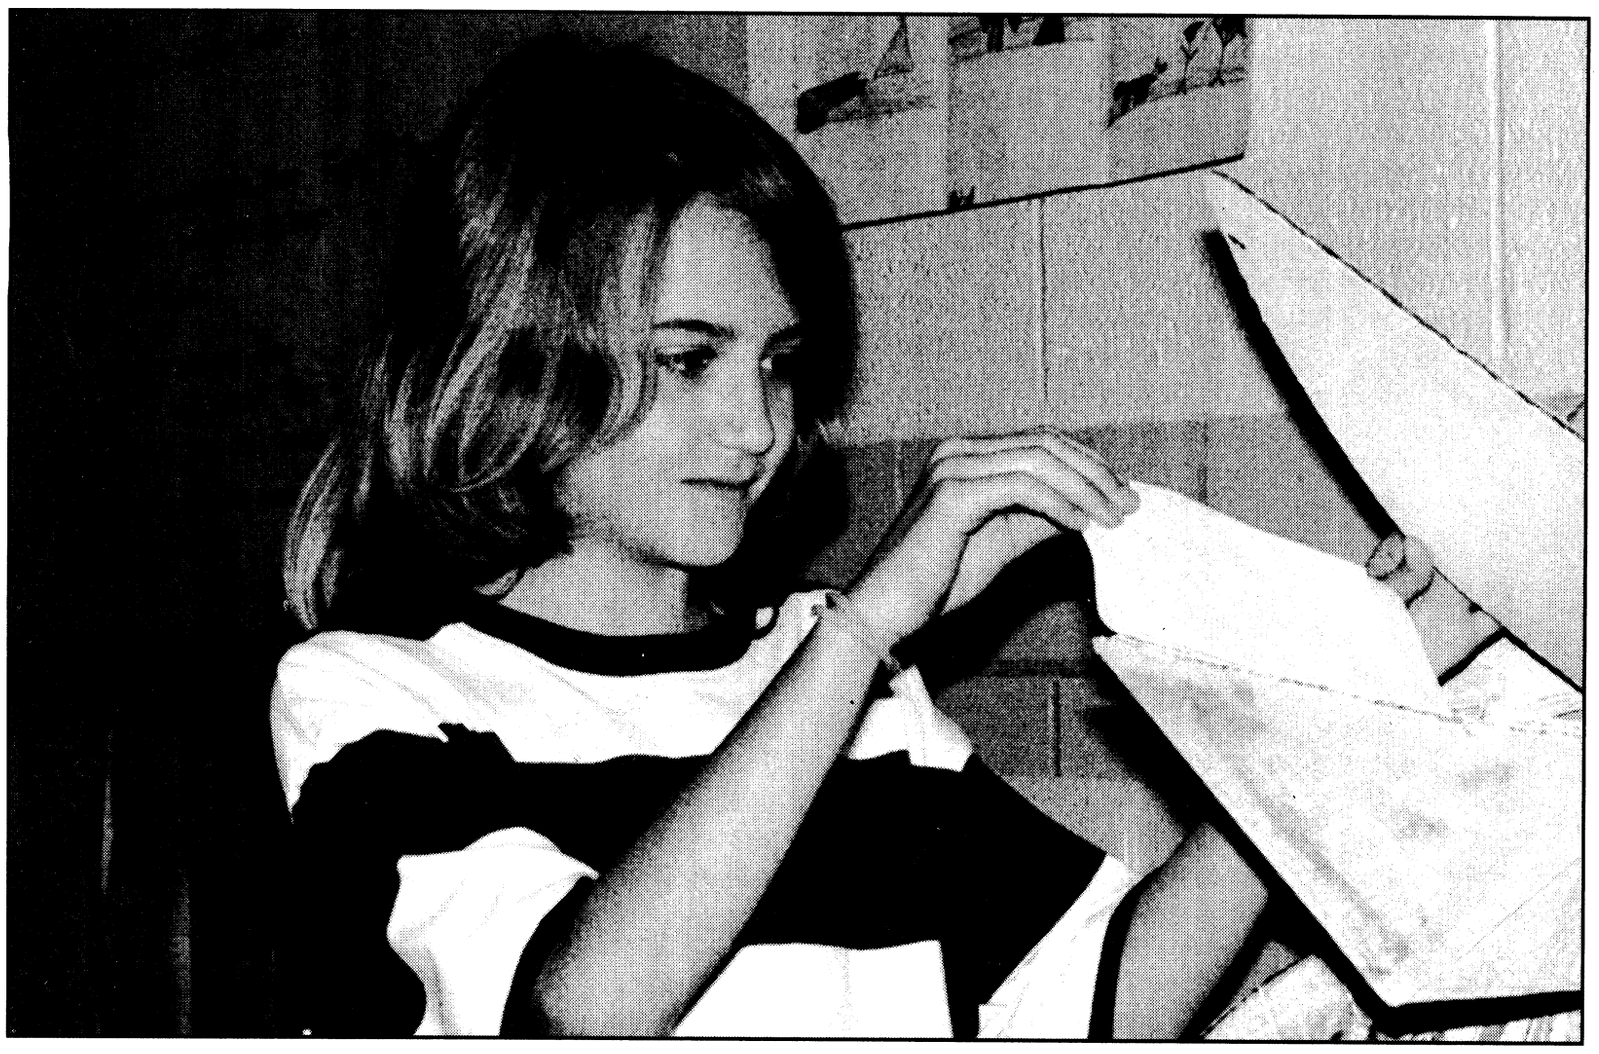
Students win state Odyssey

Fort Benning Schools

Two Fort Benning schools won first place in the state Odyssey of the Mind competition April 17.

Odyssey teams from Herbert J. Dexter and Don C. Faith Middle School will represent the state of Georgia in the world finals of Odyssey of the Mind during the first week in June at the University of Maryland. This will be the seventh time that Faith Middle School has gone to the world finals and the first trip for the Dexter School team.

The team from Dexter School won first place in the Folk Tales Division 1 problem. The Dexter team also received the Renatra Fusca Award, which cited creative use of puns and integration of computer terminology into its folk tale.



Members of the Dexter School team are fifth-graders Danielle Carillo, Colleen Curasi, Jason Gardner, Amber Kastrup, Ryan Swihart, Frank Walsh and fourth-grader Joanna Malott. Their coaches are Marge Brasfield and Kathryn Van Horn.

The Faith School team won first place in the Division II competition for the problem called Folk Tales. Team members Jerry Edwards, Erin Meade, Carrie Parker, Jeff Quick, Lakisha Ladson, Jennifer Swihart and Amy Wilson created and performed an original skit that included an original folk tale.

All members of the Faith team are eighth-graders, coached by Cindy Givens and Libbie Kurinec.

Odyssey of the Mind is a problem-solving competition that was developed by Dr. Sam Miklus, a New Jersey college professor. It is a program that provides a mental challenge through problem-solving activities.

There are two categories of activities: long-term problem solving in which students have several months to find a solution and short-term problem solving in which students must find a solution during the competition.

'Wee Deliver'

Loyd School students play post office — for real

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

Through rain, sleet and snow, Loyd School always delivers.

Fort Benning's Frank R. Loyd Elementary School is a participant in the nationwide "Wee Deliver" program sponsored by the U.S. Postal Service.

The program encourages students, teachers and other staff members to write letters to anyone in the school. The mail is then collected, sorted, checked for correct address and delivered by the students themselves.

"The goal of the program is to provide children with real-life experiences," said Beverly Loftin, fifth grade teacher at Loyd. "Students are using basic communication skills by addressing letters correctly, using correct punctuation and using zip codes."

Handcrafted mailboxes decorate the halls, waiting for the 75 to 100 daily letters to be collected, said Loftin.

The post office gave Loyd the criteria for picking students as members of the mail staff, said Pam Parmer, third grade teacher.

The post office, according to Loftin, came to the school and showed the children a video to orient them, provided mailbags, stamps and followed up on the project.

Parmer said that a test was designed for the students about basic number order and correct addressing of letters. Children with high scores were selected for mail staff positions.

"I think it's going great," said Loftin. "The kids are having a good time, we're having a good time; I think the teachers enjoy it just as much as the students."

Twenty-five children are participants of the staff, and hold jobs as mail sorters, mail carriers, mail facers (mail facers check that all the mail is in correct order and face in the same direction) and nixie clerks (nixie clerks ensure that the mail is stamped with a postage mark).

Chuck Hoyt, fifth-grade student, is the postmaster for Loyd's mail system. "It's great because of all the mailboxes you make and we get to write letters," he said, "and I have to make sure that all the people are doing their job."

Seminar highlights finances

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

The Army Career and Alumni Program is hosting monthly financial planning seminars conducted by local financial planners and insurance agencies.

"What you learn can definitely save you money in the long run," said Maj. Charles E. Shelden, the ACAP project officer who organizes the seminars.

The seminars cover financial and cash management, insurance and investments and are open to anyone interested in learning how to manage their money.

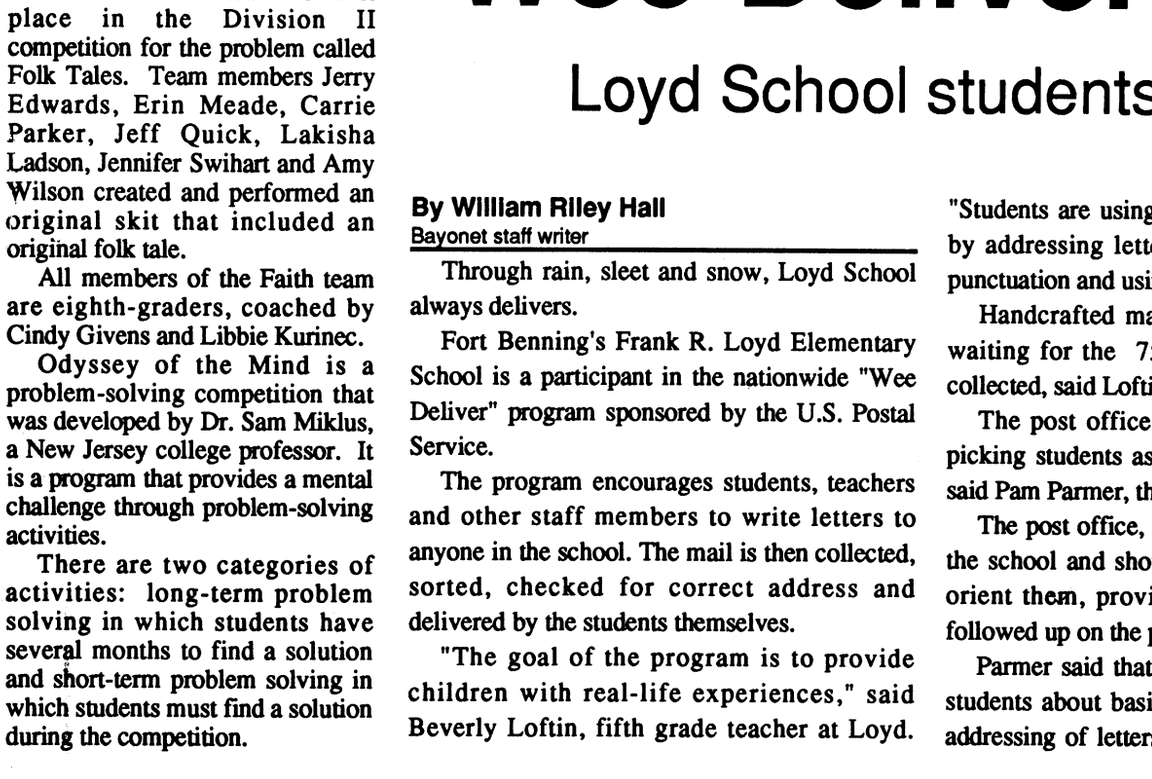
Speakers at the seminars are financial planners who explain the ins and outs of money management, and answer both general and specific questions from the participants.

Ron Hinze, a certified financial planner from the TIC Federal Credit Union and Leroy Atkinson with Waddell & Reed Financial Services were the speakers at April's seminar.

"Personal financial planners look at your net worth and your family needs and help you come up with a goal for where you want to be in the future," Shelden said. "Then they set up a plan to help you get there."

A basic plan is to live on 80 percent of your income, take the other 20 percent and put it into savings, insurance or investments, Shelden said.

"Our job is not to tell you what to do, but to help you make informed decisions," Hinze said.



Speakers at the seminar must sign a memorandum of understanding with ACAP, Shelden said.

"This ensures that no business will be solicited for the companies they represent. They are only allowed to disseminate information," he said.

Future seminars are scheduled May 18, June 22 and July 20.

The seminars take place at the Job Assistance Center, Building 2634 in Soldiers' Plaza.

For more information, call Shelden at 545-4902 or 545-4913.

Volunteers receive recognition

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

In celebration of 1993 Fort Benning Volunteer Week, a symbolic check for $3.9 million in work hours for all of the volunteer work done on post during the past year was presented to Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White Tuesday by Kathy Case, installation volunteer coordinator.

The presentation was part of a recognition ceremony that also honored nine outstanding volunteers with special acknowledgments.

Receiving the 1993 Volunteer of the Quarter awards were:

• Patty Francis — A Tot Town Child Development Center board member at-large, Francis was instrumental in planning and executing the 35th anniversary celebration for the facility. Through her efforts, Tot Town's service to the community has grown during the past year. Also, she served as Fort Benning Officers' Wives' Club vice president this last year.

• Wendy Plumage-Maratita — Since June 1992, she has volunteered at Army Community Service. During this period, Plumage-Maratita has become knowledgeable of the available community services and other post resources for soldiers and family members.

• Mona Petro — The First Steps coordinator for the Fort Benning Red Cross since 1991, Petro has kept the program going during times of few volunteers to perform visits. She has maintained a case load of as many as 20 mothers at a time over the past year, and she has recruited and trained a volunteer staff during the last 18 months. Also, Petro is active in her husband's family unit network.

• Ronda Maxwell — Having worked at Santa's Castle to promote the quality of life for Fort Benning families, she has been responsible for the scheduling and rescheduling of times for needy soldiers to participate in the distribution of toys at Christmas. In addition to serving as the treasurer, Maxwell has helped in other areas at Santa's Castle as the need has presented itself. She has sorted, cleaned and refurbished used toys, assisted in fund raising, inventoried and shopped for new toys. As a result of her efforts and those of others, 923 children received toys this past holiday season.

Honorees given the Commander's Award for Public Service included:

• Emerson E. Addington — A civilian employee who volunteers off-duty hours in the Fort Benning/Columbus Coast Guard Auxiliary, he has performed more than 503 hours as a vessel examiner, boat operator in safety patrols and boat-assisted five boats in trouble. Addington also served as an instructor/trainer, written several published articles and been very active as an ambassador for the Coast Guard Auxiliary.

• Margaret L. McGarvey — She served as a volunteer for the Boy Scouts, the Civil Air Patrol and the Coast Guard Auxiliary. McGarvey's primary effort in the Coast Guard Auxiliary has been with the Public Education Safety Program directed at youth in the community. Her efforts in the "Water-N-Kids" and "Boating-N-Kids"programs have been numerous. As a result, more than 245 Fort Benning children completed these courses during 1992.

• Kathleen Meade — Since 1988, she has been a volunteer at Faith Middle School, with the Fort Benning Officers' Wives' Club, the Benning Belles, the chapel and Pacelli High School. Meade now works in the Volunteer Resource Center nearly 40 hours each week. During the past six months, she has developed a volunteer personnel database, provided clerical support to the installation volunteer coordination and Family Unit Network coordinator, interviewed potential volunteers and served on the Volunteer Management Institute Steering Committee at Columbus College.

The two volunteers who received the Commander's Award for Patriotic Civilian Service were:

• Angelita Malave — Having served 13 years as a dedicated chapel volunteer, Malave has been the director of Hispanic Community Religious Education Program, president of the Hispanic Community and a Eucharistic minister. Also, she sings in the choir, has established a Bible study prayer group and has taught a variety of family life seminars.

• Kelly Conaway — Since arriving in August of 1989, she has served six different organizations including: Leadership Seminars, Edward A. White School Parent Teacher Association, White School classroom volunteer, Fort Benning Officers' Wives' Club, Cub Scout Pack 271 of the Fort Benning District, and two company-level family unit networks. She recently helped to organize a new Cub Scout pack and serves as the pack committee chairman.

Children march on

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Alexander M. Patch School celebrated the Month of the Military Child with a children's parade on Miller Loop April 16.

Kindergarten and first-grade students were joined in the march by children who attend Patch Pre-School. The children were dressed in various costumes and some played musical instruments as they walked. Several parents joined in the parade.

Armed Forces Day set

"Proud, Professional, Prepared" is the theme for Fort Benning's 1993 Armed Forces Day Open House observance May 15, which is in conjunction with Military Appreciation Week, sponsored by the local civilian communities.

Activities at Fort Benning are scheduled from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. in front of Infantry Hall, including military equipment displays; a performance by the "Silver Wings," the U.S. Army Infantry Center's command exhibition parachute team; and recreational and entertainment activities.

Also, food and beverages will be on sale at the annual Chattahoochee Valley - Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army picnic. There will also be an awards ceremony and crowning of two Ms. AUSAs.

A nominal fee will be charged for participation in selected entertainment and recreational activities. The public is invited.

OCS board June 28

The U.S. Army Personnel Command has announced the next Officer Candidate School selection board will be June 28 to 30. The cutoff date for applications to arrive at PERSCOM is June 18. Applications must arrive at Adjutant General, Personnel Operations Division, Building 2619, no later than May 14.

Army wants prime power specialists

The U.S. Army Prime Power School is looking for men and women to train as prime power specialists for military occupational specialty 52E.

The top five of the Army enlisted applicants are selected. Graduates receive up to 55 college semester hours, which are awarded by the American Council on Education.

Also, students graduate with an additional skill specialty in electrical maintenance, mechanical maintenance or instrument maintenance.

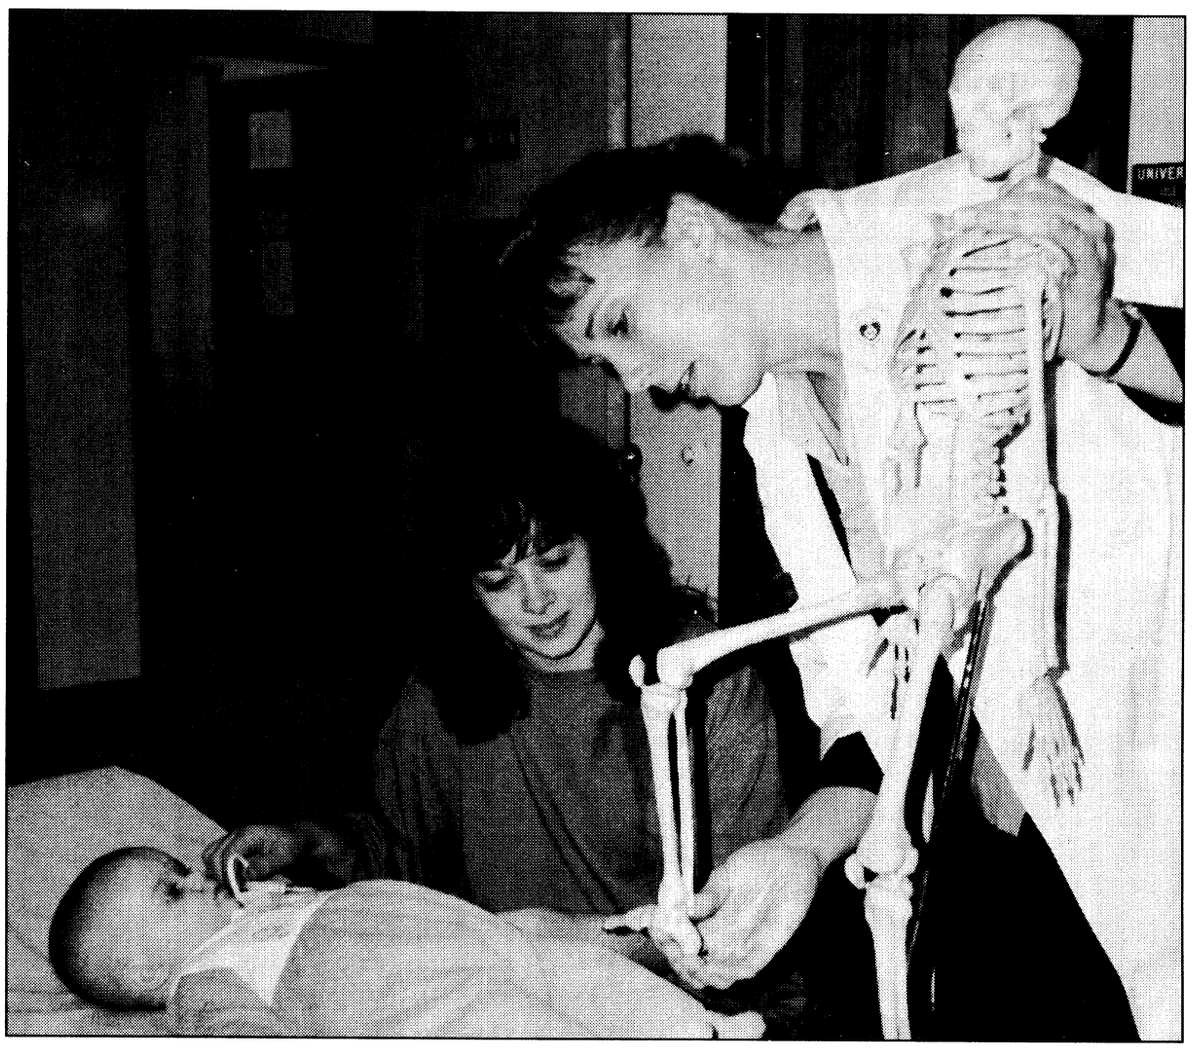
For an interview and information, contact the 535th Engineer Detachment, Engineer Battalion (Prime Power) (Provisional), Building 5347 in the Harmony Church area. The phone number is 544-7123 or DSN 784-7123.

Retirement, financial planning is available

The Retirement Services Office provides assistance in retirement planning. As part of the assistance, a preretirement video tape is available for loan.

Also, a video tape about financial planning, titled "Making the Right Decision — the Survivor Benefit Plan" is available. Call 545-2541 or 545-5369 in advance to reserve the tape. The office is located in Soldiers' Plaza, Building 2635.

Benning MPs to run for Special Olympics



The Military Police Activity will run in Georgia's Law Enforcement Torch Run May 27 to raise money for the Georgia Special Olympics.

Approximately 150 runners from the Military Police Activity will run 10 miles to the Columbus Government Center to pass the torch to the Columbus Police Department.

The money raised will benefit children on Fort Benning as well as in Columbus and Georgia.

ACAP seminars set

The Army Career and Alumni Program will host monthly financial planning seminars May 18, June 22 and July 20. All seminars will be at the Job Assistance Center, Building 2634 in Soldiers' Plaza.

Maj. Linda Walker, director of the Family Practice Clinic, uses a skeleton in her clinic practice.

Residents receive skeletons

By John Wynn
Martin Army Community Hospital

The Family Practice Residency Program at Martin Army Community Hospital recently received two small skeletons from retired Col. and Mrs. James G. McConaughy of Columbus. The skeletons were received by the program's director, Maj. Steven Resissman.

Resissman said the skeletons will be a great asset to the hospital's teaching program. Resissman said that many times patients have concerns about their medical condition that can be best explained on a model, such as a skeleton. The physician can point out to the patient exactly what might be wrong or how the body functions, he said.

Not only will the skeletons be useful for patients but with the residents themselves, Resissman said. The miniature skeletons are much easier to move from exam room to exam room, thus they become more convenient to the physician, he said.

Maj. Linda Walker, clinic director of Martin Army's Family Practice Clinic, also commented about the usefulness of the skeletons in her clinic. "The skeletons are just a wonderful gesture," said Walker.

McConaughy served on active duty until 1969 when he retired as Fort Benning's staff judge advocate. The McConaughys reside in the Green Island Hills area of Columbus, but they continue to receive medical care from Martin Army Community Hospital.

McConaughy said he felt moved to do something to show his appreciation to the hospital for the superb care and personal attention he has received over the years. He specifically noted his current physician, Dr. Brian Rebeiro of the hospital's Internal Medicine Clinic.

"I've been seen by a lot of doctors, but Doctor Rebeiro is one of the finest I've known," said McConaughy.

McConaughy went on to say he was looking through a magazine from the Smithsonian Institute and noted a section that described several items the institute was trying to sell. These items, which included the two skeletons, were in excess of the museum's needs and the museum was offering them for purchase to members of the Smithsonian's support agency.

Conflict is focus of FBMA's program

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

The Fort Benning Management Association will sponsor a luncheon May 20 at the Fort Benning Officers' Club. The guest speaker will be Sharon D. Ballard, who will address the topic of conflict management at work.

"We've been very successful with our scholarship program," said Chalkley. "Last year we awarded two scholarships for graduate programs and three for undergraduate programs at Troy State. We also gave two scholarships that could be used at any school."

Chalkley said members receive the following benefits:

• Monthly bulletin

• Name tag

• Option to attend monthly luncheon meetings with a minimum charge of $5.

• Eligibility to participate in management team projects

• Eligibility to apply for academic scholarships offered each fall

• Free membership appreciation luncheon in December

Tickets for the May 20 luncheon may be purchased from: Robin Dennis, 545-4246; Mary Allen, 545-4902; Sadie Dennis, 545-2991; and Chalkley at 545-4539. Cost of tickets is $5.

For membership information, call Judy Hodder, membership chairwoman, at 545-4610.

Job opportunities — The Army Career and Alumni Program now has access to about 1,600 job opportunities on the CompuServe automated system. Corporate profiles are available on 168 companies. Positions range from entry level to senior executive level in all categories.

Interested personnel may review job titles and locations at the Job Assistance Center, Building 2634.

Hunt club — Stables, rental horses, trail rides, pony rides and riding classes are available at the Hunt Club on Marne Road.

Hours are Monday to Friday, 2 to 6 p.m.; Saturdays, Sundays and holidays from 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Rentals are $12 an hour for non-members, $8 hourly for members.

There is a $10 initiation fee for all members. Members who do not own horses pay $13 a month for dues, while members who board horses pay $18 for dues, plus boarding and feeding fees.

The Fort Benning Hunt Club offers guided trail rides each Sunday. Riders must sign up seven days in advance.

IRS grants tax extension

Department of Treasury

The Internal Revenue Service has granted an automatic extension of time to file 1992 Income Tax returns for military members serving in Operation Restore Hope. This applies to members serving in the Operation as of April 15.

The extension is until Dec. 15. This extension will ensure that any returns received by this date from members serving in Operation Restore Hope will not be assessed either the failure to file or failure to pay penalties.

To receive the extension, members must print "Somalia" prominently across the top of their tax return. IRS offices will be told how to process these returns.

If any members serving in Operation Restore Hope receive correspondence from the Internal Revenue Service, they should note the issuing IRS office. Once members return to their normal duty station, they will need to contact the issuing office to resolve the matter identified in the original inquiry by the IRS.

If after filing his or her 1992 tax return, a service member covered by this extension should happen to be assess a penalty, he or she should contact the nearest IRS office for corrective action. Within the United States, call (800) 829-1040 for assistance. Overseas, write to Taxpayer Service Division, 950 L'enfant Plaza S.W., Washington, D.C. 20024.

Schools to make changes

Fort Benning Schools

School assignments will be changing for many Fort Benning School students in grades kindergarten through five when the bell rings to start school next fall.

The opening of the new Stowers Elementary School, which will serve all students living in the Bouton Heights and Davis Hill communities, will also result in new assignments for other Fort Benning children.

Both Wilbur and Patch Schools will be closed with those students who currently attend Wilbur moving to Loyd. Main Post Patch students will attend White. A few of the changes have been made to balance the attendance load.

Attendance for children in grades kindergarten through five will be as follows:

South Main Post — Dexter School (no change)

North Main Post — White School (no change)

McDaniel Manor — White School (moved from Dexter)

Upatoi Terrace — White School (moved from Loyd)

McGraw Manor — grades kindergarten through third, McBride School (no change)

Grades four through five, White School (no change)

Bouton Heights — Stowers School (moved from Loyd, Patch and White)

Davis Hill — Towers School (moved from Wilbur)

Custer Terrace — Loyd School (moved form Wilbur)

Battle Park — Loyd School (moved from Wilbur)

Old Officer Capehart — Loyd School (moved from Wilbur)

Indianhead Terrace — Wilson School (no change)

The new Stowers School will accommodate 650 students in the Davis Hill and Bouton Heights communities.

The school includes a media center/library, computer room, special education facilities, music and art rooms, gymnasium and cafeteria/auditorium.

Parents with questions about where their child will go to school next year can call the Fort Benning school's administrative office at 545-2500.

CONGRATULATIONS FT. BENNING!
Excellence Is Your Key To Success!

CB&T applauds your national recognition as the best large installation in the Army Community of Excellence competition. We are proud to have Ft. Benning as such a vital member of the Columbus area. Ft. Benning officials said, "...if there's any one thing that the Army Community of Excellence team recognized it was the very close relationship within the entire community and the support that this community provides for the military."

CB&T understands the need for excellence, the rewards the struggle for excellence brings and the dedication it requires to continually strive for excellence.

Congratulations Ft. Benning!

Rick Schroder responds to 'Call of the Wild'

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

For his role in a new version of a classic story, Rick Schroder answered the "Call of the Wild" quite literally.

Sunday's CBS remake of the Jack London saga took the young actor on location to the Yukon, as well as to Vancouver, to lend authenticity to his part as gold-rush fortune-seeker John Thornton. En route to stake his claim, the character develops an alliance with a German shepherd named Buck, who is in the custody of a sinister dog trader (played by Duncan Fraser). Though Thornton and the canine go separate ways upon reaching their mutual destination — the former teaming with a tribesman (portrayed by Gordon Tootoosis) in his hunt for wealth, and the latter being trained to become part of a dog sled team — they eventually are drawn back together as the result of their respective adventures.

Also prominent in the cast is Mia Sara ("Queenie," "Ferris Bueller's Day Off") as Thornton's prospective love interest, and while the drama is executive-produced by Robert Halmi Sr. (for whom Schroder also worked on the acclaimed 1989 miniseries "Lonesome Dove"), movie devotees are likely to note that the director's credit goes to "Alan Smithee" ... the pseudonym commonly used by filmmakers who choose to disown their work for one reason or another.

Author London's stories have had quite a screen renaissance lately, since cable's TNT unveiled its new "Sea Wolf" last week, and a Disney-produced 1991 retelling of "White Fang" was a moderate box-office success. Sunday's "Call of the Wild" marks that tale's fifth representation on film, including a feature-length 1985 cartoon. Clark Gable and Charlton Heston were among the performers to play the central figure previously, so Schroder qualifies as the youngest talent yet to inherit it. "This is the only version in which the real integrity of the story and its coming-of-age aspect shows through," he claims. "John Thornton is a young guy who comes from Seattle, looking for adventure and trying to find his place in the world, and that's the approach the book takes. It's the first book I remember ever reading straight through; I think I was about 12 years old at the time."

Schroder recalls the new "Call of the Wild" being "extraordinarily tough to film" in the actual Yukon. "Often, we had to take 45-minute snowmobile rides to locations, and take helicopter rides through springtime blizzards up to glaciers," he said. "I'm an outdoorsy person anyway, since I now have a cattle ranch in Colorado, so I'd always rather work outside than inside. Still, this was definitely one of the more grueling shoots I've ever done, and the hours were long. It's a very ambitious TV-movie, and I got very sick during the making of it. We had to shut down for two days, because I got a terrible cold and fever. I was working 14-to-16-hour days and six-day weeks, and when each Sunday came around, I would absolutely pass out and sleep until noon."

Easter at Riverside turns Saturday into fun day

By Lawrence Hughes
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Next week, "Fort Benning Today" highlights both the Easter Egg Hunt at Riverside and the Tyrone Davis show at the Main NCO Club.

Fort Benning Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. and Linda White welcomed a very large crowd of youngsters to Riverside, their home, April 10 for the post's annual Easter Egg Hunt.

There was musical entertainment by the Infantry Band and the Infantry Chorus, as well as recorded top 10 tunes and other live performers. Also, April 10 was a night to remember as rhythm and blues performer Davis brought his show to the Main NCO Club.

"Fort Benning Today" will also air special news announcements and highlight post events. Post movie previews will be shown, several health specials will air along with music and news from Soldiers Radio Satellite Network. Post events will be highlighted on the Fort Benning Community Bulletin Board.

If you are a subscriber to Fort Benning Cable, you can watch USAIC TV on Channel 3, 24 hours a day.

Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:26, 7:56, 8:26 and 8:56 on WLTZ TV-38.

For more information or to make suggestions, write or call the Broadcast Section of the Public Affairs Office, Infantry Hall, Room 602, 545-2201.

Jekyll music fest to feature country stars on the beach

The Jekyll Island Authority

JEKYLL ISLAND, Ga. — Jekyll Island's third Annual Country By The Sea Music Festival, the Southeast's biggest country music party on the beach, will be June 5 from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Beach Deck.

Highlighting the show will be the legendary George Jones, rising stars Michelle Wright and Confederate Railroad, and newcomer Daron Norwood.

Acclaimed the greatest country singer in the early '60s, Jones' career boasts a recent induction into the Country Music Hall of Fame, four Country Music Association "Best Male Vocalist" awards and the 1986 CMA "Video of the Year" award for "Who's Gonna Fill Them Shoes."

Canadian-born Wright received her first Canadian CMA "Female Vocalist of the Year" award in 1990, two years after her first album was released in Canada.

Mixing rock with country, Michelle and her band won seven CCMA awards in 1991, including Album of the Year, Female Vocalist of the Year and Single of the Year for "New Kind of Love."

The Georgia-based quintet, Confederate Railroad, released an album including "Queen of Memphis," "Jesus and Mama" and their first single, "She Took It Like a Man."

Norwood, a country artist from Texas, is on the Giant Records label and has written several songs.

Country By The Sea Music Festival tickets are $7 per person in advance and will be on sale after May 1 at Jiffy Little Champ Stores in Southeast Georgia and select Jacksonville locations. Advance tickets are also available at the Jekyll Island Welcome Center and the Jekyll Island Convention Center. Tickets the day of the show are $10 per person and will be sold only at the festival site.

Country By The Sea is presented by the Jekyll Island Authority with sponsors including WBGA-FM Brunswick, Budweiser, Coca-Cola, Jiffy Little Champ Stores and Rutter Communications of Georgia Inc. and Century Cable.

For information, call the Jekyll Island Convention and Visitors Bureau at (800) 841-6586 or (912) 635-3636.

Rising star to visit Silver Moon

Evelyn Shriver Public Relations

Columbia Records recording artist Joy White will perform at the Silver Moon Music Barn in Buena Vista, Ga., Saturday. Show time is 9 p.m.

White's debut compact disc is titled "Between Midnight & Hindsight." The singles "Little Tears" and "True Confessions" introduced her fire and sass to critics, radio and video. The "Little Tears" video shows off one of many cats she has rescued and given a home to.

White's new single will be her first released ballad titled "Cold Day In July." The anguished-filled song will be hitting the radio airwaves the first of May.

On May 11, watch for White as a nominee for new female vocalist of the year by the Academy of Country Music. The award show will be broadcast on NBC.

Born in Arkansas and raised in Indiana, White first sang in front of an audience at age 4. She was picked up and set on the altar in her church and soon was singing a couple of songs every Sunday.

Her first experience in a band was singing gospel with her family's group. By her high school years, she was singing jingles and fronting bands. In the early '80s she came to Nashville and started gaining attention singing demos.

Coastal nature trail opens

Ga. Department of Natural Resources

BRUNSWICK, Ga.— The Georgia Department of Natural Resources dedicated an "Open Trail" for the new environmental education nature trail on Earth Day. "The Earth Day Nature Trail," as it is being called, is located at the Coastal Regional Headquarters in Brunswick. The Earth Day Nature Trail is the result of a cooperative project between Coastal Resources Division and the Game and Fish Division's Nongame-Endangered Wildlife Program.

"We are pleased to open the Earth Day Nature Trail and hope it will be heavily used by school groups, conservation, organizations and other visitors," said Duane Harris, Coastal Resources Division director. "This nature trail gives visitors a chance to observe, enjoy and learn more about the unique plants and animals associated with estuarine habitats."

The 1,535-foot trail winds across salt marshes, tidal ponds and coastal hammock high ground located adjacent to DNR's Coastal Regional Headquarters. It includes wooded boardwalks across wading bird habitat, an osprey/eagle nesting platform, wildlife observation decks and an observation tower.

For more information, contact the Department of Natural Resources, Coastal Resources Division, 1 Conversation Way, Brunswick, Ga. 31523-8600 or call (912) 264-7218.

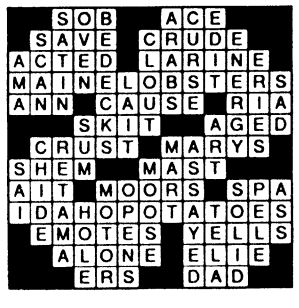
Rhododendron festival coming

Hiawassee Chamber of Commerce

The fourth annual Enchanted Valleys Rhododendron Festival will be today through Sunday, April 30 and May 1 to 2 in the northeast Georgia mountain towns of Hiawassee and Young Harris.



The Fred Hamilton Rhododendron Garden, located within the Georgia Mountain Fairgrounds, is the focal point of the festival. The garden is the largest in the state. The garden is open to the public year round free of charge.

The Golden Rhododendron Pageant tonight signals the beginning of the two-weekend festival. The pageant will be at the Clegg Fine Arts Building on the campus of Young Harris College at 7 p.m.

Twenty artisans will display their crafts on Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the Hamilton Garden. The Mountain Regional Arts and Crafts Guild will have its annual spring show May 1 on the square in downtown Hiawassee.

A variety of family entertainment will be available during the festival. Young Harris College's Rollins Planetarium will present the "Sights and Sounds of Spring" today and Saturday at 8 p.m. The star show is free to the public. For more information, please contact the Towns County Chamber of Commerce at (706) 896-4966 or U.S. Highway 76, The Hamlet - No. 4, Hiawassee, Ga. 30546.

PUZZLE ANSWER

PET OF THE WEEK

Axel and Blossom are two mixed-breed puppies who are looking for homes. For more information, contact the Veterinary Services Office in Building 265 at 545-1127. Hours are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:30 am. and 12:45 to 3 p.m. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

If you have lost a pet, check the stray impoundment facility in building 283. Stray pets are given three working days to be claimed from the time they are picked up by animal control personnel. If the pets are not claimed, they become government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies tags are important too, because it's the only way Veterinary Services can contact the owner. Pet owners should register pets and update their records when changes occur.

Orchestra tunes up for comedy

Columbus Symphony Orchestra

The Columbus Symphony Orchestra will perform its final Pops Concert for the season under the direction of Maestro George Del Gobbo Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Three Arts Theatre.

The concert will feature music comedian Peter Schickele with the majority of the program consisting of his musical compositions. Schickele is known as "The greatest comedy-in-music act before the public today," according to The Chicago Sun Times. This concert is sponsored by the David Rothschild Company Inc. with additional funding provided by the Georgia Council for the Arts.

Schickel has composed more than 100 works including pieces for the St. Louis Symphony, the Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center, The Canadian Brass and the Audubon String Quartet. He has also written the music for several "Sesame Street" segments and the movie "Silent Running" among other television and film scores.

Schickele has been acknowledged as one of the great satirists of the 20th century. He has recorded as P.D.Q. Bach under the Vanguard and Telarc labels and his first two Telarc recordings have received Grammy's for best comedy recording.

Schickele has entertained audiences with the humor of P.D.Q. Bach for 26 years and has now ventured back to the stage as Peter Schickele.

Schickele graduated from Swarthmore College as the only music major and went on to study at the Julliard School of Music with the late Vincent Persichetti. Under a Ford Foundation grant, he taught in Los Angeles and the Aspen School of Music and returned to Julliard to teach at the Julliard Extension School.

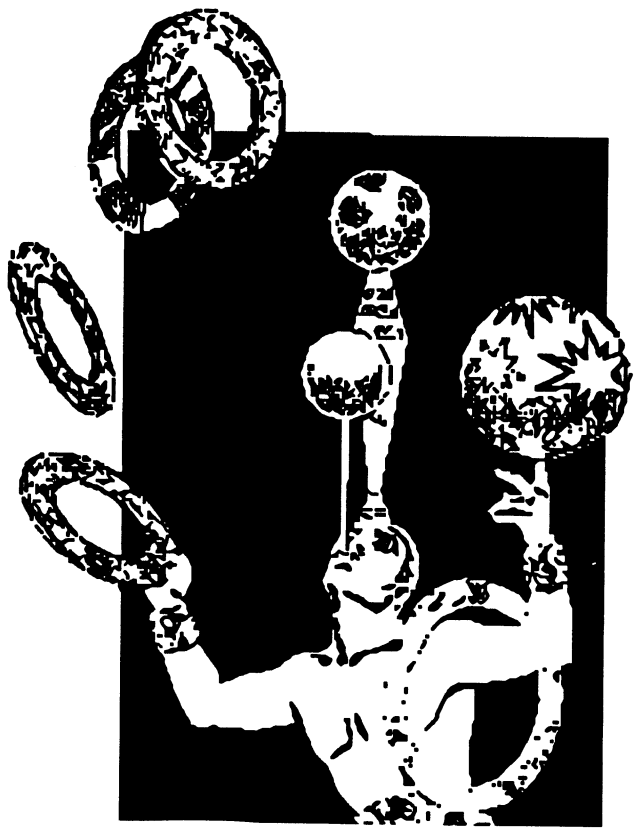
The concert program will include "A Grand, Grand Overture" by Malcolm Arnold, "American Birthday Card" and "Eine Kleine Nichtmusik" (a parody of Mozart's "A Little Night Music") by Peter Schickele among others.

Tickets range from $9 to $15 for adults and $5 to $8 for students and are available at the CSO office located in the lower level of the Barnett Bank on First Avenue or at the Three Arts Theatre the day of the performance. Special discounts are available for groups of 10 or more. Tickets may also be purchased over the phone at 323-5059.

For more information, call Lisa Baumann at 323-5059.

Cypress up in the air with juggler, acrobats

Cypress Gardens



CYPRESS GARDENS, Fla. — The internationally acclaimed Russian performers, the Akishins, will be at Cypress Gardens as stars of the new production, "Variete Internationale."

This variety show features balancing acts, juggling feats, gymnastics and jump-roping stunts.

The Akishins are a group of 10 Russian athletes performing in America for the first time. One act incorporates five jump ropes into one comedy routine.

The Akishins stand on each others' shoulders as they perform. Several characters jump rope without using their legs — they jump on their hands.

The Akishins perform their act three times daily in the Crossroads Pavilion.

The show highlights two of Russia's performers, Yuri Kransnov and Juri Kreis. Kransnov is a performer from the Moscow Circus, and plays a "Russian White-Faced Clown" in "Variete' Internationale." Kreis, on the other hand, performs by balancing and juggling an assortment of colorful umbrellas in beat to a music score that is reminiscent of the European cabaret.

Kreis has been awarded the international title of "Best Circus Juggler."

In 1988, the Akishins were awarded the Silver Medal at the International Competition of Circus Acts in Paris.

In 1990, the Akishins were the recipients of the Silver Medal at Prince Ranier of Monaco's International Circus Festival.

Cypress Gardens is open daily 9:30 a.m. until 5:30 p.m. and is located near Winter Haven, Fla., off U.S. 27, 40 minutes southwest of Sea World and Walt Disney World, one hour from Tampa or Orlando.

The single adult admission price is $22.95 (plus tax), which includes all shows and attractions; admission for children (3 to 9 years old) is $16.45 (plus tax), prices subject to change without notice.

Children 2 years old and under are admitted free. Parking is also free.

'Early outs' to help reshape Army

Retirement Services Office

An early retirement program has been announced by public law 102-484 to provide a temporary management tool for reshaping the Army through fiscal 1995.

Early retirement will be offered to soldiers and officers who meet strict eligibility requirements, and will retire members whose skills are excess to the Army's short- and long-term needs.

Requests for early retirement may be submitted beginning Monday. All soldiers taking advantage of the early retirement program must retire by Aug. 31 and no earlier than 45 days from the date of application.

Individuals who have already separated under provisions of any other voluntary or involuntary program are not eligible for early retirement.

The approval authority for all early retirement applications is the U.S. Total Army Personnel commander, with the exceptions of chaplains and Judge Advocate General Corps officers, whose approval authority is the chief of chaplains and the judge advocate general, respectively.

Those approved for early retirements will receive the same benefits as individuals with 20 or more years of service, except their retirement will be reduced.

Retired pay will be computed in accordance with 10 USC 3991 and section 4403 of Public Law 102-484.

The pay formula is: 2.5 percent X years of service X basic pay X reduction factor (1/12th of 1 percent for each full month short of 240 months as of retirement date). Interested personnel should contact their Finance and Accounting Office for exact determination of their retirement pay.

Conditions

One of the conditions for early retirement is that individuals must be on the Public and Community Service Personnel Registry. This authorizes active duty personnel who are approved for early retirement to accrue additional military retirement credit if they take critical jobs, as in education, law enforcement or health care.

To receive the additional credit, employment with a public or community service organization must occur between the date of early retirement and the date on which the member would have otherwise completed 20 years of active military service.

Early retirees can accrue credit for up to 20 years combined military and community or public service under this program.

Those who retire under this program and who were employed by a public or community service organization listed on the Department of Defense Registry of Public or Community Service Organizations are eligible for recomputation of their retirement

Military personnel approved for early retirements will receive the same benefits as individuals with 20 or more years of service, except their retirement pay will be reduced.

The pay formula is:

2.5 percent X years of service X basic pay X reduction factor (1/12th of 1 percent for each full month short of 240 months as of retirement date)

Merchants to host party for soldiers

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

Sunday has been designated Soldier Appreciation Day by the Macon Road Merchants Association in cooperation with the Columbus Chamber of Commerce and the Civilian Military Council.

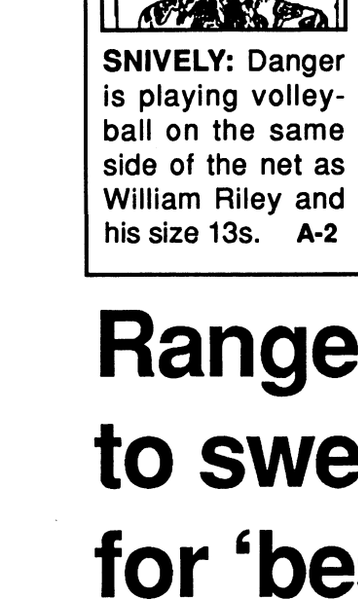
Activities at Columbus Square Mall, which begin at 1 p.m., include discounts to military shoppers, children's events and a "Salute to Fort Benning" party at 6 p.m. in the rear of the mall.

Sears and The Advertiser Company, printers of The Bayonet, in conjunction with Columbus Square Mall are offering a $300 shopping spree at Sears as part of Soldier Appreciation Day.

Registration for the giveaway is only through the coupon on a full page ad in this week's Bayonet. The coupon must be deposited in the drop boxes in Columbus Square Mall Sunday.

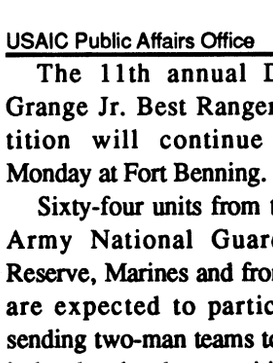
Winners will be announced at 8 p.m. Sunday, and need not be present to win.

"We (merchants) recognize that Fort Benning customers are very loyal," said Timothy Nolan, vice president and general manager of the mall. "This event is to say thank you to Fort Benning."



The party, which will last until 8 p.m., will feature music from the Sandy Creek Band, a fashion show, door prizes and various foods from restaurants in the area.

Entertainment for the children will include Geoffrey from Toys 'R Us, JK from Just Kid'in, Officer Scotty from the Police Department and Lt. Pluggy representing the Columbus Fire Department.



Among the events featured is a diaper derby, toddler basketball, a magic show and storytelling.

The party which will continue until 8 p.m., will admit active duty military members and their family members upon presentation of their identification cards.

"Fort Benning is a vital part of our area's success," said Nolan. "This day is our way of showing our appreciation to these fine troops and their families. I hope we serve them as well as they serve us."

Rangers to sweat for 'best'

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The 11th annual David E. Grange Jr. Best Ranger Competition will continue through Monday at Fort Benning.

Sixty-four units from the Army, Army National Guard, Army Reserve, Marines and from Canada are expected to participate by sending two-man teams to compete in head-to-head competition for the title of "Best Ranger."

The three-day, nonstop event begins with an early-morning physical training test Friday, and concludes almost 60 hours later, at about 5 p.m. Sunday, with a 2.7-mile buddy run from Victory Pond to the Ranger Training Brigade headquarters.

Other events testing the skills of the teams include: marksmanship, parachute spot jump, 20-plus-mile road march, ranger stakes, 60-foot Prusik climb and rappel, canoe course, night land navigation, Darby Queen obstacle course, water confidence test and the helocast and swim.

Awards will be presented at 10:30 a.m. Monday at Victory Pond with members of the winning team receiving engraved 9mm pistols and various awards.

The public is invited to observe the competition and awards ceremony.

CG: Post progress to continue

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

"One of the things I wanted to achieve with the Army's Community of Excellence Award was to let everybody know that this is a first-class, total community, and we are more than capable of accepting additional responsibility."

Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White made this comment with regard to Fort Benning's selection as the 1993 best large installation in the Army.

As the winner, the post will receive a $1 million award that will be available in fiscal 1994.

The funds will be used for the community based on programs approved by the commanding general.

Is White satisfied that we are doing everything we need to be doing for our soldiers and family members?

"No," he said. "I will never be satisfied. When you're satisfied, you get tired eyes, and you become complacent. We've made great progress in the quality of service and support for the soldiers and their families. We will never be perfect, but we've got to continue to move forward."

White

White still sees the need to make such improvements as upgrading barracks, family housing, gymnasiums and sports fields.

Yet even some of this is already being addressed.

Conference looks at future force

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning has been, briefly, home to even more of the infantry than usual.

The Infantry Conference, which took place Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, attracted soldiers and officers from infantry units around the world.

The conference opened with a greeting from Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White and an address by the Training and Doctrine Command's Commanding General Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr.

The theme of the conference, "Infantry: Centerpiece of a Force Projection Army," was carried out in the displays, discussions and demonstrations included in the conference.

Events ranged from presentations by the Directorates of Combined Arms and Tactics, Operations and Training, and Combat Development to remarks by some of the 'stars' of the infantry — from Army Chief of Staff Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan to Forces Command Commanding General Gen. Dennis J. Reimer.

New and developmental weapons systems and equipment were prominent among displays exhibited at Infantry Hall by contractors and their representatives.

Editor's note: For more complete coverage of the Infantry Conference, see the May 7 edition of The Bayonet.

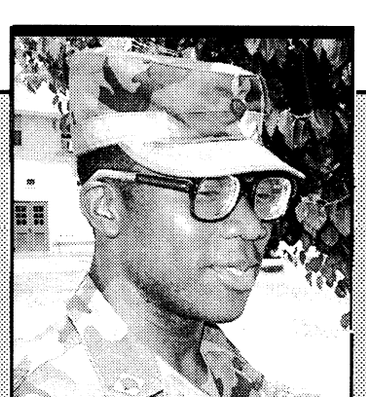
VARIOUS VOICES

What is your favorite on-post recreation area or activity?

Spc. Joyce R. Fredrick, Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "I use the Army Education Center. I've picked up some classes and gained some skills."



2nd Lt. Jeff Meeks, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "I have a house two hours from here, so as soon as Saturday rolls around, I leave post. The gym in Infantry Hall has good facilities, though."

Sgt. 1st Class Richard Crow, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "The golf course. It's one of the better courses I've ever played."

Pfc. Johnnie F. Hill, Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment — " I like the Kelley Hill gym. I use the weight room a lot."

Spc. Mike Igori, 519th Personnel Service Company — "Table tennis is my forte. I also like soccer but haven't found a place to play yet."

Karen Jones, civilian employee — "I get discount tickets from Information, Ticketing and Registration for Six Flags and things like that."

Hoo-ah! High-speed drive to be the best

COMMENTARY

"Hoo-ah" weekend begins today. We at Fort Benning are used to having high-speed troops on campus. After all, we're the home of the rangers, the airborne, Olympic medalist shooters, the end-running 3rd Brigade of the 24th Infantry Division and one of the most widely-acclaimed, most traveled engineer units in our Army, the 36th Engineer Group.

Additionally, as part of the Infantry Commanders' Conference, which just ended, we played host to more stars than you find on a bright summer night.

But this weekend is "Best Ranger" competition. It's 60 hours of non stop, gut-wrenching, brain-splitting rivalry among the most hoo-ah soldiers in the Army and Marine Corps.

More than 100 of these macho-a-macho soldiers and Marines are here to compete in two-man teams to show the Army, the Corps and the world who's the best of the best.

While I'm more into lethargy and slothfulness, I can certainly admire these men, if not identify with them.

For me, physical exertion is walking instead of riding 18 holes. Danger is going into the woods among the snakes to look for a golf ball, armed with nothing more than a seven-iron, or playing volleyball on the same side of the net as William Riley and his size 13s.

I mean why willingly inflict torture on yourself? And it's not like it's only the 60 hours we're talking about. Some of these soldiers began training nine months ago at being miserable.

And despite all this preparation, these elite soldiers still come up hurt, still pull and sprain muscles, still get blisters on top of blisters.

The hottest selling products during the three days are mole skin, tuff skin, surgical tape and hydrogen peroxide.

I get worn out spectating the competition, yet there they are, in the blazing sun, cruising along on forced marches, doing physical training tests, clambering across the Darby Queen's diabolical obstacles or shinning up a rope with the ease of a monkey.

I don't know if it's because these guys are in such great shape, or if the rest of us are all wimps, but chances are the medics on the scene will treat more spectators for heat injuries than ranger competitors.

These guys have more "drive-on" than you'll find in a case of Darvons.

If I stub my toe on a road march, I want to see a medic. If the skin on my back gets rubbed a little raw from a ruck, I put the ruck in the back of a deuce-and-a-half.

Yeah, I know, infantrymen, and especially rangers are cut from a different cloth than us journalists, but I still think you have to be partly crazy to compete for the title "Best Ranger."

OK, so you win the competition and you get a 9mm pistol, a Meritorious Service Medal and a few other things, but you still need to put gas in the car, pay 50 cents for a cup of coffee and make it to work on time like the rest of us chair jockeys.

So why do they do it?

Ha, ha. Glad you asked. Some will tell you it's a matter of self-pride, the desire to be the best, the drive for self-improvement, the need to test themselves physically and mentally.

But when you put all those reasons aside it comes down to one reason — "because it's there."

Men challenge mountains for that reason. Take dog sleds across the Arctic for that reason. Sail one-man sloops across the Pacific for that reason.

As a human race, we're always eager to face a new challenge. And one of those ultimate challenges of body and soul is Best Ranger.

The competition began at 7 this morning with the PT test. It ends 60 hours later at 5 p.m. Sunday with the 2.7-mile buddy run.

If you're looking for excitement during the next three days, want to see America's finest in action, just follow the signs along Georgia Highway 27 to the competition sites. You won't be disappointed.

MESSAGES

CG congratulates post

I am extremely proud of all the Fort Benning Community for winning the fiscal 93 Department of Army best large installation category of the Army Communities of Excellence competition.

This was by no means a small accomplishment. A lot of hard work by soldiers, civilians, volunteers and family members, plus our sister communities of Columbus and Phenix City went into making this happen.

You have proven what I have always known — Fort Benning is the best installation with the most outstanding soldiers, families and work force in the Army.

First-rate service to the soldier is what makes Fort Benning such a great place to live and work. With your continued support, we will continue to be the best!

I want to thank each and every one of you for a job well done.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White
Commanding general

Retirees will be missed

We would like to say goodbye to our many employees who are leaving federal service today.

We are losing a great many employees who are taking advantage of the early retirement option and voluntary separation incentive.

Each of these departing employees has served Fort Benning, the Army and federal service well. They have played key support roles in caring for our soldiers and their families through the tough times – Vietnam, Operations Desert Shield and Storm and recently Operation Restore Hope.

We owe these employees a big thank you for their dedicated service.

We know the decision to leave federal service was difficult for many of you.

It will be a difficult time for Fort Benning because we are losing years and years of experience and knowledge. Those of us who remain will have to pull together to continue the tradition of taking care of soldiers and their families.

The commanding general has often said our civilian employees are Fort Benning's heroes — we couldn't agree more.

We will miss each and everyone of you. Good luck as you begin your new adventures in the "civilian" community. Godspeed.

You never get a second chance ...

By Colleen Stack Hernandez
Fort Sill, Okla., Job Assistance Center

Spc. Smith decided to attend the Army Career and Alumni Program job fair. He didn't feel like wearing his BDUs any longer, so he quickly changed into his dirty physical training uniform from that morning. He slouched his way over to one of the many company representatives and said:

"Ah, yea sir, I was, um, wondering, um, if, you know, you had, like, you know, any job openings with your company? You see, ah, I'm planning on leaving the Army, you know — it's just not for me anymore, and like I'm interested in , ah, making, you know, at least as much as I am now. So, ah, can you hire me?"

If Smith was being interviewed by you, how would he rate? Do you think he got called back for an interview?

There are several steps to take to avoid a bad impression, such as the one Smith made.

• Practice — Have you ever had to play a sport with a team you've never practiced with? It's almost impossible to win. The same holds true for speaking at a job fair. There is no substitute for a rehearsed five-minute briefing.

• Dress for an interview — Interview clothes are neat, pressed and matching. Shoes should always be shined. We don't all need to run out and buy a $300 suit, but it's certainly inappropriate to wear anything dirty.

• Research the participating companies — In today's competitive job market, it is not sufficient to know only about yourself in any type of interview. Companies are looking for applicants who care about where they are employed and have done some research.

• Fine-tune your resume — If you know some of the different companies attending a job fair, try to target your resume to the types of positions for which they may be hiring.

• Don't go to your favorite companies first — Everybody is nervous during the first meeting, no matter how much you practice. Target employers that you are not as interested in first to gain some real-life practice.

The key to success at functions such as a job fair is practice and information.

Your local Job Assistance Center can give you tips on landing and preparing for job interviews.

What about baseball?

Is it my imagination or is it fact that Youth Activities management doesn't like baseball? The reason I am asking this question is my son is playing baseball in the 12- to 15-year-old league. They have to practice on a soccer field and pretend it is a baseball field. Their baseball uniforms are old football uniforms. Yes, they do get to practice on a real baseball field once a week. Their season lasts for all of six games.

It is really disappointing coming from a smaller post, Fort Rucker, Ala., to Fort Benning. I am used to a small post that takes care of all aspects of sports. Youth Activities has three soccer/football fields and nine baseball diamonds (two for high school baseball). Their baseball season lasts 14 games and players get to wear real baseball uniforms.

Is it that the Youth Activities management has been in place too long and become complacent or lost touch with what their job is about? It's about children. Maybe if they would invest in a call to Fort Rucker Youth Activities and talk with Ken Jackson (the sports director), they might get some new ideas.

Let me offer a suggestion. Make Green Field a Youth Activities baseball complex by employing the engineers in a civil project at almost no cost. They would probably enjoy the task.

Master Sgt. Richard E. Rhodes
Headquarters Company, 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt.

Youth Services is dedicated to the children of this installation and strives to provide a quality program. We are in the process of locating additional field space that can be used for baseball playing areas.

Baseball jerseys will be numbered and ready to issue today.

Youth Services welcomes suggestions and continued volunteer assistance in conducting a viable youth program.

We will contact the Master Planning Branch of Department of Public Works to see if a baseball complex can be developed.

Benning honors airborne soldiers

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

A memorial service took place April 22 at Airborne Walk on Eubanks Field as part of the 16th annual Airborne Awards Festival.

Airborne soldiers of the past and present, their families and friends gathered to recognize and remember the pride and tradition of airborne soldiers, and their commitment to military excellence.

Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, who served as a company commander with the 101st Airborne Division in Vietnam and with airborne units in Europe and Alaska, set the tone for the ceremony in his opening remarks, when he said, "Like every day, it is a great day to be airborne."

"Airborne soldiers have a dedication to do their jobs well that comes from the heritage we have within the airborne ranks," he said.

White recognized the airborne veterans in the crowd, saying, "You set the standard years ago that we have all tried to live by ever since."

Guest speaker retired Col. Robert H. Sigholtz served from the ranks of private through colonel as an airborne infantryman.

Sigholtz told the story of his son, also an airborne soldier, who "made the supreme sacrifice for his fellow airborne soldiers and our country in Vietnam."

His son was wounded when his platoon was overrun by a superior large North Vietnamese force. He had his wounded troops evacuated, but stayed to fight himself, dying in the battle.

"In my opinion," Sigholtz said, "this epitomized the normal devotion displayed by the airborne soldier.

"I have always found the airborne soldier to be completely devoted to his task and mission. He can be counted upon to go the extra mile."

"I am proud, awfully proud, to say I am an airborne soldier," Sigholtz said.

That pride in the airborne was evident throughout the crowd, with cries of "Airborne!" punctuating each speaker's remarks.

Sigholtz then presented parachute badges to the "keepers of the wings," Pvt. 2 Nikolas P. Nikolaidis and 2nd Lt. Robert C. Muse of Company C, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, Basic Airborne Class 22-93, who had just completed their qualifying jumps.

In this long-standing airborne tradition, a pair of silver wings is entrusted to the youngest enlisted and officer students at the beginning of each class to carry through all phases of training as a reminder to themselves and their classmates of what they strive to attain.

At the graduation ceremony, the student receives the wings he has carefully guarded and shined.

Raymond L. Jordan Sr., who made his first jump Nov. 15, 1943, was one of many airborne veterans attending the ceremony. He has been coming to these ceremonies for the past 15 or 16 years, he said.

"I just love it ... there is nothing closer knit than paratroopers," Jordan said.

Jordan was awarded a Purple Heart for injuries he suffered as a private with the 509th Parachute Infantry Battalion in Italy in 1944. He said, "If I had it all to do over, I'd do the same thing. I will never regret the day I went airborne."

WHITE: Benning continues to improve

Fort Benning will be one of the first installations in the Army to get new barracks, and they will be on Kelley Hill, sometime in the 1994 to 1996 time frame.

"I'm awfully proud of Fort Benning," he admitted. "You don't know how proud you are until you leave and go someplace else. I didn't used to say that because I would compare it to other installations. I changed my opinion because Fort Benning has changed."

White said that he knows this because he has systems in place to check, and all of those indicators are very positive.

> "We're all going to have to pay more attention to the environment than we have in the past."
> — Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White
> commanding general

The systems he is referring to include the Mystery Shopper Program, in which people use services and report back to him, and the field officer of the day who goes out every night and checks specific areas.

He also credits the Family Unit Network Program as having been a significant help to the post.

In addition, single soldiers are being surveyed so that whenever possible efforts can be made for single soldiers to have the same benefits and quality of life as the married soldiers.

However, the ACOE Award has been just one focus for White since he has been here.

A constant concern has been the drawdown of forces and what impact it will have over the next few years on the post.

White said, "I suppose if you looked at Fort Benning in the year 2000 and looked back to right now, you would say, 'Hey not much has changed. Fort Benning is still about the same.'"

He did note there will be fewer students in some courses, such as airborne and the officer courses, however he doesn't expect it to change how business is done because the post's poulation will stay about the same.

"We will have some opportunities over the next few years to attract units from other places as a result of base closures," White said. "We can accommodate some depending on the magnitude. Major unit relocation would require some construction."

He also indicated that the city of Columbus is working with the post to attract more military units here.

Another area that Fort Benning is looking at in working with surrounding communities is regionalization consolidations in the areas of water plants, utilities and landfills.

White noted that the outstanding relationships among communities allow these initiatives.

Other projects for the future include environmental concerns.

"We're all going to have to pay more attention to the environment than we have in the past," he said. "There are rigid laws covering endangered species, and all of us in command can be held accountable. I would like to set the standard for this part of the country and still be able to train."

Armed Forces Day set to pay tribute to military

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

At the end of a week honoring the military, Fort Benning will top off events with the celebration of Armed Forces Day.

"Proud, Professional, Prepared," is the theme for the May 15 open house observance, which will feature a schedule of events from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

A fee will be charged for participation in some selected entertainment and recreational activities.

Activities will include a static military equipment display, a performance by the U.S. Army Infantry Center's command exhibition parachute team, the Silver Wings, unit competitions, booths, a business fair and many community-sponsored events.

The events will be on York and Stewart-Watson fields from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m..

Food and beverages will be on sale at the annual Chattahoochee Valley - Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army picnic from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Stewart-Watson Field.

An awards ceremony and the crowning of the two Ms. AUSAs will also be featured on York Field from 11 a.m. to noon.

The public is invited to participate in all the activities.

Soldier dies in car wreck

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Staff Sgt. Jon W. Besaw, 31, of Company E, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, was pronounced dead at Martin Army Community Hospital Sunday morning, following a one-car accident on Fort Benning's Old Cusseta Road.

A passing motorist discovered the wreck about 9 a.m. and notified Military Police.

Besaw's 1985 Geo hatchback car was traveling toward Fort Benning's Sand Hill area when it apparently left the road and overturned, officials said.

The Fort Benning Fire Department was called to the scene to free Besaw from the wreck.

The cause of the accident is under investigation.

Aluminum recycling pays dividends

By Kimberly Bennett
Directorate of Community Activities

Earn extra income. Work out of your home. Be your own boss. Don't worry about long hours. Work at your own speed and feel good about what you're doing. This is the perfect opportunity for active duty soldiers, retirees, spouses, children and civilians working on Fort Benning to make some easy money. All you have to do is recycle.

The Aluminum Recycling Center, located on Alenko Street near Lawson Airfield, pays individuals, private organizations, and nonappropriated fund directorates cash for aluminum beverage cans.

NAF directorates and units with Family Unit Network accounts can still participate, but the money they earn is used as revenue or credited to the units' accounts to be used as extra money for unit functions.

The center is open Tuesday through Thursday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. and pays prices per pound competitive with recycling companies in downtown Columbus. The current price is 30 to 35 cents per pound with 27 cans in a pound, according to Gene Russell, spokesman for the center.

The price may sound low, but several individuals and some organizations have turned over their aluminum cans and walked away with $100, Russell said.

The only requirement for recycling is that the cans be empty, clean and dry. If the cans are dirty or mixed with other trash, the center has the right to reject them.

The center began operations three years ago; and, since that time, it has kept 2.75 million cans out of the landfills. That figure, however, is estimated to be only a quarter of the cans on post, Russell said.

And with the Fort Benning landfill already at 75 percent capacity, those living on post may soon no longer have a choice whether or not to recycle, Russell said.

Within six months, a new recycling center will begin operations on Fort Benning. This center will take all recyclable products including glass and plastic.

It will also begin voluntary curbside pickup. The new center will distribute plastic sorting bins to residents so they can begin recycling if they wish. The center currently distributes cardboard boxes to organizations and directorates for collection of aluminum cans.

Residents will not be paid for the curbside pickup of their recyclables, but they will still be able to earn extra income with cans. All they will have to do is personally take the cans to the center where they will receive their cash.

As landfills such as the one here begin to reach capacity, recycling seems to be the future. And, as Russell said, if you can earn extra money while keeping the planet clean, why not start recycling today?

Learn new skills at seminar

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

The Army Career and Alumni Program received notice from the Georgia Department of Labor that the state has been granted $500,000 to initiate a job retraining program at Fort Benning.

Tentative plans are to offer classes in automation, hydraulics, industrial maintenance, welding, material fabrication and training for a commercial driver's license.

The classes will run from four to eight weeks, generally between 3:30 to 11 p.m., and are scheduled to begin May 10.

Anyone interested in attending this "no-cost" training is encouraged to register for a seminar at the ACAP Training Assistance Office in Building 2617.

Seminars will be Monday at 11 a.m., 1 and 3 p.m. in Marshall Auditorium in Infantry Hall. The Georgia Department of Labor will explain the program and process personnel for eligibility, and Columbus Technical Institute will enroll people in classes.

Eligibility consideration will be given to the following groups of honorably discharged military or civilian personnel:

- Involuntary separations resulting from downsizing
- Medicals and chapters
- Voluntary Separation Incentive and Special Separation Bonus Recipients
- Early retirements
- Reduction in force, Selective Early Retirement Board or Retention Control Point changes

Space is limited, and the program will be filled on a first-come, first-served basis.

The Georgia Department of Labor will be responsible for final eligibility determination.

For questions about eligibility or more information, call Rochelle Bautista at 545-4892.

Mishap

Fort Benning firefighters Bill White (center) and David Cureton work on getting the hood up on an accident vehicle, while Ollie Williams (left) and Wayne Key look on. The accident, which occurred Monday afternoon on the north-bound lane of Fort Benning Road, involved four drivers who were trying to avoid construction work by the Directorate of Public Works. Two occupants were transported to Martin Army Community Hospital by ambulance, treated and released. According to Sgt. Mark Fry of the Military Police Activity, the passengers in all the vehicles were wearing seat belts. The cause of the accident is still under investigation.

Family leave for civilians coming soon

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

The Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993, effective Aug. 5, applies to Department of Defense civilians as well as to private sector workers.

Ronald Sanders, principal director for civilian personnel policy at the Pentagon, said the law will apply to all full-time DoD civilians and nonappropriated fund employees. The act does not cover temporary and intermittent employees.

The Office of Personnel Management expects to issue implementing instructions in June.

Guidelines for the program are in place. Sanders said the law guarantees employees up to 12 weeks' unpaid leave following the birth of a child or the placement of a child with the employee for adoption or foster care; or if the time is needed to care for a seriously ill spouse, child or parent; or if the employee is seriously ill and has exhausted sick leave. Both parents are eligible for the leave.

Sanders said leave for parenthood must be taken within a year after the event. Although adoption processes sometimes require lengthy investments of time before the child is legally adopted, the law does not guarantee leave for this purpose.

Employees who need leave before an adoption may ask their supervisors for permission to use annual leave or leave without pay, but such requests will be granted only at the supervisor's discretion, not under the family leave rules. OPM officials could not say whether the final rules will address this issue.

The family leave legislation also does not address bereavement leave. Currently, employees who need leave to deal with the death of a spouse, child or parent may use annual leave or request leave without pay. Supervisors use their own discretion to grant such leave. OPM officials don't know whether the final regulations or separate guidance will address bereavement.

"The main difference this new legislation makes is that now family leave is mandatory," said Sanders. "Before, it was done at the supervisor's discretion. Another possible difference is the length of time — up to 12 work weeks a year."

DoD supervisors have been granting leave without pay when employees needed it for their own or their families' illness.

Employees can take up to 12 weeks of leave all at once or in increments called a "reduced leave schedule," Sanders continued. Depending on the circumstances, they may choose shorter work weeks or shorter days, using the family leave to take mornings or afternoons off while recuperating from an illness or caring for a dependent.

The hours of leave taken by the employee under a reduced leave schedule will be subtracted from the 12-week allowance.

Employers may require employees on reduced leave schedules to transfer to an alternative position with equivalent pay to accommodate intermittent leave.

An employee may elect to substitute annual or sick leave for any part of the 12-week entitlement.

Workers' benefits continue while on family leave. DoD will continue to pay its share of an employee's health insurance premium, but employees must arrange their payments.

Employees have some other responsibilities when they take family leave.

DoD can require a medical certification before and during the leave period, said Sanders. Also, DoD can ask for a second opinion, but the agency must pay for it.

In most cases, employees will return to their jobs after the leave. If that is not possible, DoD will find as similar a job as possible — same grade, status and working conditions, he said.

Correct records smooth career path

By Linda Lee
American Forces Information Service

Check your official personnel records routinely for accuracy and missing documents. Keeping them current may result in promotions or increased schooling, said Department of Defense personnel officials.

Promotions, selections for schools, early retirement boards and other military personnel actions are often based on official personnel files. Also, these records are used for information in casualty cases.

So, what's in the files or what's not can play a major role in your career, DoD officials said. A few things that could affect board results, they added, are missing orders for an award or completion of a school, an out-of-date official photograph and an incomplete list of assignments.

If you do nothing else, officials recommended, check the official records far enough in advance of any board so you have enough time to make needed corrections.

Basically, all that is required to request a microfiche copy of the records is a letter or service-specific form. You can even arrange to review your records in person, said personnel officials.

In addition, the Army has set up a voice response system for noncommissioned officers that requires a touch-tone telephone. Using this system, noncommissioned officers can check certain information or request a copy of the fiche. Soldiers who would like a copy of their official personnel fiches can request them by sending a letter that includes full name, rank, Social Security number, mailing address and signature.

Officers should send their request to: U.S. Total Army PERSCOM, Attn: TAPC-MSR-S, 200 Stovall St., Alexandria, Va. 22332-0444.

Army enlisted service members may write to: Commander, U.S. Army Enlisted Records and Evaluation Center, Attn: PCRE-RF, Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind. 46249-5301.

To receive a copy of personnel fiches, Marines should send a request with full name, rank, Social Security number, return address and signature. An example of a suggested letter format is available at local personnel offices.

The request should be sent to: Commandant of the Marine Corps, Headquarters USMC Code MMRB-10, Quantico, Va. 22134.

There is no standard form for active duty Air Force members to request the fiche. All that is required is a letter with the requestor's full name, Social Security number, grade, return address and signature. Send it to: HQ AFMPC/DPMABR4, 550 C St. West, Suite 5, Randolph Air Force Base, Texas 78150-4707.

If you have questions concerning your fiche, have found someone else's documents filed in your fiche or need to make corrections, check with your local military personnel office.

SPORTS

SECTION B

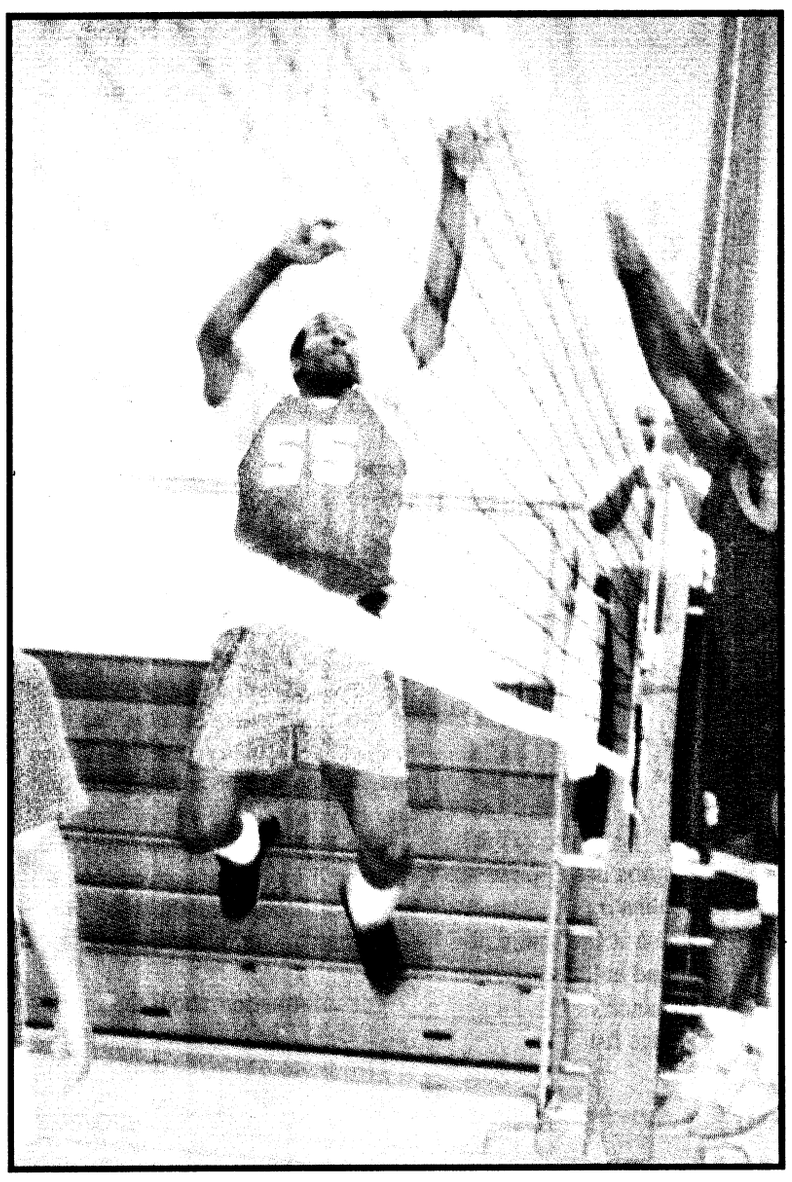
Intramural sports open to everyone

By Kimberly Bennett
Directorate of Community Activities

Anyone interested can play softball, basketball, volleyball, flag football or any one of 15 other sports in Fort Benning's intramural sports program, which gives everyone the opportunity to play the sports they love.

Team members do not have to be experts to participate in intramurals. They only need some spare time and a drive for competition.

At Fort Benning, 19 intramural sports operate throughout the year with unit teams competing against each other for the honor of winning the Commander's Cup. But before the championship trophy is awarded, the teams meet each other on a regular basis to determine which four teams will compete at Audie Murphy Fitness Center for the right to call themselves champions.



The intramural sports program gives both men and women the opportunity to participate in all sports. Because of popularity, most men's teams are open to active duty personnel only; a few, however, are open to civilian employees and retirees. The women's teams are open to family members, civilian employees and retirees.

The program has a variety of sports to keep everyone active throughout the year. Basketball, volleyball, softball and flag football are always favorites, but interested athletes can become active in soccer, track and field, bowling, golf, boxing, racquetball, tennis, weightlifting, bodybuilding, swimming, wrestling, cycling, beach volleyball and biathlons.

Participation in the intramural sports program is often only the beginning of athletic recognition. Athletes who feel they are at the top of their game can apply to become an All-Army candidate and possibly represent the Army while competing against teams in all branches of the service.

Fort Benning conducts screening tests for some sports in order to determine who will be able to try out for the All-Army team. Anyone interested can attend the screenings.

Intramural sports are a way to get in shape and teams are open to anyone — no matter how well they know the game or how well they play.

29th Inf.'s Six-Pack pops top on 507th

The 1993 U.S. Army Infantry Center Men's Volleyball Tournament got under way Monday night, with matches being played at Audie Murphy Fitness Center and Santiago Fitness Center on Sand Hill.

The double-elimination tournament will feature 12 teams trying to pound their way to the championship match May 5 at Audie Murphy Fitness Center.

Here is a run down of games played Monday night at Audie Murphy.

Company B, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment (Six-Pack) vs. Company E, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment (Riggers)

The 29th's Six-Pack popped a top on the Riggers downing them in straight games 15-4 and 15-5.

Six-Pack spiker Calvin Babbitt led the team at the net producing numerous spikes from near perfect sets from teammates Alan Mariner and Sonny Fleshman.

Mitchell Corn kept the Riggers off balance with a hard, diving serve and teammate Tupou Petaia finished off the competition with an exploding jump serve.

The Riggers tried to stay in the match with kills by Jason MacAdam and James McGlade, but anytime the Riggers looked to get something going, Six-Pack would can it.

Intensity stayed focused and swept a pair from The Rock 15-12 and 15-5.

Filipo Leo and Homer Blakes were the heavy-hitters for Intensity. In the first game, Leo pounded out kill after kill and then buried The Rock with a power serve. Simon Martinez and Julio Ramirez put the ball in place for the spike at the net. In the second game, Blakes was a one-man wrecking crew, taking sets from Martinez and Ramirez for kills and serving a low line drive over the net that The Rock couldn't return.

John Lizama, Jerry Singh and Glenn Edwards kept The Rock above ground, but they just couldn't handle the intensity of the 598th.

All-Army track, field camp moves to Fort Benning

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The 1993 All-Army Track and Field Trial Camp is officially here. Fort Benning is now the new home for the camp since its old home, the Presidio of San Francisco, Calif., will no longer be available because it's scheduled to close.

With the arrival of more than 90 percent of the applicants April 22 and 23, the camp's first practice was the afternoon of April 23 at the LaGrange High School track facility training site for the camp.

According to administrative assistant Sgt. Pam Allen, All-Army track coach Willie Davenport will hold two practices a day for the next three weeks to get everyone in the proper shape.

"Some applicants may be coming in from a school or some other training and may not be in the best of shape," said Allen. "For the ones who are in shape, this will just keep them at their peak until the others catch up."

The camp's first meet will be at Auburn University in Auburn, Ala., Saturday.

The 'right stuff' catches the big one

By Kevin L. McIver
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Many of you are gearing up for fishing season; but, before you run and buy a bunch of equipment, let's take a look at what's available.

Buying fishing equipment can be a trying experience for the novice angler.

Depending on the species of fish that you plan to go after, you need to be selective. You can catch just about any fish on any type of equipment; but, the question is, do you want to have a fighting chance when that big one comes along?

My suggestion is first decide what you plan on catching. If crappie or panfish come to mind, then any light tackle will suffice. However, if a big bass is what you're after, then you need some medium to heavy tackle.

A good example of using the best tackle combination was just last week. My wife and I were fishing the backwaters of the Chattahoochee, in some thick cover. She was using light tackle—a five-foot rod with a spinning reel and 6-pound line. Anyway, she hooked a 6-pound, 25-inch largemouth using a green lizard, but she couldn't pull him out of the cover.

We finally landed him by running the boat over the top of the hydrilla and shoving the net down under the grass. It took about ten minutes, and we had a tough time getting the boat out of the grass. In cover like that, heavy tackle would have been the ticket.

Let's take a look at what type of equipment is out there on the market. There are basically three types of fishing reels—closed-face, spinning reels and baitcasters. For you history buffs out there, an interesting note is that the first mention of a "fishing reel" appeared in "The Art of Angling," written by Thomas Barker in England in 1651.

Closed-face reels are used by many anglers for panfish. They generally accomodate about 90 yards of 4- to 10-pound monofilament fishing line. These are the type of fishing reels you probably used when you were a child. They're great little casters with small lures and baits, and they will generally last a long time. The biggest disadvantages are that they tend to bind when dirty, and you can't see any problems coming as the reel face is enclosed.

COMMENTARY

Spinning reels, which were first developed by Peter Malloch of Perth, Scotland, in 1884, and later introduced to America in 1935, are used by anglers who want the advantages of an open face reel.

These include a spool that remains stationary when casting and allows the pull of the lure to uncoil the line as it travels through the air; thus it eliminates initial resistance, the chief cause of "backlashes."

This type of reel is an advantage to the beginner as you can learn in a fraction of the time it takes to master orthodox tackle such as baitcasters. Spinning reels are used for every type of fish out there, from panfish to sharks.

You can buy an ultralight model that holds about 150 yards of 4-pound line that is great for bluegills, crappie and trout. Or you can opt for a bigger model that holds about 160 yards of 12-pound line, which is great for casting 1/2- to 3/4-ounce lures after big bass.

Baitcasting reels are the preferred type for most professional bass fishermen. First introduced in the 19th century to cast live minnows, thus the reference to "bait" casting, they have developed into the reel of choice for big bass fishermen.

Advantages include a lightning-fast gear ratio, instant anti-reverse gearing and line capacity for a lot of heavy fishing line. Most models will accomodate about 150 yards of up to 20-pound line.

Baitcasters are tough, reliable fishing reels that enable bass fishermen to haul in the biggest bass in the heaviest cover. Plus with heavy fishing line, you virtually never lose a lure.

The only disadvantages to a baitcaster are "backlashes." Whenever the spool travels faster than the line, it gets tangled up inside the reel. This is easily prevented by properly setting the reel for each lure and using your thumb to slow down the spool before the lure hits the water. Another technique is to place a small strip of tape over the spool after you make your first cast. The tape will stop the spool from revolving when it gets to the end of the cast.

Next comes the decision of buying a fishing rod. For panfish, I would suggest buying a combo package. The reel is already fitted for the rod and they work well. They generally have a light to medium action and will handle 6- to 12-pound line and 1/8- to 3/8-ounce lures. My experience has been that combo packages are fine for panfish, but they just aren't that great if you're after lunker-largemouths.

Look at the rod and check what type of action it has and the line and lure weight that it will handle. It will be printed on the side of the rod. For bass you might buy a 6- to 7-foot medium to heavy rod. These generally will handle 10 to 20 pound fishing line and 3/8- to 3/4-ounce lures, allowing you to pull in big bass.

There are basically three types of rods—spinning, trigger and flippin'. Spinning rods have a straight handle whereas the trigger rod has a trigger to place your index finger. Flippin' rods are similar to spinning rods but have a stiffer action and are usually 7 feet long.

No matter which rod and reel you buy, ensure you get one for the type of fish you're after and get a good one. Remember the old saying, "You get what you pay for." Good luck and see you at the fishin' hole.

MPs to check for turkey violations

Natural Resources Branch

The Military Police Activity will conduct roadside spot checks throughout turkey hunting season.

The checks will be conducted on the Alabama and Georgia side of the reservation. The MPs will check for violations of the post policy on transporting loaded weapons and ensuring hunters have Georgia licenses and turkey stamps.

The Fort Benning turkey kill card is available and should be filled out correctly. All shotgun ammunition must be No. 2 shot or smaller and all shotguns must be plugged no more than three rounds. MPs will also check to make sure no illegal game is taken.

For more information on hunting and fishing rules on post, check U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 210-2.

Jekyll Island to host tennis tournament

The Jekyll Island Authority

JEKYLL ISLAND, Ga. — The Jekyll Island Tennis Center on Capt. Wylly Road will host the fifth annual Adult Open Tennis Tournament Saturday through Monday. The U.S. Tennis Association sanctioned men's and women's singles, doubles and mixed doubles tournament will count one point toward USTA rankings in Georgia and the South.

Men's age divisions include open singles and doubles, 25 to 40 singles, 50 singles and 30, 40 and 50 doubles.

Women's age divisions include open singles and doubles and 35 singles and doubles.

An open division will be offered for mixed doubles competition.

The entry fees are $12 for singles and $16 per team for doubles. The entry deadline is Wednesday and standard USTA entry forms may be used. Regular scoring and USTA rules will apply, and all matches will be played on the Jekyll Island Tennis Center's 13 clay courts. Trophies will be awarded to winners and finalists in each division.

For more information, call the Jekyll Island Tennis Center at (912) 635-3154.

Bass club drops its lines

Fort Benning Bass Club

The Fort Benning Bass Club monthly tournament was April 17 at Hatchechubbee, Ala., with 13 anglers participating.

There were 22 fish caught and 20 fish released with a total weight of 74 pounds and 6 ounces.

The first-place honors went to Miquel Aviles with a total of 15 pounds, 4 ounces. Willie Goble came in second with 14 pounds, 3 ounces. Third place was taken by George Mendez with 11 pounds, 11 ounces. The big fish pot was taken by Lloyd Crow with 5 pounds, 9 ounces.

The club conducts a tournament every month and the next tournament will be Thursday at West Point Lake.

The Fort Benning Bass Club sponsors and participates in a number of civic functions throughout the year. The fishing club promotes conservation, good sportsmanship, community pride, as well as fishing.

For more information or to join the club, contact Jack R. Pines at 687-8000 or attend one of the club's meetings the second and fourth Tuesday of each month at Building 1796 at 7:30 p.m. Boaters and nonboaters are welcome.

'Lizards' can be more versatile

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price

Outboard Marine Corporation

Ask a bass fisherman which lure he prefers to use with a Carolina rig, and he'll probably answer a plastic lizard.

Unfortunately, that's the only way many fishermen use a lizard; but, according to guide and tournament fisherman Randy Dearman, the plastic lizard is far more versatile and can be fished many different ways.

"When bass are holding above the bottom, such as over deep grass, a lizard and a Carolina rig are an excellent combination," explains the professional angler, "but when bass are on the bottom, then a lizard rigged Texas-style with a slip sinker is a much better technique to use.

"In the spring and summer, the lizard can also be fished as a topwater lure without any weight," he adds; "and, if you're fishing spawning beds, a lizard with a light slip sinker often strikes when nothing else does."

Also, says Dearman, plastic lizards are excellent lures for flipping into dense cover, especially when bass are not very active; and, when rigged with a leadhead hook, they can be hopped along clear gravel bottoms for smallmouth.

"One reason a plastic lizard is such an effective lure is because it's fairly big and bulky, so it attracts larger bass. Because of its tail and leg design, it also produces more action than a regular plastic worm.

Dearman especially likes to fish plastic lizards on the surface as topwater lures.

"You simply tie your line to the hook and rig the lizard so it's weedless," says the Johnson pro; "then just slowly work it through the water like you would any other topwater lure. You can move it in short twitches or simply swim it steadily back.

"A topwater lizard is really effective like this when you fish it over vegetation or through shallow weeds. A lot of times, I just cast a lizard back into the weeds and hop it out so it imitates a salamander."

At times, bass hit a lizard really hard like this, but more often the strikes are much calmer, Dearman notes. Sometimes bass hardly ripple the water as they gulp in a topwater lizard.

"It's an exciting lure to fish because you know your chances of attracting a strike from a big bass are improved," he says. "That's one reason the pros use a lizard 80 much on a Carolina rig

"They can fish it fast and cover a lot of water, and at the same time have a good chance of catching a better than average fish."

Fellowship brings growth

By John R. Houser
USAIC Chaplains' Office

As I was approaching Fort Benning the other morning, I noticed my gas tank was approaching empty. I exited I-185 at Victory Drive and proceeded to the gas station.

While putting gas in my truck's tank, I struck up a conversation with a soldier whom I had never seen before. It was like we had known each other for years. Then another soldier drove up as I was washing my windshield, and we exchanged greetings. After paying my bill, another soldier and I exchanged greetings as I drove off.

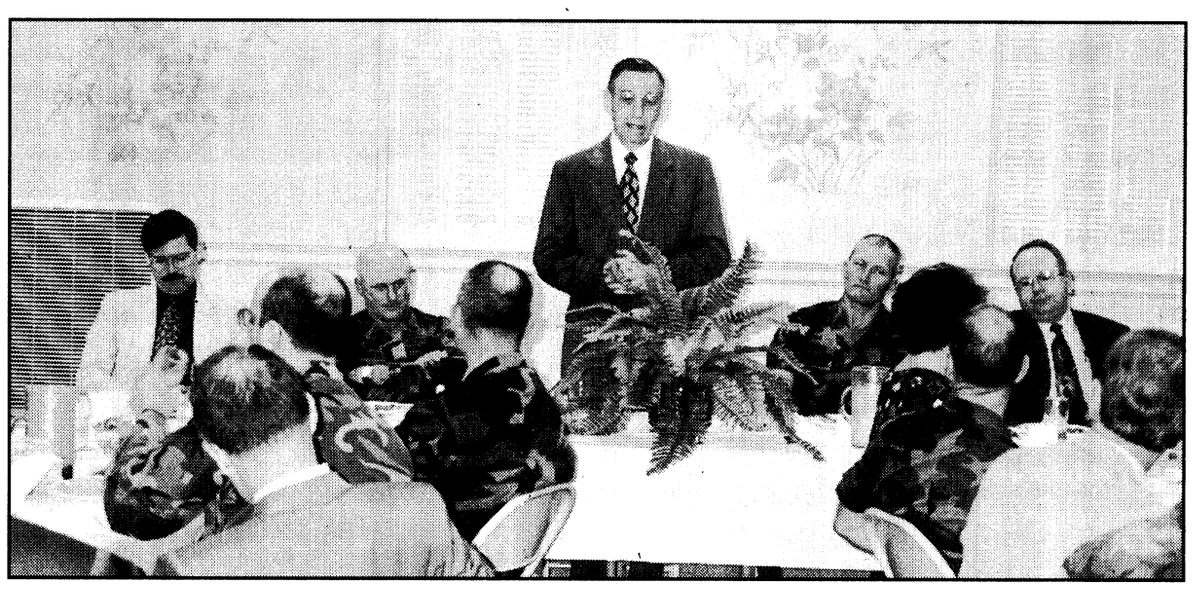
I do not remember these soldiers' names or even their faces. But I do know that we are a part of a large family known as the U.S. Army. Because of this fact, we were able to encourage each other and fellowship with one another.

This same type of fellowship is available to those of us who are of the Christian faith. We can actually have three different levels or types of fellowship. We can have fellowship with God, with ourselves and with our neighbors.

The highest form of fellowship or relationship with another is with God. Through Christ's offering of himself, we have the privilege of talking directly to the Father and him talking to us. We can know his desires for our lives and he personally hears our desires. Through this relationship, we can grow in the knowledge, understanding and love for the one who created us and who currently sustains us.

REFLECTIONS

In 1 John 1:3 there is a statement: "That which we have seen and heard declare we unto you, that you also may have fellowship with us: and truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with his son Jesus Christ."



We also can have fellowship with ourselves. We are not complete individuals until we know ourselves and are able to bring into harmony our bodies, souls and spirits.

King David discovered this simple truth, talking directly to his soul from his spirit in Psalm 42:5: "Why art thou cast down, O my soul? and why art thou disquieted in me? hope thou in God: for I shall yet praise him for the help of his countenance."

After we establish good fellowship or relations with God and ourselves, then we can move on to establish fellowship with our neighbors. This fellowship will be positive and fruitful, allowing both ourselves and our neighbors to grow.

Then we will be able to fulfill 1 John 1:7: "But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another."

It is good to be a part of the military family. But it is even better to be a part of the Christian family ... to be able to fellowship with God, ourselves and others of like faith — to be able to really sing that old hymn of the church: What a fellowship, what a joy divine, leaning on the everlasting arms!

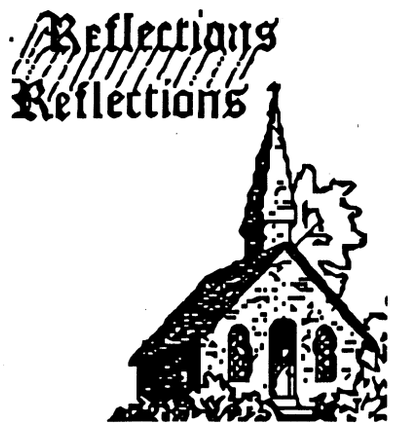
Columbus church hosts luncheon

By Jacqueline Feagin
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Operation Appreciation, a program started at Fort Knox, Ky., in 1966 to reach out to soldiers in training, is at Fort Benning.

The program, which enables soldiers to visit a church on Saturday evenings for fellowship with the civilian community, has encouraged soldiers to become part of the community.

The program here is sponsored by First Baptist Church of Columbus.



First Baptist Church hosted a luncheon April 20 to thank the military for their continued support of the program, which is open to the soldiers of the Infantry Training Brigade .

The Rev. Robert J. Potts, pastor of First Baptist Church, said the luncheon was intended "to show the military members that we appreciate them and God appreciates them."

Col. Theodore R. Severn, commander of ITB, thanked the church for hosting the luncheon which, he said, enabled the command group of ITB and their chaplains a chance to have fellowship with the members of the church staff.

Modern life demands real wisdom from God

By John P. Hash
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Albert Einstein's genius was so unique that his name has become synonymous with intelligence par excellence.

On one occasion, he was on a lecture tour discussing his theory of relativity. Einstein did not drive, so he had a chauffeur who drove him from place to place. As they were driving along one day, the chauffeur said to Einstein, "You know, I've heard this lecture so many times now that I could do it myself."

Einstein accepted the challenge. "The people at the next university have never seen me," said Einstein, "so they won't know who I am. You put on my clothes and I'll wear your uniform and cap."

The lecture went as planned — the chauffeur delivered the speech flawlessly. Then, something happened that the two had not planned on. A mathematics professor asked a complicated question the chauffeur did not understand.

The chauffeur had the practical wisdom to respond; Sir, the solution to that question is so simple I am going to ask my chauffeur to come up and answer.

The need for wisdom, both intellectual and practical, has never been more urgent than it is today. We are faced with decisions that will greatly affect our lives. From another person whose name is synonymous with wisdom, Solomon, we can gain some insight into what real wisdom is.

Imagine the situation. The God who owned the cattle on a thousand hills, who held the whole world in his hands, said to Solomon, "Ask what you wish me to give you." To put it another way, "What is the most important possession in life that I could put in your hands?" How would you answer that question?

In I Kings 3:11, it's stated that some would ask for long life, some for riches and some for power. Position in life is important, but it is not the ultimate goal for living. Experiencing the affirmation of God is.

Supreme among the values of life is real wisdom. Where can this wisdom be found? Real wisdom comes from God. James made this promise in his epistle: "But if any of you lacks wisdom, let him ask of God who gives to all men generously and without reproach, and it will be given to him" (James 1:5.)

Solomon ranked wisdom as life's greatest value. Real wisdom, he understood, could only be given by God; and, he wanted this wisdom so that he could discern between good and evil.

May we strive for real wisdom as we face the difficult decisions that confront us today.

LOOKING FOR THE PERFECT GETAWAY SPOT?

TRY UCHEE CREEK

On the southwestern side of Fort Benning, is a place where trees grow tall and the water of an inviting inlet flows deep and cool. This is Uchee Creek Army Campground and Marina--a place where active duty and retired military personnel, national guardsmen, reservists, and DOD civilians and their families can spend a weekend or an entire vacation enjoying the natural beauty of the Alabama countryside. Uchee Creek is also the perfect place to stop for the night on the way to a vacation in Florida.

Those who really like to get back to nature can rent one of Uchee Creek's pop-up or self-contained campers and take advantage of the facility's 38 full hook-up campsites or its 27 campsites with electric, water and a central dump site. Primitive camping is also available, with a comfort station and laundromat just a short distance away.

Uchee Creek also has 16 log cabins secluded under the shade of the Alabama pines. The cabins come in four sizes and are furnished with cooking and dining utensils, stove, refrigerator, heat and air conditioning. The largest 14 cabins have shower and toilet facilities.

Many come to Uchee Creek for its beautiful marina, where a boat launching ramp, boat slips, docking facilities, gas, water, and electricity are available for a variety of boating activities.

And for those who enjoy land more than water, Uchee Creek has basketball and volleyball courts, a softball field, picnic pavilions and playground equipment.

Friends can gather at Uchee Creek's lodge and relax before the warmth of the building's fireplace. The lodge seats up to 150 people and includes a refrigerator, ice maker, range, tables, chairs and a smoker/cooker barbecue grill.

Campers who want to go hunting and fishing will find everything they need at Uchee Creek's Country Store. Hunting and fishing supplies and state and post hunting and fishing licenses and permits are available at the store along with picnicking and camping supplies, drinks, snacks, and ice.

Rentals at Uchee Creek include everything to help visitors enjoy themselves. For water activities, visitors can rent 24-foot and 28-foot pontoon boats, 15-foot and 17-foot bass boats, foot boat, motor and trailer, and canoes. Campers can rent barbecue smoker/cookers and various camping equipment, and for other outdoor activities, they can rent deer stands, bicycles, bicycle bumper/car top racks, rods and reels, and various sporting equipment.

With all Uchee Creek has to offer, visitors cannot help feeling content. From the first glimpse of its picturesque landscape to the last cruise around the marina, Uchee Creek is the perfect spot for a relaxing getaway.

DESTIN, FLA

In Destin, Florida, snowy egrets wade in the waters of the Gulf of Mexico's Emerald Coast. Quick-footed sandpipers dart across diamond white beaches. Sunshine gleams off the emerald green sea, and sand dunes spotted with sea oats, sand pipes and magnolias drift along the calm shoreline. In Destin, Florida, time stands still, and for those who visit the U.S. Army Destin, Florida, Recreation Area, the rest of the world is forgotten.

The recreation area's 15 and a half acres of land located on the shore of Choctawhatchee Bay provide active duty and retired military personnel, their families and guests many ways to unwind and enjoy a tropical vacation just 220 miles south of Fort Benning.

Vacationers find a home away from home when they return from a day of sunning on the beach, swimming in the warm Gulf waters, or fishing on the Gulf of Mexico. The recreation area has 22 fully-furnished two- and three-bedroom cabins. Each has a screened porch, a patio with a barbecue grill, and modern furniture. Some even have a romantic master bedroom overlooking the bay.

In addition, the recreation area has a 34-unit motel and 66 campsites, some with full hook-up facilities and others with water and electric only. Vacationers who visit the area regularly can store their trailers between visits for a low monthly fee. Tent camping is also available, and a bath house and on-site laundromat make the area even more appealing.

Among the lodging facilities, the options for action and relaxation are endless. All vacationers can take advantage of the recreation area's private beach. A small swimming pool area just off the beach, and two full playgrounds help keep children entertained.

The recreation area's 300-foot pier is a perfect place to watch for dolphins, crab, snails, and other bay creatures.

The recreation area's marina provides even more activity. Hundreds of people a year depart the pier aboard the Follow Me, the recreation area's 48-foot charter boat. The Follow Me departs the pier at 6:30 a.m. every day and takes up to 22 passengers offshore for an all-day deep-sea fishing adventure. Passengers can either fish or relax on deck.

For those who would rather boat on their own, the recreation area rents 24-foot pontoon boats, 14-foot jon boats, 14-foot sailboats, paddle boats, and jet skis.

But the fun does not stop at the recreation area's borders. Destin is saturated with exciting attractions, including shopping areas, nightclubs, and a variety of restaurants, serving the best in fresh seafood.

Golfers can spend countless hours on any of the Fort Walton/Destin area's numerous world class golf courses. All are just a short distance from the recreation area.

Eglin Air Force Base, the largest air base in the world, is located just 13 miles from the recreation area. Tours of the base are available from January through March and from June through August. Eligible personnel can also take advantage of the base's commissary, PX, and medical facilities.

The Gulfarium is also close and is a fun place to take children. Daily shows feature trained dolphins, sea lions, seals, otters, penguins, and other sea animals.

Another great children's attraction is the zoo, located just a short 25 miles from the recreation area. The zoo is home to over 80 species of animals.

Indian Temple Mound Museum is a fascinating way to spend a day. The museum houses over 4,000 Native American Artifacts.

So, whether the vacation ideal is lounging on the beach, swimming, fishing, shopping, or sightseeing, the recreation area at Destin, Florida, has it all. The snow white beaches surrounded by the sun kissed Emerald Coast of the Gulf of Mexico makes a vacation in Destin a trip to paradise. Secure your place in sunny Florida today! Fort Benning's active duty military have priority and may reserve cabins and motel units six months in advance.

For information and reservations call 1-800-642-0466, or in person at the Outdoor Recreation Office, Bldg. 1707, 545-7978, or Information, Ticketing, and Registration Office, Bldg. 247, 545- 4155.

Soldiers compete for infantry badge

By Gregory Hart
29th Infantry Regiment

Tired, sore with aching bones, he stands, with his back to the task that awaits him.

He goes over the steps in his head for the 100th time. He has made it this far and this is the last task he must pass.

Patiently he listens to the calm voice of instructions from the grader who stands before him. He nods his head in compliance and waits for the word to begin.

"Begin," says the instructor.

Without even thinking, he performs the task that has become automatic to his mind and body. He passes the disassembly phase, then the assembly phase, then finally it comes down to the last phase — function check. Realizing that it's not timed, he relaxes slightly to clear his head and then begins.

He passes; he earns the EIB.

More than 440 soldiers tested their infantry skills and abilities in hopes of earning the badge April 12 through 16 at Galloway Range.

Conducted by the 29th Infantry Regiment, infantry soldiers from all over the post tested their mettle for the coveted badge, which they would proudly wear if they meet the standards.

The testing ended April 16 with a 12-mile road march and weapon proficiency test of the M-16 rifle.

The testing, which consists of 28 tasks, is available to all infantry soldiers. The topics cover common training tasks, and other more specific tasks directly related to the infantry, as well as a day and night land navigation course and the Army physical fitness test in which participants must score 70 percent or higher in all three events.

The soldiers were awarded their EIBs at an awards ceremony held April 22 at the Collins Training Center. Brig. Gen. John Hendrix, assistant commandant of the U.S, Army Infantry School, was present to award the soldiers along with Col. Gregory Camp, commander of the 29th Inf. Regt.

Those from the 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt., who completed the EIB testing are Spcs. Joe Mirelez and Ruben Torres, Headquarters and Headquarters Company; Staff Sgt. Walker Carswell, Company E; and Staff Sgts. Paul Gibson, Sammie Thornton, Luke Yovanovich, David Brunk and Tracy Smith, all from the Bradley Instructor Company.

The awardees from 2nd Bn., 29th Inf. Regt., were Capt. Clarence Butler, Company C; Cpl. David Strickland, Spc. Reginald McCoy and Pvt. Mark Adkins, Company B; and Staff Sgt. Arnaldo Gonzales and Sgt. Edwin Cruzmojica, Company D.

Awardees from the 4th Ranger Training Battalion were Staff Sgts. Joseph Brownstein, David Standish, Reynaldo Reyes, Roger Parker, Carl Holcombe and Randy Walker.

Awardees from 5th RTB included Staff Sgts. William Favri, Timothy Koehler and Bryan Finch, and Sgt. Jeffrey Walters.

Soldiers who qualified from 6th RTB were Staff Sgts. Clarence Brangard and Thomas Ballard, Sgts. Michael Woody and Brett Walden, and Spc. Patrick Johnston.

