Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for soldiers to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere. While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies established to provide assistance, the line offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders.

The Bayonet is now featuring some of the calls that may benefit other members of the Fort Benning community.

☎ Call: When my wife went through housing to hire a contract cleaning team, she was not told that when we went to clear housing we would be charged three days basic allowance for quarters.

I don't care about myself because I'm leaving, but I am concerned about the soldiers who will leave after me.

Someone needs to look into this matter.

Family Housing Division response:

In accordance with Army Regulation 210-50, termination of housing assignment will be effective on the service member's departure from the command or on the date specified in the government-approved cleaning contract, whichever is sooner.

Department of the Army regulation requires the service member to forfeit his or her basic BAQ if hiring a cleaning team; however, BAQ is restored upon departure.

☎ Call: I received a government payroll check from finance outprocessing.

The only place on post I could find to cash it was First Union, and the bank charged me $2 to cash it.

I believe this is unfair to soldiers.

Directorate of Resource Management response:

Army Regulation 210-135 allows banking institutions to establish service charges or fees that do not exceed those normally charged by banking institutions for the same service.

A review of the Columbus area shows that off-post financial institutions charge a fee of $2 per $100 to cash government checks for those wothout accounts.

The reason banking institutions charge nonaccount holders to cash checks is to recapture a portion of the cost of maintaining funds and facilities, thereby lowering the charges to their account holders.

The fee for cashing a government check on Fort Benning is lower than those charged in the surrounding area. This is because of the banking agreement negotiated by the installation commander.

We at DRM strive to provide the most service for the least cost for all soldiers using Fort Benning banking facilities.

☎ Call: I am upset about the limitation put on service members being able to only take three classes per year plus an additional limitation of only one class per quarter.

I am a drill sergeant and am not able to go year round; I would take three classes in one quarter if I had that option.

Army Continuing Education System response:

Because of budget cuts, the tuition assistance policy was changed to ensure availability of funds for the entire fiscal year.

If additional tuition assistance funds are received, restrictions will be lifted. A similar policy has been instituted at most other TRADOC installations as a result of budgetary restraints.

Where is evidence to support opinions?

I read with great interest the "At Issue" section of The Bayonet concerning the pros and cons of the availability of pornographic material in the Post Exchange facilities.

Some of the things used for "logical" arguments amazed me. Caejar Cox stated, "If it sells, there's obviously a market." Just because there is a market for something makes it OK? If that is so, why aren't child pornography magazines and "snuff" movies made legal? Obviously there is a market for it (please note that I am not advocating the legalization of either one of these).

Cox says, "Close your eyes if you don't want to see these magazines." Isn't that infringing upon my rights? The magazine rack is designed for every age group; it contains comics, word puzzles, muscle magazines and so on. Pornography is meant for the adult audience (18 and older), so it has no place on the public magazine rack.

I find it extremely offensive that you have sought to discredit parental concern as an obvious attention tactic. There are parents who do not want pornographic material so readily available to their children . Since no one can control every aspect of their children's lives, why can't these magazines be placed under the cashier stand?

Cox said, a "girlie" magazine will not stop a "crazed lunatic" from attacking your daughter. If anything, it may influence his actions. With or without pornography, your wife, daughter, sister and so forth, are still readily available.

What does John Bobbitt, Miss January, and "finding a real live women" have to do with each other? Isn't it healthier to communicate with a real person instead of the fantasy world that these magazines conjure up? Or are you implying that a rapist somehow would prefer a magazine over the power he feels whenever he is able to humiliate and dominate a woman? Which do you honestly believe would be the biggest "turn-on" for him?

Clyde Snively's arguments were interesting. He equated "efforts to save the wood rats from extinction ... eradicating rats in Miami ... and prohibiting girlie magazines in the Sand Hill barracks" as being somehow related — unless he means that the soldiers are rats and that we are eradicating the rats by not allowing them access to pornographic material in their barracks.

Where does Karen Morarie get the notion that people who shop at the Class VI stores will be less offended if the magazines are sold there? Is she saying that a person who drinks is somehow less moral than someone who doesn't?

My question for these individuals is, "Where is the evidence to support your positions?" One fallacy after the other has been used to sway the readers, but the factual data needed to make an informed judgment is missing. I would suggest that in the future, your opinions be omitted from the issues unless you have the evidence to support them.

Friends of Scouting campaign under way

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

The Fort Benning District of the Boy Scouts of America conducted an orientation meeting Feb. 17 for representatives from units and organizations who will participate in this year's Friends of Scouting Campaign.

Scouting officials met with volunteers from more than 20 units to brief them on their role as "team leaders" during the six-week effort.

The Friends of Scouting Campaign raises money for the local Chattahoochee Council BSA by soliciting pledges from local businesses and individuals.

The military representatives "help with manpower needs to solicit donations from more than 200 prospects," said Dean Sims, District Scout Executive.

The fund-raising goal for this year is $11,000. The 1993 campaign raised more than $10,000. Approximately 32 percent of the operating budget for the local scouting council is raised through Friends of Scouting.

Brig. Gen Jack P. Nix Jr., Fort Benning deputy commanding general, addressed the group at the meeting and spoke about the importance of the cause. "I can personally testify to the goodness of this program," he said of the Scouts. "This (fund-raising) is for a worthwhile cause." Nix also serves as district chairman for the Chattahoochee Council of Scouting.

Money raised through the Friends of Scouting is used for things like organizing new units, servicing existing units and maintaining camps.

The Fort Benning district serves more than 2,000 boys through 28 Cub Scout packs and 27 Boy Scout troops. Approximately 70 percent of the boys who participate in their programs are family members of Department of Defense individuals.

Many of the Scouting activities also directly benefit Fort Benning. The annual Scouting for Food drive benefits the Army Community Service Food Locker. Before Thanksgiving last year, the Scouts collected more than 9,000 food items for distribution to military families.

The Friends of Scouting fund-raising effort officially kicked off Tuesday morning. In addition to corporate sponsors, the Scouts also accept donations from individuals. Anyone interested in contributing to the local Boy Scouts of America, can contact Chaplain (Col.) Roy G. Plummer, chairman for this year's campaign, at 545-2288.

First-termers may get housing help

By Steve Banen
American Forces Information Service

A recent Department of Defense study recommends each service review policies to provide first-term families better chances for on-post housing.

The DoD study on family status and initial term of service also recommends a rate protection program on housing allowances. This program would prevent allowance loss during a service member's assignment in a high-rent area.

We can't tell the services how to run their housing programs, said Army Col. Carl F. Witschonke, deputy director for compensation in DoD's military manpower and personnel policy office. "But we are recommending they look into possibilities of getting first-termers either on post or closer to post so families can take better advantage of facilities on post — facilities these young families need in adjusting to military life."

One solution is moving first-termers into government quarters previously assigned to higher-ranking members. "Many posts still have quarters assigned by pay grade," said Witschonke, referring to stairwell and duplex apartments on bases worldwide. "If there's a building reserved for mid-grade NCOs, junior enlisted families could move in as NCOs leave. Newly arriving NCOs could be moved to higher-grade quarters."

Currently, service housing policies assign career service members a higher priority for government quarters over first-termers. Members receive these quarters "rent-free" with most utilities provided, but must forfeit basic allowance for quarters and variable housing allowance.

Often, junior enlisted couples wait two to three years before getting government housing consideration. Nearly 75 percent of first-term couples live off-post, officials said.

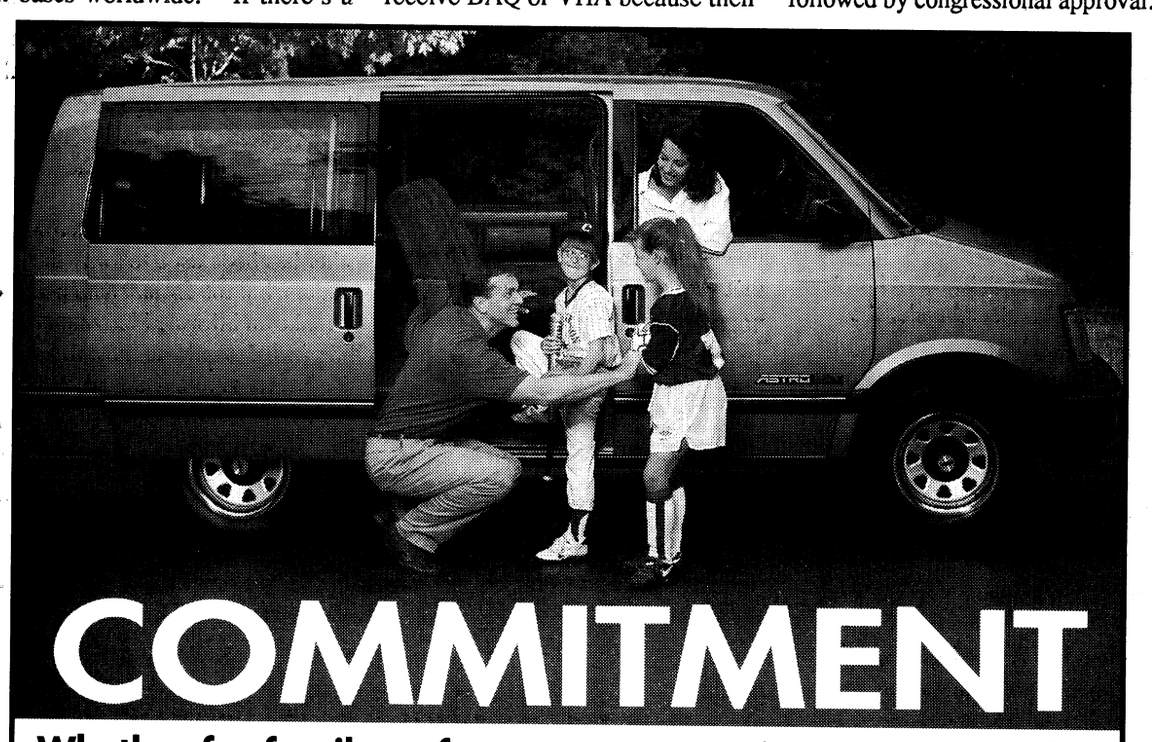
Witschonke said career service members are more likely to obtain and be able to afford quality housing off-base, since they are generally paid more. "We're not trying to displace senior people from government quarters, but we are trying to provide better access for juniors," he said.

Some of these ideas are already in use. In Grafenwoehr, Germany, some senior NCO and company-grade officer families reside in off post government-leased housing areas. These residents do not receive BAQ or VHA because their quarters are government-leased.

Witschonke said the housing rate protection is not new. Other studies recommended similar programs, to stabilize allowances for the duration of an assignment.

Currently, all authorized service members residing off-post receive BAQ. The VHA payments supplement BAQ for members living in high-cost areas.

However, service members living in cheaper areas of the country can lose allowances, despite no drop in actual housing costs. This forces many first-term families to dig into their own pockets to meet the rent.



The rate protection will prevent housing allowance cuts for service members already living in high-rent areas.

Also recommended is a stateside cost-of-living allowance for service members in high-cost areas. This allowance, similar to payments made in overseas communities, would supplement BAQ and VHA in making the high-cost area more affordable, especially for first-termers.

Witschonke, who chaired the study's compensation panel, added all recommendations must go through the services for review, followed by congressional approval.

AER can help

By Alfonso Dean
Army Community Service

It seems that today the only thing higher about "higher" education is the cost of obtaining it.

Many parents all across the country may be wondering about how they will finance their children's educations.

Military parents probably share this concern, but children of military parents have an edge on receiving financial assistance for college.

That edge is Army Emergency Relief.

AER provides scholarships to eligible children of retired, active duty or deceased soldiers. The children must be younger than 22 years of age and unmarried.

Scholarships are awarded based on financial need, academic achievement and individual accomplishment.

Students can receive up to $1,500 in aid, and the money can be used toward all education expenses including tuition, living expenses, transportation and books.

Scholarship applications are available for the upcoming school year.

Completed applications must be mailed to AER headquarters and postmarked no later than Tuesday.

For more information on college assistance through AER, visit Building 2643, in Soldiers' Plaza or call 545-7517 or 545-2536.

The AER's office hours are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

SOA sponsors reception for Hosts of Latin Americans

Devon Kerbow
School of the Americas

Guest instructors and the students of the Command and General Staff Course at the School of the Americas joined their Hosts of Latin Americans sponsors at a reception Feb. 11 in the Supper Club at the Fort Benning Officers' Club.

For some students and instructors, it was the first time meeting their American sponsor. Others had already met their sponsors and greeted the new friends who would help familiarize them with life in the United States.

Although the advice is important, the most significant function of the HOLA sponsors is to supplement SOA's teaching of U.S. doctrine, said Cecilia Alexander, SOA's international military student officer.

"It takes up where the classroom lets off," she said. "The best way to instruct someone about life in the United States is to show them."

Alexander said when she was a sponsor she showed a student's wife how to use a coupon when shopping.

They don't do that in Latin America, she said, illustrating one of the many differences of living in the United States and how necessary the sponsors are.

Almost anyone can be a sponsor and shouldn't be put off by not being able to speak Spanish, she said. Many of the students know at least a small amount of English. Those who don't speak English soon pick it up from their sponsors.

Those wanting the opportunity to exchange cultures and make a difference in someone's life can contact Alexander at 545-1285.

"You get out of it what you put into it," Alexander said.

Perry sworn in as Defense secretary

By Jim Garamone
American Forces Information Service

William J. Perry, formerly deputy secretary of Defense, was sworn in to replace Les Aspin as secretary of Defense Feb. 3 following a unanimous Senate confirmation vote.

In nominating him, President Bill Clinton praised Perry's skills, management experience and vision, and said he brings a broad and valuable background to the job.

During his confirmation hearing before the Senate Armed Services Committee, Perry said he plans to follow the course set under Aspin, but they do differ. "It's fair to say our management styles are different because our personalities are different," he said. "But our philosophy and objectives are very similar."

The senators questioned Perry on the threat of North Korean nuclear proliferation. He said he was disturbed by the thought North Korea has even one nuclear weapon and he favors deployment of Patriot missiles to South Korea.

Senators also questioned Perry on a $20 billion shortfall in the DoD budget from 1996 to 2000. He attributed the difference to inflation estimates and said Pentagon planners will examine the shortfall later this year. He said there is no problem with the fiscal 1995 DoD budget.

Perry will reorganize the policy section of the Office of the Secretary of Defense.

Clinton said Perry played a large part in the Bottom-up Review of the military and in the treaty with Ukraine that will eliminate that country's nuclear weapons. Perry was also instrumental in developing the fiscal 1995 defense budget, the president said.

"Bill Perry has earned high respect from members of both parties in the Congress and the military, among those who study military strategy and in the business community," Clinton said. "He's demonstrated leadership, integrity and a mastery of his field. Time and again we hear about him what I have come to know personally: Bill Perry is a real pro. You can depend on him."

Perry said he looks forward to working with the president on the challenge of reshaping the military for a new era. "I also look forward to serving because this is the time of great change, great challenge and great opportunity," Perry said. "The national security problems facing the United States today are complex and difficult. We are making a transition from the security posture evolved to deal with the Cold War to a very different security posture. I look forward to carrying out your commitment to make those changes in a way that addresses the need of our military and civilian personnel, our defense facilities and the communities that depend on them."

Perry praised Clinton's national security leadership, citing the Partnership for Peace program for nations of Europe and his commitment to military readiness. Perry said the United States has a "window of opportunity to make a major reform to the defense acquisition system so that we can buy modern equipment for our military forces at affordable prices."

Perry, 66, assumed his duties as deputy secretary March 11. He was a professor in the School of Engineering at Stanford University and co-director of Stanford's Center for International Security and Arms Control.

In 1964, he helped found ESL, Inc., a defense electronics and special-purpose computer systems company.

Perry served as undersecretary of defense for acquisition in the Carter administration and is called the "Father of Stealth Technology." He was born in Pennsylvania and graduated from Stanford University with bachelor's and master's degrees in mathematics. He earned a doctorate in mathematics from Penn State. He and his wife, Lee, have five children.

Report emphasizes TQM in performance review

By Jim Garamone
American Forces Information Service

For the Defense Performance Review recommendations to be effective, the Department of Defense must embrace total quality management principles.

The report, part of Vice President Albert Gore's National Performance Review, said Department of Defense has had notable successes in total quality management and must build on them.

The business-as-usual approach to the work of DoD must stop, officials said. The old ways of doing things in DoD are affected by the Defense drawdown and changes within the department.

The report said the most important missions for Defense leaders is to create an environment in which all workers can contribute. "A shared vision based on core principles must be employed (by Defense leaders) so that all members will have a compass for their direction," the report states.

Ultimately, DoD must employ the principles of total quality management to such an extent they cease to be separate and simply become part of the way the department accomplishes its missions.

The Defense Performance Review recommends a top leadership and management structure furthering total quality management principles. It calls on the secretary of defense to establish an executive steering board to guide TQM implementation. Further, the report recommends establishing the position of quality adviser to the secretary and the board.

A second recommendation is for DoD to employ TQM principles in strategic planning. Officials said this would provide a vehicle for alignment and integration of actions, programs and process improvement endeavors across DoD.

A third recommendation emphasizes the importance of TQM training and education. It calls for establishing a TQM education plan for DoD leadership. In addition, it urges incorporation of TQM principles in all DoD professional and service schools.

A fourth recommendation calls for DoD to establish an environment where TQM principles can thrive. This recommendation includes:

- Reinventing the DoD Office of Inspector General. Specifically, officials want to lessen the inspector general's statutory role;
- Redesigning DoD's reward and recognition program and performance appraisal system to be in line with TQM principles;
- Designing a more responsive employee suggestion program;
- Creating career-enhancing incentives for DoD managers and executives to employ TQM principles; and
- Enacting policies to include union representatives as active participants in the TQM process.

A fifth recommendation calls for the department to rewrite directives, instructions and policies to support TQM.

A sixth recommendation is for DoD to develop a method of measuring the effectiveness of TQM principles.

Officials said incorporating TQM into every process in DoD will require a change in the mindset and culture of the organization. However, if past successes are any measure, the effort will be worth it, they said.

Army's 1995 budget stresses readiness

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — "Smaller is not better. Better is better."

With that, Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan, Army chief of staff, caught the essence of the Army's 1995 budget proposal.

"Today, America's Army presents a budget that keeps us trained and ready, moving toward tomorrow, and looking ahead," he said.

"We have consciously emphasized readiness accounts to provide the best possible balance" in achieving a force that's the world's best.

Force readiness is the priority of the 1995 budget, as proposed by the Defense Department and the Army. Of the Army's requested $61.1 billion total obligation authority, nearly a third — $21.5 billion — is earmarked for the Operation and Maintenance Fund, which drives near-term readiness.

Though not the largest Army appropriation, operation and maintenance is the only one that gets a raise next year.

Officials said they intentionally took funds from other 1995 accounts to cover readiness. One reason is that prior years' funding problems have eaten into Operation Tempo.

For example, $447 million was shifted from the 1994 OPTEMPO for contingencies like Somalia. DoD is awaiting Senate approval of a supplemental fund to make up that difference.

In 1995, this is "corrected by increased funding," said an Army spokesman. "The fiscal 1995 budget supports readiness objectives by fully funding OPTEMPO and the Flying Hour Program.

These programs fund tough realistic training at home stations, at the Combat Training Centers and in joint and combined exercises."

The budget provides for 33 battalion rotations through the National Training Center at Fort Irwin, Calif.; 29 rotations through the Joint Readiness Training Center, Fort Polk, La.; and 15 rotations through the Combined Maneuver Training Center in Hohenfels, Germany.

"In addition, eight divisions and three corps will rotate through the Battle Command Training Program, a computer-driven exercise for division and corps staffs," the spokesman said.

"The decision to maintain OPTEMPO preserves the vital training foundation upon which Army readiness is built," he said. "In FY 95, the budget supports ground OPTEMPO of 800 miles per year and 14.5 flying hours per helicopter crew per month for the active force.

"OPTEMPO for Army Reserve and Army National Guard units, given their structure and organization, is funded proportionally to active component units' pace of operations."

The larger operations and maintenance budget also increases funds to depot maintenance, "for equipment to be transferred to the reserve components," the spokesman said. Ammunition management, equipment propositioning, facility maintenance and family programs are also supported in the name of readiness.

"The FY '95 budget supports infrastructure requirements of a CONUS (continental United States)-based, force-projection Army by funding all high-priority requirements for the Army Strategic Mobility Program, which increases the Army's rapid power projection capability," the spokesman said.

"In addition, our installations — key platforms that provide rapid deployment capabilities — are funded for essential base support functions such as information management, communications, engineering and public works, and minor repairs," he said.

"This budget is another milestone on our journey," Sullivan said. "Our vision, what we are trying to be, remains clear: America's Army, trained and ready to fight, serving the nation at home and abroad, a strategic force, capable of decisive victory, now and into the 21st century.

"With this budget, we can stay ready to do what America expects from us now and in the future."

German blood scare over

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

Military members and their families can breathe a sigh a relief. German health officials have completed an investigation of a second German plasma company implicated in a tainted-blood scandal and found its products safe.

Army Maj. Don Fipps, U.S. European Command's blood program director, said, "We're pretty confident no U.S. people are involved."

More than 500 people who donated blood to Haemoplas tested negative for HIV, the virus that causes AIDS, German health officials announced recently.

Officials also tested more than 90 percent of the company's blood products and found them clean. The tests stemmed from concerns Haemoplas was negligent in screening blood products for HIV and other infectious diseases.

Barbara Slifer, Army 7th Medical Command spokeswoman, said there is probably no need for concern among military medical beneficiaries since the investigation turned up no HIV-positive donors.

In early December, several German nationals who had received blood from another German company, UB Plasma, tested positive for HIV.

U.S. military officials determined that no Americans received blood products from UB Plasma but offered HIV screening and counseling to any concerned military medical beneficiaries. U.S. officials said no military hospitals used UB Plasma, but released a list of German hospitals that did.

Gateway To Care

Program surveys beneficiaries

By John S. Wynn
Martin Army Community Hospital

During the past two weeks, approximately 5,000 surveys were mailed to those military beneficiaries who are in the hospital's Gateway To Care program and receive their care from the Primary Care for Uniformed Services Family Practice Clinic.

The survey has a dual mission of checking the record system of those enrolled at the clinic and to ask beneficiaries what they think of the service.

With this sample, the accuracy of the information maintained at the hospital can be confirmed, said Mark Holloway, chief of the hospital's Coordinated Care Division.

The survey will also provide the hospital with a better understanding of what the beneficiaries like or do not like about the clinic and determine how many, if any, are receiving civilian care for those medical conditions that can be treated at the clinic.

Holloway said beneficiaries should not be alarmed by the letter and for those who do not respond to the survey, no action will be taken to remove them from the clinic's eligible roll.

However, by knowing how many beneficiaries are willing to respond to such a request, the hospital can judge what response rate it could expect if such a verification process would be required in the future.

Since February of 1993, when the PRIMUS Clinic became a family practice clinic, the volume of beneficiaries assigned to the clinic has continued to rise — from 16,000 patients, the number of patients initially assigned, to a total number now in excess of 21,000 beneficiaries.

Hospital officials said they believe that by sending out 5,000 letters, they should be able to obtain a fairly accurate sample.

"By listening to what our beneficiaries think of the clinic, we have a better handle on how to best conduct a 100 percent records verification audit if one is required," Holloway said.

Beneficiaries who did not receive a survey that would like to check their registration can call the Coordinated Care Division at 544-1428.

Anyone wanting to express comments or suggestions can call 544-1447 or 544-1591 or visit with a health-care finder located near the hospital in Building 9204, Room 107.

Officials at the hospital said they hope the survey will provide them with an idea how many beneficiaries may have departed the area or who no longer use the clinic but have not been removed from the assigned roll.

Additionally, the questionnaire will help the hospital better understand why some patients see civilian doctors, even though they are assigned to the clinic.

When patients do this, they end up spending more of their own money for health care as well as the government's, Holloway said.

When a beneficiary agrees to use the PRIMUS Family Practice Clinic, the government pays the contractor who runs the clinic, PHP Corporation, to provide the beneficiary with family practice level care.

This includes doing many of the laboratory tests, X-rays and physical exams in the clinic, as well as providing any medications written by the PRIMUS physicians.

When beneficiaries go elsewhere for their care, which has already been paid for, we lose valuable resources that could be used for other services, Holloway said.

Justice asks Supreme Court to rule on ban

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

The Department of Justice has filed a petition asking the Supreme Court to reinstate the ban on federal employees accepting pay for speaking or writing.

However, Justice will not punish employees accepting money for articles and speeches on subjects unrelated to their official duties until the court rules.

The so-called honoraria ban, part of the Ethics in Government Act of 1989, was originally intended to prevent members of Congress, their staffs and political appointees from receiving money for speeches or newspaper articles. However, in the last stages of debate, Congress extended the law to most federal civilian employees, no matter what their grade.

A spokesman for the Office of Government Ethics said Justice is appealing the case again because it has an obligation to uphold any law Congress passes. He said if the Supreme Court refuses to hear the case, the U.S. District Court will issue a mandate overturning the ban. If the Supreme Court hears the case, it probably won't do so until this fall. Thus, it could be another year before the court reaches a decision.

After Justice filed its petition to reinstate the ban in January, it and the Office of Government Ethics fielded calls concerning whether employees will be punished if the court reinstates the ban. Assistant Attorney General Frank W. Hunger said Justice won't punish workers who accepted honoraria after Sept. 28. That was the date the U.S. Court of Appeals issued an order barring enforcement.

Ethics office Director Stephen D. Potts wrote to agency ethics advisers Feb. 2 to inform them of the Justice decision. Potts said employees who have been keeping honorarium payments in scrow can take their money out. However, he asked ethics advisers to remind employees they are still subject to other restrictions on payments in place prior to the honorarium ban. These include accepting money for services related to the employee's government job.

The honorarium ban, effective Jan. 1, 1991, also applies to commissioned and warrant officers. Enlisted service members are exempt. The law applies only to speaking and nonfiction writing for newspapers and magazines. It applies even if an employee writes or speaks on a subject totally unrelated to his or her official duties. It does not apply to books, photography, artwork or other means of expression.

MACH is committed to quality

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

"When the Army Communities of Excellence evaluators walk through our doors, we want them to know they are walking into the finest medical facility in the Department of Defense," said John S. Wynn, Martin Army Community Hospital marketing director.

Wynn said MACH personnel want the team to know that Fort Benning's medical facilities are much more than just a hospital and its clinics; they form a comprehensive network of total health care where efficient service is provided at the best value.

"We are number one in quality," Wynn said. "MACH was recognized for achieving the highest rating by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations for all medical facilities in the Army."

At the heart of MACH's success is the philosophy of "managed care," a system of delivering the highest quality health care to as many eligible beneficiaries as possible.

"We are a resource driven organization, meaning we have a finite number of dollars to operate our facilities," Wynn said. "The trick is maintaining the highest quality of care even with limited resources. We have been extraordinarily successful."

As proof, Wynn said the hospital's budget was smaller last year than the previous year, yet care was provided to even more patients than in the previous year.

"In fact, we performed so efficiently that we were provided additional funding at the end of the year, which we used to enhance the physical appearance of the hospital.

Among the ongoing improvements to MACH are the enhancement of the exterior landscape, the placing of curtains in patient rooms, the improvement of the interior hallways to produce a more pleasant atmosphere and the addition of new directional signs.

"We not only want to provide quality care, we want to provide a quality atmosphere. The perception our customers have is very important."

At 35 years old, MACH is one of the oldest hospitals in the Army, Wynn said. "Yet we are constantly told by visiting dignitaries that we have of of the finest hospitals in the Army."

He said the hospital wants its customers to know that it provides the best value in town.

"We provide the highest quality care at the lowest possible cost to the beneficiary," he said. "We see more than 1,500 patients daily, and our goal is that each and every one of them leaves believing that he or she got the best care possible."

MACH's services and accomplishments include:

• A Medical Maintenance Department named best in Health Services Command.

• The creation of innovative programs such as Gateway To Care, which offers family practice medicine, preventive care and coordinated civilian care and has significantly reduced waiting times and paperwork and resulted in a local savings of more than $3 million. With the opening of the Primary Care for Uniformed Services Clinic, more than 24,000 local beneficiaries have access to primary care services.

• An alcohol and drug counseling service that serves as the model for all DoD facilities.

• The opening of a Sports Medicine Family Practice Clinic, the first of its kind in DoD.

• The institution of comprehensive measures to monitor customer satisfaction and ensure that customers needs were being met. One result was the initiation of a phone-in refill service and upgraded computer equipment at the pharmacy that have resulted in reduced waiting times and improved patient convenience.

Wynn said that MACH's greatest hallmark is the genuine concern that is shown to every patient.

"For example, we have health-care finders who help our patients obtain care that cannot ordinarily be obtained through our facilities by directing them to other military or civilian facilities," Wynn said. "This is an example of how MACH is 100 percent customer focused, and it's this kind of attention and commitment to quality care that will keep MACH on target in providing the best health care to soldiers and their families."

Army Career and Alumni Program

Here are some of the most frequently asked questions about the Army Career and Alumni Program. The answers to these questions reflect the most current policies and positions.

For information or clarification about ACAP — call 545-4892, 545-4902 or stop by Building 2617.

What is ACAP?

The Army Career and Alumni Program is designed to provide services and counseling to assure soldiers, Department of Army civilians and family members quality transition from military life to civilian life.

What benefits do members of the Army family, employers, and/or the nation at large derive from ACAP?

The Army family leaves better prepared to make the transition into the civilian sector; employers receive a better trained and motivated employee with skills and abilities not generally available in the civilian sector; the nation receives individuals who will serve as role models and who are willing and able to contribute to the community at large.

What services are provided?

Every individual who visits ACAP first receives a needs assessment and an individual transition plan. Based on this appraisal, clients are then sent to the appropriate service providers who will assist them in their transition.

If they need job assistance, they will be sent to the Job Assistance Center where they will receive job search workshops and seminars, individual assistance and counseling, assistance with writing resumes and cover letters, and access to various job data base — including the Army Employer and Alumni Network.

How is it different from the Defense Outplacement Referral System and the Transition Bulletin Board?

The Army Employer and Alumni Network lists employers that have expressed an interest in hiring Army alumni (listed by job type and location); the Defense Outplacement Referral System allows individuals to place a mini-resume on an employer-accessible network; and the Transition Bulletin Board provides actual job announcements and employment information from numerous government agencies and private sector employers.

Both DORS and TBB are Department of Defense automated referral programs and are available at all ACAP offices and selected ACS centers.

To whom do you provide services?

Soldiers who have had at least 180 days of continuous active service, Department of Army civilians, and family members of transitioning individuals. Individuals remain eligible for services for up to sixty days after their separation.

Students plant tree for Arbor Day

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

Acting as serious stewards of the earth, a group of youngsters discussed the importance of conservation and planted a tree at an Arbor Day celebration on the grounds of Stowers School Feb. 17.

Students in Nancy Gordy's class read original poetry and stories reflecting their feelings about Arbor Day as they gathered around the prepared planting site near a sunny hillside.

After lifting the dormant tree from a red radio flyer wagon and carefully positioning it, the children took turns with a shovel as they filled in with soil.

While gathered around the tree, which was donated by the Keep Columbus Beautify Commission, they talked of conservation, their love of the earth and the need to care for the environment.

After each child related one thought about Arbor Day, Gordy shared a personal momento: a photo of herself as a school girl on this holiday participating in a tree planting ceremony.

"These hands on opportunities make things meaningful for the children," said Gail Wilson, principal at Stowers.

By combining the environmental issues with the regular curriculum, Gordy hopes to encourage conservation and environmental sensitivity as a way of life for her students.

"My focus is the future. What we do today affects their future," she said.

"When they protect the environment, they protect their own future and their children's future," she added.

Traditionally celebrated in Georgia the third Friday in February, Arbor Day is a time to reflect on the value of America's trees, the need to plant new growth as this resource is used, and the need to protect forests.

In addition to providing beauty and shade, trees help store water in the soil, prevent soil erosion by reducing flood runoff, and provide cover and food for wildlife.

Arbor Day was first proposed in Nebraska by newspaperman J. Sterling Morton in 1872. As the saplings took root, so did the idea of a national holiday to honor trees. This holiday is now celebrated all over the United States and Canada. The exact day varies according to the proper planting times for various regions of the country.

Legal assistance closes temporarily

Only limited legal assistance will be available March 7 through March 11.

The attorneys will be on temporary duty and will not be available to give legal advice. Over-the-counter services (powers of attorney, notary public, etc.) will be available. In case of emergency, contact Legal Assistance in person or call 545-3281.

Bayonet drop box available to customers

For the convenience of Bayonet customers, anyone who needs to turn in stories, film, letters, etc., to The Bayonet may now use a new drop box located in the Information Office, Room 111, Infantry Hall, Building 4.

Material being dropped off should be placed in an envelope with a point of contact and a phone number annotated on the envelope.

Customers can still fax material to The Bayonet at 682-0095, send information through PROFS (ID is Bayonet), mail material to: The Bayonet, Infantry Hall, Room 601, send material through distribution or hand carry it to The Bayonet's office, Room 601, whichever is most convenient.

The deadline is noon Friday for the following week's issue.

OCS board June 22-24

An officer board is scheduled for June 22 to 24. The cutoff date for applications to arrive at Personnel Command is June 10.

Applications are expected to arrive at the Adjutant General's Personnel Operations Division, Building 2619, no later than April 29.

For more information, call Marie Lee at 545- 3341, 545-4341 or 545-4702 .

2nd Armored Div. Road closes for repairs

The 2nd Armored Division is closed from the Wildcat intersection road to the Red Arrow Road.

Local traffic can use 2nd Armored Division Road up to Branch Creek. For through traffic, use detour by way of Wildcat Road, Buena Vista Road and Red Arrow Road.

For more information, call Bill Bunt at 545-3725.

BOSS Council to meet

The next post Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers Council meeting will be March 10 at 12:30 p.m. at the Main NCO Club. Civilian attire is required.

Ad valorem tax change affects soldiers

Muscogee and Chattahoochee counties have changed their ad valorem tax requirements affecting soldiers.

The new requirements state that service members' ad valorem tax exemption be notarized only by the Staff Judge Advocate's Office. The SJA requires soldiers who need exemptions to present their identification cards and leave and earning statements of the past 90 days.

Soldiers' spouses must present powers of attorney and soldiers' oversees orders if applicable. Soldiers' names must appear on car titles as the owner or co-owner in order to be eligible for exemption.

For information, call the Legal Assistance Office at 545-3281.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland and range areas will take place through March 6.

If weather permits, the following compartments may be affected: A-12, B-2, C-1, E-2, G-2, G-5, H-2, I-1, I-5, J-6, K-3, K-8, K-11, K-16, K-18, K-20, L-2, L-3, M-8, O-6, O-10, O-15, P-1, Q-4, S-1, T-2, T-4, U-3, V-1, W-2, Y-1, Z-2 and CC-2.

Burning will occur in pine stands within these compartments to enhance endangered species habitat and training areas.

People using these areas for recreation must vacate before 9:30 a.m. daily.

Training units using compartments adjacent to these areas may experience drift smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while traveling in these areas because of the potential for reduced visibility.

Get tax help at PX

Free assistance with tax form preparation by members of the Legal Assistance Office will be available at the Post Exchange at the Main Mall March 5 and April 9 from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Those wishing to make use of the assistance should bring all paperwork and tax forms received.

For more information, call Jane Winand at 545-3281 or 545-3282.

Vehicle registration deadline nears

The deadline for 1994 vehicle registration in Chattahoochee County is as follows based on the owner's last name:

- Monday — E to K
- March 31 — L to R
- May 2 — S to Z.

There is a $15 penalty per vehicle for failure to register by the deadline. Payment must be made by cash or check, drawn on a local bank, which includes the soldier's work number and the company commander's name.

To avoid the ad valorem tax, Georgia nonresidents must bring to the office a complete affidavit available from the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, a leave and earnings statement, proof of insurance and the registration fee ($20 for each car or truck and $12 for each trailer).

The vehicle registration office is located at the County Courthouse in Cusseta. Office hours are 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

ACAP expands eligibility period

The Army Career and Alumni Program has expanded eligibility for transition services to include those who are otherwise eligible for the services to use them up to 90 days after separation. For more information, call ACAP Division at (703) 325-7280, DSN 221-7280.

Fort Benning's tax office ready for business

Fort Benning's Tax Office is located in Building 2624 in Soldiers' Plaza and is open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

The office has many federal and state tax forms available. Unit tax advisers have been appointed for units throughout post, and persons having tax questions should see their unit tax advisers first.

For information, call 545-4267.

CIF hours change

The Central Issue Facility issue and turn-in hours for permanent party soldiers are: issue, Mondays and Thursdays from 11:45 a.m. to 2:45 p.m.; turn-in, Wednesdays and Fridays, 11:45 a.m. to 2:45 p.m.

For information, call 545-4146.

ACAP changes policy

Army personnel are eligible to use Army Career and Alumni Program services up to 90 days after transition.

All individuals should begin ACAP services 180 days before separation. To set an appointment or if you have any questions, call the Transition Assistance Office, Building 2617, at 545-4892 or 545-4913. Preseparation counseling is required no later than 90 days prior to separation.

Automotive exams to be administered

The Automotive Service Excellence Examination will be administered May 5, 10 and 12 at Fort Benning test centers.

Eligible soldiers may take three examinations free if they are taken for college credit. There is a $15 per test fee if tests are taken for certification or recertification.

All examinees must pay a $20 registration fee. The deadline to register is March 4 at any post education center.

Education center locations are:

- Main Post Education Center, Building 2602, 545-4863.
- Kelley Hill Education Center, Building 9027, 544-3689.
- Sand Hill Education Center, Building 3245, 544-9961.
- Harmony Church Education Center, Building 4635, 544-6311.

Soldiers must make appointments for AER

The Army Emergency Relief is processing clients' requests for assistance on appointment basis. Clients are requested to schedule an appointment and have all required paperwork when reporting to AER.

If you are unable to keep your scheduled appointment, a courtesy call is required. Call 545-2536, 545-7517, 545-4357 or 545-4043.

CID offering rewards

The Criminal Investigation Division is offering a $500 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person who entered the Range Maintenance building Jan. 14 between 3:20 p.m. and 6:30 a.m. and stole a Compuadd computer, monitor, keyboard and GE handheld radio with charger.

Anyone having information concerning this incident can contact the Military Police at 545-5222 or the CID office at 545-2414. Information provided will be kept to the strictest confidence.

The Criminal Investigation Division is also offering a $500 reward for information concerning a robbery that occurred at approximately 7:50 p.m. Jan. 30 adjacent to the quarters on Arrowhead Road in the McGraw Manor Housing area.

An unidentified black male using an unidentified weapon robbed a female family member and fled the scene. A reward will be paid to anyone providing information that leads to identification of the individual(s) responsible for the crime.

All information is confidential. Contact Reginald Ray, 86th Military Police Detachment (CID) at 545-5389 or the Military Police desk sergeant at 545-5222.

Stars fall to Warriors

The Columbus Stars dropped their first game of the season to the Albany Warriors on the road with an 18-6 loss at Hugh Mill Stadium in Albany, Ga. The loss puts the Stars' record at 2-1 on the season with the Warriors leading the Northern Division at 3-0.

The Stars fell behind in the first quarter when Warrior running back Nathaniel Curry punched across the goal line from one-yard out; the conversion failed and the Stars were down 6-0.

The Stars tied the game in the second quarter on a 25-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Jeff McCurrie (12 of 27 for 121 yards four interceptions and one touchdown) to Kalvin Baker. The missed extra point sent the Stars and Warriors into the locker room at the half knotted at 6-6.

In the third quarter, Warriors punt return specialist Tyrone Watson broke loose for a 63-yard punt return for the go ahead score giving the Warriors a 12-6 advantage. The Warriors tacked on a fourth-quarter score on a one-yard run by Donald Stroud to boost the lead to 18-6.

The Stars had a chance to cut the lead late in the fourth quarter, but failed to get into the end zone from the 5-yard line with under two minutes to play. Turnovers proved to be the downfall of the Stars, giving the ball away four times while taking the ball from the Warriors six times and getting only one score out of them.

Stars linebacker Terrance Perry and cornerback Kelvin Thomas combined for 20 tackles and 13 assist. Perry also recovered two fumbles while Thomas had two interceptions.

The Stars were outgained in total yardage 327 to 176 for the first time this season. Jamon Smith led the Stars with 35 yards on eight carries with the Stars gaining a total of 57 yards on the ground.

The Stars travel to Tallahassee, Fla., Saturday for a night game with the Tallahassee Tornados before returning home to face the Vipers of Mobile, Ala., March 5, at Memorial Stadium with kickoff set for 2 p.m.

Boxers 'land jabs' at USA Championship

Headquarters, 2nd U.S. Army

FORT GILLEM, Ga. — The fledgling Fort Benning Boxing Club recently competed in the Coors-Georgia USA Championship at the newly opened Holyfield Arena in Atlanta.

"The club is a young, dedicated and determined team," said retired Sgt. 1st Class Charles E. Kirkland, Fort Benning Boxing Club coach. "Win, lose or draw, all of them are champions in my heart."

Anthony H. Allen, a family member and senior at Spencer High School in Columbus, opened the competition against Doraville Boxing Club's Dario Rios in the novice division.

Allen won the first two rounds but ran out of gas in the third round. Kirkland had the referee stop the bout to protect his tiring fighter from injury.

Next up, Alexander Wilkins, another family member, and a junior at Spencer, was beaten by Carter Morgan Boxing Club's Billy Parks when the referee stopped the fight in the first round.

In the club's next bout, Spc. Rene Gomez, 533rd Transportation Company, won a judge's decision in the 147-pound weight class over Doraville Boxing Club's Victor Luguna.

> "Fort Benning is a young team, but with command support it will grow and be a team to be reckoned with ..."
> — Retired Command Sgt. Maj. Al Robinson
> Fort Gordon Sports Center boxing coordinator

Before the 165-pound class bout, Pvt. 2 Yamar Restso, spoke of his "burning desire" to advance to the regional tournament.

Restso, of Battery B, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery, added another win to his 10-10 record in the open division.

He took control early and dominated all three rounds in his defeat of Stone Mountain Police Athletic League's Tommy Stepp.

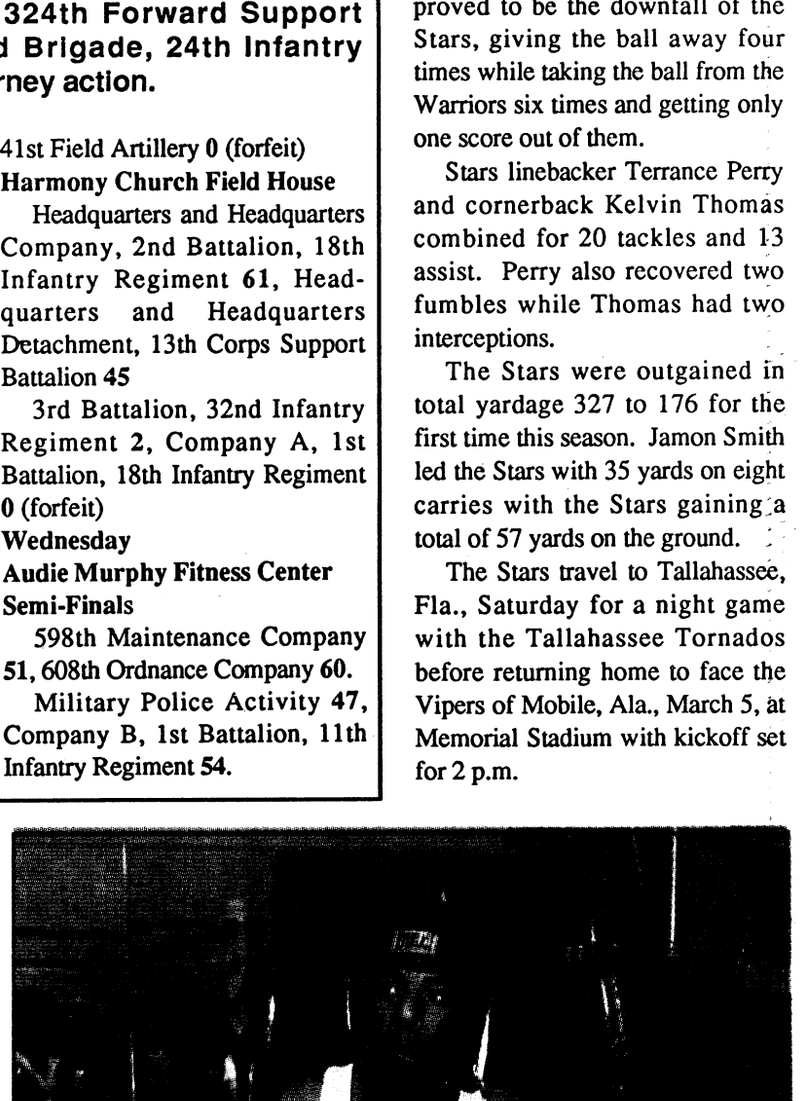
Restso's stunning first punch followed by effective combinations helped ensure his victory.

"I give 150 percent as a soldier and as a boxer," Resto said. "The extra 50 percent comes from my heart."

On the second day of competition, in the 156-pound weight class, Sgt. Faustino Hernandez, Company B, 324th Forward Support Battalion, lost a three-round decision to PAL's Calvin Shakir.

Hernandez caught his opponent early with a strong left-hand to the body, but he could not follow.

In the next bout, Restso won a three-round decision over unattached boxer Kirk Pruitt. The night of the finals, the young team paid its dues. First, Restso lost a split decision to unattached Leroy Brooks.



"Two and three minute rounds can seem like a lifetime if a boxer isn't in good physical condition," Kirkland said. "My first two fighters ran out of gas because of the lack of conditioning."

According to Kirkland, conditioning is essential and boxing takes soldiers beyond the Army Physical Fitness Test.

"Boxing gives you discipline, the feeling of being in real combat, skills, knowledge and the ability to think," he said. "Boxing is like two men in the ring playing chess. The man who listens to his coach and combines his punches is going to win the fight. You can't box if you can't think."

Being "a new team on the block," the Fort Benning Boxing Club is struggling to earn credibility.

"Fort Benning is a young team, but with command support it will grow and be a team to be reckoned with in three to five years," said retired Command Sgt. Maj. Al Robinson, Fort Gordon Sports Center boxing coordinator, referee and judge.

Euphoria bike trek — "A Strange Sense of Euphoria" will fill the air March 5 and 6 from Columbus to Pine Mountain, Ga.

The 70-mile, two-day bicycle trek will take place starting from the Georgia Welcome Center at Exit 8 off Highway 185 and leading to Franklin Delano Roosevelt State Park in Pine Mountain for an overnight stay before returning to Columbus the following day.

Rest points will be set up at the 13-, 23-, 31-, 55- and 70-mile marks throughout the trek, which is designed to be ridden at each cyclist's own pace to enjoy the scenery. It is not a race.

While at FDR State Park, trekkers will be served a free pasta dinner with dessert while listening to the sounds of Kodac Harrison and Luckie Street from Atlanta.

Those trekkers not wishing to stay at the outdoor shelter can opt for the lakeside cabins at an additional cost to the rider.

A free pancake breakfast will start the morning before the return ride, which will start at 9 a.m.

The return to Columbus only overlaps Saturday's ride in Hamilton, Ga., and has a little surprise in store for all participants as the ride nears its end.

Registration forms are available in all gyms and banks on post.

Basketball tourney — A two-on-two basketball tournament will be conducted at Harmony Church Field House, Kelley Hill Fitness Center, Santiago Fitness Center and Audie Murphy Fitness Center beginning March 12.

Registration will begin at the open of business March 7 and conclude at the close of business March 11.

The first eight teams to register at each facility will compete in a single elimination tournament allowing the top finisher from each facility to to qualify for the semifinals.

The women's tournament will be at Briant Wells Field House.

For more information, contact Chris Winterman at 545-5777 or your local fitness center.

Racquetball — A spring racquetball tournament will be March 26 and 27 at Briant Well Field House beginning at 9 a.m.

The tournament is open to all active duty personnel, department of defense civilians, retirees and family members 18 years old or older.

Awards will be given in to the top two finishers in each event.

For more information contact Lula Adams at 545-4388. Deadline for entry is March 21.

Softball players wanted — Fort Benning is formulating a men's softball team to participate in the Columbus Parks and Recreation league.

Jigging spoons catch winter bass

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

If it's winter, it's time to fish jigging spoons.

That's the advice of former professional fishing guide David Wharton, who has used these simple-looking lures for more than two decades, both as a guide and as a tournament bass pro.

"A spoon looks and acts like a crippled shad," said the Johnson Outboards Pro Staff angler, "and if you work the lure properly, it has a lot of action.

"I think a jigging spoon is the best lure to catch numbers of bass on in a hurry, but it will really catch practically anything that swims in a lake," he said. "There have been times on Sam Rayburn Lake where I live when I have caught largemouth bass, catfish, crappie, striped bass and hybrid stripers all on the same day with a jigging spoon."

Wharton's favorite places to fish jigging spoons in the winter are in brush and heavy cover along the edge or in the bottom of creek channels and dropoffs. He doesn't hesitate to drop a spoon right into brush if he thinks bass may be present.

"You have to develop a feel for the lure so you know when you do hit limbs," he said, "because when you do encounter brush you can't jerk or 'pop' the lure back up the way you do in open water. If you do, it will usually get caught under a limb.

"Instead, when you do feel a limb, you simply jiggle or shake your rod as you bring the lure up. It isn't nearly as likely to get caught, and the added action may even attract a bass."

The Johnson pro believes one of the most common mistakes he sees anglers make when fishing a jigging spoon is to work the lure on tight line. It's far better to let the lure fall on a semi-slack line, he said, so the spoon will flutter the way it's designed to do.

"Spoons have a lot more action than most anglers realize," Wharton said. "If you let them fall on a slack line they'll wobble and sway from side to side just like a shad falling to the bottom, but if you keep a tight line, the lure falls straight down, and that isn't natural at all."

When he's working a spoon, Wharton tries several different jigging techniques until he determines what bass want. Very often, a more subtle jigging motion in which the lure only hops upward a foot or so is more effective than when the lure jumps up wildly for several feet.

"Strikes usually come when the lure is falling," Wharton said, "so it's important to watch your line for any sign of a hit because you may not feel anything.

"It's also important to make certain your lure is at the proper depth. If the fish are suspended, you can put a mark on your line so you can drop the spoon to the same depth each time."

Purim

Festival reminds us individuals are important

By James Griffith
USAIC Chaplains' Office

reflections

The Jewish festival of Purim, celebrated today, commemorates God's deliverance of the Jewish people from destruction through the faith and courage of one man and one woman.

The events are recorded in the book of Esther. It is an ironic drama of passion and political intrigue, bigotry and revenge and, above all, renewed faith and courage.

It is the only book in the Bible that does not directly mention the name of God, but his hand is on every page.

Purim is the story of Queen Esther and her cousin Mordecai. The festival and the book remind us that individuals are always important.

The story begins at a banquet by King Ahasuerus of Persia.

When his wife, Vashti, refuses to appear on command, Ahasuerus divorces her. He then orders a nationwide beauty contest to find a replacement. The winner is a Jewish girl named Hadassah who is given the Persian name Esther.

Meanwhile her cousin Mordecai, who had raised her, hears of a plot to assassinate the king. He reports the plot to Esther who tells the king. The traitors are executed and Mordecai forgotten. This sets the stage for the next act.

The Grand Vizier of Persia is a man named Haman. Haman is a descendant of the Amalekite king, Agag, who had been defeated by Israel's first king Saul. Mordecai is a descendant of Saul.

When Mordecai refuses to honor him, Haman maneuvers the king into issuing a decree ordering the destruction of all Jews in the empire. Haman casts lots (dice) to pick the day of their holocaust.

Mordecai gets wind of the decree and goes into mourning. He demands that Esther appeal to the king on behalf of her people.

There are only two problems — the king does not know Esther is Jewish, and to approach the king without permission means instant death.

Esther said she does not want to get involved.

"If you remain silent at this time, relief and deliverance will arise for the Jews from another place and you and your father's house will perish," Mordecai said. "And who knows whether you have not attained royalty for such a time as this. "

Esther's reply is a model of realistic courage. "I will go in to the king, which is not according to the law; and if I perish, I perish," she said.

After several more twists to the plot, Esther finally appeals to the king to save her and her people. The king cannot revoke his order so he issues another allowing the Jews to defend themselves.

Haman is arrested and hanged on the gallows he erected for Mordecai. Mordecai is elevated to Haman's old job. The book ends with Esther under the king's authority proclaiming the establishment of Purim.

Today, Purim is celebrated in the Jewish calendar on 13 to 15 Adar. The first day is a day of fasting. The second day, the 14th of Adar, is a festival of food, joy and the reading of Esther.

Esther stood up and was counted. If there had been more Esthers and Mordecais, Jew and Gentile, a second and more deadly Holocaust might have been averted. Never let anyone tell you individuals do not count. In the end, they are all that counts.

Airborne!

Jump school students take 'the plunge'

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

The best way to get over the fear of heights is to jump out of an airplane, according to Spc. Ray Groves.

That's why he came to Airborne School. But airborne students do not start jumping out of planes until the third week, and the fear of heights, according to Groves and several other members of his airborne class, goes away before the second.

Ground Week

Airborne School literally begins on the ground — running on it and landing on it.

Emphasis is placed on running because the course is physically demanding, "and we don't have time to train (the students) physically," said Sgt. 1st Class James Prince, the chief of the Ground Branch.

Physical training for the first week includes 2.4-mile runs Monday through Thursday and a 3.2-mile run each Friday. Run distances increase the second week to 3.5 miles the first few days and 4 miles Thursday and Friday.

The runs are paced at a nine-minute mile, Prince said, and soldiers who fall out of a Friday run or two runs during the rest of the week are recycled.

Each day starts off with six chin-ups the first week, eight the second.

Airborne students start by learning the basics of moving inside an aircraft and controlling their static lines (the lines hooked inside the airplane that cause their parachutes to deploy automatically when they jump) from a "mock door" on the ground.

Then they become intimately familiar with the bottom of a sawdust pit as they practice the six parachute landing falls — left and right falls to the front, side and rear.

They start out on the ground, then jump from a two-foot wall, and then move on to the "lateral drift apparatus," a trolley-like handle that slides on a cable across the sawdust pit, from which students must properly execute six falls of each of the six PLF variations.

The students go over and over these basics until they get them right, Prince said, because "the two major causes of injury are improper landings and misrouted static lines."

"The hardest part for me, so far, has been the PLFs," said Pvt. 1 Jeff Peppin. "I just can't keep my feet together."

"The PLFs are a lot harder than they look," said Groves.

The students face their first high obstacle when they take what they have learned in the mock door training and apply it to the 34-foot jump tower.

"It really doesn't look that high until you are standing in the door," one student said.

Students are graded on their exits from the tower based on their body position and several other factors, including how they place their hands on the reserve chute, whether they hesitate before jumping and whether or not they keep their eyes open.

Tower Week

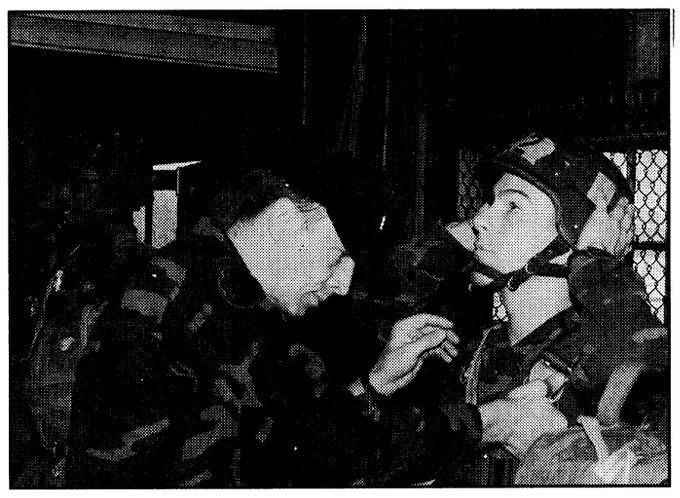
Week two, or "Tower Week," starts with more exits from the 34-foot jump towers and ends with a drop from the 250-foot jump towers.

The students go through two blocks of instruction on suspended harness training, learning how to pull the risers to maneuver the parachute canopy and emergency landing procedures for trees, power-lines or water, according to Sgt. 1st Class Henry McEachern, Tower Branch chief.

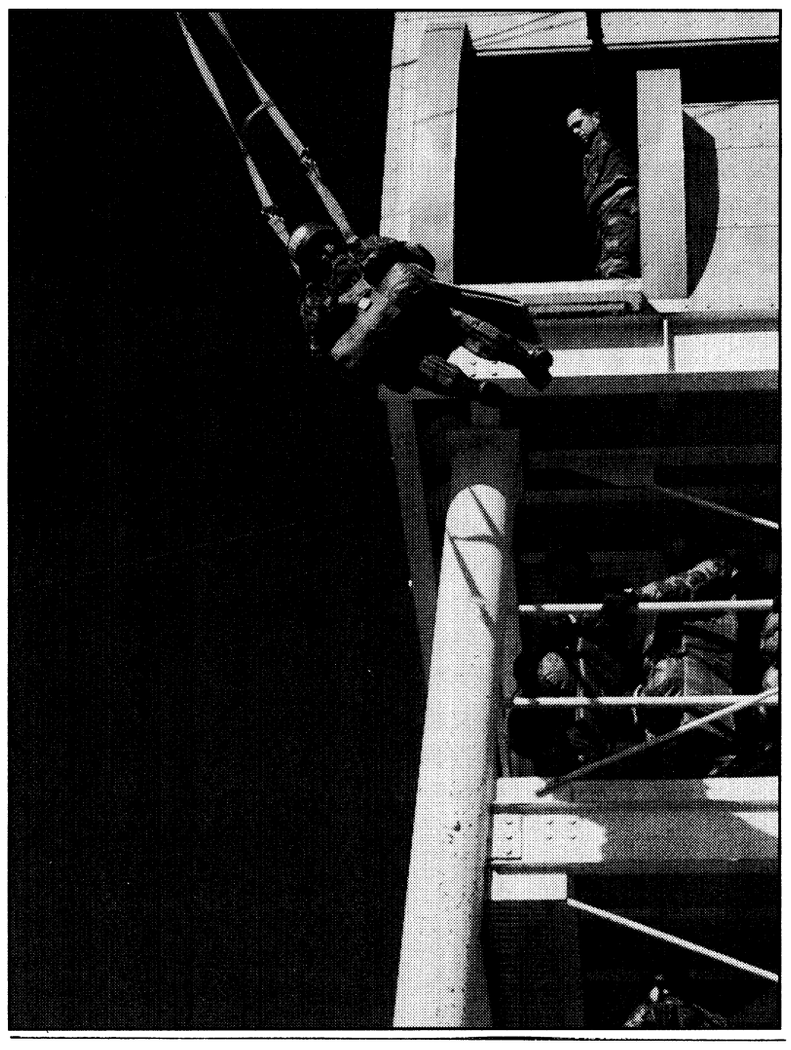
Then they must qualify on the Swing Landing Trainer, affectionately known as the "slam dunk."

With a trainer controlling their descent, the students jump off a 12-foot platform in a parachute harness. While the students are swinging, the trainers tell them what type of PLF to perform. The students pull the risers, assume the proper landing attitude and execute the fall.



Students must correctly perform 10 out of 12 falls to qualify; making two out of three of the side falls and all of the front and rear falls.

The final stage of tower week is a parachute drop from the 250-foot red and white jump towers on Eubanks Field.



The towers are not run every class, McEachern said. Four-day training weeks and wind or rain often necessitate skipping the towers and moving right on to jump week.

Airborne: students train to jump

has been at Fort Benning since October when she arrived for Officer Candidate School, said she had been eyeing the towers every day since she got here.

Although she got over her fear of heights at Air Assault School, she said, "the 250-foot tower scared me." But, she said, "Every day I'm surprised I've made it through the day. You do a lot of things you didn't think you could."

When conditions allow, students are pulled up the 250-foot tower in a parachute attached to a huge hoop.

At about 100 feet, each time a student is pulled upward, the tower operator or "button sergeant," says "Sound off with what you want to be," and is answered by the cry "Airborne!"

When they get to the top, the parachute is released and the students are advised to "enjoy the view, enjoy the ride," as they drift down, controlling the canopy according to directions given by the "arm sergeant," the instructor at the bottom.

Jump Week

During jump week, if all goes according to schedule, students perform five parachute jumps in three days, said Sgt. 1st Class Rene J. Perez, a mobile trainer.

Every morning they go through prejump training, going over everything they will do in the airplane and when exiting, Perez said.

Students perform the first jump without combat equipment, or "Hollywood," Perez said. Eight soldiers jump at a time, alternating from the left and right sides of the airplane.

"When the door opens up for the first time, their eyes just bulge out," said Perez.

"But," he said, "the majority of the students probably won't even realize what they are doing. Reality doesn't set in that they actually jumped ... it's just trained into them."

"Exiting the airplane was the shock of my life," said Chief Warrant Officer 2 Brett Westcott.

"The 130 mph wind makes you forget a lot ... I wasn't really thinking (on the way down), I was just trying to remember everything," he said.

For the second jump, students carry combat equipment and for the third they perform what is known as a "mass exit," — 15 jumpers per door exiting simultaneously.

The fourth jump combines combat equipment and a mass exit, and for the fifth and qualifying jump the students use a different, more maneuverable type of parachute.

For Warrant Officer Gabriela Perez, jumping was exhilarating. "Your heart is just racing. You can't really explain the feeling; the adrenaline just takes you into it," she said.

Like Groves, coming to Airborne School, for her, was a test. "I just wanted to find out if I had the nerve to do it." She did.

Infantry Officer Basic Course

In the midst of a cold and driving rain, the men of Company A, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, shivered in their ambush positions and scanned the engagement area for enemy movement.

Shortly after 3 o'clock on a Friday afternoon, they sprang their trap; four M-18A1 claymore mines blasted the kill zone, while M-203 illumination rounds lighted up the night sky.

These explosions were immediately followed by a massive hail of small arms and machine-gun fire that swept the objective for a full minute.

After assaulting through and clearing the objective, the soldiers quickly exited the area and returned to their objective rally point.

Their platoon live-fire ambush marked the culmination of a week of training for the platoon attack field training exercise for the Infantry Officer Basic Course students of Class 1-94.

For most students, it was the most demanding and rewarding week thus far in the 16-week course.

The course began with an emphasis on individual skills, then progressed to squad tactics and finally platoon operations.

This exercise gave the students an opportunity to practice several of their offensive operations with a company deliberate attack and a live-fire platoon ambush.

The ambush instruction included classes and day and night rehearsals, often in miserable weather.

This preparation made it possible for the students to execute in the adverse conditions that Friday morning — heavy rain, 20 to 30 mph winds and zero illumination.

In the first half of the week, the student leaders planned and prepared for a company attack on an enemy platoon strongpoint.

They conducted reconnaissance, rehearsed their actions, and refined their plans. Shortly after midnight on a Wednesday, the company began its operation.

The company's deliberate attack began with a difficult night movement, which covered five kilometers of slow-go terrain.

The platoons reached their assault positions just before dawn. The support element, breach element and assault element quietly moved to their positions and the commander started the attack.

As dawn broke across the horizon, the support element opened up with a heavy volume of fire that suppressed the fortified enemy positions.

With smoke obscuring the objective, the breach element cleared a path in the triple-standard concertina wire with a bangalore torpedo.

The breach element and the assault element entered the strongpoint, rushing in by fire teams despite the heavy smoke and enemy fire.

The commander controlled the coordination of fire from the support element and the movement of the different elements.

The main effort systematically moved from bunker to bunker to clear the objective.

When the final enemy position had been eliminated, the company moved in to consolidate and reorganize on the objective.

The exercise gave the students an opportunity to see classroom doctrine put into practice in the field.

Second Lt. Michael Grundman remarked that "this exercise was the first time that it all made sense."

Not only did the students work within their platoons, but the platoons worked together as a company.

By involving the students in the planning, refining, rehearsing and execution of a platoon operation, the students went beyond simply reading the manual.

"If anything," said Capt. James Loffert of 3rd Platoon, "this exercise forces the students to consider the myriad of tasks, SOPs (standard operating procedures) and tricks of the trade they will have to learn for themselves."

In that case, this exercise and the final culmination field training exercise will help prepare the students for their responsibilities as future Army platoon leaders, he added.

Board to consider soldiers for QMP, ANCOC, SFC

Army News Service

A board will convene June 2 to select eligible staff sergeants for promotion to sergeant first class, attendance at the Advanced Noncommissioned Officer Course and separation under the Qualitative Management Program, according to personnel officials.

For promotion, the board will screen staff sergeants with a date of rank of from June 30, 1992, and earlier, with a basic active service dates from Nov. 2, 1974, to June 2, 1988.

Staff sergeants in the primary zone of consideration for promotion are those with dates of rank of Oct. 31, 1991, and earlier. Soldiers with dates of rank from Nov. 1, 1991, through June 30, 1992, will compete in the secondary zone.

However, soldiers are not eligible for consideration to promotion if they have:

- An approved retirement and date of approval prior to June 2, 1994;
- An approved bar to re-enlistment;
- Not completed the resident or nonresident Basic Noncommissioned Officer Course, unless graduated from ANCOC, selected for attendance at ANCOC, or if no BNCOC exists for the soldier's specialty;
- Signed a declination of continued service statement prior to June 2, 1994;
- Not earned a high school diploma or GED equivalent; or
- A bandspersons' specialty as defined in AR 600-8-1, paragraph 5-2.

Soldiers to be screened for separation under QMP are staff sergeants with a date of rank of June 30, 1993, and earlier, except those who have a retirement approval date prior to June 2, 1994; or an approved Department of the Army bar to re-enlistment.

Officials stressed that soldiers should ensure their official military photographs are up-to-date and that their official military personnel files are accurate and complete.

The board will review the performance portion of the official military personnel file and any authorized documents they receive that are not posted in the official military personnel file.

Soldiers can request a copy of their official military personnel file by writing to:

Commander, USAEREC, Attn: PCRE-FF, Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind. 46249-5301. Requests must contain full name, Social Security number, address and the soldier's signature.

Official military personnel files may also be requested via push-button, tone-generating phone at (317) 542-3714 or DSN 699-3714.

Eligible soldiers may write to the board president to call attention to any matter they think is important in their consideration for selection. Memos should be addressed to:

President, SFC Promotion Board, c/o Commander, USAEREC, Attn: PCRE-BA, Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind. 46249-5301.

Soldiers should contact their local personnel service center for more information.

FUN activities bring enrichment

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

It's a typical Thursday afternoon at White School as one student carefully folds and pleats a sheet of square paper into an origami swan, another child steps in time to folk music while a third writes a story about the X-Men using a classroom computer.

In other rooms, children fold and fly paper airplanes, fashion first aid slings and bandages from bandannas, and create paper mache puppets.

These children are not off task; they are doing exactly what they should be as they learn about math, music, computer magic, aeronautics, first aid and drama.

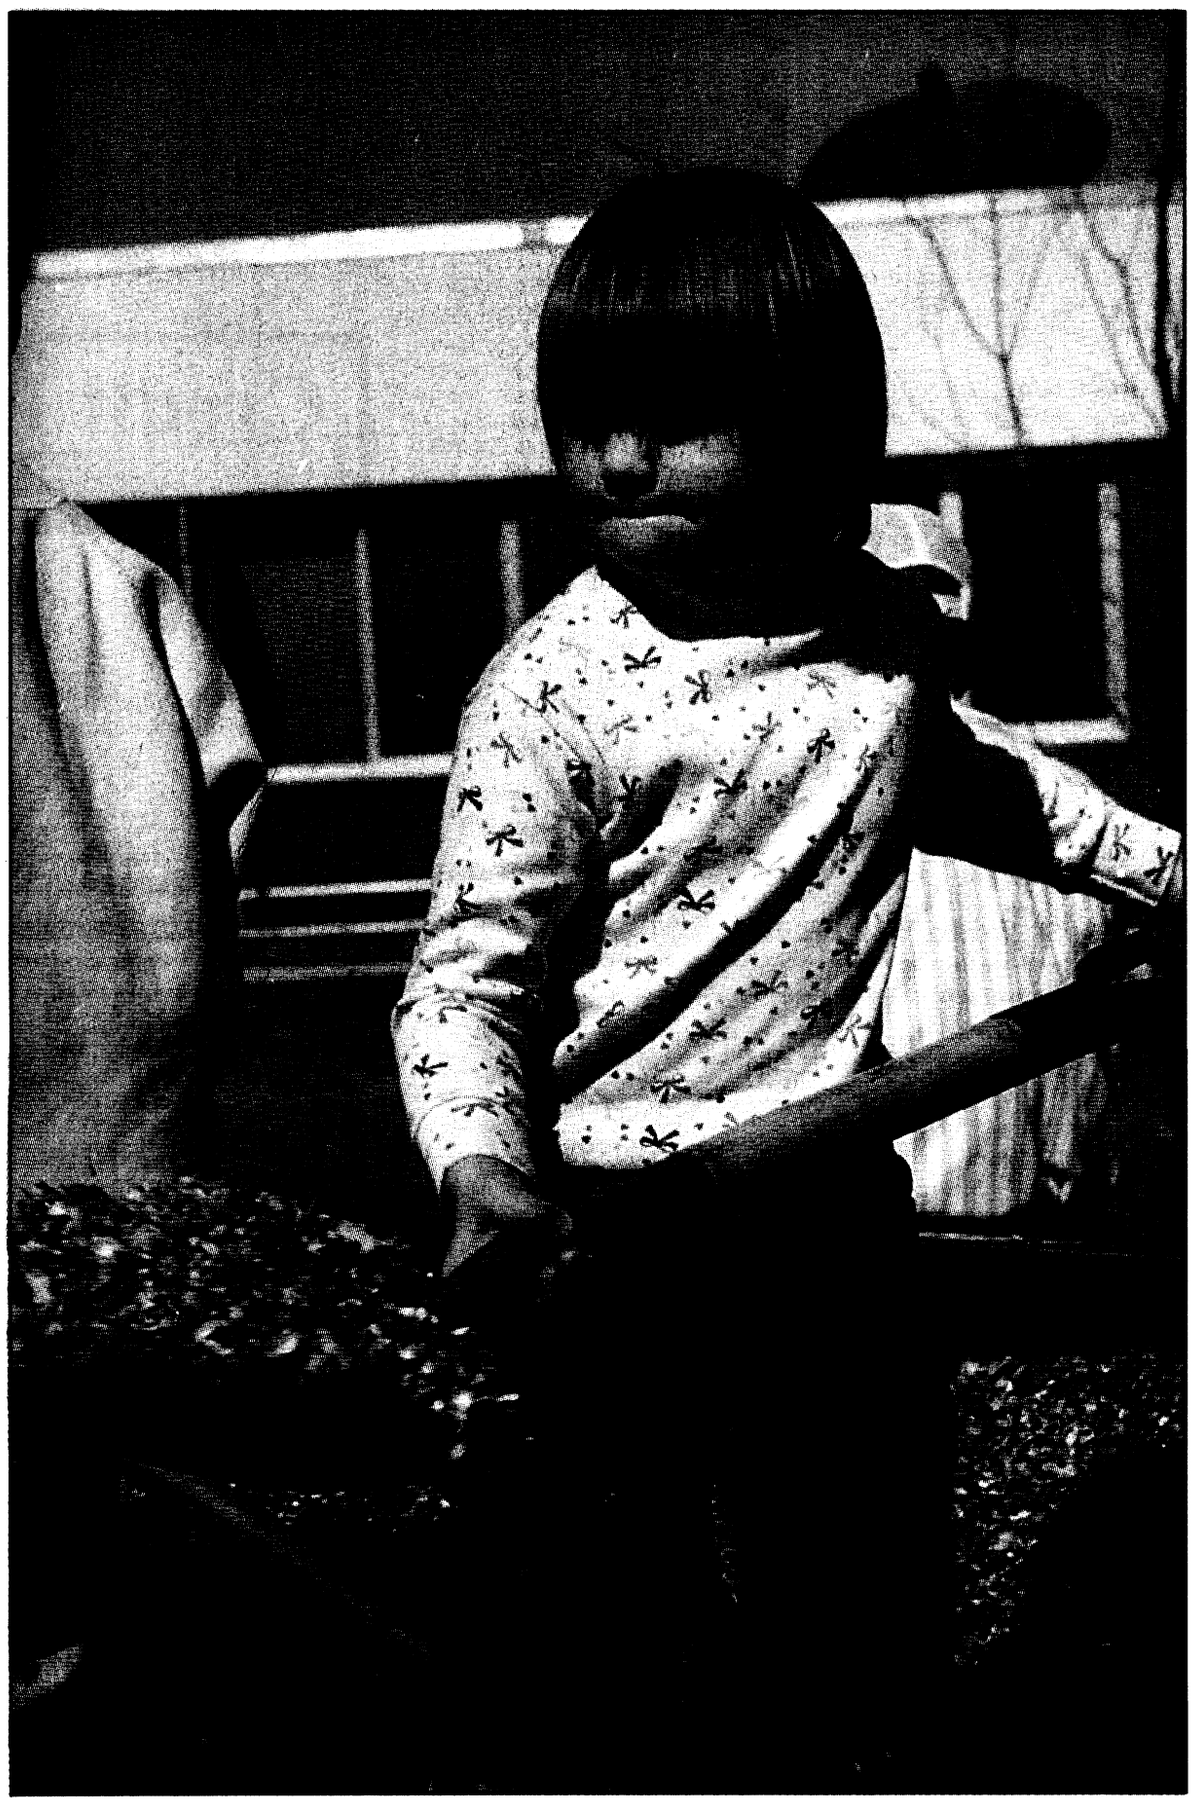
These classes represent just a few of the 20 enrichment sessions offered each quarter at White School. The new program, designed and supported by teachers at the school, enables each student to enjoy enrichment activities 45 minutes each week. Parent volunteers often assist with classes.

Each Thursday at 1:15 p.m. regular classes give way to enrichment sessions as children scatter throughout the school to learn skills ranging from beginning Spanish to advanced computers.

The enrichment exercises support the curriculum as well as enhance the arts, according to Janet Wynn, principal.

The program's goal is to promote students' self-esteem, to enable children to work with different teachers and volunteers, and to promote socializing and studying among students from various classes, said Wynn.

"The teachers get a chance to express themselves, too," Wynn added.



The program is structured around an elective system like a middle school or high school would have, she said. Every nine weeks children choose a topic of study from among about 20 courses. By offering a variety of enrichment classes, students are able to choose something they may not have had a chance to try.

"This lets the children branch out and see school is a place for everything," Wynn said.

Teachers suggested the program in a planning meeting on how to offer enrichment to every child, Wynn explained. In the past, a few children took part in special enrichment, but the system was not designed to allow universal participation.

The teachers suggested a schoolwide program in which regular classes would cease so students and teachers could devote time to embellishing current studies and learning new skills.

So if you drive by White School and see children mulching a garden, testing polygon kites on the playground or line dancing on the front lawn, its OK — it's all part of the enrichment program.

Superior Court judge speaks at Benning

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

Allen

Speaking to a racially diverse group of about 200 individuals, Judge John Allen of Columbus said complete empowerment still eluded African Americans, but they should continue to work toward this inevitable goal.

Allen, a Superior Court judge of the Chattahoochee Circuit, spoke on "Empowering African Americans: Past, Present and Future" at the NCO Club Feb. 17. Allen's speech, which was peppered with humor and homespun wisdom, contained numerous highlights from black military history.

As Allen discussed the topic, he wove past, present and future together with mental images of a feast-laden table, a metaphor he borrowed from an 18th century economist who stated, "At nature's great table, there is no place for some."

Equal empowerment

There should be equal empowerment as well as an equal place at the table for all people, Allen said.

For centuries, African Americans tried and failed to establish their place at the table through military service.

Allen, a highly decorated former Air Force captain who flew F4 Phantom jets in Vietnam, regaled the audience with examples of military heroism by African Americans.

Black soldiers

Black soldiers served with distinction in the Revolutionary War through the famed 54th Infantry, in the 9th and 10th Infantry Divisions of the U.S. Cavalry during the Civil War, and as the Buffalo Soldiers patrolling the American West and facilitating the expansion of the country from 1868 to 1898.

"They even pulled General (George) Custer's butt out of a sling, and he wouldn't even serve with them," said Allen. The judge noted that the Buffalo Soldiers led the famous Roosevelt charge in Cuba, a feat not recognized by most history books.

World War II

During World War II, black soldiers in the 99th fighter squadron flew hundreds of missions and served with distinction; still, African Americans remained unempowered and unable to gain a seat at the table, he said.

From 1619 to 1940, "blood and sweat couldn't buy empowerment," Allen said.

In 1940, African Americans made some progress as the military integrated, although they were still treated as second-class citizens outside the services, he added.

Civil rights

The civil rights movement represented another surge for empowerment during the turbulent 1960s, Allen said. This effort to secure a place at the table was more successful than in the past for several reasons: a grass roots movement of people banding together for change, "help from our white brothers," and the media coverage that allowed the world to see "the inhumane treatment of African Americans," Allen said.

The 1960s and 70s saw an end to discriminatory law, he said, and affirmative action rights facilitated African American efforts toward empowerment.

Progress

However, progress toward that goal has been stymied by groups who charge reverse discrimination and want to halt the progress toward empowerment. These groups have "their lions' share of the table" and want to keep it, he said.

Although the courts and legislature mandated equality and helped bring black Americans to the table, Allen asked "when is the proper time for supper?"

"If you're rich, it's whenever you please. If you're a poor man, it's whenever you can," he said.

Socioeconomics

Citing statistics from the Department of Commerce, Allen noted that black Americans still fall behind their white counterparts in a range of socioeconomic categories.

In order to gain equal footing in these socioeconomic categories, he said, African Americans must continue to seek better educations, must continue working together in informal groups to seek empowerment, and must continue teaching others about the contributions black individuals have made.

Black history

"We've got to have black history until it runs out our ears," he said. "We will rise as a true world leader when each of our citizens, including African Americans, is truly empowered."

The audience of male and female soldiers and civilians applauded Allen's recap of African American military campaigns and gave the judge a standing ovation at the end of his half-hour speech.

Historical knowledge

"His historical knowledge is way above the average American. I even learned a few things," said Sgt. Maj. William Avery, Supply and Services Division, Directorate of Logistics, whose organization sponsored the event.

The judge's speech was the highlight of a Black History Month program, which also featured fine arts presentations of music, poetry and drama.

Faith's Multicultural Club visits hospital

By Jerrie Macintire
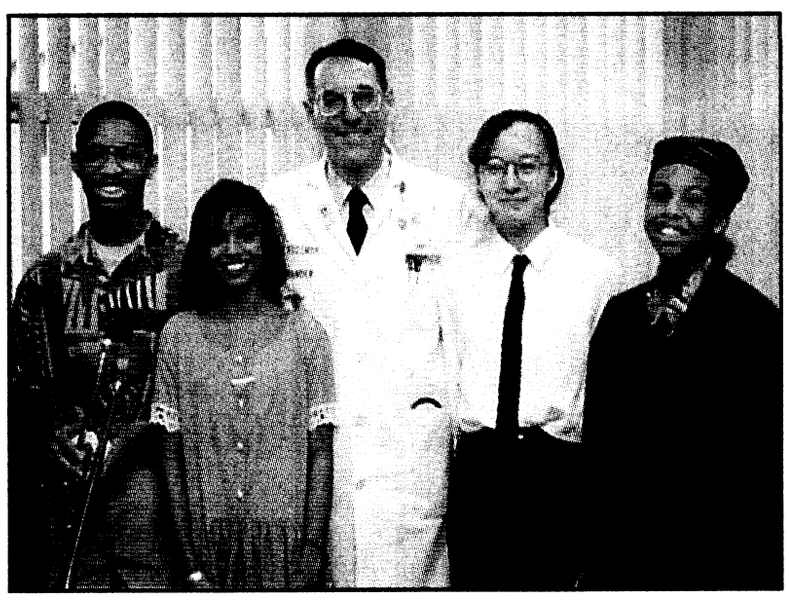
Special to The Bayonet ©

Faith Middle School students took guests on a brief journey back through the pages of history as they portrayed famous black individuals noted for their contributions in medicine, politics, science and the arts.



As one of Fort Benning Schools' many activities celebrating Black History Month, students from Faith's Multicultural Club visited Martin Army Community Hospital Feb. 17 and presented brief vignettes of historic African Americans.

The students gave hints about whom they were impersonating and urged hospital personnel and visitors to guess the identity.

Well known past and present black Americans such as athlete Jackie Robinson, talk show host Oprah Winfrey and musician Louis Armstrong were universally recognized by those participating in the trivia quiz.

However, participants sometimes needed additional clues to guess the identity of some historical figures such as writer Gwendolyn Brooks and artist Henry Tanner.

Students in the multicultural club, a racially diverse group which meets after school, researched an African American they wanted to portray, said Atlena Bledsaw, one of five sponsors for the club.

The students divided into three groups upon arriving at MACH, and with military escorts they canvassed the waiting areas, hallways and wards.

After giving a few facts about their historic figure, students invited staff and patients to guess whom they represented.

"I served as the youngest secretary of the United Nations in 1958, and I worked hard for world peace and to settle the dispute between the Arabs and the Israelis. Who am I?" asked Shadidah Muhammad, who dressed carefully in a tailored suit jacket to better portray statesman Ralph Bunch.

Other participants guessed who invented the traffic light, who started the civil rights movement, and who painted "The Banjoist."

One elderly gentleman waiting for an appointment correctly identified each historic figure the students represented.

A MACH doctor, while working between patients, recognized each of seven vignettes presented by one group and commented, "All you have to do is read."

The trivia game was well received by staff and visitors at the hospital, said Glen Hughes, Faith assistant principal.

"The children loved it. It was a good experience for them," he said. By practicing public speaking and relating their studies to the real world, this exercise "shows there's more to life and education than we can get from a textbook," Hughes said.

Bledsaw believes students gain mutual understanding and respect for each other by participating in exercises like this that involve "giving of themselves to others."

"This also helped to build their self-esteem and helped with public-speaking skills," she added.

"The people at the hospital loved it, and it was a learning experience for my students in the multicultural club as well," she said.

"At Faith we have such a diverse population of students that we like to share differences and similarities that we have. The purpose of the club is to learn more about each other and to gain respect for each other," she said.

All the club sponsors, who represent a variety of ethnic backgrounds, strive toward this goal. In addition to Bledsaw, sponsors include Lisa Gallaway, Estelle Hixon, Betty Koon and Maria Prieto.

Leader urges youths to follow their dreams

> "It is very possible that we might have a minority male or female elected as president ... even in my lifetime."
> — Emmett Paige Jr.
> Assistant secretary of Defense > for command, control, communications > and intelligence

By F. Peter Wigginton
American Forces Information Service

Young black men and women and other minorities need to realize they can be successful if they dedicate themselves to excellence in everything they do and set their objectives high, said Emmett Paige Jr.

As assistant secretary of Defense for command, control, communications and intelligence, Paige holds one of DoD's highest executive positions.

"There's no reason today for any young man or woman not to think about being president of the United States," Paige said. "They should have the same dream President Bill Clinton had. There's no reason they can't make that dream or any other dream come true.

"It is very possible that we might have a minority male or female elected as president in their lifetime, or even in my lifetime. Almost anything is possible, and one must prepare oneself mentally, morally and emotionally to be competitive in this world we live in."

Born Feb. 20, 1931, Paige started preparing for his future early. Although his father was a truck driver who finished fourth grade and his mother completed only sixth, they were determined their two children would understand the value and need for education.

"They were determined that we would go to college," Paige said. He remembers learning the times tables and how to read at home in Jacksonville, Fla., by being in the room as his mother taught his older sister. Our mother did not work outside the home. Her job was taking good care of her kids. She really worked with us in those early years, helping to teach us the fundamentals," he said.

Paige's mother enrolled him in grade school at age 4. He was an eager student. But, by the time he reached his junior year in high school, he was no longer challenged and dropped out. He briefly tried the Merchant Marine but discovered all ships were too slow for him. The day his ship caught fire was the real turning point, he said. Obsessed with the notion of being "barracuda bait" in the Caribbean, Paige enlisted in the Army the very next day at age 16.

Then began the 41-year career that took him from radio operator stationed in Japan to commanding general of U.S. Army Information Systems Command at Fort Huachuca, Ariz. There he oversaw a work force of 40,000 and a $2.4 billion organization.

As a recruit, Paige used his Boy Scout experience to score perfectly on an exam testing the ability to learn international Morse code characters. This beginning led to his assignment to the Army's Signal Corps. Communications and electronics became a lifetime hobby as well as his chosen profession. Shortly after basic training, he also obtained a General Equivalency Diploma before his high school class graduated in 1948.

After serving with the 25th Infantry Division in Japan, Paige was reassigned to the states and later applied for Signal Officer Candidate School at Fort Monmouth, N.J.

Before he could enter Officer Candidate School in 1951, he had to complete an eight-week leadership school at Fort Gordon, Ga. He was the first black to attend.

It was here that he was subjected to humiliation and discrimination because of his race. He recalled those weeks as "the worst days of my life."

Paige said he would make his bed so tight he could bounce a silver dollar on it. To keep it that way, he slept on the floor beside the bed. He kept two sets of khakis and fatigues so he would always keep one in perfect condition. He put cardboard in the sleeves to keep them hanging and creased to perfection. He measured and precisely spaced everything according to regulations.

"But no matter what I did, I'd always get a demerit. My shoes — hell, I shined shoes before I ever came in the service; nobody could shine shoes any better." Paige said he used sole dressing on the heels and soles, and kept "showpiece" low-quarters and boots under his bed. But the inspectors would always find something wrong.

One day on kitchen patrol, Paige was washing pots and pans when the mess hall was called to attention for the commandant. The officer walked straight through the building to the sink where Paige was and asked, "Leadership Student Paige, where is your blouse?" When Paige said it was in the storeroom, he was told to get it immediately, put it on and "Don't ever let me catch you in this mess hall again without it.

Paige remembers the commandant "didn't say a damn word to any of the white fellows — nothing at all. But it was a hot summer day, and there was no air conditioning, and all of us had our blouses off.

"One of the guys said, 'That's wrong. That's wrong. Go to the IG (inspector general).' But I wasn't about to do that. I had surmised that was what the commandant wanted me to do. I wasn't going to give him that pleasure. I was determined to make it awfully damn difficult for them to kick me out of that school, and I certainly would not quit, no matter how miserable they tried to make it for me.

"Many times as they would harass me, I would stare them directly in their eyes with a faint smile on my face. It was actually a stare of defiance with the comforting thought that their day would also come and they would reap what they were sowing, not from me but from God."

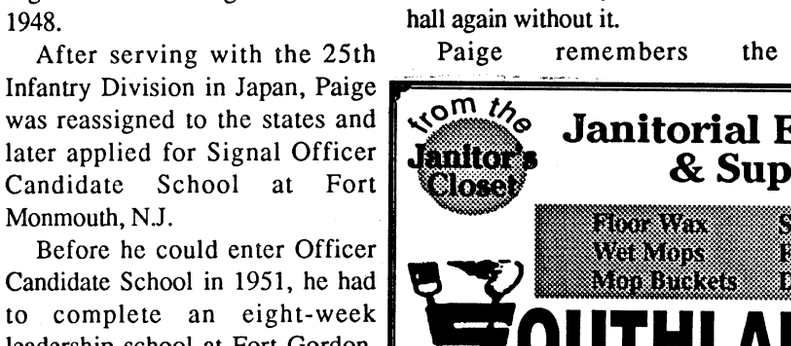
Paige said he experienced many similar instances of prejudice. Often he was the only black officer in an organization and knew he had to be not just as good as his white contemporaries at what he did.

"To be just as good would cause me to be considered as below average," he said. "So I worked harder. I studied harder. I tried to be sure that I knew my job and everybody else's job. I read everything I could get my hands on. I survived by being the best."

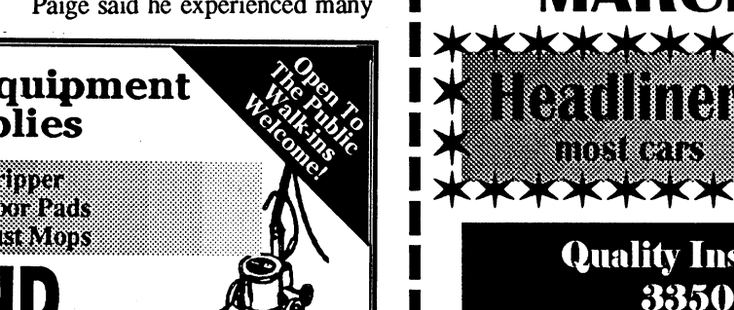
Determination, perseverance, pride, confidence and self-respect were the values that kept him hanging in there. He said he frequently reminded himself of the things his parents and teachers taught him.

"Before integration, as you went through school, you were told you had to study. You had to be good. You had to work hard because people expected more from you since you were black. So I recalled all those things and put them all to good use," said Paige.

Dual standards have existed throughout his lifetime and will probably always exist, he said. It didn't matter whether he was in military or civilian life.



Paige thinks the nation, especially the military, has come a long way. But he sees minority service members having it tougher today than 20 years ago, with trends reversing in the past 10 years. He thinks senior leadership needs to admit and address worsening conditions.



Paige knew if he were going to make it to the top, he had to pay the price for always trying to be the best.

BLACK HISTORY MONTH

Blacks fought many military battles

Black fighter pilot, cadets struggled, overcame trials

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

Many pioneers in black military history bravely paved the way for others to follow.

First black fighter pilot

Eugene Bullard was born in Columbus, Oct 9, 1894. His father, Octave, was orphaned during the Civil War and raised by a local French family named Bullard, who taught him to read and write. His mother was a Creek Indian.

From this heritage came a man who would become a hero of World War I, before America even entered the fighting, as a member of the French Foreign Legion and later as the world's first black combat pilot.

Bullard, whose ancestry is traced to the French West Indies island of Martinique, was raised in the Rose Hill section of Columbus. The grandson of a slave, he had the reputation as being a likable and gregarious child. But, he disliked the treatment of blacks in the United States and dreamed of moving to a place his father had described to him in stories.

Octave told his son about France, where blacks were treated with the same respect as whites. Hoping for a better life, Eugene, still 14 years old, made his way to Norfolk, Va., where he stowed away on a ship bound for Europe in hopes of reaching France.

The ship, the German freighter Matherus, landed in Aberdeen Scotland, where Bullard began the next 30 years of his life residing in Europe.

Eugene picked up odd jobs in various places in Scotland and England. But it was working as a boxer, with 42 professional fights to his credit, that helped him to finally reach Paris at the age of 19.

Life as a boxer in Paris was short lived, however, when war broke out in August of 1914.

As a 20-year-old resident of Paris, Bullard signed up for military service by volunteering for the French Foreign Legion and was assigned to its famed Morrocan Division.

He fought with distinction in the bloody battle of Artois Ridge and Champagne during his early days of service. Later, when the French government granted permission for Americans fighting with the Foreign Legion to transfer to regular French units, Bullard elected to go to the 170th Infantry Regiment, also known as the "swallows of death."

It was with the 170th that Eugene was involved in one of the most famous battles of World War I — Verdun. During the fierce fighting, Bullard was wounded in the leg by an exploding shell. He was awarded the Croix de Guerre and the Medaille Militaire from the French for his actions during the fighting.

While recovering in a hospital, Bullard requested that he be transferred to the Air Service as a gunner or a pilot. In October of 1916, he was assigned as a machine gunner in the French Air Service. But before he began serving in that position, Bullard requested and was granted permission to begin training as a pilot.

He was eventually assigned to and fought in many battles with the French Escadrille, Spad 93, becoming the first black combat pilot in history.

In April of 1917, the United States entered the war and Bullard fully expected to transferred, along with other American pilots already flying for France, to the flying service of the United States.

However, while Bullard watched other American flyers make the transition, he was never asked to make the change. According to Bullard's memoirs, "Negroes were not accepted as flyers by the United States Army."

Shunned by the Americans, he continued to fly with the French until November of 1917. It is unclear for what reasons his flying career ended but two versions have to do with being provoked into misconduct by verbally abusive French officers.

He was returned to service with the 170th Regiment but this time not as an infantryman, instead assigned to a service battalion. He left the French military, Oct. 24, 1919.

After World War I, Bullard remained in Paris and owned and operated a gym and a nightclub. He married a white French woman and had two daughters.

