After the colors were put in place, members of the unit would move and take control of the ground between them and the colors.

One day the color bearer moved farther ahead than he had ever done before. Many of the men in his unit shouted for him to move back closer to the unit. The color bearer refused to move the colors and shouted to his unit, "Come up to the colors."

"Colors" is a kind of standard. Therefore, when I read this story, I thought about coming up to a different kind of standard. The kind of standards I thought of were those that govern our conduct and performance.

The Army sets forth these standards in regulations such as the Code of Conduct, the Professional Army Ethic and Uniform Wear and Appearance.

God has set forth standards in Scripture. II Timothy 3:16-17 (KJV) tells us, "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works."

The standards we are called on to live as soldiers are not always easy to achieve. For example, it takes discipline to maintain physical fitness to pass the Army Physical Fitness Test. It takes continuous training to be combat ready.

The same type of discipline and continuous training is necessary to maintain the standards God has set for us.

Our temptation, much like the soldiers in the earlier story, is to move the standards back in order to make ourselves comfortable. Our challenge, much like that given by the color bearer to his unit, is to come up to the standards.

Those standards, whether given by God or expected by the Army, make our life meaningful and worthwhile.

community care

Community Care Corner

by LTC Ken Franklin, MD

Question: Why is it so hard for Martin Amy Hospital to find more family practice doctors? Aren't they just general practitioners?

Answer: That sentiment, though often heard, is frustrating to many family physicians. Although many doctors can claim to be providing family care, family medicine is a specialty with stringent requirements. All Army family physicians are members of that specialty.

There are several similarities between family medicine and other "specialties:"

• Specialists must undergo two to six years of residency after medical school to be certified in the specialty. Family physicians must complete three years of residency. Martin Army Community Hospital has a residency program, with 30 doctors undergoing training at any one time.

This is the reason why some Martin Army family physicians are not in the clinic every day; they are undergoing training part of the week.

• Specialists must take a certifying board examination to prove their knowledge and competency. Family Physicians not only must take such a board; they must retake it every seven years to show they have kept up with medical advances.

• Specialists have a professional organization that helps provide continuing medical education. The American Academy of Family Physicians provide such services, and requires members to attend 50 hours of training per year or lose their membership.

What is so special about family physicians?

First, they receive extensive training in counseling and interviewing skills to help recognize and treat interpersonal problems in families.

Second, they receive training in the most common illnesses of all other specialties. This enables the family physicians to treat more patients without referral, and to act on the recommendations of consultants without repeated expensive visits to the other specialist's office.

Third, they are unique in knowing the effect of illness throughout the entire family. The spouse of the alcoholic, the child of the Alzheimer's patient, the parents of a child with cancer — all can have their health affected by the illness of their loved one. Family physicians search for and treat these problems, in addition to the person with the primary disease.

Family physicians are a relatively new, but important, specialty. They have much to offer the military community, which is why they are in such demand.

Send your family medical care questions to Community Care, Martin Army Hospital, ATTN: HSXB-F, Fort Benning Ga. 31905.

ask the judge

Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Q: I need to borrow some money to meet substantial unexpected expenses. I have heard that "home equity line of credit" loans are at low interest rates, and are tax deductible. Is this a good way to borrow?

A: A home equity line is a revolving credit in which your home serves as collateral for the money. You are approved for a specific amount of credit, your credit "limit," which is the maximum amount you can borrow. This amount is usually based upon the unused equity in your home. For example, if you have a $60,000 home and owe a $40,000 mortgage, you have $20,000 equity in the home. If, as is the usual practice, the lender will lend only up to 80 percent of the value, $48,000 is the maximum amount of debt they allow on the house.

The interest rate is variable. For example, the rate might be quoted as "Prime plus 2 percent." This indicates that the rate of interest will be the same as the published prime rate index which appears in financial sections of newspapers, plus two percent. The rate changes as the prime rate goes up or down. If prime is 6 percent, your loan rate would be 8 percent.

Comparing the line of credit to a second mortgage, the most significant difference is that the second mortgage offers a fixed rate of interest. Costs are a factor in any mortgage. You will be assessed certain charges in getting the equity line: a property appraisal fee, an up-front charge for the loan called "points," fees for attorneys, title search, mortgage preparation and filing, title insurance, and perhaps an application fee.

If you are in the market for credit, a home equity plan may be best for you, but weigh the costs against the benefits carefully before committing yourself. Compare plans and select the one with the best combination of initial fees, interest rates, and repayment terms.

If you would like to discuss this with an attorney, call the Legal Assistance Office at 545-3282 for an appointment.

Feline leukemia leading cause of death in cats

Veterinary Services Division

pet tips

Feline leukemia virus is the most common cause of serious illness and death in domestic cats. Nearly 1 million cats a year die from the virus. There is no cure for it, but precautions can be taken to limit the chances that a cat will catch the disease from other cats.

The virus causes one of two problems. The first is cancer. About 25 percent of the infected cats get tumors or leukemia (cancer of the blood). The second problem is a lowered resistance, which keeps the cat from fighting off other diseases.

In these cases, cats can have skin problems, mouth infections, colds, poor wound healing and anemia (not enough blood cells). Most cats that get the virus die within three years.

The virus is spread between cats by licking and biting each other or by a mother cat giving it to her kittens.

Because the virus has to be spread from one cat to the next, a cat is a lower risk if it lives in a house by itself, does not go outside where it might run into other cats, and has a mother who did not have the virus.

For cats that are outside, in a multiple cat household or that come from an unknown background, the risk for the virus is higher and they should be vaccinated against the disease. Two vaccines are given three weeks apart and then a booster is given yearly. Kittens can be started on FeLV vaccines as young as 9 weeks of age.

Testing for the virus is recommended but not required to get vaccines. However, if the cat already has the virus, the vaccines will not do any good. Testing and vaccines are available at the Fort Benning Veterinary Treatment and at most off-post veterinary clinics.

The Fort Benning Veterinary Treatment facility is located in Building 265 on 10th Mountain Division Road. The hours are 8 to 11:30 a.m. and 12:45 to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday (closed the last working day of the month for inventory) and the phone numbers are 545-4444 and 545-1127.

Teach children 'safe walking'

Auto Club South

More than 30 percent of all pedestrian fatalities and injuries in Georgia in 1993 involved children 14 years of age and under, according to the Georgia State Patrol.

Officials at AAA Auto Club South urge motorists to remember that now school is out of session for the summer, to be aware of the increase in numbers of children playing near or on roadways.

Parents can do their part in keeping their children safe by teaching, demonstrating and practicing the "Seven Tips for Safe Walking."

The seven tips for safe walking include:

1. Keep from between parked cars. Many children are struck each year in nonintersection accidents when they suddenly enter the roadway from between parked cars.

2. Be extra alert in bad weather. Cars cannot stop as fast on wet pavement, or vehicles may skid. Because motorists and pedestrians tend to hurry to escape the bad weather, they may not be paying close attention to their surroundings.

3 . Be seen at night. Have your children wear light-colored or white clothing if they will be walking after dark. In addition, place reflective strips on clothing, jackets and hats, and have your child carry a flashlight.

4. Cross at corners. Studies show that motorists do not expect children to cross at midblock and tend to slow down at intersections because they expect to see pedestrians cross there.

5. Observe and obey. Remind children that police officers, traffic signs and signals are all traffic safety helpers.

6. Look all ways before crossing. Children should be taught to stop and look for cars before they cross, and to walk — not run — across the street when it is safe to proceed.

7. Walk facing traffic. In areas where there are no sidewalks, children should be instructed to walk on the left side of the roadway, facing approaching traffic. They should walk in a single file, as far off the traveled part of the roadway as possible.

AAA Auto Club South offers several pamphlets to help motorists and parents brush up on safety tips this summer, including both bicycle and pedestrian safety.

For free copies of these brochures, stop by your local AAA office.

Go far on vacation — get your car checked out

By Stephen Barrett
American Forces Information Service

For many Americans, summertime means vacation time. It's the time many pack the family cars, travel to recreation areas and forget work.

Yet thousands of vacationers don't take maintenance precautions on their cars, vans, motorcycles and campers. As a result, they may spend more money on expensive repair bills than on their vacation.

Auto service representatives with the American Automobile Association say routine car maintenance is the key to avoiding mechanical problems during the spring and summer months.

Bob Livingstone, director of automotive services of AAA-Potomac in Fairfax, Va., offered an inspection checklist. He added motorists should check their owners' manuals for specific maintenance schedules and requirements.

• Radiator and coolant recovery tank.

To protect car engines from searing summer heat, regularly check both the coolant level and the anti-freeze mixture in the radiator. Livingstone said drivers should visually check coolant levels when engines are cold. Follow the manufacturer's fluid-and flush guidelines. Flush the system if the coolant is rust-colored.

• Tires.

Livingstone said improper tire pressure causes premature tire wear and difficult handling. Underinflated tires may lead to blowouts and reduce gas mileage by as much as 10 percent. He advised drivers to refer to owner's manual for recommended tire pressures and to keep a tire gauge handy.

He also advised to check tire pressure in the morning when tires are cold and to periodically check the spare tire.

• Coolant hoses.

Routinely check radiator and heater hoses and replace those that are cracked, bulging or leaking. Livingstone said a new $15 hose can save $1,000 in repairs on an overheated engine.

• Oil.

Change the oil every three months or 3,000 miles — whichever comes first. Livingstone said city driving, especially in congested areas, stresses car engines and makes on-time oil changes more important.

He advised changing to a summer-grade oil recommended in some owners' manuals and ensuring oil levels are always in "safe" zones on dipsticks to prevent added engine wear.

• Belts.

Check the belts driving the alternator, air conditioner, water pump, air pump and power steering. Loose belts reduce efficiency. Worn belts can fail unexpectedly and leave drivers stranded.

• Battery.

Check the battery to ensure it is securely in place and clean and replace corroded connections. If the battery is not maintenance-free, check the water level.

• Alignment and suspension.

Have the car's alignment and suspension system checked if there is noticeable, uneven tire wear.

This is especially important after driving on bumpy, pothole-marred roads.

• Chassis.

Lubricate the chassis to guard against corrosion from moisture collected during the winter. Lubricate door, hood and trunk hinges, operating linkages, rubber bumpers and weather stripping.

• Exhaust system.

If an exhaust system leaks, odorless toxic fumes may enter the vehicle.

• Air and fuel filters.

Replace all dirty air and fuel filters.

ask dr fit

U.S. Army Physical Fitness School

Q: Is drowning a leading cause of death among children in the United States?

A: Yes, drowning is a leading cause of injury-related deaths in children. Sadly, these deaths may be preventable.

The American Academy of Pediatrics suggests that all children learn to be comfortable around the source of swimming.

In the South, the emphasis is on educating swimming pool safety, whereas in other areas of the country, safety is emphasized on lake, stream or river safety.

The following are some guidelines of the Pediatrics Academy.

Preschoolers:

• Never leave children less than 4 years old alone in bathtubs, spas, wading pools or near partially filled buckets, toilets, irrigation ditches or other standing water.

• Recognize that swimming lessons do not drownproof your children.

• Fence your entire pool so that it is separate from the house. Pool covers are not a substitute for pool fences.

• Learn cardiopulmonary resuscitation. Keep by the pool a telephone and emergency equipment such as life preservers and a shepherd's crook.

Five to 12 years old:

• Provide these children with swimming lessons that include safety rules.

• Never let them swim alone or without adult supervision.

• Make sure they wear approved personal flotation devices when playing in or near a body of water, or when in a boat.

• Teach them the dangers of jumping or diving into water; teach them to jump in feet first and avoid ice.

Teen-agers

• Beside relaying the safety points above, counsel them about the dangers of substance abuse combined with swimming, diving or boating.

• Teach them CPR.

Military families save money with CHAMPUS Select

CHAMPUS

Military families in the Fort Benning area have saved nearly $600,000 by using the Civilian Health and Medical Program for the Uniformed Services Select program.

While standard CHAMPUS offers eligible beneficiaries significant health-care cost savings, CHAMPUS Select physicians and other health-care providers save beneficiaries even more money through lower cost shares. Cost shares are the portion of the CHAMPUS claim beneficiaries are responsible for paying.

CHAMPUS Select providers have agreed to accept reduced fees for services. In turn, CHAMPUS beneficiaries take advantage of quality health care at reduced rates.

The cost-share for active duty family members is completely waived for inpatient care and reduced by 5 percent for outpatient care.

Retirees and their family members and families of deceased service members can save 10 percent on inpatient care and 5 percent on outpatient care.

A comprehensive network of qualified doctors, hospitals and other health-care providers is available through CHAMPUS Select.

In the Southeastern Region, there are approximately 159 hospitals and 9,900 physicians and other health-care professionals in the CHAMPUS Select network.

CHAMPUS Select is a voluntary health-care benefits program offered by the Department of Defense as a cost-effective option to standard CHAMPUS.

It is not a CHAMPUS supplemental insurance plan, so there is no premium to pay or enrollment to use the program. CHAMPUS Select is only available in the Southeastern Region of the United States, namely Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, Tennessee and the Fort Campbell area of Kentucky.

A directory of CHAMPUS Select network providers is available through Joe Thornton, the CHAMPUS Select coordinator at Fort Benning by calling 682-5949.

A toll-free beneficiary information line is also available to help beneficiaries identify a CHAMPUS Select provider in the area.

Call the Beneficiary Information Line at (800) 824-3570 during regular business hours.

'Models Inc' opens for business on Fox

By Jay Bobbin,
Tribune Media Services

If it worked two years ago, why can't it work again?

That's the rationale of Fox Broadcasting and producer Aaron Spelling in starting up their latest joint venture, the "Melrose Place" spinoff "Models Inc.," which will be launched with a 90-minute premiere Wednesday.

SPOTLIGHT

The new show follows the "Melrose" pattern of having been previewed by introducing some of its characters through an already-established series ("Beverly Hills, 90210" served that function for "Melrose"), and also of having its debut during the summer, well before any of its fall competition arrives. "Dallas" alumna Linda Gray resumes the role she started in the past season's final "Melrose" episodes, playing Hillary Michaels, mother of the other program's Amanda (Heather Locklear) and the owner of a wildly successful Hollywood modeling agency. That business serves as the base for a slew of frequently problem-plagued characters who include: Sarah (Cassidy Rae, also continuing her "Melrose" guest part), a somewhat naive newcomer from the Midwest; Carrie-Anne Moss and Stephanie Romanov as (respectively) Carrie and Teri, sisters and rival models; Kylie Travis as ambitious Julie; Teresa Hill as Linda, a fashion-world favorite with a dark secret; Brian Gaskill as Hillary's son, David, who works for his mother; David Goldsmith as Linda's manipulative boyfriend, Eric; and Cameron Daddo as Brian, a hard-drinking young photographer.

What: "Models Inc."
When: Wednesday on Fox

"Models Inc." was developed by "Melrose Place" co-producers Frank South and Charles Pratt Jr., and much as "90210's" Jennie Garth helped cement the bridge by turning up in early installments of "Melrose," the latter show's Daphne Zuniga and Grant Show appear in the "Models" opener. However, even with its popular "90210" lead-in in future weeks, the new series will have to fly on its own ... as top-billed star Gray is well aware, and she's fully ready for the challenge. "It's one of those things where I'm still kind of giggling inside," the pleasant actress muses, "but not because of the role. It's like, 'I'm really doing this! Has this really happened?' I'm working again, and I love it."

Though Gray has done several TV-movies in recent seasons, including two of NBC's "Moment of Truth" entries, she was hoping for a steady job that wouldn't necessitate her to travel far from her California ranch and her two grown children. Also, she laments that many other parts she was offered "were either 'disease-of-the hour' or real downers, and even though (the topics are) valuable and worthwhile things for people to be aware of, they just weren't what I wanted to do. At least with the 'Moment of Truth' movies, they showed women that they could get something done."

African lion cubs join 'pride' of Zoo Atlanta

Zoo Atlanta

Zoo Atlanta's Masai Mara exhibit received two new inhabitants recently.

A pair of young female lions from South Africa named Claserie and Kalahari were brought to the zoo for a special breeding program. The lions were orphaned in the Kalahari and Transvaal areas of South Africa.

The lions (Claserie is about 1 year old, Kalahari is about 9 months old) were brought to Zoo Atlanta as part of a new attempt by the American Association of Zoos and Aquariums to collectively manage a self-sustaining, genetically diverse captive population, and will allow for the possibility of restocking the wild with zoo lions should they become threatened with extinction.

Zoo Atlanta, which already has two young purebred male lions, will now be able to plan a breeding program to help carefully replenish the captive lion population with animals of known lineage.

At Zoo Atlanta, Claserie and Kalahari can be seen in a natural habitat that simulates the terrains of East Africa. From high atop their rocky outcropping, the lions will be able to see elephants, rhinos, zebras, giraffes, ostriches and other animals in nearby habitats. Until they reach maturity, Claserie and Kalahari will be on exhibit on days alternating with the two male lions.

There are currently only about 25 pedigreed lions in North American zoos, and many of these are aged or closely related to each other.

Zoo Atlanta is a private, nonprofit corporation operated by the Atlanta-Fulton County Zoo Inc.

MEDICAL WEIGHT MANAGEMENT

There are many ways and programs to assist you in your desire to lose weight. If you have been discouraged with other programs or if your willpower for calorie counting or food exchange programs has been unsuccessful, a medically supervised program such as ours offers you an option to prevent discouragement and hopeless feelings about your weight

Music theater to come to Jekyll

Jekyll Island Convention,Visitors Bureau

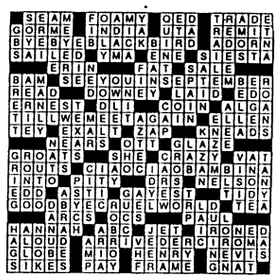
The Jekyll Island Musical Theatre Festival '94 will provide toe-tapping entertainment for thousands of visitors again this summer.

Designated as the State Musical Theatre of Georgia and produced by Valdosta State University, festival performances will include "Oklahoma!," "Mame" and "Nunsense" through Aug. 20 at the Jekyll Island Outdoor Amphitheater.

Rogers and Hammerstein's 1943 classic "Oklahoma!" was the longest-running Broadway musical in the history of theater before it closed in 1948. The story revolves around a handsome cowboy and a headstrong farm girl and their bumpy road to romance in Oklahoma. The production features all-time favorites "Oh What A Beautiful Morning," and "Surrey With A Fringe On Top."

"Nunsense" by Don Goggin depicts a hilarious fund-raising talent show by the Little Sisters of Hoboken. This lively musical features "Growing Up Catholic" and "Nunsense is Habit Forming".

"Mame," written by Patrick Dennis with music and lyrics by Jerry Herman, chronicles a flamboyant free spirit in the roaring 20s whose life gets interesting when an orphaned 10-year-old is placed into her guardianship.



Curtain time for all performances is 8:30 p.m.

Advance tickets are $8 for adults, $5 for senior citizens, students 6 to 18 and college, and free for children under age 6. Add $1 for tickets purchased at the door. Season tickets are also available.

For information on the Jekyll Island Musical Theatre Festival '94, call the Jekyll Island Convention and Visitors Bureau at (800) 841-6586 or (912) 635-3636.

Help available for Persian Gulf Veterans

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Persian Gulf veterans and family members experiencing unexplained health problems may now receive extensive examinations as a result of a program announced June 24 by the Department of Defense.

The three-phase evaluation program — the first of which for local veterans and family members begins at Martin Army Community Hospital — is designed to better help doctors understand the medical nature of mysterious illnesses reported by Persian Gulf veterans.

The goal of the program, which has been implemented by the Department of Defense, is to provide the most comprehensive evaluation possible and to report any illnesses that may still be unexplained.

According to hospital spokesman John Wynn, any beneficiary who suspects that he or she may have an undiagnosed illness relating to Operations Desert Shield or Desert Storm should first be evaluated by his or her primary care physician. If the illness still cannot be explained, he or she will be referred to the hospital's Preventive Medicine Service, Wynn said.

4/41 to deploy

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Approximately 120 soldiers from Battery B of the 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment, will depart early Tuesday morning for Kuwait.

The group, commanded by Capt. Michael L. Longarzo, is deploying in support of Task Force 2-7 from Fort Stewart, Ga., to participate in Operation Intrinsic Action.

Intrinsic Action is an ongoing exercise intended to demonstrate continued U.S. commitment to the stability and security of the Persian Gulf region.

The exercise will also test procedures for contingency operations in the region.

The deploying soldiers will take part in the desert field training exercise with the Kuwaiti armed forces, Longarzo said, and as an artillery unit, they will mostly be providing fire support.

Fourteen soldiers from the 89th Ordnance Detachment, 15 to 20 members of the 498th Medical Company (Air Ambulance) and eight soldiers from the 36th Engineer Group will also deploy to Kuwait for the exercise.

"We are looking forward to a good exercise out in the desert," Longarzo said. "And we're ready for it, having just come back from the National Training Center."

The group will be gone approximately two months, with an expected return in late August.

Upon their return, Longarzo said, the 41st will pick up the new M-109A6 Paladin Howitzer.

TRADOC to get new commander

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

A former assistant commandant of the U.S. Army Infantry School has been nominated to receive his fourth star and to become the next Training and Doctrine commander.

Hartzog

Lt. Gen. William W. Hartzog, who served at Fort Benning from 1985 to 1990 and who is currently the chief of staff of the U.S Atlantic Command, Norfolk Va., will replace Gen. Frederick M. Franks, who is slated for retirement.

The dates of Franks' retirement and the change of command have not been announced and are pending approval by the U.S Senate.

Post chief of staff to retire July 8

USAIC Public Affairs Office

A retirement ceremony is scheduled for Col. Burnet R. Quick July 8 at 5 p.m. at Infantry Hall's Marshall Auditorium.

Quick has been Fort Benning's chief of staff since January 1992. His replacement is Col. Gregory C. Camp, formerly the deputy assistant commandant of the Infantry School.

Quick was commissioned in the regular Army upon graduation from Marion Military Institute at Marion, Ala., in 1965 and has since served in numerous staff and command positions both in the United States and abroad. His overseas duty includes two tours in Vietnam.

His recent assignments were: chief, Officer System Implementation Division, and chief, Combat Arms Division, U.S. Army Personnel Center, Alexandria, Va., and commander of the Aschaffenburg Military Community and the 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division in Germany.

Quick has a master's degree in psychology from the University of Georgia. His military schools include the Infantry Officer Basic and Advanced courses, Command and General Staff College, National War College and the British Higher Command and Staff College.

Quick has been credited with leading Fort Benning to victory in the Army Communities of Excellence competition. The post was named best large installation twice and best Army installation in the world in 1994.

Quick and his wife, Frances, have two children and will stay in the local area where he will be the next president of the Uptown Columbus association.

Smoking policy to save health, money

By Karen S. Morarie
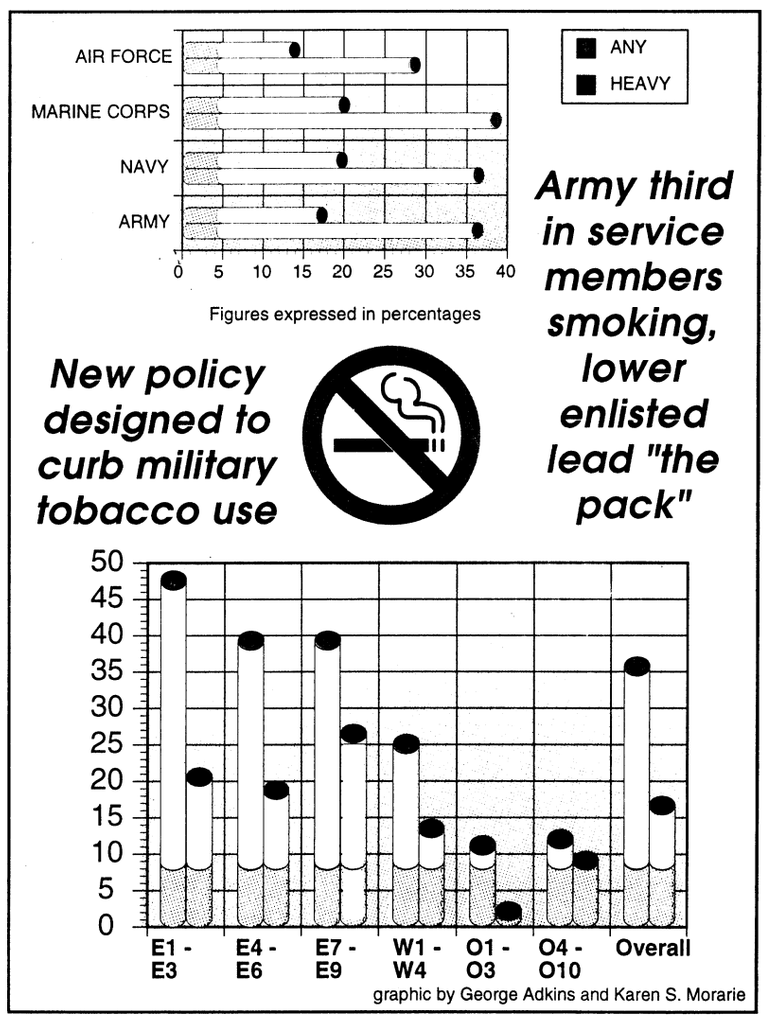
Bayonet staff writer

The department of the Army announced Monday the release of a new policy designed to comply with Department of Defense instruction 1010.15, which mandated a smoking policy to apply to all DoD facilities.

The Army policy, according to the announcement, augments and maintains the DoD policy, and provides for a smoke-free work environment in all buildings or facilities over which the Army has custody or control.

Smoking will still be permitted in government quarters and in barracks rooms, according to the policy, unless those buildings share a common heating, ventilation and air conditioning system that does not provide sufficient protection from environmental smoke to nonsmokers.

According to the release, the Army has four purposes in implementing the new regulation:



- To promote reduced smoking, which is a proven detractor from fitness and health
- To protect DA civilians and military personnel who are nonsmokers from the hazards of environmental tobacco smoke
- To comply with DoD instruction 1010.15
- To reduce the budgetary costs associated with smoking

According to Garrison Sgt. Maj. Harvey Milner, Fort Benning is working toward full compliance with the policy.

"Approximately 80 percent of the facilities on post are already in compliance," Milner said, "and we anticipate the rest will be soon. We are required to negotiate with the four federal employees' unions on post before we fully implement the policy."

Willie Varner, post labor relations officer and chief of Management and Employee Relations, said his office is waiting to receive a copy of the new Army regulation.

"Anytime management implements a change in workplace standards, the regulation requires them to consult with the unions," Varner said. "We'll be pursuing those negotiations as soon as we have the regulation in hand."

VARIOUS VOICES

What's your opinion concerning the O.J. Simpson case?

Spc. John P. Wood, U.S. Army Infantry Center Military Police Company — "I don't want to think he's guilty — he's innocent until proven guilty. But I don't think he's going to get a fair trial. It'll be hard to find 12 people who haven't seen all the stuff on (television)."

Mary Davis, family member — "He's guilty. The press has already tried him."

Pfc. Brandon L. Lewis, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment — "To be honest, I really don't care. It's pretty much overblown."

Sgt. 1st Class Roy M. Cameron, Company D. 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment — "I don't believe it. I think he's innocent. If you watch the news, a lot of the evidence is not true."

Monica J. Knott, family member — "I hate to admit it, but I think he's guilty."

Pfc. John A. Maestas, 533rd Transportation Company, 36th Engineer Group — "All the evidence against him makes it looks like he's guilty, but being a star, the media's going to automatically make him guilty."

Crime, punishment go to the 'circus'

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

commentary

Three possible headlines, three possible crimes:

POPULAR SPORTS FIGURE ACCUSED OF MURDERING EX-WIFE, 'OTHER MAN'

EX-WIFE, 'OTHER MAN' ACCUSED OF MURDERING POPULAR SPORTS FIGURE

'OTHER MAN' ACCUSED OF MURDERING POPULAR SPORTS FIGURE, EX-WIFE

If each of these cases contained the same evidence and were presented to the same juries, would the outcomes be the same?

Only one of the above headlines applies to the current media blitz, of course, and the man accused is facing some advantages and disadvantages over the "common" criminal.

• He has the money to hire the "best" lawyers in the business.

• The accused is more well-known than the victims, so public sympathy is with him. Nobody is out for his blood.

On the down side: because of his fame, public curiosity about the case is rampant, so his chances of an impartial jury somewhere down the road are slim to none. Still, it's almost certain that if he's convicted, he won't get the death penalty — too many people think of him as one of the family, or at least one of the guys.

Whether or not O.J. Simpson committed the crimes he's accused of, the case has stirred up some recurring questions that never seem to be answered:

DOMESTIC ABUSE — How on earth are we going to convince married people (mostly the males) not to beat and kill their spouses? Why do they do it, and what can be done about it?

'GENERIC' VIOLENCE — How long can we, as a society, glorify violence in movies, highlight it in television and print news, and yes, accept it in our athletes, and still point shocked, accusing fingers at those who commit violent crimes? Are we ever going to admit that we are helping to create the monster crime problem we're frightened of? Is it against our will that our "pop" culture is saturated with violence?

JUSTICE — I believe we have one of the greatest systems of justice in the world. I also believe that's not saying much.

I suspect the elite, the rich and famous, receive special privileges the world over, and always have. That doesn't mean they should.

Karen S. Morarie

Even if they're arrested, how many celebrities receive the same punishment a street kid would for the same crime? Slap a cop — pay a fine. Only if your initials are Z.Z.

There's been a long list, in the past few years, of celebrities involved in violent crimes, some including drug use. An amazing — to me — number of these cases result in suspended sentences and community service.

If he's convicted, though, I think O.J. may actually have to serve some time— no community service on this one. He'd still be fortunate, though, even if that happens — an unknown person convicted of the crimes he's accused of could well be put to death.

(Here's a little digression: does anyone think O.J. could conceivably be put to death? No? Well then, do you think the death penalty is applied fairly and evenly? No? Then why do so many of us still support it?)

MEDIA PUBLICITY — Is there a journalist out there who can say, with a straight face, that the hullabaloo surrounding this case is a result of the people's right to know? Or is it the people's right to a sensationalized circus on any pretext whatsoever, the bloodier and/or sexier the better?

Does the 1st Amendment supercede a defendant's right to a fair trial, to being presumed innocent until proven guilty? Or should we just dispense with trials, report whatever rumors are floating around the week after the crime, and take a public opinion poll, sentencing defendants accordingly? Besides being quicker, would that process be much different from what we do now?

The media, at least the "responsible" media, needs to take a long look at ethics and standards. If an American is denied a fair trial because of our irresponsible, erroneous, or rumor-based reporting, are we really doing our jobs?

To recast my original question: can O.J. Simpson get a fair trial? Probably not. Is he likely to receive the same sentence an "unknown" would in the same situation? Probably not — and he's probably better off.

dial 545-boss

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for soldiers, family members and civilians to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere. While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies established to provide assistance, the line offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders.

The Bayonet features some of the calls that may benefit other members of the Fort Benning community.

☎ Call: I am concerned about the school buses not having seat belts.

There was a minor accident on my son's bus; no one was hurt, but he did hit his side on the seat in from of him.

I think that had he been wearing a seat belt, this would not have happened.

Also, why do some of the Fort Benning school buses have seat belts while others do not?

I would like the subject of seat belts in school buses addressed.

Fort Benning Schools' response:

The school system contracts for its school bus services and all buses are required to meet the Georgia school bus specifications. The current specifications do not require seat belts aboard buses. School buses are inspected annually by the Georgia Highway Patrol to ensure compliance with state specifications.

According to the State Department of Education, Transportation Division, there is no pending legislation that would change these specifications.

The current school bus contractor purchased his fleet of buses from several areas of the country and that a small number of buses were purchased from states that mandate seat belts on school buses.

☎ Call: I have a complaint about the electricity continuously going off.

In May it was off a total of eight times ranging from 30 minutes to two hours.

As of June 6, the power has already gone off three times. On June 4, it was off for four hours.

Energy and Utilities Division's response:

The power outages in May were caused by an underground cable burnout, a squirrel being electrocuted and blowing a line fuse and a transformer malfunctioning.

All of these outages were separate incidents and normally caused the power to be off twice per incident — one outage to switch the power source from another direction so repairs could be made, and the second outage to switch the power back to the original source feed.

The outages in early June were caused by storm damage and the outage that occurred June 4 was prolonged because the exterior electric linemen had to be called in from their homes, since Saturdays, Sundays and holidays are not normal work days for them.

☎ Call: I have a complaint about the once-a-week garbage pickup.

I just battled with maggots all over my porch; I believe this is because of the garbage having to sit so long.

I would like some information regarding this issue.

Construction Inspection Branch, Directorate of Public Works' response:

The once-per-week schedule of collection was driven by budget restraints. The change was in compliance with governing regulations and put Fort Benning in a compatible schedule with surrounding communities, as well as other installations.

Post residents may need to adjust to the new procedure by bagging their garbage in plastic bags and tying them to keep flies and bugs away. Residents can also get an additional garbage can with a lid. Household ammonia may also be put in bags and cans in spoonful quantities to help odor and insects.

letter

There still exist people who care

Here is the scenario: It's time to get off work on a Friday and a person comes in your office, distraught; the people the person needs to talk to are gone for the day.

You could tell the person you are sorry and send him or her away (which most of us would do), or you could do what Becky Lunsford, secretary for the chief of Housing, did: Stay after work to help that person.

My air conditioner broke on a Wednesday evening. I thought the post was cutting back and turning the air conditioners off again like they did last year.

The next day I was talking to my neighbor and she said that hers was working fine. I tried calling in an emergency work order but the clerk said that I would have to call back in the morning.

I have an 8-week-old child who should not be exposed to high temperatures for long periods. The next day, I called the work order section and was informed that it would be a seven working day waiting period before anyone could come to my home to fix the air conditioner.

I explained about my child and was told in order to get on an emergency status, I would need to take a letter from my daughter's doctor to the work order section, Building 262.

By the time the doctor wrote a note and I went out to pick it up, it was 4:15 p.m., Friday.

The people at Building 262 just apologized, saying that they could not help me until Monday morning because all the workers had already left for the weekend.

I tried to plead and reason with them, but to no avail. Concern for my child's health would not let me give up that easily.

My next stop was the office of the chief of Housing, where I met Lunsford. After I explained my situation to her, she told me the chief was gone for the day.

I thought she was going to send me away, too, but instead she did something she did not have to do. She called the chief at home and explained my situation to him. He called and talked to the person I had seen at Building 262.

Lunsford then informed me that they were now in the process of getting a worker to come out to fix my air conditioner. It was fixed the next morning.

It's so good to know that there are people out there who still care, even on a Friday when it is time to go home.

Thank you again, Becky Lunsford, and God bless you.

Post to celebrate Fourth

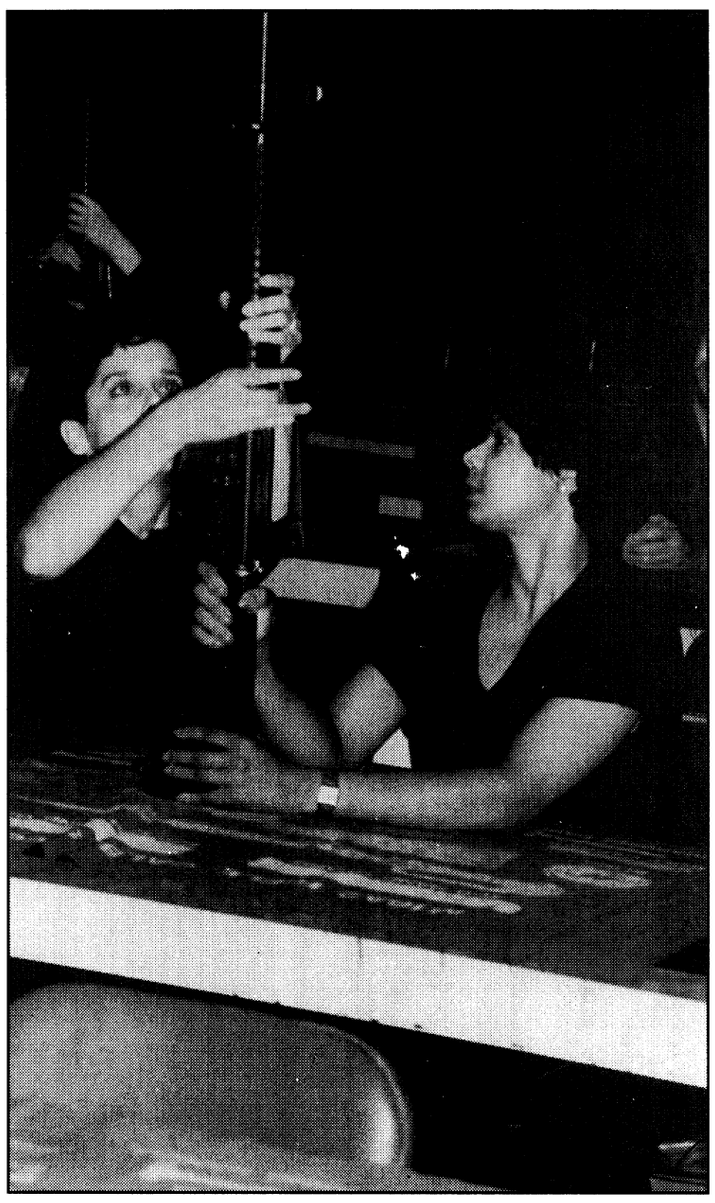
By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

Fourth of July festivities at Fort Benning are scheduled for Saturday beginning at 2 p.m. at York Field.

The public is invited to the celebration, which will include food and drinks for a nominal fee.

Other activities will include rides, two demonstrations by the Silver Wings, Fort Benning's command exhibition parachute team, a "Rangers in Action" demonstration, performances by the Infantry Band and the Infantry Chorus, special entertainment by Atlanta country music group The Ridgerunners, a 50-gun salute to the nation and national flag pageantry.



When the sun goes down, the skies are scheduled to light up with a fireworks display. A joint operation will take place as the fireworks explode in the sky.

The Infantry Band will perform "The 1812 Overture" while Battery C, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized), will add special effects to the performance.

MPs back from 'Bravo'

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Forty-eight members of the 988th Military Police Company returned to Fort Benning from Honduras Monday night.

The group spent more than four months providing support and convoy security for Joint Task Force Bravo there.

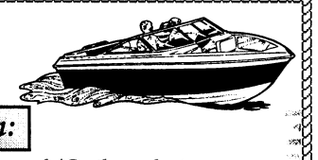
"Their mission was to provide law, order and security for the Soto Cano Air Force Base," said Capt. Michael R. Walker, commander of the 988th.

"The Military Police have an ongoing mission there, but it's been at company level until this platoon went down," he said.

One of the most important aspects of their mission was guarding sensitive communication sites, but they also conducted routine police and traffic investigations, Walker said.

"They did an outstanding job," he said. "They even pitched in to the humanitarian effort by taking care of a school there, donating clothes and food."

"It was hot, but it was nice," Pfc. Anthony Smith said of the deployment.



"We worked a lot, we were on a pretty tight schedule," he said, but the soldiers did make time to take in the local sights — some even went on a scuba-diving trip.

They even learned a little Spanish while they were there, Smith said.

"The experience working with the Honduran Army was the best part of it all," said Pfc. Patrick Suggs.

"I learned a lot, (Spanish) speaking-wise, but I also learned a lot just patrolling with them," he said.

Army makes EFMP enrollment easier

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — The Army is making things easier for families with special needs, through recent changes in the Exceptional Family Member Program's regulation, AR 608-75.

Through the EFMP, soldiers' records reflect the needs of their exceptional family members. These needs are then considered when soldiers are up for a new assignment.

"An (exceptional family member) can be a child, a spouse, or an aged mom or dad who's an authorized family member of the soldier," said Shirley Brown, EFMP manager at the Army's Community and Family Support Center.

Disabilities can be educational or medical.

EFMP members will see several changes in the new regulation.

Soldiers no longer have to re-enroll every three years. Now "soldiers are permanently enrolled in the program" until they leave the service or unless their special needs "warrant case closure," said Brown.

Throughout enrollment, soldiers are responsible for keeping their files current. They must update the records as the family member's condition changes, or every three years, whichever comes first.

Another change applies to dual-Army couples.

"Soldiers who are members of the Army Married Couples Program will both enroll in the EFMP now, when they have a family member who qualifies," Brown said. "This process will ensure that the assignment manager of each sponsor considers this family's special needs.

"In the past, there were problems in this area," she said. "We had one soldier enrolled, and not the other.

"And the soldier who was not enrolled would be considered for nomination to a particular location without their EFM needs reviewed. We made it so they both had to enroll so that we would make sure that their exceptional family member needs were not overlooked during the nominative phase of the assignment process."

Also in the revision, the gaining installation must be notified about the incoming EFM; overseas, it is the major command that will be notified. This way, housing and other agencies can be sure to have the services and equipment to meet any special needs, when the family arrives.

"We've also strengthened the interface with Child Development Services, Youth Services and Community Recreation so that there can be more inclusion of exceptional family members in ongoing activities," Brown said.

The following soldiers with exceptional family members must enroll in the EFMP:

- Soldiers in the regular Army;
- U.S. Army Reserve soldiers in the USAR-Active Guard Reserve program and other USAR soldiers on active duty exceeding 30 days;
- Army National Guard AGR personnel serving under authority of Title 10, United States Code.

Although civilian employees don't actually enroll in the program, the regulation says they must "identify dependent children with special educational and medical needs, each time they process for an assignment to a location outside the United States, where dependent travel is authorized at government expense," Brown said.

For more information on EFMP enrollment, visit your local Army Community Service office.

uniform changes in the works

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Women soldiers who are not satisfied with the fit and appearance of the women's service uniform will soon see some changes for the better, thanks to officials at Project Manager-Soldier and the Research, Development and Engineering Center in Natick, Mass.

Recent surveys revealed that soldiers approved of the new uniform after testing by several hundred soldiers with all body types.

Women can expect to see a more comfortable blouse, designed to be worn tucked inside the new slacks and skirt.

The new blouse will be a standard issue item for recruits and added to the soldier's clothing bag. Women who prefer not to wear shirts tucked in can choose a new optional-purchase overblouse, which can be worn as an outer garment with the pants and skirt.

A new style of slacks, which officials say "creates a more feminine, tailored look," will also be available.

Another feature for the new slacks is the black belt, with gold buckle, and belt loops. Whether the women will use the men's belt or adopt a thinner belt is still under evaluation, officials said.

A new more feminine-looking oxford shoe, which is reportedly as comfortable as any sports shoe yet as durable as the current oxford, was also adopted.

New designs for the skirt, purse and service maternity uniform are also under evaluation, officials said.

In related news, women recruits will get more money for undergarments beginning in fiscal 1996.

In fiscal 1994, women recruits receive $116.63; the projected 1995 rate is $119.90.

The acting undersecretary of Defense for personnel and readiness has approved increasing the allowance to $150 in 1996.

Civilian Awards Luncheon rescheduled

The Civilian Awards Luncheon, originally scheduled for last Tuesday, has been rescheduled for July 11 at the Officers' Club Supper Club from 11:30 a.m. to 1:15 p.m. The Directorate of Contracting is hosting the luncheon. For more information, call Emily Patterson at 545-5173 or Judy Hodder at 545-5610.

BOSS plans white-water rafting trip

The Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers Council is sponsoring a white-water rafting trip to Clayton, Ga., from July 29 through 31. The trip costs $110 per person, which covers all expenses except meals. A limited number of spaces are available.

For more information or to make reservations, call the BOSS office at 545-7204.

RTB schedules change of command

The Ranger Training Brigade will conduct a change of command ceremony at 9 a.m. July 20 at Malvesti Field. Col. Galen B. Jackman will assume command from Col. Michael V. Church, who will assume duties as chief of staff for Fort Polk, La.

For more information, call 544-7430.

Rangers to host an open house July 30

The 5th Ranger Training Battalion, Dahlonega, Ga., will conduct its 29th annual Open House July 30 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The public is invited to view the numerous displays and demonstrations, along with the official opening of the new Frank D. Merrill Museum. The public will be able to view and photograph the U.S. Army rangers in action.

Demonstrations include combat raids, hand-to-hand combat, mountaineering, high altitude parachuting, helicopter operations, and snake handling.

New career model handbooks available

The Army Continuing Education System recently received updated Noncommissioned Officer Career Model Alternate Education Options Handbooks. The guide outlines 38 NCO Career Models and post secondary and training course options.

Soldiers can obtain a copy by visiting their servicing Education Center.

Retirement ceremony set for July 19

A monthly retirement ceremony will be July 19 at 10 a.m. in Marshall Auditorium.

For information, call Sgt. 1st Class Bartolome Vigo at 545-4258.

Runners have priority during PT hours

Formations and individual runners have priority of movement on Fort Benning during the established physical training hours of 6 to 7:30 a.m. Monday through Friday.

Formation running is not authorized on sidewalks throughout the installation. Units must use roadways and proper safety equipment must be worn and operational.

Individual runners and walkers may use the sidewalks and also are required to wear proper reflective clothing or road guard vests.

Speed limit during PT hours is 15 mph and 10 mph when passing individuals and troop formations.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland and range areas will take place through July 9 if weather permits in the following compartments: D-12, E-2, E-7, F-1, I-5, M-8, W-2, X-5 and CC-2.

Burning will occur in pine stands within these compartments to enhance endangered species habitat and training areas.

People using these areas for recreation must vacate before 9:30 a.m. daily.

Training units using compartments adjacent to these areas may experience drift smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while traveling in these areas because of the potential for reduced visibility.

CID seeks agents

Criminal Investigation Command officials are seeking enlisted soldiers with a variety of ethnic and cultural backgrounds to serve as special agents in covert operations.

Applicants should be active-duty specialists, corporals and sergeants who are U.S. citizens, at least 21 years of age, have at least two years of college credit or the equivalent, have a Vocational Aptitude Battery general technical score of 110 or higher, meet Army physical fitness standards, pass a background investigation and have at least six months' police experience.

Some qualifications may be waived. For more information, call the Fort Benning CID office at 545-3259.

Infantry Ball set for Sept. 17 at O' Club

The 1994 Infantry Ball will be at the Fort Benning Officers' Club at 6 p.m. Sept. 17. All invited guests who wish to attend should call 545-5726 or 545-7626. Tot Town will be open for child care until midnight. Reservations are required.

CID seeks information

CID request the assistance of the community in gathering information on two robberies.

Unknown persons entered Building 9087 on post between 3:30 p.m. May 24 and 11:50 a.m. May 26 and stole a Zenith 386 laptop computer and a Canon bubble-jet printer.

Unknown persons also entered Building 2444 between 4:30 p.m. May 12 and 9:30 a.m. May 16 and stole 12 field tables, 130 cots and 34 cases of meals ready to eat.

Anyone having information concerning the thefts is asked to call the Military Police immediately, at 545-5222. Callers' identifies will be kept confidential.

Focus on POV safety shifts gears

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Fatigue and excessive speed are the predominant killers of soldiers on the nation's highways, replacing alcohol use and not wearing seat belts as the leading causes of injury and death in privately owned vehicles, according to Army safety officials.

Officials are quick to point out, though, that drinking and driving still causes about one in five fatalities. The good news is that privately owned vehicle accidents have seen a downward trend over the past five years, attributable to less driving under the influence and increased seat belt use.

For the past eight years, a greater emphasis has been placed on using seat belts while driving POVs and wearing protective equipment while riding motorcycles. An emphasis on the deglamorization of alcohol use and driving has been has been coupled with an increase in the enforcement of those policies, officials said.

Safety officials profile the "average casualty" as a male, 18 to 23 years old, holding the rank of either private first class or specialist. Most fatalities happen sometime between 10 p.m. on Fridays and 7:30 a.m. on Mondays — and most likely on a city road or interstate highway.

Bearing that in mind, the Army will continue to push implementation of a program to reduce all motor vehicle accidents, focusing on the use of individual and command risk assessment. That program includes safety training at the unit and installation level.

Specifically, training topics include accident causes, how emotions contribute to accidents, how to avoid collisions, effects of alcohol and drugs, fatigue control, pedestrian safety and a view of motorcycles from a driver's perspective.

Officials offer the following tips for reducing accidents:

- Further increase command involvement;
- Apply the risk assessment process by supervisors;
- Accept personal responsibility by using seat belts at all times, by not drinking and driving and by being well-rested before taking trips.

The Army is currently developing a consolidated motor vehicle safety program, which addresses the individual, the supervisor, training and training standards, officials said.

Vets: help available

Those individuals who do not have a primary care physician may call the Preventive Medicine Service at 545-1144, he said.

"The National Institute of Health recently released information that shows that the Persian Gulf Syndrome is not a single disease but a range of illnesses with overlapping symptoms and causes," said Lt. Col. Daniel Davidson, chief, Preventive Medicine Service. "If an individual is experiencing health problems that meet this description, he or she may be included in the DoD Persian Gulf War Veterans Health Surveillance System. They will then receive a full medical evaluation at either Martin Army or the nearest VA facility."

This program, the Comprehensive Clinical Evaluation Program, consists of three levels of clinical examination, Davidson said.

"The first evaluation is performed locally, and individuals receive an examination and laboratory testing," Davidson said. "If the symptoms and illnesses cannot be explained, the individual will be referred to Eisenhower Army Medical Center at Fort Gordon, Ga., for a second evaluation by an internal medicine specialist. If the symptoms still cannot be explained after the second evaluation, individuals will be offered a more extensive, third evaluation, which includes specialized tests for Persian Gulf veterans."

Before the announcement of the three-phase evaluation program, the hospital's Preventive Medicine Service had been evaluating and monitoring local individuals. During the past year, 35 active duty soldiers, retirees, or veterans of Operations Desert Storm and Desert Shield have been seen at the Preventive Medicine Service. Of these individuals, six have been diagnosed as having unexplained illnesses related to Persian Gulf participation.

ETSing? Get yourself ready

By Elsie Jackson
Army Career and Alumni Program

"Going to the house." "Getting out." "ETSing." "Going home." Is this you? Don't add "Unemployed" to the list.

If you have a year or less until your separation, it is time to start laying the groundwork for a smooth transition from your military to civilian career.

Start your job search process by assembling the records and papers that you will need. Organize them into four files: military service, personal, work experience and education and training.

Your military papers should include certified copies of separation papers (Department of Defense Form 214) service record, honors and awards, medical records and benefits information.

As a minimum, your personal papers should include copies of your birth certificate, Social Security card, current passports and proof of citizenship.

Use your work experience file to document your work history (jobs, employers, duties and accomplishments), honors and citations, references, salary history and community activities.

If appropriate, include some samples of your work. Your education and training file should hold transcripts, diplomas, honors and activities lists.

In 1991, the Department of Defense was directed to provide military experience and training transcripts to all separating service members.

These transcripts not only document your military experience, but translates them to civilian terms.

Every soldier separating after Sept. 15, 1992, should automatically receive a Verification of Military Experience and Training statement about 120 days before your expiration term of service date.

Soldiers who separated between Oct. 1, 1990, through 14 Sept. 14, 1992, must request their VMET statements.

If you should have received your VMET statement and have not, call (800) 258-8638. Written requests can be addressed to. PRC Inc., ATTN. VMET G-3.03, 12001 Sunrise Valley Drive, Reston, Va. 22091.

Another document that you may want to add to your career file is your Army and American Council on Education Registry Transcript System record. AARTS transcripts can help you get college-level credit for Army training and experiences.

An AARTS transcript can also supplement your job resume, providing employers with a description of the scope of your Army responsibilities and the skills you acquired while on active duty.

To request a copy of your AARTS record, visit your Education Center. There is no charge for this service.

It's not too early to start drafting your resume, either. Take advantage of the free resume writing classes available.

Ask your ACAP counselor about these and other free job search-skills workshops and classes that are available.

These classes and workshops are offered through the Job Assistance Center and Army Community Service. Family members are also eligible for many of these services.

Put the attention-to-detail you learned on active duty to use for you. Triple check your spelling and grammar. If your skills in this department are lacking, have someone more proficient proof your resume for you.

When you are ready to turn that draft resume into a final version, computers and a laser printer are available for clients' use at the Job Assistance Center in Building 2634.

For more information, call the ACAP office at 545-4913 or 545-4892.

ACAP employment seminar July 21

Army Career and Alumni Program

A seminar about federal employment will be July 21 from 9 to 11 a.m. in Infantry Hall, Classroom 30.

Sponsored by the Army Career and Alumni Program and the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, the seminar is designed to provide information on the opportunities of federal employment with primary emphasis on Fort Benning.

Available to soldiers retiring from the military and their family members, the seminar will cover the basics of how the federal employment system functions, where to find job announcements and veteran's preference. Participants will be given a detailed explanation of the federal employment application, Standard Form 171.

James Fleming, a 20-year veteran of the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, and Cathy Murray, an instructor with Conwal Inc., will be available to answer questions.

Murray assists the Georgia Department of Labor with the ACAP Transition Assistance Program workshop, and she conducts personal assessments Thursday and Friday of each week from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the ACAP office in Soldiers' Plaza. The assessments include instruction in the use of an automated Standard Form 171.

To obtain an appointment, call 545-7009, 545-4913 or 545-4892 or stop by Building 2617 in Soldiers' Plaza.

New reg clarifies Army sponsorship

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — It's summer, the season of relocation. Do you know who your sponsor is?

Moving to a new job, new home, new state — even a new country —is tough, with or without a family. A sponsor can pave the way for newcomers, by setting up housing, meeting them at the airport, introducing them around and generally telling them about the area.

The Total Army Sponsorship Program "assists soldiers, civilian employees and family members when they move from one community to another," said Shirley Brown, Army Sponsorship Program manager at the Community and Family Support Center. "It provides folks with accurate, timely information and other support that's needed to minimize problems associated with moving to a new duty station."

Brown explained that a smooth move is good for more than just the newcomer.

"It's important because the Army knows that when a newly arrived soldier or civilian employee can adjust quickly to their assignment, they'll focus on their work without distraction, improve unit and command efficiency, and help maintain the Army's combat readiness," she said.

The new Army Regulation 600-8-8 was issued last year, filling in some holes left by the old sponsorship reg.

Once, sponsors were mandatory for transferring soldiers and optional for civilians. Now they're optional for both groups — privates through colonels, civilians through grade 15.

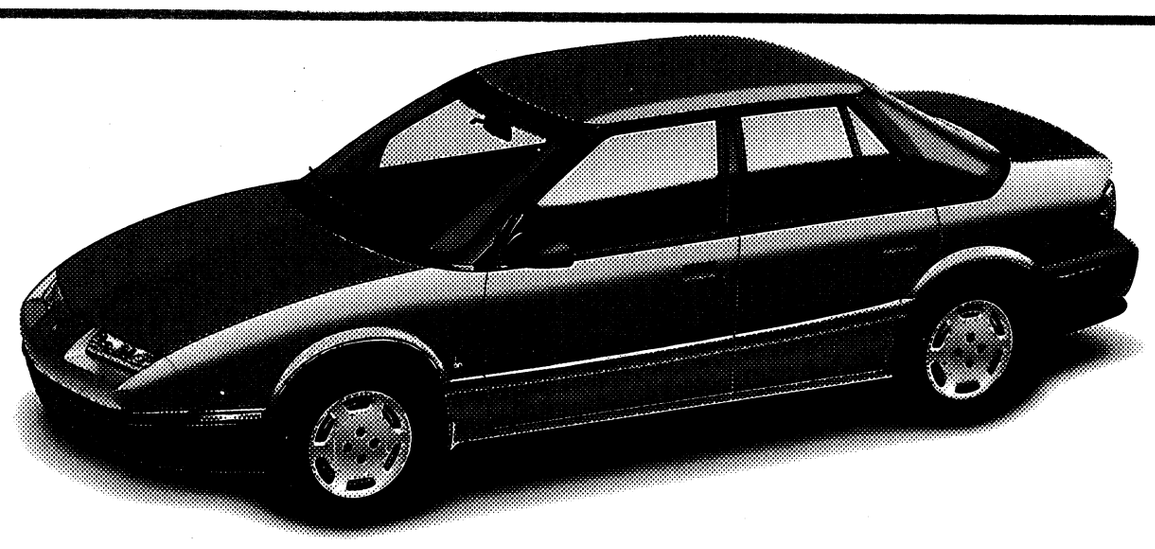
However, a change of mind is allowed. Newcomers can request a sponsor, upon arrival, despite an earlier declination.

Whether they accept or decline a sponsor, soldiers and civilians must sign DA Form 5434, the Sponsorship Program Counseling and Information Sheet, to show they've been counseled. The form must be completed during the initial reassignment interview, or within three working days after accepting a new civilian position. In the past, this was mandatory only for soldiers; now it's required for everyone, Brown said.

"The 5434 is the 'trigger' for sponsorship," she said. "It's what gets the ball rolling."

This form has also been updated to include a sponsorship bill of rights.

In the past, "it was more or less left up to a clerk to explain the program," Brown said. "Soldiers and civilian employees were not always clear as to what the entitlements were. Now they can make an informed decision about whether or not they want to have a sponsor appointed, to help them with their move."



The sponsorship entitlements are:

- A welcome letter;
- An appointed sponsor;
- Army Community Service relocation services;
- Greeting upon arrival;
- Assistance with inprocessing and outprocessing; and
- Orientation to the new duty station and community.

Brown explained that people can go to ACS, whether they have a sponsor or not. The centers have a user-friendly system called Standard Installation Topic Exchange Service. SITES "contains the latest information that's critical" to people moving to another community, she said.

"Some of the information that's in the automated system are phone numbers of post agencies, where to access on- and off-post housing, information about the new post, child-care services, shopping centers, stores, educational opportunities, even contacts for employment services — that's really important for spouses who move with soldiers and often have real difficulty in finding employment," Brown said.

Although ACS can provide help, before and after a move, Brown suggested that soldiers and civilians on the move consider accepting a sponsor.

In the land of the free, we're just trying to do our part.

Our country's one where schools are public, libraries lend you books, and firemen will come rescue your home for no additional charge. So, among other things, we've made our variable-effort power steering, 4-wheel independent suspension and driver-side airbag all standard. It just seemed like the patriotic thing to do.

wrestlers host 1-day clinic for youngsters

By Terry K. Ray
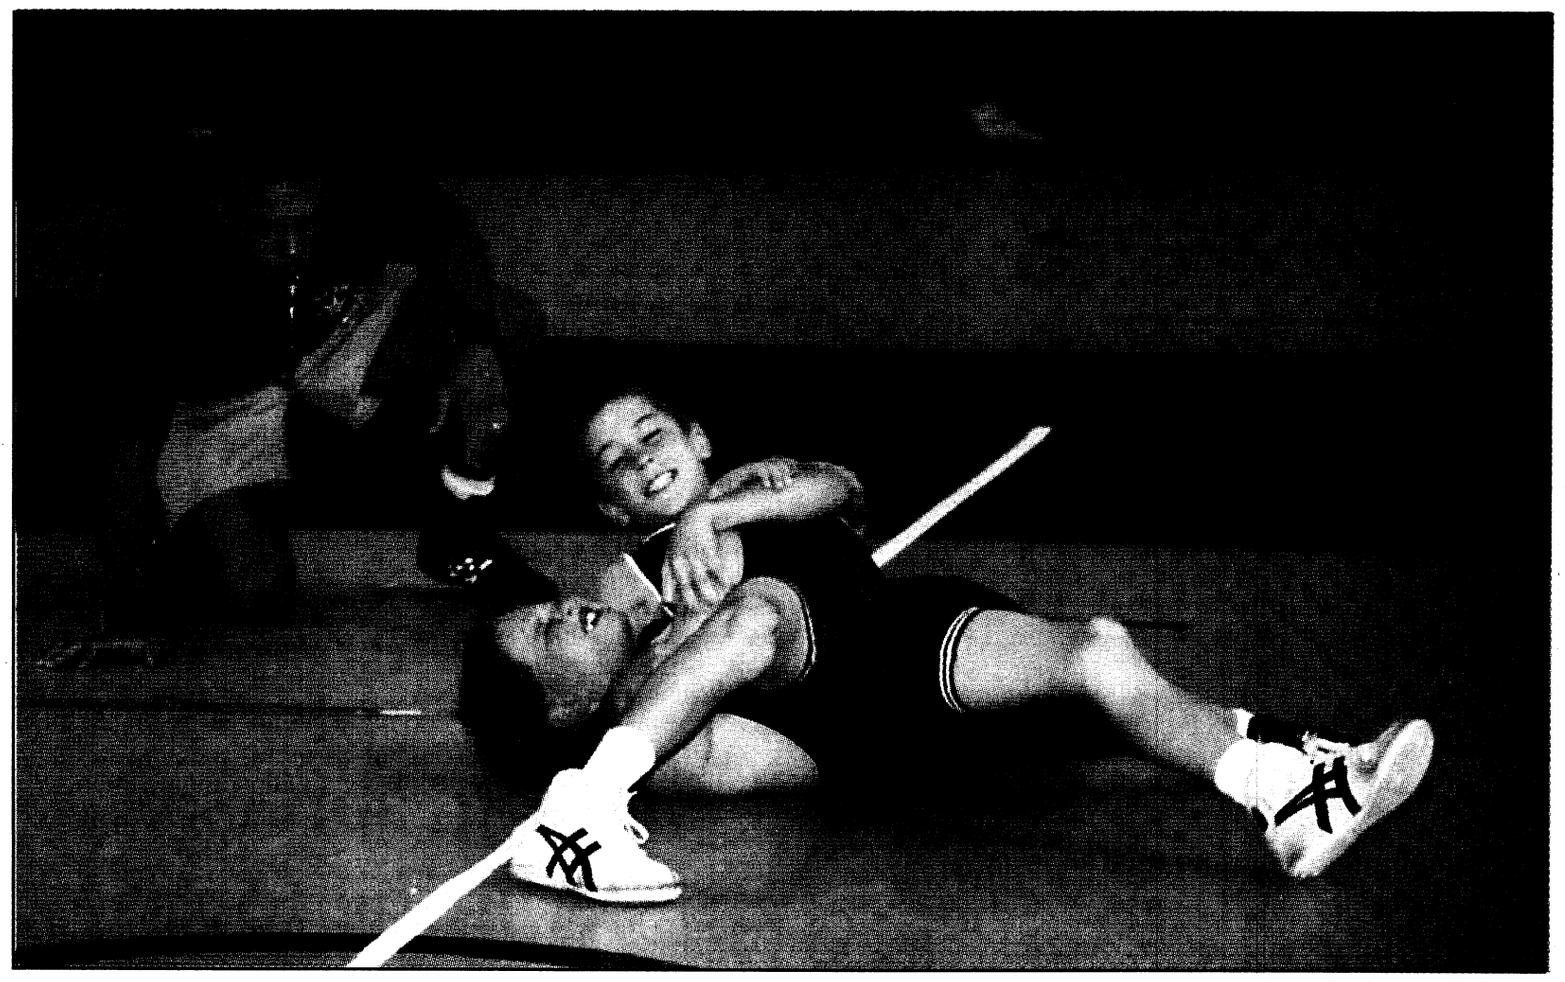
Special to The Bayonet©

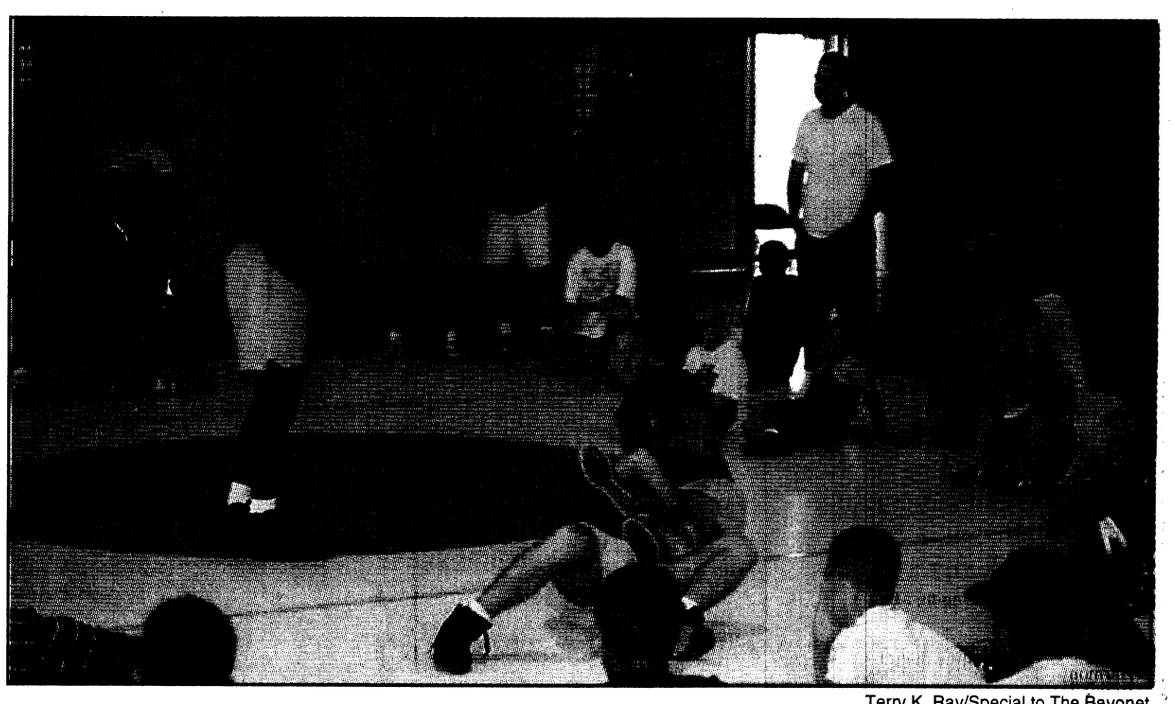
The 1994 Doughboy Wrestling Classic, which took place Saturday at Briant Wells Field House in conjunction with the Southwest District Three Sports Festival, drew more than 40 youthful wrestlers to the one-day clinic and tournament.

The clinic, which was put on by the All-Army wrestling team, gave instructional hints to the wide-eyed competitors.



On hand from the Army were 1992 Olympic Bronze Medalist Rodney Smith and 1988 Olympian Anthony Amado, along with 1994 national champions Shon Lewis and Derrick Waldroup all of whom are all soldiers with the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment.

"We were hoping for a little better participation," said Physical Activities Branch Director Jim Brown.



"But with anything that is done for the first time, you take what comes and improve on it for the next year. The volunteers did a wonderful job along with the All-Army wrestling team."

The following are the top three finishers in each weight class from the six divisions.

Fort Benning specialist wins armed forces track, field title

By Stephen Barrett
American Forces Information Service

Fort Benning's Sherri Reece won the women's 100- and 200-meter sprints at the 1994 Armed Forces Track and Field championships May 25 through 29 at Fort Sill, Okla.

Reece, a specialist with the 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment, repeated her 1993 performance, twice edging teammate Spc. Dawn Adams for the Gold Medals. Reece also anchored both 400- and 1,600-meter relay teams to victory.

The Army grabbed both men's and women's team titles. Army men claimed 13 Gold Medals and swept the 400- and 1,600-meter relays in tallying 106 team points. The Air Force finished second with 73, followed by Navy (22) and Marine Corps (17).

Meanwhile, Army women had no trouble claiming their team title, scoring 82 points. Army women also swept the relays and captured eight of the 15 Gold Medals. Navy took second place with 45 points, Air Force tallied 35 and Marine Corps scored one.

The Army dominated the men's and women's sprint events, capturing seven Gold and six Silver Medals in the 100-, 200-, 400- and 800-meter sprints. Spc. Dionicio Napier surprised defending champion Army Sgt. Benjamin Cureton by winning the men's 100 in 10.5 seconds. Napier then defended his own title in the 200, again beating Cureton with a time of 20.8 seconds. Napier also gained gold in the 400 relay.

Army Spc. Karl Wright and Army Sgt. Roslyn Adams took Gold Medals in the 400-meter individual events, and Army Pfc. Nedric Evans edged out Air Force 2nd Lt. Douglas Sersun for the 800 title.

The Air Force controlled most of the men's distance races, claiming two golds, a silver and a bronze. Air Force 2nd Lt. William Burke captured first in the 1,500 and third in the 800.

The Air Force Capt. Michael Michno, a 1993 double gold medalist, successfully defended his 5,000 title, but finished third behind Burke and Navy Lt. Ron Harris in the 1,500.

The Navy dominated the women's distance events, claiming four golds, a silver and three Bronze Medals. Navy Ensign Alexis Petrowski won Gold Medals in the 800 and 1,500 events. Teammate Ensign Barbara Kannewurf took second in the 1,500 and third in the 800. Lt. j.g. Marty Shue earned golds in the 3,000 and 5,000; Army Sgt. Tracy VanDeventer finished second in both events, followed by Navy Ensign Susie Stewart.

In other distance races, Army 2nd Lt. Jason Cullinane won the 3,000 steeplechase and Spc. Tony Every claimed the 10,000.

The Army also took two of the three Gold Medals in hurdles competition. Spc. Thad Jones took the 400 intermediate hurdles and Spc. Dawn Adams added a Gold Medal to her two sprint Silvers by taking the women's 100 hurdles.

Air Force Airman 1st Class Arthur Smith won the 110 high hurdles, beating Marine Lance Cpl. W.K. Booker by half a second.

Three athletes dominated the field events. Air Force 2nd Lt. Matthew Zuber, the 1993 long jump champion, defended his title with a win over 1994 triple jump champion Army Staff Sgt. Charles Swindell. He then beat defending champion Army Maj. James Barrineau for the high jump gold medal and took silver in the pole vault, falling to Army Pfc. Jeremy Moore.

The men's and women's discus and shot put champions also successfully defended their 1993 titles. Army Sgt. Martin Perkins and Air Force Senior Airman Joan McGee had no problems repeating their efforts in 1994.

In other men's field events, Navy Lt. Wayne Brown captured the javelin competition, while Air Force 2nd Lt. Vern Conaway won the hammer throw. Women's field event titles went to Army 1st Lt. Michelle Dickens (high jump), Air Force 1st Lt. Mona Wheeler (long jump) and Army Spc. Karen Bill (javelin).

The Army grabbed both men's and women's team titles. Army men claimed 13 Gold Medals and swept the 400- and 1,600-meter relays in tallying 106 team points. The Air Force finished second with 73, followed by Navy (22) and Marine Corps (17)

Infantry hits the (ball) field

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

Members of the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, have taken to the field once again. No, not the National Training Center or field exercises at Fort Stewart, Ga. — this time they have taken up residence at Essebagger Field on Kelley Hill for intramural softball.

Monday night, two games were scheduled for play. One was a forfeit with Company E, 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, coming away with a 1-0 win after Co. C, 2nd Bn., 18th Inf. Regt., failed to show.

Game two, between Co. A, 324th Forward Support Battalion, (Gators), and the Outcasts of Co. C, 317th Engineer Battalion, turned out to be a little more exciting.

The Outcasts took advantage of some early control problems by Gator starting pitcher Steve Keaton in the top of the first inning. A single and three straight walks plated the first run for the Qutcasts before Gator coach Joseph Davis went to the mound to make the change.

Second baseman Fred Green took over on the mound, Keaton went to first and first baseman Mack Bullock replaced Green at second.

A single by second baseman Solon Wilson scored the Outcasts' second run of the inning with a single to right field before Green settled down and ended the inning with two strikeouts and a pop up.

The Gators struck back for a five spot of their own in the bottom half of the first inning. With two men on and no one out, Bullock came to the plate and slammed Outcast pitcher Sal Gonzales' offering into left center field for a three-run homer.

A single and two more walks loaded the bases for the Gators, but hopes for a big inning fell short when all the Gators could come up with was two runs on fly ball outs.

The score remained 5-2 for the next two innings, with the defense on both sides playing tough.

In the top of the fourth inning, the Outcasts cut the deficit to 5-3 on a run-scoring fielders' choice by left fielder Steve Hulsey.

The Gators scored three runs in the bottom of the fourth inning on an RBI double from third baseman Ricky Lopez and sacrifices by designated hitter Tony Moore and left centerfielder David Saddler for an 8-3 bulge.

In the bottom half of the sixth inning, the Gators added their final run of the night on an RBI double by right fielder Stacy Oatts to give the Gators a 9-3 lead.

The Outcast rallied for three runs in the top of the seventh inning. A three-run dinger to right field off the bat of Hulsey cut the Gator lead to 9-6, for the final score.

Post seeks soldiers to go 10-mile distance

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The 1994 Army 10-miler is just around the corner.

Fort Benning will be conducting a tryout Sept. 17 to select the top five male and female runners to represent Fort Benning in Washington, D.C., Oct. 16. More than 40 other military teams will be on hand for this annual event.

The Fort Benning men's team has done well in the past three years. Last year, the team finished third and in 1991 the team won the Commander's Trophy.

"Several runners from last year's team are still in the area and will no doubt try for the team this year. What is needed are the other runners on post who have the competitive spirit to go the distance and try to make this year's team," said Capt. Dave Millett, a member of last year's team.

"What has been lacking over the last few years has been a strong female team. Start a training program today and it will payoff come September."

For more information, contact Millett at 545-4935 or Jim Brown at 545-5777.

USAIC to sponsor powerlifting tourney

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The U.S. Army Infantry Center powerlifting tournament will take place at Infantry Hall, Room 25, July 23, beginning at 9 a.m.

This competition is open to all active duty personnel, Department of Defense civilians, retirees and family members 18 years of age or older. Nonactive duty personnel will be required to sign a hold harmless agreement.

There is no charge to participate in this competition. Personnel from all military installations are invited to attend.

Weigh-in will take place at the Infantry Hall Fitness Center from 4 to 8 p.m., July 22, and 8 to 9 a.m., July 23. A lifter and administration meeting will immediately follow the weigh-in, with the first event scheduled to begin at 9:30.

Events will be the squat, bench, press and deadlift. Weight classes for male competitors are 114, 123, 132, 148, 165, 181, 198, 220, 242 and unlimited. Female lifters weight classes are 97, 104, 114, 123, 132, 148, 165 and unlimited.

Awards will be presented to the champion and runner-up in each weight class, top male and female in bench press, deadlift, squat and outstanding male and female lifter. No team awards will be presented.

Competitors must register before July 22 by contacting Lula Adams or Billy Clarke at Briant Wells Field House or by calling 545-4388, DSN 835-4388.

The competition will be structured as a series of tournaments, allowing individuals to accumulate points for awards at the end of the season.

For more information, contact Christopher Winterman at 545-5777 or 545-4300.

crime watch

Military Police Activity

The hot topic this week concerns juveniles. Parents are reminded that they are responsible for their children at all times while on Fort Benning.

Now, with summer officially upon us, children will be looking for things to do and new places to play. For safety reasons, parents must ensure that children do not play in the street, in the vicinity of troop training areas, on the golf course or in public buildings. Children should be supervised at all times.

No child under the age of 8 years may be left unattended in a vehicle, and no child under 12 years may be left unattended in government family quarters.

A curfew has been established for children under the age of 18. Family members under the age of 18 are not authorized to be out of their quarters between 10 p.m. and 5 a.m. except when accompanied by a parent or guardian.

Any family member found in violation of this curfew will be escorted to the Military Police station. The parent or sponsor will be required to take the youth back to his or her quarters.

The same curfew applies to all juveniles found on post, whether they are associated with the military or not.

The following entries were extracted from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from June 8 to 14. Such entries may be incomplete and do not determine the guilt or innocence of any person.

• Three soldiers, while traveling in separate vehicles, shouted profanities at each other, then became involved in an argument in the parking lot of an off-post restaurant. After Columbus police arrived, it was discovered that the soldiers had been drinking. The soldiers were charged with drunk and disorderly conduct and indecent language. One soldier was charged with underage drinking.

• An unknown person, while operating a vehicle, hit several traffic cones, which in turn hit a military policeman who was standing in the roadway adjusting other cones. The unknown person then fled the scene.

• A sergeant first class was charged by Columbus police with disorderly conduct while intoxicated after knocking on several residents' doors attempting to gain entry.

• A specialist was observed by military police operating a vehicle believed to be in possession of stolen property. After a traffic stop was initiated, a search of the vehicle revealed a .22 caliber revolver hidden in a cellular phone case. Further investigation revealed that the weapon was not registered on post, and that the specialist's driver's license was suspended.

Other activities included 21 traffic accidents and 10 cases of driving under the influence of alcohol. There were four shoplifting cases reported at exchange facilities and 18 cases of larceny of private property.

Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best — Give Crime Arrest." Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5223 or the "Crime in Progress" line at 545-2222.

ask dr. fit

U.S. Army Physical Fitness School

Q: When is the best time to avoid the skin-cancer-causing rays of the sun?

A: The sun's rays are most harmful when the sun is nearly or directly overhead, usually from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Watch your shadow when you are outside, and head for shelter when the shadow is shorter than you are.

If you must be in the sun, wear tightly woven, cotton material to block the rays and allow the body to ventilate the heat.

Use a sunscreen with a sun protection factor of greater than 15 at least 30 minutes before going into the sun. Lighter-skinned individuals may need a higher SPF.

Q: My daughter was swimming with her bright yellow swim cap on her head and got stung by a bee. Is it possible the bee mistook her for a flower?

A: It is possible. Bees can mistake people for flowers, so it helps to avoid wearing perfume, bright colors and prints. Sweet, drippy foods such as watermelon and ice cream also attract bees.

Q: What do I do for a bee sting?

A: Do not pull out the stinger immediately. A sac at the exposed end could release more venom when squeezed. Instead, scrape only the sac away with a sharp blade and then remove the stinger.

Wash the areas and apply ice and calamine lotion. Another topical application made from baking soda or meat tenderizer and water helps in the treatment of bee stings. Topical or oral antihistamines will provide some relief from the skin irritation.

Q: What are water aerobics?

A: Water aerobics are similar to regular aerobic classes, but are done in the water.

With a leader displaying the moves, pupils push, pull, leap, kick, twist, jump, turn, walk, run, stroke and perform other actions in the water.

Injury risk is low because the water supports your body weight. However, no exercise is foolproof. So listen to the instructor and use common sense.

Water aerobics are sometime presented on post. You can call the Directorate of Community Activities, Community Recreation Division, Physical Activities Section, at 545-7680 for further information.

community care

By Ken Franklin
Martin Army Community Hospital

Thirteen new physicians have joined the Department of Family Practice and Community Medicine.

They will be undergoing residency training to become specialists in family medicine. Patients will see them in various departments in Martin Army Community Hospital and in their regular duties in the Martin Family Practice Clinic.

The new doctors are:

Capt. Bruce Lovins, a graduate of the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences. He enjoys horse and carriage riding; he brought his horse with him from Maryland.

Capt. Barry Pockrandt is a graduate of USHS. He completed Airborne School and flight surgeon training while a medical student.

Capt. Paul Hamm is a graduate of Philadelphia College of Osteopathic Medicine. He enjoys playing football and basketball.

Capt. Richard Livingston Jr. is a graduate of the Medical College of Georgia. He did volunteer work for the homeless during medical school.

Capt. Timothy Cook, a graduate of Marshall University, enjoys reading and drawing and used to coach children's sports.

Capt. Michael Latzka is a graduate of USUHS. He has an 8-month-old daughter and is originally from Florida.

Capt. Terry Newton, a graduate of the University of Texas Health Science Center at Houston, married just five weeks before arriving here.

Capt. Brian Bacak, a graduate of the University of Texas Health Science Center at San Antonio, is a native Texan. He enjoys reading, backpacking and golf.

Lt. Brian Burbank Jr., a graduate of the University of the Health Sciences in Kansas City, is the first Navy physician ever to enter training at Martin Army Community Hospital.

Capt. Eric Shuping, a graduate of USUHS, just completed a tour as flight surgeon for the 5th Special Forces Group at Fort Campbell, Ky.

Capt. Karen Kerle, a graduate of USUHS, did her internship in the Air Force training program at Andrews Air Force Base, Md.

Capt. Joseph Glorioso, a graduate of the West Virginia School of Osteopathic Medicine, hails originally from Baltimore.

One station unit training soldiers MOUT UP

Sgt. Frank Luna, a military operations on urbanized terrain instructor from Company A, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, demonstrates the proper position for throwing a grenade through a window to Pvt. 2 Kirk M. Coulter, Company B, 2nd Battalion, 54h Infantry Regiment.

Infantry Training Brigade

"Grenade!" A soldier throws the grenade through the window and immediately follows it and sprays down the room with his M-16 rifle on burst.

The soldiers of Company B, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, learned this entry echnique and other facets of military operations on urbanized terrain June 23 at the Malone MOUT Site.

MOUT training is an introduction to initial level skills for Infantry One Station Unit Training soldiers during their time at Sand Hill and is used to familiarize soldiers with skills necessary to survive in modern urban warfare.

"The purpose of MOUT is to teach initial entry-level training skills needed to survive on MOUT operations," said Lt. Col. Kevin M. Rice, deputy commander of Infantry Training Brigade.

"The (period of instruction) provides one day of MOUT instruction; however, many battalions are incorporating a MOUT mission in their final field training exercise."

During MOUT training, soldiers were taught how to select hasty firing positions individually and as part of a crew, individual and team movement techniques, entry techniques for upper and lower level entry and how to use grappling hooks, ladders and buddy assistance to enter windows.

"We don't focus on collective tasks," said Sgt. 1st Class Jeffery J. Justice, noncommissioned officer in charge of Malone MOUT Range.

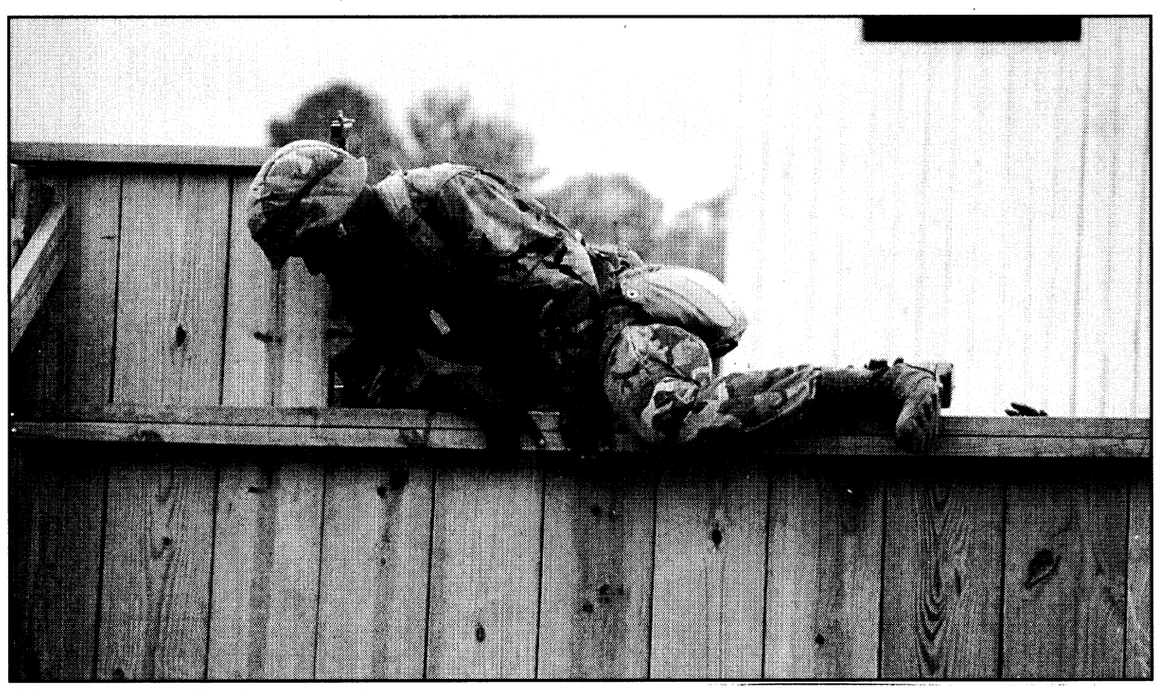
"We train soldiers on fundamentals. We teach doctrine so soldiers are educated when they get to their squad leader and learn their squad's standard operating procedures."

The day of MOUT training began with a class on the selection of hasty fighting positions in urbanized combat.

Cadre taught individual and team movement techniques, followed by instruction on one- and two-man assisted entry into lower level windows.

Upper level entry instruction was on the use of grappling hooks and ladders.

"We teach basic skills a soldier will need to fight effectively in urban terrain," said Sgt. Frank Luna, a member of Company A, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment.



After each team was taught how to clear a building, drill sergeants and instructors conducted an after action review and discussed the training of the day. Instructors encouraged soldiers to give feedback on the training.

75th Rangers

recognize 'best of the best'

Regiment picks soldier, NCO of year

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Two rangers were recognized as the best of the best June 22 when they were awarded the titles of 75th Ranger Regiment soldier and noncommissioned officer of the year.

Spc. Aaron D. Hand of Company B, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, and Staff Sgt. Robert A. Trivino of Company A, 2nd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, beat out a tough group of competitors to earn their titles, said Col. James T. Jackson, commander of the 75th Ranger Regiment.

All of the competitors, Jackson said, were chosen by their respective battalions — the 1st Battalion at Hunter Army Airfield, Ga., the 2nd at Fort Lewis, Wash., and the 3rd here — to represent them at the regimental level in this contest.

"There are no losers in this case," Jackson said to the assembled competitors. "What we have here is a group of winners. There are just two we want to single out."

To earn their titles, Hand and Trivino had to earn the highest marks on a physical fitness test, a combat water survival test, a parachute jump at 1,500 feet from a Blackhawk helicopter, qualification on a moving target range and a four-hour land navigation course, all of which they completed the first day of the competition.

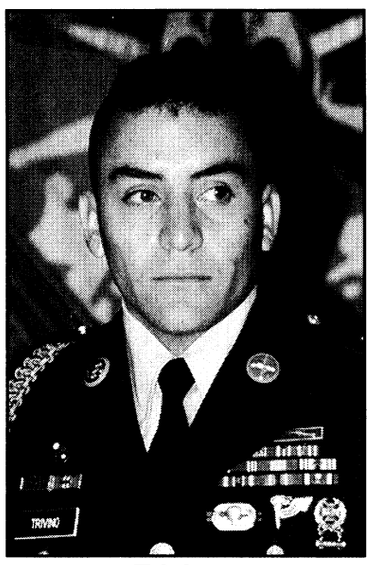
They also faced a "mystery event," — assembling an M16 rifle blindfolded — which took Trivino 2:54.

The day started at 3:30 a.m. and the events went on until about 10 p.m., Trivino said.

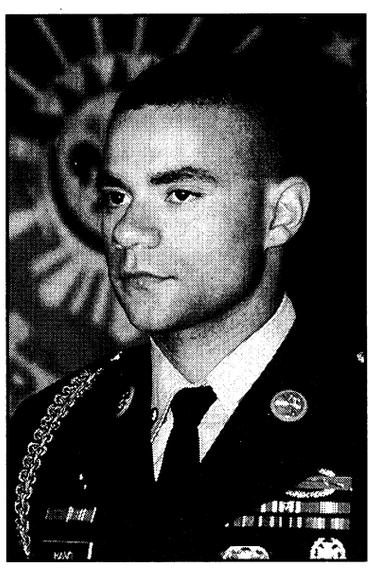
The second day of the competition, the rangers traded in their sweat-soaked utility uniforms for dress greens and spent several hours under the close scrutiny of a board of sergeants major from the different branches of the regiment, who fired questions at them to test their general military knowledge.

"That first day of physical stuff was the most challenging," Hand said. "That's where the points came from — the board was pretty close."

Both Hand and Trivino made points by placing first in their categories on the physical fitness test and the land navigation course.



"That was a gruesome event," Trivino said. "The distance between points was no shorter than two kilometers," he said, and at each point they had to perform a "ranger stakes," or common task-type skill.



Both soldiers also placed second in the airborne operation event, where they were graded on the correct points of exiting the aircraft and how quickly they recovered their gear and returned to a predesignated point on the drop zone.

Winning the competition, Hand said, was a privilege, but something "any soldier in the regiment could have done." His motivation came from competing as a representative of his company and the 3rd Battalion, he said. "I didn't want to let them down."

Trivino, who went back to Washington June 25 with an armful of awards, said he didn't realize winning would be such a big deal.

"When you're there," he said, "you just want to do the best for your unit."

Program teaches safety awareness

Officers, NCO stress importance of using good judgement to stay out of trouble

By Allana Stewart
30th Adjutant General Battalion

Stand Up For Safety Day May 26 at the 30th Adjutant General Battalion (Reception) was designed to change unsafe behaviors exhibited in everyday life. It also gave brand-new soldiers a taste of how serious the Army is about safety.

The program featured four guest speakers and skits, as well as vehicle and safety inspections for the cadre and civilians.

The Military Police Activity was represented by Sgt. Vic Moreno and Spc. Donald Brorsen, who spoke about the consequences of drugs, violence and drunk driving on Fort Benning.

"We'd much rather speak to you now than have to tell you this when you are in our squad car," they said. They added that having personally seen many gruesome accidents, they were eager to prevent more.

Officer Walter Dixon Jr., of the Columbus Police Department Conditional Discharge Program, also gave a presentation.

He said that even the most minor traffic violation can turn into "driving under the influence" if the driver registers even a .01 on the intoximeter. The charge will read "driving ability has been impaired."