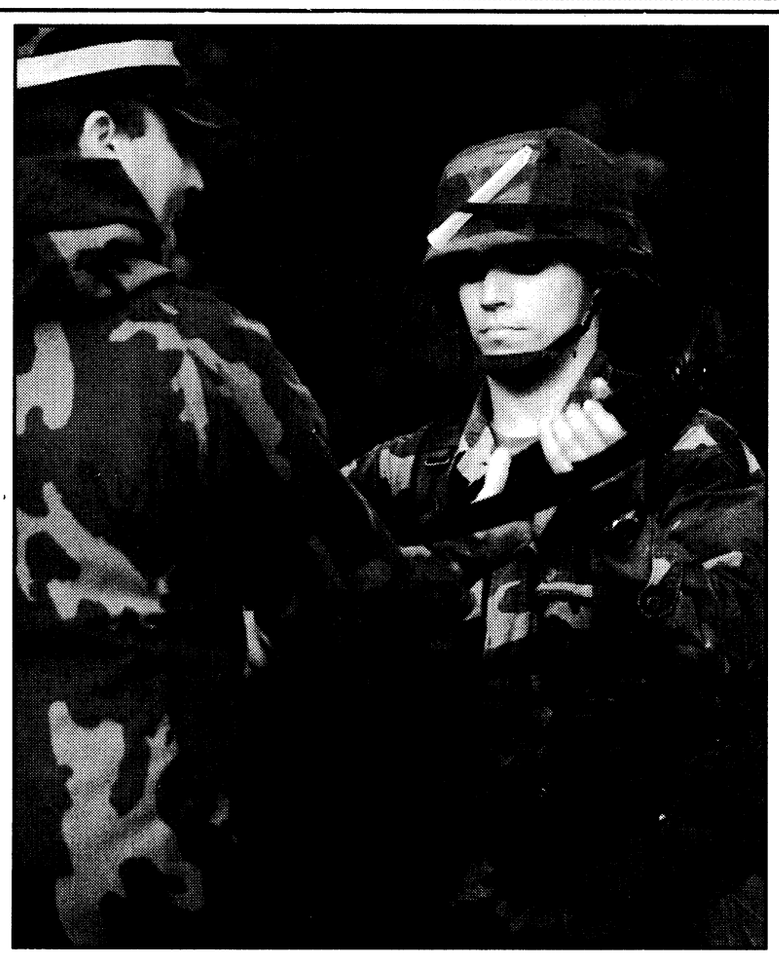
Qualifiers from the Infantry Training Brigade included Staff Sgt. Michael Abbey from the Drill Sergeant School, Sgt. 1st Class Ronald Moskalski, Company C, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment; Staff Sgt. Henry Snell, Company B, 2nd Bn., 58th Inf. Regt.; Staff Sgt. Timothy Fitzsimmons, Company E, 2nd Bn., 58th Inf. Regt.; and 1st Lt. Charles Smith and Staff Sgt. Lennox Escobar, Headquarters Service Company.

Other awardees from ITB included 1st Lt. James Riddick, Company D, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment; Staff Sgt. Howard Cleland, Company B, 1st Bn., 38th Inf. Regt.; Staff Sgt. James Taylor, Company B, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, and Staff Sgt. Wilson Spradlin, Company E, 1st Bn., 50th Inf. Regt.

Awardees from the 30th Adjutant General Battalion (Reception), were Staff Sgts. Eli Perez, Alton Hyman, Kevin Hooper and Lee Mitchell.

Staff Sgt. William Thompson represented Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment.

Participants from 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, were Sgt. 1st Class David Laster, Company B; Staff Sgts. Kenneth Bowman, Brian Levin and Karl Ward and Sgts. Jose Cruz and Eric Rodriguez, Company C; and Staff Sgt. Billy Arrington, Company D.



Awardees from 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment were 1st Lt. Jorge Rodriguez, Company C; and Pvt. 1st Class Anthony Baldoni, Company D.

Qualifiers from 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment was Sgt. Randall Meyers, Headquarters and Headquarters Company.

Qualifiers from 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment was Cpt. George McDonnell, Company D.

Qualifiers from the Non-commissioned Officers Academy was Staff Sgt. Jeffery Justice.

Qualifiers from the 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment were Sgt. Jeffery McCowen and Spc. William Beckert; Headquarters and Headquarters Company.

Samurai challenge tests officers' skills

By Capt. Brad Leath
2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry

Officers of 2nd Battalion 29th Infantry Regiment, held their version of the legendary "Mungudai Challenge," an ancient samurai warrior test of strength, endurance, skill, and esprit de corps.

Maj. Jeff Lang, operations officer, was charged with setting up an officer professional development program for the officers that would give them a test and also give them a taste of the challenge training posed in the past without the technology of our time.

Capt. Shawn Marshall, the project officer, divided the officers into teams of three men each. The 3.6-mile course led to Coolidge Range where each team member had to shoot the 9mm pistol at 25-meter targets. Each team was timed from the start of the 3.6 leg, the shoot, and the 3.6 leg back to the start point. The best shooters were given time off their score for exact hits and the score was tallied at the end.

The team of Capts. Mike Ryan, Tim Loudermilk and Marshall, took first place with a 53:23 time.

Second place went to Maj. Warren Singleton, Capt.Vince Roach, and lst Lt. Joe Hall with the time of 55:02.

Third place went to the team of Capt. Rocky Holt, Capt. Mike Quirion and Lang, with a time of 55:30.

WW II — A LOOK BACK

50 years ago this week ...

• In preparation for Operation Husky, the invasion of Sicily, the Allies initiated plans designed to lure the Germans into focusing their attention on Greece. A British submarine near Spain released the carefully prepared body of Maj. Martin, a fictitious staff officer in the Royal Marines. The corpse carried seemingly authentic identification to include family pictures and letters, as well as misleading information concerning a major invasion of Greece. Additionally, the Allies backed an increasing number of local resistance movement operations against Axis forces in Greece. The Germans swallowed the bait, realigning their forces until only 40,000 soldiers remained to defend Sicily at the time of its invasion.

• In the Battle of the Atlantic, the Allied convoy ONS-5 successfully repelled the attacks of 51 U-boats in a nearly nine-day running battle. Despite the lack of significant air support, ONS-5 lost only 13 of its 42 merchant ships, while managing to cripple 12 German submarines.

• In North Africa, American forces overcame stiff German resistance to break out of Mousetrap Valley in Tunisia before halting in the face of yet another improvised defensive line established by resourceful Axis forces.

• In diplomatic affairs, prompted by a need to ease increasingly tense relations with the Soviets, the Polish Exile Government in London withdrew its request for a Red Cross investigation of Russian wrongdoing in connection with the 4,100 murdered Polish officers found in mass graves in the Katyn Forest in Poland.

• On Fort Benning, Col. Garland H. Coutts began his tenure as the assistant commandant of the Parachute School, having accepted his appointment to the position a week earlier.

Personnel whose application for separation under the the Voluntary Separation Incehtive or Special Separation Bonus Programs are approved on or after Monday may not convert to early retirements unless they meet all eligibility requirements.

Promotable enlisted soldiers who are approved for early retirement in their current grade are no longer promotion eligible and will be removed from the promotion list.

Promotions occurring after the application is submitted but prior to retirement are invalid and the orders effecting such a promotion will be revoked.

Enlisted soldiers

To be eligible for early retirement, enlisted soldiers must be on active duty and meet all the requirements for length of service for 20-year retirement as prescribed by Army Regulation 635-200, except as modified below:

• Soldiers with a local or Headquarters, Department of the Army bar to re-enlist who have completed more than 18 years active federal service may apply for early retirement regardless of military occupational specialty or grade.

• Soldiers whose VSI/SSB applications were approved before Monday and who will have at least 15 years of service as of Aug. 31 may convert to the early retirement program without regard to MOS.

These soldiers may be held past their approved separation date (but no later than Aug. 31) to process their application for early retirement. However, such extensions may not go beyond the soldier's contractual ETS without prior approval from PERSCOM.

Officers

To be eligible officers must be on active duty and meet all eligibility requirements for retirement for length of service for 20-year retirement as prescribed by AR 635-100, except as modified below:

• Officers currently on active duty whose application for separation under the VSI/SSB programs were approved prior to May 3 and who will have at least 15 years active federal service as of Aug. 31 may convert to the early retirement program, provided they meet the grade requirements (major or warrant officer), regardless of branch, functional area or MOS.

• Army Competitive Category majors whose date of rank is Dec. 1, 1986 or earlier, at least twice nonselect for promotion to lieutenant colonel and not on an approved promotion list with at least 18, but less than 20 years of active federal service as of required retirement date.

Those in the following branch or functional area are not eligible: 18,25,35,39,48,74,88,90,91 and 92.

Warrant officers

Warrant officers must have at least 17, but less than 20 years active federal service as of the requested retirement date in the following MOSs and grades to be eligible:140B(CW3/4),140D (CW2/3/4), 140E (CW2/3/4), 155E (CW3/4), 156E (CW3/4), 311A (CW2/3/4), 910A (CW2/3/4), 915A (CW3/4), 920A (CW3/4).

Chaplains

To be eligible, chaplains must be majors who are one or more times nonselect for promotion to lieutenant colonel and not on an approved promotion list with at least 17, but less than 20 years active federal service as of requested retirement date, and must have a currently valid ecclesiastic endorsement.

JAG officers

Judge Advocate General Corps officers eligible for early retirement must be majors who are one or more times nonselect for promotion to lieutenant colonel and not on an approved promotion list with at least 15 but less than 20 years active federal service as of requested retirement date.

Approval criteria

The commander, PERSCOM, chief of chaplains or Judge Advocate General will determine if approval is consistent with manpower and budgetary limits.

Any required waivers (time in grade, time on station, in lieu of PCS, and active duty service obligation) must be approved.

Request for a waiver must accompany the retirement application. Headquarters, Department of the Army is the only waiver approval authority.

Ineligibility criteria

The following are not eligible for early retirement:

• Enlisted soldiers whose MOS, grade and time in service are not listed except as indicated

• Enlisted soldiers with a Department of the Army bar to re-enlist who have less than 18 years active federal service.

• Enlisted soldiers who are selected for separation under provisions of the Qualitative Management Program who have less than 18 years active federal service.

• Individuals: pending involuntary separation, pending trial by court-martial, or under investigation for Uniformed Code of Uniformed Justice offenses that may lead to trial by court-martial or involuntary separation.

• Separation authority will cancel approved but not yet executed retirements if a soldier is subsequently identified for UCMJ action or involuntary separation.

• Individuals convicted by court-martial and sentenced to a punitive discharge or have cases pending.

• Enlisted soldiers who have signed declination of continued service statements, except those who have over 18 years active federal service.

• Personnel not medically cleared by requested early retirement date.

• Officers who are not listed on the eligibility criteria list.

• Soldiers receiving an approved involuntary separation or discharge under other than honorable conditions, regardless of years of active federal service.

• Soldiers receiving approved separation or discharge under honorable conditions who will have less than 18 years of service on their separation or discharge date.

• Flagged personnel, if otherwise eligible, must include a copy of the flag and request a waiver, through their chain of command, from the appropriate HQDA authority.

Individuals who are already approved for early retirement and are subsequently flagged prior to date of scheduled retirement will not be eligible for early retirement unless approved by the appropriate HQDA approval authority.

Procedures

Eligible personnel must contact the Retirement Services Office at 545-3019 or 545-2541 to make an appointment.

Individuals must bring a DA Form 4187, Social Security numbers and dates of birth of all family members to the appointment.

Soldiers serviced by the 519th Personnel Service Company must also bring their military personnel records jacket.

Enlisted Eligibility Requirements for Early Retirement

Soldiers must, without exception, hold a primary military occupational specialty and grade with the minimum number of years of active service (as of Aug. 31) listed here to be eligible for early retirement.

The DA Form 4187 must include a statement that the individual has been advised not to make any firm or final commitments associated with retirement, to include jobs, housing, schooling or movement of family or household goods, prior to receiving written approval of retirement from PERSCOM.

Applying for eligibility for early retirement does not mean the applicant will be declared eligible for approval.

Eligible personnel who are already on transition leave who want to convert from VSI/SSB to early retirement, or who are on PCS leave and want to apply for early retirement, must report to the nearest Army installation that has a transition center to request early retirement.

For information, call 545-2541 or 545-2715.

Airmen aid accident victims

3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

During an awards ceremony recently, a group of Air Force personnel assigned to Fort Benning were presented the Air Force Achievement Medal by the senior U.S. Air Force representative to Fort Benning for actions they took during an accident.

The airmen, all from Detachment 4, 18th Air Support Group, were driving to Fort Stewart, Ga., for an exercise when they came upon an accident on the highway at which time they controlled traffic, rendered first aid and called for help.

"It is a pleasure and an honor to recognize these men for the assistance they gave to the victims of that accident," said Air Force Col. Henry "Chick" Eagle, Fort Benning's senior Air Force representative. "Their actions undoubtedly saved a life."

"I'm very proud of the way the men responded to such a serious accident," said Lt. Col. Kurtis Sutley, Detachment 4 commander. "Everyone's professional training was put to the test and they passed with flying colors."

Both victims have fully recovered from the injuries sustained in the accident.

Detachment 4 is a Tactical Air Control Party, which provides tactical air support for 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division.

Those receiving the AFAM were: Lt. Col. Kurtis Sutley, Capt. Phil Taber, Tech. Sgt. Michael Lansberry, Staff Sgts. Andy Liermann and Jeff Paton, and Airmen Anselmo Desaavedra, Benard Gober and James Vandevelde.

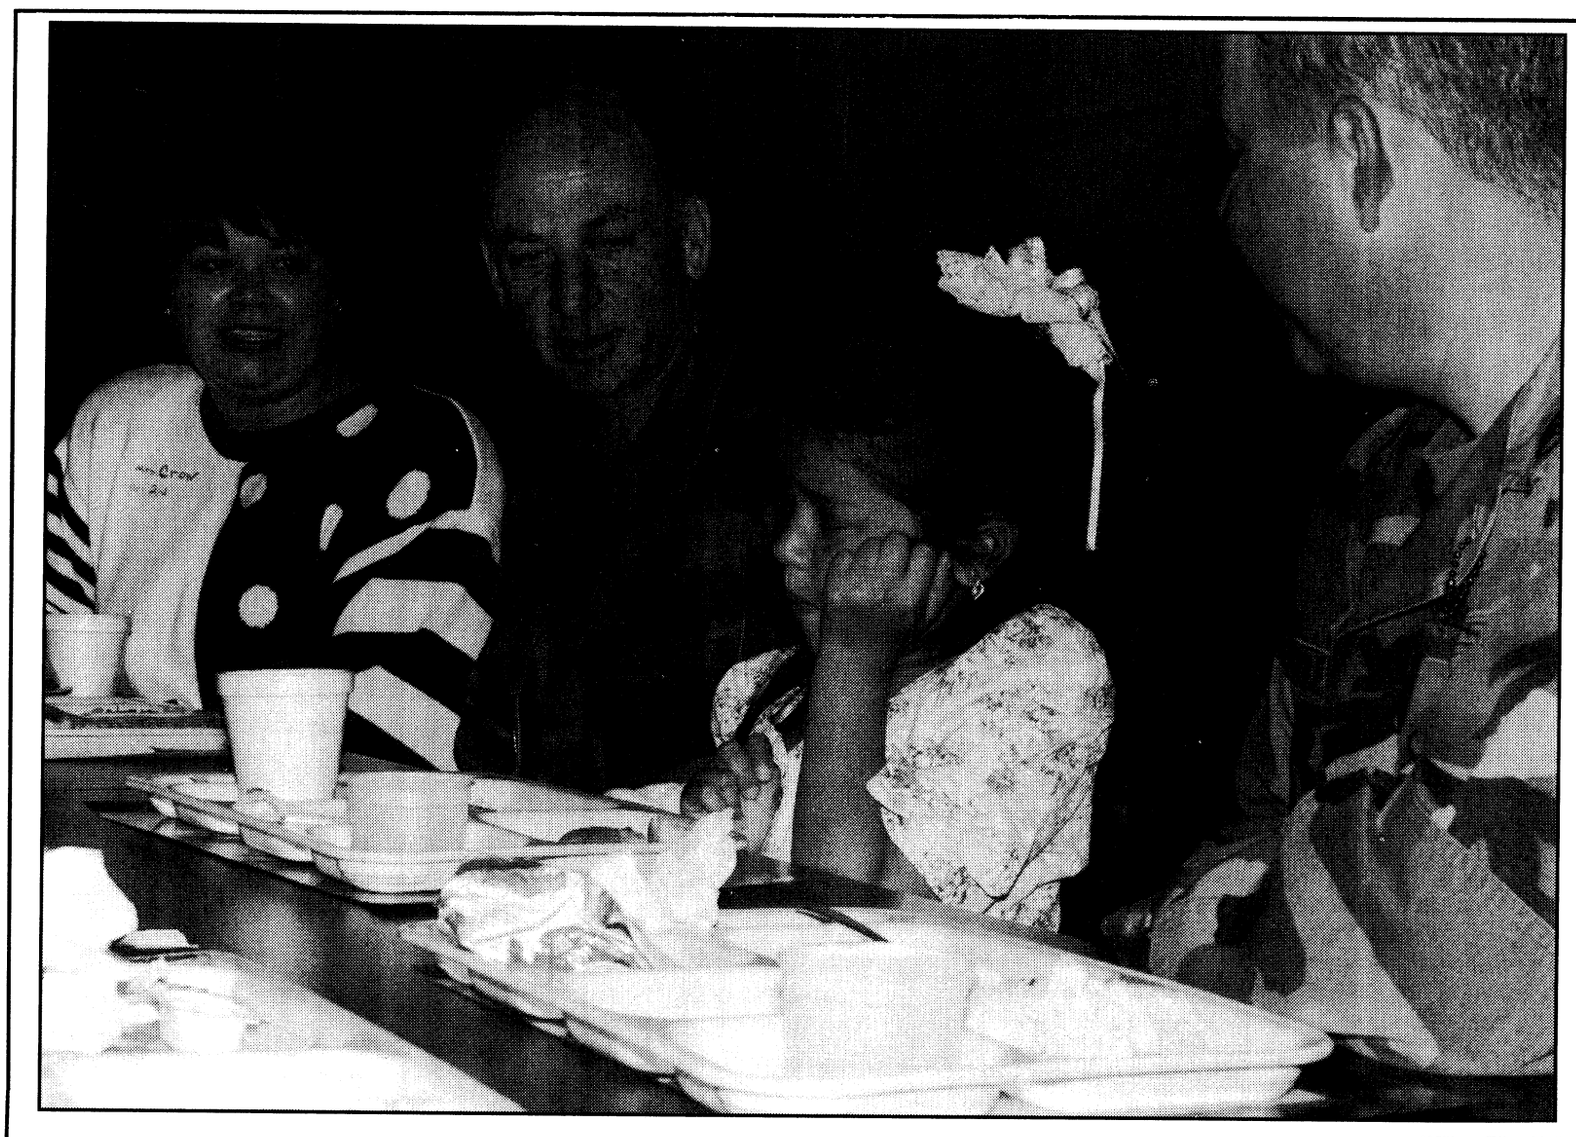
'Kidcode' could save children

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

As part of the Fort Benning Family Advocacy Program observance of April as Child Abuse Prevention Month, program manager Becky Welch is encouraging parents to come up with a "Kidcode," or family password for personal safety.

Why? Welch said that the disappearance of children is a major problem in the United States. Most of them have run away from home, but a good number have been abducted by parents who have lost a custody battle. Also, on rare occasions, children are abducted by a complete stranger or casual acquaintance.



While a "kidcode" will not solve the problem of missing children, Welch noted that it can help children distinguish between people they have permission to go with and people who are likely to deceive, exploit or injure them.

While no one can deny the seriousness of the problem of missing children, your child is statistically hundreds of times more likely to be the victim of ongoing sexual exploitation than of physical abduction.

Welch pointed out that the offending party is most likely to be someone you and your child know and trust, and the context for exploitation is likely to be your own home.

"Kidcode" is only one part of a comprehensive family program for personal safety every family should have.

She said it is also important to teach children to distinguish between appropriate and inappropriate touching, and let them know what resources are available if they need help.

Schools' fifth-graders to take to the woods

Fort Benning Schools

Fort Benning's fifth-graders will take to the woods as the Fort Benning Schools' Outdoor Education program begins its year of learning experiences.

Through the support of the Infantry Training Brigade and the Fort Benning Schools' staff, almost 400 students will participate in this year's programs.

Two sessions of outdoor education are for fifth-graders from Dexter, Wilbur and Wilson schools at Victory Pond Thursday and May 7 and students from Loyd and White, May 20 and 21.

The sessions include adventuring in nature, arts and crafts, archery, team building activities and first aid.

The classes will be taught by teachers, counselors and media specialists from the five Fort Benning schools as well as members of the Fort Benning community.

Cellist to perform in fine arts series

Fort Benning Schools

The fourth in a series of fine arts concerts will take place in each of the Fort Benning Schools Wednesday and Thursday.

Martha Gerschefski, cellist, will present the program.

She will be accompanied on piano by Rexford Whidden of Columbus College.

Gerschefski was the first woman selected by Leopold Stokowski for the American Symphony Orchestra, where she held the position of associate principal cello.

She has toured Europe performing recitals under the State Department Cultural Presentations Abroad program and has presented solo tours in the United States.

She is the co-founder of the Georgia Academy of music and currently serves on the faculties of Columbus College, Georgia State University and Auburn University.

The Fine Arts Series is in its ninth consecutive year in the Fort Benning Schools.

It is designed to provide children with a quality artistic experience while teaching them appropriate concert behavior.

Guest artists for this series are professional musicians, many of whom are associated with Columbus College.

Gerschefski's concert performance of the Fine Arts Series is sponsored by the Officers' Wives' Club.

May 10 to 15 set aside to honor military

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Military Appreciation Week, a week set aside by the communities of Columbus, Phenix City and Fort Benning to recognize military organizations, service members and their families, will begin May 10.

A variety of events has been scheduled throughout the week, culminating with Armed Forces Day May 15.

The following is a list of scheduled events:

Kick-off breakfast

Military Appreciation Week will kick off with a breakfast at the Harmony Church Field House May 10 from 6 to 7:30 a.m.

The guest speaker will be retired Lt. Gen. Bruce Blount, vice chairman of the Association of the United States Army.

Tickets are available through units.

Essay contest

The Columbus Ledger-Enquirer is sponsoring an essay contest open to all school children in the tri-communities of Columbus, Phenix City and Fort Benning.

The subject is "What the military does for our community." The competition runs through May 10.

For more information, call Jenny Collins at 324-5526.

Bowling tournament

A bowling tournament will be conducted at the Main Post Bowling Center and at the Mall Bowling Center May 7 through 14.

The event is open to everyone and individuals can enter as many times as desired but can only win once.

Each entrant will bowl three games, and the winners will be selected based on their best three-game total.

For more information, call Jim Cantrell at 682-7781.

Columbus RedStixx Night

The Columbus RedStixx and the local AUSA chapter will host Military Appreciation Night May 12 at Golden Park on Victory Drive.

Post command sergeants major will play softball against local celebrities in a 5 p.m. pre-game, followed by a RedStixx game at 7 p.m.

The Silver Wings, Fort Benning's command exhibition parachute team, will parachute in with the game ball. Autographed baseballs will be given out.

Tickets are available through units for $1.50.

Golf tournament

A golf tournament open to military and AUSA corporate members is scheduled May 13 at the Follow Me Golf Course.

There will be a shotgun start at 12:30 p.m.

The tournament is open to the first 120 people to register.

For more information, call George Cliff at 687-1940.

Fishing Tournament

Get out your fishing pole for the tournament May 14 at the Uchee Creek Recreation Area from 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

The entry fee is $10. Awards will go to the entries with the most weight caught.

For more information about this tournament, call Howard Givens at 545-7238 or 545-4053.

Open swimming meet

AUSA is sponsoring a swimming meet open for all active duty military, retirees, family members and civilian employees May 14 from 5 to 7:30 p.m.

Register at Briant Wells Pool from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

For more information, call Billy Clarke at 545-4388.

"Burn the General" Run

A three-mile race against the commanding general will start May 15 at 9 a.m. at York Field.

Every finisher will receive a certificate stating either "I burned the general," or "I was burned by the general."

The first 25 men and 15 women will also receive special awards. Registration is $1 in advance or $2 the day of the run.

For more information, call Robert Shelley at 545-1940.

Awards ceremony

An awards ceremony will take place May 15 at 11 a.m. at York Field.

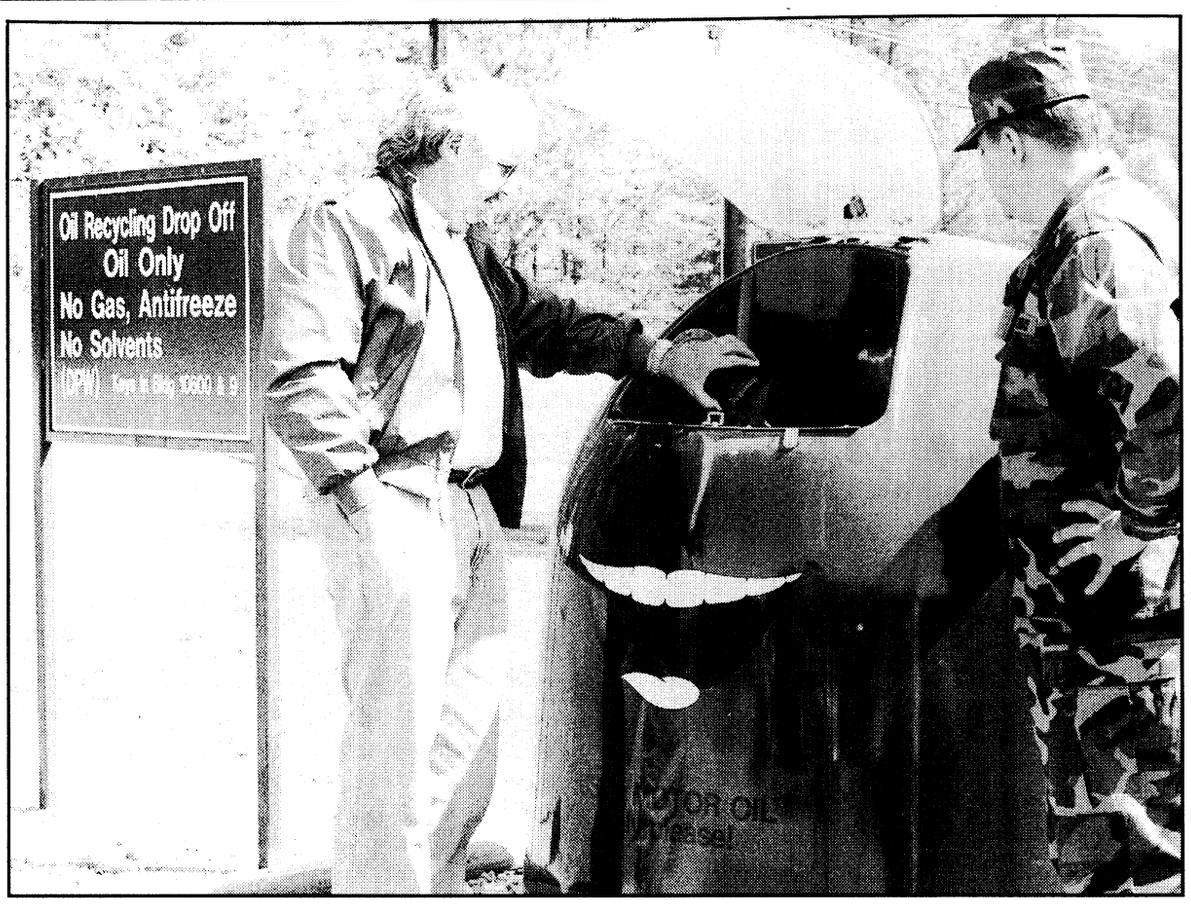
Awards for the essay contest, kick off relay, "Fit to Win" competition, swim meet, "Burn the General" run and the volleyball and fishing tournaments will be presented.

Also, the winners of the annual Ms. AUSA contest will be crowned.

Armed Forces Day Picnic

A picnic will be from noon to 5 p.m. May 15 at Olive Field off Dixie Road.

Everyone is invited to attend. Food, entertainment and games will be available.



For more information, call Jim Gallagher at 545-4539.

Mo Armstrong, Solid Waste and Recycling manager, and Lt. Col. John Orosz, chief of the Environmental Management Division, examine an oil igloo.

Containers available for oil disposal

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

In celebration of Earth Day, April 22, "Kosmos," the brown, happy-faced 360-gallon oil igloos are now in place and operational at two Fort Benning fire stations, one on Vibbert Street and the other on Custer Road, and at the Main Post Exchange and the service station on Marchant Street.

According to Mo Armstrong, Solid Waste and Recycling manager, these igloos are for the public to dispose of their used motor oil. The used oil will then be turned over to the post energy plant for use as a supplement for natural gas.

He noted that no gases or anti-freeze, etc., are to be dumped into these containers, only motor oil. Also, those disposing their oil in this way, should take their containers with them.

Lt. Col. John Orosz, chief of the Environmental Management Division of the Directorate of Public Works, said that while some Army posts might have a waste collection program, they are most probably not as user friendly for the public as Fort Benning.

In other recycling advances here, the material recovery facility, at the intersection of Old Cusseta Road and Villgas Road in the Harmony Church area, is 75 percent complete, Armstrong said, and it is expected to be in use by June.

Positions for a supervisor and two helpers for the facility are in the process of being graded. He expects the facility to be staffed and taking care of aluminum cans by June 1.

The recycling of bi-metal (tin) cans, three colors of glass (clear, green and brown), newspaper, plastic, cardboard and office paper will begin as soon as the equipment comes in, not later than Oct. 1.

This involves balers, glass crushers, plastic shredders and other miscellaneous equipment.

Curbside recycling pick-up in the post housing areas will also begin at this time.

Another project that Orosz hopes to have operational within the year is a "land farm" in the Harmony Church area.

He said it will be a place where soil contaminated by fuel spills, perhaps from the motor pools or vehicle accidents, is deposited, and then active bacteria is introduced that break down the contaminates through bio-remediation.

The soil will then be tested periodically to see when it is safe to be reused. Currently such soil is handled as hazardous material.

Armstrong said the money brought in by recycling after the cost of operations will be divided in half between safety and environmental projects and the Directorate of Community Activities for use to enhance the quality of life on the installation.

POST BRIEFS

CID seeks perpetrators

The U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Command is seeking individuals responsible for using a saline type solution on coins and using the coins in soft drink machines in an effort to empty the machines of coins. Numerous soft drink machines have been damaged, officials said.

If anyone sees individuals tampering with soft drink machines on Fort Benning in such a manner, call the Fort Benning Military Police at 545-5222 or 545-5223.

Recruiters wanted

Headquarters, U.S. Army Recruiting Command is requesting volunteers to participate in the Hometown Recruiter Assistance Program. Volunteers will be in a permissive temporary duty status at no cost to the government, work 24 hours a week and spend the rest of the time with their family.

During the 16 days at home, participants will be required to help schedule and participate in at least one public affairs type event per week in the community describing experience in the operation and the Army and assisting the local recruiter in generating at least three Army opportunities sales presentations for interested local youth weekly.

Requests may be submitted on a Department of Army Form 4187 with the following information included: full name, rank, Social Security number, unit, age, sex, leave address with ZIP code, leave phone number, high school graduated from and desired duty period.

On a separate sheet of paper, applicants should include the following statement: "I understand that this absence is not directed by any official of the government and I am participating in the HRAP on a volunteer basis. Accordingly, I will not be entitled to reimbursement for travel, per diem, or any other expenses. I understand that I have the right to cancel at any time and return to my regular place of duty."

For more information, call Sina Evans or Marie Lee at 545-1917.

Law Day is Saturday

Saturday marks the 36th annual nationwide observance of Law Day, a day set aside for recognition of the place of law in American life. The Office of the Staff Judge Advocate sponsored a Law Day celebration in Fort Benning Schools with a poster and essay contest. Attorneys spoke to students on this year's theme "Justice for all — All for justice," and assisted classes with mock trial presentations.

The Office of the Staff Judge Advocate hosted a luncheon in conjunction with the Columbus Lawyers Club Tuesday and is holding an open golf tournament at the Follow Me Golf Course at 1 p.m. today.

SJA staff members will perform a mock trial for Faith Middle school seventh-graders in the courtroom of Building 5, May 7 at 9:15 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.

MPs to run May 27

The Military Police Activity will run in Georgia's Law Enforcement Torch Run May 27 to raise money for the Georgia Special Olympics.

Retired plt. sgt. receives award

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

Retired Platoon Sgt. Lonnie Jackson, founder of the Combined Communities of Southeast Columbus, was presented the President's Volunteer Action Award April 22 at the White House by President Bill Clinton.

Jackson developed the organization to improve academics for at-risk students, to fight litter control and to promote voter participation in the community.

CCSC volunteers have been credited with helping reduce the dropout rate in the local district.

Lonnie Jackson is joined by Fort Benning's Dexter School students in taking his anti-litter pledge.

Operation Esprit de Corps, an anti-litter campaign, was also developed by CCSC, and is being replicated throughout the state.

Jackson won the award for his contribution to education. He was one of 20 winners out of nearly 4,300 nominations in 1993.

Businesses get chance to show appreciation

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Military Appreciation Week, celebrated for the first time May 10 to 15, will highlight the importance of military organizations, service members and their families in the tri-community area.

During the week, businesses will have opportunities to show their support.

Several ideas and contacts for involvement are as follows:

- Sponsor an event for the week - Faye Cook 596-8120.
- Provide an exhibit at the Association of the United States Army Picnic (entry form below) - Sgt. Maj. James F. Welburn 545-5777.
- Provide door prizes for the kick-off breakfast - Billy Clarke, 545-4388.
- Display a marquee message: Sharing Their Pride — We Salute The Soldier.
- Recognize employees who are or have been associated with the military.
- Offer military discounts.
- Fly the flag at home or business.
- Display posters - available at the Chamber of Commerce.

Activities culminate May 15 with the annual AUSA picnic.

Delta answers dental plan questions

Health Services Command

Many questions have been raised since the new dental plan for family members went into effect April 1. The following are some of the issues addressed.

• Can I receive treatment from any civilian dentist?

Yes. However, only Delta participating dentists have agreed to certain limits on fees and will submit the claims for you. (Delta refers to the Delta Dental Plan of California that has the government contract to provide the dental plan for family members.)

• What exactly does a $1,000 maximum per patient per year for all services other than orthodontics mean to me?

If you have a root canal treatment and you are billed $600, the plan will generally pay 60 percent of the bill ($360). You will be responsible for $240. At that point, you will still have $640 of your annual maximum available.

• Who is eligible and how long must I remain in the plan?

All personnel presently enrolled in the Delta Dental Plan as well as all service members stationed in the continental United States who have at least 24 months remaining in the service are eligible. The minimum enrollment period is 24 months. After this time, you may remain with the plan or disenroll.

• I have put off having braces put on my child because I heard it would be included in the Delta Dental Plan.

Orthodontics are covered for enrollees under 19 years old. The maximum lifetime benefit is $1,200 per patient. The plan covers 50 percent of fees up to that maximum amount. If a family member was under orthodontic treatment prior to the implementation of the improved dental plan, Delta will pay for 50 percent of the allowable fees for the remaining treatment (up to $1,200).

• Is the plan mandatory?

No, it is not a mandatory program. If you do not wish to participate, you may disenroll by going to your personnel office and completing DD Form 2494. You must do so by July 31. You will receive a full refund for any premiums that were withheld from your pay if you have not used the DDP since the implementation date (April 1, 1993).

• If the plan is not mandatory, why was I automatically enrolled?

The goal in designing the improved Delta Dental Plan was to obtain the best benefit within the limits of the money available. Automatic enrollment was one tool to use in achieving this goal.

• Are participating dentists hard to find?

A list of names of local providers was published in The Bayonet. You can also check with your health benefits adviser or you can call Delta's customer service staff for names. The Delta numbers are:

West of the Mississippi — (916) 381-9368
East of the Mississippi — (313) 489-2240

You may also call your dentist of choice and inquire if he is participating in the plan.

NAF employees win DA awards

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

Two Fort Benning non-appropriated fund activity managers in the Training and Doctrine Command have won awards in the U.S. Army Community and Family Support Center recognition program.

John W. Reynolds, golf club manager at the Follow Me Golf Course, and Jack R. Pines, manager of the Main NCO Club, are two of only four winners in TRADOC.

Reynolds is the recipient of the 1992 Excellence in Management Award.

Pines won the James A. Carroll Jr. Award for Excellence in Club Management. The award is named for the late leader in military food service and club management.

Reynolds manages two 18-hole golf courses in the medium operations category. In 1992, he increased the income of the courses by 15 percent, while he lowered the green fees for junior enlisted soldiers to $5.

"These improvements came about through our continuous five year improvement program," said Reynolds. He said that his preparation for the competition was "many years of experience and continual education in financial management and Professional Golf Association management."

The Main NCO Club, a million-dollar operation, has been managed by Pines for 16 years. He oversaw renovation of the club's kitchen and dining area and added free services to club members in 1992.

Some services now available are notary services and trip planning with maps, mileage charts and directions.

"The club has been profit-making," said Pines. "We saw what was needed (to improve the club), and we've had good participation. When you have good entertainment and good service, people will come," he said.

All four of the TRADOC winners were among 17 chosen by a panel of representatives from major commands and the Community and Family Support Center. There were 30 individuals nominated in all categories.

All the winners will receive awards at the International Military Community Executives Association awards dinner May 21 in Chicago.

Planning is key to smooth, carefree vacation

SatoTravel

Here are a few tips to make your vacation smooth and carefree:

• Keep all of your travel documents, including airline tickets, rental car or hotel vouchers and passports in an envelope or pouch together. Don't put them in your checked luggage.

• Leave an itinerary with flight information and phone numbers where you can be reached with a family member or friend in case of an emergency.

• Make sure all legal and financial documents are in order before leaving. If you travel without your spouse, he or she should know where to find these documents.

COMMUNITY BRIEFS

Curriculum Fair — Fort Benning's Loyd School will have its annual curriculum fair Monday at 6 p.m. According to school officials, the fair provides an opportunity for parents to visit the school and see the many projects worked on throughout the school year. School work and projects will be displayed. Teachers and students will be available to show their work and explain the learning activities. Loyd School family members are invited to attend.

Jobs available — A new company coming to Columbus is interested in hiring 50 to 100 light industrial workers in the next few months.

Military spouses interested in filling out screening applications for employment should stop by the Army Community Services Family Member Employment Assistance Program office next week.

According to Shirley Jarrett of FMEAP, experience is preferred but the company does have a quick start program.

She has no salary information yet or a firm starting date, but those who would like to apply may come to Building 2643 in Soldiers' Plaza between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m., Monday through Friday, to fill out the paperwork.

Book fair — Fort Benning's Loyd School will sponsor a book fair Monday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. and at 6 p.m. and Tuesday to May 7 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. each day in the school's media center. Parents of Loyd students and others wishing to purchase books and materials may drop by the fair to see what's on sale and to purchase reading materials for their youngsters.

Girls Scouts need trainers — The Concharty Council of Girl Scouts is looking for trainers. Volunteers should possess the desire to train adults through activities, leadership qualities, tact, patience, a sense of humor, the ability to communicate effectively and the need to give to the community. For information, call Gloria Bynam at 327-2646.

Cardiac, diabetic support group — A meeting of the cardiac and diabetic support group will be May 17 in the Baugh Conference Room on the second floor of Martin Army Community Hospital at 6 p.m. Group bowling will be at the Mall Bowling Center May 11 and May 25 at 5:30 p.m. For information, call Thomas E. Valitzski at 561-3077.

Food distribution — The U.S. Department of Agriculture will distribute food today and Monday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at community life centers on post. For more information, call your community life center. The numbers are: Bouton Heights, 544-1195; Indianhead Terrace, 545-5940; Custer Terrace, 689-1058; McGraw Manor, 544-1168; and West Main Post, 682-4804.

Volunteers wanted — The Fort Benning Management Association needs volunteers for two-hour shifts on Armed Forces Day, May 15, beginning at 11:30 a.m. This is one of the organization's two fund-raisers, the proceeds of which go to its scholarship fund. Volunteers usually receive a plaque or framed certificate. For more information, call Jim Kvicala at 545-4075 .

• Infant and preschool aquatics program (6 months to 3 years) two classes beginning Tuesday and May 27, 2 to 2:45 p.m., cost - $15.

• Community cardiopulmonary resuscitation, May 19 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

• Standard first aid, May 20 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., cost - $20.

• Cardiopulmonary resuscitation standard first aid instructor course, May 11 (basic course), May 13 and 14 (instructor portion), 7 to 9 p.m., cost - $67.

• Lifeguard instructor class, May 13, 14, 15 and 16, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., cost - $80.

La Leche League to meet — The next meeting of the La Leche League is May 11 from 10 a.m. to noon and from 7 to 8:30 p.m. at St. John United Methodist Church, 6507 Moon Road in Columbus.

Clothing notice — Any clothes or articles left in the laundry and dry cleaners and alteration shops for more than 90 days still may be claimed by calling 682-0562. However, Any items left unclaimed after May 7 will be disposed of in accordance with regulations. The shops are at Kelley Hill, Building 9026; Sand Hill, Building 3218; Military Clothing Sales Store, Building 285; and the Mini Mall, Building 1712.

AA — The Fort Benning Alcoholics Anonymous group meets every Monday, Thursday and Saturday at 7 p.m. in the basement of the Directorate of Community Activities, Building 241. Entrance is in the rear of the building.

Rental shop — The equipment rental shop has relocated to the Mini Mall.

Caveat emptor: Let the buyer (or borrower) beware

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Sharks have been sighted in the tri-city area, but they're not in the Chattahoochee River. They can be found in small buildings under signs reading something like, "Fast Frankie's Drive-Thru Kwik Cash."

While local communities have established strong ties and good relationships with the military, there are some businesses that seem to exist chiefly to take advantage of soldiers.

According to Ann Pratcher, program manager for the Consumer Affairs Financial Assistance Program, she's seen a lot of soldiers caught on a treadmill of exorbitant interest payments.

"They'll go to a place that charges $20 on a $100 loan," Pratcher said, "and write a check post-dated to the next payday. That takes $120 out of their pay, they wind up short again, and go back to borrow more. It's hard to get them to stop, because they have to go cold turkey — they have to do without that amount of money until the next payday."

Pratcher said many such businesses were closed in Phenix City for violation of state loan laws, but some are still operating in Georgia. She points out that at the rate of interest charged for a two-week period — 20 percent — the annual percentage rate would be around 500 percent.

"At one place that was closed down in Phenix City," Pratcher said, "$100,000 was found on the premises. It's obvious they were doing an incredible volume of business.

"The places that are still open are operating under the law that regulates pawn shops," she said, "and I've heard that some of these places will take a pen or pencil in 'pawn.' Basically, they're just getting around the law."

Pratcher said another financial ploy she's hearing more about from her customers is pawning car titles.

"A lot of people are involved in this, and not just locally," she said. "These kinds of places are springing up in other areas close to military installations. What people don't realize with these car title places is they can pawn a car they paid thousands of dollars for and end up losing it for a few hundred dollars."

Jane Winand, chief of Legal Assistance at the Staff Judge Advocate's office, said Georgia law states, "All pawn transactions shall be for 30 day periods but may be extended or continued for additional 30-day periods." The law allows pawnbrokers to charge 25 percent interest for each 30-day period of a 90-day transaction.

What this means to the borrower, said Winand, is that if someone borrows $500 on a car, he must pay $125 monthly in interest. If the loan is extended for two additional 30-day periods, the interest will total $375.

Some title pawning businesses questioned said they do not extend a transaction beyond 90 days. This may be because the law reduces the amount of interest allowable to 12.5 percent after the first 90 days of the transaction.

So on a loan of $500 extended for 90 days at 25 percent interest, the total amount the consumer would pay to reclaim his car title, with principle, would be $875.

Figured at an annual percentage rate, this equals 187.5 percent interest, with a year's interest totaling $937.50.

Winand said borrowers are also subject to additional charges if they fail to redeem their car title during the period of the loan. "Pawnbrokers are allowed by law to charge a repossession fee of between $50 and $250, depending on the distance involved," she said. "They can also charge $5 daily in storage fees."

So a person pawning a car title, who pays interest for three months but cannot pay the principal, may pay a total of $575, including repossession fee and a month's storage — and still lose his car.

Lou Marcotte, president of the Better Business Bureau of West Georgia — East Alabama Inc., said pawn shops are not highly regulated. "Consumer finance companies are overseen by a state agency, and are inspected at least twice a year," he said. "Pawn shops come under the pawn brokerage law, and enforcement is weak."

Marcotte said "pawn your title" businesses are fairly recent, and generally charge significantly higher interest than established pawn shops.

"My advice to consumers," he said, "is to shop around and compare the loan options available to them and what they're paying for the money they're borrowing, and to check the business out with the BBB if they have any questions."

Marcotte said his office seldom receives complaints from people who do business with title pawning businesses.

"These are often people who can't get loans from consumer finance companies," he said, "and they seem to accept the terms of the businesses they can borrow from. I would urge people who feel they haven't been treated fairly to contact the BBB and file a complaint."

CRIME WATCH

Military Police Activity

The following entries were taken from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from April 13 to 19. Such entries may be incomplete and are not the adjudication of the guilt or innocence of any person.

The hot topic of the week is the Law Enforcement Explorers Post 988, which was formed on Fort Benning in August. The Law Enforcement Explorers is open to individuals 14 to 21, male or female, who may be interested in a career in law enforcement or who would like to see what a law enforcement officer does. Classes are taught on law enforcement subjects by trained professionals. Participants are encouraged to participate in community service projects, after which they can ride along with the Military Police as they perform their duties. Anyone interested in joining Post 988 should call Maj. Terry R. Driskill at 545-6469 or Sgt. 1st Class Bobby E. Jones at 545-7115.

• A civilian was charged with traffic violations and possession of marijuana after crossing two lanes of traffic and striking an embankment. Investigations revealed the civilian had three bags of marijuana inside the vehicle.

• A juvenile family member was charged with assault after she struck another juvenile family member in the head with a combination lock.

• A Marine lance corporal was charged with involuntary manslaughter after discharging a round from his issued 9mm pistol that struck another lance corporal. The wounded Marine died the next day.

• A sergeant was charged with driving under the influence, reckless driving, speeding, fleeing and eluding and other traffic violations after he was observed speeding on I-185.

• This week's booby prize is awarded to a private first class who was discarding trash onto the roadway. A captain was following the private first class' vehicle on post when he observed the occupants discarding trash onto the roadway. He followed the vehicle off post until it stopped. The occupants of the vehicle, a private first class and a family member daughter, proceeded to direct a barrage of profanity toward the captain. The captain contacted the Military Police, who in turn contacted the Columbus Police Department and requested that the occupants and vehicle be escorted back to post boundaries. Upon arrival to post, the private first class jumped from his moving vehicle and fled on foot, but he was later apprehended at his unit. The pair was charged with disrespect toward a commissioned officer, littering on a public highway and giving false information to a law enforcement officer.

Other activities included 11 traffic accidents and four reports of shoplifting at facilities on post. There were six cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, nine cases of larceny of private property and four cases of larceny of government property.

Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best — Give Crime Arrest." Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5223 or the "Crime in Progress" line at 545-2222.

Army personnel may not engage in conflicts of interest

Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Editor's note: This is the last in a series of articles on the new "Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch," which became effective in February.

Army personnel may not engage in outside employment or activities that conflict with their duties. An activity conflicts if it is prohibited by law, agency regulation or would require the employee's disqualification from a central or crucial duty.

Prior approval of outside employment is not required by the regulation, but an agency's own regulations may require some or all personnel to obtain prior approval.

Under the Office of Government Ethics new regulation, Army personnel generally may not engage in outside activities that involve selling the information and work product developed in the course of their official duties.

Federal employees usually may not receive compensation for teaching, speaking or writing that relates to their official duties. This includes situations where:

• The activity is done as part of one's official duties.

• Invitations to engage in the activity was extended due to the employees' official positions rather than their subject matter expertise.

• An invitation to engage in the activity was extended by one who has an interest in how the employee performs official duties.

• The information to be conveyed draws substantially on ideas or data that are nonpublic information.

• The subject matter of the presentation focuses mainly on the employee's official duties within the past year or any ongoing or announced program or operation of the employee's agency.

As an exception, employees may engage in teaching that relates to their official duties where the teaching is part of a regularly established curriculum at an accredited academic institution or school.

When teaching, speaking or writing on a subject not related to official duties, employees may not use or permit the use of their title or official position in connection with or in promotion of such activity.

However, an employee's title or official position may be included among biographical information used for identification, so long as it is given no more prominence than any other detail.

Title or position may be included in an article published in a scientific or professional journal, so long as a disclaimer satisfactory to the agency is included.

Finally, an employee's title may be used as a general term of address, if that would be ordinary under the circumstances (such as military grade).

The receipt of honoraria is covered by separate laws and regulations.

Employees may not participate in fund raising in their official capacity unless specifically authorized to do so by statute, executive order or regulation. When fund raising in a personal capacity, employees may not solicit from a subordinate, a Department of Defense contractor or anyone who could be affected by performance of the employee's official duties.

Participation in fund raising includes not only personal solicitation, but also includes such activities as serving as an honorary chairperson, giving a speech, being listed in the official program or sitting at the head table.

Employees may not allow their title or official position to be used in fund-raising activities. Employees may attend fund-raising events, so long as their attendance is not used to promote the event.

The regulation also provides that employees will satisfy their just financial obligations.

Army personnel must make good-faith efforts to pay legitimate financial obligations. Where there is a dispute over a debt, the Army is not required to determine the validity or amount of the debt or to attempt to enforce payment.

This article is not a comprehensive statement of the regulation.

Questions about the regulation and its applicability to specific factual situations should be addressed to the installation ethics counselor who can be reached at 545-3285.

PET OF THE WEEK

These playful male tabbies are looking for homes. They are black and gray and are approximately 10 weeks old. For more information, contact the Veterinary Services Office in Building 265 at 545-1127. Hours are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:30 am. and 12:45 to 3 p.m. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

If you have lost a pet, check the stray impoundment facility in Building 283. Stray pets are given three working days to be claimed from the time they are picked up by animal control personnel. If the pets are not claimed, they become government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies are the only way Veterinary Services can contact the owner. Pet owners should register pets and update their records when changes occur.

Raymond Burr returns as 'Ironside'

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

Having given renewed life to "Perry Mason," one of television's top actors is now reviving his other classic series character.

SPOTLIGHT

What: "Ironside"
When: Tuesday, 8 p.m. on NBC

Raymond Burr spent nine seasons as novelist Erle Stanley Gardner's famed attorney — a part he has been playing again in a hugely successful set of TV-movie sequels — then returned to weekly work, just one year after ending that show in 1966, as San Francisco's wheelchair-bound chief of detectives. "Ironside" proved to be yet another durable hit for Burr, lasting more than seven seasons, and he's reprising that title role.

In Tuesday's aptly titled NBC movie "The Return of Ironside," the character emerges from retirement to help choose the successor to the slain police chief of Denver (where the story was filmed) ... with one of the main contenders being his old police crony Ed Brown (Don Galloway, in his original role.) However, he also uncovers the unsettling possibility that the daughter (Perrey Reeves) of ex-policewoman Eve Whitfield (fellow returnee Barbara Anderson) might be connected to two other murders.

Raymond Burr

Don Mitchell and Elizabeth Baur also repeat their "Ironside" series roles as Mark Sanger and Fran Belding, with Cliff Gorman appearing as another candidate for the top-cop job. Co-written by TV veteran William Read Woodfield, the tale includes another major figure: Ironside's wife, Katherine, played by Dana Wynter.

This week's film brings the history of "Ironside" full-circle in a sense, since the long-running show was spun off from one of the very first made-for-television movies. "I loved the cast, and I loved what we were doing, and I always wanted a special show to come out of that," the pleasant and authoritative Burr reflects. "After great persuasion on my part, we opened each season of 'Ironside' with a two-hour episode, but that was done within the (series) constraints and budget.

"This new two-hour show had a bit more of a budget put toward it, and some better planning as far as the story was concerned, and I'm very pleased with the outcome. That's how I've always wanted the (newer) 'Perry Masons' to be, as well. You always want something to be better than it is, but I think the audience will be pleased with this."

After doing 25 "Perry Mason" movies since 1985, Burr doesn't discount the notion that "Ironside" might follow a similar pattern of resurfacing through a number of new films. "I think we have to wait to see what the audience tells us," he cautions, "but we're planning to do two 'Perry Masons' a year from now on (instead of the three that have been made each season), so I think the door is open for more 'Ironsides'."

As enjoyable as he has found the opportunities to play both of those roles again, Burr concludes,"It's not an easy thing. I'm not getting any younger."

Fort Benning honors outstanding civilian volunteers

By Lawrence Hughes
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning held a special ceremony April 20 for hundreds of the post's special workers. Next week, the U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel's "Fort Benning Today" will feature the post's volunteer recognition ceremony at Riverside, home of Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. and Linda White.

Also highlighted will be the success of Dexter School and Faith Middle School in the Odyssey of the Mind competition. The Fort Benning students are the representatives for Georgia in the upcoming national competition, and they will travel to the University of Maryland to vie for the national title. This is a first-time win for Dexter and the seventh for the Faith team.

USAIC TV Schedule
Fort Benning Today: 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 1:30 to 2 p.m.
Specials: 2 to 4:30 p.m.

"Fort Benning Today" will also air special news announcements and highlight post events. Post movie previews will be shown, in addition to several health and information specials and music and news from Soldiers Radio Satellite Network. Post events will be shown on the Fort Benning Community Bulletin Board.

If you are a subscriber to Fort Benning Cable, you can watch USAIC TV on Channel 3, 24 hours a day. Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:26, 7:56, 8:26 and 8:56 on WLTZ TV-38. Call 545-2201 for more information.

'Macbeth' comes to Barnsley Gardens

Woodlands, Ga.

Shakespeare's most famous tragedy, "Macbeth," will find a setting staged in the ruins of Godfrey Barnsley's castle May 7 and 8 at Barnsley Gardens at Woodlands, Ga.

This production of "Macbeth" is presented by The Pumphouse Players Inc., the community theatre troupe of Cartersville, Ga. The curtain will rise at 7 p.m. There will be a special backstage dinner theatre both evenings before the performance at 6 p.m. Each patron will receive a gourmet picnic basket filled with an assortment of cheeses, pasta salad with basil cream sauce and more.

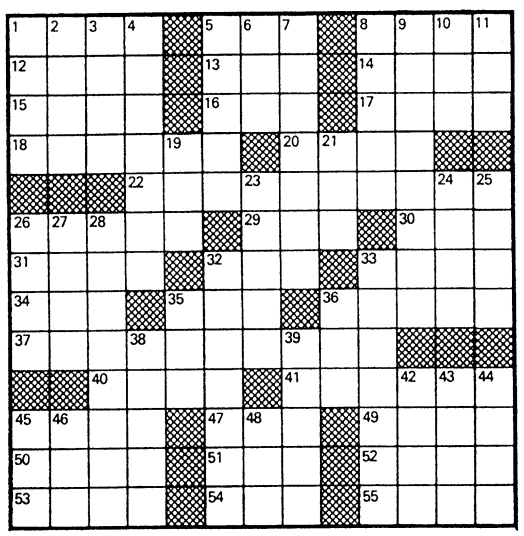
General admission is $12 per person. The cost of the backstage dinner theatre is $22 per person that includes reserved seating for the production. Tickets may be purchased at the Barnsley Gardens Gift Shop in person or charged by phone by calling (404) 773-1843.

For more information, call The Pumphouse Players at (404) 387-2610.

Lasershow '93 salutes artists

Georgia's Stone Mountain Park

Two Georgia traditions combine in Stone Mountain Park's Lasershow '93 tonight — lasers and fireworks. Lasershow '93, showcases the people, the talent, and the cultural heritage of Georgia.



Lasershow '93 salutes some of the many artists who have created Georgia's musical and cultural heritage. Some of the artists include singer James Brown from Augusta, the sophisticated Atlanta Rhythm Section from the state's capital city, and honky tonkin' Alan Jackson from Newnan, Ga. — just to name a few.

Lasershow '93 presents many diverse artists from Georgia's music industry.

Lasershow '93 opens today at 9:30 p.m. as a kickoff to Stone Mountain Park's 10th Annual Springfest. This premier show is followed by a Fireworks Extravaganza sponsored by Diet Coke. Lasershow '93 will show nightly at 9:30 p.m. throughout the summer.

Columbus College hosts violinist

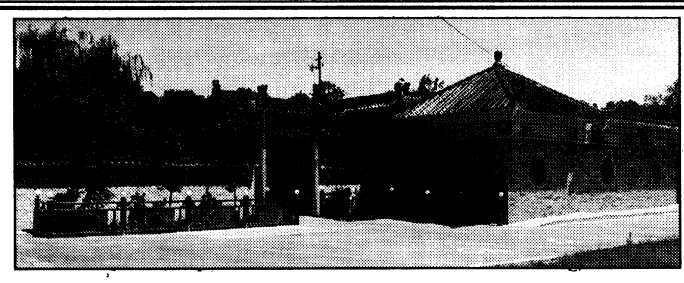
Columbus College

Grammy nominee Robert McDuffie will present a concert at Columbus College Sunday at 3 p.m. in the college's Fine Arts Hall auditorium.

Honored by Gov. Zell Miller as an outstanding Georgian, McDuffie is a Macon native who performs more than 100 concerts worldwide each season, including concerto appearances, solo recitals and chamber music collaborations.

He has appeared as soloist with many of the world's finest orchestras including the symphony orchestras of Chicago, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, San Francisco, Montreal, St. Louis, Houston, Atlanta, Baltimore, Cincinnati, Los Angeles and St. Paul, as well as with the Orchestra Teatro La Scala, Moscow State Orchestra, Danish National Radio Symphony Orchestra, and the Czech Philharmonic Orchestra.

One of America's leading violinists, he is a member of the Board of Directors of the Harlem School of the Arts, and has been profiled by NBC's "Today Show," CBS' "Sunday Morning" and the Wall Street Journal.



He has performed three private recitals for the U.S. Supreme Court and toured the U.S. with the Warsaw Sinfonia and Europe with the Netherlands Chamber Orchestra. A highlight of his recent concert tour of North America with the Prague Chamber Orchestra included the Great Performers Series of Lincoln Center in New York City.

McDuffie's recording of the William Schuman violin concerto and Leonard Bernstein's Serenade earned him a 1990 Grammy Award nomination. His concert is sponsored by Mr. and Mrs. A. Henry Nordhausen and presented by Columbus College's Schwob Department of Music.

For more information, contact the college's music department at 568-2049.

Wind ensemble to perform Mon.

Columbus College

Columbus, Ga.— The Columbus College Symphonic Wind Ensemble, under the direction of Dr. William Fry, will present a program Monday at 8 p.m. in the college's Fine Arts Hall auditorium.

Titled "An American Pageant," the program will feature music by contemporary and historical American composers. Opening with an American salute by Morton Gould, the program also will include "Tulsa: A Symphonic Portrait in Oil," composed by Don Gillis; and "Aspen Jubilee" by Ron Nelson.

Special guest conductor Col. Hal Gibson, professor emeritus of bands at Columbus College and former director of the U.S. Army Field Band, will conduct "Coat of Arms March" composed by George Kenny.

The ensemble will perform "Emblems," Aaron Copland's first work originally written for band. Graduate assistant conductor Kathy Hesler will conduct "Broadway Show Stoppers Overture," a showcase for some of the great moments in American musical theatre. The concert will conclude with "Sousa!," arranged by Warren Barker

Admission to the concert is free and open to the public.

For information, contact the college's Schwob Department of Music at 568-2049.

Park to highlight Southern cooking

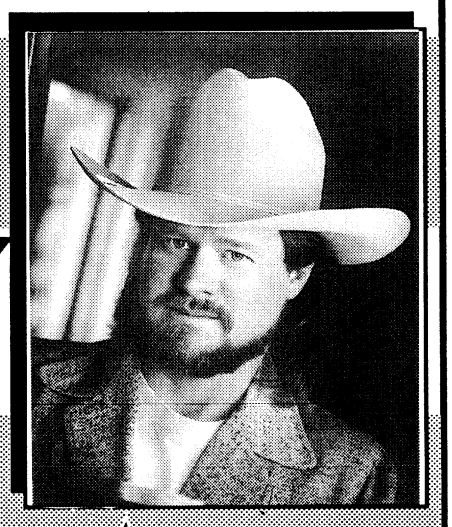
Georgia's Stone Mountain Park

During Memorial Day weekend, May 29 through 31, at Georgia's Stone Mountain Park, one will be able to let their senses soar with the flavor of southern food, music, crafts and adventure. From collard greens to noveau grits, it will all be at the annual Taste of the South. Experience a variety of flavors all in one setting as the South assembles at the Fireside Meadow and each southern state showcases its finest traditions.

First is food. Bring a hearty appetite for some of the best cuisine imaginable. Chefs from throughout the South are coming to the park preparing the dishes, which have made their states famous. Feast on jambalaya, boudin and crawfish from Louisiana; fried catfish, pecan pie and mud pie from Mississippi; apple cider, trout, eastern barbecue, low country boil, she-crab soup and sweet potato pie from the Carolinas; and pinto beans with cornbread, chili and fried chicken from Alabama.

Barbecue, brunswick stew, fried green tomatoes, Vidalia onion rings, peanuts and peach pie from Georgia will be there; Cuban sandwiches, paella, arroz con pollo, key lime pie and citrus sensations from Florida; and Cherokee fried bread, country ham and moon pies from Tennessee.

Enjoy the food while listening to the sounds of the South. For three full days, 10 a.m. until 6 p.m., the stages will rock with a fabulous variety of foot tapping music. Among the headliners are Preservation Hall Jazz, Billy Joe Royal and the Embers. Filling out the line up are Carolina beach music, Memphis blues, country, southern rock, and Louisiana zydeco bands. Children may want to join in the fun on a special dance stage where they can do their own rendition of the "Chicken Dance" with the Young and Tender chicken himself. Demonstrating artisans from each state will create their art right before your eyes.



Ski down a replica of a Tennessee slope; race Louisiana crawfish; have your picture taken in an Alabama racecar; or shag with the best. Taste of the South brings the best in food and entertainment to one place. With the travel season in full swing, tourism professionals create glimpses into each state helping you make the best of your vacation or next long weekend.

Mark your calendar for May 29 through May 31 and plan to enjoy the new event on the Stone Mountain Park event line-up.

Entry into the park requires a valid 1993 parking permit, $5 daily or $20 annual. There is no charge for the festival. Food tickets will be sold for use at all state food booths. For information, call (404) 498-5602.

Ranger competition tests the best

2-man teams sweat it out

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

The creme de la creme of infantry, airborne and rangers from the continental United States, Alaska and Hawaii, met at Fort Benning April 30 through Sunday to measure themselves against the highest standards — the standards of the 11th annual David E. Grange Jr. Best Ranger Competition.

Contestants included soldiers from specialist to master sergeant as well as a warrant officer, first and second lieutenants and captains. Forty-six teams of two aspired to reach the highest rank — the "best."

The competition, named for retired Lt. Gen. David E. Grange Jr., spanned 60 hours of mental and physical effort as competitors ran, rowed, swam, crawled, shot and sweated their way to the finish line.

"This competition is the highlight of our year," said Ranger Training Brigade Commander Col. Michael V. Church. "By all accounts, this was the smoothest event we've ever had — thanks largely to my 'ranger guru,' Harry Ikner."

Ikner, who works in the brigade Operations Office, said the presence of last year's winners, Sgts. 1st Class Tom W. Wilburn and Alvin M. Brashier, helped ensure the success of this year's competition.

"They knew how everything was supposed to run," said Ikner, "and they were a big help to me and the cadre as well as to this year's competitors."

Half of the 46 starting teams completed all of the events, which began with a physical training test and culminated in a 2.7-mile buddy run. Several events, including the spot parachute jump, forced road march and helocast swim, require participants to carry or otherwise transport combat equipment.

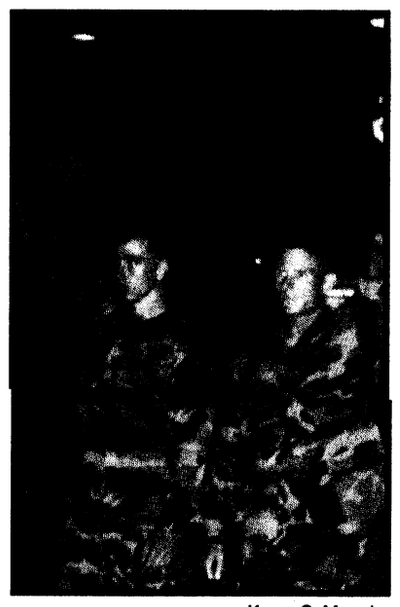
Church said safety was a primary consideration in planning the events. "With tasks like these, there's always some risk," he said, "but we were covered as much as we could be. We did a safety-risk analysis months before the competition, and everything was planned with safety in mind.

"Another thing that was good about this year," said Church, "was that we had a team of five doctors on rotation throughout the events. They said the competitors' feet — always the first thing to go in a ranger — were in better shape this year than last. The doctors were proactive; every time the competitors stopped to rest or re-fit, they would go in and check them over."

When the last finish line was reached, top score went to the team of Capt. Blain A. Reeves and Staff Sgt. Erik L. Wilson, both of the 4th Ranger Training Battalion. Reeves is the first officer ever to win top honors in the contest.

Second, third and fourth places were won by teams representing the 25th Infantry Division, Schofield Barracks, Hawaii; while fifth place went to representatives of Fort Benning's 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment.

Grange, who attended the events named in his honor and spoke at the awards ceremony Monday, said the competitors were "the finest soldiers in America — the finest in the world."



"If I had a son or daughter going into today's Army," said Grange, "it would be a comfort knowing he or she was being led by a ranger. Whether they wear a captain's bars or corporal's stripes, these rangers are the highest caliber soldiers in our military."

Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, who also attended the competition, congratulated all the competitors on their achievement. "You are our very best," he said. "You are all winners — there are no better soldiers anywhere in the world."

SSG to roller-skate for AER

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

Roller-skating from Macon to Fort Benning to raise money for Army Emergency Relief, Staff Sgt. Albert Jones will end his journey on Armed Forces Day, May 15, in front of Infantry Hall, according to Sgt. 1st Class Marmion Montgomery, AER campaign coordinator.

Pledges for Jones are being accepted at AER campaign headquarters, Building 2643 in Soldiers' Plaza.

Units also may pick up pledge sheets there to sign up sponsors for the skater.

Contact people regarding the event are Montgomery or Capt. Thomas L. McCafferty.

Montgomery noted that Jones offered to do this as a special fund-raising event for AER.

The campaign is currently at $147,252 of its $180,000 goal.

AER is an emergency financial organization that helps Army active duty personnel, family members, retirees, widows and members of the U.S. National Guard and Reserve.

Soldiers should see their unit AER project officers to give to this annual campaign.

Since 1942, AER has made no-interest loans and grants helping more than 2 million people with more than $410 million.

Loans may be made for such emergency expenses as medical, travel, food, rent or utilities.

According to Alfonso Deane, AER campaign officer and financial counselor, funds cannot be used for nonessential items such as legal expenses, purchases, financing, covering bad checks or paying credit bills.

Post civilians take early outs

By Cynthia Barnes
Bayonet assistant editor

Approximately 350 civilian Fort Benning employees took advantage of voluntary separation programs recently offered to Department of Defense employees, according to Gary Burkhalter, senior personnel staffing specialist, Recruitment and Placement Division, Directorate of Civilian Personnel.

About a month ago, authority to approve voluntary early retirement and voluntary separation for civilian employees was granted to Fort Benning's commanding general, Maj. Gen Jerry A. White, for Training and Doctrine Command and Health Services Command activities.

With almost 300 employees leaving from TRADOC and the rest from HSC, the positions affected covered a spectrum of jobs and grade levels on this installation, said Burkhalter.

The purpose of these programs is to assist in the overall downsizing of the Department of Defense, said Burkhalter.

"Everyone who is leaving is saving jobs," he said. "Retirement payments are paid by Office of Personnel Management, not DoD, so it is quite a budget savings.

The VSI is a new program under which eligible employees can receive up to $25,000 or what they would have received for severance pay at the time they left.

With VERA, employees were allowed to retire prior to the retirement age and years of service and still receive benefits. In doing so, they take a pension reduction of 2 percent per year for every year below the age of 55. To be eligible for VERA, employees had to be 50 years old with 20 years of service or any age with 25 years of service.

"Some people were actually eligible for optional retirement already," said Burkhalter, "so they will

Civilian, military personnel win awards

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning's civilian personnel services and military personnel services were named the best in the Army-wide Communities of Excellence competition.

The deputy chief of staff for personnel, Lt. Gen. Thomas P. Carney, recently announced the post as winners of the 1992/1993 Personnel Service Awards.

Each award-winning activity will receive $50,000 and a commemorative plaque for excellence in the competition.

Gary Burkhalter, senior personnel staffing specialist at the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, said that his activity deals with all the personnel needs of the civil service work force and more than 750 non-appropriated fund workers on Fort Benning.

"All of our personnel are technically proficient and dedicated," said Judith Pennington, chief of personnel management and systems support division. "We (the Directorate of Civilian Personnel) are better because

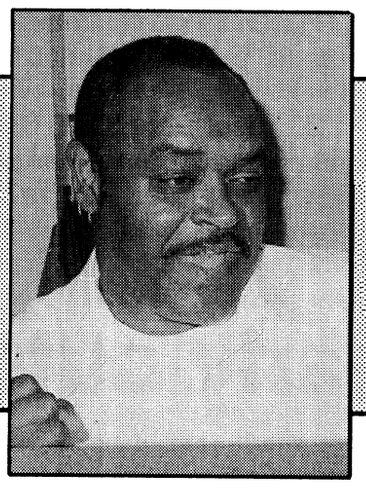
How will the early retirements affect your job?

Ann Martin, project clerk, Directorate of Public Works— "I have assumed the responsibilities of three retirees, so I now have the combined duties of four jobs. But I think I can handle it."

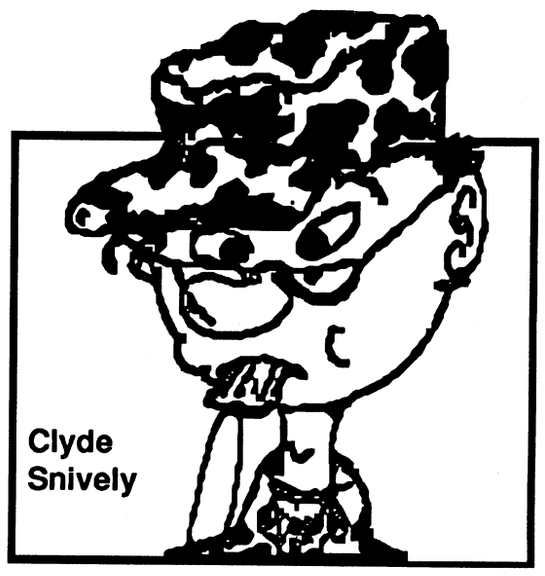


Linda E. Johnson, automation clerk, Directorate of Public Works — "It's affected us profoundly — we lost four major people in the office and are having to take up the slack. Of course, we're finding out how much we still need to learn, but we're hanging in there."

Ben Maxham, contract administrator, Directorate of Contracting — "Early retirements are going to increase our workload eventually."

Sgt. 1st Class Kenneth W. Dowdy, Office of Infantry Proponency — " It hasn't affected me yet. I have 18 1/2 years in, and I'm getting ready to retire."

Thomas F. Zachery, logistics management specialist, Directorate of Logistics — "Tm not one of those affected, but I wish I was. It's a very good retirement incentive."



Patricia P., Ellis, chief, Automated Installation Property Book, Directorate of Logistics — "It has affected me as a supervisor. I had four people retire. But, if you're eligible, I can't blame you for doing it."

Post loses 7,500 years of experience

COMMENTARY

Clyde Snively

Sob. Two of my favorite people took advantage of the early retirement program and up and left.

Paul and Sarah Jane were much like the rest of the Fort Benning work force.

They were dedicated public servants. They did their jobs. They helped others do theirs. They were uncomplaining, and they were fun to be around.

In other words, they were much like the rest of the Fort Benning civilian work force.

I don't know about the rest of you soldiers; but, when I go to an office on post, I feel kind of intimidated. You see all these people working hard at computers, answering phones, filling out forms and you get kind of reluctant to break in for your petty problems.

But rarely have I found a civilian employee who treated me like I was a burden instead of a valued customer.

Sure, there are a few who will continue to talk to their buds on the phone while you stand in front of their desks, shifting weight from one foot to another.

There are a few who'll be real curt and treat you like you're dumber than moss and give you that "why are you bothering me?" attitude.

But most throw out the red carpet. They answer our dumbest questions as though that was the smartest and best question they'd had all day.

And they won't let you leave until they feel absolutely sure that you know what you're supposed to do and know where you need to go next.

In other words, they treat us like their jobs depended on us — which they do.

Paul and Sarah Jane were that way.

They always had a pleasant smile for everyone. And no matter how many times I might ask Paul the same question, he'd always give me his full attention and answer that question as though that was the first time he'd heard it.

He'd bring flowers in to work from his garden (not for me, stupid) and the best pecan brittle you've ever tasted.

A guy like that you could excuse snoring during his lunch time naps.

Sarah Jane was much like Paul, always trying to help others even if coming up with jump slots drove her nuts once a year.

Those of us left at Fort Benning have a lot of slack to take up. Many years of experience are walking out our doors for the last time.

We, the military and civilian stay-behind force, will need to be real patient with one another as we learn new jobs and new ways to do things.

We're going to have to recognize that processing some paper work or getting something fixed will more than likely take longer, or it may not get done at all, for there might not be anyone around to do it.

Just think about this, if the average number of years of service for each employee getting out is 25, with 300 plus civilians leaving, the number of years of experience comes out to 7,500 years.

Who or what do you know that's been around that long? Recorded history hadn't even started that far back. The Sumerians didn't dream up their form of writing until about 6,000 years ago. The pyramids are only about 5,000 years old.

So you can see, we've got a lot of catching up to do if we're going to keep Fort Benning on an even keel.

As for me, I'm going out to find two more people to read my column. I drop below 10 and I'm outta here.

Conference, rangers a little too high-speed

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Karen S. Morarie

COMMENTARY

I've exceeded my hoo-ah capacity.

In the last week, we've covered the Infantry Conference, with a million generals in attendance; the Doughboy Award, presented to All-Star Ranger retired Lt. Gen. David E. Grange; and the Best Ranger Competition, with 92 industrial-strength soldiers and officers.

I've learned something interesting, though, creeping around in awe of all these demi-gods.

They're human.

Yes, those rangers can keep going long after a normal person would have just dropped dead, but the 60-hour competition does take its toll.

Teams that start out the best of friends, and are all smiles at the awards ceremony afterward, get a little testy on about the third day — say, at the Darby Queen obstacle course.

"Get your @!# up here! Don't you quit on me now — I didn't quit on you during the road march!"

Still, they're always there to help each other out. Whether a buddy needs a hand or a boot, the rangers stick together.

Speaking of helping out, some of the most amazing people out there were the testers and other cadre who made sure everything went off without a hitch.

They spent their three days in the woods, too. They provided encouragement and support for the contestants, kept the wheels turning as they transitioned between events, and generally did all the behind-the-scenes work that people only notice if it isn't perfect.

I owe thanks to one ranger. Covering the Darby Queen, I left my camera bag near the beginning of the course while I ran after the contestants to shoot photos.

While I walked back up the course afterward, huffing and puffing, a staff sergeant came down the trail and handed me the bag.

I thanked him, but didn't notice until later that he had squared the bag away — it was nice and neat, which it had never been before. I know these men are tough, but straightening up my equipment takes courage (and a strong stomach.)

The competition also offered a chance for family members to see what their husbands, sons and fathers spend their time doing.

The observers seemed to enjoy cheering on their favorites — I heard one or two ranger wives who should seriously consider drill sergeant school.

The spectators having the most fun were probably the children, who were swinging from the bleachers and chasing madly all over the place. Many of them wore shirts emblazoned, "My Daddy is a Ranger."

You'd never know it.

Anyway, three days of following them, two ceremonies including the legendary super-ranger Grange, and three days of the Infantry Conference dodging stars has left me beat.

I need a break from the high-speed stuff. Maybe my editor will assign me to pet of the week for a while.

CG proclaims Asian American/Pacific Islander month

PROCLAMATION

In recognition of Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders and our nation's ethnic and national diversity, the month of May is proclaimed Asian American/Pacific Islander Heritage Month.

The theme for this year's observance is "Harmony in Diversity."

The United States as a nation is comprised almost entirely of immigrants and their descendants.

There are now more than 4 million Americans who trace their ancestry to Asia or the Pacific Islands. Their history is one of proud accomplishment with many contributions to the arts, literature, science, agriculture, industry, commerce and the armed forces of the United States.

Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders have contributed significantly in the struggle for America's national goals and in the quest for freedom and opportunity.

Asian American/Pacific Islander Heritage Month fosters an increased national awareness of the history and contributions of these people. It also inspires a renewed sense of pride among Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders.

I encourage everyone to enjoy activities here at Fort Benning during "Asian American/Pacific Islander Heritage Month."

Post receives kudos for excellence awards

Congratulations on Fort Benning's selection as the winner for both the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel's Military Personnel Services Award and the Civilian Personnel Services Award.

Your people have done an excellent job and are to be commended for their hard work.

Few things affect our soldiers and civilians more than military personnel and civilian personnel offices. Your two activities have gone above and beyond in providing quality services. I hope to be able to personally present the plaques in the near future.

Lt. Gen. Thomas P. Carney
U.S. Army deputy chief of staff for Personnel

Congratulations to all the great people at Fort Benning on the post's selection as the Army Communities of Excellence large continental United States award winner. Fort Benning's selection re-emphasizes that excellence starts at the "Home of the Infantry."

Lt. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza
Commander, I Corps and Fort Lewis, Wash.

Infantry leaders plan for future

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

This year's Infantry Conference is history, but much of its effect is still to come.

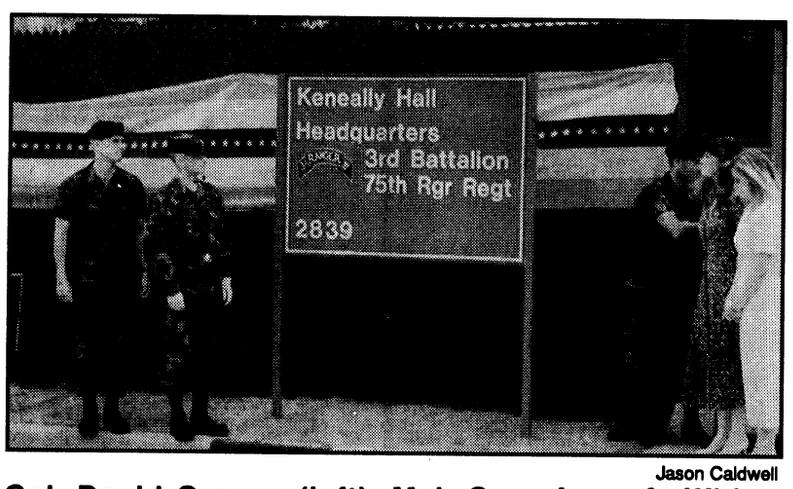
The theme of the gathering was "Infantry: Centerpiece of a Force Projection Army." Speeches by major commanders of the infantry; displays of new gear and weapons systems employing state-of-the-art technologies; and demonstrations of Dismounted Warfighting Battle Lab equipment pointed out the present and future role of the infantry.

"We must provide our men and women the very best tools available," said U.S. Army Special Operations Commander Gen. Carl W. Stiner. "We rely on the ingenuity and productivity of American industry to keep us in the forefront of military capability, not only in wartime, but in peacetime humanitarian operations as well."

Fort Benning's Dismounted Warfighting Battle Lab presentation was one of the centerpieces of the conference, focusing on the ability of troops to "deploy, win decisively and re-deploy," according to Lt. Col. Arnold Canada, director of the lab. Enhanced weapons, target identification and acquisition, and soldier survivability were elements of the presentation.

From Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White's welcoming address to the concluding speech given by Gen. J. H. Binford Peay III, vice chief of staff of the Army, the conference seemed infused with a vision of a lean, mobile, technically proficient infantry force.

"Our major concerns are the lethality, survivability, and quality of life of our soldiers," said White. "As downsizing continues and we evolve into a smaller Army, I think the infantry continues to be in good shape."



"The question," said Peay, "is, how do we adapt to the changing world so we can continue to serve?"

"In the years since John Wayne filmed at Fort Benning," said Peay, "the Cold War has colored our existence. Our focus was preparing for war in Europe.

"Now, with no other recognizable super power and with international boundaries shifting rapidly," he continued, "we must concentrate on three areas."

Peay named changes in political structure, changes in technologies, and shifts in national interests and technologies as the major factors affecting the infantry force.

"The time has not come to say that everything is changing," he said, "because several aspects of warfare are unchanging. No matter how much digitized, computerized or laser equipment our soldiers carry, it can't replace leadership, courage and unit cohesion."

Rangers remember fallen commander

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

Rangers of 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment honored the late Col. John T. Keneally with a dedication in his honor.

April 24 marked a day of solemn remembrance for rangers of the 75th, dedicating 3rd Battalion's Keneally Hall.

Noted guests of honor at the ceremony included Keneally's wife, Barbara; his two daughters, Jennifer Gant and Kathleen Keneally; his brother, Bob Keneally; his sister, Joan Keneally-Nies; and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John T. Keneally.

Grief seemed to hang on the audience as the ceremony opened with an invocation by Chaplain (Capt.) David Moran. Lt. Col. Danny McKnight, 3rd Battalion commander, and Col. David L. Grange, commander of the 75th, followed the chaplain with their own remarks and the introduction of the speaker for the day.

Expressing insight into the personal view of the late colonel, his wife took the podium as the featured speaker with her remarks.

Residing as host officer of the ceremony was McKnight, with Maj. Ronald Russell, 3rd Battalion's executive officer, acting as commander of the troops in the ceremony.

Col. Keneally graduated from Seton Hall University in New Jersey and was commissioned an infantry officer through the Reserve Officer's Training Corps in May of 1971. He later received a master of arts degree in Management from Central Michigan University.

Keneally was awarded the Legion of Merit with oak leaf cluster, Meritorious Service Medal with two oak leaf clusters, Army Commendation Medal with oak leaf cluster and the Army Achievement medal with oak leaf cluster.

Keneally is survived by his brother Kevin Keneally in addition to the honored guests present.

Infantry all-star three-star wins Doughboy Award

Karen S. Morarie

Gen. J. H. Binford Peay III, Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White and retired Lt. Gen. David E. George Jr. attend the ceremony.

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning witnessed his earning of his airborne wings, his first promotion — to private first class — and his last promotion, when he was made lieutenant general.

Thursday, another honor was presented to retired Lt. Gen. David E. Grange Jr. when he received this year's Doughboy Award.

Grange stood in front of ranks of soldiers and a crowd of admirers on York Field to receive his trophy from Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White and Gen. J. H. Binford Peay III, vice chief of staff of the Army.

"Six weeks from today," said Grange, "I'll celebrate the 50th year since I had the privilege to become an American soldier. Four days after my swearing in at Camp Upton, N.Y., I arrived in Georgia and joined the 2nd Battalion of the 517th Parachute Infantry.

"I was issued the overseas hat," he continued, "with the blue braid and crossed rifles of an infantryman. It was then that I passed through the first gate of a tremendous life with the United States Army in the infantry."

That life included service in Europe during World War II, two tours in Korea and three in Vietnam. He also served as commanding general at the U.S. Army Readiness and Mobilization Region VIII, Headquarters in Denver, Colo.; the 2nd Infantry Division in Korea; the Army Infantry Center at Fort Benning; and at the 6th U.S. Army, Presidio of San Francisco, Calif.

Grange's military awards include the Defense Distinguished Service Medal, Army Distinguished Service Medal, Silver Star with two oak leaf clusters, Legion of Merit with one oak leaf cluster, Distinguished Flying Cross, Soldier's Medal, 28 awards of the Air Medal with "V" device, Bronze Star Medal with "V" device and fourth oak leaf cluster, Purple Heart, campaign and service medals, Master Parachutist Badge with three combat jumps, three awards of the Combat Infantryman Badge, Special Forces Tab and the Ranger Tab. His foreign awards and decorations include the French Legion of Honor in Degree of Officer, Korean Wharang Medal with Gold Star and Kuksun Medal.

Grange and his wife, Lois, have three children: Col. David Lawrence, 75th Ranger Regiment commander; Suzanne Elizabeth and Henrietta Marie.

Post environmentalists learn about preservation

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

Taking into account the effect to historic buildings, structures, sites, objects and districts will be critical for Fort Benning personnel in the future as they consider demolition, renovation and construction, according to representatives from the Georgia State Historic Preservation Office.

Mike Miller, architect for the preservation office, noted that while his office cannot force economic hardship on the post to restore historical places, it can enforce compliance with Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act, which states that federal agencies, prior to expending funds or issuing licenses, must prove that they have considered the effects of any such undertaking.

To ignore this complete process, according to Jeff Durbin, the office's Review and Compliance Coordinator, is a serious matter about which the secretary of the Army would be notified, and the post would be subject to litigation by private citizens.

Fort Benning Directorate of Public Works personnel learned of the details regarding these regulations at a workshop on post April 28.

The environmental review process provides a planning framework that allows for the consideration of historic preservation values alongside other development needs for federal projects.

In short, the state office provides technical advice and comment to federal agencies and their project sponsors on:

- The presence of historic and archaeological resources listed or eligible for listing in the National Register of Historic Places that are in the impact area of proposed projects.
- Assessing the effects of their projects upon these affected historic and/or archaeological resources.
- Possible means to mitigate adverse effects or outline measures to minimize harm to these resources through a memorandum of agreement.

Also under this office's responsibilities are tax incentives, grants and funding, information and education and technical assistance programs.

Debbie Curtis spoke on how a property meets the National Register Criteria for Evaluation.

These include that the property be at least 50 years old, have "historical integrity" in that it looks pretty much the way it did in the past and one of the following:

- Be associated with events, activities or developments that were important in the past.
- Be associated with the lives of people who were important in the past.
- Be significant in the areas of architectural history, landscape history or engineering.
- Have the ability to yield information through archaeological investigation that would answer questions about our past.

Significant building features that they look for are design, location, setting, feeling, association, materials and worksmanship. They also consider how intact the place is, its condition and any alterations that have been made over the years.

According to Dean Wood, archaeologist on contract for Fort Benning, a study done in 1985 identified more than 550 buildings and structures eligible for the National Register. Thus far, only Riverside, home of the commanding general, is on the list, though several others including Gen. George Patton's Sand Hill headquarters and the American Red Cross building are potentially eligible.

Wood said that this already gives them protected status so the idea is not to think of formal recognition as something tying the post's hands, but rather reason for the Training and Doctrine Command to help the post preserve them.

Lt. Col. John Orosz, chief of the Environmental Management Division of DPW, said that by explaining all of the requirements to post personnel, his office is "seeking a win-win situation," in which everyone knows the proper procedures to follow to get things done.

He added that he is working to have a historical architect on staff so that Fort Benning can put together packages for the state office accurately from the beginning saving time because only one 30-day review period is needed if all pertinent data is submitted the first time.

Fort Benning projects of this kind are all funneled through Orosz's office to the state office.

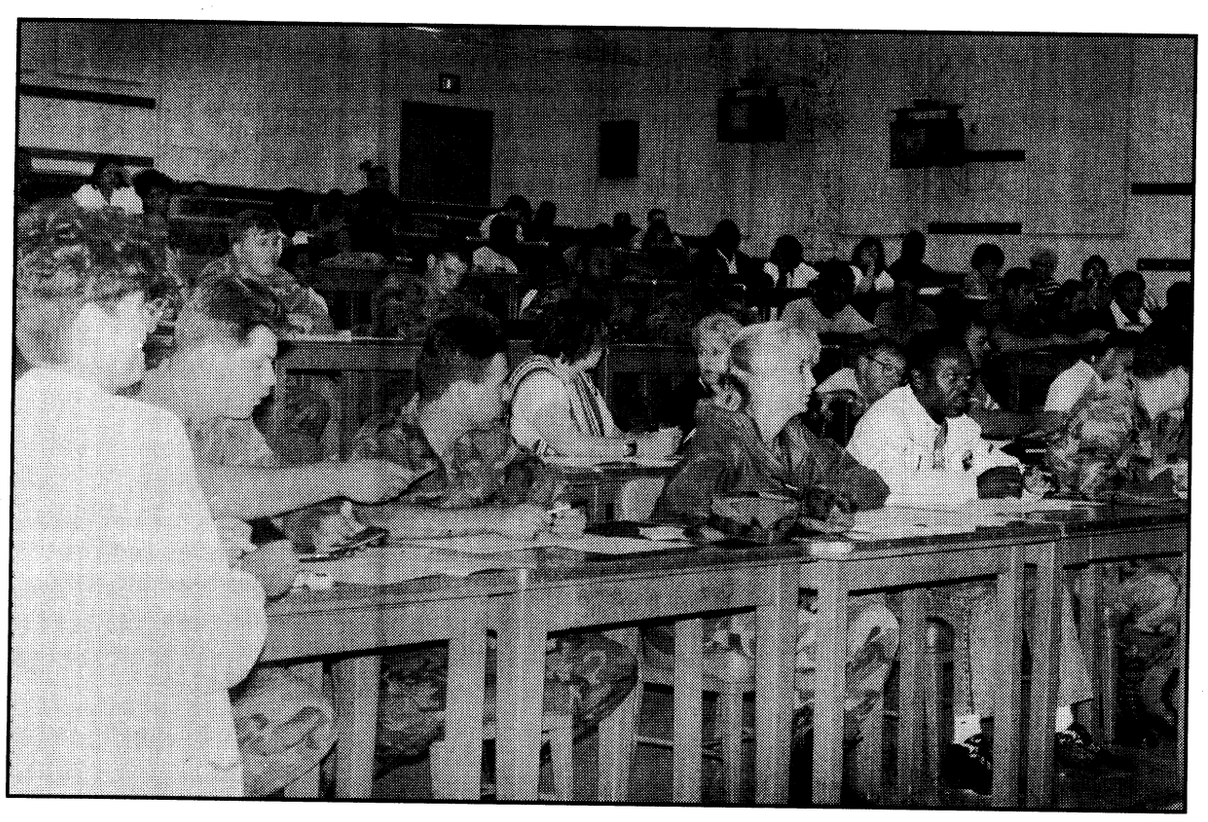
our managers, commanders and command group support us. We are geared toward better service for soldiers, family members and civilians because of it."

"We are proactive here and are constantly trying to improve customer service," said Burkhalter. "All of our people are totally service oriented."

The activity also won the best civilian personnel service in the Training and Doctrine Command level competiton in 1991 and 1992.

Pennington said that a major motivator behind the awards was Theresa V. Gunter, director of Civilian Personnel. "Without her leadership, we would not have made the progress that we have," Pennington said.

In 1992 Gunter was presented the Decoration for Exceptional Civilian Service, the highest civilian award for the category, by the secretary of the Army at the Pentagon.



Military Personnel Services, which is responsible for the soldiers on post, also won the best military personnel service in the TRADOC competition in 1992, said Maj. Beverly Cardinal, strength manager for the activity.

Project Spirit awards in 1990 and 1991 are also on their list of commendations.

"After the drawdown of people we've had, the use of Total Army Quality principles and the Adjutant General's Management Support Sytem (an automated system) has made it easier," Cardinal said. "Through these two things, we've been able to provide better service to the soldiers and family members."

"What we push for everyday is what makes us do better in competition.

"We give a better quality of service to soldier — that's is what we're all about — customer service is what we do," she said.

Military and civilian personnel affected by Department of Defense cutbacks attend a seminar to determine their eligibility for a Georgia Department of Labor job retraining program.

Job retraining program available

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Georgia Commissioner of Labor David B. Poythress announced plans April 29 to launch a $500,000 job retraining program for military and civilian personnel who have been put out of work by defense cutbacks.

The Army Career and Alumni Program, the Georgia Department of Labor and the Lower Chattahoochee Private Industry Council have organized a project that will provide intensive, short-term training designed to return people to the work force as quickly as possible.

"Columbus was selected as the initial site for this program because of the large number of Fort Benning personnel who are being dislocated," Poythress said.

Because the project is being funded with money from the Title III Job Training Partnership Act, the Georgia Department of Labor is determining eligibility for the program based on Title III eligibility criteria.

In general, military or civilian personnel who accepted incentive bonuses and who are experiencing difficulty locating employment because of a lack of transferable skills, or who have been unemployed for 15 or more of the past 26 weeks may be eligible, according to a Georgia Department of Labor release.

About 500 people attended seminars Monday to determine their eligibility and talk to representatives from the Columbus Technical Institute, Commercial Drivers Institute and Alliance Tractor-Trailer Training Center, said Ted Craig, ACAP regional transition services director.

Those eligible may begin attending classes to upgrade working skills and provide additional occupational training as soon as Monday.

Training will be offered in welding, machining, metal fabrication, industrial electricity, WordPerfect, Lotus 1,2 and 3, hydraulics, industrial maintenance.

Training for a commercial drivers' license will also be offered.

The training courses range from four to eight weeks. Most provide "intensive, hands-on training," said Kevin R. Topping, the director of off-campus programs for the Columbus Technical Institute.

"We chose subjects based on Columbus Chamber of Commerce studies identifying the jobs most difficult for employers to fill because of a lack of trained applicants," Topping said.

"These classes will provide the training that will open the doors to be considered for these jobs," Topping said. "We'll be teaching skills that employers want and are looking for every day."

The Georgia Department of Labor is currently awaiting approval of another application for a $3 million federal grant so this program may be expanded to other areas of the state.

ARMY FAMILY ACTION PLAN ISSUES

Garrison Commander's Office

More than 100 issues and questions were presented for action, comment or status to the garrison and installation staff at the Fort Benning Army Family Action Plan Symposium March 30.

The issues were broken down into functional areas and each directorate, activity or area was asked to respond.

The following are the questions posed to the Military Police Activity and the answers provided by Col. James Crockert, provost marshal.

Q: Why are there parking spots for special individuals (i.e. Volunteer of the Month) at the Commissary when they are not used?

A: Reserved parking is specifically approved for certain personnel in accordance with U.S. Army Infantry Center regulations 420-12, 190-5, 210-5 and 210-50.

This includes general officers, directors, commanders, sergeants major, first sergeants and as a reward for people selected as the volunteer of the month.

Q: What are the regulations and enforcement policy on noise pollution?

A: A USAIC Chief of Staff Policy Memorandum 93-1, dated Jan. 22, prohibits the playing of music that is audible to people more than 15 feet away. This applies to hand-carried and auto stereos.

Military police respond to reports of loud music, or initiate actions should they become aware of a problem, by asking personnel to comply with the policy or by apprehending them if they refuse to lower their music.

Q: Where is the list of off-limits establishments published? Is it briefed during in-processing?

A: The list of off-limits establishments is published in USAIC Supplement 1 to Army Regulation 190-24, Armed Forces Disciplinary Control Boards and Off Installation Military Enforcement.

This office does not brief newly assigned personnel. The adjutant general or unit chain of command is responsible for briefing new soldiers to Fort Benning.

Q: What is the relationship between the Columbus Police Department officers who are working in Spencer High School and the MPs who patrol the parking lots? Can MPs patrol the parking lots during high activity periods such as 7:15 to 8 a.m. and 2:15 to 3 p.m.?

A: MPs are prohibited from patrolling in the Spencer High School area, to include the parking lot. This area is controlled solely by the Columbus Police Department.

Q: Can the number of MPs in the housing areas be increased?

A:The number of MP patrols assigned to housing areas were increased by two per shift beginning April 12. This increases the officers assigned to to housing areas by six per day.

Direct coordination with mayors that identify streets with speeding problems receive extra emphasis with selected enforcement.

Q: Can MP workhours be visibly shifted from a.m. to p.m.?

A: MP patrols are assigned by a patrol distribution plan that accounts for location, times and types of crime.

The current patrol plan ensures the most effective use of patrols based on current incidents of crime.

Q: What is being done about stray pets?

A: The MPA has an animal control section that conducts extensive operations on post.

Operations include capturing loose animals, capturing and processing animals involved in a biting or attack incident and setting traps in areas with stray animals.

Q: When can we expect to see the Emergency 911 system in effect?

A: The Emergency 911 system is scheduled to be fully operational Aug. 1. The construction phase is complete and the installation of equipment and training of personnel are currently under way.

Early outs: civilians choose retirement

receive their full pensions plus the $25,000 or what they would be due in severance pay. Most of the optional retirees will get the maximum because the have been around long enough."

Some of the vacancies left by the retirees will no longer exist, others will be filled from the ranks internally, said Burkhalter. No organizations have been put out of business and "time will have to tell us" how to handle those vital positions that have been vacated, he added.

Burkhalter also said that the necessity for another reduction in force is still being assessed.

"We hope that it won't be necessary," he said. "Last year, we had a reduction in force, and we started out with 202 separations based on our attrition and early retirement authority. That was without a VSI, but we only released 50 employees from this installation.

"Here we are dealing with 350 who have opted to leave the installation, so obviously this is going to be a tremendous help in our downsizing efforts."

School board members to be elected

Fort Benning Schools

Fort Benning parents will head to the polls May 18 from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. to elect school board representatives for Dexter, Faith, Loyd, Stowers, White and Wilson schools, as well as the "at large" seat for the chaplain.

School board representatives are elected for two-year terms; however, Loyd and Wilson schools will elect a representative for only one year to fill unexpired terms.

Parents or guardians living in the student's immediate household are eligible to vote for the representative of the school where they have a child in attendance. Votes for the "at large" seat may be cast by each sponsor only once.

Absentee ballots may be obtained by eligible voters who are unable to vote on election day, if the parent has a legitimate prior commitment. Applications for absentee ballots are available at each of the school's offices until close of business May 17.

Voting will take place at a centralized location in each school, and no fewer than three eligible voters will be present when the ballots are counted.

There are eight candidates running in the upcoming election:

• At Large — Chaplain (Col.) Roy Plummer, two-year term.

School representatives:

• Dexter School — Pat Grant, two-year term.

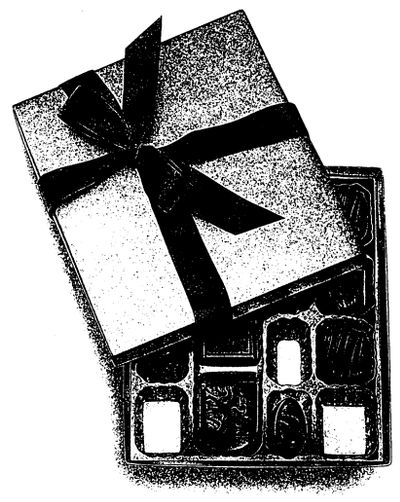
• Faith School — Lt. Col. Michael N. Hawrylak, two-year term.

• Loyd School — Sgt. 1st Class John M. Gonzales, one-year term.

• Stowers School — Staff Sgt. Robert Brennan and Mary Renn, two-year terms.

• White School — Maj. Richard Polley, two-year term.

• Wilson School — Sgt. 1st Class Clyde Cuttino, one-year term.



PRIMUS

PRIMUS IS CHANGING

On February 1, 1993, the Columbus PRIMUS Clinic became the PRIMUS Family Practice Clinic. As of this date, the clinic will be open to non-active duty military beneficiaries registered in the Army's Gateway To Care Program and enrolled to receive their primary health care at PRIMUS. As a Family Practice Clinic, PRIMUS will expand its services and offer its enrolled members:

- Comprehensive family practice medicine, including routine physicals, treatment of a wider range of acute and chronic conditions, and extensive laboratory and radiology testing.
- Guidance for all healthcare treatment, including diagnostic testing, speciality referrals, and follow-up care.
- Both scheduled appointments and walk-in visits.
- Telephone consultation with qualified healthcare personnel to determine whether and when to seek medical care.

To enroll as a member of the PRIMUS Family Practice, active duty family members and retirees and their families should attend one of the Army's Gateway To Care briefings or contact the MACH Health Care Finder at 544-1447/1591. Enrolled members can receive more information on our Family Practice services by calling the clinic at 561-7066.

Intensity wins two for championship berth

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The 1993 U.S. Army Infantry Center Men's Volleyball tournament is in its final stages of play at Audie Murphy Fitness Center. Two more matches were played Monday night to pare the field down to three teams left in the tournament. Here is a rundown of those two matches.

1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment (The Rock) vs. Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 11th Infantry Regiment (Terminators)

Moving up through the losers' bracket, the Terminators eliminated The Rock 15-5 and 15-10.

In game one, the Terminators pounded The Rock with hard-hitting kills at the net by Hector Flores and Mark Cotronio.

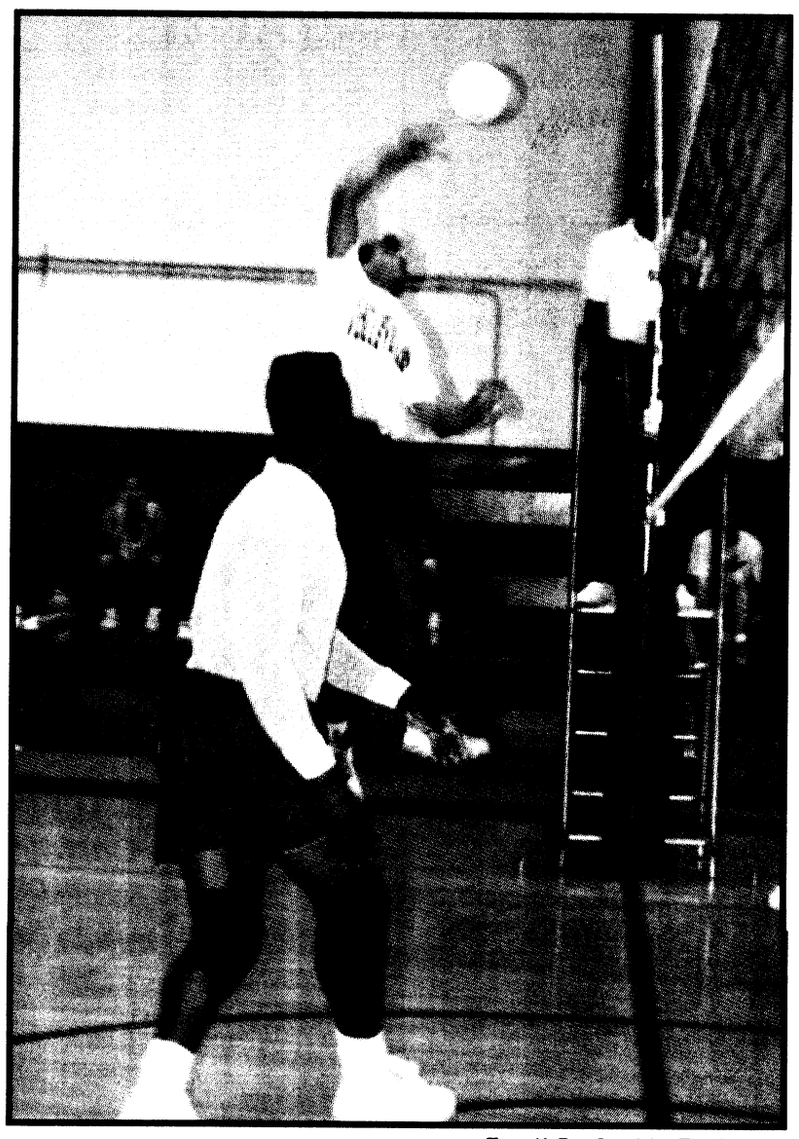
Setter Ed Rosa and Jose Victoria put the ball in the right position for Flores and Cotronio to attack The Rock defense.

An added offensive weapon was the jump serve of Cotronio on numerous serves. The Rock defense was not able to return her serve, allowing the Terminators to pull away to a 15-5 win.

Game two was a little more difficult for the Terminators, but in the end a 15-10 win was the result.

The Rock rolled out to a 9-5 advantage only to have the Terminators roar back to claim a 10-9 lead. With the game tied at 10-10, the Terminators went on a 5 point run to end the game at 15-10, and the match 2-0.

598th Maintenance Company (Intensity) vs. Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment (Headhunters)



In a battle of undefeateds and for a berth in the championship, Intensity and the Headhunters went at each other tooth and nail. Intensity gained the berth in the championship with a hard-fought sweep 16-14 and 15-13, over the Headhunters.

In game one, Intensity opened up with a 5-2 lead on hard kills by Filipo Leo and Jose Blanche. The Headhunters, powered by bomber Damon Dicus, fought back to tie at 5-5. With the score knotted at 9-9, Intensity went on a 4-0 run with Blanche serving to go up 13-9.

The Headhunters rallied to tie once again at 14-14, then the momentum and the game swung back to Intensity on two serves by Kristina Moosman to notch a 16-14 win.

Game two was just as intense as the first, but this time the Headhunters knocked Intensity back on their heels early in the game. Dicus and company vaulted to a 9-2 lead with Jonathan Clark doing the damage with his serve.

