Examples of these types of expenses are: medical expenses, interest on mortgages, taxes paid to state and local governments, charitable contributions, moving expenses, and losses based on damage to or theft of property.

Deduction for these types of expenses can be done in one of two ways, either taking what is called the standard deduction or by itemizing deductions.

The standard deduction is simply a set amount allowed by the tax law to be subtracted from income, the actual amount depending on your filing status: $6,000 for married filing joint, $3,600 for single filers, $3,000 for married filing separate, and $5,250 for head of household.

If you take the standard deduction route, you are allowed to do so regardless of whether you actually had the types of expenses previously listed.

You itemize deductions when you actually incurred those types of expenses and the total of the expenses is more than the amount allowed as a standard deduction for your filing status.

Thus, if you are filing a joint return, your actual allowable expenses must exceed $6,000 before you can itemize.

Most people are not able to itemize unless they own a home on which they pay a mortgage. The only allowable interest expense is mortgage interest on a home that you own and use as your permanent residence or on a second home.

Additionally, the amount of the interest expense allowed depends on when you took out the loan or loans and on whether or not the loan was used to buy the home, improve it, or on whether or not the loan was a home equity loan or a line of credit against the equity in the home.

Medical expenses are limited to expenses that exceed 7.5 percent of your adjusted gross income. Moving expenses and theft or damage losses are subject to income limits.

Charitable contributions include not only cash contributions but also contributions of property.

There are other deductible expenses such as job expenses you incur that are not reimbursed by your employer, but these are limited to expenses that exceed 2 percent of your adjusted gross income.

The tax laws on deductions change quite frequently from year to year. As a result, if you think you might be able to itemize your deductions, it makes sense to seek assistance from a professional in tax preparation.

The Legal Assistance Division operates its Tax Office at Building 2619 in Soldiers' Plaza every weekday from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. You can receive advice concerning all of your tax needs on a walk-in basis.

The Tax Office telephone number is 545-4267.

Museum receives war memorabilia

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

The National Infantry Museum received a collection of various war memorabilia donated by retired Maj. Gen. John M. Hightower Feb. 25.

The collection, items that Hightower collected over his 30-year military career, included a 75mm artillery round (French 75), American-made combination .45 caliber/Ace .22-caliber pistols, Colt pistols, German Luger and Mauser pistols and German Walther rifles, all World War II era.

"I decided that keeping the collection in my possession wouldn't be the best for the care of the pieces," said Hightower. "I know the museum will properly care for them, and this contribution is going to serve the purpose of the museum."

"The collection is a significant donation to the museum, especially the .45 pistol that was carried in two wars by an infantry officer," said Frank Hanner, museum curator. "The history behind the pieces makes it unique. Future infantry soldiers will be able to look at the pistol and know it was there (in battle). This is the kind of things we like to get for the museum."

The donation to the museum was not the only reason for Hightower's visit to Fort Benning. According to Hightower, he was selected as the honorary colonel to the 32nd Infantry Regiment, which he commanded during the Korean War. He also attended the 32nd's Companies A and B One Station Unit Training graduation.

Hightower was commissioned a second lieutenant in 1940 after his graduation from New Mexico State University. He was wounded in action in Germany while assigned with the 2nd Infantry Division.

After Hightower's duty in Korea, he served as director of instruction at the U.S. Army Infantry School. He retired as commanding general of Fort Hamilton, N.Y., Aug. 1, 1973.

Speaker urges interracial appreciation

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

The post Equal Opportunity Office hosted a luncheon in honor of Black History Month at the Main NCO Club, Feb. 26.

Guest speaker for the program was the Rev. Emmett S. Aniton Jr., pastor of the Friendship Baptist Church in Columbus.

The program started with a welcome from Col. Burnet R. Quick, U.S. Army Infantry Center chief of staff, followed by an invocation by USAIC Chaplain (Col.) Roy Plummer.

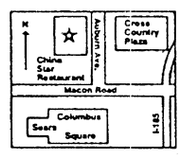
Spc. Pamela Jackson, of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, took the stage next with a solo singing performance to entertain the crowd.

Sgt. 1st Class Raymond Johnson of the EO Office introduced Aniton. Aniton's speech seemed to give insight on the meaning of Black History Month to the large crowd.

"I thank God for America, and for the privilege that she affords all of her citizens," said Aniton. "Red, yellow, black or white, we are all precious in God's sight. Hopefully, we'll be precious in one another's sight and learn to appreciate each other."

Aniton has a bachelor's degree in theology from Selma University in Selma, Ala.; and a bachelor's degree in sociology from Alabama A & M in Normal, Ala.

Aniton began his pastoral duties in April of 1979. He was called to the Friendship Baptist Church in November of the same year.



The luncheon ended with awards given to Aniton and Jackson in appreciation for their efforts during the program.

Sgt. 1st Class Eugene Council, non-commisioned officer in charge of the Equal Opportunity Office, closed the presentation with his remarks.

Dental plan to improve

U.S. Army Dental Activity

The Congress has authorized the secretary of Defense to develop and implement an improved Dependent's Dental Plan. The expected implementation date is April 1. The current DDP will terminate upon the effective date.

The new plan will cover 100 percent of diagnostic and preventive care and 80 percent of the cost of sealants and restorative work.

For endodontics (root canal treatment), periodontics (treatment of gum disease), prosthodontics (crowns, bridges, dentures), oral surgery (extractions, including wisdom teeth) and orthodontic treatment (braces) the insurance coverage will be 50 percent.

As with any dental insurance plan, there will be annual maximum allowable benefits and orthodontic care will have a lifetime maximum limit per patient. Enrollees will not pay the deductibles for any treatment but will cost-share.

The government will continue to pay about 60 percent of the total premium with the soldier paying 40 percent. The monthly premium for one dependent will be $9.65 and for two or more family members the cost is $19.30.

The plan includes automatic enrollment for eligible U.S.-based soldiers with 24 months remaining on active duty and for those currently enrolled. If soldiers have less than 2 years remaining on their current service obligation but intends to remain on active duty and in the DDP for at least 24 months, they can enroll by completing a Department of Defense Form 2494 at their Personnel Administration Center office. There will be a 120-day window to disenroll and soldiers stationed overseas will not be automatically enrolled.

The Defense Enrollment Eligible Reporting System Support Office will be mailing Dependent's Dental Plan letters to eligible sponsors during February and March. Specific details on the plan and coverages will be available through personnel administration centers.

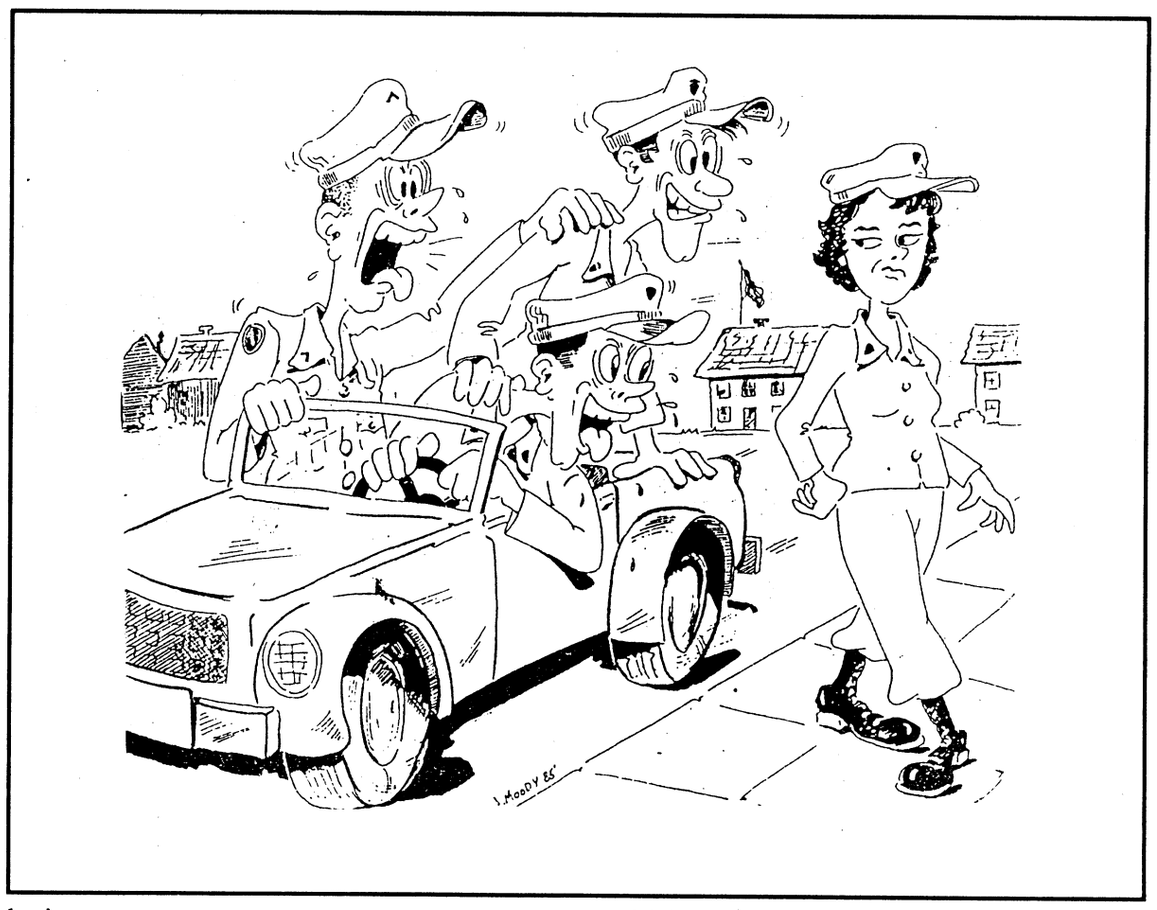
PET OF THE WEEK

This affectionate mixed-breed pup, held by kennel employee Mark Montgomery, is looking for a home. He is approximately 4 months old.

For more information, contact the Veterinary Services Office in Building 265 at 545-1127. Hours are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:30 am. and 12:45 to 3 p.m. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

If you have lost a pet, check the stray impoundment facility in Building 263. Animal control on post is a division of the Military Police Activity. An officer will pick up strays and take them to the impoundment facility.

Stray pets are given three working days to be claimed from the time they are picked up by animal control personnel. If the pets are not claimed, they become government property and may be adopted or destroyed.



Rabies tags are important, too, because it is the only way that Veterinary Services can contact the owner. Pet owners should register their pets and update their records when changes occur.

Harassment is a 'no-go' in Army

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

When 148 Fort Benning military and civilian women were asked whether they have been sexually harassed at work within the last year, 20 percent said "yes."

This was just one of the findings uncovered by Fort Benning's Inspector General's Office during a recent special inspection conducted to gauge the extent of sexual harassment on post.

The systematic inspection, conducted Aug. 5 through Dec. 31, included assessments of the complaint filing processes, policies pertaining to the prevention of sexual harassment, command inspection programs, sexual harassment prevention training and the magnitude of the sexual harassment problem on post. Included in the inspection were visits to 12 major post activities and interviews with more than 260 post personnel, including soldiers, civilian employees, commanders, supervisors, instructors and a variety of Equal Opportunity personnel.

Here is a summary of the main findings of the inspection:

• 27 percent of the female soldiers interviewed reported that they had been sexually harassed in the workplace or in a duty environment during the last year and that their commanders were either taking no action or the wrong action.

• 35 percent of the soldiers surveyed said that they would not feel comfortable reporting incidents of sexual harassment to their chain of command.

• 15 percent of the soldiers surveyed stated that they had been sexually harassed on Fort Benning during nonduty hours in the last year.

• 15 percent of the female civilian employees interviewed reported that they had been the victim of sexual harassment in a work related environment during the last year, and 40 percent of those who reported the incident said that their supervisors took no action.

• 14 percent of the civilian employees interviewed said the organizational climate of their activities is such that they would feel uncomfortable reporting incidents of sexual harassment.

• 16 percent of the female civilian employees interviewed reported that they had been the victims of sexual harassment on post in a nonwork or nonduty related environment during the past twelve months.

In general, it was found that sexual harassment affects mostly women on post. Male soldiers interviewed reported no sexual harassment directed against them in the workplace, but some reported off-duty sexual harassment, while male civilian employees reported no harassment at all.

The inspection also revealed information about the types of sexual harassment that occurs and who perpetrates it.

Among those findings:

• Of the female soldiers who reported sexual harassment at work, 67 percent reported verbal abuse, 25 percent reported physical abuse and 7 percent reported nonverbal abuse. The offenders were reported to have been co-workers 43 percent of the time, supervisors 21 percent of the time, customers 14 percent of the time and status unknown 21 percent of the time.

• Of the sexual harassment experienced by civilian employees at work, 89 percent was verbal, 10 percent was physical and 1 percent was nonverbal. Customers were the largest group of harassers, with 43 percent, while co-workers were a close second with 40 percent and supervisors third, at 17 percent.

According to Tony Ralph of the IG Inspections Branch, the findings of the survey are not all bad.

"When you look at the figures reported for females experiencing sexual harassment in the workplace on post, for example, they are lower than the figures reported in most other sexual harassment studies," he said. "What this means is that Fort Benning is doing a good job, relatively speaking, but that there is still room for improvement."

A 1981 Army-wide survey indicated that 74 percent of female soldiers surveyed reported being sexually harassed in the year prior to the survey, while a 1980 Merit Systems Protection Board survey found that 20 percent of the female civilian employees surveyed experienced sexual harassment during the year prior to the survey.

"You can definitely see that we have improved, compared to the 1980s, but we are still not where we need to be," said Ralph.

Ralph added that a follow-up survey will be conducted approximately 12 to 18 months from now to determine if there has been any improvement.

Army tackles sexual harassment, discrimination

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

"There is no room in the Total Army for discrimination or sexual harassment," said former Secretary of the Army Michael P.W. Stone last year.

Winifred B. Torain, a post Equal Employment Opportunity specialist and Federal Women's Program manager, agrees.

"The Army is taking sexual harassment very seriously — more seriously than any other Department of Defense Agency," she said.

Torain said that sexual harassment is not just harmful to the individual it is directed toward.

"Sexual harassment behavior has an economic impact on the agency as well as the employee's productivity and job satisfaction," she said.

Between 1985 and 1987, it cost the federal government $267 million to process sexual harassment complaints, according to Torain.

She explained that Fort Benning is stepping up its efforts to fight sexual harassment by increasing prevention of sexual harassment training to post personnel. Training includes instruction, discussion and interaction among the participants.

Torain said that the classes offer the opportunity to clear up many of the misconceptions about sexual harassment, such as that it only happens in the workplace or that it is not a serious offense that carries any strict punishment.

The class also helps participants recognize their own behaviors that might be unintentionally offensive.

"Sometimes people do things that are customary but nevertheless offensive," said Torain. "This includes such things as calling a male or female workers such names as baby, honey, dear, sweetheart, girl or boy."

Torain said that the punishment for sexual harassment varies from a verbal or written reprimand to suspension or removal from position depending on the severity of the offense. In instances where the conduct created a hostile or offensive work environment, removal is warranted for a first offense, she said.

Torain emphasized that supervisors and managers have a definite responsibility in preventing sexual harassment in the workplace.

This includes:

• Providing an environment free of intimidation, stress, hostility or psychological stress.

• Controlling social interactions so that they do not interfere with productivity.

• Taking corrective action whenever sexual behavior is displayed.

• Assigning responsibility to the appropriate parties by holding employees accountable for their actions.

Torain said that one of the biggest obstacles to fighting sexual harassment is that many people are afraid to come forward when it happens to them.

"We cannot do anything if it is not reported," she said.

Here are some steps that Torain gave to employees for the prevention of sexual harassment:

• Be assertive. Confront the harasser at the first sign of trouble.

• Document all incidents of sexual harassment.

• Talk to co-workers; ask if this has happened before.

• Get and keep performance documents, including memos or letters of praise for your performance.

• Get a strong support system.

• File a formal complaint.

Soldiers who wish to file a complaint should go through their chain of command.

If the complaint is against a supervisor, go to the next level in the chain. Soldiers can also go directly to the Equal Opportunity Office or the Inspector General's Office to file a complaint or for further assistance.

Civilian employees should contact the Equal Employment Opportunity Office to file a complaint of sexual harassment, Torain said.

Civilians can also call their union representative or their management or employee relations specialist at the Directorate of Civilian Personnel for further assistance.

By Definition

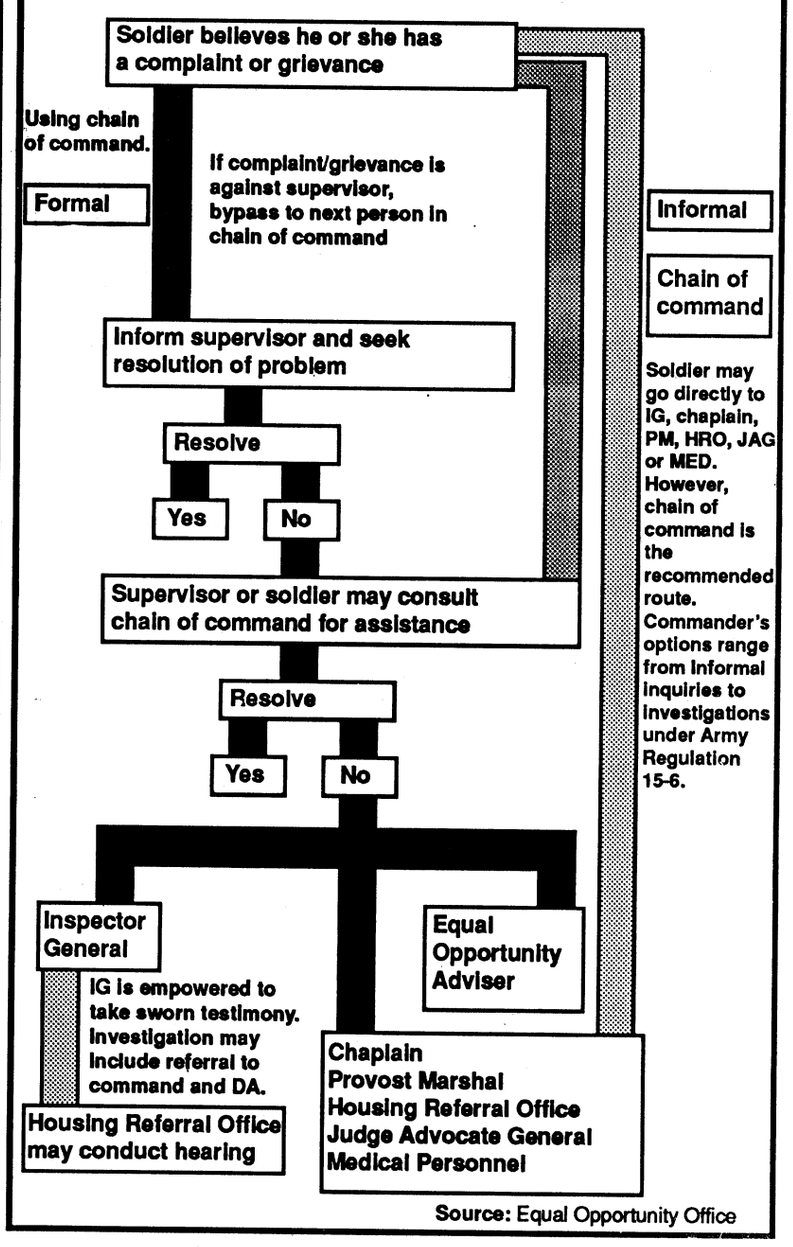
The Army considers sexual harassment a form of sex discrimination that involves unwelcomed sexual advances, requests for sexual favors and other verbal or physical conduct of a sexual nature.

Sexual harassment occurs when a person's job, pay or career is directly affected by his or her response to such behavior or the behavior interferes with the person's performance or creates an intimidating, hostile or offensive environment.

A person who engages in sexual harassment uses explicit or implicit sexual behavior to control, influence or affect the career, pay or job of another person or makes deliberate or repeated unwelcomed verbal comments, gestures or physical contact of a sexual nature.

This behavior interferes with mission accomplishments and unit cohesion and will not be tolerated by the Army.

Sexual harassment can occur almost anywhere, including the workplace. Army leaders at all levels are responsible for taking appropriate action to prevent this behavior.



Soldiers who want to file complaints of sexual harassment should go through their chain of command. Leaders and supervisors will try to resolve the complaint at the lowest level by conducting an informal inquiry.

If the inquiry proves the complaint has merit, a recommendation will be made to the commander having the authority to direct an investigation. The commander will then appoint an officer under the provision of Army Regulation 15-6, or refer the case to the staff judge advocate, the inspector general or other authority to conduct the investigation.

After completion of the investigation, the commander will provide the soldier who made the complaint with feedback on the investigation's results.

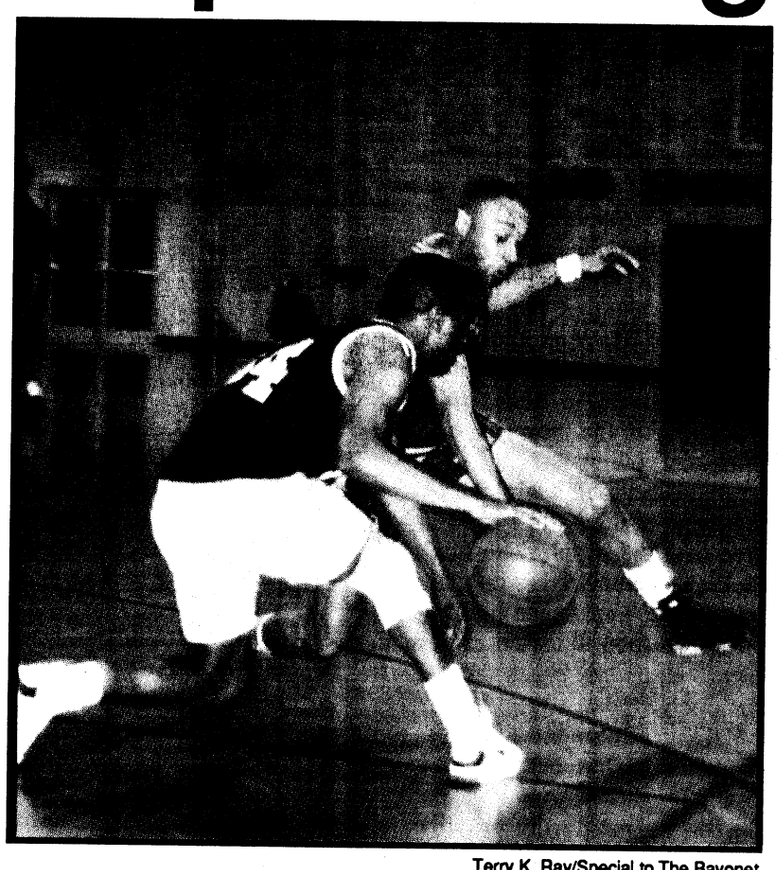
Warriors outfight Hawkeyes

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, 13th Corps Support Battalion's Warriors won the 1993 U.S. Army Infantry Center basketball championship 50-43, over Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division's Hawkeyes Feb. 23 before a crowded house at Briant Wells Field House.



After getting a reprieve in the semifinals, the Warriors wanted to prove to everyone that they were the best team on post.

"We felt that we had the best team in the 36th Engineer Group," said forward Michael Dolberry who scored 21 points for game high honors. "Our guards are the best in the league, our only concern was playing against a team with a big man in the middle."

Both teams started out a little slow; but, as the game progressed, the teams settled into the flow of the game. Dolberry found his shooting touch early in the first half scoring 11 of 21 points in the first 12 minutes. Forrest Toombs added eight of his 17 points and at the half, the Warriors had a slim lead at 22-15.

In the second half, Warrior point guard Tony Randle took control of the offense — penetrating to the hoop then dishing off to an uncovered player for the shot.

"Whenever Randle was able to drive down the lane, the defense would collapse in on him and he would kick the ball out to Dolberry for three or to Toombs for a layup," said Warrior coach Jerome Belcher.

MEN

The Warriors opened up an 11-point lead midway through the second half; the Hawkeyes then made a run cutting the lead to 38-31 at the four-minute mark. After a time out, Dolberry stopped the run with one of his five three pointers.

Hawkeye guard Tony Kennedy hit a three point shot, then a layup by Carroll Brown pulled the Hawkeyes to 41-36.

With the clock now under two minutes and counting, the Hawkeyes made their final run of the night cutting the Warrior lead to five at 46-41; but, the Warriors held strong, hitting four key free throws in the final 10 seconds to put the game away.

"When our best player Chuck Brown went to Somalia, it looked like we might have a hard road to ride," said Belcher, "but Forrest Toombs stepped up and took over the role of big man in the middle for us and here we are post champions."

Orlando Wesley led the Hawkeyes in scoring with 15 points, but he could only manage three baskets in the second half. Timmie Nettles chipped in eight points and Kennedy knocked down seven. Orlando Edwards tallied only six points for the night.

"We never got our heads into the game, and I attribute that to the Warrior defense," said Hawkeye coach Harvey Langford. "They kept the pressure on our guards all night long not allowing them to settle into a rhythm. They were by far the best team we played this season and they deserved to win the game. They played very well as a team."

The Bandits steal it from Ladyhawks

By Terry K. Ray

It all came down to who wanted it more, the Bandits or the Ladyhawks. The Bandits proved to themselves that the women's post basketball championship belonged to them with a 44-32 win over the Ladyhawks Feb. 23 at Briant Wells Field House.

In the first half, the Ladyhawks hit their first three shots taking a 6-0, early advantage. The bandits chipped away at the lead and were able to tie the game at 13-13, with less than four minutes to play in the half.

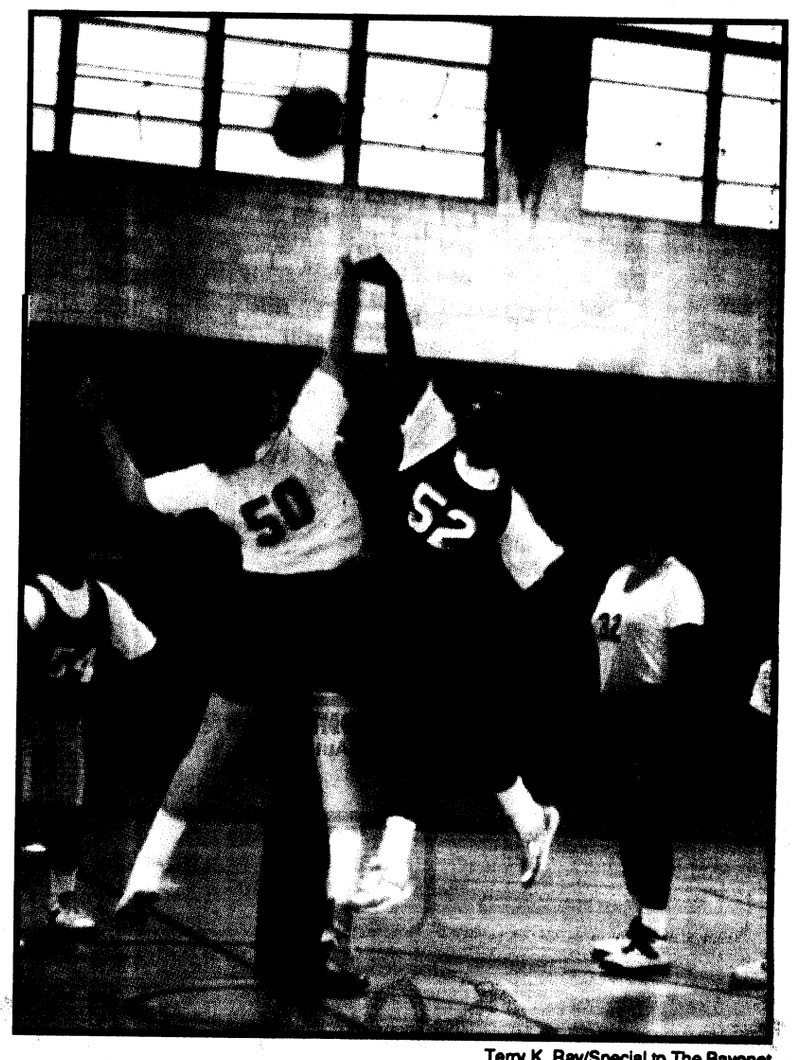
With 40 seconds left on the clock in the first half and the game tied at 17-17, Indhira Lynton of the Ladyhawks hit a layup to put the Ladyhawks up by a basket. Bandit guard Kim Shawver came down on offense and hit a short jumper in the lane to knot the score at 19-19 as the first half ended.

The Bandits took their first lead of the night at the beginning of the second half, 21-19, and never looked back. Pressure by the Bandit defense took its toll on the Ladyhawks limiting them to one shot at best each trip down court.

At the five-minute mark and the Bandits up 31-25, someone put a lid on the Ladyhawk basket. For almost three minutes the Ladyhawks couldn't buy a hoop. The Bandits took advantage of the missed opportunities by the Ladyhawks pushing their lead up to 12 at 39-27, at the two-minute mark.

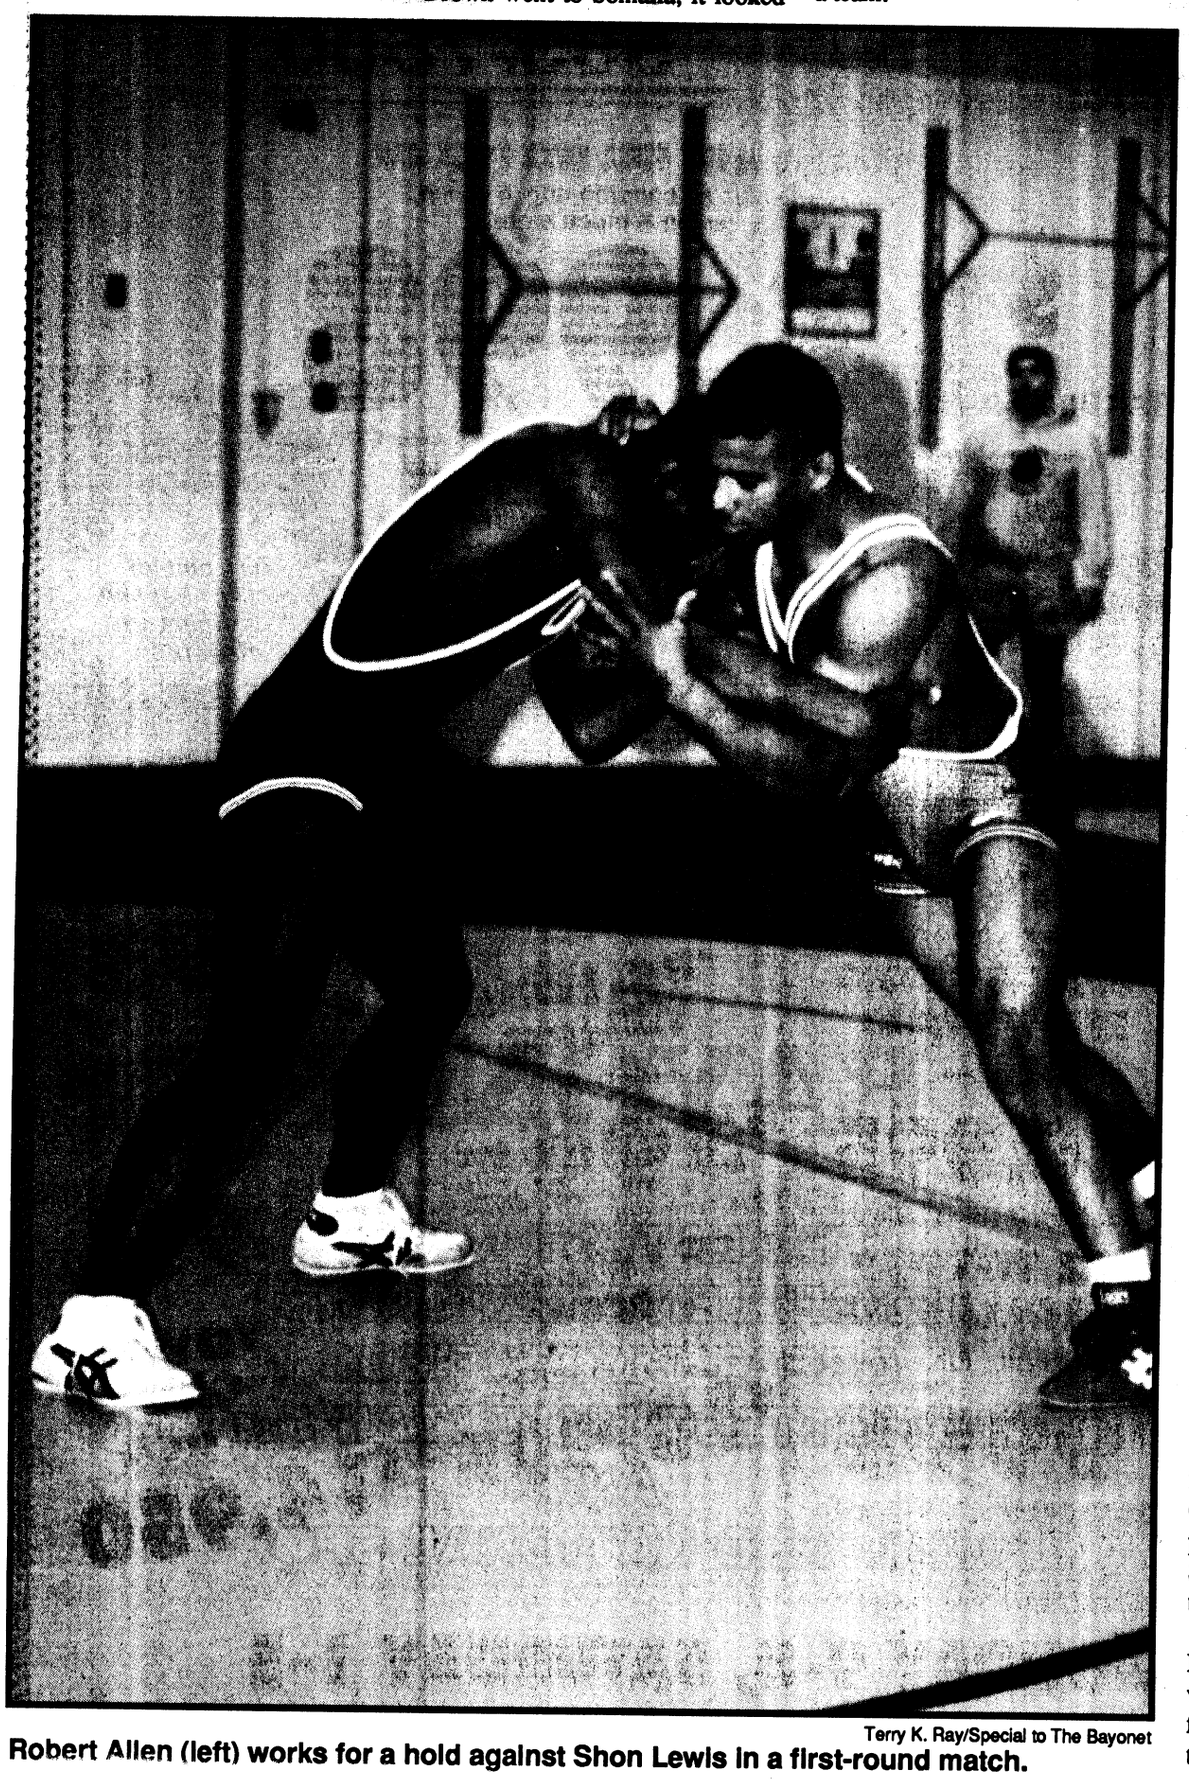
With the game safely tucked away, coach Robert Jackson went to the bench to give his starters a rest and his bench players some game time.

WOMEN



"Because of the long layoff and this being a championship, the Ladyhawks stepped up their game and we found ourselves in a point for point type of game in the first half," said Jackson. "In the second half, we threw out some different types of defenses which kind of shook them up it and allowed us to open up our game."

Valerie Patterson took game high honors scoring 16 points for the Bandits. Patterson hit for 12 in the first half when the Bandits needed it most. Kim Shawver added 11 and Sonya Mitchell chipped in nine points for the Bandit offense.



For the Ladyhawks, Lynton tallied 13 points with teammate Le Ora Graham knocked down 11 and Ophelia Samuels added six points.

"Coach told us at the half OK, you all got to touch the ball and the butterflies are gone, now go out and play the way we have played all season long' — and we did." said Bandit starter Avis Matthews.

Matthews started the game but came out early because she is six months pregnant with her third child. "I wasn't going to let it stop me from at least starting the game.

Coaches improve behavior

By Gale Sayers
PM Editorial Service

COMMENTARY

One aspect of football that has changed for the better over the years is the way coaches act toward their players and officials.

It appears that the days are gone when coaches like Woody Hayes publicly degraded a player for a mistake on the field or berated a referee face-to-face for a call that went against his team. Modern football coaches seem to handle setbacks as a fact of the game.

That's why it was major news when Mike Ditka of the Chicago Bears blew a fuse on national television and jumped all over quarterback Jim Harbaugh for changing a play on the field.

Ditka's hotheaded antics continued in the post-game press meeting, and his screaming wound up on nearly every sports broadcast in the country. While Ditka — as a player and a coach — has always been very emotional, the public reaction to his latest outburst has been one of intolerance.

A recent telephone poll in the Chicago Sun-Times showed more than 60 percent of the callers saying that Ditka should resign at the end of the season or be fired. The calls came in faster than responses to the newspaper's presidential poll.

I like Ditka, and I think he's a great head coach. But I have to agree with the people who think this kind of behavior has no place in sports. When I was playing professional football for those same Chicago Bears, my coach was the great George Halas.

Make no mistake about it, Halas yelled at his players, but he saved it for a time when it would make a difference, like during practice where problems could be corrected and players not publicly embarrassed.

Vince Lombardi, another one of the all-time great coaches, did have a habit of yelling on the sidelines at his players, and I think a lot of coaches at lower levels mistook Lombardi's yelling as the secret to his success. It wasn't.

Unfortunately, I've seen many coaches over the years yelling at young players, trying to emulate Lombardi, thinking it would make their players tougher. It doesn't. Too many young players have been turned off from football by loudmouthed coaches.

Starting with Pop Warner, football should be about only two things — fun and fundamentals. The more relaxed while learning the fundamentals youngsters are, the more fun they will have with the sport. Pressure will begin in high school and increase during college. I can't stand seeing 9-, 10- and 11-year-old children being yelled at in the name of sport.

As for today's professionals, they won't stand for the yelling, either. Most of them are getting paid more than their coaches, and if they don't like the way they are being treated, they'll just walk away. After all, it is just a game.

God answers prayers — doesn't he?

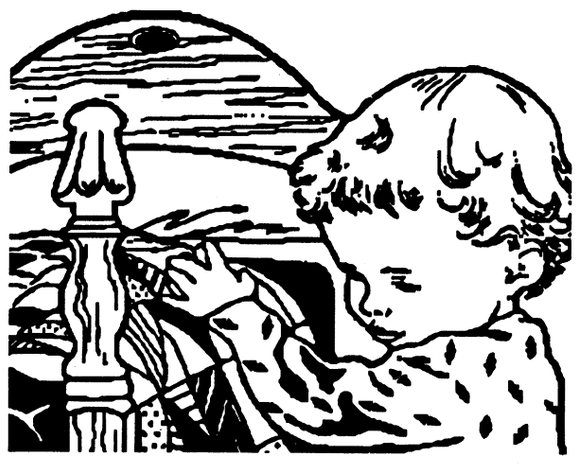
By Don Wilson
USAIC Chaplains' Office

When I think about the Lenten season, two words come to my mind — fasting and prayer.

We do not hear much about fasting today as a spiritual discipline and I am afraid that prayer is quickly following in that direction. We talk about prayer a lot. We say we believe in prayer, but what is prayer?

It has been said that "prayer is the offering up of our desires unto God, in the name of Christ, by the help of the Holy Spirit." It has also been said that "prayer is simply talking with God, and the simpler the talking the better."

James 5:16 says: "The earnest prayer of a righteous man has great power and wonderful results," (The Living Bible). When we read scriptures like this, we are tempted to ask, "Where is the power? Where are the wonderful results? Why don't my prayers get answered?"



I was surprised to discover a few years ago that there had been several scientific studies done on prayer. The study that came to my attention was done at Redlands University, under the direction of Dr. William R. Parker. The study involved 45 volunteers of different age and background who had one thing in common — they were in trouble physically, mentally and spiritually.

Fifteen members of the group felt that psychotherapy was the answer to their problems. Fifteen felt that prayer was the answer and devised their own prayer program. The other 15 selected prayer therapy (prayer with expert Christian counsel).

At the end of nine months, the following results were noted. The psychotherapy group showed a 65 percentage improvement. Those who prayed without counsel showed no improvement, some were worse. The prayer therapy group showed a 72 percentage improvement.

Over the next five years, the psychotherapy group returned again and again for treatment,while the prayer therapy group needed no more treatment at all. But the question remained, "How could one group receive such amazing answers to prayer while another group (all practicing Christians), in the same place at the same time, experienced total failure in prayer?"

A comparison was made of the two groups and the following results were found in the styles of those who failed: (1) Their concept of God was faulty. (2) Their prayers were acts of self-condemnation. (3) They could never truly accept God's forgiveness. (4) Their prayers were in a negative form.

Do any of these styles of prayer sound familiar? Maybe that is part of an answer to "Why my prayers don't get answered."

The editor of the book, "Prayer That Really Works," shares these important ideas about proper praying: (1) Realize that God is love. His love is unconditional. No sin that you have ever committed has changed God's love for you in the slightest. God knows all about you and loves you anyway. (2) Realize that prayer must be an exercise in honesty. Since God loves you, you can afford to be open and honest with him; there is no need for pious phrases and pretending. (3) Realize that prayer must be regular and regulative.

"Spare-tire praying will never be fruitful." One must make prayer a regular habit. It must also be regulative. That is, "your life must not regulate your prayer, your prayer should regulate your life," according to the book.

(4) We must make prayer positive. "Negative prayer gets negative results. The person at prayer must affirm his ability to know and trust God's love and forgiveness," according to the author.

Prayer is too important to misunderstand and misuse. God is powerful and he desires to help us in our everyday lives, but we must pray and pray correctly. One great writer on prayer put it this way, "Books on prayer are good, but not good enough. As books on cooking are good but helpless unless there is food to work on, so with prayer. One can read a library of books and not be one whit more powerful in prayer. We must learn to pray, and we pray to learn to pray."

Qur'an cornerstone of Al-Islam

By Iman Yahya Ansar Islam
Special to The Bayonet

There are literally volumes written on the words (hadith) and deeds (sunnah) of the Prophet of Al-Islam, and they serve as a means for Muslims the world over to observe how the Prophet put the Qur'an into practice in everyday life.

But the religion remains simple. There are five acts of worship: (1) Shahadah, openly acknowledging the oneness of God (Arabic, "Allah"); (2) Salah, a simple, ritual prayer, performed five times each day; (3) Sawm, fasting, during the month of Ramadan each year; (4) Zakah, charity, as a specified portion of each person's wealth, to be collected and distributed directly to the poor; and (5) Hajj, the pilgrimage to Mecca, to be performed once in a lifetime, if possible.

There are five articles of faith: (1) Belief in one God, who has no partners or intermediaries; (2) belief in angels, who carry out Allah's directives; (3) belief in the Prophets of Allah, who have appeared over the centuries to every people on Earth; (4) belief in the written words that Allah has permitted certain prophets to leave behind, including the Qur'an, Torah (to Moses), Psalms (to David), Gospel (to Jesus), and others, in their original forms; and (5) belief in the afterlife.

One day, as this worshipper meditated in a cave on a mountain in the outskirts of the city, an angel suddenly appeared to him and commanded, "Read!" His heart jumped, and he tried to look away, but the angel stood fixed before his eyes. Having no apparent choice but to respond, he managed to stutter back that he did not know how to read. The angel repeated, "Read!" He repeated his answer. The angel repeated the command. Apparently, this angel was not going to take no for an answer. So he asked,"What shall I read?"

The angel responded: "Read in the name of your Lord, who created; created man from a clot; read, and your Lord is most bountiful; he is the one who taught with the pen; taught man that which he knew not."

The year was 610 A.D. The city was Mecca. The man was Muhammad. And the words were the first five verses of the Qur'an, which can now be found in surah (chapter) 96, verses 1 to 5. Muhammad's prophethood lasted 23 years, during which time he revealed to his followers the entirety of the Qur'an, the Muslim holy book.

Post to party during

Jewish holiday festival celebrates life

By Arthur Rutberg
USAIC Chaplains' office

Don't worry, be happy!

This is the message of Purim, a rare, raucous, joyous holiday more like a wild party than a religious celebration. In fact, if you read the Book of Esther, which contains the entire story of the Jewish Festival of Purim (pronounced poo-rim), it all begins with a party.

The party to end all parties, Le Grand Fete, was thrown by Ahasuerus, the King of Persia, for 180 days. He called upon Vashti, his queen, to delight his guests with her beauty. She refused. She was banished from the kingdom. After an exhaustive search, a beauty pageant and a few more parties, the king chose Esther to be his new queen. Unbeknown to him, Esther was Jewish and the niece of Mordechai.

As time went on, the king's vizier, Haman, demanded that everyone in the king's court (except the king and queen) bow down to him. Since Mordechai was by the palace watching out for his niece Esther, this included him. But being a Jew, Mordechai would not bow down because Jews only bow down to God.

This infuriated Haman and he decided to murder all the Jews. He chose the 13th day of the Hebrew/Babylonian month of Adar as the day of execution. When Esther got wind of this plot from Mordechai, she arranged a banquet where she confronted Haman in front of the king and revealed that she too was Jewish. Not wanting to lose a beautiful queen twice in one year, Ahasuerus ordered Haman executed and issued an edict that all Jews in his empire should defend themselves on 13 Adar.

When the dreadful day arrived, Esther and Mordechai sat in sackcloth and ashes and did not eat. Miraculously, not a single Jew lost his life on that day and the following day was to be a day of feasting.

From that time on, the 14th day of Adar became the day of the "Feast of Purim." This year, the Fort Benning community will celebrate the holiday with a "Purim Party" Saturday. The celebration will include the reading of the Megillah, or Scroll of Esther.

The wearing of costumes, the playing of games and the making of loud, raucous noises when the name of the wicked Haman is mentioned is also part of the celebration.

Purim is not a holiday to be taken seriously, but it is a holiday to be celebrated and rejoiced over for if it wasn't for the intervention of Esther and Mordechai, Jews might not be here today.

6th Ranger Training Bn. pulls tropical duty

Soldiers learn fighting skills from small Antiguan army

By Karen Finn
Air Force Development Test Center PAO

It sounded like a sportman's dream — basking in the Caribbean sun, swimming in warm, crystal blue water, and hiking through the exotic island vegetation of Antigua. But make no mistake about it, these infantrymen went to Antigua to do business.

This was the first time that soldiers from the Ranger Training Brigade deployed to this small island and trained with their 97-member Army. The mission of the 11-day deployment to Antigua was train infantrymen in unfamiliar water and land techniques.

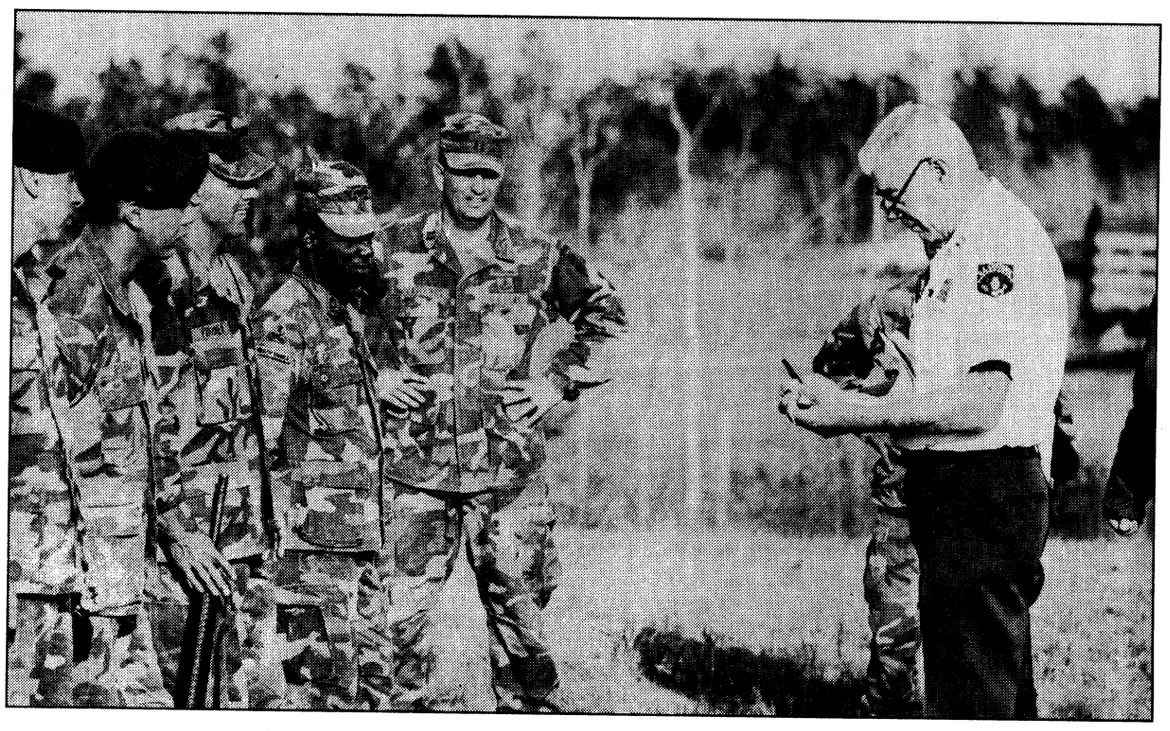
From conception to planning completion, this training mission took seven months, said Capt. Nicholas Castrinos, commander of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 6th Ranger Training Battalion., Camp Rudder, Fla.

He came up with the idea of taking the company to Antigua to train while he was there last year.

"When I first proposed the idea, it got shot down four different times," said Castrinos. "But I felt that the opportunity to train with the Antiguan army would be mutually valuable to both armies, so I pursued the request,"

In December, the Marine Corps agreed to provide airlift support for the approved deployment.

Infantrymen stationed at Camp Rudder, located at Auxiliary Field Six on the Eglin reservation, provide jungle and swamp training for the final phase of training for Army Rangers.



"Because instructors seldom get to participate in training themselves, infantry training during this deployment was important," said company First Sergeant Ismael Morales.

"The training we underwent in Antigua was very realistic. Any ranger could easily find himself in similar situations. We trained in water and on land, but most importantly we trained in unfamiliar terrain against an unfamiliar army," said Staff Sgt. Lonnie Finney.

The first two days consisted of academic sessions where the soldiers received briefings about water and land operations and the island's culture.

"Nighttime nautical operations were conducted the first two evenings," said Sgt. Mark Rudolph. "We had completed navigation planning during the day and we knew what to expect. It was still hard to see at night, so movement in the water was tricky. There is a lot of coral that surrounds the island, so it was important to be careful."

"I've never done anything like that before. All I could do was concentrate on getting to shore. I didn't want to think about what was below me," said Pvt. 2 Chad Gulley, who was chosen to be a scout and swim the 200 meters to shore in the dark. "It was scary swimming in the complete dark with no protection. The swells were a good three to four feet high."

Karen Finn

Soldiers clear customs at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla.

On shore, Gulley and another scout walked in thin, rubber booties on the sharp rocks as they checked out the area to make sure there were no aggressors. "Then we signaled for the others to come ashore," he said.

"Once ashore, the work ahead was just beginning," said Sgt. Andre Ho Lung. "We employed infantry-type tactics such as raids, ambushes, reconnaissance missions and making contact with the enemy. We were at a distinct disadvantage because the Antiguans played the aggressors; They knew the terrain and the territory, and we were unfamiliar with the surroundings. It was very much like the real thing."

"We had to learn to adapt and adjust to a different style of fighting. We were used to flat terrain and sparse vegetation in comparison to the brush in Antigua," said Sgt. James Bullock. "We were getting beat up in the chase the first couple of days because we were avoiding the brush which was thick and thorny."

But it didn't take the rangers long to make the necessary changes. Helping in the process were two observers from the Antiguan army. (The Antiguans also had one U.S. ranger attached to their aggressor unit.)

"They accompanied us on all our movements, and we learned from them how to defeat their army on their turf," said Finney. "At night the Antiguan observers would discuss land tactics and movements with us. We learned that when we were avoiding the brush the first two days, we were actually sacrificing security for speed. We soon understood how the aggressors operated and started going into the brush for protection. That's when we started defeating them," he added.

After spending several days out in the field, the company marched 10 miles back to the Naval Support Facility. "The islanders were a little startled. They had never seen U.S. soldiers marching through their homeland before," the company commander said.

The rangers worked hard but also had a chance to play. "This is the most exotic place I've ever been deployed to, so the three days of rest and relaxation after training was complete were great," said Bullock.

Tasting local foods, such as raw conch (a marine mollusk) and getting their fill of island fruits such as papaya and breadfruit were new experiences for some of the men who had never been on a tropical island before.

"Getting out and seeing what the island had to offer is something I'll never forget," said Sgt. Michael Wood. " It is beautiful here. The beaches are snowy white, the weather is not too hot, the blue water is a comfortable temperature and the vegetation is lush.

"I especially won't forget the music. The people here don't seem to have much, but there is reggae music everywhere you go. This really is a paradise.

"After training with the Antiguan army, I realize how lucky I am to be a part of the U.S. Army. I found out that most of their army doctrine comes from the U.S.," Bullock continued.

"In the U.S. Army, any private can someday become a sergeant major," said Bullock. "I have the chance to go on first-class training deployments like this one and to train with modern military equipment. Antiguan enlisted members don't have these opportunities."

WWII — A LOOK BACK

50 years ago this week ...

• Field Marshal Erwin Rommel left North Africa for the last time, returning to Germany with the hope of convincing Adolf Hitler to evacuate his depleted forces from that area. Rommel perceived the effort in North Africa to be a lost cause, wasting scores of men and much-needed resources after months of Allied advances and German setbacks that culminated in an easily repelled Axis attack on Medenine, Tunisia. As had often been the case with Hitler, he ignored the advice of his military commander, pushing for renewed offensives. By week's end, a Free French force held off another feeble German assault on an outpost at Ksar Rhilane.

• Britain's Royal Air Force Bomber Command launched a 443-plane raid on the well-defended German city of Essen. This was the first of 43 major air attacks to come in the next four months against the area as part of the costly Battle of the Ruhr, orchestrated by Air Marshal Sir Arthur Harris who was a major proponent of area, as opposed to strategic, bombing. Harris' decision to raid a nonmilitary target such as Essen, based on his belief that bombing populated industrial centers would cripple the German war effort and erode morale, served as a precursor to the later bombing of Dresden.

• On the Eastern Front, Germany's Fourth Panzer Army inflicted heavy Soviet casualties while the SS Corps penetrated Kharkov as part of Field Marshal Erich von Manstein's offensive against the Russian city. In the central sector of Russia, however, Soviet forces advanced, capturing Sychevka and Gzhatsk between Vyazma and Rzhev.

• On the homefront, President Franklin D. Roosevelt appointed a committee, composed of high-level business experts such as Bernard Baruch, to investigate the manpower problems facing American industry.

Fort Benning commemorated the 42nd anniversary of the 29th Infantry Regiment with a parade and review and a special meal prepared in all dining facilities.

Initial entry soldiers to receive expanded instruction on UCMJ

TRADOC News Service

Soldiers undergoing Army initial entry training at Training and Doctrine Command installations will receive expanded training on Uniform Code of Military Justice provisions concerning improper sexual behavior.

The president directed that training required by UCMJ Article 137 include expanded instruction on military laws and regulations dealing with sexual behavior.

Article 137 requires that within six days of entry on active duty, enlisted members be instructed on numerous provisions of the UCMJ. Training is also required after a service member has been in for six months.

"Installation judge advocates will give the training in the IET courses," said Lt. Col. Harry Gruchala, of the TRADOC Staff Judge Advocate's Office. "Traditionally, the training has concentrated on all punitive articles of the UCMJ, or crimes, which include many offenses unrelated to sexual misconduct, such as absent without leave, desertion, murder and burglary."

TRADOC headquarters directed training center commanders to add the lesson plan to military justice instruction in basic combat training and to advanced individual training courses longer than four months.

The new training will be added to all officer basic course, as well.

10th Mtn. Div. helps Somali children

By Patrick Buffett
27th Public Affairs Team

WANLAWEYN, Somalia — For the first time in more than two years, the children of this small Somali village are expected to return to school in the next few days.

This latest sign of progress in Wanlaweyn is largely due to the efforts of soldiers from Company B, 41st Engineers, 10th Mountain Division (Light), and Seabees from Navy Mobile Construction Battalion 1, Gulf Port, Miss. Both are stationed at nearby Baledogle air base as participants of Operation Restore Hope.

According to 2nd Lt. John G. Buck, 2nd platoon leader for the 41st Engineers, the soldiers and sailors have completed several individual and joint projects to improve conditions at the school in Wanlaweyn.

The 41st Engineers built new soccer goals and are close to completing a basketball court. The Seabees built two swing sets, equipment most Somali children have never seen or heard of before.

These earlier projects required ingenuity, Buck noted, in that military-provided materials were not available. Scrap metal and old camouflage netting were used for soccer goals. A bent over light pole proved ideal for holding a basketball backboard and hoop. Even the Seabee swing set was fashioned from large metal beams found around the Baledogle airfield, some left-over rope and a few pieces of lumber.

> "We know this project will still be here long after we're gone."
> —Sgt. Christopher Mann
> 41st Engrs, 10th Mtn. Div.

At the end of January, permission was given to use military purchased materials to conduct civic action projects, Buck said. That decision cleared the way for two additional projects. The two services teamed up Feb. 1 and 2 to build desks, bookshelves and benches for the school. They've also put down cement flooring in each of the classrooms over the past couple of days.

Improving the school in Wanlaweyn is the sort of project the Engineers have been waiting for since arriving in Somalia, according to Buck and the soldiers in his platoon.

"We finally got a mission that helps the Somali people," said Spc. Kevin L. Barrows. "It's even better to know that we're helping out the kids. When we go down (to Wanlaweyn) there are so many kids down there. Now, finally, they're going to get an education. They're going to have a place to sit and put their books. It'll get them off the street."

"I wish work like this could have gotten started a little earlier," said Sgt. Christopher G. Mann, a squad leader. "Yes, getting the people, food and security is important, but who knows how long that will last, maybe only until we leave here. We know this project will still be here long after we're gone."

Defense act alters separation benefits

By Saralynne Standley
Army News Service

Voluntary Separation Incentive benefits now match those of the Special Separation Benefit package, as authorized by the National Defense Authorization Act of fiscal 1993.

The following benefits and entitlements were amended by the NDAA fiscal 1993, according to the U.S. Total Army Personnel Command.

• Transition counseling is required at least 90 days before separation. Exceptions may apply when in the best interest of the Army or the individual.

• Transition health care for 120 days is added as a VSI benefit. Identification cards will show the extended medical coverage, just as those under the SSB.

• Conversion health insurance, provided by the Uniformed Services Voluntary Insurance Plan, is extended from 12 to 18 months for VSI and SSB recipients and their eligible family members; this includes pre-existing conditions.

• Transportation of families and household goods will now be provided to VSI and SSB veterans to their home of selection, regardless of their years of service.

• An additional chance to enroll in the Montgomery GI Bill is extended to VSI and SSB recipients, upon payment of $1,200. Those who separated between Dec. 5, 1991, and Oct. 22 can apply through their closest Department of Veterans Affairs regional office. Those who separated Oct. 23 through Dec. 31 should contact their local military education office.

• VSI recipients in the U.S. Army Reserve will no longer have their pay mandatorily docked to offset VSI. However, VSI and SSB recipients who qualify for retirement pay in the future will have their separation monies deducted then. So Reservists who expect eventual retirement may elect to offset their annual VSI payment from their drill pay as they go.

• Commissary, exchange and morale, welfare and recreation privileges for two years from transition is extended to VSI recipients and their eligible family members. For veterans and their families residing or traveling overseas, Status of Forces Agreements may restrict access to these benefits in specific overseas areas. The local legal adviser should have this information.

• Department of Defense School enrollment for the senior year is now available for VSI recipients. SOFA restrictions may apply.

• Veterans under VSI are now eligible for continued family housing, for up to 180 days, if housing is available. SOFA restrictions may apply.

• A one-time preference for nonappropriated funds employment is extended to VSI recipients and eligible family members.

For more information, contact the appropriate office: Transition Counseling, Army Career and Alumni Program Office; Transition Health Care, Medical Benefits Office; Conversion Health Insurance, Transition Center/Point; Transportation Office; MGIB, Education Office; or call (800) 827-1000 if you transitioned before Oct. 23; for transitions after that date, call (800) 227-5323.

For more information on retroactive benefits, call (800) 874-8451.

Tutor receives service award

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

Kathy Cray, wife of Lt. Col. John Cray, former commander of the 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, was presented with a service award Feb. 24 from Lonnie Jackson, founder and coordinator of Combined Communities of Southeast Columbus Tutorial Program.

Since coming to Columbus in 1991, she has worked at CCSC tutoring and brought others with her to help.

Jackson said that his 10-year-old tutoring program shows how Columbus and Fort Benning can work together to get things done, especially in the education field. Cray has been instrumental in recruiting adults to help tutor through her motivation, enthusiasm and high standards, said Jackson.

"I just offered the Infantry Officer Basic Course spouses the opportunity to do something worthwhile while their husbands were in the field," Cray said. "I told them that helping children succeed in education gives them good feelings about themselves — something you can't take away."

Some lieutenants' wives started coming every Saturday to help tutor.

A certified school teacher from Tacoma, Wash., Cray added that she wanted to continue being involved in education with children in some manner, and this was a way to do it.

Also, she said she saw how Columbus helped Fort Benning during Desert Storm, and she sees the tutorial program as a chance for Fort Benning to return the favor.

Jackson said Cray has spent countless hours counseling, and tutoring needy students, earning her the respect of her peers and her students.

"She has set an example for others to emulate," he noted.

Harpist visits schooss

Fort Benning Schools

The third in this year's series of fine arts concerts took place in each of the Fort Benning schools Monday and Wednesday. Katherine Newman, harpist, presented the program. Newman is a member of the Columbus Symphony and is on the faculty of LaGrange College.

Newman, who has been a harpist for 20 years, said she enjoys the chance to bring her instrument into the schools.

"I was never exposed to this kind of music as a child," she said, "and I think it's a great opportunity for the students to see what's out there."

Newman's program was presented to students from kindergarten through eighth grade. "I try to tailor the music to the children," she said. "I start on the small, folk harp with songs that are familiar to them, like 'When Johnny Comes Marching Home.'

"On the larger, pedal harp," she continued, "I play three different pieces, two lively and one dreamy, to show them the different moods and effects the instrument is capable of."

The Fine Arts Series is in its ninth consecutive year in the Fort Benning Schools. It is designed to provide children with a quality artistic experience while teaching them appropriate concert behavior, according to Dr. Beth Middlemiss, director of staff development for the schools.

Middlemiss said other artists who have performed in the series this year include a saxaphonist and a vocalist.

"We try to cover a range of music, from folk to classical, in our Fine Arts Series," said Middlemiss.

Guest artists for this series are professional musicians, many of whom are associated with Columbus College.

The first two concerts this year were sponsored by the Enlisted Wives' Club, while the harp performances were sponsored by the Officers' Wives' Club.

29th Infantry Regiment observes Black History Month

By Gregory Hart
29th Infantry Regiment

A historical perspective of black history was viewed by members of the 29th Infantry Regiment, Feb. 12 in the Kelley Hill Theater.

The speaker was Retired Col. Herbert E. Carter, a veteran fighter pilot from World War II and an original member of the 99th Fighter Squadron otherwise known as the Tuskegee Airmen. The 99th Fighter Squadron, being all black, was shunned by members of the armed forces at first but was later regarded as one of the best fighter squadrons in the Air Force, said Carter.

Carter told a packed theater about the troubles that his unit went through in the beginning and of the success that his unit had near the end of the war. One of the unit's successes included the fact that not a single bomber was lost because of attacking enemy planes while the 99th Fighter Squadron was flying escort. The squadron became famous after its members boldly painted the tail sections of their planes with bright red paint to signify them as the 99th Fighter Squadron, Carter said.

While a guest of Fort Benning and the 29th Regiment, Carter was welcomed by Col. Gregory Camp, commander of the 29th Infantry Regiment and received a first-class tour of the J. Lawton Collins Training Center where Bradley Fighting Vehicle training is done. He was later provided the opportunity to drive a Bradley.

"The backbone of any organization are the individuals who come together as a team to accomplish the mission," said Carter. He was presented with mementos from the 29th Regiment in recognition of his support of the regiment's Black History Month Program.

Post program includes educator, singer/actress

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

In honor of Black History Month, the Equal Employment Opportunity Office and Equal Opportunity Office hosted a celebrity celebration in Marshall Auditorium, Feb. 24.

The headlining entertainment was singer and actress Vesta Williams, and the large crowd present wildly applauded her performance.

Also present at the program was Dr. John L. Rhodes, professor of history at Fort Valley State College. Rhodes, along with Williams, gave a speech on the roles of the "Buffalo Soldier" in America's history.

Buffalo soldier is the name given to black soldiers by the Indians in America's West, said Rhodes.

The Indians feared and respected these soldiers for their strength and courage, and named them after the animal that possessed the same skills — the buffalo, said Rhodes.

The soldiers became proud of their nickname, and carried it with them in the early days of the Army, said Rhodes.

Williams' performance also included a clip from her new movie about black cowboys in the Old West.

Williams' career began when she was a child. At the age of 14, she joined a band and began priming her talents for her career in later life. She has been a back-up singer for Anita Baker, Gladys Knight, Stephanie Mills, Jefferey Osbourne and Julio Iglesias.

Rhodes has a bachelor's degree in history education, a master of science degree and a doctor of Education degree. Rhodes serves not only as a professor at Fort Valley, but also is the defensive coordinator for the football team.

The celebration was one of many Black History Month events.

School's students examine difficulties

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

In a carnival atmosphere, Frank R. Loyd School students spent Feb. 26 understanding and celebrating the differences of children in honor of Exceptional Children's Week.

Members of the student body experienced what it is like to have physical, mental or behavioral limitations.

Two classrooms at a time went through different stations in the auditorium that included a wheelchair obstacle course, attempting fine manipulative motor skills with one hand tied behind their backs, memory tests, using long-handled utensils that someone on a walker might use.

Loyd Assistant Principal Glenn Hughes noted that the physically-handicapped are centered at Loyd so it is important for other students to understand where they are coming from.

Tommye Woods, director of Special Education for Fort Benning Schools, added that every child is exceptional in one way or another, some are just more easily noticed.

This special activity was organized by Susan Williamson, occupational therapist for the school system.

She said it was a real eye-opener for students to learn how exceptional children have to adapt during everyday situations in ways that others had never thought about.

It was noted on a display that certain famous people overcame handicaps and made their places in the world such as Franklin D. Roosevelt, Cher, Tom Cruise, Winston Churchill, Thomas Edison, Vincent Van Gogh, Helen Keller and Albert Einstein.

FOR THE RECORD

• Last week's article about date rape ("Date rape is a crime — not passion," The Bayonet, Feb. 26) contained two errors. Article 120 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice was amended by Congress in October to change the definition of rape. Before that, date rape was a male on female crime where the female had to be a woman not the wife of the male. The UCMJ now reads as follows: "Any person subject to this chapter who commits an act of sexual intercourse by force and without consent is guilty of rape and shall be punished by death or other such punishment as a court-martial may direct." The maximum punishment is death, not simply a term of years as the article suggested.

Codependency is self-destructive

By Steve Lewis
Community Mental Health Service

Perhaps you have heard the phrase "you're codependent." What does that mean?

Codependency has become a catch-phrase in the self-help psychology movement to describe a variety of behaviors and reactions to living in relationships that are tainted by an addiction of one type or another.

So what does this mean; and, if I'm involved in such a relationship, does it mean I'm dysfunctional?

There is no specific diagnostic criteria for codependency. But we recognize that it is a self-destructive pattern of behavior that can lead to significant mental health problems such as depression, chemical dependency and anxiety.

Melody Beattie, author of "Codependent No More and Beyond Codependency," defines codependency as: "A person who has let another person's behavior affect him or her and who is obsessed with controlling the person's behavior."

Codependency affects both men and women. It's a pattern of behaviors developed in reaction to a relationship with an addict.

While professionals can define codependency, each of us can observe some of the behaviors of codependents. These include: caretaking, low self-worth, repression, obsession, controlling, denial, dependency, poor communication, weak boundaries, lack of trust, anger and sex problems.

Some characteristic behaviors of codependents are:

• Thinking and feeling responsible for other people.

when other people have a problem.

• Placing the needs and desires of others before their own and ultimately not getting their own needs met.

• Expect to do everything perfectly.

• Try to control events and people through helplessness, guilt, coercion, threats, advice-giving, manipulation or domination.

• Desperately seek love and approval.

• Tolerate abuse to keep people loving them.

• Feel angry, victimized, unappreciated and used.

If some or many of these behaviors sound familiar, it does not mean diseased.

At one time, codependent behaviors served a purpose in getting emotional needs met, but currently they only hinder our emotional well-being.

Awareness and acceptance of who we are and our current situation is the first step in making change.

The desire to change has to come from ourselves. Help is available in a variety of forms. Mental-health professionals can help in the change process. Support groups can also assist and provide support while making the difficult changes.

Self-help groups such as Al-Anon, Adult Children of Alcoholics, and Codependents Anonymous provide a 12-step approach to a healthy existence. Self-help books like "Codependent No More" provide insight and guidance to breaking the patterns of codependency.

No matter where you get help you must always remember that change involves making difficult decisions that others may not approve of.

Growth and change may seem painful and difficult but the long-term results should prove beneficial for you and others around you.

For military beneficiaries who feel they may need assistance, a codependency support group is currently being formed. It meets every Tuesday from 11 a.m. to noon at the Community Mental Health Service, Building 2615 in Soldiers' Plaza.

For more information and a screening interview, contact Capt. Michelina Regazzi or 1st Lt. Steve Lewis at 545-5964 or 545-1717.

Bankruptcy affects career

Editor's note: This is the final segment in a three-part series on bankruptcy. This section discusses the impact bankruptcy and other financial problems may have on a military career.

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

"It's not true that bankruptcy invariably ends your military career or chance for advancement, but it will certainly have some effect," said an official with the Directorate of Threat and Security.

The spokesman, who did not wish to be named, said any financial problems, not just bankruptcy, may affect a soldier's chances for promotion and retention.

"Financial matters are always part of a security clearance check," he said. "As the level of clearance gets higher, negative information has more of an impact. Bankruptcy will certainly not look good, but even a history of slow payment can tell against you in some circumstances."

The DTS official said in any evaluation of financial matters, consideration is given to rank, circumstances and the amount of debt involved.

"People in debt are statistically much higher security risks," he said. "The main thing we look at is how well people are dealing with their problems.

"From a security viewpoint, it's important for a soldier to get help immediately if he's having financial problems," said the spokesman. "Your records are viewed more favorably if you make a sincere effort to rectify the situation and make restitution for your debts.

"While a lower-level clearance may be issued even if negative financial information is on record," he said, "it's important to clear up any problems as soon as possible.

"If you display honesty and integrity, and make a sincere effort to contact your creditors when you have problems, you'll have a better opportunity for career advancement. It's important to remember that financial matters are always examined closely when security is involved."

'Sirens' go on police patrol in Pittsburgh

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

Police officers certainly aren't new subjects for television, but rarely have they been portrayed with a "thirtysomething" sensibility.

Shows such as "Hill Street Blues" and "Cagney & Lacey" have made the personal lives of law enforcers pivotal themes; and, starting this week, another drama will have a similar aim. "Sirens" premieres Wednesday on ABC, and the "thirtysomething" connection stems from creator and co-executive producer Ann Lewis Hamilton being a writing-producing alumna of the earlier program, her script about the character Nancy's second-look examination for cancer having won the esteemed Humanitas Award.

The Pittsburgh-based "Sirens" of the new series are female police rookies Sarah, Lynn and Molly — played, respectively, by Jayne ("WIOU") Brook, Adrienne-Joi ("House Party") Johnson and Liza Snyder — who bring diverse backgrounds and attitudes to their new jobs, and they share the challenge of proving themselves capable and competent, especially to their male peers. However, their domestic lives frequently are strained by their professional duties, with ex-schoolteacher Sarah the only married member of the trio (John Speredakos appears as her husband).

Co-produced by TV veteran Robert Butler, who counts "Hill Street Blues" among the many series pilots he has directed (as well as "Moonlighting," "Star Trek" and "Batman"), "Sirens" also features Tim Thomerson and John Terlesky in the supporting cast.

Hamilton explains the show's title was chosen to reflect "something that men might use to refer to female cops in a derogatory way. I think it's incredibly interesting to explore why someone would choose to become a police officer ... male, female, anybody. In Pittsburgh, because it's cheaper to live there, a lot of people do it for the money and the benefits. It's also really dangerous and really scary, so why would a woman do it? I did want to do a cop show, but I wanted to do one that didn't have a lot of gunshots and car chases. I wanted to do it just a little bit smaller."

What: "Sirens"
When: Wednesday, 10 p.m. on ABC

Even with that, Hamilton maintains that "Sirens" has room to mix realism with dramatic license, as in a sequence that finds Molly frantically running after a felon while she's wearing high heels. "It was slightly fun," she reasons of creating that scene, "because it was (depicting) the reality that you are a cop and you are on duty all the time, whether you want to be or not. You're on a date, and you haven't let the other person know that you're a cop, then you see a crook. What do you do? That's sort of real, but maybe it's a little TV(-oriented), too: She chases after him with heels on, and she catches him. Then, you can have that moment where she goes back to her date and he's like, 'What were you doing?' "

Department of Defense assists 'at-risk' youth

By Sydni Redmond
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Defense Department is launching another program to help children at a high risk of dropping out of school and missing educational opportunities. DoD is working with the Department of Education to set up career academies at schools with junior ROTC programs already in place. Career academies will emphasize vocational and technical training and prepare students for the world of work. Watch the latest reports on DoD's efforts to reach the "at-risk" youth next week on "Fort Benning Today."

Also on "Fort Benning Today," see the infantry's training in action, but not at Fort Benning; soldiers at Story Range, Korea, put their infantry skills to work.

In fact, according to Army Chief of Staff Gen. Gordon Sullivan, a combination of infantry and all other forces will be looked at to bring the overseas forces to less than 100,000 by 1995. The chief comments on the overseas downsizing plan next week on "Fort Benning Today."

"Victory News," the news show of the 24th Infantry Division, and post movie previews will also be showing.

USAIC TV will also highlight music and news from Soldiers Radio Satellite Network as well as post events on the Fort Benning community bulletin board. For more information on the Soldiers Radio Satellite Network, see the schedule inside The Bayonet's TV section.

If you are a subscriber to Fort Benning Cable, you can watch USAIC TV on Channel 32, 24 hours a day.

Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:26, 7:56, 8:26 and 8:56 on WLTZ TV-38.

For more information or to make suggestions, write or call the Broadcast Section of the Public Affairs Office, Infantry Hall, Rooms 601 or 602, 545-2201.

Orchestra to perform Beethoven's symphony

Columbus Symphony Orchestra

The Columbus Symphony Orchestra will perform a Masterpiece Concert under the baton of Maestro George Del Gobbo March 13 at 8 p.m. in the Three Arts Theatre.

The concert will open with Beethoven's Symphony No. 6 in F Major, Op. 68. The program will conclude with Brahms' Violin Concerto in D Major, Op. 77 featuring Ruben Gonzalez.

Gonzalez has been described as "... the real thing: a musician of flawless technique and intonation ..." after a performance with the Annapolis Symphony Orchestra.

A preconcert lecture on the evening's music will be given by Del Gobbo in the Three Arts Theatre at 7 p.m. This concert is cosponsored by Diaz-Verson Capital, Litho-Krome and Pratt & Whitney with additional funding provided by the Georgia Council for the Arts.

Gonzalez has held the position of co-concertmaster with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra since 1986. Previously he served as concertmaster for the Houston, Syracuse and Aspen Music Festival symphonies.

Gonzalez has appeared as a violin soloist with the Chicago Symphony many times.

In addition, he has made guest appearances with the American Symphony Orchestra at Carnegie Hall, the Minnesota, San Antonio, New Mexico, and Springfield Symphonies, among others, and has been a soloist with orchestras throughout Europe and Latin America.

Having begun his studies on the violin at age 5, he went on to study with Osvaldo Pessina in Buenos Aires, Salomon Baron in France and Riccardo Brengola in Italy.

He was the recipient of the first prize in the International Competition of Barcelona in 1964, the Silver Medal at the Geneva Competition and received the highest distinction from the Chigiana Academy in Siena, Italy, the Diploma of Honor. Gonzalez plays on his prized Carlo Bergonzi violin of 1737, which was formerly owned by Fritz Kreisler and Itzhak Perlman.

The concert presents an evening of melodies beginning with Beethoven's 6th Symphony, also known as the "Pastoral" Symphony, consisting of five movements. This will be followed by the melodies of Brahm's Violin Concerto in D Major.

The race is open to pilots with private licenses or higher and offers more than $20,000 in cash and prizes. Trophies will be awarded to the top 10 pilots and copilots.

Columbus was selected as the start city for the race in 1992 because of its designation as the official Quincentennial City for the state of Georgia.

The race is sponsored in part by the Bahamas Ministry of Tourism and the Columbus Convention and Visitors Bureau.

Savannah celebrates St. Pat's Day

The Savannah Visitors Bureau

SAVANNAH, Ga. — The "greening of Savannah" has several meanings that is said to stir the soul of Savannahians and visitors alike during this time of year.

Shamrock green will be evident throughout the city in early March heralding the celebration of the patron saint of Ireland, and Savannah's 169th annual St. Patrick's Day Parade.

Known as the second largest and the third oldest celebration in the country, some 250 to 300 units including marching bands, floats, members of eight Irish Heritage Societies, the famous Clydesdale horses, military units and drill teams will 'strut their stuff as they wind their way through Savannah's Historic District. Saturday will bring the First Saturday Irish Crafts Fair, a celebration of the Irish of Savannah and will feature Irish crafts and traditional Irish Folk entertainment.

Monday through March 14 Savannah Onstage features winners of major international competitions in performing arts with ticketed events in venues throughout the city.

March 12 to 14, the St. Patrick's Day Weekend Music Fest in City Market will offer live music of all types — jazz, blues, rock 'n' roll and is free and open to the public.

March 13, Sheep to Shawl offers the annual shearing of the Oatland Island sheep with the wool carded, spun and woven into a shawl to be raffled off at the end of the day.

March 13 and 14, the St. Patrick's Day Weekend Encampment at Fort Pulaski with volunteers portraying the predominantly Irish Confederate garrison of Fort Pulaski and a variety of activities relating to Civil War soldier life will be performed including musket and military drills.

March 25 through 28 features the & Gardens, a delightful four-day event that features tours of private residences, churches, museums and gardens in the Historic Distric as well as "Low Country" cuisine.

Jubilee celebrates American history

Georgia's Stone Mountain Park

Stroll through the days of hoop skirts, rollicking entertainment and unparalleled craftsmanship at the Antebellum Jubilee at Georgia's Stone Mountain Park.

Set for two consecutive spring weekends — March 26 to 28 and April 2 to 4 — Georgia's past comes to life during this celebration of the history and culture of days gone by.

Experience life as it was during this era of the history of our nation through the performances of professional musicians, storytellers, period dancers, living-history demonstrations and the "Old Tyme Magic Show."

Watch craftsmen weaving, making furniture, and hand-forging all without the conveniences of modern technology. See how cooking was done over an open hearth while inhaling the aroma and sampling the flavor of cornbread, grits and black-eyed peas.

The Antebellum Plantation sets the stage for the jubilee. Located near the memorial carving on the mountain's north side, the plantation complex consists of 20 structures all built during the 18th and 19th centuries. Threatened with destruction on their original sites throughout Georgia, they were each moved to the park, restored and stand today, authentically furnished, as monuments to an era gone but not forgotten.

Located behind the main house in the plantation meadow is the Civil War encampment. Soldiers set up an authentic military camp according to historical documents and perform marches, firing demonstrations, drills and open-fire cooking. Members of the 97th Regimental String Band — a trio of Union troubadours — and other authentic musicians complete the setting with sounds from the past.

Period entertainment abounds with other presentations as well including the melodic sounds of dulcimer player Jim McGraw and of harpist Betty Fowler.

What: Antebellum Jubilee

When: March 26 to 28,
April 2 to 4

Where: Georgia's Stone Mountain

Cost: $3 - adults, $2 - children 3 to 11

Storytellers Musket and Hardtack amuse guests of all ages with tales of soldiers' camp life. Folk tales from the Old South are dramatically retold, as well as the accounts of African lore enacted by Woodie Persons.

The "Old Tyme Magic Show," presented by the War Wizard, Max Howard, thrills audiences with unparalleled feats of prestidigitation. Virginia Reel dancers and an Antebellum fashion show round out the fun. Entertainment is continuous on three special jubilee stages and at other locations about the plantation complex.

On the main lawn and in the garden areas, discover people — all clad in period clothing — demonstrating crafts and creating handcrafts with the tools and technology used in the 19th century.

Mark Townes, blacksmith, forges tools for cooking, heating and lighting from his 1860s wagon while members of the Reaves family share their century-old tradition of split oak basket making. Coppersmith Gordon Arrowood presents his metalworking skills while other demonstrators spin wool, churn butter and weave fabrics. Watch straw become brooms in the old way — a way gone with the wind.

The Antebellum Jubilee recreates an historical era in America, not just the South.

Stone Mountain Park is open daily throughout the year. Entry into the park requires a valid 1993 parking permit, which may be purchased for daily access for $5 or unlimited yearly access for $20.

Admission to the jubilee is $3, children ages 3 to 11, $2. There is special price for school groups of 25 or more accompanied by a teacher. For more details, call (404) 498-5702.