Other key points he made were that alcohol is directly tied to violent behavior, that there is growing gang activity in Columbus, and that prostitutes known to have AIDS are still on the streets.

A former 30th AG noncommissioned officer volunteered to talk about his DUI in the hopes that others would learn from his experience.

He said that not only did the arrest cost him financially and land him in hot water with his wife, but it almost cost him his Army career.

Worse than the embarrassment of having to walk or ask for a ride to work was lying to his children, he said. When his daughter asked him why he walked to work, he made up a story about how carpooling would save gas and energy.

He said that a reflection of the high regard members of his chain of command had for him was that they went to bat for him and got his license back. However, now he has limited driving privileges.

He must get permission from the MPs to drive anywhere except work, and then can drive for a specified time only. He even had to get permission to drive to 30th AG to be the guest speaker for Safety Day. To be caught on the road without permission would bring another revocation.

The NCO stressed over and over again that if he hadn't been extremely polite and treated the arresting officer with the respect he had learned both at home and in the military, things would have been much worse. In fact, the arresting officer asked the judge to go easy on him due to his model behavior.

Capt. Jeffrey Fletcher, his former company commander, commented on this soldier's potential before the arrest.

"He was the best NCO I had," Fletcher said. "I guess no matter how squared away you are, if you don't use good judgment all the time, it could happen to you, too. It could happen to anybody."

3rd Bn 75th Ranger Regiment to change hands

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Command of the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, will change hands July 8 during a 9 a.m. ceremony on Peden Field, located across from the battalion headquarters.

Lt. Col. Danny R. McKnight, who has commanded the 3rd Battalion for 17 months, will relinquish command to Lt. Col. Francis H. Kearney III.

Kearney was last assigned as the commander of the 1st Battalion (Airborne), 501st Infantry Regiment, at Fort Richardson, Alaska. He graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., in 1976.

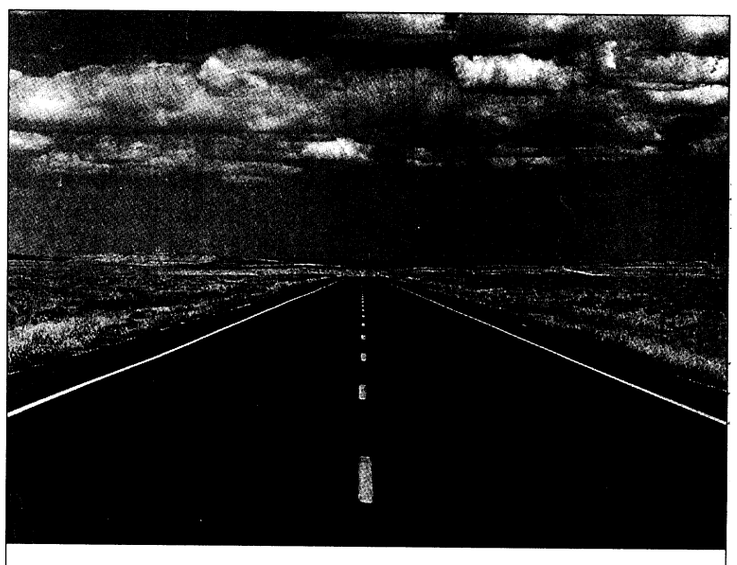
He has previously commanded companies in the 4th Infantry Division, Fort Carson, Colo., and the 2nd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, Fort Lewis, Wash. Kearney deployed to Grenada during Operation Urgent Fury with the 2nd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, and to Panama during Operation Just Cause with the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment.

Kearney had earlier served as interim commander of the 3rd Battalion upon the death of Lt. Col. John T. Keneally, the previous commander. Keneally was killed during a training mission when the helicopter he was riding in crashed into the Great Salt Lake in Utah on Oct. 29, 1992.

Kearney and his wife, Betty, have two sons, Danny and Sean.

McKnight has been selected for promotion to colonel. He was a distinguished military graduate from Florida State University in 1973. He has previously commanded the 4th Battalion, 27th Infantry Regiment, 25th Infantry Division, in Hawaii and a company in the former 197th Infantry Brigade, Fort Benning. He deployed to Panama during Operation Just Cause with the 75th Ranger Regiment.

McKnight was in command of the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, when it deployed to Somalia in August.



Escalating violence in Mogadishu had resulted in the decision to deploy some 400 rangers to reinforce the Quick Reaction Force in Somalia from the 10th Mountain Division.

The rangers' mission was to further augment the capacity of the Quick Reaction Force's ability to provide a rapid response and greater security to U.N. forces in that area.

Six members of the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, were killed Oct. 3 as a result of injuries sustained during a combat operation in Somalia.

Earn these stripes and a lot more.

Lost security clearances can cost soldiers jobs

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — At any time, the jobs of about 350 soldiers are on the line, because of lost security clearances.

Of the Army's many military occupational specialties, 125 require a security clearance.

When soldiers in one of these MOSs lose their clearance, often by violating military or civil law, they must either reclassify into a new skill or leave the service. But first, they have two chances to regain their good standing.

First, the U.S. Central Personnel Security Clearance Facility notifies the soldiers of the intent to revoke a clearance. The CCF will list the reasons for the action, and the soldiers can give their side of the story.

"The second opportunity is about two months later, when CCF makes its final decision and says your clearance has been revoked," said Jerry Brumbaugh, chief of the Reclassification Management Branch, U.S. Total Army Personnel Command.

For 60 days following that, they have a window in which they may apply for reinstatement of their security clearance. About 50 percent of the soldiers who apply for reinstatement, where it's an issue with their MOS, do get reinstated, Brumbaugh said.

Whether soldiers appeal or not, their careers are on hold until the matter is resolved. They become nonpromotable. If on a promotion list, they remain on the list, but won't be advanced "until the soldier has gone through the separation process, found to have retention potential, and is reclassified," Brumbaugh said.

In addition, these soldiers can't re-enlist, move overseas, return from overseas, or take a new assignment within the continental United States. And if they got a bonus for their MOS, they must pay it back, since they no longer qualify for the job.

Brumbaugh suggests quick action from soldiers who lose their MOS-required clearance.

"Time is important, especially for those who are within three years of their retention control point," he said. He explained that it can take up to a year for some cases to be resolved.

Soldiers who lose their clearance close to their tour's end, or when they're nearing their RCP, may run out of time.

Unable to re-enlist or be promoted, the soldiers may be forced to separate from the Army.

"Commanders should be encouraged to bring these impacts to the soldier's attention, and to encourage the soldier to submit requests for reconsideration as early as possible," Brumbaugh said.

"The sooner a decision can be made on his case, the better for the soldier, as well as the Army."

WWII military alike in some ways, different from today's

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — D-Day was two generations ago — ancient history to many younger Americans.

But for 16 million U.S. veterans of World War II, nearly 8 million of whom are alive today, and millions of other Americans of that generation, it was the crucial point in the war against Nazi Germany.

The successful invasion of France speeded the destruction of Adolf Hitler's armies and led to Germany's unconditional surrender in May 1945.

Here are some comparisons between the soldiers, weapons and warfare of World War II and the military of today.

GIs of WW II

The GI — Male, single, 25 years old, 5 feet 8 inches tall, 150 pounds, ninth-grade education.

Wages — $60 a month as a private.

Minorities — The military was segregated. Black troops made up 10.6 percent of the total force.

Women — Active near the battlefield as nurses or behind the front lines in medical and administrative jobs. Women ferried bombers across the ocean and made up a significant part of the civilian work force that built the bombers and other military hardware, but they did not serve in combat units or have combat roles.

Weapons — Standard issue: the M-1 rifle, a .30-caliber semiautomatic. A rifleman could empty an eight-round clip as quickly as he could squeeze the trigger eight times, and an experienced GI could fire several clips a minute.

Food — The staple was the U-ration, which provided 3,700 calories a day. The menu varied: pork shoulder meat, processed cheese, biscuits, crackers, instant coffee, a fruit bar, a chocolate bar, bouillon, highly unpopular lemon juice crystals, sugar tablets and a stick of chewing gum.

Getting to war — Huge transport ships. Soldiers and equipment were ferried across an ocean in a journey that took a week and was threatened by German submarines.

Training — Many of the soldiers were draftees and their training was ongoing. After boot camp, during which most learned how to carry and shoot a rifle, the soldiers spent months in Britain honing special skills for D-Day.

Off duty — Soldiers went on leave to London or other British cities. They attended dances; thousands of GIs married British women. Britain was at war and was subject to German bombing runs, particularly missile attacks. So even on leave, soldiers had to be cautious.

Security — "Loose Lips Sink Ships" were poster words slapped on barracks walls reminding soldiers that casual conversations about their training or hearsay about departure dates for a European invasion could get to enemy spies.

News reporters moved freely among troops and there were numerous feature stories published in stateside papers about the soldiers training in England for the invasion of France. When would that be? Only the general staff knew.

But all America expected the invasion of France. A month before D-Day, the Free Press began running short stories on Page 1 about weather conditions in the English Channel — anticipating the invasion.

Entertainment — USO shows brought stateside entertainers. The big draws: Bob Hope and the Andrews Sisters. Many entertainers joined the armed forces and were assigned jobs entertaining troops.

One of the most famous: big band leader Glenn Miller. Miller was presumed killed when his aircraft disappeared over the English Channel in December 1944.

About one in eight soldiers is a woman. Women have been assimilated into most military occupations. Women don't tote rifles into battles, but they are assigned to combat units.

News media — The big names: Broadcaster Edward R. Murrow and newspaper report Ernie Pyle. War correspondents hit the Normandy beaches with troops. While their reports were censored, they clearly saw the Axis forces for Germany and Italy and Japan as enemies. Because they were censored, dispatches were delayed by several hours and sometimes days.

GIs today

The GI — 60 percent are married; 27 years old; 5 feet 9 inches tall; 173 pounds; high school graduate.

Wages — $933 a month as a private.

Minorities — The services were desegregated in 1948. Some branches moved more swiftly than others to integrate their ranks. Today, about 30 percent of soldiers are black, 5 percent Hispanic.

Women — About one in eight soldiers is a woman. Women have been assimilated into most military occupations. Women don't tote rifles into battles, but they are assigned to combat units. In the Air Force, women are trained as combat pilots. In the Navy, they command warships.

Weapons — The standard issue is the M-16. Foot soldiers also can count on computer-guided artillery night-vision goggles, laser beams to sight rifles, bazookas kept on target by video-age joysticks, jet-powered helicopters and all sorts of sophisticated armor.

Food — The field staple is called an MRE (meal, ready to eat). Three MREs daily provide 3,500 calories.

A sample meal includes escalloped potatoes with ham, applesauce, crackers, a chocolate-covered brownie, grape jelly, cocoa powder and an accessory pack of instant coffee, cream substitute, sugar, salt, chewing gum, matches, toilet tissue and a moist towelette. An extra pouch contains white bread with a shelf life of two years.

Getting to war — Huge transport planes. The Army has rapid deployment forces that pack up troops, tanks, ammo and kitchen sinks and fly them anywhere in the world on almost a moment's notice.

Training — It's a volunteer force; no draftees. Troops get eight weeks of basic combat training and then attend one of numerous advanced individual training programs. Peacetime forces train for combat in several conditions — including fighting in the desert. For the Persian Gulf War, troops began arriving six months before ground combat started and erected numerous base camps that contained supplies, equipment and billets.

Off duty — Since so many soldiers today are married, they go home when off duty. During the Gulf War, troops stationed in Saudi Arabia were expected to behave according to Saudi custom — meaning alcoholic beverages weren't permitted.

Security — GIs were instructed during the Gulf War to avoid talking to reporters to avoid giving away military secrets. Interviews with soldiers were orchestrated by military public affairs officers. While many troops wrote home, most called.

Entertainment — Satellite dishes brought live television: Desert Storm troops plopped in front of television sets and watched Whitney Houston sing the national anthem during Super Bowl XXIV. There were live entertainers, too, including Bob Hope.

News media — Reporters and Pentagon public affairs officers regularly battled over access to troops and information. The opening salvo in the war with hundreds of U.S. and allied jets flying over Baghdad was covered live by CNN correspondents from their hotel room in that city. Daily Pentagon news briefings were broadcast live. Newspapers ran elaborate maps and graphics showing battle maneuvers and weapons specifications.

2/54 to change commanders

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, will change commanders Wednesday during a 9 a.m. ceremony on Wetherby Field.

Lt. Col. Gary G. Dacey will hand over command to Lt. Col. Richard J. Marchant.

Dacey is leaving Fort Benning for the National War College at Fort McNair in Washington, D.C.

Marchant comes to Fort Benning after serving as director of operations for Joint Task Force Full Accounting, U.S. Commander-in-Chief Pacific Area Command.

Marchant was born in Boston, and is a 1976 graduate of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y. During his Army career, Marchant served in a number of command and staff positions.

His most recent assignments include: chief for plans and exercises with the 6th Infantry Division at Fort Richardson, Alaska; battalion executive officer for the 5th Battalion, 9th Infantry Regiment, at Fort Wainwright, Alaska; and secretary of the general staff for the 6th Infantry Division.

Marchant has a master's degree in business from Webster University and a master's degree in military art and science from the Command and General Staff College. His other military schools include the Infantry Officer Advanced Course and the School of Advanced Military Studies.

His awards and decorations include three awards of the Defense Meritorious Service Medal, five awards of the Army Commendation Medal, the Army Achievement Medal, Parachutist Badge, Ranger Tab and Expert Infantryman Badge.

Marchant and his wife, Karen, have two children.

TRADOC acquires new CSM

By Jim Caldwell
TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — Command Sgt. Maj. Gilbert F. Paez will be the new command sergeant major for the Training and Doctrine Command.

Paez

Paez succeeds Command Sgt. Maj. Walton E. Woodall, who will retire Thursday with more than 31 years active Army service.

As TRADOC's senior enlisted soldier, Paez will ensure the enlisted viewpoint is represented in training and doctrine and combat development programs.

Paez currently serves as command sergeant major for V Corps, Frankfurt, Germany. A 30-year veteran, he has held every noncommissioned officer leadership position from squad leader up to first sergeant before being promoted to command sergeant major in 1988.

He was command sergeant major with the 1st Cavalry Division, Fort Hood, Texas, when the unit deployed to Saudi Arabia and fought in Iraq during Operation Desert Storm. He also served in Vietnam from 1971 to 1972.

Before joining the 1st Cavalry, he was command sergeant major for the 7th Army Training Command, Grafenwoehr, Germany.

Paez is currently on his fourth tour of duty in Germany. He has also served a year in Korea.

"He is a trainer who fully understands the training doctrine while actively sharing his knowledge," said Lt. Gen. Jerry R. Rutherford, V Corps commander.

He and his wife, Alma, have three children.

to feature some of country music's 'best'

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet©

For fans who enjoy some of the best talent in the country music business, three country music stars will perform songs about lovin', cryin', cheatin' and lyin' at a jamboree July 16 at 3:30 p.m. at Doughboy Stadium.

Steve Wariner, Deborah Allen and Daron Norwood will perform at the three-hour concert.

Admission with a Fort Benning military or civilian identification card is $4, $6 for the general public, and free for children 6 years and under accompanied by an adult with a ticket.

Tickets are available the day of the concert at the gate; advance tickets are available at any post club, bowling center, or at the Information, Ticketing and Reservation Office, Building 247.

Advance tickets are available off post at all BP Quick Cash locations.

Representatives from local country music radio station Kissin 99.3 will emcee the concert and introduce featured performers.

Wariner has more than 10 No. 1 singles to his credit including "Some Fools Never Learn," and "Where Did I Go Wrong?"

A noted vocalist, Wariner is also a songwriter and guitarist.

Also featured will be Southern musicians Allen and Norwood.

Allen, a premier songwriter from the country music capital, Nashville, is known for her melodious style that combines elements of soul and country music.

Her first major release was "Delta Dream Land." Her single, "Baby, I Lied," was one of the top five country hits in 1984 and was nominated for a Grammy Award.

Norwood of Atlanta will round out the concert with his distinct style of charismatic entertaining, sharpened through years of performing in churches as the son of a Baptist evangelist.

A noted pianist and vocalist, he has just released "If It Wasn't for Her."

The Fort Benning clubs will sell food, beer and soda. No cans, bottles or picnic items may be brought into the stadium. Military Police Activity officials said this will be strictly enforced.

Corporate sponsors for the event include Miller, AT&T and 7-Up.

3-year residents complete training program

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet©

Graduating physicians completing a three-year residency program were encouraged to continue building the specialty known as family practice that "has grown from a flickering flame into a roaring fire" over a score of years, according to guest speaker Col. Reginald Moore.

Moore, deputy director for medical readiness, Logistics, the joint staff in Washington, addressed graduating residents and interns at the annual ceremony in the post chapel June 23 for the Family Practice Department of Martin Army Community Hospital.

The ceremony marked the completion of a three-year family practice residency training program for 10 physicians.

The ceremony also included nine physicians just completing their first year of family practice training, or internship.

Six of the interns will go on to complete their family practice residency at MACH, while three others will perform a tour of duty as a general medical officer.

The graduating residents have satisfied the requirements of an accredited family practice program and are eligible to take the board examination for family practice certification.

"Health-care delivery is in a state of flux. Managed care is here to stay. Primary-care physicians will get due recognition as the foundation of health-care delivery."

— Col. Michael Kussman
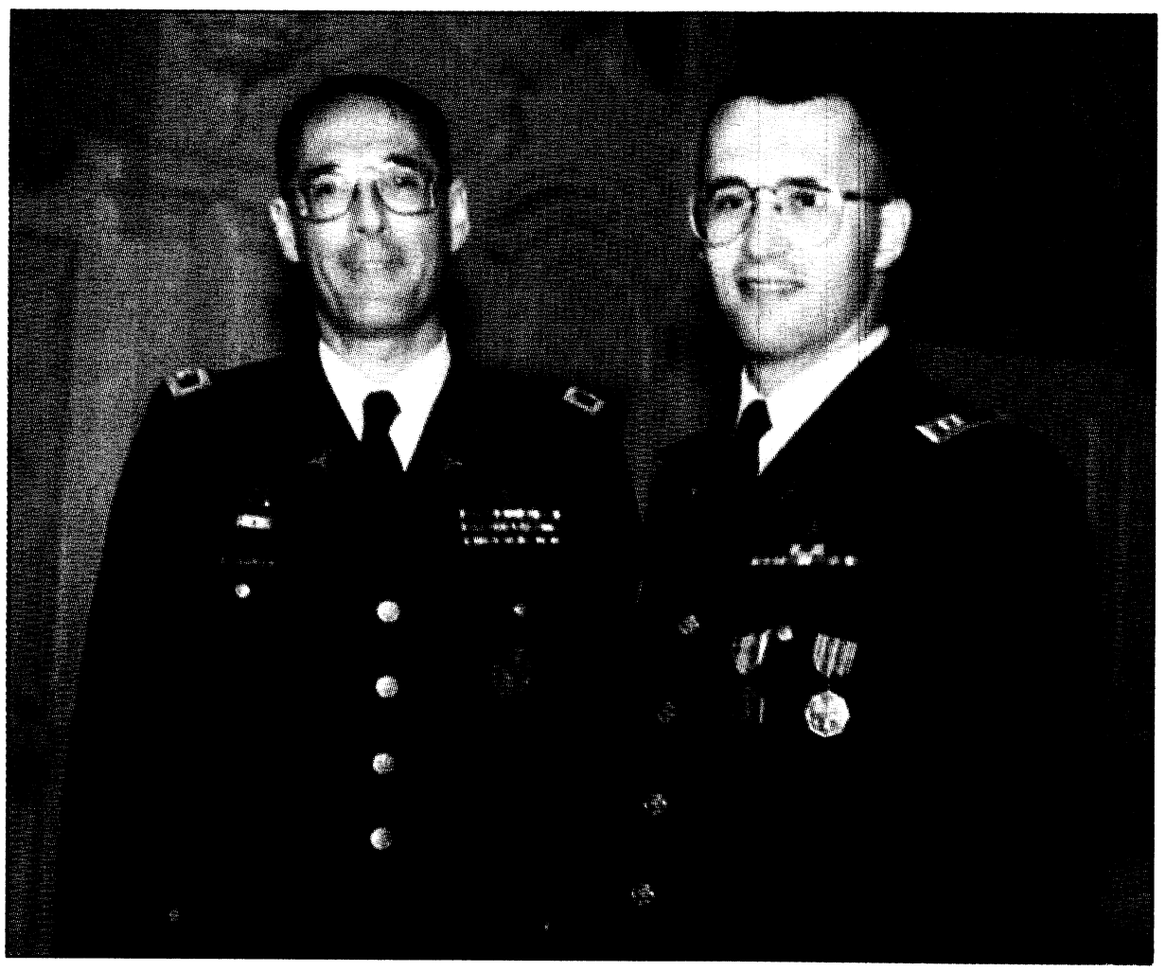
Commander, Martin Army Community Hospital

As family practice physicians, the new graduates will be on the forefront of health-care reform, said Moore.

In addition to assuring that soldiers in the field receive the best of care, family practitioners will also be tasked to take over the primary care in post clinics and coordinate an efficient patient care team, he added.

Moore, a family practice physician and former head of the MACH Family Practice Department, said the Army medical system is undergoing dramatic changes, and predicted "a form of family practice will spread to all military locations."



Primary care physicians, or family practitioners, will serve as gatekeepers for the future health-care system while providing comprehensive, compassionate care in an economically efficient manner without impinging on quality, said Moore.

Moore said as a new generation of family practitioners "you have many opportunities ahead" to contribute to the growth of this specialty.

In addition to Moore's speech, Col. Michael Kussman, Martin Army Community Hospital commander, spoke on the changing face of the health care system.

"Health-care delivery is in a state of flux. Managed care is here to stay," said Kussman.

"Primary-care physicians will get due recognition as the foundation of health-care delivery," he said.

Hospital Commander Col. Michael Kussman (left) congratulates Capt. Michael Place, recipient of the Outstanding Resident Award. Place has been assigned as a physician with the 75th Ranger Regiment.

Kussman also extended congratulations on the recent five-year renewal of accreditation for the program to Lt. Col. Steven Reissman, director of the family practice residency program, and Col. Gerald Cross, deputy commander for clinical services.

The five-year accreditation honor is the highest form of recognition that can be presented by the Residency Review Committee of the Accreditation Council for Graduate Medical Education.

Receiving the coveted five-year renewal "is no easy feat," Kussman said. As the oldest family practice residency program in the Army and one of the largest, MACH has graduated more than 150 doctors since 1972.

This year's program included 32 residents and interns.

Also as part of the graduation program, Kussman and Cross presented the outstanding resident award to Capt. Michael Place and recognized the program's two chief residents, Place and Capt. Carol Moores, doctors in the final year of training who took on additional duties to help the program run smoothly.

Following the ceremony, speakers, graduates and guests attended a reception at the hospital.

Post to protect pitcher plants

By Allen Pursell
Natural Resources Management Branch

Fort Benning has entered into an agreement with the Nature Conservancy of Georgia to protect the state-endangered sweet pitcher plant (sarracenia rubra).

Pitcher plants are carnivorous plants that are becoming increasingly rare as their wetland habitats are drained or converted to other uses.

Fort Benning has some of Georgia's best populations of the sweet pitcher plant.

The Nature Conservancy, a private, nonprofit conservation organization, is developing restoration and management plans for two pitcher plant communities as part of the Department of Defense's Legacy Resource Management Program.

The program is designed to showcase DoD's commitment to protecting and preserving natural and cultural resources. DoD lands are host to numerous unique natural areas harboring America's natural heritage.

The Nature Conservancy of Georgia's plans call for monitoring the populations and ensuring that fire is used as a management tool. In fact, fires created by Army training activities actually benefit the pitcher plants.

Fire suppression throughout the South is leading to the decline of many rare plants, animals and natural communities that were dependent on lightning-caused fires.

For more information, contact the Natural Resources Management Branch at 544-6206 or the Nature Conservancy of Georgia, 1401 Peachtree St., Suite 236, Atlanta Ga. 30309 or call (404) 873-6946.

Volunteers plant 4,000 trees on post

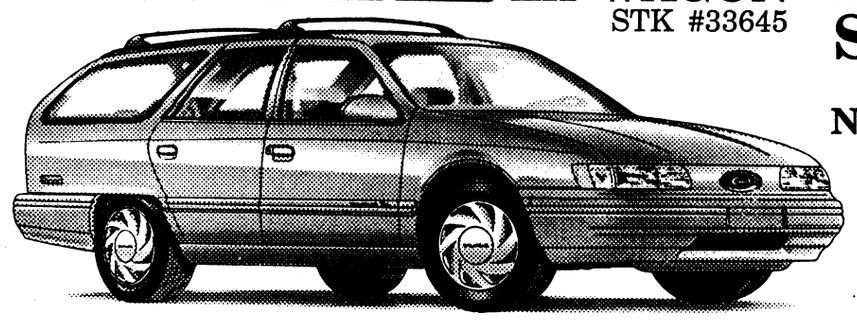
Natural Resources Management Branch

With the assistance of volunteers, 4,000 trees were planted throughout Fort Benning recently.

Sawtooth oak, funds crabapple, and persimmon trees were planted in existing wildlife openings to provide a long-term, low-maintenance source of food, cover and nesting sites for a number of wildlife species, including raccoons, foxes, rabbits, squirrels, deer and a variety of birds.

A total of 43 volunteers contributed more than 300 hours in the last six months on numerous projects, including planting trees, checking wood duck and bluebird boxes, feeding catfish, operating farm tractors and working at the Deer Check Station.



Volunteers include both active duty and retired military personnel, Department of Defense civilians, family members and Boy Scout groups.

The Natural Resources Management Branch Volunteer Program provides a variety of opportunities for individuals to improve habitat for wildlife while gaining knowledge and experience about wildlife management on Fort Benning.

Anyone interested in volunteering for natural resources activities can contact Jeff Brooks, Natural Resources Management Branch, at 544-6206.

OPM makes leave sharing easier

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

The Office of Personnel Management recently made the leave-sharing program more flexible. The interim rules are effective immediately.

Now, agencies have independent authority to set up both leave transfer programs and leave banks. Before, agencies had to ask OPM's permission to set up a leave bank program.

Also, agencies can now have both leave banks and leave-transfer programs, and eligible employees will be able to take leave from both programs during the same medical emergency. Through both programs, employees can now transfer leave to employees in other agencies if they wish, as well.

The new rules make it easier to qualify as a leave recipient. Before, program administrators had to consider the amount of advanced leave an employee had available in addition to earned annual and sick leave. Now, only earned annual and sick leave will be considered.

Finally, when employees deplete the leave donated to them, they can use any annual or sick leave they accrue while in a shared-leave status.

"This program ... creates a family-friendly workplace and gives agencies the flexibility they need to be responsive to their employees," said OPM Director Jim King, who announced the changes.

In both programs, contributors can donate annual leave directly to a specified employee facing a personal or family medical emergency.

Leave banks work as a sort of insurance policy — employees donate annual leave to their agency leave banks when they are healthy. If they later have personal or family medical emergencies, leave bank members can apply to use leave from the bank.

Independence: Americans honor country with celebrations as U.S. turns 218

By Alex Brown
2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment

reflections

In just a few days, the United States of America will celebrate another birthday. This Fourth of July marks the 218th year since the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

That declaration of 1776 was the first of several steps to make 13 colonies on the Atlantic shore into a new nation, independent of the king of England.

An infant nation, having severed its umbilical cord, became independent, but not self-sufficient. A new nation, soon to establish a system of checks and balances with separate and divided powers became self-governing, but not self-sustaining America became an independent nation but it remains dependent.

God has truly blessed America, but other nations of the world have been blessed as well with natural and human resources. As Americans, we must take care to keep an "Olympic spirit" as we interact with other nations of the world.

Martin Luther King Jr. expresses this idea in this statement.

"All men are interdependent. Every nation is an heir of a vast treasury of ideas and labor to which both the living and the dead of all nations have contributed. Whether we realize it or not, each of us lives eternally "in the red." We are everlasting debtors to known and unknown men and women. When we arise in the morning, we go into the bathroom where we reach for a sponge which is provided for us by Pacific Islander. We reach for soap that is created for us by a European. Then at the table we drink coffee, which is provided for us by a South American, or tea by a Chinese, or cocoa by a West African. Before we leave for our jobs we are already beholden to more than half the world."

America's independence is indeed a blessing, but it is not a statement of detachment from all other nations of the world.

What is true for the nation is also applicable to "we the people" of the nation. As individuals we remain always dependent upon others who have gone before us. We are dependent on those with whom we live, work, and play.

Every activity in which we engage, every place that we go should remind us that many others make it possible.

Someone across the world made the running shoes. The tires on our automobiles were made in some city across the country and handled by some 10 different people before reaching the car. (I won't mention the many hands that made the car and its parts.)

Think a moment of all the people involved in bringing food to your table and especially the spouse, parent or dining facility cook who finally prepares the meal.

As you climb your ladder of success, remember that someone else made the ladder.

As you celebrate your freedom in independent America, remember that the hot dogs and the grill upon which you cook were made available by the sacrifice of others.

Forefathers understood freedom

By Carl Young
USAIC Chaplains' Office

reflections

The Fourth of July is for picnics, parades and cookouts, with time to relax while enjoying family and friends. Some even remember it is Independence Day. It was on this date in 1776 the Declaration of Independence was approved by the Continental Congress.

As we approach this great holiday, I was asked, "What does God have to do with the Fourth of July?" I found the answer in the following words, "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

These words are more than a simple collection of terms. They reflect the inspiration for men and women to embark on an endless quest for freedom.

Someone said that in order to be free you must first understand your past. Our founding fathers understood that the "creator" — God — is our source of freedom. When God created humankind, we were given the freedom of thought and action. God even gave us the freedom to choose or ignore him. It was his belief in the rights of individuals that placed an unusual spirit in America.

We as Americans can agree or disagree, be liberal or conservative, and have different opinions on almost every subject, yet we remain united as a nation.

Our biblical history is full of examples of where God blessed his people when they forgot the source of their blessings. They no longer thanked God or depended on him for the blessings.

It is like driving your car. You are riding along feeling very comfortable and relaxed — moving down the road toward your destination. Then you notice that the gas gauge is telling you that you are close to empty; yet, because you are really enjoying the ride you don't want to stop.

We can also use the example of the young adult who moves out of his parents' home and is enjoying his freedom. Everything is great until he needs some money or some advice or just misses the family he left.

If we are a wise person who is willing to correct our behavior and do the right thing, then our life is more productive and we are blessed.

Freedom is similar to these illustrations. Let us enjoy all the benefits of living in a free nation, but not forget the cost and source of freedom. Our liberties exist because individuals "endowed by their creator" stood up to defend this great nation. We as a nation remain great because we have not forgotten God. I encourage and I pray, that you along with me will remember the source of our values.

We must lift the banner of love, seek him as Lord, and remember his love for us. God our creator, has given us "life, liberty and the ability to pursue happiness."

On this Fourth of July, give thanks for the food, praise those who parade in celebration, take time for your family, and do not forget your creator.

Music stars celebrate 'A Capitol Fourth'

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

Fireworks and picnics are parts of the tradition, and so is an annual public-television special.

SPOTLIGHT

Along with the other rituals of the Fourth of July, the PBS presentation of "A Capitol Fourth" is a holiday staple, and this year's 15th-anniversary edition will be telecast — appropriately enough — on Monday from its usual location, the West Lawn of the U.S. Capitol in Washington, D.C. Though E.G. Marshall (who will be seen in CBS' fall medical drama "Chicago Hope") usually has been the host of the event, that role goes this year to Joel Grey, who appeared on a past version to perform a tribute to George M. Cohan. (Grey earned a Tony nomination for portraying that showman in the Broadway hit "George M.")

Among the other featured artists on the program are Aaron Neville and the Neville Brothers, country-music sensation Faith Hill, "Brady Bunch" alumna Florence Henderson and stage-musical veteran John Raitt (the father of pop star Bonnie). Erich Kunzel returns to conduct the National Symphony Orchestra, and also scheduled to take part are the U.S. Army Chorus, the U.S. Army Old Fife and Drum Corps, the U.S. Air Force Ceremonial Brass and the U.S. Joint Armed Forces Color Guard. As usual, the tuneful offering will be simulcast by National Public Radio, and also transmitted to more than 135 countries around the world via Armed Forces Radio and Television Service.

Fireworks illuminate the U.S. Capitol on the Fourth of July

Well-known for her crooning skills long before she became TV's "lovely lady who was bringing up three very lovely girls," Henderson will be teamed with Raitt on "A Capitol Fourth 1994" to render tunes from the classic Rodgers and Hammerstein show "Carousel," the current Broadway revival of which recently won five Tony Awards.

What: "A Capitol Fourth"
When: Monday on PBS

"It's always so moving to me," the pleasant singer-actress says of the July Fourth special, "and I guess it is to a lot of people, just that whole atmosphere and the fact that it's so patriotic. I'm like a kid when it comes to this, because it's just so exciting when the fireworks go off and all that. I've been singing 'The Star-Spangled Banner' for the last five years at the Indianapolis 500, and people really get moved by it. That's very interesting to me, and with this, I would imagine that (feeling) will be multiplied many times over. I'm really excited by the prospect of being a part of it, and I really can't conceive of it before I get there. There are going to be something like 500,000 people there, plus all of those who are watching at home."

Henderson will render "June Is Bustin' Out All Over," then team with Raitt for a duet of "If I Loved You;" she's particularly pleased to be doing numbers by the legendary team of Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II.

DoD provides assistance for Desert Storm veterans

By Caejar A. Cox
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Defense Department is sending letters to vets of operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm. The letters, signed by Secretary of Defense William Perry and Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Gen. John Shalikashvili, ask the vets if they are experiencing health problems and to come in for an evaluation.

Watch "Fort Benning Today" to find out the latest news on the Gulf War syndrome.

It may soon become easier for retirees and family members to get their prescriptions filled. New mail order pharmacies are currently being tested in the United States and will soon start in Georgia. Officials say the new system will be more convenient and cost effective for patients.

Stone Mountain Park to have a blast this weekend

Stone Mountain Park

A variety of entertainment awaits visitors to Stone Mountain Park this weekend.

Beginning at 3 p.m. Saturday, and running through Monday, a variety of bands tune up and belt out their tunes on Memorial Lawn.

As the sun sets, blast-off in the "Lasershow '94 Time Capsule" with Buford Bear featuring segments from the past 12 years of Lasershow production.

Then the fireworks heat up as they burst in a choreographed display of color, sparkles, and streams skyrocketing this patriotic weekend into a full-fledged celebration.

Georgia's Stone Mountain Park is open daily from 6 a.m. until midnight. Entry requires a valid parking permit, which may be purchased daily for $5 or yearly for $20.

The park is located on U.S. Highway 78, 15 miles east of downtown Atlanta.

For more information, call (404) 498-5702.

Danny DeVito (right) stars as Bill Rago, a civilian advertising man hired by the U.S. Army to teach a group of intellectually dim recruits to be all they can be in Touchstone Pictures' new comedy/drama "Renaissance Man." The learning process becomes a "confidence course" that is physically and intellectually challenging. The movie was filmed in part at Fort Jackson, S.C.

Parks to feature July 4th celebration

Ga. Department of Natural Resources

Georgia Veterans State Park kicks off the Watermelon Days Festival with an Independence Day Celebration Saturday.

Festivities, which will be from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m, include old-fashioned games, back-yard cookoff, a battle of the bands and fireworks extravaganza.

Old-fashioned games will be held throughout the day, with the main session at 10 a.m.

There will be sack races, three-legged races, an egg toss, wagon race, wheelbarrow race, tug of war, spoon race and egg relay.

At 12:15 p.m., there will be a watermelon cutting followed by a youth seed-spitting contest. Activities for the rest of the afternoon include water bucket relays, horseshoe contest, badminton and water balloon wars.

The park will also host the backyard cookoff near the beach area.

The battle of the bands will begin at 6 p.m. in the same area. Capping off the day's events will be the fireworks extravaganza over Lake Blackshear.

Physical fitness

Degree available

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

A physical education degree with emphasis in physical fitness leadership is now being offered on Fort Benning.

The program, available through Upper Iowa University, offers an associate of arts or bachelor of science degree in physical education.

The program is designed to produce leaders who excel physically as well as intellectually, and who are disciplined, physically fit, articulate and motivated, said Ed Thomas, program director.

The program's curriculum is transformation-based, Thomas said. "When soldiers and civilians are finished with this training, they will be markedly more fit than when they began."

But the program is not just theoretical or sports-based, Thomas said.

"It is about knowing the body from the inside as well as the outside ... and using the body as a vehicle to develop the whole person," he said.

The major courses are divided among three areas: theoretical, restorative and martial arts.

The theoretical portion covers the foundation on which the restorative and martial arts are built, with class choices in subjects like kinesiology, nutrition, human anatomy and exercise physiology, among others.

The restorative portion covers systems and techniques that bring the body toward its optimum level of function and performance. Class choices range from flexibility, posture and relaxation to aquatics and resistance exercises.

The martial arts courses teach appropriate responses to external aggression and are based on the distance of the opponent, from close-range (grappling) to the use of weapons.

"This curriculum is in step with current Army physical training doctrine," said Steve Van Camp, the Master Fitness Course director for the U.S. Army Physical Fitness School, who will be teaching the Foundations of Conditioning course.

"I see it as a tremendous off-duty educational opportunity," he said.

The first courses to be offered are worth three credit hours and are as follows:

- Introduction to Restorative and Martial Arts will meet Mondays from 6 to 10 p.m., starting Monday and running through Aug. 29
- Foundations of Conditioning will meet Tuesdays from 6 to 10 p.m., through Aug. 30
- Posture and Relaxation will run three consecutive Saturdays from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m., July 16, 23 and 30
- Medium Range Combatives will run Saturdays from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m., Aug. 6, 13 and 20.

Registration is now under way, with late registration running through July 15.

For more information or to register, call Thomas at 685-9555 or stop by the Fort Benning office of Upper Iowa University in Building 2612, Soldiers' Plaza.

New medal available for soldier volunteers

TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va., — A new military medal is available to recognize soldiers who have significant records of service to their communities.

The award is the Military Outstanding Volunteer Service Medal .

"With the establishment of this medal, our leaders are saying that volunteerism is honorable and these military members who give of themselves for extended periods of time should be recognized," said Marilyn Keener, military personnel relations technician with Training and Doctrine Command's adjutant general.

The medal was actually approved by executive order in January 1993. Military volunteers who have made significant contributions since Jan. 1, 1993, are eligible for the medal.

Actual medals will not be produced until June, but ribbons are now available.

To qualify for the award, a soldier's volunteer work must be of a significant nature and provide tangible results for either the local civilian or military family community. Although the service provided must be significant, the award cannot be for a single act, nor be part of a unit tasking or project.

Commanders overseas or in the United States with the rank or brigadier general or higher, or colonels who have general court martial authority, may approve award of the medal.

If an Army leader nominates a member of a sister service for the medal, it must be approved by commanders of the major command.

4/41 departs for exercise in Kuwait

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Soldiers from Battery B of the 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment, left wet and muggy Fort Benning behind Tuesday morning for the hot, dry deserts of Kuwait.

The battery makes up the largest contingent of Fort Benning troops deploying there to participate in Operation Intrinsic Action, a two-month desert field training exercise.

Fourteen soldiers from the 89th Ordnance Detachment, 15 to 20 members of the 498th Medical Company (Air Ambulance) and eight soldiers from the 36th Engineer Group will also participate in the exercise.

Battery Commander Capt. Michael L. Longarzo said he believes his unit is well prepared, having recently returned from a rotation at the National Training Center in the Mojave Desert at Fort Irwin, Calif.

"The temperature at (the National Training Center) now is 110 degrees — I hear that's about what Kuwait is now," Longarzo said.

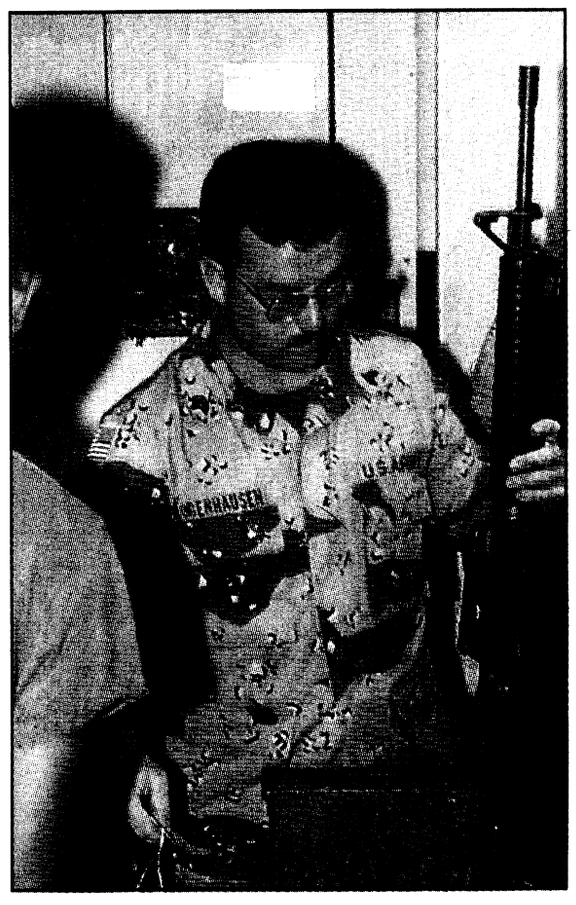
Another point to their advantage is that for many of the soldiers, this will not be their first trip to the Persian Gulf.

"We have a lot of Desert Storm veterans, especially the more senior (noncommissioned officers)," said Spc. Carl E. Swan, who deployed to Operations Desert Shield and Storm out of Fort Sill, Okla., with the 75th Field Artillery Brigade.

"I never actually got the chance then to go into Kuwait," he said. "It'll be interesting to see what it looks like now."

"When they first told us we were going, I got kind of excited to be going back," said Sgt. Michael B. Patton, who was in Saudi Arabia from October 1990 to April 1991.

"The training will be good, and the soldiers who didn't go to Desert Storm will get a chance to see what it's really like," he said.



After six rotations to the National Training Center in the last two years, many of the soldiers know their way around there.

This exercise will give them a chance to hone their land navigation, map reading and vehicle identification skills, Patton said. "It's easy to get lost in the desert," he said.

Staff Sgt. Baron K. Ransome, another Desert Shield and Storm veteran, is also looking forward to training in the Persian Gulf.

"It's a lot better (going there) this time, because it's just going to be training," he said.

The group is expected to return between Aug. 23 and 26.

Whiners, complainers ... let's get rid of 'em

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

commentary

Nothing frosts me more than whiners. We are becoming a nation of complainers and excuse makers. Nothing is ever our fault. It's always someone else's fault.

And yes, the Army is a reflection of society, and we've got our whiners right here in Fort Benning.

We haven't even had our first air-conditioner curtailment and already some misinformed house husband is calling Army Times and reporting that at Fort Benning, air will be curtailed nine hours a day for the entire summer.

Already we are hearing from family housing occupants who'd rather see money spent to keep them cooled than pay for civilians who make their lives easier the year round.

Lady, gentleman, if you can't stand the heat, move. No one is holding a gun to your head making you live on post.

If you want to be cool, find yourself an apartment or home in town. Then you can set your air to any temperature you want (or can afford).

Yeah, Uncle won't be paying your air conditioning and heating bill when you're off post.

Now I know you think it's your God-given right to stay on post and be comfortable; and, if you're not being kept comfortable, then you're the first to call the BOSS Line.

Of course if we opt to keep you cool, who do we think will be first in line to complain because it took them an hour and a half to get an identification card or the first to complain because the plumber took four hours to get to your leaky faucet?

Hey, I'm sorry you're inconvenienced. But if you're feeling hot during an airconditioner curtailment, come visit us in The Bayonet office.

We'll be only too glad to share a few beads of sweat with you.

Yep, times are tough. But this air-conditioner business is not a new phenomena. It's been with us even when we had money to spend, but didn't because we were trying to meet energy goals.

Now it's a setting of priorities. And oh, by the way, if family housing money keeps getting cut, no one will have to worry about air curtailments, because we'll all be living off post.

Yep. Money's so tight we could soon see the time when all families live off post because we can't maintain quarters.

While I'm in my sniffling mode and the subject is family housing, I'd also like to point out that mayoral meetings are not the place to air gripes about individuals in our housing area. Discussing personalities and the type of punishment certain individuals should get because they displease us should be done with either the person's chain of command or community life noncommissioned officer in private ... this after we try to reason with that person ... realizing not everyone can be reasoned with.

But anyway, that's my opinion and I'm stuck with it.

Men of D-Day remember their longest day

By Bill Harris
Army News Service

commentary

June 21 — They came from America's heartland, from its distant West Coast, from the deep South, and from the East from Maryland to Maine.

They saw hedge-rowed farmlands near Colleville sur Mer, the foreboding cliffs at Pointe du Hoc, the wide swaths of barren sand at Omaha and Utah beaches, the drop zones near St. Mere Eglise.

And like they did 50 years ago, they conquered Normandy again, these men of D-Day. This time they did it without firing a shot, without losing a friend. Even though the sounds of war were part of a distant past, their memories of that day and of the days that followed became more vivid than they wanted to recall.

But recall they did. A week before the commemoration, an engineer, a D-Day veteran of Utah Beach, drives to Belgium. He takes popcorn with him. He drives to the village where he lived for several months while his unit was supporting Patton's Third Army. He recognizes the house, virtually unchanged after all those years, and knocks on the door. When no one answers, he turns to a villager and shows him a photo of the two boys who shared that house with him. Then, they were 13 and 15.

The neighbor points to a farmer on a tractor in a nearby field, and then points to the picture. As he approaches the tractor, the veteran takes out the popcorn and the photo, but the popcorn is enough. The now 65-year-old farmer stares into his face, glances down at the popcorn, and knows. It's his long-lost boarder, who had introduced his family to that uniquely American snack 50 years ago. The boys never married and still live in the same house. They cry when the veteran and his wife leave two days later. It was his first time back.

Not so for many of the 30 veterans of the air drop near St. Mere Eglise, who have returned many times on foot but who now jump again out of C-47s, while cameras whir and townspeople gape.

Bedecked in replicas of their World War II jump uniforms, they float downward, land without serious mishap and strut in shining brown boots to the reviewing stand. Like before, they are welcomed as the heroes who liberated the first town in France.

After their modern-day counterparts jump, they join them in the St. Mere town square for more formalities.

Meanwhile, at Pointe du Hoc, the cratered ground stands quiet vigil near concrete bunkers and bombed-out artillery positions. But the cliffs in front of them remain unchanged, a constant reminder of the valor of the rangers who scaled them to eliminate the gun positions that controlled the beaches. As the sons and daughters of those valiant soldiers watch their children ramble through those pits and climb on the pillboxes, their fascination soon turns pensive, their thoughts turn to another time, a time when decisions were made as to who would die there, and who would not. Whose grandchildren would play there today and whose grandchildren would never be.

One veteran stands with his family, arm-in-arm, next to a bunker. His head bows, remembering. They follow suit, in quiet respect, and for the first time they begin to understand.

Understanding more than they want to, two heroes of Utah Beach spend a few minutes with their comrade-in-arms. One says this will be the last time he will visit his buddy's grave. The pair hold hands, bow their heads, say nothing. Only remembering, saying a final good-bye with snappy salutes. A widow finds her husband's grave, a place she has never visited before, with a daughter he never knew. An Omaha Beach veteran mumbles he's never been back, looks up at the monument dedicated to his fellow engineers, and, wet-eyed, talks about his pain for the first time. A soldier puts his arm around him, and comforts him. He's not alone, he's told.

This scene is repeated continuously at Colleville cemetery, where thousands walk over hallowed ground, searching for a buddy, a dad, a brother. Families separated by time and place, now in this time and place, again.

They came not to celebrate, but to honor those who stayed behind, who lie under Colleville's green carpet of crosses.

Privates next to generals, corporals flanking captains. It was for them that these veterans came, and for themselves and their families.

At last, at least for some, their longest day has ended.

Smile therapy: Columbus Developmental Center offers help for persons with disabilities, their families

By Bob Roberson
United Way Inc.

When Adam Tyler was born, in November of 1984, nobody in the family was prepared for what was to come.

His 3-year-old sister was healthy; Adam came into this world with spina bifida, hydrocephalus and severe club feet. Spina bifida is a condition in which the spine fails to close, leaving nerves to different organs exposed and damaged.

"When a group of doctors approached me in the recovery room at Martin Army Community Hospital, I cannot tell you the feeling I experienced," said Adam's mother, Cathy. "Most of all, I was just shocked."

The doctors did their best to explain what the future might have in store, but nobody could have adequately pictured the "nightmare that was reality."

At first, Adam could not breathe. There were no other parents available who had faced the same dilemma. Piece-by-piece Adam's mother and father learned of what was going on and what they could do. There were many surgeries and a number of near-death scenes.

Somewhere amid all this, the Tylers were put in touch with the Columbus Developmental Center, a United Way agency that specializes in helping people like Adam and his parents ... those living both on and off post.

Since those desolate early days Adam has shown progress. He first learned to cope a bit in his wheelchair. Then he graduated to a walker and on to crutches. All these steps, of course, were painful and painfully slow.

Adam's mother explains that he has physical and occupational therapy each week. They are trying to find a regular preschool that will be accessible for him.

This young mother and father are not only learning to deal with their burden; they are sharing their knowledge, along with their successes and failures, with other parents who are experiencing some of the same traumas.

"Having a handicapped child changed our lives dramatically," writes Adam's mother. "One thing we constantly keep in mind is that Adam is more normal than handicapped. His condition has caused us many tears, but he has brought us many more smiles. Those smiles get us through the rough times."

Rangers gear up for memorial dedication, Ranger Rendezvous

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

The Ranger Memorial Walk, now under construction on Ranger Field in front of Infantry Hall, will be dedicated Aug. 25 as part of this year's Ranger Rendezvous events.

The Ranger Rendezvous is an occasion that brings together active duty rangers of the 75th Ranger Regiment and the Ranger Training Brigade to honor past and present rangers and ranger units.

The dedication of the memorial will be the highlight of the Rendezvous this year, said Master Sgt. Darryl W. Powell, public affairs officer for the Ranger Training Brigade.

The dedication will be immediately followed by the 1994 Ranger Hall of Fame induction ceremony, during which 14 new ranger inductees and two honorary inductees will be recognized. One of this year's honorary inductees is U.S. Sen. Strom Thurmond from South Carolina, Powell said.

The memorial is being constructed with funds raised by the Ranger Memorial Foundation.

Most of those funds have been generated by the sale of stones engraved with the names of rangers past and present, which will become a permanent part of the monument's walkway.

When finished, the "Ranger Memorial Walk" will consist of 2,456 of these cut and polished Georgia granite stones.

Designed in the shape of a spearhead to symbolize ranger strike operations, the walk will feature a 24-foot bronze commando knife and granite monuments to the various ranger associations.

The huge commando-knife replica, designed and constructed by sculptor Steve Dickey, was erected June 28.

The granite monuments are on site, waiting to be installed and engraved by the Murray Monument Company of Tampa, Fla.

Although more than half a million stones have been sold, there are still about 500 available, according to a foundation spokesman.

Each stone costs $240, and may be purchased personally or in memory of a fallen ranger by family members or third parties.

To purchase a stone or make a donation or contribution, call the Ranger Memorial Foundation at 323-4461.

New TRADOC commander awaits Senate confirmation

TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — Lt. Gen. William W. Hartzog, chief of staff of the U.S. Atlantic Command, Norfolk, Va., has been nominated by President Bill Clinton to succeed Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr. as commander of Training and Doctrine Command.

Hartzog

Secretary of Defense William J. Perry made the announcement Tuesday, June 28, in Washington, D.C. Franks, at TRADOC since August 1991, has been nominated for retirement in his current grade by the president. He has more than 35 years' military service.

The dates of Franks' retirement and the change of command have not been announced, pending Senate confirmation.

Hartzog formerly served as executive officer to the TRADOC commander and was also the assistant commandant of the U.S. Army Infantry School, Fort Benning, Ga.

Born Sept. 21, 1941, in Wilmington, N.C., he graduated from the Citadel and was commissioned as an infantry officer.

He served two tours in Vietnam and was an instructor at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y. Before being assigned to the Atlantic Command in August, Hartzog was commander of the 1st Infantry Division (Mechanized) and Fort Riley, Kan.

Barracks renewal to commence soon

Construction contracts awarded for Main Post, Kelley Hill areas

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet©

Barracks renewal projects for areas on Main Post and Kelley Hill could begin as early as Aug. 1, according to Tom Dickens, civil engineer with Directorate of Public Works Real Property Master Planning Branch.

DPW construction contracts for both projects were awarded June 28 and 30 respectively.

The construction projects will reflect new Army standards for single soldiers' housing.

The standards include larger living quarters, increased storage areas, expanded laundry facilities and temperature controls in each room as well as a variety of other amenities.

The barracks renewal projects on Main Post and Kelley Hill will also feature a distinct separation between living and working areas; no supply and administrative or command and control facilities will be located within the barracks.

These offices will be housed in separate facilities in close proximity.

The barracks manager's office will be located in a community building housing a central laundry and several leisure and recreation rooms.

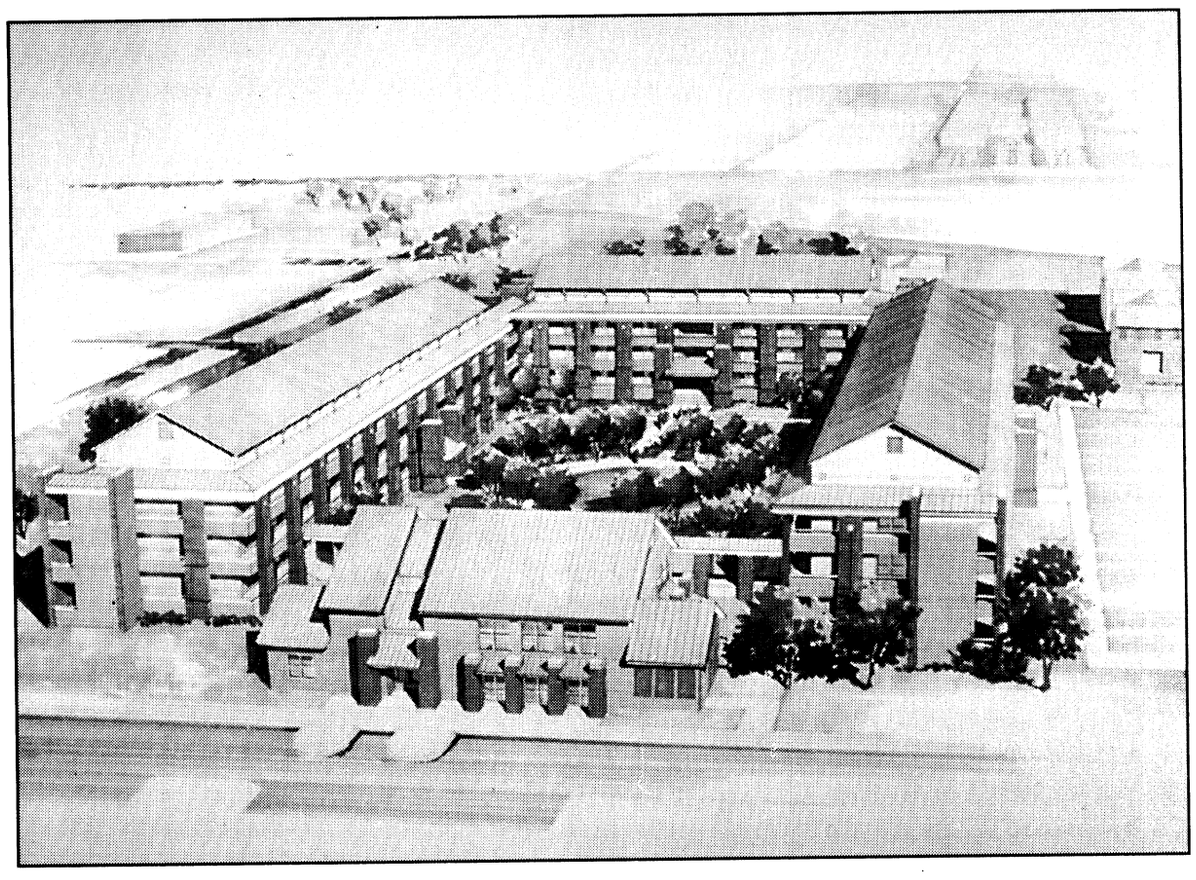
These new standards reflect recent changes identified through a tri-service survey of 3,200 enlisted individuals.

In an effort to meet the requests named in the survey, the renovated facilities will offer more privacy and a higher standard of living.

"There is a commitment by TRADOC (Training and Doctrine Command) and the Army to improve the living conditions of the single soldier," Dickens said.

The renovated room modules will house one or two individuals depending upon rank; soldiers with the grade of sergeant or above are authorized private rooms, while soldiers below this grade will share a room.

The barracks renovation on Main Post will involve Buildings 2811 through 2814, off Dixie Road.



The original plan, expected to take 24 months, calls for Buildings 2811 and 2812 to be completely gutted and remodeled from the frame up and another smaller building constructed to provide 200 room modules, said Dickens.

Featuring semi-private baths and walk-in closets, the renovated barracks will have 163 gross square feet of space per person for rooms with double occupancy; soldiers residing in private rooms will have 326 gross square feet of living space.

Additional space is provided in the building for individual bulk storage. In addition to exterior balconies and private entrances, the renovated barracks will have new furniture, Dickens said.

A separate dining facility, which can service 800 individuals and six company operations facilities located separately from the living units, were included in the project for Main Post.

Funds were available to award the barracks, dining facility and only four of the six company operation facilities June 28.

Artist conception of the new barracks complexes on Kelley Hill and Main Post.

The Savannah District Corps of Engineers, designers of the complex, have specified covered walkways to tie all the barracks buildings together.

To help alleviate parking problems, Lexington Street will be widened and converted into a cul de sac.

The plan for the complex also features a car washing area and facilities to wash field gear.

The barracks renovation on Kelley Hill is a multiphase project including conversion of an existing building and complete renewal of two additional buildings.

Phase I is a 10-month conversion and renovation of trainee barracks Building 3210 (Roush Barracks) on Sand Hill into individual rooms.

The living quarters will have 120 gross square feet of space per person as well as private phone and cable television lines.

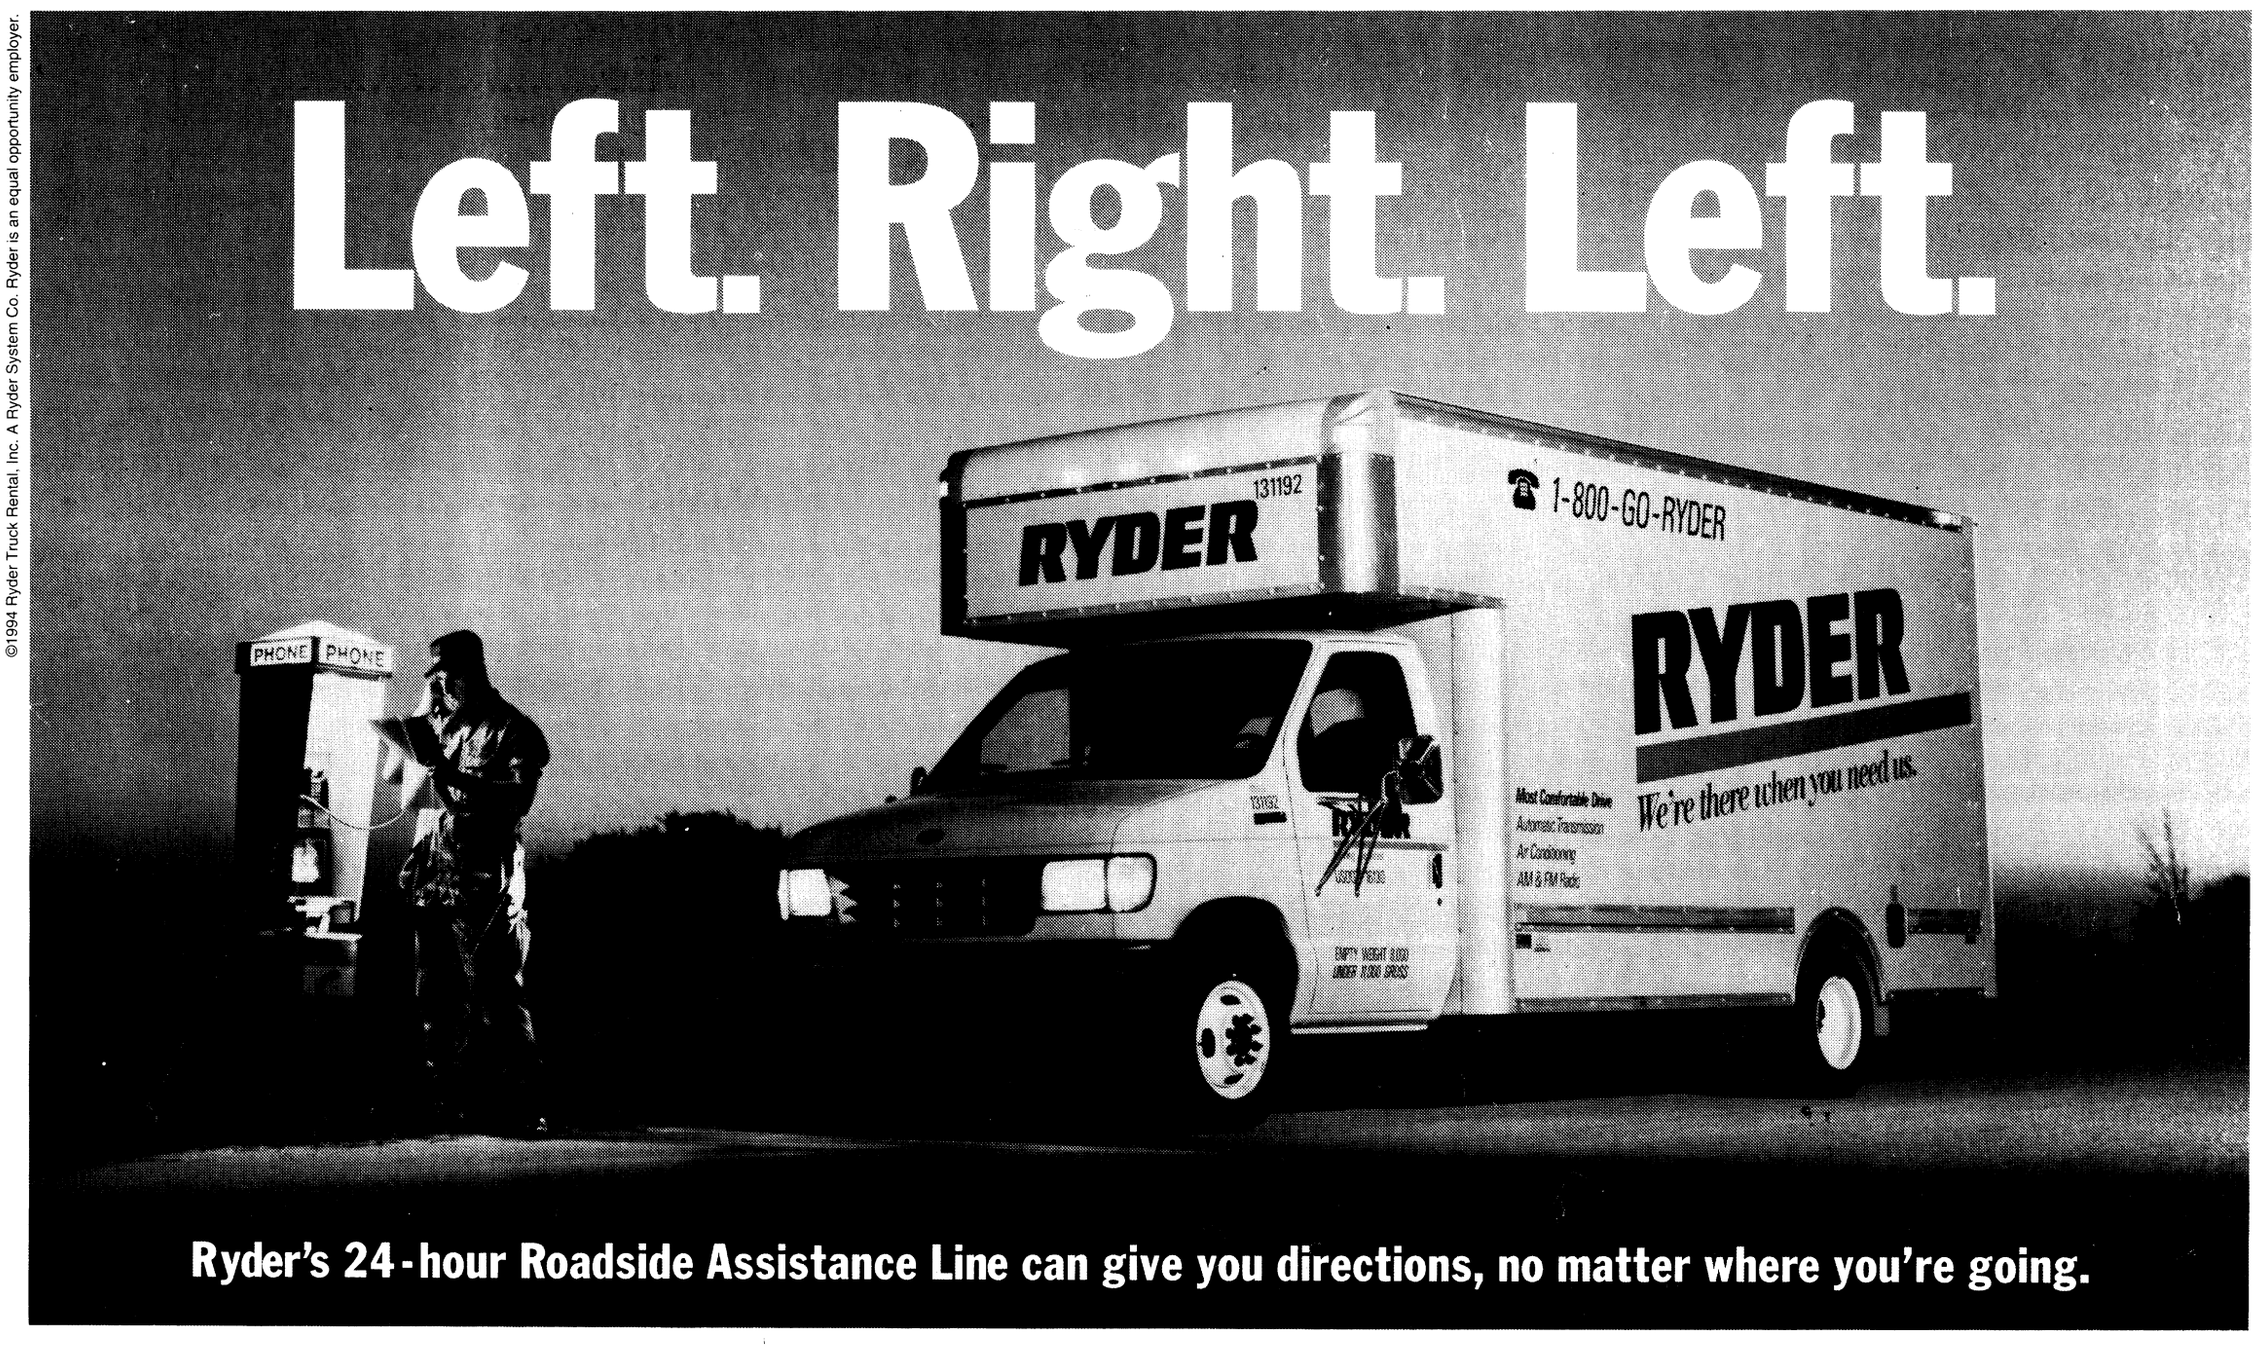
Each floor will use existing common use baths and laundry facilities.

Each room will have a maximum two-person occupancy; sergeants and above will have a private room. New parking around Roush Barracks areas is included to accommodate the expected increased need, Dickens said.

"This is an improvement in living conditions; we are providing the soldiers as much space as we can," Dickens said.

The next phase of the project involves Buildings 9006, 9007, 9012 and 9013 on Kelley Hill. Buildings 9012 and 9013 are to be demolished to make room for additional parking; Buildings 9006 and 9007 will be completely renovated from the frame up using the same standards as the main post construction project.

Just like the Main Post project, featured amenities include private baths, closets, exterior balconies and private entrances.



The project for Kelley Hill includes eight company operations facilities and new parking areas off Bell Richards Street.

Funds were available to award the renovated barracks, Roush Barracks conversion, demolition of Building 9012, and only two of the eight company operations facilities June 30.

A protest of the contract award was filed by one of the general contractors with the General Accounting Office. This protest could delay construction start up to 90 days from the expected start day of Aug. 1.

The barracks renovation projects represent just two of numerous ongoing projects of all magnitudes by the DPW, not only to improve barracks' living conditions, but working and mission essential facilities.

In the past year, the DPW has completed several high-interest projects including demolishing aging buildings, repairing an airfield runway, and completing repairs to the Uchee Creek Bridge.

Ceremony marks USAF restructuring on post

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

The U.S. Air Force deactivated three units on post and combined them into one in a ceremony Thursday at Lawson Army Airfield hangar 2486.

Modica

Combining into one unit, the 17th Air Support Operation Squadron, were Detachment 4, which supported 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry (Mechanized) Division; Detachment 7, which supported 3rd Brigade, 75th Ranger Regiment; and Detachment 10, 1st Weather Group, said Lt Col. John L. Bush, commander of the 17th Air Support Operation Squadron.

"This is part of the Air Force's ongoing streamlining progression," Bush said. "Now there is one commander for all the Air Force units on Fort Benning."

Before the activation of the 17th ASOS, there were commanders who would have to command three detachments. Now there is one person and one unit.

The guest speaker for the ceremony was Col. Edward Modica, commander of the 18th Air Support Operations Squadron at Fort Bragg, N.C., and Pope Air Force Base, N.C.

"This reorganization will help formalize the relationship between the operating Air Force units (on post) and the (Army) units in which they support," Modica said.

The reorganizing of the units was in process for more than nine months, said Bush. This order came down from the Chief of Staff of the Air Force, Gen. Merril A. McPeak.

Bush said the deactivation of the detachments is part of a nation-wide Air Force restructuring in which detachments and units are combining together.

Following the activation of the 17th ASOS, awards were given out to certain individuals in Air Force units on post.

Those individuals and their awards were:

• U.S. Air Force Achievement Medal; Senior Airman James D. Stworzydlak

• U.S. Air Force Achievement Medal; Senior Airman Tyler C. Lewis

• U.S. Air Force Achievement Medal; Tech. Sgt. Jeffery L. Morris

• U.S. Air Force Commendation Medal; Staff Sgt. Paul H. Ford

• U.S. Air Force Commendation and Meritorious Service Oustanding Achievement Medals; Staff Sgt. Andrew J. Liermann

• U.S. Air Force Commendation Medal; Tech. Sgt. William D. Pund, Jr.

• U.S. Air Force Meritorious Service Medal; Lt. Col. John L. Bush

AER has college $$$ available

Army Emergency Relief

Soldiers with college-aged children often wonder how they can afford education costs.

People don't realize that part of the answer may be found from Army Emergency Relief.

AER provides financial assistance through scholarships. This resource can make college possible for many people. To qualify for financial assistance through AER, students must be studying at the undergraduate level or be enrolled in technical or vocational schools accredited by the U.S. Department of Education.

Students enrolled in a preparatory school for the service academies also qualify to receive financial assistance.

Scholarships are available through AER. Dependent children can receive scholarships of up to $1,500 per year. To be eligible, students must be 22 years of age or younger, unmarried, and an authorized dependent of an active duty, retired or deceased soldier.

Scholarships are awarded based on financial need, academic achievement and individual accomplishments.

Students who are awarded scholarships must reapply each year. Students must be in good academic standing, minimum cumulative grade point average of 2.0, to receive scholarships.

The application is simple. By requiring students to reapply each year, AER can monitor the progress they are making.

As part of the application, students must submit a family financial analysis and an essay describing their goals and accomplishments.

Applications must be submitted by March 1 for the upcoming academic year. Initial applications are available at AER, Building 2643, Soldiers' Plaza, hours 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday to Friday. Letters to students are mailed in mid-May informing them whether they have been awarded a scholarship, and, if so, how much money they will receive.

Pistol match

draws more than 100 novices, experts to tactical challenge

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

One hundred and nine shooters turned out Saturday at English Range to compete in the Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club's tactical pistol match.

The match was the fifth of a series of eight, divided between Fort Benning and Cool Springs in Roberta, Ga.

The match, sponsored by the Iron Tower, drew a variety of competitors from novice to expert to test their skills firing in standing and prone positions, from behind a barrier and one-handed with both their strong and weak hands.

"This is my first match," said Yvette Dickinson, who came down from Atlanta with her husband, Curtis, to compete.

At her first "stage," or station, Dickinson said, "I shot the good guy twice."

She had put two holes in the center cardboard silhouette as well as the two on either side, hitting the "friendly" she was supposed to avoid.

"But," she said, "I still want to do it again. I like shooting. I'd like to be good at it."

Another first-timer was Spc. Jeff Cooper of Company E, 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, who borrowed one of the club's Glock 17 9mm pistols to compete.

"I didn't know what to expect," he said, as he came off the firing line smiling.

For Sgt. 1st Class Spencer Stafford of Battery C, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment, this was the third match of the series in which he's competed.

"They call it tactical, but it's really practical (shooting)," he said.

Competing in these matches helps him learn to use his pistol better, he said.

"I have the same type as the issue Beretta. The military shows you how to use it, but doesn't give you the practical capabilities."

On the more serious side were shooters like Bill M. Ansley, a deputy sheriff with the Houston County Sheriff's Department in Warner Robins, Ga.

Shooting in tactical matches helps competitors improve speed and accuracy, he said. "I'm trying to get a good balance."

"You need to shoot well, but also shoot fast," said Staff Sgt. Eric Woodson, who used to be a pistol shooter with the U.S Army Marksmanship Unit and is now working in operations.

Another competitor from the USAMU was Sgt. Lance Dement, a service rifle shooter, who said he likes to shoot pistols for fun.

"The pistol is a lot harder to master in terms of trigger control ... and I like to see how I stack up against these pistol shooters," Dement said.

"It's great to have professional shooters like the AMU soldiers participate in these local matches," said Jim Graham, assistant manager of the Rifle and Pistol Club.

"These national and international shooters talk to everyone out here — the novices really get to see it done right.

"What they really pick up is a good example of safe gun handling," Graham said.

Top finishers in the match were as follows:

Competitor class:
First: Wyatt Pittman
Second: Lawrence Cox
Third: Darryl Powell

Standard class:
First: Trey Carmack
Second: Gregg Long
Third: Jeff Oliphant

Military class:
First: Lance Dement
Second: Walter Summers
Third: Glenn Kapheim

High snubnose:

The next match, a night match, is scheduled for 9 p.m., Aug. 6 at English Range. There will be a single action match, Aug. 28 at 10 a.m., and another tactical pistol match, Sept. 3 at 10 a.m.

For more information, contact Graham at 689-3371 or stop by the Rifle and Pistol Club, located at English Range on Dixie Road. Hours are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Tuesday through Friday, and noon to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Special to The Bayonet©

Meet the new voices of the Columbus Redstixx. No, there hasn't been a major shakeup at Golden Park, just an addition — on a part time basis.

Victor Santiago, along with Tony Quinones, hit a grand slam with the Spanish-speaking community in the tri-city area on WTMQ 1720 on the AM dial when they announced their first of many games to come June 27, as the Columbus Redstixx's took on the Charleston, W.Va. Wheelers in a doubleheader.

Santiago, 31, a communications security custodian with Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, got together with Quinones, the station manager and the president for WTMQ and broached the question to John Atkinson, who heads media relations for the Redstixx.

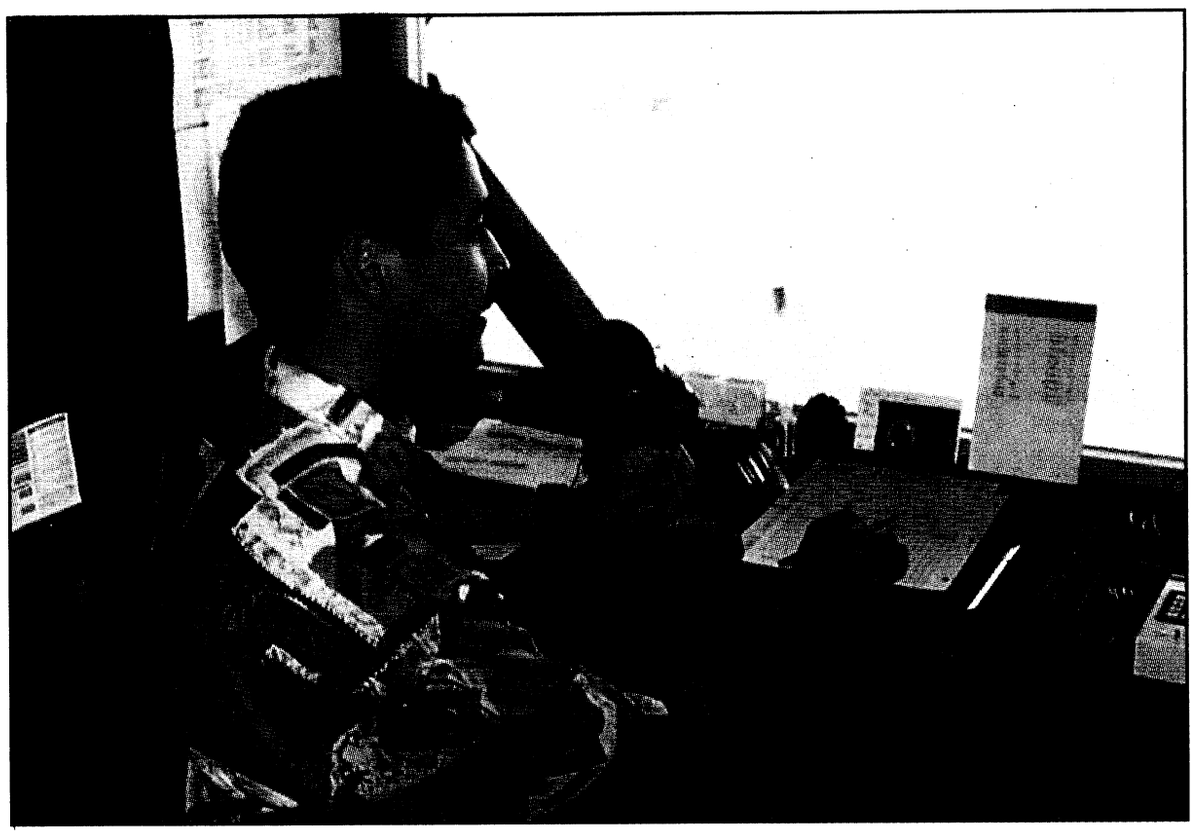
"Since the Redstixx broadcast their games on the radio in English, we came up with the idea to broadcast one of the games in Spanish," said Santiago. "They liked the idea, so we made some tests and after about two weeks we went on the air live June 27."

With 11 years in the Army, Santiago doesn't look to make a career out of broadcasting, at least not until he finishes his 20 years for the Army. After that, anything is possible.

"Right now, this is a hobby." said Santiago.

Santiago grew up in Santa Isabel, Puerto Rico, and played little league baseball with two of major league baseball's best, catcher Benito Santiago of the Florida Marlins and pitcher Jose Guzman of the Chicago Cubs.

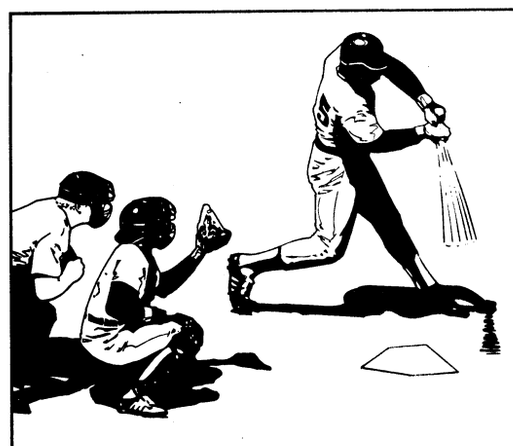
"I can say I was one of Guzman's first strikeout victims (when we were) growing up as kids in Puerto Rico." said Santiago.



With the vast audience of Spanish-speaking soldiers on Fort Benning and numerous players on the Redstixx from South American countries, the mix should be compatible for both WTMQ and the Redstixx organization.

"This is a win-win situation for the Redstixx," said Redstixx general manager John Dittrich. "Not only will it increase our exposure in the community, but it should also give the Latin players an extra feeling of closeness to the local Latin community."

Santiago hopes to see the sports coverage on WTMQ grow in the community. Santiago and Quinones will not broadcast every home game for the rest of the season due to space problems in the press box.



"Most teams that come into Golden Park for a series bring in their own press people," Santiago said. "If a team comes to town and doesn't bring anyone, the Redstixx will notify us and we will broadcast those games if we have no other commitments at that time.

"Hopefully, next year the Redstixx will expand the press box and create a space for us to set up without taking away from anyone else," Santiago said.

Be ready for change of pattern

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

commentary

If there's one bit of advice bass tournament pro Charlie Reed can offer to younger anglers, it is to learn the meaning of versatility.

"Don't get locked into one technique and stay with it even when the bass aren't biting," said the Johnson Outboards Pro Staff angler and winner of the 1986 Bass Masters Classic world championship.

"Bass patterns can change very quickly, often for reasons we aren't even aware of, and to be successful, you have to recognize when they change and adjust your fishing accordingly."

The most obvious indication things have changed is when bass suddenly stop biting, said the Oklahoma pro, but sometimes a pattern will change even though they still hit lures.

"It's the force of the strike itself that may change," said Reed, "or perhaps the number of casts you make between strikes. You may be happy because you are getting occasional fish, but what you have to recognize is that you could be catching many more fish if you change something.

"That something could be as subtle as a new lure color, a slower or faster retrieve, a different lure, or perhaps a change of depth."

If bass suddenly stop biting, Reed suggests changing lures before changing places. The bass may have become too accustomed to seeing that particular lure, or simply been spooked, especially if bass have been caught and released in that spot.

"Sometimes bass on the bottom will move up a few feet to suspend, or suspending bass may move down to feed. Your lure may not be reaching them," says the Johnson pro. "Whatever lure you're using, try something different to see if you can generate a strike."

The way bass are actually striking a lure can also be an indication of a pattern change, especially if the strikes become much more tentative. Again, the solution is to change to a lure with a different action.

Cloud cover, wind, an approaching storm, falling temperatures, current, and changing water clarity are just a few of the factors that can change patterns very rapidly, said Reed.

"I have experienced days when I knew bass were in the area I was fishing but I couldn't do anything to get a strike," said Reed, "and then a breeze would start and create a ripple on the surface. Within minutes, I'd catch bass.

"Naturally, I have also experienced just the opposite, too. A good bass fisherman has to learn to be aware of these little things because they can certainly make a big difference in whether or not he catches fish."

community care

By Ken Franklin
Martin Army Community Hospital

Military life plus summer equals moving.

Many families move during the summer, even though they remain at Fort Benning. Families move to larger apartments as leases expire. Active duty housing on post opens up for families on waiting lists. Soldiers retire and move off post, but remain in the area.

One problem plaguing family physicians is that some of these families do not inform their clinic of these changes.

When a family doctor cannot reach the patient, two main problems arise:

First, follow-up can be compromised. Abnormal x-rays, Pap smears, or lab tests usually require treatment. If the physician can't reach the patient, the treatment won't happen — and the problem may get worse.

Second, enrollment can suffer. The clinic may assume the patient has moved away — and make room for another family. Or, the family may be retained when it really has moved away — and take up room another family needs.

A common misconception is that all Fort Benning computers talk to each other. Providing a change of address or phone to one office does not mean that all agencies know the new information.

For Gateway To Care enrollees at Martin Army Hospital, it's important to provide changes to two places: the family's primary clinic, and the Gateway office (544-1591).

Clinics and the Gateway office try to pass changes to each other; however, calling both is the best way to guarantee continued communication.

voting news

Federal Voting Assistance Program

In carrying out the responsibilities of the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act, the Federal Voting Assistance Program works with all the states, the District of Columbia and the territories to simplify the absentee voting process and make it easier for these citizens to exercise their right to vote.

While many state legislatures dedicated most of their time this session to state compliance with the National Voter Registration Act, other states addressed both NVRA as well as initiatives that further simplify the process for military and civilian overseas citizens:

• Georgia House Bill 1429, signed by the governor in April, enfranchises second generation citizens who have never resided in the U.S. by allowing them to vote if either parent is a registered voter in Georgia.

• Iowa Senate Bill 2223, is awaiting signature by the governor. The bill enfranchises second-generation citizens who have never resided in the United States by allowing them to vote if either parent is a registered voter in Iowa, allows use of a single FPCA for all elections in a calendar year and allows for late registration of recently discharged military members.

• Kansas Senate Bill 2591, signed by the governor in April, allows for the electronic transmission of all aspects of the process by all citizens voting under UOCAVA.

• New Hampshire House Bill 1405, awaiting governor's signature, allows overseas citizens and armed services personnel to receive a special write-in absentee ballot for the primary election (previously available for general election only.)

• Virginia House Bill 28, signed by the governor in April, grants emergency authority to the chief election official.

ask the judge

Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: I'm beginning to have problems with my car, and I suspect there's something wrong with the transmission. I hear that transmission repairs can be costly. When choosing a garage, is there anything I should be looking for?

A: Diagnosing a transmission problem can be quite difficult, particularly with an automatic transmission because it is, for the most part, a sealed unit. If the trouble requires rebuilding or replacing the transmission, it can be very costly, depending on the make of the vehicle. As a result, it pays to be very careful when choosing a mechanic and reaching an agreement about the work.

Open up the Yellow Pages and you will see a number of transmission shops that advertise "free" tests or checks. The free tests do not involve taking out the transmission or opening it up, and in many cases, the only way a mechanic can tell if a rebuild or replacement is necessary is to actually remove the transmission and open it.

You should be aware that most transmission shops will charge a fee for that service, ranging from $200 up.

When you take your car in, you should insist on a written contract that specifies exactly what work the shop will perform and exactly how much it will cost. Thus, if you are trying to get information on what the problem is and how much it will cost to fix it, your contract should specify only that the shop will remove the transmission and open it for diagnosis, the cost for that service, and that they will then notify you of the nature of the problem and the estimate of the cost of repair.

You should insist that they will not perform any repair work until you have specifically authorized it in writing. Do not agree that work can be authorized by telephone. If you agree to allow the shop to proceed with repairs, make sure you understand the cost of the repairs, the time it will require to complete them and how payment is to be made. Usually, payment is required on completion of the service.

Be aware that if you don't pay the repair cost promptly after completion, and you leave your vehicle at the shop for even as much as a day after they notify you that it's finished, the shop may charge storage charges. Some shops offer financing. If you are considering this, again, make sure that the financing agreement is in writing before the work begins.

The main point is that any agreement between you and the shop should be in writing and include your complete understanding about what's going to happen to your vehicle and what it will cost.

Should you have a legal problem of this nature, contact the Legal Assistance Office for an appointment at 545-3281.

Ala. changes boat registration, operator rules

By Emerson E. Addington
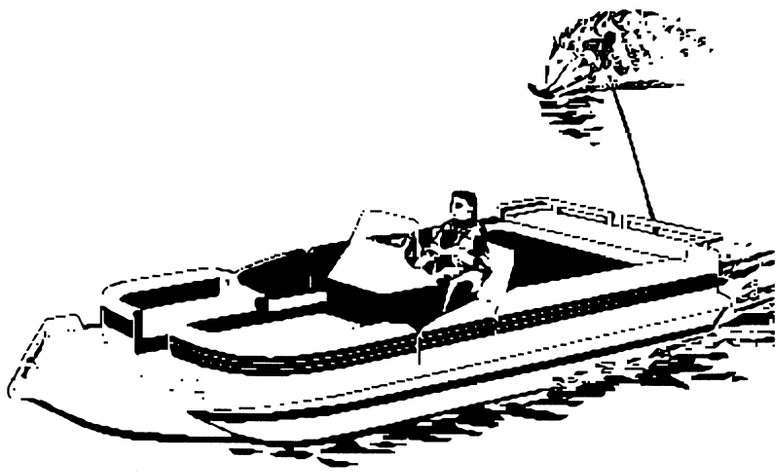
U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary

Every year many people are injured or killed and millions of dollars in property damage is done as a result of boating accidents.



The primary causes of these accidents are: operators not having the basic knowledge of safe boat operation and rules of the road, carrying improper or no safety equipment, and reckless or careless operation. Approximately 50 percent of boating accidents are results of boating under the influence.

Recreational boating is no more dangerous than any other public recreation when users know the rules and have the basic knowledge required for safe operations.

Alabama has taken that extra step by passage of the Roberson/Archer Act of 1994 to promote full use and enjoyment of Alabama waterways.