Intensity regained their senses to close to 12-7 on serves by Blanche, then tied the game at 13-13. Intensity took the lead for the first time in the game at 14-13, and Simon Martinez closed out the game at 15-13, and the match 2-0, with a hard serve that the Headhunters couldn't return.

Polynesian Style takes USAIC championship

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The 1993 United States Army Infantry Center Women's Volleyball Championship, played April 28 at Briant Wells Field House, pitted Polynesian Style against Apollo XI. Polynesian Style grounded Apollo XI 15-12, 10-15 and 15-10 in a down-to-the-wire match.

In game one, Apollo XI climbed to an early 7-4 lead only to have Polynesian Style come back and take a 10-7 advantage.

Maria Cortez had the hot serve for Polynesian Style with Kristie Moosman playing well at the net.

Apollo XI cut the lead to 14-12, only to have Cortez finish off the game at serve 15-12.

Apollo XI rocketed out to a 7-0 advantage off the serve of Kathi Francis and Beth Thomas. Haydee Pinero and Jan "Chops" Fors set well at the net.

Polynesian Style cut the lead down to 8-6, on serves by Vailou Townsend and Cortez.

Polynesian Style tied the match at 9-9, then watched as Apollo XI reeled off five points on the serve of Pinero to go up 14-10. Rosita Canales served out the game at 15-10 when Cortez couldn't come up with a dig, tieing the match at 1 game apiece, setting up the third and deciding game.

Polynesian Style took the early lead at 7-3, only to have Apollo XI tie the game at 7-7, then take their first lead at 9-8. Polynesian Style tied the game at 10, then took their second lead of the game at 11-10. Three more points put the game at match point and team captain Misi Vimoto was to serve for the championship.

Vimoto's serve cleared the net and fell in between two Apollo XI players for an ace, a 15-10 win and a championship.

"I had a bad feeling about this match. After we lost to them in the semi-finals it was like deja vu," said Cortez. "Last year, the same thing happened to us and we lost in the championship match to the same team.

"After the second game, coach told us to worry about what we were doing on our side of the net, and not on theirs," she said.

"I said at the beginning of the season that I would put together a team that would win a championship. Well, here we are, champions," said coach Filipo Leo Jr. "The girls played hard all season, then we lose in the semi-finals without four of our starters. To come back and win shows how much they wanted to win."

Pensacola squeaks by Cruise-a-matics, 6-3

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The 1993 USA Rugby Military Club Championships May 1 through Sunday at Blue and French Fields brought together more than 400 rugby players from 23 clubs around the country.

The seven's tournament segment of the championships dominated play May 2. The Fort Benning Cruise-a-matics captured the crown defeating the Fort Benning Rebels in the championship match 28-17.

In the open competition Saturday, the President's XV defeated the Exiles 17-10 to win the open title.

The club consolation bracket pitted the cadets of West Point against the Fort Bragg, N.C., club. The cadets put on a demonstration of speed, power and scoring — pounding Fort Bragg 31-10.

The highlight of the weekend was the championship match Sunday afternoon on French Field between the defending champions Pensacola Naval Air Station from Pensacola, Fla., and the Fort Benning Cruise-a-matics. Pensacola slugged out a 6-3 win to successfully defend its title.

Pensacola jumped to the early lead at 3-0 on a penalty kick by scrum half Keith Takabayashi.

Fort Benning tied the match at 3-3 moments later on a successful penalty kick by winger Malcolm Frost.

Pensacola regained the lead for the last time at 6-3 on a penalty kick by fly half Mark Pidcock with minutes to go in the first half.

In the second half, both teams went up and down the pitch without getting in the end zone. Each time a team got close to scoring, the defense stood its ground and denied the try.

"Of all the teams we could have faced in this tournament the one we didn't want to face was Fort Benning, " said Pidcock. "They have improved more than any team out here. They won the seven's tournament and beat two of the toughest teams out here in Camp Pendleton and Uniformed Services University of Health Sciences. I have to hand it to them. They gave us everything they had and it took everything we had to keep them from scoring," said Pidcock.

On the other side of the ball, the Fort Benning defense limited a team that had scored a total of 192 points in the tournament to only six in the first half.

"I think we matched up man for man very well with Pensacola," said fly half Matt Lissner. "We played our strengths against their weaknesses and vice versa. I think you couldn't have seen a more even game.

"I don't know what it was like on the sidelines; but, on the playing field, we stopped some of their big guns and they stopped some of ours. We had the running breaks against them, just one more pass here or there and we have the try and the game," said Lissner.

Stopping Pensacola's big guns meant stopping Pidcock and his running drop kick. Against the Marine Corps from Camp Lejuene, N.C., Pidcock hit five drop kicks — one from 50 meters out. The Fort Benning wing forwards and scrum half put the pressure on him and kept him to only three attempts in the match. All were missed.

"I had no time to blink out there much less kick," said Pidcock. "They put more pressure on me than any team in this tournament. I have

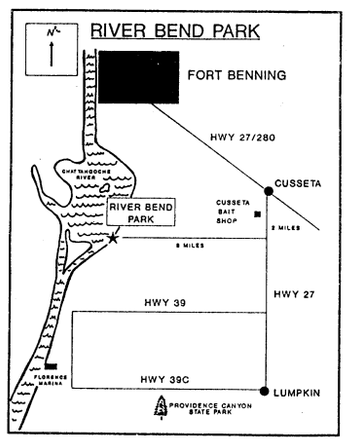
Fish go 'ballistic' at River Bend Park

By Kevin Lee McIver
USAIC Public Affairs Office

A lot of anglers I saw heading for the boat ramp last weekend returned with empty live-wells and claimed it was because of "the weather." But I gotta tell ya, even though I didn't catch any lunkers, the fish were still biting.

Although the storm front that moved in certainly affected the largemouths, the fish were extremely active, hitting top water baitfish like crazy. This phenomenon, similar to the usual feeding just prior to sunset, was fantastic to watch.

Lunkerbass were bustin' baitfish all over the water. Although most seemed a little small, there were a lot of trophy bass; and, if I could borrow a phase from the movie "Top Gun," going "ballistic."



If you gave it a shot last weekend and got skunked, then it was one of two things. Either you weren't holding your mouth right or you were fishing the wrong spot.

I can't help you with the first problem, but I can recommend a new fishin' hole. River Bend Park, a U.S. Army Corps of Engineers facility located about 20 minutes south of Main Post, proved quite productive last Sunday even with the change in the weather.

Located on Lake Walter F. George, an impoundment of the Chattahoochee River, this facility offers easy access and is the perfect spot to head to just for some plain old peaceful fishing.

The park could be classified as "primitive" since it doesn't have any running water, but it does have a very nice boat ramp, dock, picnic tables and a picnic shelter. A brochure printed by the Corps of Engineers states that the park also has "no-fee" camping, but I would confirm this before you decide to homestead for a weekend.

A great thing about the park is it has numerous spots for the avid bank fisherman to cast, and it doesn't have the usual boat traffic waiting to use the ramp like some of the other access points on the Chattahoochee. Plus, the facilities are extremely clean and well-kept. In fact even on Sunday, workers were picking up trash.

Anyway, to get back to fishing, live minnows fished with a floater or fished on the bottom seemed to be the ticket for both largemouths and channel catfish. My wife and I caught several of each. Even though the action was sporadic at times, live bait produced more fish than artificial lures. But hey, nothing works better than the real thing.

Running crankbaits along the edge of the rocks also produced some hits, as did throwing a treble-hook spoon retrieved near the top. The best hit all day was using a pumpkin-seed salamander pitched under the boat dock. I'm ashamed to admit, however, that I missed that one. But even Bill Dance misses one once in a while.

For a great spot to fish you need to head south to River Bend Park. If you decide to go, you can combine it with a trip to Providence Canyon State Conservation Park located right down the road a few miles. Termed Georgia's "Little Grand Canyon," this 1,108 acre park offers breathtaking scenery, seven miles of hiking trails, picnicking and camping.

Remember, don't use the weather as an excuse for not pullin'

5k run for summer fun

The Jekyll Island Authority

JEKYLL ISLAND, Ga. — The ninth annual Memorial Day 5K Run and one-mile children's Dolly Dolphin Dash will be May 29 in conjunction with the season opening of Summer Waves water park.

The children's race will start at 8 a.m. at Summer Waves on South Riverview Drive. Immediately following its completion, the 5K race will begin.

"Runners are offered discounted admission to the season opening of Summer Waves," said Cliff Ducey, Jekyll Island Authority recreation manager. "It will be a perfect way to cool off after the race."

The 5K run will have eight women's and nine men's age divisions. Entry fee is $10 before May 26 and $14 after, $17 with admission to Summer Waves or $21 after May 26.

The Dolly Dolphin Dash will have three age divisions for children 15 and under. Entry fee is $7 before May 26 and $10 after, $14 with admission to Summer Waves or $17 after May 26.

Regular Summer Waves admission is $9.95 adult, $7.95 children ages 4 to 8; children 3 and under free. Awards will be given to the top three winners in each division and for overall male and female winners. All participants will receive a T-shirt.

Registration is available in advance through the Jekyll Island Recreation Department and the day of the race 7 to 7:45 a.m.

For more information, call (912) 635-2232.

SPORTS SHORTS

Football tryouts — The 1993 Columbus Stars Semi-Professional Football Team is conducting registration for tryouts at the Holiday Inn South at 3170 Victory Drive Saturday and May 15 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. and Sunday and May 16 from 1 to 4 p.m. in Room 101.

A $50 registration fee is required, and those trying out will receive a T-shirt.

Players do not lose amateur status or college football eligibility.

The Columbus Stars are members of the Southern Football League, which includes teams from Alabama, Georgia and Tennessee.

Home games are played Saturday evenings from July through October in Columbus' Memorial Stadium.

All-Army Track and Field Camp — The 1993 All-Army Track and Field Trial Camp will be hosted by Fort Benning through June 7.

Approximately 45 men and 25 women will be identified to attend the camp. The camp will give the athletes the opportunity to train and compete at the national level with the possibility of becoming members of the 1996 Olympic Team.

For more information, contact Jim Brown at the Physical Activities Branch at 545-4300 or 545-5777.

Swim meet — Swim teams from Auburn and Columbus will join the Fort Benning Barracudas for a swim meet May 13 and 14 at Briant Wells swimming pool.

The meet will begin at 5 p.m. and is free to the public. The competition will be between children 6 to 18 years old.

The Fort Benning Barracudas is sponsored by Youth Activities and the club practices regularly all year throughout the state.

For information about the meet, call 545-4726.

For more information about joining the Barracudas, contact Theresa Hill, coach, at 682-7611.

Open swim meet — The Association of the United States Army is sponsoring a swim meet open for all active duty military, retirees, family members and civilian employees May 14 from 5 to 7:30 p.m.

Register at Briant Wells Pool from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

For more information, call Billy Clarke at 545-4388.

Fitness classes available — The Fort Benning Officers' Club offers aerobic and bench classes. Classes are open to all ranks of military members and civilians.

The cost is $16.50 for 12 visits or $3 drop-in fee per visit. The first class is free.

Monday, Wednesday and Friday — 9:30 to 10:30 a.m., 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., 5 to 6 p.m. and 6 to 7 p.m.

Tuesday and Thursday — 9:30 to 10:30 a.m., 5:30 to 6:45 p.m. and 6:50 to 7:30 p.m.

Saturday — 9:15 to 10:30 a.m.

For more information, call 687-0871.

Officials needed — The Tri-County Officials Association is in need of officials for all sports. Anyone interested in officiating who has time to train can contact Eli Barber at 682-1648 or Sandra Moore at 569-5200.

Cycling competition — Fort Benning will host the 1993 Alabama and Georgia State Cycling Competition and the U.S. Military Sports Association Cycling Tournament June 5 and 6 at Sand Hill.

For more information, contact Jim Brown at the Physical Activities Branch at 545-4300 or 545-5777.

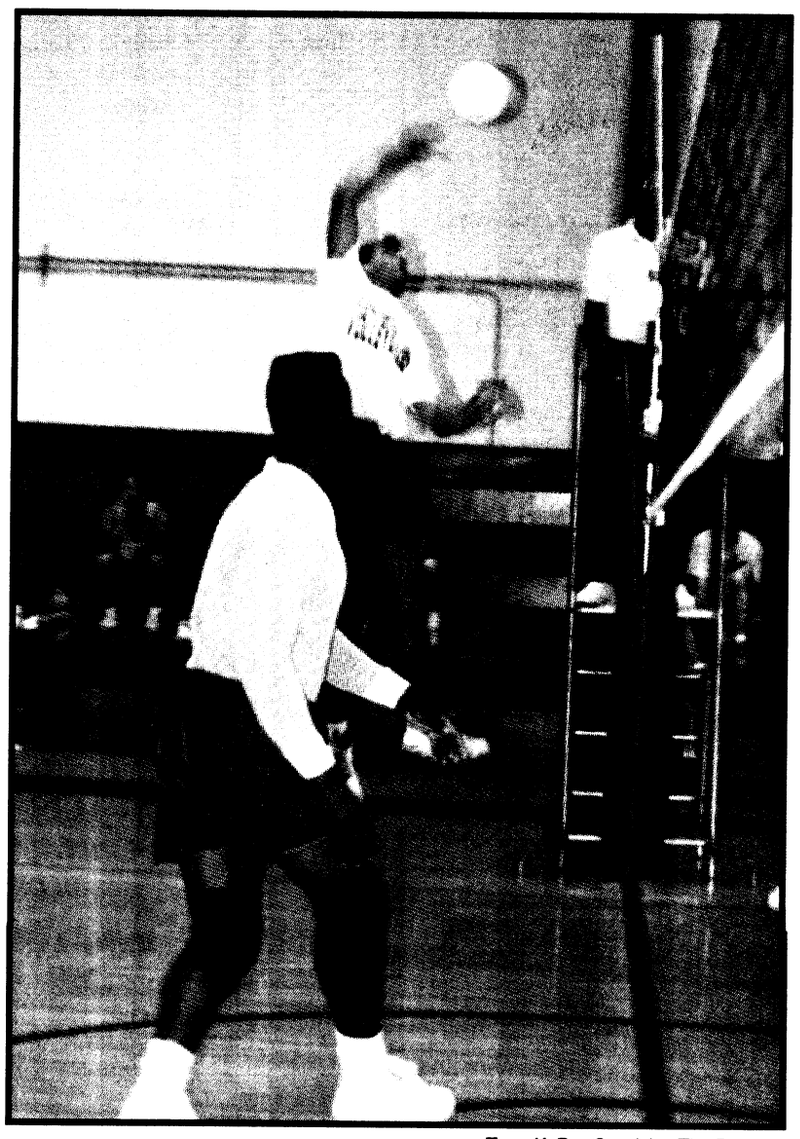
Setter Ed Rosa and Jose Victoria put the ball in the right position for Flores and Cotronio to attack The Rock defense.

An added offensive weapon was the jump serve of Cotronio on numerous serves. The Rock defense was not able to return her serve, allowing the Terminators to pull away to a 15-5 win.

Game two was a little more difficult for the Terminators, but in the end a 15-10 win was the result.

The Rock rolled out to a 9-5 advantage only to have the Terminators roar back to claim a 10-9 lead. With the game tied at 10-10, the Terminators went on a 5 point run to end the game at 15-10, and the match 2-0.

598th Maintenance Company (Intensity) vs. Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment (Headhunters)



In a battle of undefeateds and for a berth in the championship, Intensity and the Headhunters went at each other tooth and nail. Intensity gained the berth in the championship with a hard-fought sweep 16-14 and 15-13, over the Headhunters.

In game one, Intensity opened up with a 5-2 lead on hard kills by Filipo Leo and Jose Blanche. The Headhunters, powered by bomber Damon Dicus, fought back to tie at 5-5. With the score knotted at 9-9, Intensity went on a 4-0 run with Blanche serving to go up 13-9.

The Headhunters rallied to tie once again at 14-14, then the momentum and the game swung back to Intensity on two serves by Kristina Moosman to notch a 16-14 win.

Game two was just as intense as the first, but this time the Headhunters knocked Intensity back on their heels early in the game. Dicus and company vaulted to a 9-2 lead with Jonathan Clark doing the damage with his serve.

Intensity regained their senses to close to 12-7 on serves by Blanche, then tied the game at 13-13. Intensity took the lead for the first time in the game at 14-13, and Simon Martinez closed out the game at 15-13, and the match 2-0, with a hard serve that the Headhunters couldn't return.

Polynesian Style takes USAIC championship

By Terry K. Ray

The 1993 United States Army Infantry Center Women's Volleyball Championship, played April 28 at Briant Wells Field House, pitted Polynesian Style against Apollo XI. Polynesian Style grounded Apollo XI 15-12, 10-15 and 15-10 in a down-to-the-wire match.

In game one, Apollo XI climbed to an early 7-4 lead only to have Polynesian Style come back and take a 10-7 advantage.

Maria Cortez had the hot serve for Polynesian Style with Kristie Moosman playing well at the net.

Apollo XI cut the lead to 14-12, only to have Cortez finish off the game at serve 15-12.

Apollo XI rocketed out to a 7-0 advantage off the serve of Kathi Francis and Beth Thomas. Haydee Pinero and Jan "Chops" Fors set well at the net.

Polynesian Style cut the lead down to 8-6, on serves by Vailou Townsend and Cortez.

Polynesian Style tied the match at 9-9, then watched as Apollo XI reeled off five points on the serve of Pinero to go up 14-10. Rosita Canales served out the game at 15-10 when Cortez couldn't come up with a dig, tieing the match at 1 game apiece, setting up the third and deciding game.

Polynesian Style took the early lead at 7-3, only to have Apollo XI tie the game at 7-7, then take their first lead at 9-8. Polynesian Style tied the game at 10, then took their second lead of the game at 11-10. Three more points put the game at match point and team captain Misi Vimoto was to serve for the championship.

Vimoto's serve cleared the net and fell in between two Apollo XI players for an ace, a 15-10 win and a championship.

"I had a bad feeling about this match. After we lost to them in the semi-finals it was like deja vu," said Cortez. "Last year, the same thing happened to us and we lost in the championship match to the same team.

"After the second game, coach told us to worry about what we were doing on our side of the net, and not on theirs," she said.

"I said at the beginning of the season that I would put together a team that would win a championship. Well, here we are, champions," said coach Filipo Leo Jr. "The girls played hard all season, then we lose in the semi-finals without four of our starters. To come back and win shows how much they wanted to win."

Pensacola squeaks by Cruise-a-matics, 6-3

By Terry K. Ray

The 1993 USA Rugby Military Club Championships May 1 through Sunday at Blue and French Fields brought together more than 400 rugby players from 23 clubs around the country.

The seven's tournament segment of the championships dominated play May 2. The Fort Benning Cruise-a-matics captured the crown defeating the Fort Benning Rebels in the championship match 28-17.

In the open competition Saturday, the President's XV defeated the Exiles 17-10 to win the open title.

The club consolation bracket pitted the cadets of West Point against the Fort Bragg, N.C., club. The cadets put on a demonstration of speed, power and scoring — pounding Fort Bragg 31-10.

The highlight of the weekend was the championship match Sunday afternoon on French Field between the defending champions Pensacola Naval Air Station from Pensacola, Fla., and the Fort Benning Cruise-a-matics. Pensacola slugged out a 6-3 win to successfully defend its title.

Pensacola jumped to the early lead at 3-0 on a penalty kick by scrum half Keith Takabayashi.

Fort Benning tied the match at 3-3 moments later on a successful penalty kick by winger Malcolm Frost.

Pensacola regained the lead for the last time at 6-3 on a penalty kick by fly half Mark Pidcock with minutes to go in the first half.

In the second half, both teams went up and down the pitch without getting in the end zone. Each time a team got close to scoring, the defense stood its ground and denied the try.

"Of all the teams we could have faced in this tournament the one we didn't want to face was Fort Benning, " said Pidcock. "They have improved more than any team out here. They won the seven's tournament and beat two of the toughest teams out here in Camp Pendleton and Uniformed Services University of Health Sciences. I have to hand it to them. They gave us everything they had and it took everything we had to keep them from scoring," said Pidcock.

On the other side of the ball, the Fort Benning defense limited a team that had scored a total of 192 points in the tournament to only six in the first half.

"I think we matched up man for man very well with Pensacola," said fly half Matt Lissner. "We played our strengths against their weaknesses and vice versa. I think you couldn't have seen a more even game.

"I don't know what it was like on the sidelines; but, on the playing field, we stopped some of their big guns and they stopped some of ours. We had the running breaks against them, just one more pass here or there and we have the try and the game," said Lissner.

Stopping Pensacola's big guns meant stopping Pidcock and his running drop kick. Against the Marine Corps from Camp Lejuene, N.C., Pidcock hit five drop kicks — one from 50 meters out. The Fort Benning wing forwards and scrum half put the pressure on him and kept him to only three attempts in the match. All were missed.

"I had no time to blink out there much less kick," said Pidcock. "They put more pressure on me than any team in this tournament. I have

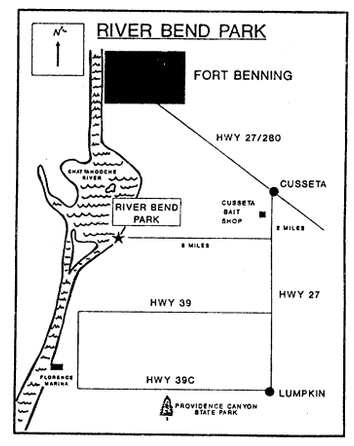
Fish go 'ballistic' at River Bend Park

By Kevin Lee McIver
USAIC Public Affairs Office

A lot of anglers I saw heading for the boat ramp last weekend returned with empty live-wells and claimed it was because of "the weather." But I gotta tell ya, even though I didn't catch any lunkers, the fish were still biting.

Although the storm front that moved in certainly affected the largemouths, the fish were extremely active, hitting top water baitfish like crazy. This phenomenon, similar to the usual feeding just prior to sunset, was fantastic to watch.

Lunkerbass were bustin' baitfish all over the water. Although most seemed a little small, there were a lot of trophy bass; and, if I could borrow a phase from the movie "Top Gun," going "ballistic."



If you gave it a shot last weekend and got skunked, then it was one of two things. Either you weren't holding your mouth right or you were fishing the wrong spot.

I can't help you with the first problem, but I can recommend a new fishin' hole. River Bend Park, a U.S. Army Corps of Engineers facility located about 20 minutes south of Main Post, proved quite productive last Sunday even with the change in the weather.

Located on Lake Walter F. George, an impoundment of the Chattahoochee River, this facility offers easy access and is the perfect spot to head to just for some plain old peaceful fishing.

The park could be classified as "primitive" since it doesn't have any running water, but it does have a very nice boat ramp, dock, picnic tables and a picnic shelter. A brochure printed by the Corps of Engineers states that the park also has "no-fee" camping, but I would confirm this before you decide to homestead for a weekend.

A great thing about the park is it has numerous spots for the avid bank fisherman to cast, and it doesn't have the usual boat traffic waiting to use the ramp like some of the other access points on the Chattahoochee. Plus, the facilities are extremely clean and well-kept. In fact even on Sunday, workers were picking up trash.

Anyway, to get back to fishing, live minnows fished with a floater or fished on the bottom seemed to be the ticket for both largemouths and channel catfish. My wife and I caught several of each. Even though the action was sporadic at times, live bait produced more fish than artificial lures. But hey, nothing works better than the real thing.

Running crankbaits along the edge of the rocks also produced some hits, as did throwing a treble-hook spoon retrieved near the top. The best hit all day was using a pumpkin-seed salamander pitched under the boat dock. I'm ashamed to admit, however, that I missed that one. But even Bill Dance misses one once in a while.

For a great spot to fish you need to head south to River Bend Park. If you decide to go, you can combine it with a trip to Providence Canyon State Conservation Park located right down the road a few miles. Termed Georgia's "Little Grand Canyon," this 1,108 acre park offers breathtaking scenery, seven miles of hiking trails, picnicking and camping.

Remember, don't use the weather as an excuse for not pullin'

5k run for summer fun

The Jekyll Island Authority

JEKYLL ISLAND, Ga. — The ninth annual Memorial Day 5K Run and one-mile children's Dolly Dolphin Dash will be May 29 in conjunction with the season opening of Summer Waves water park.

The children's race will start at 8 a.m. at Summer Waves on South Riverview Drive. Immediately following its completion, the 5K race will begin.

"Runners are offered discounted admission to the season opening of Summer Waves," said Cliff Ducey, Jekyll Island Authority recreation manager. "It will be a perfect way to cool off after the race."

The 5K run will have eight women's and nine men's age divisions. Entry fee is $10 before May 26 and $14 after, $17 with admission to Summer Waves or $21 after May 26.

The Dolly Dolphin Dash will have three age divisions for children 15 and under. Entry fee is $7 before May 26 and $10 after, $14 with admission to Summer Waves or $17 after May 26.

Regular Summer Waves admission is $9.95 adult, $7.95 children ages 4 to 8; children 3 and under free. Awards will be given to the top three winners in each division and for overall male and female winners. All participants will receive a T-shirt.

Registration is available in advance through the Jekyll Island Recreation Department and the day of the race 7 to 7:45 a.m.

Summer equipment available

By Kimberly Bennett
Directorate of Community Activities

The sun is shining, and a cool breeze moves slowly through the warm air. The sounds of singing birds mix with the mischievous shouts of children as they run through the neighborhood. This is not a day to be inside.

This is a day to have a picnic or go camping, and Fort Benning can help you do all of those fun outdoor activities with its sensational summer rental programs. Main Post Equipment Rental and Storage, located in Building 1707 behind the Laundromat, and Uchee Creek Outdoor Rentals at the Uchee Creek Campground and Marina have everything from campers to volleyball nets to make your summertime recreation perfect.

Both rental facilities can be used by active duty and retired military personnel, National Guardsmen, Reservists, Department of Defense and Fort Benning civilians and their families.

For recreation equipment on a large scale, Uchee Creek is the place to go. Campers can rent one of Uchee Creek's pop-up or self-contained campers or head to the marina and rent water recreation equipment. Uchee Creek visitors can rent party barges, 24-foot and 28-foot pontoon boats, 15-foot and 17-foot bass boats, a 14-foot boat, motor and trailer, and canoes.

And for other outdoor activities, campers can rent barbecue smokers and cookers, camping equipment, deer stands, bicycles, bicycle bumper and car top racks, rods and reels and various sporting equipment.

Picnic and party planners will find that Main Post Equipment Rental and Storage is the place to go first when shopping for what they need. Here, they can rent barbecue grills to make great-tasting food, and folding tables and chairs, tents and canopies to make the outing comfortable.

They can also make sports a part of the festivities. Main Post Equipment Rental and Storage provides bicycles, basketballs, footballs, soccer balls, horseshoes, tug-of-war ropes, volleyballs and volleyball nets and softball kits. They can rent them separately or at one of the special package prices. And for some livelier entertainment, they can rent a dunking booth.

Main Post Equipment Rental and Storage does more for fair weather activity than just rentals. Hunters and fishermen can purchase post and state licenses in a variety of combinations. Guest and nonresident permits can also be purchased. Deer hunters can rent tree stands, and both hunters and fishermen can purchase a variety of hunting and fishing equipment.

Main Post Equipment Rental and Storage also helps military personnel when they change stations. U-Hauls, tow dollies and other moving equipment is available for rent.

When personnel are ready to move overseas or to other locations where they may not be able to take all their personal items, Main Post Equipment Rental and Storage will store their belongings until they can pick them up.

Vehicles can be stored on the facility's recreational vehicle lot for $10 per month. Other items such as clothing and household goods can be stored in lockers. The lockers are rented in three sizes and are popular among personnel attending Ranger School.

Main Post Equipment Rental and Storage also operates the post's Lemon Lot. For $5 per month, personnel can sell their personally owned vehicles, boats and campers.

So, there is no reason to stay inside when the weather is beautiful.

Take a trip to Main Post Equipment Rental and Storage or Uchee Creek Campground and Marina, pick up all your outdoor recreation needs, and have a great summer.

For more information, call Main Post Equipment Rental and Storage at 545-3504 or 545-7978 and Uchee Creek at 545-7238 or 545-4053.

COMMUNITY BRIEFS

Military spouse day — May 14 is Military Spouse Day and to help recognize spouses, Army Community Service will give away free tote bags. Stop by ACS in Building 2643 in Soldiers' Plaza to receive a free bag and help celebrate Military Spouse Day.

Youth ballet recital — Youth Services will conduct its annual ballet recital Saturday at 4 p.m. in Marshall Auditorium in Infantry Hall, Building 4. "Dance varieties" will be dedicated to the Meade and Dabbs families, according to Billie C. Smith, Youth Services director.

Food locker needs food — The Army Community Service's emergency foodlocker needs nonperishable food items. The program is designed to assist Fort Benning soldiers and their family members. Retirees and their family members may also be assisted.

Donations may be made Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. in Building 2642, Soldiers' Plaza.

Loyd School carnival — The Loyd Elementary School on Sante Fe Road will have a spring celebration carnival May 22, featuring game booths, the moon walk, a train, hayride, dunking booth, face painting and button making. McGruff, the crime dog, will be there, a special balloon man to make surprises and a disc jockey to play music.

The Silver Wings, Fort Benning's command exhibition parachute team, will kick off the carnival at 12:50 p.m. Tickets go on sale at 12:30 p.m.

Engineer scholarship — The Fort Benning-Columbus Society of American Military Engineers is offering a $600 scholarship to students enrolled in a two-, three- or four-year curriculum leading to a degree. Priority consideration will be given to a student enrolled in an engineering curriculum.

Applications must be submitted by today .

PTSA meeting — The Spencer High School Parent, Teacher, Student Association general membership meeting will be Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. in the school auditorium. This is the last meeting of the school year and new officers will be elected. For more information, call Maj. Johnny L. West at 545-5610 or 545-4454.

Jobs available — A new company coming to Columbus is interested in hiring 50 to 100 light industrial workers in the next few months.

Military spouses interested in filling out screening applications for employment should stop by the Army Community Service's Family Member Employment Assistance Program office next week.

According to Shirley Jarrett of FMEAP, experience is preferred but the company does have a quick-start program.

She has no salary information yet or a firm starting date, but those who would like to apply may come to Building 2643 in Soldiers' Plaza between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m., Monday through Friday, to fill out the paperwork.

Girls Scouts need trainers — The Concharty Council of Girl Scouts is looking for trainers. Volunteers should possess the desire to train adults through activities, leadership qualities, tact, patience, a sense of humor, the ability to communicate effectively and the need to give to the community. For more information, call Gloria Bynam at 327-2646.

Cardiac, diabetic support group — A meeting of the cardiac and diabetic support group will be May 17 in the Baugh Conference Room on the second floor of Martin Army Community Hospital at 6 p.m. Group bowling will be at the Mall Bowling Center Tuesday and May 25 at 5:30 p.m.

For more information, call Thomas E. Valitzski at 561-3077.

Volunteers wanted — The Fort Benning Management Association needs volunteers for two-hour shifts on Armed Forces Day, May 15, beginning at 11:30 a.m. This is one of the organization's two fund-raisers, the proceeds of which go to its scholarship fund. Volunteers usually receive a plaque or framed certificate.

For more information, call Jim Kvicala at 545-4075 .

Clothing notice — Any clothes or articles left in the laundry and dry cleaners and alteration shops for more than 90 days still may be claimed by calling 682-0562.

However, Any items left unclaimed after today will be disposed of in accordance with regulations.

The shops are at Kelley Hill, Building 9026; Sand Hill, Building 3218; Military Clothing Sales Store, Building 285; and the Mini Mall, Building 1712.

CRIME WATCH

Military Police Activity

The following entries were taken from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from April 20 to 26.

Such entries may be incomplete and are not the adjudication of the guilt or innocence of any person.

This week's hot topic concerns security of government quarters while the occupants are away. Upon request, the Military Police will conduct a minimum of three security checks of the quarters within a 24-hour period.

All ground floor windows and doors will be checked to ensure they are adequately secured. Personnel desiring this service must report to the MP desk sergeant to fill out a request form.

It is also suggested that you have your mail picked up by a friend or neighbor and that you have your newspaper delivery postponed of the duration of your absence.

Assist the MPs by ensuring that all windows and doors are secured before departing.

• A private first class was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol after he was involved in a single-car accident. The MPs found him sitting in the driver's seat asleep with an open alcoholic container in the floorboard.

He was administered a breath-alyzer test with a result of .19.

• A captain reported that persons unknown removed a lap top computer valued at approximately $2,500 from his company area.

• A school teacher reported that persons unknown removed $100 in cash from her pocketbook that was unsecured in a school classroom.

• A private first class was charged with drunk and disorderly conduct and assaulting a military police officer while performing his duties.

The soldier was a passenger in a car that had been stopped at a traffic check point. He became belligerent, got out of the car and shoved two MPs.

• A family member was charged with shoplifting after placing two cartons of cigarettes in her pocketbook and exiting the Commissary without rendering payment.

• A family member reported that persons unknown removed two secured bicycles from the backyard of their quarters.

• This week's booby prize is awarded to the sergeant who claimed that an unknown individual shot him during an attempted robbery.

He informed his unit first sergeant that he feared for his life and that he wanted to move into the barracks for his own safety.

The sergeant, his first sergeant and a Criminal Investigation Division agent went to the sergeant's quarters to obtain his clothing. A search of his quarters revealed a pillow case that had apparent bullet entrance and exit holes.

The entrance hole was surrounded with suspected gun powder residue. A box of ammunition, a blood stained rag and a pair of gloves were seized as evidence.

Further investigation revealed that the sergeant's bullet wound was self-inflicted due to the flight of the bullet as it exited his leg.

The sergeant was charged with failure to obey a lawful order or regulation, wrongful discharge of a firearm, false swearing and malingering.

Other activities included 14 traffic accidents and six reports of shoplifting at facilities on post.

There were three cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, eight cases of larceny of private property and five cases of larceny of government property.

Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best — Give Crime Arrest."

Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5223 or the "Crime in Progress" line at 545-2222.

Faith School history team wins 2nd in state

Fort Benning Schools

Faith Middle School's History Club placed second in the Junior Group Media category of the state history competition Saturday at Agnes Scott College.

The team will present its video at the national competition June 13 through 17 at the University of Maryland.

Faith's History Club has advanced to the national level in the media category for the past five years. They placed first in the nation two years ago with a video on Primus King, the Columbus man responsible for the change in the law that allowed blacks to vote in the Georgia Democratic primaries. Other topics have included parachutes, Horace King, a local bridge-builder and former slave in the Columbus area, and Christa McAuliffe, the teacher who was killed in the Challenger explosion.

The National History Day competition includes the categories of media, performance, projects and papers. Each category also includes both individual and group divisions as well as junior and senior divisions.

Faith's History Club is sponsored by eighth-grade teachers Mary Barnette and David Bunt.

Students to complete Drug Abuse Resistance Education

Fort Benning Schools

The 1992-93 second semester Drug Abuse Resistance Education graduation is scheduled for Fort Benning's Faith Middle School May 26 at 11:30 a.m.

One hundred twenty-three Faith School sixth-graders will graduate from the program, and their parents are invited to attend. Guest speaker for the occasion will be Sheila Gale of the Columbus Substance Abuse Services.

The DARE program has been in operation at Faith School for five years, with more than 1,700 present and former student graduates.

DARE is a substance use prevention education program designed to equip students with skills for resisting peer pressure to experiment with tobacco, drugs and alcohol. It uses a positive approach to substance abuse education, which focuses attention on providing information about tobacco, alcohol and drugs, teaching students how to resist peer pressure and giving students ideas for alternatives to drug use.

The instructor and coordinator of the program in the Fort Benning Schools is Lt. W. L. Jackson of the Military Police Activity.

Rec centers have something for everyone

By Kimberly Bennett
Directorate of Community Activities

If you find yourself doing the same things with your free time, you might be due for a change. Join a band, read a book, play Nintendo or enter a pool tournament. You don't have to spend a lot of money; just go to the Kelley Hill or Sand Hill Recreation Centers.

The recreation centers provide active duty and retired military personnel, Department of the Army civilian employees and their families a variety of leisure-time activities, according to Anne Honeycutt, the recreation centers' director.

The Kelley Hill Recreation Center in Building 9079 is open Wednesday through Sunday from noon until 9 p.m., while the Sand Hill Recreation Center, temporarily located in the dining facility of Starship 3245 behind the Sand Hill Post Exchange, is open Saturdays from noon to 9 p.m. and Sundays and holidays from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.

The Kelley Hill Recreation Center has a variety of directed and self-directed activities.

Pool tournaments are every Thursday at 7 p.m., and spades tournaments are every Sunday at 1:30 p.m.

U.S. Chess Federation chess tournaments are the last Saturday of each month at noon. Anyone can register for the tournaments, and the winner each week receives a prize.

In addition to the regular tournaments, Kelley Hill hosts many other social activities. It operates a flea market every two to three months in its ballroom, and everyone is welcome to rent a table or browse through the sale.

The Kelley Hill Recreation Center is also the site of special events such as body-building competitions, the post chess championship and preliminary All-Army Chess Tournament, Las Vegas Night, and a black history program.

Kelley Hill Recreation Center also conducts several workshops and lessons throughout the year. Some workshops include the annual Christmas craft workshop and a cake decorating workshop.

The center also conducts tae kwon do classes every Wednesday and Friday for a small monthly fee.

If a party is in order, Kelley Hill Recreation Center will rent rooms for the occasion. The center is often the location of banquets, graduation parties and wedding receptions.

Kelley Hill Recreation Center has nine pool tables, foosball, air hockey, board games, a library and Nintendo systems and games. It also has several large-screen televisions and a movie room where any of the center's video cassettes can be played.

The center also has music rooms where bands can get together to practice.

If musicians do not have their own equipment, the center has upright and concert grand pianos, electric and acoustic guitars, amps, keyboards and drums available for general use.

The Kelley Hill Recreation Center's snack bar is also a main attraction. The snack bar sells homemade pizza, hot dogs, hamburgers, nachos, soda and beer.

Aside from leisure activities, the Kelley Hill Recreation Center is often the site of briefings and meetings.

The Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers Council also meets at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center.

The Sand Hill Recreation Center provides much of the same leisure equipment as the Kelley Hill center. It has a snack bar, pool tables, foosball, Nintendos, movies, board games, acoustic guitars and pianos.

The Sand Hill Recreation Center is smaller than Kelley Hill's, but in early 1994, it will move to its new 29,000 square-foot building behind the Winder Dental Clinic.

The new facility will have a fire place, sky lights and a larger snack bar and will serve basic trainees, cadre and family members.

The recreation centers always have something going on, according to Honeycutt.

For more information, call the Kelley Hill Recreation Center at 544-3079 or the Sand Hill Recreation Center at 544-9161.

Cancer screenings help detect warning signs

Martin Army Community Hospital

In the past eight years, more than half a million Americans received free skin examinations during the American Academy of Dermatology's National Melanoma/Skin Cancer Detection and Prevention Month.

Millions more have been educated about the warning signs and risk factors for skin cancer.

Held during the month of May, academy-sponsored screenings have, since 1985, uncovered more than 4,600 suspected cases of malignant melanoma, the most deadly form of skin cancer.

During the 1992 national program, volunteer dermatologists screened 98,010 people. More than 1,000 suspected malignant melanomas, more than 8,000 suspected basal cell and more than 1,200 suspected squamous cell carcinomas were detected.

Dermatologists across the country began once again Saturday to participate in free screenings at hospitals, community centers and at health fairs.

"Early detection is essential for the successful treatment of cutaneous malignant melanoma," said Dr. Howard K. Koh, of Boston University Schools of Medicine and Public Health, chairman of the committee that oversees the academy's national campaign.

"Anyone with a changing or growing mole or a new mole should be checked by a dermatologist or attend a free screening. We'd like to think that, by finding early melanomas at these screenings, we can save lives," he said.

For 1993, the American Cancer Society has projected 32,000 new cases of malignant melanoma nationwide. The projected mortality of 6,800 deaths represents an increase from the previous year.

The screenings are rapid skin scans. No biopsies are performed at the time of screening.

Each participant with a suspected skin cancer is encouraged to seek further medical care. "In cases of suspected melanomas, this follow-up examination could be a life-saving measure," said Koh.

As part of a scientific study in conjunction with the academy's national program, all persons with suspected melanomas from academy screenings were contacted. Of the suspected melanomas found in 1992, 119 were confirmed, with 99 percent of these in the earliest, most curable stages.

"The academy is fully committed to this educational and screening program that we believe is one of the finest examples of preventive medicine in the country," Koh added.

The majority of cases of skin cancer are because of ultraviolet exposure from the sun. Malignant melanoma has been linked to exposure to sudden, strong bursts of sunlight. Skin cancers usually affect an older population, but malignant melanoma strikes adults of all ages, even those under 35.

Men over the age of 50 need to be especially aware of the early warning signs of this disease, since they most commonly are affected and die from it.

Skin cancer is the most common form of cancer in the United States, with the number of cases of malignant melanoma nearly doubling each decade.

By the year 2000, if the current trend continues, it is expected that one in every 75 Americans will develop melanoma in his or her lifetime and one in six will have some form of skin cancer.

The disease, dermatologists say, is an undeclared epidemic that can only get worse with increasing ozone depletion.

The American Academy of Dermatology, with its headquarters in Schaumburg, Ill., represents physicians who specialize in the prevention, diagnosis and treatment of diseases and disorders of the skin, hair and nails.

For a skin cancer screening or more information, call the Dermatology Clinic at Martin Army Community Hospital at 544-2574.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Loyd N. Bell
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Shrouded in darkness, the stealth figure slices through the night with Ninja silence. His heart pounds in his ears as he crouches outside the house and waits for the glaring lights to die.

Finally, the bedroom goes dark and the moment arrives. With sweat dripping from every pore, the lone shadow darts across the open yard toward the sparkling Toyota. Slowly, silently he opens the door and oozes into the driver's seat. Nimble fingers quickly insert the key, and a silent engine purrs to life.

The car is gone. Repo Man has struck again.

What can you do to prevent Repo Man from taking your vehicle in the dark of the night? Do you have any rights? Was it a good idea to buy a Porsche 911 on a specialist's salary?

When you buy a car, you should be aware that the creditor who loaned you the money to buy the car retains important rights in the vehicle. These rights are established by the purchase agreement you signed and by state law.

Generally, your failure to make timely payments on your car can result in your creditor repossessing the vehicle without going to court and often without warning you in advance. However, there are limitations on your creditor's right to repossess your car.

Normally, your creditor can repossess your vehicle as soon as you "default" on your loan by failing to make timely payments.

However, if your creditor agrees to accept late payments or agrees to change the payment date, the terms of your original contract may no longer apply. These changes may be made orally, but it is safer to make them in writing.

Once you are in default, the laws of most states permit the creditor to repossess your vehicle at any hour of the day or night without prior notice. The creditor may even come onto your private property without your permission.

However, when repossessing the vehicle, the creditor may not "breach the peace." For example, the creditor could not use force or the threat of force to take the vehicle.

Taking your car over your protest or crushing your skull with a cinder block would be examples of a breach of the peace.

If the creditor does breach the peace in carrying out a repossession, he may be forced to pay damages and lose other important legal rights.

Once your car has been repossessed, the creditor may decide to keep the vehicle as compensation or try to resell it at a public or private sale.

In either case, he must notify you as to what he is going to do with the car. If your creditor tells you that he is going to keep the car, you have a right to force him to sell it instead.

If your creditor decides to sell the car at a public auction, he must tell you when the auction is and allow you to bid on the vehicle. If he decides to sell the car at a private sale, he must still give you notice of the time and place of the sale.

In either case, you are entitled to redeem or buy back the vehicle by paying the full amount owing on it, plus the reasonable expenses of repossession.

Any resale of a vehicle must be done in a "commercially reasonable" manner. This does not mean that the creditor must sell your car at the best price or even a good price. However, a resale that is far below the actual value may indicate that the sale was not commercially reasonable.

Any difference on what you owe on the car and what the creditor receives on resale of the vehicle is known as a deficiency. In most states, a creditor may then sue you for a "deficiency judgment" to collect the loan balance. In your answer to the lawsuit, you will be allowed to raise any affirmative defenses to the suit such as claims that the creditor breached the peace or sold the car in a commercially unreasonable manner.

It's hard to imagine anything more embarrassing than having your car repossessed as gawking neighbors stare on. However, if you make your payments on time, you should never have to meet Repo Man.

If you have any further questions about repossessions, you can make an appointment with the Staff Judge Advocate's Office by calling 545-3281.

PET OF THE WEEK

Gator, a playful mixed-breed puppy, is looking for a home. She is approximately 7 weeks old and is just one of many dogs and cats who can be adopted.

For more information, contact the Veterinary Services Office in Building 265 at 545-1127.

Hours of operation are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:30 am. and 12:45 to 3 p.m.

The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

If you have lost a pet, check the stray impoundment facility in Building 283.

Stray pets are given three working days to be claimed from the time they are picked up by animal control personnel.

If the pets are not claimed, they become government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies tags are the only way Veterinary Services can contact the owner. Pet owners are required to register their pets and update their records when changes occur.

Upon registration, pet owners will receive a metal identification tag for their pet. There is no cost to register pets unless a rabies vaccination is required.

Choir celebrates 18th anniversary

By Jacqueline Feagin
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Sightseeing Road Gospel Choir celebrated its 18th anniversary April 25 at the Sightseeing Road Chapel. The choir, which was under the direction of Fred Catchings, began the program. The theme for the day was "The Joy of the Lord."

Christian Fellowship Choir, New Testament Choir, and the Mass Choir from Douglas, Ga., performed several selections. The Rev. Rhonda Brown and Jacqueline Gibbs performed solos. Gerri Gilyard was the mistress of ceremonies. Vernette Avant welcomed everyone to the celebration. Chaplain (Col.) Roy Plummer, post chaplain and pastor for the chapel, gave the benediction and directed all the choirs together in a selection.

Sightseeing Road Gospel Choir began its history at Lavoie Chapel under the direction of Brenda Holmes and Mary Degautheir. DeGauthier continues to be a member and is the musician for the choir. In November of 1990, the choir was relocated to Sightseeing Road Chapel. The choir was inducted into the National Convention of Gospel Choirs and Choruses in August of 1978 in New Orleans, La.

Spring brings flowers, family visits

By Robert Coffey
29th Infantry Regiment

REFLECTIONS

A family visit recently ended and what a visit it was!

You know the type I mean ... two rental cars and both my cars in constant motion. My babies waking up in the early morning hours and meeting the 20-year-olds returning from a night on the town. Simple questions like, "What should we do today?" starting discussions that rival a Tolstoy novel; or, arguments that make Mike Tyson's bouts seem like an Emily Post exercise. Sound familiar yet?

It was one of those visits where you plan for three hours to make the best use of time, resources and tourist traps only to have one of the relatives keep the others waiting for two hours because his "sense of time" ranges somewhere between remedial and Neanderthal. Get the picture yet?

A visit where everyone waits until the last day to tell you what they "always wanted to see" in Georgia, and then they give you that "I know we could do it if we try real hard" look. A visit that makes you ready to return to work in order to get some rest!

Still, I did notice some things in the midst of the whirlwind.

First, no people cause you to fluctuate between love and anger like family members. The strengths that raised you, trained you and launched you into the world, now have a way of irritating and grinding on you. The personalities that modeled for you now seem a little overbearing. The self-confidences that reassured you and led you, now seem somewhat rigid and intolerant.

Second, old age is no respecter of persons. Those who once tirelessly and tenderly wiped bottoms, seem a few short years away from needing someone to tirelessly and tenderly wipe their chins for them. Those who once seemed immortal, now seem all too mortal.

Third, families are a precious gift from God. Amid the sin, selfishness and other junk that one finds there, one also finds the precious, wondrous "magic" that makes this life worth living. When people cast off "family," they sever their emotional umbilical cords.

The Apostle Paul recognized the need for patience among family members when he wrote:

"Let each individual among you also love his own wife even as himself; and let the wife see to it that she respects her husband.

"Children, obey your parents in the Lord, for this is right. Honor your father and mother (which is the first commandment with a promise), that it may be well with you, and that you may live long upon the Earth.

"And fathers, do not provoke your children to anger; but bring them up in the discipline and instruction of the Lord."

Spring is here! Family visits are as certain as taxes (and maybe just as welcome.) Look over the scripture passage listed above. Let the words sink deep into your mind and heart ... and then prep the guest room.

Mother says thank you

By Jacqueline Feagin
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Reflections

As a new mother, I look forward to celebrating Mother's Day. As I read the cards honoring mothers, I realize mothers do not hold this honor alone.

As I mature, I realize that a mother is not just the person who gave birth.

It is the neighbor who you can depend on when you cannot be there.

It is the child-care provider who makes himself or herself available at all hours of the day or night.

It is the family member who provides clothing and toys for your child for just being related.

It is the friend who takes your child out when you need a break.

It is the father who shares the responsibility with you.

All of these people help in the care, love and upbringing of your child. But on this day, we choose only to honor mothers.

Webster states that a mother is "a female parent" and a parent "is one that brings forth offspring."

In today's society, I believe a mother is anyone who loves your child. In a mother's eye, no one will care for and love your child like you will; but, there are people we know who do their best and ask for nothing in return.

This Mother's Day, let's say thank you to everyone who makes it possible for us to have full-time jobs outside the home. Say thank you to our children for understanding when we need to spend time away from them. This Mother's Day, let us honor everyone who makes mothering a little easier.

Chief Warrant Officer 2 Robert Ferguson and 1st Lt. Sean Pastic, from 25th Infantry division, Schofield Barracks, Hawaii, perform the wire walk on the Darby Queen obstacle course.

RANGER

Who's the best?

They're the best!

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

As they brandished their brand-new 9mm pistols in the air, their faces seemed to say they had, for now at least, achieved their hearts' desire.

They won.

Capt. Blain A. Reeves and Staff Sgt. Erik L. Wilson, representing the 4th Ranger Training Battalion, beat their nearest rivals by a score of 1,640 to 1,638.

After three days, and by two points, this noncommissioned officer and officer are the best rangers in the world this year.

They excelled through three days of back-breaking effort, mind-bending concentration and the ability to drive their bodies to perform despite exhaustion and lack of sleep. In other words, they met the ranger standard.

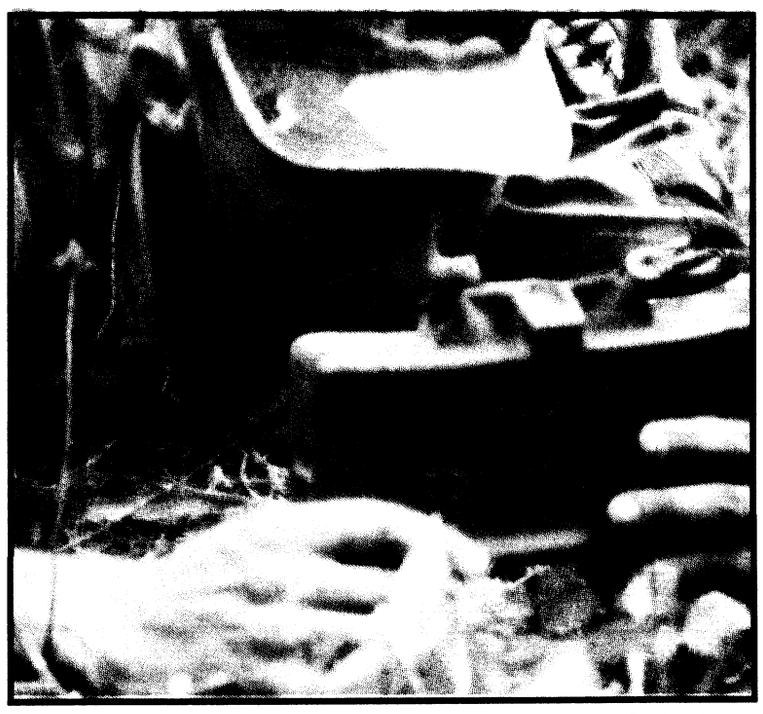
"It was very painful," said Wilson. "The road march (timed, 20-plus miles carrying combat equipment) was the toughest for me."

"The Darby Queen obstacle course and the night land navigation were the hardest for me," said Reeves. "A couple of times I started to wonder if I would make it."

Both men have competed in the event before, though with other partners. "It taught us what to expect," said Wilson.

Both agree they trained nearly the same this year as last, but didn't push themselves quite as hard as they did for last year's competition.

"We trained for about three months," said Reeves. "We concentrated quite a bit on the ranger stakes."



Events in the stakes include physical and mental challenges, ranging from a 60-foot Prusik climb and rappel to the construction of a field-expedient antenna composed of sticks, string, wire and plastic spoons.

"We also concentrated on strengthening our legs," said Wilson. "We did a lot of biking and running — most of the events are hardest on your legs."

During an awards ceremony Monday, the team each received a Heckler and Koch 9mm pistol, five-year membership to the U.S. Army Ranger Association, Randolph ranger shooting glasses donated by Randolph Engineering Corp., Teva sandals donated by Wickham's Outdoor World, and a plaque from the 75th Ranger Regiment Association.

Now that the competition is over, said Wilson, "We want food." "Good, greasy food," Reeves agreed.

Reeves is unmarried. Wilson and his wife, Jane, have a son, Erik, age 7, and a 4-year-old daughter, Stephanie.

... try, try again

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

The ones who've been there agree — knowing what to expect isn't necessarily an advantage.

Staff Sgt. Peter J. Roethke, representing the 25th Infantry Division, Schofield Barracks, Hawaii and competing for "Best Ranger" for the second year in a row, placed second with teammate 1st Lt. Loren Cannon, also of the 25th Inf. Div.

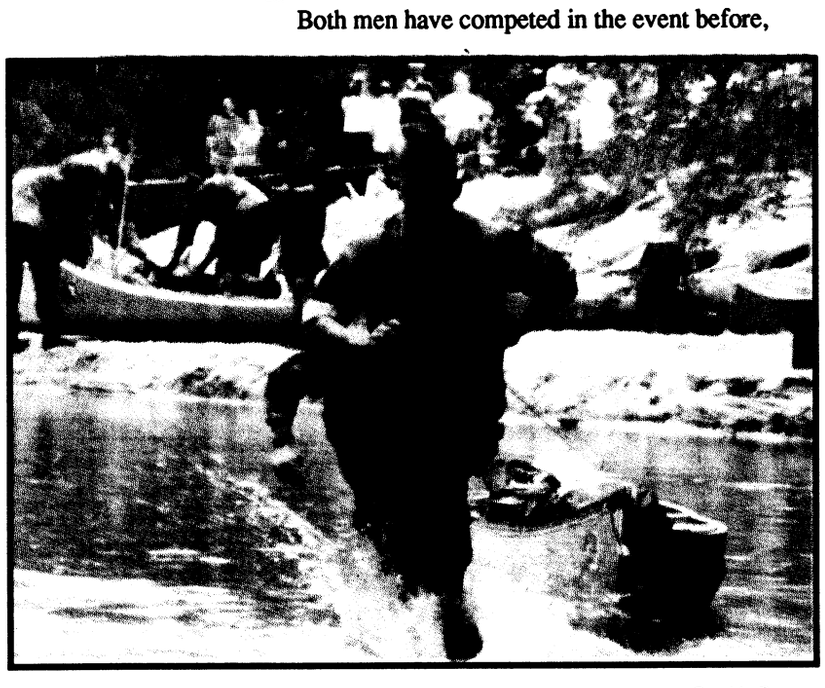
"It's easier in some ways when you come back," said Roethke, "because the standards are clearer. You know what to expect, but that works against you, too. This year was my partner's first, and he was gung-ho for every event. Knowing what was coming up made it tougher for me mentally."

Roethke said experience had made him train differently for this year's ordeal. "I didn't go out and abuse my body every day like I did last year," he said. "I trained smarter, and it paid off for me.

"I'll definitely be back," Roethke said. "It's the ultimate — you've got to try to be the best."

Some try to resist the lure of the contest. Another ranger, also repeating the competition, said during the second day, "I had to get hit on the head twice before I learned not to cross the street again."

At the awards ceremony, he spoke of returning for next year's competition.



First Lt. Edward R. Garcia of 3rd Battalion, 505th Parachute Infantry Regiment, Fort Bragg, N.C., placed sixth with his partner, 1st Lt. Arthur B. Robertson, 1st Bn., 325th Inf. Regt., also at Fort Bragg.

"I've gotten a taste for it," said Garcia, a first-time entrant. "Now I'm hungry — I want to come back next year. I'll just have to train harder."

Military Appreciation Week offers variety of events

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Military Appreciation Week, a week set aside by the communities of Columbus, Phenix City and Fort Benning to recognize military organizations, service members and their families, will begin Monday.

A variety of events will take place throughout the week, ending with Armed Forces Day May 15.

The following is a list of scheduled events:

Kick-off breakfast

Retired Lt. Gen. Bruce Blount, vice chairman of the Association of the United States Army, will be the guest speaker at a breakfast at the Harmony Church Field House Monday from 6 to 7:30 a.m. Tickets are available through units.

Kick-off relay

The race will start at 6 a.m. in front of Infantry Hall and finish at the breakfast at the Harmony Church Field House. The 8.3-mile course will be divided into one-mile legs. AUSA sub-chapters will sponsor six-person teams. Each runner will complete one or two legs until the team reaches the field house. The last runners will report to the commanding general that their team has completed the course.

Essay contest

The Columbus Ledger-Enquirer is sponsoring an essay contest on "What the military does for our community." The contest is open to all school children in the tri-communities. For more information, call Jenny Collins at 324-5526.

Bowling tournament

A bowling tournament will be conducted at the Main Post and Mall bowling centers today through May 14. Special prizes will be awarded for high game. For more information, call Jim Cantrell at 682-7781.

"Fit to Win" competition

AUSA sub-chapters will sponsor teams in the following events, which will be on the days listed in Doughboy Stadium from 4 to 5 p.m.

Push-ups - Monday
Each team will consist of five individuals, with at least one woman. Each team member will do as many push-ups as he or she can in three minutes. The total number of correct push-ups the team does will be the team's score. Awards will go to the top three teams.

100m dash - Tuesday
Each competitor will run the 100 meters twice, once in the preliminaries and once in the flighted finals. The four fastest times will run the first flight, the next four fastest the second flight, and so on.

One mile run - Thursday
The top three men and the top three women finishers will receive medals.

Tug o' war - May 14
Teams will consist of 11 individuals and competition will be double elimination. Awards will go to the top three teams.

Beach Volleyball Classic

AUSA sub-chapter teams of four individuals will play best of three game matches Tuesday at 4 p.m. at Scooters, 5251 Sidney Simons Blvd.

Columbus RedStixx night

The Columbus RedStixx and the local AUSA chapter will host Military Appreciation Night Wednesday at Golden Park on Victory Drive. Post command sergeants major will play softball against local celebrities at 5 p.m., followed by a RedStixx game at 7 p.m. The Silver Wings will parachute in with the game ball, and the Ranger Training Brigade will perform a mini rangers-in-action demonstration. Tickets are available through units for $1.50. For information, call Command Sgt. Maj. Joe Heckard at 544-6980.

Golf tournament

A golf tournament open to the first 120 military and AUSA corporate members is scheduled Thursday at the Follow Me Golf Course. There will be a shotgun start at 12:30 p.m. For more information, call George Cliff at 687-1940.

Fishing tournament

A fishing tournament will be May 14 at the Uchee Creek Recreation Area from 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. The entry fee is $10. Awards will go to the entries with the most weight caught. For more information, call Howard Givens at 545-7238 or 545-4053.

Open swim meet

AUSA is sponsoring a swim meet open for all active duty military, retirees, family members and civilian employees May 14 from 5 to 7:30 p.m. Register at Briant Wells Pool from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday. For more information, call Billy Clarke at 545-4388.

"Burn the General" Run

A three-mile race against the commanding general will start May 15 at 9 a.m. at York Field. Every finisher will receive a certificate. The first 25 men and 15 women will also receive special awards. For more information, call Robert Shelley at 545-1940.

Awards ceremony

An awards ceremony will take place May 15 at 11 a.m. at York Field. Awards will be handed out for the week's events and the winners of the annual Ms. AUSA contest will be crowned.

Armed Forces Day Picnic

A picnic will be from noon to 5 p.m. May 15 at Olive Field off Dixie Road. Everyone is invited to attend. For more information, call Jim Gallagher at 545-4539.

Week to end with a bang

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

At the end of a week honoring the military, Fort Benning will top off events with the celebration of Armed Forces Day.

"Proud, Professional, Prepared" is the theme for the May 15 open house observance, which will feature a variety of events from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Activities will include a static military equipment display, a performance by the Silver Wings, the U.S. Army Infantry Center's command exhibition parachute team, unit competitions, booths, a business fair and many community-sponsored events.

The events will be on York and Stewart-Watson fields from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Food and beverages will be on sale at the annual Chattahoochee Valley - Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army picnic from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Stewart-Watson Field.

An awards ceremony and the crowning of the two Ms. AUSAs will also be featured on York Field from 11 a.m. to noon.

The public is invited to participate in all the activities.

Community says 'thanks'

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Working long, hard hours. Meeting mental and physical challenges. Spending weeks in the field or at schools away from family and friends. All just part of being a soldier.

But it is not a thankless job.

In recognition of service members, their families and military organizations, the tri-communities of Columbus, Phenix City and Fort Benning have extended the celebration of Armed Forces Day into a full week of events highlighting the importance of the military in the area.

Military Appreciation Week begins Monday and it extends through May 15.

"This week is an opportunity for the community to show the soldiers and their families that we care about them," said retired Lt. Gen. Ben F. Register, the president of the Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter Association of the United States Army.

Register

The chapter has joined hands with the Columbus Chamber of Commerce, the Phenix City-Russell County Chamber of Commerce and local businesses and organizations in the tri-community to sponsor Military Appreciation Week, Register said.

"It is a week for the community to express its appreciation for what the soldier does, not just for national defense, but for the community itself," Register said.

"This will be a great opportunity to promote community involvement."

A variety of games and events will be conducted throughout the week, culminating in the Armed Forces Day celebration and picnic.

"We hope soldiers and their families will take part in and enjoy the events," Register said.

"It's going to be a big week with a lot happening. It will be a lot of fun, and everybody should have a good time — that's what it's all about."

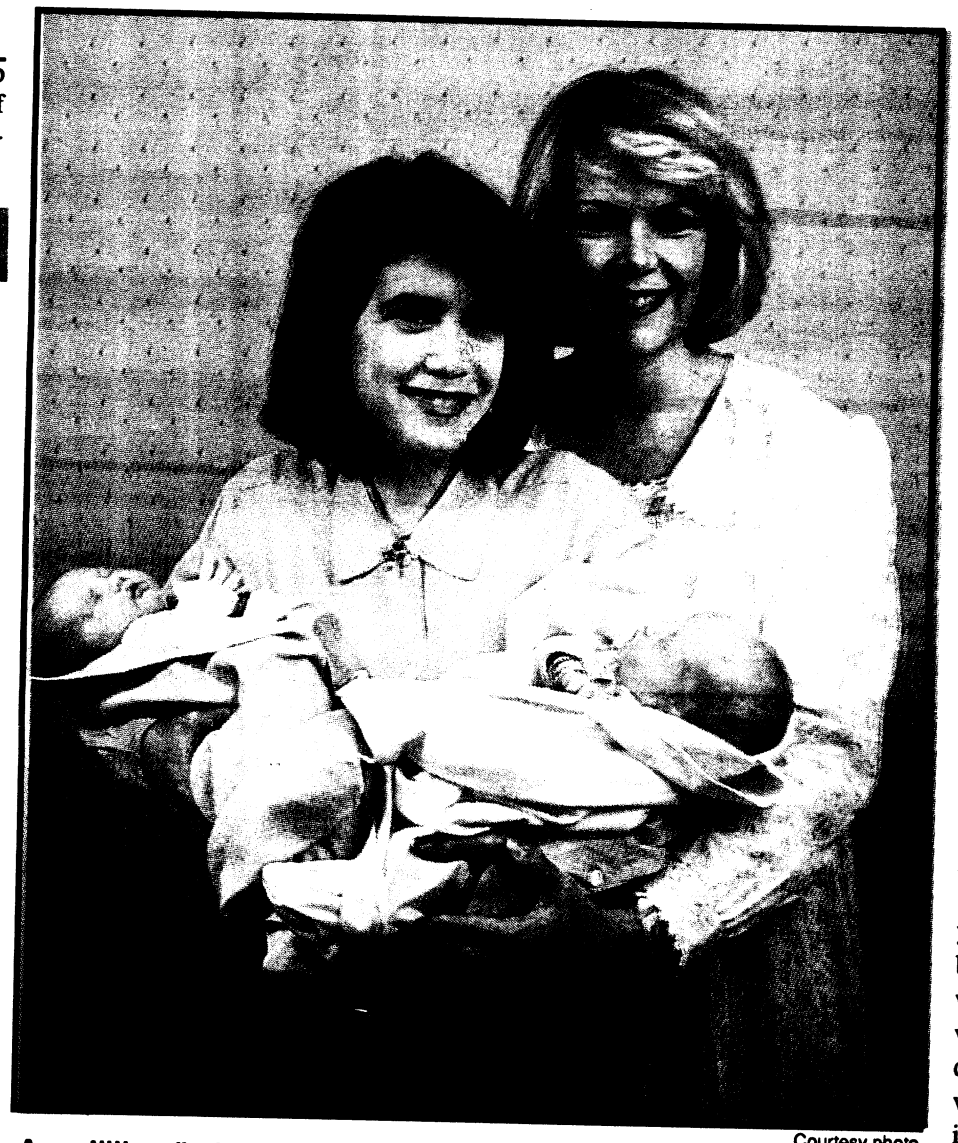
Ann Jillian undergoes true 'Labor of Love'

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

Since Mother's Day is an occasion to celebrate all moms' efforts on behalf of their children, Ann Jillian's newest TV-movie is timed ideally.



SPOTLIGHT

Sunday's CBS drama "Labor of Love: The Arlette Schweitzer Story" marks the entertainer's first major project since she gave birth to her first child last spring, so she readily tapped into the emotions that the true story encompasses.

In the title role, she plays the first woman in America to have carried the unborn child of her own daughter (portrayed by former "Growing Pains" regular Tracey Gold) — who had no uterus — to term, via in vitro fertilization. Actually, the process ended up being a double cause for joy, since twins were the result.

Also featured in the film are Bill Smitrovich ("Life Goes On") as the elder lady's husband, Donald Logue as her son-in-law, Diana Scarwid ("Mommie Dearest") as her sister, and Frances Sternhagen (seen periodically as Cliff's mother on "Cheers") as her mother; additionally, the real-life Arlette Schweitzer has a cameo, appearing as one of her own library co-workers.

Written by Susan Baskin, who also did the teleplay for NBC's recent "Born Too Soon," the tale was directed by television veteran Jerry London (who worked with Jillian previously on the miniseries "Ellis Island," for which she was Emmy-nominated).

Courtesy photo

Ann Jillian (in background) and Tracey Gold.

"I think it's very appropriate that this is being aired on Mother's Day," the ever-pleasant Jillian confirms, "since it's the story of a mother's love for her family and of just how far that love will go. Though the daughter was born without a uterus, her eggs were intact; her husband's sperm did inseminate her own egg, then the mother was artificially inseminated with the egg. In essence, Arlette was just providing a home in which the babies could grow for nine months, because all her daughter ever wanted in life was to become a mother."

What: "Labor of Love"
When: Sunday, 9 p.m. on CBS

Admitting that she was seeking just the right project to re-activate her career, having spent the past year at home with husband Andy Murcia and their new addition to their family, Jillian — who also restarts her musical act in Atlantic City, N.J., next weekend and performs Friday on NBC's 90th-birthday salute to Bob Hope — declares that Sunday's movie "was it."

"When it came along, I just said, 'Oh, yes,' " she said. "The odd thing is that before I became pregnant, I remembered walking along one of the Malibu beaches with my brother-in-law and one of our discussions was about my having read a wonderful story about a woman who was inseminated with her daughter's egg. I thought, 'Boy, would that make a great movie!' Little did I know that many months down the line, not only would I give birth myself, but I would also end up playing that woman."

Infantry officer candidates learn what's ahead

By Sydni Redmond
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Combined arms live-fire exercises are designed to train Infantry Officer Basic Course candidates to interact with many different offensive Army forces. It's also a valuable source of knowledge of the forthcoming expectations and responsibilities placed on an infantry officer.

"Fort Benning Today" followed IOBC students as they progressed through the live-fire support phase of the CALFEX and captured segments of the demonstration that will air next week on the U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information channel.

USAIC TV Schedule

Fort Benning Today: 8:30 p.m. to 1:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 1:30 to 2 p.m.
Specials: 2 to 4:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 4:30 to 8:30 p.m.

Highlights of the Best Ranger Competition will air during the week and post movie previews will also be showing. USAIC TV will highlight post events and list classified advertisements on the Fort Benning Community Bulletin Board with news and music from Soldiers Radio Satellite Network.

If you are a subscriber to Fort Benning Cable, you can watch USAIC TV on Channel 3, 24 hours a day.

Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:26, 7:56, 8:26 and 8:56 on WLTZ TV-38.

For more information or to make suggestions, write or call the Broadcast Section of the Public Affairs Office, Infantry Hall, Room 602, 545-2201.

Ski pros to flood Cypress

Cypress Gardens

CYPRESS GARDENS, Fla. — The best of the best will gather at Cypress Gardens, "the water-ski capital of the world," for the Bud Pro Water-Ski Tour, a professional water-ski tournament.

On June 26 the qualifying rounds will begin at 10 a.m.

The tournament finals take place June 27, with kneeboarding and skiboarding beginning the competition. These athletes will battle for first, second and third place in the slalom, freestyle and jumping categories.

"We are excited to be hosting the Bud Pro Water-Ski Tour," said Bill Reynolds, general manager and executive vice president of Cypress Gardens. "Cypress Gardens, the birthplace of water-skiing, is a natural place to be holding this world-class tournament." The Bud Pro Tour will be aired nationally on ESPN.

Cypress Gardens, an Anheuser-Busch theme park, is open daily 9:30 a.m. until 5:30 p.m. and is located near Winter Haven, Fla., off U.S. 27, 40 minutes southwest of Sea World and Walt Disney World, one hour from Tampa or Orlando. The single adult admission price is $22.95 (plus tax), which includes all shows and attractions; admission for children 3 to 9 years old is $16.45 (plus tax). Children two and under are admitted free. Parking is also free.

Other nearby Anheuser-Busch theme parks include Busch Gardens in Tampa, Fla.,; Sea World marine life parks in Orlando, Fla.,; Adventure Island in Tampa.

Atlanta to host culture festival

Roy Communications

The City of Atlanta has announced its endorsement of, and participation in, the Festival of Cultures, an eclectic weekend extravaganza celebrating the city's rich ethnic and cultural diversity.

The July event — sponsored by the City of Atlanta, Atlanta Magazine and Bell South — will be a multi-cultural showcase that will entertain, enlighten and educate an estimated 200,000 people; while also reinforcing Atlanta's image as an international city, according to festival producers, Creative Events & Services and Roy Communications.

"We believe that this festival provides the perfect opportunity for Atlantans to learn more about the cultures that provide for such a rich variety of people within our community," said Holly Mull, the City of Atlanta's special events manager. "The Festival of Cultures will assist in preparing the people of Atlanta to host the world during the 1996 Summer Olympic Games."

The Festival of Cultures, which will have a $2 admission fee, will be on the four streets around Atlanta's City Hall.

The event will kick off July 24 at 10 a.m. with a "Parade of Cultures" presenting the more than 100 cultures represented in Atlanta. The Festival's gates will open at 11 a.m. and close at 9 p.m. July 25, the gates will open at 1 p.m. and close at 8 p.m.

'Private Lives' to close curtains tonight

Springer Opera House

And you thought you had a rotten honeymoon. After a tempestuous, seven-year marriage that includes both violent outbursts and passionate romance, Elyot and Amanda split up. Five years pass and they finally remarry — this time to stable, conservative, very kind, very loving people.

Unfortunately, both couples decide to honeymoon on the French Riviera and check into the same hotel — in neighboring rooms. Of course, it's only a matter of time before before the exs run into one another and, well, they fall in love again and escape secretly without a word to their new spouses.

This is the famous opening scene to Noel Coward's comedy classic, "Private Lives," showing tonight at the Springer Opera House, concluding the Springer's 1992-93 mainstage season.

"Noel Coward is the founding father of the situation comedy," director Paul R. Pierce said. "Everything we know about contemporary comedy was developed and explored in the 1930s and '40s by Noel Coward in England and George S. Kaufman in America and in 1960, the whole comedy dynasty was turned over to Neil Simon."

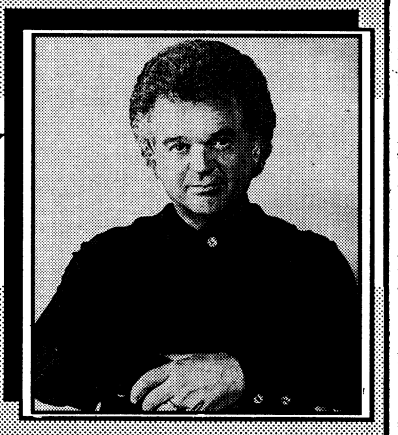
"Private Lives" is about an amorous couple who can't stand one another and can't stand being apart. Theirs is a love affair of enormous volatility — one moment, barely unable to contain their passion and the next, breaking furniture and rolling on the floor, biting and scratching each other.

Noel Coward's characters are always very wealthy, privileged people who lead extraordinarily opulent lifestyles. "Private Lives" is no exception and the action moves from a grand Riviera hotel and casino to Amanda's Paris apartment.

Robin Hogan, last seen in Springer productions of "Biloxi Blues" and "The Circle," plays the flamboyant Amanda opposite B.J. Landen in the role of Elyot, the international playboy with a quick wit and sharp tongue. Landen recently portrayed E.K. Hornbeck in the Springer's January production of "Inherit The Wind."

Sherilyn Zeff, who performed in "Rumors" earlier this season, plays Sybil, Elyot's prim and proper new wife and Del Jackson assumes the role of Victor, Amanda's stuffy new husband. Jackson is a new face at the Springer and he recently toured in the theatre's public school production of "Stage Magic". Amanda's clumsy French maid, Louise, is played by Billie Flowers, last seen in "Stage Door Cabaret."

Peter Cranton, who designed the scenery for "Rumors" earlier this season, has returned to design the double-scene set for "Private Lives." Dona Pierce designed and constructed the elegant 1930s costumes for the show and Springer technical director William Rich provides the rich and romantic lighting design.



Following tonight's performance, there will be a meet-the-cast reception in the Springer museum and saloon. The "Private Lives" run will end tonight with the 8 p.m. performance. Tickets for "Private Lives" are $12 for adults, $10 for senior adults and $7 for students, and group rates are available.

For reservations or information, call the Springer box office at 327-3688.

The Springer has just announced its new 1993-94 season and season tickets are on sale now in the business office or at Springer performances.

Company A conducts testing

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

Obtaining a driver's license requires even the most seasoned driver to brush up on skills and the laws of the road. Consider trying to pass the test in a country where the rules may be different from your own?

This was the situation facing many of the students and family members of the School of the Americas' Command and General Staff Course.

Because the course is 47 weeks long, many of the students and their families bring or even buy cars while they are here; and, in order to drive them, they must have a Georgia driver's license.

Trying to coordinate the testing to help the students get their family members the licenses they needed was just one of several missions recently for Company A of SOA's School Battalion.

PSYOP course exercise tests practical knowledge

Michael D. Miller

Capt. Ruben Collazos, a PSYOP student from Bolivia, produces a PSYOP campaign during a practical exercise at Fort Bragg, N.C.

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

The School of the Americas Psychological Operations Course recently graduated a class following an arduous practical exercise at Fort Bragg, N.C.

According to Maj. Jaime F. Llinet, chief of Civil Military Operations for the Special Operations/Civil Military Operations Department (Airborne), SOA, the training exercise is the "execution phase" of the eight-week course.

Because the 4th PSYOP Group soldiers at Fort Bragg is the only active duty PSYOP unit, their interaction with the students is key to a complete understanding of executing a PSYOP mission, Llinet said.

The exercise started with the students receiving an operational order to conduct a PSYOP mission at corps level on an imaginary place called "Pineland."

Once they received the order, the students had to put into practice PSYOP techniques from a target audience analysis to developing an actual PSYOP campaign complete with scripts for radio, television and loudspeaker messages.

The objective of the exercise, as well as the course itself, is to teach officers and prospective officers the principals and techniques of PSYOP missions so the students can advise their commanders on an effective PSYOP campaign, Llinet said.

Ultimately, PSYOP is designed to "change attitudes," he said, which can be beneficial to winning a war and saving lives.

"One reason so many Iraqis are alive today is because PSYOP convinced them to surrender," Llinet emphasized.

In this way, Llinet sees PSYOP as a way of advancing human rights.

"We teach our students another way of fighting a war against anarchy," he said. Additionally, an effective PSYOP campaign can improve military civic programs, such as nation-building missions, Llinet added.

"PSYOP is a more civilized way of doing things, plus it helps avoid unnecessary violence," he said.

SOA NCO, soldier of the quarter excel

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

The School of the Americas Noncommissioned Officer and Soldier of the Quarter for the third quarter share a desire to reach levels of excellence that ensure a successful career in the military.

For Staff Sgt. Blanca E. Adams and Spc. Toby N. Coleman, being named as the best enlisted soldiers for the third quarter is just one stop on the road to achieving their best.

Adams, a native of Del Rio, Texas, entered the military March 20, 1979, and attended basic training at Fort Gordon, Ga.

She completed advanced individual training at Fort Gordon, Ga., as a tactical wire specialist. In March 1986, Adams reclassified and attended AIT at Fort Huachuca, Ariz.

Graduating as an intelligence analyst, Adams said her primary job is to analyze intelligence from the battlefield.

As an instructor in SOA's Special Operations/ Civil Military Operations Department (Airborne), Adams uses her skills as an intelligence analyst to instruct Latin American students in the school's Military Intelligence Course.

A mother of two, Adams and her husband, James, an infantry sergeant at Kelley Hill, have their hands full raising a family as a dual-service couple, and they are expecting their third child this month.

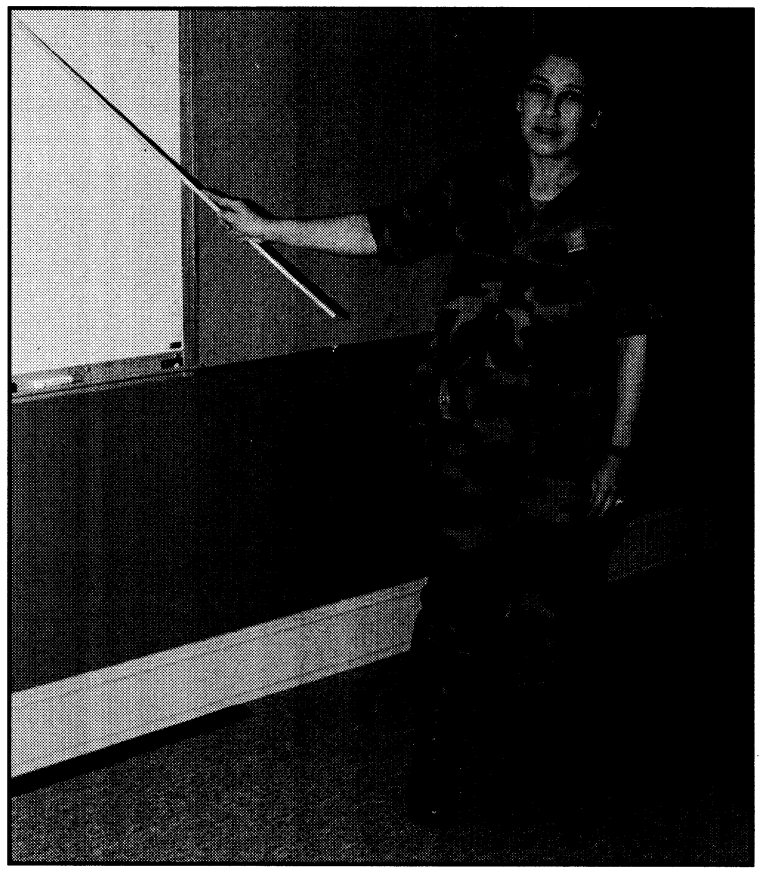
According to Adams, military challenges increased with her assignment to SOA as an instructor, where she must use her language capability to communicate and instruct students in U.S. military doctrine.

"Although I know the language, I've never had to communicate as an instructor until now," Adams said.

Past assignments took Adams to Germany twice, Fort Sill, Okla.; Fort Hood, Texas; and Fort Riley, Kan.

Among the awards Adams has received are: the Army Commendation Medal (second oak leaf cluster); the Army Achievement Medal (third oak leaf cluster); the Good Conduct Medal (fourth award); National Defense Service Medal; the Noncommissioned Officers Professional Development Ribbon for completing the Primary Leadership Development Course and the Basic Noncommissioned Officers Course; the Army Service Ribbon and the Overseas Service Ribbon.

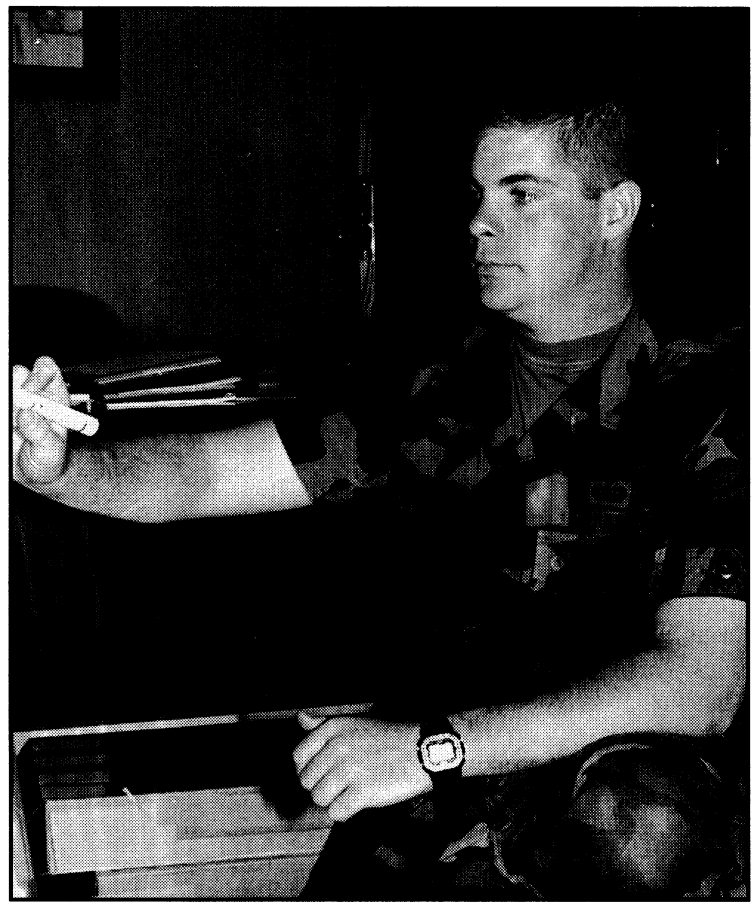
Adams' plans include a stint on the trail as a drill sergeant and completing at least 20 years of military service.



Maintaining a career in the military is also a high priority for Coleman, SOA's Soldier of the Quarter for the third quarter, who started his career in the National Guard.

Coleman, a native of San Diego, Calif., grew up in Phoenix, Ariz., and attended basic and advanced individual training in June 1989 at Fort McClellan, Ala., and graduated as a military police specialist.

He served in the 855th Military Police Company, Arizona National Guard, and he was assigned to duty on the border to conduct customs inspections and other border control missions.



He decided to go active duty and reclassified as an armor for small arms repair in March 1991.

"I reclassed because I wanted to work with weapons," Coleman said.

Spc. Toby N. Coleman, SOA Soldier of the Quarter for the third quarter.

He attended AIT at Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Md., and graduated with his specialty in small arms repair.

Coleman is assigned to the Directorate of Logistics, Ammunition Section for SOA, which ensures the acquisition and delivery of ammunition to all of the SOA courses and permanent party training exercises.

Winning the Soldier of the Quarter board served a dual-purpose for Coleman. "I like boards because they keep me up to date on the knowledge required to be an enlisted soldier or noncommissioned officer," he said.

Coleman hopes to make it to the post NCO of the Quarter board. However, his biggest military goal is to complete Special Forces training and earn what he called, "the tab of all tabs."

"Some people grow up wanting to be the president of the United States; the epitome of my career would be getting into Special Forces," he said.

In addition to the prestige of being part of an elite unit, Coleman sees the Special Forces and special operations as a secure position during the drawdown.

Coleman has completed airborne training and is attending Primary Leadership Development Course at the Henry Caro NCO Academy.

His awards include: the Army Commendation Medal, the Army Achievement Medal, the National Defense Service Medal, the Army Service Ribbon and the Overseas Service Ribbon.

SOA instructors compete in 'Best Ranger'

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

For the first time in the history of the best ranger competition, a team from the School of the Americas entered the grueling competition.

The ranger-qualified team of Staff Sgt. Victor H. Felipe and Staff Sgt. Socrates Domiguez, instructors with SOA's Special Operations Division, were among several teams that fell short during the 20-mile forced road march.

According to Felipe and Domiguez, however, the challenge of competing for the title best ranger was reason enough to enter.

The competition was the culmination of more than three months of training by Felipe and Domiguez and coordination by several departments of SOA.

The idea to enter was something Felipe has wanted to do for a long time.

"I wanted to do it at my last unit before I got here," Felipe said.

After approaching his chain of command to request the authorization, Felipe had to find a teammate.

It wasn't hard to convince fellow special operations instructor Domiguez to join up.

"Ever since I've been in the Army, I've heard about the best ranger competition, but I could never find anyone to do it with me, so when Felipe asked me, I said let's give it a try," Domiguez said.

Their chain of command in the Special Operations/Civil Military Operations Department, SOA, put them on special duty after Christmas and they trained right up to the competition.

According to Domiguez, they road marched, lifted weights and at a minimum were able to practice all of the competition events three times.

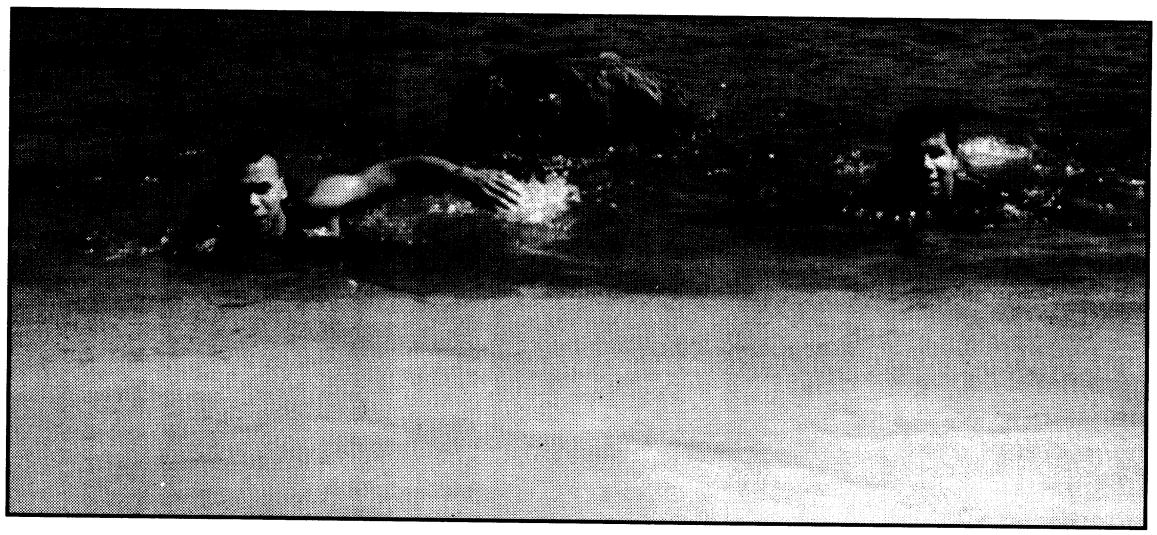
Building up to the competition, Felipe said they didn't have any trouble with the events.

Unlike some of the other units that sent participants to the competition, SOA's only team was Felipe and Domiguez.

With only one team, an injury during training could have spelled disaster, but both competitors said their singleness of purpose and team spirit helped in the end.

"We knew we had to come through for both of us; we had that commitment," Felipe said. "With us it's all or nothing."

Throughout the training, which included spot jumps, swimming, canoeing and the obstacle course, Felipe and Domiguez had help with coordination for ranges and airborne operations.



Although Felipe and Domiguez actually competed, Staff Sgt. Federico Dottin, also a special operations instructor, was placed on special duty to help coordinate range time and jump time as well.

"We would tell him what we needed and on what days and he coordinated it and kept us informed," Domiguez said.

In the end, Felipe and Domiguez saw the competition as a way to keep their edge.

"This is great training, it keeps us current and you just can't beat it," Felipe said.

"We're already rangers, so we already know how it is; we just figured why not take another step above and try out for the best."

Cadets conduct cordon, search at MOUT site

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

Indirect fire was called in as a platoon of Colombian soldiers entered the town to conduct a cordon and search following information on suspicious activities in the town of "McKenna MOUT."

To the casual observer, that might appear to be the entire mission conducted by the Colombian cadets of the School of the Americas' Cadet Infantry Orientation Course, recently.

However, the exercise, which lasted approximately an hour, actually started before the sun began to rise. The cadets who carried out the cordon and search were up and moving to the objective by 4 a.m., calling for indirect fire and moving into the McKenna Military Operations on Urban Terrain site as the sun started to light the early-morning sky.

This practical exercise is one of several planned, instructed and carried out by the Department of Tactics and Combined Arms, the department in charge of the cadet courses.

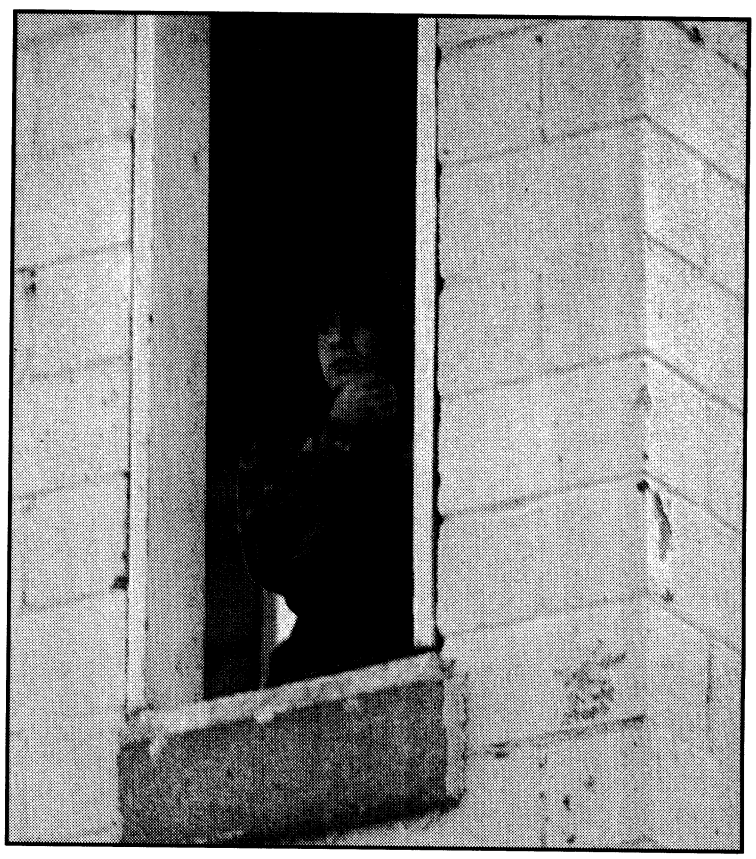
The exercise at McKenna MOUT incorporates many techniques, from clearing buildings to keeping civilians separated from the enemy and using a loudspeaker to give instructions to noncombatants.

According to Staff Sgt. Miguel Aviles, a DTAC instructor, the cordon and search at McKenna MOUT requires the Colombian cadets to enter the town, search and clear the buildings, confiscate weapons, capture the enemy and protect innocent civilians.

As the cadets moved through the town, they encountered the enemy; and, in one instance by cordoning off the town, kept one enemy soldier from escaping.

In addition to the enemy, the cadets had to deal with a mother who was upset about her children and a priest who did not want them to search his church.

The emphasis on civilian encounters was to test the level of human rights awareness and according to Aviles, the cadets were successful in that, as well as other phases of the exercise.



The cadets kept innocent civilians, like the mother, in a separate holding area than the one for enemy soldiers to keep them safe from the urban battle; they talked with the priest to convince him to let them search the church for enemy soldiers; and they treated an enemy soldier wounded during the battle, Aviles said.

Maj. Elias V. Balderas, chief of DTAC, praised the cadets for their attention to detail especially when it came to the treatment of civilians.

"They did real well," Balderas said. "There was no unnecessary force, they segregated the guerrillas from the civilians and they cleared and worked the buildings and rooms."

In addition to the tactical success of the exercise, the cadets worked well as a team, he added.

Balderas also gave credit to the instructors for planning and implementing the exercise.

TESTING: Examiners assist SOA families

members, even on the weekends.

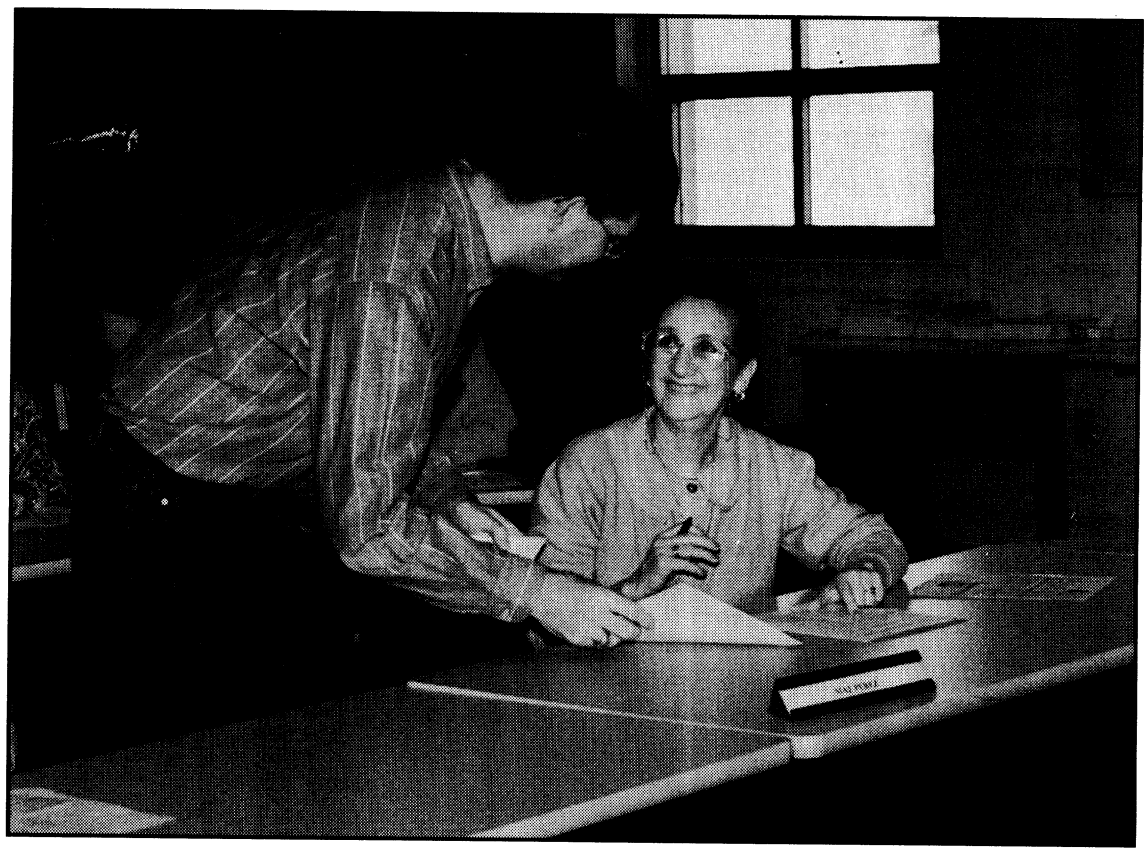
According to Capt. Paul A. Rudesheim, commander Co. A, coordination was made with the driver's license bureau in Columbus to conduct the testing at SOA Headquarters, and he set up a two-hour class prior to the test.

Because many of the family members had driver's licenses from their countries, they had plenty of practical experience; they just needed to learn the rules of the road in the United States, to include road signs.

"We gave them a mini driver's license test and familiarized them with road signs," he said.

Following the class, the driver's tests were given and graded by John P. Williams, chief examiner of the driver's license bureau in Columbus, and Debbie Brasseaux, senior examiner.

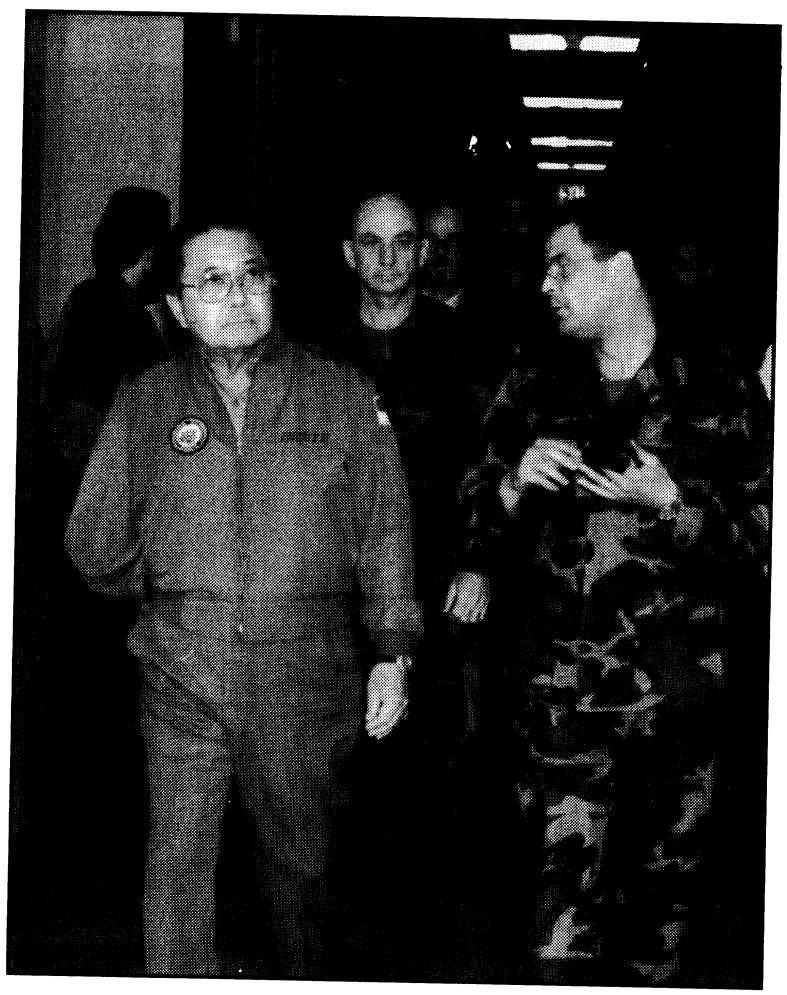
Although the test was for a Georgia state driver's license, the questions were in Spanish, which is a standard procedure for licensing people who are here temporarily from a Latin American country.



In order to help with the testing, Co. A brought in some translators.

According to Williams, of the approximately 30 participants who tested, only a small percentage failed the exam.

The results were "the best percentage we've had out of our office on foreign tests," Williams said. "They did remarkably well."



According to Williams, he would gladly assist Co. A next time.

"They were the best people we've ever worked with at any installation," Williams said. All they have to do is tell me when and where and I'll be en route."

Mall has changes in store

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

Within two weeks, a new Robin Hood Sandwich Shop is scheduled to open in the Post Exchange at the Main Mall near the entrance, according to Gene R. Wheeler, Fort Benning Army and Air Force Exchange Services general manager.

This AAFES in-house franchise will be just one of the changes in 1993 at the post's Main Mall.

By Oct. 1, Wheeler expects the current snack bar to be replaced by a Burger King Express, featuring a limited Burger King menu, and another in-house franchise called Royal Chopsticks, which will offer an oriental fast food fare.

The Baskin-Robbins ice cream shop also will be renovated.

Upcoming AAFES changes at Fort Benning will include the Post Exchange at the Main Mall, too.

Wheeler said since the implementation of the Deferred Payment Plan, floor space has become a problem in stocking all of the items the store needs.

The program allows active duty personnel, Reservists, National Guard members, AAFES associates and retirees to purchase merchandise with extended payment terms at an annual finance rate of 12 percent. It is especially helpful for soldiers buying "big ticket" items, Wheeler said.

He said response to the program has been a substantial increase in sales despite the downsizing of the forces.

Stocking extra items to accommodate this has put space at a premium so the process of stocking is being done at night, when the store is closed, to make the facility less congested.

The result is that AAFES is looking at expanding the store temporarily by 10,000 square feet within the next six to nine months, and long-term at a 30,000-square-foot renovation that would mean an $8 to $9 million project.

"However, something like that would be three to four years down the road," Wheeler said.

He is pleased about the increase in business but also wants soldiers to know that by shopping at the exchange, they are supporting themselves.

Though the Army provides AAFES with the buildings from which to operate, its stores are 90 percent self-sustaining in paying for their own utilities, personnel and supplies.

Profits are split on a sliding scale between AAFES for capital improvements and the post's Morale, Welfare and Recreation fund to improve services for soldiers.

Wheeler said last year AAFES gave $2.8 million back to Fort Benning for this purpose. Also, of its 800 employees here, about 65 percent are military or military family members, who contribute to the local economy.

Currently, a little more than $6 million per month in sales is realized by AAFES here, he said, with Fort Benning's operation being in the top 20 worldwide.

Benning to honor military

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

"Proud, Professional, Prepared," is the theme for Saturday's Armed Forces Day celebration on the fields in front of Infantry Hall.

Military Appreciation Week, a week-long celebration of the contributions of the military, culminates with Armed Forces Day.

A variety of events, including the Association of the United States Army's annual picnic, will take place from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Activities will include a military equipment display, a performance by the U.S. Army Infantry Center's command exhibition parachute team, the "Silver Wings," unit competitions, booths, a business fair and community-sponsored events.

Also, food and beverages will be available.

The public is invited to participate in all activities.

AUSA serves thanks with sunrise breakfast

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Military Appreciation Week kicked off before dawn Monday with a breakfast sponsored by the Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army.

More than 1,000 soldiers and civilians made their way through the dark to the Harmony Church Field House — not such an achievement for soldiers who wake up early every day, but a true testimonial to the military by the civilians who attended.

Everyone was rewarded for getting out of bed early with breakfast, door prizes and entertainment by the Infantry Band and Miss Columbus.

Retired Lt. Gen. Ben Register, the president of the Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter of AUSA, welcomed everyone and introduced the speakers.

Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White thanked Register and the AUSA corporate members for their year-round work and support.

He also urged everyone to take part in the week's events, including Saturday's "Burn the General Run."

The guest speaker was retired Lt. Gen. Bruce Blount, vice chairman of the Association of the United States Army, who explained the role, goals and concerns of AUSA.

Blount is no stranger to Fort Benning, Register said in his introduction. He attended the Infantry Officer Advanced Course here, served on the faculty of the Infantry School, completed airborne training and served as secretary of the Infantry School, Register said.

Among other positions, Blount has served as the commanding general of the U.S. Army Training Center at Fort Jackson, S.C., the chief of staff of the U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command, and as chief of staff, Allied Forces South.

His decorations include the Army Distinguished Service Medal, the Defense Superior Service Medal, the Silver Star, the Legion of Merit with one oak leaf cluster, the Bronze Star and the Purple Heart.

White, Blount and Register then presented awards to the following soldiers :

Pvt. 1st Class John Proulx, Company D, 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, recognized for outstanding job performance during the 24th Infantry Division's Command Inspection.

Spc. Kerry Hook, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment, recognized for outstanding duty performance in her battalion personnel office.

Staff Sgt. Jennifer A. Pearson, Ranger Training Brigade, recognized for outstanding support during the 1993 Best Ranger Competition.

Staff Sgt. Eric J. Thein, Infantry Training Brigade, Drill Sergeant of the Quarter.

Spc. Pamela M. Martin, U.S. Army Medical Department Activity, Soldier of the Quarter.

Sgt. 1st Class Larry O. Fortune, 29th Infantry Regiment, Instructor of the Quarter.

Sgt. Nicholas Sandoval, School of the Americas, recognized for outstanding job performance.

Cpl. Angela Huffman, 13th Corps Support Battalion, recognized for outstanding support for the 36th Engineer Group's Command Section.

Post will get 'TAPES' to measure civilians

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

The Army and Fort Benning will be phasing in a new civilian performance appraisal system beginning July 1.

Called the Total Army Performance Evaluation System, it is designed to integrate work performance evaluation for civilian and military Army employees, according to Theresa Gunter, director of Civilian Personnel.

Gunter said the system consists of two levels: a base level system for all wage supervisors grade 8 and below, general schedule employees grade 8 and below, wage leaders and all other wage grade employees.