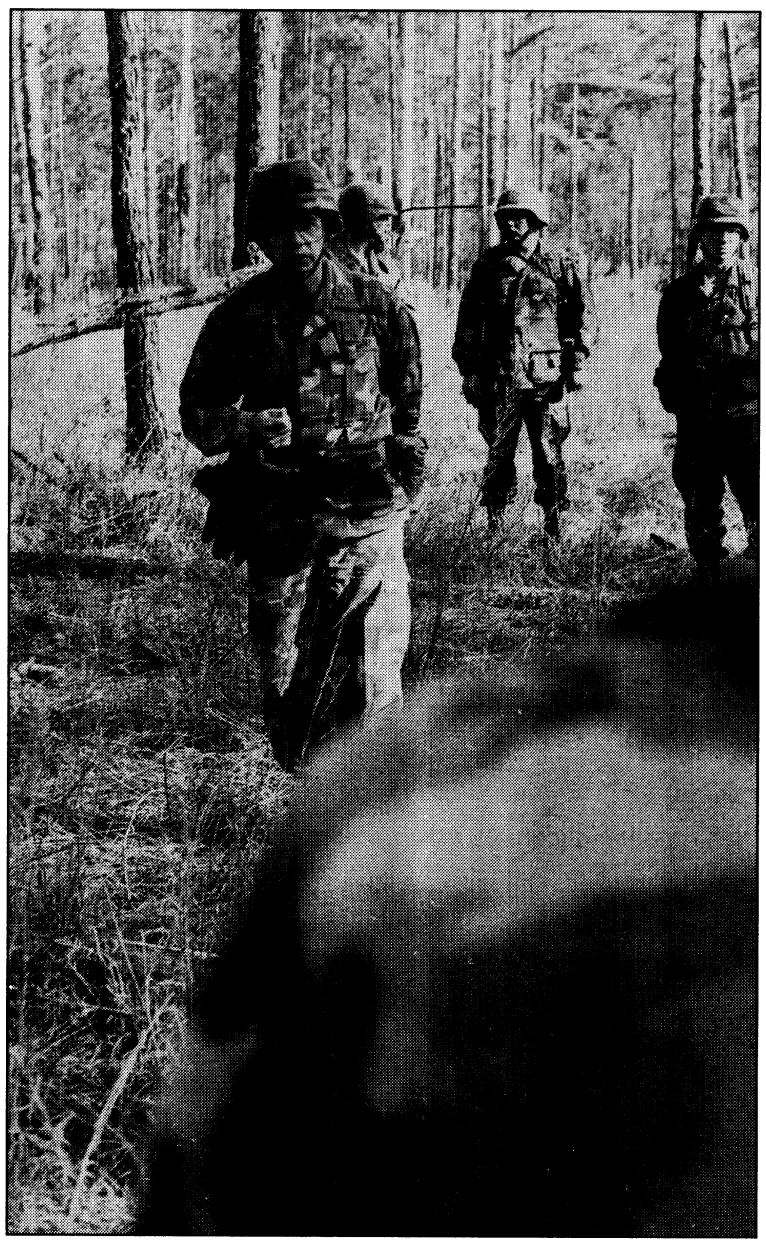
Feliciano reflects on command

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

Ordered by Congress to train military personnel from Latin America, the School of the Americas is a unique institution requiring a versatile leader keenly aware of the needs of the Latin American military and the most effective training available to meet those needs.

For the last two years, SOA has been under the direction of Col. Jose R. Feliciano, a 30-year, veteran infantry officer whose career has taken him from Korea to Vietnam, Panama and Honduras with frequent command positions at Fort Benning.



Throughout his command at SOA, Feliciano expanded on programs initiated by his predecessors, developed and initiated many of his own and brought the tricommunity and SOA closer.

On March 18, Feliciano will turn over command of SOA to Col. Jose M. Alvarez and bring to a close a career of service that started with his commissioning in 1963 as a second lieutenant from the University of Puerto Rico.

Recently, Feliciano took some time to reflect on his command and the direction the school has taken as a result.

Chief among his concerns upon taking command in May of 1991 was developing a strong tie to the community, which would in turn fulfill part of the school's mission to expose students to American culture and traditions.

"The relocation of SOA to Fort Benning started a new era in the school's history and gave emphasis to making students aware of U.S. values, customs and traditions," Feliciano said, "and there is no better place to do that than the tricommunity of Columbus, Phenix City and Fort Benning where people are warm and hospitable," he added.

Daniel Maloney

Col. Jose R. Feliciano, commandant of SOA, addresses cadet students in the field.

Although exposure to U.S. culture fulfills the second part of SOA's overall mission, training is the primary function of the school and it is here that Feliciano has worked to set the school apart with his agenda for the future of SOA.

SOA 2000 is a concept placing all of the training needs for Latin America in the hands of SOA and its instructors. "It is our vision for the future," according to Feliciano, who was the chief architect of SOA 2000.

In addition, Feliciano developed a proposal to "establish a joint School of the Americas to take advantage of the capabilities of each of our services and to better focus our training programs and security assistance policies in the Americas."

Feliciano also called attention to the emphasis on what he termed, "points of main effort," in SOA's training curriculum.

Areas such as joint and combined operations, special operations, officer and noncommissioned officer development courses, resource management, civil military operations, aviation and the institutionalization of human rights instruction have been expanded and intensified under Feliciano's command.

According to Feliciano, joint and combined operations, as well as special operations "strive to train Latin American military personnel in courses such as the Commando Course, which parallels the U.S. Army Ranger Course, and Counterdrug Operations Course, so they can participate more effectively in fighting the drug war in this hemisphere."

Resource management training was initiated by Feliciano to "help make military personnel more adept in decision-making models to better manage budgets in a time of reduced spending," he said.

Training in civil and military operations will make the military in Latin America more versatile and able when it comes to assisting the civilian population, he said.

Aviation plays a major role in the Americas especially in counterdrug operations, Feliciano said. It was under his command that the Helicopter School Battalion, stationed at Fort Rucker, Ala., was activated to train Latin American pilots.

The capability of the helicopter to extend the hand of the government is a necessity in Latin America where many towns and villages are accessible only by air, Feliciano said.

Human rights awareness training at SOA has been "institutionalized in the form of direct instruction through the use of practical exercises and developing models for what soldiers do in peace and in combat."

Recently, Feliciano oversaw the development of the OE-15 or Countermine Operations Course designed to rid Central America of the mines left in the wake of civil wars.

Throughout all of the training initiatives Feliciano has developed, providing the best training possible has been at the forefront.

"Students must return to their

Briefing defines, explains Army's sexual harassment policy

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

The increased awareness of sexual harassment in the civilian workplace has been given national attention because more women are speaking up against this illegal activity.

However, sexual harassment has been both ethically and officially unacceptable in the military long before it came under fire in the civilian business world.

Recently, personnel at the School of the Americas received a briefing by Sgt. 1st Class Hazel L. Hughes, a post equal opportunity adviser for the 36th Engineer Group, on the Army's sexual harassment policy and its effect on working relationships and unit cohesion.

According to Hughes, the actions that constitute sexual harassment are either verbal, nonverbal or physical.

Language of a sexual nature, obscene gestures and actual physical contact fall under the Army's definition of sexual harassment, Hughes said.

In addition, behavior of a sexual nature in the workplace that "violates standards, interferes with mission accomplishment and unit cohesion constitutes sexual harassment," Hughes said.

To determine if a case of sexual harassment can be brought against a soldier, equal opportunity advisers must determine the intent, the impact on the victim and the unit, what

SOA welcomes 1993 CGSC students

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

The 1993 Command and General Staff Course of the School of the Americas received a new class of students in January and the Hosts of Latin Americans Organization and the Columbus Support Group have welcomed them with receptions and a tour.

The events started with a welcome reception Jan. 23, at the Officers' Club where students had an opportunity to meet their counterparts and instructors, as well as the SOA command group.

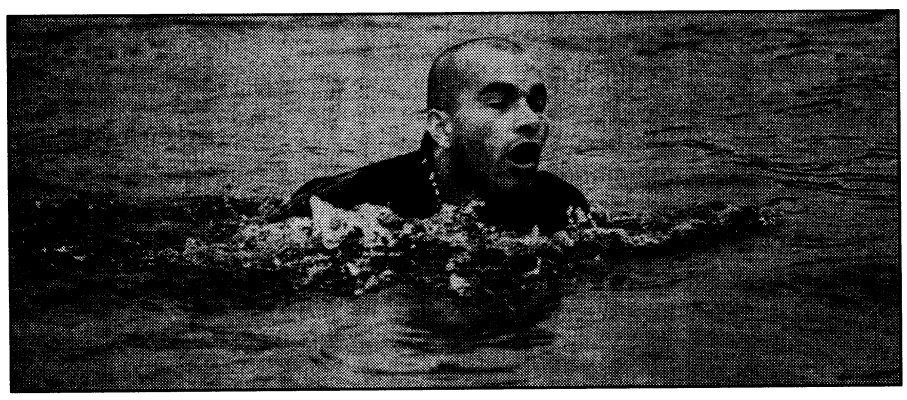
The first tour of the year was downtown to the Columbus Consolidated Government Building Feb. 11.

According to Cecilia Alexander, informational program director for SOA, the tour also included the Columbus Police Department, the Historic District and the Columbus Ledger-Enquirer.

In addition to the tour, 26 of the CGSC students received Honorary Citizen of Columbus Certificates presented by Iris Jesse, assistant city manager.

The most recent event took place Feb. 26, when the students and SOA's guest instructors met their sponsors during a reception at the Officers' Club.

Because the CGSC is a 47-week course and guest instructors serve a two-year tour at SOA, they often bring their families, which makes having a sponsor crucial when it comes to getting adjusted to American culture and customs.



In attendance at the reception were: Col. Jose R. Feliciano, commandant of SOA, and his wife, Carol; Col. Carlos Molina Johnson, assistant commandant; Lt. Col. Randall Parish, chief of staff for SOA, and his wife, Susan; and Lt. Col. George H. Ferris, CGSC director.

Future activities planned for the CGSC include: a trip to Lumpkin, Ga., Callaway Gardens and the Steeplechase.

Special Ops instructors train with GBI agents

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

The School of the Americas recently joined forces with the Georgia Bureau of Investigation for a training session involving SOA's Counterdrug Operations Course instructors and the bureau's Special Reaction Team.

The training was initiated by the Special Operations Division of the school's Special Operations/Civil Military Operations Department to expose its instructors (mainly Special Forces and ranger-qualified officers and noncommissioned officers) to the current tactics being used by civilian law enforcement agencies to seize control of and clear buildings.

"We want to implement more police tactics in our counterdrug course. We're training more police personnel than ever before since the mission of apprehending drug traffickers has become a police mission, especially in Colombia and Bolivia," said Maj. Ramon Valle, chief of the Special Operations Division.

The course consisted of classroom instruction and actual hands-on training conducted in the Harmony Church area.

The instructors from the GBI explained techniques used during search-warrant entries to enter and dominate a building, Valle said.

The techniques covered what to do when hostile individuals are barricaded in the building and how to react when a fellow officer is injured.

During one of the classroom sessions, Steve Roberson of the GBI explained two approaches commonly used by his department to enter and dominate buildings.

The five-man approach uses a team leader and a pair of two-man teams. This approach is slower and more limited than the 10-man team, according to the GBI agents.

The 10-man technique or "flooding" provides ample coverage of an area and allows officers to send "everybody you have to answer a threat," Roberson added.

In addition, Gary Nicholson, of the GBI, emphasized the importance of officers covering each other during a room clearing.

"The lead man clearing the room searches in one direction and the individual covering him looks in the opposite direction," Nicholson said.

The GBI agents also emphasized to "expect the unexpected and you won't be surprised."

The school's Counterdrug Operations course is a 10-week program taught at the tactical level, specializing in combat staff planning skills, as well as leading and executing counterdrug interdiction operations.

The curriculum is taught to selected members of the military and law enforcement agencies of Latin America, where fighting the drug war has become a priority not only in their own countries but in the United States as well.

Among the techniques addressed in the course are: economic and social impact of counterdrug operations; rules of evidence and handling of evidence and suspects; human rights awareness; characteristics of a drug trafficker; the cocaine process; laboratory safety; fieldcraft (lifesaving techniques, land navigation and communications); discriminative marksmanship (mechanical training, slow and rapid aim firing techniques, "Isosceles" shooting style, engaging while moving, and day/night target discrimination firing techniques); close quarters combat (assault teams, room domination techniques, urban interdiction operations); demolitions; infiltration/exfiltration techniques (air assault, riverine operations, assault boats, fast rope, helocasting, scout swimming, rappelling and vertical extraction) and patrolling.

The course is designed to produce highly skilled soldiers, whether they be police officers or military personnel, to fight the drug war in Latin America and the subsequent scourge of drug dealing and use in the United States.

countries ready to make immediate contributions to their armed forces and national development," Feliciano said.

Making sure that happens also requires the facilities to train students.

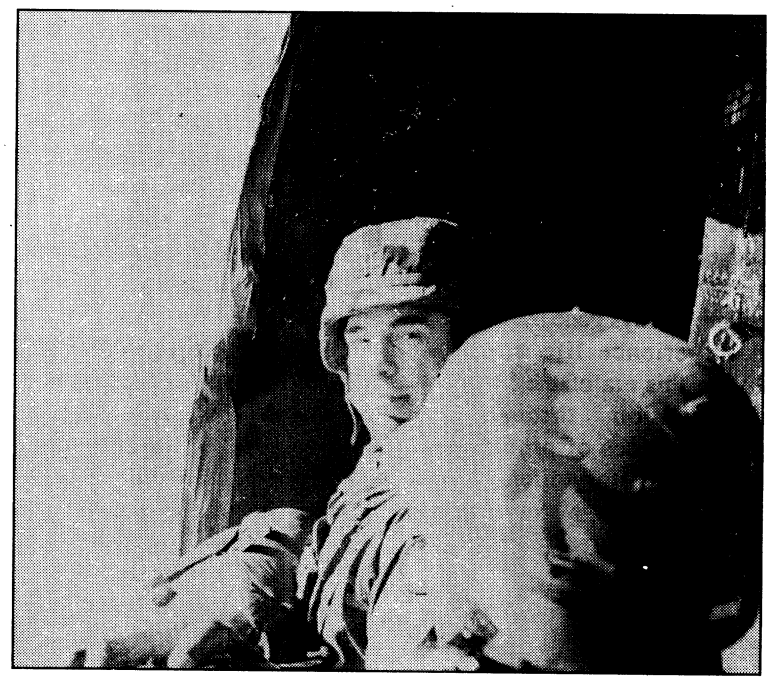
According to Feliciano, Fort Benning is the best possible place for SOA because it offers relevant training facilities for Latin American military needs and the welfare of soldiers and their family members constantly maintains a high priority.

Carla Y. Brown

Capt. Ehrich D. Rose, jumpmaster qualified officer of SOA's Special Operations Division, (left) conducts a jumpmaster parachute inspection on Col. Jose R. Feliciano.

Facilities at the school and family life were a high priority for Feliciano as well.

During his command, SOA underwent the reopening of the headquarters building after a two-year renovation.



The reconsolidation of the SOA in Building 35 provided a smoother running operation in an updated facility.

In addition to the reopening, the SOA library was dedicated in the memory of John B. Amos, founder of American Family Life Assurance Corporation and an ardent supporter of SOA.

The John B. Amos library maintains numerous books, periodicals and other publications in English and Spanish, to enhance service to students.

Feliciano also developed an alumni association for SOA graduates to maintain a permanent link from the school to Latin America establishing an open flow of communication among its many graduates.

In addition to providing for students' needs, Feliciano also looked after the needs of permanent party personnel.

Luis Cruz

Col. Jose R. Feliciano just before he "goes airborne" over Fryar Drop Zone.

"I have attempted to create a positive environment for assigned personnel and their families so that they enjoy living and working at the School of the Americas," he said.

As Feliciano put it, "SOA is a world-class school and our product, the students, gives us our good reputation."

"The school is and will continue to make significant contributions to the support of the democratic process in this hemisphere."

Feliciano and his wife, Carol, will reside in Columbus upon his retirement.

Supervisors: crucial in combating harassment

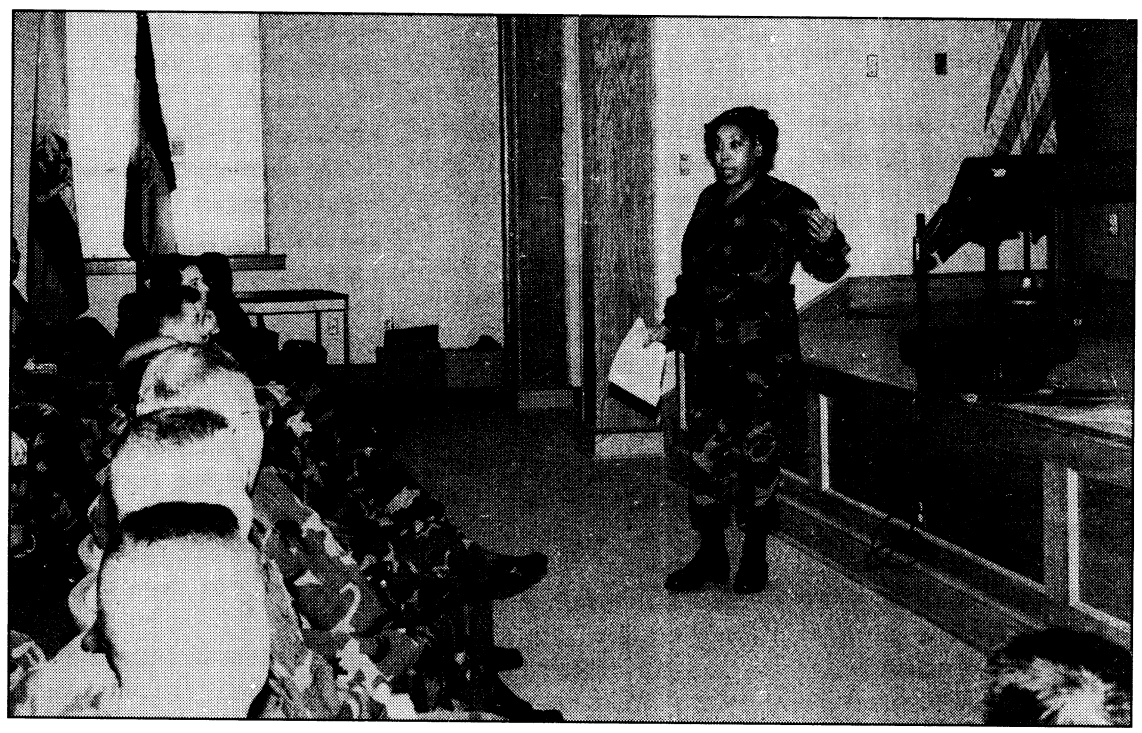
the actual behavior was and whether or not it was unwelcomed or unsolicited, as well as have a witness, she said.

According to Hughes, once a possible case is brought to an EO adviser and an inquiry is conducted, unless a witness can be found, nothing can be proved.



The necessity for a witness however, doesn't mean a sexual harassment case can be easy to beat.

The Army definition of sexual harassment, Hughes said, also includes those in leadership positions who condone or allow such activity to prosper in their units which translates into more than just the accused and the accuser being involved in an EO inquiry, but possibly their supervisors as well.

During the presentation, Hughes was asked if current trends in the civilian world, especially pop culture and television networks like MTV, which make certain forms of sexual harassment seem acceptable in society, start to carry over into the military, what is the appropriate response?

According to Hughes, countering sexual harassment means: ensuring subordinates are aware of behavior that constitutes sexual harassment (to include gestures and physical displays currently popularized in the mass media); provide an environment free of sexual harassment; set the proper example; and take swift and appropriate action in reacting to complaints of sexual harassment.

In addition, Hughes called on commanders to be proactive when it comes to combating sexual harassment and reactive when a complaint is made.

498th Medical Co. returns

Spent 205 days in Kuwait

498th Medical Company

Soldiers and family members were present to welcome home the medical evacuation crews of the 498th Medical Company (Air Ambulance), when they returned to Fort Benning March 6 after 205 days in Kuwait.

The homecoming represented the second time the unit has been reunited since December 1991.

Brig. Gen. John Hendrix, Fort Benning deputy commanding general, praised the soldiers for their successful deployment and thanked them for the outstanding medical evacuation support and training they provide to the Joint Task Force-Kuwait.

Thirty-six soldiers comprised a Forward Support medical evacuation team that deployed to Kuwait Aug. 12 following a five-day deployment notice.

Soldiers from the 498th Medical Company deployed as part of a field training exercise intended to demonstrate U.S. commitment to the security and stability of the Persian Gulf region.

The 498th provided real-world support for a 2,400 man Joint Task Force intended to test the procedures for contingency operations in the region during Exercise Intrinsic Action under the Army Readiness, Training and Security-Kuwait; and the Joint Task Force-Kuwait.

Medical evacuation crews were extended past the initial 60-day exercise to support Special Forces' Exercise Iris Gold and again through the return of the Intrinsic Action Task Force of Kuwait in February and this month.

The commander of the 498th Medical Company, Maj. Kenneth Crook, said the deployment was a rare and outstanding training opportunity to conduct joint and combined training in desert operations under a variety of scenarios.

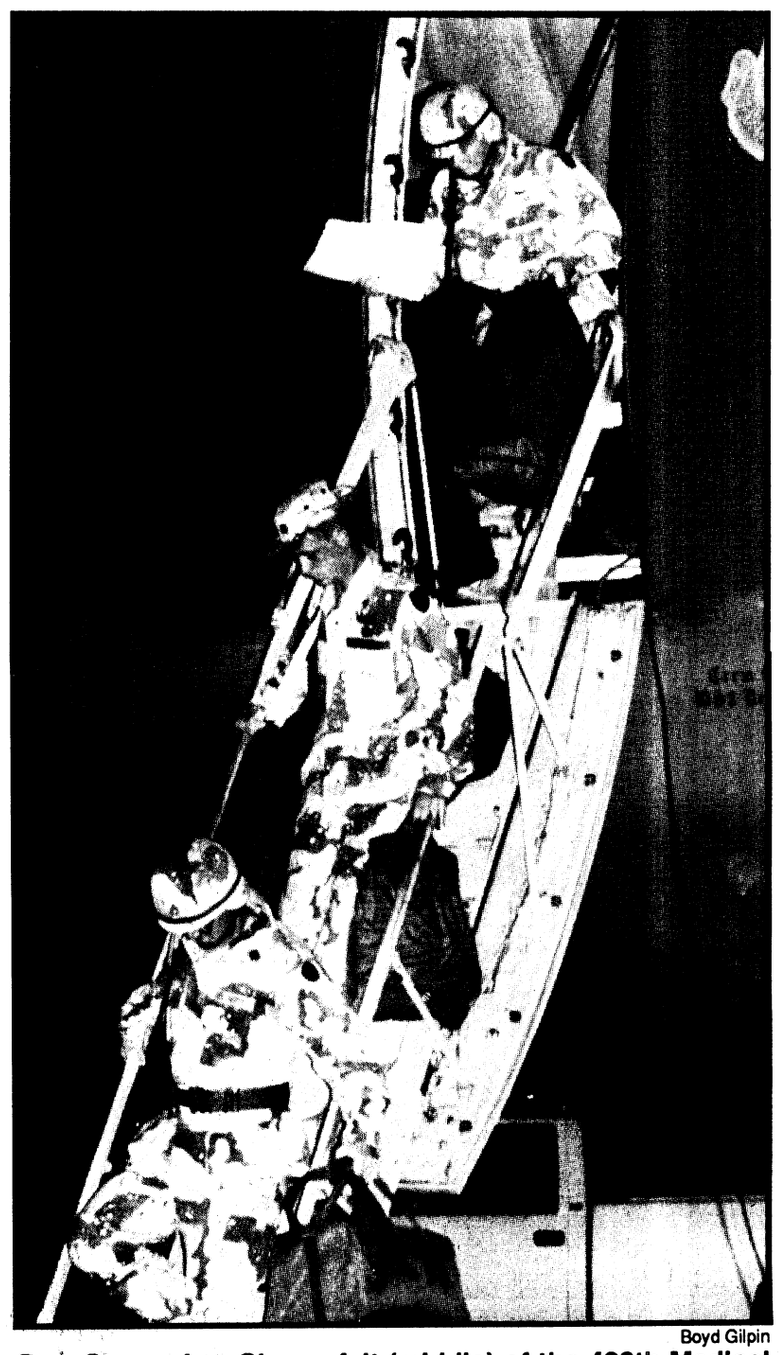
The crews evacuated 62 patients and flew 234 hours of support and training — most under night vision goggles.

They also maintained an exceptionally high operational readiness while in the austere desert environment.

The soldiers and family members of the 498th Medical Company are not unfamiliar with frequent and extended deployments.

These soldiers frequently deploy to provide real-world and training medical evacuation support throughout the continental United States and around the world.

Crew members and support personnel departed for Kuwait following a four-month deployment to support Joint Task Force-Bravo, Honduras.



The families will have a brief period to catch up on events since their departure.

Planning has already begun for several support missions in and outside the United States this spring and summer.

The 498th Medical Company is a member of the 13th Corps Support Battalion and the 36th Engineer Group and provides installation medical evacuation support to the soldiers and family members assigned to Fort Benning.

The unit also provides medical evacuation and training support to Fort Stewart, Ga., and aeromedical evacuation and rescue in Alabama and Georgia under the Military Assistance and Safety to Traffic Program.

"No other medical evacuation company in the Army maintains the high operational tempo sustained by the 498th Medical Company. As a result, the 298th is one of the best trained and combat ready units in the Army," stated Lt. Col. Murray J. Rupert, commander of the 13th Corps Support Battalion.

36th Engr. Grp. soldiers arrive from Somalia

USAIC Public Affairs Office

More than 330 members of the 36th Engineer Group arrived at Lawson Army Airfield March 10 at 3 p.m. returning from Somalia.

About 1,100 Fort Benning soldiers from the 36th Engineer Group have been serving in Somalia with Operation Restore Hope.

They provided humanitarian relief to the Somalian people, constructed base camps, repaired and improved roads and bridges.

Subordinate units of the 36th Engineer Group serving in Somalia are Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 36th Engineer Group; 43rd Engineer Battalion; 63rd Engineer Company; elements of the 535th Engineer Detachment; 608th Ordnance Company and 498th and 690th Medical Companies.

More 36th soldiers are expected to return to Fort Benning this afternoon.

3rd Bde. focuses on 'Victory'

3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

Soldiers from the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized) deployed last weekend to Victory Focus 1993, a three-week field training exercise that will last until March 23.

Virtually all of the Sledgehammer Brigade's soldiers and equipment are participating in this exercise that fully tests the brigade's combat capability.

Victory Focus is designed to exercise all units of the 3rd Brigade's combat team in preparation for the National Training Center rotation at Fort Irwin, Calif., in April and May.

The goal of this deployment is to fully train all personnel in mission essential task list requirements with a focus on platoon-level training, officials said.

Inherent in these training events will be an increased emphasis on environmental protection and accident prevention, officials said.

The 3rd Brigade will be hosting several units from Fort Stewart, Ga., that make up a part of the brigade's combat team.

Elements from the 91st Chemical Company; 124th Military Intelligence Battalion; 87th Maintenance Battalion; 24th Aviation Brigade; and Company C, 1st Battalion, 5th Air Defense Artillery Regiment will participate in Victory Focus.

Smaller elements from Forts Bragg, N.C., Drum, N.Y., and the North and South Carolina National Guard will participate as well.

Scheduled training events include several combined arms live-fire exercises, decontamination training, mass casualty exercises, aerial resupply procedures, joint air attack team maneuvers and refuel on the move training.

Spouses will be able to visit the soldiers in the field during the units' scheduled "Family Day."

The units are expected to redeploy to garrison Thursday and March 20 and 23.

He entered the Army in 1972 and initially served with the XVIII Airborne Corps. Hurley became a second generation ranger upon completion of Ranger School in early 1972. His father was a member of the 2nd Ranger Battalion during World War II.

His subsequent assignments were with ranger and Special Forces units. He participated in operations Desert One in Iran, Urgent Fury in Grenada, Just Cause in Panama, and Desert Storm in Southwest Asia. Hurley had previously been assigned to the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, at Fort Benning.

His wife, Patricia, children, Heather, Hollie, Josh and John, and parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hurley, will attend the ceremony.

Col. Jerry Boykin of the U.S. Army Special Operations Command will be the guest speaker.

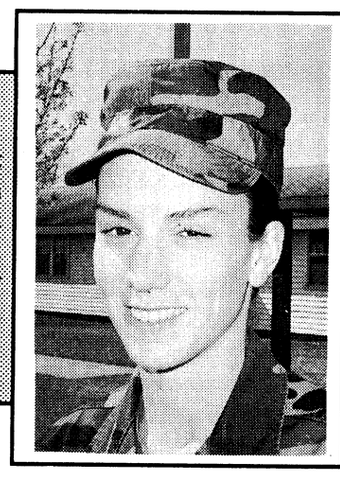
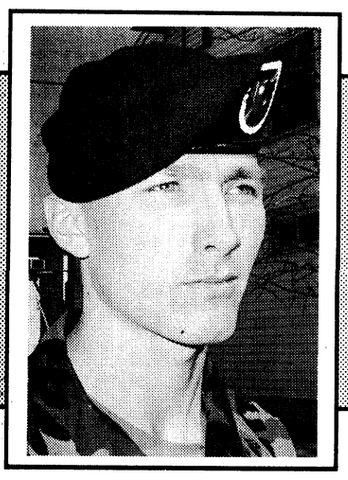
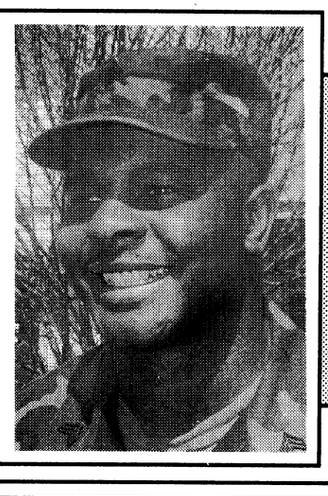
In light of Nutrition Awareness Month, what do you do to eat healthy?



Lawrence Frost, Directorate of Logistics — "I follow my diet strictly. I have borderline diabetes, so the doctor put me on an 1,800-calorie a day diet that I follow."



Jo Schulte, Enlisted Strength Management Branch, Adjutant General's Office — "I really don't think that I eat healthy. I don't eat breakfast; I eat popcorn or fruit for lunch and I eat a large dinner."



Sgt. Greg K. Cooper, Enlisted Strength Management Branch, Adjutant General's Office — "I cut down on fat totally. I eat a lot of fiber, and fruits and vegetables are important."

Pfc. Karen D. Spearman, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment — "I try to watch cholesterol and grease. I don't like to eat red meat or pork because of the fat."

Sgt. Todd P. Applegate, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment — "I'm a vegan, a true vegetarian. I don't eat any animal products at all — no eggs, dairy products, meat or fish. This is for ethical reasons, also."

Sgt. Roy E. Burrell, 63rd Engineer Company — "I make sure that I eat foods low in cholesterol. How I eat today is what I will look like 20 years from now. So I trim the fat off meat, eat lots of vegetables and drink plenty of water."

Good nutrition — what's that?

COMMENTARY

Editor's note: The following column is not fit for human consumption and a strong stomach could be requisite for reading this.

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

The banner strung across the overpass told me this was nutrition month.

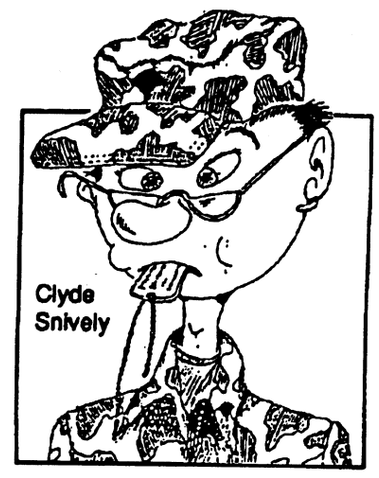
Silly me, here I thought it was Women's History Month. But that's okay, I believe in nutrition. Or I did until I looked up the dictionary meaning. Then I was kind of turned off — "the process by which living organisms assimilate and process food."

When I think of organisms, I think of creepy, crawly things. I think of maggots gorging themselves on dead meat, of banana slugs slithering along the ocean floor, scarfing up all that dead stuff and I think of special forces soldiers living off the land.

But I sure never thought of myself as an organism assimilating food. In fact I really never thought about eating, I just do it.

So for the benefit of people like me, nutritionists banned together and got the president to declare March Nutrition Awareness Month.

Looking into it, I quickly became aware of how unaware I was. It seems there are foods for everything that ails you.



And on the other side of the coin, certain foods, taken in too large of quantities will shorten your life.

Back when I was growing up my mother used to stress the four food groups. Or was that five?

Anyway she wanted us to drink lots of milk, eat leafy vegetables, yellow ones and green ones, have a potato and red meat (liver at least once a week) and watch our calories to maintain our figures.

Now people (not dairy farmers or nutritionists, I'm sure) question the value of milk beyond the age of 2, tell us we eat too much meat (animal rights people say any meat is too much) and say there's more to weight gain than just calories.

Further, the American public, thanks to Nutrition Awareness Month has greatly increased its collective vocabulary. Now we know and can even spell, cholesterol.

We further understand there is good cholesterol and bad cholesterol and that bad cholesterol clogs the arteries and kills people, often at an early age.

We learn that some foods are carcinogenic and are told about beta carotenes.

We also come to find that President George Bush was all wet when he bad-mouthed broccoli — an apple a day may not keep the doctor away, but broccoli, bell peppers and green tea might.

Toss in ample supplies of garlic, onions and oysters and you've got a guy strong as an ox, but without a friend in the world.

Nutritionists will also tell you garlic is a great way for lowering cholesterol.

Poke around enough in nutrition literature and you'll find that in addition to many contradictions, someone has a diet for just about anything.

There are diets to make you look younger — beef, eggs, seafood, dark green leafy veggies to supply zinc and vitamin A for healthy skin. More eggs, grain and legumes (peas?) for healthy hair.

But note too, they decry beef and eggs as being bad for your cholesterol.

There are special menus for people going out for a power lunch and facing a boring meeting afterwards. Dopamine, norepinephrine, and serotonin are chemicals that enable brain cells to keep you awake and help you think on your feet.

They are found in shellfish, marinated vegetables and broiled or baked chicken or fish and herbed rice.

And oh by the way, don't forget the nutritional importance of pyrroloquinoline quinone.

Confused? Me too. Let's make a date to see a nutritionist and a descendent of Noah Webster.

Women's history is food for thought

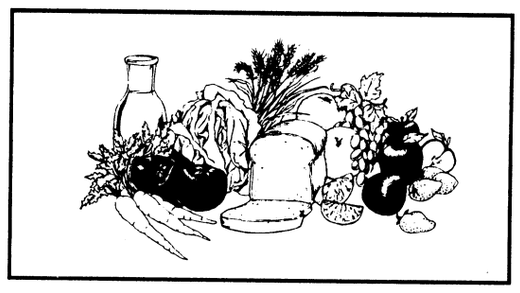
By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

March is Women's History Month and Nutrition Awareness Month. As almost everyone seems to have fond memories of some woman's cooking — Mom's apple pie, Grandma's secret recipe — we'll take a look at the historic relationship of women and nutrition.

In early civilizations, women often assumed the role of gatherers or cultivators, while men tended to be hunters. Effects of this are still seen today, as men (especially in group settings) tend to bolster their masculinity by loudly demanding, "Your thickest, juiciest steak, and just wave it over a flame." Women, meanwhile, especially mothers, are still sometimes heard extolling the virtues of green vegetables.

As civilization progressed, family nutrition became more and more the domain of women. Processes for canning and preserving fruits and vegetables and curing meat were developed to provide a dependable supply of food through the changing seasons.

A woman's merit was measured largely by how well she could cook, and we were reminded that the way to a man's heart was through his stomach. About this time, a popular stereotype arose that a woman's weapons of choice were frying pan and rolling pin.



Women generally took the heat and stayed in the kitchen during much of our history. Gradually, however, with the rise of industrialization, faster and more efficient means of food preparation and preservation were developed. (Unfortunately, some of these methods were based on chemicals that could turn your hair purple, but that's another story.)

Women started to come out of the kitchen, look around and decide they could manage a lot more than a daily menu. We started to infiltrate more and more of the formerly male domain of business and industry, and a hot meal on the table at 5:30 p.m. when the lord and master came home was no longer a sure thing.

Most women now work outside the home, and in many families the cooking is done by the microwave, and the baking by Betty, Sara and that Smith woman.

Good nutrition has become an advertising gold mine, as prepared food manufacturers compete to be low fat, high fiber and "lite."

Men have pitched in a bit, sometimes taking over the main role of meal preparation. Some, however, like our new staffer Billy Ray Jim Bob, take things to extremes by poaching salmon in the dishwasher.

Many women proudly proclaim they can't cook and don't want to. A few diehards — Spc. Clyde Snively comes to mind here — poke fun at professional women for their lack of cooking skills, but most of my female co-workers can cook. You just never see any evidence of it.

As women, we've progressed from hunting roots in the woods and fields to slaving over a hot stove to picking up the phone for the latest Greek, Thai or Southern Venusian take-out.

Some of us still clip recipes and know 6,000 ways to cook hamburger, but often the prime concerns are speed and simplicity of preparation. Ideally, someone else will shop, cook, serve and clean up, and we won't have to pay for it.

Somehow, most of us still eat; but today, home cooking is perhaps appreciated more than ever in history. When fast food, frozen food and nuked food wear thin, I know I'll be looking for a man who knows his place — in the kitchen.

LETTER

Reader says distribute Bayonet off post too

After reading Clyde Snively's article in the February 26 edition of The Bayonet, it is apparent that he is a good soldier who desires to let the general public become aware of how important and vital training areas as well as other facets are at Fort Benning.

Chuck, Larry, Harry and Karen all had good ideas with the caveat that the ideas are illegal — unfortunately.

Snively's questions seems to remain — how to make the American public aware of our great military and how to raise revenue.

In my opinion, you can forget the revenue part. It just isn't coming.

As far as letting the general public become more aware, I have one humble suggestion. The Bayonet needs to be distributed more widely. That is, outside the post, as well as inside. There are many folks in the shopping malls and who utilize public places where The Bayonet could be located.

There are many retired military and spouses of military along with residents in the area who may like to keep up with Fort Benning news. It seems that since the post allows The Leader to have stands on the post, it would be acceptable for The Bayonet to locate stands around Columbus.

My husband is with Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 29th Infantry Regiment. He goes to the post every weekday; however, many times, he forgets to pick up a copy of The Bayonet for me. (I know this sound incredulous.) We live off post, but I do like to read The Bayonet every week. My point is that if it were at accessible locations, it would be much handier for me.

As far as Snively's column in general, I look forward to it every week.

Keep up the good work!

Mary R. Secrist

Proclamation

In recognition of the many contributions of women to every aspect of our nation, March 1993 is proclaimed "Women's History Month."

This year's theme is "Discover a New World: Women's History Invites the Recovery of Women's Heritage and the Inspiration of Women's Lives." This new world suggests an expanded vision of history rich with role models of women from many cultures who made significant contributions to the Department of Defense as both military and civilian members.

Women's strength to endure the hardships of establishing a new country, the stresses of war, and the struggle for equal rights, pay, and recognition stand as a monument for all to admire.

Women's contributions since Columbus' discovery of the new world through 1993 range from artists, authors and poets to truckers, military leaders and politicians. Women's participation in the history of our country displays what America can be — a land where all people can rise to their highest potential.

I encourage everyone at this installation and in surrounding communities to join with fellow soldiers and citizens in enjoying the activities here at Fort Benning during "Women's History Month 1993."

Staff Sgt. Dennis Guaglianone of the U.S. Army Physical Fitness School shows Secretary General Staff employee Wanda Williams how to use Nautilus equipment.

Civilians gear up for fitness

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

The Army has long recognized the importance of physical fitness for soldiers.

That philosophy has been extended to include Army civilian employees as well through Fort Benning's Civilian Fitness Training Program, titled "Follow Me To Fitness."

"Ours is the most comprehensive civilian fitness program in the Army," said Patty Pfeiffer, program director. "Our program is unique in that it is the only program in the Department of the Army supported by the U.S. Army Physical Fitness School, whose master fitness trainers provide several blocks of instruction and guide the participants through the physical training phase of the program.

The object of the eight-week program is to encourage good health practices and to motivate participants to become interested in a physical fitness program, said Pfeiffer.

"We hope to motivate employees to become interested with the hope that they will continue with their own program long after the class has ended," she said.

The program is conducted on Monday, Wednesday and Friday for one hour each day. The first two weeks consist of classroom training in areas of general fitness, weight control, nutrition, stress modification and abusive substance avoidance. During the last six weeks, participants engage in an organized physical fitness training program such as Nautilus training, walking, water aerobics or floor aerobics.

Participants will also receive a physical assessment from post medical personnel at the beginning and end of the program and a body composition analysis (fat vs. muscle) from members of the U.S. Army Physical Fitness School.

Pfeiffer said that the program offers some very attractive benefits.

"Many studies have concluded that employees who engage in good health practices and a regular fitness program experience more energy, lower health-care costs, less stress and overall health improvement," Pfeiffer said.

In order to be nominated for the next program, which begins April 2, interested employees must obtain supervisory approval on a DD Form 1556 and turn it in to their activity training coordinator. Employees will also need, at their own expense, a physician's statement approving participation in a physical fitness program. The classes are limited to 25 participants.

The class is free and participants will also receive "A Personal Fitness Diary" and "Self-Help Handbook" at no cost. Since the program began in 1988, more than 200 civilian employees have completed the course, Pfeiffer said.

Fitness school up, running

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Some of the voices saying "Follow me!" at Fort Benning these days are heard at the Army Physical Fitness School, which leads the way in fitness training.

The school, which moved to Fort Benning from Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind., in July, provides mobile training teams to major subordinate commands throughout the world. The teams conduct Master Fitness Trainer courses on-site at the individual posts.

According to Staff Sgt. Dennis Guaglianone, operations noncommissioned officer and an instructor for the school, the teams respond to requests from the commands, which assume the costs of the training team's travel, lodging and per diem expenses.

Posts that have scheduled MFT courses for fiscal 1993, said Guaglianone, include Fort Drum, N.Y.; Fort Campbell, Ky.; Fort Bragg, N.C.; Fort Lewis, Wash.; Fort Ord, Calif., and Fort Sill, Okla. Overseas posts slated for courses include Fort Clayton, Panama; Schofield Barracks, Hawaii, and Guam.

"I've gotten several requests for 1994," said Guaglianone, "and even one for 1995."

As the only Physical Fitness School in the armed forces, the APFS serves several functions. As the proponent for physical fitness, the school staff writes and develops fitness doctrine and establishes guidelines for physical training. The staff also sets the standards for the Army Physical Fitness Test.

"Besides the Master Fitness Trainer course, we offer several fitness trainer courses for both active and Reserve components," said Guaglianone. "We have an Exercise Leaders' Course, a week-long Train the Trainer class and numerous leaders' seminars."

According to Col. David M. White, commandant of the school, the presence of the APFS at Fort Benning will eventually have an effect on the entire post.

"What we want to establish," said White, "is a total fitness program that will affect everyone on Fort Benning. We want to involve not just exercise, but lifestyle choices.

"We want to educate people to consider every aspect of their lives as relating to fitness," White said. "Substance intake — drugs, alcohol and smoking — is a major factor, but so are things like weight control, diet choices and stress management.

"We want to increase the efficiency of the post," said White. "Increased fitness can keep health costs down, reduce absenteeism and keep workers more alert and less fatigued, with longer concentration and increased dexterity."

Total Army Quality is way of life at AG

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

At the post's Adjutant General's Office, Total Army Quality is more than just another acronym; it's a way of life.

Deputy Director James Brinson said that a commitment to TAQ has greatly improved the way the AG does business.

"Our goal is to constantly improve our efficiency and the quality of our customer service by identifying problems and getting them solved," he said.

To aid in that goal, the AG created its own Quality Improvement Team in August of 1990. The team is made up of 16 AG employees and includes division chiefs, first-line supervisors, clerks and junior enlisted soldiers. The QIT tracks the AG's efficiency and develops initiatives that will contribute to further improvement.

"TAQ will only work when everyone, from bottom to top, is personally committed," Brinson said. "We involve every employee in the TAQ process."

Chief Warrant Officer 4 John Towry, chief of the Training Student Division, said that training plays an important role in developing a TAQ program.

"Training is an essential element to our success in TAQ," he said. "Managers can talk all they want about TAQ, but the employees need to learn the actual techniques to ensure success."

To learn the ins and outs of TAQ, AG employees attend a 20-hour QAE course within the first six-months of their assignment to AG, he said. Employee training also includes monthly TAQ professional development seminars on such topics as customer service, stress and time management, problem-solving and effective communication.

Developing pride and esprit de corps among employees is another important element said Grace Chambless, chief of the Personnel Services Division.

"We want our employees to be enthusiastic as well as informed," she said, "so we conduct a monthly quality recognition ceremony to greet incoming employees, say goodbye to those who are leaving, and to give recognition to all the personnel who are receiving awards or some type of honor."

In addition, the AG has established a safety recognition award to focus employee attention on accident prevention and safety awareness and a building of the quarter award to bring attention to area beautification and U-Do-It initiatives.

Another important aspect of making TAQ work, according to Brinson, is focusing on the problems themselves and not simply attempting to fix blame on someone.

"At AG, we don't blame problems on individuals. We focus on the system by finding out why the problem occurred and by working to fix it," said Brinson.

"At first there was a difficult attitudinal barrier to overcome," he said. "Many employees think that managers are just out to fix blame. As employees began to see that the AG leadership was truly dedicated to excellence, they began to get excited about the TAQ program," he added.

Sgt. Maj. Jessie Tiller, chief of Personnel Operations, said that the best thing about TAQ is that it really works.

"When I first came to AG, I had my doubts," he said. "I've seen many different managerial philosophies that have gone by the wayside, but now I'm convinced that TAQ will stay because it's a program that involves all employees and teaches them to take pride in what they do."

Brinson said that the benefits from TAQ have been enormous, but did not all come at once.

"There is no short-term fix. A good TAQ program takes a long time to establish and requires a constant commitment, but the results are definitely worth it," Brinson said. "We have not only ensured that the efficiency of the AG has improved for the present, we have also laid the groundwork for continuing a tradition of excellence into the future."

Recycle program expands

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Fort Benning is increasing its commitment to recycling with an expanded recycling program.

The program's highlight is the construction of a new recycling facility at Harmony Church.

"Fort Benning currently has no centralized recycling facility and we are limited to recycling only office bond paper, cardboard, metals and aluminum cans," said Morris Armstrong, post solid waste and recycling manager.

The new facility will be able to process green, clear and brown, newspapers and plastic milk and soda jugs in addition to the items already mentioned.

Armstrong said that the facility will be completed by the end of April and will probably open by mid-summer.

He added that some innovative measures will help reduce the costs of operating the facility, such as using volunteer and community service labor to staff the facility.

"We will also be able to get some used vehicles free of cost," Armstrong said. "These vehicles were classified for disposal but are still serviceable and need only minor repairs. By using these vehicles, we have already saved more than $32,000."

Armstrong said that recycling will extend the life of the post's landfill by diverting recyclable materials from being placed in it. Recycling also brings in money to the post.

"The money that is generated from recycling comes right back, after operation costs, to the installation," he said. "Half goes to the Directorate of Public Works to pay for programs that are directly related to pollution abatement, energy conservation and occupational safety, and half the money goes to the Directorate of Community Activities for use in Morale, Welfare and Recreation projects."

Plans are also still under way to create a curbside pickup program in order to eliminate the hassle of bagging and transporting recyclables to collection points.

Education will be another aspect of the post's recycling program, said Armstrong.

"We are going to begin involving the post's schools in the recycling process," Armstrong said. "The students will take what they learn home with them and can then help educate their parents as to why recycling is good."

Gun club rocks the night

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

Have you ever tried to hit a target with a pistol at night? Saturday night at English Range, 79 shooters tried to do exactly that.

The Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club held its first night pistol match; and, according to match coordinator Jim Graham, the response was better than expected.

"We anticipated a crowd of about 40 to 50 participants for this match. We had more than 25 people sign up right before the start of the match boosting our total to 79 for the night," said Graham.

With little or no light to work with on the targets, shooters had to adjust their shooting styles to compensate for night fire. Then when the shooters fired their first shots they lost all night vision from the muzzle flash which rendered the shooters temporarily out of touch with the targets.

In the competitor class, first place went to James Odom with a score of 167. Richard Hopp took second, firing a round of 132 and Don Coleman wrapped up third place with a score of 96.

Gregg Long fired a score of 210 to win the sportsman class. Trey Carmack came in second with a final score of 137, and Marvin Smith captured third place with a net score of 117.

Marsha Pittman was the high female shooter with a score of 56.

High service revolver went to Ennis Hunter with a score of 113.

High law enforcement went to Bryan Busby of the Fulton County Marshals Service with a score of 24.

First military went to Marcus Custer of the School of the Americas with a round of 134.

The next match will be April 3, at English Range. For more information on this match, contact the club at 689-3371.

OWC to kick up its heels

Officers' Wives' Club

The Festival of Running will be April 3. The event, which is sponsored by the Officers' Wives' Club, will take place on York Field across from Infantry Hall.

Monies raised by this event will be put back into the community through the OWC's Welfare Fund, according to OWC officials. This fund contributes thousands of dollars each year to high school seniors' and adults' continuing education. This year other contributions have been made to the Girl and Boy Scouts, the Salvation Army, Santa's Castle and First Steps.

If registered before March 31, the entry fee is $6 for children under 14, $8 for adults, and $40 for teams.

Registration forms are available at the OWC building or by calling 687-3537 or 682-4967. Race packets including race T-shirt, may be picked up at the OWC building April 2 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. or on race day from 6:30 a.m. until 30 minutes before the event entered.

The schedule of events is: 8 a.m., five-mile race; 9 a.m., mini-ekiden relay/2.62-mile walk; 10 a.m., one-mile (10 and under)/one-mile walk; 10:30 a.m., 1.5-mile run (11 and up).

Awards will be presented to the top three overall winners, male and female, and to the top male and female masters winners in the five-mile and 1.5-mile races. Awards will be presented to the top five (male and female) winners of the one-mile. In the mini-ekiden, awards will be presented to the top two male, female and mixed teams in each age division.

The mini-ekiden and five-mile run are on a certified race course. In the ekiden, each runner on the five-person teams must run 2.62 miles for a total race of 13.1 miles. The Columbus Track Club will certify the run times by computer and each awards ceremony will be held about 30 minutes after each race is completed.

Features of the festival include water stops on the course, medical personnel in attendance, refreshments at the finish line and entertainment including the Infantry Band, youth performing groups and clowns. Food and drink booths will be open and free parking will be provided.

2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry

The 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry, commanded by Lt. Col. Bruce Grant, held its first bowling championship Sunday.

There was participation from throughout the battalion in three different team categories to include doubles, mixed doubles and a top three team, which consisted of a combination of commanders, first sergeants, executive officers and their spouses.

The event was put together by 1st Sgt. Jerome Loving of Company E, who organized it so that members of the battalion would end up bowling on several different lanes against different opponents in order to maximize the socialization and fun. Two lanes were also set aside for the children to participate.

The big winner from the team competitions was Company E, which managed to win the doubles and mixed doubles competition while Company D won the top three competition.

After tallying up the pin totals, Company E was declared the overall champion of the battalion being anchored by Staff Sgt. Sam Clark, Sgt. 1st Class Joseph Achivida and Sgt. 1st Class Kevin Reilly along with their wives Angela, Sara and Ingrid respectively.

Individual achievement was also recognized with the high male and female bowlers being Sgt. 1st Class Lezcano of Company C and his wife, Rosita, with scores of 188 and 145 respectively.

All winners were awarded a gold colored bowling pin with their particular event painted on it. On top of that, Company E brought home a trophy as the overall winner.

The final award was a certificate of appreciation given to the Main Bowling Center and its staff for their cooperation in making the event a success.

Let's talk turkey

By Kevin L. McIver
USAIC Public Affairs Office

COMMENTARY

It's less than two weeks until the woods will be filled with the chatter of hundreds of hunters attempting to call in one of the most savvy critters ever hunted — the Tom Turkey.

Camouflaged from head-to-toe, face painted, and our favorite shotgun cleaned and oiled, turkey season allows us to explore nature as no other sport can.

Calling in an adult male turkey can be a trying experience for the new hunter. Planning, preparation, and using good old "turkey tactics" are the key to success.

First you need some basic facts about Mr. Tom. He's a big rascal that will weigh in somewhere between 15 and 24 pounds, and if he is the dominant male, he virtually fears nothing as he struts around his turf.

A turkey's vision is as keen as any of the other big birds. He has excellent sight and can spot the slightest movement.

Adult male turkeys haves been clocked running at speeds of 15 mph and can fly up to 50 mph.

And if you think he's a big wimp, think again. He has razor-sharp talons and a lot of strength in his upper wing area and when combined with his running and flying ability, he has been known to give many an unwary coyote a tough time.

And what about food sources? During the breeding and nesting period, "herbaceous legumes" are Tom's favorite according to Tom Brooks, wildlife biologist for the Fort Benning Natural Resource Branch. For us "nonbiologists," this translates into "plant seeds."

Later in the season, the preferred food shifts to insect matter such as grubs, worms and other delectable morsels. Sounds delicious huh?

What are your chances of success? According to Brooks, out of the 447 permits issued to hunters last season, only 105 gobblers were taken. That's roughly 25 percent.

Safety is extremely important to all of us, especially during turkey season as it involves sitting on the ground and sometimes moving toward a hesitant bird.

According to Regis Beighley, safety manager of the Infantry Branch Safety Office, no reportable accidents occurred during last year's season — knock on wood. Let's continue to be safe again this year.

There's one important note regarding your hunting license. If you were born after Jan. 1, 1961, you're required to attend a hunter safety course. Having a hunter safety card is a prerequisite to obtaining your Georgia and Fort Benning hunting licenses and permits. Contact the Outdoor Recreation Center at 545-7680 for more information.

Good luck and good hunting. See you in the woods.

When it comes to fitness, use it or lose it

By Mike Burley
Army Physical Fitness School

COMMENTARY

The other day, I went to watch my 7-year-old daughter in gym class. I was impressed that the teacher had the children doing many exercises that enhance their motor skills and awareness of body movements. I was told that this all leads to confidence and greater self-esteem.

I asked the teacher at what point in the childrens' young lives are they taught about the principles of physical conditioning and how it relates to health, wellness, and longevity? The answer, simply stated, was that they don't. Unless the children go out for competitive sports teams, they are never asked to do aerobic exercise for 20 to 30 minutes three to five times a week or to do any muscular strength or endurance work to the point of temporary muscle failure. The emphasis remains on games and flexibility.

I found this to be somewhat alarming. In reality, my daughter is lucky. Do you know that there are some schools that have no PE teacher because of funding cutbacks? Others have PE once every two to three weeks by a teacher who has to service several schools? It seems that fitness, health and wellness are not as important as home economics, geography or music.

Have you ever heard someone say that they're heavier or less fit because they're getting older? Sounds like a good excuse — blame bodily changes on aging.

Consider the changes in the body blamed on aging — changes in muscles, bones, brain, cholesterol, blood pressure, sexual performance, increase risk of heart disease, and so on. Now compare body changes due to physical inactivity. They are strikingly similar. The similarity shows that many of the physiological changes that are attributed to aging are really because of disuse. Heard the phrase "use it or lose it?"

Good news released late last year states that Americans are living longer than ever before: 76 years on average. The bad news is that the Center for Disease Control says that the last eight years of life are in a physically dysfunctional state. So we have this steady decline in health and function until death — starting at about 68. I don't know about you, but I want to be active — functional — until the day I die. Quality of life is what I'm talking about.

This year, about 1 million Americans will die of heart disease, $75 billion will be spent on health care, and $17.6 billion in productivity will be lost. In addition, 40 million Americans are overweight. Is the lack of exercise related to these startling statistics? Many researchers say yes without a doubt.

Much research has been done on exercise and disease. The most conclusive was research done by the Cooper Aerobic Institute that last year conclusively linked the lack of exercise to increased risk of cardiovascular disease. The evidence was so conclusive, in fact, that the American Heart Association has added the lack of exercise to its list of primary risk factors: smoking, high blood pressure and high blood cholesterol.

Cooper found that people who have none of the above risk factors and do no exercise have the same risk of heart attack as someone with all of the risks but exercise regularly.

And by the way, surveys show that only 20 percent of us exercise regularly and with the intensity for cardiovascular benefit, 40 percent do occasional exercise, and 40 percent of Americans are completely sedentary.

Regular exercise is the key to better health and quality of life. Educate and motivate your entire family — especially your children — to begin and stick with exercise. In the long run, it will pay off!

Unit Ministry Team NCOIC retires after 22 years

By Jacqueline Feagin
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Sgt. 1st Class Walter E. Holloway, noncommissioned officer in charge of the Unit Ministry Team at Fort Benning, retired after 22 years of service.

Holloway, a native of Dawson, Ga., has served as chaplain assistant in several units around the world. He has served at Fort Benning twice in his career as well as with Headquarters, 7th Engineer Brigade, U. S. Forces Korea and U.S. Army Intelligence and Security Command, Arlington, Va.

Holloway said he did not come into the Army to serve as a chaplain assistant. Chaplain assistants were short staffed after Vietnam and Holloway, with his background, filled a need in the community. He has been serving since 1973 as a chaplain assistant.

Col. Lawrence K. White Jr. (center), presents awards to Sgt. 1st Class Walter E. Holloway and his wife, Mary, while Post Command Sgt. Maj. William H. Acebes (left), looks on.

As a soldier, he has earned three Meritorious Service Medals, three Army Commendation Medals, seven Good Conduct Medals and an Overseas Ribbon, to name a few.

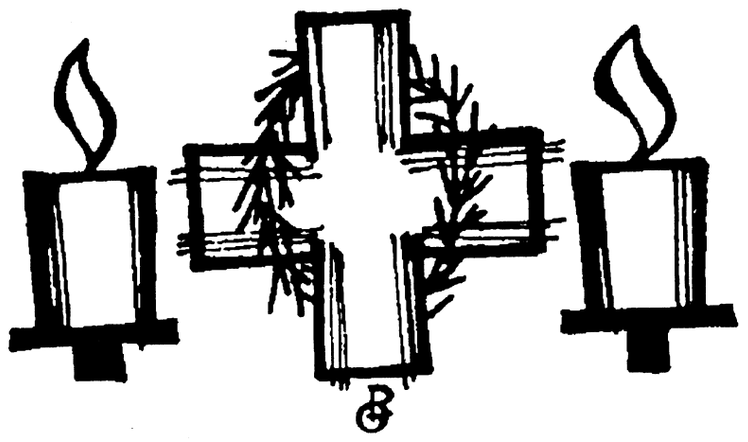
As the NCOIC, he has built a bond with all leaders throughout the Fort Benning Community, according to Chaplains' Office officials, and has helped younger soldiers build a sense of fellowship through the UMT.

Holloway will remain in the area with his wife and three children.

Lent is season of challenge

By Phil Reilly
USAIC Chaplains' Office

In the Catholic tradition, one of the practices of the faithful during the season of Lent is to meditate on the Stations of the Cross.



The stations are based on the scriptural account of Christ's passion and death. There are 14 stations:

1. Jesus is condemned to death.
2. Jesus carries his cross.
3. Jesus falls the first time.
4. Jesus meets his mother.
5. Simon of Cyrene carries the cross.
6. Veronica wipes the face of Jesus.
7. Jesus falls the second time.
8. Jesus meets the women of Jerusalem.
9. Jesus falls the third time.
10. Jesus is stripped of his garments.
11. Jesus is nailed to the cross.
12. Jesus dies on the cross.
13. Jesus is taken down from the cross.
14. Jesus is placed in the tomb.

Of the 14 stations, I think the one given the least consideration is the fifth station — Simon carries the cross. Let's consider Simon for a moment.

The scripture says Simon was "a man from the country" whom the soldiers ordered to carry the cross. He may very well have been on his way home to the country when he was interrupted.

This couldn't have been much fun for him. The cross was heavy and it was an uphill climb. Perhaps the crowd thought he was a relative or follower of Jesus. They may have cursed him or spat on him as well.

I wonder what he thought in his heart. Was he angry over having his journey interrupted, uncomfortable about being involved in someone else's problems, or disturbed at being so close to such agony and suffering?

It must have hurt too, if he was an ordinary man, to see the pain of Jesus. Simon was an archetype of those who help to ease the pain of others.

People like Mother Teresa in Calcutta; Dorothy Day with her soup kitchens in places like the Bowery section of New York City; Jean Donovan, martyred in El Salvador, or those working with the homeless and drug-addicted teen-agers in the Covenant houses — all of them were ordinary people being what Jim Cotty more or less calls in his book, "Healing", "volunteer pain bearers." These people work in a world of pain, squalor and darkness.

We are attracted to these people not because of the pain, but because of the light that illuminates the darkness in which they work. And the light that shines from them is not theirs — it is God's.

The season of Lent is a challenge for us to be another Simon to the extent that we can be. There is plenty of darkness in our midst - homelessness, poverty, drugs, AIDS, those who are terminally ill, spouse abuse, etc.

Perhaps we can be a "pain bearer" during this season of Lent through our prayers, fasting, almsgiving and reaching out to those in need. After all, we're ordinary people too.

507th celebrates Black History Month

By Jacqueline Feagin
USAIC Chaplains' Office

The 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry ended Black History Month with a spiritual service at Marshall Auditorium Feb. 26.

Dr. Elliot Strickland, guest speaker from St. Paul African Methodist Episcopal Church, told the filled auditorium about black worship.

The program started with a welcome by Lt. Col. Michael Hawrylak, the unit's commander. Chaplain (Capt.) Kevin Weston of the 11th Infantry Regiment followed with the invocation. Sgt. Sydni Redmond, Public Affairs Office, Command Information Branch, narrated the event.

Strickland told the audience that black worship is no different from any other.

"In any church where there is rejoicing, you will see people carrying on and dancing," Strickland said. "Black worship is just people rejoicing over God."

The Canaan Baptist Choir, directed by Ida Crowell, provided the gospel singing for the event.

Victory Focus soldiers training to win

By Tom Wilkinson
USAIC Public Affairs Office

As the spring showers of cool drizzly rain slowly turned the Fort Benning roads to slick, gooey clay, the soldiers of the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division maintain their focus — Victory Focus.

"Vs" on helmets and vehicles are the trademark of the 24th Infantry Division — it symbolizes victory.

The "Victory Division" earned its name in 1944 on the islands of the Philippines. The liberated Filipino people often greeted the soldiers with the Churchill two-fingered "V" sign and cries of victory.

Recently, more than 4,500 soldiers deployed to local training areas in a 21-day exercise geared to enhance readiness and better prepare the brigade for its rotation to the National Training Center, Fort Irwin, Calif., in April.

"We are starting off this year at a higher level of training," said Maj. Steve Bailey, the brigade operations officer. "We're doing more extensive battalion and company-level training in an effort to enter our NTC rotation at a higher level than we did last year."

The units began deploying Feb. 27 and jumped right into a myriad of training exercises to include infantry platoon live fires, tank gunneries, artillery and mortar live fires. The brigade also conducted a joint air attack team exercise involving the Air Force working with the brigade's combat assets to direct a coordinated attack to destroy a national enemy.

The soldiers will also experience training in river crossings, company and platoon situational training exercises, military operations in urban terrain, aerial resupply and demolitions.

To add a dimension of lethality, the unit will conduct mass casualty exercises to test units in medical treatment, according to Capt. Todd Dombroski, the brigade surgeon.

"About 25 soldiers will become 'wounded,' for exercise purposes, then they will be treated by unit medical aid stations for triage and evacuation through ambulance exchange points to the clearing company," he said. "It's imperative for soldiers to know they will be taken care of on the modern battlefield, and this is one way of ensuring top quality medical treatment — through tough, realistic training."

The soldiers will also enjoy some time with their families as units will host a "Family Day" in an effort to get families out to the field for a day to see what their spouses do and how the brigade operates.

As the vehicles of the brigade continue to churn up the red Georgia clay, Victory Focus takes the soldiers one step closer to victory at the NTC.

Exercises simulate war

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Areas of Fort Benning have been invaded.

Weapons, communications equipment and soldiers of the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division are deployed at strategic locations over most of the training areas on post, and are engaged in exercises on land, in water and in the air.

"This is graduate-level infantry training," said Capt. Barry Ezell, operations officer (air). "Most brigades don't attempt river crossings or night air operations, and they don't try to move six battalions at one time. We're working in three dimensions, coordinating with 4,000 people."

Fort Benning troops, said Ezell, are working with troops from Fort Stewart, Ga., and the Air Force in an attempt to simulate wartime conditions as closely as possible.

Victory Focus training includes situational training exercises, in which tanks and Bradleys equipped with multiple integrated laser engagement system, or MILES, gear negotiate obstacles and sustain and return "enemy" fire, he said.

The joint air attack team exercise conducted March 5 included Army Apache helicopters and a Navy A-6 Intruder attack aircraft. A combat observation lasing team took part with laser rangefinding, and Air Force personnel and members of the 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment also participated in the exercise.

A new addition to Victory Focus this year, said Ezell, was the use of mobile subscriber equipment, contained in two vans in place in the field, which can interface with existing communications lines and control transmissions by grid coordinates.

"This enhances our field communications considerably," he said. "It takes us to a whole different level from field radios." The ultimate goal of Victory Focus, said Ezell, is to prepare for National Training Center exercises in April.

"We've trained to proficiency in individual skills," said Ezell. "This is more of a brigade scrimmage and more like what we'll be doing at NTC."

WORLD WAR II

50 years ago this week ...

• In the ongoing Battle of the Atlantic, a German U-boat pack, 40 strong, dominated the largest convoy battle of the war, sinking 21 Allied ships at 140,800 tons from convoys SC-122 and HX-229 while losing none of its own vessels. Taking advantage of German intelligence information pertaining to Allied routes, the U-boat forces attacked after the two convoys had inadvertently merged into one 100-ship mass because of the slower movement of SC-122.

• On the Eastern Front, Field Marshal Erich von Manstein continued his stunning offensive as his German forces pressed the attack, capturing the city of Kharkov. Despite the German advance, however, Russian forces took Kholm and Zharkovsky, northeast of Velikiye Luki and Vyazma in the central sector of the front.

• In North Africa, Britain's Eighth Army advanced, despite the outbreak of several sharp skirmishes, as part of a joint Allied operation against Axis positions along the Mareth Line in Tunisia. Additionally, the 2nd New Zealand Division and the Eighth British Armored Brigade moved south from Medenine in preparation for the operation.

• In Burma, Japan's 55th and 33rd divisions attacked the 123rd Indian Brigade in the Arakan, forcing an Allied withdrawal.

• At Fort Benning, the 1st Canadian Parachute Brigade, temporarily stationed on post pending the completion of its own airborne training facilities, passed in review as part of a ceremony honoring Brig. Gens. George P. Howell and A.E. Nash.

Army seeks to keep high-tech edge

By Brian Pigott
Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

While technology may change the way the Army fights, it will not change the art of commanding, said Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr., commander of the Training and Doctrine Command.

Since May 1989, the Battle Command Battle Lab at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., has been working with industry, academia and 4th Army Materiel Command to improve command and control in the field. Methods and machinery are being developed and tested to help the Army face the challenges of the post-Cold War future.

The Fort Leavenworth lab is one of six in TRADOC, each related to a separate battlefield functional area.

"In the absence of a particular measurable threat," Franks said, "what we want to do is experiment with capabilities so we can continue to maintain that edge on a wide range of anticipated present and future operational environments."

In turn, the technology that is fielded will "reinforce the art of command," he said.

The Battle Command Battle Lab, for example, is working on two projects that would improve a commander 's efficiency in he field.

• In conjunction with the University of Missouri-Kansas City, the Fort Leavenworth teleconferencing in the field. Division commanders would be able to confer with brigade commanders without having to travel to the brigade site.

• Large-scale computer networks are being developed with the University of Kansas. These networks would enable unit commanders to transmit battle data, which normally use a lot of memory, through a central computer.

"We want to assist the command in (commanding) by using information-age technology (to) visualize what's happening now and then visualize what the future state must be, and then make the decisions that must be made to get that unit from the current state to the future state," Franks said.

"Fort Leavenworth is right in the center of it. Fort Leavenworth is the hub of tactical warfighting and expertise in our Army. So it is the natural place for us to talk about battle command.

"The natural partner in this is Fort Gordon (Ga.) — our signal school — which has the expertise in all of the technology," he said.

At the same time, the Army hopes to cut its acquisition process by as much as 10 years with the battle labs, said Lt.Col. Russ Baldwin, Battle Command Battle Lab chief of staff. "The technology is there to support the soldier," he said. "Yes, the Army has an acquisition process, and it's a good one. But many times it's too slow."

Working with industry in the early developmental stages could cut the acquisition and fielding process down to five to six years from a current 10 to 15 years, Baldwin said.

He hopes commanders will have use of the "C2V" command-and-control vehicle, for example, in six to eight years. The C2V is set to replace the M577, which was used in Desert Storm but was criticized for not being able to keep pace with other vehicles in the desert.

Budgetary constraints mean the Army may have "fewer new systems; we will have more enhancers," Baldwin said. This, too, may enable commanders to get their hands on new technology quicker.

Franks said TRADOC's six battle labs have helped institutionalize the means in the Army to rapidly adapt to the rapidly changing world that we see around us.

They may have, therefore, become permanent fixtures. "In order to provide the best technology to soldiers (and commanders) in the field — sooner than later — we're going to need battle labs to work with industry, to work with the Army Materiel Command ... and get those prototypes out there," Baldwin said.

Belizean officer completes SOA course

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

The first officer to train at the School of the Americas from the country of Belize since 1984 graduated from SOA's Instructor Training Course recently, and his attendance at the course is characteristic of how the school has developed a connection with the countries of Latin America.

Capt. Errol Gentle of the Belize Defense Force had completed the Infantry Officer Advanced Course and was scheduled to attend a course at Fort Gordon, Ga. When the course was canceled, Gentle was on his way back to Belize until he met Lt. Col. Randall Parish, chief of staff for SOA.

According to Gentle, he first met the school's chief of staff when Parish visited Belize, located between Mexico and Honduras in Central America.

The meeting at Fort Benning helped Gentle get enrolled in SOA's instructor course.

> "Fort Benning is the largest, most organized and efficient (training institution.)"
> Capt. Errol Gentle
> SOA graduate

A nine-year infantry officer, Gentle first traveled to Fort Benning in 1987 to attend the Infantry Officer Basic Course and has been pleased with the training he's received.

"I've been to training institutions in Europe, elsewhere in the United States and in Asia; Fort Benning is not only the largest, but the most organized and efficient (post)," he said.

As a graduate of the Infantry Officer Basic Course, Gentle was familiar with U.S. military doctrine. However, IOAC increased his knowledge, especially the tenets of air-land battle, Gentle said.

The light infantry tactics he learned will apply directly to the Belize Defense Force, which relies heavily on light infantry assets, Gentle said.

In addition to learning military tactics, Gentle was able to learn about U.S. customs and traditions through his military sponsor, a fellow IOAC student, and the other officers in his class who "made his stay even more pleasant."

Gentle said the course he completed at SOA, the Instructor Training Course, was enlightening and helped him to develop instructor capability.

Gentle said he would like to return to Fort Benning in the future and attend the airborne and pathfinder courses.

29th Inf. gives automatic weapons demo

By Gregory Hart
29th Infantry Regiment

The 29th Infantry Regiment recently hosted an automatic weapons exercise for Infantry Officer Basic Course students at Red Cloud Range.

Soldiers from the 2nd Battalion displayed, explained and demonstrated the uses, concepts and effects of several automatic weapons.

The weapons demonstrated were the M-249 squad automatic weapon, M-60 machine gun, M2 HB .50-caliber heavy machine gun, and the MK-19 automatic grenade launcher.

The 1st Battalion demonstrated the capabilities of the Bradley Fighting Vehicle weapons systems. Students were shown the rates of fire and effects produced by the Bradley's 25mm cannon and M-240C 7.62mm coax machine gun.

Following the demonstration, students were able to fire all of these weapons as range cadre assisted them.

"The demonstration was informative," said 2nd Lt. Michael Kazmierzak. "The opportunity for us to really get behind some of these weapons like the .50-caliber and the MK-19 is rare once we get to our units."

Students were shown different methods of controlling automatic weapons fire so that it can be used in the most effective manner. Vocal commands for controlling automatic weapons were also demonstrated.

The class, having officers destined for light units and mechanized units, split into two groups allowing the light infantry officers to fire the weapons inside a Bradley Fighting Vehicle, and the mechanized officers to fire the light weapons such as the M2 HB .50-caliber and the MK 19 grenade launcher.

Special Forces looks for officers

USASOC Public Affairs Office

Officers interested in joining Special Forces will have the chance to talk to Special Forces branch officials Monday and Tuesday.

Capt. Scott Peters, SF branch manager at the U.S. Army John F. Kennedy Special Warfare Center and School, will give the briefings Monday at 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. at Infantry Hall, Room 20. Tuesday the briefings are scheduled for 8 a.m. and noon in the same place.

Infantry Officer Basic and Officer Advanced Course students are welcome to attend.

Although the Special Forces are targeting 1990 year group officers for worldwide assignment, some positions remain open to officers in the 1986 to 1989 year groups.

Officers generally have one time in their military careers — during their third year of commissioned service — to apply for the Army's newest branch, an official for the Special Forces Proponency Office said of the current selection system.

However, because of attrition in the SF selection process, some officer positions remain unfilled, said Peters.

The SF branch offers command opportunities at all levels, Peters said. All officers interested in professional development are encouraged to attend the briefing.

By now, officers in YG 90 should have received information packets from the SF branch about applying for the next accession board, which will convene in September.

The SF branch can accept men only and because of the high cost of aviation training, cannot consider aviation officers. The board is restricted in the number selected from other branches that have officer shortages.

Special Forces plans to select 265 officers this year.

A complete application packet, including complete physical examination and Defense Language Aptitude Battery results, is required for reconsideration, Peters said.

As with most rules, this one has one exception. Officers being considered for promotion to captain before their third year of active commissioned duty should apply during the year they go to the captains' board.

Final acceptance into the branch will depend upon the successful completion of a three-week assessment and selection program and the 24-week Special Forces Detachment Qualification Course.

Officials developed a formula based on past attrition to arrive at the accession rate of 265 officers per year, Peters said.

Applications are due by Sept. 1. Results will be mailed back by early November.

Prospective SF officers should contact Peters by calling commercial (919) 432-2415 or DSN 239-9002.

CRIME WATCH

Military Police Activity

The following entries were taken from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from Feb. 23 to March 1. Such entries may be incomplete and are not the adjudication of the guilt or innocence of any person.

This week's hot topic concerns a form of shoplifting that has become increasingly popular. It is known as price changing.

Switching price tags on items in the Post Exchange, or any store, is considered shoplifting by the criminal justice system, even though most patrons guilty of this crime do not consider it shoplifting.

In most instances, the patron will remove an item from a box and place it in another box that has a considerably lower price tag, or switch price tags on items of clothing.

• A private first class was charged with damaging private property after he was observed pouring an unknown amount of a cleaning solvent in another soldier's gas tank.

• A specialist was charged by civil authorities with simple battery after he was observed hitting his wife while she was driving, causing her to drive in the wrong lane of traffic.

• A private was charged with wrongful possession of a controlled substance after his commander found an envelope containing marijuana during a health and welfare inspection.

• A specialist was charged by civil authorities with driving under the influence of alcohol and no proof of insurance after he was stopped for having an improperly displayed tag. He was administered a breathalyzer test with a result of .14.

• A specialist reported that persons unknown broke the driver's side window of his car and removed a car stereo.

• A family member and a civilian were charged with shoplifting after the family member placed a watch on her wrist and the civilian put two rings on her finger and then exited the Post Exchange without rendering payment.

• A sergeant was charged with larceny of government property after she fraudulently submitted paperwork stating that an advance payment for herself had been repaid.

This week's booby prize is awarded to a civilian who was shoplifting at the Post Exchange. He was informed by store security personnel to proceed to the security office because he was suspected of shoplifting.

He attempted to escape and ran into a freezer, damaging the freezer. This slowed him down enough to allow two bystanders to detain him until security personnel arrived.

He was charged with shoplifting and damage to property.

Other post activities included 15 traffic accidents and five reports of shoplifting at facilities on post.

There were three cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, seven cases of larceny of private property and three cases of larceny of government property.

Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best — Give Crime Arrest."

Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5223 or the "Crime in Progress" line at 545-2222.

Read labels to help you eat right

By Karen Schultz
Martin Army Community Hospital's Nutrition Care Division

Health conscious Americans are educated consumers today.

When shopping for groceries, we may look for "lite," "fat free" or other nutrition information on food labels.

Yet, we may still not be able to determine how a certain product can fit into our diet.

To help alleviate some of the confusion, the Food and Drug Administration and the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Food Safety and Inspection Service have published new food labeling regulations.

Nutrition labeling will be available for almost all food by July 1994.

The new regulations require an ingredient list on all foods with more than one ingredient. This requirement will assist those that have food allergies with avoiding a food allergens.

The new food label will have a new title on the nutrition panel — nutrition facts — which replaces the nutrition information per serving listing.

The daily value replaces the U.S. recommended daily allowance on food labels. These values are based on a daily intake of 2,000 calories.

The regulations specify what terms may be used to describe a food and how they can be used. Some of these terms are:

The term "free" means that a product contains no amount of, or only trivial amounts of, fat, saturated fat, cholesterol, sodium, sugars and calories.

The term "low" may be used on foods that could be eaten frequently without exceeding dietary guidelines for one or more: fat, saturated fat, cholesterol, sodium and calories.

The terms "lean" and "extra lean" may be used for meat, poultry and seafood. Specifically "lean" is less than 10 grams of fat per serving and "extra lean" is less than 5 grams of fat per serving.

The term "light" or "lite" can mean two things. First, a product may contain one-third fewer calories or half the fat of the reference food. Secondly, the sodium content of a low-calorie, low-fat food has been reduced by 50 percent.

The following is a list of nutrient-disease relationship claims that the FDA will allow on food labels:

• Calcium and osteoporosis.
• Fat and cancer.
• Saturated fat, cholesterol and coronary heart disease.
• Fiber-containing fruits, vegetables, grain products and cancer or coronary heart.
• Sodium and hypertension.
• Fruits and vegetables and cancer.

Food labels containing these new standards will assist Americans in eating right.

For more information concerning the new food labeling regulations, contact a registered dietitian at Martin Army Community Hospital's Nutrition Clinic at 544-1542.

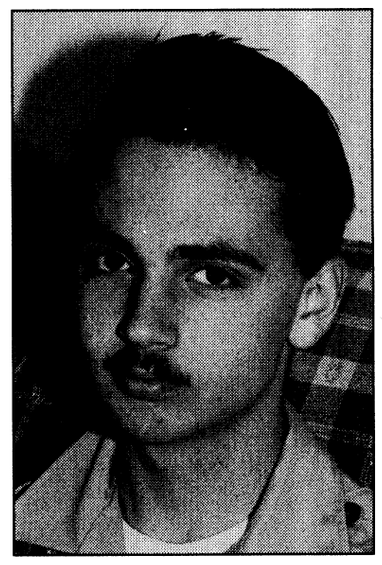
Troop 227 Boy Scout earns Eagle Award

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

Removing overgrown vegetation on the banks of Russ Pond so that the families of Fort Benning will be able to better enjoy the beauty of the area was the Eagle project recently completed by 16-year-old Boy Scout Damien Currier.



For three weekends, Currier, junior assistant scoutmaster for Troop 227, supervised members of his troop and Troop 51 at the Russ Pond fishing area in clearing away the overgrowth.

The project's planning, organization and accomplishment was a requirement for Currier to earn his scouting rank of Eagle.

An Eagle project must be a pre-approved one that benefits the community in some way and offers the opportunity for him to display leadership abilities in getting the job done.

In scouting for the past six years, Currier attained his Eagle rank Feb. 25.

He said his next goal is to follow in the footsteps of his stepfather who attained the Eagle Award in 1965. He then wants to become an assistant scoutmaster for his present troop and possibly move on to scoutmaster.

Currier

Currier has earned 33 merit badges and is a member of Order of the Arrow. He holds the rank of brotherhood and is vice chief for Chattahoochee Lodge 204.

He has been a member of two other troops, Troop 1 at Fort Devens, Mass., and Troop 460 at Fort Riley, Kan.

Currier is the first in his troop to become an Eagle Scout. His Eagle Court of Honor ceremony will be April 25.

He is the son of 1st Sgt. and Mrs. Thomas Lytle.

Behavior management through consideration for your child at his or her developmental level and being firm, fair and following through with consequences were the recommendations made by Kathy Einhorn, assistant director of Special Education for the Fort Benning Schools at the final lecture in the "Talks About Young Children" series March 3.

Cathy Joyner, kindergarten teacher at Frank R. Loyd School, also offered suggestions for educational opportunities out-of-the-home at this "Learning Together" session.

These two were followed by four stations where parents were provided with practical suggestions on activities to do with their preschoolers in the areas of reading, cooking, math and woodworking.

Conducting the reading station was Nora Lester, Reading Recovery teacher at Herbert J. Dexter School.

Kindergarten teacher at Morris McBride School, Ann Saunders taught the session on math activities.

Ernestine Ezekiel, kindergarten teacher at Dexter School, spoke on different woodworking activities per age group to use in teaching and entertaining preschool children.

The session concluded with refreshments served by members of Don C. Faith Middle School's National Junior Honor Society.

Register your pet

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

In the fall of 1991, a rabid raccoon was found on post. In 1992, 370 animals statewide were infected with rabies, and the numbers are on the rise.

Without a vaccination, your pet is at a higher risk of contracting rabies by exposure from another animal with the disease, said Capt. Kathleen Miller, chief at the Veterinary Treatment Facility.

Rabies is an infectious viral disease that is fatal to humans almost 100 percent of the time if not treated, said Miller.

From August to October of 1991, three people were infected with rabies in the United States. On Nov. 8 of that same year, a woman living in Georgia died from a rabies infection, said Miller.

Rabies is carried in the saliva. An animal can be infected through the bite of another animal or a cut. The virus travels up the nervous system and into the brain, infecting it, Miller said.

"In Georgia, cats must be vaccinated at 12 weeks of age and then annually. Dogs must be vaccinated at 12 weeks, one year and then every one to three years depending on vaccination history and type of rabies vaccine used. In Alabama, dogs and cats must be vaccinated at 12 weeks of age and then annually," said Miller.

An ongoing problem at Fort Benning is the number of unvaccinated and unregistered pets, said Miller.

All dogs, cats and horses on post must be registered at the Veterinary Treatment Facility within 14 days of arrival here, or upon becoming 12 weeks of age, she said.

If you live off post, your pet does not have to be registered at the VTF, but still must have a rabies shot and registration with the city or county in which you live, said Miller.

To register your pet on post, call the VTF for an appointment. If your pet already has a rabies vaccination, you must bring proof to the VTF in Building 265.

Animals are seen by appointment only. For more information, call 545-1127 or 545-4444.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Bradley Vanderau
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: Sergeant "X" and his wife, Mary, plan to file a joint federal income tax return for 1992. They lived in government quarters the entire year, and they have two children — Sam, who is 7, and Ellie, who is 6. Sergeant X received a W-2 that showed he earned $16,506 as wages. One of his friends told him he is eligible for something called the earned income credit. Can Sergeant X claim the earned income credit?

A: No. Taxpayers may be able to claim an earned income credit if they earned less than $22,370 and had a child living with them.

The credit reduces the taxes they owe; or, if they do not owe any tax, the credit will be refunded to them. To claim the credit, taxpayers must meet all of the following:

- Their earned income must be less than $22,370. For purposes of the earned income credit, earned income includes wages, salaries, tips; quarters allowances, subsistence allowances, in-kind quarters and subsistence received by military members; pay for service in a combat zone; and anything else of value, even if not taxable, that was received for providing services.
- Their adjusted gross income (Form 1040, line 31, or Form 1040A, line 16) must be less than $22,370.
- Their filing status can be any status except married filing a separate return.
- They must have a least one qualifying child who lives with them in their U.S. home for more than six months during the year. A military member is considered to be living with the child during temporary absences if it is reasonable to assume that the member will return to his or her U.S. main home at the end of the military assignment. Service in Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm is a temporary absence.