Bullard voluntarily returned to combat many years later at Orleans during World War II with the 51st Infantry. He was wounded during the fighting when an explosion threw him, injuring his spine. Not able in the chaos after the battle to return to Paris, Bullard made his way to Spain, on foot and bike, and eventually boarded a ship bound for New York City.

His daughters soon followed, (he separated from his wife years earlier) arriving in New York in 1941.

By the end of his service his military decorations numbered 15 including the Croix de Guerre, Croix de la France Libre and Medaille de la Somme. Bullard later was awarded the Medal of the Knight of the Legion of Honor by the French in 1959. He also helped light the everlasting flame at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Paris five years earlier.

Bullard worked in various jobs in New York City, his last as an elevator operator in Rockefeller Center, until his death in 1961. Bullard was buried in his Foreign Legion uniform among French war veterans in New York.

Blacks at West Point

In the modern day Army, black officers number 8,353, represented by a higher percentage (11.1 percent) than in the overall United States population, according to Dept. of Defense personnel figures.

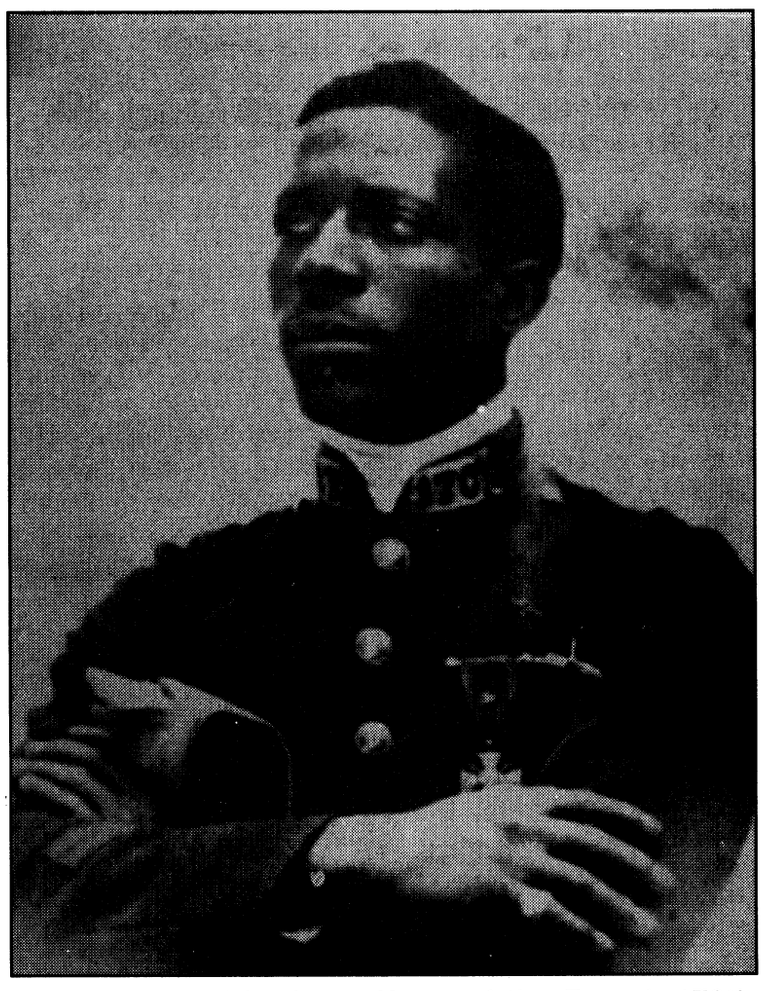
Achieving those numbers has been no easy task. Blacks in the late 1800s and well into the 20th century endured countless hardships while attempting to receive their commissions.

The United States Military Academy at West Point has currently graduated more than 1,000 black cadets and nearly 20 black officers are members of the faculty.

Henry O. Flipper is widely known as the first black graduate of West Point. Flipper and other early black cadets endured many hardships during their tenure at the military school.

But Flipper was not the first black to attend West Point. In 1870, James W. Smith became the first black cadet to March in the long gray line.

He would not succeed, however, in graduating. It was during his senior year that a name-calling incident in the West Point dining facility caused Smith to strike another cadet. He was expelled for his actions and returned to South Carolina where he eventually had a career teaching military science at an all black college.



Flipper came next to West Point, graduating in 1877. His years in school were not easy though, having to endure what was called the "silent treatment," where most instructors and cadets would not speak or look at him directly.

Later, after receiving his commission, he served with the 10th Cavalry. It was with this unit that he was accused of stealing money. Although found innocent during a court-martial, he was expelled from the military for conduct unbecoming of an officer.

Buffalo Soldier re-enactors to trace route to Washington, D.C., June 14

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

This year, the Buffalo Soldier re-enactors will trace the route to Washington, D.C., taken by Charles Young, a black man who successfully graduated and received commission from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., in 1889.

In 1914, when the United States declared war, Young expected to be given command of a unit, but the Army retired him as physically unfit instead.

To prove he was still able to serve, Young rode his horse nearly 600 miles from Ohio to Washington, D.C., but he never got the command he hoped for.

The riders will begin June 14 and arrive in Washington three days later. (Trailers will carry the horses part of the distance.) The ride will be followed by a service at Young's grave at Arlington National Cemetery and a banquet in Washington.

For more information about the event, call the Col. Charles Young Commemorative Ride to History at (404) 487-4137.

community care

By Ken Franklin
Martin Army Community Hospital

When a patient requires medical attention, the first point in the system is usually the telephone, which sets the tone for all the care that follows.

If a patient gets a dozen busy signals, a receptionist who may be trying to help four other patients or a lengthy hold period, even the finest quality of medical care can not make up for the frustration experienced by the patient.

The hospital and its staff see the same frustration at a different angle. At times, no amount of telephone lines or administrative personnel can keep up with the demand. At other times, all phone lines are open for long periods of time. The lines can go from jammed to nothing and back approximately every 10 minutes.

Listed below are some suggestions for successfully reaching your clinic without being too stressed:

• Don't use your phone's redial. Calling quickly and repeatedly only jams phone circuits, increases the chance of a busy signal and raises your frustration.

• If you get a busy signal, set your oven timer for five minutes (or use an egg timer). Those minutes, used for something else, are much less stressful than dialing rapidly with no results.

• Know all the numbers available. Most clinics have more than one appointment line. Your clinic has information that lists all of its telephone numbers or you may pick up a telephone directory at the hospital's Information Desk.

• Pick your calling time for routine appointments. Problems that need attention that same day usually fill the lines from 8 a.m. to 10 a.m. If you need to get a routine appointment or leave a message, try between 10 a.m. and noon, or between 1 and 4 p.m. Telephone lines are generally much easier to get at those times.

• Have your information ready. Having your patient recording card and a calendar handy can save minutes with the clerk. This shortens the wait for the next patient trying to call.

These telephone tips should make it easier for you to access that care. Remember to pick up a copy of the telephone directory at the hospital's Information Desk.

Do you have a question about community care at the hospital or its clinics? Send it to Community Care Corner, Martin Army Community Hospital, Attention: HSXB-F, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905-6100.

dr. fit

U.S. Army Physical Fitness School

Q: Does exercise increase the risks of heart attack complications? If so, does the benefit outweigh the risks?

A: There is little doubt that an exercise session increases the risk of sudden death. Research concludes that the risk per hour of exercise is seven times the risk of a heart attack at rest.

However, a study published in the New England Journal of Medicine concluded beyond a reasonable doubt that despite an increase in sudden deaths during exercise, the overall benefits outweigh the risks of a sedentary lifestyle.

Q: What is the incidence of exercise-related deaths?

A: According to the same New England Journal of Medicine study, there is one death per year per 18,000 participants.

Q: Is physical activity the only factor associated with stress fractures?

A: Stress fractures are not an uncommon problem. Although overtraining is often the contributing factor, other areas must be considered. All athletes should have an appropriate diet that includes calcium and vitamin D. Women who have menstrual problems must also be aware that their monthly cycle may contribute to the incidence of stress fractures.

Q: Are stress fractures prone to recur?

A: People who have stress fractures are more likely to have a second fracture than the average person, unless there is an underlying problem, such as a woman's period. As mentioned previously, this issue must be addressed.

ask the judge

By Jane M. Winand
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: Last month, while at the National Training Center at Fort Irwin, Calif., I was tasked with some other guys in the platoon to dig foxholes. My platoon sergeant told us to put our load bearing equipment and Kevlar helmets in a pile by our truck and start digging.

I expressed concern over my equipment, but the sergeant told me he would worry about it.

After the foxholes were dug, the platoon sergeant sent us to help with communications at the tactical operations center. I asked about my equipment again and the sergeant started getting ticked at me. "I'll worry about the equipment," he said.

After three other jobs that took four more hours, the platoon sergeant let me go. I immediately went back to where I was told to leave my equipment, and it was gone. A couple of other guys who had been told to leave their gear there also got ripped off.

The platoon sergeant said he didn't know anything about it. He also said that I was signed for the equipment, and I'd have to pay for it. The company gave me a statement of charges to sign. What do I do?

A: First, think before you sign. A statement of charges is like a check. Sign your name and the money comes right out of your pay from the government. If you know you're responsible for the loss, damage or destruction of government property, signing a statement of charges is a quick way to take care of the matter and get on with your life. However, if there is a little nagging in the back of your mind that you don't think it is your fault, don't sign.

If you don't sign the statement of charges, the unit will initiate a report of survey to determine who, if anyone, will be responsible for the loss. A report of survey is an investigation to determine what was lost or damaged, what was the value of the items and who, if anyone, will have to pay to replace the items.

A survey officer is appointed, and he or she will get statements from all of the relevant witnesses and examine the damaged property, if any, and the scene of the damage or loss. The survey officer will also check all of the pertinent regulations and seek legal advice from the Administrative Law Division of the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate.

If, after the investigation is complete, the survey officer recommends that you pay for the loss or damage, you must be given a complete copy of the survey.

If the survey was hand delivered, you have seven days to prepare a response (the response time is increased if you are unavailable to receive the hand-delivered survey or if you are in a different country from the survey officer.)

Although you will have another opportunity to appeal to the approving authority, this is your only chance to submit a rebuttal to the survey officer.

The Legal Assistance Division provides legal advice to the recipients of reports of survey on Tuesdays ad Fridays.

Call the Legal Assistance Division at 545-3281 for more information about counseling that is available. Bring the copy of the survey, all of your statements and exhibits and anything else that you think will be helpful to the Legal Assistance Office.

You'll also need to prepare a detailed written statement giving your version of the facts. The attorney will review your statement and then recommend a course of action.

In your situation, your platoon sergeant, as your supervisor, had supervisory responsibility over the property for which you signed. That means he had to provide proper guidance and direction, enforce security, safety and accounting requirements and maintain a proper physical and psychological environment for the proper care and use of government property. Thus, by his actions, he may be responsible for all of the missing property he said he would safeguard.

Change behavior to improve health

U.S. Army Dental Corps

Most people can improve their health and protect themselves with a few changes in behavior.

Here are some quick tips for better health:

Buckle up

Seat belts save lives. Consider these facts the next time you start your engine:

• Before safety belts laws, 90 percent of automobile occupants killed in car crashes were not wearing their seat belts.

• The number of auto occupants killed each year in the United States is equal to a fully-loaded 727 passenger jet crashing every day of the year.

• When they ride in a car, children need special protection. If you are an unbelted adult holding a child on your lap in a 30 mph crash, you will be thrown forward with a force of 1.5 tons. Probably, you will crush your child to death. Take the time to buckle your children in to proper safety seats.

Drink water

Your body cannot function properly without enough water. On the average, a person should drink eight 8-ounce glasses every day. Increase this amount if you exercise briskly or if the weather is hot and dry.

Drinking lots of water can actually improve your brain power. Water helps nourish the brain, plus it carries away wastes.

Quit smoking

Each cigarette you smoke shortens your life by 12 minutes.

Every day, 1,000 Americans give up smoking by being buried.

Exercise regularly

Exercise prevents the muscles in your body from becoming weak. A muscle not used for 10 days loses a third of its strength.

Exercise helps calm the nerves and thus may alleviate nervous tension that causes muscles to knot up.

Exercise can increase your strength, stamina and coordination.

Exercise can make you feel better. The key is to find a form of exercise you enjoy so that you'll want to do it on a regular basis. Once you get into a fitness routine, you'll probably look forward to exercising.

Sleep tight

If you're having trouble getting the sleep you need, here are some tips for more beneficial zzz's:

• Exercise regularly in the morning or afternoon

• Cut back on caffeine and nicotine intake at night

• Start a regular bedtime-sleep routine

• Eat starches (fruits, potatoes, grains) — they act as a natural sedative.

Take care of teeth, gums

Remember that every tooth has five sides. Brushing alone reaches only three sides of your tooth. Only dental floss can reach between your teeth and clean the other two sides.

Even if your teeth are free of cavities, you can lose them. Gum disease causes 70 percent of tooth loss in adults.

Come in for regular check-ups so dentists can easily detect and help you prevent gum disease.

The average American consumes more than 125 pounds of sugar each year. One-fourth of that sugar is in soft drinks. Try to quench your thirst with healthier drinks.

A better sandwich improves overall diet

General Mills

A healthful sandwich is more than a pile of sprouts atop layers of turkey breast between two thin slices of bread.

In fact, you may be surprised at the variety of low-fat, healthful sandwich makings that are available, said Karen Wilder, a registered dietitian.

Preparing healthful sandwiches opens up opportunities for creativity and variety.

Here are a few ideas to get you started:

• Choose enriched, whole-grain breads such as whole wheat, multi-grain, rye, oatmeal or bran bread.

• Wrap fillings in soft tortillas or spoon into pita bread.

• Prepare sandwiches with mustard, horseradish or a drizzle of plain low-fat yogurt instead of high-fat spreads, such as butter or mayonnaise.

• Substitute chicken or turkey breast, lean roast beef or lean ham for higher-fat fillings, such as salami and liverwurst.

• Sprinkle on shredded cheese instead of adding thick slices. You'll enjoy rich, cheesy flavor with less fat.

• Pile sandwiches high with vegetables. Lettuce, spinach leaves, sliced tomatoes, onions, cucumbers, radishes and zucchini add flavor and texture.

• Use chopped vegetables, such as celery, onion and green peppers, in chicken, tuna or egg salad.

'North and South' saga to conclude

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

It has taken roughly seven seasons in television terms, but a popular saga finally is getting its concluding chapter.

In the mid-1980s, ABC made two miniseries from best-selling author John Jakes' book "North and South," the saga of two friends swept up in events surrounding the Civil War.

SPOTLIGHT

This week, that network puts a finale on the story with the new drama "Heaven and Hell: North and South, Part III," airing in two-hour installments on Sunday, Monday and Wednesday. Again executive-produced by David L. Wolper ("Roots," "The Thorn Birds"), in association with his son Mark this time, the tale brings back a number of the central players from the first two editions.

James Read returns as George Hazard, whose ongoing conflict with the sinister Elkanah Bent (Philip Casnoff, seen last season in the title role of "Sinatra") yields personal tragedies that ultimately drive George into the arms of Madeline (Lesley-Anne Down), the widow of his close comrade Orry Main. (Patrick Swayze, who originally portrayed the latter character, appears only in prologue scenes drawn from the earlier productions.)

Among other cast members reprising their roles are Read's real-life spouse Wendy Kilbourne as George's wife Constance and Terri Garber as the ever-scheming Ashton Main, as well as Jonathan Frakes ("Star Trek: The Next Generation") and Genie Francis ("General Hospital") — another couple who met, then married, as a result of working on "North and South" — as, respectively, George's brother and Orry's sister.

James Read (left), Lesley-Anne Down and Kyle Chandler.

What: 'North and South'
When: Sunday, Monday and Wednesday on ABC

Those new to the epic include: former "Homefront" co-star Kyle Chandler as Charles Main, Orry's cousin, who also becomes a target for the evil Bent's torment while he falls in love with an actress (portrayed by newcomer Rya Kihlstedt); Robert Wagner as Cooper Main, Orry's brother, who goes to great lengths in his efforts to expel Madeline from the family; Mariette Hartley as Prudence, a schoolteacher who risks the wrath of the Ku Klux Klan by educating the children of former slaves; Stan Shaw ("Fried Green Tomatoes") as the newly emancipated Isaac; and Chris Burke ("Life Goes On") as the childlike Jim.

In the same way that the first two "North and South" miniseries encompassed cameos by stars such as Elizabeth Taylor and Robert Mitchum, "Part III" offers the same via the appearances of Peter O'Toole as a Shakespearian actor, Billy Dee Williams as a black leader and Rip Torn ("The Larry Sanders Show") as a savvy businessman engaged in trade with Indians.

Published in 1987, after the TV adaptation of "North and South" had aired, "Heaven and Hell" was optioned immediately by veteran producer Wolper.

Secretary of the Army Togo West visits Columbus

By Lawrence K. Hughes
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Secretary of the Army Togo West visited the Columbus-Fort Benning area for the second time in two months Monday. He was on hand as the guest speaker for the annual black history observance at the Columbus Iron Works Trade and Convention Center. Watch "Fort Benning Today" beginning Monday for highlights of his visit.

The American Red Cross recently conducted a blood drive, which helped to restore the local blood and plasma supplies that had dwindled because of a high outbreak of influenza and recent earthquakes. Hear donor comments on "Fort Benning Today."

Shaquille O'Neal makes his acting debut in film 'Blue Chips'

Paramount Pictures

It's a case of "like father like son" — at least in the movies.

Shaquille O'Neal is the son of now-retired U.S. Army Staff Sgt. Philip Harrison.

Now expanding his basketball stardom to the big screen, he co-stars with Nick Nolte in "Blue Chips." O'Neal plays a top amateur basketball player whose neighborhood was so dangerous that he joined the Army and invaded the Persian Gulf for a vacation.

Directed by William Friedkin, "Blue Chips" brings O'Neal together with top Hollywood stars and many basketball figures.

The cast includes Anfernee "Penny" Hardaway, Matt Nover and Bob Cousy; with appeaances by Marques Johnson, Larry Bird, Bobby Knight, Rick Pitino, George Raveling, Jim Boeheim, Jerry Tarkanian. Lou Campanelli, Marty Blake and sportscasters Dick Vitale and Todd Donoho.

O'Neal and his retired drill sergeant father apparently have a lot in common. As a young man, Harrison at 6 feet 5 inches played ball at Essex County College in Newark, N.J. Both also have acting ability — remember that athletic shoe commercial they appeared in together?

"I wanted to look at the players in this film and know that these guys are really playing," Friedkin said. "I wanted there to be no doubt that you're watching great basketball athletes in competition."

"This was a great opportunity for me to see if I'm a pretty good actor," O'Neal said, "and you learn a lot from a guy like Nick Nolte."

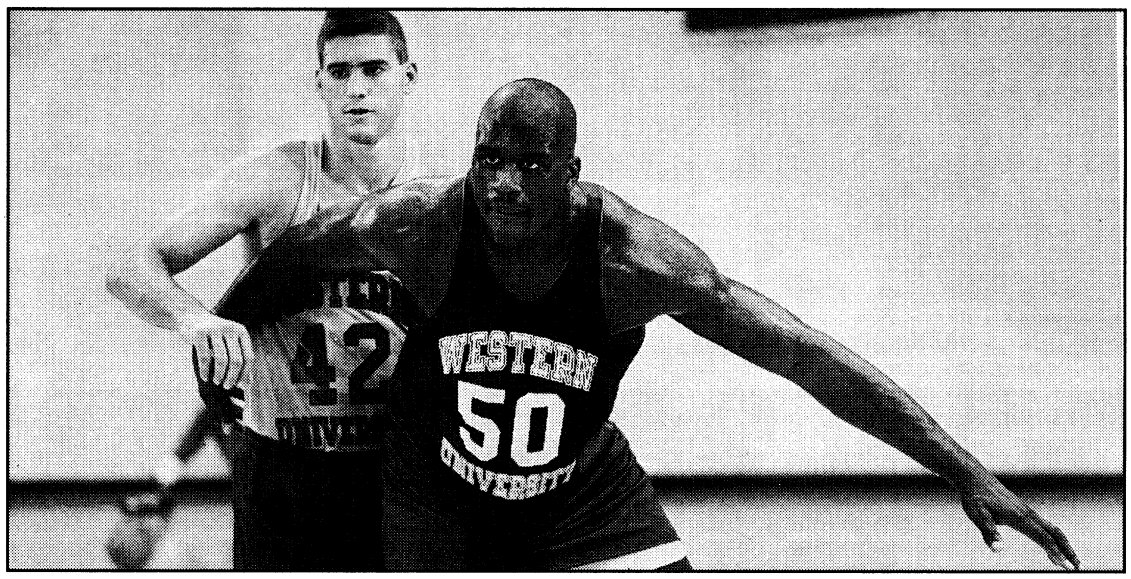
O'Neal plays Neon Bodeaux, a "Blue Chip" (the players every college program covets) discovery from New Orleans. But, the basketball-turned-film star admits he's basically playing himself.

"Neon is the kind of guy who works hard and doesn't want favors," O'Neal said. "That's the way I am in life. I just have a different name in the movie."

O'Neal made his debut in the NBA last season, winning the Rookie of the Year Award in a near unanimous vote.

A two-time All-American from Louisiana State University, he was the top pick in the 1992 draft. He has turned the new Orlando Magic franchise into one of the most competitive and popular pro basketball teams.

One of only a handful of rookies to be voted a starting spot in an NBA All-Star game, O'Neal has a following as the result of his play and his identification with international products such as Reebok.



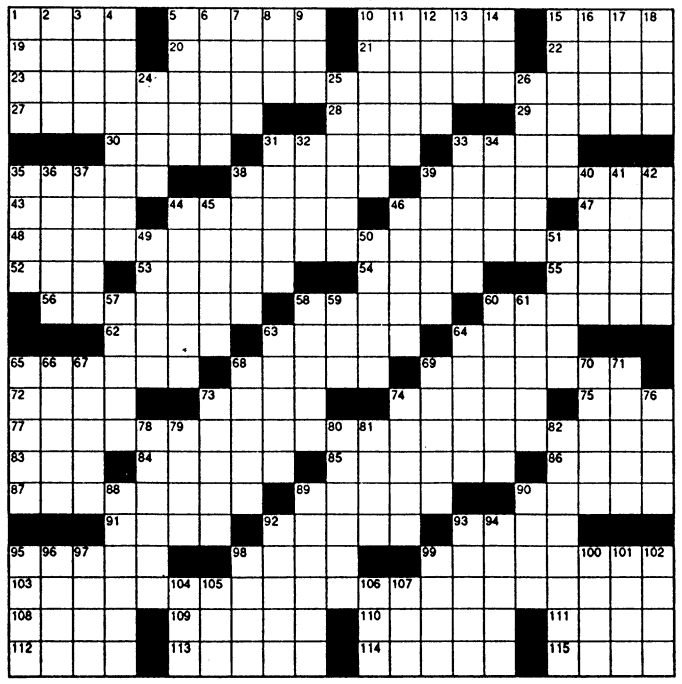
He was the only NBA player in history to be named Player of the Week in his first week of professional play. He was also the only player last season to rank in the top 10 in rebounding, blocked shots, field goal percentage and scoring.

Seven feet tall, the 21-year-old O'Neal also works with children through such organizations as the Make a Wish Foundation.

In "Blue Chips," Pete Bell (Nolte) is head coach of the Western University Dolphins, former national champions who have slipped out of the national rankings in recent years.

Under pressure, Bell and the school's athletic director begin a search for players who can turn their ailing program around.

"Blue Chips" was released nationwide Feb. 18.



Bob Greene

Neon Bodeaux (Shaquille O'Neal, front) and Ricky Roe (Matt Nover) are Blue Chip recruits in "Blue Chips." The Paramount film was released Feb. 18.

Savannah Onstage to present musical talent

Savannah Onstage

The world's brightest, newest stars in the musical arena will be gathered in Savannah, Ga., Wednesday to March 5, performing in the fifth annual Savannah Onstage festival of concerts.

Savannah Onstage will feature winners of five international music competitions as well as the Great American Jazz Competition.

The festival will showcase performances by violinist Tomohiro Okumura, the 1993 Naumburg Gold medal winner, pianist Christopher Taylor, winner of the 1993 Van Cliburn Bronze medal, the 1991 Kappel Gold Medal and the Gilmore Foundation Prize.

Jazz, classical music, cultural exhibits, art and magnificent architecture enhanced with superb acoustical stages are not the only features of Savannah Onstage.

The 1994 festival will introduce the American Tradition Competition, a first in the field of music competitions that will focus on music that has formed the cultural heritage of the United States. Each year the competition will explore a different series of American musical traditions.

Throughout the week of Savannah Onstage, the first competition will be taking place with 31 quarterfinalists from 21 states competing for $25,000 in top prizes ($10,000 to the first-place winner).

The contestants are soloists who have been selected from a field of more than 140 contestants from 32 states, all performing a selected repertoire which high-lights jazz, blues and a variety from gospel to Gershwin.

The Savannah Onstage production is directed by Stewart Gordon, who is a pianist who has studied with Olga Samaroff, Walter Gieseking, Cecile Genhart and Adele Marcus. Gordon is also a professor at the University of California.

For information or to reserve tickets, contact the Savannah Onstage office at (912) 236-5745 or (800) 868-3378.

Seminar to focus on ways of preventing child abuse

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

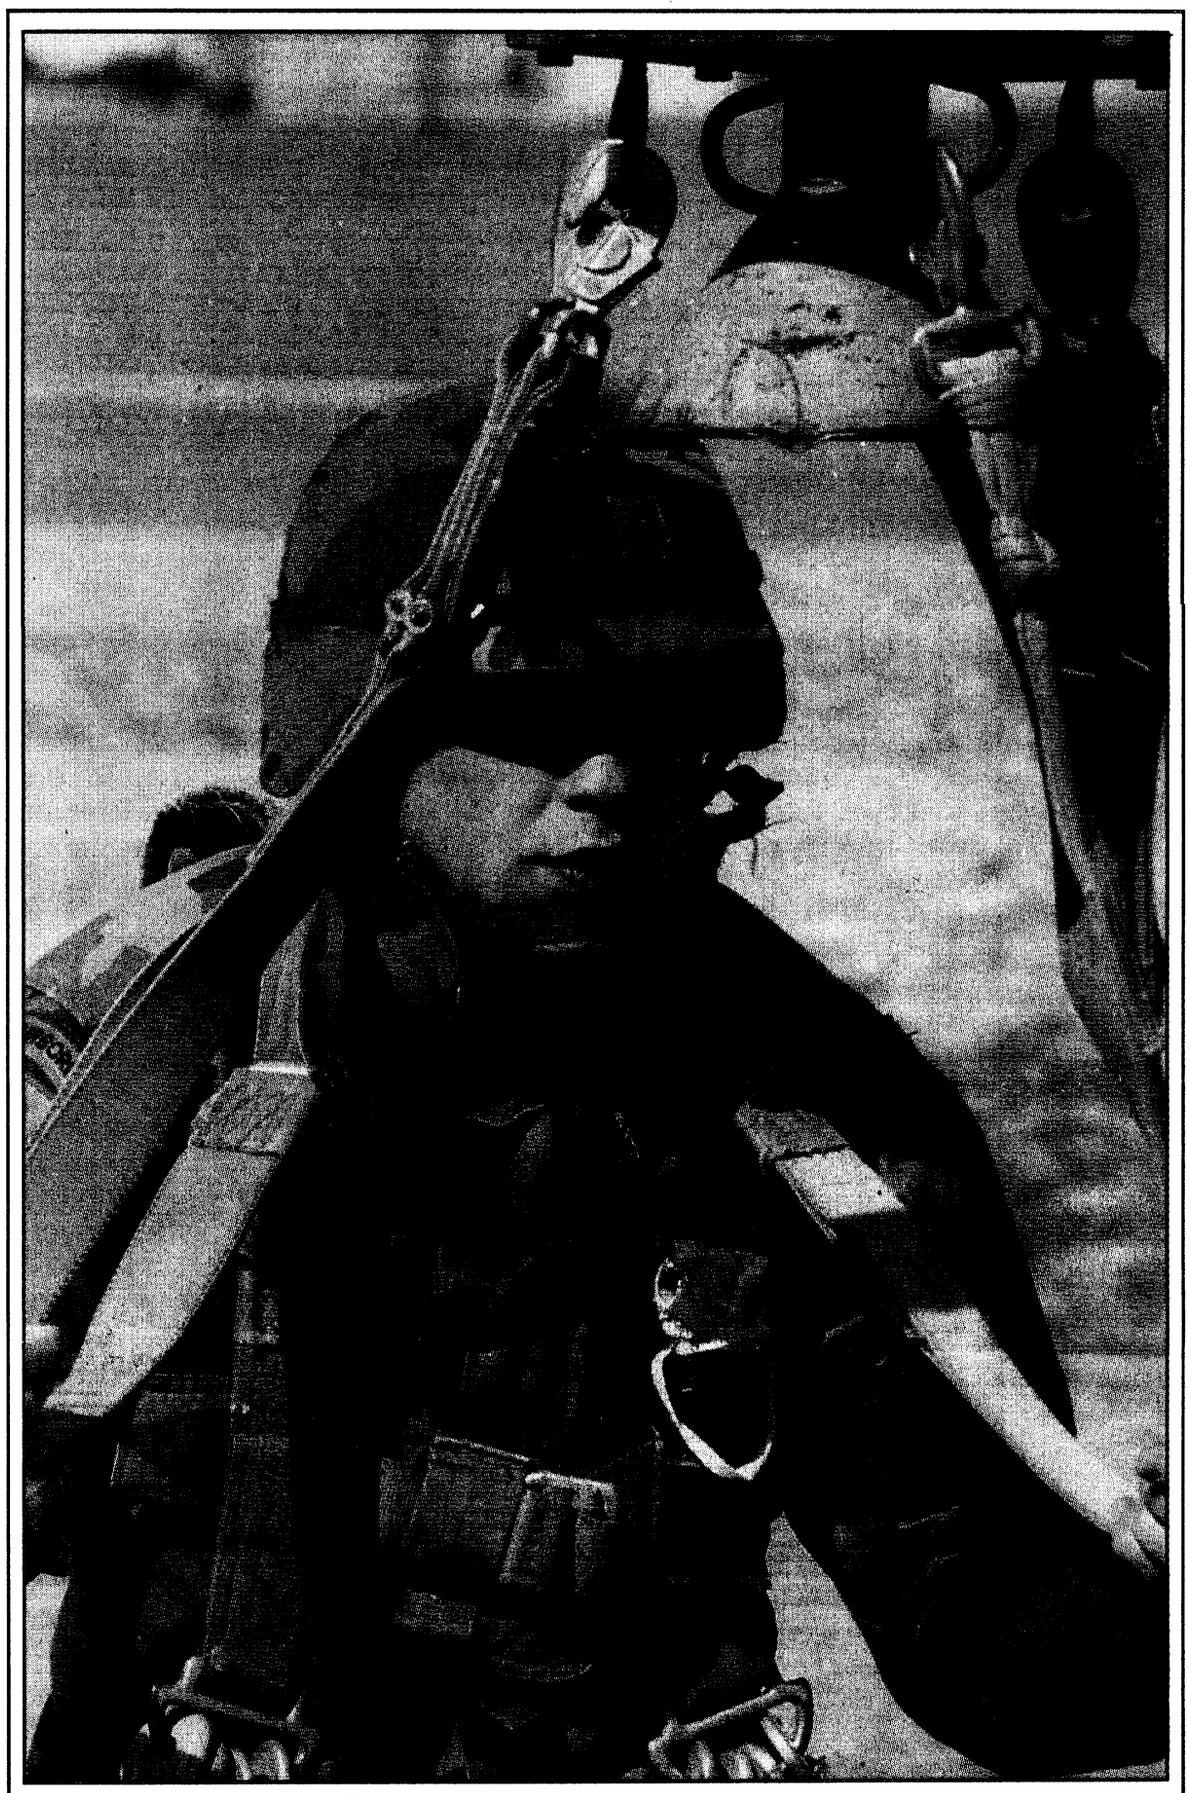
A three-part seminar focusing on ways professionals can help prevent child abuse and be better advocates for the youngsters they serve is scheduled for Thursday and March 11, 17 and 18 at the Columbus Iron Works Convention and Trade Center and at Columbus Technical Institute.

The seminar, a joint effort between Fort Benning and the University of Georgia, is targeted toward specific audiences and will meet continuing education requirements for a variety of professionals and paraprofessionals, according to Rebecca Welch, Family Advocacy Program manager at Fort Benning.

Welch has been planning the seminar more than a year along with Joanne S. Cavis of the University of Georgia Cooperative Extension Service and Center for Continuing Education.

"I wanted to provide this training to help professionals who work with the victims of child abuse be the best they can be, to better understand the dysfunctional family system and parents who are under stress, to discover ways to help families through networking in order to prevent abuse from happening, and most of all to help the child," Welch said.

By targeting both military and civilian professionals who work with abuse victims, Welch believes they will have a better understanding of the latest techniques, procedures and methods when working together on a case. "Professionals who train together have greater understanding and can better help the children, " she said.



Fort Benning has memorandums of agreement with civilian organizations such as the Department of Family and Children Services and the Columbus Police Department.

The first session, scheduled for Thursday and March 11 at the Columbus Iron Works Convention and Trade Center, will feature advanced topics in the multi-disciplinary approach to child sexual abuse. The sessions are designed for social workers, law enforcers, attorneys, mental health professionals, physicians, nurses, school counselors and principals.

Guest professionals from the National Resource Center on Child Sexual Abuse in Huntsville will conduct the two-day session, which will contain 12 hours of continuing education credit from the University of Georgia.

The second session set for March 17 at Columbus Technical Institute, will cover domestic violence instruction and the treatment process. Guest speaker Jean Matthews, nationally recognized expert in the field, will address control issues and crisis intervention.

AER kicks off '94 campaign

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

The 1994 Army Emergency Relief fund-raising campaign kicked off Tuesday after a session with campaign officials and unit representatives in charge of donation collections within their organizations.

AER provides monetary relief to soldiers needing help with food, rent, utilities, medical costs and other specified financial needs.

Col. Gregory Camp, deputy assistant commandant of the U.S. Army Infantry School, spoke at the session and then got the campaign rolling by being the first to complete an allotment form with his monthly donation.

"AER is a tremendous organization," said Camp. "It helps us much more than we help it."

Last year, according to Camp, the organization gave $32 million in aid to individuals worldwide. At Fort Benning, more than $789,227 in assistance was given to 1,427 clients in 1993.

"This is the only true campaign focused completely on soldiers," he said.

Co-located with the Family Support Division of the Directorate of Community Activities, AER is a nonprofit organization that has been serving soldiers since 1942.

Funding from AER comes from several sources in addition to the money raised through its yearly campaign.

This year the fund-raising goal has been set at $180,000; the 1993 goal of the same amount was exceeded after a total of $191,000 was donated by Fort Benning personnel.

The national AER offices in Alexandria, Va., campaign for funds simultaneously and provide money to their 121 locations worldwide, including Fort Benning.

Other funding comes from private donations; the organization does not receive any Combined Federal Campaign funds.

Unit representatives are responsible for soliciting donations from members of their organizations. Individuals can donate through a monthly allotment or in a lump-sum payment of cash or check.

AER funds are given to needy soldiers who are recommended by their company commander or first sergeant. There are 14 specific areas that are excluded as reasons to receive money including fines, bad checks and other nonessentials, according to Alfonso J. Deane, AER Officer.

Once soldiers are approved to receive aid, their applications are reviewed by AER officials to determine whether they will receive a loan, grant or a combination of both.

The campaign runs through May 15. Individuals interested in making a donation should see their unit project officer or contact AER offices at 545- 2536.

DARE: Students get tools to make 'right choices'

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

An original rap song and essays about the dangers of drug abuse highlighted the first semester Drug Abuse Resistance Education, or DARE, graduation of 180 students at Faith Middle School Feb. 24.

"You will have to make individual choices. DARE gives you the tools to make the right choices," said featured speaker Lt. Col. Jack Heacock, chief of law enforcement operations.

Heacock encouraged the students to exercise individual decisions and not let peer pressure change a decision they know is right.

Using the Olympic Games as a timely illustration, he said "Olympic athletes are special because they choose not to be the same as everyone else. There is nothing special about you if you let group pressure get you into drugs."

Over the past five years, the DARE program at Faith School has offered 1,850 students methods to resist drug experimentation and feel positive about that decision.

DARE offers ideas on resisting substance abuse by providing accurate information on drugs, alcohol and tobacco; teaching peer pressure resistance techniques; and offering alternative ideas to drug use.

The sixth graders completed this 17-week program under the direction of Sgt. Rachelle Arrington, noncommissioned officer in charge of DARE for the Military Police Activity.

Capt. Walter Jackson is chief of the DARE program for the Military Police Activity.

As part of the DARE graduation program, Walter Watkins performed his original rap song "If Drugs Could Talk," and the following students read personal commitment essays about what the program had taught them about the dangers of drug abuse: Xavier Bennett, Casi Gaines, Sheena Hubbard, Erika Riggs, Elvis Colon, Linda Galaviz, Anthony Mooney and Larry Shingler.

Sgt. Rachelle Arrington of the Military Police Activity looks over awards and discusses drug abuse resistance techniques with Anthony Mooney and Casi Gaines.

The students spoke about their resolve to "say no and walk away" if offered drugs and the need for a support system at home or with friends to resist the peer pressure associated with drug use. One student said, "I want to live the life others couldn't because of drugs," and another proclaimed, "I want a future. I want to die of natural causes."

Speaking of the need to serve as a role model, another said, "My sister copies everything I do. If she sees me doing drugs, she will do them, too."

All DARE graduates received awards from Glenn Hughes, assistant principal at Faith School.

VARIOUS VOICES

Why do you think teen smoking is on the rise and what can be done to curb it?

Sgt. Rose Smalls, 498th Medical Company — "Peer pressure; they see someone else do it and they think it's cool. It's a choice they have to make."

Sgt. Angel Martinez, Company B, School of the Americas — "Because they're influenced by their friends and they see their parents smoke. You just can't let them get started. Communication is important."

Gladys Johnson, family member— "The reason they're doing it is curiosity and advertising. They can buy them when they're young so it should be more strict when it comes to age requirements."

Sgt. 1st Class David Ocasio, Bradley Fighting Vehicle, New Equipment Training Team, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment— "It's society and values ... people don't have any priorities. Smoking awareness should be increased and cigarette taxes should be higher."

Lisa Jones, family member — "The television and media expose us to it and makes it look cool. They should stop selling it or enforce the age limit."

Joe Camel is my hero ... NOT!

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

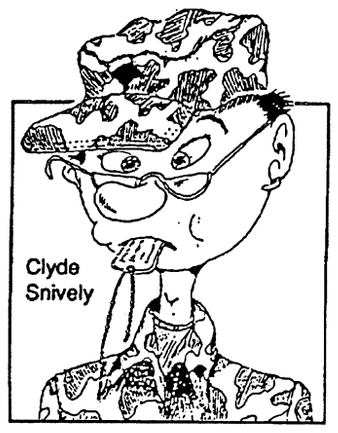
commentary

Joe Camel is my hero ... NOT! If teens idolize Joe Camel like the antismokers say they do, then teens are a lot dumber than I ever gave them credit for. Even in my teen-hood days.

Who wants to idolize some guy with big camel lips ... obviously a mutant result of dangling cigarettes from them.

Maybe I can see the dark glasses; teens like to hide their eyes so you won't know what they're looking at ... they might be looking at you ... but that's about as far as it goes.

Don't teens like to look sharp? Look at Joe's hair-do. I bet he's got split ends. There's no life, no color in his hair either and above all, it's frizzy ... just like a camel's.



I bet it stinks too ... just like a camel's.

No, I can't believe teens are flocking to cigarettes because of some dromedary that puffs a weed.

They start smoking because some high school idol smokes and they want to be cool, just like the idol ... be the idol a sports star, cheerleader or gang leader.

Then guess what. They keep on smoking because cigarettes contain nicotine. And nicotine is a narcotic. It's addictive.

Some people, with strong willpower, can kick the habit, just like some can kick the cocaine habit, the marijuana habit and even the heroin habit.

But it ain't easy, and unless the smoker is highly motivated and gets lots of support, the smoker's going to keep on smoking because he likes it, and he's addicted.

He'll keep on smoking even as smoker's lines develop around the lips, causing a premature aging look. He'll keep on smoking even as lines around his eyes increase from all the squinting he does as smoke curls up his face and into his eyes. And he'll even keep smoking as he gets emphysema and lung cancer. Keep right on until he dies.

The smoker will smoke in closed cars next to children who are forced to breathe the acrid air. Pregnant women will poison their unborn children as they continue to smoke.

Yes, I despise the smell of cigarette smoke. I hate to smell it in my hair and in my clothes.

Do I hate smokers? No, just their habits.

Is there a place in this world for smokers and nonsmokers?

Probably. But only if smokers wouldn't exhale.

Hey, I've got the answer...how about a five-day waiting period before being allowed to purchase cigarettes?

dial 545-boss

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for soldiers to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere. While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies established to provide assistance, the line offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders.

The Bayonet features some of the calls that may benefit other members of the Fort Benning community.

☎ Call: On Jan. 1, the post laundry facility increased prices up to 30 percent without notification. I do not understand why service members receive only a 2 percent pay raise and laundry prices increase 30 percent. I would like to know why.

Supply and Services Division response:

The post laundry contract is administered by the Directorate of Contracting at Fort Rucker, Ala. The contracting officer negotiated the price increases to include cash bundle rates with the contractor without any input from Fort Benning.

A new contract for 1995 will ensure representation of Fort Benning soldiers and the lowest possible prices.

☎ Call: I would like to know why active duty personnel cannot hunt on both sides (Alabama and Georgia) with either state license.

Military Police Activity response:

The states of Alabama and Georgia allow soldiers to hunt on the reservation with a resident hunting license issued from either state.

Hunting regulations require hunters who have a Georgia hunting license to tag the carcass of the deer hunted on the Alabama side of the post with a tag from the Georgia Big Game license.

The Georgia Big Game tag is no longer valid after the Georgia hunting season ends, which is before the Alabama hunting season ends.

Therefore, if you kill a deer in Alabama, you no longer have a valid Georgia Big Game tag to place on the deer that would allow you to bring the deer into Georgia.

To avoid this from happening and preventing soldiers from losing their hunting privileges and possibly some other disciplinary actions, the commanding general's Natural Resource Advisory Council recommended that the Alabama side of the installation be closed for hunting with a Georgia license at the same time as the Georgia side.

The decision was made to prevent hunters from accidentally violating Georgia state hunting laws and subjecting themselves to fines and administrative sanctions.

☎ Call: I called Dental Clinic and was told it will no longer provide dental service for my child.

My son is in need of dental treatment per school officials.

Bernheim Clinic told me I was not allowed dental care except for emergencies.

My husband does not qualify for the Delta Dental Plan since he is due to get out of the Army in October. He has not re-enlisted yet.

I am caught in the middle. Please advise.

Bernheim Dental Clinic response:

The DDP policy had recently changed allowing patients who are eligible but not enrolled to be treated on a space-available basis. The clinic's front desk personnel were not clear on this policy and have been subsequently re-advised as to the care availability for patients not enrolled.

The caller was advised to report to Bernheim Dental Clinic with her son for treatment on a space-available basis. She realized that active duty patients will be seen before any other patients other than true emergencies.

☎ Call: I am upset because the post cable company disconnects my cable continuously and then charges me for the days that it is off.

My bills are paid on time but I have to take receipts in to the company to prove payment. This has happened repeatedly since we moved here in May.

Also, many of my neighbors are having this same difficulty and they would like to see something done about this.

Your assistance is appreciated.

Directorate of Community Activities response:

CVI will give the caller a $3 credit on her next bill for any interruption in service.

Anyone experiencing this problem should report it to the CVI manager.

Commanding general promotes National Nutrition Month on post

The importance of nutrition and fitness is substantiated and well known for enhancing wellness.

National Nutrition Month is a worthy effort to increase nutrition awareness.

Along with millions of Americans, the military community has the opportunity to increase nutrition awareness in order to make healthy food choices.

During the month of March, good nutrition is promoted throughout the country.

This year's theme, "Nutrition Fuels Fitness: Eat Right America," emphasizes that food is the fuel that enables the body to function as a finely tuned machine.

It is time to examine our eating habits and improve nutrition practices with information about healthy food choices.

I strongly urge all members of the Fort Benning community to take advantage of the many nutrition education opportunities available during National Nutrition Month.

Let's make an extra effort to "Eat Right America!"

The Garrison Commander praised Fort Benning school children for their visionary ideas toward conservation efforts at an Arbor Day Celebration Feb. 25.

Col. Richard L. Rutledge congratulated winners in the White School Arbor Day essay contest and spoke about the need for conservation and care of the environment.

As he traced the history of Arbor Day, a tradition based on concern for soil management and conservation, he said Fort Benning has "a firm commitment to correctly manage the environment of our great tri-community area."

He encouraged the children to continue adding their ideas to those voiced by other conservationists so they can make a difference in their local community.

"You are the catalysts for greatness," he told the children, their families and visitors at the outdoor assembly near the grounds of White School.

Winners in the essay contest, which was coordinated by second-grade teacher Barbara Proctor, are: Johnny Miller, second grade; Caitlin Burley, third grade; Jordan Hudson, fourth grade; and Reneka Armstrong, fifth grade.

The students read their poems and essays to the assembly, then assisted Rutledge with the ceremonial planting of an oak sapling.

Post gears up once again for ACOE finals

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

Fort Benning is gearing up once again for competition in the Army Community of Excellence finals.

The yearly event, sponsored by the Department of Defense, awards $1 million to the best large, medium and small Army post both in and outside the continental United States.

Criteria for winning the award is based on 15 functional areas and judged by several military and civilian representatives from the Department of the Army.

So far this year, Fort Benning has been nominated by the Training and Doctrine Command and has gone on to beat 43 other installations to become one of 13 finalists at the Department of the Army level.

The ACOE team will start evaluating Fort Benning the week of April 3, the last of the 13 installations to be judged.

Last year, Fort Benning won as best large installation in the continental United States and collected a $1 million award.

Post officials hope to go one step further this year and win not only in the large installation category, but also claim the title of best installation in the world, which includes an award of $1.5 million.

Other competitors in the large category this year include Fort Sill, Okla., and Fort Campbell, Ky.

"The pursuit of excellence, that is what it's all about," said Sarah McLaney, Fort Benning ACOE coordinator.

She said that she hopes that personnel working and living on post see the ACOE as a positive program, a time to show off what's good about Fort Benning.

"It's people caring about people, pride and teamwork," she said, "not just painting rocks."

The evaluation team from Washington will not be looking for negative things about the post, but instead trying to discover examples of excellence, McLaney said.

The ACOE team will look at various programs, services and facilities during its five-day visit including the Self-Help, Total Army Quality and BOSS programs.

Team members will also visit with troops in their barracks, at motor pools and in dining facilities.

The money won in last year's competition has already been put to work around post. Areas receiving money include post recreation centers, gymnasiums and playgrounds.

Funds will also be used for improvements at Soldiers' Plaza and to extend the Columbus Riverwalk Recreation Trail onto Fort Benning.

Ideas on how to spend the money came from Fort Benning personnel and family members, who were asked to submit wish lists last year.

All funds will be used to improve community and customer services, according to McLaney, and to improve the quality of life for soldiers, their families and the civilian work force.

Winners of the Community of Excellence awards will be announced in late April.

Spring Cleanup to help prepare for ACOE evaluation

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

As part of the preparation for the Community of Excellence evaluation, Fort Benning will conduct a "Spring Cleanup" March 28 to April 1.

"Spring is the time to go outdoors and find things that need fixing," said Post Command Sgt. Maj. William H. Acebes about the cleanup effort.

While the appearance of the post is not a specified area to be judged during the Community of Excellence evaluation, it still plays a large indirect role, according to Acebes. "Adding a complementary landscape to the other 15 areas (that will be judged) can only help," he said.

Sprucing up will occur in the housing, unit and organization areas to improve their overall appearance.

Special unit details will work during the cleanup to help remove large amounts of debris and recyclable materials.

Quarters occupants can contribute to the effort by raking and edging their yards. The U-Do-It section of Self-Help has materials like pine straw and fertilizer available to help with maintenance around quarters and buildings.

Self-Help officials can also answer questions on how to care for lawns and give advice on landscaping.

Women struggled throughout history to open doors

Women as leaders in politics, education, military establish pathways for new generations

By Richard A. Franks
Equal Opportunity Office

The theme of the 1994 Women's History Month is "Women's History in Every Generation, Action Frees our Dreams."

If we define a generation as a period of time between that of when the parents are born to that of when their children are born, more than 20 generations have passed since the colonial period, and quite obviously hundreds before colonial time.

Throughout these generations, the actions of many courageous women have opened pathways for coming generations. The concept of a dream is by far too arbitrary and is dependent on invariant independence.

Many groups in today's society are still trying to determine the definition of "equal opportunity." The concept "equal opportunity" has been a dream for many groups in America. It is by far our duty as both women and men to create and establish a more egalitarian society.

Today, more areas of professional development are open to women than ever before. Nevertheless, there are still obvious discrepancies in policy as it relates to gender.

This year's theme recognizes the heroic and tragic efforts made by women in their struggle to open the doors for women of the future.

Distinguished women contributors to our history who through action freed the dreams for generations to follow are as follows:

Activists

Mary Ellen "Mammy" Pleasant (c.1814-1904): Born a slave and sold to a Northern family, she married a wealthy abolitionist who financed her daring efforts to help blacks escape slavery through the Underground Railroad. In 1852, she moved to San Francisco where she opened several small businesses for black employment.

Mary Harris "Mother" Jones (1830-1890): "Mother" Jones began as a seamstress; later she became a teacher. At the age of 50, primarily concerned with the plight of young children working in the textile mills, she became a labor organizer. She traveled constantly, often living without a permanent home or income. Jones gained the attention of President Theodore Roosevelt by organizing a march of child mill workers from Pennsylvania to his home on Long Island.

Sarah Winnemuca (1844-1891): The daughter of a Paiute Indian chief from Nevada, Winnemuca was later named chief in her own right. She spent her life calling public attention to the terrible treatment of Indians under U.S. government policies. She wrote, traveled the country and lobbied congress to improve the reservation that they had been forced to occupy. As a result of her work, Congress eventually approved a grant of land in Nevada for their use.

Rose Schneiderman (1882-1972): As a Russian-Jewish immigrant working in the New York garment industry, Schneiderman realized workers must band together to incite change in the working conditions of the time. In 1908, she became an organizer for the Women's Trade Union League. In 1928, she became the WTUL's president a — position she held for 20 years. She also served on the Labor Advisory Board of President Franklin D. Roosevelt's National Recovery Administration and was a founding member of the American Civil Liberties Union.

Eleanor Roosevelt (1884-1962): Eleanor became known as "The First Lady of the World" because of her world travels and international humanitarian work. She traveled throughout the country providing her husband, the president, with valuable information about the needs and concerns of the American people. Later she served as a delegate to the United Nations working tirelessly, to pass the Declaration of Human Rights. In 1961, she was appointed by President John F. Kennedy to chair the U.S. Commission on the Status of Women.

Jovita Idar (1885-1946): As a journalist in Texas, Idar wrote about the problems of Mexican Americans. In 1911, she and her family organized a large educational and cultural conference, el Primer Congreso Mexicanisto (First Mexican Congress).

Pauli Murray (1910-1985): The Reverend Dr. Pauli Murray was the first black American woman to be ordained as an Episcopal priest. Murray earned three law degrees. A civil rights activist from the early 1940s, she authored many important legal briefs on behalf of women's rights.

Politics

In 1848, Lucretia Mott and Elizabeth Stanton organized the first women's rights meeting.

In 1916, Jeanette Rankin became the first female elected to the U.S. House of Representatives.

In 1922, Rebecca Felton became the first female senator.

In 1932, Francis Perkins became the first woman cabinet secretary when she was appointed as the secretary of Labor.

In 1972, Shirley Chisholm was the first woman to run for president.

In 1981, Sandra Day O'Connor was the first female to be appointed to the U.S. Supreme Court,

In 1984, Geraldine Ferraro became the first woman to win the nomination for vice presidency on a major party ticket.

Education

Emma Willana established the Troy Female Seminary in 1821. It became the first institution providing full academic high school education.

In 1849, Elizabeth Blackswell became the first female to graduate from an established medical school

In 1870, Annabella Mansfield became the first female admitted to the practice of law.

Military participation

Although the official history of women in the military began in 1901 with the establishment of the Army Nurse Corps, women have served in the military in every war.

Margret Corbin took her husband's place after he was killed at the Battle of Fort Washington during the Revolutionary War.

Deborah Simpson and other women masqueraded as male soldiers during the Revolutionary War; many more served the Continental Army as cooks and nurses.

During the Civil War, many women volunteered as nurses with both Confederate and Union forces.

- Clara Barton, a nurse, founded the American Red Cross.
- Mary Tepe and Anna Etherridge, were awarded the Keamey Cross for bravery at the Battle of Chancellorsville.
- Sally Thompkins was commissioned as a captain for the Confederacy by Jefferson Davis.
- Belle Boyd, Rose O'Neal Greenhow and Pauline Cushman served as spies.
- In 1863, Harriet Tubman led a raid up the Combahee River in South Carolina, destroying millions of dollars of Confederate property and freeing more man 700 slaves.

In 1865, Dr. Mary Walker, after becoming the first female surgeon in the Army, was awarded the Medal of Honor for bravery in war.

In 1970, Women's Army Corps Director Col. Elizabeth Hoisington and Army Nurses Corps Chief Col. Anna Mae Hays were promoted to brigadier general, becoming the first women to achieve flag rank in the U.S. armed forces.

In 1974, two officers became the first women to graduate from flight school at Fort Rucker, Ala.

In 1980, the first female cadets graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y.

In 1989, Capt. Linda Bray of the Fort Benning Military Police Activity is recognized as the first woman to command troops in combat.

Actions taken by women throughout American history have undoubtedly freed the dreams for more women to pass through the stigmatizing misconceptions and stereotypes. Such actions have allowed more firsts in American history by confronting false perceptions of women.

I believe the swaying question is "Why are the dreams of women still being deferred?"

CG proclaims Women's History Month

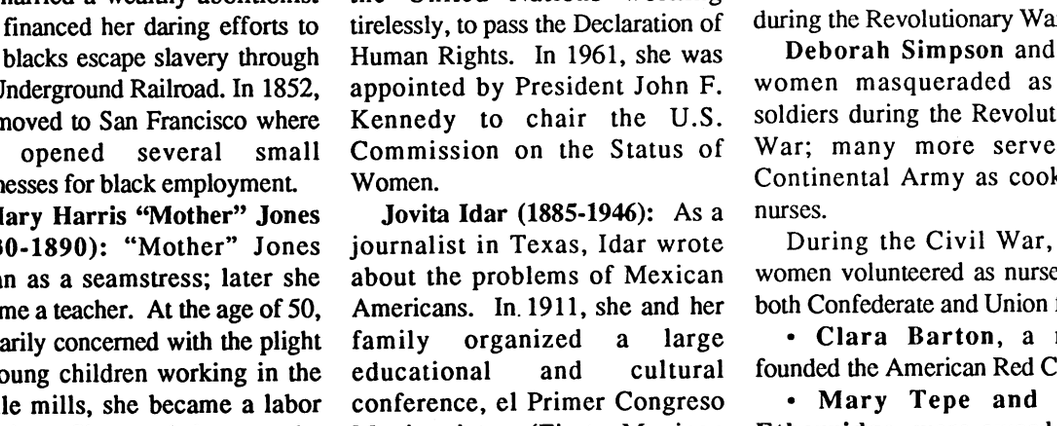
In recognition of the numerous contributions of women to every aspect of our nation, the month of March is proclaimed "Women's History Month." Public Law 100-9, enacted in 1987, designated March as National Women's History Month.

This year's theme, "Women's History in Every Generation, Action Frees our Dreams," reflects the strength, diversity and creativity of military and civilian women who have served our country. Their determination and successes are an inspiration for all of us.

Women's strength to endure the hardships of establishing a new country, the stresses of war and the struggle for equal rights, pay and recognition stands as a monument for all to admire

Their vision to see what America can be, a land where all can rise to their highest potential, certainly justifies this year's theme.



I encourage all personnel at this installation and in surrounding communities to join with fellow soldiers and citizens in enjoying the activities here at Fort Benning during "Women's History Month 1994.

Illegal dump sites are scattered throughout the training areas and woods of Fort Benning. Some discarded materials may pose health and environmental threats.

Dump sites 'trash' post training areas

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

The woods and fields of Fort Benning are home to thousands of species of wildlife, including some endangered species. They also house, on a regular basis, various "species" of infantry soldiers in training or on field exercises.

This is the function of these areas; they were designed by nature and the U.S. Army to do just those things.

What the woods were not designed to do is store junk. But a walk through the wilderness areas of Fort Benning will reveal hundreds of illegal dump sites, filled with everything from child safety seats to old refrigerators to treadless tires.

Command Sgt. Maj. Riley Miller, Infantry School command sergeant major, said he thinks the dump sites indicate a change has occurred since his days in training.

"When I was a young soldier, a precombat check always included a check for trash bags," he said. "It was a source of pride to see who could carry the most trash out after an exercise, and to leave an area in better shape than it was when we got there."

Miller said littering isn't confined to the woods, although it may be most damaging there, as toxic materials — such as lead paint or freon in old refrigerators — may be left to decay without anyone being aware they are there.

Littering is also a problem on Main Post, Miller said, as indicated by the hours soldiers spend on police call every week.

"To keep the post clean," he said, "we have to pull soldiers from training and send them to go pick up other people's trash."

What makes this even worse, Miller said, is those "other people" are often other soldiers.

"If you drive down the road between the main gates and the welcome center in the morning," Miller said, "it's clean. Drive through there after lunch, and you'll find all kinds of litter — cups and wrappers soldiers have thrown out of their vehicles on their way back to work."

Command Sgt. Maj. William H. Acebes, post command sergeant major, said the illegal dump sites and main post littering carry hazards beyond the eyesores they create.

"A lot of the objects people throw in the woods can threaten the environment," Acebes said, "either by killing off — poisoning — the wildlife or by seeping into the ground, killing plants and contaminating the soil and water."

Illegal dumping can also threaten health, Acebes said.

"I walked up on a dump once that was full of syringes and hypodermic needles," he said. "Obviously, with AIDS a concern, that would be a danger to any soldier sent to clean up the area."

Although fines can be charged to those who are caught dumping trash illegally, it seems likely that most people who throw their trash into the woods will never be caught.

"It's up to the individual," Miller said. "If you think about what you're doing, you won't do it. We need to take pride in this post, take pride in the land and take care of it."

Abuse: Seminar begins Thursday

The target audience includes social workers, law enforcement, attorneys, mental health professionals, physicians, nurses, school counselors and principals.

Six hours of continuing education credit are available for this session.

The final session March 18 at the Columbus Iron Works Convention and Trade Center will address the key signs and indicators of all forms of child abuse for all ages including emotional, behavioral, social and physical factors.

Matthews will also lead this session, which is targeted toward educators, counselors, para-professionals and after-school program staff.

To register, or for more information, call Welch at 545-6969 or 545-3344.

This three-part seminar is offered by Fort Benning and the University of Georgia in cooperation with Columbus Regional Chartered Council on Child Abuse, Columbus Police Department, Child Advocacy Center, the Muscogee Country Sheriff's department, school system and Department of Family and Child Services, Columbus Coalition for Youth and children, Family Enrichment Services, the District Attorney of the Chattahoochee Judicial Circuit, and Juvenile Court of the Columbus Consolidated Government.

Insurance rates to increase

Department of Veterans Affairs

The Department of Veterans Affairs has announced the premium rate for Servicemen's Group Life Insurance will increase from 8 to 9 cents for each $1,000 of coverage, beginning July 1.

The change means that the monthly premium for a service-member with the maximum SGLI coverage of $200,000 will increase from $16 to $18.

The increase is the first for SGLI since July 1, 1984, when the rate was reduced from 11.6 cents per month per $1,000 of coverage to the current 8-cent level because reserves set aside to ensure the nonprofit program's solvency had developed a surplus beyond what was required.

VA reduced the premium below the break-even rate to reduce the surplus and pass program savings on to insured servicemembers.

A total of 2.8 million soldiers carry more than $438 billion in SGLI coverage. More than half take the maximum $200,000 in coverage, and 40 percent have the basic $100,000 in coverage.

Servicemembers insured by SGLI are guaranteed the right to convert their coverage to Veterans Group Life Insurance when they separate from service.

AG aims high

Office won't rest on past honors, seeks constant improvement

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

An unceasing commitment to improvement has made Fort Benning's Adjutant General's Office the best in the Army in 1992 and the best in Training and Doctrine Command in 1993.

Adjutant General Jim Brinson said he wants to show the Army-level Communities of Excellence team that AG doesn't intend to rest on its past honors.

"When you believe in Total Army Quality, you focus on constant improvement," Brinson said. "At AG, our goal is to never tread water. We seek continual progress."

Some of the recent accomplishments at AG include:

• The development of personnel automation systems such as the Enhanced Inprocessing System and the AG Management Support System. EIP has reduced the inprocessing of soldiers to an average of two days with an average reduction of waiting times from three hours to 15 minutes. Both systems are scheduled for adoption throughout TRADOC in 1995.

• The creation of an installation orientation tour that acquaints new soldiers and their families with post Morale Welfare and Recreation facilities, unit locations and housing areas. In addition, a liaison officer is stationed at the Columbus Airport 24 hours a day to greet newly arriving soldiers and answer their questions; also the commanding general personally conducts a welcoming briefing to all newly assigned soldiers.

"We sincerely believe that the first impression a soldier gets of his or her new duty station sets the tone for the entire tour of duty," Brinson said. "We do everything we can to welcome soldiers and meet their needs in a timely, professional manner."

• The introduction of more soldier readiness elements into the inprocessing procedure so that soldiers can be identified as deployable or nondeployable before they even get to their units; also the unit commander is notified.

• The implementation of a joint project with the U.S. Army Physical Fitness School for a retiree physical fitness program that is the first in the Department of Defense. A pilot program with nearly 40 participants has already been conducted.

"Our services to retirees are greatly appreciated," Brinson said. "Our Retirement Services Office features one-stop service that has eliminated waiting time and greatly simplified the retirement process. Our recent retiree open house, which was a cooperative effort with Martin Army Community Hospital, devoted two days to health care and physical exams and was attended by 1,000 retirees — our best attendance ever."

• Expansion of the Army Career and Alumni Program to include many services that are the first in DoD. Through ACAP, soldiers can learn job-seeking skills, get information on thousands of college programs nationwide and even receive free job retraining, if qualified.

"Taking care of customers in the best way possible and making the best better are principles AG personnel live by every day," he said.

Brinson said AG personnel truly look forward to the visit by the ACOE team.

"ACOE is great because it gives us a chance to tell people about the things we do well," he said. "It's a chance to celebrate excellence and we look forward to it."

Soldiers renovate chapel

By Don Brown
11th Infantry Regiment

The 11th Infantry Regiment has recently completed a Self Help/U-Do-It project that has improved the quality of life for soldiers and families of the 11th Infantry Regiment and the Fort Benning community.

The renovation of the Regimental Road Chapel, Building 2595, was completed by repair and utility soldiers assigned to the 11th Infantry Regiment.

The project required more than 1,700 workhours by these soldiers and saved the government an estimated $14,950.

To complete the project, soldiers had to scrape and sand exterior and interior woodwork followed by priming and painting.

Window panes had to be repaired and replaced. The vinyl siding on the chapel had to be pressure washed.

The shrubbery and flowers around the chapel were also part of the project to beautify the chapel. The interior of the chapel required extensive repair.

Walls were repainted, carpets steam cleaned and a nursery now occupies one of the former offices so parents can attend services while their children are supervised.

This project could not have been completed without the help of the Self-Help Branch of Directorate of Public Works.

The DPW provided expertise and guidance throughout the project to renovate the chapel.

The impact this renovation has had on the soldiers and families is evident in the attendance at each service.

Family members residing in Indianhead Terrace now have a chapel close to home where they can worship.

The hours of worship are Protestant, 9 a.m., Sunday, and Catholic, 10:30 a.m. Sunday.

ACAP plans employment seminar

Army Career and Alumni Program

A seminar about federal employment will be March 24 from 8 to 10 a.m. in Infantry Hall, Classroom 30.

Sponsored by the Army Career and Alumni Program and the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, the seminar is designed to provide information on the opportunities of federal employment with primary emphasis on Fort Benning.

Available to soldiers who are retiring from the military and family members, the seminar will cover the basics of how the federal employment system functions, the various agencies, where to find job announcements and veteran's preference. Participants will be given a detailed explanation of the federal employment application, Standard Form 171.

James Fleming, a 20-year veteran of the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, and Cathy Murray, an instructor with Conwal Inc. will be available to answer questions.

Murray assists the Georgia Department of Labor with the ACAP Transition Assistance Program workshop, and she conducts personal assessments Thursday and Friday of each week from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the ACAP office in Soldiers' Plaza. The assessments include instruction in the use of an automated Standard Form 171.

To obtain an appointment, call 545-7009, 545-4913 or 545-4892 and ask for Judy McKibben or stop by Building 2617 in Soldiers' Plaza.

Army Career and Alumni Program

Here are some of the most frequently asked questions about the Army Career and Alumni Program. The answers to these questions reflect the most current policies and positions.

For more information about ACAP — call 545-4892 or 545-4902 or stop by Building 2617.

What is ACAP?

The Army Career and Alumni Program is designed to provide services and counseling to assure soldiers, Department of Army civilians and family members quality transition from military life to civilian life.

What services are provided?

Every individual who visits ACAP first receives a needs assessment and an individual transition plan. Based on this appraisal, clients are then sent to the appropriate service providers who will assist them in their transition.

If they need job assistance, they will be sent to the Job Assistance Center where they will receive job search workshops and seminars, individual assistance and counseling, assistance with writing resumes and cover letters, and access to various job data base — including the Army Employer and Alumni Network.

Rock Steady captures basketball crown 60-46

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

There's a new champion on Fort Benning. The 1994 U.S. Army Infantry Center basketball tournament came to a conclusion Feb. 24 at Audie Murphy Fitness Center with the consolation game and championship matchup on tap.

Rock Steady of the 608th Ordnance Company, 13th Combat Support Battalion, captured the crown with a 60-46 thumping of the Gentlemen of Company B, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, in the final game of the season.

Rock Steady used the height of center Marvin Lancaster (19 points) and forward Rodney Mitchell (8 points) to pound the ball inside time and time again and the deadly outside shooting of guard Corey Long (17 points) and forward James McClain (12 points) to dominate the ballgame from start to finish.

Up by 12 points at the break 31-19, Rock Steady pushed the lead to as many as 15 points midway through the half. The Gentlemen made a run late in the game and at one point had the lead down to 7 points at 47-40 on the inside work of center Shawn Genal who led the Gentlemen with 26 points for game high honors.

Point guard Alphonso Thomas contributed 13 points for the Gentlemen, but was stopped for most of the game from penetrating and dishing off to his teammates by the Rock Steady defense.

"It was a really tough game; they were really tough inside. We had a hard time against their interior defense," said forward William Schustrom. "I thought we did pretty well considering two of us had played with the team for only two games."

The Gentlemen were also hampered by the fact they only had five players for the entire game and Rock Steady coach Willie Smith capitalized on that point using his bench to wear down the Gentlemen.

"Our bread and butter all season has been to go down inside to Lancaster and Mitchell," said Smith. "With the Gentlemen having only five players we knew we could use the inside to our advantage. The only problem we had was trying to control their big man (Genal) he played a helluva ballgame."

For Rock Steady, this championship is sweeter than most, because it looked for awhile like they would not even play ball this season.

A six-month stay in Somalia put all thoughts of playing basketball on hold and when they returned to Fort Benning the season was almost over.

"We never had a chance to get into the shape we're supposed to be in," said Long. "We like to play a running game. These guys here were much tougher because they play basic basketball; everybody else tried to get into a running game with us."

"I'm just glad we were able to hold our composure when times got hard; we just pulled it out." said Long.

For the second year in a row, the champion has come from the 13th Corps Support Battalion; last year's winner was from Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment.

In the consolation game, the Military Police Activity downed the Hit Squad of the 598th Maintenance Company 75-56 for third place in the tournament.

Orlando Edwards led all scorers with 24 points for MPA. Teammate Kelvin Anderson added 14 and Tommy Gilcrest popped in 10. Jarmette Davis and Thomas Colburn each had 8 points rounding out the scoring for MPA.

The Hit Squad was led by Ronald James with 18 points and Bobby Matthews and Jomo Daniels each with 10 points.

MPA handcuffed the Hit Squad in the second half, taking leads of as many as 21 points midway through the half and cruised to the final score of 75-56.

Mountain Ranger run May 21

5th Ranger Training Battalion

The Officers' Association, with volunteers from the 5th Ranger Training Battalion at Camp Frank D. Merrill in Dahlonega, Ga., is hosting the sixth annual Mountain Rangers Run May 21.

Team competition this year is in five-person teams, with the winning team receiving limited edition, numbered Mountain Ranger Coins in addition to trophies.

The 5th Ranger Training Battalion will be defending its undefeated winning record in the team event. Unit entry forms are available on request from Civil Affairs.

Limited billeting is available on a first-come, first-served basis. Units entering 30 or more runners can have their race T-shirts customized with their unit logo. Contact the Officers' Association for more information.

The race will start and finish on the main campus of North Georgia College in Dahlonega. The race is a nationally certified 10K course and is sanctioned by the U.S. Track and Field Association.

Awards will be given to the top male and female winners as well as the top three runners in each age group. Every runner will receive a T-shirt showing the skyline of Dahlonega.

Money raised by the run will be donated to the American Red Cross. The last race raised more than $2,300.

Between 250 to 500 runners from the surrounding counties as well as from out of state are expected to participate.

Also new this year is the participation in the 1994 Run and See Georgia Grand Prix program, a series of more than 70 races throughout the state that gets its more than 28,000 runners to travel around the state participating in quality running events while seeing some of the tourist attractions and cities in Georgia.

Cruise-matics outlast Huntsville 20-16

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Columbus Fort Benning Rugby Football Club Cruise-matics outlasted the Huntsville Rugby Football Club 20-16 at Stilwell Field on Fort Benning Saturday.

Huntsville jumped out to the early lead on a try by inside center Dan McColgan at the 19-minute mark of the first half. Huntsville missed the conversion leaving the Cruise-matics down 5-0.

The Cruise-matics wasted little time in tying up the match when scrum half Dave Fry took the ball on a line in at the Huntsville 2-meter line and pushed his way across for the try and a 5-5 tie.

Fullback Mace Oswald untied the match 8-5 at the 34-minute mark on a penalty kick giving the Cruisers their first lead of the day with less than six minutes to play in the half.

Huntsville tied the match 8-8 at the 38-minute mark of the first half on a penalty kick by fly half Danny Donovan. Huntsville had two chances to take the lead before tying the match, but Donovan couldn't convert on two penalty kicks before converting on his third kick in less than five minutes that tied the match going into the half.

The Cruise-matics reclaimed the lead early in the second half on Fry's second try of the day. On a Huntsville line in, Fry snatched the ball away from the Huntsville scrum half Mike Curtis and rambled to the end zone for a 13-8 advantage at the nine-minute mark of the second half.

Minutes later Huntsville cut the lead to 13-11 on Donovan's second penalty kick of the afternoon.

Cruise-matic inside center Lee Rysewyk gave the Cruisers their final try of the day when he scored on a feed from Fry at the Huntsville goal line. Oswald added the conversion for a 20-11 lead midway through the second half.

With time running out on Huntsville, Curtis cut the lead to 20-16 before the final whistle ended the match giving the Cruise-matics a hard-fought victory.

"They were older and more experienced than we were," said Cruise-matics coach Jim Muldoon. "Our guys held their own against a fine line from Huntsville. It was a very good match."

Columbus drops game 16-0 to Tallahassee

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Columbus Stars dropped their second straight road game Saturday night to the Tallahassee Tornados in Quincy, Fla., at Corey Field 16-0.

The loss dropped the Stars to 2-2 on the season and into third place behind the Tornados (3-1) and the Albany Warriors (4-0).

Three Stars turnovers led to Tornado scores in the second half after the Stars played even up football in the first half.

The Tornados dented the scoreboard on a 37-yard field goal off the foot of kicker Jay Bosant early in the third quarter to take the only lead they would need at 3-0.

A blocked Stars punt led to the Tornados first touchdown of the game. After taking over at the Stars 8-yard line, Tornado quarterback Jimmy Street hit receiver Jacob German on their first play from scrimmage for an 8-yard touchdown pass and a 10-0 Tornado advantage.

Stars quarterback Jeff McCurrie accounted for the final turnover when he threw an interception at the Tallahassee 40-yard line. Six plays later, Street found receiver Oliver Goshay for an 8-yard strike.

Terrance Perry blocked the extra-point attempt, leaving the Tornados up 16-0.

The Stars were thoroughly dominated giving up 130 yards on the ground and 165 yards in the air for 295 total yards while gaining only 122 total yards of offense.

On defense, the Crunch Bunch did its best with linebackers Perry, Thomas Bryant and Frank Lewis combining for 26 tackles and 15 assists. Cornerback Tim Sloan also had two interceptions for the Stars.

"This team needs to learn patience," said Stars head coach Tom Staton. "Our offense needs to learn that we don't have to go for the big strike every time we have the ball.

"If we had taken what they were giving us (the short pass underneath the defense), our offense could have moved the ball down the fied and we probably would have won the game," he said.

The Stars return home Saturday for a 2 p.m. start with the Vipers of Mobile, Ala., looking to right the listing ship after two hard-fought road losses.

Shooters to compete for Olympic slots

U.S. Olympic Shooting Center

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — Nearly 200 shooters from 31 nations have committed to compete for Gold Medals and 1996 Olympic country quota slots at the 1994 UIT World Cup USA April 17 to 23 at the Tommy G. Pool Shooting Range on post.

"We expect many more entries to roll in between now and April 17, but this is a terrific start," said Lones Wigger, U.S. Shooting Team director.

"We think this year's World Cup holds great appeal because it's in Georgia and near the 1996 Olympic shooting facility at Wolf Creek," he said. "I'm sure everyone will be writing that side trip into their schedules."

Notable entries this year include Slovenian rifle shooter Rajmond Debevec, a triple medalist last year, and Swedish pistol star Ragnar Skanaker, who won a gold and bronze at the '93 World Cup USA. Team USA, which led the medal count last year with a record three gold, five silver, and six bronze, will name its 55-member roster in mid-March.

Swimmer competes in state championship

Barracuda Youth Swim Team

A member of the Fort Benning Barracudas Youth Swim Team competed in the Georgia Swimming State Championships Feb. 18 to 20 at the Dynamo Swim Club in Atlanta.

Ruth Dubyel, representing the Fort Benning Barracudas, qualified and participated in the event along with more than 600 swimmers representing 25 teams from across the state.

All events were conducted using the preliminary and finals format similar to that used during the Olympics.

Dubyel competed in seven events qualifying for the finals in three events. In the 11- to 12-year-old age group for the state of Georgia, she finished eighth in the 50-yard backstroke, ninth in the 50-yard butterfly, and ninth in the 100-yard butterfly.

In the other four events, Dubyel qualified for the consolation finals finishing 18th in the 200-yard individual medley, 19th in the 100-yard backstroke and 20th in the 50-yard freestyle and the 100-yard individual medley.

Dubyel was recently named a State of Georgia Swimming All Star for her age group. She attended the All-Star Banquet in Atlanta Feb. 13.

She will next compete in all seven events at the Southeast Region Swim Championships March 17 to 20 in Greenville, S.C.

BASS club conducts tournament

Fort Benning BASS Club

The Fort Benning BASS Club conducted the second tournament of the year Feb. 19.

The launch site was the Hatchechubbee Ramp of Lake Walter F. George.

The fish size limit was 16 inches. The club fielded (watered) 10 boats with a total of 18 persons fishing. What started out as a cool morning turned into a day with the temperature in the 70s, clear skies and a bit windy. The water temperature ranged between 57 to 63 degrees.

Tournament results are:

- First place - Jack Tibb Jr.
- Second place - James Irvin
- Third place - Bob Billman
- Big Bass - James Irvin, 6 pounds and 11 ounces

Eighteen persons participated, and a total of 20 fish were caught and released alive to their environment for a total weight of 65 pounds and 12 ounces.

The Fort Benning BASS Club membership consists of active duty service members, retired service members and their family members and authorized Department of Defense civilians.

For more information about the club, call David Moore at 298-5955 or Steve Ward at 569-5705.

State park to host crappie tournament

Georgia Dept. of Natural Resources

Florence Marina State Park and Farmers State Bank invite fisherman of all ages out March 19 for their annual Crappie Tournament.

The tournament will begin at 7 a.m. and run until 4 p.m. Registration will be at the park boat ramp from 7 until 9 a.m.

Tournament rules will be given out at that time.

Everyone must register to be eligible for weigh in at 4 p.m. at the park boat ramp.

There is no entry fee, and trophies will be awarded to the winners for the largest fish by weight, oldest fisher, and the two largest stringers by weight.

Farmers State Bank of Lumpkin, Ga., is this year's tournament sponsor.

More information can be obtained by calling the park at (912) 838-4706 or (912) 838-4244. Participants can stop and pick up park passes.

Florence Marina State Park is owned and operated by the Georgia Department of Natural Resources and is located 16 miles west of Lumpkin, Ga., on Hwy. 39.

The park offers camping facilities, cottage rental, boat rental, tennis, miniature golf, picnic areas, and an interpretive center and a trading post.

hosts national prayer breakfast

By Jacqueline M. Feagin
USAIC Chaplains' Office

More than 500 people attended the Fort Benning annual National Prayer Breakfast at the Main NCO Club Feb. 25 at 6:50 a.m.

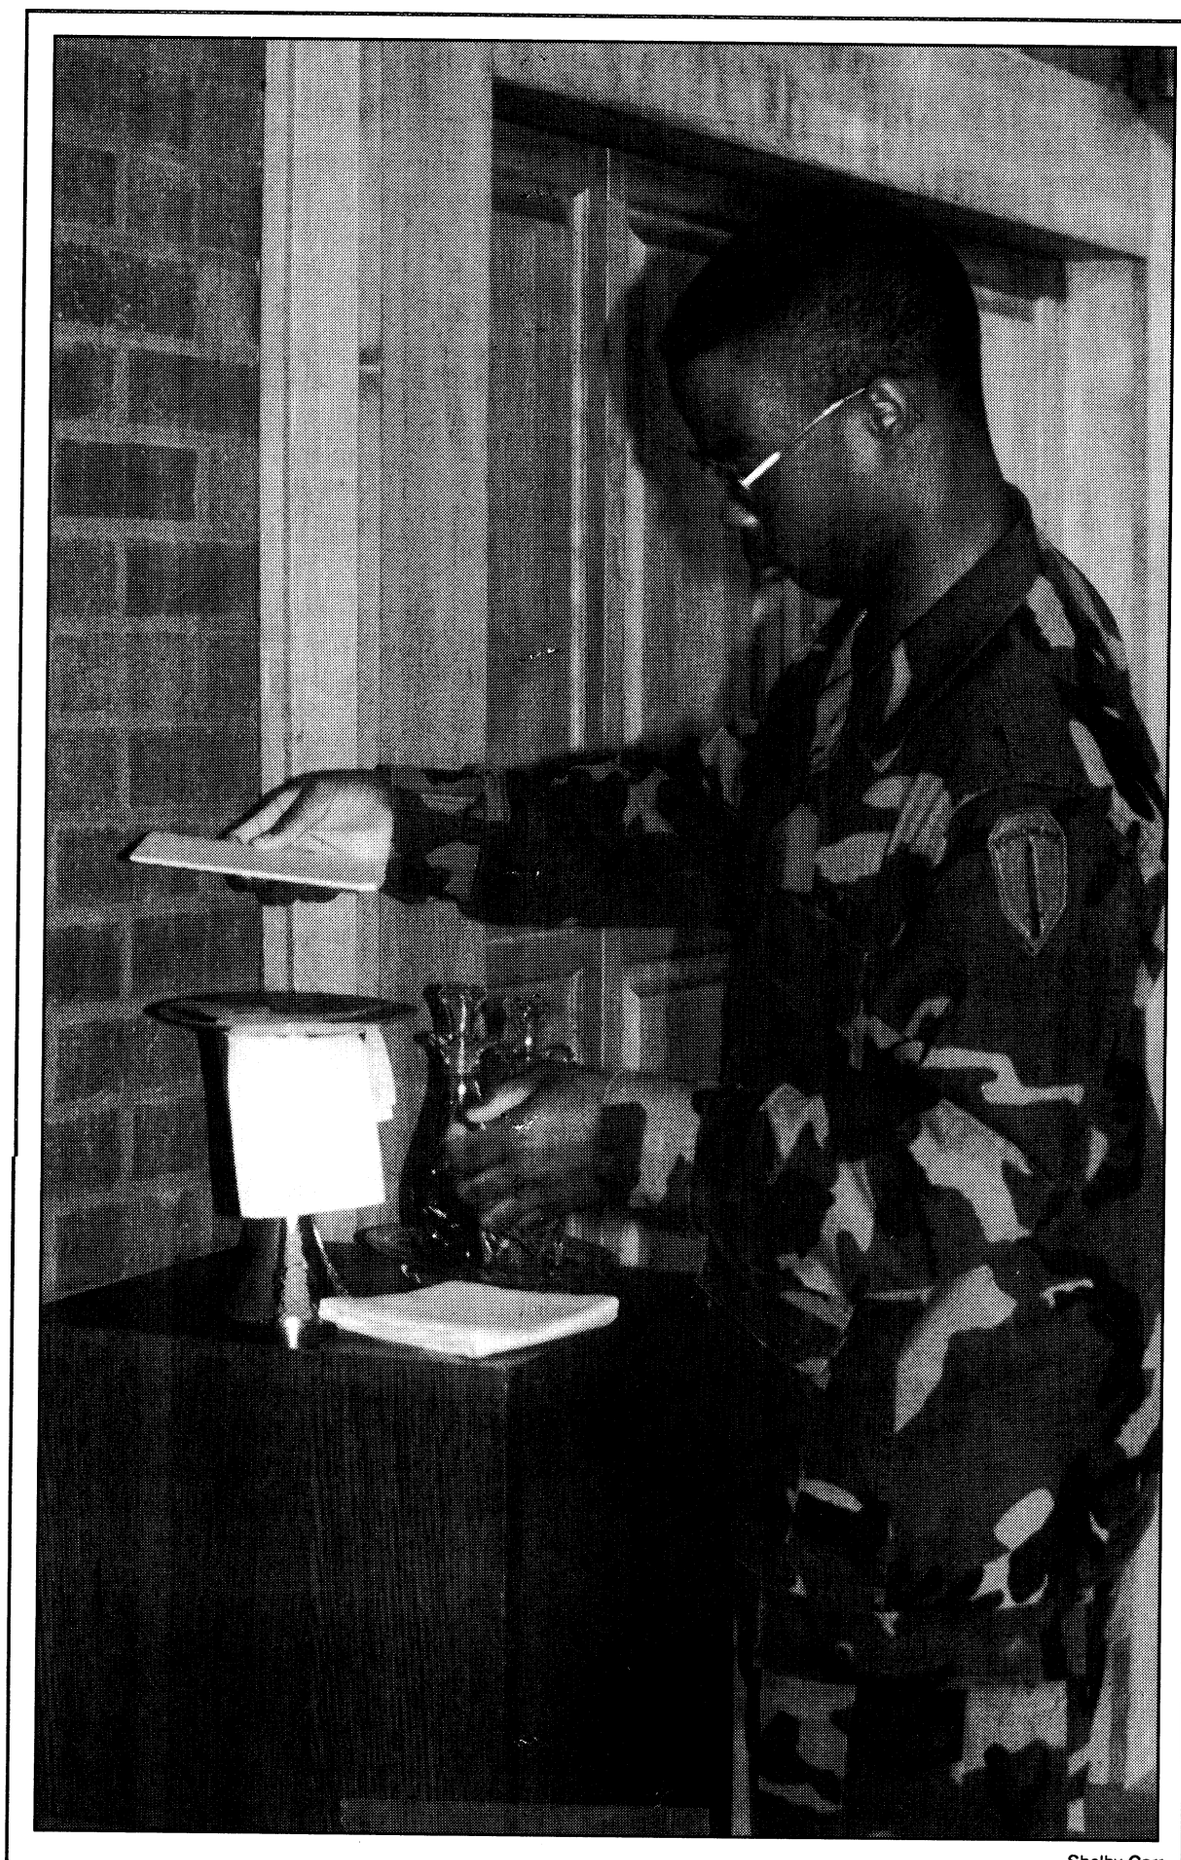
The prayer breakfast, conducted in accordance with the annual National Prayer Breakfast in Washington, D.C., was sponsored by the Unit Ministry Team.

It is designated as a time of spiritual reflection for post leadership and is a reminder of our country's roots.

The guest speaker for this year's post gathering was Chaplain (Col.) David P. Peterson, Forces Command chaplain, Fort McPherson, Ga.

Peterson entered active duty as a chaplain in November 1965.

In keeping with his theme from his last visit to Fort Benning, Peterson spoke of keeping family values based on the Judeo Christian heritage.



"Life is to be treated with reverence; life is a gift from God," he said. "Mankind is created in the image of God. We are all equal in his eyes."

Peterson, a native of South Dakota, received a master's degree in divinity from Covenant Theological Seminary in St. Louis, Mo., and a master of science degree in counseling and guidance from Long Island University, Brooklyn, N.Y.

In 1990, he was assigned as command staff chaplain for all Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force chaplains in the Persian Gulf.

Chaplain (Maj.) James Coindreau delivered the invocation, while Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, commanding general, welcomed the guest.

Col. Richard L. Rutledge, garrison commander, gave a reading from Psalm 111. Chaplain (Col.) Roy G. Plummer, staff chaplain, introduced the guest speaker. The event concluded with Chaplain (Capt.) Patricia Cote delivering the benediction.

Fishing trip leads to prayer, thanks

By John R. Houser
Martin Army Community Hospital

reflections

On a beautiful Saturday afternoon in January, I slipped my boat into the waters of Lake Harding. The wind was calm, the sun was shining and the temperature was in the middle 50s.

As I motored out to my favorite fishing spot, my mind suddenly was aware of the awesome magnificence of creation. The sun shimmering off the lake, the wild ducks noisily proclaiming their presence and the tranquility of a winter day on Lake Harding told me God is with us.

I found myself internally thanking him for the beautiful day, for life, for my family, for my profession, for my boat and for all the good ministry he has permitted me to perform while serving in the military as a chaplain.

For the next six hours I found myself in an active communication with the creator of this universe. I even found myself asking him to send some fish my way.

To this chaplain, this is what prayer is all about. Prayer is a key ingredient for one who is seeking personal success. It is active communication with the creator. It is a means for us to communicate our needs and wishes to the source that provides for all our needs.

From my tradition, prayer is at the very core of my spirituality.

Prayer benefits one spiritually, mentally and physically. Spiritually, prayer opens a channel for God to speak to his children, instructing and directing them in their conduct and standards of daily living.

Through prayer, one's spiritual senses focus so that the true meaning of life becomes more important than everyday physical blessings.

Mentally, prayer can aid people in their attitudes toward themselves and others. Prayer can give one a new perspective on daily matters.

Depression and mental illness recedes when one begins to pray and seek God's help with everyday successes and failures.

Physically, prayer can actively aid in the healing process of one's body. Prayer affects physical energy levels. More than once this chaplain sought God's help in completing a unit run.

Today, which is World Day of Prayer, let us reach out to our creator in prayer. His communication channel is always open.

Director of operations, training retires

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

The U.S. Army Infantry School's director of Operations and Training retired in a ceremony Feb. 25 on York Field.

The ceremony marked the end of 27 years in the Army for Col. Howard W. Crawford Jr., and recognized both he and his wife, Kathy, for their service.

During the ceremony, Crawford remembered some of the noncommissioned officers and officers he worked with during his career "who gave me the freedom and confidence to serve with honor," he said.

He thanked his family and friends for attending and said to his colleagues that he has "been proud to serve in your ranks and at this school."

"The realization that we are leaving the Army after 27 years has not set in yet," Crawford said, "but I am ready to begin a new career thanks to Bill Heard."

Deputy Commanding General Brig. Gen. Jack P. Nix Jr., said Crawford "has been our honest broker, making training to standard a watchword for infantry soldiers and leaders."

Nix recalled his first association with Crawford, serving as a sister battalion commander. "During that year of service together, I found (Crawford) a man of great character (and) a man who embodied the highest values of the officer corps.

"It was clear to me that (Crawford) epitomized the feelings of General Creighton Abrams, who said, 'Soldiers are not in the Army, they are the Army,' " Nix said.

As director of Operations and Training, Crawford oversaw the execution of 32 resident courses, more than 90 publications, the development of dozens of training devices and the conduct of operations in both the infantry School and Fort Benning, Nix said.

During Operation Desert Shield, Crawford helped design the program of instruction that trained 13,000 soldiers on their way to Desert Storm.

Crawford was commissioned a second lieutenant from Officer Candidate School here in 1968.

His past assignments include a variety of command and staff positions, and range from service as an adviser to the Vietnamese Army in II Corps to training officer for the 82nd Airborne Division.

More recently, he served as the first senior controller at the Joint Readiness Training Center at Little Rock Air Force Base, Ark., and as commander of the 2nd Battalion, 505th Parachute Infantry Regiment.

Crawford has a bachelor's degree in history from Columbus College and a master's degree in logistics management from the Florida Institute of Technology.

He has attended the U.S. Army Command and General Staff College, the British Army Staff College in Camberley, England, and the U.S. Army War College.

Crawford is a master parachutist and his awards include the Combat Infantryman Badge, Bronze Star, Defense Meritorious Service Medal and the Meritorious Service Medal.

Crawford and his wife have five children: Alyce, Claire, Michael, Kerry and Sarah.

Directorate of Community Activities

• Diana McMeekan, family child-care provider at Fort Benning since June 1992, has earned her Child Development Associate credential. CDA is a nationally recognized organization that promotes quality child care.

McMeekan completed activities with her children, written and oral testing, formal observation and compiled a personal resource file to gain the certificate.

Her activities showed proficiency in working with children ages infant through preschool. They covered all areas of a child's development including physical, social, emotional and mental.

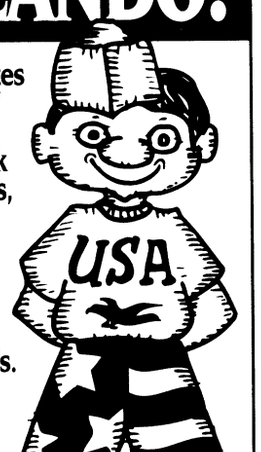
In addition to her work here, McMeekan had provided child care at Fort Bragg, N.C. Her husband is Staff Sgt. Bradley McMeekan of the 43rd Engineer Battalion, and they have three children: Brandie, Bradley and Chad.

• Cathy Burton recently placed second runner up in the Ms. Fitness U.S.A. 1994 National Finals.

Her placement qualifies her for the Ms. Fitness World competition, scheduled for later this month in Columbus, Ohio, and the Ms. Fitness World competition scheduled for Milan, Italy, in October.

Burton teaches aerobics on Tuesday and Thursday nights at the Officers' Club Fitness Center, where she is the facility personal trainer.

Burton has worked in the fitness industry for more than 13 years as both an instructor and personal trainer. She developed and implemented a health promotion program for the Department of Defense, U.S. Army and received the Department of Defense Achievement Award for her exceptional performance.



The Aerobics and Fitness Association of America certified Burton as an aerobic and step instructor. She is also an AFAA certified personal trainer. As a captain in the U.S. Army Reserve, Burton attended the Master Fitness School, where she was the honor graduate of her class.

community care

By Ken Franklin
Martin Army Community Hospital

Q: Where and how do you get treatment for temporomandibular joint disorder on Fort Benning? Is TMJ disorder considered a medical problem?

A: TMJ disorder is a medical problem usually treated by dentists or oral surgeons. It is unusual in that is a problem that overlaps medicine and dentistry.

When the joint between the lower jaw and the side of the skull is misaligned or malformed, the muscles of the head can become stretched and fatigued, causing significant headaches and jaw pain. The disorder can be mild and intermittent or can be severe.

A frustrating part of TMJ disorder is that it is difficult to truly "cure." Patients can receive very effective treatment (either through medication, injections or dental surgery), however, the problem can return several months later.

Dentists or oral surgeons normally treat patients with this problem, because they are most familiar with the anatomy of the teeth and jaw and have the most experience in examining, adjusting and injecting that part of the body.