The senior system will apply to GS and WS workers grade 9 and above, interns, general managers and senior executive service employees.

Gunter said the system was designed to resemble the officer evaluation reports and non-commissioned officer reports used to evaluate members of the military.

The system will be phased in at the most senior levels first, in July, with further phases beginning in November and January.

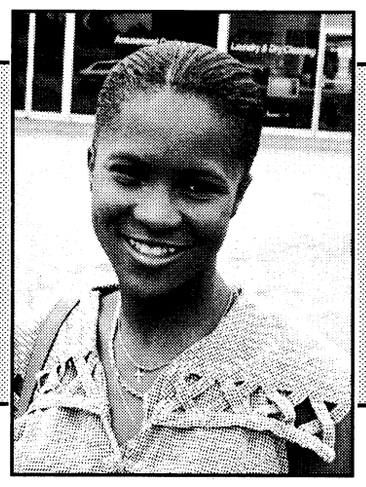
Training for the new evaluation system will be in May and early June, said Gunter.

Band, chorus to rock Riverside

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White and his wife, Linda, invite you to join them for a concert on their lawn Sunday.

Bring blankets, lawn chairs and picnic baskets and prepare to have a good time.



The Infantry Band and Infantry Chorus will perform a concert on the grounds of Riverside at 5 p.m. Sunday.

The chorus will perform three songs, two patriotic numbers and a rendition of "Wind Beneath My Wings."

The band program will feature the first solo performance of 1st Sgt. Bob Tolton, clarinetist.

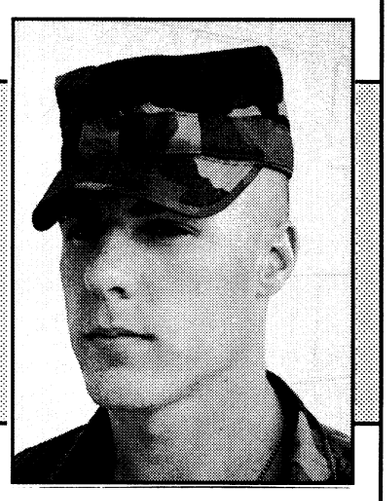
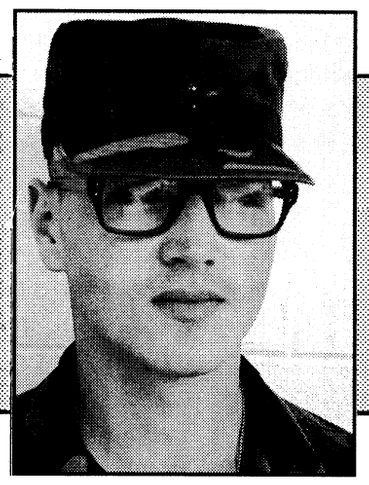
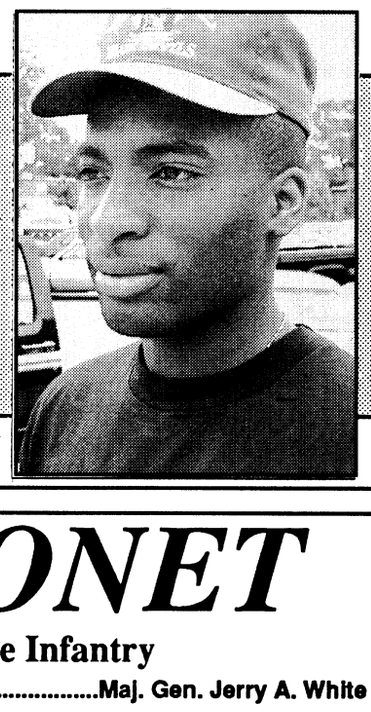
What is your pet peeve?



Spc. Cassandra T. Thomas, U.S. Army Reserves — "I hate it when a mechanic tries to rip off a woman because she's female and he thinks she doesn't know anything about cars."



Pvt. 2 Christian F. Rosado, Company C, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment — "My pet peeve is people in charge who don't ask you politely to do things, but order you to do them. Sometimes just how they say it gives me an attitude."



Melissa Y. Maya, family member — "I don't really have a pet peeve. I guess I'm a liberal person."

Pfc. Derrek R. Keller, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Training Brigade — "My biggest pet peeves, right now, are lazy people and drill sergeants."

Spc. Michael A. Johnson, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Training Brigade — "My biggest pet peeve is loud, obnoxious drill sergeants."

2nd Lt. Sherwin L. Seabrook, Company E, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "My biggest pet peeve is other people who don't pull their weight — when they know there's a job to do, but won't work with the team."

Rape is a crime of violence

By Brenda Bess
Military Police Activity

COMMENTARY

It can happen to anyone anytime of the day and there is no one piece of advice that will work in all situations.

What is it? Rape.

Sexual assault, rape, is a crime of violence, power and anger; and, according to the Uniform Code of Military Justice, it carries a maximum penalty of death or other punishment a court-martial may direct.

There are three variables to consider in each situation.

The first is the environment of the assault. For example, the use of a noisemaker or Mace may be of some use in a shopping mall parking lot to ward off an attacker, but it is futile to use it at 4 a.m. on a deserted roadway.

The use of noisemakers may lull women into a false sense of security that could increase their chances of becoming a victim.

The second factor is the victim's personality. An individual with a normally passive dependent personality may not be capable of fighting back.

An independent and assertive person may fight back at the wrong time. The type of resistance behavior a victim should exert depends on his or her ability to apply it.

The third consideration is the most important unknown variable. This is the type of rapist and his motivation for committing the crime.

There is more than one type of rapist, and it is difficult to determine a standard way to protect yourself. What turns on one rapist may turn off another.

Rape prevention maximizes the potential victim's awareness of the situation and minimizes a rapist's opportunities. Basic crime prevention procedures will help people avoid getting into potentially dangerous situations.

Communities and families should be on the lookout for strangers, keep yards well lighted during darkness, use any available lighting to your advantage, keep hedges and shrubs near windows and doors well trimmed and install good locks and use them. Do not give hitchhikers a ride.

Travel in groups, park near lighted areas, be alert to your surroundings and trust your instincts. If you don't feel that an area is safe, you should avoid it.

That only beautiful women are raped is a myth, because rape victims are of every age, shape and description. The reported ages of rape victims in Muscogee County range from 2 months to 94 years.

It is also important to realize that rape victims are female. Males who are sexually abused are considered sodomy victims, not rape victims.

Sexual assault also happens to children, and it occurs three times as often as child battery. Most assailants are acquainted with the child and the child's family. Like adult rape, child sexual assault is a crime of violence.

All units on Fort Benning should ensure that soldiers are aware of this crime, the preventive measures to take and the possible punishment if convicted.

Military members should contact the unit chaplain or Social Work Services for informational materials, including videos, posters and handouts.

If you are raped, there are some things you should do. Victims should contact the Military Police at 545-5222 and get medical attention immediately.

If you don't feel like you can contact the police, contact the staff duty officer at 545-2218, Social Work Services or the Columbus Rape Crisis hot line at 571-6010. There are volunteers available to talk to or be with the victim if he or she needs assistance.

Spc. Clyde Snively is on leave; his column will resume next week.

MESSAGES

Commanding general says thanks to military

"Proud ... Professional ... Prepared" is this year's theme for Armed Forces Day.

It's a theme that aptly describes our men and women in uniform at Fort Benning, for we are certainly a proud force, a professional force and a prepared force as recent events from Just Cause to Desert Storm to Restore Hope will attest.

Today we face an even bigger challenge as we downsize the military while still trying to maintain our readiness in the face of an even more uncertain future, in the face of an even more threatening environment.

But I have every faith in our armed forces. I know we can continue to pull together to maintain the high standards we have set for ourselves.

We at Fort Benning are indeed fortunate to have such a supportive climate from our civilian communities. They are dedicating this week to you. Their theme: "Sharing Their Pride, We Salute the Soldier."

To demonstrate that shared pride, the communities have banded together and are offering an assortment of activities throughout the week. I urge you to take advantage of these events whenever you can.

The bottom line, this is your week. Please accept my appreciation and that of our fellow Americans for your service to our country, our uniform.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White
Commanding general

TRADOC commander sends gratitude

Armed Forces Day is the occasion during which we traditionally honor those who have served our nation.

It is equally appropriate to recognize the contributions being made today by the dedicated men and women who serve the Army in and out of uniform.

Armed Forces Day 1993 brings us to the eve of the Training and Doctrine Command's 20th anniversary.

The primary reason for the success of TRADOC during this important period in history has been the quality and enthusiasm of its men and women.

As we lead the post-Cold War Army through this era of dramatic change, you truly exemplify this year's theme, "Proud ... Professional ... Prepared."

The nation is indebted to you. Your courage and selfless service have made possible the peace and freedom we all enjoy.

I thank each of you for the outstanding support rendered our country, and I challenge you to face the future with the same steadfast commitment and confidence that have served America so well.

Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr.
TRADOC commander

Powell sends honors

America will celebrate the 44th observance of Armed Forces Day Saturday.

We will honor American soldiers, sailors, airmen, Marines and Coast Guardsmen who stand vigil, securing peace around the globe. This year's theme, "Proud ... Professional ... Prepared," truly exemplifies today's armed forces.

However, change is the watchword as America works to preserve its position in the new world.

At home, our military and civilian communities are facing force reductions and base closures. Abroad, changes of historic proportions are occurring in every corner of the globe.

These changes make it more important than ever that we continue to maintain a strong, powerful and proud force with worldwide capabilities.

America's armed forces are the world's finest — championing a cause to ensure our beloved nation is safe and secure from the uncertainty of an ever-changing world.

The Joint Chiefs of Staff and I join Americans everywhere on this Armed Forces Day, sending you and your families our appreciation for your dedication and many sacrifices.

Gen. Colin L. Powell
Chairman, Joint Chiefs of Staff

Where's appreciation for disabled retirees?

Monday began a week dedicated to bring tribute to the service personnel.

This is fitting and proper. Too many of our men and women returned home from wars and other overseas action without proper recognition.

Some of us returned home with souvenirs from the enemy. Some cannot walk without the aid of canes, crutches, prosthetic devices or wheel chairs. Some will never leave their hospitals. Some remained behind, dead or alive.

How does our nation honor these personnel? Most of them receive disability compensation from the Veterans Administration. This is good for some; for some it isn't.

Those of us who remained on active duty feel the pinch. At present there is a system of punishment for this class of personnel. He or she receives the retired pay. In addition, there is also the disability compensation. This is as it should be.

But, for the military retiree, the disability compensation is deducted from the retired pay. Therefore, the military retiree, in essence, is paying for his or her own disability, whereas those who do not remain to retire do not.

In its merciful endeavors toward the disabled retiree, our nation is punishing the retired personnel for having remained on active duty to protect their beloved country.

Some served in World War II, the Korean Conflict and the Vietnam War. Yet, by having received a percentage of disability, the retiree is being punished.

This restriction does not happen to civil service retirees, it does not happen to congressional retirees, it does not happen to railroad retirees. It is only applicable to the disabled military retiree.

Ironic!

Floyd W. Bartlett
U.S. Navy, retired

Retiree is correct

In reference the above letter, Mr. Bartlett is absolutely correct. Title 38 USC, Section 3104 provides that except to the extent that retired pay is waived under other provisions of law, not more than one award of pension, compensation, or retirement pay shall be made concurrently to any person based on his own service.

Section 3105 of that title provides that a retiree may receive Veteran Affairs compensation or pension upon the filing of a waiver of retired pay equal to the amount of compensation or pension received from the VA. When a retiree waives retired pay for VA compensation in an amount that is greater than retired pay (complete waiver), retired pay is terminated If the VA award is less than retire pay entitlement (partial waiver) retired pay is reduced by the amount of the compensation or pension payment from VA.

The 1993 Defense Authorization Act (Public Law 102-484) included a provision that affects retirees with service-connected disabilities in that it directed the secretary of Defense to submit a report to the Senate and House Armed Services Committees giving alternative approaches that would permit concurrent payment of retired pay and service-connected disability compensation without reducing either. This report was due April 1.

The results of that report may be listed in the "Shift Colors," the Navy publication for military retirees.

AUSA seeks superior civilians

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

The Association of the United States Army is reaching out and recognizing the important role Department of the Army civilians play in the total Army family.

For the first time, an award is being presented this year by AUSA for exemplary service by a DA civilian in such areas as soldier support, family support, etc.

According to Gary Burkhalter, AUSA civilian membership coordinator, nominations for the award are being sought through May 28.

To be called the George Heberling Award for Distinguished Civilian Service, the presentation will be made at the mid-June summer membership meeting of AUSA here.

Burkhalter said anyone can nominate a DA civilian by writing a letter including the nominee's name, organization and reasons for deserving the award. The nominator should also include his or her name, address and phone number.

Send nominations to:

Chattahoochee Valley/Fort Benning Chapter AUSA

P.O. Box 2036

Fort Benning, Ga. 31905

The award was named for Heberling, Burkhalter said, because as the first civilian to serve as comptroller of a military post, he represented the many possibilities in civil service promotion rising from an operations officer to one of the highest grades in the field.

Heberling retired as director of Resource Management at Fort Benning after 34 years of government service. A vestibule in Meloy Hall was named after him earlier this year.

Heberling died in 1987.

Nominations will be reviewed by an AUSA committee with the winner to be given a plaque, and that name to then be forwarded for regional, and perhaps national AUSA recognition.

Burkhalter said all nominations will be appreciated, and one does not have to be an AUSA member to take part in the competition.

Soldiers meet commander-in-chief

By David Greer
36th Engineer Group

Two soldiers from the 36th Engineer Group visited the White House May 5.

Staff Sgt. Michael E. St. Onge of the 43rd Engineer Battalion and Spc. Bradley S. Moses of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 36th Engineer Group returned to Columbus May 6.

St. Onge and Moses were among representatives of the military services invited to the White House Rose Garden to meet President Bill Clinton.

The president invited the soldiers to the White House to express his appreciation to the men and women of the armed forces for their humanitarian service in Somalia as part of "Operation Restore Hope."

Fort Benning's 36th Engineer Group, which was attached to the 10th Mountain Division, provided engineer support throughout the theater of operations.

"We were proud to send two of our finest young troops to meet the commander-in-chief," said Command Sgt. Major James Gardner of the 36th. "I only regret that we could not send the entire 36th Group because, like every thing else we do, the results we achieved in Somalia were due to a total team effort."

Meeting the president was quite an experience for Moses.

"It was a once in a lifetime experience," said Moses. "I wish every soldier could experience it.

St. Onge took the opportunity to present 36th Engineer Group coins to the president and his staff.

"Lt. Col. Dwight Durham, the executive officer for the 36th Group, gave me some 36th Engineer Group coins of excellence to present to the president and his staff." said St. Onge.

"I presented the coins to all the commanders of the Air Force, Marines and even Gen. Colin Powell."

St. Onge said that when he presented Vice President Al Gore with the coin, Gore was shocked.

"He asked me what it was and I told him it was a symbol of respect from all the soldiers of the 36th Engineer Group. I added 'Volunteer,' which is the motto for the state of Tennessee. He asked me if I was from there, and I told him that I have lived there for the past 14 years and that my wife and child were there now.

"We talked for a few minutes, and I found out that he served in the Army as a specialist in the same unit at Fort Campbell, Ky., that I had served in, "he continued. "It was just unbelievable that I was standing there talking with the vice president.

"It was great, and I hope that all soldiers someday get to have that feeling," he said.

Offices to close for holiday

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Most offices and facilities will be closed at Fort Benning Memorial Day, May 31, as military and civilian personnel observe the holiday.

Martin Army Community Hospital clinics will be closed on the holiday, with emergencies referred to the hospital's emergency room. All troop medical clinics will be closed with the exception of TMC 5 on Sand Hill. It will operate for active duty sick call from 7 a.m. to noon.

The Outpatient, Winder Family Practice and Aviation Medicine clinics on post will be closed along with the Primary Care for the Uniformed Services Family Practice Clinic, located at 1727 Boxwood Place in Columbus.

The hospital's outpatient pharmacy will open from 9 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 6 p.m. on the holiday. The Main Mall refill pharmacy be will closed.

Patients may use the 24-hour, phone-in refill service by calling 544-1352.

The Main Mall and Mini Mall post exchanges and the Custer Terrace Shoppette will operate from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. The Main Post Shoppette is open 24 hours-a-day.

The Commissary will be closed Memorial Day and June 1. Monday is its regular closing day.

Trash will not be picked up at Fort Benning on the holiday. Areas scheduled for pickup Monday will be serviced Tuesday and those scheduled for Tuesday will be picked up Wednesday.

Crushers to reduce costs

Environmental Management Division

To reduce the cost of units' disposal of oil filters through the Defense Reutilization and Marketing Office, oil filter crushers are available, according to Cary Webb of the Environmental Management Division.

An oil filter crusher was put to the test recently in the Air Force management equipment evaluating program.

This crusher, manufactured by Air Boy Sales Company Inc., was tested for nine months at different locations within the Department of the Air Force.

Another crusher, manufactured by the Oberg company, is under a Government Supply Agency contract.

These oil filter presses are in many Air Force bases, the Department of Agriculture, U.S. Navy Installations and other support centers all over the country.

Currently, the cost of oil filter disposal through Defense Reutilization and Marketing Office is $1.85 per pound, plus the cost of the oil test, which is approximately $1,500.

If oil filters are first crushed using an oil filter crusher, the crushed oil filter can be turned in to DRMO at no cost to the unit because the crushed filters can be sold as scrap metal and are not regulated.

Register your preschoolers June 4 at Patch

Patch Preschool

The Fort Benning Early Childhood Development Center (Patch Preschool) will conduct open registration June 4 beginning at 7:30 a.m. for 3- and 4-year-olds for the 1993 to 1994 school year.

Registration will take place in the auditorium of Patch Elementary School. Children must be 2 or 3 by Sept. 1 to be eligible to attend.

Tuition is based on total family income. Documents needed to register are: a current child-care card (issued at Central Registration, Building 11302, Custer Road), an up-to-date shot record, birth certificate, Child Development Service health assessment form and a copy of the family's 1040 or 1040A tax return for verification of income.

Families currently registered at Central Registration should bring copies of the paperwork on file there to avoid duplication. A supply fee not to exceed $18 must paid to ensure placement for September.

Call 687-2404 for more information.

Let's get physical

By Jim Garamone
American Forces Information Service

Starting a physical fitness program, but not sure just how to do it?

You should consider several physical fitness components in designing your program, according to Louis F. Tomasi, research physiologist with the Army's Physical Fitness School at Fort Benning.

"The one service members are most familiar with is cardiorespiratory exercise," Tomasi said. "This is continued exercise over a long period of time — more than 20 minutes of intense activity." This level of exercise strengthens the heart and respiratory system, and research shows it can lessen chances of heart disease.

A second component is anaerobic conditioning. In a conditioning sense, anaerobic means using muscles for short periods — two to five minutes — without oxygen recharging the muscles.

Another component is local muscular strength and endurance. This is weight training with an intensity level at a momentary muscle failure in eight to 12 repetitions.

A final component is body composition. This is defined as the fat-free body weight in relation to lean body mass. Tomasi urged periodic testing of your progress and said to expect no more than a 10 to 15 percent improvement.

Here are some tips for your fitness program:

Exercise three to five times a week and do not do the same exercise each day. This does not allow the muscles enough time to recover. For example, if you run for 20 minutes on Monday, you may want to do weight training on Tuesday.

Keep accurate records of your training to ensure you do more today than during your previous exercise session.

Allow each exercised component about 48 hours to recover. A light-intensity workout day between heavy sessions will meet this requirement.

Balance your program. Ensure you do upper and lower body routines and front and back routines. Do both cardiorespiratory and anaerobic routines.

Variety is the spice of exercise. Change your aerobic (cardiorespiratory) training methods. Don't just run. Use bikes, rowing machines, stair climbers, skiing machines to vary your workout. Walking is fine, and interval training also helps vary your routine.

Tomasi said you can specialize and tailor your program for a specific goal. "Do you want to throw a ball farther? Do you want to increase your road-marching capability? Do you want to do more pull-ups or run faster?

"Once you know the area you want to work on, concentrate a greater part of your workout time on that specific area."

The actual workout consists of a warm up, high-intensity session and cool down.

The warm-up session should be five to seven minutes of light activity to help prepare your body mentally and physically for more intense activity, Tomasi said. Some examples include walking, jogging, running in place or light cycling.

The key to the high-intensity session is your training heart rate. To figure this, take 220 (the maximum heart rate) and subtract your age, then multiply by the intensity level you wish to meet that day. So if you are 40 and you wish to train at a 70 percent intensity level the formula works like this: 220-40 x .70 = 136 beats per minute. During your high-intensity session, your heart should beat 136 times each minute. The longer the exercise continues, the more likely the intensity will decrease, Tomasi said.

Cool-down is five to seven minutes of light intensity work. This encourages a good blood return to the heart, helps avoid dizziness and additional heart stress. Don't simply stop after a high-intensity workout.

Gradually increasing your workouts is the way to go. Don't think you can run 10 miles if you've never even run for a bus.

Muscular Performance Development

The use of progressive resistance training, or weight training, is the primary method of improving local muscular performance. Here are some suggested exercises and weights to start with:

Squat or leg press — 60 percent of body weight
Leg extension — 45 to 50 percent of body weight
Leg flexion — 30 to 40 percent of body weight
Heel lift — 60 percent of body weight
Bench press — 35 percent of body weight
Bent-over row — 30 to 35 percent of body weight
Upright row — 30 percent of body weight
Overhead press — 25 to 30 percent of body weight
Arm curl — 25 percent of body weight

Boat person becomes U.S. Air Force doctor

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

Hoang Nhu Tran knows fear.

Tran and his family escaped from South Vietnam just before the communists took Saigon in 1975. He and his family huddled in a leaky, overloaded boat until rescued by a U.S. Navy ship and transported to Guam.

Twelve years later, 2nd Lt. Hoang Nhu Tran graduated at the top of his class from the U.S. Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colo. Tran, who studied biology and chemistry, now lives in Cambridge, Mass., while finishing his final year at Harvard Medical School.

Tran said he had a normal, happy childhood growing up in Saigon. "Saigon is a beautiful city — you can see ancient, Chinese-influenced buildings and more recent French buildings and a lot of flowers."

He said his parents sheltered him and his brother, Hai. "Except that my father, who was in the Airborne Division of the Army of Republic of Vietnam, was away frequently, we hardly knew there was a war going on," he said.

Then, war shattered the family's peace. There was constant gunfire. Everything became chaotic.

"That's when I became really aware of the war," said Tran. "We left the night before Saigon fell."

An old friend of his father's from military academy days let them know a boat was leaving. Tran, his mother, father, brother and an aunt left the family home with nothing, hurried to the beach, climbed into a landing craft and drifted to sea.

"There were 150 of us crammed in the boat, so there wasn't much room to move," Tran said. "All we had was some water and a little rice. The boat was taking on water fast, and we were wet and scared. After about a week, we saw a welcome sight — a U.S. Navy ship, which rescued us. I was 10."

The ship took the family to Guam, and they stayed on the island for a month. Then they went to Camp Pendleton Marine Base near San Diego, Calif. They were there a month before being sponsored by a church in Colorado. "Church members helped my parents find jobs, found a trailer for us to live in until we got more settled and gave us some clothes," Tran said.

"My brother and I didn't have too much trouble learning English. To start, they put me in fifth grade — I had been in sixth grade in Vietnam. I'd always liked math, so that was fine from the start since numbers are the same. Vietnamese writing uses a Roman-style alphabet, so I didn't have to learn an entirely new alphabet.

"Also, my parents were very supportive and stressed academic achievement, which also helped. I had a tutor to help with English, and I felt comfortable speaking the language after a year and a half. The new culture was like an adventure for my brother and me, but it was difficult for my parents at first."

"Since my father was in the airborne, the Air Force was a natural choice for me," Tran said. "My brother joined the Air Force also. He's now a captain and works with computers in the Pentagon."

Tran received a Rhodes scholarship and studied at Oxford, England. He read philosophy and political science. He also studied strategy and the role of the military in the international arena.

"During my two years at Oxford — 1987 to 1989 — my Oxford friends and I traveled to just about every European country," he said. "I was in the Soviet Union before the Berlin Wall fell, and I could hear the underground rumblings that led to the changes we've seen. Of course, I understand those changes better in hindsight."

Tran is looking forward to being an Air Force orthopedic surgeon. He chose the specialty because it is a skill in great demand during war that is also useful treating peacetime patients.

"After seeing my homeland devastated and my parents lose everything they had, I'm convinced the military is very important to protect national interests both at home and abroad. People in the United States have been good to my family, and I want to contribute and serve in return," he said.

"In my opinion, the military is also important to support struggling democracies overseas. I'm glad to have an opportunity to be a part of that effort."

VA Q & A

Department of Veterans Affairs

Q: My wife and I plan to be buried in a plot we purchased in a private cemetery. Even though it's not a national cemetery, we agree that we'd like the traditional veterans' headstone.

I understand that, as a veteran, the Department of Veterans Affairs will supply a standard headstone for my grave, even if I'm buried in a private cemetery. My wife, however, is not a veteran. What happens if she dies before I do? Will VA supply a headstone to mark her grave?

A: The law does not authorize VA to provide a headstone or marker for a spouse or family member of a veteran buried in a private cemetery regardless of the sequence of death. If the veteran dies first, VA may provide the headstone (or flat marker), and the next of kin may request that space be reserved for later inscription of vital information about the spouse. The family would have to bear the cost of the inscription following the death of the spouse.

If the spouse of the veteran dies first and is buried in a national cemetery, a state veterans cemetery or a military cemetery, VA is authorized to provide the headstone inscribed with the vital information (name, date of birth and date of death).

In such a case, the inscription will read: given name, date of birth, date of death, wife of or husband of, grade, rate or rank, name of veteran, branch of service.

Upon the death of the veteran, if burial is in the same gravesite, VA will provide a replacement headstone with information about the veteran inscripted on the front and the spouse's information on the back of the stone. The inscription on the back would read: Given name/his wife or her husband/date of birth/date of death.

Makovec award recognizes service to God, country

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

The 1992 John J. Makovec award, given each year by the Catholic chaplains of Fort Benning, was recently presented to six individuals.

Presentation of the award, named for the late Master Sgt. John J. Makovec, is based on the candidate's service to God, church and country, according to retired Col. Robert B. Nett, Medal of Honor recipient and project officer for the award ceremony.

"I was stationed at Benning three times while I was on active duty, and I came to know him (Makovec) well," said Nett. "He was the standard for non-commissioned officers, and after his retirement, he was the mainstay of the Catholic chaplains on post."

Makovec shopped and kept expense records for the chaplains, said Nett, as well as doing yard work, painting or anything else that needed doing.

During his lifetime, Makovec served in three armies — the Austrian army in World War I, the Yugoslavian army, and, following his emigration in the early '20s, the U.S. Army, where he fought in the European theater in World War II.

Makovec served as an aide to the late Brig. Gen. Philip Gage and, according to Nett, served as mentor to Gage's son, now retired Lt. Col. Philip Gage Jr.

The younger Gage set up the trust fund that is used annually to finance the Makovec award.

"John was a devoted person," said Nett, "who spared no time or energy for his beloved church. As a soldier and citizen he was a credit to the Army and the United States."

The recipients of the 1992 John J. Makovec award are:

Sgt. Maj. Donald L. Diggs, member of the Pastoral Council, Art and Environment Committee, and a leader of the parish choir.

Master Sgt. Raymond F. Beiswenger, who assumed pastoral responsibility for Mass activities for more than 20 years.

Master Sgt. Robert C. Samples, who has assumed pastoral responsibility for Sunday morning Masses for more than 15 years.

Sgt. 1st Class Mitchel Berdoux, who has assumed pastoral responsibility for Saturday Mass for 12 years.

Retired 1st Sgt. Santos F. Malave and Angelita Malave, who initiated the Hispanic Mass prayer groups, Bible studies, youth leader's program and also carpentry work for the parish.

"We're also involved in teaching young couples pre-marital counseling," said the Malaves, "and also Baptismal classes."

The Malaves said they never expected to get an award.

"You get a certain satisfaction when you help other people," said the retired first sergeant. "When you're committed to God it is easy to do these things, because you are preparing yourself for the day when God calls you."

ARMY FAMILY ACTION PLAN ISSUES

Garrison Commander's Office

More than 100 issues and questions were presented for action, comment or status to the garrison and installation staff at the Fort Benning Family Action Plan Symposium March 30.

The issues were broken down into functional areas and each directorate, activity or area was asked to respond.

The following are the questions posed to the Commissary and the answers provided by Larry J. Bentley, Commissary officer.

Q: Can you increase the number of health food products offered?

A: We have a full line of best-selling health food products on Aisle No. 1.

If there is anything that a patron wants added to the selection, he or she just needs to fill out a patron suggestion form. We will review it and try to purchase the product.

Q: How are prices set in the Commissary? Do politics (outside stores) play a part?

A: The Defense Commissary Agency downloads prices on region-wide supply bulletin items. These prices are changed monthly. Local blanket purchase agreement items are priced monthly at store level. Local politics do not play a part, only supply and demand.

Q: How can we assure the prices listed on the counters are accurately listed at the cash register?

A: All shelf label prices are generated by the National Cash Register computer system and manually placed on the shelf. This is normally accurate; but, if there is a problem, just bring it to the management's attention.

Q: Can the Commissary remain open seven days a week?

A: A directive from DeCA Headquarters at Fort Lee, Va., states that we may change or shift existing hours, but not add or open more hours or days.

Q: Is there a limit on the number of baggers on duty at any given time?

A: The head bagger is responsible for having enough baggers on duty to take care of the day's projected business, based on sale volume. This requires three baggers per open register. We have a total of 92 full- and 77 part-time baggers.

Q: Can you carry more generic items?

A: Generic items are normally poorer in quality, and the majority of our patrons would rather have national or regional brand items.

This agency prides itself on providing top quality items at the best possible price.

Q: Do prices go up just before payday?

A: Price changes are downloaded from the DeCA Southern Region and adjusted locally after the first of each month. When prices change, they change both up and down.

Our roll-ups for bill paying are set up monthly. Prices do not change back after payday.

Q: Can suggestion boxes be moved to a more convenient location?

A: We have placed additional suggestion boxes at the entrance desk and at the exit point.

Q: Can you advertise new items in a display case, as well as items that have been deleted?

A: DeCA has designed a shelf marker that indicates new items, and the grocery manager will be using this sign on new items.

See the management if you are concerned about any deleted item.

Q: Could we have better produce at the Commissary?

A: DeCA directs that commissaries buy 100 percent of their produce from the Defense Subsistence Office. Only when the Defense Subsistence Office is short on an item may the Commissary purchase local merchandise.

We are watching loads closely with the assistance of food inspectors. Since the Defense Subsistence Office is a government- owned office, we must accept their product.

We continue to strive to offer you the best produce available.

Q: Can a discount be given when purchasing items in bulk for family support functions?

A: By law, commissaries buy and sell at cost. We do not realize a profit; therefore, no discounts can be given. Commissaries are an appropriated fund activity.

Q: Can the DeCA and Army and Air Force Exchange Service identification card check policies be brought in line with each other?

A: Since DeCA is an appropriated fund activity and AAFES is a nonappropriated fund activity, the systems operate independently.

Q: Why can a service member's guest go into the Post Exchange but not the Commissary?

A: Commissaries are nonprofit organizations funded by Congress. We enforce a strict identification card-checking policy to protect the service member's benefit and tax payers' dollars.

The Post Exchange is a nonappropriated fund activity that makes a profit.

Q: Can we or do we use produce from local farmers?

A: Yes, local farmers often sell their produce in commissaries, but they must sell it through the Defense Subsistence Office and deliver it to the Commissary.

Q: With all of the concern for health issues regarding Department of Defense employees and their family members, we recommend that DeCA and AAFES discontinue the subsidy of tobacco and alcohol products. The price should reflect the average price on the local market.

A: DeCA does not subsidize tobacco products, and we do not carry alcohol. Tobacco is less expensive in the Commissary because it is not taxed.

All-Army team wrestles them down

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

When the All-Army Wrestling Trial Camp came to Fort Benning in 1989, the team was looking for a way to become what it used to be — competitive.

Enter new All-Army wrestling coach Tony Thomas. Taking over for Floyd Winters, Thomas began to rebuild the team from the ground up.

At the Armed Forces Championships that year, the team placed third. Although it wasn't a title, it did start the team on a new and more competitive trail.

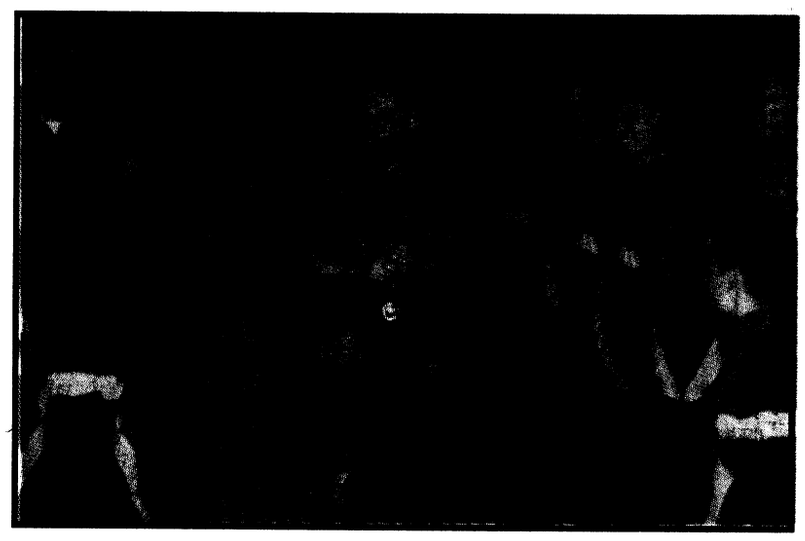
In 1990, a stronger, more experienced team emerged from Fort Benning to dominate its opponents en route to its first Armed Forces Championship in 13 years. The team also placed nine wrestlers in the top six weight classes at the U.S. Greco-Roman National Championships in Las Vegas, Nev., with one being crowned champion.

The 1991 season saw the All-Army team capture its second Armed Forces title. Eleven wrestlers were placed in the top six of their weight class for the nationals. The nationals saw one wrestler place in the top six in freestyle while four wrestlers went on to win at the University National Championships with an All-Army wrestler once again being crowned champion. An All-Army wrestler was crowned champion at the Olympic Festival that year.

At the start of the 1992 season, the All-Army team had built a reputation as a stepping stone for bigger and better things. By the end of the year, they would also be known as the best team in armed forces history.

A third consecutive armed forces title, 13 wrestlers in the top six weight classes and 15 wrestlers qualifying for the Olympic team trials with 10 team members placing in the top six of their weight class. The National Open champion was once again an All-Army wrestler.

With the 1992 Olympics approaching, the team produced its first Greco-Roman champion in 34 years. Rodney Smith a specialist assigned to Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment went on to win a Bronze Medal at the 1992 Olympics in Barcelona, Spain.



The World Cup Championships brought two more wrestlers into the limelight along with Smith. Shon Lewis, also a specialist with 29th Inf. Regt., won a Silver Medal along with Smith, and Ryan Jibbons, a specialist, was offered a scholarship to wrestle at the University of Wyoming.

The 1993 season, which is more than half over, has produced a fourth straight armed forces title for the team. During the championships, the team set records for most points scored by a team (123) and largest point margin victory (65).

At the University Nationals in Evanston, Ill., E. J. Pasteur won the 198-pound title. Pasteur will represent the team at the Pan American Games in Caracas, Venezuela in June.

Pasteur will also attend the Olympic Festival in San Antonio, Texas, July 20 through 24, as a top four finisher along with teammates Keith Idleburg at 114.5 pounds, Jason Tolbert at 125.5 pounds, Kenneth Owens and Jason Wagner at 163 pounds, and Alexander Porcelli at 220 pounds.

The 1993 U.S. National Greco-Roman Championships in Las Vegas April 30 through May 1, saw the Army team give its strongest performance in 10 years, according to Thomas.

Terry K. Ray/Special to The Bayonet

Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White chats with the All-Army wrestling team.

Three wrestlers made the finals in their weight classes. Lewis captured the 136.5-pound class title, defeating 1992 Olympian Anthony Buddy Lee of the U.S. Marine Corps 3-1 in overtime.

Martin Strimiska reclaimed his number two ranking at 114.5 pounds after missing the 1992 Olympic trials with a broken ankle. Strmiska finished second to 1992 Olympian Shawn Sheldon of the New York Athletic Club after dropping a 5-1 decision to Sheldon. Keith Idleburg placed third at 114.5 pounds defeating Brandon Paulson of the Minnesota Wrestling Club 12-0.

At 198 pounds, Derrick Waldroup lost a sudden death overtime decision 3-0, to his best friend and former All-Army wrestler Randy Couturenow, who is now with the Sunkist Kids.

Other All-Army wrestlers with top six finishes and a spot at the U.S. World Team Trials June 10 through 13, in Rochester, Minn., are: From Fort Benning, James Demos, fourth at 286 pounds; Pete Gomez, fifth at 105.5 pounds; Jerry Jackson, sixth at 220 pounds; and James Gressley, sixth in freestyle and Greco-Roman at 180 pounds. Edward Mitchell of Fort Drum, N.Y., sixth at 220 pounds and Kenneth Owens of Fort Carson, Colo., sixth at 163 pounds.

The winner will represent the United States at the Wrestling World Championships Sept. 16 through 19, in Stockholm, Sweden.

"We have done an outstanding job so far this year," said Thomas. "Finishing second to the NYAC by three points is outstanding considering we didn't have 1992 Olympian Rodney Smith, Bart Mease who is ranked fourth nationally and armed forces champion Keith Sieracki .

"I also feel the NYAC broke the rules when they added a wrestler at the last minute to their Greco-Roman roster, which was due three days in advance. The added wrestlers points should not have counted toward the team standings. Therefore the score should have been Army, 76, NYAC, 73. "

HHC, 11th Infantry wins volleyball title

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The 1993 U.S. Army Infantry Center Men's Volleyball Championship played May 5 at Audie Murphy Fitness Center boiled down to the final game in the second match before a champion was decided.

The Terminators of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 11th Infantry Regiment battled from the losers bracket to capture the title by winning the first match 15-12 and 15-8 and forcing a second and final match against Intensity of the 598th Maintenance Company. The Terminators then proceeded to take two out of three games 10-15, 15-9 and 15-8 to pull off the upset and win the crown.

In the first game of the championship match, Intensity came out fired up after letting a golden opportunity slip from their hands and giving the Terminators new life.

With the score at 5-1, the power shots started to fall in for points. Filipo Leo and Jose Blanche pounded the ball at the feet of the Terminators to keep them on their heels while running out to a 10-3 advantage.

The Terminators made a run at Intensity pulling to within 13-10 before Jose Victoria put the game away on two serves at 15-10 to take a 1-0 lead in the match.

The Terminators came out ready to do business in game two. Mark Cotronio put the Terminators in the lead at 6-1, only to have Intensity climb back in the game at 7-4.

An 11-7 advantage for the Terminators soon exploded to a 13-9 lead and a chance to tie the match at one game apiece. Hector Flores tied the match on two straight serves for a 15-9 win and a deciding game three.

Intensity drew first blood in game three with a short-lived 2-0 lead. The Terminators ran off five straight points on the serve of Fletcher to take a 5-2 lead.

Intensity closed to within 5-4 when the Terminators exploded for seven straight points and a 12-4 advantage. Cotronio and Flores made the most of their play at the net with kill after kill.

Intensity made one final push, but could get no closer than 12-8, before the Terminators closed out the game and match at 15-8.

"We had a lot of pressure on us after losing in the first round of the tournament," said Ed Rosa, team captain. "After that loss, we only had two concerns — HHC, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment and the 598th.

"After winning the first match to force the second match, we let down a little and they came out and took the first game from us. We knew we had to turn it up a notch to beat these guys," he added.

Holy catfish!

Staff Sgt. Gerry Ransom of the Bradley Instructor Course of the 29th Infantry Regiment shows off a 43-pound catfish he caught May 5 at Victory Pond while fishing for largemouth bass. Ransom set a new post record with the catch.

Lure variety can increase strikes

COMMENTARY

Last weekend was another good one for pulling in some nice largemouth bass. The weather was perfect — hot with some great cloud cover and not too windy.

Fishing the backwaters of the Chattahoochee saw some terrific action. The bass didn't seem to be concentrating underneath the hydrilla grass as they were two weeks ago. Probably the main reason is that the grass has grown thicker, making it more difficult for a big old lunkerhead to bust through.

Don't get me wrong, there were still bass under there, but it seemed more strikes were on the edge of the hydrilla where the hits were as good as ever.

I gotta tell you that using soft plastic baits seemed to be the ticket. The only other fisherman I saw in the secluded backwaters was casting a white spinner bait. I watched him for a good hour, but he never caught a fish.

Some anglers will cast the same bait forever even though they aren't getting any strikes. And then they complain because they aren't catching any fish. This is ridiculous. Now I'm no Roland Martin or Bill Dance, but I catch my fair share of big bass.

But like the pros, I keep three fishing rods ready at all times rigged with different lures. Depending on the weather conditions and fishing activity, I like to keep a crankbait, a spinner bait and a soft bait rigged.

Most anglers who use the same method will tell you this is so that if a strike is missed, it can be quickly followed up with a "slow" lure. Many times a fish that has just missed a fast crankbait will hit a spinner bait or plastic worm when retrieved past the same spot. This technique has worked for me on more than one occasion.

Getting back to last weekend, I was unsuccessful using both crank and spinner baits, so I had to change my tactics. By switching to slower baits, such as plastic worms and jerk baits, I netted three nice largemouths and got several more strikes all within two hours.

A good black plastic worm and green lizard worked superbly when casted back in the open spots of the hydrilla or retrieved along the front edge. With any of these baits, you can't go wrong.

Since I like to support the $2 billion fishing industry, when a new bait comes along, I have to try it. One of the best type of baits to be manufactured lately and probably the biggest fishing rage within the last five years is a soft plastic jerk bait that has been the center of attention around the country for the last year. It has a random, erratic, injured baitfish action that will trigger savage strikes from any lunkerhead largemouths.

The versatility of a jerk bait is one of its best attributes. You can rig it "Carolina" style to bounce it off the bottom, or "Texas" style so you can pitch it way back in the grass. It's virtually snag-proof, making it an excellent choice for anglers who like to fish around thick structure.

If it has any bad traits, I would say that it is easy to miss a strike because of its thick body. When rigged Texas style, you have to let the bass get a good grip on it before you set the hook since it isn't exposed. This is quickly learned through trial and error (and a couple of missed strikes) the first time out.

Anyway, if you're not using one of the many variations of this particular bait currently on the market, you need to head to the store. It is a must addition for your tackle box. A fantastic bait that can be used in just about any fishing conditions, it will work when other baits have failed.

Good luck and see you at the fishin' hole.

Ascension is time of uplifting

By Gil Richardson
11th Infantry Regiment

"And when he (Jesus) had spoken these things, while they beheld, he was taken up; and a cloud received him out of their sight.

"And while they looked steadfastly toward heavens as he went up, behold, two men stood by them in white apparel; Which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven?

"This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven.

"Then returned they unto Jerusalem from the mount called Olivet, which is from Jerusalem a sabbath day's journey." (Acts 1:9-12, King James version.)

"Ascension Day — isn't that when we're supposed to plant a tree or something?" quipped one person to the question, "What is Ascension Day and what does it mean to you?"

Ascension Day, the sixth Thursday (i.e., forty days — read Acts 1:3) after Easter, is the day Jesus, standing on the Mount of Olives, departed from his disciples and ascended into the heavens on a cloud.

After 40 days of post-resurrection appearances and encounters with his disciples, Jesus departed his earthly ministry and went into the heavens to assume his throne over all the universe.

If you are still reading this article, you may be saying "amen," or you may be mumbling "so what? What has this day got to do with me, with my troubles or with my worries?"

Stay with me. If you are having a crummy day, or if you are having a downer or downsizing day, you can remember that Jesus, when on Earth, suffered frequently but was always obedient to God the Father.

As Christians, you and I proclaim to be part of the body of Christ and new creatures in Christ.

Being a follower of Christ means that we follow in his footsteps, which means we are to share in his life that includes suffering and obedience unto God. This "suffering with obedience" does not sit well in our MTV, consumer-oriented American culture.

By this time if you are still reading this article (and not the movie schedule or the want ads), I have good news. If you and I are new creatures in Christ and share in his suffering and obedience unto God, then we share also in his resurrection (remember Easter) and his triumph.

We know who is in charge of this world, of this universe and of our lives. We know also that he will come again in glory and welcome us as he left — in the clouds (read I Thessalonians 4:13-18).

The person who mistook Arbor Day for Ascension Day might have a good idea. Ascension Day is an uplifting Christian holiday (no pun intended.)

Reflections

Plant a tree. Its beauty will remind you of God's wonderful creation and handiwork. Its barren appearance in winter will remind you of suffering and obedience. Its blooming in spring will remind you of God's continuing renewal in our lives. Its bending in the rushing wind will remind you of the great event 10 days after Ascension — Pentecost — (I won't get into that great event; that's some other chaplain's article).

You might even surprise yourself and God by going to church or Mass or by spending some quiet moments with the Lord in prayer and reflection. Whatever you do, quit moping, turn off the tube, get out, and rejoice in the Lord. Enjoy this triumphant and holy day.

Soldiers share word

By Pete Criner
USAIC Chaplains' Office

As a Christian community, let us pay tribute for the significant contributions our service members have made, not only in the security of our nation but in the spread of Christianity in many countries.

The presence of Christian service members in Korea had a major impact on the Korean people as well as members of the Republic of Korea army.

The story is told of Gen. Han Shin, commanding general of the First Army of the Republic of Korea army, who looked for ideological and spiritual armament as a fighting force against the communists in the late '60s and '70s. A campaign called the "Religionization Movement of Korean" was launched. All soldiers were advised to adopt one of three religions: Buddhism, Catholicism or Protestantism.

Chaplain Han Jun Sup, chief of chaplains of the ROK army, visited every unit of the army, presenting the gospel and winning souls. Chaplain Han Jun Sup spearheaded the Army Christianization Movement.

The movement began to bear fruit from November 1971; and, during the next five months to March 1972, 3,965 soldiers were baptized in several divisions of the Korean army. On April 15, 1972, an epochal baptism occurred on the hill grounds of the army near the western front lines.

Eighty-eight officers and 3,390 soldiers were baptized. The previous greatest number baptized in Christian history was 3,000 by Peter, the apostle, on the day of Pentecost.

This mammoth baptism was the result of the Army Christianization Movement. In September and October 1973, 6,700 were baptized in mass baptism ceremonies. Nearly 150,000 soldiers reportedly became Christians between 1972 and 1973.

As I reflect on the history of soldiers, my gratitude extends not only to the service members who have brought Christianity to foreign lands, but to those who continue the mission. You, the present-day security force, endure many hardships, accept sacrifices willingly and serve with pride in your commitment to preserve the Constitution, the bedrock of our values and greatness as a people and a nation.

Soldiers' strength, security rest on steadfast faith

By Robert L. Cox
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Ever since the beginning of this nation, an armed force has been in place to provide security for the "home of the brave and land of the free." The military is not a new phenomenon.

Military activities go back to the Old Testament in Judges 20:16, 17: "Among all this people there were seven hundred chosen men lefthanded; every one could sling stones at an hair breadth and not miss. And the men of Israel, besides Benjamin, were numbered four hundred thousand men that drew swords: all these were men of war."

Deuteronomy 3:1, 2: "Next we turned and went up long the road toward Bashan, and Og King of Bashan with his whole army marched out to meet us in battle at Edrei. The Lord said to me, Do not be afraid of him, for I have handed him over to you with his whole army and his land. Do to him what you did to Sihon King of the minorities, who reigned in Hesbon."

REFLECTIONS

II Kings 3:7,8, "He also sent this message to Jehoshaphat King of Judah: The King of Moab has rebelled against me. Will you go with me to fight against Moab? ... By what route shall we attack? he asked."

In the New Testament, we find an example of a soldier's faith in St. Luke 7:2, 3 and 8, 9: "And a certain centurion's servant, who was sick, and ready to die. When he heard of Jesus, he sent unto him ... For I also am a man set under authority, having under me soldiers, and I say unto one go, and he goeth; and to another, come and he cometh; and to my servants, do this, and he doth it. When Jesus heard these things, he marveled at him ... and said unto the people that followed him, I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no not in Israel."

As in the biblical military conflicts and as it has been throughout the course of human events to the present day, casualties are a result. The price of freedom and liberty is high, the ultimate cost — one's life.

The many sacrifices, inconveniences and, at times, frustrations are what soldiers and their families endure. To sustain, maintain and defend our constitution is an awesome responsibility.

A major reason for establishing this great nation is the "free exercise of religion." Faith is a vital ingredient to the survival of any society. A sincere and strong faith sustains the physical and mental dimensions of the professional soldier.

The great hymns of the church reflect this vital ingredient as it relates to the military. Examples are hymns such as "Onward Christian Soldiers, marching as to war, with the cross of Jesus going on before:...." and "Mine Eyes Have Seen the Glory of the Coming of the Lord."

As we reflect upon the significant contributions of our armed forces, let us always keep before us the faith of our Lord that gives us the inner strength in the face of tremendous odds.

Determine financial objectives before investing

By Maureen Ranft
Prudential Securities

If you are just getting started in investing, most financial advisers agree that you should follow a few basic steps:

• Determine your financial objectives. There are many reasons for investing. Some of the most common include: earning more current income; building your net worth; saving for a home, college education for children or your retirement; and reducing your tax burden.

Each of these objectives suggests different investment strategies and different types of investments.

For example, if you want more current income, you might do better with a fixed income investment, such as a bond, rather than a growth company stock.

• Understand your current financial position. Calculate your net worth by adding up all of your accounts (pension or profit sharing plans, etc.) and then subtract your liabilities (money you owe for such things as mortgages, car loans, credit card debt and other bills).

If most of your assets are in real estate (which is true for many people), you may need to convert your investment to cash in an emergency.

Therefore, you may not want to invest in long-term instruments. However, if you have assets that can be converted easily to cash (money market funds or stocks), you might want to invest longer-term for a higher return.

Similarly, you should calculate an annual household budget by adding all of your income for the year (salary, interest and dividends on investments, distributions by pension or profit sharing subtracting your regular, essential expenses, such as mortgage or rent payments, food, utilities, clothing, etc.).

The balance is the amount you have to spend on personal uses, such as vacations and gifts, or to invest.

• Understand your tolerance for risk. Most investments have some measure of inherent risk. If you have sufficient assets and income, you might be willing to accept greater risk in exchange for a potentially larger gain.

However, if you cannot afford to lose your investment principal, you probably should consider such low-risk investments, which, while relatively safe, usually do not earn a high return.

• Understand your investment. Before you invest, you should understand how the investment works. If, for example, you want to buy the common stock of a company, take the time to learn about the company and the industry (or industries) in which it operates by reading the company's annual report or an analyst's research report about the company.

Likewise, a mutual fund may seem to be a simple investment because your money will be managed by professionals. However, you should know such things as the fund's performance over the short and long-term compared with that of other funds, the investment objectives and strategy (what the fund invests in — stocks, government bonds, tax-free bonds, etc.) and what your cost will be to invest or withdraw your money.

These questions usually are answered in the fund prospectus. Seek professional advice. As briefly outlined above, there are many things you should know before you invest.

An experienced financial adviser can help you at every step — from helping you set financial goals, to explaining various investments to helping you monitor the success of your account.

As with your investments, be sure you understand how a financial adviser will charge for his or her services, and select an adviser that is comfortable with your objectives.

Some advisers will work only with aggressive, high-risk investors, while other advisers are well suited to long-term, security-conscious individuals.

If you take the time to understand your financial situations, set reasonable goals and work with a qualified financial adviser, then your initial experience with investing should be successful.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Rick Parker
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

The Legal Assistance Division seems to be getting a lots of cases involving door-to-door sales and solicitations for sales of encyclopedias and so-called "photography packages."

The problems seem to range from misunderstanding rights of cancellation, to failure of the company selling the material to deliver the product promised, to the buyer figuring out that he or she really didn't want the product for which they contracted.

At stake is the potential obligation to pay more than $1,800 for these products.

Here is some information about these contracts.

First, ask yourself whether or not you really need to spend this kind of money.

Don't give in to high pressure salespersons who want an immediate decision — take a couple of days to think about it. Consider that you are being asked to finance approximately $1,800, usually at between 18 percent to 21 percent per year.

The contract won't disclose this; but, over a three-year period, you will have paid over $2,300 including finance charges.

Can you really afford this? Be aware that the mere fact that you have decided the product is not worth the price is not a legal defense to the contract.

Unless the contract clearly states there is a right of cancellation, it is only in door-to-door sales (sales that take place at your home) that a person has an absolute right to cancel, and then, only within the first three days.

We hear of cases in which the salesperson told the buyer that cancellation at any time would be no problem. You cannot rely on the oral promises or statements of a salesperson.

If you go to the seller's place of business and sign a contract, there is no right of cancellation unless it is stated in the contract.

In some cases, rather than sending a salesman door-to-door, the seller will send out folks to leave flyers or brochures on your door promoting their product.

It is our understanding that these flyers promise a free gift if the buyer calls and schedules a sales appointment at the seller's place of business.

The problem seems to be that in some cases, the "free gift" is included in the sales contract, and therefore is not "free."

This is a violation of Georgia law and would be grounds for seeking cancellation of the contract.

Unless the seller has obtained permission from the commanding general, on-post solicitation is prohibited.

If a door-to-door salesperson comes to your quarters, you should ask to see the order permitting this activity. Don't rely on the salesperson's statement that permission has been granted.

When in doubt, call the military police to inquire about this kind of sales activity. However, note that even though a seller may not have proper permission to sell on the installation, this is not a defense to a contract you sign at your home.

The Legal Assistance Division is interested in keeping a close eye on the activities of these door-to-door sellers of photography packages and encyclopedias.

We are especially interested in obtaining samples of the flyers, brochures and other sales materials being left on doors to solicit your business.

If you have any questions or information concerning this, contact the Legal Assistance Division at 545-3281 or 545-3282.

Are you at risk for lead?

By Sarah Van Eden
Martin Army Community Hospital

Military personnel and others stationed abroad may be at a high risk for lead poisoning.

Dinnerware purchased in foreign countries, ceramic pottery and old pipes may be unknown sources of lead and and pose a threat.

The FDA recommends caution when purchasing ceramic ware in foreign countries. FDA chemists are working to develop quick color tests to inspect imports.

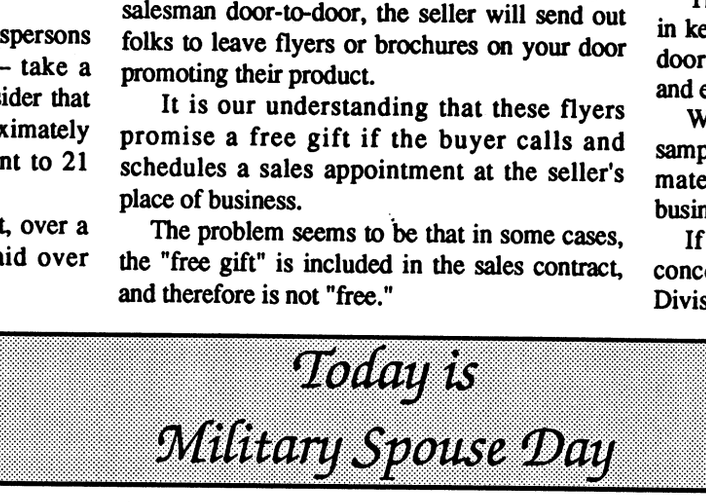
In the meantime, if you are unsure of the safety of ceramic ware you purchased abroad, keep it away from your food and your table.

Lead poisoning is often misdiagnosed because there are a wide variety of symptoms from body aches to anemia in different people.

Dinnerware purchased in foreign countries may not meet U.S. standards for lead, and there is no way to tell by looking at a ceramic piece whether or not it may be dangerous.

Most ceramic pottery contains lead in its glaze; but, because the pottery was properly formulated and fired, the release of toxic amounts of lead is prevented. Therefore it is safe for use.

However, some pottery may not be treated properly, especially earthenware made by individuals and in small industries abroad.



Acid substances like orange juice or vinegar may react chemically with the glaze in the improperly treated glaze and release lead.

Recently there has been some problem with the water supply in some parts of the United States.

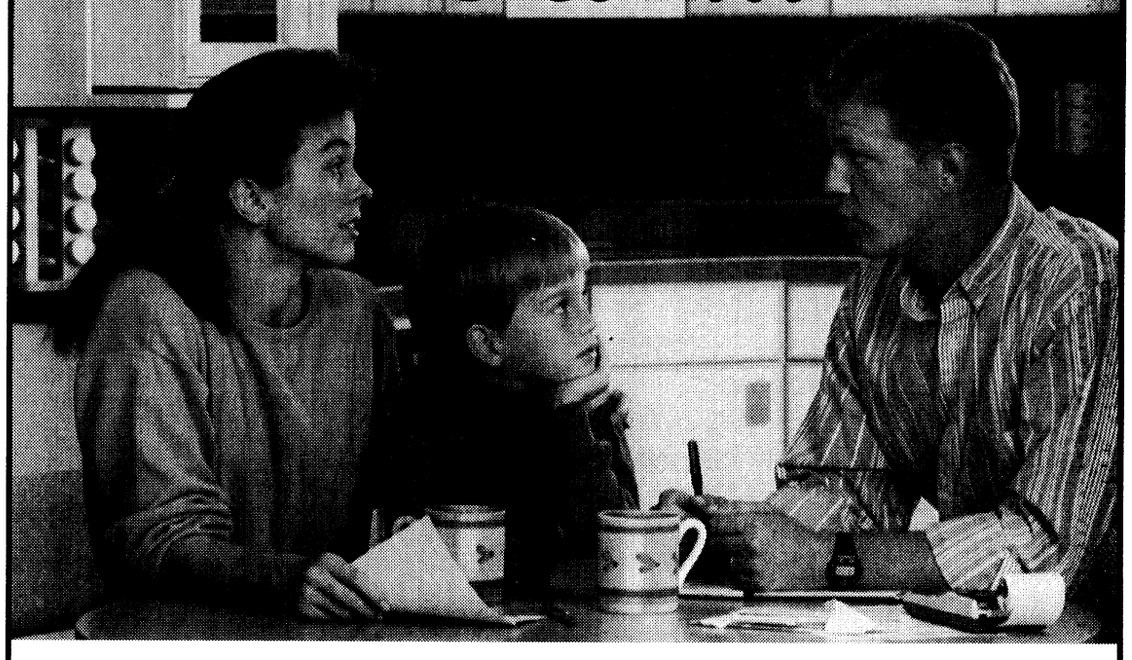
PET OF THE WEEK

These female mixed-breed kittens are looking for homes. They are approximately 7 weeks old.

For more information, contact the Veterinary Services Office in Building 265 at 545-1127. Hours of operation are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:30 am. and 12:45 to 3 p.m. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.



If you have lost a pet, check the stray impoundment facility in Building 283.

Stray pets are given three working days to be claimed from the time they are picked up by animal control personnel.

If the pets are not claimed, they become government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies tags are the only way Veterinary Services can contact the owner of a lost pet. Pet owners are required to register their pets and update their records when changes occur.

NTC cooks take the heat

By Sgt. Nicholas A. Minecci
22nd Mobile Public Affairs Detachment

FORT IRWIN, Calif. — It's been said that an army travels on its stomach. If that's true, the soldiers of 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized), will have no trouble traveling at the National Training Center.

Every day, long before the first rays of the sun creep over the desert mountains, more than 70 cooks are preparing breakfast and dinner for the troops.

Specialist Bob Gross, a cook with Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment (Mechanized), said the days here for a cook are long and hot.

"We're usually up about 2:30 a.m., that's when we start cooking breakfast and dinner," he said. "Breakfast is T-rations, which are not hard to prepare, but we also start dinner, which takes all day to cook," he said.

Gross arrived at the NTC April 21 with an advance party, three days before 3rd Brigade's troops started arriving for their annual rotation.

"The (Mobile Kitchen Trailers) arrived the next day, and we've been going nonstop ever since," he said.

"We had everything up and running a day ahead of schedule," said Master Sgt. Claskel Freeman, 3rd Brigade food service supervisor.

"The MKT is truly a mobile kitchen," the 20-year veteran said. "A MKT can be broken down and ready for transport, or put up in 30 minutes, with a four-man team," he said.

For some of the cooks, this is their first trip to the NTC. Freeman said there is a lot to be learned while out here.

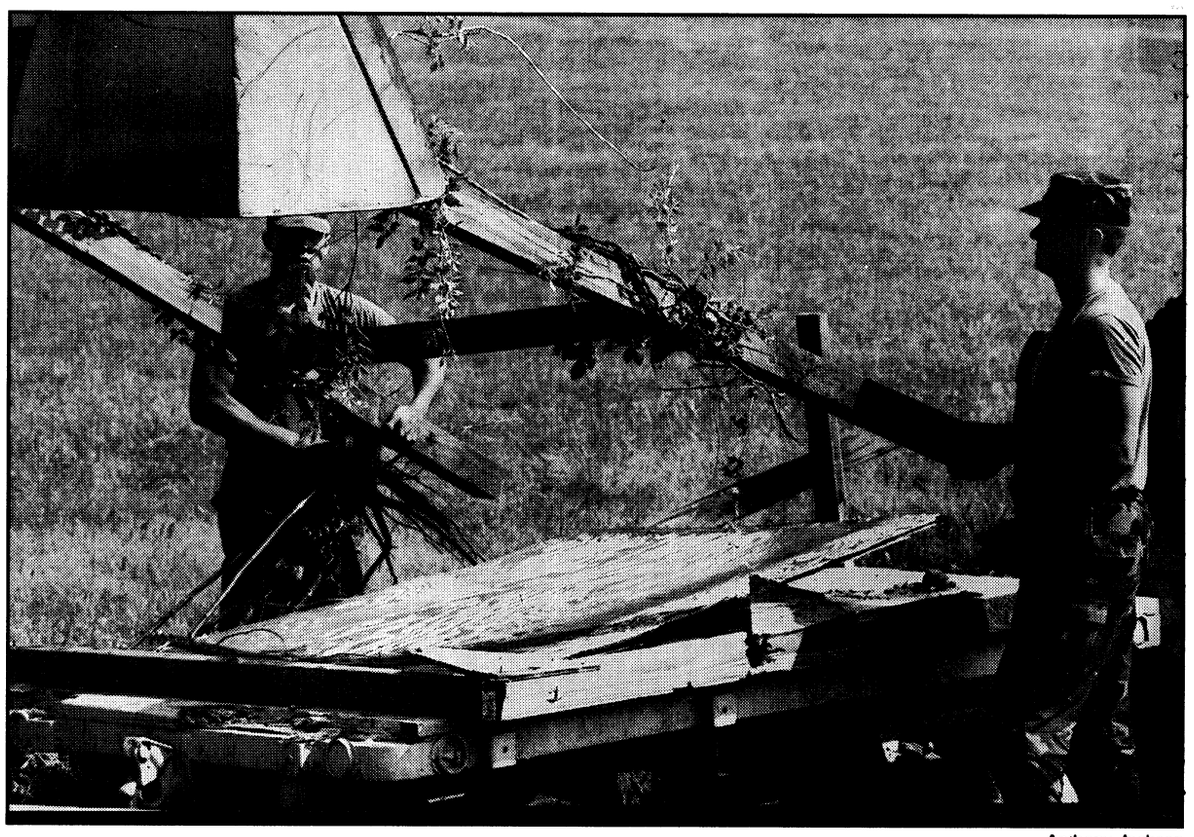
"The best asset I have going for me is my leaders, my NCOs (noncommissioned officers)," he said. " I honestly believe I have the best in the Army."

"(We are) looking to make sure the teams can work together effectively, that they can camouflage their equipment correctly, and I also want to make sure they are putting out good quality food for the troops," he said.

Working under the watchful eyes of the NCOs is hard enough for the cooks, but the elements here also make the job difficult, said Gross.

"It can get up to 130 to 140 degrees in (the MKTs). If seems like it's hotter here than it was in Saudi Arabia," Gross said.

"Plus when that wind gets blowing, it can be bad," he said. The blowing winds and intense heat is rough on the soldiers, according to Freeman. He added that the cooks must constantly ensure they are following all hygiene standards.



"Sanitation is a big must out here. We are constantly washing our hands and making sure we're clean," Gross said.

When the units move out to the maneuver area, Freeman said the MKTs will stay in the brigade assembly area, and food will be taken to the troops from there.

Though the work may be hard and the hours long, Gross said it doesn't seem that bad when soldiers thank them or let them know they're appreciated.

"It's nice, because we get some soldiers who come in and talk about us being their favorite people and stuff like that. I honestly feel good when I see soldiers enjoying the meal," he said.

If it's true an army travels on its stomach, then the soldiers of the 24th Infantry Divisions (Mechanized) should be have no problems with their rotation here according to Freeman.

Combat matches to start Sunday

By Anthony Jackson
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

The 1993 U.S. Army Combat Arms Matches are just around the corner and according to officials, they could possibly be the single biggest military small arms competition in the United States.

Scheduled to run Sunday through May 24 on Fort Benning's small arms ranges, the competition's boasting between 500 to 700 participants. According to U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit spokesmen, the event this year is more than a shooting competition for the soldiers.

"USACAM (formerly know as the All-Army Small Arms Championships) is a culmination of unit-level marksmanship skills put in a live-fire combat environment." said AMU officials. "It helps to identify those individual marksman who have the skill to attain and maintain U.S. Army leadership in armed forces (interservice) and national competition."

The competition, derived from Australian training programs and combat matches, tests the quality of combat firing skills. Unlike its predecessor, the Small Arms Championships, USACAM participants wear battle dress uniforms, Kevlar and load-bearing equipment to provide more realistic training and competitive atmosphere.

Open to active duty (all branches), Reserve and National Guard, participants compete in events using the M-16A1 and A2 rifles, M-9 pistol, M-249 squad automatic weapon or M-60 machine gun and the sniper rifle weapon system.

"As our mission, we must promote an interest in marksmanship training," said officials.

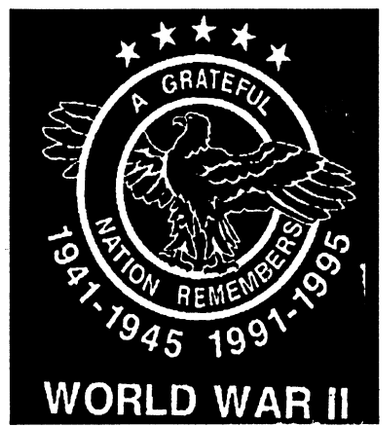
This year's competition is scheduled to be not only on Easley Range but also Roosevelt, McAndrew, Maertens and Wagner ranges.

WORLD WAR II — A LOOK BACK

50 years ago this week ...

• British Prime Minister Winston Churchill and President Franklin D. Roosevelt convened the "Trident" Conference in Washington, D.C., hoping to resolve strategic differences between the two Allies.

One point of contention was the British perception of the massive American effort in the Pacific as contrary to the previously agreed upon Germany-first policy. An American complaint stemmed from the fear that the British had based their desire for actions in the Balkans on politically unwarranted postwar goals.



The ensuing discussion resulted in compromises satisfactory to both parties. Additionally, the chiefs of staff of both countries set May 1, 1944, as the tentative date for D-Day, the cross-channel invasion of Europe.

• In North Africa, Italian Field Marshal Giovanni Messe surrendered the remaining Axis forces under his command, bringing the two-day total to nearly 250,000 German and Italian men.

• In Warshaw, Poland, German SS troops destroyed the synagogue to complete their brutal crushing of the resistance movement in the Jewish ghetto. The Nazis boasted of the extermination of an additional 54,000 Jews, yet the four-week long uprising was costly to the German oppressors in terms of manpower and resources.

• In the Aleutians, American forces, spearheaded by the 7th Division, relied on a 4:1 manpower advantage to advance on Japanese positions in Attu despite facing extremely treacherous terrain and harsh weather which limited the planned air support.

• In Europe, Squadron No. 617, an elite Royal Air Force unit led by Wing Commander Guy Gibson, launched the "Dambusters Raid" on dams along Germany's Mohne and Eder rivers.

The precision bombing effort garnered only mild success and resulted in the loss of eight of 19 British planes, making similar future endeavors unlikely.

• Actress Brenda Joyce visited Fort Benning to see her husband, Lt. Owen Ward, a student at the Infantry School.

ROTC cadets take a shot at Benning

Auburn University ROTC

The Army Reserve Officer Training Corps cadets and a detachment from the Marine Corps ROTC conducted training at Fort Benning May 1 and 2.

The students left Auburn and were on site at the zeroing and qualification ranges by day break. For some of the cadets, this was their first opportunity to fire a weapon; let alone a M-16A1. The goal at the range was to improve their basic rifle marksmanship through practice and guidance of the regular Army cadre and senior ROTC cadets, then qualify by mid-afternoon.

The students in the ROTC program consist of ROTC scholarship winners, veterans, Army Reservists and National Guard members. Some are just students interested in a challenging course.

"The remainder of the day was spent negotiating the obstacles at the Leadership Reaction Course. The time constraints, and pure difficulty of the lanes were an excellent test for the leadership skills being developed in ROTC," said Capt. John Western, assistant professor of military science.

The training activities were in preparation for ROTC advanced camp at Fort Lewis, Wash., where the cadets who have completed the necessary military science classes and have a junior class standing will be sent for training and evaluation.

It appears that they are well on their way, said Western.

For more information about ROTC at Auburn University, call (205) 844-4305.

498th gives 'lift' to injured

MAST benefits community

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

They transport accident victims, injured soldiers and premature infants to medical care facilities and deliver organs for transplant. They save lives — but don't call them heroes.

"I do my job to the best of my ability," said Sgt. Walter Konstantynowicz, a flight medic with the 498th Medical Company. "I wouldn't call myself a hero in any way, shape or form."

Konstantynowicz says his job is ideal because he likes flying and likes saving lives. He is a member of the Military Assistance to Safety and Traffic program, which provides air transport for medical patients on Fort Benning and in the surrounding area.

"This program covers 40 counties in Alabama and 65 counties in Georgia," said Maj. Kenneth Crook, commander of the 498th. "We have two aircraft available at all times and can mount a mission, depending on the weather, within 15 to 30 minutes. In ideal weather, we can be off the ground in five or 10 minutes."

Crook said MAST benefits the community because patients reach medical care within the "golden hour," the first 60 minutes after an accident that are critical to a trauma patient's survival.

"We've transported almost 2,000 patients," said Crook, "since the program started at Fort Benning in May 1974. We've logged 4,800 hours of flight time with those missions.

> "The kind of people we have in the 498th tend to be those genuinely interested in helping people.
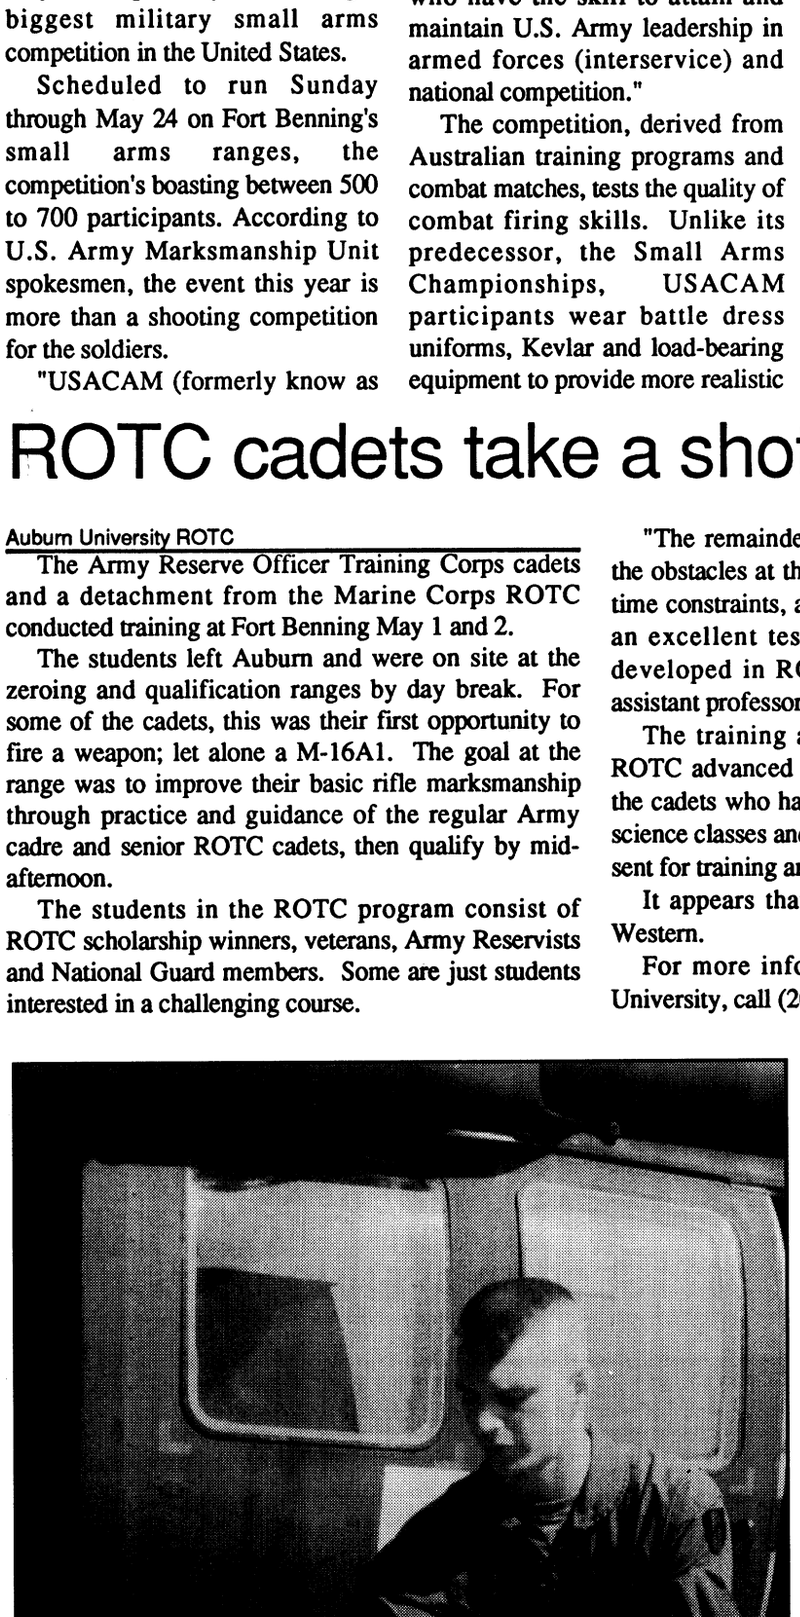
> — Maj. Kenneth Crook
> commander,
> 498th Medical Company

"The program helps build good relations with the community," said Crook, "and it provides our soldiers with the kind of training we'd normally only see in combat missions."

Crook said the crew of a MAST team consists of two pilots, a medic trained in emergency medicine and a crew chief.

"The kind of people we have in the 498th," he said, "tend to be those genuinely interested in helping people. They get a lot of personal satisfaction from their jobs. With MAST missions, we often follow up with the patients, especially the premature babies, to see how they're doing."

Some of the patients they transport, including the infants, are moved from hospitals — usually in rural areas — to facilities that can provide more intensive care.



"The transport time by air is significantly less than by motor vehicle," said Crook. "We can coordinate with the hospitals on either end. We make sure all aspects of the transport are arranged, and a team is ready to care for the patient when they get where they're going."

Konstantynowicz explained that the team is equipped to provide medical treatment to military personnel, although treatment is given to civilians by medical personnel on-site.

"In the case of a traffic accident, we will pick up a nurse or doctor who is already on the scene to keep the patient stabilized in transport," he said.

Sgt. James Moulder, MAST crew chief, seems to sum up the philosophy of the personnel of the 498th.

"I get a great deal of personal satisfaction out of the job we do," he said. "A lot of people wouldn't be alive today if it weren't for this program."

Army offers VSI/SSB to captains

TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — In an effort to keep from involuntarily separating about 200 captains in the 1983-84 year groups, the acting secretary of the Army has made those officers eligible again for voluntary separation incentive and special separation bonus.

Affected officers have until May 28 to submit applications for separation under either incentive program.

The fiscal 93 captain reduction in force board for those year groups convened Feb. 3 and is still in session.

Reoffering the voluntary separation incentive and special separation bonus was announced in a Department of the Army message. It urged captains to consult with their career management officers at the U.S. Total Army Personnel Command to determine their status.

Career managers cannot predict the board's selections, but they can provide risk and file assessments.

Captains who do not choose voluntary separation and are selected for reduction in force will receive the normal involuntary separation pay, "substantially less than VSI/SSB," the message said.

More than 1,100 officers in these year groups chose VSI/SSB when it was originally offered.

Finns ready for shoot-out

By Anthony Jackson
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

As all eyes look toward Atlanta for the 1996 Olympic Games, seven possible Finnish shooting contenders visited the U. S. Army Marksmanship Unit to hone their skills en route to the Los Angeles World Cup in California.

The AMU shotgun team hosted the Finnish team April 16 through May 2. The time spent here was well worth the efforts invested, according to Finnish trap shooter Matti Nummela.

"We arranged for our billeting and ammunition needs before we arrived," said Nummela. "I knew from my past experiences with the unit (AMU) in 1987 that they welcome any and all shooting teams who are able to provide for their own needs."

"Besides, it would be imposing on our part to expect the AMU to pick up the entire bill when they are already affording us the opportunity to use their excellent ranges," Nummela added.

The two weeks were spent exchanging shooting techniques and hints and learning of each others' cultural differences.

"The weather is much warmer here now than in Finland and is more like the weather we'll encounter in Los Angeles," said Nummela. "The unit was very hospitable and we even had the opportunity to look around a bit in case we do return for the Olympic Games. I just hope our good fortune carries through with us to Los Angeles."

As for the AMU, the shotgun team will be sending Sgt. Todd Graves to the week-long competition in hopes of bringing home a gold in the skeet, trap and double trap events.

"From one shooter to another, I hope they do well in Los Angeles, but of course I'm slanted more to our very own ," said AMU shotgun coach Burl Branhamp. "Todd has a knack for the sport and I don't doubt for a minute that he won't come out on top."

Chaplains minister in the field

By Sgt. Nicholas A. Minecci
22nd Mobile Public Affairs Detachment

FORT IRWIN, Ca. —Soldiers around the world, whether they are helping the poverty stricken citizens of Somalia, or blazing across the maneuver box here during a training exercise, have different personal needs. For some, the strongest of these needs is the need for spiritual guidance.

This is where chaplains earn their pay, said Chap. (Maj.) David Reese, 3rd Brigade Combat Team chaplain, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized).

For this rotation he said the chaplains have seven unit ministry teams that will be out with the soldiers. The teams are made up of a chaplain and a chaplain assistant, according to Reese.

The services offered by the teams vary from nondenominational field services to a friendly ear for someone who has a problem he said.

"We get about 35 to 40 soldiers at the services here," Reese said. "Once we're in the field, there are usually less people, about three or four soldiers at a service," he said.

"I attend every day," said Pfc. Jeffery Stevens, Company A, 2nd Battalion, 22nd Infantry Regiment, 10th Mountain Division (Light Infantry), whose unit is here as part of Exercise Desert Hammer V. Regardless of their religion, Stevens said everyone is welcome at the service and no one is excluded.

"During the day, I can get really stressed out getting equipment ready and making sure everything is good to go. Coming here is nice, I leave here relaxed and feeling better about things," he said.

Reese also said the chaplains with the 2nd Bn., 22nd Inf., live a different lifestyle than chaplains with 3rd Brigade. " A chaplain in either division endures what the soldiers endure while in the field. For example, a chaplain with mechanized forces can usually ride along with (the soldiers)," he said.

"One difference for me," said Chap. (Capt.) David Epperson, 'Triple Duece" chaplain, "is that I don't have a vehicle."

Epperson said he marches, eats and sleeps with the infantry while they are in the field. "I try to identify with the soldiers as much as possible, to go through the same things they are going through," he said.

When he's out marching with the infantry, Epperson said he will pass out everything from scripture cards to candy. "The soldiers always seem to be glad I'm out there," he added.

"(Epperson) is very visible out in the field," said Sgt. David Hagelbert, Co. A, 2nd Bn., 22nd Inf. "Sometimes he shows up just to see if we want to talk or have any problems," he said.

"There are times when I've been in my fighting position, and he's crawled in there to talk to me, and see how I'm doing," he said.

Listening may be the chaplains' best asset, according to Reese. He said soldiers will discuss problems they are uncomfortable discussing with their chain of command, or even their friends.

"If a chaplain asks how a soldier is doing, he had better be ready to sit and listen," he said. "Many soldiers will leave home with personal problems, and they need someone to talk to. That's what we're here for," he said.

Atlanta History Center to host Holocaust program

Atlanta History Center

The Atlanta History Center continues its World War II Remembered series with "The Holocaust and Atlanta's Jewish Community," May 23, from 2 to 4:30 p.m. It is a free program exploring the reaction of the Atlanta Jewish community to the Holocaust.

Atlanta architect Benjamin Hirsch, president of Eternal-Life Hemshech Organization of Survivors, Second and Future, an Atlanta organization for Holocaust survivors, will speak. He is also the president of Benjamin Hirsch & Associates in Atlanta.

Atlanta storyteller and psychiatrist Warren Jacobs will tell stories about the Holocaust, complemented by his own music. The center invites visitors to share their own memories if they wish and hear the experiences of other Atlantans and Georgians.

Preregistration is not required and everyone is welcome. A small reception will follow the event. The program will take place in McElreath Hall at the center, 3101 Andrews Drive N.W. at West Paces Ferry Road. For more information, call (404) 814-4000.

SUCCESS TV, a program set up by Special Audiences Inc., to enable youth-at-risk to learn about video production, will tape the event as part of an ongoing oral history project at the center.

One of the center's goals for this series is to gather oral histories describing the war's effects on Atlanta and its citizens. All those involved in World War II and the Holocaust have stories to tell that contribute to the city's unique history as well as showing Atlanta as a part of the national experience.

This is the fourth in a continuing series of programs devoted to World War II that will be at the Atlanta History Center between now and 1995, the 50th anniversary of the end of World War II.

Upcoming programs in the World War II Remembered series will highlight other aspects of the war, including women's roles on the home front, Atlanta's economic and social transformation, and various military campaigns, including the invasions of Italy and France.

Attacks

Some animals bite hand that teases

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

More and more incidents of animal attacks are being reported in post housing areas.

"If it's not your dog or cat, leave it alone," said Sgt. James Cyree, noncommissioned officer in charge of the Veterinary Treatment Facility.

"What we see is a lot of kids sticking their hands into fences and harassing dogs," said Spc. Leslee Treat, coordinator for the animal bite and scratch program and rabies control officer.

Treat said that most of the attacks happen to children between the ages of 5 and 12.

In one quarter, Treat said that 50 bite cases were reported on Fort Benning.

"We don't see a lot of serious bites," said Treat; "we see mostly scratches."

There has not been a real problem with rabies from the bites of dogs or cats on post so far, she said.

"We did have one case where somebody was bitten and the animal tested out to be positive," Cyree said. "That was about 2 1/2 years ago.

"This post has its share of bad attitude dogs," he said. "Everybody wants a macho dog. After they get them, there is very little follow-up training for the dogs. When they are not cute puppies anymore, they're stuck on a chain out back with food and water and given no attention at all.

"Then kids come running through the yard as a shortcut and the dog jumps up on them. It may not be an aggressive attack, the dog may just want to play; but, when it jumps up and scratches the kid on the face with its nails, that generates a bite report," said Cyree.

"If it's not your dog, don't pet it," he commented. "Never assume an animal is friendly. "When you walk up to a dog and the first thing you do is reach down to pet it, you're expressing dominance over that animal. The big macho dogs will not tolerate that."

"A lot of the owners of dogs that have bitten someone say 'It was a kid from down the street six houses; why was he in my yard?'," said Treat. "Many people have fences and beware of dog signs and kids still come into the yard and get bitten."

Another problem of the recent animal attacks has been defining what is a provoked or unprovoked bite, said Maj. Jack Heacock, operations officer at the Military Police Activity.

Heacock explained that even if a child did wander into someone's yard to pet an animal and was bitten, the attack would be unprovoked. If the same child wandered in to harass the dog, physically or by shouting, that would be considered provocation for the animal.

"We've gotten several complaints of animal attacks on kids," said Heacock. "Just because a dog is on a chain, in the yard or in a fence, that doesn't mean that the owners lack responsibility."

Charges against the animal vary according to the situation and ferociousness of the attack, Cyree said. According to regulation, if an animal is cited three times as a nuisance, the animal is required to be removed from post. In any bite case, the animal will be quarantined for a short period of time by the post veterinarian. After one or two unprovoked bites, the animal will be removed from post.

"The biggest thing to help this problem on post is to have more fenced-in yards, beware of dog signs and obedience training for the animal whether you think your dog is aggressive or not," said Treat.

Cyree said dogs must be in a fence, on a chain, in the yard or under voice control. He also said that the rules are presently under provision.

Regulation states that pet owners must provide water and shelter for the animal at all times.

To ensure that the animal you want to buy or adopt is not prone to aggressive behavior, do research on the breed of the animal, said Cyree.

The American Kennel Club publishes books on the breeds of many dogs, and the library also has books available on a wide selection of animals.

AT A GLANCE

Here are some precautions to take to prevent an animal attack.

- Know where your children are and supervise them.
- Never pet a strange animal.
- Ensure animals are secured to yard (fence, chain).
- Post proper warning signs.
- Never tease an animal.

School students head outdoors

Mother's Day bags of potpourri made from leaves, flowers, sticks, chestnuts and tree bark were just one of the creations made by Fort Benning's 400 fifth-graders at "Outdoor Education" May 6 and 7 at Victory Pond on post.

Herbert Dexter School, William Wilbur School and Richard Wilson School took part in this session with the remaining schools, Frank Loyd School and Edward White School, slated for another program to take place Thursday and May 21.

Ann Justice, assistant principal at Wilbur and Morris McBride Schools, served as the coordinator for this year's Outdoor Education.

She said that the 10 outdoor classes included the subjects of rocks, sit upons, nature hikes, salmon sensations, bird feeders, archery, first aid, weaving, rubbings in nature and nature's potpourri.

These classes were taught by teachers, counselors and media specialists from the schools, as well as members of the Fort Benning community. Personnel from Martin Army Community Hospital presented the first Aid classes.

A cookout and three large group classes completed the first day. These featured "Physical Education: Gail Davis Style," "Loving Music with Norman Green," and "Return to Pioneer Days with Leonard Bast."

The activities also involved an overnight stay in the barracks of 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, at Conway Barracks.

While in the barracks, the students were divided up into platoons, put into formations, taught to make beds military style and take care of their own linens.

Three of the 10 classes were part of the second day's agenda so that all of the participants had a chance to visit each of the sessions.

A singalong completed the "Outdoor Education" experience.

Cellist brings music to students' ears

Connie Bridges/Special to The Bayonet
Martha Gerschefski, accompanied on piano by Rexford Whidden of Columbus College, performs for Wilson School students.

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

"It looks like a big guitar."

That's what one child in the audience at Richard G. Wilson School told cellist, Martha Gerschefski about her instrument at the fourth in a series of Fine Arts concerts in each of the Fort Benning schools.

Gerschefski told the student that the cello resembles a guitar but is played with a bow.

Then she showed how it is done and with her accompanist, Rexford Whiddon on the piano, BY presenting several pieces including a selection from "Phantom of the Opera."

Her concerts at Fort Benning were May 5 and 6 and sponsored by the Officers' Wives' Club.

Gerschefski was the first woman selected by Leopold Stokowski for the American Symphony Orchestra, where she was associate principal cello.

She has toured Europe performing recitals under the State Department Cultural Presentations Abroad Program and has presented solo tours in the United States.

The co-founder of the Georgia Academy of Music, she currently serves on the faculties of Columbus College, Georgia State University and Auburn University.

Gerschefski told the student that the cello resembles a guitar but is played with a bow.

The Fine Arts series is in its ninth year in the Fort Benning schools, according to Dr. Beth Middlemiss, director of Staff Development.

It is designed to provide children with a quality artistic experience while teaching them appropriate concert behavior. Guest artists for this series are professional musicians, many of whom are associated with Columbus College.

There's still time to enter voting slogan contest

Adjutant General's Office

The Federal Voting Assistance program's voter slogan contest is in full swing, nearing the midpoint of the contest.

The response has been enthusiastic with more than a thousand slogans submitted thus far, according to officials.

Slogans have been received from numerous states and many parts of the world.

The Navy and the Air Force are leading in the greatest percentage of individual participation by service, with the Army, Coast Guard and Marines following close behind.

There is plenty of time to send in slogans. The contest deadline is July 16.

Those interested may send any number of slogans on a regular 8 1/2 by 11 sheet of paper to: Federal Voting Assistance Program, Room 1B457, The Pentagon, Washington, D.C. 20301-1155.

Include full name, mailing address and day and evening telephone number.

If you are in the military, include your service because the service with the highest percentage of individual participation will also receive special recognition.

Although the contest is primarily aimed at military members and overseas citizens, any U.S. citizen is eligible to enter.

The originator of the winning slogan, the second place finisher and honorable mentions will receive a certificate of recognition from the secretary of Defense.

Persons having further questions concerning this contest or any voting related questions, may write or call the Federal Voting Assistance Program at (800) 368-8683, DSN 225-0663 or (703) 695-0663.

YA center offers 'kids' stuff'

By Kimberly Bennett
Directorate of Community Activities

Video games, table tennis, dances, sports, field trips — boys and girls will never be at a loss for things to do if they spend their free time at Fort Benning's Youth Activities Center.

Family members of active duty and retired military personnel and Department of the Army civilians, ages 6 to 19 or still in high school, are all welcome to become members of the center and take advantage of all the recreation activities available.

Parents can be a part of the activities by volunteering as chaperons or coaches.

Children come to the center to participate in directed or self-directed activities, and they seem to always find something to do.

The Youth Center has a snack bar, which is open during peak attendance; a lounge; a multipurpose ballroom used for dances and ballet classes; meeting rooms; a swimming pool; and 17 playing fields.

Children can spend their time in the television room in front of the large screen stereo television with videocassette recorder or in the game room. Here, they can play foosball, table tennis, air hockey, pool or video games.

If they do not want to play on their own, they can join one of the many group activities. Youth Services plans regular field trips for interested members.

Previous outings have included trips to the bowling center, Kinnett Dairy and Six Flags Over Georgia amusement park.

Craft classes are every Thursday afternoon, and lessons for different skills take place on a regular basis. Members can take piano, dance or karate lessons. The teachers are contracted by Fort Benning.

Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts also meet at the center. Both organizations serve youth of active and retired military personnel on and off post.

Young athletes can be active throughout the year with the Youth Services sports program. The program includes flag football, tackle football, cheerleading, instructional soccer, spring and fall soccer, basketball, baseball, T-ball, softball, swimming and karate.

Each sport has several age groups, and everyone who signs up during the registration period will be placed on a team.

The sports program is designed to ensure that children have fun while learning the proper skills of the game. Children ages 4 to 5 are introduced to the sports, and the emphasis is on having fun and learning how to play as a team.

Rules and specialized skills are introduced at ages 6 to 8. After age 8, the young athlete learns about competition.

For social activities, dances are always popular. The center holds one dance each month for teens (ages 13 to 19) and two dances for pre-teens (ages 6 to 12).

The center also conducts several special social events throughout the year such as Easter egg hunts at Riverside and a multi-installation lock-in, where teens from other installations spend the night at the Youth Center enjoying guest speakers, a dance, tournaments and movies.

When the summertime hits, even more activities are available. Summer activities include fishing rodeos, fitness classes, bowling, crafts, skating, volleyball, nature walks and dances.

The swimming pool opens in June; its hours are Wednesday through Friday, 2 to 8 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday, 1 to 8 p.m. Swimming classes are offered for 5- to 18-year-olds; these are scheduled in four two-week sessions, and each session is filled to capacity, according to Billie Smith, the center's director.

Educational activities are also offered throughout the year. Children can attend workshops titled "How to Get a Job," "How to Manage Money and Balance a Checkbook" and "Communication Skills."

Members of the center have a say in what activities are planned. The Teen Council, which currently consists of 12 members, meets regularly to provide input regarding new events and events they would like to see take place.

The actions taken during these meetings are reported to the Parent/Adult Advisory Board, which addresses the concerns of parents and plans the center's activities.

During the school year, the Main Post Youth Activities Center in Building 1056, the Youth Gymnasium in Building 1055, and the Indianhead Center in Building 2592 are open Wednesday to Friday from 3 to 8 p.m., Saturday from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m., and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

During the summer, the facilities are open Wednesday through Saturday from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Sunday 11 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The Bouton Heights Community Youth Outreach Center in Building 9608 is open Tuesday through Saturday from 3 to 8 p.m. during school and 11 a.m. until 8 p.m. in the summer.

For more information, call the Youth Services main office at 545-3070 or 545-3913.

- July 6 to 16.
- July 19 to 30.
- Aug. 2 to 13.

For more information, call Youth Services at 545-3070 or 545-7945.

Summer camp — Youth Services is offering camp throughout the summer from 8 a.m. to noon each day. Each week a new camp will start. Children 6 to 12 can attend for $25 per week. Activities include field trips, bowling, sports and fitness, creative activities, social interaction and snacks.

The schedule is as follows:

- Week one - June 21 to 25.
- Week two - June 28 to July 2.
- Week three - July 6 to 9.
- Week four - July 12 to 16.
- Week five - July 19 to 23.
- Week six - July 26 to 30.
- Week seven - Aug. 2 to 6.
- Week eight - Aug. 9 to 13.

For more information, call Youth Services at 545-3070.

Camp Joy — Children, age 6 to 12, of low-income families may participate in six weeks of outdoor activities and daily spiritual guidance at Camp Joy. For the past 19 years, Camp Joy has provided a Christian atmosphere for needy children. For more information, call the Valley Rescue Mission at 322-8267.

'Bowl For Kids' Sake' — Big Brothers/Big Sisters is having its annual "Bowl For Kids' Sake" fund-raiser June 5 to 6 at Peach Bowl Lanes and Victory Lanes. Bowlers from the community are needed to participate.

Each bowler will be able to bowl three free games on either June 5 or 6 at Peach Bowl Lanes or Victory Lanes. In return, the Big Brothers/Big Sisters organization would like each bowler to take a pledge sheet and ask as many people as they can to donate several cents per pin times the three-game series score they bowl on that day.

There is a minimum three-game series score of 300. The bowler will collect the pledges after the event and mail the money to the Big Brothers/Big Sisters office by July 1.

Anyone who bowls will get a free "Bowl For Kids' Sake" bowling towel. Anyone that has pledges of $100 or more will get a free "Bowl For Kids' Sake" T-shirt. Additional prizes will be available and will be based on the bowler's total pledge collections.

Pledge sheets are available at the Big Brothers/Big Sisters Office, 1350 15th Ave., Columbus. For more information, call 327-3760.

Military spouse day — A free canvas tote bag awaits Fort Benning spouses today at the Army Community Services' Family Advocacy Program office in Building 2643, Soldiers' Plaza.

According to Family Advocacy Program Manager Becky Welch, her office will be celebrating Military Spouse Day with this giveaway.

Anyone interested simply needs to stop by her office between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. that day to pick up a free tote bag.

- May 30 - Center closes for inventory.

Engineers to meet — The Society of American Military Engineers will meet Thursday at the Fort Benning Officers' Club at 11:30 a.m. Col. James H. Simms, deputy commander and deputy division engineer, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers South Atlantic Division, Atlanta, will install officers and directors for 1993. He will speak about current issues of the Corps of Engineers.

Workshop to focus on relationships — A workshop focusing on relationships will be Thursday from 8:15 to 11:15 a.m. at the Youth Activities Center for soldiers, family members and civilian personnel. "Strengthening Relationship Skills" is the title of the workshop.

According to Mary Allen, transition assistance specialist, the event is being hosted by the Civilian Counseling Service of the Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Program Division and the Army Career and Alumni Program Transition Assistance Office.

Topics to be covered are: "Increasing Self Esteem," "Anger and Intimacy" and "Conflict Management at Work."

The workshop is free but participants must make reservations in advance by contacting the Directorate of Civilian Personnel's Training and Development at 545-5656.

Preschool openings — Patch Preschool has the following openings available in its morning and afternoon programs:

- 3-year-olds, two-day program
- 4-year-olds, two-day program.
- 4-year-olds, three-day program.
- 4-year-olds, five-day program.

- Lifeguard instructor class, Today, Saturday and Sunday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., cost - $80.

Food locker needs food — The Army Community Service's emergency food locker needs nonperishable food items. The program is designed to assist Fort Benning soldiers and their family members. Retirees and their family members may also be assisted.

Donations may be made Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. in Building 2642, Soldiers' Plaza.

Loyd School carnival — The Loyd Elementary School on Sante Fe Road will have a spring celebration carnival May 22, featuring game booths, the moon walk, a train, hay ride, dunking booth, face painting and button making. McGruff, the crime dog, will be there, a special balloon man to make surprises and a disc jockey to play music.

The Silver Wings, Fort Benning's command exhibition parachute team, will kick off the carnival at 12:50 p.m. Tickets go on sale at 12:30 p.m.

For more information, call 545-2285 or 682-5114.

Engineer scholarship — The Fort Benning-Columbus Society of American Military Engineers is offering a $600 scholarship to students enrolled in a two-, three- or four-year curriculum leading to a degree. Priority consideration will be given to a student enrolled in an engineering curriculum.

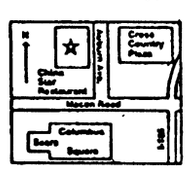
Applications must be submitted by May 31.

Volunteer workshop — A volunteer workshop on conflict resolution will be Thursday from 10 a.m. to noon, Building 359, Family Unit Network Center, Ingersoll Street.

For more information, call Kathy Case, installation volunteer coordinator, at 545-5602.

AA — The Fort Benning Alcoholics Anonymous group meets every Monday, Thursday and Saturday at 7 p.m. in the basement of the Directorate of Community Activities, Building 241. Entrance is in the rear of the building.

Jobs available — A new company coming to Columbus is interested in hiring 50 to 100 light industrial workers in the next few months.



Military spouses interested in filling out screening applications for employment should stop by the Army Community Service's Family Member Employment Assistance Program office.

According to Shirley Jarrett of FMEAP, experience is preferred but the company does have a quick-start program.

School students go to court

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Members of the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate performed a mock trial for students from Dexter School and Faith Middle School May 7 as part of this year's Law Day celebration.

"We want to raise the students' awareness of how the judicial system works and give them an idea of how court is actually conducted," said Capt. Lloyd N. Bell, the law day chairman.

"We wanted to communicate some of the basic principles of the judicial system, such as all people are innocent until proven guilty.

"This case deals with a child who has had her bike stolen, and we wanted to use this particular script to show the students that children can tell adults, and be believed by adults, when they are victims of a crime," Bell said.

It was established in the case that the girl who had her bike stolen, played by Kristin McGillin, age 9, was not too young to testify.

Maj. Howard McGillin, who played the prosecuting attorney, established that anyone who understands the difference between a truth and a lie, and that lying is wrong, may testify in a court of law no matter what their age.

Five Faith seventh-graders were chosen randomly to act as the jury in the trial.

After hearing the case and the evidence against the accused man, they found him guilty of stealing the bike.

Mike Ganey, one of the members of the jury, did not agree at first that the man was guilty. "Once we talked about it, though, I changed my mind," he said.

While the jury was deliberating, the judge, Lt. Col. Keith H. Hodges, talked through the trial with the audience.

He fielded questions, many of which concerned how to know if the witnesses were lying, which, Hodges pointed out, is part of the decision the jury has to make.

"We really paid attention since we were the jury," said Alexander Frost, who acted as the jury foreman. "We learned a lot," he said.

Camp Concharty opens June 20

Girl Scouts

Camp Concharty in Harris County is presently receiving applications for its 1993 summer program running from June 20 to July 30.

Located on 145 acres of woodland at the base of Pine mountain, Camp Concharty is owned and operated by the Concharty Council of Girl Scouts Inc.

Programs are available for children ages 6 to 17 years old.

For the new camper, there is a special three-day and four-night program, "Woodland Whimsie," and for the experienced campers, Camp Concharty offers one- and two-week adventures that can be tailored to suit anyone's taste or style.

In July, there is also a program, "Just For Boys," offered for brothers ages 6 to 11 years.

Camp activities range from swimming, campfires and nature crafts to sports, music and biking.

For the horse lover, Camp Concharty offers a special horsing program with courses for beginners, intermediate riders and advanced riders.

Fees to attend Camp Concharty range from $50 to $275 depending upon the program.

Anyone interested in receiving a camp catalog may contact Concharty Council of Girl Scouts Inc., 1344 13th Ave., Columbus, Ga. 31901 or call 327-2646.

Also, a video tape about financial planning is available.

Arms matches set

The U.S. Army Infantry Center is hosting the second annual U.S. Army Combat Arms Matches Saturday to May 22.

The matches open with a kick-off ceremony Monday at 7 a.m. on McAndrew Range, followed by individual and team competition on McAndrew, Roosevelt, Maertens, Easley and Wagner ranges.

Weapons include the M-16 rifle, M-60 machine gun, M-249 squad automatic weapon, M-9 pistol and the sniper weapon system.

Maj. Gen. Thomas W. Robison, director of Logistics, Headquarters, Forces Command, will be guest speaker at the opening ceremony.

The matches will test soldier skills with issue weapons in a live fire combat environment. It is specifically designed to accomplish two major goals across the total Army — promote training interest in small arms marksmanship and raise standards of proficiency in the use of individual service weapons, officials said.

The competition is open to active duty Army, National Guard, Reserves and a special open foreign armies class.

Nurses celebrate week, share vision

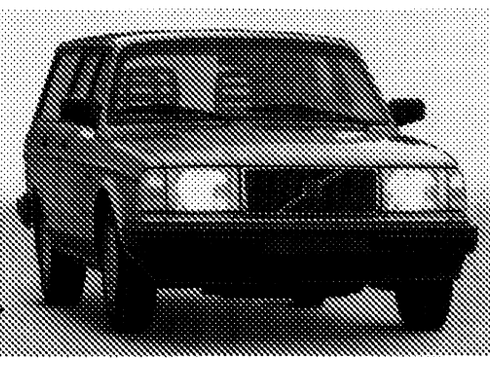
By Arneshula Bilal
Martin Army Community Hospital

Nurses from around the post gathered at Martin Army Community Hospital May 6 to celebrate National Nurses Week May 6 to Wednesday.

The theme for this year's event was "Share a Vision." The celebration began with a kick-off breakfast in the hospital's dining facility.

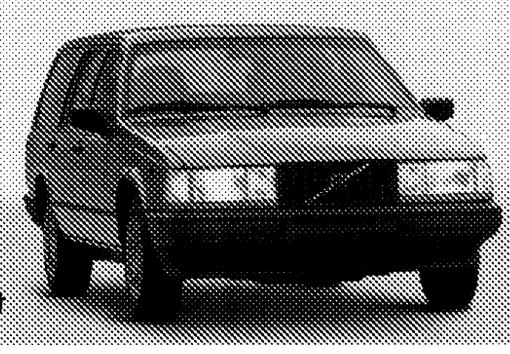
In the afternoon, some of the nurses went to the Columbus Government Center to be on hand to watch Mayor Frank Martin sign a proclamation formally recognizing the start of the week and noting the valuable contribution nurses play in our society.

Later that evening, several nurses returned to the hospital's dining facility for dinner and a short program.



The highlight at both of the functions at the hospital was a presentation by one of the hospital's nurse practitioners. At breakfast, the nurses listened to a presentation titled "The History of Blacks in Nursing," and at dinner they heard "Today's Nursing: Are We Practicing Nursing or Are We Practicing Medicine."

Other events included a breakfast and dinner Tuesday, which was also in the hospital's dining facility and a poster contest.



"Nurse practitioners at the hospital play an important role in the health care delivery process," said Maj. Roger Saunders, a pediatric nurse practitioner. "Nurse practitioners are found performing a wide array of patient services, wellness education, and health promotionsd. They provide care in the area of pediatrics, obstetrics and gynecology, psychiatric mental health, family care, adult medical surgical care, just to name a few," he said.

'Wild Palms' is a place, a miniseries, like no other

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

In a week when each major network has a new miniseries, the most unusual will take viewers to a different time and a VERY different place.

SPOTLIGHT

Filmmaker Oliver Stone is a master at stirring controversy through his movies ("JFK," "Platoon," etc.), and he's quite likely to do it again in producing his first major effort for television.

Airing nightly Sunday through Wednesday, the decidedly bizarre six-hour ABC melodrama "Wild Palms" is based on a magazine comic strip by Bruce Wagner, set in Los Angeles circa the year 2007. There, television executive Harry Wyckoff (played by James Belushi) becomes party to the mass transmission of "virtual reality," by which computer-generated images are realistic enough to make people believe they're looking at the genuine article.