A qualifying child must be the taxpayer's child, adopted child, grandchild, stepchild or eligible foster child. The child must be: under age 19 or under age 24 and a full-time student, or any age if permanently and totally disable.

In the example, Sergeant X and his wife would not be entitled to claim the earned income credit. Although Sergeant X's W-2 showed he earned $16,506 in wages, he must also add any nontaxable amounts to find his earned income.

These nontaxable amounts include the basic allowance for quarters and basic allowance for subsistence, and the value of meals and lodging furnished in-kind to military personnel residing on military posts.

To calculate the value of meals and lodging furnished in-kind, assume that the value is equal to the BAQ and the BAS the military member would have received had he or she been entitled to the allowance.

In our example, Sergeant X received BAS in the amount of $2,308 for the 1992 tax year. He also must include the value of his BAQ even though he lived in government quarters and did not receive BAQ.

Sergeant X's BAQ amount for the 1992 tax year was $4,705. Therefore, Sergeant X and his wife do not qualify for the earned income credit because their total income ($23,519) exceeds the earned income limit of $22,370.

Taxpayers are reminded that they must complete the Schedule EIC that comes with their tax forms and instructions to claim the earned income credit.

For more information see Publication 3, Tax Information for Military Personnel, Publication 596, Earned Income Credit, and the instructions that come with the tax forms.

If you have a question or need assistance preparing your tax return, contact your unit tax adviser or the Tax Assistance Office.

The Tax Assistance Office is located in Building 2613 and is open from 8:30 a.m. until 4 p.m., Monday through Friday. The telephone number is 545-4267.

Daytime stars go prime time on NBC

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

If fans of daytime serials are expected to follow a favorite performer into prime-time, a new TV-movie is increasing the chances.

SPOTLIGHT

Monday's NBC drama "Woman on the Ledge" features three popular actresses from the afternoon hours, demonstrating parity by including a star from each of the major networks: Deidre Hall of NBC's "Days of Our Lives," Leslie Charleson of ABC's "General Hospital" and Colleen Zenk Pinter from CBS' "As the World Turns."

They play longtime friends, each of whom has a deeply troubling personal dilemma. Career woman Quinn (Hall) may have concentrated on business so long that it's too late for motherhood; housewife Rachel (Charleson) fears that her husband has been unfaithful; and musician Steffi (Zenk) worries that she's been looking for love in the wrong place ... specifically, the office of her therapist.

Those situations lead one of the ladies to perch on a ledge 15 stories above street level and ponder suicide, though the film doesn't reveal who it is until the end.

Other soap-opera veterans in the cast include Daytime Emmy-winner Peter ("The Young and the Restless") Bergman, Michael ("Guiding Light") Zaslow, Kale ("Another World") Browne and former "Days of Our Lives" regular Josh Taylor; Ken Kercheval, previously seen as Cliff Barnes on "Dallas," also appears.

Admittedly, the premise of "Woman on the Ledge" might strike some as the TV-movie equivalent of ambulance-chasing, since it basically invites viewers to wait two hours to learn if someone will take her own life.

What:
"Woman on the Ledge"
When:
Monday, 10 p.m. on NBC

"When I read the script, that had not occurred to me," Hall says; "and, when my agent called and asked what I thought about it, my initial reaction was that I liked the 'womenship' (the friendship among the main characters) of it. Then, I was sitting with (co-executive producer) Chuck Fries while he was doing an interview about it, and he said, 'It's a mystery.' I thought, 'What? It's a women's story!' I had not realized it then, but it really is a mystery, insofar as the question of who's sitting on the ledge is not really answered until the end. What was more provocative to me was the interaction between the women, how they coexisted and how they supported each other. If I had more distance from this, just as a viewer, I think I would be curious about these women's problems, and what was so devastating that it just seemed insurmountable.

To keep the suspense intact until the climactic sequence, Hall reports that the film's staff "did a lot of work on the shooting and the wardrobe, especially with the color of the clothes we all had on preceding those scenes, so there was simply no giveaway. A lot of attention was paid to that."

Preparations for Team Spirit 1993 are under way

By Sydni Redmond
USAIC Public Affairs Office

For most soldiers in Korea, the start of Team Spirit 1993 is a month away.

But, at the port of Pusan, the annual exercise has already begun. Soldiers at Pusan Harbor have begun the long and detailed processed of sipping equipment and supplies to support the exercise. Watch "Fort Benning Today" next week and see the setup of Team Spirit 1993.

Also on "Fort Benning Today," see just how early training starts for the 1st Battalion, 503rd Infantry in Korea when Army exercises are combined. Field training in Korea is also combined for front-line units like engineer, armor and infantry. "Fort Benning Today" will air segments from Warrior Valley, where all three elements come together.

"Fort Benning Today" will also air special news announcements and highlight post events.

"Victory News," the news show of the 24th Infantry Division, and post movie previews will also be showing.

U.S. Army Infantry Center Television will also highlight music and news from Soldiers Radio Satellite Network as well as post events on the Fort Benning community bulletin board.

For more information on the Soldiers Radio Satellite Network, see the schedule inside The Bayonet's TV section.

If you are a subscriber to Fort Benning Cable, you can watch USAIC TV on Channel 3, 24 hours a day.

Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:26, 7:56, 8:26 and 8:56 on WLTZ TV-38.

WOMEN'S HISTORY QUIZ

Equal Opportunity Office

Give the name of the women with the description.

1. This lady held the first press conference given by a first lady; she continued to hold press conferences on a regular basis throughout her years in the White House. In one of her memorable acts, she resigned from the Daughters of the American Revolution in 1939 after the organization denied mezzo-soprano Marian Anderson the use of its Constitution Hall in Washington, D.C. because she was black.

2. She became a translator for the U.S. Army, work which brought her recognition. She was called a heroine for her role as interpreter, guide and mediator in an 1878 rebellion of a neighboring tribe — the Bannock Uprising. Her bravery throughout the campaign brought her much public attention, but the outcome for her tribe was not favorable.

3. She was a professor at the Sorbonne, the first woman to hold a chair there. She was also the first woman to win the Nobel Prize. She developed a method of separating radium from radioactive residues in sufficient quantities to carry out detailed studies of its properties. In 1911, she became the first person to receive a second Nobel Prize.

4. She was the first American woman to win three gold medals in track and field at a single olympiad. In 1960 in Rome, she won the 100-meter and 200-meter sprints and then ran the anchor leg for the United States 4x100 relay team. She is a track director and special consultant on minority affairs at DePauw University, Green Castle, Ind.

5. She opened the doors of Hale House in a Harlem brownstone in 1973 to provide a life-saving environment for babies of young drug addicted mothers. Hundreds of children have returned to health and to their rehabilitated parents after living and being loved in this unique program. In 1985, President Ronald Reagan cited her as an "American Hero."

Answers: 1. Eleanor Roosevelt, humanitarian and diplomat 2. Sarah Winnemucca, Indian rights activist 3. Marie Curie, scientist 4. Wilma Rudolph, athlete 5. Clara McBride, humanitarian

Daffodil Festival blooms Saturday

Barnsley Gardens

Celebrate the rite of spring at the Daffodil Festival and delight in the blooming of more than 200,000 bulbs throughout historic Barnsley Gardens at Woodlands, a restored 1840s plantation and botanical garden in the rolling northwest Georgia mountains.

The festival will be Saturday and Sunday from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m.

While strolling among the golden blooms, learn from countless artisans who will be demonstrating their crafts in a "by invitation only" show and sale. Witness an array of talents from the local traditions of quilting and spinning to such offerings as hand-carved Keltic crosses and the fine art of jewelry making.

The entertainment will be as diverse as the working artists and craftsmen featuring everything from Shakespearean theater to north Georgia mountain music. In addition, dance troupes from across Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee, headlined by "Special Edition," Barnsley's host team, will be kicking up their heels offering clogging, Western dance and historic pieces such as the Virginia Reel in full period attire.

An menu of festival foods will provide a quick snack or a hearty meal. An old photograph or a souvenir from the gift or garden shops will provide a memento of the day in the northwest Georgia mountains.

Barnsley Gardens at Woodlands is located between Adairsville and Kingston just minutes off I-75. Take exit 128, go west on Georgia Highway 140 and follow the signs. An outdoor event, the Daffodil Festival is subject to weather. For more information, call (706) 773-7480.

College to give concert

Columbus College

The Columbus College Symphonic Wind Ensemble, under the direction of Dr. William Fry, will present a concert Sunday at 3 p.m. in the college's Fine Arts Hall auditorium.

The program will feature the classics of band literature, as well as contemporary works for the wind medium. Opening the program will be March, Opus 99, a selection by Sergei Prokofiev, one of Russia's 20th century composers. Also featured will be David Maslanka's Child's Garden of Dreams; British composer Malcolm Arnold's Tam O'Shanter; and Good Soldier Schweick Suite, written by Robert Kurka.

The final selections will be the fourth movement from Symphonic Metamorphosis, March, by Paul Hindemith and Terpsichore by American composer Bob Margolis.

Admission to the concert is free. For additional information, contact Schwob Department of Music at 568-2049.

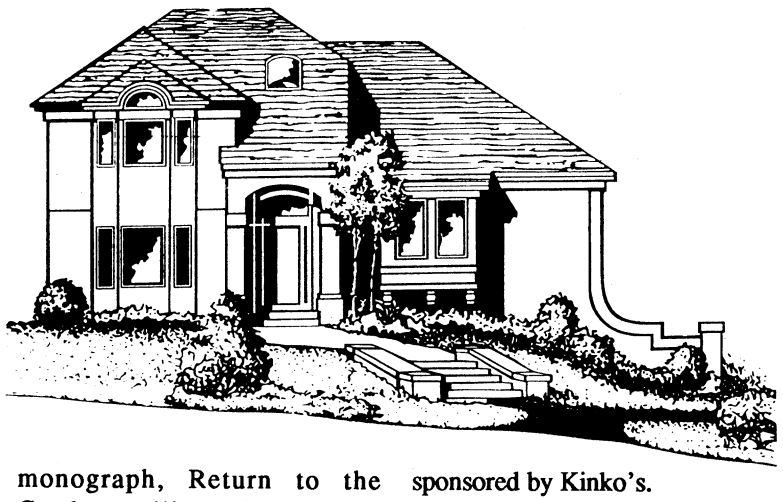
Druid Hills tour celebrates 100th anniversary

Druid Hills Civic Association



ATLANTA, Ga. — The 1993 Druid Hills Home and Garden Tour will be March 26 and 27.

Sponsored by the Druid Hills Civic Association and the Emory University Woman's Club, the tour features distinctive homes and gardens in the historic Druid Hills neighborhood.

The 1993 tour celebrates the 100th anniversary of Frederick Law Olmsted's original plan for Druid Hills. Olmsted, the father of American landscape architecture, wove Ponce de Leon Avenue through a series of public parks that he described as a "string of pearls" for Atlanta. The homes and surrounding gardens on the tour will be open for viewing. The homes on this year's tour have never before been open to the public.

Nonstop guided trolley tours of the Druid Hills neighborhood will run during the tour. Sponsored by Crythis Bristow, the trolley tours will take riders by areas of historic interest in Druid Hills.

All who purchase tickets for the 1993 Druid Hills Home and Garden Tour also will receive a monograph, Return to the Garden, telling of the "Lost Homes" in the Druid Hills area, sponsored by Kinko's.

Lunch will be available at the Druid Hills United Methodist Church. The church is located on the corner of Briarcliff Road and Ponce de Leon Avenue.

Special mini buses will provide continuous transportation to the tour homes. The tour is being held in cooperation with the Dogwood Festival and in conjunction with the annual meeting of the National Association of Olmsted Parks.

Cost is $10 before March 26 and $14 on the day of the tour. Cost for visiting a single home is $5 and group rates are available.

For more information, call (404) 727-TOUR.

Benning weathers surprise snowstorm

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

While many of Fort Benning's residents weathered Saturday's snowstorm indoors, braving the winter cold only to play in the snow and build snowpeople, employees of the Directorate of Public Works put in extra hours working to repair storm damage and keep the roads clear.

Quarters were damaged and much of Fort Benning suffered power outages in the storm.

At least 60 percent of the post lost power at some point during the weekend, said Charles R. Orr, chief of the Buildings and Grounds Division of the Directorate of Public Works.

Problems with power started at midnight Friday, Orr said, but those isolated outages were cleared up by 5:15 a.m.

It was not until 6:30 a.m. Saturday when the weather really got bad, and calls started pouring in, Orr said.

"We were flooded with work orders," Orr said. DPW called in three customer service people to handle about 3,000 phone calls.

Most of the power failures were due to the heavy winds blowing over trees and knocking down power lines, according to Orr.

Two houses in the Custer Terrace housing area suffered damage from fallen trees penetrating the roofs and causing damage to the ceilings, he said.

Another home had a heat pump damaged and windows broken by the storm, Orr said.

No one was injured, and the occupants were moved into guest housing while the repairs were being made, according to Orr.

One soldier was relocated because of damage to her quarters.

Several roads, including Marne and Old Cusseta roads, were blocked by fallen trees, Orr said.

A total of 65 people from the Directorate of Public Works were called in to repair the damage and clear the roads.

These workers included electricians, plumbers, heating mechanics, grader operators and a tree removal crew.

"Some of these people worked more than 14 hours straight outside in the cold trying to get the power on and the roads cleared," Orr said. "You have to be dedicated to work like that."

All the hard work resulted in power being restored to family housing by 6 p.m. Saturday, and to most remaining areas by 9 p.m. Sunday, he said.

"I feel that we were prepared and took care of our customers in a responsive manner," Orr said. "When the snow starts sticking, we know what to do."

Engineers return

By David Greer
36th Engineer Group

Members of the 36th Engineer Group returned to Fort Benning March 10 from Somalia. The 36th was part of Operation Restore Hope.

Units of the 36th Engineer Group deployed Jan. 7 and 8 to provide engineer support for all forces connected with the Somalia operation.

According to Command Sgt. Maj. James Gardner, group command sergeant major, the 36th built more than 1,200 kilometers of new or improved roads.

These roads greatly enhanced the delivery of relief supplies to the rural villages, said Gardner, and he explained that the group will leave behind the 63rd Combat Support Equipment Company and a vertical support platoon from the 43rd Engineer Battalion to provide maintenance support for the coalition forces. Also, the 608th Ordnance Company will be left to provide theater-level ammunition support, he said.

Gardner said that a 120- to 180-day rotation cycle had been discussed for the return of the troops left behind; but, as of yet, no firm date has been reached by higher headquarters.

Those returning from Somalia with the 36th Engineer Group include Headquarters and Headquarters Company, the 43rd Engineer Battalion (Combat) and the 533rd Transportation Company.

ITR, SatoTravel hosts 2nd annual fair

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

The Information, Ticketing and Registration Office and SatoTravel hosted the second annual Travel Fair March 11 at Infantry Hall.

The hundreds of soldiers and civilians present picked up small gifts and brochures and reviewed travel information.

Representatives from a variety of airlines, cruise lines, tour companies, hotels, car rental agencies and other attractions such as zoos and amusement parks were present to provide information.

ITR and SatoTravel representatives were present at the fair answering questions and distributing information.

Kathy Hodges, marketing agent for SatoTravel, said that the fair is set up to give the soldiers and civilians of Fort Benning some ideas about where to go and what to do for a vacation.

Hodges said that more than 50 booths were set up this year.

Other attractions at the fair included, a modeling show from The Crate and vacation giveaways from major airlines.

The following is a list of winners and their prizes: Capt. Rangers dedicate demo area

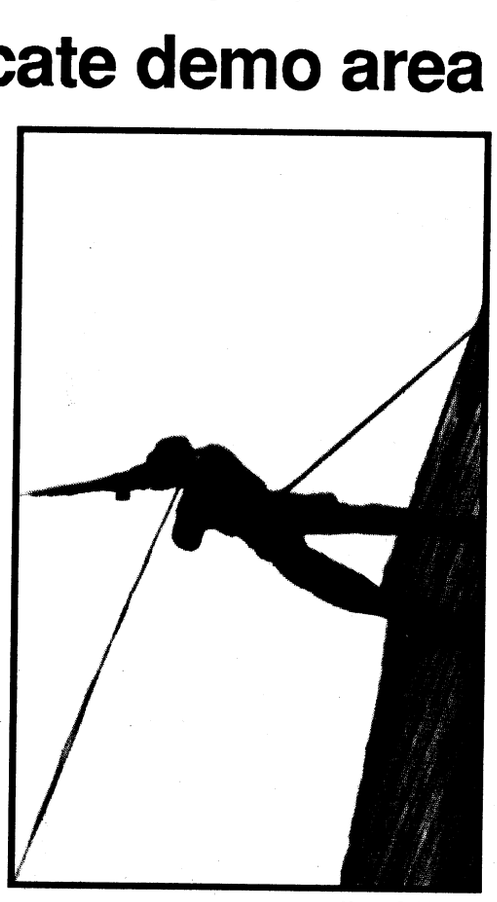
By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Friends, family and fellow rangers gathered Friday for the dedication of Hurley Hill, the Rangers in Action demonstration area named in honor of a fallen ranger.

Sgt. Maj. Patrick L. Hurley, who served for more than a year as first sergeant of Company C, 3rd Ranger Battalion here from 1985 to 1987, was killed Feb. 21, 1991, while returning from a Special Forces mission during Operation Desert Storm.



"We are here today to honor a man who was a ranger in every sense of the word," said guest speaker Col. Jerry Boykin, commander, 1st Special Forces Operational Detachment.

"He was a hardworking, competent, capable, enthusiastic young man with a lot of initiative," said Boykin, who worked with Hurley over a 13-year period. "He was a man who I could count on. In a very short period of time, he became my finest soldier."

"He saw a lot of combat," said Boykin. "He served in Desert One in Iraq and he fought in Urgent Fury in Grenada, during Just Cause in Panama and in Desert Storm. But he also saw combat in a lot of places his record will never reflect, in places that a lot of us have hardly heard of."

Hurley was a second-generation ranger; his father, Robert Hurley, was a member of the 2nd Ranger Battalion during World War II.

Hurley is survived by his parents, his wife, Patricia, daughters, Heather and Hollie, and son, Josh.

Alert! Housing's the latest scam

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

COMMENTARY

Barracks thieves are the lowest of the low life. Anyone who'd steal from his buddy has got to be despicable. They are loathsome, they are vile, they are odious.

Right below barracks thieves on the hit parade of scum are those who prey on GIs.

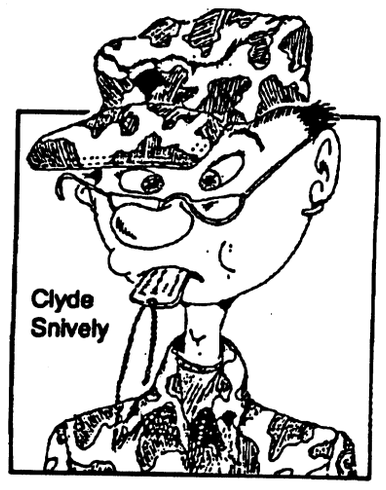
A soldier transfers to Fort Benning, rides onto post with his family, finds out the waiting list for on post housing is as long as his arm, so he goes to housing referral and gets the name of agents who handle rentals.

He finally tracks down an agent who has something in his price range. What he's found in this case is an old home that leaves a lot to be desired; but, the price is right, and hey, what damage can his kids do? After all, the place is already falling apart.

So he plunks down a first month deposit, plunks down another $200 for surety payment and moves in.

Six months later, quarters on post come open, so Staff Sgt. and Mrs. I.M. Strack clean up their rental and move out.

But not before the agent inspects and tells the Strack family that not only will he be keeping Strack's $200 surety payment, but that Strack owes an additional $300.



Strack, who prides himself on his ability to clean quarters and make his kids behave, can't believe his ears or his eyes when he sees the itemized bill.

A day later, another family is living in Strack's off-post house, leaving Strack to think, "There's no way $500 worth of repairs could have been made overnight," and "I wonder what the poor folks in there now will be hit up for when they move out."

Unfortunately, Strack and his family aren't the only such victims. In fact, some realty operations in have a reputation for such shenanigans.

Fortunately, the Armed Forces Disciplinary Control Board keeps track of these allegations. If proven, these agencies could be placed off limits.

What can we, as consumers, do to protect ourselves, especially considering how we're often more gullible than our civilian counterparts who live in a dog-eat-dog world every day of their lives?

I'd say we probably rank alongside senior citizens who buy roofing, siding and driveway topping from people who "just happen to be in the neighborhood" and who "just happen to have just enough left over to do your house."

Anyway, our first line of defense is common sense. If it sounds too good to be true, it probably is. You've heard that too often, but that doesn't make it any less true.

Our second line of defense is the Staff Judge Advocate's Office. Before you sign a legal document, take it to them. Let them read it.

Then take their advice.

And for those of you moving into a rental, make sure you get and KEEP the preinspection check list. Otherwise you could be paying $20 for a vent cover, $40 for a damaged wooden floor, $30 for two damaged screens, $37.50 (they thought they were a little obvious with such round numbers) for a screen door, $175 for touch up paint (they're painting the Sistine Chapel), $35 for yard damage (how does one damage a yard — a rainstorm might, but a person?) and $65 to clean an already-cleaned home, one that had occupants moving in the very next day, to mention just a few of the billings.

So now Strack can either pay willingly to ward off a collection agency or be taken to court and certainly have his credit record screwed up.

Life on the outside can be tough.

Don't make it tougher than it need be.

Why? Because women deserve it

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

I'm only going to say this once, so men, listen up.

Quit whining. Yes, it's Women's History Month. No, there's no Men's History Month.

Deal with it.

If you examine the millions of tons of history books produced by Western civilization over its thousands of years of existence, you will notice two things.

The vast, overwhelming majority of them were written by men of European descent. A similar proportion were written about men of European descent.

In essence, then, we have been reading, learning and teaching what is essentially men's history throughout the development of our civilization.

And yet, I have a suspicion that there were women around during the rise and fall of the Roman empire, throughout the age of feudalism, the Renaissance, exploration, colonization and industrialization.

We know very little of what these hypothetical women might have been doing, however, with the exception of your occasional virgin queen or semi-mythical flag-sewing seamstress.

Yes, I exaggerate. But consider the purpose of Black History Month — to highlight the history and accomplishments of a significant group of people, who historically have not been given much voice.

So it is with most "minority" groups — somehow our culture has until lately not paid them much attention, except incidentally. I have a problem (on mathematical grounds) with the idea of women as a minority, but we have problems similar to minority groups.

There are various words for the condition we have shared with other groups — disenfranchised, subjugated, powerless. Chattel. Property. You get the message.

We have made strides, in this country, toward a more equitable state of affairs. We can vote, own property, work in the profession of our choice, decide whether and whom to marry and whether to have children.

In some parts of the world, women are still constrained by law and custom in their mode of dress, their political freedom and their self-determination. They are still chattel.

You can bet that these parts of the world don't celebrate Women's History Month.

Women's history is important, not just to recognize the contributions women have made to the arts and sciences, government and humanitarianism, but also to remind ourselves of where we came from.

Someone once said that if we don't understand history, we are doomed to repeat it. Please, make an effort to understand women's history, because there's a lot of it that we don't want to live through again.

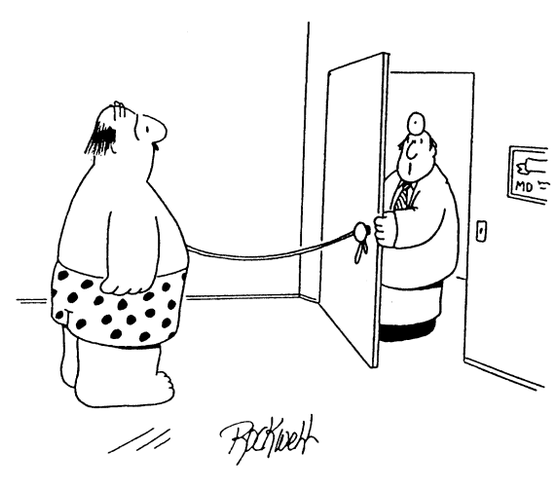
LETTER

Reader is thankful for assistance during husband's absence

I have had a nice experience that I didn't want to go unnoticed.

There are active duty service members at Fort Benning who have been very helpful in supporting spouses left behind by husbands who have been deployed to Somalia.

In this case, my husband's paycheck got messed up. An allotment continued to be deducted even though we had tried to stop it, causing me to not to be able to make some necessary payments.



A sergeant from the 63rd Combat Support Equipment, 36th Engineer Group, escorted me to First Union Bank at Fort Benning; and, believe it or not, the bank's personnel did not turn down my power of attorney.

The ladies were friendly and very patient. They found their way through a bunch of old and new account statements and helped me to get access to the money.

It was very nice of the ladies at First Union (to assist me), and I didn't want this to go unnoticed since I have had different experiences at another bank with my power of attorney when I needed help.

But, maybe I should have taken a sergeant with me then.

Planning keeps infantry combat-ready

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Mention the word infantry and people will most likely conjure up images of tough soldiers ready for combat with a variety of death-dealing weaponry.

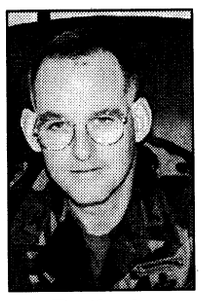
Many people, however, don't realize all of the behind-the-scenes paperwork and planning that helps make the U.S. infantry the well-trained, combat-ready force that it is.

Much of that paperwork and planning is done right here on Fort Benning by the Office of Infantry Proponency, located in Infantry Hall, Building 4.

Col. Richard Rutledge, OIP director, said that the OIP serves as a staff to Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White in his role as chief of infantry.

"The OIP keeps the chief of infantry up to date on the infantry force and recommends policy changes, if needed, that are in keeping with the overall U.S. Army policy," said Rutledge.

To accomplish its mission, the OIP is divided into two divisions — Personnel Proponency and Force Integration.



The Personnel Proponency Division deals with personnel policy. It recommends and monitors policy on the eight personnel life-cycle management functions for the infantry enlisted and commissioned forces. It also briefs the functional review of the infantry for the deputy chief of staff of personnel at the Pentagon every two years.

"Basically the functional review is a report on the health of the infantry branch," said Rutledge. "We want everything to work smoothly and we want to ensure that infantry standards are being applied across the board. We want each and every infantryman to meet the standards set by the chief of infantry."

The Force Integration Division of the OIP monitors other proponent actions in other organizations of the Infantry School that deal with infantry developments, such as the Directorate of Training, the Directorate of Combat Developments and the Dismounted Warfighting Battle Lab. The OIP ensures that the various infantry proponent actions work together in an integrated effort to keep things in balance while selling the infantry perspective.

The Force Integration Division also produces a quarterly infantry update for the chief of infantry that goes out to all infantry general officers. The division also maintains a computer data base that shows the location, strength, structure and readiness of all U.S. infantry units worldwide.

In addition, the Force Integration Division produces a briefing every two years to the vice chief of staff of the Army on all major infantry issues including the personnel issues for the functional review, doctrine, training, leadership, organization, materiel and the individual soldier.

Rutledge

"These briefings give the chief of infantry the chance to directly tell the Army leadership what the infantry needs," Rutledge said. "For example, the last briefing, which was in December, gave us the chance to focus on our concern that there is not enough dismounted infantry for the Army's mechanized Bradley units to complete all of their required missions. As a result, the vice chief of staff decided to place special emphasis on this issue."

Recently OIP's role expanded when it inherited the Organization Branch of the Infantry School's Directorate of Combat Developments. The functions of the Organization Branch include infantry organization, force design and force structure.

The organization branch manages some 75 different tables of organization and equipment for all of the various types of infantry units. It also has developed more than 1,000 basis of issue plans that reflect the infantry's need for new equipment items to accomplish its missions. These items run the gamut from Bradley Fighting Vehicles to improved laser range finders, to high frequency radios, to immersion heaters.

Rutledge added that the OIP's focus is on the infantry worldwide, not just Fort Benning.

"OIP has functioned differently in the past," he said. "The OIP had a much more internal focus, related mostly to Fort Benning. We are now better balanced as the proponency office for infantry worldwide. It is vitally important that we adequately monitor the infantry for the commanding general and provide him with insight and recommendations; and, of course, it is just as important that we ensure that Fort Benning maintains its high standards as the home of the infantry because the health of Fort Benning is an indicator of the health of the entire infantry force."

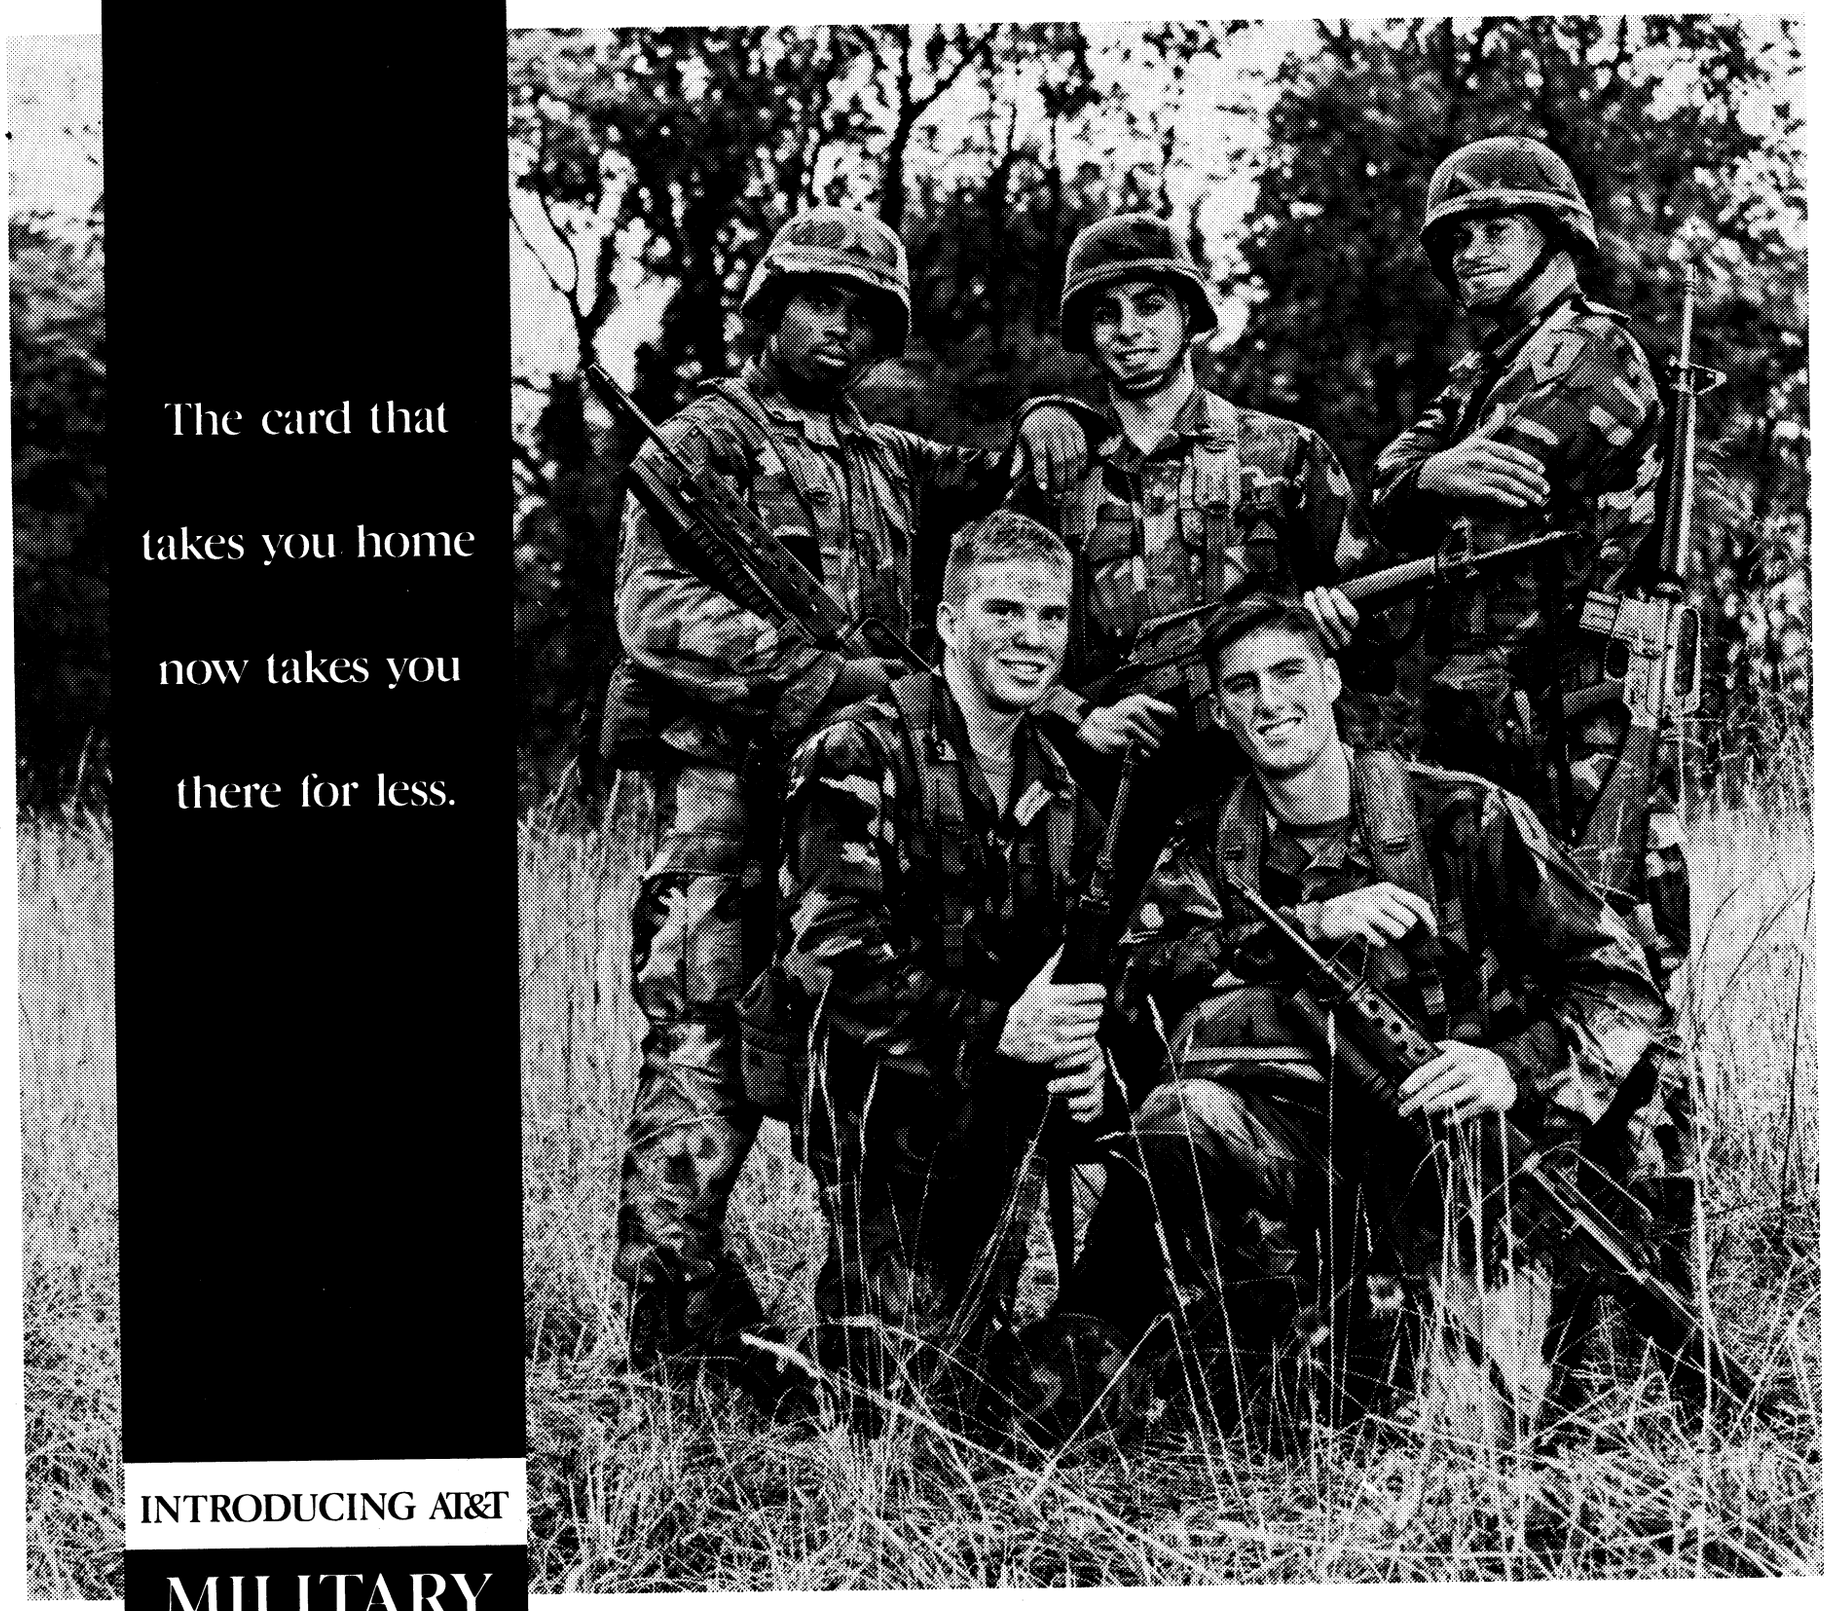
Harris Poll indicates confidence in military up

TRADOC News Service



Nobody does it better, according to a Harris Poll released March 1. The poll showed that the public's confidence in military leadership is the highest in 27 years — and no other major institution, profession, or interest group even comes close. The military's approval rating of 57 percent is more than double that of the next highest contender, the Supreme Court, which has an approval rating of 26.

The poll surveyed 1,255 adults between Jan. 22 and 26. The last time the military received so high a vote of confidence was in 1966, when 61 percent of Americans expressed great confidence in the military. The Vietnam War was probably most responsible for the sharp reduction of confidence in the years that followed: The approval rate bottomed out in 1976, when only 23 percent of Americans had high confidence in the military. The percentages of those who had confidence in the military were generally in the 20s during the latter part of the 1970s; they rose to the 30s in the 1980s. between 1989 and 1993, the approval rate made a steady climb upward, jumping 7 percentage points in the last year alone.

Harris pollsters say the large increase in confidence came from the military's successes in Desert Storm in the Middle East and Restore Hope in Somalia. The performance of the military following Hurricane Andrew also probably contributed to the upsurge in public approval.

Approval rates of other institutions and groups in the survey were as follows: colleges and universities, TV news, and the White House, all 23 percent; medicine, 22 percent; the press and the executive branch of the federal government, 15 percent; and Congress, 12 percent.

CDS meets child-care challenge

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Soldiers who are also parents have a dual challenge. They need to be available for whatever the Army needs them to do, and they want to know that their children are well cared for during duty hours.

As child-care requirements for military members include everything from early-morning physical training hours to deployment, the task of caring for these children can be a major undertaking.

Fortunately, help is available for both parents and caregivers through Child Development Services on post.

According to CDS coordinator Jennifer Williams, two forms of child care are offered:

• Child Development Centers are located throughout Fort Benning and provide full day care. Also available is a latch-key program for before- and after-school care. These centers are administered by the Army.

Tot Town, a center for drop-in and hourly care, and part-day preschool at Patch Preschool are privately administered.

Not all services are available at all centers.

• Certified Family Child Care Homes are quarters-based child care provided by an adult family member occupying government quarters. Some certified caregivers provide extended care on evenings and weekends.

These programs are open to all active duty and retired military personnel, as well as civil service employees at Fort Benning. Priorities for child care are as follows:

• Sole parent service member
• Dual military couples
• Brother or sister of child currently enrolled
• Active duty military personnel
• Civil service employees

All persons providing more than 10 hours of home child care weekly are required to be certified by CDS.

Home caregiver Mary Rush, who lives in Custer Terrace, has been a caregiver for two years. "I work very closely with the people at CDS," said Rush.

Rush plans monthly schedules of activities for both her full-day and after-school children, she said. "We go to story time at the Sayers Memorial Library almost every week," she said, "and we do arts and crafts and learning projects every day." Rush also coordinates outdoor play time and periodic field trips for the children in her care, she said.

Rush has done advanced training in child care through CDS, she said, and keeps files of developmentally appropriate songs, stories and activities for children of different ages. "I plan different things for my little ones during the day and the older children after school," she said, adding that there are some activities all the children can take part in and learn from.

Williams said CDS will help caregivers become certified both for center-based and home-based care. The Army provides three levels of skill training and offers various programs for advanced training, said Williams. All training is available to caregivers free of charge through CDS.

"We stress child development," said Williams. "We want to offer child care that not only meets the needs of the parents, but challenges the child to develop and provides opportunities for learning."

Williams said 90 percent of the soldiers on Fort Benning who use the centers pay $195 per month for full-time care.

"For about $46 a week," she said, "they're getting up to 60 hours of child care, two meals and a snack every day, planned developmental activities, and the supervision of a trained caregiver. It's hard to find that for the price anywhere off post."

Home-based caregivers also provide meals and snacks, said Williams. "They are reimbursed for meals that meet our nutritional guidelines," she said, "and a nutrition technician monitors the menus and food preparation in the homes."

Williams said the homes are also monitored for health, safety and quality of service and are frequently contacted by CDS outreach workers.

Williams said that while home-based care cost is a matter of agreement between the caregiver and the parent, center-based costs are based on a sliding scale and remain nearly constant throughout the services.

"If your family income doesn't change," Williams said, "you could move from here to another post and have your child-care costs remain basically the same."

"Any parents wishing to register a child for either home- or center-based care must first apply at the Central Registration Office," said Williams, "where they will be given all the forms they need to fill out. Central Registration also keeps the official waiting list and can tell parents where vacancies are available."

29th Inf. goes to the net

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The 1993 volleyball season is under way at various sites around post. Here is a wrap up of matches held at Harmony Church Field House Monday night between units of the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment.

Company A., 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt. (Aces) vs. Company C., 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt. (Cougars)

The Aces swept the best of three games away from the Cougars 15-10, and 15-8.

Nahlong Pewpong set up the Aces attack with numerous sets going to teammate Kurt Wagner and Leon Davis.

The Cougars were able to stay close with kills by Keith Martin and Rene Yaberra, but the Aces proved to be too much for the Cougars in the end.

Co. D., 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt. (Dogs) vs. Co. E., 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt. (Headbangers)

The Headbangers had to go the distance against the Dogs losing the first game 16-15, then pounding out 15-4 and 15-9 wins to take the match, two games to three.

In the first game, Luis Marria of the Headbangers scored the first seven points of the game on a dynamite power serve that the Dogs couldn't handle.

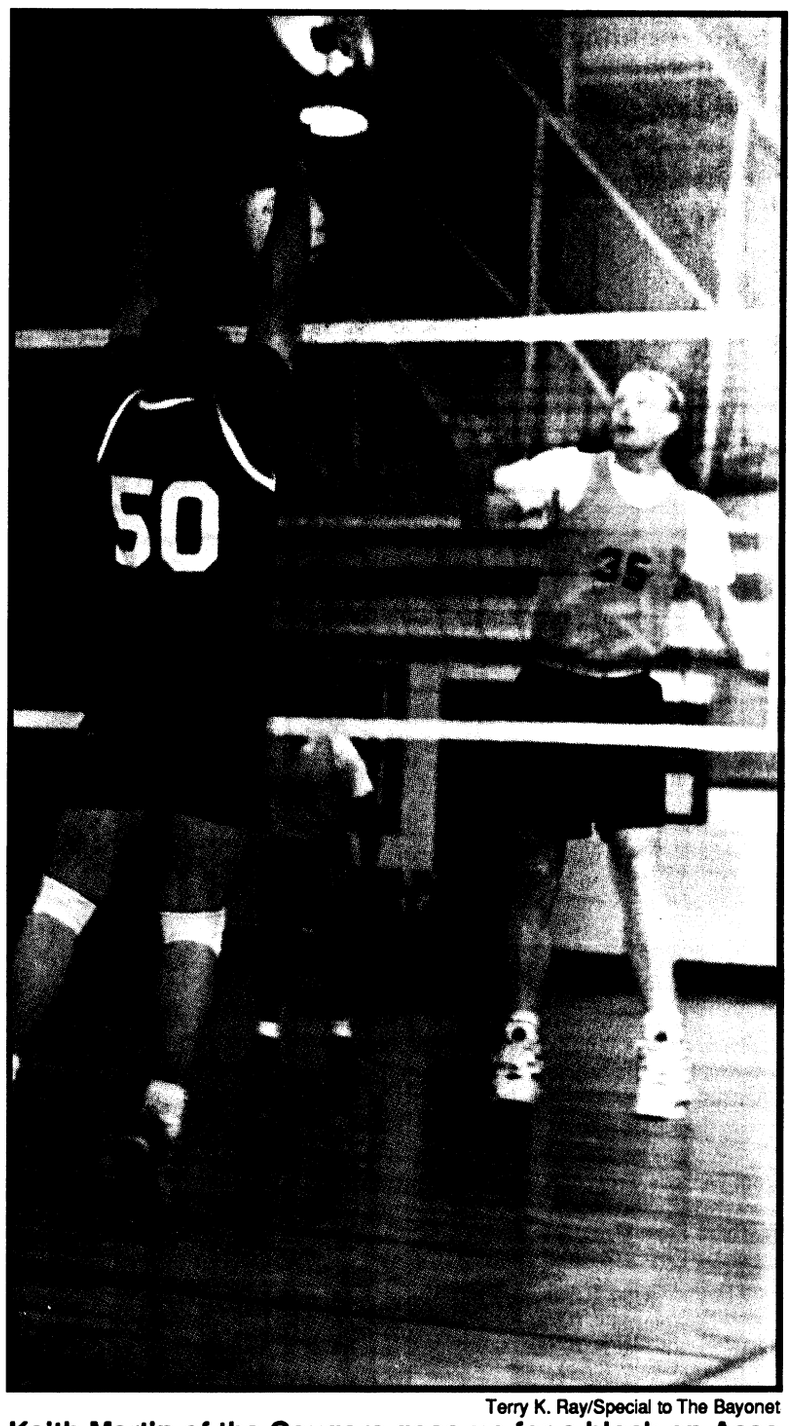
The score stayed close with neither team able to pull away by more than a few points. With the game tied at 14-14, the Headbangers got to game point at 15-14, then watched the Dogs tie the game, then win it on the next serve.

In the second game, the Headbangers roared out to a 6-0 lead and never looked back closing out the game at 15-4 with Larry Williams doing the damage with his serve.



The tiebreaker went to the Headbangers 15-9, with Darin Bettencourt running off six straight serves after the game was tied at 9-9.

Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt. (Headhunters) vs. Bradley Instructor Company (Instructors)

In the final match of the night, the Headhunters handed the Instructors their heads with two straight losses 15-7 and 15-3.

Southern Californian beach bomber Damon Dicus slammed home virtually every set that came his way and Teresa Harrelson hit five straight serves to let school out on the Instructors in game one.

Game two belonged to Jonathan Clark of the Headhunters who hit 11 straight serves to go up on the Instructors 11-0. Dicus then closed out the match with a monster jump serve for the final points of the match and a 15-3 win.

White bass on the move toward Chattahoochee

By Kevin L. McIver
USAIC Public Affairs Office

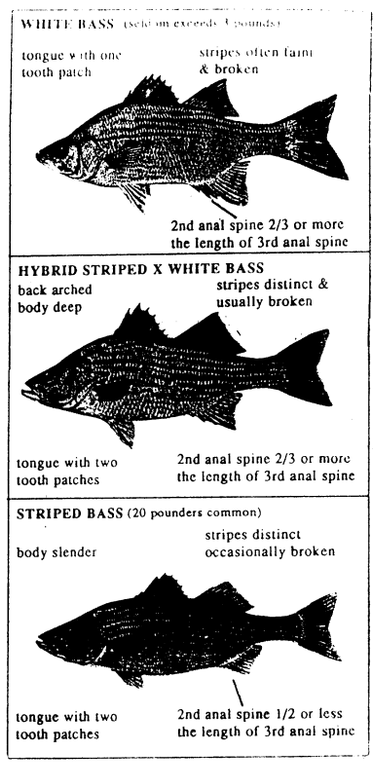
If you want hard strikes and fast and continuous action, now is the time for fishing as the white bass move out of the deep water on their spawning run.

White bass, commonly referred to as "stripes," are moving to their spawning grounds along the Chattahoochee River. Reports from the field indicate the spawn has begun and Fort Benning anglers should be hitting the local "beaches" before it ends.

Triggered by warm weather and a rise in water temperature, the spawn will be at its peak when the temperature reaches 58 to 64 degrees.

The female white bass will search for a gravel or rock strewn bottom in six to seven feet of water to deposit her eggs. They are then fertilized by the male. Numbering between 25,000 and 1 million eggs, they usually will hatch in two to three days.

Once hatched, the odds are one in 25,000 that they will survive and their total life expectancy is only three to four years.



Enough with biology class, let's get to the heart of the matter. You can go to just about any location along the Chattahoochee and catch a mess of stripes.

Within the last few days, many Benning anglers have caught their limit of 15 bass, only two of which may be longer than 22 inches.

Just a note, if you do pull in a lunkerhead measuring more than 22 inches, what you've probably caught is a striped bass, and not a white, since they generally only reach about 17 inches in length. Ensure you know your fish before you put it on a stringer.

Whites are being taken with a number of different lures. Among popular choices are spinner baits, lead-head jigs, plastic grubs and minnow imitations. And, of course, the old standbys such as live minnows and crickets will pull in their fair share.

Since baitfish, particularly gizzard shad, form the main part of the white bass's diet, your lure selection should match. If you choose any of the above lures in a white/silver or green/chartreuse color scheme, you stand a good chance of catching some.

COMMENTARY

Also important in lure selection is size. Ensure you don't use a large lure since a white bass has a small mouth and only grows to a maximum size of about 6 pounds, with the average being 1/2 to 2 pounds.

Typically a one-eighth to one-fourth ounce jig or spinner bait, or a three-inch plastic grub is preferred among both anglers and white bass. Of course, the latter is the one you have to satisfy the most.

A few days ago, I was casting a four-inch green grub with virtually no success. A guy was fishing about 10 feet away and was tearing up the stripes. When I asked him what he was using, he said a chartreuse jig and an ultralight rod, and he had caught 10 in about 30 minutes.

Anyway, if you haven't started fishing for stripes, dust off your rod, clean out your tackle box, watch an episode of "Fishing with Roland Martin" and head to the river. The action is well worth the effort. See you at the fishing hole.

Plano wants old boxes

Plano Molding Company

Plano Molding Company, which makes tackleboxes, is looking for old ones.

Since Plano pioneered the first plastic tacklebox in 1952, the company has introduced more than 100 different models.

"Only problem is we didn't keep many models, " said Peter Henning, chief executive officer of Plano.

So, Plano wants the best existing example of all its plastic tackleboxes from 1952 through 1984. "We have them since 1984," Henning said. "But some earlier models are going to be tough to find."

It's worth $100 to the angler who has the best box of any given model, plus $100 to the Sport Fishing Institute in the name of the publication where the angler read about the contest.

Each angler who qualifies with a box that Plano needs will get a brand new two-tray Plano tacklebox for his or her trouble.

Here are the rules:

1. No metal boxes (Plano has made only plastic boxes since the beginning).

2. Two color photo prints, one showing the tacklebox open and one showing the box closed.

3. A letter with the following information: The angler's name (printed), mailing address (street, not post office box), home and work telephone number, the name of the publication where the angler read about the contest, and the approximate date the angler got the tacklebox.

4. Mail the photos to: Plano Tacklebox Search, 365 East North Street, Leland, Ill., 60531-0206. Deadline is Aug. 1.

"Our search for the oldest Plano tacklebox during our 40th anniversary was such a success, I know the public will help us this year in completing our collection of old boxes," Henning said.

"Plano has been making plastic fishing tackleboxes since 1952, and each year we have introduced new and innovative models in the marketplace," he said. "We are very proud of our history and we hope our angling friends will help us in our search for some of the older models."

Plano will display the tacklebox collection at its headquarters. Each box will have a brass plate identifying the original owner.

Minister, ex-Nazi shares the word

By Jacqueline Feagin
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Protestant Women of the Chapel had a morning of fellowship March 4 with Hansi Ministry Inc. The theme for the day was "Peace in the Wilderness."

Maria Anne Hirschmann, who is known as "Hansi," was a former Nazi who became a Christian in Western Germany. From there, she came to the United States where she pledged to support American soldiers because they were the first to show her kindness after World War II.

Hirschmann is the author of several books. Her work includes "Hansi, the Girl who Left the Swastika" and "I am but a Child in Christ."

She has received the Daughters of the American Revolution's Americanism Medal, the Distinguished Service Citation from the International Christian Endeavor Society and a Gold Medal from the Sons of the American Revolution.

Betty Pershing, Hirschmann's traveling and ministry partner is a specialist on the Holy Land. She is president of Hansi Ministries Inc.

Together Hirschmann and Pershing tried to give PWOC a better understanding of the Bible. "To understand the Bible, we must think Hebrew," Hirschmann said. "Hebrews take the details out of the big picture; Westerners try to piece the details to make the big picture."

Jacqueline Feagin

Pershing told the group that following the Lord when what he says make sense is not obedience. It is when you obey when it does not make sense that one is a true believer in the Lord, she said.

"Trust the Lord, obey the Lord and praise the Lord," she said. "These are the makings of a true believer."

Janie Hodges, PWOC treasurer, led the group in song.

PWOC meets every Thursday at 9:30 a.m. in Building 2521. Free child care is provided. Everyone is invited.

Religious Education offers master's degree

The program consists of 10 courses, three semester hours each. Classes will meet once a week and is sponsored at Department of Army-level chief of chaplains.

The course will be offered throughout the Army in the United States and overseas. This will enable a student to start the course here and continue at the next duty station.

This course is not limited to military personnel. Civilians and Department of Defense employees are welcomed and encouraged to participate.

The program is offered through Loyola University in New Orleans, La., and members of all denominations can attend.

The course has been approved by DANTES and the Veterans Administration.

Chaplain reflects on suffering in Somalia

By Dale Forrester
43rd Engineer Battalion

REFLECTIONS

I am not quite sure why they call it an Italian village. I have been told that when the Italians colonized Somalia, the confusion that resulted from the clash of two cultures produced these temporary settlements outside the village walls. I guess one can call it a slum — a slum outside a village of mud, sticks, straw and dirt-floor huts.

Every town in Somalia has an Italian village. Bardera, the town I visited, has one. It may not be the biggest or the worst, but it is big and bad.

First, a sweet, putrid smell hit my nose and then I saw the mounds; scores and scores of stone covered mounds. They were the shallow graves of the victims of famine, civil war and a culture that values a camel more than a woman or child. Some of the graves were freshly dug because new victims arrive daily. Not as many as a few weeks ago and definitely not as many as a few months ago, but still they come.

Because many remote villages are still not receiving food and bandits are still stealing what food is available, people are still making the miles-long treks to Italian villages where there is hope.

The Italian village was swarming with women and children — thousands of them, seemingly all begging for food, water, clothes or anything to separate them from those in the stone covered mounds. Women held out the edges of time-worn rags in silent entreaty for a piece of cloth to cover their nakedness. Children begged for ball point pens since school was now in session.

While there, I visited the orphanage in the village. I met Abdul Mohammed. Abdul is about 14 or 15, no one knows for sure. Birthdays are not a big event when living until tomorrow takes up almost all of your time.

Abdul had walked for days to get to the village. When he arrived, he could not remember the last time he had eaten a meal. He was about 5 feet tall and weighed 50 pounds. You could almost see his spine through his stomach. He was so weak he could not stand. When I met him three days later, the Marines had fed him and he could stand and walk if only with faltering steps. Abdul is alive; he has food and he has hope.

At the orphanage there was a young girl. I do not know her name. She stood alone without clothing. She could have been 13 or 14. Her face was expressionless as she watched the strangers bring food and gifts to the women and children. Her hands did not stretch out to the good things the Americans had brought. I had a camera, but I could not photograph her misery; her pain was too private. I could only see it with my heart and weep. She had no hope, no dreams. She faced a future of mutilation at puberty and then serving as a beast of burden as one of her husband's wives.

The Italian village is also filled with chubby-cheeked children who have been eating Unimix for several weeks. They come running, laughing and smiling to the strangers in camouflage and kevlar. One little boy took my hand and walked by my side everywhere I went. Women are cooking and cleaning. The few men sit, talk and council. Quickly life returns to normal.

The Marines have been beating swords into plowshares. They are building a playground in the Italian village. Two anti-aircraft gun platforms have been turned into merry-go-rounds. The sound of gunfire is replaced with squeals of joy.

Bardera's Italian village is Somalia. It is a paradox of hope and despair. A mixture of good and evil. Humanity at its best and at its worst. The village says we can try, we can help. Our help will not help everyone; our trying will fall short. Our work is not perfect, but we can make a difference. And that is enough for the present.

PRIMUS

PRIMUS IS CHANGING

On February 1, 1993, the Columbus PRIMUS Clinic became the PRIMUS Family Practice Clinic. As of this date, the clinic will be open to non-active duty military beneficiaries registered in the Army's Gateway To Care Program and enrolled to receive their primary health care at PRIMUS. As a Family Practice Clinic, PRIMUS will expand its services and offer its enrolled members:

- Comprehensive family practice medicine, including routine physicals, treatment of a wider range of acute and chronic conditions, and extensive laboratory and radiology testing.
- Guidance for all healthcare treatment, including diagnostic testing, speciality referrals, and follow-up care.
- Both scheduled appointments and walk-in visits.
- Telephone consultation with qualified healthcare personnel to determine whether and when to seek medical care.

To enroll as a member of the PRIMUS Family Practice, active duty family members and retirees and their families should attend one of the Army's Gateway To Care briefings or contact the MACH Health Care Finder at 544-1447/1591. Enrolled members can receive more information on our Family Practice services by calling the clinic at 561-7066.

CRIME WATCH

Military Police Activity

The following entries were taken from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from March 2 to 8.

Such entries may be incomplete and are not the adjudication of the guilt or innocence of any person.

• This week's hot topic concerns trespassing on the Follow Me Golf Course at Fort Benning. The golf course is off limits to all personnel except authorized golfers.

The reason for this is twofold. First, the golf course grass is expensive to maintain and easily damaged. Second, there is a greater probability of being seriously injured by a golf ball.

The golf course's close proximity to the fitness trail and the Bouton Heights housing area makes it an inviting place to run, walk or bicycle. However, these activities are extremely dangerous on a golf course, especially for children.

There are several walking trails in the wood lines adjacent to the course. When using one of these trails, be aware of your location and don't wander onto the golf course. You may be charged with trespassing.

•A sergeant first class was charged with excessive speed, fleeing and eluding, driving under the influence of alcohol and other traffic-related offenses. He was driving his car at speeds of more than 35 mph above the posted speed limit and attempted to elude the Military Police when a traffic stop was initiated. He was administered a breathalyzer with a result of .13.

•A family member reported that persons unknown removed all four hubcaps from her car while it was parked adjacent to her quarters.

• A civilian was charged with larceny of government property after he was observed placing a locked wooden box in a truck. Further investigation revealed the box contained a unit's television and videocassette recorder.

• A sergeant was charged with assault after he was observed having an altercation with his wife in the Military Police Station parking lot.

• A private was charged by civil authorities with disorderly conduct after he became involved in a verbal altercation with a model at a local lingerie modeling club.

• A family member reported that persons unknown entered their garage and removed a power drill and jigsaw.

• A specialist and her husband were charged with simple assault after they were involved in a domestic dispute. They were struggling over a drinking glass, which shattered resulting in the specialist receiving lacerations to her hand, which required five sutures.

•This week's bobby prize is awarded to the family member who drove onto Fort Benning knowing that she had been barred from the installation because of her involvement in a previous incident.

She drove to her sponsor's quarters in an attempt to pick up her child.

After getting no response from the quarters, she drove to the Information Center and called the MPs for assistance.

The assistance she received was a charge of criminal trespassing and an escort to post boundaries where she was released on her own recognizance.

Other activities included 18 traffic accidents and six reports of shoplifting at facilities on post.

There were eight cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, 11 cases of larceny of private property and two cases of larceny of government property.

Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best — Give Crime Arrest."

Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5223 or the "Crime in Progress" line at 545-2222.

Include fiber in diet

Martin Army Community Hospital

Fiber is the indigestible part of plants, and it plays a crucial role in our diet.

Dietary fiber has many other advantages. It may help prevent colon cancer. Fiber can also help you practice "girth control."

High fiber foods are bulky and are dramatically lower in calories than foods high in fat.

Fibrous foods fill you up before you get filled out; fiber-depleted foods like fudge, ice cream, cookies, and gravy fill you out, not up.

Fiber is also thought to protect against heart disease. Because fiber promotes rapid passage of food and waste through your intestines, less time is available for the absorption of cholesterol.

In addition, soluble fiber including pectin (found in apples, citrus fruits, carrots and other root vegetables) binds some of the fat and cholesterol you've eaten.

Oat bran (found in oatmeal) and legumes (lima, navy or kidney beans) also contain soluble fibers that exert a protective effect on the heart health.

High-fiber foods include complex, unrefined, carbohydrates: whole wheat and whole-grain cereals like oatmeal, shredded wheat, bran cereals, unprocessed bran and brown rice.

Popcorn (especially air-popped, or at least "lite" varieties) is a good fiber-rich snack.

At least five servings of fresh fruits and fresh vegetables, raw or lightly steamed, are recommended as well. Dried fruits such as prunes or raisins are also good sources of fiber and nutrients.

Legumes are not only high in fiber, they can also be used as tasteful, nourishing and economical meat substitutes.

The protective action of fiber-rich foods is a result of the presence of fiber per se, as well as the fact that these foods tend to be loaded with vitamins and minerals. So it's important to eat a variety of fruits, vegetables, whole grains, and legumes to get everything fiber-rich foods have to offer.

Simply adding bran to a high-fat, high-sugar diet is not good enough.

The recommended intake level of fiber is 35 grams per day; the average American diet contains about 12. Most of us do well to boost our fiber intake up to 20 to 25 grams per day.

Fiber is but one aspect of the theme of National Nutrition Month: "Eat Right America!"

15-year retirement to begin for military

Department of Defense

WASHINGTON — Secretary of Defense Les Aspin has directed the military services to begin early retirement programs for selected active duty members with more than 15 but fewer than 20 years of service.

This program is part of the president's defense conversion initiative and is designed to help service members affected by the force reduction transition to civilian life, according to officials.

Aspin approved the use of the early retirement program to help avoid involuntary separations during the drawdown of the armed forces. The program will help the services continue to accomplish the drawdown primarily through voluntary means as well as help the Department of Defense achieve its two main goals during the drawdown — maintaining readiness and treating members fairly.

The early retirement program is not an entitlement. The Congress provided this authority in Section 4403 of the fiscal year 1993 Defense Authorization Act. The authority expires Oct. 1, 1995.

The secretaries of the military departments will prescribe regulations and policies regarding eligibility for this program. The criteria may include such factors as grade, years of service and skill. Eligible members nearest to 20 years of service generally will be offered the program first.

Members approved for early retirement will receive the same benefits as individuals with 20 or more years of service. However, retirement pay will be reduced as shown in the table.

Benning to honor drill sgt.

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Staff Sgt. Rory L. Malloy will be honored as the Infantry Training Brigade's Drill Sergeant of the Year Thursday at 3:30 p.m. at the Sand Hill NCO Club.

Command Sgt. Maj. William H. Acebes, U.S. Army Infantry Center command sergeant major, will be the keynote speaker.

Malloy will represent Fort Benning in the Training and Doctrine Command competition held in April, to select the top drill sergeant in the Army.

The 27-year-old sergeant was born in Campbellesburg, Ind., and is a graduate of Campbellesburg High School.

The eight-year veteran has served with the 3rd Battalion, 325th Infantry Regiment, 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N.C., rotating with that battalion to Vicenza, Italy, in 1986; and the 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Training Brigade, as a drill sergeant.

Malloy was selected competitively from a field of nine other drill sergeants.

He and his wife, Deborah, have two children, Rory Andrew and Danielle Renee.

The award was originated at the request of Richard A. Leandri, a Florida businessman. Leandri is a friend and business associate of retired Col. Donald C. Shuffstall, for whom the award was previously named, and whose military career spanned 35 years and three conflicts.

The award honors Shuffstall's distinguished military career and those drill sergeants who today epitomize the same high standards of service.

A reception will be held after the ceremony.

Rangers mount rescue ops

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Ranger cadre members from the 5th Ranger Training Battalion at Camp Frank D. Merrill in Dahlonega put their tracking, survival and rescue skills to the test in the aftermath of Saturday's blizzard.

According to Maj. Mike Bushman, executive officer at Camp Merrill, ranger two-man teams located and rescued about 16 people between Monday and Thursday.

"The most life-threatening situation we came across was a 69-year-old World War II veteran who was traveling alone," said Bushman. "He had some frostbite when we found him and was diagnosed with hypothermia."

Bushman said the man was rescued by ranger instructors Sgt. 1st Class Tommy Wilburn and Staff Sgt. Arthur Blakesley. "He was huddled up in his sleeping bag, hurting pretty bad, when he was found," said Bushman. "He said he never had liked rangers before, but he did now."

Bushman said the rangers had been alerted to possible stranded hikers by local people who monitor them.

"The hikers usually check in before they start, so someone can kind of look out for them," he said. "We started checking on them Monday, when the snow was about waist-deep. We sent out teams to check the shelters along the trails, where the hikers usually spend the night."

Bushman said that while some hikers said they didn't need help, most "were glad to say, 'get me out of here!'"

"We had six Boy Scouts," he said, "who started out Saturday thinking they could tough it out. But their parents got worried that they were short on food, so we sent out a medical evacuation helicopter to find them. We located them Wednesday night, fed them, and extracted them Thursday morning. They were all tired and hungry, but healthy."

Other post-snow operations, Bushman said, included clearing a road that was blocked by fallen trees.

"This was a road we and the civilians use," said Bushman, "so we sent out about 80 rangers to get it cleared. Right after the snow, it looked like a nuclear war had happened here, but the road is open now."

"This was kind of like a field exercise for us," said Bushman. "We're just glad we could help when we were needed."

Victory Focus soldiers complete MSE training

By Thomas Pape
Fort Stewart Public Affairs Office

Soldiers from the 3rd Brigade finished scheduled training on Mobile Subscriber Equipment during the 24th Infantry Division's command post exercise Feb. 3 to 11.

During the final exercise, the division's ability to use the new system for command and control was given a final evaluation by the 24th Infantry Division's commanding general, Maj. Gen. Paul E. Blackwell.

The new equipment allows radio contact between mobile telephone users, that is closely related to a cellular telephone. While cellular telephones can be listened in on by outsiders, the MSE allows users to electronically patch calls through a digital "node," or switchboard, and messages are digitally secure.

Soldiers were required to qualify on the newest radio-telephone equipment, called Mobile Subscriber Radiotelephone Terminal, by actually using the equipment on a daily basis during the CPX.

The new computerized MSE system replaces the microwave communications systems that the Army has been using. The system enables soldiers to discuss battle plans over a 15-kilometer or nine-mile area of operations without fear of having the communiques intercepted by the enemy.

"Overall, the division did exceptionally well and we're fortunate on two aspects," said Maj. Willes Lee, deputy operations officer, 24th Infantry Division.

"One is, probably the most trained soldier we have on the MSE system is the commanding general. Number two, the commanding general has given explicit guidance on the use of MSE. There is absolutely no question where it lies in our priorities."

MSE is the overall term used for the new Army communications equipment. Within this, soldiers use the MSRT in their vehicles, and a system called Digital Nonsecure Voice Telephone in tents and stationary buildings.

The eight-day division CPX gave soldiers time to train on the MSE, while practicing soldier skills.

The CPX was designed to improve user capabilities, and to continue to practice with the system and get better, said Lee.

"The other issue that we have to consider, on a daily basis, is every soldier. If our soldiers rotate somewhere else, they may be using MSE, and the new soldiers coming in have to be trained," said Lee.

"We (the division) did extremely well, based on the comments heard from the commanding general, the GTE people, and the Communications Electronic Command people from Fort Monmouth, N.J.," said Capt. Karl Heinema assistant operations officer, 24th Signal Battalion.

"Hands down, the program was successful for three reasons — appropriate emphasis from the commanding general; an incredible amount of effort on the part of the signal battalion; and commanders and soldiers at all levels, going about the serious work of soldiering, as they always do," said Lee.

324th keeps 3rd Bde. rolling

By Susan Dutton
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

The 324th Forward Support Battalion, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division helps the soldiers of the brigade combat team complete its mission.

The battalion has done that for the brigade during its recent field training exercise, Victory Focus, which began in late February and is scheduled to end Saturday.

Company A provides food, purifies water, fuels the force and keeps the soldiers supplied with basic items. The maintenance company, Co. B, is comprised of mechanics capable of servicing all of the brigade's combat equipment and is responsible for the receipt, storage and distribution of repair parts. The medical company, Co. C, houses the field hospital and provides the landing zone for medical evacuation helicopters.

Commanded by Lt. Col. Robert T. Dail, the battalion works hard to live up to its nickname, "Dependables," by proving that it can be depended on. His policy is best described by simply stating, "support first, ask questions later."

"Any mission that the brigade accomplishes begins and ends in the support battalion, " he said.

The Dependables' first test started during the brigade's deployment to the field site. Awaiting the arrival of wheel and track vehicles along the convoy route was Co. A's 24-point refuel site. The refuel on the move site, or ROM, is a mobile "gas station" that the soldiers of the petroleum, oil, and lubricants platoon operate from 5,000 gallon fuel tankers.

One of the challenges for these logistic warriors is the movement of the brigade support area. The BSA houses the 324th along with the maneuver units' support platoon field trains. A total of 750 soldiers and 325 vehicles make up the BSA. Since deployment, the BSA has moved three times. Those movements were conducted at night, under blackout conditions and under radio silence. Even while moving, the battalion must continue to support the brigade combat team.

The medics of Co. C conducted a medical evacuation exercise with the medical platoons from the maneuver battalions simulating the mass casualties of war. The 498th Medical Evacuation Company provided support.

"I am very proud of the soldiers of the battalion. They have performed beyond expectations," said Dail.

Former principal, director team up to produce video

Connie Bridges/Special to The Bayonet

Bill Johns, a director, playwright and actor, shows students how to operate a camcorder to make a video.

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

A video featuring a guided tour of William H. Wilbur School led by the "ghost of its namesake" was viewed by the student body Tuesday beginning at 9:15 a.m., according to Principal Gail Wilson.

Coordinator of this project is artist-in-residence Bill Johns, who with his core group of fourth- and fifth-grade students, came up with the creative way of doing a history about this Fort Benning school that is closing at the end of the academic year. Another core group of second- and third-graders are also putting together an activity center of old photos and memorabilia in the auditorium.

Johns said that the students came up with all of the creative ideas and did the research for photos and history material. He showed them how to put it all together.

The resident artist has been working with Wilbur students since Feb. 3. His core groups include students recommended by teachers and Johns, and students themselves who wrote letters indicating a strong interest in and creative ideas for the project.

Johns is an Atlanta/Seattle director, playwright and actor. He has taught theater in the Georgia Governor's Honors Program and studied mime with Marcel Marceau. Also, he has been a public school teacher and his acting credits include live theater, as well as a recent episode of "America's Most Wanted," the Jeff Bridges' movie "American Heart," and a new Faye Dunaway and Timothy Hutton movie called "The Temp."

His residency involved teaching students what it is like to be on both sides of the camera.

One part of the video includes an interview with a former Wilbur principal for 22 years, Rupert Nunnally.

Nunnally said that the school opened in 1950 because the Custer Terrace, Upatoi and Battle Park housing areas were being built. Brig. Gen. Marcus Bell was put in charge of the project. At first, there was only what is now classrooms one through eight. Then the gym and classrooms nine through 15 were added on.

After Nunnally came to the school in 1961, the upper kindergarten rooms were constructed.

Originally called Custer Terrace School, the school name was changed to honor Lt. William H. Wilbur Jr. after he was killed in the Korean conflict with another member of his West Point class, Lt. Frank R. Loyd, for whom another Fort Benning school is named.

Nunnally said to his knowledge, Wilbur had not been stationed at Fort Benning, but this former principal did know Morris McBride (namesake for another post school) when his child was in the Fort Benning schools.

Wilbur closed once for the 1965-66 school year to house Vietnam orphans. Nunnally said that his students were sent to other schools for that year.

A native of Tennessee with prior military service, Nunnally had taught high school in Florida and middle school at Don C. Faith School on post before the superintendent called and asked him to be principal at Wilbur.

He told the students that he was scared to death when he showed up the first day because he wasn't used to being with little children.

Parents loved him though. He still has a story from The Bayonet in which parents wrote a thank-you to him when he retired 10 years ago, thanking him for being a "prince-a-pal."

Showing the children an old student handbook and drawing of the original building, Nunnally talked about discipline while he was principal. He said they were allowed to spank, but he drew the line with corporal punishment for little girls. Also, if parents asked him not to spank, he said, "Fine. I'll just call you to come pick them up."

Nunnally also believed in assemblies every two weeks when one of the classes would perform, and they would have sing-alongs.

He has fond memories of many birthday cupcakes on his desk, a requirement for bringing birthday treats to school.

There were 530 students in the school up until last year. Now numbers are down because of the renovation going on in Custer Terrace.

Why did he retire?, one student asked him. "Because I was old," he said.

Upon leaving in 1983, Nunnally remembers being sad for "another chapter of his life was over."

Though some of the teachers he knew still work at Wilbur, he hasn't come to visit often. When some principals retire, they keep coming back, but he doesn't think that is right. "So I stayed away," he said.

Faith History Club captures win

Fort Benning Schools

Fort Benning's Faith Middle School History Club took first place in junior group media in the district competition of Georgia History Day at LaGrange College March 6. Laura Bailey, Melissa Lewis, David Bradley, Nicole Bransford and Christiane Gouveia produced a 10-minute videotape, titled "The U.S. Army Signal Corps Motion Picture Service: Seeing It Through the Eye of the Camera."

As part of their research, the eighth-graders interviewed retired Lt. Col. Andrew T. Burt who was a member of the motion picture service during World War II. Burt filmed combat, made training films and even filmed the surrender of the Germans at the end of World War II.

The students were also able to visit Fort Gordon, Ga., home of the Signal Corps. Faith School's history team will represent the region in the State History Day competition at Agnes Scott College in Atlanta, Ga., May 1.

Explorers negotiate for hostages

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

"Get out of my yard or I'll kill him!"

Luther Mason took his son, Joel Mason, hostage at gunpoint at Building 1796, March 10 at approximately 6:50 p.m.

Luther Mason had become crazed with fury after his ex-wife, Carol, began dating the lawyer that she had hired to sue Mason for child support. His sanity snapped, and his jealousy became violent.

"Please calm down sir, everything will be just fine; there is no reason to be hostile," said the initial police officer on the site.

The hostage situation that lasted over a two-hour span of negotiating was a realistic mock-up training course for the Law Enforcement Explorers. Luther Mason was played by Maj. Terry Driskill, executive officer for the Reserve Component Office. Carol Mason was Driskill's real wife, Carol.

"The Law Enforcement Explorers are for any boys or girls from the ages of 14 to 21 who are interested in the police field," said Angel R. Jones, captain for the team.

Driskill organized the Explorers, a division of the Boy Scouts of America, to Fort Benning in November.

When he was stationed at Fort Lee, Va., Driskill was the assistant for an Explorer post and said they decided to establish one here because he enjoyed it and there was no other program like it, he said.

The hostage enactment was the follow-up action after a class the Explorers were given by a Federal Bureau of Investigation agent on responding to those situations, said Driskill, also a former FBI agent.

"It's hard for anyone to jump negotiation) because it's easy to mess up and make simple mistakes," said Sgt. Raymond E. Lavarenz of the 988th Military Police Company, who acted as a grader for the enactment.

"It helps me because we (as MPs) don't deal with hostage situations on a regular basis, so I learn from their mistakes," said Laverenz.

"It's a good start for them (the Explorers) because it builds a lot of teamwork and gives them confidence in themselves to be able to accomplish a mission that they have been tasked to do," Laverenz said.

A lot of what the Explorers do, said Driskill, is community support. They are working toward 100 hours of community service.

The Explorers plan to pitch in to help the Special Olympics and have already helped McGruff the Crime Dog to fingerprint children in Operation Child Find, said Jones.

Future activities planned include accident investigation, crime scene investigation and search and seizure procedures, said Jones.

Also in planning is a ride-along program with the Military Police Activity, rappelling, handling a weapon, and a trip to Forsyth and Dahlonega, Ga., said Jones.

Driskill said he hopes to expand the group's membership, so for more information, call him at 545-6469 or 685-2072.

Anjelica Huston reveals 'Family Pictures'

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

Hailing from a rather unusual family background herself, Academy Award-winner Anjelica Huston is about to depict that of another clan.

Angelica Huston

What: "Family Pictures"
When: Sunday and Monday, 9 p.m. on ABC

The daughter of the late and extremely colorful filmmaker John Huston — who directed her to her Oscar in 1985's "Prizzi's Honor," the actress makes a rare television appearance in "Family Pictures," Sunday and Monday's new ABC drama based on the best-selling novel by Sue ("The Good Mother") Miller. She stars as Lainey, the wife of a psychiatrist (Sam Neill, of "Kane & Abel," "One Against the Wind") and the mother of six children ... one of whom, is autistic.

The story traces all of their lives from the 1950s through the 1970s, as the era of the Vietnam War places added pressures on the relationships among them, already strained by the excessive attention and dedication paid to Randall by Lainey. The other offspring are portrayed by Kyra ("Miss Rose White," "Singles") Sedgwick, Dermot ("Point of No Return," "Young Guns") Mulroney, Gemma Barry, Tara Charendoff and Torri Higginson; the saga was adapted for TV by co-producer Jennifer Miller, who also wrote last January's ABC miniseries "Keeping Secrets."

"One of the reasons I was so enthusiastic about doing this," says Huston, "was the opportunity to do so many things that I hadn't done before. I think mostly, I'm thought of as a bit of an exotic, or at least I find myself in those sorts of roles. I longed to do something that was closer to normalcy than Morticia Addams (in the 1991 movie version of 'The Addams Family') or my assorted roster of witches. This was a story about a family, how it deals with a problem, and the problems that ensue from that problem. There were a lot of very strong scenes in the script, and it was really inspiring and a challenge to do it. There was no day that went by that I didn't have a dramatic scene."

Huston concedes that the offer to do the project "came to me as a surprise. I hadn't planned to do a television movie, but this was simply the best thing that I'd read all (last) year. My work was cut out for me in a way that wouldn't be predictable to me as an actress, and where I could really go on a bit of an adventure with the material."

An Oscar nominee again for both "The Grifters" (1990) and "Enemies, a Love Story" (1989), Huston gave her last home-screen performance four years ago, as Clara in the acclaimed western epic "Lonesome Dove." She reasons, "There's an access to a general public through television that I don't think comes from film. I'm always rather puzzled by that separation for actors, when one hears, 'Why do you want to do television? Do you want to do movies?' To me, it's all acting, and acting is what I love to do. It doesn't really matter to me what the medium is, just as long as I can say what I need to say. If something touches me, I'm a bit of a slave to it, I guess."

Gen. Colin Powell suggests improvements for the military

By Sydni Redmond
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Gen. Colin Powell, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, is required to submit a report on the military's functions to Congress every three years. The purpose is to identify unnecessary duplication among the services and make suggestions for more efficient methods to accomplish the mission. On "Fort Benning Today," see the general's report to Congress and his suggestions for making the military better.

Also on "Fort Benning Today," learn what data is exchanged when the Army hosts a visit by the Russians to a chemical weapons storage, production and disposal site on Johnston Island. See what the 11-member Russian delegation learned as they watched the United States take chemical weapons from creation to destruction.

"Fort Benning Today" will also air special news announcements and highlight post events.

"Victory News," the news show of the 24th Infantry Division, and post movie previews will also be showing.

U. S. Army Infantry Center Television will air several health specials commemorating March as National Nutrition Month and highlight music and news from Soldiers Radio Satellite Network. Post events will be highlighted on the Fort Benning Community Bulletin Board.

If you are a subscriber to Fort Benning Cable, you can watch USAIC TV on Channel 3, 24 hours a day.

Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:26, 7:56, 8:26 and 8:56 on WLTZ TV-38.

For more information or to make suggestions, write or call the Broadcast Section of the Public Affairs Office, Infantry Hall, Room 601, 545-2201.

Georgia swings into spring

Georgia Dept. of Natural Resources

ATLANTA, Ga. — The Georgia State Parks have put together two seasonal golf incentives. The "Spring Swing Away" program is valid at Georgia's state park golf courses, and has special rates for day and overnight outings.

The first part of the program, the Four For Three incentive, lets a foursome play unlimited rounds of golf for the price of a threesome. Through May 28 any foursome that plays at the five courses Tuesday through Friday pays greens fees for only three people. In order to take advantage of the "Four For Three" package, participants must use the Spring Swing Away coupons available at state and local welcome centers and state parks or by calling (404) 656-3530.

For the golf enthusiasts who have a little more time to hone their skills, four of Georgia's state park golf courses have also put together low-priced overnight packages. These packages and rates, which vary at each course, include overnight accommodations, greens fees and other features. All players must present a Spring Swing Away coupon at registration. Each course has put together a package that reflects the amenities at its park:

• Wallace Adams Golf Course-Little Ocmulgee State Park — This 18-hole course is offering a special package through June 30. For $55 per person, per day (excluding tax and Georgia park pass), players receive a guest room at the park's lodge, continental breakfast, unlimited greens fees and cart rental and a free basket of range balls.

For details, contact the park at (912) 868-7474.

• Hard Labor Creek State Park — Available through May 27, the Hard Labor Creek golf package costs $39.95 per person, per day (excluding tax and Georgia park pass). It includes a two-bedroom cottage, unlimited greens fees and cart rental on the 18-hole course and a complimentary basket of range balls. This package is valid Monday through Thursday nights with play Tuesday through Friday through May 27, (except April 5 to 8), subject to availability.

For details, call (706) 557-3006.

• Georgia Veterans Memorial State Park — In cooperation with three local hotels in Cordele, this package, which ranges from $70 to $84 (plus tax) per twosome depending on the hotel, includes overnight accommodations, breakfast and greens fees on the 18-hole course. Packages are valid through Dec. 31, subject to availability.

For details, contact the golf course at (912) 276-2377.

• Brazell's Creek Golf Course, Gordonia-Alatamaha State Park — In cooperation with two local hotels, this golf getaway package includes overnight accommodations and greens fees on the nine-hole golf course for $64 (plus tax) per twosome. This offer is valid through Sept. 30, subject to availability.

For more information, call the golf course at (912) 557-6445.