With passage of the act, Alabama now requires all mechanically-propelled vessels, sailboats and boats for hire to be registered and to display a registration number and state validation decal. Alabama recognizes other state registration numbers and validation decals, provided the vessel has not been within the state for more than 90 consecutive days.

The act also requires every person 12 years of age or over who operates a motorized vessel on the waters of the state to obtain a boater safety certification before April 1999. The boater safety certification will be incorporated with the motor vehicle drivers' licenses.

Boater safety certification examinations will be conducted at motor vehicle driver license exam locations. There is a one-time fee of $5.

Exemptions from the examination are completion of a U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary U.S. Power Squadron Boater Course or a boat safety course approved by the Alabama Marine Police Division, and persons who were at least 40 years old April 28.

Out-of-state boat operators may operate for a total of 45 days without boater certification if none is required in their home state.

Out-of-state boat operators who wish to exceed 45 days annually may obtain out-of-state certification by meeting the same qualifications as a resident and paying $20.

Nondrivers and children 12 years of age and under may obtain boater certification if they meet the qualifications and pay $20.

Boater certification shall be in the personal possession of the boat operator at all times while a vessel is on the waters within the state.

Boater certification can be suspended or revoked for operation under the influence of alcohol or controlled substances or reckless or careless operation of a vessel.

All persons under 8 years of age, on any vessel, must, at all times, wear a U.S. Coast Guard-approved personal flotation device (life preserver) that must be strapped, snapped or zipped securely in place; however, no flotation device is required when inside an enclosed cabin or enclosed sleeping space. Each person operating, riding on or being towed by a personal watercraft must wear a personal flotation device approved by the U.S. Coast Guard.

Operation of a personal watercraft (jet ski, wave runner) by people under the age of 12 years old is prohibited.

Additional information on Alabama boating laws can be obtained by contacting a Alabama Marine Police official.

Contact your local U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary for dates of the next Boating Safely Course that meets the requirements for state certification.

1st Bn 18th Inf completes dismount squad qualification

By Marcus White
1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment

The 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, recently completed its first Striker dismount squad qualification.

The squad qualification exercise is intended, much like Bradley gunnery for the Bradley crewmen, to focus the battalion's training up to the time of the qualification on the individual and collective tasks associated with dismounted infantrymen.

The qualification itself was a test of physical fitness and strength, technical and tactical skills and mental endurance. It was a nonstop three-day event graded, like Bradley gunnery, on a 1,000-point scale.

Day one of the qualification began with the Army Physical Fitness Test. The event was worth 100 points and Company A edged out the other companies with an average of 256 for a total of 90 points.

The APFT was quickly followed by a six-mile road march to Pierce Range where the squads conducted event No. 2, a squad live-fire exercise assault worth 150 points.

Company D squeaked by Company C by a mere 2 points to win the squad assault field exercise event.

The last event on day one saw the competitors trucked to the Q 1-5 training area where they planned and executed a night antiarmor ambush mission worth 200 points. Company A again edged out the competition to end day one with a winning average of 185 points.

After roughly three hours of sleep, day two of the squad qualification began with a truck movement to Garnsey Range where the squads conducted the common skills tasks portion of the qualification.

The common skills tasks portion of the competition was worth 50 points and consisted of the soldiers being tested on eight common skills tasks while the squad leaders were tested on "call for fire" exercises.

Companies A and C tied on the common skills tasks event with averages of 42.5 each.

Next on Garnsey Range, the squads conducted a "knock out a bunker" live-fire drill worth 200 points.

Again Companies A and C tied with perfect 200-point averages. The squads were then moved to the Bush Hill area where the 200 point land navigation portion of the qualification was to take place.

Before land navigation, the squads were allowed a much needed rest of about six hours, which they spent preparing for the long night ahead, mostly by sleeping.

The land navigation event began at midnight on day three of the qualification and lasted for 11 1/2 hours.

Company B proved the best at land navigation with a perfect 200-point average.

Upon completion of the land navigation course, the squads were moved to the Lawson Army Airfield Confidence Course where they were allowed 45 minutes to finish a set course for a maximum of 100 points. Points were deducted for any soldier who did not complete an obstacle or for the squad going over the 45-minute time limit.

Company A clinched the overall victory with a near perfect 98.6 average, which included the 2nd Platoon's lone perfect score in the battalion.

The winning company's prize for dismount squad qualification is the Ehlers-Merli Trophy. The trophy is dedicated to Staff Sgt. Walter Ehlers and Pfc. Gino Merli, two of the 18th Regiment's Medal of Honor winners during World War II.

Capt. Lance David Lombardo, Company A's commander, was presented the Ehlers-Merli Trophy by Brig. Gen. John J. Maher III, deputy commanding general.

The Ehlers-Merli Trophy will have "Company A's Gators" engraved on the first of its many brass plates and will be displayed in the Striker Battalion Headquarters until the next dismount squad qualification in October.

Soldiers give legal assistance high marks

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — A first-ever survey has recently revealed that soldiers consider legal assistance services to be among the top benefits the Army has to offer.

Almost 70 percent of Army officers and more than half of the enlisted soldiers surveyed used some form of legal assistance in the past two years, the study indicated.

Further, "Soldiers are very satisfied with the legal services they receive and use those services with great frequency," said Maj. Linda K. Webster of the Office of the Judge Advocate General at the Pentagon. This is especially noteworthy during the downsizing of the military where the "perception exists that other military benefits are being eroded," she said.

The legal assistance program saves soldiers millions of dollars each year in legal costs — given the expensive nature of legal services in the private sector, the report said. Also, the program's educational and other preventive law efforts avert many legal problems from occurring, particularly in the consumer law area.

The program, though not a recent development, hasn't always been available to help soldiers meet their legal needs. Before World War II, soldiers had to rely on civilian lawyers to assist them with even the basic legal matters related to military service, such as powers of attorney and wills. Those services were seldom affordable to servicemembers.

> "The program's overall value in terms of soldier morale, readiness and retention are well known and beyond dispute."

World War II gave birth to the program. Following the enactment of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act in 1940, it became clear that citizens — being inducted in great numbers on short notice — needed access to affordable legal help to protect their interests.

Without the Army legal assistance program, such legislation offered little protection against those who might take advantage of a soldier's absence from home.

Over the past 50 years, the program has evolved from little more than a lawyer referral program into what it is today — a comprehensive array of legal services.

Among the most popular: help with administrative matters (such as powers of attorney, notarizations and name changes), military administration (line-of-duty investigations, reports of survey, evaluation reports, etc.), estate matters (wills, probate, life insurance), and taxes (income tax returns, inheritance).

"The survey validates what many of us already knew about our legal assistance program," said Col. Alfred F. Arquilla of the Office of the Judge Advocate General. "The program's overall value in terms of soldier morale, readiness, and retention are well known and beyond dispute.

"Although we cannot rest on our laurels, and must continue our efforts," he said, "it is gratifying to know that we have a program, without equal, of which we can be very proud."

Symposium examines nature of warfare

TRADOC News Service

PRESIDIO OF MONTEREY, Calif. — When the Association of the United States Army met in San Jose, Calif., in late May, the Training and Doctrine Command commander seized the opportunity to promote the Force XXI campaign plan.

The Army cannot afford to wait on the 21st Century; it must prepare for it while maintaining focus on current situations, said Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr.

"The enemy is around us but the tide bears us forward," Franks said, quoting the late Winston Churchill. In 1992, the Army shifted its main effort in the way that it modernizes and grows, and the way it experiments with new force capabilities, organizations and technology.

"These operations, Desert Storm and Just Cause, and a variety of operations other than war, showed us a glimmering of the changing nature of warfare and emerging patterns of service to nation for our Army," Franks said. "It showed us a glimpse of the future that I think is much more clear now than it was a couple of years ago."

Nearly two years ago, the Army moved toward an institutional approach to experimentation with the creation and inauguration of the Louisiana Maneuvers Task Force and Battlefield Laboratories.

"Our objective then and now was to begin experimenting where battle and other operations appeared to be changing," Franks added. "It hasn't been easy, especially when the future wasn't quite as clear or the landscape as clear as it is now.

"The hardest thing is not getting a new idea into the military mind; it's getting the old idea out," the TRADOC commander said, quoting British Maj. Gen. J.F.C. Fuller.

According to the TRADOC leader, the institutions of Louisiana Maneuvers and Battlefield Laboratories have confirmed the wisdom of the experimental method to assist the Army in growing to the future.

"We have taken action and are moving forward. The experiments are the products of investments and will result in future payoffs — potential battlefield return on investments of these experimental methods," Franks said.

Health care computer system to improve service

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

The Composite Health Care System, the computer system that automates many functions for military hospitals, should be deployed in every U.S. military hospital in the world by early 1995.

Officials said the system will speed service, make scheduling easier and improve health care.

But DoD's medical leaders said as the system evolves, they will constantly improve it. And they are looking for "pockets of creativity" in the field to help them make the system work better, said the system's program manager, Navy Dr. (Capt.) Paul Tibbets.

"We want people to share their creative ideas and learn from each other," said Tibbets at a recent conference. His office also maintains an information clearinghouse and demonstration center to display creative ideas and help other military hospitals use them.

One pocket of creativity is at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla. Air Force Maj. Rod Wilson at Eglin Regional Hospital has adapted off-the-shelf software called Smart-Term 420 to make using the system faster and easier for medical and administrative staff. Air Force Capt. William Norrish, the system's program manager at Eglin, said the program uses a Microsoft Windows environment.

Windows allows users to call up programs by using a device called a mouse to click on little pictures, called icons, on the computer screen. Users don't have to memorize and type long command sequences. Instead, they click on preprogrammed buttons on the computer screen.

"Entering a new doctor into the system used to take my system administrator 15 to 20 minutes," said Norrish. "Now it takes 45 seconds. She just zips through a series of buttons and most of the typing is done for her. Doctors like it, too. They can whiz through their administrative chores and have more time with patients."

Norrish said the system is easy to customize. For example, doctors at Brooke Army Medical Center's burn center in San Antonio, Texas, may need "buttons" that wouldn't be necessary at another hospital.

Alan J. Andreoni, executive director of the computer system's office, visited Eglin and was impressed with the system, said Norrish. Andreoni's office will send computer specialists to other military hospitals that want to use Smart Term. Wilson and Air Force Dr. (Lt. Col.) Keith Kulow also wrote a reference manual to help military hospitals use the system.

Another pocket of creativity is at Tripler Army Medical Center in Hawaii. There, Army Maj. Bradley Dawkins and Army Dr. (Lt. Col.) Anthony Bottini have designed a "doctor-friendly" system that automates the way doctors order treatment.

They designed the system on a Macintosh, but it can also be run on IBM-compatible systems. By clicking on icons on the computer screen, doctors can access programs enabling them to order medicine for patients, leave orders for nursing care, schedule operations and do a variety of other things.

Tripler doctors also use a free-standing operative scheduling program. "For me, an exciting part of the system is the reporting capability," said Bottini, a neurological surgeon.

"If I notice, say, a rise in shunt infections, the system helps me access data I need to look into the cause. We enter into the system the names of all personnel in the operating room for certain operations. This may lead me to notice that patients with infections all had a certain individual on the operating room staff. We could then check to make sure this individual is practicing proper sanitation."

The personnel information also helps managers do their job. "They may notice that a particular staff member is getting plenty of experience helping in one kind of operation, but not enough on others," said Bottini. "The system will make it easier to give personnel the variety of experience they need."

Bottini has already shared the system with Naval Medical Center, San Diego. Tripler's staff is still improving the system.

Tripler's pharmacy also added an automated telephone system to take prescription refills. The system, called Hello!, uses voice-recognition technology to take the refill orders.

The system operates 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Patients have to wait only four to six seconds while the system confirms their refill status after they provide the necessary data.

The Composite Health Care System, which will automate many functions for military hospitals, should be operational in every U.S. military hospital in the world by 1995

Hello! interfaces with CHCS, and Tripler officials say it's simple to use. The system includes complete reporting facilities that provide audit trails of all transactions. It frees staff from time-consuming requests and gives patients better access.

The innovations at Eglin and Tripler are just two examples of how the Composite Health Care System's users are making it work better for everyone. Tibbets' office puts out a newsletter full of tips from system users. The phone and E-mail lines between user sites are constantly buzzing with new information, said Air Force Maj. Susan Peters of Tibbets' office.

DoD health officials want to encourage this activity. Navy RADM Harold M. Koenig, deputy assistant secretary of defense for health services administration, urged system users to visit each other in person, by phone and by E-Mail.

"It's tough when you're at the top not to grab the oars and try to row," said Koenig at the CHCS conference. "But we (leaders) are always hearing, 'You guys should steer and not row.' I keep saying to myself, I shouldn't even steer," said Koenig. "I should say we need to be over there by a certain time and then stand back and let you guys figure out the best way to get there. If we (DoD leaders) do it that way, you'll probably get there ahead of schedule."

The system does not do everything doctors, nurses or administrators want it to do, said Koenig, but they still say they wouldn't want it taken away. For example, he said, it's now possible to find a parking space any time of the day at Tripler. A few years ago, he commented, that wasn't the case.

Tripler is treating more patients, he said, but thanks to CHCS they are spending less time in waiting rooms and pharmacy lines. "That also means CHCS can help our soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines get back on the job faster. It is a force multiplier," he said.

Soon, Koenig said, he hopes to have the system on all U.S. Navy ships at sea to link them with the systems at home. "So when those sailors come in and 250 need consults, we won't have only a quarter of them getting seen due to lack of communication."

With CHCS, the clinics will be ready so sailors can get back on their ships. Of course, CHCS is also useful for deployed members of other services, he said. In these tough economic times, when the military is cutting fighter wings, ships and Army divisions, the military medical system has to operate as efficiently as possible, Koenig said.

The average service member spends nearly 20 percent fewer bed days in military hospitals than they did three years ago. But still, medical costs as a percentage of DoD's budget have nearly tripled since 1967.

"The threats to our economic security are not like wolves at the door. They are more like termites in the basement, gnawing away at our foundation," said Koenig.

With the improved efficiency brought on by systems like CHCS, DoD officials are hoping to stop the termites.

Fourth of July: Fort Benning's birthday bash brings bugles, bangs, blasts

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning hosted Fourth of July festivities Saturday at York Field beginning at 2 p.m.

Soldiers, family members and civilians alike were treated to music, food and demonstrations throughout the day.

There was musical entertainment by the Atlanta-based country music group, the Ridgerunners, and later in the day the Infantry Band and Infantry Chorus performed.

Activites for children included carnival games and a variety of rides.

Throughout the day, Rainbow and Sunshine the clowns made children smile by creating balloon animals.

Soldiers from the Infantry Training Brigade, after weeks of nothing but dining-facility food, indulged themselves in pizza, hamburgers, ice cream and chili-dogs.

The crowd weathered a late afternoon shower but was later treated to a rainbow spanning the sky.

Fort Benning's command exhibition parachute team, the Silver Wings, dropped in on the party from 10,000 feet in the air, landing not once, but twice in front of Infantry Hall.

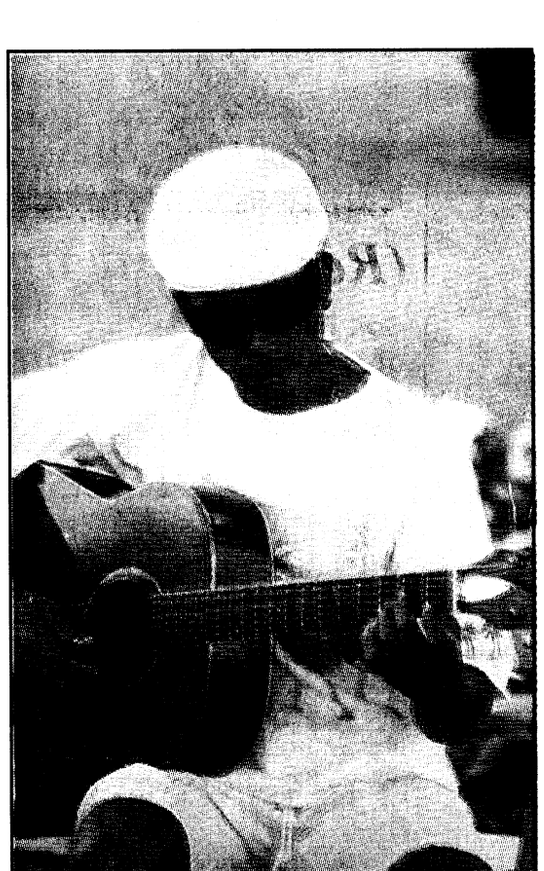
A ranger demonstration on Watson Field showcased rangers "fast-roping" down a rope from a helicopter and securing their perimeter.

The rangers were then lifted up into the air by the helicopter and "brought to safety" while dangling in the air.

A 50-gun salute and the national flag pageantry, a parade of all the nation's states' and territories' flags, started at 8:30 Saturday night.

Soldiers paraded each flag in front of the crowd while the announcer stated the nickname of each state and territory and people cheered for their favorite.

Anyone near Infantry Hall heard the the sound of cannons as Battery C, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment, fired them in salute to the 50 states.



The Infantry Band and the Infantry Chorus performed for the crowd again, including "the 1812 Overture" in which the cannons from Battery C, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment, added the extra bass — cannon blasts at the end of the overture.

When the sun went down, the sky lit up with a 25-minute firework display, which brought the day and the festivities to an end.

Special to The Bayonet©

Wariner

Allen

Norwood

For fans who enjoy some of the best talent in the country music business, three country music stars will perform songs about lovin', cryin', cheatin' and lyin' at a jamboree July 16 at 3:30 p.m. at Doughboy Stadium.

Steve Wariner, Deborah Allen and Daron Norwood will perform at the three-hour concert.

Admission with a Fort Benning military or civilian identification card is $4, $6 for the general public, and free for children 6 years and under accompanied by an adult with a ticket.

Tickets are available the day of the concert at the gate; advance tickets are available at any post club, bowling center, or at the Information, Ticketing and Reservation Office, Building 247.

Advance tickets are available off post at all BP Quick Cash locations.

Representatives from local country music radio station Kissin 99.3 will emcee the concert and introduce featured performers.

Wariner has more than 10 No. 1 singles to his credit including "Some Fools Never Learn," and "Where Did I Go Wrong?"

A noted vocalist, Wariner is also a songwriter and guitarist.

Also featured will be Southern musicians Allen and Norwood.

Allen, a premier songwriter from the country music capital, Nashville, is known for her melodious style that combines elements of soul and country music.

Her first major release was "Delta Dream Land." Her single, "Baby, I Lied," was one of the top five country hits in 1984 and was nominated for a Grammy Award.

Norwood, of Atlanta, will round out the concert with his distinct style of charismatic entertaining, sharpened through years of performing in churches as the son of a Baptist evangelist.

A noted pianist and vocalist, he has just released "If It Wasn't for Her."

The Fort Benning clubs will sell food, beer and soda. No cans, bottles or picnic items may be brought into the stadium. Military Police Activity officials said this will be strictly enforced.

Corporate sponsors for the event include Miller, AT&T and 7-Up.

Spencer High School works toward

Global curriculum

By Kimberly Brown-Boynton
Spencer High School

Joseph Gosha, principal of William Henry Spencer High School, the high school that services Fort Benning's teen-agers, and Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, Fort Benning commanding general, said they have decided that the No. 1 post in the world needs to increase its involvement in the high school.

Spencer High School has offered more than 60 years of educational service to this community.

Spencer High has a number of academic and extracurricular activities. The most recent addition is the Honors Plus Program, a program that includes more math and science courses. It also allows time for the participants to get involved with other activities as upperclassmen.

All of the business and vocational departments (auto mechanics, computers and cosmetology) are state-accredited curriculums.

New students who will be attending Spencer High School can visit the school at 4340 Victory Drive, Columbus, or call 685-7652.

Students registering for the first time will need the following:

- Birth certificate
- Certified copy of school records
- Updated short record on a certified Georgia form
- Clearance from the Roberts Center in Muscogee County.

The International Studies Committee is working toward devising a program for Spencer High School. The need for such a program has been identified due to the diverse backgrounds and cultures present in the school and community.

School officials stated that they hope the program will provide a globally-based curriculum that will enable students to function in modern societies with diverse economic and cultural systems. Spencer High School had its awards program and reception May 24. Each student selected was awarded on the basis of grade-point average, citizenship and behavior.

Cleo Griswould, senior counselor, announced scholarships and awards for Spencer students with an estimated value of $1,317,927.

Former Miss Columbus Denise Daniels and the Infantry Chorus sang and other guests from the Muscogee Board of Education and other educationally-supported institutions gave the students recognition for their achievements.

Also, Spencer High School's Junior Prom was April 29 at the Fort Benning Officers' Club.

A group of 10 cadets from Spencer High School's military program recently competed in the annual military skills competition for junior ROTC at the University of Georgia.

The competition covered five events:

- 100 questions covering military knowledge and citizenship
- Pioneering and knot-tying skills
- Land navigation and map reading
- Basic first aid
- Army physical fitness test.

All of the participants are members of the "Raiders" — an adventure-training extracurricular activity.

At the end of the competition, the cadets were declared overall winners. They received the "Eagle Challenge" plaque.

In addition to the Shades of Green, the first armed forces recreation center in the continental United States, there are centers in Korea and Hawaii and three in Germany

Service members now have six inexpensive places to spend a vacation following the recent opening of Shades of Green on Walt Disney World Resort.

In most cases, patrons pay about half of what comparable local commercial hotel resorts charge.

In addition to the Shades of Green, the first armed forces recreation center in the continental United States, there are centers in Korea and Hawaii and three in Germany.

Although the centers focus on providing inexpensive vacation spots for junior enlisted service members and their families, they're a bargain for everybody from private to general, officials said. Nightly room rates are on a sliding scale based on rank.

First priority for reservations goes to active duty and retired military personnel, their dependents and immediate family members.

This category includes former service members separated under special incentive programs for two years after the date of their discharge.

Reserve and National Guard personnel, including retirees and those who retired without pay ("gray-area retirees"), and their families are also eligible to use the facilities.

Cadets and midshipmen of the service academies, and active duty members and retirees of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and the Public Health Service can also use the facilities.

Several other categories are eligible to use the centers, including some disabled veterans, former prisoners of war, Medal of Honor recipients, unmarried former and surviving spouses of military personnel, NATO armed forces personnel assigned or attached to a U.S. military unit or installation, Department of Defense civilian employees and physicians under contract.

Full-time Red Cross personnel supporting troops overseas are eligible on a space-available basis.

Also, personnel providing logistical support to the American military can use the facilities.

For reservations at Shades of Green, write or call:

Shades of Green on Walt Disney World Resort
P.O. Box 22789
Lake Buena Vista, Fla. 32830
(407) 824-3665; (407) 824-3600 (fax).

The rate for junior enlisted service members E-1 through E-5 is $49 per room per night. That's for up to two adults and three children with no added costs for cots and cribs.

The nightly rate for E-6s and E-7s, O-1s and 0-2s and WO-1 is $73. Those in grades O-3 through O-5, WO-2 to WO-5 and E-8 and E-9 pay $85; O-6 and above pay $92.

For the center in Hawaii, write or call:

Hale Koa Hotel
2055 Kalia Road
Honolulu, Hawaii 96815-1998
(800) 367-6027; (808) 949-4807 (fax).

Nightly room rates at the Hale Koa are based on rank and type of room — standard, superior, parkview, oceanview or oceanfront.

Rates for E-1 to E-5 run from $47 for a standard room to $82 for an oceanfront room. E-6 through E-9, WO-1 to WO-3, O-1 through O-3 and widows pay $60 to $98. Rates run from $75 to $114 for WO-4 and WO-5, O-4s and above and foreign officers.

Telephone numbers for centers in Germany are:

Berchtesgaden: 011-49-8652-61057, fax 011-49-8652-62768.

Chiemsee: 011-49-8051-803172, fax 01149-8051-803158.

Garmisch: 011-49-8821-750575, fax 01149-8821-3942.

Nightly rates range from $32 to $95. Apartments are available in Berchtesgaden for $85 to $125 per night. Room rates for E-1 through E-5 are from $32 nightly at Chiemsee and Garmisch. The top rate is $56 at Chiemsee and $53 in Garmisch.

For the Dragon Hill in South Korea, call 011-822-790-0016, fax 011-822-792-0036. Dragon Hill rates run from $38 to $78 per night, depending on the person's rank. Kitchenettes with microwaves are available upon request.

volunteers needed

Volunteer Resource Center

The Fort Benning Volunteer Resource Center promotes volunteerism by recruiting potential volunteers, by retaining active volunteers and by recognizing the contribution of volunteers to the quality of life of soldiers and families.

There are many volunteer opportunities available through the center:

- Volunteers are needed at the Thrift Shop on Tuesdays and Thursdays between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. Individuals will gain retail experience while helping others. Free child care is provided for up to two children.
- Sayers Memorial Library needs volunteers to assist with shelving books, data entry and story time for children. Also, volunteers with experience in activity program planning, dramatic reading and counseling are encouraged to participate in the Multiple Reading Program this summer. Child-care costs will be provided.

Volunteers are needed in each housing area to assist the community mayor. Persons interested can contact a community life center.

- The Public Affairs Office needs an editorial assistant to assist the print section in publishing The Bayonet.

This product supports Army families through disseminating community news and command information to all Fort Benning families. The Bayonet newspaper is delivered free to all on-post housing units and by subscription to those living off post.

Interested persons must have typing ability, and knowledge of computer word processing systems is preferred but not required. Good communication skills and command of the English language are required. Education or experience in print journalism is preferred but not required. Also, the individual must be familiar with the Army and Fort Benning.

For more information, call 545-2201.

- The Volunteer Resource Center is located in Building 359, Family Unit Network Center, and it is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p .m. Persons interested in volunteering can visit or call Olga MacLean, installation volunteer coordinator, at 545-5602.

Fisherman rejects fear embraces faith, patience

By John R. Houser
Martin Army Community Hospital

Special experiences often provide practical applications of Biblical concepts that can help us with the crisis events of life. A recent fishing trip to Lake Harding reminded me of three such concepts and their importance for successful Christian living. They are fear, patience and faith.

A few weeks ago, Fort Benning soldiers received a training holiday. Since I did not have duty on Friday, I decided to go fishing Thursday night.

As I drove toward Lake Harding, I noticed that three large thunderstorms were in the near distance. After arriving at the lake, I proceeded to go to my favorite fishing spot. I anchored down and got ready for a night of fishing.

Within 50 feet of my boat, another group of fisherman were discussing the weather. They spoke about the thunderstorms that were closing in on our left side. Fear of these storms caused these fishermen to abandon their fishing trip.

I chose to reject fear and seek a Biblical answer to this potential problem. I prayed and asked God to send the storms in another direction. Though the storms produced an awesome display of lightning, the storms never came close enough for me to hear their thunder.

reflections

After dealing with fear, I faced patience. The fish were not moving in the channel. This lack of activity was probably due to unsettled weather conditions, the full moon and the high temperature of the water.

Though the action was slow, I decided to give the fish a couple of hours. Shortly after midnight, the first school of fish appeared on my fish finder. I had to wait until the fish were ready to move. Patience proved to be a key ingredient to a successful fishing trip.

After dealing with the fear of the storms and the long wait for the fish to start moving, I had to have faith that the fish would bite. Faith spoke inside this fisherman's heart saying, "In the name of Jesus, I will catch some nice fish." Before returning to the dock at 2:30 in the morning, I had caught my limit of crappie and eight hybrid bass.

Seemingly insurmountable problems confront us many times in life. If we can reject human fear, be patient with God and have a strong faith in Jesus Christ, we can see the solution to our problems before our very eyes. The Apostle Paul writing to the church at Phillipi states, "I can do everything through him who gives me strength" (Phi 4:13 - NIV).

Ministry team prepares for inevitable

By Jacqueline Feagin
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Ford G'Segner escorted members of the Fort Benning Unit Ministry Team to the Fort Benning Cemetery June 21 where they were briefed by Jim Grantham of the cemetery staff and G'Segner on proper procedures for funerals and memorial services.

G'Segner informed the UMT of the Field Manual 16-2, Religious Support To Casualties, Memorial and Funeral Services. He also introduced Fort Benning Regulation 600-38, USAIC Ceremonies and Military Funerals. He pointed out some of the common mistakes that can occur during these ceremonies and advised the members of the UMT to "be aware of them in order to make the service special for the family."

Following the tour of the cemetery the UMT visited McMullen Mortuary in Columbus to view the arrangements that occur when a service member dies. James McMullen, president of the mortuary, explained to the group the decisions family members must make when a person dies.

He said, that "It is best to prearrange your funeral. In times of grief, families are faced with many decisions that may be painful to make. Each funeral is different; we try to provide the best service to each individual."

"It was interesting to view the pitfalls soldiers and family members have to face in time of grief," said Chaplain (Maj.) Richard King, 36th Engineer Group chaplain.

Announcements

Buy or sell AVON 563-5005.

Dear John

Here's why you don't want a repair quote over the phone. A man brought his car in last Friday. He'd already had two phone quotes for fixing his transmission. One was for $500, the other for $425.

I put his car on the rack, saw that a fitting was loose at the top of the line, and tightened it. That's all he needed. Come see me.

Sincerely,
Jimmy at Generic

All-Star Game anchors big week for baseball

By Matt Meachem
Tribune Media Services

Major League Baseball returns to network television this week for the first time in more than eight months, and it returns in a big way.

Baseball's brightest stars will gather Tuesday at Pittsburgh's Three Rivers Stadium on for Major League Baseball's 65th All-Star Game. NBC Sports will provide live coverage of the festivities, beginning with a pregame show anchored by Greg Gumbel, who is making his first major appearance with the network since leaving CBS last month. Bob Costas, Bob Uecker and Joe Morgan will call the actual game, starting with the first pitch scheduled for approximately 8:30 p.m.

First things first, though: Fans can begin their week with something familiar, ESPN's exclusive Sunday Night Baseball telecast. This week's game — the final contest before the three-day All-Star break — finds the Houston Astros traveling to Chicago to take on the Cubs. Jon Miller and Joe Morgan call the action from Wrigley Field. But it's Monday when baseball really takes center stage.

"This is three days in sports where there's nothing else going on," says Chris Berman, who will be in Pittsburgh for ESPN's All-Star coverage. "There are no games, except for the All-Star Game itself. Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday. That's all there is. It's a time when ... well, we don't make up the sports, but we just talk baseball and there's nothing wrong with that."

ESPN whets viewers' appetites Monday with live coverage of the annual All-Star Gala from Heinz Hall, followed by same-day coverage of the Gatorade Home Run Derby and the Upper Deck Heroes of Baseball Game from Three Rivers Stadium.

What: All-Star Game
When: Tuesday on NBC

"It's a fun night for us and a fun night for the fans," says Berman. "It's not who won or lost. It's more, 'Let's talk some baseball,' and we zero in on the first half of the season."

At the All-Star Gala, fans gets a chance to see their favorite players away from the field. "It's the players in a relaxed setting," Berman explains. "You're able to sit down and just talk baseball with them. We do some nostalgia pieces, some features on the first half of the season, some analysis, and some relaxed talk ... not so much about the game, but about the players."

The Gatorade Home Run Derby has become a fan favorite. Held in between the teams' batting practice on Monday, it has provided some memorable moments over the years, from Cal Ripken's incredible display of power in Toronto in 1990 to a pair of tape-measure shots by Juan Gonzalez in Baltimore last year.

"This is the first year we've done the Home Run Derby as an hour (telecast)," says Berman. "Other years, we've covered it for half an hour or as part of our All-Star Gala coverage. We kind of feel that this could be the equivalent of the (NBA's) slam-dunk contest."

43rd Engineer Battalion (Combat) furls its colors

By Greg A. Smith
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The 36th Engineer Group gathered at York Field in front of Infantry Hall to witness the furling of the colors of the 43rd Engineer Battalion (Combat), the inactivation of the 533rd Transportation Company and the end of the 28-year career of Group Command Sgt. Maj. James Gardner June 30.

The 43rd Engineer Battalion saw its final chapter written after 28 years at Fort Benning and following two deployments to Somalia and one to the Persian Gulf. The 533rd Transportation Company was inactivated as the 104th Transportation Company (Medium Truck) relocated here from Fort Devens, Mass.

USAIC-TV Schedule

Fort Benning Today: 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 1:30 to 2 p.m.
Specials: 2 to 4:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 4:30 p.m. to 8:30 a.m.

USAIC- TV will show highlights of the ceremony starting Monday on "Fort Benning Today."

USAIC- TV announces post events and post movie listings, and it offers free classified advertisements on "Fort Benning Update," a community information service.

Anyone who lives on post and subscribes to Fort Benning Cable can watch USAIC-TV on Channel 3, 24 hours a day. Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:26, 7:56, 8:26 and 8:56 on WLTZ-TV 38.

Florence Marina Park to feature

'taste of valley'

Stewart County Chamber of Commerce

A Taste of Chattahoochee Valley Original Recipes will be July 23 from 5 to 8 p.m. at Florence Marina State Park.

The tasting will be a sampling of some of the original recipes from the cookbooks of the Chattahoochee Valley.

The Slaughter Creek Band will providing dance music from 7 to 11 p.m.

Judging the event will be the tasters themselves; everyone who eats will vote on which recipe is best.

Trophies will be given for the dish judges determine to be "best."

Any organization or club that sponsors a cookbook can enter some of their recipes and sell their cookbooks at the event. For more information, call (912) 838-4706.

The event is sponsored by the Stewart County Chamber of Commerce and hosted by the Florence Marina State Park.

Florence Marina State Park is located 15 miles west of Lumpkin, Ga., on Highway 39C.

PUZZLE ANSWERS

State parks offer opportunity for horsin' around

Georgia State Parks & Historic Sites

Franklin D. Roosevelt State Park has an idea for those who want to get away from the hustle and bustle of the city.

The "City Slickers Overnight Trail Ride" is a horseback riding and camping experience for families, groups of friends or business retreats.

Horse lovers of all ages and abilities can trade in their cars for the night to take this guided trail ride across Pine Mountain, sleep next to a roaring camp fire, eat breakfast at sunrise, and head back home later in the morning. The overnight trail rides are available seven days a week.

Experienced trail guides will answer questions along the way and point out different aspects of the trail.

This nature adventure costs $60 per person and includes horse rental and — if you don't want to sleep under the stars — shelter. Participants must arrive at the FDR riding stables by 3 p.m. and bring their own food.

Pots, pans, utensils and several grills are provided. Preregistration is required at least two weeks in advance.

Riders under the age of 18 must be accompanied by an adult.

For more information or to register, call the park at (706) 628-4533.

Hard Labor Creek State Park also has horseback riding specials. Horses can be rented for the day at a cost of $10 ($12 for an overnight trip).

The park has stables, 13 miles of riding trails and camping for riders and their horses.

36th comes to the rescue

Soldiers provide humanitarian aid for Georgia's flood victims

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The 36th Engineer Group has provided humanitarian help around the world, in recent years.

Last week, the group's soldiers had to go no farther than their back door.

When tropical storm Alberto turned southwest Georgia into a lake, crews from the 498th Medical Company (Air Ambulance) went to work saving people from the floods.

From July 5 through Saturday, they plucked a canoeist from a tree in the Flint River near Thomaston, rescued a young traffic-accident victim in Macon, flew a dialysis patient from Americus to Athens and transported a woman with a fractured hip from Leesburg to Albany.

But their real work began when the Palmyra Medical Center started taking water in its basement and ground transportation was cut off.

Working three UH-60 Blackhawks at a time, the crews, under the command of Maj. James M. Bobbitt, took patients in critical condition from Albany to the Medical Center in Columbus.

To relieve the pressure on the flight crews of having to coordinate with various agencies as well as fly missions, a command and control element from the 36th Engineer Group was sent to the Albany Airport.

Maj. Mark D. Feierstein, the group's operations officer, established communications links with public health and safety officials and the hospitals' administrators.

He worked closely with federal, state, county and city officials in the decision-making process, from picking the right time to move patients to getting more help for shoring up a helicopter landing pad next to the Palmyra Hospital.

The group's mission ended Saturday when the National Guard had enough assets available to carry on with the mission.

In all, 20 victims and 5,000 pounds of food, blankets and medical supplies were transported by air by the 498th.

Post gets ACOE nod

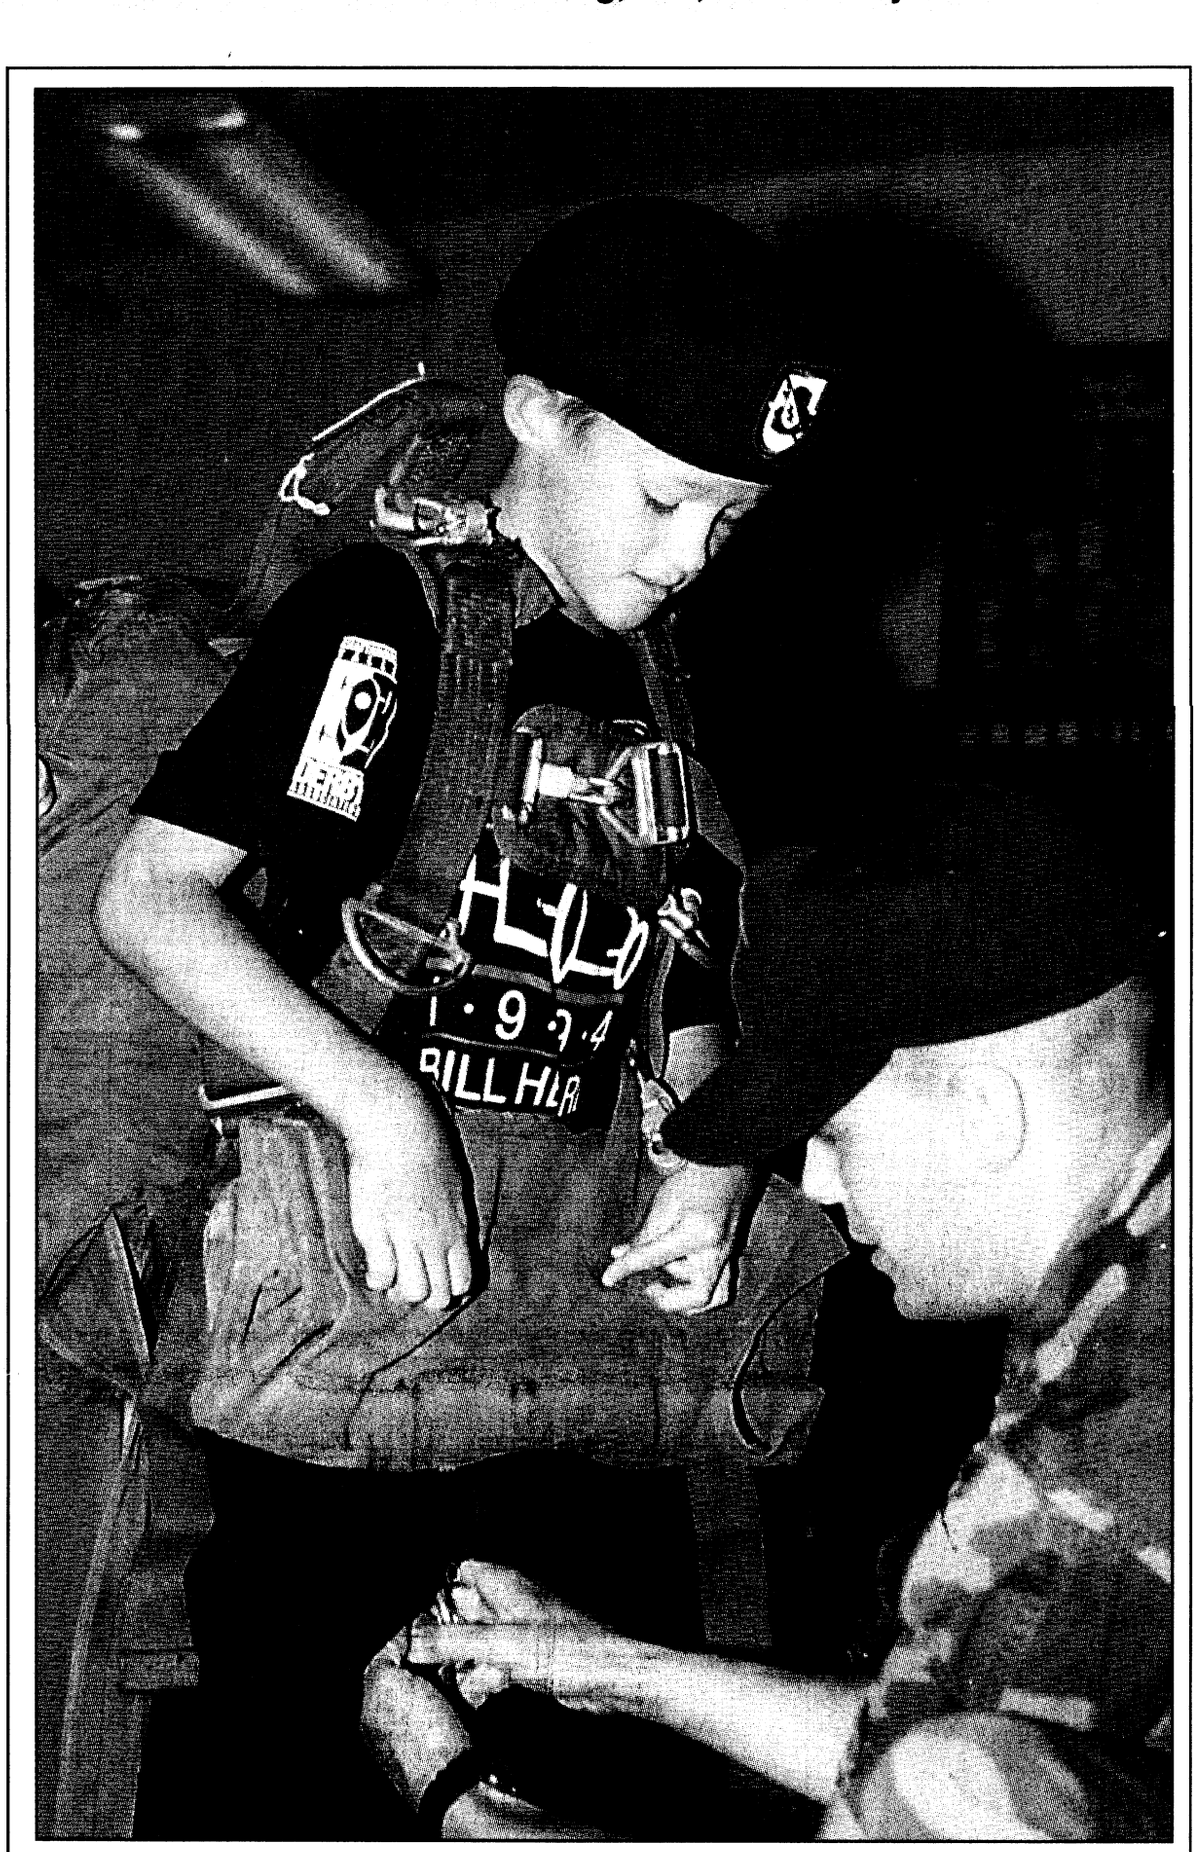
Fort Benning was named as one of eight nominees from the Training and Doctrine Command in the preliminary stages of the 1994-95 Army Communities of Excellence competition.

The post was selected along with Fort Sill, Okla., in the extra large installation category and will now move up to the Department of Army level competition.



"Our goal is to win the Commander-in-Chief's award back to back," said Sarah McLaney, post ACOE coordinator.

Earlier this year, Fort Benning won the CINC title, which awards $1.5 million to the best military installation in the world. "We have a challenge ahead of us," she said.

A TRADOC Communities of Excellence Team is scheduled to tour the post in late August to validate the most recent nomination.

The selection was based on a packet submitted earlier this year that highlights programs and facilities that make Fort Benning a community of excellence.

The announcement comes on the heels of the 1993-94 award presentation, which was accepted in May by the post Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White in Washington, D.C.

2nd NCOA schedules inactivation

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet©

A ceremony next week will mark the inactivation of the 2nd U.S. Army Reserve Noncommissioned Officers Academy.

A result of the downsizing of Reserve forces, the decision to inactivate the Fort Benning unit was made in June 1993 as one of the Task Force Fast initiatives.

The academy has trained more than 7,000 Reserve and National Guard soldiers in numerous programs of instruction since moving here from Fort Bragg, N.C., in 1989.

Most of the academy's active duty staff and faculty members have already been reassigned to bases in nearby states.

Approximately seven individuals will remain at the academy to complete inactivation procedures, according to Command Sgt. Maj. Thomas B. Jackson, commandant of the academy.

The inactivation ceremony will be conducted July 22 at 10 a.m. at the 2nd NCO Academy, Building 4402 in Harmony Church. The ceremony will be in the academy's auditorium.

Featured speaker will be Maj. Gen. Thomas P. Jones, special assistant to the commanding general of the U.S. Army Reserve Command in Atlanta.

For more information about the inactivation or the ceremony call Jackson or 1st Sgt. Rick L. Nixon at 544-7302.

Country music concert Saturday

Steve Wariner, Deborah Allen, Daron Norwood to perform

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet©

For fans who enjoy some of the best talent in the country music business, three country music stars will perform songs about lovin', cryin', cheatin' and lyin' at a jamboree Saturday at 3:30 p.m. at Doughboy Stadium.

Steve Wariner, Deborah Allen and Daron Norwood will perform at the three-hour concert.

Admission with a Fort Benning military or civilian identification card is $4, $6 for the general public, and free for children 6 years and younger when accompanied by an adult with a ticket.

Tickets are available the day of the concert at the gate; advance tickets are available at any post club, bowling center, or at the Information, Ticketing and Reservation Office, Building 247.

Advance tickets are available off post at all BP Quick Cash locations.

Representatives from local country music radio station Kissin 99.3 will emcee the concert and introduce featured performers.

Wariner has more than 10 No. 1 singles to his credit, including "Some Fools Never Learn," and "Where Did I Go Wrong?"

A noted vocalist, Wariner is also a songwriter and guitarist.

Also featured will be Southern musicians Allen and Norwood.

Allen, a premier songwriter from the country music capital, Nashville, is known for her melodious style that combines elements of soul and country music.

Her first major release was "Delta Dream Land." Her single, "Baby, I Lied," was one of the top five country hits in 1984 and was nominated for a Grammy Award.

Norwood, of Atlanta, will round out the concert with his distinct style of charismatic entertaining, sharpened through years of performing in churches as the son of a Baptist evangelist.

A noted pianist and vocalist, he has just released "If It Wasn't for Her."

The Fort Benning clubs will sell food, beer and soda. No cans, bottles or picnic items may be brought into the stadium. Military Police Activity officials said this will be strictly enforced.

Corporate sponsors for the event include Miller, AT&T and 7-Up.

Common courtesy not so common

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

commentary

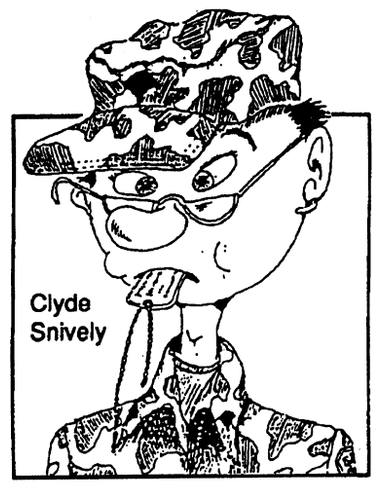
It used to be called, "common courtesy." But along with "common sense," it's apparently fallen from our lexicon through disuse.

This is not to say courtesy still doesn't exist. It does, but unfortunately, it's no longer common.

How many times have you made a phone call and the person on the other end, after a mumbled greeting in a tone that tells you this person would rather be anywhere but answering that phone, informs you the person you want to talk to is not there and the phone answering person doesn't have a clue where the person is and if that person will even return this day, this week, this century?

Resisting the temptation to reach through the phone lines and throttle the phone answerer, you finally convince that person that it really isn't too difficult to pick up a pencil and write your name and number so the person you want to talk to can return your call.

You hang up having little faith your message to call you back will be delivered and wondering what kind of office that person works in.



And Madam Editor wonders why I don't like to make phone calls.

Or you go into a store to get a refund on the neon shirt with rhinestones your mother-in-law bought you for your birthday.

You don't want to exchange it, you just want the money back and oh-by-the-way, you've got 15 minutes before you have to be back in formation.

You think you're in luck. Your number is the next one to be called and there are three clerks behind the counter. One waiting on a customer and the other two, hmmmm, what are they doing?

They seem to be having a conference, but by golly they aren't going to acknowledge your presence by a "We'll be with you in a minute." Instead they act like if they look up from their paperwork, they'll have to reinvent the wheel and the store roof will collapse on them.

Sarcastic remarks, "Gee, I wonder if I'll get waited on this week," go unnoticed (I told you courtesy isn't common and it's also a two-way street).

Perhaps the least courteous people of all time are drivers. And aren't we all drivers at one time or another? Anyway, how many times have you waited for a break in the traffic to get out of a parking space or onto the road?

Ho ho, and the best place of all to try and get on the road again is the church parking lot right after the sermon on brotherly love.

Brotherly love ends at the church door. Mario Andretti competitiveness begins at the car door and don't get in the way, "Church is over and I'm going home, fasten those seat belts and grab the chicken bar Ida Mae for here we go."

Naturally we would never expect someone to yield for a pedestrian on a busy street, and everyone knows that if you use your turn signals the steering wheel will fall off.

I think we at Fort Benning are more fortunate than most. People seem to sincerely care about others and want to help.

But we still have those pockets of resistance, and if we are to be truly customer-oriented, we need to take stock of how we service our customers.

We may get our resources cut, but no one can ever take away how we treat others if we don't let them.

Senator sends congratulations

It gives me great pleasure to offer my congratulations on Fort Benning's receiving the Chief of Staff of the Army Army Communities of Excellence Award for the second year in a row and on receiving the Defense Department's top award, the Commander-in-Chief's award.

I am proud that Fort Benning is representing the state of Georgia in receiving this national honor.

Again, congratulations.

Civilians need, want professional courses

I have been employed at this installation for 27 years, and have reached the pinnacle grade of GS-6. Amazing, isn't it?

Not only that, but we have people in our organization who have been GS-4s for 20 years.

Throughout my many years of service I have been to hundreds of so-called professional development courses. None have helped me progress.

To the Directorate of Civilian Personnel I say, "Professionally develop me."

Don't require courses that provide absolutely nothing for career enhancement, such as the Leadership Education and Development course. This course is redundant and a total waste of my time.

I have been to many courses that teach the same thing. As a taxpayer I challenge this organization to develop courses that are not redundant and will offer some career potential.

Motivation is the key. Motivate employees through career progression.

To the so-called "best installation" in the world, I challenge you to share your wealth through development of career programs that offer everyone the opportunity to progress, not just the elite.

Robert S. Killingsworth
Adjutant General's Office

Directorate of Civilian Personnel response:

Concerns about training, career progression and promotional opportunities are surfacing more frequently as downsizing of the federal work force continues.

Since 1986, Fort Benning has undergone at least one reduction-in-force each year. This means that promotional opportunities are far more limited than in the past.

Additionally, there are a number of mandatory actions that may further limit or preclude promotional opportunities such as placement of current excess employees, repromotion of employees currently receiving grade and pay retention, statutory placement of overseas returnees and placement of candidates through the Department of Defense priority placement program.

Bottom line, fewer jobs will be available through promotion actions resulting in fewer opportunities for career progression.

As far as civilian training, over the last three years, DCP has administered or conducted more than 35,000 instances of training. Because of diminishing resources, more than 94 percent of civilian training occurs on-site through the use of local volunteer instructors at little or no cost to the installation.

The majority of this training is mission essential, productivity enhancing, or training that will help develop skills, knowledge and abilities to perform assigned duties. Examples are courses such as writing and communication skills, automation and software applications, supply procedures and supervisory and leadership skills.

With the exception of intern and upward mobility positions, training is normally designed to improve the employees' knowledge, skills and abilities in their current positions.

However, employees are highly encouraged to pursue off the job self-developmental activities, such as diploma or college degree programs. These type developmental activities will upgrade the employees' qualifications or educational levels and may help them in their career progression pursuits.

The LEAD course you mentioned was developed by the center for Army leadership, Fort Leavenworth, Kan. This course is mandatory for all new supervisors (both civilian and military) of civilian employees. However, if nominated by the supervisor, anyone at grade level GS-5 and above who is interested in leadership skills may attend this course.

Finally, a member of the DCP staff is always available to provide career counseling, advice and assistance to interested installation employees.

Metra transit to offer express service from post

Direct service to Columbus' malls will be included in new system

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

Are you having trouble finding transportation off post? Do your friends take off to the mall and leave you stranded doing details or housework? Are you paying too much to get where you want to go?

The answer to these questions has arrived.

Metra Transit System in Columbus will begin a weekend trial express service on post. The bus route will begin on post and end at Airport Thruway. Service is scheduled to start July 23 for a 90-day trial period, said Lisa Goodwin, assistant director for Metra Transit System.

"We welcome this very positive initiative from Columbus," said Col. Richard L. Rutledge, garrison commander. "This is an added benefit and gives us more transportation opportunities."

The express service is a direct result of a survey conducted on post late last year, Rutledge said.

"One of the areas," Rutledge said, "where soldiers and their families wanted some help was in transportation."

"Transportation has been one of the big concerns for single soldiers," said James G. Shoemaker, president of the Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers program. "We brought this up about a year ago."

The post already has bus service into Columbus, but getting to areas like the malls without delay was difficult, Rutledge said.

This express service is targeted at soldiers and family members on Fort Benning, Goodwin said.

"We want to go where the people are," she said.

The service will only run on weekends, Rutledge said.

The fact that most of the soldiers don't get released from their units until Saturday afternoon played a role in deciding when to offer this service, Goodwin said.

"This is being provided specifically to allow soldiers and family members to get to the malls, the food establishments and those things young soldiers are interested in doing," Rutledge said.

"We want to do all we can for Fort Benning," Goodwin said.

The bus route begins at the Main Post bus station, then travels to the Sand Hill Theater. From there, the bus goes to Cross Country Plaza, which is across from Columbus Square Mall on Macon Road. The next stop is Peachtree Mall and then the bus heads for its final destination, Sam's Wholesale Club on the Airport Thruway. The entire trip is scheduled to take less than a hour.

The cost for the trip to Airport Thruway is $4 each way, Goodwin said. If passengers want to go from Main Post to Sand Hill or vice versa, the cost will be $1. Other bus services on post will not be affected by the new express system, Rutledge said.

The Federal Transit Administration and the city of Columbus will split the costs of the service, Goodwin said.

She said those costs include labor and gas and maintenance for the bus.

"The key is that (if) soldiers, especially during this (trial) period, are very interested in keeping this, they need to utilize it," Rutledge said.

If this service is not being used and the soldiers say it is not something we really need, then the post can't expect Columbus to keep this system going, Rutledge said.

Metra expects approximately 500 people will use the service during the trial period, Goodwin said.

Schedules for the express service will be posted in strategic places on post, Goodwin said. Schedules will also be given to individual units for distrubution to soldiers.

"I think this will be successful for both of us," Goodwin said.

Rutledge said, "We are in uncharted waters. We have not had this direct service before. Now we have the chance to see if this is viable."

Fort Benning chief of staff bids farewell

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning's commanders, officers, soldiers and civilians, as well as Columbus and Phenix City citizens, gathered July 8 at Marshall Auditorium to mark the retirement of the post's chief of staff.

Col. Burnet R. Quick concluded his 28 years, 10 months and 18 days in the Army with a ceremony that included a presentation of "I Am the Infantry" and a performance by the Infantry Chorus.

"We are not here today to say goodbye," Quick said. "As most of you know, because of the Quick family's love of the tri-community, we have chosen to remain in Columbus. Therefore, instead of goodbye, we are here to say thank you to the many wonderful people who have supported us."

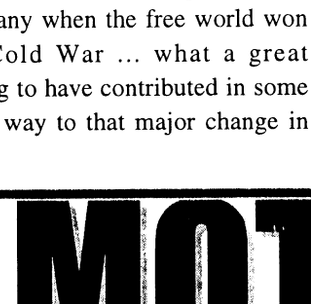
Quick expressed appreciation to the officers, noncommissioned officers and civilians with whom he served during his years in the Army.

Quick said he particularly wished to thank Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White.

"Sir, you and Linda (White's wife) are the perfect command team," he said. "You are both outstanding role models and leaders."

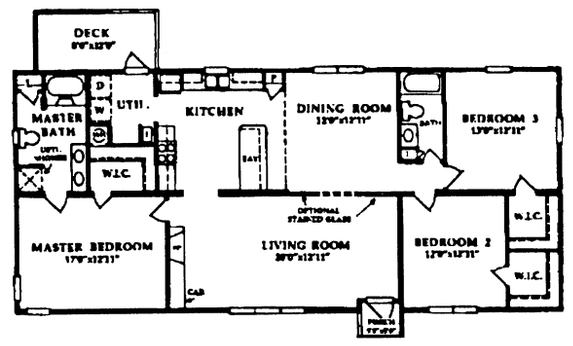
Quick also thanked his wife, Frances, daughter, Shannon, and son, Jeffrey, for their support and encouragement during his military career.

"There are two major achievements during my career that will always have the most meaning to me," Quick said. "First, the fact that I commanded a forward-deployed brigade and was the chief of staff of the great Marne Division in the Federal Republic of Germany when the free world won the Cold War ... what a great feeling to have contributed in some small way to that major change in world order."



His second major achievement, Quick said, "Is, of course, being on the Fort Benning team when we were selected the best in the world. I must once again thank the great soldier and civilian team that made all of that happen. You are the best."

At the ceremony, Quick received the Legion of Merit, his third presentation of that award. His other decorations include the Silver Star with oak leaf cluster, Bronze Star with "V" device and five oak leaf clusters, Meritorious Service Medal with two oak leaf clusters, Air Medal with nine oak leaf clusters, Army Commendation Medal, Berlin Occupation Medal, Vietnam Service Medal with six campaign stars, Combat Infantryman Badge, Ranger Tab and Parachutist Badge.



Quick will now begin a new job with the Uptown Columbus association.

"I must thank Gen. (Henry "Bill") Harper, Mr. Ed Sprouse, Mr. Matt Swift, Mr. Buddy Merrill and all the Uptown Columbus board members for hiring an old soldier and providing him a career change," Quick said.

498th air ambulance crew makes rescue

Helicopter company called in to make save

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

Members of the 498th Medical Company (Air Ambulance) rescued a man from the overflowing Flint River July 5.

The victim, Charles Harrell from Upson County, had apparently fallen out of his canoe and was unable to retrieve it, said Capt. James Schwartz, pilot of the helicopter during the rescue.

The call came in to the 498th from Upson County Sheriff's Department, Schwartz said.

Shortly after 3 p.m., Schwartz, Maj. James M. Bobbitt, also a pilot; Sgt. Tedman Greaves, medic; Spc. Robert Haney, crew chief, and fire Capt. Sidney Martin of Fire Station No. 32 on Custer Road took off from Lawson Army Airfield en route to the Flint River.

"We had to avoid some serious rain showers so it took us about 20 minutes to get to the river," Haney said.

Greaves said the helicopter landed near the Flint River to get some information from the Civil Defense, Emergency Management Agency Volunteer Rescue Organization already on the scene.

"They (the volunteer rescuers) were standing on a bridge waiting to see if he would come by in the water," Greaves said. "They had caught his canoe earlier and tied it to a tree.

After getting the necessary information, the helicopter crew took off and started their search for Harrell.

The helicopter flew from a point on the river where crew members knew Harrell had not been seen and headed in the opposite direction — toward the direction where he was seen last, Haney said.

Harrell was located by Bobbitt 30 minutes after arriving at the river.

He was clinging to a tree about a half a mile from where he was last seen, Schwartz said.

"We positioned the aircraft about 150 feet above him, got set up for the hoist and the tree (in which Harrell was hanging) broke," Haney said.

Harrell went underwater and found a stump to hold on to, he said.

The helicopter did a "traffic-circle" or repositioned, went up to about 200 feet and lowered the hoist, Haney said.

Haney maneuvered the hoist down to Harrell, Greaves said.

It was raining with excessive winds and the river was raging, Greaves said.

While Harrell was being hoisted up toward the helicopter, Greaves assisted Haney by making sure the hoist was in proper position and keeping an eye out to see if the helicopter was drifting one way or the other, he said.

Once Harrell reached the helicopter, Greaves said he questioned him concerning his state of mind, broken bones and if anyone had been with him on the river.

"He told me he was fine, and I checked him out real quickly to be sure," Greaves said.

The helicopter then flew past the ground crew and Haney signaled to them that they had Harrell on board and to meet them in a predetermined spot, Greaves said.

The helicopter crew landed and met the rescue team a few minutes later. Harrell was transferred to the rescue team for more treatment, Greaves said.

After being treated by the volunteer rescue organization, Harrell was charged by Upson County Sheriff's Department with disorderly conduct and boating under the influence of alcohol, said Lt. Nathan McLaughlin, chief of Patrol Division for Upson County Sheriff's Department.

Harrell is out of jail on bond and is awaiting trial.

Olmsted scholarship provides foreign study

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — U.S. Total Army Personnel Command is now taking nominations for the Olmsted Scholarship program. The PERSCOM Nomination Board will meet in January, and the Olmsted Foundation Board will choose its scholars in April.

Recipients spend two years in foreign study, immersing themselves and their families in the nation's language and culture. The officers travel extensively around the country, becoming familiar with the institutions, characteristics, customs and people of the host nation.

After completing their foreign studies, Olmsted officers may attend the Command and General Staff College, then return to a troop assignment for field-grade qualification.

"The theme for the Olmsted Scholarship program might well be 'Know Your Neighbor,'" said a PERSCOM official. He said the program's basis is that "the greatest leaders must be broadly educated."

Since the U.S. military is spread all over the world, servicemembers come in contact with civilian and military leaders of many countries.

"Relationships between nations require a unique consideration of many political, economic and military factors," the official said. "It is not enough to know one's own strengths, weaknesses and general characteristics. The solutions of difficulties that arise between nations require a knowledge and depth of understanding of the particular nations involved."

Officers interested in an Olmsted Scholarship can contact their career branch for nomination information.

Program may facilitate getting POV claims

American Forces Information Service

A test program recently completed at the Military Traffic Management Command's terminal in Bayonne, N.J., may speed up claims on personal vehicles damaged in shipment.

"Quick claims," designed by the command's Eastern Area, allows service members to receive reimbursements for minor car damage the same day they pick up their cars.

Sue Hopkins, a Bayonne MTMC spokeswoman, said the test program ran through June and involved only Army personnel. She added if results are successful, the program will be offered to the other services and expanded to other stateside terminals.

When service members pick up vehicles from military terminals, they carefully check them with port inspectors for damage not recorded on shipment documents. Inspectors record the damage, then provide service members information needed to file claims at the member's installation claims office.

Under this test program, if damage is less than $1,000, service members file a quick claim with staff judge advocate office at Bayonne and receive their money that day.

Army Col. Donald W. Lamb, commander of Bayonne's 1301st Major Port Command, said because service members have so many things to accomplish during a move, making the car claim and payment process easier is worth the try.

"It's one less action for a soldier to do while trying to get settled at the new duty station," said Lamb. "The soldier who has a problem gets his estimate of damage right away. This saves finding a service facility and negotiating for estimates."

Members holding auto insurance with a comprehensive deductible are eligible to collect that amount since it does not exceed $1,000. According to Army Capt. William R. Covey of the Bayonne claims office, members must file a claim with their insurance companies for additional repair costs above $1,000.

Service members must thoroughly inspect their cars for damage before filing a quick claim. Once settled, Covey said, members must sign a document releasing the military from additional responsibility.

"It will be extremely difficult for a soldier to come back and attempt to make a claim for a dent or scratch that was not on the original damage report," he said. Lamb said the quick claim program not only helps service members, it also helps MTMC monitor shippers and how they handle vehicles.

He said the program provides more accountability and adds checks at every point of vehicle processing.

"I think our recent experiences show less damage and problems (to vehicles) than have been historically cited," said Lamb. "This is a great opportunity to demonstrate the first class care the people here give our customers. Going the extra step clearly sends the signal that every car and every shipment is important."

Radial keratotomy still a bar to enlistment

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

Ads promising the end to a life behind glasses or contact lenses are springing up in newspapers and magazines like wildflowers after a rain. But, say all the service surgeons general offices, any photorefractive surgery bars individuals from enlistment and, if unsuccessful, could end a member's career.

No service accepts individuals who have had the surgery — also known as radial keratotomy — for enlistment, commission or flight training, including entrance to the service academies. The Army and the Air Force warn active duty members they may have to pass a medical board to remain on active duty after the surgery.

Navy regulations prohibit the surgery for active duty personnel in certain fields, such as diving and aerospace. Navy and Marine Corps personnel should check with their military doctors before getting the surgery.

Radial keratotomy was refined in 1972 by a Russian ophthalmologist. In the former Soviet Union the operation quickly became more common than prescriptions for glasses. In the United States, however, the surgery is still controversial, according to Air Force officials.

Most health insurance plans, including Civilian Health and Medical Plan of the Uniformed Services and those for federal civilians, consider it cosmetic surgery and do not cover the cost, which can range from $1,000 to $3,000 per eye.

Radial keratotomy corrects nearsightedness with tiny incisions in the cornea that flatten it and change the way it focuses. The incisions radiate outward like wheel spokes from a central area of the cornea that remains untouched. But the incisions must be precise. If the cornea is flattened too much, the eye will become farsighted. If it is not flattened enough, the patient will still be nearsighted.

The surgery is tricky and requires a skilled surgeon; results are not consistent. A U.S. government-funded study followed 435 nearsighted people who had operations in 1982 and 1983 in teaching hospitals. Five years later the majority still had improved eyesight, although many did not achieve 20/20 vision. A sizable minority still needed glasses, and about 3 percent suffered worse vision than before the operation.

Dr. (Col.) John Burkins, a flight surgeon at Air Force Reserve Headquarters at Robins Air Force Base, Ga., is concerned about the increased popularity of the operation. He said the Air Force disapproves of radial keratotomy for several reasons.

No service accepts individuals who have had radial keratotomy for enlistment, commission or flight training, including entrance to the service academies

"There can be a loss of night vision, severe glare problems in sunlight and severe day-to-day fluctuations in visual acuity," said Burkins. Because of these fluctuations, some patients found their vision was fine in the morning but deteriorated to 20/70 or worse later in the day.

The cornea is weakened by these procedures, which increases the possibility of a rupture of the eye during any physical trauma, he said. The operation also increases the risk of a retinal detachment.

The Air Force surgeon general's office also advised Air Force doctors to warn teen-age family members considering the operation that it will prevent them from joining the military. Since not all flying positions require 20/20 or better uncorrected vision, the Air Force wants young people to be aware of all career options before getting surgery.

A new surgery may provide a ray of hope for people who have trouble wearing glasses or contacts. Navy Drs. (Lt. Cmdrs.) Steve Schallhorn and Chris Blanton are testing the procedure, called photorefractive keratectomy, at Naval Medical Center San Diego. The Navy study is part of Food and Drug Administration research. If all goes well in the study, FDA may approve the procedure this year or next.

The new surgery uses a laser to flatten the cornea's contours. Researchers are optimistic that this surgery may be safer than radial keratotomy, because the laser does not weaken the eye. Also, the procedure is highly automated, with a computer doing much of the work. Because of this, results may be more predictable and consistent, said Schallhorn.

An ophthalmologist, Schallhorn is "cautiously optimistic" about the surgery. If FDA approves the surgery, he said, the Navy may change its policy.

"Some individuals have problems with glasses and contacts. For these people, PRK may lead to improved performance," he said. "It could be very useful for Navy divers or Marines in the field whose glasses or contacts may become contaminated or scratched."

Schallhorn said both RK and PRK are successful only for individuals whose nearsightedness is not severe. He would not advise either surgery for someone with severe nearsightedness — a lens prescription of more than six to 10 diopters.

Schallhorn said he was deluged with applications from sailors and Marines who wanted to participate in the study. Although he can't accept new patients, sailors and Marines who want more information can write to him. He said he can't promise a personal response, but he'll send information and tally the queries so Navy officials will have an idea of the fleet's interest level.

Write to Schallhorn, care of the U.S. Navy Department of Ophthalmology, Naval Medical Center San Diego, Calif., 92134-5000. Include name, rate or rank, time in service, a job description and on-the job problems experienced with glasses or contacts.

In the meantime, he urges anyone who wants a surgical solution to nearsightedness to wait for the results of the FDA study on PRK.

"The Navy doesn't endorse PRK. Personally, I wouldn't recommend radial keratotomy because of the many concerns about weakening the cornea. But if laser surgery (PRK) is approved, it may be the solution for people who can't tolerate glasses and contacts," said Schallhorn.

Army Dr. (Col.) Francis La Piana, an ophthalmologist at Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington, D.C., agrees with Schallhorn that people who have problems with glasses should wait for the PRK research results.

"Radial keratotomy permanently weakens the cornea," said La Piana. "Military life is eye-hazardous in peace or war, and military members should not jeopardize their eyesight."

Engineers to construct firebreak

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The 63rd Engineer Company is scheduled to construct a firebreak, a strip of cleared land used to stop fire, from Torchill Road to Benning Boulevard beginning Monday.

The firebreak will be 1,120 feet long and 30 feet wide and will be between the boundary of Fort Benning and Columbus.

There will be approximately 20 to 25 soldiers at the project site. There will also be two dozers, two bucket loaders and eight to 10 five-ton dump trucks in the vicinity.

The project will take approximately three weeks to complete. After the construction, grass will be replanted for erosion control.

va q&a

Department of Veterans Affairs

Q: What happens if I fail to make the payments on my home loan guaranteed by the Department of Veterans Affairs?

A: Failure to make payments on the loan may lead to foreclosure and the loss of your home.

If you find yourself in financial difficulty, contact your loan holder to discuss the problem and make arrangements to bring your loan current.

If additional assistance or advice is required, you should contact VA. You can reach the VA regional office nearest you by calling (800) 827-1000.

Q: I receive a nonservice-connected pension from VA. Does this make me eligible for a grant for a specially adapted home?

A: No. This program is available for veterans with a permanent and total service-connected disability.

Q: Can I use my VA-guaranteed home loan to buy land I plan to build a house on in the future?

A: A VA-guaranteed loan cannot be used to buy undeveloped land unless it is part of a package that includes the building of your home.

Editor's note: If you have a question about your veterans benefits, call the Department of Veterans Affairs at (800) 827-1000.

ACAP plans seminar

Army Career and Alumni Program

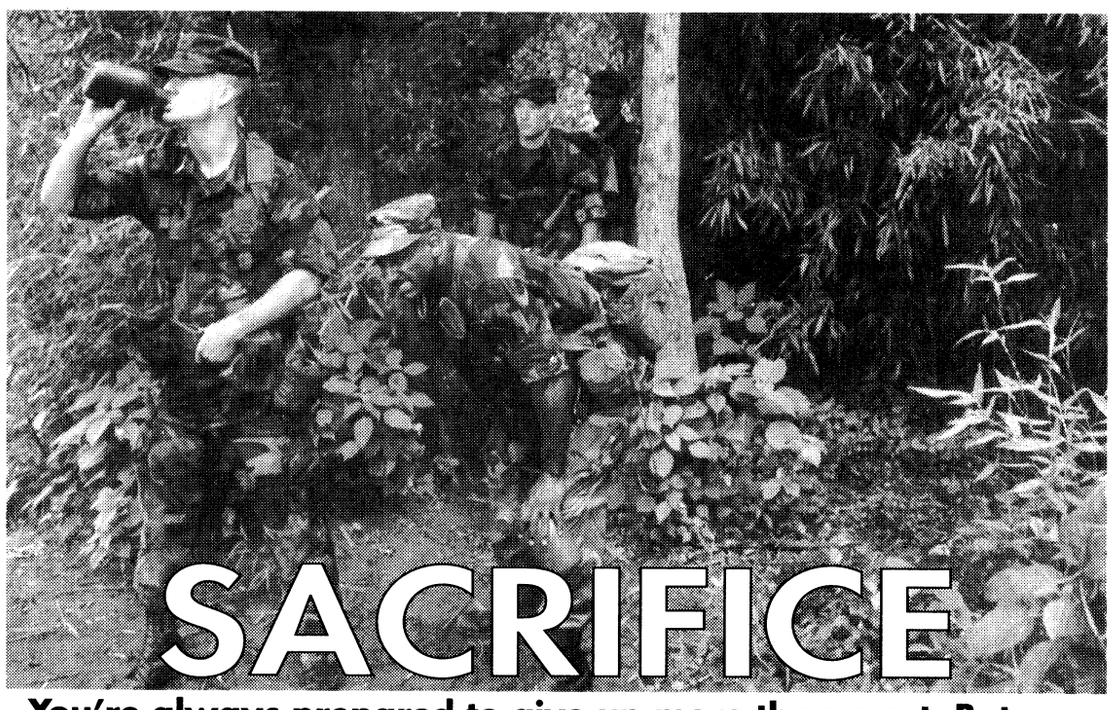
A seminar about federal employment will be Thursday from 9 to 11 a.m. in Infantry Hall, Classroom 30.

Sponsored by the Army Career and Alumni Program and the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, the seminar is designed to provide information on the opportunities of federal employment with primary emphasis on Fort Benning.

Available to soldiers retiring from the military and their family members, the seminar will cover the basics of how the federal employment system functions, where to find job announcements and veteran's preference. Participants will be given a detailed explanation of the federal employment application, Standard Form 171.

James Fleming, a 20-year veteran of the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, and Cathy Murray, an instructor with Conwal Inc., will be available to answer questions.

Murray assists the Georgia Department of Labor with the ACAP Transition Assistance Program workshop, and she conducts personal assessments Thursday and Friday of each week from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the ACAP office in Soldiers' Plaza. The assessments include instruction in the use of an automated Standard Form 171.



To obtain an appointment, call 545-7009, 545-4913 or 545-4892 or stop by Building 2617 in Soldiers' Plaza.

Perry cites three challenges facing security

By Jim Garamone
American Forces Information Service

Nuclear policies, the correct use of military force and managing the reduction of the military are the three biggest challenges facing the Department of Defense, said Defense Secretary William Perry.

Perry, speaking to National Defense University graduates at Fort McNair in Washington, D.C., said Russia is the only country in the world that can still threaten U.S. national survival.

"Russia is no longer an enemy," Perry said. "It is now a partner. But in Russia and in the other countries of the former Soviet Union, the political, economic and social reforms that are under way have a very uncertain outcome."

There is a danger the upheavals and political instability in the former Soviet Union may mean a re-emergence of the Cold War nuclear threat. Perry said U.S. policy should be directed against such a re-emergence and "trying to nail down the gains we've already achieved."

Perry listed the programs DoD has in place to help prevent such a re-emergence. He noted DoD is helping Russia dismantle its nuclear weapons, convert its defense industries to peacetime use and "reform the former Red army so that it can operate under a democratic government with civilian leadership."

Perry said the United States cannot determine the outcome of events in the former Soviet Union. "But we can influence it, and we must try," he said.

Perry discussed the DoD effort to reformulate policies for the use or threat of use of American military might. "Philosophically, this is a difficult problem to even describe, much less formulate and that's because in all of the foreseeable post-Cold War contingencies, we have limited policy objectives," he said.

He contrasted this state of affairs with World War II and the Cold War. He said the overriding American objective during World War II was total victory. During the Cold War, the U.S. objective was to deter a Soviet attack. The Fascists and Communists directly threatened U.S. national survival. Today, while threats affect U.S. national interests, the survival of the country is not at stake. With this being the case, Perry said, the threatened or actual use of U.S. force must be very selective.

This idea is not new. "We've used limited force to achieve limited objectives in every contingency involving the United States since World War II," Perry said. He said in the new environment the level of national interest will dictate the level of U.S. military involvement, and the United States will seek the help of allies and multinational institutions where appropriate and feasible.

"Where our supreme national interest is at stake, we will use overwhelming force and go it alone if necessary," he said. "Where the threat is less, we will be more selective in using force."

Perry said the third challenge facing DoD is managing the post-Cold War drawdown. "We are about two-thirds of the way through a resource reduction now, ... which will amount to about 40 percent," he said. The challenge is making this reduction while maintaining readiness and quality of today's forces.

Historically, Perry said. the military has not handled drawdowns well, pointing to reductions after World War II and Vietnam. He said the current drawdown should avoid the problems of lowered quality, morale and readiness that plagued earlier efforts.

"We've been bringing down the size of the force to avoid having a large but a hollow force," he said. "These reductions in force structure ... have another full year to go. Then we expect to stabilize at a level which will amount to 1.45 million total people in the active military forces. From that point on we will have the advantage of a stable force structure. We will get to a smaller force, but continue to emphasize maintaining the quality of the people."

Perry concluded with a quote from British novelist Graham Greene. " 'There always comes a moment in time when a door opens and lets the future in.' The ending of the Cold War has opened such a door for our national security. The future is out there waiting to come in, and it's our task to shape that future to our country's advantage."

More U.S. installations slated to close overseas

By Stephen Barrett
American Forces Information Service

U.S. military facilities at 27 European sites will close or reduce operations, Department of Defense officials announced June 16. Sites named are in Germany, the Netherlands, Belgium, Denmark and the United Kingdom.

In addition, seven other European sites changed status. Five installations originally slated to remain open at reduced levels will now close, while two originally slated to close will remain open.

The Air Force returns three sites to host nations and partially returns one. The Holstebro Contingency Hospital in Denmark, the United Kingdom's Nocton Hall Contingency Hospital and Alzey Communication Annex in Sembach, Germany, will return to host nation control. The Suelm Annex in Bitburg, Germany, becomes a partial return.

Of the 27 sites announced, 23 are Army, with 20 located in Germany. Military communities in Nuremberg, Fulda, Augsburg and Karlsruhe are hardest hit, with 13 of 23 closures involving the four cities.

In Nuremberg the Army returns the Feucht Storage Facility and the Erlangen, Herzogenaurach and Patoriusstrasse housing areas. Herzo Base and the Nuremberg hospital, earlier named as partial returns, become full returns.

In the Fulda area, the Army returns four sites in Reiterswiesen. The sites include the military airfield, ammunition storage area and two training areas.

In Karlsruhe the Army will close Gerszewski Barracks and Neureut Barracks, while Germershiem Army Depot becomes a partial return.

The Quartermaster Supply Center was the only full return in Augsburg. However, Reece Barracks changes from partial return to full return status and Lechfeld Training Area becomes a partial return.

Other Army installations to close include Giessen's Marburg General Storage Facility, Azbill Barracks in Mainz and Heidelberg's Rheinau Kaserne in Germany, the Grobbendonk Site in Belgium, and the Herongen and Ter Apel storage sites in the Netherlands.

Army partial returns include the Roedelheim Ordnance Facility near Frankfurt, Baumholder's Nahbollenbach Storage Area, Kaiserslautern's Rhein Ordnance Barracks, and the Quirnheim Missile Station near Mannheim. All of these are in Germany.

Two other installations changed from partial to full return status. Those two are the Balesfeld Missile Station in Baumholder and the Fischbach Ordnance Depot near Pirmasens, both in Germany. Two other installations, the Bicester Sites in Great Britain and Frankfurt's Betts Housing Area, go from full to partial return status.

With the announcement, 895 installations are now slated for return to the host nations, partial return or standby status. Of these, 826 are European sites.

Return means U.S. operations end and the entire installation returns to host nation control. Partial return means the United States retains some facilities and runs reduced operations. Standby means the military stops operations but maintains the installation for future use.

Soldier helps Army win volleyball title

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

With his military career coming to its end, Damon Dicus, a specialist with Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, only wishes he had heard about all the All-Army sports program sooner.

Standing six feet two inches tall and with a vertical leap somewhere near three feet, Dicus made the 1994 All-Army and the Armed Forces Volleyball Team in his first and last try as a soldier. With his three-year enlistment ending in August, Dicus is proud to say that he helped the Army win the interservice championship this year at Camp LeJeune, N.C.

At 24, Dicus started playing volleyball while attending Moor Park Junior College in Moor Park, Calif., after graduating from high school in 1988. The southern California native was playing basketball in college when a friend got him interested in volleyball.

"I played in a few grass and beach tournaments after college," he said.

Dicus' first interest in volleyball actually came while watching the U.S. team win gold during the 1984 and 1988 Summer Olympic Games. In the summer of 1991, with all his friends heading back to school, Dicus headed for the Army.

Basic training and one station unit training brought Dicus to Fort Benning for the first time. After a quick year in Korea, Dicus returned to post and the 29th Infantry Regiment, where he renewed his interest in volleyball while playing for his company.

By the time he heard about the All-Army program, it was too late for the 1993 season, so he kept playing on the club team in Columbus and traveling the indoor circuit.

In February, Dicus attended a volleyball screening on post and got the paperwork to submit to the Department of the Army sports office. In April a friend of Dicus' was notified, along with a female soldier, that they had been selected to attend the All-Army trial camp at Fort Indiantown Gap, Pa., but Dicus had not received any notice.

"I called over to the sports office to see if they had gotten any word on me and they said no, so I figured that was it for me," said Dicus. "I was training with my partner for the two-man professional beach qualifier up in Atlanta, when I was called into my executive officer's office and was told I had come down on orders for the camp and I was leaving the next day," said Dicus. "At that time I didn't know whether to stay and fulfill my commitment to my partner or jump at this new opportunity, which could possibly be better for me in the long run should I want to play again in college. I made the decision to go, so I packed my bags and headed for Pennsylvania the next day."

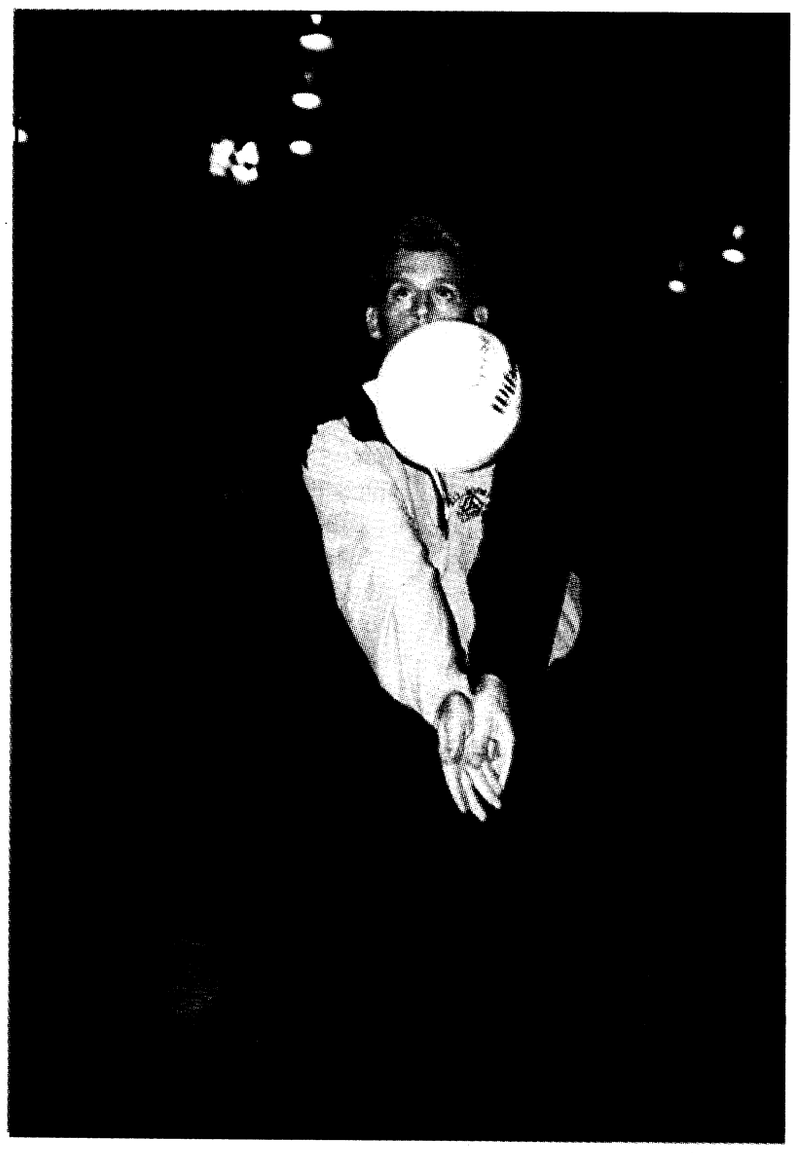
Dicus missed the traditional hell day, which is the first day of training camp where the coach drills everybody into the ground to see what he has to work with. No matter, his started the minute he got off the plane.

"It was a little weird adjusting from playing outdoor ball to indoor virtually overnight. With two different balls and two different atmospheres, the indoor game is so much quicker, I was a little thrown off," said Dicus. "I was praying to just make it through the first cut."

Dicus not only made the first cut but also the second and final cuts to make the team. He then traveled to the interservice championships at Camp LeJuene.

In the first match against the Air Force, the player who started in front of Dicus had a bad opening game, which the Army lost.

"Before the start of the second game the coach came up to me and told me I was going to start," Dicus said. "From that point on, I started every match and played well enough to help the Army win the Gold Medal and land me a spot on the armed forces team with five other Army players."



The team then headed for the San Diego Naval Air Station in California for three weeks of intense training before the Council International Du Sport Militaire championship began there in June.

"We didn't do to well at CISM," Dicus said. "The pool we landed in was by far the strongest of the lot. We played against teams from South Korea, Germany and Belgium in the first round.

"These teams train year round. We got three weeks and sometimes it showed. Steve Brown from DA, and others who have been around the CISM competition for years, told us we were probably the best armed forces team they have had."

The team finished with a win against Canada, which they labeled the North American championships.

"It was a great experience for me, and I'm very happy I was able to participate," Dicus said. "It was the highlight of my military career and I won't forget it."

Post soldiers to carry torch

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning will host a ceremony for the Georgia Games Torch Run 2 p.m. Sunday in the parking lot of the Post Exchange at the Main Mall.

The Torch Run, which will cover a 655-mile route the length and width of Georgia, began in Savannah Thursday.

Runners will carry the torch through Valdosta, Albany, Fort Benning, Columbus, LaGrange, Carrolton, Rome, Cumming and Gainesville to the Georgia Games opening ceremonies in Atlanta July 22.

Members of the Atlanta Track Club will carry the torch for most of the route, but Fort Benning soldiers will take over the job when the torch reaches post.

At 1:30 p.m. Sunday, the torch will arrive at Kelley Hill from Albany, where seven volunteers from the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized), will take it and carry it to the Post Exchange.

Spc. Rodney Smith, who won the bronze medal in the 1992 Olympics in Barcelona, Spain, will carry the torch into the assembly area for the ceremony. Afterward, the Fort Benning Ten-Miler Team will carry it to the main gate, where they will hand it off to runners from Columbus.

During the ceremony, Fort Benning's Chief of Staff Col. Gregory C. Camp will welcome the runners and perform the ceremonial torch lighting. Olympic shooters from the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit will present medals to the core group of runners from the Atlanta Track Club.

The Georgia Games mascot, "Spike" the torch, will also be at the ceremony.

"This is the first year we've been involved (in the Torch Run) at all," said Maj. Marcus A. Alexander, Fort Benning coordinator for the Georgia Games.

"Fort Benning wasn't on the calendar originally — we really worked to have this ceremony here."

"This is like a preliminary to see if we can carry an Olympic torch," said Eddie James, who is with the physical fitness school and working with Alexander to coordinate the ceremony.

The Georgia Games is an Olympic-style sports festival which brings together amateur athletes of all ages and skill levels to compete in 32 sports championships.

The championships will take place through July 25 at Georgia Technical Institute's Bobby Dodd Stadium.

The Torch Run flame is scheduled to arrive at the stadium at 8:58 p.m July 22, where it will be used to ignite the official Georgia Games Torch during a live statewide telecast.

Army men, women claim track, field championships

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Chalking up the Army's 10th military championship of the year, the Army men's and women's track teams claimed the 1994 Armed Forces Track and Field Championship at Fort Sill, Okla., in May.

Coached by Willie Davenport, 1968 Olympic gold medalist and three-time Olympian in the 110-meter hurdles, the Army took 17 of 22 events on the championship's final day.

The Athlete of the Meet Award went to Dino Napier, of U.S. Army Europe. Napier captured Gold Medals in the 100m and 200m dash and the 4x100m relay.

He went on to place third in the 200m finals of the 1994 Track and Field National Championships, June 14 to 18 at the University of Tennessee, and qualified for the U.S. Olympic Festival in July.

Beginning the sports year in February, Army pummeled all competition in the Armed Forces Boxing Championship. This was the first time in Armed Forces Championship history that one service won all 12 weight divisions.

Basketball provided the next armed forces trophy, as the Army women swept through the double-elimination tournament undefeated in March. In men's competition, Army pushed the bubble, which finally burst in the "if necessary" game against the Marine Corps; Marines won the final match, 94 to 81.

In April, Army men pinned first place in both the Greco-Roman and freestyle Armed Forces Wrestling Championships. Members of the Army's World-Class Athlete Program then led the Armed Forces Wrestling Team to capture the U.S. National Greco-Roman Wrestling title at Las Vegas.

Eleven of the Army grapplers qualified for the U.S. World Trials in June, which will produce qualifiers for the 1994 World Championship and 1995 Pan American Games.