At Fort Benning, the Dental Activity's dentists are authorized to treat active duty soldiers with TMJ disorder at no charge.

Family members and retirees with TMJ disorder must get care from civilian dentists, under the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services.

Notice that CHAMPUS, not Delta Dental Plan, pays for TMJ disorder treatment. Several dentists in Columbus treat TMJ disorder. You do not need a nonavailability statement to seek care for this problem under CHAMPUS.

When calling for the appointment, it's important that you ask: "Do you accept CHAMPUS assignment?" If the dentist accepts assignment, he or she will file the CHAMPUS claim for you. All you will pay is your deductible and co-payment. If the dentist does not accept assignment, you can still be treated; but you will have to pay the dentist and file for CHAMPUS reimbursement.

The CHAMPUS advisers at Martin Army Community Hospital can answer more about how to pay for treatment for TMJ disorder. Call 544-3461 or 544-1347 for more information.

Do you have a question about family medical care at Fort Benning? Send it to Community Care Corner, ATTN: HSXB-F, Martin Army Community Hospital, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905-6100.

Q: I have read recently about the glycemic index. What is it and will you provide some examples of each?

A: The glycemic index is a measure of the rise in blood glucose levels for a period of time after eating a standard amount of carbohydrate.

Carbohydrates that enter the bloodstream rapidly after ingestion are classified as having a high glycemic index, while those with a low glycemic index enter the bloodstream slowly.

Items with a high glycemic index (released quickly) are: bananas, corn, rice, potatoes, honey, raisins and some sport drinks. Some medium glycemic index foods are: grapes, oatmeal, oranges and pasta. Apples, beans, lentils, peaches and yogurt are good examples of foods that release their energy slowly.

Q: What are some good snack foods to eat?

A: Some select snacks include pretzels, plain, air-popped popcorn, rice cakes, whole grain crackers, soda crackers, graham crackers and plain bread sticks.

Eat the following snacks once in awhile: reduced fat party mixes, oil-popped popcorn and cheese coated bread sticks. You should avoid eating too much of the following: regular party mix, oiled, buttered popcorn, potato, corn or other fried chips, egg rolls, snack crackers, olives and avocados.

Q: I presently eat about 40 percent of my meals outside the home. What are some good tasting and low-fat food to eat?

A: Eat baked or broiled cod, breast of chicken with mozzarella or dijon, or a vegetable plate. Or try a baked potato, seafood gumbo, rice pilaf, grilled or broiled fish, chicken or beef of your choice, and some skinless chicken.

Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: I have seen advertisements in the newspaper for off-post businesses offering to take post-dated checks for up to seven days before I am paid. Is this legal?

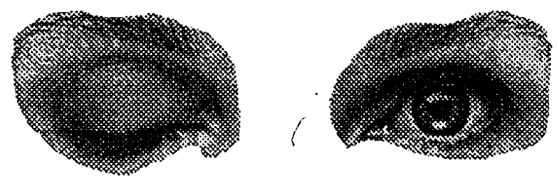
A: Post-dated checks are not illegal, but they are a dangerous practice that can result in financial problems in the future.

Technically, businesses are not permitted to deposit your check until the date shown on it. However, after leaving your possession, the check is hard to control; and many times checks get deposited earlier than the date posted on them. This can happen by accident or through an intentional act of fraud on the part of the business.

While the bank should not honor a post-dated check, most transactions are handled through machines that scan the codes at the bottom of your check. As a result, the system does not always catch the incorrect dates. What this means for you is that the check will probably bounce.

Bouncing a check usually means that you will owe the bank a service fee for processing the returned check. However, this is just the beginning of your problems.

If the check is deposited early and the check goes through, it may use some funds you had set aside for other checks, such as rent or utilities. Consequently, those checks may bounce when they arrive at the bank.



Trying to tell Georgia Power that your check bounced because someone else cashed a post-dated check and getting Georgia Power to wait on its payment may be a very difficult thing to do. It may end up taking several months to straighten out the financial problems that arise.

Another problem is that the post-dated check is really nothing more than a type of credit card. You are promising to pay money (which you probably do not have if you are resorting to this method of payment) at a future date. This usually begins to affect your financial affairs because you can continually get deeper and deeper in debt.

Post-dated checks are almost always a problem and should be used only as a last resort.

world war II

Fifty years ago this week...

• In Italy, the Germans launched a second offensive in an attempt to break through the Allied line, held primarily by the U.S. Third Division, around Anzio.

Aided by harsh weather that hampered the enemy advance, U.S. forces held their ground while beating back four attacking German divisions.

• In the Pacific, Gen. Douglas MacArthur and Adm. Thomas Kinkaid took advantage of early reconnaissance success and launched a full-scale occupation, landing two 1,000-man waves from the U.S. 5th Cavalry Regiment on Los Negros in the Admiralty Islands.

Within a matter of days, U.S. forces secured the Momote Airfield, established a stronghold and repelled several strong Japanese counterattacks.

• On the Eastern Front, the Soviets continued their drive toward Pskov, advancing to within six miles of the city after capturing Pogorelka and Podlipye.

• Elsewhere on the Eastern Front, Soviet forces operating in Estonia successfully cut off the Germans' last railway escape route to Tallinn after sweeping through the area south of the Narva River.

• In England, the Royal Air Force completed a successful effort to reorganize its Fighter Command and announced that it had been renamed the Air Defense of Great Britain.

• Fort Benning officials welcomed the entertainers of "The Bob Hope Show" who performed at Doughboy Stadium. Hope was unable to attend because of throat sickness.

SOA's battalion changes command

The command of the School Battalion of the School of the Americas passed Tuesday at 2 p.m. from Lt. Col. Richard R. Seim to Lt. Col. Ahmed E. Labault. The change of command took place at the School of Americas' Pratt Hall.

Promotion selection board convenes

A Department of Army promotion and Advanced Noncommissioned Officer Course selection board is scheduled to convene around June 2 to consider soldiers for promotion and selection to go to ANCOC.

Also, the board will review records for possible elimination under the qualitative management program.

Eligibility criteria for sergeant first class are: All staff sergeants with a date of rank of June 30, 1992, and earlier with a basic active service date of Nov. 2, 1974, to June 2, 1988 (inclusive).

Eligibility criteria for ANCOC: All staff sergeants meeting the criteria for promotion to sergeant first class who have not completed ANCOC or have not been selected for ANCOC attendance. To schedule an appointment, call 545-5647 or 545-2611 or 545-2602.

Legal assistance closes temporarily

Only limited legal assistance will be available Monday through March 11.

The attorneys will be on temporary duty and will not be available to give legal advice. Over-the-counter services (powers of attorney, notary public, etc.) will be available. In case of emergency, contact Legal Assistance in person or call 545-3281.

Bayonet drop box available to customers

For the convenience of Bayonet customers, anyone who needs to turn in stories, film, letters, etc., to The Bayonet may now use a new drop box located in the Information Office, Room 111, Infantry Hall, Building 4.

Material being dropped off should be placed in an envelope with a point of contact and a phone number annotated on the envelope.

Customers can still fax material to The Bayonet at 682-0095, send information through PROFS (ID is Bayonet), mail material to: The Bayonet, Infantry Hall, Room 601, send material through distribution or hand carry it to The Bayonet's office, Room 601, whichever is most convenient.

The deadline is noon Friday for the following week's issue.

OCS board June 22-24

An officer board is scheduled for June 22 to 24. The cutoff date for applications to arrive at Personnel Command is June 10.

Applications are expected to arrive at the Adjutant General's Personnel Operations Division, Building 2619, no later than April 29. For more information, call Marie Lee at 545-3341, 545-4341 or 545-4702 .

Students portray dinosaurs

Play takes audience back through ages

By Jerrie Macintire

Visitors got a peek at a child's version of the Jurassic era as first- and second-graders used an imaginary "time eraser" and transported the audience back through the ages during the play "Dinosaur Valley."

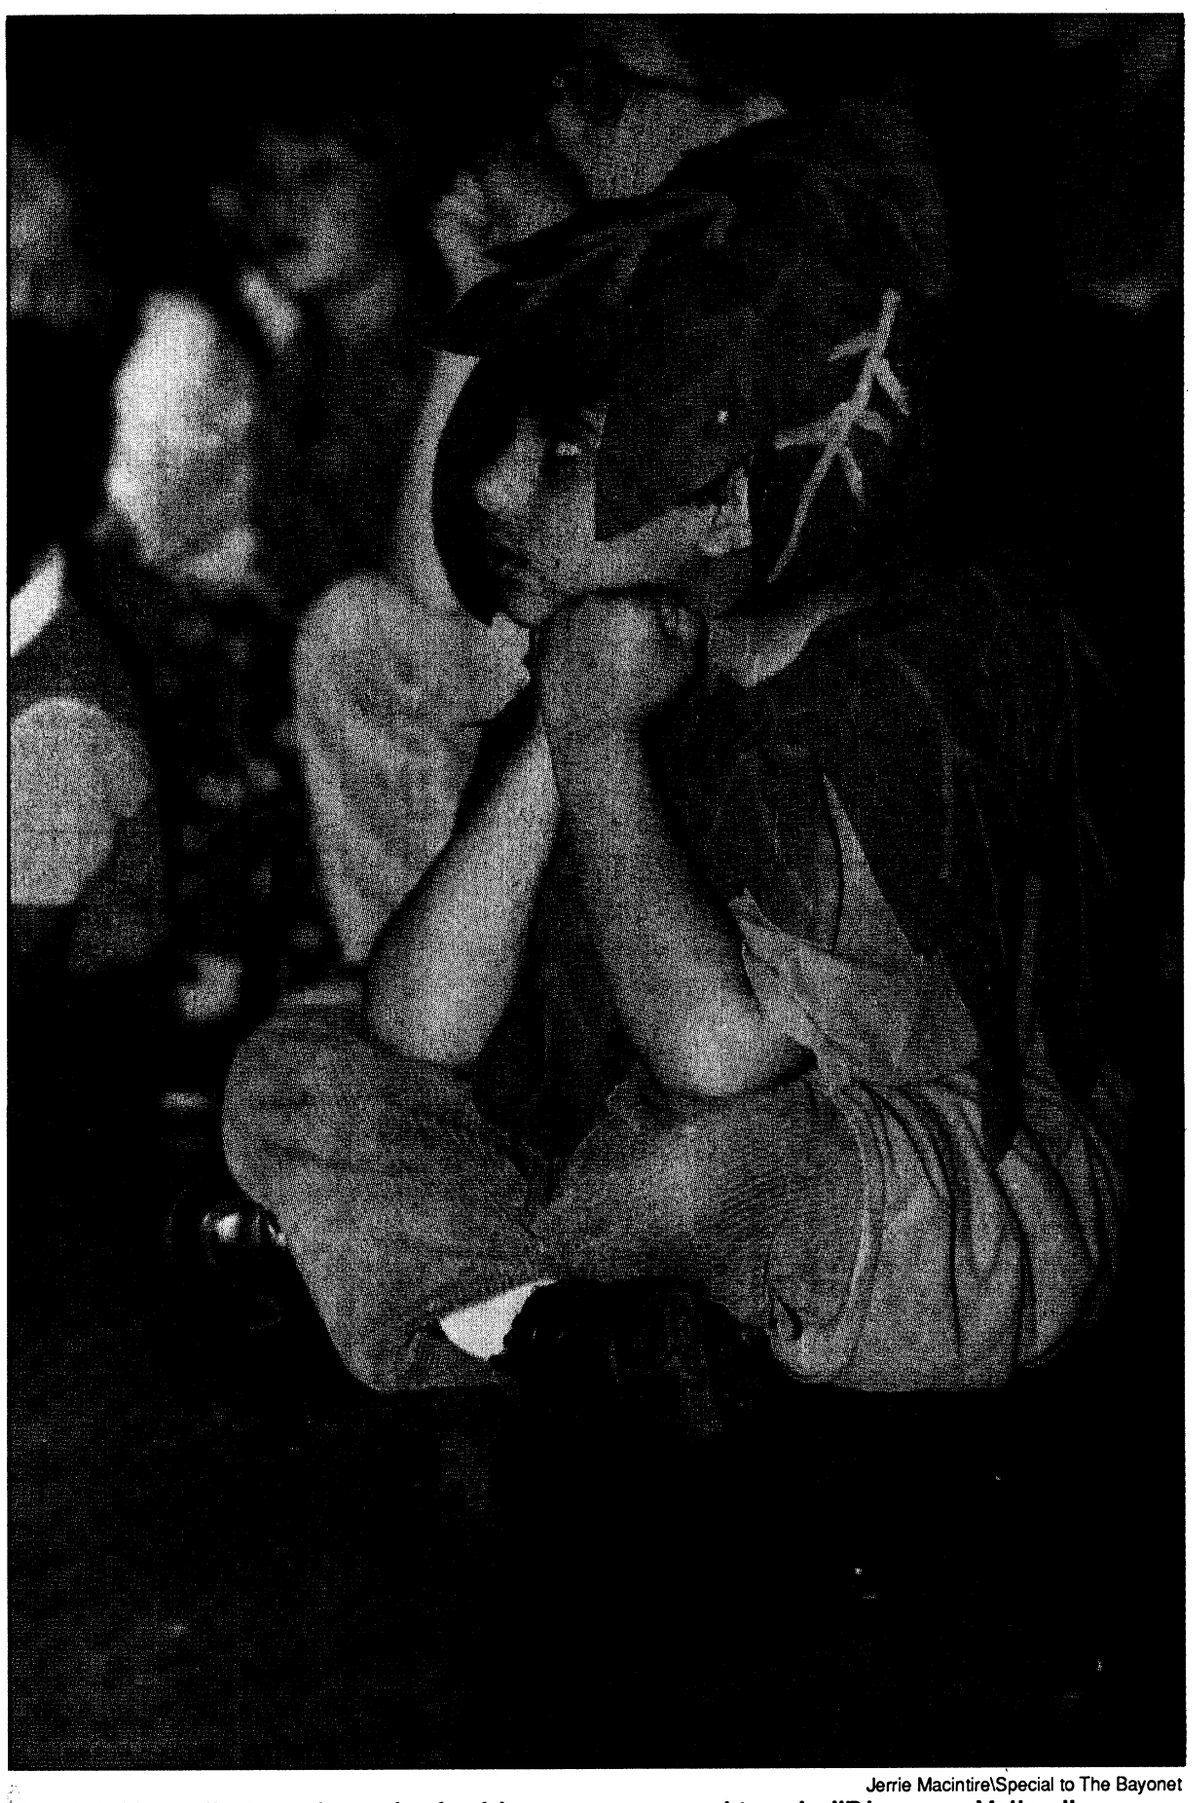
The cast members, all members of the Fort Bennings Schools' Academically Talented Program, presented the musical Feb. 24 at Loyd School and Thursday at Dexter School.

Under the direction of Ellen Smith and Marie Hand, the youngsters provided a message on taking care of the Earth while entertaining the audience with songs and dances.

Children dressed in brilliant green cycad costumes portrayed ancient trees that served as food for plant eating dinosaurs. They spoke about the need to keep the Earth fresh and green for future generations.

Students dressed as bright yellow "baby dinos" represented future generations who would benefit from conservation efforts.

Throughout the presentation, four dinosaurs provided commentary: Beulah Brachiosaurus, Terry Triceratops, Stewart Stegosaurus and Amelia Anatosaurus.



One young audience member, enthralled with the brilliant primary colors of the stage setting, announced "Now that's MY KIND of dinosaur" as a purple and green stegosaurus made an entrance and danced across the stage behind the chorus.

The cast members performed as part of their enrichment program through the Academically Talented program. The program serves those children who demonstrate exceptional ability in the classroom.

Children from Loyd, Stowers and McBride Schools performed the play Feb. 24.

Students from Dexter, Wilson and White Schools performed Thursday.

Smith and Hand teach the Academically Talented Program in the six Fort Benning Schools that have first- and second-grade classes.

Soloist illustrates music through 'word painting'

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

A concert soloist demonstrated the technique of illustrating music through "word painting" to Fort Benning students in a series of performances Feb. 22 and 23.

Dr. Jonathan Bartlett, a skilled soloist and opera singer, showed students two ways word painting can enhance music as part of this Fine Arts Concert series. After demonstrating the technique by singing a scale of notes, he asked the accompanist to illustrate word painting by simulating a mockingbird's lilting song on the piano. Rexford Whiddon, chairman of the Department of Music at Columbus College, was the pianist

In honor of Presidents Day, Bartlett sang selections from the eras of George Washington and Abraham Lincoln.

He selected "Beneath the Weeping Willow Shade," one of Washington's favorites, and the popular folk song "Black is the Color of My True Love's Hair," for Lincoln.

"Folk songs are the best links we have to our past. They tell us who we are and remind us of our heritage," he said.

In addition, he performed a relevant selection about a child who was having trouble choosing a topic for a school assignment.

Noting that this piece was written by an insurance salesman who wrote music in his free time, Bartlett said, "No matter what you choose to be, remember to keep music a part of your life."

Parent Academy seminar set

By Jerrie Macintire
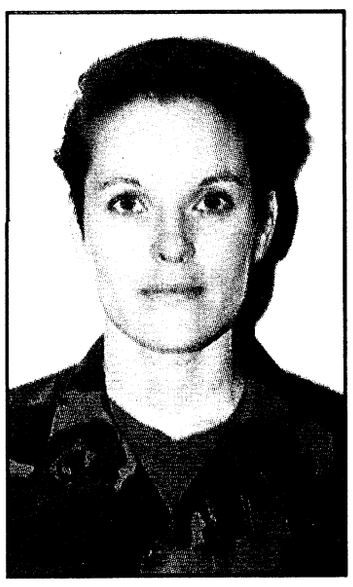
Special to The Bayonet ©

Registrants for the Parent Academy March 11 and 12 should receive mail packets this coming week with information on child care and meal tickets for the Friday evening spaghetti supper.

The two-day parenting seminar at Faith Middle School is completely full, but a waiting list has been established, according to Dr. Beth Middlemiss, director of staff development at Fort Benning Schools and a member of the steering committee for the academy.

The weekend seminar will feature nationally recognized parenting expert Dr. Barbara Coloroso as well as local educators and community leaders. The topics include enrichment activities, discipline, computers, homework, allowances, chores, high school preparation, tips for parents of middle schoolers and much more.



This weekend parenting seminar is in response to repeated requests for expansion of an annual series entitled, "Talks About Young Children," presented through the Fort Benning Schools.

Participants will attend one main lecture Friday evening after the spaghetti supper, and three sessions Saturday of their choosing.

WOMEN'S HISTORY MONTH

Females blaze new trails

Name: Staff Sgt. Jennifer A. Pearson
Trailblazer in what area: First female assigned to the Ranger Training Brigade Headquarters
Military occupational specialty: 75B3P2S
Unit: Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, Ranger Training Brigade
Job title: Brigade adjutant noncommissioned officer in charge since February 1989
Years on the job: Eight years

Pearson

What were your reasons for joining the Army?
Ever since I was a little girl, I knew the Army was the only thing for me. I love all the challenges and day-to-day missions.

Define your style of leadership:
I tend to lean toward authoritarian but not so much.

What person has most influenced your military career?
The people who have influenced my military career are my husband, Staff Sgt. James M. Pearson, Company A, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, and my father, Lt. Richard Robinson, provost marshal of Bramuda (Navy).

If you were the sergeant major of the Army for a day, what improvements would you make? I would strengthen the Army's overweight policy. I see too many overweight soldier in other units. I would also teach to the other units unity and closeness because rangers stick together (never leave a fallen comrade).

What were your reasons for choosing your MOS? I wanted to do the best job I could for the Army and Uncle Sam, and I know that admin would be my strongest point.

Describe a memorable moment in your career.
There are many memorable moments in my military career. I guess the one that made the biggest impression on my life was getting on airborne status and getting to make my first jump (after Airborne School) over McKenna Drop Zone. I came out of a UH-60 with a T10 C steerable parachute. It was my sixth jump. I was jumping with my husband and I was the only one that jumped a T10 C.

What are your future plans?
I would like to become a command sergeant major and an instructor.

What others have to say: "A very outstanding NCO, with great credibility among the soldiers of the Ranger Training Brigade."
— Command Sgt. Maj. Joe N. Heckard

Black history, nutrition share common ingredient

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Students at White Elementary School got a double dose of education Feb. 25 when a lesson in honor of Black History Month also included a look into proper nutrition.

Maj. Marcus Alexander, of the U.S. Army Physical Fitness School, talked with individual fourth- and fifth-grade classes about George Washington Carver, the American botanist who was largely responsible for the growth of the peanut as a major Southern crop.

Alexander then led students through a discussion of the pros and cons of peanut butter, as well as the comparative merits of several types of crackers.

Alexander built his presentation on Carver around the theme of "what makes a winner," stressing that though Carver had many obstacles to overcome, he became a highly respected scientist who contributed his efforts to the benefit of his community.

"I was born in Mississippi in 1861, the son of slaves," Alexander said, speaking as Carver. He continued with highlights of Carver's career — as well as lowlights, such as when the young man was accepted at a university, only to be barred from attending classes because of his color.

"But I persevered," said Alexander (as Carver), because I knew that I had to get smarter to get better."

Alexander urged the students to learn what their own strengths are.

"As a winner," he said, "you have to find out what your talents are and take them as far as they can go. In order to be a great winner, you have to have a great attitude."

Alexander wound up the lesson by whipping up some homemade peanut butter in a blender, while questioning the students about the positive and negative effects of fat in the diet (you need some for energy, but too much will make you fat, the students concluded.)

His voice pitched to carry over the whirring blender, Alexander compared several types of crackers, discussing what nutritional information to look for on labels — no-fat soda crackers were judged healthiest, butter crackers most unhealthy — and finally invited the children to sample one product of Carver's work.

Alexander works with students weekly as part of the school's enrichment program, according to Assistant Principal Melanie Bast.

"We do aerobics," Alexander said, "and we're preparing for our Olympics, which are at the end of each nine weeks. We do relays and flexibility events, and some strength exercises modified for kids."

Bast said Alexander is a welcome addition to the school's regular staff.

"He's very good with the kids, and seems to enjoy working with them," she said. "It was his brainstorm to give a Black History Month program and then tie it all in

Maj. Alexander's Peanut Butter

2 cups peanuts
2 tablespoons vegetable oil

Combine peanuts and oil in blender. Blend to desired consistency, stirring occasionally (turn the blender off while stirring.)

Caution: Alexander advises that peanut butter be enjoyed in moderation.

"It's not good for you," he said. "It's a good energy source, but it's full of fat. You can't eat a lot of it."

Rangers, locals foster friendship

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Members of the 75th Ranger Regiment are forming a special relationship with the people of Buena Vista, Ga.

"They are very friendly and receptive to rangers," Command Sgt. Maj. Terry Fenwick said after his first visit to the town.

The rangers were invited to a breakfast meeting of the chamber of commerce, given a tour of the town's National Country Music Museum, Elvis Presley Museum, antique shops and county courthouse.

The townspeople also offered the rangers free admission to its country and western concerts and laid the groundwork for a special Memorial Day program.

Additionally, 41 businesses signed up to be corporate members of the Association of the United States Army — further cementing the relationship between Buena Vista and the ranger regiment.

MILES to go

BNCOC makes 'eleven mikes' laser-sharp

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

You'll find them (if you look on the right day) in a remote corner of Fort Benning, at the end of a rutted red clay road whose only bow to civilization is a lone, bright green street sign.

They are sergeants, Basic Noncommissioned Officer Course students, busily engaged in learning the ins, outs, ups and downs of the Bradley Fighting Vehicle.

The motto of BNCOC is "Maintain the Standard." For the NCOs in the 11M (fighting vehicle infantryman) military occupational specialty, the standards can be very exacting indeed.

"We had a lot of soldiers who weren't really up to speed in the MOS," said Sgt. Ricky Evans, who graduated from the course Feb. 24.

Now with Company D, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, on Kelley Hill, Evans said he entered the course when he returned from Korea.

"I had had a serious car accident and had been out of the MOS for a while," he said. "After that course, I feel comfortable walking up to a Bradley and dealing with it."

Staff Sgt. Bruce Lawrence, a BNCOC instructor, said the course includes exams, rifle marksmanship, classroom time and lots of hands-on work with the Bradley.

"We prepare the students to be Bradley commanders or squad leaders," Lawrence said. "Some of them are gunners already, and they get a chance to hone their skills. By the end of the course, they can navigate on the ground or mounted, and they can effectively utilize MILES (multiple integrated laser engagement system) on a Bradley. They learn skills they can take back to their units and use in training other soldiers."

The MILES training includes detailed instruction on how to employ the gear on the vehicle, Lawrence said, and students are led through hands-on, step-by-step demonstrations of the procedures.

"The course is just over seven weeks long," Lawrence said, "and they go hands-on (with) MILES in the fifth week. The following week, they use the MILES on Bradleys in a force-on-force situational training exercise."

> "By the end of the course ... they can effectively utilize MILES on a Bradley."

Evans said the course is tough, but the instructors make the difference.

"They go above and beyond," he said. "I called one instructor late at night, and he got special permission to tutor me for two hours."

"I like my job as an instructor," Lawrence said. "I'm able to pass along some of my skills to other NCOs, and I learn a lot from them as well."

"The instructors know if you're hanging back and afraid to say you don't understand," Evans said. "They'll make you get up there for hands-on experience, and they'll have you do an exercise over and over until you understand and get it right."

Airborne instructors practice jump tower rescue drill

Soldiers dangle in air to help 'man in the steel'

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

A small group of airborne instructors gathers at the bottom of one of Fort Benning's red and white, 250-foot jump towers, shading their eyes or holding their black hats on their heads as they gaze upward.

One hundred and twenty-five feet above the ground, silhouetted against the sky, another instructor dangles in the air at the end of a cable, suspended like a spider on a single strand of web.

Airborne instructors can regularly be seen dangling from the towers this way as they practice rescuing students whose parachutes blow into the tower during a training jump.

"Occasionally — not very often, but occasionally — a jumper will make an error in his turn or the wind will shift and he will get blown into the steel (of the tower)," said Sgt. 1st Class Robert P. Landrum, standards noncommissioned officer for the Airborne School's Tower Branch.

It has been more than a year and a half since a student has blown into a tower, Landrum said. He attributes that partly to the fact that the towers have been closed much of that time for maintenance while the motors powering the cables have been rebuilt.

But it is also due to the close regulation of wind and weather. If ground winds exceed 10 knots or the winds measured at the top of the tower by a wind device exceed 13 knots, the tower training is canceled, Landrum said.

To be prepared for emergencies, instructors have to certify every 90 days in tower rescue operations. Each platoon in each company has to have a qualified rescue team, Landrum said.

The goal of the rescue drill is "to have the jumper back on the ground within 12 minutes of the time he hits the steel," Landrum said.

The rescue drill is controlled by the instructor at the bottom of the tower, known as the "mike sergeant," who talks the students through their tower jumps over a loudspeaker during training.

When a jumper goes into the steel, the mike sergeant announces over the loudspeaker, "Freeze, freeze, freeze! Jumper in the steel," and begins to coordinate the rescue.

Three designated instructors don rescue harnesses to go up the tower. One instructor climbs the tower ladder, hooks up to the steel with a safety strap and slides out to the stranded jumper. The instructor then secures the jumper to the tower with a safety strap while giving reassurance.

Two other instructors attach themselves to the cable usually used to raise the parachute and are lifted up the tower that way.

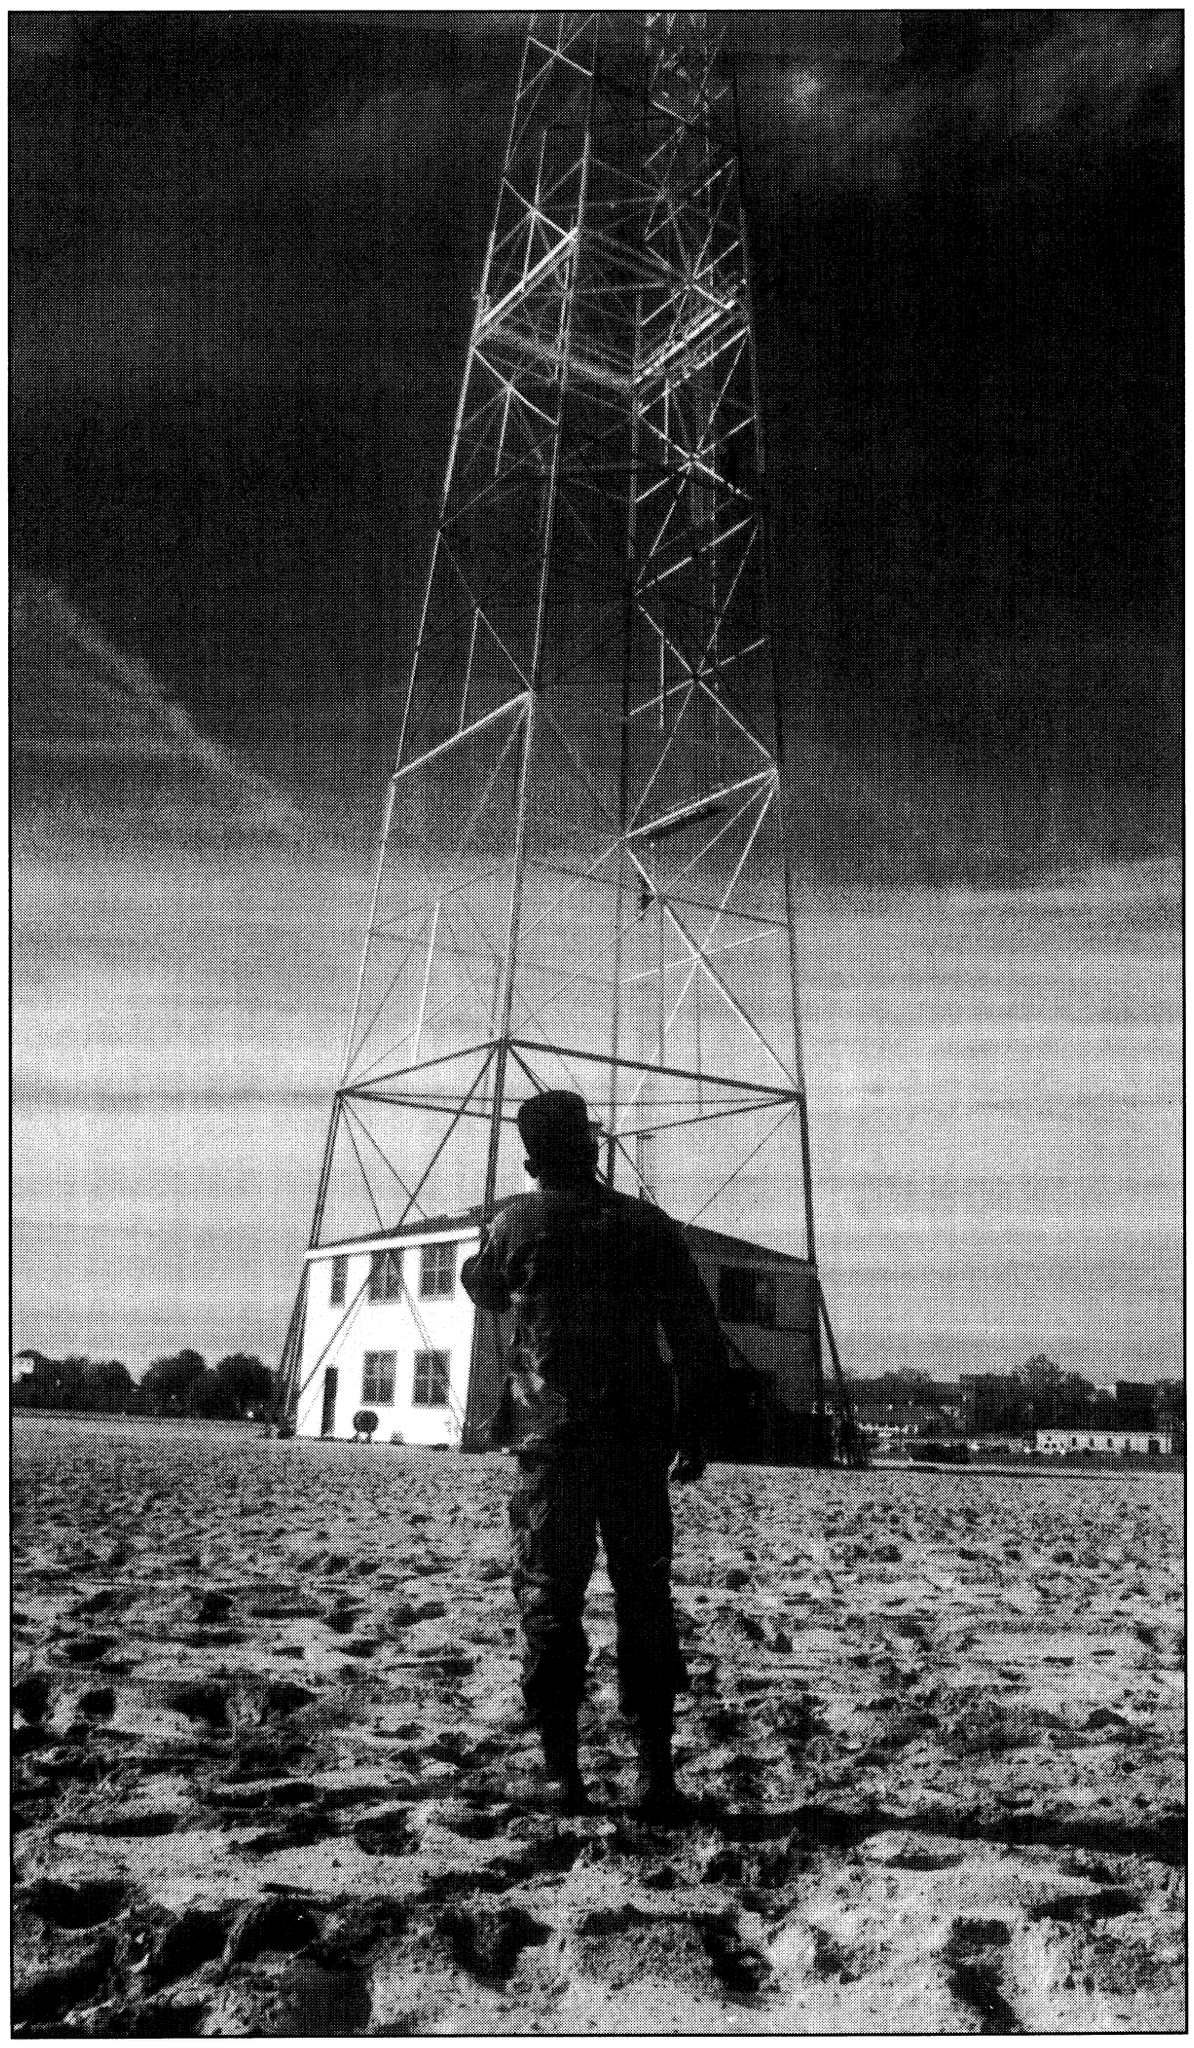
The cable is raised and lowered from inside the tower by the "button" or "brake sergeant" according to hand and arm signals given by the instructors on the cable and relayed by the mike sergeant over the loudspeaker.

The instructors on the cable are moved closer to and away from the tower by a team of soldiers holding a rope attached to the cable, led by a "rope NCO," who again follows the instructions of the mike sergeant.

The first instructor on the cable is hauled up to the point where the top of the parachute has landed in the steel and dropped off to secure the canopy to the tower and retrieve it.

The second instructor on the cable is then lowered to where the jumper and the first instructor are waiting. Using safety straps, the jumper is hooked to the instructor on the cable, always maintaining two points of contact, then the two are lowered together to the ground.

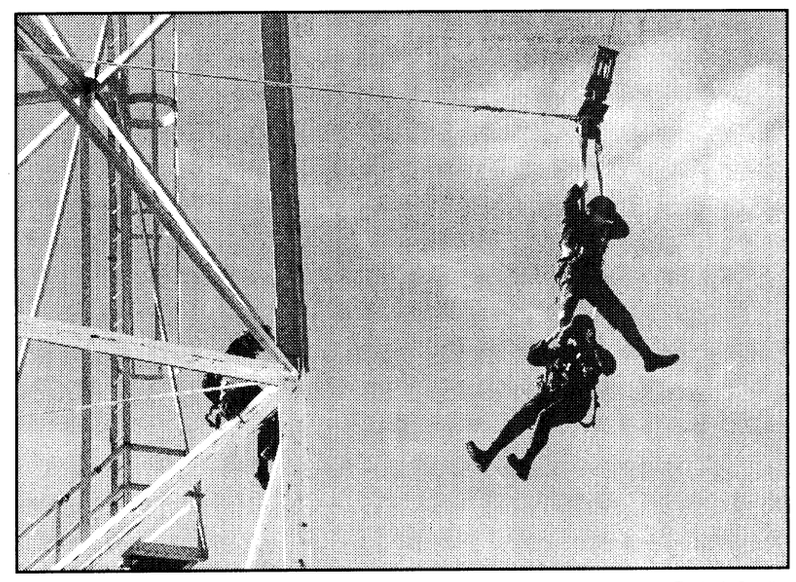
"Hopefully it goes that smoothly every time," said Landrum, who was involved in one real-life rescue when he was an instructor in 1991.



"Dealing with the jumper is the hard part," he said. "They're up there and they're scared ... they get the death grip on the tower and they don't want to let go.

"The student we had was a big guy. We got him connected to the tower and he just went limp. He didn't want to assist in getting out."

Compounding the student's fear is the instructor's own. "I hate heights," said one of the rescue team members as he prepared to go up the tower for the drill.



"You can jump out of a plane 1,000 times and the fear of heights is always going to be there," Landrum said.

But these instructors manage to conquer it quarterly — every time they qualify for these jump tower rescue drills.

Reiser to host People's Choice Awards

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

As proved by the success of "Mad About You," which he also co-created and co-produces, Paul Reiser knows the value of public favor.

SPOTLIGHT

That's why he's moonlighting from his NBC comedy series to serve as host of the 20th annual edition of the People's Choice Awards, which CBS will televise Tuesday from Hollywood's Sony Pictures Studios.

Revealing the results of a Gallup poll — in which a wide cross-section of people were surveyed on their favorites in the movies, TV programs and music of the past year — the special will feature a tribute to filmmaker Steven Spielberg, who scored two major successes in 1993 with "Jurassic Park" and "Schindler's List" (the latter for which he's currently an Oscar nominee).

Michael Douglas is slated to introduce that segment, and other scheduled presenters include Tim Allen, Carol Burnett, Anthony Hopkins, Angela Lansbury, Walter Matthau and "Northern Exposure's" Janine Turner.

Though his series co-star Helen Hunt recently won a Golden Globe Award for her work in it, the ever-glib but pleasant Reiser claims not to be surprised that "Mad About You" isn't among the three candidates for the People's Choice honor for Favorite TV Comedy Series. "Those were my three (picks)," he says of the shows that made the cut: "Home Improvement," "Roseanne" and "Seinfeld." Nevertheless, he's looking forward to presiding over Tuesday's event, reasoning that "When you first start doing stand-up, or at least when I started out 10 or 15 years ago, you're often thrown into the emcee job. It helps you get more stage time. You're also helping to keep the proceedings going, and you get to put your print on a show without having to do a whole big production. If you're doing any kind of improvisation, it's about what (the audience has) just seen. You learn to judge the room. It's like having people over to your house and saying, 'Hey, here's what's going on.' "

BINGO: Hit jackpot on post

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Play bingo on post at the Sand Hill and Main NCO Clubs and Officers' Club and you might find yourself thousands of dollars richer, said John Bush, chief of the Community Operations Division.

Even if you don't win, you can enjoy good food and the companionship of others, he said.

"People have a great time playing bingo on post," Bush said. "It's a night out and a chance to socialize and have a few laughs."

Fort Benning has one of the biggest bingo operations in the area and features a computerized bingo system that allows every player a televised view of each number as it is drawn.

"During fiscal 1993 we gave away cash prizes totaling more than $1 million," he said. "We might not give out prizes as large as some of the really big operations but we give out more prizes per number of players."

Most jackpots depend on how much the house takes in and range from $50 to $5,000.

Super Bingo nights feature progressive numbers. Forty-six numbers are initially called and an additional number is called every two weeks until someone wins. As the numbers increase, the probability of winning increases, Bush said.

Players can also win cruises to the Bahamas, Caribbean or the Mexican Riviera on some nights.

Bush said the odds of winning at bingo are substantially better than winning the lottery. The odds of getting all six numbers in the lottery is 1 in 9,366,819. The odds for winning a Fort Benning bingo game is 1:11.

Post bingo can be played by all ranks, active and retired, plus government employees and Reserve and National Guard personnel and their guests. If players are not members of either the NCO or Officers' Clubs, they must purchase a bingo pass each time they play.

"NCO Club membership is $3 per month, while a bingo pass is $4 per month, so it's best just to become a club member," Bush said.

Bingo can be played every night of the week. At the Main NCO Club players can try their luck on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 7 p.m. At the Sand Hill NCO Club, bingo is offered offered on Wednesdays and Fridays at 7 p.m. and on Saturdays at 1 p.m. The Officers' Club offers bingo Sundays at 2 p.m. and Mondays at 7 p.m.

All ranks can play at any club, he added.

Fox to bring 'Tommy' to Atlanta

Theatre League of Atlanta

Set in Britain between the end of World War II and the late '60s, the play chronicles the adventures of young Tommy Walker. Following a traumatic childhood experience that causes him to withdraw from the world, he emerges an unwilling hero — The Pinball Wizard — who must live up to the expectations of his demanding followers.

The Who's Tommy is coming to Atlanta's Fox Theater from March 15 to 20. Showtimes are Tuesday through Friday at 8 p.m.; Saturday at 2 and 8 p.m.; and Sunday at 1 and 5 p.m. For more information, call the Theatre League of Atlanta at (404) 876-4300.

horoscope

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) This week brings exciting business developments but you need to guard against a quarrel with a friend. It's not a good idea to lend money at present.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Partnership interests and reaching agreements with others are highlighted in the weeks ahead. The weekend brings social times with friends and family.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Important decisions about investments and financial security will be made in the next few weeks. New business plans are favored.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You will be going out more often for fun times in the near future. Exciting romantic developments make this week special.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) Home life will be a major accent in the coming weeks. Try not to make a big deal out of a little thing going wrong.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) Impatience could mar your progress on a work project this week. However, exciting times are in store for you where romance and leisure interests are concerned.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Financial prospects will be improving in the next month or so. It's a week of happiness for you in romance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) A growth in self-confidence will mark the weeks ahead of you. Be patient with a family member this week. Avoid an inclination to be critical of others.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You will opt for more time for yourself in the near future. Money developments now are positive. The weekend finds you sharing times with friends.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) This week begins a very active period of increasing socializing for you. You will receive some happy news that pertains to career interests.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) It's best not to force issues in business this week. Work from behind the scenes is profitable. Welcome news comes from friends.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20) You begin a cycle this week that favors travel interests. You may not make as much progress with an unfinished task as you would like but good news comes now about a financial matter.

Leaders aim to improve
Quality of life

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

Fort Benning leaders and their spouses met Monday and Tuesday with directorate chiefs for a conference to exchange information and ultimately to improve the quality of life at Fort Benning.

The meeting, conducted at Uchee Creek, was developed to inform Fort Benning personnel about the mission, abilities and innovations of post organizations and then provide a forum for spouses and leaders to suggest areas needing improvement.

Although the Army Community of Excellence visit, which will occur in early April, was the catalyst for developing and implementing such a program, the results of the conference will help Fort Benning year round, according to Maj. Chuck Walls, garrison executive officer.

"The overall goal was to put the word out to commanders and their spouses of all the great things organizations on post do for soldiers, families and the community," said Walls. "The things we learned today will help the whole community, all year."

There were two main objectives to the conference, according to Walls — to inform and to gather good ideas.

The first day of the conference, the group, numbering close to 100, heard briefings covering a wide range of topics, including housing, legal and medical services, civilian personnel, Army and Air Force Exchange Service and many others.

The directors each outlined the mission and goals of their organization and specifically highlighted elements that will be judged by ACOE evaluators.

After a break for lunch, the conference was divided into smaller work groups, each assigned to analyze particular services provided to members of the Fort Benning community.

The teams were made up of commanders and spouses. Also included were representatives from organizations related to topics of discussion.

Together they were tasked with exchanging ideas, identifying problems and suggesting solutions.

Pat Grant, whose husband, Lt. Col. Bruce Grant, commands 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, was a member of team VI and was tasked to analyze eight Fort Benning programs.

The conference was very useful, according to Grant. "It gave us an opportunity to find out where the problems are and then find solutions," she said.

The group discussed areas like the Community Life Program, Youth Services, Fort Benning Schools, Child Development Centers and the volunteer program.

"Volunteerism was a hot topic," said Grant. Many suggestions were tabled during the afternoon discussion including ideas to increase the number of volunteers and to more fairly distribute their services.

Olga MacLean, Fort Benning's new volunteer coordinator, was on hand to explain specifics of the program and receive suggestions.

Many programs received positive comments from participants, including the Fort Benning Schools and the Child Development Centers.

"Fort Benning is one of the few posts that has hourly child care," Grant said. "I have been using it for three years and it works really well."

During the second day of the conference, the entire group reconvened to share findings and potential solutions with other participants.

A representative from each subgroup briefed the attendees during the three-hour Tuesday morning

Army updates guidance on homosexuality

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Army guidance implementing the Defense Department's recently announced official policy on homosexual conduct resembles the "don't ask, don't tell, don't pursue" rule.

Army personnel officials explain that no potential recruits will be asked or required to reveal whether they are heterosexual, homosexual or bisexual.

As in the past, a soldier may be discharged if he or she has engaged in a homosexual act.

The updated guidance defines homosexual act as any bodily contact between members of the same sex for the purposes of satisfying sexual desires, or any contact that a reasonable person would understand to show likelihood or intent to engage in such an act — such as hand-holding, slow dancing or kissing a member of the same sex.

A soldier may be discharged upon stating he or she is homosexual or bisexual, or makes a statement that a reasonable person would believe the soldier engages in, attempts to engage in, is likely to engage in, or intends to engage in homosexual acts.

A soldier may be discharged if he or she has married or attempts to marry a person of the same sex.

Only a soldier's commander may authorize and initiate a fact-finding inquiry involving alleged homosexual conduct.

Specific criteria apply to whether an inquiry or investigation into homosexual activity is warranted.

The inquiry may be initiated only when the commander has received credible information that a basis for discharge exists.

Information is credible when, considering the source and surrounding circumstances, it supports a reasonable belief based on facts that a soldier has engaged in homosexual conduct. Just a belief or suspicion is not considered

Are post teens out of control?

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Drive-by shootings. Gang colors. Drug dealing. Random, thoughtless, pointless violence.

These are the images we are surrounded by in movies, music and television. They are the images, mostly, of black teen-agers. But this is not the only true picture of teens in our society.

A teen icon of the 1950s was James Dean, the rebel without a cause. He was rebellious, misunderstood, dark, brooding and dangerous. But not, perhaps, typical of the young people in his generation, any more than a gang leader from the Crips is typical of teen-agers today.

Gangs on post?

Many post residents say they think gangs are present and that they're vandalizing and burglarizing quarters and government property. The Boy Scout Hut was recently vandalized, several items stolen and the troop and American flags burned.

"We try to teach our boys citizenship, and then there are kids who will do something like this," said Cynthia Bishop, formerly a Fort Benning resident and mother of one of the Scouts.

"I think the boys responsible for this should be sent to juvenile court, not get some kind of military slap on the wrist," Bishop said.

Despite the talk of robbery and vandalism among post residents, the Military Police, Criminal Investigation Division and the teens themselves say teen gangs are not a factor here — although some teens say they've seen them in action in other places they've lived.

Special Agent in Charge Randy Upton of the CID said most problems military installations have with gangs is with newly enlisted service members who bring former gang affiliations with them.

Col. James Crockert, provost marshal and commander of the Military Police Activity, said the biggest problems he finds with teen-agers on post are curfew violations and vandalism.

"We have groups of kids who hang out and get into mischief," Crockert said, "but they're not really gangs. You don't see the colors or some of the other things that would tell us we're dealing with a gang situation."

Curfew

"What we want these kids and their parents to realize," Crockert said, "is this is a military community. We have a curfew (10 p.m.) partly because the Army workday starts early, so we need to keep noise and disturbance down after a certain hour in the evening.

"It's a privilege to live in housing," Crockert said, "but it carries some responsibilities with it. If people don't want those responsibilities, they're welcome to live downtown."

Most vandalism and burglary in which teens are involved, Crockert said,

DoD calls for smokeless workplaces by April 8

Department of Defense

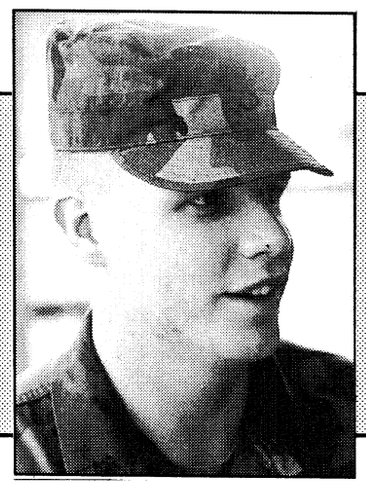
The Department of Defense announced this week that it was implementing a far-reaching smoke-free workplace policy that will ban smoking of tobacco products in all DoD work facilities worldwide.

The new policy, signed by Undersecretary of Defense for Acquisition and Technology John M. Deutch, will become effective April 8 and will cover all uniform personnel and civilians. Smoking will continue to be allowed in military barracks, family housing, personal quarters, clubs, recreational areas and restaurants. The DoD has nearly 4 million employees, making it the largest employer in the country.

The policy is intended to meet three objectives:

The first is to provide a safe and healthy workplace for all DoD employees. Both the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health and the Environmental Protection Agency have reported that secondhand smoke from the burning of tobacco products is a major source of harmful indoor air pollution and a known cause of lung cancer, respiratory illness and heart disease.

The second objective is to contribute to the readiness of the armed forces. Military personnel will be healthier and money will be saved through reduced health-care costs, fewer hours lost to sickness and reduced maintenance expenses for many DoD buildings.



The third objective is to be a leader in creating a smoke-free workplace. Last year, the EPA recommended that "every company have a smoking policy that effectively protects nonsmokers from involuntary exposure to tobacco smoke."

The DoD smoke-free workplace policy sets three general principles.

- A ban on smoking of tobacco products in all DoD workplaces at both domestic and overseas facilities;
- The designation of outdoor smoking areas when possible, which are reasonably accessible to workers and provide a measure or protection from the elements; and
- The provision of smoking cessation programs for all personnel.

VARIOUS VOICES

What would you do to improve the quality of Fort Benning?

Pfc. Brian R. Wilmot, Company A, 317th Engineer Battalion — "Everything seems all right to me. I've got no complaints."

Chief Warrant Officer 2 Shawn P. Pylinski, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 75th Ranger Regiment — "I'd like to see some improvements at the Destin Recreation Area. It's hard to get a cabin down there — they should make it more accessible to the soldiers here."

Lt. Col. Roberta Dyer, U.S. Army Medical Department Activity — "Fort Benning is actually one of the better installations I have been at."

Spc. Christopher M. Martin, Company E, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment — "I think we need better barracks on Kelley Hill. There should be more living space, better plumbing and better response to work orders."

Sgt. 1st Class Robert J. Williams, Bradley Instructor Company, 29th Infantry Regiment — "I think we could improve family services with more activities for children and more job services for spouses."

Nicole Enderby, family member — "I like it here a lot — the mall is neat and the Commissary is really big. I did have problems figuring out the clinics and getting processed into the medical system, though."

Momentary lapse saves driver's life

By Gene E. Miller
Fort Huachuca, Ariz.

Thank you, dear God, ever so much for absent-mindedness.

Yesterday, she was either exceptionally lazy or forgetful on her way to work; for that I'm extremely grateful.

A momentary lapse on my wife's part saved her life. Yesterday, she was involved in a terrible traffic accident. Thankfully, she had forgotten to unbuckle her seat belt.

She was extremely lucky; and so was I. Equally as lucky to be alive, even more than my wife, were the two occupants of the other vehicle involved in the broadside collision on state Route 90. They weren't wearing seat belts, yet they escaped injury. They were lucky, according to the state trooper who investigated the accident.

Given the gravity of the impact though, he told my wife, "You certainly would've died had you not been wearing yours."

The irony of the matter is that my wife hates to wear her seat belt. Today, she owes her life to the military and federal policemen manning the gates of Fort Huachuca, Ariz., and to her absent-mindedness. Had it not been for their constant vigilance and verbal cautioning concerning the post seat belt policy — on previous occasions when they detected her not wearing her seat belt — she would not be alive today.

Having grown tired of their continual rebukes, she eventually became accustomed to wearing her seat belt.

Yesterday, contrary to her normal habit of unbuckling as soon as she had cleared the gate, she simply forgot to unbuckle on her way to work. Had it not been for that momentary act of forgetfulness my wife would have died yesterday. For whatever it was that distracted my wife from remembering to unbuckle her seat belt, I'm extremely grateful.

Ordinarily, my wife had always unfastened her seat belt immediately upon exiting post. Despite my protests, she hated being constrained. Her excuse was that the seat belt always wrinkled her dress or blouse and made her feel claustrophobic.

Until yesterday, she had always maintained she would not be involved in an accident as long as she was careful.

I had previously tried to persuade her that despite the confidence she has in her own driving ability, you can't always rely on the ability of the other guy.

Having logged more than 150,000 miles driving experience in the United States and Europe, and having survived two head-on collisions (thanks to my use of seat belts), I tried to convince her of the lifesaving ability of seat belts.

Yesterday, it was the other guy who made the driving mistake.

Yesterday, my wife made a mistake — she forgot to undo her seat belt.

Yesterday, her blouse got wrinkled.

Yesterday, she promised to make the same "mistake" forever.

Today, she believes seat belts do save lives.

Today, I still have a beautiful and loving wife. Thank you, God!

Technological advances give soldiers tools to keep America's Army on top

By Rick Machamer
Office of the Chief of Public Affairs

WASHINGTON — Four years ago, the Cold War came to a close. Army leadership began laying the groundwork to transform the Army into a power projection force primarily based in the continental United States.

Army weapon systems and materiel have been put permanently on board ships at sea. These ships are prepared to quickly deliver needed equipment to any trouble spot.

Roll-on, roll-off ships are being fielded which speeds up the loading of tanks and Bradleys from state-side ports. Improved transport equipment, such as the C-17 aircraft, will get the Army to where it's needed — ready to fight — much faster than before.

Getting to the fight is a part of the equation. How the Army will fight once it gets there is going to change significantly.

The technology that gave the military "smart bombs" and the like, has found its way to infantry and tank platoons on the battlefield.

Desert Storm veterans know the value of the Global Positioning System, which pinpoints a soldier's location at any time on the battlefield.

Being lost in the desert no longer detracts from being able to maneuver and fight.

Technological developments did not stop with the Global Positioning System.

In April, a brigade task force will fight the opposing force at the National Training Center on a "digitized" battlefield.

Remember copying overlay graphics on acetate in a howling thunderstorm with frozen grease pencils or dried-up alcohol pens? Not to mention having to update enemy positions on a map while being tossed around on a vehicle moving thirty miles-an-hour in the heat of a fire fight? Or getting "killed" because of unknowingly wandering into an enemy kill-zone? Or trying to find that lane marker through a minefield?

Imagine having a video screen on the tank or Bradley that automatically and electronically displays and updates that information on a 1:50000 or 1:100000 map. This screen would also show the location of all the vehicles in the platoon and company.

And wouldn't it be great if the field artillery and attack aircraft had that same screen?

Units of the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division will have that equipment when they go against the opposing force next month.

Known as the Intervehicular Information System, or IVIS, the force will communicate with each other their locations, enemy locations, reports and graphics using digital data-based communications.

This digitization of the battlefield is a major combat multiplier. No doubt future changes in doctrine and organizations will result.

The Army has changed since four years ago, is still changing, and will change more as we move into the 21st century.

Fortunately, in times of downsizing and less resources, senior Army leadership is providing highly-trained soldiers, who ultimately win the fight, with the tools that will allow America's Army to retain its status as the finest fighting force in the world.

Editor's note: Machamer is a lieutenant colonel and the chief of News Operations. For more on the digitized battlefield, see this month's article in SOLDIERS magazine, "The Army In The 21st Century.

Post Officers' Club is steeped in tradition

As at any military post in the Army, Fort Benning is rich in the traditions and philosophies that have worked to develop and recognize combat leadership and military professionalism as a key to success in the accomplishment of the Army mission.

The dangers developing within the existing institution are that the military officer is failing to recognize professional commitments and traditions that are essential for the profession's stable growth. Over the past generation, the profession has become increasingly similar to civilian professions. Unfortunately, the officers being raised in this new environment are forgetting some of those qualities that do still set us apart.

It is the officers themselves who are failing to support these traditions. Take for instance the Fort Benning Officers' Club. The development of the Officers' Club in 1933 was the conscious decision of the officers to be used as a place to gather and relax, recognizing the nature of the military profession that is necessary to develop deep and abiding personal relationships with fellow officers as a means for establishing strong professional relationships.

The traditions founded at the Officers' Club should be revived and supported by commanders to continue the development of future generations of officers believing in the philosophies and traditions of the professional military. No one group can be recognized as at fault at Fort Benning as only 55 percent of those eligible are active members — roughly 2,200 of the 4,000 eligible.

As stated by John Bush, chief of Community Operations, the Fort Benning Officers' Club will not exist unless it is supported by the officers it was designed to serve.

As of 1933, the club ran on an operating budget that needed fully 800 more members to support. Bush further states that the club would need a total of 3,000 members to be in a good financial posture. He often hears that costs are a problem in today's financial world. This is a mute point as the cost of membership is 1.5 percent of a second lieutenant's monthly pay, which is 1.6 percent less than what it cost a second lieutenant in 1933.

The military profession, like no other, extends to the family as almost all activities are conducted within the official structure, hence it is a total way of life. It is in this aspect that officers and noncommissioned officers alike must work to foster the Army family and social traditions. In the Army, social gatherings and decorum are developed as an effort to provide entertainment and inspire officer acquaintances.

Although the purpose as an informal entertainment site has decreased in modern times, social gatherings still serve an important function. These events reinforce the camaraderie and embody a sense of belonging.

Commanders should recognize that it is an obligation of their officers to be members of the Officers' Club and that its loss would be only symptomatic of a widespread weakness moving through the military.

The Officers' Club should not be identified as just a building but rather a structure of traditions. Is it a part of the military that should go away?

Huey comes in for final landing

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

The UH-1 helicopter will no longer be seen flying the skies over Fort Benning.

The last of the "Hueys" assigned here flew its final mission on post March 4, when it dropped members of the Silver Wings, Fort Benning's Command Exhibition Parachute Team, onto Eubanks Field.

After that it was flown to Fort Rucker, Ala., where it joined a pool of aircraft slated to be given out to museums all over the country, according to its pilot, Chief Warrant Officer 4 Jack Reynolds.

The Huey "has been the backbone of Army aviation for a long time," Reynolds said, but is now making way for newer technology and helicopters with greater lift and speed capabilities like the Blackhawk and Apache.

Flying the Huey was "one of the greatest things I've ever done," said Reynolds, who, like his helicopter, will be retiring from the skies soon.

"Flying an aircraft like this as compared to a Blackhawk is like driving an MG vs. a Cadillac," he said.

The Huey was first seen locally when the 11th Air Assault Division was activated in the early 1960s to test airmobile tactics and techniques. It was later reorganized as the 1st Cavalry Division — a cavalry in which helicopters replaced horses — prior to deploying to the Republic of Vietnam.

Ruth J. Spaller

Huey Crew Chief Sgt. Chris L. Himes prepares for take off.

Retired Lt. Col. Dick Grube, now director of the National Infantry Museum, remembers flying Hueys with the 1st Cavalry Division during the Vietnam War in 1965 and '66.

"In my opinion, without the Huey, there would not have been an air assault division," Grube said.

The Huey was the principle aircraft used to move infantry soldiers onto the battlefield and also served as a gunship, Grube said.

Equipped with rocket launchers and machine guns, "It provided close-in tactical support for the troops on the ground ... a very versatile little aircraft," Grube said.

This particular Huey, No. 66-16854, flew combat missions in Vietnam and served in Germany and with a reserve command in Pennsylvania before coming to Fort Benning, Reynolds said.

"I hate to see it go, because I love flying," said Reynolds, who exclusively piloted Hueys.

"The UH-1 has been a reliable, dependable aircraft. It's sad to see a good aircraft like this go — but I guess it's time for a change," he said.

Medal of Honor

Awardees to be honored

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The National Medal of Honor Day will be March 25 at 10 a.m. at the Columbus Government Center the West Plaza Level.

The individuals to be honored are Medal of Honor recipients:

- Retired Col. Robert B. Nett
- Retired Col. Edward Showalter Jr.
- Retired Maj. Freeman V. Horner

Sponsored by the Columbus Chamber of Commerce's Military Affairs Committee, the program will feature a color guard and other participants from Fort Benning.

The Medal of Honor is the highest of all U.S. military decorations. It is awarded for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of life above and beyond the call of duty, in a conflict against an enemy of the United States.

The first Medals of Honor were the result of a bill approved by President Abraham Lincoln on Dec. 21, 1861. The Roll of Honor consists of 3,399 recipients, 202 of which are still living to date. The last action for which a Medal of Honor was awarded took place Oct. 31, 1972.

The history of the Medal of Honor is a long and interesting story that adds to the prestige of the award; the holders of the Medal of Honor are American heroes whose courage and sacrifices should be remembered and honored as an important part of American heritage, according to the Medal of Honor Society.

The Congress, by Public Law 101-564, has designated March 25 as "National Medal of Honor Day," a day dedicated to Medal of Honor recipients.

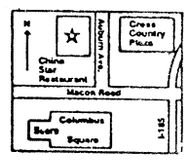
session. Suggestions ranged from buying new gymnasium equipment to extending the hours for issuing identification cards.

One topic that generated discussion was improving the Sayers Library. Suggestions included increasing the number of books and reference materials and upgrading equipment. Currently, many service and family members rely on Columbus libraries to complete school work and other projects.

Chaplain (Col.) Roy G. Plummer spoke about new religious requirements here at Fort Benning and Armywide. Specifically, meeting the needs of Muslim service members were presented. Muslim services are conducted four times a month on post.

Several areas were applauded for being "excellent" including the Uchee Creek Recreation Area, the Operation Holiday program, the Morale, Welfare and Recreation Newsletter and installation sports programs.



At the conclusion of the briefings, Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, commanding general, complimented participants for being members of "the best team ever assembled," and for their outstanding attitude. He also urged members of the group to fix problems as they see them.

A major benefit of the conference, pointed out White, was underlining the "need to communicate with one another and with soldiers."

Women In Military Service Memorial

Women's service will not be forgotten

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Women have served successfully in the armed forces since the American Revolution, and one woman has made it her job to make sure that fact is not forgotten.

Retired Air Force Brig. Gen. Wilma L. Vaught, who is herself an example of what women in the military can achieve, is now working to build a monument to all women who have served or are serving in the U.S. military.

Vaught achieved many firsts in her military career. She is the first woman selected for promotion to brigadier general in the comptroller career field. She was the first Air Force woman to graduate from the Industrial College of the Armed Forces at Fort Lesley J. McNair in Washington, D.C.

She was the first woman to command a unit receiving the nation's highest peacetime unit award, the Joint Meritorious Unit Award (July 1985), and she was the first woman to deploy with a strategic air command bombardment wing on an operational deployment in 1966 and '67.

During her military career, she held various positions in the comptroller fieldin the United Staes and overseas, including a position with the Air Staff at the Pentagon, and as deputy chief of staff, comptroller, Air Force Systems Command, Andrews Air Force Base, Md.

Following her retirement in 1985, Vaught served as chairwoman of the NATO Women in the Allied Forces Committee from 1983 to '85 and was the senior woman military representative to the Defense Advisory Committee on Women in the Services from 1982 to '85.

She now serves as president of the board of directors for the Women In Military Service for

Vaught

America Memorial Foundation, Inc. The foundation is spearheading the construction of the Women In Military Service Memorial in the curved stone gateway to Arlington National Cemetery in Washington, D.C., which will honor the more than 1.8 million women who have served or are serving in the U.S. armed forces.

One of the key features of the memorial will be a computerized data base containing the photos, military histories and personal memories of women in the military.

"What we hope to bring out with this (memorial) is what women have really done," Vaught said during a recent visit to Fort Benning.

"What I have found, as I've traveled around the country and the world, is that most people don't know much of anything about the women who have served in the military — what they do, how they felt, or why they went into the military .... "

"With this memorial," she said, "we're going to tell those stories."

Most people do not realize there were 88 women prisoners of war in World War II, Vaught said. Seventy-seven of them were prisoners for more than three years, she said, and they survived.

Vaught said she hopes that in hearing these stories, the American public will become more comfortable with the notion that women can and should serve in the armed forces at every level and in whatever capacity they can.

"All my life I've believed in women having the opportunity to do whatever they are able to do," Vaught said. She supports expanded roles for women in combat, but said she thinks those kinds of changes need to be made in an evolutionary, rather than revolutionary, manner.

"I think it is a question of analyzing the jobs and matching the capabilities of people against those jobs," Vaught said. The decisions about whether women should fly combat aircraft, serve on combat ships or in infantry, artillery and armor positions should not be based on gender, Vaught said.

It may be that women simply don't have the physical strength to perform some of these missions or that there are other problems, such as the cost of building facilities needed to accomodate females, Vaught said.

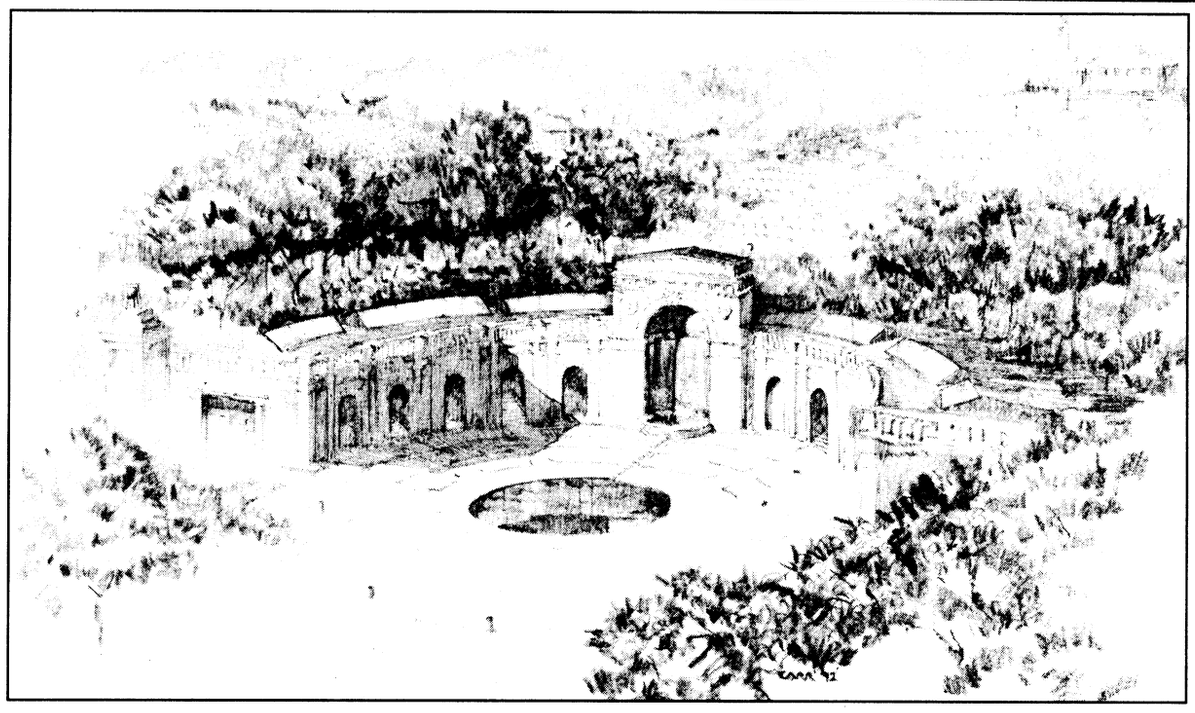
"But let's make those decisions for the right reasons — and that's not gender, but ... an inability to perform some part of that mission," she said, pointing out that there are men in the armed forces who are not able to fulfill every skill and qualify for infantry and other positions.

As to whether the American public is ready to see women die in combat, Vaught said, "I think we proved we were ready during Desert Storm."

She watched the news very carefully during that time, she said, especially when two females became prisoners of war and during the SCUD missile attacks when two females soldiers were among those killed.

"I saw an acceptance," Vaught said. "My observation was, families are families, and loved ones feel the same about that soldier whether it's a male or a female."

She remembered seeing an interview with the fiance and family of a female soldier who was killed in the gulf. "They said, 'she was doing what she wanted to do — she was doing her job.' "



Proving that women can do, and have been doing their jobs in the military, seems to be what the Women in Military Service Memorial is all about.

The comment the foundation gets most frequently about the memorial, Vaught said, is, 'It's about time.'

"Women have always come forward as volunteers," Vaught said.

"When we had a conflict like World War I, World War II and the Korean War, we reached out and called in women, asked them to volunteer.

"There's a tremendous story to tell about the women who came forward when their country was in need," she said, and the memorial will help tell that story.

Personnel remain strength of Army

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Military personnel garnered the largest share of the Army's 1995 budget proposal — $26.1 billion out of the Army's total obligation authority of $61.1billion.

Though the Army is the largest of the services, it didn't get the lion's share of the 1995 defense budget.

A senior Army budget official explained why the Army's TOA isn't as high as the other services: "The Army is people. The other services are focused a lot on systems (such as expensive ships and aircraft). We equip the soldier to do his job, but the focus is on quality soldiers," said an Army spokesman.

In line with that, the budget seeks to protect and improve soldiers' lot in life. The 1995 defense budget programs a 1.6 percent pay raise for service members and civilians.

"The fiscal 1995 budget continues to emphasize quality personnel as the key ingredient in providing the best force possible," said the spokesman.

"The Army will continue to focus on the recruiting and retention of quality personnel.

"Bonuses, upward mobility and quality of life are essential ingredients in attracting and retaining quality personnel for the force."

At the same time, the drawdown is still in effect. In fiscal 1995, the Army will reduce its active force to 510,000 — down 30,000 from 1994's projected end strength. And the Reserve will also see cuts.

The Bottom-Up Review, which the budget supports, "directed greater reliance" on the reserve component, said a Defense Department spokesman.

"Although the Guard and Reserve are reduced in the fiscal 1995 budget (and in future years), the reductions will be less than those for active forces."

The Army National Guard's authorized end strength in 1995 will be '400,000. The Army Reserve's will be 242,000.

To ease the downsizing, the budget will still fund the Voluntary Separation Incentive, Special Separation Benefit, early retirement and transition assistance programs.

Army civilians will also receive separation incentives, as their numbers diminish to 281,000 by fiscal 1995's end.

"There will be reductions in force," the Army spokesman said. "However, they will be kept to a minimum and used only as a last resort."

Fewer people require a smaller force structure. Though 1994 and 1995 see a 12-division Army, the Bottom-Up Review calls for a reduction to 10 divisions by 1999. The Army official said he doesn't know which two divisions will be inactivated to comply with the review.

He said the leadership is studying the issue, trying to determine the best mix of mechanized, armor, airborne and air assault units. He added that location will also be a factor in choosing which 10 divisions will remain active.

"We intend to field the right force mix of active and reserve components, armored, light and special forces, prepared and organized to meet our world's challenges," said Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan, Army chief of staff. "This budget is another milestone on our journey."

Despite the continued drawdown, the Army leadership is optimistic about the future.

"Our mission is clear — fight and win, serve the nation, and achieve success at whatever we do," Sullivan said. "To accomplish that mission, we need to continue to recruit and retain quality people. We must keep developing competent, caring leaders.

"The structure and programs of this budget allow us to fulfill that vision, to serve America."

credible.

Submitted information fails the credibility test when, for example, the only information known reveals the soldier is patronizing a gay bar, possessing or reading homosexual publications, associating with known homosexuals or marching in a gay-rights rally in civilian clothes.

Such activity, in and of itself, provides no evidence of homosexual conduct.

Here are some examples of credible information:

• A reliable witness states that he or she has observed a soldier engaging in homosexual acts or saying that he or she is a homosexual or bisexual or is married to a member of the same sex.

• A reliable person states that he or she has heard, observed or discovered a soldier making a spoken or written statement that a reasonable person would believe was intended to convey that he or she engages in, attempts to engage in or is likely to engage in or intends to engage in homosexual acts.

• A reliable person states that he or she has observed behavior that a reasonable person would believe intends to convey that the soldier engages in, attempts to engage in, is likely to engage in or intends to engage in homosexual acts.

During the inquiry, the soldier will be given a chance to present evidence demonstrating that he or she does not engage in, attempt to engage in, is likely to engage in or intends to engage in homosexual acts.

The soldier bears the burden of proving that he or she is not homosexual or bisexual.

Defense officials are developing a comprehensive training program for Army commanders. They say that training must be completed within 90 days after receipt of the program.

takes place after curfew hours and involves property in cars or quarters.

"You can't assume in today's world that a locked car is a safe place," he said. "People leave cameras, radar detectors, money and other valuables in their cars, and then they're surprised when they get robbed."

Many teens here, however, feel the curfew is unnecessarily restrictive.

"I'm 17 years old," said Patrick Ellis, an 11th-grader at Spencer High School. "If my mother doesn't have a problem with me being out, and I'm not doing any harm, why should the MPs give me a hassle? It's like they're out to get us."

Keith Barber, also an 11th-grade student at Spencer High School, agreed.

"I can see having a curfew for younger kids," he said, "but most kids our age have jobs; we're getting ready for the future. We don't need to be treated like little kids. If we're being responsible, and our parents know where we are, the MPs should leave us alone."

Teen viewpoint

Ellis and Barber said despite their disagreement with the curfew, Fort Benning is better than other places they've lived.

"Here, I feel like part of a community. For a long time, I never felt that," Ellis said. The downside of being in a military family, he said, is "moving all the time. I like to have a girlfriend, settle down in a place and chill. In the Army, you're always leaving a girlfriend, leaving your friends — you never feel like you belong."

"I used to live with my grandmother in Buffalo, New York," Barber said. "There were always drugs on the corner there, and you couldn't walk the streets without getting beat up, getting robbed."

Ellis has spent time in Indiana, Mississippi, Germany, Holland and Alabama during his mother's years in the Army.

In Mississippi, he said, robbery was a way of life for many of the people around him because, "Everybody was poor. If people don't have anything, and you do, they'll take your stuff."

He liked Mississippi, though, Ellis said, because he had family there, and because he felt there was less prejudice than he feels in this area.

Ellis, Barber and another 11th-grade student, Shon Daniels, all said they feel people view them a certain way because they're black, male teen-agers.

"People think we're drug dealers, troublemakers, rapists and murderers," Daniels said. "I'm in school, I have a job and I'm working for my future — I don't need to be treated like a criminal."

All three said although they have some white friends, at school or at work, they don't socialize that much with them.

"Prejudice doesn't change," Ellis said. "If I hang out with white kids, people look at them like they're criminals. They're guilty by association."

Troubled teens

First Lt. John L. Murphy, assistant chief of Social Work Services and Family Practice social worker at Martin Army Community Hospital, has worked with adolescents for more than five years.

During his work in group and individual in- and out-patient counseling, Murphy said, he's worked with children and young adults whose offenses have ranged from weapons possession to sexual assaults and murder.

"An important thing to remember," Murphy said, "is that some acts of rebellion are normal in preteens and teens.

"Staying out late occasionally," he said, "unconventional dress and selection of friends or romantic interests that are against the parents' wishes are all within the normal range of adolescent rebellion."

Some more serious manifestations of "acting out" behavior, Murphy said, include vandalism.

"Often, this kind of behavior results from the adolescent's unmet needs," Murphy said.

He cited the "hierarchy of needs," formulated by psychologist Abraham Maslow, which traces human needs from the basics of clothing and shelter to higher-level needs such as compassion and understanding.

"If a child's higher-level needs are unmet, for whatever reason, or if the child doesn't understand what those needs are" Murphy said, "he or she may compensate by acting out."

The problem can often be alleviated, he said, by determining the unmet needs and meeting them.

Problems in children of military families, he said, often stem from the prolonged absence of a parent.

"I had one case where an 11-year-old boy starting acting out, getting lower grades and that sort of thing," Murphy said, "after his father was reassigned away from the family. When he started talking about how he felt about that, and he and his father made a point of communicating regularly, mysteriously the behavior stopped."

Murphy said some common denominators he's found in troubled teens include low self-esteem and underdeveloped ego.

"These conditions can lead to a need to usurp power from authority figures or peers," Murphy said.

Group counseling is most effective in cases of adolescent misbehavior or deviant behavior, Murphy said.

"These kids tend to feel their situations are unique," he said. "They feel that other people 'just can't understand,' — it helps them to realize there are other people in the same situation."

The bright side

According to the guidance director at Spencer High School, most Fort Benning parents have little to worry about.

"There's a tremendous difference between the students here and in other Muscogee County schools where I've worked," said Greg Campbell, who's been in the school system since 1987.

"We're subject to a great deal of turnover here," he said, "and that makes for a very diverse student body. We have roughly 85 percent military family members in our population, including students from Korea, South America and other parts of the world."

Campbell said Spencer students are similar to their peers at other schools, although they tend to be neater and somewhat more responsible.

"Some have emotional problems tied to their frequent moves and disruptions," he said, "but they seem pretty tough, for the most part.

"What we have in this school that you don't see many places is parental involvement," Campbell said.

"The parents are close by and many of them take a real interest in the school," he said. "We'd always like to see even more involvement, but we see them much more frequently here than in other schools."

From Military Police to Martin Army social workers, experts agree the best way to avert problems with teens is to be involved.

"They need a measure of independence," Murphy said, "but they need to know they're loved, too."

TEENS SPEAK UP

Some 11th-grade Spencer High School students gave their opinions on subjects of concern to them. Here are some of their comments:

JOBS

"I've had a part-time job for a couple of years and I think it's helping me prepare for my future, helping me learn responsibility. I'm in JROTC (Junior Reserve Officer Training Corps) too, so I have an edge."

"I'm not working. When it's time to think about a career, I will, but I want to be a kid while I can."

"You've got to push yourself, train yourself, so when things get hard, you won't quit."

TEEN PASTIMES

"Most kids have nothing to do — we go to the gym and play basketball, but we need a teen club, a skating rink — most teens don't have cars, and we need more to do on post."

"We need a legitimate teen club on post, for 15- to 19-year-olds. They could make it so that only military family members and their guests would be allowed."

SEXUAL ACTIVITY

"A lot of kids look down on girls who have babies, but they shouldn't — everybody's doing it; it's just that some get caught."

"The guys and the girls have to take responsibility — I'm packing plastic."

"The girls have the kids — they should be on something. It's their fault too."

Physical Fitness School flips for fitness classes

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

This week, the U. S. Army Physical Fitness School conducted "Five Days of Health Awareness," a series of innovative fitness classes, which began on Monday.

The one-hour lunchtime sessions were taught by Dr. Ed Thomas, a consultant and instructional system specialist, and Capt. Kevin Ziegler, a master fitness trainer and 1988 winner of Mr. Male America. Both are members of the fitness school staff.

The classes, available to members of the Fort Benning community, covered a variety of topics like office exercise, light dumbell workouts, relaxation techniques and Indian club usage.

About a dozen active duty and civilian personnel gathered outside the fitness center Monday for the first of the five classes, instruction in the use of Indian clubs.

The devices are traced to ancient India, where warriors used the clubs (similar looking to a bowling pin) to perfect their sword fighting techniques, according to Thomas.

"(The clubs) are a nonstrenuous way to awaken the mobility and improve the balance of the body," he said.

Ranging in weight from one-half to 29 pounds, the clubs are used by holding them in your hand and completing a series of motions using your arms, shoulders and wrists, attempting to complete perfect circular movements.

"In the 1920s the military used the Indian clubs as a part of Army training," said Thomas. And as recently as World War II, Army doctors have prescribed the use of the clubs as a remedy for shoulder injuries.

Thomas is a professor of physical fitness skills and specializes in martial arts and lost techniques of physical fitness. He also spent time living in Burma and Thailand as a Fullbright scholar and worked for the Burmese government in developing a physical fitness curriculum for their country. Thomas has taught at the University of Iowa, Emory University and Northern Illinois University.

Tuesday's class found participants hanging upside down, using the forces of gravity to help relieve back pain, improve circulation and increase joint mobility.

The Gravity Plus class taught the use and benefits of an inversion table, which, "allows users to move from a horizontal to an inverted posture, simply by moving their arms," explained Thomas.

"As we grow older we get problems associated with gravitational stress both externally and internally," he added.

While external signs of gravity are apparent, like rounded shoulders and a sagging face, internal effects, like sagging lungs and vertebrae compression, are not commonly addressed.

Inverting a body can help compensate for the average 16 hours a day most humans spend in a vertical position and the damage it does to human tissue.

All the sessions were free and used as a way to thank a supportive Fort Benning community, according to Ziegler.

The fitness school was formed in 1982 and, in addition to conducting classes, the staff of 21 runs the Master Fitness School and provides specialized training and physical training program inspections for Fort Benning units.

Local states, ACAP to provide training

By Donna B. Cockrum
TRADOC News Service

Military personnel being separated because of downsizing may be able to train for jobs with the states of Georgia and Alabama through a unique Army Career and Alumni Program Southern Region initiative.

"Job training is available for medical fields, truck driver, electronics, police, morticians — you name it," said Ted Craig, director of Fort Benning's ACAP Office and the Southern Region.

The program is funded under the Job Training Partnership Act overseen by the U.S. Department of Labor in cooperation with the state of Georgia. Craig secured the funding to expand ACAP assistance to soldiers.

"ACAP trains people to look for work, but it does not find jobs for them," he said. "This program takes the ACAP philosophy one step further."

Training is provided by colleges and universities, trade schools and commercial training schools.

"When the state of Georgia contracts with a school, they have to agree to provide job placement, not just job search assistance," Craig said. "The goal is to have a job for a soldier no later than 90 days after his separation. If an institution cannot consistently meet that goal, we do not contract with them."

Craig's staff and the Georgia Labor Department try to arrange training so it can be completed by the time soldiers are separated.

In the initial phase of the program, 155 soldiers enrolled, 151 completed the training and 130 were placed in jobs.

As long as such results are achieved, the program will continue to be funded, Craig says.

The target audience is soldiers at Fort Benning and other military installations in Georgia and Alabama. However, other military personnel around the country may apply. Those who apply must be planning to reside in Georgia or Alabama after completing the training.

Tuition, books and supplies are paid for.

Georgia Department of Labor officials select individuals for the program, but Rochelle Bautista, the ACAP Job Retraining project officer, conducts pre-eligibility screening. Personnel have to show evidence they are leaving military service because of downsizing. Craig says the best proof is the No. 4 copy of DD Form 214.

Personnel who retired because of their retention control point are also eligible for the program.

Those who separate with payments from Voluntary Separation Incentive or Special Separation Benefit may also apply.

Personnel interested in the program may call Craig or Bautista at 545-4892 or 545-4902. Materials may be faxed to 545-7642.

Craig says ACAP organizations at installations in other states should be able to make similar arrangements with the federal and state labor departments. ACAP officials who want details may also call him or Bautista.

DOC, DPW work together for quality of life

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

When different post organizations work together to overcome common problems, it helps make Fort Benning a community of excellence, said John Machovec, director of Contracting.

For more than a year, DOC and the Directorate of Public Works have worked together to improve the contracting process and the way of life for personnel postwide.

In January of 1993, the DPW Contracting Division was formed according to an Armywide mandate in order to secure construction and services contracts for DPW. The contracting personnel belong to the DOC, but they work for DPW, Machovec said.

"It's a very unique situation," he said. "In the past, there had been a tradition of animosity between the DOC and the DPW, but with the formation of the new division relations between the engineers, inspectors, contract specialists, administrators and purchasing agents has been improved to such a point that they consider themselves members of the same team. The finger-pointing has stopped."

Machovec said the new process has been tremendously successful. Contracts are awarded faster and contract claims against Fort Benning have decreased.

"These kinds of things may seem remote to the average person on post, but everything DPW does affects the quality of life on post," Machovec said. "As the contracting process improves, the soldiers and family members of Fort Benning benefit by getting better family housing, roads and grounds, recreational facilities and utilities and services."

Sam Harris, chief of DPW's Engineering Division, said he is tremendously pleased with the DOC partnership.

"I really can't say enough about how successful it has been," he said. "The DOC personnel are totally focused on our mission and priorities plus they are located in the same building. There is not a lot of lost time because we can work so closely together."

As an example of the improved contracting process, Harris cited an incident in which a contractor who provided maintenance to more than 800 family housing units gave one day's notice that he was quitting.

"The DOC personnel found us a new contractor in only one day. There was no break in service to post personnel," Harris said. "This is just one example among many of how dedicated people working together can make things happen."

ACAP plans employment seminar for March 24

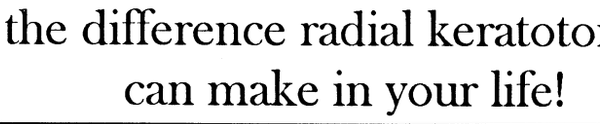
Army Career and Alumni Program

A seminar about federal employment will be March 24 from 8 to 10 a.m. in Infantry Hall, Classroom 30.

Sponsored by the Army Career and Alumni Program and the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, the seminar is designed to provide information on the opportunities of federal employment with primary emphasis on Fort Benning.

Available to soldiers who are retiring from the military and family members, the seminar will cover the basics of how the federal employment system functions, the various agencies, where to find job announcements and veteran's preference. Participants will be given a detailed explanation of the federal employment application, Standard Form 171.

James Fleming, a 20-year veteran of the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, and Cathy Murray, an instructor with Conwal Inc., will be available to answer questions.



Murray assists the Georgia Department of Labor with the ACAP Transition Assistance Program workshop, and she conducts personal assessments Thursday and Friday of each week from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the ACAP office in Soldiers' Plaza. The assessments include instruction in the use of an automated Standard Form 171.

To obtain an appointment, call 545-7009 or 545-4892 or stop by Building 2617 in Soldiers' Plaza.

OCS to host senior status review

Company A, 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment (Officer Candidate School), will host a senior status review on York Field at 1 p.m. March 22. A reception is scheduled following the review at Wigle Hall at 2 p.m.

The public is invited. For more information, call 545-4334.

Seminar, luncheons focus on women

A Women's History Month Symposium, hosted by the Equal Opportunity Office, will be March 22 in Infantry Hall, Classroom 5, from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Topics will include "The Glass Ceiling" by Jeanne Dugas, associate professor at the University of Alabama, "Women in Law" by Arlene Johnson, affirmative actions officer at Columbus College and "Women in Medicine" by Maj. Gwenneth C. Simmonds of Martin Army Community Hospital.

Also, a Women's History Month Luncheon, hosted by the Dental Activity, will be March 23 in the Regimental Room of the Fort Benning Officers' Club from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. RSVP by Wednesday to Sgt. Michelle Littrel at 544-9073.

The Federal Women's Program Committee will sponsor a Women's History Month luncheon Thursday at 11:30 a.m. at the Fort Benning Officers' Club.

The format will be character portrayals of significant women in history and awards will be presented to women in nontraditional roles.

Tickets are $5.75 and are available from any FWP member or the Equal Employment Opportunity Office, Building 2507, or by calling Winnie Torain at 545-1872.

EFMB program provides assistance

The Exceptional Family Member Program is a Department of the Army program designed to assist, through selective assignment and reassignment, the soldier who has a special needs family member.

The EFMP addresses the needs of those family members, adults or children, who have a physical, intellectual or emotional disorder that limits that person's capability to take part in activities and which requires special treatment, therapy, education, training or counseling.

The program's purpose is to let the U.S. Total Army Personnel Command at DA know of any family members with special needs, so this can be a consideration during the assignment selection process.

For additional information regarding the EFMP, contact Frances Howard, coordinator, Exceptional Family Member Program, Army Community Service, at 545-6969 or 545-5516.

Spring Cleanup March 28 to April 1

A postwide Spring Cleanup will be March 28 to April 1. Housing area occupants are responsible for cleaning their quarters area. This includes yard maintenance and improperly parked personally owned vehicles. Area coordinators will offer assistance in facilitating pickup of large debris and any bulk recyclable aluminum or large scrap aluminum. Area coordinators will conduct final inspections in each housing area April 1.

Cleanup materials available from DPW

In support of the Army Communities of Excellence visit and Spring Cleanup, the Directorate of Public Works has available pine straw for family housing quarters, troop units and activities. Fertilizer and lime are also available.

To receive pine straw and fertilizer, units and activities must submit a Department of Army Form 4283 (Work Order Request) to DPW.

Family Housing residents can pick up straw, fertilizer and lime at the U-Do-It Center.

It is still too early in the year to plant grass seed. Grass seed should be ready and available for planting by mid-April. Housing residents can pick up seeds at the center in April. Units and activities need to plan ahead and order grass seeds when they order pine straw, fertilizer, etc.

For assistance in removing large items, it is recommended to call a community life noncommissioned officer for coordination with the sponsoring unit to assist.

For information, call Dominick DeCarlo, chief, Unit and Housing Support Branch, at 545-4207 or 545-1121.

Civilian awards luncheon March 22

The civilian awards luncheon will be March 22 at the Supper Club of the Fort Benning Officers' Club from 11:30 a.m. to 1:15 p.m. The Directorate of Information Management will be the host. The theme is "Tomorrow's Technology for a Community of Excellence."

The menu for the luncheon will be country fried steak, green beans, mashed potatoes, rolls, butter, coffee and tea. The cost is $4.50 per person. Tickets should be obtained by Wednesday.

Reservations can be made through your organization's designated point of contact.

Ridgway Hall to be memorialized

Building 35, the location of the School of the Americas' Headquarters, will be renamed Ridgway Hall April 8 at 10:30 a.m. in honor of Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway. The ceremony will be conducted in front of the building with a reception on the back porch of the building.

Civilian training class April 14 at youth center

A seminar titled, "Overcoming Adversity II," will be April 14 from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. at the Youth Activities Center, Building 1056. Attendees will be limited to 130 participants. There are no costs associated with this training.

Topics will include "Spirituality and Adversity," "Facing Personal Adversity" and "Overcoming Adversity."

The seminar is open to civilian employees, supervisors, union stewards, nurses, military personnel and other community personnel.

Nominations can be made through activity training coordinators to the Training and Development Division, Directorate of Civilian Personnel, by April 11. For more information, call 545-5580 or 545-5656.

Promotion selection board convenes

A Department of Army promotion and Advanced Noncommissioned Officer Course selection board is scheduled to convene around June 2 to consider soldiers for promotion and selection for ANCOC.

Also, the board will review records for possible elimination under the qualitative management program.

Eligibility criteria for sergeant first class are: All staff sergeants with a date of rank of June 30, 1992, and earlier with a basic active service date of Nov. 2, 1974, to June 2, 1988 (inclusive).

Eligibility criteria for ANCOC: All staff sergeants meeting the criteria for promotion to sergeant first class who have not completed ANCOC or have not been selected for ANCOC attendance. To schedule an appointment, call 545-5647 or 545-2611 or 545-2602.

Stars defang Mobile Vipers 41-13

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Columbus Stars, after two hard-fought road losses returned to form Saturday with a 41-13 shellacking of the Mobile, Ala., Vipers at Memorial Stadium.

The Stars (3-2) jumped on the Vipers early in the first quarter after the Stars' defense sacked the Viper punter Brian Knowles at the 1-yard line, setting up the Stars with first-and-goal at the Viper 1.

Stars tailback Albert Tate went in from the 1 for the first score of the day. Kicker Rhett Owen added the point after for a 7-0 lead.

With the quarter winding down, tight end Tyrone Ivory and Stars quarterback Jeff McCarrie hooked up for a 40-yard touchdown pass to increase the lead to 14-0 with the conversion by Owen.

The Vipers (1-4) cut the lead in half 14-7 on a 50-yard bomb from quarterback Tony Southall to receiver Grant Fair early in the second quarter. A 22-yard field goal a few minutes later by Patterson trimmed the lead down to 14-10.

Stars fullback Jamon Smith (12 carries for 100 yards and one touchdown) pushed the lead to 21-10 late in the half on a one-yard plunge giving the Stars an 11-point cushion going into halftime.

In the fourth quarter, the Vipers opened the scoring for the first and last time on a Patterson 37-yard field goal trimming the lead to 21-13.