Operated by the Georgia Department of Natural Resources, Georgia's state park golf courses offer a variety of challenging shots and scenery to appeal to all golf enthusiasts.

For general information about the parks, contact the Atlanta office at (404) 656-3530.

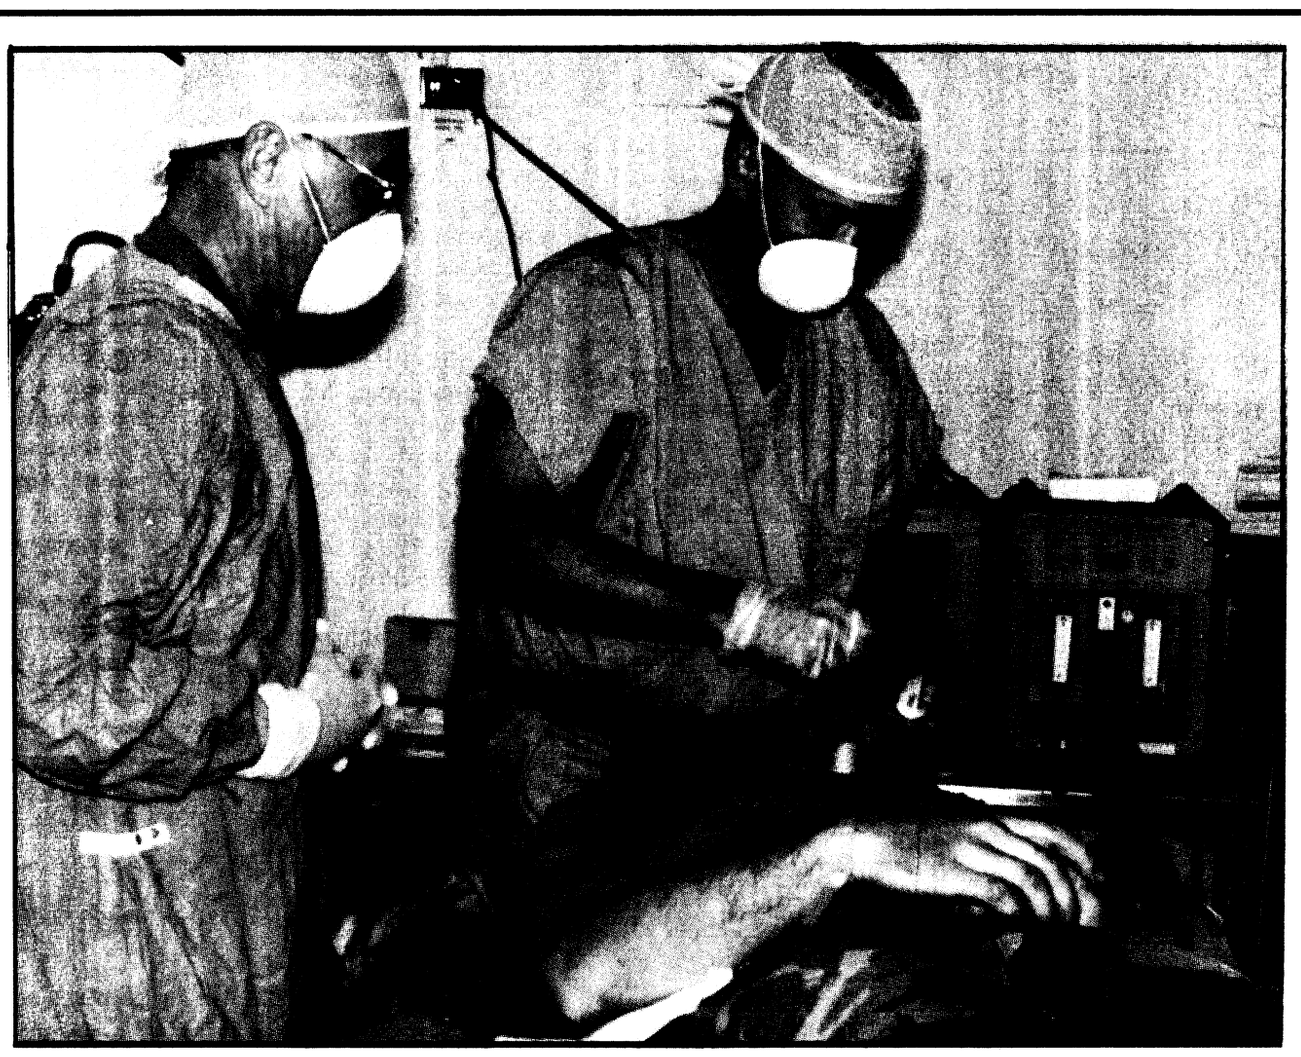
SOA changes commanders

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

The School of the Americas' change of command ceremony March 18 marked the beginning of a tour as commandant for one colonel and the end of a 30-year military career for the school's retiring commandant.

Alvarez



Col. Jose R. Feliciano passed the SOA colors to Col. Jose M. Alvarez Jr. during the Thursday morning ceremony held on the front steps of SOA Headquarters.

For Feliciano, the change of command also marked his retirement from active duty, following a career that started in the same building it ended, the newly renovated school headquarters and the former Infantry School, where Feliciano learned the lessons that saw him through tours in Korea, Vietnam and in numerous command positions at Fort Benning and elsewhere.

The ceremony also marked a return to the "Home of the Infantry" for Alvarez who was commissioned as an infantry officer in May 1970.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, commanding general for Fort Benning, presided over the ceremony.

AER campaign under way

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

After its third week, the 1993 Army Emergency Relief campaign at Fort Benning is at $58,507 in contributions, according to Sgt. lst Class Marmion Montgomery.

This is 32.5 percent of the $180,000 goal set for the drive slated to end May 15, he said.

"We're doing very well so far," Montgomery said. "Last year after three weeks we were only at $21,410. "We also have some soldiers still deployed and some on maneuvers, but we want to offer everyone the opportunity to give."

Soldiers are encouraged to see their unit AER project officers to give to this organization that offers emergency financial assistance in the form of no-interest loans and grants to active duty soldiers, dependents, retirees, widows and members of the U.S. National Guard and Reserve.

For more information, call Army Emergency Relief at 545-4043.

3rd Bde. readies for NTC in Calif.

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized), which recently completed field exercise "Victory Focus" at Fort Benning, is preparing to deploy to the National Training Center at Fort Irwin, Calif., April 23 to May 26.

More than 5,000 soldiers will travel to Fort Irwin for intensive desert training with the brigade.

Some 100 M2-A2 Bradley Fighting Vehicles, 38 M1-A2 Abrams tanks, self-propelled 155 millimeter howitzers and a fleet of combat support vehicles and aircraft will be issued at the training center or transported with the deploying units.

Joining the brigade are the 2nd Battalion, 22nd Infantry from Fort Drum, N.Y.; the 3rd Battalion, 11th Field Artillery from Fort Lewis, Wash.; Battery C, 15th Air Defense Artillery; and divisional support units from Fort Stewart, Ga.

According to a brigade operations officer, training rotations at the National Training Center are designed to test combat battalions and brigades during rigorous conditions closely simulating actual combat. Travel to and from the training center approximates requirements during an actual combat deployment. Inherent in this training is an increased awareness and emphasis on environmental protection and accident prevention.

Benning celebrates women's contributions

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning was host Tuesday to the world's most prominent women, from royalty to pioneers in sports and science.

The Women's History Month luncheon, sponsored by the Fort Benning Federal Women's Program Committee at the Main NCO Club, featured several presentations by members of the Fort Benning work force playing the roles of prominent women, past and present.

The program also included a prelude by the U.S. Army Infantry Center Army Band Combo and welcome remarks from Martha Cleveland, chairwoman of the Women's History Month subcommittee.

Other speakers included Col. Burnet R. Quick, chief of staff, and Winnie Torain, Federal Women's Program manager.

"We are here," said Quick, "to recognize the many contributions that women have made not only to our great country, but to beautiful downtown Fort Benning."

Quick noted that women make up 47 percent of the civilian workforce and 8 percent of the military workforce on Fort Benning.

"They play a vital role," he said, "in the smooth functioning of Fort Benning."

Quick then recognized a number of "great Americans and great women who've been active on Fort Benning, Georgia." He recited the names of directorate chiefs, managers and other women working in supervisory capacities across post.

Torain then introduced the role-players, each of whom gave a brief history of the character she portrayed.

Characters included historic and present-day figures in the fields of aviation, literature, politics, broadcasting, sports, science and medicine and the military.

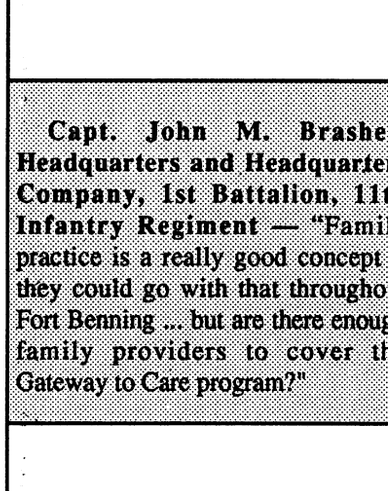
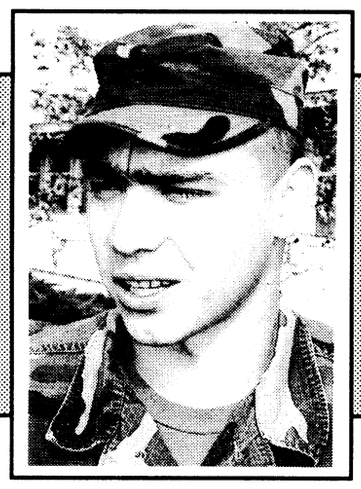
VARIOUS VOICES

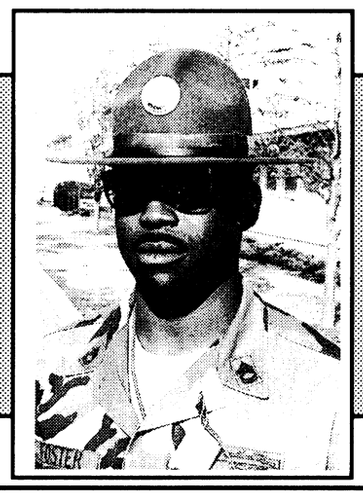


What can be done to improve the Gateway to Care Program?



Elmer J. Robbins, Directorate of Public Works — "I think they need more doctors. They should go back to the old system, like the retiree clinic . I had no problem there."

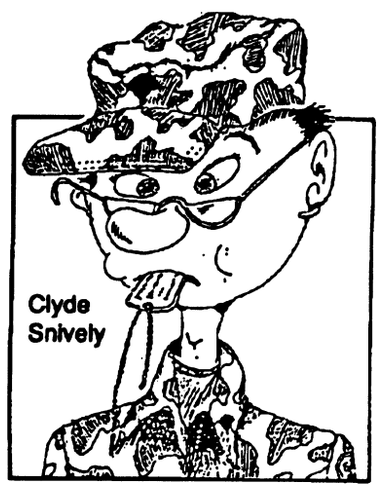
Capt. John M. Brasher, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "Family practice is a really good concept if they could go with that throughout Fort Benning ... but are there enough family providers to cover the Gateway to Care program?"



Staff Sgt. Carlos Rosario, 519th Personnel Services Center — "Appointments at the clinic are on a first-come, first-served basis, so people who are sick have to wait in line. The system really needs a lot of improvement. They should look into changing it."

Pvt. 1 Myron L Coppin, Adjutant General Replacement Battalion — "I don't think it needs any improvement. I don't use it, but it works pretty well for the family members."

Lucinda M. Robinson, Preventive Medicine — "It's a wonderful program, because it has really helped a lot of people that weren't getting the benefits before that they are getting now."



Sgt. 1st Class Leonard Foster, Company E, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment — "I think they should just let people go to the clinics and to the hospital for services. Waiting is everywhere, but I think you wait a little longer at the old PRIMUS clinic."

Some parents, children out of control

COMMENTARY

The world's gone nuts. I guess I knew that before, but didn't have much chance to think about it until last week when C.B., our assistant ma'am editor, sat me in a corner and told me I couldn't "go out to play," until my column was done.

That was last Friday, so while most of the rest of you troops were out having a good time on your training holiday, I was locked in Room 601 in Infantry Hall all by my lonesome trying to conjure up story ideas.

I resorted to reading police blotters and the local paper.

I learned the good folks downtown want to put uniformed police officers in all junior and senior high schools. Apparently students are coming to class armed with guns and knives, and punks who should be in school but got kicked out are also coming back, uninvited and raising havoc.

So now we got police in the schools.

Tied in with that was the suggestion to send these errant bullies through a form of basic training. Guess where, right here at Fort Benning.

I wouldn't mind being a drill sergeant for a day with those hoodlums (as long as William Riley was behind me to back me up).

We had gangs where I went to school. Kids used to carry knives, too. And there were fights after school, but not on school property.

Because if you got into a fight during school, some shop teacher or coach would slam dunk you, right there on the spot. They'd also have you grab your ankles while they practiced their forehand strokes by slamming a wooden paddle (with holes drilled into it to cut wind resistance) upside your rear end.

When they got through with you, your parents would be called; and, if they found you could sit, dad would work you over some more.

Nowadays if a teacher lays a hand on a student, the parents get called, only this time by the student; and, now instead of counseling little Billy, the parents are calling their lawyer and suing the teacher, the school, the school district and anyone else within sight.

These "caring" parents are probably the same ones we read about who leave toddlers home alone while they go off on vacation.

According to the military police blotters, it's happening right here at Fort Benning, too.

The cases we read are the ones reported to MPs. I shudder as I wonder how many undetected cases there are.

The detected ones are frequent enough and bad enough. We read about how the MPs go into these homes and find five-year-old Suzi, three-year-old Tommy and one-year-old Annette, and a dog and cat or two.

Naturally the house reeks from feces lying about the rooms.

Fortunately, at Fort Benning, we have concerned neighbors and a support system for dealing with these tragedies — the military police, social workers, chain of concern and chain of command to mention a few.

But you still have to wonder about the "why" of these incidents.

Why do teens and preteens need to join gangs? Why do they feel the need for going to school armed? Why do parents abandon their children?

Where the heck is this country going? What becomes of the United States of America when these people reach adulthood — assuming they live that long?

We might be needing an Army to defend our country from ourselves plus cadre to run boot camps for all teenagers.

It's scary when you think about it. I'm sorry I did.

Editor's note: In last week's column, Clyde Snively cited the case of a soldier who was allegedly "ripped off" by a real estate agent. The column generated a phone call from the Columbus Board of Realtors.

The caller said the column was unfair as it portrayed all real estate agents in the same bad light.

This, of course, was not the intent of the column, rather it was to remind soldiers that before they enter into an agreement — be it to lease rental property, buy a car, etc. — they would be well advised to have the Staff Judge Advocate's Office review the contract before they sign it.

Is your willpower up in smoke?

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

I admit it. I'm a wimp.

Don't get me wrong, I'm not wimpy in everything. After all, I'm a soldier in the U.S. Army, and I survive physical training under the direction of Sgt. 1st Class Barbara Ray every week.

But cigarettes have just about got me beat. Yes, I'm a smoker, and yes, I'm hooked. I'm naturally a sweet, sunny person — just ask my co-workers — but a few hours without a cigarette leave me with all the charm of a Sumo wrestler on a diet.

The latest studies I've read state that there are about a bazillion cancer-causing and otherwise nasty substances in your average cigarette. That is certainly reason enough to quit.

Need more? If you smoke, you're cheating yourself. All the money you — or I — spend on cigarettes could, over a lifetime, pay for a retirement home on a nice beach somewhere, instead of going (if you'll forgive the cliche) up in smoke. Of course, we smokers don't need to expect to live long enough to retire, do we?

Don't forget, too, that you're poisoning not only yourself, but everyone around you, when you light up. If you hang around with small children who resemble you, this is something you might want to consider.

The tobacco industry, of course, would tell you otherwise. "Secondhand smoke?" they ask innocently. "What's that?" They also like to call smoking a "custom," kind of like bobbing for apples at a Halloween party.

Thing is, I've never had trouble pulling my head out of a washtub full of floating apples when I really wanted to.

People do quit, of course. Our sportswriter, the mighty Terry K., quit smoking about six weeks ago. He had been puffing away for 20 years, but he decided to give it up when he found himself puffing on the basketball court after 10 minutes.

Mr. Terry's given me a lot of pointers, none of which include nicotine substitutes, acupuncture, hypnosis or magical tattoos. (But if these things work for you, carry on.)

"Keep busy," he said. "You probably won't be a lot of fun to be around for a few days, but it'll get easier. I work out in the gym to get rid of that stressed feeling, and I keep some gum around for the times when I really want a cigarette. The last two weeks have been a lot easier."

I've tried to quit several times, including once very lately, but the turkey never gets cold. Mr. Terry says, "You have to really want to quit. You can do it, if you want to bad enough."

I've got to do it. Ray's been studying the PT manuals, and I have a feeling I'm going to need every bit of oxygen I can get.

LETTER

Reader is concerned about gang activity on Fort Benning

I would like to relate to the readers a horrifying incident that happened on the street, right in front of my house recently.

I was outside with my young son and his friends when I heard a ruckus on the street. I turned to see six or more teen-agers chasing another one down the street. They proceeded to trip him and began kicking him, hard, about the body. I screamed and they broke off.

I was shocked and shaken. It was something like I had seen on television during the Los Angeles riots.

Yes, there were two races involved. I could not believe this was happening on a military post, such as Fort Benning.

The Military Police were called and a report was filed. Other teens in the area stated that the ones responsible for the assault were not even from our community.

My shock grew (perhaps, I'm naive) as I was told that Fort Benning is full of this type of gang (activity). It was not only prevalent, but one was "expected" to join — not only for popularity but protection.

The young man got away with bruises and scrapes, but he and his attackers make a sad statement for today's youth.

There was a popular song when I was a teen called "Teach Your Children." Parents, I beg you, teach your children the right way. Ask about their friends, ask where they're going and what they're doing. Get involved with them. They are our most precious natural resource. Our country's future relies on them.

MPs monitoring juvenile activities

Information gathered from the Columbus Police Department Gang Task Force, concerned citizens of Fort Benning and from examining the circumstances of criminal activity occurring on Fort Benning indicates that there are no gangs conducting criminal activity in a particular housing area on the installation.

The incident mentioned in the letter to the editor was a continuation of a fight that originated at the school the juveniles attended. All of the involved juveniles were from military families.

Two of the juveniles involved previously lived in post housing and recently moved off post with their sponsors. The others still reside in post housing.

The Military Police Activity completely agrees with the writer that parents should "teach their children." The more parents become involved with their children and with what they are doing in the community, the safer all communities will become.

The Fort Benning Military Police Activity is taking measures to reduce juvenile problems on the installation. The most noticeable will be canine patrols in the housing areas. Additionally, police patrols will increase interaction with juveniles to identify unauthorized juveniles on post to determine all juvenile activities and strict enforcement of Fort Benning curfew of 10 p.m. for all juveniles who have not reached their 18th birthday.

As always, we rely on the support of the community to provide us timely, accurate information on suspicious activities involving juveniles and others. With additional community involvement and neighborhood watch programs, all crimes on post can be reduced.

Drug mixture one dangerous aspect of abuse

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

The numbers are shocking. One person in 100 is addicted to cocaine. One out of every five people arrested for a crime is addicted to cocaine. Drugs are a problem in society that is hard to deal with.

These statistics came from a seminar on "Substance Abuse in the 90's," sponsored by the Civilian Counseling Services and Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Program, March 18, at the Youth Activities Center.

The instructors for the seminar were Yvonne Wilbanks from Civilian Counseling Services; Cliff Joiner from Turning Point Hospital, a private hospital in Moultrie, Ga., that specializes in treating people with addictive diseases; and Deena Johnson, President of Mothers Against Drunk Driving.

"One of the biggest problems today is marijuana," said Joiner. "We see a lot more marijuana use today than we've seen before. What I've seen in result is marijuana addicts who are violent ... I'm very suspicious that some marijuana being sold is laced with acid or PCP (phenyl cyclohexyl piperidine) ... that's very dangerous."

The seminar was targeted at Fort Benning supervisors, union stewards, Equal Employment Opportunity counselors, law enforcement personnel, nurses, parents and anyone who works with teenagers.

Some of the topics covered included substances of abuse, the role that Civilian Counseling Services plays, consequences of drinking and driving, teen-agers and substance abuse, intervention of supervisors on a problem and the effect of substance abuse on a family.

The object of the seminar was to provide an awareness of substance abuse issues, describe the impact that substance abuse has at work and on the community and the effect of substance abuse on teenagers.

For further information or if you need help with a problem, contact Yvonne Wilbanks in Building 324 at 545-2475 or 545-2742.

Hydrants shine on

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

The Fire Prevention and Protection Division has a project under way to place white and red reflectors in the streets in front of each of the post's fire hydrants to help firefighters locate them more quickly and easily.

"Locating hydrants can be a problem on foggy, dark or stormy nights," said Arthur Simmons, chief of the post Fire Department.

"This project gives us a quicker response," Simmons said. "It provides us with another important tool in our effort to give you the very best fire protection available anywhere within the Army," he said.

The hydrant locator project is part of a nationwide project that the post adopted at the suggestion of one of its firefighters, Simmons said.

The reflectors, placed next to hydrants in the lane of travel, reflect white light when headlights hit them, he said.

The reflectors provide a marker for the firefighters to help locate the hydrants quickly at night or during severe weather, but should not interfere with everyday traffic, Simmons said.

Some of the reflectors were placed displaying a red reflection, but this has been confusing to drivers, said Simmons.

As a result, the Fire Department is now in the process of turning the reflectors around to display the white side, Simmons said.

Simmons asks drivers to be alert for firefighters working in the streets to complete the project.

For more information, call the Fort Benning Fire Department at 544-1220 or 544-2935, or the Fire Prevention Branch at 545-2482.

Hospital to get new commander

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Martin Army Community Hospital will get a new commander during an 11 a.m. change of command ceremony today at the U.S. Army Medical Activity Parade Field near the hospital.

Col. Michael J. Kussman will succeed Col. Vernon C. Spaulding Jr.

Maj. Gen. Richard D. Cameron, commander, U.S. Army Health Services Command in Fort Sam Houston, Texas, is the scheduled speaker.

Kussman, 48, comes to the hospital from the Pentagon, where he served as director, Division of Quality Assurance, Office of the Secretary of Defense (Health Affairs).

Spaulding will remain assigned to the hospital pending assignment instructions from the Department of Army.

Kussman is from Troy, N.Y. He graduated from Boston University's six-year program in liberal arts and medicine in 1968 and completed his internship and first-year internal medicine residency at Boston's New England Deaconess Hospital.

He entered the Army in 1970 and first served as battalion surgeon with an armored battalion in the 7th Infantry Division in South Korea.

Afterward he was director of hospital clinics, Cutler Army Hospital, Fort Devens, Mass.

Kussman returned to Boston in 1972 to complete training in internal medicine and served at Boston's Joslin Clinic. He then practiced internal medicine and endocrinology in Pittsfield, Mass., before returning to active duty in 1979.

Kussman has since served in various medical assignments during his Army career.

Kussman is a graduate of the Army War College and an honor graduate of the Command and General Staff College.

His awards include the Legion of Merit and Meritorious Service Medal and he wears the Expert Field Medical Badge.

He is a fellow of the American College of Physicians and a member of various medical associations.

Kussman and his wife, Virginia, have two children.

Dental benefits to expand for family members

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

An expanded dental plan for family members of active duty soldiers is scheduled to take effect Thursday.

The new plan will continue to cover basic diagnostic, preventive, and restorative services such as exams, cleanings, sealants and fillings, according to information furnished by the Delta Dependents Dental Plan.

The plan is expanding to cover orthodontics (braces for family members under age 19), endodontics (root canals), periodontics (treatment of gum disease), prosthodontics (crowns, bridges and dentures), and oral surgery, according to Delta.

The improvements to the plan come at a much-needed time. "Because of manpower and budget reductions in the dental corps, the secretary of Defense sent a memorandum indicating we have to curtail our other than active duty dental care," says Maj. Thomas Murphy Jr., the executive officer at the U.S. Army Dental Activity.

"If we could continue to see all family members we would. But, because of force reductions we are no longer able to do that and still fulfill our primary mission, which is to maintain the combat readiness of our active duty soldiers," Murphy says.

All service members who have at least 24 months remaining in the service and who have eligible family members will be automatically enrolled in the plan through their service branch and the Defense Enrollment and Eligibility Reporting System as of April 1, according to Delta.

Sponsors currently enrolled in the plan will continue to be enrolled, regardless of their remaining time in service.

Those sponsors who are automatically enrolled should see the new premium deduction in their March leave and earnings statement, according to Delta.

Though the price of the plan has increased from $5.20 to $9.65 per month for one family member and from $10 to $19.30 per month for two or more family members, Murphy feels the plan is well worth the cost.

"The plan is definitely worth the money for what is being provided," Murphy said, "and it is head and shoulders above not having anything at all."

Soldiers who choose to disenroll have 120 days to do so. "But," says Murphy, "soldiers who are concerned about their family's dental health should not disenroll, because they will cut off care at the reduced rate. They could end up paying for care out of their pockets."

Families of soldiers who are ineligible for the plan because they have less than 24 months of service left will still be seen, but on a space-available, stand-by basis only, says Murphy.

Family members who are currently being treated at DENTAC will continue to receive care until that treatment plan is completed, says Murphy.

"The Delta insurance plan is just as good as what civilian companies are offering their employees. In some cases, it's better," Murphy says.

"Seeing a Delta dentist regularly for routine preventive care will help family members avoid more serious, costly problems in the future," he says.

"My wife used the plan when we were stationed in Maryland, and she loved it. She got to pick the doctor she wanted and didn't have to wait. She got the care she needed and it was very convenient," Murphy says.

Delta dentists will submit the claim to the Delta Dependents Dental Plan at no charge to the patient and will accept payment (except copayments) directly from Delta instead of collecting the entire amount up-front from the patient, according to Murphy.

More than 30 dentists in the Columbus area participate in the plan, Murphy says.

"Family members really need to use this program. It is a good program," he says.

Dependents Dental Plan

Expanded Benefits Highlights
- The new plan is effective April 1.
- The plan will continue to cover most diagnostic and preventive services such as checkups, x-rays and cleanings at 100 percent.
- The new plan now also partially covers many more dental services, from fillings and crowns to oral surgery and braces for dependents under age 19.
- Dependents Dental Plan will continue to have no deductibles.
- A new predetermination option offers you and your dentist a non-binding written estimate of the plan and patient copayments. Although not required, predetermination is recommended for more complex and expensive procedures.

Initial Automatic Enrollment
- All service members assigned to the U.S., Guam, Puerto Rico or the Virgin Islands who have 24 months remaining in the service and who have eligible dependents will be initially automatically enrolled in the expanded program.
- All sponsors currently enrolled in the plan will also be automatically enrolled, regardless of their remaining time in service.
- Automatically enrolled sponsors should see the new premium deduction ($9.65 for one dependent, $19.30 for two or more) in their March leave and earnings statement.
- Sponsors who have 24 months or more remaining in the service who were not automatically enrolled may enroll their dependents in the plan by completing DD Form 2494 at their military personnel office.
- Ongoing enrollment in the plan will continue on a voluntary basis.
- The minimum enrollment period is 24 months.

One-time Disenrollment Option
- Sponsors automatically enrolled will have 120 days (from April 1 through July 31) to disenroll and have their premiums refunded.
- This disenrollment option may be used only if the plan has not been used at any time after April 1.
- Any use of the plan, even to request a predetermination estimate, will constitute acceptance of enrollment.
- To disenroll, see your Personnel Administration Center and complete DD Form 2494. If this form is not available, the regular allotment form, DD Form 2558, may be used. Mark "other" in block 10, specify "DDP" and the number of family members and submit the completed form.

Engineers improving living areas

By Brian C. Sutton and David R. Greer
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Soldiers of the 36th Engineer Group have not only helped the famine-stricken Somalis during Operation Restore Hope — they are also helping themselves to a better standard of living.

Buildings 2613 and 2614, which house units from the 36th, are currently undergoing a renovation of the dayrooms. Also, offices are being converted into "quiet rooms," where soldiers can study or read away from recreation areas or their rooms, according to Staff Sgt. Charles Robinson, a member of the 533rd Transportation Company who is taking part in the project.

Robinson said the group of nearly 30 soldiers involved in the construction is comprised mostly of mechanics and bridge builders.

"Planning is done as we go along," said Robinson. "The soldiers living here tell us what they want and we start building."

"In an austere financial environment, using non-traditional labor to improve quality of life is a necessity," said Lt. Col. Spike Rupert, commander of the 13th Corps Support Battalion, 36th Engineer Group.

This type of renovation of the barracks areas, which was started nearly a month ago, falls in line with the Single Soldier Living Communities program that is being implemented here.

In this program, soldiers decide what is best for their living areas, instead of an outside agency. This way, according to program planners, barracks dwellers are able to better resolve their "household" needs and desires.

Soldiers of the 36th, for example, said they wanted privacy when using the phones in the dayroom. Result: the team of soldiers doing the renovation built phone booths along the wall.

"The telephone booths are going to be better than they were before the construction started," said Spc. Therron Hess of Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, 13th Corps Support Battalion. "Now we have a little more privacy."

The Directorate of Public Works is providing guidance on construction of self-help items, according to Robinson.

"Since we don't have our engineers here to help us, DPW has stepped in to assist," said Robinson.

Rupert said the construction should be completed in six months. The completed renovation should include nine dayrooms, three dining facilities and one battalion headquarters, provided enough funding is available.

Program makes civilian transition easier

Army Career and Alumni Program

Operation Transition is a Department of Defense program designed to assist soldiers, sailors, airmen, Marines, DoD civilians and spouses who are ending their defense service and entering the civilian job market. The Operation Transition program links employers with prospective employees from military installations worldwide.

The DoD has reacted to the current military, political and economic situation with significant force reductions and defense personnel are entering the civilian job market in record numbers. Because of that fact, and the commitment of the federal government to defense personnel and their families, the DoD implemented Operation Transition to speed up the process for those families affected by the Congressionally mandated force reductions.

Defense personnel are qualified to serve in the civilian labor force. Today's defense occupations are as diverse as they are numerous: for example, civil engineers and medical specialists, auditors and caseworkers, nuclear engineers and food service managers, mechanics and heavy equipment operators.

"Operation Transition is designed to be a win-win proposition," says Paula Davis, deputy director of Transition Support Services. "Employers using the program link up with a vast pool of highly motivated, well-trained, experienced, disciplined and reliable employees whose qualifications meet their needs.

"At the same time, Operation Transition helps departing military personnel by bringing their work experience and capabilities to the attention of companies and government agencies around the country. These individuals have served their country honorably, and now they're ready to go to work for American business."

To find out how it can work for you, call the Transition Assistance Office of the Army Career and Alumni Program at 545-4892 or come by Building 2617 in Soldiers' Plaza.

Commissary provides full-service shopping

Commissary

The commissary privilege for the men and women in the U. S. military ranks as the most valued non-pay compensation benefit of military service along with medical care, according to Commissary officials.

Commissaries provide an income benefit through savings on purchases of food and household items. They are open to all authorized patrons, including single and married service members, military retirees, members of the Reserve components, 100 percent disabled veterans and their families.

The Defense Commissary Agency has the mission to provide quality products at the lowest possible cost to their customers.

When shopping at the commissary, customers buy products at cost, plus a 5 percent surcharge, and pay no sales tax. Surveys show they average 25.8 percent savings when compared with commercial retail food stores. The agency's major goal is to provide the best in terms of a full range shopping service for all customers.

Package and carryout services at the commissary are provided for patron convenience.

The Value-Mart is stocked with cases and value-sized packages for customers who need to buy large quantities of frequently used products. The Produce Department can prepare fruit baskets and raw vegetable trays, if given a 24-hour notice. The Deli Department will prepare meat, cheese, or meat and cheese trays when ordered 24 hours before needed. Special cuts and special orders for meat can be obtained form the Meat Department when requests are coordinated with Meat Department personnel. The telephone numbers for these departments are: Produce — 544-2638; Deli — 544-3524; and Meat — 544-2705. If you have special grocery requests, contact the Grocery Department — 544-3965.

The hours of operation at the Commissary are: Tuesday and Thursday — 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.; Wednesday and Friday — 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.; Saturday — 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.; Sunday — 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., and Monday — Closed.

Life crushes Cruisers

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Columbus Fort Benning Rugby Football Club, the Cruise-matics, got the life pounded out of them Saturday afternoon at Stilwell Field by Life College, 49-6.

The Cruise-matics had its only lead at 3-0, early in the match on a penalty kick by Malcolm Frost. Life reclaimed the lead for good at 7-3 on a try by fullback Garrett Thompson and the extra points kick by inside center Brian Geraghty. Life would not stop there; moments later second row Bill Lazkowski rumbled into the end zone for his first try of the day and a 12-3 lead.

Geraghty upped the lead to 17-3 when he was able to put the ball down in the end zone for a try. Life winger Greg Shor finished off the first-half scoring with a try late in the half to push the Life lead to 22-3.

Frost brought the Cruise-matics to 22-6 at the start of the second half on his second penalty kick of the game. This would be the final points of the day for the Cruise-matics. The rest of the match belonged to Life.

Two second half tries by eight man John Murphy and single tries by flanker Rob Heavey, Geraghty, and Lazkowski put the Cruise-matics out for the count at 49-6.

"We always get a tough match from Life College," said Prop Ed Hartley who was knocked out of the match early in the second half with a separated shoulder.

The Cruise-matics next home game will be against Atlanta Rugby Football Club 2 p.m. April 10 at Stilwell Field.

Army wrestlers win

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The All-Army wrestling team went to Quantico, Virginia March 17 through 21 and came away with its fourth straight Armed Forces wrestling championship.

"The guys performed very well, we gave up four weight classes in Greco-Roman and two in freestyle and we probably should have won those," said All-Army wrestling coach Tony Thomas.

In Greco-Roman, Maynard Majaahid of the Navy took the 105.5-pound title with teammate Dustin Waugh slipping in at second and Agustin Latosquin of the U.S. Marine Corps taking third.

Robert Demeritt won the 114.5-pound class for the Navy, out-pointing Keith Idleburg of the Army. Pete Gomez of the Army finished third.

2/29 volleyball teams serve up the action

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, when not beating the brush in training, are taking their best shots at each other on the volleyball court.

Tuesday evening at Harmony Church Field House four teams hooked up for a best two out of three match up.

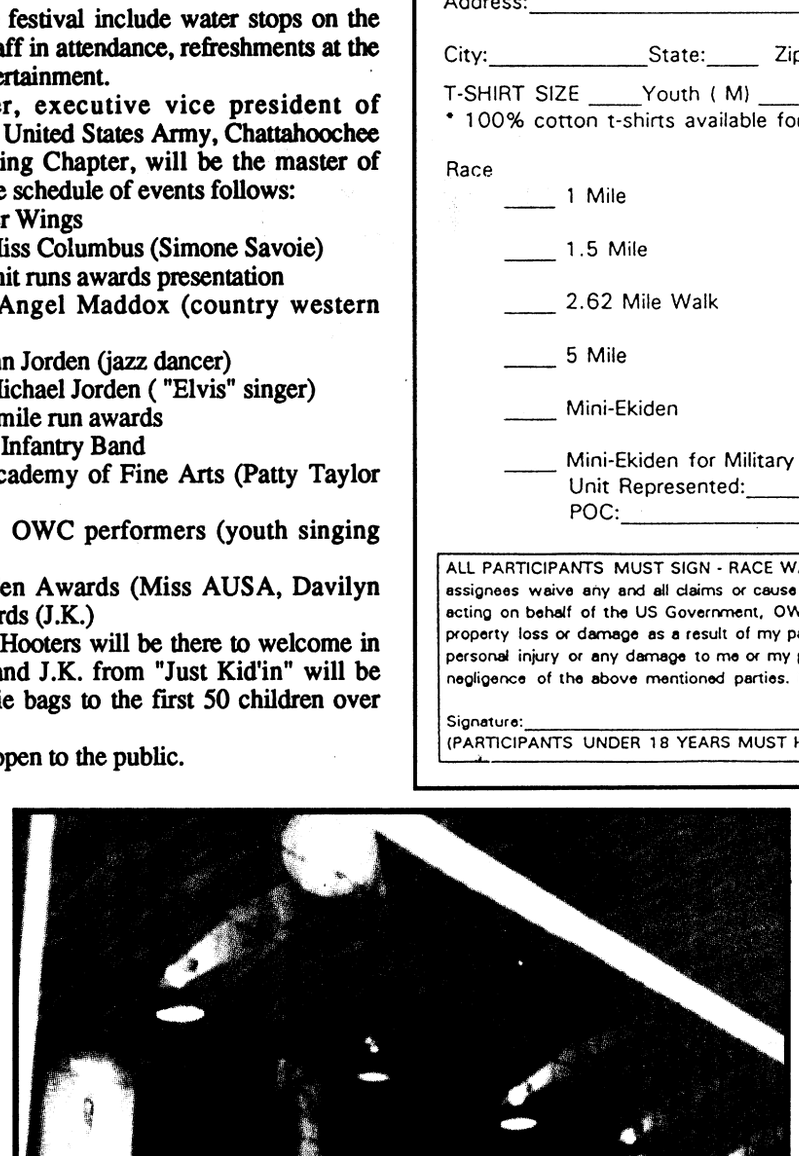
Company E., 2nd Bn., 29th Inf. Regt. (Barbarians) vs. Company A., 2nd Bn., 29th Inf. Regt. (Alpha Players)

Alpha Players Robert Horn, Michael Webb and Bobby Vega provided all the firepower that the Alpha Players would need to stave of the Barbarians in straight sets 15-4 and 15-12.

In the first game, Horn put the Alpha Players up early with a serve the Barbarians couldn't figure out. Webb and Vega returned serve and made nice sets for kills.

Game two saw the Barbarians open up leads of four and five points behind the offense of William Cole and Michael Harris, only to have the Alpha Players tie the game up at 7-7, and again at 11-11. Alpha player George Lay sealed the win with four straight service points after the Barbarians had taken a 12-11 lead.

Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Bn., 29th Inf., Regt. (The Hosse's) vs. Co., B., 2nd Bn., 29th Inf., Regt. (Six-Pack).



Team Six-Pack had their hands full in game one against The Hosse's pulling out a 16-14 win. Six-Pack opened up a 7-3 lead early in game one only to watch as The Hosse's fought back to tie the game at 7-7.

Calvin Babitt helped to open up a 14-10 lead with four straight points. The Hosse's tied the game at 14 all on the serving of Zane Garrett.

Joseph Hammond hogtied The Hosse's with two straight service points to end the game at 16-14.

Game two belonged to Tupou Peteia. He opened the game with 13 straight points off his serve.

The Hosse's couldn't handle the pressure from Peteia's serve and the play of his teammates at the net. With game point at 14, The Hosse's delayed the final outcome by scoring three points to avoid the shutout.

Jekyll Island center plans tennis championships

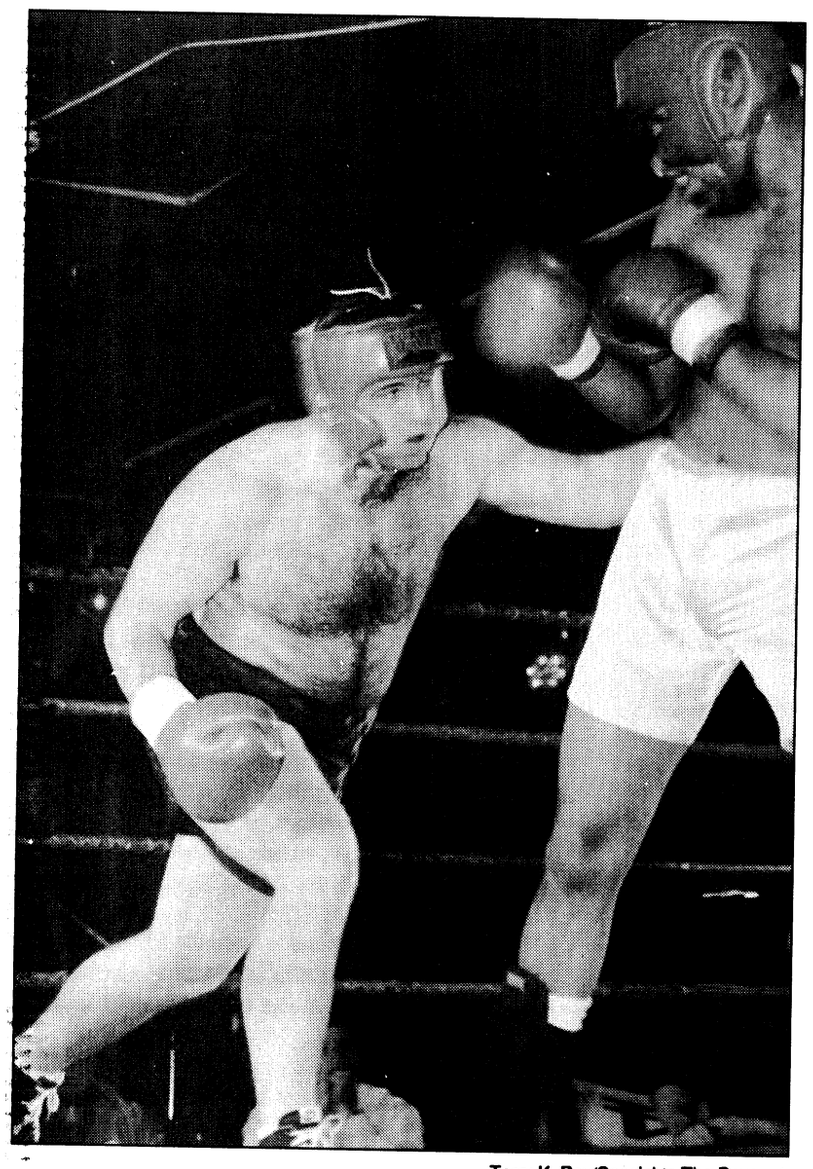
Jekyll Island Convention Bureau

The Jekyll Island Tennis Center on Capt. Wylly Road will host the Georgia State Open Tennis Championships Saturday through Wednesday. Top-level players will compete for rankings in this two-point, prize-money tournament.

"We invite spectators to come see some of the best tennis the Golden Isles will see this year," said Pete Poole, Jekyll Island Authority tennis professional. "The tournament is open to any USTA (U.S. Tennis Association) member; however, it attracts the serious player looking to improve in state and national rankings. A good performance here assures a high state ranking, and we expect nearly 100 players to compete," he added.

The Georgia State Open is a singles and doubles tournament with prize money determined by the number of entrants.

The entry fee is $16 for singles competition and $16 per team for doubles. The entry deadline is Tuesday and standard tournament entry forms may be used. A USTA membership is required and will be available at the Tennis Center prior to the tournament.



A party for tournament players will be Saturday at the Tennis Center.

All matches will be on the 13 clay courts at the Jekyll Island Tennis Center, a Tennis Magazine "Top 25" facility. Spectators are welcomed, and grandstand seating will be available for the final match on the stadium court. Call the tennis center for specific match time.

The tournament is supported by local businesses including Powerade, the Best Western Jekyll Inn, Comfort Inn Island Suites, Clarion Resort Buccaneer, Fendig Outdoor Advertising, Shankman-Davidson Associates and Sheffield Distributing.

For registration and spectator information about the Georgia State Open Tennis Championships, call the Jekyll Island Tennis Center at (912) 635-3154.

For information about accommodations, call the Jekyll Island Convention and Visitors Bureau at (912) 635-3636 or (800) 841-6586.

Ranger to box for bucks in 'tough' competition

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

For Sgt. Mike Moore, boxing has been a part of life since the age of 10 when he won his first bout, but he said he doesn't box for himself as much as he does for his father and his friends.

On Saturday and Sunday, Moore will be boxing for himself and a $50,000 pay day on pay-per-view at the Taj Mahal, in Atlantic City, N. J., at the World Tough Man Competition.

Moore is assigned to Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment and looks to further his career in the rangers by becoming a member of the regimental reconnaissance team.

"If I make the recon team, my boxing ambitions will be put on hold indefinitely," said Moore. "This is my main goal as a ranger. If I don't (make it), then I will probably stay around here and continue to box. I'm 25 years old and if the money is right, we'll see where (boxing) can take me."

With an amateur boxing record of 83-20 that has included the Golden Gloves three times, Junior Olympics twice and American Boxing Federation heavyweight champion for the Southeast district, Moore is no stranger to getting hit or returning the favor.

On a dare, Moore entered the 1990 Tough Man competition held at the Municipal Auditorium in Columbus. He won the competition and $1,000.

This year, he went to Dalton, Ga., and competed again, coming away with first place. This win got him invited to the finals in Atlantic City.

"This competition is every three years and with my win in the heavyweight division in Dalton, I've got a chance for the big bucks," said Moore.

If everything goes the way Moore wants, his boxing status could blossom into a very promising professional career.

"If I stay with boxing, I think I could move up the ranks in the cruiserweight division, which is one weight class down from heavyweight."

It's open season on turkey

Hunter gives tips on bagging birds

By Kevin L. McIver
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Turkey season began in Georgia and Alabama Saturday. Next to deer hunting, this is my favorite time of year.

This includes turkey calls, camouflage face paint and fatigues, a good set of binoculars, shotgun or bow (the latter if you think you're good enough), ammunition and insect repellent.

Choosing a good turkey call can be a trying experience. Models available include box calls, slate calls, diaphragms and imitators. Which one is best? You and Mr. Tom have to be the judge. For the beginner, most find the box or slate to be the easiest. By far, the most difficult to master is the diaphragm.

Many hunters use a combination of the two. They first use an imitator such as an owl or coyote call to locate the gobbler. Then they move in and begin using a box or slate, which sounds like a hen, to entice him closer. Once within sight, a mouth diaphragm is used as it frees up your hands.

No matter which you use, it's a good idea to have a couple of different calls available. Going to the woods with only one call is indeed a mistake. I remember last season using an old box call that had been effective in the past. I thought it sounded a little "off" and evidently so did Mr. Tom. The next day I returned to the same area and used my back up call. He almost knocked me over as he burst into range.

Another consideration for the first time hunter is what gun to use. Most turkey hunters recommend a good 12-gauge shotgun with a full-choke. However, I wouldn't run to the gun store just yet if you have an old 16 or 20-gauge sitting in the closet. These will work just as well if you do your job correctly and call him in close.

Other items that you shouldn't forget are a good set of binoculars, insect repellent and an orange vest and game bag. The latter is used in walking to and from your hunting area and hopefully carrying out your Tom.

COMMENTARY

Insect repellent is extremely important. There's nothing like sitting on the ground calling for a turkey and then notice you have dozens of ticks crawling everywhere. After an experience like that, you won't forget repellent again.

The last advice I will give you is to go out and buy a good turkey-calling tape. Then practice until you drive your family, friends and neighbors crazy.

At that point you will have become proficient enough to go after "Meleagris gallo Pavo," better known as Mr. Tom Turkey. With a little practice and some luck you can have your Thanksgiving dinner a little earlier this year.

Good luck and see you in the woods.

SURGEON GENERAL'S WARNING: Smoking Causes Lung Cancer, Heart Disease, Emphysema, And May Complicate Pregnancy.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Lloyd N. Bell
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: Your sheets are soaked in sweat. Fingernails claw at pillows as you desperately try to suck air into your gasping lungs. Then you awake. It was only a nightmare ... only.a nightmare. Anyone who has ever shopped by mail or by telephone has likely experienced these night frights. You may be charged for merchandise that never arrives. The product might arrive six months down the road when, perhaps, you no longer want the Gintzu Ear-Wax Remover. If you decide to shop by mail or by telephone, what are your rights?

A: If you shop by mail, (i.e. Sear's Catalog, LL Bean's, etc.), you receive protection under the Federal Trade Commission's mail order rule. Under this rule, companies are required to ship your order within the time promised in their advertisement. If no time is promised, the company must ship your order within 30 days after receiving it.

In either situation, whenever there is a delay in delivery of the goods, the company must give you the option off cancelling your order. If you exercise this option, the company must promptly give you a complete refund.

If you shop by telephone, you do not have mail order rule protection if the goods are delivered late or not delivered at all. Even though the rule does not cover phone orders, an order that is placed by telephone and paid for by check, sent through the mail, is covered.

In cases where you purchase goods over the telephone using a credit card, the Fair Credit Billing Act can provide you with another type of protection. The FCBA gives you certain protections when you pay for either phone or mail orders by credit card. The act contains a billing-error resolution procedure which applies to disputes over "billing errors" on periodic statements.

Such errors may include charges for goods or services that you did not accept or that were not delivered as agreed.

Under the FCBA, you may withhold payment on the disputed portion of your credit card bill until the dispute is resolved. You are still required, however, to pay any undisputed portion of the bill. In order to take advantage of this law, you must send a written billing error notice to the creditor at the special address indicated on the bill for "billing inquiries."

Your notice must reach the creditor within 60 days after the first bill containing the error was mailed to you. The creditor must acknowledge your complaint within 30 days of receipt unless, of course, the error is resolved within that time.

At the very latest, the creditor must resolve the dispute within two billing cycles after receipt of your notice.

But what do you do if the quality of the goods purchased with the credit card is poor? The FCBA allows you to withhold payment for the defective product up to the amount of credit outstanding for the disputed transaction and any finance charge or other charges on that amount.

For example, if you buy the Gintzu Ear Wax Remover with your charge card and the wire mesh extractor tip is rusty, you may withhold the cost of the product from your monthly bill.

Before you can take advantage of these protections, however, you must make a good faith effort to resolve the dispute with the seller.

If you are not familiar with the company, call your local Better Business Bureau and find out if the company has been a problem in the past.

Be sure to read the policy statements of the company regarding refunds and return policies.

If you have problems with mail order companies or products ordered over the telephone, you have available a local army of Judge Advocate General attorneys here to serve you. Call the Legal Assistance Division at 545-3281 for more information.

CRIME WATCH

Military Police Activity

The following entries were taken from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from March 9 to 15. Such entries may be incomplete and are not the adjudication of the guilt or innocence of any person.

This week's hot topic is "citizen concern." When the Military Police Activity hits the road on any given shift, the number of patrols are limited. You can assist the Military Police Activity in increasing those numbers by being a "concerned citizen."

You can be the eyes and ears of your community. Report any suspicious activity to the Military Police desk sergeant at 545-5222 or 545-5223.

•A sergeant first class was charged with leaving the scene of an accident after striking a parked vehicle and departing the area without rendering any information.

•A sergeant was charged with writing worthless checks after he had 22 checks returned for insufficient funds.

•A sergeant first class was charged by civil authorities with assault after he struck his wife while at a local auto dealership. During the arrest, it was determined that the sergeant first class was absent without leave from his unit.

•A family clearing post reported that someone caused damage to their unoccupied quarters by firing two bullets into the quarters.

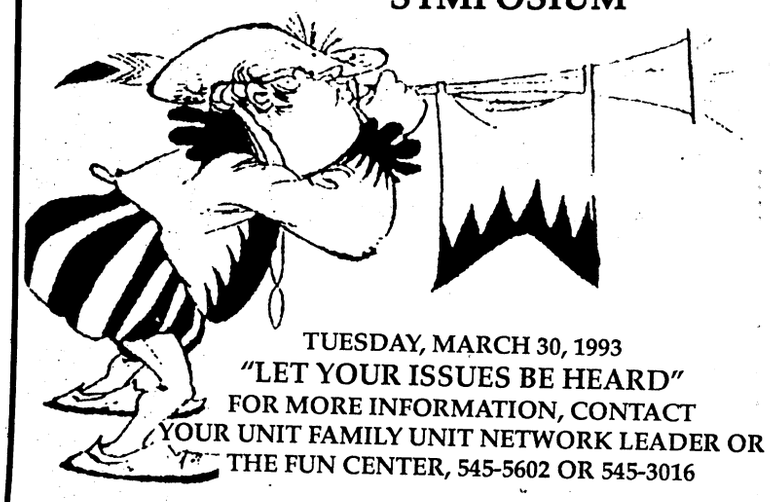
• A sergeant first class was charged by civil authorities with aggravated assault after placing a 12-inch knife to his wife's throat and telling her that he was going to kill her.

The sergeant first class then assaulted his wife by kicking her in the face and head.

This week's booby prize is awarded to a sergeant who shot himself with a pellet gun. The sergeant and his wife were in an unauthorized area firing a pellet gun at tin cans.

While loading the gun, it went off striking the soldier in the shoulder. He was transported to the hospital by his wife, where he was treated and released.

But, as a reminder to everyone who enjoys the art of shooting at still targets, there is only one authorized BB and pellet range on post. The range is located on Willet Road in the Harmony Church area.



Other activities included 13 traffic accidents and four reports of shoplifting at facilities on post. There were four cases of driving under the influence of alcohol and four cases of larceny of private property.

Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best — Give Crime Arrest" Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5223 or the "Crime in Progress" line at 545-2222.

Congressional defense liaison visits 29th Infantry Regiment

By Gregory Hart
29th Infantry Regiment

The 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment was host to Brett Pfeffer, a defense liaison, Feb. 27.

Traveling with Pfeffer were Curt J. Hollmann, a legislative director, and Col. Jim Littig, a congressional liaison.

Pfeffer and the others were given a tour of the Collins Training Center where they were shown a Bradley Fighting Vehicle and given the opportunity to drive one.

They were also taken to the Bradley Fighting Vehicle gunnery trainer or unit conduct of fire trainer where they tried their luck against simulated targets.

Following the tour, they were escorted to Red Cloud Range where they viewed various automatic weapons and got a chance to get into the turret of a Bradley and engage targets with live rounds.

PT is individual's responsibility

Michael R. Trinkle
U.S. Army Physical Fitness School

COMMENTARY

The next time you fall out for physical training, take a look around. If you see soldiers "going through the motions," maybe it's time you take a serious look at your physical training program. After all, it is your program.

I know that Army regulation 350-15 states that PT is the commander's program, but it also holds the individual responsible for physical fitness.

Therefore I'm charging all soldiers, leaders and subordinates alike to look at your program and see if it is all that it should be. If it isn't, let your commander know.

Often we find ourselves doing things in the Army because of tradition — "it's always been done that way." Don't get me wrong; tradition is a good thing — unless it contradicts doctrine. Then we have a problem.

Physical fitness has come a long way in the last 10 years. We know more about the human body and the effects of physical training than ever before. Army doctrine has done a pretty good job of keeping up. Unfortunately, we — the leadership in the Army, as a whole — have not done as well.

How do we change? Maybe the solution is too simple, but the tools we need are already in our possession. Field Manual 21-20 dated Sept. 30, 1992 and AR 350-15 dated Nov. 3, 1989 along with the help of your unit's master fitness trainer, can turn around a stale PT program and make a good one better.

Understanding the principles of exercise and how they are used in a unit's fitness program is the forte of the master fitness trainer. However, even with all this, nothing will happen without smart leadership; after all, PT is the commander's program.

With the downsizing of the Army, we, as leaders, can no longer afford to waste time. With fewer soldiers to do the same missions, we must make every hour of every day worth the time spent.

So, which will it be, tradition or doctrine? The obvious answer is doctrine. By following the principles outlined in our doctrine, we can build a new tradition for PT — quality training.

29th soldiers graduate air assault

By Gregory Hart
1st Battalion, 29th Infantry

Twenty-two soldiers from the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment recently graduated from air assault school at Fort Rucker, Ala.

Sgt. Debra Hampton became the first female from the 29th Infantry to graduate from the school.

Graduates had two weeks of battalion training that gave them the opportunity to prepare for the physical and academic rigors of the school.

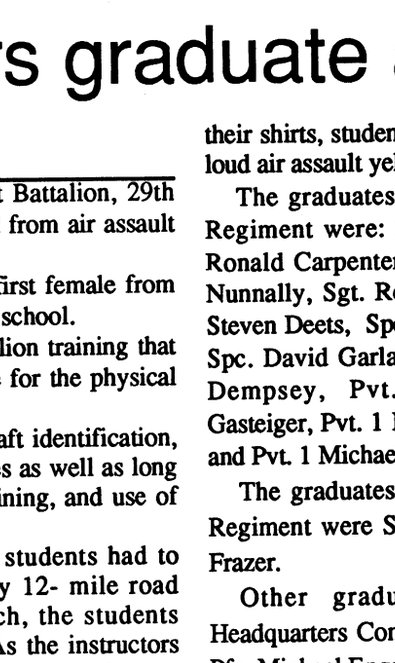
The battalion had classes on aircraft identification, sling loading and rappeling techniques as well as long road marches, strenuous physical training, and use of the obstacle course.

On the final day of the course, students had to successfully complete a mandatory 12- mile road march. Following the road march, the students formed their ranks for graduation. As the instructors passed in front of the students pinning the wings to their shirts, students snapped to attention and let out a loud air assault yell.

The graduates from 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment were: Staff Sgt. Timothy Peterson, Sgt. Ronald Carpenter, Sgt. James Havens, Sgt. Donald Nunnally, Sgt. Robert Loesch, Sgt. Andy Hill, Spc. Steven Deets, Spc. Brian Rich, Spc. Brock Randolph, Spc. David Garland, Spc. Daniel Nunley, Spc. Paul Dempsey, Pvt. 1 Chad Rancourt, Pvt. 1 Josh Gasteiger, Pvt. 1 Dustin Perish, Pvt. 1 David Hanshue and Pvt. 1 Michael Greishaw.

The graduates from 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment were Spc. Samuel Murphy and Pfc. Brian Frazer.

Other graduates from Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 29th Infantry Regiment were Pfc. Michael Engstrom and Pfc. Larry Rodriguez.



Atlanta History Center continues WW II series

Atlanta History Center

The Atlanta History Center will continue its World War II Remembered series Sunday from 2 to 4 p.m. with "What Did You Do in the War, Grandma?"

The program examines the role of women in World War II from WACs (members of the Women's Army Corps) and WAVEs (Women Accepted for Volunteer Emergency Service in the Navy) to the nurses who died on the beaches of Anzio, Italy.

Atlantans Evelyn Monahan and Rosemary Neidel-Greenlee of the Atlanta chapter of the National Association of Women Veterans will narrate a slide show that traces the involvement of women in the military and Monahan will lead an audience discussion after the slide show.

Female veterans are invited to attend and share their memories of the war with their peers and hear the experiences of other Atlantans and Georgians. Preregistration is not required and the public is also welcome.

A free reception will follow the event in McElreath Hall at the Atlanta History Center, 3101 Andrews Drive N.W. at West Paces Ferry Road, Atlanta. For more information, call (404) 814-4000.

Success TV, a program set up by Special Audiences Inc. to enable youth-at-risk to learn about video production, will tape the event as part of an ongoing oral history project at the center.

One of the center's goals for this series is to gather oral histories describing the war's effects on Atlanta and its citizens.

WORLD WAR II — A LOOK BACK

50 years ago this week...

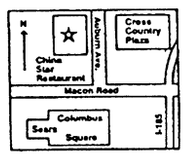
• In North Africa, America's 1st Armored Division joined the 2nd New Zealand Division at the Tebaga Gap, causing the defending German and Italian infantry units to abandon their fortifications along the Mareth Line in Tunisia. Continuous Allied pressure from ground and air forces, under the overall operational command of British Field Marshal Bernard Montgomery, inflicted heavy enemy casualties in terms of men and equipment and successfully drove the demoralized Axis forces from their initial fallback positions at El Hamma to Wadi Akarit.

• In the Bering Sea, an American squadron, consisting of two cruisers and four destroyers, successfully intercepted a larger Japanese force, including four cruisers and five destroyers, near the Komandorski Islands. Each side sustained serious damage to one cruiser before the Japanese retreated, abandoning their mission of reaching the Aleutian Islands.

• In New Guinea, the Allied forces solidified their hold on the area as an American battalion occupied positions near Morobe at the mouth of the Waria River.

• Britain's Royal Air Force Bomber Command and the Eighth U. S. Army Air Force completed a month of around-the-clock missions, raiding various Axis-held industrial and military targets throughout Europe.

• Fort Benning hosted Gen. George C. Marshall and Field Marshal Sir John Dill, head of the British Joint Services Mission in Washington, who toured the post's combat training areas.



• Fort Benning recognized Sgt. Clabe Sherman, one of its former soldiers, who led a detachment of 115 men in an effort to recapture the Kasserine Pass from the Germans in Tunisia, North Africa.

By John Wynn
Martin Army Community Hospital

Providing exceptional customer service is the goal for most service organizations, but generally, this doesn't happen overnight.

At Martin Army Community Hospital, the staff has the opportunity to attend a customer service training program called "PRIDE", which stands for Patient Relations Instruction for Direct Encounters. Recently, the hospital began recognizing approximately 70 employees who had completed the formal training program.

Each staff member was presented with a certificate and a miniature hospital crest to be worn on the employee's identification badge. The next time you come to Martin Army, you may be greeted by one of these outstanding employees. You can identify them by the smile they wear and the pin they proudly display.

In order to distribute the awards to such a large group, the hospital scheduled a series of ceremonies. At the first of these, Col. Herbert K. Reamey III, deputy commander for administration, commented that every employee at the hospital plays a vital role in the success of the organization. He reminded those in attendance of the importance of treating every patient or fellow staff member as they themselves would wish to be treated. It is the objective of PRIDE to remind the staff of this important principal and to give those who attend some proven techniques in which to accomplish this goal, Reamey said. The training is open to all MEDDAC and DENTAC civilian and military staff members. Those employees receiving recognition include:

Easter egg hunt April 10

Youth Services

An Easter egg hunt and carnival will be April 10 at Riverside, home of Fort Benning Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. and Linda White.

Sponsored by the Family Support Division of the Directorate of Community Activities in recognition of the Month of the Military Child and National Child Abuse Prevention Month, the event will feature clowns, games, train rides and fire trucks. The Easter bunny will be on hand to talk with children.

Hunt areas will be set up by age groups; 18 to 36 months, 4- and 5-, 6- and 7-, and 8- and 9-year-olds.

Parents may not enter the hunt areas and staff members will be available to make sure that every child finds an egg and that no child leaves without something.

All give-a-way booths, with the exception of train rides and sodas, will be for children only.

In addition to the hunt and carnival, there will be a concert by Gary Pig for the adults.

Pig will perform top 40 and country songs and will be followed by the Infantry Band and the Infantry Chorus. Parents may bring a blanket or lawn chair and a picnic lunch, sit back and enjoy.

Parents may stop by Youth Services, Building 1056, for a diagram of where the hunt areas will be located.

Volunteers are needed to help hide the eggs. Anyone interested may call Kathy Case, installation volunteer coordinator, at 545-5602.

Healthy shopping: Read the labels

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

The Nutrition Care Division hosted nutrition tours of the Commissary March 17 and Wednesday.

The tours were conducted to recognize March as National Nutrition Month.

2nd Lt. Sarah Van Eden, outpatient dietitian for Martin Army Community Hospital. The guide for the tours.

Van Eden told participants about heart-healthy foods that were low in fat.

She outlined shopping guidelines that promote nutritious meals that could be prepared at home.

According to Van Eden, shoppers should follow these tips to eat healthier:

•Make a shopping list and stick to it to eliminate impulse buying.

•Read labels carefully for ingredients and nutrition information.

•Remember that ingredients are listed in order of weight from most to least on a package.

•Beware of animal fats such as butter or lard and tropical oils because they are high in saturated fat.

•Even though a food product contains no cholesterol, its saturated fat content will increase blood cholesterol levels.

For any further information, call the Nutrition Clinic at Martin Army Community Hospital at 544-1542 or 544-1674.

Students discover mathematics, science

Fort Benning Schools

"It's a one-of-a-kind vehicle for the Army," says Jim Frye, chief of exhibits and special programs for the National Science Center at Fort Gordon.

It visited Fort Benning's Faith Middle School, Monday, Wednesday, Thursday and today to support Faith School's ongoing science program and to help stimulate student interest in math and science.

Making America number one in math and science is one of the goals of America 2000, which is a national education program.

The mission of the National Science Center is to attract young people to the fields of math, science and electronics and thereby help provide the talent the United States needs to continue to be the world's leader in these fields.

The vehicle is the National Science Center's Mobile Discovery Center. It is a white 18 wheel truck, painted with bright green and blue starbursts.

The Mobile Discovery Center travels across the land and presents programs that teach young people that studying science and math is not only fun but essential.

The vehicle is on the road traveling from "West Point, N.Y., to Kansas City, Mo., and points in between," according to Frye.

The Mobile Discovery Center is three things in one — a theater, a classroom and an exhibit hall. As a theater, it features programs on math, science, electronics, and computers. As a classroom, it provides training in math, science, electronics and computers for students and teachers. As an exhibit hall, it showcases small interactive exhibits and displays.

Members of Feliciano's family in attendance were his wife, Carol, their son, Marc, and daughter Marisa and her husband, Dr. Chris Bergstrom.

Alvarez's wife Karen (Kitty), their three daughters Amy, Lisa and Carrie, as well as his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jose Alvarez Sr., were all present at the ceremony.

After the passing of the school colors, Feliciano was awarded the Legion of Merit.

In addition to his award, his wife, Carol, received a Department of the Army certificate for her "exceptional support of the Army and the School of the Americas."

Following the award ceremony, White took a moment to address the audience.

"The time has come for us to say goodbye to a very special soldier and his wife, Joe and Carol Feliciano, the great command team, a professional officer of the highest order and clearly a supportive and dedicated Army wife," White said. Their contributions to this Army, this community, the School of the Americas and the countries of Latin America are truly unequal in recent history.

"Traditionally when we say farewell to old friends, we also welcome new members of the team and today is no exception as we welcome Colonel Jose Alvarez, his wife, Kitty, and their family. I am impressed with the Alvarezes and their credentials. We are indeed fortunate to have an officer of Joe Alvarez's ability take command of this key assignment."

Luis Cruz

Maj. Gen. Marc A. Cisneros, deputy inspector general for investigations Department of the Army, speaks with Col. Jose R. Feliciano following the SOA change of command.

Following White's remarks, Feliciano took time to recall his career and thank family, friends, mentors and supporters.

"It's hard to let go, let go of those colors, let go of the school," Feliciano said. "Fortunately I'm able to do so in the company of families and friends."

As the new commandant, Alvarez took his turn at the podium to address the audience.

"I'm home, I'm an infantryman and I'm home," Alvarez said. "It is with a great deal of shared pride and no small sense of humility that I accept the school colors today. "

The Infantry Band concluded the ceremony playing the "Hymn of the Americas", "Auld Lang Syne", and "The Army Song."

Alvarez's last assignment prior to taking command of the school, was as the chief, Reserve Component Training Integration Division in the Training Directorate, Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations and Plans, Headquarters, Department of the Army.

Feliciano and his wife will reside in Columbus where he will take a position with Total System Services Inc., heading up the development of business in Latin America.

Ministry team gets refresher training

By Jacqueline Feagin
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Are you looking for someone to listen to you?

Do you have trouble listening to others?

Contact may be the answer for you.

Contact is a 24-hour help line for callers in the Fort Benning community, Columbus and Phenix City. The calls are confidential and the callers are encouraged to discuss personal problems.

Its purpose is not to give advice or counseling or solve the caller's problem. It is simply an outlet to help callers identify and focus on their feelings. Contact's motto is "we listen to any problem big or small."

After the callers sort through their problems, if they need more help or information, Contact keeps an active file of resources in the community to refer to the callers.

The Unit Ministry Team had a training session with Annetta Berry, executive director of Contact. She explained that "Contact training is a good way to become a good listener." The Unit Ministry Team got a chance to review some listening skills and get examples of the type of calls that Contact receives. Contact is currently manned by a staff of 110 volunteers.

Volunteers receive a 50-hour college-level program on active listening and effective crisis intervention. After a volunteer completes the program, he or she is required to help out for eight hours a month for one year. The next training program will be offered in the fall.

For more information on training or for help, call Contact at 327-3999.

Purification, sacrifice key to Easter season

By Jacqueline Feagin
USAIC Chaplains' Office

"You are dust and to dust you will return."

This statement was heard by Christians on Ash Wednesday as they entered the period of Lent.

Lent is a time to prepare interested persons for baptism into the community of the church.

It's a time for committed Christians to reflect on how well they have kept their baptismal promises to reject sin and Satan and live the gospel.

It is a time of purification and preparation for the great triduum of Holy Thursday, Good Friday and Holy Saturday, which will be followed by the great feast of Easter celebrating the resurrection of Jesus Christ.

The symbol of the ashes returns one to the new. It is a sign that mankind is created and left to its own design. It is a season where some may choose to fast and sacrifice. Others may choose only to sacrifice something very important to them.

In this season, a journey is taken week by week to reflect on life and what is important in that life. To focus on who God is and of his importance. The journey has begun and leads toward the assured forgiveness of Good Friday and the new life of Easter morning.

The Fort Benning community will begin Easter with its annual Ecumenical Sunrise Service April 11 at 6:30 a.m. in Doughboy Stadium. Followed by an Easter brunch at the Fort Benning Officers' Club and Main NCO Club at 8 a.m., Protestant and Catholic services will take place throughout the day. The public is invited to attend all services.

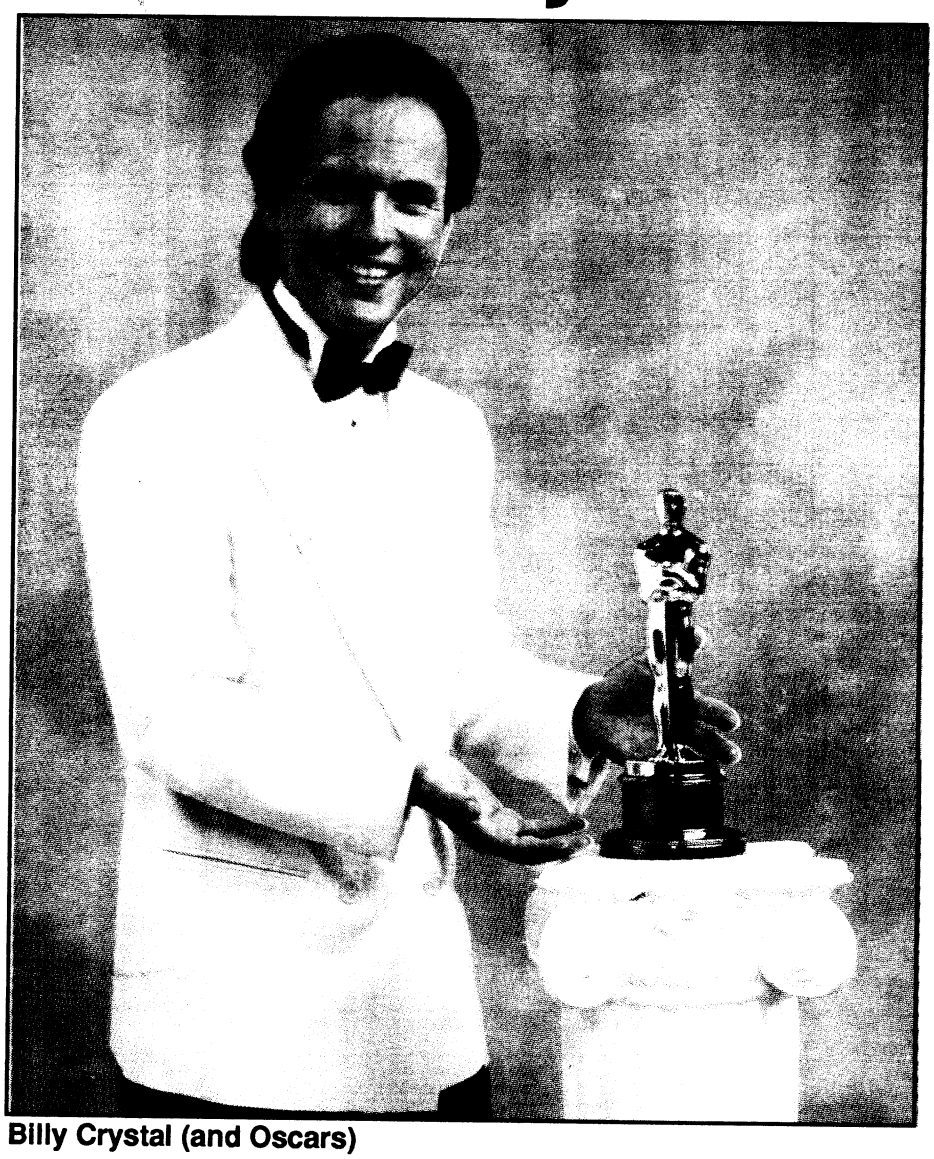
65th annual Academy Awards on ABC

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

As usual, the Hollywood elite of both genders will be there in force ... but this year, it's really Ladies' Night at the Academy Awards.

What: 65th Academy Awards
When: Monday, 9 p.m.



SPOTLIGHT

When ABC televises the 65th annual Oscar ceremony live Monday from the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion of the Los Angeles Music Center, the contributions of women to the motion-picture industry — especially of those who have won the coveted statue, from actresses and producers to film editors and costume designers — will be spotlighted by host Billy Crystal and producer Gilbert Cates, both of whom are returning for the fourth consecutive year. Even the traditional presentation of the Jean Hersholt Humanitarian Award will maintain that theme ("a coincidence," Cates claims), since the dual honorees for 1993 are Elizabeth Taylor and the late Audrey Hepburn.

Indeed, the usual business at hand will be observed as well, with Crystal virtually certain to render another of his creative opening songs that interpolate the names of many prominent movies and artists of the preceding year. (He has earned Emmy Awards for his work on each of the three previous Oscar shows.) Also during the program, a special honor will be conferred upon veteran Italian filmmaker Federico Fellini.

Though it's not the norm for the same person to produce the Academy Awards four years in a row, Cates demurs that he's not setting a record by doing so. "I think Howard Koch did it seven or eight times," he recalls, "I don't know how he did it, but he did. For me, it's a matter of approaching each year's show by trying to find a theme that represents the previous year (in movies), and each show becomes different by virtue of that. The first year I did this, the Berlin Wall had crumbled and there was a feeling of euphoria throughout Europe, so we had a global party with live remotes from places like Moscow and Australia. The second year, it was the 100th anniversary of film, so we celebrated that with clips of things like the first sound movie and the first movie in color. Last year, the recession led people to go to the movies to escape, in much the way they did during the Depression, so we celebrated the pure joy of the movies. This (past) year seems to have been the year of the woman, in the sense of the increased interest in women's rights and feminism and the elections, so that's what we're celebrating this year. I believe a show like this is like a boat, since you can't steer either unless you have forward motion; if you start with a certain theme, you can steer the show around that."

Another factor in the Oscar proceedings this time is the very strong showing made by independent films, movies produced outside the established studio system ... marked particularly by the nine nominations earned by "Howards End" and the six accrued by "The Crying Game." Cates deems that showing "great, and for the industry in general."

Korea offers beauty, excitement for America's military

By Sydni Redmond
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Often when soldiers find out they may be headed for Korea, one of the first places to think of is Seoul.

Seoul is said to be the fun capital of Korea. Anything worth seeing would be found there. Not so, according to Spc. Tom Wenz who will report from the island of Kangwhn, Korea, next week on "Fort Benning Today." Wenz reports there are several places north of Seoul with intriguing history and myths of magic.

In fact, next week "Fort Benning Today" will focus primarily on Korea — both the American military stationed there and Korea's traditional customs. The show will also air segments on the American Forces Korean Network, how it works and what's in store for its future.

"Victory News," the news show of the 24th Infantry Division, and post movie previews will also be showing.

U. S. Army Infantry Center Television will highlight post events on the Fort Benning Community Bulletin Board.

News and musci from Soldiers Radio Network normally played under the bulletin board has been interrupted because of satellite damage from the recent snow, but it will be restored as soon as possible.

If you are a subscriber to Fort Benning Cable, you can watch USAIC TV on Channel 3, 24 hours a day.

Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:26, 7:56, 8:26 and 8:56 on WLTZ TV-38.

For more information or to make suggestions, write or call the Broadcast Section of the Public Affairs Office, Infantry Hall, Room 602, 545-2201.

Storytelling festival to begin

Westville Historic Handicrafts Inc.

Spring has sprung at Westville, the 1850 living history museum at Lumpkin, Ga.

Activities will begin Saturday with a storytelling festival. The events will be led by master storyteller Mary Bass of Columbus and her students. However, anyone wishing a stage and an audience is welcome to participate.

Spring Festival will officially begin Thursday and continue through April 6 with special music and craft demonstrations.

In the preindustrial South, with its basically agricultural society, the return of spring meant plowing, planting, and preparing that year's crop. At Westville, activities will be no different as mules plow ground to prepare the gardens for planting. There will also be demonstrations of other activities in addition to regular demonstrations of blacksmithing, quilting, spinning, weaving, basketmaking, pottery, woodworking and leather crafting.

On weekdays of the festival, area school children will be in Westville's Academy, where they will re-create school in 1850. Children in the academy will be learning the alphabet, reciting their math problems and playing games of the period.

Westville is open for special events Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and from 1 a.m.to 5 p.m. Sunday. For information write to Westville, P.O. Box 1850, Lumpkin , Ga. 31815 or call (912) 838-6310.

Barnsley Gardens changes look not beauty

Barnsley Gardens

WOODLANDS, Ga. — Experience Barnsley Gardens at Woodlands, a historic antebellum estate nestled in the rolling hills of northwest Georgia.

Established as a cotton plantation in the 1840s, this was Godfrey Barnsley's dream come true. An Englishman by birth, Barnsley came to America almost penniless but soon, with the help of "King Cotton," became one of the most prominent planters and merchants on the Eastern Seaboard.

His success also helped him attract the interests of one of Savannah's most beautiful belles, Julia Scarborough. Soon they were married. Barnsley Gardens was Godfrey's gift to her.

Though greatly changed by time, Barnsley Gardens today shines brighter than ever. In 1988, the estate was purchased by Prince Hubertus Fugger and his wife Alexandra, of Bavaria, Germany. Under their direction, the original formal gardens have been restored, becoming the centerpiece of this 1,600-acre plantation.

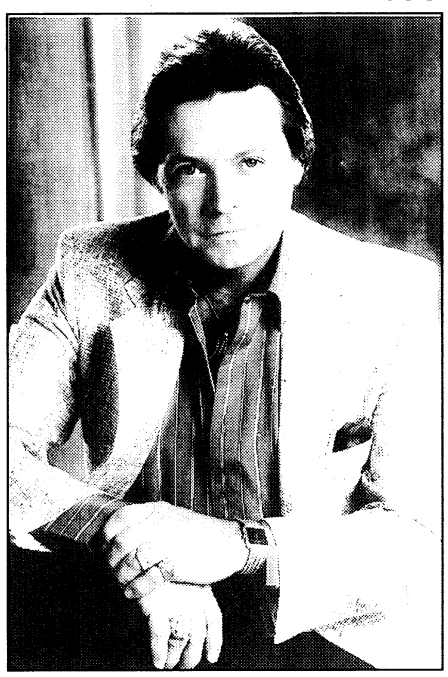
Features include water gardens and falls, the fernery, rockeries, woodland gardens with native and exotic rhododendrons and azaleas, flower borders displaying annuals and perennials that bloom the year round, hundreds of thousands of spring bulbs and a grand boxwood parterre garden spotlighting a 12-foot tall fountain where the beautiful Julia can still be seen.

The 24-room main house, an Italian villa by design, was left in ruins by a 1906 storm. Floored and stabilized, the ruin is open for viewing or special events of any kind.

Other authentic buildings spared by the storm have been restored to their original appearance including the 1840s kitchen and service wing that now houses a museum and theater.

A cafe, gift and garden shops and on-site catering are also offered. A full calendar of festivals and special events complete the year.

The gardens are open yearly February through mid-December. Hours are Tuesday to Saturday, 10 a.m.to 5 p.m. and Sunday noon to 5 p.m.



Admission is $6 for adults and $5 for students and seniors. Children 11 and under are free. Group student rates are available.

Barnsley Gardens is located at 597 Barnsley Gardens Road, just off Hall Station Road between Adairsville and Kingston. If coming from I-75, take Exit 128, go west on Georgia Highway 140 and follow the signs.

Survey to examine soldiers' living areas

By Barbara J. Ray
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Did you ever say or hear someone else say, "If I was in charge, things would be different?" If you are a single soldier living in the barracks, you may get a chance to put in your two cents' worth on services and facilities on post in the near future.

The Single Soldier Living Community Advisory Board, headed by Post Command Sgt. Maj. William H. Acebes and Garrison Sgt. Maj. Ireland D. Pulley, will conduct a survey of selected single soldiers for input to improve services and facilities. The survey will cover 11 areas; recreation, economic, social, political, safety and security, health and fitness, cultural, professional development, personal development, spiritual and facilities.

Unlike other surveys, which often arrive unannounced in the mail or are handed out at 6 a.m. to soldiers who have no idea why their presence has been requested, this one has been localized for Fort Benning. According to Pulley, the post has been divided into five single-soldier communities, based on geographic location rather than individual units. The areas are Kelley Hill, Sand Hill, Harmony Church, South Main Post and North Main Post.

Each unit within the single-soldier communities will be represented in the survey. The number of single soldiers assigned to the unit will determine how many soldiers from each unit actually participate in the survey. "Then the results of the survey can be tailored to improve the quality of life in a specific community," said Pulley.

"We plan to have the selected soldiers receive briefings explaining what improvements or projects are already in the works as far as services and facilities," said Acebes. "There will also be people on hand to talk soldiers through the survey."

When the surveys are complete and the information has been tabulated, the advisory board and the post Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers Council will develop a prioritized list of needs for each of the five single-soldier communities. From there, they will determine how to best meet those needs by matching them with resources.

"This could be done by coordinating with other agencies on or off post to improve services, through self-help or through major construction, to name a few possibilities," said Pulley. An area action plan including short- and long-range goals will be developed.

"Some of the things identified in the needs survey may not require funds and new construction," said Acebes, "Maybe it is something as simple as making a phone call and

Training focuses on environment

By Jeffrey Stone
Directorate of Public Works

An environmental training seminar titled "Environmental Concerns in Motor Pool Operations" was March 21 at the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment Motor Pool on Kelley Hill.

The seminar was developed by the Environmental Management Division of the Directorate of Public Works and was hosted by the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment.

The seminar provided environmental training focusing on hazardous material and hazardous waste disposal procedures that occur in motor pool operations.

Attending were approximately 100 brigade and battalion commanders and division chiefs brought together to reemphasize their responsibilities under USAIC Regulation 200-1, Environment Protection and Enhancement.

"Hazardous material operations within the motor pool present the greatest challenge to the U.S. Army today," said Lt. Col. John J. Orosz Jr, director, Environmental Management Division.

Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White's opening remarks emphasized the important role the Army plays in the environmental arena.