Three WCAP martial artists led Army to the 1994 Armed Forces Taekwondo Championship in April, then continued to the U.S. Taekwondo Union National Tournament in May.

Army bowlers didn't spare the competition when it came to the late-April Armed Forces Bowling Championship. The men's and women's teams both won the title for the first time since 1978.

The top three soldiers will represent the U.S. military at the U.S.A. Team Championship in Minneapolis in August.

The Armed Forces Volleyball Championships served up an undefeated record to the Army Men's Team in May; Army women placed second. Five men and four women qualified for the 1994 Armed Forces Volleyball Team.

Army athletes will compete in softball, golf and soccer in the remaining 1994 Armed Forces Championships.

So far, the Army has won 10 of 12 championship competitions this year — the best record since 1988, when the Army captured 14 of 18 possible.

"The outstanding performance of Army teams and individuals can be directly attributed to the support of field commanders and command support of the WCAP," said Steve Brown, Army Sports Office.

"As the nation prepares its athletes for the 1996 Olympics in Atlanta, continued commander support is essential if soldiers are to be provided the opportunity to make the nation's Olympic team and to use this event to showcase the character and caliber of today's Army."

Indeed, the program does have command support, from the very top. "These soldier-athletes represent the Army," said Army Chief of Staff Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan. "The Army leadership must accommodate them, even though it may be difficult to balance this against specific mission requirements."

The Army's World-Class Athlete Program provides soldiers the chance to train for the Olympics. As of June 1, the program had 30 soldiers, all high in the national rankings of their sports.

Nine more soldiers have been accepted into the WCAP and are awaiting orders for assignment.

"The Army has made great strides in developing a game plan for the WCAP," Brown said.

These include incorporating reserve soldiers into the program, developing a new assignment policy, and standardizing the requirement for a career plan.

Lake knowledge important for fishing success

commentary

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

Bass fishing success depends on more than simply being able to cast lures well. Knowledge of the lake being fished is also critical.

"You need to know the size of fish and the quality of fishing to expect, because these factors often determine the lures and techniques you'll use," said Evinrude Outboards Pro Staff angler Mickey Bruce of Georgia.

"If I'm on a lake where I know the bass tend to be small and not really plentiful, I'll fish totally different than when I'm on a lake where big bass are common.

"For small bass I'll use smaller lures and fish slower and tighter to cover, but for big bass I'll use much larger lures and probably fish faster, depending on how active they are," Bruce said.

Bruce and other tournament pros have certainly seen differences in various lakes where they've competed this year. In March, Bruce caught 83 pounds of bass in one four-day event and finished second, while on another lake in May he caught 34 pounds in four days and finished third.

"Not only does having prior knowledge of a lake help you choose lures and patterns, it also helps your mental attitude," said the Georgia pro. "It's much easier to accept those hours of fishing without a strike if you know ahead of time that's the way it's going to be."

Pros like Bruce usually visit the lake at least once before official tournament practice begins. Surprisingly, this time isn't always spent fishing, either.

"What we really try to do on the first visit is simply learn how to run the various channels to avoid rocks or shallow water, and look at the amount of cover available for bass," the Evinrude pro said. "We're simply getting a feel for the conditions.

"We may try to attend the weigh-in of a local tournament, too, so we can see the quality of the bass being caught. If we see a low weight from the local anglers who know the lake well, we can pretty well tell what to expect during our tournament."

Bruce emphasized that prior knowledge of a lake is often all that separates veteran pros from younger anglers, since many organizations hold their events on the same lakes year after year.

"After just one or two tournaments, we not only know the quality of the fishery, we can also tell where the best fish will likely be caught," Bruce said. "The next year, we simply go to those places and pinpoint a current pattern, while a newcomer really has to start from scratch.

"Having prior knowledge is definitely a big advantage."

Summertime bass

Topwater fishing now under way

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

If given a choice, most bass fishers prefer spring over all other seasons because the fish are shallow and easier to catch.

Not David Wharton, a former guide on Sam Rayburn Lake in Texas. He likes the summer.

"Summer means topwater fishing," says Wharton, a veteran bass tournament pro and member of the Johnson Outboards Pro Staff. "It's exciting, it means big bass, and it's easy."

Topwater fishing generally begins in May in the Deep South, but by June lakes throughout much of the rest of the nation have warmed enough that surface plugs will draw vicious strikes from active largemouth and smallmouth bass.

Wharton's three favorite topwater lures can be categorized as chuggers, concave-faced plugs that pop and spit water; slush baits that feature one or more propellers; and walking baits that sashay from side to side when retrieved in quick jerks.

"Water conditions usually determine which of these lures will be the most effective," explains Wharton. "For example, with a slight ripple on the water, or when I'm fishing very fast, I use a chugger. When the surface is calm and I'm fishing slower, a slush bait is usually much more productive."

The walking baits normally produce fewer strikes, explains Wharton, but larger bass. He likes to use these lures in calm water, but others have equal success in choppy conditions. He also uses them when fishing over deep water because they pull fish up from the depths.

"In the summer, the best times to use topwater lures are normally early and late each day," adds the Johnson pro, "but if you see fish activity at mid-day, then by all means consider using a topwater lure.

"Also, if you've been catching bass on the bottom with a worm or jig and suddenly the action stops, the bass may have moved up to suspend, and a topwater lure often starts bringing strikes again."

Wharton's best-ever topwater bass, a giant weighing more than eight pounds, hit a walking surface lure at mid-day. The water was calm and the sky was bright.

"Don't put away your topwater lures just because it's hot and bright," he says. "I've seen many times when topwater lures produced excellent catches during the hottest part of the day."

Wharton prefers to fish topwater lures around vegetation, boat docks, or the shaded sides of bushes and trees. He uses a six-foot light action rod and 14-pound test line.

Regardless of the type of tackle or lure being used, the one key rule about fishing all topwater lures, Wharton emphasizes, is not to get in a hurry when using them.

"You don't ever want to cross the ripples," he says. "You make a cast and let the ripples die. Then you move the lure."

TAKE A BITE OUT OF CRIME®

The hot topic this week concerns the use of motorcycles on Fort Benning.

U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 190-5 requires that all individuals operating motorcycles or motor bikes must pass the Fort Benning motorcycle safety course before operating one of these vehicles on Fort Benning.

Operators must also wear the following safety gear: long trousers, long-sleeved shirt or jacket, reflective vest, leather boots or over the ankle boots and proper eye protection, which includes clear goggles or a face shield attached to the helmet.

A motorcycle or motorbikes windshield is not considered proper eye protection. All motorcycles and motorbikes must have two rearview mirrors. The use of headphones or earphones while operating a vehicle is also prohibited.

The operators of these vehicles must also conform to state laws and regulations governing the use of motorcycles.

The following entries were taken from the Fort Benning Military Police Blotters from June 29 to July 5. Such entries may be "incomplete and do not determine the guilt or innocence of any person.

• A specialist was charged with child neglect and driving under the influence of alcohol. The specialist had placed his family member, a 1-year-old, in bed upstairs and began drinking beer early in the evening.

After midnight, the specialist had consumed a case of beer and decided to leave his quarters en route to the Columbus city area, and left his 1-year-old family member upstairs in bed unattended.

The specialist was arrested two hours later by Columbus Police Department for driving under the influence of alcohol. The child was pick up at 1 p.m. and was taken to Martin Army Community Hospital for evaluation and was later released to another family member.

The specialist is pending charges by the military and civil authorities.

Other activities included 13 cases of driving under the influence of alcohol and nine cases of traffic accidents. There were two cases of shoplifting reported at the exchange facilities.

ask the judge

Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: I know that most door-to-door salespersons don't sing "Another One Bites the Dust" as I sign contracts in front of them. They surely sing "You Can't Touch This" when I try to rescind the contract.

Many rip-off artists and fly-by-night businesses are out there, and they aren't going to do something blatantly illegal like crushing my skull with a cinder block.

Is there anything that serves as a clear sign of fraud or a definite rip-off?

A: Well, as you indicate, most salespersons aren't going to tell you, "Hey, Jerky, I'm stealin' your money!"

However, there are some questionable sales that we see every day at Legal Assistance. If these aren't scams per se, they're clearly worthy of noting so you won't get involved with them.

The first thing to keep your eyes open for is exorbitant interest rates. They often exist in door-to-door and automobile sales. Beware of individuals who tell you that you have bad credit and then blame the high interest rate on that.

If you know that you have bad credit, then the creditor is merely protecting himself and that's the price you pay for bad credit. But if you think you have good credit, beware because someone may be trying to get the best of you. At the Legal Assistance Office, we see instances of this in car sales, photo processing plans, buying clubs, vacuum sales and encyclopedia sales.

The second reason to keep your eyes open is many goods are not worth the price you are paying for them. Find out exactly how much you are paying for a photo plan, an encyclopedia or a merchandise buying club.

Many photo plans offer a camera and film processing that isn't worth more than a couple hundred dollars. Many encyclopedias, dictionaries, almanacs and other research material can be purchased for less elsewhere or checked out from the library.

Many buying services don't give you any better deal than the Post Exchange.

Make sure you really are getting the deal that the salesperson promises. Figure the total amount of interest you will pay because often the salesperson won't do it for you. And above all, do not be fooled by low monthly payments because you may be paying them forever and in effect paying twice as much in interest.

Another way to avoid these scams is to read the fine print. If you are over 18 and are not coerced, most anything you sign can create a binding contract. If the contract says you have three days to revoke, then you only have three days to revoke.

Whatever you do, never rely on the promises of a fast-talking salesperson. If there is a binding written contract, almost every oral discussion surrounding the contract is inadmissible in court.

Get everything in writing and do not rely on anything unless the salesperson expressly writes it on the document. If you fail to do this, or fail to read every word of the contract, you will probably get burned.

Before investing, borrowing or purchasing from anyone, look into their history. There are many organizations you can call to check into someone's background.

You can call the Federal Trade Commission Bureau of Consumer Protection at (202) 326-3650. You can call the Better Business Bureau at 324-0712 or make an appointment at the Legal Assistance Office to have a legal specialist review the contract before signing it.

Appointments may be made by calling 545-3281. Protect yourself, because that bonehead salesperson who is trying to be your buddy is only trying to make a buck.

pet tips

Fort Benning Veterinary Services

Canine distemper (also known as hardpad disease) is a disease that occurs in dog and ferrets.

The disease is spread from dog to dog, starting out like a cold and progressing to seizures and blindness. Treatment is generally long term and often unsuccessful, but the disease can be prevented by vaccination.

Distemper does exist on Fort Benning. This year, several dogs in the Stray Animal Facility have had the disease. Dogs spread the disease by coughing on other dogs or by touching noses. Young dogs are much more likely to get distemper than older dogs.

The signs of distemper are classified as mild or serious. Mild signs include fever, red runny eyes, runny nose, depression, not eating, vomiting, diarrhea and coughing. Serious signs include muscle spasms, loss of coordination, paralysis, seizures, blindness and hardened pads on the feet.

A dog can go from mild signs to serious signs in as little as 10 days or as much as 10 years. Serious signs require much more treatment and shorten the life of the dog.

Treatment for distemper is only to make the animal comfortable and never cures the disease. Dogs with distemper will continue to deteriorate even if they receive prompt care.

The only cure for distemper is prevention. There is a vaccination for the disease that is highly effective. Puppies should receive the shot at 6 weeks with boosters at 9 and 12 weeks. Adult dogs should be vaccinated for distemper yearly.

The Fort Benning Veterinary Treatment Facility and all off-post veterinarians can provide this vaccination.

The Fort Benning Veterinary Treatment Facility is located in Building 265 on 10th Mountain Division Road. The hours are 8 to 11:30 a.m. and 12:45 to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday (closed the last working day of the month for inventory) and the phone numbers are 545-4444 and 545-1127.

community care

By Ken Franklin
Martin Army Community Hospital

The pharmacy system at Martin Army Community Hospital is implementing a new supply system to further improve customer service.

The new system, called Prime Vendor, uses a computer and phone link with a pharmaceutical vendor. With automated order processing, 99 percent of orders are filled within 24 hours.

For most patients, the system will be invisible. As most prescriptions are used, the pharmacy refills its stock almost immediately.

The difference will be fewer prescriptions out of stock and far shorter waits when medicines do run out of stock (usually one business day).

Indirectly, this system will also save money and improve quality, by reducing the size and age of inventories. While the pharmacy has always checked medicines for expiration dates, the old system sometimes found expired medicines that had to be destroyed. With the prime vendor system, inventories can be lower, reducing the chance of expired medicines.

Patients should know that this system does not add any new prescription items. The current formulary (a list of approved medicines) remains in effect.

The Prime Vendor system is projected to begin Monday. With it, Martin Army Community Hospital will make another step forward in responsiveness to its patients' needs.

Do you have a question about medical care at Fort Benning? Send it to Community Care Corner, Martin Army Community Hospital, ATTN: HSXB-F, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905-6100.

voting news

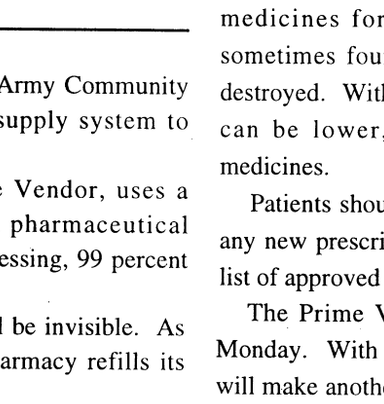
Federal Voting Assistance Program



A total of 29 state primaries remain between July and the general election Nov. 8.

Primaries are used by the parties to nominate the candidates who will appear on the ballot in the Nov. 8 general election.

Voting officials state one example of why it is important to participate in the entire electoral process is that in Louisiana if any candidate receives more than 50 percent of the vote cast in the primary election, that candidate is declared the winner and that office is not voted upon in the general election. Those who participate in the state primary ultimately decide who will take the oath of office.

Voting Assistance Guide

Voters can consult the 1994-95 Voting Assistance Guide when requesting registration and or a ballot for primary elections. Laws relating to the conduct of primary elections vary from state to state.

In most states, voters must declare their party preference in order to receive a ballot for the primary election, while in others, party affiliation is secret.

Voters can check the calendar on page 1 of the Voting Assistance Guide to find out the date of their state primary.

Most states require submission of the Federal Post Card Application request for a ballot at least 30 days before the election, in some cases longer if voters are requesting registration as well.

Absentee ballots

There's still time to submit your Federal Post Card Application SF 76) to your local election official to obtain registration or request a ballot to participate in your state's primary elections.

Approximately 90 days before the election, the Federal Voting Assistance Program disseminates news releases announcing the upcoming election in each state and the procedure for obtaining registration or a ballot.

Candidate names and party affiliation are released 60 days before the date.

Teach children 'safe walking' this summer

Auto Club South

More than 30 percent of all pedestrian fatalities and injuries in Georgia in 1993 involved children 14 years of age and under, according to the Georgia State Patrol.

Officials at AAA Auto Club South urge motorists to remember that now school is out of session for the summer, to be aware of the increase in numbers of children playing near or on roadways.

"Both parents and motorists need to do their part to protect our children during these summer months," said Randy Bly, director of traffic safety for AAA Auto Club South.

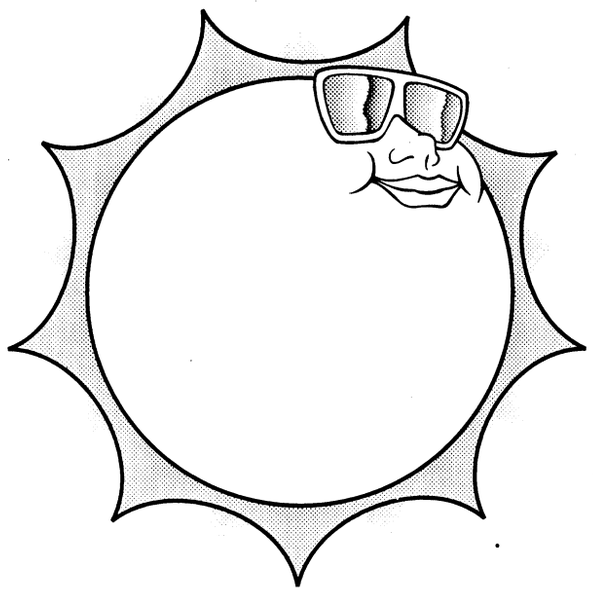
Parents can do their part in keeping their children safe by teaching, demonstrating and practicing the "Seven Tips for Safe Walking."

"Remember that children imitate both safe and unsafe behaviors, so parents need to set a positive example," Bly said.

The seven tips for safe walking include:

1. Keep from between parked cars. Many children are struck each year in nonintersection accidents when they suddenly enter the roadway from between parked cars.

2. Be extra alert in bad weather. Cars cannot stop as fast on wet pavement, or vehicles may skid. Because motorists and pedestrians tend to hurry to escape the bad weather, they may not be paying close attention to their surroundings. Motorists and pedestrians need to be extra alert when the weather is bad.



3 . Be seen at night. Have your children wear light-colored or white clothing if they will be walking after dark. Also, place reflective strips on clothing, jackets and hats, and have your child carry a flashlight.

4. Cross at corners. Studies show that motorists do not expect children to cross at midblock and tend to slow down at intersections because they expect to see pedestrians cross there.

5. Observe and obey. Remind children that police officers, traffic signs and signals are all traffic safety helpers. They should be observed and obeyed

6. Look all ways before crossing. Children should be taught to stop and look for cars before they cross, and to walk — not run — across the street when it is safe to proceed. Teach them to be mindful of cars making turns, especially with right-turn-on-red laws in effect.

7. Walk facing traffic. In areas where there are no sidewalks, children should be instructed to walk on the left side of the roadway facing approaching traffic. They should walk in a single file, as far off the traveled part of the roadway as possible. If an adult is walking with the child, the adult should walk between the child and the roadway, acting as more of a visible buffer to the vehicles.

Motorists can do their part in protecting children this summer by taking extra precautions when approaching intersections, parked cars, playgrounds, parks and when making turns.

Summer also means an increase of bicycles on our roadways. "Bicycles are legally defined as vehicles in Georgia," Bly said. "Consequently, bicyclists have the same rights to the roadways as motorists. It is important for both motorists and bicyclists to know the proper rules when sharing the roadway."

AAA Auto Club South offers several pamphlets to help motorists and parents brush up on safety tips this summer, including both bicycle and pedestrian safety.

For free copies of these brochures, stop by your local AAA office.

CHAMPUS will pay for mammograms, Pap smears

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

The Civilian Health and Medical Program for the Uniformed Services will now share the cost of screening mammograms and Pap tests.

CHAMPUS spokesman Dave Potts said coverage for both tests is effective retroactive to Nov. 5, 1990. CHAMPUS covered the tests for diagnostic purposes earlier but placed more restrictions on them as screening tests.

X-ray mammography is a procedure to evaluate and detect breast disease. A Pap test is a laboratory examination of samples from the female genital tract to look for signs of cancer and other diseases.

The insurance program covers mammography as a routine screening procedure for women who have no signs or symptoms of breast disease as follows: once for women aged 35 to 39; every 24 months for women aged 40 to 49, but CHAMPUS will cover one procedure per year for women this age who are considered at high risk; or once per year for women aged 50 or older.

CHAMPUS will also share the cost of mammography for diagnostic reasons. Diagnostic mammography is indicated for breast mass found on physical examination; spontaneous nipple discharge; unusual redness of the breast; nipple erosion, tumor or nodule under the armpit; previous history of diagnosed breast cancer; previous abnormal mammography; or fibrocystic disease.

The program covers one screening Pap test per year for three consecutive years for women aged 18 or older, or for women under 18 who are or have been sexually active. If the findings for the three consecutive yearly Pap tests are normal, CHAMPUS will then cover one screening Pap test every two years. If more frequent screening tests are documented as medically necessary for women at high risk of developing cervical cancer, CHAMPUS may help pay for them.

In related news, a new study by the American Cancer Society reports smoking increases a woman's risk of dying from breast cancer by 25 percent.

The study, published in the May 15 American Journal of Epidemiology, also found the risk of death rises in proportion to the number of cigarettes smoked per day and the total number of years smoked. This culminates with a 75 percent increased risk in women who smoke two packs per day or more.

Researchers found no increased risk for former smokers.

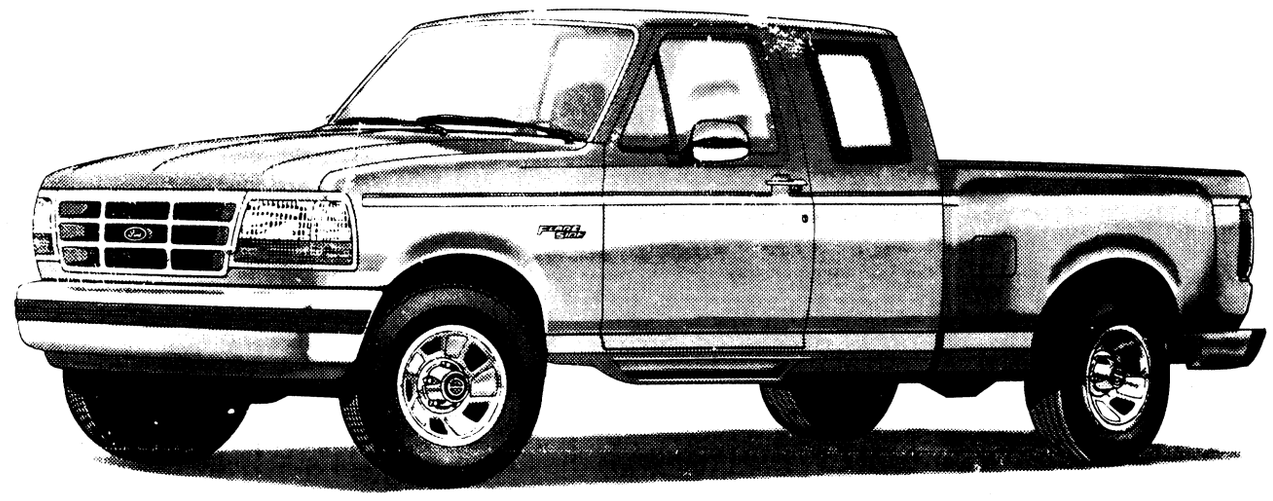
"Our results suggest that there is something different about current smokers with breast cancer in regard to their risk of dying from the disease," said Dr. Eugenia Calle, director of analytic epidemiology with the society and the paper's lead author.

The researchers selected women in the study from the 676,530 female participants of Cancer Prevention Study II, begun in 1982. After six years of follow-up, 880 of the women who had been cancer-free in 1982 died from breast cancer.

After controlling for other factors, such as diet and family history of breast cancer, the researchers found an increased risk of fatal breast cancer for smokers.

Calle offered three hypotheses to explain the increased risk. First, smokers' poorer survival may be influenced by conditions more common to smokers such as respiratory and cardiovascular impairment. Second, smoking may impair the immune system.

Finally, smokers may be less likely to get regular checkups and mammograms, thus delaying the diagnosis of cancer. Cancer is easier to treat the earlier it is discovered.



Calle said the study found that women who smoke should be considered a high risk group for whom mammography and early detection may be particularly valuable.

Military looking at supplements to improve combat performance

By Jim Garamone
American Forces Information Service

The Army asked the National Institute of Medicine in Washington to look at whether certain supplements could improve service members' performance in stressful conditions

An old Warner Brothers cartoon had a scientist electrocharging a carrot. Bugs Bunny ate it and became Superrabbit.

While service members are not going to get super powers, military scientists are looking at food supplements to give combat personnel physical and mental edges. By 1996 scientists at the U.S. Army Institute of Environmental Medicine in Natick, Mass., want to show they can enhance physical or mental performance by diet or diet supplements.

"This is just a demonstration project now," said Col. Wayne Askew, chief of nutrition research at the institute. "We are not adding supplements to the rations now. We want to demonstrate it's possible, then it becomes an operational decision to continue."

The Army asked the National Institute of Medicine in Washington to look at whether certain supplements could improve servicemembers' performance in stressful conditions. Army officials wanted a third party to verify their plans. A committee recommended a few promising supplements.

"We're not talking about doubling a soldier's performance," said Askew, who holds a doctorate in nutritional biochemistry. "We'd be happy with a 5 to 20 percent improvement."

Scientists have long known some supplements do enhance performance. Caffeine, for example, can keep service members alert. Natick researchers are looking at a caffeine-laced chocolate bar as a way of getting the substance into personnel; fewer soldiers drink coffee these days.

Marathon runners have long known of the benefits of carbohydrate loading. Military rations already contain a high percentage of carbohydrates. The committee recommended supplements to give a quick extra 100 or 200 grams of carbohydrates servicemembers can eat during stressful periods like combat operations. The committee report highlighted glucose, because this form of sugar may further improve mental functions, too.

Army scientists have already studied carbohydrate loading. They tested Special Forces soldiers and found a group taking carbohydrate supplements performed 17 percent better than a group taking a placebo.

Another substance the committee recommended was choline. Found in egg yolks, this substance in not well understood, Askew said.

"In one test, it helped marathoners shave five minutes off their times for a 20-mile run," he said. "We need to examine this and ask if a substance can help marathoners, is it something we really need for soldiers?"

Tyrosine is an amino acid that may help service members in high-stress situations.

"Soldiers in cold and high-altitude areas experience a degradation of performance," Askew said. "Soldiers getting a tyrosine supplement do not experience this performance drop."

He said tests to not improve average performance, but will stop the degradation.

Less promising is a chemical called carnitine.

"You see ads for this in magazines all the time," Askew said. "It's billed as a fat oxidizer — meaning it helps the body burn fat off. Our tests don't show this."

Askew said even if the diet supplements are approved, not all service members would receive them.

"We're not going to put this in 400,000 rations," he said. But, he noted, a small special operations force might need them.

Askew said the supplements will be in food, too, rather than as pills.

"We want our people to eat the rations," he said. "We don't want them to get the idea that all they have to do is pop a couple of pills and their nutritional needs will be met for the day."

Clinton remembers World War II vets' contributions

By Jim Garamone
American Forces Information Service

"Let us never forget, when they were young, these men saved the world."

That's how President Bill Clinton referred to the more than 7,000 veterans of World War II's Normandy invasion during ceremonies at the American Normandy Cemetery near Omaha Beach.

The president honored all veterans of the invasion during a string of ceremonies June 5 and 6—the 50th anniversary of the invasion.

Clinton called the invasion the biggest gamble of the war and described the first hours on Omaha Beach as a time when nothing went right. "And as the stunned survivors of the first wave huddled behind the seawall, it seemed the invasion might fail," he said.

One theme of Clinton's speech dealt with how the democracies faced up to combat against the Wehrmacht. "They were sure the Allied soldiers were soft, weakened by liberty and leisure, by the mingling of races and religions," he said. "They were sure their totalitarian youth had more discipline and zeal."

Those first few moments on Omaha Beach looked as if Hitler was right. "But then something happened," Clinton said. "Although many of the American troops found themselves without officers on unfamiliar ground next to soldiers they didn't know, one by one they got up. They inched forward and together, in groups of threes and fives and tens, the sons of democracy improvised and mounted their own attacks.

"At that exact moment, on these beaches, the forces of freedom turned the tide of the 20th century."

It was not done without cost and Clinton spoke about that loss. "They were the fathers we never knew, the uncles we never met, the friends who never returned, the heroes we can never repay. They gave us our world. And those simple sounds of freedom we hear today are their voices speaking to us across the years."

Clinton said their sacrifice produced a different world. The U.S. enemies of that war —Germany, Japan and Italy — are now among the nation's closest allies. The Soviet Union — our ally during the war — became our enemy and is just now reborn as a democracy.

"Now the question falls to our generation," Clinton said. How will we build upon the sacrifices of D-Day heroes?"

Like the soldiers trapped on the beach, the United States cannot stand still, he said. That would not be safe, and avoiding today's problems would be a form of appeasement.

"For just as freedom has a price, it also has a purpose, and its name is progress," Clinton said. Today our mission is to expand freedom's reach farther, to tap the full potential of each of our own citizens, to strengthen our families, our faith and our communities, to fight indifference and intolerance, to keep our nation strong and to light the lives of those dwelling in the darkness of undemocratic rule.

"Our parents did that and more. We must do nothing less. They struggled in war so that we might strive in peace."

world war II

50 years ago this week ...

• An unsuccessful assassination attempt on Adolf Hitler at Wolfs Lair, East Prussia was made by Col. Count Claus Schenck von Stauffenberg. Stauffenberg placed a bomb under a meeting room table and when it exploded four Nazi officials were dead but Hitler escaped with only a deafened right ear and burns to his legs. All of the conspirators, including Maj. Gen. Henning von Treschkow, were tracked down and killed in a massive blood purge.

Many were strangled with piano wire and their bodies suspended like animal carcasses on huge metal hooks. Hitler had the scene filmed, and he watched the movies for hours throughout the night.

• In France, U.S. troops pushed into the city of St. Lo, which was strongly defended by the 2nd SS Panzer Division. There was intense fighting before the city was captured. Gains were measured in yards during the battle for the strategic road center.

• After 13 days of consecutive attacks by U.S. planes and ships, American troops stormed ashore on Guam on either side of Port Apra. Within 24 hours of the attack the American troops had taken Mt. Alifan, more than a mile inland.

• British troops broke the German defense lines at Caen, allowing them to move into open country east of the Orne River and move to take the high ground.

• In Italy American troops captured the Italian west coast port of Livorno, while Polish forces took the east coast port of Ancona. On the Eastern front in a three-day-old offensive Russian forces advanced as much as 31 miles along a 125-mile front between Tarnopol and Kovel.

• President Franklin D. Roosevelt was renominated by the Democratic Party, receiving 1,086 votes to 89 for Senator Harry F. Byrd of Virginia and one for James Farley.

• Tech Sgt. Sue J. Roller, enlisted chief of the grade report section at the Infantry School, became the first woman at Fort Benning to attain the rank of master sergeant. She sewed on her six stripes just five weeks after she made technical sergeant and only 17 months after she entered the service.

Experts: violence breeds violence

Research suggests children who grow up with violence more likely to be abusers as adults

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

As America seemed to awaken to the reality of sexual harassment in the wake of the Clarence Thomas confirmation hearings, the current Simpson/Goldman /Simpson murder case has shocked the country into an awareness of domestic abuse.

As public and media attention across the country focuses on the issue, shelters, counselors and hot lines nationwide are experiencing an influx of calls from abused women.

The topic of domestic violence has, in recent years, received increased attention from health-care workers, counselors and law-enforcement agencies, as well. One disturbing conclusion that many counselors have come to is that those who suffer or witness abuse as children are more likely to experience it themselves as adults.

Also, violence within families, particularly violence leading to death, is on the rise. A report recently released by the Justice Department states that in murder cases included in the study, husbands and wives were victims or defendants in 41 percent of the cases. Twenty-one percent of family murder cases involved parents killing children. In nearly half of the cases, defendants had been drinking when the murder occurred.

Child abuse

Physical violence need not take place for abuse to occur, according to Becky Welch, manager of the Fort Benning Army Family Action Program.

"Physical abuse, emotional abuse, sexual abuse and neglect are all considered child abuse," she said. As an AFAP handout states:

> Child abuse is not usually a single physical attack nor a single act of deprivation or molestation. It is a pattern of behavior, and the longer the child abuse continues, the more serious it becomes and the more serious the injury to the child.

Dr. David Sorkey of Columbus' Bradley Center works extensively with troubled adolescents and their families. "The problems (of family violence) rarely come singly," he said. There is often some substance abuse or addiction involved."

Sorkey said he subscribes to an apparent consensus among professionals who treat domestic abuse cases: "violence breeds violence."

"If you live with it in your home, you see it on television and you're surrounded by it in your culture," he said, "is it surprising if you turn out to exhibit violent behavior?"

Children who are exposed to violence early in their development, Sorkey said, are more profoundly affected than those who experience it when they're more mature.

"The younger the child, the more likely he is to 'self-blame'," Sorkey said. "If a young child is abused, he's likely to feel it's because he deserved it — the bruises heal, but the psychological damage lingers. Even when the child is grown and knows, rationally, that what happened is not his fault, he still tends to suffer from a poor self-image."

Parents must be careful, Sorkey said, that their style of discipline doesn't cross over into abuse.

"Anything that can be used as normal discipline can be taken to an extreme," he said. "Spanking may be an effective punishment if it's done right; but, using belts, paddles or other things, or hitting a child in anger, is abuse." Sorkey said even restricting privileges may be abusive.

"If you discipline by not letting a child watch cartoons that day, fine," he said. "But if you take away the cartoons because the child accidentally spilled his milk at breakfast, that could be considered abusive." Severity of punishment should be matched to the seriousness of the child's transgression, Sorkey said.

The feeling of deserving punishment, Sorkey said, is part of what drives many adolescent victims of abuse into delinquent or criminal behavior.

"They develop problems in early adolescence," he said, "because that's when their freedom of action broadens, so there's more opportunity for trouble. They may get into fights, do poorly in school or use drugs."

Often, Sorkey said, a child who has been abused and then removed to another environment will subconsciously seek to recreate the former climate of abuse.

"This can destroy a foster family," he said. "The child is not intentionally trying to cause trouble, but seeks to recreate what is comfortable and familiar." In essence, Sorkey said, the violence the child experienced may spread, as if by contagion, to a foster family that was formerly nonviolent.

The same contagion affects those formerly abused children who grow up to be abusers themselves. Equally disturbing, Sorkey said, is that some former victims of abuse may unconsciously invite it from others.

"That poor self-image stays with them," he said. "Even adult victims of abuse may somehow feel they 'deserve it.' "

David Ebron, a social worker also affiliated with the Bradley Center, said he believes poor self-image combines with unrealistic expectations in many violent episodes.

"People will see all those ideal families on TV," he said, "and not realize that the Cosbys and the Bradys are not the norm. They may feel that they don't measure up, that whatever they do, they'll never be as good (at parenting or as a spouse) as they should. So, out of frustration, they give up on trying to improve the situation."

Ebron and Sorkey agree that violence is embedded in our culture, from our history to our entertainment.

"Abuse is an attitude, like racism," Ebron said. The idea that parents have the right to discipline their children however they see fit, like the idea that men can do the same with their wives, will take a great deal of time to change, he said.

Spouse abuse

As difficult to accept as child abuse, but perhaps more difficult to intervene in, is the problem of spouse abuse. In this situation, two adults are involved who have a complicated, often co-dependent relationship, so that even while violence occurs, the partners will often unite to protect each other from outside "interference."

As one Columbus police officer said, even in cases where a woman (most often the victim in abuse) calls the police, she doesn't want her abuser to be arrested. "Our emphasis, if the incident is minor, is to try to get the two talking," he said. Columbus police officers receive sensitivity training to help them deal with situations like domestic violence incidents, he said.

Georgia, unlike many states, has no mandatory arrest for domestic violence. And because many women are in danger of their lives in their own homes, but cannot force their abusers to leave without filing charges — and only temporarily then — some women end up seeking refuge in shelters for battered women.

Robin McCormick, director of the Columbus shelter, said one of the services her organization offers is a legal advocate on staff who can advise women of their rights.

"Women in military families are often better off than those in the civilian community," she said. "She can have her husband barred from their quarters, and she can get whatever of her belongings she needs without fear of him being there."

Fear, she said, is the dominant characteristic of women who come to the shelter.

"They are relieved to be away from the abuse," she said, "but fearful of the future."

Although the shelter, with its location kept confidential, provides a temporary haven for hundreds of women and their children each year, McCormick said the most important service the Columbus Alliance for Battered Women supplies is the 24-hour hot line, manned in 12-hour shifts by a group of volunteers.

"Often, women just need someone to listen," she said, "but we can also help them find emergency medical help if they need it, and we get callers who were referred to us by hospitals or the police. The hot line is the first line of contact for any woman wanting our help."

What may make providing that help frustrating is that many women who seek shelter often end up returning to their abusive mates.

"Unfortunately, the time most women come to us is immediately following a violent outburst," McCormick said. "That is also the "honeymoon phase" in the cycle of violence, that time when men are most apologetic and loving. She just can't believe he doesn't mean it when he says he'll never do it again. Most women have to go through the cycle — tension, followed by violence, followed by remorse — several times before they realize it is a cycle."

Deborah Howell, supervisor of the Family Advocacy section of Social Work Services, administers programs, from individual and couples counseling to group sessions for couples and for men, that aim to break the cycle of violence.

"We talk about violence as a learned behavior," she said, "and try to teach other ways of dealing with conflict."

Family violence in the military often goes along with other problems, she said. "Poor duty performance, indebtedness and problems with the (military police) are all common with families who are referred to us by the soldier's chain of command."

Howell pointed out that spouse abuse, like child abuse, comes in many forms: from emotional cruelty, in which one partner (usually the wife) is kept in emotional and financial dependence by her husband, to mutual abuse, in which both partners use violence in dealing with conflict.

Violence – the solutions

Sorkey said family therapy is the most effective way of combating family violence that involves children.

"The parents have to be committed to helping," he said. "It doesn't matter if the parents are divorced and can't stand each other — they have to work together to repair the damage."

The purpose of counseling, Sorkey said, is to educate families about the causes of violence, and to show them alternatives.

Without intervention, without therapy, he said, violence is not likely to stop.

Sorkey counsels parents to decide, before an incident occurs, what sort of punishment is appropriate.

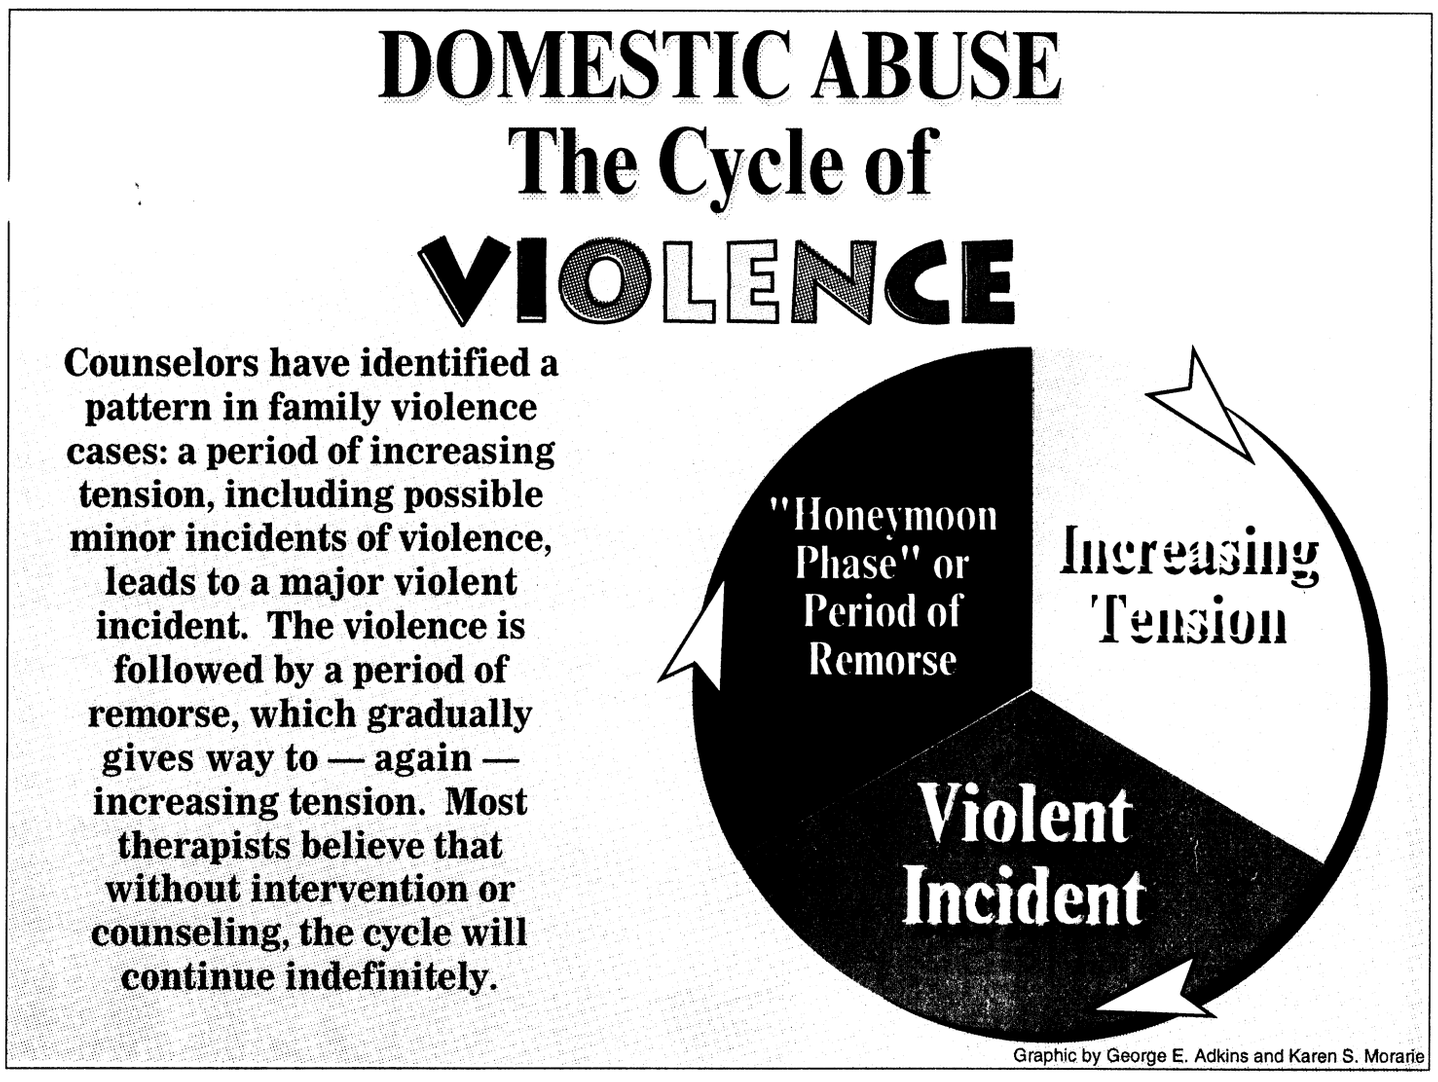
"It may take a few hours, but it's worth it," he said. "Parents should sit down with a piece of paper and write down everything they can think of that their child could possible do to get in trouble. Then they should assign an appropriate punishment. Type up the list, and post it on the refrigerator. That way there are no surprises, and you're not trying to come up with a punishment in the heat of anger."

Welch said the Army is ahead of the civilian community in recognizing and treating family violence, including child abuse.

"The Army requires everyone on post to report if they suspect child abuse is occurring," she said. "Each case is thoroughly investigated, and we don't do anything without evidence; but, as long as I've been here, there's never been a family needing assistance that we haven't been able to help or refer to help."

The point of the AFAP program, Welch said, is to battle family violence through education, prevention and treatment.

Welch said AFAP training covers conflict management, parenting, stress management and other topics relating to family violence.



AFAP-funded programs include:

- Parenting classes (Chaplains' Family Life Center)
- First Steps Program (for new parents, Martin Army Community Hospital)
- Respite Care (Social Work Services and Tot Town)
- Nurturing program (Georgia Extension Service)
- Shelter (Columbus Alliance for Battered Women, Russell County Shelter for Battered Women)

An end in sight?

For spouse and child abuse to end, McCormick said, "Society would have to decide that it is totally unacceptable; that we're just not going to put up with it. People would have to be educated about how to handle their anger — only then will we see violence begin to decline.

"Men must accept responsibility for their own violence," she said. "They can't blame the women involved, or outside pressures or their upbringing. They must take responsibility for their own actions."

Fort Benning Commissary hosts 'Diaper Derby'

Jerrie Macintire/Special to The Bayonet

Jacob Lamb (left), 10 months old, crosses lanes to visit with Cardin Suratt, 10 months old, before zipping ahead to win his heat at the Diaper Derby.

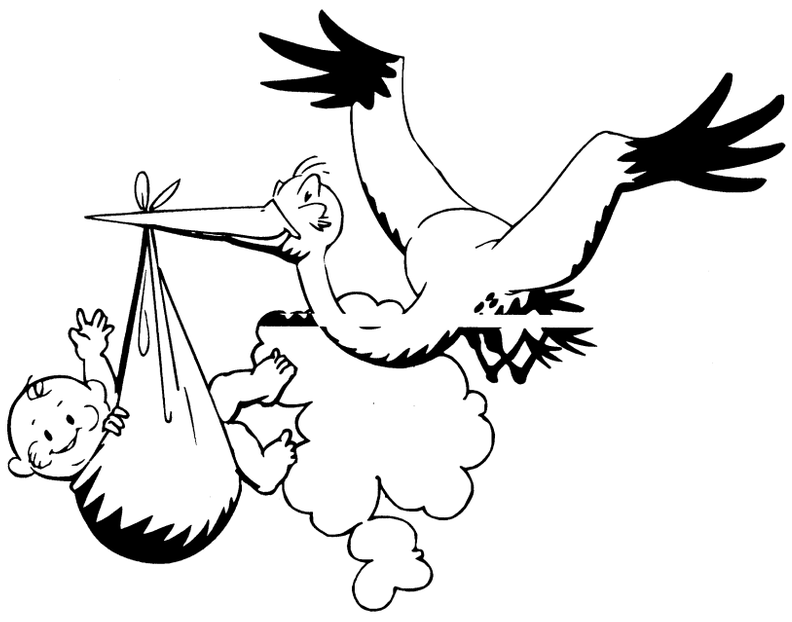
Forget the Kentucky Derby, World Cup soccer or the Super Bowl, the forerunner of spectator sports drew cooing patrons to the Commissary June 30 to observe which dimpled, drooling, delightful baby would crawl the fastest.

A total of 34 Diaper Derby participants crept their way to fame and fortune ... or at least to free prizes.

"This is better than football," declared one Commissary shopper, who stood with a shopping cart of softening ice cream and frozen pizza to observe one spunky crawler win several heats and negotiate the 12-foot blue padded raceway seconds ahead of the field.

Supportive parents dangled car keys, toys, bottles and other favorites at the finish line, encouraging their crawlers to focus on the race and not the other interesting competitors in adjacent lanes. Despite their best efforts, some crawlers ignored their coaches and crossed lane markers just to get acquainted with other pint-sized participants.

Nine-month-old Christopher Clemente zipped past other contestants in a series of heats to win the first Fort Benning Diaper Derby and capture the grand prize of a case of diapers. Paul Hodgson, 9 months old, held his ground against stiff competition to secure the second place prize of two packages of diapers.



In addition to the grand prize of diapers, other prizes included money saving coupons, bibs, T-shirts and video tapes.

Sponsored by Kimberly-Clark, the Diaper Derby was open to all crawlers. Those ambitious youngsters who attempted to walk were disqualified, said company spokeswoman Luann Carroll.

The Diaper Derby "is a fun competition for the entire family," and also enables interested parents to talk with company agents about new baby products, said Carroll. She was joined by representatives Nora Taft, Beal Williams and Harrell Ivey.

The company coordinated the event through the Commissary.

volunteers needed

Volunteer Resource Center

The Fort Benning Volunteer Resource Center promotes volunteerism by recruiting potential volunteers, by retaining active volunteers and by recognizing the contribution of volunteers to the quality of life of soldiers and families.

There are many volunteer opportunities available through the center as follow:

• Volunteers are needed at the Thrift Shop on Tuesdays and Thursdays between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. Individuals will gain retail experience while helping others. Free child care is provided for up to two children.

• Santa's Castle needs volunteers on Wednesdays from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. to help clean and refurbish toys. A volunteer is particularly needed to sew baby doll and Barbie clothes. Child care costs are provided.

• Sayers Memorial Library needs volunteers to assist with shelving books, data entry and story time for children. Also, volunteers with experience in activity program planning, dramatic reading and counseling are encouraged to participate in the Multiple Reading Program this summer. Child-care costs will be provided.

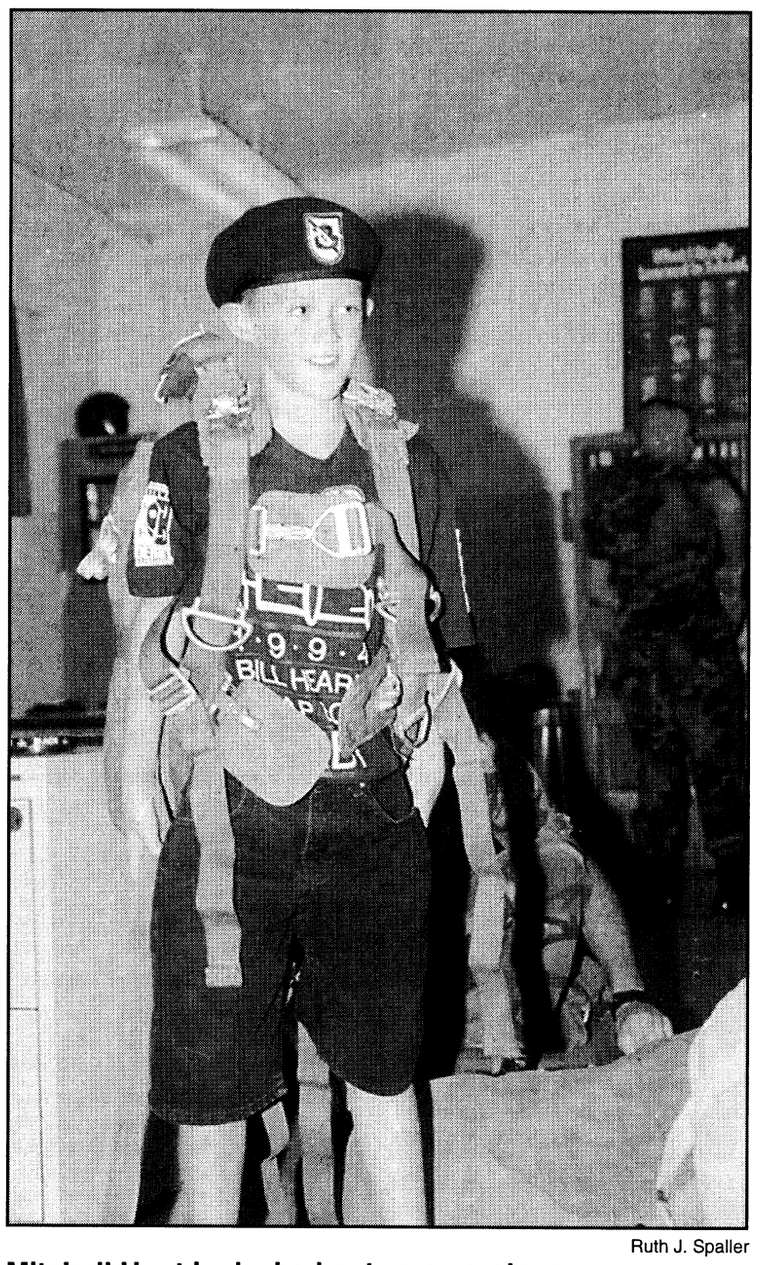
Volunteers are needed in each housing area to assist the community mayor. Persons interested can contact a community life center.

• The Public Affairs Office needs an editorial assistant to assist the print section in publishing The Bayonet.

This product supports Army families through disseminating community news and command information to all Fort Benning families in The Bayonet newspaper is delivered free to all on-post housing units and by subscription to those living off post.

Interested persons must have typing ability, and knowledge of computer word processing systems is preferred but not required. Good communication skills and command of the English language are required. Education or experience in print journalism is preferred but not required. Also, the individual must be familiar with the Army and Fort Benning.

For information, call 545-2201.



• The Volunteer Resource Center is located in Building 359, Family Unit Network Center, and it is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p .m. Persons interested in volunteering can visit or call Olga MacLean, installation volunteer coordinator, at 545-5602.

Other volunteer announcements are as follows:

• The Volunteer Resource Center is located in Building 359, Family Unit Network Center, and it is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p .m. Persons interested in volunteering can visit or call Olga MacLean, installation volunteer coordinator, at 545-5602.

1/507th to sponsor car in Soap Box Derby

Driver visits battalion and becomes honorary airborne soldier, gets beret

Ruth J. Spaller

Mitchell Hunt is decked out as a paratrooper.

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

The 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment, hosted a unique VIP Monday.

Mitchell Hunt, 9, spent the day as the guest of the battalion because he will be driving the car the 507th is sponsoring in the Columbus Soap Box Derby Saturday.

A $500 sponsorship fee buys a car and race entry for the next five years, but members of the battalion decided to take sponsorship one step further and host their driver for a day.

"Since he's representing us, we wanted to make him feel like part of our unit," said Headquarters Company 1st Sgt. Randall J. Branham.

To do that, Battalion Commander Lt. Col. Michael N. Hawrylak began the day by making Hunt an honorary airborne soldier.

Hawrylak pinned a set of wings on Hunt's T-shirt, presented him with a battalion coin and set a maroon beret on his head.

"We can't let a leg drive an airborne car," Hawrylak joked.

After observing an "Airborne in Action" demonstration, Hunt, accompanied by his mother, Toni, his younger sister, Christine, and his younger brother, Griffin, visited different branches of airborne training.

They watched riggers pack parachutes and met with soldiers in the Jumpmaster and Pathfinder Branches. They watched Airborne students prepare for a jump at McCarthy Hall on Lawson Army Airfield, then went out to Fryar Drop Zone to see them land.

By the end of the day, Hunt had Rigger Wings, Jumpmaster Wings and a Pathfinder Torch pinned alongside the Airborne Wings on his T-shirt.

He said parachuting looked "real fun and neat," but it was his little brother who decided to be an airborne soldier when he grows up.

As for Saturday, Hunt said he's been getting ready by sitting in the car and practicing turning the wheel.

Soldiers from the 507th will be turning out with their families to cheer him on, but, his mother said, he's going to have to wear a helmet and not the beret.

The soap box derby is scheduled for 10 a.m., Saturday on the access road at exit of Schomburg and Blackmon Road.

VA offers program to help homeless

Department of Veterans Affairs

The Department of Veterans Affairs is announcing that an interim rule and the proposed application for its new grant program for public and nonprofit private groups providing services to homeless veterans have been published in the Federal Register.

The program assists these groups in establishing new programs to furnish supportive services and housing for homeless veterans through grants of up to 65 percent of the cost of acquiring, renovating or altering facilities, or to purchase vans.

VA Secretary Jesse Brown said, "Helping homeless veterans is a top priority of mine. While we at VA have a responsibility to assist homeless veterans, we simply cannot do the job alone. These grants will mean that more homeless veterans will get the help they need, and we are doing everything we can to get these funds distributed before any homeless veterans have to face another winter."

The grant program is part of the VA Homeless Providers Grant and Per Diem Program authorized by law in 1992. The legislation also authorizes VA to provide per diem payments, or in-kind assistance, to eligible groups or organizations that established supportive housing or service programs for homeless veterans after Nov. 10, 1992. Some $5.5 million is available for the grant and per diem program this fiscal year.

Publishing the proposed application gives homeless service providers advance notice of the types of information they will need to include in their application packages. The proposal is subject to public comment and approval by the Office of Management and Budget.

The interim rule sets forth the regulations under which both the grant and per diem program will operate.

VA also will be publishing in the Federal Register a Notice of Fund Availability. At that time, eligible public and nonprofit organizations will have 30 days in which to apply for grant funding. VA will announce publication of this notice in an effort to reach as many interested groups as possible.

VA sought input from more than 250 public and nonprofit organizations in developing criteria and requirements for the Homeless Providers Grant and Per Diem Program.

VA is the only federal agency that provides substantial hands-on assistance directly to homeless persons. In addition to the grant and per diem program, VA is directing more than $60 million to its specialized homeless assistance programs this year, including establishing new comprehensive homeless centers, and other health care and rehabilitation programs for homeless veterans.

Upon publication of the rule and Notice of Fund Availability, VA will be mailing some 2,000 letters to veterans service organizations, other nonprofit organizations, state and local governments, congressional offices and those who attended February's National Summit on Homelessness among Veterans.

Those interested in obtaining more information about the grant program also may call (202) 273-5760.

AAFES announces safety-seat recall

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Army and Air Force Exchange Service officials have announced a National Highway Traffic Safety Administration recall of a child safety seat sold at AAFES outlets.

The "Renolux GT7000 Remote-Control Car Seat" failed to meet federal safety standards for flammability, officials said.

However, no injuries were reported, and the NHTSA has urged continued use of the seat until a replacement can be obtained.

AAFES customers in the continental United States who purchased the seat should call (800) 476-5273 to arrange for a free replacement.

Overseas customers can receive a new seat by mailing the seat motor's "cut-off cord," with return address, to: RENOLUX; 1 Freedom Court; Greer, S.C. 29650.

The Renolux model No. 550-21, available in the AAFES Spring/Summer 1994 Mail Order Catalog, is not involved in the recall, officials said.

Other safety seats recalled, but not stocked in AAFES outlets are the "Cosco Dream Ride Seat," and Renolux models GT2000, GT4000, GT5000 and GT5500, manufactured from 1989 to 1993.

Legal ed applications available

Staff Judge Advocate's Office

The Army's Funded Legal Education Program is now accepting applications.

Under this program, up to 10 Army officers may be selected to attend law school at government expense while on active duty. Participation is contingent on availability of funds.

This program is open only to active duty commissioned officers who have at least two but not more than six years of active duty at the time legal training commences. Further eligibility requirements and the application procedures are set forth in Army Regulation 27-1.

Eligible officers interested in applying should immediately register for the fall offering of the Law School Admission Test.

The original application must be sent through the applicant's chain of command and be received by the officer's branch manager at Personnel Command before Nov. 1. A copy must be furnished to Personnel Plans and Training, The Judge Advocate General, 2200 Army Pentagon, Washington, D.C. 20310-2200 before Nov. 1.

Interested officers can contact the Staff Judge Advocate's Office for further information.

God is concerned about our afflictions, difficulties

By Anibal Cruz-Baez
School of the Americas

reflections

Not too long ago, I helped a soldier resolve some serious problems. His many difficulties left him feeling hopeless and cornered.

However, God provided words of wisdom, and he took the first step and accepted the Lord Jesus Christ as his lord and savior.

It took awhile before the soldier began to see solutions to his problems.

Being a Christian does not mean the absence of problems. Instead, it means knowing that God almighty is ever present in the heart of the grieving believer.

Christian history documents that more problems and more limitations occur after the confession of faith than before. Christians learn to exalt and worship the Lord Jesus Christ in the midst of their grief because they are not exempt from suffering.

Sometimes it is hard to understand suffering. Suffering and grieving are puzzles not easily resolved. It is hard for a righteous person to understand suffering and grief.

Questions about losing a loved one, why you are unemployed, why you weren't promoted or why you are selected for early release from the military are left unanswered.

It is important to know that there are many things concerning suffering beyond comprehension. It is almost impossible to find an answer for our suffering. Many times the presence of God through his word, church and servants may be the only answer.

As Christians, grief and suffering must cause us to look deeply into our soul and minds. We must discover the faith to lay hold of the grace of God. This brings us into a deeper and intimate knowledge of God and a stronger relation with him.

Being a Christian does not mean the absence of problems. Instead, it means knowing that God almighty is ever present in the heart of the grieving believer

In the book of Deuteronomy (Chapter 20), of the Hebrew Scriptures (Old Testament), the priest spoke to the soldiers prior to their deployment for war. Grief and problems existed among the soldiers and their family members because of what war does to humankind.

God, through the priest, brought comfort and assurance to them. God became present in their lives; and although it was uncertain if they would survive the battle, the assurance of God's presence in their lives was enough.

In the Greek Scriptures (New Testament), The Book of Acts (Chapter 15 and 27) provides two accounts of Paul caring for the needs of soldiers.

In the first account (16:16-34), Paul is in prison accused of following and proclaiming Christ. After a natural disaster, the jail doors opened, and though everyone could have escaped, no one did. The military police or jailer, who had fallen asleep, woke up and noticed what happened. Full of fear, thinking that everyone had escaped, he wanted to commit suicide. Paul, in the role of a chaplain, spoke godly words and convinced him not to kill himself. This military police officer and his family experienced Christ that night. Christ became a blessing to this soldier and his family.

In the second account, Acts 27:22, Paul, taken captive on a ship to Rome for being a Christian, preaches to members of the military crew and convinces them that despite the storm and wreckage, nothing would happen to them; they would be safe. Again, the presence of God overcame apprehension and fright.

In the gospel according to Luke (Chapter 23), Christ himself, on the cross, acted as a chaplain, an advocate for the soldiers. He cries to God the father minutes before dying and asks him to forgive the soldiers for what they had done. Again, God cares and advocates for the spiritual welfare of the military.

There are many members of our military work force and family members who are experiencing grief and other problems. Knowing God and experiencing his blessings may not necessarily convert our lives into a garden of roses. Without a doubt, however it will bring hope and faith.

Chaplains and chaplain assistants, together as a unit ministry team, are present in the military to bring God and his people together.

Despite any problem or difficult situation, anyone can approach a chaplain or chaplain assistant. This will be the beginning of a solution. Like the soldier I helped who now lives a better life with Christ, you also can receive help and find the answer for a better life.

chapel notes

Muslim community — Koranic reading classes are every Monday at the Religious Education Center at 7 p.m. in Building 2522. Classes can help provide a better understanding of the Koran.

For more information, contact Imam Yahya Ansar Islam at 689-6922.

Youth rally — Fort Benning youths will participate in a Youth Rally at Camp Joy Aug. 12 to 14.

This rally is open to the first 130 youths in grades six to 12 to register at any chapel on Fort Benning.

"You are the light of the world," is the theme for the rally.

Youth rally leaders said that their goal is to energize youths to be a positive force in their home, school, community and church.m and through fun and fellowship they pray to accomplish this goal.

Leaders have contracted experts in several fields to run workshops during the rally.

Each workshop will be offered at least three times to provide individual attention.

There will be a guest appearance by a member of the RedStixx. Several local musical groups are scheduled. There is a nonrefundable deposit of $10 for the first member in each family and $5 for each additional member. The rally is sponsored by the Fort Benning Unit Ministry Team.

For additional information, contact Master Sgt. Muriel Fish at 545-4966.

Protestant Women of the Chapel — The Protestant Women of the Chapel will meet for its summer tape series each Thursday through Aug. 11. The series begins with a six-part video by Becky Pippert call "Hope Has Its Reasons". This will be followed by a two-part tape called "Learn to Discern" by Robert DeMass.

PWOC meets each Thursday at 9:30 in Building 2521, located off Indianhead Road and Thorson Street. Child care is provided in the adjacent building.

For more information, call Cindy Russell at 561-3348.

Jewish services — Shabbat services at the Regimental Chapel have been canceled until further notice. Buses will depart from the Regimental Chapel at 7:30 p.m. Fridays for anyone who needs a ride to the Synagogue in Columbus.

Jewish community — Maj. Karl Zeff is now the point of contact for all Jewish activities on Fort Benning. He can be reached at 545-5964.

Any questions regarding this change can be directed to the staff chaplains' office at 545-2288.

Knights of Columbus — The Knights of Columbus is a Catholic, family-service, fraternal organization open to all practicing Catholic males 18 years and older. Our Lady of Lourdes Council 11145 is seeking new members.

For more information, call 687-8981, evenings.

Choir rehearsal — The Main Post Catholic Chapel Choir practices each Wednesday at 6:15 p.m. Everyone is encouraged to join. For more information, call 545-3461.

For more information, call 545-3481.

Spanish Protestant service — Sightseeing Chapel is now hosting a general Protestant service entirely in Spanish Sundays at 9 a.m. For information, call Chaplain (Capt.) Anibal Cruz-Baez at 545-1832.

Kelley Hill Bible study — "High Noon Bible Study" is every Wednesday at the Kelley Hill Chapel annex at 11:30 a.m. A snack lunch will be provided. For more information, call 544-1692.

English classes— English classes for foreign-born spouses are being offered at the Religious Education Center. Classes are Tuesdays at 9:30 in Building 2522.

Classes are free and child care is provided. For more information, call 545-4715.

Christian women to honor military

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet©

The Columbus area Christian Woman's Club will honor military wives at the regular monthly meeting July 28 from 10 a.m. to noon at the Harmony Club, 4800 Macon Road, Columbus.

As part of the program, Helen McIntosh of Dalton will present the keynote address, "Worthy of the Purple Heart." Also soloist Misti Bell is scheduled to perform "Proud to be an American," and James Greene of Greene's Tae Kwon Do Plus will perform a "Combat Ready" karate demonstration.

"We want to honor the military wives at Fort Benning, but all women are welcome to attend," said Joyce Stryker, chairwoman of the CWC and a former Army wife.

The July brunch will have free child care, but reservations are essential. Off-premises child care will be offered at St. Matthew Lutheran Church at 4026 Macon Road.

The cost of the brunch is $8.50, and it includes child care and a tip. For reservations or more information call 563-7858 or 596-8268.

As one of more than 2,000 Christian Woman's Clubs around the world, the Columbus group offers regular nondenominational meetings with no club dues or membership.

The monthly meetings feature inspirational speakers and special programs, and the format is the same for all Christian Woman's Clubs.

Dear John

Here's why you don't want a repair quote over the phone. A man brought his car in last Friday. He'd already had two phone quotes for fixing his transmission. One was for $500, the other for $425.

I put his car on the rack, saw that a fitting was loose at the top of the line, and tightened it. That's all he needed. Come see me.

Sincerely,
Jimmy at Generic

Filmmaker Moore creates 'TV Nation'

By Jay Bobbin,
Tribune Media Services

An offbeat documentary-maker, who made his name by chasing after the then-chairman of General Motors, gets a weekly hour of network TV.

SPOTLIGHT

What: "TV Nation"
When: Tuesday on NBC

Michael Moore

Consider the possibilities.

The Oscar-nominated 1989 movie "Roger & Me" earned director Michael Moore wide acclaim and plentiful attention, and though his career has been somewhat quieter since, it's firmly positioned to rev up again.

On Tuesday, NBC premieres his decidedly irreverent new venture "TV Nation," a summer series in which Moore and several correspondents — all of whom, including MTV "veejay" Karen Duffy and ex-"Late Night With David Letterman" writer Merrill Markoe, share his somewhat skewed view of the world we live in — literally shoot from the hip in tackling subjects very unlikely to surface on any other magazine show.

Among the examples: the status of the real-estate market in the chemically polluted Love Canal area of upstate New York, the negotiation of an international peace treaty during several pizza parties, and the hunt for a nuclear missile that the former Soviet Union allegedly aimed at Flint, Mich., which happens to be Moore's hometown.

"Roger & Me" detailed Moore's pursuit of GM chieftain Roger Smith after the closing of the auto company's factory in Flint, where the sudden loss of 40,000 jobs dealt an almost incalculable blow to that city's economy. Moore then made a 1992 short-subject sequel to that film for PBS (titled "Pets or Meat: The Return to Flint"), but he didn't have any specific plans to work in television again until NBC approached him.

He recalls, "They asked me if I was given an hour of TV, what would I do with it? What I told them was essentially the idea that became 'TV Nation,' and they said, 'OK. Here's the money. Go do it.' In hiring me, they knew what they were getting, so there are no secret."

Even with that, Moore claims that simple geography has kept him from having to worry about network executives looking over his shoulder. "They're in L.A. and we're in New York," he explains, "so we've been completely left alone."

Moore generally has worked with a small and familiar crew, so overseeing the work of other "TV Nation" reporters while also doing his own pieces has been a new experience.

"I think this is a chance for everybody who's always wanted to do this unfettered sort of thing," he reasons, "something that has substance and a sense of humor at the same time, and also is accessible to a mass audience. I don't know of any other show like this that's ever been on network TV, but I feel fairly confident that people will watch it. I don't know if the network agrees with it politically, but it works, and they believe it's going to receive a lot of attention."

Post chief of staff retires, will remain in Columbus

By Greg Smith
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning Chief of Staff Col. Burnet R. Quick retired in a ceremony July 8 at Marshall Auditorium in Infantry Hall after spending almost 29 years in the Army. He will now begin a new job with the Uptown Columbus association.

Watch "Fort Benning Today" for highlights.

Four West Point cadets arrived at Fort Benning July 5 to assist drill sergeants from Company D, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, and to learn from noncommissioned officers how to teach, train and lead soldiers.

"Fort Benning Today" will feature their training.

USAIC-TV Schedule

Fort Benning Today: 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 1:30 to 2 p.m.
Specials: 2 to 4:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 4:30 p.m. to 8:30 a.m.

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel announces post events and post movie listings, and it offers free classified advertisements on "Fort Benning Update," a community information service.

Anyone who lives on post and subscribes to Fort Benning Cable can watch USAIC-TV on Channel 3, 24 hours a day.

Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:26, 7:56, 8:26 and 8:56 on WLTZ-TV 38.

Dealers to feature many items at

Collectors Show

Quality Collectors Shows Inc.

Dealers from all over the South will offer coins, currency, numismatic supplies, stamps, covers, philatelic supplies, sports cards, sports memorabilia, comics and other collectibles at a collectors show at Columbus Square Mall today, Saturday and Sunday.

Hours for the show are regular mall hours, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Friday and Saturday and 1 to 6 p.m., Sunday.

Admission to the show is free and free parking is available.

Many dealers will offer free verbal appraisals of collectibles.

Collectors of all levels of expertise, as well as interested noncollectors, are invited to come to buy, sell, trade or just browse among the thousands of items on display.

"It is great to be returning to Columbus and to see our many friends from central and south Georgia and Alabama who will be attending the show," said Richard Martin, show chairman for Quality Collectors Shows.

Columbus Square Mall is located at 3050 Macon Road in Columbus.

For more information, call the mall office at 561-6305.

COLUMBUS MUSEUM CLASSES FOR CHILDREN — The Columbus Museum is offering the following classes for children:

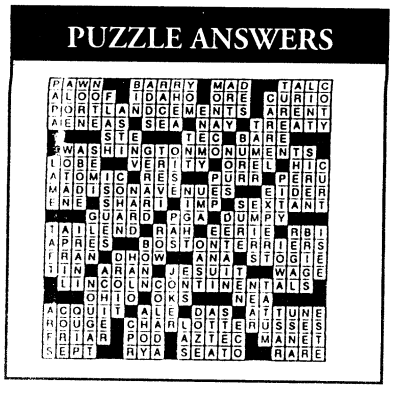
Puppet Theater — Today from 2 to 4 p.m. Teacher Robin Fuller will work with young artists ages 6 through 8 to create a variety of puppets, build and decorate a stage and present a puppet show for parents on the last day. Cost is $30 for museum members, $35 for nonmembers.

Around the World — July 25 through 29 from 9 a.m. to noon. Children ages 6 through 8 can explore different cultures from countries around the world through class projects involving drawing, painting, printmaking and sculpture. All supplies are included. Cost is $35 for museum members, $40 for nonmembers.

Art & Nature II — Today, 9 a.m. to noon. Teachers Maggie Whitley and Angelia Britton will help 9 to 12 year olds explore the natural wonders of their own backyards through a variety of art and nature projects. Cost is $35 for museum members, $40 for nonmembers.

The Junkman's Garden — Monday through July 22 from 9 a.m. to noon. Teacher Robin Fuller will take 9- to 12-year-olds on a visit to the museum's art studio "junkyard," where they can collect unusual objects to create sculpture and other fun works of art. Cost is $35 for museum members, $40 for nonmembers.

Drawing — July 25 through 29 from 3 to 5 p.m. Teacher Sally Bradley offers teens the opportunity to practice the principles of drawing from life and from imagination. Students must supply their own 14 by 17 inch sketch book and drawing pencils. Cost is $30 for museum members, $35 for nonmembers.



Registration for all classes is on a first-come, first-served basis. The museum reserves the right to cancel courses which do not meet minimum registration. In such cases, advance payments will be refunded. For more information, call Elinor Winn at 649-0713.

WEDNESDAYS AT THE COLUMBUS MUSEUM — The Columbus Museum will offer a different event for children and their parents each Wednesday from 11 a.m. until noon in the museum's Patrick Theater.

The programs are recommended for children ages 4 and up and admission is free. Seating is limited and available on a first-come, first-served basis. For more information, call Elinor Winn at 649-0713.

Wednesday — Learn to dance with instructor Beth Griffin from the Progressive Dance Theater of Columbus, who will involve the audience in a participatory exploration of dance.

Post employees get RIF notices

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Post employees affected by the fiscal 1995 budget reduction guidance received letters July 15 informing them of changes to job status.

The reduction affected 52 employees, most of whom will be reassigned and changed to lower grade positions effective Oct 2. A small number of those employees are expected to be separated Oct. 1.

The impact of this reduction was softened as a result of 52 employees who elected to retire in June and received the Voluntary Separation Incentive bonus.

The Directorate of Civilian Personnel used reduction in force procedures to determine which employees were affected in the resultant work force turbulence.

All employees involved in this action will be individually counselled regarding their employment status, entitlement to other jobs, pay retention or adjustment, retirement eligibility and placement assistance at other federal agencies as well as private industry.

Officials said the post is dedicated to protecting the jobs of individuals and is striving to minimize the impact of this reduction on the work force.

According to post officials, all employees involved in this action should be aware that specific job offers or notices of separation identified in their letters received July 15 are subject to change.

New guest house to open today on post

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning's new guest house will officially open today with a ribbon-cutting ceremony at 10:45 a.m.

The Gavin Guest House, Building 96, is located on Ingersoll Street behind the Defense Printing Service and near the Fort Benning Officers' Club.

Ground was broken for the $2.9 million, 60-unit, two-story guest house in July 1993. The 31,900 square feet of floor space includes 29 guest suites, three suites for people with disabilities and 28 single rooms. Nonappropriated funds paid for the construction.

The guest house is being named for the late World War II Lt. Gen. James M. Gavin.

Fort Benning's Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White and Gavin's widow, Jean Gavin, will cut the ribbon.

Gavin graduated from the Infantry School in 1933, completed parachute training in 1941 and was attached to the Provisional Parachute Group here.

During World War II, Gavin served with the 82nd Airborne Division. He was the youngest division commander in the war. He died in February 1990.

Navy, Coast Guard ban gay bias

American Forces Information Service

Both the Navy and the Coast Guard have issued statements saying they will not discriminate against gay and lesbian civilian employees.

Navy Secretary John Dalton issued a May 23 statement adding sexual orientation to the department's nondiscrimination policy.

The policy already included race, color, gender, religion, national origin, age and disability. The Coast Guard issued a similar statement April 26. Both Coast Guard and Navy officials say the policies only clarify longstanding policy.

All federal agencies are revising their nondiscrimination policies to include homosexuals.

The policy affects only civilian Navy and Coast Guard employees. Military members are still bound by the "don't ask, don't tell" policy.

RTB changes commanders

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

In a ceremony Wednesday on Malvesti Field in Harmony Church, the commander of Ranger Training Brigade relinquished command to the incoming commander in front of cadre, family and friends.

Col. Michael V. Church, the outgoing commander of RTB, is leaving Fort Benning to assume duties as chief of staff at Fort Polk, La.

The new commander of RTB is Col. Galen B. Jackman, the former director of Combined Arms and Tactics at the Infantry School.

"Training soldiers to be rangers takes a special class of people. Col. Church was certainly no exception to that group," said Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, Fort Benning's commanding general.

Church has been the RTB commander since Sept. 18, 1992. Before that, he has been with the 82nd Airborne Division; 193rd Infantry Brigade, the Jungle Operations Training Center in Panama; Defense Attache's Office, Bonn, Germany; Defense Intelligence Agency, Washington D.C.; 7th Infantry (Light); 25th Infantry Division (Light) and the Joint Readiness Training Center.

Church holds a master's degree in national security affairs from the U. S. Naval Post-Graduate School. He is also a graduate of the Defense Language Institute. He has attended the Armed Forces Staff College and the United States Army War College.

Church is authorized to wear the Expert Infantryman Badge, the Master Parachutist Badge, the Air Assault Badge and the Joint Chiefs of Staff Identification Badge.

BOSS survey: Single soldiers across post voice opinions about living conditions

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

Single soldiers from across post voiced their opinions about improvements to living conditions in their communities through a survey conducted by each community command sergeant major and the Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers program.

There were nine categories in the survey: social, professional development, economic, political, safety and security, recreation, health and fitness and spiritual.

The survey gave soldiers in the five living communities, North Main Post, South Main Post, Sand Hill, Kelley Hill and Harmony Church, a chance to express satisfaction or dissatisfaction with the services and facilities they use. The soldiers were also given the opportunity to suggest ideas.

Here are some of the issues attracting the most attention on the survey. They are broken down by living community.

• North Main Post — Soldiers cited the need for improvement in the clubs on post, and more concert and "carnival-type" events. Automated teller machines in the living quarters were requested. Better lighting in the parking lots and healthier foods in the dining facilities were additional items on the survey.

• South Main Post — Less expensive cab fares and free cabs for intoxicated individuals were some of the subjects brought up in the survey. ATMs were again brought up, and the subject of how long it takes to get a work order accomplished was questioned. South Main Post soldiers also requested the addition of more private and pay phones.

• Harmony Church — A pool that can be used by soldiers and is open daily was the most-asked-for improvement. Peep holes in doors, lights in battalion and parking areas, and weather shelters over the outside pay phones were high on the list of items needed at Harmony Church.

• Sand Hill — These soldiers asked for more concert-type events. More college courses offered and more lighting in different areas was a concern. More ATMs in Sand Hill, the addition of a steam room and a revision of the weight room at the Santiago Gym were high on the list of needs.

Soldiers also requested more religious events.

• Kelley Hill — An appeal for a class on check-cashing and credit ratings was top priority on the survey from Kelley Hill.

More pool tables and big-screen televisions in the day rooms was also on the survey.

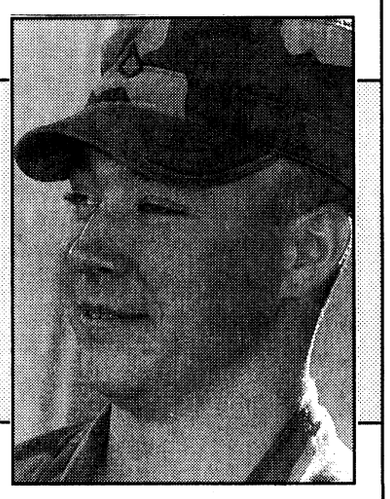
Soldiers asked for more paved parking lots and a sauna at the Kelley Hill Fitness Center.

Now that the surveys are complete, the Single Soldier Living Community boards for each community will evaluate and prioritize the needs, according to Sgt. 1st Class Barbara Ray, survey coordinator.

Each project will be assigned a manager and a plan to pay for it will be developed. Needs that can be fixed quickly will be addressed first and those requiring money and long-term planning will be proposed to the installation Master Planning Board.

Projects requiring money from other sources such as Army and Air Force Exchange Service facilities or services or ATMs will be proposed to them for action.

According to post Command Sgt. Maj. William H. Acebes, in 1993, the first year of the Single Soldier Living Communities program, the survey process was successful in working with soldiers to meet their needs.



Based on last year's needs, we were able to build several volleyball courts throughout post, construct several picnic areas and upgrade several day rooms and soldiers' rooms through the U-Do-It program, Acebes said.

VARIOUS VOICES

What is the best place and worst place to eat on post?

Karen James, family member — "I think Robin Hood is the best. I like the sandwiches. Burger King is the worst because the grease is not good for you."

Pfc. Chris M. Hill, Company C. 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment — "Probably Royal Chopsticks. The worst is Frank's Franks. I don't like hot dogs — they're not very good."

Stephanie Krawczyk, family member— "I think Anthony's Pizza is the best. They have good spaghetti. Burger King is worst because the line is always too long."

Angela Henderson, family member — "I think the golf course cafeteria is the best. They have good food out there and it,s a relaxed atmosphere. Anthony's Pizza is the worst."

Pfc. Tyson M. Choquette, Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 4th Battalion, 41st infantry Regiment — "The best place to eat is probably the Officers Club. They have better food and nicer atmosphere. The worst place is the mess hall."

Sgt. 1st Class Bruce E. Mischal, U. S. Army Medical Department Activity — "I'm partial because I'm a dining facility manager for Martin Army Community Hospital. It's obvious that we are the best place to eat on post — we feed people from all over the installation"

The food police attack again

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

commentary

Pinch me. I need to make sure I'm alive. If what all the scare-mongers out there said was true, I'd probably never have made it to 21.

Yeah, the food police are at it again.

First they attacked Italian cuisine, then Chinese food. Next it was movie theater popcorn. Now they've gone after Mexican food.

Good Lord. Everyone knows Italians and Chinese live forever and Mexicans get pretty darn old. I'm not sure of the life expectancy of moviegoers.

So why do people do this to us? To worry us to death in case cholesterol hasn't gotten to us? Put a little stress on our otherwise carefree minds?

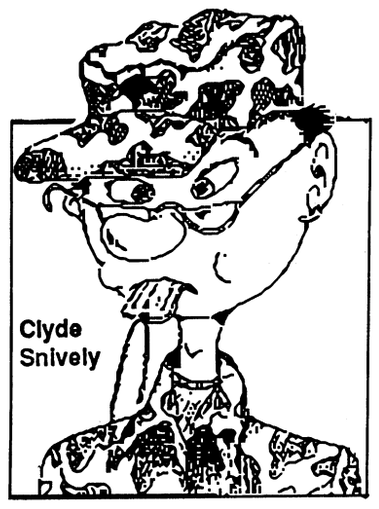
There's got to be better things for these people to do with their time and probably our taxpayer money.

We are certainly becoming a nation of wimps. It seems Big Brother wants to regulate everything we do. Of course it's for our own good.

But with the mental state we're in today, do you supposed Davey Crockett would have tamed the wild frontier or that Lewis and Clark would have gotten past the Missouri River?

I don't think so.

For starters, Davey wouldn't have killed himself a "bahr when he wuz only 3." He couldn't have because old Dad would have had the gun locked up.



This, assuming old Dad could have had a gun. After all, the ball on that muzzle loader was probably 45- to 50-caliber, making it a war weapon and not a sporting weapon.

Next, Davey would have had to determine if the bear was in season or not and check to make sure he had his hunting permit and bear tag, not something normally afforded 3-year-olds.

Then he'd need to know if the bear was on the endangered species list or not.

William Clark and Meriwether Lewis would never have gotten past Missouri. They'd probably have quit as soon as they were asked to file a risk assessment survey. But assuming they'd figured out the paperwork drill, I know they'd never have gotten approval for their canoe.

"I'm sorry, but you need Coast Guard-approved life vests, flares, lightning rods, and oh, by the way, you're also overloaded. One of you'll have to walk."

I'm sorry, but we're becoming a nation of sissies.

No wonder we spend our time watching television all the time. Of course Big Brother will soon issue a statement that watching so much TV is also bad for us, that it'll cause glaucoma (assuming we don't go crazy first from the synapses in our brains being short-circuited — we already know we're too violent and don't have a firm grasp on reality thanks to the one-eyed monster).

But in the meantime, like good little citizens, we put on our reflective vests and helmets before motorcycling, or seat belts if driving in a car and poke along at 55 mph on the open road.

We don't go down to the old mill pond for a swim anymore, instead, it's a government certified pool with lifeguards.

Not only do we brush after every meal, but floss too.

We use soap that prevents wrinkles. Put on No. 112 sun screen to avoid skin cancer, get the government to put fluoride in our drinking water and go to health fairs for cholesterol and skin cancer screenings about as regularly as we go to movie theaters.

We do all this in the name of saving our worthless, meaningless; cradle to grave health-cared-for lives.

I can't stand it any more.

I'm going home for lunch today and make me a huge mustard and peach jam sandwich and wash it down with a quart of whole milk while standing bare-chested in the sun without a dollop of sunscreen.

By the way, I'm a firm believer in self protection — seat belts, helmets, reflective vests, life preservers and risk assessments.

I just wish we, the American public, were responsible and reliable enough to use this willingly instead of being forced to through legislation and fines.

She took first step in this success story

By Bob Roberson
United Way Inc.

commentary

The "thank you" letter was written to the director of the Columbus Alliance for Battered Women. It was signed by Cynthia S. Sturm.

Sturm wrote to give permission for her story to be told, in any form that would benefit others. The following is a synopsis of what she said:

Her marriage began in a typical way — much in love and wanting a home, children and a career. Then changes began to occur. Her husband began abusing her verbally — putting her down in front of others. This rapidly progressed to shoving and slapping when he got angry.

The first serious injury was a combination fractured rib and black eye. Gradually these violent episodes escalated into once-a-month beatings. After each one he was upset and contrite — begging for forgiveness.

Sturm points out that police, judges, neighbors and families are often bewildered and angry when women return home to such domestic violence.

According to her own feelings, as well as those of other women she has talked with, the reasons are varied and mixed: lack of self-esteem, fear of poverty, no adult emotional support and deep feelings for the abuser.

The chronically-battered woman often feels it's "all her fault," and that if she can hold the relationship together, he will "change."

In Sturm's case, the turning point came while staying home from work, recuperating from a previous night's beating.

She was four months pregnant and had her 11-month-old daughter home with her. Sitting there with a cut lip and swelling eye, worried about her daughter's exposure to violence, and dreading going back to work with another feeble story about an "accident" she decided to make a call.

She dialed the hotline and made contact with the Battered Women's Shelter.

"What I found there," says Sturm, "was understanding and support. They helped me find resources to aid me with necessary decisions.

Along with food and clothing, they put me in touch with agencies that could assist me. More than all else, they helped me find the confidence to make hard choices and live with them."

According to Sturm, the people at the shelter helped her get back the control of her own life. That proved to be worth more than gold.

Sturm now lives in another state. She had her baby and is enrolled in a college's nurse training program.

She is unafraid to come home these days, and faces her future and the children's with hope.

Her success story began with taking that first step. It was made possible by people in the Fort Benning, Columbus and Phenix City area who cared.

Stepping up to the JROTC challenge

By Kim Gage
Second ROTC Region

commentary

The Junior Reserve Officer Training Corps program, along with the supportive and salutary JROTC instructors, has encouraged me to become an effective leader and enabled me to make critical decisions under extreme conditions.

I found this beneficial in the classroom, in sports and at home.

My adolescent years were tough, considering I have undergone several brain surgeries. At the age of 2, I was diagnosed as having several brain tumors.

Through years of surgery, therapy and ridicule, I became very depressed and even suicidal.

Every day, every hour and every minute seemed cold and dim. I felt that during those dark and cold times that I was not doing myself or anyone else any good by living. My life was miserable. I felt that no one respected me, possibly because I was so withdrawn from everyone, and because I never spoke out for myself.

Throughout my life I felt so blank and had no feelings for myself. Even though my brain tumors were now absolved, I still did not know how to cope; considering that I had no friends, no one to talk to and no life.

Finally, high school came. Through years of torment and being laughed at throughout my previous school years, I really did not have much to look forward to. My parents urged me to take my counselor's advice by taking JROTC.

They told me it would give me a little bit of what I needed - self-respect.

I reluctantly joined, because I thought maybe, just maybe, JROTC could help me.

The first day I walked into the classroom with the same cold attitude that I always had.

I was shocked at the way the JROTC instructors treated me and the other students. They treated me equally with the other students.

They gave us a brief lecture on JROTC and told us that we would only get what we put into the program. They also told us that we should come into the program with a positive attitude.

The following day I walked into the classroom with a positive attitude. I now thank myself, the JROTC instructors and my parents for encouraging me.

Ever since that day, my life has changed dramatically for the good. My life, which had seemed so cold and dim, now had a sense of pride and respect.

I am now active in academics, sports and other activities which coincide with JROTC. I have learned how to work with other people.

I am also the senior class president and the battalion commander of the JROTC program at my school. Considering all that I have been through, I can honestly say that JROTC has helped me to step up to the challenge of life.

CID deters drug trafficking

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

"It" has been in the news. It has been on the streets. A lot of money is made by selling it. People die from using it. It, is drugs.

The Criminal Investigation Division investigates all trafficking of drugs on post.

"The majority of drug traffickers on post are civilians," said Randy F. Upton, special agent-in-charge of CID.

Most of the people selling drugs on post are selling marijuana, said Charles A. Brightbrill, team chief of the Drug Suppression Team.

Other drugs found on post include: crack cocaine, cocaine, LSD and methamphetamines. About 80 percent (of what is sold) is mainly marijuana, Brightbrill said.

"We need the commanders and other people (in the community) to be our eyes and ears. We can't be everywhere," Upton said.

Upton stated the following are signs that soldiers may be involved in selling drugs:

- Soldiers living beyond their means — "If a soldier always has money, or maybe a someone sees a specialist driving a Porsche, it may be time to be suspicious, Upton said.
- Constantly being paged or receiving an unusual number of phone calls
- Having plenty of visitors at the barracks or in the quarters
- Possession of drug paraphernalia (pipes, water pipes, cigarette papers and roach clips)
- Possession of containers often used to hold drugs: 35mm film canisters; "camoflauge" containers, used when trying to hide the container from people, including, soft drink and aerosol cans, with screw-off tops or bottoms and hollowed-out interiors.

"Anyone who comes in contact with CID, we try to recruit them as a source or an informant," Upton said.

Upton said the main concern on post is distribution.

"If we are notified someone is selling drugs on post, we will target that individual and try and make a purchase from that person," Upton said.

Identifying this person and making sure there is a military connection is the next step, Upton said.