From there, the Stars scored three straight touchdowns slamming the door on the Vipers' chance for a fourth-quarter comeback.

Tight end Dave Davis scored on a 27-yard end around run for a 27-13 lead. Calvin Adams recovered a blocked punt by Terrance Perry in the end zone for a score. Owen hit the conversion for a 34-13 advantage.

Cornerback Troy Busby added the coup de grace on a 50-yard interception return for the final score of the game and a 41-13 victory.

The Stars' defense rose to the occasion with Perry leading the way with seven tackles, nine assists and one interception. Defensive end Robert Stroy also had two tackles, three assists, one sack and a fumble recovery.

"We finally played a game up to our level of expectation," said head coach Tom Staton. "Except for the turnovers, we played a solid game from start to finish for the first time this season."

Want to catch a fish — use its favorite color

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
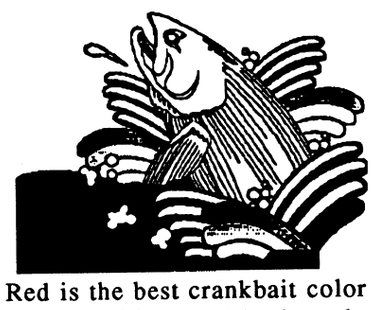
Outboard Marine Corporation

If you're fishing productive-looking water but not getting any strikes, it might be because you're not using the right color lure.

That's the opinion of professional bass tournament angler and guide Randy Dearman of Texas, who has experienced just such peculiarities in fish.

"A friend and I were using exactly the same topwater lures in a tournament not long ago." explains the Johnson Outboards Pro Staff angler, "and we were even fishing them the same way. The problem was, he was catching limits of bass, and I wasn't getting any strikes at all.



"After the second day of competition we started comparing our lures. The only difference was that he had painted the mouth of his lure white, while mine was red.

"That night I painted my lure white, and the next morning I had caught a limit within the first 30 minutes of fishing."

Dearman can't explain why something normally so insignificant on a lure made so much difference in that tournament, but it isn't the only unusual experience with lure colors he's had in his career.

"Normally," says Dearman, "chartreuse is a good color for crankbaits. I don't know why, because chartreuse doesn't really appear naturally in nature, but it's a very good lure color.

"In the spring on Rayburn Reservoir, however, the bass change their preference entirely.

Red is the best crankbait color then, and it's probably the only time of year I really use a bright red diving lure."

The Johnson pro acknowledges that for fast-moving swimming lures he likes either chrome and blue or chrome and black combinations, because these match baitfish colors fairly accurately.

For deeper bottom-bumping lures like plastic worms and jigs, however, he prefers more natural hues, such as brown, black, or black and blue.

"Darker colors like this usually represent crayfish better," says Dearman, "and I think that's important because of how and where fishermen tend to fish these lures. They cast them into places where crayfish would normally be. such as around rocks, logs, and other cover.

"More subdued colors may also work in extremely clear water, too," adds Dearman. "Bright colors may actually spook fish because they can see the lures so much better.

"Overall," he concludes, "color can be extremely important in lure choice. When you know you're in a good area but aren't catching anything, it isn't necessarily your lure or the retrieve you're using. It could simply be the wrong color."

Fort Benning offers 19 sports

Directorate of Community Activities

Fort Benning's intramural sports program gives anyone the opportunity to play softball, basketball, volleyball, flag football or any one of 15 other sports.

Team members do not have to be experts to participate in the intramural sports program. They only need some spare time and a drive for competition.

At Fort Benning, 19 intramural sports operate throughout the year with unit teams competing against each other to win the Commander's Cup. But before the championship trophy is awarded, the teams meet each other on a regular basis to determine which four teams will compete at Audie Murphy Fitness Center for the right to call themselves champions.

Intramural sports give both men and women the opportunity to participate in all sports. Because of popularity, most men's teams are open to active duty personnel only; a few, however, are open to civilian employees and retirees. The women's teams are open to family members, civilian employees and retirees.

The program has a variety of sports to keep everyone active throughout the year. Basketball, volleyball, softball and flag football are always favorites, but interested athletes can become active in soccer, track and field, bowling, golf, boxing, racquetball, tennis, weightlifting, bodybuilding, swimming, wrestling, cycling, beach volleyball, small games and a biathlon.

Athletes who feel they are at the top of their game can apply to become an All-Army candidate and possibly represent the Army while competing against teams in all branches of the service.

Fort Benning conducts screening tests for some sports in order to determine who will be able to try out for the All-Army team. Anyone interested can attend the screenings.

At Fort Benning, intramural teams are open to anyone no matter how well they know the game or how well they play.

Lenten lunch

Staff Sgt. David Hall, Headquarters and Service Company, Infantry Training Brigade, and Bobby Owens go through the serving line at the Regimental Chapel, March 2, for the Lenten lunch. The lunch is a weekly devotion every Wednesday during Lent at the chapel. Chaplain (Capt.) Alexander Brown, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, devoted this luncheon to remind everyone that Lent is more than giving up something, "It is giving of yourself."

What's your excuse for not having faith?

By Clarke L. McGriff
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Div.

reflections

The world is in a mess and does not seem to be getting any better. In spite of what politicians and advertisers tell us — the problems continue. What's wrong with this picture?

It is true that we are technically proficient. We can communicate with one another almost instantly around the world. We can travel at great rates of speed and even into outer space. We have computers that help us to be more productive. So what's wrong with this picture? Why are we still in such a mess?

To answer that question, we must go back to what's recorded in the book of Genesis. From Chapters 3 through 11, we see one failure after another of man before God.

The first man and woman disobeyed God and were cast from the garden. In Chapter 4, Cain murders his brother and tries to lie about it.

Chapters 6 through 8 show how man became so corrupt that God cleansed the Earth with a flood. In Chapter 9, Noah is given a message concerning murder. By Chapter 10, men had become defiant to God and sought to build a tower in honor of themselves.

Disobedience, murder, deception, drunkeness, rebellion. These all sound very up to date.

Then and now, it is a shame before God. Yet God so loved the world that he called a man and his wife to leave their home and go to a new land that he might give humanity a new beginning.

This is a good time to talk about faith. We have recently seen what fires, floods and earthquakes can do. We know how uncertain and unstable the economy is. Our streets are unsafe. Everyone seems to have a handgun, even children. When one war ends, another begins.

Consider Abraham — a man like us, who at the call of God in the 20th century B.C. set out from his home across the desert with no compass, but the stars and no guide, but God.

For Abraham, there were four things that distinguished his life — that made a difference for him and subsequently for all the world — a call, a covenant, and a commitment.

A call

God called Abraham to leave his home and to go to an unknown land. Surely, most readers of this article can identify with leaving the familiar for the unfamiliar. Note that God called Abraham; Abraham did not call God.

God initiates — man participates. God invites — man responds. God provides — man receives. God called Abraham out of idolatry.

The place that Abraham lived was pagan. Abraham knew nothing of God and had done nothing to deserve such a call. But still God called.

Abraham was 75 years old when God called. He and his wife were an elderly, childless couple. But still God called.

Why did God call such a person as Abraham? Three reasons. He was concerned about his salvation, he wanted to bless the whole world and he wanted the people of God to have an example of how to walk by faith.

God has called each of us to service, too. How have you responded? Is it with an excuse?

A covenant

Faith is not based on feeling, but on the word of God. A covenant is not a negotiated contract. Remember, God initiates.

God told Abraham what he was going to do for him. It was a promise. When you have a promise from God, you can know it will be fulfilled.

We are not saved because we promise anything to God. We are saved because of what God promises us.

God did not give Abraham reasons or explanations; just a promise. How we respond to God's promises determines what God will do in our lives. How have your responded? Is it with an excuse?

A commitment

Once Abraham gave up the old, he could then commit himself to the new. By faith, he was able to give up his past.

Faith brings us out. By faith, Abraham moved into the new land. Faith brings us in. By faith Abraham proceeded to receive God promises and the generations after him, even to this day.

Faith brings us on. The life of faith never stands still. Notice the verbs that describe Abraham's life: "He departed, he went forth, he passed through, he removed, he journeyed." These things he did in spite of the many obstacles along the way.

How is your journey coming? How have you responded? Is it with an excuse?

We must go from faith to faith if we are to go from strength to strength. Faith does not mean believing in spite of evidence; it is obeying in spite of consequence.

You will face tests and trials along the faith trail, but that is how faith grows. The same God who brought you out, brought you in and brought you on will surely bring you through.

So take up your cross — by faith. You have no excuse.

Keep it by repenting, fasting, praying

By Ruben D. Colon Jr.
USAIC Chaplains' Office

reflections

Early in January, my 10-year-old daughter, Eli, attended a memorial service at the Fort Benning cemetery with me.

Every time we pass the cemetery, our discussion focuses on life and death. She mentions how sad and painful loss must be for the families. I explained that our family knew this pain for her aunt who died several years before. The experience was sad; however, it sensitized me even more to burials and funerals.

One morning, Eli and I drove by the cemetery on our way to church and we saw a familiar green tent pitched there and knew that someone would be buried.

"It will be a sad morning for some family," she said.

When we returned from church, we passed the cemetery again and Eli joyfully exclaimed, "There wasn't a burial after all."

I responded, "Why do you say that, Eli?"

"Because, there are no flowers left," she said.

There may have been other explanations for the absence of flowers on that sacred spot. For Eli, no other facts were necessary. It seemed obvious to her that parents or friends would leave flowers after the burial. There are some things that just seem natural to do.

It seems natural that certain things should be done or left undone because that is the way it is during Lent. Though some may let the season pass unnoticed, many will use it to begin new disciplines because we are people who seek to "keep Lent."

These disciplines are not ways to influence God. Our relationship with God is established by grace. God's love mediated through Jesus Christ is a gift. We cannot do anything to win God's favor. But disciplines do share our lives and keep us in the real world.

Disciplines also enable us to make Lent, which means spring, a time of renewal as we prepare for Holy Week and the Easter feast.

Our need for renewal and God's call to struggle against sin makes the discipline of repentance, fasting and prayer things that are right for us to do.

For example, apologizing when we have done something wrong does not come naturally. We have to be taught to say, "I'm sorry."

Apologizing also is not always encouraged in our culture because it seems to show weakness and vulnerability. The practice of repentance, however, involves taking a close look at the places in our lives where we have broken the bond between ourselves and God and other people and where we have created divisions within our own heart.

The gospel of God's forgiveness is good news because it announces that our past does not have to determine our future. This season of repentance can be a time to restore broken bonds and be reunited with God, others and one's own deepest self.

Most of Lent is typically associated with fasting. We must be very careful when we talk of fasting.

Born biblically and historically, Christianity is more a faith of feasting than of fasting. Our Lord invites us to the meal of Communion and to feast with friends. He modeled a hospitality that was more concerned with feeding and eating with people than with refraining from meals.

Still, fasting can be helpful. It reminds us that the grace we receive from God has to do with our bodies as well as our spirits. It makes us aware that our food and drink are gifts. It also helps us make better choices about what we consume.

To eat or drink is a reminder of our relationships with those who do not have enough. Fasting can be coupled with works of love, which is another Lenten discipline.

Finally, a discipline to prayer and setting aside certain times is key in fulfilling the Lenten experience. Not to pray is to risk forgetting that everything is done in God's inescapable presence.

Our culture is busy, noisy, demanding and rarely allows fo quiet time. To live in God' presence involves taking time to b in conversation and silence wit God. It may mean getting up a fe minutes earlier in the morning o taking a few moments from work.

Temptations and problems wil not go away during the days o Lent. But the gift of Lent is th invitation to resist, struggle an wage spiritual warfare against th forces of evil and brokenness.

There are some things tha simply seem right and natural Putting flowers on the grave o those we love is one of them Keeping Lent as a time for sprin planting, new birth and the releas from the laws of death is another.

There are many ways to kee Lent. But these three, repentance fasting and prayer enable us t grow in grace while serving God' world.

students train for tour of duty

by Gordon Birch and Eric Burroughs
th Infantry Regiment

Immune to three days of rain and extreme cold ranging in the mid 20s at night, the students of Company B, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, in the Infantry Officer Basic Course conducted situational training exercises Feb. 3 to 26 at Garnsey Range.

The purpose of this training was to teach future platoon leaders how to plan and conduct situational training.

The students of IOBC class 3-94, commanded by Maj. Edward Gibbons, started their training in the classroom by putting pen and paper to work.

They learned how to write the purpose of the training, training objectives, task, conditions, standards, evaluation plans and logistical support requirements.

Armed with their newly written situational training exercise plans, the soldiers of Company B moved to the field to see how well the designated squad leader could execute the plan of the designated platoon leader.

While at Garnsey Range, squads moved from lane to lane executing different battle drills that the situational training exercises were designed around.

Some of the highlights included the live fire lanes that simulated point ambush, the squad battle drill attack and the hand grenade confidence course.

"The training was demanding, both physically and mentally," said one of the students, 2nd Lt. Dave Abrahams.

"The emphasis was placed on how a platoon leader can not only evaluate his platoon, but how the platoon can learn from its mistakes."

The importance stressed on realism even included the weather.

While not ordered by the cadre, the rain and adverse conditions gave these future platoon leaders some realistic training to prepare them for a tour of duty with the infantry.

ITB conducts Drill Sergeant Challenge

Infantry Training Brigade

The first Drill Sergeant Challenge was conducted by the 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, Jan. 10 to 14 at Sand Hill.

The Patriot Battalion designed this event to identify the best of the best by pitting the top drill sergeants in the battalion against each other.

"My intent was to challenge our drill sergeants physically and mentally," said Lt. Col. Bruce Grant, the battalion commander. "I wanted to create a competition that tested the drill sergeants, promoted their expertise, and confirmed and rewarded their excellence."

Each company in the regiment entered its two top drill sergeants in the four-day competition. The events chosen for evaluation in the challenge were designed to cover the full scope of drill sergeant knowledge, duties and responsibilities. The battalion modeled the events on the same criteria used in the Drill Sergeant of the Year Competition.

"It was a good maintenance event for drill sergeants," Staff Sgt. David Tyre, winner of the competition from Company D, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, said. "Preparation required all-around knowledge of drill sergeant responsibilities, and not just last-minute study of a few subjects."

Staff Sgt. Carlton Morris of Company B, 2nd Bn., 54th Inf. Regt., was the runner up in the Drill Sergeant Challenge.

All competitors were required to submit a 1,000-word autobiography to the Drill Sergeant Challenge board. The board was composed of the battalion command sergeant major and all company first sergeants. The purpose of this was to allow the board to evaluate each drill sergeant's ability to communicate in writing, a significant requirement for a noncommissioned officer who often counsels as many as 30 trainees continuously during the training cycle.

The physical evaluations of the drill sergeants consisted of the Army Physical Readiness Test (using the 17 to 21 year age standard), the Sand Hill obstacle course, and a five-mile run.

To evaluate soldier knowledge as well as military appearance and bearing, the board questioned all drill sergeants on a wide range of initial entry training topics, some familiar to most soldiers, and some specific to IET units. Among topics familiar to most soldiers were first aid, basic rifle marksmanship, customs and courtesies, leadership, counseling and current events.

Some of the less familiar topics included specific IET policies, entry-level separations, Reserve Components, Training and Doctrine Command Regulation 350-6 and the U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 600-3.

The board evaluated all competitors on their ability to conduct regular classes or "modules" given by drill sergeants to basic trainees. In the Drill Sergeant Challenge, the competitor drew his topic from a hat, was given a brief moment to collect his thoughts, and immediately began teaching his class. The modules taught were in drill and ceremony and physical training.

"Drill sergeants are among the top noncommissioned officers in the Army," said Capt. Donald C. Whalton, commander of 2nd Battalion, 58th Inf. Regt. "Bringing the best drill sergeants together in such an event, one is assured the competition is going to be tough and the performances will be first-rate."

The Drill Sergeant Challenge was the first of what is expected to be an annual event for the Patriot Battalion. Already the battalion is making plans and preparations to improve upon this year's program for next year's competition.

world war II

Fifty Years Ago This Week...

• Allied forces withdrew in the face of strong enemy attacks throughout Burma despite the arrival of Chindit reinforcements which succeeded in disrupting Japanese communication. Near Witok, the Japanese 33rd Division forced the 17th and 20th Indian divisions of the British IV Corps to abandon their positions and attempt to breakthrough several roadblocks and retreat to Imphal. By week's end, the Japanese 15th and 31st divisions crossed the Chindwin River to spearhead the main enemy effort.

• In Italy, the Allies renewed their attack on Cassino as 1,400 tons of bombs and 190,000 shells fell on the town as part of a preparatory bombardment to soften the German defenses. Nonetheless, elements of the tenacious German 1st Paratroop Division successfully repelled both the New Zealand and the 4th Indian divisions of the British army.

• American forces overcame brutal Japanese resistance and initial setbacks to establish positions on Los Negros, Hauwei, and Manus of the Admiralty Islands. On Manus, the U.S. 7th and 8th Calvary divisions drove forward toward the village of Lorengau.

• In the Solomons, American forces, aided by armor and air support, reconsolidated and launched formidable counter-attacks which successfully halted the Japanese advance.

• Fort Benning welcomed the 3rd Infantry Regiment as it formally relocated to the post. A descendant of the Pennsylvania Regiment of Infantry, founded in 1784, the regiment held the distinction of being the oldest active unit in the U.S. Army.

PFS mobile training teams take master fitness course on the road

Student benefits from course while at Sergeants Major Academy

By Jeanne M. Colby
Army News Service

WASHINGTON — "Physical fitness is a part of life whether in the military or not. It's not just push-ups and sit-ups, but how you eat and your entire lifestyle," said Master Sgt. John A. Flanagan. "It will follow you throughout your life."

Flanagan, a recent graduate of the Sergeants Major Academy, Fort Bliss, Texas, attended Master Fitness Training School while at the academy. He had to choose an option to fulfill his extra curriculum requirement and he had already completed a degree.

"The goal of the Army's physical fitness program is to improve each soldier's physical ability so he can survive and win on the battlefield. Physical fitness includes all aspects of physical performance, not just performance on the Army Physical Fitness Test," according to Field Manual 21-20.

The master fitness trainer looks at a unit's mission and designs a program that directly supports that mission, to better improve readiness, Flanagan said.

Formerly, soldiers trained to become MFTs in the school at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind.

The school, however, has moved to Fort Benning and provides the training through mobile training teams.

The MTTs go to the sponsoring unit, such as the Sergeants Major Academy, to provide this instruction.

There are five instructors on each mobile training team — an officer in charge, a noncommissioned officer in charge, two noncommissioned officers and a civilian (usually a physician), said Staff Sgt. Michael J. Keyes, assigned to the U.S. Army Physical Fitness School at Fort Benning.

There are 10 classes held each year for the active duty component. The school also manages the course for the Reserves and National Guard.

In addition to the principles of exercise mentioned in Field Manual 21-20, (regularity, progression, balance, variety, specificity, recovery and overload), one of the key things an MFT has to take into consideration is the commander's requirements, said Flanagan.

"He is the one who is outlining what he wants his unit to be capable of doing, whether it is passing the AFPT, graduating from jump school or preparing for the Expert Infantryman Badge."

An MFT designs a program in accordance with the commander's requirements and the unit's mission. The platoon sergeants and squad leaders run the program once approved by the company commander.

"Physical fitness is a part of life whether in the military or not. It's not just push-ups and sit-ups, but how you eat and your entire lifestyle."

— Master Sgt. John A. Flanagan
Master Fitness Course student

The MFT instructs the platoon sergeants or squad leaders on the program and can provide additional instruction as needed, Flanagan said.

"The MFT course is two weeks long and tailored to be academically demanding and physically challenging," said Sgt. 1st Class Daniel K. Allen, also assigned to the U.S.Army Physical Fitness School.

The course covers exercise and muscle physiology, human anatomy, nutrition, unit programming and how it relates to physical exercise and performance at the unit.

"The major point of the training that stands out in my mind is physiology," said Flanagan. "The course gave me a better understanding of how exercise affects the body."

For example, when a person begins exercising, he or she is using glycogen, a glucose in the muscle, which converts to lactic acid anaerobically (without oxygen).

When the lactic acid builds up in the muscles, a person reaches "muscle failure" where the muscle shuts down. The lactic acid builds up and puts fine, microscopic tears in the muscle.

These tears will create more muscle mass, and make you stronger, said Flanagan. But when a person exercises at an elevated heart rate for a period of time, the person obtains his or her energy from triglycerides (fatty acids) which help a person lose weight.

"This is why you have to incorporate recovery into an exercise program," said Flanagan. "When you use muscles until exhaustion, you need 24 to 48 hours' rest, so those small tears will heal."

Physical fitness doesn't have to be monotonous, either, said Flanagan. "Activities that can be worked into the program are sporting events, which promote teamwork and esprit de corps. Road marches are a good change, too."

The Physical Fitness School is also responsible for determining what exercises are not medically in the best interest of the soldiers.

"We get a lot of questions about exercises and stretches, some that have merit and others that don't," said Allen.

After 18 years of service, Flanagan has seen a lot of changes in the physical fitness program. When he entered the service, the AFPT consisted of five events. "Programs used in the military today are organized to provide better physical fitness than in the past," he said.

Some exercises and stretches used before are no longer used in today's Army. "Medicine determined that some exercises aren't good for the body," Flanagan said.

"They are constantly making new determinations about different exercises," said Flanagan. "Halfway through the course, they made some modifications to an exercise."

Bloodsuckers: Outwit them with DoD insect repellent

By F. Peter Wigginton
American Forces Information Service

Rejoice! You now can outwit mosquitoes, ticks, biting flies and all those other lousy bloodsuckers. The Department of Defense has developed effective ammunition that can stop service members from catching malaria and other insect-borne diseases.

The weaponry, a skin cream and a liquid for spraying or soaking fabrics, is now in the military supply system. Further, the protection — developed by DoD, the Department of Agriculture and private industry — may also be purchased commercially.

"These are the best insect repellents in the world," said Air Force Col. Robert Clegern, then research liaison officer for the Armed Forces Pest Management Board and now a retiree. "Proper use of the two-part system provides almost 100 percent protection against most biting species," he said.

The first part is a repellent cream applied to the skin. The second is a liquid for fabrics that remains effective even after numerous washings. Dry cleaning will remove the repellent, if necessary, Clegern said.

He said the primary ingredient of the skin repellent, DEET (diethyl-m-toluamide), has been in use about 40 years. However, it was not until just prior to Desert Shield in 1990 that research finally developed the present 33 percent slow-release product.

The older 75 percent military DEET product reddened or burned some users' skin. It also acted as a plasticizer, clouding watch crystals, causing gun stocks to become sticky and paint to peel. The new DEET formulation lessens these adverse effects while still affording excellent protection.

Entomologists say there are nearly 2,500 species of mosquitoes. They are found almost everywhere except on open seas, at the polar regions and in very dry deserts. Mosquitoes are more dangerous to human health than any other group of insects; they carry such diseases as malaria and yellow fever.

Only females bite and spread diseases from one victim to another. They can take as many as 44 blood meals during a life span of 100 days in the laboratory.

According to Carl Schreck, research entomologist with the Department of Agriculture research Service, the clothing repellents — which can also kill the bugs on contact — were tested in Alaska, Australia, Florida, the rice fields of Louisiana, Pakistan, Zambia and Thailand.

Different temperatures and species at many sites made it impossible to generalize about repellent effectiveness.

For example, in the Florida Everglades as many as 3,000 mosquitoes will hover around a single person.

"There we got upward of seven hours of total protection against bites on the exposed skin that had been treated with the repellent," Schreck said.

"We have to be careful to not make an all-encompassing statement that if a repellent works against one insect, it will work against all, in every place. It doesn't work that way."

The military set a goal of 12 hours for length of effectiveness of each application. According to Schreck, the most dangerous transmitters of malaria bite late at night, between 10 p.m. and 1 a.m.

"We wanted a repellent that would last from dusk until dawn, when service members would arise and put on another application if necessary. It's always been difficult protecting people at night because the mosquitoes attack them while they sleep," he said.

"Proper use of the two-part system provides almost 100 percent protection against most biting species."

Not only do these formulations provide comfort and protection from mosquitoes, research has discovered a secondary benefit: Mosquito populations diminish in proportion to the length of time large numbers of repellent-protected troops are in an area.

"We've demonstrated that when people with this clothing-treated protection walk trails where mosquitoes are thick, mosquitoes virtually disappear after a time," Schreck said.

"In fact, we've been so successful that we could just wear a T-shirt as upper clothing and still not have any mosquitoes flying about."

Air Force Capt. Armando Rosales, a medical entomologist with the board, conducted the most recent field test of the system with troops in Somalia.

Rosales worked with the Air Force's 823rd Civil Engineering Red Horse Squadron from mid-December 1992 to mid-March 1993, showing members how to use the repellents. Not one came down with an insect-borne disease. Other comparable units without his help did.

While not naming specific products, Schreck said persons interested in purchasing repellent creams at places like sporting goods stores should look for the percentage of DEET ingredients.

However, the company supplying the military has been permitted to say so on its label for commercial sales.

"As a rule, you find most companies have a product that ranges from 15 to 40 percent of DEET," said Schreck. "More is unnecessary. One product contains only 8 percent. It does a fairly good job for a few hours. And that's what it's marketed for, to cover you while working in the garden. The 8 percent product is also recommended for use on children."

Reserve drills earn Soldiers Medal

By Jim Caldwell
TRADOC News Service

FORT STORY, Va. — Two U.S. Army drill sergeants received the Soldiers Medal Saturday for rescuing three Fort Benning soldiers from a wrecked car in November 1992.

The highest peacetime award for heroism was earned by Sgt. 1st Class Dennis E. Law of Norfolk, Va., and Staff Sgt. Lester L. Smith Jr. of Portsmouth, Va.

Law was selected the 1993 Army's Reserve Drill Sergeant of the Year. Both are assigned to the 4th Brigade, 80th Division (Training).

Law and Smith were serving two weeks of annual training at Fort Benning when they came upon the accident scene on Interstate 185.

Three Fort Benning soldiers had been trapped inside an overturned car. In the early morning darkness, Law crawled inside, unbuckled two of the victims and dragged them out. Smith then carried them a safe distance away in case the car caught fire.

Law and Smith were serving two weeks of annual training at Fort Benning when they came upon the accident scene on Interstate 185.

The third soldier was pinned in the back of the car. Smith had to lift the side of the car to enable Law to retrieve the soldier.

Law earned a master's degree in international relations from Old Dominion University last year. He begins law school this fall. He became an Army Reserve drill sergeant in 1987 after four years of active duty with the 82nd Airborne Division.

Smith, in the Army Reserve since 1985, retired from the Portsmouth Police Department in 1992 after 23 years. He became a drill sergeant in 1987.

The citation accompanying the Soldiers Medal noted their "selfless courage in the rescue of three soldiers by disregarding the life-threatening situation."

ITB names top drill

By James Brownlee
Infantry Training Brigade

The Infantry Training Brigade's Drill Sergeant of tthe Quarter for the second quarter of fiscal 1994 is Staff Sgt. Richard T. McAfee of the 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment.

McAfee received this award as well as his company's Drill Sergeant of the Cycle award at a graduation ceremony March 4.

McAfee's military occupational specialty is 11H or heavy antiarmor infantryman.

He holds the Jumpmaster Badge, the Combat Infantryman Badge, the Expert Infantryman Badge and the Ranger Tab.

He is currently on the promotion list for sergeant first class and is awaiting an upcoming Advanced Noncommissioned Officer Class scheduled to begin Sept. 22.

"Even though he has only been on the trail for a short 10 months, he has proved that being a drill sergeant takes more than just meeting the standards," said 1st Lt. George S. Schurr, battalion operations officer. "He has worked way beyond what is required as a drill sergeant and that he makes a deeper commitment and takes a greater sense of pride in being a drill sergeant."

When asked of his career goals, McAfee said, "My short-term goals are to become a platoon sergeant for a regular line unit. Then, I'd like to set my sights even higher and become a command sergeant major."

He and his wife, Tracy, have two children, Jordan, who is 4 years old and Zack, who is 18 months old.

Lieutenants complete IOBC

Infantry Officer Basic Course

Class 1-94 of the Infantry Officer Basic Course graduated Thursday at 1 p.m. in Marshall Auditorium in Infantry Hall.

The 16-week course is designed to give the newly commissioned infantry lieutenants the knowledge needed to succeed as platoon leaders.

The distinguished honor graduate was 2nd Lt. Desi A. Maes, a native of Ely, Nev.

Born Feb. 1, 1966, he enlisted in the Army nine years ago as a forward observer in field artillery and attended officer candidate school as a staff sergeant.

A graduate of Mount Wachusett Community College in Gardner, Mass., Maes' military education include the Primary Leadership Development Course, Basic Noncommissioned Officers Course, Special Forces Qualification Course, Special Operations Training Course and the Polish language course.

His previous assignments have included mechanized, light artillery and special forces units. Currently, he has orders for assignment at Fort Hood, Texas.

His awards include the Army Commendation Medal with oak leaf cluster, Army Achievement Medal with two oak leaf clusters, Good Conduct Medal, second award, Parachutist Badge and Special Forces Tab.

He and his wife, Dannita, have two sons, ages 5 and 4.

Other honor graduates are:

Fair simulates challenges exceptional children face

A Stowers student reads "mirror-writing" which simulates what a person with dyslexia might see.

Stowers School students got to experience frustrations many exceptional children cope with each day at a fair designed to heighten awareness of what it feels like to live with physical limitations.

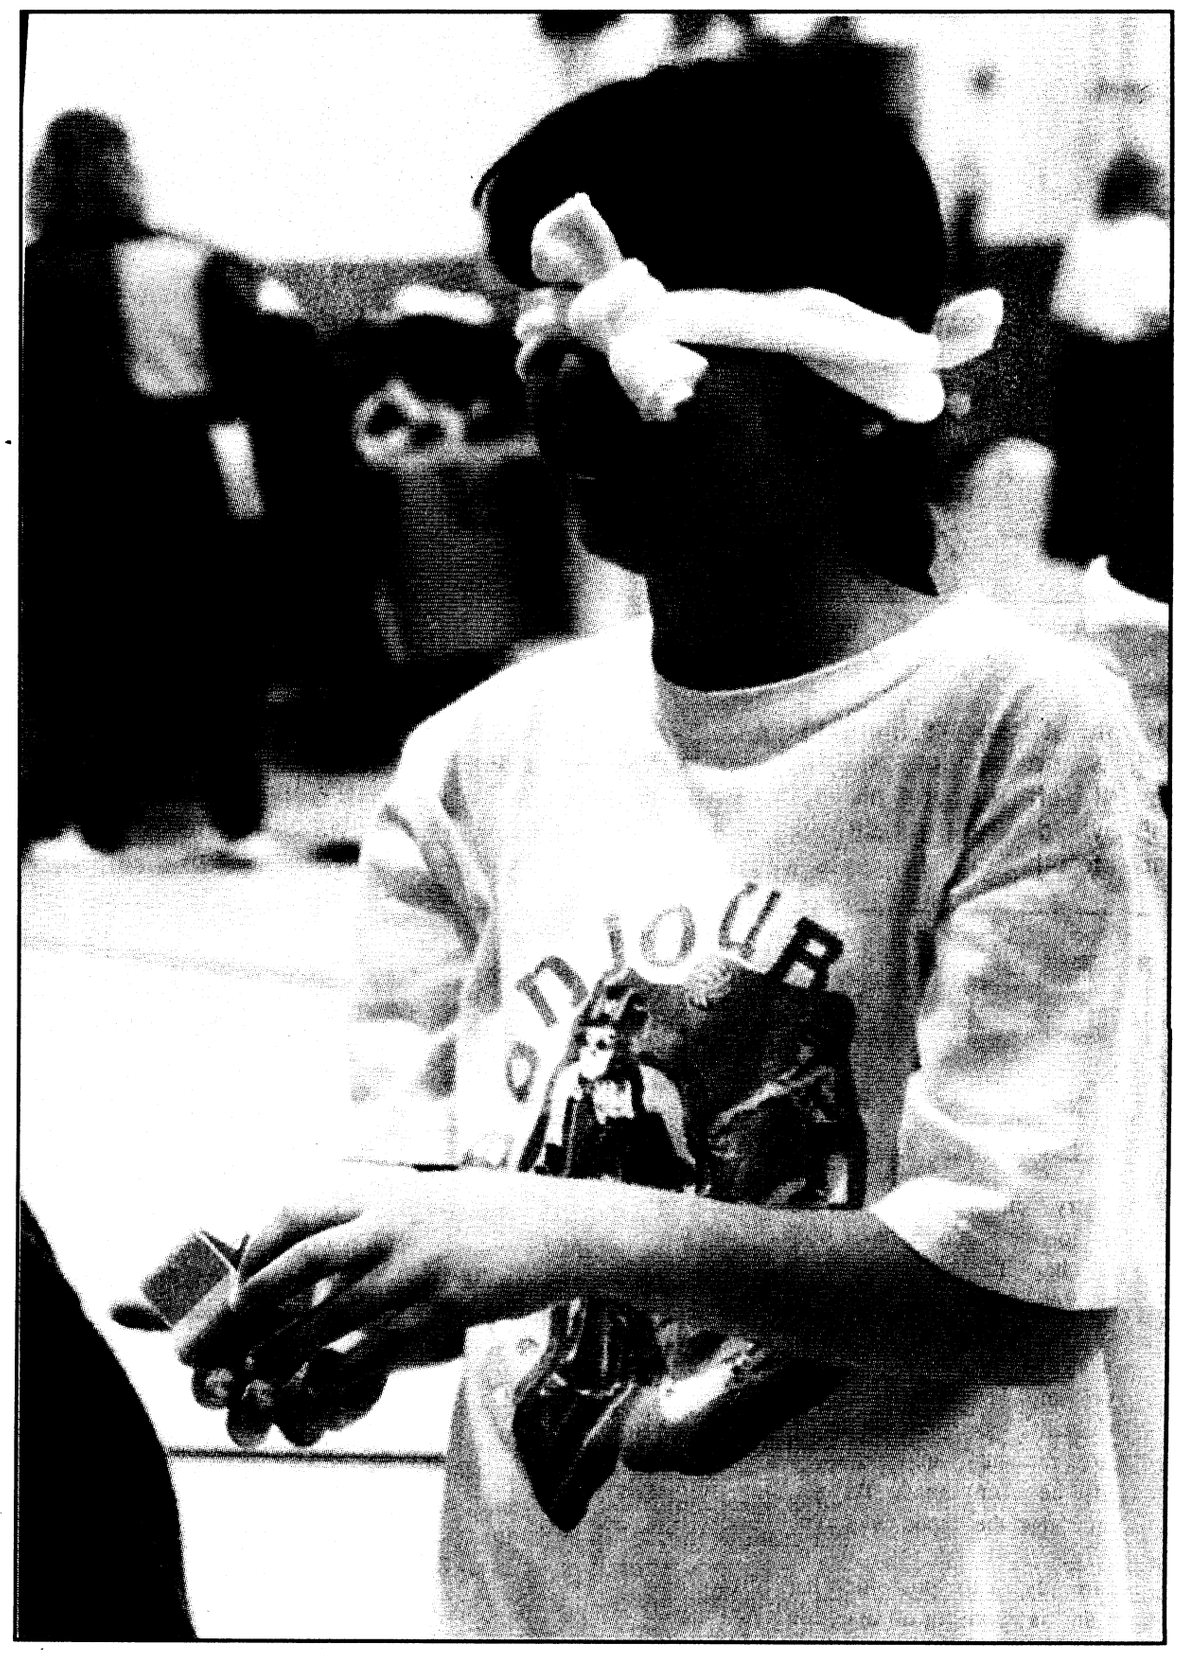
As part of "Exceptional Children's Week" across Georgia, the fair March 4 was one of several activities in the Fort Benning Schools devised to raise awareness and sensitivity as to what it's like to have a disability, said Tommye Woods, director of special education.

"It takes a unique ability to deal with a disability," Woods said as fair participants struggled to manuever wheelchairs, manipulate toys while blindfolded and read words and sentences printed backward. All these exercises highlighted this year's theme, "Hand in Hand We Learn" by simulating some obstacles exceptional children overcome on a daily basis, Woods said.

Some exceptional children must compensate for large and small motor skill problems, while others deal with hidden disabilities, such as learning and emotional handicaps. All totaled, the Fort Benning Schools serve 360 exceptional children from preschool through middle school.

With the perspective of exceptional as a positive quality, students were able to view a poster depicting famous individuals and guess what handicaps they overcame. For example, Albert Einstein was labeled retarded and could not make change for a dollar, yet his theories on time, space and gravity transformed the world of physics.

Thomas Edison, who patented more than 1,000 inventions, was dubbed "not very bright" by teachers and received only three months of formal training.



Writer Helen Keller was unable to see or hear, Franklin Roosevelt led the United States as president while confined to a wheelchair and Vincent Van Gogh created some of the world's greatest paintings while suffering from severe depression.

These profiles stressed the contributions exceptional individuals have made despite emotional, physical or learning barriers, Woods said.

Compensating for a disability "is not as easy as it looks," Woods said while children tried out adaptive devices such as spoons, pencils and scissors which were designed for individuals with physical limitations. A variety of adaptive equipment and supplies were available for testing such as a special rack to help with bowling, long grip sticks to pick things up and a device to help with buttoning a shirt.

Woods hopes participants in the fair will come away with heightened sensitivity to exceptional children.

"The next time they see someone in a wheelchair, they will remember how hard it was," she said.

Exceptional woman shares her story

By Jerrie Macintire

Jerrie Macintire/Special to The Bayonet

Leslie Taylor talks to Joni Gill, a teacher at Faith, during her visit.

When not attending her college classes or working, this petite blonde zips around town in her red sports car, often stopping at the mall to check out the latest fashions or occasionally at a favorite club for a cherished evening of dancing.

Leslie Taylor, a hazel-eyed young woman with an engaging smile, juggles school, friends, jobs and hobbies with the boundless energy of a typical 19-year-old. She works hard, studies long hours and treasures her time with friends, like most teens.

With one exception.

Taylor has used a wheelchair for most of her life, since the day an erratic driver whom she believes was drunk caused the devastating accident that took the life of her grandmother and left her and her mother with extensive injuries.

Even as a 4-year-old, she realized "something had drastically changed." She remembered a small voice inside telling her "You're not just going to lie here. You're not going to give up," and she began compensating. Compensating has become routine for Taylor, who is determined to have a fulfilling and independent life despite the disability.

She dances, drives, models professionally, attends college, holds down two jobs, and participates in road races.

By any standard, she is exceptional.

As part of Exceptional Children's Week, Taylor addressed Faith Middle School students and spoke frankly about her life, her feelings and her goals.

In an effort to emphasize similarities rather than differences, Taylor touched on some highlights in her life fulfilled through her determination to pursue her dreams.

She attended regular classes in Columbus public schools and "did everything the other kids did." She was a cheerleader in junior high and was chosen for the homecoming court at Shaw High School — all four years. As a contestant in the Miss Columbus Pageant, she was a runner up in addition to being named "Miss Congeniality."

"I'm just like you," she said last Thursday at an Exceptional Children's Week seminar at Faith School. The seminar was designed to heighten awareness of problems exceptional individuals face while emphasizing similarities among all people.

This is the third consecutive year Fort Benning's seven schools have participated in Exceptional Children's Week, said Kathy Einhorn, assistant director of special education.

During this week, the Georgia Council for Exceptional Children focuses awareness on those with disabilities who make daily adjustments because of their exceptionalities, she said.

A total of 360 exceptional children from preschool through middle school are served in the Fort Benning schools, she added.

Disabilities range from obvious physical differences such as orthopedic handicaps to inconspicuous difficulties such as emotional, behavioral or learning disabilities.

Observing this year's theme for Exceptional Children's Week, "Hand in Hand We Learn," Taylor said she welcomes questions about her wheelchair.

"I'm honored when you ask me a question because that's your way of finding out about me," she said.

Responding to the students' questions, Taylor spoke of her love of dancing and said she sometimes gets carried away with wheelies and dizzying spins. When demonstrating by request, she waived the wheelies in deference to crowded conditions, but danced vivaciously with upper body, arms and hands as Faith students kept a lively clapping tempo.

By request, she also recited some original poetry and urged students to "look at the positive view."

Awful things happen, she said, "but from my terrible experience, I developed, I learned and I grew."

When responding to a question about obstacles she faces, Taylor encouraged students to "find a way around barriers."

"Where there's a negative, there's a positive. Focus on the positive," she said.

Taylor held sessions throughout the day, asking students to look beyond exceptionalities and to "treat me no different because of the chair."

"We should not judge our friends by what's on the outside; we should look at the inside at their heart and spirit," she said.

Taylor's presentation was one of a variety of activities in the Fort Benning Schools designed to heighten awareness of exceptional challenges.

WOMEN'S HISTORY MONTH

Females blaze new trails

Name: Wanda R. Jewell
Trailblazer in what area: Women's international rifle shooting
MOS: Ordnance Branch until 1992
Unit: U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit
Job title: Administrative officer
Years on the job: 1976 to 1992 Army; October 93 to present, civilian

What adjustments did you have to make being a female trailblazer?
The adjustment is in the total dedication given to training to achieve high goals. I gave up a lot of things to spend the time training to reach world-level competition.

What were your reasons for joining the Army?
The Army has the best training arena for world-level competition in the United States at the Marksmanship Unit. I knew that to achieve my goals I needed to go where the best could be attained.

Define your style of leadership:
Leadership by example. When I set a good example, I get good results. I like to make people want to work for me.

What person has most influenced your military career?
Retired Lt. Col. Lones W. Wigger Jr., my first boss in the Army. He has more than 140 Gold Medals in world shooting competition. He is currently the manager for the U.S. Shooting Team, Olympic Training Center, Colorado Springs.

What were your reasons for choosing your military occupational specialty?
I was assigned to Ordnance Branch.

Describe a memorable moment in your career.
Being the only woman ever to win two world titles in one competition at the 1979 world shooting championships. Being on the stand to receive my Olympic Bronze Medal in 1984.

What are your future plans?
To do whatever I do, well.

Buena Vista hosts appreciation night

By William Hickman
75th Ranger Regiment

The people of Buena Vista, Ga., invited Fort Benning soldiers, civilians and family members to Military Appreciation Night Feb. 18. This special night was hosted by Mike Moon, owner of the Silver Moon Music Barn. A free concert at the Silver Moon Music Barn featuring T. Graham Brown was the main attraction.

Drivin' Country, a local band, opened the night's festivities. The band played current top 40 country hits as several music fans danced their favorite country two step. T. Graham Brown followed playing his own country hits and favorites until late into the evening.

One thousand free tickets were donated by Moon to Fort Benning units for the concert. If a soldier did not receive a ticket from his unit, he was still admitted free by showing his military identification card.

The Silver Moon Music Barn is located 2 1/2 miles south of Buena Vista on Highway 41. The Music Barn capacity is approximately 2,000 people and includes a large dance floor and balcony and floor seats. Several soldiers remarked that the facility was large but still provided good seats throughout the building.

Before the main event, Col. James T. Jackson, commander of the 75th Ranger Regiment, presented Lynn Moon, Moon's daughter, with a "Rangers Lead The Way" print, which depicts the 5th Ranger Battalion assault on the Normandy beaches. The print was presented in appreciation for the support he has given to the 75th Ranger Regiment. Jackson remarked that "Buena Vista offers the small town atmosphere that is enjoyable to visit and he appreciated the overwhelming hospitality that the town has given to the ranger regiment."

Military Appreciation Night allowed Fort Benning soldiers to travel to Buena Vista, attend the free concert, and see what the town offers to the military community. Buena Vista has the National Country Music Museum, Elvis Presley Collection and several antique and specialty shops. There are nine places to eat which offer pizza, hamburgers, deli sandwiches, pastries, Mexican food, catfish and several other specialties. Southern cooking is served at the Morgan Town House and lunch at the Market Place. Buena Vista offers four bed and breakfast inns for the visitor who wants to stay over night, especially after a late night concert.

Military Appreciation Night was the second event in Buena Vista in February. Several rangers also visited Buena Vista Feb 11. The rangers conducted an Association of the United States Army corporate membership drive. All the rangers present agreed that the town, which calls itself "America's Front Porch," is an enjoyable town to visit and with a relaxing atmosphere.

Black History Month

36th hosts program

By Denise Howell
36th Engineer Group

The 36th Engineer Group hosted a Black History Month program Feb. 17 at Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall, Building 4.

The program, coordinated by Master Sgt. Diana Willis of the Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 36th Engineer Group, showcased the creative talents of black Americans. Participants included not just group soldiers, but family members and friends.

"We basically wanted to show what black culture is all about," Willis said. "We went from the Negro spirituals of slavery to the poetry and literature of the Depression era to contemporary music and fashion."

The program began with a tribute to Pfc. Milton L. Olive, led by Pfc. Herman L. Acklin Jr., also of HHC. Olive was the only black to receive a Medal of Honor for his contribution during the Vietnam War. Fort Benning's Olive Field was named after him.

"Pfc. Olive's story really caught my attention," said Spc. Samuel Pacheco, 63rd Engineer Company. "The whole show was great, and it was the first time I'd ever seen an African fashion show."

The fashion show, featuring the fashions of Gifts and Things of Columbus Square Mall and Cohco's Clothes and African Impressions of 915 Farr Road, Columbus, offered an array of contemporary clothing for children, teens and adults. The styles were accented with Kente cloth, a multi-colored, mostly gold African print, traditionally used to adorn the clothing of African royalty. Models chose African names to describe themselves to complete the effect.

Also included in the program was the poetry of prominent black writers Maya Angelou, James Weldon Johnson and Eartha Mincey. Two soldiers, Spc. Dorothy Bess of the 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital and 1st Lt. Gino Carr of the Headquarters Support Company of the 43rd Engineer Battalion, performed Soul Gone Home, a skit by Langston Hughes.

"The skit was hilarious," said Pfc. Clifford Waldron of HHC. "The best part was when the dead son sat up to talk to his mama. The acting was fantastic."

"The music was great," said Pfc. Maxwell Brown of 2nd MASH. "I really enjoyed the choir, especially the last song, Can't Nobody Do Me Like Jesus."

Along with the Sea Horse Singers, named after the group symbol, was a solo by Sgt. Renita Stembridge of 2nd MASH and Spc. Kevin McKie of Company A, 1st Battalion of the 11th Infantry Regiment, and two selections by Prestige, two members of which belong to the 586th Engineer Company (Assault Float Bridge).

Staff Sgt. Steve Butler of HHC said, "This was one of the best black history programs I've seen. You could see that the participants put a lot of energy and effort into the show."

"Programs like these educate people from different ethnic backgrounds," said Group Command Sgt. Maj. James Gardner. "The more we learn about each other, the more we appreciate and understand each other."

Willis attributed the success of the show to "all the hidden talents here at the group. I believe we gave everyone a well-rounded snapshot of black culture," she said.

Group Deputy Commanding Officer Col. Harold Leeman and Gardner awarded the group coin to each of the participants.

community care

By Ken Franklin
Martin Army Community Hospital

Q: At times I hear other people frustrated with the health-care system. Is something wrong at Martin Army Community Hospital?

A: I know at times people discussing their health-care experiences lead off with a frustrating or bad experience.

Here are a few good things that happen at Martin Army Community Hospital:

• The Emergency Room sees an average of 150 patients per day, with more than 80 percent completing their total treatment in less than three hours. That's as many patients as Massachusetts General Hospital sees in about one-third less time.

• The Community Care Service, which includes all family and soldier clinics, as well as the Emergency Room, sees approximately 1,000 patients for every complaint they receive.

• The average charge for an office call in a civilian family practice physician's office is $40 (plus any lab, X-ray, and medicines). At Martin Army, the same type of visit is free.

• The average civilian Emergency Room visit costs more than $100. Again, at Martin Army, that same visit is free.

• Martin Army Community Hospital received the highest quality rating, "Accredited with Commendation," by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations during its last evaluation. The JCAHO evaluates the quality of care delivered at practically every hospital in the nation, military or civilian. Less than 10 percent of all hospitals evaluated received commendation status.

• Martin Army has the Army's oldest family practice residency program, which annually graduates nine or more physicians as specialists in family medicine.

In the residency program's recent inspection by the national certifying authority for specialty training, Martin Army's program received a five-year accreditation — the best rating allowed.

The Martin Care Team is much, much more than the primary care services. It includes physician specialists in more than 30 functional areas who provide top quality medical care at no cost military families and soldiers. Nurses, therapists, optometrist, podiatrists, psychologists, nurse practitioners and physician assistants add to the team, as do a dedicated staff of support personnel.

In summary, though unusual problems may stick out or make for interesting conversation, there is a great deal that is right at Martin Army Community Hospital.

Do you have a question about community medical care at Fort Benning? Send it to Community Care Corner, Martin Army Community Hospital, ATTN: HSXB-F, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905.

ask the judge

By Dinah Rainey Kirk
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: My section supervisor gave me a letter of reprimand for insubordination. He has threatened to have the letter filed in my military records. Can he do this?

A: Army Regulation 600-37 authorizes an immediate supervisor to issue a letter of reprimand to an enlisted soldier.

However, only the soldier's commander or a higher level commander, school commandant, general officer or an officer exercising general court-martial jurisdiction over the soldier can direct the filing of written reprimands in an enlisted soldier's military personnel records jacket that is maintained locally.

Unless your supervisor falls into one of these categories, he cannot direct that the letter be filed in your local military records.

Additionally, a letter may be filed in the official military personnel file only upon the order of a general officer who is senior to the person receiving the letter of reprimand or by direction of an officer having general court-martial jurisdiction over the individual.

Therefore, your supervisor cannot direct that the letter be filed in your official military personnel file either.

If an authorized individual directs that a letter of reprimand be filed in a soldier's military personnel records jacket, Army regulation requires that the letter indicate how long it will remain in the military personnel records jacket.

A letter designated for filing in the military personnel records jacket may be filed only for a period not to exceed three years or until reassignment of the soldier to another general court-martial jurisdiction, whichever is sooner.

Further, Army regulation prohibits the filing of the written reprimand unless the person receiving the letter has been given the chance to review the documentation that serves as the basis for the proposed letter and to either make a written statement or to decline, in writing, to make such a statement.

This statement may include evidence that rebuts, explains or mitigates the unfavorable information.

Statements furnished by the person receiving the letter must be attached to the letter of reprimand if the reprimand is filed in the soldier's military personnel records jacket.

However, if the letter of reprimand is filed in the soldier's official military personnel file, Army regulation does not require that the soldier's statements be attached to it.

dr. fit

U.S. Army Physical Fitness School

Q: A friend of mine recently recently started taking anabolic steroids to improve athletic performance. What are they and how prevalent are steroids?

A: Anabolic-androgenic steroids are artificial male hormones such as testosterone. The word "anabolic" means to enlarge the tissue, while the "androgenic" means the substance is masculine.

The goals of individuals who use anabolic steroids is to improve performance and enhance appearance.

In 1985, the U.S. Olympics conducted unannounced, nonpunishable series of drug tests on potential Olympic athletes. Approximately 50 percent of the tested athletes proved positive. However, over the next five years, only 1 to 2 percent of the athletes proved positive during sanctioned U.S. Olympic events.

Why is this so? The athletes know that steroids are detectable for only a short time in their urine. When the athletes know testing is near, they decrease the dosage, taper off, and even go to independent laboratories to test their own biochemistry. The use of steroids by competing male athletes is estimated to be 5 to 12 percent.

Q: Will the steroids work? How will it affect my friend?

A: The scientific literature presents contradictory findings. Some say steroids work to improve physical performance and others say they do not.

Therefore, because many studies do report a positive effect of steroids administration on strength performance, the American College of Sports Medicine has concluded "the gains in muscular strength achieved through high intensity exercise and proper diet can be increased by using anabolic-androgenic steroids in some individuals."

The ACSM and the U.S. Olympic Committee further conclude that the illegal, underground use of these steroids is prohibited and, when detected, disqualifies the athlete from the competition for up to two years.

Q: My friend also has a woman friend who wants to take these steroids. How will they affect her?

A: The use of anabolic steroids by women in sports is approximately 1 to 2 percent.

Steroids can increase muscle strength and size, but is associated with multiple adverse side effects. It does not take a rocket scientist to know that if women take male hormones, they assume characteristics of a male.

Some of these male patterns experienced by the female athlete administered male steroids include: lowered voice, body fat, breast tissue, good cholesterol (HDLs), and "periods." Steroids increase; facial hair, aggressiveness, appetite, libido, acne, body hair, incidents of liver disorders, loss of scalp hair and risks of cardiovascular disease.

In both male and female steroid use, the risks far outweigh the benefits.

TF 2000 encourages worksite fitness

Fitness School outlines civilian walking program

By Louis F. Tomasi
U.S. Army Physical Fitness School

Civilians employed by the Army are encouraged to participate in a program of regular exercise and to practice healthy lifestyle habits. The best reason for initiating an exercise program is an interest in better health and fitness.

The purpose of Total Fitness 2000 for civilian employees is to encourage worksite exercise programs. Through a cooperative effort of employees and Department of the Army, TF 2000 will decrease health-care costs and improve the worksite environment.

Areas of health and the worksite that are affected in a positive way by physical activity include: health costs, job satisfaction, absenteeism, sick leave, decreased on-site accidents, commanders' altruism and productivity.

TF 2000 is much more than getting people to exercise. It involves nutrition, decreasing chemical abuse, managing daily hassles, improving blood profiles, lifestyle awareness, weight control, hypertension identification, and other disease prevention methods.

The upcoming Follow Me to Fitness course taught through the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, is an excellent introductory course on the benefits of lifestyle changes and fitness. Physical fitness includes elements that allow the community members to perform effectively in physical and intellectual employment, training and recreational activities yet have energy to deal with unforeseen crises.

Many international companies have realized the benefits of maintaining healthy employees. Companies like Campbell's Soup, Adolph Coors, Johnson & Johnson, and the Pepsico family of companies have reported many positive attributes emerging from their fitness programs.

Phillips Petroleum recently constructed a swimming pool and weight room exercise area in their Oklahoma headquarters. Mesa Petroleum constructed a $2.5 million on-site fitness center in 1979 and since then reduced the company's yearly insurance premiums by $200,000. Mesa's Chairman, T. Boone Pickens reported his exercising employees' medical costs were reduced by 50 percent.

Fitness survey results

Recently, a questionnaire was printed in The Bayonet and the Fort Benning civilian bulletin. It asked civilians the following: 1. How often do you exercise during your work week? 2. Do you exercise aerobically three to five times a week? 3. Would you participate in a small group fitness activity near your work place?

Presently, 55.1 percent of the civilian population exercises a minimum of three times per week. Additionally, 37.7 percent of the respondents reported performing aerobic exercise three to five times per week. Nearly 90 percent of the civilian work force responded favorably to the concept of small group fitness activity near their workplaces.

In October, Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White kicked off Total Fitness 2000 in the front of Infantry Hall. It began with the largest ever exercise to music and walking sessions in the history of the post. Additional information was presented on such topics as nutrition, cardiovascular disease risks and other health issues.

To continue the walking initiative for employees, military family members and the total Army community, the U.S. Army Physical Fitness School presents the Total Fitness 2000 Guidelines for walking, clothing guidelines, and a basic training walking workout.

How to get started

Start out walking at a natural, easy gait and keep a steady pace. Walk a comfortable distance and record the time and length. As walking becomes easier and more comfortable, try adding distance each day. A 30-minute walk is recommended to begin the walking program. Forty-five minutes of walking is a achievable objective.

Early in the fitness program devote more time to warm-up, less strenuous work, flexibility, and cool-down. Because the walkers are learning the correct form and sequence for exercise routines and are less fit, there is considerable time between exercises. Do the exercises slowly with few repetitions. The exercise may be done for a set period rather than counting repetitions.

As the program progresses, consider reducing the warm-up and cool-down time. Still, five to seven minutes of each are the minimum time for warm-up and cool-down. Additionally, as the walkers improve their condi-tioning, the pace quickens and they cover more distance.

The intensity of exertion and the number of repetitions will build from week to week. The rate of progress should be 5 to 10 percent per week; it must be contingent on the individual. Some people are younger, fitter, or more faithful to the schedule. Other people adapt more quickly.

The participants should be encouraged to concentrate on the changes occurring in their fitness levels and not let others set their advancement. There is nothing sinful with maintaining a particular level for two or more weeks, or even reverting one week when illness is apparent.

This is a typical exercise session:

• 5 to 7 minutes warm-up — rhythmic activities, low intensity, mild stretching and increased flexibility/range of movement, flexibility exercises.

• 20 to 40 minutes of cardiorespiratory exercises such as, walking, running, jogging, cycling or rowing.

• 15 to 20 minutes of strength and muscular endurance exercises — weight training with free weights, single station machines, multi-station machines, or free body movement exercises.

• 5 to 7 minutes cool-down — rhythmic activities, low intensity, mild stretching and increased flexibility/range of movement, flexibility exercises.

The ranges in the cardiorespiratory and the muscular development sections may vary according to the arranged day. When the day planned is a long-walk day, then the muscular development day will be much shorter or nonexistent.

When the arranged day is a short-walk day, then the muscular development portion will be lengthier.

Clothing guidelines for walking

• Wear comfortable shoes that provide good arch support, forefoot and rear cushion and do not cause blisters.

• The heel elevation should be about 1/2 to 3/4 inch above the sole.

• The shoe top should have breathable material such as mesh, nylon or both. Good examples of walking shoes are: training models of running shoes, light trail or hiking boots, casual shoes with thick rubber or crepe rubber soles.

• Wear light clothing that is also light in color. Cotton material is readily available. Supplex, gortex or other high-tech manmade materials also can be worn. In colder areas, wear clothes that retain some heat but allow moisture to escape.

TF 2000 guidelines for walking

• Choose a comfortable time of the day to exercise, not too soon after eating, and when the air temperature is acceptable. This is particularly important when it's hot.

• Exercise with a group for company and for safety reasons.

• Stop if you feel sick, are short of breath for more than 10 minutes or have chest, arm or neck and jaw pains. When the walker feels uncomfortable progressing at the recommended rate, spend additional weeks at each level of exercise. Exercise should be comfortable and enjoyable, not grueling and distasteful.

• Warmup before the actual exercise period. The warmup period may include five to seven minutes of light walking.

• Move at a steady pace. The intensity level must make the heart beat faster and the breathing deeper.

• Hold the back straight, abdomen in and flat, and head and neck erect. Point the toes straight ahead, have the knee pass over the big toe, and swing the arms forward and backward in a straight line.

• Land on the heel of the foot and rock forward to push off on the big toe. Lifting the foot and throwing it forward is inefficient and nonproductive. It is better to establish good walking mechanics than to sacrifice mechanics for speed.

• Take comfortable length strides. When walking up hills, try to continue with the pace, and lean slightly forward.

• Breathe deeply, using the mouth and nose for breathing.

TF 2000 basic training, phase I

• Weeks 1 and 2: Walk three and four sessions on alternate days. The initial distance of one mile is appropriate. Use proper walking posture, techniques and dress correctly. A pace of one mile in 20 minutes is a good beginning speed.

• Week 3. Walk three and four sessions on alternate days. Increase the distance to one to 1 1/4 miles. Gradually work on a longer stride. Practice good, deep breathing techniques. Continue the pace one mile in 19 to 20 minutes.

• Week 4. Walk two and three sessions on alternate days (One less day this week to allow the body to rest). Increase the distance to 1 1/4 to 1 1/2 miles. Continue to work on a longer stride. Practice good, deep breathing techniques. Try varying the pace,such as walk faster between utility poles, then slower between the next poles. Vary the pace. Continue the pace of one mile in 19 to 20 minutes or 1 1/4 miles in 24 to 25 minutes.

• Week 5. Walk three and four sessions on alternate days. Increase the distance to 1 1/2 miles. Continue to improve the longer stride. Exercise good, hard breathing techniques. Test varying the pace. Try walking at 1 1/2 miles in 28 to 29 minutes.

TF 2000 advanced training, phase II

• Week 6. Walk four to five sessions per week. Keep the distance to 1 1/2 to 1 3/4 miles. Continue to perfect the longer stride. Exercise good, deep breathing techniques. Practice forced, deep breathing methods. Continue to emphasize good walking procedures. Walk the 1 3/4 miles in 31 to 33 minutes.

• Week 7. Walk four to five sessions per week. Keep the distance 1 3/4 miles. Test varying the pace. Maintain a pace of one mile in 18 minutes.

• Week 8. Walk five sessions/week. Keep the distance at two miles. Continue to perfect the longer stride. Exercise good, deep breathing techniques. Continue to emphasize good walking procedures. Maintain a pace of one mile in 18 minutes.

• Week 9. Walk three to four sessions per week (One less day this week to allow the body to rest). Increase the distance to 2 1/4 to 2 1/2 miles. Test varying the pace. Increase the pace of one mile to 17 to 18 minutes.

• Week 10. Walk five sessions per week. Increase the distance to 2 1/4 to 2 1/2 miles, varying the pace. Maintain a pace of one mile in 17 to 18 minutes.

• Week 10. Walk five sessions per week. Maintain the distance at 2 1/2 miles. Vary the pace. Maintain a pace of 2 1/2 miles in 44 to 45 minutes.

James & Snell Motors and United Way ...

co-sponsoring rodeo March 11, 12 to support local child abuse prevention efforts

James & Snell Motors, local Ford, Chrysler-Plymouth and Dodge dealership, is joining United Way to sponsor the 3rd Annual Rodeo at the Auburn Indoor Arena March 11 and 12. A portion of the proceeds will benefit LeeScan child abuse prevention programs in Lee County. LeeScan is a United Way Agency and an affiliate of the Child Abuse Council of Alabama.

For every vehicle sold Monday, March 7th through the end of March James & Snell Motors will make an additional donation to LeeScan.

Rodeo performances both Friday, March 11, and Saturday, March 12 will begin at 8 pm. Tickets are on sale now at James & Snell Motors and other area businesses. They are $6 in advance and $7 at the gate. Rodeo tickets for kids 8 years old and under, when accompanied by an adult, are FREE.

Some lucky rodeo goer will also win a color TV from James & Snell Motors at the end of the month. Watch for details at the rodeo.

According to Grady Davis, owner, Auburn Indoor Arena, who put together the event, the rodeo will be a "full fledged PCA (Professional Cowboy Association) Rodeo with contestants from around the country as well as local talent. There will be bareback bronc riding, calf roping, steer wrestling, ladies' barrell racing, team roping and bull riding". He "welcomes Grand Entry riders!"

World renown trick roper Dick Corey will announce from horseback, and between events, will entertain the crowd with rope tricks and a Mexican bullwhip act.

Fresh from New Orleans at the Super Dome, "bullfighter and clown, Reggie, and his trick donkey", will also be on hand to add to the fun as well as the safety of the contestants. Cowboys and cowgirls will be competing for cash prizes as well as points toward national PCA awards.

During intermission, there will be a special event for boys and girls 10 and under... the Kids Calf Scramble. Kids will have a chance to get in on the excitement and win a cash prize by being first to get the ribbon off of a calf's tail.

Concession stands and western exhibit areas will be open before, during and after the performances.

There will be a special exhibit of Dodge Trucks at the arena both nights of the rodeo to give rodeo goers' a good look at the latest models and choices available at James & Snell Motors in Opelika. It will be a good opportunity to get a close look at the many safety and comfort features of the Dodge RAM, called the "the truck that has changed all the rules".

The Auburn Indoor Arena, which hosts a number of different kinds of events during the year, is south of Auburn. It can be reached by taking Exit 51 on I-85, turning right on Beehive Road, going one mile and turning left on Highway 191, and it is one half mile on the right -or- come out of Auburn on Highway 29/College Street, cross I-85, travel one mile and turn right on Beehive Road, go one mile and turn left on Highway 191. The arena is one half mile on the right.

THERE IS PLENTY OF FREE PARKING AT THE ARENA.

Cal James and Gary Snell are especially pleased to be working with a United Way Agency to help prevent a serious problem. James points out, "There are 40,000 cases of child abuse reported in Alabama each year. One of our business goals is to be a good corporate citizen. This will be one of the ways James & Snell Motors will be trying to help our community. We like to work with other area businesses and agencies to improve the quality of life in Lee County. We are confident LeeScan will put the funds they receive from the rodeo to good use in helping to prevent child abuse here."

Jean Spicer, Executive Director, LeeScan, "appreciates the opportunity to cooperate with James & Snell Motors and the Auburn Indoor Arena on a fund raiser that will be FUN for the community and raise needed funds for the prevention of child abuse."

She reports, "Many related events will be happening this week to promote the rodeo. Later this week, rodeo cowboys will put on brief performances at area schools. Thursday night will be "Kids Night" at Village Mall with rodeo entertainment and ticket sales in the mall parking lot at a James & Snell Motors exhibit. Food court restaurants will have "Kids Meal Specials" and there will be drawings for door prizes from Baskin Robbins and Gayfers. Tickets will be on sale this week not only at James & Snell Motors, but also Auburn National Bank, SouthTrust Bank, J&M Bookstore, Anders Bookstore, Sikes Feed and Seed, Boots Western Wear and LeeScan."

LeeScan is a child abuse prevention organization which provides programs to specifically educate parents and children about child abuse, teach children how to protect themselves and strengthen families. There is a 24 hour "parent warn line" for emergencies, 826-7226. The same number can be used during office hours, 8am until 4 pm for regular business.

LeeScan provides a number of local programs and services. The Godparent project supports educational programs for pregnant and parenting teenagers. Special Deliveries is an education and referral program for new parents. There are also school based prevention programs, a seminar entitled "Children Coping with Divorce" for divorcing parents, parent support groups for new parents, in-home parent education for families in crisis, as well as a referral and information service for families with children with special needs.

Dodge Trucks supports rodeos

Dodge Trucks is in the 13th year as a national sponsor of professional rodeo. Dodge Truck dealers sponsor professional rodeos in 1200 host cities and 46 states. According to Dodge literature, "more people buy tickets to professional rodeos than regular season NFL Games, and... most of the cowboys and cowgirls you see drive Dodge Trucks."

Rodeo contestants consider it more than a sport; it's a lifestyle. Professional rodeo cowboys don't get paid to compete, they pay for that privilege. They don't travel expense-free in a fully equipped bus or airplane but instead spend many hours in a truck or car that more often than not doubles as a home on the road as they travel to the next event. It's a natural pairing of Dodge Trucks, built for safety, durability and comfort, and rodeo cowboys and cowgirls who need all three.

Rodeo is called "the only sport in the world to have developed from the skills required in a work situation." Even today, it is said to retain the fierce independence of the ranch hands of the 1800's who turned work into sport.

Rodeo competition falls into one of two categories: roughstock events or timed events. Roughstock events are the scored riding events of professional rodeo: saddle bronc riding, bareback riding and bull riding. In all the roughstock events, the cowboy must ride for eight seconds to receive a qualified score. The contestant uses only one hand to secure himself to the animal and may not touch anything with his "free hand" during the ride or is automatically disqualified.

In timed events: calf roping, steer wrestling, team roping, steer roping and barrel racing, most contestants ride quarter horses. The calf or steer is always given a head start determined by the size of the arena. Contestants wait behind a barrier string until the calf or steer has gone the predetermined distance before starting pursuit. Breaking the string early brings a 10 second penalty.

Katharine Hepburn stars in 'This Can't Be Love'

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

Whenever Katharine Hepburn performs these days, it's an event; but, it seems to happen only when she's reunited with trusted collaborators.

What: 'This Can't Be Love'
When: Tuesday on CBS

SPOTLIGHT

That unspoken rule has applied to a number of the legendary actress' past television movies, such as "Mrs. Delafield Wants to Marry" (1986), "Laura Lansing Slept Here" (1988) and "The Man Upstairs" (1992) ... all of which were written by playwright James Prideaux and directed by George Schaefer.

The same notion is in effect with Sunday's new CBS romantic comedy "This Can't Be Love," in which Hepburn again is under the direction of Anthony Harvey, who guided her to her third Academy Award for her performance as Eleanor of Aquitaine in "The Lion in Winter" (1968). However, the film also serves as the first teaming of Hepburn and another veteran talent: Anthony Quinn, playing a former co-star of a decidedly Hepburn-esque screen star.

That lady develops big worries when he announces his intention to write his memoirs, which are bound to include details on such matters as the years-earlier affair that he had with her. Her somewhat-intimidated new chauffeur (portrayed by Jason Bateman) is determined not to let her be harmed by the project, while a representative of the publisher (Jami Gertz) is equally set on making sure that all of the necessary information is acquired.

Katharine Hepburn and Anthony Quinn

Beyond "The Lion in Winter," the London-born Harvey was Hepburn's director on a 1973 television version of the Tennessee Williams stage classic "The Glass Menagerie" as well as on the 1983 feature film "The Ultimate Solution of Grace Quigley."

Having worked with her that many times, and also having maintained a close friendship with her over the years, he says he was pleased by the prospect of reviving their professional association.

He recalls, "Merrill Karpf, who's a terrific producer, came to me and said, 'We're doing another film with Kate.' I said, 'If you're going to do another one, let her do the thing that she does brilliantly, which is comedy.' Apart from being the most exhilarating character to work with, (Hepburn) is one of the most loyal people I've met; with everyone she makes friends with, she's a friend for life. I see a lot of her whenever I'm in New York."

Harvey cites that as having been one of the most positive aspects of making "Grace Quigley," his last theatrical film to date, and a picture that he maintains "was wrecked by Cannon Films."

The critically lambasted movie concerned the unlikely partnership between a senior citizen (Hepburn) and a hit man (Nick Nolte), but Harvey's efforts also encompass his role as the editor of unconventional filmmaker Stanley Kubrick's highly regarded "Lolita" (1962) and "Dr. Strangelove" (1964).

FORT BENNING HAVE A SAFE WEEKEND

'Five Guys Named Moe' coming to Fox Theatre

Theatre League of Atlanta

The Cameron Mackintosh production of the hit Broadway musical "Five Guys Named Moe," the song and dance celebration featuring the music of 1940s jazz musician Louis Jordan, premieres at the Fox Theatre in Atlanta for a limited one-week engagement April 12 through 17.

Ticket buyers for "Five Guys Named Moe" will be given the opportunity to purchase priority tickets, in advance of public sale, to the October engagement of "The Phantom of the Opera."

Winner of London's prestigious Olivier Awards), Clarke Peters' "Five Guys Named Moe" is directed and choreographed by Charles Augins with vocal arrangements by Chapman Roberts.

"Five Guys Named Moe" opened on Broadway at the Eugene O'Neill Theatre in April 1992, winning a 1992 Tony Award nomination for Best Musical. Time Magazine proclaims the show "an absolutely joyful experience. A rollicking time."

The cast of six male singers and dancers romp through such well-known Jordan songs as "Let the Good Times Roll," "Caldonia," "Messy Bessy," "Is You Is Or Is You Ain't Ma' Baby," the title song and many others.

Producer Cameron Mackintosh ("Les Miserables," "The Phantom of the Opera" and "Miss Saigon") was instrumental in transferring the original production of "Five Guys Named Moe" from London's Theatre Royal Strafford to the West End's Lyric Theatre, where it continues to play to packed houses since its opening in December 1990.

In addition to this national tour, future productions will open in Boston and in Melbourne, Australia.

Jordan, the alto saxophonist who died in 1975 at the age of 66, was the pivotal figure in the development of rhythm and blues.

The lean, emphatic beat heard in his songs was known for a time as 'lump blues" and has been interpreted over the years by Bill Haley and the Comets, Chuck Berry, Fats Domino, and more recently by new-waver Joe Jackson, blues guitarists Albert Collins and B.B. King.

Jordan influenced many other jazz and rhythm and blues legends, most notably Ray Charles and Ella Fitzgerald.

"Five Guys Named Moe" is presented by the American Express Atlanta Broadway Series.

Tickets are on sale at Ticketmaster outlets including Turtles, Sound Warehouse, Coconuts, Tower Records, Publix and the Fox Theatre Box office. To charge tickets, call (404) 817-8700 or (404) 249-6400.

Showtimes are: Tuesday through Friday at 8 p.m.; Saturday at 2 and 8 p.m.; and Sunday at 2 and 7:30 p.m.

Ticket prices are: Friday and Saturday evenings - $30.50, $28.50, $20.50 and $11; all other performances - $28.50, $25.50, $17.50 and $10. Discounts are available to groups of 20 or more by calling (404) 873-4300.

Symphony to present musical circus

Columbus Symphony Orchestra

The Columbus Symphony Orchestra, under the baton of Maestro George Del Gobbo, will present the second concert of the Warren's Family Series Sunday.

This musical circus will include sideshow festivities beginning at 2 p.m., followed by the concert at 3 in the Three Arts Theatre.

This concert is sponsored by Warren's and News Channel 3 with additional funding provided by the Georgia Council for the Arts.

The sideshow will take place outside the Three Arts Theatre under tents, and will feature live performers, games, circus snack foods for a nominal charge and an instrument hands-on petting zoo.

The petting zoo will display instruments of the orchestra and will enable children to experiment with them.

Tickets are $6 for adults and $4 for children 12 and under and are available at the Columbus Symphony Orchestra office located in the lower level of the Barnett Bank on First Avenue or at the Three Arts Theatre the day of the performance.

Tickets are also available by phone at 323-5059.

horoscope

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You will be accomplishing much from behind the scenes this week. You will be pleased with the results of a research project. Business interests proceed nicely. Loved ones will be feeling especially close to each other now.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) It's a busy week for you. You may be making plans now to visit friends at a distance. Partners are in agreement about mutual concerns. This weekend, you could be nursing a real or imagined hurt in private. Talk it over instead.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) This is an excellent week for career interests. New work opportunities present themselves now. It's the right time to sell yourself and your ideas to others. Work priorities may take precedence this weekend over social interests.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A partner has a fun and unusual suggestion to make now. Couples will be making plans for some time away together. You are at a disadvantage if you mix business and pleasure. Family life is rewarding this weekend.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) Innovative ideas put you a step ahead in business now. You will also be making important changes at home. Meetings with financial advisers go well. You should get more than one estimate for home repairs. A relative may be a bit demanding. Plans for socializing fall into place.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) You will be in the mood for something different in the way of entertainment now. You will have success in reaching agreements with others. Partners are in sync. Couples will make plans for a special outing. Romance is a definite plus.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Some will receive a raise in salary or an important new money-making opportunity. Home decorators feel inspired now. Exercising initiative brings you gains. Your charming personality will be a factor in this week's successes.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You will want to save some time this week for sports and hobbies. New understandings are reached in romance. A work project this week will take more time than you had anticipated. You will opt for time for just the two of you this weekend.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You will find something unusual and unique when shopping this week. Time for yourself now will be utilized in studying or getting household chores out of the way. Exercise discrimination about whom you socialize with now.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) You will be enthusiastic with this week's new ideas. Originality is at a peak now. You may make plans to throw a party. Be practical regarding business interests. Social graces are an asset.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) Business talks will be success-ful this week. You will express yourself to good advantage now and others will be impressed. Your money prospects turn for the better. You will hear good news from a person at a distance.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20) Things go very much your way this week. You will be making plans for either travel or educational studies. Watch credit card use. Though extra money comes in now, it's up to you to hold on to it.

CG to host egg hunt for Easter

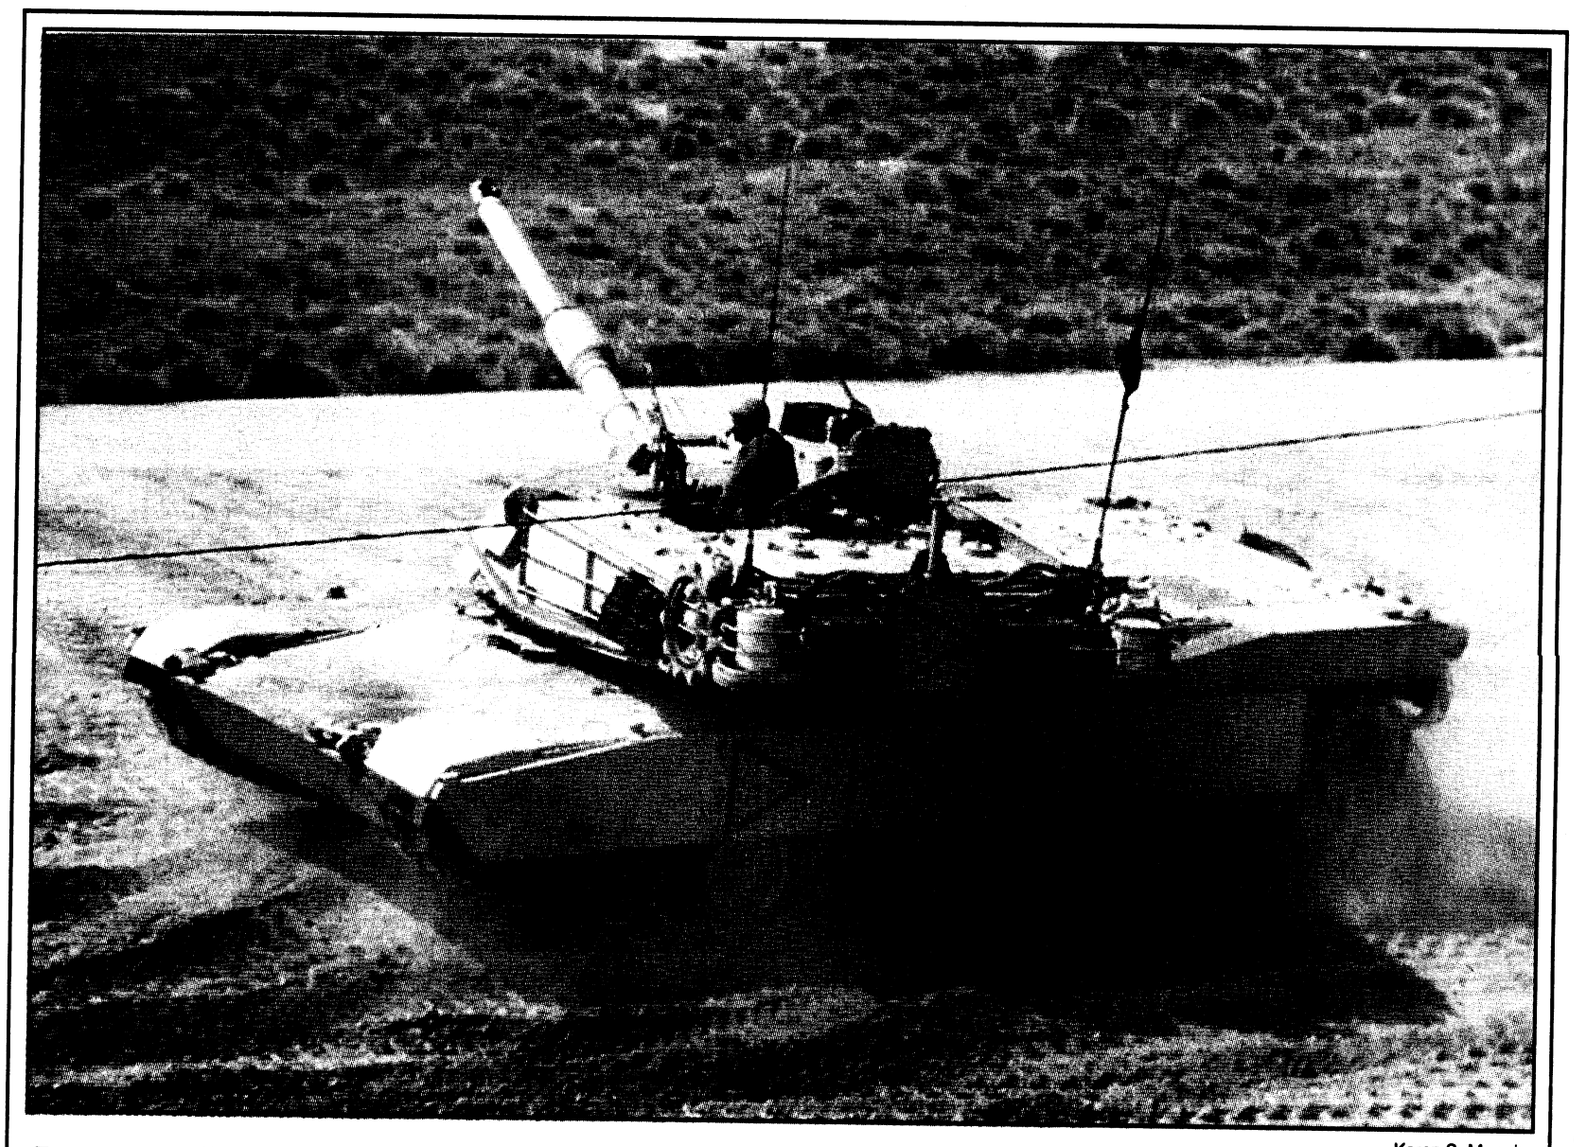
By Jerrie MacIntire
Special to The Bayonet ©

The annual Easter Egg Hunt and spring carnival is planned for March 26 from 10 a.m. until noon at Riverside, the home of Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White and his wife, Linda.

"We are expecting more than 2,000 participants, and General and Mrs. White are really looking forward to having everyone there to enjoy the activities," said Billie Smith, youth activities director, who is helping coordinate the event.

This year, the activities will include an egg hunt for children 18 months to 10 years old, games, free soft drinks and cotton candy, rides on a mini train, puppet shows and an astro jump apparatus.



The egg hunt areas will be divided by age groups; 18 to 36 months, 4 and 5 years, 6 and 7 years, and 8 to 10 years. No parents may enter the hunt areas.

Staff members from youth services and volunteers will supervise the hunt areas and ensure that all children find some of the 4,230 eggs that will be hidden, Smith said.

Commissary vendors will provide eggs for the hunt, and youth activities staff and volunteers will cook and color them, Smith said. Anyone interested in helping with the project can call 545-3070.

The Military Police will coordinate parking, and some streets in the vicinity of Vibbert and Lumpkin will be closed to traffic that morning for the safety of the children.

This annual event is sponsored by the Family Support Division of the Directorate of Community Activities in conjunction with TIC Credit Union, SatoTravel, Coca Cola and Commissary vendors and the Army and Air Force Exchange Service.

608th to return

Last post unit to come back from Somalia

USAIC Public Affairs Office

About 50 members of the 608th Ordnance Company, 13th Corps Support Battalion, are expected to return from Somalia today. They are the last group of Fort Benning soldiers to leave Somalia.

The soldiers are scheduled to arrive at Hunter Army Air Field, Savannah, Ga., early today. They will be flown by U.S. Army helicopters to Lawson Army Airfield. A welcome-home ceremony is set for 4 p.m.

More than 1,500 Fort Benning soldiers have served in Somalia during the past year. More than 600 soldiers have served two tours of duty in Somalia during the same period.

Fort Benning units that have been deployed to Somalia since January 1993 include the 43rd Engineer Battalion; 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment; 13th Corps Support Battalion; 533rd Transportation Company; 598th Maintenance Company; 608th Ordnance Company; a platoon from the 317th Engineer Battalion, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division; and the 926th Medical Detachment, 2nd Mobile Surgical Hospital.

Other Benning units that served in Somalia are Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 36th Engineer Group; 63rd Combat Support Equipment; elements of the 535th Engineer Detachment and the 498th and 690th Medical companies.

Medal of Honor: Columbus to salute three past awardees

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

The City of Columbus and Fort Benning will together honor three American heroes as part of National Medal of Honor Day.

The event, which was celebrated in Columbus for the first time last year, will take place at the Government Center at 10 a.m. March 25.

Three Medal of Honor awardees who live in the area will be special guests at the ceremony: retired colonels Robert B. Nett and Edward Schowalter Jr., and retired Maj. Freeman V. Horner.

Several organizations will participate in the event, including students from Fort Middle School.

"We're trying to get the area youth involved in remembering our American heroes," said Jim Rhodes, organizer and master of ceremonies for the event.

He said he hopes to eventually get the entire school district involved in Medal of Honor Day.

The featured speaker will be Juvenile Court Judge Aaron Cohn and comments will also be given by Columbus Mayor Frank Martin and Fort Benning Chief of Staff Col. Burnet R. Quick.

Other participants include the Infantry Chorus and a color guard form the 11th Infantry Regiment.

According to Rhodes, this event will be an opportunity to "take time out to acknowledge all that veterans have done for our country."

Nett and Horner both earned their medals during battles of World War II. Schowalter earned his medal during the conflict in Korea.

Parenting lecture kicks off Parent Academy

Visitor stresses teaching children how (not what) to think

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning Schools' weekend seminar, the Parent Academy, kicked off the evening of March 11 with a spaghetti dinner and guest speaker presentation at Faith School.

Barbara Coloroso, an educator and mother who has given parenting seminars across the country, spoke to the Faith audience on "Kids are Worth it: Parenting with Heart and Humor."

Her presentation was laced with humor and punctuated by quick gestures, but her purpose, as she told her audience, was "to irritate you."

"When something irritates an oyster," she said, "it either makes a pearl out of it, or it dies. I hope you'll do the former."

One of Coloroso's main points was that children must be taught how to think, not what to think.

"If you allow children to make choices and live with the consequences of those choices," she said, "you're teaching them to think for themselves. You don't want to let them make life-or-death decisions, but if it's less important than that, let it go."

Coloroso gave as examples of less-than-life-threatening decisions such things as allowing children to choose their own outfits for school and deciding whether or not to wear a coat.

"They really won't catch pneumonia if they go out without a coat," she said. "Let them choose to wear a coat for their own comfort, not because you say so."

The benefit of allowing a child to make his or her own choices and decisions, Coloroso said, is that the child will grow into an adult who can make his or her own decisions.

Coloroso

She said children who are always told what to do do things for two reasons: to get approval and to please adults," she said. "When they get a little older, they'll do things to get approval and to please their peers. If you think your child has changed when he reaches adolescence, it's because from the time he was little, he's been listening to somebody else. Now, it's not you anymore."

A child who has learned to think, Coloroso said, will make informed decisions about sexual activity , drugs and other choices.

Our goals as parents, Coloroso said, should be to empower our children and influence them positively, not simply to make them "mind."

Coloroso makes a distinction between punishment and discipline. Punishment, she has written, is:

- adult oriented
- requires judgement
- imposes power from without
- arouses anger and resentment
- invites more conflict

Discipline, Coloroso writes:

- shows children what they've done wrong
- gives them ownership of the problem
- gives them ways to solve the problems they've created; and
- leaves their dignity intact.

AT A GLANCE

Barbara Coloroso's "Winning at Parenting ... without beating your kids" principles include:

SIX CRITICAL LIFE MESSAGES

- I believe in you
- I trust in you
- I Know you can handle it
- You are listened to
- You are cared for
- You are very important to me

THREE CON GAMES

- Begging, Bribing, Weeping, Wailing, and Gnashing of Teeth
- Anger and Aggression
- Sulking

We tend to give in to con 1, hook into con 2, and on con 3 we tend to go into con 1 or 2 ourselves.

command column

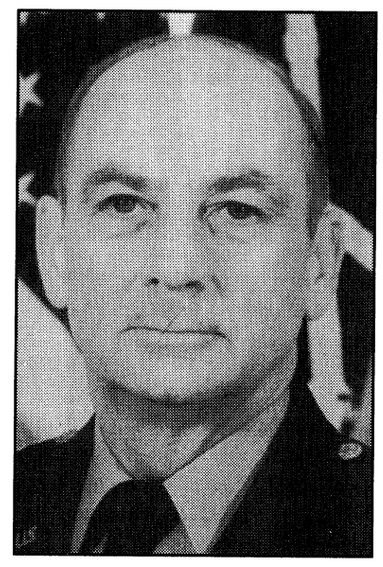
It's always gratifying to end a year successfully and to begin another with the hope and the prospect of an even better performance. This is why our theme for the 1994 Army Communities of Excellence competition is "Making the best even better." This we are doing, and it is exciting.

For the second consecutive year, we are in the finals and are competing to be acknowledged as the best installation in the Army. We took first place last year in the large installation category as best in the continental United States. With this honor came a $1 million award for excellence. This year we have high hopes of winning the Commander-In-Chief's Award as the best installation in the Army worldwide and $1.5 million.

If you asked me, "What is the key to our success?" My reply would be, there are many factors but the overall reason is our people. The pride and enthusiasm you demonstrate on a daily basis reflects in the quality services you provide to our soldiers, their families, our civilians and our retirees.

I am sure you are interested in what we are doing with the $1 million we won last year. As you recall, we canvassed the entire community to see how to spend the money. This postwide survey showed us you wanted the money spent on recreational activities and barracks upgrades.



We are doing just that. We'll build a recreation trail that ties in with Columbus' Riverwalk. That means our on-post soldiers and family members will have access to an additional seven miles of walking, jogging and biking trails into the heart of downtown Columbus.

This trail will follow the Chattahoochee River, pass through a nature preserve, a boat marina, the Olympic softball complex and a nine-hole golf course.

Your money will also be spent on refurbishing our gymnasiums and swimming pools, upgrading the running track at Kelley Hill, purchasing furniture for the new recreation center at Sand Hill and playground equipment for the housing areas, and providing for a picnic area in the vicinity of the Main Post fire station and Directorate of Information Management buildings.

All of this dovetails nicely with our ongoing Morale, Welfare and Recreation program. A program that is the best managed in the Army and that's resulted in a new recreation center on Sand Hill, a sports bar on Kelley Hill and a refurbished lounge at the Main Post Bowling Center.

Thanks to our MWR program, junior enlisted soldiers will soon have a new club and a miniature golf course next to the Main Post laundromat; the golf course should be completed in early June.

White

Of course our Uchee Creek and Destin recreation centers continue to be the best the Army has to offer.

The barracks upgrade money is coming from other sources.

As you can see, our post community will certainly benefit from these projects. But there were many wonderful ideas that didn't make the cut. And that's why we need to win again this year — so more of those projects can be funded.

But I need your help. Once again, I need you to demonstrate why Fort Benning has the best work force in the Army and why Fort Benning is the best place to live, to work and to play.

Yes, we need to spruce up our housing areas, our barracks areas and our work areas, both inside and out. But, ACOE is much more than show. It's a program of substance. Installations are rated on how well soldiers, family members and fellow workers are cared for. ACOE is an attitude that says, "We deserve excellent facilities and services and we are willing to do something about providing both."

And this is where Fort Benning shines. Everywhere I go, I see your infectious, can-do attitudes. Others see it too. But, what is especially important is for the ACOE team to see it.

Our soldiers can help by demonstrating their professionalism and discipline. The best outward sign of that, of course, is military courtesy, snappy salutes and cheery greetings, both from subordinates to superiors and back.

Do all this in true Fort Benning fashion and our hopes of winning will become a reality. Then, the next step will be to decide once again how to spend the money. Only, next time it'll be $1.5 million. Hooah! You are the best!

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White
Commanding general

545-boss

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for soldiers to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere. While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies established to provide assistance, the line offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders.

The Bayonet features some of the calls that may benefit other members of the Fort Benning community.

☎ Call: I would like to know what the policy is on additional people living in quarters. My neighbor has had a visitor for more than three months and I would like to know how long visitors can stay.

Family Housing Division response:
According to U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 210-050, Paragraph 3g, civilian visitors are allowed for up to 90 days in government quarters. However, in certain circumstances, the post will approve an exception to policy to allow relatives to reside in the quarters with the family.

☎ Call: I am upset because of a problem with my temporary duty settlement.

After I went TDY Dec. 3, I filed a voucher and in the meantime I received an American Express bill for $400. When I returned from a field problem, I received a check in the mail for $13.

I have spoken to my resource management officer who stated that since the amount was not written on the voucher (but all the receipts were attached) the claim would not be allowed.

I think this is not right.

I believe they could have taken just a little extra time and gotten my voucher right and paid me. Now I have a bill with American Express.

I would appreciate any assistance you could provide.

Finance Office response:
When the caller submitted his travel claim he did not claim lodging on the Department of Defense Form 351-2. The lodging receipt was attached but voucher examiners are not allowed to enter money amounts on the claim.

A proper supervisory review of the travel claim would have prevented this incorrectly prepared voucher from being submitted to the Travel Branch.

The caller will need to submit a properly prepared supplemental voucher to claim lodging and then the amount will be paid.

Gun safety protects everyone

George Blain
Infantry Branch Safety Office

commentary

Your youngster is visiting a friend's house. The two manage to escape from the baby sitter for just a minute and venture upstairs. There, while hiding underneath the bed, one finds a dark, heavy object. He (or she) points it at the other child and ... tragedy.

Between 1990 and 1992 handgun accidents were responsible for the deaths of more than 600 children under the age of 15.

In our world of increasing violence, parents must take responsibility for teaching gun safety to their children. Even if you as parents do not own a gun, chances are that someone you know does.