After challenging commanders to lead the way in this effort, he introduced Bernard Pfeiffer of the Administrative Law Division, Staff Judge Advocate's Office. Pfeiffer

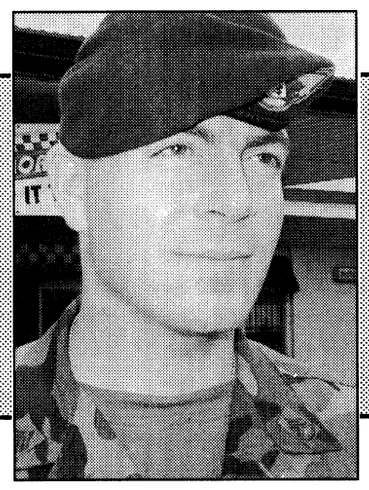
43rd Engineers return

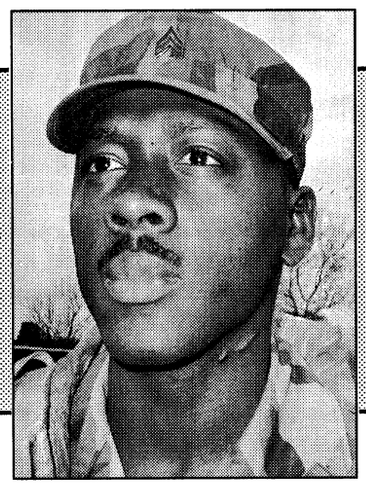
USAIC Public Affairs Office

About 115 members of the 43rd Engineer Battalion returned from Somalia arriving at Lawson Army Airfield March 24 around 11:30 a.m.



About 1,000 Fort Benning soldiers from the 36th Engineer Group served in Somalia with Operation Restore Hope.

They provided humanitarian relief to the Somalian people, constructed base camps, repaired and improved roads and bridges, improved upon the serviceability of unit buildings and erected security barriers.



More than 200 soldiers from the 63rd Combat Support Equipment Company and the 608th Ordnance Company remain in Somalia.

Single soldiers get a fair shake

By Clyde Snively

COMMENTARY

News flash: The Army is going to start treating single soldiers living in barracks as adults.

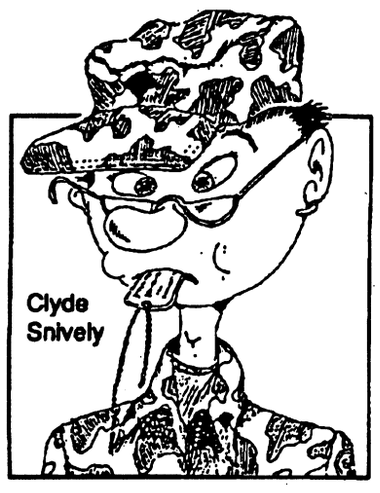
Oh, single soldiers get treated as adults all right, as long as they're in the field, firing multi-million dollar weapons, or driving or repairing vehicles that equal the entire civilian payroll out here. They get treated as adults when they head off on maneuvers or go into combat to shoot and get shot at.

But put them in the barracks after duty hours and they revert to childhood status.

If they have visitors of another sex, the barracks doors must be left open; if they want to drink, they're limited to a six pack of beer, a bottle of wine or maybe just a soda, depending on unit policy.

Rooms are subject to inspection at all times. No risque art and posters allowed. Furniture is Army issue except for such personal items as computers and stereos.

But now the Army's stretched, yawned and opened its eyes and ears. And after treating single soldiers basically the same way for 218 years, it's on the verge of the great awakening.



And guess what. You, the soldiers who live in the barracks are on the cutting edge of change. You can tell the Army what you, the soldier who has to comply with all the rules and regulations of barracks life, want.

As you read this, there's a great computer in the sky randomly going over Social Security numbers of single soldiers. You may be one of the soldiers who gets picked to tell the Army what you think will improve your lifestyle here at Fort Benning.

You'll be briefed on the survey, and the survey won't be one of those Oh-Dark-Thirty sessions where you're half awake and wondering why you were rousted out of bed to meet in some classroom. (See, progress already.)

You'll be asked what you, a single soldier living in the barracks, want out of life.

Private bath and sink top on your list, so note. Want to toss out all quartermaster furniture and bring in a waterbed with canopy, write it down.

If a well-stocked liquor cabinet is high on your list, then say so. If you want wall-to-wall carpeting and are willing to pay to install it, so note.

If you and your roommate want to live like pigs, want to have psychedelic posters and don't think your room should be subject to inspections, announced or unannounced, here's your chance.

You'll also get your crack at telling the Army what you like in the way of on-post entertainment —U2 instead of Lawrence Welk; what hours you think the craft shop, the auto shop, the Post Exchange should be open.

If you think the Commissary should have a single soldier section, here's an opportunity you shouldn't pass up.

In short, the Army and Fort Benning want to know what can be done to improve your quality of life. And this time they are doing it by asking you, the single soldier, not your noncommissioned officers and officers, not even your fellow married soldiers, but you, the single soldier living in barracks.

Isn't that uncanny. Always before it was the officers and sergeants who knew what was best for you, even when you were off duty. But now, they're saying, "maybe those single soldiers have some ideas."

So don't be shy. Don't miss out when you're called to fill out the survey. For this is your chance to be counted — unlike the moaning and groaning sessions you have with your fellow soldiers who, while they might sympathize with you, had no chance to do anything about it — up until now.

But does anyone really use spit?

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

There is a question that all soldiers deal with at some time, regardless of rank, time in service or military occupational specialty.

How do you get that spit shine?

It starts in basic training. Between the bayonet course, marching to the range and standing in line for chow — those boots have to be shined every day. Facing newly issued, dull black boots with the mission of making them sparkle is one of the first hurdles the prospective soldier has to leap.

Over time, some people develop secret methods, which are as closely-held and jealously guarded as an M-16 during a field training exercise.

These methods may incorporate exotic substances from panther sweat to axle grease, but most are based on minor variations of tradition.

First, you have ... the polish.

This can be your basic black shoe polish, which is what most soldiers I know swear by. But if you want to be fancy, there are a whole range of dyes, soaps, leather treatments, high-wax polishes and "no-work" polishes. That last item, by the way, performs as advertised for me. It doesn't work.

As important as the polish are your methods of application and buffing, and this is where most people get creative.

Some by-the-book soldiers, notably those who spend a lot of time in the field, refuse to go beyond a brush shine and sneer at "spit-shine, @#%$ rear-echelon slugs." I refer them to my basic training drill sergeant, who ate trainees for breakfast and always wore blinding boots — even during our field training exercise.

Among those who go beyond the brush, there are devotees of diapers, T-shirts, cotton balls and nylons as the best way of raising a shine.

William Riley's ritual requires just a T-shirt, water and polish, but the combination of these elements has to be just right — use just a little water, wrap the shirt around two fingers, and don't buff without adding more polish, but not too much.

High-Speed Spaller, whose low-drag husband works on Kelley Hill, says his method employs wet cotton balls, "folded into a perfect little pad, and then using little, tiny circles to buff." Usually, though, she said, he uses a brush.

Sgt. Sydni and Staff Sgt. Rosebud employ the offices of Infantry Hall's shine maestro, who holds court in the barber shop. I've watched him at work, but I'm still not sure what exactly it is that he does. It works, though, and it keys on a secret substance applied after the polish, one of those space-age compounds developed for the Star Wars program.

Anyway, there are a variety of methods for achieving that twinkle-toes look. My secret? I'd tell you — but then I'd have to kill you.

LETTER

Realtors object to scam commentary

The Columbus Board of Realtors takes exception to the commentary in The Bayonet, March 19.

The headline states that housing is the latest scam (a fraudulent business scheme), yet the article presents no evidence of fraud but does slam the real estate industry.

The primary complaint in the article seems to be that Strack was charged for damages to the property.

Either the damages occurred or they didn't. The entire basis for charging for damages is comparing the move-in inspection to the move-out inspection.

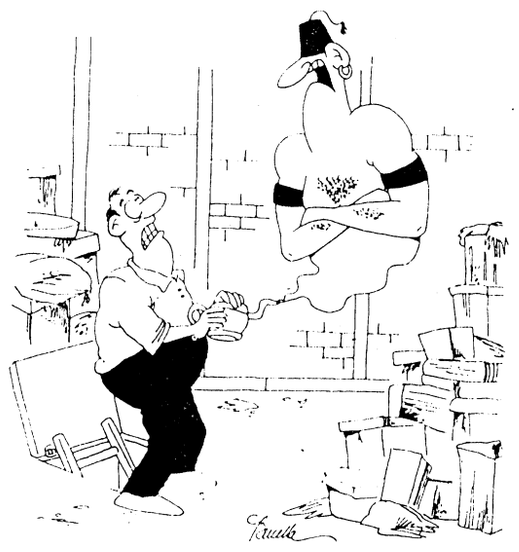
All damages mentioned in the article appear to be reasonable things that happen to rental property. And, yes, you can damage a yard by parking on the grass; allowing a pet to dig holes; by not cutting, raking or policing, etc.

The point is, if the tenant damages the property, the tenant is responsible for the damages, and the property manager who enforces the property owner's right to collect damages is not conducting a scam!

This is not to say that there cannot be a disagreement about damages. The tenant must be informed in writing as to any charges for damages. The tenant can respond in writing if there is a disagreement with the charges. If it cannot be resolved, the matter can end up in court.

A soldier who has a problem has more avenues of recourse than a civilian. The soldier has the Housing Referral Office and Legal Assistance at the Judge Advocate General's Office.

The soldier can also call the Better Business Bureau or the Columbus Board of Realtors for assistance. There are avenues of recourse.



Lastly, a security deposit is the tenant's money held in trust. The quickest way for any real estate company to lose its license is to improperly handle a security deposit or any other trust fund.

The Georgia Real Estate Commission aggressively investigates allegations of trust fund improprieties. Therefore, most brokers are very careful in handling these funds to ensure they comply with the law.

The advice given in the article is good advice. For the move-in inspection to be valid, the tenant must sign it. The tenant should be given a copy of anything signed regarding a lease. Know what is being signed and keep a copy. If it's not understood, seek competent advice. If a problem arises, seek redress.

The Columbus Board of Realtors wants unethical real estate practitioners out of business just as badly as you. We hope you will see fit to publish this counterpoint to your commentary.

Museum opens exhibit

By Dick Grube
National Infantry Museum

During the period 1991 to 1995, Fort Benning's National Infantry Museum will be observing the 50th Anniversary of World War II.

Starting in December 1991, the museum has staged a number of exhibits, lectures and special events to mark the war — visions of which are still etched in the minds of many here in the Columbus area.

The latest event planned by the museum staff is a special collection of original art dealing with people and events relating to World War II.

Twenty oil paintings and watercolors are hung in the museum's Woodruff Gallery of Military Art. For the most part, the paintings are done by artists who were working in the field a half century ago. Two of the paintings are contemporary and done by local artists. A portrait of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, by the late Wendell Taylor, is prominently featured in the exhibit.

Several of the paintings were commissioned by the publishers of Life magazine. These paintings were given to the federal government in appreciation for the government's support of Life correspondents during the war years.

Numerous distinguished American artists are featured in the exhibit. Works by Gladys Rockmore Davis, Aaron Bohrod, Robert Benney, Franklin Boggs, and H.V. Poor are among the artists represented.

Subjects of the paintings cover a broad spectrum of interests. The one common thread is World War II.

Of special interest to many infantrymen in the Columbus area are paintings that relate to the June 6 D-Day invasion of Europe. "Command Post on the Beach" by Manuel Bromberg, and "St. Lo" by Ogden Pleissner, both show the reality of war.

Regular visitors to the museum will realize that, in addition to this special collection of World War II art, military-related art can be found throughout the museum.

From European tapestries, to bronze, paintings and other statuary, the National Infantry Museum's collection is rich in its diversity.

The museum is much more than a collection of things painted Army green.

The special exhibit is scheduled to run through the end of December. The museum is open to the public seven days a week, Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m and Saturday and Sunday from 12:30 to 4:30 p.m.

The museum is closed for Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's Day, and it is also closed on federal holidays that fall on Monday. Call 545-2958 for more information or to schedule a tour.

Church groups, schools and veterans' groups are invited. Admission is free.

Hospital changes commanders

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Martin Army Community Hospital welcomed a new commander in a change of command ceremony March 26 in Infantry Hall's Marshall Auditorium.

Col. Michael J. Kussman took command from Col. Vernon C. Spaulding Jr. in the ceremony.

Kussman, 48, comes to the hospital from the Pentagon, where he served as director of the Division of Quality Assurance, Office of the Secretary of Defense, Health Affairs.

Spaulding will remain assigned to the hospital pending assignment instructions from the Department of the Army.

During the ceremony, Spaulding received an interim award Meritorious Service Medal with first oakleaf cluster pending approval of the Legion of Merit.

Spaulding's wife, Paula, received the Commander's Award for Public Service in recognition of her contributions of volunteer service and support.

Maj. Gen. Richard D. Cameron, commander of the U.S. Army Health Services Command in Fort Sam Houston, Texas, presented the awards as guest speaker at the ceremony.

Cameron highlighted the major accomplishments and activities of the hospital during Spaulding's command, saying Spaulding "did (his) duty well.."

That high standard, Cameron said, would be passed on to Kussman, "who will continue and improve upon that record of accomplishments."

Kussman said it was an honor for him to accept this position.

One of his goals when he left private practice to rejoin the Army was "to be commander of a hospital."

Ruth J. Spaller

Maj. Gen. Richard D. Cameron (left), Col. Vernon D. Spaulding and Paula R. Spaulding stand after the awards presentation at the ceremony.

"It is a wonderful feeling to be back in the real Army and to wear the Health Services Command patch again," he said.

Kussman is from Troy, N.Y. He graduated from Boston University's six-year program in liberal arts and medicine in 1968 and completed his internship and first-year internal medicine residency at Boston's New England Deaconess Hospital.

Kussman entered the Army in 1970 and first served as battalion surgeon with the 73rd Armored Battalion in the 7th Infantry Division in South Korea.

He then served as director of hospital clinics for Cutler Army Hospital at Fort Devens, Mass.

Kussman left the Army in 1972 to complete his training in internal medicine and worked at Boston's Joslin Clinic.

In 1979, after five years of private practice in internal medicine and endocrinology in Pittsfield, Mass., Kussman returned to active duty.

He has served in various medical assignments since renewing his Army career.

Kussman is a graduate of the Army War College and an honor graduate of the Command and General Staff College.

His awards include the Legion of Merit and Meritorious Service Medal with second oak leaf cluster, and he wears the Expert Field Medical Badge.

Kussman is a fellow of the American College of Physicians and a member of various medical associations.

Kussman and his wife, Virginia, have two children. Their son, Joshua, is a student at Williams College in Williamstown, Mass., and their daughter, Deane, is a high school senior.

Ethical behavior is mandatory

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Editor's note: Ethics is one of the bedrocks of our society. We in the federal government rank it alongside honor.

Without ethics there can be no trust. Yet everyday we ask the American public — the people we are sworn to defend — to trust us.

We ask them to trust us with the care of their sons and daughters. We ask them to trust us to be good stewards of their resources.

Without this trust, we cannot function. That is why it is imperative that all of us abide by a set of ethics.

This is the first in a series of five articles The Bayonet will publish explaining the new standards of ethical conduct for federal employees.

When one federal worker does something unethical, it can reflect on the entire federal government. That's why the military takes ethics seriously.

Conflicts of interest or the appearance of such conflicts are constantly reported on by the public media. These incidents are detrimental to military morale and cause a loss of effective military readiness.

Although these incidents are few, they violate a sacred trust placed in government personnel by the citizens of our country.

According to Field Manual 100-1, "The Army" (1981), the Army "must embrace a professional ethic that sets forth those values and principles of conduct that govern our behavior as a group and as individuals." Army Regulation 600-50, "Standards of Conduct for Department of the Army Personnel, (dated Jan. 28, 1988) also governs the ethical conduct of Army employees.

But now there are new rules to live by. New ethics rules, issued by the Office of Government Ethics, dictate ethical standards applying to federal employees.

The Office of Government Ethics has published the new "Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch," which became effective for all executive agencies, including the Department of Defense, in February.

The new standards replace the varied and inconsistent agency standard of conduct rules with a comprehensive single, executive-branchwide set of ethical rules that are objective, reasonable and enforceable.

The standards state that public service, be it military or civilian, is a public trust, requiring officers and employees to place loyalty to the Constitution, laws and ethical principles above private gain.

Former U.S. Solicitor General Archibald Cox said that codifying ethical standards serves three purposes:

- First, it shows clearly the values that are important to the institution and how they should be applied in given situations.
- Secondly, the codification reaffirms the values embodied in the standards.
- Third, the code helps to make up for human frailty by giving the individual guidance on what conduct is considered acceptable.

"Officers today face many pressures and temptations as they progress through a military career, not the least of which is the stress between personal advancement and upholding the public trust," said Col. Donald Morgan, post staff judge advocate.

"Government employment, as a public trust, requires loyalty to country, ethical principles of comportment, and adherence to law," said Bernard Pfeiffer, ethics counselor at the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate. "Government personnel may not use their positions for private gain in violation of law and regulatory constraints; doing so is adjudged a conflict of interest."

Recent Gallup Polls show that the American public has a great deal of confidence in the military —quite a lot more than in any other national institution; therefore the public relies on the military to conduct its work in a manner that meets the highest standards of ethical conduct.

"Personal actions must be above reproach in the handling of government resources, making decisions regarding the utilization of these resources, and in the expenditure of funds," Pfeiffer said. "Any action that gives the appearance of impropriety is viewed as seriously as if wrong doing had in fact taken place."

The new rules will be implemented within the DoD by a DoD regulation, the "Joint Ethics Regulation."

The regulation, which is being drafted by members of all the services to cover a broad range of employee conduct, will stress that all government workers share the responsibility for maintaining high ethical standards at all times.

(Next week's article will discuss accepting gifts or gratuities from outside sources.)

BOSS program designed for single soldiers

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

What started out just a few years ago as a recreational outlet is now a major force on post.

Better Opportunities For Single Soldiers stands dedicated to provide improved quality of life for single soldiers at Fort Benning, said Pfc. James Shoemaker, BOSS president.

What's more, he added, BOSS now has the power to back up its pledge.

"There really is no problem that we can't solve," Shoemaker said. "BOSS has 100 percent command support and the only thing left to do is spread the word that BOSS can truly make a difference in addressing concerns that single soldiers face."

BOSS also underwent organizational changes that helped establish it as a formal body with real power, such as appointing a president and BOSS representatives for every major subordinate command and the establishment of formalized BOSS council meetings.

"The BOSS subcouncil is made up of the unit-level BOSS representatives, whose duty is to interact with the single soldiers in their units and find out what kinds of problems single soldiers are facing," Shoemaker said. "The representatives must have been stationed on post for at least six months and have at least one year remaining. That way the representatives know what Fort Benning is like and have a genuine interest in addressing the concerns of single soldiers. Representatives are also chosen for their maturity and communication skills."

Shoemaker said that senior post leadership is involved at every level of the BOSS processes. The subcouncil meetings are chaired by the command sergeant major or commander of a major subordinate command. The post BOSS council meetings are chaired by the garrison sergeant major and include representatives from the Directorate of Community Activities, the Directorate of Public Works and the Army and Air Force Exchange Service.

"This is one of the really effective aspects of the way that BOSS works," said Shoemaker. "The key leadership, the ones who can actually solve problems, are there from the beginning to actually listen to and address the concerns of the council. If necessary, a problem can be taken all the way to the Commanding General's Advisory Council, but most are worked out at the lower levels."

Shoemaker said that BOSS is the vehicle for any issue that affects single soldiers on posts.

"Any concern, whether it's barracks and quality of life, recreation, entertainment or sporting activities, can be brought before BOSS. I urge all single soldiers to do their part by telling their unit BOSS representatives about their concerns."

Shoemaker said that soldiers with questions and concerns can also contact him at 545-7041 or 545-7215.

"The average soldier often doesn't know where to turn when he or she has a problem," he said. "BOSS is the way. BOSS has the power to be a force for positive change in the quality of life of single soldiers on post. All that remains is for them to let us know what they want."

Soldiers can also contact their unit BOSS representatives. Here are the representatives for each major subordinate command.

- Ranger Training Brigade: Sgt. Jimmy Burns and Pvt. 2 Mark Siebe.
- 11th Infantry Regiment: Spcs. Delena Phillips and Timothy Crumbley.
- 75th Ranger Regiment: Spcs. James Belin and Scott Smith.

changing the hours of a facility. Other things may require funds and need to be programmed five years in advance."

The concept of the Single Soldier Living Community program is to bring everyone together and develop a plan that will be more effective.

"As times change, leadership must respond and become more innovative," said Acebes. "We have taken the first step; and, in order for this program to succeed, there must be individual participation at the lowest single-soldier level. It's time for a change of attitude and for young single soldiers to become involved in their communities. The place for young single soldiers to start is by becoming active in the Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers program," said Acebes.

"BOSS isn't just a social club," said Pfc. James G. Shoemaker, BOSS Council president. "BOSS provides us the opportunity to get involved in self-government and take an active part in making our quality of life better."

Acebes and Pulley urge all single soldiers to start making a mental list of things they would like to see changed so if they get to participate in the survey they'll be ready and if not they can share their ideas with someone from their unit who does participate.

TRAINING:

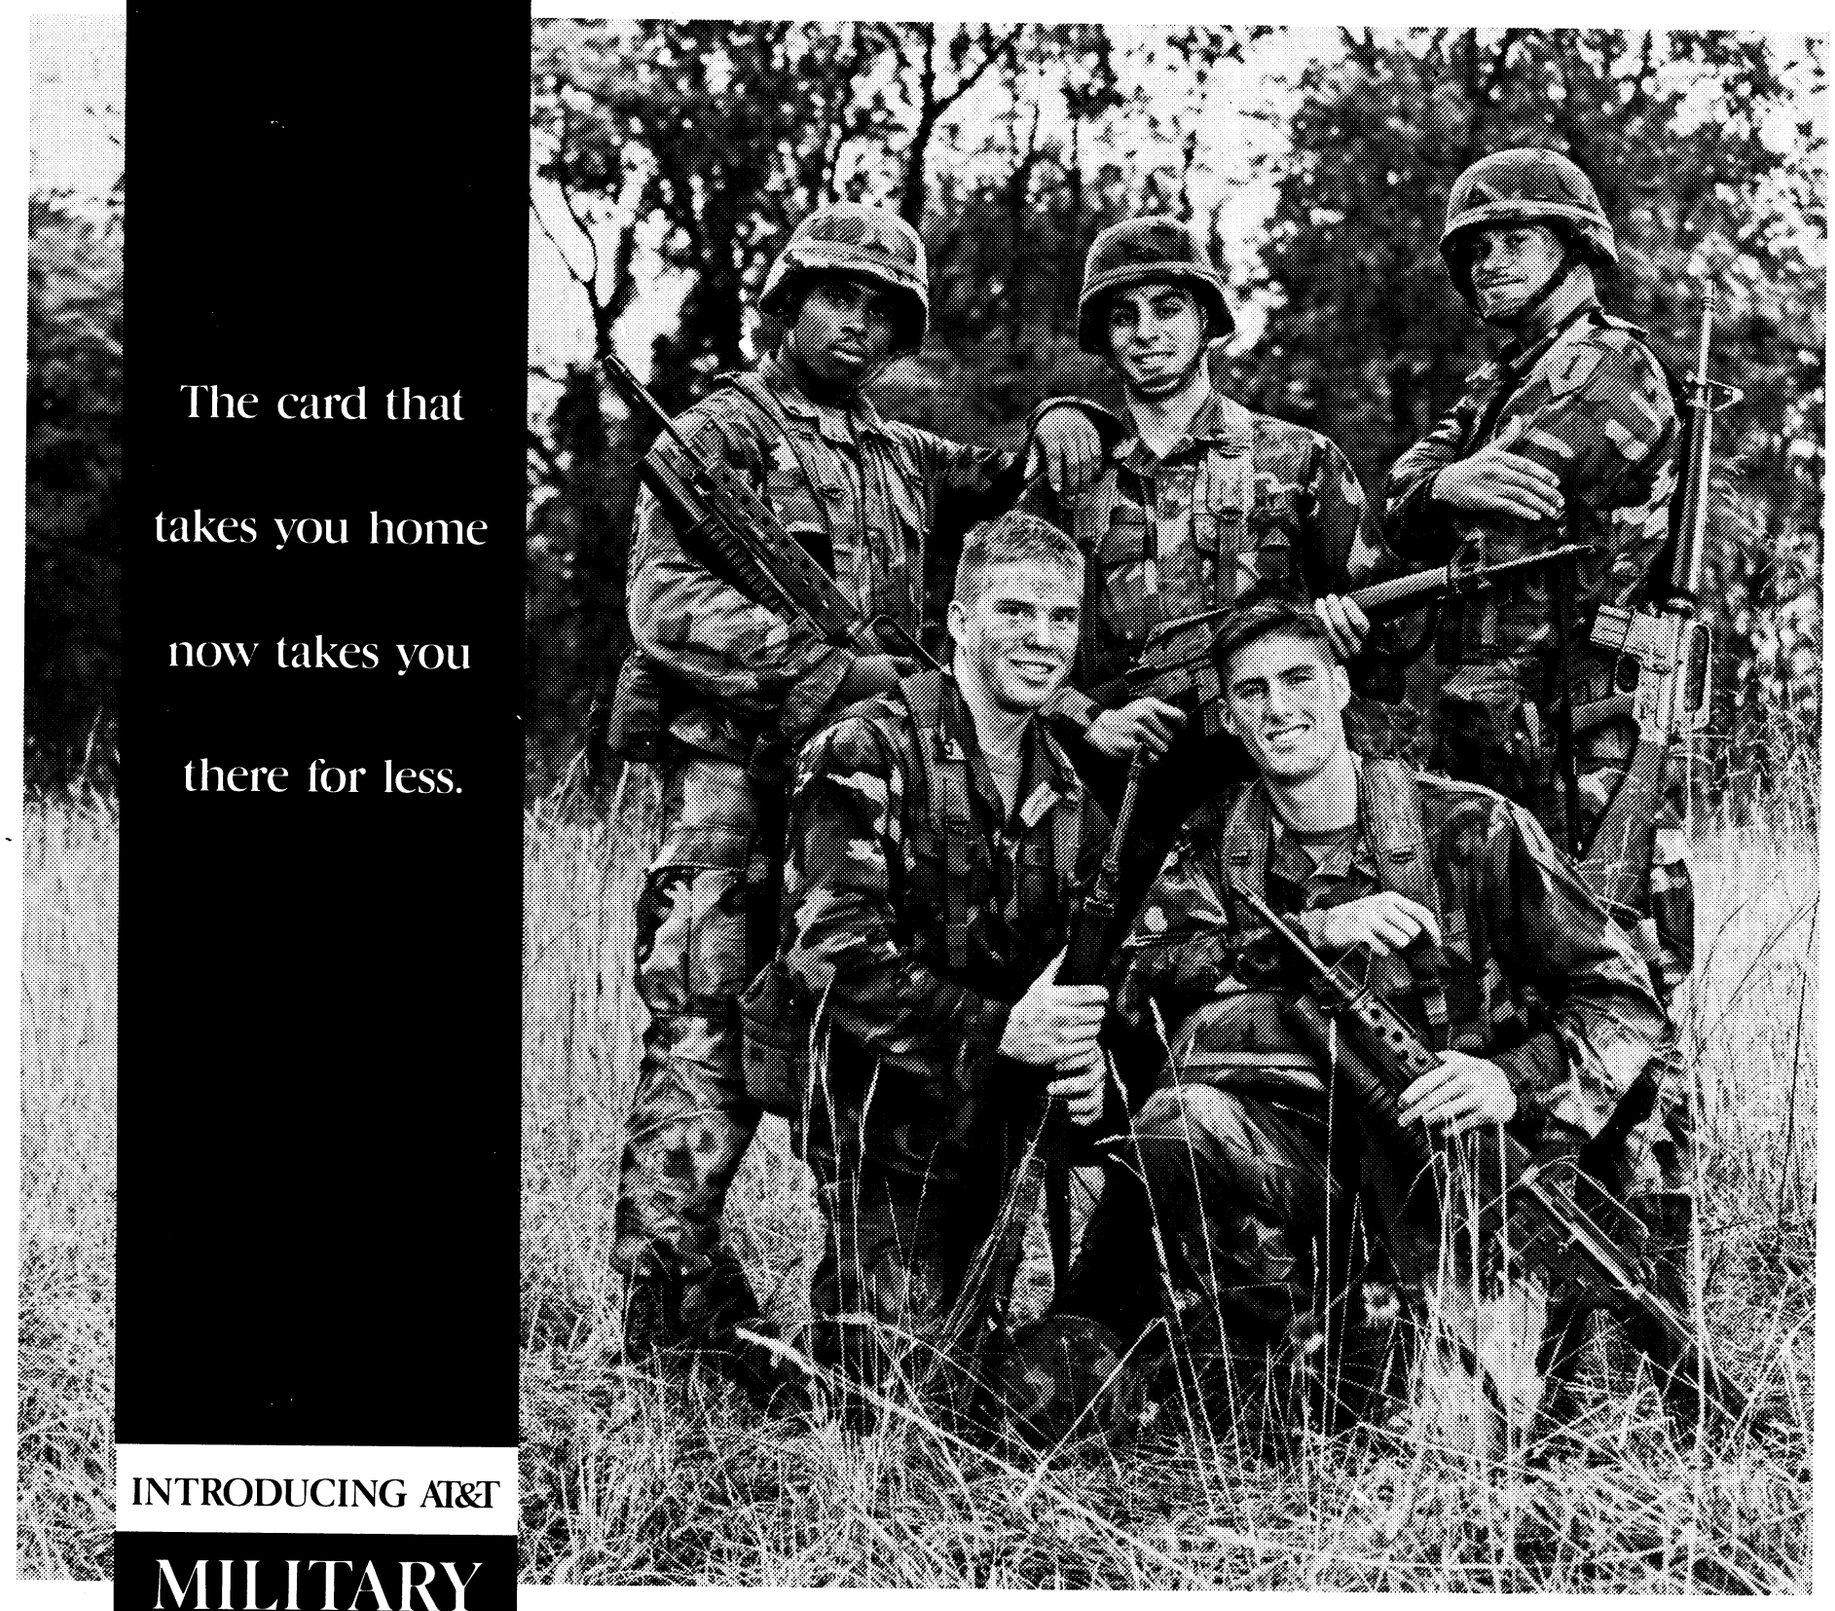
spelled out the commanders' responsibilities under the Federal Facilities Compliance Act and cited legal ramifications of environmental noncompliance.

Fines as high as $25,000 per violation per day can be assessed, payable by the installation and possibly the individual if it is determined willful negligence is involved, Pfeiffer said.

Over the course of the morning-long, hands-on training, commanders attended a series of stations in which subject matter experts pointed out common areas of noncompliance.



Stations included: spill prevention and contingency planning; proper storage of hazardous materials and waste in the motor pool; hazardous waste disposal procedures; protective equipment; and hazardous operations in the motor pool.

The final presentation demonstrated Emergency Response Operations and the deployment of the hazardous materials team by the Fort Benning Fire Department and soldiers of the 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt. Participants displayed proficiency in emergency response to a simulated hazardous material spill.

At the conclusion of the training, White applauded the 1st Bn., 29th Inf. for its support in hosting the event.

In his closing remarks, he urged commanders to set the standard and be the Army's leaders by developing their own environmental program.

Infantry Training Brigade begins volleyball season

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The U.S. Army Infantry Training Brigade volleyball season is under way. The following is a wrap up of the action at Santiago Fitness Center Tuesday evening.

3rd Battalion, 32nd Infantry Regiment, (Queen's Own), vs. 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment (The Rock)

The Rock took a pair from Queen's Own 15-10 and 15-7 to send Queen's Own home flat broke.

In game one, Queen's Own took an early lead at 7-5. The Rock, led by Dallas Hogan stormed back to take the lead at 9-8, then closed out the game on a kill by John Lizama at 15-10.

Hogan put the death nail in the coffin of Queen's Own, in game two with an early 8-0 run. Queen's Own tried to climb back into the match with Mike Mahan doing the damage with his serve. With the score 9-5, The Rock went on a 6-2 run to finish off Queen's Own 15-7.

30th Adjutant General's Battalion, Reception Station (Warriors) vs. 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment (The Bayonets)

The Bayonets took a hard-fought battle from the Warriors winning the match two games to one.

In game one, the Warriors looked strong in taking the early lead 7-5 on serves by Edwin Falcon, only to see The Bayonets charge back to go up 8-7. The Warriors tied the game at 9-9, then went on a 6-0 run to take game one 15-9.

Game two went to The Bayonets who charged out to an 8-1 lead on serves by James Beckman and net play by Paul Schubert and Raul Huerta.

A 7-1 run by the Bayonets put the game away, setting up the third and final game of the set.

Both teams started out a little slow with the serve changing sides often. The Bayonets took the first lead of the game at 7-3 on the net play of Beckman. The Warriors then scored seven unanswered points to take the lead at 10-7.

The Bayonets then ran off five points to go up 12-10. With the match at 13-13, The Bayonets went to match point at 14-13, then went on to win the game 15-13, and take the match 2-1.

Installation pond offers good fishin'

By Kevin McIver
USAIC Public Affairs Office

COMMENTARY

It's time to head out to one of the best fishin' spots on Fort Benning. King's Pond offers anglers excellent bass, crappie and perch fishing within a 15-minute drive of Main Post.

As the water temperature reaches between 62 and 65 degrees, the largemouth bass will begin to spawn. The male bass cleans out the nest about 20 inches in diameter and six inches deep.

Nesting usually occurs within seven to eight feet off the shore in 12 to 36 inches of water. The nests are never close together, but are separated by a distance of 20 feet or more. When the nest is competed, the male bass entices a female to spawn.

Female bass usually lay only a few hundred eggs at a time, which are fertilized by the male. The male largemouth guards the nest during incubation and for a short time after the young emerge from the eggs.

The eggs usually hatch within a period of a week to 10 days depending on water temperature. Bass fry remains on the nest until the yolk sac has been absorbed, after which they spawn.

Although fishing may be slow during spawning, it quickly picks up again during the post-spawn period. Anglers attempting to catch a lunker-head largemouth should go "low and slow" during the post-spawn.

This consists of using a lure that will force the bass to strike as it guards the nest. Many different lures will work. Among some of the favorites are plastic worms rigged "Carolina" style or "Sluggo" type baits. Another good lure to use is a spinner bait or pig 'n' jig fished near the bottom. This will force the bass to strike as the nest is threatened.

As the spawning ends, many other lures will work. The all-time favorite at King's Pond is definitely a Rapala Rattle n' Rap or Rattlin' Trap. I have seen more bass caught at King's Pond with this type of lure than any other. My preferred size and color selection is a half-ounce blue and silver minnow scheme.

These lures should be retrieved very fast as they contain metal BB shots inside, and the rattle sound they make will entice a bass to strike even in murky water conditions.

Be careful with any type of crankbait used at King's Pond as the bottom is full of stumps and many an angler has lost a Rattlin' Trap. Using 10-pound or above fishing line will significantly cut down your chances of getting snagged.

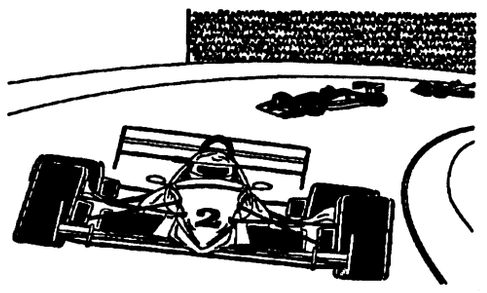
King's Pond, in addition to excellent bass fishing, also offers great crappie and perch fishing. Using the time-tested method of fishing with a hook and bobber rigged with a cricket or worm will surely fill your creel. Remember live minnows can't be used in any named pond on Fort Benning. So you bait fishermen that have been testing the system at King's Pond it's time to stop.

Also let's keep King's Pond clean. It was recently cleaned up and let's keep it that way. Good luck and see you at the fishin' hole.

Driver plans to double up at Talladega May 1, 2

Talladega Super Speedway

TALLADEGA, Ala. — Jeff Purvis, who won the Daytona ARCA 200 with relative ease, then failed to make the field for the Daytona 500, hopes to even things up a little when he comes to Talladega the first weekend in May. Purvis has indicated that he plans to enter both the Poulan Pro 500K May 1, and the Winston 500 May 2, at Talladega Superspeedway.



The Clarksville, Tenn., native will drive the same car that he guided to victory in Daytona's ARCA 200. It is the former Morgan-McClure Chevrolet that Ernie Irvan drove when he won the DieHard 500 NASCAR Winston Cup race at Talladega last July. The car is owned by James Finch.

Purvis qualified at 187.645 mph, nearly two miles an hour faster than his front row companion, Loy Allen Jr., in the Hooters Ford. Purvis lead 71 of the 80 laps and was never seriously threatened.

"I'd never think that racing is easy, but when the car drives that good and the crew makes sure that nothing breaks on the car all day long, then it isn't quite as difficult as it usually is," said Purvis.

Purvis now looks to Talladega, and the Poulan Pro 500K and will be the early favorite to take the checkered flag on May 1.

"We are looking for a sponsor. We are hoping that our Daytona win will attract someone," said Purvis, whose car carried the Phoenix Construction Company name in Daytona. The company is owned by car-owner James Finch.

Purvis also has an experienced crew, headed by new crew chief Gary Balough.

In his last ARCA race at Talladega, Purvis finished third in the 1992 Poulan Pro 500K. His best-ever finish, however, was second in the ARCA 500K in July of 1990.

His lone Winston Cup run at Talladega was the Winston 500 two years ago, when he started 39th and finished 30th, breaking a hub less than halfway into the race. Purvis wasn't attempting to run both races that weekend, however, so this will be a new experience for him.

"We didn't make it into the Daytona 500. We got caught up in an incident in the Gatorade qualifying race, and our qualifying speed wasn't quick enough to grab one of the remaining spots," said Purvis. "We hope to fare a lot better at Talladega in May."

Purvis drives Talladega well and hopes that will help him in qualifying for the Winston 500. His Winston 500 car will also be a Chevrolet, and it, too, is owned by James Finch, who is building a new shop in Panama City, Fla. It will not be the same car that he tried to qualify at Daytona in February.

"We are currently in sponsor negotiations for our Winston Cup program and hope to be able to announce something soon," said Purvis. "Hopefully, we'll be a lot more competitive at Talladega." Purvis' first order of business at Talladega will be the Poulan Pro 500K. It is the second part of Super Saturday, closely following the Dodge International Race of Champions, which begins at noon.

All of the main grandstands at Talladega will be general admission on Super Saturday, but those wishing to get their tickets ahead of time may purchase reserved seating in the Anniston, Birmingham and O.V. Hill towers. Visa, Mastercard and Discover Card are accepted as payment for tickets purchased in advance. For details and seat selection, call the speedway ticket office at (205) 362-9064.

The Sightseeing Road Chapel Youth Choir sings a selection.

Basic trainees get the 'gospel'

By Jacqueline Feagin
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Choirs from Fort Benning, Phenix City and Columbus sang at a gospel festival on Sand Hill March 21.

Basic training units from the Infantry Training Brigade filled the theater. Trainees of all faiths and backgrounds stood and joined in the singing of the Gospel.

The choirs came from the surrounding area to "praise the Lord through song" said Chaplain (Maj.) Robert Cox of 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry.

Denise Daniels, Miss Columbus 1992, shared her thoughts with the audience on what it is like to be a witness for the Lord.

"Don't think about your dreams and goals without Jesus Christ," she said.

The Youth Choir from Sightseeing Road Chapel, directed by Jerry Edwards and Dante Wimberly, began the program.

Friendship Baptist Church Friendship Youth Organization Choir directed by Jacqueline Esters, Prayer and Faith Temple Church of God and Christ directed by Warren K. Brown Jr., Sightseeing Road Gospel Choir directed by Winnie Wimberly, and the Christian Fellowship Choir also performed.

Passover Seder tells Exodus story

By Arthur Rutberg
USAIC Chaplains' Office

"And you shall tell your child on that day, 'This is because of what the Lord did for me when I went forth from Egypt.'" (Exodus 13).

In every generation, Jews must look upon themselves as if they went forth from Egypt. Every year, on the first day of Passover in Jewish homes and synagogues around the world, children ask, "Why is this night different from all others?" Parents answer by telling their child that we were slaves to Pharaoh in Egypt until the Lord our God redeemed us and led us into the promised land of Israel.

The telling of the story of Passover takes place through an elaborate ceremonial meal filled with prayers and songs, rituals and symbols called the Seder (pronounced Say-der).

The text and guidebook for the Seder is called the Hagaddah coming from a Hebrew word meaning to tell. The major purpose of the Passover Seder is to tell the story of the Exodus from Egyptian slavery.

To enable us to feel some of the lowliness of being a slave, we eat only the bread of poverty. This is matza, bread that has not been allowed to rise, bread that is unleavened.

In fact, for the entire seven days of Passover we must eat only unleavened bread. (Exodus 13). It is the pride and boastfulness of risen dough that must be avoided to feel some of the deprivation of slavery.

We need not look only into our past to gain a sense of the oppression of slavery. While we are trying to feel like slaves in Egypt, we remind ourselves that there are Jews in the world today who still suffer a form of enslavement and oppression.

We always call to mind the Jews of Ethiopia, Syria and Iraq who are trapped, persecuted and oppressed. They are not free to practice their religion. They cannot have a Passover Seder. Many families leave an empty chair at their Seder table to symbolize those Jews who are not yet free.

The Passover Seder looks to the future as well. In addition to the four cups of wine we drink at the Seder, a fifth cup is poured but left untouched. We pour it for Elijah the prophet, hoping he will return and share in our Seder.

Ever since Malachi wrote about Elijah's return before the day of the Lord, we view Elijah as the one who will herald the coming of the Messiah.

Elijah will usher in the Messianic time when there will be no more war, no more bloodshed and no more slavery. In the days of the Messiah, all of humanity will be redeemed and free from oppression, discrimination and persecution.

The Passover Seder looks back to that critical moment when God redeemed the Jewish people. It looks around to show us that we are not yet free from slavery and persecution. And it looks ahead to the time of the Messiah when all people shall know true and lasting peace and freedom. On that day, every person shall sit under their vine and fig tree and no one shall make them afraid. May that day come speedily and in our days.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Rick Parker
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: Back in December and January, we saw two potential candidates for attorney general of the United States get dropped from consideration because they didn't comply with the tax laws when they used housekeepers.

Ever since then, I've been hearing that you might even have to pay Social Security taxes and the like on baby sitters. What is behind all the stories I hear about having to do payroll taxes on baby sitters?

A: Most of us working stiffs are fairly well acquainted with the deductions taken out of our checks each month: income taxes, Federal Insurance Contributions Act or FICA, Medicare and the like.

Our employers do all this for us. They pay one-half of the 15.2 percent FICA tax (we pay the other half), federal unemployment tax and report all this to the government on a periodic basis.

Although most of us do not run businesses, we sometimes hire other people to do work in our homes, such as butlers, caretakers, drivers, gardeners, housekeepers, maids, and yes, even baby sitters.

There comes a point in time when our hiring of these workers rises to a level that the law treats us like regular employers and requires us to take on some of the payroll tax nightmare.

The Federal Insurance Contributions Act is a federal law that requires you to possibly pay Social Security and Medicare taxes on a household employee's cash wages of $50 or more in a calendar quarter.

If the employee wants and you agree, you have to withhold federal income taxes on those wages as well.

To be subject to these requirements, two conditions must be met: first, the person must be your "employee," and second, you must have paid at least $50 to the person during a calendar quarter for the work performed.

The question of whether a person is an "employee" is somewhat tricky at times, but generally, a person is your employee if you have control and direction over the way in which they perform their work and what work they perform.

An additional factor is whether you provide the tools and equipment used in doing the job. Thus, a baby sitter is usually going to be your employee because you, as the parent, tell them the things you want them to do with and for your child.

An exception to this would be where you get a household worker or baby sitter through an agency if the agency retains control over who does the work and how it is performed.

However, if the agency merely provides a list of possible workers for you to choose from and does not regulate the hours of work, collect the pay, or control the manner of work, the worker you choose may be your employee.

So, do you need to worry? These days, a good baby sitter gets paid pretty well, and it wouldn't take too many nights out on the town to get to the $50 level.

The only answer is to find two or three good sitters (the number depending on how much you go out) and spread the wealth during each calendar quarter.

If you have questions concerning your responsibilities as a household employer, contact the Legal Assistance Division for an appointment.

The telephone number is 545-3281 or 545-3282, and the office is located in Building 5, corner of Vibbert and Sigerfoos.

Some fast food low in fat

General Mills

Fast food — it appeals to our busy lifestyles as well as our taste buds.

By making wise menu choices, fast food can also fit into a low-fat eating plan says Mary Helen Gunkler, a registered dietitian and nutritionist.

She offers these tips:

• Opt for a one-burger sandwich with vegetable accompaniments. Or check the menu for special burgers that are lower in fat.

• Choose meats that are roasted, broiled or grilled rather than fried. Good bets are roast beef and grilled skinless chicken.

• Order a main dish salad with reduced-calorie dressing. At the salad bar, concentrate on the fresh vegetables rather than the higher-calorie macaroni salads, which are traditionally made with rich mayonnaise-type dressings. Go easy on other high-fat items often available on salad bars, such as cheese, nuts and seeds.

• Instead of higher-fat french fries or onion rings, order a plain baked potato with your meal. When you just can't resist fries, request a small order — and split it with a friend.

• Ask for a glass of skim milk, orange juice or water instead of a malt or shake.

• Choose a dessert of nonfat frozen yogurt or ice milk, moderate in size.

Many fast-food restaurant chains have responded to changing tastes by including lighter choices on their menus.

These choices plus your own wise selections can provide for healthful eating at fast food restaurants, concludes Gunkler.

How to size up service contracts

Better Business Bureau

If there's a new car in your future, the car dealer also may try to sell you an auto service contract to help protect your new investment.

But, the Better Business Bureau recommends, in order to protect yourself, get all the facts first.

Auto service contracts are sold by car dealerships, but may be backed by an auto manufacturer, an insurance company, an independent service contractor or the dealer.

Although an auto service contract may be referred to as an "extended warranty," it is not. A warranty comes with a new car and is included in the original price.

A service contract may be arranged at any time and always costs extra.

Therefore, compare the terms of the service contract with the manufacturer's warranty to be sure you are not paying for coverage you already have. And, carefully consider if the contract provides the coverage you want at a cost that is in proportion to the likelihood of repairs.

The price of the service contract is based on the car make, model, condition, what is covered and the length of the contract.

In addition to the initial charge, you may be required to pay another fee, called a deductible, each time your car is serviced or repaired.

Some service contracts charge one deductible per visit for all repairs, no matter how many, while others require you to pay a deductible for each unrelated repair.

When your car needs to be repaired or serviced, you may be able to choose among several service dealers or authorized repair centers.

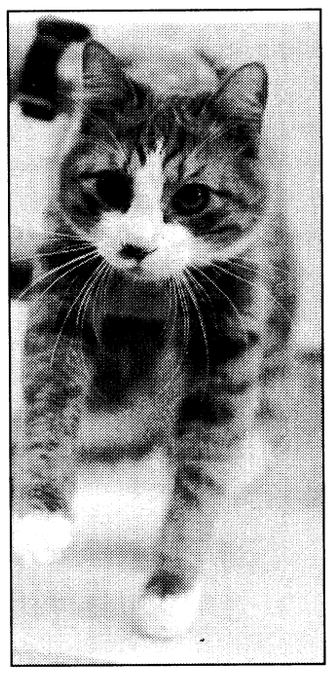
Or, your contract may require that you return the vehicle to the purchasing dealer for service — an inconvenience if you bought your car in another town.

A service contract should state exactly what it covers or excludes from coverage and for what period of time.

Few auto service contracts cover all repairs and maintenance. Also, the contract may require you to follow all of the manufacturer's recommendations for routine maintenance, such as getting periodic oil changes or tune-ups, and keeping detailed records.

Failure to do so could void the contract.

If the contract lasts longer than you expect to own the car, find out if it can be transferred when you sell the car or if a shorter contract is available.



Also, shop around to compare coverage and price because insurance companies, not just dealers offer service contracts.

Be sure to contact the Better Business Bureau for reliability reports on the company that backs the contract.

CRIME WATCH

The Military Police Activity's crime watch column will resume next week.

PET OF THE WEEK

This frisky feline is an orange and white domestic long hair who is looking for a home. He is approximately 8 months old.

For more information, contact the Veterinary Services Office in Building 265 at 545-1127.

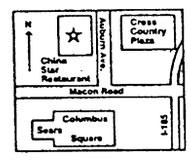
Hours are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:30 a.m. and 12:45 to 3 p.m.

The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

If you have lost a pet, check the stray impoundment facility in Building 263.

Animal Control on post is a division of the Military Police Activity. An officer will pick up strays and take them to the impoundment facility.

Stray pets are given three working days to be claimed from the the time they are picked up by animal control personnel. If the pets are not claimed, they become government property and may be adopted or destroyed.



Rabies tags are important, too, because it is the only way that Veterinary Services can contact the owner.

Pet owners should register their pets and update their records when changes occur.

Panel reviews Army items

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

A portable individual shower unit and inconspicuous body armor were just two of many items reviewed at the Soldier Enhancement Conference March 15 to 18.

During the conference, a panel of Army leaders from around the world reviewed nearly 200 different equipment proposals designed to improve the lethality and survivability of soldiers.

The panel then decided which proposals should be forwarded to the commandant, U.S. Army Infantry School, for approval. After approval by the commandant, the list will be forwarded to Training and Doctrine Command for review and final approval for submission to the Department of the Army for funding.

The four-day conference, which is annually, is part of the Soldier Enhancement Program established first by the Infantry School and now operated under the auspices of TRADOC System Manager Soldier Systems.

"The Soldier Enhancement Program is a program to accelerate the fielding of items that will enhance the combat effectiveness of foot soldiers and small units by providing lighter and more lethal weapons and by lightening the soldier's load and improving the soldier's quality of life in the field," said Richard F. Wright, deputy TSM.

Richard Brill

Lt. Col. James Cambron of the Armament, Munitions and Chemical Command demonstrates a pair of binoculars.

Wright said that only commercially available items that can be used as is or easily modified for military use are considered under the program.

"We are looking for items that can be fielded quickly," said Wright. "We don't consider equipment that is still on the drawing board."

During the year, TSM personnel canvass Army combat units, commanders, schools and other organizations for proposal ideas. The culmination of this effort is the annual Soldier Enhancement Conference.

During the conference, the executive body decided which old projects held over from last year should be continued and reviewed with all of the new projects. Each project was represented by a spokesperson from his particular research and development center. Each spokesperson was given 10 minutes to brief the panel on the technological feasibility of each proposal.

Wright said that the program has had numerous success stories.

"Many items that are in the Army inventory today are there as a result of the program, including the M-4 carbine, the night sight for the M-24 sniper weapon, the common night sight mount, the intermediate cold/wet glove, laser/ballistic eye protection and the soldier crew tent," Wright said. "The program was also responsible for the adoption of many of the items used in Operation Desert Storm, including flameless ration heaters, desert combat boots, sun wind and dust goggles and desert battle dress uniforms."

WORLD WAR II— A LOOK BACK

50 years ago this week ...

• In North Africa, Allied forces, commanded by Britain's Field Marshall Bernard Montgomery, took advantage of the void in Axis armor support created by Gen. George S. Patton's attacks to the north around El Guettar, assaulting enemy positions along the Wadi Akarit Line in Tunisia. The 4th Infantry Division successfully initiated the offensive, progressing against primarily Italian Infantry forces at Djebel Fatnassa. A poorly coordinated Allied advance temporarily stumbled at the hands of the remaining German Panzer reserves, allowing Axis forces to fall back to a defensive line at Enfidaville.

• Also in Tunisia, American patrols sent from Patton's corps in the north successfully reached advance units from the British Eighth Army heading for Gasfa.

• In the Solomon Islands, Adm. Isoroku Yamamoto dispatched most of the planes and experienced pilots from the carriers Zuikaku, Hiyo, Junyo, and Shokaku to reinforce Japan's 11th Air Fleet in Rabaul, Kavieng, and Buin, in preparation for the upcoming major air offensive against Allied positions on Guadalcanal and Tulagi.

• The Royal Air Force removed U-boat bases from its priority list, acknowledging that a disproportionate amount of time and resources had been devoted to these missions in relation to the considerable demands of the air campaign against Germany.

• On Fort Benning, Lt. Gen. Jacob L. Devers inspected the 10th Armored Division's equipment and observed its training regimen.

Family members, drills share views

By Robert L. Cox
2nd Battalion, 58th infantry Regiment

A drill sergeant and spouse seminar was conducted recently by the 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment. The focus of the seminar was stress reduction and communication improvement within the battalion and within the family.

The seminar started with an introduction by Battalion Commander Lt. Col. Bruce D. Grant, who welcomed the participants and explained the purpose of the sessions, "to foster communication and the sharing of professionalism among the cadre."

He said the sessions were also intended to "bond" the battalion by allowing the drill sergeants and spouses to get to know those from other companies.

For the first hour of the sessions, the group was divided, with the spouses discussing stress factors and how to manage stress, while the drill sergeants discussed their duties, perceptions and methods of training.

Facilitators for the spouses' session were Sgt. Gerald Denson, Spc. Corey Bennett and Pfc. Matthew Lyons of Community Mental Health, 30th Adjutant General (Reception) Battalion, who identified common stressors and encouraged the participants to talk about them.

Two major stress factors the spouses agreed on were, "not being kept informed of the schedule during the training cycle and the drill sergeants' lack of quality time with the children."

The drill sergeants' group, led by Grant, was an open forum dealing with issues including frequency of staff duty, last-minute changes, commitments from higher headquarters and room to do their jobs as noncommissioned officers.

The groups then switched topics, with the drill sergeants discussing their stress factors and the spouses brainstorming ideas to, as Grant said, "bond the battalion and spark participation."

After lunch, the groups combined for an afternoon session titled, "Characteristics of a healthy family." The session included a skit that generated a lively discussion. The final event was a question-and-answer period led by Grant. Another battalion seminar has been scheduled for July.

Students pledge to fight litter

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet Staff Writer

The grounds of Fort Benning may begin to look a lot cleaner.

Students at each of the eight schools took an anti-litter pledge Monday.

The anti-litter pledge was designed by the Combined Communities of Southeast Columbus, the Keep Columbus Beautiful Commission and various community agencies.

Teachers discussed the importance of awareness of the environment and the responsibility as citizens to promote a clean, litter-free environment.

"All of the students in Fort Benning's eight schools are involved in a science curriculum," said Dr. Beth Middlemiss, director of Staff Development and Public Relations.

"Part of that curriculum is to look at the Earth and environment around them. This anti-litter pledge fits right in," she said.

At Herbert J. Dexter Elementary School, Lonnie Jackson, founder and director of the Combined Communities of Southeast Columbus, was the guest speaker for the day.

"I want to thank Fort Benning for its outstanding assistance to our project," said Jackson.

"It sets an example for others to emulate, and we are very proud of them (the schools)," he said.

"It is a pleasure that Dexter students have the opportunity to keep their environment clean," said Glenn Hughes, assistant principal of Dexter.

This marks the second year that Fort Benning students have participated in the pledge.

April focuses on prevention

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

"We need to ensure that home is more than just a shelter. It is the primary place where children need a healthy, stable, supportive atmosphere in order to thrive educationally, emotionally and physically."

Becky Welch, Fort Benning Family Advocacy Program manager, said this in regard to the celebration of April as Child Abuse Prevention Month.

The national theme this year is "Partners in Prevention," and in support of this, the Family Advocacy Program has selected an additional theme for military families, "Safe at Home."

According to Welch, many people think of child abuse as physical violence, but the tragedy of the problem covers a much wider range of abnormal behavior.

The Family Advocacy Program classifies child abuse or neglect as follows:

• Physical abuse: nonaccidental injury such as severe beatings, burns or bruises

• Neglect: the failure to provide a child with the basic necessities of life such as food, shelter, clothing and medical care

• Emotional abuse: excessive, aggressive or other parental behavior that places unreasonable demands on a child to perform above his or her capabilities

• Sexual abuse: any molestation of a child by means of force, trickery or bribery for the sexual gratification of an adult.

Throughout the month of April, Family Advocacy will be distributing free promotional materials from the office in Soldiers' Plaza, Building 2643 to increase awareness of its child abuse prevention efforts.

The materials will include T-shirts, kickballs, totebags, visors, sports water bottles, etc.

"We want to be known as a helping agency before problems get out of hand, " Welch said. "To do this, parents and educators need to know where we are and the referral resources that are available."

Prevention is the key, she noted. Everyone feels stressed or lonely at one time or another. For those who feel they may be especially at risk for taking their frustrations out on their children, Welch recommended seeking help early.

For example, the Chaplains Family Life Center is just one resource that does confidential counseling that might prevent a future situation that if reported could affect a soldier's career.

Promotional materials will also be handed out at the Riverside Easter Egg Hunt April 10. Clem Clown will be there creating balloon toys for children too.

How serious is the child abuse problem?

Welch said that more than 2 million cases of child abuse and neglect were reported last year, but authorities agree that many more cases are unreported. It is estimated that:

• About 5,000 children die each year as a direct result of child abuse. Children under age 2 years have the highest risk factor for death from child abuse and/or neglect.

• Child sexual abuse of both young girls and boys is being reported at an alarming rate. The Federal Bureau of Investigation states that one in four girls will be sexually abused before they reach the age of 18, and one in eight boys will be molested before they reach the age of 18.

The warning signs of child abuse include many factors. Welch said it's usually a combination of clues that tell the tale:

• welts or other skin injuries

• dirty or inappropriate clothes for the weather

• extremes of behavior

• seems unduly afraid of parents

• is often tired and without energy

• is consistently unpleasant and hard to get along with or overly demanding and always a source of trouble

• is habitually absent from or late to school because the parent waits for physical evidence of abuse to disappear.

Welch admitted there is no way to guarantee that your child will never fall victim to abuse by someone else, but there are some simple guidelines:

• Carefully evaluate child care facilities before enrolling your child, and make sure you have access at all times. Parent participation in the child care program should be encouraged.

• Be careful when selecting adults or teens to care for your child. Interview them and talk to others who know or have employed them. Let your child help you decide about them.

Connie Bridges/Special to The Bayonet

Becky Welch (right) gives promotional materials to Wendy Marotta on Child Abuse Prevention Month.

• Have regular talks with your child. Build trust. Help your child to know that it is all right to tell you when something is wrong.

The long-range effects of child abuse on the child and family can be devastating and far-reaching.

Welch said that the victim who escapes death from child abuse may later suffer impairment of growth and development, medical problems, psychiatric disorders, school failure, drug and alcohol abuse and even suicidal behavior. Long-range effects are especially prevalent among those who suffered from emotional abuse. The violence and instability of the home places great stress on family members and often the family unit is destroyed if help is not sought.

If a child tells of abuse or if abuse is suspected, don't ignore or belittle what you have been told. Report the information to the police or child protective services, and don't allow the child to return to the abusive situation.

No definite proof is required to make a report. You will not be held criminally liable if your report was made in good faith without malice toward the people you are reporting about.

An abusive parent can find help and prevent the cycle of child abuse from repeating itself.

Faith, Dexter teams win 'Odyssey of the Mind ' competition

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

The teams from Don C. Faith Middle School and Herbert J. Dexter Elementary School won their divisions in the district Southwest Regional Odyssey of the Mind meet Saturday at Shaw High School in Columbus, according to Dr. Beth Middlemiss, director of Staff Development for the Fort Benning Schools.

Both will go on to participate in the state event to take place April 17 at Warner Robins, Ga. If they're successful there, the next step would be the world competition in June.

Middlemiss said that in the seven years that Faith has been participating in Odyssey of the Mind competitions, it has had a history of placing well. Last year, the Faith team won the world competition.

Georgia schools have been involved in Odyssey of the Mind for 10 years of the 15-year-old event which challenges students to do creative thinking.

Besides taking first place in all three categories judged for Division II, the Faith team of all eighth graders was given the Renatra Fusca Award for creativity in their imaginative use of everyday materials to create scenery and props.

According to Faith coaches Cindy Givens and Libbie Kurinec, the competitions involve a long-term problem that is worked on prior to the event with this year's theme being, "Folktales," and calling for creating and performing an original tale.

Then at the competition, an unknown spontaneous problem, verbal or technical, is presented to the team, and each must respond to it.

In Division I, the Dexter School team won first place in the Folktales problem and the Renatra Fusca Award for their creative use of puns and integration of computer terminology into their tale.

Coaches for Dexter are Marge Brasfield and Kathryn Van Horn.

Middlemiss noted that this year five of the post's schools took part in the district meet at Shaw. They were teams from Edward A. White School, William H. Wilbur School, Richard G. Wilson School, Dexter and Faith.

How does a team prepare for the spontaneous problems that are thrown at them during the events? Kurinec said that there are practice books that can be used, and then they make up their own questions.

Givens noted that they teach the students to listen to the whole question and not to give just literal answers, but creative ones. That's how they add up the points.

Fair focuses on nutrition

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet Staff Writer

The Nutrition Care Division of Martin Army Community Hospital hosted a nutrition fair March 25 to recognize National Nutrition Month.

The University of Georgia Cooperative Extension Service of Columbus was also present promoting the new "Food Guide Pyramid."

The pyramid, developed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the Food Marketing Institute, is a new system of assessing dietary guidelines for a healthy lifestyle that goes beyond the old four basic food groups, said 2nd Lt. Sarah Van Eden, outpatient dietician for the hospital.

Van Eden organized the nutrition fair and many other activities this month for nutrition.

"We are here to give people information and to answer any questions they have on nutrition and their diet," said Van Eden.

The pyramid emphasizes foods from the five major groups. The pyramid, from top to bottom suggests:

- Use fats, oils and sweets sparingly.
- Eat two to three servings of milk, yogurt or cheese products a day.
- Eat two to three servings of meat, poultry, fish, dry beans, eggs or nuts a day.
- Eat three to five servings of vegetables a day.
- Eat two to four servings of fruits a day.
- Eat six to 11 servings of bread, cereal, rice or pasta a day.

EAT RIGHT AMERICA

"The Food Guide Pyramid started last October," said Miranda K. Smith from UGA's Cooperative Extension Service. "It's going to be in our school system and everywhere."

The Nutrition Care Division has classes available in its clinic for people who want to improve their health, said Van Eden.

The following is a list of classes available at the hospital:

- Cholesterol or fat-controlled diet
- Weight control
- Diabetes diet
- Prenatal diet

Quiz tests women's history knowledge

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Members of the Fort Benning community tested their knowledge of women in a trivia game sponsored by the Equal Opportunity Office March 26.

The game, whose format was based on "Jeopardy," was in honor of Women's History Month. It involved master of ceremonies Sgt. 1st Class Richard Alltop reading clues to contestants, with the first contestant buzzing in given the chance to answer.

Contestants vied to identify, from clues given, women involved in literature, sports, science, the military and politics.

Sgt. 1st Class Hazel Hughes of Equal Opportunity said the contest was a way for people to have fun and learn more about women's achievements.

The winner of the trivia contest was Staff Sgt. Mike Legler, who was awarded a $25 gift certificate from the Army and Air Force Exchange Service.

The 'True Story' of Princess Diana is

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

From the probable view of the monarchy of Great Britain, this has been an American TV season to forget, and it's not over yet.

SPOTLIGHT

Thus far, the marital woes that have escalated international interest in Buckingham Palace have fueled three network dramas and a syndicated "reality" special ... not to mention tabloid shows that have thrived on each new wrinkle in the domestic trials and tribulations of Diana, the Princess of Wales and Sarah (a.k.a. "Fergie"), the Duchess of York.

Last year, the situation made a worldwide best-seller of Andrew Morton's book "Diana: Her True Story," which comes to U.S. television as an NBC miniseries airing Sunday and Monday. (The program already has aired in England, where it was filmed in part, and where it accrued huge ratings and numerous barbs from bemused critics.) Former model Serena Scott Thomas plays Diana, with David Threlfall -- who earned wide attention for his portrayal of Smike in the Royal Shakespeare Company's production of "The Life and Adventures of Nicholas Nickleby," and also has appeared in two PBS "Masterpiece Theatre" presentations as John Mortimer's semi-hero Leslie Titmuss -- as Prince Charles.

With the huge response "Diana: Her True Story" generated in print form, as evidenced both by sales and reviews, Morton insists it "isn't racy gossip, because there have been dozens of books written about the Royal Family, and many written about the Princess of Wales. The reason this book has been taken seriously -- not just in America, but also by a very skeptical British establishment — is the very fact that it is authentic. The people who spoke to me are demonstrably friends and family of the Princess, and they did not just run for the hills when the book came out, but stood by its integrity."

What: 'Diana: Her True Story'
When: Sunday and Monday, 9 p.m. on ABC

Morton explains he didn't attempt to investigate Charles' side of the story because "The whole purpose of the book was to write her true story, from her perspective ... not just of her marriage, but of her childhood, her teen-age years and so on. Prince Charles has his true story to tell, and it will be a very different one than his wife's. Whether his friends would actually stand up and be counted in the way that Diana's friends were is another question."

Even though he wasn't able to read the book before it arrived in stores, producer Martin Poll went ahead and bought the film rights anyway, having learned of the early "heat" that was surrounding its British publisher from magazines and newspapers seeking to serialize it. "I've always been interested in British history," Poll maintains. "I don't profess that I'm a Anglophile, but after the research that had been done for 'The Lion in Winter,' the interest continued for me. When all the activity started with Fergie and the breakup, which is the disintegration of the Windsor family, that also interested me."

School of Americas demonstrates training

By Sydni Redmond
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Training is a familiar word at the home of the infantry and that's one of the reasons the School of the Americas' training is one of a kind.

SOA is the only school in the world that brings Latin American soldiers form different countries to train under one program. Its soldiers are students that have a need for infantry know-how at home. Watch 'Fort Benning Today", next week and see how the School of the Americas adds to the more than 50,000 Latin American soldiers already trained infantry tactics.

Child care will also be a focus of "Fort Benning Today" as the Army entertains the idea of supplementing the child caregivers income. The intent of the new program is to make child care both more affordable and available to the military and the civilian working spouses. Also watch a Bradley training team synchronize its efforts and the dedication of the new Hurly Field.

"Victory News," the news show of the 24th Infantry Division and post movie previews will also be showing. U. S. Army Infantry Center Television will highlight post events on the Fort Benning Community Bulletin Board. News and music from Soldiers Radio Network normally played under the bulletin board has been interrupted because of satellite damage from the recent snow, but it will be restored as soon as possible.

If you are a subscriber to Fort Benning Cable, you can watch USAIC TV on Channel 3, 24 hours a day.

Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:26, 7:56, 8:26 and 8:56 on WLTZ TV-38.

Eufaula has antiques

Eufaula Heritage Association

EUFAULA, Ala. — Eufaula will celebrate its antebellum heritage with the 28th Annual Eufaula Pilgrimage and Antique Show today through Monday.

This event, the oldest tour of homes in Alabama, will take visitors back into a less hurried era with Southern belles, dogwood-lined boulevards and blossom-scented breezes.

The Pilgrimage Tour of Homes is complemented by a variety of exhibits and special events, many of them free to the public. Dealers will exhibit an array of antiques at the Antique Show and Sale, which opened Thursday. The Eufaula Arts Council will present its art show in the Seth Lore Historic District on Saturday and Sunday.

Springer brings 'Smoke'

Springer Theatre

It's a cool June night in 1938 at the Mount Pleasant Baptist church in the Blueridge Mountains of North Carolina and the congregation gathers for the first-ever Saturday night sing. Unfortunately, the Sanctified Sanders Singers are late, the crowd is getting restless and Rev. Oglethorpe is sweating bullets.

Just when the young pastor is about to apologize and send the crowd home, the gospel group begins arriving — much to his relief.

This is the beginning of the Springer Opera House's production of "Smoke on the Mountain," a brand new award-winning Broadway musical with an exuberant bluegrass gospel score, which opened March 26 for a pre-Easter run on the State Theater of Georgia mainstage.

The show is a celebration of Americana and rural church music with a mixture of cracker barrel humor, Christian sweetness-and-light and the simple pleasures of good-hearted people having a roaring good time out in the woods.

"Smoke on the Mountain" has more than two dozen bluegrass and gospels in the score, including old favorites like "Whispering Hope," "I'll Live a Million Years" and "I'll Fly Away."

Paul R. Pierce directs "Smoke on the Mountain" and says that seeing the show is like "receiving a greeting card that was sent 50 years ago but somehow got lost in the mail.

"All of the characters are recognizable to anyone who has ever lived in the rural South," he said.

Shows are at 8 p.m. tonight and Saturday. Tickets are $14, $12 for senior adults and $7 for students.

For more information or to reserve seats, call the box office at 327-3688.

Call for fire

An M-109 howitzer from the 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment, moves out after firing in the Joint Fire Support Exercise April 1 at Ferguson Range. The exercise included a simulated air attack by Marine helicopters and Air Force F-16s. See story and an additional photo on B-6.

TRADOC authorizes early outs

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Department of Defense and Office of Personnel Management granted the Training and Doctrine Command authority to offer voluntary early retirement and voluntary separation incentives to certain members of the command's civilian work force.

TRADOC officials hope enough employees take advantage of the programs so it will not be necessary to involuntarily separate roughly 2,600 workers.

The window of opportunity for those who want to resign or retire and receive voluntary separation incentive pay began April 1 and will last until May 3. Workers must be off the rolls by May 3, unless special permission for extension is allowed.

Workers eligible to receive VSIP can be paid as much as $25,000.

Installation civilian personnel offices have all the information on eligibility and restrictions.

"The (Fort Benning) Directorate of Civilian Personnel has been and continues to work the VERA and VSI plans," said Gary Burkhalter of DCP. "The objective is to be fair as possible within the limits prescribed by the program. Regrettably, I cannot give a projection of the number of employees who will benefit from the VERA/VSI due to the fact that these programs require a case-by-case review and approval process. It is the hope of the DCP that many of our dedicated employees will be able to take advantage of these incentives."

According to Bill Ketron, TRADOC civilian personnel director, cuts in TRADOC's budget will require shrinking the command's civilian work force by 8 percent.

TRADOC was granted voluntary early retirement authority in fiscal 1992, and only about 180 employees took early retirement. This year, personnel officials canvassed eligible workers throughout TRADOC after requesting authority to offer the voluntary separation plans. More people have expressed interest than in fiscal 1992. The positions occupied by workers who are paid an incentive must either be abolished or filled by employees carried as surplus.

Getting out?

Call PCS, ETS hot line

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

The Personnel Processing Center in Soldiers' Plaza has developed a "hot line" to help soldiers who are making an emergency permanent change of station or who are getting out of the Army under Chapter 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 13 or 14 .

"The reason we set up (the hot line) is to give better service to the soldiers who (because of an emergency are getting out or relocating)," said Sgt. 1st Class Scarlett V. Williams, noncommissioned officer in charge of the Personnel Processing Center.

Williams said 30 to 45 days before a soldier relocates or gets out, the soldier's name is put on a roster, and installation out-processing is begun. In cases where soldiers are getting out under a chapter or relocating because of an emergency, their names will not be pulled since they were not preprogrammed to leave.

With the hot line activated, a soldier may call the center and begin out-processing as soon as the chapter comes from the soldier's commander's desk. The only information that is needed is the soldier's name and Social Security number, she said.

"Since we have had cutbacks in our personnel, it normally takes 24 hours to clear a soldier, said Williams. "(However, with the hot line) if a soldier calls in the morning, we can (complete his or her processing) by the afternoon."

Williams said that soldiers who are transferring or getting out of the service under normal circumstances should report to the center 10 days in advance to set up an appointment with finance. They should also report as soon as clearance papers are received to get clearance instructions, she said.

"We do a customer service survey every month," said Williams. "On a scale of one to five, our customer satisfaction rate is 4.8."

"We want to continue giving soldiers personalized customer service, so each soldier is treated on an individualized basis," she said.

The Personnel Processing Center is located in Soldiers' Plaza, Building 2622. For more information, call 545- 2010. To use the hot line, call 545-4630 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Benning pays tribute to top drill sergeant

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Citizens of Fort Benning gathered March 26 to pay tribute to the men who lead the way for new soldiers who train here.

Staff Sgt. Rory L. Malloy, Fort Benning's drill sergeant of the year, and Sgt. 1st Class Maurice K. Wharton, first runner-up, were honored during a ceremony at the Sand Hill Club.

"This award is a testament," said Command Sgt. Maj. Sylvan B. Bauer Jr., Infantry Training Brigade command sergeant major, "to those noncommissioned officers who are entrusted with the care, discipline, motivation and training of the Army's future infantrymen."

"When a soldier is selected or volunteers as a drill sergeant," said Fort Benning Command Sgt. Maj. William H. Acebes, "he sacrifices. He sacrifices time with his wife and children and his personal time, and he devotes 24 hours a day to the teaching and mentoring of the young soldiers who enter our Army.

"Among those who serve as drill sergeants," said Acebes, "there is a competition. One comes out on top, but not easily, because the competition is one of the hardest in the U.S. Army. It requires knowledge and ability, demonstrated by performance."

Wharton, who is assigned to the Drill Sergeant School, received the Army Achievement Medal with fourth oak leaf cluster at the ceremony.

His wife, Detris, was given a bouquet of flowers.

The Whartons have a daughter, Keily Nicole, and they are expecting their second child in May.

Malloy received the Army Commendation Medal with third oak leaf cluster and was presented an engraved 9mm pistol by the Chattahoochee Valley and Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army.

The Noncommissioned Officers' Association awarded him an engraved sword, and he received a drill sergeant hat rack from Names and Frames.

Malloy's awards and decorations include the Army Commendation Medal, sixth award; Good Conduct Medal, second award; National Defense Service Medal; Expert Infantryman Badge; Master Parachutist Badge; Italian Parachutist Badge; the Drill Sergeant Badge and the Physical Fitness Excellence Patch. He is also a member of the Sergeant Morales Club.

Malloy's wife, Deborah, also received a bouquet of flowers at the ceremony.

The Malloys have a son, Rory Andrew, and a daughter, Danielle Renee.

Youth Services

An Easter egg hunt and carnival for children of active duty and retired military, Reservists and Department of Defense civilians will be Saturday at Riverside, home of Fort Benning Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. and Linda White.

Sponsored by the Family Support Division of the Directorate of Community Activities in recognition of the Month of the Military Child and National Child Abuse Prevention Month, the event will feature clowns, games, train rides, fire trucks, dunking booth and the Easter bunny.

Stress takes over

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

The hot topic at The Bayonet office this week is stress. As deadline slaves, we live next door to the stress monster, but sometimes he comes to visit and outstays his welcome.

Last week, the monster followed me everywhere. Monday I got a traffic ticket. Tuesday I came down on the housing list and I spent the rest of the week moving.

Moving is one of the stress monster's favorite hobbies, second only to hanging out with traffic cops and airline baggage handlers.

If you employ professional movers, the stress monster will change the labels on your boxes, slapping FRAGILE on the box of power tools so it is carefully placed on the top of the load — with your blown glass collection on the bottom.

My move was a joint effort between myself and some other PAO types. Sgt. 1st Class Strack, Spc. D'man and Drill Pvt. Billster all pitched in, and you-know-who had a field day.

I was moving into some very nice quarters with a very nice staircase and shiny wooden floors, so the monster had some great logistics opportunities.

The staircase is at least a foot wider now than it was while we were maneuvering mattresses up it. (At some point during the operation, while we weren't looking, it shrank temporarily.)

And despite excruciating care — I've seen newborn babies handled more carelessly than we placed the furniture — Stressy managed to put some scratches on the floor.

He hung around most of the week, making us snap at each other, tripping us on the stairs, and causing the door to stick when we tried to move the heaviest things through it. He made faucets leak, he disconnected the dishwasher and even made the power go out, but he finally got tired of hanging around with us.

We all joined forces, along with Spaller, Spaller, Hughes and Rodriguez, to lend our support to the Festival of Running. We ran five miles, and Stressy wimped out after three. "No fair!" He whined as we left him in the dust. "This is a stress buster!"

Don't shed tears for the monster, though. I hear he went to live with some late tax filers.

Office stress is difficult to handle

COMMENTARY

Pulse quickens. Breathing becomes shallower. Sharp pains shoot across the chest as steel bands contract around the upper torso.

This happens to me every time I hear the word "stress."

Normally I go about my business in a peaceful and loving manner.

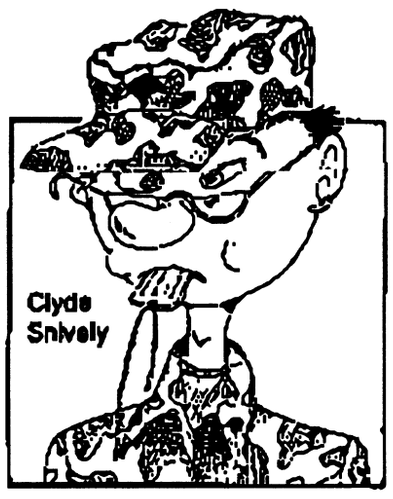
Oh sure, I'll get red in the face, and my jaw will tighten as I put a death grip on the steering wheel while negotiating Macon Road. But I can always blow off steam by shouting at the idiot who's too busy smoking to use his turn indicator or rear view mirror.

That's away from the office.

At work it ain't so easy. Some well-meaning soul will come in and say something like, "Wow, you guys sure work under a lot of stress in here;" and, even though I might only have been daydreaming in front of my computer screen, I immediately develop all the symptoms.

Back in the old days, I used stress reduction techniques I picked up at one of those seminars or on a television cassette we had in the office.

I'd sit back in my chair. Place my feet flat on the floor, rest my hands on my thighs and pretend I was a yoga master, breathing in deeply with my eyeballs rolled up to the top of my head picturing the sun dipping into a calm sea or dandelions blowing in an April breeze.



I'd then try some relaxation exercises and about the time I'd be getting into the swing of things, some joker would come into the office and pointing at me, ask, "What's with him."

Twannng. Sharp pains, hyperventilation, balumpity, balump, balump with the heart. Stress time again.

That was the old way. Next, I decided to mimic William Riley.

That boy ain't got a stressed bone or muscle in his body. He's as limp as a dish rag.

At first I thought it was because he didn't appreciate all the stress we had to work under. Was too dumb to know.

But then I saw that he too had his ways of coping. He festoons his computer terminal with "warm and fuzzys" and a fake lei frames his screen.

Also, he's always up and about making loud noises and shaking and quaking. And he laughs a loud, guttural laugh at everything and everybody, to include himself.

But no one notices because we all try to block him out. I wouldn't have noticed if I hadn't decided to study his stress-releasing techniques.

I spent a week doing so and thought I had it down. Basically, make a fool of yourself at all times and everyone will ignore you.

So last Thursday as M'm editor was screaming for pages and our backs were up against the wall as the deadline clock ticked down, I decided to do my William Riley imitation.

I stood up. I laughed, I flapped my arms up and down, did the duck walk around the office and was feeling really good until C.B., our NCOIC, shouted, "Snively, stop acting like a goose and get to work."

So I guess it's back to proper diets, more exercise and breaks from the office. But that's just as a last resort. There's gotta be easier ways.

Smurfman has plants around his desk that he talks to. Seems to help him keep his sanity.

I don't know. Maybe I should try warm fuzzys on my computer like Will does. Or Troll Dolls. Yeah, I like that. Then I could pull someone else's hair.

Big Brothers/Sisters seeking soldiers, family members

Big Brothers/Big Sisters National Volunteer Appreciation Week is April 18 to 24.

All year long, volunteer Big Brothers and Big Sisters have given their time and friendship generously with no thought of reward beyond that of helping a child.

Because of this selfless caring, the lives of boys and girls in our community have been invaluably enriched, and their futures brightened.

Big Brothers/Big Sisters Volunteer Appreciation week is celebrated nationally to pay tribute to the tens of thousands of volunteers who give their time for the benefit of at-risk children.

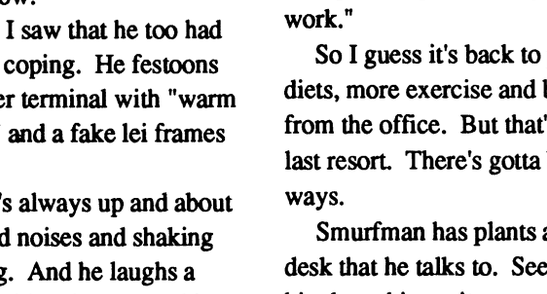
There are more than 500 Big Brothers/Big Sisters of America affiliated agencies throughout the country.

Locally, Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Columbus provides services to more than 80 children in the Fort Benning, Columbus and Phenix City area through the involvement with a Big Brother or Big Sister volunteer.

Soldiers at Fort Benning have been responsible for up to 25 percent of the Big Brothers and Big Sisters who are matched in our program.

We are grateful for our current volunteers, but we need even more men and women to join with us.

As the number of one-parent families continues to rise, more and more children are in need of the friendship and guidance of a Big Brother or a Big Sister.



Thank you to all the soldiers at Fort Benning who have given time, energy, friendship and enthusiasm to less fortunate children in our community.

Soldiers at Fort Benning have proven to be excellent role models for boys and girls needing a special friend.

To find out how you can be involved and become a Big Brother or Big Sister, call Big Brothers/Big Sisters at 327-3760.

AMERICAN PROLOGUE

Which Way to Bunker Hill?

On Sept. 26, 1986, the Navy commissioned the USS Bunker Hill, taking its name from the first battle of the Revolutionary War.

Or does it?

On June 17, 1775, William Prescott successfully led 1,600 colonists troops against 2,500 British at Breed's Hill in Massachusetts. Good results but bad geography. Prescott's orders were to defend Bunker Hill.

How the engagement went down in history as the Battle of Bunker Hill is uncertain. Some historians believe it was written that way before the battle started and no one bothered to change it.

Sgt. Louis Straw demonstrates the Doppler radar.

Post uses state-of-the-art weather-tracking equipment

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

The personnel of Fort Benning's Detachment 10, 1st Weather Group, are using some of the most sophisticated equipment in the world to track local weather activity.

The detachment is one of the first to have the weather surveillance radar 88-D Doppler, a computerized radar system, installed.

Air Force Sgt. Louis Straw, weather forecaster, said that the new system is vastly superior to the old one.

"Our weather-tracking ability has improved drastically," Straw said. "Our old system, the FPS-77, was basically 1940's technology. The 88-D Doppler brings us fully into the modern age."

One of the great advantages to the new system is its tremendous sensitivity, Straw said.

"With the new radar, we can actually detect a butterfly or bumblebee from more than 25 miles away," he said.

The sophisticated radar can detect the movement of weather systems, the height of clouds, the probability and approximate size of hail, the probable amount of rainfall, wind speed, flood potential and the probable path of any storms being tracked.

The information is displayed on a high-resolution, color monitor. A keypad and mouse give the operator easy control.

"The 88-D is very user friendly," Straw said. "It sold itself the first week we used it."

The actual antenna that is used to monitor the weather is located not at Fort Benning, but near Tallassee, Ala. Maxwell Air Force Base actually controls the antenna and relays the signal to Fort Benning and the Federal Aviation Administration in Athens, Ga.

The antenna, which is 38 feet wide and stands atop a 140-foot tower, is capable of tracking weather activity out to a distance of more than 248 miles and in a continuous circle.