With authorization from higher headquarters, the 3rd Military Police Group in Fort Gillen, Ga., CID can go off post to investigate traffickers, Upton said.

If someone comes up positive on a urinalysis drug test, Upton said, they are contacted by CID and an attempt to find out their source is made.

The key to identifying a drug trafficker from a positive urinalysis test, is for the commander to notify CID immediately, Upton said.

Normally when that happens, CID is very successful in getting a source.

On the average, CID handles 50 drug cases a year, Upton said.

"We average approximately four a month," Brightbrill said. "We have about 10 open cases right now."

"Depending on the level of drug trafficking, we do what's called a threat assessment," Upton said.

If the trafficker is a local guy and is only dealing "nickel and dime" stuff out of a house or barracks room, chances are this person is going to be cooperative, Upton said.

If the person is dealing large quantities of drugs, the local police and the Drug Enforcement Agency are called in also.

"Most of the time our apprehension phase goes without incident," Upton said.

Drugs are not segregated by ranks, Upton said. "Cases have been made across the board as far as rank."

CID has apprehended soldiers from the ranks of private to lieutenant. Even as recent as this month, CID has apprehended an officer, Brightbrill said.

CID offers drug awareness briefings to units, Brightbrill said.

For more information on these briefings or to report drug or criminal activity on Fort Benning, contact CID at 545-2414.

The callers identity can remain anonymous at the callers request, Upton said.

Illegal drugs and paraphernalia
Common drugs found on Fort Benning

Marijuana:
packaging — Plastic bags, pound or ounce quantities 35mm film canisters, small quantities paraphernalia — Dugout: Wooden carrier with pipe, holds small quantities

Cocaine:
packaging — Bindle, commonly referred to as "snow seals" or "locks," vials paraphernalia — Spice screens, spice grinders, flip top (spoon affixed to cap), and bullet (snorting device)

Crack Cocaine:
packaging — Small plastic vials
paraphernalia — Small butane torches, stainless steel screens

LSD:
packaging — Cool, dark environment (light sensitive) LSD is normally placed on blotter paper — pills have been made, but are rarely used

Green to Gold seminar today at 1 p.m. in Infantry Hall

Columbus College

A seminar providing information about the Green to Gold program will be today from 1 to 3 p.m. in Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall.

Interested soldiers, supervisors and re-enlistment noncommissioned officers are encouraged to attend.

The ROTC Green to Gold program offers soldiers the opportunity to be discharged from their current enlistment contract in order to complete a college degree and earn a commission as an officer.

The seminar will provide specific information about eligibility criteria, scholarships, and veterans' education benefits.

Soldiers who have completed at least one or two years of college with a 2.5 grade point average and two or more years of active duty may be eligible for release for a two or three-year scholarship.

Veterans' education benefits earned while on active duty may be used with the scholarships, which begin fall quarter 1995 and some age limits apply.

Some soldiers may be eligible for immediate release to attend college this fall (nonscholarship). These soldiers must have completed two or more years of college, two years of active service, and have at least a 2.0 grade point average.

Army Regulation 635-200 (Enlisted Ranks Update), paragraph 16-2, gives the criteria necessary for early release.

Soldiers must submit their requests through their chain of command on a DA Form 4187.

Columbus College ROTC cadre will host the seminar. Another seminar is scheduled for Aug.19 from 1 to 3 p.m. in Marshall Auditorium.

If you have questions or wish to be released from your contract and attend college this fall, contact Maj. Brian Luedtke at Columbus College ROTC, immediately at 568-2058.

Housing wants soldiers to update their records

USAIC Public Affairs Office

In order to better serve soldiers and improve efficiency for screening housing applicants, the post Family Housing Office is asking soldiers to update their records.

Soldiers who are currently on the waiting list for post housing are asked to stop by the Family Housing Office, Olson Hall, Building 399, with their current telephone number and a copy of their lease, if one has not already been submitted.

This allows for the housing office to easily contact soldiers and better project move-in dates based on the soldier's availability.

Post officials emphasize it is the soldier's responsibility to ensure all information at the post housing office is current and correct.

On-post child-care prices scheduled to rise

By Stephen Barrett
American Forces Information Service

Military families may see a $2 a week increase in military child development center fees beginning in October.

Families earning $23,000 and less annually will have weekly day-care fees range between $35 and $46 per child. Centers in high-cost areas may charge $38 to $49 per child.

However, these increases are not mandatory. Linda Smith, who heads DoD's family policy support and services office, said installation commanders have the option of not raising fees. She said rates are set on how well each center handles its budget. "If a commander decides to raise rates, it can only be within the DoD guidelines," she said.

The program also allows commanders to reduce rates 20 percent for each additional child from the same family. Many centers provide multiple-child discounts rates. However, if discounts affect child center business, Smith said, commanders may halt discounts. "It depends on the local commander, the community and the financial needs of the center," said Smith.

Last year, DoD changed its wage categories to help junior service members afford day care. "We increased the amount of low-income families in Category I," said Smith. "Before, families that made $11,000 and below were in the lowest bracket. That bracket jumped up to $23,000, qualifying more people for the lower rates."

| Category | Family income | Fees | High cost fees |
|---|---|---|---|
| I | $0-23,000 | $35 to $46 | $38 to $49 |
| II | $23,001 to $34,000 | $43 to $56 | $48 to $60 |
| III | $34,001 to $44,000 | $53 to $67 | $59 to $71 |
| IV | $44,001 to $55,000 | $66 to $76 | $70 to $82 |
| V | $55,001 and over | $75 to $88 | $81 to $92 |

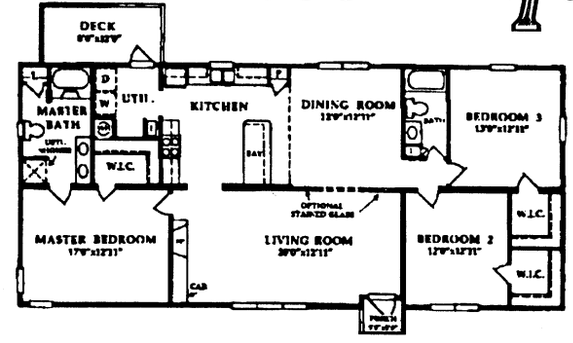
Categories are based on total family earnings. Families enrolling their children in day care must complete a DD Form 2652 annually to verify their earnings. This includes the service member's quarters and subsistence allowances. Nonmilitary spouses must supply a W-2 form or a leave and earnings statement to verify their annual wages.

One problem confronting DoD child development centers is the belief that the centers are a low-cost entitlement, similar to commissary and exchange privileges. While subsidies exist in military child care, Smith said, DoD never signed up to be the cheapest day-care provider.

"We're in the business of providing quality child care," said Smith. "We do have reasonable rates when you compare us to the national statistics in terms of what people pay, the percentage of income and the actual costs."

For example, figures published in Exchange, a monthly child-care magazine, show parents of 3-year-olds pay weekly rates ranging from $64 in Dallas to $127 in Boston. Rates are higher for infant care, while the cost of part-time care for school-age children is often higher than DoD's charges for full-time care.

"Cities in the Midwest average $70 a week," said Patty Kesold, who handles DoD's child-care policy. "This doesn't include late fees for children staying longer than eight hours."



For this flexibility, Smith said, service members pay an average of $59 a week. "There are places in the country that charge less," said Smith, "but they don't have programs we offer, the staff we employ or the flexibility we provide."

Smith said appropriated funds cover renovations, equipment, supplies and food programs; money charged for day care pays only employees. This allows more workers to provide better child supervision. "There is no such thing as profit in day care," said Smith. "All the money raised goes back into paying wages."

There are cases where families struggle with day-care fees, even with the lower rates. Smith said commanders may reduce rates case by case and encourages those needing relief to ask for it. She added families must show why the rates are causing hardships.

Say 'sayonara' to SF 171

OPM officials said the new proposal highlights the agency's commitment to simplify the application process through computerized hiring.

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

"Taps" will sound for SF 171 — the application form for federal jobs — Dec. 31.

The federal government will no longer print or stockpile the venerable form after that date.

Still, don't feel bad if you've just spent money for SF-171 computer software. Applicants will have the option of using the old form, said Office of Personnel Management officials.

OPM Director Jim King said his agency published a proposal ending the SF-171 in the June 22 Federal Register.

Officials expect the proposal to be final following a 30-day comment period and Office of Management and Budget approval.

"The intent of the proposal is to make it easier for people to apply for federal jobs," King said. "The SF-171 is too cumbersome and sends the wrong message when we are trying to move to a more customer-friendly and flexible system."

Agencies should begin phasing in SF-171 alternatives this year. DoD officials said they will be ready with SF-171 alternatives by Jan. 1.

Next year, applicants will have the option of using a resume, an electronic file or a written format. Applicants for certain hard-to-fill jobs can already apply over the telephone.

OPM will assist agencies with the change to computerized and telephone hiring systems. Agencies choosing not to invest in computer or telephone hiring systems can hire OPM as a contractor to process applications and provide other services.

OPM officials said the new proposal highlights the agency's commitment to simplify the application process through computerized hiring.

Job seekers will use a pencil to mark answers about their qualifications on computer-scannable forms and send them in with their resumes. Applicants without resumes can complete a mini-form that will be provided upon request.

OPM officials said the new format will save time for both applicants and personnel offices. The average federal job seeker takes at least eight hours to complete an SF-171, according to Mary Ann Maloney, an agency spokeswoman. But the applicant isn't the only one inconvenienced. "Even a good personnel specialist can take up to 90 minutes processing an SF-171," she added.

Officials said the new computer forms will take about 40 minutes for an average applicant to provide basic qualifications and another 15 minutes to answer specific questions for each agency applied to. Computer scanners can read up to 1,500 applications an hour.

King said the computerized format will mean the easiest way to apply for a job will be to review OPM's centralized list of agency job openings and follow the simple instructions given.

People with computers and modems can access the list through the Federal Job Opportunities Bulletin Board at (912) 757-3100.

Or job applicants can use touch screen computers in federal employment information centers throughout the country or in their state employment offices. TDD numbers for the hearing impaired are also available at these centers.

Vice President Albert Gore's National Performance Review recommended eliminating the form.

Gore called the SF-171 "a symbol of a system that's so tied up in it own red tape that it fails to serve either the government or the applicant for a government job."

More U.S. installations slated to close overseas

By Stephen Barrett
American Forces Information Service

U.S. military facilities at 27 European sites will close or reduce operations, Department of Defense officials announced June 16. Sites named are in Germany, the Netherlands, Belgium, Denmark and the United Kingdom.

In addition, seven other European sites changed status. Five installations originally slated to remain open at reduced levels will now close, while two originally slated to close will remain open.

The Air Force returns three sites to host nations and partially returns one. The Holstebro Contingency Hospital in Denmark, the United Kingdom's Nocton Hall Contingency Hospital and Alzey Communication Annex in Sembach, Germany, will return to host nation control. The Suelm Annex in Bitburg, Germany, becomes a partial return.

Of the 27 sites announced, 23 are Army, with 20 located in Germany. Military communities in Nuremberg, Fulda, Augsburg and Karlsruhe are hardest hit, with 13 of 23 closures involving the four cities.

In Nuremberg the Army returns the Feucht Storage Facility and the Erlangen, Herzogenaurach and Patoriusstrasse housing areas. Herzo Base and the Nuremberg hospital, earlier named as partial returns, become full returns.

In the Fulda area, the Army returns four sites in Reiterswiesen. The sites include the military airfield, ammunition storage area and two training areas.

In Karlsruhe the Army will close Gerszewski Barracks and Neureut Barracks, while Germershiem Army Depot becomes a partial return.

Other Army installations to close include Giessen's Marburg General Storage Facility, Azbill Barracks in Mainz and Heidelberg's Rheinau Kaserne in Germany, the Grobbendonk Site in Belgium, and the Herongen and Ter Apel storage sites in the Netherlands.

Army partial returns include the Roedelheim Ordnance Facility near Frankfurt, Baumholder's Nahbollenbach Storage Area, Kaiserslautern's Rhein Ordnance Barracks, and the Quirnheim Missile Station near Mannheim. All of these are in Germany.

Two other installations changed from partial to full return status. Those two are the Balesfeld Missile Station in Baumholder and the Fischbach Ordnance Depot near Pirmasens, both in Germany. Two other installations, the Bicester Sites in Great Britain and Frankfurt's Betts Housing Area, go from full to partial return status.

With the announcement, 895 installations are now slated for return to the host nations, partial return or standby status. Of these, 826 are European sites.

Return means U.S. operations end and the entire installation returns to host nation control. Partial return means the United States retains some facilities and runs reduced operations. Standby means the military stops operations but maintains the installation for future use.

VA offers program to help homeless

Department of Veterans Affairs

The Department of Veterans Affairs is announcing that an interim rule and the proposed application for its new grant program for public and nonprofit private groups providing services to homeless veterans have been published in the Federal Register.

The program assists these groups in establishing new programs to furnish supportive services and housing for homeless veterans through grants of up to 65 percent of the cost of acquiring, renovating or altering facilities, or to purchase vans.

VA Secretary Jesse Brown said, "Helping homeless veterans is a top priority of mine. While we at VA have a responsibility to assist homeless veterans, we simply cannot do the job alone. These grants will mean that more homeless veterans will get the help they need, and we are doing everything we can to get these funds distributed before any homeless veterans have to face another winter."

The grant program is part of the VA Homeless Providers Grant and Per Diem Program authorized by law in 1992. The legislation also authorizes VA to provide per diem payments, or in-kind assistance, to eligible groups or organizations that established supportive housing or service programs for homeless veterans after Nov. 10, 1992. Some $5.5 million is available for the grant and per diem program this fiscal year.

Publishing the proposed application gives homeless service providers advance notice of the types of information they will need to include in their application packages. The proposal is subject to public comment and approval by the Office of Management and Budget.

The interim rule sets forth the regulations under which both the grant and per diem program will operate.

VA also will be publishing in the Federal Register a Notice of Fund Availability. At that time, eligible public and nonprofit organizations will have 30 days in which to apply for grant funding. VA will announce publication of this notice in an effort to reach as many interested groups as possible.

VA sought input from more than 250 public and nonprofit organizations in developing criteria and requirements for the Homeless Providers Grant and Per Diem Program.

VA is the only federal agency that provides substantial hands-on assistance directly to homeless persons. In addition to the grant and per diem program, VA is directing more than $60 million to its specialized homeless assistance programs this year, including establishing new comprehensive homeless centers, and other health care and rehabilitation programs for homeless veterans.

Upon publication of the rule and Notice of Fund Availability, VA will be mailing some 2,000 letters to veterans service organizations, other nonprofit organizations, state and local governments, congressional offices and those who attended February's National Summit on Homelessness among Veterans.

Those interested in obtaining more information about the grant program also can call (202) 273-5760.

Fellowships available through VA

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — The Department of Veterans Affairs has announced the establishment of a two-year fellowship program designed to prepare physicians for academic careers in health issues of women veterans.

"Women veterans have served this country with honor and distinction," said VA Secretary Jesse Brown.

"This new fellowship program will enhance VA's ability to better serve them by providing specific training and research opportunities to physicians who wish to make women veterans health care a specialty."

VA medical centers in Boston; Durham, N.C.; Pittsburgh; Portland, Ore.; San Francisco; and Sepulveda/West Los Angeles will participate in the program, officials said.

Post-residency training will be provided to physicians from internal medicine and its subspecialties, family practice, gynecology, psychiatry or surgery.

Each participant will devote up to 75 percent of the fellowship time to teaching and research, with the remaining 25 percent in the delivery of patient care.

VA releases analysis of census data on nation's veterans

Department of Veterans Affairs

The Department of Veterans Affairs, in an analysis of 1990 census data, has found that while the total number of veterans declined between 1980 and 1990, the number of black and Hispanic veterans increased over the decade.

The analysis, by VA's National Center for Veterans Analysis and Statistics, presents a statistical portrait of the veteran population in the 50 states and the District of Columbia. Additional data are listed below.

Population

The total veteran population of 27.2 million is made up of 24.1 million whites; 2.3 million blacks; 246,000 Asian and Pacific Islanders; 190,000 American Indian, Aleut, Eskimo; and 310,000 veterans who did not classify themselves as members of a special racial group. Of these groups, 925,000 also identified themselves as of Hispanic origin.

If current trends continue, military separations data suggest that the white veteran population will continue to decline, while black (20 percent) and Hispanic (5.2 percent) veteran populations will continue to make up higher proportions of the veteran population.

The minority veteran populations are younger than the white veteran population. Among male veterans, almost one of every two blacks and Hispanics was under age 45 compared to only 28 percent of white veterans. Among female veterans, nearly one-half of black and Hispanic veterans were under 35 years of age compared to 27 percent of white female veterans.

In 1990, female veterans numbered 1.1 million, or about 4 percent of all veterans. About 84 percent of the female veteran population was white, 12 percent black, and 4 percent self-identified as Hispanic. In contrast, male veterans were 89 percent white, 8 percent black, and 3 percent Hispanic origin.

Wartime service

Approximately 34 percent (9.2 million) of all veterans served in World War II, the largest segment of the veteran population.

If current trends continue, military separations data suggest that the white veteran population will continue to decline, while black (20 percent) and Hispanic (5.2 percent) veteran populations will continue to make up higher proportions of the veteran population

Roughly one of every three white male and female veterans served during World War II.

Veterans from the Vietnam era (8.2 million) were the second largest period-of-service group. Among male veterans, both black and Hispanic, approximately one in three served in the Vietnam era.

More than one-half of the black female (58 percent) and Hispanic female veterans population (53 percent) served during the post-Vietnam era.

Education

Some 54 percent of those who attended college earned a degree.

Female veterans were more likely to be college-educated. Approximately 60 percent of female veterans attended college compared to less than one-half of male veterans.

Some 80 percent of veterans have graduated from high school. Female veterans were more likely to have graduated from high school than their male counterparts.

Employment, income

Among male veterans ages 35 to 44, the group with the highest labor force participation rate, whites were 94 percent employed; Hispanics, 90 percent; and blacks, 84 percent. The same age group of female veterans' rates are whites, 81 percent; blacks, 84 percent; and Hispanics, 79 percent.

The unemployment rate for white males and females was 4.3 and 5.8 percent, respectively. Hispanic male veterans had the lowest unemployment rate (6.5 percent) among the minority groups of either gender. Unemployment rates among black male and female veterans were 9.1 and 11.1 percent, respectively, and 8.9 percent for Hispanic female veterans.

The median incomes for women veterans were well below those of men, although the differential by sex was lower for blacks than for whites and Hispanics.

The median income of female veterans was highest among blacks ($12,900), followed by white females ($12,600) and Hispanic females ($11,700).

The median income of white male veterans ($25,600) was higher than the median income of black males ($16,800) and Hispanic males ($20,900).

Poverty level

While the poverty rate among veterans was found to be 5.7 percent, it is nearly half the 9.1 percent rate in the general population.

Socioeconomic and demographic characteristics are presented by sex, race and Hispanic origin, focusing on age, period of service, income, poverty status, educational attainment, employment and status in the labor force.

New medical coverage helps family members of deceased military personnel

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

Spouses and other family members will now have 100 percent medical coverage for pre-existing conditions for one year after their active duty sponsors die.

The legislation was included in the 1994 Defense Authorization Act, which was enacted Nov. 30. It applies to military beneficiaries whose active duty sponsors died on or after Jan. 1, provided they had been on active duty at least 30 days before death.

This policy change came about largely through the efforts of Katie Forwalder of Virginia Beach, Va., who was 8 1/2 months pregnant when her Navy husband died. Lt Robert Forwalder's E-2C Hawkeye flew off the aircraft carrier USS Theodore Roosevelt and disappeared into the Adriatic Sea, March 26, 1993.

Forwalder didn't believe her husband was gone until her birthday, April 9, 1993. That was when she received a package of his belongings. The same day, she visited her obstetrician, who found her blood pressure dangerously high and admitted her to a hospital. She gave birth to a son, Sean Robert, April 10. The baby was healthy, but the mother's blood pressure reached near-stroke level several days after the birth.

She was re-admitted to the hospital.

That's when Forwalder discovered she was no longer considered a Navy wife. As a widow, she was eligible for only 7 percent coverage under Civilian Health and Medical Program of Uniformed Services, compared with 100 percent for a wife of an active duty military member.

"I didn't believe it was fair. I felt the government broke a promise to me, and I didn't want that to happen to another widow," Forwalder said.

She began an effort to change the rules. She wrote letters and allowed newspapers to interview her. Her father, a retired Navy commander, and her doctor also wrote to everyone they thought might help. Top Pentagon health officials agreed with Forwalder.

"The department does not wish to compound the grief of families who fall into this situation," wrote Dr. Edward D. Martin, acting assistant secretary of Defense for Health Affairs at the time. DoD officials worked with Virginia Sens. Charles Robb and John Warner to remedy the situation.

The coverage works like this: Upon the death of an active duty sponsor, DoD will cover survivors' pre-existing conditions at the active duty rate for a year. After that, CHAMPUS still covers the widow or widower and family members until remarriage, but at a slightly higher cost share.

Infantry features battle lab

Infantry Magazine

The July-August issue of Infantry magazine highlights the World War II battle at Anzio, operations in Somalia, the Dismounted Battlespace Battle Lab, the need for training oriented on our Army's role in peacekeeping operations and promotion advice for officers and noncommissioned officers.

The article "Anzio Beachhead" commemorates the efforts of U.S. soldiers fighting to hold the beachhead in the face of assaults by German armor and infantry company in the battle. "CSS Operations in Somalia" discusses the challenges of sustaining an battalion task force in Somalia, emphasizing the need for close planning and coordination at all levels.

One of two battle lab articles in the issue focuses on the 21st Century Land Warrior, a modular, integrated battlefield fighting system that provides a vision of the future dismounted soldier. The other articles discusses an advanced concepts and technology demonstration to study rapid force projection and enhanced fiber optic guided missiles. The article also addresses the role of simulations and battle lab warfighting experiments in the development of tactics, techniques and procedures for this demonstration.

A piece on the need for a peacekeeping mission training plan addresses the expanded mission requirements of units tasked with peacekeeping operations. The author says that some of the tasks inherent in such missions are already a part of infantry units' training, but that others — such a s negotiation, liaison with local authorities and dealing with media — are not routinely exercised. Two articles on getting promoted discuss professional development for the perspective of both officers and nocommissioned officers.

The editorial and subscription offices of Infantry magazine are located in Room 524 of Infantry Hall. Information about the magazine, including subscription rates and guidelines for writers, is available from the editor, Infantry, P.O. Box 52005, Fort Benning, Ga. 31995-2005. The magazine's telephone numbers are 545-2350 or 545-6951.

Job training, placement available to departing troops

By Stephen Barrett
American Forces Information Service

Service members separating or retiring due to the drawdown may be eligible for civilian job training and placement in Georgia and Alabama.

Public and private institutions in both states will train departing service members for civilian jobs as part of a program announced by the Army Training and Doctrine Command. Those same institutions will also place graduates.

"The goal is to have a job for a soldier no later than 90 days after his separation," said Ted Craig, director of the Army Career and Alumni Program's Southern Region at Fort Benning. "If an institution cannot consistently meet that goal, we do not contract with them."

The Job Training Partnership Act funds the program. The U.S. Labor Department allocates the funds to Georgia, and the state labor department operates the program.

Georgia uses these funds to contract with local training institutions for training and placing service members. These institutions range from regional trade schools to colleges and universities in Georgia and Alabama.

Although Craig said the intended audience was Fort Benning soldiers, any service member planning to reside in Georgia or Alabama may apply. "It makes no difference what kind of uniform the member wears," said Craig. "As long as they meet requirements, we'll try to get them enrolled."

The program is drawing raves from the Pentagon. Paula Davis, DoD's deputy transition officer, said the Georgia program is good news for service members. "We would love to see other states pick up on this program," she said.

Davis said she doesn't know of similar programs, but did say ones like the Georgia initiative would depend on employment opportunities in each state. "The southern states are really receptive to this type of program," she said. "There are a lot of opportunities there."

Applicants must apply through the Fort Benning Army Career and Alumni Program for pre-eligibility screening. Members must show they are leaving the military because of downsizing. Those meeting requirements have their applications sent to the Georgia Labor Department, which selects candidates for funded training.

Separations meeting eligibility requirements include the Voluntary Separation Incentive or Special Separation Benefit, mandatory retirement, 15-year retirement and early release plans. The standard honorable discharge doesn't count.

"People who complete their four-year term and quit because their time is over aren't eligible," said Craig. "They have to show that the drawdown resulted in their release."

Job options are many. Craig said nearly everything is available for service members, including health care, transportation, electronics and law enforcement. Both his staff and the Georgia Labor Department try to arrange training so it's finished before each service member separates.

"Right now, we're getting a lot of people going into truck driving," said Craig. "It pays fairly well, and there's a huge demand for good drivers in this part of the country."

The program has shown initial success. In the test phase recently completed, Craig said, 155 service members initially enrolled in the job training/placement program. All but four finished training, and 130 were placed in jobs.

Phase 2 is under way, with 175 service members enrolled in classes while awaiting separation. Of those, 84 have now finished job training and 68 of them are now out of the military and have jobs.

"We service an enormous area here, and we are not going to turn anyone away," said Craig. "Our job is to help people find jobs and this program has already proven it can find jobs."

Service members applying for the program can write to:

Army Career and Alumni Program Southern Region
Fort Benning, Ga 31905.

They will also accept fax applications at DSN 835-7642 or (706) 545-7642.

VA benefits: Vocational, educational counseling available

Army Career and Alumni Program

Many benefits are available to soldiers and their families getting out of the Army. Listed below is some information about the vocational and educational counseling available through the Veterans Administration.

Who can get counseling?

You can if you meet one of the following conditions:

- You are a veteran or family member eligible for educational benefits under a program which VA administers;
- You were discharged or released from active duty under honorable conditions not more than one year ago;
- You are on active duty, and six or less months remain before your scheduled release or discharge from service.

The VA can provide you with a battery of aptitude, interest, skills and vocational tests. These tests can help determine your individual needs. Career, education, and personal counseling are all available.

Counseling

Army Career and Alumni Program officials said counseling can help you to make some important decisions and plans for your future on the basis of informed choice, not chance. Today's world of work is complicated. It is not easy to find work that will be satisfying and offer good pay and a good future.

Counseling can help you get it together and come up with a pattern that fits you. You can get counseling about any matters, including personal problems, related to: Career choice and preparation, School or Job-Retraining and Job Selection and Search.

How to get counseling

Complete an Application for Counseling form (VA Form 28-8832 dated Aug 1991), attach a copy of your DD 214 and send it to your nearest Department of Veterans Affairs Office.

The local VA office is located downstairs in Soldiers' Plaza, Building 2617.

All sick vets to be treated for Gulf War illness

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

"Come in and let us help you." That's the message from top Department of Defense officials to veterans who feel they have a Persian Gulf war-related sickness.

To make reporting easier for veterans, DoD set up a toll-free number— (800) 796-9699. To quell fears of career reprisals, Edwin Dorn, undersecretary of Defense for personnel and readiness, put a hold on involuntary separations of those who feel they have a gulf-related illness. Dorn said such members must request separation or retirement in writing or be medically retired or separated through the disability system with an established diagnosis

Since the end of Operation Desert Storm veterans have complained of a range of symptoms they believe are related to their gulf service. Doctors have been unable to diagnose the cause of many of these illnesses. A recent National Institute of Health Technology Assessment Workshop found that these undiagnosed symptoms constitute not a single disease or "Persian Gulf Syndrome," but rather a range of illnesses with overlapping symptoms and causes.

"If you're ill and you think that's related to your gulf service, come into the system, get on the registry and let us work with you in the medical exam."

— Dr. Stephen Joseph
Assistant secretary of Defense

Some people have theorized the diseases may be linked to chemical or biological warfare agents. A blue ribbon panel led by Nobel laureate Dr. Joshua Lederberg found no persuasive evidence that the Iraqis used chemical or biological weapons in the gulf, DoD officials announced in a June 23 press conference. Still, to quiet skeptics who believe the department is hiding information, Deputy Defense Secretary John Deutch ordered an unprecedented declassification of documents related to Desert Storm illnesses.

Before that, Defense Secretary William J. Perry and Army Gen. John Shalikashvili, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, released a joint letter urging veterans to come forward and speak freely: "There are many hazards of war, ranging from intense combat to environmental exposures. Anyone who has health problems resulting from those hazards is entitled to health care. If you are experiencing problems please come in for a medical examination."

To get into the system, people in the United States can call (800) 796-9699. People overseas should report to their nearest military treatment facility. People will be treated and entered on a registry to help officials track illnesses. DoD standardized the procedure for treatment. Medical personnel will examine patients and take a history of any symptoms. Depending on reported symptoms, patients will undergo laboratory testing. Then they will receive further testing and treatment as needed.

Individuals eligible for the program include active duty members, retirees, Ready Reservists, full-time National Guardsmen and family members who are eligible for military health care. Depending on their medical status and eligibility, Reservists will receive care from military or Veterans Affairs facilities.

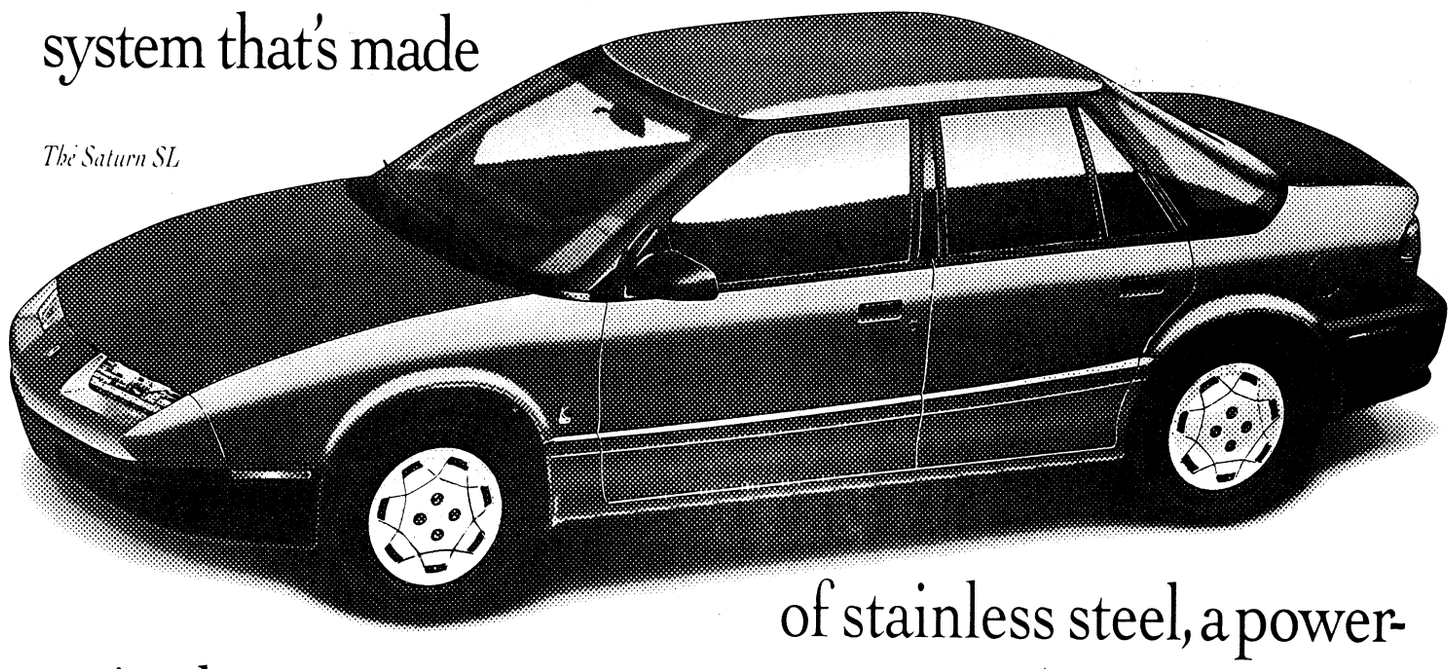
OPM proposes ending time-in-grade restrictions

American Forces Information Service

Federal employees would be eligible for much quicker promotions under proposed rules recently announced by the Office of Personnel Management.

The change is part of Vice President Al Gore's National Performance Review. Officials said the change would make employees eligible for promotion based on performance rather than time in grade. The proposed rules appeared in the June 15 Federal Register and are subject to a 60 days' public comment before OPM issues the final rules.

"Abolishing the time-in-grade regulations will eliminate unrealistic expectations of guaranteed promotion after one year," said OPM Director James B. King. "Now employees will know that advancement hinges on their performance and skill levels."



Since 1951, employees have been required to spend one year in a general schedule pay grade before being eligible for promotion, regardless of skill level and experience. The statutory basis for the requirement expired in 1978. OPM continued the requirement under its regulatory authority.

OPM officials said the change would be most useful in situations where a person with a master's degree or other strong qualifications accepts a low grade position to "get in the door" of the federal government. Under current rules such people would be stuck at that grade even if positions open up that are better suited to their qualifications.

The National Partnership Council, made up of labor and management representatives, approved the change. However, the council recommended retaining time-in-grade requirements for bargaining units in which unions have exclusive rights. Time-in-grade requirements could drop later if these unions agree to the change.

We still think $10,000 is a lot of money.

When we started Saturn, we had the opportunity to start from scratch. Which explains why even our SL, priced at $10,325, is packed with more than twenty-four extra features. Stuff like a steel spaceframe structure with crumple zones, doors that resist dents, an exhaust system that's made

GEORGIA STATE GAMES

Post athletes carry 'torch'

Soldiers, track club members deliver symbol to Post Exchange

The torch for the Georgia State Games made its stop at the Post Exchange Sunday.

Carried by members of the Atlanta Track Club and soldiers from the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, the torch was passed to 1992 Olympic Bronze Medal winner Spc. Rodney Smith of the 29th Infantry Regiment, who then carried the torch to the stage in front of the PX.

"I'm honored that Fort Benning would want me carry the torch," Smith said. "It's a great opportunity for me to bring in the torch, because it is a symbol of the Olympics, which I was a part of in 1992. It brings back some old memories." said Smith.

The torch has traversed the southern third of the state and will make its final stop at the opening ceremonies in Atlanta today.

On hand for the ceremony were post Chief of Staff Col. Gregory C. Camp, executive director of the Georgia State Games Nick Gailey, ex-Atlanta Falcon William Andrews, who is a spokesman for the games and Maj. Marcus A. Alexander, of the U.S. Army Physical Fitness School, who was responsible for bringing the Torch Run to Fort Benning.

"A lot of hard work went into getting the Torch Run to come here since we were not originally on the schedule," Alexander said. "Now the state of Georgia knows that Fort Benning is committed to excellence; we campaigned really hard to get on the schedule.

"We have a lot of great athletes on post and maybe they will get the chance to compete and win a medal in the games."

The Georgia State Games is an Olympic-style sports festival that brings amateur athletes of all ages and skill levels together to compete in 32 sports events.

"The Torch Run is being run to unite the spirit of Georgia's residents under one banner, the banner of amateur sports," Gailey said.

"These are the things we still believe in. The purity of sports, the banner of being an amateur and doing what you want to do."

More than 30,000 athletes will participate in the games by Sunday night at Georgia Technical Institute's Bobby Dodd Stadium.

"On behalf of Major General Jerry A. White, our commanding general, the entire community would like to welcome to Fort Benning the Georgia Games and the ceremonial torch," said Camp.

"It's opportunities like the Georgia Games that give the highly skilled athletes the opportunity and the venue to hone their skills and competitive edge," Camp said.

One of the final speakers of the day was Andrews who played professional football for the Atlanta Falcons and grew up in the Thomasville, Ga., area.

"I remember coming to Fort Benning some six or eight years ago when my brother was in the infantry. I thank you for allowing me to return," Andrews said. "I went to school a few miles from here at the University of Auburn and had a successful amateur career. Then I went on to play professionally for some eight years in Atlanta.

"I really miss the amateur part of it. In the amateur game everyone you know gets involved or encourages you to be the best that you can be. This exemplifies what the Army is all about, being your best at all times," Andrews said.

At the end of the ceremonial torch lighting, Smith passed the torch to Army Ten-Miler Team member Capt. Millie Daniels of the 36th Engineer Group who along with other members of the team carried the torch off Fort Benning and passed the torch back to the Atlanta Track Club for the rest of its journey to Atlanta.

Plastic grubs new interest for bass pros

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

commentary

Each year, it seems, at least one old lure gets rediscovered by professional bass tournament fishermen. The most recent discovery? The Plastic grub, which has been around more than 30 years.

"What happens is that we're constantly looking for a lure or a technique that hasn't been used so we can show the bass something different," explains North Carolina pro Guy Eaker of the Evinrude Outboards Pro Staff. "Very often, all we do is take an old, established lure and use it a different way, which is what we're doing with plastic grubs."

Plastic grubs are basically short plastic worms measuring two to four inches in length. Some have straight tails and others have curled, swimming tails, but all have traditionally been fished with a leadhead jig-type hook.

"The newest way we're fishing grubs is on a Carolina rig," says Eaker, "rigging with a 1/2 ounce sinker and a 12 to 18 inch leader. It's an excellent lure for fishing off points, around rocks, or in current.

"I use a grub this way when conditions are really tough and the bass aren't biting. I just crawl it along the bottom because it looks like a small crayfish."

Another way Eaker likes to fish plastic grubs is with a light slip sinker as a Texas rig, in which the hook is embedded into the grub to become weedless.

"The best way to fish a grub this way is around boat docks and piers where you simply cast, let the lure sink a foot or two, then slowly swim it back," says the Evinrude pro. "With the swimming motion the grub really looks like a small baitfish.

"You can fish plastic worms and lizards the same ways, but there are times when the bass want something smaller, and that's when the grub really pays off.

When he fishes a grub with a slip sinker, Eaker prefers a 1/8 to 3/16 ounce sinker and a 1/0 or 2/0 hook. He normally uses 10-pound test line and a 6 1/2 foot medium heavy spinning rod.

"One of the things that makes the plastic grub such an effective lure is its versatility," continues Eaker. "It's really good when you're fishing extremely clear water, because it's a small lure. You can also use it with heavier tackle and flip it into brush or weeds just like a jig.

"The heaviest bass I've ever landed with a grub weighed over six pounds and was caught by flipping into heavy vegetation on Lake Chickamauga. Don't let the lure's small size discourage you, because it will attract big bass.

"I think you'll see a lot more of the bass pros discovering plastic grubs again in the coming year because it really is a good lure."

Women's softball season winds down

By Terry K. Ray
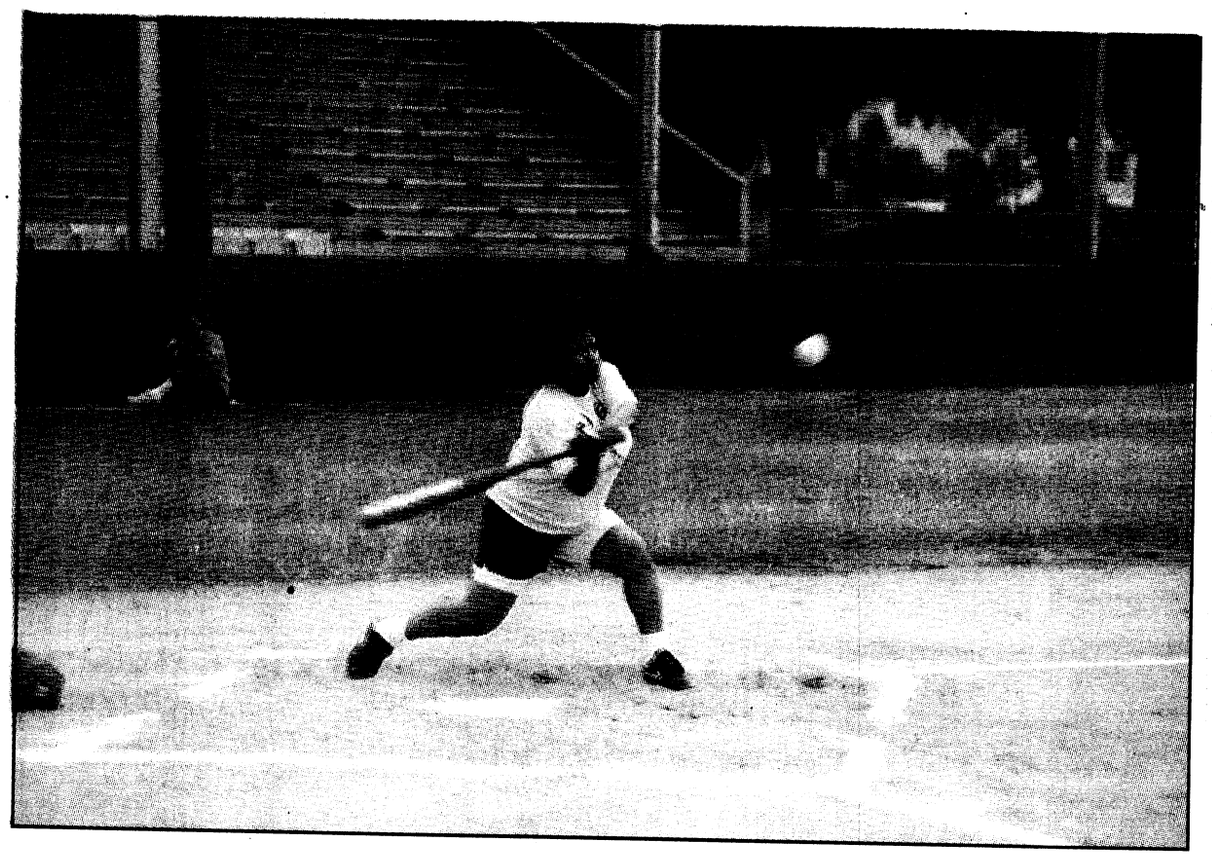
Special to The Bayonet©

The women's softball league is in the last stages of the regular season. With the foul weather that has inundated Fort Benning for the first part of July, the women are glad to see the regular season end.

Three make-up games were scheduled for Monday night at Gowdy Field. Two were played and one went the way of the forfeit.

In game one, Down and Dirty swept aside the Lady Warriors 11-0 in five innings.

Down and Dirty jumped to the early lead in the bottom of the first inning when Lady Warrior pitcher Kim Hampton walked the first two batters then served up a three-run shot to left center fielder Myra Lattimore for a 3-0 lead.



In the bottom of the second inning, Down and Dirty got RBI singles from Lattimore, shortstop Alice Brown, first baseman Angela Jackson, left fielder Sandra Wesley and an RBI fielder's, choice from right center fielder Gaynell Henton to take a commanding 9-0 advantage.

RBI doubles from Lattimore and Wesley scored the final two runs of the game for Down and Dirty in the bottom of the fourth inning.

In the top of the fifth, the defense of Down and Dirty closed out the Lady Warriors after a lead off single by left fielder Margaret James on a slick double play by third baseman Rolanda McCumer who snagged a line drive off the bat of pitcher Kim Hampton. She fired back to first base to double off James. A pop fly out to Henton in right center ended the game.

The Bandits won game two with a 7-0 forfeit when the Trojans failed to appear by game time.

In the final match up of the evening, the Yellow Jackets stung the Ladyhawks 8-6 despite the lights going out at Gowdy Field every 10 minutes or so.

Terry K. Ray/Special to The Bayonet
Cearless Hathaway of Down and Dirty takes a swing during Monday's game.

The Yellow Jackets struck for four runs in the top of the first inning, on an RBI triple from second baseman Dee Slater, a run producing single by pitcher Vivian Ruffin and a two-run homer off the bat of first baseman Diane Lee.

The Ladyhawks cut the deficit in half 4-2, in the bottom of the second inning on a two-run blast to right field by third baseman Mary Aia.

In the bottom of the fourth inning, the Ladyhawks scored three runs to take a 5-4 lead. With two out, the Ladyhawks put runners on first and second.

A sharp grounder to shortstop Roni Rheinhart off the bat of Jackie Pitts turned into disaster for the Yellow Jackets. Rheinhart's throw went wide and ended up in right field allowing two runs to score instead of ending the inning. A single from shortstop Dorthey Tripplett scored Pitts from third before the inning ended.

The Yellow Jackets reclaimed the lead in the top of the fifth inning with a four run outburst. A lead off double to centerfield by Lee and a single by Sherri Garrett who came on in the fourth inning for Lisa Hernandez in right field put runners on first and third with no one out.

Third baseman Magen McGee hit a sacrifice fly to centerfield to score Lee from third.

One out later and runners on first and second, right center fielder Jackie Harris cracked a double to left field driving in Garrett. Rheinhart slipped a single past the Ladyhawk shortstop for an RBI.

The Ladyhawks cut the lead to 8-6 in the bottom of the fifth inning before the Yellow Jacket defense shut down the rally.

The only excitement in the final two innings for either team was finding their way to the dugout after the lights went out at least three more times before the game ended in the seventh inning.

The women will now gear up for the post tournament, which is scheduled to begin next week.

Windy weather bass often hit crankbaits

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

If you have to fish in the wind, use a crankbait.

That's the advice of tournament pro Denny Brauer, who has used the technique not only to catch large stringers of bass but also to win national tournaments.

"It's not the lure so much as it is what the wind bass," says Brauer, a member of the Evinrude Outboard's pro staff. "Wind ripples the surface of the water and causes bass to become more active. When the bass start feeding, a fast-moving lure like a crankbait is one of the most effective lures you can use."

Brauer remembers a national tournament on Tennessee's Lake Chickamauga several years ago. In practice he had located a huge school of bass suspended off a steep, stumpy ridge, but no amount of casting with a variety of lures could entice those fish to strike. On the final day of the tournament, with the wind blowing at near gale force, Brauer visited the spot again.

This time he found the bass had moved on top of the ridge, and a single drift across with a crankbait produced enough bass to win the event.

"Wind stirs baitfish around and sometimes actually moves them into shallow water," explains Brauer. "For whatever reason, this action causes the bass to start feeding, and because a crankbait closely resembles a baitfish, it's one of the best lures to use."

Shallow, stumpy ridges, windy points, and isolated bluffs that might trap baitfish are excellent places to fish in the wind, notes the Evinrude pro.

"Even with the wind, however, the basic rule of crankbait fishing, which is to use a lure that runs deep enough to hit the bottom, still applies," says Brauer. "Very often, also, the most effective retrieve will be one that brings the lure back in the direction of the current, rather than one that moves against it."

That means casting into the wind, and to make this a little easier, Brauer recommends using a heavier lure and casting sidearm rather than overhead so the lure stays low over the water.

"You can use a larger, heavier crankbait that sails against the wind easier," he says, "but if you cast it overhand and get it too high, it will probably still cause backlashes. If you can cast sidearm or even underhand so you don't have such an arc with the lure, you'll usually do much better. Using a limber rod will also make casting easier, too."

Military Police Activity

TAKE A BITE OUT OF CRIME®

The hot topic this week concerns pedestrians under the influence of alcohol.

A pedestrian, (military family member) was walking north on Highway 27 around 10:30 p.m. in the evening in the lane of traffic wearing dark color clothing.

The pedestrian was hit by a soldier who was traveling in that direction in his privately owned vehicle.

The soldier stopped and administered first aid to the pedestrian, and transported him to Martin Army Community Hospital's Emergency Room for further treatment.

The Military Police was notified about the accident and responded to the emergency room.

While talking to the pedestrian, the patrol noticed a strong order of an unknown alcoholic beverage coming from his person.

The patrol requested a legal blood alcohol test on the pedestrian. The pedestrian refused to take the test, he was charged under Georgia Code for being under the influence of alcohol and causing a traffic accident. The injuries the pedestrian received were minor. The soldier was not charged and he was released.

Another hot topic is unlawful discharge of a firearm. A staff sergeant was cited for discharging his firearm into the air at his barracks on Fort Benning in the late evening hours.

The staff sergeant was apprehended and transported to the Provost Marshal's Office and charged for the offense of unlawful discharging of a firearm.

It is illegal to discharge a weapon or firearm in the housing area, barracks or any unauthorized area on Fort Benning, unless you are in a hunting area or private owned weapon range. Anyone violating the post policy on weapon regulation, will be cited under Article 134 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

Other activities included two cases of driving under the influence of alcohol and 10 cases of traffic accidents.

There were three cases of shoplifting reported at the exchange facilities.

Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best —Give Crime Arrest."

Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police station at 545-5223 or 545-5224 or the "Crime in the Progress" line at 545-5222.

ask the judge

Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Q: (Husband): My wife and I are separated. She is always threatening to sell my property such as the television, stereo and video cassette recorder. Even worse, she calls my commander at home and complains that I don't give her enough money, even though I give her more than my basic allowance for quarters. I'm afraid she is going to ruin my career. What should I do?

(Wife): My husband and I are separated. He never gives me enough money to raise our child, and I don't have a job. I always have to call my husband's commander in order to get money out of him, which is humiliating to say the least. What should I do?

A: The answer to both of these questions may be a separation agreement. Such an agreement is a binding contract between the husband and wife that establishes the rights and responsibilities of the parties.

Specifically, it resolves issues such as who gets what property and who pays which bills. More importantly, the separation agreement can set the specific amount of support which one spouse pays the other. If there are children involved, the agreement can establish who gets custody and how often the noncustodial parent may visit the child.

Q: Why is a separation agreement desirable?

A: From the wife's perspective, it protects her from the uncertainty of not knowing when her husband will send the support.

Typically, the separation agreement provides that the husband will pay a certain amount on a specific day. It provides further that if a husband is late on his payment and the wife has to retain a lawyer to get the money, the husband has to pay the legal fees. The most effective guarantee, however, is found in Army Regulation 608-99, which states that the commander will enforce all valid agreements between the parties.

If the soldier fails to pay the amount specified in the agreement, the commander can order the soldier to pay. If the soldier still refuses to pay, the commander may prosecute the soldier under the Uniform Code of Military Justice for failure to obey a lawful order.

The separation agreement is also beneficial for the husband, in this case. All too often, commanders are forced to respond to allegations from spouses that soldiers are not paying enough support, that the spouse has "the" car, etc.

When confronted with such charges, soldiers can show their commanders exactly what they have agreed to do. If the soldier can prove through canceled checks or money order receipts that he or she has provided the support in the agreement, the soldier can protect himself or herself from adverse action from the commander.

Also, the separation agreement can protect the soldier from disputes over who gets what property because the agreement will specify who gets what.

Q: How do you get a separation agreement?

A: The best way to approach a separation agreement is to make an appointment with the Judge Advocate General's office. Both spouses are entitled to JAG services, but potential conflicts of interest are avoided by making sure that each spouse is represented by a lawyer from a different division. Prior to your meeting with the JAG lawyer, you must complete a worksheet on separation issues that is available at the JAG office.

ask dr fit

U.S. Army Physical Fitness School

Q: I recently relocated here form Fort Lewis, Wash. I miss my cup of cafe mocha from Starbucks because it seemed like a good way to get the day started without the calories. Is this true?

No. Perhaps part of the impetus behind the coffee beverage boom is to satisfy the snack or dessert craving.

Some coffee beverages made with enough milk and syrup match the calories in the big desserts. For example, a large cafe mocha from Starbucks made with whole milk and the syrup contains 409 calories and 31 grams of fat (almost 1/2 daily allotment).

The 409 calories are about 100 more calories and three times the fat content of a wedge of devils' food cake with chocolate icing.

You are also better off having a half cup of Haagen-Dazs super premium ice cream than the cafe mocha.

Coffee latte made with whole milk and topped with whipped cream and grated milk chocolate supplies some 350 calories and 20 grams of fat.

Q: My mother always told me to avoid potatoes and bread when dieting. Is that still true?

A: Americans have come a long way in their knowledge of nutrition during the last two decades. In the early 1970s, almost 50 percent of consumers thought potatoes were "fattening."

Today, some 99 percent of the consumers recognize that they are low-fat, high-carbohydrate and fit into a healthy food program.

Q: I have heard that drinking coffee is bad for you. Is it?

A: Despite years of speculation and research, scientists are unable to show that coffee drinking contributes to such chronic diseases as heart disease or cancer, so java lovers can rest easy on that point.

Pregnant women may want to cut back to a cup or so of coffee a day if they tend to drink more.

Q: Have you heard the latest technique to putting a spark in your love life — exercise?

A: Yes I have. According to the University of California, San Diego, which conducted some undercover research, there is evidence that regular exercise can do even more for you and your spouse than get in shape. It can also enhance your love life.

Coast Guard issues boating advisory

U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary

The recent rains in the area have caused the Chattahoochee River to rise well above its normal level.

Combined with damn releases and stream runoff, the Chattahoochee will have some strong currents both on the surface and underwater.

As the water level returns to normal, trees and other underwater obstacles that were forced into the river and lodged on the bottom will be closer to the surface.

Many may not be visible; others that may appear to be a small tree limb could be a whole tree or tree trunk.

Boaters using the river or local lakes in the next few weeks should use extreme caution until they learn where the river has changed or underwater obstacles were created.

The U.S. Coast Guard Station in Eufaula has checked the aids to navigation (buoys and day markers) from Columbus to Eufaula and replaced those torn down, destroyed or off station.

The unit will commence operations south of Eufaula this week. Boaters traveling the river should have no problems if they stay with in the channel markers.

One area of Fort Benning where boaters should use caution is the mouth of Upatoi Creek and the river.

The heavy rains and resulting strong currents in this area have shifted and moved the large sandbar on the river and sand and rock from the Upatoi into the main channel.

This past week the water depth registered approximately eight feet in center channel; the normal depth in this area is in excess of 15 feet. As the river returns to normal levels this area's depth may become less, as the bottom continues to shift and adjust to the current.

The channel buoys have been adjusted in some areas. Boaters should stay well within the channel while in this area.

Additional information about the river and boating safety programs can be obtained by contacting J.R. Addington at 545-7649 or 568-1235.

Why don't you attend church?

By Jackie Feagin
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Most people give a shame-faced look and a statement of intent about going next Sunday

reflections

How many excuses have people given you about not attending church?

I've heard so many that it's hard to remember them all. Most are usually given with a shamefaced look and a statement of intent about going "next Sunday," but relegating something to the future or the past is a pleasant way of not dealing with it today. It is a discipline to regularly worship.

Participating in church is similar to running: one time may provide you with some benefit, but the real growth comes in how much you choose to run over the long haul. Most people who shun church, do so because it involves effort.

The benefits of worship for one person are directly proportional to how much you put into the people of God.

If you think about it, almost everything that happens in a community of faith is focused on everybody except yourself.

When a church prays, it prays about situations in the community or the world or in the lives of individuals, but always it is the community which prays, not just the person.

When a church sings, all voices, sweet or odious, blend together to praise God. When a church shares in an act such as taking an offering or coming to the Eucharist, all people come.

When a church conducts a mission, all members are invited to give their time and talents toward the completion of the project.

In this communal aspect of faith lies the strength of the church, because the whole is not dependent on the strength of one, but one can be dependent on the strength of the whole.

Paul addressed this idea in I Corinthians, and linked the church to the human body. He wrote, "....so that there is no disharmony in the body, but all the parts have a common care of one another. If one part suffers, all the parts suffer with it. If one part receives an honor, all parts can share its joy (I Cor. 12: 25-26)."

This is what I think most people who don't attend church are trying to avoid; giving up themselves for the good of others.

It takes time and commitment to share other's burdens or to be joyful in other's triumphs, but most of all, it takes a conscious effort on your part to not think of your needs.

The irony of the situation is that most people who regularly worship that after developing that discipline, their own needs begin to be met in ways they could not have previously imagined.

As they draw on the faith assets of the church community; others pray for them when they are in crisis or support them when they are in need, simply because there is a bond forged in and by God who ties together people who pray, sing, study, and praise.

Indeed, we become a part of one body, yet without that body, we are never complete on our own.

Martin Luther said, "He lives the best who does not live to himself; and he lives the worst who lives to himself."

Commit yourself to attending church this week, and realize that the power to sustain yourself can be found by participating with others in a community of faith.

'Rainbows' offers help to victims of divorce

By Jackie Feagin
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Rainbows For All God's Children offers help to children and youth who have experienced a death or divorce in their families.

The program is offered at Fort Benning through the Chaplain Family Life Center. Adult leaders meet in small groups with children of similar ages.

They provide support and guide the children as they share and nurture each other through this painful transition.

"The program has touched the lives of more than 350,000 young people in the United States and in 10 foreign countries," states Chaplain Robert Thompson, the program coordinator on Fort Benning. "You might say it's been amply field tested and found very effective."

Rainbows is not counseling or therapy, Thompson is quick to point out.

"Counseling involves a professionally trained person working to solve problems," he said. "The grief and loss, which death and divorce bring to kids, are not problems. They are normal reactions and part of everyone's life. "

What Rainbows does, is offer the support of a caring adult and other children who have experienced the same kind of loss.

Rainbows began last spring. The groups met once a week for an hour for six weeks .

"The children really seem to like it," notes Thompson as he looks over the evaluation forms the children and parents filled out.

One question asked, "How has Rainbows helped you?" One 8-year-old boy wrote, "I can trust someone." A 14-year-old wrote, "It helps me understand why I'm angry." Another one replied, "It taught me what to do with my feelings."

Parents commented on good results. One mother reported that her children had to miss the fifth meeting, and they were very upset about that. Another mom, on active duty, wrote, "I hope there is a [Rainbows] program where we move to this summer."

Rainbows will take place this fall after school starts. It is open to any child or teen whose mother or father is on active duty.

"A rainbow is waiting out there for all children who grieve, " said Thompson. "Rainbows helps to heal the hurt, and this the theme and the purpose of the program."

To ask a question about the program, register your children, or to refer a friend, call thompson at the Family Life Ministries Center at 545-1760 or 545-5301.

Camp Joy offering youth rally Aug 12 to14

By Jacqueline Feagin
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Fort Benning youths can participate in a Youth Rally at Camp Joy Aug. 12 to 14.

This rally is open to the first 130 youths in grades six to 12 to register at any chapel on Fort Benning.

"You are the light of the world," is the theme for the rally.

Youth rally leaders said that their goal is to energize youths to be a positive force in their home, school, community and church and through fun and fellowship they pray to accomplish this goal.

Leaders have contracted experts in several fields to run workshops during the rally. Each workshop will be offered at least three times to provide individual attention.

There will be a guest appearance by a member of the RedStixx. Several local musical groups are scheduled. There is a nonrefundable deposit of $10 for the first member in each family and $5 for each additional member. The rally is sponsored by the Fort Benning Unit Ministry Team.

For additional information, contact Master Sgt. Muriel Fish at 545-4966.

SNIPER SCHOOL

Invisible shooters learn to wait, watch for perfect shot

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

They may be right on target — but as Sniper School students, these shooters still might miss their mark.

All students must qualify expert as a prerequisite for the course, but there's a lot more to it than just shooting well.

To graduate, students must not only shoot well, they must shoot far, and they must be able to do it without being detected. To do this, they learn not only to shoot, but to see — and to avoid being seen.

"A sniper doesn't shoot just anybody; he shoots at a selected target," said Master Sgt. Edwin B. Nelson, an instructor and the noncommissioned officer in charge of the course.

"So a sniper, though mostly thought of as a shooter, will spend the majority of his time looking for a target, not shooting at it," he said. "He's a good source of intelligence."

The course begins with the basics, Nelson said. Students always shoot from the prone supported position, relying on the accuracy of the M-24 Sniper Weapon System. Using something solid to support the weapon is important, Nelson said, because snipers often have to observe their targets for long periods of time.

The students learn to estimate the range of targets from 200 to 900 meters away, to judge the effect wind will have on the flight of the bullet, and to set the sights accordingly, Nelson said.

The students train and operate in two-man teams, with one shooter and one observer who records the sight setting and result of every shot.

But no sniper can hit a target if he can't see it, so the students are taught to look for unnatural colors, shapes, patterns or textures that contrast with the background, Nelson said.

"You have to get your eyes and brain adjusted so you can take one sweep with the binoculars and your eye will be attracted to a particular place," he said.

The students are tested with a target detection exercise during which they must locate and identify objects partially hidden within a given area of terrain.

"One of the main things you've got to look for is something that's got a straight line to it, because Mother Nature didn't make anything completely straight," said Cpl. Jesse L. Benes, a student from the 2nd Battalion, 7th Infantry Regiment, at Fort Stewart, Ga.

Equally as important as identifying your target is making sure you don't become one, so the students learn as much about hiding themselves as they do about detecting others.

Each student makes a camouflage, or "Ghillie" suit from a utility uniform, reinforced with canvas in front and sewed with netting on the back. They thread terrain-colored burlap strips through the netting and add leaves and branches to help them match the environment.

The students then test their suits, and their stealth, in a "stalking" exercise, in which they must move 500 to 600 meters toward a target and fire two shots without being detected by an instructor.

"You've got to be very patient and move slow — like a snake," Benes said.

Pfc. Sean McCrossan, a student from the 2nd Battalion, 325th Airborne Infantry Regiment, at Fort Bragg, N.C., was spotted after his first shot because the vegetation he had stuck in his hat was wilted.

"I could have stopped and gotten more camouflage," he said.

Taking the shot too soon, even if it was a good one, got him.

"I've learned to be patient and to take the time to get the right shot," McCrossan said.

That seems to be the mark of a good sniper.

FACT:

The camouflage Ghillie suit, which enables its wearer to blend into the natural surroundings, was inspired by English gamekeepers, called Ghillies, who originally designed the suit to help them catch poachers.

to change commander

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Command of the 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, will change hands today during 9 a.m. ceremony on Dickman Field in Harmony Church.

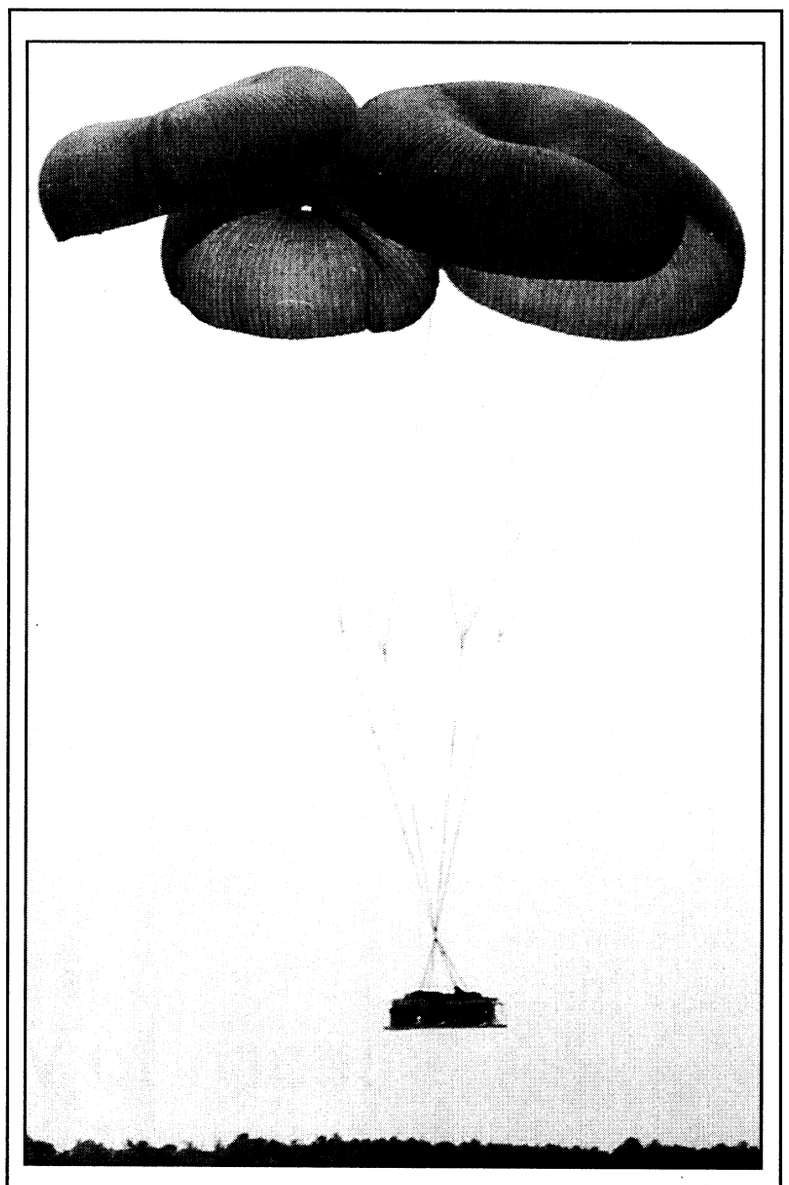
Lt. Col. Edward M. Cook III, last assigned as the deputy chief of staff for operations, Department of Army, Washington, D.C., will take command from Lt. Col. Roy H. Adams Jr.

Cook is a distinguished military graduate of Eastern Washington State University and was commissioned as a second lieutenant of infantry in May 1978. He has been assigned in various command and staff positions in the United States, Korea and Germany.

His awards and decorations include four awards of the Meritorious Service Medal, the Army Commendation Medal, the Parachutist Badge, the Canadian Parachutist Badge and the French Commando Badge.

Cook and his wife, Kelly, have a daughter, Andi, and a granddaughter, Alex.

Adams has commanded the 1st Battalion since July 1992. His next assignment is with the U.S. Army Regional Training Team, Fort Hood, Texas, assigned for duty with the 256th Infantry Brigade in LaFayette, La.



He was commissioned a second lieutenant of infantry from the University of Alabama in 1971.

He served with the 101st Airborne Division in Vietnam and the 1st Armored Division during Operation Desert Storm.

Adams holds an advanced degree form University of South Alabama in public administration. His military schooling includes the Infantry Officer Basic Course, the Armor Officer Advanced Course and the U.S. Air Force Command and Staff College.

Among his awards and decorations are the Bronze Star with "V" device with two oak leaf clusters, Meritorious Service Medal with one oak leaf cluster, the Army Commendation Medal with one oak leaf cluster, the Combat Infantryman Badge, Ranger Tab and the Senior Parachutist Badge.

Adams and his wife, Amy, have two children.

'Panthers' go to the desert

By Dennis J. Fedder
101st Abn. Div. (Air Assault) 40th PAD

FORT CAMPBELL, Ky. — The "Panthers" of the 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment of the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, made history when they entered "The Box" June 4 with the 3rd Brigade Task Force from Fort Campbell, Ky., as part of the National Training Center Rotation 94-90.

Rotation 94-90 made history for two reasons. First, it was the 150th rotation to train at NTC; second, it was the first time a light infantry battalion was supported by a heavy mechanized unit.

Because of the wide-open desert area at Fort Irwin, NTC is usually thought of as an armor unit's training ground.

According to Spc. Tim Nickell, a gunner with A Company, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment, there were only about 30 tanks in the task force from Fort Benning. He added that usually there are about 60 tanks.

"We have to think where military doctrine is taking us," said Capt. Michel Butler, Company A, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor commander. "We have to realize light forces augmented by heavy (forces) is becoming a high priority because of increasing situation around the globe where power and speed are necessary."

The first mission of the maneuver phase for the battalion was a movement to contact, according to Butler.

"We needed to maneuver to the 101st while destroying enemy elements along the way," he said.

Butler added that his company was designated the killer element.

"Being designated the killer means we led the assault to gain defensible terrain, so the rest of the battalion could maneuver and destroy the main body of the enemy and eventually link up with the 101st."

The days and nights following the movement to contact mission showed the battalion forming into defensive posture. The goal was to defend their battle positions, destroy the enemy and prevent penetration of the task force's rear boundary area.

This was accomplished by sending scouts out to provide security and report enemy activity.

This made for a long days and nights of searching out and destroying the enemy.

"The essence of being a tanker is getting no sleep, servicing the tank and fighting the battle," said Pvt. 2 Brian Ronan, a Company D, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment, M-1A1 driver. "During all of this, we need to control our adrenaline. If we can't control it, we just might get killed, simulated or real."

The enemy the soldiers faced over the desert was the famed opposing force from Fort Irwin, Calif. This opposing force doesn't just "hit the desert" once a year as the rotational units do, they're there for every rotation.

"The OPFOR pretty much picks the terrain," Nickell said. "Winning out here is pretty hard because they know every inch of the place. They know all the key terrain and how to use it to their advantage."

"The M-1 weighs 63 tons, can travel up to 60 miles per hour, has 120mm cannon, a .50-caliber machine gun and two 7.62mm machine guns," Ronan said. "The enemy would need to hit our tracks to disable us, then we'd become the most heavily armored bunker known to man."

According to Sgt. 1st Class Don Sanks, a 2nd Platoon sergeant from 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment, there was an even bigger and more demanding problem to overcome.

"Most people don't understand how much work it takes to get a tank ready," Sanks said. "A lot of work and a lot of maintenance goes into it. You have to check the tank from the top to the bottom almost every time you stop the tank because you are always losing a bolt or something. Inspecting your tank can take from a quick 15 minutes visual inspection to a more in-depth inspection that could last several hours.

"You could lose a lot of tanks without even a single enemy shot being fired just because the time was not taken to pull maintenance," Sanks continued. "A soldier will keep the tank running if he's given the time he needs."

The weather at NTC itself is an opponent. Dust storms hindered and sometimes stopped the bore sighting of the M-1's main guns, and digging fighting positions was a fight in itself against Mother Nature.

Heat injury numbers occasionally ran very high under 100-degree heat of the desert sun.

Ronan went on to say, "Here at NTC, you're in the middle of nowhere. When that sun goes down, there's nothing to trap the heat in and when the sun goes up there's nothing to trap the cold, so if you like a hot/cold environment with strong wind and sand in your food, then NTC is the place for you."

NCOA changes hands

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Command Sgt. Maj. Willie G. Wells succeeded Command Sgt. Maj. Allan R. Halstead as commandant of the Henry Caro Noncommissioned Officer Academy Thursday during a 1:30 p.m. change of command ceremony at the academy, Building 880.

Halstead has headed the NCOA since July 1992 and is retiring from the Army after 28 years of service.

Wells comes to the academy after serving as command sergeant major of the 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Training Brigade.

Wells' infantry assignments during his career include Germany and Vietnam. In Vietnam, he served with the 1st Battalion, 52nd Infantry, 23rd Infantry Division, at Chu Lai.

Wells has a bachelor's degree in business administration from Troy State University and a master's degree in management.

His military schools include the Basic Noncommissioned Officer Course (honor graduate), Army Precommission Course, Advanced Noncommissioned Officer Course (distinguished honor graduate) and the Sergeants Major Academy.

Wells and his wife, Mamie, have two children.

• Operation Cobra began with the main attack just west of St. Lo made VIII Corps on the right and XIII Corps to the left.

There was a massive preparation for this attack including more than 3,000 planes, 1,500 of which were heavy bombers from Eighth Air Force.

• Russian units captured Lublin, Poland, 85 miles southeast of Warsaw, thus splitting the German armies in Poland east of the Vistula and San Rivers by cutting their north-south communications.

• A landing force composed of the 2nd and 4th Marine Divisions, numbering 15,600 men, landed at the island of Tinian.

• U.S. forces crossed the base of Orote Peninsula on Guam's west coast, cutting off the islands largest airfield. 2,000 Japanese were reported killed following a strong counter-attack.

• More than 500 POWs captured by American troops in Normandy arrived at the Fort Benning POW camp. A large percentage of the POWs were used for work projects on the reservation.

RTB: command changes

Church and his wife, Sarah, have two sons, Nicholas and Bill.

"As is always the case, we are very fortunate at Fort Benning that as one great command team departs, another one arrives to take their place," White said while speaking at the ceremony. "Colonel Galen Jackman and his wife Cathy make up such a team."

Before serving for CATD, Jackman served with the 82nd Airborne Division; 25th Infantry Division; U. S. Army Missile Command and the 1st Special Forces Operations Detachment.

Jackman earned a bachelor of arts degree in history from the University of Nebraska and a master of science degree in aquisition and contract management from the Florida Institute of Technology. He attended the Command and General Staff College and the Industrial College of the Armed Forces.

Jackman is authorized to wear the Master Parachutist Badge, Air Assault Badge and the Expert Infantryman Badge.

He has been awarded the Defense Meritorious Service Medal with two oak leaf clusters, Army Commendation Medal with two oak leaf clusters and the Army Achievement Medal.

Jackman and his wife have two sons, David and Patrick.

During the ceremony, Church was awarded the Legion of Merit Medal by White for his service to Fort Benning and RTB.

In his closing remarks, Church gave thanks. "The greatest debt of thanks is owed to the ranger instructors," he said. "Their commitment, professionalism and tenacity are truly phenomenal."

Jackman's command began with his remarks to the brigade.

"I can think of no finer way to serve my country than to command this brigade," Jackman said.

Fans enjoy country concert

All ages gather to hear down-home entertainment

By Jerrie Macintire

Jerrie Macintire/Special to The Bayonet
Fans relax on the field at Doughboy Stadium.

Country music fans of all ages gathered at Doughboy Stadium Saturday for some refreshing down home entertainment on a sultry summer day.

Around 4,000 fans gathered on the bleachers and the football arena's infield in the heat of the afternoon to hear favorite selections from country music stars Steve Wariner, Deborah Allen and Daron Norwood.

Fans of all ages arrived with sun shades, hats, folding chairs and blankets for lounging during the outdoor show, which was "the most successful concert Fort Benning has ever had," according to Sgt. Maj. Allen D. Thrower of the Directorate of Community Activities.

A host of volunteers ensured the success of the concert, Thrower said.

Those helping coordinate the event include the Better Opportunity for Single Soldiers organization; the 535th Engineer Detachment, the 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital, the 608th Ordnance Company, the 104th Transportation Co., members of the Rangers Indoctrination Program and DCA soldiers.

"Volunteers like these help make us the best Army installation in the world," Thrower said.

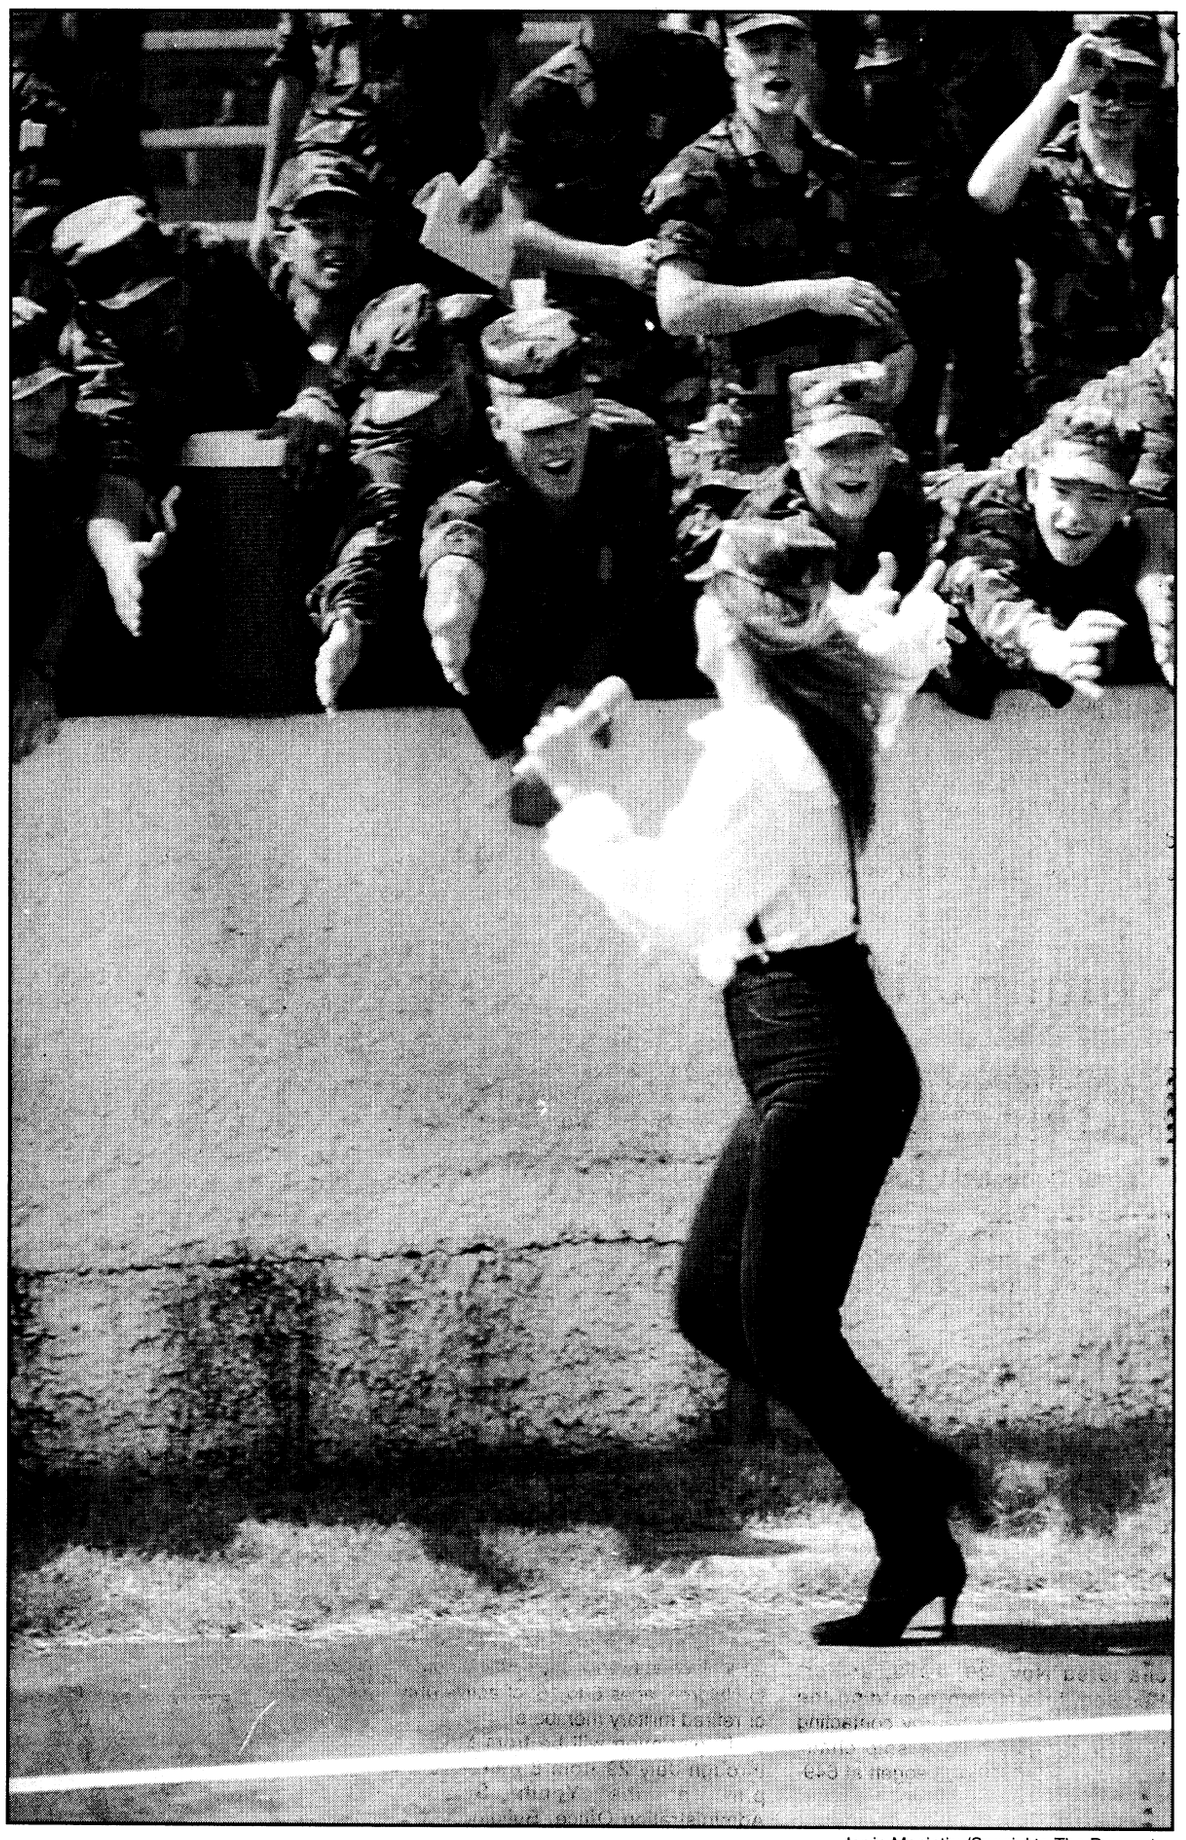
"People at Fort Benning are there when you need them," he added.

The concert provided common ground for single soldiers, couples, families with children and mature country music fans who passed the humid afternoon listening to a sampler of country favorites.

Dave Kelly of local country music radio station Kissin 99.3 helped emcee the production featuring Allen, Norwood and Wariner.

Wariner, a noted vocalist with more than 10 No. 1 singles to his credit, stirred the audience with a sampling of some of his favorite songs including "Lonely Women," "Some Fools Never Learn" and "Where Did I Go Wrong?"

As a surprise for the audience, Wariner stepped aside for one number and invited his guitarist, who is also his brother, to sing.



Atlanta singer Norwood demonstrated his charismatic style of entertaining, honed through years of church performances under the watchful eyes of his father, a Baptist evangelist.

Norwood has just released "If It Wasn't for Her."

Among other selections, Allen sang a personal favorite, "Baby I Lied," a Grammy nominee that vaulted her to celebrity status in 1984.

Proceeds from the concert will benefit the Morale, Welfare and Recreation program as well as the BOSS organization.

Corporate sponsors were Miller, AT&T and 7-Up.

Commissary focuses on customer service

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet©

Although the Fort Benning Commissary serves about 80,000 patrons for a sales volume of more than $4 million per month, Commissary Officer Benjamin Wainwright said the key to success is serving individual needs.

"Customer service is very important to us," said Wainwright.

The commissary serves customers by offering special meat cutting services, by arranging deli party platters at patrons' requests, and by special ordering some products, he said.

Wainwright said commissary personnel welcome suggestions in writing or in person, and patrons may reach his office by using the telephone at the identification desk at the front of the store.

Four boxes for comment cards are located throughout the store and provide an open forum for suggestions or to request special order items, he said.

Customers regularly order items not normally stocked by the commissary; most of the time orders can be fulfilled in four to six weeks, according to Wainwright.

When special ordering an item, the number of the UPC symbol or bar code is helpful since the exact name and manufacturer are contained on the code, Wainwright said.

In addition to special ordering items, the commissary welcomes money-saving coupons.

For each coupon shoppers redeem, the manufacturer will reimburse the federal system 8 cents, which comes back to the Fort Benning Commissary, he said.

As a benefit to customers as well as community programs on Fort Benning, four promotional sales during the year help raise money while offering sales items.

In addition to a regular savings of 20 to 25 percent, voluntary price reduction sales and sale items displayed at the ends of aisles offer up to 47 percent savings.

The July Community Appreciation Sale conducted this month raised funds for the Morale, Welfare and Recreation fund as well as providing savings through mass purchasing power to commissary patrons. Last year, the same sale raised more than $30,000 for MWR.

Three other sales throughout the year aid different community programs designated by the post commander, Wainwright said. The next sale to benefit the Fort Benning Community is the October DCA Anniversary Sale.

As part of the customer service program, commissary employees will soon begin wearing red or blue smocks so patrons may readily identify personnel if they have a question.

Also in support of customer service, a $7.6 million renovation will begin in about one year, which will add 10,000 square feet of sales floor in addition to expanded produce and meat department. An in-house bank and a fresh bakery will also be included in the renovation, said Wainwright.

"We will be the first in (the Department of Defense) to have a full service bank inside the store," he said.

OWC offering welfare donations

Officers' Wives' Club

The Officers' Wives' Club of Fort Benning, a charitable organization that gives back to the community, is offering welfare funds to the community.

Over the years, the OWC has given out scholarships and donations to many private, non-profit organizations. To receive a donation, requests need to be submitted and approved by the OWC Board of Directors.

This year the majority of welfare funds will be disbursed during our November and April OWC Board of Directors' meetings. Requests for the November disbursement must be received no later than Nov. 1 and the April deadline must be received no later than April 3.

Should your organization wish to submit a request, include the following information:

- The amount of money requested
- The total amount of money needed
- Specific purpose of money requested
- Fund-raising efforts
- Other organizations you are requesting funds from
- Number of military affected
- The name and phone number of your point of contact

Submit requests to: Officers' Wives' Club of Fort Benning, P.O. Box 51978, Fort Benning, Ga. 31995-1978.

voting news

Federal Voting Assistance Program

How important is one vote? While you may consider its importance in terms of an action that contributes to the overall good of the country, you should also consider its importance to you as a contributor to one of the world's most successful democracies.

One vote can make a difference. One vote could determine the outcome of any of the many races contested each year, particularly this federal election year when, on Nov. 8, Americans will go to the polls to elect 33 U.S. senators, 435 members of the U.S. House of Representatives and 36 governors.

Consider the historical precedents where one vote made all the difference.

• Draft extended: Imminent disaster was narrowly averted by a single vote, Aug. 12, 1941, when Congress extended the Selective Service Act of 1940 for another 18 months. Less than four months later, the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor, drawing the United States into World War II.

• Won by one: In 1800, Thomas Jefferson became president by one vote when a tie in the electoral college was resolved by the House of Representatives.

• Union expands: The states of Texas, California, Washington, Oregon and Idaho were all admitted into the Union by a margin of a single vote.

In a more contemporary example, consider the '92 race for California's 43 Congressional District, one of the closest races for the U.S. House of Representatives that year. On Nov. 3, when all the precincts reported the unofficial results, the Democratic candidate was leading by 1,234 votes. However, after the absentee ballots were counted, Republican Ken Calvert won by just over 500 votes.

At the more local level, one vote can have great impact as well. A prime example is the May 26, 1992, race for a judgeship seat in Arkansas County, Ark. After the first ballot count, incumbent Judge Bobby Ashcraft was declared the winner over challenger Sonny Cox by two votes. In a surprise reversal, after three previously unaccounted for ballots were tallied, a recount made Cox the winner by a single vote.

Two more ballots, one from a member of the armed forces and another from an overseas voter were received in the 10 day post-election period that Arkansas allows for ballots from overseas. The two additional ballots carried Cox decisively over the top by three votes, 2,933 to 2,930.

Martial artist brings skills to post

By Lois J. Olson
Special to The Bayonet

Young and old alike gathered at the Audie Murphy Fitness Center Monday evening to watch or participate in Kwang Jo Choi's demonstration of the martial arts form known as choi kwang-do.

This demonstration was part of a course offered by the Upper Iowa University Fitness Leadership Degree program, but it was open to the public.

Kwang Jo Choi, a 9th degree black belt, grandmaster and founder of choi kwang-do, demonstrated his various movement principles and showed how they differed from traditional martial arts methods. Choi's theories are based on applied biomechanics.

Choi was born March 2, 1942, in Tae Gu City, Korea. At the age of 12, he began formally studying martial arts under master instructor Dong Ju Li. Since then, he has dedicated his life to the study of martial arts. Choi served in the Republic of Korea Army where he taught combatives. He was later named Chief instructor for the Korean national police.

According to Choi, his form of martial arts has three goals:

- Self-protection
- Holistic health
- Character development

There is no tournament competition in choi kwang-do training because Choi believes realistic self-defense skills, health and character development should be the central focus of the training.

Choi kwang-do students not only learn practical self-defense methods, but they also learn to have unconquerable fighting spirits and confidence.

Upper Iowa University's emphasis on development of the whole person is much like the goals of choi kwang-do.

Choi kwang-do is a sample of the variety of courses offered by the university as part of its Fitness Leadership Degree program.

Other courses include numerous hand-to-hand combat systems, posture and relaxation, aerobics, flexibility training, anatomy, physiology and kinesiology (the study of human muscular movement).

Courses are open to military persons, their family members, Department of Army Civilians and Department of Defense personnel.

"The Fitness Leadership Degree program is unique because it is in line with current Army physical fitness doctrine, and it emphasizes practical hands-on training," said Maj. Marcus Alexander, of the U.S. Army Physical Fitness School.

Classes can be taken in the student's leisure time. Upper Iowa University develops courses around the student's schedule (including a soldier in the field).

Throughout the program, students will learn to master physical fitness techniques and to train others.

Upper Iowa University is one of the many resources offered by Fort Benning to improve the quality of life for soldiers and their family members. According to Dr. Ed Thomas, Director of Upper Iowa University, Fort Benning, the university's primary mission is to deliver a world-class fitness leadership curriculum that gives top quality instruction, flexibly scheduled courses taught by instructors who have a sincere interest in serving the Fort Benning community.

For more information about courses or tuition assistance, contact Thomas at 685-9555 or visit the UIU office at Building 2612, Soldiers' Plaza.

ON POST

Army Community Service — Army Community Service is soliciting any organizational or activity interested in conducting a food drive for the Emergency Food Locker program. Contact Alfonso Deane at 545-2536, 545-7517 or 545-4043.

National Contract Management Association — The Follow Me Chapter of the National Contract Management Association recently installed its elected officers for 1994-95: Roy Leggett, president; Charlene Cowman, vice-president; Angela Holloway, secretary; Mae Marsh, treasurer; and John Machoveck, national director.

