Springer to present play about Holocaust

Single-act drama opens Thursday

Springer Opera House

An original play profiling characters of the Holocaust will be presented at the Springer Opera House's Actors Arena.

"Ani Lo Eshkakh - I Will Not Forget" will be performed in the Springer Actors Arena Thursday and April 9, 14 and 16 at 8 p.m. and 2:30 p.m. April 10.

Sherilyn Zeff's play spotlights 15 people, mostly women, who never heard of the Nazi industrialist made famous by Steven Spielberg's recent movie "Schlinder's List" but were among the victims and persecutors of the Holocaust who lived and died between 1933 and 1945.

Zeff will play all of the characters herself in a single act, multi-media show presented by the Springer Opera House with help from a grant from the Georgia Council for the Arts Grassroots Arts Program.

Springer Artistic Director Paul R. Pierce will direct the actress in the play, which she developed herself from actual letters, stories, diaries, poems, songs and plays of the period.

"Ani Lo Eshkakh - I Will Not Forget" began in 1983 as a 20-minute presentation in the basement of a Washington, D.C. home.

There will be no performances on Friday evenings.

Seats are $10, $9 for Springer Society members and Springer season ticket holders.

To reserve tickets, call 327-3688. The Springer Actors Arena is located at 1022 First Ave. in Columbus.

Westville plans spring festival

Westville Historic Handicrafts Inc.

Westville will officially begin a spring festival in the village Thursday. The activities will continue through April 12 with special music and crafts demonstrations.

In the pre-industrial South, with its basically agricultural society, the return of spring meant plowing, planting and preparing that year's crop.

At Westville, activities will be no different as mules plow ground to prepare the gardens for planting. There will also be demonstrations of other activities in addition to the regular demonstrations of blacksmithing, pottery, quilting, spinning, weaving, basketmaking and woodworking.

Spring in 1850 was not just a time for hard work but celebrations as well as music played an important part in the various activities. Music will be heard during the weekend of the festival.

For more information, call Westville at (912) 838-6310.

Fort Benning, Georgia 31905-5000

Dear General White:

Congratulations to you and your staff for again being selected to compete for the honor as "Best Community of Excellence in the Army." As far as we in Columbus are concerned, you already hold that distinction.

The way you care for your soldiers, their family members, and the civilian workers on post is known community-wide, and if community relations are a factor in the judging, you most certainly will win the award hands down. Your good neighbor policy extends from work to improve the beauty and aesthetics of the community with our joint endeavors to link you recreation trail with our Riverwalk, to your support in bringing the Women's Softball venue of the 1996 Olympics to Columbus, and to the excellent assistance provided by your soldiers in building a home as part of the Habitat for Humanity Program.

Again, best wishes in your endeavor to receive the Department of Defense's highest award for the pursuit of excellence. There is no doubt in my mind what the outcome of the judging will be.

With kindest regards, I remain

Sincerely yours,

Major General Jerry A. White
Commander
United States Army Infantry Center
Fort Benning, Georgia 31905-5000

Dear General White:

We in Phenix City were proud, but not surprised, to hear that Fort Benning is again competing for the Department of Defense's highest award for the pursuit of excellence, the Commander-in-Chief's award for the BEST community of excellence in the Army.

Without a doubt it is already that, but to be officially recognized is certainly an honor and a distinction you and your fine people deserve. The way your care for your soldiers, their family members, and the civilian workers on post is well known.

Since becoming Mayor, I have enjoyed working on many joint projects with you and your people. Your support of the National Cemetery at Fort Mitchell, coupled with our efforts to memorialize our Indian Heritage in Alabama are good examples of the cooperation among your people at Fort Benning, and our folks in Phenix City.

Again, best wishes to you and your community as you strive to gain the recognition that we all know you deserve. As far as I am concerned, Fort Benning is already the BEST!

With kindest regards, I remain.

Sincerely yours,

March 1, 1994

Major General Jerry A. White
Commander
United States Army Infantry Center
Fort Benning, GA 31905-5000

Dear General White:

On behalf of the members of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce, I congratulate you and your staff, and extend my best wishes as you compete for the Department of Defense's top Community of Excellence honors.

Fort Benning, the Home of the Infantry, is known worldwide for its excellent ability to train soldiers, but your committed care for their family members, and your active role in our tri-community is not only highly visible but most commendable.

When it comes to being a "good neighbor", Fort Benning is the BEST! Your participation in community functions such as our annual tri-community Christmas Parade, grand openings, and ground breakings is appreciated and praised by our civilian community.

Your spontaneous offer to provide support for housing athletes at Fort Benning for the 1996 Olympics was a primary factor in bringing the Women's Softball venue to Columbus.

Again, best wishes in your drive toward success in the Community of Excellence honors. As far as I am concerned, Fort Benning is already the best installation in the Army!