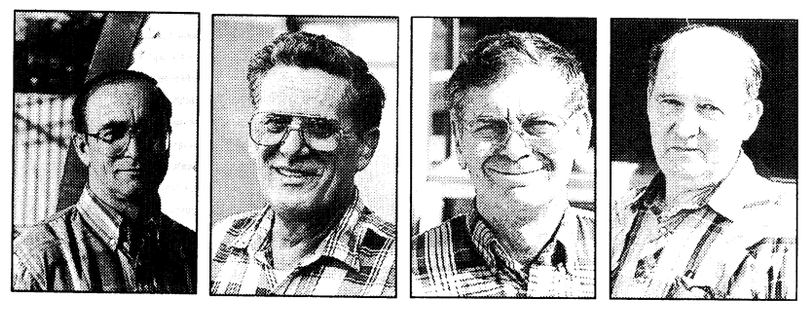
Straw said that the installation of the 88-D at Fort Benning is part of a $4.4 billion project to modernize weather forecasting capabilities across the United States, a tri-agency project involving the Department of Defense, the Department of Commerce and the Department of Transportation.

The modernization project should be completed by the end of the decade, Straw said, at which time complete weather information will be able to be gathered at anytime and anywhere in the United States.

Straw added that one of the best advantages with the new system is that it means less false alarms when the severe weather sirens are sounded.

"Because the new system is so sensitive, we can tell with much greater accuracy whether or not severe weather is probable and thus whether or not to sound the siren. With the old system, a lot of guesswork was involved," Straw said.

Suggesters win $$$



By Ruth J. Spaller

Employees from the Directorate of Logistics and the Directorate of Operations and Training received awards March 23 for suggestions they submitted to the Army Ideas for Excellence Program.

Brig. Gen. John W. Hendrix, deputy commanding general, presented a $3,753.44 award to Clifton E. Baker from the Maintenance Division of the Directorate of Logistics for proposing that M-19 periscopes be repaired at the general support level.

The current procedure is to buy a new periscope when the prism becomes unbonded from the shelf. With the suggested procedure, the prism is bonded back onto the shelf, eliminating the need for a new periscope.

The adoption of this suggestion will result in the Army saving $110,687 the first year.

Baker Slater Hill Schrimsher

Hendrix also presented awards of $1,061.66 each to Donald R. Hill and Stanley M. Slater from the Training Support Center, Directorate of Operations and Training, for their suggestion to recover batteries used with the multiple integrated laser engagement system.

Edward B. Schrimsher also received this award but was not present at the ceremony.

Hill, Slater and Schrimsher proposed that the Training Support Center begin collecting all batteries issued with MILES gear, testing them for serviceability and returning those found good to stock for additional usage.

"We came up with the idea because we needed money to buy more batteries and once we issued the batteries they were gone," Slater said.

"Being outdoorsmen, we'd see a lot of batteries out there on the ground," he continued. "We figured why not recheck them.

"We're now getting about 95 percent of the batteries returned," he said.

The adoption of this proposal will result in an annual savings of $82,858.61.

Beware of contractors bearing gifts

Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Editor's note: This is the second in a series of five articles on the new "Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch," which became effective in February. Next week's article will discuss conflicts of interest.

Government employees may not solicit or accept gratuities or gifts from a prohibited source, which is someone who has an interest in the employees or their agency's work.

The new Office of Government Ethics regulation adds an additional gratuity restriction; employees may not accept gifts that are given because of their official positions.

However, the regulation allows acceptance of food, refreshment and entertainment (but not travel and lodging) at social events hosted by other than a prohibited source and free to all attendees, even if employees are invited because of their official positions.

The regulation provides that some things of value are not considered gifts.

For example, the term "gifts" does not include:

- Modest items of food and refreshment offered other than as part of a meal.
- Loans or other items for which market value is paid.
- Commercial discounts or promotions available to the general public or to all government personnel.
- Prizes won in contests open to the general public, unless employees enter as part of their official duties.
- Greeting cards or plaques of little intrinsic value intended solely for presentation.

Additionally, travel expenses and other gifts accepted by the Army are not considered gifts; however, they are subject to other laws and regulations.

The regulation also provides exceptions that allow acceptance of certain kinds of gifts and gratuities.

The exceptions are:

- Gifts valued at $20 or less (other than cash or investment vehicles such as bonds and stock certificates) may be accepted, so long as the total value of all gifts received from one source during a year does not exceed $50.
- Employees may accept gifts based on a family or personal relationship where it is clear that it is the relationship, and not the employee's official position, that is motivating the gift.

A gift given by an individual whose relationship with an employee is based on business contacts, even if amicable, is presumed not to be given based on a personal relationship.

Another important test is whether the gift is paid for with personal funds or is charged to the business account of a prohibited source.

- An employee may accept gifts based on the employee's or spouse's outside employment (such as a company picnic) or search for outside employment (such as travel expenses for a job interview), if the gift is not given or increased because of the employee's official position.
- An employee may accept meals, refreshments and entertainments received overseas from other than a foreign government that do not exceed the established per diem rate.

Other exceptions can be used only with the approval of an agency ethics official. These exceptions include:

- Awards for meritorious public service from other than a prohibited source when the value is more than $200.
- Free attendance at events, where attendance is determined to be in the agency's interest.
- Free attendance at training events sponsored by tax-exempt organizations.

Although regulations allow for certain exceptions, if the frequency of gifts causes a reasonable person to believe the employee is using public office for private gain, the gift may not be accepted, even if one of the exceptions applies.

If employees are offered or accept an improper gift, they may remedy the situation by either returning the gift or paying market value to the donor.

When it is not practical to return a gift because it is perishable (such as a floral arrangement), it may, at the discretion of the recipient's supervisor, be donated to charity, shared in the recipient's office or destroyed.

If prompt action is taken with respect to an improper gift, on the employee's own initiative or after promptly seeking advice from an ethics counselor, the employee will be deemed not to have violated the gift rule.

However, an employee who returns or pays for a gift or seeks advice from an ethics counselor only after the acceptance of the gift is discovered by someone else, will be treated as having violated the gift rule.

Individuals who have been certified as procurement officials as defined by the Procurement Integrity Provisions of the Office of Federal Procurement Policy Act are subject to the more restrictive provisions of that act and should contact the installation ethics counselor before they accept any gift from a prohibited source whether or not it falls within one of the exceptions mentioned in this article.

This article is not a comprehensive statement of the regulation.

Questions about the regulation and its applicability to specific factual situations should be addressed to the installation ethics counselor who can be reached at 545-3285.

Aerobics coming on strong

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

Now up, and push! Up and push! Ready and 1, 2, 3, 4! 1, 2, 3, 4! Keep it going! Now reach and pull! Reach and pull!

The Army Physical Fitness School hosted an aerobics workshop and seminar for master fitness trainers March 29 through April 2 at the Audie Murphy Gymnasium.

Sue Tendy, aerobics coordinator for the Department of Physical Education, U.S. Military Academy, West Point, N.Y., instructed the seminar.

Tendy has worked with the Department of Physical Education for 15 years. She appears on a military television channel in New York with her aerobics exercise session.

"Exercise to music is really coming on strong," said Staff Sgt. Dennis B. Guaglianone, the school's operations noncommissioned officer and instructor. "We have numerous requests to go to different units and teach exercise to music, and we were spreading ourselves thin," he said.

The school is teaching these fitness trainers so they can meet the growing demand for aerobics, Guaglianone said.

Reaction to the class was good, Guaglianone said.

"We were limited to 20 students for the class, and twice as many inquired about it," he said. "We know the interest is out there."

The attendees of the class were taught aerobics class formats, music selection, stretching, organizing a circuit and the principles of high, low and step aerobics.

The goal of the seminar was to combine these techniques into a successful aerobics program, said Guaglianone.

DCA provides Total Army Quality

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

The Directorate of Community Activities is just one of many organizations on post using Total Army Quality to improve the way it does business.

In fact, said Deborah Addison, DCA project officer, TAQ is so effective it has been an indispensable part of DCA from the beginning.

"DCA always practiced TAQ, even before the process was named and formalized," she said. "In an organization that is so customer oriented, we need to practice TAQ to respond sensitively to the needs of our customers."

The centerpiece of DCA's TAQ plan is a quality improvement team that monitors the directorate's TAQ initiatives. The team is made up of all the division chiefs and the director of DCA and meets monthly.

When problems are encountered, the team discusses and implements a plan of action. Usually process action teams are formed to deal with specific problem areas, Addison said.

Some of the concerns process action teams are tackling this year include:

- Improving the Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers program.
- Improving after-school child care on post.
- Improving the Community Life Program and the quality of life in family housing areas.
- Creating a marketing plan to increase the use of the Uchee Creek and Destin Recreation areas.
- Increasing community awareness of the Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Program.

Another important aspect of DCA's TAQ plan is the use of customer comment cards, which are located at more than 75 DCA facilities. Customers can use the blue cards to rate the quality of service they were given and can also write in additional comments, good or bad.

"We value the comments on each and every card," Addison said. "Every card is read, first by the manager of the facility, then the division chief and finally the director of Community Activities."

Comments on the cards have brought about many positive changes, she said, such as the creation of process action teams and facility improvements.

Another important aspect of good customer service is the use of name tags by all DCA employees.

"This might seem trivial, but when the customer knows the name of the employee, it helps develop a good customer-employee rapport and also allows the customer to mention specific employees when filling out comment cards," said Addison.

The Mystery Shopper Program is another example of how DCA guarantees good customer service. Contract evaluators pose as customers and rate the quality of service they are given. If the employee being secretly rated gets a perfect score, the employee gets personal recognition from the post commander and an award.

"If the employee does not get a perfect score, it is a valuable tool for the manager to see how the training for service quality can be improved," Addison said.

Employee recognition is a very important part of TAQ, she added. DCA's recognition program includes telling employees when they receive favorable comments from a customer and recognizing outstanding employees of the month, quarter and year.

Employees also have a direct influence in the TAQ process, said Addison.

"We encourage our employees to look for ways to improve the system," she said. "They have their own comment cards they can fill out to let management know how they feel things can be improved," she said.

Addison said perhaps TAQ's most important contribution to DCA's effectiveness is it helped the directorate, which is made up of many diverse elements, function as a cohesive unit with a common goal.

"The big thing is TAQ helps all of the personnel of DCA, whatever they do, work as a team," she said. "Everyone is dedicated to evaluating the way they do business and looking for ways to improve. TAQ involves every employee from the bottom up, and this is one of its greatest advantages."

ACAP helps families with transition

Army Career and Alumni Program

If you are a family member of a soldier in transition, the Army Career and Alumni Program may have some answers for you.

According to Ted Craig, ACAP transition services manager, the free program can assist family members with information, job search skills and resumes.

Some typical questions family members have, said Craig, include:

- How will my transportation home be handled?
- How will my finances be handled?
- When will my spouse's retirement pay start?
- How do I start receiving veteran benefits?
- When and how do I clear post?

"We don't have the answers to all of these question," said Craig, "but we can provide written information and referrals so people know where to get the answers."

Craig said the Transition Assistance Office assigns transition services specialists to family members of transitioning soldiers.

"Once a specialist is assigned, he or she will assist the family member until all of his or her questions are answered," he said.

The office will also provide referrals, Craig said, for job training and job search skills.

"There are two courses," he said. "One is the Basic Job Search Skills Training Course given at the Georgia Department of Labor every Tuesday and Thursday, and the second is the advanced course taught at the Job Assistance Center."

Craig said the advanced course includes help in preparing a personal resume.

"This program is available not only to spouses," said Craig, "but to children of working age."

For more information on the ACAP family program, call 545-4892 or 545-4902 or visit Building 2617 in Soldiers' Plaza.

Symposium offers change

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

The Family Unit Network Center hosted the annual Army Family Action Plan Symposium at the Officers' Club March 30 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The symposium serves as a forum for individuals to put forth quality of life issues for the Army and make suggestions on how to improve any problems, said Ava Morrow, Family Unit Network coordinator.

Delegates, selected by the post's units to represent the total Army family, converged to discuss issues on improving the post or the Army overall for soldiers and family members alike.

This year's discussions were focused on the symposium's theme: " A Chance to Change Tomorrow."

The symposium opened with welcoming remarks from Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, commanding general.

"What we really need to do for tomorrow's Army is make sure we have a quality force — quality soldiers, quality families and a quality civilian work force," White said.

"It is my desire to demonstrate to the entire United States Army that Fort Benning is on a Super Bowl team," he said. "We will continue to treat our people as if they are members of that Super Bowl team. That means we are going to do things better than anyone else.

"When you visit Fort Benning, when you serve here, when you work here, everyone needs to know that this is the very best we have," White said.

Issues discussed were taken from work groups organized at the symposium and AFAP issue cards that had been compiled all year long, said Morrow.

Anyone who has a problem may fill out the card and drop it off at the center anytime. Cards are available through the Family Unit Network.

Some of the issues raised at the symposium will be solved locally for the post.

Other problems, Morrow said, will be forwarded to the Training and Doctrine Command's AFAP Symposium and the Department of the Army.

Topics included consumer and commercial services, youth and education, health services, housing, soldier and family support services, relocation and quality of life.

Any resolutions of issues raised at the symposium will be published in future editions of The Bayonet.

For more information, call Morrow or Kathy Case at the Family Unit Network Center in Building 359. The telephone number is 545-5602 or 545-3016.

OWC festival a 'runaway' success

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

About 2,000 runners turned out on a cool Saturday morning for the Officers Wives' Club Festival of Running at York Field.

According to Holly Grange, race coordinator, the turnout topped last year's performance.

"Last year we had only six units run in the races; today there were 23 units from around post," said Grange. "We are very happy with the turnout and want to thank all the sponsors for their help in making this festival a success."

The story of the morning goes to Chuck Dent, a sergeant with the 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital, who after having knee surgery approximately six weeks ago ran away from the field in the open five-mile run with a time of 25:02 for a five-minute-mile pace.

"I'm running faster now than I was before the surgery; it's unbelievable," said Dent. "I took 10 days off and rested, then started running five miles a day, along with working out in the pool and on the exercise bike. I'm very pleased with the results of this race."

Team serves v-ball 'Polynesian Style'

The women's volleyball league is in its final stage of the season, and it looks like the team to beat will be Polynesian Style. After a Monday night matchup with the team of 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital, the Polynesian Style team ran its record to 7-0 with two nights of play left.

Here is a rundown of matches played Monday night at Briant Wells Field House.

Rhonda Mason and Maria Cortez led the team of Polynesian Style to a two-game surgical procedure over 2nd MASH, winning 15-2 and 15-1. In the first game, Mason went on a serving binge, outscoring 2nd MASH 13-2.

Game two was a repeat of game one except this time it was Cortez doing the damage with the serve. Cortez ran off 12 unanswered points before 2nd MASH could break her serve.

The second match of the night pitted Apollo XI against the Patykula team with Apollo XI landing on the Patykula team 15-5, 12-15 and 15-2.

Apollo XI lifted off to a 12-0 lead in game one on the serving of Fili Tela and the net play of Francis Kathi and Jan Fors. Patykula staged a mini run to close within 12-5 but Phantom Watson launched three serves to finish off the Patykula team 15-5.

Game two looked to be going the way of Apollo XI when they jumped out to a 7-0 lead to start the game. The Patykula team stiffened their necks and fought back to a 9-7 lead only to have Apollo XI rally to tie the game at 12-12.

Ann Young sent the match to the third and final game on three serves to win game two for Patykula 15-12.

Apollo XI lit the afterburners in the tie breaker, taking a 6-0 lead then pushing it to 8-1 at the break. Haydee Pinero hit five straight serves to put Apollo XI up 13-1. Fors finished off the game and match with the final two points to go out 15-2.

Cast your eyes on fly-fishing

By Kevin Lee McIver
USAIC Public Affairs Office

So you just saw the movie, "A River Runs through It," and you're all geared up to start fly-fishing. Well, before you run off and buy $400 worth of rods, waders and creels, let's take a closer look at the sport.

First of all, fly-fishing is one of the most enjoyable fishing methods available. You can take virtually any kind of fish that is out there from largemouth bass to rainbow trout using a fly rod.

When I was a child, my grandfather would take us fishing at a local lake in Missouri. He would pull the jon boat up near a brush pile and fly-cast a popping bug way back into a hole between the branches, inevitably pulling out several nice crappies or bream.

Because he had to have enough distance to cast, that would leave us youngsters trying to cast a worm and bobber 20 feet to get anywhere near the structure.

Naturally, we never caught anything until Grandpa had caught enough fish to mystify us, at which time he would pull the boat closer so we could fish. Grandpa was a smart old rascal.

Around Fort Benning there are many places the avid fly fisherman can enjoy the art. Georgia offers you approximately 4,000 miles of trout streams, many of which are within a two-hour drive.

One of the nearest trout streams is just outside of Atlanta where you can fish at the Chattahoochee River National Recreation Area. Here the Chattahoochee is stocked with rainbow trout and affords anglers some excellent fishing opportunities.

One of my favorite local areas is at Helen, Ga. The alpine German village offers a great little stream running right through the center of town. When you add the local tourist attractions and shops, it keeps the spouse and children occupied while you fish. Helen also offers some great accommodations and has a decent "night life" for after-fishing hours.

For more information on trout fishing in Georgia, swing by the Outdoor Recreation Office and pick up a copy of Georgia's 1993-94 trout fishing regulations.

For those of you wanting to fish a little closer to home, any of the ponds on post offer vast fly-fishing opportunities. I particularly like to catch bluegills from the bank at King's Pond or crappie in the Chattahoochee. It takes a little more skill and patience, but that's what fly fishing is all about.

Getting started can be either very cheap or very expensive depending on the type of equipment you use.

If you go to one of the local discount stores you can buy everything for less than $100; however, if you go to a famous outfitter such as Orvis, the nations oldest fly-fishing equipment company, it could cost you hundreds of dollars.

So what type of equipment will you need to get started? Well it really depends on the area that you're going to fish.

If you want to go after bass, crappie or bluegills on Fort Benning, all you really need is a good fly rod and reel, some floating fly line, a spool of monofilament fishing line, and some popping bugs.

If you decide to go after trout, then you need to add to your equipment list some trout flies, waders, a fly fishing vest, a hand-net, fish creel and possibly a float tube. I won't tell you what brand to buy. Just go to the store, pick it up, and if it feels right, buy it.

So you went out and bought all the equipment that you need; now it's time to practice fly-casting before you head to the stream. Casting a fly or popping bug can be one of the most infuriating experiences you can imagine next to getting a backlash in your bait casting reel. All it takes is a couple hours of practice in the backyard before you head out and you'll be skilled enough to fly-cast.

If you decide to go after trout, you'll need to buy a Georgia trout stamp in addition to state fishing license. It only costs $5, and is well worth the price. No matter what species you fish for, fly-fishing can be very enjoyable. As the Georgia trout season just opened March 27, more articles will follow specifically on fly-fishing for trout in north Georgia. Good luck and see you at the fishin' hole.

Easter celebration speaks of salvation

By Paul P. Buck
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Easter Sunday is the most important day of the Christian year in that it is a day of unsurpassed joy — the celebration of Jesus' resurrection. Without the Resurrection, there is no Christianity. This year, this day of celebration falls on the second Sunday in April.

Have you ever wondered how they determine the date for Easter Sunday each year? I have noticed over the years that it falls mostly in April, but sometimes in March as well. I did some research to find the answer and the findings were rather interesting.

It wasn't until the eighth century that the church agreed upon the date, although Christians had been observing Easter irregularly for hundreds of years since the second century. Easter Sunday is figured using both the solar and lunar calendars. It is the first Sunday following the first full moon after March 22, which marks the beginning of the spring. Therefore, it will be no earlier than March 22 and no later than April 25. This year, the full moon occurs on April 6, so the first Sunday following the full moon is Sunday, which makes it Easter Sunday.

The word Easter is not found in the Bible, but the word Passover is found in Acts 12:4 in the King James Version. This is understandable because the first Christians were mostly Jews and observed their traditions. The distinctive Christian traditions did not develop until the beginning of the second century when the Jewish influence upon Christians started to fade away. The day of worship was changed from Sabbath to Sunday. The holy days in the Old Testament fell into disuse among Christians and Christmas and Easter became the two great Christian celebrations.

So now we know something about the historical background of Easter, but what about the meaning of Jesus' resurrection to you and me now? It means the fulfillment of God's promise of salvation and eternal life for all believers. When Jesus said, "It is finished" on the cross, the price was paid for our sins and the sacrifice was accepted by God. By the miracle of rising from the dead, Jesus placed the seal of assurance upon the forgiveness of our sins.

The open grave is the pledge of God that you and I, if we are believers in Christ, have eternal life. In the resurrection of Christ, we learn that the short, perplexing life that is ours does not complete our destiny; the grave is not the end. With the stone rolled away from the entrance of Jesus' grave, every doubt and obstacle concerning our own eternity is removed.

So, in the radiance of Easter and in the power of Resurrection glory, may the Spirit of God bring you the assurance that you have the gift of eternal life.

"I am the resurrection and the life. He who believes in me will live, even though he dies; and whoever lives and believes in me will never die." (John 11:25)

Family center to sponsor retreats

By James Rayburn
USAIC Chaplains' Office

The Chaplain's Family Life Center is sponsoring two multi-cultural retreats in April. These retreats are designed for couples of different cultural backgrounds to enrich their time together. They are also beneficial to professionals working with multi-cultural families.

The Native American retreat will be 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesday at the Infantry Center Chapel Annex. The facilitator is Eddie Ensley.

Ensley is part Cherokee and has conducted workshops throughout the United States and Canada. He has written four books and served as editor to two national publications. He is currently completing a graduate degree in community counseling at Columbus College.

The European American retreat will be 7 to 9 p.m. Thursday at the Infantry Center Chapel Annex. The facilitators are Dr. Kathy North-Wilhelm and Hans Richard Wilhelm. North-Wilhelm is a family practice physician at Martin Army Community Hospital and is an associate member of the American Association of Marriage and Family Therapists. Wilhelm is a native of West Germany and has taught graduate courses in economics, business and the Catholic religion. The Wilhelms have been married since 1984 and can personally reflect on the challenges facing European American couples.

What : Native American, European American retreats

When: Tuesday, Thursday 7 to 9 p.m.

Where: The Infantry Center Chapel Annex

The retreats are free but pre-registration is required by Monday. Free child care is provided for all participants. To register or for more information, call the Family Life Center at 545-1760.

CRIME WATCH

Military Police Activity

The following entries were taken from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from March 23 to 29. Such entries may be incomplete and are not the adjudication of the guilt or innocence of any person.

• This week's hot topic concerns speeding in the housing areas. Spring normally causes an increase in traffic accidents in the housing areas. More children are playing outside, thus they are more likely to run in front of a car without looking. When driving at the posted speed limit, you have time to react to children or objects entering the street unexpectedly. Help make our streets safer; obey the posted speed limit.

• Three family members and a civilian were charged with larceny of private property and criminal trespass after they were observed entering a set of quarters through a broken window and departing in a van. The van containing the subjects was located and searched, revealing an automatic pistol on one of the occupants.

• A private was charged by civil authorities with reckless driving, fleeing and eluding, no driver's license in possession and open container violation after he was observed squealing his tires at an intersection. He drove at speeds in excess of 80 mph in an attempt to elude apprehension.

• A specialist reported that persons unknown left a note threatening his life on the front door of his quarters. Investigation revealed that two civilians had placed the note and were thus charged with making terroristic threats and conspiracy.

• A specialist reported that persons unknown stole his 9mm pistol while it was in transit from Berlin, Germany, to Fort Benning.

• A private was charged with shoplifting after he took several pairs of blue jeans into the dressing room and exited the Post Exchange wearing one pair of the new jeans.

• A private was apprehended by civil authorities for outstanding warrants for burglary. Further investigation revealed the soldier was also absent without leave.

• A sergeant was charged with domestic assault, failure to obey a lawful order, prohibition against alcohol, loud music and profanity, and several of the related charges after he and his wife were involved in an altercation.

Other activities included 17 traffic accidents and six reports of shoplifting at facilities on post. There were three cases of driving under the influence of alcohol.

Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best — Give Crime Arrest." Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5223 or the "Crime in Progress" line at 545-2222.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Bradley Vanderau
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: I recently received my long distance telephone bill and was shocked to find that several calls were made to "900" numbers. The cost of those calls was nearly $200. I did not make any of those calls, and my family members say that they did not make any of the calls. What exactly are 900 numbers?

A: The 900 number is where you pay for a sales pitch along with the telephone call. By dialing a 900 number, you can: order products; hear Santa and his elves tell a story; vote in an opinion poll; get financial tips; talk to a willing stranger; and more.

If you know what you are getting and how much you'll be charged, 900 numbers can be a perfectly good way to do business or get information.

However, many consumers have been charged excessively for 900 number services or have not received the services advertised.

For example, some fraudulent companies entice you to call a 900 number without first telling you how much you will be charged, or they will entice you to call for bogus products or service.

Because of this, the Federal Communications Commission adopted rules governing these services. The FCC requires companies: to clearly disclose the cost of the call; to describe the information, product, or service the caller will receive for the fee charged; and to offer the caller an opportunity to hang up and avoid charges for the call.

In general, consumers can protect themselves if they:

• Deal only with reputable companies. You may see well-known companies sponsor such 900-number services as opinion surveys or sports information. The costs are usually low.

• Think twice before calling a 900 number for a "free" gift. You may see television ads or receive postcards urging you to call 900 numbers to claim a "free" prize. These prizes are usually not "free," and you are also charged for the 900 number call.

• Don't confuse 900 numbers with toll-free 800 numbers. You pay for the 900 number call. The company pays for the 800 number call.

• Talk to your children. Some television promotions encourage children to call 900 numbers for "free" gifts and stories. Parents have received phone bills of thousands of dollars.

Make sure your children understand that they shouldn't call 900 numbers without your permission. You may want to consider having the phone company block 900 number calls, if this service is available in your area.

• Check your phone bill carefully for any 900 number charges. It is largely an unregulated business.

Make sure any 900 number charges on your phone bill are accurate. You can get information about specific charges from the phone company.

If you are caught in a 900 number scam, the phone company can't disconnect your phone because of failure to pay a disputed 900-number charge.

If you have problems with charges on your phone bill for a 900 number scam, write to your telephone company immediately.

You can ask the phone company to delete the charge, although it is not legally obligated to do so.

You can also ask the phone company for the name of the company that provided the 900 number service.

Write to the company and ask them to delete the charge. If the company refuses to delete the charge, then you may want to file a complaint with the Federal Trade Commission at the Correspondence Branch, Federal Trade Commission, Washington, D.C. 20580.

Call the Legal Assistance Office at 545-3281 or 545-3282 and make an appointment to speak with an attorney if you need assistance or have additional questions about 900 number services.

Injuries threaten children

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Where is the the most dangerous place in the world? A busy city street? A commercial airliner ?

Wrong. Home is the most dangerous place in the world.

In a room-by-room check of possible hazards, you'd find crushing, falling, fire and electrocution at every turn.

All ages are exposed to harm, but children are especially at risk. Injuries are the number one threat to your child's health.

One in four children is involved in an accident each year, according to Dr. C. Everett Koop, the former U.S. Surgeon General.

"More than 8,000 of these die, and another 50,000 are permanently disabled," Koop said. "If such death and disability were the result of disease, parents would demand that the killer be stopped."

What can a parent do? Beginning with the first day of your child's life — think safety!

If you have a toddler, crawl around the house and look at your environment from a toddler's perspective. What dangers lurk under the sofa? Can you reach that bottle of medicine on the counter top? Can you pull an iron onto yourself by a dangling cord?

Do a home injury risk assessment:

• Do you use child safety seats and/or belts? Parents cannot protect their children from injury in a car crash by holding the child in their laps.

Holding a 30-pound infant in a car going 30 mph would require the strength of lifting 300 pounds to prevent the child from crashing forward in the event of a collision.

• Do you keep syrup of ipecac in your home? Ipecac syrup is used to induce vomiting. However, it is not a remedy for all kinds of poisoning.

• Do you use child resistant closures on all your prescription bottles? Child resistant closures have been shown to significantly reduce the number of childhood poisonings.

• Do you have a smoke detector? Early warning devices such as smoke detectors alert residents in case of a fire and help keep fatality rates down. Check it monthly.

• Do you have the poison information center phone number, fire, ambulance, etc., on your phone or posted near the phone?

The chances of getting hurt grow as the child grows. Often, accidents occur when parents underestimate their child's capabilities.

Discuss your child's growth and progress with your physician. Read about average developmental stages and what to expect.

Copies of medical records available

Martin Army Community Hospital

Your medical history belongs to you; but your medical records, as compiled by military medical treatment facilities, belong to the U.S. government.

Sometimes you need your medical records to document your medical history, so it is important to know how to get copies.

If you have an appointment with a civilian doctor or have to seek care in a civilian hospital, you can request a copy of any portion of your records.

Army medical facilities can copy records upon request for release to you or to a civilian practitioner you name.

The correspondence section of the Medical Records Administration Branch, Patient Administration Division, is responsible for copying records upon request.

At Fort Benning, this office is located in Room 019 at Martin Army Community Hospital and is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. The telephone number is 544-1244.

A minimum of five days' notice is required. By law, the office needs a written release containing the patient's full name, birth date, sponsor's Social Security number and signature of the patient or parent.

Therefore, it is impossible to request copies by telephone, except via telephone facsimile machines. Requests must be made in person by letter.

These procedures were created to protect the patient's privacy. Only in true emergency situations can requests be accepted by phone.

It is a good idea to specify what part of your records you need to avoid getting hundreds of pages you don't need.

Applying for records

Where: Room 019, Martin Army Community Hospital
When: Weekdays, 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.
How: Apply in person or by fax, with a written release. Specify time span to be covered, and allow several days for processing

You can do this by specifying dates, a span of dates, or all records applying to a particular clinic, doctor or medical condition.

You won't be able to get your records immediately. Routine requests take several days. The Correspondence Section will furnish a copy of the last four or five visits from the outpatient record on the spot.

However, for routine requests there is a 10- to 15-day turnaround time. Of course, records officials respond to bona fide emergencies as rapidly as possible.

You will be called when your records are ready for pickup, or they will be mailed to you if you have requested that instead of being called.

Give the records officials as much advance notice as possible and let them know when and why you need the records. They will do their best to help if you make the situation clear.

Normally, copies of patient records must be picked up in person, by the person to whom they belong.

Records are released only after the patient shows valid identification card and written permission, as well as your own identification card.

For children under 18, parents may request and sign for copies of their children's records without authorization, except when the records contain information of drug/alcohol abuse, venereal disease control, birth control or abortion.

A hospital staff member screens records to ensure that no such information is disclosed without the child's consent.

The parent is required to present the child's identification card for any child age 10 or older.

Parents may also request that these records be mailed to them or directly to the doctor of hospital needing them.

In an emergency, no medical institution or practitioner will delay treatment or wait for medical records in an emergency.

During duty hours, such requests can be made to the correspondence section at 544-1244.

After duty hours, emergency requests can be made through the officer of the day at 544-2041.

It is best to have the emergency practitioner make the call so the records clerk can be told exactly what is needed.

If the practitioner has a fax machine, the clerk can often fill such a request within an hour or so.

MASH

Unit sharpens life-saving skills

By David Greer
36th Engineer Group

What do you think a MASH is? Is it a) a television program about the Korean War or b) a collection of skilled medical and nonmedical personnel dedicated to the saving of human life?

The answer is "b" and Fort Benning is host to one of those units — the 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital, commanded by Lt. Col. James H. Brooks.

According to Brooks, 2nd MASH is a 60-bed hospital with two operating rooms, supported by medical specialties such as a blood bank, X-ray, laboratory, pharmacy and central sterile supplies needed to operate 24 hours a day in a combat environment.

Brooks said his unit has the ability to mobilize 24 to 60 beds behind the brigade area to receive casualties who need surgical attention.

Brooks said that while his unit will treat whatever kind of cases come in, the main mission of the 2nd MASH is resuscitative surgery. This, he said, is surgery in which medical teams provide enough surgical treatment to stabilize a patient who will be evacuated to the rear to another medical care facility for more treatment if needed.

The reason his unit does not provide more long-term care, said Brooks, is that he has only 60 beds and during a conflict those can fill up quickly.

"We will do whatever it takes to save the soldier's life," said Brooks. "But once we have that soldier stabilized, we will evacuate him or her to the rear. We treat, stabilize and only then evacuate out."

> "We plan our field problems to test the skills of everyone, from the support personnel to the surgeon."
>
> — Lt. Col. James H. Brooks
> 2nd Mobile Army
> Surgical Hospital

The unit keeps in practice by the use of "mass casualty" field problems. Brooks said the unit leadership team designs real-life situations that test every skill the MASH must possess.

According to Brooks, his people have no idea of when, what kind or how many casualties will appear on their doorstep.

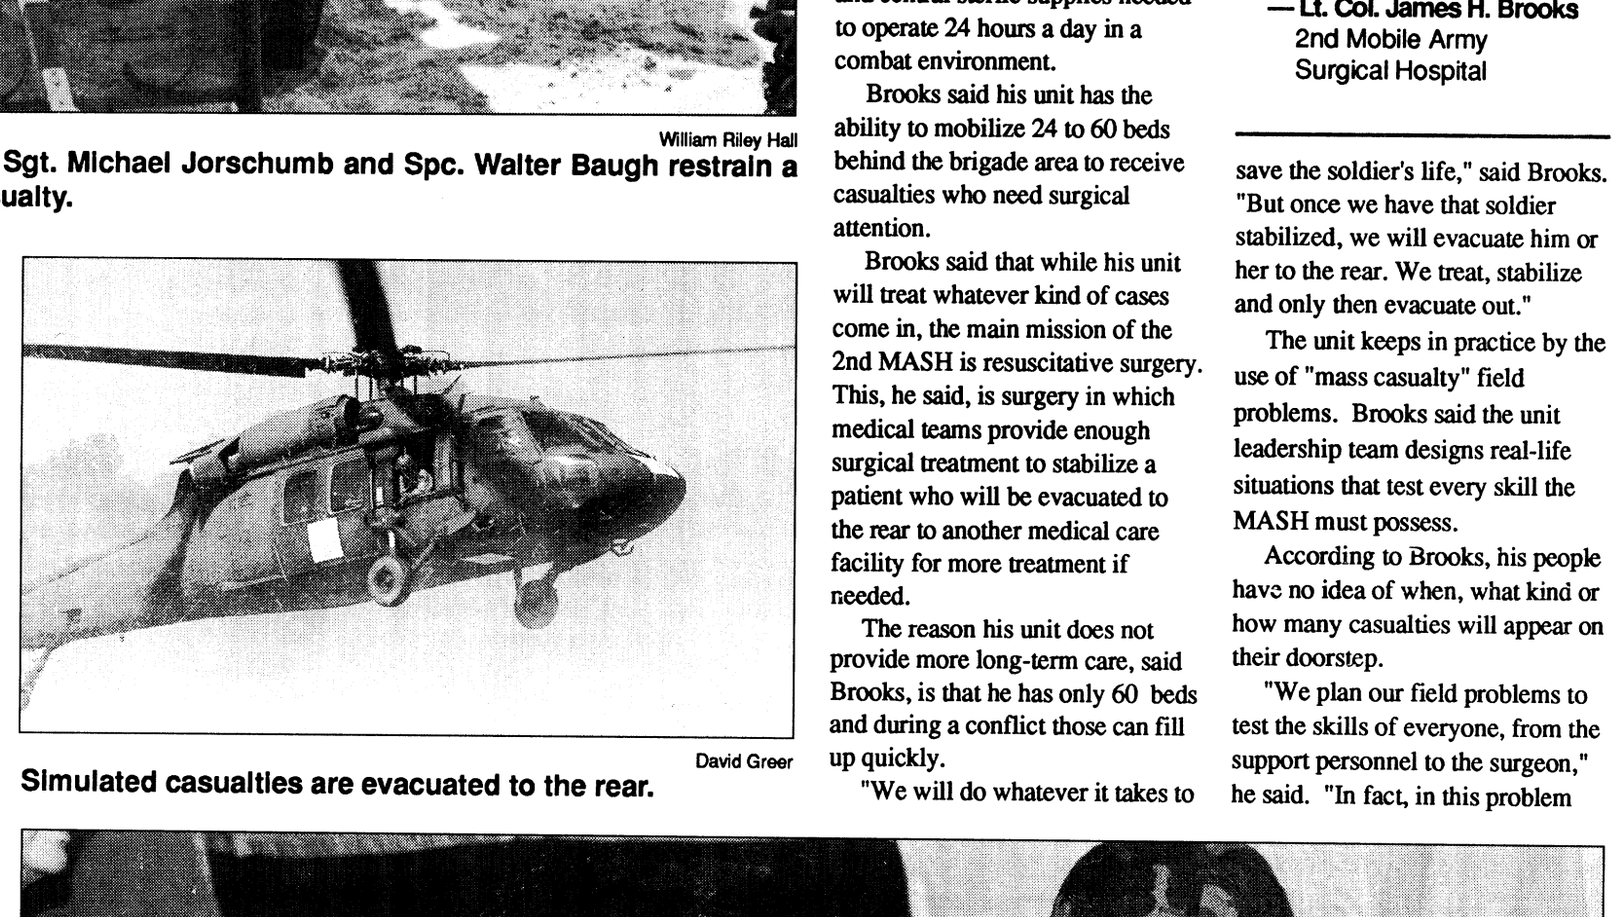
"We plan our field problems to test the skills of everyone, from the support personnel to the surgeon," he said. "In fact, in this problem we just completed, we had a soldier with a mental disorder to test our procedures in handling psychiatric patients.

"Not all the patients we have to treat are physical," said Brooks.

What happens when the patients start arriving is educational for both the medical personnel and the simulated patient, said Brooks.

"We hope that the soldiers role-playing as patients will gain some insight and confidence in our abilities to treat them, and return to their units and share that insight and confidence with other soldiers," he said.

"If soldiers understand that they will receive the very best medical care when they need it most, then we hopefully can reduce the stress that they will be under and thereby increase their chances for survival."



Brooks said, "We are a medical unit dedicated to saving human life, and we have the very best medical personnel; but, none of the quality care could be provided to the soldiers in need without the highly trained and dedicated support troops.

"The truck drivers, cooks, communication and supply personnel, repair techs and all the other soldiers never seen by the patients are the foundation the unit builds on," he said.

"Because of the quality and training of our soldiers, the 2nd MASH has the strongest foundation possible."

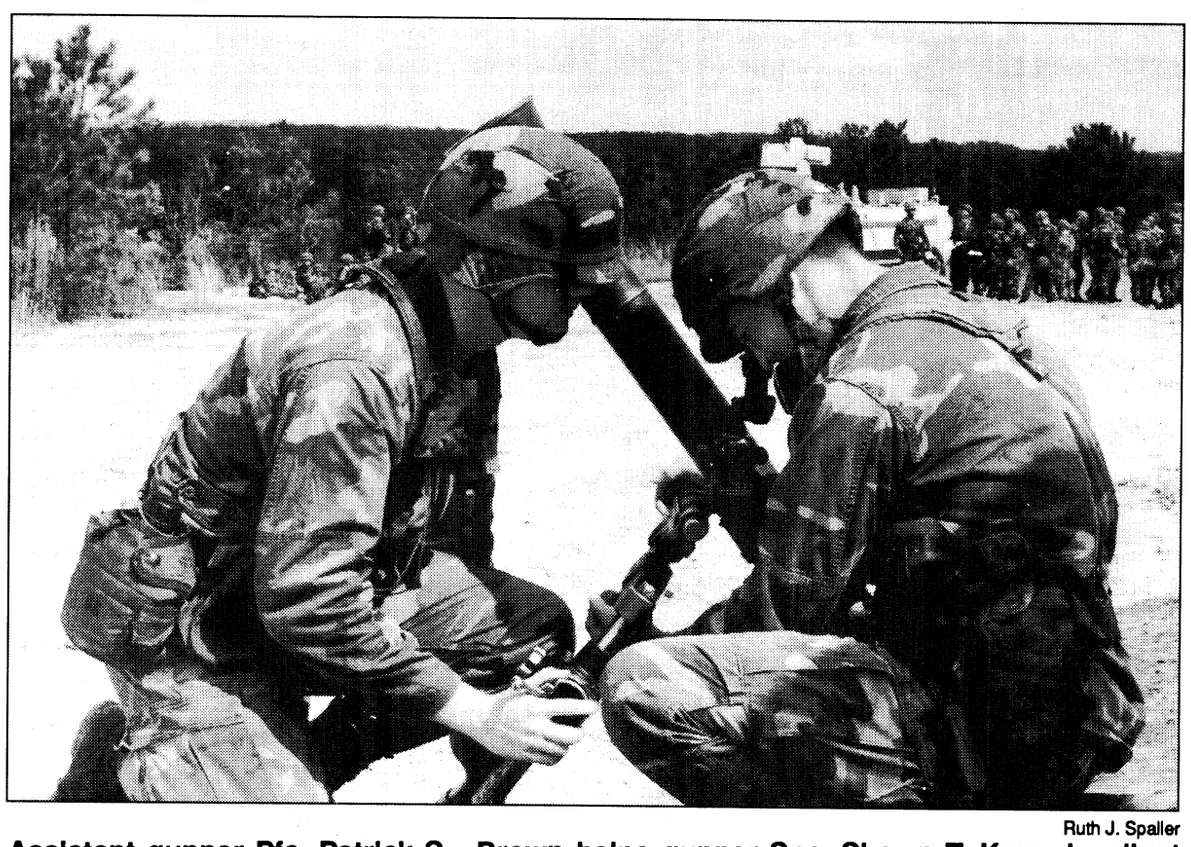
Exercise provides 'real world' training

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer



The radio crackles and a voice breaks through: "Foxtrot five five, this is Bravo zero one, fire priority target, over." All eyes fix on the diamond-shaped sand target 1,700 meters in front of them.

Another voice responds from the 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment's firing point 5,000 meters away, "Shot, over." There is a distant "thoop!" then a 30-second pause. A puff of fire and smoke appears as the 95-pound projectile hits the target, then a delayed "boom" as the explosion reaches the audiences' ears.

That audience was Infantry Officer Basic Course students watching a firepower exercise at the Concord Observation Post at Ferguson Range April 1.

The demonstration was part of a Joint Fire Support Exercise that included the live-firing of 155mm howitzers and 81mm mortars and was highlighted by a demonstration of close air support by Marine AH-1W Super Cobra helicopters and sorties by Air Force F-16 Flying Falcons dropping MK-82, 500-pound bombs.

Though the exercise occurs monthly to complement IOBC training, this one was different, according to Air Force Capt. Phillip P. Taber, the air liaison officer of Detachment 4, 18th Air Support Group, (Air Combat Command), attached to 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, (Mechanized), who helped the Fire Support Branch coordinate the exercise.

Ruth J. Spaller

Assistant gunner Pfc. Patrick S . Brown helps gunner Spc. Shawn T. Kennair adjust fire on an 81mm mortar.

Though the F-16s from the 69th Fighter Squadron "Werewolves," 347th Fighter Wing at Moody Air Force Base in Valdosta, Ga., have flown in the demonstration before, this is the first time the Marines have been used to support this kind of training exercise at Fort Benning, said Taber.

"In the past it has been hard to set up this type of exercise because of the availability of (Army) aviation assets," he said. "Marine Air Group 42, (a Marine reserve unit stationed at Dobbins Air Force Base/Naval Air Station in Atlanta), was readily available and willing to help."

Marine and Air Force participation made the training more "real world," Taber said.

"Joint training is definitely the way of the future," he said, "if for nothing else but to save money. But, if you look at Desert Storm, people were working together there who had never worked together before."

With this kind of training, Taber said, "we're trying to make the novelty of that go away.

"The students got a chance to see a little bit of everything here. It's better training for them to see what kind of firepower really is available to the infantry soldier," Taber said.

But the IOBC students were not the only ones to benefit from the exercise.

The integration of Marine helicopter tactics was mutually beneficial, according to Marine Capt. T. H. Vinskey, who piloted one of the helicopters in the demonstration.

"We're getting just as much training using our weapons systems as the lieutenants are getting to see the relationship between ground control and air support," Vinskey said.

"It's a good opportunity for us to get some shooting training done. This is the only range that we have access to in the Atlanta area," he said.

Sgt. 1st Class Ernest P. Archuleta, a platoon sergeant from Company E, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, said his mortar crews also profit from supporting the demonstration.

"It's always good to do live fire," Archuleta said. "It gives the soldiers the opportunity to see what it does, what the reaction time is, that type of thing."

After seeing the initial demonstration, students got hands-on training in the call-for-fire skills learned in the course.

Acting as forward observers, the students called in missions to fire direction center teams from Archuleta's unit. The teams then fine tuned the fire for the guns using a mortar ballistic computer and relayed the information to the mortar gun crews.

The students observed the impact of the round and made adjustments and corrections based on where the rounds burst.

"The new officers get to see what it's all about," Archuleta said. "This gives them the opportunity to call in a mission and actually see the round hit."

The students also got hands-on experience directing artillery fire, and they had the chance to talk to the helicopter pilots and ground crew teams and climb into the pilot's seat of the Cobras.

"We've spent hours in the classroom learning what close air support can do, and we've had classes on calling fire missions. But, coming out and seeing what it will actually do gives you a renewed appreciation for it," said 2nd Lt. Paul B. Sanford, one of the IOBC students.

Another student said the demonstration "made it worth coming to IOBC."

Along with the Air Force and Marine components, the 2nd Bn., 29th Inf. Regt. and elements of the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Regiment (Mechanized) supported the exercise.

29th conducts weapons demonstration

By Gregory Hart
29th Infantry Regiment

The 29th Infantry Regiment conducted a weapons system demonstration at Red Cloud Range March 25 and 26 for the Infantry Pre-Commanders Course students, the National War College students and visitors from the Association of the United States Army.

Soldiers and noncommissioned officers from the first and second battalions of the 29th Infantry Regiment were on hand as subject matter experts demonstrating the weapons systems found in the infantry.

The vehicle weapons systems on display were the M-2A1 and M-2A2 Bradley Fighting Vehicles, the M-1A1 Abrams main battle tank, the M-901 improved tube-launched optically-tracked, wire-guided vehicle, the M-106 mortar carrier and the Army's' new 120mm mortar.

The individual weapons and equipment demonstrated included the M-249 squad automatic weapon with red dot scope the M-16A3 with scope, the M-4 Carbine (a modified version of the M-16) the M-24 sniper weapon system and the MK-19 40mm automatic grenade launcher.

The visitors were also given the opportunity to drive the Bradley Fighting Vehicle while they were there.

Later that day, the students and guests were escorted to the Collins Training Center where they viewed the precision gunnery system and the unit conduct of fire trainer as well as other static displays.

WORLD WAR II — A LOOK BACK

50 years ago this week ...

• Adolf Hitler met with Benito Mussolini in Salzburg, Austria, to discuss the situation facing their countries in the wake of significant Allied gains and considerable Axis losses on both the Eastern and North African fronts. Despite earlier pleas made by several German field commanders to include Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, calling for immediate withdrawals to avoid the irreparable long-term destruction of Axis resources, the two men decided that they must hold on and further press the fight.

• In Burma, Gen. Masakazu Kawabe replaced Gen. Shojiro Iida as commander of the Japanese forces in the region, overseeing their reorganization as the Burma Area Army. In preparation for the continuing Japanese advance, Kawabe ordered the construction of new railways that involved using approximately 60,000 Allied prisoners of war as slave labor, 15,000 of whom died because of malnutrition, unsanitary conditions and ill-treatment.

• In North Africa, Axis forces abandoned the Wadi Akarit Line, falling back to their final defensive positions of the campaign in the hills between Cape Serrat and Enfidaville, as the Allies continued to advance. Britain's Eighth Army reached Djebel Garci and Takrouna, having taken Mahares as the British IX Corps broke out from the Fondouk Pass.

• The Germans announced the discovery of the bodies of 4,100 Polish officers in mass graves in the Katyn Forest in Poland. Later investigations confirmed suspicions that Soviet soldiers had gagged and bound each man before shooting them all in the back of the head.

• Gen. Basilio Valdes, the chief of staff of the Phillipine Army, continued his detailed tour of Fort Benning which had included an earlier inspection of the 10th Armored Division. Speaking at the Infantry School, he urged American soldiers to take full advantage of the post's training facilities.

This will be followed by remarks from the general and the presentation of the Outstanding Volunteer Awards.

Case noted that 3,534 positions were filled by 3,085 individual volunteers on Fort Benning from April 1991 through March , and 15 percent of the volunteer work force filled more than one position.

"Volunteerism at Fort Benning has increased by 28 percent during the past year," she said.

Fair promotes health awareness

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

What kinds of toys can be dangerous to children? How do you build muscle and lose fat? Which type of running shoes can help avoid injury?

These questions and many more were answered Saturday at the U.S. Army Medical Department Activity's annual health fair, which took place at the Post Exchange in the Main Mall.

The fair, sponsored by Martin Army Community Hospital and coordinated by Community Health Nursing, had personnel manning booths to answer health-related questions and provide information on the following:

- Adult health
- American Heart Association
- American Red Cross
- Audiology/optometry
- Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services/CHAMPUS Select
- Chaplain's services
- Community mental health
- Family health
- Gateway To Care
- HIV/AIDS education
- Laboratory
- Lupus Foundation
- Nutrition
- Obstetrics and gynecology
- Occupational therapy
- Pediatrics
- Pharmacy
- Physical therapy
- Safe disposal of medications
- Safety
- Sickle Cell Foundation
- Toy safety
- U.S. Army Dental Activity
- Vision screening

"The purpose of the fair is to establish a relationship among the Army community, the civilian community and local agencies for health promotion and disease prevention," said Capt. Kareece L. Larry, the community health nurse from Preventive Medicine who coordinated the event.

"We also want to help people become more aware of their own individual health needs," Larry said.

Health-screening stations were set up throughout the fair to help people do that. Participants filled out health-risk assessment questionnaires and had their blood pressure, blood cholesterol levels and vision checked.

Representatives from the different clinics and agencies handed out information, explained exhibits and talked to the more than 2,358 people who attended the fair about health-related issues.

Balloons provided by Preventive Medicine "added a festive touch," said Larry, and balls and coloring books provided by Army Community Services ensured no one left the fair empty handed.

AER campaign under way on post

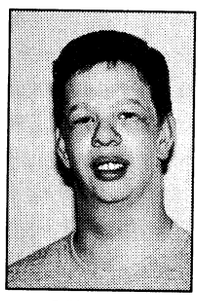
Soldiers are still encouraged to see their unit AER project officers to give to this annual campaign.

AER offers emergency financial assistance service in the form of no-interest loans and grants to active duty soldiers, family members, retirees, widows and members of the U.S. National Guard and Reserve.

15-year-old spends day in 'basic'



By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

The ground shook as gung-ho soldiers sped toward their enemy. Weapons in hand, with bayonets flaring, they attacked relentlessly sounding off with a battle cry of "KILL!"

But one soldier out of the aggressor mob was different. One soldier didn't have the intense look of a highly trained killer in his eyes. One soldier's face was covered with a child's smile of glee.

Michael Cureton, a 15-year-old special education student from Arnold Middle School, joined Company A, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment basic trainees Feb. 16 as they went through individual tactical training.

Cureton chose the Army as the career of his choice on "shadow day," a project in a six-week career course in which Cureton is enrolled. Students shadow employees, usually parents, in a field of work that interests them.

Michael

"We try to get the students to meet employees in as many careers as possible," said Jean Wilson, careers course teacher at Arnold Middle School. "We hope that the experience will make them better employees in the future."

Susan Cureton, Cureton's mother, knew that he had loved the Army since he was 8, so she called the Public Affairs Office to see if he could follow a drill sergeant around for a day. She said two days before shadow day, she received a call that the project had been approved.

"I've always liked the Army," said Cureton. "I have a lot of pins and stuff. I've had lots of relatives in the Army, too."

Two days later, Cureton and his mother were tromping around in the rain and mud with Company A as they learned how to move tactically, cross obstacles, select fighting positions and camouflage.

"I thought we would just go and watch some guy sit in his office all day," said Susan.

Cureton also camouflaged his face and ate lunch with the soldiers. His afternoon was finished by watching the soldiers fire weapons at a rifle range.

Lt. Col. Bruce Grant, battalion commander of 2nd Bn., 58th Inf. Regt., presented Cureton with a battalion crest and a certificate of appreciation.

"Not only was it good for Mike (Cureton)," said Capt. Mike Robinson, Company A commander, "but it was good for the soldiers' morale."

Cureton wrote Company A a thank-you letter and said that he plans to attend its graduation.

"I had a real good time, and I got a 100 on my report," Cureton said, "but the best thing was missing a whole day of school."

'Time Out Teddy' gives parenting tips

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

"Parenting is a skill that must be learned just like driving a car, cooking or woodworking. Most of us learned what we know about parenting from our own parents. This can be helpful or harmful depending on how we were treated."

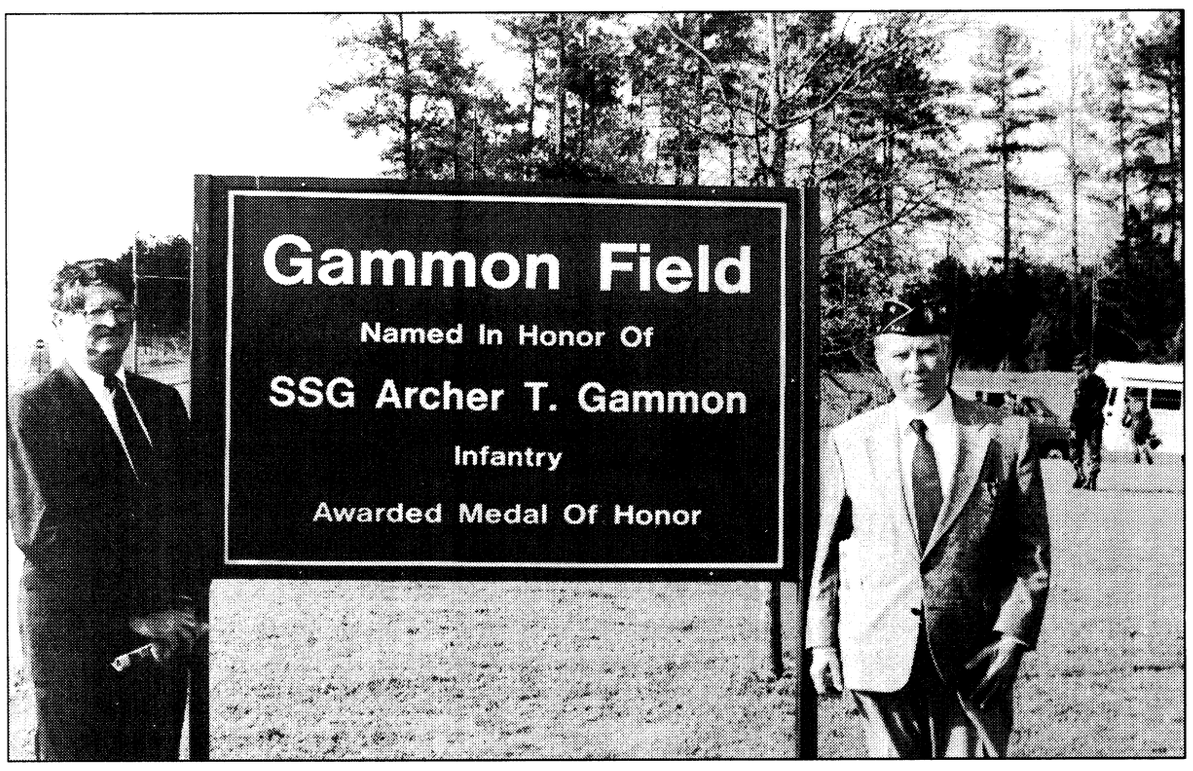
Becky Welch, Fort Benning Family Advocacy Program manager, said this noting that the the program's mascot, "Time Out Teddy," is being featured in some handouts given out this month by her office in observance of April as Child Abuse Prevention Month.

"Time Out Teddy" says that in addition to our own experiences, parenting skills can be learned through classes, support groups and counseling.

"Parenting is one of the most demanding jobs there is, and we need help sometimes in developing the skills necessary to make it a joy for both ourselves and our children," Welch said.

"Time Out Teddy" recommends the following:

- Don't stop being a person when you become a parent. Everyone has needs and interests. It is important for parents to take time out for themselves in order to feel good about meeting the needs of their children.



- Everyone needs certain things in order to develop properly. Good parents take time out to learn what tasks and behaviors are reasonable to expect from children at their ages.
- Good teamwork demands discipline not punishment. Positive discipline involves encouraging behaviors that we want children to learn. One way to point out errors and explain why they are wrong is a "time out."
- Children learn the rules by "time outs."

The inappropriate behaviors must be stated up front. Then parents select a boring, non-threatening area that allows the child to think about the behavior. Calmness and consistency are important.

When the time is up (one minute for each year of age), the child is allowed to return to normal activities without further comment.

- Parents should call "time out" for themselves for help when the warning signs are seen:
- Feelings of loneliness and isolation.
- Doubt, confusion or anxiety about parenting skills.
- Guilty feelings about the way the children are treated.
- Negative thoughts by the parents about themselves or their children.
- Recurring arguments or violence between parents.
- Accumulated stress, financial, emotional, medical, etc..
- Memories of abuse from childhood brought on by a child's behavior or looks.
- Alcohol or drug abuse problems within the family.

1/50th dedicates PT field

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet Staff Writer

The physical training field for the 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment was dedicated March 31 in honor of the late Staff Sgt. Archer T. Gammon.

Gammon was awarded the Medal of Honor in World War II for his actions near Bastogne, Belgium, on Jan. 11, 1945.

The ceremony began with an invocation by Chaplain (Capt.) Jeffrey Voyles. Lt. Col. Kevin M. Rice, commander of 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry, followed with his opening remarks.

Calvin Gammon, Archer Gammon's youngest brother, also spoke.

A surprise speaker who followed Calvin Gammon was Aubrey Ferrel, an assistant squad leader in Archer Gammon's unit.

Gammon was inducted into the Army in March 1942. After training, he was sent to France. In a matter of five months, he was promoted to staff sergeant.

On Jan. 11, 1945, Gammon earned the Medal of Honor during the Battle of the Bulge while he led a platoon of Company A, 9th Armored Infantry Battalion, 6th Armored Division.

Gammon saved his platoon by knocking out a machinegun and its three-man crew with grenades. He then single-handedly rushed an enemy tank, knocked out an automatic weapon and its four-man crew placed near the tank, killed two infantrymen as he continued his rush and drove the tank into retreat with his attack before he suffered a direct hit that killed him.

"I think on this day that nothing could be more correct in commemoration than naming this field after Archie Gammon," said Ferrel. "He was a soldier."

Ferrel and Calvin Gammon were presented with awards of appreciation from the battalion.

SOA shares in cultural forum

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

The School of the Americas was part of a cultural forum on Chile at Columbus College's Davidson Center March 30.

Col. Carlos Molina, assistant commandant for SOA and a cavalry officer from Chile; Dr. Russell W. Ramsey, visiting professor and instructor for SOA's Command and General Staff Course; and Dr. Richard A. Gorell, SOA's historian, comprised the panel of Chilean experts.

According to Molina, the forum presented an opportunity for him to share some of the cultural characteristics of his country in a social atmosphere with the people of Columbus.

Many of the approximately 150 people who attended were from the college's foreign language department, the Hosts of Latin Americans Organization and the SOA Support Group, Molina said.

Among the areas Molina covered in his presentation were: Chile's struggle for independence, historical aspects of the country, geographical characteristics and the country's economy.

"Chile now leads Latin America in economic growth and the government is working to get to the level of other developed countries, which will be possible in 10 more years," Molina said.

The strength and potential of Chile's economy was an issue echoed by Ramsey.

"Chile economically is a model nation with a stable currency, minimum inflation, and they pay their debts," Ramsey said.

Ramsey also touched on Chile's 17-year struggle to keep communism from gaining a foothold in the country.

According to Ramsey, during those Cold War years, the Chilean military had to act as an "escort regime maintaining the constitution, while curtailing civil liberties."

"The proof that this was better than doing nothing is the fact that in 1990 they voluntarily turned over power," he said.

Had the communist forces taken control, they would definitely have not turned over power, Ramsey added.

According to Molina, the forum allows an open channel of communication for people to talk about their countries.

"It is important for us to know about our neighbors so we can be better integrated in the next century," Molina added.

Retired CW4 captures basic training in 3-D

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

A soldier, face distorted in a ferocious war cry, jumps out with his bayonet poised in a thrusting position. Another soldier has the sights of a 9mm pistol lethally pegged right between your eyes. Yet, both of these soldiers are harmless to do any real damage to you. They are still images with the illusion of a three-dimensional figure.

Bill C. Walton, a retired chief warrant officer 4, recently published the first book on the infantry's One Station Unit Training in 3-D.

The book, titled "Back to Basics," was photographed with a stereo realist camera. The camera takes two pictures simultaneously from slightly different angles, said Walton. The double-image picture that is printed is called a stereograph.

Walton explained that in the development there is a left and right picture. Each single exposure has a larger view of field on its side. Through the stereoscope, the hand-held viewer, the exposures are combined into one view and give the illusion of a third-dimensional object, he said.

"For nine years as a civilian I promoted basic training," said Walton. "So, I wanted to do the book because it's never been done. We have covered the military in stereographs since the Crimean War, which pre-dated the Civil War, but this facet of the Army has never been covered."

Walton

Walton said that stereographs were very prevalent when he was a child.

"When I was a little boy, " Walton said, "these things (stereographs) were in the library, so I got interested at a young age."

Walton said that the book has taken him almost two years to complete.

"This (the book) is aimed not only at new soldiers, but the old soldiers who trained here," said Walton.

Copies of the book are available for $13.65 at the National Infantry Museum and the Post Exchange Main Mall starting Monday.

Novel traces OCS experience

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Oppressive heat. Long runs on dry, dusty roads. Low-crawling through red Georgia clay. Constant harassment. Sheer torture.

A new novel detailing the experiences of Vietnam-era officer candidates at the U.S. Army Signal Officer Candidate School at Fort Gordon, published by the Gallaher group of Ashland, Ky., is about to hit bookstore shelves.

The novel, titled "Officer Candidate School," is a fictionalized account of OCS training based on the experiences of author Al J. Sciarrino, who went through the OCS program in 1967, and his class.

"The story is real in regard to the training aspects," Sciarrino said. "I think the training described is an accurate portrayal of conditions in OCS during the Vietnam War as far as the severe mental, emotional and physical harassment."

Though fictional, the characters in the book are based on the composite characteristics of the soldiers and candidates he knew during his training, Sciarrino said.

"Of course, it's fiction and not exactly about the class," Sciarrino said. "I wanted to accurately portray OCS."

Sciarrino, a 1964 graduate of Baker High School, said he wrote the book because "OCS was tough — mentally, physically and emotionally, and I'd like more people to know."

"'An Officer and a Gentleman,' dealing with a much shorter Navy OCS program, seemed like a Boy Scout adventure in comparison," he said.

Sciarrino had originally wanted to write a historical account of his OCS training, but he found there was no information available.

Sciarrino

"I went to Fort Gordon looking (for information) but came away with only a few pictures and a news-paper article from the post historian's office," Sciarrino said.

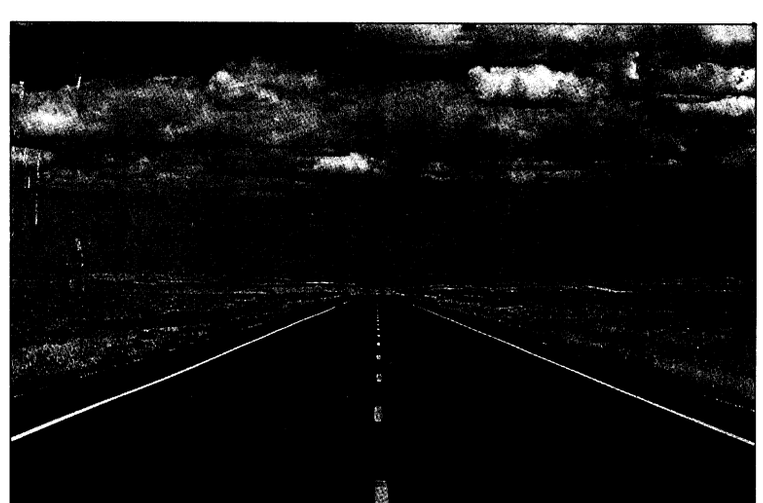
"I had lost all of my memorabilia," Sciarrino said. "All I had when I wrote the first draft of the book was my commissioning papers. It was all from memory."

After completing the first draft in 1991, Sciarrino wanted one of his classmates to read it, "even just to tell me it was dumb," he said.

"But, I hadn't seen or heard from any of them since graduation," he said.

By chance, he ran across a letter-to-the-editor in the American Legion Magazine written by his old OCS bunkmate.

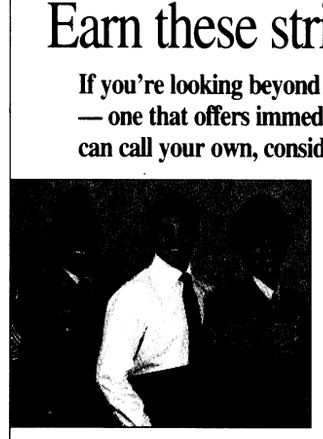
One phone call started a landslide of calls, as Sciarrino and a few of his former classmates tracked down the graduates of their class from a graduation program listing their names and old hometowns.



They accounted for 52 out of 55 graduates and planned a class reunion for Fort Gordon's 50th anniversary in 1991.

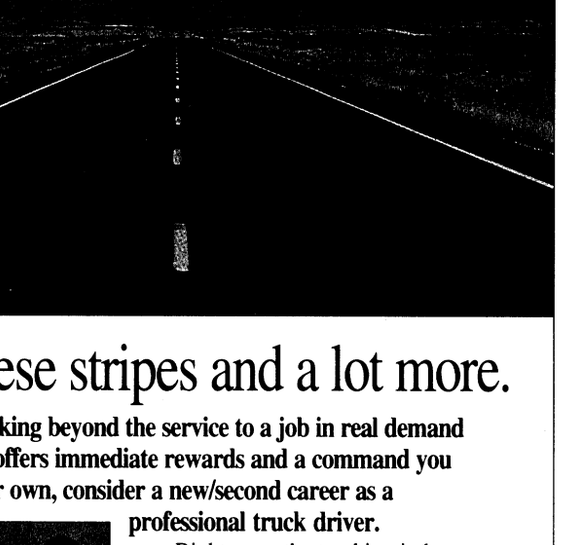
"The reunion allowed me to make the book a lot better," Sciarrino said. "I got to hear old stories and make connections that I'd forgotten. The story eventually went through several more drafts."

The reunion also helped Sciarrino find a publisher — John Gallaher, who was one of Sciarrino's classmates. "I didn't even have to go out looking," Sciarrino said.



Sciarrino is an attorney, now teaching business law at the State University of New York. He lives in Geneseo, N.Y., with his wife, Debi, and four children, Bronwyn, Reece, Sydney and Devyn.

His book is in the process of being distributed to military installations and post exchanges. Advance copies are now available through local merchants.



Earn these stripes and a lot more.

If you're looking beyond the service to a job in real demand — one that offers immediate rewards and a command you can call your own, consider a new/second career as a professional truck driver.

Right now, the trucking industry is welcoming applications from separating military veterans and civilian Defense Department personnel — both men and women. Wages and working conditions have never been better. Training, if needed, can be acquired in short order.

Military personnel should contact their Family Service Center, Army personnel their Army Career and Planning Center, and Department of Defense civilian employees their Civilian Personnel office, to learn about opportunities in their preferred location. Non-driving positions are also available. Inquire soon!

Disney World's Easter parade coming Sun.

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

As another Easter is celebrated, Joan Lunden is hopping down the bunny trail again ... straight to Walt Disney World.

The "Good Morning America" co-host has been a fixture of holiday-gala telecasts from the Florida resort and theme park for as long as ABC has been carrying them, and on Sunday, she'll be back there for her ninth Happy Easter Parade.

With syndicated talk-show staple Regis Philbin sharing the commentating duties, and Joey Lawrence (of the NBC series "Blossom") as a roving reporter who will chat with participants and spectators, the procession will feature the principal characters from the animated Disney movies that have become the company's biggest box-office hits to date: "Aladdin," "Beauty and the Beast" and "The Little Mermaid."

Additionally, "Full House" regulars Jodie Sweetin and Mary Kate Olsen will appear aboard one of the parade floats, and Taran Smith — one of the youngsters on the ABC comedy hit "Home Improvement" — will take viewers on a ride down Splash Mountain, billed by the Disney organization as "the country's fastest log flume ride."

Another of the special's segments will originate from Southern California's Disneyland, where the focus will be on Mickey's Toontown, a recently opened area that is populated by the many famous cartoon characters in the Disney stable (including, as is only appropriate for an Easter-themed event, Roger Rabbit).

Prior to each Easter or Christmas parade at Disney World, Lunden spends a couple of preparatory days there, taping promotional commercials for ABC and many of the network's individual affiliates. Normally, at least two of her three daughters accompany her ... but it was a different situation several weeks ago, since she ventured to Florida without them.

"I think it was the first time that ever happened," she reflects. "It just didn't work out that I could take them. Every weekend that I could go, they couldn't, and vice versa. They were off from private school the week after I finally had to go, but (the Disney people) couldn't wait any longer. I'd already waited until the very last minute, so I went without them, and I have to say that I felt very guilty. However, I also have to say that I had a really great time. The guide I always have at Disney World usually has my girls climbing all over him, and he said, 'I don't know about you, but I hardly know what to do with myself.' It was just so peaceful and so restful."

For the moment, though, she's happy that her daughters will be with her again while she's back at Walt Disney World for the actual Easter Parade broadcast.

As she explains, "I really felt bad coming home the last time and saying to little Sarah, 'Hi, sweetheart. Mickey and Minnie said hello to you.' She looked at me like, 'I don't wanna HEAR it!'"

The military uses early retirements to achieve 'rightsizing'

By Sydni Redmond
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Now many service members with less than 20 years are being offered a chance to retire early. The program is designed to help the Defense Department meet the drawdown goals and will only be offered for a short time.

Watch "Fort Benning Today" next week for the details on just how the "early out" process works.

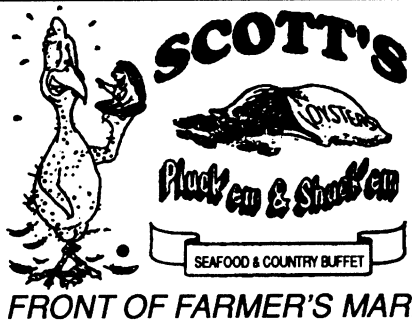
Fort Benning's weekly news show will also feature a segment with Sgt. Maj. of the Army Richard Kidd on the Army Career and Alumni Program and its efforts to assist separating soldiers.

"Victory News," the news show of the 24th Infantry Division, and post movie previews will also be showing.

USAIC TV Schedule

Fort Benning Today: 8:30 to 11 a.m.
Fort Benning Update: 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.
Specials: 2 to 4:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 4:30 to 8:30 p.m.

U.S. Army Infantry Center Television will highlight post events and list classified advertisements on the Fort Benning Community Bulletin Board with news and music from Soldiers Radio Satellite Network.



If you are a subscriber to Fort Benning Cable, you can watch USAIC TV on Channel 3, 24 hours a day.

Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:26, 7:56, 8:26 and 8:56 on WLTZ TV-38.

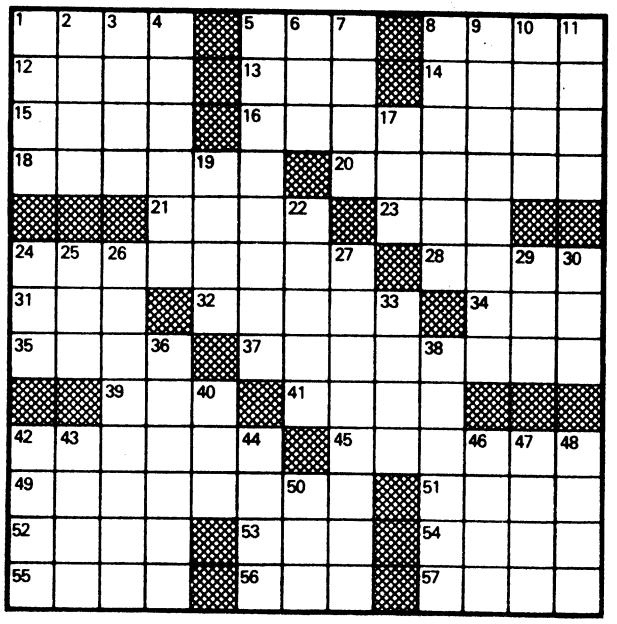
Springer holds over gospel play

Springer Opera House



The Springer's production of "Smoke on the Mountain" is being held over by popular demand. Two additional shows will be presented during the upcoming Easter weekend.

"The run continues and the fun continues," quipped Paul R. Pierce, Springer artistic director, when asked about the extension. "I've never seen anything like the audience response to this show. When you see people dancing in the aisles, that's pretty unusual for a Springer audience."

"Smoke on the Mountain" will continue today and Saturday at 8 p.m. Tickets are $14 for adults, $12 for senior adults and $7 for students.

Group rates for churches and other groups are still available for these performances. To make reservations, call the box office at 327-3688.

Easter comes to Biltmore

Biltmore Estates

ASHEVILLE, N.C. — Biltmore Estate, George Vanderbilt's turn-of-the-century home in Asheville, N.C., will celebrate the arrival of spring with its seventh annual Festival of Flowers today through May 9.

The event will kick off with a special Easter weekend, featuring the Estate's Easter egg hunt Saturday. This year, there will be two different hunts, one beginning at 11 a.m. and a second hunt starting at 3 p.m. Registration for the first hunt is from 8:30 until 10:45 a.m.; registration for the second hunt is scheduled from 11:30 a.m. until 2:45 p.m. Both hunts are open to children ages 2 to 9 years old.

Other activities during this Saturday will include a "Painting Eggstravaganza," where children will be asked to help paint giant Biltmore-scale eggs.

In addition to children's activities during Easter weekend, a special open house preview will be held for Biltmore Estate 12-month pass holders today, with special music until 8 p.m. in Biltmore House.

On April 17 and 18, activities will follow the theme of a "Turn of the Century Weekend," with events and musical performances reminiscent of life during the 1890s, when the Vanderbilts lived at Biltmore. Also a part of this weekend will be a display of antique carriages, an archery demonstration and crafts for children.

The weekend of April 24 and 25 will focus on Vanderbilt's interest in the arts, with musical performances by pianists (The Perotti-Dutt Duo), Impromptu! (from the Charlotte Choral Society) and the Taradiddle Players, who will present original theatrical interpretations of fractured fables.

On May 1 and 2, the weekend will highlight the beauty of Biltmore Estate's gardens with nature photography guided walks, special gardens tours, a tour of the estate's nursery, bird-watching walks and a "wonders of wildlife" program featuring native animals for children.

For more information, contact the Biltmore Company, One North Pack Square, Asheville, N.C. 28801 or phone (704) 255-1700 or (800) 543-2961.

PET OF THE WEEK

This playful mixed-breed puppy is looking for a home. She is approximately 8 weeks old.

For more information, contact the Veterinary Services Office in Building 265 at 545-1127. Hours are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:30 a.m. and 12:45 to 3 p.m. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

If you have lost a pet, check the stray impoundment facility in Building 263.

Animal Control on post is a division of the Military Police Activity. An officer will pick up strays and take them to the impoundment facility.

Stray pets are given three working days to be claimed from the the time they are picked up by animal control personnel. If the pets are not claimed, they become government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies tags are important, too, because it is the only way that Veterinary Services can contact the owner. Pet owners should register their pets and update their records when changes occur.

Georgia State Parks offer spring packages

Georgia Dept. of Natural Resources

ATLANTA — Spring is finally here and the Georgia State Parks have put together a series of packages to encourage Georgians of all ages to welcome in the spring.

Most of the state park reservations don't fill up until the summer, making spring an ideal time to enjoy Georgia's outdoors. From family camping trips to romantic getaways, the state parks are ready to provide a wide range of facilities and accommodations at special springtime prices.

Camping trips

For those who see the warmer weather as a chance to get as close to nature as possible, the Georgia State Parks have made camping trips even more affordable.

The Sunday through Thursday rates for all tent, trailer and recreational vehicle campsites are discounted $2 per night. The reduced rate of $8 per night is available through May 27 at all state park campgrounds. Senior citizens, aged 62 and older, who want to experience the great outdoors, enjoy an even greater discounted price of $6 per weeknight.

All the campgrounds have modern comfort stations and each individual site features electrical and water hook-up, cooking grill, and picnic table.

Cottages

Providing a scenic and relaxed alternative for spring breaks and mid-week vacations, the cottages at the state parks offer an option at low Sunday through Thursday rates.

The cottages, which range from one to three bedrooms, are available for couples who want a rustic and romantic hideaway as well as for families who are taking advantage of spring vacations The weeknight prices are $40 per night for one bedroom, $50 for two bedrooms and $60 for three bedrooms.

If the vacation stretches through the weekend, the weekend rates are $10 more per night for each cottage. All the cottages are heated and have fully-equipped kitchens. Bed linens, blankets, and towels are provided. Many have porches or decks to make taking advantage of the spring weather even easier.

Lodges

For those who want to be close to nature, but not too close, there are state park lodges. The lodges offer all the modern conveniences of a hotel set amid Georgia's natural beauty.

To make the unique offerings of the state park lodges accessible to everyone, the parks are offering a special $29 Sunday through Thursday rate, with no extra charge for additional persons. It's time for spring cleanup

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Along with children running through sprinklers, trees bursting into bloom and long lines forming at the post office at midnight Thursday, Fort Benning is undergoing one of its rituals of spring.

It's spring cleanup time again Monday to April 23, and that means that soldiers and family members have certain things to do.

According to Command Sgt. Maj. William H. Acebes, the post command sergeant major, the cleanup is designed to bring cantonment and housing areas to an "outstanding state of police."

"The reason we won the Army Communities of Excellence award is that everyone was involved," said Acebes, "and that's the spirit we need for the cleanup effort. (We need) people — military and civilian — taking pride in their housing and work areas.

"Self-Help has all kinds of supplies to help you beautify your yard, and they're free," he said. "If you don't understand how to do something, like edging or pruning, just ask."

The goal of the cleanup mission, said Acebes, is to improve the overall appearance of Fort Benning, clean up from winter and be prepared for the Infantry Conference.

Acebes said major subordinate units and directorates will release soldiers who live in on-post housing for one duty day to perform outside cleanup at their quarters, mission permitting.

Housing occupants are also responsible, said Acebes, for parking in areas that will allow street sweepers access to the streets.

According to Becky Welch of the Family Advocacy Program, a total of 1,200 kickballs and almost 1,800 T-shirts were given away. We're the best

Benning wins $1 million prize

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning is the best large installation in the Army.

The post was selected for the Army's Community of Excellence Award over Fort Sill, Okla., last year's winner, and Fort Lewis, Wash.

The winner receives a $1 million award that will be available in fiscal 1994.

It will be used to further enhance customer service and improve facilities used by soldiers and their families, according to post ACOE officials.

Members of the Department of the Army's Community of Excellence team visited the post recently looking at many of the same areas that won Fort Benning the Training and Doctrine Command's first-place award among large installations.

Two such areas that especially impressed the team members, according to Fort Benning's Commanding General, Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, were the dedication of post personnel and the involvement of the local community with the post.

He said that team members were "overwhelmed by the cooperation shown the military by people in the civilian community, from private citizens to the mayors."

White said he is most appreciative of this support. We are the best because of the outstanding relationships we enjoy throughout the entire tri-community, he said.

Community to show military appreciation

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The tri-communities of Columbus, Phenix City and Fort Benning will celebrate Military Appreciation Week May 10 to 15 in recognition of military organizations, service members and their families.

Military Appreciation Week will be filled with many events such as an essay contest and golf, fishing, and bowling tournaments.

All activities highlight the importance of the military in our area, officials said.

The week kicks off with a breakfast at the Harmony Church Fieldhouse May 10 at 6 a.m. Tickets will be soon be available in units.

Sponsors for Military Appreciation Week include the Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter Association of the United States Army, the Columbus Chamber of Commerce, the Phenix City-Russell County Chamber of Commerce and local businesses and organizations in the tri community.

3rd Bde. 24th ID prepares for NTC rotation

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

The 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized) began rail-loading equipment Monday in preparation for its upcoming training rotation to the National Training Center at Fort Irwin, Calif.

Six hundred and thirteen vehicles ranging from high mobility multi-purpose wheeled vehicles to M-9 armored combat earthmovers were loaded onto 169 train cars over the course of five days to begin their cross-country journey, said 1st Lt. Randy R. Theisen, the brigade transportation officer.

The equipment, including the armored vehicle launched mine clearing line charge, which the brigade has never used at NTC before, will take about 10 days to arrive in California, Theisen said.

The advance party will board a plane to California Wednesday, followed Thursday by Movement Control Center personnel who will coordinate the arrival of the rest of the brigade and equipment Friday and Saturday, said 2nd Lt. Richard A. Stebbins, the unit movement officer for Company B, 317th Engineer Battalion.

"There is a lot of planning that goes into an air- or rail-load operation like this one," said Stebbins. "It's an exercise just getting everyone out there."

Once they arrive, the soldiers spend a week drawing and preparing equipment.

The majority of equipment they will use, though, is equipment they draw from Fort Irwin, said Stebbins.

When the equipment is ready, the actual field exercise portion of the rotation begins. The soldiers spend 14 days in the desert conducting simulated combat missions.

NTC mission controllers provide scenarios that give the participants practice for real conflict, Stebbins said.

"The rotation is important because it gives a unit the opportunity to get as close to real combat conditions as possible," he said.

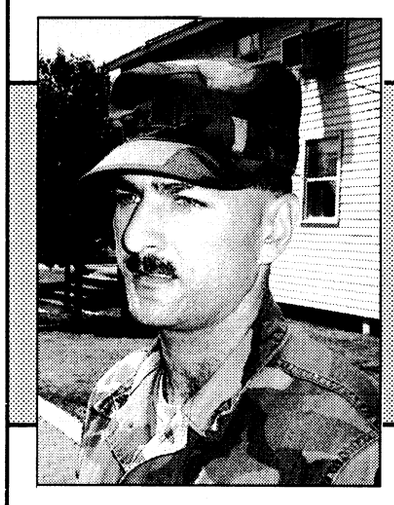
Though they don't necessarily look forward to a month of long hours spent being "hot, dry, dusty and dirty," as Spc. Robert H. Haws of Company A, 317th Engineer Battalion said, they recognize the value of the training they will be getting.

"It was excellent training for me," Stebbins said of his first NTC rotation. "It taught me a great deal about our engineer capabilities and how we are used on the battlefield ... things I need to know as a platoon leader, or as a company or battalion commander."

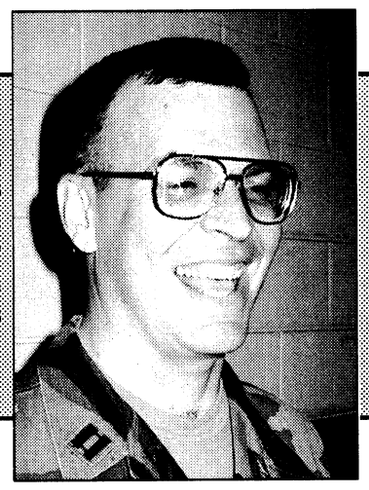
Sgt. Jeff Moomau of Company A, 317th Engineer Battalion, who was stationed at Fort Irwin from 1987 to 1989, is looking forward to going back.