The chapter was formed and chartered Nov. 20, 1993, at Fort Benning. Information regarding the chapter can be obtained by contacting Virginia Wright, membership chairwoman at 545-3110 or Leggett at 649-1092.

Daughters of the U.S. Army — Members of the Daughters of the U.S. Army meet monthly for luncheons at a variety of locations in the community. DUSA is open to daughters and granddaughters of active duty and retired commissioned and warrant officers in any branch of service. To join, call Lani Longarzo at 682-6754.

Red Cross car wash — The American Red Cross Youth Volunteers will have a car wash July 30 from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at Sam's Wholesale Club on the Airport Thruway .

The cost is $2 for cars and $2.50 for vans and trucks. Tickets can be purchased at the Red Cross office, Martin Army Community Hospital, Room 721, or at the Car Wash.

For more information, call 544-3213 or 544-4223.

Santa's Castle volunteers needed — Volunteers are needed to help with different jobs at Santa's Castle. Santa's Castle provides toys and books to needy military children at Christmas. For more information, call 545-1233 and leave a message.

NAF property auction — There will be a property auction Aug. 9 at 10 a.m. at the Outdoor Recreation and Equipment Rental and Storage, Building 1704. The items to be sold include a camper, bass boat with motor, furniture, cash registers, computer equipment, sleeper sofas, beds, pictures, bedspreads and much more.

The items will be available to preview Aug. 5 and 8 from 9 a.m. to noon.

For more information, call John Dorsey at 545-2348.

Warrant officer monthly meeting — The Fort Benning Chapter of the Warrant Officer Association, "Forever Forward," conducts meetings every first Wednesday of the month. The chapter discusses current issues and upcoming events, affecting the chapter and the warrant officer corps. The next meeting will be Aug. 6 at 11:30 a.m. at the Fort Benning Officers' Club.

All members and nonmembers are invited. For more information, call Chief Warrant Officer 5 Pedro Arroyo at 545-4221 or 545-4613 or Chief Warrant Officer 2 Tony Mafnas at 545-3256 or 561-2109.

Mandatory child enrollment screening — It is mandatory that any child entering Georgia schools for the first time be given a dental, vision and hearing examination. The results of the exam will be entered on a Georgia Department of Human Resources Certificate of Ear, Eye and Dental Examination, which must be presented to the school upon enrollment. It is also necessary that the child's immunization record be up to date. Parent should take the immunization record to the hospital or health department at the time of the screening exam.

For a screening appointment, call 544-3350 at Martin Army Community Hospital or your county health department.

Volunteers needed — Volunteers are sought to help paint the Child Advocacy Center. When completed, the center will help reduce trauma for child abuse victims.

To volunteer, call 327-9612 or 324-7440 and leave a message.

Youth soccer camp — Youth Services will conduct a summer youth soccer camp from Aug. 1 through 5, 8 to 11 a.m. each day. The camp, to take place at French Field, will be open to children, ages 6 to 15, of active duty or retired military members.

Registration will be from Monday through July 29 from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at the Youth Services Administration Office, Building 1056. Registration fee will be $25 for members and $30 for nonmembers. YS cards must be presented at time of registration. For more information, call 545-3070.

Red Cross opening — The Fort Benning Red Cross is currently accepting applications for the part-time position of night-duty worker. Applications will be taken until close of business today.

Call 545-5194 for details or visit Building 1699, at the corner of Vibbert and Ingersoll. Previous casework experience is preferred.

Dear John

Here's why you don't want a repair quote over the phone. A man brought his car in last Friday. He'd already had two phone quotes for fixing his transmission. One was for $500, the other for $425.

I put his car on the rack, saw that a fitting was loose at the top of the line, and tightened it. That's all he needed. Come see me.

Sincerely,
Jimmy at Generic

Michael Chiklis holds forth as 'The Commish'

By Jay Bobbin
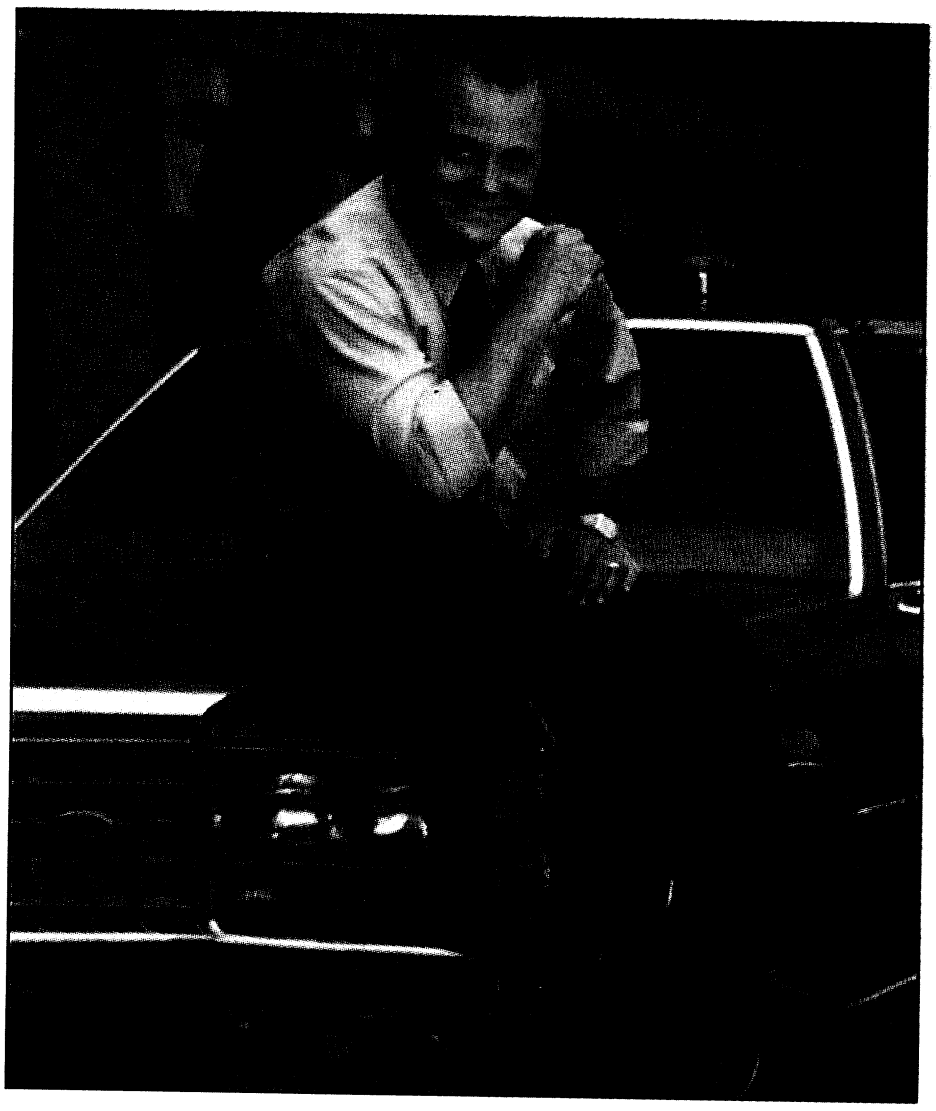
Tribune Media Services



He might be one of television's more low-key lawmen, but he clearly has endurance.

SPOTLIGHT

Michael Chiklis will begin his fourth year as "The Commish" — alias Tony Scali, loving family man and caring police commissioner of the fictional New York town of Eastbridge — in September on ABC. But, when the Saturday-night show resumes with new episodes, the pivotal question will revolve around the title character's survival.

In the final scene of the season finale two months ago, Scali was shot at point-blank range in his own home by a professional hit man. That killer had been hired by a vengeful convict arrested by Scali for the car-bomb murder of one of the latter's top officers, Stan Kelly (played by Geoffrey Nauffts, who has left the series). Though Tony's wife Rachel (Theresa Saldana) feared the worst as she sobbed uncontrollably over his fallen figure, it's a solid bet he'll survive, since the Stephen J. Cannell-produced program truly hinges on his personality.

However, word has it that he'll have to adjust to another professional change before long, since another of his most valued team members appears headed for an exit: Detective Cyd Madison (Melinda McGraw) reportedly is about to get a job offer that will allow her to oversee her own police department.

Michael Chiklis

"Basically," says the friendly Chiklis of forthcoming "Commish" stories, "Tony will face the biggest emotional and physical challenge of his life. There will be a new character named Dan Boylan, played by John Ottavino, who will help him get back into the groove (in the wake of the shooting). The changes for Tony are sort of appropriate, considering where I am in my own life now, with a brand-new baby girl (born last fall to Chiklis and his actress wife, Michelle Epstein). Having your own child puts you through some serious changes as a human being, so this has been a very, very big year for me. It's a perspective-and-focus thing, what you decide to put your energy toward, and what you will and won't put up with. Things that used to drive me out of my mind roll right off me now, because I don't have the time or the need to get upset about such things. However, I'm a 'softie' inside, so Tony always will be, too."

What: "The Commish"
When: Saturday on ABC

On the series, Tony has been a parent from the start — with son David, played by Kaj-Erik Eriksen, joined fairly recently by a baby sister — but Chiklis doesn't feel his own parenthood has altered his portrayal of that aspect all that much. "Not to sound like I'm tooting my own horn, but I think I was pretty close," he maintains.

"I've seen these kids (on the show) grow in a lot of ways, so I feel like I did pretty well with that part of the role. Still, I have to say that when I became a parent myself, I called my father and said, 'Dad, I have no idea what to do.' "

63rd Engineers keeping Fort Benning, Columbus safe

By Greg Smith
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The 63rd Engineer Company recently began construction of a firebreak located at Torch Hill Road and Benning Boulevard. The purpose of this project is to prevent fires from seriously threatening the surrounding community. Watch "Fort Benning Today" for highlights.

The Directorate of Community Activities hosted a country music concert at Doughboy Stadium Saturday. The concert featured Steve Wariner, Deborah Allen and Daron Norwood. "Fort Benning Today" will feature their performances.

USAIC-TV Schedule

Dealers to feature many items at

Collector's Show

Quality Collector's Shows Inc.

Dealers from all over the South will offer coins, currency, numismatic supplies, stamps, covers, philatelic supplies, sports cards, sports memorabilia, comics and other collectibles at a collector's show at Columbus Square Mall today, Saturday and Sunday.

Hours for the show are regular mall hours, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Friday and Saturday and 1 to 6 p.m. Sunday.

Admission to the show is free and free parking is available.

Many dealers will offer free verbal appraisals of collectibles.

Collectors of all levels of expertise, as well as interested noncollectors, are invited to come to buy, sell, trade or just browse among the thousands of items on display.

"It is great to be returning to Columbus and to see our many friends from central and south Georgia and Alabama who will be attending the show," said Richard Martin, show chairman for Quality Collector's Shows.

Columbus Square Mall is located at 3050 Macon Road in Columbus.

For more information, call the mall office at 561-6305.

The 'Phantom' is coming to the Fox

Atlanta Broadway Series

Andrew Lloyd Webber's The Phantom of the Opera, directed by Harold Prince and presented by Cameron Mackintosh and The Really Useful Theatre Company Inc., will have performances at the Fox Theatre in Atlanta, Oct. 1 through 30, for a limited return engagement of four weeks.

Telephone charge orders are accepted by calling (404) 817-8700 or (404) 249-6400, Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Based on the classic novel "The Phantom of the Opera" by Gaston Leroux, the musical tells the story of the hideously deformed phantom who lurks beneath the stage of the Paris Opera, exercising a reign of terror over all its occupants.

Since opening in London's West End in 1986, the show has broken every advance box office record and generated a record $18 million advance ticket sale prior to its January 1988 Broadway opening; a $15.3 million advance prior to its opening at the Ahmanson Theatre, Los Angeles in May, 1989; and a $15.2 million advance for the debut of this national touring production at the Auditorium Theatre, Chicago in June 1990.

GUEST HOUSE

Post names facility for 'caring leader'

LTG James Gavin's widow gratified he will not be forgotten

By Ruth J. Spaller
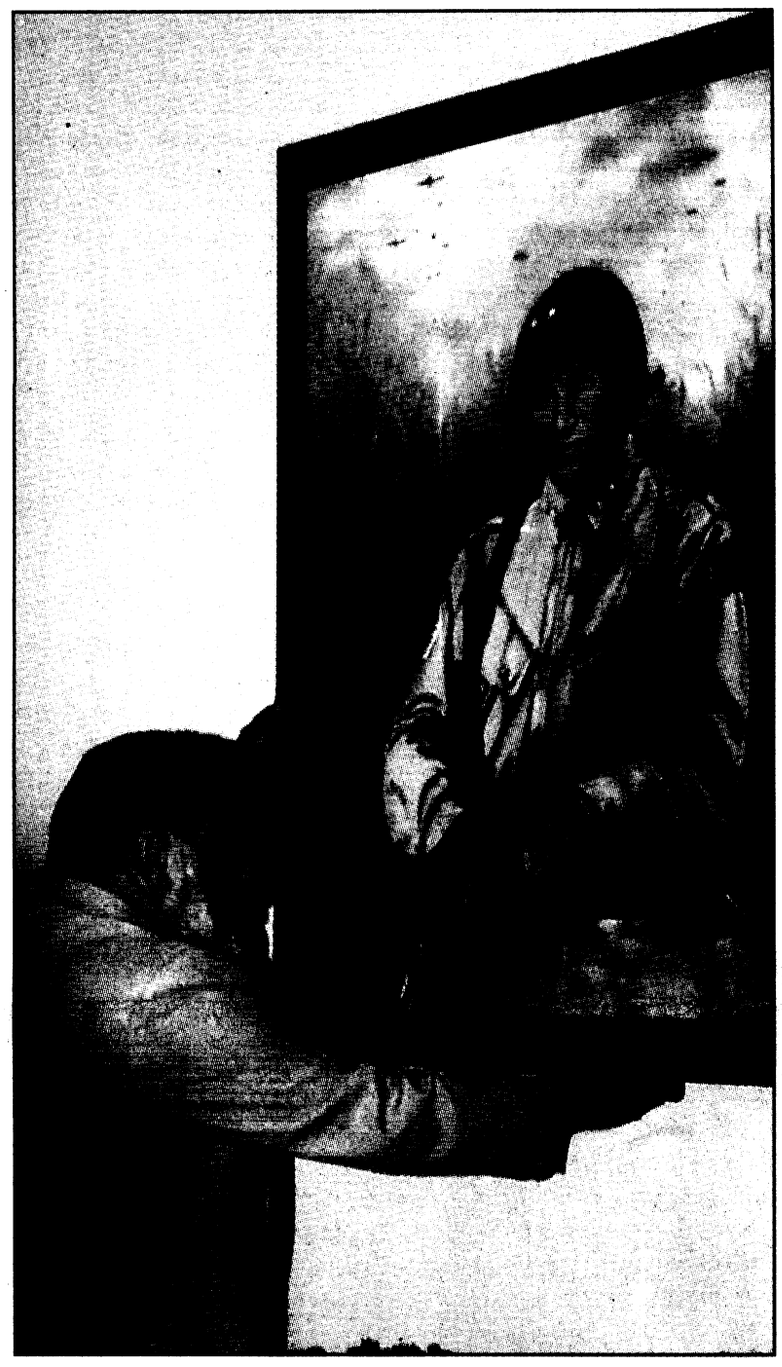
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning doubled its capacity to house visiting or newly arriving soldiers and their families with the opening of a new, 60-unit guest house July 22.

Named in honor of the late World War II Lt. Gen. James M. Gavin, a leader who "really cared about soldiers," the guest house is located on Ingersoll Street, within blocks of the Main Post Mini Mall, Burger King, theater, library and gym.



"The new guest house will greatly enhance our ability to serve soldiers and their families," said John Baggett, deputy director of Public Works.

The new building has 28 single rooms, 28 suites, one VIP suite and three rooms designed to accommodate people with disabilities, and each room has its own kitchenette, he said.

"This is not an ordinary guest house," said Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White. "It was designed for the soldiers, designed for their comfort and with quality.

"In the finest tradition of General Gavin, we are dedicating a guest house designed to take care of our soldiers, and to take care of their families," White said.

"It is not by accident that it is located here ... (this spot) was selected because it is in the heart of Fort Benning, with all the necessary conveniences for soldiers and their families located within walking distance," he said.

White said four state-of-the-art batting cages and a mini golf course are also soon to be built in that area.

"None of this costs the taxpayers one dime," said White, since it was built with user-generated money. The construction of the new guest house costs $2.9 million, paid for with nonappropriated funds.

Using Gavin as the namesake for the new facility was appropriate, White said, because Gavin "was not only a successful airborne combat commander, but he knew, he loved and he understood his soldiers."

As commander of the 505th Parachute Infantry Regiment and later as the commanding general of the 82nd Airborne Division, Gavin "led his soldiers from the front through some of the most historic and fierce battles of World War II," White said.

Gavin's widow, Jean, came from Osterville, Mass., to participate in the opening ceremony.

"I think it is especially fitting that this will be the billeting for soldiers and their families coming to and leaving the post," she said.

"The welfare and well-being of the troopers was always a primary concern with James," she said. "How pleased he would have been to know that this marvelous facility will be used by them and will bear his name.

"Just as the Army was his home, the soldiers were the sons he never had," she continued. "Whenever he met a soldier, whether it was in combat, in training or simply walking around post, he always asked of them in that low, quiet voice of his 'How's it going, son?' He really cared about soldiers, and that was not something he said in passing; he honestly cared very much.

"On behalf of the Gavin family, I want to thank you for the honor you have bestowed on James today," she said.

. "It is heartwarming and gratifying to know that he is not forgotten, and that now, with the naming of this hall, he'll be remembered in the future."

Powell to receive Doughboy Award

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff will be this year's recipient of the Doughboy Award.

Retired Gen. Colin L. Powell will receive the award at a ceremony at 5:15 p.m. Aug. 8 on York Field. The public is welcome to attend.

The Doughboy Award is a chrome-plated doughboy helmet worn by soldiers in the American Expeditionary Force during World War I and in the early days of World War II.

It is presented annually to a person who made a significant contribution to the infantry force, and it is presented on behalf of infantrymen, past, present and future.

The original award can be seen in the foyer of Infantry Hall.

Past recipients include Bob Hope, H. Ross Perot, Bill Mauldin, John O. Marsh Jr., Sens. John G. Tower, Warren B. Rudman and Robert J. Dole, and retired Gens. Frederick Kroesen, Aubrey Newman, Matthew B. Ridgway, William E. DePuy and retired Lt. Gen. David E. Grange Jr.

The term "doughboy" originated from the practice of rushing raw recruits to Europe in World War I. The term was originally used during the border conflicts prior to World War I in Texas, where soldiers trained along the Rio Grande and became covered in white dust of the adobe soil.

Mounted troops called them "adobes." This degenerated to "dobies," which became "doughboys."

Powell was appointed the 12th chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Department of Defense, Oct. 1, 1989, by President George Bush. He was reappointed for a second term in October 1991.

He was born in New York City April 5, 1937, and was raised in the South Bronx section of New York. He graduated from the City College of New York in 1958 and was commissioned a second lieutenant in the regular Army through the Reserve Officer Training Corps program.

Powell and his wife, Alma, have three children: Michael, Linda, and Annemarie.

Post hosts workshop about lead-based paints

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Army engineers, medical and safety representatives and specialists from around the country met at Fort Benning July 18 to 21 for the Army Lead-Based Paint Workshop.

Community awareness and the impact on Fort Benning family members who have been identified as living in quarters containing lead-based paint was one of the topics of discussion, and technical discussions on the Army's lead-based paint policy, risk assessment and testing and containment techniques.

"We can't forget the human factor in all of this," said Shauna Whitworth, chief of the Department of the Army's Family Liaison Office. "The ultimate goal is the safety of the families concerned. We want to know how this is affecting them. We want to know what their thoughts, hopes and fears are."

During the seminar, Whitworth talked to members of some 35 Fort Benning families.

"I was very pleased with what I found out," she said. "This can be a very emotional issue because it involves the safety of children, yet the families I spoke to did not let their emotions overcome them. They were very candid and had strong feelings, but were not emotional.

"They were also very well informed," she said. "Many took the initiative to go out and get information on their own through library research. It's always said that today's soldiers are the best ever; well, those soldiers sure pick some fine spouses."

Whitworth said one of the biggest concerns that family members displayed was a concern that their neighborhoods not be broken up.

"They would rather have the quarters with lead paint simply made safe rather than just limiting their occupancy to families without children. These people have a strong sense of community," she said.

> "The ultimate goal is the safety of the families concerned."
> — Shauna Whitworth
> Chief, Army Family Liaison Office

Whitworth said families fell into one of two groups — those who were immediately concerned with the issue, who had their children tested and got as much information as they could, and those families which were kind of overwhelmed and did nothing.

"I want to know how we can make people become more positively active and involved in the sense of community that so many families showed," she said.

She encouraged remaining Fort Benning families with children age 6 and under who have not had those children tested to do so. Martin Army Community Hospital is offering blood screening tests to any family that has concerns about their children being exposed to lead. Testing is offered through family practice and pediatric clinics.

Fort Benning's response to its lead-based paint problem was more than adequate, she said.

"Fort Benning is leading the way and its efforts are based on a true concern for the safety of soldiers and their families," Whitworth said. "Nothing has been held back or covered up. Information has been made available through the post newspaper, radio, television, fliers and town meetings to keep families factually informed.

Whitworth said she will use the post as a model for other posts deal with any problems they may be experiencing with lead-based paint.

A total of 8,000 individuals have begun receiving surveys to help determine the leisure needs of the Fort Benning community, according to Brian Smith, marketing director for the Directorate of Community Activities.

The survey, which consists of 54 questions, was developed by the Community and Family Support Center of the Department of Army and their contractor.

The survey was sent to active duty military members, family members, post civilian personnel and retirees. Each population group received 2,000 surveys, and individual participants were chosen by a random computerized selection process directed by the contractor, Smith said.

Arranged through the Department of the Army's Community and Family Support Center, the survey will provide direction for the funding of various quality-of-life programs at Fort Benning, according to Smith.

"We need full participation so we can make accurate decisions as to how to spend morale, welfare and recreation funds," he said.

"Participants are being asked to establish priorities on various programs that impact quality of life at Fort Benning. The results will determine the future of programs from recreational to Army Community Services and everything in between," he added.

Those participating in the survey will have a chance to receive one of four vacation promotional packages consisting of five days each to Destin, Fla., where Fort Benning maintains a resort. Each survey will include two matching tickets; the survey participant may return one ticket to the DCA along with the completed survey while retaining the matching ticket.

A random drawing of the tickets returned to the DCA will determine the vacation winners. Use of tickets instead of names will enable survey participants to remain anonymous, Smith said.

Winning ticket numbers will be published in The Bayonet Aug.26.

VARIOUS VOICES

What do you do to protect your valuables and property on post?

Sgt. Fernando L. Bowens, Company A, 324th Forward Support Battalion — "There's an inventory control sheet that we do. (It lists all serial numbers of valuables.) Also, I never leave my car unlocked and make sure it's registered through the provost marshal."

Lisa Bolden, family member — "We have an engraver so I put my Social Security number on everything and we keep jewelry and money in a safe-deposit box, not in the house."

Sgt. Kevin P. Terrill, Company A, 324th Forward Support Battalion — "If you're living in housing you make sure you've got your house locked up tight and make sure it's secure. Check windows. Since it's an open post, I take more care to make sure it's done."

Pvt. 2 James R. Lemmon, Company C, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment — "I lock my doors."

Sgt. 1st Class Merrell J. Johnson, Company C, 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment — "Make sure the door is locked if you live in quarters. Keep things like barbecue grills and toys in the backyard. In the barracks, make sure valuables are secured."

Sgt. 1st Class James Marks, Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "I keep the doors locked when I'm not at home. If there's something I'm not using, like a lawn mower or weed eater, I put it away.

No brotherhood of sweat on this post

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

commentary

How secure do you feel while living, working or playing on post?

Pretty darn secure, most people will tell you. And there's good reason for that. Incidents of crime are far below that of civilian communities of comparable size.

But don't get too smug. Don't take it for granted that just because you're a Benningite, you're safe and your property's secure.

After all, as Ms. Editor wisely noted with a wrinkle of her nose, "the Army reflects society."

I sure hate to think we do, from what I read in the newspapers, but I'm afraid when it comes to crime I have to agree with her.

Ask any thirsty golfer who is looking for a cold cup of water as he approaches the third hole on Lakeside. The water dispenser's been stolen.

Of course it's been missing for sometime now and what the hold up is in getting a replacement, I sure don't know; maybe a major purchase of this type needs Golf Council approval, or maybe golfers are being punished for not taking better care of their stuff. But anyway, we're victims of some yahoos who thought they needed the cooler more than the golfers.

Or what about the poor Infantry Officer Basic Course lieutenant who's staying in those swell rooms in Olson Hall?

Hey, his room has one of those high speed locks that can only be operated with some kind of card, so why not leave the old wallet on his bed while he goes out on a five-mile run? Guess what will be missing when he gets back?

Or you decide to go work out at Briant Wells field house. Just a bunch of good old boys and girls there like you who enjoy sweating.

So who's going to rip off my wallet there? Isn't there a brotherhood (or sisterhood) of sweat? Nope.

We got people with nothing better to do than hang around locker rooms waiting for some trusting sucker.

Got a shiny new car? Watch where you park it. Some thugs think it's cool to carve words on your hood with concrete blocks, or spray paint it, or just run a key along the side.

By the way, if that stuff happens to you off post, don't be driving your car on post, then putting in a claim. Won't work. The Military Police are wise to these scams.

Society's gotten so screwed up now that the wise person who's got a bunch of toys in his car — stereo, phone, radar detector, microwave oven, heck, I don't know — has learned to remove all evidence of those toys to keep hoodlums from breaking in and making these toys their own.

We're not even safe in our quarters. Leave for a couple of days and your prize belongings may be missing when you get back if you don't make suitable arrangements.

And if our own quarters happen to be the barracks, we need to be just as cautious, if not more so. Just ask the MPs how many times a roommate rips off his "buddy." They take credit cards, phone cards, identification cards and even blank checks.

It's amazing how much money a guy can spend with someone else's blank checks.

Snively's rule: "Don't trust nobody." Ya got to recognize there are thieves on post.

They may be the home-grown variety, or they may be from off post, figuring us Army guys are easy picking. So tighten up your security procedures. Avoid making the MP blotter as "victim," and help stomp out crime by reporting any suspicious activities.

But whatever, we need to take precautions.

letters

Rangers' action in Somalia noticed, praised by civilian

To the nine Army rangers and the other Army rangers who participated in Operation Restore Hope in Somalia, it is very rare that I write a letter like this. I was overcome with a lot of emotions and feelings watching the interview on NBC's Dateline.

I have the utmost respect and admiration for all of you and what you did in Somalia and what you are doing now. I'm sure it was hard for all of you to relive such painful memories, but I want to personally thank you for sharing your stories with the American public. I know it was very hard to keep all of your emotions and feelings on the inside.

I wish I had known Sgt. James Casey Joyce. He was a very remarkable person. He truly is an American hero and so are all of you.

When I saw his picture, I said to myself, "Why Lord, did you allow this big, strong, handsome, young gentleman to die at such a young age and leave behind a wife?" I don't know the answer. All I know is that the Lord decided to end his life here on Earth so he could spend eternity with him. Joyce died doing what he knew best to do and that was to help his fellow man.

I know all of you miss him very, very much. I hope none of you will ever have to go through anything like Somalia again.

I personally think all of you should have gotten out of Somalia sooner, but I know all of you were doing what you were told and were going by official orders. I didn't know the Army was such a very, very elite special group of men. I'm sure all of you are like a very close-knit family.

Time does and will heal the wounds. I hope someday to visit Arlington National Cemetery and visit Joyce's grave. I hope someday to possibly meet some of you. It would be an honor and a pleasure.

I guess the Army rangers are like the green berets and the Navy SEALS.

If any of you are ever in Texas, let me know. My phone number is (512) 836-5963 or (800) 375-3026. Fort Hood is not too far from Austin.

Thank you for risking and sacrificing your lives for this great nation that we live in. We take our freedom for granted here in the United States.

I found this out watching Desert Storm news coverage. Some of you gave the ultimate sacrifice — your lives — in Somalia.

My hope and prayer for all of you is that the Lord will watch over you, take care of you and keep you safe from any harm or injury. All of you are people whom I admire and respect very, very much. Thank you for all that you do.

DCA gives thanks to volunteers, sponsors

The country concert July 16 at Doughboy Stadium would not have been a success without the support of the Army Entertainment Division, the community and the installation working together.

Again the Directorate of Community Activities would like to thank several corporate sponsors, including Miller Genuine Draft, 7UP and AT&T for their financial support. We would also like to thank the Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers organization under the coordination of Sgt. Maj. Allen D. Thrower and Spc. James Shoemaker. Their efforts were critically important to the success of the entire day.

Events such as these and their demonstrated support from corporate sponsors and the community are an essential part of the reason Fort Benning is a community of excellence.

Contact is there when you need it

By Bob Roberson
United Way, Inc.

commentary

"You saved my life!" Just imagine somebody saying those words to you.

They were said by a caller who phoned recently to let the director of Contact know how she appreciated Contact being there for her at a desperately low point in her life.

She explained that some time ago she had called Contact, the telephone in her hand, a fistful of pills in the other.

The volunteer had talked her through that period of intense crisis. Her life has changed for the better and she feels hope for the years ahead.

Contact, of course, is the 24-hour confidential listening service, manned by trained volunteers with an extraordinary capacity to care, and funded by local churches and United Way.

A military wife said recently: "While my husband was in the Persian Gulf, I became very blue one night and just needed to vent to someone who would sit quietly and listen. I dialed the Contact line."

Listen to the words from another recent caller: "Don't ever stop doing what you do, because it means so much!"

Telephoning Contact shortly after his release from prison, this caller found the encouragement he needed in the gentle, caring support offered by the on-duty volunteer.

Not long ago, another volunteer helped a young caller who had taken a drug overdose get to the hospital for emergency service.

Still another volunteer worked with a suicidal caller until he decided to seek ongoing professional care and admitted himself to a hospital.

Naturally, most of the thousands of calls Contact receives yearly do not reflect the intense urgency, desperation and despair experienced by the callers mentioned here. Most people who phone Contact reach out to the organization not at points of extreme crisis, but at those times when they just feel alone and perhaps in need of someone who will care enough to encourage them to share their feelings, hopes and fears.

Since the volunteers may never learn what happens with the majority of their anonymous callers, it can be difficult for them to gauge the effectiveness of their work on the Contact lines. What becomes important is for them to remember those callers who receive help because the Contact people are always there for them: those who call at night because they are unable to sleep; those who are struggling with alcoholism and call instead of taking a drink; those in pain who want to talk to take their minds off their physical distress; those who have lost a sense of identity, of meaning in life, and think that no one knows or cares.

Each volunteer deserves a share of the appreciation voiced by callers time and time again: "Thank you for being there!"

By the way, if you know of anyone who needs the Contact 24-hour number, it's 327-3991.

RANGERS
to conduct open house

5th Ranger Training Battalion

The rangers of the 5th Ranger Training Battalion at Camp Frank D. Merrill near Dahlonega will hold their 29th annual open house and training demonstration Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

The public will be able to view and photograph the U.S. Army rangers in action.

Camp Merrill is the home of the Mountain Phase of the U.S. Army Ranger School. While in Ranger School, students are instructed in combat techniques used to fight in all types of terrain.

Almost every war that has been fought has included some type of mountainous operation.

The Mountain Phase is 18 days long and trains more than 3,000 students each year in basic and advanced mountaineering and combat techniques.

The students are evaluated on several different skills and on what they have learned during eight days of continuous combat patrolling in the Chattahoochee National Forest.

Kicking off the open house will be the grand opening of the Camp Merrill Museum.

"It will ensure history is preserved for future generations of rangers," Capt. Albert Stahl, museum project officer, said.

Displays include items from the Burma area of operations in World War II and the beginnings of the Mountain Ranger Camp. Ranger veterans will be present to sign limited edition, historical ranger prints immediately after the opening of the museum.

The rangers will put on several demonstrations including high-altitude parachuting, hand-to-hand combat, helicopter operations and rangers in action demonstration.

Displays of ranger equipment, helicopters and weapons in addition to souvenirs and refreshments will be available throughout the day.

For more information, call 864-3367.

Traffic command announces restrictions on 1st-class travel

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Military Traffic Management Command officials have recently announced federal travel regulation changes that restrict the use of first-class accommodations for most government travelers.

The policy states that "all officers and employees of the Executive Branch" who use commercial air carriers for domestic and international travel on official business will use coach-class accommodations, with few exceptions.

The new rules also prohibit using frequent flyer benefits to upgrade travel accommodations to first class on subsequent travel.

"First class" is defined at the highest class of accommodations on a multiple-class commercial air carrier; if two classes of seating are available, the higher of the two is considered first class.

In flights with three or more classes, those between the lowest and highest are considered "premium class" and may only be used in limited circumstances, officials said.

First-class travel may only be used if:

• Coach seats are unavailable on flights that arrive at the duty site up to 24 hours before the reporting time, or on flights that depart within 24 hours after completion of duty; or

• A traveler's physical disability (substantiated in writing by a competent medical authority) requires first-class accommodations; or

• Exceptional security circumstances exist.

Premium-class travel may only be used if:

• No coach-class seats are available, and travel is urgent; or

• A traveler's physical disability requires first-class accommodations, and those accommodations are not available; or

• Exceptional security circumstances exist; or

• Travel on a foreign carrier has been approved and coach-class sanitation or health standards are inadequate; or

• Overall travel costs are lowered by minimizing delays and per diem costs; or

• Travel costs are paid from a nonfederal source; or

• Travel is more than 14 hours and begins or ends in a foreign country.

Frequent flyer benefits may be used to reduce future travel costs but can no longer be used for upgrades to first class on subsequent government travel.

They may be used to travel by premium class with certain limitations, officials said.

On-the-spot upgrades to first class may continue to be accepted if they are available to the general public.

Likewise, travelers who have special club memberships because of the frequency of their travel and who receive automatic upgrades for first class can accept those benefits.

First lady honors military women

By Stephen Brett
American Forces Information Service

First lady Hillary Rodham Clinton joined congressional and military leaders June 14 to support the Women in Military Service for America Memorial

During a luncheon in Washington, Clinton told retired and active service women the memorial will remind all Americans of roles women played in history.

Clinton is the foundation's honorary chairwoman. The foundation seeks to build a memorial at the main entrance of Arlington National Cemetery in Virginia to honor the 1.8 million women who served in the military. Congress approved the project in 1986, and the foundation hopes to break ground in spring 1995.

"One of the things we can do to pay tribute to all who have gone before is to make this memorial not just a beautiful building, but to make it a living memorial," said Clinton. "Women who choose to make their contribution to the military ... (must) be given the chance to serve their country to the fullest of their God-given abilities."

The first lady spoke of her 1975 attempt to join the military. Seeking some way to serve her country, Clinton walked into a Marine Corps recruiting station. She figured a 27-year-old law school graduate could serve, either actively or with the Reserves.

However, she ran into a young Marine who instead of looking at her credentials, asked about her age and her eyesight. After Clinton answered the questions, the Marine responded, "You're too old. You can't see, and you're a woman. Maybe the 'dogs' (the Army) will take you."

The story got a laugh, but Clinton said she told the story to prove a point.

"Like many of the women in this room, that was not an isolated incident in my life," she said. "It is thrilling to see the final barriers falling so that women will be judged by who they are and what their contribution is as opposed to being stereotyped on the basis of their gender."

Clinton followed her remarks by helping foundation president Wilma Vaught, a retired Air Force brigadier general, honor 15 ground breakers in women's military history. They included Air Force Secretary Sheila Widnall, the first woman secretary of any Department of Defense military department; retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Jeanne M. Holm, the first woman two-star general; and 94-year-old Helene Kululani Johnson Coxhead, a World War I Navy petty officer.

The women's memorial involves converting the cemetery gateway into a museum honoring service women from the Revolution to now. Plans call for an education center, a Hall of Valor, a theater and a computer register of service women with their photos, biographical sketches and individual stories.

Nearly two-thirds of the construction costs come from a congressional grant that funds repairs and restoration of the gateway's granite exterior. Another $1.5 million is set aside in a building fund. Total estimated cost of the project is $14 million.

The foundation hopes to raise the remaining $4 million from donations and from sales of 500,000 commemorative silver dollars. The coins cost $31 from through Sept. 9 and $35 afterward. Each coin sold nets the foundation $10.

Those interested in purchasing coins can call (800) 777-VETS or write to: U.S. Mint Veterans Silver Dollars, 10001 Aerospace Road, Lanham, Md. 20706.

Service members or veterans wishing to register and provide women's stories to the memorial may call (800) I SALUTE (800) 472-5883 or write to:

AMSC offers nonresident program

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — The Army Management Staff College at Fort Belvoir, Va., is expanding its program offerings with a new nonresident program slated to begin in January, according to AMSC officials.

The year-long nonresident course is limited to 90 people, vs. the three 14-week courses AMSC holds for its resident program that graduates 600 students annually.

Nonresident students must meet the same qualifications as resident students.

Army civilians must hold grades GS-13 or 14, be high-potential GS-12s, or may be in grade GS-15 with an exception to policy.

Officers must hold the rank of major or lieutenant colonel and have achieved military education level 4.

The program includes two mandatory resident sessions — one at the beginning and one at the end of the course.

It will feature video-teleconferencing, guest speakers and computer-based training.

"Although the intensive 14-week team interaction of AMSC's resident program cannot be duplicated, every attempt has been made to ensure the graduate of the nonresident program is as proficient as the resident graduate," an AMSC official said.

For more information on application procedures, contact the Directorate of Civilian Personnel or the AMSC Nonresident Department at (703) 805-3255 or 805-3257 or DSN 655-3255 or 655-3257.

Stress got you down?

Free workshop to offer tips on handling life's ups and downs

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Do you have trouble sleeping or suffer from constant headaches, nightmares, indigestion, depression or decreased productivity?

According to Yvonne Wilbanks, civilian program coordinator for the Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Program, these are signs that might indicate a person is suffering from stress.

Stress is commonly defined as the nonspecific response of the body to any demand, she said.

The body responds to stress by increasing its heart and breathing rates, stopping digestion, releasing extra sugar into the bloodstream and sending stress messages to muscles.

"This is known as the flight or fight, syndrome," Wilbanks said. "The body does these things automatically in an attempt to cope with the stress. The long term effects of constant stress can include illnesses such as high blood pressure, chest pains, ulcers, migraine headaches, stroke and fatigue."

Although it's probably impossible to avoid stress completely, Wilbanks said, it's possible to learn to keep stress at a minimum.

"Every person differs in the amount of stress he or she can handle," she said. "What is stressful to one person might not even affect another."

Even pleasant situations can be stressful, she said. Any situation involving change has the potential to be stressful.

"Stress is a way of life in '90s," Wilbanks said.

"Office jobs, like many of the civilian positions on post, can be especially stressful. People who are in a closed-off room or cubicle behind a desk most of the day need to be concerned with getting enough exercise and leading a healthy, balanced lifestyle."

One of the best ways to reduce stress is to simplify and unclutter your life. Figure out a schedule and stick to it and don't put things off until the last minute.

Eat properly, have regular health checkups and exercise daily. One of the best stress reducers is a brisk walk.

Other stress-reducing techniques include developing assertiveness skills, participation in meditation or religious activities, massage therapy and a daily dose of humor.

"Also, avoid alcohol abuse, worry, exhaustion and trying to fix other peoples' problems," Wilbanks said.

"Developing positive relationships and listening to music can also help a person tolerate stress."

Counseling can also be a good way of dealing with stress. Civilian employees are offered confidential counseling through the ADAPCP.

For more information, call Wilbanks at 545-2475.

Wilbanks said it is not so much what happens to you as how you decide to deal with it. A person's mental attitude can make the difference in whether he or she beats stress or simply succumbs to it.

The ADAPCP is conducting a free workshop Sept. 15 at the Youth Activities Center, Building 1056, called "The Sounds of Recovery" that will feature motivational speakers and performers who will tell how they have overcome stressful situations.

The workshop is open to all civilians and military personnel. You can register by calling 545-5656.

Soldier crushed by machine

TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — A soldier's death at anytime is hard, but for a soldier to be crushed by a soda machine is particularly hard to accept.

Recently a Training and Doctrine Command soldier was crushed by a soda machine when, after being rocked, the machine fell on the soldier.

The soldier's lung collapsed. She suffered internal hemorrhaging and head injuries. All this because she was disgruntled over losing her 50 cents.

According to the TRADOC Safety Office, since 1987 there have been 36 reported accidents involving vending machines with one reported death.

The Navy has also had reported accidents involving vending machines.

A message sent by the safety office urged the safe use of the machines by posting signs on or near vending machines warning of tilting hazards and bolting machines to the floor or wall where possible.

Space-available travelers request flights

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Space-available travel just got easier, thanks to a new Air Mobility Command procedure. As of July 1, travelers can request flights by fax.

Under the new procedure, active-duty service members can fax their leave form to the desired terminal. AMC officials said the form should be sent on the day leave begins; the fax header will establish the date and time of sign-up.

Travelers must also provide the first names of family members traveling with them, plus a statement that any necessary border-clearance papers are current. And they should list five choices of country destinations — the fifth can be "all," to take advantage of opportune airlift.

Once a flight request is made, service members will stay on the space-A list for 45 days, or until their leave expires.

Officials said travelers can also mail their requests, but they pointed out that faxes are faster. Requests received through the mail will be stamped with the date and time received, to show entry on the space-A registry.

Reservists can also register for flights by fax, if they're serving on active duty. They must fax their DD Form 1853, authentication of Reserve status for travel eligibility, statement of border clearance documents and the list of desired destinations.

Active Reservists may only register for travel to and from the continental United States, Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa and Guam. Their family members are not eligible for space-A travel.

Retirees can fax their requests, along with their five desired destinations. As with the active force, the fax header will establish the date and time of registration, and the traveler's name will remain on the registry for 45 days.

Reservists who have received notification of retirement eligibility, but have not yet reached age 60, are limited to the same travel destinations of active-status Reservists.

The following is a list of AMC terminals having the best capability of providing space-A travel. Other units providing remote space-A sign-up can be found in AMC Pamphlet 76-4.

Fort Benning Schools

Fort Benning Schools will begin the 1994-95 school year Aug. 23. It's almost time for all students kindergarten through eighth grade to register.

Registration will be conducted at all seven Fort Benning Schools from Aug. 8 to 19. Hours for registration will be 8:30 a.m. 11:30 a.m. and 1 to 3 p.m. each day.

Rather than have parents come one or two specific days, parents are asked to choose the date and time that best fits their needs. Past practice indicates that there are large crowds the first couple of days of the registration process. Parents who wish to avoid a long wait should consider this when choosing a registration time.

All students who attended Benning Schools last year must register for the 1994-95 school year. It is not necessary for parents of students who attended the Fort Benning schools last year to bring any forms to the school, but there will be registration forms there that they will need to sign.

Children who preregistered during kindergarten roundup last May, will need to complete the registration process.

All new and returning students with learning disabilities, behavior or emotional disorders, or speech-language disorders, may register in- their assigned school.

New students who are physically or mentally handicapped or students with severe handicapping conditions should call the Special Education Office at 545-2500 after Aug. 8. Preschool handicapped students (must be at least 3 years of age) may contact the Special Education Office at 545-2500 after Aug. 8.

Requirements :

Parents should bring certain items to the school when they register. The items are determined by the student's age, grade and whether the child has previously attended a Fort Benning School.

- A child must attain the age of 5 by Sept. 1.
- Birth certificates or other proof of birth will be required for children to be enrolled in either kindergarten or first grade unless they attended kindergarten at Fort Benning last school year.
- Students registering at Fort Benning for the first time will be required to present a record of immunization at registration. This requirement will be strictly enforced.

Immunization requirements:

- Diphtheria, whooping cough and tetanus completed and boosted if indicated.
- Polio series completed or begun with booster if required.
- Measles, mumps and rubella vaccine.
- All students except kindergarten must have a report card or grade placement record.
- Georgia Certificate of Eye, Ear and Dental Screening is required for all students entering the Fort Benning Schools for the first time.

An appointment for a Georgia Certificate of Immunization and a Georgia Certificate of Eye, Ear and Dental screening can be obtained by calling 544-3350. For information, call 545-2500.

Revision ends 3-year EFMP enrollment

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — The Army is making it easier for families with special needs, through recent changes in the Exceptional Family Member Program's regulation, AR 608-75.

Through the EFMP, soldiers' records reflect the needs of their exceptional family members. These needs are then considered when soldiers are up for a new assignment.

"An EFM can be a child, a spouse or an aged mom or dad who's an authorized family member of the soldier," said Shirley Brown, EFMP manager at the Army's Community and Family Support Center. Disabilities can be educational or medical.

EFMP members will see several changes in the new regulation.

Soldiers no longer have to re-enroll every three years. Now soldiers are permanently enrolled in the program until they leave the service, or unless their special needs warrant case closure,according to Brown.

Throughout enrollment, soldiers are responsible for keeping their files current. They must update the records as the family member's condition changes or every three years, whichever comes first.

Another change applies to dual-Army couples.

"Soldiers who are members of the Army Married Couples Program will both enroll in the EFMP now when they have a family member who qualifies," Brown said. "This process will ensure that the assignment manager of each sponsor considers this family's special needs.

"In the past, there were problems in this area.," she added. "We had one soldier enrolled, and not the other.

"And the soldier who was not enrolled would be considered for nomination to a particular location without their EFM needs reviewed. We made it so they both had to enroll so that we would make sure that their exceptional family member needs were not overlooked during the nominative phase of the assignment process."

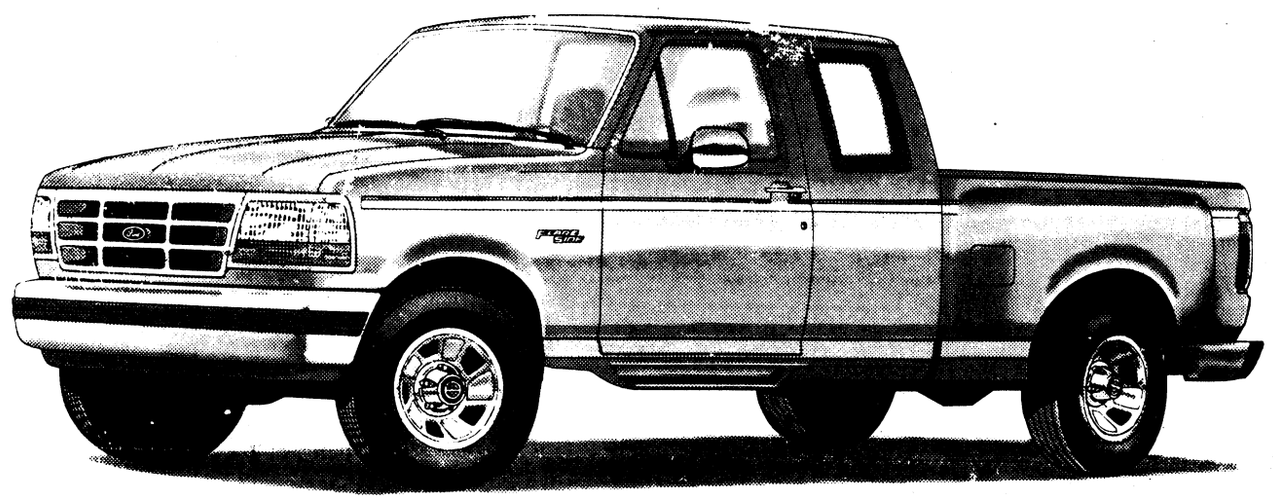
Also in the revision, the gaining installation must be notified about the incoming EFM; overseas, it is the major command that will be notified. This way, housing and other agencies can be sure to have the services and equipment to meet any special needs when the family arrives.

"We've also strengthened the interface with Child Development Services, Youth Services and Community Recreation so that there can be more inclusion of exceptional family members in ongoing activities," Brown said.

The following soldiers with exceptional family members must enroll in the EFMP:

- Soldiers in the regular Army;
- U.S. Army Reserve soldiers in the USAR-Active Guard Reserve Program and other USAR soldiers on active duty exceeding 30 days;
- Army National Guard AGR personnel serving under authority of Title 10, United States Code.

Although civilian employees don't actually enroll in the program, the regulation says they must "identify dependent children with special educational and medical needs, each time they process for an assignment to a location outside the United States, where dependent travel is authorized at government expense," Brown said.



For more information on EFMP enrollment, visit the Army Community Service office.

ACAP to conduct workshop

Army Career and Alumni Program

A seminar about federal employment will be Aug. 11 from 9 to 11 a.m. in Infantry Hall, Classroom 30.

Sponsored by the Army Career and Alumni Program and the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, the seminar is designed to provide information on the opportunities of federal employment with primary emphasis on Fort Benning.

Available to soldiers retiring from the military and their family members, the seminar will cover the basics of how the federal employment system functions, where to find job announcements and veteran's preference. Participants will be given a detailed explanation of the federal employment application, Standard Form 171.

James Fleming, a 20-year veteran of the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, and Cathy Murray, an instructor with Conwal Inc., will be available to answer questions.

Murray assists the Georgia Department of Labor with the ACAP Transition Assistance Program workshop, and she conducts personal assessments Wednesday and Thursday of each week from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the ACAP office in Soldiers' Plaza. The assessments include instruction in the use of an automated Standard Form 171.

To obtain an appointment, call 545-7009, 545-4913 or 545-4892 or stop by Building 2617 in Soldiers' Plaza.

Plan for life after military

By Elsie Jackson
Army Career and Alumni Program

Is there a career change in your future? If you're getting out of the Army soon, start planning now; don't wait until it's too late!

A little planning on your part will make your transition to civilian life a lot smoother.

This is especially true if you are planning to start your civilian career as a student. A visit to the Education Center may be in order as much as a year before you get out of the Army.

College catalogs are available on microfiche to help you narrow your choices of schools, and determine application deadlines. Remember, you may need to work terminal leaves or "early outs" around the school calendar.

Depending on the school you are planning to attend, you may need to apply as much as six to nine months in advance.

You should take any required entrance exams earlier than that. You may take one exam (the Scholastic Aptitude Test, for example) at no cost to you through the Education Center. If you need some help preparing for the SAT, free SAT preparation classes are available Mondays and Fridays, from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m., Columbus Technical Institute (Room 151-C).

For more information, call the Educational Opportunity Center at 571-4708.

You should also obtain certified copies of transcripts for any college courses you may have already completed.

Believe it or not, some military courses you have under your belt may count for college-level credit. Ask your education counselor about requesting a copy of your Army/American Council on Education Registry Transcript System record. AARTS transcripts can not only help you get credit for Army experiences, they can also supplement a job resume, providing employers with a description of the scope of your Army responsibilities and the skills you acquired while on active duty.

If you aren't sure "what you want to be when you grow up," you may benefit from an "interest inventory." Similar to "aptitude tests," they are available through the Education Center. Results are usually back in two to three weeks.

Also available is the user-friendly "Discover" computer program available at the Education Center. "Discover" can help you identify career possibilities and provide a brief description of each identified career.

You might also find playing "The Career Game" with David Sutcliffe, community service specialist from the Educational Opportunity Center, or doing a more in-depth interest inventory, helpful. Results for either are available almost immediately.

Once you have determined your interests, Sutcliffe can provide you with state-by-state information about schools (both academic and technical) with curriculums compatible with your interests.

Sutcliffe can be visited from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., Wednesdays, in Building 2634.

Also available are projections for the 30 fastest growing occupations from 1990 through 2005, and financial aid guidance.

A visit with your Reserve Components Transition Office may find you pleasantly surprised. Many states have generous tuition assistance plans available to their National Guardsmen; state college tuition and fee waivers of up to 100 percent are available.

In some states, these benefits may be used in conjunction with GI Bill and Army College Fund dollars. Some states also offer tuition assistance to veterans, regardless of additional reserve service.

Take some time now and make your transition from soldier to student smoother. If you are a year or less away from getting out of the Army and are planning to go back to school, it's not too early to start planning.

For more information, contact an education center or call the Army Career and Alumni Program Office at 545-4892 or 545-4913.

Transition assistance classes available

All soldiers getting out or retiring can attend

Army Career and Alumni Program

If you're getting out the military, the Army Career and Alumni Program is available to make the transition as can help.

All service members getting out of the military or retiring from the military must process through the Army Career and Alumni Program's Transition Assistance Office, Building 2617, Soldiers' Plaza, before attending the Transition Assistance Program class in Infantry Hall.

The National Defense Authorization Act Fiscal Year 91, Public Law 101-510 states that soldiers within 180 days of expiration term of service are required to attend a Transition Assistance Program class.

Classes are given in three-day blocks and are scheduled throughout the year.

Classes are in Classroom 30, Infantry Hall, from 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

For additional information, call 545-4892 or 545-4913.

New provost marshal to assume command

Fort Benning's new provost marshal will assume command of the Military Police Activity in a ceremony Aug. 11 at 9 a.m. on the Field of Four Chaplains.

Col. Ronnie D. Alton, currently serving as the provost marshal at the Army Material Command, Alexandria, Va., will assume command.

Small business breakfast scheduled

The Directorate of Contracting is sponsoring a small business breakfast Nov. 15 at 7:30 a.m. at the Fort Benning Officers' Club.

The breakfast has been endorsed by the Fort Benning Tri-Community Action Plan Committee headed by the garrison commander. The purpose of the breakfast is to develop and maintain a partnering relationship with local contractors and prospective bidders.

For more information, contact Robert L. Battle at 545-1013.

Rangers to host an open house Saturday

The 5th Ranger Training Battalion, Dahlonega, Ga., will conduct its 29th annual Open House Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The public is invited to view the numerous displays and demonstrations, along with the official opening of the new Frank D. Merrill Museum. The public will be able to view and photograph the U.S. Army rangers in action.

Demonstrations include combat raids, hand-to-hand combat, mountaineering, high altitude parachuting, helicopter operations, and snake handling.

Italy to celebrate liberation of Rome

To celebrate the 50th anniversary of the liberation of Rome, the Italian army is staging a parachute jump in September.

Participants must attend Italian army airborne training beforehand. The training and the jump will take place Sept. 18 to 25.

The cost is $1,400 and does not include transportation (Military Airlift Command flights are available).

For information or to get an application, call Capt. John Chenery at DSN 635-6795 or (502) 798-6795.

Infantry Ball set for Sept. 17 at O' Club

The 1994 Infantry Ball will be at the Fort Benning Officers' Club at 6 p.m. Sept. 17.

All invited guests who wish to attend should call 545-5726 or 545-7626.

Tot Town will be open for child care until midnight. Reservations are required.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland and range areas will take place through Saturday if weather permits in the following compartments: E-2, E-7, F-1, I-5, M-8, O-3, W-2 X-5 and CC-2.

Burning will occur in pine stands within these compartments to enhance endangered species habitat and training areas.

People using these areas for recreation must vacate before 9:30 a.m. daily.

Training units using compartments adjacent to these areas may experience drift smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while traveling in these areas because of the potential for reduced visibility.

Thrift Savings Plan open season continues

Open season for the Thrift Savings Plan continues through today. TSP updates and TSP-1s have been issued to all administrative offices for distribution to eligible employees.

All elections must be received in civilian personnel by close of business today.

OCS to induct officers to its hall of fame

The 1994 Officer Candidate School Hall of Fame ceremony will be at 11 a.m. Sept. 9 in Marshall Auditorium, Building 4, Infantry Hall. This year, a dinner honoring the inductees will be the previous evening, Sept. 8.

To be eligible for induction, retired or active duty officers must have been commissioned from the Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning or Ground General School School at Fort Riley, Kan., and attained the rank of colonel or higher while serving in an active or reserve status.

Graduates of OCS who were awarded the Medal of Honor are also eligible for induction regardless of rank as well as graduates who achieved a position of prominence in state or federal government. Cutoff date is Wednesday.

For information, call 545-4907 or 545-4711.

OCS selection board scheduled in October

Personnel command announced the next Officer Candidate School selection board is scheduled for Oct. 25 to 28. Cutoff date for applications is Oct. 14, no exceptions. Applications must arrive in Adjutant General, Personnel Operations Division, Building 2619, no later than Sept. 1, to allow time for each applicant to appear before a local board.

For more information, contact Marie Lee, at 545-3341 or 545-4702

Handbook offers tips to combat terrorism

American Forces Information Service

The handbook offers insight into the terrorism problem and provides common sense approaches for individuals to employ when overseas

Common sense, combined with a strong offense and defense, may be the best weapon against personal terrorism, a Department of Defense antiterrorism specialist said.

Arakadie Novickoff added that although the threat of terrorism may seem to have diminished over the past few years, it remains real. "In some respects, it may be even more dangerous," he said.

Novickoff said ongoing changes in the world's political and economic climates can lead to major security problems.

Advanced technological weapons, such as long-range rocket delivery systems and high-order explosives, as well as chemical, biological and nuclear weapons, may be more easily available to terrorist organizations, he said.

He said terrorist groups targeted Americans overseas, especially service members and their families, over the last 20 years. Novickoff said more than 150 terrorist attacks killed over 300 Americans and injured more than 200 more.

DoD recently released an updated handbook on terrorism, DoD 0-2000.12-H, Protection of DoD Personnel and Activities Against Acts of Terrorism and Political Turbulence.

It's available to all DoD personnel through military publication channels and replaces one first issued in 1983.

Novickoff said the handbook offers insight into the terrorism problem and provides common sense approaches for individuals to employ when overseas. He also added people living in the United States may want to use some recommendations because they can also help cut down on crime.

The DoD handbook topics include terrorism characteristics, combating terrorism, threat assessment, physical and residential security, hostages, bomb threats and safe travel.

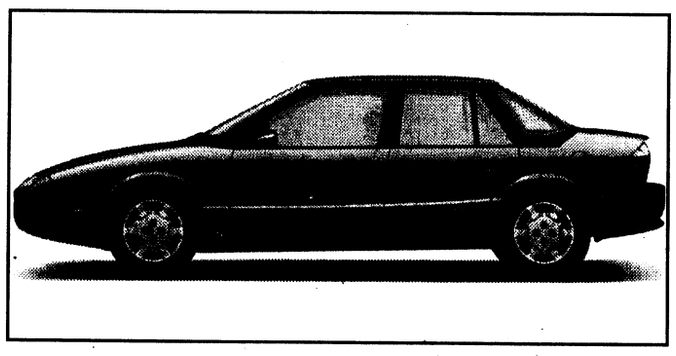
Many handbook sections deal with military installations and units, but others are for the individual, Novickoff said.

One area commonly overlooked is window and door locks. The handbook offers suggestions on locking devices, hinges, door construction and keys. The handbook also offers safety tips to stateside or overseas travelers. Novickoff also suggested using a tourist passport for foreign travel, even if the traveler holds an official one.

Other suggestions include parking in secure areas, locking doors and gas tanks, and accounting for keys. Hints also include wearing seat belts, ignoring hitchhikers and staying alert.

Hotel patrons must also protect themselves from attack. He suggested engaging a room toward the rear of the hotel and avoiding street-level suites or ones with direct stairwell access.

Other safety tips include knowing all escape route, keeping the room neat, properly storying valuables, protecting room privacy, watching for loiterers, controlling luggage and controlling room access.



Novickoff said the handbook also provides a detailed household security checklist. Suggestions range from interior and exterior lighting to door frames and alarm systems.

It also provides help in house key accountability and proper steps in case of a break-in.

For more information on terrorism, security and safe travel, contact your local base security or law enforcement office.

Post lifters lose 'weighty' competition

22 people compete in squat, deadlift and bench press

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The seventh annual Fort Benning powerlifting tournament at the Infantry Hall Fitness Center Saturday went to the visiting teams from Fort Jackson, S.C., and Fort Stewart, Ga.

Twenty-two lifters in all competed in the squat, deadlift and bench press.

Fort Jackson, went home with a grand total of 30 medals, 15 for the men and 15 for the women.

Fort Stewart finished in second with 26 total; 15 for the women and 11 for the men.

Fort Benning finished with a total of 10 medals all by the men.

In the best of categories; Regan Ward of Fort Benning had the best deadlift. Lonnie Herring of Fort Jackson had the best bench press and Robert Gains had the best squat.

On the women's side, Cassandra Weems of Fort Stewart had the best bench, while Rose Hill, also of Fort Stewart, had the best squat and deadlift.

Hill and Ira Cunningham of Fort Jackson were named the top female and top male of the tournament.

"I like this stuff," said Hill. "It keeps me fit. My best lift in practice was 330 pounds but the 325 pounds in the squat was by far my best lift in competition."

Fort Benning's Neil Merritt and Brian Wilson, each competing in their first competition, came away with medals.

Merritt took second place on the squat with a lift of 350 pounds in the 181-pound division, while Wilson captured first place in all three categories in the unlimited division.

Ward also took first in the squat and deadlift and finished second in the bench press. Mark Mullenax, a retiree from Fort Benning, finished second in each category at the 275-pound weight class.

"I wasn't totally prepared for this," said Merritt. "The other lifters were a big help, they loaned me knee wraps and then helped wrap them up before my lifts. They didn't have to do that. It was great."

Listed below are the top two finisher's from each weight class and category.

Never give up in fishing

commentary

By Earl Bentz and Steve price
Outboard Marine Corporation

Professional angler Mickey Bruce of Buford, Ga., has always kept a never-give-up attitude when he's bass fishing, and recently he proved just how important such feelings can be.

Bruce, a veteran tournament competitor and a member of the Evinrude Outboards Pro Staff, weighed in an incredible 83 pounds, 12 ounces of bass during a tournament on Georgia's Lake Seminole, but his catching time was far shorter than his fishing time.

"On the first afternoon of competition, I only had one fish at 2:30 p.m.," he explains. "I only had 30 minutes left before the weigh-in when I found a school of bass, and then I caught 19 pounds before I had to leave."

The second day, Bruce weighed in a five bass, 26 pound, 12 ounce stringer, and added 18 pounds, four ounces more the third day.

"Then on the final day I lost the fish," says Bruce. "The weather had turned bad and the bass moved. "At 2 p.m. with less than an hour remaining in the tournament, I did not have a single bass in the live well."

Even though he saw his potentially high place finish in the event slipping away, Bruce continued fishing and searching as hard as he could. Then, with just 15 minutes of fishing time remaining, he found the bass again and boated a stunning 20 pound stringer. He finished second in the tournament and won $30,000.

"I was the only person in the tournament fishing deep water," explains the Evinrude pro, "even though everyone else was catching bass shallow. Last year I found fish deep when we fished Lake Seminole but by the time the tournament started, those fish had moved shallow and I never found them again.

"This year I felt at least some of the bass had already been shallow to spawn and may have returned to deeper water. I started fishing shallow like everyone else but I couldn't locate any fish.

"At 2:30 that first afternoon I basically started all over, and then on the final afternoon I just kept telling myself that every time I made a cast I was getting closer and closer to the fish and that eventually I'd find them."

Bruce believes he developed his never-give-up attitude during his fishing days at Lake Lanier, a popular impoundment north of Atlanta. It is a deep, clear water lake with bass famous for being fickle.

"Bass on Lanier move a lot," says Bruce, "so you often have to spend a lot of time just looking for them. On really tough days, you have to convince yourself you are really learning something, even if you aren't catching anything.

"I didn't realize it then, but those years of having to fish that way were good preparation for tournament competition.

Evinrude and Johnson outboard dealers offer the Pro-Team Bass Vest, a personal floatation device designed for bass fishermen.

Softball postseason begins

Women's, men's teams vie in tournament play

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The U.S. Army Infantry Center women's softball tournament got off to a slow start Monday night at Gowdy Field.

A 40-minute rain delay slowed the start time of the first game; but, once the games got started, the action dominated the field.

In game one, the Yellow Jackets scored two runs in the first, second and third innings to jump out to a quick 6-0 lead on the Blue Angels.

In the fourth inning, the Yellow Jackets added three more runs on four hits and a ground out to boost the lead to 9-0.

The Blue Angels scored their two runs in the bottom of the fifth inning on six straight hits. Shortstop Libby Hopkins started the minirally with a single to right.

The Yellow Jackets nailed down the 9-2 win in the bottom of the sixth inning when Hopkins lined to shortstop Roni Rhinehardt for the third out.

Game two

Game two between the Bandits and the Lady Warriors ended 12-1 in the bottom of the fifth inning because of the 10-run rule, which stops a game after 4 1/2 innings if a team is up by more than 10 runs. The Bandits scored three runs each in the first, third and fourth innings. A two-run homer to left field off the bat of left fielder Tammy White was the big blow of the fourth inning.

Three more runs in the bottom of the fifth inning by the Bandits hung the Lady Warriors out to dry.

Up by 11 runs, the umpire called the game because of the 10-run rule.

Game three

Game three also went the way of the 10-run rule. The Lady Hawks downed the Trojans 13-2 in 4 1/2 innings of play.

The Lady Hawks got two runs in the first and second innings while the Trojans scored single runs in the second and third. The killer inning for the Lady Hawks came in the fourth inning when they batted around and scored nine runs; the big blast was a three-run homer from Lena Williams to close the door on the Trojans.

Tuesday night's action

Yellow Jackets 7,vs. Down and Dirty 6
Lady Hawks 7, vs. Bandits 13
Lady Warriors 12, vs. Trojans 9

Wednesday night's action

Down and Dirty 17, vs. Lady Warriors 0
Blue Angels, 0 vs. Lady Hawks 4
Yellow Jackets 9, vs. Bandits 10

Men's action

In men's play, the U.S. Cavalry and the Max Camouflage went head to head Monday night at Benning Park in Columbus for the right to play in the Industrial League championship. Both teams are from Fort Benning.

The U.S. Cavalry brought out the big guns covering up the Max Camouflage 21-6.

Larry Hill's three-run homerun in the first inning, Chad Knudson's two-run blast in the second inning and two two-run homers from James Rodney — one in the sixth inning and the other in the seventh — powered the U.S. Cavalry past the Max Camouflage.

A bases-clearing triple in the sixth inning from Larry Wilson added three more runs to the U.S. Cavalry onslaught.

The win pushed the U.S Cavalry into the nightcap against Swift Textiles for the right to play in the championship. U.S. Cavalry downed Swift 20-15.

Bobsled Push Tour Saturday, Sunday

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The U.S Bobsled Team will be conducting the 1994 BurliMan Bobsled Push Tour, with a final date in Atlanta Saturday and Sunday at Emory University.

The tour is looking for the fastest and strongest athletes in the country who think they have what it takes to make the U.S. Bobsled Team, according to officials.

The course will be a dry-land, push-sled competition in which athletes will push a bobsled on wheels down a railed track and be timed over a 40-meter distance.

The three fastest at each of the five stops on the tour will win a free trip (provided they meet the minimum speed and strength standard) to the U.S. Olympic Training Center in Lake Placid, N.Y., where they will try out for spots on the 1995 U.S. Bobsled Team.

Registration will be open to the first 100 applicants.

Protect yourself from Lyme disease

By Rudi Williams
American Forces Information Service

Tick season — spring through early fall — is in full swing across America and in many foreign countries. Being bitten by an infected tick can result in debilitating, sometimes deadly, Lyme disease, military and civilian experts warn.

Left untreated, Lyme disease can advance from early flu-like symptoms to painful and permanent damage to the joints, according to the national Centers for Disease Control. The disease can also affect the nervous system, causing numbness, pain, stiff neck and severe headache or muscle weakness in the face or limbs. Occasionally, heart irregularities occur.

The first stage of the disease begins three to 31 days after the tick bites. Symptoms can include fatigue, chills and fever, headache, muscle and joint pain or swollen lymph nodes.

Another mark of Lyme disease, researchers said, is a peculiar expanding circular skin rash in the areas where the tick bite occurred. Patch shapes vary depending on location. The rash appears mostly on the thighs, groin, trunk and armpits, and on the faces of children.

As the patch enlarges, the center may clear, giving a ring-like appearance. It may be warm, but isn't usually painful. However, researchers said, some people never develop a rash.

People can pick up ticks during walks in parks, in the woods or while hiking and camping. Children are especially susceptible because they run around in tall grass, play in wooded areas and roll on the ground, researchers noted.

The individual risk of getting Lyme disease is reasonably small. Only about 12 to 15 percent of ticks actually carry the bug. Experts said removing ticks from the body quickly may prevent a person from contracting Lyme disease. Ticks generally must feed on a person for 24 to 48 hours before the person becomes infected.

Lyme disease experts warn field troops not to wear tick and flea collars meant for dogs and cats. They don't sweat but people do, and harmful chemicals can get into the human body through sweat glands.

Named after Lyme, Conn., where it surfaced in 1975, Lyme disease has become one of the fastest-growing vector-borne diseases in the United States. The highest incidence occurs in the Northeast from Massachusetts to Maryland and in Wisconsin, Minnesota, California and Oregon. A vector is a host that passes the disease germ — the tick, in this case. Researchers at the Armed Forces Pest Management Board note that all military recruit training areas are infested with ticks.

"Lyme is a relatively new disease, so there are a lot of unknowns about it," said Dr. David Dennis, CDC's epidemiology chief in Fort Collins, Colo. "However, some of the unknowns are getting answered through improved testing and development of new vaccines. Testing of two vaccines is complete, and field trials are under way with 10,000 volunteers in Wisconsin, New Jersey, New York and Connecticut."

Over the years, a number of service members have been infected in Germany, said Dennis. "There are places in the United States where we've been concerned about service members being exposed to ticks on bases, such as the Marine base at Quantico, Va., and Fort Leonard Wood, Mo."

The best way to avoid Lyme disease is to stay away from places where ticks live — tall grass and weeds, scrubby areas, woods and leaf litter. Another good idea is to check children and pets after they've played outside.

Service members can use a two-part chemical repellent system consisting of a permethrin-based spray for clothing and DEET-based lotion for exposed skin. The repellents should be coupled with the proper wearing of the uniform.

If you can't avoid tick-infested areas, CDC experts suggest you wear a long-sleeved shirt and long pants, tuck pant-legs into socks or boots, tuck shirt into pants, tape area where pants and socks meet to keep ticks out and wear light-colored clothing so ticks can be seen easily.

After being outdoors:

- Promptly remove and wash clothing;
- Inspect body carefully and remove attached ticks with tweezers, grasping as close to the head as possible and gently tugging the tick free without crushing its body. Squeezing the tick's body may force infected fluid into the wound;
- Place tick in sealed container for examination by a local health department; and
- Wash the wound and apply an antiseptic.

Ticks and Lyme disease

REMOVE TICKS PROMPTLY

Grasp the tick's mouthparts against the skin with pointed tweezers (see fig. 1).

Pull back slowly and steadily with gentle force until the tick can be eased out of the skin (see figs. 2-3).

BE PATIENT - the tick's central mouthpart called the hypostome is covered with sharp barbs, sometimes making removal difficult (see inset).

DO NOT pull back sharply, as this may tear the mouthparts from the body of the tick, leaving them embedded in the skin. If the mouthparts do break off,

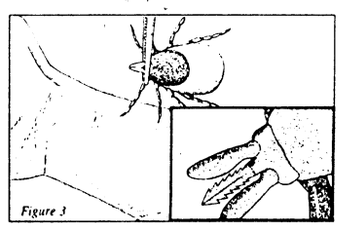
DO NOT PANIC — the mouthparts alone cannot transmit Lyme disease because the infective body of the tick is no longer attached. However, to prevent secondary infection, remove the mouthparts as you would a splinter.

DO NOT squeeze the body of the tick, as this may force infective tick fluid into the wound site.

DO NOT apply substances such as vaseline, fingernail polish, fingernail polish remover, repellents, pesticides, or a lighted match to the tick while it is attached, as these materials might agitate the tick and cause it to regurgitate infective fluid into the wound site.

After removal, wash the wound and apply an antiseptic.

Save the tick in a jar or vial for identification should you later develop disease symptoms. Species confirmation of the tick may greatly facilitate the physician's diagnosis and/or treatment.



A tick needs a blood meal from a host (animal or human) in order to molt (progress to the next stage in it's life cycle), and to reproduce (lay eggs). This feeding process continues for several days to a week until the tick is fully engorged with blood. It then releases its hold from the host, drops off, and subsequently molts or lays eggs.

If the tick is infected with Borrelia burgdorferi, it can transmit infection to the host during the feeding process. As the tick feeds, the bacteria multiply in the tick's midgut and migrate to its salivary glands, from which point they are introduced into the wound site.

Research shows that successful transmission of B. burgdorferi requires the tick to be attached for 12 to 48 hours. Therefore, it is important to remove attached ticks as soon as they are discovered. The sooner infective ticks are removed, the less likely they will be able to transmit infection.

DoD trying to educate people about Lyme disease

American Forces Information Service

Military tick watchers are trying to spread the word about the dangers of being in wooded and grassy areas during tick season.

"We're using education as a tool to combat Lyme disease as well as other vector-borne disease. We've developed many educational materials," said Sandy Evans of the Army Environmental Hygiene Agency at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md.

Evans edits Focus on Lyme Disease, a newsletter containing current information on the disease and how to protect against tick bites.

The agency can also provide Technical Guide 174, Personal Protection Against Insects and Other Arthropods of Military Importance; posters; a 14-minute videotape; a slide presentation; and other material.

Address comments, questions and requests for educational material to Evans at the U.S. Army Environmental Hygiene Agency, ATTN: HSHB-MR 1, Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md. 21010-5422 or call (410) 671-3613 or DSN 584-3613.

Also, you can obtain information from the Lyme disease electronic mail network called LymeNet. The service is available through Internet.

Veterinary Services

In 1993, more than 180 people in the Fort Benning community were involved in animal bite and scratch incidents. Seventy percent of those incidents involved minors. Many cases were provoked and could have been prevented.

It is natural for an animal to bite if threatened. "Fear biting" may happen if an animal is approached without warning. Unfamiliar animals wandering loose should not be bothered. Stray animals should be apprehended by proper authorities.

To have a stray animal apprehended, post residents can contact the Military Police at 545-5222 and an animal control officer will be dispatched.

Residents of Muscogee County can contact the Muscogee County Animal Control Office at 571-4930 or 561-8602.

If an animal is disturbed while eating it may result in a bite or scratch incident.

Food aggression is common in all animals because it is a natural instinct to compete for food. It is best to separate the animal from other animals as well as from the family and give it privacy to enjoy its meal. Explain to children that animals can't play while eating.

When two animals are fighting, do not try to separate them using hands. A water hose or large stick may be used. If no objects are available, try honking a horn or making loud noises to startle them. Do not strike the animals with the objects while attempting to separate them.

Many bite and scratch incidents are simply accidents. When an animal is sleeping and someone steps on its tail or falls onto them, the animal may react by biting or scratching. One way to avoid this is to have a certain place in a quiet corner where the animals bed may be kept. If someone does fall onto the animal, move away from the animal and speak in a calm voice simply reassuring it and give it adequate time to wake up before attempting to play with it.

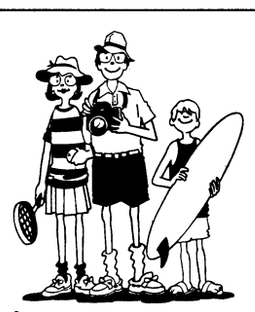
Incidents also occur when an animal has been injured and someone is attempting to administer first aid. Always use caution when approaching and administering aid to an injured animal.

Moving the animal may cause pain thus provoking the animal to bite. If the animal must be moved, do so gently and slowly, always speaking in a calm, reassuring voice.

The Fort Benning Veterinary Treatment Facility is not equipped to provide emergency services except to stabilize life or limb threatening situations. Injured animals should be taken to a civilian veterinary clinic for treatment.

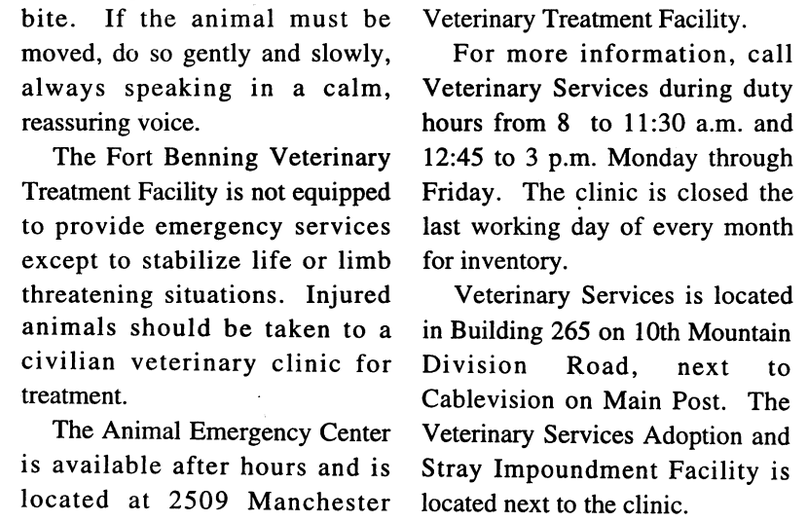
The Animal Emergency Center is available after hours and is located at 2509 Manchester Expressway, 324-6659.

If a person is bitten or scratched by an animal he or she should go to the Martin Army Community Hospital Emergency Room for treatment and initiation of an animal bite report. Any scratch that breaks the skin should be seen by medical authorities. The initiation of an animal bite report will cause the health status of the animal to be examined by either military veterinary personnel or civilian authorities off post.

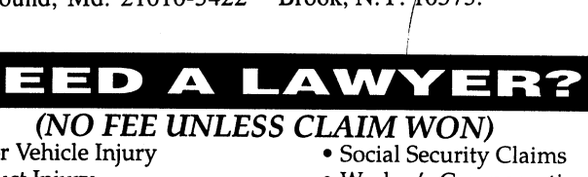


Approximately 45 percent of the total bites that occurred in 1993 involved animals that belonged to on-post residents. All of those animals were seen at the Veterinary Treatment Facility.

For more information, call Veterinary Services during duty hours from 8 to 11:30 a.m. and 12:45 to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday. The clinic is closed the last working day of every month for inventory.



Veterinary Services is located in Building 265 on 10th Mountain Division Road, next to Cablevision on Main Post. The Veterinary Services Adoption and Stray Impoundment Facility is located next to the clinic.



To make an appointment, call 545-4444 or 545-1127. For the safety of children, do not bring them to the Veterinary Clinic.

Fort Benning Medical Activity Policy excludes children under the age of 12 during clinic hours.

Chaplains celebrate 219 years of service

USAIC Chaplains' Office

On July 29, 1775, the Continental Congress established the position of chaplain in the Continental Army.

Those early chaplains, much like chaplains and chaplain assistants of today, represented the nation's religious convictions. There were 90 Congregationalists, 41 Presbyterians, 20 Anglicans, 11 Baptists, two Lutherans and one Roman Catholic. These were men intensely loyal to their parishioners and to the new nation.

The Rev. William Emerson, the first recorded clergyman to arrive in response to the tolling of the bell at Concord, Mass., preached a sermon to his soldiers where he exhorted them to "trust in God, to be faithful in duties, to obey military commands promptly [and] to train diligently."

Wherever U.S. soldiers have served, chaplains have accompanied them — from the very few during the years when the Army was small to more than 8,000 during World War II, the chaplain's presence has served to bring God to men and women, and men and women to God.

About 3,900 served in the Civil War with both Union and Confederate troops. In fact, 66 Union chaplains gave their lives and 25 died serving Confederate soldiers.

The years from the Civil War to World War I saw several changes that greatly affected the chaplaincy. Almost from the beginning of the Army chaplaincy, chaplains wore as their emblem the shepherd's crook signifying their role as a pastor. In 1898, Christian chaplains were authorized to wear a "Latin Cross" as their insignia.

Dec. 28, 1909, War Department General Order 253 authorized the detail of one enlisted soldier for each chaplain "for the purpose of assisting the chaplain in the performance of his official duties." That policy continued until the early 1960s, when a specific military occupational specialty (71M) was approved and the chaplain assistant joined the chaplain to create the unit ministry team.

During World War I, as Jewish rabbis became chaplains, the tablets of the law surmounted by a Star of David was authorized to distinguish and recognize the plurality of our armed forces. Again chaplains served wherever soldiers were assigned. One of the last shells fired during this war to end all wars burst near the position where Chaplain William F. Davitt sought shelter. As the clock's hand moved to the 11th hour on Nov. 11, 1918, Davitt died from a shrapnel wound.

Since the beginning of World War II, chaplains have been noncombatants. That means chaplains do not carry weapons. The Geneva and Hague Conventions single out religious and medical personnel for their humanitarian outlook and require them to be treated as displaced persons serving humanity.

Of course, not all peoples of the world agree with that perspective. Many chaplains have died, suffered beatings, and endured deprivation for their efforts to meet the religious needs of soldiers.

In World War II, 124 chaplains were killed in action as they served alongside their brothers and sisters. Next to the Infantry Center Chapel is the Field of the Four Chaplains. This memorial commemorates the unselfishness of Chaplains Clark Poling, Alexander Goode, George Fox and John Washington.

These brave men trusting in God gave their life jackets and warm clothing to other soldiers aboard the torpedoed troop ship, the USS Dorchester. The ship went down with the four chaplains, according to eyewitnesses, standing hand in hand as brothers in their commitment to serve American soldiers.

The conflict in Korea saw 13 chaplains lose their lives. Though little heralded, the Korean conflict demanded from all soldiers a toughness of spirit as well as a physical stamina to withstand the extremes of weather and the tenacity of the enemy.

The violence and complexity of the Vietnam war posed even more challenges for the soldiers of God. New religions, a national outcry, and the carry over from a larger society seeking solace in drug-numbed behavior posed problems demanding creativity as well as courageousness.

Wherever soldiers have fought and died — from the most recent battles of Operation Desert Storm to "operations other than war" like Restore Hope in Somalia — chaplains and chaplain assistants working together as unit ministry teams have served beside the men and women of our armed forces.

As our nation keeps faith with its soldiers, so too the Army has recognized the religious diversity now included in our ranks. This past year, a Muslim chaplain was added to the unit ministry team with his insignia of a crescent moon.

In the near future, a Buddhist chaplain with his distinctive insignia of the eight spoked wheel will also join those who serve.

The Army is a better place to work and live because the unit ministry teams have continually delivered the message of hope and made practical applications to that message. Army Community Services grew out of chaplain sponsored food lockers, clothing banks and other responses to emergency needs.

When commanders were troubled by problems of racism, drug and alcohol abuse and other sins of our society, chaplains responded with solutions that led to the Equal Opportunity Program, the Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Program, family support groups and the concept that spiritual fitness is a vital part of our lives.

One historian has written, "The chaplain deals with intangibles, which can neither be weighed nor valued by any known unit.

"If it were possible to compute loyalty and human kindness or moral character in terms of spiritual calories or pounds, it would still be futile to ravel the cords that lead individuals and groups and to credit the chaplain with those threads of influence he has exerted in the resolution of the soldier or the spirit of the regiment.

"When the spiritual impact of a sunset or starry sky, a symphony or a throb of sympathy or affection can be measured, it may be possible to compute those potent forces outside the sphere of the physical sciences the chaplain is in the Army to intensify and direct."

For 219 years, military chaplains and their enlisted chaplain assistants have served our nation and its citizen soldiers; to them we say "Well done, good and faithful servants!"

Academy completes mission, inactivates

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

A five-year relationship between Fort Benning and a Reserve academy came to an end July 22 in a ceremony in Harmony Church.

The 2nd U.S. Army Reserve Noncommissioned Officers Academy was inactivated as a result of downsizing of the U.S. Army Reserve forces.

"Over the past five years, (more than) 7,000 soldiers were inprocessed and trained with an 82 percent success rate, said Command Sgt. Maj Thomas B. Jackson, commandant of the 2nd NCO Reserve Academy, in his opening remarks.

On hand for the ceremony was Maj. Gen. Thomas P. Jones, special assistant to the commanding general, U.S. Army Reserve Command, who was the guest speaker.

"No one course makes a noncommissioned officer," Jackson said. "Experience, military and civilian education, maturity as a soldier and as an individual, the willingness to learn from our mistakes and others, taking care of the soldiers, taking care of the family and being ready for any challenge at any time makes a noncommissioned officer,"

The mission of the 2nd U.S. Army Reserve NCO Academy is to provide noncommissioned officers educational system training and functional course training to Army Reserve and Army National Guard soldiers.

Jones reflected on the accomplishments of the 2nd NCO Reserve Academy.

"The 2nd United States Army Reserve NCO Academy has since 1984 been a major contributor to the education of a generation of Army Reserve and Army National Guard NCOs," Jones said.

After Jones spoke, awards were given out to the cadre of the academy.

They included:

• Command Sgt. Maj. Thomas B. Jackson — Meritorious Service Medal

• Sgt. 1st Class Luis H. Alicea-Batlle — Meritorious Service Medal

• Staff Sgt. Charles E. Webb — Meritorious Service Medal

• Sgt. Debra D. Pitts — Meritorious Service Medal

• Sgt. Maj. Frank B. Orr — Army Commendation Medal

• 1st Sgt. Rick L. Nixon — Army Commendation Medal

• Staff Sgt. Barry W. Alspach — Army Commendation Medal

• Staff Sgt. Herman Lewis — Army Commendation Medal

• Staff Sgt. Archie H. Corbitt — Army Commendation Medal

• Sgt. Denise A. Washington — Army Commendation Medal.

Other noncommissioned officers were given awards at an earlier date due to permanent change of station. They were:

• Staff Sgt. Narciso Galarza — Meritorious Service Medal

• Staff Sgt. Dannie N. Wicker — Army Commendation Medal

• Sgt 1st Class Randall B. Wilson — Meritorious Service Medal

Jackson said he would like to thank the tri-community for their support of the academy over the past five years.

The official date of the inactivation date is Sept. 30. However, the operation at the Academy will cease between Monday and Aug. 15.

Marc G. Turchin

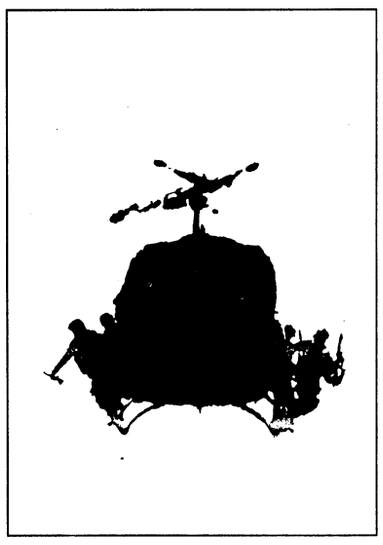
Army, Air Force helicopter mechanics merge in Va.

TRADOC News Service

The Army and Air Force have consolidated training of UH-60 Blackhawk mechanics at Fort Eustis, Va.



It is the first in a series of actions that will consolidate Air Force helicopter maintenance training at Fort Eustis under the Interservice Training Review Organization directed by former Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Gen. Colin Powell.

By April, Air Force UH-1 Huey and MH-53J Pave Low helicopter maintenance courses are also scheduled to move to Fort Eustis.

"This year we're training 20 Air Force maintenance personnel and we'll have a rough annual requirement for 40 airmen on the Blackhawk," said Will Zinn, chief of the plans division in the U.S. Army Aviation Logistic School's Training and Doctrine Directorate.

"The Army has the resources available, and it's difficult for us to procure H-60 trainers," said Maj. Jeff Gouge, aircraft maintenance flight commander at Sheppard Air Force Base, Texas. "Using Army resources saves procurement dollars."

Previously airmen trained to maintain Hueys and Pave Lows Combined Helicopter Training were later retrained to service Blackhawks by special maintenance teams. Those teams are no longer required.

Airmen will spend part of the 14-week course on Air Force unique modifications to the Blackhawk.

Air Force instructors will be added to USAALS' training staff. The number needed for the Blackhawk course is estimated at seven.

Fewer than 10 Air Force instructors will be needed for the Huey and Pave Low courses.

There will be about three Air Force administrative support personnel assigned to Eustis, and about 13 more personnel will be required to support the Air Force contingent, according to Zinn.

The Air Force will move its H-53 maintenance trainer to Fort Eustis in 1995, as well as Huey training devices.

"All Air Force helicopter maintenance training will then be at one location," Gouge said.

world war II

• In Warsaw, the patriots of the home army began open operations. The uprising was timed so that when the Soviet troops arrived they would find an established Polish government with the prestige of having liberated the national capital.

However, the Soviets stopped short of the capital claiming they were unable to move farther.

The Western Allies suspected that the Soviets stopped short because Joseph Stalin believed that if the Germans eliminated the home army, it would be easier to establish a communist regime.

• Russian units took Brest-Litovsk and Przemysl, Poland, and began outflanking Warsaw on the northeast, approaching to within 10 miles of the city. Simultaneously the First Belrussian Front, after taking Siedlice and Otwock, moved only 12 miles southeast of the city.

• On the Western Front, Patton's Third Army became operational and took up a position on the Allied right flank.

• On the Philippine Sea, the American heavy cruiser Indianapolis was sunk by a Japanese submarine.

• At Fort Benning, an underground magazine housing chemical warfare ammunition exploded in the Harmony Church area. The explosion resulted in about $60,000 in damage, but no one was hurt.

Change of command:

NCO Academy's new commandant makes short trip from Sand Hill to take over job

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

The Henry Caro Noncommissioned Officer Academy changed hands July 21 during a ceremony in the academy's auditorium at Building 880.