The use of the process becomes the cornerstone of a power struggle as Wyckoff's boss at the mysterious Channel 3, Sen. Anton Kreutzer (Robert Loggia), takes it a step further by converting telecast pictures into three-dimensional holograms ... thereby creating drastic situations for Wyckoff, his wife ("China Beach" alumna Dana Delany), his mother-in-law (Angie Dickinson), his former flame (Kim Cattrall), his son (Ben Savage, brother of "Wonder Years" star Fred) and countless others.

Dana Delany and James Belushi.

Also prominent in the cast are Ernie Hudson ("Ghostbusters") as Wyckoff's best friend, Bebe Neuwirth ("Cheers") as a TV-comedy star, Nick Mancuso ("Matrix") as a lethal artist-activist, Robert Morse as a popular singer of the era, David Warner as a reputed terrorist, and Brad Dourif ("One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest") as the primary genius behind the new video revolution.

What: "Wild Palms"
When: Sunday to Wednesday, 9 p.m. on ABC

Stone serves solely as an executive producer of "Wild Palms" — with the directing handled by such notable, fellow moviemakers as Kathryn Bigelow ("Point Break") and Phil Joanou ("Final Analysis") — and he maintains he always intended to let writer and production partner Wagner oversee the day-to-day making of the project. "I read the scripts and went over them with Bruce," Stone reports. "I consulted on the casting and the key crew members, and I looked at the rushes and made comments, but I essentially consider this to be Bruce's child. He carried it through."

Still, any degree of television involvement isn't the norm for Stone, and he explains that one of the principal appeals for him was that "We weren't going to be around for long. We were going to take it as a one-shot sort of deal, and we were going to do as we wished. If those conditions were not met, we were not going to do it. ABC said, 'Bring us something, go for it,' and they really left us alone. You can take a chance if they're willing to take a chance, so I would do it again if the conditions were right."

Tri-community area celebrates Military Appreciation Week

By Lawrence Hughes
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Military Appreciation Week culminates with the Association of the United States Army's annual picnic Armed Forces Day Saturday.

"Fort Benning Today" will bring you coverage of many of the week's events to include the picnic. There will also be coverage of the kick-off breakfast Monday, volleyball at Scooters Tuesday, RedStixx baseball Wednesday, the golf tournament at Doughboy Stadium and much more. "Fort Benning Today" will also show highlights of the fishing tournament at Uchee Creek and most of the other events including the Armed Forces Day picnic and the "Burn the General"Run Saturday.

USAIC TV Schedule
Fort Benning Today: 8:30 p.m. to 1:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 1:30 to 2 p.m.
Specials: 2 to 4:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 4:30 to 8:30 p.m.

USAIC TV will highlight post events and list classified advertisements on the Fort Benning Community Bulletin Board with news and music from Soldiers Radio Satellite Network.

If you are a subscriber to Fort Benning Cable, you can watch USAIC TV on Channel 3, 24 hours a day.

Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:26, 7:56, 8:26 and 8:56 on WLTZ TV-38.

For more information or to make suggestions, write or call the Broadcast Section of the Public Affairs Office, Infantry Hall, Room 602, 545-2201.

Georgia playwrights win contest

Three writers take top slots in 'DeepSouth' competition

Springer Opera House

Three Georgia playwrights emerged as the winners of this year's AT&T Universal Card DeepSouth New Play Contest at the Springer Opera House.

"This is the best crop of new plays that we have seen," explained Paul R. Pierce, Springer artistic director. "The writers in this group had their plays scrutinized like never before. It was so difficult selecting winners that we had to take an extra month to analyze the scripts more rigorously and make value judgments under a stricter interpretation of the contest guidelines."

Decatur playwright Michael Maschinot won first place with his play, "Tongues of Fire." Maschinot receives a $500 cash prize and a full-scale production of the play at the Springer Opera House beginning June 19.

"Tongues of Fire" is a suspense-mystery set against the backdrop of the 16th century Italian Renaissance. A young apprentice to a great Florentine painter gets swept into a web of intrigue when his master is killed in a duel with an evil Dominican monk. A rich tapestry of intrigue unwinds as the secret pasts of the apprentice, the monk, the painter and his beautiful model are revealed amid a desperate struggle to complete a sweeping allegorical painting in the monastery chapel.

Pierce will direct "Tongues of Fire."

Another Decatur-based playwright, Ronda Bowe Kustick, picks up the $200 second prize with her play "Scattered Pigeons," a humorous and dramatic work focusing on the relationship between a quirky young teen-ager and her lonely aunt. The aunt's attempts to adopt a pair of foster twins who have been living with her are dashed when an unsubstantiated rumor slithers through the small town and results in the removal of the children from her home. "Scattered Pigeons" will receive a staged reading at the Springer Opera House June 4 at 7 p.m.

The $100 third prize was claimed by Milledgeville playwright Peter Pauze for his script, "Theatres of War," which will also receive a staged reading June 4. "Theatres of War" is an innovative, highly theatrical, dream-like play about a young man who finds himself inside a World War II combat movie dealing with his father's ideas of manhood, the morality of war and violence and the meaning of cowardice. The young man is portrayed as a frustrated and confused "soldier of life" amid a funny and poignant theatrical circus that includes appearances by historical figures such as Abraham Lincoln, Czar Nicholas and King George V.

More than 30 scripts qualified for the competition this year but Pierce noted that the real advances in the three-year-old contest was in the quality of the scripts submitted.

"We are now getting some extremely good plays and the competition is stiff," explained the director. "In previous years, one or two plays stood out immediately and rose to the top early. This time, though, the screening committee advanced nine scripts into final consideration and they were all very good. We had plays of wide-ranging style, content and theatrical convention, some of which demonstrated dramatic innovations that are very unique. The difference is probably the involvement in AT&T this year."

Pierce pointed out that AT&T Universal Card selected the DeepSouth Contest to sponsor because of the Springer's efforts to find and encourage young, emerging Southern playwrights. AT&T's $5,000 gift allowed the Springer to promote the contest more widely throughout the South at colleges, theatres, arts institutions and literary groups.

Last year's winning play, "Belinda Braveheart and Billy Barnstorm," by Columbus playwright Ned Campbell, has been selected for publication by Pioneer Drama Service, the nation's biggest publisher of children's scripts.

The third-place winner of last season's contest, "Theatre Alchemy," was performed by Springer Theatre On Tour in 21 schools this past February under a grant by the Knight Foundation.

Historic site to recreate 1864 Confederate victory

Georgia Dept. of Natural Resources

ATLANTA — Memorial Day weekend, May 29 and 30, visitors at Pickett's Mill battlefield historic site will commemorate the 129th anniversary of the Confederate victory at the Battle of Pickett's Mill with a weekend of "living history." The park will recreate the dramatic 1864 Confederate victory that drastically slowed Sherman's march through Georgia.

Visitors will experience first-hand the daily life of the Confederate soldiers through the vivid re-creations of camp life, as well as artillery demonstrations and military drills. The Confederate camp will be open all day with programs on the hour and the battle re-creations will be at 4 p.m. each day. Pickett's Mill Battlefield Historic Site is operated by the Georgia Department of Natural Resources and is located near Dallas, Ga., just 18 miles west of Marietta.

For more information on this program, call Pickett's Mill at (404) 443-7850.

Columbus Symphony presents season finale

Columbus Symphony Orchestra

The Columbus Symphony will perform its final Masterpiece Concert of the 1992-93 season under the direction of Maestro George Del Gobbo May 22 at 8 p.m. in the Three Arts Theatre.

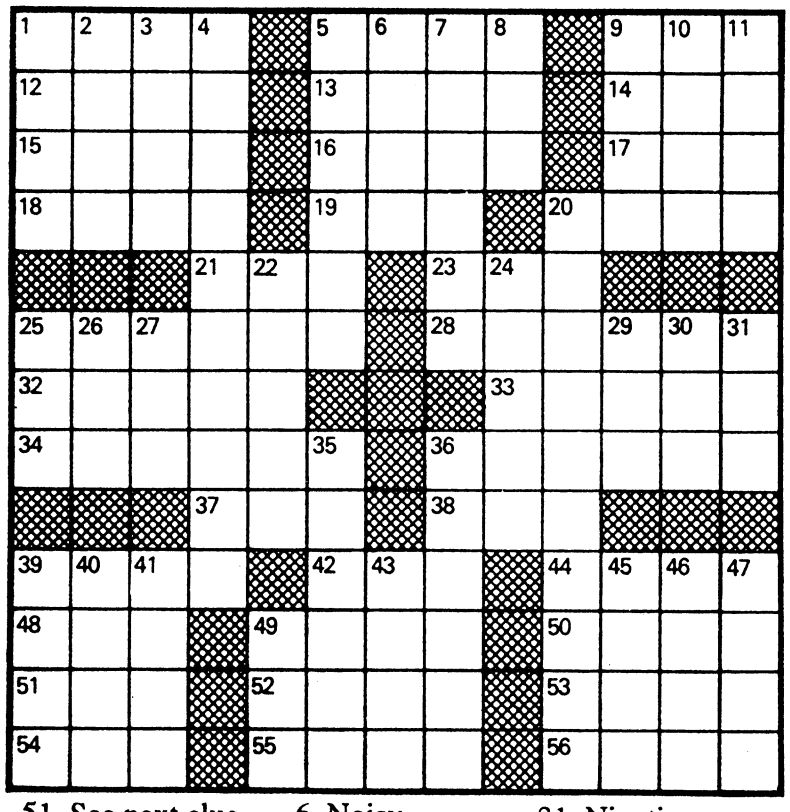
What: Final Masterpiece Concert

Who: Columbus Symphony Orchestra

When: May 22 at 8 p.m.

The concert will open with Vaughan-Williams "Fantasia" on a theme of Thomas Tallis, to be followed by Ravel's "Suite from 'Mother Goose'" and conclude with Mahler's "Symphony No. 4" featuring Meg Stecker-Runde as vocalist. A pre-concert lecture on the evening's music will be given by Del Gobbo in the Three Arts Theatre at 7 p.m. This concert is sponsored by AT&T Universal Card with additional funding provided by the Georgia Council for the Arts.

This concert will feature works that were inspired by creations of others. English composer Vaughan-Williams based his "Fantasia" on a theme that Tallis composed for the Church of England in 1587.



Ravel originally composed "Suite from 'Mother Goose'" for four-hand piano duet inspired by the fairy tales of Charles Perrault, Mademoiselle Leprince de Beaumont and Mademoiselle a'Aulnoy. Later a ballet was made of this work and the music was then transcribed for orchestra.

Lastly, Mahler's "Symphony No. 4" was composed during the period when he was inspired by the anthology of German folk poetry Des Knaben Wunderhorn compiled by Arnim and Brentano. The poem "A Heavenly Life" more specifically led to the creation of this symphony and the fourth movement includes a vocal soloist with the text based on this poem.

Stecker-Runde will be performing the vocal part in the fourth movement of Mahler's fourth symphony. Stecker-Runde currently teaches voice at the Schwob Department of Music at Columbus College and is vocal coach for the Springer Opera Theatre. Stecker-Runde has performed with the Milwaukee, Anchorage and Oswego Opera companies as well as the Syracuse Symphony and Southeastern Music Festival Orchestra.

Tickets range from $9 to $15 for adults and $5 to $8 for students and are available at the CSO office located in the lower level of the Barnett Bank on First Avenue or at the Three Arts Theatre the day of the performance. Special discounts are available for groups of 10 or more. Tickets may be purchased over the phone at 323-5059. For more information, call Lisa Baumann at 323-5059.

ASIAN TRIVIA

Equal Opportunity Office

Each week during the month of May, there will be questions pertaining to Asian American and Pacific Islander history in The Bayonet.

The first person to call the Equal Opportunity Office at 545-6665 with the correct answers before they are published will receive a prize furnished by the Directorate of Community Activities.

The following are the answers to questions published in the May 7 edition of The Bayonet:

a. The Spanish American War
b. Hawaii and California
c. Jobs

The following are the questions for this week:

a. Can you name at least seven Asian American or Pacific Islander groups?

b. What Hawaiian National Guard unit has the nickname of "The Purple Heart Battalion?"

c. Can you name at least six categories in which Asian Americans or Pacific islanders have contributed?

'Guys and Dolls' kicks off Springer season

Springer Opera House

When the Springer Opera House steps into the ring next season, it will lead off with two strong right hooks followed by a combination of punches designed for an early knockout, sending its opponent to the showers for good.

According to artistic director Paul R. Pierce, the boxing analogy is appropriate, considering the Springer's objective to shake off the effects of the recession by setting a new subscription record of 3,000.

"Four years ago, we effectively doubled the subscriber base to 2,400 season ticket holders, then added another 400 the next year," explained Pierce. "Then we hit an invisible ceiling of 2,800 as the economy soured."

"In the coming year, the Springer Opera House will be taking the fight to the streets. We're going to break 3,000 and we're all confident that these are the shows that will do it for us.

The Springer will be shifting its strategy toward audience building in the 1993-94 season by focusing on the musicals that are popular with local audiences and using them to attract new patrons.

Next season, the Springer Opera House schedule will feature three musical comedies and two nonmusicals in its mainstage series instead of the usual arrangement of two musicals and three nonmusicals.

The season will begin with "Guys and Dolls," the Tony Award-winning musical that is enjoying a smash Broadway revival (Sept. 23 to Oct. 2).

The 1950's classic is a New York fable based on Damon Runyon's story of a floating crap game, a crowd of high-rolling gamblers, some sassy chorus girls and a Salvation Army mission lass with a need to save their souls.

In an effort to keep attendance high and attract more family audiences, the Springer will come right back with another musical-Rodgers and Hammerstein's Cinderella. (Nov. 26 through Dec. 18). Opening Thanksgiving weekend, this gigantic musical fairy tale will run for a month during the holidays and will serve double duty as the second show in the Children's Theatre Series.

After a double dose of musical theatre, the Springer season will charge headlong into one of the most stunning works in all dramatic literature — Henrik Ibsen's classic, "A Doll's House (Jan. 27 to Feb. 5)."

The Springer stage will jump with the swing sound of Harlem in the 1930's when the Tony Award-winning musical, "Ain't Misbehavin," opens next spring (March 17 through 26). The play celebrates the golden age of the Cotton Club, stride piano, hot jazz and Tin Pan Alley.

Season ticket buyers have four options: The regular subscription for $52.50, a preview night subscription for $37 (first Thursday only), a student subscription for $34 and a Children's Theatre Series subscription for only $16.

The Children's Theatre Series consists of Hansel and Gretel — a new marionette theater version Without the scary oven scene (July 23 and 24), the mainstage production of Cinderella (Nov. 26 through Dec. 18) and a new play for children (May 26 through June 4).

Barnsley Gardens offers an array of summer events

Barnsley Gardens

Barnsley Gardens at Woodlands is offering an array of events created to educate and entertain guests of all ages and interests.

Summer concert series

The summer concert series will be June 10 and 14, July 8 and 22 and Aug. 5 at 7 p.m.

Bring your picnic basket, a blanket and spread out on the grass of Barnsley's outdoor amphitheater to enjoy five nights of music and fun under the stars. Each concert will have a different theme from country to jazz to authentic Civil War entertainment.

Regular admission prices apply for general seating. Reserved seating and five-concert subscription tickets are also available. Full concessions will be on sale.

Barnsley War Days

War Days will be celebrated July 31 to Aug. 1 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Relive the trials and glory of the bygone antebellum era with a living history celebration of the Old South. Demonstrators in antique attire will be on hand cooking, spinning and sewing in the old style. Period music, dance and storytelling will entertain guests of all ages, and over in the meadow, a Civil War encampment will feature the boys in blue and gray.

Confederate Ball

Barnsley Gardens hosts the Confederate Ball July 31 at 8 p.m.

Complimenting Barnsley War Days, this evening spectacular will spotlight the pomp and ceremony of a true Southern gala. Staged in the historic ruins, dance the waltz and Virginia Reel to the music of an authentic re-enactment brass band and enjoy refreshments of the era.

Admission is $20 per couple or $10 per couple dressed in period attire.

Quilts in the Gardens

Aug. 7 to 15, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., celebrate quilts in the gardens.

Quilts chronicle the diverse history of our country and especially the South better than perhaps any other American medium.

In this show, more than 100 quilts from historic to modern will be on display against the backdrop of the beautifully restored gardens. Quilting experts will be on hand to answer your questions. You'll even be invited to take a stitch at a real quilting bee.

Cotton Jamboree

The Cotton Jamboree is set for Sept. 25 to 26 and Oct. 2 to 3 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Barnsley Gardens, like so many other plantations in the region, stands as a testament to the time when cotton was king. This event will take a serious yet entertaining look at the plant that built the South.

You'll be invited to bring the cotton in from the field, then watch it as it progresses from the gin to the loom. Various cotton contests, an antique farm implement show, entertainment and fall festivities will complete these days.

There's also the Cotton Bolt Cross Country Race Sept. 26. Offered as a part of the Cotton Jamboree, the cross-country race will send participants on a challenging and beautiful off-road run through this 1,600 acre plantation.

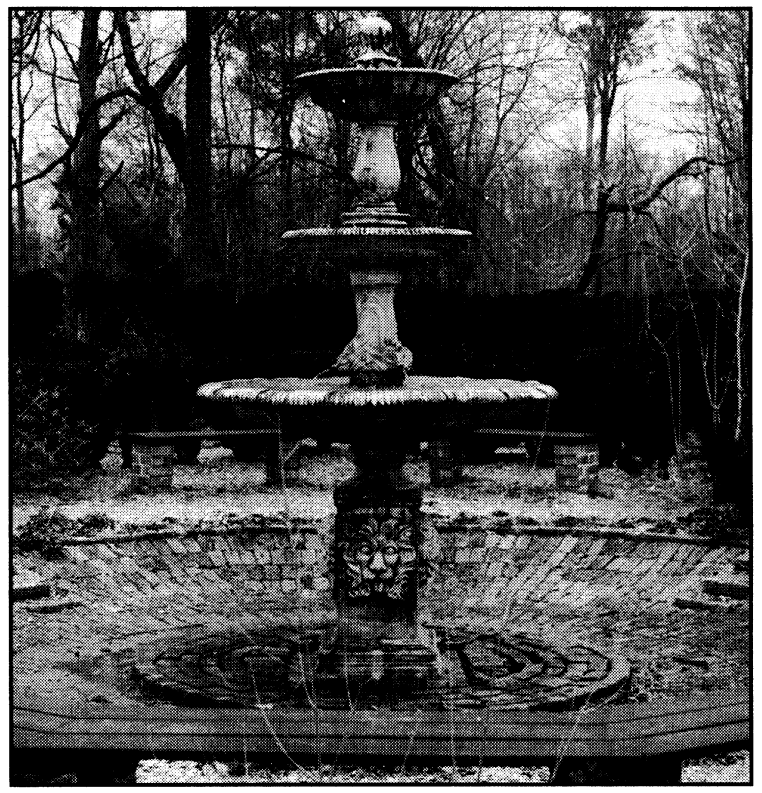
Spirits of Barnsley

Kick off Halloween with the Spirits of Barnsley Oct. 22 to 24 and 29 to 31 from 7 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Experience the mystery and magic of the season as the spirits of Barnsley Gardens come alive for a night of thrills and frights. Meet Julia, Barnsley's ghost, and other spirits from plantations around the South. This event is designed as a celebration of Southern ghost-story telling rather than a traditional haunted house.

Admission is $3 per adult and $2 for seniors, students and children.

Grand Illumination



Celebrate the spirit of Christmas Dec. 3 to 4, 10 to 11 and 17 to 18 from 6 to 9 p.m.

In the grand tradition of Colonial American Christmases, bask in the glow of Barnsley Gardens illuminated by warm firelight. Following your tour and a mug of warm cider, a horse-drawn hay ride through the plantation will reveal living scenes from the story of Christ's birth.

See shepherds and wise men, culminating with the nativity set in a historic barn as local church choirs for the night with music.

Unless otherwise indicated, admission for each event is $6 for adults and $5 for students and seniors. Children 11 and under are free with paying adults.

Barnsley Gardens at Woodlands is located at 597 Barnsley Gardens Road, Adairsville, Ga. 30103. Call (404) 773-7480 for more information.

Ceremony to honor generals

School of the Americas

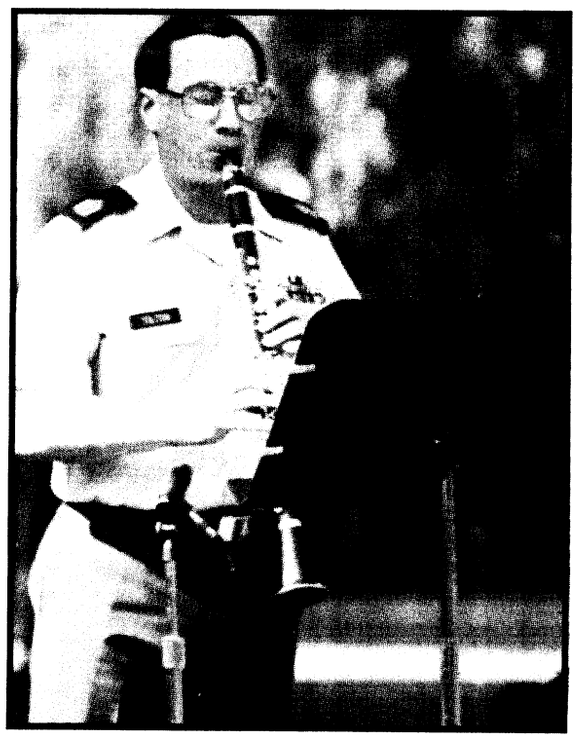
The U.S. Army School of the Americas Hall of Fame induction ceremony is today at 11 a.m. in Pratt Hall, Building 35.

The ceremony, or "Galeria de Honor," will officially recognize the achievements and contributions made by graduates of the SOA's Command and General Staff Course to the armed forces of their respective countries.

This year's inductees are Maj. Gen. Tommy Rafael Fernandez Alarcon, deputy secretary of state for the armed forces of the Dominican Republic; Maj. Gen. Jose Emilio Guzman Fernandez, Dominican Republic army chief of staff; Lt. Gen. Hector Garcia Tejada, secretary of state for the armed forces of the Dominican Republic; and Maj. Gen. Hernan Jose Guzman Rodriguez, commander-in-chief of the Columbian army.

The School of the Americas originated at Fort Amador, Panama Canal Zone, in 1946 as the Latin American Training Center Ground Division.

Four years later, it was renamed the U.S. Army Caribbean School and transferred to Fort Gulick, Panama, where Spanish became the official academic language.



In July 1963, the school was redesignated the U.S. Army School of the Americas.

In October 1984, the school was relocated to Fort Benning and assigned to the Training and Doctrine Command.

The former U.S. Army Infantry School building became the School of the Americas headquarters upon completion of a $6 million interior renovation project.

Band, chorus entertain

The Infantry Band and Infantry Chorus performed an outdoor concert Sunday at Riverside.

Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White welcomed the audience.

"It took more than a year of planning to make this concert a reality," he said. "Because of the weather, we've had to reschedule several times.

"But we're fortunate to be here on this beautiful day; and, my wife, Linda, and I are glad of the opportunity to share this historic home with you," he said.

The program included several pieces by the band, under the direction of Chief Warrant Officer 3 Larry G. Hyatt and featured a clarinet solo by 1st Sgt. Bob Tolton.

A rendition of "Civil War Fantasy" was performed under the direction of guest conductor band member Staff Sgt. Fred Catchings, who has been accepted for Warrant Officer School and will train as a band leader.

The chorus, under the direction of Staff Sgt. Patrick Durr, performed "Wind Beneath My Wings," "Armed Forces Salute" and "Voices of America" in conjunction with members of the band.

The audience, scattered across the grounds with blankets, lawn chairs and coolers, seemed to enjoy the concert.

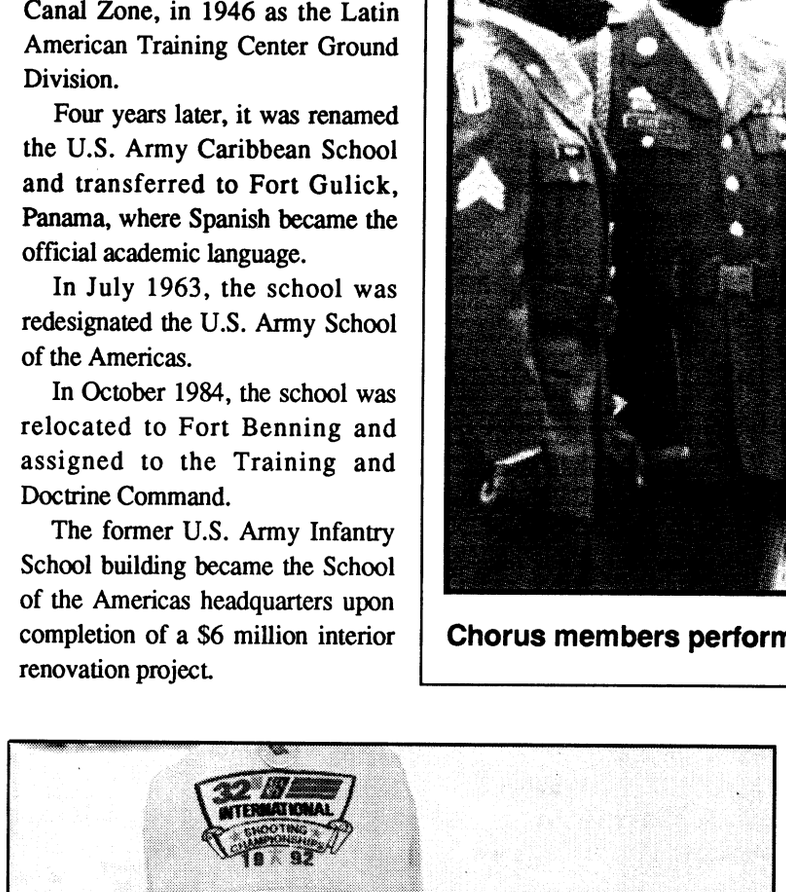
Another performance at Riverside has been scheduled for June 13.

Campaign exceeds AER goal

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

With contributions of $188,826, the 1993 Army Emergency Relief Campaign surpassed its $180,000 goal and is officially over though still collecting last minute contributions, according to Sgt. 1st Class Marmion Montgomery.

Not included in this amount are the more than $1,700 in pledges expected from Staff Sgt. Albert Jones' roller skating fund raiser on Armed Forces Day from Macon to Fort Benning.



The more than 100-mile journey took Jones 10 hours with breaks every two hours, so he began at 7:30 a.m. amid family and friends, with television and radio coverage, and finished at 7:30 p.m. in front of Infantry Hall. He was welcomed by more than 100 people from the 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital unit.

Montgomery said the campaign was able to surpass its goal this year because of the hard work of the unit project officers and key people from the units.

He and Capt. Thomas McCafferty, the other campaign coordinator, are still accepting donations and pledges for the drive.

AER is an emergency financial organization that is specifically for helping Army active duty personnel, family members, retirees, widows and members of the U.S. National Guard and Reserve.

Since 1942, AER has made no-interest loans and grants helping more than 2 million people with more than $10 million. Loans may be made for such emergency expenses as medical, travel, food, rent or utilities.

U.S. Army Marksmanship

In keeping with the highest standards of marksmanship competition, the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit's Running Target Team hosted the 1993 Running Target Interservice Matches and proved once again that the unit's shooters are second to none.

Held at Fort Benning's Hibbs Range and Tommy G. Pool International Shooting Complex April 26 through 30, the unit's three-man team won an unprecedented seven of eight team events, took first in one individual event and set a new national record in the 10-meter mixed run team event.

According to the officer in charge 1st Lt. Michael Johnson, the unit's team members — Johnson, Sgt. 1st Class Michael Delk and Sgt. David Edmondson, Company B, 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry (Officer Candidate School) — had no idea that their combined score of 1,088 (of a possible 1,200) had set a new record.

"Frankly, we were shooting an average match," said Johnson. "Our score is certainly nothing to sneeze at; but, when you train at the level we train, it's a surprise when one's average can set the pace for others to follow."

The new national record beat the old score of 1,083 set by the unit's team of Sgt. Troy Lawton, Delk and Edmondson at the 1992 U.S. International Shooting Championships in California.

In competition open to all services and their components, the unit's team had to hold its own against three other teams that were bent on challenging and winning this year's tourney.

The Air Force, National Guard and Reserve Running Target teams proved to be a challenge this year and did rather well in the individual events, said Johnson.

"Edmondson, however, put a dose of reality back into their lives as he claimed the gold in the 10-meter 30 + 30 event," he added.

"It's funny, but one has to wonder; if the AMU team set a new service record on one of its average shooting days, how many new records will the team set at the next competition?

"The (international shooting championship) is coming up in June in California. I'm not going to say we'll be setting any new records, but I'm sure we'll do very well," said Johnson.

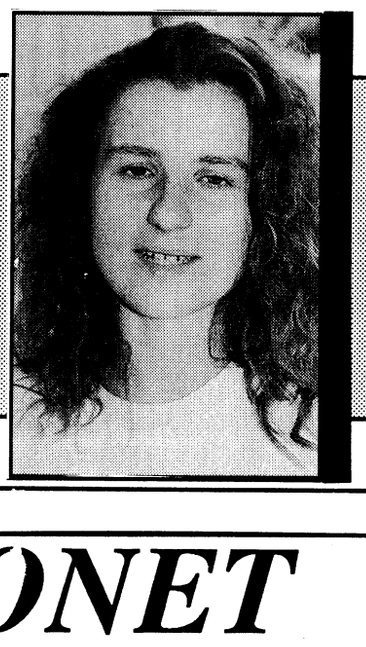
VARIOUS VOICES

How should Fort Benning spend the $1 million it recently won in the Army Communities of Excellence competition?

1st Sgt. Donnie Carpenter, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment — "Fort Benning is probably one of the best posts in the Army except for the troop billets for single soldiers."

Pvt. 2 John Morris, 586th Engineer Company — "We should build a new enlisted club because the Hidden Door is getting old."



Spc. Wendy G. Clements, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment — "Some of the streets out by the ranges could be repaired, and we should clean up all the trees that fell in the storm."

Kathy Wright, family member — "(We need) better parks for children and better housing."

Spc. Edward Sayan, 586th Engineer Company — "(The post) should build a beach so the soldiers will have some place to go without traveling so far to get to one."

Karen Forrest, family member — "(The post) should give the soldiers more money, especially the ones with families."

Post's goal to improve quality of life in barracks

Fort Benning's goal is to make the quality of life in the barracks more comparable to the living standards of soldiers living off post or in post housing.

We want single soldiers to have more privacy, greater freedom of expression and more latitude as to how they conduct their personal lives.

This policy memo does not restrict the responsibility and authority of the commander to maintain discipline and ensure a high standard of readiness and training.

What it does is place a greater responsibility on the individual soldier by holding the soldier accountable if he or she fails to meet these standards.

Commanders will still respond to misbehavior and abuse as they deem appropriate. Commanders will implement the following standards:

Charge of quarters

CQs will not be eliminated in the barracks. The safety and security of our soldiers will remain one of our top priorities. CQs will continue to represent their chains of command. CQs will ensure that safety, security, law and order are maintained.

Barracks room size

Our goal, where space is available, is to assign only two junior soldiers (specialist and below) or one noncommissioned officer per room.

Do not issue statements of nonavailability of quarters to reach this goal. However, specialists and below may live off post at the commander's discretion but will not be entitled to basic allowance for quarters.

(Note: According to Army Regulation 210-50, Housing Management, April 24, 1990, if the unit gives the soldier permission to live off post without basic allowance for quarters, the unit must offer to provide storage of the soldier's military equipment.)

To achieve this goal, commanders must be innovative in their approach to gain more barracks rooms by looking at consolidating or eliminating administrative and logistical spaces, eliminating squad and platoon command posts, and realigning storage spaces currently located in barracks rooms.

POLICY

Geographical bachelors will not occupy barracks space until the above goals are achieved and then only in accordance with appropriate regulations.

Barracks room standard

Soldiers are not required to maintain their rooms in a "Dress Right, Dress" arrangement.

Rooms may be arranged to allow soldiers maximum freedom of expression while still emphasizing cleanliness, safety and property accountability.

Soldiers are permitted microwaves (in accordance with post regulations), contract for phones and cable television (as lines are available), and to use their own furnishings.

The standard includes all the features normally found in either a bachelor enlisted quarters or bachelor officer quarters.

Barracks room inspections

Eliminate all scheduled or routine room inspections. Commanders may conduct random inspections for the purpose of maintaining a standard of safety, health and welfare, security and property accountability.

This does not preclude the regularly scheduled inspections of common-use areas, such as stairwells, showers, latrines, laundry areas and day rooms.

Duty rosters

Provide all soldiers with predictable time off. Commanders will ensure that soldiers living in the barracks are no more susceptible to duty than soldiers residing in government housing or off post.

Alcohol

Eliminate all restrictions on the type or amount of alcohol maintained or consumed in the barracks for all soldiers 21 years of age or older.

This policy change is not meant to glamorize or encourage the use of alcohol, but to realign privileges with soldiers residing off post or in government housing.

Visitation

No overnight guests are allowed in the barracks. Commanders will allow liberal room visitation privileges with the following restrictions:

- Sponsors are responsible for their guests. All guests must sign in and out with the CQ.
- When more than one soldier resides in the room, they must jointly agree to a guest coming prior to the visit.
- Nonmilitary personnel under the age of 18 must be accompanied by a parent or legal guardian.

Regular passes

If a soldier is not required for duty on a two-day (Saturday and Sunday), three-day (Friday, Saturday and Sunday), or four-day (Friday through Monday) weekend, he or she is considered on pass.

All mileage hour restrictions, and requirements to submit a pass request will be eliminated for these normal weekend passes. Commanders may impose restrictions or special requirements only for mission-essential requirements.

This does not eliminate the requirement for unit safety briefings and vehicle inspections required by regulations before holidays and long weekends.

Commanders must get involved in the quality of life for all soldiers on Fort Benning. You will check that everyone is working to provide a better, safer and healthier environment for our soldiers wherever, whenever and however possible.

With your support, we can continue to make Fort Benning the best Army post and the finest installation in the Army.

Col. Burnet R. Quick
Chief of staff

Spc. Clyde Snively is still on leave; his column will resume next week.

LETTERS

Senator lauds Benning

Congratulations to you and the men and women of Fort Benning (on winning the Army Communities of Excellence Award).

A great accomplishment!

U.S. Sen. Paul Coverdell

CG says 'thank you'

I am taking this opportunity to thank the many people at Fort Benning and in the Chattahoochee Valley for their great support of Military Appreciation Week and Armed Forces Day.

I especially want to thank the great members of the Association of the United States Army, who worked so hard and long to help us stage the best-ever Armed Forces Day and the first-ever Military Appreciation Week.

Your dedication and enthusiasm were appreciated by all as were the donations of time, talent and resources made by our AUSA corporate members.

I also thank all you wonderful people who came out to our many events, the AUSA breakfast, the RedStixx baseball game and of course the AUSA picnic, for without your attendance, there would have been no event, no matter how well planned and executed.

Once again, the citizens of the tri-community area proved why Fort Benning is the best place in the world to be a soldier.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White
Commanding general

First lieutenant praises post civilian worker

I'd like to salute Brenda Buckley for doing a stupendous job as a records clerk in the Airborne and Ranger Student Records Department here at Fort Benning.

Buckley is very knowledgeable, resourceful and extremely professional.

Her level of initiative, enthusiasm and eagerness to help students is both exemplary and hard to find.

As a student at Fort Benning for eight months, I have observed students often being treated with apathy and indifference by personnel (both military and civilian) whose job it is to support students and help solve their problems.

It's refreshing and uplifting to see someone like Buckley who genuinely cares about the students she supports and does everything possible to assist them.

This is a special thanks to Buckley for a job well done. The Records Department is as lucky to have her on its staff as we students are to have her on our side.

1st Lt. John D. Merz

TRADOC commander sends congratulations

Congratulations to the entire Fort Benning team on your recent selection as continental United States large installation winner in the Army Communities of Excellence competition. This is great recognition of your leadership and caring for our soldiers, civilians and family members.

Our CONUS-based force projection Army requires communities of excellence from which to operate. Understand how difficult this can be during these times of diminishing resources.

You set the standard for TRADOC and our Army in this critical warfighting area.

Great teamwork all the way around.

Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr.
TRADOC commanding general

Army chief of staff heaps on honors

Congratulations to you and to the Fort Benning community for winning the Chief of Staff of the Army's award for community excellence.

The ACOE team found commitment, vision and deep community involvement to be the way of life at Fort Benning.

As we continue to shape the Army for the future, community excellence will be the foundation for the Army of tomorrow; for it is paramount in its contribution to a quality, ready force.

Congratulations and keep up the great work.

Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan
Army chief of staff

MESSAGE

To further our goal of providing a safe and healthful place for us to work and live, I am designating Thursday as Force Protection Awareness Day. This day is for soldiers, civilian employees and family members.

Everyone should take time to identify and correct hazards that can cause accidents. If essential training or critical events preclude participation on this day, commanders may designate an alternate date.

Commanders and directors will plan and conduct programs relevant to their mission. The program should include a review of risk management, job safety analysis for each job series or military occupational specialty, and standard operating procedures for all hazardous operations, training or activities.

Leaders at every level must be committed to providing safe and healthful working and living areas.

Follow me, safely!

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White
Commanding general

OWC sends 'thank you'

Recently an accident fund was set up to help several Fort Benning individuals who were seriously injured in a car crash on I-185. The Officers' Wives' Club would like to send a special "thank you" to all those people who contributed to the fund. Your response has been overwhelming, and your generosity is greatly appreciated.

Fire in the hole! Fire in the hole! Fire in the hole! Members of the 89th Ordnance Detachment (Explosive Ordnance Disposal), in an attempt to prove the danger of ordnance, demonstrated the power of C-4 plastic explosive in an atomic simulator May 12 with an explosion that echoed throughout the EOD demolition range.

"Not too long ago, we had a person killed on Fort Benning wandering onto one of our ranges," said Staff Sgt. Wade Harrington. "If this continues to happen, a lot of people could get hurt."

Harrington said many people search for ordnance objects on ranges for their worth as scrap metal. Many of them do not know the danger they are subjecting themselves to, he said.

"A lot of people brought back war souvenirs from Desert Storm and Desert Shield. We have a big problem with people taking these objects thinking they're duds or toys and blowing them up. We've seen a lot of people killed that way," he said.

The detachment's "bomb squad" is in charge of the disposal of explosive ordnance for 10 counties in Florida, 25 counties in Alabama and 20 counties in Georgia, Harrington said.

In most cases, the detachment disposes of dud ordnance from military weapons, Harrington said. When the need occurs, they are trained to handle chemical, biological, nuclear and improvised explosive devices also.

"Never assume that an explosive is a dud," Harrington said. "The first thing you should do if you find (an explosive object) is to contact your local police. Never try to handle it yourself."

The detachment operates a 24-hour emergency hot line for anyone who finds ordnance objects or has a question about explosives.

Class gives facts on rape

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

A series of rape prevention and sexual assault avoidance classes was presented by the Military Police Activity May 10, 12, 13 and 14 in Building 2530 and Infantry Hall.

"Rape is not a sexual act; it's an act of violence," said Staff Sgt. Bruce Williams of the U.S. Army Infantry Center Military Police Company. "No matter what a woman does, she does not ask for it. That's the mentality rapists want us to believe — let's blame the victim."

Williams said a good guess would be that more than half of rapes that occur are not reported. "A rapist will never stop raping," he said. "Once a rapist starts, he will continue to rape until he is incarcerated." Cases of a rapist assaulting more than 200 women are documented, said Williams.

There are three main areas where most rapes occur, he said; at home, in the car and with a person you are acquainted with (date rape).

"When you are at home, even in the daytime, keep your doors locked," he said. "More than 50 percent of rapes occur in the home. When you're at home alone and you know something is going to be delivered or someone comes to the door, pretend you are not alone," he said.

"Before you get into your car," Williams said, "make a quick visual search of the backseat. Always lock all of the doors in the car when you are driving and try to be aware of your surroundings." Williams said the best thing to do if you are being followed is to drive to a police station. "If your car breaks down, open the hood and get back inside the car and lock the door," he said. "Do not hitchhike unless it is totally necessary; and, if you do, never stop walking — just keep moving."

Williams said with date rape, it may help to tell the person that you are being raped and you do not want to continue.

"If a person says no and you continue, that's rape," he said. "When a person says no that means stop."

Register preschoolers June 4 at Patch

Patch Preschool

The Fort Benning Early Childhood Development Center (Patch Preschool) will conduct open registration June 4 beginning at 7:30 a.m. for 3- and 4-year-olds for the 1993 to 1994 school year.

Registration will take place in the auditorium of Patch Elementary School. Children must be 3 or 4 by Sept. 1 to be eligible to attend.

Tuition is based on total family income. Documents needed to register are: a current child-care card (issued at Central Registration, Building 11302, Custer Road), an up-to-date shot record, birth certificate, Child Development Service health assessment form and a copy of the family's 1040 or 1040A tax return to verify income.

Families currently registered at Central Registration should bring copies of the paperwork on file there to avoid duplication. A supply fee not to exceed $18 must be paid to ensure placement for September.

POST BRIEFS

Air conditioning is on

Air conditioning on post began May 10, according to officials from the Building and Grounds Division of the Directorate of Public Works.

Air conditioning will be provided for offices spaces during duty hours and continuously in the family housing and barrack spaces unless electricity is curtailed during the summer for the post, officials said. To report a facility that does not have air conditioning, call 545-2135.

1st Bn., 11th Inf. plans organizational day

The 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment will have an organizational day June 11 from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Steward-Watson Field.

All soldiers assigned or attached to the battalion are invited to attend.

For more information, call Capt. John Prellwitz at 545-1962.

11th Infantry Regt. to get new commander

The 11th Infantry Regiment will conduct a change of command ceremony July 9 on York Field in front of Infantry Hall, Building 4, at 9 a.m. Col. Walter D. Wojdakowski will assume command from Col. Lawrence K. White Jr. In the event of inclement weather, the ceremony will be conducted in Marshall Auditorium in Infantry Hall.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland and range areas will be Monday through May 28. If weather permits, the following compartments may be affected: D-5, D-9, D-14, F-1, G-2, G-7, H-2, I-1, I-5, K-3, K-16, L-2, L-6, P-1, P-2, P-3, Q-3, U-3, U-4, V-1, W-1, W-2, W-5, Y-1, Z-1, Z-2, BB-1, BB-3, BB-4 and CC-2.

People using these areas for recreation must vacate the areas before 9:30 a.m. daily. Training units using compartments adjacent to these areas may experience drift smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while traveling in these areas because of the potential for reduced visibility.

Thrift savings plan begins open season

The Thrift Savings Plan open season begins Saturday and runs through July 31. Updates and forms have been issued to administrative offices for eligible employees. All elections must be received in the Directorate of Civilian Personnel by July 31.

CHAMPUS revamps 'cost-share' policy

Martin Army Community Hospital

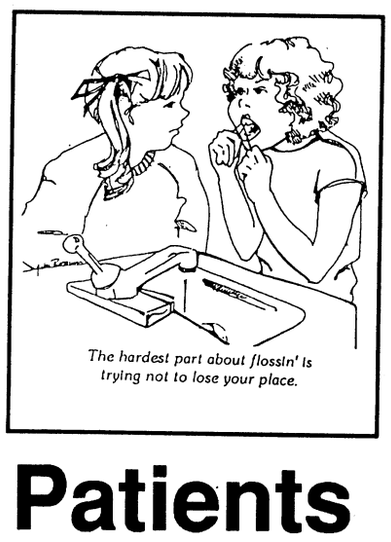
Military beneficiaries eligible for the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services are advised that the program changed the way it cost-shares civilian health care when a person also has coverage by a health maintenance organization.

Previously, the program shared the cost of only the portion of a charge that the health maintenance organization didn't cover.

However, there have been an increasing number of beneficiaries who find their health maintenance organization plans have payment limits or user fees that require the patient to assume a portion of the bill. In many cases, regulations restrict the government from sharing these costs with the patient.

The result has been that some military families have been required to pay substantial amounts for their civilian medical care.

So, CHAMPUS has changed its policy, and now considers health maintenance organizations to be the same as any other primary health insurance coverage.



This applies to those services received from the health maintenance organization as long as the health care provider meets certification standards and the type of care received would normally be covered. This doesn't include the care a patient receives from outside the health maintenance organization that could have been provided by the health maintenance organization.

Contractors will reprocess or adjust claims involving health maintenance organization coverage that were submitted before March 3 and processed under the old policy, when asked to do so.

If you have any questions, call the hospital's health benefit adviser at 544-3461 or come to the CHAMPUS Office, Building 9204 (next to the hospital), room 107.

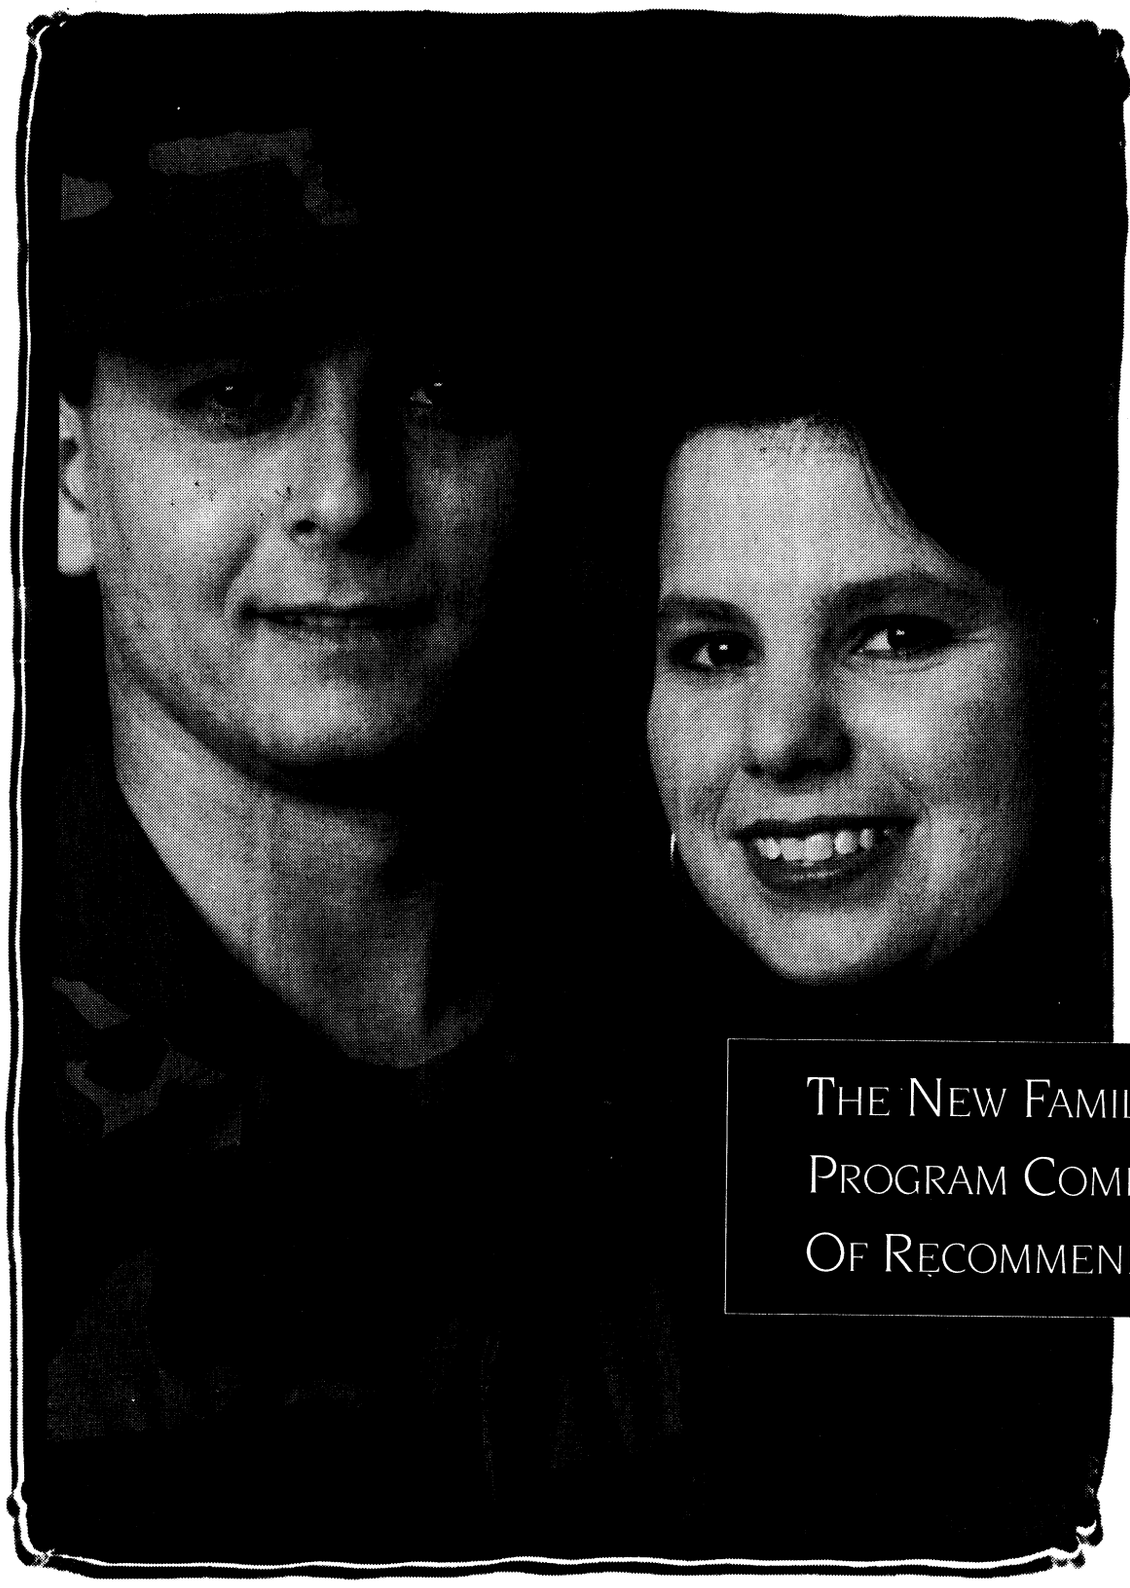
Patients too lazy to brush

U.S. Army Dental Activity



Don't feel like brushing? You're not alone.

Two-thirds of the participants in a Finnish study said that laziness was one reason they avoid regular check-ups and brushing, reports the Academy of General Dentistry.

"Laziness is a powerful influence in avoiding the toothbrush and the dentist," says Dr. Kevin Seidler, spokesman for the Academy of General Dentistry. "Every day, I see patients who need teeth extracted or periodontal surgery because of laziness with brushing or flossing. Some patients only see me when they're in pain, while regular check-ups would have helped prevent problems."

Researchers at the University of Oulu in Finland questioned 390 patients, ranging in age from 25 to 45 on what prevents them from brushing their teeth daily and visiting a dentist annually. They found that 66 percent cited laziness as a factor.

The study also reported a difference between the sexes: women were more inclined than men to brush their teeth daily; more women than men avoided the dentist because of a previous unpleasant dental visit; and more men avoided the dentist because they thought dental disease wasn't serious.

ARMY FAMILY ACTION PLAN ISSUES

Garrison Commander's Office

More than 100 issues and questions were presented for action, comment or status to the garrison and installation staff at the Fort Benning Family Action Symposium recently.

The issues were broken down into functional areas and each directorate, activity or area was asked to respond.

The following are the questions posed to the Directorate of Community Activities and the answers provided.

Q: It is too easy for unauthorized individuals to get into the Post Exchange. Shouldn't sponsors have to get DCA approval prior to arrival at the PX?

A: The current policy is within the control of, and has been approved by, the commanding general.

A memorandum dated March 2, 1992, on the subject of admittance to the PX states that for other than special occasions such as graduations, a letter of authorization for admittance into the PX must be obtained from DCA.

Q: Speakers are not loud enough in post theaters.

A: A new sound monitor system and a new compact disc player have been installed at the Main Post Theater. The Sand Hill Theater also has new sound equipment.

Q: How are reservations at the Destin Recreation area broken down and who gets top priority?

A: The policy and procedures for reservations at the Destin Recreation Area are outlined in U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 215-2, dated March 16 and Change 1, dated April 12.

Fort Benning active duty personnel may make reservations six months in advance of their reserved date. All others may begin making reservations four months in advance.

Additionally, half of the cabin units and one-third of the motel units are set aside for soldier reservations and do not go to open booking until two weeks prior to the occupancy date.

Priority at Destin clearly favors Fort Benning soldiers.

Reservations may be made by calling (800) 642-0466, or locally through the Information, Ticketing and Registration Office at 545-4155.

Q: Can used but serviceable items be donated to the loan locker?

A: In accordance with Army Regulation 608-1, March 28, 1988, Army Community Service Program, Chapter 6-3, k-2, the lending closet will be stocked with standardized items that have been purchased new and should not be stocked with donations or second-hand goods.

A: The Goodwill trailer is located on Gillespie Street behind the car wash for donation of used items.

Q: Where on post can donations of food and clothing be taken?

A: Nonperishable food items may be delivered to the Army Community Service Food Locker in Building 2642, Soldiers' Plaza.

Clothing for children and adult females may be delivered to the Family Advocacy Program Manager in Building 2643, Soldiers' Plaza, for donation to the battered wives shelters of Columbus and Phenix City.

Both are open 8 a.m. to 5p.m. Monday through Friday.

Q: How are donations to the Combined Federal Campaign divided among Fort Benning organizations?

A: Contributors to the CFC may designate to which organization they want their contributions to go. The CFC distributes undesignated donations among organizations.

Q: Can the Family Unit Network Center be made more practical for unit family support group members by providing services such as a baby-sitting room, a kitchen and a high-speed copier?

A: Currently there are no plans for funding to provide those services. Family Unit Network groups are unit-command-sponsored and command-supported organizations designed to enhance the military mission.

The unit is the primary source of support for unit facilities, equipment, supplies and telephones needed to accomplish its assigned duties.

The FUN center serves as an additional resource dedicated to the needs of the Army family.

There are kitchen and nursery facilities available at the Infantry Center Chapel for use by groups on a reservation basis.

Q: What is the distribution of the Fort Benning Directory and FUN Center Handbook?

A: The FUN Center Handbook is distributed at monthly spouse orientations, monthly FUN group training sessions and workshops, unit briefings, unit FUN group meetings, predeployment briefings, in unit welcome packets and as requested by commanders and FUN group leaders.

The Fort Benning Directory is handled by the Public Affairs Office. The directory is distributed to units, the Welcome Center, The Information Center (exit 8), Columbus Convention and Visitor's Bureau, the housing office and ACS.

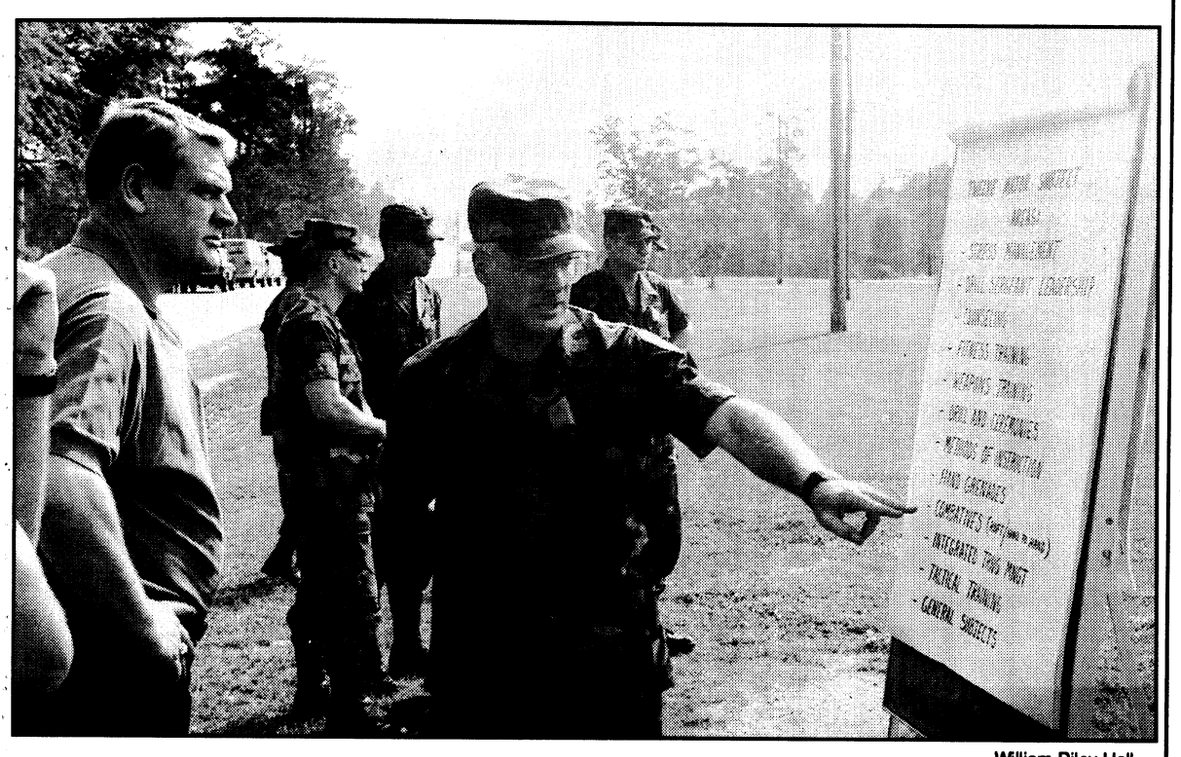
PET OF THE WEEK

This affectionate beagle is looking for a home. He is approximately 2 years old.



For more information, contact the Veterinary Services Office in Building 265 at 545-1127. Hours of operation are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:30 am. and 12:45 to 3 p.m. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

If you have lost a pet, check the stray impoundment facility in Building 283.

Stray pets are given three working days to be claimed from the time they are picked up by animal control personnel.

If the pets are not claimed, they become government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies tags are the only way Veterinary Services can contact the owner of a lost pet. Pet owners are required to register their pets and update their records when changes occur.

MACH nurses chosen to lead

By Mary Hess
Martin Army Community Hospital

Six nurses from Martin Army Community Hospital were elected as officers to the Georgia Nurses Association, District 3, April 12. The newly elected officers assumed their positions at the association's annual wine and cheese social.

The officers from the hospital include: Capt. Mary Hess, president; Maj. Judith Rozelle, treasurer; Lt. Col. Cheri Kilian-Hoffer, nominating committee and delegate; Mary Phelps, nominating committee; and Andrea Fuller, delegate.

Nurses at Martin Army Community Hospital have been very active in the association for years and often hold a number of leadership positions in the local district, officials said.

Members of the association distinguish themselves as leaders in their field and work to promote nursing in general, officials said. The current goal of District 3 is to form a coalition of other professional nursing societies so that all of the local nursing organizations may share in the wealth of talent of their respective memberships. The accomplishment of that goal would increase the strength of each of the separate organizations, improve the ability to schedule training programs and enhance educational opportunities to each member.

The GNA was established in 1907 and is the state association to the American Nurses Association. On the national level, the association maintains a full-time staff in Washington to monitor and lobby for federal legislation related to nursing and health.

The organization also provides witnesses for congressional committees and hearings on health-related issues.

The GNA works similar to the ANA but at the state level and sponsors a number of educational seminars, workshops and conferences on a variety of nursing topics.

Testing services, economic assistance, and career counseling are but a few advantages offered to GNA members.

Post to honor nation's heroes

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning will honor our nation's war dead Memorial Day, May 31, during a 9 a.m. ceremony at the Main Post Cemetery.

The cemetery is located on Custer Road at Benning Boulevard.

Brig. Gen. John W. Hendrix, deputy commanding general of Fort Benning and assistant commandant of the U.S. Army Infantry School, will deliver the Memorial Day message.

Hendrix will also join Chaplain (Col.) Roy G. Plummer, post chaplain, in placing a wreath at the grave of the Unknown Soldier.

The public is invited to attend.

Soldiers from the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division will fire a 21-gun salute to our nation as part of the observance, and the Infantry Band will provide music for the occasion.

Memorial Day is a holiday for most military and civilian personnel at Fort Benning.

Students build 'mathematics' bridges

Fort Benning Schools

Fourth- and fifth-grade students in the gifted program at Dexter School are involved in a bridge-building project designed to make math more meaningful.

Students are required to apply arithmetic calculations and geometry to design, plan and build scale model bridges from toothpicks. They must stay within a specific budget.

Teams consist of a project director, architect, transportation chief, carpenter and accountant. Each team member has specific responsibilities as they work together to accomplish the strongest toothpick bridge.

The bridges will be evaluated Thursday from 1 to 1:30 p.m. They will be judged for design, quality of building plans and the strength of the bridge.

Students will assemble at 1:30 p.m. for the strength competition. Weights will be added to each bridge until it breaks.

The bridge withstanding the most weight will be declared the winner.

There will be one winner from the fourth grade and one from the fifth grade.

Soldiers stay away

By William Riley Hall

The Armed Forces Disciplinary Control Board has released the names of off-post establishments that are off limits to military personnel.

The personnel affected include all military within the Fort Benning, Warner Robins Air Logistics Base and the U.S. Naval Reserve Center in Columbus.

Restricted areas are as follows:

Phenix City, Fort Mitchell, Ala. — Richardson Lounge, 102 Seale Road.

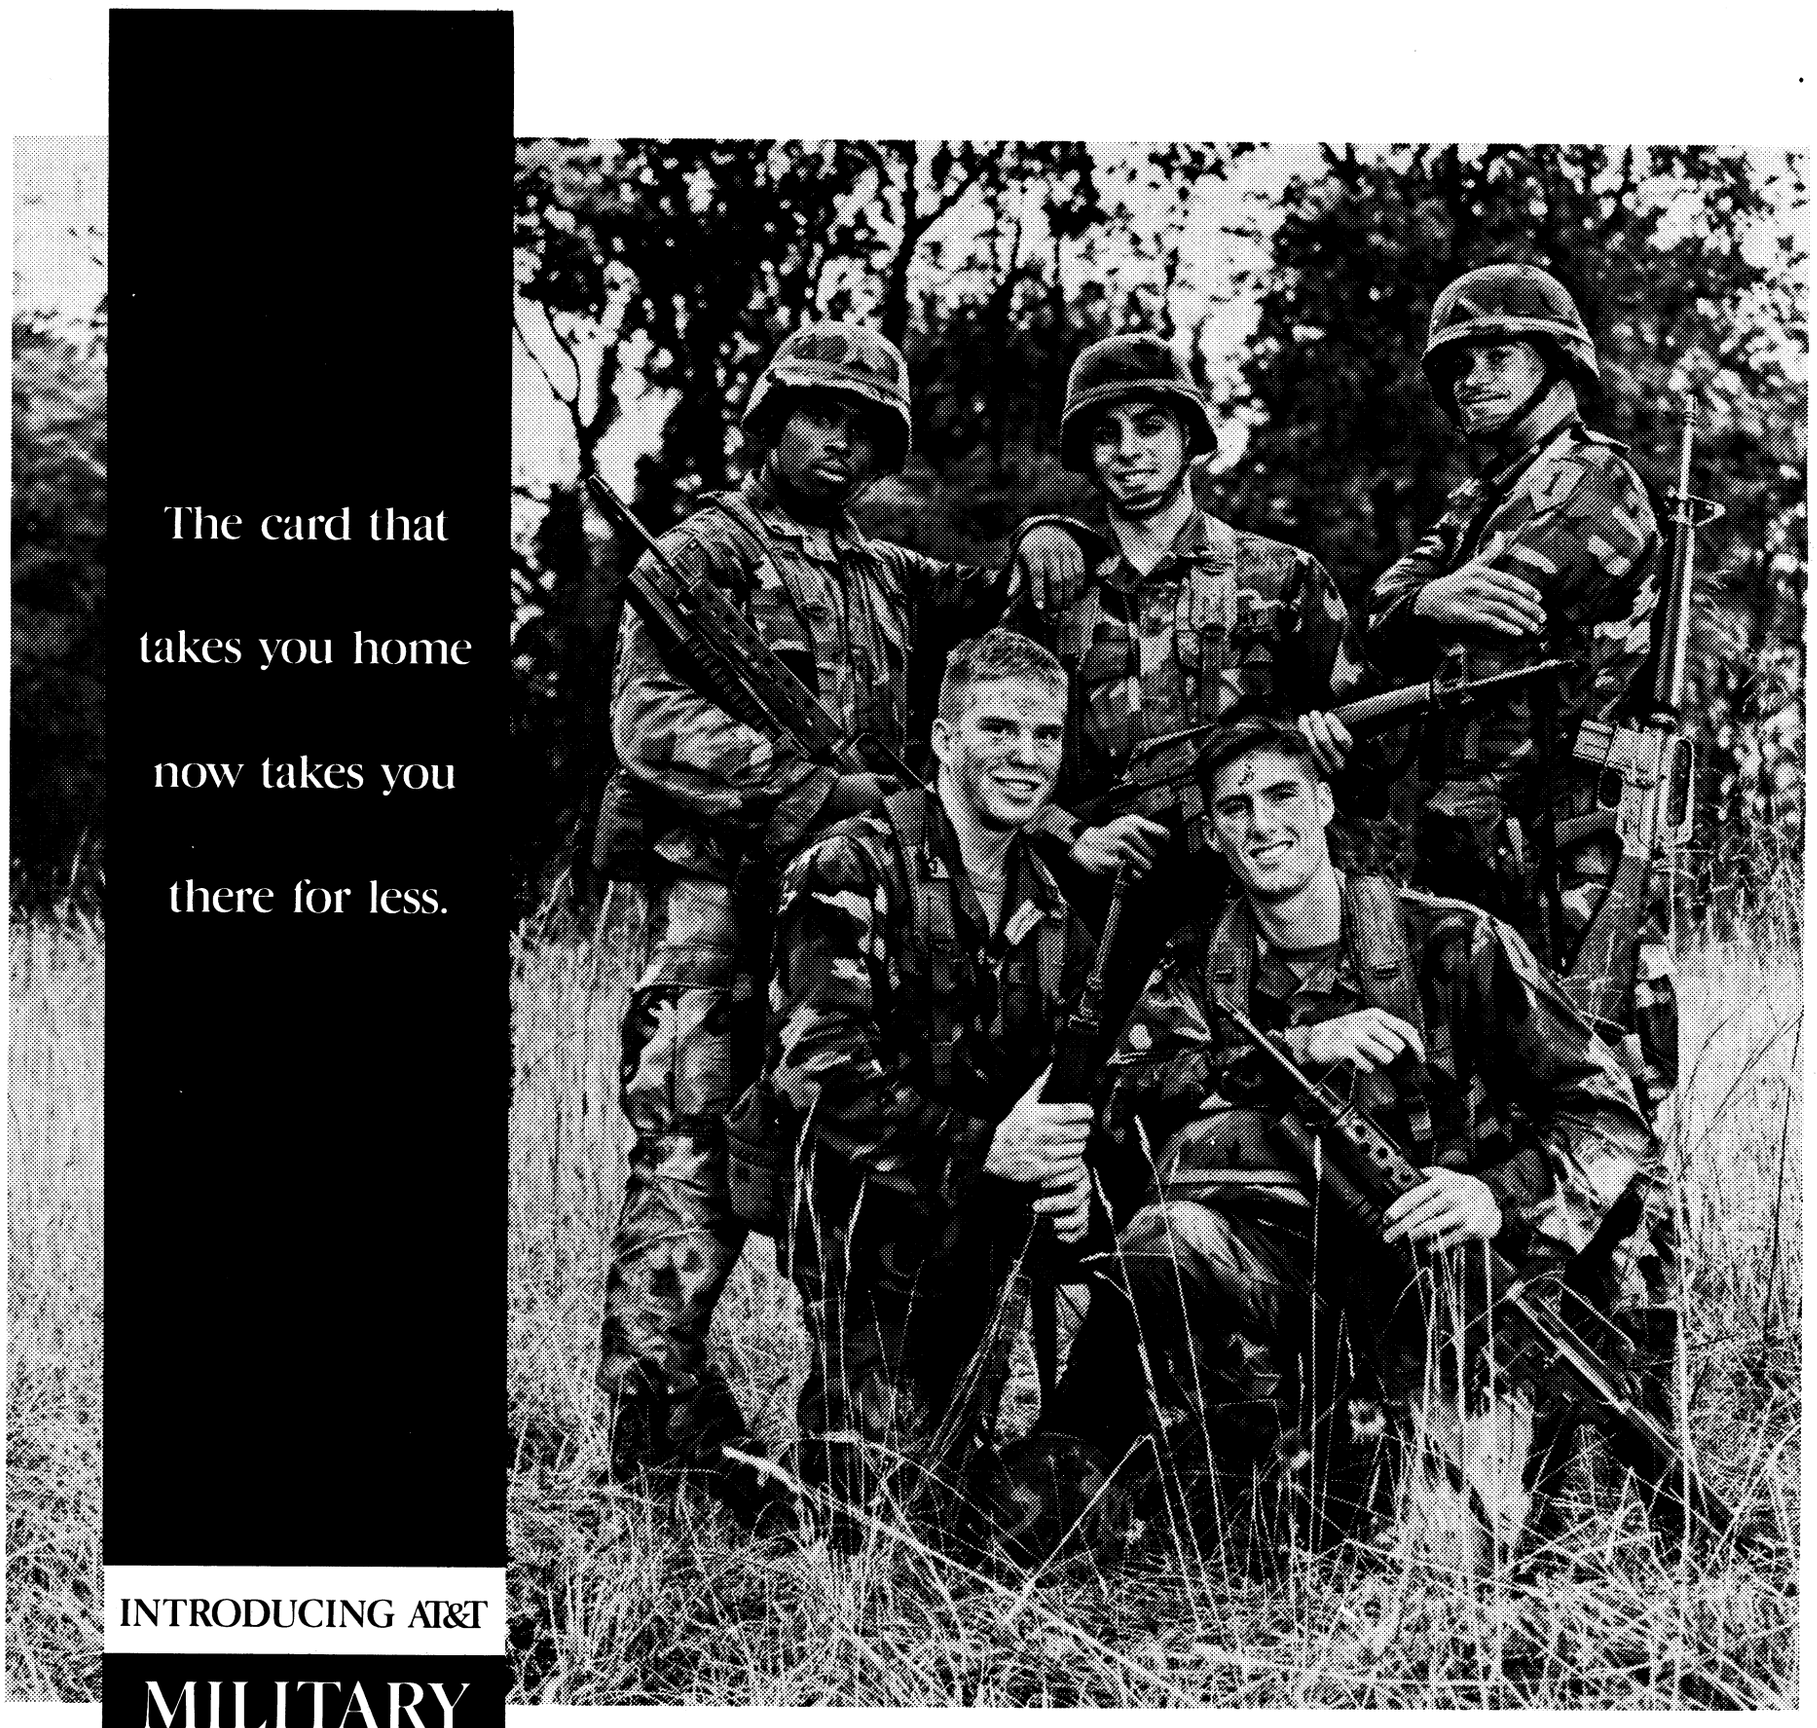
Clinchfield, Ga. — Pen Dixie Pit, located 2.3 miles south of Bonaire, Ga., on Old Perry Rd., approximately 100 yards north of the Piney Grove Church.

Danville, Ga. — Stuckey's Lake, Stuckey's Road, Route No. 1.

VA Q & A

Department of Veterans Affairs

Q: What is the current interest rate on VA-guaranteed home loans?



A: With the signing of new legislation Oct. 28, the Department of Veterans Affairs will not be setting the interest rate on VA loans.

The Veterans Home Loan Program Amendments of 1992 authorized VA to permit veterans to negotiate interest rates on VA-guaranteed home loans with lenders.

Veterans also can negotiate the number of points the lender charges for making the loan. The program will be in effect through Dec. 31, 1995.

This new law also authorized a three-year program for VA-guaranteed adjustable rate mortgages, which will be similar to FHA adjustable rate mortgages, with the interest rate index corresponding to the specified national interest rate index.

The rate may be adjusted annually (limited to 1 percent), with adjustments to the loan rate limited to a 5 percent increase for the life of the loan. Adjustable rate mortgages may be used to refinance existing loans.

MILITARY APPRECIATION WEEK
ARMED FORCES DAY

Soldiers get sporting chance

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

After six days of competition, Military Appreciation Week concluded with the "Burn the General Run" Saturday morning in front of York Field.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, commanding general, led the pack initially, then was engulfed by the more than 400 runners who turned out for the run.

Raymond Garcia won the race with a time of 15:30 and Margaret Connelly was the first female to cross the finish line at 22:52.

White, running with Brig. Gen. John Hendrix, deputy post commander, and Post Command Sgt. Maj. William H. Acebes, crossed the tape with a time of 24:01.

A bowling tournament at the Main Post and Mall bowling centers began the schedule of events that would run all week and culminate with the Armed Forces Day picnic at York Field.

The week started off with an eight-mile relay race from Main Post to Harmony Church May 10.

That afternoon at Doughboy Stadium, the Fit to Win competition began with the push-up contest.

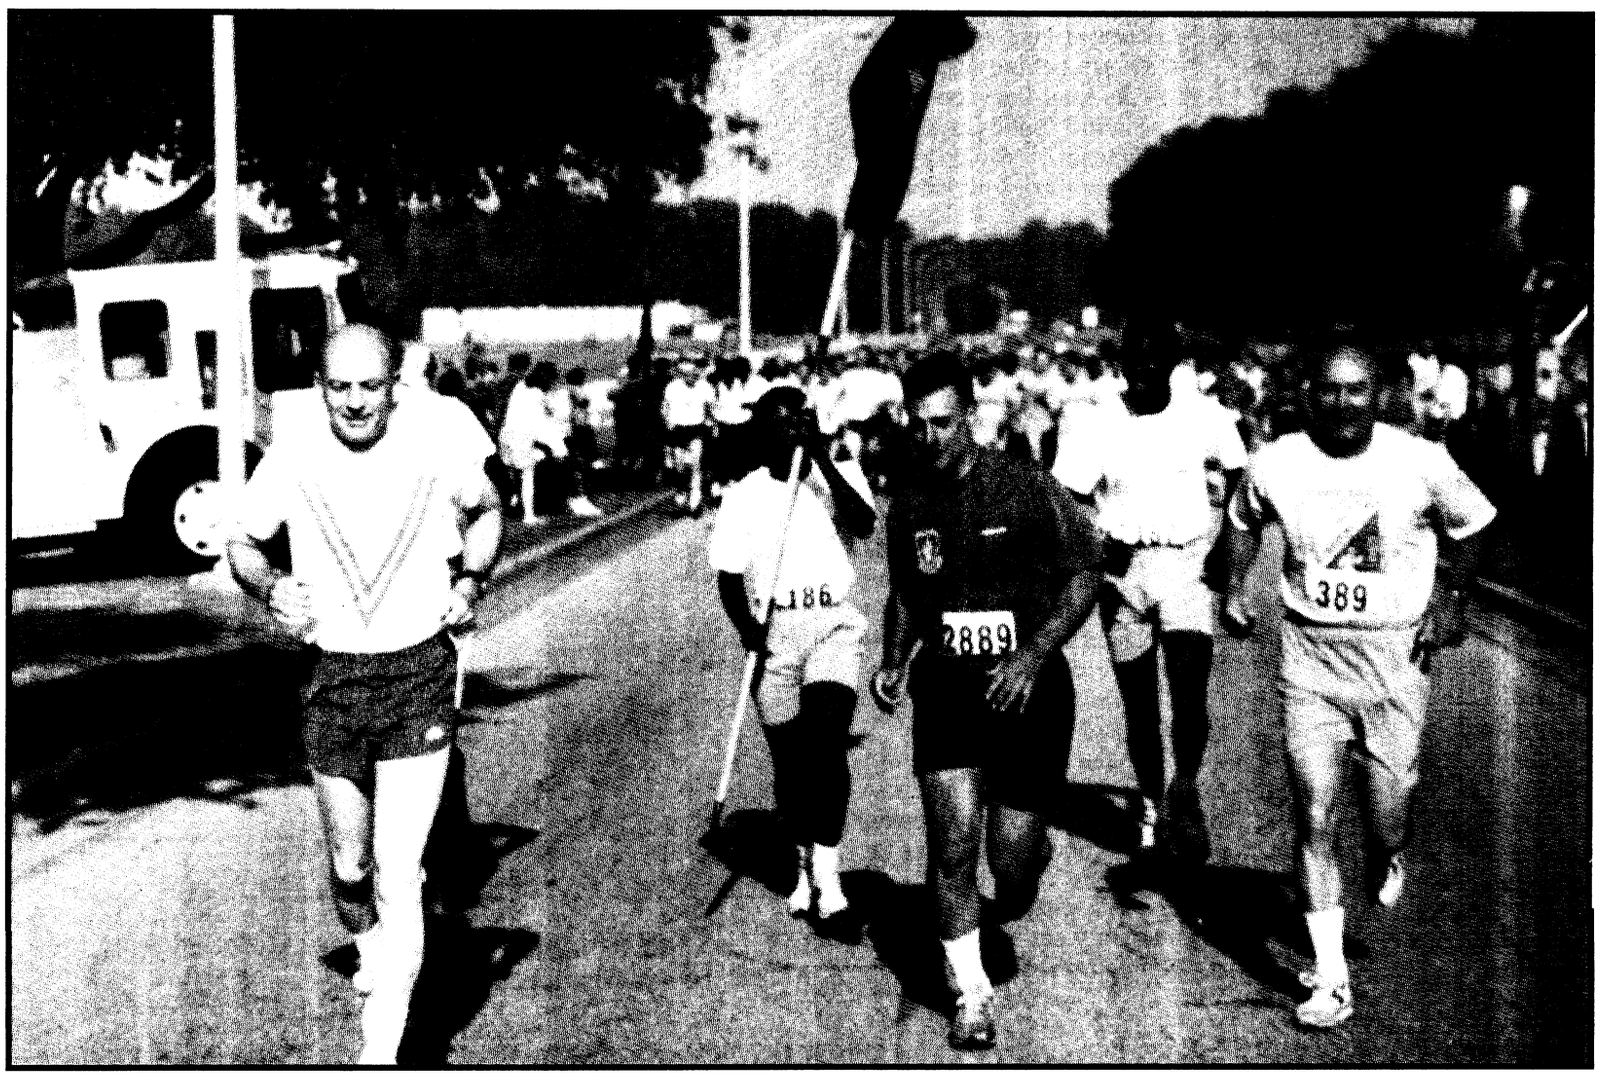
The 100-meter dash and a volleyball tournament were the highlights for May 11.

On May 12, the Columbus RedStixx and the Ranger Training Brigade played host for Military Appreciation Night at Golden Park.

Fans were treated to a softball game before the start of the regular game and demonstrations by the Ranger Training Brigade.

The Fort Benning sergeants major softball team went up against local celebrities from Columbus and were soundly beaten 19-3, then the Redstixx took on the Capitol City Bombers of Columbia, S.C., winning in the bottom of the ninth 4-3 on an RBI single by Rafael Mercado.

On May 13, golf, running and swimming were the events of the day.



May 14 dawned clear and bright for fisherman who hit the Chattahoochee River from Uchee Creek for a fishing tournament sponsored by the 29th Infantry Regiment.

A tug of war was the field event at Doughboy Stadium and another swim meet rounded out the day at Briant Wells Field House.

On Saturday, the week's events concluded with the commanding general's run and then a picnic in honor of Armed Forces Day.

Scooters 'serves up' volleyball tourney

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Soldiers from Fort Benning got to enjoy a little fun in the sun May 11 in a beach volleyball tournament hosted by Scooters as part of Military Appreciation Week.

More than 39 teams made up of soldiers from different units participated.

"We had only expected nine teams — one from each of the Association of the United States Army sub-chapters," said Sgt. Maj. Ramon P. Martinez from the School of the Americas, the sub-chapter that sponsored the event.

"But since the whole point of the tournament was to have fun, we made last-minute adjustments so everyone could play," he said.

Four-person teams competed in two rounds of five-point elimination games and a third round of 10-point games to narrow the field.

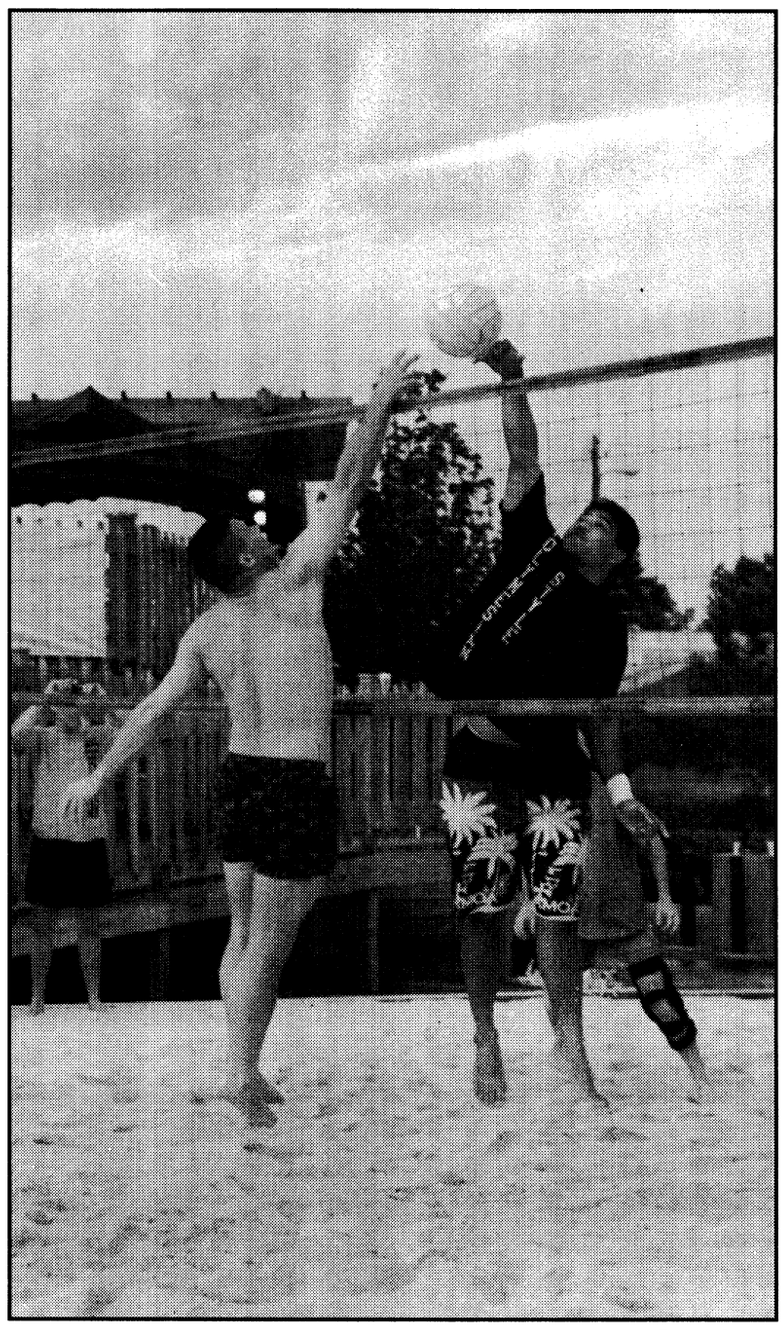
By the semi-finals, only two teams from the 36th Engineer Group, two from the 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, and one from the U.S. Army Medical Department Activity were left to battle for a shot at the championship.

Team one from the 36th Engineers took an early lead over team six from the 2nd of the 11th in the championship game, defeating them 15 to 3.

The team, made up of Capt. Lee Snodgrass, Staff Sgt. Homer H. Blake, Staff Sgt. Rafael A. Rivera, and Spc. Leo Filipo Jr., said the game was the sixth they played, but they never let up.

"We were behind MEDDAC 10-2 in the semi-finals and came back to win," Snodgrass said. "That team effort and determination carried through the last game."

The winning point was made by Filipo with an unreturnable jump serve.



"This is the best ETS (expiration term of service) present I ever got," said Filipo. "Today was my last day in the Army."

But it was not only the winners who enjoyed the tournament.

"It's good just to get off post and interact with the real world," said Pfc. Robert F. Cain Jr. whose team from Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 36th Engineer Group, "put up a hard fight, but lost in the third round of eliminations."

Even 2nd Lt. Rick Meredith from the 2nd Bn., 11th Inf. Regt., whose team lost the championship to place second overall, was not too unhappy.

"It was a good day all around, just getting out to enjoy the sunshine and have fun," he said.

Look for rocks, find bass

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

"If you don't know where to begin looking for bass on a new lake this spring, fish the hard stuff."

That is the advice of guide and tournament competitor Randy Dearman, who says rocks, boulders and gravel are prime places to find bass year-round on any lake.

"In most cases, submerged rocks have algae growing on them and that attracts baitfish," explains the Johnson Outboards Pro Staff angler, "and where there are baitfish, there are bass."

Bass use rocks in the spring as spawning sites, and in the winter shallow rocks seem to hold heat and draw bass up from deeper water, adds Dearman.

"The best part about fishing rocks is that they are present on nearly every lake, too," he says. "Along dams and bridges there are rock walls we call riprap, and on highland lakes there are usually shorelines and cliffs with boulders and big chunks of rocks.

"If you look hard enough, you can generally find some gravel banks, too. All of these are excellent places to find bass."

One of the most overlooked places to find spring bass, says the Johnson pro, is along the edges of riprap where it joins dirt or gravel, and throughout the spring and fall night fishing can be good anywhere along riprap. In the summer, bass may be along the edge of riprap where it drops into a deeper channel.

"Riprap generally offers several things bass prefer," says Dearman. "Around bridges and dams, riprap is generally very close to deep water; and, anytime you have a shallow and deep water combination close together, you have a potential hotspot for bass.

"Riprap also offers points, although they may not be as dramatic as natural points on a lake, and these also attract bass. In addition to baitfish feeding on algae, riprap and rocks also attract crayfish, which are another favorite bass food."

Two of Dearman's favorite lures for fishing rocks are deep-diving crankbaits and big spinnerbaits.

"With a crankbait, you can cast parallel to the rocks and keep your lure in basically the same depth," he explains. "A deep-diving lure will bounce and ricochet off the rocks and get a lot of reflex strikes."

With a spinnerbait, Dearman prefers to slow-roll the lure down the rocks from shallow water to deep, again letting it hit the rocks and bounce off them. This is an excellent tactic for big bass where the rocks may fall into a nearby channel.

"The same lures and techniques work along boulder banks and even gravel bottoms," Dearman concludes. "You'll often find bass around rocks when you can't locate them anywhere else."

Precautions can keep fishing fun

U.S. Army Safety Center

FORT RUCKER, Ala. — Most potential fishing hazards are related to a lack of swimming skills and improper use of boats, especially motorboats. Drowning, serious sunburn and injuries received from fish hooks and knives are common hazards of fishing.

Fishing in boats

Most fishing-boat accidents result from carelessness, slippery boat bottoms, overloading or sudden storms. Fishermen using boats should have sufficient skills to swim fully clothed. Also, fishing should not be done from a canoe unless it is equipped with an outrigger or otherwise stabilized.

To make boat-fishing fun and accident free, observe the following safety rules:

- Be careful while landing fish and casting an anchor because movements could cause you to fall overboard or capsize the boat.
- Do not lean over the sides of the boat.
- Stand in the boat as little as possible.
- Never use the motor as a seat.
- If the boat capsizes, stay with it rather than swimming to shore.
- Follow state regulations for using running lights at night.
- Follow boat manufacturer's load rating for number of passengers and weight limitations.
- Have on board a life preserver for each passenger. Weak and nonswimmers must use a preserver at all times while on the water.
- Watch for swimmers, skiers, surfers and scuba divers.
- Observe minimum speeds in congested areas to ensure maximum control.
- Be familiar with the red and white flag that indicates the presence of scuba divers.
- Avoid smoking while refilling fuel tanks and cleaning up spills.

Parks to fry up feast of fishing activities

Georgia State Parks

ATLANTA — Fishing for something to do this summer? Look no further. The Georgia State Parks and Historic Sites are frying up a feast of fishing activities for fishermen of all ages.

One can hone fish-tale skills at one of the many events the Georgia State Parks have designed to delight children and their families. Even nonfishers are invited to test their skills and gain valuable tips. Gallop on into a fishing rodeo, reel in a fishing-related prize in an all-ages tournament or check out a seminar to learn all about trout.

Each event provides both amusement and enlightenment in a unique natural setting. So grab those poles and let Georgia's state parks reel you in to their summer fishing events.

Junior-senior catfish rodeo
May 29, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.
Victoria Bryant State Park, Royston

This is a free fishing rodeo for juniors up to 15 years and seniors 65 or older. Rods, reels and tackle boxes will be awarded. Seniors should have a state honorary fishing license for the event. Contact Victoria Bryant at (706) 245-6270.

Fishing tourney and boat show
June 5, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.
Red Top Mountain State Park, Cartersville

Catch the most colossal catfish or an abundance of bass and win prizes in this fishing tournament and boat and motor display on Lake Allatoona. Admission is free. Call Red Top at (404) 975-0055 for more information.

Fishing rodeo for children
June 5, 9 a.m. to noon
James H. Floyd State Park, Summerville

Children up to age 14 are invited to challenge each other for prizes. There is no charge. Call James H. Floyd State Park at (706) 857-5211 for more information.

Fish day for children
June 12, 8 a.m. to 10 p.m.
Watson Hill Bridge State Park, Comer

Celebrate the opening day of catfish season at the park's stocked pond. Admission is free.

Contact Watson Mill at (706) 783-5349 for further information.

The Georgia State Parks are operated by the Georgia Department of Natural Resources. Contact the public information office at (404) 656-3530 for a complete guide to 1993 special events.

A $2 park pass fee is required for entrance into the state parks; annual passes maybe purchased for $25 at the sites.

PM race proceeds to benefit students

Darton College

The Annual Darton Alumni PM Run will be May 29, at Darton College, 2400 Gillionville Road, Albany, Ga.

Proceeds from this race are used for scholarships. Three $500 scholarships were awarded to area high school students from proceeds of the 1992 race. Three state records and three course records were broken at this race in 1992.

The one-mile will begin at 7 p.m. and the 5K at 8 p.m.

Those interested can preregister by mail or register on the day of race from 6:30 to 7:45 p.m.

Each person registered will receive a multi-colored, 10th anniversary T-shirt, guaranteed to those who pre-register but subject to availability on race day.

The one-mile Fun Run remains on the college campus. The 5K begins and ends on campus, but winds through a slightly rolling, residential area (100 percent paved).

To preregister, mail entry form and check made payable to Darton College Alumni Association to: Darton College Alumni Association, Attention: Beverly Marchant, 2400 Gillionville Road, Albany, Ga. 31707-3098.

For more information call Marchant or Martha Snow at (912) 888-8728 or (912) 888-8756 days, and (912) 888-0496 evenings.

SPORTS SHORTS

Street hockey — For anyone interested in playing hockey on roller blades, games will be played on weekends in Columbus whether it is raining or sunny. For more information, call 682-1973.

Youth program — The Fort Benning Officers' Club will sponsor a summer activities program for children and youths, beginning June 7.

Activities will include swimming lessons for all ages and ability levels, tennis lessons for ages 8 and above, martial arts and "youth aerobics," including step, aerobic and body-shaping exercises.

Details are available at the Officers' Club Fitness Center or by calling 545-4162 or 687-0871.

Bodybuilding — The 10th annual Mr. and Ms. Fort Benning bodybuilding contest will be conducted at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center June 5. Pre-judging will begin at noon and the finals at 7 p.m. Sign up at Doughboy Stadium or Infantry Hall Fitness Center or by calling Carol Gearhart at 545-1435.

Entry deadline is May 28.

All-Army Track and Field Camp — The 1993 All-Army Track and Field Trial Camp will be hosted by Fort Benning through June 7.

Approximately 45 men and 25 women will be identified to attend the camp. The camp will give the athletes the opportunity to train and compete at the national level with the possibility of becoming members of the 1996 Olympic Team.

For information, contact Jim Brown at the Physical Activities Branch at 545-4300 or 545-5777.

Fitness classes available — The Fort Benning Officers' Club offers aerobic and bench classes. Classes are open to all ranks of military members and civilians.

The cost is $16.50 for 12 visits or $3 drop-in fee per visit. The first class is free.

Actor brings Bible's dramas to life

By Jacqueline Feagin
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Internationally acclaimed actor Frank Roughton Harvey will be at the Infantry Training Brigade May 29 and 30.

Harvey, a pioneer in the field of biblical drama, has spent the past 29 years bringing the Bible to life in his one-man drama.

His first drama, "The Sermon on the Mount," has been performed more than 6,000 times. He designed and built the Living Word Amphitheater on his farm in Cambridge, Ohio, in 1975. Today the play is still shown in Ohio every July and August, fulfilling his dream of an outdoor play.

He will perform "The Roman Centurion" at the Regimental Chapel May 29 at 7 p.m., "The Sermon on the Mount" May 30 at 8:30 a.m. at Theater No. 3 on Sand Hill at 9:45 a.m. at Regimental Chapel and at The Infantry Center Chapel at 11 a.m.

"The Unknown Soldier" will be performed at Theater No. 3 at 3 p.m. May 30.

The public is invited to all performances at no charge. Large groups must call to make reservations.

For more information, contact Chaplain (Capt.) George Holston at 544-8021.

Stay happy, stay healthy — for life

By Ivery De La Cruz
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Prescription for life: feeling good through happiness.

Self-help books are everywhere — bookstores, libraries, grocery stores. These books speak to our need to find happiness.

Much of our self-esteem arises from our ability to be happy with ourselves and what is going on in our lives. Life can be so full of tension, stress, rushing, rudeness, anger, sadness, and worry that happiness slips through the cracks.

Some of us may have the pessimistic view of the person who said, "I always feel bad when I feel good because I know that I'll feel bad after a while." Have we accepted this view as a way of life? If we have, then it is not difficult to understand why joy and happiness slips away from us.

We may become like the poor nervous wreck who went to a famous doctor. The doctor said, "You need to laugh. Go down and hear Grimaldi, the famous clown. Everyone is holding their sides laughing at him." But the visitor straightened himself and said, "I am Grimaldi." Maybe some of us are like Grimaldi, taking care of everything and everyone else while we are miserable inside.

Happiness and physical health are inseparable. The old saying

"Never eat when mad or sad, only when glad" has scientific basis. Mental conditions depress or stimulate the functions of various organs of the body.

Anger for example, causes more sugar and adrenaline to pour into the blood stream, the heart pumps faster, the blood pressure rises, the blood flow quickens and the muscles tense. The body shifts into high gear, generating energy needed for action.

Because we stay in this state of high tension, many of us are in the doctor's office more than we would like to be suffering from high blood pressure, heart problems, headaches, stomach problems, skin disorders, constipation, diarrhea and obesity.

Proverbs 17:22 tells us that, "A merry heart does good like a medicine, but by sorrow of the heart the spirit is broken." A change of the mental attitude will cure many of our physical ailments.

Happiness and emotional health also go hand in hand. Worry, guilt and anger are three of the big killers of emotional health. Anger robs us of happiness. Guilt makes us feel low and unworthy, and worry depletes our strength. When not handled properly these three emotions can cause us to withdraw, become depressed and even give up on life.

Handling these emotions can take some creativity. One man has his own special way of handling worry. He decided to do his worrying on one single day, Wednesday, and he has what he calls his Wednesday Worry Club.

When a worry occurs to him on any other day, he writes it down and puts it in a box. And, of course, when he opens the box on Wednesday, he finds that most of the things he was worried about have already been settled.

Happiness is a direct result of our spiritual life. When we are in tune with God, our source of eternal happiness, then we can be in harmony with ourselves and those around us.

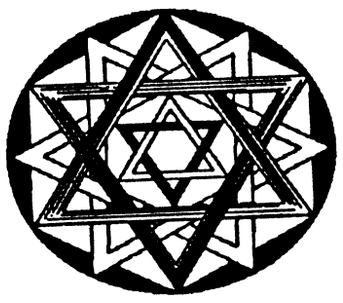
Celebration commemorates God's Ten Commandments

By Arthur S. Rutberg
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Shavuot, also known as Pentecost, commemorates the giving of the Torah (Ten Commandments) on Mount Sinai. Fifty days after the Exodus from Egypt, the children of Israel arrived at Mount Sinai to hear the words of the Lord.

Amid smoke, fire, thunder and lightning, God spoke the first words of the covenant with Israel. Initially limited to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob; the contract with God extended to the entire people of Israel.

In the moment of revelation, there was great fear among the people. Here was God, the Lord of the universe, instructing them with great drama and authority. They were frightened by the sounds and sights. They called on Moses to intervene.



The people said as one, "All that the Lord has commanded, we will do!" so, reassured by that collective pledge, Moses went up the mountain to learn the remainder of God's commandments.

The laws were detailed covering legal issues, social issues, morals, ethics and ritual observances. The problem was the people were not hearing the laws, only Moses heard. He would then have to come back down the mountain and begin to teach the people what God wanted of them.

Being unsure about Moses, fearful of God and unaware of the totality of God's commandments which they had pledged to uphold, the people grew restless.

Moses said he would be up on the mountain for 40 days. Yet 40 days had passed since he left and Moses was not there. They had not counted the day to climb up the mountain and a day for climbing down.

Out of desperation, the people approached Aaron, Moses' brother, to build "a god" for them. Aaron complied and said that the next day would be a celebration to God hoping that Moses would return by then.

Being only the 41st day, Moses was not back. The people erected the golden calf and engaged in idol worship.

This blatant violation of the second commandment was inexcusable. Had this violation been against one of the commandments that the people had not heard, it could have been forgiven. But not this one!

On Shavuot, we recall the giving of the Torah at Mount Sinai and the commandment not to boil the calf in its mother's milk.

Most Jews have understood this passage to mean not to cook or eat milk and meat together. Perhaps it was referring to the golden calf.

This commandment was given to Moses while he was up on Mount Sinai by himself just before the golden calf incident. It is also a traditional Jewish practice to eat only dairy foods during Shavuot.

The reasons for this practice are also unclear. Perhaps what we are commanded to do on Shavuot is distance ourselves as much as possible from the golden calf incident by not eating any calf meat (veal) or meat at all for that matter.

We celebrate the greatness of Torah, the milk of knowledge on which Judaism has been raised by avoiding the meat of idolatry.

In celebration of Shavuot on the evening of May 25, we study Torah, pray to God, enjoy dairy foods and reflect upon the commandments God has given us.

PRIMUS IS CHANGING

PRIMUS

On February 1, 1993, the Columbus PRIMUS Clinic became the PRIMUS Family Practice Clinic. As of this date, the clinic will be open to non-active duty military beneficiaries registered in the Army's Gateway To Care Program and enrolled to receive their primary health care at PRIMUS. As a Family Practice Clinic, PRIMUS will expand its services and offer its enrolled members:

- Comprehensive family practice medicine, including routine physicals, treatment of a wider range of acute and chronic conditions, and extensive laboratory and radiology testing.
- Guidance for all healthcare treatment, including diagnostic testing, speciality referrals, and follow-up care.
- Both scheduled appointments and walk-in visits.
- Telephone consultation with qualified healthcare personnel to determine whether and when to seek medical care.

To enroll as a member of the PRIMUS Family Practice, active duty family members and retirees and their families should attend one of the Army's Gateway To Care briefings or contact the MACH Health Care Finder at 544-1447/1591. Enrolled members can receive more information on our Family Practice services by calling the clinic at 561-7066.

TRADOC works to evolve systems, maintain edge

Battle labs demonstrate new focus

Tradoc News Service

"In the early '70s, from a combat developments standpoint, our mission was quite clear. It was to modernize the Army from the Vietnam era."

That is the recollection of Dr. Marvin Pastel, technology adviser to both the Training and Doctrine Command and to the Battle Labs Integration and Technology Directorate within the TRADOC's deputy chief of staff for combat developments organization.

Pastel arrived at TRADOC headquarters in August 1973, a month after it had been activated. He had worked at the Combat Developments Command, Fort Belvoir, Va., since 1971.

"It was a major command doing essentially what this staff element does," he said.

Twenty years later, DCSCD is still working to ensure the Army is fully modernized. The challenge now is to be ready for any developments in a post-Cold War world.

DCSCD helps meet three of TRADOC's "main points of effort," defined by Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr., TRADOC commander. They are to maintain the technological edge for American soldiers on future battlefields, foster organizational excellence and by doing that focus on the welfare of soldiers.

Pastel said that in the mid-'70s DCSCD was heavily involved in development of new weapons systems, including the M-l tank, the Bradley Fighting Vehicle and the surface to air missile defense system that became the Patriot.

"The Yom Kippur War had just occurred, which kind of gave us, as General Franks says now about the Gulf War, a glimpse of what the future might be in Europe with the tank forces and fighting when outnumbered, which the Israelis did.

"Many Israeli officers visited here in the mid-'70s and talked to us about their experiences," Pastel said.

He also remembers Gen. William E. DePuy Jr., TRADOC's first commander, for his leadership style.

"DePuy held very open, huge meetings attended by combat developers, trainers and Army Materiel Command representatives. There would be this great exchange of information," Pastel said. "To me it was an extremely educational experience."

He feels a significant TRADOC achievement was development of the attack helicopter, which began under DePuy and continued under Gen. Donn A. Starry, the second TRADOC commander.

He said tests at Fort Ord, Calif., showed that one helicopter could take out 15 tanks before being downed.

"I was pretty skeptical until I went out there for these exercises. The more I looked at it, the more I came to feel the helicopter would do a really good job for us on the battlefield."

He sees battle labs, one of TRADOC's newest initiatives, as a way to meld the Army's branches — armor, infantry, artillery, logistics, engineers — into a more coordinated combat team.

"Warfare is becoming very horizontal as far as functions are concerned," Pastel said. "I think battle lab is Gen. Franks' approach to breaking down the horizontal integration functions into what are called battle dynamics."

Pastel said that from the beginning DePuy emphasized a systems approach to weapons development.

> "Warfare is becoming very horizontal as far as functions are concerned."
> — Marvin Pastel
> TRADOC technology adviser

"Rather than looking at just a tank, combat developments would look at the organization, soldiers and training required to operate the tanks," he said.

Mason McClanahan, a DCSCD test and evaluations officer, said he has been involved with the total systems approach to operational test and evaluation since he arrived at TRADOC in 1975. "Even though we were concerned with that back then, a lot more emphasis has resulted in a total systems approach the combat developments during the time that I've been here," he said.

McClanahan helps to find out if materiel, organizational and tactical concepts work under real conditions.

"Testing and evaluation is one of those fields that the way across combat developments," McClanahan said. He agrees with Pastel's opinion of Battl labs. "It looks at the battlefield and integrates those pieces that are normally stovepipe (branch) functions. Battle labs promote experimentation within future battlefield dynamics. We support battle labs with our concept evaluation programs."

When McClanahan came to work for TRADOC, the command did testing and evaluation of nonmajor systems — mines, countermines, trucks, logistical systems, watercraft and other systems. The Operational Test and Evaluation Agency conducted testing for major systems, such as tanks, artillery and aircraft.

Over the years, TRADOC gradually assumed responsibility for major systems operational testing, while OTEA performed systems evaluations.

In fiscal 1989, the 10 TRADOC test organizations and OTEA were combined into the U.S. Army Operational Test and Evaluation Command. OPTEC became responsible for all materiel systems testing and evaluation.

"TRADOC currently conducts testing and evaluation for its DTLOMS requirements in training and soldier products," McClanahan said.

DTLOMS stands for doctrine, training, leader development, organizational excellence, materiel modernization and emphasis on soldiers.

"Combat developments has the responsibility to define the requirements for any system. So we also define the requirements for the organization that will operate the equipment. We define the training needed to operate the equipment, plus the tactics, techniques, procedures and doctrine to effectively operate it," he said.

If these aspects are not appropriately developed, the system probably will not be successful during field operational test and evaluation, according to McClanahan.

"DCSCD's job is to come up with concepts, whether in tactics, organizations or equipment, that our troops can use to survive and win on the battlefield," he said.