While there is no perfect time to talk to your child about gun safety, a good yardstick is when the children start play-acting, asking questions about guns or television related gun violence.

Children may not be able to discern real violence from television violence. We as adults understand that people who are shot and killed on a show will appear again in another show. Children may not be able to make that distinction. Talk with your children about television violence; don't assume they know what you know.

There are four steps to basic gun safety you should teach your child:

1. Stop
2. Don't touch
3. Leave the area
4. Tell an adult.

The first two are the most important. Children are curious and their natural impulse may be to touch or handle a gun. As a parent you must stress these first two steps.

Leaving the area may be defined as a room, if for some reason the child cannot leave the apartment or house. Finally, by telling a responsible adult, such as a neighbor, police officer or teacher, the child not only gets out of the immediate area, but also informs someone who can handle the situation.

Guns in quarters should be kept unloaded with the firearm and ammunition locked up in childproof containers. Gun owners should keep their gun and ammunition separate. Both should be stored securely, where no unauthorized person can get at either.

Also, at no time should any gun be left out with small children present.

Finally, be honest with your child when he or she asks gun-related questions. Don't turn a gun into an item of curiosity for your child.

Changes may be in store for officer education

Process action team suggests altering accession policies, precommissioning

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

The future may hold some changes in store for the officer education system.

A Training and Doctrine Command process action team, chartered by TRADOC Commander Gen. Frederick M. Franks, has recommended some changes after doing a study to identify possible improvements to the system.

"This was a broad-based review of the entire officer education system," said Col. John Baer, the TRADOC team chief.

"Our guidance was to include input from the owners of the process — the school commandants and officers, the Army National Guard and the U.S. Army Reserve — and the users — Forces Command and the Army in the field."

With that input, the team has recommended changes to officer accession policies, precommissioning military training and the Combined Arms Services and Staff School.

Accession policies

The U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y. ROTC and Officer Candidate School are the primary sources for new Army officers. Right now, West Point and OCS fill constant annual quotas, while ROTC output is adjusted as the demand for new officers rises and falls.

"One of the concerns is it takes four years to get an ROTC graduate commissioned," said Lt. Col. Charles A. Peddy, chief of the Training and Analysis Division of Fort Benning's Directorate of Operations and Training.

"Let's say this year we think we need 3,000 lieutenants to come in four years from now. Then two years down the road we downsize the Army. Now we don't need 3,000; we only need 2,000. What do we do with the extra 1,000 that we've already given contracts to?"

To solve that problem, the team suggested that ROTC and West Point be given the stable output goals while OCS flexes to meet the changing needs.

The answer may not be that simple, though. That solution relies on the assumption that OCS has the numbers of people needed coming in, Peddy said, "whereas with ROTC, you're going out and looking for people and bringing them in."

Precommissioning

Another change the team suggested is to conduct precommissioning military training in one location.

Precommissioning training is conducted for ROTC cadets between their junior and senior years of college. Cadets currently go through their "advanced camp" each summer at Fort Bragg, N.C., and Fort Lewis, Wash.

Focusing resources in one location for summer training will not only result in savings, as Baer pointed out, but will standardize the system, Peddy said.

Each cadet's scholastics and advance camp performance determines his or her position on the order of merit list. Tactical officers rate the cadets' performance at the advanced camps, Peddy said, ranking them from one to 50, for example.

"There are different cadre at different places, that kind of thing. So if you wanted to standardize it so you could truly rank everybody from one to 3,000 ... you want to do it in one place," Peddy said.

Installations within TRADOC, Forces Command and the U.S. Army Reserve are being looked at for the location of a single site, but one has not yet been chosen.

CAS3

Information gathered by the team from the commanders and graduates of the Combined Arms Services and Staff School indicates the program is extremely valuable, but that it is coming too late in officer's development cycles, Baer said.

Officers now attend their branch's advanced course and generally complete a staff officer assignment before receiving company level commands.

They attend the Combined Arms and Services Staff School between the six- and nine-year point of commissioned service. In this sequence, the CAS3 training occurs too late.

The TRADOC team suggested moving the nine-week CAS3 course closer to the advanced course, and a study was under way to see if the school, located at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., could handle the increased class loads that would result in offering the school earlier in officers' careers.

"An option they are looking at is doing away with (the school) ... and increasing each advanced course by several weeks to get the staff study done," Peddy said.

Baer said he looks at these changes as evolutionary, rather than revolutionary.

"From 1900 until today, (the officer education system) has steadily evolved and changed to meet the needs in the strategic environment of the time," Baer said.

If Army leadership decides to adopt these changes, the earliest they can be implemented will be fiscal 1995, Baer said.

Community: Military Police provide monetary, other support

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

The Fort Benning Military Police Activity has been up to great things lately.

In addition to its normal duties, the unit has been involved recently in several community activities and conducted a successful fund-raiser.

In their most recent effort to help out the community, the MPs are ready to begin recruiting for a new league of neighborhood basketball teams.

The idea for the program, which will focus on Fort Benning's teen population, was conceived by MPs Sgt. 1st Class Thomas Smith and Sgt. 1st Class James A. Nelson while they cruised post housing areas and noticed teens playing on the outdoor basketball courts.

"We see this as an opportunity to build a rapport with these kids and with summer coming, it will give them something positive to focus on," Smith said.

Smith was a member of the MPA basketball team, which placed third in this year's post championship tournament. He and several other soldiers from the unit have volunteered to act as coaches, referees and time keepers.

So far, feedback from post teens and their parents has been positive, according to Smith.

Tentative plans have the league running at least throughout the spring months until Youth Services begins its summer program.

Sign-up sheets will be posted in Fort Benning gyms and community recreation centers.

The MPs raised nearly $20,000 in late February as part of the Jail and Bail yearly fund-raiser. The three-day event was conducted in cooperation with the Columbus Police Department and the Muscogee County Sheriff's Department. The campaign raises funds for the Crimestoppers reward program.

Both Columbus and Fort Benning Police tap into the same pool of money to offer as rewards while trying to solve difficult cases.

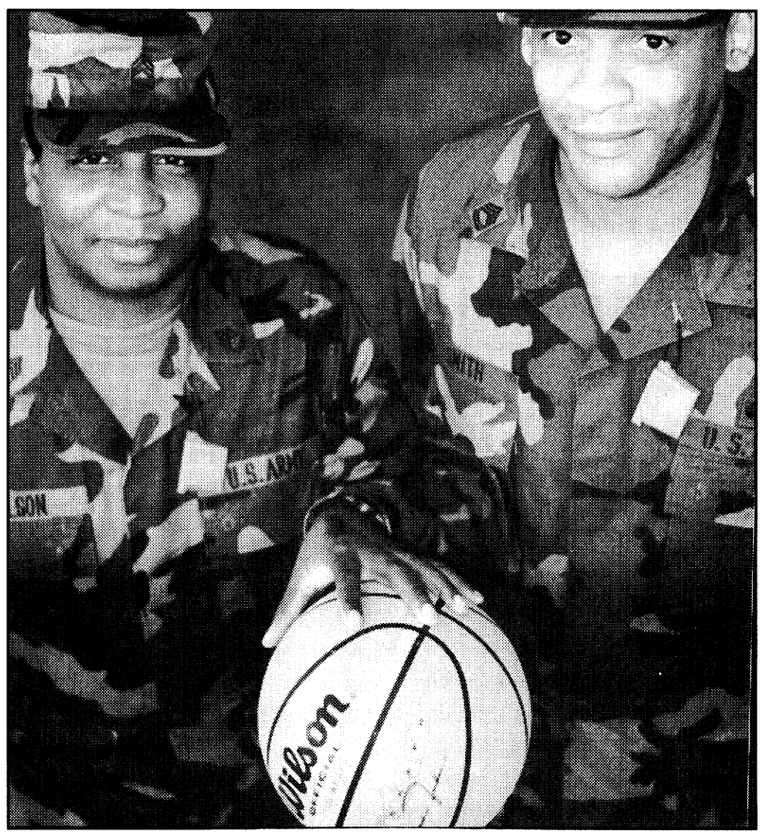
During the Jail and Bail campaign, individuals are arrested for bogus reasons and thrown into a mock jail set up in the center court at the Peachtree Mall.

A judge is on hand to set a bail amount, which the arrested person has to raise by calling friends or family to make pledges to the campaign.

Usually the police are "tipped off" to make arrests by co-workers or family members of the "criminal."

"Many of the arrests are prearranged and prepaid by spouses and some people end up making phone calls for three or four hours tying to get out of jail," said Sgt. 1st Class Bruce Williams, noncommissioned officer in charge of the MPA Physical Security Section.

"One unit on Kelley Hill had about 80 percent of their people put in jail just getting back at each other," he said.



The Military Police were in charge of "arresting" Fort Benning personnel and provided additional support to the campaign effort with Blinky, a remote controlled miniature MP car with operational lights and siren. McGruff the crime dog also made an appearance at the mall during the fund-raiser, courtesy of the MP's.

Blinky and McGruff both talk to children, the former with the use of a head-set and microphone.

The crimefighting, safety preaching duo also have been making appearances lately at post schools and any official functions where children are present.

"McGruff gets the attention of the kids," Williams said. "They'll listen to what he has to say."

The Riverside Easter Egg Hunt will be his next gig.

post briefs

Ceremony to honor Drill Sgt. of the Year

The Fort Benning Drill Sergeant of the Year ceremony will be hosted by the Infantry Training Brigade at the Sand Hill Recreation Center Thursday, at 3:30 p.m.

Retired Col. Donald C. Shuffstall will be the keynote speaker for the ceremony.

For more information contact Sgt. First Class Rory Malloy at 544-9484.

Women's history symposium Tuesday

A Women's History Month Symposium, hosted by the Equal Opportunity Office, will be Tuesday in Infantry Hall, Classroom 5 from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Topics will include "The Glass Ceiling" by Jeanne Dugas, associate professor at the University of Alabama, "Women in Law" by Arlene Johnson, affirmative actions officer at Columbus College, and "Women in Medicine" by Maj. Gwenneth C. Simmonds of Martin Army Community Hospital.

Participants can bring lunches. For more information, call 545-6665 or 545-3200.

Also, a Women's History Month Luncheon, hosted by the Dental Activity, will be Wednesday in the Regimental Room of the Fort Benning Officers' Club from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Call Sgt. Michelle Littrel at 544-9073 for more information.

OCS senior status review Tuesday

Company A, 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment (Officer Candidate School), will host a senior status review on York Field at 1 p.m. Tuesday. A reception is scheduled following the review at Wigle Hall at 2 p.m.

The public is invited. For more information, call 545-4334.

Engineers to meet

The Society of American Military Engineers will meet at 11:30 a.m., Wednesday at the Officers' Club. E. Lamar Faulk, president of Polyengineering, Inc., will speak on "Army Firing Ranges."

Preretirement program to be May 18 in Bldg. 4

The Retirement Services Office will host a preretirement orientation in Marshall Auditorium in Infantry Hall, May 18 from 8:30 a.m. to noon.

The keynote speaker will be retired Col. Judd Walton from the Army and Air Force Mutual Aid Association. Preregistration is required.

Contact the Retirement Services office at 545-5369 or 545-2715 between 7:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

Trial Defense to close

Because of the Regional Defense Counselor's Conference, the Trial Defense Office in Building 65 will be closed from March 30 to April 1. Normal operating hours will resume on April 4.

In case of emergency, call 545-2175 or 545-2176.

Health insurance reps to visit April 6

Representatives from Mail Handlers and Blue Cross and Blue Shield health insurance companies will be available in Room 132 of Meloy Hall, Building 6, from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. April 6 to answer insurance questions.

Appointments can be made with the Personnel Services Center at 545-2470 or 545-3374.

Units' changes of command planned

The following changes of command are planned:

- May 13, 10 a.m., 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, Dickman Field.
- May 26, 9 a.m., 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Training Brigade, Wetherby Field.
- July 6, 9 a.m., 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Training Brigade, location to be announced.
- Nov. 1, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, location and time to be announced.

EFMB program provides assistance

The Exceptional Family Member Program is a Department of the Army program designed to assist, through selective assignment and reassignment, the soldier who has a special needs family member.

The EFMP addresses the needs of those family members, adults or children, who have a physical, intellectual or emotional disorder that limits that person's capability to take part in activities and which requires special treatment, therapy, education, training or counseling.

The program's purpose is to let the U.S. Total Army Personnel Command at DA know of any family members with special needs, so this can be a consideration during the assignment selection process.

For additional information regarding the EFMP, contact Frances Howard, coordinator, Exceptional Family Member Program, Army Community Service, at 545-6969 or 545-5516.

Spring Cleanup March 28 to April 1

A postwide Spring Cleanup will be March 28 to April 1. Housing area occupants are responsible for cleaning their quarters area. This includes yard maintenance and improperly parked personally owned vehicles. Area coordinators will offer assistance in facilitating pickup of large debris and any bulk recycleable aluminum or large scrap aluminum. Area coordinators will conduct final inspections in each housing area April 1.

Cleanup materials available from DPW

In support of the Army Communities of Excellence visit and Spring Cleanup, the Directorate of Public Works has available pine straw for family housing quarters, troop units and activities. Fertilizer and lime are also available.

To receive pine straw and fertilizer, units and activities must submit a Department of Army Form 4283 (Work Order Request) to DPW.

Family Housing residents can pick up straw, fertilizer and lime at the U-Do-It Center.

It is still too early in the year to plant grass seed. Grass seed should be ready and available for planting by mid-April. Housing residents can pick up seeds at the center in April. Units and activities need to plan ahead and order grass seeds when they order pine straw, fertilizer, etc.

For assistance in removing large items, it is recommended to call a community life noncommissioned officer for coordination with the sponsoring unit to assist.

For information, call Dominick DeCarlo, chief, Unit and Housing Support Branch, at 545-4207 or 545-1121.

Get tax help at PX

Free assistance with tax form preparation by members of the Legal Assistance Office will be available at the Post Exchange at the Main Mall April 9 from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Those wishing to make use of the assistance should bring all paperwork and tax forms received. For more information, call Jane Winand at 545-3281 or 545-3282.

Civilian training class April 14 at youth center

A seminar titled, "Overcoming Adversity II," will be April 14 from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. at the Youth Activities Center, Building 1056. Attendees will be limited to 130 participants. There are no costs associated with this training.

Topics will include "Spirituality and Adversity," "Facing Personal Adversity" and "Overcoming Adversity."

The seminar is open to civilian employees, supervisors, union stewards, nurses, military personnel and other community personnel.

Nominations can be made through activity training coordinators to the Training and Development Division, Directorate of Civilian Personnel, by April 11. For more information, call 545-5580 or 545-5656.

Automated fuel system startup

The submission of DA 2765-1, request for issue or turn in for issue of bulk fuel from the Directorate of Logistics fuel farm, is no longer necessary.

The automated system at the fuel farm will be in operation and credit cards will be in place for units to draw fuel. This does not apply to units requesting direct delivery from commercial sources.

For more information, call Ed Spidle at 545-3717 or 545-3340.

Post's state-of-the-art facility exceeds federal mandates

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

Fort Benning leads the region in environmental awareness programs as the post's state-of-the-art recycling center exceeds federal mandates while generating funds for post projects.

The post has both industrial and household recycling and accepts three colors of glass, office paper, cardboard and newsprint; aluminum and tin cans, and plastic milk jugs and soda bottles.

Last year, the program generated more than $600,000 that was used for energy and conservation projects through the Directorate of Public Works and Community Life activities for the Directorate of Community Activities.

Just as important, however, is that, "Recycling is the right thing to do," according to Mo Armstrong, solid waste recycling manager.

"We don't own the Earth; we're just borrowing it from our children. They will be left holding the bag if we don't recycle," he said.

Armstrong, who has been at Fort Benning two years, regularly surveys housing areas to check on participation. Although household participation is about 30 to 40 percent, Armstrong would like to see the numbers increase to 100 percent participation.

To encourage participation, beginning the week of April 11 household trash and recycling will be collected once a week on the same day. If there is recyclable mixed in with the trash and there is no recycling bin next to the trash can, the trash will not be picked up until the following week, with the recyclable separated.

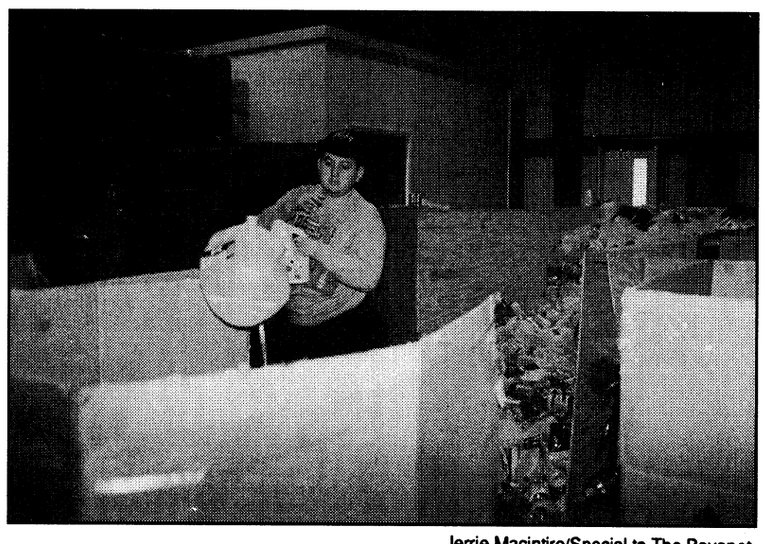
"The general fully supports the program. The chief of staff and the DPW support recycling," he said.

Education plays a key role in marshalling support for the program, Armstrong believes.

"You have to start at ground level and educate the young children," he said. Fort Benning Schools set the example through regular recycling and educational programs designed to heighten awareness of the need to conserve, reuse, recycle and save landfill space.

At Fort Benning, collectors sort recyclables directly from the brown bins while picking up bags of trash in the same run.

Once household trash and recyclables are collected, solid waste is taken to the landfill while cans, paper, glass and plastic are prepared for market in the material recovery facility, Building 4000.



"There is a market out there for recyclables," Armstrong said.

Through recycling, plastics find new uses in carpets, batting for clothing, car dashboards and trim, or as recreational furniture such as park benches or picnic tables.

Used office paper is transformed into tissue. Cans and newspaper are reprocessed and used for their original functions, and glass can be melted and reformed into new containers or ground back into sand.

For retired personnel from communities without a full range of recycling service, a drive-through drop off facility has be installed near the Main Post Exchange.

The new drop facility will open in early April and will accept plastic, metals, glass (three colors), cardboard and papers.

Housing

DPW helps families find homes

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Helping its residents find a home is one of the things that Fort Benning does better than any other post, said Ken Hankins, chief of the Directorate of Public Work's Housing Division.

Members of the Army-level Communities of Excellence team will experience the post's housing expertise first-hand when they visit next month, he added.

According to Hankins, Fort Benning provides housing to more than 46,000 soldiers and family members plus accommodates an additional student and trainee population that averages 9,000 personnel a day.

"We are always willing to go the extra mile to provide quality customer service," Hankins said. "For example, the post has an excess of furniture because of the downsizing, so we have donated some of this surplus to charitable organizations and provide the rest for use not only in government housing on post but for use in off-post housing by those who are staff sergeant or below. This post is one of very few, if not the only one, that still provides furniture to residents of government housing."

Ray Wagner, chief of the division's Billeting Branch said the branch's Self-Help crew is another example of quality customer service. The 26-member team is on call to provide necessary maintenance on demand for students and trainees staying in post billeting.

"Total Army Quality is part of everything we do," Wagner said. "We encourage every employee to submit suggestions and we even publish an employee newsletter."

Among the Housing Division's recent accomplishments:

• Renovation of 292 sets of junior noncommissioned officers quarters in the Custer Terrace housing area to include larger, more modern kitchens, an additional bathroom off the master bedroom and carports. The Davis Hills housing area has new air conditioning units, aluminum siding and lighted walking paths that connect the various areas of the community to the new elementary school.

• Expansion of the Self-Help program to include additional tools and replacement parts, loaner air conditioners for family housing units whose central air conditioning is temporarily out of service and flower and garden materials for landscaping and yard improvement.

• Construction of a new 60-room guest house.

• Initiation of a recycling program that provides every post housing unit with a bin to replace recyclable materials in for weekly curbside pickup. Money raised from the recycling program goes back into improving the quality of life of post residents.

• The initiation of the Whole Barracks Revitalization Program with plans to renovate one of the battalion-sized barracks and several other post facilities with direct input from the Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers Council.

• Initiation of a program to provide one refrigerator for every sleeping area in every barracks on post. More than 3,700 refrigerators have been distributed. Family Housing Chief Billy Scott said the division has also helped foster better relations between Fort Benning and the civilian community by forming the Community Homefinding Relocation and Referral Services Office, whose members belong to several local real estate and apartment owners and managers associations and have heightened the awareness of local realtors to the needs of soldiers.

"The bottom line is helping soldiers and their families find adequate housing, whether on or off post," he said.

The division also has plans to build several new playgrounds and to purchase new playground equipment, he said.

Hankins said he looks forward to the COE evaluator's visit. She happens to be the same evaluator as last year.

"We aren't just going to bore her by repeating all the things we told her last year," Hankins said. "We are going to show her how we seek constant improvement."

DFACs become computerized

By Jerrie MacIntire
Special to The Bayonet ©

A newly installed computer system will help dining facility managers eliminate paperwork while keeping detailed records of food suppliers, recipes and costs involved with each meal.

The Army Food Management Information System was introduced on Fort Benning Feb. 1, according to Maggie McGarvey, systems administrator.

The system is designed to eliminate paperwork, streamline meal budgeting and inventory, and alleviate waste, fraud and abuse, McGarvey said.

Through this system, each of the 25 post dining facilities is connected via a modem to a central base of operations, where financial records are kept and meal provisions are ordered from Troop Issue Subsistance Activity warehouses.

"The computer will give the dining facility manager the menu, quantity and ingredients needed to prepare a particular meal," McGarvey said.

AFMIS, which is used throughout the Army and headquartered at Fort Lee, Va., interfaces with the Standard Army Finance System and will help save time and balance financial books, McGarvey said.

Advisers from Fort Lee spent several weeks installing the system and training dining facility managers in its use. The system, which is regularly upgraded through Fort Lee, offers immediate on-line assistance for those learning the procedures.

Although dining room patrons will not notice any change, since the cooking and serving remain the same, food service managers should see an increase in efficiency when planning meals and ordering items from the TISA warehouse.

This program keeps track of the cost per serving of each meal while it inventories available items and orders necessary ingredients from the warehouse. It also has the number of special plates, such as dieter's platters or alternate choice menus, to be offered based upon the number of expected diners.

In addition, the program will list special preparation instructions for a particular meal and will automatically substitute favorite regional recipes into standard menus.

"The system changes all the time to better serve the customer," McGarvey.

As the systems administrator, McGarvey works with dining facility managers as well as the Supply and Services Division, Directorate of Logistics, which is responsible for ordering, requesting, issuing and storage of food for the dining facility and other units training at Fort Benning.

The system is a timesaver for everyone according to Ed Hilton, food services manager.

"This helps me cut down on stubby pencil notes. It helps with accountability records and headcounts, which we monitor daily," Hilton said.

acap q&a

Army Career and Alumni Program

Here are some of the most frequently asked questions about the Army Career and Alumni Program. The answers to these questions reflect the most current policies and positions.

For more information about ACAP — call 545-4892 or call 545-4902 or stop by Building 2617.

What is ACAP?

The Army Career and Alumni Program is designed to provide services and counseling to assure soldiers, Department of Army civilians and family members quality transition from military life to civilian life.

Why does the Army and the nation need ACAP?

ACAP provides transition service to departing personnel. It creates a recruiting multiplier. It establishes strong partnerships with the private sector.

ACAP allows career soldiers to concentrate on the Army mission because they know that when they need services, they will be available. It reduces unemployment and other associated costs.

What benefits do members of the Army family, employers, and the nation at large derive from ACAP?

In addition to those above, the Army family leaves better prepared to make the transition into the civilian sector; employers receive a better trained and motivated employee with skills and abilities not generally available in the civilian sector; the nation receives individuals who will serve as role models and who are willing and able to contribute to the community at large.

If ACAP did not exist, what could fill the void?

There are many private sector companies who can supply these services, but they'll cost the individual between $1,000 and $10,000.

There are also many government agencies that supply some of the services (such as Army Community Services and the Department of Labor). ACAP ensures that these services are coordinated and directed towards those who need them.

There seems to be a large number of government agencies performing the same mission. What makes ACAP unique?

ACAP is designed specifically for members of the Department of Army; it's easily accessible; and it's an integral part of the Army's personnel system. These allow ACAP to give individualized and complete service to its clients.

The downsizing is projected to end in fiscal 1995. What are the plans for ACAP after it completes that mission?

ACAP is an enduring program; it has an important mission that will survive after the downsizing is completed. It adds an important dimension to an individual's productivity life cycle — to the Army, future employers and the nation.

What services are provided?

Every individual who visits ACAP first receives a needs assessment and an individual transition plan. Based on this appraisal, clients are then sent to the appropriate service providers who will assist them in their transition.

If they need job assistance, they will be sent to the Job Assistance Center where they will receive job search workshops and seminars, individual assistance and counseling, assistance with writing resumes and cover letters, and access to various job data base — including the Army Employer and Alumni Network.

Fort Benning honors many Medal of Honor awardees

Highway, fields, schools, gyms named for military heroes

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

Just barely inside the northern Fort Benning limits is a standard Army sign renaming a stretch of road the Col. Robert B. Nett highway, a World War II Medal of Honor awardee who resides in Columbus.

All around Fort Benning, there are fields, schools, gyms and ranges named for military heroes, many of whom have earned this nation's highest military decoration, the Medal of Honor.

The medal has been awarded to American servicemen since 1862, when President Abraham Lincoln approved a law creating first a Navy and soon after, an Army Medal of Honor.

The design and criteria for earning the award has changed slightly since its inception. To date nearly 3,400 military officers and soldiers have been awarded the medal for "conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of life above and beyond the call of duty, in a conflict against an enemy of the United States."

York Field, the stretch of land that lies before Infantry Hall and the site of many post ceremonies and festivals, was named for World War I hero and Medal of Honor recipient Alvin York.

Despite applying for conscientious objector status because of religious reasons, York was drafted into the Army anyway and assigned to the 82nd Infantry Division.

York, who worked as a fox hunter at home in Tennessee before being drafted, was an expert marksman. It was this skill that would help him to become a national hero for his battlefield actions.

During the war in France, York was advancing ahead of his platoon during the Meuse-Argonne offensive when the group became pinned down by enemy machine gun fire.

York took it upon himself to save his platoon singlehandedly, and in the process became responsible for capturing an entire German battalion.

His marksman skills were apparent when he killed 22 Germans while they were still in their positions and then six more who attempted to charge.

Witnessing the swift demise of their fellow soldiers, the front line of the enemy promptly decided to surrender. In the end the prisoner count numbered 132 and 28 lay dead.

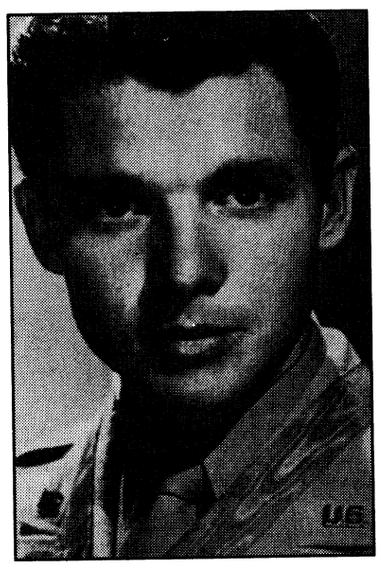
Army Cpl. Freddie Stowers posthumously became the only black soldier to receive the Medal of Honor in either World War I or II.

The award, however, came 73 years after the heroic deeds that caused his death and prompted his commander to nominate him for the decoration.

Stowers died while leading his company in a charge that ended with half of the group wiped out.

In 1991, President George Bush presented the medal to his sisters after the Army reviewed old files and discovered Stowers' heroic actions while fighting with the 93rd Division in France during World War I.

Fort Benning's newest elementary school, which sits on 1st Cavalry Division Road, was named for Stowers when it opened in 1993.

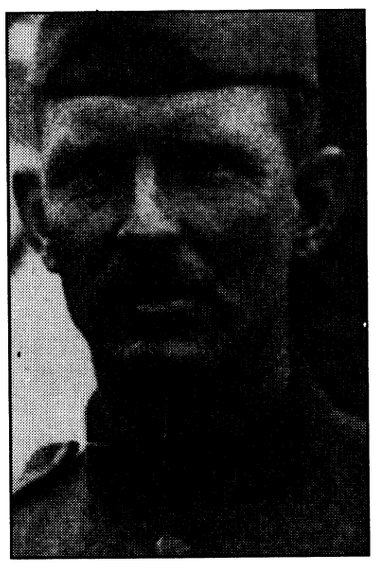


Not far from York Field down Dixie Road sits a firing range named for another Medal of Honor recipient, Brig. Gen. Theodore Roosevelt Jr.

The World War II general was the son of former president Theodore Roosevelt, who also won a place in military history by leading the charge at San Juan Hill. He did not earn the Medal of Honor, however, and it would be nearly 50 years before his son's wartime actions resulted in being awarded with the medal.

Already decorated from service in World War I, Roosevelt was 56 years old when he led the 4th Infantry Division onto the beaches of Normandy during the D-day invasion.

His citation reads "Under his seasoned, precise, calm and unfaltering leadership, assault troops reduced beach strong points and rapidly moved in and with minimum casualties."



Soon after the invasion, Roosevelt died of a heart attack in his sleep. The Medal of Honor was awarded posthumously to his widow.

Audie Murphy

Audie Murphy gym is named for the most decorated and perhaps the most famous soldier of World War II.

Murphy was a member of the 3rd Infantry Division and fought in North Africa, Sicily and Italy and earned two battlefield promotions along the way.

Alvin C. York

In January of 1945 he was a lieutenant when his unit was attacked and nearly overcome by Germans near Holtzwier, France.

Murphy held the line by calling artillery rounds onto his own position and then climbing onto an already burning tank destroyer to use its machine gun against the attackers.

Despite a leg wound, he held off the numerically superior force of tanks and soldiers for over an hour, finally killing or wounding approximately 50 Germans.

After returning home from the war, Murphy starred in a film about his own life titled "To Hell and Back" and stayed on in Hollywood to star in nearly 40 movies.

Transition assistance gets priority in Defense budget

Steve Barrett
American Forces Information Service

Faced with reducing the nation's military strength to 1.526 million by September 1995, Department of Defense requested more than $1 billion for transition assistance in its budget.

Transition initiatives include early retirements, separation allowances and educational programs.

Senior defense officials said about 85,000 service members will leave by the end of fiscal 1995. DoD would like to do this without involuntary separations.

DoD budgeted $700 million to fund the military's Special Separation Benefit program. This program provides lump-sum payments to service members with six to 19 years' service who voluntarily separate.

Payments are based on rank and time in service, with eligible members usually in overstrength skills.

Officials hope to separate nearly 21,000 service members through SSB and an additional 3,000 via the Voluntary Separation Incentive program.

This program pays a separation allowance in annual increments, based on the member's rank and longevity.

Nearly $400 million funds the services' early retirement programs. DoD anticipates 12,000 early retirements during fiscal 1995. The temporary program allows service members with 15 to 20 years' service to retire.

Early retirements are based on each service's requirements. Members offered early retirement are generally in overstrength or discontinued job specialties.

Although the VSI, SSB and retirement programs will help lower the numbers, they won't complete all necessary reductions. Officials hope reduced accessions and early releases will bring numbers down to established goals.

However, selective early retirement and reduction-in-force boards remain possible.

"We use these boards only if necessary," said one official. "If we can get the people out by using voluntary methods, we won't have to force people out."

The official added no RIF boards are scheduled for fiscal 1995 by any service, but early retirement boards for officers and NCOs may occur in some services.

To ensure departing military personnel are prepared for civilian life, DoD also budgeted $72 million for its 330 transition centers worldwide.

Bob Stein, DoD's director of transition support and services, said the budget covers routine operations, salaries and a variety of services designed to provide service members employment assistance before they separate.

These services include job fairs, computerized job networking and seminars on interviews and resume writing. They also include counseling on veteran benefits earned while serving on active duty.

Another budget item is $179 million allocated to education and training programs, such as Troops to Teachers and Troops to Law Enforcement.

These programs are designed to pay a portion of the salaries of former service members who are employed by selected education or law enforcement agencies.

The requests also budgets Junior ROTC programs in high schools throughout the country. Former service members serve as regular school faculty members and provide citizenship development for youth.

Money is also allocated for uniforms, administration and military equipment.

Although Junior ROTC is available in many schools, officials said the program is getting special emphasis in city schools. These programs offer cadets guidance, discipline and self-esteem.

Also included in the transition budget is a $302 million civilian separation incentives package and $140 million for Reserve Component transition.

Cruise-matics conquer High Country

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Columbus-Fort Benning Rugby Football Club Cruise-matics upped their season record to 5-1-1 Saturday at Stilwell Field with a 37-11 pounding of High Country of Atlanta.

The Cruisers scored early and often in the first half of play with wing forward Mike Bowman getting the first try of the match when High Country attempted to kick the ball away from their own end zone.

The Cruise-matics blocked the kick back toward the High Country goal and Bowman scooped up the ball and scrambled into the end zone for the try and a 5-0 lead.

Cruise-matics eight man Greg Allen pushed the lead to 10-0 minutes later when he took the ball at the midfield stripe kicked in the jets and didn't stop until he hit the end zone.

Cruiser fly half Duke Mosely set up Allen for his second try of the match late in the half.

A High Country defender closed in on Mosely near the end zone when Mosely pitched to Allen who had been trailing Mosely on his left; Allen went into the end zone untouched pushing the Cruise-matics' lead to 15-0.

High Country broke the scoring ice moments later on a penalty kick by inside center Greg Sheps to trim the Cruiser lead to 15-3 at the half.

The second half started out the same as the first with the Cruise-matics drawing first blood.

Mosely got his first try of the day on another breakaway at midfield. Mosely streaked to the High Country goal for a 20-3 lead.

Winger Sean Bradley got into the scoring column for the Cruisers when he took a feed from fullback Mace Oswald near the High Country goal and punched across for a 25-3 advantage 12 minutes into the second half.

Midway through the half, scrum half Dave Fry got his chance to add to the Cruise-matics' lead when he picked up a loose ball down at the High Country goal line and dove for the end zone and a try. Oswald added the conversion for a 32-6 lead.

High Country scored its only try of the match when the Cruise-matics kicked the ball to the open side of the field and High Country winger Dave Stoltz took the ball on the fly and headed for the Cruise-matics' end zone and a try, cutting the lead to 32-11.

Prop Chris Kelly added insult to injury when he picked up a loose ball at the High Country goal with no time left in the match for the final try of the day and a 37-11 win.

The Cruise-matics will hit the road Saturday for a match with Life College in Atlanta; then return home for a match with Fort Rucker, Ala., March 26 at Stilwell Field.

36th Engineer Group League hits courts

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

Serve, set, spike, kill, dig. Put them all together and what do you get? Volleyball!

Yes, volleyball has begun on post. Monday night at Audie Murphy Fitness Center, the 36th Engineer Group league was on the court for three matches.

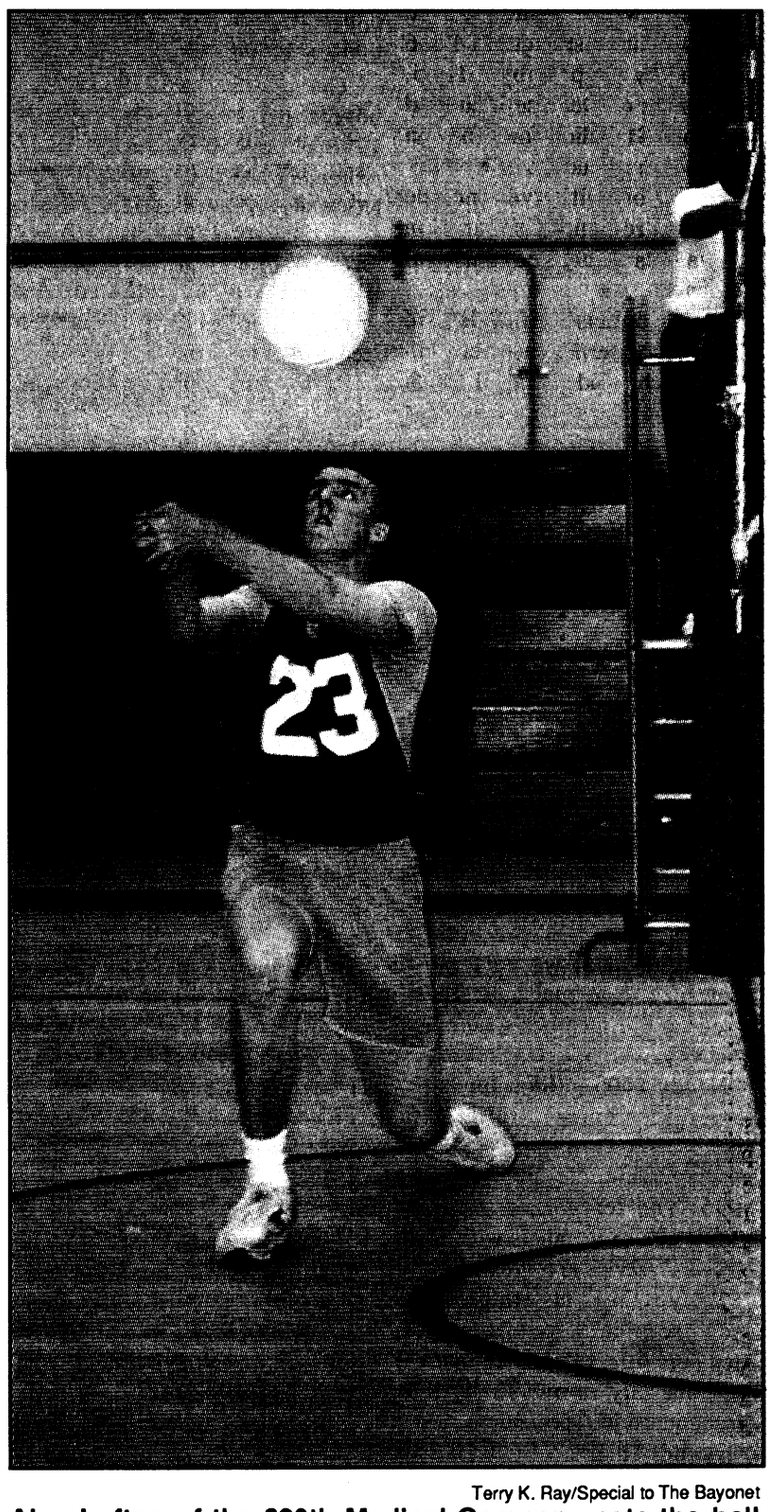
In match one, the River Rats of the 586th Engineer Company downed the 690th Medical Company in three sets 13-15, 15-6 and 15-8.

Game one went to 690th on the serving of Stephanie Thomas and the kills of Paul Fernandez and David Diamond.

Games two and three went to the River Rats behind the net play of Darrin Marker, Larry Ford and Sourinheth Macho.

Match two between the 608th Ordnance Company and the 598th Maintenance Company was a sweep 15-13 and 15-8 for the 598th.

Setter Simon Martinez put the ball up to the net for kills by big man Derrick Sankfield.



Strong serves from Raymond Bennett and Kevin Boutte kept 608th on its heels throughout the match.

Kennedy Tyson and Donald Middleton kept the 608th in the match with strong kills of their own

The third and final match of the night was another sweep. This time it was Company B, 43rd Engineer Battalion, over the 63rd Combat Support Equipment 15-6 and 15-12.

In the first game, Company B, jumped out to a 12-3 lead and cruised to the 15-6 win on good sets from Fernando Alverez and Mike Hensley to power hitters Steven Boeck and Richard Maladanan.

Company B ran off to a 10-0 lead in the second game off the serving of Gibert Pasmedina and Joseph Bolden.

Terry K. Ray/Special to The Bayonet
Alex Lofton of the 690th Medical Company sets the ball to the net.

The 63rd stopped the bleeding and came back with a 12-1 run of their own with Sammy Pacheco, Greg Lehew and Scott Caldwell doing the damage.

Company B held on for dear life and served out the game with the final four points for a 15-12 win.

Chiefs down Stars

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Columbus Stars have dug a hole and it's a deep one. A 3-0 loss to the Dothan Chiefs Saturday in Dothan, Ala., dropped the Stars to 3-3 on the season, three full games behind the Northern Division leading Albany Warriors (6-0) and one game behind the Chiefs (4-2) and the Tallahassee Tornados (4-2), with four games left in the season.

The Stars let two scoring opportunities go by the boards late in the game, letting the Chiefs 23-yard field goal off the foot of Tony Lassiter stand up for the only score of the night.

With under three minutes left in the game and the Stars at the Chiefs' 5-yard line, running back Michael Bailey was stopped short of a first down on a fourth-and-one play giving the ball back to the Chiefs.

A Chiefs' turnover inside their own 10-yard line set up the Stars for a game-winning touchdown or a field goal to tie, but it was not to be. With under two minutes to play and the ball sitting at the Chiefs' 3-yard line, the Stars went for a pass play on fourth-and-goal. The Chiefs' defense flushed McCarrie out of the pocket and forced an incomplete pass sealing the victory for the Chiefs.

"This was a tough defensive battle," said Head Coach Tom Staton. "Our defense played a whale of a game. The offense moved the ball up and down the field until we got inside their 20; then things came to a halt. The Chiefs' defense held us when they had to.

"After the game, someone told me the head coach of the Chiefs told his team that the 3 points they got might be all they would get and the defense had better make it hold up," Staton said.

The Stars once again could not capitalize on turnovers by the opposition. Four fumbles recovered by the Stars' defense were not cashed in.

On defense, linebacker Terrance Perry led the way with 13 tackles and five assists and one fumble recovery.

On offense, running back Albert Tate had 52 yards on six carries and fullback Jamon Smith carried the ball 14 times for 46 yards.

The Stars travel to Jackson, Miss., Saturday to take on the Jayhawks; then they return home March 26 for a home game at Memorial Stadium against the division-leading Warriors of Albany. Game time is 2 p.m.

Marksmen capture first, second in world tryouts

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

Two U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit shooters made the U.S. World Skeet and U.S. Olympic Festival Skeet teams by finishing first and second at the 1994 World Championship Skeet Team tryouts Monday in San Antonio, Texas.

Todd Graves, 30, of Laurel, Miss., took the top spot by shattering 197 out of 200 targets for an aggregate score of 680, while teammate Joe Buffa of Flushing, Mich., shot 191 out of 200 and finished with a score of 665.

The 1994 U.S. World Championship Skeet Team selections were based on aggregate point totals from three matches fired over the last nine months. The competition was also used to select the 1994 U.S. Olympic Festival roster.

"This is going to be a good, experienced team," said U.S. National Shotgun Coach Lloyd Woodhouse. "Our men, women and juniors have all won world cup or world championship medals. The only newcomer is Joe Buffa, and he's getting experience quickly. By July, I think he'll be ready to produce for us."

The U.S. World Championship Skeet Team will compete in Milan, Italy, July 20 through Aug. 4. The U.S. Olympic Festival Team will compete July 2 through 4 in St. Louis, Mo.

Candidate sets standards

By John Mitchell
11th Infantry Regiment

Payne

The quality of the officer corps starts at the roots of the inner being. Such soldiers bring and reap great rewards.

The Officer Candidate School has such a candidate in intermediate officer candidate Derek Paul Payne of St. Louis, Mo. He is a member of Company A, 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment.

Payne just returned from a trip home after receiving the outstanding alumni award from the Mathews-Dickey Boys Club. He received his award Feb. 20 before an estimated crowd of 1,500 to 2,000. This award is presented annually to the most outstanding citizen as viewed through the eyes of the membership, board of directors and surrounding citizens.

Payne dedicated more than 11 years volunteer service to help positively affect the lives of 2,000 plus boys and girls. Payne is a member of the Delta Upsilon Fraternity, a recipient of the American field Service Scholarship to Israel, recipient of the Combat Infantryman Badge, two Army Commendation Medals, three Army Achievement Medals, Southwest Asia Medal, Humanitarian Service Medal, Good Conduct Medal and Kuwait Liberation Medal.

2/69 gets the big guns ready for NTC

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Hastings Range is hidden in the northeastern part of Fort Benning, surrounded by trees and covered with silence. When it's not in use.

During a recent five-day exercise, elements of the 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment — and their tanks — transformed Hastings to a dust-choked, thundering battlefield smelling of diesel fuel.

Behind the "lines," tents were pitched and mechanics and medics were at the ready to help complete the mission: get the tank crews qualified to perform live fire during the upcoming rotation at the National Training Center, Fort Irwin, Calif.

To qualify on "Table VIII," the individual crew qualification table, tank crews must successfully engage stationary and moving targets with tank-mounted weapons, according to Sgt. Maj. Keith Pruitt, battalion operations sergeant major. Firing conditions include daylight and limited visibility engagements as well as while in mission-oriented protective posture gear.

Crews fire at single, multiple and simultaneous targets from both a moving and stationary tank, Pruitt said, and must score at least 700 of a possible 1,000 points to qualify.

"Our objective," he said, "is to qualify 85 percent of all tank crews on their first run. To fire live fire at NTC, the crews have to have qualified in the last six months.

"Tankers are essential to the Army," Pruitt said. "As long as the enemy has tanks, we're needed — the best way to destroy an enemy tank is with another tank."

Crews that qualify at 700 to 799 points are awarded "qualified" patches, while "superior" patches are given to crews scoring 800 to 899 and those at 900 or more are "distinguished."

Crews were graded, Pruitt said, by observers from Fort Stewart, Ga., as one of the Table VIII requirements is that crews be judged by independent observers.

"This is training for me — it's one of the few times we all get to do our jobs," said turret mechanic Spc. Rohan Jones of Headquarters and Headquarters Company.

Pfc. Fransisco Lopez-Martinez, also a turret mechanic with HHC, said time pressure makes the training more realistic.

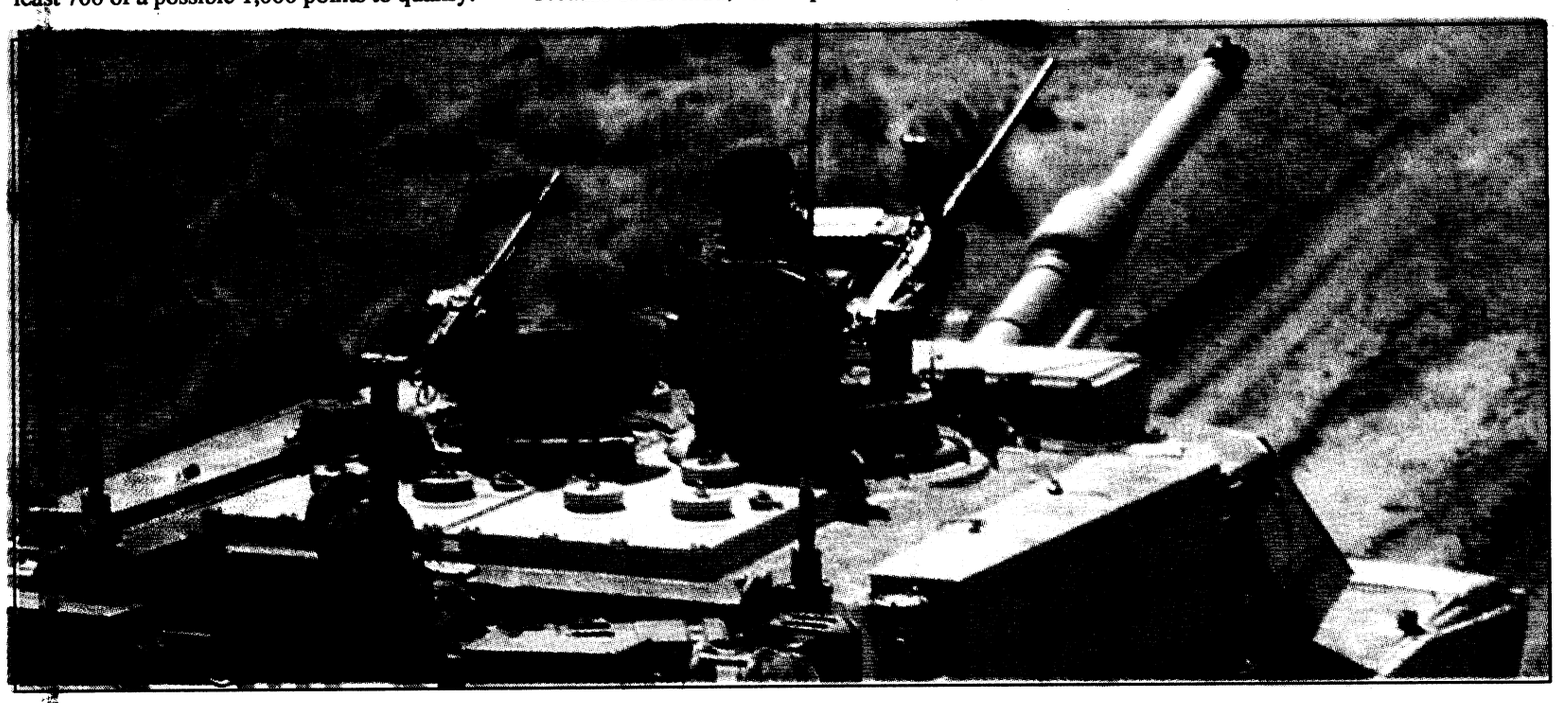
"When a team chief notifies me of a problem," Lopez said, "I get my tools and supplies together and troubleshoot the tank. We repair them as fast as possible and get them back on the firing lanes."

"We've had one blown engine, and we've been losing bearings on the wheeled vehicles because of the mud," said Spc. Gil Holcomb, an M1 systems mechanic with HHC.

"Most of the problems we have during gunnery are with the turrets," Holcomb said. "We have the parts on hand, and we haven't had one go down yet that we haven't been able to fix on site."

Tank crews seem to feel the same urgency in getting the job done, along with more than a little competition to be "top gun."

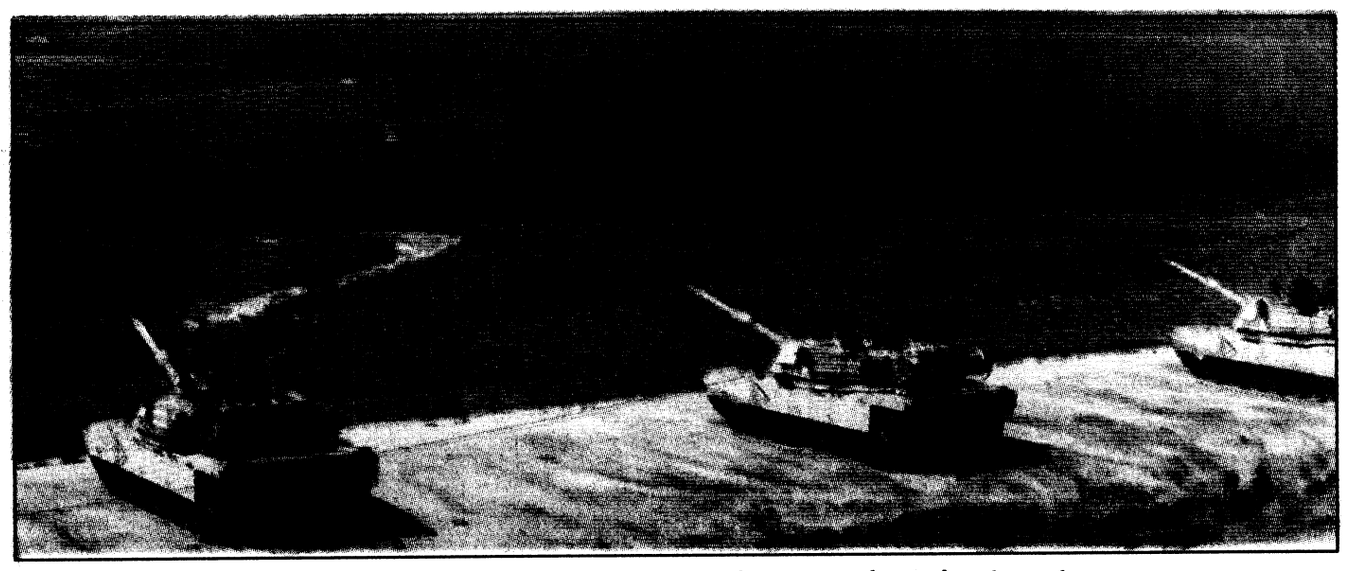
"They've shot a lot of ammunition," said Staff Sgt. John Walker, who was overseeing ammunition distribution. "They have Sabot and heat rounds for the main guns, and they're shooting the machine guns as well. We'll have a few rounds left of what we drew when we're done, but not many."



"Table VIII is the Superbowl of the tankers," said Sgt. Virgil Franklin of Company A. "And third platoon, Alpha Company tankers are the Cowboys."

Crews resting between engagements could be heard hotly discussing who the "best" were. With only two of 15 crews at that point unqualified after the first run, the competition seemed fierce.

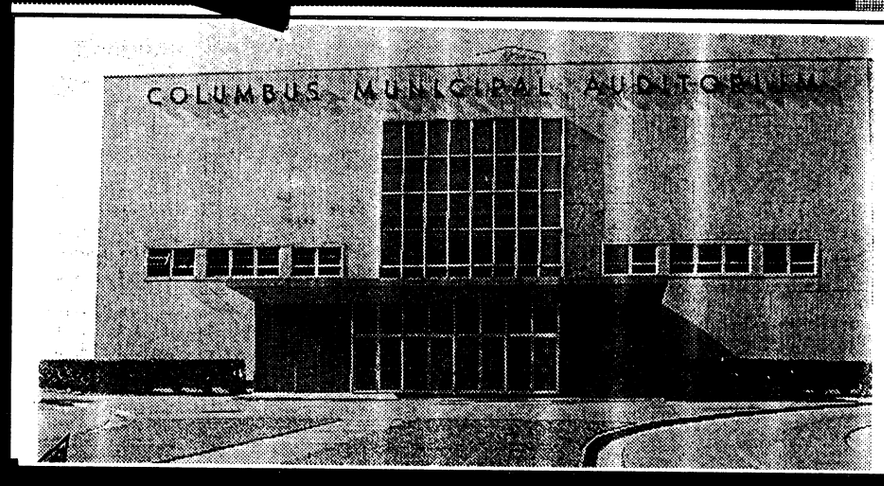
"It's weird being the only tankers on an infantry post," said Spc. Kevin Crutchfield, with HHC. "We have to stick together, because everybody else is kind of unclear about what we do.



Mechanics run a check on an M-88-A1 "tank tow truck" used to recover disabled tanks.

A gunner waiting to fire receives instructions from the tower.

Sgt. Ruben Ramirez stays in touch with tank crews from the tower.



Tanks overlook the range where crews will engage stationary and moving targets.

2/58th soldiers rappel from new heights

By David Emigh
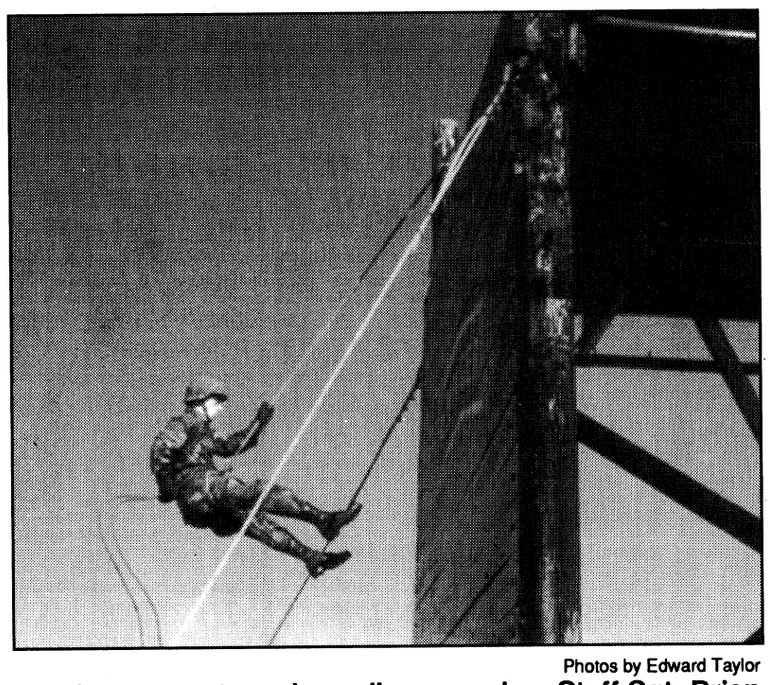
2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment



Soldiers of Company C, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Training Brigade, recently conducted rappel training at Todd Field.

Although not a normal part of the one station unit training program of instruction, this training served as an outstanding confidence builder, helped reinforce some skills taught earlier in the soldier's training and motivated the soldiers in preparation for the upcoming field training exercises that culminate their training as new infantrymen, according to Sgt. 1st Class Isaiah Vimoto.

After a demonstration conducted by drill sergeants, the training continued with instruction and practice on rappelling equipment, ropes, knots, constructing a "swiss seat," belaying and rappelling down a 20-foot tower.

Those soldiers who demonstrated effective control during the rappel down the 20-foot tower were given the opportunity to rappel down the 60-foot tower.

"The excitement was high as soldiers used their training and discipline to overcome the natural fear of heights and complete their first rappels," said Staff Sgt. Brian McPeters. "Every soldier given the opportunity to rappel down the higher tower did so and many wished that more time was available to go again."

A trainee executes a bounding rappel as Staff Sgt. Brian McPeters observes form the tower.

Pvt. 1 Michael Beeler, one of the new infantrymen, said he thought that the training was both challenging and exciting.

Pvt. 1 Erik Caloni, another new infantryman, said he appreciated the training because he was being assigned to an air assault unit once he graduated.

"Depending on their peers to safely belay them should they make an error developed trust and a sense of mutual reliance that help establish teamwork among the young soldiers, "Vimoto said.

"At the same time, preparing their equipment to make the rappel stressed the importance of listening to instructions and paying close attention to detail — two skills that are the key to successful training".

81st U.S. Army Reserve Command

Army Reservists assigned to the 421st Quartermaster Company (Air Drop Supply) in Fort Valley, Ga., departed their home station (Army Reserve center) March 5 to spend three weeks of overseas deployment training assisting in the Humanitarian Relief Efforts for Bosnia-Herzegovina. Fort Benning supported the unit's preparation for departure.

The soldiers are slated to return to their home station in Fort Valley March 26. On March 3 and 4, approximately 30 soldiers from the 421st Quartermaster Company met at their Army Reserve center in Fort Valley, Ga., where they conducted out-processing for their overseas deployment training.

While the soldiers accomplished their out-processing, family members met at the Reserve center to ensure their family readiness. Family members reviewed identification card requirements and local family support group matters such as exercising their family support group telephone tree, checking family care plans and reviewing Army Community Services.

On the evening of March 3, the soldiers and their family members received a special thank you and best wished from field representative Alfred H. Ellis III, who spoke on behalf of Rep. Sanford D. Bishop Jr., and the mayor of Fort Valley, Jimmy Williams.

"I want to thank the soldiers of the 421st Quartermaster Company for your loyalty and dedication to the service of humankind," Ellis said.

"Our country has long been a leader in helping others through humanitarian missions, such as the one you are about to embark upon, but these efforts would not have been possible without you. Just three years ago, members of your company answered a similar call during Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm. The missions were successful because of the commitment of our soldiers and their families and the readiness of our units.

"As you prepare to depart to Rhein Mein for the air drop to Bosnia, take with you the knowledge that your country is behind you and that we believe in each of you."

Williams told the soldiers and their families that they were an integral part of the community. He said he understands the importance of the unit to the community and to America.

Maj. R. David McNeil, commander of the 421st Quartermaster Company, explained to the family members the mission of the soldiers in Rhein Mein.

Jan Cruthirds, a volunteer, provided briefings to the family members concerning their benefits and Army Community Services activities. She also assisted the unit's Family Support Group chief volunteer Eloise Smith in exercising the unit's family support group telephone tree.

"Our assistance does not end here," Cruthirds said. "We leave our names and phone numbers for the unit's chief volunteer to call us."

While in Germany, the soldiers in the 421st Quartermaster Company will prepare and rig humanitarian relief items for air drop in Bosnia-Herzegovina. They are under the operational control of the 21st Theater Army Command.

This type of duty is not new to the soldiers in the 421st Quartermaster Company. Just three years ago, the 421st Quartermaster Company was mobilized and deployed to support operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm. The unit was sent to Saudi Arabia, where it was attached to the 101st Airborne Division (Air Assault) at King Khalid Military City. Members of the unit rigged and loaded C-130 aircrafts with ammunition, rations, water and ordnance for air drop into the combat zone.

Immediately following Operation Desert Storm, the soldiers in the 421st Quartermaster Company provided the same support for Operation Provide Comfort in providing humanitarian assistance to the Kurdish refugees along the Turkish-Iraqi border.

More than 20 of the soldiers in the 421st Quartermaster Company received the Bronze Star, the Meritorious Service Medal and the Army Achievement Medal for their exemplary duty during the Gulf War.

Regional conflicts and natural disasters dictate that America's Army must be ready to response at a moment's notice.

The Reserve Component is a vital part of America's Army. Overseas deployment training is crucial to Reserve units maintaining their readiness. While these soldiers are receiving training, they are simultaneously performing a real-world mission of packing, rigging and loading humanitarian relief items for Bosnia.

The 421st Quartermaster company is a subordinate unit of the Wildcat Support Brigade headquartered in Forest Park, Ga., and the 81st U.S. Army Reserve Command, East Point, Ga.

Fifty years ago this week ...

• Following yet another fruitless attack against the monastery in the Italian village of Cassino by the British army's New Zealand Corps, Generals Bernard Freyberg and Sir Harold Alexander agreed that the mounting losses had become disproportionately prohibitive in relation to Allied gains. Therefore, the Allies withdrew their furthermost forces, abandoning their protracted effort to take Cassino from the German forces defending the town.

• On the Eastern Front, the Russians continued to break through German positions and drive forward on all sectors of the Ukraine Front taking Pervomaysk, Krzemienic and Dubno.

• On Fort Benning, Col. Wilson M. Spann, commander of the post's Army Specialized Training Program Basic Training Center, announced the inception of an intensive, eight-week preofficer candidate course to meet the increasing demands of U.S. combat units in both the European and Pacific theaters.

Follow the food guide pyramid

By Arlene Thomas
Nutrition Care Division

Whether you rate your eating habits as good or poor, there is usually room for improvement. So what's the best nutrition advice? Follow the food guide pyramid.

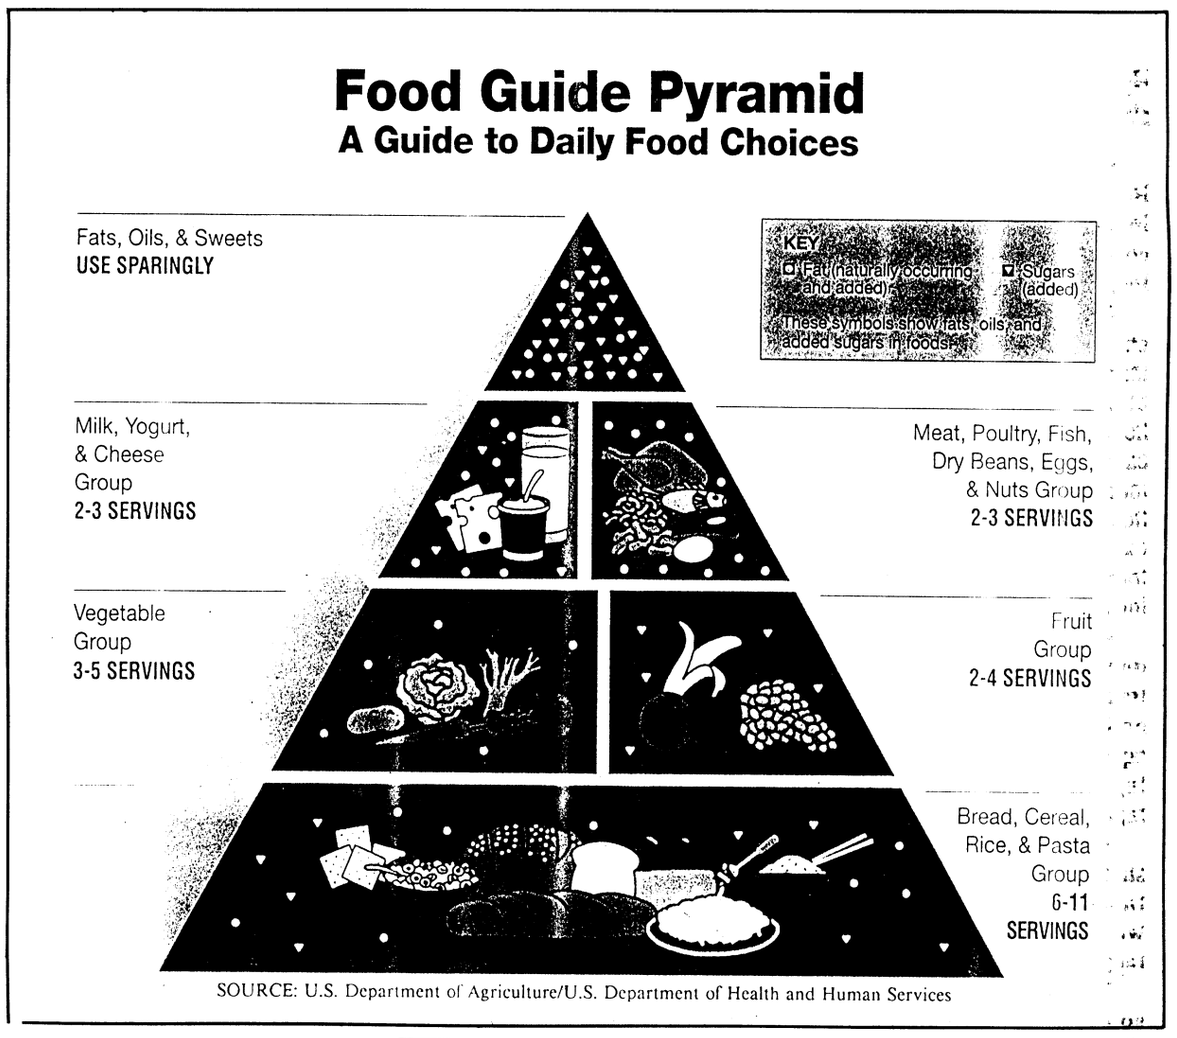
The food guide pyramid goes beyond the basic four food groups to help you put the dietary guidelines into action. The pyramid focuses on fat and sweets because most Americans' diets are too high in fat and sugar.

What is the food guide pyramid? First, it is important to eat a wide variety of foods in moderation. There are no good or bad foods.

The pyramid calls for eating a variety of foods to get the nutrients you need to reduce your chances of developing certain diseases and at the same time the right amount of calories to maintain an ideal weight.

The pyramid emphasizes foods from the five food groups shown in the three lower sections of the pyramid. No one food group is more important than another for fueling fitness and good health.

The top of the pyramid shows fats, oils and sweets. These are foods such as salad dressings, butter, margarine, soft drinks, candies and sweet desserts. Alcoholic beverages are also part of this group. These foods provide calories but few vitamins and minerals. Most people should go easy on this group.



The second level from the top is two groups that come mostly from animals, including meat, poultry, fish, eggs, milk and dairy products. These foods are important for protein, calcium, iron and zinc.

The third level from the top includes foods that come from plant sources including vegetables and vegetables. Fruits and vegetables are necessary for vitamins, minerals and fiber.

At the base are grains that include breads, cereal, rice, pasta and other starches. The bottom half of the pyramid represents the complex carbohydrates. More than half a person's diet should come from complex carbohydrates.

The pyramid shows a range of servings for each food group. The number of servings right for your depends on age, sex, size and activity level. Almost everyone should have the minimum number of servings.

Following the message of the food guide pyramid helps promote good nutrition that fuels fitness.

Carbohydrates, good nutrition fuel fitness

Diet should include plenty of cereal, fruits, vegetables

By Sarah L. Flash
Nutrition Care Division

What is the best diet for an athlete? In general, it is a diet rich in complex carbohydrates, low in fat and saturated fat and moderate in protein with appropriate calories for that individual.

There is no single "magic" high-performance food.

However, the combinations of foods and when they are eaten can affect athletic performance.

Carbohydrates are important because they are the only fuel that gets stored in the muscles as glycogen.

During hard exercise, you burn this glycogen for energy. If this glycogen is used up, you feel extremely exhausted.

Eating high carbohydrate foods such as cereals, fruits, vegetables, pasta, pancakes, potatoes or bread can prevent early exhaustion.

What about quick energy? Despite their carbohydrate content sugary foods and sweets (sugars are a simple carbohydrate) before exercise can actually hurt performance.

After eating concentrated sugars such as a candy bar or sugary donut, the combined effect of simple sugars and exercise can cause blood sugar to drop resulting in a feeling of being lightheaded, shaky and tired.

For quick energy, simply plan ahead by eating a larger breakfast or lunch that will prevent the need for a "quick boost" from a candy bar.

Your body needs time to digest the food and store it in your muscles prior to exercise

When is the best time eat before strenuous activity? If the activity is to take place in the morning, a high-carbohydrate meal the night before is the best way to fuel muscles.

Hearty amounts of pasta, potatoes, rice, bread and other carbohydrates will have time to digest and be stored in the muscles as glycogen.

If the activity will take place in the afternoon or evening, you should eat at least three to four hours prior to event.

Some athletes prefer a small snack within one to two hours of exercise. This can help maintain blood sugar levels and control hunger. Good choices include toast or plain crackers. Avoid large, fatty meals because they tend to sit in the stomach for longer periods of time.

Often the focus is on precompetition, but what about the recovery time? Within two to four hours after hard exercise, carbohydrate-rich foods should be eaten to replace burned-off glycogen.

A simple snack such as orange juice or a banana are rich sources of carbohydrates and are good sources of potassium and vitamins. Only carbohydrates quickly refuel your muscles and prepare you for another workout.

Sample High Carbohydrate Menu

| Breakfast | Lunch | Dinner |
|---|---|---|
| 1 small banana | Bean soup | 1 chicken breast |
| 1 cup bran cereal | 4 slices whole wheat bread | 2 baked potatoes |
| 1 cup lowfat milk | 4 ounces tuna | 2 pats margarine |
| 1/2 bagel | 2 tablespoon mayonnaise | 1 cup peas |
| 1 tablespoon cream cheese | 1 medium apple | 2 dinner rolls |
| 1 tablespoon jam | 2 cups lowfat milk | |
| 1 cup orange juice | 2 oatmeal cookies | |

Snacks
1 peanut butter and jelly sandwich
"Fruit Smoothie"
Raisins or any other fruit

Fruit Smoothie recipe:
1/2 cup plain lowfat yogurt
1 cup fruit juice
1/2 cup fruit, fresh or canned
1/4 cup milk powder (optional)
Whip ingredients until smooth.

U.S. Army Physical Fitness School

Q: Recently, rotisserie chicken was introduced as a "nutritional" method of eating chicken. Is this true?

A: Unfortunately, ounce for ounce, rotisserie chicken at the various outlets is not that much leaner than fried chicken.

A chicken breast and wing fried at KFC contains 432 calories and 25 grams of fat (52 percent fat), while the Colonel's Rotisserie Gold variety contains 333 calories and 24 grams of fat (64 percent fat).

A KFC rotisserie, half-chicken plate combination has 1,220 calories with 50 grams of fat (36 percent fat), while the Boston Chicken combination contains 1,275 calories, 54 grams of fat (38 percent fat). That is assuming you do not eat the 80 percent fat gravy served with the meal.

Be aware that because the chicken comes off the spit and not out of the fryer, it does not mean the meal belongs in a low-calorie, low-fat diet. Instead, eat a broiled chicken, mashed potatoes (without the gravy), salad with little cheese, and iced tea, water, diet soda or a fruit juice with less than 10 percent simple sugar.

Q: Is it true that weight training increases cardio-respiratory fitness?

A: No. Only aerobic exercise that require large muscles, rhythmic movement and breathing in large volumes of air improve cardiorespiratory fitness.

This exercise must be done for an extended period of time, for at least 20 minutes.

Examples of exercises that improve cardiorespiratory fitness when performed correctly are: running, interval running, rope skipping, stationary and road bicycling, swimming, stair climbing, singles racquetball, handball or tennis, full court basketball and treadmill running. These are the most efficient method of developing cardio-respiratory fitness.

Q: I have heard that Fort. L program for pregnant soldiers. Is there one planned for Fort Benning?

A: Representatives from the U.S. Army Physical Fitness School have been working with Madigan Army Hospital, Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology, at Fort Lewis on just such a program for more than 18 months.

It has received such a positive response from the community, pregnant soldiers, first sergeants, company commanders and the hospital personnel, that the I Corps surgeon and Lt. Gen. Carmen Cavezza, I Corps commander, have made the program mandatory for pregnant soldiers.

During a recent visit to Fort Lewis, the women in the program spoke extremely well of the program. They said the program encouraged them to exercise during their pregnancy, decreased their incidents of sickness and provided common group interaction, easier deliveries, quicker and less complicated post-partum recovery, and healthier babies.

Job fair May 21

Army Career and Alumni Program

In conjunction with Armed Forces Day May 21, the Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army will host the AUSA Job Fair May 19 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Main NCO Club, Building 2784.

A target audience of soldiers, Department of the Army civilians and their family members in excess of 1,000 are expected to attend this event. This job fair provides an opportunity for employers to meet many individuals who are leaving the Army with at least 20 years of service.

More than 200 local and world-wide companies have been invited to participate in this event. Interested persons should bring approximately 20 copies of their resume for possible on-the-spot interviews. Duty uniform or other proper attire is recommended.

Interested persons needing assistance in resume preparation can make an appointment with the Army Career and Alumni Program, Building 2617, or the Army Community Service Family Member Employment Assistance Program, Building 2643.

For information, call Pat Sneed at 561-2142, Mary Allen at 545-4892 or Shirley Jarrett at 545-6969 .

Military Police Activity

The following entries were taken from the Fort Benning Military Police Blotters from Feb. 22 to 28. Such entries may be incomplete and do not the determine of the guilt or innocence of any person.

This month's hot topic concerns the Armed Forces Disciplinary Control Board. The AFDCB advises commanders on conditions off post that adversely affect the health, safety, morals, welfare and discipline of the armed forces.

The AFDCB receives reports and investigates incidents that expose service members to crime or other situations that affect their health, safety and welfare. Such conditions include racial and other discriminatory practices, prostitution, illicit gambling and unfair commercial or consumer practices.

Off-post establishments may be declared off limits to service members based on the recommendation of the AFDCB.

A recent incident reported to the AFDCB involved a soldier purchasing a new car from a local dealer. The soldier was quoted one price over the phone but when he arrived at the dealership, the price increased by almost $4,000. The salesman gave no explanation for the increase.

The soldier purchased the same model vehicle from an out-of-town dealer for the original price.

After learning about the purchase, the salesman offered the soldier $50 instead of the $100 he promised. The soldier, being concerned for other soldiers, notified the Better Business Bureau and the AFDCB of the dealer's unfair sales practices.

The AFDCB issued a letter to the dealer stating that it was initiating action to determine if the dealership should be placed off limits to members of the armed forces. In response, the dealer sent a letter of apology to the soldier, along with a check for $100.

Service members experiencing problems with off-post establishments should first try to solve the problem through the company's management. Then if necessary, they should notify the Better Business Bureau. The AFDCB should be contacted only as a last resort.

The point of contact for the Fort Benning AFDCB is Ina Davis at 545-1133.

• A 21-year-old family member was charged with engaging in sexual intercourse with a 14-year-old girl.

Parents get advice about raising children

Topics include computers, school, gang activity

By Jerrie MacIntire and Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

To keep parents firmly in the driver's seat, Fort Benning offered a weekend seminar as a road map of sorts to help individuals navigate around curves, down steep hills and through dangerous intersections of childhood.

The two-part Parent Academy March 11 and 12 offered approximately 350 participants advice on parenting children from preschool to high school.

Some of the 28 sessions included methods of increasing school performance, encouraging creativity, understanding the use of computers in schools, instilling the love of reading and avoiding gang activity.

Gangs

The Crips and Bloods are the all too familiar names of violent gangs usually associated with big cities like Los Angeles or New York. But parents attending the "Gangs and their Influence on Youngsters," session learned a lesson on the harsh realities of gang activity among Columbus children and in local schools.

The class was taught by the Gang Task Force from the Columbus Police Department. The formation of the special force came in 1990 after a student was killed in a gang-related incident at Baker High School. At that time, there were more than 30 identifiable gangs operating in the Muscogee County area, according to Detective Byron Hickey; today that number has decreased significantly to approximately seven gangs.

Parents and teachers eagerly listened as the police officer spoke about the overt signs that show a child could be involved with a gang, including clothing, behavior, body markings and hand signals.

The Crips, Bloods and the Raiders are the three largest and most active gangs in t his area.

Many children, some as young as 8, fall prey to gangs because of low self-esteem and are easily influenced, explained Hickey. Others are attracted to the money involved in drug sales, a popular gang activity.

"Usually the idle mind is the most likely to have a gang problem," warned Hickey. "(We need to) get kids involved in other activities."

Parent David Greer wondered aloud after the seminar if the military community was ready for the gang problem. "We live in a protected world on post," he said, "but civilian problems will eventually seep into our community."

The Columbus Police Department uses several tools in combating area gangs. "The Columbus gang problem is still in its infancy stages," Hickey warned. "No one is immune."

He encouraged parents to use preventive measures with their children like a mixture of discipline and love.

Preschoolers

From rolling over as a 5-month-old to the advanced language of a 5-year-old, Dr. Jayne Nesmith, of Columbus College, with the aid of a slide show, walked parents through the ages and stages of early childhood development.

Nesmith highlighted the physical and behavioral changes a new parent will face and posed the question to attendees, "What can we do as parents to support a child's early development?"

Reading aloud to a child is a important developmental tool, according to Nesmith. "I even read to my child when it was in the womb," she said.

Fostering creativity, providing normal routines, asking questions and listening to answers are all things parents can do to prepare a child for successful learning throughout life.

Other sessions

Other sessions helped parents prepare for their children's transition into middle childhood as developmental milestones were highlighted.

Barbara Coloroso, expanding on the previous night's parenting lecture, held sessions designed for specific age groups.

For the adolescent session, she began with "The Middle School Years are my Favorite Time."

Once the audience's laughter had stopped, she offered frank advice on dealing with sex, drugs, rebellion, setting limits and keeping the vital network of communication open between parent and child.

While exploring ways parents can encourage values in a firm but flexible way, Coloroso said, "You can't make a moral child; you model it."

Two Fort Benning educators also conducted sessions on methods of dealing with adolescents and embellished their presentation with cartoons viewed with an overhead projector.

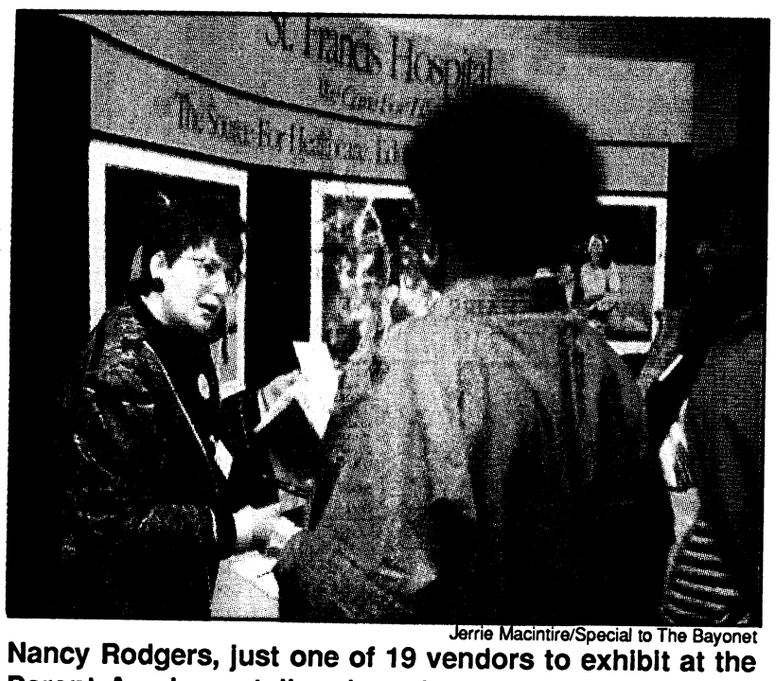
Dr. Wanda Hagler and Melanie Bast showed cartoons illustrating feelings teen-agers have about their future roles, perceived inadequacies, different rates of maturity, peer pressure and sensitivity toward grades.

On the subject of grades, Faith Middle School educators Cindy Givens and Libbie Kurinec explored ways parents can encourage their children to use common materials to enhance school projects. "It's a lifelong skill to use common items to solve problems," said Givens.

Also as part of the session, they shared some exercises designed to stretch the child's imagination and creative-thinking skills.

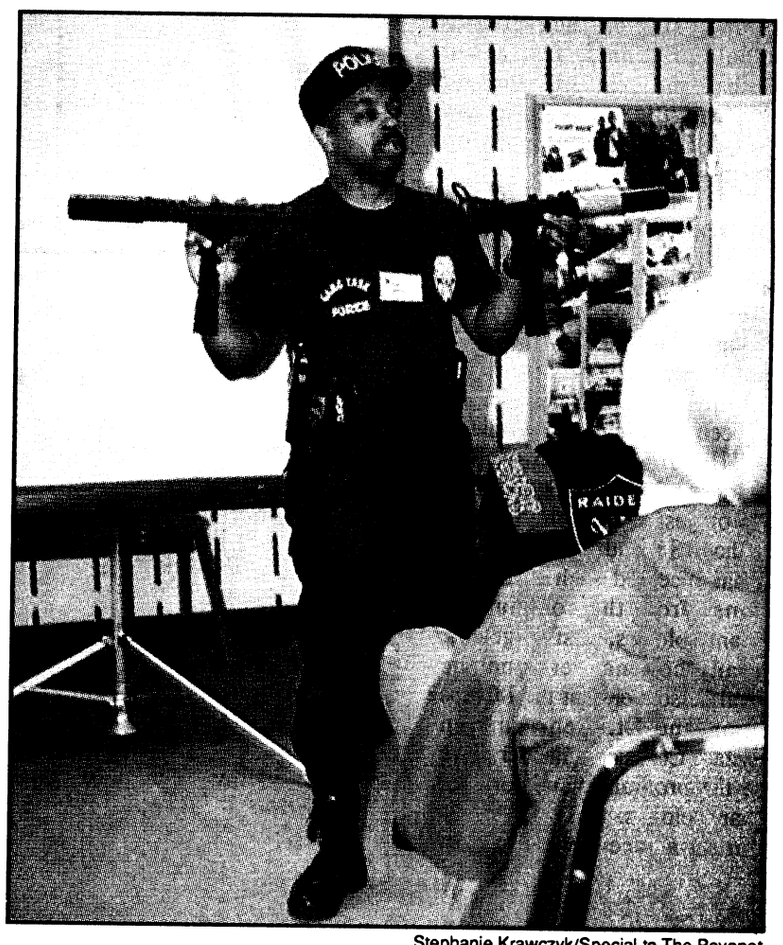
Family member Linda Payne, an artist, responded with interest on the tips to encourage creativity.

"My son shows artistic abilities. I want to encourage him and help him explore his creative side," she said.



Another session combined creativity with logical thinking by exploring the use of computers in schools.

"Computers provide another level for creative thinking. They help research become automatic," said Garrison Commander Col. Richard Rutledge who attended that session while his wife, Sue, chose another topic relevant to their 9-year-old child.



Jerrie Macintire/Special to The Bayonet

Stephanie Krawczyk/Special to The Bayonet

Detective Byron Hickey of the Columbus Police Department's Gang Task Force shows weapons confiscated form local gangs.

Academy participants attended three sessions of their choosing; in between sessions they could visit a host of vendors who offered information on subjects from developmental delays in early childhood to troubled teen-agers.

The academy has gotten a glowing report card from participants.

What are your future plans?
I want to be a command sergeant major.

PX manager implements customer relations programs

By Jerrie MacIntire
Special to The Bayonet ©

In an effort to improve service and expand clothing stock and selection, the new Main Post Exchange manager has implemented customer relations programs and approved construction of specialty apparel shops within the store.

Mike Woodard, who started work Feb. 28, said, "Meeting the needs of the customer is a number one priority."

As part of that goal, he approved installation of an updated telephone system, a computerized layaway system, faster checkout registers and a push button device to request customer assistance. The targeted completion date for this is May.

These improvements should expedite shopping and help people get out of the store faster, he said.

Stock selection is also an area Woodard wants to improve; he has assigned one full-time employee to update and maintain shoe selection, and he plans to stock more junior career clothing and improve selections in the women's, men's and children's departments.

In order to showcase incoming apparel, a fashion show is scheduled in the ladies' department March 26 at 2 p.m.

Woodard

Woodard also plans to host quarterly "Meet the Manager" days where he will be available at the front of the store to answer questions and entertain suggestions on improving the store. Customers may also talk with those who select clothing for the store during "Meet the Buyer" days, the first of which is scheduled the week of April 11.

"I am concerned about the customers' needs. They can voice their opinion on stock assortment or offer suggestions to improve the store," he said.

Long-term changes include an addition of 26,000 square feet of floor space, which has been approved with a start date in 1995 and a completion date in 1996. The extra floor space will be used to enhance clothing selection and to house a larger shoe department in addition to greater depth of stock in all areas, he said.

Woodard, a native of Columbus who worked at the Fort Benning Post Exchange 20 years ago while attending college, has managed retail stores around the globe for the Army and Air Force Exchange Service.

Centers offer video courses

By Carol F. Mauko
Army Learning Centers

Army Learning Centers at Soldiers' Plaza (Building 2611, 545-4447 or 545-2318) and Kelley Hill (Building 9005, 544-2503 or 544-2282) now have the following free video-based self-paced courses:

• Computer Literacy — This course provides a comprehensive explanation of the hows, whys and whats of computer hardware, software and peripherals. This course will help develop an overall, general understanding of what makes computers work (four hours).

• WordPerfect 5.1 Training Series — This comprehensive guide to the effective use of WordPerfect 5.1 includes everything from basic document creating through desktop publishing features. The course requires no previous word-processing experience (nine hours).

• Fundamentals of PC technology — This course offers concise, easy-to-understand instruction on the most important features of the PC's actual components. Effective visuals, colorful analogies, work-related examples and plenty of hands-on practice provide viewers with the necessary skills to understand the base components of a PC. This series was developed in conjunction with the Intel Corporation (12 hours).

• Network concepts — This five-part series offers concise, easy to understand instruction on all the most important features associated with networks including local area networks and wide area networks (six hours). Available only at Soldiers' Plaza.

• Harvard Graphics 2.3 — This series also provides disk training to ensure a thorough understanding of this popular graphics software package (six hours).

Hours of operation are 8 a.m. to noon, 1 to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Soldiers, DA civilians, Reserve Components, retirees, NAF employees, AAFES employees and family members are authorized to use Army Learning Centers.

30th AG hosts fashion, talent show

By Shelby Carr
Infantry Training Brigade

A fashion and talent show was hosted by the 30th Adjutant General Battalion (Reception) Feb. 23 to celebrate Black History Month.

Soldiers and civilians assigned to 30th AG and their friends and families joined to recognize the contributions made by past and present black soldiers.

"Even though everyone is treated equally in the Army, we don't want to disregard contributions made by certain ethnic groups," said Maj. Beverly Cardinal, 30th AG executive officer.

Singers performing in both groups and solo encompassed a variety of talents including a rap artist and Bogolon Gheorghes, a professional singer from Rumania, who is a receptee waiting to go to Infantry One Station Unit Training.

Clothing from TJ Maxx and Sol and Harry's were borrowed and modeled by participants, including the drill sergeants of 30th AG.

"We wanted a fun venue, a more interesting way to get the message across than a dry lecture," said Cardinal.

In the program and throughout the show, facts were included to educate about the past contributions of African-Americans.

Gayle Triplett, a civilian employee at 30th AG, and Staff Sgt. Walter Watkins Jr. coordinated and arranged for the clothes used and set up the fashion and talent show.

Scouts recognize volunteer

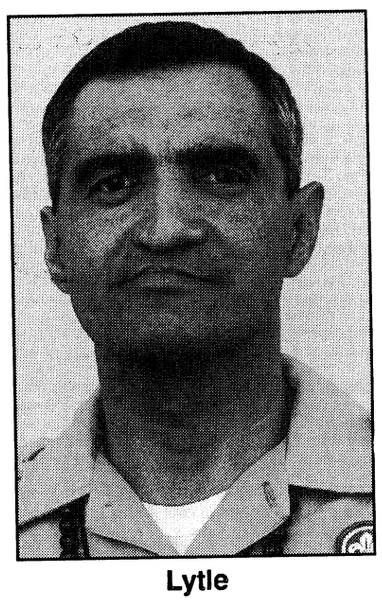
Fort Benning soldier receives highest award

Boy Scouts of America

A Fort Benning soldier recently received the highest honor a local council of the Boy Scouts of America can present to a volunteer leader for noteworthy service to boys

First Sgt. Thomas S. Lytle of the 13th Corps Support Battalion and five other individuals received the Silver Beaver Award at the Chattahoochee Council Boy Scouts of America's annual Scouters' Recognition Banquet in Columbus.

Lytle has been active in all phases of scouting since his days as a Cub Scout in the Heart of America Council.



He earned the Eagle Scout award and also the Bronze and Silver Palms. He was active in the Tribe of Micosay in the Heart of America Council for eight years and served as assistance scoutmaster of Troop 428 there for seven years.

He was also a member of the summer camp staff and adviser to explorer Post28.

He has been in the U.S. Army since 1971. In his various assignments with the Army, he has remained active in scouting. Lytle was scoutmaster at Fort Dix, N.J., and Fort Bragg, N.C., and was assistant scoutmaster in Bamberg, Germany.

While At Fort Devens, Mass., Lytle served many roles with Cub Pack 24, Troop 1 and as unit commissioner. At Fort Riley, Kan., he was active with Troop 460, Pack 360 and served as unit commissioner.

During his tour at Fort Benning, he has worked with Troop 227 and has served for three years as the District Commissioner of the Fort Benning/Cataula District.

Lytle

He has been active with eight different boy scout councils and has received the Scouter's Key. Commissioner's Arrowhead Honor and District Award of Merit.

Lytle has received numerous military awards including the Southwest Asia Service Medal, the Saudi-Kuwait Liberation Medal, the Humanitarian Service Medal, the bronze Star, the Meritorious Service Medal and most recently the Expeditionary Armed Forces Medal for service in Somalia.

He and his active scouter wife, Debbi, have three children: Damien, and Eagle Scout; Andrea and Christina.

The annual Boy Scout banquet recognizes hundreds of volunteer scout leaders who work with more than 9,000 Boy Scouts, Cub Scouts, Explorers and Learning for Life youths in the 15 counties of Georgia and Alabama that comprise the Chattahoochee Council.

Highlighting the evening were specific recognitions of youth members in the council who received the Eagle Scout Award and the Religious Emblem Award last year and the presentations of the Silver Beaver Award.

Others who received the Silver Beaver Award were: Peter R. Cutler of Auburn, Ala; Roy Carson Fugate Jr. of Columbus; M.L. "Tub" Kellum of Manchester, Ga.; retired Maj. Wesley James Mason of Columbus; and Joseph Lane Westbrook of LaGrange, Ga.

CATD sponsors essay contest

By Judith Sasser
Combined Arms and Tactics Directorate

The Combined Arms and Tactics Directorate sponsored an essay contest in observance of Black History Month. The contest was open to everyone in the Fort Benning and Columbus area. Participants included students from local high schools and Department of the Army civilians.

Myrtle Chalkley, from CATD Headquarters, planned, organized and supervised the event.

Four judges selected from CATD read and evaluated the essays. The judges were Charles White, History Division; Maj. Lloyd Whitfield, Doctrine Division,; Judith Sasser, Combined Arms and Leadership Division; and Christine Turner, Tactics Division.

March 1, CATD recognized the winner of the essay contest. JoAnn Jeffers, an employee in the budget office, submitted the winning essay," Take a Journey Into Black History." Originally a native of Albany, Ga., she transferred to Columbus two years ago to work in the budget office of the Directorate of Resource Management. Jeffers initially wrote the essay for the Black History Observance in the Budget Office.