Outgoing commandant Command Sgt. Maj. Allan R. Halstead, who headed the NCOA since July 1992, passed command of the academy to Command Sgt. Maj. Willie G. Wells.

Halstead retired from the Army after 28 years of service, and will remain in Columbus with his wife, Dale, and daughter, Brandy.

While at the academy, which runs a Primary Leadership Development Course and Basic and Advanced Noncommissioned Officer courses, Halstead trained more than 7,000 leaders — both noncommissioned officers and those aspiring to be NCOs, said post Command Sgt. Maj. William H. Acebes.

Halstead took command during a restructuring process, "and he rebuilt this academy," Acebes said.

"As commandant, he became very active, and integrated himself into every facet of training and always was involved with soldiers and soldier training.

"The student release rate from this academy is the lowest in existence, and not because the standards were sacrificed ... but because the standards were maintained," he said.

Ruth J. Spaller

"He built the academy of small-group instructors who knew what teaching and mentoring were all about," Acebes said, which has led to the highest academic rate in the academy's history.

Halstead recognized those instructors during his turn at the podium, calling them "unsung heroes," and asking the audience to give them a round of applause.

He thanked his chain of command, deputy, staff, branch chiefs, secretary, family and friends of the academy for their work and support.

"With the combination of the help of a lot of people, I feel this academy is something that Fort Benning and the NCO corps can be proud of," he said.

Halstead, who was overcome by emotion at one point during his remarks and had to pause to regain his composure, was given a standing ovation at the end of his speech.

Wells makes his short trip to the academy from Sand Hill, where he served as command sergeant major of the 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Training Brigade.

His past assignments include service with the 1st Battalion, 52nd Infantry, 23rd Infantry Division, at Chu Lai, Vietnam; 2nd Battalion, 28th Infantry, 8th Infantry Division in Mainz, Germany; 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, and 3rd Battalion, 7th Infantry; U.S. Army Military Police School at Fort Gordon, Ga.; and 4th Battalion, 8th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 1st Armored Division in Mannheim, Germany.

Wells has a bachelor's degree in business administration from Troy State University and a master of science degree in management.

His military schools include the Basic Noncommissioned Officer Course (honor graduate), Army Precommission Course, Advanced Noncommissioned Officer Course (distinguished honor graduate) and the Sergeants Major Academy.

Wells' decorations include the Bronze Star Medal, four awards of the Meritorious Service Medal, the Army Commendation Medal, the Army Achievement Medal and the Vietnam Cross of Gallantry with palm. He also wears the Combat Infantryman Badge.

Wells and his wife, Mamie, have two children, their son, Courtney, and daughter, Wenonah, who attends Clemson University.

New unit, new post, new command for colonel in charge of 2nd MASH

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital, 36th Engineer Group, conducted a change of command ceremony July 21 at 9 a.m. on Roberts Field.

Lt. Col. Edward S. Crosbie succeeded Lt. Col. James H. Brooks. Crosbie previously commanded the 46th Combat Support Hospital, Fort Devens, Mass., during its recent deployment to Somalia from August to March.

Crosbie is a native of Methuen, Mass., and graduated from Norwich University, Vt., in May 1973. He was commissioned in the Medical Service Corps upon completion of the ROTC program and entered active service in February 1974. Crosbie has served in various command and staff positions in the United States, Panama and Europe. He has completed the Medical Service Corps Officer Basic and Advanced courses and the Armed Forces Staff College.

Crosbie and his wife, Ingrid, have three children.

Brooks commanded the 2nd MASH for the last two years.

His next assignment is with the Program Analysis and Evaluation Division Medical Command at Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

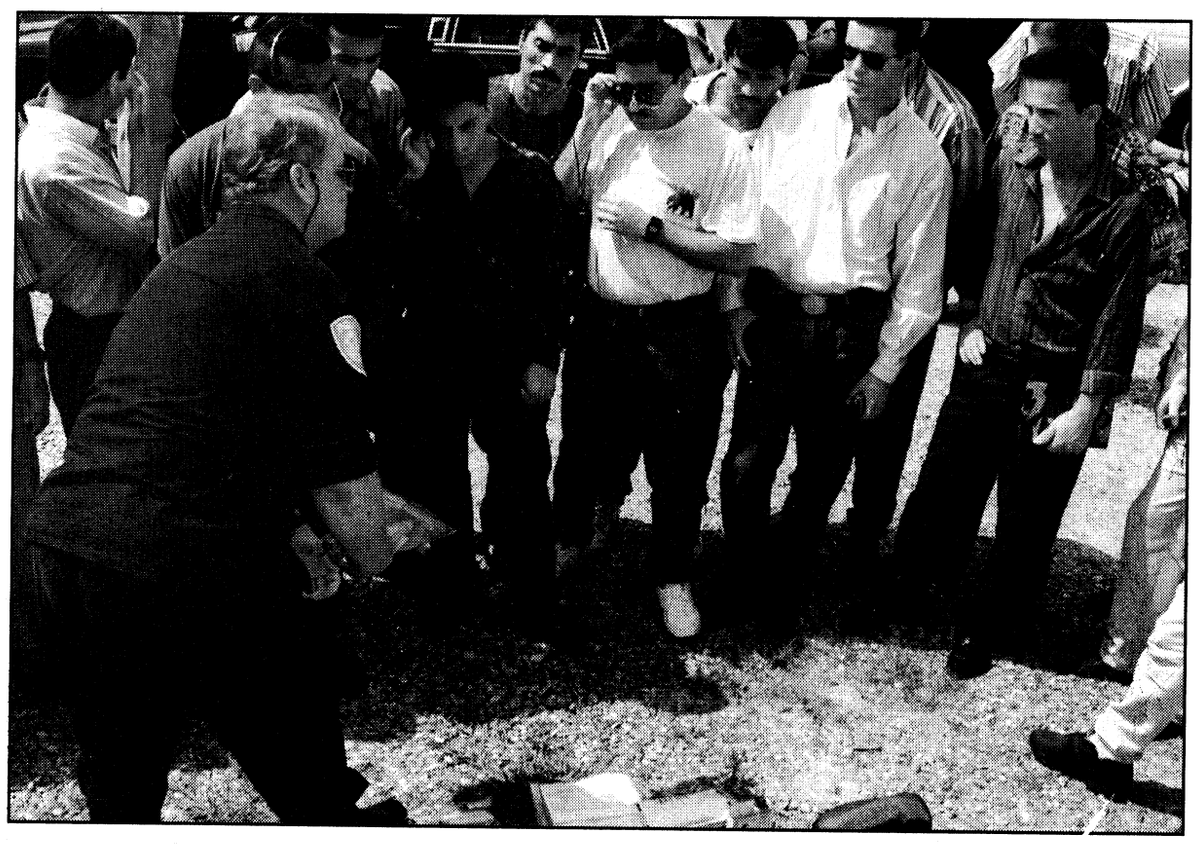
Brooks, born in Beaufort, S.C., graduated cum laude from Washington and Lee University in 1973 and was commissioned in the Medical Service Corps. He has served as a platoon leader, company commander, operations officer, executive officer in the 3rd, 4th and 6th Infantry divisions. Brooks has attended the Medical Service Corps Office Basic and Advanced courses, the Combat Casualty Care Course, the Combined Arms and Service Staff School and the Command and General Staff College.

'21st-century' classroom opens for strategic leaders

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — The Army War College opened the doors of what officials tout as "the Army's first classroom for the 21st century" — a high technology wargaming, simulation, research and conference center at Carlisle Barracks, Pa., July 12.

The new Collins Hall, named for former Army Chief of Staff Gen. J. Lawton Collins, features state-of-the-art communications and video and computer systems capable of tying into the information superhighway to provide information-age education for the future leaders of the nation's military.



The $52 million facility houses the Center for Strategic Leadership, which serves as an education center and laboratory focused on decision-making at inter-agency, strategic and operational levels of command.

"The facility will ensure that the professional development of tomorrow's leaders will take place in an environment that stimulates thought and contributes to the assigned mission of the Army War College," said Army Secretary Togo D. West Jr. at center's dedication.

He said Collins Hall will train leaders "not on how to lead soldiers to win the last war, but instead how to lead soldiers under many different circumstances and in many different environments".

The facility will support both the college curriculum and organizations such as the Army Staff, Joint Staff, major commands and governmental agencies.

It will conduct and host strategic-level wargaming, political-military simulations, peacekeeping courses and exercises, crisis management exercises, special studies, research, symposia and conferences, officials said.

29 SOA students tour Columbus

By Devon Kerbow
School of the Americas

Twenty-nine students from the School of the America's Counternarcotics Operations Course ventured out July 14 for a tour of Columbus.

Their first stop was the training grounds for the Columbus Police Department. Police Sgt. Warren Dunlap guided them through this part of the tour.

They were shown two firing ranges that the Columbus Police use, and were able to have their questions answered on ammunition, types of weapons the police can carry and the training facilities.

Next, they were taken to the obstacle course where Dunlap and a student raced through the barriers.

One item of interest for the students was when a police officer specializing in explosives, related a call the police had gotten the week before about pipebombs.

He said he thought it might be important to the students because of the increasing prevalence of pipebombs in Columbia and Peru.

While he was talking to the students, he and several other officers were in the process of finding out for courtroom purposes the composition of the pipebombs that were placed on the ground.

After leaving the training grounds, Dunlap led the students through the police station. Since the majority of the students are police officers in their own countries, they asked Dunlap and others in the building many questions about how an American police department is run.

Lunch was next at a local Columbus restaurant.

Staff Sgts. Jose Fernandez and Victor Felipe, both instructors in SOA's Special Operations Department, provided a running commentary throughout the tour about Columbus and the places the students might wish to visit.

The last stop was the National Infantry Museum. There, the students not only got to see U.S. history, but also pieces of history from the countries in which the United States had fought battles.

"They loved it," Fernandez said of the students reaction to the tour.

Each class at SOA is given a similar tour as part of the School of the America's Information Program.

The goal of the program isn't just to send the students home with military training, but with a knowledge of American life. This includes goals, institutions and the reasons behind why Americans feel the way they do about democracy.

Young adults learn to handle emergencies

By Devon Kerbow
School of the Americas

"What's the first thing you don't want to do in an emergency?" asked Staff Sgt. Robert Saenz, an instructor at the School of the Americas. "Panic!" Shouted 15 of the children who are participating in the Columbus Parks and Recreation Department's summer camp program.

"Right," Saenz said. "You can't help anybody when you panic."

Learning not to panic isn't the only thing these children are taught. Basic aid training and accident prevention are also part of the class given to some of the students from the 33 elementary schools in Columbus.

Weekly, SOA personnel teach children in the summer camp program what they can do in an emergency. The school students are taught cardiopulmonary resuscitation, house and pool safety, accident prevention and other Red Cross principles, according to SOA instructor and medic Sgt. 1st Class Jose Delatoree.

The training incorporates the American Red Cross video "Basic Aid Training Rescue Kids" into the program.

"We'd like to open the eyes of the community," Delatoree said. "We don't just train soldiers; we can teach young adults."

Delatoree added that Fort Benning is concerned with the community's youth growing up in a clean, safe atmosphere.

The Wednesday class began with Saenz briefing the group on the importance of first aid and SOA's mission. The class discussed where and how accidents happened and what to do when they did.

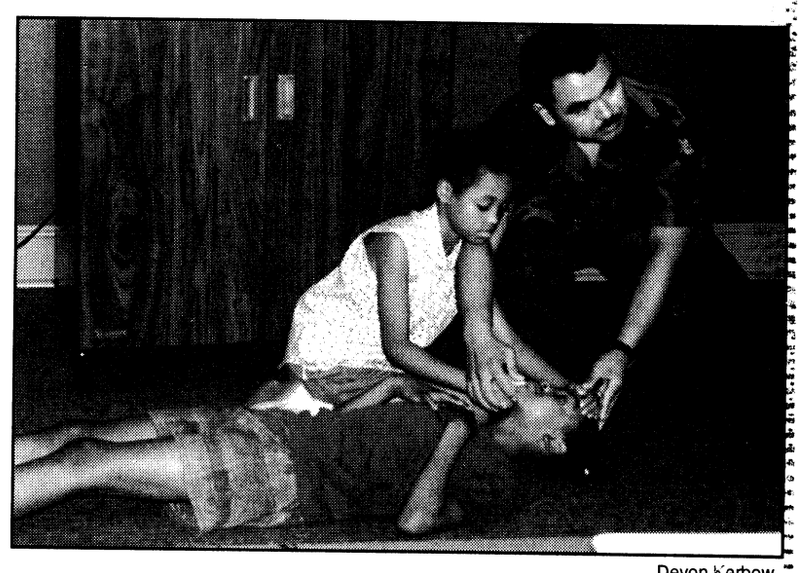
"The first thing you want to do is to go get help," Saenz said. He then explained how to make a 911 call.

The class learned how to distinguish a bone that could be broken.

Saenz warned them against moving anyone with a broken bone and told them they might make the person worse.

The summer camp program also came to SOA last year.

"It's a great education for kids," Holt said.



The summer camp runs from June 17 through Aug. 19, and has operated for the past three years. It offers sports, games, guest speakers and field trips to places like SOA, the Springer Opera House and local businesses.

"It was designed as a latchkey program to keep kids off the streets," Holt said.

Any youth grade kindergarten through six is eligible for the program.

Currently, more than 600 children are involved in the day camp and are divided into eight elementary schools.

For more information on the class, contact Holt at 571-4971or Delatorre at 545-3522.

Post teachers continue to learn

Staff studies new ways of instructing

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet©

Summer is here, so students and teachers alike are enjoying endless days of leisure symbolized by lounging in the shade while sipping pink lemonade.

Not quite.

Although Fort Benning students traditionally get the summer away from school, post teachers are hard at work perfecting new teaching techniques and enhancing their knowledge of various subjects in a series of staff development courses.

"Staff development courses enable the school system to develop training that relates specifically to the needs of students and teachers who work with them," said Gail Wilson, director of staff development.

"These courses allow us to focus on new programs, materials, teaching strategies and use of technology," she added.

From fun, easy chemistry experiments to strategies to support the successful reading recovery program, teachers are receiving extra training to better enable them to combine language arts, math, sciences and social studies into cross curricular activities, said Wilson.

In all, more than 125 Fort Benning educators are involved in course work over the summer in various locations in Georgia as well as other states.

Among the courses teachers will study are a math and science connections study at Columbus College; "Kid Kemistry" and "Phun Physics" courses at Fort Gordon, Ga., Environmental Literacy Studies in Education at various locations including the Tennessee Aquarium and environmental studies at the Tugaloo Environmental Education Center in South Carolina.

In addition to classes supporting environmental studies, math, science and ways to integrate technology, teachers will participate in courses designed to support the new language arts curriculum that will be implemented in post schools when classes begin in the fall.

"The enhanced language arts curriculum is based on the belief that to be ready for the world of work in the 21st century, students must be ready to communicate both orally and in writing," said Dell Karr, superintendent of Fort Benning Schools.

The new language arts curriculum will draw from more literary resources while using additional methods of evaluating the writing process.

"With this new program, each student will have numerous opportunities to develop reading, writing, listening and speaking abilities," Karr said.

Although the goal is to develop stronger skills in students, teachers also benefit from staff development courses by comparing notes with other educators while recharging for the coming year.

By participating in summer courses, "You get revitalized," said Stacey Carlisle, fourth-grade teacher at Loyd.

While participating in a science staff development course, Linda Turner, third-grade teacher at Dexter, explored new methods of teaching concept of static electricity using easy, inexpensive materials.

Part of the teaching process involves "sparking an interest" in her children and helping them sharpen thinking skills, Turner said.

"I think it's more exciting for them when they make discoveries themselves," said Turner.

Turner and about two dozen other Fort Benning teachers gathered recently for a course combining math, science and language arts centered on the study of snails.

Each teacher put an assigned snail through the paces in a series of experiments designed to test preferences for color, taste and environmental comfort.

Once data was studied and charted, teachers learned methods of summarizing and graphing the information to bring language arts and math into the lesson.

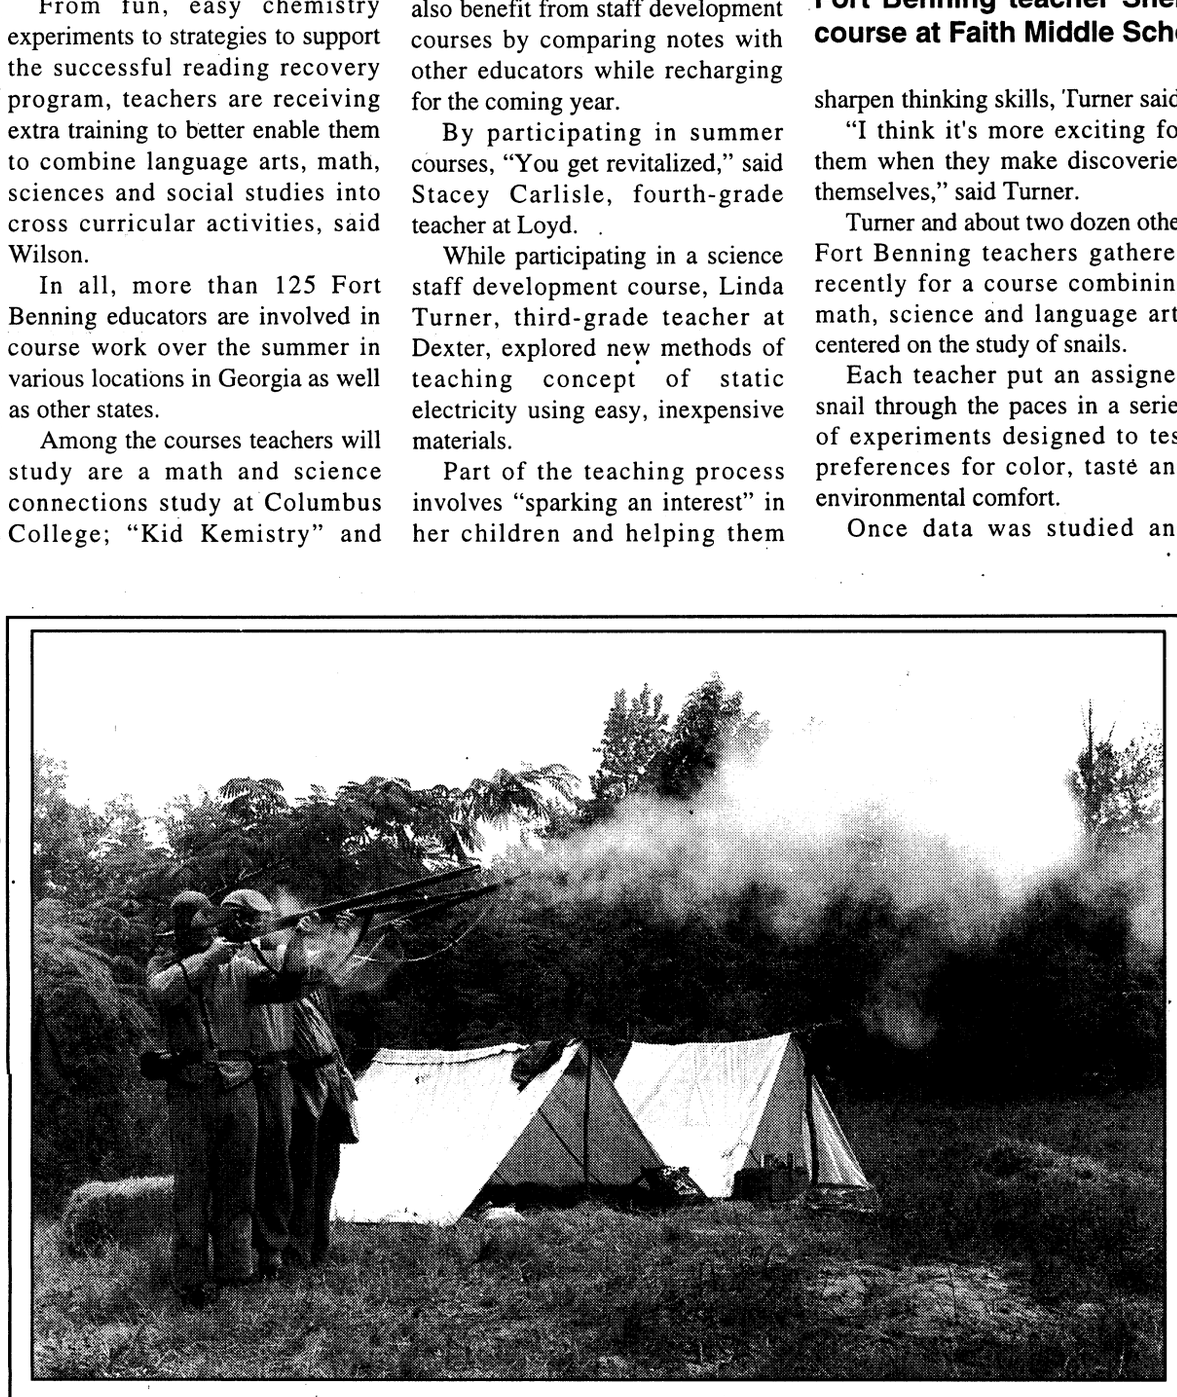
"Our main purpose is to give more hands on ideas," said Jerry Christy, curriculum coordinator.

Innovative ideas for science experiments combined with inexpensive materials enable teachers to easily bring science alive for the students, Christy said.

"Many times there are simple things right under our noses to use in science," said Christy, who coordinated the workshop on snails as well as summer courses on static electricity, air pressure and molecular motion.

Although teachers participate in such activities to spark student interest while focusing on curriculum objectives, the real beneficiaries are the children.

"We believe that student growth and achievement is directly related to the understanding and involvement of the teachers who work with them," Wilson said.



Consistently throughout the years, Fort Benning educators have actively participated in staff development offerings; throughout the year, a total of 249 educators participated in some kind of staff development course to supplement knowledge, sharpen skills and enrich methods of presentation.

So as the endless days of August wear on and youngsters begin to yearn for the start of school, teachers will be waiting for them, revitalized and ready to present lessons in new and exciting ways, said Wilson.

> "We will keep a strong defense because, although the Cold War has ended, we now have a fitful peace."
> — Ed Dorn
> Undersecretary of Defense > for personnel and readiness

The Department of Defense helps communities, service members and civilian workers overcome drawdown related economic dislocations — because that's what makes sense, the department's top personnel manager said.

Ed Dorn, undersecretary of Defense for personnel and readiness, told a Florida audience that making communities strong economically is in the country's best defense interests. He said the nuclear threat once posed by the Soviet Union was overwhelming.

"Now we operate under a broad concept of national security that includes our economic well-being," he said.

The Clinton administration has identified three strategic priorities. The first, Dorn said, puts economics at the center of U.S. foreign policy. The second strategic goal is to adapt the military to a new strategic environment. Third, the United States is working to encourage market democracies.

"The president knows that we must keep our guard up while we bring our deficit down," Dorn said. "We will keep a strong defense because, although the Cold War has ended, we now have a fitful peace."

Closures most affect communities around military bases. The president has strong feelings about helping those communities survive and prosper, Dorn said, referring to Clinton's days as Arkansas governor.

"The president has spoken many times about his frustration," Dorn said. "When a base was closing in Arkansas, the federal government told Gov. Clinton that he could have the base, but only if the state came up with huge amounts of money to convert it. Meanwhile, the federal government did virtually nothing to help all the people who would be displaced by base closures."

Dorn said as president, Clinton vowed to close bases the right way. The administration base closure plan calls for turning property over to local communities quickly and with an eye toward economic redevelopment. Officials placed environmental clean-up on a "fast track." There are transition coordinators at the closing bases to help both people and communities cope with the impact.

The Transition Assistance Program, started in 1991, has helped hundreds of thousands of service members, he continued. Also, more than 6,000 employers have participated.

Dorn said the DoD civilian transition programs have been very successful at minimizing reductions in force. He pointed to the Priority Placement Program and separation incentives as being particularly effective.

USAMU gunsmith to 'lay down weapons'

By Deana Kussman
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

"Do good work, and you'll get good returns," said Clyde Malphus, 64, who builds and repairs airguns, shotguns and rifles.

Malphus, an unassuming, gracious man with an air of quiet confidence, has worked under that rule for the past 45 years, and that's how he'll continue to live when he retires at the end of this month.

The gunshop in the basement of the Army Marksmanship Unit's Headquarters building is Malphus' domain, a large room with a myriad of machines and gun parts strewn over bare surfaces. The cheery atmosphere is generated by the jests Malphus and his four co-workers share.

"The greatest ambition is when you build weapons that help turn the shooters into winners," Malphus quietly confides, hands clasped firmly together in his lap. "It gives you the thrill of knowing you built something that has accomplished a mission out there as a winner. That's the greatest thing."

The push to do good work is not something Malphus was taught, nor was any single person instrumental in encouraging his career.

"I inspired myself, more or less, more than anything else," Malphus said unpretentiously.

Since he was a child on his parents' rural Georgia farm, Malphus was interested in guns. He took apart his father's rifles and shotguns to study the parts, then would frantically reassemble the weapons before he was caught.

Malphus has been a gunsmith for 17 years as a civil service worker with the Marksmanship Unit, Fort Benning unit that specializes in pistol and rifle competition. He also spent 22 years in the military, reaching the rank of master sergeant before he retired.

The years Malphus spent in the military are still visible in his mannerisms. Each movement is crisp and clean, and he carries himself with self-assured authority. Even his clothing resembles a uniform, the pressed slacks and button-down shirts all calling to mind the regularity of military dress.

In 1958, 10 years after he joined the Army, Malphus was assigned to the Marksmanship Unit as a shooter.

He moved between Fort Benning and other assignments until 1960, when he became a gunsmith.

With a laugh, Malphus remembers his transition from shooter to gunsmith.

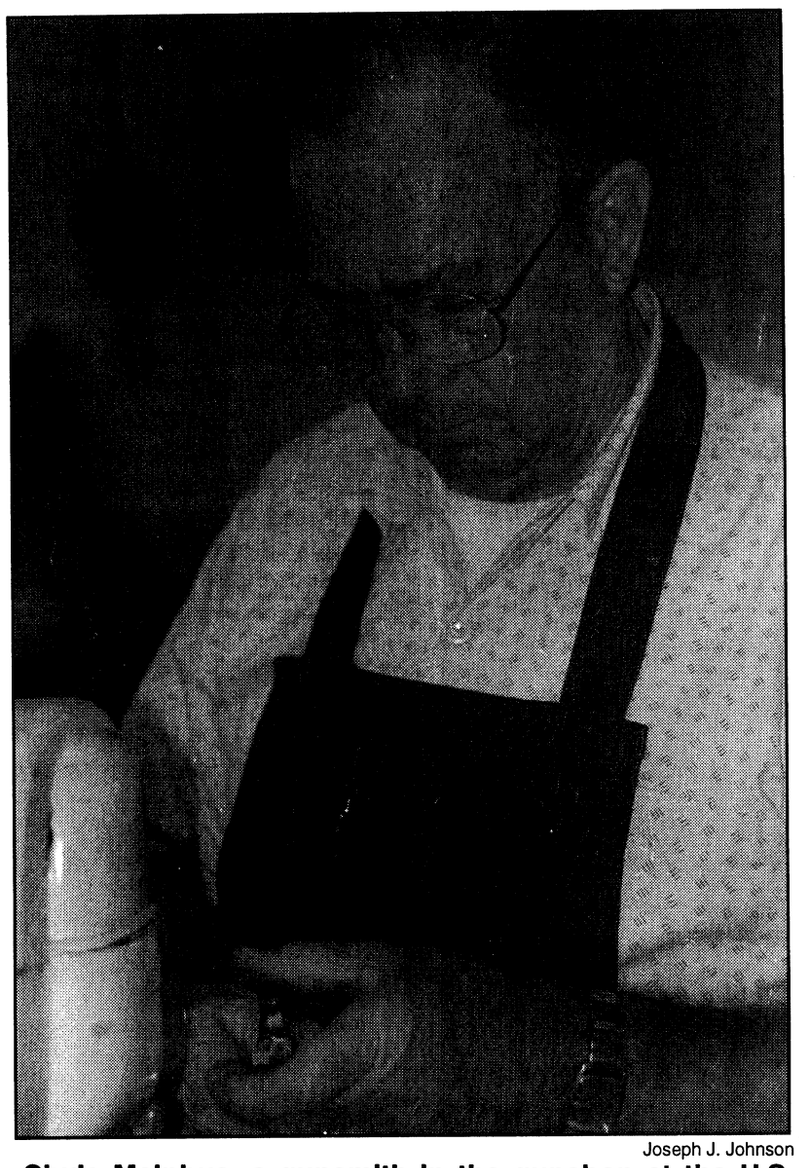
"The colonel said, 'That's it; you don't shoot now, Malphus, you're a gunsmith.' So that's what I've been doing ever since."

In 1972, Malphus retired from the Army. For the next six years, he worked at a local dairy and steel mill.

He returned to the Marksmanship Unit in 1978 as a full-time gunsmith. Magnums are his specialty, and recently he was placed in charge of the international weapons section, where he now spends most of his time.

Richard Hopp, a gunsmith who has worked under Malphus for more than nine years at the Marksmanship Unit, said he admires Malphus' ability and dedication.

"He does good work. Hardworking. You can count on him anytime you need to," Hopp said. "He's quiet."



Hopp has learned a lot about gunsmithing from Malphus, especially about high-powered magnums, and he said he admires Malphus' leadership ability.

"He's a good leader. He'll make a decision; he doesn't just wait around, looking at others. He makes good decisions."

The part of gunsmithing Malphus said he will miss most after he retires is seeing the winning results from the guns he builds.

"As a gunsmith, you build equipment for the shooters to perform with, and they do the best they can with it," Malphus said.

"That's the greatest thing, something you've built, and had your hands on; you see it go out and your product comes back as a winner."

Joseph J. Johnson

Department of Army updates environmental regulation

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — The Army is seeking inputinto how it is revising the regulation that implements its environmental policies.

The informal review, due by Aug. 31, seeks comments from Army agencies, such as those dealing with real estate, construction,acquisition, public affairs, training and master planning. This is because several proposed major changes are included with the preliminary revision to Army Regulation 200-2, the Environmental Analysis for Army Actions.

"We are shifting responsibility to major commands and installations more than in the old regulation," said Michael L.

Cain, acting director of environment, Army Environmental Programs Office.

"This will be a downsized and streamlined regulation in accordance with Vice President Al Gore's reinventing government principles," he said. "An accompanying Department of the Army pamphlet will follow three or four months after the new regulation is published in January."

In addition, Cain said the list of categorical exclusions will be expanded and clarified in the new regulation and some actions under several environmental acts will be exempted by policy from analysis under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969.

The preliminary revision is available through the Defense Environmental Network and Information Exchange and the Center for Public Works Data Distribution System. For assistance using DENIX, call (800) 642-3332. To access the CPW system, call (703) 355-3471.

Comments can be sent to the U.S. Army Environmental Center; Attn: SFIM-AEC-ECA, Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md. 21010-5401, or fax to (410) 612-6814.

Q: I contacted a local loan company to see about getting a small signature loan to pay for a vacation that I wanted to give my parents for their 25th wedding anniversary.

As soon as the loan officer heard that I was in the military, she said that the company does not lend money to military members. Can a company refuse to lend me money because I'm in the Army?

A: Many of the small loan companies in this area have a policy against lending to military personnel.

The general consensus is that this policy is based on the loan companies' past experience with soldiers who failed to pay debts, removed collateral from the state in violation of financing agreements, and transferred to other states leaving unpaid balances.

It is not against Georgia or federal law to refuse to extend credit to military members based just on their active duty status.

The law prohibits discrimination in the extension of credit solely based on sex, race, religion, national origin or marital status. Thus, the company is not violating the law.

Family member finds 1st album 'Worth the Wait'

By Shelby Carr
Infantry Training Brigade

For the past few weeks, a new song called "Do Me Right" has been playing over the airwaves of Columbus. The song is from an up-and-coming artist, Yvonne Denise, the wife of Staff Sgt. Walter Watkins, a drill sergeant at 30th Adjutant General Battalion (Reception), who sings background vocals for his wife's album.

The album, "Worth the Wait," is a rhythm and blues and pop album released three weeks ago in tape format and will be available on compact disc in August. It is Denise's first album.

Denise received help not only from her husband but many others in the music industry who have worked with famous artists. R.J. Rice produced the album, and Rodney Mills, who has worked with .38 Special, reproduced the album.

Watkins

Oliver Wells, who worked with Philip Bailey, played the keyboard for several songs. Antonio Jeffries, who has worked with Toni Braxton, played music for two of the songs on the album, and the Ridgeway Sisters, of Aretha Franklin fame, sing background vocals on the album.

Other people who helped with the album include Remoh Thompson, a background singer, Ricky Keller and D.D. Rice, wife of producer R.J. Rice.

"You have to believe in yourself before others believe in you," Denise said. "Never let go of your dreams and never quit."

The album was produced at Southern Tracks Studio in Atlanta, under an independent label.

With tapes in several stores in the Columbus area, Denise is now trying to find a major distributor to help her with the sales of her album.

"I wanted to make sure it was done right," Denise said. "Not just done."

With help from Command Sgt. Major Oscar Geraldo of the 30th AG Bn., Denise is trying to arrange a show on Fort Benning for post soldiers.

voting news

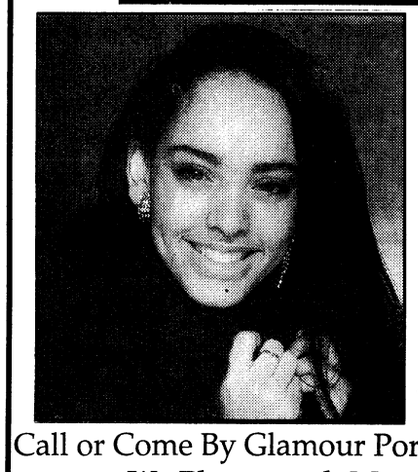
Federal Voting Assistance Program

In the 1992 Post-Election Survey, 25 percent of local election officials reported that illegibility was a major problem in processing Federal Post Card Applications.

By the same token, military personnel and overseas citizens sometimes indicate that their addresses are miscopied from their ballot requests onto the ballot transit envelope.

This is not difficult, as overseas and military addresses are often in a different format from the addresses used to send regular mail within the United States and may include unfamiliar abbreviations, names and numerical codes. They also could vary in length and composition.



However, this confusion must be avoided in order to prevent voting materials from being misdirected between voters and the local election office.

Absentee voters should write their addresses clearly, especially when completing Item 4 of the FPCA.

Federal Voting Assistance Program officials also urge local election officials to record the address precisely as given on the application, so that ballots and other materials may find their intended recipients.

So that voting material may be processed as quickly and efficiently as possible, addresses and all other information should be written legibly or typed. This will facilitate passage through U.S. military and international postal systems, as well as through the facsimile transmission process, if needed.

Golf course employee becomes 'legend'

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning lost a "legend" Wednesday when an employee who worked at the Follow Me Golf Course for 49 years, 9 months and 12 days, retired.

Freddie McKnight, who turns 75 Saturday, has worn a lot of different hats over the years, he said, managing the snack bar, running the pro shop, serving as caddy master and locker room attendant.

He has fixed clubs, cleaned equipment and collected balls from the driving range for years, but it seems it's not what he did, but the way he did it, that's made him such an integral figure at the golf course.

"Freddie's kind of an institution here," said George Cliff, general manager of the course. "He's almost like a greeter. He always has that smile and acts like he knows you."

In truth, everyone who arrived at the course the morning before McKnight's last day was met with a friendly "Good Morning" and greeted as an old friend as they stopped to chat for a few minutes.

"People from all over the world, when they come back to Fort Benning, will come back to visit Freddie," Cliff said. "It's like everyone Freddie's ever touched, he's had that effect on them."

For McKnight, it's the people he knows and has met at the golf course who have been the essence of his job.

"I started (working) here on Oct. 15, 1945," he said. "I wasn't intending to stay this long, but I've made such good friends ... quite a lot of friends."

Among those friends were many of the post's commanding generals, whose photos and letters McKnight collected on the wall of his small office .

"Most of the fellows on the wall back there, I knew them when they (were) lieutenants — now they're generals," he said.

Fort Benning's current commanding general, Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, is only one of the officers McKnight has seen rise through the ranks. "I think he was a major, I believe, when I met him," he said.

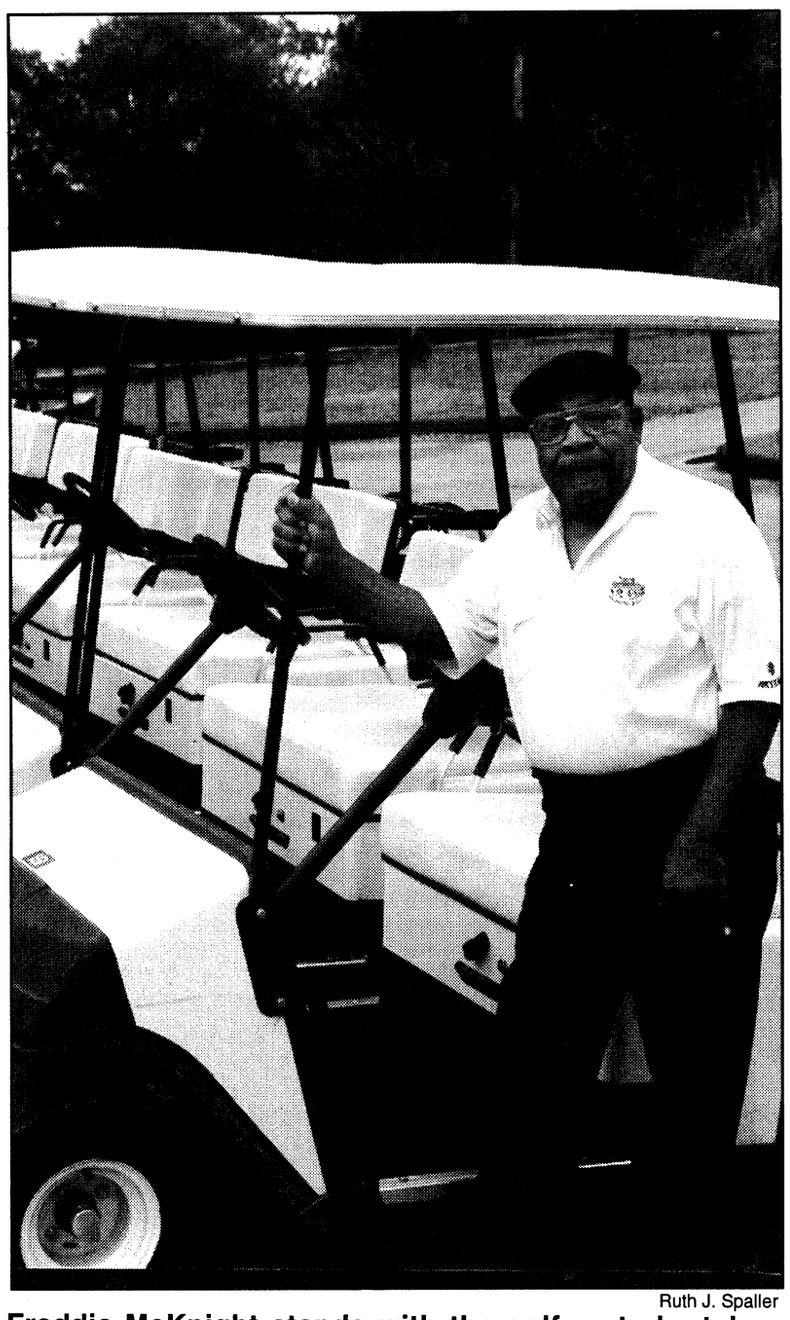
Another of these officers was retired Gen. Edwin Burba Jr., who commanded Fort Benning in 1986 and '87 and went on to become the commander of Forces Command.

Burba wrote to McKnight when he heard of his retirement, "You have touched so many of us in such a special way," and he remembered McKnight's "extraordinary knack for making people feel good about themselves whether they be generals or privates."

McKnight saw a lot of history in his almost 50 years at the course. One of the most famous men McKnight said he remembers is Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, who came to play golf at Fort Benning in '46 or '47.

And professional golfer Larry Mize worked for McKnight as a range attendant when he was "a 22-year-old, struggling young golfer," Cliff said.

McKnight has also seen the course change a lot over the years — from 18 holes when he started to the two 18-hole courses today, Lakeside and Pineside.



"It's improved and is still improving," McKnight said. "I wish I was young and they had the place like it is now."

"I'd like to stay longer, but Father Time is catching up," McKnight said.

McKnight said his health is failing. "I hate to leave ... I have to have an operation."

In his recommendation that McKnight be named the Morale Welfare and Recreation employee of the month for July, Cliff wrote: "Upon his retirement, a legend will cease to exist."

"Nobody will replace him," Cliff said. "Someone else will be hired to do the work he does, but he's not the type you can replace."

Beware when getting flood repairs

Better Business Bureau

The Better Business Bureau warns homeowners suffering from damage from the flood not to let disaster strike twice.

The BBB warns about itinerant repair people and gives tips on finding reputable contractors and on contracts.

It's an unfortunate truth that "con men" often breeze into disaster areas, clean out as many people as possible, then blow out of town. This also can apply to some local and area contractors.

The BBB advises consumers not to be stampeded into signing a contract for long-term home repairs. It might be necessary to make emergency repairs to your home in order to prevent further damage, and it may not be possible or practical to shop around for a contractor and to get competing bids.

But, before you have permanent repairs done, take time to check out the contractor. In all cases, you should have a written contract covering the work to be done and the price to be paid. Review it carefully before you sign.

As soon as possible after damage, consumers should check with their insurance company about policy coverage and any specific claim filing requirements the company may have.

According to local BBB president Lou Marcotte, consumers should be wary of itinerant repairmen who just appear in the area.

"The Better Business Bureau knows from experience that in the wake of disasters, "fly-by-night" operators often try to take money from victims, supposedly to buy home repair materials, then leave town, never to be seen again or by doing shoddy work with nonstandard materials and then disappearing," Marcotte said.

To find a reputable home improvement or repair contractor, the BBB urges home owners to take the following precautions:

• Never pay for all of the repairs in advance. A deposit of one-third should be sufficient. Pay when the job (or certain phases) is completed and you are satisfied. You might consider a hold-back of 10 percent for a preagreed time to ensure all work is done satisfactorily.

• Don't pay by cash; pay by charge card or check. Know whom you are paying, and don't pay the helper; pay the contractor. Keep records of payments.

• Never take oral promises or contracts. Get it in writing.

• If possible, obtain bids from several contractors, making sure that the specifications of each bid are identical.

• Get and verify the contractors full address; a phone number or a post office box is not acceptable.

• Check the city or county business license departments to be sure the contractor is properly licensed.

• Obtain a reliability report on the firm by calling the Better Business Bureau at 324-0712 or (800) 768-4222.

• Check records at the clerk's office for local magistrates and superior court claims and judgments against the contractor or company.

• Make sure that the contractor has adequate liability and worker's compensation insurance in case of an accident on your property. Ask for proof of insurance coverage. If there is any resistance, beware.

• Ask for and check references. Talk to previous customers and go look at similar work that has been completed.

• Beware of fly-by-night repair businesses soliciting work in unmarked trucks and requiring advanced payments.

• Do not succumb to high-pressure sales techniques. Don't be pushed into anything that you don't feel good about.

• Never sign a completion certificate unless you are completely satisfied with the completed work. Don't take promises of sign now, I'll be back to finish.

BBB cautions that all contracts for home repairs should include:

• Full (and verified) name, address and phone number of the contractor.

• A written, detailed description of all the work to be done, including the quality of materials to be used.

• A bid based on the job, not by the unit (hour, board, foot, gallon, etc.)

• A price breakdown of both labor and materials.

• Start up and completion dates.

• A written statement reiterating any oral promises made by the contractor or sales representative.

• A written statement on warranties on the job, material and labor.

• Protection against property liens that result from contractors not paying for materials used on the job, nonpayment of subcontractors or employees. Add a release-of-lien clause to contract or place payments in escrow until job completion.

• A "three-day cooling off period;" federal and state laws apply to contracts signed at the consumer's home or at place other than the contractor's normal place of business. Only the consumer can elect to wave this three-day rule by indicating so in his or her own handwriting.

• Lastly, the BBB warns that consumers should not let a contractor talk them into "saving money" by circumventing the law. Ask yourself, "Why does this contractor want to break the law?"

Building permit and license laws and ordinances are in effect to protect the consumer. Those who do not have all the required permits may find themselves paying a stiff fine, and there won't be any local inspectors to ensure that the work was done properly and in accordance with the ordinances.

2 earn CDA designation

Directorate of Community Activities

Two family child-care providers at Fort Benning have earned their Child Development Associate credential.

Betty Cole and Jackie Mumpower earned the designation by completing activities with children, written and oral testing, formal observation and compiling a personal resource file.

Their activities showed proficiency in working with children ages infant through preschool. They covered all areas of a child's development, including physical, social, emotional and mental.

In addition to her work here, Cole has worked at centers in Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.; Germany; Tot Town; and off post.

Her husband is Sgt. Timothy Cole of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment. They have one son, T.J.

Mumpower worked as a family child-care provider in Darmstadt, Germany.

Her husband is Staff Sgt. Richard Mumpower with the 4th Ranger Training Battalion. Their children are Kristen and Kayla.

PRIMUS enrollment available

By John S. Wynn
Martin Army Community Hospital

community care

Military beneficiaries who receive their care from the Primary Care for the Uniformed Services Family Practice Clinic will have a chance to ensure that enrollment information on file in the computer at Martin Army Community Hospital system is correct.

This process will take place through September. Once completed, hospital personnel hope to have as accurate of a data base as possible. Currently, the hospital's enrollment data base shows that more than 21,000 beneficiaries are enrolled at the clinic.

The entire review process should take only moments and is just a routine part of maintaining enrollment at the PRIMUS Clinic. The clinic is a government-contracted service, which is reimbursed based on a set fee multiplied by the number of beneficiaries enrolled. Those beneficiaries who have either moved out of the area or have chosen to no longer use the clinic will be removed from the data base, so that the government doesn't pay for unused medical services.

The verification process will be conducted in two phases. First, during the month of July, the hospital will have a health-care finder located at the clinic. Those beneficiaries who come to the clinic can review their enrollment data with one of the finders. This review can be completed just prior to being seen.

The second phase will kick off in August. Those beneficiaries who didn't come by the clinic, will be mailed notices that contain a self-addressed postage-paid envelope, enrollment verification form and instruction sheet.

The beneficiary will be asked to review the form and indicate changes, if any, and return it using the envelope provided.

The process of compiling the updated information will continue into September. Those families who don't respond by the Sept. 15 deadline will be sent a reminder notice, and those who don't respond at all, will be removed from the enrollment data.

Using the experience gained from a survey conducted earlier this year, the hospital is making this verification process as user friendly as possible. By removing those individuals from the data base who don't use the clinic, the hospital can better manage its available resources.

For more information, call 544-1591 or 544-1447.

Questions about community care at the hospital or its clinics can be sent to Community Care Corner, Martin Army Community Hospital, ATTN: HSXB-F, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905-6100.

Ladd returns in CBS' 'One West Waikiki'

By Jay Bobbin,
Tribune Media Services

She hasn't done a series since the end of "Charlie's Angels" 13 years ago, but Cheryl Ladd is taking up sleuthing again.

Actually, instead of playing a literal detective this time, the popular star of numerous TV-movies is going the route previously followed by Jack Klugman in "Quincy, M.E." — as a forensic pathologist — but in an extremely scenic setting. The CBS drama "One West Waikiki" has a two-hour premiere Thursday, establishing Ladd as Dr. Dawn Holliday ... known to some, as this time of reborn interest in Wyatt Earp might signal, as "Doc Holliday." She travels from Los Angeles to Hawaii (where the show is being filmed on location) to deliver a speech at a seminar, but during the visit, a murder case that holds a personal element for her calls her expertise into active play.

Almost immediately, she clashes with police lieutenant Mack Wolfe (Richard Burgi, an alumnus of daytime serials "One Life to Live" and "Days of Our Lives") and his boss (Paul Gleason), but she doesn't back down in demonstrating that her professional speciality can be invaluable in helping them solve homicides.

The show's creator and executive producer is TV veteran Glen A. Larson, who's dealt before with both forensics (in the aforementioned "Quincy") and the Hawaiian islands (with"Magnum, p.i.").

Cheryl Ladd and Richard Burgi

"A call came into my husband (producer Brian Russell) from a friend in the business," Ladd explains of her decision to take up weekly work again," and he said, 'There's this project, and I know that Cheryl isn't really interested in a series, but this one's good and the character's fabulous ... and it's so Cheryl.' Brian said, 'Well, send it and we'll take a look.' Afterward, he said to me, 'Honey, I think this is one you should read. It's right up your alley.' Well, boy, was he right. I'm nuts about this character, and my favorite shows in this genre are the 'Columbo' types, the whodunits. The other element I love here is the forensic-medicine side, since the show has a very strong base in reality by showing her being this kind of doctor and being serious about what she does."

What: "One West Waikiki"
When: Thursday on CBS

However, Ladd hastens to add that it's not all business for her "Waikiki" alter ego, since she says the show also has "the glamour and appeal and exotic scenery of Hawaii, as did 'Magnum.' It also has an element of 'Moonlighting,' since this woman who is straight-forward and linear in her approach has to deal with this detective who's about as instinctive and politically correct as it gets. He's her polar opposite, and there's an underlying sexual tension that neither of them ever would acknowledge. He basically can't stand her and she basically can't stand him, but they have this begrudging respect for each other, because they're both really good at what they do and they have to work together. This (show) is all of that rolled into one. Some of it is very funny, but the humor comes out of who the characters are."

Special broadcast details rangers' mission in Somalia

By Caejar A. Cox
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Through a special arrangement with "Dateline NBC," USAIC-TV will air a special broadcast detailing the 75th Rangers' Oct. 3 mission in Somalia. "The Mission" will be aired in its entirety, commercial free and uninterrupted.

This special presentation will begin airing Monday morning.

Some Fort Benning soldiers are currently in Kuwait to help make training safer for U.S. and Kuwaiti troops. A special group of soldiers, experts in explosives, are dealing with unexploded ordnance from the Gulf War.

Watch "Fort Benning Today" for this special report from the gulf.

USAIC-TV Schedule

Emu chicks on display at Zoo Atlanta

Atlanta Zoo

ATLANTA — Four gangly emu chicks are on exhibit at Zoo Atlanta with their very tall parents.

Resembling fuzzy brown watermelons with 12-inch legs, the chicks' sizes vary with their hatching order.

The smallest chick isn't the "runt" of the clutch, just the last to hatch in April. All will reach the five-foot stature of their parents and weigh up to 110 pounds.

The emu is the world's second largest living bird — second only to the ostrich of Africa. They are native to Australia where they prefer grasslands and open forests.

Emus feed on a wide variety of plant material — green shoots and grasses, and occasionally fruit and insects.

Emus lay from five to 15 very large dark-green eggs. Taking an average of 56 days to incubate, the chicks peep to each other signaling that it is time to hatch.

Zoo Atlanta's emu eggs were incubated artificially due to the cold outdoor temperatures last winter.

The chicks develop quickly. They can peck at food on their second day, and run and swim competently at one week of age.

Unlike most species of birds, the male emu incubates the eggs and rears the young.

Adult emus show the chicks what to eat, and the oldest of the zoo brood picked up feeding behavior without hesitation; the others "followed the leader."

COLUMBUS MUSEUM CLASSES FOR CHILDREN — The Columbus Museum is offering the following classes for children:

Around the World — Today from 9 a.m. to noon. Children ages 6 through 8 can explore different cultures from countries around the world through class projects involving drawing, painting, printmaking and sculpture. All supplies are included. Cost is $35 for museum members, $40 for nonmembers.

Drawing — Today from 3 to 5 p.m. Teacher Sally Bradley offers teens the opportunity to practice the principles of drawing from life and from imagination. Students must supply their own 14 by 17 inch sketch book and drawing pencils. Cost is $30 for museum members, $35 for nonmembers.

Registration for all classes is on a first-come, first-served basis. The museum reserves the right to cancel courses which do not meet minimum registration. In such cases, advance payments will be refunded. For more information, call Elinor Winn at 649-0713.

WEDNESDAYS AT THE COLUMBUS MUSEUM — The Columbus Museum will offer a different event for children and their parents each Wednesday from 11 a.m. until noon in the museum's Patrick Theater.

The programs are recommended for children ages 4 and up and admission is free. Seating is limited and available on a first-come, first-served basis. For more information, call Elinor Winn at 649-0713.

Wednesday — Atlanta storyteller Betty Ann Wylie will present a program of interactive storytelling.

The Columbus Museum, located at 1251 Wynnton Road, features exhibitions of American art and regional history and includes a hands-on discovery gallery for children. The museum is open from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays and 1 to 5 p.m. on Sundays.

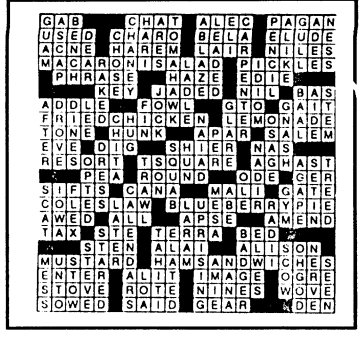
CHILDREN'S THEATRE SERIES — "When Dinosaurs Ruled the World" is a dance musical for young audiences being put on by the Springer Opera House. This musical will be performed Aug. 5 and 6. Tickets are $15.

For more information write Springer Opera House, P.O. Box 1626, Columbus, Ga. 31902

WEEKEND HIKES AT PANOLA MOUNTAIN — Through Sept. 10, Panola Mountain State Park, Stockbridge.

Guided hikes are being offered every Saturday and Sunday at 2:30 p.m. through Labor Day. The free program, geared toward nature lovers, hikers and families, begins with a slide show on the flora and fauna on Panola Mountain and ends with a three-mile (two- to three-hour) hike.

Through Sept. 10, when the summer months heat up, the slide presentation and hike will begin at a cool 10 a.m. on Saturdays and Sundays.



Organized groups may call ahead for reservations. Contact Panola Mountain at (404) 389-7801 for more information.

BUZZIN' ABOUT BEES — Chat with area beekeepers at Panola Mountain State Park during the Buzzin' About Bees free program Aug. 6 at 3 p.m.

Families will be able to view the complexities and organization of the beehive, taste their sweet honey, play bee games, and make arts and crafts.

Panola Mountain State Park is located in Stockbridge, Ga.

Providence Canyon to host 'Kudzu Takeover Day'

Georgia State Parks

It creeps and it crawls; it climbs and it covers. It also can be used to create crafts, play games and even make lemonade.

It is Georgia's most prolific vine, and the Georgia State Parks and Historic Sites are paying homage to kudzu Aug. 13.

Take a look at the lighter side of the kudzu vine at the ninth annual Kuzdu Takeover Day and Craft Fair, hosted by Providence Canyon State Park. From 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Aug. 13, you can join jump rope, play tug of war, and learn how to make wreaths and baskets — all with the kudzu vine!

The day's festivities will also include cloggers, singers and line dancers. Concessions will be available featuring barbecue, hot dogs and burgers and snow cones.

Admission to the program is free. For more information, contact Providence Canyon State Park at (912) 838-6202.

To receive a free brochure of the 1994 special events that will take place at Georgia State Parks and Historic Sites, call the main parks office at (404) 656-3530.

Georgia State Parks and Historic Sites are operated by the Department of Natural Resources. A $2 parkpass fee per vehicle is charged for parking at the state parks; annual passes may be purchased for $25 at the sites or by calling the main parks office at (404) 657-9851.

Providence Canyon State Park is located seven miles west of Lumpkin on Highway 39C.

CG to retire

Hendrix to be next 'chief of the infantry'

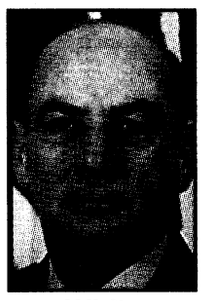
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The commanding general of Fort Benning and the U.S. Army Infantry Center and School for the past three years, Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, announced his retirement Monday.

Pentagon officials announced that Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, deputy chief of staff for operations, U.S. Army Europe and 7th Army, will be White's replacement.

The change of command ceremony, which will be a full review on York Field in front of Infantry Hall, is scheduled for Sept. 15 at 10 a.m.

In announcing his retirement, which becomes effective Oct. 30, White said his future plans "are not complete at this time."



As he talked of the change of command ceremony, White lauded the soldiers and civilian work force at Fort Benning for being the best in the Army.

He also noted that Fort Benning's designation as the best in the Army came in large part from the outstanding support of the civilian community.

"The tri-community's support of our soldiers and family members is without equal," he said. "It's simply the best in the world."

The Raven Rock, W. Va., native began his military career nearly 35 years ago after graduating from Marshall University's Reserve Officer Training program with a degree in geology.

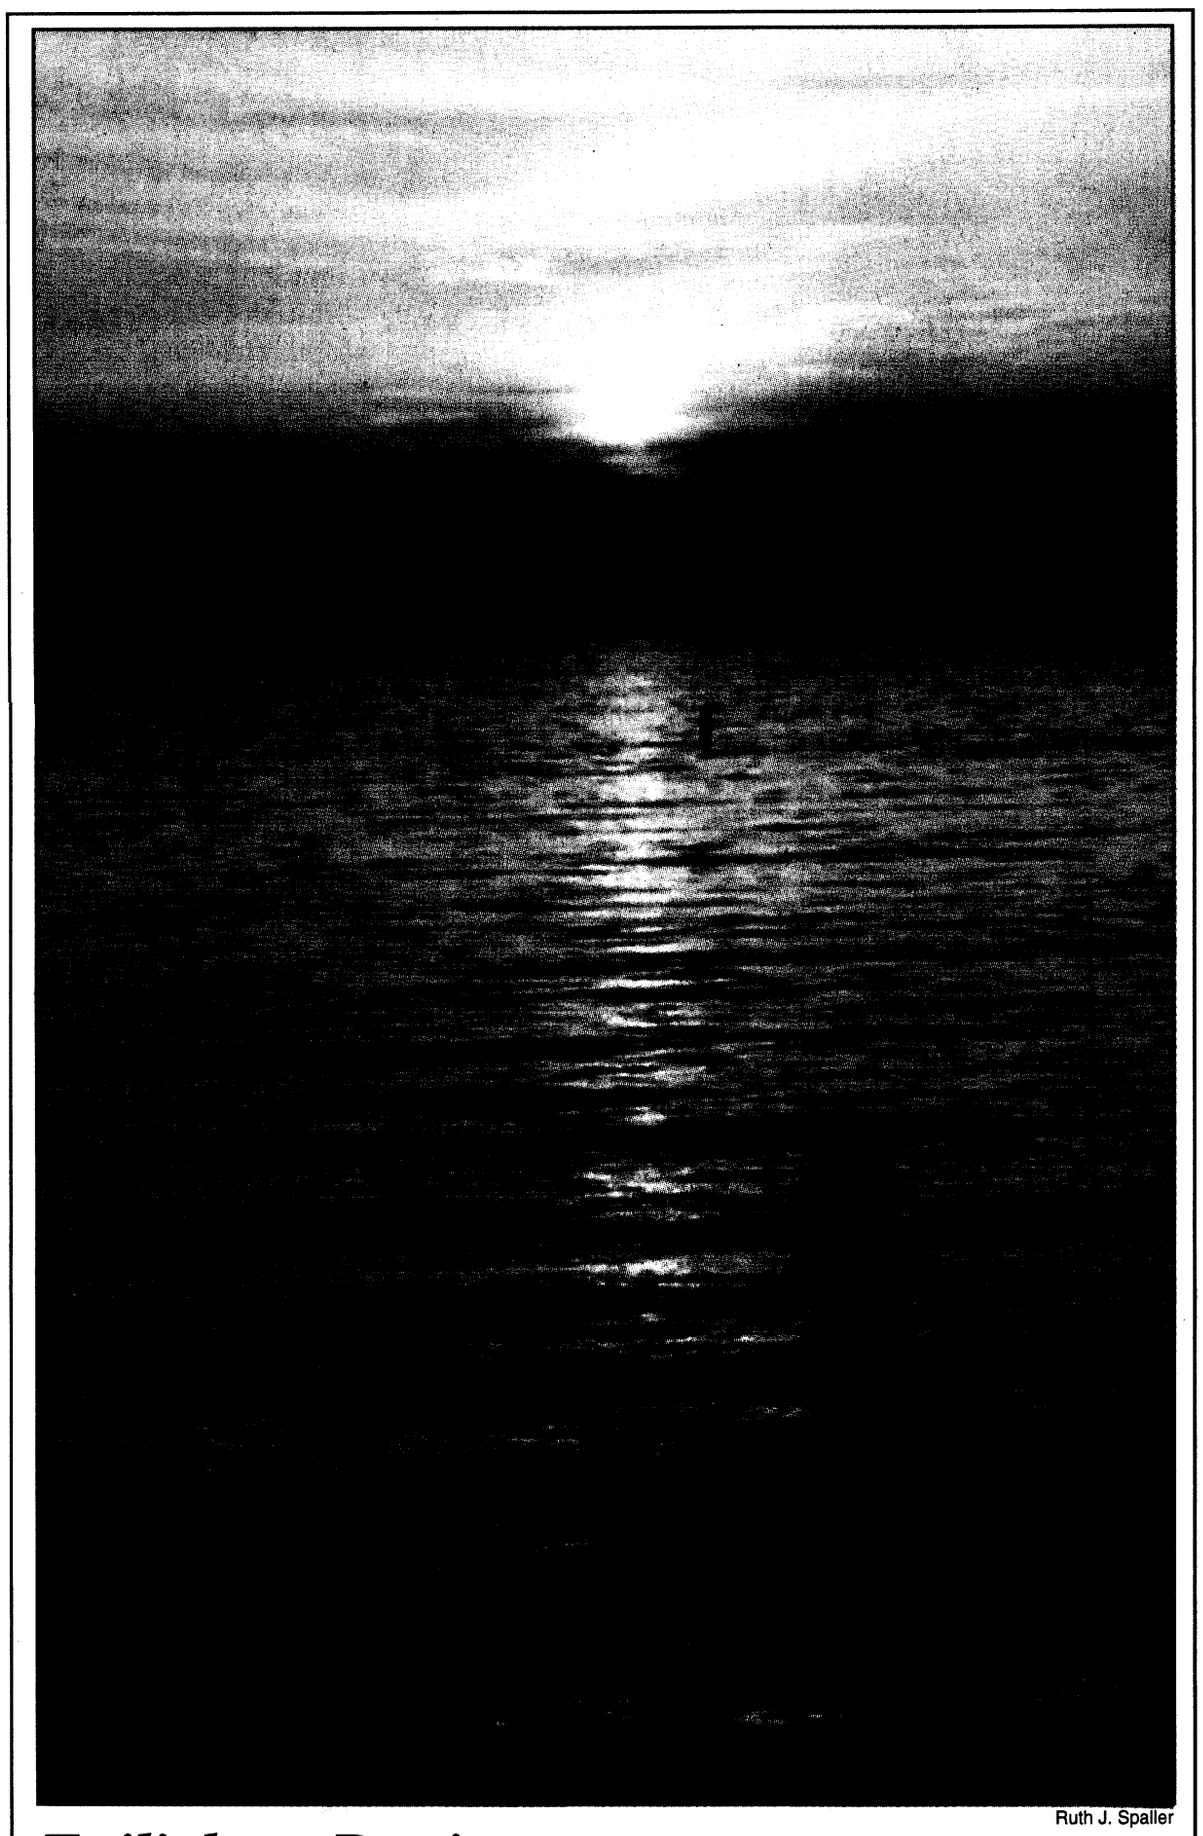
During his service, White has held a wide variety of key command and staff positions, most recently being the commanding general of the 7th Infantry Division, Fort Ord, Calif.

White

He also commanded a brigade of the 25th Infantry Division, Schofield Barracks, Hawaii, and a battalion in Alaska.

Hendrix

As the commanding general of Fort Benning, White led the post to be recognized as the best post in the Training and Doctrine Command for two consecutive years and the best in the Army in 1994.



He was also instrumental in guiding the infantry force in its leap into the 21st century as he directed the Dismounted Battle Space Battle Lab and its development of new technologies, doctrine and organizations.

White and his wife, Linda, have a son, Capt. Jerry A. White, commander of Company B, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, and a daughter, Jane Ann.

Hendrix, a Georgia Tech graduate, served at Fort Benning most recently as the assistant commandant of the U.S. Army Infantry School and deputy commanding general of Fort Benning.

Hendrix has commanded both a battalion and brigade of the 8th Infantry Division and served as an operations officer of the Central Army Group, Allied Command Europe in Brussels, Belgium.

Hendrix and his wife, Cheri, have two sons, Mark and Michael.

Powell coming to post

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff retired Gen. Colin L. Powell will receive this year's Doughboy Award Monday at 5:15 p.m. on York Field.

The public is invited to the award ceremony, which was originally scheduled for May of this year, but had to be postponed.

The Doughboy Award is a chrome-plated doughboy helmet worn by soldiers in the American Expeditionary Force during World War I and in the early days of World War II. It is presented annually to a person who has made a significant contribution to the infantry force, on behalf of infantrymen past, present and future.

The original award is on display in the foyer of Infantry Hall.

Past recipients include Bob Hope, H. Ross Perot, Bill Mauldin, John O. Marsh Jr., Sens. John G. Tower, Warren B. Rudman and Robert J. Dole, and retired Gens. Frederick Kroesen, Aubrey Newman, Matthew B. Ridgway, William E. DePuy and retired Lt. Gen. David E. Grange Jr.

The term "doughboy" originated from the practice of rushing new recruits to Europe in World War I. It was originally used during the border conflicts in Texas prior to World War I, where soldiers trained along the Rio Grande and became covered in the white dust of the adobe soil. Mounted troops called them "adobes." This degenerated to "dobies," which became "doughboys."

Powell was appointed the 12th chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Department of Defense, by President George Bush, Oct. 1, 1989. He was reappointed for a second term in October 1991.

HUMAN RIGHTS

U.S., Latin Americans to confer

School of the Americas to host event; SOUTHCOM cdr to speak

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The School of the Americas will host the sixth Latin America Conference Monday through Aug. 12 at Ridgway Hall.

According to Capt. Gordon Martel, SOA Public Affairs Office, the conference is a forum on national security issues as they pertain to Latin America.

It features speakers from the United States and most Latin American countries, selected from higher education institutions, the armed forces, business and industry, the news media and the diplomatic services.

This year's conference will focus on the role of the armed forces and police in guaranteeing human rights in the western hemisphere, Martel said.

Retired Maj. Gen. Manuel Sanmiguel of Colombia, a SOA distinguished graduate and highly decorated human rights hero, will offer the introductory remarks.

This year's conference includes 12 senior executives from banking, industry and the news media.

The audience for the conference includes the resident Command and General Staff College class, majors and lieutenant colonels at SOA for a full year who represent the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps and the national police of nine hemispheric countries.

Human rights instruction is mandatory at SOA and has been conducted in a variety of forms since 1947.

Recent hemispheric human rights abuses have prompted a further commitment to democracy and professionalism, Martel said.

Two speakers will lecture each morning, and the conference participants will divide into four seminar groups for afternoon discussions.

Other principal speakers are Gen. Barry McCaffrey, commander in chief, U.S. Southern Command; Col. Rafael Garcia, Mexican military attache to the United States; Col. Walter Navarro, deputy commandant of SOA and a career officer in the Costa Rican Guardia Civil; Bynum Weathers of the Air War College, Maxwell Air Force Base; and Russ Ramsey, resident professor at SOA.

The goal of the conference is to reach a deeper understanding of the vital role played by the armed forces and the police in guaranteeing human rights, Martel said.

SOA Conference at a glance

When: Monday through Aug. 12

Where: Ridgway Hall, Building 35

Why: To provide a forum on national security issues as they pertain to Latin America. The conference will focus on the role of the armed forces and police in guaranteeing human rights in the Western Hemisphere.

Let the buffoons go on strike!

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet Staff Writer

commentary

Let me see if I've got this straight.

A bunch of long-haired, overweight guys in pajamas who make $25,000 an hour for standing around the better part of three hours, 162 times a year, want to go on strike.

The people opposing the strike are their employers, natch, who want to put a cap on these outrageous salaries so they can continue to live in the lifestyle to which they've become accustomed.

Oh yes, I understand some fans are disappointed too. If that's the case, those fans have been sitting in the hot sun doing the chop or the wave, or whatever, far too long.

I say let these buffoons go on strike. Maybe we can get something decent on TV or the radio if they aren't hogging the airwaves.

Or maybe we can find some real entertainment and seek out a minor league game or softball game where the real action is, instead of these yawners.

They say baseball is America's pastime. I say it's past time. It's a passing fad that hasn't passed fast enough.

Baseball lives in the past. It's nothing but statistics. Can you imagine listening to a game without being told the batter's life time average against left-handed, cud-chewing pitchers on Tuesday afternoons in domed ball parks with artificial turf?

If the stats weren't there, you'd get an ear full of silence as that's all baseball is, three hours of two guys playing catch, punctuated by fleeting moments of someone making contact with the ball and legging it down the baseline.

Of course Mr. and Mrs. Joe Average and their two kids could always go to a big league game in person.

Here you've got a guy who's annual salary equals what some ball players make in an hour, forking out maybe a hundred bucks to travel to some large city so he can get stuck in a traffic jam, have to bribe his way into a parking place, then sit far enough away so he's got a good view of the city's skyline while the players look like he's viewing them from the Good Year blimp.

Naturally he can't bring his own provisions because if he did, he wouldn't want to buy four drinks at $2.50 and up a pop, plus hot dogs and Cracker Jacks.

Is there anything in big league ball parks that costs less than $2.50?

At least the rest rooms are still free.

I realize I'm in the minority and that it's a rare big league team that doesn't draw at least a million fans a year, but believe me when I say, baseball aficionados, you can live without the game.

I mean it's August, right. The time to be miserable. And you can certainly be just as miserable without baseball as with baseball.

Besides, August is the time for big league, barf, football exhibitions games.

I rate exhibition games about 1 percentage point above baseball on the excitement meter. At least you can count on 10 seconds of movement every 30 seconds or so.

But for spills and thrills, rate the games on par with watching your neighbor mow his lawn in 110 degree heat. It's just not happening.

Hey want something to do in August? Take your kid to a nice air-conditioned movie. I hear the one about the lion is good.

Critics claim it's homophobic, racist and antifeminist, so if the critics don't like it, it's got to be good.

dial 545-boss

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for soldiers, family members and civilians to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere.

While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies established to provide assistance, the line offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders.

The Bayonet features some of the calls that may benefit other members of the Fort Benning community.

☎ Caller: Some items I had at the Post Equipment Check Out Facility have been damaged, so I filed a claim.

However, storage officials said they are not liable.

I want to find out what I can do.

Office of the Staff Judge Advocate's response:

Under Chapter 11, Army Regulation 27-20, compensation is not allowed for property stored at a commercial facility for the convenience of the claimant and at his or her expense.

☎ Caller: I applied for a small personal loan recently with an off-post loan company; however, the company refused to do business with me because I am in the Army.

I would like this problem solved.

SJA's response:

The manager of the loan company said that his company does not lend money to the military.

According to the Better Business Bureau of West Georgia-East Alabama, many of the small loan companies in the Columbus area have a policy against lending to the military based on their past experience with soldiers who failed to pay debts.

Some even moved collateral from the state in violation of financing agreements and transferred to other states leaving unpaid balances.

It is not against Georgia or federal law to refuse to extend credit to military members based on their active duty status.

The law prohibits discrimination in the extension of credit solely based on sex, race, religion, national origin, or marital status.

70-year-old makes growing older fun

By Bob Roberson
United Way Inc.

Meet Marian. She is in her 70s and she's known around the D. Abbott Turner Branch of the Metro YMCA as "Miss Excitement."

It takes only a minute in her presence to understand why.

Marian is one of those people who lights up the room with her smile and who never allows things to get dull.

Marian's doctor was amazed, a few years ago, when he was tending her knee that had been broken in a fall.

He was amazed at her physical conditioning and how she snapped-back from injury.

Her secret? Let her tell it in her own words:

"I swim a mile at the Y every day and work out about an hour each day.

"I have to swim at least a mile to feel like I've done anything," she said. "The human body responds to work.

"I feel sorry for folks who haven't learned the joy of work ... of setting goals for yourself and meeting them.

"I really believe you have to believe in yourself," she continued. "I'm in charge of my life; I don't want to waste a minute of it.

"You just do what you can for your neighbors. That makes life worth living."

The Y gives her a place to keep herself in shape.

In return, her youthfulness is contagious ... even to children from Fort Benning, Columbus and Phenix City attending the YMCA programs. It makes for a pretty good trade.

Week of activities slated for FEDERAL EMPLOYEES

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet©

Fort Benning's celebration of Federal Employees' Week will include a full slate of workshops designed to aid the professional as well as the personal development of federal personnel, according to Winnie Torain, Federal Women's Program manager.

Highlighting the theme of "Employees' Excellence," activities this year will offer motivational training designed to enhance career development for supervisory and nonsupervisory civilian or military personnel.

"Training is one of the most important tools an agency has to offer its employees," Torain said.

"At this time of downsizing turbulence, this motivational training for career development is especially important for mapping out the future," she said.

Sponsored by the Federal Women's Program Committee, the week of activities will include 10 workshops on such topics as health and fitness, effective job interviewing techniques, interpersonal skills and strategic planning for career growth.

This year marks the 19th consecutive time Fort Benning has celebrated Federal Employees' Week.

"I strongly support the goals and objectives of the Federal Women's Program Committee and its efforts in sponsoring Federal Employees' Week activities for 1994," Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White said.

"I encourage all managers and supervisors to participate and encourage participation of civilian and military personnel," he said.

The workshops are also open to family members and volunteer workers on a space-available basis.

New MWR facilities, equipment on way

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

A new junior enlisted club, an 18-hole miniature golf course and batting cages are just some of the projects planned for the future enjoyment of post residents.

Al Stewart, director of Community Activities, said these, and other projects, are slated for completion in fiscal 1995.

Among the other projects are plans to upgrade the old campgrounds at Uchee Creek and add 10 additional cabins. In September, a new Information, Ticketing and Registration office and SatoTravel office will open in the Main Mall and in October a new telephone system will be installed at the Destin Recreation Area.

"We build more for the morale, welfare and recreation of our residents than most other posts," Stewart said. "In 10 years of operation, our MWR program has generated and spent more than $50 million on new MWR facilities, equipment and programs."

That figure is significant, he added, because many MWR facilities are entirely self-sufficient. Their operating costs are paid for out of the money they earn and any profit made goes back into the MWR program for further improvements and projects. These include facilities that are true businesses, such as the golf course, bowling centers, clubs, laundromat and Uchee Creek and Destin recreation areas. A percentage of the profits generated from Army and Air Force Exchange System facilities is also used to support MWR projects.

"We have done very well at making sure we generate a surplus to cover the costs of new projects and in developing a dynamic marketing program that enables us to spend our money wisely and in the best interests of the Fort Benning community," Stewart said. "Our marketing strategy includes asking our customers, the soldiers and family members of Fort Benning what they want and then giving it to them."

Stewart said DCA is committed to providing the most modern, state-of-the-art MWR programs, facilities and equipment. Old equipment, from jet skis to camping trailers to fishing boats, is regularly replaced.

"We replace one-third of our golf carts every year, no matter what condition they are in,' he said. "We want our customers to have the best equipment."

Post residents are already enjoying a number of recently completed projects that include:

- New swimming pools at the Uchee Creek and Destin recreation areas.
- Renovated lounges at the Main Post and Mall Bowling Centers.
- A new recreation center at Sand Hill.
- A renovated Kelley Hill Recreation Center that includes a laundromat and an enlisted club.
- A renovated driving range, pro shop and locker room at the Follow Me Golf Course.

"There is a lot on Fort Benning for the enjoyment of soldiers and their families," Stewart said. "We don't just rest on our laurels. # DoD still recruiting despite drawdown

By Stephen Barren
American Forces Information Service

Although the military is reducing size, the Department of Defense continues to recruit 200,000 men and women annually

Getting young Americans interested in today's military is the biggest recruiting challenge facing the armed forces, said the top Pentagon personnel official.

Edwin Dorn, undersecretary of Defense for personnel and readiness, said in a recent speech that publicity on the military drawdown, combined with a reduced recruiting budget, discouraged young Americans from enlisting.

Dorn said the public has the impression the military is no longer hiring or is no longer a secure employer. He said although the military is reducing size, the Department of Defense continues to recruit 200,000 men and women annually.

"Military service is an economically rational choice for high school graduates looking for an edge on life," said Dorn. "The military also is a good choice for people who want to serve a cause greater than themselves."

DoD bases its concerns on the Youth Attitude Tracking Study, conducted annually since 1975. The nationwide study surveys nearly 10,000 young men and women and their inclination toward military service.

The 1993 survey showed 25 percent of men aged 16 to 21 expressed preference to join at least one active duty service. The figure is 7 percent lower than 1989 and 1990 figures and a 2 percent drop from 1992.

To help battle the decline, DoD is taking several steps to increase recruiting efforts, Dorn said. One is getting Congress to increase the advertising budget. He said an increase over the next couple of years will reacquaint American youth with military service.

"We now spend about $125 million annually to advertise our opportunities," said Dorn. "In fiscal 1995 we expect Congress to allow us to spend up to $70 million more."

Part of that investment targets young women. Dorn said DoD is launching a comprehensive magazine advertising effort next spring. "This focus on women is clearly appropriate now that we are opening up more of our jobs to women," he said.

Another initiative is getting more recruiters on the street. DoD hopes to win legislative relief from a cap on recruiters currently in place. "We plan to field hundreds more recruiters," he said.

Finally, Dorn wants to tie recruiting to service members currently on active duty. "Positive word-of-mouth advertising is the most powerful recruiting tool we have," Dorn said. "If we don't treat service members fairly, they will go home or write home and tell folks about the miserable time they are having in the armed forces."

Despite current problems, Dorn said, there has been no complaint about recruit quality. In recent years, he said, DoD has done well in attracting high school graduates and recruits with solid aptitude scores.

He cited reports saying nearly 95 percent of active duty recruits have high school diplomas compared with 75 percent of all youth ages 18 to 23. "This means that we are able to control attrition during the initial years of service, helping us to make the most of our training investment."

Currently, between 1.6 and 1.7 million Americans serve in the nation's armed forces — a drop from 2.2 million in the late 1980s. Because of the drawdown, American forces will number 1.4 million by 1999, and Dorn said the transition has not been easy.

Soldiers can apply now for early out

Personnel Operations & Service Division

Soldiers who would like to apply for the fiscal 1995 voluntary incentive programs in the overstrength military occupational specialty (Category E) must do so as soon as possible.

To ensure that all applications arrive at Personnel Command by the due date, they must be in the Adjutant General Personnel Operations office before Aug. 12.

Approval or disapprovals will be made by Sept. 30. The intent of this category is to allow the most senior soldiers to separate first.

Approvals will be based on time in service, number applying and number required for losses per primary military occupational specialty and grade.

Application form (DA Form 4187) is available at your personnel administration center. For further information, call Sina Evans at 545-1917 or 545-3341.

Dependent Dental Plan premiums increase

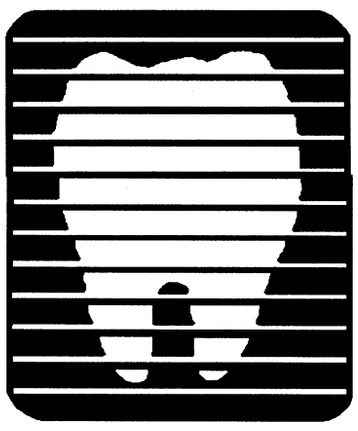
American Forces Information Service



The Active Duty Dependents Dental Plan will increase monthly premiums Oct. 1. The increase will be felt in September paychecks, officials said.

The new monthly premium for one enrolled active duty family member will be $10, an increase of 35 cents. Active duty sponsors with two or more enrolled family members will pay $20 monthly, an increase of 70 cents.

The premium increase is the first in more than 18 months. The government pays 60 percent of the total costs of the plan for enrolled families.

Families enrolling on or after Sept. 1 will enroll at the higher premium.

There are no changes in coverage. The plan covers the full cost of exams, cleanings, X-rays and other diagnostic services, and 80 percent of basic restorative procedures such as fillings and sealants.

It pays 60 percent of more complex services such as root canals, gum surgery and oral surgery. The plan pays 50 percent of the costs of crowns, dentures and bridges. It also pays 50 percent of the costs of orthodontics —braces — for family members under 18. Coverage is subject to limitations.

Families who go to one of the more than 117,000 participating dental offices nationwide won't pay more than the co-payment — if any — for covered services. DDP*Delta, the contractor operating the program for the Department of Defense, will pay participating dentists directly. Family members who choose nonparticipating dentists may be charged more for the care and may have to file claims with DDP*Delta themselves.

For more information about the plan, see the health benefits advisor at the nearest military facility.

va q&a

Department of Veterans Affairs

Q: I recently had to leave the Army due to the military downsizing. Is there a program for recently discharged veterans that may help them get both job training and possible placement?

A: The Service Members Occupational Conversion and Training Act is a program designed to encourage employers to hire and train veterans.

Jointly implemented by the departments of Labor, Defense and Veterans Affairs, SMOCTA is designed to assist veterans who meet specific eligibility criteria and employers who establish approved training and offer prospects of long-term employment for participating veterans.

Eligible veterans must be discharged after Aug. 1, 1990. They also must have a military occupational specialty not readily transferable to the civilian workforce, or be entitled to or eligible for compensation from VA for a service-connected disability rated 30 percent or more, or be unemployed for at least eight of the 15 weeks prior to applying for SMOCTA benefits.

SMOCTA has been successful in its goal to help veterans gain employment. Through May 31, 3,478 veterans had been placed in job training and some 4,226 employers had been approved for participation.

Interested veterans and employers should contact their local employment or job service for details, applications and assistance.

They are usually listed under state government in the telephone directory.

Veterans may also call VA toll-free at (800) 827-1000.

Q: Is it possible to participate in the SMOCTA program and receive educational benefits under the GI Bill at the same time?

A: No. You may not receive VA education benefits at the same time that your employer receives payments for your training under SMOCTA.

Q: I am a retired Army officer and have applied for disability compensation from the Department of Veterans Affairs. Will my grade entitle me to increased compensation?

A: No. Military pay grade is not a factor in determining the degree of disability attributed to military service.

Q: What is the difference between VA disability compensation and pension?

A: Compensation is paid to a veteran with a disability that is related to military service. While the disability need not be a result of performance of duty, it must have occurred or have been aggravated during military service.

Pension eligibility is determined by the income of a veteran and the number of his or her dependents. To qualify for pension, a veteran must be permanently and totally disabled, as determined by VA.

Editor's note: If you have a question about your veterans benefits, call the Department of Veterans Affairs at (800) 827-1000.

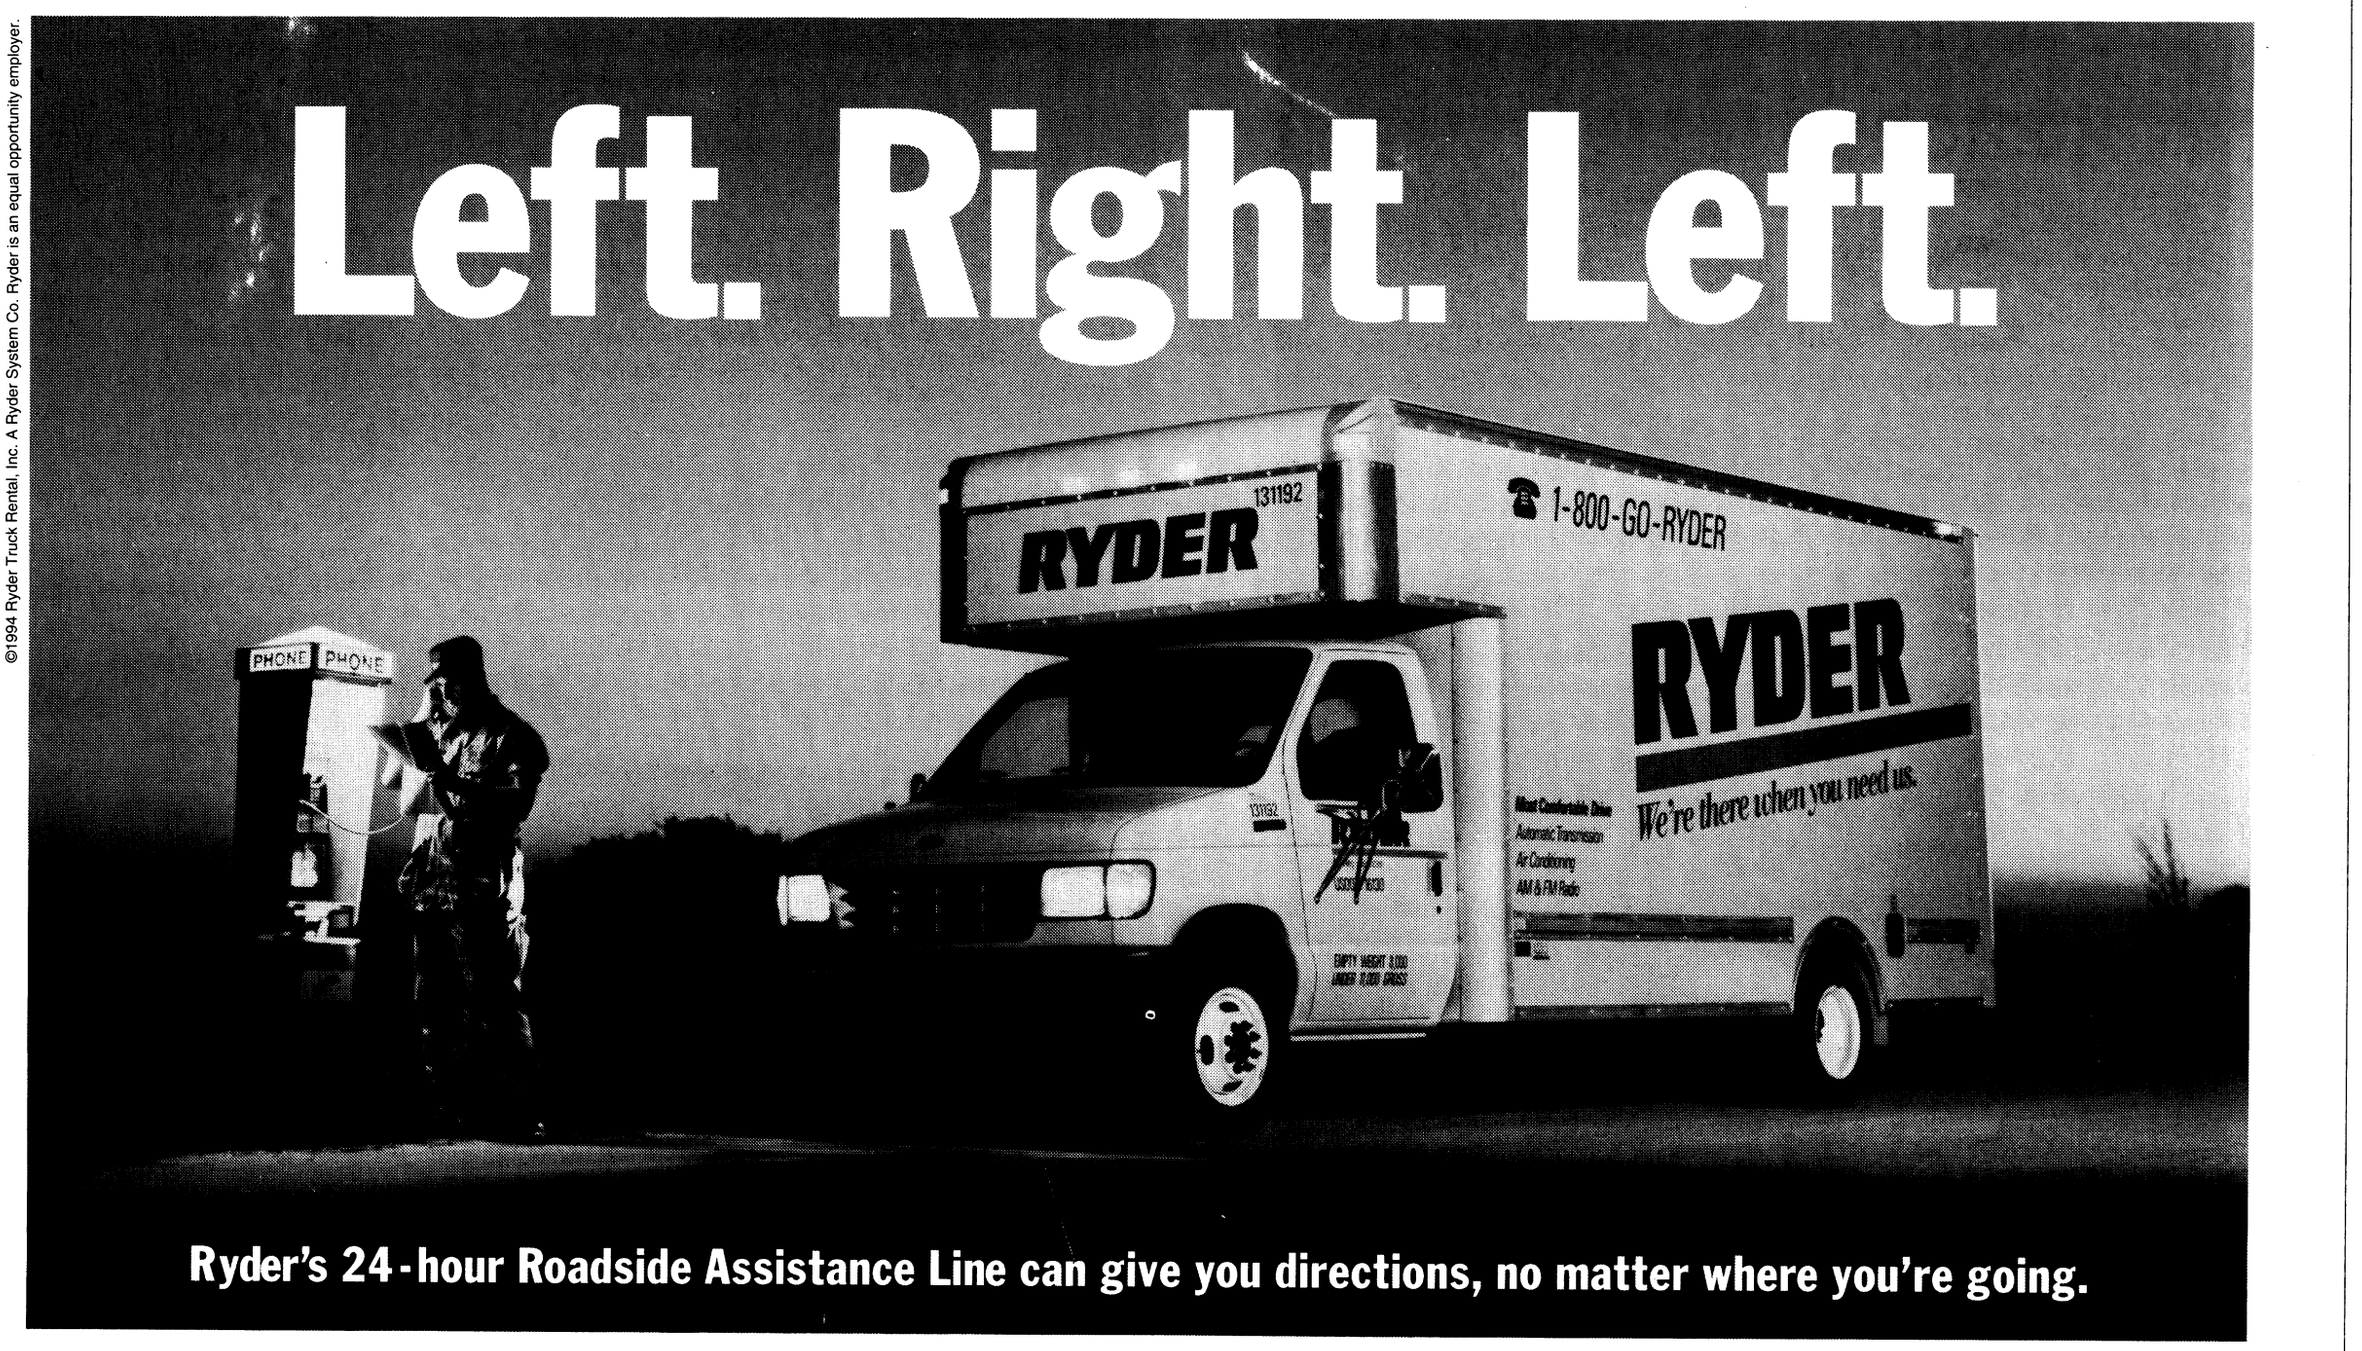
Flood contributions may be tax deductible



Internal Revenue Service

(ATLANTA) — People donating funds to flood relief efforts can help themselves by making contributions through a charity recognized by the Internal Revenue Service as a tax exempt organization.