Ranger forces storm enemy port, airfield

By Michael D. Frate
Joint Information Bureau

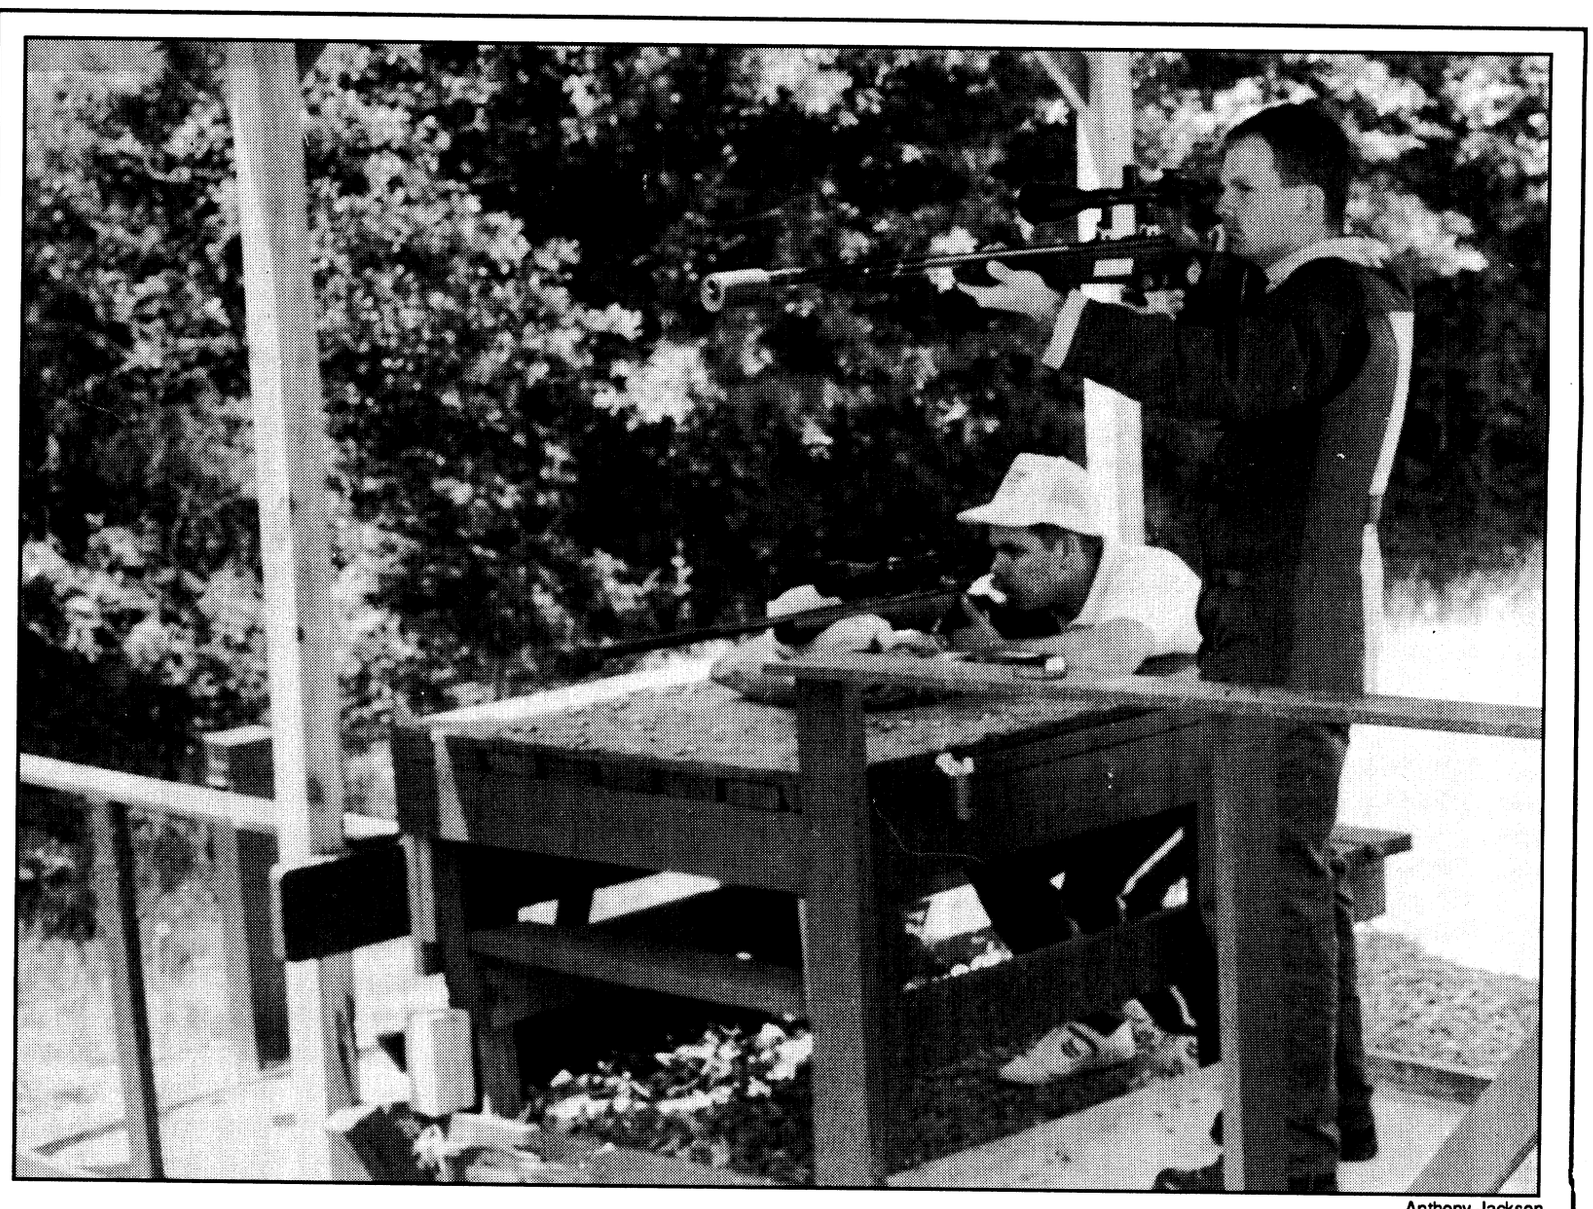
During early morning hours, with heavily-armed enemy forces hidden away in camouflaged bunkers, a lone C-130 gunship equipped with 105-howitzer and 40mm and 20mm cannon-fire capability flies high above an airstrip at Naval Station Roosevelt Roads, Puerto Rico. After covering the area both north and south of the airstrip, it suddenly turns back and disappears back into the clouds.

The enemy forces below seem relieved, hoping intelligence reports of an imminent attack are flawed. Their relief is short-lived, however, as the C-130 returns just minutes later. And this time six C-141 aircraft are riding its tail.

The stunned enemy forces watch as more than 350 Army rangers parachute to the ground. They are heavily armed, and well organized, and they take the airstrip and surrounding hangers in less than 20 minutes.

The first wave of troops is quickly reinforced and now totals 750 rangers. They are the initial troops on the ground in a simultaneous attack against three locations during Ocean Venture 93.

The rangers are from 2nd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, Fort Lewis Washington; Company A, 3rd Battalion, and the 75th Ranger Regiment from Fort Benning.



Soon after the assault begins, the 18th Airborne Corps Assault Command Post parachutes onto the airfield and begins to establish the command and control of all Army forces participating in the exercise.

The air fills with the noise of incoming helicopters as elements of the 101st Air Assault (Airborne) Division arrive to assist with air cover in the seizure of the enemy port.

One element of the rangers skirts the airfield and sniper fire echoes across the narrow tarmac. Their objective is the enemy's port facilities. They are met by a small but determined force and soon their objective is secured.

By seizing their enemy's airfield and port facilities, they make possible the entry of heavy Army and Air Force units and enough equipment to resupply their deployed forces throughout the crisis.

The enemy forces put up a determined defense, and in many cases die rather than surrender, but they are no match for the U.S. Army rangers in this first of many battles during Ocean Venture 93.

WORLD WAR II — A LOOK BACK

50 years ago this week

• In the Battle of the Atlantic, German U-boat forces, commanded by Adm. Karl Doenitz, ceased operations against Allied convoys to pursue less formidable targets in the Caribbean and the Azores. Doenitz directed the strategic change after Allied technological and tactical advances limited the effectiveness of the U-boat "wolfpacks" and produced a disproportionate number of German casualties. The move allowed the Germans to continue their campaign, though on a decidely smaller scale.

• In Yugoslavia, the Germans pressed Operation Schwarz, their fifth major offensive directed against Marshal Josip Broz Tito's partisan army, which numbered less than 20,000 members. The SS Division Prinz Eugen, the 1st Mountain Division, and the 4th Brandenburg Regiment spearheaded the 120,000-man Nazi effort.

• In Europe, the British-directed Battle of the Ruhr continued as the Royal Air Force Bomber Command launched its heaviest attack to date, dropping 2,000 tons of bombs on the German city of Dortmund in a two-day raid.

• In the Aleutians, U.S. forces slowly progressed against Japanese positions on Attu in a week of especially bitter fighting that resulted in the American capture of Clevesy Pass and Fish Hook Ridge.

• In the United States, severe flooding along the Mississippi River system left in excess of 150,000 people homeless.

NTC soldiers get force-on-force training

By Nicholas A. Minecci
22nd Mobile Public Affairs Detachment

FORT IRWIN, Calif. — There are no pop-up targets here. Instead, there are living, thinking, opposing force soldiers who are able to move and react as fast as their reflexes, just like an actual battlefield.

That's the difference between a force-on-force battle and a target range, and that's what soldiers from 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized) are facing here.

"A force-on-force is exactly what it sounds like," said Maj. Don Carnes, 3rd Brigade logistics officer. "There are two groups pitted against each other in battle and may the best man win," he said.

Unlike a live-fire range, where soldiers use live ammunition on pop-up targets, soldiers in a force-on-force battle use the multiple integrated laser engagement system. When a soldier or vehicle is killed, the multi-integrated laser engagement system emits a beep, letting them know they are dead.

"The MILES equipment gives you the actual kills ... without getting anybody hurt," said Staff Sgt. Robert Carter, a tank commander with 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment.

"Here, the soldiers get the reality of combat," said Maj. Ronald Robinson, forward support operations combat trainer. "There is an uncooperative enemy, not just a target sitting there.

"And an uncooperative enemy causes (the soldier) to think before acting. It adds that extra element of realism, and that's very important for training," he added.

Robinson also said the opposing force takes pride in making a rotation here difficult for a visiting unit.

"The OPFOR can't help but be good when they train out here every month, and they are also reaping the benefits of constant training in the environment of realism," he said.

"But don't get me wrong, every now and then the (rotational units) win one," he added.

According to Carnes, the realism of a force-on-force battle tests the abilities of every soldier involved.

"This gives the feeling of realism without the danger," Carnes said. "The soldiers are really firing their weapons, they are really maneuvering their vehicles," he said.

"(And) it tests our ability to execute a plan in battle," he said. Carnes also said unlike a command post exercise, a computer generated war game, where there is no sense of immediacy, a force-on-force exercise has all the problems encountered on an actual battlefield.

"For a planner, it's an excellent opportunity, because it involves everything we would normally do in a wartime situation," he said. He said the troops have to move the fuel, ammunition and food over difficult terrain.

"It forces us to think about what it really takes (to resupply the troops), simulation exercises don't do that," he said. "It's really the only way to test our ability short of a war," he added.

For the 3rd Brigade soldiers, the force-on-force engagements are taken seriously.

"This is no game," said Carter. "This is no MILES training (as far as we're concerned); we're really fighting a war," he said.

Eleven Officer Candidate School students branched Army aviation during ceremonies at Wigle Hall May 13.

The candidates were Terry Aiken, Harry Brooks, Joseph Dipasquale, Alvin Godwin, Archer Herschhorn, Lance Kincanon, Glenn Lapoint, Ronald Looney, Daniel Pinkava, Dana Smith and Todd Wolford.

Col. Charles M. Burke, deputy assistant commandant, U. S. Army Aviation Center, Fort Rucker, Ala., spoke to the candidates and also presented them with their first set of aviation brass.

Each candidate also received a letter of welcome from Maj. Gen. Dave Robinson, the commanding general of the Aviation Center.

The new second lieutenants will continue their Initial Entry Rotary Wing Course at Fort Rucker.

Also, 14 other candidates branched field artillery and air defense artillery during ceremonies at Wigle Hall May 6.

Micheal Angell, Joel Austin, Kirby Beard, Harold Crum, Charles Flender, David Gercken, Boris Hall, Anthony Healey, Bruce Nguyen, Humberto Ortiz, Stephen Parker and Frank Stanco branched field artillery, while Kevin Burkett and Edward Smith branched air defense artillery.

Lt. Col. Thomas E. Christianson, deputy director of Tactics and Doctrine, U.S. Army Air Defense School, spoke to the candidates and presented them with their first set of field artillery or air defense artillery brass. Candidates also received a letter of welcome from their respective branch commanding general.

The new second lieutenants will continue their careers by attending either the Field Artillery Officer Basic Course at Fort Sill, Texas, or the Air Defense Artillery Officer Basic Course at Fort Bliss, Texas.

Luncheon honors 141 years of service

By Ann Withrow
Infantry Training Brgiade

The Infantry Training Brigade honored 141 years of civil service at a luncheon April 30 at the Sand Hill Club.

Recognized were retiring civilians: Gilles J. Fagnon, operations specialist; Arthur Rogers, training evaluation technician; Paula Bissell, secretary to the deputy commander; and Ima Jean Watson, personnel coordinator.

Laverne S. Worth, education specialist for the Directorate of Training, was recognized for years of support for the cadre of the brigade.

Col. Theodore R. Severn, commander of ITB, and his wife, Dusty, were present to bid farewell as was former commander Col. Joseph W. Trez.

ARMED FORCES DAY
MILITARY APPRECIATION WEEK

Members of the All-Army wrestling team pull their way to victory for the 29th Infantry Regiment in the tug of war.

Music, food, fun, fitness

One day was just not enough. So the tri-community area of Columbus, Phenix City and Fort Benning expanded Armed Forces Day this year into an entire week designated to recognize the military, service members and their families.

It was a week intended to "show the soldiers and their families that we care about them," according to retired Lt. Gen. Ben F. Register, the president of the Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army.

AUSA, along with the Columbus Chamber of Commerce, the Phenix City-Russell County Chamber of Commerce and local businesses and organizations planned and sponsored many of the week's events.

Soldiers participated in a volleyball tournament sponsored by Scooters, a luncheon at the Columbus Chamber of Commerce, and RedStixx's Military Appreciation Night, among other events.

Local businesses sponsored a variety of sports-related competitions on post, from a fitness competition for soldiers that included events such as push-ups and a tug of war, to an open swim meet and the "Burn the General Run," providing everyone the opportunity to get involved.

The soldiers who got out and participated in the events appreciated the opportunity to have a good time.

"This type of thing is a great morale enhancer for everyone involved — civilian and military alike," said 2nd Lt. Danny Havorka of Company E, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, after playing in the beach volleyball tournament May 11.

"It's good for the community and good for the soldiers," said Capt. David Smith, also of Company E.

"It's long overdue for the community to show appreciation for the military," said Spc. Tony Demos, a member of the 29th Infantry Regiment's winning tug of war team.

The week culminated with Armed Forces Day Saturday. Crowds of soldiers, former soldiers, civilians and their families gathered at Olive Field to enjoy music, barbecue, rides, games and more.

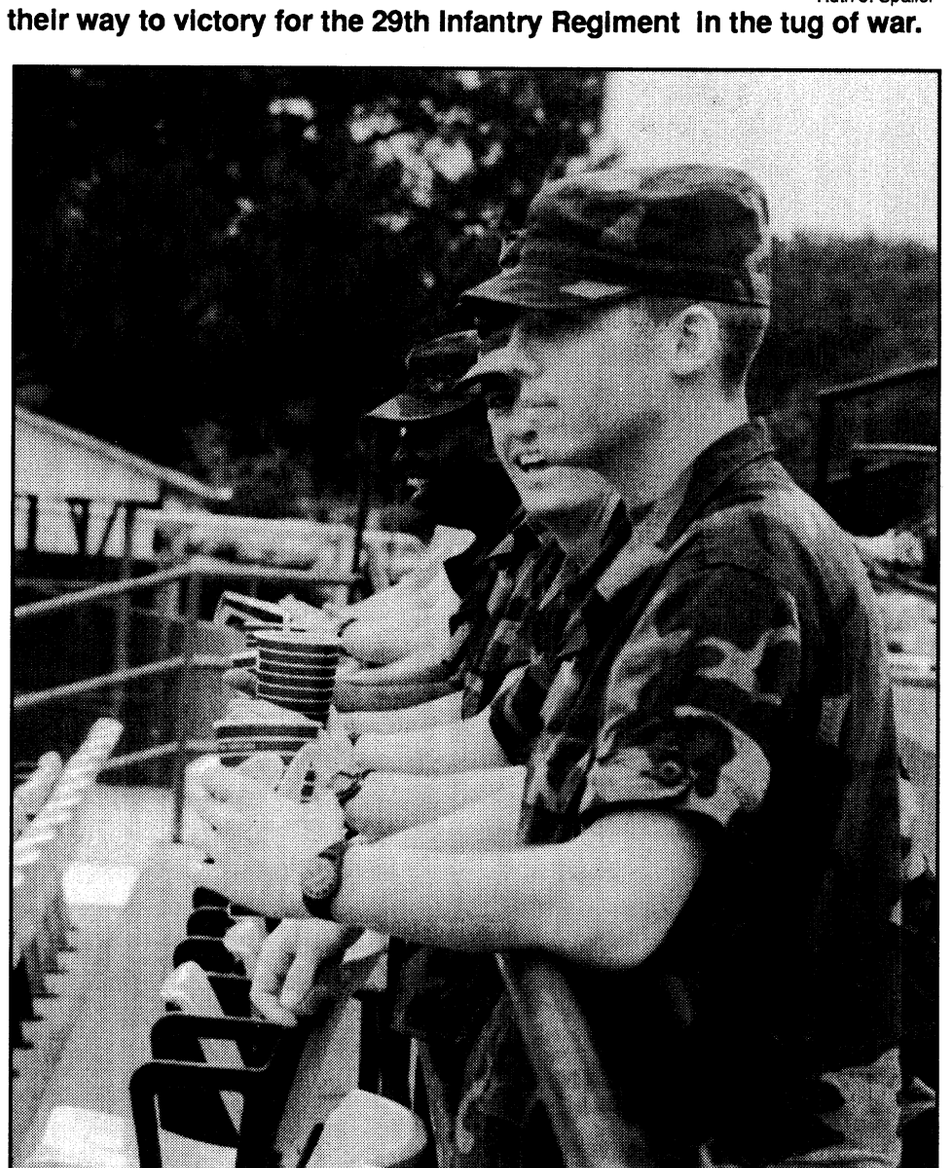
An awards ceremony crowned the two Ms. AUSAs and recognized the week's competition winners.

Many local businesses came out to show their support, setting up midway-type booths and handing out everything from fliers to T-shirts and prize giveaways.

Children climbed over and into M-1 Abrams tanks, Bradley Fighting Vehicles and other military equipment on display. Some even braved a mini airborne tower, sliding down the wire after sounding off with "airborne!"

The annual AUSA picnic provided hot dogs, hamburgers, chicken and many other lunch staples to the crowd. Many relaxed and ate near the bandstand, listening to a country and western band and other live music.

Staff Sgt. Homer H. Blake of the 36th Engineer Group said this was the first time he has ever experienced anything like this.



"Columbus is much more supportive of the troops and post here than any other place I've been," he said.

Annual bingo night was April 29 for all Infantry Training Brigade spouses at the Sand Hill Club.

The evening began with a social hour followed by a buffet. After the meal, the festivities began.

Area merchants donated prizes and several spouses donated handmade items.

The evening's big winner was Rosemary Kemp from Company A, 3rd Battalion, 32nd Infantry Regiment.

Her bingo prize was a trip to Orlando, Fla., courtesy of SatoTravel.

The money raised will be going to First Steps, a Red Cross program designed to help new mothers.

Post pays for energy waste

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

People in post housing are wasting energy, and Sgt. 1st Class Paul Pierson, Indianhead Terrace Community Life noncommissioned officer in charge, doesn't like it.

"I see people leaving their outdoor lights on during the day," he said, "and they're using floodlights as well." Pierson pointed out that 60-watt bulbs are the maximum allowed for outdoor lights on Fort Benning.

Mark Fincher, chief of the Energy Branch, said leaving lights on and misusing heating and air conditioning units are the major abuses of electrical power in housing units.

"Becoming conscious of energy usage can dramatically reduce costs," Fincher said. "Controlling waste is a matter of common sense — don't leave lights on during the day or when you're not using them; and don't use heating or air conditioning when you don't need to. We want people to be comfortable, but we'd like them to be careful as well."

Fincher said in the summer months, the total electric bill for the post exceeds $1 million per month.

"We have a billing arrangement with Georgia Power that sets our billing limit at 36,000 kilowatt hours," Fincher said. "During peak use, they can require us to "shed" power usage to meet that limit — it's called curtailment. If they call us, we have to reduce usage to 36,000 kwh within 30 minutes — which we do by shedding, or temporarily turning off, air conditioning to the housing units.

"The more energy that's wasted during those times," said Fincher, "the more power we have to shed. If people were more conservative with their use of power, we could reduce the effect of curtailment."

Fincher said the average 2,000-square-foot housing unit's power usage would equate to a $260 bill, monthly, in an all-electric house.

"You expect more power use in the peak months," he said, "but consumption like that includes a lot of wasted power."

In this era of budget-cutting, Fincher said, money spent on power is one area of potential savings. "Some things remain constant," he said. "The cost of messing soldiers, for instance, will remain basically the same. If we could cut waste in our power consumption, we would have more funds available for other uses."

Editor's note: An article explaining the post's energy curtailment policy will appear in a future issue of The Bayonet.

Educate children about fire safety

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Panic kills many people caught in house fires. Children, especially, should be told what to do if fire strikes.

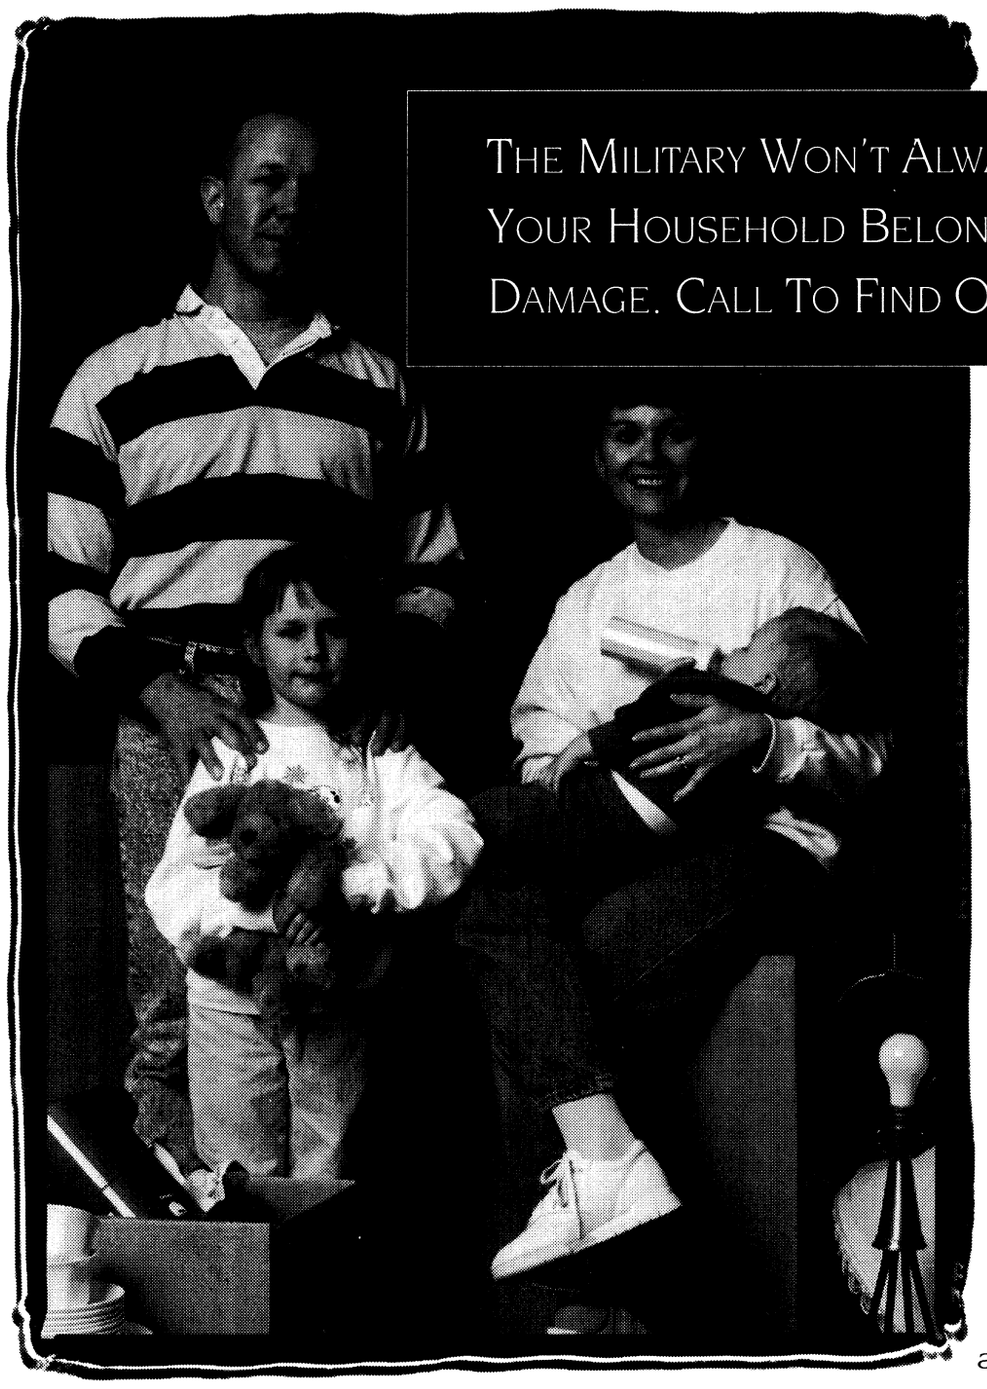
In "Safe and Sound: A Parent's Guide to the Care of Children Home Alone," Trudy K. Dana tells parents the main thing to emphasize when discussing fire safety with children is that people are "the only priceless and irreplaceable things in the house." Children should be told to forget about saving pets, furniture and favorite keepsakes when fleeing a burning home.

Children should also be told that hiding from a house fire can kill them. The primary motive is to get out of the house. Firefighters have found too many children's bodies under beds or in closets of burned-out homes.

Dana says school-aged children should be told to do the following:

• Alert others. The first thing to do if you smell smoke, hear a fire alarm or think there is a fire is to let others know. Tell a parent, scream, pound on the walls — whatever it takes.

• Test doors for heat. If a fire starts and the door to your room is closed, feel the door with the palm of your hand. If it feels hot or you see smoke seeping under the door, don't open it — the flames and smoke will pour into your room.



• Find another way out. All family members should already know alternate routes to safety and how to open windows and remove screens. If the window won't open, break it with whatever is handy but be careful not to get cut by the glass. If you can't jump from the window, scream for help.

• If the door isn't hot, open it a few inches to see if the way is clear. If there is smoke, get down and crawl on the floor. Fresher air hugs the floor.

• Identify a meeting place outside the house. Go there right away and don't leave until everyone is found. If someone is missing, it is almost always best to wait for someone from the fire department to arrive and let them rescue him or her.

Many NCO families assume that the government will reimburse them for personal items that are stolen or destroyed. But that's not always the case. And even if the military does pay, the check rarely covers the full replacement cost.

ACS offers computer training

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

Army Community Service's Family Member Employment Assistance Program is currently providing professional computer training courses through Troy State University for military family members.

A total of 40 family members and transition soldiers are now enrolled in either the WordPerfect or Lotus 1-2-3 classes. These classes will end May 28.

Another class will run June 1 through 21 for those who have preregistered. This is one in a series of seven classes that will continue through the end of August.

Graduates of the April course on "Introduction to Computer Keyboard" were: Lisa Wols, Olga Saldana, Regina Eyes, Debbie Krueger, Robin Rivera, Brenda Gotches, Sarah Traylor, Myrna Cano, Belinda Ferrer-Orta, Angela Jones, Christy Landrau, Tammy Muse, Anja Bennett, Angela Davis, Betty Doster, Tammie Noel, Mary Carter, Jeresita Roque, Juanita Staples and James Staples.

According to Shirley Jarrett of the Family Member Employment Assistance Program, the mission of the program is to assist military family members with their job search efforts in the private sector.

She said she hopes they will continue to receive funding so that additional classes such as these can be offered in the future after the present ones are completed.

Boating riskiest for children

U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary

More than 80 percent of boating fatalities involve people not wearing personal flotation devices, better known as life jackets, according to the U.S. Coast Guard. Many of these fatalities involve children.

The American Pediatrics Society lists drowning as the number one cause of child death. In addition, the society says children under 7 cannot don a personal flotation device by themselves, and those between 7 and 12 cannot put them on by themselves without formal training.

So, to protect children's lives while boating, put them in a properly fitted and adjusted device before they go.

Here are some tips:

• The devices come in child weight ranges: under 30 pounds, 30 to 50 pounds, 50 to 90 pounds, and more than 90 pounds. Choose the right weight range for your child.

• Chest size might be specified, so measure your child under the arms.

• Fasten the device snugly and lift at the shoulders. If it gives more than three inches, it is too big.

• Crotch straps keep the device in place. Use them.

• Consider collared devices for children who fear water.

• Let your child test the device in shallow water.

• Choose high-visibility colors.

• Personal flotation devices are not baby sitters. Never leave your child alone in the water.

On most water safety patrols the Coast Guard Auxiliary conducts on the Chattahoochee or local lakes, there are boats seen with children aboard who are not wearing personal flotation devices, officials said.

In most states, children under 12 must wear a personal flotation device at all times while in a boat.

It's the law.

Most parents put a seat belt on their child when they are riding in an auto. Wearing a PFD while boating is the same as wearing a seat belt while motoring.

Buckle up — it's a snap. Boat smart — wear your life jacket.

For more information on fitting and selecting a life jacket for your child, call Maggie McGarvey, U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary, at 545-5937 or attend the Fort Benning Safety Carnival June 5.

Woman grad makes Benning history

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

The Army Management Staff College offers advanced professional development for civilian and military managers and leaders.

Lee G. Capraro, chief of publications for the Production Branch of the Directorate of Operations and Training, recently became the first woman from Fort Benning to attend the college.

"It was great," she said. "I learned a great deal about the Army and gained insight into the entire scope of military functions."

Capraro first found out about the course when she went to the Directorate of Civilian Personnel to find out how she could advance her career.

"I was looking for a good career move," she said, "and I went in to talk to Patty Pfeiffer."

Pfeiffer, chief of the Training and Development Division for the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, said the Army Staff College course is essential for career development.

"It is an exceptional educational opportunity," Pfeiffer said, "and it may soon become a requirement for promotions above the General Schedule 12 level."

The course, a 14-week resident course offered by the Army Management Staff College at Fort Belvoir, Va., is the Army's capstone leadership education and development program for civilian employees grades 12 through 15.

"It is comparable to the Command and General Staff College," Pfeiffer said.

Capraro

Capraro, who graduated in April, said the rewards from the course were definitely worth the hard work.

"I met fantastic people from all over the world," she said, "and the camaraderie was incredible."

"And," she said, "I now have a greater appreciation for how the Army runs and how important a part civilian employees play in that process.

"We need to understand what the military does and why, so we can do our jobs better to support the soldier — because that's why we're here," she said.

Capraro feels she is a better person for her job now, too.

"Any questions that come up, I feel better qualified to answer now because I am more knowledgeable," she said.

Capraro, who sees herself as an overachiever, said the most difficult aspect of the course was time management. "It's a very intense course. I don't recommend it if you don't want to work," she said.

Capraro was one of 59 women in a class of 202. "That's the most they have ever had," she said, "and I would like to see that number rise."

It was hard to leave her family for 14 weeks, Capraro said.

"I think that deters a lot of people — especially women," she said. "But I have a wonderful husband and a teen-aged daughter who said, 'Go.' "

"It is an important course," she said, "and I think it will be a discriminator in job selection."

Anyone interested in attending the course must fill out an application form, write a statement of interest, obtain a letter of recommendation from the commanding general, submit his or her last three performance appraisals and fill out a civilian program qualification record and a race and national origin statement form.

Pfeiffer encourages people not to be deterred by the lengthy application process and recommends applicants start preparing their packets several months in advance.

The college offers three classes a year, and the course schedule for 1994 should be available in July.

The Training and Development Division, located in Meloy Hall, Room 112, will provide interested applicants with the appropriate forms and assist with the application process.

For more information, call 545-5580 or 545-5656.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Jonathan J. Hunt
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Soldiers, retirees and their family members have the right to free legal assistance at the Legal Assistance Division. Your military lawyer can help resolve many of your legal problems, but in some cases a civilian attorney may be necessary.

If you decide you need a civilian attorney, how do you select the best one for your needs? First, ask your Judge Advocate General lawyer for a referral. Also, ask your friends and neighbors for names of attorneys who have helped them.

Contact your local bar association for a list of names of local attorneys who handle cases like yours. Last, check the yellow pages and newspapers for attorney listings.

How can you evaluate the attorney you select? Ask for an introductory visit, which some lawyers offer at little or no charge. Are you impressed with your lawyer's credentials, experience, maturity and ability to explain things to you in plain English?

Ask if the lawyer specializes in cases like yours. Will your lawyer personally work on your case, or will he or she delegate some or all of it to associates or assistants? Ask how long the case might last and how much it may cost you.

The expense of an attorney is an important factor. Remember that fees are negotiable; while some lawyers require a lump sum fee up front, others will agree to extended payments.

Ask your lawyer how much hourly rates are. Ask about retainers, which are similar to a down payment for services, and ask whether you can get all or most of the unused portion of it returned to you.

You may want to negotiate a flat fee for simple legal services such as wills, deeds, or basic contracts.

In personal injury cases, most attorneys will accept a contingency fee arrangement (a percentage of the claim).

Rates of a contingency fee agreement can be high (33 percent of the settlement award, higher for litigation), but the advantage is the client pays the lawyer only if the client wins. However, the client is still responsible for court costs.

All attorney-client contracts should be in writing. Do not hesitate to ask your attorney for a written estimate of all costs, and insist on itemized billings.

COMMUNITY BRIEFS

Young authors — Dexter Elementary School will hold its third annual Young Authors' Day today. The entire day is a celebration of the school's year-long focus on writing.

Carmen Deedy, a popular children's writer and storyteller will be the featured author. Deedy is the author of "Agatha's Feather Bed: Not Just Another Wild Goose Story."

Along with Deedy, more than 25 other guests, including teachers, community leaders and media personalities will be presenting workshops designed to inspire the students.

Play production — Spencer High School's Theater Department will present "Cinderella, Cinderella," an audience participation play, today at 6:30 p.m., Saturday at 2 p.m. and Sunday at 2 p.m. in the school auditorium. Admission is $1 for students and $2 for adults.

Dance recital — The Officers' Wives' Club will conduct a dance recital Saturday at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center at 7 p.m. Director and teacher for the club is Jennifer Page.

The recital is titled "Country is My Beat," and approximately 50 to 60 pupils will participate.

Summer classes will begin June 10. For more information, call Page at 323-5735.

Boy Scout summer camp — Four weeks of summer camp for Boy Scouts will be June 20 to 26, June 27 to July 3, July 18 to 24 and July 25 to 31. Boy Scouts will go with their troops to spend a week at Camp Pine Mountain just outside West Point, Ga.

Many Scouting activities will be offered including canoeing, sailing, swimming, hiking, fishing, nature studies, handicraft, sports and more.

The fee is $110, which includes all meals and activities for the week. Contact your local Boy Scout troop for more information.

Job workshop — Bouton Heights Youth Outreach Center, in conjunction with Army Community Service, will sponsor a job workshop for teens 16 to 19 years old Saturday from noon to 3 p.m. at Building 9608. For more information, call 544-1195.

Preschool registration — McGraw Child Development Center will conduct preschool registration for the 1993-94 school year Tuesday from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The center will conduct two classes during the new school year. A class for 3-year-olds will be Tuesdays and Thursdays from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m.

Children registering for this class must be 3 years old before Sept. 1. A class for 4- and 5-year-olds will be Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m.

Parents must bring their 1040 tax return for 1992 and their child's immunization records to the registration.

All registration will be on a first-come, first-served basis, and registrations will not be accepted over the telephone.

Flag alert — The Chattahoochee Valley Chapter of the Gold Star Wives and Chattahoochee Valley Veteran's Council will erect the Avenue of Flags along Victory Drive and into Phenix City May 29 in honor of veterans. Officials ask the public to help preserve our heritage by protecting the flags from theft and vandalism.

Swimming lessons — Registration begins Monday for swimming lessons for youth 5 to 18.

The two-week sessions cost $20 per student and are limited to 20 students.

The sessions are as follows: June 21 to July 2, July 6 to 16, July 19 to 30 and Aug. 2 to 13.

For more information, call 545-3070 or 545-7945.

Summer camp — Youth Services is offering camp throughout the summer from 8 a.m. to noon each day. Each week a new camp will start. Children 6 to 12 can attend for $25 per week. Activities include field trips, bowling, sports and fitness, creative activities, social interaction and snacks.

The schedule is as follows:

- Week one - June 21 to 25.

Plug in, switch on to Electrical Safety Month

Fires, extension cords cause 800 deaths a year

Editor's note: The information used in this article was compiled by the National Electrical Manufacturers Association, the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, and the Underwriters Laboratories.

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

May is National Electrical Safety Month. The theme for this year's observance is "Plug in to Electrical Safety."

According to statistics compiled by national agencies, 800 deaths and $1.2 billion in property damage result from electrical fires each year.

This includes 5,400 fires and 60 deaths caused by extension cords, and 4,700 fires and 30 deaths resulting from defective switches and outlets.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission advises that dim or flickering lights, arcs or sparks, sizzling or buzzing sounds from the electrical system, odors, hot switch plates, loose plugs and damaged insulation are signs of potential hazards, and should be looked at by a qualified electrician.

According to Debbie Gutierrez, Infantry Branch Safety Office, most electrical problems reported on Fort Benning result from overloaded circuits.

"People use flimsy extension cords," said Gutierrez, "or they put too much wattage on one circuit. It's important not to overload your cords and plugs."

Extension cords should not be used with high-wattage appliances like air conditioners, portable electric heaters or freezers.

Also, extension cords used outside should be specifically marked for such use. Indoor-use cords will not withstand outdoor use and could result in fire or shock hazard.

Light bulbs may also be hazardous if used improperly. Most light fixtures carry the manufacturer's suggested bulb wattage; exceeding this wattage can result in fire hazard.

All light bulbs should have air space around them to dissipate heat — a 60-watt bulb can generate heat as high as 407 degrees Fahrenheit.

Never allow combustible materials to come in contact with lighted bulbs.

Plugs, cords, switches and receptacle outlets —

DOs and DON'Ts

▲ DO use extension cords only on a temporary basis.

▲ DO put safety covers on unused receptacle outlets and extension cords.

▲ DO unplug the appliance and call an electrician if the receptacle faceplate feels hot or if there is sparking, smoke or odor coming from the outlet, plug or appliance.

▲ DO examine cords (appliance and extension cords) regularly for signs of wear or damage to the insulation.

▲ DO unplug all nonessential electrical appliances when not in use.

▲ DO use only extension cords that have been listed by a recognized certification organization such as UL.

▼ DON'T attach extension cords to the wall with nails or staples.

▼ DON'T put extension cords under rugs or in high-traffic areas, or rest anything on an extension cord.

▼ DON'T overload cords with more than the proper electrical load.

▼ DON'T touch any appliance that has emitted an electrical shock until the appliance has been unplugged.

▼ DON'T place any appliance near waters such as a sink or a bathtub.

▼ DON'T let cords hang over countertops so that children can pull appliances off the counter.

CRIME WATCH

Military Police Activity

The following entries were taken from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from April 27 to May 3. Such entries may be incomplete and are not the adjudication of the guilt or innocence of any person.

This week's hot topic concerns summer safety. Summer weather is an opportunity to enjoy outdoor activities. Unfortunately, many lives are lost during the summer because of alcohol-related incidents.

We all know that drinking and driving don't mix, but other activities can be fatal when mixed with drinking as well. Boating and swimming are also extremely dangerous for a person who has been drinking. Don't allow yourself to become a statistic this summer. If you consume alcoholic beverages during your summer activities, do so responsibly.

• A private was charged by civil authorities with failure to obey a traffic control device and driving under the influence of alcohol after he disregarded a red light. He was administered a breathalyzer test with a result of .19.

•A civilian reported that an unknown male pulled alongside her as she was walking on a street in Columbus and stated that he had a gun. He ordered her to get into his car and drove to an isolated road on Fort Benning where he raped and robbed her.

• A captain was charged with leaving a child unattended after a military police officer observed a small child alone and asleep in a parked car.

• A private first class was charged with forgery after attempting to cash a check that had been stolen from a local business.

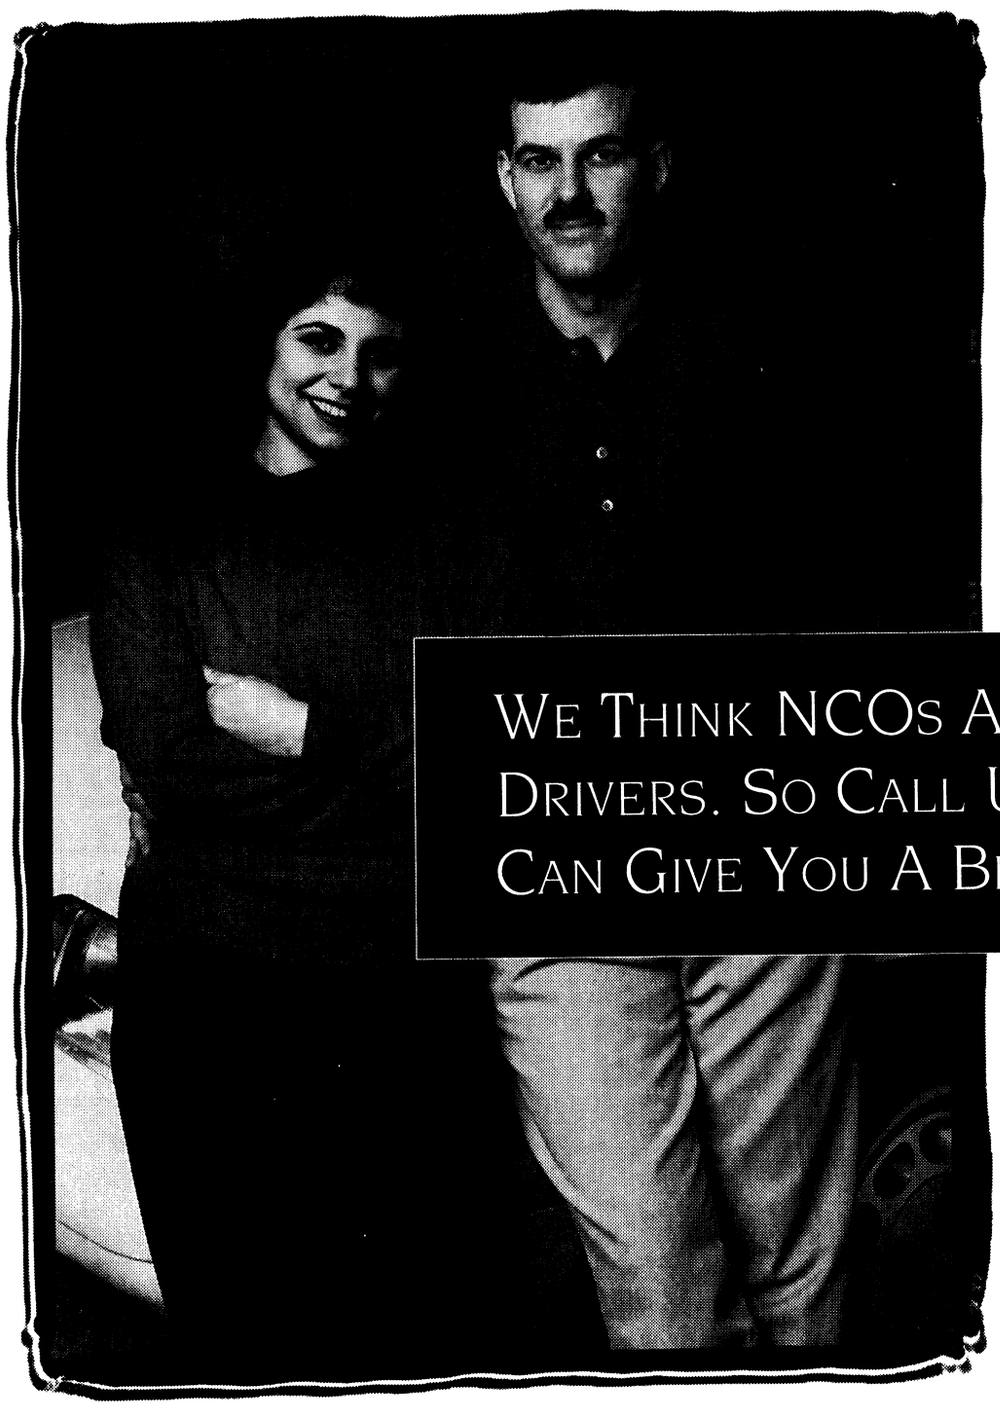
• A specialist reported that persons unknown punctured the front tires of his car while it was parked adjacent to his barracks.

• A specialist was charged with assault after hitting his wife and child during an argument.

• A family member was charged with shoplifting after placing two audio cassette tapes in her purse and exiting the Post Exchange at the Main Mall without rendering payment.

• A private was charged with underage drinking after he was observed by a security officer walking around in a disoriented state. Upon arrival of the Military Police, the soldier was identified and determined to be 19 years old.

• A family member reported that persons unknown entered his or her quarters and removed a stereo system.



• A sergeant was charged with contempt of court after he failed to appear in court on an unattended animal charge.

• A private reported that persons unknown punched holes in the door locks of his car and removed four speakers and an amplifier.

• This week's booby prize is awarded to a staff sergeant who receipted for and wrongfully disposed of $404,706 of U.S. government property from the Defense Reutilization and Marketing Office. He also stole government property valued at $928.04. An inventory was conducted that resulted in the recovery of $340,307 worth of government property.

Other activities included 16 traffic accidents and five reports of shoplifting at facilities on post. There were five cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, nine cases of larceny of private property and three cases of larceny of government property.

Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best — Give Crime Arrest." Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5223 or the "Crime in Progress" line at 545-2222.

Anyone can offer you an auto insurance policy. But at Family Protection Plus,SM we believe NCOs tend to be better drivers. So we provide highly competitive rates on policies geared to the realities of NCO family life.

For example, when you're transferred, your coverage follows you to most of the states where military installations are located. All it takes is a toll-free call, and we'll handle the details.

You'll also find our other features very attractive.* Like special savings if you keep your car in a storage facility while you're on a TDY. And a waiver of deductible if someone in your household has an accident while you're deployed in a war or combat zone.

WE THINK NCOS ARE BETTER DRIVERS. SO CALL US TO SEE IF WE CAN GIVE YOU A BETTER RATE.

If that seems like a sensible approach, there's a good reason. Family Protection Plus, created by Academy Life Insurance Company, was designed specifically for NCOs and their families. And it's recommended by NCOA®.

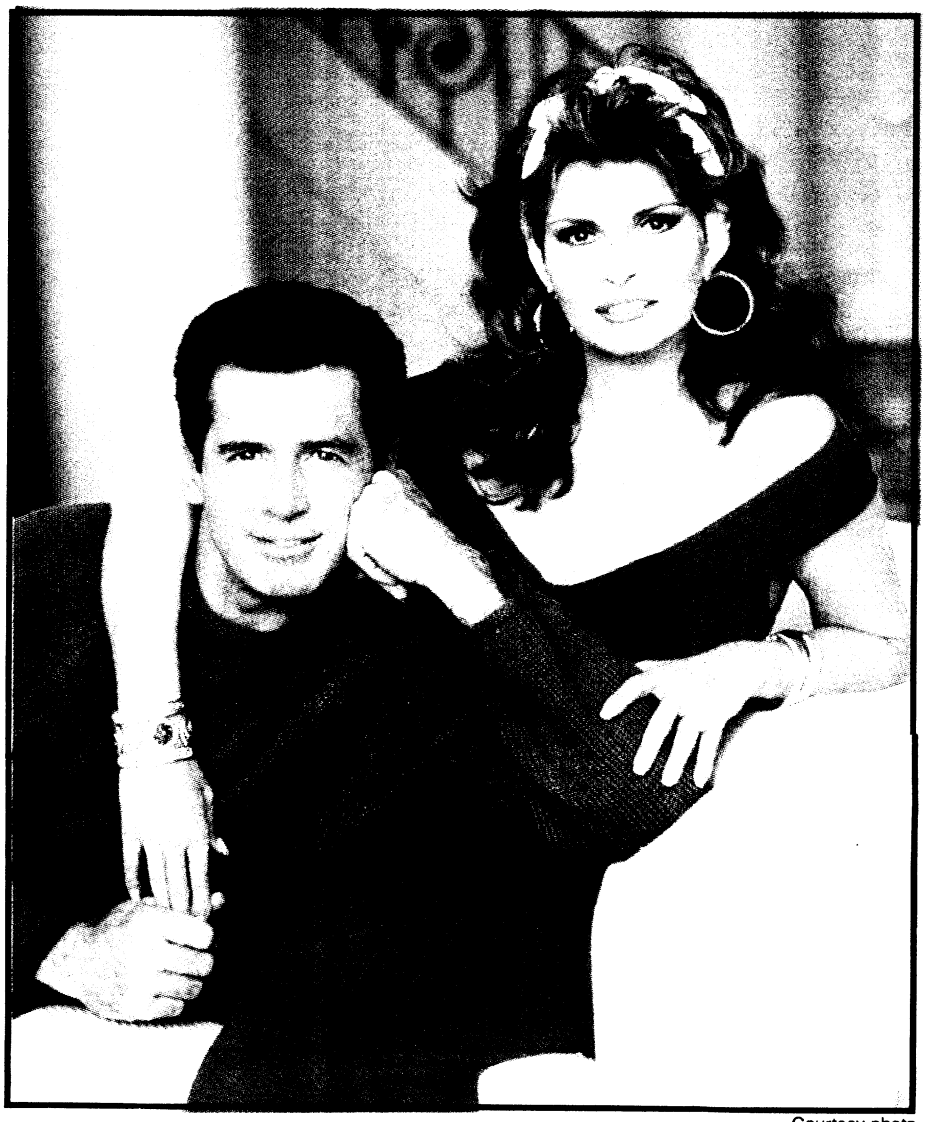
Raquel Welch croons 'Torch Song'

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services



In recent years, the works of popular romance novelists have yielded many of the strongest television parts for actresses.

SPOTLIGHT

The latest performer to verify that is Raquel Welch, whose appearances have been relatively rare lately. She has a meaty role in "Torch Song," Sunday's new ABC drama based on a story by Judith Krantz, the author of such best-sellers as "Scruples," "Princess Daisy" and "I'll Take Manhattan" ... all of which were turned into TV miniseries.

In the new film, Welch plays Paula Eastman, whose movie stardom has faded as her addiction to alcohol has increased. Her relationship with her teen-age daughter (Alicia Silverstone, of the movie "The Crush") also has suffered, so she finally decides to seek help at a rehabilitation clinic. While there, she becomes romantically involved with a fireman (Jack Scalia, previously of such series as "Dallas," "Wolf" and "Tequila & Bonetti") who has his own drinking problem; and, while their affair seems extremely beneficial for both of them, they're distressed to find that after they leave the facility it may not withstand the pressures they face from their respective acquaintances.

"When this project came along," says Welch, "I thought about the wonderful following Judith Krantz has. Her books satisfy a certain entertainment market, and I have an empathy for that."

Though she admits she isn't normally a Krantz reader herself, Welch adds, "I'm aware of her, of course, and I just found this part of a classification that I think a lot of women respond to as an audience. We're dealing with a lot of things here, because Paula is somebody who is a public figure, which exacerbates some of the problems anyone faces in being a professional woman. She is quite sensitive and feels quite vulnerable in being a movie star, since any of her behaviors or romances are put up for public inspection. That also makes it hard for her to balance her professional image, and professional life, with her obligations as a mother and as just a normal human being. Those things sort of slip into the background, and it's her dilemma to find her way out of that imbalance."

What: "Torch Song"
When: Sunday, 9 p.m. on ABC

Welch believes the biggest jolt to her "Torch Song" alter ego is her career crisis: "She identifies with herself more as an actress than as a private person, or as a mother, and I think that's what threw her into the alcoholism to begin with," she said. " I wouldn't call her a hard-core alcoholic, but someone who let social drinking overtake her after the death of her husband. Now, she's using it as a crutch for all of the other problems in her life, and that could lead to serious alcoholism ... but fortunately, her daughter calls her bluff, and she catches herself earlier than others might." According to Welch, the saga also "lifts the veil" on a concept she knows well, that of "the movie star or public figure who seems to have it all, but behind the scenes, really has a lot of difficulties to unravel and struggles to get over.

Service members attend FBI National Academy

By Sydni Redmond
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Each year, the military services send about 40 outstanding senior law enforcement personnel to the Federal Bureau of Investigation's National Academy in Quantico, Va.

"Fort Benning Today" will highlight the 11-week course, which encompasses police agencies from around the world and includes three soldiers, two Marines and two airmen.

"Fort Benning Today" will also take you into the classroom to show how the Combined Communities of Southeast Columbus volunteer program is helping to fight illiteracy in the tri-community area.

USAIC TV Schedule

Fort Benning Today: 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 1:30 to 2 p.m.
Specials: 2 to 4:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 4:30 to 8:30 p.m.

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel will highlight post events and list classified advertisements on the Fort Benning Community Bulletin Board with news and music from Soldiers Radio Network.

If you are a subscriber to Fort Benning Cable, you can watch USAIC TV on Channel 3, 24 hours a day.

Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:26, 7:56, 8:26 and 8:56 on WLTZ TV-38.

Savannah to show off seafood

Savannah Convention & Visitors Bureau

Savannah, Ga. — In Savannah and on the barrier islands along the coast, the months of June and July offer a variety of outdoor activities on the beach, along the rivers and under the shade of the old oak trees.

July 31 and Aug. 1 bring seafood samplings and a week-long maritime festival in venues throughout the Savannah area.

June 4 and July 2 provide an opportunity for a spectacular view of the sunset from atop Georgia's oldest and tallest lighthouse. The candle lantern tour of Tybee Lighthouse begins at 8:30 p.m. and refreshments are served. Contact the Tybee Island Lighthouse at (912) 786-5801.

On June 5, the First Saturday Fest will feature a flower and garden show with demonstrations and displays, a flower and plant market and arts and crafts 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. on River Street. Contact the Savannah Waterfront Association at (912) 234-0295.

Bring your dancin' shoes or dance barefoot on the beach during the fourth annual Beach Music Festival June 12 and 13. Tybee Island will be the scene for some great outdoor fun and top music bands will have everyone dancing the days and nights away. There will be shag demonstrations, kite flying shows and more. Contact Linda Odom at (912) 234-5884.

In the American tradition, July Fourth brings a wide variety of activities. The Great American Fourth of July, celebrated July 3 and 4 on Savannah's Historic Waterfront, features the largest fireworks display in the Southeast, a crafts show and musical entertainment. Open Saturday 11 a.m. to midnight and Sunday from noon on. Contact the Savannah Waterfront Association at (912) 234-0295.

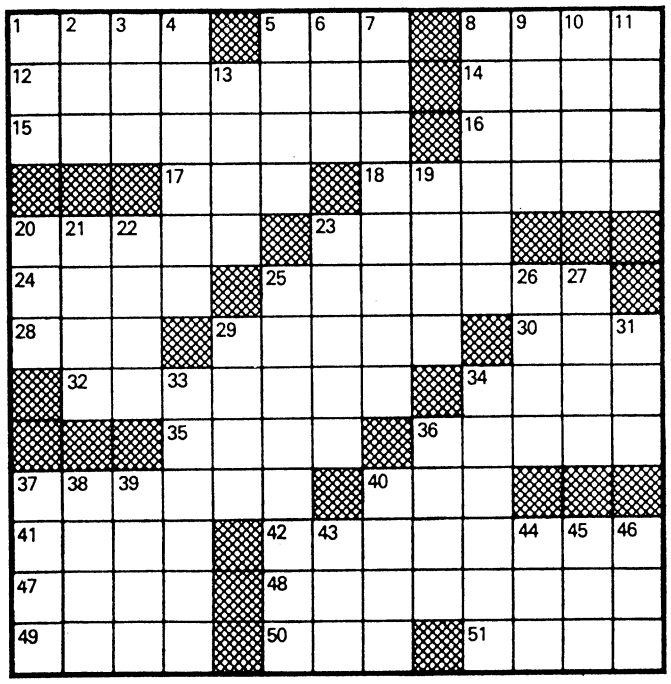
You can also celebrate Independence Day during the annual Fireworks on the Beach display over the ocean at Tybee Island on July 3. Contact Tybee Island Visitors Center at (912) 786-5444.

Barbecue dinners, live music, arts and crafts, games and other activities are the order of the day during the Independence Day celebration in an earthen works fort along the river. Contact Fort McAllister Historic State Park at (912) 727-2339

The Meridian Musket Salute on July 4 is a traditional program that has its basis in military practice dating from the American Revolution. Muskets will be fired to salute the birth of the American nation. Contact the Fort Pulaski National Monument at (912) 786-5787.

Under the shade of the old oak trees in beautiful Forsyth Park, the three-day Forsyth Performing Arts Festival July 9 through 11 will showcase local and regional performers with music, dance, drama and chorus. Hands-on activities will be provided for children and their parents and the event is free and open to the public. Contact the Office of Cultural Affairs at (912) 651-6417.

The end of the month brings the second annual Seafood Harvest Festival on the banks of the Wilmington River and Intracoastal Waterway July 30 through Aug. 1. Geared toward family fun in the quaint little town of Thunderbolt, Ga., a few of the events in store along the bluff will include a beauty pageant, dolphin watch cruises, live entertainment, arts and crafts and a delicious array of local seafood. Contact Mildred Hill at (912) 355-4965 or John Baker at (912) 355-4422.



The second annual Savannah Maritime Festival celebrated July 29 through Aug. 8 coincides with pre-Olympic sailing regattas. The spirit of Savannah's rich nautical history is celebrated in cultural and sporting events taking place in several water related venues throughout the area and throughout the week. Contact the Savannah Maritime Festival at (912) 236-3959.

July 31 the annual Baptism by Fire commemorates the 131st anniversary of the first major naval attack against Fort McAllister. Confederate soldiers will give tours of the fort and show the movie, "Fort McAllister: Guardian of the Ogeechee." Contact Fort McAllister Historic State Park at (912) 727-2339.

For more information contact: Dept. S., Savannah Area Convention & Visitors Bureau, P.O. Box 1628, Savannah, Ga. 31402-1628, or call (912) 944-0456 or (800) 444-2427, Ext. 311.

Creek War lives again at Westville

Westville HIstoric Handicrafts Inc.

A living history weekend, depicting the Creek War period of 1836 in Southwest Georgia, will be at Westville May 29 and 30.

Re-enactors in period clothing will demonstrate an encampment of soldiers who have been dispatched to protect local citizens against Indian attacks. An Indian camp will also be demonstrated.

A skirmish between soldiers and Indians will take place May 29 at 2 p.m. and May 30 at 2:30 p.m.

Westville's regular activity of blacksmithing, potterymaking, woodworking, quilting, spinning, weaving and cooking will also be in progress.

Westville's special event hours are Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday 1 to 5 p.m. Regular hours are Tuesday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday 1 to 5 p.m. Westville is located on South Mulberry Street, one mile from the town square in Lumpkin, Ga.

For more information write, Westville, P.O. Box 850 Lumpkin, Ga. 31815, or call (912) 838-6310.

Tybee Island swings with music festival

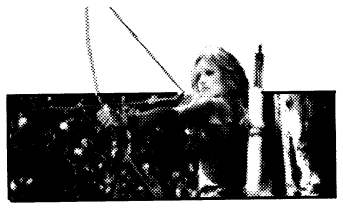
Savannah Convention & Visitors Bureau

The fourth annual Tybee Island Beach Music Festival, featuring the music of the Swingin' Medallions, Rob Lee Smith and the Original Tams and Benny Anderson and the Drifters will be June 11 and 12.

The festival will open June 11 from 6 to 9 p.m. with a special Shag Club preview party with DJ's from Oldies 98.3. There is no gate admission June 11 and the public is also invited to come out and dance with the "experts."

From 9 to 11 p.m. June 11, Rob Lee Smith and The Original Tams will perform at the DeSoto Beach Club while Benny Anderson and The Drifters will entertain at Spanky's Beachside.

On June 12, the gates open at 11:30 a.m. and the festival runs until 11 p.m. Rob Lee Smith and The Original Tams will open Saturday's festivities at noon followed by Benny Anderson and The Drifters.



The Swingin' Medallions, best known for their hit song "Another Shot of My Baby's Love" will perform at 2 p.m. and 6 p.m.

The festival grounds are located at Tybee Island on Butler Avenue at Third Street, between the DeSoto Beach Motel and Spanky's Beach Side.

All-day admission is $5 for adults if purchased in advance and $10 the day of the festival. Children under 12 are free. Ample security is being provided, and coolers will not be allowed on festival grounds. Tybee Island is located 30 miles east of Savannah, Ga.

For additional information, call (912) 786-5108 or (912) 234-5886.

SOA inducts generals

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

The School of the Americas inducted four Latin American generals into its Hall of Fame or "Galeria de Honor" May 21 at a ceremony in front of SOA Headquarters.

The Hall of Fame is a tribute to past SOA Command and General Staff Course graduates or guest instructors who have made significant contributions to their countries through military service.

This year's inductees were: Lt. Gen. Hector Garcia Tejada, secretary of state for the armed forces of the Dominican Republic; Maj. Gen. Tommy Rafael Fernandez Alarcon, deputy secretary of state for the armed forces of the Dominican Republic; Maj. Gen. Jose Emilio Guzman Fernandez, chief of staff, Dominican Republic army; and Maj. Gen. Hernan Guzman Rodriguez, commander-in-chief of the Colombian army.

In attendance at the ceremony hosted by SOA Commandant Col. Jose M. Alvarez were: Frank Martin, mayor of Columbus; Seth Harp, a representative for U.S. Sen. Paul Coverdell; Maj. Gen. James R. Harding, chairman of the Interamerican Defense Board, who was guest speaker; and Col. Burnet R. Quick, chief of staff for Fort Benning.

Official photographs of the inductees were unveiled at the ceremony and will hang in the Hall of Fame at SOA Headquarters.

Garcia was commissioned as a second lieutenant upon graduation from the Military Academy of the Armed Forces, Feb. 1, 1957.

He is a graduate of the following SOA courses: Command and General Staff Course; the Instructor Orientation Course; the Urban Counter-Insurgency Course; and the Joint Latin American Operations Course.

SUMMER JOB SEARCH

Workshop shows youth right approach to finding employment

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

The Bouton Heights and Davis Hill Youth Outreach Center sponsored a youth job strategy workshop Saturday.

Jessie L. Moore, the Outreach Center manager, and Justine Boone, a recreation assistant at the center, invited Shirley A. Jarrett of Army Community Service's Family Member Employment Assistance Program to talk to a group of more than 20 teens about ways to make themselves marketable.

"Attitude, applications and appearance will be deciding factors," said Jarrett. "Jobs for teens are tight in this community."

Jarrett said to let everyone know that you are looking for a job. "It's called networking," she said, "and it will open a lot of doors for you."

She also said it is important to keep an open mind while searching for a job.

"Be flexible," she said. "The more flexible you are, the better your chances are going to be.

"If you have no experience or your skills are limited and you want a chance to get in," Jarrett said, "be prepared to accept minimum wage ($4.25) and weekend or evening hours."

She also said it is important to keep in mind what employers are seeking.

"Managers want to know what you can do for them," she said.

"You have to be prepared to tell an interviewer what your talents and skills are," she said. If you have good grades in math, for example, and are applying for a cashier job, list your math grades as a skill on the application, she said.

She also stressed that looking for a job takes work and initiative.

"No one is going to bring a job and drop it in your lap," she said. "You are going to have to go out and find your own job. Being agressive will get you everywhere."

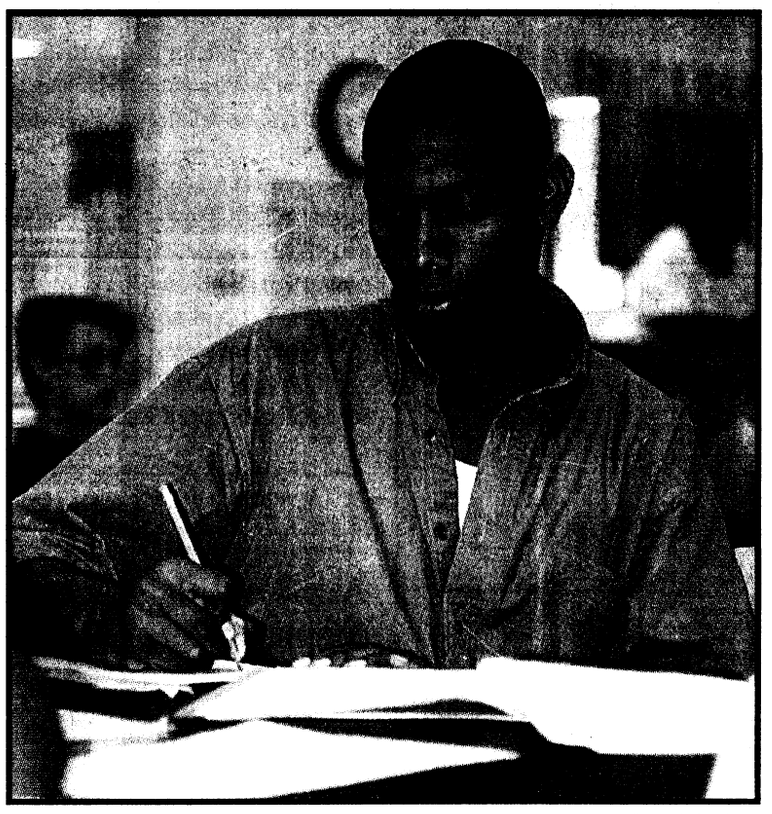
For those with specific careers in mind, Jarrett suggested volunteering to gain work experience. She said volunteering is a good way to "get your feet wet" in the field in which you are interested.

If there is a specific business for which you are interested in working, Jarrett said, do some research about it. Call and find out the name of the person you need to talk to, then call them to ask if they are hiring and if you can schedule an interview.

"Never wear jeans, sneakers or T-shirts," Jarrett said. "Don't even go in to pick up an application without being professionally dressed."

For young men, Jarrett recommended navy, gray or beige slacks with a solid white or light-colored shirt and a conservative tie.

She advised young women not to wear slacks or shorts, to wear little or no jewelry and to stay with conservatively colored dresses or suits for interviews.



Come to interviews prepared, Jarrett said. Bring your own pen; bring names, addresses, and phone numbers of people you plan to use as references and carry transcripts and letters of recommendation in case the interviewer wants to see them, she said.

For more information, visit Jarrett at the Family Member Employment Assistance Program, Building 2643, Soldiers' Plaza.

Where to find summer jobs

✎ Work permits: Individuals under 18 must have a work permit. Applications are available at the Columbus Roberts Center, 539 Brown Ave., Columbus, weekdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. There is no fee. Applicants must have proof of birth date. For information, call J. Langford at 649-0627.

✎ Nonappropriated fund jobs: NAF summer positions are posted on a job opportunity board in the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, Meloy Hall, Building 6, Room 115. Stop by or call 545-3374.

✎ Army and Air Force Exchange Services: Pick up AAFES applications anytime at the Directorate of Civilian Personnel. Applications can only be turned in Wednesdays from 8 a.m. to noon.

✎ Columbus Consolidated Government Center: There may be seasonal positions available through the city in recreation and other areas. Contact the city personnel office at 571-4738.

✎ Volunteer Opportunities: To volunteer, call Linda Payne, Army Community Service, 545-6969; Linda Scorgie, Fort Benning Red Cross, 545-5194; Kathy Case, Fort Benning installation volunteer coordinator, 545-5931; or Lillian Sullivan, tri-community director of volunteers, 323-5614.

✎ Temporary Services: Employment services seek individuals with clerical skills, computer knowledge and communication skills and individuals for industrial and casual labor positions. Students must be at least 18, and have reliable transportation, Social Security card or birth certificate. Stop by the Family Member Employment Assistance Center, Building 2643, Soldiers' Plaza, for a list of recommended "no-fee" services.

Post works to reduce injuries, costs

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

The cost of civilian injuries will soon be hitting Fort Benning, and other Training and Doctrine Command installations, right in the wallet.

According to Judy Pennington, chief of Personnel Management and Systems Support Division, recent changes in Army policy require that costs associated with the Federal Employees' Compensation Act be paid at the installation level. Formerly, she said, employee compensation costs were paid at the major command or Department of the Army level.

Maj. Gen. John P. Herrling, TRADOC chief of staff, said installations will be reimbursed for payment of FECA costs. The reimbursement, however, will be based on the installation's employee compensation costs for fiscal 1991 — costs exceeding that level will be paid by the installation.

Post plans memorial ceremony

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning will honor our nation's war dead during a Memorial Day ceremony, Monday, at the Main Post Cemetery at 9 a.m.

The national colors will be raised at 8:15 a.m. then lowered to half-staff. The Infantry Band will be in attendance with a musical selection as a prelude.

Brig. Gen. John W. Hendrix, deputy commanding general and assistant commandant of the U.S. Army Infantry School, will deliver the Memorial Day message.

After the Memorial Day message, Chaplain (Col.) Roy G. Plummer, post chaplain, will join Hendrix in placing a wreath at the grave of the Unknown Soldier.

Soldiers from the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division will follow with the firing of a 21-gun salute to our nation as the national colors are raised to the top of the flag pole.

The cemetary is located on the corner of Custer Road and Fort Benning Road. The public is invited to attend the ceremony.

Memorial Day is a holiday for most military and civilian personnel at Fort Benning.

63rd, 608th, 43rd return

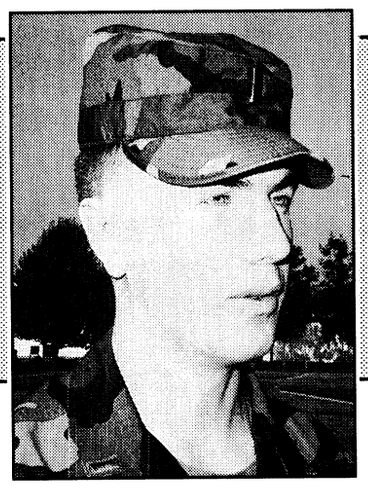
USAIC Public Affairs Office

About 190 members of the 63rd Combat Support Equipment Company, the 608th Ordnance Company and Company B, 43rd Engineer Combat Battalion (Heavy) returned from Somalia arriving at Lawson Army Airfield Wednesday at 5:30 a.m.

Col. Phillip Anderson, commander for the 36th Engineer Group (Combat), welcomed home the returning soldiers.

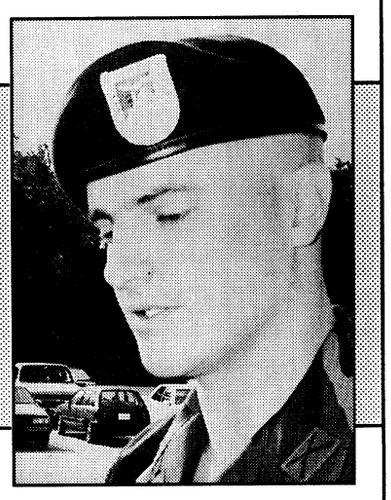
"We're really proud of you," Anderson said. "You spent four gruelling months in an austere country building roads, airfields, schools and playgrounds. You've handled ammunitions magnificently and properly stored and accounted for all those captured weapons. We are indeed proud of you and welcome you home."

Also on hand to welcome the soldiers was Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White.



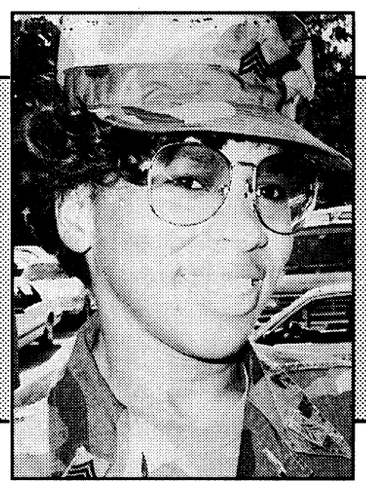
"We all are proud of you; you've made a significant difference for the people of Somalia," White said. "Every one of you will go down in the history books for what you did for that great country."

About 1,000 Fort Benning soldiers from the 36th Engineer Group have served in Somalia with Operation Restore Hope. They provided humanitarian relief to the Somalian people, constructed base camps, repaired and improved roads and bridges, improved the serviceability of unit buildings and erected security barriers.



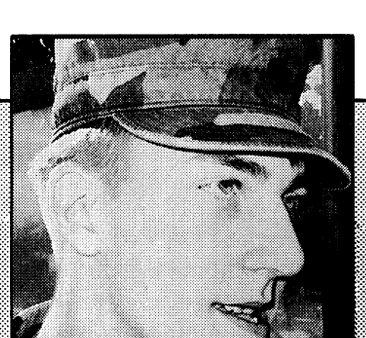
Subordinate units of the 36th Engineer Group that served in Somalia are Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 36th Engineer Group; 43rd Engineer Battalion; 63rd Combat Support Equipment Company; elements of the 535th Engineer Detachment; 608th Ordnance Company and 498th and 690th Medical Companies.

VARIOUS VOICES

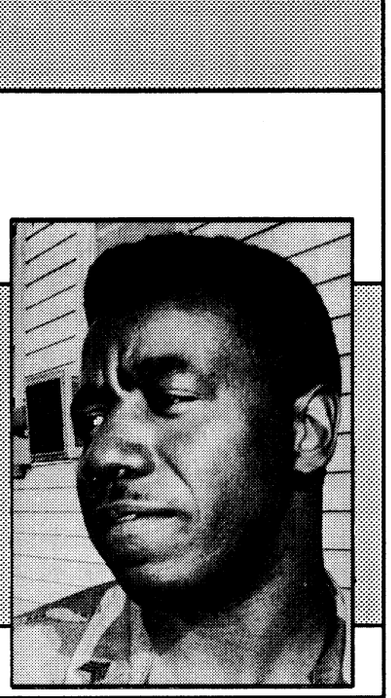


Do you think the Army should reduce benefits instead of personnel to achieve its drawdown objectives?

2nd Lt. Craig W. Collar, Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment — "It has to be a combination of both in order to maintain a force that is still ready to train and fight.'



Capt. Trey Tumminello, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment — "We should not reduce benefits because in order to maintain a quality force, we have to offer good benefits to attract quality people."



Sgt. Tonia T. Walker, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "I think it should be half and half. They should reduce the number of soldiers who are just here for the paycheck, not because they truly want to be soldiers."

Staff Sgt. Luz S. Llanos, Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "They need to do a study to find out what's really best for the Army, but we really need more personnel."

Spc. Daniel L. Gosz, Company D, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment — "If the Army reduced benefits, you'd have fewer people enlisting — it would be a bad idea."

Sgt. Calvin Walker, U.S. Army Medical Department Activity — "Benefits should not be reduced — there are too many being reduced already, but they should start reducing personnel from the top, not the bottom."

How to spend a cool $1 million

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

COMMENTARY

As the best large installation in the Army, Fort Benning picked up a cool million to spend. Because winning the Community of Excellence title was a team effort, the command is asking soldiers and civilians for ideas on how to spend this money.

I frequently take to flights of fantasy so I had no trouble coming up with a few thoughts.

First on my list is a litter bug zapper.

I envision placing a stationary satellite over the post that would detect Burger King cups being tossed from vehicles. Upon sensing the offending vehicle, a laser beam would zap the vehicle's engine and the car wouldn't be able to drive off until Mr. Litter Bug got out and policed up his trash.

For those who insist on using Fort Benning to dump old mattresses, refrigerators, bicycles and tires, my satellite would turn their trash and their vehicle into cinder ash.

These may be harsh means, but I'm sick of picking up after people. If the satellite and laser beam are too expensive, then at least we might get some poke poles to help us during police call.

Another use for the satellite, by the way, would be for it to keep an eye out for people who pirate archeological digs. For these guys, my satellite would fry their brains and they'd forget where they were and why they were there.

I've thought of some good uses for electronics too. It's called shock treatment.

I would place a live electrical current on the ground next to a tree at the 17th T-box on the Pineside golf course. Thus whenever a male golfer with a 17-hole bladder stopped to take a whiz at this particular tree, he'd be in for quite a shock.

It wouldn't be long before they learned to hold their water for a few more minutes.

I'd also wire the seating of every seat where meetings are held.

The other day I was sentenced to attend several meetings and it soon became apparent that some people go only to complain. And it's usually the same ones every time.

Constructive criticism where a solution or at least an idea for a solution is voiced is fine. But complaint on top of complaint is more than most of us can handle.

Therefore I'd empower the chairman to crank up the voltage under the seat of the chronic whiner a few more ergs each time that person cried about something just for the sake of crying.

As I said, I'm frequently taken by flights of fantasy. But the truth is the command does want to hear from you.

Tell your commander or supervisor what ideas you have for improving the quality of life at Fort Benning. Describe the project and explain how people on post will benefit.

But do it quickly. The deadline for submitting your recommendations is June 7.

MESSAGES

CG: Be safe, enjoy this Memorial Day

Recently, a Fort Benning soldier was killed in a traffic accident. He lost control of his car and was thrown out of the vehicle.

One thing that could have saved him: seat belts!

On Monday, Americans will remember those who gave their lives for this great nation.

The weekend also marks the start of summer season activities. Too often, what begins with high expectations of fun and sun, ends in tragedy.

Traffic accidents and drowning kill more Americans in one year than all of our soldiers killed in the Vietnam Conflict.

To protect our soldiers from injury and suffering, this weekend and all summer, commanders will encourage all personnel to:

- Drive sober and be alert.
- Wear seat belts.
- Obey all traffic laws, especially the speed limit.
- Conduct a safety check of their vehicles.
- Watch out for less capable drivers.
- Drive during daylight as much as possible.
- Swim only in waters protected by lifeguards.
- Wear approved life jackets while boating.

My personal goal is to celebrate this holiday weekend without the loss of any member of the Fort Benning community.

Have an enjoyable holiday.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White
Commanding general

Defense secretary honors Americans

On Memorial Day, we gather across the length and breadth of our great country and around the world to commemorate those Americans who have died in service to their country. It is a time to remember that freedom and the way of life it affords do not come without sacrifice.

Since the dawn of our nation, many from our ranks have made the ultimate sacrifice to defend our birthright.

The echo of taps this Memorial Day reminds us that we enjoy freedom and opportunity today because of what they did in the past.

We owe it to them not to let the memory of their deeds fade. They have set an example of courage and patriotism for all of us.

I join all Americans in thanking you for your service to America and in commemorating those who have given their lives for our nation.

Les Aspin
Defense secretary

President pays tribute to nation's dead

Each Memorial Day we pause to remember that our freedom has been secured by the blood of patriots.

On Lexington Green and in battles around the world, Americans gave their lives in service to their country.

Today we honor them for that sacrifice.

We must all rededicate ourselves to upholding the freedom such sacrifice has earned us.

The men and women of today's armed forces have a special role in protecting the liberty our forefathers worked so hard to preserve.

You stand in the first line of America's defense, and your daily efforts help promote the peace and stability that allow freedom to endure.

The tradition of placing flags and flowers on graves across the world illustrates that the deeds of Americans buried there are still fresh in our memory.

Inspired by those brave men and women we honor on this occasion, let us all renew our commitment to protecting the ideals for which they gave their lives.

Bill Clinton
President

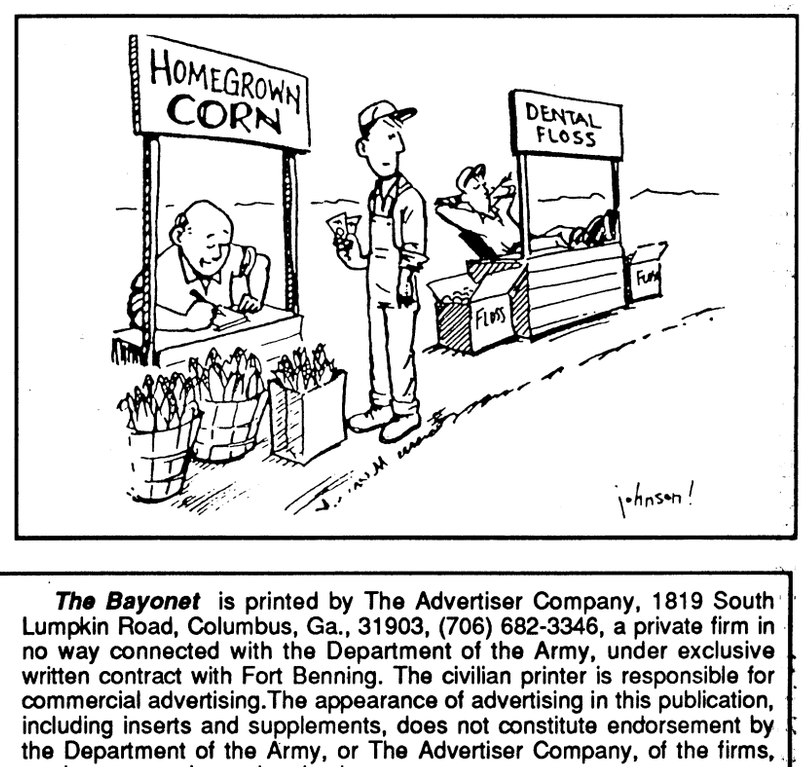
Youth baseball is still a child's game

This letter is in reference to the letter from Master Sgt. Richard E. Rhodes, titled "What About Baseball?" in the April 30 issue of The Bayonet.

My family has been here at Fort Benning for three years. My husband has coached for two years.



We have two boys, age 8 and 7. They both have played teeball and flag football for two years at the Youth Activities Center.

With the number of children on this post, the youth center has to accommodate all the children in providing the best uniforms the military budget can provide.

It also gives the children a safe place to go.

We adults must remember, this is still a child's game.

Fort Benning to work to save energy this summer

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning workers and residents may want to get their fans ready. Hot weather is approaching, and so is the season for electrical curtailment.

As part of an arrangement with Georgia Power, the Directorate of Public Works' Energy Management and Control System is used to periodically curtail, or turn off, air conditioning in post facilities.

"When Georgia Power alerts us to cut back on our power consumption," said Mark Fincher, chief of the Energy Branch, "we have 30 minutes to reduce our use to a preset limit. In return for this agreement, we save on our electrical costs year-round."

Fincher said in fiscal 1992, power was curtailed five times, for a total of 14 hours, which saved the post more than $1 million. He projects there will be seven curtailments in fiscal '93, totaling 21 hours, with a savings to the post of $1.2 million.

Fort Benning is the fourth largest single electrical consumer in Southwest Georgia, said Fincher, and the 10th largest electrical user in the state.

Curtailment is requested at peak demand times, said Fincher, to ensure Georgia Power can supply the needs of its customers statewide.

"Our summertime peak electrical use can reach levels of more than 50,000 kilowatt hours," said Fincher. "Because we can reduce our consumption, on demand, to 36,000 kwh, Georgia Power allows us to purchase electricity at a reduced rate throughout the year."

Air conditioning is shed first in administrative areas, said Fincher, and last in family housing units. "As power consumption drops, units are cycled back on as quickly as possible," he said.

Curtailment periods in fiscal 1992 ranged from two to four hours.

Projections are that curtailments this year will range from 2 to 6 hours.

Guzman was a guest instructor at SOA when the school was located at Fort Gulick, Panama.

Past duty assignments include: commander of the 2nd Army Division; deputy chief of the Joint General Staff, Military Forces Headquarters; and inspector general of the Military Forces.

Guzman, 54, is a native of San Antonio, Tolima, Colombia. He and his wife, Cecilia, have two children.

A reception followed the ceremony at the Officers' Club.

Hospital has medical cards

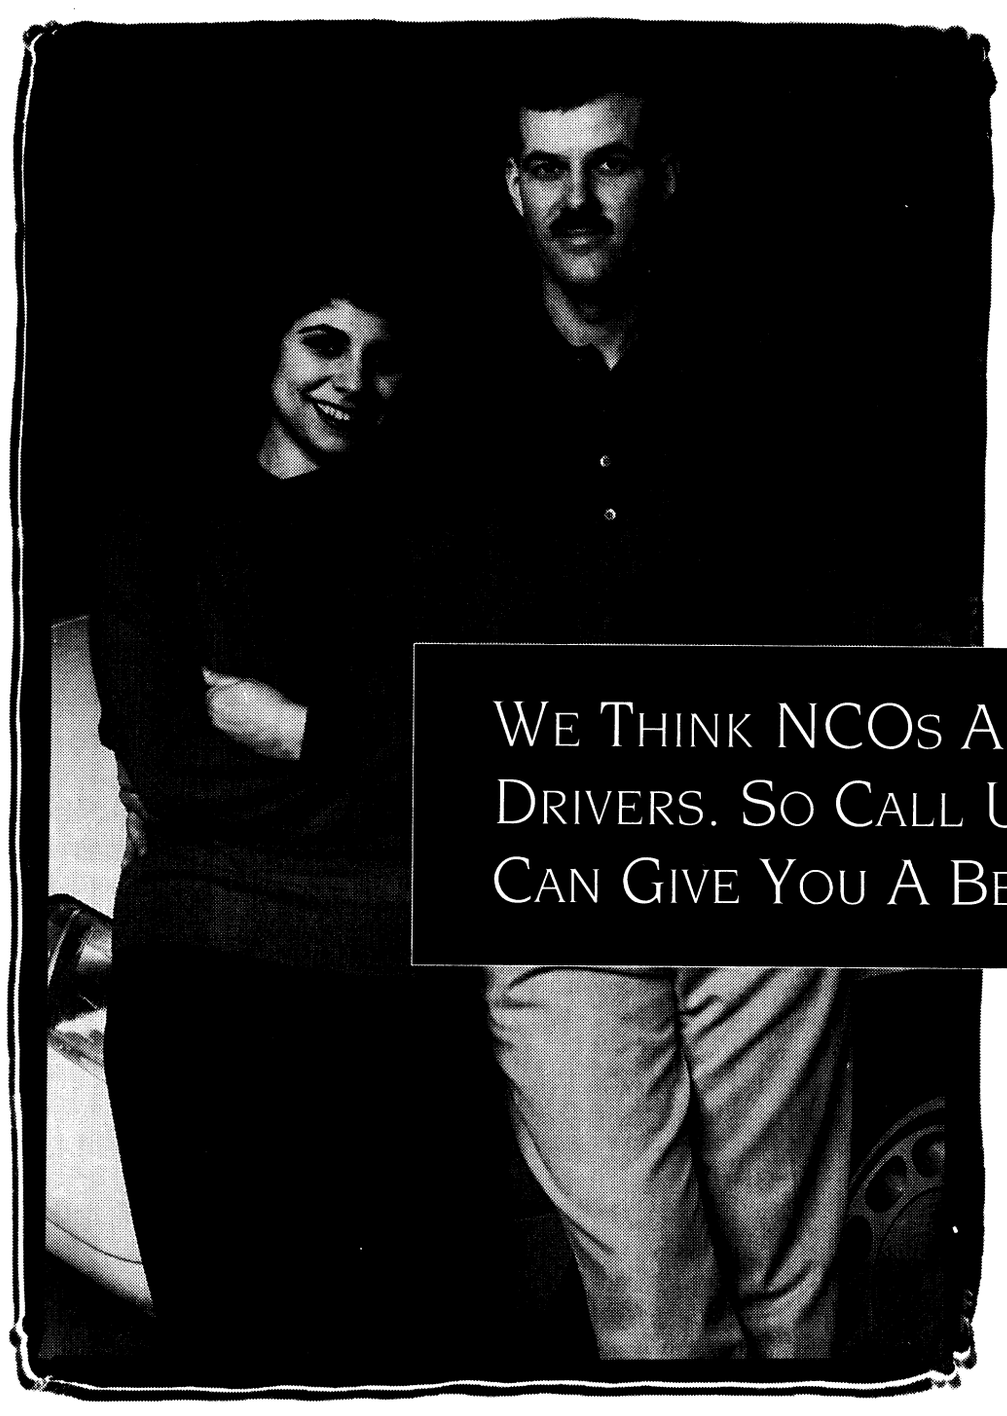
Martin Army Community Hospital

Approximately 30,000 medical recording cards have been made for beneficiaries enrolled in Martin Army Community Hospital's Gateway To Care program, according to Maj. Charles Oliver, chief of the Patient Administration Division.

These cards are color coded to identify which clinic the beneficiary is assigned and helps facilitate quicker processing of patients. Beneficiaries enrolled at the Primary Care for the Uniformed Services Family Practice Clinic will receive a silver card; those in the family practice clinic will receive a gold card; Aviation Medicine family practice patients will receive a green card; and Winder Family Practice Clinic patients will receive a copper-colored card.

Medical recording cards for active duty personnel and beneficiaries who do not choose to be empaneled into a family practice clinic will remain white.

The plastic medical recording card is used by hospital staff members and helps ensure medical documents are filed timely and correctly in the patient's medical record said Oliver.



The cards, which resemble small credit cards, contain information such as the patient's name, Social Security number, date of birth, unit of assignment, record location and other pertinent information.

Patients receiving care at the hospital or any military treatment facility are reminded that it is essential they have a current medical recording card in their possession, said Oliver.

The new color-coded medical recording cards will be distributed at the Family Practice Clinic where the beneficiary is enrolled. Active duty service members who do not have a medical recording card can receive one from the Outpatient Records Room at the hospital or request it through their assigned troop medical clinic.

Patients must remember to bring their recording card every time they have a medical appointment or require laboratory tests, medications or any other hospital services, said Oliver. The card is essential to ensuring all medical documents can be properly identified and filed.

Anyone can offer you an auto insurance policy. But at Family Protection Plus,SM we believe NCOs tend to be better drivers. So we provide highly competitive rates on policies geared to the realities of NCO family life.

WE THINK NCOS ARE BETTER DRIVERS. SO CALL US TO SEE IF WE CAN GIVE YOU A BETTER RATE.

For example, when you're transferred, your coverage follows you to most of the states where military installations are located. All it takes is a toll-free call, and we'll handle the details.

You'll also find our other features very attractive.*Like special savings if you keep your car in a storage facility while you're on a TDY. And a waiver of deductible if someone in your household has an accident while you're deployed in a war or combat zone.

If that seems like a sensible approach, there's a good reason. Family Protection Plus, created by Academy Life Insurance Company, was designed specifically for NCOs and their families. And it's recommended by NCOA®.

Savings Bonds campaign kicks off

By Barbara J. Ray
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The 1993 U.S. Savings Bond Campaign kicked off at Fort Benning May 19. The campaign runs from Tuesday to June 30.

Frank H. Barnett, U.S. Savings Bonds Division, Department of the Treasury, Atlanta, was the guest speaker, and Bobby King, Accounting Services Division, Directorate of Resource Management, represented the chief of staff.

The message, expressed by both, was for project officers and canvassers to ensure all soldiers and civilian employees are approached and given the opportunity to buy Savings Bonds or to increase the amount of bonds they already buy.

According to Barnett, people buy Savings Bonds through payroll deduction because it is an almost painless way to save money for retirement, emergencies or education.

"Savings Bonds are good for the individual and good for our country," said Barnett. "For every billion dollars of Savings Bonds sold, we, the taxpayers, save $70 million in taxes because the government doesn't have to borrow the money elsewhere."

Barnett pointed out there are no city or state taxes on Savings Bonds and federal tax is deferred until the Savings Bond is cashed.

Since 1990, the interest earned on Series EE Savings Bonds may be excluded from federal income tax if you pay tuition and fees at colleges, universities or qualified technical schools during the same year the bonds are cashed, and you meet the income limits.

In 1992, if you were single with an income of $44,150 or less or a married couple filing a joint return with an income of $66,200 or less, you may be entitled to a full exclusion.

The amount of interest that may be excluded is gradually reduced for incomes higher than the above limits.

For example, if you redeem $10,000 worth of bonds during the year but tuition and fees total only $8,000, 80 percent of the interest income can be excluded from federal income tax. The exclusion applies to the educational expenses of yourself, your spouse and any dependent.

To qualify for the interest exclusion, the bonds must be issued in the name of a person aged 24 or older before the purchase month. If the bonds are intended to benefit dependent children, they must be issued in either one or both parents' names.

The bonds cannot be issued in the name of a child as owner or co-owner, but a child may be registered as the beneficiary. The bonds can be purchased by anyone, including grandparents, but they must be registered as explained.

King and Barnett also stressed how little it takes to start a savings program by purchasing Savings Bonds through payroll deduction and how it adds up over time. Soldiers and civilian employees can have as little as $6.25 per pay period taken out.

In addition, they pointed out, Savings Bonds are risk free. If the bonds are lost, stolen or damaged, the Savings Bonds are replaced free of charge.

It is recommended you keep a list to include the serial number, name bond is issued in and the issue date of the bonds you own.

Savings Bonds are a good return on your investment according to Barnett. There is a competitive rate of interest, there are no fees or commissions and the current guaranteed interest rate on bonds bought after March 1 is 4 percent.

When Savings Bonds are held for five years or longer, there is an added perk, according to Barnett. The minimum interest earned is 4 percent or the average market rate, whichever is higher.

At the current rate of interest, bonds reach face value in 18 years. Savings Bonds can be cashed six months after they are purchased. There is no penalty or any loss of your initial investment.

For more information, contact your local project officer or call 545-4731 or 545-4729.

Lectures to point out myths about rape

By John C. Pomory
Rape Crisis Intervention Program

The Fort Benning Rape Crisis Intervention Program will sponsor a series of weekly lectures and other activities in June, which is Rape Awareness Month.

Activities include lectures and articles geared toward promoting awareness and understanding while addressing many of the myths associated with the subject.

An open house will be in the Baugh Conference Room at Martin Army Community Hospital from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Thursday, and a fund-raising bake sale at the Commissary June 5 from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. The funds raised will further the efforts of program personnel to care for the victims of rape and promote general awareness for the public.

The lectures will be in Room 22 of Building 4 (Infantry Hall) at 7 p.m. as follows:

- June 9: "Rape Trauma Syndrome" by Marsha Wolfe, executive director of Columbus Rape Crisis Inc.
- June 16: "Rape: Crime and Punishment" by Capt. Douglas Dribben of Staff Judge Advocate's Office, Randy Upton, special agent in charge, Criminal Investigation Division, and Sgt. 1st Class Hall Solomon, chief of Military Police Investigations.
- June 23: "Asking Open Questions" by Dr. Jackie Titus, associate professor of Mental Health at Columbus College.
- June 30: Self-defense and Protection (at Briant Wells Gym) by Cris Weakley, third degree black belt and certified ninjitsu instructor at the Columbus Bujinkan Dojo.

If there are any questions concerning Rape Awareness Month or the subject in general, or if you would like information about becoming a certified Red Cross Rape Crisis counselor, call 544-3213 or 545-1661.

Remember the speed limits on post are 15 mph and 10 mph when passing soldiers from 6 to 7:30 a.m. Monday through Friday.

MPs buckle down to tell others to 'buckle up'

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

The Fort Benning Military Police Activity will participate in "Hands Across the Border," a program to encourage motorists to buckle up.

The program begins today at the Welcome Center on I-85 in Lanett, Ala. at 1 p.m. Eastern Standard Time, where the officers will stay for an hour and a half visit.

"Hands Across the Border" is a joint effort by law enforcement officials from Georgia and Alabama. The officers will distribute literature, give away small gifts, refreshments and discuss safety belt use with the motoring public and the media.

The Alabama Department of Economic and Community Affairs Traffic Safety Section and the Georgia Governor's Office of Highway Safety is coordinating the event.

From Lanett, all officers will travel caravan style to the Welcome Center in West Point, Ga., to stay from 3 to 4:30 p.m.

"What the program has tried to do this year is identify all law enforcement agencies," said Staff Sgt. Jefferey F. Bishop, chief of traffic enforcement at MPA. "They're going to have county, city state agencies and the military police.

"By seeing the joint effort by all of these law enforcement agencies, people will see that we are all unified in this mission.

This program is part of "Buckle Up America Week" (May 24 to 31), which highlights the life-saving potential of safety belts, child safety seats and air bags.

"Traffic safety is a big thing to us, and we've really gotten involved with the civilian community," said Bishop. "We work closely with our civilian brother agencies.

"The organizers of the program thought that this year would be a good time to bring us (the MPA) into the program because we have a good reputation with civilian agencies because of our law enforcement efforts," he continued.

"We've been recognized all over the state. The Fort Benning Military Police has even been recognized in Atlanta at the headquarters of Georgia State Patrol. We have a low number of fatal traffic accidents and a key part of that is our traffic enforcement plan.

"We want everyone to be aware of the importance of wearing seatbelts. Seatbelts do in fact save lives. So many accidents we see where there are injuries or death could have been prevented if the person was wearing a seatbelt," said Bishop.

The following is a list of facts about seatbelt use according to the National Safety Council:

• Belt use in states with a safety belt law is generally twice as high than in those states without one.

• In 1991, if every front seat occupant had buckled up, an estimated 14,413 deaths and several hundred thousand injuries could have been prevented.

• In 1991, safety belts saved the lives of 4,682 front-seat passenger vehicle occupants more than 4 years old; 3,828 of these are associated with seat belt laws.

• Lap/shoulder safety belts reduce the risk of fatal and serious injury to front seat passengers by 45 to 55 percent. The combination of air bags with lap/shoulder belts reduces the risk of fatal or serious occupant injury by 55 to 60 percent.

Other than wearing your seatbelt, Bishop said there are two things to do to decrease chances of a fatal accident. "The majority of fatalities that we do see, alcohol is involved," said Bishop. "That is the big thing — don't drink and drive.

"Watch your speed also," he said. "Speed is another part of what we call the terrible trio in traffic accidents — drunk driving, excessive speed and failure to wear a seatbelt."

Bishop is confident that this program will have a positive effect. "I think this program will raise the public's awareness," he said.

"We really want to take part in traffic safety, so we'll do whatever it takes to get the message to the people that they have to wear their seatbelts, they need to slow down and they can't drink and drive," said Bishop. "I think the program will really work well."

Rangers to honor fallen comrade

USAIC Public Affairs Office

A memorial service will be June 6 at 10 a.m. in remembrance of Col. John T. Keneally at Camp James E. Rudder, Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., the home of the 6th Ranger Training Battalion, Ranger Training Brigade.

Keneally was killed in a helicopter crash at the Great Salt Lake, Utah, Oct. 29.

Keneally was participating in routine ranger exercises involving joint airborne and air assault training at the time of the crash.

The 43-year-old Keneally had assumed command of the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment July 8, 1991.

He entered the Army as a second lieutenant in 1971 after graduating from Seton Hall University, South Orange, N.J., in the ROTC program. He held a master's degree in management from Central Michigan University.

Keneally had a long history of ranger assignments, beginning as a platoon leader and executive officer in Company A (Ranger), 75th Infantry, 1st Cavalry Division.

He served as an instructor at the Florida Ranger Camp, was an operations officer and company commander in the 1st Ranger Battalion and commanded the 6th Ranger Battalion at Eglin Air Force Base.

Before that, he was director of Ranger Special Operation Forces at the Pentagon.

He also served in the 101st Airborne Division at Fort Campbell, Ky., and was an airborne company commander in the 3rd Battalion, 5th Infantry, 193rd Infantry Brigade, Fort Kobbe, Canal Zone.

His awards include the Legion of Merit and three Meritorious Service Medals.

He earned the Expert Infantryman Badge, Master Parachutist Badge, Army Staff Identification Badge, Pathfinder Badge and the Ranger Tab.

Keneally was born in Summit, N.J. He is survived by his wife, Barbara, and two daughters, Jennifer and Kathleen, as well as his parents, John T. and Marie Keneally of Summerville, S.C.

Post caterers ready to serve

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

From wedding receptions to hail and farewell parties, the Fort Benning Officers' Club Catering Office is ready, willing and able to provide full and affordable service for a variety of social functions.

What's more, said Alex Kovras, catering manager, the Catering Office has moved to a new, easily accessible office and is offering a greatly expanded list of services.

"The Catering Office is a full service operation dedicated to serving the members of Fort Benning's officer community," said Kovras. "We will go to any length to satisfy the needs of our customers for a catering event."

The office is still located in the Officers' Club but is now downstairs near the cashier's window. In addition to a display of many of the items that are offered, including a silver service and china place settings, the office has a color photo album featuring snapshots of some recent catering functions.

"Our customers can look at the photos and see what kind of service they will be getting before they actually make the purchase," Kovras said.

The menu has been greatly expanded and is regularly updated to reflect customers tastes. From a keg of beer and chips and dip to champagne and coq au vin, the current 12-page menu features something for every taste and budget, said Kovras, including a create your own buffet style service.

Kovras

"I have seen downtown catering services offer a create-your-own buffet for $17.40. Ours is only $10.95 per person, a substantial savings. We give real value to our customers, and that's what we are here for," Kovras said.

The Catering Office also provides many items free of charge with the purchase of catering services, including podiums, microphones, overhead projectors, place settings and a silver service.

In addition, the Catering Office serves as a one-stop place to shop by offering the capability to book related services and items for the customer's convenience, such as photographers, balloons and flower arrangements. A variety of custom-made cakes is also offered.

If you need a suitable place to conduct your function, every room in the Officers' Club is available, including the main hall, and the Normandy, Corregidor and Benning Rooms. The Supper Club, swimming pools and Bradley's can also be reserved.

"Bradley's is one of the most sophisticated clubs in the area and features an automated sound and light system, a smoke machine and lit bricks of glass," said Kovras. "It's an ideal setting for informal functions."

Kovras said there is practically no limit to the services offered and the types of functions that can be served. These include hail and farewells, dining-ins, wedding receptions, luncheons, awards banquets, pool parties, unit and family get-togethers and any other formal and informal social functions.

"We are here to get the best possible services and prices for our customers," said Kovras. "I extend a cordial invitation to you to consider us for all of your catering needs. Even if you are not sure exactly what you want, come in and let us show you what we have to offer."

The catering office is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and can be reached at 687-1861.

How should Fort Benning spend $1 million?

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

We're the best large installation in the Army, and we're getting an award check to prove it. The question now is, how should we spend $1 million?

Sarah McLaney, Community of Excellence officer for Fort Benning, said Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White and Chief of Staff Col. Burnet R. Quick are looking for suggestions from the community on how to spend the money.

"We're asking the community to respond," said McLaney. "We've sent out a memorandum to all units and directorates on post, asking them to suggest projects to be funded with the winnings. We would also like individuals to submit their ideas."

"Community participation is encouraged," she said, "and may be handled through the Community of Excellence Office at the Directorate of Resource Management."

Suggestions may be submitted on the accompanying clip-out form.

McLaney said suggestions should be based on improving quality of life for the entire community — projects that support soldiers, their families and the civilian work force.

Title and description of suggested projects should be submitted to McLaney at the Directorate of Resource Management no later than June 7.

"We'll compile a list of suggestions," said McLaney, "and forward them to the commanding general and the chief of staff for consideration."

McLaney said the post will receive the prize money around Jan. 15.

ARMY FAMILY ACTION PLAN ISSUES

Garrison Commander's Office

More than 100 issues and questions were presented for action, comment or status to the garrison and installation staff at the Fort Benning Family Action Symposium recently.

Following is a continuation of the questions posed to the Directorate of Community Activities and the answers provided.

Q: What activities are being planned for children and teens this summer?

A: Activities planned include field trips to Columbus and Atlanta, 1/2-day summer camp for 6- through 12-year-olds, swimming lessons, craft classes, tournaments and dances.

A summer calendar of activities has been distributed to installation schools.

Q: Can Operation Holiday activities be continued year-round?

A: Operation Holiday was a cooperative effort between the Association of the U.S. Army, DCA and local merchants from the surrounding communities to provide activities and discounts for personnel who, because of their duties or other reasons, were not able to take advantage of Christmas holiday leave. It is not realistic to think that merchants are willing to provide these discounts and support to the entire installation on a year-round basis.

Q: Can youth programs and sports for children under 5 be expanded?

A: Five-year-olds will be included in the tee-ball (baseball) program in March. Presently soccer, ballet and tap dancing are available for 4- and 5-year-olds, and swim lessons will be available during the summer.

Q: Can daily child-care hours be expanded for families who work past 5 p.m.?

A: All child development centers are currently open until 6:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Tot Town is also open Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights by reservation. Certified Family Child Care homes provide care for parents who need regular care outside the normal center operating hours.

Child Development Services periodically surveys patrons to determine patron needs. There has not been a documented demand for care later than 6:30 p.m.

If survey results and patron requests indicate that family child-care homes are not adequately meeting soldiers' needs, CDS will explore the option of changing center hours.

Q: How are youth activities advertised?

A: Youth Activities publishes a monthly calendar of events available in each center. Special events are advertised in fliers, on marquees and in The Bayonet.

Q: When will medication administration be instituted at day-care centers?

A: The chief of staff has approved the decision to allow center staff and certified family child-care providers to administer medication. Community Health Nursing is in the process of preparing a standard operating procedure and list of authorized medications.

The new policy was expected to be implemented May 15.

Q: Can separate times be established for different age groups at youth centers?

A: Yes, a designated time frame can be established by age group. This recommendation can be implemented by September for the 1993-1994 school year.

The summer months will be used to advertise and prepare families for the change.

Information will be available in The Bayonet, marquee messages and fliers to school and community offices.

Q: Can money be saved by sending youth services fliers home with students in on-post schools?

A: Fliers and calendars are already being distributed through on-post schools each month.