Learning of CATD's contest, she decided to submit it there. She said she is going to write a book some day — "a romance of course."

Her hobbies include sewing, cooking and traveling. She has done a lot of public peaking at schools and churches. Her three sons, Xzavier, 20, Cornelius, 17, and Corey, 16, take up the majority of her spare time.

Col. Galen B. Jackman, director, CATD, opened the program. His welcome was followed by Chaplain (Capt.) Richard Moore giving the invocation and Whitfield reading the poem "Heritage." Celeste Lee, from the Directorate of Training and Doctrine, sang the Black National Anthem, "Lift Ev'ry Voice and Sing."

Take a journey into black history

By JoAnn Jeffers
Combined Arms and Tactics Directorate

If you will, take a journey with me into the making of "Black History." We will be traveling all over the world into the minds of many famous African-Americans. We will be making this journey by foot, bicycle, railroad, and airway. We will make brief stops at laboratories, schools, hospitals, military bases, sporting events, shops, and the government. Fasten your seat belt, tilt your seat, and let's begin our journey.

Beginning at Howard University, we find Charlotte Ray, who graduated in February, 1872, and became the first African American woman lawyer in the United States. In Tuskegee, Alabama, we find educator Booker T. Washington who was the founder and first president of the Tuskegee Institute.

As we leave the schools, let's take a look into the laboratories where Doctor Charles R. Drew was a true life saver, developing a technique to preserve blood for transfusions; he became known as the father of blood plasma. Also in the laboratories of Tuskegee Institute, George Washington Carver found over 200 uses for peanuts, including peanut butter.

Inside a bicycle shop, we find Major Taylor working; at age 13, he went to his first bicycle race, only to discover that he had been entered into the ten mile race "as a joke" by his boss who thought Major could not win. From the sound of the gun, Major left a train of dust, winning the race by miles; he began racing all over the world. There was a movie made about his life called "Trails of Glory." Also, we find Benjamin Banneker, a self-taught mathematician, who at age 21 built the first striking clock in the United States. As we walk, we have Jan Matzeliger to thank for our shoes. In 1883, he received a patent for his invention of the shoe lasting machine that allowed shoes to be mass produced.

Next we will take the railroads where we find Harriet Tubman, who with Sojour Truth, conducted the underground railroad. Harriet was an escaped slave who became known to the underground railroad as "Black Moses" for her heroic trips to the South to free hundreds of slaves. Also, we have A. Philip Randolph who was a porter and labor leader and formed the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters in 1925.

As we take to the airways, we find Bessie Coleman of Atlantic, Texas, who became the first African American in the world to become a licensed pilot. Following in the wind of her wings, we find Daniel "Chappie" James, a graduate of Tuskegee Institute Flying School who flew more than 100 missions during the Korean War and became the first African American to achieve the rank of four star general.

Our next stop will be Des Moines, Iowa, where the first training camp for black officers was established in 1917. The camo issued 678 officer commissions. Next we will move to Kentucky where we find Colonel Benjamin O. Davis, who became the first African American to command a U.S. Army base when he took charge of the 477th Composite Group of Gordman Field. April 5, 1937 brought into this world another African American who became the first African American to serve as Chief of Staff of the Armed Services, none other than General Colin Powell. The only African American to graduate from West Point before 1922 was Charles Young, who went on to achieve the rank of colonel of the U.S. Army.

Standing on the baseball field, we notice Jackie Robinson, who broke the color line in 1947 and played for the Brooklyn Dodgers. Coming around the track, we recognize Mr. Jessie Owens, nicknamed the Ebony Express for his speed. In 1936, Owens won four gold medals at the Summer Olympic Games in Berlin, dispelling Hitler's belief that African Americans were inferior athletes.

Stopping off at the government, we see Thurgood Marshall, the first African American Justice of the Supreme Court. With him, we find Shirley Chisolm, the first African American woman elected to Congress and the first African American to campaign for President.

The list of important African Americans who helped make the world what it is today goes on and on. We will end our journey with a quote used by a famous African American, in whose honor we just celebrated a holiday, the Reverent Martin Luther King, Jr.

If I can help come body as I pass along,
If I can cheer somebody with a word or song,
If I can show someone he's traveling wrong,
Then my living will not be in vain.

38th Inf. joins WWI veteran for birthday

By Shelby Carr
Infantry Training Brigade

The 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment celebrated the 98th birthday of Lucious D. Shaw, its oldest former member and one of its few remaining World War I veterans, Sunday in Calhoun, Ga.

Five soldiers from the 1st Bn., 38th Inf. Regt., went to celebrate Shaw's birthday and to honor the contributions he made during World War I.

Shaw served with Company A, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment, as a company runner from 1917 until his discharge as a private from the service in 1919.

"We try to share some of the living history of Alpha Company and Mr. Shaw is the only living member from World War I," said Command Sgt. Maj. Freddie Hines, battalion sergeant major of 1st Bn., 38th Inf. Regt.

Seeing combat in France, Shaw was present at the Battle of the Marne where the battalion motto "Rock of the Marne" was earned.

"It is an honor to be associated with Mr. Shaw," said Hines.

Staff Sgt. Loran D. Crawford, a drill sergeant from Co. A, 1st Bn., 38th Inf. Regt., and five of his soldiers, Pvt. 2 Micah Lerch, Pvt. 2 Kelly Reser, Pfc. Steve Fobbs and Pfc. Christopher Grubbs took a birthday cake to Shaw and led those present in honoring him.

Savings Bond drive beckons savers

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Soldiers may cash in on some fiscal advice due this summer from the Army's annual Savings Bond campaign.

Army finance officials in Indianapolis have this reminder for those who do, and those who do not, take part in the Savings Bond program:

"Each year, many of you have responded to the campaign by starting new payroll deductions or increasing existing deductions.

"Once again, you're being asked to review your financial goals during our campaign from June 1 to 30."

As the program has long determined, the payroll-deduction purchasing offers "a systematic and convenient way to save for your personal financial goals," officials explain — such goals as your children's education, a vacation, buying a home and retirement.

The campaign, whose theme this year will be "Secure Your Future Today," will feature visits from program representatives to explain its procedures and benefits.

Officials urge that no one pass up this opportunity to reaffirm the advantages of the payroll-deduction method.

"Fight inflation," they say, "while helping your nation, through a payroll deduction that grows for you.

"By taking part this year, you can provide yourself a 4 percent interest rate at a time when rates for some other savings investments have fallen below four percent.

"Savings Bonds provide a solid, intelligent, secure and personal strategy in an unsettled economy and constant winds of change."

New labels make nutritious food easier to find

American Institute for Cancer Research

If you've ever wanted to buy more nutritious foods but found food package labels too complicated, you're in for a pleasant surprise. New labels are required by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration on all food packages by May, and they clearly show how well a food measures up to good nutrition standards.

For starters, the "Nutrition Facts" labels show standard serving sizes so you can compare similar products. The standard sizes are also more realistic, to prevent manufacturers from making claims for unreasonably small portions.

The new labels list "percent Daily Value," which tells you how much of a nutrient a serving of the product will contribute to your total daily need or limit. For example, the label for a whole-grain bread may list dietary fiber as 3 grams per slice, which is 12 percent of the recommended amount of fiber for the day.

With sodium and fat, the percent daily value tells you how much fits into a limit that is reasonable for good health. Eating too much fat has been linked to a higher risk of cancer and heart disease.

Health authorities like the American Institute for Cancer Research advise getting no more than 30 percent of your daily calories from fat.

PASSOVER

brings Jews together

By Arthur Rutberg
USAIC Chaplains' Office

reflections

In ancient Israel, Passover was one of three pilgrimage festivals. Three times a year, Jews from all over the land of Israel came to the temple in Jerusalem. They came to celebrate the holiday with offerings of fruit and grain and a year-old lamb for the paschal sacrifice.

The community of Israel worshiped God as one and commemorated the Exodus from Egypt.

This pilgrimage practice, recorded in both the Old and New Testaments, ceased by the year 70 CE when the temple was destroyed by the Romans. The Passover observance became less based on the temple and the paschal lamb sacrifice and more on the home and the Seder.

Yet the idea or practice of gathering together on the holiday still continues. On the evening of March 26, Jewish homes throughout the world will be filled with family, friends and guests joining in the celebration of the liberation from bondage — the end of enslavement in Egypt more than 3,000 years ago.

We will celebrate Passover with a Seder March 26 at 7 p.m. at the Regimental Chapel on Sand Hill. The Seder at Fort Benning has always been a huge festive meal complete with all the rituals and trimmings. It always attracts a large attendance.

One can truly get a sense of community by seeing all who come for our Seder. It is as if all the Jewish personnel on Fort Benning have made a pilgrimage to our Seder.

At the seder, we recall the story of our Exodus from Egypt — how God freed us from slavery through wondrous miracles and awesome deeds.

We discuss the role of Moses, Aaron and Miriam in confronting Pharaoh and leading the people. We remind ourselves that many Jews today still suffer under oppressive regimes like our forefathers did in Egypt.

We look back at the ancient ways of celebrating Passover and toward the future when all the world will know a complete redemption and a time of freedom and peace.

With all this joyous and meaningful celebration, with all this gathering of community, any of us still feel enslaved on this holiday.

Those who still live in Syria, Iraq, Iran and Ethiopia are oppressed constantly. However, some in our own community feel burdened by all the work involved in the preparation, execution and recovery from the Seder.

What is supposed to be a celebration by the community becomes the effort of a handful of individuals. Seventy or more people attend the Seder yet less than half a dozen do the work. We, like all religious programs at Fort Benning, need you to help make it happen.

This year on the evening of March 26 when we once again celebrate the joyous holiday of Passover, let's be sure that it is a time of freedom form slavery for all of us and a time of true community togetherness.

Parents are responsible for teaching their children values

By David Smith
USAIC Chaplains' Office

reflections

In 1991, a very significant historical milestone was passed with virtually nobody noticing it.

For the first time, more people took their families to play in Disney World or Disneyland than to visit the sites and shrines in Washington, D.C. Parents exchanged the chance for their children to have personal encounters with the faces and places that created this country for a few giddy memories of whirling on wild rides and getting a picture with a walking, talking Mickey Mouse.

There's nothing wrong with going to Disneyland or Disney World. Everybody should have some fun. This does point out that our values as a nation keep changing. From all the information and all the statistics that keep coming toward us, in what seems to be an overwhelming flood, it would appear that the changes aren't doing us any good.

From abandoned and abused children to abused spouses, crime in the streets and crime in the schools, we know that the values most of us have traditionally held are quickly becoming a thing of the past.

An article in a local newspaper stated that the majority of crimes committed by juveniles are hard crimes, (rape, robbery and murder). It also said about 70 percent of juveniles involved in crime are from single-parent families.

It seems that we are far more interested in getting more material things. Our world today expects members of the family to work harder and longer just to obtain the necessities. When material things become more important than people, then people take the back seat.

In an ever-increasing number of cases, we have tried to turn over the responsibility of teaching the matter of right and wrong to other agencies.

My sister-in-law who has taught first grade for 30 years told me that she has seen as real decline in discipline and respect for authority in the children as they enter school for the first time. When she spoke to parents about the matter, many of them tell her that was the responsibility of the teachers in the school.

That is a rather foolish attitude. When we attempt to pawn off the responsibility to someone else, there is no reason to think the situation is going to get better. It will not get better until parents take seriously the responsibility of teaching deep and lasting values to their children.

Part of that teaching must be done in modeling those very things. The best way to teach a man how to properly treat his wife is for him to see his father treating his mother with respect and love. The best way for a person to know honesty is to see it in action.

Will you take seriously your responsibility to teach your children and help them grow into responsible adults? If your answer is yes, then remember respect, responsibility, trustworthiness, caring, justice, fairness, patience, affection, strength and courage. As we teach these, we change our world for the better.

ABC to air 66th annual Academy Awards

By Jay Bobbin
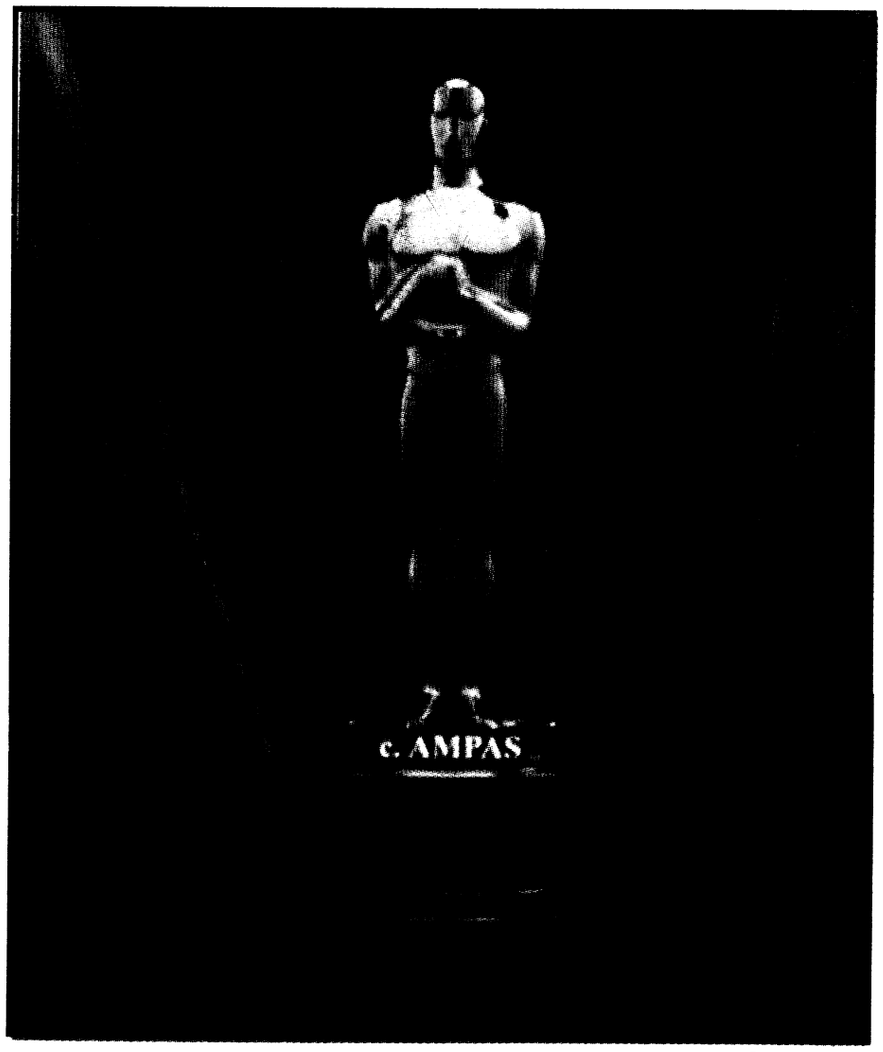
Tribune Media Services



With AIDS, the Holocaust and a political prisoner's wrongful jailing among its topics, 1993 might not have seemed the happiest of movie years.

SPOTLIGHT

However, few would dispute that it was one of the more distinguished periods in the recent history of the film industry.

Members of that profession will gather again for its biggest annual night Monday, as ABC televises the 66th edition of the Academy Awards ceremony from the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion of the Los Angeles Music Center.

While the basic tradition of the event is destined to remain the same, with veteran filmmaker Gilbert Cates ("I Never Sang for My Father," "Call Me Anna") serving as the show's producer for the fifth consecutive year, one major difference will be evident the moment the host steps onto the stage: "Ghost" Oscar-winner Whoopi Goldberg is assuming that role, since Billy Crystal declined to return after having presided over the last four galas. As usual, a brigade of popular stars will be on hand to present individual honors, which will encompass special presentations to Paul Newman (the Jean Hersholt Humanitarian Award) and Deborah Kerr (a Board of Governors Award).

The much-coveted Oscar

Additionally, several top artists in contemporary music will be on hand to perform the nominated songs — including Janet Jackson, Bruce Springsteen, Neil Young and the duo of Dolly Parton and James Ingram — and dance sequences choreographed by Debbie Allen will feature principal members of esteemed ballet companies from around the world, such as the Central Ballet of China, the Paris Opera Ballet and the Dance Theatre of Harlem. (As usual, cable's E! will offer live preshow and postshow coverage, with Michael Castner and Steve Kmetko conducting celebrity interviews before and after the awards are handed out.)

What: 'Academy Awards'
When: Monday on ABC

"Schindler's List" leads the pack of Oscar-recognized films of 1993 with 12 nominations, followed by "The Piano" and "The Remains of the Day" with eight each, and "The Fugitive" and "In the Name of the Father" with seven apiece.

For the first time, two performers have received double nominations in the same year, with Holly Hunter and Emma Thompson both in the running for their acting in both the leading and supporting categories. Steven Spielberg's directing nomination for "Schindler's" has generated much prognosticating on whether he'll finally win the Oscar that long has eluded him (though he does have an honorary statue). Such factors give each Academy Awards program its own personality, something of which producer Cates (who also is the dean of the UCLA School of Theater, Film and Television) is well aware.

75th ranger sets new post track, field record

By Caejar A. Cox
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Michael Raymond of the 3rd Battalion 75th Ranger Regiment set a new post record at Doughboy Stadium March 9 in the 3,000-meter run with a time of 9:09.06. Watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday for highlights of Fort Benning's record breaker.

Members of Faith Middle School's History Club are preparing a historical video about Fort Benning to enter in the "National History Day Competition."

"Fort Benning Today" caught up with the students in Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White's office for a special interview with the post commander. Watch "Fort Benning Today" for more details.

USAIC-TV Schedule
Fort Benning Today: 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 1:30 to 2 p.m.
Specials: 2 to 4:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 4:30 p.m. to 8:30 a.m.

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel announces post events, post movie listings, and offers free classified advertisements on "Fort Benning Update," a community information service.

If you live on Fort Benning and subscribe to Fort Benning Cable, you can watch USAIC-TV on Channel 3, 24 hours a day. Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:26, 7:56, 8:26 and 8:56 on WLTZ-TV 38.

For information or to make suggestions, write or call the Broadcast Section of the Public Affairs Office, Infantry Hall, Room 602, at 545-5921.

Eufaula to celebrate antebellum heritage

Annual pilgrimage, antique show is state's oldest tour of homes

Eufaula Heritage Association

Eufaula will celebrate its antebellum heritage with the 29th annual Eufaula Pilgrimage and Antique Show April 8 to 10, the oldest tour of homes in Alabama.

Eufaula is home to more than 700 buildings and private residences that are listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

Well-preserved houses, churches and businesses, some of which barely escaped the torch old Union troops, are open for daytime tours on Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Costumed hostesses share the treasured and often intriguing furnishings. Candle-lined avenues direct visitors on evening tours of other homes and churches.

The pilgrimage tour of homes is complemented by a variety of exhibits and special events, many of them free to the public.

Dealers from throughout the Southeast exhibit a large array of quality antiques at the Antique Show and Sale, which opens April 7, with a "Champagne Preview."

The Eufaula Heritage Association will serve as host to an Art Show in the Seth Lore Historic District on Saturday and Sunday.

Shorter Mansion, the pilgrimage's centerpiece, will be the site of wine and cheese parties on Friday and Saturday evenings.

New attractions this year include a black folk life exhibition featuring artisans and craftsmen practicing skills of long ago and a live history segment called "Tales from the Tomb" staged in historic Fairview Cemetery.

Music is an integral part of the pilgrimage experience.

Open air concerts including shape note singing will be presented throughout the days, and in the evenings, organ concerts will be held at several of the historic churches.

Group rates are available for parties of 15 or more when tickets are purchased in advance. Bus tours may reserve a guide at no extra charge.

For further information, contact the Eufaula Heritage Association, P.O. Box 486, Eufaula, Ala. 36072-0486, (205) 687-3793.

Mall's Collectors Show to feature 1000s of items

Quality Collectors Shows Inc.

Columbus Square Mall at 3050 Macon Road in Columbus will be the site of the Quality Collectors Show.

The show will be today through Sunday.

Show hours are the same as regular mall hours: today and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Sunday from 1 to 6 p.m.

Admission is free and free parking is available.

Dealers from all over the South will offer stamps, covers, philatelic supplies, coins, currency, gold and silver bullion, numismatic supplies, comics, sports cards, sports memorabilia and other collectibles.

Many dealers will offer free verbal appraisals of collectibles.

Collectors of all levels of expertise, as well as interested noncollectors, are invited to come to buy, sell, trade or just browse among the thousands of items on display.

Richard Martin, of Memphis, Tenn., show chairman for Quality Collectors Shows Inc., commented, "It's great to be returning to Columbus and again working with the fine folk at Columbus Square.

"We hope to see many of our old friends there and to make many new ones as well," he said.

Car Buying Guide

SJA: Don't be driven to a bad deal

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

The Staff Judge Advocate's Office wants to alert soldiers to the "scams" they may run into when shopping for cars.

Jane Winand, chief of Legal Assistance for SJA, wrote scripts for three skits recently broadcast over the U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information television station. The skits dealt with various pitfalls in the car-buying process: Dealership financing, monthly payments and contracts.

Dealership financing

Winand said even if you've researched the car you want, comparison-shopped around town, and are confident you can get a good deal, you may not be aware of being overcharged for dealer arranged financing.

"The funds actually used to finance a car rarely come from the dealership," Winand said. She explained that, typically, a dealership's finance manager or general manager will contact several lending institutions like banks and credit unions. The dealership will provide the lender with financial information on the prospective buyer, and the lender will then quote a loan rate.

The dealership will arrange the loan transaction, and the financing paperwork the buyer signs will be an agreement between the dealership and the buyer.

The dealership is likely to charge more interest to the customer than it is paying to the lending institution, and so makes a profit on the loan, according to Winand. She advises prospective car buyers to check with their own banking institution to find out what financing rates are available.

"Sometimes you can get a rate lower than what the dealership could get, especially if you're a customer of long standing at your bank. They'll want to keep your business," Winand said.

She said the rare times a dealership can beat a bank or credit union's deal is when a car manufacturer makes a special offer.

The bottom line, Winand said, is that customers must comparison shop for financing just as they do for the automobile itself.

Monthly payments

Often, a dealer will offer a low monthly payment that may be attractive to a potential buyer, Winand said. The problem is the buyer may not consider how much the cost of financing a longer loan may add to the price of a car.

Winand offered the example of a $14,000 car financed at a 12 percent annual percentage rate.

"A three-year loan on this car," Winand said, "would give you a monthly payment of $460, with a total of $2,740 in interest over the life of the loan. A six-year loan on the same car at the same APR would drop your payments to $310, but you'd pay $4,680 in interest. You pay almost $2,000 more in interest with the longer loan." Another problem, she said, is that if the car is stolen or totaled in an accident, insurance will not pay off the financing, and will pay the depreciated value of the car, not the purchase price.

A sergeant first class peruses a car lot on Victory Drive.

Contracts

A car buyer should beware, Winand said, of high-pressure sales tactics or special, "one-day-only" offers. another danger signal, she said, is if a dealer refuses to allow a customer to take a copy of the contract for a lawyer to review.

"You should read the contract very carefully," she said, "and question any provisions that seem unusual or unnecessary."

Such provisions, she said, may include insurance and warranty policies that are expensive and unnecessary.

"It's best if you have a legal review of a contract before you; sign," Winand said. "If you need a contract reviewed, call the SJA office and we'll arrange for you to get advice."

Winand urges soldiers.and their families to be careful shoppers. "Compare prices to make sure you're getting the best deal possible on your car," she said. "Look into alternative financing arrangements, and have a lawyer review the contract before you sign. These are the best ways to protect yourself from scams."

Help is available if you get a (new) lemon

By Rick Parker
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

☑ There is no lemon law in Georgia which applies to the purchase of used cars.

If you buy a used car, you're pretty much on your own and it will all boil down to whether or not the dealer gave you any kind of written warranty on the car. If you bought "as is," you are out of luck.

☑ There is a lemon law in Georgia on new cars.

It's called the Georgia Motor Vehicle Reparations Act and, while something's better than nothing, it is a lemon of a law. The thing reads about as well as the instructions to the most difficult game you can imagine, but here goes:

A new vehicle is a lemon if it suffers from a certain type of defect within the first 12,000 miles or 12 months, whichever occurs first.

A new vehicle is a lemon if it suffers from a certain type of defect within the first 12,000 miles or 12 months, whichever occurs first (the "lemon law rights period.") Sound simple? Well, it depends on the type of defect. If it's a serious safety defect (steering or brakes) and the dealer tried to fix it once but couldn't, then you go to the next step.

If it's a safety defect (but not serious) and the dealer tried to fix it twice and couldn't (the first time during the lemon law rights period), then you go to the next step. If it's any other kind of defect and the dealer tried to fix it three times and couldn't (again the first time during the "lemon law rights period), then you go to the next step.

What is the next step? You send a certified letter to the manufacturer informing of the defect and the failed attempts to repair, and the manufacturer must then tell you where to take the vehicle for one, last-ditch attempt to fix it.

If the last-ditch attempt doesn't work, then you send another certified letter to inform that you have a lemon and to demand that they either replace the vehicle or cancel the purchase (your choice).

Assuming they go along with it, an adjustment must be made for your use of the vehicle while you had it. If they don't go along with it, you must go to arbitration, and very possibly through two steps of arbitration.

This has been a very simplified explanation of a very complex law. If you believe you have a lemon law problem with a new car, you may want to consult with a Legal Assistance attorney.

Just remember, something happening in the first 12,000 miles or 12 months and doing something about it promptly is important to preserving your rights.

Buy smart — negotiate

By Rick Parker
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

These days, the cost of a new car can be as much as a small house, and that's not counting the interest you pay on the loan if you're financing the deal. Moreover, bear in mind that unlike the house, the car won't be worth anywhere near the price you paid for it five years from now. A little prior research and planning will save you money.

Smart car buying involves negotiation, and negotiation is a fine art. Having the right information is critical in order to be in a strong negotiating position. The only thing on which your negotiations should focus is the price of the car.

Prearrange financing

Before you walk onto a car lot to seriously negotiate a deal (and if you're an impulse buyer, before you walk on to a car lot at all), you should already know how much you are willing to or can spend and thus how much car you can buy. How? Prearrange your financing. You should go to your bank or credit union, seek and obtain preapproved financing. Most of these institutions will be more than happy to take your credit information and tell you the size of the loan they will approve for you and at what terms. You walk out of the bank knowing how much you can borrow and the maximum monthly payment.

- Prearrange financing — see your bank or credit union first
- Plan your trade — check the 'Blue book' value
- Shop around — Research your best price

Know trade-in value

Second, if you are planning on using your current vehicle as a trade, find out its value - you can look it up in the "Blue Book" at the library. Subtract any loan balance on it and you know how much equity you can offer in the trade. Now you know the maximum you can spend on a car, the highest amount the bank has agreed to loan you plus the equity of your trade.

Armed with the knowledge that you already have a loan waiting for you, you will not be tempted to negotiate a car deal based on monthly payments. Some car salespeople focus you on monthly payments rather than price.

Compare prices

Next, if you know what kind of car you're looking for, you need to find out what a fair price really is. Let's face it, car dealers are in business to make a profit and will price a vehicle higher than what it cost them. The profit margin is the negotiable part of the price. You will hear and see terms like "dealer invoice" and "manufacturer's suggested retail price," but these tell you nothing about what kind of markup the dealer has put on his or her posted sales price.

Shopping a number of dealers on the same car can give you an idea about the markup. Be careful that you are comparing the same vehicle (that is, same options and equipment). Consumer Reports magazine offers a service where, for a nominal fee, you can obtain information on the manufacturer's real price to dealers on a particular model vehicle with whatever options you might have in mind.

Once you've gotten a feel for fair price and you've gotten your financing already arranged, you are ready to walk onto the lot and take control of the negotiation for the purchase of a vehicle.

Remember dos, don'ts

STOP Don't sign any contract before you've had a chance to read and review every document associated with the deal, and if you are in doubt about any part of it, get legal advice.

STOP If you're buying a used car, make sure you understand the extent of any warranties being offered by the dealer.

STOP Make sure that any promises made by the dealer or salesperson are in writing before you sign anything. Oral promises not backed up by paper are worth nothing!

STOP If you're buying a used car, have it inspected by a qualified mechanic before you negotiate anything.

STOP If you're borrowing the money to buy a car, try to prearrange financing through your bank or credit union — you'll be more likely to get a better deal on the interest rate. Also, your negotiations with the dealer over price won't be confused by issues of financing, which has nothing to do with price.

STOP Don't take possession of the car before the deal is all wrapped up (other than to test drive it or have it inspected).

STOP When arranging financing (whether at the bank or dealership), don't let yourself get roped into buying credit life insurance unless you want it.

STOP If a dealer won't let you take a contract off the lot for review or won't let you take the car for an inspection, walk away from the deal.

STOP Read the terms and conditions of any extended service contract before you agree to buy one. Make sure you understand the exclusions contained in the contract.

STOP Remember, the price of the vehicle is the most important item to negotiate when you're buying a car.

Contract deserves careful consideration

By Rick Parker
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Whether you're buying new or used, once the negotiating is over, you will be faced with signing the contract for purchase and/or financing, and other associated documents. You need to read all of these documents carefully before signing any one of them.

Insist on the opportunity to read everything that will be signed in connection with the purchase order, loan documents if applicable, warranty documents, odometer statements and the like. Don't read and sign documents piecemeal — you want to make sure that everything that you think you negotiated is on paper.

If you're buying a used vehicle, make sure that you understand any warranties that the dealer is offering in connection with your purchase, and that these warranties or promises are in the written contracts.

Many cases in the Legal Assistance Division involve used car purchases where the dealer made certain oral statements about the condition of the car or about the willingness of the dealership to make repairs if something happens.

As it turns out, in most of these cases, there is nothing in writing backing up the oral promises, and the buyer usually is presented with and signs a document in which the dealer says the vehicle is purchased "as is." "As is" renders any of the dealer's oral promises meaningless and usually unenforcable.

Read all the financing documents carefully (this applies whether you're going through your bank or the dealership). Don't let yourself get forced into buying credit life insurance. Credit life is a form of life insurance that pays off the car loan if you die.

While it sounds real convenient, it is considerably more expensive than your going out and buying regular term life insurance (like SGLI). You cannot be required to purchase it as a condition of being granted a loan. Lenders, whether they be banks or car dealers, like to sell it because they collect a commission when they do sell it. Watch out for "collateral protection insurance."

While we don't see much of it down here, it is a type of insurance a lender (not your bank, but the high-interest rate finance companies used car dealers like to use) may require you to pay for that is solely for the protection of the lender. It does nothing for you, but assures the lender the loan will be paid (usually because the car isn't worth the loan amount). If collateral protection insurance is part of your deal, you would be best advised to walk away from it.

Remember that cars and drivers need insurance. Obtaining liability insurance (which protects you if your driving causes an accident) and collision insurance (which protects your car if it's damaged) is your responsibility.

Neither the lender nor the dealer does this for you, nor should you let them. Buying anything other than a car from a dealer is going to cost you more than if you buy it somewhere else.

When in doubt at all, don't sign. Remember, when you sign, you are about to commit yourself to a significant amount of money. You should insist that you be allowed to have the contract documents reviewed by your lawyer; you should not let the salesperson or dealer interpret doubtful terms of a contract for you.

If a dealer won't release a copy of the contract for such review, walk away from the deal. An honest car dealer should have nothing to hide. Attorneys at the Legal Assistance Division are available to advise and assist you with respect to these contracts.

Check it out: Buying used? Get a mechanic!

By Rick Parker
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

If you are looking at a used car, nothing could be more important than making sure the darn thing is in good condition.

This means not only taking a test drive, but also letting a qualified mechanic get a gander under the hood.

Unless you are a good mechanic yourself, there is no way you can get accurate knowledge about the condition of the car without getting it checked out. The fact that the dealer may be offering any type of limited warranty or that you may be purchasing a service contract does not replace the need for an inspection.

Warranties and service contracts may be fine, but do you really want to take a chance that you may wind up making good use of a warranty or service contract?

A good inspection means that you have all of the systems checked out: ignition, brakes, fuel system, steering, front-end, exhaust, electrical and the like.

A compression test will reveal any potential cylinder or ring problems. Does this cost money? Of course it will, but the $50 or so you spend on an inspection is pretty lightweight compared to the thousands of dollars you may invest in the vehicle.

If you find a car in which you're interested, before negotiating the deal, tell the dealer you want to take it to your mechanic for an inspection. If the dealer balks at this, do what? Right, walk away.

- BMW 7 Series 1988
- Chevy Blazer 1986 to 1990
- Ford Ranger pick-up, V-6 (four-wheel drive) 1986 to 1987

Warranty?

Coverage varies by dealer

By Rick Parker
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

When you are buying a new car, there is no question that you will receive the benefit of a manufacturer's warranty, which extends protection for a certain amount of time or miles.

Typically, most manufacturers will warrant the vehicle against all defects for at least 12 months or 12,000 miles, and some go further than that. Some manufacturers follow the full warranty with a limited warranty for an additional period of time, which only covers certain systems in the car, such as the power and drive train.

The full warranty period is the time during which the manufacturer promises to stand behind and fix anything that goes wrong with the car (except problems that result from misuse or your negligence; additionally, tires and batteries are normally covered by separate warranties).

Warranty service is normally obtained from a dealership licensed by the manufacturer to sell or service the same type of vehicle.

Used vehicles do not have the luxury of a manufacturer's warranty. Any warranty you get is going to offered by the dealership selling the car. Fortunately, federal law does require that used car dealers disclose information about any warranties or lack of warranties pertaining to any vehicle sold.

In most cases, if the dealer is offering a warranty it is going to be very limited. Many seen in this area are limited to 1,000 to 1,500 miles or 30 days, and may require that the buyer foot one-half of any repair cost.

Most dealers simply sell "as is" which means the dealer is not going to be responsible for fixing anything — even if it breaks down the second you drive it off the lot. We've said it before, and we'll say it again: Oral promises by the dealer or salesperson are not worth the paper they're written on!

On both new and used cars, the dealer may try to sell an extended service contract. Extended service contracts are not warranties; they do not necessarily cover everything and can be expensive.

They are agreements, usually underwritten and administered by another company (not the manufacturer or dealer), to provide service for certain types of problems that may occur beyond the warranty period.

There are several considerations when deciding whether to purchase a service contract. First, the type and terms of such agreements vary greatly. You need to examine the contract prior to purchasing to see what it covers and what it excludes. Be aware of deductibles and cost-sharing arrangements. Bear in mind that the agreement is only as good as the solvency of the company that offers it.

While GM or Chrysler or Ford are not likely to go belly up, some of the companies that underwrite service contracts can and do. When it happens, the purchaser of a service contract is left holding the bag.

Also, be aware that some of the incentive for a dealer in selling such contracts is that the dealer collects a commission (this can be a bargaining chip in negotiating the deal, but don't let the salesperson know you know he or she collects a commission.)

horoscope

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You are sharp-witted this week and are likely to call the shots as you see them. A measure of diplomacy will be needed in dealings with others now.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You may be coping with a touchy co-worker this week. Partners will go along with you, as long as you are not bossy.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You are super efficient on the job this week and will make excellent progress. Pay extra attention to details now.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) This is an excellent week for work on a creative project. You seem to have all the answers now.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) You will be making important domestic decisions this week. Your judgment is excellent now. However, appointment changes on the job throw you off schedule.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) You have a razor-sharp intellect this week, but you must be careful not to be too critical. Guard against excess spending.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Shopping is a plus now and your judgment is astute when it comes to financial interests. Buying and selling are favored. A close tie, though, wants more attention.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You are quick-minded this week but guard against barbed remarks that could hurt others. Things seem unorganized at work and accomplishments may be less than expectations.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Research and study give you important insights this week. Unexpected expenses may arise in connection with pleasure interests.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) You will impress others with what you have to say at a meeting. Guard against an inclination to let home duties slide.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) You are quick to act on your ideas this week. Remember though, to be tactful in dealings with higher-ups. Others are unpredictable and hard to pin down.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20) You will speak out on matters that you believe in this week. Mental interests are favored now. Money could slip away if you are not careful. Stick to budgets.

Highland Falls State Park offers day-long canoe trips

High Falls State Park

At a glance

What: Day-long canoe trips

Where: On the Towaliga River

When: April 16, May 21, June 18, July 16, Aug. 20, Sept. 17 and Oct. 15

High Falls State Park is offering a series of day canoe trips on the Towaliga River.

The trips will begin April 16 and will continue each third Saturday into October. Other dates will be May 21, June 18, July 16, Aug. 20, Sept. 17 and Oct. 15.

The cost is $15 per person. The trips will leave the state park at 9 a.m.

Canoes, paddles and a life jacket will be furnished. Persons owning their own canoes, paddles and life jackets may also join in the trip for a fee of $10.

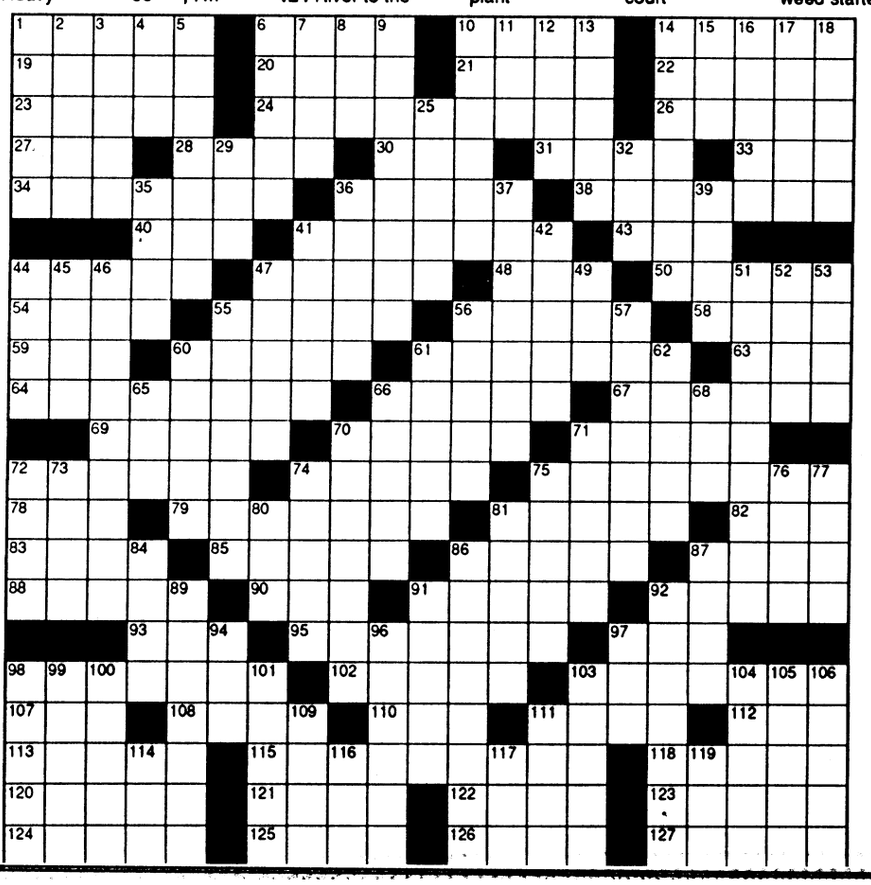
A cooler of water will be provided. Canoers should bring their own sack lunches with them.

Park Ranger George Smith said the guided trips are an introductory experience for novice canoers.

"We won't just go from point A to point B," explains Smith. "There will be interpretive talks where we stop and look and talk about the things we see. Participants are invited to bring their cameras."

The trips are open to anyone. Youths under 16 years of age must be accompanied by an adult 18 years or older. Youths under 5 years of age are not permitted.

Each canoe trip is open to 16 participants on a first-come, first-served basis. Only stormy weather will cancel the trips.



Reservations may be made by calling the park office at (912) 994-5080.

Post to rename Bldg in honor of Ridgway

General commanded 82nd Airborne, served as supreme commander, Allied Powers Europe

USAIC Public Affairs Office

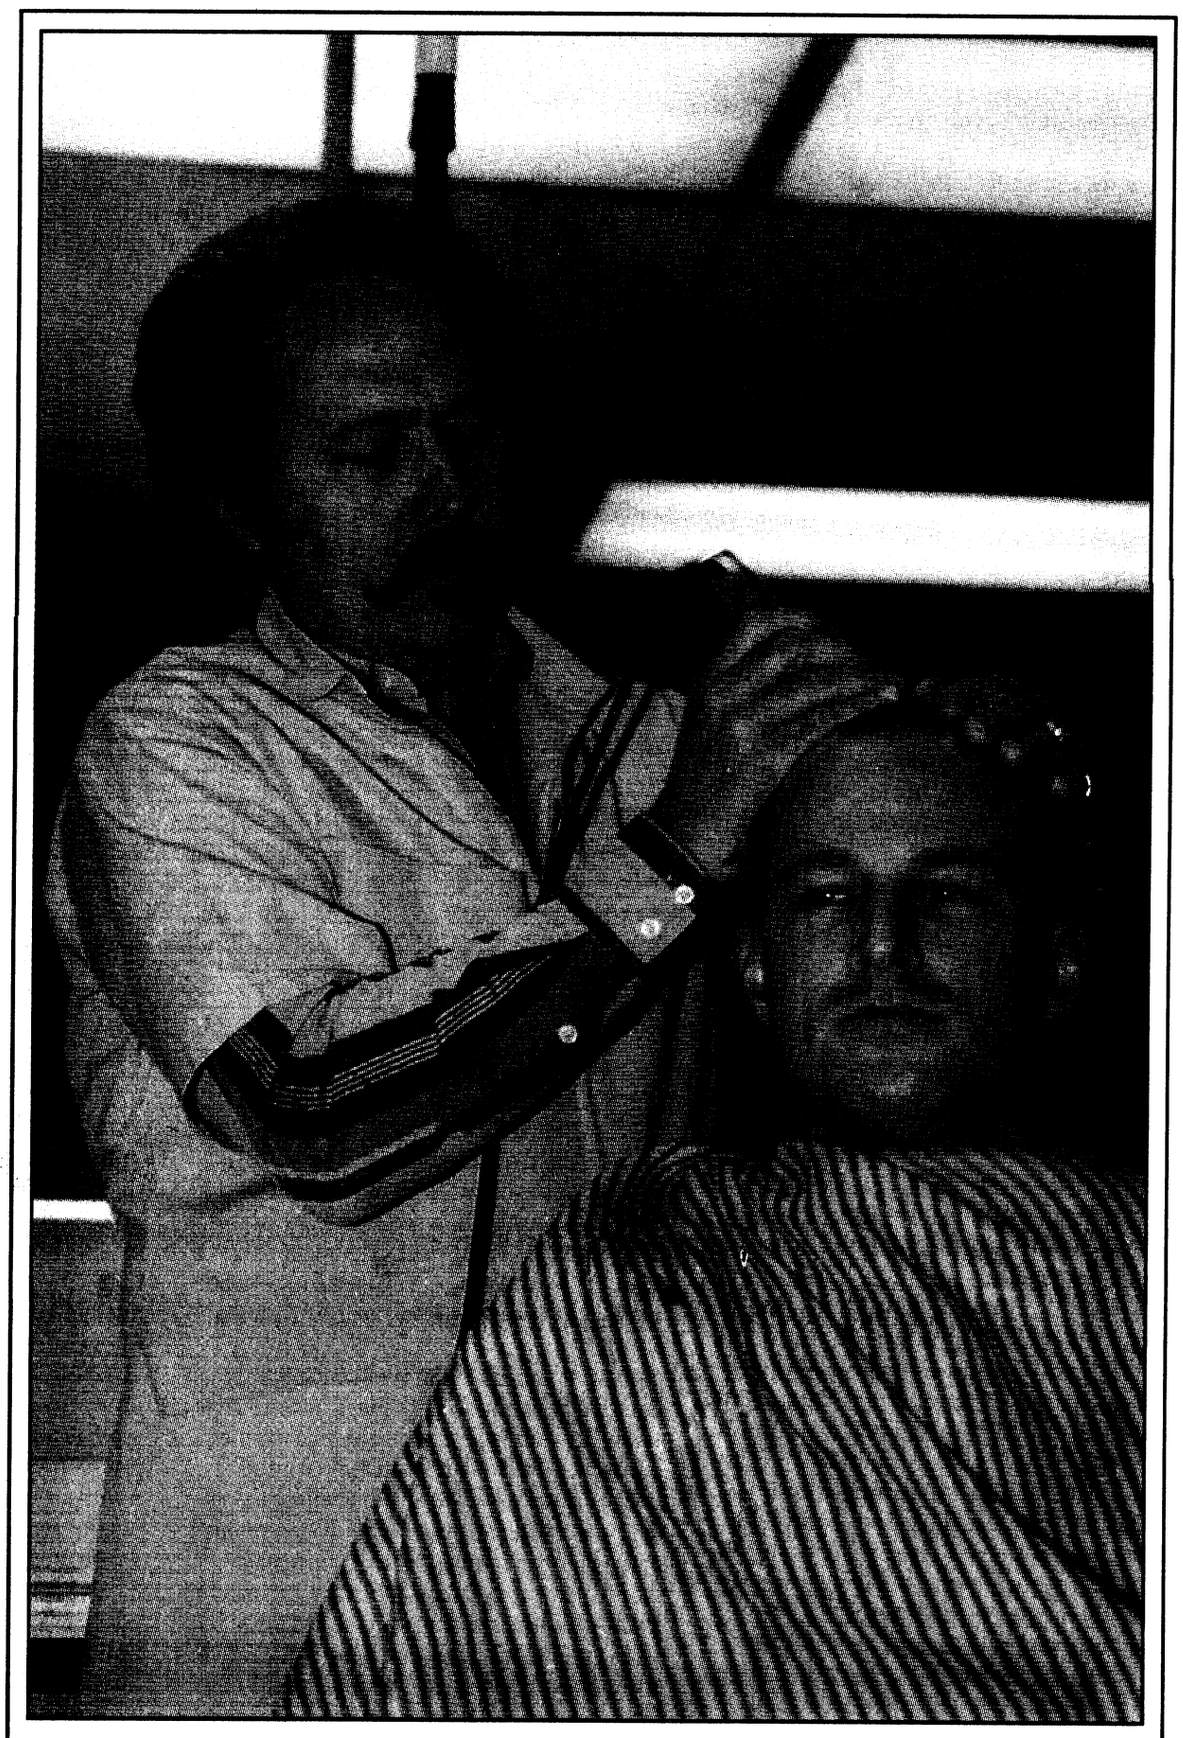
Fort Benning's Building 35 is being renamed Ridgway Hall in honor of the late Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway April 8 during a 10:30 a.m. memorialization ceremony.

Ridgway died last year at the age of 98.

Maj. Gen. William (Bill) A. Stofft, commandant of the U.S. Army War College, will be the guest speaker for the ceremony.

Ridgway commanded and jumped with the 82nd Airborne Division on D-Day 1944, and replaced Gen. of the Army Douglas MacArthur as supreme commander, Allied Powers, U.N. Command in the Far East and Japan, during the Korean War.

Ridgway also served as supreme commander, Allied Powers, Europe, and as Army chief of staff from 1953 until his retirement in 1955, after 35 years of Army service.



Construction on Building 35 began April 6, 1934, and was completed at a cost of $556,321 July 21, 1935.

It served as post headquarters until 1964. Brig. Gen. Omar N. Bradley was among the distinguished general officers who occupied the commandant's office on the third floor.

The newly renovated Building 35 currently houses the School of the Americas.

The ceremony will be conducted in front of Building 35 with a reception on the back porch of the building following.

In case of inclement weather, the ceremony will be in Pratt Hall in Building 35.

Riverwalk being planned for post

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

Fort Benning is in the preliminary stages of a three-phase project to tie into the Columbus Riverwalk.

Soldiers from the Design Management Section of the 36th Engineer Group are in the process of surveying the abandoned railway track bed where the trail will enter Fort Benning and continue for approximately 1.5 miles.

Construction is expected to begin sometime in the early fall of this year.

The Fort Benning portion of the trail will be a multi-purpose walking, jogging and biking trail. Plans are to install lighting, water fountains and park benches, according to Bill Gordy, civil engineer and designer for the project, who works in the Directorate of Public Works Engineering Division.

Currently, the Riverwalk begins in Downtown Columbus, near the Dillingham Street Bridge. The trail continues south along the Chattahoochee River to the point where construction is now under way near the Columbus Municipal Auditorium.

Plans are to have the trail continue along the Chattahoochee River until it nears Fort Benning. It will then cut away from the river and wind eastward toward South Lumpkin Road.

Fort Benning will pick up the trail at an abandoned railway bed that runs between Fort Benning Boulevard and South Lumpkin Road.

Funding for the project will come from money received by the post for being named the Best Large Army Installation in the United States during the 1993 Army Community of Excellence competition.

Fort Benning will use $300,000 of the $1 million ACOE award to build the trail.

A poll taken of Fort Benning personnel and residents revealed that a jogging and fitness trail was one of the top suggestions for putting the ACOE money to good use, according to Maj. Chuck Walls, garrison executive officer.

In addition to the original 1.5-mile Riverwalk, the second and third phases propose to extend the trail for a few more miles into Fort Benning. Phase two of the project is part of a bigger plan to improve McDaniel Manor housing area.

The $5.7 million, Department of the Army funded project, will include an upgrading of the quarters, playgrounds and also a two-mile fitness path encircling the housing area.

This path will intersect with the Fort Benning Riverwalk extension near 10th Division Road. Work on this phase is presently under way.

A third trail is also planned to intersect at the same point. Although it is yet to be funded, the path is designed to extend past the National Infantry Museum and end near the horse stables.

Easter service scheduled April 8

USAIC Chaplains' Office

The Post Easter Sunrise Service will be April 3 at 7 a.m. in Doughboy Stadium.

Chaplain (Col.) Roy G. Plummer, staff chaplain at Fort Benning, will be the guest speaker.

The Sightseeing Road Gospel Choir will be the host choir and the Infantry Band will perform several selections.

The Unit Ministry Team invites the public to attend the Easter Sunrise Service.

Brunch at the Fort Benning Officers' Club and Main NCO Club will follow the service.

Benning to host World Cup competition

More than 400 shooters from 46 nations to compete

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

More than 400 shooter athletes from 46 nations will converge on Fort Benning April 17 through 23 for the 1994 World Cup USA and U.S. Grand Prix shooting competitions to be conducted at the Tommy G. Pool International Shooting Complex.

Some of the countries and territories signed to date are: Argentina, Australia, Azerbaijan, Belarus, Belgium, Bermuda, Brazil, Bulgaria, Canada, Costa Rica, Croatia, Czech Republic, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Great Britain, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Kazakhstan, Luxembourg, Mexico, Monaco, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Oman, Peru, Poland, Puerto Rico, Qatar, Russia, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkmenistan, United States, Virgin Islands and Yugoslavia.

Though Petersen's Prado-Tiro Ranges in Chino, Calif., has hosted the last four U.S. World Cups, Fort Benning was selected to host this year's competition largely because of its proximity to the 1996 Olympic site and its recently upgraded facilities.

"The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit at Fort Benning has a long tradition of success in international shoots," said USAMU spokesman Bob Alyward. "So it's a real honor for us to host a world event of this caliber on our home range."

Olympic country quota slots will be awarded to the home nations of all gold medalists at the 1994 World Cup. A quota guarantees that someone from a given country — not necessarily the athlete who earned it — will be competing in that Olympic event at the 1996 Olympic games in Atlanta.

"Countries will be sending their very best shooters to try to win quota slots, so the competition will be tough," said U.S. Shooting Team Director Lones Wigger. "However, we have the advantage because it's a home match. I expect we'll win more than our share of medals."

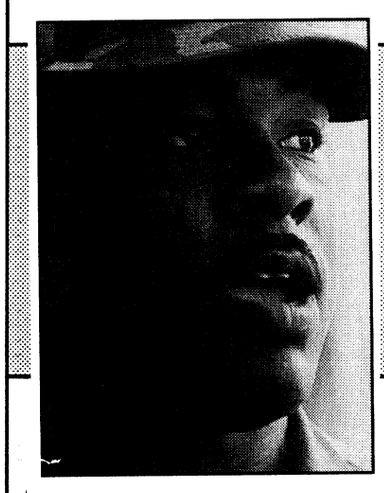
This year's World Cup USA program will feature 10 Olympic rifle and pistol events.

Graphic by George E. Adkins

Athletes may fire minimum qualifying scores necessary to try out for their respective Olympic teams, during both the World Cup and the U.S. Grand Prix competitions.

"It's good to shoot your MQS early in the quadrennium so you have it out of the way and don't have to think about it anymore," said rifle shooter Tammie DeAnglis (Kansas City, Mo.). "You never know what's going to happen — what future conditions are going to be like. Sometimes if it's real windy or the weather is bad, it's very difficult to shoot that score."

The U.S. roster features several returning medalists from last year's World Cup USA. Ann-Marie Pfiffner (Dubuque, Iowa) will defend her women's air rifle title and three-position Bronze Medal from 1993. Rifle shooters Pam Stalzer (Sioux Falls, S.D.) and Bill Meek (Riverside, Calif.) will be back after Silver Medal victories in women's three-position and men's free rifle prone last year.



Jerry Wilder (Remington, Ind.) will look for another medal after winning the men's air pistol Bronze Medal in 1993.

"These are the people we believe are most capable of winning medals for us, and they will have their work cut out for them this year," Wiggers said. "With Olympic quota slots at stake in every event, this may well be the toughest field in the history of our World Cup."

How do you feel about the Defense Department's new policy prohibiting smoking in federal buildings?

Sgt. Walter E. Baxter, Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment. — "I just quit smoking and learned how bad secondhand smoke can be. I think everyone in the military needs to go outside and smoke."

2nd Lt. Pierre Q. Pullins, Company A, 3rd Battalion, 329th Infantry Regiment, Camp Atterbury, Ind. — "I think it's great; I don't like secondhand smoke. They (smokers) can always go outside and smoke. Commanders are going to have to crack down."

Staff Sgt. Ray C. Green, 3rd Battalion, 32nd Infantry Regiment, Infantry Training Brigade. — "I don't think smoking should be allowed inside. Outside is fine. More people wind up with cancer from secondhand smoke than smokers."

Sgt. Timothy B. Edwers, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment — "I'm all for it. Not only is it endangering your life, but others, when you smoke in an enclosed atmosphere."

2nd Lt. Roger Bowman, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment.— "I think it's a great policy. It's a nasty habit (that) doesn't need to be in the Army at all. It just gets people unprepared for combat."

Smokers' vs. nonsmokers' rights

Why should smokers be restricted?

By Caejar A. Cox
USAIC Public Affairs Office

commentary

When's the last time you saw a "Thank you for not nonsmoking!" sign?

Well, I'm here to tell you it's about time you did. For every "No Smoking" sign, there should be a "No nonsmoking" sign.

If someone is in the smoking section of a restaurant, they should have to smoke. After all, if the smoking section is full, I can't sit in the no smoking section and fire up.

PRO

But, if the no smoking section is full someone can sit in the smoking section and not smoke all they want.

Doesn't sound very equal does it?

So if you haven't guessed by now, I'm a smoker. But, like most smokers, I haven't always been. I used to be a nonsmoker, but I gave it up for health reasons. Let me put it this way, I like smoking so much, I'd smoke in my sleep if I had a way to hold the cigarettes.

Now, I don't want everyone to smoke; what I want is equality for smokers everywhere. Equal rights!

Rosa Parks did a sit in on a segregated bus, not because she really wanted to sit there, but to prove a point.

But nonsmokers don't even want to let me get on the bus, let alone sit down.

Maybe it's time in public places each person has to sit in a glass enclosure that has a button we push to get the environment we want.

Why should I change my lifestyle because someone else thinks it's unhealthy? I remember when I was a child and would try to tell on my sisters for something; my father would tell me to worry about myself.

I think that's good advice. Advice I know I'll follow until the day I die (probably from smoking).

You can't tell me that we have the technology to find out how smoke causes diseases, but we can't invent a good enough air filter to keep nonsmokers off my back.

I couldn't believe it when I heard the Department of Defense had a new policy on smoking. Don't government officials have more to worry about than that?

We nonsmokers have rights too

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

commentary

Here in America everyone has rights. Nonsmokers have rights, too.

Those of us who choose not to treat our bodies like chimney stacks don't deserve to be stuck in common areas where the cancer sticks burn and infect our clean lungs with deadly fumes.

I am in favor of restricted areas for the smokers. If they (the smokers) want to pollute their lungs, by all means let them do it where no one else will be harmed by the smoke.

CON

It seems like every day, there are new statistics revealing how secondary smoke does as much damage to nonsmokers' bodies as it does to smokers' bodies.

With the new Department of Defense ruling prohibiting smoking in all federal buildings, smokers are complaining about having to go outside to puff.

I can honestly say I don't feel for the smokers one bit. In fact, I'm quite glad I don't have to smell the disgusting smoke in the building where I work.

I still ponder the thought of why cigarettes even exist. What role do cigarettes play in society? Do they offer anything good that people can use? What is so good about puffing down tobacco, wrapped with paper, sucking down smoke that destroys your lungs and causes one of the most deadly diseases of this century?

To quote Dennis Leary, a famous comedian, "If cigarettes came in a black pack, with a skull and crossbones on the cover and were called Tumors, smokers would still line up outside the store to buy them." I truly believe that about most smokers.

In my mind, the government should outlaw smoking. It should make cigarettes illegal as marijuana and cocaine are.

Nicotine is an addicting, deadly drug. The smokers are putting their lives and the lives of people around them in jeopardy by smoking cigarettes. There are enough ways to die in this day and age without adding cigarettes.

To those people who smoke, I say keep on smoking ... outside where you belong.

Fort Benning should have a 'Recycler of Month' award

This letter is addressing the recycling program at Fort Benning. Considering the fact that quite a large number of residents in Fort Benning do not use their recycling bins accordingly, I have come up with an idea that may get more residents involved.

I have named it "Recycler of the Month" — almost like the award residents get for Yard of the Month.

I believe that if the same recognition is given to Recycler of the Month and some sort of small token of appreciation is given not only will more residents participate, but it will get more residents into a competing state.

Not only do I believe more residents will participate, but the government will also be able to save more money. I also think it will get residents in more of a positive attitude while taking more time to separate recyclable items from nonrecyclable items.

This idea I am sure will be a real moneysaver to our system.

There are no simple solutions for today's complex problems

I am writing in regards to a letter recently published. The letter was from a Linda K. Gorr on the "cons" of the availability of pornographic material in the Post Exchange.

The U.S. government regulates almost everything soldiers do, from the understandable, to the questionable.

It seems as though a few people would like to make military installations "ideal" by instating off-duty dress codes among other issues, and now whether or not adult magazines should be available in Post Exchanges.

Gorr argued the point, "If adult magazines are available, why not child pornography?" She was quick to point out she was not advocating child pornography, but argued there is a market for that too. Comparing the two is a poor and unequal example. Child pornography is illegal and considered severe child abuse.

Adult pornography models are consenting adults who are aware of their actions and possible future consequences.

The point was also made it would be infringing on her "rights" seeing these magazines on the racks. From what I can see, which isn't much, adult magazines are on the highest rack. They are literally out of reach of most children. An 8-, 9- or 10-year-old would not find an adult magazine next to "Dirtbike Digest."

Believe me, if a child is tall enough to reach the adult magazines, he or she is quite capable if finding one elsewhere. Actually it is more of a deterrent for a child to try to look at an adult magazine on base. Imagine the embarrassing possibility of a parent or family friend walking up on this venture. By the way, most adult magazines are wrapped in plastic so no one can get a quick peek without purchasing.

Gorr also commented men should, "communicate with a real person instead of the fantasies these magazines conjure up." Ask any psychologist and he or she will tell you that not only is fantasizing normal, but it is healthy. Most people will never actually live out their fantasies, nor truly want to. Everyone has fantasies whether they admit it or not.

Unfortunately many men on military installations do not have the luxury or access to "communicate" with a loved one – whether separated by distance or there is no significant other. There is also the very real possibility that men are afraid to discuss fantasies with their partners. Fear of rejection or possibly being made to feel a though they are "perverted" or "abnormal" may keep men from discussing how they feel. This may explain the extreme popularity of "fantasy" phone lines, strip clubs, unfaithful mates and prostitution.

Everyone has his or her own standards of morality. It seems as though the people who hold the "highest" standards are the first to protest something they don't believe in.

Gorr attacked Karen Morarie for stating perhaps it would be less offending if adult magazines sales were limited to Class VI stores. Gorr's response, "Is she saying that a person who drinks is less moral than a person who doesn't?" Probably not.

Maybe she is saying that most people who frequent liquor stores are of legal drinking age, therefore it would be less likely that unaccompanied minors would have the opportunity to view the adult magazines.

Whether a person chooses to drink or not to drink, to read adult magazines, or not to read adult magazines, etc. does not automatically make him or her moral or immoral.

Gorr asked the question, "Where is the evidence to support your positions?" on defending the availability of adult magazines. I ask her the same. She stated that adult magazines may actually influence some men to attack women. Where is her "evidence?"

As Gorr pointed out, a rapist would find it more of a "turn on" to dominate and humiliate a real woman, as opposed to a magazines. Rape is a crime not of sexual desire but one of hate, control and power. A man with a need to rape would not be satisfied with a picture.

If in fact adult magazines did have this type of influence on men to rape, we would need to be concerned of the possible violent behavior of our husbands, boyfriends, brothers and sons.

Would they now, only after viewing nude photographs have the desire to dominate and humiliate a woman? The violent crime of rape is clearly deeper than viewing nude photographs of women.

There is widespread research that supports drugs, guns on the street, poverty, lack of education, alcoholism, domestic violence and child abuse are destroying our youth and society. Police reports prove that 60 percent of all acts of violent crime are committed under the influence of drugs or alcohol.

I have never seen any research showing that viewing adult magazines has directly led to any of the above. I am not concerned that adult magazines are ruining our youth or society; I am concerned with people coming up with simple "solutions" to very complex problems. It is like putting a bandage on an internal injury or burying your head in the sand.

Lastly regarding Gorr's statement, "I would suggest in the future your opinions be omitted from the issues unless you have evidence to support them," — let me remind her that her letter was full of opinions.

Although not everyone can agree on the same beliefs or solutions, we are entitled to express opinions whether or not they are "backed up with facts or data." We all have the freedom of speech, which is my right and it is your right and that is a fact.

608th comes home

Fort Benning welcomes last soldiers from Somalia

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

There was no shortage of handshakes, hugs and tears at a hangar on Lawson Army Airfield March 18 when family members and friends met the last group of Fort Benning soldiers returning from Somalia.

Forty-two soldiers from the 36th Engineer Group's 608th Ordnance Company and one soldier from the 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, returned to a hero's welcome in what Col. Dean Kershaw, commander of the 36th Engineer Group, called the "final chapter of the group's Somalia adventure."

Fort Benning Chief of Staff Col. Burnet R. Quick welcomed the soldiers home and congratulated them for their work processing more than 200 tons of ammunition and ordnance and destroying 5,000 captured weapons.

Homecoming scenes like this one have become a familiar sight here as things have wound down in Somalia. More than 1,500 Fort Benning soldiers have served in Somalia during the past year and more than 600 soldiers have served two tours there during that time.

Among those who returned was Staff Sgt. Gloria McClendon of the 608th, who had been in Somalia since August.

Somalia, she said, was "hot and dusty." It was hard to see other soldiers leave to come back to Fort Benning while she stayed on in Somalia, she said, "but I feel we accomplished a lot."

Surrounded by her husband and three children, the youngest crying and clutching her neck in his arms, McClendon said the best part of coming home was getting back to her children and family.

Her husband, Eddie, a first sergeant with the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, was deployed to Somalia January through March 1993. Between the two of them, he said, they have missed a lot of holidays and special occasions.

"We've got a lot of catching up to do," he said. McClendon's 11-year-old daughter, Rhonda, said she plans to do that by taking her mom to her school and dance lessons.

Pfc. Michael Hogue of the 608th has also been in Somalia since August.

"When I left (Fort Benning), I hated this place," he said. "Now I'll never complain about it again."

When a friend asked him if he'd like to go get a Whopper, fries and large Coke, he pretended to faint and said, "That sounds like heaven."

The 608th left four soldiers in Somalia in charge of contingency ammunition. Those soldiers were set to leave close on the heels of this group, said Capt. Philip Gay, commander of the 608th, and should be returning this week.

Post smokes over new policy

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writers

Fort Benning has already begun adapting post facilities to comply with a new government policy regarding smoking.

The Department of Defense recently announced a smoking policy that bans smoking in all DoD workplaces worldwide.

The policy becomes effective April 8 and will apply to military members and civilians.

The policy mandates that outdoor smoking areas be designated, when possible, and that they be reasonably accessible to workers and provide a measure of protection from the elements.

Reaction among Fort Benning workers has been mixed, according to Sgt. Maj. Allen D. Thrower, Directorate of Community Activities sergeant major.

"Some people like it; some people don't," Thrower said. "I'm a nonsmoker myself, so I think it's great. I wish a policy like this had been in place long ago, since secondhand smoke has been proven to be bad for you.

"Some smokers feel their rights are being infringed on, but I think the policy tries to make fair provision for smokers," Thrower said. "When I do community activities inspections, compliance with the new policy is one of the things I'll be checking out.

"It'll take a while for people to learn this policy is serious," he said. "It'll be an educational process."

Smoking will still be permitted in military barracks, family housing, personal quarters, clubs, recreational areas and restaurants.

The policy also provides for smoking cessation programs for all personnel.

Smoking cessation programs are currently available through the Medical Department Activity; contact your health care provider or Troop Medical Clinic for more information.

Smokers, nonsmokers square off

How do you feel about the new Department of Defense smoking policy?

Smokers

- It doesn't bother me. I believe nonsmokers have a right to clean air.
- I don't see any problem with it. After they get rid of the smokers, they'll turn on the drinkers. It's odd — what's politically correct for one generation is not for another.
- Although we smoke, we don't inhale.
- We are becoming a socialist country. Our rights are being taken away slowly but surely.
- "Big Sister" is far more dangerous than Big Brother.

Nonsmokers

- They shouldn't allow smoking, period.
- I think smokers have rights also.
- They should have their own designated areas.
- There should be no contact between smokers and nonsmokers.
- I shouldn't have to go through a smoking area to get to a nonsmoking area.
- Statistics show that secondhand smoke causes cancer.
- When the government starts banning things, they'll start banning everything.

EEO officers gather

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

Equal Employment Opportunity officers from throughout the Southeast gathered at Fort Benning this week for a three-day conference.

Representatives exchanged ideas, discussed problems and brainstormed solutions as part of the workshop.

For much of the first and second days, participants listened to briefings by EEO representatives from higher headquarters like the Training and Doctrine and Forces commands. Other speakers came from the EEO Office of Complaint Investigations and the Office of the Assistant Secretary of the Army.

"We received lots of beneficial information and clarity of direction from each command perspective," said Ellis Dandy, Fort Benning EEO officer and coordinator for the workshop.

A major goal for the gathering was to learn about changes in laws and policies that will affect the EEO offices and the implementation of their programs.

The mission of the Office of Equal Employment Opportunity is to advise the commanding general, other installation commanders, commanders of tenant units and management officials on the Equal Employment Opportunity Affirmative Employment Program and discrimination complaints processing policies and procedures for the assigned army civilian personnel and to provide educational support for both civilian and military personnel regarding EEO issues of concern.

After briefings were completed, the conference attendees broke down into smaller workgroups to more closely analyze changes and problems and to find solutions.

Recommendations resulting from the conference will eventually be formally compiled and passed up through the EEO chain of command.

Many issues discussed were tied into problems related to the reduction in the civilian workforce throughout the Department of Defense.

"Employment concerns relating to age, gender or ethnic groups are raised whenever you're going through changes," said Mike Good, EEO officer from Fort Jackson, S.C.

Diane Stallings from Fort McClellan, Ala., said, "... people need to know there is a stabilizing force ensuring equity across the board."

The workshop wrapped up things Wednesday morning after some final discussions. The group plans to meet again on a regular basis.

Physical fitness degree

University to offer program on post

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

An associate of arts degree in physical fitness leadership has recently been approved for delivery at Fort Benning.

If there is sufficient interest, bachelor's and master's degree programs may also be established, according to Dr. Ed Thomas of the U.S. Army Physical Fitness School.

Though no starting date has been set, Upper Iowa University is scheduled to offer the degree.

The curriculum is designed to produce leaders who excel physically as well as intellectually, and who are disciplined, physically fit, articulate and motivated, according to the proposed curriculum.

The program's curriculum is transformation-based, Thomas said, "meaning that when soldiers and civilians are finished with this training, they will be markedly more fit than when they began."

This program is not just a theoretical or sports-based one, Thomas said. "It is more about the education of the physical than about talking about how good it is to exercise.

"It is about knowing the body from the inside as well as the outside ... and using the body as a vehicle to develop the whole person," he said.

The major courses are equally divided among three areas: theoretical, restorative and martial arts.

The theoretical portion covers the foundation on which the restorative and martial arts are built, with class choices in subjects like kinesiology, nutrition, human anatomy and exercise physiology, among others.

The restorative portion covers systems and techniques that bring the body toward its optimum level of function and performance. Class choices range from flexibility, posture and relaxation to aquatics and resistance exercise.

The martial arts courses teach appropriate responses to external aggression and are based on the distance of the opponent, from close range (grappling) to the use of weapons.

A degree in this field could lead to jobs in corporate fitness, health clubs or in private practice as a personal trainer, Thomas said. "But this degree is as much about educating a person totally as it is about educating them vocationally."

Thomas said he hopes to make the program flexible enough for anyone to participate. To do that, courses and seminars will take place in the evenings, on weekends and courses can even be specifically designed around the needs and time restraints of units, if there is enough interest, he said.

When this curriculum was tested in the past by the 2nd Infantry Division, Thomas said, "We found that it was exactly the kind of program commanders want their soldiers to study, because it has an immediate carry-over and value to the mission of the unit, and it applies regardless of military occupational specialty.

The curriculum is also in harmony with the goals of the Master Fitness Trainer Course, said Maj. Marcus Alexander of the Physical Fitness School. Soldiers who graduate from that course have nowhere to go from there. "With this program," he said, "they have an avenue to become fitness professionals."

For more information, call Thomas at the Physical Fitness School at 545-6335 or 545-2737.

AER campaign reaches $38,107

By Stephanie Krawczyk
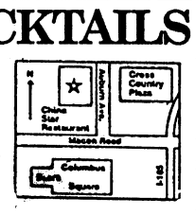
Special to The Bayonet ©

After two weeks of fund-raising, the Army Emergency Relief Campaign has raised $38,107, or 21 percent of its $180,000 goal.



AER provides emergency monetary assistance to soldiers needing help with food, rent, utilities, medical costs and in other areas, according to Alfonso Deane, AER officer. Last year, the organization gave $32 million in aid to individuals worldwide.

The campaign will end May 15, and anyone wishing to make a donations can contact his or her unit project officer or call the campaign office at 545-2536.

Three Ways To Take A Bite Out Of Taxes.

Even though it's getting late in the tax season, there is still a chance that stopping by CB&T could give you a taste of what it's like to save money on your taxes. And don't forget, there's always next year. So the sooner you start saving, the greater the bite you may be able to take out of your taxes.

1. IRA: CB&T offers a variety of IRA types to meet your personal needs and goals. With an IRA from CB&T, all interest earned is tax deferred until withdrawal at retirement and contributions may qualify as federal income tax deductions. And, you still have until April 15th to qualify on your 1993 taxes.

2. SpeciaLine® Equity Line: With our SpeciaLine® Equity Line, you can use the equity in your home to secure an equity line of credit and, in many cases, your interest will be tax deductible. You may qualify for a revolving line of credit from $10,000 up, to use for whatever you need.

3. Dual Collateral Auto Loan: With a dual collateral auto loan, the equity in your home plus your new car or boat as collateral may qualify you for this fixed rate, fixed term installment loan. And, the interest may also be tax deductible.

Of course, you should check with your personal tax advisor to be sure of any possible tax savings offered by these products. Just call or come by any CB&T office for more details. You may get a mouthful of savings.

Fort Benning recognizes women's contributions

EEO symposium tackles women's issues, history

By Karen S. Morarle
Bayonet staff writer

A Women's History Month symposium, sponsored by the post Equal Opportunity Office, took place from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Tuesday in Classroom 5 of Infantry Hall.

The event was part of the post's celebration of Women's History Month. Fort Benning's theme for this year's observance is: "In Every Generation, Action Frees Our Dreams."

The symposium featured three guest speakers: Arlene Johnson, an attorney who works at Columbus College, who addressed the topic of women in law; Maj. Gwenneth Simmons, a nurse-midwife at Martin Army Community Hospital, who spoke on women in medicine, and Dr. Jean Dugas, an industrial psychologist and professor at Columbus College, who discussed the "glass ceiling."

The symposium included remarks from each of the three women, followed by a question-and-answer session.

The first speaker, Johnson, discussed the evolution of women's relationship with the law.

In English law, on which American common law is based, women were long held to be property, she said. A woman could not own property apart from her husband, and had no say in its disbursement.

Also, a man was permitted to beat his wife, even beat her to death, she said, as long as the stick he used was no bigger around than his thumb.

"We've progressed since then," she said, "but in the 20 years that I've practiced law, progress has been slow. Women still account for only 10 percent of all attorneys."

In cases where women go to court against men, Johnson said, including custody cases, women don't fare well.

"Women usually end up with custody in divorce cases," she said, "because the courts assume women will be more caring parents. But when men fight for custody, they win 70 percent of the time.

"When women do end up as single heads of households," she said, "their standard of living almost invariably declines."

Women have also had problems with the law during rape cases, Johnson said. Formerly, a woman's entire sexual history could be admitted as evidence, even if the accused rapist was a stranger who had never seen her before. Conversely, the man's history, even former convictions for sexual abuses, could not be admitted as evidence.

"Some states," she said, "have instituted a shield law, so a woman's sexual history can no longer be admitted as evidence."

Finally, she said, women's standing in the judicial system is reflected in the statistics of reported sexual harassment. Seventy-two percent of female attorneys and judges report they've been sexually harassed in the work place, and 52 percent of female clients with male attorneys report sexual harassment during the course of their cases.

Simmons, who spoke on the standing of women in medicine, stressed the importance of women taking charge of their own health care.

"Ask questions, ask for options, and make your own decisions," she said. "If you're not comfortable with a doctor's opinion, you can ask for another — even if you're in the military."

Simmons also urged the audience not to discriminate against female health-care practitioners.

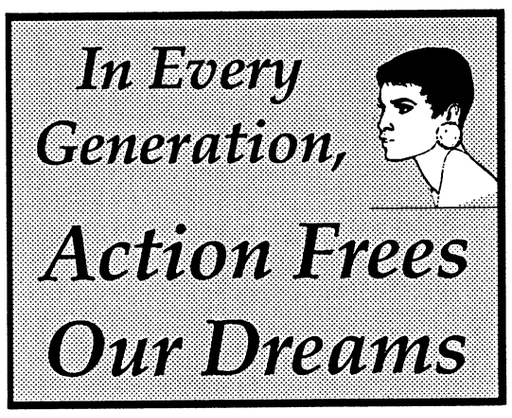
"If they made it through medical or dental school," she said, "they had to be not as good as, but better than their male counterparts. Trust them — they know what they're doing."

Dugas spoke on the "glass ceiling," a phenomenon relating to women in business. Glass ceiling refers to the invisible barrier that keeps women from reaching the very top management positions in corporate America, she said.

"The barrier is based largely on our perceptions," she said. "Our society sees the characteristics of a top executive or CEO (chief executive officer) as essentially male characteristics."

Dugas said she believes these perceptions are false.

"The main concern should be, can this person perform the job efficiently?" she said. "A wealth of gender-based literature, resulting from sound scientific study, shows that women are as capable as men of handling these sorts of jobs. What keeps us from reaching the top is not ability, but perceptions."



Dugas urged people in the audience to question their own thinking.

"Ask yourself why you're perceiving people as you do," she said. "Is it an actual view, or are you falling into stereotyped perceptions?"

All three speakers concluded that while women have made progress in their standing in the work force, they still have a long way to go before they reach an equal standing with men.

"Some women are their own worst enemies," Dugas said. "They believe the old 'you can't do that because you're female' attitude."

Simmons echoed her sentiments. "Don't use your sex as an excuse," she said. "You've got to help people make that change in their thinking — don't hide behind your sex."

Luncheon highlights women's achievements in modern Army

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning's Federal Women's Program Committee sponsored a luncheon March 17 in observance of National Women's History Month.

The program, intended to "entertain and educate" the more than 220 people attending, featured representatives from the FWP highlighting some of the significant events in women's history and honored some Fort Benning women in nontraditional occupations.

"Women working inside and outside the home have greatly improved the economic, cultural and social quality of life at the U.S. Army Infantry Center," said Garrison Commander Col. Richard L. Rutledge in his opening remarks.

The Bureau of Labor predicts that by the year 2000, women will make up 47 percent of the U.S. work force, Rutledge said. But Fort Benning's work force, he said, has already achieved that percentage.

"Women have proved their worth, and now it's time for the full recognition and accomplishment of that worth," he said.

To illustrate some of the strides women have made, Carolyn Harley from the 29th Infantry Regiment, Eddie James from the Army Physical Fitness School, Sgt. 1st Class Sylvia Mitchell from the Military Police Activity, Master Sgt. Jennifer McNeil from the Equal Opportunity Office, Teresa Lewis from the 75th Ranger Regiment, Delores Guynn from the Directorate of Public Works and Sarahann Lights from the Directorate of Civilian Personnel each discussed a contribution, person or event in women's history.

Some of these included:

- The Seneca Falls Convention in 1848, which was the first women's rights meeting in the United States.
- Victoria Woodhull, the first woman to to address the senate judiciary committee on women's right to vote.
- The hard-fought battles of the suffrage movement and the passage of the 19th Amendment in 1920, finally granting women the right to vote.
- The Equal Pay Act of 1963, the first federal enactment against sex discrimination.
- The Equal Opportunity Employment Act of 1972.

To point out how far women have come, some women working in nontraditional occupations were honored at the luncheon. The following women were nominated by their commands or directorates:

- Bina E. Dale, supervisory material handler (fork lift operator) with the Directorate of Public Works
- Sgt. 1st Class Jennifer Pearson, adjutant noncommissioned officer and the first female assigned to the Ranger Training Brigade
- Lee G. Capraro, training publication production manager with the Directorate of Operations and Training
- Dorothy Roland, supervisory freight specialist with the Directorate of Logistics
- Irma Jackson, lead police officer with the Military Police Activity
- Anne Wright, supervisory production controller with the Directorate of Logistics
- Phyllis Peacock, supervisory motor vehicle dispatcher with the Directorate of Logistics
- Shirley Johnston, operations research analyst with the Directorate of Operations and Training
- Cheryl Marks, physical science technician with the Directorate of Logistics

Post's DRM provides the best

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Fort Benning's Directorate of Resources Management has won the Training and Doctrine Command award for best resource management and financial services and facilities for the last two years.

Director Dave Flo said he and his personnel want to show the Army-level Communities of Excellence team that the best has been made even better.

Flo said the post's resources management and financial community has much to be proud of.

"We are particularly proud of our automation efforts across the whole installation," he said. "Because of the downsizing we have needed to find better ways to do things. Automated computer systems are making it possible for us to achieve a high level of output even though we have less personnel."

The directorate is also proud of its efforts to help other post directorates effectively use Total Army Quality principles to improve the way the do business.

"The Fort Benning TAQ handbook developed by DRM will go a long way and last a long time," Flo said.

Among the other accomplishments of the post's resource management and financial community:

• A close working relationship between the civilian banking institutions on post and post financial organizations so that customers' needs can be fully met. In the future, three additional automatic teller machines will be placed at Olson Hall, Harmony Church and Custer Terrace.

• Plans to be the first installation in the Department of Defense to open a banking facility inside a commissary.

• An installation finance office that has improved customer service by sending its travel branch personnel to the classrooms of temporary duty students who need processing.

• A nonappropriated fund financial management program that has resulted in the most productive single fund morale welfare and recreation and family support programs in TRADOC.

Flo said ACOE is not something that post personnel should think about only when evaluating teams visit.

"ACOE is not an inspection," he said. "It's about commitment to quality customer service every day of the year."

"Fort Benning has always been committed to this kind of quality. Even without an ACOE program, we would excel," he said.

Classes designed for those getting out of the military

Army Career and Alumni Program

The following is the Army Career and Alumni Program Job Assistance Center calendar of events for April:

Tuesdays: noon to 1 p.m., Focus Hour, Interview Techniques and Dress for Success.

Wednesdays: 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Job Assistance Workshop; 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Education Opportunity Center.

Thursdays: 1 to 3 p.m., Mock Interview Practice Session

Fridays: Employers Day

Job assistance workshop

Time: Wednesdays, 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Location: Infantry Hall, Building 4

The workshop is conducted every Wednesday at Infantry Hall. Topics discussed include objective setting, resume preparation, expanding opportunities, networking, interviewing, salary negotiating, stress management and financial planning.

The workshop is for anyone leaving federal service (both military and Department of the Army civilians) and their family members, whether leaving voluntarily, involuntarily or retiring.

Education Opportunity Center

Time: Wednesdays, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

Participants will receive information from all over the country about college and university admissions requirements and proficiency exams. Education counselors can also discuss student loans and grants.

Mock Interview Practice

Time: Thursdays, 1 to 3 p.m.

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

Participants will learn how to interview effectively by rehearsing and practicing interview techniques with an experienced JAC counselor. The mock interview will be videotaped to provide the client with a visual learning tool.

Employers' Day

Time: Varies

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

Employers' Day is scheduled each Friday at the Job Assistance Center.

The program is designed to allow employers to recruit qualified candidates for their companies.

Employers normally will give presentations on their organizations and set up interviews with qualified candidates.

A variety of manufacturing and service companies take advantage of this opportunity. Public sector organizations are also represented.

Focus Hour

Time: Tuesdays, noon to 1 p.m.

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

This weekly video program provides additional information on the key areas in the job search process — networking, dressing for success, interview process and negotiating techniques. Counselors will assist with any additional questions.

Small Business Development

Time: April 21, 2 to 4 p.m.

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

A once-a-month free seminar offered by the Small Business Development Center of the University of Georgia.

It is designed to provide assistance and training in starting a new business.

The seminar serves as a focal point for linking together resources of the federal, state, and local governments and the private sector.

Some of the employers scheduled to participate include Vinnell Corporation, Watkins Motor Lines, Georgia Dept of Labor, Temporary Alternatives, Schneider National and Primerica.

For additional information and registration, call Army Career and Alumni Program Job Assistance Center, located in Building 2634, at 545-2308 or 545-2309.

Job Assistance Center calendar

A free service for service members getting out of the military, Department of the Army civilians and family members, the Job Assistance Center provides job search training, individual career coaching and access to thousands of job leads.

Qualified personnel can register at the Job Assistance Center to receive this professional free service. Listed below are the activities for April.

- Job Assistance Workshop — April 6, 13, 20 and 27, 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Spc. Robert J. Ederveen, a surveyor with the Design Management Section of the 36th Engineer Group, takes elevation measurements along the Riverwalk extension planned for Fort Benning.

Artist's conception of Riverwalk extension planned for Columbus and Fort Benning.

Riverwalk: Extends

and Columbus with the Riverwalk was conceptualized by Col. Burnet R. Quick, post chief of staff.

"It really is a valuable relationship, symbolic and realized, between this post and Columbus," said Walls. "(The walk) will be great when it's finally completed."

The Columbus Riverwalk is part of the ongoing project to revitalize parts of Columbus and create a riverfront attraction.

The completion of both the Columbus and Fort Benning portions of the walk are planned to coincide with the 1996 Olympic games, which will be played in Atlanta.

Columbus won a bid to be an Olympic venue for women's softball that will take place at Golden Park.

The path along most of the river will be much less sophisticated than the original 2,200 feet built downtown, according to Edward Burdeshaw, architect for the Riverwalk.

After leaving downtown, the trail will become a 12-foot wide asphalt road.

"It will be very pastoral and have as little impact on the river as possible," said Burdeshaw. "We're going to be as ecologically sensitive as we can and more in harmony with the natural elements of the river."

CID targets $$$ crimes

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — "There's no such thing as a free lunch."

These words of economist Milton Friedman are coming back to haunt scores of soldiers who have been pocketing pay and allowances they're not entitled to receive.

As early as March 1993, Army Criminal Investigation Command Special Agents Wes Kilgore and Terry Van Horn began checking into suspicious accounts.

At the Army Criminal Investigation Command's branch office at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind., special agents formed a task force that has investigated more than 6,200 pay accounts since March 1993.

Investigations range from payments made to "ghost" or bogus accounts, to deserter or absent-without-leave accounts to a variety of overpayment accounts. The agents' findings were later confirmed by a General Accounting Office audit.

Before the investigations are over, the Defense Finance and Accounting System and the Army CID expect to analyze 18,000 to 30,000 suspect accounts.

So far, the Army has detected losses of about $2.5 million and a cost-avoidance of nearly $4.5 million. It has recovered more than $778,000, and this figure rises daily.

"The crime in these cases is committed when the money is converted to personal use," said Special Agent Kevin Cross, of the Army's CID headquarters in Falls Church, Va.

"These cases are unique in that, when the suspect account is fully investigated by the task force, the case is then forwarded to the local Army CID for completion," he said. The jurisdiction for criminal action is in the location where the illegal withdrawal and use of funds occurs.

The system sweep catches accounting errors, as well as intentional fraud, as the internal-control and quality-assurance programs of DFAS and the Standard Installation/Division Personnel System are strengthened and enhanced. So Cross warned all defense employees to watch their paychecks.

"Those receiving money they are not entitled to should report it to the finance office immediately," he said. "It will only be a matter of time before any intended fraud is detected."

Volleyball

3/24 league has 'spiked' itself with slow demise.

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, volleyball league has collapsed. The only teams left playing are from 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, and 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, and they're dropping fast.

Four matches were scheduled for play March 18 at Kelley Hill Fitness Center. One ended up being played, two were forfeited and one was rescheduled to a later date. Here's what happened:

Match one went to the Eagles of Company E, 1st Bn., 2-0, 8-15 and 15-7.

In game one, the Eagles won 2-0 when the Dogs of Co. D, 1st Bn., forfeited because they were short three players.

The Dogs got their players for the second game and pulled out a 15-8 win to even the match at one apiece, behind the hard hitting of John Carpenter, Michael Fuller and Victor Blomberg.

The rubber game for the match went to the Eagles, 15-7, with James Manning and Ronald Turner doing the damage at the net.

In the second match, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, swept the match 2-0 and 2-0 on a forfeit by Company C, 1st Bn.

The third match was also a forfeit with Co. E, 2nd Battalion, winning 2-0 and 2-0 over Co. D, 2nd Bn.

Both teams that forfeited were dropped from the league.

The match between Co. C, 2nd Bn., and HHC, 2nd Bn., was rescheduled for a later date because of military commitment.

Shooting complex to be dedicated in honor of Pool

By Tonza Borden
U.S. Army Markansmanship Unit

The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit will formally dedicate the Tommy G. Pool International Shooting Complex at a 1 p.m. ceremony April 8.

The complex, located on Alamo Road near Soldiers' Plaza, will serve as one of the ranges for the upcoming World Cup Shooting Championships April 17 to 24.

The late Lt. Col. Tommy G. Pool, former Olympic bronze medalist, was with the unit for more than two decades as a shooter and civilian employee. Pool died in 1990.

"Pool won many national and world championships that were a credit to himself, the unit, the U.S. Army and America," said Col. Lory M. Johnson, commander of the unit.

His widow and guest of honor, Nancy Pool, and Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, commanding general of Fort Benning, will unveil a portrait at the ceremony of Pool that will hang in the complex.

Refreshments and shooting demonstrations to highlight the capabilities of the indoor, outdoor range will follow the ceremony. The general public is invited to attend.

AMU to institute Hall of Fame with charter inductees

By Tonza Borden
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

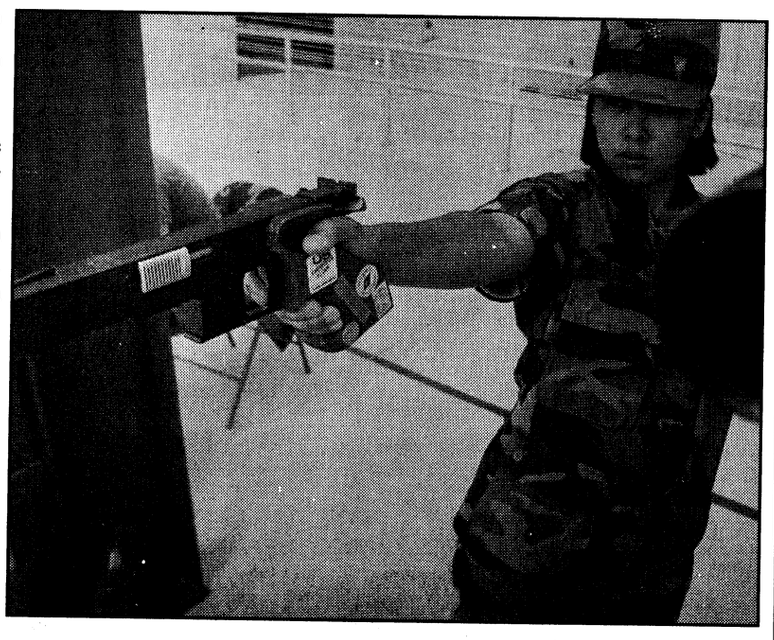
Seven former members of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit will be inducted in the unit's first hall of fame during a banquet ceremony, April 15 at the Fort Benning Officers' Club.

The names of the distinguished shooters will be announced during the ceremony in which Dennis J. Reimer, Forces Command commander-in-chief, will be the guest speaker.

"The inductees represent the elite of America's military rifle and pistol shooters," said Col. Lory M. Johnson, commander of the unit. "Each member is a past master of the art of shooting."

The former shooters have set more than 1,000 national records and won Olympic and World Championships.

The hall of famers will be permanently recognized in a section of the unit's headquarters at Building 243.



The 38-year old unit is an organization dedicated to competive shooting and enhancing marksmanship.

Mountain Ranger Run

Dahlonega gears up for race

5th Ranger Training Battalion

The Officers' Association with volunteers from the 5th Ranger Training Battalion at Camp Frank D. Merrill in Dahlonega, Ga., are hosting the sixth annual Mountain Rangers Run May 21.

Team competition this year is in five-person teams, with the winning team receiving limited edition, numbered Mountain Ranger Coins in addition to trophies.

The 5th Ranger Training Battalion will be defending its undefeated winning record in the team event.

Unit entry forms are available on request from Civil Affairs.

Limited billeting is available on a first-come, first-served basis. Units entering 30 or more runners can have their race T-shirts customized with their unit logo. Contact the Officers' Association for more information.

The race will start and finish on the main campus of North Georgia College in Dahlonega.

The race is a nationally certified 10K course and is sanctioned by the U.S. Track and Field Association.

Awards will be given to the top male and female winners as well as the top three runners in each age group.

Every runner will receive a T-shirt showing the skyline of Dahlonega.

Money raised by the run will be donated to the American Red Cross.

The last race raised more than $2,300 to support the community in preventing, preparing for and coping with emergencies of all kinds.

These services include collection of lifesaving blood, training people in cardiopulmonary resuscitation, first aid and water safety and providing emergency shelter, food and clothing to local disaster victims.

Somewhere between 250 to 500 runners from the surrounding counties as well as from out of state are expected to participate.

Also new this year is the participation in the 1994 Run and See Georgia Grand Prix program, a series of more than 70 races throughout the state that gets its more than 28,000 runners to travel around the state participating in quality running events while seeing some of the tourist attractions and cities in Georgia.

MS Walk set for April 9, 10, 17 throughout Ga.

National Multiple Sclerosis Society

The 1994 MS Walk is coming to 10 locations throughout Georgia in April including:

April 9
Buckhead

Reception

Soldiers receive 'Welcome to the U.S. Army'

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

The sign over the entrance says "Welcome to the U.S. Army." Civilians walk in the door and never come out again. They come out, but when they do, they are soldiers.

This is the door to the 30th Adjutant General Battalion (Reception), Infantry Training Brigade. It is the first door that every infantryman passes through on his way to becoming a soldier.

The mission of the 30th AG is to receive, process and ship to infantry training all regular Army, National Guard and Army Reserve soldiers.

"We start the process of soldierization," said Battalion Commander Lt. Col. Bobby A. Little. "Our objective is to make them look, think, act and, subsequently, smell like soldiers."

Getting them ready for one station unit training is a four-day metamorphosis that begins with a new set of clothes and a simple haircut.