Sincerely,

F. Michael Gaymon

DPW takes pride in accomplishments

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

"Our innovative programs and hard-working personnel are what made us best in the Training and Doctrine Command," said Sam Harris, chief of the Engineering Division of the of the Directorate of Public Works. "We are all very proud of our accomplishments."

Harris said when the Army-level Communities of Excellence team visits next week, its members will encounter the same commitment to quality and improvement that made Fort Benning's engineering services and facilities the best in TRADOC for 1993 in the extra large category.

Among the innovative programs that have made DPW's engineering services the best are:

• A unique real property master plan that ensures the proper placement, expansion or reduction of the post's training zones by monitoring their impact on the surrounding communities and the on-post population.

• A space management program that has consolidated activities, reduced urban sprawl, removed facilities that require too much energy and maintenance, identified good facilities for upgrade and provided better working environment for post personnel.

• A World War II demolition program that has made Fort Benning the leader in TRADOC in the demolition of World War II buildings with 325 buildings destroyed since fiscal 1988. The demolition program removes old buildings that are too costly to maintain, improves the environ-ment and returns grounds back to nature.

• An outstanding Self-Help/U-Do-It program that has helped numerous post organizations to complete needed projects at reduced cost. The U-Do-It Center has special engineer tools and tool kits for loan to units and directo-rates, as well as a large equipment inventory to loan to family housing occupants, including leaf blowers and small garden tillers.

• An aggressive energy management program that includes a computer-based energy manage-ment and control system. Because of its energy program, Fort Benning has met TRADOC's energy goals for seven consecutive years.

• A state-of-the-art pest control program that provides treatment within two days of a customer's call and meets the latest environ-mental regulatory requirements.

• Construction of a Material Recovery Facility for the recycling of cardboard, newspaper, glass, plastics and metal cans. A one-day-per-week curbside pickup of recyclables in family housing areas has also been implemented.

"We are also proud of our automated self-help network," Harris said. "We are able to track by computer all of the work materials issued to each family housing unit. For example, if a soldier comes in and needs an air conditioner filter but doesn't know what size he wants, we can look it up on the computer and see what size his or her unit takes."

Harris added that the personnel of DPW's engineering services strive to make Fort Benning a community of excellence everyday. "Striving to be the best is always a guiding philosophy for us," he said.

Exchange works toward being customer's choice

"To be our customers' first choice" is the vision of the Army and Air Force Exchange Service, said Mary Babbitt, post AAFES general manager.

Babbitt said the past several years have seen a tremendous upgrade in the quality of goods and services offered by AAFES and an increased sensitivity to customers' needs.

Fort Benning patrons have seen several improvements this past year, she said, including:

• Establishment of the Deferred Payment Plan in February. This special credit service allows soldiers to purchase big ticket items at a low annual percentage rate.

• Construction of a new Robin Hood Sandwich Shoppe, Burger King Express and Royal Chopstix in the Main Mall. Fort Benning is one of the first posts in the world to offer these establishments for the enjoyment of its customers, Babbitt said.

• Upgrade of the computer system at the Car Care Center to increase parts inventory to approximately $70,000.

• The opening of the new Mailing Center, so customers can shop and mail packages in one location.

Not an organization to become complacent, Babbitt said AAFES' future plans include the eventual addition of 30,000 square feet to the Main Exchange and a joint project with Fort Benning to completely renovate the historic Main Post Theatre.

"We are constantly looking at what our customers want. We work closely with the Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers Council and also have our own advisory council made up of soldier and civilian representatives of all ranks, active duty and retired," Babbitt said. The council directly influences merchandise selection, the need for additional services, pricing and hours of operation.

Extremely flexible customer-oriented hours of operation and the best price guarantee are two of the other ways AAFES strives to be the first choice for post personnel.

If patrons can find an item for less, AAFES will match the price and even refund the difference on items purchased at the regular price that were subsequently put on sale.

AAFES has also improved the quality of its service by improving the quality of its employee training programs, she said.

Innovative classes are being conducted to teach AAFES managers how to deal with the downsizing and accomplish more with less, and a service known as Business Television is broadcast in the break room to teach employees technical knowledge about new products.

DOL: No strangers to good service

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Employees of the Directorate of Logistics are no strangers to providing good customer service, said Glen Hall, industrial engineer and Communities of Excellence representative.

Hall said over the past year, DOL employees have really taken a personal interest in providing quality service and making Fort Benning the best.

"We are trying to get our employees personally involved in making Fort Benning a community of excellence," he said. "From the bottom level to the top, we want everyone involved in the process."

Many of the employees have made suggestions or have volunteered for self-help projects.

Hall said the directorate has accomplished several important projects during the past year, including a variety of self-help projects.