Q: Is there an after-school program or day-care center with transportation available?

A: Child Development Services offers a before- and after-school program in Building 1056, with transportation provided to and from all post elementary schools.

An on-site after-school program is offered at Wilbur school, and Tot Town also offers after-school care and transportation.

Many family child-care providers offer after-school care and provide transportation or meet children at bus stops.

The Fort Benning school administration has been very willing to change school assignments based on availability of after-school care.

Q: What child-care options are available for parents who work shifts or on weekends?

A: Many certified family child-care homes offer care 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Tot Town offers care on weekends by advance reservation, and is willing to open weeknights or to extend operating hours to cover odd work shifts if there is enough demand and parents will guarantee usage.

Q: Why is there a cost difference between Tot Town and other centers?

A: Rates for all military regularly-scheduled child-care services are determined based on a family's total income. Fee categories and rates are established by the Department of Defense.

All Army full-day care centers, part-day preschool programs and before- and after-school programs must use this fee scale.

Tot town provides hourly care or drop-in child-care services. Rates are a flat rate or cost per hour of service.

Q: Can the youth services monthly calendar be published in The Bayonet?

A: A calendar of youth services activities is printed in The Bayonet.

Q: Can more family child-care providers be found to accommodate physical training hours?

A: The maximum number of family child-care homes authorized on an installation is based on staff case load. Fort Benning is authorized 65 family child-care homes.

We currently have 51 active homes and 14 more in the process of being certified.

Family child-care homes are actually small businesses and can determine their own operating hours.

The Child Development Services staff will request and encourage providers to open early for PT, and as vacancies occur, the staff will recruit and certify those individuals who agree to provide early morning care.

Q: Can you provide a fact sheet on how Youth Activities money is accounted for? Specifically, what is your policy in reference to statements of charges, deposits for team uniforms and clearing Youth Activities prior to a permanent change of station or expiration of term of service? What is your enforcement plan for the above policies?

A: Sports fees collected annually are about $20,600. $14,500 is spent on sports officials or referees, $35,000 for replacement of uniforms and support equipment.

Youth Activities are operating at a loss (cost) to the Single Fund due to insufficient revenues. Payments for Youth Activities are deposited and recorded on a Daily Activity Report, which is used by the Central Accounting Office to prepare a monthly accounting statement.

When an individual makes a payment, a Form 1992 is filled out with one copy going to the customer, one copy for file and one copy forwarded with the Daily Activity Reports to the Central Accounting Office.

The Adjutant General has been contacted to provide youth services with a monthly PCS and ETS roster and a flag is attached if uniforms have not been returned.

A statement of charges is submitted if uniforms are not returned within 30 days.

Q: What is the policy concerning policing around vacant quarters?

A: The policy concerning "policing" is referenced in U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 210-5, Garrison Regulations, Section VI.

The proponent for this regulation is the Directorate of Public Works, not the Directorate of Community Activities. DPW maintains a list of all unoccupied quarters, and the quarters and their surroundings are the responsibility of DPW.

FECA: Post to reduce costs

According to Pennington, Fort Benning has taken a proactive approach to reducing compensation costs for civilian employees.

"We established a Civilian Injury Reduction Team in 1991," she said. "Its purpose is to reduce FECA costs across the board — from medical expenses for new injuries to long-term compensation paid to disabled workers."

The team consists, Pennington said, of experts in safety, occupational health and personnel.

"They analyze circumstances surrounding injuries, and come up with ways to reduce them," she said. "This can range from safety measures in the workplace to adjusting job requirements to meet the needs of disabled workers."

Pennington said the team's efforts have already paid off. "In fiscal 1992, we experienced a 43 percent reduction in civilian injuries," said Pennington. "TRADOC's goal is to reduce costs in all areas by 2 percent."

Pennington credits Dan Fusco, FECA administrator with the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, with much of the progress the post has made in holding down costs.

"He works with employees, managers, doctors and rehabilitation services to determine how to bring an employee back to work," said Pennington. "Sometimes it's necessary to create new jobs for workers who are no longer able to perform their previous jobs — for instance, someone who drove a tractor may need to be brought back in a clerk capacity. Fusco works to make that happen."

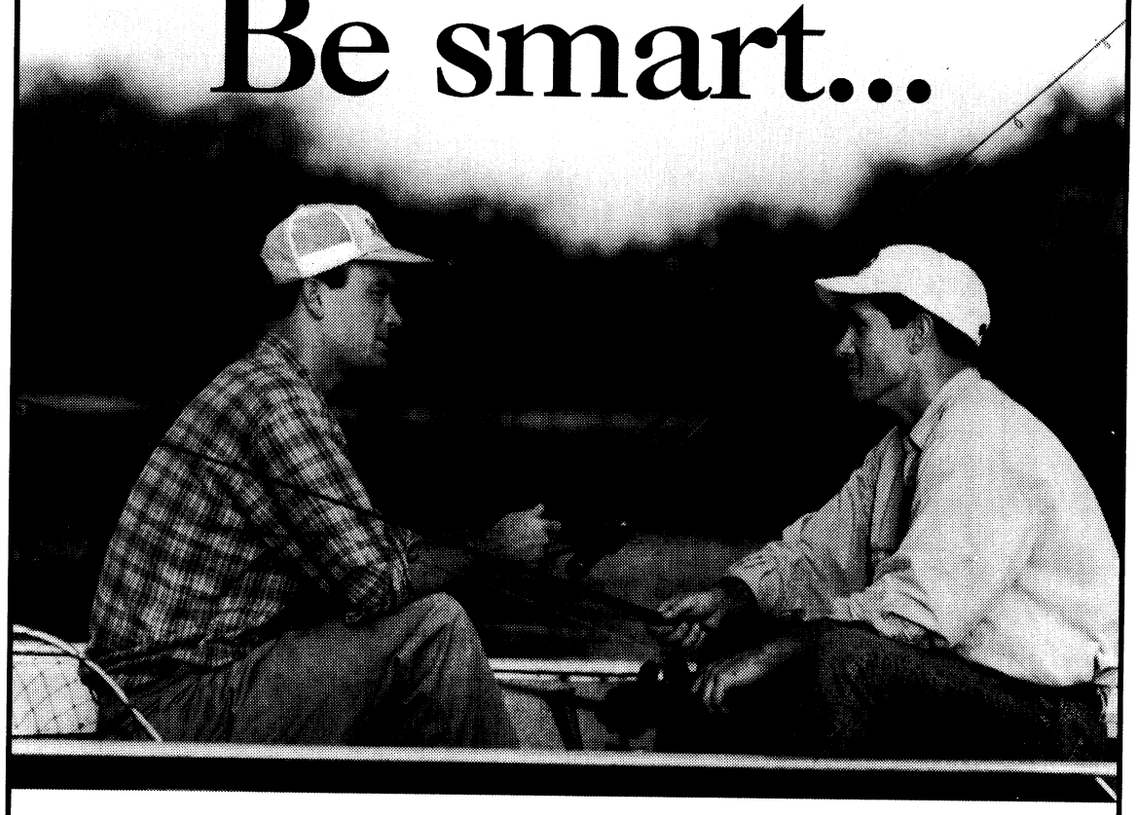
"We also have a person on-site at Martin Army Community Hospital," said Pennington. "Her name is Mary Ann Wilson, and she works to encourage civilians injured on the job to take advantage of the medical facilities here, rather than paying for care from private physicians. We saved more than $120,000 in 1992 through her efforts, and project savings of $180,000 in fiscal '93."

Pennington said Fusco's efforts in helping employees return to work have also resulted in significant savings.

"He has helped return seven people to work in five months," she said. "This means that we have productive, contributing employees instead of disabled workers. Since the average cost of compensation for a disabled worker is $26,000 per year, these cases could have been very costly for the directorates involved."

Pennington said efforts to curb the cost of civilian injuries will continue. The next phase will be the implementation of a home-visitation program, she said.

"This will help us keep in touch with our injured workers, gauge their progress and help keep their motivation up," she said.



"We also need to eliminate workplace safety hazards, conduct accident prevention training and investigate all injuries," said Pennington

"The compensation system was designed to help people who are injured on the job," said Fusco. "Our job is to make the system as cost-efficient as possible, and see that the program is not abused."

Iron man seeks 'nationals' title

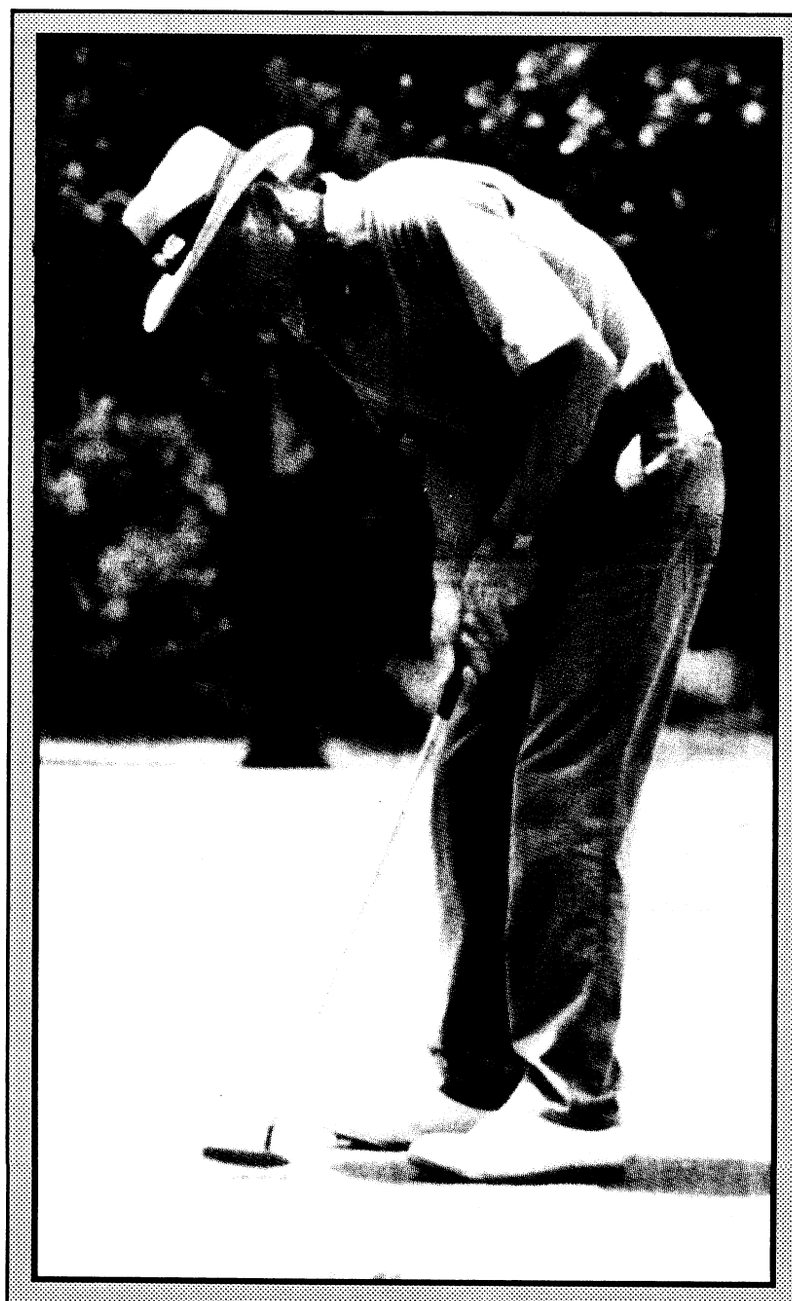
For Leon Johnson, the upcoming Mr. and Ms. Fort Benning bodybuilding championships may be his third and final shot at winning the title.

Johnson, first sergeant with Company B, 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, will give it one last shot before taking a two-year break to prepare for the nationals.

"I need to gain a little size and mass. For me to do that, I need to take some time off from competing and concentrate on training just for that ," said Johnson.



After five competitions so far this year, Johnson has not placed lower than third in any competition and, he said, the competition is getting much stiffer along with the entrance fees.

Johnson currently works out for about an hour each day, he said, concentrating on different major muscle groups throughout the week.

"Last year, when I was training for the Mr. and Ms. Fort Benning championship, Otis Sistrunk was personally overseeing my workout schedule, training and diet," said Johnson. "I still stay pretty much with that regimen.

"Right now I'm looking for a sponsor to help defray the cost of entering the competitions," he said. "I know I can do well and it can only benefit whoever may take me on," said Johnson. "I could also do trade-outs for whoever sponsored me if it happened to be a place like a particular gym or whoever. As much competing as I do, it would certainly give them some recognition in the two states that I compete in."

After the Mr. and Ms. Fort Benning competition June 5 at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center, Johnson will take a three- to four-month hiatus before beginning his two-year quest for the nationals.

Big bass easy to overlook

Outboard Marine Corporation

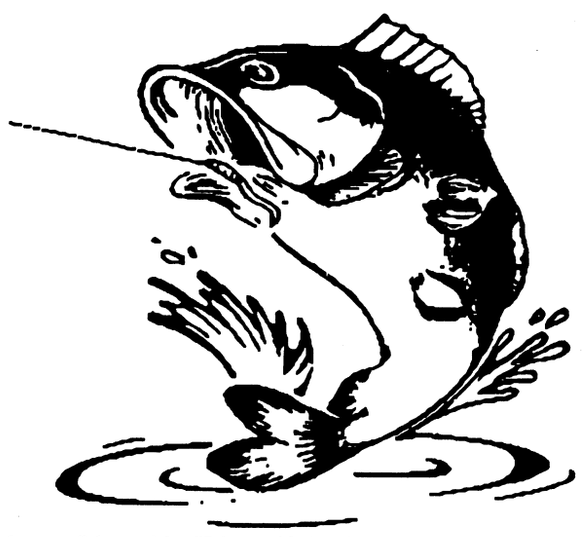
Big bass often hide in inconspicuous places.

Every bass angler wants to catch larger fish, but identifying the specific places these fish live isn't easy.

In fact, Ron Shuffield, professional angler, said big bass frequently stay in inconspicuous places that many anglers overlook.

"You have to slow down and really pay attention to the water you're fishing," said the Arkansas pro, "because big bass often stay away from obvious cover like the stumps and fallen logs above the surface. Instead, they'll hide by underwater stumps and logs — you won't see them unless you're really looking for them.

"As I fish, I constantly look ahead for little twigs that may actually be part of a larger treetop underwater, or a stump or rock pile that's covered. Those are the places you find big bass."



Most tournament pros, said Shuffield, don't think about catching really big bass during a tournament, so they don't pay close attention to the possible places these fish may live. They're far more concerned with catching any size bass so they'll have something to show at the weigh-in stand.

"We fish very quickly and just try to cover as much water as possible," said Shuffield. "That's why few truly big bass are ever weighed in during tournaments. Fishing for big bass takes time, which we seldom have in competition."

Another place to look for big bass, he said, is around isolated cover, such as small patches of vegetation that may be separated from a larger patch of similar vegetation just a few yards away.

"I've caught big bass hiding beside what appeared to be a single green reed sticking out of the water," he said," and under logs that had become waterlogged and settled out away from the shore. Many times there isn't anything else around them.

"I often get the impression really big bass are loners," he said. "It's as if they've taken over a piece of property and won't let any other bass around. This isn't always the case, of course, but I've seen it numerous times."

Shuffield also emphasizes that big bass can be very selective in the lures they bite.

His own favorite big bass lures are heavy spinnerbaits and jigs, and at certain times of the year, a deep-diving crankbait. He cautions, however, that each of these lures must be fished slowly and deliberately around cover.

"If I believe a big bass is holding around a choice piece of cover, I may make 10, 12 or even 15 casts to the same spot," he says. "By that time, I'm not trying for a reflex strike anymore. I'm simply trying to agitate the bass into hitting, and sometimes it may be the only way you can get a strike."

"Another interesting fact I've noticed about big bass," he said, "is that most of them don't strike lures very hard, either. It's as if they're trying to make their bite as inconspicuous as the place they live."

Ex-Ms. World to visit post

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Former Ms. Olympia and Ms. World title holder Carla Dunlap Kaan is coming to Fort Benning June 2 and 3 to talk about bodybuilding, fitness, nutrition and exercise.

Dunlap began bodybuilding in 1980 and has amassed a long list of bodybuilding titles both as an amateur and a professional.

In 1983, Dunlap won the World Professional Bodybuilding Championships, the Caesars World Cup Invitational, and her Ms. Olympia title.

Since then she has starred in the movies "Pumping Iron II — The Women," and "Women of Iron," and has appeared on talk shows such as "Donahue" and "Good Morning America" as a spokeswoman for fitness and bodybuilding.

She has also been ESPN's color commentator for the World Olympic Lifting Championships, Men's World Championships and Universe Championships, among others, since 1986.

Dunlap, who calls herself a "career athlete," began her career in sports as a gymnast and competed in swimming at the junior national level.

Club pulls in some 'heavy ' bass

Fort Benning Bass Club

The Fort Benning Bass Club monthly tournament was May 16 at West Point Lake with 13 people participating.

There were 18 fish caught and 16 fish released with a total weight of 54 pounds and 6 ounces.

First-place honors went to Bob Billman with a total of 12 pounds, 12 ounces. Pat Readon came in second with 3 pounds, 12 ounces. Third place was taken by Miguel Aviles with 7 pounds. The big fish pot was taken by Billman with 5 pounds, 12 ounces.

The club conducts a tournament every month and the next tournament will be Friday night, June 11, at Lake Harding, Alabama.

The Fort Benning Bass Club sponsors and participates in a number of civic functions throughout the year. Anyone interested in becoming a member may contact Jack R. Pines at 687-8000, or attend one of the club's meetings the second and fourth Tuesday of each month at Building 1796 at 7:30 p.m. Boaters and non-boaters are welcome.

IN MEMORY

Remember heroes and victims of war

By George W. Holston
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Memory is a fascinating gift. People and events etch themselves into our souls and there they remain forever. We cannot forget, we can only choose not to recall the memory. In the face of this, we are given gifts to spark our memories.

There is a special place just a stone's throw from the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, D.C., the Vietnam Memorial.

From a distance, the first glance does not betray the unusual nature of the location. When one comes closer the impact of this memorial begins to sink in. This is holy ground. The names etched in the black granite call out to the faces of the passers by reflected in its surface. Those whose names are inscribed there seem to call out to the visitors, "Remember us!"

I personally know two of the names preserved for eternity in that memorial. In my visits to this shrine, I feel as though I have heard the voices of my friends. So I remember.

Memorial Day is a time when we stop to remember those who have paid the ultimate price for our way of life. A wreath will be placed at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. There will be parades and patriotic speeches. Families will go to the beach and on picnics to celebrate the beginning of summer. Life will go on.

REFLECTIONS

Another memorial has just opened in Washington. This memorial does not recall a heroic time in our history, yet it commemorates many incidents of heroism. The Holocaust Museum points out to us the lowest point in human history. It is critically important that we pause to remember the victims of the Holocaust. There are those who attempt to minimize the tragic loss the human race experienced in the Holocaust: or, worse, who say the Holocaust never happened. One only has to pay attention to the news to realize that the Holocaust continues. The difference is that genocide is now cloaked in the "respectable" term of "ethnic cleansing."

The reality of the Holocaust is that unless I make a conscious choice to remember the horror, then I secretly condone the acts that rob the human race of a culture, a people and their stories, collective and individual. For this reason I am aware of a stirring within my soul.

I discover that I want to stand with the oppressed. To cry out with the Jews "Never Again!" As I cry out, I wonder in the depths of my heart, "Am I a Jew?"

Perhaps this is the hidden intention behind Memorial Day. We set aside one day as Memorial Day in order to understand that every day is remembrance day.

Pentecost is day of Spirit

By Ivery De La Cruz
USAIC Chaplains' Office

"Go ye therefore, and teach all nations." "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." (Mark 16:15). The great commission was given to some very frightened people. What an awesome task. This was the beginning of Christianity throughout the world. How could such a job be accomplished by mere human beings without an earthly leader?

But the disciples were not left alone with this great task of spreading the gospel. Jesus promised them, "I will be with you always, to the close of the age." (Matthew 28:20) How would Jesus be with them? He instructed them to wait in Jerusalem, until they were "clothed with power from on high." (Luke 24: 49)

"Clothed with power from on high." What could this possibly mean and how could or would it happen? No one knew, they waited as instructed.

Acts chapter 2 states, "When the day of Pentecost had come, they were all together in one place. And suddenly a sound come from heaven like the rush of a mighty wind, and it filled the house where they were sitting.

"And there appeared to them tongues like fire, distributed and resting on each one of them. They were filled with the Holy Spirit and began to speak in other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance."

The gift of the Spirit came to those waiting disciples on the day of Pentecost. Pentecost was an important annual festival of the Jewish people. Pentecost is a Greek word that means 50th indicating that the observance came on the 50th day after the Passover. The Hebrew name means 'Feast of Weeks," referring to the passage of 49 days, a week of weeks (7x7), between the two feasts.

This festival was originally an agricultural event marking the end of the wheat and barley harvest (Leviticus 23:15-21).

Ralph W. Decker, in "A Study of Acts and Romans," points out that Pentecost was the turning point for the followers of Jesus. He writes, "The Holy Spirit had existed from the beginning and had always been in the world. The presence and activity of the Spirit of God are mentioned frequently in the Old Testament and in the records of Jesus' life and work.

"Now this same Spirit was coming in a new and remarkable way. The experience came to the group rather than to individuals, remained as a permanent endowment, and it brought a power that completely transformed those who received it."

Just as the Spirit transformed the disciples into bold witnesses at Pentecost, our lives can also be transformed by that same Spirit. We, too, are part of that great commission that Jesus gave so long ago. A weak, stumbling, Christian who becomes filled with the Holy Spirit may give a vibrant testimony that makes an impact for the cause of Christ.

This Sunday, churches around the world will celebrate Pentecost Sunday. We must remember that the secret to all Christian success is in the outpouring of God's Holy Spirit.

We must also remember that the purpose of this spiritual outpouring is to make witnesses for Christ in the home church, in the neighboring community and to the uttermost parts of the earth.

CRIME WATCH

Military Police Activity

The following entries were taken from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from May 4 to 10. Such entries may be incomplete and are not the adjudication of the guilt or innocence of any person.

This week's hot topic concerns proper display of the American flag in the housing areas. Title 4 of the U.S. Code states that the American flag should not be flown during inclement weather

If the flag becomes unserviceable (faded or torn), it should be replaced and properly discarded.

If you fly the flag during the hours of darkness, a spotlight must be used to illuminate it. A street light or porch light does not meet this requirement. If you intend to display our nation's colors, do so proudly and properly.

• A staff sergeant reported that persons unknown stole his identification card and used it to cash $1,200 in forged checks at Army and Air Force Exchange Service facilities.

• A private was charged with aggravated assault after he hit another soldier several times with a crutch.

• A sergeant first class was charged by civil authorities with disorderly conduct and discharging a firearm within city limits after he fired a pistol in the air during an argument with his ex-wife.

• A specialist was charged with assault and communicating a threat after hitting his wife during a domestic dispute and threatening her with a gun if she reported the incident to the military police.

• A family member reported that persons unknown broke into his quarters and stole a display case and two crystal figurines.

• A private was charged with damage to government property and larceny of private property after he broke into several wall lockers and stole approximately $470.

• Two privates were charged with attempted larceny of private property and underage drinking after they were observed removing two bicycles from a fenced yard.

• Two sergeants and a specialist were charged by civil authorities with disorderly conduct after using obscene language and attempting to start a fight in a local shopping mall.

• A sergeant was charged with rape, indecent acts with a child, and sodomy after assaulting two juvenile girls.

• A private first class reported that persons unknown stole his wallet from an unsecured wall locker at a post gymnasium.

• A private first class was charged with assault after he threw a bottle and hit his wife during a domestic dispute.

This week's booby prize is awarded to the private who, after several unsuccessful advances toward a female patron at the Hidden Door Club, hit her in the jaw. A civilian attempted to assist the female and was also hit by the private.

Another civilian attempted to escort the private to the manager's office and was hit by the private while doing so.

Upon arrival of the military police, the soldier was apprehended and identified as being 19 years of age. He was administered a breathalyzer test with a result of .17.

Other activities on post included 20 traffic accidents and six reports of shoplifting at facilities on post.

There were three cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, 12 cases of larceny of private property and three cases of larceny of government property.

Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best — Give Crime Arrest."

Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5223 or the "Crime in Progress" line at 545-2222.

ASK THE JUDGE

Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: I am buying a new house in the area. A friend of mine mentioned something about the Home Owners Warranty Program. What is this and how does it help me as a new home owner?

A: The Home Owners' Warranty is a program to provide new home buyers with a builder's warranty backed by insurance. The program is administered by the Home Owners Warranty Corporation. The HOW warranty is offered by member builders of the National Association of Home Builders of new homes in Georgia, among other states.

The program works as follows: At the time of closing, the builder and buyer sign the HOW agreement, which sets forth the rights and obligations of the parties.

In general, the agreement provides that the builder warrants against defects in workmanship and materials for one year, defects in the electrical, plumbing, heating and cooling systems, and ventilation systems for two years, and major structural defects for 10 years. The buyer is protected by warranty insurance if the builder fails to correct defects covered by the agreement.

When a defect covered by the warranty arises, the home owner first sends a clear and specific written complaint to both the builder and HOW. If the home owner believes the builder has not corrected the defect as requested in the complaint, the owner then submits a Request for Warranty Performance directly to HOW. This must be done within one year of the date of the initial written complaint.

Once HOW receives the Request for Warranty Performance, it gives the builder a chance to respond. If the builder disagrees with the request, HOW arranges for an informal dispute settlement between the home owner and the builder by a neutral third party known as the dispute settler.

The builder is bound by the dispute settler's decision. Within 45 days of the decision, the home owner must sign and return to HOW an acceptance of the decision. However, the home owner need only accept those items decided in his favor. The builder must perform as required by the decision.

Once the builder finishes repairing or replacing the defect, or reimburses the home owner for the cost of repairing or replacing the defect, a full release of all legal obligations with respect to the defect must he signed by the home owner and delivered to the builder.

HOW is neither a warrantor nor insurer of this warranty. Rather, the HOW insurance company is the party responsible for repairing or replacing defective items in the event that the builder defaults on the warranty.

In the event that the home buyer sells the house within 10 years, the remaining HOW protection is automatically transferred to the new owner for the rest of the unexpired term. The builder pays for the cost of the HOW, including insurance premiums. However, the cost may be passed on to the buyer in the price of the house.

Before purchasing the warranty, home buyers should consider its cost and the list of defects covered by the warranty. This is a limited warranty, which means not all defects are covered. The HOW program is not recommended for everyone.

If you have any additional questions about the HOW program, call the Legal Assistance Office at 545-3281 or 545-3282 and make an appointment with an attorney.

Summer's a great time for exercise

By Sarah Van Eden
Martin Army Community Hospital

Summer is the best time to slim your figure for two reasons — you're more likely to get out and exercise and you're more conscious of the extra padding you might have acquired during the colder months.

A reduction in exercise is often the main reason a person gains weight, especially when the decrease in activity is not accounted for with a decrease in food intake.

As you know, the more you exercise, the fewer calories you have to cut to take weight off or keep it off. Also with exercise, the increase in calories expended may allow for a few extra calories for some of those "favorite" foods without putting on additional weight.

The most beneficial combination for shedding those unwanted pounds is decreased caloric intake and aerobic exercise to keep the muscles firm and the heart and blood vessels healthy. Safe, steady weight loss of 1 to 2 pounds a week is a realistic goal.

Many forms of exercise are available to prevent boredom from the 'same old routine.'

To establish an exercise program that is tailored to your needs, you must begin by assessing your goals, preferences and limitations. What are your goals in undertaking exercise; what do you want it to do for you?

If you are looking for an increase in caloric expenditure, improved cardiovascular fitness or help in coping with stress, aerobic exercise is the type of exercise you need — jogging, biking, swimming or walking.

Strength calisthenics and weight training can help improve performance in a specific sport, reshape or tone the body, and improve flexibility. Even recreational exercise such as walking 18 holes on the golf course can help burn calories and strengthen the body.

Next you need to ask yourself what are your preferences. If you do not like jogging, this would not be a good choice because it is likely to be discontinued.

The best form of exercise is an aerobic activity you enjoy and can do regularly. Good choices might include walking, biking, aerobic dance or swimming.

But what about those familiar excuses or barriers to exercise? Are you too busy? Childcare problems? Low motivation? There is always a possible solution to a common barrier.

For example, schedules can be arranged to make time for exercise. After all, exercise can improve the quality of life through better health. A babysitter is not necessarily needed either. Children can take part in a walking program in a stroller or, if old enough, they can walk also. Children need exercise too.

Support from a family member or friend can help keep motivation up. Work with a friend to meet at a certain time or plan rewards so you don' t back out of the activity.

The most important tip for anyone trying to control his or her weight is to keep active. Exercise should be a part of a daily routine. The key is variety, motivation and enjoyment in the activity.

JUMPMASTERS

'Black hats' go to Italy

By A. Scott Lawrence
3rd Bn, 35th Airborne Combat Team

VICENZA, Italy — For five soldiers assigned to the U.S. Army Airborne School's Jumpmaster Branch, a recent deployment here may have meant a change of scenery, but it wasn't a change of pace.

In addition to teaching the Jumpmaster Branch resident course at Fort Benning, "black hat" instructors often deploy as a Mobile Training Team to reduce costs for units with jumpmaster requirements.

"It's cost effective for the unit," said Sgt. 1st Class William Melendez, chief instructor for the Jumpmaster Branch. "The unit saves money by bringing a small team, in this case five guys, to train 50 soldiers, than sending 50 guys to Benning."

The branch usually runs five to seven MTTs a year in addition to approximately 12 resident courses. Regardless of location, however, training remains the same — by standards outlined in the U.S. Army Jumpmaster's Program of Instruction.

Most recently, the branch offered select soldiers of the 3rd Battalion, 325th Infantry Regiment (Airborne Combat Team) stationed here, the opportunity to become certified jumpmasters.

For Blue Falcon jumpmaster candidates, the grueling two-week long cram session known as the jumpmaster course began April 12. It included all jumpmaster tasks presented through periods of intensive instruction followed by "hands on" practical exercises and later exacting examinations.

"From the moment we started until graduation everything was tough," said Staff Sgt. Christopher Sheets, a recent graduate. "You're either studying or doing, but it's constant."

During the first week, known as ground week, jumpmaster candidates were oriented to Army and Air Force aircraft, and learned the responsibilities of Army jumpmasters and Drop Zone Support Teams among other things.

The focus of ground week, however, was on the Jumpmaster Personnel Inspection.

"Everything else in the course revolves around JHPI," said Staff Sgt. Robert Head, a Jumpmaster Branch instructor.

"When you're dealing with JMPI you're dealing with the soldier's life," he said. "It's our responsibility as jumpmasters to ensure each jumper's equipment is properly rigged and that there's no technical deficiencies with the equipment."

Head added that the number one stumbling block for jumpmaster candidates is the JMPI examination.

The examination is a timed event where each student must follow a prescribed sequence to detect faulty equipment or rigging of three successive jumpers. As students work against the four minute and 30 second time limit, they must follow JHPI sequence and standards to the letter, to include calling out deficiencies in proper jumpmaster terms.

"It's definitely the most stressful part of the course," said Sgt. David Struckman, of Company B. "You'd be practicing it over and over and over and wouldn't break the time limit and you thought you'd never made it."

After the JNPI examination, those candidates who survived to take on jump week continued cramming for written examinations, conducted Drop Zone Operation practical exercises, and prepared for the next major hurdle — the "Actions in the Air" evaluation.

The highlight of jump week for most candidates, the "Actions in the Air" evaluation required students to use their new skills and knowledge in the demanding test conditions of a high-performance aircraft cruising 1,200 feet above ground level.

"The day prior to actual testing we take the students up for an orientation flight," Melendez said. "That gives them a chance to practice their outside air safety checks and lets them build confidence and get used to working next to an open door."

During testing, students are evaluated on properly checking the jump door for safety, making correct and sequenced outside air safety checks and correctly issuing all jump commands. Again precision is key as candidates may lose points for minor infractions such as not having all their fingers together on a given command.

"It makes sense though," Struckman said of the tough grading. "Because if you're a jumper, you're nervous anyway, and then if you see a jumpmaster doing something different, or wrong, you might lose confidence. We have to be confident and correct."

Thousands test medical skills in 4-day training exercise

118th Public Affairs Detachment,
Tennessee Army National Guard

CAMP SHELBY, Miss. — Nearly 6,000 soldiers and airmen from more than 50 units representing 16 states converged here for a four-day field training exercise designed to test the capabilities of medical and support personnel.

According to one of its planners, Celtic Cross '93 allowed Reserve component and active duty personnel to perform in "a wartime environment." The exercise brought together Army and Air National Guard; Army and Air Reserve as well as active military personnel primarily from the Southeast to train in all aspects of battlefield military medical operations.

The exercise featured units ranging from small detachments to brigades and medical groups with troops numbering in the thousands.

Lt. Col. Robert H. Spell, exercise project officer, said bringing the different services and divergent units together was a key Celtic Cross aim. Participants labored together in a scenario that found the Southeastern United States invaded by hostile forces, which inflicted massive casualties on friendly forces.

"A lot of times, medical units don't get a chance to train with their higher headquarters," Spell explained. "One of the objectives that we had was to allow the medical treatment units to interchange with their higher units."

The training between units, coupled with the wartime setting, allowed units to test their Standard Operational Procedures and operation plans, Spell said.

"It's difficult, unless you're into a simulated or a wartime environment, to see if (plans) really work," Spell said. "Celtic Cross ('93) is a medical exercise ... to see if, in fact, the units could do the job in a wartime environment."

Opposing forces, who probed the units' field perimeters, helped provide a combat setting for the exercise. In addition to weapons fire, units also had to deal with simulated nuclear biological and chemical attacks. While in full protective gear, medical and support soldiers had to go about all their normal tasks — including surgery — when casualties arrived from the air and ground ambulances.

> "(This) is a medical exercise ... to see if, in fact, the units could do the job in a wartime environment.

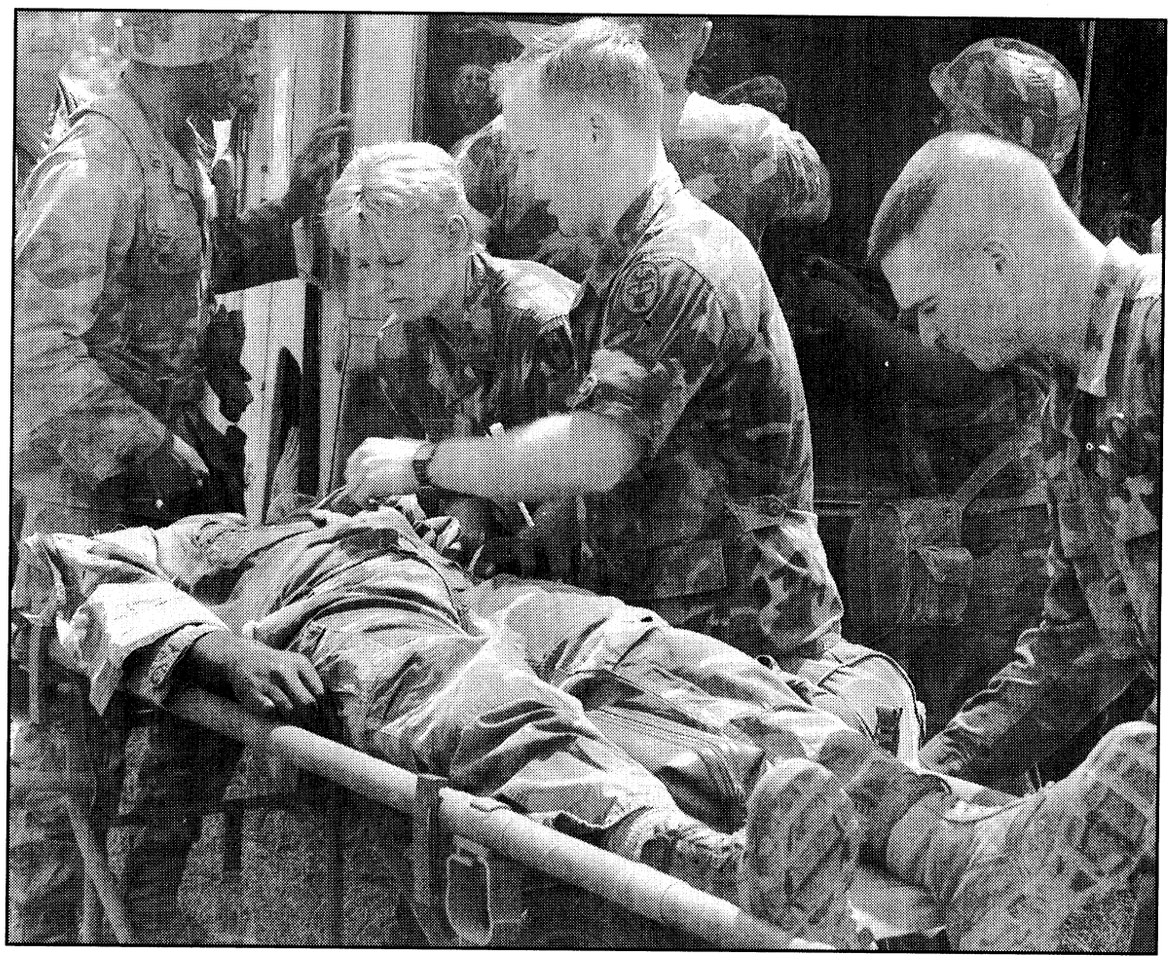
> Exercise Project Officer



Nearly 1,200 casualties were treated during Celtic Cross '93, according to Spell's estimation.

The efforts of the Utica, N.Y.-based 331st General Hospital Moulage Team gave casualties realistic, often gruesome-looking wounds. Using ingredients ranging from oatmeal to Alka Seltzer, they transformed Fort Benning, Ga., soldiers into walking and bed-ridden wounded.

Once the make-up was complete, the casualties were transported to a mobile Army surgical hospital — the first surgical frontline care available — before going on to a division clearing station. Later, the wounded were sent farther back to the rear evacuation hospital depending on their condition, the amount of hospital bed space and the availability of transportation.

The most seriously wounded patients were readied for evacuation from the theater.

One of the most challenging aspects for medical units was managing their limited bed space, according to Lt. Col. Virgil "Jim" Adkins, the assistant chief of staff for personnel for the 818th Medical Brigade, an Army Reserve unit headquartered in Atlanta.

Howard Johnston
Soldiers participating in the exercise ready a simulated casualty for evacuation from the theater.

"Managing care is a unique task to medical units," he said.

For many of the medical and troop support troops in the field, Celtic Cross '93 was an opportunity to do their job in a field setting.

Although most of the soldiers and airmen training here were Reserve Component members, a number of active duty units, many supplemented with Guard and Reserve personnel, were in the thick of the action as well.

The 2nd MASH was first hit with casualties May 4, only a few hours after it set up shop.

Whether arriving by air or by land, the patient's first stop was the emergency room. There triage — sorting the casualties for treatment in accordance with the seriousness of their wound — was the first order of business.

"The whole business revolves around triage," said Lt. Col. James Brooks Jr., the MASH's commander. "You try to get to the guy who needs surgery the most."

Some soldiers with non-life threatening wounds or injuries were sent to another tent for care while others were prepared for surgery.

MASH surgery is designed only to stabilize the casualties, keeping them alive long enough to travel to a hospital further away from the battlefield for more intensive treatment.

After traveling to a surgical hospital, some patients will be bedded down to recover while others will leave the theater unable to retorn to combat duties.

Brig. Gen. James D. Polk, who commands the Mississippi National Guard's 213th Medical Brigade, said Celtic Cross '93 was "a one-of-a-kind exercise." Three years in the planning, yet changing up to the last minute, the exercise was one of the largest of its kind ever.

Noting that the last Celtic Cross was held in 1989, only months before many of the participating units were mobilized for Operation Desert Storm, Polk said the latest edition provided needed practical application that might be required at a later time.

"Celtic Cross '93 was a rare occasion for the military medical community to train to win," Polk said. " We hope we'll never have to do any of this, but if we do, we'll be ready."

WORLD WAR II

50 years ago this week ...

• British Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Chairman of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff Gen. George C. Marshall met in North Africa to confer with Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower while charting the strategic objectives for the impending Allied invasion of Italy. Though in general agreement, Marshall feared that Churchill's pursuit of a larger Mediterranean campaign would disrupt plans for the later cross-channel invasion of Europe. Eisenhower's guidance helped resolve the issue.

• In the Aleutians, the Americans repelled a final suicidal Japanese attack to complete the capture of Attu. The fighting resulted in 1,800 U.S. and 2,378 Japanese casualties.

• In the Mediterranean, a British cruiser and two destroyers shelled Axis forces in Pantalleria for several days in preparation for upcoming Allied air attacks.

• In France, the efforts of Jean Moulin, one of Gen. Charles DeGaulle's subordinates, succeeded in bringing the diverse French anti-Nazi resistance forces together as part of the Comite National de Resistance.

• Fort Benning officials worked to aid efforts intended to facilitate the transitional phase of the 29th Infantry's ongoing movement and reorganization in Fort Jackson, S.C.

MEDICAL BADGE

MASH sergeants compete for honors

118th Public Affairs Detachment,
Tennessee Army National Guard

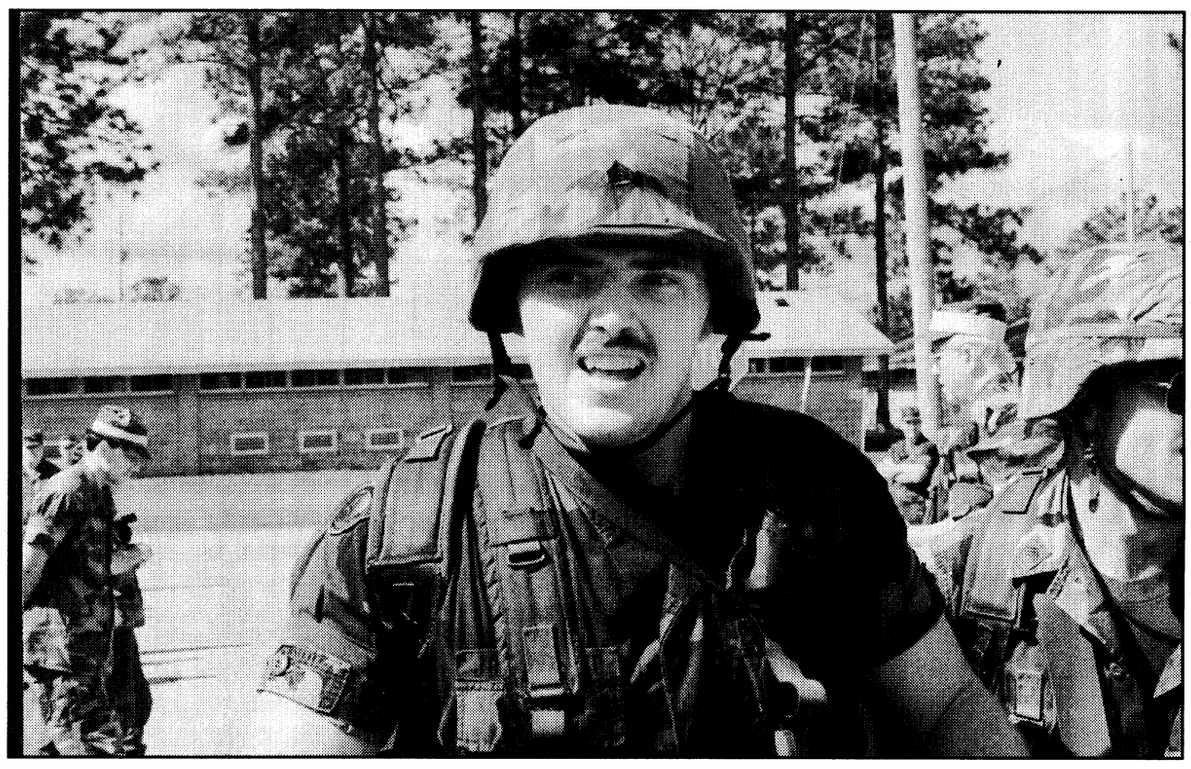
CAMP SHELBY, Miss. — Sgt. Micheal Jorschumb and Sgt. Timothy J. Cummins, 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital, Fort Benning, Ga., were two of 19 winners of the prestigious Expert Field Medical Badge May 13.

Jorschumb, 26, and Cummins, 27, were among the small number of graduates from a group that started with 170 National Guard, Reserve and active duty officers and enlisted soldiers who started the four-day course.

Besides a 12-mile road march, EFMB candidates also had to complete a written test, pass day and night land navigation courses and successfully finish events like a four-man litter carry, camouflage and concealment, nuclear, biological and chemical measures and concealment, communications, triage and emergency medical procedures all conducted under simulated combat situations.

Jorschumb, a squad leader, is from Willmar, Minn.

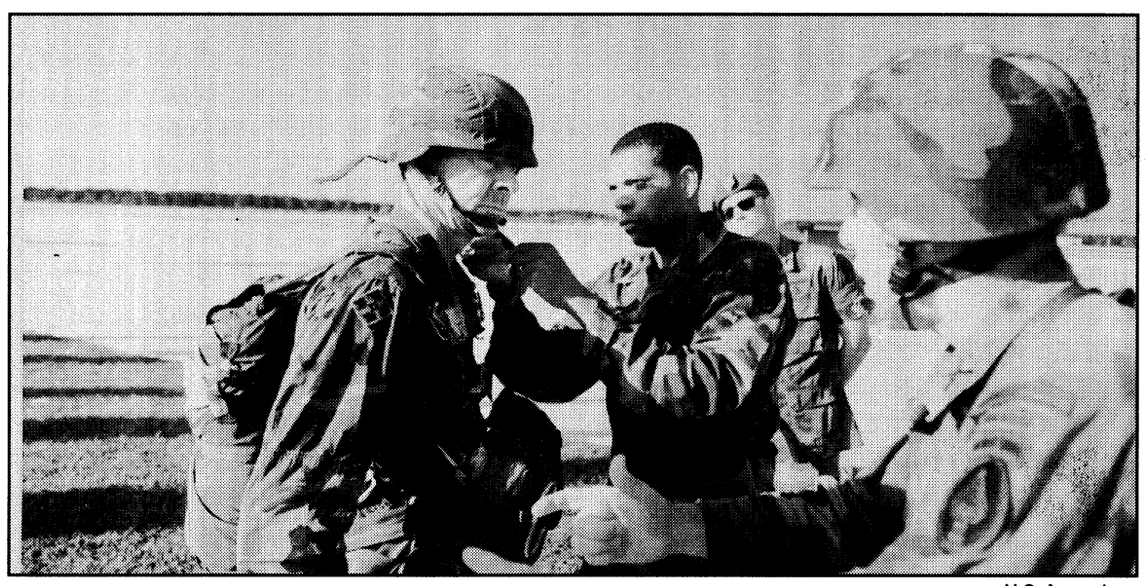
Cummins, of Anamosa, Iowa, said the road march was the most difficult part of the course for him.



"It's worth the blood, sweat and tears," Cummins said. "You only have to do it once."

Lt. Col. Alfred DuBose, 213th Medical Brigade, Mississippi National Guard, was the course project officer. An EFMB winner in 1981, DuBose said the badge shows distinction.

"The soldiers who completed the EFMB training are the best of the best," DuBose said. "This is something to be proud of. You have to earn this badge; they don't give this one away."



DuBose said he was gratified that so many soldiers and civilians came to cheer the EFMB candidates at the course-ending road march.

"This is something they'll always remember," DuBose said. "I can still remember every step of the course I took."

All-star visits Benning

Fort Benning Commissary

Phil Niekro, former all-star pitcher for the Atlanta Braves, came to Fort Benning Commissary May 5.

Niekro was greeted by Larry Bentley, Commissary officer, and escorted to Infantry Hall where he was greeted by Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, commanding general, and Col. Burnet R. Quick, chief of staff. Niekro showed White how to hold a knuckle ball.

Niekro, a 300-game winner, signed autographs and pictures for fans at the Commissary.

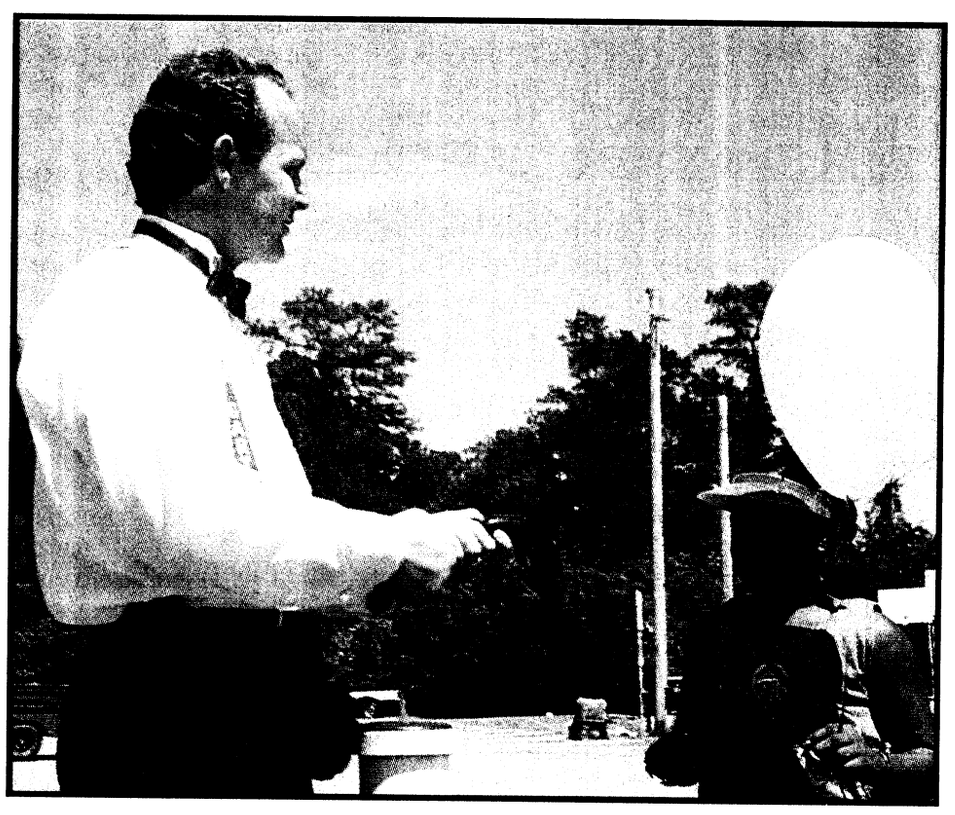
Niekro's career spanned 24 years, and he was most famous for his knuckle ball.

During his career he won 318 games, had an ERA of 3.35, and was selected for the National League All Stars on five occasions

He wan the gold glove two times. During his great career Niekro struck out 3,342 batters. Niekro played for Milwaukee, Atlanta, New York Yankees, Cleveland and Toronto. He retired in 1987.

Niekro came to Fort Benning as part of the Campbell Soup "Legends of Baseball" promotion.

The promotion's sweepstakes will award six grand prizes of fantasy cruises with a baseball legend as host.



The sweepstakes are open to DeCA Commissary patrons only.

Day offers fun for everyone

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Pink cotton candy, blue snow-cones and balloons every color of the rainbow set the stage for the Loyd School carnival Saturday.

Children and families from all over post thronged to the carnival to enjoy some sunny afternoon fun.

The carnival was a fund-raiser for the school, with the proceeds going to the school to buy needed items, said Maura S. Dribben, the president of Loyd's Parent Teacher Organization, which organized the event.

"But we were really most interested in the children having a good time," Dribben said.

"And we wanted to have a fun activity for parents, teachers and children to enjoy together," she said.

The children's enjoyment was written all over their faces as they watched Gary Jordan, the balloon magician, turn a long thin balloon into a poodle or giraffe.

They squealed as they somersaulted and tumbled in the "Star Walk," a big, soft-walled trampoline, and laughed when the baseball hit its mark on the dunk machine and the victim splashed into the water.

Parents got into the act too, like Susan Eckhart, who dressed as a clown and joked and danced with children in the crowd.

Students from Pacelli and Spencer high schools also pitched in, joining parents and teachers from Loyd to man the booths.

Everyone crowds around the snack booth for hot dogs and nachos.

Fort Benning was represented by the Silver Wings, its command exhibition parachute team, and soldiers from the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, who performed a rifle demonstration.

There was also a train ride, a hay ride, face-painting, button-making and many more games and rides, and, of course, lots of balloons to make sure no one left empty-handed.

Family fair to offer safety info

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

Displays, giveaways, a bicycle rodeo and food will be on hand at the Mayors Family Safety Fair Saturday, June 5, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Stilwell Field.

Activities from all over post are joining together to provide a variety of safety-related events.

The first door prize will be presented immediately after the opening ceremony, according to Darlene Perry of the Community Life Office.

Prizes will include two bicycles, a first aid kit, fire extinguisher, life jackets and T-shirts.

The Military Police Activity will be in charge of the bicycle rodeo at which children will ride through a safety obstacle course and be presented with a bicycle driver's license.

MPs will also have with them McGruff the Crime Dog and Blinky the Robot Police Car. They will also be doing fingerprinting of children for the Identi-Kid Program.

The Fort Benning Fire Department will bring one of its fire engines for hands-on viewing, and volunteers will present a puppet show.

Information about heat injuries, safe hot weather practices for pets, and drug and alcohol prevention, will be available, as well as Coast Guard Auxiliary water safety tips and child and spouse abuse handouts.

Perry said there will also be free helium balloons.

The food sale will include hamburgers, hot dogs and soda.

About 500 attended last year's fair, and Perry said they expect a similar turnout this time.

In case of rain, the event will be rescheduled for June 12.

Workshop covers improving self-esteem, relationships

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

"The degree of a person's self-esteem will determine how long he holds his anger inside and at what he gets angry. Also, until anger can be dissolved, conflicts cannot be managed."

Dr. Richard Robertson, a Columbus pastoral counselor and licensed marriage and family therapist in private practice, made this comment tying up all three subjects of a workshop May 20 on "Strengthening Relationship Skills at Work and Home."

More than 100 people attended the event, sponsored by the Army Career and Alumni Program Transition Assistance Office and the Civilian Counseling Services of the Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Program Division of the Directorate of Community Activities.

The speakers and their topics included: Jan Anderson on "Increasing Self-Esteem," Robertson on "Anger and Intimacy," and Sharon Ballard on "Conflict Management at Work."

Anderson, a marriage and family counselor at the Pastoral Institute, which is an affiliate of the Columbus Bradley Center, talked about how learning to be an assertive person can increase self-esteem and dissolve anger in personal and work relationships without violating the rights of others.

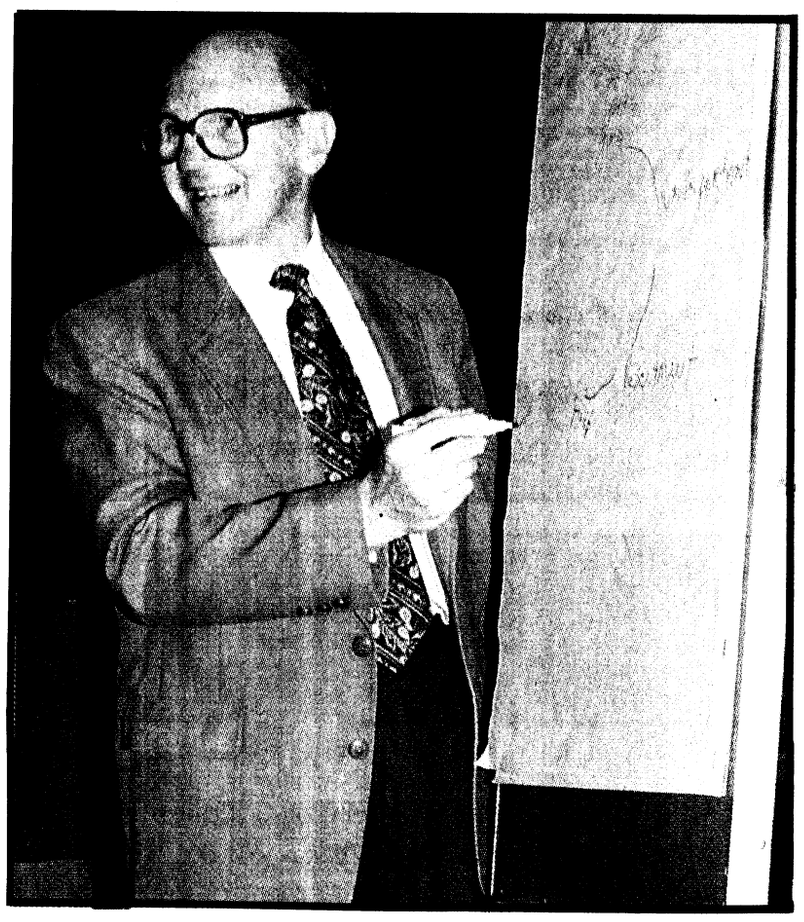
She concluded with a quote that summed up the state-of-mind that allows people to be the most productive. It was from Virginia Satir saying, "I am me, and I'm OK."

Robertson took over with a discussion of what occurs when anger is not dissolved.

He pointed out that the closer we become to other people, the more chance for conflict because our differences are more exposed.

"If we don't deal with these differences constructively, it becomes a disagreement and with anger, it changes into a conflict," he noted.

Robertson said anger is an involuntary, secondary emotion that happens because of feeling hurt, helplessness or fear.



Besides swallowing it and spewing it out, anger can be dealt with in other ways:

- Physically getting the equivalent of three brisk two-mile-walks per week.
- Taking on a difficult task, maybe cleaning the commodes.
- Finding a place to shout (perhaps a closed car or closet).
- Having enough self-esteem to honestly use calm, constructive "I" messages. Don't forget to say that this relationship is important so the conflict is something that needs to be cleared up, said Robertson.
- Maybe an apology is in order. Robertson said too often, we get caught up in the "I'll get you back" mode.

In the end, he noted, conflicts can only be resolved when there is an acceptance of each other's differences.

At this point, Ballard stepped in to point out that conflict is inevitable and isn't always something negative — it can be a motivator for change.

Conflict may be the result of differences in values, poorly defined responsibilities, or unlike points of view; or may be due to change, group dynamics, poor listening skills or mismatched information.

Connie Bridges/Special to The Bayonet
Dr. Richard Robertson shows the resentment cycle that often causes anger and conflict.

She enumerated three stages of conflict, each with its own possible ways to solve.

- Daily irritations — solved by avoidance, obliging or creative problem-solving, which involves looking at the whole picture.
- Challenges — solved by creating a safe atmosphere, having an agenda, being in control but slightly vulnerable, being hard on the facts and soft on the people, clarifying generalizations, showing an equal responsibility by looking for the middle ground and following through with the agreement reached.
- Battles — solved by clarifying the details, forgetting logic and reason, stating and following company policy, not forgetting about the need for "saving face" and separating the fact from opinion and people from the problem.

Tom Tennent, chief of ADAPCP, said that these workshops have been held periodically for the last several years with a lot of success.

Mary Allen of ACAP pointed out that it was thought that this particular set of topics would especially help to relieve stress for those involved in the downsizing of the military.

Lunch honors Asians, Islanders

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

The post Office of Equal Employment Opportunity hosted a luncheon Tuesday in recognition of Asian American/Pacific Islander Heritage Month at the Main NCO Club.

Sgt. 1st Class Raymond Johnson, equal opportunity advisor, coordinated the event.

Brig. Gen. John W. Hendrix, deputy commanding general, opened the luncheon with his remarks.

"It is fitting that we honor you for the many contributions Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders have made to our Army and our great nation," said Hendrix.

"More than 4 million Americans can trace their ancestry to Asia or the Pacific Islands.

"Your history is one proud accomplishment with many contributions to our country and the armed forces.

"Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders have continued to serve their nation through Vietnam, Grenada, Panama and Desert Storm, and will remain a vital part of our armed forces.

"The mark you have made in history as part of the United States Army is a credit to your own heritage and your nation," he said.

Following Hendrix was Chaplain (Maj.) Paul P. Buck, Custer Terrace Chapel, with the invocation for the meal.

After a meal of roast pig, vegetables, rice, rolls and salad, entertainment for the crowd began.

The Philippine American Association and the Columbus Korean Association performed a number of dances and songs that were authentic to Asian and Pacific Island heritage.

A fashion show followed hosted by Frances Givens, an Army and Air Force Exchange Service employee. Modern and traditional apparel was represented along with more dancing.

The luncheon ended with the closing remarks and presentation by Ellis Dandy, equal employment opportunity officer.

WHAT'S UP DOC?

Directorate of Contracting

This is the first in a series of monthly question-and-answer articles concerning the aquisition process the Directorate of Contracting is running to help the Aquisition Process Action Team improve service.

Q: Why can't we order brand name supplies to use with our brand name equipment such as copiers, personal computers and fax machines?

A: You may, if supplies are sold at a reasonable price and meet requirements for competition. All awards we make must be made at reasonable prices.

How this is determined depends on the total estimated value. Things such as history, intrinsic value, and the independent estimate are tools that the buyer uses.

Generally, awards are required to be made to the lowest bidder who meets the minimum needs and is capable of making the item.

Only one vendor need be asked for a quote if the total estimated value is less than $2,500.

However, this requires that the price offered be determined reasonable.

For more than $2,500 we are required to get at least three vendors to try to establish competition.

This is when the award may be made to a company other than the desired brand name.

So, if you want a specific item or brand name and the value of your total requirement is under $2,500, that brand will have to be the lowest price before we make the award to the company.

Q: I know a certain vendor had a lower price than another, yet the award was made to the higher-priced vendor. How can that happen?

A: Anything may happen in aquisition, but this is something we need to avoid if at all possible.

Either the buyer did not ask for quotes from the lower-priced vendor or that vendor offered a product different from what was requested.

When you requisition an item or service, include the names of any vendors you know. Do not call and ask for prices; but, if you think they are low, tell us on the requisition.

We generally solicit suggested sources along with any others we may be required to contact.

If its price is the lowest and and it is a responsible firm, the award will be made to that firm.

Sometimes we do not understand costomers' exact needs so we cannot contact vendors and order exactly what the customer wants.

Be as specific and detailed as possible when filling out the requisition. We will then put out our requests based on your needs.

Send your questions or comments for next month's column to:

School board elects new representatives

Fort Benning Schools

The Fort Benning School Board for the 1993-94 school year has some new representatives as a result of an election for two-year terms were Col. Roy Plummer, chaplain; Pat Grant, Dexter School representative; Lt. Col. Michael Hawrylak, Faith School representative; Mary Renn, Stowers School representative; and Maj. Richard Polley, White School representative.

Elected for a one-year term to fill unexpired terms of office were Sgt. 1st Class John M. Gonzales, Loyd School representative; and Sgt. 1st Class Clyde Cuttino, Wilson School representative.

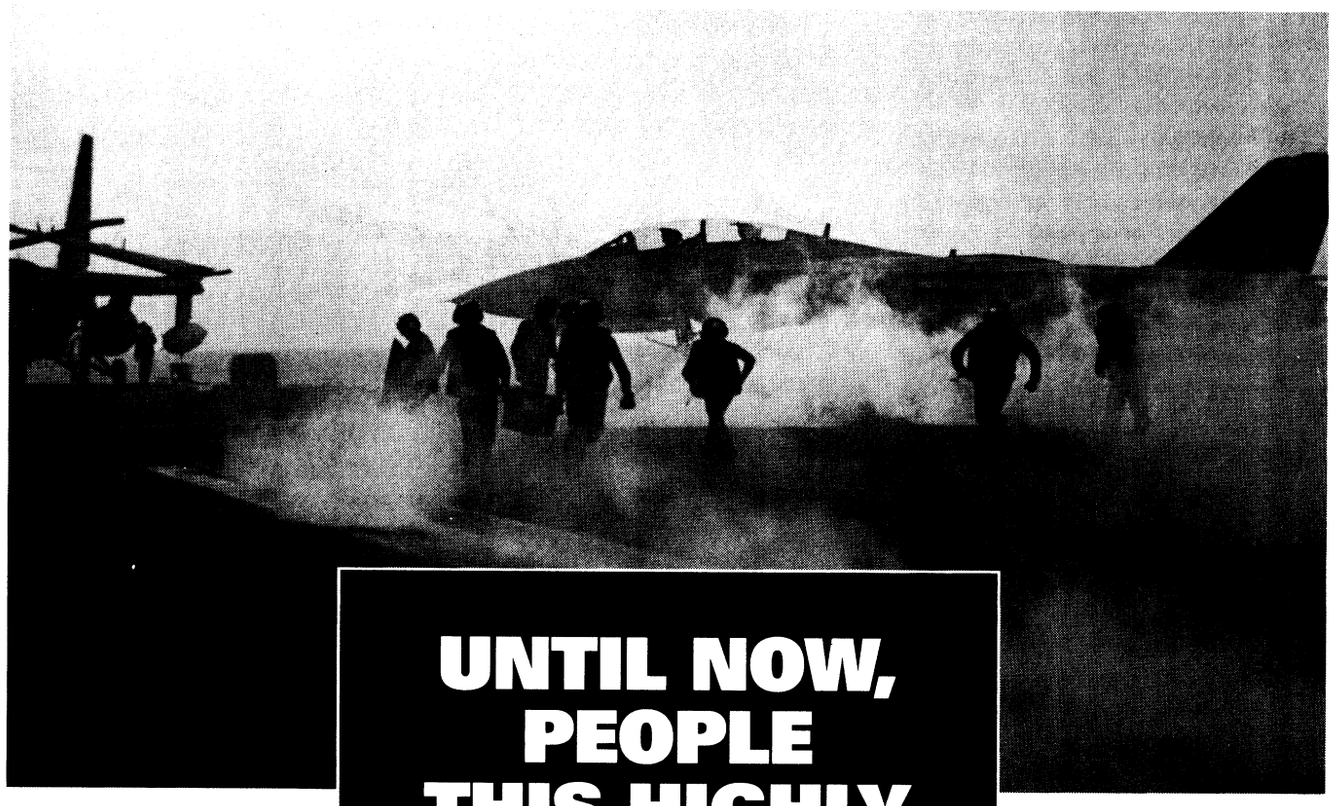
McBride School representative, Staff Sgt. Enrique Montana, has one more year remaining on his two-year term of office.

The Fort Benning School Board is a nine-member board elected by parents of children attending the schools; it meets monthly to set school district policy and provide general direction to the system.

School board members are elected for two-year terms, with each of the seven schools having a representative on the board. In addition to the seven representatives, the board includes an elected president and chaplain.

Dexter students learn about World War II

USAIC Public Affairs Office



Fifth-graders in Margaret Koger's social studies classes at Fort Benning's Dexter School are doing more than just reading about World War II in their textbooks — they are living it!

Using a technique called "Scottish Storyline," first introduced to teachers through a staff development course provided by Fort Benning Schools, students created characters and families who could have lived in Europe during the war.

As each event of the war unfolds, the outcomes directly affect the fictious families.

By using the students' natural enthusiasm for story building, the learners develop a powerful sense of ownership and the classroom is transformed.

In the fifth-grade class, student-created families like the Rosenbergs of Germany, the Nielsons of Denmark, and the Mouliers of France have been actively involved in the invasion of Denmark, the fall of France, the battle of Britain and more.

UNTIL NOW, PEOPLE THIS HIGHLY TRAINED SIMPLY WEREN'T AVAILABLE.

The military spends more on education and training than G.M. and I.B.M. combined. Now, due to reductions in our Armed Forces, many highly trained and talented personnel are becoming available to civilian employers.

These highly skilled veterans know how to work well with all kinds of people.

They offer a combination of drive, dependability and integrity that is unique and highly desirable in the private sector. They're qualified in hundreds of career fields, from electronics to engineering, from construction to computers. And they're ready, willing and able to put their knowledge to work for you.

Students observe 'Power Town'

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Three Fort Benning schools brought "Power Town" to students Thursday and today.

"Power Town" is a safety demonstration exhibit presented by Georgia Power and is part of the Fort Benning Schools' observance and focus on Force Protection Awareness.

The "Power Town" exhibit was at Dexter School from 9 to 11 a.m. and Wilbur School from 1:25 to 3 p.m., Thursday. Wilson School will have the display today from 9 to 11 a.m.

The eight Fort Benning schools are observing Force Protection Awareness through a variety of activities that include safety demonstrations, guest lecturers and classroom sessions.

The activities the schools have planned specifically relate to the ages and grades of the students who will participate in them.

Army Emergency Relief provides assistance

Army Emergency Relief

Although Army Emergency Relief is a private, nonprofit organization, it is, in effect, the U.S. Army's own emergency financial assistance organization.

AER gives commanders an important asset. It helps commanders accomplish their basic command responsibility for the morale and welfare of Army members.

Categories of authorized emergency financial assistance are:

• Nonreceipt of pay. Assistance will not be based on amount of pay due, but it will be limited to basic needs to prevent privation.

• Loss of funds. The loss has to have been reported to military or civilian authorities. Assistance is limited to basic needs to prevent privation.

• Medical, dental, and hospital expenses related to Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services (minus dental).

• Funeral expenses. Assistance may be provided for expenses incurred for family members and for parent of the Army member or spouse.

• Required travel due to emergency leave, convalescent leave, return of family members previously living apart from the sponsor, or relocation of family member(s) away from sponsor's household.

• Rent
• Food
• Utilities
• Essential privately owned vehicle repair
• Clothing
• Fire or disaster
• Privation.

AER is located at Building 2643, Soldiers' Plaza. Operating hours are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

During non-duty hours, contact the U.S. Army Infantry Center staff duty officer or noncommissioned officer at 545-2218.

DOC hosts ethnic event

Directorate of Contracting

The Directorate of Contracting celebrated and recognized the contributions and culture of the Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders who work in the directorate May 14.

The event included a meal, handouts on language, history and culture and the presentation of authentic Asian and Pacific singing and dancing.

The committee that planned and executed the festivities was headed by Lu Lusano and Debbie Carter, both natives of Hawaii. They prepared such dishes as teriyaki steak, oriental chicken wings, rice, haupia (Hawaiian gelatin), Hawaiian onions, stir-fry vegetables, Hawaiian sweet bread, and 14 karat gold cake.

The room where the festivities were celebrated was decorated with flowers, sea shells, Polynesian recipes and many other items from the culture.

It was a wonderful occasion for all of the attendees, and they will always remember this day and the Asian-Pacific Island culture, said John Machovec, director of Contracting.

Alcohol, boating is a fatal mix

By Emerson E. Addington
U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary

Alcohol use has long been associated with recreation and boating. During the summer, water sports are a great way to relax and have fun. Many recreational boaters feel alcohol is as essential as fuel.

Just stand around the docks and watch the coolers, six-packs and even cases of beer that go aboard a lot of boats.

With the usage of alcohol, the combined effects of sun, wind, waves and boat motion tend to sneak up on you. Boaters become less aware of serious boating problems such as speed, other boaters' wake and weather. Judgement and stability are seriously affected.

Boaters using alcohol tend to stand up and move around. This may be OK in a large boat, but it is extremely dangerous in smaller boats, resulting in falls overboard or capsizing.

When you consider that falls overboard and capsizing make up 65 percent of common causes of boating fatalities, add to these the use of alcohol, which is a contributing factor in about 50 percent, and realize that in more than 86 percent of all fatalities the victims were not wearing life jackets, the odds of becoming a boating fatality are high.

Can you have alcohol on a boat? The answer is yes. Georgia and Alabama allow open containers of alcohol on a boat even while it is in operation.

Can you be charged with driving under the influence of alcohol when operating a boat? The answer is yes. Basic federal and state alcohol usage laws still apply as to age and to operating a vessel under the influence.

Who can be charged with driving under the influence? Basically, anyone who is responsible for operating the boat or controlling boating activities.

If an individual is the operator (driver), he or she can be charged with driving under the influence. Also, where state law requires an observer when towing a skier, the observer or the skier can be charged if either of them has a blood alcohol content of .10 percent (.08 percent in Georgia).

Many boaters do not wear their life jackets — they sit on them! Add alcohol consumption to this already high-risk situation and the results can mean disaster.

Almost 50 percent of 1991 boating fatalities involved alcohol, and at least 86 percent of the victims were not wearing a life jacket. The life jacket is your seat belt not your seat, wear it and leave the alcohol on shore.

Boat smart — if you use a boat, take a safe boating course, wear your life jacket and remember "A fool and his boat soon part when alcohol is involved". Alcohol can kill!

If you don't think The Bayonet can help your business be more successful. . .
ASK JAY!!!

I have been selling cars for many years and I am a firm believer in advertising.

I also believe that specific market segments are important to the success of my business. The 55,000 military and civilian people at Fort Benning are important to virtually all businesses in this area, as they are to mine.

I have found that the most effective and affordable way to reach this huge number of people is by using Fort Benning's newspaper, The Bayonet.

We see a constant flow of people in our various dealerships that my managers are convinced are a direct result of our advertisements in The Bayonet.

I believe that we would see a significant reduction in new and used car sales if The Bayonet were not available to us.

The Bayonet reaches Fort Benning like no other publication, and I plan to continue to invest in the results it can produce for me.

The 'Magic' is back in the NBA Finals

By Jim Gaffney
Tribune Media Services

It was during an interview with sportswriters to promote NBC's NBA playoff coverage that Magic Johnson let his guard down.

What: NBA playoffs on NBC

SPOTLIGHT

It only lasted about 20 seconds, then the warmth returned ... but it most certainly happened.

You could sense it. You could hear it. You could FEEL it.

Johnson was asked what he would tell another player who was making news with a possible career-ending medical condition. What was the hardest part about never playing again? As the smile left his face, Johnson's response revealed feelings he may still hold very close.

"The toughest thing is knowing that you can still do it," he said. "Knowing that you can still play. Seeing guys out there playing that you used to dominate. Knowing that some of the games your old team lost without you, they would have won with you. Being a young man and having it all taken away, instead of retiring because it was time. I think that's enough right there."

Johnson's time— at least on the court — was the 1980s, when he led the Los Angeles Lakers to five NBA titles, reserving a spot for himself in the Basketball Hall of Fame along the way. Now out of the NBA for good, Johnson stays close to the game by working as an analyst for NBC, and he'll be paired with Marv Albert and Mike Fratello for the upcoming NBA Finals, that could begin as early as June 4.

This is Johnson's second year working with NBC, a stint that has earned the 33-year-old consistently good reviews. Johnson's biggest asset behind the mike may be his honesty, a trait that his network bosses love, but one that fans and players sometime misinterpret as too harsh ... at times, even biased. "If I see something, I'm going to point it out," Johnson states, "even if it's critical, and sometimes fans take it wrong." A recent example featured his former team: "When I was watching Phoenix lose two games to the Lakers in (last month's) first round, I was critical of the way the Suns were playing, and some people in Phoenix didn't like what I said.

"I didn't come into that series ready to root for the Lakers," Johnson explains. "I just couldn't believe what I was seeing, because of how well Phoenix had done during the regular season. When you're direct and up front about what is really happening, sometimes people think you're biased."

And don't expect Johnson to tone down his act for the NBA Finals, adding that friend and foe alike are open targets. "There's always a chance I may lose some friends because of what I say," he concedes. "If I see a buddy of mine take a bad shot, I'll say it was a bad shot; if I lose friends because of that, then I'll lose them. I've had guys come up to me and say, 'Hey, you dogged me out,' meaning I criticized them, but they understood that it's my job. Some announcers try to remain friends with the players by not saying what really goes on. I'll say it straight ... that's how I am."

Department of Defense pays employees to work at home

By Lawrence Hughes
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Defense Department is encouraging its agencies to consider the benefits of "Flexiplace," a program that allows employees to work at home for part of each work week.

Tune in to "Fort Benning Today" next week to find out more.

"Fort Benning Today" will also show highlights and announce some of the winners of the U.S. Army Combat Arms Matches that concluded Monday.

The competition lasted six days and included only government-issue individual small arms.

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel will highlight post events and list classified advertisements on the Fort Benning Community Bulletin Board with news and music from Soldiers Radio Satellite Network.

If you are a subscriber to Fort Benning Cable, you can watch USAIC TV on Channel 3, 24 hours a day.

Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:26, 7:56, 8:26 and 8:56 on WLTZ TV-38.

For more information or to make suggestions, write or call the Broadcast Section of the Public Affairs Office, Infantry Hall, Room 602, 545-2201.

USAIC TV Schedule

Springer pays return visit to 'Pooh'land

Springer Opera Theatre

The Springer Children's Theatre will celebrate its 25th anniversary just the way it all started — with a production of "Winnie the Pooh."

A quarter century ago, Eleanor Jones, wife of the then Springer director Charles Jones, staged the A.A. Milne classic and set the machinery in motion that has given thousands of local young people their first theatre experience and hundreds more a chance to appear on stage.

In fact, many of the participants in the first presentation of "Winnie the Pooh" are still volunteers at the Springer supporting live theater programs for children.

Pooh would prefer to drift peacefully through life, humming tunes and occasionally stopping to eat a little something. But, of course, he finds himself involved in all sorts of frantic calamities, assisted by Piglet, Rabbit, Tigger, Roo and Kanga. Pooh's intentions are always the best, but his passion for honey and condensed milk keeps getting him into trouble.

Children's theater veteran Lorenzo Battle plays the narrator while Shaw High School student Rick Coldwell portrays Winnie the Pooh. Deborah Bolisvert is the maternal Kanga who is constantly trying to keep tabs on her scrappy child, Roo, played by Josh Langan. Evan Madeo plays Eeyore as Brian Wright surveys the part of Owl.

Springer technical director William C. Rich has designed the lighting and scenery for the show and resident costumer Joanne Middlebrooks provides the costume design for the anniversary production.

Performances will be today at 7:30 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday at 2:30 p.m.

The show will be presented in the Springer Actors Arena, 1022 1st Ave.

Tickets are $5 for adults and $4 for students. Reserved seating is available by calling the Springer box office at 327-3688. Special group rates are also available for this show.

Barnsley Gardens offers an array of events

Barnsley Gardens

Barnsley Gardens is offering an array of events created to educate and entertain guests of all ages and interests.

Summer concert series

The summer concert series will be June 10 and 14, July 8 and 22 and Aug. 5 at 7 p.m.

Bring your picnic basket, a blanket and stretch out on the grass of Barnsley's outdoor amphitheater to enjoy five nights of music and fun under the stars. Each concert will have a different theme from country to jazz to authentic Civil War entertainment.

Regular admission prices apply for general seating. Reserved seating and subscription tickets for five concerts are also available. Refreshments will be on sale.

Barnsley War Days

War days will be celebrated July 31 to Aug. 1 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Relive the bygone antebellum era with a living history celebration of the Old South. Demonstrators in antique attire will be on hand cooking, spinning and sewing in the old style. Period music, dance and storytelling will entertain guests of all ages, and a Civil War encampment will feature the "boys in blue and gray."

Confederate Ball

Barnsley Gardens hosts the Confederate Ball July 31 at 8 p.m.

Complimenting Barnsley War Days, this evening spectacular will spotlight the pomp and ceremony of a true Southern gala. Staged in the historic ruins, attendees can dance the waltz and Virginia Reel to the music of an authentic re-enactment brass band and enjoy refreshments of the era.

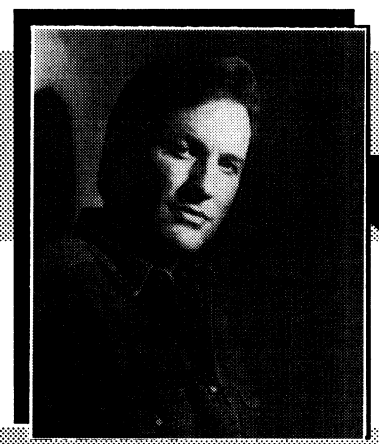
Admission is $20 per couple or $10 per couple dressed in period attire.

Quilts in the Gardens

Aug. 7 to 15, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. celebrate quilts in the gardens.

Quilts chronicle the diverse history of our country, and especially the South, better than perhaps any other American medium. In this show, more than 100 quilts from historic to modern styles will be on display against the backdrop of the gardens. Quilting experts will be on hand to answer questions.

Cotton Jamboree



The Cotton Jamboree is set for Sept. 25 to 26 and Oct. 2 to 3 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Guests will be invited to bring the cotton in from the field, then watch it as it progresses from the gin to the loom. An antique farm implement show, entertainment and fall festivities will complete these days.

There's also the Cotton Bolt Cross Country Race Sept. 26. Offered as a part of the Cotton Jamboree, the cross-country race will send participants on an off-road run through this 1,600-acre plantation.

Barnsley Gardens is located at 597 Barnsley Gardens Road, Adairsville, Ga. Call (404) 773-7480 for more information.

THE BAYONET®

Fort Benning's authorized newspaper Home of the Infantry

Published by the Ledger-Enquirer, a private firm in no way connected with the U.S. Government, under exclusive written contract with the Fort Benning Command Group. This commercial enterprise publishes The Bayonet every Friday in the interest of the Fort Benning community.

Post salutes heroes

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Silence fell as the crowd quieted. Seven rifles fired three volleys, and the slow, piercing strains of "Taps" floated on the air as active duty and retired soldiers proudly and solemnly saluted.

Hundreds of soldiers and family members gathered Monday, Memorial Day, at the Fort Benning Cemetery to pay their respects to parents, spouses, sons and daughters, and friends who died in the defense of their country.

The ceremony featured music from the Infantry Band, remarks by Fort Benning Deputy Commanding General Brig. Gen. John W. Hendrix and a benediction by U.S. Army Infantry Center Staff Chaplain Col. Roy G. Plummer.

Hendrix spoke of the nearly half-million people who have been killed in America's wars, from the Revolutionary War to Desert Storm.

"Our departed veterans of foriegn wars are memorialized," said Hendrix, "in film, in novels, in songs, in poetry and in other forms of art. And rightly so, for their legacy of service to the nation deserves such preservation as part of our heritage. Our monuments to them stand as perpetual testaments to their valor, heroism and just plain Americanism.

"Today," said Hendrix, "with a mix of sadness and gratitude, we salute them all, and renew our resolve never to forget them."

Hendrix and Plummer also placed a wreath on the grave of the Unknown Soldier.

The 21-gun salute was fired by soldiers from Company A, 43rd Engineer Battalion.

498th returns

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fourteen soldiers from the 498th Medical Company returned from Kuwait Saturday aboard a C5A Galaxy aircraft. They arrived at Lawson Army Airfield at 7:45 p.m.

The air ambulance unit, which deployed to Kuwait April 2 with two UH-60 Black Hawk helicopters, provided medical evacuation support during Exercise Intrinsic Action.

Intrinsic Action is an ongoing training exercise intended to demonstrate continued U.S. commitment to the security and stability in the Persian Gulf region.

The exercise tested procedures for contingency operations in the region.

Post to reduce risk of lead exposure

Martin Army Community Hospital

Fort Benning is taking the lead out by implementing a new Department of Defense program aimed at reducing the risk of lead exposure to military families. This program has brought together the talents of the hospital's Preventive Medicine Service, the Environmental Management Division of the Directorate of Public Works, and the post Safety Office.

According to Lt. Col. Joe Orosz, chief of the Environmental Management Division of the DPW, the first phase of the program is to evaluate painted surfaces in a selected number of living quarters, schools and day-care centers. The evaluation will begin in just a few weeks, and will include a team of evaluators from DPW, the hospital and safety.

The evaluators will be checking the overall condition of the painted surfaces, and obtain a variety of paint samples from throughout the post, said Orosz.

Why the concern? About 74 percent of private housing units in the United States built before 1980 contains lead-based paint, according to a Centers for Disease Control news source. If the paint is chipping or peeling, the old lead paint may become exposed.

Young children, under age 6, may eat the paint chips or put their hands in dust from the peeling paint. Ingestion of lead-based paint remains the most common high-dose source of lead exposure for preschool children, quoted the CDC source.

Children under age 6 are more susceptible to the effects of lead than are older children and adults, and the potential for illness is greater, said Maj. Daniel Davidson, chief of the hospital's Preventive Medicine Service.

In addition to the survey, physicians at Martin Army Community Hospital and its family practice clinics will be screening children under age 6 for lead exposure. All of this is part of the new DoD policy to make sure that lead is not a hazard to children at military installations.

Richard Townsend, industrial hygienist at the Preventive Medicine Service, said paint samples collected from the survey will be sent to an accredited laboratory to determine if there is any lead in the paint and exactly how much. "This will give us a good idea if a problem exists in one of our housing areas," said Townsend.

Soldiers or family members may be exposed to small quantities of lead because of their occupations or hobbies. Examples of jobs where lead may be present include: firing range workers, automotive repair mechanics, and individuals who work around lead batteries.

Some hobbies such as making pottery or stained glass, refinishing furniture, and packing shotgun shells may cause you to be exposed to lead dust. Primarily, the dust will be on your hands and trapped in your clothing, which should be,

See LEAD, A-3

Questions about lead

Q: Should I be concerned about lead in my home?

If lead-based paint is found in a home, it is only a health risk if it is chipping or peeling. If the paint is chipping or peeling, it must be removed or sealed with new paint. If it is not, nothing needs to be done.

Q: What if I suspect my child has been exposed to lead?

If your child exhibits hyperactivity, learning difficulties or behavior problems, you should consult a physician who should evaluate your child and determine if lead exposure has occurred. If confirmed, your house will be checked for sources of lead.

Q: Will all quarters be checked for lead?

No. A sample of quarters in every housing area, all schools, and daycare centers at Fort Benning will be checked. If lead hazards are found in one set of quarters, then other quarters in that housing area will be checked.

Q: What if I live off post?

If your house was built before 1978, and your paint is chipping or peeling, you may need to contact a painter who has knowledge of how to remove or seal the old paint. You may contact the Preventive Medicine Service at 545-1144 if you would like more information.

Q: Should all children be tested?

Only children under age 6 need to be evaluated if they show signs of the above noted symptoms. Then, a physician should determine if a test is required.

Q: What can parents do to keep their children from being exposed to lead-based paint?

Here are some helpful hints:

- Make sure your child does not have access to peeling paint.
- Wash your children's hands and faces before they eat.
- Wash toys and pacifiers frequently.
- Wet mop floors and wipe window ledges and chewable surfaces such as cribs with a solution of powdered automatic dishwasher in warm water. Dishwasher detergents are recommended because of their highphosphate content. Most multipurpose cleaners do not contain phosphates and are not effective in cleaning lead dust.
- Do not use pottery or ceramic ware that is meant for decoration to store food.
- Make sure your child eats regular meals and gets plenty of iron and calcium.
- If you have a hobby or occupation that exposes you to lead or lead dust, change your clothes before you come into contact with children, and wash these clothes separately. Wash your hands right after your work, and keep children away from dust that may contain lead.

Fort Benning Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White and his wife, Linda, invite you to celebrate summer at their home.

The Whites will host a concert, featuring the Infantry Band and Infantry Chorus, from 5 to 6 p.m. at Riverside June 13.

The public is invited, and attendees are encouraged to bring blankets, lawn chairs, coolers and picnic baskets to the outdoor concert.

Somalia-deployed soldiers can reduce risk of malaria

Martin Army Community Hospital

As a precautionary measure to reduce the risk of malaria, the Army surgeon general has directed that all soldiers who deployed to Somalia as part of Operation Restore Hope receive a two-week supply of the drug primaquine.

Any soldier who has not been issued primaquine should report to his or her servicing troop medical clinic.

All soldiers who experience high fever, chills or headaches should present themselves to medical authorities as soon as possible.

Post to realign work force

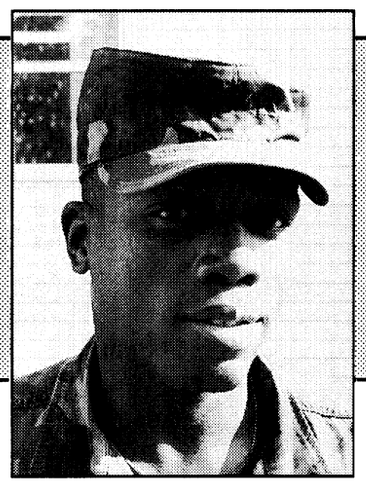
Directorate of Civilian Personnel

More than 350 civilian employees recently left the Fort Benning employment rolls as a result of voluntary separation incentives and voluntary early retirement authority.

To realign and balance the work force, Fort Benning will use reduction in force procedures. No permanent employees will be separated from their jobs as a result of this reduction.

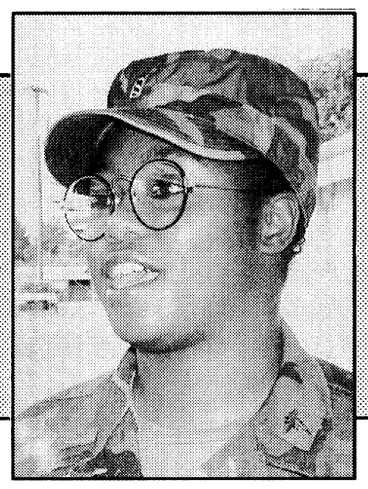
Some employees will be reassigned, and others will be changed to a lower grade.

The merit promotion program will be ongoing during the reduction in force period. Therefore, some employees may be promoted. It may be necessary to terminate some temporary positions.



It is not known how many employees will be affected. The Directorate of Civilian Personnel will use reduction in force procedures to determine those employees who will be affected.

All employees affected by RIF procedures will be individually counseled regarding their status, entitlement to other jobs, pay retention and promotion rights.



The leadership at Fort Benning will protect the job rights of individuals and strive to minimize the impact of this reduction, according to Gary Burkhalter, senior staffing specialist at DCP.

Lawn ornaments signal summer's arrival

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

COMMENTARY

It was deja vu all over again when I stopped by the garden center of the Post Exchange the other day.

There, before my very eyes was the most garish, the most outlandish lawn ornament humankind ever dreamed up.

When I left the North Country (Fort Drum, N.Y., environs), I thought I'd seen the last of this meretricious ornament, for I thought Southerners, with long growing seasons and the abundance of natural beauty, eschewed the tawdry, tacky yard ornaments I'd come to expect as common place up North. Oh sure, one does see the occasional pink flamingo and statuette of Snow White, but this is nothing compared to what the Yankees come up with.

You have to understand Northerners. These people see nothing but black and white nine months of the year. So they welcome anything that can lend color to their drab lives.

These are the people who invented Easter egg trees. Up North as you drive along April roads lined with snow banks, the only color you will see will be plastic Easter eggs hanging from otherwise bare tree limbs.

Once the snow was gone for the last time (by Memorial Day you could normally be assured of no more snow), homeowners would begin trotting out their lawn ornaments in anticipation of flowers coming up a few weeks later.

These decorations would consist of all seven dwarfs, plywood cut outs of the backside of some woman bending over her flower bed in her checkered dress and apron, plastic and plaster models of every woodland creature that ever existed from chipmunks to skunks to deer.

They even had what the local people called "Virgin of the Bath." This was a statue of Our Lady enshrined under a bath tub that had been cut in half and partially buried.

And finally the coup de gras, that thing the Post Exchange has the nerve to sell — a giant, aluminum-like ball on a pedestal.

The one in the PX is silver. In the North Country they'd come in all colors — red, yellow, green and blue.

This chintz serves absolutely no utilitarian purpose. It just sits there, and forces a person to mow and clip the grass around the base of the pedestal.

We, on The Sentinel staff at Fort Drum, used to postulate on just why people would put such a thing in their yards.

We finally came up with a possible solution. We decided it was to let them know when summer arrived. You see summer came on various days sometime between Independence Day and the first week in August.

But unless you were paying attention, you probably would miss it. So we decided the locals would pull their lounge chairs up around these balls and stare into them. And the day they saw sweat forming on their brows, they'd know that was the day summer arrived.

They would then duly note it in their almanacs so when visitors came and wanted to know when summer came, they could always say, "Well, in 1989 it was Aug. 8, in 1990 it was July 12..."

Anyway, that was our theory.

Now why anyone would want to buy such an ornament down here is far beyond our ken — with one possible exception — perhaps Southerners moving North have heard of this strange custom and not wanting to be caught without their ball, will buy one before departing.

Want my advice, water and mow your lawns, plant your seeds and let nature do its thing.

Myths surround rape

By John C. Pomory
Rape Crisis Intervention Program

Editor's note: This article appears as part of Fort Benning's Rape Crisis Intervention Program's efforts for Rape Awareness Month in June.

Despite the alarmingly steady increase of the incidence of rapes and sexual assaults that authorities have reported in recent years in this country, many myths about the subject continue to permeate our society.

Several mediums to include television, movies, literature, music, and even varied religious, political and news organizations have played a part in establishing many of these myths.

Misconceptions come from all angles on the subject, ranging from inappropriate classifications of both victims and assailants before, during and after the rape, to inaccurate characterizations of the setting in which the crime occurs.

For instance, many people assume that these types of crimes only happen to young women who have allowed themselves to be accosted by an unknown, obviously dangerous man in a dark back alley or on a deserted road. Yet research conducted by Columbus Rape Crisis Inc. indicates otherwise.

Statistics show that approximately 50 percent of sexual attacks are committed in the victim's home, with perpetrators of every socio-economic category preying upon people of all ages. In fact, the age of victims in Muscogee County alone has ranged from 2 months to 94 years.

In more than one-third of the cases, the attacker will be known to the victim as a friend, co-worker, acquaintance, husband or lover. Because a rape can be defined as a nonconsensual vaginal, anal or oral penetration by any object, both males and females are liable to committing or being subjected to this type of humiliation.

Among the most disturbing myths concerning rape are the ones that somehow place the blame on the victim. This stems from a longstanding misperception of rape as simply an impulsive product of passion that could be prompted by sexual enticement.

But, rape is a crime of violence and domination that affects innocent victims of every age, physical build, race, religion, background, moral persuasion and style of dress.

Perpetrators plan attacks in 75 percent of all cases, while group assaults are mapped out in nine out of 10 cases. The fact that these particular crimes involve areas of intimacy is merely incidental to the attacker's aggression and need to humiliate.

There have been many cases in which a victim's claim of rape has been discounted as an exaggeration or vengeful lie, because of both the general public's and legal authorites' unfounded notions of how a person should look and act after an attack.

Because assailants reportedly carry weapons in 80 percent of the cases, they are often able to coerce their victims through threats and as such, women are bruised and cut in less than one-third of the attacks.

Further, the emotional shock of the trauma may blunt many feelings, causing many victims to seem detached, even unaffected for a substantial period of time after the attack.

Regardless of their outward appearance though, statistics indicate that in fact only 2 percent of rape charges turn out to be false accusations. In reality, the unjust manner in which the victims are often stigmatized by unwarranted character assasinations dissuades many of them from ever filing a report.

These, as well as many other misconceptions, serve only to further empower the perpetrators and alienate the victims of this devastating crime by hurting crime prevention, prosecution and recovery efforts.

And while it is undeniable that the traditional sexism of a generally male-dominated society and the often shallow zeitgeists of pop culture have fostered misconception, it is our responsibility as individuals to rise above these myths.

Otherwise, it will, undoubtedly, be our friends, wives, daughters and sons, sisters and brothers who will continue to suffer not only the trauma of rape, but the crime and tragedy of our misunderstanding.

Proclamation
Office of the TRADOC Commander

More than 70 million Americans will choose pleasure boating as a way to relax in 1993. Unfortunately, tragedies do occur on the water. Responsible boat operators learn about their boats, safety equipment, the environment in which they operate, and their own abilities and limitations.

Whereas, in recognizing that hundreds of lives could be saved each year by spreading safe boating information to the public, the Congress of the United States requested the president to proclaim annually one week as National Safe Boating Week.

Whereas, we, the members of U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command, affirm and support the goals of National Safe Boating Week, Sunday to June 12. Now therefore, I, Frederick M. Franks Jr., commanding general, U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command, do proclaim the week beginning Sunday as National Safe Boating Week in TRADOC.

In witness whereof, I urge all members of Training and Doctrine Command use our waterways to acquire skills and knowledge to maintain their own safety and the safety of those around them.

I set my hand this 1st day of May in the year of our Lord, 1993.

Hot temps, humidity can kill a workout

Fluid loss risks heat injury

By Manuel Gonzalez
Martin Army Community Hospital

With summertime around the corner and with Georgia's high temperature and humidity, people performing physical activities can become victims of heat injuries.

There are different stages of heat injuries depending on the amount of activity one performs under high temperature and humidity.

Factors that may contribute to heat injuries include: being in poor health, taking some hypertensive medications (such as diuretics), being elderly, not drinking enough water, alcohol abuse, excessive sweating, vomiting or diarrhea and the wearing of heavy clothing.

Heat injuries are subdivided into heat cramps, heat exhaustion and heat stroke.

• Heat cramps occur because of excessive sweating and high temperature. The early signs may range from severe pain to muscle spasms over hands and feet. The cramping that precedes the spasm may make muscles feel like knots. The skin may feel may feel hot or dry and cool, depending on the humidity.

Heat cramps can be easily relieved by removing the affected persons from the activities they are performing and placing them in a cool area. Encourage slow but steady consumption of fluids.

• Heat exhaustion is a more serious form of heat injury that is due to excessive loss of fluids. The early signs may be increased fatigue, weakness, anxiety, excessive sweating with cold, pale, clammy skin and slow pulse.

A person suspected of having heat exhaustion should lie down in a cool room, use a fan to decrease temperature, and if awake, be encouraged to drink fluids.

If the person is not recovering within a few minutes, he or she should be transferred to the hospital for proper treatment.

• Heat stroke is a medical emergency. A person with this condition may get a sudden headache, become dizzy or fatigued, sweating is decreased or absent, and the skin is hot, flushed, and sometimes dry. The pulse increases to 160 beats per minute and the person may become disoriented, followed by unconsciousness.

Individuals who are suspected of having heat stroke must be transported to a hospital. They should be cooled down by stripping off their clothing. Immerse them in cool water to decrease their temperature.

Most likely, they will be unconscious and forcing fluids by mouth is not recommended.

Be sure the patient is awake and aware of what is going on before giving fluid.

Always remember, if in doubt, consult a physician for further guidance.

Heat injury prevention facts:

• An injury from the heat may occur quickly if a person does not take proper precautions.

• There are many good ways to prevent heat injuries.

• The most important preventions are replacing body fluids that are lost when a person is out in the heat and being aware of the early warning signs of heat injury.

• Some people have a greater risk for heat injury than others, such as people who take high blood pressure medications, people who have been injured by heat in the past, small children less than 6 and elderly people over 65.

Hints to prevent heat injuries:

• Always have enough water available when you plan to work or exercise in the heat. Drink at least one to two large glasses of water per hour whenever you plan to be working in temperatures above 80 degrees.

• If you are planning activities such as heavy yard work or aerobic exercise, you will need to drink more.

• Of all of the types of fluid that we can drink, water is the best for replacing fluids lost in the heat. It is not necessary to take extra salt such as salt tablets, and in fact salt supplements may even be harmful.

• Always eat a balanced diet and do not try to skip meals when you plan to be out in the heat.

• Smoking, and drinking alcohol or beverages with caffeine may increase your chances of being injured by the heat.

• Always be aware of the early warning symptoms of too much heat exposure. This may include leg cramps, headache, dry mouth or difficulty concentrating. If these happen, you should go inside right away and drink plenty of water.

• Keep your head covered with a hat and wear light colored clothing that protects your shoulders and upper arms.

• Sunscreens are especially helpful at preventing sunburns. Use those sunscreens with numbers of 25 or greater if you have light skin or skin that easily burns.

LEAD: Reduction

washed separately, said Davidson.

In some places in the United States, lead has been found in the water and soil.

The water at Fort Benning has already been tested and found to be well within acceptable standards, said Orosz.

The goal of the new lead management program is to ensure that living conditions at Fort Benning are as safe as possible, especially for children.

The Directorate of Public Works and Martin Army Community Hospital are taking positive steps to make sure the possibility of lead exposure is minimized.

If you have questions about lead in paint, contact the Directorate of Public Works at 545-4766.

For more information about children's health and lead, contact your family practice physician or pediatrician.

Members of the Fort Benning Fire Department open a damaged door with the "jaws of life" May 27 on Stilwell Field for Force Protection Awareness Day.

DPW demonstrates 'jaws of life'

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

The Directorate of Public Works hosted a display and demonstration May 27 for Force Protection Awareness Day.

The public was invited to attend the activities which were held from 9:50 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Stilwell Field on Main Post.

Lt. Steve P. Goodman from the Fort Benning Fire Department said that the purpose of force protection awareness from the departments' standpoint is "to make the community of Fort Benning aware of what precautions are taken in the environment and to ensure the safety of the Fort Benning community."

The setup and operation of a 100-foot aerial ladder truck was one of the activities that spectators observed.

A demonstration of the "jaws of life," a tool used to extract persons trapped in a wrecked vehicle, was featured four times during the day's events.

Other attractions included a hazardous material vehicle and equipment, a water rescue team and equipment (underwater and surface) and a fire rescue squad and equipment, all courtesy of the fire department.

"The displays allowed people to see the equipment and its utilization," said Goodman. "It gives reassurance and security to know that (the fire department) is well educated and trained to help."

Force Protection Awareness Day also included a number of activities from post units.

Safety classes, runs, breakfasts, skits, inspections, drills and a safety fair took place in honor of the day.

"The exhibit went really well," said Goodman. "We had a good response, everyone enjoyed themselves and we provided information as well."

Deferred payment plan expands

Army and Air Force Exchange Service

DALLAS — Exchange customers will now have expanded benefits under the Army and Air Force Exchange Service's Deferred Payment Plan.

One benefit of the new program is a revised credit limit, up to $5,000, based on the applicant's disposable income. Current limits ranged from $300 to a maximum of $1500, based on the applicant's rank. The new system is similar to the scoring and approval method used by other major retailers.

A 36-month payback period, another new feature, will replace the existing 12-month period. In addition, soldiers and airmen no longer need to pay the account in full prior to separating from the military.

Family members with authorized exchange privileges and their own income will now be able to apply for their own account. In the past, they could only use their sponsor's account.

DPP has been available in overseas exchanges since 1979.

AAFES began the rollout of the program in the Continental United States in late 1992, and will offer it in all exchanges by November. Features include a 12 percent annual finance rate.

Authorized customers include all active duty military members, Reservists, National Guard members, both military and AAFES retirees and most AAFES associates and family members with authorized exchange privileges.

They may charge almost anything in stock in their exchange, including home delivery and assembly fees and auto repairs.

The program will eventually merge with the home layaway program (available at overseas and some remote CONUS locations), creating a single, worldwide credit program.

Food locker needs items

Army Emergency Relief

Army Community Service began a food drive at the Commissary May 13, requesting the community to donate nonperishable food items.

The food drive will continue throughout the year.

Due to budget restraints and cutbacks in funding from the previous provider of food items for the food locker, Army Community Service is now requesting the support of the community in order to continue to help families in need.

Presently these are items needed to restock the food locker: tuna fish, baby formula, powdered milk, grits, dry cereal, oatmeal, peanut butter, jelly, rice, soup, spaghetti, oil and lard.

However, if you are unable to provide any of the above items, ACS will appreciate whatever type of food item you are able to contribute.

Collection boxes are located at the Commissary exit doors near the cashiers, and are placed one day prior to the end of the month and mid-month paydays.

There will also be a printed announcement on an easel near the main entrance asking for support of this cause.

Food items can also be delivered to the emergency food locker in Soldiers' Plaza, Building 2643, Monday through Friday 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

For additional information, call Alfonso Deane at 545-2536, 545-7517, 545-4043 or 545-4357.

POST BRIEFS

Infantry Ball to be 18th

The 1993 Infantry Ball will be held at the Fort Benning Officers' Club at 6 p.m. on June 18.

Anyone who wishes to attend call 544-8094, 544-8100 or 544-9407.

Tot Town will be open until midnight.

Call 689-8698 or 689-8772 to make reservations for child care.

Post association offers family support

The Soldier and Family Support Association general membership meeting will be at 11:30 a.m. June 11 at Youth Services, Building 1056.

All personnel assigned to Fort Benning are eligible for membership. For more information, call 545-5931.

ACAP seminars set

The Army Career and Alumni Program will host monthly financial planning seminars June 22 and July 20.

The seminars will be conducted by local financial planners and insurance agents.

The seminar schedule will be: 9 to 9:45 a.m., financial and cash management; 10 to 10:45 a.m., insurance and investments, and 11 to 11:30 a.m., question and answer period with individual agents and brokers.

All seminars will be conducted in Infantry Hall, Classroom 59.

For more information, call Maj. Charles Shelden at 545-4902 or 545-4913.

Army wants prime power specialists

The U.S. Army Prime Power School is looking for highly motivated men and women to train as prime power specialists for military occupational specialty 52E.

The top five of the Army enlisted applicants are selected. Graduates receive up to 55 college semester hours, which are awarded by the American Council on Education.

Also, students graduate with an additional skill specialty in electrical maintenance, mechanical maintenance or instrument maintenance.

For an interview and information on how to become a prime power specialist, contact the 535th Engineer Detachment, Engineer Battalion (Prime Power) (Provisional), Building 5347, in the Harmony Church area.

The phone number is 544-7123 or DSN 784-7123.

MPs run for Special Olympics

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

More than 100 military police from Fort Benning's Military Police Activity ran in the Law Enforcement Torch Run to benefit the Special Olympics May 27.