Their first morning there, new soldiers pack up their civilian clothes and are given a gray physical training uniform, advanced $165 pay, and lined up outside the barber shop, where every man's hair is cut within an eighth of an inch of his head.

"It is amazing to see the transformation from civilian attire to military wear," Little said. "They all look different when they arrive. After a haircut, they all look alike."

Getting that first haircut is a memorable experience, according to Pvt. 2 James B. Dyals. He said he still remembered it vividly the day before he graduated from one station unit training, almost 16 weeks later.

"It's like it cuts everyone down to one level," he said. "You could see people's attitudes change." One guy, he remembered, had "gangster" hair and "attitude written all over him," when they first arrived. "After they cut all his hair off, there was no more chip on his shoulder," Dyals said.

Looking the same "lets them know that they are now part of a group, part of an organization and no longer an individual," Little said. "They become part of a team."

The next several days are filled with paperwork, medical and dental screenings and briefings.

The soldiers receive Army uniforms, Army identification cards, Army "dog tags," Army glasses, and a general introduction to the Army.

They get a "smart book," the soldiers' handbook, to study basic soldier skills during down time.

They adjust to waking up at 4:30 a.m. and sleeping in the same room with 60 other men.

They learn to properly address the drill sergeants and processing noncommissioned officers as "Sergeant," not "Sir," to avoid doing push-ups.

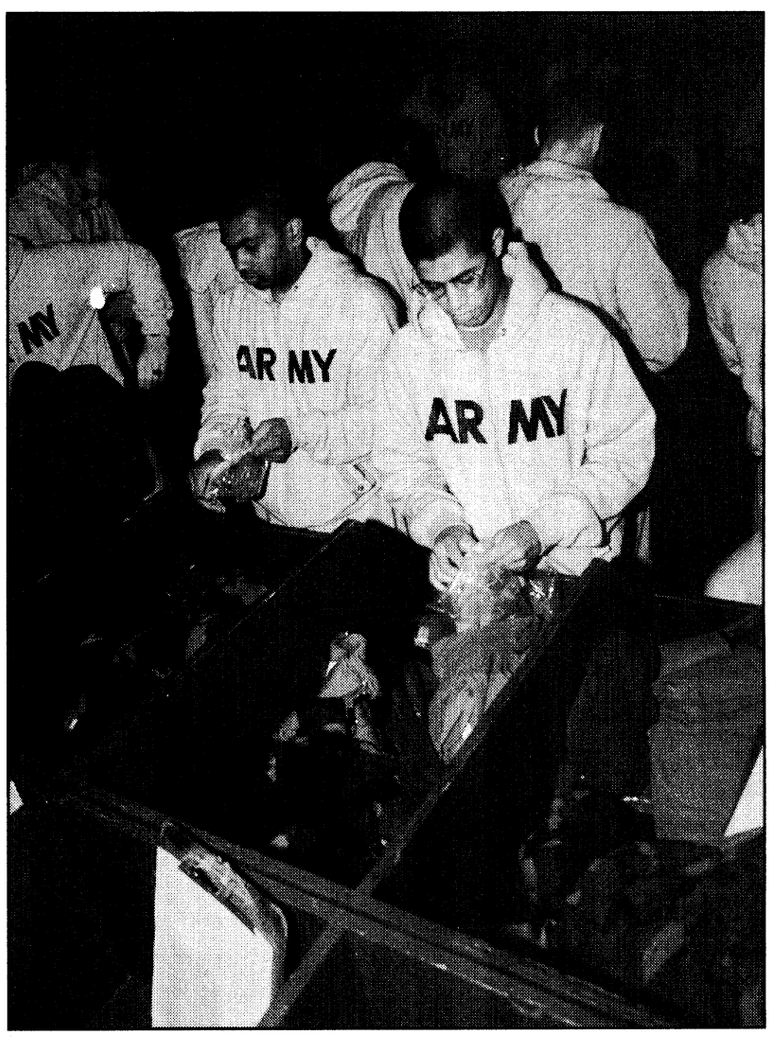
And they get shots.

They get a minimum of nine immunizations in all, four the first day — one in the right arm, two in the left and one in their "fourth point of contact," Little said.

"(Nobody) tells you about the shots you get here, how bloody your arm can get and how much your butt hurts," said Pvt. 1 William R. Newman.

But it is not the shots that most of the new soldiers complain about; it's the boredom. Processing naturally means a lot of hurry-up-and-waiting, and "they are impatient," said Staff Sgt. Vince M. Harris, a processing NCO. "They want to get started."

"The soldiers come here energized; but, after the initial shock, the level of motivation goes down," said Battalion Command Sgt. Maj. Oscar Geraldo, who monitors the feelings of the new soldiers with periodic "sensing sessions" to get their feedback. "They are anxious to go down range," he said.

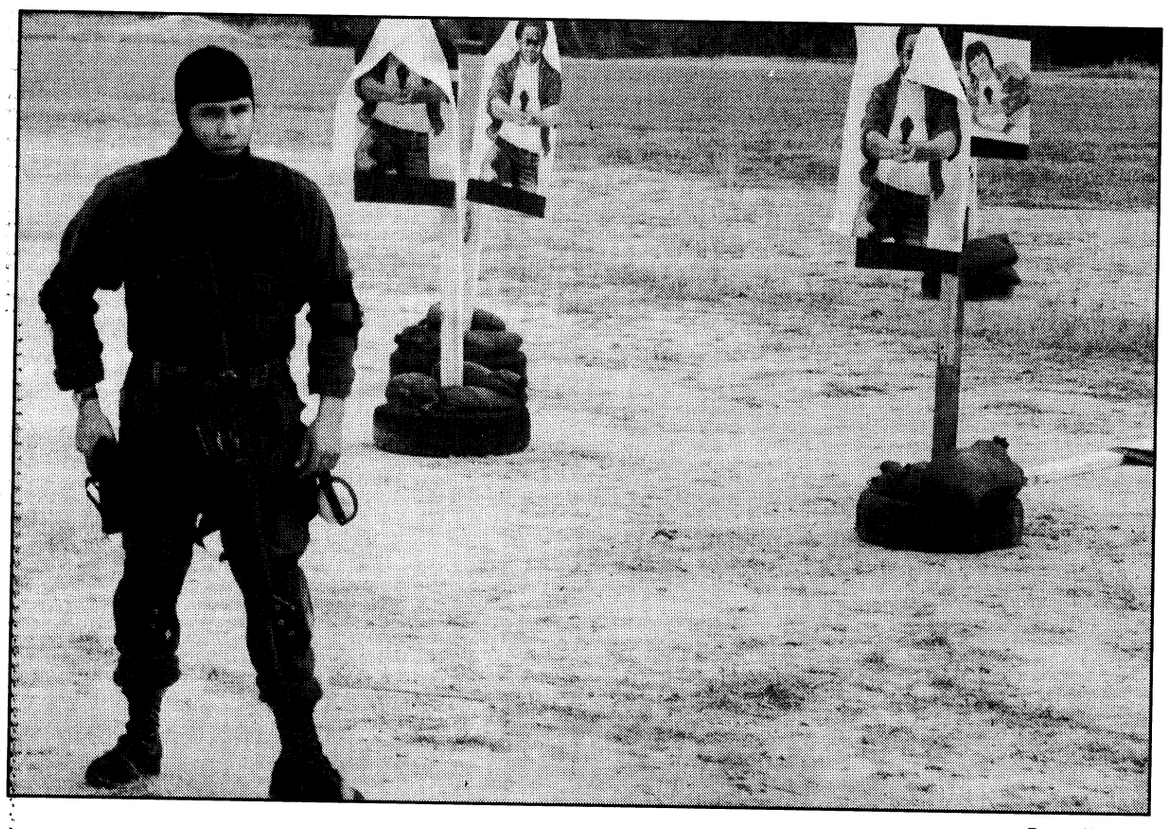


"On the day they ship, the soldiers are given pep talks by their company commanders, and their motivation immediately soars," Little said.

"Going down range," or "shipping" to their training unit, is what they all seem to be living for, even though they might be nervous about what the future holds in store.

"I look forward to shipping because it's not going to be just sitting around," said Pvt. 1 John Chitko. "I want to get there and go for it."

That the others echo that sentiment is evidenced by the fact that on the day when the drill sergeants from their training companies come and load the new soldiers into "cattle cars" to take them to their OSUT units, cheers can be heard from inside as the trucks pull away from the curb.



Armed with the tools they will need to become full-fledged soldiers, and with a headstart on some of the things they will be learning over the next 15 weeks, they can look back on the sign that reads "Welcome to the U.S Army," and know that now, they are a part of it.

Soldiers sort through their new belongings to make sure they received everything during clothing issue.

Soldiers wait in formation before shipping to their training unit to begin Infantry One Station Unit Training.

Special Ops shows skills

By Devon Kerbow
School of the Americas

Capt. Erich Rose knows how to make an entrance. At a demonstration given by the School of the America's Special Operations Division at Patton Range Feb. 22, the division chief rappelled from a helicopter to a standing-room-only audience of SOA's cadre and students.

The event highlighted many of the skills that SOA's counterdrug students are required to learn, said Capt. Buck French, a team leader in special operations and coordinator of the presentation.

The demonstration consisted of five parts: an overview of the counterdrug course, marksmanship skills, demolitions, two versions of close-quarters combat and a static display of equipment, said Sgt. 1st Class Robert Roemer, an SOD team sergeant.

Each part had a instructor narrating and one or more instructors performing the task being explained.

The marksmanship phase featured firing both the 9mm pistol and M-16 rifle.

Discriminative marksmanship is important, French said. You must have the ability to selectively engage and hit a target.

Next, demolitions focused on the type and amount to use for forced entry of a building. Three different types of charges were demonstrated.

The crowd was then brought from the bleachers and taken to a building for the first portion of the close-quarters combat.

Each of the five participating instructors described his duties in forcefully entering and clearing a building.

After explaining their mission, the instructors walked slowly through the procedure. They followed that by taking the building at combat speed.

The last close-quarters combat demonstration began with a helicopter insertion of a team of four soldiers by fast-rope technique. This technique requires team members to slide down a three-inch rope from the helicopter much like firefighters slide down a pole.

The team ran to the targeted building presumed to be a drug processing site, set an explosive and blew the door. The assault team quickly infiltrated the building and soon returned with its prisoner.

All then ran back to the site where they would meet their helicopter and set off smoke to signal it. The passengers then quickly boarded the helicopter.

"It went well," French said. "We accomplished our objectives and the officers of the School of the Americas gained an appreciation for what our guys do."

Basic trainees learn land navigation

By Shelby Carr
Infantry Training Brigade

Initial entry soldiers from Company E, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, entered the woods for the first time to negotiate the U-1 compass course March 11.

The U-1 compass course reinforces the initial instruction the basic trainees receive on basic land navigation skills.

"The compass course reinforces training that the one station unit training soldier receives in the classroom," said Sgt. 1st Class William Ingersol, from Company A, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment. "The course benefits the soldiers because it teaches terrain, pace count, and it helps them become accustomed to using a compass."

After receiving a safety briefing and determining a pace count, the soldiers entered the woods to locate the three out of five points needed to receive a go.

"It was like an adventure," said Pvt. 1 Curtis Miller of Company E. "It was my first time walking the woods and is necessary for those who have only traveled by roads."

Land navigation is a job-related task for infantry soldiers.

"Infantry soldiers need to know how to get from point A to point B," said Spc. Richard Brown, also from Co. E. "Navigation over dense foliage taught us how to walk the woods and estimate distances using our feet."

During the land navigation course, the soldiers were placed in three-man teams.

"It was a good challenge," said Spc. Rami Kaddoura of Co E. "We could apply something we learned in the classroom and see immediate results, right or wrong. There wasn't anyone telling us what to do on the course."

The U-1 compass course is not part of the program of instruction so not all basic trainees have the opportunity to use the course.

"Most of the soldiers only receive one class on land navigation," said Staff Sgt. Wade Newman, a Co. E drill sergeant. "The various company commanders then decide whether more instruction is necessary. Trainees need as much land navigation practice as possible."

The men of Co. E., 2nd Bn., 58th Inf. Regt., will get additional instruction when they attempt the land navigation course along Yankee Road in a few weeks.

world war II

Fifty Years Ago This Week...

• The Soviets continued to drive through the battered German defenses throughout the Eastern Front, taking numerous Nazi-held cities including Chernovtsy, Gorodenka, Kamenets-Podolski, Balta and Proskurov. The isolation of the German First Army and the ensuing wholesale captures brought about by the Russian advance which extended into Kolomya, Rumania, infuriated Adolph Hitler, prompting a rash of major personnel changes within the German Eastern Front leadership. Among the most significant of the dismissals was the relief of the brilliant Field Marshal Erich von Manstein from his command of Army Group North, providing yet another example of Hitler's adept ability to inadvertently hurt his own cause.

• Over Europe, the Royal Air Force launched one of its most costly operations of the war, losing 96 out of 795 planes during a two-day raid on Nuremberg. Several factors contributed to the disproportionate British losses, including the considerable distance travelled, the unavoidable high visibility of the clear nights, and noteworthy German technological advances represented by the new Lichtenstein radar system.

sdt question of the week

By Alfredo Lezcano
2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment

Editor's note: To assist noncommissioned officers in preparing for the Self-Development Test, The Bayonet will publish a series of questions weekly. The answers will appear upside down and will include the appropriate field manual where the answer may be found.

Question: The use of applicable field manuals, training circulars, drill books, soldiers manuals and Army Regulations to ensure training tasks follow standard operational methods best describes which principle of training?

A. Use performance-orientated training
B. Training using multiechelon techniques
C. Use appropriate doctrine
D. Train to sustain proficiency

ANSWER: C. Use appropriate doctrine. The answer may be found in FM 25-101, Pages 1 to 5.

Force protection: What is it?

perspective

By Samuel R. Reynolds
U.S. Army Safety Center

A young soldier once told me he thought there was someone in the Army whose only job was to think up new buzz words, acronyms and phrases.

He may be right. When these new expressions are introduced into the Army's lexicon, they are supposed to represent something new or improved — a concept, an innovation, or a better way of doing things. Such is the case with "force protection."

Force protection isn't really a new concept. It has been in the Army's arsenal of warfighting enhancements for some time.

Any well-informed leader knows that force protection is embedded in the Army's doctrine and that it is one of the four elements of combat power in Field Manual 100-5. Although broad and encompassing, in its simplest form "force protection" equates to protecting and preserving assets to win in combat.

There are three primary ways that force protection enhances a unit's warfighting capabilities:

• Through concealment and deception. It is here that leaders are able to counter the enemy's firepower and maneuver by making their own soldiers difficult to locate, strike and destroy. This strategy allows leaders to deceive the enemy through the use of good camouflage discipline or other appropriate measures to prevent unnecessary combat losses.

• By keeping soldiers healthy and "fit to fight." Good leaders take care of their soldiers' basic health needs and prevent unnecessary exposure to weakening conditions. They also teach soldiers to safeguard their equipment and supplies from loss or damage. Another aspect of this is leader supervision of preventive maintenance and quick repair of equipment.

• The third and biggest component of force protection is safety. Leaders at all levels must integrate safety as a principal element in everything they do. Because soldiering is a tough, demanding, and risky business, the potential for danger is always present.

A noncommissioned officer who is trained to accomplish missions with safety integrated into them will be able to manage the risks associated with soldiering and reduce the potential for danger. Safety in training, planning and operations is crucial to successful combat operations and the preservation of combat power.

For the Army to continue being a successful organization capable of accomplishing its diverse missions, our leaders — including our NCOs — and our soldiers must always focus on ways we can best implement force protection.

Full implementation of these three components of force protection is the key. Leaders trained in force protection will be able to manage the hazards and risks inherent in soldiering. With these skills, they will enable our military to train safely and successfully and enable our soldiers to transition what they learn and the skills they acquire into combat.

How To Recycle

Post housing residents may place recyclable materials in brown plastic bins for weekly curbside pickup.

Here is a list of the items that can and cannot be placed in the bin for recycling.

• Glass: Clear green or brown bottles and jars including soda, beer or liquor containers may be placed in the bin. All caps must be removed before placing the bottles in the bin. Glass items such as light bulbs, window or automobile glass, mirrors and drinking glasses cannot be placed in the bin.

• Metal: All metal cans (the labels do not have to be removed) can be placed in the bin after rinsing them. Metal foils, such as aluminum foil, cannot be placed in the bin.

• Plastic: Soda bottles, milk containers and water jugs can be recycled but the caps must be removed and the bottles crushed by stepping on them before placing them in the bin. Styrofoam, plastic bags and caps from recyclable bottles and containers cannot be placed in the bin.

• Paper: Newspaper can be placed in the bin if it is bundled or placed in a brown paper bag and placed beside the bin at the curb on collection day. All glossy paper, such as that used in catalogs, brochures and advertisements, cannot be recycled. Magazines are not acceptable at this time.

Trash and recycle pickup schedule

Beginning the week of April 11, household trash and recycling will be collected once a week on the same day. If there is recyclable material mixed in with the trash or if there is no recycling bin next to the trash can, the trash will not be picked up until the following week or until recyclables are separated.

Dexter students explore with hands-on activities

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

Through an innovative program based at Dexter School, youngsters are exploring earth sciences with hands-on activities that include talking to plants, racing snails, reviving sick ferns and searching for drought-resistant samples of flora.

Through project Greenthumb, students are examining these subjects and others as part of a curriculum developed by teachers Joyce Flatt, Virginia Wilcox and Lynn Harp.

These educators designed the curriculum in addition to writing a federal proposal directed toward achieving the national education goal for science, said Vicki Rogers, principal.

The proposal was accepted and funds were provided for the construction of the greenhouse located in back of the building, Rogers said.

As part of the program, students in Wilcox's third grade are learning useful tips on snail care while relating this life sciences data to other classroom studies such as math.

While observing their own personal snails, all of which are named, students recently investigated whether these oozy pets had a sense of smell.

"Remember to chart your findings," Wilcox said as children prepared to expose their snails to a variety of smells.

Using cotton swabs, the children carefully dropped liquid samples near their snails and observed their charges greedily slurping it or retreating tightly into their shells in indignation.

Apple juice was popular while liquid smoke and vinegar were eschewed. Lemon juice produced mixed reactions, which demonstrated an aspect of scientific deviation the youngsters had discussed.

The students also used scientific deviation and graphing skills to chart their snails' weight, speed and even the time it takes for them to awaken for examination.

While Wilcox's students held magnifying glasses close to their snails in careful observation, kindergartners down the hall conducted their own scientific experiment by talking in class, but not to each other.

As part of project Greenthumb, these students were testing if a plant responds to the sound of a human voice.

Children have been talking kindly and sweetly to one robust plant, which was so pleased it produced a sturdy bean and several flowers.

"We are already seeing the value as children have opportunities for hands-on, real-life experiences."

— Vicki Rogers
Dexter School principal

The kindergartners have been rude to a second plant, which maintained its health but refused to manufacture beans or flowers. The students noted the plant they completely ignored fared worse than the other two samples; its leaves were wilting and tinged with yellow.

"That one isn't doing very well," confirmed teacher Earnestine Ezekiel as a student sitting near the experiment station thoughtfully observed the three samples.

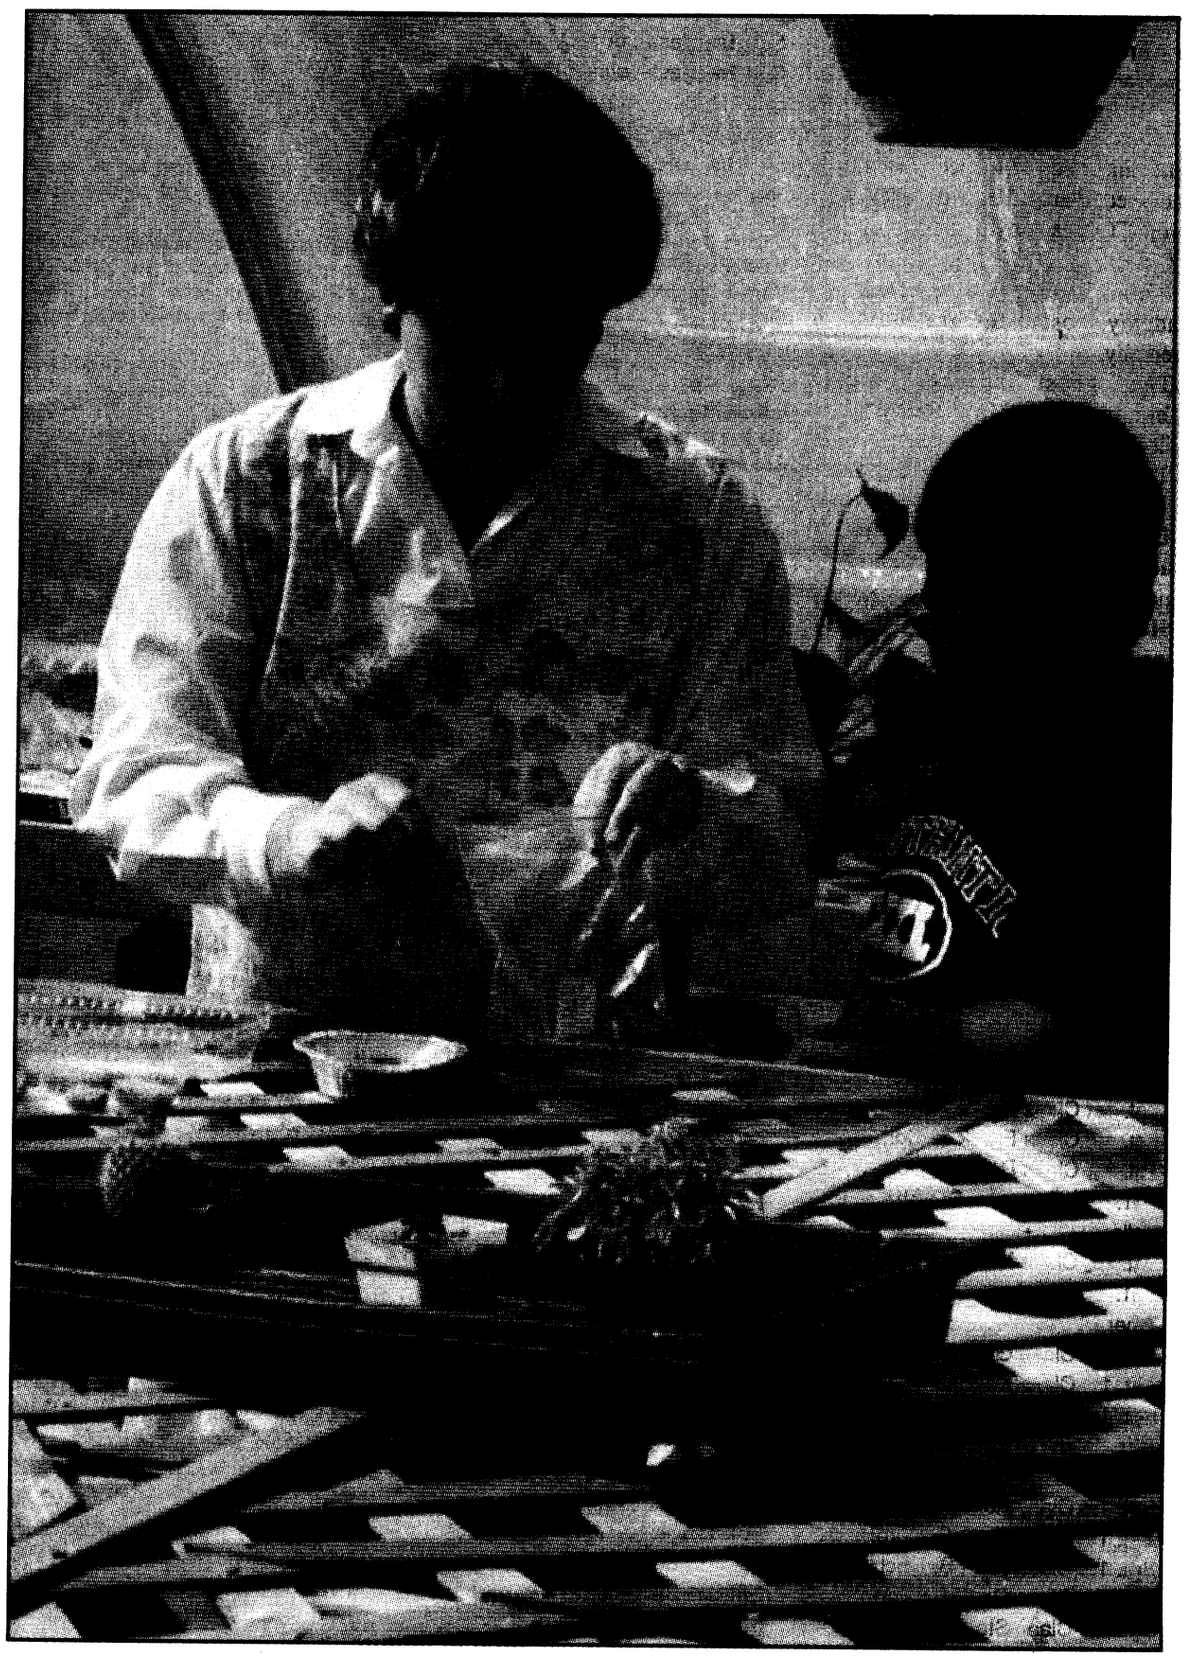
In other hands-on experiments with nature, fifth-graders in Flatt's class are developing horticulture skills by studying ways of propagating plants and by reviving lackluster seasonal leftovers donated by merchants.

Under the direction of Flatt, the greenhouse coordinator, students have encouraged a variety of plants to thrive, including ferns, border plants and poinsettias.

By tending to dehydrated plants, students saw the effects of evaporation and related the findings to an experiment exploring plant adaptation to drought.

"How many think this will dry up first?" asked Flatt, indicating a small jade tree.

In the experiment, students were speculating which of three plant samples is best adapted to a hot, dry environment, such as a desert.



By withholding water from a border plant, a cactus and a jade plant, students demonstrated evaporation varies according to each sample's individual covering and leaf type.

To illustrate this concept, the youngsters used wet sponges and shielded samples in three different ways; some were enclosed in clear airtight plastic bags, some were partially shielded and some were completely exposed to the bright sunlight of the greenhouse.

Using their scientific journals, the students will record their observations and draw conclusions about how plant coverings help retain water.

"We are really excited to have this program, and we are already seeing the value as children have opportunities for hands-on, real-life experiences," Rogers said.

Lessons cover all aspects of the curriculum and include pragmatic applications such as greenhouse maintenance and gardening to studies of nature such as the life cycle of the butterfly, she said.

WOMEN'S HISTORY MONTH

Females blaze new trails

Name: Master Sgt. Jennifer Denise McNeill
Trailblazer in what area: Equal opportunity
Military Occupational Specialty: 91E
Unit: Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment
Job Title: Noncommissioned Officer in Charge, Equal Opportunity Office
Years on the job: 17 years

What adjustments did you have to make being a female trailblazer? Very few! As a noncommissioned officer, you are constantly reminded that flexibility is a key to effectiveness.

What were your reasons for joining the Army? When I enlisted in the Army, there was a strong need for direction and discipline.

Define your style of leadership:
There isn't one type of leadership style I consider as "my style." I like to think of myself as a situational leader.

What person has most influenced your military career?
Sgt. Maj. Philip Menard. His leadership style and skills have been adopted by me. I consider him my mentor.

If you were the sergeant major of the Army for a day, what improvements would you make? If I were sergeant major of the Army for a day, I would relook the procedures for retention and downsizing the military. I feel that we (Army) are losing too many of our most experienced leaders.

What were your reasons for choosing your MOS? My career field was chosen for me. When I entered in the service there was a push for dental technicians.

Describe a memorable moment in your career. A memorable moment in my military career was when I was attending the Basic Noncommissioned Officer Course. We were participating in an escape and evasion exercise. This exercise included repelling and crossing over a river using a one-rope bridge.

McNeil

What are your future plans? My ultimate goal is to become a a sergeant major.

volunteers needed

Volunteer Resource Center

The Fort Benning Volunteer Resource Center promotes volunteerism by recruiting potential volunteers, by retaining active volunteers and by recognizing the contribution of volunteers to the quality of life of soldiers and families.

There are many volunteer opportunities available through the center :

• Volunteers are needed at the Thrift Shop Tuesdays and Thursdays between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. Individuals will gain retail experience while helping others. Free child care is provided for up to two children.

• Santa's Castle needs volunteers on Wednesdays from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. to help clean and refurbish toys. A volunteer is particularly needed to sew baby doll and Barbie clothes. Child care costs are provided.

• The Fort Benning school system is looking for a volunteer lifeguard and water safety instructor to assist in the Adaptive Aquatics Program for exceptional children March 31, April 14, 21, 28 and May 4, 12, 19 and 26 from 12:15 to 3 p.m.

• Sayers Memorial Library needs volunteers to assist with shelving books, data entry and story time for children. Also, volunteers with experience in activity program planning, dramatic reading and counseling are encouraged to participate in the Multiple Reading Program this summer. Child care costs will be provided.

Volunteers are needed in each housing area to assist the community mayor. Persons interested can contact a community life center.

• The Public Affairs Office needs an editorial assistant to assist the print section in publishing The Bayonet.

This product supports Army families through disseminating community news and command information to all Fort Benning families in The Bayonet newspaper, delivered free to all on-post housing units and by subscription to those living off post.

Interested persons must have typing ability, and knowledge of computer word processing systems is preferred but not required. Good communication skills and command of the English language are required. Education or experience in print journalism is preferred but not required. Also, the individual must be familiar with the Army and Fort Benning.

For more information, call 545-2201.

• The Volunteer Resource Center is located in Building 359, Family Unit Network Center, and it is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p .m. Persons interested in volunteering can visit or call Olga MacLean, installation volunteer coordinator, at 545-5602.

Female chaplain blazes trails at ITB

By Jacqueline Feagin
USAIC Chaplains' Office

March is Women's History Month, and one particular trailblazer is Chaplain (Capt.) Patricia Cote. She is the first women assigned to a One Station Unit Training battalion in the Infantry Training Brigade.

If you ask her, she will tell you she is not a crusader. She is just trying to do the work that God called her to do. She came into the Army after she served as an intern in a Veterans Administration Hospital. Her experiences and her lifestyle fit like a glove, with the Army, she said.

Being in an all-male infantry unit, Cote had some obstacles to overcome. With the help of her commanders, doubters are able to see that her job is genderless, according to Lt. Col. Warren Cate, battalion commander of 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment.

"Being a woman is not a factor in my duty to God and country," Cote said.

As a chaplain in a basic training unit, most of the people looking for counseling are trying to get out of the Army. Cote "shuts that down right away," said Capt. Michael O'Hara, commander of Company E.

According to O'Hara, Cote is a "soldier's soldier." She is available to listen, provide advice and give moral support 24 hours a day. She challenges trainees to complete the course. Thereby, strengthening their bodies and minds along the way.

Cote said ministry of presence is a tremendous thing.

"When the soldiers see you alongside them going through the same training, they see you as a part of the unit."

Because of her running ability she makes herself accessible to the trainees by participating in all battalion runs and road marches. She also said she feels the unit "is home."

Cote plans to attend Airborne school in May. She said she prays to God for wisdom each morning as she tries to make the most out of every opportunity.

She said she wants all that she can get out of the Army.

"When it stops being a pleasure and a challenge, it will be time to move on," she said.

Palm Sunday begins holiest time of year

By Anibal Cruz Baez
School of the Americas chaplain

Holy Week is the center of the Christian liturgical year. By solemn liturgy and devotional practices, Christians commemorate and make present in a mystical manner, the passion, death and resurrection of Jesus Christ in this week.

In the Roman Catholic Church and some Protestant denominations, Holy Week begins with the procession on Palm Sunday commemorating Christ's triumphal entry into Jerusalem.

Palm Sunday is also referred to as Passion Sunday because it reminds us of the suffering Jesus experienced before entering Jerusalem.

There Jesus was led by God to suffer and die. Right after Jesus finished sharing the parable of the pounds, he felt he was being led to move on toward Jerusalem.

There, the climax of his purpose was to take place. He was to suffer and die for all humankind. Jesus was led and complied with an iron determination to complete his purpose.

This purpose was to die on a cross as if he were a criminal to save our souls. He was driven to die for every human person.

Jesus was seen by many as a king. Therefore, let us note a few important issues and view his dramatic demonstration in detail. The whole scene centered around his riding into the city on a colt.

In ancient days the colt, or donkey, was a noble animal. It was used as a beast of service to carry the burdens of humankind.

More significantly, it was used by kings and their emissaries when they entered a city in peace. They rode a colt to symbolize their peaceful intentions (Judges 5:10 and 10:4).

This differed dramatically from a conquering king. When a king entered a city as a conqueror, he rode a stallion. Jesus dramatically demonstrated two things: He was unquestionably the promised king, the savior of creation.

Secondly, he did not come as the people expected. He came neither as a conquering king or as a worldly potentate in pomp and ceremony, nor as the leader of an army to kill, injure and maim.

reflections

He came as the savior of peace. Therefore, the people had to change their concept of the Messiah. He came to save humankind, not to destroy them. He came to remind men and women that God is the God of love and reconciliation.

Another important issue was the title Jesus used. "The Lord" laid claim upon humankind and their priorities. "The Lord" (Krystus or Kurios) is a strong expression. It is the same as saying "Yahweh" or Jehovah.

There is another issue that should not escape our attention. Jesus' instructions were followed carefully. The task given to the two disciples to go and secure the colt may seem small, but no task is small in the proclamation of Jesus as king.

Fetching the colt was extremely important if Christ was to be proclaimed as King before the people. Jesus claimed the right to use the colt because he was "The Saving Lord." Imagine the trust one colt owner exhibited to allow "the Lord" to borrow his animal.

One more issue to consider is that Jesus accepted the recognition of the disciples. The disciples knew what Jesus was doing.

They acknowledged his claim by the following acts: they obeyed his instructions explicitly; they used their own garments as a saddle and they sat Jesus upon the colt.

The point we need to keep in mind is that Jesus accepted their homage, thus validating his claim to be the Messiah.

As we continue adoring Christ as the Kurios of our lives, we must remember to always see Christ as the king of peace. Let us see that Jesus, riding the animal of burdens, came as the king who wished to bear our burdens.

As we live within the military community, we deal with leaving the military, promotions, marital and family issues, financial and job situations. Let us remember that as Christians, we must see Christ as the king of peace and as the savior of that which was lost: you and me.

Religious debate set

By Sanjay Lal
Unitarian-Universalist Student Union

The Columbus College Unitarian-Universalist Student Union is sponsoring a campus debate on the topic: "Did Jesus Rise From the Dead?"

The debate will be Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the college's Fine Arts Hall Auditorium.

Dr. Norman Geisler, dean of Southern Evangelical Seminary in Charlotte, N.C., and author of numerous books and articles that defend Christianity, will debate Farrell Till, an atheist and college professor from Canton, Ill.

Till edits the publication, The Skeptical Review, and he writes a column for The Secular Humanist Bulletin.

Admission is free, and the debate is open to the public.

crime watch

Military Police Activity

TAKE A BITE OUT OF CRIME

The following entries were taken from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from March 1 to 7. Such entries may be incomplete and do not determine the guilt or innocence of any person.

• A staff sergeant was charged with assault after he pushed his wife into a wall, then hit her several times in the chest, back and neck.

• A specialist was charged with obstructing justice; while serving on charge of quarters duty, he notified another soldier that the Military Police were en route to his quarters.

• A sergeant, specialist and two privates were charged by civil authorities with battery after they hit a juvenile in the head with a beer bottle. The soldiers then pushed the juvenile to the ground, breaking his right arm.

• A specialist was charged with failure to obey a lawful order and disrespect toward a noncommissioned officer after he refused to show his vehicle registration papers to his first sergeant. The specialist was further charged with having an expired state plate because his vehicle had expired tags.

• A private was charged by civil authorities for disorderly conduct after becoming uncooperative with police who were attempting to make an arrest.

• A family member was charged with aggravated assault after stabbing her husband (a specialist) in the forearm. The family member was further charged with damage to private property when she flattened her husband's tires.

• A specialist was charged with drunk and disorderly conduct, provoking speech and gestures and walking on a roadway after he was observed by MPs walking in the lane of traffic. After being directed to walk on the sidewalk, the specialist responded with profanity toward the Military Police. The specialist was ad-ministered a breathalyzer test with a result of .21.

• Two privates reported that four unknown males approached them, produced what appeared to be a 9mm pistol, chambered a round, and robbed them of their wallets.

• This week's booby prize goes to the specialist who was found passed out in his vehicle by civil authorities. Police observed the specialist's vehicle after he had stopped.

After approaching the vehicle, police observed the specialist slumped over the steering wheel with his foot on the brake and an empty beer bottle between his legs. It was further revealed that the specialist's driver's license was suspended.

The specialist was arrested and charged with driving under the influence of alcohol and driving while his license was suspended.

Other activities included 11 traffic accidents and eight cases of driving under the influence of alcohol. There were four shoplifting cases reported at exchange facilities, and seven cases of larceny of private property.

Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best — Give Crime Arrest." Report any activity that seems wrong to the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5223.

ask the judge

By Bill Brown
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Q: I recently purchased a new automobile. In the process of financing the car, I was asked if I would like to purchase credit life and credit disability insurance. Because I did not understand those terms, I decided not to purchase the insurance. What do the terms mean and did I make a mistake in not purchasing the insurance?

A: Credit life insurance is insurance on the life of the borrower of money or the purchaser of property in connection with a specific loan or other credit transaction.

This type of insurance policy pays the balance due on the debt in the event that you die before the debt is paid in full.

Credit disability insurance guarantees that the purchaser's payments are paid as they become due while the debtor is disabled. The terms of the policy determine what constitutes "disabled."

Because you where unfamiliar with the terms, it was a good idea not to get the insurance. Now that you are familiar with the terms, you need to determine whether these types of insurance are necessary for your particular situation.

Your debts must be paid when you die. The money to pay off your debts can come from several sources.

For instance, if you have credit life insurance in connection with a purchase or a loan, the money from the policy would be used to pay the balance owed at your death.

Another option would be to have your family or beneficiary continue to make the payments.

If you did not purchase this insurance and your family or other beneficiary is unable to make the payments, the creditor may repossess the property or file a claim against your estate for the money owed.

Another source of funds is the proceeds from an individual life insurance policy that is payable to your estate or family members at your death.

Your family members could use that money to pay off the remaining balance if they choose. If this is the case, then you probably do not need credit life insurance.

Although no one anticipates a disabling disease, it could happen.

If the disease is one that is covered under the credit disability insurance policy then the payments that the borrower was required to make will be paid as they become due by the insurance company.

If your spouse or another family member is able to provide substantial support when you cannot, you may not need this type of insurance.

Furthermore, this insurance is usually unnecessary for active duty service members because they continue to get paid when they are sick or hurt.

Credit life and credit disability insurance generally appeal to older individuals who do not have individual life insurance. Unfortunately they are not always offered the chance to purchase the insurance.

Whatever your individual circumstances, you cannot be required to purchase these types of insurance.

Also, your loan cannot be denied because you refuse to purchase the insurance.

Before you agree to purchase credit life or disability insurance, carefully consider whether you actually need it and whether your family will be able to continue to make payments if you do not.

For the most part, both types of insurance are greatly overpriced and not worth the money.

You can obtain the same type of protection at a much lower cost through private insurance.

These two forms of insurance are usually considered as big money makers for the lending institutions and they want to sell them to you to make a profit for themselves.

Therefore, purchase this insurance with full understanding of what you are getting.

Finally, if you do decide to purchase credit life or credit disability insurance, make sure you receive a certificate of insurance form the insurance company.

If you need further assistance in this matter, contact the Legal Assistance Office at 545-3281.

AAFES announces hazardous recall

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Army and Air Force Exchange Service officials have announced a hazardous recall of a brand of bicycle sold in exchange outlets worldwide from March 27 to Sept. 27, 1993.

The Murray Manufacturing Co. has issued a voluntary recall of hundreds of Murray 26-inch "Cruiser" bicycles. Murray reports show that damaged brakes on some men's and women's "Monterey" and "Westport" models may cause serious injury.

Customers should stop using the bikes immediately, officials said.

Models sold with "Suntour Coaster" brakes may have internal drive spring damage, officials said. To identify affected bikes, customers should look for a six-digit, "month-day-year" date code on the upright tube above the foot pedals.

The bikes have date codes 032793 to 092793 (March 27, 1993, to Sept. 27, 1993). Those sold after Sept. 27, 1993, are not affected, officials said.

The sell price of the bikes was from $90 to $120. Customers should return them to their local exchange for a full refund.

Diet, exercise are key to permanent weight reduction

By Brenda J. Forman
Martin Army Community Hospital

Are you trying to lose a few pounds? If the answer is yes, you join millions of other Americans who are trying to shed unwanted pounds.

Most people will tell you that losing weight is not the problem. Their concern is keeping the weight off. This is the real challenge.

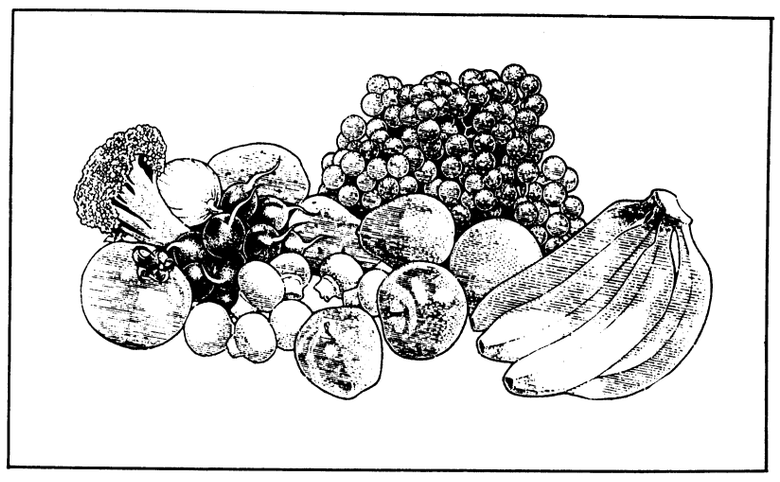
Many people find themselves the victims of yo-yo dieting; they lose 10 pounds only to regain 15.

If you are a victim of the yo-yo dieting syndrome, the following suggestions may be helpful.

• Permanent weight reduction requires permanent changes in eating habits. Fad diets are temporary in nature unless you plan to eat only limited quantities of food or drink a special shake at each meal for the rest of your life. Remember, whatever you did to lose weight, you'll need to do the same to keep it off.

• Exercise is a crucial component of any weight reduction or weight maintenance program. Exercise will alter metabolism or the rate at which the body burns calories.

Exercise should be aerobic in nature and should be done three to five times per week for at least 30 minutes. Vary your exercise program. Participate in activities that you enjoy.



Exercise should be as much a part of your daily routine as brushing your teeth.

• Decrease the total fat in your diet. Females who are trying to lose weight should decrease fat to approximately 40 grams per day.

Males should not exceed 50 grams per day. Read the label to determine the fat content of food and try to consume foods with less than five grams of fat per ounce or per serving.

• Consume less meat, eggs and cheese. Increase consumption of complex carbohydrates to include plain breads, cereal, fruit and vegetables.

• Make small changes in your diet that will make a difference in the amount of calories and fat consumed. For example, substitute mushrooms for cheese in your omelet. Use nonstick cooking spray to prepare the omelet instead of margarine. Substitute an English muffin with jam for a biscuit with margarine. Drink skim milk instead of whole milk.

• Drink plenty of water; this will flush your system. The rule of thumb is eight glasses per day. Many of you probably drink diet sodas instead of water. However, to achieve the flushing effect, you should drink water. Ask yourself this question: Would I clean my floor with diet soda?

• You must change your philosophy about food. Do you "eat to live" or do you "live to eat"?

If you have questions or need assistance with your weight loss or weight maintenance program, contact the dietitians at Martin Army Community Hospital at 544-1874.

Determine your nutritional health

The warning signs of poor nutritional health are often overlooked. Use this checklist to find out if you or someone you know is at nutritional risk.

Read the statements below. Circle the number in the yes column for those that apply to you or someone you know. For each yes answer, score the number in the box. Total your nutritional score.

| Yes | |
|---|---|
| • I have an illness or condition that made me change the kind or amount of food I eat. | 2 |
| • I eat fewer than two meals per day. | 3 |
| • I eat few fruits, vegetables or milk products. | 2 |
| • I have three or more drinks of beer, liquor or wine almost every day. | 2 |
| • I have tooth or mouth problems that make it hard for me to eat. | 2 |
| • I don't always have enough money to buy the food I need. | 4 |
| • I eat alone most of the time. | 1 |
| • I take three or more different prescribed or over-the-counter drugs a day. | 1 |
| • Without wanting to, I have lost or gained 10 pounds in the last six months. | 2 |
| • I am not always physically able to shop, cook or feed myself. | 2 |
| Your total: | |

Total your nutritional score. If it's —

0 to 2: Good! Recheck your nutritional score in six months.

3 to 5: You are at moderate nutritional risk. See what can be done to improve your eating habits and lifestyle. Your office on aging, senior nutrition program, senior citizens center or health department can help. Recheck your nutritional score in three months.

6 or more: You are at high nutritional risk. Bring this checklist the next time you see your doctor, dietitian or other qualified health or social service professional. Talk with them about any problems you may have. Ask for help to improve your nutritional health.

Remember that warning signs suggest risk, but do not represent diagnosis of any condition.

Quiz furnished by Martin Army Community Hospital

DETERMINE to eat right, stay fit, healthy

Martin Army Community Hospital

This nutrition checklist is based on the warning signs described below. Use the word "determine" to remind you of the warning signs.

Disease — Any disease illness or chronic condition that causes you to change the way you eat or makes it hard for you to eat puts your nutritional health at risk.

Four out of five adults have chronic diseases that are affected by diet. Confusion or memory loss that keeps getting worse is estimated to affect one out of five or more of older adults.

This can make it hard to remember what, when or if you have eaten. Feeling sad or depressed, which happens to about one in eight older adults, can cause big changes in appetite, digestion, energy level, weight and well-being.

Eating poorly — Eating too little and eating too much both lead to poor health. Eating the same foods day after day or not eating fruit, vegetables and milk products daily will also cause poor nutritional health.

One in five adults skip meals daily. Only 13 percent of adults eat the minimum amount of fruit and vegetables needed. One in four older adults drink too much alcohol. Many health problems become worse if you drink more than one or two alcoholic beverages per day.

Tooth loss or mouth pain — A healthy mouth, teeth and gums are needed to eat. Missing, loose or rotten teeth or dentures that don't fit well or cause mouth sores make it hard to eat.

Economic hardship — As many as 40 percent of older Americans have incomes of less than $6,000 per year. Having less — or choosing to spend less — than $25 to $30 per week for food makes it very hard to get the foods you need to stay healthy.

Reduced social contact — One-third of all older people live alone. Being with people daily has a positive effect on morale, well-being and eating.

Multiple medicines — Many older Americans must take medicines for health problems. Almost half of older Americans take multiple medicines daily. Growing old may change the way we respond to drugs.

The more medicines you take, the greater the chance for side effects such as increased or decreased appetite, change in taste, constipation, weakness, drowsiness, diarrhea, nausea and others. Vitamins or minerals when taken in large doses act like drugs and can cause harm. Alert your doctor to everything you take.

Involuntary weight loss or gain — Losing or gaining a lot of weight when you are not trying to do so is an important warning sign that must not be ignored. Being overweight or underweight also increases your chance of poor health.

Needs assistance in self care — Although most older people are able to eat, one of every five have trouble walking, shopping, buying and cooking food, especially as they get older.

Elder years above age 80 — Most older people lead full and productive lives. But as age increases, risk of frailty and health problems increase. Checking your nutritional health regularly makes good sense.

Follow guide to make food time fun time

National Center for Nutrition and Dietetics

How much food do you need every day to grow and run, play and have fun? Here's a guide to make food time a fun time while being nutritious too.

Milk group - cheese, ice cream, milk, yogurt.

• Three or more servings a day provide protein and calcium for strong bones, teeth and muscles.

• Serving size: One cup milk, yogurt; 1 1/2 ounces of cheese.

ABC to air 'These Friends of Mine'

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

It's worked for Roseanne Arnold, Jerry Seinfeld and others ... so it could work for Ellen DeGeneres, too.

Having gotten considerable television exposure lately from her fruit-beverage ads, she's the latest stand-up humorist to adapt her comedic sensibilities to a weekly series.

In the new ABC show "These Friends of Mine" — which has a "preview" premiere Tuesday, then settles into its regular Wednesday slot the following night — DeGeneres plays the manager of a bookstore and cafe with a clientele that often stimulates her offbeat views of the oh-so-'90s world around her. She frequently shares her opinions with those title friends of hers, who include her platonic roommate Adam (Arye Gross, of such movies as "For the Boys" and "Hexed") and his comrade Anita (Maggie Wheeler) ... as well as Holly (Holly Fulger, formerly a regular on "Anything but Love" and "thirtysomething"), whose latest romance fuels the first episode. The fellow she's dating is known to be a louse by Anita, whose revelations about him prompt the concerned Ellen to try to convince Holly to spare herself from near-certain heartbreak.

The executive producers of the show are spouses Neal Marlens and Carol Black, who also created "The Wonder Years" and previously teamed with

Ellen DeGeneres

DeGeneres (who gets an "executive consultant" credit as well) on the short-lived ABC program "Laurie Hill."

"What I think I'm best at is taking a situation and then making it more my own," says the dryly glib DeGeneres, who also was a supporting player on the Fox series "Open House" several years ago. "That's the freedom of having this kind of job where the show is created for me, so I can just really go with it and take chances, and hopefully end up with stuff that isn't typically on TV already. I think the writing is great, and I had nothing to do with the writing of the pilot. That's one of the reasons I wanted to work with Neal and Carol and David (Rosenthal, a co-executive producer) in the first place, because they knew me so well; we just clicked immediately. I think it'd be scary if I had people handing me scripts that had me going, 'This is not me. This is Nell Carter.' Not that there's anything wrong with Nell, but ... ."

What: 'These Friends of Mine'
When: Tuesday on ABC

Since it showcases a comedian and deals with a group of friends in their 30s, comparisons between "These Friends of Mine" and the NBC hit "Seinfeld" are inevitable, and DeGeneres is braced for them. "I've always been compared to Jerry," she reflects. "It's because he's been around longer than I have. If I had been around first, people would be saying that he's a male version of me. I'm flattered by the comparison because (his is) a successful show, but it's not like we said, 'Let's do a 'Seinfeld'.' I think I'm compared to him because there's a lot of observational humor (in the respective acts)."

608th soldiers return from Operation Restore Hope

By Caejar A. Cox
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The last group of Fort Benning soldiers returned from Somalia the night of March 18, amid tears of joy of family and friends. Forty-two soldiers from the 36th Engineer Group's 608th Ordnance Company and one from the 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, returned to a welcome from post officials, family and friends.

Watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday to see highlights of the return of the soldiers, some of whom participated in two tours in Somalia.

Children at Fort Benning's Dexter School recently displayed their ingenuity. "Fort Benning Today" will highlight Invent America, which was March 10 at Dexter. Post children will have a chance to show what they invented.

USAIC-TV Schedule
Fort Benning Today: 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 1:30 to 2 p.m.
Specials: 2 to 4:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 4:30 p.m. to 8:30 a.m.

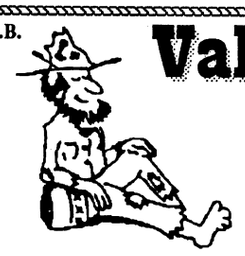
The U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel announces post events, post movie listings, and it offers free classified advertisements on "Fort Benning Update," a community information service.



If you live on post and subscribe to Fort Benning Cable, you can watch USAIC-TV on Channel 3, 24 hours a day. Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:26, 7:56, 8:26 and 8:56 on WLTZ-TV 38.

Fox to feature 'Five Guys Named Moe'

Play opens in Atlanta April 12

Theatre League of Atlanta

The Cameron Mackintosh production of the hit Broadway musical "Five Guys Named Moe," the song and dance celebration featuring the music of 1940s jazz musician Louis Jordan, premieres at the Fox Theatre in Atlanta for a limited one-week engagement April 12 through 17.

Ticket buyers for "Five Guys Named Moe" will be given the opportunity to purchase priority tickets, in advance of public sale, to the October engagement of "The Phantom of the Opera."

Winner of London's prestigious Olivier Awards), Clarke Peters' "Five Guys Named Moe" is directed and choreographed by Charles Augins with vocal arrangements by Chapman Roberts.

"Five Guys Named Moe" opened on Broadway at the Eugene O'Neill Theatre in April 1992, winning a 1992 Tony Award nomination for Best Musical.

Time Magazine proclaims the show "an absolutely joyful experience. A rollicking time."

The cast of six male singers and dancers romp through such well-known Jordan songs as "Let the Good Times Roll," "Caldonia," "Messy Bess" and "Is You Is Or Is You Ain't Ma' Baby."

Producer Cameron Mackintosh ("Les Miserables," "The Phantom of the Opera" and "Miss Saigon") was instrumental in transferring the original production of "Five Guys Named Moe" from London's Theatre Royal Strafford to the West End's Lyric Theatre, where it continues to play to packed houses since its opening in December 1990.

In addition to this national tour, future productions will open in Boston and in Melbourne, Australia.

Jordan, the alto saxophonist who died in 1975 at the age of 66, was the pivotal figure in the development of rhythm and blues.

The lean, emphatic beat heard in his songs was known for a time as 'lump blues" and has been interpreted over the years by Bill Haley and the Comets, Chuck Berry, Fats Domino, and more recently by new-waver Joe Jackson, blues guitarists Albert Collins and B.B. King.

Jordan influenced many other jazz and rhythm and blues legends, most notably Ray Charles and Ella Fitzgerald.

"Five Guys Named Moe" is presented by the American Express Atlanta Broadway Series.

Tickets are on sale at Ticketmaster outlets including Turtles, Sound Warehouse, Coconuts, Tower Records, Publix and the Fox Theatre Box office.

To charge tickets, call (404) 817-8700 or (404) 249-6400.

Showtimes are: Tuesday through Friday at 8 p.m.; Saturday at 2 and 8 p.m.; and Sunday at 2 and 7:30 p.m.

Ticket prices are: Friday and Saturday evenings - $30.50, $28.50, $20.50 and $11; all other performances - $28.50, $25.50, $17.50 and $10.

horoscope

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A friend's refusal to go along with one of your ideas could both anger and disappoint you. It will be difficult now to reach agreements with others about financial interests. However, your thinking is inspired where career interests are concerned.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Travel is a plus. Joy comes through philosophical concerns. However, you may feel blocked in business. A partner may be hard to get along with. Strive to cooperate. A turning point is reached in a relationship this weekend.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Interruptions may interfere with time you had hoped to spend on personal interests. It's a poor week to begin a do-it-yourself project. Guard against fatigue. You are extremely motivated at work and will put in long hours.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You are in sync with a partner this week but relations with either a friend or a child may be strained. You are easily upset now and not the best of social companions. Be careful that you don't come on too strong in romance.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) A partner is reluctant to go along with a plan of yours. Business ideas are on target, but you may have your hands full with domestic concerns. Try not to quarrel. You may be making sweeping changes at home this weekend. No doubt you will get rid of some clutter.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) You could run into problems this week when tackling a work project. It would be better now to accent pleasure interests. Stay away from argumentative types if possible. Perseverance pays off this weekend.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Though you are shrewd this week, remember that the people you are dealing with are also adroit in financial dealings. Now ideas come now about home decorating projects. You and a close tie could be at odds about a money concern now.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) A relative seems set in his or her ways and is unamenable to any sort of compromise at present. If you are too self-insistent now, a problem could arise with a partner. You will be going after what you want out of life with renewed vigor.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Though you will have good business ideas now, it's a poor time to execute them. Details may prove to be your ultimate undoing. Some will experience delays in travel this week. An attic or a garage needs your attention this weekend.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) A financial matter may have you concerned. Though pleasure interests are foremost on your mind this week, differences could arise easily with a moody friend. Try to avoid unnecessary confrontations at work.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) Be careful that you don't dampen another's enthusiasm this week. Juggling the demands of a career and family may be difficult now. Try to remain cool and collected. You will be dealing with power brokers in business this week.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20) An inclination to worry can make you downcast now. A visit with friends, though, will lift your spirits. You have passionate beliefs but do try to avoid arguing about them. Useful business information comes from an unexpected quarter.

Children can search for gold in Jekyll's egg hunt

The Jekyll Island Authority

JEKYLL ISLAND,Ga. — Children up to age 12 can search for the gold April 2 at the 17th annual Great Golden Easter Egg Hunt.

A kaleidoscope of more than 10,000 colored eggs, donated by the Georgia Egg Commission, will be scattered in the Historic District. A "Great Golden Egg" and several prize eggs will be hidden in each of three age divisions.

Families are invited to participate in the activities from 11:30 a.m. to 3 p.m., which include a mini-golf tournament for $2 per person, Easter games and a special appearance by the Easter Bunny.

There will also be an Easter basket contest with prizes, face painting, music by the Golden Isles Community Band, a special children's concert and hay rides for $2 per person. Refreshments will be available.

For more information, call (800) 841-6586 or (912) 635-3636.

ACOE team

to begin evaluation Monday

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

How well does Fort Benning serve the needs of its soldiers and civilians?

The Army Communities of Excellence team will attempt to answer that question during an intensive, three-day evaluation that begins Monday.

According to Sarah McLaney, post ACOE coordinator, the visit is the final phase of the ACOE Best Army Installation in the World Competition.

"We really want to give a special welcome to the team," McLaney said. "We are especially excited that Georgia Gov. Zell Miller will be on post to welcome the team. We are happy the team is coming and are looking forward to showing them all the great things that Fort Benning has accomplished."

Fort Benning is one of 13 Army installations worldwide that will vie for the Army's Commander-in-Chief Award, an honor that includes a cash award of $1.5 million. However, if the post does not win the CINC award, it will still be eligible to compete against Fort Sill, Okla., and Fort Campbell, Ky., for the Best Large Installation Award worth $1 million.

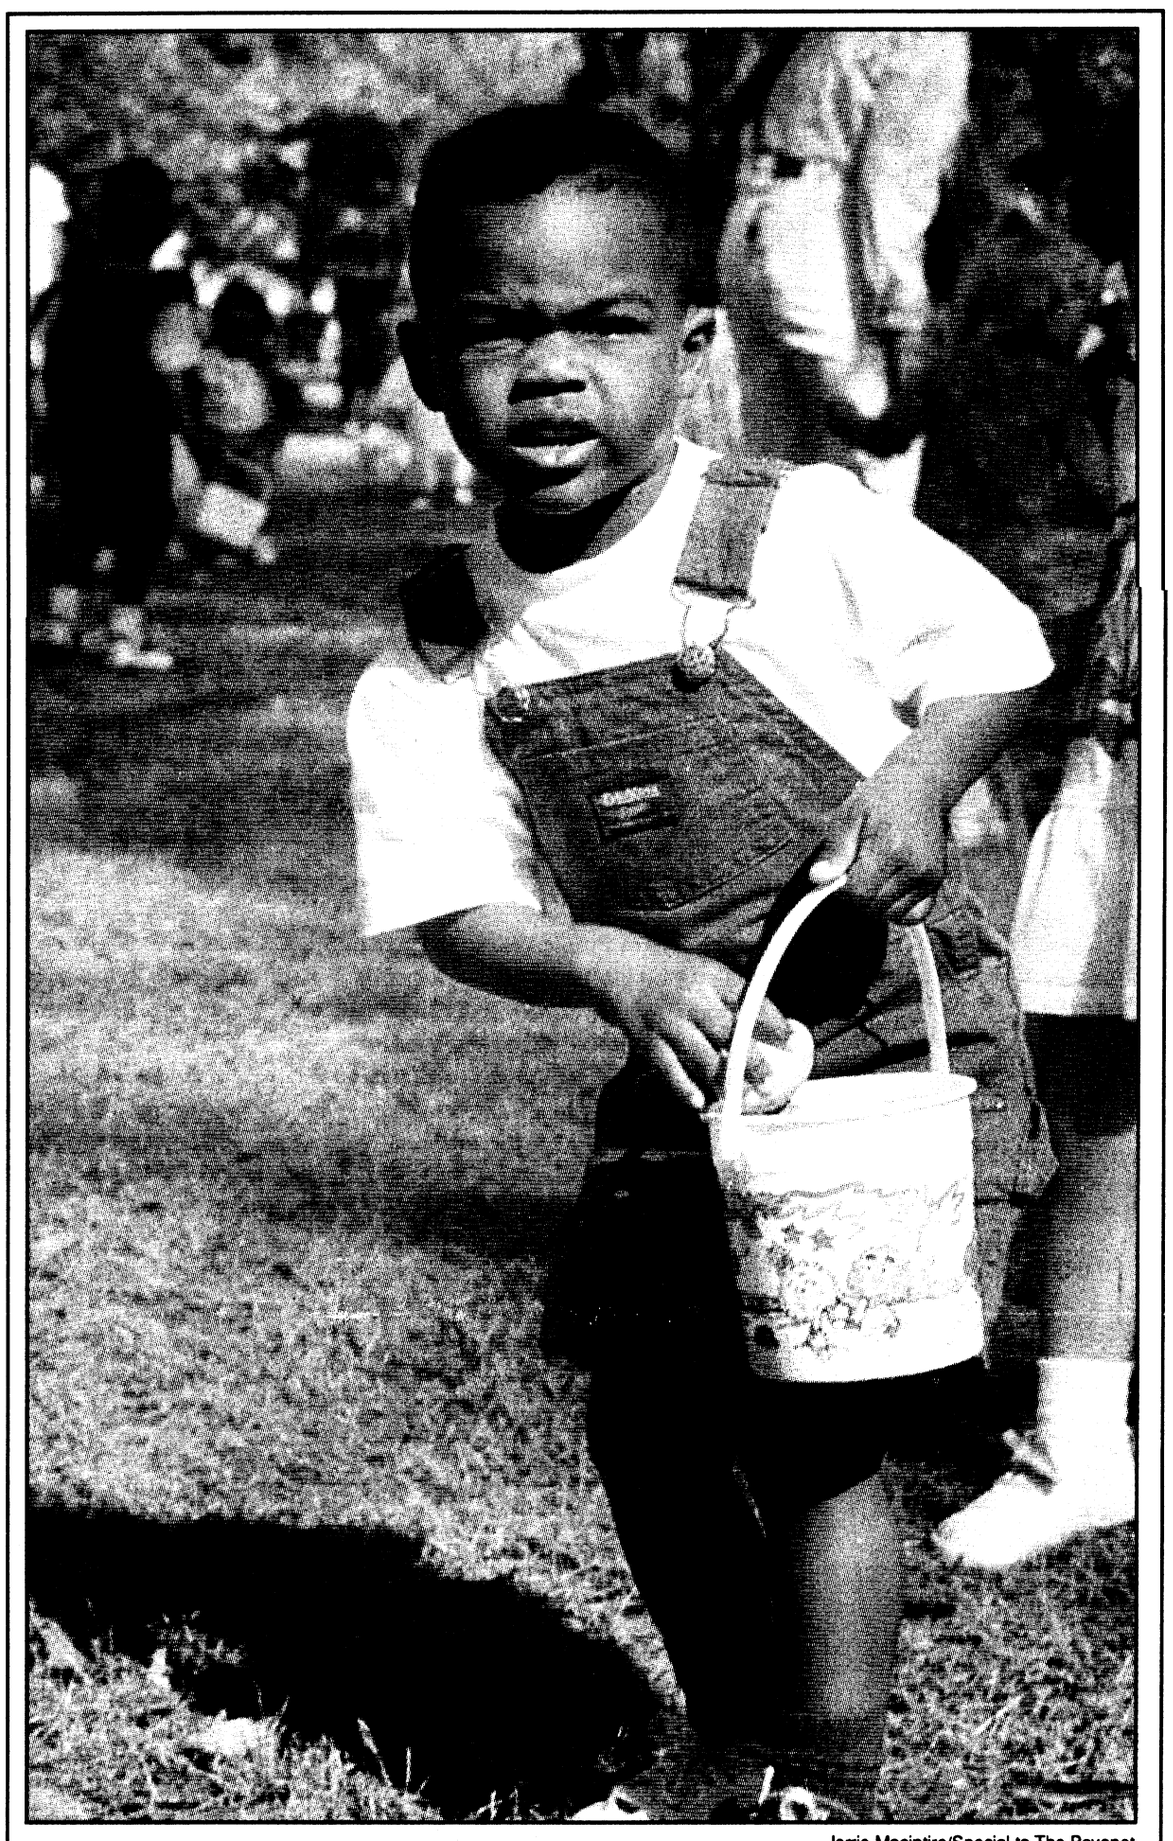
The runner-up in that category will receive $250,000.

"Any way you look at it, we are winners already, even if we don't take any more honors," said David Flo, director of Resource Management. "We are one of the top three large Army installations, and that's an accomplishment in itself." Large installations are defined as those having populations of 30,000 or more.

Fort Benning became eligible for the final phase of the competition after taking best large installation in Training and Doctrine Command. After winning at the TRADOC level, the post submitted a nomination packet to the Department of the Army and was chosen as one of 13 Army posts worldwide to continue to the last phase.

"The competition began with 150 nominations worldwide. This was narrowed down to 43, of which 13 were selected by the Department of the Army for the final phase. "It's a huge accomplishment just to be one of the final 13," McLaney said.

The winner will be chosen based on the results of visits to each of the posts by the ACOE team. The team visiting Fort Benning will consist of 11 members and will be led by Lt. Col. Stephen G. Trent, chief of the ACOE Office. The team members are subject matter experts in the 15 areas that will be evaluated, McLaney said.



Areas to be evaluated will include strategic planning for services and facilities, public affairs, engineering services and facilities, information management and facilities, housing services and facilities, military personnel services and facilities, civilian personnel and equal employment services and facilities, morale, welfare and recreation, family support services and facilities and logistics services and facilities.

Also evaluated will be resource management and financial services and facilities, chaplain services and facilities, medical and dental services and facilities, legal assistance services and facilities, Army and Air Force Exchange Service and facilities and the Army Career and Alumni Program, which is new this year to the list of areas being evaluated.

"Services is the key word when it comes to ACOE," Flo said. "ACOE is not about who has the prettiest flower beds. The real criterion is what kind of services are post personnel receiving. They should get service with a smile and have their needs met in an efficient and timely manner. That's what the ACOE team will be looking at."

Both Flo and McLaney said they felt confident about Fort Benning's

Nunn says school plays key role in U.S. relations with Latin America

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The School of the Americas plays a key role in the United States' relations with Latin America, U.S. Sen. Sam Nunn told media members Monday.

Nunn, who was at Fort Benning to visit with rangers who were awarded Silver and Bronze Star medals earlier in the morning, was briefed on the school's missions.

Afterward, standing in the John B. Amos Library of the school with U.S. Rep. Sanford Bishop, Mac Collins and Secretary of the Army Togo D. West, Nunn told reporters why the school is so important.

"Whenever we ask the commanders' in chief, Atlantic Command, Pacific Command, Southern Command, what their top priorities are, their first or second priorities are funds for training international students. They tell us that's a great way for making a small investment go a long way."

Nunn said he does not agree with the critics who want to close the school, saying he believed very strongly that Latin America was a much better place now since students from those countries had been exposed to democracy and the values of human rights, "especially since the school moved to Fort Benning." Nunn went on to say, "You don't close Cambridge because a dictator such as Oliver Cromwell went there. You don't close Princeton because of Aaron Burr. And you don't close the University of Heidelberg because of Joseph Goebbels.

"Therefore you don't close the School of the Americas because a small minority of its students have been accused of wrongdoing."

Nunn went on record to say that the relations between Fort Benning and the surrounding civilian communities were the best he'd ever seen.

Speaking to Faith School's History Club members, who were filming a video for a national history competition, Nunn extolled the long relationship between the post and the community and noted that it's the best it's ever been.

Secretary of the Army Togo D. West was also introduced to the gathering. He said this was his third trip to Fort Benning in four months and that he enjoyed his visits.

Rangers receive decorations

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

Members of 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, received awards in a ceremony Monday for their actions during combat operations Oct. 3 and 4 in Mogadishu, Somalia.

Silver Stars, awarded for gallantry in action, were pinned on five rangers and 30 others received Bronze Star medals with valor devices.

Five rangers killed in action in Somalia were also posthumously awarded Bronze Stars for valor, with family members accepting on their behalf.

Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan, Army chief of staff, pinned medals onto the recipients during the ceremony. Other distinguished guests included Secretary of the Army Togo West, Gen. Wayne A. Downing, commander of U.S. Special Operations Command, Lt. Gen. James T. Scott, commander of U. S. Army Special Operations Command, Sgt. Maj. of the Army Richard A. Kidd and U.S. Sen. Sam Nunn.

"No compromises, no excuses ... you are the essence of the U. S. Army," said Sullivan, addressing the rangers. "You are what makes the U.S. Army great. America is stronger because of your service, because of your valor and because of your courage."

Elements of 3rd Ranger Bn. were deployed to Somalia in August in support of the U. N. peacekeeping mission.

The Ranger Task Force conducted seven combat operations during the deployment. The final mission, on Oct resulted in the death of 6 rangers and

Signs all point to 'major love affair'

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

commentary

Riding with William O'Riley is sorta like rollin' the dice of life.

First, I'm not even sure he's supposed to be driving. He's like a fugitive from his home state and doesn't even own a valid driver's license.

But he's got this hot truck and he's always available, so, hey, why not. What harm can befall a guy just driving a couple of exits on I-185?

But last night was different.

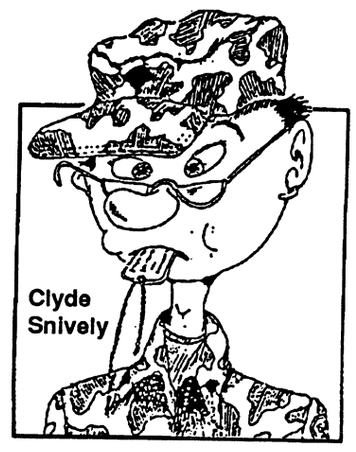
We were tooling down the interstate and suddenly Billy nearly goes off the road with a, "Wow, did you see that!"

"Uh, what?" I say, pulling myself back up on the seat.

"The sign," he says.

I figured he's spotted one of those Coors signs sporting some scantily clad babe.

When suddenly he lets out with, "Wow, there's another."



Naturally I nearly break my neck trying to see what he's talking about, forgetting billboards usually have different messages on the obverse side.

So I have to ask. "Whatcha seein' Billy?"

"Signs that say, 'Atta boy Fort Benning, way to go,' or somethin' like that," he says.

"What's goin' on?" I wonder. Then I see for myself. It's like the city of Columbus is on the sideline, cheering us on in the Super Bowl as we compete for best post in the Army.

"I can't believe it," I say. "It's like there's this major love affair between Fort Benning and Columbus. These people really want us to win this thing. And there's nothing in it for them, except maybe the satisfaction of seeing us win."

"Yeah," Billy says, "it's pretty deep."

"But you know, that's to be expected of these people. Remember Operation Holiday? All those tickets to the Hawks games, the parties and stuff," I said. "Those people really care about us."

"Yeah, and don't forget Military Appreciation Week. What a ball that was last year. And I hear it's gonna be bigger and better this year," Billy said.

"I ain't been in the Army all that long, or been to that many Army posts, but I dare say there ain't that many that take care of soldiers the way they do around here," I said.

"Gotta agree with you," Billy said. "I remember basic training up north. You go into town with your haircut and uniform and people look at you like you're an alien. Here, they treat you pretty much like normal folk."

"Sometimes I wonder why that is," I said, reflecting on some of the things Billy and me was known to do.

STATE OF GEORGIA
OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR
ATLANTA 30334-0900

March 7, 1994

Zell Miller
GOVERNOR

Major General Jerry A. White
Commander
United States Army Infantry Center
Fort Benning, Georgia 31905-5000

Dear General White:

On behalf of the citizens of our great state, I congratulate you and your staff, and extend my best wishes as you compete for the Army's top Community of Excellence honors.

Fort Benning, the Home of the Infantry, is known worldwide for its excellent ability to train soliders, but your committed care for their family members, and your active role in our communities is most commendable. The relationship you share in being a part of a unique tri-community--Fort Benning, Georgia; Columbus, Georgia; and Phenix City, Alabama, closely woven together as partners, is impressive. You should be proud of your achievements and the active partnership you share in building the future together. When it comes to being a "good neighbor," Fort Benning is the best!

Again, best wishes in your pursuit to achieve excellence to improve the lives of all of the people associated with your great post, and in your endeavor to receive the top award for installation excellence. As far as I am concerned, Fort Benning is already the best!

With kindest regards, I remain

Sincerely,

Zell Miller

TORNADO SEASON

Post gets clipped by storm

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning sustained some damage, mostly in the area of the Post Exchange at the Main Mall, in a storm that occurred the night of March 24 and the morning of March 25.

No injuries were reported, and the post seems to have escaped the worst of a storm system that caused death and destruction in areas around the South.

By Monday morning, storms and tornadoes had been responsible for deaths, injuries and property damage in Alabama, Georgia and North and South Carolina.

At least 24 people were killed and hundreds injured as tornadoes touched down in as many as 31 locations. National Weather Service reports indicate the worst of the storms occurred between 11:35 a.m. and 8:10 p.m. Sunday.

The storm that caused damage to Fort Benning may or may not have been a tornado and is still under investigation, said Air Force Capt. Jeffrey L. Peters, commander of Detachment 10, 1st Weather Group.

"It's difficult to make a final determination without an eyewitness," Peters said. "We hope that, in the future, if someone saw a tornado forming, actually saw a funnel cloud, they'll get in touch with us when it's safe to do so."

To report any weather information, Peters said, call him at 545-1614.

The storm was responsible for blowing down two large trees and damaging several others near Riverside, the home of the commanding general. It also caused extensive minor to moderate damage around the PX.

Damaged items included:

- Fence damaged at Shoppette area
- Army and Air Force Exchange Service van knocked over on its side
- Damage to landscaping
- Damage to recycling center, where recyclable materials are brought for pick-up
- CB&T electronic teller sign damaged
- Garden Center fence torn down, ceiling and roof ripped off, damage to outside wall
- Window blown out of AAFES van
- 40-foot storage trailer knocked over
- Damage to windows of personal vehicles belonging to 10 AAFES employees.

Charles Orr, chief of Buildings and Grounds Division, Directorate of Public Works, said DPW workers assisted in making repairs to the roof at the PX, but that AAFES would be handling the rest of those repairs.

"We did have a lot of trees and branches down on post," Orr said. "We expect the cleanup to be complete by the end of the week."

Mary Babbitt, general manager of the PX, said there is as yet no estimate of the cost of the damage.

"Repairs are ongoing," she said. "We never did close the store; we're still open. Most of the areas were secured almost immediately."

The Directorate of Public Works was very responsive to the situation, Babbitt said.

"They came out right away and assisted with roofing and shoring up holes," she said. "They stayed well past regular work hours to help us manage the damage. We're very happy with their response."

Survive tornado season

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Most tornadoes occur in February, March and April, and they start with strong southwest winds and a line of thunderstorms.

According to Air Force Capt. Jeffrey L. Peters, commander of Detachment 10, 1st Weather Group, Doppler radar can provide a clue as to whether such thunderstorms are likely to spawn tornadoes.

"If the radar picks up rotation in the storms, the meteorologist has to determine if the storm is strong enough to form a tornado," Peters said.

Det. 10 monitors conditions for the Fort Benning area, Peters said, and doesn't necessarily issue the same warnings the National Weather Service does.

"We make our own determination based on the data we have available," Peters said. "We have a forecaster on duty 24 hours a day Monday through Friday, and an observer on duty at all times, so we can make a determination whenever serious weather is threatening."

Peters said the weather facility is equipped with state-of-the-art equipment, the result of a combined effort of the National Weather Service, the Department of Defense and the Federal Aviation Administration.

In case of a tornado watch, which means conditions are favorable for the formation of tornadoes, people in the affected area should maintain a heightened awareness, Peters said.

"Keep an eye on your TV or listen to the radio for weather updates," he said, "and be aware of changing conditions outside."

A tornado warning is issued if a tornado has actually been sighted or if radar indicates one is forming, Peters said.

The following steps should be taken when a tornado warning is issued, Peters said:

- Go to the basement of your home, and situate yourself near a wall in the southwest corner.

"Storms tend to come from the southwest in this area, so if you're in the southwest corner, debris will tend to blow away from you," Peters said.

- If you don't have a basement, go to the most structurally sound room on the ground floor of your home, usually a closet or small bathroom.

"Stay away from windows," Peters said. "Many people believe they have to close the windows, but if a warning is issued, don't bother with them — don't go near them."

- If you're outdoors, get out of your car and look for a ditch or depression in the ground. If you can't find a ditch, flatten yourself on the ground to reduce wind resistance.
- If you are in a school or office building, follow posted procedures.
- Rehearse your family's response in case of severe weather.

"You should have a plan set, and everyone should know how to follow it," Peters said. "This will help you avoid panic if a tornado warning is issued. The chances of being hit by a tornado are very small — most people never see one. But it's a good idea to be prepared, just in case."

RANGERS:

the wounding of 60 more. Estimated Somali casualties during the same battle number close to 300 killed in action and 600 wounded.

According to a ranger spokesman, this operation resulted in the most intense battle since the Vietnam War and the fiercest urban warfare since World War II.

A primary mission of the Ranger Task Force, which also involved members of other special operations units, was to capture Somali clan leader Mohammed Farah Aidid and other high ranking individuals within his command.

The day of the now well-known seventh mission, rangers were inserted by helicopter and successfully raided a building deep within enemy territory, capturing 21 of Aidid's cohorts.

American casualties began to mount during the exfiltration of rangers and prisoners when within a short period of time, two helicopters were shot down and ranger convoys came under heavy fire.

Silver Star recipient 1st Lt. Thomas DiTomasso was a member of the initial raid team, and later he led his men to rescue the crew of one of the downed aircrafts.

"The mission was done and we were extracting when my forward observer saw the bird go down."

Task force members set up a perimeter around the crash and held off armed Somalis for more than 17 hours until American, Malaysian and Pakistani reinforcements could break through the ground resistance.

"It's an honor," said DiTomasso about being awarded the Silver Star. "But there is still a lot of pain ... we lost men, but I know every man out there did everything they could.

Men died evacuating others who were wounded."

A total of 16 task force members died during the fighting on Oct. 3 and 4. The rangers returned home from Somalia in late October.

April is Child Abuse Prevention Month

Army Community Service

April is National Child Abuse Prevention Month, and the Family Advocacy Program is planning several activities during the month..

Rebecca Welch, Family Advocacy Program, manager, Family Advocacy Program, Army Community Service, said child abuse is not a isolated problem because it affects each and every one of us, as citizens, neighbors and parents; and it is only through each of us, as a part of the community, that child abuse can be prevented.

Prevention of child abuse must begin at home, she said, and a "no hitting agreement" is a good place to start because it forces parents to look for alternative means of "discipline." There are various organizations that families can turn to for assistance when experiencing violence in their homes.

Welch said that blue ribbons will be distributed on post to different organizations for adults to wear.

Planned activities during the month are as follows:

- Today — Blue Ribbon Day. Blue ribbons will be disributed on post, and adults are asked to wear a blue ribbon throughout the month of April to symbolize the fight against child abuse and neglect.
- Today through April 30 — Parent Survival Skills Display. The Family Advocacy Program will have a display set up at Army Community Service, Building 2643, with information for parents to learn more about available resources.

The display will contain free brochures and literatures on effective parenting skills, services for young or first-time parents, safety education for children and other information.

- April 15 — The Exceptional Family Member and Family Advocacy Program managers will set up a display at the Post Exchange Mall for community awareness on child abuse. Free literature and promotional items will be available to the public.

AUSA to host job fair May 19 at NCO club

Army Career and Alumni Program

A job fair will be May 19 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Main NCO Club, Building 2784.

The job fair is being conducted in conjunction with Armed Forces Day, May 21, and the job fair will be hosted by the Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army.

A target audience of soldiers, retirees, Department of the Army civilians and their family members in excess of 1,000 are expected to attend this event.

More than 200 local and world-wide companies have been invited to participate in this event.

Interested persons should bring approximately 20 copies of their resume for possible on-the-spot interviews. Duty uniform or other proper attire is recommended.

Interested persons needing assistance in resume preparation can make an appointment with the Army Career and Alumni Program, Building 2617, or the Army Community Service Family Member Employment Assistance Program, Building 2643, located in Soldiers' Plaza.

The Family Member Employment Assistance Program will host resume writing classes April 8 in Classroom 51, and April 15 in Classroom 53, Infantry Hall. Both classes will run from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. The classes are open to everyone.

Seminars lend families helping hand

By Jerrie MacIntire
Special to The Bayonet ©

In a seminar this week designed for military spouses, experienced Army wives shared experience and knowledge with peers to help sharpen the skills needed to establish effective family support groups.

The seminar is designed for spouses of those enrolled in the Infantry Officers Advanced Course, said Mary Parker, president of the leadership seminar program. Graduates of IOAC will be expected to establish and promote family support groups as part of their job as a commander. This series of conferences is designed to present important practical skills and knowledge useful in establishing strong family support groups, should spouses choose to handle this function for their military member.

"I came through as a participant when my husband was an IOAC student, " said Michelle Brito, who now serves as a program facilitator.

Brito, who has served as a facilitator for three years, said the seminar gave her valuable skills to prepare her to work with a family support group when her husband assumed command.

Effective family support groups are an important part of command, Parker said. These groups funnel information to family members as well as provide a support system for one another. Family support groups are especially relevant in times of deployment or combat, Parker said, when families wonder about the latest news from the unit and when spouses most need encouragement from one another.

Approximately 30 spouses participated in the seminar held this week, which covered a wide range of subjects. For example, Tuesday's subject dealt with effective communication and how it relates to members of a family support group.

One important component of effective communication is understanding how background and childhood values affect individuals as adults.

In order to close generational gaps and promote better understanding among diverse individuals, leaders should explore circumstances and life experiences of others in a nonjudgemental manner rather than voice opinions based on their own deep-rooted values, according to facilitator Kathy Obermeyer.

"We can come to common ground" by accepting we come from different backgrounds, said Obermeyer.

Her group discussed how geography, political climates, family values and the age of individuals affect an individual's viewpoint.

Effective leaders must relate to varying viewpoints and accept others who think differently in order to promote successful family support groups, she added.

Another hallmark of an effective leader is the ability to read body language, she said. "Sometimes it's not what we say, it's how we say it," she said.

Other topics covered this week included universally useful information on group dynamics, leadership styles, conflict management, trauma under adverse circumstances and a overview of modern values.

Parker believes these seminars help improve Army readiness since "The soldier does his job if he knows his family has the skills and support to cope with his absence," she said.

The military supports this training service run by volunteers; the spouses of both generals on post participate, and the Army provides several thick booklets in a binder for each of those enrolled in the seminar. "We draw on various resources to put the booklets together, and we are constantly updating it," she said.

Last year, military spouses worked more than 2,000 volunteer hours presenting this seminar five times a year.

The next seminar, scheduled May 16 to 20, is open to spouses of IOAC students as well as other interested officers wives or husbands. For more information, call 545-1240.

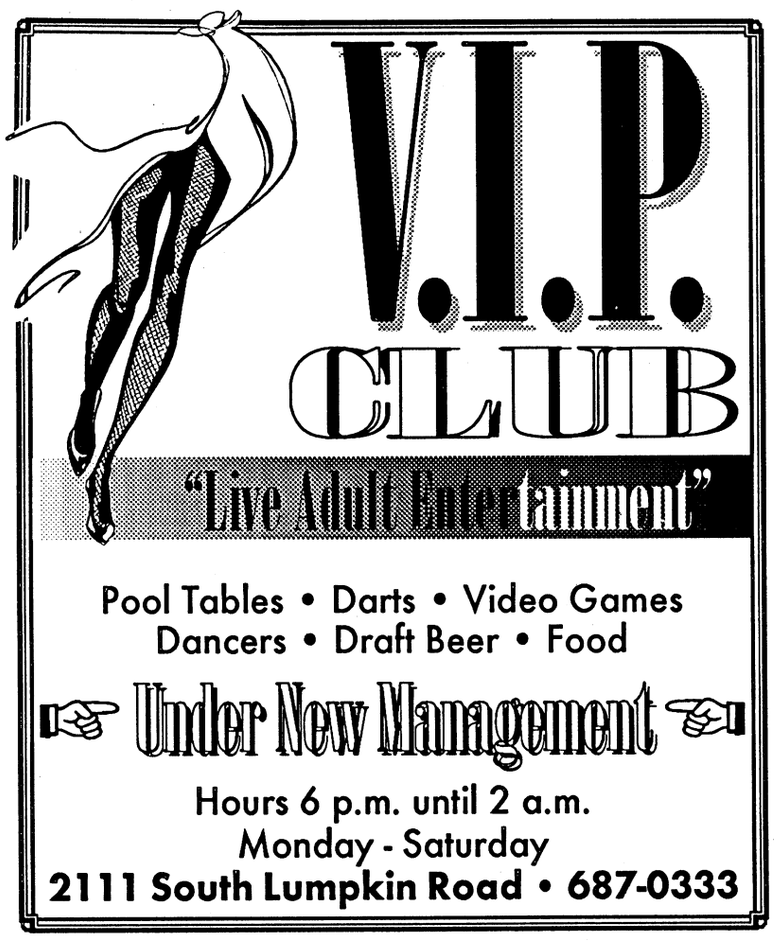
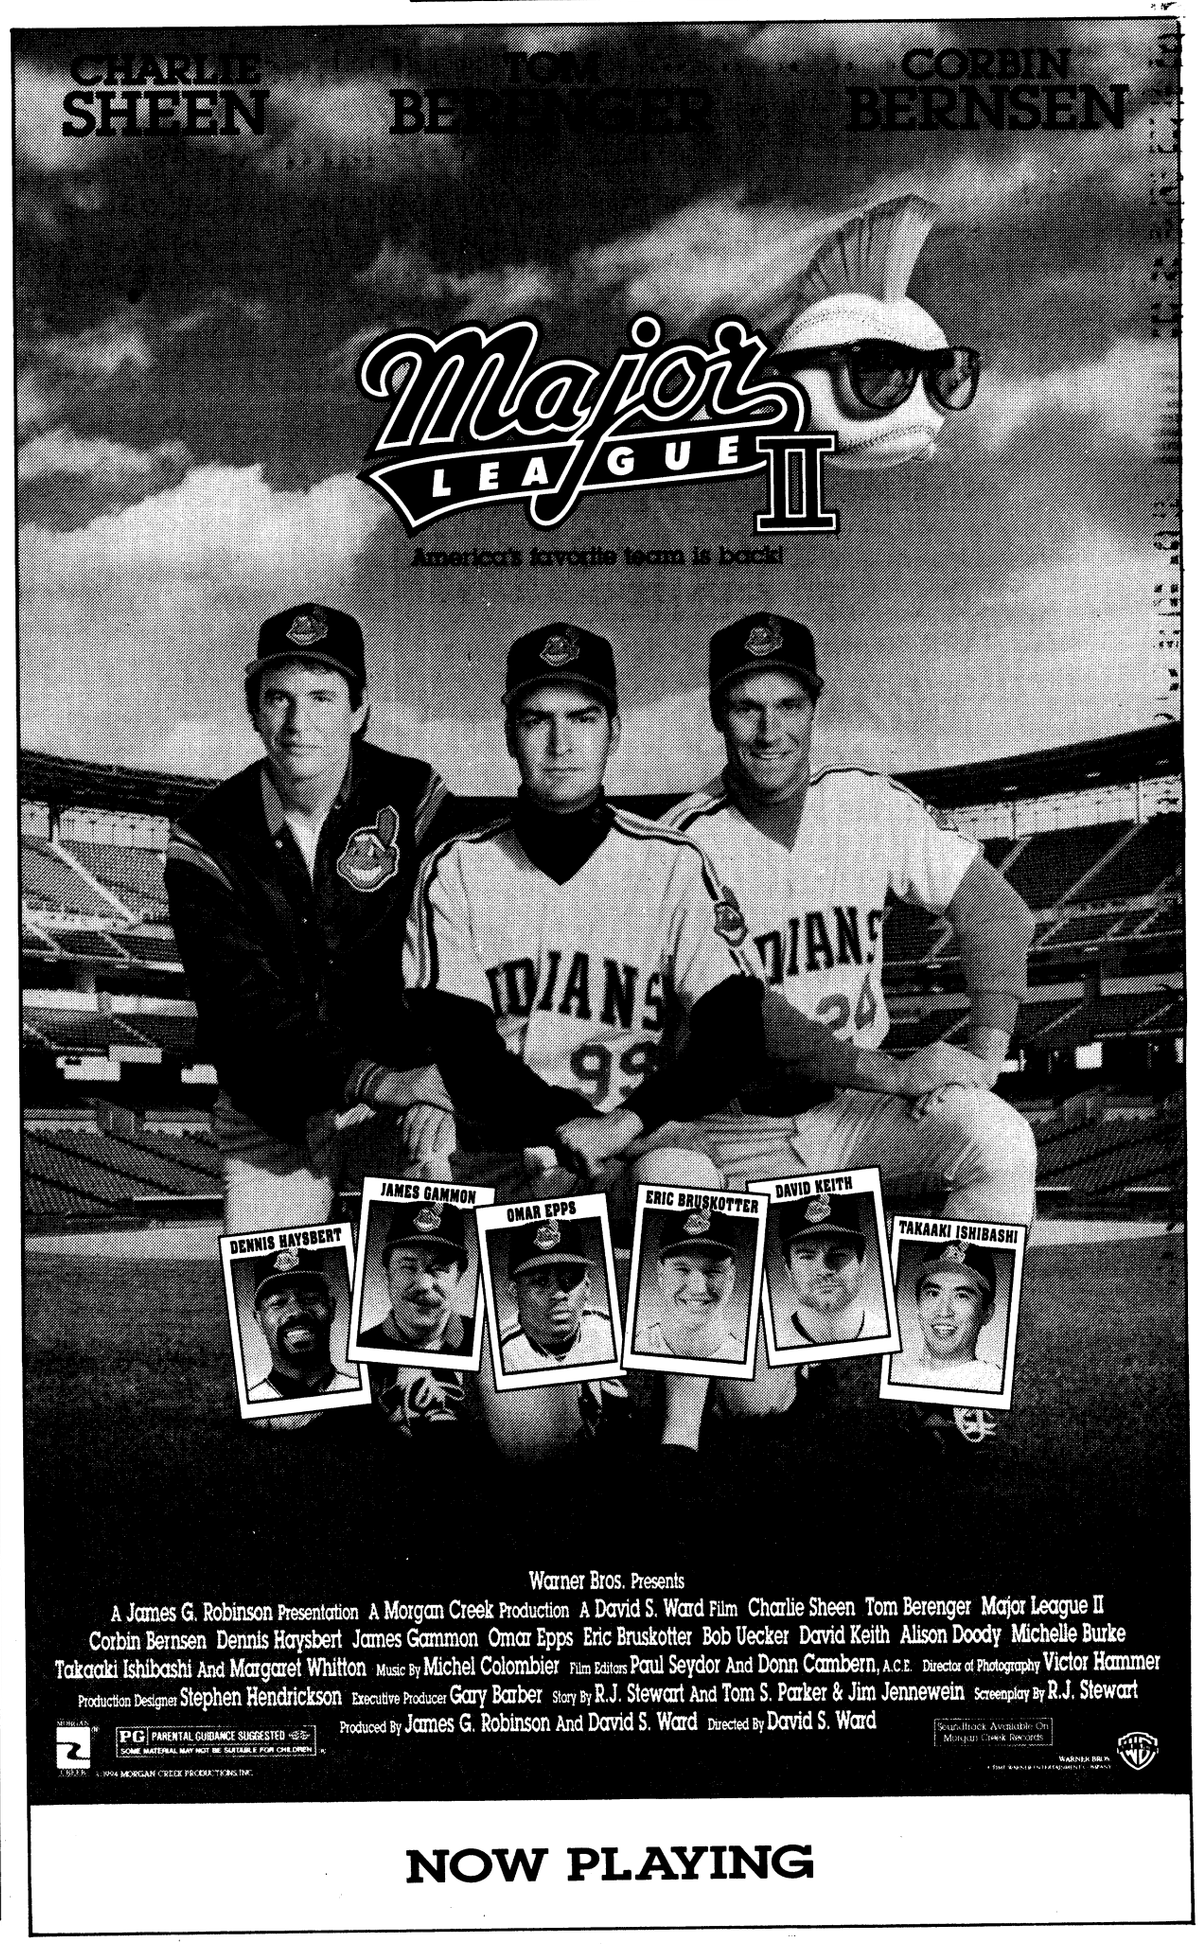
prospects of taking top honors.