"It will be different going with this unit and being part of the training force," Moomau said. "I should learn more about American tactics rather than Russian doctrine this time," he said.

Spc. Michael N. Harvey, also of Company A, 317th Engineer Battalion, is another looking forward to the rotation. He has never been to NTC before, but says, "even if it's just a bunch of rocks and sand, at least I can say I've been to California."

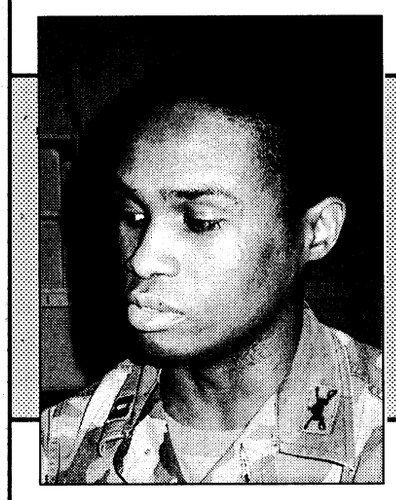


Ruth J. Spaller



Sgt. Jeffery Hankins, of Company C, 317th Engineer Battalion, directs a truck onto a railway car.

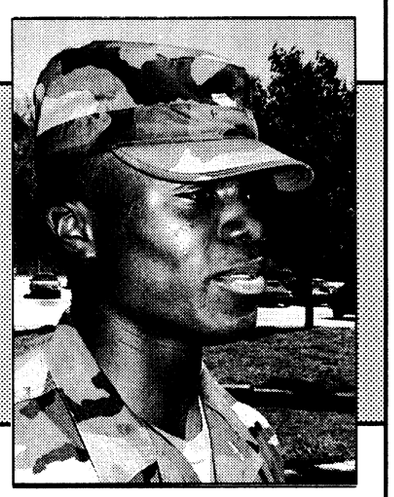
VARIOUS VOICES



If you were offered a 15-year retirement with reduced benefits, would you take it?

Sgt. Daniel R. Cushman, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment — "Yes I would. If they made it optional, it would benefit a lot of soldiers."

Capt. Michael N. McManus, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "Right now no, because I should get promoted in a few months and I'd rather retire as a major."



Capt. Crayton L. Kirkland, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "Yes, if you have been in there for a while and you have supported the Army to a point where you are ready for retirement, I'd say go ahead and take the opportunity."

Sgt. Lisa M. Ward, 988th Military Police Company — "No, because I'm planning to stay in until I become a sergeant major."

Spc. Donna M. Straitiff, Company E, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment — "Yes, because I'm a mother and wife both, so the military has to come second with me."

Pvt. 1 Ronnie G. Bright, 75th Ranger Regiment — "No, because if you go 15 years, you might as well go five more and get your full benefits."

Lemming mentality not for heroes

COMMENTARY

Normally I take my nap during prime time television so I can rest up for bed.

But the other day I caught portions of two programs that got me thinking.

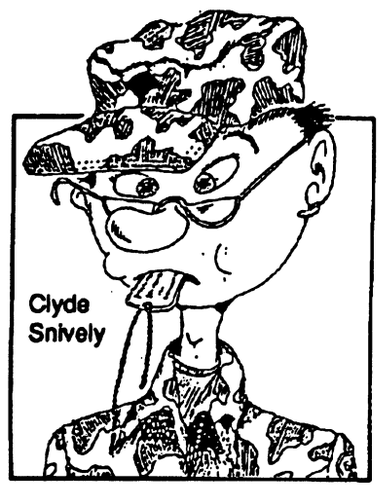
The first involved the lemming-like exodus of college students to various fun and sun spots for Easter break.

The second was a National Geographic piece about a game preserve in Botswana.

In the National Geographic piece, there was a scene of thirsty birds hovering over a river to take a drink. There were so many they couldn't all land in the water at once.

For those that did land, hungry crocodiles lurked in the water and were feasting on these birds. Yet because the birds were caught up in the frenzy of the flock, they were too dumb to go elsewhere and drink out of danger, instead, continuing to land, drink, and be eaten.

The college students shown on TV were like the birds. Because all their buds went to certain places and did certain things, they too did it. They'd get bombed out of their minds with their mindless drinking games, risk life and limb with various stunts to impress ... whom? ... fellow witless students? and bring back various exotic social diseases.



All that got me to thinking about the life of a single soldier.

What do we do that's different from the students and the birds?

We too have that herd instinct. When we get our weekend break during One Station Unit Training, we pile into a local cab and head for "the strip" to ogle babes and make fools of ourselves by strutting our stuff.

We hang off balconies of our motel, drunkenly calling out to fellow soldiers and passerbys, have underwater swimming contests in the motel pool and pay some "sympathetic" lady we meet in the nearby fast food place for her company.

After OSUT we go to our units. The unit might be right here with the rangers or 3d Brigade, or it might be at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., or even overseas in Korea or Germany.

But no matter where, we still act the same, still act like the students, still act like we did when we were in OSUT, except now we have more money to spend, possibly our own wheels, and run with a different crowd.

But we still act like simpletons, doing what "everyone else is doing," because we don't want to be different, don't want to be perceived as a nerd or a goody-two-shoes.

But the trouble we get into is basically the same. We get arrested for urinating in public, for driving while intoxicated and we might even get shot at, depending upon where we're doing our thing.

We also do it to demonstrate our independence from post, because we "want to get away from the Army" for a few hours.

We sure don't do it to save money or because there's more to offer downtown.

Shopping is cheaper on post, movies are cheaper, bowling's cheaper.

But there's that image thing. Only OSUT soldiers or kids stay on post. We heroes need to get off post or no one will think of us as heroes.

But now the Army is trying to find ways of making staying on post more attractive. So we're being asked what kind of entertainment we want, what kind of clubs we want, even what kind of barracks rooms we want.

This is our chance to get what we want, to come up with an alternative to being pressured into being the birds that fall into the jaws of the waiting crocodiles.

Positive gifts leave lasting impressions

By Jerry Mootes
U.S. Army Chemical Center

FORT McCLELLAN, Ala. — What will you leave behind? Will the church, community, nation or world be better because you were an inhabitant of this planet? Will others remember you because you improved the personal, family, community, national or international spiritual quality of life?

What impact are you having on the place where you work and live, the position you hold and the people with whom you associate daily, monthly or annually?

Effective use of our time, treasures and talents is crucial if we are to have the impact God wants us to have on this planet. They are only entrusted to use for a season. There will be a time when we will leave them all behind. Will it be-said that we effectively used all God entrusted to us?

Whatever position you hold and power or influence you have are not permanent. The time will come when you will no longer hold the position or have the power and influence.

Gen. Bernard Rogers, past chief of staff of the U.S. Army and Supreme Headquarters, Allied Powers Europe commander, commented after his retirement that the transition to a "has been" is sudden and final. He spoke of the long climb up the promotional ladder from lieutenant to four-star-rank and the top Army job. He then spoke of how that soon after his retirement he went to his sedan and the car went nowhere.

Once you have left your position by accepting another, through retiring or through death, will it be said that you left the place, position and people in better condition than when you arrived?

Former Secretary of State James A. Baker, at the National Prayer Breakfast in Washington, D.C., on Feb. 1, 1990, told about an incident in his life that helped him to put this in perspective.

"I had an experience one morning a few years ago when I was the White House chief of staff. As my driver turned the car into the northwest gate, I looked down Pennsylvania Avenue and noticed a man walking alone. He was someone many of you would have recognized — a chief of staff in a previous administration.

"There he was, alone — no reporters, no security, no adoring public, no trappings of power — just one solitary man alone with his thoughts.

"That mental image continually serves to remind me of the impermanence of power and place. That man had it all, but only for a time. That memory puts my own life in perspective. When I leave Washington, what will remain?"

What about you? When you leave your current position, place of influence and the people you make an impact on, what will remain? Will your position be held in higher esteem because you were in it? Will it be a better place because you were there? Will the people you served be better because of you?

The choice is yours. You can make a difference. The people you serve, the position you hold and the place where you work can be improved substantially because you were there. Caring, selfless, ethical leadership can contribute positive, long-lasting benefits to the place, position and people you serve. Uncaring, self-serving, unethical leadership can be devastating.

Choose to leave behind a highly respected position, an improved-place and better individual, family members, communities, national and international people.

People will appreciate and remember you were there. They will be thankful for who you were and what you left behind. And great can be your reward now and in eternity.

If you were a part of Fort Benning's history and have a human interest story or photos to share, call us at 545-2201 or 682-3346, or write us at Infantry Hall, Room 601.

Single soldiers to be surveyed

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Members of the Single Soldier Living Community Advisory Board, headed by Post Command Sgt. Maj. William H. Acebes and Garrison Sgt. Maj. Ireland D. Pulley, will conduct surveys of selected single soldiers for input to improve services and facilities in the five single-soldier communities.

The surveys will be conducted on the following dates: Harmony Church, Tuesday, 7:30 to 9:30 a.m. in the NCOA Classroom (Building 4485); Sand Hill, Thursday, 9 to 11 a.m. in the 2nd Bn, 54th Inf. Classroom (Building 3240); Kelley Hill, Thursday, 2 to 4 p.m. in the Kelley Hill Theater; South Main Post, Friday, 9 to 11 a.m. location to be announced; North Main Post, Friday, 1 to 3 p.m. in the Main Post Theater.

The survey, which covers 11 areas, is designed to identify specific needs in each single soldier community to improve quality of life, said Pulley. "Once the needs are identified they will be the basis for improving our single soldiers' quality of life through short and long-range goals.

"I can't stress enough the importance of each soldier's thoughtful and serious participation in filling out the surveys. Without their help, we can't make this program work for our single soldiers," he said.

OWC establishes fund to assist accident victims

An accident fund is being set up by the Officers' Wives' Club for the six Fort Benning family members who were injured in an auto accident April 9.

The injured Fort Benning family members were Kathleen S. Meade, Terry Meade, Erin Meade, Merideth Everett, Mandy Stacy, Jose Rodriquez and Tiffany Dabbs.

Because they were hospitalized in civilian hospitals, the fund is being established to help defray expenses.

Contributions can be made at any branch of Columbus Bank and Trust.

Donors should tell the teller they are contributing to the OWC Accident Fund.

Legal Assistance wins excellence award

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning's Legal Assistance Division won the 1992 Chief of Staff Award for Excellence in Legal Assistance.

According to Jane Winand, chief of legal assistance, the award was given to 33 of the 126 major command posts, and it has been won by Fort Benning four of the last five years.

"In our case," said Winand, "the judges were impressed by the depth of experience of our staff, by our level of in-court representation and by our tax assistance program."

Winand said the legal assistance staff here combines military and civilian lawyers, some of whom are state licensed.

"A lot of places are understaffed, and most posts don't have attorneys who are licensed in state," she said. "Our staff makes it possible for us to offer a lot more services to our clients than many other military legal assistance offices can."

> "Our staff makes it possible for us to offer a lot more services than many other military legal assistance offices can."
>
> — Jane Winand
> Chief, Legal Assistance Division

Winand said services available at Fort Benning include stepparent adoptions, legal separations and advice and assistance in a number of other areas.

"At this time of the year, we're really busy with tax assistance," said Winand. "We have clients in the office throughout the week, and we set up at the Post Exchange at the Main Mall on Saturdays. We've been able to help a lot of people through this program."

Winand said that while the award recognizes the Fort Benning Legal Assistance Division's achievements, the award process promotes the sharing of ideas as well.

"People are sometimes so busy getting the job done, they don't take the time to share ideas," she said.

"To apply for the award, you have to write up your office's achievements," Winand said. "That gives the people in Washington a chance to find out what's being done in legal assistance around the world.

"Like the Army Communities of Excellence competition," she said, "the Chief of Staff Award promotes the sharing of new ideas and programs to the benefit of the entire Army."

Beware of financial conflict of interest

Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Editor's note: This is the third in a series of five articles on the new "Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch," which became effective in February. Next week's article will discuss exchanging gifts between government employees.

There are new rules concerning financial conflicts of interests; that is, the potential for enhancing one's personal financial position at the expense of one's government responsibilities or by use of one's official position or knowledge.

Government employees are prohibited from taking any action in their government capacity on a particular matter in which they, their spouse or their minor child has a financial interest.

This prohibition includes not only approval or disapproval of a contract, claim or other matter, but also any recommendations, advice or other action in connection with the matter.

Conflicts of interest can arise in a number of ways. However, the three most common occur in connection with investments, outside employment or negotiations for employment.

The Office of Government Ethics regulation prohibits employees from taking official action on a matter when the employees or their spouse or minor child owns stock in a company with an interest in the matter, is negotiating for employment with such a company or is an employee of such a company.

Also, employees should not take actions on matters when their relationship with a party having an interest in the matter would lead a reasonable person with knowledge of the relevant facts to question their impartiality, even though that relationship would not be considered a financial interest.

Examples include relationships with:

• An organization with which an employee has or seeks a contractual relationship other than a routine commercial transaction.

• A member of an employee's household, even when the person is not a spouse or child

• A relative with whom the employee has a close personal relationship.

• An organization where employees or their spouse, parent or minor child was employed or served as an officer, director or employee during the last year.

• An organization, including professional organizations, (such as the Association of the United States Army or the Noncommissioned Officers Association) in which the employee is an active participant.

Additionally, an employee is barred for two years from taking actions that would affect a former employer if the employee received more than $10,000 from that employer before entering the government.

Employees who may not participate in a matter, because of a financial interest or other relationship, may resolve the situation in one of three ways.

• First, they may disqualify themselves from taking official actions on the matter.

The regulation provides that the disqualification requirement can be met by simply not taking action on a matter. However, it does require the employees to notify their supervisors.

The OGE regulation does note that in many cases it would be prudent to create a written record of a disqualification, and a supervisor or an ethics counselor can require that a disqualification be in writing to protect all concerned.

• Secondly, employees may cure some conflicts through divesting themselves of the relationship creating the conflict. This is most effective when dealing with conflicts arising from ownership of an asset, such as a stock or bond.

Where divestiture is required by the employee's agency, the employee will be allowed to defer taxes on any capital gains resulting from the sale.

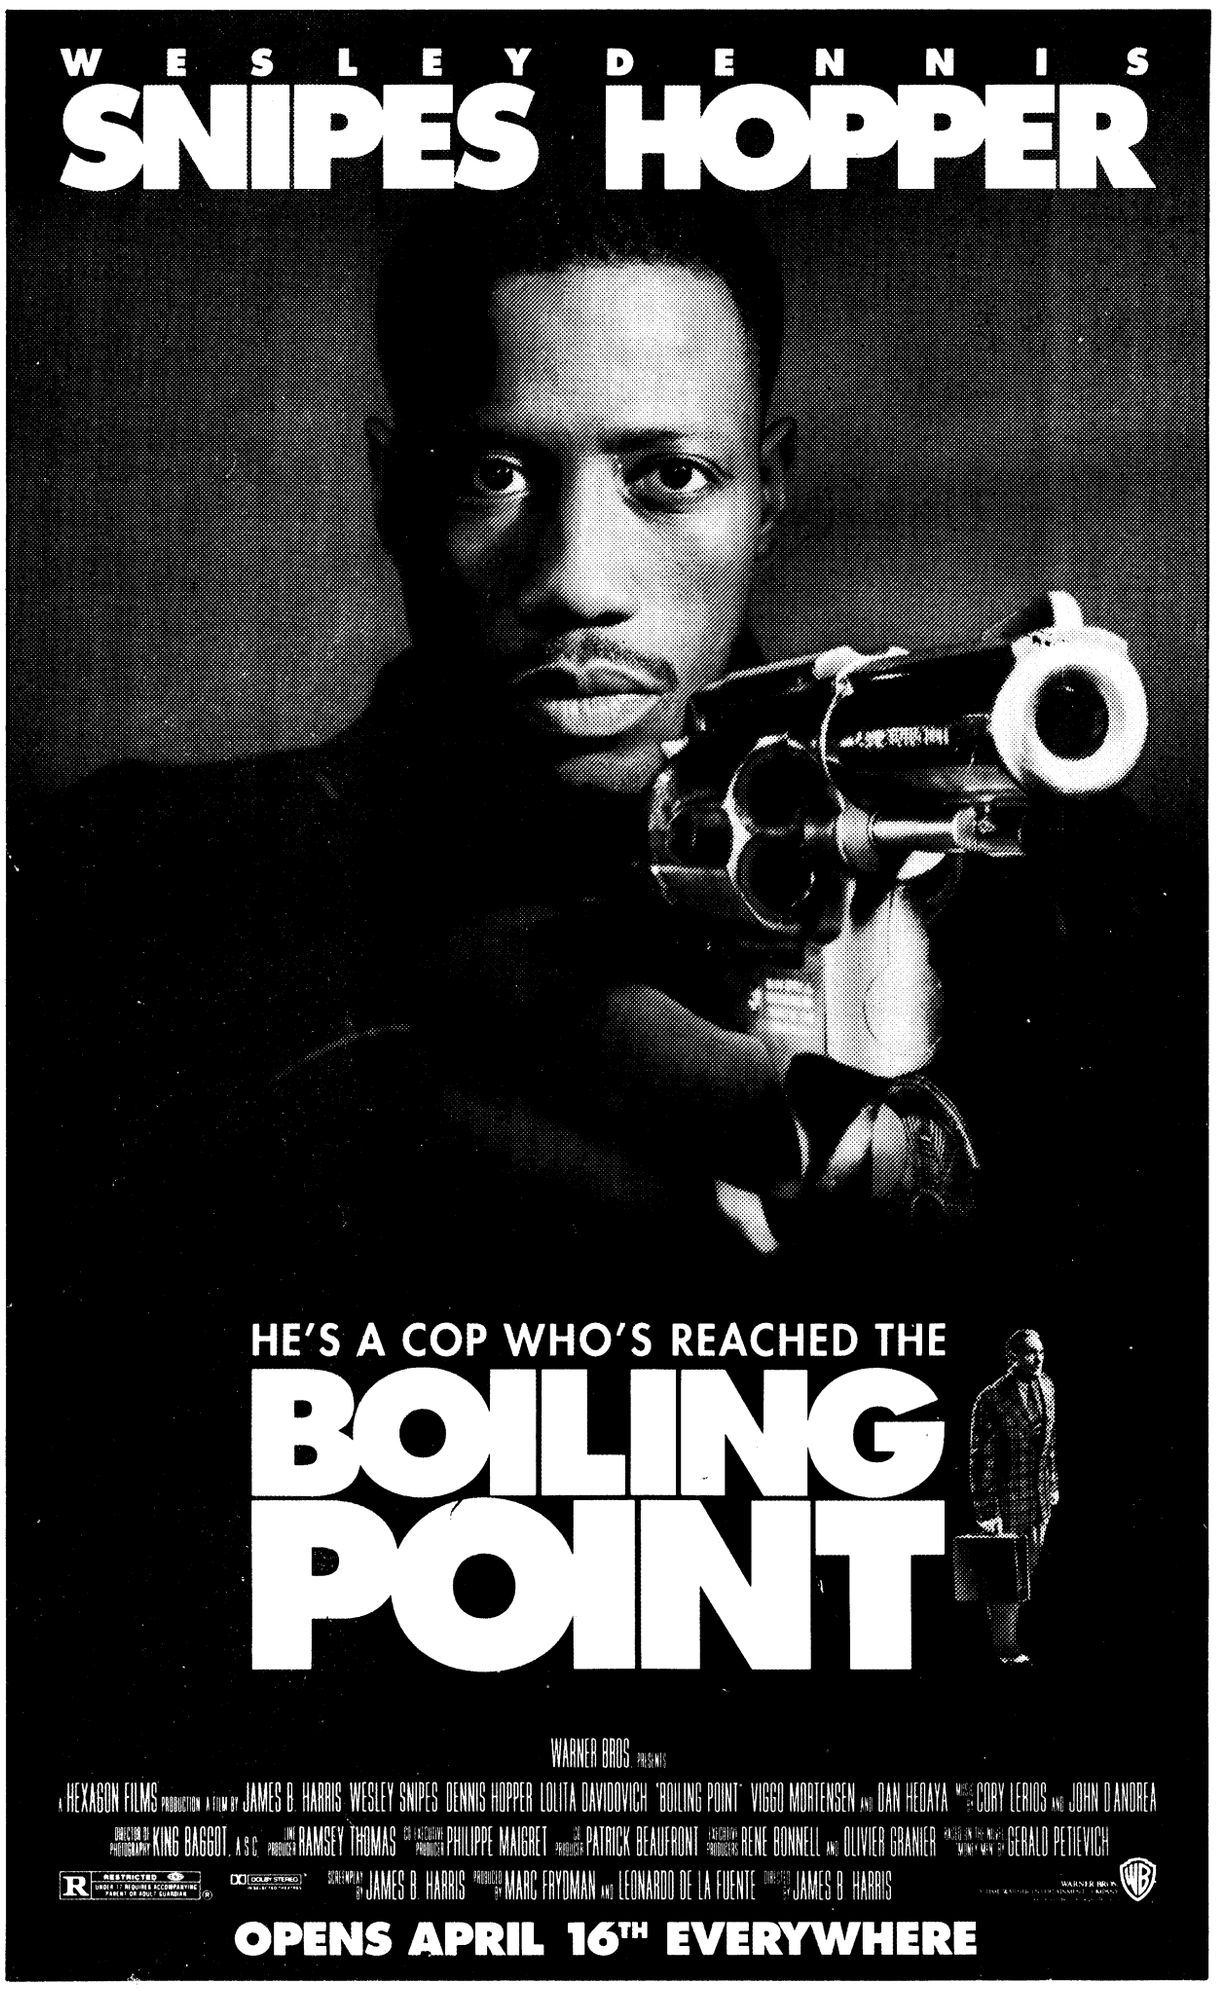
The regulation also provides that employees may be directed to divest or not acquire an asset if there would be a substantial conflict between the employees' holding of the asset and the performance of their official duties.

• Finally, in some cases, a waiver may be granted so that an employee may continue taking actions on a matter notwithstanding a financial interest or conflicting relationship.

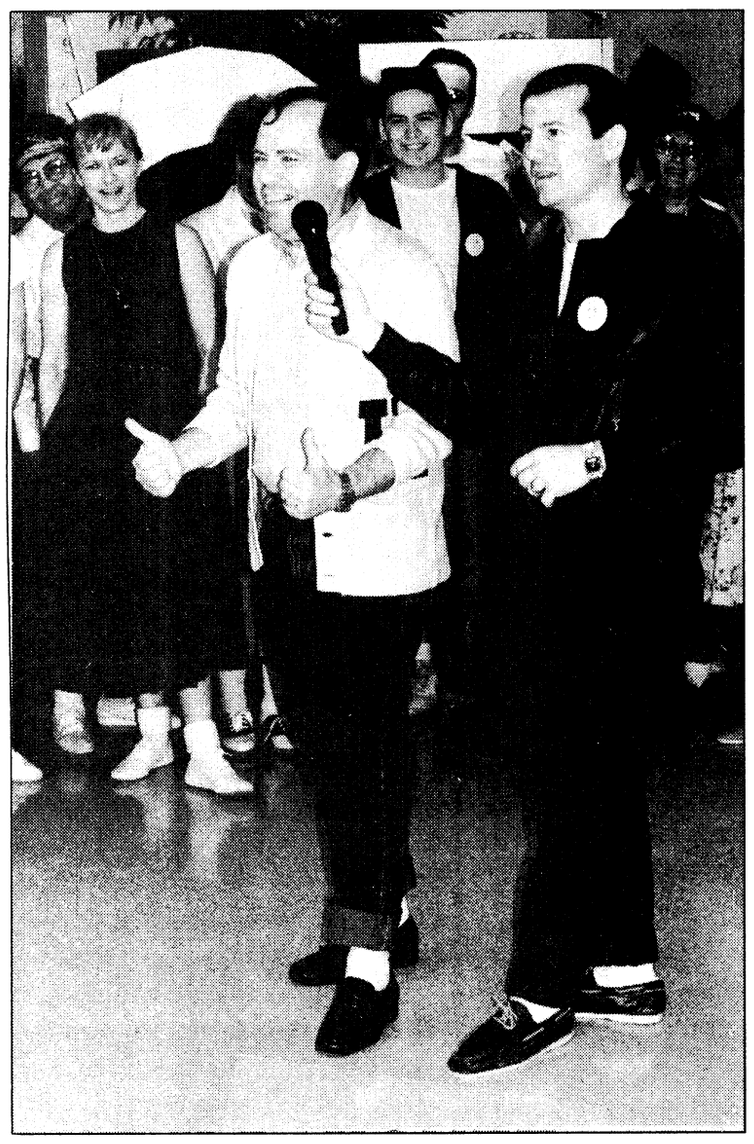
When the waiver is desired, it must be in writing and, where practicable, coordinated in advance with OGE. A copy of any waiver must be filed with OGE.

When the interest or relationship is not a financial conflict of interest, but one that may cause concern about the employee's impartiality, the agency ethics official can determine whether the interest of the government in the employee's participation outweighs any concern over a potential questioning of the employee's impartiality.

The regulation also prohibits participation in affected official matters whenever one is seeking employment.



Seeking employment includes actions such as sending resumes, and making or receiving communications regarding the possibility of future employment with an organization.



With respect to unsolicited resumes, if the employee receives no responses after two months have passed, disqualification based on seeking employment is no longer necessary.

Certain activity in this area, however, does not require disqualification. Merely writing a company for a job application is not sufficient to create a conflict situation. Also, if an unsolicited job offer from a company is rejected outright, no disqualification is necessary.

Additionally, there are other statutes that restrict employment negotiations. One requires certain defense officials performing a procurement function to report employment contacts with the contractor.

This article is not a comprehensive statement of the regulation. Questions about the regulation and its applicability to specific factual situations should be addressed to the installation ethics counselor who can be reached at 545-3285.

Class enlightens attendees about alcohol, drugs

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Soldiers who attend the Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention Training class are in for some eye-opening information.

A blend of psychology and factual data is used to teach those in attendance about the realities of alcohol and drug abuse.

The class was originally intended for soldiers who had committed some type of formal alcohol abuse, such as being convicted of driving under the influence, but enrollment is now open to any soldier. Commanders can also refer soldiers in their commands who they believe to be at risk, but who have not actually committed an offense.

Allen Curry, education coordinator, who is the instructor for the classes, said the classes are not meant as a form of punishment or extra duty.

"We do not make value judgments in the class and we do not try to make people stop drinking. If you are of legal age and want to drink, that's fine," Curry said. "Just be careful. We want soldiers to take an honest look at their behavior and evaluate the potential for risk to themselves, their families and other people."

Curry said that the six hour class, held twice each month on Saturday, is not just a series of lectures.

"The class is also a forum for those in attendance to ask any questions they want concerning alcohol and drugs," he said.

The blocks of instruction focus on several different areas, including the legal consequences of alcohol and drug abuse, career ramifications and the effects of alcohol on the body.

"We also talk about psychology, especially as it deals with the decision-making process and people's ability to rationalize their problems," said Curry. "I want those taking the class to make an honest appraisal of their lives and their goals and see if alcohol or drugs is helping or hurting them in achieving those goals."

The instruction also touches on alcoholism and how to recognize it, but the class is not really intended for alcoholics; they are placed in a more advanced treatment program, Curry said.

Curry added that the class is also an excellent way to learn about many of the misconceptions behind the use of alcohol and drugs.

"It's unbelievable how much false information is out there," said Curry. "People believe all kinds of far out things, like putting pennies in their mouths will stop alcohol from registering on a breathalyzer."

Between February 1992 and February 1993, 348 soldiers have attended the class. Ninety-two percent had no further problems, Curry said.

"I'm not going to claim that the class alone is responsible for the high success rate. It could be that the incident that caused a soldier to be referred to the class woke him or her up to reality, but I do believe that most of those who take the class are motivated to drink more responsibly," Curry said.

Curry encouraged commanders to use the classes as a preventative tool by identifying their high risk soldiers and referring them to the class. He also encouraged any soldier who wants to learn more about alcohol and drug use, to sign up for the class.

Interested soldiers can call Sandra Bowling at 545-1138 or 545-4993 for more information.

Commissary makes changes

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

The Commissary finished an improvement project March 29 after installing $98,000 worth of new shelving and standardizing the layout of products according to new Defense Commissary Agency guidelines.

This project is to be followed by a major renovation, set to begin in fiscal 1994, that will expand the Commissary's floor space from 38,000 to 45,000 square feet, add a bakery and replace display cases and freezers.

The recent reshelving process eliminated four feet of shelf space from the front and back of each aisle, creating more open space near the checkout area in the front of the store and the meat counter in the rear.

"We did this without losing any shelf space," said Michael S. Waksmonski, the deputy Commissary officer. "When we reset the merchandise, we fine tuned the shelf allocation for each item to hold the amount of merchandise we need throughout the day."

The placement of items on the shelves is now based on a standardized set up guided by the DeCA for all Department of Defense Commissaries.

"It's going to be more convenient," Waksmonski said. "No matter what base you go to, the same item will be in the same place."

This is the first time items in the store have been moved since 1983, Waksmonski said, but the relocation of items has only been an initial inconvenience.

As customers have become accustomed to the new shelf arrangement, there have been a lot of compliments on the improvements, Waksmonski said.

"People say the wider aisles are better and that it's easier to move around. They like the extra space," he said.

The shelves were all replaced on Mondays, the day the Commissary is customarily closed, in an effort to limit the inconvenience to the customers.

The upcoming renovation, scheduled to be completed in fiscal 1995, will also occur with no closure time.

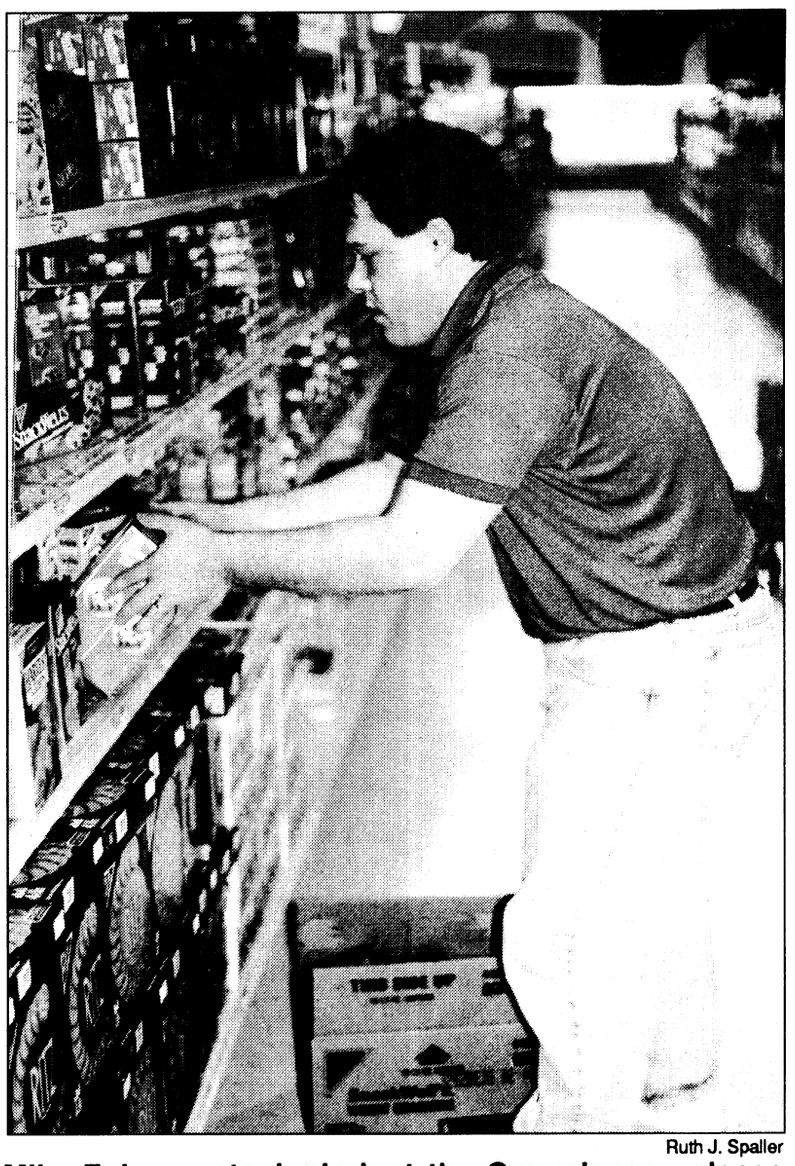
"It will be done in phases to eliminate any disruptive service to the customer and operation of the store," Waksmonski said.

The $7.6 million renovation contract includes a new lighting package, new floor, new equipment and the installation of customer restrooms, Waksmonski said.

The frequent delivery system the Commissary recently adopted freed warehouse space that will be converted to floor space, he said.

The increase will make the Commissary "the largest grocery store in the area," Waksmonski said.

The general floor plan will remain the same, but "the whole store interior will be redone completely," he said.



The deli will be moved from the rear of the store to the right of the customer entrance and become a combined deli and bakery.

The dairy and produce sections will be "flip-flopped," so that the produce section will be at the front of the store and the dairy section will be at the back, according to Waksmonski.

With this renovation "the patrons will see their surcharge dollars coming back into their own store," he said.

When the renovations are finished, the Commissary will be a "state-of-the-art" grocery store, Waksmonski said. "The patrons will definitely benefit."

The Commissary is currently replacing light bulbs and waiting for new, more complete aisle signs.

Soldiers get awards

By Kent Earls
13th Corps Support Battalion

Four soldiers from 498th (Air Ambulance) Medical Company were recently recognized for their contributions to rescue operations conducted at Dahlonega, Ga.

The soldiers were presented Army Achievement Medals by Lt. Col. Spike Rupert, the 13th Corps Support Battalion commander.

Chief Warrant Officer 2 Shawn Cummings, pilot-in-command; Chief Warrant Officer 2 Mark Ilg, pilot; Sgt. Timothy Berghorn, crew chief; and Sgt. Michael St. John, flight medic, were notified of a mission to assist the Georgia State Police in finding six hikers in the mountains March 15 shortly after 1 p.m.

The aircraft departed Mosby Army Heliport, Camp Frank D. Merrill at 1:40 p.m. with an Army ranger on board. Within an hour, the police helicopter found the hikers but were unable to land.

The crew then lowered the medic and the ranger to the stranded hikers with the aircraft's high performance hoist and a jungle penetrator (a device that can be lowered through trees of any size). These two individuals directed the hikers to a landing site about two kilometers away where the Army UH-60 Blackhawk landed and carried the whole group back to the camp.

Upon arrival, the hikers mentioned that they had seen an old man on the mountain trail a couple of days prior.

After refueling, the helicopters returned to the area and started searching for the lost man. He was observed in an open shelter on the mountain. The crew lowered the flight medic and the ranger to the site.

Upon examination of the man's condition, they found that he was so cold and weak that he could not talk, move or drink water that he had in his backpack. Using the aircraft's hoist, the crew raised the patient to the helicopter and then recovered the ranger and medic.

The man was transported to (Camp Merrill) and then transferred to the police helicopter for further evacuation to the hospital.

When it comes to soldiers in the Army, he's seen them coming and going.

Sgt. 1st Class Robert W. Gowin, Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, has earned the highest awards the Army gives both for recruiting and transition.

Gowin, who spent more than five years in recruiting, was awarded the recruiters ring in 1990. This year he won the Secretary of the Army Award as the Reserve component transition non-commissioned officer of the year.

"Our function, as transition NCOs," said Gowin, "is to help soldiers who are leaving the active Army get the best deal possible from the Reserves or National Guard.

"Around 90 percent of the soldiers who have finished their active term in service are interested in continuing their education," he said. "My job is to help them get the best benefits available from their home state — some states will pay all education expenses."

Gowin

"Another big part of what we do," said Gowin, "is help soldiers understand how they need to adjust. Even if they're going to be in the Reserves, they're basically going to be civilian. It's sometimes hard for them to understand that the focus is not so much on the high-speed military attitude."

Gowin's award was based on the number of soldiers he helped transition and his performance in a series of boards, starting locally and continuing to the secretary of the Army level, where he competed against seven other transition NCOs from around the world.

The board questions, said Gowin, ranged from NCO leadership and counseling questions to those dealing with his military occupational specialty and opinion of current events.

"The competition was really tough," he said. "They look at your record, your job performance and your overall character."

Gowin said he would like to continue in his present job during the rest of his time in the military.

"I like to feel that I'm helping soldiers make the best possible decisions for their futures," he said.

Gowin and his wife, Victoria, have two daughters: Jennifer, 11; and Lauren, 6.

Driver, owner gear up for 500 at Talladega

Talladega Superspeedway

TALLADEGA, Ala. — "Pumped Up" is probably too mild when describing the feelings that driver Bobby Hillin and car owner Junie Donlavey have about the Winston 500 at Talladega Superspeedway.

"After the way we ran at Daytona, the whole team is excited about going to Talladega," said Donlavey. "We're looking for some good things at Talladega.

Hillin, whose win in the 1986 Talladega DieHard 500 made him the youngest driver to win a NASCAR Winston Cup event (22 years, one month, 22 days old) hooked up with the veteran Virginian, Donlavey, over the winter and convinced a national furniture chain, Heilig-Meyers, to sponsor their Ford Thunderbirds for the next three years.

In Hillin, now 30 years old, Donlavey feels he has a winner, and someone capable of winning again at Talladega.

"In order to win at Talladega, you have to have a good motor, a good handling car and a good driver. We've got the driver, and we think we can have a good handling car and good motor for the Winston 500; and, if we do, we think we can get to victory lane," declared Donlavey.

When asked if Talladega, the track where he posted his only Winston Cup victory, holds anything special for him, Hillin's reply may surprise some.

"In some ways it does. It used to mean a lot more; but, each time I race there, I realize even more that being a past winner there isn't really a factor," Hillin said. "I have to do the job again that day.

Also, Hillin isn't sure if he was ready to win at Talladega, or anywhere, in 1986.

"Everyone wants to help a young kid ... until he beats them," pointed out Hillin. "I didn't know how to handle it, and wasn't able to get the help I needed to stay strong. I was with the Stavola Brothers then, and we stopped producing, so in 1990 I left.

After a limited schedule in 1991 and 1992, Hillin has gotten a well-deserved break.

"I'm think I'm with one of the best car-owners in the garage," says Hillin. "Junie has done more with less all his life and now, with sponsorship from Heilig-Meyers furniture, I think our potential is unlimited.

"There is no doubt in my mind that we are capable of winning the Winston 500."

Reserved seat tickets for the Winston 500 are on sale at the speedway ticket office.

For information and seat selection, call (205) 362-9064.

Cruisers go one for three

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Columbus Fort Benning Rugby Football Club Cruise-a-matics went one for three Saturday and Monday at Stilwell Field hosting the Atlanta Ruby Club and Cwmbran from Wales.

The Cruise-a-matics hosted the Atlanta Rugby Club Saturday for a two game set, winning the first game 26-5. Fullback Malcolm Frost scored two tries and second rows Chuck Hensley and E.J. Hall each tallied a try for the Cruise-a-matics.

Atlanta fullback Chris Baccus averted the shutout with a late second half try for the only score of the match for Atlanta.

Game two went to Atlanta 14-12 with Atlanta fly half Greg Howard scoring two tries and Baccus adding the conversions. Cruise-a-matics Rudy Hernandez and Mike Pesakis rang the bell for the Cruisers. Hernandez got the try and Pesakis added the conversion and a penalty kick in the loss.

On Monday the Cruise-a-matics hosted the European team of Cwmbran from Wales, who are on a 17-day tour of the south. The tour began on April 1, with a match in New Orleans, La., and will end against Atlanta on Thursday.

The Cruise-a-matics were looking for a measure of revenge on the Welsh team after a drubbing in 1991 when the Cruise-a-matics were on tour in England. It didn't happen.

Cwmbran got on the board early in the match when fullback Jon Maidment hit a penalty kick for a 3-0 lead. Cwmbran winger Mark Brown scored the first try of the match when Cwmbran stole the ball off a scrum and two passes later found Brown on the far sideline racing for the end zone and an 8-0 lead.

Maidment added another penalty kick for an 11-0 lead at the half when Cruise-a-matic fullback Marc Oswald was whistled by referee Frank Kearney for tackling Cwmbran winger Craig Prosser without the ball.

Maidment started the second half the same as the first with a pair of penalty kicks to put Cwmbran up 17-0 early in the half.

With under 20 minutes to play, the Cruise-a-matics stemmed the tide for the moment when winger Malcolm Frost hit a penalty kick for a 17-3 deficit.

Cwmbran came right back to score a try on a scrum push over with eight man Anthony Richards getting the score. Maidment tacked on the conversion for a 24-3 lead.

Moments later, Brown finished off the scoring for Cwmbran with his second try of the match and a 29-3 lead with time running out on the Cruise-a-matics.

Cruiser flanker Darren Monaco got the only try of the day for the Cruisers with Frost tacking on the conversion for a final score of 29-10.

"The Americans have definitely improved their game over the years," said Cwmbran tour manager Ben Watkins. "We have seen a lot of good teams on this tour. We hope to finish off strong against Atlanta on Thursday."

West Point Lake offers new 'angle'

By Kevin Lee McIver
USAIC Public Affairs Office

COMMENTARY

Tired of fishing close to home? Looking to catch some lunker largemouth bass? Want some large bodies of water to fish? Then it's time to head north to West Point Lake.

West Point Lake offers some outstanding fishing opportunities within a 45-minute drive of Fort Benning. This 26,000-acre lake located between West Point, Ga., and La Grange, Ga., is famous throughout the United States for lunker largemouths.

With 525 miles of shoreline, West Point Lake affords the avid angler more fishing spots than you can fish in a day. Whether you're fishing from the back of your bass boat or the bank, you can limit out on largemouths, crappie or bluegills. The lake, although not nationally known as a striper haven, also offers some good stripe fishing.

The first thing you notice when you hit the lake is that the water level is kept about eight feet lower that the vegetation line. This forces you to alter your tactics somewhat if you prefer to cast lures around logs and brush piles along the shore. Even with the lower water table, there is still sufficient structure for you to cast around.

One of the preferred largemouth techniques is to use a plastic worm rigged "Carolina" style. Bouncing it along the bottom very slowly produces excellent results. My favorite combination uses a Culprit black or pumpkin-seed colored worm with a 1/4-ounce slider weight at the top.

Crankbaits and spinner baits retrieved over and around rock formations also produce some big bass. I usually use a crankbait that will dive down to eight to 10 feet or just above the farthest structure that you can cast to from the bank.

If you're not an artificial lure fisherman, then the tried and true method of casting a live minnow will surely fill the bill. Using a slider type "floater" set at about seven feet will pull in some nice fish.

West Point Lake also offers some good stripe fishing. For a 30-minute period just before sunset, the action can be fast and furious. Last year, my wife and I were fishing one of the big coves about 400 yards offshore. We noticed the water appeared to be "boiling" about 100 yards away.

As I maneuvered our boat closer, we noticed baitfish were leaping out of the water. The stripes had encircled a school of shad and would dart in-and-out of the formation. After about five minutes, the shad were so confused that they were just going around in one big circle about 10 yards across.

Using top water lures, my wife and I caught 16 nice stripes in about 15 minutes. Then as fast as it had started, the action ceased. We went out at the same time the next evening and caught 20 more stripes. It was truly an amazing sight.

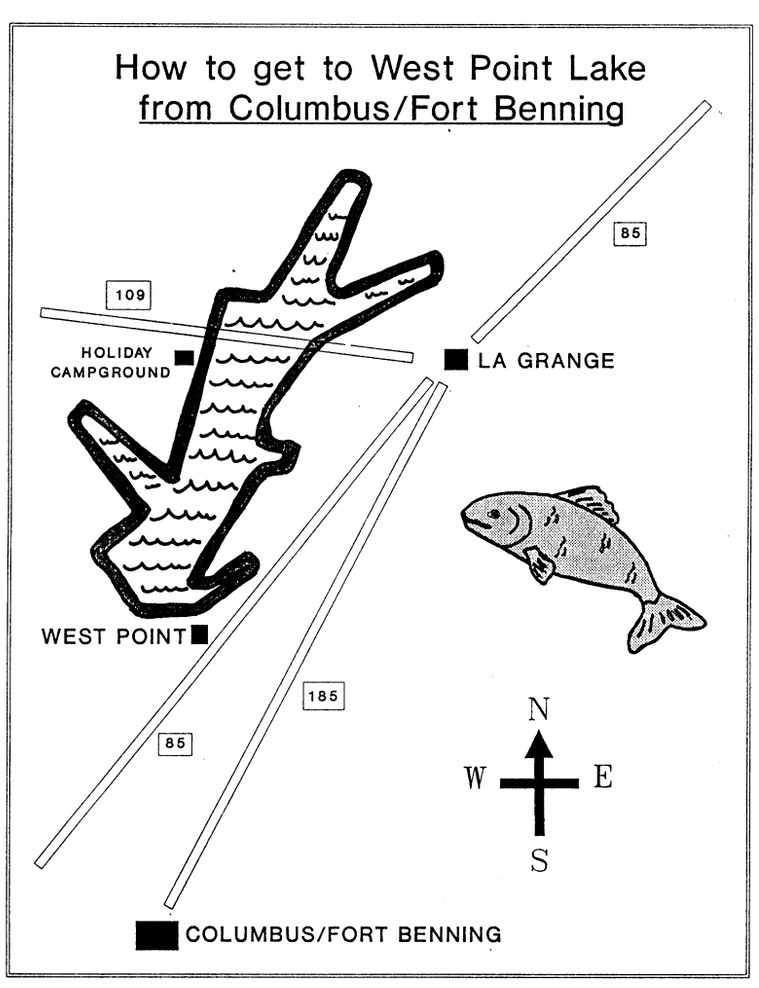
The only bad part was that my trolling motor was dead and I had forgotten to recharge my battery. As I don't have a gasoline boat motor and only one paddle, my wife particularly liked when I jumped in the water and "swam" the boat the last 100 yards to shore. Anyway I think there is a lesson here somewhere.

West Point Lake also offers some excellent campgrounds. My favorite spot to go for a weekend is Holiday Park Campgrounds. This Army Corps of Engineers facility is well-kept and has campsites right on the shoreline.

Prices for a campsite with water and electricity are just $12 a day, and for a primitive site with no utilities only $8. You don't need to make reservations for a tent area, but you should call as early as possible for an electric site if you decide to camp Independence Day weekend or after.

Both sites are available on the waterfront, and have a concrete tent pad, a picnic table, grill and light pole. Clean restrooms are within 100 yards of all campsites. Although Holiday Park doesn't have a campground store, several facilities are right down the road that sell groceries and fishing supplies.

Three words of caution about fishing at West Point. First, as the lake is a "trophy" managed bass lake, largemouths must be 16 inches or longer to keep. Second, ensure you have your Georgia fishing license, because the game wardens will surely check.



The last point is that there is a fish consumption advisory out for West Point Lake. You shouldn't eat any largemouths, carps, hybrid bass or catfish as the level of chlordane exceed the Food and Drug Administration's standards.

Stripes, crappie and bream are safe to eat however and are very plentiful. In other words, don't eat 10,000 fish within a week's period or you might grow gills.

West Point Lake offers you some of the best lunker largemouth fishing around within a short drive of Main Post.

It's a great place to swim, fish and camp or relax. For more information or to make reservations at Holiday Park campgrounds, call (706) 884-6818.

Good luck and good fishing. See you at the fishin' hole.

Entry fee is $80. Bring your two best fish to the scales. Hours are from 5 a.m. until 7 p.m. All boats will meet at Brantley Marine and then depart to launch anywhere on the lake. Anglers may leave the lake and come back as many times they wish. Anglers may use live bait or artificial, but there is no chumming and no off limits. The tournament is open to pros and guides alike.

Last year, the Field Of Dreams Striper Tournament drew the largest group of competitors ever for a striper tournament on Lake Lanier.

The dates in 1993 are July 17, Aug. 28, Sept. 18, Oct. 16, Nov. 27 and Dec. 11. There are also plans for a two-day event on Jan. 8 and 9.

RedStixx get new mascot

Columbus RedStixx

What's brown, furry, roams Golden Park and loves kids?

It's the RedStixx new mascot that was designed by a local school student. For her efforts, Samara Morehouse, will receive a $100 Savings Bond and $100 will go to her school for a media center purchase.

Her drawing was that of a fox, which in addition to being very artistic, was very appropriate according to RedStixx General Manager John Dittrich because the Columbus team use to be the Foxes many years ago.

The fans will be asked to come up with a creative name for the clever mammal. The lucky fan with the winning entry will win a prize.

What's new at Golden Park?

Fan involvement will be at an all-time high this year, as the RedStixx give their fans 21 times to win prizes nightly with their souvenir program.

The RedStixx' mini-food court has expanded to no less than eight vendors. They are: Cook's Kitchen, Mazzio's Pizza, Mrs. Winner's, Subway, Taco Bell, Vinnie's Pretzels and Lemonade, Yoplait Yogurt and the RedStixx Gourmet Deli (concession stand).

Around the ballpark, fans will notice the batting cage has been moved from the left field side to the right field side, and a permanent roof built over it. With the extra room on the left field side now, the RedStixx have added another picnic area, allowing more groups to take advantage of a night at the ballpark.

However, there are changes that the fans cannot see. Both clubhouses have been renovated with such changes as new carpet, new training room, larger manager's office and more.

Anniversary mourns death of 6 million

By Arthur Rutberg
USAIC Chaplains' Office

REFLECTIONS

Fifty years ago, April 19, 1943, something unprecedented happened. Jewish people, long accustomed to suffering and persecution, gathered together and fought back against the Nazis.

The remaining Jews in the Warsaw Ghetto saw thousands of Jews rounded up at the Umschlagplatz and put on the sealed railroad cars. They knew that those trains ended up at Treblinka, the death camp. They would not let that happen to themselves.

They fought back not so much out of bravery or courage but out of desperation. The ghetto was being liquidated. The remaining Jews knew that they were next to be sent to Treblinka for extermination. They decided to take out some Nazis before they were taken out. While the Warsaw Ghetto uprising became an inspiration for other ghettoes and camps, it also became the poignant memorializing of the tragedy of the Holocaust.

The Holocaust, the methodical murder of at least 6 million Jews, is difficult to comprehend. The sheer numbers alone are overwhelming.

Six million! Six million! How can we understand that? The entire population of Columbus times 24?! A thermonuclear explosion destroying New York City?! So many people, it ceases to seem real but it is a reality.

Six million lives, 6 million souls, 6 million stories. And perhaps the saddest part of this is that 1.5 million of them were children. We must never forget. We must remember. Let us light six candles to honor those unfinished lives. Let us make sure that nowhere in this world will it ever happen again.

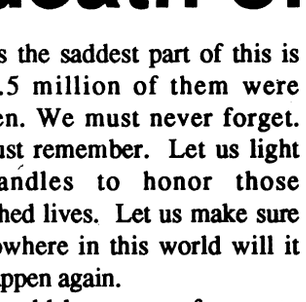
It would be easy to forget, to pretend that it never happened. It is so disturbing to believe that human beings can truly be that inhuman toward other human beings. This is why some people try to deny that it ever happened. This is why historical revisionists can have a following. But the troubling fact, the nightmarish reality is that it did happen. The torture, the concentration camps, the firing squads, the crematoria, the gas chambers; it all happened. And we must never let the world forget.

Sunday is the annual commemoration of the Holocaust. The date chosen by the Hebrew date falls on almost the same day as the Warsaw Ghetto Uprising began. To commemorate it, the Jewish community will have a memorial service 1 p.m. Sunday at the Regimental Chapel, Building 3220.

As part of the Jewish tradition, we are commanded to view ourselves as if we came forth out of Egypt. This is to give us a better appreciation for what the Israelite slaves experienced. We must also view ourselves as if we witnessed the horrors of the Holocaust. In this way, we can feel the loss, know the pain and never let those 6 million lives go unremembered.

An oath: To remember, not once to forget.

Chaplain assistants are integral part of team



By Charles Archer
USAIC Chaplains' Office

I'm often asked, what does a chaplain assistant do? My answer: "everything" but I've never taken the time to explain myself.

From personal experience, a good chaplain assistant is a well-rounded soldier, knowing some aspects of all the jobs in the military and all aspects of his or her job to support the unit ministry team and the soldiers and families in their units. The duties of the chaplain assistant has grown since the position was established by Army regulation in December 1909.

At first the chaplain assistant was considered to be a little more than a personal body guard, an organ player or assistant preacher. In today's Army, the chaplain assistant duties are very important. Even the title, chaplain section, has changed to show the increased importance of the chaplain assistant. It is now the "unit ministry team," meaning the chaplain, chaplain assistant and staff.

Chaplain assistants still provide security for the chaplain and in crisis situations can provide some religious ministration. Their duties do not end there. On holidays, when most soldiers are with families and friends, the chaplain assistants are at work preparing for services. This is not to say chaplain assistants are unhappy in their job, because the congregation and soldiers who they support become their extended families.

Being a chaplain assistant is more when you are a soldier. The skills of a soldier are a must. Along with taking part in unit activities and details like 24-hour duty, physical training and field training exercise, chaplain assistants must be able to cover any type of religious service no matter what the denomination of the service. They prepare the chapel for all events to include services and group meetings.

Just like any other soldier, chaplain assistants' jobs vary from one position to another, but one thing remains the same, the mission. Their mission is to support the unit ministry team to assist the commander by providing the best spiritual, moral and religious support to soldiers, their families and the military community.

So the next time you visit the chapel, extend your hand in friendship and say thanks for a job well done. As the noncommissioned officer is the backbone of the Army, the chaplain assistant and the NCO is the backbone of the unit ministry team.

CRIME WATCH

Military Police Activity

The following entries were taken from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from March 30 to April 5. Such entries may be incomplete and are not the adjudication of the guilt or innocence of any person.

This week's hot topic concerns unit responsibilities when signing for apprehended soldiers from the Military Police desk sergeant. USAIC policy memo 92-18 states that units are required to have a sergeant first class or above report to the MP station within two hours of notification to sign for the soldier. In any alcohol related offenses, the only personnel authorized to sign for the soldier are the commander, first sergeant or executive officer. If the soldier is not returned to his or her unit within two hours, the field officer of the day will be notified by the desk sergeant. The major subordinate commander will be required to report in writing through the provost marshal to the USAIC commander, whenever a unit under his/her control fails to comply with this policy.

• A civilian was charged with simple battery and damage to private property after she hit a specialist in the head and ripped the hood skirt off his car.

• A family member was charged with theft by deception after he removed two new shirts from the hangers and replaced them with two used shirts. He then proceeded to the customer service counter and refunded the new shirts for cash.

• An officer was charged with shoplifting after she placed a computer game and several bottles of perfume in a bag and exited the Post Exchange at the Main Mall without paying for the items.

• A government employee was charged with larceny of government property after she negotiated more than $16,000 worth of checks that were to have been canceled.

• A specialist was charged with wrongful possession and distribution of cocaine and unlawfully carrying a concealed weapon. He was apprehended during an undercover drug operation where he was observed selling 2 grams of crack cocaine.

• A civilian was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol and no license in possession after she was observed sitting in her car, stopped in the middle of the street. She registered .26 on the intoximeter.

• Two family members were charged with making terroristic threats after they were exchanging racial slurs and threats on the telephone.

This week's booby prize is awarded to the private first class who could not be awakened by the unit charge of quarters. After knocking on the soldier's door and getting no response, the CQ used a pass key and entered the soldier's room. The soldier was lying on his bed, glassy-eyed and incoherent. The CQ observed a beverage can that had been modified into a smoking device on the soldier's refrigerator. Upon arrival of the commander and the MPs, the soldier's room was searched revealing four pieces of crack cocaine in his wall locker. The soldier was charged with wrongful possession and use of a controlled substance.

Other activities included 18 traffic accidents and four reports of shoplifting at facilities on post. There were eight cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, ten cases of larceny of private property and six cases of larceny of government property.

Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best — Give Crime Arrest." Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5223 or the "Crime in Progress" line at 545-222.

Snoring may threaten life

By Mark F. Sheridan
Army News Service

Snoring is a nuisance to the culprit, as well as to any within hearing distance. But it may cause more than a little lost sleep — it could result in loss of life.

Snoring — noisy breathing during sleep — is a common and harmless condition affecting 36 to 100 million people in the United States.

Sleep apnea, however, is the cessation of breathing for at least 10 seconds during sleep. It is a much more serious breathing irregularity that can be life threatening.

There are three types of the problem. The most common is obstructive sleep apnea. It results from partial blockage of the upper air passages. This blockage may be due to excess tissue in the throat or nose.

The second type, central sleep apnea, involves inactive respiratory muscles, caused by a lack of neural signals from the brain.

Mixed sleep apnea is caused by a combination of the above conditions. Obstructive sleep apnea has been associated with daytime sleepiness, depression, brain dysfunction, heart arrhythmia, stroke and heart attack.

This serious and potentially life-threatening condition may affect as much as 1 to 2 percent of the population. Obstructive sleep apnea may be associated with weight, age, sex and snoring.

Although a person of normal weight may suffer from this disorder, the severity increases with weight. Males are eight times as likely to develop sleep apnea. While the obstructive version may develop in children, it is much more common after the age of 40.

People who have this condition often snore loudly. However, most people who snore do not have this disorder. In fact, about 25 percent of all males and 15 percent of all females snore every night. Other symptoms include frequent awakening during the night, daytime sleepiness and restless sleep.

There are various treatments of obstructive sleep apnea. For almost all patients, this involves a program of weight reduction. Often, weight loss alone will improve this condition.

Additionally, alcohol should be avoided in the evenings, as its sedative effect may worsen sleep apnea. Patients should also avoid sleeping on their backs.

The best medical therapy involves wearing a mask over the nose. This mask is connected to a machine that provides a continuous flow of air, holding the upper airway open.

Surgical therapy may involve removing the excess tissue from the throat and/or the nose, increasing the size of the airway.

Sleep apnea is not a disorder to be taken lightly. It afflicts 2 to 5 million people and can have serious consequences, if left untreated. It has readily identifiable signs and symptoms.

Your physician can evaluate your symptoms and determine if a referral to a sleep apnea specialist is necessary.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Jonathan J. Hunt
Staff Judge Advocates' Office

Q: Today, a police officer stopped me for speeding 50 mph in a 25 mph zone. The citation the officer gave me states that my court date is in 30 days. I have three questions: Must I appear in court? Can anyone help me fight this ticket? What are the consequences for me if the court finds me guilty of this traffic offense?

A: To determine whether you must appear in court, read your citation. It will indicate whether your appearance is mandatory or merely optional.

Generally, for citations issued on Fort Benning, you are required to appear in court only for driving under the influence of alcohol, a traffic accident causing injury to a person and any collision of two or more vehicles.

You may avoid court for nearly all other offenses if the police officer marked the "optional appearance" block on your citation and if you pay the fine within seven days of receipt of your citation. Soldiers usually know whether it is a better idea to "fight" a traffic ticket in court rather than to just pay the fine. Sometimes, however, the soldier may question whether the police officer made a mistake during the traffic stop and ticketing. In still other cases, the soldier may accept guilt but may wish to request a reduced fine (leniency) from the judge.

Legal Assistance attorneys at the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate can provide you with helpful legal advice on your chances of "beating" your traffic ticket or at least advise you on the likelihood of getting a reduced fine.

On your court date, however, you must either represent yourself or hire a civilian attorney to represent you in civilian traffic court.

You may face numerous financial problems if the traffic court finds you guilty, even for a minor traffic offense. For example, the court may order you to pay a fine for the offense along with court fees for your appearance in court. Also, you may have spent money on an attorney to represent you.

The court will notify your state's Department of Motor Vehicles of your traffic conviction and the DMV may then assess points against your driver's license. The DMV can suspend or revoke your driver's license if you have too many points for traffic offense convictions.

Your automobile insurer will also learn of your conviction. The insurance company may raise your rates and, in serious cases, may refuse to renew your policy.

Military commanders also monitor traffic violations. Your commander may spot your name on numerous official documents as your case works its way through the traffic court system — the Military Police blotter reports, the order to appear in traffic court, and if convicted, the post newspaper (such as for DUI) and possibly, garnishment orders on your military pay. In response to your conviction, your commander might call you in for a verbal or written counselling.

Commanders view some traffic offenses so seriously that a court conviction could harm your military career.

For example, if the police apprehend you for DUI, the commanding general will in all cases send you a letter of reprimand that you and all your commanders must sign.

The general reviews the facts of your case, the recommendations of your commanders and the result at your trial and decides whether to file the reprimand temporarily in your local file or permanently in your official military personnel file.

Finally, you may lose the privilege to drive on Fort Benning for certain on-post traffic offenses (such as DUI). Revocation can be temporary or permanent as well as partial or total.

Thus, some soldiers may be permitted to drive an automobile but only to and from duty and only after a six-month ban. Others may face a total restriction against driving on-post for as long as five full years.

Legal Assistance attorneys at SJA are available to help you. For an appointment, call 545-3281 or 545-3282.

BBB can help you solve disputes

Better Business Bureau

Most products and services meet consumer expectations most of the time; but, when something goes wrong, the Better Business Bureau will try to help you resolve your problem quickly and at minimal or no cost.

Whatever your dispute, instead of taking your grievance to court where the procedure could be costly and time consuming, you may have access to an alternative dispute resolution program in your community.

Dispute resolution is an informal and customer-friendly service that allows you and the business to reach a solution to your problem with the help of an impartial third party.

If you file a complaint with the BBB, the first step in your dispute settlement is conciliation.

In conciliation, your views are presented and discussed with the business, and in turn, the business's viewpoint is presented to you.

This usually takes place by telephone or mail, and frequently settles the matter simply and quickly. Most disputes are settled through conciliation.

The second step may be mediation, in which a professionally trained mediator meets with you and the business to guide you in working out your own mutually agreeable solutions.

Like conciliators, mediators don't decide who is "right" or "wrong." Instead, they help people reach a solution on their own — one that works best for them.

The final step is arbitration. In an arbitration hearing, an arbitrator listens to both sides and weighs the evidence presented. He or she then makes a decision about the dispute after the hearing is over.

BBB arbitration is binding on both parties in most cases. However, in some cases, particularly involving disputes with auto manufacturers, you are free to go to court if you are not satisfied with the arbitrator's decision.

If you need help resolving a marketplace problem, contact the Columbus Better Business Bureau at 324-0712.

Officials looking at field community for soldiers

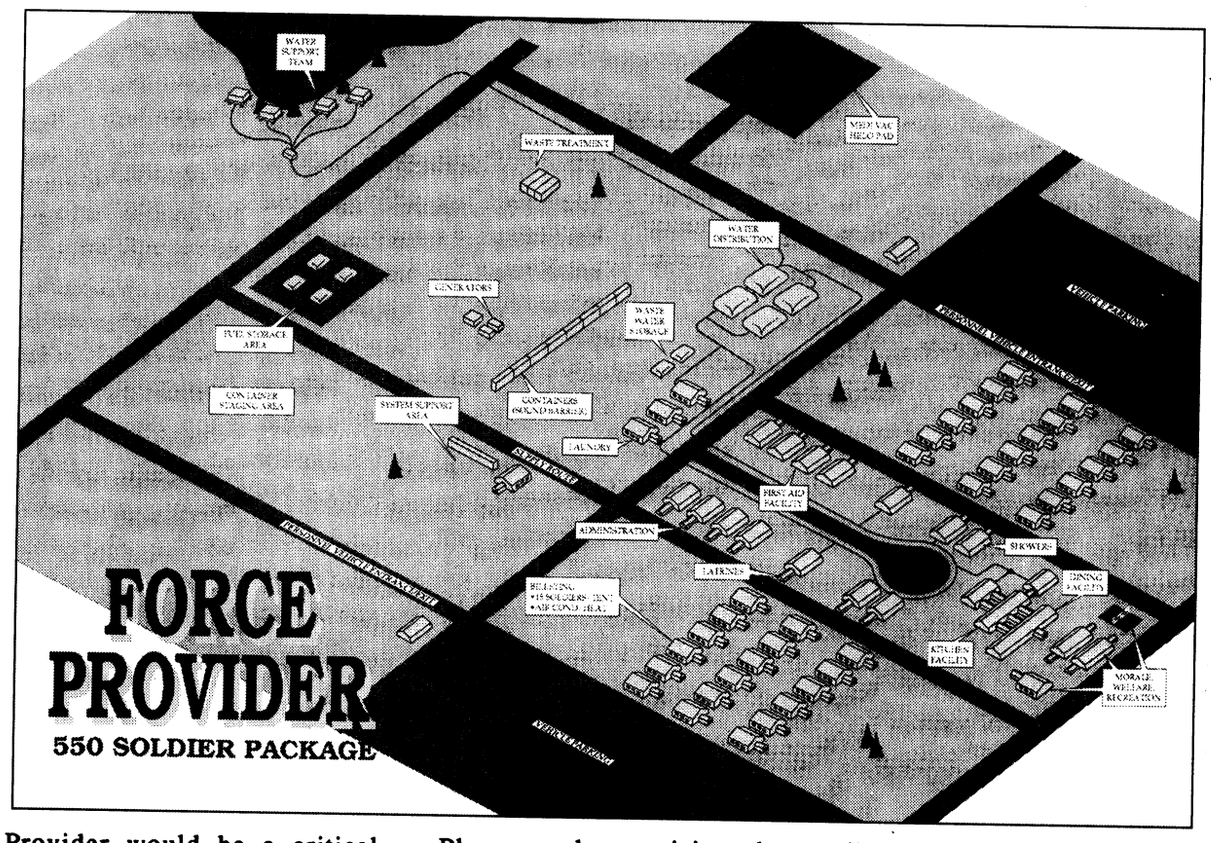
Complex bridges 'comfort gap'

By Mark S. Kalinoski
Army News Service

WASHINGTON — A state-of-the-art deployable living complex that bridges the "comfort gap" between Army garrison and field living conditions has gotten the attention of some top military planners at the Pentagon.

Officials are pushing ahead with the implementation of Force Provider, a mobile rest-and-relief "community" designed primarily as a rest-haven for deployed soldiers who must contend with the stress associated with combat duty or other deployments.

Hot meals, private showers, cold beverages and a field laundry service are just some features that will give the Force Provider its soldier-appeal. Modern latrine facilities, air conditioning and heating, and a variety of morale, welfare and recreation amenities will also be available to front-line soldiers as they check-in to the complex for recuperative visits of up to a week.



The Army's goal is to produce six brigade-capacity Force Provider complexes, each capable of supporting 3,300 soldiers at a time. So critical is the void in the Army inventory of such a capability that the leadership has bumped up production and testing of the complex by 18 months.

That void became most evident in Southwest Asia during Operation Desert Shield when the Army's antiquated tents and facilities were vastly overshadowed by the Air Force's modern, air-conditioned and sanitary facilities. The plan now is to conduct a two-month test of one 550-soldier prototype as early as October.

Many of the Force Provider's subsystem components borrow heavily from pre-existing Army, Air Force and Navy components. For example, the Force Provider latrine and shower subsystems are those of the Air Force "Harvest Eagle" project.

The Army is capitalizing on that borrowed technology. However, the Force Provider development process isn't merely a "copycat" approach. The acquisition strategy — devised by the U.S. Army Natick Research, Development and Engineering Center — allows concurrent engineering, production and testing by maximizing the use of existing equipment, meanwhile evaluating for possible opportunities to later enhance the system. Planners also decided to purchase "low risk" Force Provider components first to allow time for test data to be studied on "high risk" components. The result: tried-and-true equipment, fewer growing pains, accelerated production, and dollar savings.

Natick project developers James J. Tierney and Maj. Clovis Gault are touting the Force Provider as more than just a wartime oasis; another logical niche would be in the areas of disaster relief and humanitarian aid efforts. Its proponents attest that the "self-contained" nature of the Force Provider would be a critical timesaver in disaster relief operations, such as that experienced by relief troops in south Florida in the wake of Hurricane Andrew.

Planners also envision the complex as one ideally suited to provide intermediate staging base support — one that fits well in the Army's evolution into a power projection force. Pre-packaged and easily transportable by both air and sea, the Force Provider would be a final launch pad for combat troops as they leap-frog across the globe into a wartime theater of operations.

TRADOC commanders discuss changes in today's Army

TRADOC News Service

FORT GORDON, Ga. — Senior officers from throughout Training and Doctrine Command met recently at Fort Gordon for TRADOC's Commanders Conference III.

Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr., TRADOC commander, said the conference goal was to answer two questions.

"Can we meet, in substance and apparatus, the training and leader development demands of a post-Cold War world, and do we have the right kind of units to accomplish the missions of a force-projection Army?

"Training and leadership demands of the post-Cold War Army and the shape of those demands continue to change as you look around the world," Franks said. "And, if you think over the past year, could we have predicted where the Army would have been sent over the past year six months in advance of those commitments, most of the time the answer would be no."

Franks discussed the objectives of the two-phase conference during his opening remarks.

Phase I objectives included discussions on key training and issues. Phase II objectives were to redesign mission and structure of the division and to provide a framework for division redesign.

Franks' opening remarks also included TRADOC's points of main effort. Those include leading the Army through intellectual change, sustaining excellence and relevance in training and leader development, proposing modernization alternatives to maintain the technological edge for soldiers on future battlefields, fostering organizational excellence, and focusing on the soldier.

Field Manual 100-5, commander in chief initiatives, Future Army Schools Twenty-one, Battle Labs and Louisiana Maneuvers, regionalization, divestitures and base realignment and closure commission, and soldier support are recent events "putting balls into the end zone," according to Franks.

During the safety update, Franks presented Fort Gordon with a safety award. Fort Gordon was named best in the extra large installation category, with Fort Knox, Ky., receiving second place. In the large installation category Fort Jackson, S.C., placed first with Fort Rucker, Ala., placed second. Fort McClellan, Ala., and Fort Eustis, Va., tied for a first place in the medium installation category. U.S. Army Ordnance Missile and Munitions Center and School, Redstone Arsenal, Ala., won in the small installation and TRADOC activities on a non TRADOC installation category.

The attendees also learned more about Fort Gordon's mission through a briefing and a tour of three areas of the post. Maj. Gen. Robert E. Gray, post commanding general, hosted the tour of the Mobile Subscriber Equipment training facility, Specialized Electronics Department's avionics training and the National Science Center's Preview Discovery Center.

"We're involved in the new paradigm of power projection. Everything we teach and everything we do here is focused on power projection," said Gray during his pre-tour briefing at the Officers' Club. "We've got to be able to go anyplace in the world ... provide for the global connectivity of our forces. No matter where you land, you want to be able to connect into a worldwide communications information systems grid."

A briefing on the 1993 and 1994 budget was given by Maj. Gen. Henry M. Hagwood, TRADOC's deputy chief of staff for resource management. "As I look at '93 in the future, '93 right now appears to be on line with all the guidance and review to date. I do not expect any changes now through the end of the year," said Hagwood. Even with that, Hagwood said there are still some "toughies on our plate."

The impact of the 1994 budget on the battle labs, training loads, barracks improvement and environmental compliance was discussed. Excess property management was discussed during Maj. Gen. Walter J. Bryde Jr.'s deputy chief of staff for base operations support, briefing. Barracks quality and the underfunding of tuition assistance were also topics discussed during this briefing. Commanders expressed concerns about lack of funding for tuition assistance and alternatives for soldiers when tuition assistance may not be available.

The Enhanced Concept Based Requirement System was the topic discussed by Maj. Gen. Larry G. Hehowicz, deputy chief of staff for combat developments. The key functions of the ECBRS are to develop concepts, consider CINC/Army component commander, battle lab and Louisiana Maneuvers issues, review and validate Army Modernization Plan Annex, and to identify critical issues and programs.

Lehowicz also gave a briefing on developmental simulations. Developmental virtual simulation has great potential to explore issues in combined arms environment and examine the human dimension of combat, according to Lehowicz.

Brig. Gen. Lon E. Maggart, deputy chief of staff for doctrine, began his briefing on the new Field Manual 100-5 with a demonstration of the manual on CD-ROM. Maggart expects the manual to be in distribution by the end of June.

Brig. Gen. Raymond T. Roe, commanding general for U.S. Army Community and Family Support Command, briefed on the morale, welfare and recreation program. Roe discussed the operating funds, income generators, and compared funding of recent years with the current funds.

Other briefings throughout the conference covered topics such as gender integration training, sexual harassment, Future Army Schools Twenty-one and the revisions in the Delta Dental Plan.

War revisited

American representatives from the U.S. Army Infantry School and a contingent of German officers meet at Huertgen Forest battlefields, site of a World War II battle in which the U.S. suffered 30,000 casualties in three months. The visit, conceived by Training and Doctrine Command Commanding General Gen. Frederick M. Franks and his German counterpart, Lt. Gen. Ernst Klaffus, included both social and cultural exchanges and an examination of battle tactics. According to participants, the training conducted during the visit emphasized detailed reconnaissance and the value of well-trained leadership at the small unit level. The USAIS plans a second staff ride to the Huertgen Forest in November.

WORLD WAR II — A LOOK BACK

50 years ago this week ...

• The Americans dispatched lightning fighter planes from Guadalcanal to carry out a bold assassination attempt, after decoding a Japanese transmission announcing Adm. Isoroku Yamamoto's scheduled visit to the Western Solomons. The American fighter planes successfully intercepted and shot down Yamamoto's aircraft and escort over Bougainville, killing the admiral in the process. The loss was of great significance to Japan in terms of leadership and morale as it lost its fleet commander.

• In the Warsaw ghetto of Poland, the dwindling Jewish population rose to fight their German oppressors in an attempt to avoid the horrors of the Nazi death camps. At the time of the uprising, less than 70,000 of the original 500,000 Jews that had been uprooted and forced into the ghetto remained.

• The exiled Polish government in London released a statement concerning the recent discovery of the bodies of 4,100 Polish officers in mass graves in the Katyn Forest, and requested a Red Cross investigation of the German allegations of Soviet involvement.

• In North Africa, Allied fighters inflicted heavy losses on two German transport plane convoys unsuccessfully attempting to airlift supplies to the beleaguered Axis forces in Tunisia.

• In Europe, the 8th U.S. Army Air Force launched one of its largest missions to date, sending 115 B-17 bombers to raid Nazi aircraft factories in the German city of Bremen.

• Fort Benning's own 501st Parachute Infantry Regiment pressed on with its exhaustive training schedule, duly motivated by references to the unit as "the nucleus of Uncle Sam's winged forces."

International officers visit 29th

By Gregory Hart
29th Infantry Regiment

International officers from the War College visited the Collins Training Center March 29.

The group of 18 officers received a tour of the facility, which included an orientation film about the Bradley Fighting Vehicle, a detailed description of a Bradley from a subject matter expert and a hands-on demonstration.

The guests were given the opportunity to drive the Bradley.

The Unit Conduct of Fire Trainer was also part of the tour. The officers were shown the simulator on which soldiers train on the Bradley without actually having to get in the vehicle.

Family tradition lives on

Connie Bridges/Special to The Bayonet

Alison Meriaux returns from a flight in Columbus.

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

From the time she was little, Alison Meriaux, 21, has been listening to stories about military service from several generations in her family.

Recently, she became one of 108 college students in the Reserve Officers' Training Corps from 147 campuses nationwide selected to fly for the Air Force.

Now, this daughter of retired Army Col. Dick and Rae Meriaux of Columbus is making her own military memories.

The 1990 salutatorian for her graduating class at Pacelli High School, Alison is currently a junior at the University of Notre Dame majoring in electrical engineering.

She is also deputy wing commander for her ROTC Corps of Cadets and resident assistant for Baden Hall dormitory.

Having earned her private pilot's license at age 12 from the Columbus Flight Academy, she will be taking a four-week transition course this summer to learn to fly a Cessna.

This summer Alison also has plans to participate in the Buddy Ride Program flying with an active duty Air Force pilot.

Grades and flying are not her only interests, however. While at Pacelli, she lettered in soccer, basketball and golf.

Her active duty career will begin in late 1994.

Alison's father has been retired from his 26 years of active duty since July 1986. He is now a registered representative and agent for USPA & IRA in Columbus. He served three tours at Fort Benning during his military career including positions as inspector general and chief of Infantry Proponency here.

Her mother teaches reading intervention to first-graders at Alexander Patch Elementary School on post.

Her paternal grandfather, Prosper Meriaux of West Mineral, Kan., went from owning the local grocery to serving as a Navy chief in food service during World War II.

In addition, her maternal grandfather, Lt. Hugh Hawthorne from Sterling, Kan., served as an Army surgeon during World War I. His family calls this graduate of the University of St. Louis, the "model-A black bag doctor from Kansas."

Her father is proud she is seeking a military career and noted that this is something she has wanted for a long time.

He said her mother cried for two hours after they left her at Notre Dame the first time, but there wasn't any doubt what it was Alison wanted to do with her life.

Doughboy helmet finds new 'wearer'

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Retired Lt. Gen. David E. Grange Jr. will be the recipient of the Doughboy Award on York Field April 29 at 4:10 p.m.

The Doughboy Award is a chrome-plated replica of the doughboy helmet worn by soldiers in the American Expeditionary Force during World War I and in the early days of World War II.

It is presented annually to a person who made a significant contribution to the infantry force, and it is presented on behalf of infantrymen, past, present and future.

The original award can be seen in the foyer of Infantry Hall at Fort Benning.

Past recipients include Bob Hope, H. Ross Perot, Bill Mauldin, John O. Marsh Jr. and Sens. John G. Tower, Warren B. Rudman and Robert J. Dole.

The term "doughboy" was originally used during the border conflicts prior to World War I in Texas, where soldiers trained along the Rio Grande and became covered in white dust of the adobe soil.

Mounted troops called them "adobes." This degenerated to "dobies," which became "doughboys."

Grange was born in Richmond Hill, N.Y., in 1925. He joined the Army in June of 1943, and he served as an enlisted man during World War II in the Rome-Arno, Southern France, Rhineland, Ardennes and Central Europe campaigns during World War II.

He was commissioned a second lieutenant of infantry in May 1950 from the Ground Defense Officer Candidate School at Fort Riley, Kan., and subsequently served two combat tours in Korea and three tours in Vietnam.

Among his many awards and decorations are the Defense Distinguished Service Medal, Army Distinguished Service Medal, three Silver Stars, two Legions of Merit, the Distinguished Flying Cross, the Soldier's Medal, 28 awards of the Air Medal with "V" device, five awards of the Bronze Star Medal with "V" device, Purple Heart, Master Parachutist Badge with three combat jumps, third award of the Combat Infantryman Badge, Special Forces Tab and Ranger Tab.

Grange was inducted into the OCS Hall of Fame in 1979 and the Ranger Hall of Fame in July.

He and his wife, Lois, have three children, David L., Suzanne and Henrietta. They live in The Plains, Virginia. His son, Col. David L. Grange, presently commands the 75th Ranger Regiment.

The Easter bunny visits with "little ranger" Megan Stahl, 4, daughter of Capt. Albert and Mary Stahl, at the 5th Ranger Training Battalion Easter celebration at Camp Frank D. Merrill in Dahlonega, Ga. More than 75 soldiers and families gathered for the arrival of the Easter Bunny, and the event included a cookout and an egg hunt.

Silver Star shines after 40 years

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Commanding General and Chief of Infantry Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White will present a belated Silver Star, earned for actions during the Korean War, to a retired soldier Monday at 1:30 p.m. in Infantry Hall.

Lt. Col. David L. White, then a first lieutenant, was awarded the Silver Star for gallantry in action near Satae Ri, Korea on Nov. 3 and 4, 1952.

White encountered the enemy while on patrol, providing early warning of an impending attack. Upon return to friendly positions, he continued to direct defense of his sector during a devastating enemy attack with artillery, mortar and small arms fire.

His leadership was instrumental in repelling the attack of a numerically superior and fanatical enemy force. During the action, White was wounded in both legs and feet and could not stand but refused to be evacuated while he continued to direct his platoon's fire.

Not until the attack ended and the wounded men of his platoon had been evacuated, did he agree to be carried to the aid station.

White served with the 71st Infantry Division in southern Germany during World War II. He graduated from Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass., in 1949.

He received a direct commission while assigned to the Army Reserve and was recalled to active duty in March 1951. He was assigned to the 160th Infantry Regiment, 40th Infantry Division.

After separating from active duty in February 1953, he returned to Boston University School of Law graduating with a juris doctorate.

He continued service with the Army Reserve being assigned to the 94th Infantry Division and the 187th Infantry Brigade, retiring in the grade of lieutenant colonel.

White was discharged from the Army before a formal presentation of the award could be made.

White and his wife, Eugenie, reside in Eastham, Mass. He presently practices law in Worcester, Mass.

'Little reminders' help in dealing with little ones

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

Gentle reminders are sometimes all it takes to stop parents from losing control and doing something they'll regret said Becky Welch, Fort Benning Family Advocacy Program manager, speaking about April as Child Abuse Prevention Month.

Some of these reminders include:

- Remember children first begin forming an opinion of themselves by the manner in which parents talk to them. It affects all aspects of their lives.
- Ordinary, everyday experiences should be pleasant ones.
- Special times should be set aside for each child with the child choosing the activity.
- Catch your child being good.
- When talking to children, move physically closer to them.
- Heart-to-heart talks should be in a quiet, private place so children can express their feelings, negative and positive.
- When talking to children, stop and look at them.
- Remember that children are people in their own right and may do things differently than you.
- Patience and understanding will go farther than scolding or criticizing in front of others, which demonstrates a lack of sensitivity and respect.
- Share positive feelings with children often.
- Help children focus on the strengths of others, developing a tolerance for those with different values and backgrounds.
- Through daily words and actions, let children know they can't be replaced, that each is special, loved and valued.

DOC acquisition team seeks customer input

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

In an effort to improve service, the Acquisition Process Action Team is starting a series of monthly question-and-answer articles concerning the aquisition process.

The team, made up of representatives from the Directorates of Contracting, Community Activities, Information Management, Public Works, Training, Resource Management, Logistics and the U.S. Army Medical and Dental Activities and the Staff Judge Advocate Office, exists to help anyone who prepares a requisition form navigate through the aquisition process, said John M. Machovec, the director of Contracting.

This process is used for "anything that is bought and used on Fort Benning and its satellite activities," Machovec said.

The process begins when the need for a product or service is determined, and it does not end until the final payment is made and the property is disposed of.

The team was set up in November by Col. Burnet R. Quick, the Fort Benning chief of staff, to "take a look at the whole process and come up with ways to streamline it," Machovec said.

The main problem the team has found is a lack of education about the process. Many of the steps in the aquisition process are set by laws and regulations, and people requisitioning items often run into "road blocks" trying to get what they want, Machovec said.

The question the team has been asked is "Why doesn't the Aquisition Team understand the needs of the customers."

"This is probably due to a failure to communicate," said Machovec.

"Many people think 'we want a certain kind of printer and it's got to have certain characteristics,'" he said. "They do all the work and evaluation, get all the approvals, establish required delivery dates and then send it to the Aquisition Team.

"Then it goes into the system and the system says 1) you can't specify what kind of printer you want, 2) there's a freeze on buying that item right now, and so on..."

The team should be the first step in the process, not the last, according to Machovec.

"If you tell us what you want in the beginning," he said, "we can tell you how to get it."

"We want to tell you how to meet your needs within the various laws and regulations, not tell you that you can't do that," he said.