The runners covered 10 miles from Fort Benning to the Columbus Government Center to pass the torch to the Columbus Police Department.

Provost Marshal Col. James Crockert led the run.

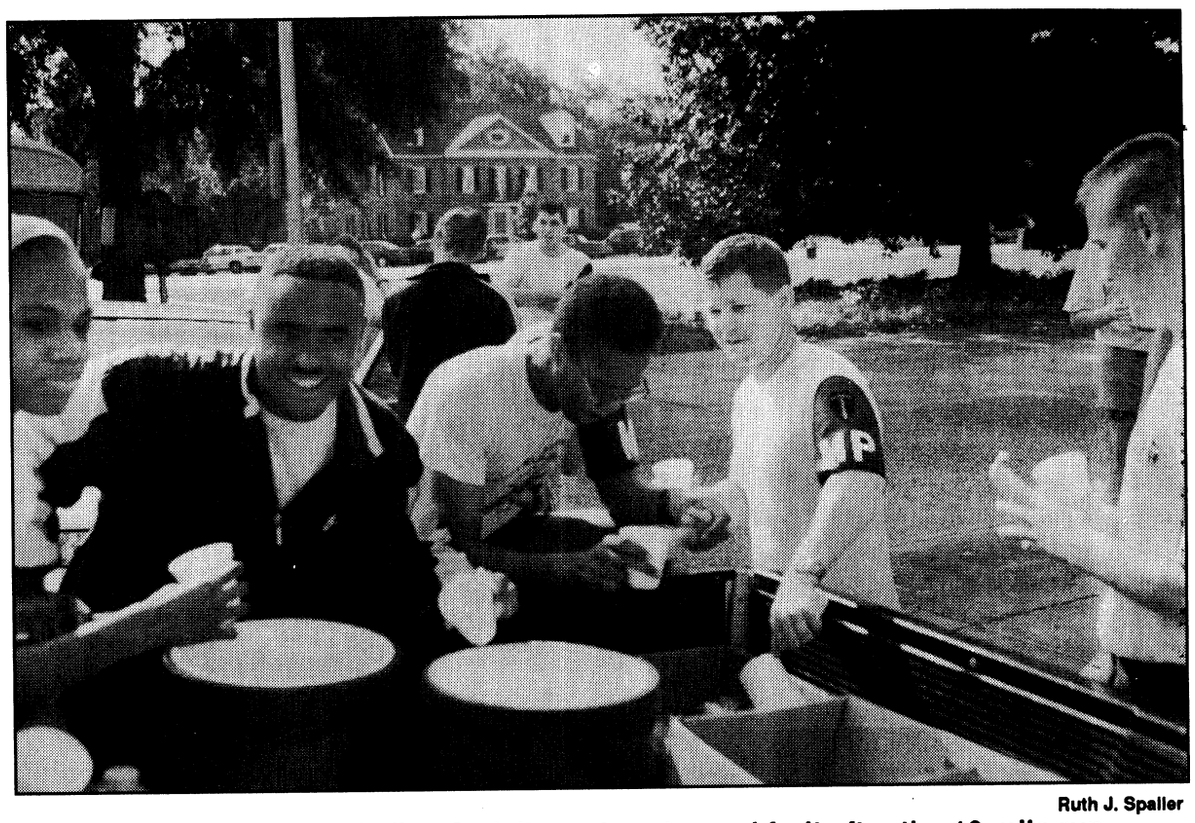
Crockert said he thought it was important the Military Police participate in this event for two reasons.

"First, when you see the smile of a child in the Special Olympics — that's why you run 10 miles," he said.

"The second reason is that we are part of the Chattahoochee Valley Law Enforcement Association and this is a charity that they have developed and wholeheartedly supported.

"We are part of that law enforcement effort so we feel that we'll do our fair share, and more if it's required, to help the law enforcement agencies here," Crockert said.

1st Lt. Claudia J. Carrizales, the spokeswoman for the run, said the Military Police Activity raised close to $800 from Fort Benning sponsors.



"We have soldiers here who have children in the Exceptional Family Member Program who participate in the Special Olympics, and this means a lot to them.

"So we run to represent the Columbus Police Department, but we run for those children on Fort Benning as well," Carrizales said.

Carrizales and three other soldiers, Staff Sgt. Bruce Williams, Sgt. 1st Class Roger Gomez, and Staff Sgt. Patrick Ahearn continued the next leg of the run, helping the Columbus Police Department carry the torch 43 miles to La Grange, where they handed it off to the Marshal's Department.

"They (the Military Police Activity) did a fabulous job, not only with the run itself, but with the fund raising," said Annette Mainland, special events manager for the Georgia Special Olympics fund raising department.

Since its beginning in 1986, the Law Enforcement Torch Run for the Special Olympics has become the third largest contributor to Georgia Special Olympics programs.

DCA projects renovate, upgrade post facilities

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

"Our mission is to give the soldiers and their families great Morale, Welfare and Recreation facilities and programs that are equal or better than what they could get off post."

Al Stewart, director of Community Activities, said this about the MWR facilities and programs that his directorate establishes and runs for Fort Benning with its capital purchase and minor construction nonappropriated funds (less than $500,000) and major NAF monies (more than $500,000).

Renovations

This year, he expects minor construction to include:

- Renovation of the Kelley Hill Recreation Center
- Further renovation of the Follow Me Golf Course
- A new swimming pool at Uchee Creek Army Campground and Marina (to be completed in 90 days)
- A new swimming pool at Destin Recreation Area, Destin, Fla., (at the end of the summer season)
- A Youth Activities Outreach Center at McGraw Manor

1993

Then on the list for major construction, both nonappropriated funds and military construction Army funds, are:

- A 198-capacity child care center completed and scheduled to open July 1
- A 60-unit Guest House between the Officers' Club and Burger King with an Aug. 1 ground-breaking planned
- A new junior enlisted club at the intersection of Wold Avenue and Anderson Street (across from the quarters) to replace the Hidden Door
- A Sand Hill Recreation Center, under construction
- A new miniature golf course next to the Mini-Mall Post Exchange and laundromat by October

1994 -1995

- A new larger auto craft shop near Soldiers' Plaza to replace the other two

Stewart noted that DCA's projects are a continuous improving, modernizing, adding-on process. How much it is able to do is dependent on what soldiers want and on how much nonappropriated funds are available.

Nonappropriated funds are monies from endeavors supported by soldiers' dollars, as opposed to appropriated funds, which are tax-supported activities.

Examples of sources for nonappropriated funds include whatever surplus revenue there is after paying expenses for such on-post operations as the clubs, bowling centers, golf course, child care facilities, laundromat, car washes, package stores, pay phones and Destin and Uchee Creek recreation areas.

Stewart has a "Vision 2000" five-year strategic plan laid out for these nonappropriated resources. "We run it like a business," he said.

"Since 1984, $47 million has been spent in updating or building new MWR facilities at Fort Benning."

This has been done in a scientific way through finding out what is important to soldiers and their families by comprehensive personal interview surveys every three years, customer comment cards and focus groups.

Soldiers and their families do not mind paying a fair price for these services as long as the quality is high.

— Brian Smith
Marketing Director

The last two surveys have demonstrated the importance of upgraded outdoor recreation facilities on post.

Brian Smith, marketing director, said that the last survey especially pointed to the value that soldiers and their families place on recreation facilities due to their stressful lifestyle of frequent moves and deployments.

He added that it is evident that soldiers and their families do not mind paying a fair price for these services as long as the quality is high.

Completed projects

Among the specific projects completed since 1984 are:

- Golf course improvements (the last year has seen an increase in junior enlisted use by 17 percent)
- Car wash facilities (two built)
- Laundromat (one built)
- Bowling (computerized scoring and synthetic lanes that have increased scores and usage)
- Sports (such improvements as the running track in front of Infantry Hall, racquetball courts and three lighted sports fields)
- Uchee Creek Army Campground and Marina improvements
- Destin Recreation Area improvements
- Officers' Club party rooms renovations
- Main NCO Club ballroom, kitchen and dining room renovations

Smith said all of this was able to be accomplished because DCA listens to its customers, and then efficiently provides the quality services and facilities needed.

Also, soldiers seem to realize, he said, that the dollars spent here at Fort Benning remain here for improvements to be made.

Stewart said that it is expected that the downsizing of the military will affect Morale, Welfare and Recreation nonappropriated funds by no more than 10 percent.

Through proper marketing of the facilities they have to offer to all of their constituents, including retirees during off-seasons, DCA sees continued progressive improvements in post facilities into the future, he said.

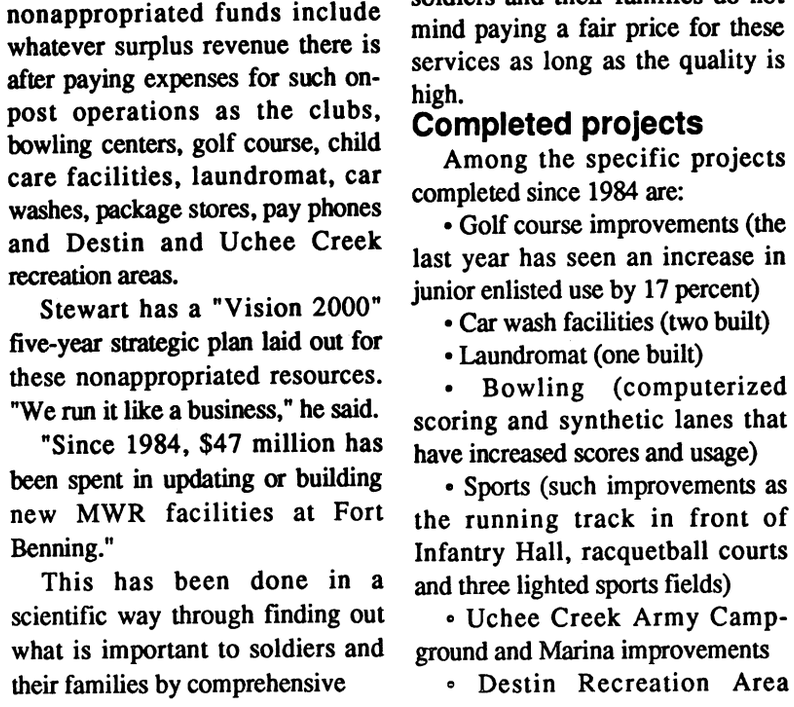
NCOA rounds up safety with rodeo

By Staff Sgt. Michael Olig
Henry Caro NCO Academy

On May 27, the Henry Caro Noncommissioned Officer Academy hosted a safety rodeo in recognition of Force Protection Awareness Day.



Command Sgt. Maj. Allan R. Halstead, the commandant of the NCO Academy, opened the safety rodeo by emphasizing that it is every soldier's responsibility to preserve and protect the force.

He explained that five stations had been set up in the parking lot and that each station was designed to increase awareness about safety and force protection.

The commandant then turned the event over to 1st Sgt. Gordon Unrein, assistant safety officer for NCOA.

Unrein formed the soldiers into five groups.

The groups rotated through the following stations: station 1, privately owned vehicle inspection and general safety; station 2, water and boat safety; station 3, motorcycle safety; station 4, lawnmower and power equipment safety; and station 5, weapon safety.

Michael Olig

Staff Sgt . Harvey Rogers demonstrates how to use power tools and equipment safely.

The safety rodeo concluded with Halstead reiterating the importance of force protection awareness and wishing his command a safe and happy Memorial Day weekend.

Remember the speed limit is 15 mph on most post roads from 6 to 7:30 a.m.

Building bridges makes math more meaningful

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

Fourth- and fifth-grade students in the gifted program at Fort Benning's Herbert Dexter School have spent 10 days making math more meaningful by building bridges under the direction of teacher Marjory Brasfield.

In its second year, the bridge-building simulation required students to apply skills using arithmetic calculations and geometry to design, plan and build a scale-model bridge within a specific budget.

Brasfield began the project by dividing the classes into "companies" or teams with each member assigned specific responsibilities. These included the jobs of project director, architect, transportation chief, carpenter and accountant.

Their common goal was to put together the strongest "toothpick" bridge.

The project director made sure all company members did their jobs, kept a journal on progress, signed and approved building plans, checked order forms, made sure that the construction site was neat and organized, cleaned up each day and kept all records.

The architect designed the bridge and drew the plans, showed others how to construct using the plans, kept an inventory of building materials at the site, ordered supplies as needed and made sure the bridge looked like the plans.

The carpenter built the bridge according to the plans, consulted with the architect and supervised the company members helping with construction.

The transportation chief helped the carpenter build the bridge, delivered checks and picked up supplies.

The accountant wrote checks to go with the order forms, kept the balance sheets, met with the auditor and helped build the bridge.

With a budget of $1.55 million the group had to work with such costs as:

Land (cardboard) — $500,000

Lumber (toothpicks) — $10,000 for fourth grade, $10,990.99 for fifth grade

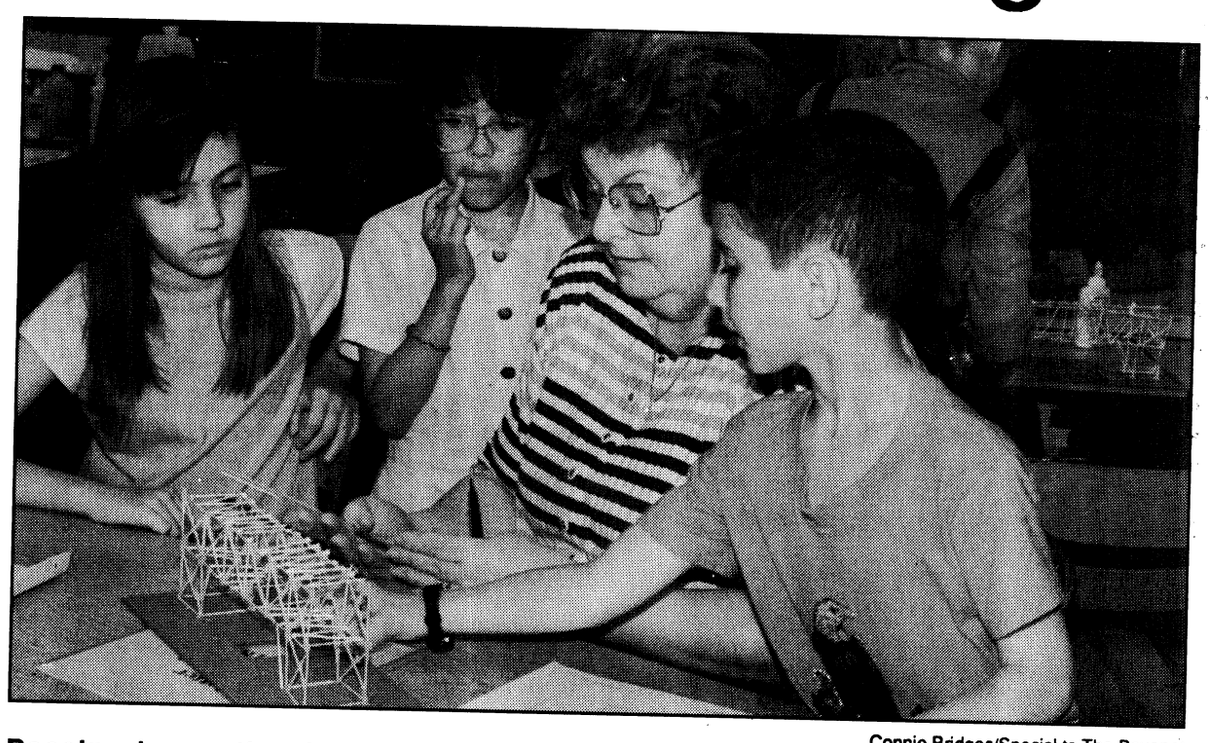
Welding material (glue) — $850 for a day's supply for fourth grade, $925.95 for a day's supply for fifth grade

Building-plans paper (graph paper, wax paper) — $40,000

Extra Sheets — $10,000 a sheet

Audit Service — $2,000 for fourth grade, and $3,497.50 for fifth grade.

The students could also be fined for arguing within their group (unfair labor practices).



Brasfield noted that sometimes revisions are necessary if figures prove the costs prohibitive or for extra "shoring up" if money is left over.

She grades each student on individual job performance, group cooperation, correct books, detailed journal entries, looks of the bridge and completion of the project.

At the end, five parents with real-life engineering experience were asked to judge the bridges and perform a stress test on each to determine its durability. They were:

- Col. Dave Brown, director of Public Works
- Maj. Mario Carrillo, 36th Engineer Group
- Staff Sgt. Elvis Colon, 535th Engineer Detachment
- Lt. Col. Dwight Durham, 36th Engineer Group
- Command Sgt. Maj. James Gardner, 36th Engineer Group

These fourth- and fifth-grade gifted students are part of a self-contained program at Dexter, which includes children from throughout the post.

ARMY FAMILY ACTION PLAN ISSUES

Garrison Commander's Office

More than 100 issues and questions were presented for action, comment or status to the garrison and installation staff at the Fort Benning Family Action Symposium recently.

The issues were broken down into functional areas and each directorate, activity or area was asked to respond.

The following are the questions posed to the Army and Air Force Exchange Service.

Q: Can the Defense Commissary Agency and the AAFES identification card check policies be brought in line with each other?

A: ID card checks for the Commissary are more restrictive than those for AAFES. For example, soldiers in uniform are required to show ID cards and no guests are allowed in the Commissary. AAFES does not recommend changing its current policy.

Q: Army-issue uniforms are cheaper than AAFES uniforms, but the supply is often limited. Can Army-issue uniforms be made more available?

A: Uniforms are supplied by the Defense Procurement Support Center. AAFES only orders and does not control the actual procurement or the stocks available for ordering. This problem would have to be raised at a higher level for resolution.

Q: Agencies selling products, such as the Girl Scouts and Boy Scouts, should be controlled.

A: Agencies that perform these services are controlled through the Directorate of Community Activities Office.

Q: Can the Post Exchange advertise more so that consumers can shop smarter?

A: We are currently working on a monthly events calendar that will be distributed throughout Fort Benning.

We will try to make customers more aware of ways to save money through improved advertising.

We are working on an improved in-store sign program by increasing our use of large, simple signs.

We are also trying to make better use of the DCA bulletin board.

Q: Can special arrangements be made for soldiers going to the field to pre- or post-pay Deferred Payment Plan?

A: This system is already in place. Soldiers may make arrangements at either the Main Mall or at Military Clothing Sales.

Q: Can we get newer movies?

A: AAFES leases movies from the distributors as soon as we can get them.

The problem is that distributors limit the number of prints available, and as a result theaters in cities with a large population of potential movie attendees will get the movies first.

This problem has been addressed on a number of occasions and AAFES headquarters is constantly negotiating with the movie industry to get movies more quickly.

While there has been some success, we are still behind the larger, more lucrative commercial market.

Q: Can you initiate a no-smoking policy at the Main Mall?

A: It is within the authority of the local command to declare the mall a smoke-free area.

A customer survey will be taken in the near future to determine the desires of our patrons. A final decision will be made based on the results of that survey and other customer input we receive.

Q: Can you increase the variety of styles in the PX?

A: This is an ongoing goal, primarily handled at the local level.

We have recently expanded the children's book assortment, increased stocks of women's hosiery and lingerie, added more brands of hosiery and cloth tablecloths, expanded the assortment of luggage and made special buys of junior merchandise that have sold well.

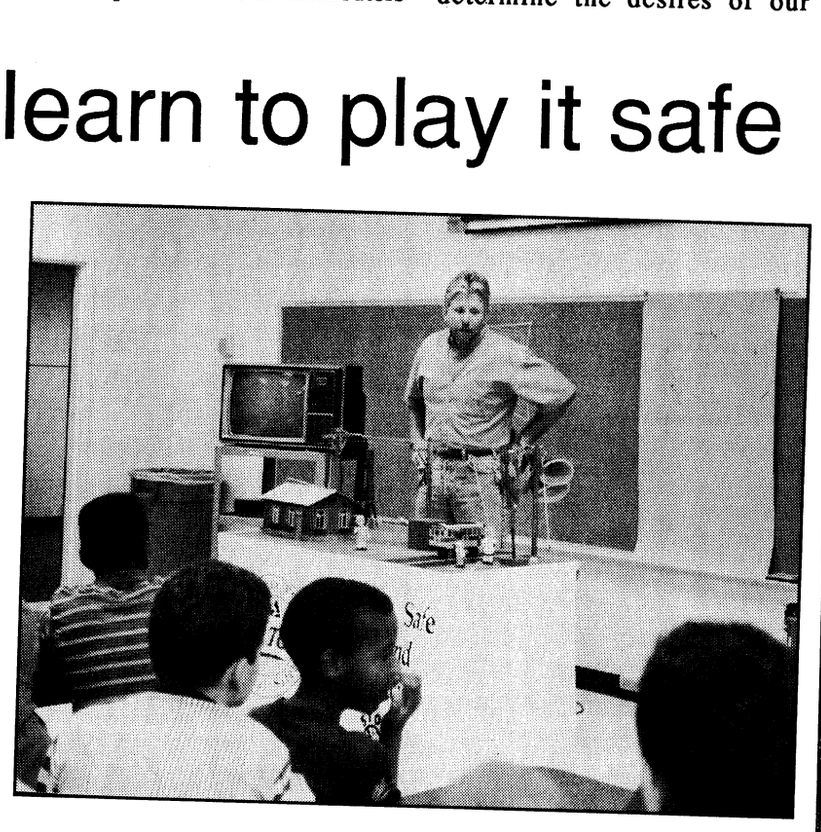
Children learn to play it safe

By Jennifer St. Onge
Special to The Bayonet©



Georgia Power presented "Power Town" to Wilson Elementary School May 28 to show the children how to be safe around electricity.

The "Power Town" exhibit has been used by the company for 1 1/2 years to teach electrical safety and awareness to children and adults, said Georgia Power representative Danny Anderson.

Anderson uses a visual model with a house, school bus, power lines and children with kites to show youngsters how to "play it safe around electricity."

For demonstration purposes, the display transforms household electrical currents to 10,000 volts, he said.

A video called "Zap Rap" was also shown to inform the children of electrical danger and how to avoid it, the origin of electricity and the mistakes that children make around it.

Jennifer St. Onge

Danny Anderson gives a safety presentation.

"It doesn't matter who you are or what you know, you can still have accidents," said Anderson, whose heart stopped beating in 1976 after he received an electrical shock from a power line on which he was working.

"Power Town" was also shown to students at Dexter and Wilbur schools May 27 as part of Fort Benning's Schools' observance of Force Protection Awareness Day.

PRIMUS

PRIMUS IS CHANGING

On February 1, 1993, the Columbus PRIMUS Clinic became the PRIMUS Family Practice Clinic. As of this date, the clinic will be open to non-active duty military beneficiaries registered in the Army's Gateway To Care Program and enrolled to receive their primary health care at PRIMUS. As a Family Practice Clinic, PRIMUS will expand its services and offer its enrolled members:

- Comprehensive family practice medicine, including routine physicals, treatment of a wider range of acute and chronic conditions, and extensive laboratory and radiology testing.
- Guidance for all healthcare treatment, including diagnostic testing, speciality referrals, and follow-up care.
- Both scheduled appointments and walk-in visits.
- Telephone consultation with qualified healthcare personnel to determine whether and when to seek medical care.

To enroll as a member of the PRIMUS Family Practice, active duty family members and retirees and their families should attend one of the Army's Gateway To Care briefings or contact the MACH Health Care Finder at 544-1447/1591. Enrolled members can receive more information on our Family Practice services by calling the clinic at 561-7066.

"The competition might be over, but it's the wealth of knowledge and experience that lingers on."

U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit Service Rifle officer in charge Maj. Harold Grooms summed up basically what all the participants at sometime or another during USACAM '93 said or thought.

The 1993 U.S. Army Combat Arms Matches came to an end May 24 as the last shot rang out on Fort Benning's Easley Range, but according to AMU officials, the spirit of USACAM will be around a long while.

USACAM was more than a competition and for those who were involved or even those who just watched, all noticed that the word competition was often replaced with the word training, said AMU officials.

"USACAM is one of the most unique and challenging U.S. Army competitions in existence," said AMU Commander Col. Lory M. "Mac" Johnson. "USACAM provides the soldiers (competitors) a realistic environment to put their marksmanship skills to use in a positive manner."

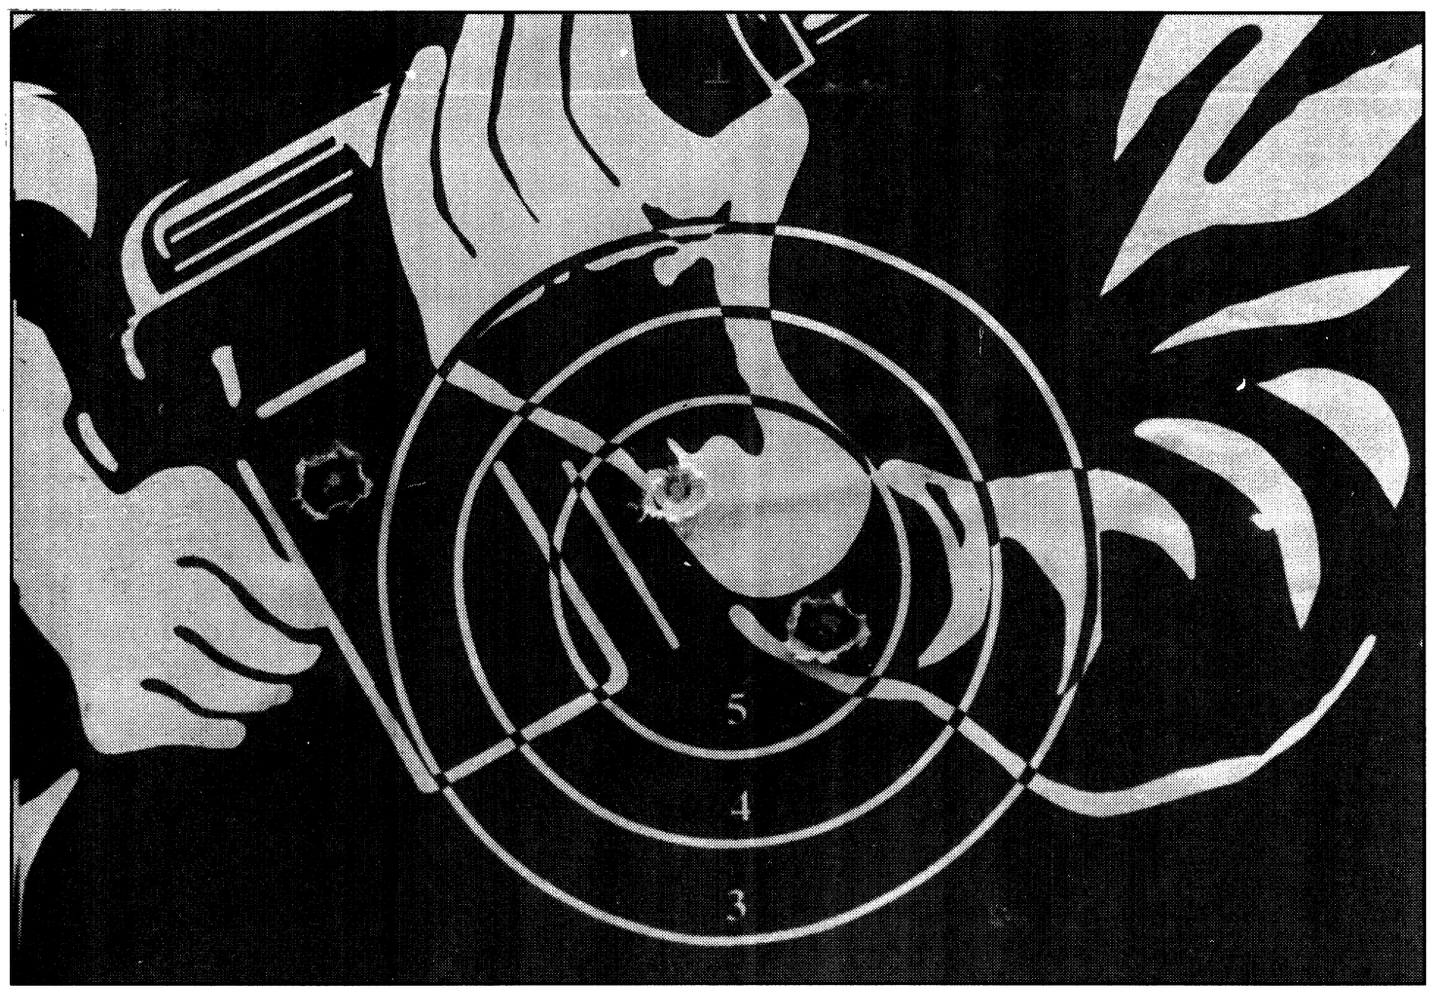
USACAM tests soldiers on the standard equipment every soldier should know how to handle in the field. Weapons include the M-16 and M-16A2 rifles, M-60 machine gun, M-9 and M-1911A1 pistols and the M-249 squad automatic weapon.

The combat-oriented match drew more than 380 soldiers and saw National Guard, Army Reserve, Air Force, Canadian and active duty soldiers compete with a fierceness usually only found on the battlefield.

"It wasn't so much that it was cutthroat, but rather highly competitive," said National Guardsman Staff Sgt. Norman Plaat. "We were all soldiers involved in marksmanship training (competition) so we had a common bond.

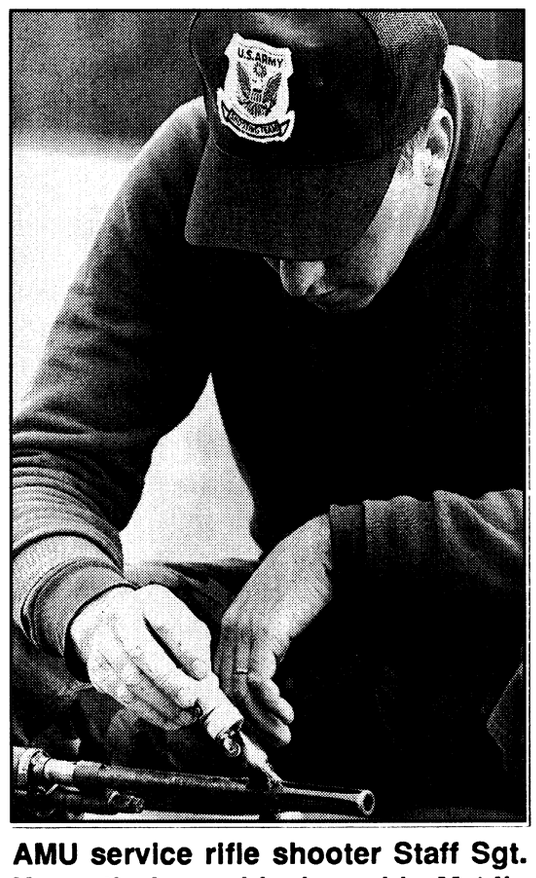
"But there was a competitive edge added to it. It made the participants want to see their comrades do well; just as long as they didn't do better than they did," added Plaat.

Shooters competed in such events as various assault pistol and rifle courses, night sniper infiltration, machine gun courses and obstacle courses designed to test the soldier's ability to move down range, acquire and take out enemy targets.



"USACAM made me realize that the Army doesn't stress good shooting," said Staff Sgt. Robert Hawk of the 4th Ranger Training Battalion. "The Army only teaches you how to shoot at those pop-up targets.

"USACAM challenged the soldier to estimate range, concentrate on tight shot groups and realize that when the "real thing" happens you don't have the luxury of calling for a misfire," Hawk added.



In keeping with realistic training, soldiers were expected to shoot both rifle and pistol to compete. According to AMU officials, the idea is that no one is guaranteed of the type of weapon they may have.

"It seems after being involved with this since 1985 (when it was called the All-Army Small Arms Matches), you would have an idea of what to expect," said Plaat. "But just like war, nothing is as it should be. I know many guys out here who discovered they weren't the marksman they thought they were."

"But that's what USACAM is all about, identifying your weaknesses, gaining marksmanship experience and returning to your units to help train others," Plaat continued. "If the time does ever come when our skills are needed, at least we won't have to worry whether or not we're trained well enough."

Target displays hits scored in the service pistol event.

'Cobra Gold' strikes Benning, Thai rangers

By Keith D. Butler
U.S. Army Special Operations Command

LOP BURI, Thailand — One ranger tapped out a tune on his reserve parachute snapped to his belly-band. Others snored during the dimly red-lit flight toward the objective.

Frost hissed from the air conditioner pipes above, but seemed to do little to cool the paratroopers laden with parachute, ruck sack and weapon. Relief from the stuffy heat came when the doors were cranked open, breaking the steady hum of the plane's moving parts.

Jumpmasters tapped out American and Royal Thai rangers from C-130 Hercules airplanes into the night from 1,000 feet. The muddy, freshly-plowed field below seemed to swallow them up. Within 24 hours, the combined ranger team squashed two targets — a trench line and an "enemy" platoon.

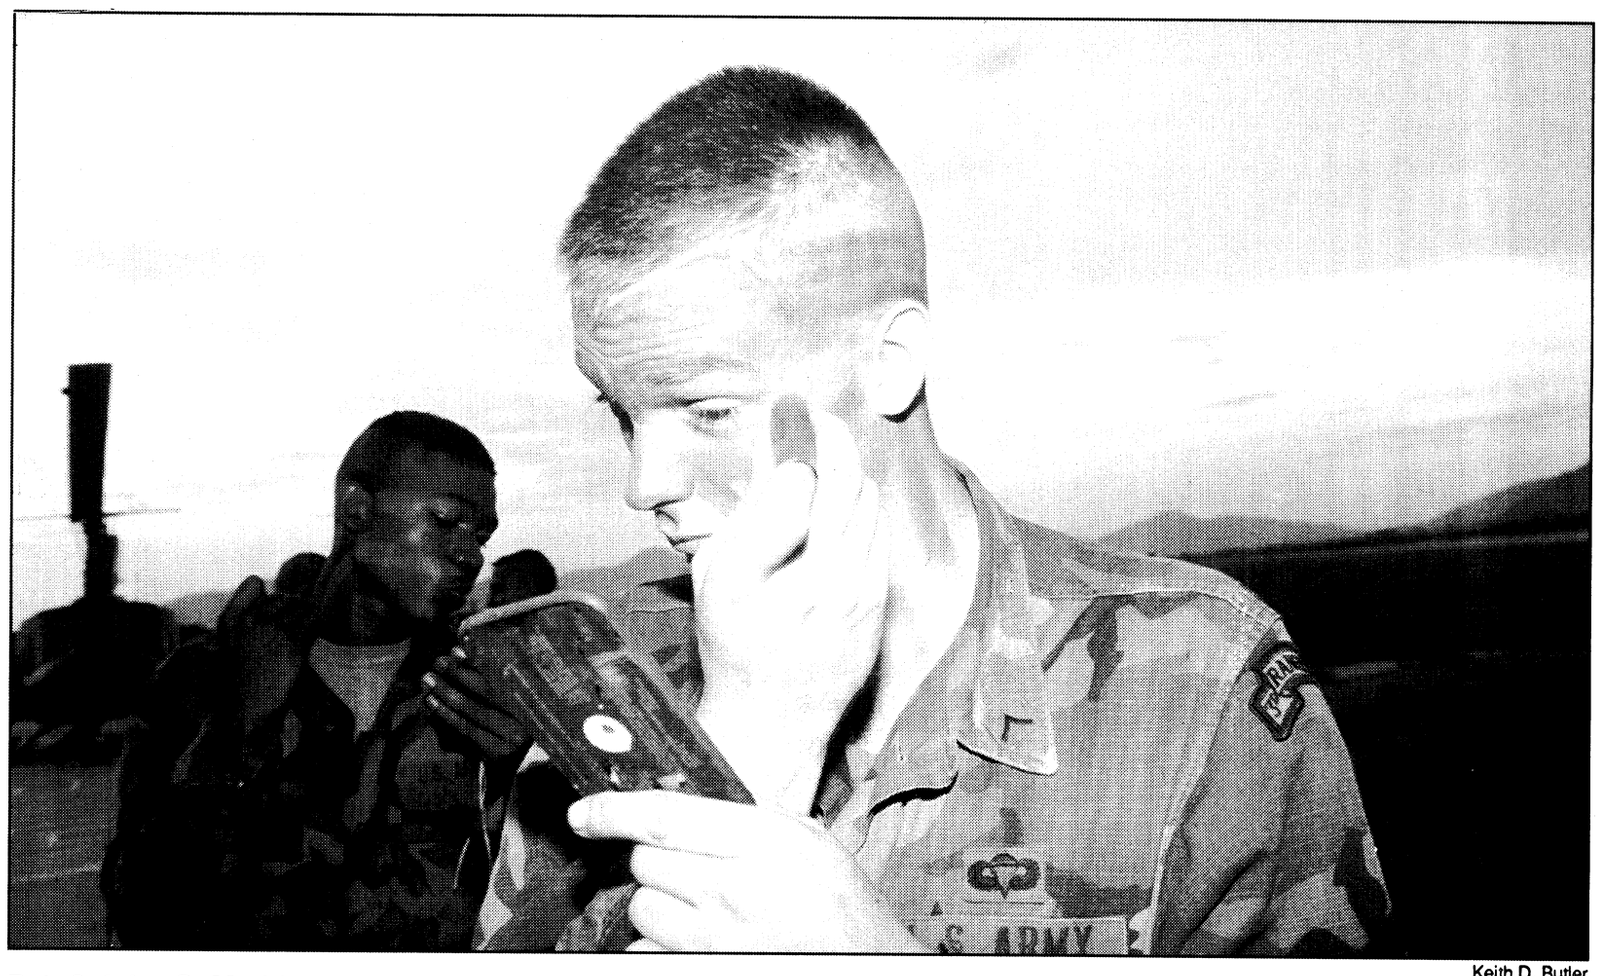
About 145 soldiers from Company B, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, deployed here to train with the 2nd Thailand Ranger Company throughout May for Cobra Gold '93. Landing a company's worth of American "black berets" here first seems to be an exercise in itself.

"We did combined training every day — did the same things at the same places," said 1st Lt. Steven F. Hanagan, assistant intelligence officer for the 3rd Bn. "We learned from their leaders and they learned from ours."

The mass-tactical-airborne operation launched a three-day field training exercise after a month's worth of patroling and firing. The American and Thai rangers had jumped twice prior to the FTX. On each jump, they were loaded to the hilt with their trade's gear, including squad automatic weapons, M-16 rifles, M-60 machine guns and plenty of ammunition.

The two nation's rangers began the month with survival classes focusing on Thailand's terrain and wildlife, weapons demonstrations and mission-essential tasks — conducting raids, ambushes and movement to contact with enemy forces.

"I got to fire the AK-47 (automatic weapon) and an automatic shotgun that the Thais have," said Pvt. 2 Marcus E. Good, who operates an M-203 grenade launcher for his squad. Assigned to the 3rd Bn. for four months, Good has jumped five times, including three in Thailand.



During movement-to-contact sessions, the rangers practiced striking targets during both day and night. Blanks were used at first, then the rangers fired on targets with live rounds.

"Live-fire training is critical. It's the closest thing to combat," said Hanagan.

The rangers seem to feel their mission dictates training be as real as possible.

"We have to keep our edge as the most highly skilled light infantry unit in the world," said Staff Sgt. David R. Isbell, a weapons squad leader in Company B, 3rd Bn.

"We stay combat-ready through intense training," he said, "because we could be called on for a real-world mission any time. We can't get that kind of training just at Fort Benning. Planners have to have the chance to plan a mission in a variety of terrains and with a variety of forces. We (the soldiers) have to execute those plans."

Keith D. Butler

Pvt. 2 John S. Maddox, company B, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, applies camouflage before jumping on a mass-tactical airborne operation at Lop Buri, Thailand.

At the 72-day Ranger School, students must pass an initial phase of physical training in the "Darby" phase and complete a desert phase at Fort Bliss, Texas, said Sgt. Lindsay L. Bunch, a rifle squad leader in Company B. Students must also complete training phases in the mountains of Georgia and swamps in Florida.

"The terrain here is unique. the low ground is flat and sparsely vegetated now. The hilly areas are very steep," said Bunch, a 23-year-old, Bourbonnais, Ill., native. "The Thais have enemy all around them. Many of their rangers have seen combat."

For some of the U.S. rangers, the training in Thailand brought more than expected. Similarities in intensity, methods and personal dedication between the two countries' forces surprised anti-tank squad leader Staff Sgt. David Wilson.

"They (the Thais) hit the wire, busted through and assaulted a bunker really fast," said Wilson. "It all went down simultaneously with our guys. I was really impressed."

At the end of the training, the rangers will exchange badges of their nations' paratroopers, as well as other momentos, in a ceremony.

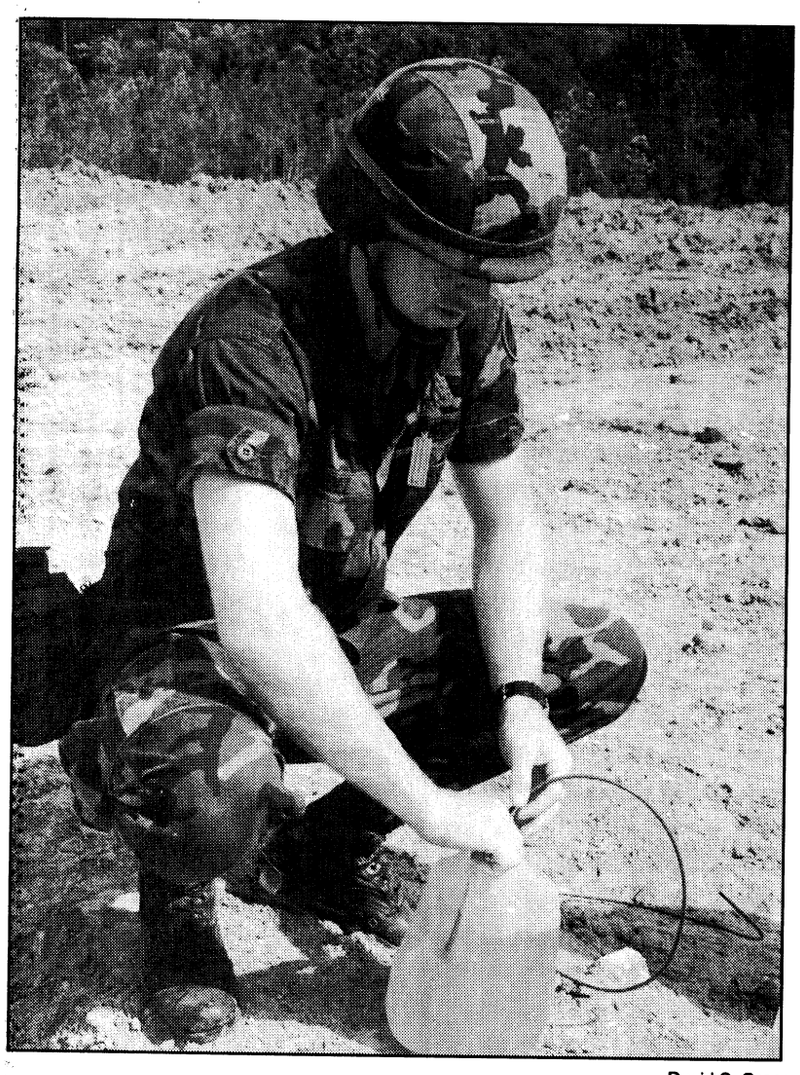
"I will be proud to wear the Thai wings," said Good of the badge that sports three elephants in the center. "We've also exchanged T-shirts and patches."

324th changes command

3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

The 324th Support Battalion (Forward) will host its change of command ceremony 9 a.m. June 15 at Dickman Field.

The outgoing commander is Lt. Col. Robert T. Dail, who assumed command of the 197th Support Battalion (Separate), July 1, 1991.



Assuming command is Lt. Col. David P. Kapinos who comes to Fort Benning from the 10th Mountain Division, Fort Drum, N.Y.

Kapinos deployed with the division as the executive officer for the 10th Support Battalion (Forward), in support of the Hurricane Andrew relief effort in Homestead, Fla., and Operation Restore Hope in Somalia.

In case of rain, the ceremony will be in the Kelley Hill Fitness Center.

36th's flame work gives 'hands on'

By David Greer
36th Engineer Group

Selected soldiers from the 36th Engineer Group received hands-on training in the construction and employment of flame field expedients at Brown Range May 25.

According to the group training officer, Capt. Michael Mumford, flame field expedients are basically designed as defensive weapons but may also be used during offensive operations.

"This training will provide the soldiers with the knowledge needed to advise his or her chain of command on the options of employing FFEs," said Mumford.

Tactical uses of FFEs, said Mumford, include their being placed on combat outposts to provide early warning on the movements of enemy units near friendly locations, producing enemy casualties with thickened fuel or container fragments, illuminating the battlefield during the hours of darkness and driving the enemy force into an area where it could be profitability engaged.

"We want our soldiers to train like they will perform on the battlefield and this type of training motivates the soldiers to learn." said 1st Lt. Sophia Thomas the group chemical officer.

This sentiment was echoed by Staff Sgt. David Gross, training noncommissioned officer for Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 36th Engr. Grp.

"We need more of this type of hands-on training. It builds teamwork, espirit de corps and most important it puts what you've learned in the classroom to the test of reality."

PEACE ON EARTH

Make perceptions positive

By Donald Wilkerson
USAIC Chaplains' Offiice

Some of the world's greatest problems can be improved in the simplest ways.

I recall an incident that happened during my tour of service in Europe. An elderly German woman entered a cafe and ordered an assortment of cookies.

While waiting, she visited the ladies' room. Returning to her table, she saw a young soldier sitting there. As she watched, the waiter served the cookies and the soldier ate one.

The lady was upset and determined not to be taken advantage of. She responded by quickly sitting at the table and eating a cookie.

They both continued until they finished. Then the soldier smiled and left.

The lady was reminded of all the stories told of disrespectful soldiers. She made the obvious conclusion and gathered her purse to leave.

As she was leaving, the waiter approached her table with the order of cookies she had placed.

We all have perceptions of soldiers and people we see daily. Maybe it's the clothes they wear or the music they listen to that we judge them by.

Sometimes it's their skin color or their sex. Sometimes it's the rank worn on our collars or entered on our family members' identification cards.

Let there be peace on Earth, and let it begin with me

No matter what we use, we can be assured that it happens in reverse — perceptions go both ways.

When perceptions cause us to treat people differently we then begin to discriminate. It's a simple process and it leads to very serious consequences.

I believe that people should have the opportunity to pursue all that life can afford them as long as it does not mean restricting others' rights to do the same.

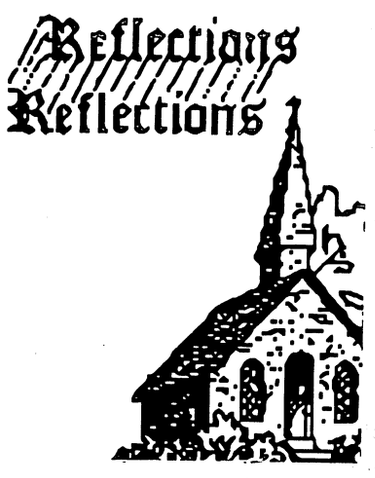
What possible solution can I offer to help?

If there will be any progress it must start with me. I make the difference in how you perceive me.

It may not kick in immediately, but it takes root over a period of time. Possibly when I speak a kind word and smile. Perhaps when I excuse myself when your grocery cart bumps me in the Commissary.

I will do my best to treat you as I would like to be treated.

When I practice this, and it won't always be easy, I hope you meet me in the middle to pursue a shared and enjoyable life.



The words of a special song sung at benedictions from my church read, "Let there be peace on Earth, and let it begin with me."

I communicate this with different words among soldiers. Don't wait for someone else to be professional; be professional first.

REFLECTIONS

Trinity basic tenet of Christian faith

USAIC Chaplains' Office

Celebrated as the octave of Pentecost, Trinity Sunday was the official beginning of the "ordinary" time in the church's calendar. It was fitting that green would become the liturgical color since it was on the Emerald Isle of Ireland that St. Patrick would preach to the Celts about the Trinity, using the three-leafed shamrock to illustrate this history.

And history it is. How can there be one God and three divine persons? Jesus who revealed the triune God was executed because of it. He signed his death warrant in monotheistic Israel when he answered the high priest at the Sanhedrin that he indeed was God.

No matter how many times he told his disciples about God being his father, they failed to accept it. The very night before his death, Philip was asking Jesus to show him the Father, only to be reminded "who sees me sees the Father." His last instructions before the ascension were trinitarian: "Go and baptize all people in the name of the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit."

Since then, Christianity has increasingly acknowledged this revelation as a basic tenet. The sign of the crossed traced by the right hand as a blessing given or accepted while invoking trinity "in the name of the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit" has become a standard.

St. Paul's effusive salutation "the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ and the love of God and the fellowship of the Holy Spirit be with you" is one of many where he reflects the trinitarian personality of God. The traditional ending of prayers from the beginning of Christianity "through our Lord Jesus Christ, your Son who lives and reigns with you in the unity of the Holy Spirit" does the same.

When they exhumed the remains of the noble Roman maiden Cecilia, beheaded for her Christian faith, her fingers were still displaying her belief in the Trinity.

We may not be martyrs of the faith as she was, but still we may strive to fathom this history of three persons in one God through prayerful meditation of Jesus' message about his father and the Holy Spirit in the 14th chapter of John's Gospel.

Club to host match around the 'Glock'

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Rifle and Pistol Club of Fort Benning will host the Old South Classic Regional Glock Pistol Match at English Range June 19 and 20.

Participants must use Glock pistols and must be a member of the Glock Sport Shooting Foundation. A $15 annual membership fee is available with registration by mail or at the match.

Entry fee for this match is $25 before June 11 or $35 at the match. Military personnel will pay $20 before June 11 or $25 the day of the match.

Equipment needed for the match will consist of Glock pistols only, safe holster, ear and eye protection and 100 rounds of factory ammunition for the match and fun shoot. There will be separate classes for Glock "L" models and unlimited pistols (those with aftermarket modifications.)

Competitor classifications are set up for civilian, law enforcement, military, unlimited and 17L.

Civilian class is open to competitors shooting a stock Glock pistol without any aftermarket modifications. Dealer teams will consist of three regional amateur or unlimited competitors who declare as a team at the time of registration.

The same classification will also be in effect for the law enforcement and military classes except in the law enforcement team category, shooters must be from the same department or agency.

The unlimited category will consist of professional shooters, master class National Rifle Association, Practical Police Course, International Practical Shooting Convention and top 25 percent finishers of major shooting competitions. All competitors will fire modified pistols.

The 17L class will be any competitor shooting a stock model 17L who is not classified unlimited.

Glock pistols will be awarded to the high A, B and C class competitors from each of the civilian, law enforcement and military classes. Cash prizes will be awarded to second through 10th place, with 12th or 15th place receiving a cash award in each of the A, B and C classes, depending on the total number of entries. Team plaques will be awarded to the top three places in these categories.

Cash awards will go to the top three places in the unlimited and 17L classes.

The match will be shot under the "Lewis System" in which the top third of the competitors are the A class, middle third B class and bottom third C class.

> "We are very excited to finally capture this event. We consider this a feather in our cap."
> — Jim Graham
> Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club

"We have been trying for the last two years to get this match here," said safety coordinator Jim Graham of the Rifle and Pistol Club. "We are very excited to finally capture this event. We consider this a feather in our cap."

The match will consist of three stages that each competitor will shoot. All events are timed.

Stage one will be called "Glocking out" and will consist of at least 20 rounds being fired from 11 yards at six paper targets and four steel pepper poppers. There will be a 10-point penalty for each miss on paper and for steel left standing.

Stage two is called "Glock standards" and will consist of three firing lines at 7, 15 and 25 yards with a total of 36 rounds being fired.

The third and final stage is called "Glocking plates" and will be fired from a range of 11 yards. A total of 24 rounds will be used in this stage. The object of this exercise is to knock down all the plates in the quickest time possible, with as few shots as possible.

They can be shot in any order. There is a 10-point penalty for each plate left standing after 25 seconds on each run.

"We hope to have more than 300 shooters from all around the Southeast participate in this match," said Graham. "There will also be food sales, T-shirt vendors and, hopefully, a gunsmith on hand to fix any problems the competitors might have."

To preregister, send the registration form before the deadline along with payment to: GSSF, P.O. Box 1254, Smyrna, Ga. 30081 or register the day of the match. Shooters may compete either day.

For more information, contact the Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club at 689-3371.

Get to the 'roots' of gardening safety

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Yard work should mean more than digging out your garden tools from the back of the shed and filling the gasoline tank.

The same hedge clippers, weed trimmers, mulchers and tillers that make your yard beautiful can also cause permanent injury or death to operators and bystanders.

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission estimates that 133,000 injuries associated with lawn and garden tools were treated in U.S. hospital emergency rooms in 1991.

Injuries often occur because of improper use, failure to heed important safety instructions from the manufacturer, inadequate maintenance of tools, and mechanical problems. Often, the victims of these accidents are children who are unaware of any danger and are playing in the area where power equipment is being used.

When using any lawn or garden tool, CPSC reminds you to:

• Wear sturdy shoes or boots that provide adequate traction on slippery grass. Tennis shoes and bare feet are no match for whirling blades and thrown objects.

• Wear long pants and long-sleeved shirts to provide some protection from thrown objects.

• Wear eye protection. Even a small piece of grass or speck of grit in the eye can cause a very painful abrasion. When using motor-driven equipment, use hearing protection.

• Wear heavy gloves when changing or sharpening blades and when cleaning around blades. Tool blades can cut or pinch hands or fingers even when tools are not operational.

• Walk around the area in which you will be working before starting lawn and garden work, and remove any objects that could damage the equipment or cause injury or property damage. Objects such as stones, metal, glass or wire can break bones and cause other severe injuries when thrown from lawn-mowers and other equipment.

• Keep children indoors, away from power equipment. Children move quickly and are attracted to mowing and other power equipment activity.

• Be sure that safety devices on the equipment are in place and functioning properly before starting work.

• Unplug electric tools and disconnect spark plug wires on gasoline-powered tools before making adjustments or clearing jams near moving parts.

• Be sure power tools are turned off and made inoperable if they must be left unattended. This will prevent use by children.

• Remember never to fill gasoline tanks while equipment is operating or when equipment is still hot.

• Older teen-agers should only be allowed to operate outdoor power equipment if they possess adequate strength and maturity to do so safely. They also should be supervised by a responsible adult. Never let younger children operate power lawn and garden equipment.

• Never work with electric power tools in wet or damp conditions. Be sure that extension cords are in good condition and are the proper size for the electrical current capacity of the tool.

The best protection against electric shock is to use a ground fault circuit interrupter.

The interrupters come in four varieties, including a type that can be used as part of an extension cord and a type that can be wired into your home's electrical system.

Get your calcium here

By Sarah L. Van Eden
Martin Army Community Hospital

Calcium is important for your health. Your body cannot make its own calcium. Therefore, you need to supply it with calcium by eating calcium-rich foods. The Recommended Dietary Allowances for calcium varies throughout life. Adults 25 and older need 800 milligrams daily to prevent osteoporosis later in life. Pregnant or breastfeeding women need 1,200 milligrams, children 1 to 10 years 800 milligrams, and adolescents ages 11 to 24 need 1,200 milligrams daily.

Calcium is very important because it is essential for many processes in the body including heart beat regulation, for nerves, and is a major component of bones and teeth. With adequate calcium in the diet, the onset of osteoporosis can be prevented or delayed in later life. Osteoporosis is a disease that leaves bones porous, fragile and susceptible to fractures. While it affects mostly women, it can affect men also. Other risk factors for osteoporosis include lack of exercise, heavy smoking, family history, small bone frame and menopause.

While numerous foods contain calcium, dairy products are the chief source of calcium. Dairy foods also contain protein and other vitamins. It has been recommended that calcium should be obtained from natural food sources rather than from supplements that may not be absorbed as well. The best choice is lowfat or nonfat dairy products. Even lactose-intolerant people can still get calcium from lactose-reduced milk, yogurt and cheese.

Are you giving your body the calcium it needs?

These foods are the best sources of calcium:

Get a new lease on renting

Columbus Board of Realtors

The decision has been made — you're going to rent a house, apartment or trailer. This may or may not be your first time renting, but it will be well worth your time to go over a few essential items. Keep copies of everything you have signed.

First and foremost is the lease. This is the agreement that details your agreement. It should have the term of the lease (six months, one year, etc.), the amount of the rent and when it is due, late charges and dishonored check fees, repairs and default. It may provide terms for early termination.

If you sign a lease for six months, you are liable for six months' rent. Moving on post to government quarters is not cause for terminating your lease without penalty.

Permanent change of station orders and, in some cases, temporary duty orders, do allow you to terminate your lease with notice. Make sure you understand the terms of the lease before you sign it.

When you move in, you should be asked to prepare a move-in inspection. The sole purpose of this inspection is to establish the condition of the property when you occupied it. It is not a work order, but it is important when you move.

While you are renting, the landlord has certain responsibilities. Foremost is to maintain the property in a livable condition. This means the landlord is responsible for making repairs to the systems (electrical, plumbing, heating, etc.) and structure in a timely manner as they are required. It will be between you and the landlord whether cosmetic fixes are made.

Under certain conditions, if the landlord does not make repairs in a timely manner after you have notified him or her, you may make the repairs and deduct the cost from your rent (check with Legal Assistance at the Staff Judge Advocate's Office before you do this). However, you should not refuse to pay rent because a repair has not been made.

What should happen when you move out? First, you should give notice that you are moving as stipulated in your lease.

Within three business days after you move out, the landlord should inspect the property and determine if you will be charged for any damages.

The notification of any charges should be in writing. If you disagree with any charges, you must do so in writing within five days after terminating occupancy.

The Columbus Board of Realtors can help you with general information concerning the landlord and tenant relationship. If you have specific questions, you should consult Legal Assistance at the Staff Judge Advocate's Office.

Ship your car: dos and don'ts

American Forces Information Service

The Military Traffic Management Command ships thousands of service members' privately owned vehicles overseas and back to the United States every year.

Making a permanent change of station move isn't easy, but the command revised a pamphlet, "Shipping Your POV," to make at least this part of a move easier.

The pamphlet includes information on the 10 stateside ports operated by the command. In addition to city maps that show the location of each port, information includes hours of operation, telephone numbers, availability and approximate cost of local transportation, military exchange facilities and lodging. Special notes, such as catalytic converter information, car pickup services and how long the port takes to process a vehicle are included.

The pamphlet also discusses individuals authorized to ship a privately owned vehicle, licenses, insurance, what can be shipped in the vehicle, size limitations and restrictions. Specific information on these items is available at local transportation offices.

The Department of Defense's export and import control program plays an important role in shipping a privately owned vehicle, according to the pamphlet. This program covers the catalyst systems. The pamphlet explains when and if the catalytic converter needs to be removed from the vehicle before shipping overseas. According to the pamphlet, an individual may get up to 30 days after arrival in the United States to reinstall the catalytic converter.

Environmental Protection Agency and U.S. Customs Service forms required for import and export of a POV are listed, with specific requirements noted, such as original signatures and dates on the forms.

A privately owned vehicle being shipped must be clean, or the shipping terminal will refuse to accept it for processing. Dirt, soil and similar matter must be removed from behind the bumpers and bumper extension panels, as well as from under the wheel wells and undercarriage.

The pamphlet includes a checklist to simplify and speed up processing for overseas shipping at the port. Rules include:

• Have seven copies of all movement orders and amendments, along with a valid driver's license.

• Make sure there are two complete sets of car keys, one to turn in with the vehicle and one to use when picking it up.

• Disconnect anti-theft device or installed auto alarm before turn-in.

• Make sure the vehicle is in a safe and operable condition, along with meeting all host-nation safety and emission requirements.

• Write down the make, model, color and serial number of the vehicle, as well as the mileage at time of turn-in.

• The POV should contain no more than one-fourth of a tank of fuel at turn-in.

• Provide an address for notification when the vehicle arrives at the overseas port and can be picked up.

When picking up the POV, the required documentation includes proper identification, such as a military identification card and driver's license; a complete set of keys; and a copy of DD Form 788, Private Vehicle Shipping Document.

For information, check with the local transportation office and read the 1992 edition of Shipping Your POV, publication number DoD GEN 42 and NAVSUPPUB 590 (Stock #0530-LP-186-3600).

Are you really covered?

Better Business Bureau

Whether you're in the market for a new watch or a washing machine, as you compare prices, styles and features of competing brands, don't forget to compare warranties, too.

A warranty can be an oral or written promise by a manufacturer or retailer stating that he will stand behind a product or service. Warranties must tell you what is covered, who covers it, for how long, and what you must do to be satisfied if something goes wrong.

Most warranties are labeled full or limited. A full warranty is one that will repair, replace or refund money on a consumer product within the warranty period. A limited warranty is just what its name implies, and covers somewhat less than the full warranty.

Checklist

Check your warranty for ...

- ✓ What is covered
- ✓ Period of coverage
- ✓ Backing — retailer or manufacturer
- ✓ Conditions or limitations
- ✓ Parts excluded from warranty
- ✓ Whether warranty must be applied for

Written warranties come with most major purchases, although they are not legally required. The protection offered by written warranties varies greatly, so it is important to compare warranties before making a purchase. Check to see how long the warranty lasts, if there are any parts or repair problems excluded from coverage and if there are any conditions or limitations on the warranty.

Oral promises made at the time of sale or advertising claims may be considered unwritten warranties. However, to be sure you receive the promised service if something goes wrong, have the salesperson put the promise in writing.

Retailers must make warranty information readily available to consumers before the product is purchased by displaying it on or near the warranted product, or by placing signs in prominent locations stating that the warranty is available for review upon request.

When warranted products are sold by catalog or through mail solicitation, a copy of the warranty must be available, or there must be a notice stating where it may be obtained at no cost from a specified address.

Boat safely for smooth sailing

By Emerson E. Addington
U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary

National Safe Boating Week begins Sunday and continues to June 12. The theme is "Boat Smart".

National Safe Boating Week is sponsored by the National Safe Boating Council, Inc., and is an annual national media event that launches the recreational boating season in the United States. National Safe Boating Week not only starts the traditional boating season, but also introduces the year-long campaign to provide boaters more information about their sport.

Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr., commanding general of Training and Doctrine Command, signed a proclamation May 1 affirming support of the goals of National Safe Boating Week and proclaiming the week "National Safe Boating Week in TRADOC."

Boat Smart — learn these tips for safe boating and make National Safe Boating Week an accident-free week for Fort Benning and TRADOC.

• Take a boating safety class offered by your local Coast Guard Auxiliary or Power Squadron.

• Know your boat's load limit and don't exceed it. A safe boat is a well-equipped boat. Always carry the necessary safety gear and know how to use it. Get a courtesy marine examination from your Coast Guard Auxiliary.

• Knowing how to swim just makes good sense if you spend time on the water. If you don't know how, learn; take a Red Cross course. Check with the Red Cross Office on post for its next class.

• Keep life jackets visible and accessible. Never make another person feel uncomfortable if they choose to wear it. Keep in mind more than 86 percent of the boating fatalities in 1991 were not wearing their life jacket.

• Learn "the rules of the road" and obey them. Like the nations' highways, there are waterway traffic rules. But, unlike our highways there are not any white lines or road signs. There are rules for passing, closing head-on and crossing another vessels operating path.

• Don't overload your boat or exceed its authorized motor size. Check your data and capacity plates mounted on your boat.

• Remember, while a drink or two can relax you and make your day more enjoyable, they may also slow your reaction time, reduce your coordination and increase your susceptibility to hypothermia.

Boat Smart — Know your boat, the equipment on the boat, the safety devices and wear your life jackets.

For more information on boating, call Emerson E. Addington at 545-7649 or 568- 1235.

'Good as new' or too good to be true?

Better Business Bureau

If you're buying an advertised product that is not brand new, are you familiar enough with terms such as "used," "reconditioned" or "as is" to know what you're getting?

The Better Business Bureau and its members have a long-established Code of Advertising, which they believe retailers should follow to avoid misleading consumers, whether they're buying new products, a second-hand computer, irregular towels or a rebuilt car engine.

According to the code, any product that was previously used should be clearly and conspicuously described as such, or in similar terms—for example, "secondhand," "preowned" or "repossessed."

In addition, "rebuilt" should only be used to describe a product that has been completely disassembled, reconstructed, repaired and refinished, including the replacement of parts.

The term "reconditioned" should be used only to describe products that have received such repairs, adjustments or finishing as were necessary to put the product in satisfactory condition without rebuilding.

Just as "rebuilt" and "reconditioned" are often used to describe auto parts, "as is" often is used to describe the condition of an entire automobile. "As is" means the buyer receives the product in the condition in which it is displayed at the place of sale.

If that product is a car, the seller will not be legally responsible for any repairs needed after you drive it off the lot.

Merchandise that is on sale because it is defective or rejected by the manufacturer, or because it falls below standards, should be advertised by such terms as "second," "irregular" or "imperfect." Often linens or clothing are sold this way.

Teach children about strangers

Egleston Children's Hospital

How your children react to strangers is important to their personal safety. Although not all strangers are a threat, your children need to know how to deal with unfamiliar people and places.

By giving your children guidelines regarding people and places that are unfamiliar to them, you can encourage appropriate caution without damaging trust and optimism. Help your children to protect themselves without fear by teaching the following guidelines.

• Make a list of safe people (family members, teachers, police officers, fire fighters, etc.) and safe places (school, home, library, gas station, stores you frequent, etc.) with your children.

• Decide with your children the safest routes to and from common destinations.

• Practice safe responses to different situations involving strangers, such as a stranger at the door, on the phone or in public places.

• Be sure your children know their full names, address, and phone number.

Tell your children:

• Never to talk to someone they do not know.

• To say no and leave quickly if a stranger offers a ride.

• To be aware of adults asking for help. Explain that if a stranger asks for help, the stranger should not depend on their help, but can ask another adult for help.

• To refuse to be picked up by anyone other than the person they are expecting.

• To decline, leave, and tell you or a neighbor immediately if a stranger offers candy, toys, an animal to pet, or tries to join sidewalk games.

• To walk with other children on errands, to school or to the playground. Always travel with a buddy.

• To stay away from abandoned lots and empty buildings.

• To stay away from short cuts. Broken glass, unfriendly animals, sharp branches and strangers may be in short cuts and these could harm your children.

• To stay on the sidewalk when walking. On a sidewalk people can see your children and come to help if they get hurt or if someone is bothering them.

For more information on stranger safety or any other area of safety, call Egleston Children's Hospital at 321-KIDS.

Some 'job offers' really con jobs

Better Business Bureau

While the economy may be picking up, unemployment is still high causing Better Business Bureaus to continue to receive calls about supposed "guaranteed" job offers seen in newspaper classifieds. But don't get too excited about your first day of work. In BBBs' experience, most of these offers don't lead to real jobs, and any money paid up front is usually lost.

BBBs have recently reported on some job advertisements claiming to have specific jobs in such exotic places as the Caribbean island of Martinique or Cancun, Mexico, and on offers that capitalize on news headlines, claiming to have jobs to help rebuild South Florida after Hurricane Andrew.

The phone numbers in the ads do not ring to an actual employment office, but rather to a telephone boiler room full of salespeople. A salesperson may promise you a "guaranteed" high-paying job for an up front fee of $200 to $300, even if you lack qualifications. In addition, the salesperson may promise great benefits, then pressure you to send the money right away, or lose this "once-in-a-lifetime opportunity."

Job seekers need to ask themselves, "why would foreign companies, especially those in countries that are suffering hard economic times, hire foreigners when they could hire out-of-work locals?" Besides, many countries have strict regulations that severely limit employment for foreign workers.

Lightning — don't let it strike

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Lightning kills more people each year in the United States than do tornados.

Approximately 260,000 bolts of lightning bombard the Earth every hour. It can be devastating, spectacular and unpredictable. More than 600 people in the United States are killed each year from being struck by lightning.

Scientists have been unable to prevent lightning, but they have learned how to protect homes by installing electrical grounding systems.

The following safety rules will help save your life when lightning threatens:

• Stay indoors. Don't venture outside unless absolutely necessary.

• Stay away from open doors or windows, fireplaces, stoves, metal pipes, sinks, and plug-in electric equipment such as radios, television sets, hair dryers, etc.

• Do not use the telephone unless absolutely necessary.

If outdoors, observe the following:

• Do not work on fences, telephone lines, pipelines or structural steel fabrications.

• Do not use metal objects such as fishing rods or golf clubs. If playing golf, evacuate the course, if possible. If in the open on a golf course, move some distance (approximately 50 to 100 yards) from golf clubs and golf carts; if wearing golf shoes with metal cleats, remove shoes; and avoid taking golf carts or clubs into shelters or placing them near shelters.

• Do not handle flammable materials in open containers.

• Stop tractor work, especially when the tractor is pulling metal equipment, and dismount. Tractors in open fields are often struck by lightning.

• If swimming, get out of the water. Also, get out of small boats.

Jaque Hornsby tells "Stories for a Rainy Day" to Dexter first graders.

Young authors celebrate writing

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

Students at Herbert Dexter School celebrated writing with Young Authors Day May 21 and attended some 30 sessions taught by various local authors.

These writers included teachers, college professors, students, journalists, storytellers and media personalities.

Coordinators of the event for the last three years, Margaret Koger and Lynn Harp congratulated the Dexter students on collectively writing more than 1,000 works this school year.

The featured speaker for the day was Carmen Deedy, an author and storyteller born in Havanna, Cuba, in 1960. Her family emigrated to the United States during the aftermath of the Cuban Revolution in 1963.

She grew up in Decatur, Ga., and has lived in the South for 28 years. Her stories reflect her Southern and Latin American background.

The author of "Agatha's Feather Bed: Not Just Another Wild Goose Story," Deedy writes much of her own material for storytelling performances.

Other speakers and their sessions were:

- Alice Anderson, "Dramatic Play"
- Judy Archer, "On the Road with Dr. Archer"
- Lillian Baumgartner, "Anne of Green Gables"
- Sonya Boyd, "Family Stories"
- Dan Brennan, "Sunny Side Up"
- James Brewbaker, "Shuffle a Story"
- Betty Britto, "More Show and Tell"
- Cy Dietrich, "TV Personality — WDEX"
- Christopher Flatt, "Poetry Writing"
- Carrie Frazier, "Hello!"
- Bari Geeslin, "Fairly Stupid Tales"
- Mary Hamby, "Colors"
- Marie Hand, "Simply Puzzling"
- Richard Harris, "Show Me, Don't Tell Me"
- Jacque Hornsby, "Stories for a Rainy Day"
- Annita Jackson, "Rhebus Writing"
- Evelyn Jordan, "Birthdays"
- Libby Kurinec, "Creativity — Wild and Crazy"
- Audrey Leanza, "Draw a Story"
- Nora Lester, "Writing Recovery"
- Mary Lisby, "What Goes Around Comes ..."
- Peggy Luker, "When Homer Honked"
- Cindi Morris, "Marshmallow Writing"
- Cathy Orosz, "Special Endings"
- Sarah Singer, "The Rainbabies"
- Anne Trawick, "Surprise!!!!"
- Janie Turner, "Writing with RESA"
- Tammy Turner and Darci Sawyer, "Creative Drama"
- Joyce Windham, "Indian Sign Language"
- Tommye Wood and Kathy Einhorn, "Princes Don't Slay."

Don't leave your children 'home alone'

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

"During the summer it seems to be more of a problem. However, it is something we must address. The supervision of children is necessary for their protection, care and management in our community, and the safety and well-being of children is a priority at Fort Benning," according to Becky Welch, Family Advocacy Program manager.

Welch said the problem is that when school is not in session, parents sometimes leave their children alone at home or in a car while they run errands and by doing so, they are violating post regulations.

Army Regulation 608-18 states that "Child neglect is defined as deprivation of necessities - neglecting to provide the child with the following when able to do so: nourishment, clothing, shelter, health care, to include dental care and supervision."

In addition, Fort Benning's U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 210-5 rules that "No children under the age of 8 years will be left unattended in parked vehicles," and "No children under 12 years of age will be left unattended in government family quarters."

Welch added that children 4 years and younger must be attended at all times, that is in the presence of and under the protection of a mentally and physically competent individual 12 years and older, who has successfully completed Red Cross baby-sitting training.

Even while school is in session, she said, parents should know that children 5 to 9 years must receive constant supervision before and after school. Children are expected to go directly to the child-care provider's location rather than become involved with shopping or playing while en route there.

"Supervision is a parental responsibility. They should know where their children are and what they are doing," said Welch. "Parents are encouraged to continually evaluate their child's level of maturity and determine the degree of supervision that best meets his or he needs.

"Nevertheless, they will be held accountable for their decisions regarding child supervision and any incidents of misconduct by juveniles or adolescents," she said.

Children should always be provided with telephone numbers, contact procedures for reaching a parent and procedures for obtaining emergency assistance within their neighborhood.

Failure to comply with these regulations will result in a referral to the Family Advocacy Case Management Team, and the subject will be charged with child neglect.

VOLUNTEERS

Volunteer Resource Center

- The Concharty Council of Girl Scouts needs a community director, co-director and an assistant Daisy leader.
- Spouses of enlisted soldiers are invited to become actively involved in the Enlisted Spouses' Club.
- Volunteers are needed in the Thrift Shop Tuesdays and Thursdays and the first Saturday of each month. Individuals will gain retail experience while helping others.
- The Fort Benning Tae Kwon Do School needs volunteer instructors for children ages 5 to 17 years. Interested individuals must have a black belt in tae kwon do.
- The Directorate of Public Works needs individuals to assist with clerical tasks. Some assignments will provide word processing and data base experience.
- Fort Benning Red Cross needs adult volunteers to supervise the Youth Volunteer Program during the summer.
- Volunteers with library experience are needed at Sayers Memorial Library to assist the staff with shelving books, data entry and story time for children. Training and child-care costs are provided.
- The Rape Crisis Intervention Program is looking for volunteers. Training and child-care costs are provided.
- Several agencies need individuals to assist with clerical tasks. Some assignments will provide word processing and data base experience.
- Volunteers are needed in each housing area to assist community mayors.

For more information, contact the housing area Community Life Center or the post Community Life Office.

- Big Brothers and Big Sisters of Columbus need adults to share love, support and time with children from single-parent families.

For more information, call 327-3760.

Benning student to attend world scholar-athlete games

World Scholar -Athlete Games

NEWPORT, R.I. — Carolyn Martinez, a Pacelli High School student and resident of Fort Benning, will attend the World Scholar-Athlete Games at the University of Rhode Island in Newport June 20 to July 1.

The games gather 2,000 students from all 50 states and more than 100 countries for a 12 day celebration of athletics, education and culture.

Martinez, the number two singles player on the varsity tennis team at Pacelli High School, will play tennis in the games.

She was a 1992 Region 5A finalist and the winner of the Fort Benning Officers' Club Junior Clay Championship.

Martinez maintains a 4.05 grade point average, ranks first in her class and is a Pacelli Ambassador.

The World Scholar-Athlete Games were conceived and organized by the Institute for International Sport to promote understanding, acceptance and friendship among the world's youth through experiences in education, culture and sport.

Throughout the games, young scholars and athletes will collaborate with their peers from other states and countries in a wide range of educational forums and athletic events including basketball, soccer, tennis, sailing, volleyball, writing, art and singing.

Participants range from 16 to 19 years old and are chosen on the basis of their academic achievement, leadership qualities and level of accomplishment in their chosen sport or artistic medium.

To date the games have received more than 9,000 nominations from around the world. More than 80 percent of the allotted 2,000 students have enrolled.

To apply, contact the World Student-Athlete Games at (800) 843-9724.

Bodybuilder visits post

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

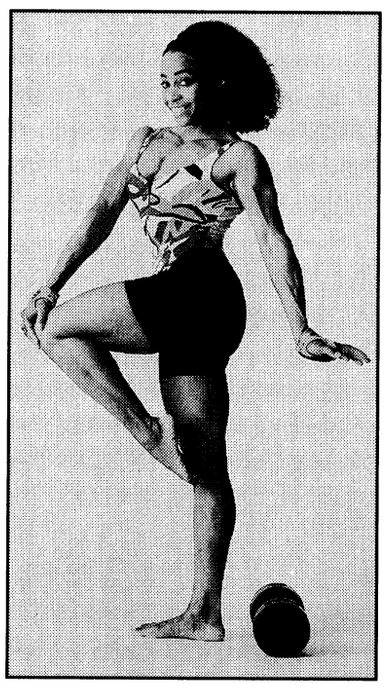
Former Ms. Olympia and Ms. World title holder Carla Dunlap-Kaan visited Fort Benning Wednesday and Thursday to talk about bodybuilding, fitness, nutrition and exercise.

Dunlap appeared at the Infantry Hall Fitness Center at 2 p.m. Wednesday, signing autographs and posing for pictures with fans and bodybuilding enthusiasts.

She passed out posters and autographed pictures at the Post Exchange at the Main Mall Thursday and performed two shows demonstrating her bodybuilding techniques and posing routines and talking to people.

Dunlap began bodybuilding in 1980 and has amassed a long list of bodybuilding titles both as an amateur and a professional.

In 1983, Dunlap won the World Professional Bodybuilding Championships, the Caesars World Cup Invitational and her Ms. Olympia title.



Since then she has starred in the movies "Pumping Iron II — The Women," and "Women of Iron," and has appeared on talk shows such as "Donahue" and "Good Morning America" as a spokeswoman for fitness and bodybuilding.

Dunlap now appears on "Bodyshaping," ESPN's bodybuilding and exercise show.

She has also been ESPN's color commentator for the World Olympic Lifting Championships, Men's World Championships and Universe Championships, among others, since 1986.

Though she no longer competes, Dunlap is still committed to bodybuilding and fitness. She now competes in triathlons.

In a recent press release, Dunlap said, "Weight training and bodybuilding are sweeping the national health scene like never before and I intend to make a contribution to the best thing to happen to the human body since the aerobics craze."

Volunteering has benefits for everyone

By Kimberly Bennett
Directorate of Community Activities

What kind of teams would Youth Services have without coaches? Where would Army Community Service be without its support staff? What would boys and girls do without troop leaders for their Scouting programs?

These are situations Fort Benning would have to face if it did not have volunteers. "Some services can't survive without their volunteers," according to Kathy Case, installation volunteer coordinator.

The Volunteer Resource Center, located in the Family Unit Network Center, Building 359, helps match active duty and retired military personnel and family members with on- and off-post agencies. These volunteers help maintain existing programs and start new ones.

Between April 1992 and March, volunteers filled 3,534 positions in the Fort Benning area, adding more than 40 percent to the civilian work force. Fifteen percent of those volunteers filled more than one position, Case said.

"Nonprofit and volunteer organizations are rich because of the diversity of their volunteers," Case said.

Family member and soldier volunteers bring a wide range of past experiences with them to Fort Benning, and because of the diversity of their volunteers," Case said.

Family member and soldier volunteers bring a wide range of past experiences with them to Fort Benning, and because of the military lifestyle, those experiences often come from across the country and around the world, said Case.

Volunteering at different posts helps family members and soldiers learn new skills that can be applied at the next post they visit.

They also meet new people and learn the military system, making the transition to a new base easier.

Fort Benning has many volunteer opportunities for those willing to give their time.

The Volunteer Resource Center recruits volunteers for more than 20 organizations.

Some on-post volunteer organizations include Family Unit Network programs, the American Red Cross, Fort Benning Schools, the Youth Activities Center and Boy and Girl Scouts.

Off post, the center matches volunteers with organizations such as the Muscogee Area Literacy Association, Big Brothers/Big Sisters and Combined Communities of Southeast Columbus.

Volunteering can be started two ways, Case said. Those who know they want to volunteer, but do not know what they want to do can come to the youngsters Volunteer Resource Center.

Case will explain the opportunities available and match their skills and interests with a position, she said.

Those who already know how they would like to volunteer their time can go directly to the organization or contact Case for information on that organization.

Either way, those interested in volunteering will be able to learn new skills, meet new people, and impact the lives of the people in the Fort Benning community, said Case.

For more information, contact Case at 545-5602.

Rape awareness month begins

American Red Cross

Marsha Wolfe, executive director of Columbus Rape Crisis, Inc., will speak on "Rape Trauma Syndrome" Wednesday at 7 p.m. in Room 22 of Building 4 (Infantry Hall).

Her talk opens a series of events and lectures marking June as Rape Awareness Month on Fort Benning. All events are open to the public.

Rape trauma syndrome describes the complex physical and emotional responses suffered by the rape survivor during the months and even years following a rape or sexual assault.

Founded in 1982, Columbus Rape Crisis provides exhaustive rape crisis services, including a 24-hour hotline (571-6010), immediate victim assistance, advocacy, education and training.

The Fort Benning Rape Crisis Intervention program offers the same type of services, except for a telephone hotline.

For information on Rape Awareness Month, or about becoming a certified Red Cross Rape Crisis volunteer, call 544-3213 or 545-1661.

Seminars offer opportunity for improvement

Equal Employment Opportunity Office

The installation's 18th annual Federal Employees' Week, sponsored by the Fort Benning Federal Women's Program Committee, will be Monday through June 11.

The purpose of the annual training is to provide information for personal and professional development.

The theme for the week's activities is "Total Quality of Life for Federal Workers." All training will be conducted in Infantry Hall, Classroom 20, except where indicated on the schedule. Additional information may be obtained from Eddie James, Chairwoman, Federal Employees' Week Subcommittee at 545-6381.

Family members and volunteer workers are also welcome to participate in the training seminars. Civilian personnel who wish to attend the scheduled events will be excused, without charge of leave, pending mission requirements.

Monday

Monday's one-day workshop is designed to help enhance professional image and attitude—military and civilian.

Coping, in a Positive Manner, with the Job Search Process, 8:30 to 10:30 a.m., presented by Harold Ericksen, manager, Job Assistance Center and Teresa Margotta, career counselor. Topics include: Establishing job search objective, resume writing, determining where the jobs are, interview techniques and salary negotiations.

The Professional On-The-Run: Diet and Exercise, 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m., presented by Dr. Jan McBarron. Bring a brown-bag lunch and learn the proper eating and exercise habits for the professional on-the-run. Topics include: Nutrition, eating a low-fat diet, importance of drinking water and including walking as a part of your daily habits.

Ways to Present a Professional Image, 1:30 to 2:30 p.m., presented by Jeannie Duncan, counselor for professional images, Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Georgia. Topics include: Appropriateness of wardrobe, body language and what constitutes a professional presence.

Tuesday

The preretirement planning workshop Tuesday is especially designed to help installation employees to plan early and make informed decisions regarding future retirements.

Can You Afford to Retire?, 9 to 10:15 a.m., presented by Susan Galloway of A.G. Edwards. Topics include: How to invest for a good retirement now and create wealth for later retirement, setting up a retirement budget, creating a personal financial plan, exploring rollovers and receiving distributions and smart ways to take your lumps.

Planning a Less "Taxing" Retirement, 10:30 to 11:30 a.m., presented by Tom Miller, certified public accountant. Topics include: Tax planning: receiving distributions and paying the taxes, strategies for minimizing taxes, rollovers for those who need income now, strategies for avoiding penalties in IRA income, and strategies for overall tax planning.

Planning For Your Family's Security - Wills, 1 to 2 p.m., presented by Larry Taylor, attorney. Topics include: The importance of a current will, how to limit estate taxes, property ownership — how joint ownership works, what if I have a blended family, selecting a beneficiary for your retirement plan and the importance of having powers of attorney.

Retirement — Having the "Time of Your Life," 2:15 to 3 p.m., presented by Roy Brown. Topics include: How to cope with major changes in your lifestyle, the importance of staying busy, dealing with life's stresses and staying young and having fun.

Social Security - Determining Your Benefits, 3 to 5 p.m., presented by Donna Smith, Social Security Office.

Topics include: Everything you wanted to know about Social Security benefits, but were afraid to ask and how to determine your eligibility and collect social security.

Wednesday

Fun with fitness is the topic of Wednesday's workshop.

Everyone Can Be a Champion, 9 to 9:30 a.m., presented by Maj. Marcus Alexander, U.S. Army Physical Fitness School. The major topic is: "Beginning a fitness program takes motivation!"

Tip-Top and Totally Fit, 10 to 11:30 a.m., presented by Staff Sgt. Dennis B. Guaglianone, U.S. Army Physical Fitness School.

Topics include: The importance of total fitness, innovative ways to begin and maintain an exercise program, dealing with fitness stresses while staying young and having fun.

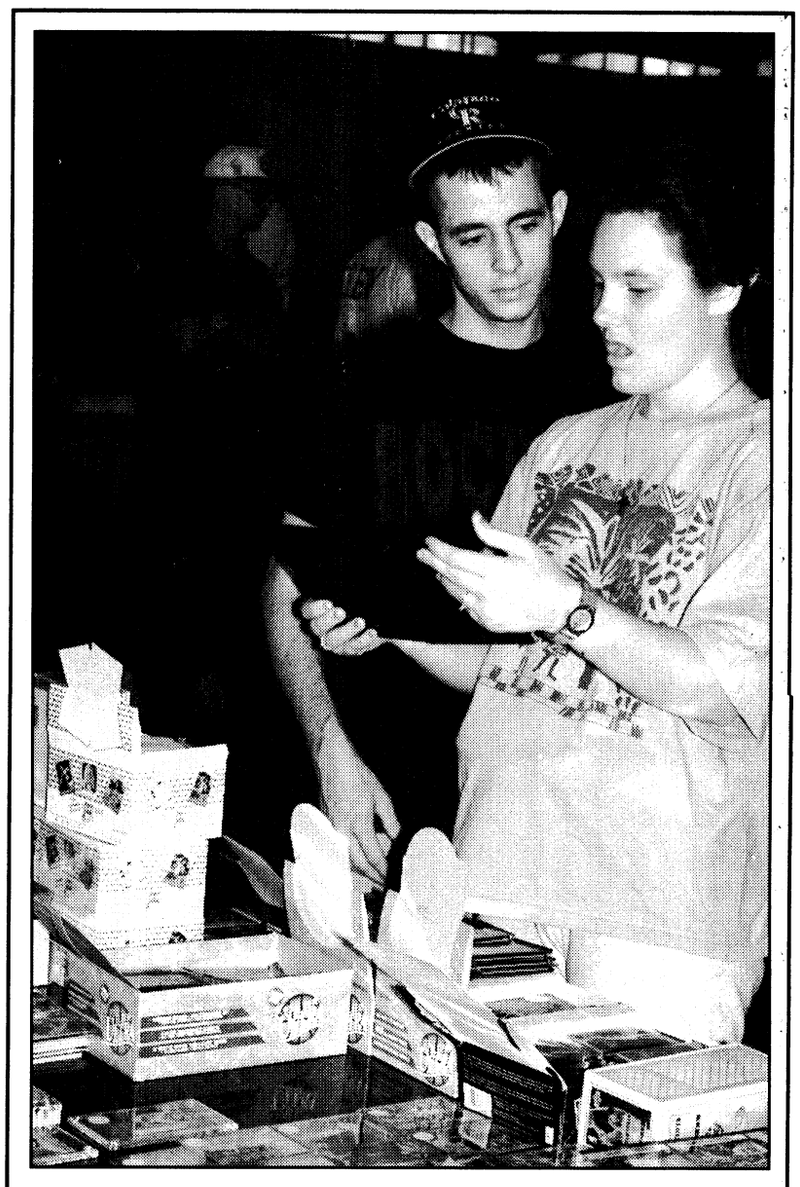
Eat to Win, 1:30 to 2:30 p.m., presented by 1st Lt. Sarah Van Eden, chief, Nutrition Clinic, Martin Army Community Hospital. Topics include: The seven dietary guidelines, proper nutrition while exercising and changes in eating habits to last a lifetime.

The Hour of Power, 3 to 4 p.m., presented by "The Bad Boys of Fitness." This will be an hour of some basic aerobics.

Thursday

The health and wellness for the 90s workshop on Thursday will provide information about health during your "working" and "retirement" years.

Retire into Health, 9 to 10:15 a.m., presented by Blue Cross and Blue Shield health benefit consultants, Ann Shore and Tracy Mathis. This seminar is designed to address health issues particular to middle and retirement age individuals.



Solving the Home and Work Puzzle, 2 to 4 p.m., presented by Tracy Mathis, health benefit consultant, Blue Cross Blue Shield. This seminar deals with balancing home and work.

June 11

The last workshop, "Families are Special," will be June 11.

Communicating with Teens and Abusive Behavior, 8:30 to 11:30 a.m., presented by Debra Howell and Elaine Kelly, social workers, Social Work Service, U.S. Army Medical Department Activity.

Topics include: Communication skills: the "glue" that keeps families together, danger signals for adolescents (drugs, alcohol, depression, suicide and problem behavior), contributing factors to child abuse and family assistance resources in the community.

Duke University

A Fort Benning family member 7th-grader has reached the academic top of the heap with TIP.

Chris Brinson, Fort Middle School student and son of Jim, military personnel officer, and Sherry Brinson, will be one of 1,092 students recognized as part of the Duke University Talent Identification Program.

A ceremony June 14 at 1 p.m., at Georgia State University's Physical Education Center in Atlanta, will honor students for academic achievement.

These students scored as well or better than the average college-bound high school senior on either the Scholastic Aptitude Test or the American College Testing Assessment, administered as part of an annual talent search.

TIP's Talent Search identifies seventh-graders in sixteen states who have scored in the top three percent on a national achievement test.

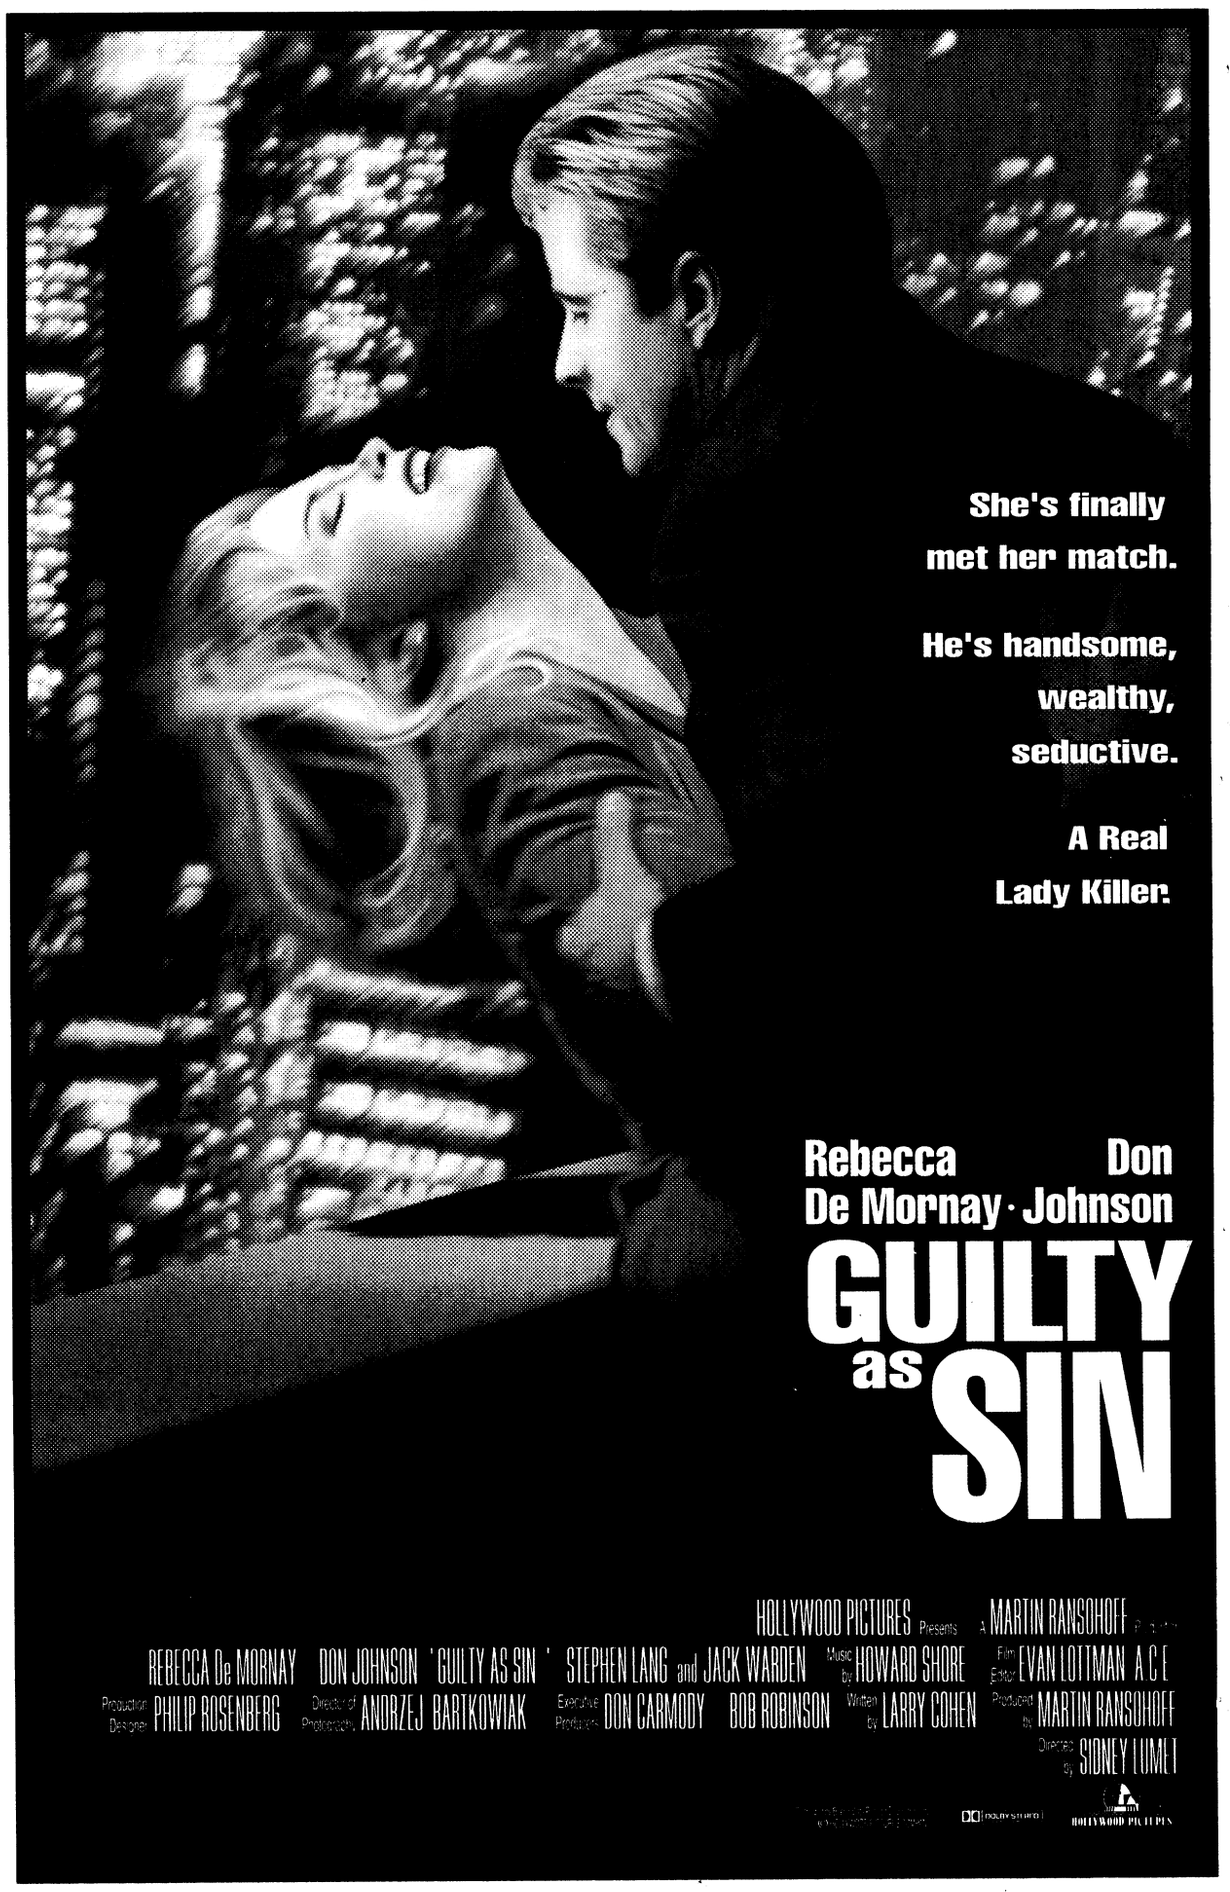
TROA awards scholarships

The Retired Officers Association

The Chattahoochee Valley Chapter of The Retired Officers Association recently awarded $250 scholarships to two cadets in the ROTC program at Columbus College. The scholarship recipients, Josette S. Brodhead and Jamie S. Thomas, were selected to receive the awards by the Department of Military Science at the college.

Brodhead has approximately three years prior service during which she was a medical specialist and participated in Operation Desert Storm.



Thomas is an active member of the Army National Guard. Both cadets are married, with husbands stationed at Fort Benning, and both are working toward a degree in nursing and a commission in the Army Nurse Corps.

Lt. Col. George Osborne, president, CVC, TROA, made a short address and presented the scholarships at a ceremony at the Clock Tower on campus.

Lt. Col. James Morris, scholarship chairman, CVC, TROA, also represented the chapter at the ceremony.

The chapter has an on-going scholarship program involving Columbus College and Troy State University.

For further information concerning the scholarship program, contact Morris at 563-5128.

TIPS FOR MAKING YOUR AD MORE EFFECTIVE

- Start Your ad with the item you are selling, service you are offering, or job title you are looking to hire.
- Be descriptive. The more information you provide to the reader, the better the responses will be to your ad.
- Use bold type, white space of decorative characters such as stars, to bring attention to your ad.
- Run your ad for an ample length of time. Remember, as soon as you get results, you can cancel at any time during regular business hours.
- Always include the price of your item.

Liza Minnelli to host 47th annual Tony Awards

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

As the Broadway community hands out its top honors again, someone who certainly knows how it feels to win them will preside over the event.

SPOTLIGHT

Liza Minnelli is the owner of three Tony Awards — for "Flora the Red Menace" (1965), her 1974 one-woman show and "The Act" (1977) — so the atmosphere will feel familiar to her during her first stint as host of the annual ceremony, as the 47th edition is televised Sunday by CBS from New York City's Gershwin Theatre.

Staged by the American Theatre Wing and the League of American Theatres and Producers, the program will have the usual array of celebrity presenters and scenes from nominated shows, but it also will feature a number of special awards beyond the 19 categories of official competition.

One will commemorate the 50th anniversary of Rodgers & Hammerstein's American musical classic "Oklahoma!"; another will cite San Diego's La Jolla Playhouse for its contributions to regional theatre; a third will pay tribute to the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Moving Picture Machine Operators of the United States and Canada, or I.A.T.S.E. for short, on its centennial; and yet another will salute Broadway Cares/Equity Fights AIDS, a charity that has raised more than $7 million in the battle against the disease.

Liza Minnelli and the Tony Award

A number of this year's Tony-nominated productions really have their roots elsewhere, in movies (Neil Simon's "The Goodbye Girl," the novel-based "Kiss of the Spider Woman," "My Favorite Year") and even on records (The Who's rock opera "Tommy," which also was made into a film previously).

What: Tony Awards
When: Sunday, 9 p.m. on CBS

Therefore, it's appropriate for the central spot in Sunday's gala to belong to a multi-media star like Minnelli ... who also has an Oscar and another Golden Globe for the 1972 movie "Cabaret," an Emmy for her TV venture "Liza With a 'Z"' (also presented in 1972) and a Golden Globe for the 1985 TV drama "A Time to Live."

The lively singer-dancer-actress (who is the daughter of Judy Garland and veteran film director Vincente Minnelli) predicts that serving as the guide for the Tonys is "going to be fun to do, really exciting." It's also a way for her to revisit Broadway which is her current preference: "I've been lucky enough to have quite a few shows offered to me in which to star, but I don't want to do that right now. I'm doing concerts with Charles Aznavour, and also some film work."

Still, Minnelli maintains, "Broadway is my home. It's where I started, it's a tradition I believe in, and it's hard work. All the people who are in it are really craftspeople. Just look at Chita Rivera — who's one of my best friends (and also a nominee this year, for 'Kiss of the Spider Woman') — or Ben Vereen, who's made such a miraculous comeback in 'Jelly's Last Jam.' All the kids in 'Tommy' are my pals, too. I'm really a gypsy, so doing this (Tony) show is going to be like hanging out with all of my friends."

11th Infantry and Fire Department gear up for safety

By Lawrence K. Hughes
USAIC Public Affairs Office

With the anticipation of the coming of summer, attention to safety is a major concern. Starting Monday, tune in to "Fort Benning Today" and see what Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment and the Fort Benning Fire Department have done to promote safety awareness postwide.

Fort Benning is the training site for Bradley Fighting Vehicle squads. "Fort Benning Today" will highlight a course that tests the BFV crews' effectiveness under nuclear, biological and chemical environment conditions.

USAIC TV Schedule
Fort Benning Today: 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 1:30 to 2 p.m.
Specials: 2 to 4:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 4:30 to 8:30 p.m.

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel highlights post events and lists classified advertisements on the Fort Benning Community Bulletin Board featuring news and music from Soldiers Radio Network.

If you are a subscriber to Fort Benning Cable, you can watch USAIC TV on Channel 3, 24 hours a day.

Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:26, 7:56, 8:26 and 8:56 on WLTZ TV-38.

For more information or to make suggestions, write or call the Broadcast Section of the Public Affairs Office, Infantry Hall, Room 602, 545-2201.

Earth, sky studies highlight event

Georgia State Parks

ATLANTA — Yearning to learn more about the earth and skies? The Summer Ecology Forum and Astronomy Fair at Amicalola Falls State Park in Dawsonville is just the event to meet that need.

The program takes place June 19 and 20, and is designed to enlighten participants about both the earthly and celestial sciences. In lieu of standard lectures, however, the forum and fair allow for hands-on participation in related exercises.

For example, the Astronomy Fair will feature a star lab that includes an inflatable planetarium. This multieducational tool measures 16 feet in diameter and 10.5 feet in height and will be used to examine constellations, moons, and solar systems. In addition, the Georgia Astronomical Society will be present, displaying telescopes and binoculars and conducting a star-gazing hike to the top of the falls.

Participants can also expand their ecological education through Project Wild and Project Learning Tree. The Project Wild workshop, set up through the Game and Fish Division of the Department of Natural Resources, is an interdisciplinary environmental and conservation program for instructors of kindergarten to high school-age children.

Macon's Forestry Commission is sponsoring Project Learning Tree, a workshop geared toward the concerns, development, and understanding of renewable and nonrenewable natural resources. Although the workshops are intended to be especially beneficial to those who instruct children, enrollment is not limited to teachers. Boy and Girl Scouts, troop leaders, and anyone else curious about trees and animals can participate in the programs.

Operated by the Department of Natural Resources, Amicalola Falls State Park is located in Dawsonville. Contact the public information office at (404) 656-3530 for a complete guide to 1993 special events.

A $2 ParkPass fee is required for entrance into the state parks; annual passes may be purchased for $25 at the sites.

Park looks back at Civil War

Georgia State Parks

ATLANTA — Sweetwater Creek State Conservation Park in Lithia Springs will remember the glory days of the blue and the gray during New Manchester Days July 9 to 11.

The event will commemorate the destruction and deportation of the historical village of Manchester during the 1864 Battle of Atlanta. The living history dedication includes costumed workers from New Manchester's Manufacturing Company, the town's Civil War textile mill and an authentic reproduction of a Union soldier's camp.

The New Manchester Days commemoration will be July 9, 8 p.m. to 10 p.m.; July 10, 9:30 a.m. to 7 p.m.; and July 11, 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. The park is located approximately 15 miles west of Atlanta in Lithia Springs.

For more information, call Bill Murphy at (404) 944-1700.

Parks offer kayaking

Georgia Georgia State Parks

ATLANTA — Paddle your way down coastal Georgia in one of five personal guided kayak adventures June 19 through Sept. 18.

Whether you're an experienced paddler or are looking for an exciting new challenge, the Georgia State Parks and Historic Sites and Sea Level Incorporated offer five unique excursions that feature water trails, tidal marshes and secluded islands to quench that summer thirst for adventure.

The Jones Hammock Trip takes off June 19 at 9 a.m from Fort Morris State Historic Site in Midway. This adventure is a 12-mile-long paddle from Fort Morris to Jones Hammock featuring the secluded St. Catherines and Ossabaw Islands. This trip is $30 per person.

Crooked River State Park near St. Mary's hosts the Intercoastal Exploration July 17 at 9:30 a.m. This six-hour trip is highlighted by a stop at Cumberland Island and concludes at the Intercoastal Waterway. The adventure also features the "McIntosh Sugar Works" mill that was built around 1825. This trip is $30 per person.

The Guardian of the Ogeechee adventure is Aug. 14 at 9 a.m. This trip is launched on Red Bird Creek from Fort McAllister State Historic Park in Richmond Hill and features the back of Ossabaw Island and returns on the incoming tide of the Ogeechee River.

Fort McAllister is the home of a preserved earthwork fortification of the Confederacy and features Civil War artifacts. The cost of the trip is $30 per person.