"The attitude of the post's soldiers and civilians is super," Flo said. "We truly believe that we provide the best services."

"You can really feel the excitement around post as the ACOE team's visit approaches," McLaney said.



"Fort Benning personnel are working together as one big team and this is one of our greatest assets. When things need to be accomplished, we put our heads together and get it done."



Chief of Staff Col. Burnet R. Quick shared in the excitement.

"The commanding general and I want to convey our appreciation to all the fine members of this installation for your untiring support and superb efforts in reaching this milestone," he said.

"Everyone needs to continue to adhere to Total Army Quality goals and Community of Excellence plans as we accept the challenge to be named as the best army installation in the world," Quick said.

McLaney said the competition winners will probably be announced some time this month. The award ceremony will be May 18, 19 and 20 at the Pentagon in Washington, D.C.

CID targets money crimes

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning's Criminal Investigation Division seeks the assistance of the community in combating economic crimes, including theft, diversion and presenting false claims.

According to Special Agent Jeff Stack, chief of the Economic Crimes Team, most thefts occurring on Fort Benning are of small or "pilferable" items.

"Typically, you might have a guy in supply who'll pick up a pair a battle dress uniforms or some meals ready to eat, and sell them downtown. Those aren't large items, but on a post the size of Fort Benning, the loss can add up to a tremendous sum."

Special Agent In Charge Randy Upton said economic crime ultimately affects the readiness of Fort Benning soldiers.

"If commanders are unaware of supplies they're losing, they'll be in trouble when they're called to deploy," Upton said. "We're asking commanders and supervisors to be aware of the possibilities of economic crime and to call us in if they'd like assistance."

Stack said CID could be called in even if the matter isn't criminal. "We can help them pinpoint weaknesses in their systems," he said. "Our goal is to heighten the awareness of people in the community to what may be going on around them."

Some instances of economic crime occurring on post, Upton said, have included:

• A contractor hired and paid to spread fertilizer on some fields.

"We had an informant come and tell us the guy's truck was really full of sand," Upton said. "We did a soil analysis and found there wasn't a trace of fertilizer there.

• A soldier who stole eight cases of MREs and sold them; he is currently facing disciplinary action by his commander.

• Several Army and Air Force Exchange Service Employees, some of whom were military family members, found in possession of more than $30,000 worth of merchandise stolen from the Post Exchange.

"We estimate they were stealing about $1,000 worth a day," Upton said.

• A sergeant who filed a claim for $14,000 after her household goods were lost; when they turned up, the value was found to be closer to $7,000. She is facing a court-martial.

"We're taking a close look at claims and government contracts," Upton said, "because there are a lot of opportunities for fraud. The Directorate of Contracting does an excellent job of policing itself, but we're like an extra check in the system."

Stack said he or another member of the team would give briefings to any unit or directorate requesting them.

"We tell them what to watch out for, and what to keep their eyes open for," he said.

To report suspected economic crime, call the fraud hot line at 545-8912. The line is automated and open 24 hours a day and callers need not reveal their names.

1st Bn 19th Inf. renovates BEQs

Self-Help project improves soldiers' living conditions

By Shelby Carr
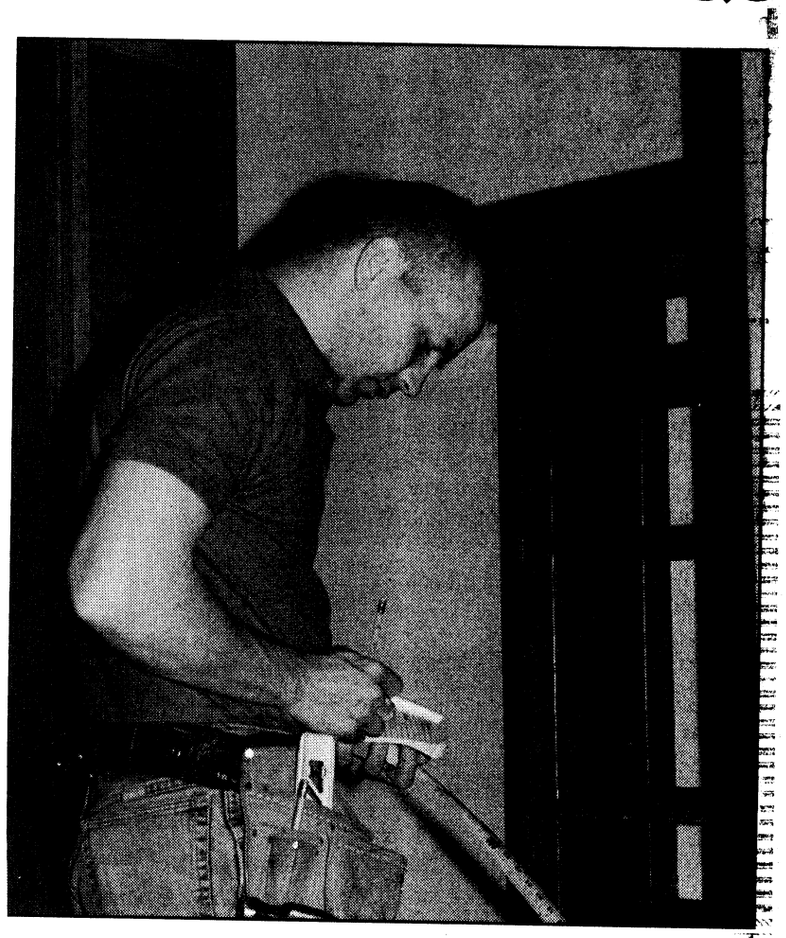
Infantry Training Brigade

The bachelor enlisted quarters of the 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, in Kinsman Barracks are being renovated to improve the living conditions of single soldiers.

The self-help project to improve the living conditions of single soldiers began in January and will be completed in July.

Kinsman Barracks, built in 1978, was the first starship to be built on Sand Hill. The bachelor enlisted quarters built at that time had a bathroom, walls of cinder blocks and three windows.

The new quarters will have a ceiling fan, two built-in closets with shelves, wallpaper, carpeting and a bathroom.



The new design was developed by Lt. Col. Warren Cate, the battalion commander, and Command Sgt. Maj. Okey Green, the battalion command sergeant major, after informal consultation with soldiers living in the barracks.

Single soldiers are sharing half the rooms while the other half are being renovated.

"The soldiers are optimistic about the improvements and are willing to endure short inconveniences for the overall improvement," Green said.

The self-help project had been in planning for several months until the funds became available in January and work began on the renovation.

"This is the ideal way to utilize self-help projects," said Green. "We use this to enhance the living condition of single soldiers. Once this project is over, we can use the same team of soldiers to work on and improve other areas for the single soldiers."

Fort Benning's motto is 'Celebrating Excellence'

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Fort Benning will have plenty of opportunities to toot its own horn when the Army Communities of Excellence Team begins its evaluation Tuesday.

According to Sarah McLaney, post ACOE coordinator, the tune will be a lively one.

"Fort Benning has so much to be proud of," she said. "Our theme this year is 'Celebrating Excellence: Making the Best Even Better.' This is the chance for everyone on post to show the team what a great installation this is and how much we have improved."

McLaney added that post personnel should think of the visit not as an inspection, but as a chance to share with the team examples of their commitment to excellence.

"This is as much a celebration as an evaluation," she said. "The team is here to discover by being shown, not to search and inspect everything on post."

Some of the many examples of excellence on post that were cited in the nomination packet that was submitted to the Department of the Army by Fort Benning include:

• A commitment to Total Army Quality principles in which each post organization has implemented TAQ and developed its own plan, including the creation of numerous process action teams throughout the installation that have studied and improved processes and contributed to enthusiasm on post for quality. More than 9,000 post personnel have have been trained in a post training center devoted exclusively to TAQ and civilian leader development training.

• A commitment to continuous improvement of post services and facilities that has included the identification of areas where significant progress can be made. A $2.8 million construction project was completed on two child development centers and there are 14 barracks renewal programs in the post's master plan for fiscal 1994 for single soldiers. In addition, the Enhanced 911 system, the only one of its kind in the Army, was implemented using state-of-the-art automation and computer-aided-dispatch to enhance the efficiency and effectiveness of the military police, fire department and emergency medical services.

• A commitment to providing quality recreation for post personnel that included the recent construction of a multi-purpose outdoor recreational area at Uchee Creek that includes a campground, picnic area and marina. In conjunction with Columbus and Phenix City, a riverwalk extension is being planned, which will provide a nature walk and bicycle trail along the Chattahoochee River.

• The continuing operation of the Family Unit Network Center, a one-stop location where newly arriving spouses can learn about the services available to them. More than 10,000 customers have been assisted by the FUN Center since its creation in 1992 and during the recent deployments to Somalia, a family assistance center provided services and support to the family members of deployed soldiers and to the returning wounded.

• The development of a monthly newcomers' briefing in which the post commander personally meets with all newly assigned soldiers to provide them with information about the tri-community.

These are just a few of the many examples cited in the packet.

"My vision for Fort Benning is this: to be acknowledged as the best community of excellence in the Army," said Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, commanding general. "To accomplish this, we must actively draw on the immense reserves of enthusiasm and ingenuity of our community. I further envision Fort Benning as a team of professionals, working together to cultivate a quality environment and providing a multitude of diverse services for our soldiers, family members, civilians and retirees," he said.

"My philosophy is simple: take care of soldiers, their families, our retirees and the civilian workforce," White added. "Fort Benning is and will continue to be a world class power projection platform and sustainment base that provides a top-quality environment in which our people live, work and train. We look forward with great enthusiasm to the visit of the 1994 ACOE team to share, first-hand, those things that are unfolded in our Fort Benning story — a true celebration of excellence. Excellence — we are better than last year, but not as good as next year!"

Classes available for all soldiers

By Annette Parker
TAQ Coordinator

Fort Benning is a world class leader in Total Army Quality training.

TAQ training began on Fort Benning in September 1989. By May 1993 thousands of employees, managers and leaders had been trained.

The Directorate of Civilian Personnel, Training and Development Division, has offered sustainment training ever since.

Fort Benning's TAQ training program consists of four basic courses: Quality Elements Seminar (20 hours), Quality Improvement Team Seminar (12 hours), Quality Awareness Experience (eight hours), and Quality Tools and Measurement (12 hours).

Mary Burt, DCP's TAQ instructor, teaches these classes on a regular basis in the TAQ Training Center.

Occasionally, on-site training is offered through the Office of Personnel Management.

Some of the advanced and professional development courses that have been offered recently to sustain the post's qualify efforts include: Process Action Teams for TAQ, Problem Solving Skills for TAQ, TAQ Team Dynamics and Creative Problem Solving. Some upcoming courses are a facilitator class and How to Manage TAQ in an Organization.

Jim Brinson, the adjutant general and a leader in TAQ implementation, says that TAQ training is absolutely essential to sustaining a TAQ program.

"Leaders and process workers must have basic instruction on TAQ so they can effectively communicate on how to achieve quality. Equally important is sustainment training to stimulate new ideas and learn new skills, especially about teamwork and measurement, " said Brinson.

The Adjutant General's office made TAQ training mandatory for all its employees.

All AG employees must attend QES within their first six months after assignment to the directorate. All AG leaders and QIT members must attend the measurement and QIT seminars, and all other employees are also encouraged to attend these seminars. To sustain their TAQ skills, all AG employees must attend a TAQ class or seminar annually.

Brinson said, "We in AG feel that TAQ training is essential to our quality efforts.

"We are fortunate to have great TAQ trainer like Mary Burt at Fort Benning," Brinson said.

"Mary is always willing to help schedule seminars and tailor them to our individual directorate needs. She motivates us to learn new skills and take quality seriously. Much of AG's success in implementing TAQ is because of DCP's superb support in training."

TAQ training. Brinson said said, it's here at Fort Benning. It's free. Take advantage of the opportunities to learn about Total Army Quality.

TAQ is 'being all it can be'

Adjutant General's Office

TAQ is not just an acronym in the Adjutant General/Military Personnel Directorate; it's the way of working to make every service and product better and provide exceptional customer service. TAQ means Total Army Quality and it also means Think About Quality.

Fort Benning's AG was selected the best AG in Training and Doctrine Command in 1992 and 1993 and the best AG in the Army in 1993. Jim Brinson, AG's director, says that the AG team won these honors by dedicating themselves to continuous improvement of their work process and to providing the best possible services to their customers. TAQ was their primary tool.

The AG TAQ program started back in 1991 with its Quality Improvement Team of managers, leaders and process workers. They designed a work process analysis model that AG used to analyze all of its mission essential tasks and work processes. Using the Crosby Model that the Directorate of Civilian Personnel trains at Fort Benning, the AG QIT developed a simple model that all employees could learn to apply to their work process.

"As we learned to debug our systems and define performance standards, we became more efficient and more focused on what our customers wanted," Brinson said. AG developed performance standards and measures them monthly to ensure its systems stay on track. "Our process workers measure performance and work with their leaders, customers, and suppliers to achieve quality and excellence," Brinson said.

According to Brinson, the real key is to understand that implementing TAQ is not a short-term prescription that solves all problems. "We have to change our corporate work ethic, to really understand who our customers and suppliers are, and to define what quality is for services we provide. Defining our standards and measuring ourselves took some change by all of the AG team members."

Success as the current "world champion" in military personnel services and best in TRADOC helped develop pride and enthusiasm that TAQ really works, Brinson said. AG uses TAQ to continuously improve and to plan its vision of the future. TAQ provides AG the basis for continuing its tradition of excellence into the 21st century.

The Directorate of Resource Management is the proponent for TAQ. For assistance, contact the TAQ coordinator, Annette Parker, at 545-1812 or 545-3610.

City of Columbus honors Medal of Honor recipients

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

Three local heroes were honored by the city of Columbus in cooperation with Fort Benning at a ceremony March 25 as part of National Medal of Honor Day.

Marking the second year the day was celebrated locally, the ceremony was conducted in the Columbus Government Center.

Honorees at the event were retired Cols. Robert B. Nett and Edward R. Schowalter. Retired Maj. Freeman V. Horner was unable to attend the ceremony because of illness.

All three were awarded the nation's highest military decoration, the Medal of Honor, given for "conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of life above and beyond the call of duty, in a conflict against the enemy of the United States."

Columbus Mayor Frank Martin and Fort Benning Chief of Staff Burnet R. Quick gave opening comments at the ceremony and were followed by featured speaker, Juvenile Court Judge Aaron Cohn.

Cohn highlighted citizenship and patriotism during his speech before the audience of mostly veterans, school children and local dignitaries.

"The United States of America is still a beacon of light and a shining example ... people still beat a path to our door," said Cohn.

He went on to address the diversity of cultures living side by side in this country.

"Our differences do not give us the right to hurt one another," he said. "Diversity can be a strength instead of a weakness."

Following the address, Capt. Steve Russell, a small group instructor with the Infantry Officer Advanced Course, read the official Medal of Honor citations for the three honorees.

Horner was a staff sergeant in the 119th Infantry, 30th Infantry Division, fighting in World War II Germany when his actions earned him the Medal of Honor.

Horner and the rest of his company were in a heated battle with Germans during which they became pinned down in an open field. In the face of enemy fire, Horner voluntarily stood and charged forward, destroying three enemy positions and ultimately killed or captured seven Germans. His actions enabled his company to proceed with a successful assault on Wurselen, Germany.

Schowalter was a lieutenant with the 7th Infantry Division when he earned the Medal of Honor for actions near Kumhwa, Korea, in 1952.

In the face of small arms, grenade and mortar fire, he led the effort of his company to take an enemy strongpoint. In spite of being wounded several times, once severely, Schowalter refused to give up his command and, according to the official citation, "led his men into the trenches and began routing the enemy.... and encouraging his men until ground was secured."

Nett was awarded the decoration for his actions near Cognon, Leyete, in the Phillipines Dec. 14, 1944. Then a lieutenant with the 77th Infantry Division, Nett led an assault against entrenched Japanese positions.

He was responsible for killing seven enemy soldiers with his rifle and bayonet during hand-to-hand combat. Despite being seriously wounded three times, Nett continued with his troops to successfully take the objective.

A portion of highway running southeast through Fort Benning was named for Nett.

Nominated by a man in his company for the award, he didn't know he had even been put in for the medal until he learned it would be awarded to him in January of 1946.

"I always acknowledge this medal is a token of the well-trained men and gallant actions of soldiers in my company," said Nett after the ceremony. "I share all honor with them."

American flags were presented to the Nett, Schowalter and Horner on behalf of U.S. Rep. Mac Collins by his aide, Shirley Gillespie.

Also participating in the ceremony were the Infantry Chorus and bugler Spc. Stephen Hughes.

Proposed budget supports CHAMPUS

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

The president's proposed fiscal 1995 Department of Defense budget for health care fully funds Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services, continues support for medical operations and maintenance, and procures new medical equipment.

The Defense Health Program budget, under the assistant secretary of defense for health affairs, is $9.9 billion, up from $9.6 billion for fiscal 1994.

Officials prepared the budget based on an estimate of 8.3 million military medical system beneficiaries in 1995. Currently, the system serves 8.5 million. Officials expect the number to go to 8.2 million after 1995.

Most of the request, $9.6 billion, will fund operations and maintenance of existing facilities and CHAMPUS. The fiscal 1994 amount is $9.3 billion.

The budget fully funds CHAMPUS, the military health insurance program. The CHAMPUS portion of the budget is $4 billion, the same as for fiscal 1994.

The budget includes $3.1 billion for military treatment facilities and $613.1 million for care in nondefense facilities. Nondefense facilities include the outpatient facilities Primary Care for the Uniformed Services clinics and NAVCARE, and Uniformed Services Treatment Facilities. The last of these, organized around former Public Health Service hospitals, provides a health maintenance organization-like service for military retirees and family members.

The military treatment facility budget funds direct care expenses, including civilian salaries, supplies and contracts with civilian hospitals for services such as magnetic resonance imaging scans.

The proposed budget includes $40.8 million for the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences, the military's medical school.

The school will close following the graduation of the class of 1997.

To help ensure a continued supply of qualified military doctors, the budget includes $3.1 million for medical scholarships to civilian schools.

The procurement budget will increase to $309 million from fiscal 1994's $273 million.

The budget also includes $212 million for field activities. This includes the Defense Medical System Support Center, responsible for medical computer systems. The center also houses the Computer and Electronic Accommodations Program office.

The other field activities are the Defense Medical Facilities Office, which supervises construction and renovation, and the Defense Medical Resources Office, which handles the health budget. Funding for TRICARE — a managed care program — is not listed as a separate item. "Moving into managed care is just the way we do business. It can't be separated as a line item," said a health affairs official.

Sergeant 'secures' MP of Year Award

Marc G. Turchin

Sgt. Milton A. Nation investigates a crime scene by dusting for fingerprints.

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

A sergeant with the Military Police Activity has won the 1993 Military Police Officer of the Year Award.

Sgt. Milton A. Nation, a military police investigator, with the Military Police Activity, beat out 11 other nominees to win the award.

"It is a great satisfaction as a noncommissioned officer (and) a military policeman, " Nation said.

Nation gives credit to the noncommissioned officers above him who trained him so well and taught him to be an MP for his success.

"They (the noncommissioned officers) taught me how to teach other soldiers, which enabled me to become more (proficient) in what I do and to really know about being an M.P," said Nation.

Nation entered the military in 1989. His first duty station was West Berlin.

Nation started his MP career working in the division portion, which spends most of its time out in the field.

"My very first year in Berlin all I did was just field MP," Nation said.

Nation's next job assignment was to guard at Checkpoint Charlie.

This was a gate that divided the east portion of Berlin from the west. The distance from the east gate to the west gate was approximately 30 yards, he said.

> "It is a great satisfaction as a noncommissioned officer (and) a military police officer."
> — Milton A. Nation
> Military Police Activity

Besides working at Checkpoint Charlie, Nation worked on the Drug Suppression Team, combating the flow of illegal drugs to soldiers and their family members.

By 1992, Nation said he had reached the rank of specialist and began giving protective service to the commanding general in Berlin.

After serving in Berlin, Nation was sent to Fort Benning and began working as an investigator with the Military Police Activity.

Since coming to Fort Benning, Nation was named MP of the quarter early last year. This would eventually lead to his nomination for MP of the year.

To become MP of the year, "soldiers must be nominated by their supervisor and had some type of recognition in the activity over the past year," said Master Sgt. John C. Craddock, Provost Marshall sergeant major.

Examples of recognition are MP, soldier or NCO of the quarter, or being recognized in their own company as MP, soldier or NCO of the month can also qualify individuals for the MP, soldier or NCO of the year award.

After being nominated, all nominees must go through a three-day evaluation of their soldier skills, said Craddock.

Tasks the nominees are tested on are nuclear, biological and chemical warfare, map reading, first aid, report writing and a physical fitness test.

Each portion of the tasks are worth a certain amount of points toward a maximum total of 360 points.

Also taken into consideration are their weapons qualification on the M-16 rifle and the 9mm handgun, Craddock said.

Next is a written test covering MP subjects, including "prisoner of war and standard operating procedures pertaining to their daily duties as military police officers at Fort Benning," Craddock said.

The points are broken down as follows:

NBC-15, map reading-10, M-16 qualification-20, 9mm qualification-5, first aid-10, report writing-20, written test-50, PT test-30 and the formal board-200.

If any of the nominees failed any portion of the tasks listed, they were automatically disqualified, said Craddock.

Those individuals who passed all the tasks still had to be screened by the formal board consisting of senior NCOs from different MP companies.

Those NCOs who sat on the board this past year are 1st Sgt. Bruce A. Bell, U.S. Army Infantry Center MP Company; Sgt. 1st Class Hall E. Solomon Jr., USAIC MP Company; 1st Sgt. Cortez Globe, 988th MP Company; Sgt. 1st Class Slyvia Mitchell, USAIC Corrections Company and Craddock.

Out of the 11 individuals who were nominated, only seven made it to the formal board, Craddock said.

Craddock said there was less than a one-point seperated the top three qualifiers.

"Nation's knowledge of his MP duties is one reason he did so well," Craddock said.

"Any extra knowledge that I may have, I have earned through volunteering for duties," Nation said.

The only way to gain experience and knowledge, is to never keep yourself down and continue to do your best, Nation said.

world war II

Fifty years ago this week ...

• Despite several enemy counterattacks, Russian forces continued to break through the faltering German defenses and drive across the Eastern Front.

During the week, the unrelenting Soviet advance closed to within 17 miles of Odessa after capturing several cities, including Kubanka, Kablevo and the Black Sea port of Ochakov.

Soviet forces also gained ground beyond Russian territory, wrestling Tarnopol, Poland, from the Germans, while reaching areas in Rumania not previously claimed by Moscow authorities.

• In the Carolines, Allied Task Force 58, led by U.S. Adm. Raymond Spruance, consisting of 11 carriers as well as the usual escort vessels, attacked Palau and Woleai.

Despite Japanese precautions prompted by advanced sightings of the approaching fleet, the American forces successfully inflicted a great deal of damage, sinking 130,000 tons of enemy shipping.

Additionally, U.S. pilots destroyed 150 Japanese planes in air-to-air combat, which resulted in the loss of only 26 American planes.

• In the United States, the Supreme Court found the exclusion of individuals on the basis of race from political parties to be a violation of the 15th Amendment and ruled against a policy that excluded negroes from voting in primary elections.

Fort Benning names drill sgt of the year

Winner will compete for Army award

By Shelby Carr
Infantry Training Brigade

The 1994 Fort Benning Drill Sergeant of the Year ceremony was March 24 at the Sand Hill Recreation Center to honor Staff Sgt. Darrell W. De Vor for winning the honor.

De Vor was chosen as the best drill sergeant out of the more than 350 drill sergeants assigned to Fort Benning after a three-day competition held in December.

De Vor, age 25, was assigned to the 3rd Squadron, 2nd Armored Cavalry Regiment, in Germany and served with that unit in Desert Shield and Desert Storm before being assigned to 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, as a drill sergeant.

He was also assigned to the 7th Infantry Division at Fort Ord, Calif.

Some of De Vor's other accomplishments include being awarded the Expert Infantryman Badge, Combat Infantryman Badge, Army Commendation Medal (fifth award) and Army Achievement Medal (sixth award). De Vor is a member of the Sergeant Morales Club.

The first runner-up to the Drill Sergeant of the Year is Staff Sgt. Willard McCray Jr.

McCray has served with the 6th Infantry Division, 101st Airborne Division, 1st Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, and the Military Honor Platoon at Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

McCray's accomplishments include earning the Ranger Tab, Army Commendation Medal, Army Achievement Medal, (sixth award) and the Expert Infantryman Badge.

After opening remarks by Command Sgt. Maj. Sylvan B. Bauer, the Infantry Training Brigade command sergeant major, the guest speaker, retired Col. Donald C. Shuffstall, spoke about the need for infantry and the past accomplishments of the American infantrymen and the need for drill sergeants.

"There is history behind what you do today at the Infantry Training Brigade," Shuffstall said.

Shuffstall presented McCray with a plaque.

Shuffstall then presented De Vor with a hat rack. The Association of the United States Army presented De Vor with a plaque, a certificate for a set of dress blues and a 9mm Beretta pistol.

Staff Sgt. Darrell W. De Vor

The Noncommissioned Officers Association presented De Vor a plaque and a saber.

Following the presentation, De Vor made some remarks. "The drill sergeant takes your sons and daughters and turns them into soldiers," De Vor said. "He is a motivator and a consummate professional."

De Vor, who will compete for the Army Drill Sergeant of the Year in May, spoke of his plans before and after that competition.

"I am a representative for all of the drill sergeants on post," said De Vor. "I will work to make training smarter and more effective."

OCS inducts retired airborne officer into Hall of Fame

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

It was a gloomy setting, dark clouds, the wind whirling from all directions and drops of rain coming down periodically.

That didn't stop a crowd from gathering to see a long-time airborne officer get inducted into the Officer Candidate School Hall of Fame.

Retired Col. William M. (Buzz) Miley Jr. was inducted into the OCS Hall of Fame as the 1,639th inductee March 25 at the Airborne Walk.

"It feels outstanding to get this award," said Miley.

Like any soldier, Miley accepted his award by thanking his fellow comrades over the years for the help and leadership they showed him during his 31 years in the Army.

"I'm deeply flattered by everything said about Buzz Miley," Miley said in his acceptance speech.

Miley spoke of people showing him the ropes and of one platoon sergeant in particular.

"I'm going to show you what you are going to be doing for the next year," Miley said the platoon sergeant told him.

Miley was commissioned as an infantry officer upon graduation from OCS Feb. 2, 1943.

His first duty assignment was as a student at the Parachute School here.

Miley

Miley has held plenty of jobs in his career in the Army. He served with the 511th Parachute Infantry Regiment, 11th Airborne Division during World War II; the 187th Airborne Regimental Combat Team during the Korean War; and with the Military Advisory and Assistance Group in Vietnam. He was deputy commander, 3rd Special Forces Group, Fort Bragg, N.C.; and director, the Special Forces School, Special Warfare Center, Fort Bragg.

Miley says he attributes his troop and staff duty to getting him nominated.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, Fort Benning's commanding general and chief of the infantry, said Miley is "a great leader, a great soldier and a great American.

"He is one our best," White said.

To be inducted into the Hall of Fame, Miley had to meet certain requirements.

"Inductees must have been graduates of the OCS here or the Ground General School at Fort Riley, Kan.," said Capt. Mary T. Crowder, battalion adjutant, for the 3rd Battalion 11th Infantry Regiment.

Other inductee criteria include: being a colonel or above or a recipient of the Medal of Honor, or an OCS graduate who went on to have a state, congressional or federal job with recognition.

Such people include Sen. Robert Dole and former Secretary of Defense Casper Weinberger.

Once the nominee has been contacted, a packet is sent to that person for them to fill out.

Included in the packet is a biography sketch to fill out, a privacy act waiver, and any good to know information on the nominee.

Once the packet is returned, an investigation is done to validate that the nominee has graduated from one of the OCS schools.

When the information needed is found, the entire packet is sent to the commanding general and he then sends out an invitation to the nominee informing the nominee of when the next OCS induction will be conducted.

With his induction, the first of 1994, Miley joins the ranks of the selected few. To be selected into the OCS Hall of Fame is a turning point in the inductee's life as an officer, said Crowder.

The next induction ceremony is scheduled for September. That is the next time more of our nation's heroes will be here to be inducted into what White said is "a fellowship of superstars."

Fort Benning to host World Cup shooting competition

USAMU to dedicate shooting facility, induct members into its hall of fame

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

Fort Benning will be the site of the 1994 World Cup USA and U.S. Grand Prix shooting competitions April 17 through 24.

More than 400 shooter athletes from approximately 43 nations will compete in the event, which will be conducted at the Tommy G. Pool International Shooting Complex.

Fort Benning was selected to host this year's competition largely because of its proximity to the 1996 Olympic site and its recently upgraded facilities, officials said.

The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit will host the event and has placed 14 shooters on the 1994 World Cup team.

Listed below are the AMU shooters from each discipline and their rank.

Some of the countries and territories signed to date are: Argentina, Australia, Azerbaijan, Belarus, Belgium, Bermuda, Brazil, Bulgaria, Canada, Costa Rica, Croatia, Czech Republic, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Great Britain, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Kazakhstan, Luxembourg, Mexico, Monaco, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Oman, Peru, Poland, Puerto Rico, Qatar, Russia, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkmenistan, United States, Virgin Islands and Yugoslavia.

Prior to the kickoff of the World Cup competition, the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit will dedicate the shooting complex and induct seven former members of the unit into its hall of fame.

International shooting complex dedication

The Tommy G. Pool International Shooting Complex will be formally dedicated by the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit at a 1 p.m. ceremony April 8.

The complex, located on Alamo Road near Soldiers' Plaza, will serve as one of the ranges for the upcoming World Cup Shooting Championships April 17 to 24.

The late Lt. Col. Tommy G. Pool, former Olympic bronze medalist, was with the unit for more than two decades as a shooter and civilian employee. Pool died in 1990.

His widow and guest of honor, Nancy Pool, and Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, Fort Benning commanding general, will unveil a portrait at the ceremony of Pool that will hang in the complex.

Refreshments and shooting demonstrations to highlight the capabilities of the indoor, outdoor range will follow the ceremony.

The general public is invited to attend.

Hall of fame

Seven former members of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit will be inducted in the unit's first hall of fame during a banquet ceremony April 15 at the Fort Benning Officers' Club.

The names of the distinguished shooters will be announced during the ceremony in which Gen. Dennis J. Reimer, Forces Command commander-in-chief, will be the guest speaker.

"The inductees represent the elite of America's military rifle and pistol shooters," said Col. Lory M. Johnson, commander of the unit. "Each member is a past master of the art of shooting."

The former shooters have set more than 1,000 national records and have won Olympic and world championships.

The hall of famers will be permanently recognized in a section of the unit's headquarters at Building 243.

The 38-year old unit is an organization dedicated to competitive shooting and enhancing marksmanship.

Cruise-matics coast for win

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Columbus-Fort Benning Rugby Football Club Cruise-matics coasted past the Fort Rucker, Ala., Rugby Football Club 27-10 Saturday at Stilwell Field.

Cruise-matics fly half Tim Butterfield scored the first 10 points for the Cruisers in the first half on a try, conversion and a penalty kick for a 10-3 lead. The Cruise-matics dominated forward play with wing forward Kevin Hyneman covering the line out, while second row John Neuman controlled the loose play.

In the second half of play, overall fitness proved to be the downfall of the Fort Rucker side.

"Our guys were in much better shape than Fort Rucker," said Cruise-matics head coach Jim Muldoon. "The younger stronger legs proved to be the difference."

Muldoon was correct in his assessment, with the Cruisers getting scores in the second half of play from winger Sean Bradley, wing forward John D'Amico and eight man Greg Allen to keep the Cruise-matics in the lead until the final whistle 27-10.

The Crusie-matics defense also played a key role in the match, by stopping their division rivals from gaining any momentum in the second half; the Cruise-matics hit hard and often, causing Fort Rucker to look for the defensive man rather than the ball.

The Cruise-matics close out their regular season with a home game Saturday against the Renegades of Atlanta at 2 p.m. on Stilwell Field.

The U.S. Military National Rugby Championships will take place April 22 through 24 on Fort Benning with the Cruise-matics defending their title in sevens play.

Master's badges available

Directorate of Community Activities

Series badges for the 1994 Masters Golf Tournament will be available to active duty personnel through the Community Operations Division Thursday to April 10.

Because of the limited number of badges, selection of individuals to purchase these badges will be determined by a priority drawing to be conducted today at the Follow Me Golf Course Pro Shop, Building 390. One badge per person is available. Each badge will cost $100 and is good for daily entry for the four days of championship competition.

Selected individuals must travel on a leave status and at their own expense. Billeting at Fort Gordon, Ga., and Fort Jackson, S.C., during this period is not available.

Applications to enter the drawing to purchase badges must be submitted in writing to the Golf Pro Shop no later than 5 p.m.today and must include name, rank, Social Security number, organization and both office and residence hone numbers.

A $100 check or money order payable to IMWRF, Fort Benning, must accompany application. Money will be refunded if an individual is not drawn in priority to receive one of the available badges.

Individuals receiving badges will be required to make a signed statement certifying that the badge is for personal use only and is not transferable.

Badges must be claimed at the Golf Pro Shop no later than 5 p.m. Monday.

OSUT

NEW SOLDIERS FACE THE ARMY

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

"Be all you can be." At the Infantry Training Brigade, that phrase isn't just a slogan; it's a promise.

The brigade's mission is to conduct Infantry One Station Unit Training, a combination of basic training and advanced individual training for soldiers in infantry and infantry-related military occupational specialties.

In 13 to 15 weeks, depending on their MOS, the young men who arrive here are turned into soldiers, and it requires a lot more than a haircut and a uniform to do it.

"We want soldiers to be highly trained, motivated, physically fit and ready to take their place in infantry units throughout the world," said Lt. Col. Bruce D. Grant, commander of the 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment.

One such soldier is Pvt. 2 James B. Dyals, who served as the trainee leader of his platoon in Company A, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, and recently graduated from OSUT.

"I've lost lost 30 pounds," Dyals said. "Coming from sitting on my butt to waking up and having to do PT (physical training) every morning ... it's been a physical challenge for me."

Dyals said that he feels like a totally different person than he was when he started OSUT. He has more muscle, less fat, is physically stronger and just feels more confident, he said.

"I think (basic training) gives you a drive within yourself, saying 'Hey, I can actually accomplish something.' "

For Pvt. 2 Darrell R. King, who graduated with Dyals, the challenge has been a different one.

Physically, he said, he thought it would be a lot harder, and he was expecting the drill sergeants to be meaner and less formal.

"I thought it would be like (the movie) 'Boys of Company C,'" King said. "I thought it would be more strict ... that every mistake you made they'd be on you."

Instead, he said, he found that the drill sergeants were professional and fair, "more into teaching you."

The hardest thing for him was not the physical challenge, he said, but having all of his freedom taken away.

Everyone goes through their own personal struggle, it seems. The challenge may be the physical one of PT, long road marches, the obstacle course, little sleep or getting "smoked" by the drill sergeant with push-ups and calisthenics.

Or it may be the mental one of having every minute controlled by a drill sergeant, being separated from family and friends, or having to learn to work successfully as a team.

Though the same types of challenges are there, the approach to training today is different than what we often see in the movies.

In the late '60s and early '70s, the Army was still drafting, said ITB Command Sgt. Maj. Sylvan B. Bauer Jr.

"We have a different type of soldier now," he said. "Today, the Army is 100 percent volunteers, so we no longer have to create motivation, but maintain motivation," he said.

"It used to be yelling day one, yelling graduation day," Grant said.

Now, he said, training begins with total control of their every movement; drill sergeants wake them up an put them to bed.

> "You have to instill pride ... you have to boost their confidence, and you have to encourage them."
> — Staff Sgt. James D. Hairston
> Drill sergeant, 3rd Bn, 32nd Inf. Regt.

But as time progresses, the trainees are given more responsibility for themselves, he said. Trainee leaders assist the drill sergeants and the platoons are expected to do things without waiting for the drill sergeants to tell them.

By the last weeks of training, the drill sergeants "act more like the platoon sergeants they will see in their first units than the drill sergeants that so frightened them on their first day," Grant said.

"When the soldiers initially get here they're frustrated, shaken and they don't know exactly what to expect," said Staff Sgt. James D. Hairston, a drill sergeant from the 3rd Battalion, 32nd Infantry Regiment.

"You have to be their father, mother, sister and brother. It's a big hurdle for them to adjust to military life and constantly being put on a time schedule."

The hardest thing at the beginning, Dyals said, is adjusting to "the stress of being locked down."

"Being away from your family, not being able to use the phone to call when you really want to ... not being able to do anything, being told what to do, when to do it, how to do it ..." It was hard, Dyals said, but it did instill self discipline.

Another big adjustment is the long hours. A typical day starts at 5 a.m. and ends at 9 p.m., Grant said, and the trainees still do kitchen police duty and fireguard.

"You're working from 5 in the morning to 6 or 7 p.m., and then you've got fireguard at night, so it's like you never really stop working; you're always doing something," Dyals said. After working these 14-hour days, he said, an eight-hour-a-day job on the outside "would be cake."

The hardest thing to teach the new soldiers, Grant said, "is how to push themselves a little bit further than they thought they could go before."

To do that, "you have to instill pride within the individual soldier, you have to boost their confidence, and you have to encourage them, " Hairston said.

There are some 284 tasks that the soldiers must master, ranging from basics such as identifying rank and executing marching movements to things like using a squad automatic weapon or M-60 machine gun, moving under fire and reacting to flares.

The training is performance-oriented, Grant said. "When we have soldiers that don't get it, they retrain and retest until they get a 100 percent go."

One of the major hurdles in training is basic rifle marksmanship, when soldiers zero, practice, then qualify with an M-16 rifle. Instruction is provided by cadre from the 29th Infantry Regiment and reinforced by the ITB drill sergeants, Grant said.

The first real success, and an important time for soldiers, is when the soldiers qualify the fourth week, he said.

Some other confidence-builders are nuclear, biological and chemical training, which culminates with the soldiers wearing their chemical gear through a chamber of CS gas; the night infiltration course, when students crawl about 100 meters underneath concertina wire in the dark with machine gun fire, flares and artillery simulators going off above them; and the capstone field training exercise, when soldiers spend four days in the field in a simulated battle environment, putting to use all they have learned.

The exercise ends with a final, 15-mile road march, and, Grant said, "some of the soldiers have never walked that far in their lives."

One of the biggest things you learn, besides what you can accomplish yourself, Dyals said, is how to get along with people.

The soldiers live in bays that hold up to 60 men, sharing eight sinks, toilets and showers. They eat together, march in formation together and almost always operate as a team.

"When you get here, you get crammed together, and you know that you're going to have to work with some guy for 13 weeks," Dyals said. "You have no idea about his background, his attitudes ..."

"Sometimes, you get a cycle where everybody wants to do it their own way," said Staff Sgt. Jeffry A. Wehr, another drill sergeant with the 32nd.

"That's the biggest challenge, in a way, because one of our jobs is to get them to work together in order to get things done. If they don't work together, things are just going to fall apart."

"They are always stressing teamwork, but I honestly thought it would never come together," King said. "You've always got that 10 percent who want to live on everyone else's slack."

Once the drill sergeants weeded those out, though, things did come together, Dyals said. In fact, he said, it was hard to be graduating and leaving the friends he made.

"You get so attached to one another, because you depend on one another, the laughter and picking one another up."

In the end, King said, he has learned a lot. "I think everybody should go through basic and experience it."

Students become Bradley experts

Mastergunner course offers technical, academic challenge

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

The classroom looks more like a machine shop. Mechanical parts are scattered across every table with soldiers gathered around them in groups of two or three, intensely concentrating on fitting pieces, carefully twisting wire with pliers or consulting books to make sure they get it right.

These soldiers are students in the Bradley Instructor Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry's Mastergunner Course, working on the final assembly of the 25mm Bushmaster chain gun, one of the main weapons in the Bradley Fighting Vehicle.

The three-month course is designed to take students from Bradley-equipped units all over the world and turn them into experts on unit-level maintenance, training management and gunnery program development for the Bradley.

The main mission of the mastergunner is to assist and advise the commander on anything to do with the Bradley, said Sgt. 1st Class Elmer Davis, the Mastergunner branch chief.

The course is challenging both mechanically and academically, said Staff Sgt. Theodore F. Vynorius, a Mastergunner student and instructor for short range air defense weapons at Fort Bliss, Texas.

"The first week and a half, we concentrated on the turret itself, learning all the electrical components and functions," Vynorius said.

During their 12 weeks here, the students take a total of 24 exams, both written and hands-on.

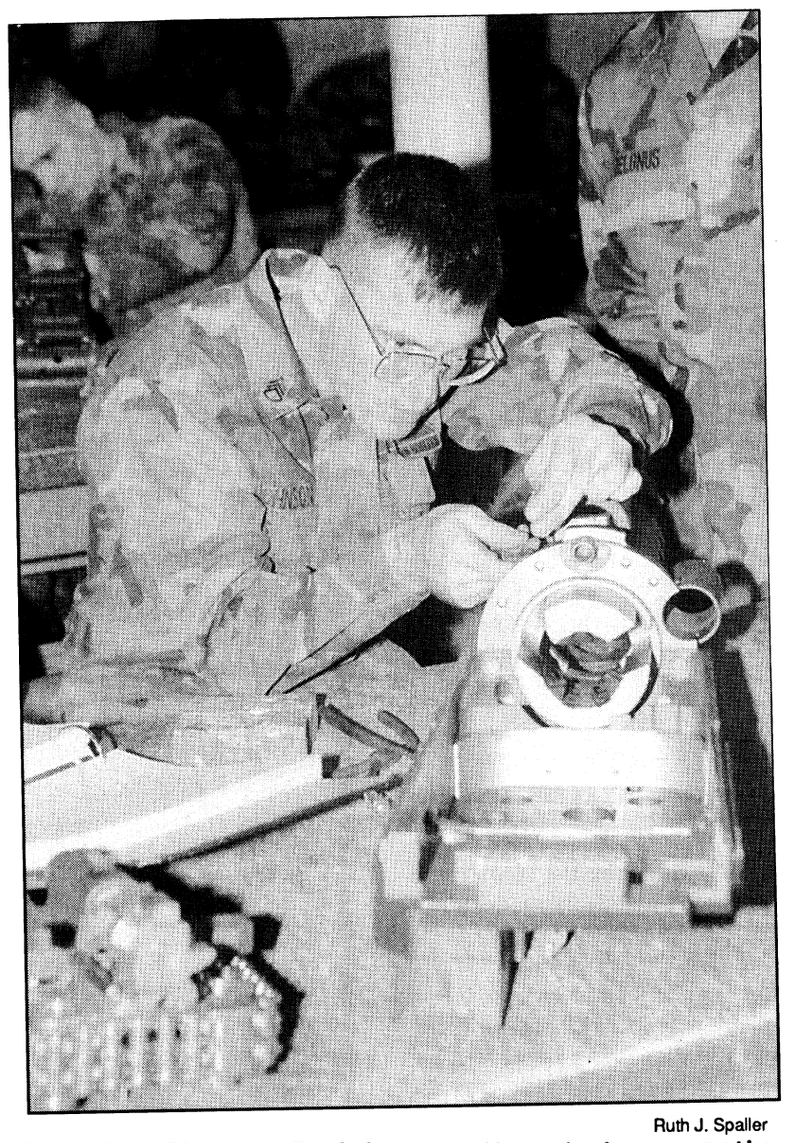
They are required to make 80 percent on all of the written tests and pass all of the hands-on tests, Davis said.

The material is highly technical and the tests are not easy, most students say.

Staff Sgt. John D. Temple, who came from Baumholder, Germany to attend the course, said he considers himself to be mechanically inclined, but "they put a clock on you for things like performing a functions check — it's challenging."

The students go through detailed classroom and hands-on instruction on the fire control system and turret weapons system of the Bradley, including the main gun.

"One of the biggest problem areas of the course is the 25 mm," said Staff Sgt. William A. Morin, a course instructor. "It is much more complicated than most weapons systems because of its electronic components."



"It's technical material," Vynorius said, "and from a certain point in the gun forward, you've never done anything before but looked at it."

About 40 hours of classroom time is devoted to the gun, Morin said, "and in that 40 hours we expect them to learn it from one end to the other, inside out."

Basically, the students must learn the entire contents of a 300-page technical manual well enough that when they get back to their units they can fix and troubleshoot the guns for all the Bradleys in the unit, Morin said.

Gunnery tables are a series of basic, intermediate and advanced skills that crews must perform to qualify with their Bradley, just like individual soldiers qualify with their M-16 rifles.

Numbered incrementally from one through 12, the tables begin with simple skills like gun manipulation and progress through skills such as firing from a stationary position, engaging targets while moving, operating the vehicle under nuclear, biological and chemical conditions and finally playing out battle scenarios.

During the second and third months of the course, the students are taught how to manage training within the units and develop gunnery programs to best meet the unit's needs.

They learn to lay out a range, plotting firing points and targets and determining where rounds will be coming down.

A soldier works on the 25mm Bushmaster chain gun.

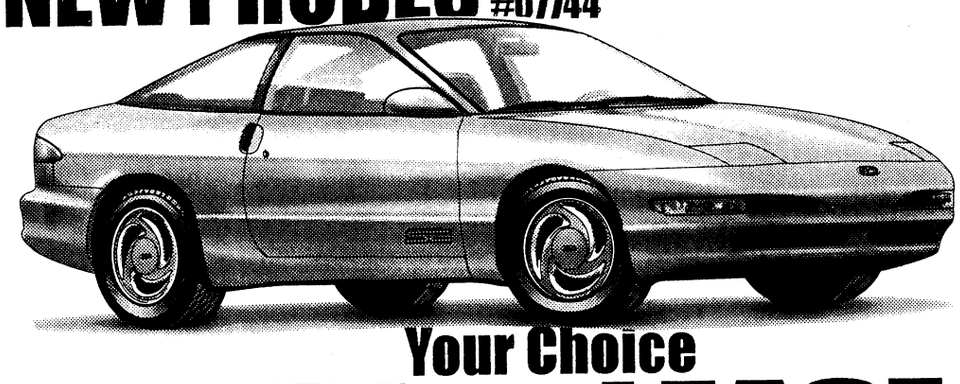
They put together a battalion short-range training program and present it to a "murder board" during the course, much as they will present their plan and objectives to the commander and staff of their unit, based on assessments of how the unit did at their last gunnery exercise.

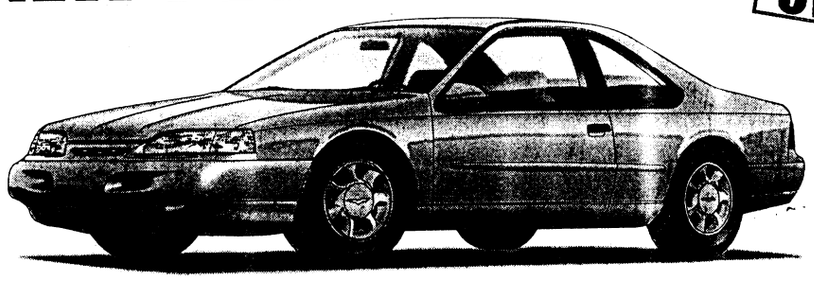
It's important that the students truly know all of the material the course covers, Davis said, because when they go back to their units, their commander depends on them.

"It comes together slowly," said Sgt. 1st Class Oscar Sudduth, a National Guardsman with 155th Infantry in Magnolia, Miss. "They teach you, then you put your hands on it, and it clicks eventually."

"The instruction we've gotten here is outstanding," said Staff Sgt. Arturo D. Martinez, a Marine from 29 Palms, Calif.



His battalion uses Light Armored Vehicles that use the 25 mm gun, and after disassembling and reassembling the gun earlier in the course, Martinez said, "I've been on these guns eight years, and I've learned more in the past week than I did in all that time."



And that was only the beginning.

Marksmanship

2nd Battalion 54th Infantry soldiers aim for excellence

Infantry Training Brigade

The two weeks of basic rifle marksmanship in Infantry One Station Unit Training for Company B, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, ended March 12.

Basic rifle marskmanship is the initial introduction for soldiers to firing the M-16A2 rifle and the basic principle of good rifle marksmanship.

"Although some of the soldiers are apprehensive about firing the M-16A2 for the first time, the majority of the soldiers are quite at ease and even excited about putting rounds down range," said Capt. David R. Smith, commander of Co. B, 2nd Bn., 54th Inf. Regt.

Some soldiers fire a weapon for the first time in their life during rifle marksmanship.

"I was very nervous the first time I fired the M-16A2," said Pvt. 1 Fredrick Rouse, a trainee from 3rd Platoon who had never fired a weapon before. "I still do not feel totally comfortable with the weapon."

Other soldiers have more experience firing weapons prior to joining the service.

"Firing the M-16A2 is hooah," said Andren S. Lilyquist, a trainee from 2nd Platoon. "I enjoyed my time at the ranges."

The degree of small arms proficiency attained by the soldier is largely dependent upon a thorough understanding of the weapon and common application of marksmanship fundamentals.

"BRM training is not designed to make the Initial Entry Training soldier an expert firer," said Sgt. 1st Class Charles R. Jones, the 4th Platoon sergeant, "but rather to establish a sound foundation for the soldier to build upon."

Marksmanship training is a continual process throughout the career of a soldier and trainees continue to learn after they leave OSUT training.

"Soldiers will receive additional training on BRM once he gets to his unit," said Staff Sgt. Ronald E. Cline, a drill sergeant from 4th Platoon.

By day eight, the soldier will have completed the majority of BRM training and is ready to qualify. After successfully qualifying, the solder then does a nuclear, biological, chemical fire; a night fire and begins advanced rifle marksmanship. ARM teaches the soldier to detect and engage moving targets.

"ARM is beneficial training because the soldier would not always have stationary targets to engage and because other posts do not have ARM ranges," said Sgt. 1st Class James T. Fielding, a drill sergeant of 2nd platoon.

Company C, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, provides each company with a BRM committee to assist in training and to run the ranges. The committee for Co. B, 2nd Bn., 58th Inf. Regt., was headed by Sgt. 1st. Class George L. Shepherd.

"All the quality training the soldier receives would not be possible without the help of Co. C, 2nd Bn., 29th Inf. Regt.," Smith said.

Basic trainees tackle leader course

Infantry Training Brigade

Infantry One Station Unit Training soldiers of Company C, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment went through the Leadership Reaction Course Feb. 21.

This was the first time this company trained on the LRC, and the soldiers, as well as the cadre, which is composed of both regular army and Reservists from the 3rd Battalion, 377th Infantry in Oklahoma, got a chance to learn and improve their leadership and communication skills.

The LRC has 18 stations, each with its own specific scenario, equipment, obstacles and unique problem to solve. The course is designed to be negotiated by an infantry squad with the squad leader position rotating at each new station so every soldier has the chance to lead his squad to mission accomplishments.

"The trainees gained valuable experience as leaders as each soldier recieved a mission, formulated a plan of action, briefed his squad and then supervised the execution of the plan, all under a time constraint that demanded the trainees to think fast on their feet," said 2nd Lt. David L. Baker, executive officer of Co. C, 2nd Bn., 58th Inf.

The importance of leadership, teamwork and being a good follower were enforced with the change of position at each station.

"The squads that were best able to take and follow orders and had leaders who incorporated good ideas from their squad members were the squads with the best success rates," Baker said.

Cadre improved their skills in troubleshooting the trainees and bettering the soldiers by offering constructive criticism and positive motivation.

"I think it should be done every cycle," said Sgt. 1st. Class William Smith, a drill sergeant from Co. C, 2nd Bn., 58th Inf. "It builds teamwork and addresses problem-solving with a limited amount of time and resources."

"If you're not as wet as I am, you're wrong," said a first sergeant of the 3rd Bn., 377th Regt., at the end of the day to summarize the difficulty he had negotiating water obstacles.

"In basic training, trainees learn to be soldiers," Baker said. "By incorporating the LRC, it plants a seed of initiative, decision making, and the teamwork necessary to successfully complete future missions."

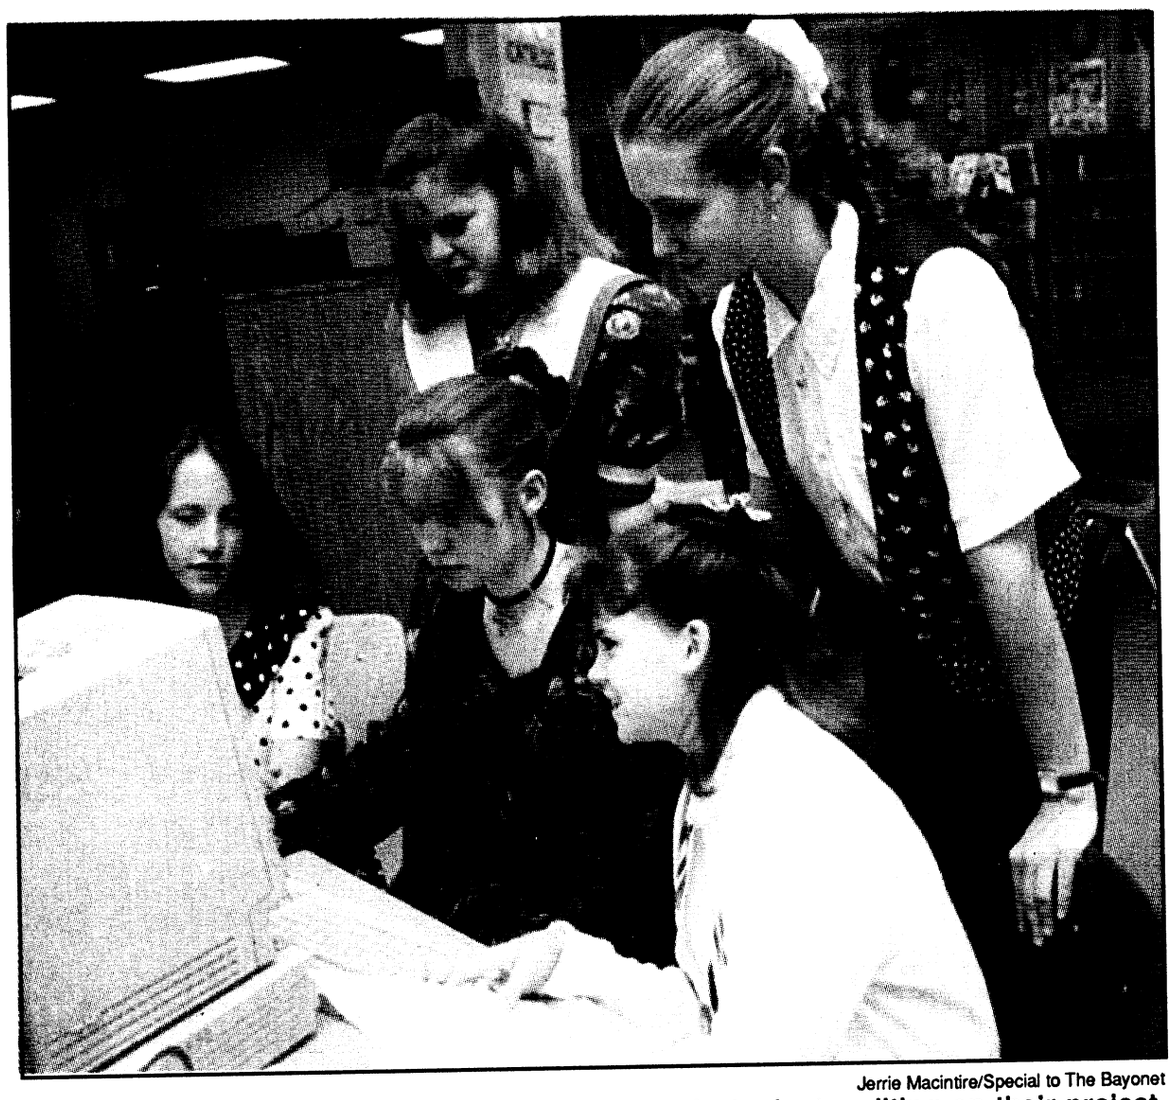
At the invitation of Fort Benning's Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White and his wife, Linda, more than 2,000 individuals gathered on the expansive grounds of Riverside last weekend for the annual spring carnival and egg hunt.

In welcoming the guests to their home, White said, "These grounds are for your enjoyment." Taking his message to heart, the crowd transformed Riverside into a sea of red balloons and neon caps as children donned the free gifts before swarming to enjoy the crisp but sunny spring day.

Families arrived in droves for activities such as crafts, games, puppet shows, train rides and the egg hunt. Special visitors such as Clem the Clown and the Easter Bunny were popular among the younger set, while the older children enjoyed music by the Infantry Band while snacking on cotton candy and soda. Two astro jumps, hot potato races and other activities offered an outlet for the seemingly boundless energy of the young carnival participants.



The American Legion hosted rides on a miniature train, and Debbie and Jim Snoke arranged a puppet show with a theme of "love."

Volunteers from post child development centers coordinated the egg hunt while housing area mayors joined Youth Activities staff to organize the games, activities, snacks and free gifts.

The annual event was sponsored by the Family Support Division of the Directorate of Community Activities in conjunction with TIC Credit Union, SatoTravel, Coca Cola, Commissary vendors and the Army and Air Force Exchange Service.

History Club heads for state competition

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

Jerrie Macintire/Special to The Bayonet

Members of the Faith History Club execute some last-minute editing on their project. From left are Jennifer Camp, Kymber Huff, Tina Turner, Sarah Rhodes (standing) and Lindsay Brooks.

Members of the Faith Middle School History Club took first place in the district competition in La Grange Saturday for their videotaped chronicle of Fort Benning, propelling them toward the state finals April 16.

A team of college professors viewed Faith's video presentation and compared it with other entries, all based on this year's theme of "Georgia and History: People, Places, Time."

Entries in the contest, an annual competition, may take the form of staged performances, media, written papers or visual projects.

The History Club team, which is limited by regulations to five individuals, includes Lindsay Brooks, Jennifer Camp, Sarah Rhodes, Kymber Huff and Tina Turner. Sponsors are Mary Barnett and Lee Strickland.

While compiling their video project, these students interviewed both active duty and retired military individuals up and down the chain of command as well as local historians, politicians, librarians and others who could comment on the history of Fort Benning.

This is the ninth year Faith School has participated in the contest, said Barnett, who said she believes the competition not only stimulates interest in history but also hones writing, editing and interpersonal skills while teaching technological competence with state-of-the-art media equipment.

"The students must learn to use the video equipment, conduct the interviews, write their findings. They must do it all," said Barnett.

This they did, taking more than 200 hours to chronicle the history and impact of Fort Benning on the region's growth, population, and economy. From setting up interviews to discussing questions, writing and editing, the students have spent many evenings and afternoons participating in this extracurricular activity, Barnett said.

Smooth teamwork helped them capture a place in the state finals, the members said. While every team member must understand and contribute to each aspect of the production, individuals do have a job preference.

Turner is the best at organizing materials, members agree, while Rhodes serves as a human computer with facts and figures. Huff is adept at operating the video camera, Camp has a fast and efficient editing style, while Brooks adds interest through her colorful and creative descriptions.

By pooling their skills, the students thoroughly analyzed the history of the post beginning with the depression-era inception of Camp Benning in the area that is now Columbus Square Mall. They followed the development of this military installation to it present day form of award-winning major Army installation. While analyzing the history and impact of the post on the area, the students peppered their video with biographical sketches of relevant individuals including a Medal of Honor recipient and U.S. Sen. Sam Nunn.

Setting a goal and working as a team to achieve it is one purpose of the club, said Glenn Hughes, assistant principal at Faith Middle School.

"They have set their goal, decided their course of action and have worked through it completely," he said.

The students said they believe their video presentation has a chance of going to the nationals, a feat that could earn scholarships for team members and monetary prizes for their schools. Any funds the Fort Benning group might receive would be used to underwrite future history team projects at Faith, the members said.

volunteers

Volunteer Resource Center

The Fort Benning Volunteer Resource Center promotes volunteerism by recruiting potential volunteers, by retaining active volunteers and by recognizing the contribution of volunteers to maintaining the quality of life of soldiers and families.

There are many volunteer opportunities available through the center as follow:

• Volunteers are needed at the Thrift Shop on Tuesdays and Thursdays between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. Individuals will gain retail experience while helping others. Free child care is provided for up to two children.

• Santa's Castle needs volunteers on Wednesdays from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. to help clean and refurbish toys. A volunteer is particularly needed to sew baby doll and Barbie clothes. Child care costs are provided.

• Fort Benning Schools is looking for a volunteer lifeguard and water safety instructor to assist in the Adaptive Aquatics Program for exceptional children to be March 31, April 14, 21 and 28 and May 4, 12, 19 and 26 from 12:15 to 3 p.m.

• Sayers Memorial Library needs volunteers to assist with shelving books, data entry and story time for children. Also, volunteers with experience in activity program planning, dramatic reading and counseling are encouraged to participate in the Multiple Reading Program this summer. Child care costs will be provided.

Volunteers are needed in each housing area to assist the community mayor. Persons interested can contact a community life center.

• The Public Affairs Office needs an editorial assistant to assist the print section in publishing The Bayonet.

This product supports Army families through disseminating community news and command information to all Fort Benning families in The Bayonet newspaper, delivered free to all on-post housing units and by subscription to those living off post.

Interested persons must have typing ability, and knowledge of computer word processing systems is preferred but not required. Good communication skills and command of the English language are required. Education or experience in print journalism is preferred but not required. Also, the individual must be familiar with the Army and Fort Benning.

For more information, call 545-2201.

• The Volunteer Resource Center is located in Building 359, Family Unit Network Center, and it is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p .m. Persons interested in volunteering can visit or call Olga MacLean, installation volunteer coordinator, at 545-5602.

Other volunteer announcements are as follows:

• The Rape Crisis Intervention Program is looking for volunteers. Training and child-care costs are provided.

• The First Steps Program needs volunteers to mentor and assist new mothers during the first few days or weeks after the birth of their children. Training and child-care costs are provided.

• Big Brothers and Big Sisters of Columbus needs adults to share love, support and time with children from single-parent families. For more information, call 327-3760.

Odyssey team wins regional competition

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

A creative theatrical presentation detailing a new theory on the extinction of the dodo bird gave members of Odyssey of the Mind Team from Faith Middle School a solid victory in the Southwest Georgia Regional Competition Saturday.

The team scored 331 points out of a possible 350, excelling in both the spontaneous problem solving activity and prearranged exhibition to establish a substantial first-place win in the regional contest. The team, under the direction of sponsors Cindy Givens and Libbie Kurinec, will compete in the state finals April 23.

The seven middle-schoolers, competing in division II in the category of Furs, Fins and Feathers, performed an original seven-minute skit about the demise of the dodo bird based on historical accounts of Portuguese seamen who annihilated the island dwelling species in 1680.

Adding a creative twist, the adolescents embellished their account with a time machine and a politically savvy dodo bored by life and searching "for more than a beakfull of grubs." Joined by two sidekicks, a naive potbellied fellow avian and a fuzzy lemur, the trio plotted a successful counterattack against the hungry Portuguese from the future.

Destiny, however, could not be denied as everyone tragically died from bad breath caused by sampling the time travelers' garlic talisman. Too late, the trio realized this spicy plant had a fatal side effect even though it "does not cause cancer in laboratory animals."

The skit, performed with a carefully crafted stage set depicting the island of Dumbfoundland, earned full marks from contest judges for use of humor and animal/human interaction, two essential categories in the scoring.

The Faith team members are Tom Wasner, John Davis, Jennifer Grant, Steven Wojdakowski, Shannon Goldsby, Meghan Ferriter and Correy Hudson.

Volunteers, mostly from the education field, served as judges for this annual contest designed to challenge students and promote creativity. This is the eighth year Fort Benning has participated in the event.

"Faith Middle School has consistently been a world class contender," said Kurinec, who specializes in coaching the students in verbal skills and spontaneous problem solving. Givens is the technical expert, specializing in methodical modes of inventiveness. Together, the two educators have coached a number of world class Odyssey of the Mind teams at Faith, including world champion teams in 1988 and 1991 and world runner up in 1992.

Other Fort Benning Schools have participated in the past as well as in this year's competition. This years participants in divsion I are:

Dexter School: Gina Bastone, Kerith Burke, Clayton Byrd, Nick Cillo, Joshua Forrester, Valerie Liermann, and Jessica Obermyer, coached by Jeri Jones and Linda Turner.

Stowers School: Jonathan Cagle, Kristina Chavis, Rudy Harris, Christina Holder, Elizabeth Marks, John Marrero, and Elisa Sammons, coached by Susan Lapp and Steve Pate.

White School: Hugo Apellaniz, Marcus McKindra, Marcus Miller, Miranda Melton, Katie Corsette, Jonathan Pignato, and Dana Patterson, coached by Joyce King and Melody Vaillant.

Wilson School: Desiree Brewer, Demetris Harris, Paul Hicks, Kim Lee and Mike Veneziani, coached by Kim Pavelski and Barbara Summers.

Students learn 'rocket science'

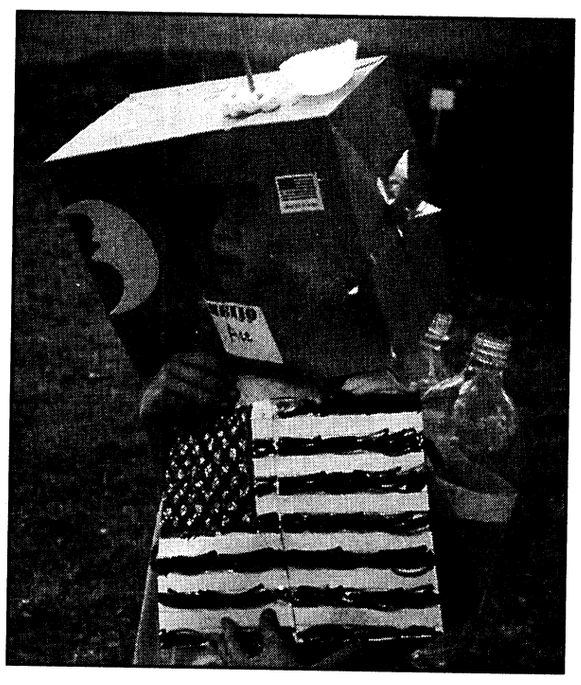
By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

First-graders at White School carefully glued streamers, stars and shiny foil to empty two liter plastic soda bottles; it wasn't rocket science, but...

...Wait a minute; it WAS rocket science. As part of their studies on space, these youngsters worked in teams to design and launch rockets fashioned from plastic bottles and propelled by an experimental fuel of air and water. A bicycle pump with a special coupling device provided the air pressure needed to achieve liftoff.



The space engineers tested a variety of "fuel mixes;" each team used math skills to determine what ratio of water to air its rocket would test. Colorful rockets with names like Star Fox, Saturn 3 and U.S.S. Star provided children with a hands-on sequel to their study of space, said Janet Wynn, principal.

The entire school is studying space, and recently students as well as some parents had lessons in Star Lab, Fort Bennings' portable planetarium.

"Our whole school started the space studies at the same time. The rocket launch is another hands-on ways of exploring the subject," said Wynn.

In keeping with the galactic theme, the youngsters donned space helmets of unique design in preparation for the liftoff.

Launch advisers Cynthia Kenimer, Ann Lucas and Jane Pride, all first-grade teachers, hoped to peak interest in aerodynamics and space while enhancing math skills as their students estimated the heights of each liftoff. One popular theory was confirmed as students observed that a rocket filled with just air doesn't travel far. Though scientific data is still incomplete, the young engineers seemed to agree three parts water to one part air is an ideal formula. By using this fuel with a healthy dose of air pressure via the bike pump, a rocket can travel so high and fast it can shed its decorative foil skin at the moment of launch and delight the visiting crowd of younger siblings, parents and school officials.

Jerrie Macintire/Special to The Bayonet
Kindergartner John Pelton models his rocket pack and astronaut helmet.

One young mathematician estimated a rocket with an equal mixture of water and air could travel 30 feet into the atmosphere; he estimated a mixture of three parts water to one part air would send a rocket from 50 to 60 feet.

Despite gusty winds, the launch was conducted as scheduled and was dubbed "a complete success" by Wynn despite the fact that the ground crew sustained minor inconveniences due to leaking fuel.

After a busy afternoon of test flights, the aspiring astronauts retreated to their "space pods," or classrooms, for snacks of Moon Pies and Tang, which they sipped from plastic bags with straws in the manner of experienced space explorers.

School of the Americas hosts pizza party

By Devon Kerbow
School of the Americas

A pizza party was hosted at McCarthy Hall March 24 for all School of the Americas personnel who were assigned to jump that day onto Fryar Drop Zone.

Twenty-five pizzas and soft drinks were supplied by the Fort Benning Unit Ministry Team, said Capt. Anibal Cruz-Baez, SOA's chaplain.

Each unit's chaplain has to plan his or her own party, Cruz-Baez said.

He said he planned this one because after people go through the experience of jumping, they're tired, dirty and just want to leave. Cruz-Baez said he thought this would be a good chance to build friendships, morale and to promote spiritual cohesiveness.

Because of poor visibility, the jump on Thursday never took place. But that didn't stop the pizza party from proceeding as planned.

"It was great," said Edwin Diaz, a staff Sergeant in SOA's resident training division. "It seemed like everyone enjoyed the pizza."

YOUNG INVENTORS

Students put creative genius to work

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

Jonathan Swift once said, "Necessity is the mother of invention," but sometimes a mother's necessity leads to a child's invention.

Take youngster Natasha Lopez for example; her mother was constantly complaining about smudged eyeglasses and the fact that washing left water streaks and drying with tissue left lint behind. As part of the "Invent America" program, this Dexter School student devised a miniature squeegee device to help her mother with smudged glasses.

Lopez's invention was just one of many at the school displayed last week as part of the national kindergarten through eighth grade program designed to promote ingenuity and creativity.

Some other creations included a changeable Velcro bow; an umbrella designed for better coverage; a compact, nonskid art easel; an easy reader to hold book pages and provide light on windy days; and a trash can that beeps when full — another invention designed to help a mother cope with a common problem. In this case, the problem was a constantly overflowing garbage pail into which family members stuffed "just one more little thing," said inventer Tamara Ramos. The sharp beeping noise will discourage overfilling the can and "will beep until someone empties it," said Ramos, who won the competition for fifth grade.

The children must identify a problem, devise a solution, and show how it works and how they made it

Joyce Flatt, program coordinator, said she likes the challenge the Invent America program offers.

"This program presents a very good problem-solving activity for children," said Flatt.

The children must identify a problem, devise a solution, and show how it works and how they made it, she said. They must also conduct research to see if their invention is unique, she added.

Tri boards, or three-panel displays, showed the problem children sought to resolve, the research they conducted, and the solution they devised.

Invent America is designed to prepare students to face the challenges of an increasingly technical lifestyle.

Launched in 1987 by George Bush, the program provides materials and also sponsors national and regional conferences to promote the spirit of ingenuity and inventiveness to the future workforce of America.

Winners from each grade level at Dexter will compete with others across the state to represent Georgia in the regional competition. Regional winners are invited to Washington, D.C., in July for a host of festivities culminating with the announcement of the nine national winners.

Invent America is sponsored and administered by the nonprofit United States Patent Model Foundation.

Dexter winners in descending order are:

First grade: Laura Logsdon, Sara Yackley, Holly Dee Moore and Jennifer Whitten.

Second grade: Kortni Miller, Jasmine Mark, Torey Corsette and Christopher Brennan.

Third grade: Micki Jewell, Courtney Storey, Jasmine Wilkins and Jessica Hardy.

Fourth grade: Aaron Wilkins, James Bell, Kevin Nix and Michelle Pizarro.

Fifth grade: Tammy Ramos, Nick Cillo, Jessica Obermeyer and David Hessenius.

British Warrant Officer John Lonsdale stands in front of a Bradley Fighting Vehicle.

British warrant officer enjoys training in the U.S.

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

One look at the "funny camouflage" of his uniform and the British flag patch on the shoulder lapel, and you know he's not an American soldier.

On his wrist, a watch-like leather band with a gold crown insignia on a red felt backing identifies him as a warrant officer 2 in the British infantry.

At the Bradley Instructor Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, however, Warrant Officer 2 John Lonsdale is addressed as "sergeant major." His uniform may be different than the ones of the people he works with, but there the difference ends.

Lonsdale's British rank has no exact equivalent in the U.S. Army — he's something like an E-8 and one-half, he said.

"Back home I'm a company sergeant major ... we essentially function as first sergeants," he said.

Here, he serves as the training warrant officer for the Bradley Instructor Company, which runs the Bradley Leaders Course, Mastergunner course, Infantry Pre-Command Course and the Bradley Fighting Vehicle portion of 11M One Station Unit Training.

Lonsdale handles everything from training resources, like vehicles and supplies, to monitoring training to ensure the right things are being taught, he said.

He is currently working on developing an armored fighting vehicle recognition package, which consists of write-ups on how to recognize different vehicles at distances of up to 2,000 meters and will be incorporated into the curriculums of the courses the company teaches.

The position Lonsdale fills is a job set for a British exchange officer. The program operates as an exchange; a British soldier comes here, and a sergeant from the 29th is sent to the gunnery school in England.

Lonsdale, who has been here about seven months, found out about this position while he was stationed in Germany.

"The job came open for a school's gunner, which is a bit like a mastergunner, to spend two years with the Bradley Instructor Company. I jumped at the opportunity," Lonsdale said.

While the British army uses an armored vehicle called the warrior, not the Bradley, the two vehicles are similar, Lonsdale said. The main difference is in the main guns; the warrior uses a 30mm quick firing gun as opposed to the Bradley's 25mm chain gun.

> "I'm never bored."
> — John Lonsdale
> British Warrant Officer

Except for minor differences, he said, he finds the two armies essentially the same.

"Both armies are very similar in terms of structure and things we do, so there's no surprises," he said.

And as far as the work is concerned, he said, both armies are the same. "It's nose down and the job has got to be accomplished, there's none of this 'well, it's half past four, I'm off now.' "

He said he enjoys the diversity of training and tasks to accomplish in his job here. "I'm never bored," he said.

While there are many other British and foreign exchange officers at Fort Benning, Lonsdale is the only exchange officer out with a unit. He enjoys the interaction with soldiers, dealing with the companies and the soldiers on the ground, he said.

"Knowing the way these guys operate here will be a benefit when I get back to my battalion," he said. "I can incorporate some of the things I've picked up."

Meanwhile, though, Lonsdale is looking forward to more opportunities to "go on holiday." He, his wife, Susan, and 4-year-old son, Jamie, have already been to Washington D.C., Jamaica and Florida, and are looking forward to trips to Disney World and Mexico.

"We're having good fun," Lonsdale said. "We're getting an opportunity to meet new people and travel to places we wouldn't have ordinarily traveled to."

Family member publishes book

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

The wife of a retired soldier has just published her first book, "Quizzes for the Bible Traveler," a volume she said she hopes will encourage interest in the Bible.

Barbara Elmore said she felt inspired to begin her book about five years ago after a lifetime of writing poetry for her own enjoyment.

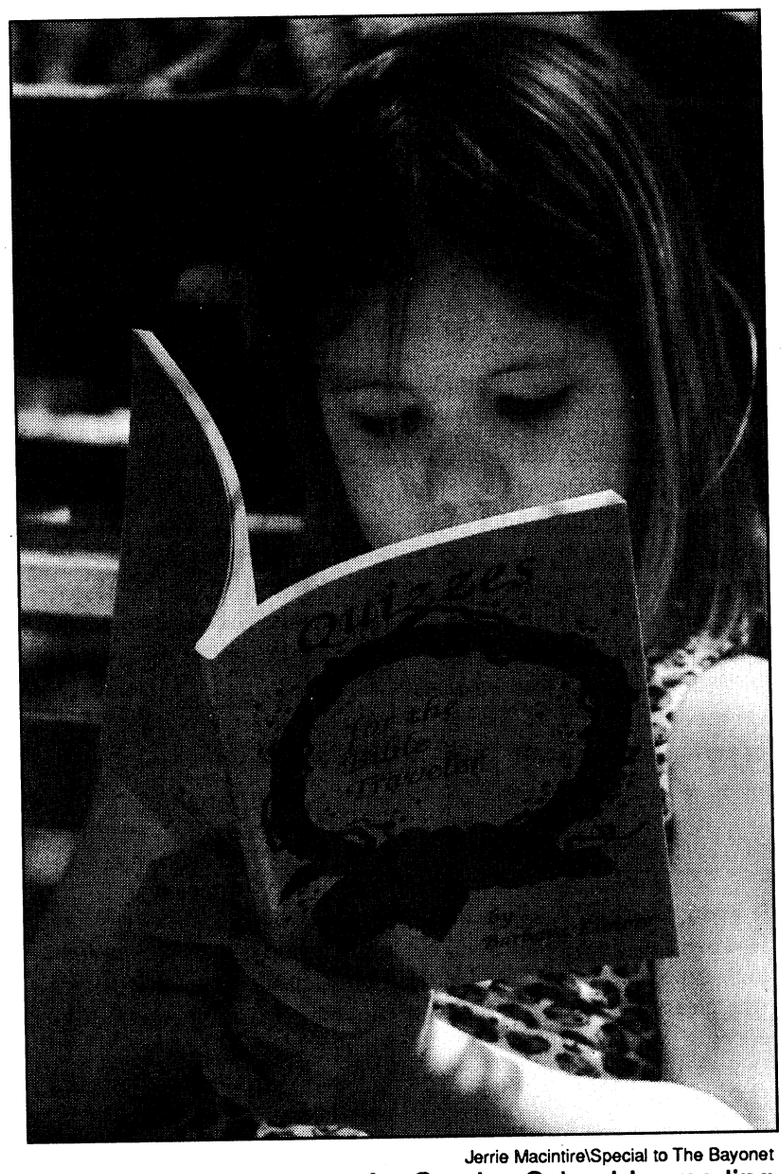
Her love of poetry is reflected in the style of the text, as she arranged part of the volume in the form of poetry and part as a question and answer format. Elmore was quick to say that "Quizzes for the Bible Traveler" is no substitute for the Bible.

"The Bible sells itself," said Elmore, but she hopes her book will encourage others, especially young people, to explore the inspired words of the Lord.

Elmore's book is divided into three parts: A Rhyme Through Time, a fun and poetic way of exploring people and events in the Bible; People of Purpose, which highlights individuals; and Down Through the Years, a historic review.

For Elmore, writing was "always a pleasure" as she traveled with her husband of 27 years, Joe L., to various Army posts around the globe.

When her sons Patrick and Christopher were young, Elmore used writing as a creative outlet. She also was involved with volunteer work. After her husband retired in the Fort Benning area in May, Elmore accepted a position as a child development program assistant at the McGraw Child Development Center.



"I have always loved children," she said, and feels she has a special heart for adolescents, whom she said she believes are often misunderstood.

In addition to working in child care, Elmore said she enjoys her position as a Sunday school teacher, a task she has performed since 1968.

The response to her book has been "better than I could have imagined," said Elmore, who is pleased the text seems to be stimulating interest in the Bible.

She is planning two sequels, "Quizzes for the Bible Explorer," and "Quizzes for the Bible Searcher."

Her book is distributed through Philadelphia, but local individuals may order copies for $5 by calling 685-0561.

Life is shaped by POWER

By Robert Thompson
Chaplains' Family Life Center

reflections

On a Saturday afternoon two years ago, I saw a stage production of the children's book, "Charlotte's Web." The story tells of Wilbur, a runt pig who is sent to a farm to fatten up for slaughter. The other barnyard animals know the farmer's intent for Wilbur, but they offer little more than muted sympathy. Charlotte, however, vows to hep him. She is a spider.

Small and delicate, she seems to be a thoroughly useless prospect to save a creature thousands of times her size. But during the night she spins on her web a message, "SOME PIG."

The next morning the farmer is amazed at the words and at the one that comes later, "TERRIFIC." He enters Wilbur in the county fair, where he wins a special prize. His future life is secure, but Charlotte's efforts have cost her: she dies at the fair.

Life is shaped by power. There are several kinds of power. Three years ago, an allied military force halted the spread of an evil ruler. Months before that, however, the world watched, waited and wondered if he would be stopped — and at what cost.

Life is shaped by power. My grandmother was widowed at age 19 with an infant daughter in the great flu epidemic of 1919 to 1920. Later in the century, scientists developed vaccines against influenza, as well as polio, tuberculosis and other dreaded diseases that killed thousands in times past. The recent cholera outbreak in Peru reminds us that the struggle against germs continues.

Life is shaped by power. Yesterday and today are power-shapers, too. We might not notice because they have nothing to do with military or medicine or any other form of influence we commonly acknowledge. A Charlotte-kind of power, this Thursday and Friday might slip right by us.

Yesterday was Maundy Thursday. This is a dark and awkward title for a special day for Christians worldwide; it always falls on the Thursday before Easter. It recalls the last meal that Jesus of Nazareth ate on a Thursday with his close followers.

That meal was already special to those men that night. For hundreds of years, their people have eaten this springtime feast to remember their divine rescue from Egypt. Full or symbol and ritual, it reminded them of the slavery they suffered — the slavery from which God delivered them.

When Jesus picked up the bread and the cup that night, he gave new meaning to their freedom. His followers didn't seem to catch on.

Probably because they were not ready for the kind of power Jesus was offering them. When he showed them his offer on Friday, they weren't ready for it then, either. They scattered like frightened forest animals.

Life is shaped by power, power of several kinds. Some like military and medicine, we commonly acknowledge. Others, like that of Christ and his barnyard heir, Charlotte, can slip right by us. The ancient events honored yesterday and today form our yearly reminder that the most unpopular event became the most potent kind of all.

Traditions show history of Easter

By George G. Gonzalez
USAIC Chaplains' Office

reflections

As far as we know, Easter originated as a celebration to honor the Teutonic goddess of spring, Eostre. She returned each year to bring spring back to the people after the long gloomy months of winter. As a result, many of the customs we observe at Easter are not based on religious traditions but are carried down from medieval and ancient times by legends and folklore.

The egg remains as one of the most widely observed symbols of Easter. The tradition of hiding Easter eggs to be discovered Easter morning started long ago when a poor mother in Germany dyed some hard-cooked eggs as gifts for her children during a famine. She built a little nest in the yard as a hiding place and tucked the eggs inside. The next morning, when the children discovered the nest, a little rabbit jumped out of it and hopped away. The notion that the bunny had laid the eggs was a charming idea. The Easter Bunny then hopped its way from Germany over to France and Belgium and, finally, to the United States.

Little children used to make nests of straw and sticks on Easter Eve. They waited for the Easter Bunny to fill them with eggs, much as youngsters today hang their stockings for Santa Claus to fill them with small presents. During the Middle Ages, colored eggs were used as gifts in Egypt and Persia. Servants were given the eggs by their masters as rewards for being loyal and dutiful. After the Crusades, this custom spread into Europe. According to one legend, King Edward I of England (who ruled from 1272 to 1307) once ordered 450 eggs to be boiled, colored and presented to his servants on Easter morning as gifts for their faithfulness.

Another reason why eggs were so popular at Easter was because the Christians who observed the Lenten season were not supposed to include meat or eggs in their diet. During the 40-day period of Lent (between Ash Wednesday and Easter), the eggs laid by ducks, geese and chickens accumulated. To keep them from spoiling, they were brought out to be hard-cooked and colored for decorations and gifts, or were eaten as a special treat on Easter Sunday.

Eggs were also used in contests. Children chased hard-cooked eggs down a hill or slope. The eggs that reached the bottom without cracking were called the "victory eggs." The first child who found one of them was given the grand prize of 101 hard-boiled eggs.

Eggs and flower bulbs are the symbols of life. Spring is the miracle of life. Easter for all of us means Resurrection and life. Life is the most precious commodity in the entire creation. Happy Easter! Happy life!

community care

By Ken Franklin
Martin Army Community Hospital

Question: I see the families of School of the Americas' soldiers at Martin Army Community Hospital all the time. Are they getting free care? Are they taking spaces that push out retiree families?

Answer: No, School of the Americas' families are not pushing out any American families. Health care for our allied friends is a special case that costs the hospital very little.

Foreign soldiers and their families come to the hospital's Family Practice Clinic for their care, usually with an escort. When they check in, a special sheet is attached to their chart. The physician completes this sheet much like a civilian doctor would fill out a bill. The patient's government then pays that bill.

If the soldier or family member needs other specialty care, the consults and procedures are billed using a similar system.

School of the Americas' families are not assigned to a specific doctor in Family Practice. They take up no spaces in the Gateway To Care program. Their care is an additional duty that is not included when figuring physician capacity.

Martin Army Community Hospital considers this care to be an important courtesy. Much of the benefit of the School of the Americas comes from extending goodwill and demonstrating the advantages of our system and our military to other countries.

With essentially zero cost, and no inconvenience to American beneficiaries, Martin Army Community Hospital can extend the best health care system in the world to our guests. Not a bad bargain for everyone.

Occupational Therapy plans open house

Event set at clinic April 5 starting at 1 p.m.; therapists, assistants to educate public

Martin Army Community Hospital

The Occupational Therapy Clinic at Martin Army Community Hospital will have an open house Tuesday from 1 to 3:30 p.m.

The open house is intended to educate the public about the role occupational therapy plays in a patient's total recovery.

Everyone who receives occupational therapy services at MACH has a program that is individually tailored by a staff of professionals and a variety of technological equipment.

The occupational therapists' goal is for the client to become as independent as possible in doing the daily tasks that are the most important to him or her.

Some sample cases that the occupational therapy staff may encounter might be a teen-ager who receives a spinal cord injury in an auto accident, a young mother who is hospitalized with depression, a construction worker who is off the job with recurring back pain, or an elderly widower who refuses to eat or leave the house after a stroke.

In each of these situations, the individual can benefit from occupational therapy to regain independence and function as a productive member of society.

That could be as simple as brushing teeth, or as complex as returning to a demanding job.

Each therapist has an understanding of how the human body and mind function together and how illness affects that function.

Occupational therapists enter the field with either a bachelor's or master's degree, and occupational therapy assistants have an associate's degree.

Each staff member completes a period of supervised clinical practice and passes a national examination.

Nearly every state licenses or regulates the practice of occupational therapy.

The public is invited to the open house.

dr. fit

Q: A friend of mine is competing in the Boeselager contest in Germany during May. What is it?

A: The Boeselager contest is a competition among the NATO allies and the confederation of the former Soviet states. It involves the cavalry with a light armored reconnaissance patrol course, night fighting to return to friendly forces, enemy identification, 3.5 km cross-country-run, small arms live firing, general combat tasks and coordination with Army aviation to control enemy movement. It is an annual event and it takes place in Germany. The U.S. Army traditionally does well and is again expected to do well in the May competition.

Q: I have heard that pasta is a "perfect food." Is this true?

If there is a perfect food, it is pasta. One cup of dried, cooked pasta contains about 200 calories, one gram of fat and less than than 20 milligrams of sodium. It is low in cholesterol, high in complex carbohydrates and B vitamins and it even provides some protein. However, it is important to avoid high-fat sauces, such as alfredo with cream and butter. A half cup serving of alfredo sauce can contain 17 grams or 80 percent fat (153 of the 190 calories). Use tomato, pesto and light sauces and vegetables to create a primavera.

Q: Is it true that I can improve my aerobic training through weight training?

A: Only aerobic exercise that requires large muscles, rhythmic movement and breathing in large volumes of air will improve fitness. This exercise must be done for an extended period, such as 20 minutes. However, weight training will enhance the aerobic training by increasing the contribution of muscle to aerobic training.

In a study conducted in Hamilton, Ontario, those exercisers who mixed aerobic and weight training, exercised harder and longer on exercise bicycles, treadmills and stair climbers than those who did not do aerobic training.

How To Recycle

Post housing residents may place recyclable materials in brown plastic bins for weekly curbside pickup.

Here is a list of the items that can and cannot be placed in the bin for recycling.

• Glass: Clear green or brown bottles and jars including soda, beer or liquor containers may be placed in the bin. All caps must be removed before placing the bottles in the bin. Glass items such as light bulbs, window or automobile glass, mirrors and drinking glasses cannot be placed in the bin.

• Metal: All metal cans (the labels do not have to be removed) can be placed in the bin after rinsing them. Metal foils, such as aluminum foil, cannot be placed in the bin.

• Plastic: Soda bottles, milk containers and water jugs can be recycled but the caps must be removed and the bottles crushed by stepping on them before placing them in the bin. Styrofoam, plastic bags and caps from recyclable bottles and containers cannot be placed in the bin.

• Paper: Newspaper can be placed in the bin if it is bundled or placed in a brown paper bag and placed besidf the bin at the curb on collection day. All glossy paper, such as that used in catalogs, brochures and advertisements, cannot be recycled. Magazines are not acceptable at this time.

Trash and recycle pickup schedule

Beginning the week of April 11, household trash and recycling will be collected once a week on the same day. If there is recyclable material mixed in with the trash, or if there is no recycling bin next to the trash can, the trash will not be picked up until the following week, or until recyclables are separated.

ESPN prepares for baseball's new season

By Matt Meachem
Tribune Media Services

Major League Baseball opens a new season this week with a new divisional alignment, a new round of playoffs and a new television deal.

SPOTLIGHT

The 1994 season begins Sunday night on ESPN when the St. Louis Cardinals travel to Riverfront Stadium to battle the Cincinnati Reds in baseball's first-ever Sunday season opener. Jon Miller and analyst Joe Morgan return for their fifth year as commentators on the cable network's exclusive "Sunday Night Baseball" telecasts.

Miller, a 24-year broadcast veteran and current radio play-by-play voice of the Baltimore Orioles, is not convinced that the changes made in the off season will help the game.

Perhaps the game's most noticeable change is a divisional realignment that has added a Central Division to each league. The American League East now consists of the Orioles, Red Sox, Tigers, Yankees and defending world-champion Blue Jays. The AL Central includes the White Sox, Indians, Royals, Brewers and Twins. The Angels, A's, Mariners and Rangers make up the AL West.

In the National League, the Braves, Marlins, Expos, Mets and Phillies are members of the NL East. The Cubs, Reds, Astros, Pirates and Cardinals form the NL Central. The Rockies, Dodgers, Padres and Giants round out the NL West.

Roberto Kelly of the Cincinnati Reds

"I'm against realignment," says Miller. "I think that, although there are some good reasons for doing it, the law of unintended consequences may rear its ugly head."

What: Baseball season opener
When: Sunday, 8 p.m on ESPN

According to Miller, one of those problems is that baseball has kept a balanced schedule, with teams playing roughly the same number of games against each team in their league.

"This season, teams in the Western Divisions in both leagues will play only 39 games within their division and 123 outside the division," he says. "If they keep that balanced schedule, you could have a division where a team plays below .500 and wins. It won't look good if some team wins a division at 77-85."

One obvious result of realignment is an extra round of playoffs. The new divisional series features the three division winners and a wild-card team (the second-place team with the best record) in a best-of-five series. The winners of those series meet in the League Championship Series, with the winner advancing to the World Series.

"One consequence of this extra tier of playoffs," said Miller, "is that they will further erode World Series ratings by adding more postseason games and further delaying the start of the Series. Five-game series were more compelling, plus — with a best-of-five playoff — the World Series could still begin a week after the season ended. Now, the World Series starts almost three weeks after the end of the regular season."

U.S. senator speaks at School of the Americas

By Caejar A. Cox
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The School of the Americas trains South and Central American soldiers and officers in infantry tactics and counter-drug operations. While at Fort Benning, U.S. Sen. Sam Nunn conducted a press conference in SOA's John B. Amos Library and explained how he felt about the school and its mission.

Watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday for highlights of the press conference.

U.S. Army rangers in Mogadishu, Somalia, as part of Operation Restore Hope experienced on Oct. 3 the most fierce fighting since Vietnam. The mission left six rangers dead and many of the Company B, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment soldiers wounded.

USAIC-TV Schedule

Fort Benning Today: 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 1:30 to 2 p.m.
Specials: 2 to 4:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 4:30 p.m. to 8:30 a.m.

Watch "Fort Benning Today" to see the rangers' recent awards ceremony conducted on post.

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel announces post events and post movie listings, and it offers free classified advertisements on "Fort Benning Update," a community information service.

If you live on post and subscribe to Fort Benning Cable, you can watch USAIC-TV on Channel 3, 24 hours a day. Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:26, 7:56, 8:26 and 8:56 on WLTZ-TV 38.