The team is there to provide training and guidance.

"If you want a certain product or service, let us know. We can tailor the solicitation to best address your needs and and still meet the intent of the laws and regulations," Machovec said.

SOA hosts visiting dignitaries

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

The School of the Americas hosted a visit by the secretary general for the Organization of American States, April 8.

Joao Clemente Baena Soares was greeted by Brig. Gen. James W. Hendrix, deputy commanding general for Fort Benning, and Col. Jose M. Alvarez, SOA commandant, upon his arrival at Lawson Army Airfield.

Soares was the guest speaker for SOA's first Countermine Operations Course graduation, a course with particular interest to the OAS's mission of "winning the peace" in Central America after 12 years of civil war.

The 10-week course, which focused on training the trainer, taught selected Latin American military personnel the techniques for clearing minefields and disarming explosives.

Speaking to the course graduates and SOA personnel, Soares emphasized the importance of cooperation and the necessity for maintaining peace in the Americas.

"Our hemisphere is a peaceful hemisphere when you compare it to others; we have to maintain this climate," Soares said. By maintaining a peaceful atmosphere, economic and social benefits can arise and people can have freedom to obtain their objectives, he added.

According to Soares, a native of Brazil, the cooperation of the members of the OAS, the Interamerican Defense Board and SOA has resulted in the implementation of the Countermine Course, which will benefit the people of Central America.

"Most importantly, today at this moment, we are giving an example of how entities dedicated to bettering the lives of the people in our hemisphere can act jointly" in response to petitions from the countries of the OAS, Soares said.

Following Soares's remarks, Alvarez reminded the graduates of the importance of their mission.

"Remember that you will not only be ensuring peace in Nicaragua, you will also be ensuring the future of a nation," Alvarez said.

Soares was unanimously elected secretary general of the OAS on March 12, 1984, during a special session of the General Assembly in Washington, D.C., and took office June 20, 1984. He was elected, again unanimously, to a second five-year term in 1989.

Active in international politics since 1953, when he was appointed as third secretary for Brazil's Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Soares is married to Glaucia de Lima Baena Soares and they have three children.

Soares was accompanied on his visit to SOA by: Ambassador Luigi R. Einaudi, American ambassador to the OAS; Maj. Gen. James R. Harding, chairman Interamerican/Defense Board; Brig. Gen. Ludovico Gobbato (Brazil), director of the staff of the IADB; Col. William McDonough, of the IADB staff; Col. Alfonso Manosalva (Colombia), of the IADB staff; Luis Restrepo, special adviser to the secretary general; Lt. Col. Ken LaPlante, chief of the Latin American Branch, Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff Operations, Headquarters Department of the Army.

Vets prohibit some 'pets'

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

People have long enjoyed the companionship of animals, and Fort Benning residents are no exception.

There are, however, some definite guidelines that outline what kinds of animals are authorized for private ownership on post.

Sgt. James T. Cyree, Veterinarian Services technician, said that post regulations permit the keeping of a wide variety of privately owned pets for recreation and companionship, but that health and safety concerns necessitate the banning of some animals.

U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 40-95 defines a pet as "a domestic dog, cat or small caged animal such as domestic rabbits, guinea pigs, hamsters, birds or fish."

"Basically these are the only animals that are authorized on post," said Cyree. "Wildlife and exotic animals are definitely not allowed. These include squirrels, wild rabbits, skunks, foxes, raccoons, monkeys, snakes, skunks, bats, ferrets, alligators, crocodiles, turtles, raptors (birds of prey), piranha, tarantulas, ducks and geese."

Cyree said that there are exceptions for snakes.

"Certain varieties of snakes are authorized with the post commander's permission if the owners show that they are properly equipped to care for them," said Cyree.

Horses are also authorized, but must be kept in the stables. All male horses kept must be gelded.

Ownership of more than three pets, except fish and small caged animals is prohibited.

Cyree said that all dogs, cats and horses must be registered within 14 days upon arrival or upon becoming 90 days of age.

There is no cost to register pets, unless a rabies shot is needed. The owner will have to pay the price of the rabies vaccination and will receive a metal rabies tag and a certificate.

"Owners need to attach the tag to their pet's collar. This is the only way that we can identify a pet and return it to the owner should the pet become lost," Cyree said.

Cyree added that pet owners need to be aware of the responsibilities that are included with pet ownership. Pet owners must provide adequate living space and appropriate shelter for their pets, provide food and water daily and keep pets indoors or secured outdoors.

Failure to abide by these guidelines, or the keeping of unauthorized animals, will result in disciplinary action under the Uniform Code of Military Justice, Cyree said.

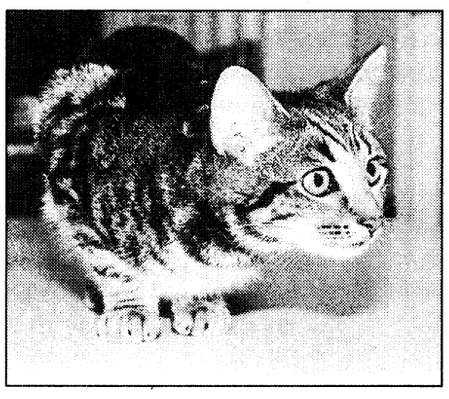
Pet vaccinations available April 24

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

The Fort Benning Veterinary Treatment Facility is offering a special walk-in vaccination clinic April 24 from 8 a.m. to noon.

The clinic, available to cats and dogs, will vaccinate against rabies and distemper, both potentially fatal diseases. No other services will be available at the clinic except vaccinations, said Capt. Kathleen Miller, chief at the facility.

"The primary reason for the clinic," said Miller, "is that there is a problem with pets not being vaccinated and registered on post. This clinic is set up to not interfere with duty hours, so getting pets taken care of will be convenient."



This service has been deemed necessary by the Rabies Control Board due to the high risk of rabies in Georgia and Alabama.

The clinic is being offered as a community service by the facility in conjunction with an Eagle Scout Project.

PET OF THE WEEK

This playful black and grey tabby is looking for a home. She is approximately 6 months old.

For more information, contact the Veterinary Services Office in Building 265 at 545-1127. Hours are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:30 a.m. and 12:45 to 3 p.m. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

If you have lost a pet, check the stray impoundment facility in Building 263.

Animal Control on post is a division of the Military Police Activity. An officer will pick up strays and take them to the impoundment facility.

Stray pets are given three working days to be claimed from the the time they are picked up by animal control personnel. If the pets are not claimed, they become government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies tags are important, too, because it is the only way that Veterinary Services can contact the owner.

Pet owners should register their pets and update their records when changes occur.

Benning to honor volunteers

Fort Benning Volunteer Week is being celebrated through Thursday on post with the highlight of the observance being a Volunteer Recognition Ceremony Tuesday from 4 to 6 p.m. at Riverside, home of Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. and Linda White.

A total of 3,085 volunteers will be honored during the week, according to Kathy Case, installation volunteer coordinator.

The recognition ceremony will begin with a social hour and entertainment by the Infantry Band and Infantry Chorus.

This will be followed by remarks from the commanding general and the presentation of the Outstanding Volunteer Awards.

Case noted that 3,534 positions were filled by 3,085 individual volunteers on Fort Benning from April, 1991, through March and 15 percent of the volunteer work force filled more than one position.

The importance of volunteers can be pictured, according to Case, when it is realized that there are about 8,200 civilians employed on post, and the volunteer work force added another 38 percent to the total manpower strength during the past 12 months.

"Volunteerism at Fort Benning has increased by 28 percent during the past year," she said.

On-post organizations served by volunteers include:

- American Red Cross
- First Steps
- Rape Crisis
- Army Community Service
- Boy Scouts
- Daughters of the U.S. Army
- Enlisted Wives Club
- Directorate of Public Works
- Fort Benning Schools
- Girl Scouts
- International Wives Club
- Leadership Seminars
- Mayors Council
- MEDDAC/DENTAC Auxiliary
- National Infantry Museum
- Officers Wives Club
- Alexander Patch Preschool
- Chapels
- Retirement Services Office
- Santa's Castle
- Staff Judge Advocate
- Youth Services
- Volunteer Resource Center

Off-post organizations served by volunteers include:

- American Red Cross
- Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Columbus
- Muscogee Area Literacy Association
- Muscogee County Schools
- Springer Opera House
- Historic Columbus
- Special Olympics
- Valley Rescue Mission
- Oak/Pine Manor Nursing Homes
- Project: Voice

Case's Volunteer Resource Center promotes volunteerism on post by recruiting potential volunteers, retaining current volunteers and recognizing volunteer contributions to the quality of life for soldiers and family members.

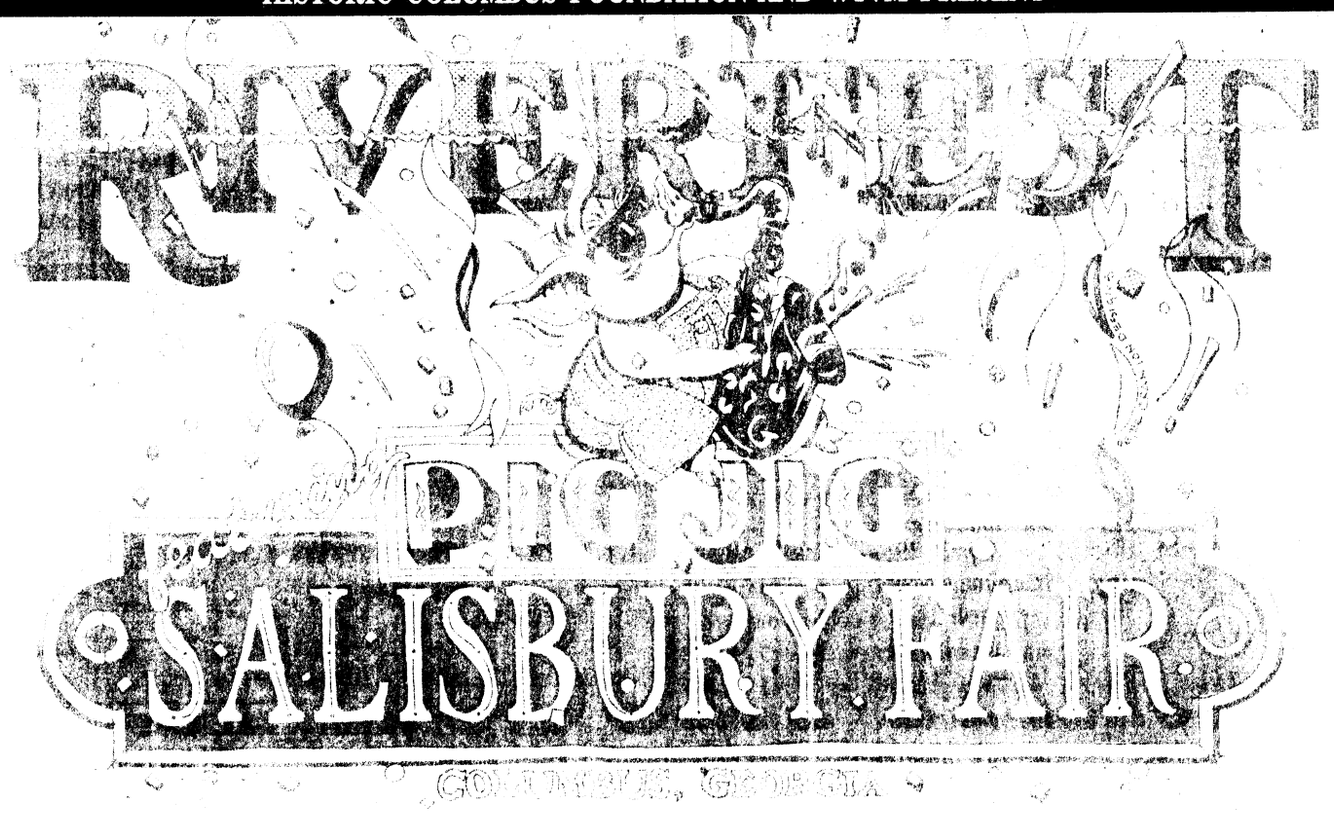
In addition, training and recognition are provided to all Fort Benning family unit networks.

Volunteer histories, hours, agencies and positions served are maintained in a centralized record bank. Case said more than 3,085 volunteers donated 319,298 hours of service during the past 12 months. This reflects a savings to the installation of $3.9 million in manhours.

Need volunteers? Ask for help

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

"The fastest and most significant way to increase volunteerism is to ask more people to help. Among the 44 percent of respondents who were asked to volunteer in the past year, 86 percent actually did. Among the 55 percent who were not asked, only 24 percent volunteered."



Kathy Case, Fort Benning installation volunteer coordinator, quoted this from "Giving and Volunteering in the United States, 1992," a survey conducted by the Independent Sector, Washington, D.C.

For the past several years, she has been a proponent of the view that with the downsizing of the military, it will be volunteers who pick up the slack and allow military services to continue as we know them.

She added that the reasons for volunteering vary with the individual, but include the following:

- Have previously volunteered.
- Wanted to make a significant change in society.
- Saw someone they admired helping another.
- Saw someone in their family helping others.
- Have been helped by others in the past.

Roseanne is 'The Woman Who Loved Elvis'

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

One performer with a famous first name is about to meet another — figuratively, anyway — as Roseanne appears in a TV-movie inspired by Elvis.

SPOTLIGHT

In Sunday's new ABC film "The Woman Who Loved Elvis," Roseanne Arnold, that network's top situation-comedy star, plays Joyce, a lady who's been deserted by her husband (portrayed by Roseanne's real-life spouse,"The Jackie Thomas Show's" Tom Arnold, with whom she also co-produced the picture). While trying to fend for what remains of her family, using somewhat questionable methods to supplement her welfare checks, she develops an ever-deepening interest in the late Elvis Presley.

Eventually, she turns her home into a memorabilia-packed Elvis shrine, and she also begins doing charitable deeds in his name. Directed by Bill Bixby (of "My Favorite Martian" and "Courtship of Eddie's Father" fame as an actor), the story was adapted from the Laura Kalpakian book "Graced Land"; also in the cast are past Oscar nominee Sally Kirkland ("Anna") as Joyce's best friend, Cynthia Gibb ("Fame") as a social worker, and Danielle Harris ("The Last Boy Scout") as Joyce's daughter.

"You have to get involved right in the beginning and push everybody along, because nobody does it for you," Roseanne says of getting "The Woman Who Loved Elvis" off the ground as both actress and producer. "I had read the book and loved it, so we got the rights, then I got Rita Mae Brown to write the teleplay. I'm real proud of the job we all did on this. It's really about the fans who love Elvis, and there are just millions and millions of those, so we made this to kind of honor them." As for the possible reaction of Presley devotees to the film, Roseanne reasons, "Who knows? I hope they do (respond favorably), because it was meant that way."

Roseanne and Tom Arnold, amid Elvis Presley memorabilia

What: "The Woman who Loved Elvis"
When: Sunday, 9 p.m. on ABC

One of the visual highlights in Sunday's feature is the porch of the Roseanne character's house, which literally is swathed in Presley photographs and related mementos. "It looks as if someone like this lady could have built that shrine herself," Roseanne reports. "It doesn't look like it took a team of carpenters to do it." She adds that when the movie was made near her husband's Iowa hometown (where they also opened a "Big Food Diner" recently), "We asked the local people to bring their Elvis souvenirs, and they were just great. They brought in everything from pillows to whiskey decanters."

Roseanne explains that in the movie, her alter ego's husband "always reminded her of Elvis a little bit, and she's always loved Elvis, so she goes into a spiritual relationship with Elvis ... maybe to make up for losing her husband, but also because of the hard life that she's had to live."

Roseanne hopes to get stand-up comedy engagements back into her schedule in the near future, having performed in Las Vegas last New Year's Eve. "I do miss that," she says.

Columbus Museum presents 'Art That Works'

Columbus Museum

A highlight of the spring season at the Columbus Museum is the exhibition "Art That Works: The Decorative Arts of the Eighties, Crafted in America."

Opening Sunday, this exhibition of more than 100 objects includes furniture, glass, tableware, flatware, rugs, screens and lamps all made by America's foremost designer craftsmen. The exhibition, organized and circulated by Art Services International, Alexandria, Va., is sponsored locally by the Edward Swift Shorter Bequest Fund, with additional support provided by Ray M. Wright Inc.

Art That Works gives an overview of the stylistic and technical achievements that marked the work of craftsmakers active throughout the United States during the 1980s.

Unlike their colonial counterparts who were apprentice-trained, contemporary artisans have been educated in universities or specialized art schools. In the 1980s, these craftsmen have matched technical sophistication with stylish designs inspired by other times and places. The result is functional art — "art that works."

Handmade furnishings, no longer the necessities they were in colonial America, have become affordable luxuries. In contemporary interiors, these objects add individuality and interest to otherwise sterile rooms. Creative new approaches use neglected materials, such as wrought iron and pewter. The gilding of metal ornaments as well as etching and engraving techniques have been rediscovered and manipulated in new ways.

Rich walnuts used in the elegant Queen Anne chairs of the late 1700s reappear in the 1980s in sleek, visually light chairs to suit modern tastes, such as John Bickel's Walnut Branch Chair of 1984. Jeff Kellar's Rocking Chair, 1988, handcrafted of East Indian rosewood and Daniel Mack's Rustic Wright Chair, 1988, combining red maple and sugar maple, are additional examples of traditional furnishings molded into twentieth century perspectives.

Whimsical decorative objects include Silas Kopf's Typewriter Desk. At first glance, one sees a covered desk with a typewriter, books, pencil holder and pencils inside. On closer observation, these items are pure illusion — inlaid pictures of colored wood.

Craft demonstrations will be held at the Columbus Museum in conjunction with this exhibition on Saturdays and Sundays from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. from Sunday to May 9. A public gallery tour will be led by Jane Kessler, freelance writer and principal partner in the Curator's Forum in Charlotte, N.C., Sunday at 2:30 p.m. The exhibition will be on view in the Shorter and Leebern Galleries Sunday through June 13. For more information, call the museum at 649-0713.

The Columbus Museum, located at 1251 Wynnton Road, features exhibitions of American and regional history and includes a hands-on discovery gallery for children. Admission for the museum is free, and it is open from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday and on Sundays from 1 until 5 p.m.

Cookoffs on menu for Springfest

Georgia's Stone Mountain Park

Ushered in by the start of the all-new Lasershow '93 on the evening of April 30, Springfest '93 at Georgia's Stone Mountain Park is set for the weekend of May 1 and 2, with new events and returning favorites.

Barbecue cooks from throughout the South will dish up mouth-waterin' pork at the 10th Annual BBQ Pork Cookoff as they battle it out for "Best Barbecue" honors at this Saturday event. There will be plenty of samples.

On Sunday, backyard chefs take the park by storm at the Fifth Ever Great Grill-Off as they prepare their favorite recipes for flamebroiled fun and competition. Categories include anything and everything from meats to stews to "any legal kill."

Country western recording artists John Michael Montgomery and Mark Collie will take center stage. Southernbred, Born Gypsy, Christopher Hercure, David Rockett, Mario Hartin and the Foxfire Boys fill out the schedule on stage for the weekend.

Surrounding the entertainment will be the Springfest arts and crafts show and sale. More than 200 artists and craftspersons will gather for the two-day juried show and sale.

Completing the weekend are contests with prizes open to all. There will be a bubbly scrub off event at 12:30 p.m. May 1 and 2 and winners will receive prize money and other awards.

For those who snort as good as they look, Saturday's Hog Calling Contest is a must and Atlanta's king and queen of pork will be chosen in the "Mr. & Ms.. Piggy" Contest. There is no charge to enter these two contests.

Participants may register for the Great Grill-Off, Mr. & Ms. Piggy Contest and the Hog Calling Contest on the day of the event. The BBQ Pork Cookoff requires preregistration. There is a charge to participate in the cooking competitions.

More information may be obtained by writing: Springfest '93 Information, Georgia's Stone Mountain Park, P.O. Box 778, Stone Mountain, Ga. 30086, or call (404) 498-5633.

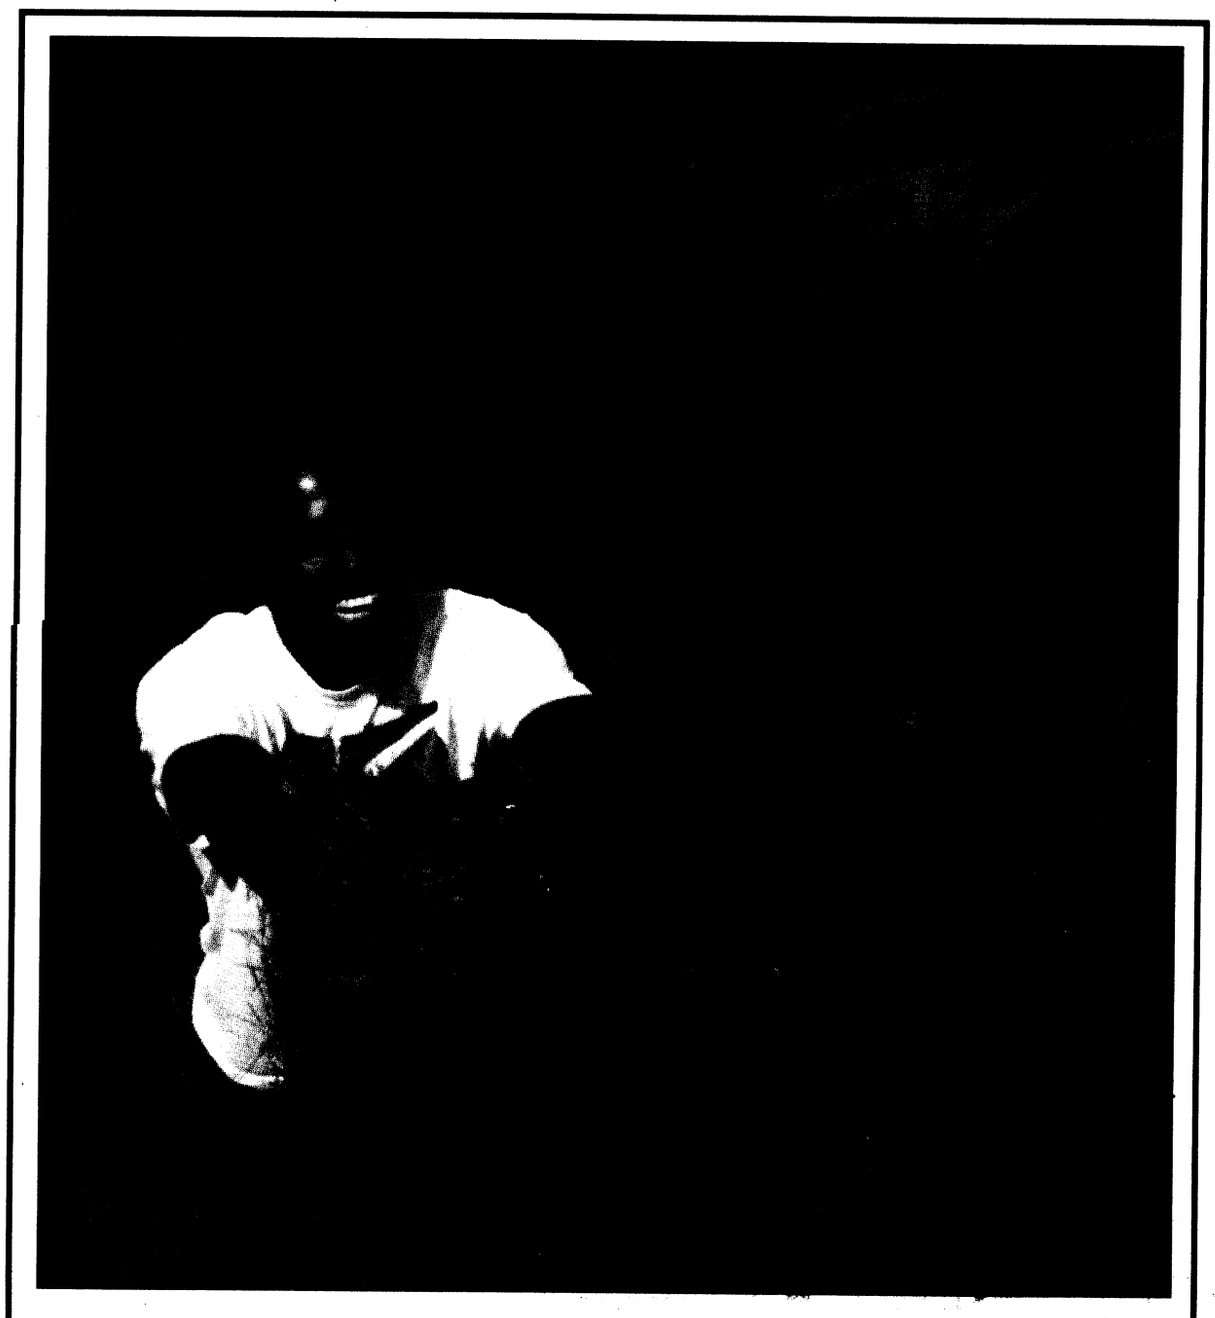
Accident results in death

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer



A Marine died April 16 from injuries sustained in a training accident at a site near the Darby Range Complex.

Lance Cpl. Matthew V. Powers, 18, of Bristol, Tenn., died at approximately 3:35 p.m. from a gunshot wound to the head.

Powers, assigned to the 2nd Light Armored Infantry Battalion, 2nd Marine Division at Camp Lejeune, N.C., was accidentally shot by another Marine with a 9mm pistol April 15, according to Monica Manganaro, the Fort Benning public information officer.

Powers was at a training site near the Darby Range Complex when the accident occurred. He was transported to Martin Army Community Hospital and later transferred to The Medical Center in Columbus. Powers was one of approximately 600 Marines in his battalion here participating in a 3 1/2-week small arms training requalification exercise, said Capt. Kenneth W. Amidon, the battalion operations officer.

The accident is under investigation.

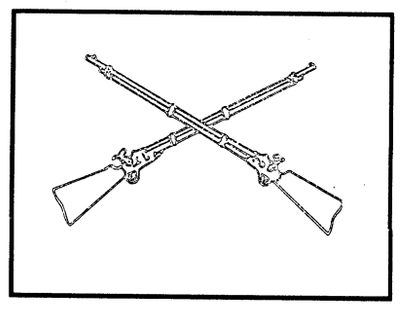
Conference set

Post readies for infantry leaders



By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

The annual Infantry Conference, which will bring together soldiers, officers, general officers and civilians from Army infantry units around the world, is scheduled to take place at Fort Benning Tuesday through Thursday.

Capt. Frank Runles, support operations officer of the 13th Corps Support Battalion and logistics officer of the Infantry Conference, said 15 to 20 people have been involved in planning the agenda since late January, with equipment and personnel support from units around post.

"We're expecting, at this point, about 600 attendees," said Runles. "The conference is open to all infantry soldiers. It will give everyone involved with the infantry a chance to come together to examine how the infantry will fit in with the future force, and what adjustments the infantry will make to remain viable as it adapts to the changing Army."

Events scheduled for the conference include a keynote address Wednesday by Training and Doctrine Command Commanding General Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr.; presentations by the directorates of Combined Arms and Tactics, Operations and Training, and Combat Development, each followed by a question and answer period; a battle lab presentation and a Dismounted Warfighting Battle Lab equipment display.

Scheduled speakers include Maj. Gen. William G. Carter III, commanding general of the National Training Center at Fort Irwin, Calif.; U.S. Army Special Operations Command Commanding General Gen. Carl W. Stiner; Forces Command Commanding General Gen. Dennis J. Reimer; Army Chief of Staff Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan; former FORSCOM Commander Gen. Edwin H. Burba Jr. and Brig. Gen. George A. Fisher Jr., commander of the Joint Readiness Training Center at Fort Chaffee, Ark., and Fort Polk, La.

Presentation of the Doughboy Award to retired Lt. Gen. David E. Grange Jr. is slated for 4:10 p.m. Thursday at York Field. The conference will also include a number of social events, culminating with a mixer and dinner at the Fort Benning Officers' Club Thursday evening.

Bayonet seeks stories, ideas

By Connie Bridges

In the fall, The Bayonet will commemorate the 75th anniversary of the post with a special section on the history and current features of the "Home of the Infantry."

Included in this special edition will be the military conflicts that Fort Benning's units have participated in, how community life has changed over the years, people who have had an influence on the growth and development of the post and what the post offers its residents today and perhaps tomorrow.

If you were a part of Fort Benning's history and have a human interest story or photos to share, send a note or call. The address is USAIC Public Affairs Office, Infantry Hall, Room 601, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905. The telephone number is 545-2201.

AER campaign at $119,598

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

The Army Emergency Relief Campaign is at $119,598, according to Sgt. 1st Class Marmion Montgomery, campaign coordinator.

Montgomery noted that some units have yet to report; and, if they need any assistance, information or campaign materials, they may reach him at campaign headquarters, 545-6969.

Currently, the fund-raiser is at 66.4 percent of the $180,000 goal.

Known as the drive for "soldiers helping soldiers," AER is an emergency financial organization that is specifically for helping Army active duty personnel, dependents, retirees, widows and members of the U.S. National Guard and Reserve.

Soldiers should see their unit AER project officers to give to this annual campaign.

Since 1942, AER has made no-interest loans and grants helping more than 2 million people with more than $410 million. Last year alone, AER assisted more than 60,000 active duty soldiers and retirees. At Fort Benning, 762 soldiers and their families received more than $1 million in assistance.

Loans may be made for such emergency expenses as medical, travel, food, rent or utilities.

According to Alfonso Deane, AER campaign officer and financial counselor, funds cannot help with nonessentials such as legal expenses, purchases, financing, covering bad checks or paying credit bills.

AUSA, local businesses team up to honor military

By Ruth J. Spaller

In recognition of military organizations, service members and their families, the tri-communities of Columbus, Phenix City and Fort Benning will celebrate Military Appreciation Week May 10 to 15.

"This week is an opportunity for the community to show the soldiers and their families that we care about them," said retired Lt. Gen. Ben F. Register, president of the Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army.

The chapter joined hands with the Columbus Chamber of Commerce, the Phenix City-Russell County Chamber of Commerce and local businesses and organizations in the tri-community to sponsor Military Appreciation Week, Register said.

"It is a week for the community to express its appreciation for what the soldier does, not just for national defense, but for the community itself," Register said.

"During the week we have asked members of local civic clubs to fly the flag at their businesses and homes and to recognize military members, whether retired or active duty, family members or Department of Defense employees," Register said.

"We are also hoping to see local businesses extending discounts to servicemembers," he said.

The week kicks off with a breakfast at the Harmony Church Fieldhouse May 10 at 6:00 a.m. Tickets will be soon be available in units.

Events such as an essay contest and golf, fishing, bowling and volleyball tournaments will take place throughout the week.

Register

There will also be a "fit to win" competition, a series of physical fit-ness events for units to compete in.

Each event will be sponsored by a local business or one of the AUSA sub-chapters oriented toward the post's major commands.

The Ranger Training Brigade will sponsor AUSA baseball night with the RedStixx May 12. Rangers from the brigade will perform rapid extraction rappeling and close combat demonstrations.

The Silver Wings, Fort Benning's command exhibition parachute team, will drop in with the game ball, and the commanding general, Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, will throw out the first pitch.

The week culminates with Armed Forces Day May 15. An awards ceremony rewarding the week's winners will take place in the morning followed by a picnic, which everyone is invited to attend.

"This will be a great opportunity to promote community involvement," Register said.

"We hope soldiers and their families will take part in and enjoy the events," Register said. "It's going to be a big week with a lot happening. It will be a lot of fun and everybody should have a good time — that's what it's all about."

Merchants to show appreciation

By William Riley Hall
Bayonet staff writer

May 2 has been designated Soldier Appreciation Day by the Macon Road Merchants Association in cooperation with the Columbus Chamber of Commerce and the Civilian Military Council.

Activities at Columbus Square Mall include special discounts from merchants to shoppers who present military identification, children's events and a "Salute to Fort Benning" party.

"We (merchants) recognize that Fort Benning customers are very loyal," said Timothy Nolan, vice president and general manager of the mall. "We've never extended appreciation of the business they do with us, so this event is to show our appreciation and say thank you to Fort Benning."

The association hosting the event is made up of more than 50 retailers, hotels and car dealers, said Nolan.

Events will begin at 1 p.m., with the party beginning at 6 p.m. at the rear of the mall.

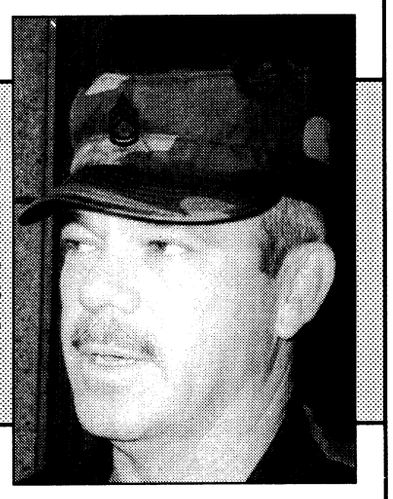
Entertainment for children will last throughout the afternoon and will include Geoffrey from Toys 'R Us, JK from Just Kid'in, Officer Scotty from the Police Department and Lt. Pluggy representing the Columbus Fire Department.

Among the events featured is a diaper derby, toddler basketball, a magic show and storytelling.

The "Salute to Fort Benning" party will feature music from the Sandy Creek Band, a fashion show, door prizes and various foods from restaurants in the area.

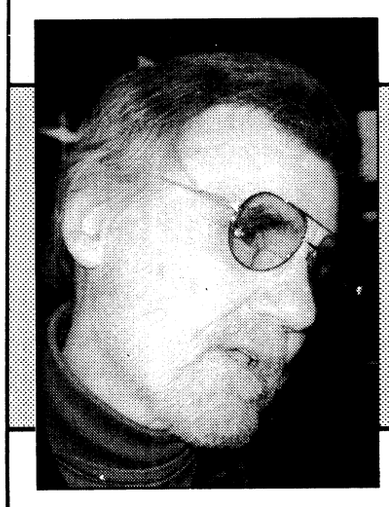
The party, which will continue until 8 p.m., will admit active duty military members and their family members upon presentation of their identification cards.

"Fort Benning is a vital part of our area's success," said Nolan. "This day is our way of showing our appreciation to these fine troops and their families.



"I hope we serve them as well as they serve us," he said.

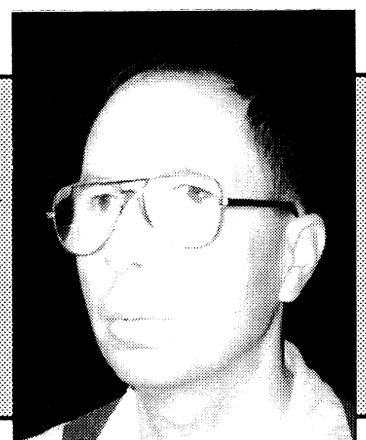
VARIOUS VOICES



How do you think Fort Benning should spend the $1 million Army Community of Excellence Award?

Jerrlin Y. Williams, X-ray technician, Martin Army Community Hospital— "I think the money should be spent improving the hospital with better equipment."

Sgt. 1st Class Bruce Johnson, Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment — "I don't know the requirements, but I think it should be spent on youth activity programs and post beautification, since that's where it came from."



Hubert Bassett, retired civil servant — "I (think it should be spent) on recreation equipment for the children."

Lillian McDaniel, family member — "I think the post has changed so much in the past 40 years, it really deserves the award. I would spend part of it on the National Infantry Museum."

Capt. Edward Fair, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment — "They should put a little into the gyms, especially on Sand Hill. We don't have a good gym there for trainees."

Staff Sgt. James Alexander, 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital — "It should benefit the majority. It should be distributed among the units for the benefit of soldiers who live in the barracks."

COMMENTARY

That's right, we're good, we're great, we're the best. Fort Benning has been named best large installation in the Army Communities of Excellence competition, and we deserve it.

Benning was my first assignment after advanced individual training; and, as a journalist, I've had opportunities to witness everything from ranger competitions to ribbon-cutting ceremonies. Without cheesing, I can say that I've been more than impressed with the improvements that have been made here just since April 1992.

In the year I've been here, the post has — among other things — opened a Family Unit Network Center, new day care centers, completed several housing and barracks renovation projects and upgraded services and facilities. An example: I was on the housing list for about six months and could call and check my progression through the list at any hour of the day, thanks to the recently-instituted automated phone line there.

Also, I can't count the number of stories I've done on units that won awards at the Training and Doctrine Command and Army level. Engineers, infantrymen, civilian workers, legal assistance types, and scads of others — even

Karen S. Morarie

The Bayonet — have been recognized for outstanding performance.

All this has been accomplished despite a $60 million cut in the operating budget of the post over the past three years. I have heard post leaders from the top down say that soldier and family member quality of life issues are high priority here, and I believe it.

So, all you soldiers who pick up trash when you see it lying around, whether you're told to or not; all you housing occupants who plant flowers, prune shrubs and cut your grass regularly (including the neighbor boy who cuts mine); and especially all you employees, civilian and military, who take great pride in doing your jobs to the best of your ability, every day; all of you — let's hear it for us! Great job!

Now, let's get back to work. The Infantry Conference is about to start, and this is no time to slack off.

PAO 'secretaries' are indispensable

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

COMMENTARY

This is a belated "best wishes" to secretaries, since this is the last day of secretaries' week.

Why am I late with this? I ain't got a secretary to keep me straight.

I once heard some hot shot executive talking about businesses. I think it was one of those Total Quality Management talks, and he was stressing customer service.

The point he made is for a business to be successful, it had to enjoy good customer relations.

He said the first line of customer relations was the receptionists and secretaries.

"These people," he said, "can make or break a business since you have only one chance to make a good first impression.

"Yet," he said, "these people are also habitually the lowest-paid people in the organization, when they should be among the highest paid."

I can certainly agree that secretaries can make or break an organization.

I think Fort Benning is especially blessed with an abundance of great secretaries — realizing secretaries in the purest sense of the word probably don't exit — so I'm counting all those who perform such duties from receptionist to administrative assistant.

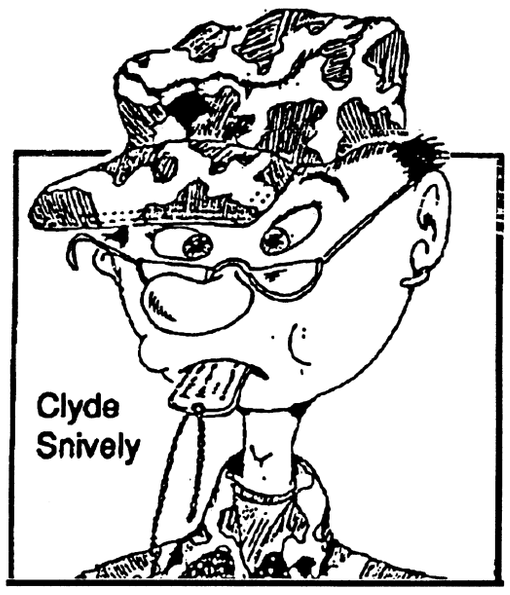
Too often, these wonderful people are taken for granted, since when they're on the job, things go smoothly. The boss gets to where he or she needs to get on time, phone calls are routed to the right action officer, and visitors are greeted properly and courteously.

But let them take a few days off and pandemonium breaks out. Around here it usually takes a GS-12, sergeant first class and specialist to handle the duties of our "I'm not a secretary I'm an administrative support assistant."

I can tell you, there was a lot of praying when Janice announced she was going to take the early retirement option.

The public affairs officer wasn't that concerned since he's leaving in a week, but every time we'd peek in on the deputy, he'd either be on a prayer rug or fingering his "beads."

They say no one's indispensable, but the feeling was, it'd take two people to replace her.



Got questions about the budget? Only Janice has the answers. Need to know about manpower? See Janice. Want to know the lineage of downtown dignitaries? Janice is a walking, talking genealogical service.

We have a similar situation across the hall in public information with Terri, an editorial clerk.

Like Janice, the burden of keeping the office running smoothly falls on her shoulders.

Go in that office sometime when she's not around and ask the two guys who work there where something is and you have instant panic.

Oh, they'll try and help you all right, but you can tell by the way they stumble around, rifling in- and out-boxes and pulling out file drawers, that they haven't got the foggiest idea where anything is kept.

So you excuse yourself and wonder if you can hold out without a piece of information until Terri gets back.

Among other things, Terri is a computer whiz. She can actually pronounce DOS, she can beat up on dBase instead of the other way around and she can actually do all that Harvard Graphics stuff.

The help she's provided us journalists, who don't even turn our computers off at night for fear of not being able to get them started again the next morning, has been invaluable.

These two women might not wear the label "secretary," but they possess all the attributes that make good secretaries invaluable and make work for the rest of us go a lot more smoothly.

Secretaries, and like persons, I salute you.

LETTERS

Reader surprised some community members dishonest

I'd like to address this letter to the person who found my son's bunny ears. But, I don't know his or her name. In fact, I never met this person.

April 10, I took part in the festival at Riverside, along with many other people. I was there with my two little boys; my husband was working. I brought two pairs of bunny ears.

I thought I could get some cute pictures. I only went home with one pair. Somewhere near the train ride, I accidentally dropped them. They were missing less than five minutes when I returned to the area. One of the train crew saw you pick them up and walk off with them. You didn't even attempt to find their owner!

I had the band leader twice ask for anyone who might have found them to turn them in.

I don't quite understand what you were thinking. Perhaps, you thought they would look cute on your little boy or girl the next day. Did you even think about the small child who had lost them?

My little boy doesn't understand why someone would take his ears home. He knows that if you find something, you should attempt to return it to its owner. Don't you? Maybe, you could explain it to him.

I am surprised to see this sort of action in the military community. Is this the type of neighborly image we wish to project?

This is the second time this has happened to me on this post in the past six months. When I lost my sunglasses in the Post Exchange in November, I thought it was an isolated incident; I guess I was mistaken. Apparently, some members of our military family don't care about the rest of us!

I have only two things to add. To the person who has the bunny ears: What lesson have you just taught that child you love? To the person who has my sunglasses: I hope you enjoy them, they were a birthday present.

Girl Scout leaders help prepare for future challenges

Thursday marked the 12th annual national observance of Girl Scout Leader's Day. In recognition of this day, Girl Scouts wish to say "thank you" to Girl Scout leaders for a job well done.

In the business community, there is a great deal of discussion about young women and men graduating from high school and college with ample "head" knowledge but a lack of leadership experience.

Girl Scouting recognizes the need to prepare our youth for tomorrow's challenges and commends the more than 1,400 volunteers who serve our council making certain that the program happens every week for our girls. By creating an atmosphere of fun and friendship, combined with challenging activities, Girl Scout leaders root each girl in the training ground from which responsible citizens and effective leaders grow. There are few tasks of greater importance.

Girl Scout leaders come from all walks of life. Many of them manage professional careers, families and community projects, yet still find the time and energy to lead a Girl Scout troop. In a society in which it is easy to have one's priorities confused, Concharty Council of Girl Scouts Inc. is extremely grateful for the priorities that our leaders have set. By realizing the tremendous impact our girls can have on the future of our community, Girl Scout leaders assure all of us a brighter tomorrow.

Thank you, Girl Scout Leaders and volunteers, not only on this day, but throughout the year, for allowing today's girls an opportunity to become tomorrow's leaders.

We salute you!

Sally B. Lasseter

Infantry officer captures Silver Star

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

A belated Silver Star, earned for actions during the Korean War, was presented to retired Lt. Col. David L. White Monday.

White earned the award for gallantry in action near Satae Ri, Korea, on Nov. 3 and 4, 1952, but was discharged from the Army before a formal presentation could be made.

White, then a first lieutenant and platoon leader, was assigned to the 160th Infantry Regiment, 40th Infantry Division, which was sent in to relieve the 25th Infantry Division on Heartbreak Ridge.

He encountered the enemy while leading an ambush patrol deep into enemy territory and provided warning of an impending attack to his unit.

White directed the defense of his sector during a devastating enemy attack with artillery, mortar and small arms fire, and moved his patrol back to the main line of resistance without a casualty when he observed the enemy moving up on both sides of him.

His leadership was instrumental in repelling the attack of a numerically superior and fanatical enemy force.

During the action, White was wounded in both legs and feet and could not stand, but he refused to be evacuated and continued to direct his platoon's fire.

Not until the attack ended and the wounded men of his platoon had been evacuated did he agree to be carried to the aid station.

Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, who presented the Silver Star, said, "It is a real honor to recognize, after all these years, that leadership you displayed in Korea, your courage under fire, your dedication and commitment to the U.S. Army and to the United States of America."

White, who attended the Basic and Advanced Officers Course here, said that as an Infantry officer he would always be dedicated to Fort Benning.

"As soon as I saw the jump towers, it all came back and I felt right at home again," he said. "It is an honor to be here."

New regs set ethical conduct

Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Editor's note: This is the fourth in a series of five articles on the new "Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch," which became effective in February. Next week's article will discuss outside activities of government employees.

According to the Office of Government Ethics new regulation, an employee may not, directly or indirectly, give a gift or make a donation toward a gift for an official superior, and superiors may not accept gifts from subordinates.

An official superior is any person whose duties include directing or evaluating either the employee or any official superior of that employee. Thus, the rules apply to all superiors in an employee's direct chain of supervision.

The regulation provides three exceptions when such gifts are allowed.

• First, a subordinate may give or donate toward a gift to a superior on a special and infrequent occasion; such occasions are generally those that occur on a nonrecurring basis (marriage, illness, etc.) or those, such as a transfer or retirement that terminate the supervisory relationship. Further, the gift must be appropriate to the occasion.

The OGE rules require that those soliciting for contributions toward such gifts must make it clear that the contributions are completely voluntary, and that, if an amount of a contribution is suggested, employees can contribute a lesser amount.

• The second exception permits gifts on an occasional basis, including traditional gift-giving occasions, such as contributions for food that will be consumed at the office, meals at an employee's home (of a type and value customarily provided to personal friends) and customary gifts, such as a bottle of wine brought when invited to another's home.

The regulation also allows gifts having a value not in excess of $10 on appropriate occasions, such as Christmas or birthdays.

The regulation also provides that the donation by civilian employees of annual leave pursuant to applicable regulations, is not an improper gift even if given to a superior, unless the superior is the employee's immediate supervisor.

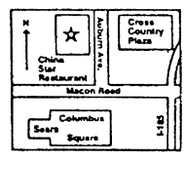
• The third exception relates to the rule against an employee accepting a gift from someone receiving less pay. The employee may accept the gift when not in a subordinate-superior relationship with the employee giving the gift if there is a personal relationship between the two employees that would independently justify the gift.

The regulation's prohibitions on the misuse of one's government position addresses four areas:

• Use of public office for private gain.
• Use of nonpublic information.
• Use of government property.
• Use of official time.

The OGE regulation prohibits employees from using their title, position or the authority of their position for the private gain of themselves, their families or friends, or organizations with which they are affiliated. Thus, employees are prohibited from using their positions to cause special handling of a friend's claim, even if the friend's claim was fully warranted.

The regulation prohibits employees from using nonpublic information for their own or another's financial benefit. "Using" includes not only releasing nonpublic information, but also giving advice or taking action based on such information.



Additionally, government facilities and personnel are only to be used for the official business of the government. Thus, it would not be proper for supervisors to ask employees to type a personal letter for them during duty hours or even to do it themselves on their government computer and printer.

Doughboy recipient to be honored

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Retired Lt. Gen. David E. Grange Jr. will be the recipient of the Doughboy Award on York Field Thursday at 4:10 p.m.

The Doughboy Award is a chrome-plated replica of the doughboy helmet worn by soldiers in the American Expeditionary Force during World War I and in the early days of World War II.

It is presented annually to a person who made a significant contribution to the infantry force, and it is presented on behalf of infantrymen, past, present and future.

The original award can be seen in the foyer of Infantry Hall.

Past recipients include Bob Hope, H. Ross Perot, Bill Mauldin, John O. Marsh Jr. and Sens. John G. Tower, Warren B. Rudman and Robert J. Dole.

The term "doughboy" was originally used during the border conflicts prior to World War I in Texas, where soldiers trained along the Rio Grande and became covered in white dust of the adobe soil.

Mounted troops called them "adobes." This degenerated to "dobies," which became "doughboys."

Grange was born in Richmond Hill, N.Y., in 1925. He joined the Army in June of 1943, and he served as an enlisted man during World War II in the Rome-Arno, Southern France, Rhineland, Ardennes and Central Europe campaigns during World War II.

He was commissioned a second lieutenant of infantry in May 1950 from the Ground Defense Officer Candidate School at Fort Riley, Kan., and subsequently served two combat tours in Korea and three tours in Vietnam.

Lab pros are on front lines

By Jim Camp
Martin Army Community Hospital

Although you may never see them, clinical laboratorians are fighting on the front lines of medicine. They may be the first to determine if you're pregnant, to see a cancer cell, or to detect an infection in your body.

They perform the blood tests you need to get a marriage license, and help physicians decide which antibiotics will cure your pneumonia or other infection. They monitor whether drugs are achieving the optimum doses for therapy. They help determine cause of death during an autopsy. Clinical laboratorians touch your life in a 1,000 different ways — yet you rarely see them.

Clinical laboratorians take their jobs very seriously; they have to. One mistake can be fatal. They are under enormous pressure — yet, if you talk to them, they will tell you how thrilling their jobs are, how rewarding it is to know that their findings have a direct impact on your medical care.

Clinical laboratorians are a vital link in the health-care chain. And viewing the human body in its smallest components can be fascinating.

National Medical Laboratory Week was celebrated April 11 through 17.

This year's theme was "Your Laboratory: Where the Investigation Begins." During this time, many people learned about these unsung heroes and heroines whose dedication and importance we often take for granted.

"Diagnosing health problems can be a real challenge," said Dennis Hayden, D.O., pathologist at Martin Army Community Hospital.

"Laboratory investigation into changes in blood or body cells may be the key to detecting problems in time to take preventive actions or intervene in the earliest and most curable stages of disease."

Along with 12,000 laboratories across the country, the clinical laboratorians at Martin Army Community Hospital celebrated the week by participating in various activities.

The activities included aiding in cholesterol screenings and setting up an exhibit at the annual U.S. Army Medical Department Activity health fair; video presentations; displaying a bulletin board featuring lab photographs; setting up lab displays in the hospital; handing out flyers on lab information.

The laboratorians also celebrated the week by holding drawings in which laboratory staffers won prizes — dinner coupons, caps, Frisbees, coffee mugs, etc. They wore T-shirts that displayed art work designed by one of the staff.

Awards were given for the best homemade ice cream and best laboratory cartoon. Congratulations and calories went hand-in-hand.

Schools plan kindergarten roundup

Fort Benning Schools

The Fort Benning Schools will sponsor the Kindergarten Roundup May 4 for the 1993-94 school year.

The roundup will be at Frank R. Loyd School from 2 to 3:30 p.m., Herbert J. Dexter School from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., Morris R. McBride School from 1:30 to 3 p.m., Freddie Stowers School from 2 to 3:30 p.m. and Edward A. White and Richard G. Wilson schools from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m.

Stowers Elementary School is still under construction, but a roundup will be held there for the first class of kindergarten students who will attend the school.

Though the entire school will not be open, parents and kindergartners can look at the new building.

Children who will be 5 years of age on or before Sept. 1, are eligible to enter kindergarten this fall.

Parents are asked to bring their child to the assigned school to complete registration forms and to receive an information packet.

Parents are also urged to bring the child's birth certificate to the roundup.

Roundup is a time for parents and children to become acquainted with the school principle and teachers and to see the school building.

While children still must be registered in the fall, parents can learn about necessary forms for registration and ask questions about the coming school year.

The following is a list of housing areas and the school that children from those areas will attend for the kindergarten roundup and the 1993-94 school year:

Housing area roundup sites are as follows:

- South Main Post - Dexter
- Battle Park - Loyd
- Custer Terrace - Loyd
- Old Officer Capehart - Loyd
- McGraw Manor- McBride
- Bouton Heights - Stowers
- Davis Hill - Stowers
- McDaniel Manor - White

Parents with questions on whether they live in the North Main Post or South Main Post areas of Fort Benning may contact the Fort Benning Schools at 545-2500.

School board members to be elected

Fort Benning Schools

The Fort Benning Schools will elect members to its school board May 18.

School board seats to be filled for two-year terms are for Dexter, Faith, Stowers and White schools, and the "at large" seat for chaplain.

To be an eligible school board member, a candidate must be the parent or guardian of a child enrolled in the school at the time the candidate is elected to the board.

The candidate must not be an employee or related to any employee of the school system.

Those interested in running for election to the school board should contact the principal of the school for which they wish to run or the assistant superintendent for Budget and Personnel Services.

The deadline for entering as a candidate was April 7.

The school board, elected by parents of children attending the schools, meets on the last Monday each month to set district policy and provide general direction to the system.

Members are elected to two-year staggered terms, with each of the seven schools having a representatives on the board.

Also, the board includes an elected president and chaplain.

Current board members are: Col. Gregory Camp, president; Col. Roy Plummer, chaplain; Pat Grant, Dexter School representative; Kathleen Meade, Faith School representative; Sgt. Kevin Peoples, Loyd School; Sgt. Enrique Montana, McBride School; Mary Wall, Patch School; Maryellen Canada, White School; Sgt. 1st Class John Gonzales, Wilbur School; and Sgt. 1st Class Clyde Cuttino, Wilson School.

Interservice tourney set

Special to The Bayonet©

The Columbus Fort Benning Rugby Football Club Cruise-a-matics will host the 15th annual U.S.A. Rugby Military Men's Club Championship tournament on Blue and French Fields beginning April 30 through May 2.

Rugby and the military have enjoyed a special relationship over the years. Military rugby is currently organized as part of the United States of America Rugby Football Union under the direction of the Combined Services Committee.

Armed forces rugby encompasses teams from each of the five services and virtually every region of the country and every major duty station in the world. As of 1992, there were 42 military teams in the states with another 12 overseas. Most major military installations support a team or, as in the case of Fort Benning, a split team derived from the military and civilian community.

Teams compete annually in the interservice championships, which pit the select (all-star) teams from each service against each other. The National Military Club Championships have all services vie for the national title.

In 1992 the championship was held at Kelly Air Force in San Antonio, Texas. Thirty-six teams from as far away as Okinawa paricipated. This year is expected to be even bigger and better.

In 1991, when the tournament was held at Fort Benning, a crowd of more than 10,000 was estimated to have attended the championships. All in all the military nationals are the showcase for the best of miliatry rugby.

The Youth Services basketball coaches hosted a basketball game Saturday evening at Briant Wells Field House against the team of Foxie 105 and came away with a 91-54 trouncing of the all-volunteer team.

"We came out and played the best that we could under the circumstances," said team captain Art Thomason of Foxie 105. "One of our best players had a death in the family that day and we were more concerned with his well-being than anything else. We also had made a commitment to the Youth Activites program, and we were going to put a team on the floor no matter what."

Kurt Wagner led the way for the coaches with 20 points while John Jackson hit for 15 and Samuel Wills ripped the nets for 14 points.

The Foxie team was led by Thomason and Chris Thomas with 14 points each while teammate Harvey Carson added 13 in the loss.

Lake George has al'lure'

By Kevin Lee McIver
USAIC Public Affairs Office

If you weren't out on Lake Walter F. George fishing last weekend, you missed out on some great bass fishing. I've got to tell you, I haven't seen fishing that good since last year.

The largemouths were ripping through plastic worms and green lizards as quick as I could cast them. The action was fantastic, especially in the backwater areas of the lake.

The area that I was fishing — I'm not going to give away any secrets — was vicinity FL9570. For those of you who can read a map, that will get you in the general area. If you can't read a map, better ask a friend.

Anyway, I got out there at first light, and the largemouths were running bait fish in the middle of the lake. I threw a lot of top-water lures to no avail. So I decided to switch my tactics and concentrated on the flats where the grassy areas were.

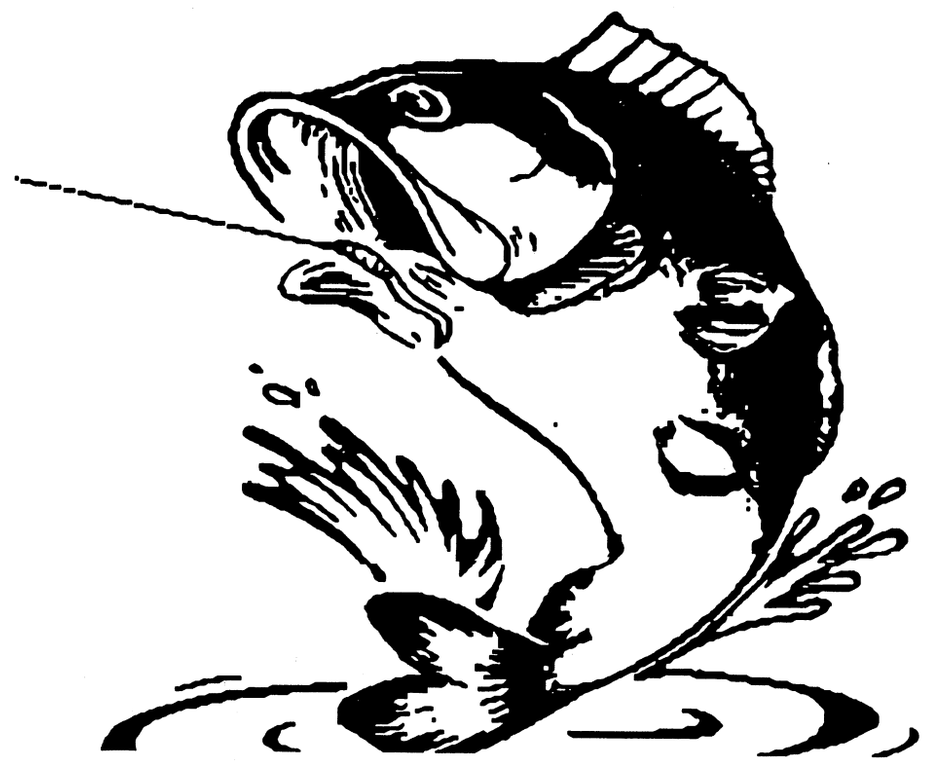
As I maneuvered my boat up against the first vegetated area, I could hear the bass "smackin'" baitfish and insects under the hydrilla (hydra). Then I noticed you could follow the movements of the bass as they plowed their way under the grass. It was like Moses parting the Red Sea.

So I would cast an eight-inch black and blue culprit worm a few feet past the fish, then just drag it over the top of the grass to the fish. When the worm hit the spot over the fish, the bass would savagely attack it, busting through the grass. If I got no response, I would "bounce" the worm until it dropped through the grass, and I would get a hit.

Anyway, I continued to fish the marshy area, taking my boat into shallow water. Even in less than two feet of water, the bass would strike. It was some great action.

The day ended with several largemouths in the basket, including a couple of four-pounders. I wasn't the only one having a good day fishing. A six-foot gator, alligator that is, was fishing about 50 yards from me. Needless to say, if you fish the backwaters, watch out for gators and snakes.

For anyone out there who hasn't fished Lake George, it's just a short drive from Main Post.



On the Alabama side, you can head across the river and take Highway 165 south for a few miles. Then turn east on Alabama County Road 18, and follow your map. It will take you right past Fryar Drop Zone and Lae Field. From there, several access points are available.

An easier way to go will be to rent a boat from Outdoor Recreation at Uchee Creek and head straight down the river. You can't miss it.

On the Georgia side, River Bend Park offers easy access. Located about 25 minutes south of Main Post, the park has a boat ramp and a fishing pier available. To get there take Highway 27 to Cusseta, then Highway 27 south. After about 2 1/2 miles, you'll see a paved road to the right. I'm told there is a sign at the turn for River Bend Park. Anyway the road ends at the park, which is about eight miles from the turn.

No matter which route you take to Lake Walter F. George, the area offers some of the best largemouth bass fishing around within a short drive from Main Post. Ensure you take a good supply of plastic worms and you'll have the time of your life.

Good luck and see you at the fishin' hole.

Anglers weather changing conditions

By Steve Price and Earl Bentz
Outboard Marine Corporation

Yesterday's weather included high winds, thunderstorms, and the chance of a tornado. Today, it's calm and the skies have cleared.

How do tournament bass fishermen compete under such rapidly changing conditions?

"First," said Tom Mann Jr., a veteran tournament pro who regularly fishes in severe weather conditions, "you can't let the weather bother you. The weather is going to happen, so you prepare yourself for it. Besides, everyone has to fish under the same conditions.

"Second," the professional angler continued, "I try to find two totally different bass fishing patterns for each tournament, so I can fall back on one if the conditions change."

Mann's two patterns often include one for shallow water and another for deep water, and one of these may be near the launching area and the other far away.

"When you have wind and rain or heavy cloud cover," he said, "the bass frequently move fairly shallow and may be quite active, but most stormy conditions like that are followed by clear, bright days and the fish will act totally differently.

"I watch the long-range weather pattern and try to plan for the changing weather," the pro said, "because you just can't depend on weather conditions remaining constant for the six full days we're usually on the water.

"Something nearly always changes," he said, "especially in the spring and the fall when most of our tournaments are held."

Mann feels it it especially important to try to find some bass fairly close in protected water, in case high winds make long-range boat navigation dangerous. This isn't easy, because many other competitors are doing the very same thing.

"When we scatter from the launch ramp, some anglers regularly run 40 or 50 miles away, looking for bass other fishermen may not have found," he said. "Many times, we find that type of fish, too, but when you fish close to the launch, you can bet most of the bass you locate have already been found and probably even caught once or twice by other anglers."

In addition to looking for two distinctly different bass catching patterns, Mann also takes care to outfit himself with the proper clothing and keep it stored in his boat. A quality rain suit as well as a cold weather snowmobile suit have permanent places in his storage compartments.

"We don't take foolish chances with the weather," he said. "For example, if we're caught in a severe thunder storm with a lot of lightning, we try to get to some type of shelter, and if a sudden front drops temperatures below freezing, we make certain we're dressed properly for it.

"The main thing is to remember that you can't change the weather, so you do your best to get along with it."

Bass club weighs in

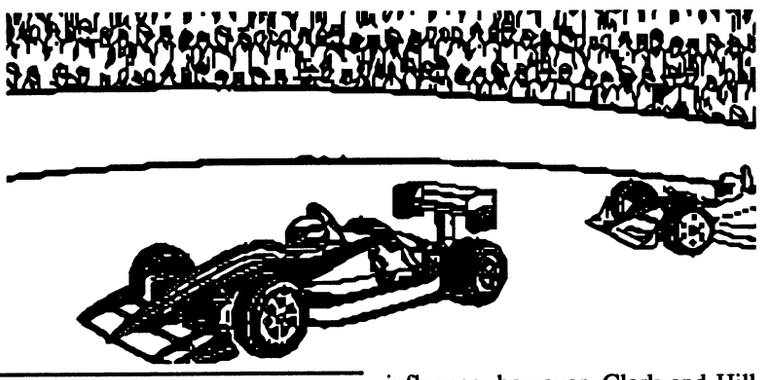
Fort Benning Bass Club

George Mendez of the Fort Benning Bass Club finished second in a field of 536 nonprofessional fishermen competing in the Georgia BASS chapter federation's top six classic.

Mendez caught 20.38 pounds on Lake Sidney C. Lanier April 5 and 6. The tournament was the largest in the GBCF's 22-year history with 89 of the 107 chapters participating.

Two local chapters participated. The Dolphin Bass club finished 15th with 38.38 pounds and the Fort Benning Bass Club was 14th with 38.76 pounds.

The LaGrange Bass Club tied for 21st with 36.40 pounds. Hector Sanchez of the LaGrange Club finished 10th and Jake Everett of Americus, Ga., finished 11th in the tournament.



On day one, there were 922 fish caught weighing 1,358.80 pounds, and 917 were released; day two 676 fish were caught (661 were released) weighing 1,077.60 pounds.

Two-day totals are 1,598 fish, 2,436.40 pounds, with a 98.75 percent release rate.

Mendez, Sanchez and Everett will all be members of the Georgia team competing in the BASS regional Southern division tournament June 23 to 25 at Lake Neely-Henry in Gadsden, Ala. They will each be eligible to participate as one of five nonprofessionals in the 1994 BASS Master Classic.

Racers change gears

COMMENTARY

Recent shifts in world-class drivers will change the face of international racing in 1993.

Michael Andretti, a star of Indy Car racing, has announced that he will move over to European-based Formula One racing with the Marlboro McLaren team. In turn, British champion Nigel Mansell, a dominant figure in Formula One, has announced that he is moving to the Indy Car circuit.

Although each of the moves caused a great deal of excitement in racing circles, there has been a long history of this kind of driver/machine cross-pollination, and it has served to enhance the sport.

My own racing career developed in the mainly European Formula One circuit, where I was fortunate enough to hold the position of world champion twice before I entered Indy Car competition.

In making that move, I was simply part of a trend that has continued since the Indianapolis 500 emerged as the greatest prize in the world of racing.

From the beginning, the Indianapolis 500 — traditionally the richest prize in racing — was a strong draw for Europeans.

A European driver first achieved prominence in U.S. car racing when Frenchman Jules Goux took the third running of the Indy 500 in 1913.

A safety factor also shifted European attention to America. America's closed oval race tracks were safer than the open, winding tracks that characterized European racing.

So Europeans brought their then-superior technology to the United States, where they absorbed both the practice and theory of American racing. The practice was all-out, wheel-to-wheel competition.

In the 1960s, drivers from Great Britain arrived at Indy with their Coopers and Lotuses. Scotland's Jim Clark won in 1966, and Graham Hill took the race the following year — the last year that a foreign driver would win Indy until 1989.

American drivers dominated throughout the 1970s and 1980s. The drought of European winners did not mean a lack of European influence, however. Clark and Hill had demonstrated the advantages of Lotus and Lola designs, and the 1970s and 1980s saw English engines and chassis with their innovative ground effects all but corner the market in Indy cars.

In 1989, I achieved the goal of a lifetime by winning the Indianapolis 500. I am Brazilian, but my experience defines me as a European driver. Holland's Arie Luyendyck won the year after I did, but in 1991 and 1992, American drivers came roaring back with Indy wins by Rick Mears and Al Unser Jr.

Today, the tradition continues. Europe is undergoing sweeping changes, and the stability of the American racing scene appeals to many European drivers.

On the other hand, the big prize money in Formula One racing is attractive to American drivers. So, in the racing of the 1990s. I'm sure that we will continue to see an exchange of ideas and talent across the Atlantic Ocean.

Miracles show master's touch

By Roger D. Criner
Family Life Center

REFLECTIONS

William Gibson has written one of the most beautiful dramas of our time. It is titled "The Miracle Worker." His play relates the inspiring story of Helen Keller.

Soon after the little girl had been born into the home of an Alabama couple, she seemed consigned to a living death. A raging fever left Keller unable to see, hear or speak. Surrounded by darkness and silence, she became similar to a wild animal, tolerated by benevolent, but puzzled, parents.

Anne Sullivan came into the blighted life of Keller. She was contracted to be her teacher. She desperately wanted to reach into the little girl's life and open a channel of communication with the outside world of reality.

Since Keller had been denied the normal gifts of sight and sound, Sullivan worked with her remaining sense of touch. She sought to establish contact with the buried hopes and expressions of Keller. Patiently, Sullivan traced the letters of the blind alphabet and guided young Helen's hand to touch objects for which the letters stood.

Slowly but surely, insight dawned upon Keller's mind. The bridge between symbol and reality was crossed. She began to perceive and to communicate with the world around her. As a result of Sullivan's creative and persistent teaching, Keller became one of the most luminous lives of the 20th century.

Gibson called Sullivan "The Miracle Worker." She deserved that title. Nothing less than a miracle could have brought light and life where there had been only darkness and death. The transformation of Keller was incredible. Sullivan's touch upon Keller's life will remain a great inspiration for those who read the story.

One of the great portraits of God in the Gospels could be labeled "The Miracle Worker." Reading the Gospels, we see numerous points where God reached into lives of darkness and despair and brought light and life. The miracles of Jesus Christ disclose the powerful influence of the Lord upon nature and upon the lives of human beings.

Jesus demonstrated numerous traits of God in the miracles - God's compassion over needy human beings; God's desire to help people; God's will for people's wholeness, not sickness; and God's power over disease, birth defects and demonic possession.

God has an immense influence upon every person who lives. No one needs to consider himself a nobody. Often we are affected by the feelings of society about human beings instead of God's opinion. Society judges a person's worth by such factors as the ethnic group to which he belongs, the section of town he lives in, the possessions he has, the achievements he has made and numerous other superficial standards. Beneath many episodes in the ministry of Jesus could be written, "Friend, God places a high value upon you."

When I read or hear of a life-changing miracle, I often think of a poem I once read. The poem is titled "The Touch of the Master's Hand," (author unknown).

'Twas battered and scarred, and the auctioneer
Thought it scarcely worth his while
To waste much time on the old violin,
But he held it up with a smile;
"What am I bidden, good folks," he cried,
"Who'll start the bidding for me?
A dollar - one dollar - then two, only two
Two dollars, and who'll make it three?
Going for three,"-but no
From the room far back, a gray-haired man
Came forward and picked up the bow;
Then wiping the dust from the old violin,
And tightening the loosened strlngs,
He played a melody pure and sweet
As a caroling angel sings.
The music ceased and the auctioneer,
with a voice that was quiet and low,
Said, "Now what am I bid for the old violin?"
And he held it up with the bow;
"A thousand dollars-and who'll make it two?
Two thousand and who'll make it three?
Three thousand once-three thousand twice
And going-and gone, "cried he;
The people cheered, but some of them cried,
"We don't understand;
What changed its worth? Quick came the reply,
"The touch of a master's hand."
And many a man with life out of tune,
And battered and scarred with sin,
Is auctioned cheap to a thoughtless crowd,
Much like the old violin,
A mess of pottage-a glass of wine,
A game-and he travels on;
He's going once-and going twice
He's golng-and almost gone!
But the master comes, and the foolish crowd,
Never can quite understand.
The worth of a soul, and the change that's wrought
By the touch of the Master's hand.

Human beings can have their lives changed by the tremendous power of God, the touch of the Master's strong hand.

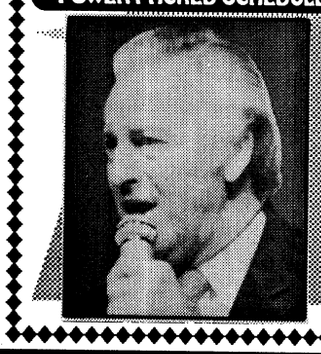
Mass reflects heritage

By James Coindreau
USAIC Chaplains' Office

At nearly every military installation, you will find this distinctive religious group. It is part of the U. S. Catholic Church and members are encouraged to worship in Spanish, if they so choose, by the Conference of Bishops.



Since the move of the School of the Americas from Panama to Fort Benning in 1985, the Hispanic community here has doubled. This has brought as many as 500 worshipers to the Spanish Mass at Main Post Catholic Chapel Sundays at 9:30 a.m.

The service, which is conducted entirely in Spanish, is accompanied by a Spanish choir. The choir consists of 23 volunteers who lead the congregation in singing. Instead of the traditional organ playing they are accompanied by a guitar, cymbal, "karacas," "Guiro" and sticks.

The Hispanic Catholic community also offers a prayer group every Tuesday at 7 p.m., a Bible Study Wednesdays at 1 p.m. and a monthly brunch for single soldiers the last Sunday of each month.

For more information, call Chaplain (Maj.) James Coindreau at 545-5301.

CRIME WATCH

Military Police Activity

The following entries were taken from the Fort Benning Military Police Blotters from April 6 to 12. Such entries may be incomplete and are not the adjudication of the guilt or innocence of any person.

This week's hot topic concerns securing property in privately owned vehicles. Storing high-value items in your privately owned vehicle is discouraged by the Military Police Activity.

If you must leave a high-value item in your vehicle, ensure that it isn't visible from outside the vehicle. Get into the habit of locking your vehicle every time you leave it unattended, regardless of the length of time you will be away from it.

• A specialist reported that persons unknown cut the roof of his convertible and removed a compact disc player and two speakers.

• An Army and Air Force Exchange Service employee was charged with theft by deception after removing approximately $125 in cash from a cash register.

• A specialist was charged by civil authorities with driving while intoxicated, failing to obey a traffic control device and having no proof of insurance after he failed to stop for a red light and struck another vehicle.

• A sergeant reported that persons unknown removed two water fountains, a sink, a toilet and refrigerator from his unit.

• A private was charged with shoplifting after he entered the dressing room of the Post Exchange at the Main Mall and placed a pair of blue jeans on under his pants and a shirt on under his shirt.

He then placed several items of clothing in a shopping bag and exited the store without paying for the items.

• A private was charged with simple battery after he placed a hot iron on the forearm of another soldier during an argument.

• A civilian was charged with theft by deception and criminal trespassing after soliciting newly arrived recruits for donations. He was apprehended and searched, at which time $163 in cash was found in an envelope.

• A staff sergeant reported that persons unknown stole his son's bicycle from an on-post playground.

• This week's booby prize is awarded to the specialist who was driving another soldier's car when he failed to maintain control of the vehicle and struck a fire hydrant. He left the scene of the accident and drove to the soldier's barracks. He informed the soldier that someone must have hit his car while it was parked, so the soldier called the MPs to investigate.

Investigation revealed that the paint from the car matched the paint left on the fire hydrant. Further investigation revealed that the specialist had a blood alcohol level of .16.

He was charged with driving under the influence, damage to government property and striking a fixed object.

Other activities included 14 traffic accidents and six reports of shoplifting at facilities on post. There were seven cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, eleven cases of larceny of private property and three cases of larceny of government property.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Jane M. Winand
Legal Assistance Division

Q: I got a great brochure in the mail. A large retail store chain is offering a legal services plan for a low monthly fee. Although I'm in the Army and know that there are lawyers at the Staff Judge Advocate's Office, wouldn't it be a good idea to sign up for this plan? The lawyers who provide the services under the plan are licensed in my state. Wouldn't they be better able to help me than the JAG lawyers? Enclosed is the brochure.

A: As with any offer to provide services, it is important to look closely at the specific provisions and the services that will be provided.

For a few dollars a month, the brochure states that the participants in the plan will be provided with very limited legal assistance such as the drafting of simple wills, the review of documents like contracts and leases and the writing of letters.

The number of letters that will be written each year is limited to two or three in some states. There may be an additional charge for each letter. The plan does not pay for an attorney to go with you into court. Such additional services are only available if you pay more money.

Under this plan, services such as in-court representation or the writing of letters, may be less available than those services provided free on a daily basis at the Fort Benning Legal Assistance Division.

There is also the possibility that legal services under the plan may not be conveniently available to you should you be reassigned to another location. Unless you have money to burn, there is no reason to pay for legal services you can get free as a soldier or family member.

Currently, the Fort Benning Legal Assistance Division has seven attorneys, four of whom are licensed to practice in the state of Georgia. The division's Georgia attorneys have a combined total of more than 40 years of experience and provide in-court representation in certain cases.

The division's attorneys are also uniquely qualified to handle military administrative matters with which civilian attorneys have little or no experience.

The Legal Assistance Division attorneys give advice, make telephone calls, draft documents, and prepare correspondence as necessary for problems involving divorce, legal separation, adoptions, custody, support, paternity, contracts, credit problems, automobile and residential leases, taxation, accidents, insurance, wills, powers of attorney and problems unique to the military such as reports of survey and line of duty investigations.

To make an appointment to speak with a Legal Assistance attorney, call 545-3281 or 545-3282.

Female wins Army drill sergeant of the year

TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — A military police sergeant became the first woman to win the active drill sergeant of the year title while the Army Reserve honor went to a noncommissioned officer who briefly lived and studied in China.

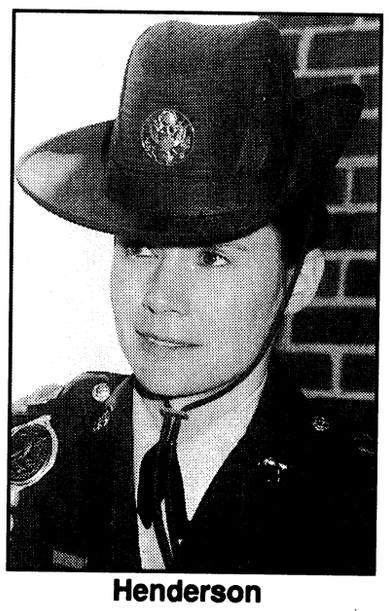
Staff Sgt. Jill J. Henderson, a basic combat training drill sergeant at Fort McClellan, Ala., and Sgt. 1st Class Dennis E. Law, 318th Infantry Regiment, 80th Division (Training) at Fort Story, Va., won out over 27 other competitors to be named 1993 Drill Sergeants of the Year.

There were 16 active drill sergeants and 13 from Army Reserve units.

Sgts. 1st Class Dean E. Clinker, Fort Knox, Ky., and Joseph M. Wichert, 76th Division (Training), Hartford, Conn., were the active and Army Reserve runners-up, respectively.

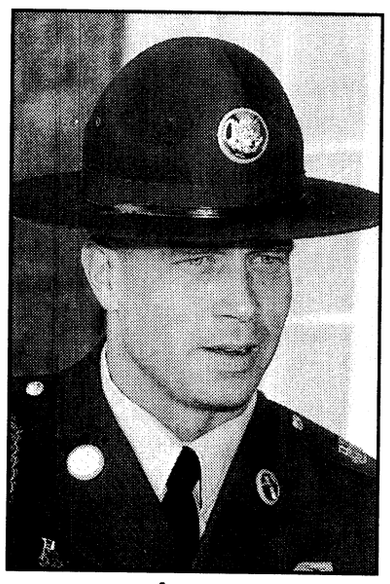
Although she had been reminded several times she was the first woman to be the Army's drill sergeant of the year, Henderson did not seem to think it was at all unusual.

"I come from a farm and gender really didn't matter when you had to chase the cows out of the cornfield," she said.



She also grew up competing against three brothers in their sports, developing "the spirit to keep going until I could not go anymore."

Henderson became a military police specialist when she joined the Army National Guard in 1986. After completing basic training, her "long term" goal was to become a drill sergeant. She credits her own drill sergeant for instilling that desire in her.



In 1988 Henderson entered active duty after earning an associate's degree in psychology. She re-enlisted to go to Drill Sergeants School at Fort McClellan. Two years ago she began training basic trainees for Company C, 787th Military Police Battalion.

A graduate of the Master Fitness School, she has set up her unit's physical training program. She has also been a member of Fort McClellan's Army 10-miler running team the past two years.

When it comes to her job, Henderson said, "There is no compromising the training standards. The Army is the most technically and tactically proficient ground force because of the high standards stressed in training.

Henderson

Law

"I think it's most important when you're a drill sergeant or any type of leader that you never forget how you were and how you felt when you were in (the trainees') shoes," she said.

When Henderson's tour "on the trail" ends after three years, she will return to MP duties. She feels that her experience as a drill sergeant will benefit her.

Her primary career goal is to become the MP regimental command sergeant major. It is a realistic goal. Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr., commander of Training and Doctrine Command, told the drill sergeants at the award ceremonies that three previous drill sergeants of the year are currently command sergeants major.

Law enlisted in the Army in 1983 and served for three years with the 82nd Airborne Division, Fort Bragg, N.C. He left active duty to complete his college education, and joined the Army Reserve in his hometown of Norfolk. The unit was a drill sergeant organization.

"It was a great opportunity for NCO progression, so I took it," he said.

"Being a drill sergeant puts you in a position where you're constantly preparing yourself, constantly readying yourself. It's not so much self-sacrifice, it's a quality core part of the Army and being a drill sergeant is an honor," Law said.

He also began studying at Old Dominion University, and in five years he earned a bachelor's degree and a master's degree in international studies. He graduated cum laude from undergraduate school and finished first in his master's class.

"That was a direct reflection upon my drill sergeant training," he said.

While preparing for his master's thesis on Third World economics, Law studied in China in an area just north of Vietnam where there were no Americans.

"My Chinese wasn't fluent in day-to-day living, discussing politics, but it was correct. It was a great country," he said.

Military duty with his reserve unit brought him back from China. The unit was activated to help with mobilization for Operation Desert Shield. For three months at Fort Eustis, Va., he helped train Individual Ready Reservists for duty in Southwest Asia.

While he says his greatest challenge in the Army was completing Ranger School, he also said the competition against other drill sergeants at Fort Monroe was tough.

"I didn't stand head and shoulders above anybody. All the drill sergeants here were the best. They were extremely knowledgeable, they were in shape, they were squared away and they knew the material. (Now) I want to be able to represent them," Law said.

Besides competing against each other in a physical fitness test, the drill sergeant competitors also faced two boards made up of sergeants major. In front of one board they had to present a lesson they give to their trainees. However, they didn't know which lesson to teach until they appeared before the board.

"Competition was real tough," Henderson said.

WORLD WAR II

50 years ago this week ...

The Nazis moved to crush Jewish resistance in the Warsaw ghetto

• In Poland, the SS, an elite force of German soldiers, began all-out operations against the Jewish resistance movement in the Warsaw ghetto. Despite the destruction of virtually every building in the city, the defiant Jews continued their fight in the face of the usual methodical Nazi rage. The SS policy of shooting most of its captives on the spot reflected the brutal Nazi philosophies which resulted in the murders of more than 300,000 people from the Warsaw ghetto in the last six months alone.

• In North Africa, Allied forces attacked Axis defenses in the hills around Bizerta and Tunis in Tunisia. Britain's V Corps attacked "Longstop" and "Peter's Corner" as its IX Corps advanced on German-held positions between Goubellat and Bou Arada. U.S. Gen. Omar Bradley's II Corps simultaneously assaulted "The Mousetrap Valley" on its way to Mateur.

• Also in North Africa, German efforts to provide aerial resupply for its forces in Tunisia again failed miserably, this time at the cost of 30 transport planes.

• In the Pacific, Adm. Mineichi Koga began his tenure as Japan's commander-in-chief of the Combined Fleet, succeeding Admiral Isoroku Yamamoto whose plane was shot down by American fighter pilots.

• On New Guinea, Australian troops advanced, occupying positions around Mubo without significant opposition.

• Fort Benning welcomed President Franklin D. Roosevelt who traveled from his retreat in Warm Springs, Ga., to conduct an unexpected, informal inspection of the post.

• Fort Benning officials also received Maj. Gen. Salvador Sanchez, chief of the Presidential General Staff of Mexico, who toured the post's facilities and observed its daily activities.

Battle sync

New technology to clear battlefield haze

TRADOC News Service

FORT KNOX, Ky. — In the smoke and noise of the battlefield, confusion can occur quickly.

Where is the enemy? Where is your fire support? Where are your allies, your fellow soldiers?

An advanced warfighting demonstration of battlefield synchronization at Fort Knox's Saint Vith Range demonstrated what technology will be able to do in the future to clear some of the battlefield haze.

Using computer-enhanced communications skills during a practice session, the synchronization showed the potential for modern combined arms fighting.

In a welcoming speech during a practice run, Maj. Gen. Paul E. Funk, the Fort Knox commander, talked to spectators about the purpose of the demonstration. Its purpose, he said, is to show how the M-1A2 tank's intervehicular information system exchange messages in a tactical setting.

The system is a monitoring and communication system in an M-1A2 tank.