"Contributions to qualified tax exempt organizations, such as the American Red Cross, the Salvation Army, and most churches are deductible," said Al Brooke, IRS district director for Georgia. "According to the law, people cannot deduct contributions given directly to a particular individual or family."

Many new groups are organizing to help the Flood Disaster rescue effort. Brooke said the IRS will expedite their applications for exempt status if they write "Flood '94" at the top of the application (IRS Form 1023). He cautioned that the quicker application processing does not change or relax the requirement that tax exempt organizations operate exclusively for charitable purposes.

Volunteers from 1/29 help flood victims

Soldiers donate food, clothing, time and lend helping hand

By Shelby Carr
Bayonet staff writer

Soldiers of the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, volunteered more than 1,500 work hours to help the victims of the recent floods in Albany and Leesburg, Ga.

Sgt. 1st Class Ervin Rodriguez organized a food and clothing drive in the 29th Inf. Regt. to help the victims of the floods.

After raising 2,300 pounds of food and clothing and then boxing it up for shipment, Rodriguez requested leave to go and assist the Red Cross relief effort.

"If I have the time or the knowledge to help, I jump on in and make things happen," Rodriguez said.

Lt. Col. French MacLean, commander of 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt., approved the request and then discussed the problems the Red Cross would face with Rodriguez, who had assisted the Red Cross with relief for Hurricanes Hugo and Andrew.

After the suggestion of volunteer assistance and driving down to Albany and seeing first hand the devastation, MacLean put out a request for volunteers to give up their weekend and assist the victims of the floods.

"The TV doesn't adequately portray the damage," MacLean said.

"Mobile homes and trailers had been moved hundreds of feet. It smelled like sewers had overflown. Dead fish were in houses and water and mud was everywhere"

"Walking places that had water 20 feet over your head two days before took your breath away," Rodriguez said.

On July 16, 60 soldiers from 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt., showed up in civilian clothes to volunteer their time and vehicles to drive to Albany and help the Red Cross get their relief warehouse organized.

"The flood victims needed a little organization," MacLean said.

"It was easy with a military chain of command to provide it."

Soldiers helped organize the warehouse donated to the Red Cross. They sorted the food, bottled water and other items the Red Cross received.

Cleaning up the damage outside the warehouse, unloading 18-wheeler trucks with relief supplies and loading and unloading smaller trucks that took supplies to outlying communities were some of the jobs the soldiers performed on Saturday.

"With so much damage everywhere, we decided to concentrate on one area and make a difference there," said MacLean.

The volunteers returned to Leesburg Sunday ready to get to work right away. The citizens refused to let them get to work before they fed them a home-cooked breakfast.

Many of the citizens the soldiers helped were elderly people who needed heavy lifting and moving done.

"I saw a 74-year-old man who had four bypass surgeries trying to move furniture," Rodriguez said. "It got to me."

"The heavy lifting required made soldiers the ideal workers for this relief effort," MacLean said.

From July 17 to 21, soldiers helped the citizens of Leesburg. Soldiers emptied houses, ripped out drywall and in some cases removed the wood on the outside of homes to allow the studs and house to dry before repairs were made.

Teams of soldiers went to neighborhoods to help families clean their homes, ripped up carpet and moved waterlogged furniture out of homes. The water level had risen to the top of the roof of houses and had destroyed everything people owned.

"Even when hit bad and people were completely wiped out, they would say, 'I am not as bad as my neighbor. Help them first,' " MacLean said.

The water level rose so quickly, people had little or no warning before the flood waters hit. One woman went to bed before the flood and woke up when the water level rose up above her bed.

The appreciation the citizens of Leesburg showed extended beyond the Southern fried chicken dinner they cooked on Sunday evening for the soldiers who volunteered their time, Rodriguez said.

"People were calling the Red Cross asking for the Army," Rodriguez said. "They were saying 'The Army is here.' "

From July 18 to 21, the training mission of the 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt., continued; however, small groups of volunteers who could be released continued to go to Leesburg.

The soldiers were joined in the Red Cross relief effort by people from California, Canada and Puerto Rico.

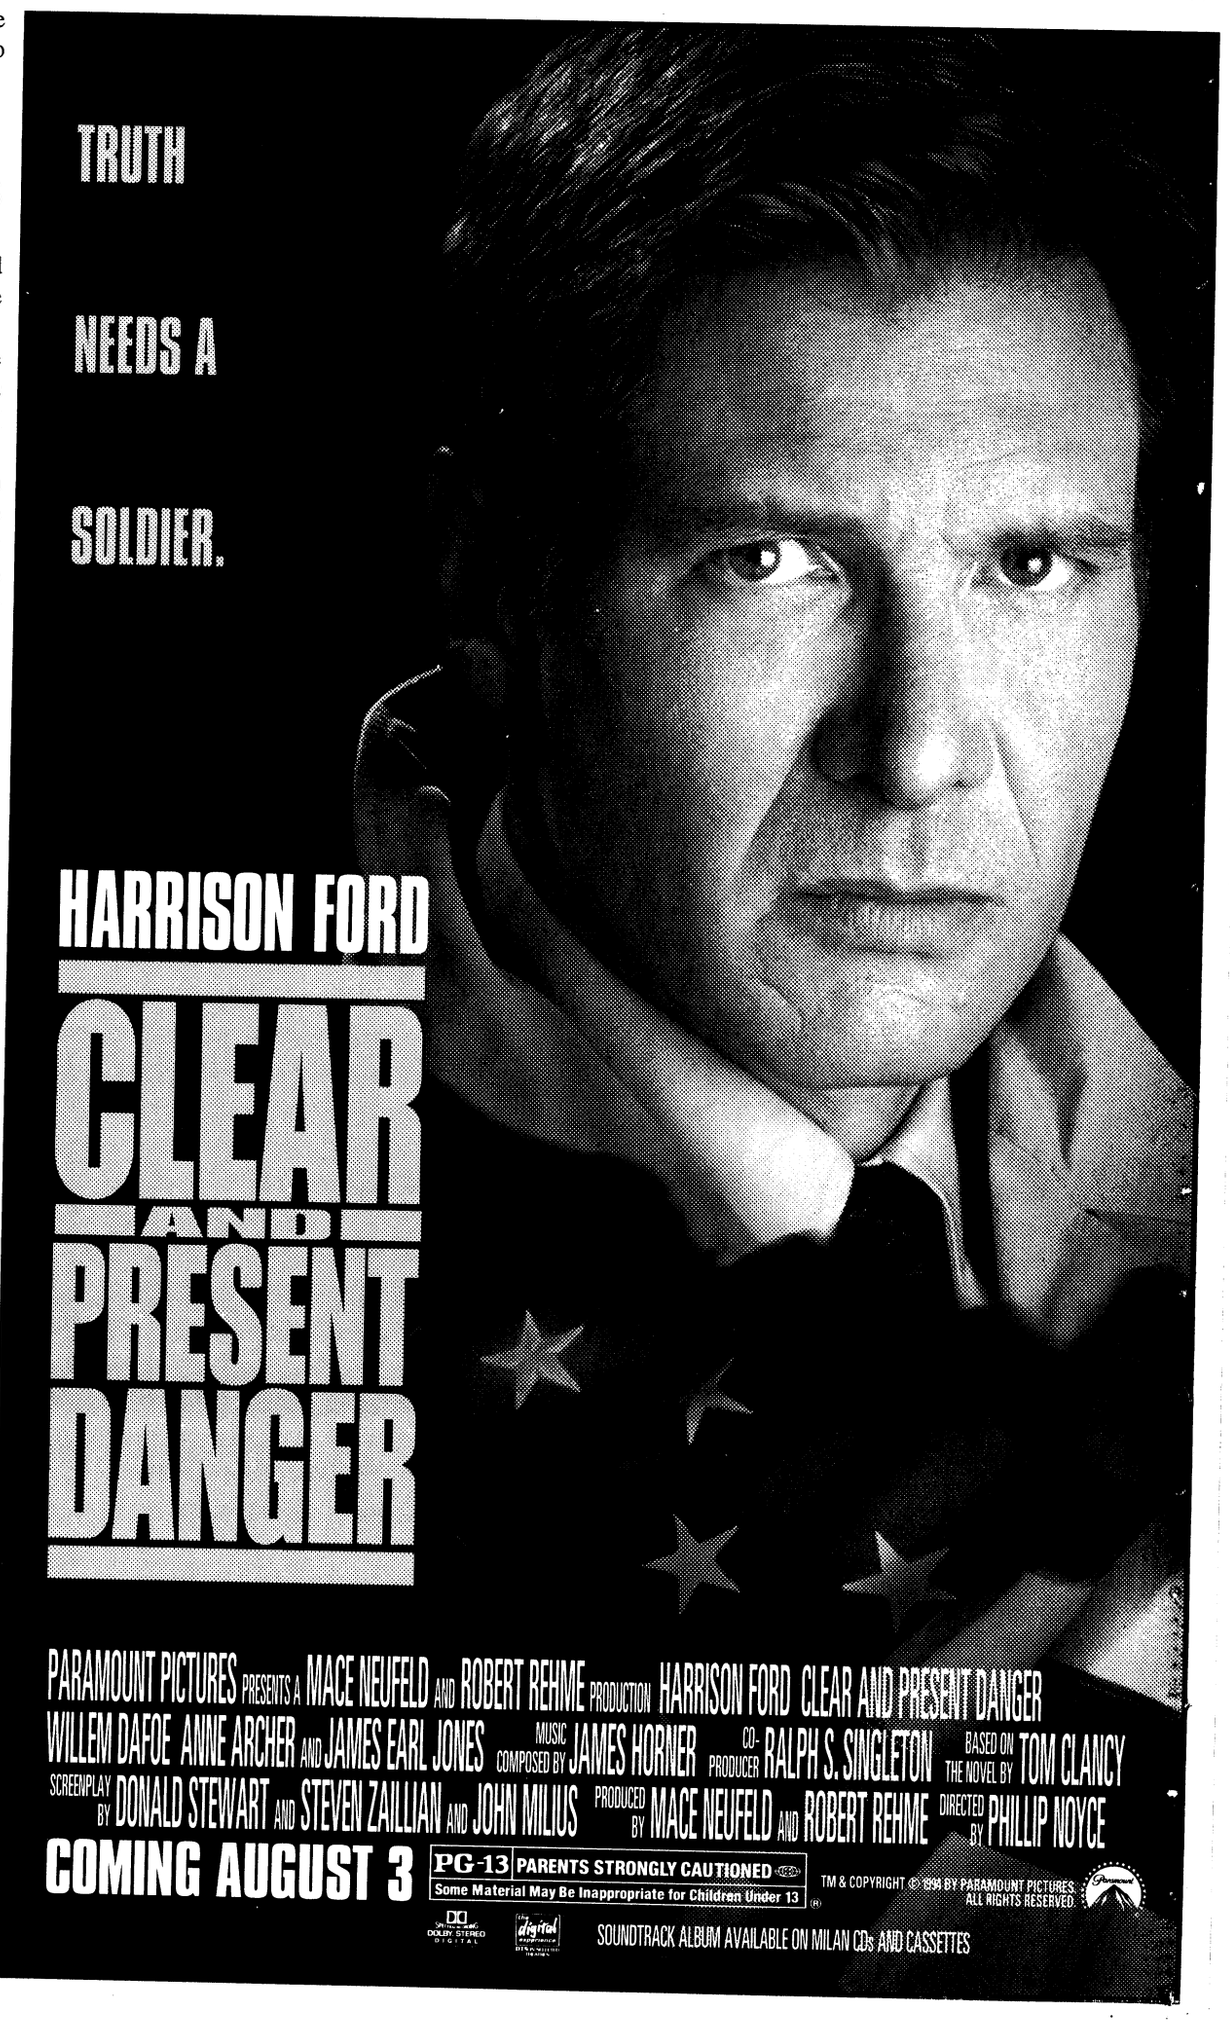
Researchers work to reduce vehicle collisions

Army News Service

DETROIT — The same Army technology that conceals military vehicles from the enemy may one day be used to help drivers of passenger cars and trucks see each other better.

Researchers from General Motors' Crash Avoidance Department have begun a cooperative effort with the Army Material Command's Tank-Automotive Research Development and Engineering Center to do just that. The multi-year GM-TARDEC project is part of a broader cooperative research and development agreement between the two organizations.

About 14 percent of vehicle crashes occur simply because drivers "don't see" the other vehicle, officials said.



"The major benefit of the project could be a significant reduction in the $2 billion annual cost of vehicle crashes ... and in the associated pain and suffering ..." said Richard Deering, a manager from the GM Crash Avoidance Department.

Deering said "there is potential for helping the driver become more skillful ... by using the Army's knowledge of camouflage 'in reverse' to help GM design vehicles that are easier to recognize."

According to Grant Gerhart, TARDEC research group chief, "The same design factors that make military vehicles less likely to be recognized... may provide us with ways to enhance (the ability to be seen) and help drivers see each other earlier and over greater distances."

One of the primary tools researches will use is the TARDEC visual model of the human vision system, which isolates and identifies those aspects of a vehicle's design that make it visible and those that tend to make it difficult to recognize.

ACAP, Onsite unite to provide jobs

Army Career and Alumni Program

Fort Benning's Army Career and Alumni Program has joined forces with one of the world's largest environmental staffing firm, Onsite Environmental (a division of AEROTEK).

Onsite has accepted the task of training and employing exiting soldiers, veterans and family members in the field of environmental remediation.

Onsite currently employs 100 to 150 new personnel per week throughout the country and has 37 offices around the country and one in England.

A soldier can be trained at Fort Benning and then work in the area of his or her choice. Onsite's starting wages range from $9 to $15 per hour depending on a soldier's skills.

In many cases, per diem is paid, which includes $25 a day for food, 18 cents per mile for travel and lodging at the job site. A benefit package is also offered, which includes a 401K plan, dental, health and insurance.

Soldiers can use skills learned in the Army to earn a higher starting wage. Heavy equipment operators are in demand at Onsite. The work in the field sometimes requires personnel to work in protective gear similar to mission oriented protective posture gear.

Onsite offers two levels of training. The first is a 40-hour field technician course and the second is a 120-hour certified environmental technician course.

The cost of the training is minimal compared to other companies that offer the same training.

The 40-hour course is $350 and the 120-hour course is $1,450, which according to Onsite personnel is almost half-price.

Currently, Onsite has trained 65 personnel in the Fort Benning area and has put 65 to work. There is a 120-hour class currently in session that will graduate today.

"I had earned a master's degree prior to separating and thought that I had prepared very well, said Norman Sammons who recently retired form the Army and is the military liaison for Onsite.

"I was in shock when I started job hunting and receiving offers. All of the offers would not maintain my current standard of living. I felt that I was worth more than $7 an hour and my family deserved more.

"Onsite offers a great opportunity for soldiers to earn the money necessary to maintain their standards of living and even increase it," he continued. "Onsite requires no college degree, just the ability to read and write, distinguish between colors and lift 40 pounds."

"The soldiers that have been trained and placed have a great reputation," said Mike Sheffield, Onsite's national health and safety director stated.

"Their motivation and great work values have caused our clients to request more personnel from Fort Benning," he said. "Our clients have reported to us that our soldiers have attacked the work sites and treated their jobs like a military mission causing them to be more productive."

The 40-hour course will be conducted on a monthly basis and the 120-hour course on a quarterly basis.

For more information, call Onsite direct at 682-8819, 323-4182 or (800) 323-4183.

ARMY CAREER & ALUMNI PROGRAM "SHOWING WE CARE"

Transition assistance classes available

Army Career and Alumni Program

If you're getting out the military, the Army Career and Alumni Program is available to help you make the transition.

All service members getting out of the military or retiring from the military must process through the Army Career and Alumni Program's Transition Assistance Office, Building 2617, Soldiers' Plaza, before attending a Transition Assistance Program class in Infantry Hall.

The National Defense Authorization Act Fiscal Year 91, Public Law 101-510 states that soldiers within 180 days of expiration term of service are required to attend a Transition Assistance Program class.

Classes are given in three-day blocks and are scheduled throughout the year.

Classes are in Classroom 30, Infantry Hall, from 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. For more information, call 545-4892 or 545-4913.

Employment seminar set Thursday

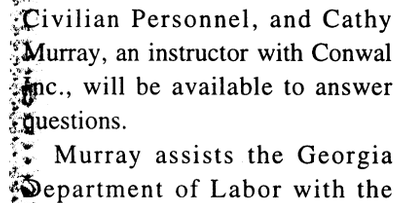
Army Career and Alumni Program

A seminar about federal employment will be Thursday from 9 to 11 a.m. in Infantry Hall, Classroom 30.

Sponsored by the Army Career and Alumni Program and the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, the seminar is designed to provide information on the opportunities of federal employment with primary emphasis on Fort Benning.



Available to soldiers retiring from the military and their family members, the seminar will cover the basics of how the federal employment system functions, where to find job announcements and veteran's preference. Participants will be given a detailed explanation of the federal employment application, Standard Form 171.

James Fleming, a 20-year veteran of the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, and Cathy Murray, an instructor with Conwal inc., will be available to answer questions.

Murray assists the Georgia Department of Labor with the ACAP Transition Assistance Program workshop, and she conducts personal assessments Wednesday and Thursday of each week from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the ACAP office in Soldiers' Plaza. The assessments include instruction in the use of an automated Standard Form 171.

To obtain an appointment, call 545-7009, 545-4913 or 545-4892 or stop by Building 2617 in Soldiers' Plaza.

Stress workshop set

Civilian Counseling Services is sponsoring a workshop, titled "The Sounds of Recovery," Sept. 15 from 8:15 to 11:30 a.m. at the Youth Activities Center, Building 1056.

The workshop will feature motivational speakers and performers, including Ron King of the Pastoral Institute, Ricky Bryer, motivational speaker, and Michael Brown, Nashville songwriter,

Topics will include "Humor and Stress," "Overcoming Adversity" and "The Sounds of Recovery."

Participation is open to all members of the Fort Benning community, civilian and military. To register, call 545-5656.

Roads to close

Lexington Street, from Dixie Road to Sightseeing Road, will be closed for 60 days to all traffic. Also, Way Street from Dixie Road to Building 2865 will be closed. Access to Way Street will be maintained by one entrance from Sightseeing Road to Building 2865.

For more information, contact the Construction Inspection Branch of the Directorate of Public Works at 545-4749.

Insurance reps to visit

Representatives from Mail Handlers and Blue Cross and Blue Shield health insurance companies will be available Monday from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. to answer questions from people enrolled in their insurance programs.

The reps will be available in Meloy Hall, Room 132.

For more information or appoinments, call Pat Richardson at the Personnel Services Center at 545-2470 or 545 3374.

Runners have priority during PT hours

Formations and individual runners have priority of movement on Fort Benning during the established physical training hours of 6 to 7:30 a.m. Monday through Friday.

Formation running is not authorized on sidewalks throughout the installation. Units must use roadways and proper safety equipment must be worn and operational.

Individual runners and walkers may use the sidewalks and also are required to wear proper reflective clothing or road guard vests.

Speed limit during PT hours is 15 mph and 10 mph when passing individuals and troop formations.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland and range areas will take place through Aug. 20 if weather permits in the following compartments: A-17, B-6, D-11, D-12, E-7, J-2, J-4, J-6, K-5, K-19, O-2, O-3, O-8, O-14, Q-3 and CC-2.

People using these areas for recreation must vacate before 9:30 a.m. daily.

Training units using compartments adjacent to these areas may experience drift smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while traveling in these areas because of the potential for reduced visibility.

PX adds direct line

Fort Benning Exchange patrons now have a permanent "direct line" to the commander of the Army and Air Force Exchange Service.

That's the word from Mary Babbitt, general manager at Fort Benning, who is promoting a program to allow local patrons the chance to make their feelings known to the people who can do the most good — Maj. Gen. Robert F. Swarts, AAFES commander and his management team.

"The Direct Line is very simple," said Mary Babbitt, "All the customer needs to do is pick up a self-addressed, postage-paid card form our display, fill it out and drop it into a mailbox.

Whether it is a request for specific merchandise, a comment on service or any other topic, each card will be given individual attention.

VA supports extending benefits to 'atomic' vets

Department of Veterans Affairs

Washington — Secretary of Veterans Affairs Jesse Brown announced today that VA supports providing disability compensation for U.S. veterans who suffer from medical conditions that may be a result of radiation exposure they received while participating in atmospheric nuclear weapons tests conducted by other counties.

"Although they may have been present at tests conducted by foreign governments, these veterans faithfully performed prescribed duties as American service members," Brown said. "They are entitled to the same benefits afforded their fellow veterans who participated in U.S. atmospheric testing."

Current law qualifies veterans for disability compensation if they participated in atmospheric nuclear tests as part of the U.S. nuclear weapons testing program or in the American occupation of Hiroshima or Nagasaki, Japan, and suffer from certain diseases that may be attributable to ionizing radiation exposure.

VA has prepared an amendment to an existing regulation extending eligibility for presumptive service-connection and compensation to U.S. veterans who participated in foreign atmospheric nuclear testing.

Veterans or their survivors with claims as a result of participation in foreign atmospheric nuclear tests can contact the nearest VA regional office by calling (800) 827-1000 for information and assistance.

Dahlonega. It's pronounced Da-lon-aga. Some people cannot pronounce the name, much less know where it is.

It is a small community nestled in the Blue Ridge mountains in North Georgia that houses the mountain phase of Ranger School.

The city of Dahlonega and the 5th Ranger Training Battalion came together Saturday as the doors to Camp Frank D. Merrill were opened for anyone to explore.

The day began with Brig. Gen. John J. Maher, Fort Benning's deputy commanding general and the day's guest speaker, adding the Expert Infantryman Badge Streamer to the battalion's guidon for having the entire battalion's cadre qualify as expert infantrymen.

"It not only signifies a tremendous accomplishment, but sets a mark of professionalism as well," said 5th RTB Commander, Lt. Col. Ralph F. Delosua.

Newly appointed Ranger Training Brigade Commander Col. Galen B. Jackman was also on hand for the open house.

"There's not (a) greater mark of greatness than having served successfully in a ranger unit," Maher said to the crowd and to the members of the battalion lined up in formation in front of him.

"To be in a ranger unit, to wear a ranger tab and to wear an EIB, well, it just doesn't get any better than that," Maher said, as "hooahs" and hand-claps came from the crowd.

After the presentation, the Frank B. Merrill Museum was dedicated.

This museum is an exact replica of the old green "hooches," which were barracks that early ranger students lived in, said Capt. Randall D. Newton, personnel officer for the 5th RTB.

The museum features pictures, old and new, a model of the camp and a made-up bunk for all who pass through to view.

The first demonstration of the day was the Rangers in Action, which took place on the airfield.

To start, the rangers demonstrated how they ambush a secured perimeter.

Ranger students were used as the enemy within the perimeter. By using mortar fire, M-60 machine guns, flares and M-16 rifles, the rangers overtook the perimeter in just a matter of minutes.

The Silver Wings, Fort Benning's command exhibition parachute team, fell from 6,500 feet above and landed on the airfield after the demonstration.

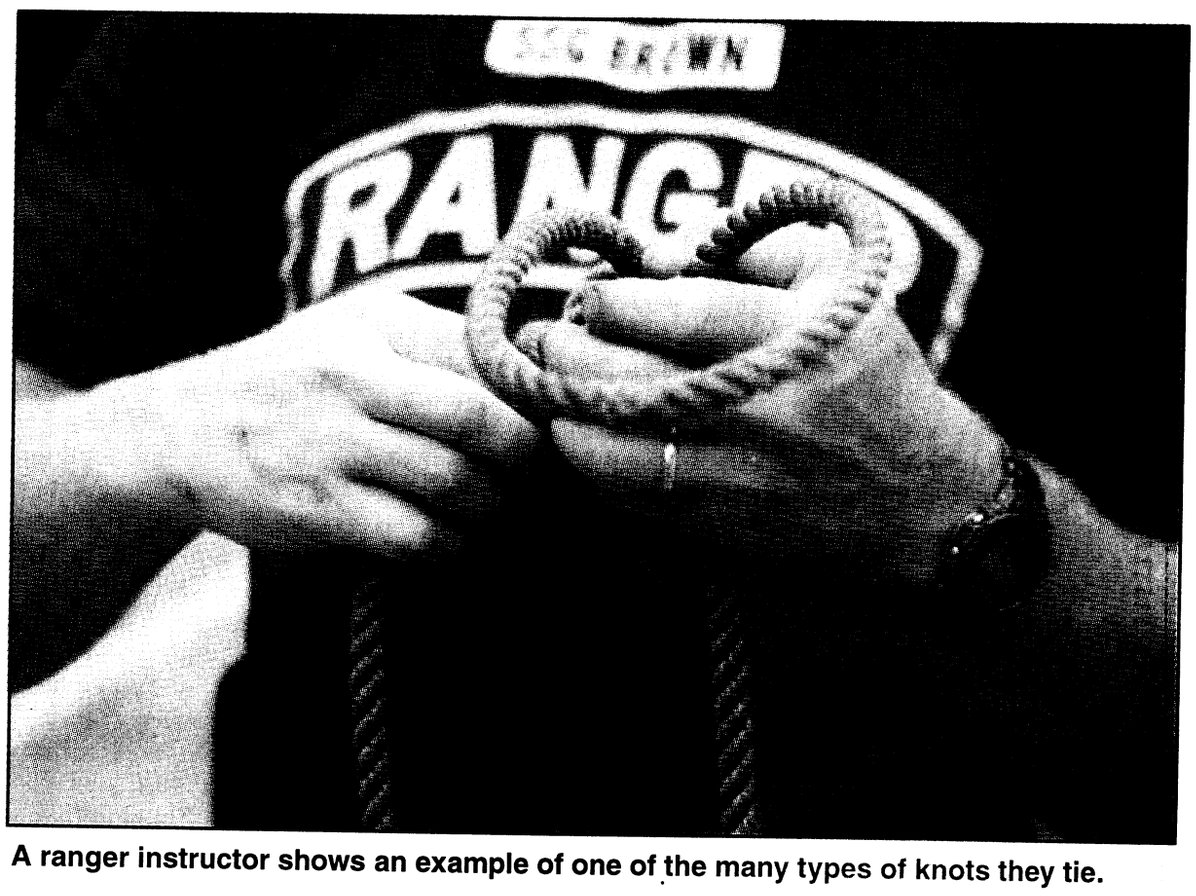
Rangers from 5th RTB were scheduled to jump out of a helicopter also but didn't because of cloud coverage. They made their jump later in the afternoon as part of a second Rangers in Action demonstration.

Rangers showed the crowd some hand-to-hand moves that are taught in Ranger School. Techniques included reacting to a charging enemy, reacting to an enemy from behind, reacting to more than one enemy and reacting to an enemy with a weapon or knife.

While still on the airfield, the crowd watched as five rangers "fast-roped" out of a helicopter during the air-assault demonstration.

During the demonstration, one "injured" ranger was evacuated by rope on a medical helicopter.

The helicopter returned to pick up the four rangers who were still on the ground.



A rope was thrown from the helicopter and after attaching themselves to the rope, the four of them went up, up and away. They flew above the tree tops, some 65 feet in the air, all hanging from the rope.

Afterward, buses shuttled passengers to the Lowers Demonstration Area, where rangers demonstrated different ways to assault a mountain, from every side, going in every direction possible.

Families and military personnel alike watched as rangers rappelled up and down the mountain with fellow rangers or rucksacks on their backs. Some went rapidly, some went slowly, but, they all managed to complete their mission.

Static displays included a helicopter near Lowers, a water raft used by rangers and high-tech surveillance equipment.

Children tried on packed parachutes and some people fired a few blank rounds on an M-16 rifle.

A ranger instructor shows an example of one of the many types of knots they tie.

A second Rangers in Action demonstration brought the day's festivities to a close. The patrons slowly but surely started to leave the camp, stopping off at the static displays to get one last look at what rangers use to train and perform their mission.

SOA counternarcotics course students learn military skills

Knot tying, other fundamentals will aid police cadets in counterdrug operations

By Devon Kerbow
School of the Americas

Thirty-three students in the School of the Americas' C-38 Counternarcotics Orientation Course are learning knot tying and other skills designed to leave them with a fundamental knowledge of counterdrug operations.

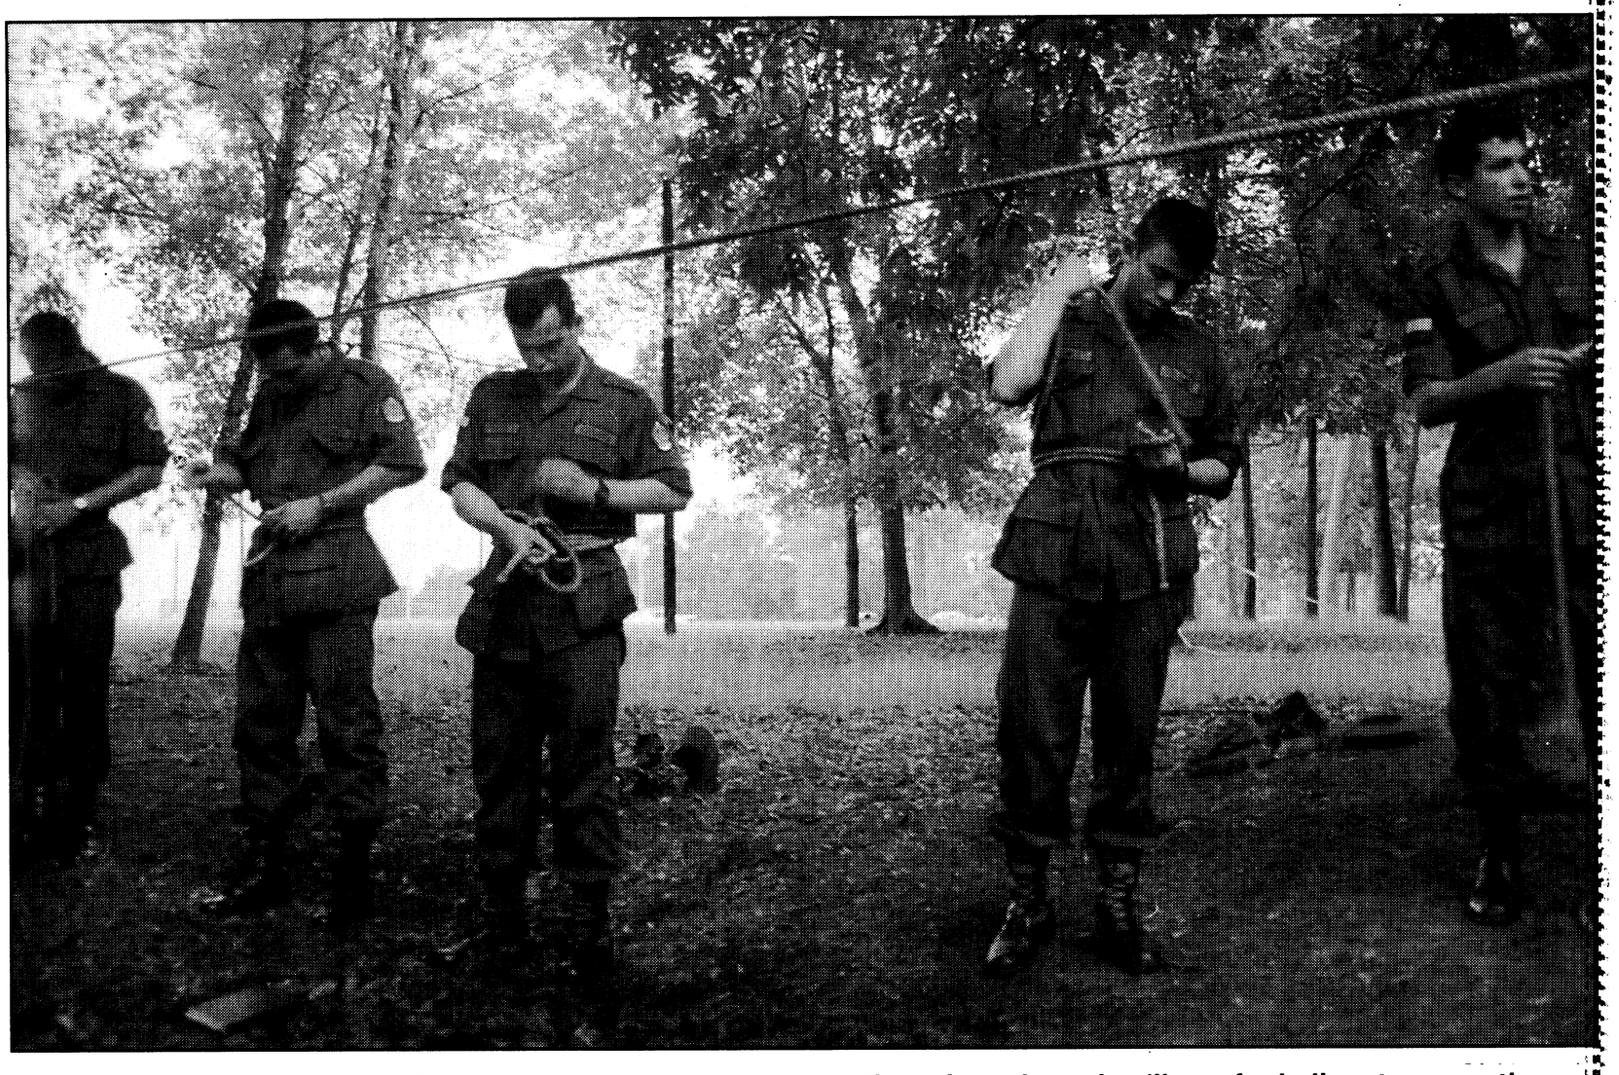
The students are from Colombia and are enrolled in the National Colombian Police Academy there.

Each of the 12 knots have a different use, said Special Operations Division instructor Sgt. Edgar Ramirez.

"They're used for constructing a safety line. Others knots are for tying Swiss seats, building rope bridges, anchoring systems for rappelling, and tying down and securing equipment," said Sgt. 1st Class Raymond Martinez, a SOD instructor.

Martinez said the knots were not difficult; but, because the students had never seen them before and because the sessions were timed, they could be an obstacle.

"Not only do they have to perfect the knot, but they have to meet the time standard," Martinez said.



Staff Sgt. Antonio Guadalupe, another instructor, said after the students learn to tie the first few knots, the next ones become easier.

"The advantage of military knots is that they're easy to make and easy to take apart," Guadalupe said.

He added that being easy to untie was especially important in river crossings because the rope was stretched and knots needed to be easily untied so the rope wouldn't have to be cut.

Once the students get to the operations section of the course, they'll be able to see how each of these knots are used, Martinez said.

The students will get their chance to put the knot tying they learned into practice when they began helicopter operations Aug. 2.

world war II

50 years ago this week ...

• After 20 days of fighting, organized Japanese resistance on Guam ended. There were various small groups of Japanese holding out in jungle hideouts, the last of which was discovered in 1972.

The Japanese fought to the death, and there were less than 100 Japanese prisoners out of a 10,000-man garrison. The Americans took more than 7,000 casualties, including 1,300 dead.

• Adolf Hitler established a "court of honor" at the request of the Wermacht so that 12 officers held for the July 20 attempt on his life could be tried. Eight officers were later hanged after being found guilty of treason in the bombing plot.

• Russian units drove south and northeast of Warsaw in an effort to outflank the city and drive a wedge between it and Cracow.

• Meanwhile in Warsaw, the Polish resistance fighters had managed to seize control of most of the city and expanded their strength using captured German equipment. The German units suppressing the Poles were mostly SS, police, and punishment battalions, all alike in their liking for cruel and violent methods.

• Harvard University disclosed that Commander Howard Aiken in collaboration with IBM had developed an automatic calculator capable of solving any mathematical problem. Multiplication and division with 23 significant figures was possible.

• At Fort Benning, the Parachute School announced that the 541st Parachute Infantry Regiment was transferred from Camp Mackall, N.C., to Fort Benning to function as school troops.

PT test could get new standard

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Over the next several months, more than 4,000 soldiers will be randomly selected to perform the Army Physical Fitness Test to see if the current standards are still valid.

The U.S. Army Physical Fitness School is dispatching teams to 10 posts across the country to conduct the test and assess the results.

"We're approaching this as an update," said Louis Tomasi, a research physiologist at the Fitness School. "The purpose is to determine what the physical status of the Army is today, as well as to review the standards and see if they're still valid.

"We'll look at the number of people that max and the number that pass ... and see if too many are scoring too high or too low," he said.

The current standards for the timed two-mile run, sit-ups and push-ups, with scores based on age and gender, have been in place since 1984, Tomasi said.

"We think the Army is in better physical condition today," he said.

One of the things Physical Fitness School officials are looking at is expanding the age group categories, which now stop at 52 and over, to include categories for age 52 to 56, 57 to 61 and 62 and over, Tomasi said.

> "The purpose is to determine what the physical status of the Army is today, as well as to review the standards and see if they're still valid."
> — Louis Tomasi
> Research physiologist

The testing will begin at Fort Benning the week of Sept. 12, with between 350 and 400 soldiers participating.

Although participants will be randomly selected, the sample size will reflect the demographics of the post, Tomasi said.

The percentage of males and females in all age categories and all occupational groups (such as combat arms or combat service support) will be determined by a printout from the Defense Manpower Data Center in California, Tomasi said, and the sample percentages will match.

Soldiers selected for the test will be informed through their chain of command.

Other installations where the test will be conducted include Fort Jackson, S.C.; Forts Bliss, Sam Houston and Hood, Texas; Fort Bragg, N.C.; Fort McClellen, Ala.; Fort Gordon, Ga.; Fort Lee, Va.; and Fort Lewis, Wash.

Soldiers could see changes in the APFT standards, based on the results of the tests, by 1996, Tomasi said.

Colombians get acquainted with artillery

By Devon Kerbow
School of the Americas

Eighteen Colombian cadets in the School of the America's C-32 Cadet Artillery Orientation Course are finding out what it's going to be like when they graduate and become artillery officers.

The cadets, all in their senior year, are getting a basic introduction to U.S. field artillery and doctrine, said Chief of the Combat Support Division Capt. Rodney Peralta.

Because the course only runs from July 18 through Aug. 12, the training is condensed but provides one of their first major exposures to artillery, Peralta said

Practical exercises where the cadets act as junior-level fire-support officers, and field exercises are both used during the class.

Fire support, the planning and coordination of fire and forward observer, adjusting gunfire and passing battlefield information are two of the skills they learn in the course.

Another task they are taught is fire direction.

"It's deriving the data for the Howitzer battery to be able to hit the target," Peralta said.

Although the Army has computers that can make the mathematical computations this involves, the cadets have to learn to do it manually. Peralta said it was one of the most difficult things the cadets had to master.

Peralta said he definitely sees a difference in the maturity level between cadets and junior officers, but said these cadets had a willingness to learn.

"They're doing really well, they're like sponges," Peralta said.

Year's top drill sergeants receive awards

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — The Army's top trainers of recruits were honored at the Pentagon, July 19, as the active and Reserve 1994 Drill Sergeants of the Year.

Staff Sgt. Ronald L. Sinner, 1st Armored Brigade, Fort Knox, Ky., claimed the title for the active Army. Staff Sgt. Christopher L. Laird, 5th Training Brigade, U.S. Army Reserve, won the award for his component.

"You cannot overstate the importance of the drill sergeant," said Army Sgt. Maj. Richard A. Kidd, during the ceremony. "They take a rough stone, which are the young men and women our society provides, and they polish and shape for eight difficult weeks until it becomes a soldier.

"The impression our drill sergeants leave on our young soldiers is indelible. Ten, 20 and even 30 years after basic training, soldiers remember their drill sergeants and hold them in high esteem."

Sinner and Laird received the Army Meritorious Service Medal and the "Army Times" Eugene P. Famiglietti Award, named for the late editor of the publication.

The Association of the U.S. Army presented each with a gold watch, and will sponsor them at the AUSA National Meeting in Washington, D.C., in October.

And the Noncommissioned Officer Association gave them the NCOA Military Excellence Award.

As the active-duty winner, Sinner accepted the Stephen Ailes Award. Ailes was secretary of the Army in 1964 and 1965, and helped set up the first Drill Sergeant School at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.

Laird received the Ralph Haines Jr. Award — Haines was commander of the Continental Army Command, forerunner of U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command, 1970 to 1972.

The Ailes and Haines awards were presented at a later Pentagon ceremony.

The active and Reserve runners-up are, respectively: Staff Sgt. Edward L. Johnson, Fort Jackson, S.C.; and Sgt. 1st Class David E. Knight, 95th Training Division. They received the Army Commendation Medal.

Twenty-six NCOs — all Drill Sergeants of the Year for their installations or divisions — competed for these Army-level honors.

God brings order

By Gene Ritchie
Infantry Training Brigade

reflections

The first chapter of Genesis states that God created order out of chaos.

If we were to "click off" the number of events and situations in our lives to categorize as either "in order" or "in chaos," I wonder which side would win?

Recently in my own life, I was not selected for promotion. I also had a family member go through major surgery. This created chaos in my life. Then, I was alerted for a new assignment. I asked to remain at Fort Benning. My request for deletion of the assignment was denied twice. As I prepared to go, I was notified that events in another chaplain's life were such that he would go and I could stay.

Hopefully, most things are in order, but usually there is some chaos. We need enough order so that our "boat of life" will not be tipped over.

Elizabeth Achtemeier states: Nature. God and Pulpit, Page 97. "In the beginning, there was nothing, says the biblical faith void, darkness, nonlife - and the Hebrew mind equated that nothingness with evil and death, because God is the God of life and good and light and order. But it is very hard to talk about nothing, isn't it? And so the Bible put it in the form of a symbol.

It said that nothingness in the beginning before creation was simply chaos — chaotic waters, ocean, sea, with nothing but the spirit of God blowing over the surface of the waters. And then, Genesis says, God created everything by bringing order into the chaos.

God put checks on the chaotic waters and instead of their darkness created light; God bound the chaos and instead of its turbulence brought forth order. In place of the evil chaos, God created the world good; in place of the death chaos, God made Earth's swarming life and you and me.

In the Gospel of Mark, Chapter 4, there is a similar story of chaos. While Jesus is asleep at the stern, his disciples are rowing the boat on the Sea of Galilee during a chaotic storm that threatens to drown them all. The disciples woke him and said, Teacher, do you not care that we are perishing? The Bible says that he arose and rebuked the wind and said to the sea, "Peace, be still!" And the wind ceased and there was a great calm. (Nature, God, and Pulpit, page 97).

That's what we want in our lives, isn't it — a great calm. From the chaos, we want "peace!" God, the Father and the Son and the Spirit, conquered the chaos when he created our world. He conquers it still.

And, so, what is there to fear? What is there to fear if we trust God? In the words of the psalmist. "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble. Therefore we will not fear though the Earth should change, though the mountains shake in the heart of the sea. (46:1-2 NIV). May God's peace and calm be with you today, and every day.

Retiring chief of staff leaves spiritual gift

By Robert Thompson
USAIC Chaplains' Office

When Col. Burnet Quick retired recently as chief of staff of Fort Benning, he left me a very special gift. It's quite possible he didn't know he was giving me one, but he did. I think some other folks received it, too.

We got this gift during the speech he gave at his retirement ceremony. He delivered it through two statements that seemed to be unplanned. He began with something like, "I'm an emotional animal, so if I have trouble getting through this, please bear with me."

The other statement came toward the end of his speech, when he was thanking his family for supporting him through his 29-year Army career. Actually, his other statement began with a long pause. He then said, "I've got so many tears in my eyes that I can't read my speech," Then he rubbed his eyes with his hands and went on with his written speech.

Those two statements stood out as my highlight of that retirement ceremony. The Infantry Chorus sounded great, as it always does. The epic poem, "I Am the Infantry," accompanied by life-sized visuals (some of which moved) impressed me. The words of Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White rang sincere and complimentary. The award to Frances Quick felt good because military spouses need to be recognized, too.

Those who drink of the water that I will give them will never be thirsty.

-John 4:14

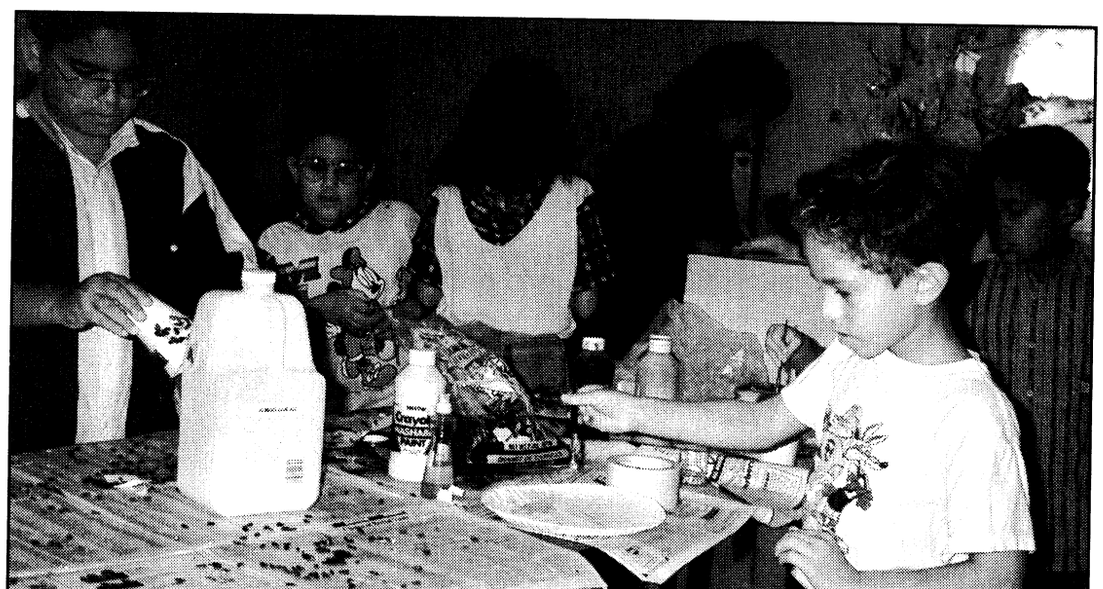
But Quick's statements stole the show for me. "I'm an emotional animal," he said. "I've got so many tears in my eyes that I can't read my speech."

These words gave his gift — Real men have strong feelings — real men express their feelings.

Quick didn't have to say these things. After all, he is an adult male, whose role usually consists of completing tasks more than relating to persons as persons.

In our world, men who do "the feeling thing" are considered weak. He didn't have to share his feelings. After all, he is a career soldier, whose role usually has consisted of training other men to wage war. In our world, men who show feelings are thought to have lost control. He really didn't have to share. After all, he is an infantry officer, whose role usually consists of telling men where to go to kill other men. In our world, men who shed tears — for joy, concern, sadness, relief — are considered poets, not warriors.



He didn't have to, but he did. I doubt many of us would have noticed if he had not.

He gave us a fight instead. He did not deny or play down the typical roles he filled in the Army. Indeed, he stated that he had always wanted to be an infantry officer and that his long and varied career exceeded all his expectations.

In those unrehearsed moments at the microphone, however, he transcended the usual and gave us a well-rounded model. Feelings, he showed us are a vital part of what makes us human — sharing them helps keep us human.

Men seem to be trapped. The role of the unfeeling robot-like male traps them. Quick's description and demonstration as an expressive male reminds us that the trap is often self-imposed. We can let ourselves show our feelings.

Congratulations on your retirement, sir. The best to you and your family in the years ahead. And thanks for your final heartfelt "Follow Me!"

Jaqueline Feagin

BANDITS

back-to-back champions

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The 1994 U.S. Army Infantry Center women's softball championship came down to one game July 28 at Gowdy Field with the Bandits holding up Down and Dirty 16-7 to win their second straight championship.

"We had to prove to everyone that the first title was not a fluke," said team captain and left fielder Tammy White. "We did not want to have to play Down and Dirty twice, so we came out with a strong desire to win it all in one."

The Bandits swept through the tournament 4-0 and handed Down and Dirty a little payback from the regular season.

"Coming into the tournament we were seeded fourth," said head coach Robert Jackson. "We had to show everyone what a champion is made of. We lost to Down and Dirty during the regular season, so there was a little payback firing us up."

Down and Dirty had to get to the championship the hard way — through the losers' bracket. After beating the Lady Hawks 14-4, Down and Dirty took on the Yellow Jackets for the right to play the Bandits in the night cap.

A 13-2 swatting of the Yellow Jackets propelled Down and Dirty into the showdown with the Bandits minutes later. After the coin toss to decide who would be home team, Down and Dirty hit the field with the Bandits coming to bat.

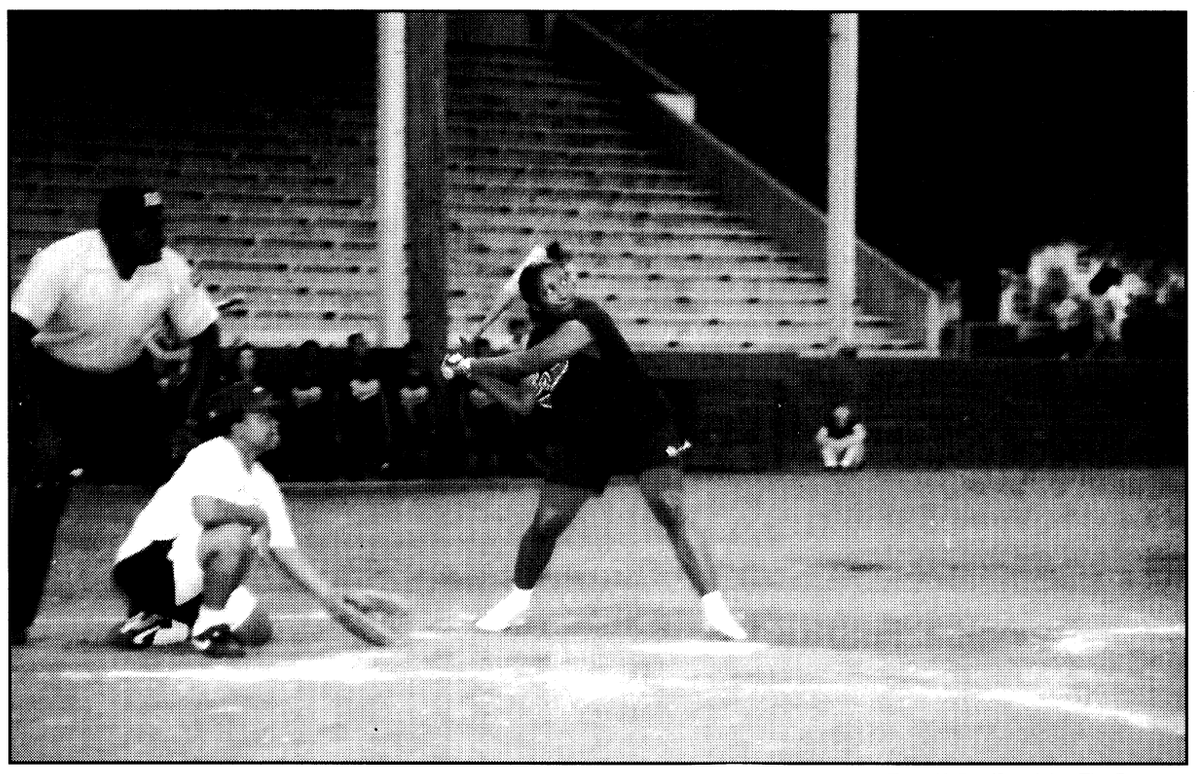
The Bandits went down quietly in the top half of the first with Down and Dirty coming to the plate.

A lead off single by right center fielder Gaynell Henton and a ground out to first by Myra Lattimore set the table for shortstop Alice Brown to drive in the first run of the game. Brown drove a single to center field scoring Henton from second. A throw to home allowed Brown to move to third putting another runner in scoring position. First baseman Angela "The Hammer" Jackson got her first run batted in with a single past Bandit shortstop Stacy McGowen for 2-0 Down and Dirty lead.

The Bandits responded in the top of the second inning with a three-run inning of their own. Two singles and a walk loaded the bases for the Bandits. A two-run double to right center field from pitcher Vivian Womack promptly unloaded the bases and tied the game at 2-2. An RBI ground out from right fielder Sachauco Cyrus gave the Bandits their first lead of the night 3-2.

Down and Dirty tied the game at 3-3 in the bottom of the second on a ground out from pitcher Kim Shawver after third baseman Rolanda McCuen reached third base on a single and an error on McGowen at short.

In the top of the third inning, the Bandits reclaimed the lead for the last time at 6-3 with another three-run inning. Three straight singles from Kerri Staring, White and McGowen to open the inning would have loaded the bases, however Staring was gunned down at third by left fielder Sandra Wesley leaving runners at first and second.



Bandit third baseman Amy Macheel drove in White from second with a double to left field for her first hit of the game. Left center fielder Regina Jackson plated McGowen with an RBI single past Brown at short. An RBI single by center fielder Sara Lepenven gave the Bandits their final run of the inning.

Down and Dirty scratched out a run in the bottom of the third inning to cut the deficit to 6-4 on a lead off double by Lattimore and a two-out single to left field from Wesley.

The Bandits broke the game open with a four-run outburst in the top of the fourth inning.

Singles from catcher Sarah Meady, designated hitter Lynette Reynolds and Staring loaded the bases for White. White drove Shawver's first pitch to center field for a two-run double. A walk to McGowen and forced play at second off the bat of Macheel scored another run. A sacrifice fly to left field off of the bat of Jackson scored White for the fourth run of the inning and a 10-4 advantage.

In the bottom of the fourth inning, Down and Dirty squeezed out a run on two hits to trim the Bandit lead to 10-5. Second baseman Summer Doucet led off the inning with double to left field. Two outs later, Shawver hit a ground ball to Womack on the pitcher's mound and Shawver beat out the throw to first, scoring Doucet from third.

Down and Dirty held the Bandits scoreless in the top of the fifth inning; then they added another run in the bottom of the fifth inning to creep ever closer at 10-6.

The Bandits pushed the lead back up to 12-6 in the top of the sixth inning. With two out, the Bandits put together four straight hits to left field. The big hit came off the bat of Jackson who laced a single down the left field line for two RBI.

A four-run seventh inning put the shackles on Down and Dirty. With runners on first and second and two out, Reynolds drove the ball to left field for one run. Two runs scored when Staring lined a single to right field. The throw from right went to home plate, but it was too late to tag out anyone. White then drove in Staring with the Bandits final run of the game on a single to left field and 16-6 lead.

Down and Dirty managed one more run in the bottom of the seventh but it was too little too late. The game ended when Doucet lined to Macheel at third for the final out.

"We gave it everything we had; it just wasn't enough," Jackson said. "After smoking through the first two games, I think it finally caught up with us late in the game."

Jackson's coach Stephen Farrow agreed to a point.

"We were a little tired, but that's not what beat us," Farrow said. "We played a better team tonight. They hit the ball in the right spots at the right times all night. I'm proud of my girls; they showed a lot of heart and character. I'm not disappointed."

SJA names NCO, legal specialist of qtr

Staff Judge Advocate's Office

The Office of the Staff Judge Advocate has named its first legal noncommissioned officer and legal specialist of the quarter.

Sgt. Craig L. Perkins of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, is the legal noncommissioned officer of the quarter, and Spc. Kevin E. Harvey of Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, is the legal specialist of the quarter.

The soldiers received the honor as a result of the first Fort Benning Legal Noncommissioned Officer of the Quarter Board and Legal Specialist of the Quarter Board, which was July 27.

Two other soldiers were nominated. They are: Sgt. Patrick B. Bush of Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, 13th Corps Support Battalion, 36th Engineer Group; and Pfc. Scott R. Haarer, Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment.

Master Sgt. Ronald R. Mooney presided as president, and Sgt. 1st Class Darrell A. Floyd and Staff Sgt. Ramon A. Maders were voting members.

Questions were asked concerning court-martial orders, pretrial preparations, posttrial preparations, administrative separations, non-judicial punishment and current events.

The noncommissioned officers were also asked questions about FM 22-100, Military Leadership and FM 22-101, Leadership Counseling. The soldiers made their appearance in Class A uniforms.

After evaluating each of the competitors, the results were given to the board recorder, Spc. Steven Waggoner. Waggoner compiled the scores and Col. Paul Anderson, staff judge advocate, approved the selection of the winners.

The winners received a Letter of Commendation from Anderson, and they will be recommended for an Army Achievement Medal.

36th cdr receives thanks, appreciation

By Garth Ellenburg
BOSS Program

The commander of the 36th Engineer Group recently received a certificate of appreciation for his contributions to the Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers program.

Col. Dean A. Kershaw received a Certificate of Appreciation July 20. The certificate was signed by Fort Benning Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White.

Sgt. Maj. Allen Thrower of the Directorate of Community Activities and Sgt. Lorne Johnson of the 36th Engineer Group presented the award.

The certificate was requested by the single soldiers in the 36th Engineer Group for Kershaw's contributions in support of the BOSS program.

Kershaw's support was instrumental in a recent trip the BOSS Council made to Destin, Fla. His support was also key in the most recent BOSS-sponsored country music concert.

Soldiers from the 36th Engineer Group were also instrumental in the BOSS program's Habitat for Humanity effort that built a home for a needy family in the Columbus area.

"I came here today expecting to give an award, not get one, Kershaw said when receiving the award. "This is the first award I have ever received from my soldiers and I am going to go put it on my wall right now."

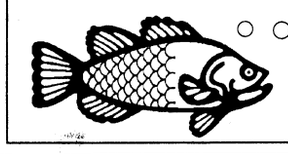
Garrison cdr to participate in Leadership Columbus

Columbus Chamber of Commerce

Fort Benning's garrison commander has been selected to participate in the Leadership Columbus Class of 1995 for the Columbus Chamber of Commerce.

Col. Richard L. Rutledge will be part of the 15th class to participate in the 10-month program that began in 1980. More than 500 community leaders have participated in the program.

Leadership Columbus participants will develop leadership skills and knowledge of the community through a series of one-day sessions from September through June.



Topics covered include education, health, city and state government, utilities, media, Fort Benning, public safety, quality of life and the economic base of the community. Information will be presented through lectures, panel discussions, tours, on-site visitations and informal question-and-answer sessions.

The goal of the program is to provide Columbus with a resource of leadership to guide the community into the 21st century. The selection committee has selected a diverse group in terms of race, sex and occupation.

Individuals are nominated by an organization, company or individual.

LIFE'S A BEACH ...

AT THE DESTIN ARMY RECREATION AREA

A family prepares to take one of the sailboats out onto Choctawhatchee Bay.

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

Imagine sitting on the beach as lukewarm water splashes between your toes. Imagine beautiful sunsets, swaying palm trees.

There is a place like this not too far from post that is available to soldiers, family members, Reservists, Department of Defense civilians and retirees, and it is dedicated to total relaxation and affordability.

It's a little corner of the world that includes spacious housing, an exclusive beach and a pool, all within minutes of attractions such as water parks and local restaurants.

It's the Destin Army Recreation Area, in Destin Fla.

The recreation area has been around since the '60s, but it wasn't more than a "little fish camp" back then, said Lamar Caldwell, Community Recreation division chief for the Directorate of Community Activities.

The entire recreation area is 15 acres and includes 17 two-bedroom cabins, 66 recreation vehicles and tent spaces, 34 hotel rooms and five three-bedroom cabins to be added by Sept. 1, Caldwell said.

"(The city of) Destin is a very expensive area," said Brian Smith, marketing director for DCA. "We are fortunate to have this and to be able to offer it at (lower) prices."

The motel rooms, which are limited to four people, include a refrigerator, cable television, clock radio, coffee maker, microwave oven, two queen-sized beds, closet, two chairs, table, towels and bathroom amenities (soap, shampoo and conditioner).

The two- and three-bedroom cabins are resemble little homes away from home. They offer full array of amenities inside and out.

Inside the cabin, a carpeted living room arrangement greets the occupant. The kitchen comes with stove, a self-cleaning oven, coffee-maker and microwave oven. Silverware and cooking utensils, along with pots and pans, are provided. The kitchen also has a dining table that seats six.

A queen-sized bed and a ceiling fan highlight the master bedroom, which also includes walk-in closet, wall lamp and a dresser with mirror. The other bedroom has two-bunk beds, alarm clock, lamp and walk-in closet. In the back of the cabin, a grill is available, a picnic table and a clothesline.

Angela Koenig, recreational aid from the recreational area, said she works part time at a large hotel in the Destin area and the rooms at the recreational area are larger, nicer and less expensive.

How to make Reservations

1. Plan — have primary and secondary time frames.
2. Cabin or motel — know which one you want.
3. Call 1-800-642-0466 — make reservation.
4. Send money — to reserve room.

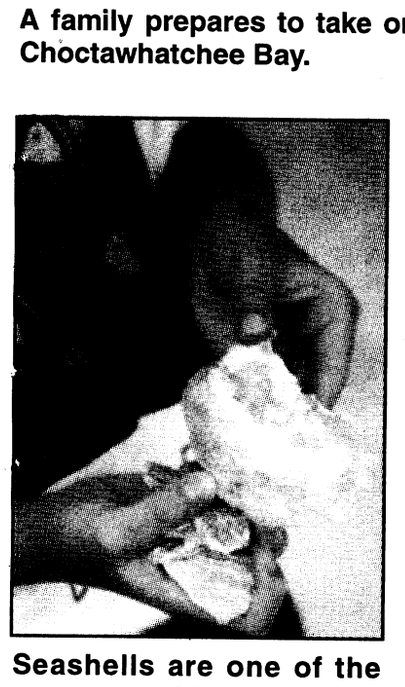
While staying at the facilities, there are more things to do than just lie around at the pool or beach. A variety of boats are available to rent at the area's marina.

For only $20 per half hour, jet skis are available. Also, a paddle boat is available for $3 per hour.

Other boats include: a 14-foot sailboat (Hobie Cat) for $25 for four hours, or $40 for eight hours; a 14-foot fishing boat (with motor) is $4 an hour or $25 for eight hours (gas is extra) and a 24-foot pontoon party boat is $15 an hour or $50 for four hours, or $90 for eight hours (gas is extra).

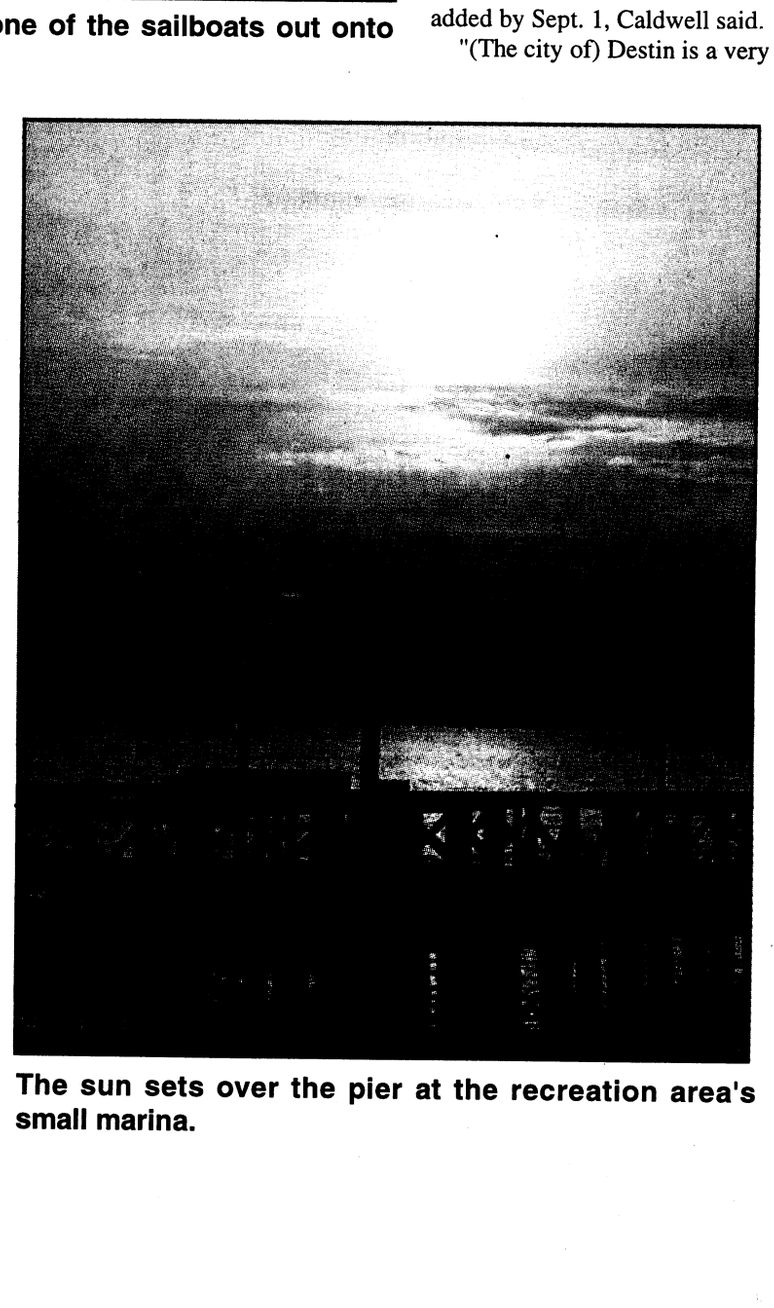
The "Follow Me" fishing boat, also available, is a three-diesel engine, 48-foot boat that is solely used for deep sea fishing in the Gulf of Mexico. It can carry up to 22 people at one time. All fishing equipment is provided, including bait. Children under 12 must be accompanied by an adult.

When calling for reservations, having primary and secondary times for arrival helps speed up the process, Caldwell said. When people call and ask, "What do you have open," it slows down the process, he said.



Fort Benning folks get special treatment during the season because the recreation area reserves certain cabins for post personnel only.

When reserving cabins, there is a four-night minimum, which helps keep the costs down, Smith said.



"It costs more to have people cleaning the rooms every day."

When a cabin is being booked the occupant must pay for at least two days in advance, payable by credit card or check, Caldwell said. The check must arrive within seven days after the reservation is made. There is no advanced payment needed when reserving the motel rooms, if only staying one night.

Reservations for the Destin area can be made by calling (800) 642-0466. Fort Benning active duty personnel and DoD civilians working on post can make reservations six months in advance, Smith said. Everyone else can make reservations four months in advance.

Seashells are one of the souvenirs of Destin.

The sun sets over the pier at the recreation area's small marina.

Women's club honors military

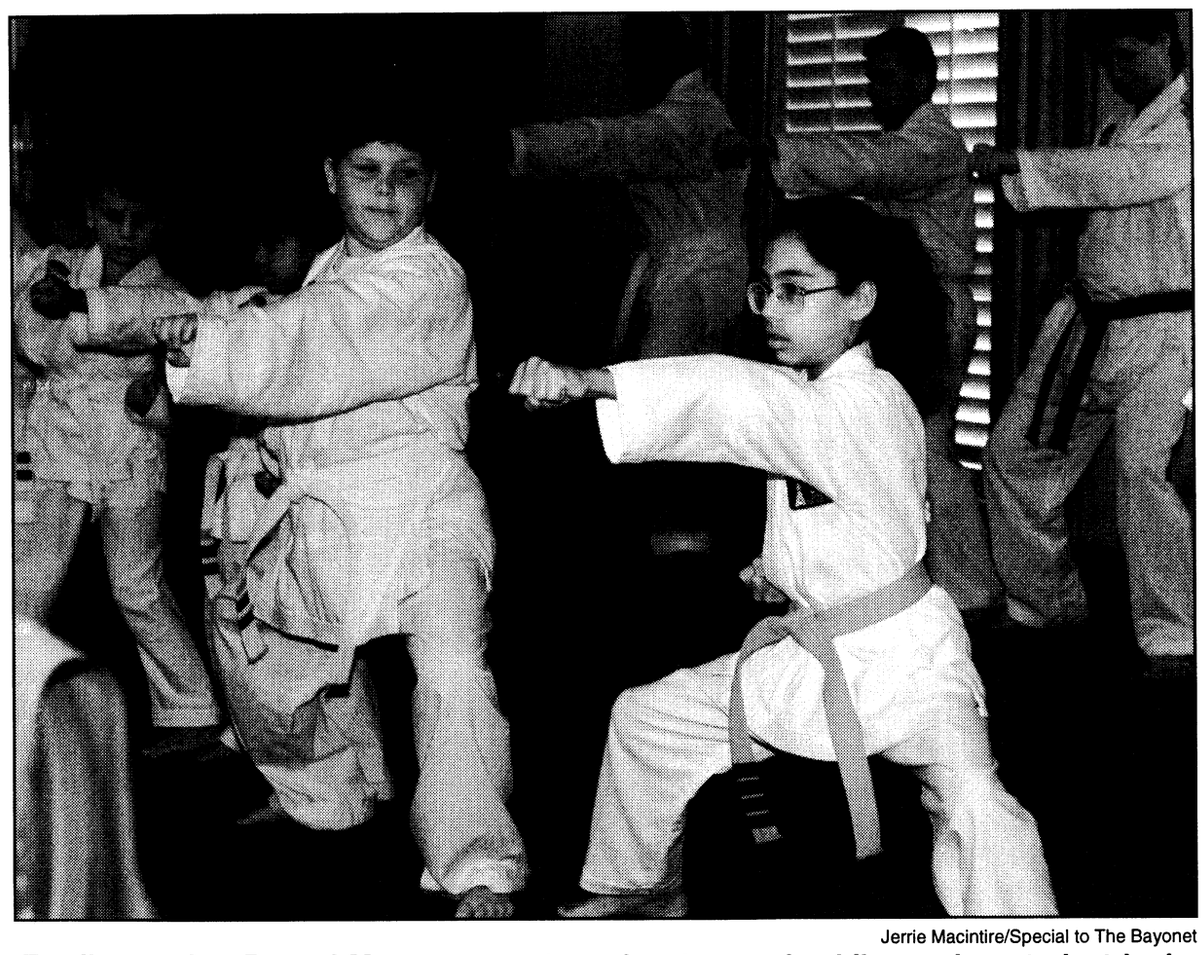
By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet©

The Christian Woman's Club of the Columbus area honored military wives with a theme of "On the Battlefield" at the monthly meeting July 28 at the Harmony Club.

The slate of activities included solos by Misti Bell such as the patriotic number, "Proud to be an American," a "combat ready" karate demonstration by James Green of Green's Tae Kwon Do Plus Studio, and an inspirational message from Helen McIntosh of Dalton, Ga., entitled "Worthy of the Purple Heart."

"The program was just to say thank you to our military for keeping us free," said Joyce Stryker, CWC president whose husband served 17 years in the Army.

Military wives were recognized and presented with purple heart favors.



Speaking around a theme of liberty, McIntosh spoke about freedom in America as well as personal freedom.

Detailing her journey as a Christian, McIntosh encouraged the audience to "share, bear each others burdens."

"Be honest about your pain, share your pain before anger turns into depression," McIntosh, a school counselor, encouraged.

The next CWC meeting is scheduled for Aug. 25 at 10 a.m. at the Columbus Harmony Club. Meetings are nondenominational and there are no club fees.

For information, call 563-7858 or 596-8268.

555th to meet

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The 555th Parachute Infantry Association is holding a 50th anniversary reunion at Fort Benning and Columbus through Sunday.

About 200 members of the 555th and their families are expected to attend the reunion that includes a visit to Fort Benning today for a special Airborne in Action demonstration, a visit to the Airborne Walk and National Infantry Museum and lunch at the Main Post NCO Club.

A spokesman for the reunion said Maj. Gen. F. A. Gordon, commander of the Military District of Washington, will be the special guest for the reunion banquet Saturday at the Columbus Iron Works Convention and Trade Center.

The all-black 555th Parachute Infantry Company, or "Triple Nickels" as the unit was known, was formed at Fort Benning in 1944. Later that year, it was redesignated as a battalion due to the large number of volunteers for the unit.

Although the unit never saw action in World War II, it was involved in the war effort on the homefront, jumping into forests of the Pacific Northwest and fighting fires started by Japanese air balloons.

The 555th was attached to the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N.C., following the war and was inactivated in 1947 when President Harry Truman ordered an end to segregated troop units. It then became the 3rd Battalion, 505th Airborne Regiment.

DoD resists limiting public lands for military operations

By F. Peter Wigginton
American Forces Information Service

The Department of Defense is committed to good environmental practices, but further restricting military training areas would severely hamper national defense, the department's top environmental official said.

Sherri Goodman, deputy undersecretary of Defense for environmental security, objected to proposed legislation that would limit public land and air use for critical military operations. She testified before the House Subcommittee on National Parks, Forests and Public Lands.

Goodman said DoD recognizes the public is concerned that both ground and air military operations may disturb the ecology in and over national forests and other federal lands. However, she said, a key element of mission capability is well-disciplined and highly skilled pilots and soldiers who depend on adequate training under realistic conditions.

Presently the Engle Act of 1956 specifies Congress must approve withdrawal, reservation, restriction or use of more than 5,000 acres of public lands for military purposes. House Resolution 2080, Military Land Reform and Reassessment Act, would amend Engle and require DoD to provide an inventory of all public lands to be withdrawn for military use, provide information about lands' resources and values, and justify any continued withdrawal.

In effect, the act further regulates the way the national government decides how much and which federal lands and national airspace should be placed under military agency control. The decision-making also would require analysis of the extent to which the actions will affect the natural and environmental values, fish and wildlife of these areas.

DoD is sensitive to cooperating and working with other agencies and the public regarding military use of public lands and environmental issues

Before approval could be obtained to establish a military zone, the resolution would require opinions of various people be submitted to Congress six months prior. These viewpoints would include comments from the appropriate secretaries of Interior or Agriculture and the governor, Indian tribes and public of affected states.

For example, Section 4 of the resolution could prevent the Federal Aviation Administration from restricting, even temporarily, areas so that large-scale military training exercises could be conducted over public domain lands. The amendment "would severely limit training flexibility for regular and Reserve aviation forces, including the Air National Guard. It would also hamper aircraft unit activation and modernization initiatives, most of which require airspace actions," she added.

In fact, despite downsizing, she said, larger land and air areas are needed to achieve operational readiness because of changes in tactics and weapon systems. Such restrictions and delays would cause loss of vital training capability and readiness would suffer, she stressed.

Goodman said DoD is sensitive to cooperating and working with other agencies and the public regarding military use of public lands and environmental issues. The department recommends the size of land withdrawals not require congressional action even, for example, to allow for armored or heavy mechanized brigade-level exercises. The existing 5,000-acre limit is too restrictive for these exercises, even for dismounted infantry, she said.

community care

By Ken Franklin
Martin Army Community Hospital

Question: I hear people at Martin Army Community Hospital use the terms "enrolled" and "empanelled" when talking about my health care. Do these mean the same thing? I'm confused.

Answer: "Enrolled" and "empanelled" mean two very different things in the world of managed care.

When a family joins the hospital's Family Practice Gateway To Care program, they are enrolled. This means that the family is entered into the records system and assigned to a specific clinic for care.

Active duty soldiers are usually enrolled at a troop medical clinic. The soldier's family is enrolled at the Martin Army Family Practice Clinic, Winder Family Clinic, Aviation Medicine Family Practice Clinic or Primary Care of the Uniformed Services Family Practice Clinic. Retirees and their families may also be enrolled at these clinics.

However, about 15,000 people in the Fort Benning area are not enrolled. That means that they can get acute care at the Emergency Room or Outpatient Clinic, or can get family outpatient care through a Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services physician. However, these unenrolled patients are not authorized care at the four family clinics.

In the Martin Army Family Practice Clinic and Winder Family Practice Clinic, patients are also empanelled. This means that a specific doctor is responsible for that family's long-term care.

Empanelment helps with follow-up because the majority of visits are with the same doctor. A patient will not be required to repeat a lengthy history many times.

Empanelment helps with admissions and consultations. The patient's results are sent to a specific physician, who can review the results and act on a specialist's recommendation.

Family physicians are human and can only provide quality work for so many hours a week. Therefore, some patients may see other doctors in the same clinic for acute problems.

If the problem needs follow-up, the doctor talks to the empaneled physician and briefs him or her on the patient.

Aviation Medicine Family Clinic and the PRIMUS Family Practice Clinic do not currently offer formal empanelment. However, both encourage patients to ask for a specific doctor for their long-term needs.

In summary, enrollment assigns a patient to a specific clinic. Empanelment assigns a patient to a specific doctor in that clinic. The combination provides the structure for patients to receive family medical care with continuity and quality.

Do you have a question about family care at Fort Benning? Send it to Community Care Corner, Martin Army Community Hospital, ATTN: HSXB-F, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905.

Swimmers stroke toward water safety

By Stephen Barrett
American Forces Information Service

As the summer heat draws more people toward cool, refreshing pools and beaches, swimmers must use their heads for more than diving into water. The American Red Cross cautions swimmers on water hazards that could turn summer dreams to nightmares.

Ann Stingle, a Red Cross spokeswoman, said swimmers need to know their limits.

"There are many good swimmers, but even the best can go beyond their abilities, especially when they tire," Stingle said.

She said experienced swimmers should never tempt beginners into waters or situations beyond their abilities. Experienced swimmers should encourage novices to stay in safe waters and gradually improve their swimming.

"Even in water parks, there's a lot of thrashing and splashing going on between good and inexperienced swimmers," Stingle said.

"They have to realize what they can and can't do."

Besides knowing swimming limits, Stingle said, swimmers must never swim alone, especially on beaches and lakes.

"There are areas that may have drastic drop offs and undertows," she said. "Some of these areas don't have working lifeguards, and many have no warning signs of the dangers."

She encouraged swimmers to know the basics of first aid and cardiopulmonary resuscitation. She said American Red Cross chapters routinely conduct training sessions for swimmers and lifeguards.

Other hints for a safe swimming season include:

- Never swim after drinking alcohol or using medications.
- Always check the water depth. Walk in from the shore or ease in from the dock or edge of a pool.
- Don't swim if you can't see the bottom of the pool in the deep end or if the water is cloudy.
- Stay close enough to the shore or the pool's edge so you can get to it safely by yourself.
- Watch out for the "dangerous too's" — too tired, too cold, too far from safety, too much sun and too much exercise.
- Always keep an eye on young swimmers.
- Obey all lifeguard instructions and respect their judgment.
- Never fake an emergency.
- Learn the proper way to dive into water.
- Never eat or chew gum while swimming.
- Wear swimming goggles only for surface swimming.
- Never rely on floating toys, air mattresses or arm bands to prevent drowning.
- Always keep a life jacket near the beach, boat or pool.
- Keep pool gates closed and locked when proper supervision is absent.
- Ensure all swimmers understand pool and beach rules.
- Do not run or push near pools.
- Don't swim during thunderstorms.
- Never swim when you are ill.

For more information on swimming safety, contact the Safety or American Red Cross office.

Low-fat grilling can be delicious

American Institute for Cancer Research

Think of a good barbecue, and the delicious aroma of big steaks, plump sausages and sizzling hot dogs comes to mind.

But does barbecuing mean abandoning all hope for a nutritious meal? Not at all!

The health advice to eat a low-fat, high-fiber diet with less meat and more fruits and vegetables doesn't rule out barbecuing — it just takes a little planning to make great grilled meals that are nutritious as well as delicious.

Choose low-fat meats: Some favorite barbecue meats are very high in fat — ribs and hot dogs are two examples. However, if you only eat small servings of these as occasional treats, and usually grill lower-fat lean meat, skinless poultry or fish, you'll be eating for good health.

One way to reduce the fat is to trim all visible fat from meats and to remove the skin from poultry before grilling (poultry without the skin has about half the fat that it does with skin). And choose leaner cuts to grill, like London Broil, flank steak, loin pork chops, or try firm, thick-cut fish "steaks."

And don't let meats hog the grill: barbecued vegetables are delicious, either skewered for a traditional shish kabob with small pieces of meat, poultry, fish or shrimp, or by themselves, brushed with some fruit juice or barbecue sauce.

Try grilling mushroom caps, green pepper, onion, cherry tomatoes and summer squash like zucchini. Before skewering vegetables, dip them in very hot water first to keep them from splitting. Or wrap vegetables in foil with a spoonful of water, juice or marinade, then put on the grill to cook for 10 to 15 minutes.

Although many marinade recipes call for oil, using a marinade with no fat tastes just as good and is another healthy way to reduce the fat in your barbecue.

Make delicious nonfat marinades: Popular marinade ingredients include vinegar, fruit or vegetable juices, wine, seasonings and herbs. Sweet and sour sauces usually combine sweet ingredients, such as fruit juice or brown sugar, with tangier flavors like tomato paste or mustard.

Some delicious nonfat marinades for both meat and vegetables include:

- Italian herb: red wine or red wine vinegar, crushed fresh garlic or garlic powder, tomato juice, freshly ground black pepper, parsley, oregano and basil, pinch of sugar.
- Carribean fruit: lime juice, pineapple juice, cayenne red pepper, and cider vinegar.
- Creole spice: minced green pepper, minced onion, brown sugar, tomato paste thinned with water, red wine or red wine vinegar, black pepper dash of hot pepper sauce.

Watch out for gopher tortoises!

By Gregory W. Lee
Natural Resources Mgmt. Branch

If you find yourself making trips to the great outdoors this summer, be sure to keep an eye out for gopher tortoises (gophers for short). Not only is summer the best time to spot one of these reptiles, it is also the time of year when a significant portion of the declining gopher tortoise population is injured or killed on the nation's roads.

Just two months ago, someone brought a gopher tortoise that was hit and injured by a car to the Natural Resources Management Branch. The injuries weren't fatal, and the tortoise was rehabilitated and released on post.

Gopher tortoises are found only in six southeastern states (South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana). They can be up to 15 inches long and are full-brown terrestrial turtles that may live to be 80 years old.

Tortoises live in self-excavated burrows that may extend 30 feet in length. The burrow entrance has a characteristic half-moon shape, and the burrow serves as a home to as many as 30 different kinds of animals, including several rare species such as the indigo snake and the gopher frog.

Therefore, if gopher tortoises are killed or removed from the wild, the burrows will eventually fill in and all the other animals that depended on the burrow for a home will disappear from the area.

Gopher tortoises are classified as a threatened species by the state of Georgia and are a candidate for the federal endangered species list. Because of this, they are protected by law and cannot be captured or killed, and their burrows cannot be disturbed.

The main causes for the decline of gopher tortoises is habitat destruction, being killed by vehicles and people catching them for food.

If you see anyone kill or capture a gopher tortoise, report it immediately to the Natural Resource Management Branch 544-6206 or 544-7319 or the Military Police.

If you would like to report a gopher tortoise sighting or would like more information about gopher tortoises, contact the Natural Resources Management Branch.

CHAMPUS

Coordinator on post can answer your questions

CHAMPUS Select

A Civilian Health and Medical Program for the Uniformed Services Select coordinator is just a phone call away for Fort Benning-area CHAMPUS beneficiaries wanting to learn more about CHAMPUS Select. Joe Thornton, the CSC in this area, is located at Fort Benning.

Thornton is most familiar with the CHAMPUS Select program on the local level and the needs of the beneficiaries in the Fort Benning area. When the health care a beneficiary needs is not available at Martin Army Community Hospital, he is dedicated to helping beneficiaries find the care they need through CHAMPUS Select.

Beneficiaries can call Thornton with questions about the program and for a copy of the CHAMPUS Select health-care provider directory. The directory contains information about CHAMPUS Select's comprehensive network of doctors, hospitals and other health care providers in the area that have been screened to make certain they meet Defense Department guidelines.

CHAMPUS Select is a voluntary health-care benefits program offered to CHAMPUS beneficiaries by the Department of Defense, as a cost-effective option to standard CHAMPUS. It is not a CHAMPUS supplemental insurance plan so there is no premium to pay or enrollment fee to use the program.

CHAMPUS Select is only available in the Southeastern Region of the United States — namely Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, Tennessee and the Fort Campbell area of Kentucky.

Call Thornton at 682-5949 for more information about the CHAMPUS Select program. A toll-free Beneficiary Information Line is also available to help beneficiaries identify a CHAMPUS Select provider in the area. Call (800) 824-3570 during regular business hours and start taking advantage of CHAMPUS Select .

Work to prevent heat injuries

By Stephen Barrett
American Forces Information Service

Summer means short sleeves and shorts, baseball and boating and a variety of other combinations normally associated with sun fun. It's when vacationers shed uniforms and suits for swim attire and tank tops, brown bags for barbecues.

However, most of the summer is spent at work, dealing with daily heat and humidity. The military still conducts training outdoors, and installation support and maintenance must continue. In summer, this means service members and their leaders must take steps to prevent heat injuries. Military health officials emphasize the most important precaution is water consumption.

It's one aspect Sgt. Henry Harris of the Walter Reed Army Medical Center Preventive Medicine Office can't emphasize enough.

"We're telling commanders and leaders to adjust their training schedules, work in shifts and make sure people get into cool, shaded areas when they're not working," said Harris. "That helps, but with temperatures reaching 90 degrees and above, they also need at least two quarts of water an hour to prevent dehydration and heat injuries."

Harris said the advisory pertains especially to service members training in armored tactical vehicles and on hot surfaces such as airfields and motor pools. These service members need to replenish the water lost by perspiration caused by their work environment.

It also applies to off-duty activities, especially with athletic events like soccer, softball and running. The heat of competition often makes people ignore their bodies' demands.