The Machine Shop constructed a customer service area where customers can comfortably wait for services; and, through process action teams, it created ways to yield faster more efficient service. Inspections Section One of the Quality Assurance Branch reno-vated its entire work area at almost no cost by using self-help and materials that were not being used by other organizations.

Among DOL's other accomplishments and services:

• Movement of the laundry facility to a more convenient location. The interior of the new facility was designed for the most efficient work flow for faster service, and renovation was done almost entirely through self-help.

• Expansion of the services offered by travel clerks, who are now available to go anywhere, anytime to brief soldiers and issue bus and airline tickets. Also, an express ticket booth was opened for pick up of tickets, family travel orders, passports and port calls.

• Expansion of the services offered by the personal property section. Clerks now go to the units to provide briefings on shipping and storing personal property. Installation of fax machines at both the Transportation Personnel Movements Section and the SatoTravel Travel Office allow customers to fax travel information and orders. Once travel arrangements are made, the offices can fax an itinerary to the customer.

• Completion of the new Petroleum and Lubrication facility, which includes improved environmental and safety systems.

• Implementation of the Benning Weapons Inventory Control System at the Equipment Pool, which uses bar codes on all weapons to computerize the entire, issue, receipt and inventory process.

• Closure of the Self-Service Supply Center and redesigning of the entire process for providing general office supplies to post organizations. Customers can now fax or telephone orders and supplies are delivered to them directly.

• The addition of new cash registers to promote speedier service at the monthly Reclamation Clothing Sale.

•Shuttle-bus service that was used by more than 350,000 riders last year and that has a standard of never being more than five minutes off schedule.

Chaplains

Named No. 1 in TRADOC for spiritual support, development

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

The spiritual development of Fort Benning's soldiers and family members is the number one priority of the post's Chaplain Services.

Maj. David R. Smith, Chaplains' Office special operations officer, said the members of the Army Communities of Excellence team won't have any trouble identifying the dedication of the post chaplains in providing post residents with the very best services available.

"Chaplains are supposed to be humble, of course, but we can't help but be extremely pleased with our accomplishments, including being named best chaplain services and facilities in the Training and Doctrine Command for 1993 to 1994," Smith said.

"The Fort Benning chaplains and their assistants are probably the finest group I have ever seen assembled during my career."

Smith said the chaplains are looking forward to showing the team their accomplishments in self-help.

"We are really excited about the renovation of the Custer Terrace chapel. We have made a kitchen where there was no kitchen, including building countertops, floors, walls and ceilings.

"All of the work was done with soldier labor and support from the Directorate of Public Works."

Other self-help initiatives for the coming year will include planting flowers outside all chapel buildings as a beautification project for the installation.

The other services and accomplishments of the Chaplains' Office include:

• Conducting an "I Care" customer service program in the Custer Terrace Housing Area in which selected clinical pastoral education students provide home visitation and counseling to more than 1,140 families daily with emphasis on reaching young enlisted soldiers and single-parent families. The program was recently extended to include McGraw Manor and another 2,000 families.

• The design of two specialized booklets that serve as devotional guides with topical Bible studies for use in the field and for deployments to Somalia, the National Training Center and elsewhere.

• The "Ministry in the Air" in which a chaplain makes the first jump with each new group of students attending Airborne School.

• A Crisis Ministry Fund that provides financial support, Thanksgiving baskets and Commissary vouchers at Christmas to needy soldiers.

• Providing religious support for initial entry soldiers, including the choice of 12 different worship services for 2,000 soldiers weekly and thousands of Bibles, rosaries, crosses, catechisms and Jewish prayer books.

• Providing numerous varieties of counseling and support services and workshops, including marriage enrichment and single-soldier retreats, a divorce recovery workshop, parenting classes and spouse-abuse groups.

• Special programs for the post's youth including "PARTY," a program for 4-year-olds through junior high that meets twice a month for Bible study, recreation, crafts and music.

Smith said the post is also proud to be selected for an additional skills identifier producing school, the Chaplain Family Life Ministry Training Center, which will provide an intensive 13-week course in marriage and family ministry for chaplains Armywide.

"This program is scheduled to begin next summer and we are extremely pleased," said Smith. "This course will really be a feather in our cap."

Smith said that maintaining the spiritual fitness of soldiers is extremely important to the Army's overall mission.

"Spiritual fitness is just as important to the readiness of the soldier as physical and mental fitness," he said.

"The Fort Benning Chaplains' Office works hard every day to provide the best possible services that will enhance the spiritual fitness of soldiers and their family members and we look forward to being able to show this to the ACOE team."

This is the second year in a row that Fort Benning has been named a first-place winner in the extra-large installation category of the TRADOC Communities of Excellence competition.

The Army-level COE team is scheduled to visit post Sunday through Thursday.

Customers are first at DCA

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Fort Benning's Directorate of Community Activities operates on the pledge that soldiers and their families deserve the best.

Given the fact the morale, welfare and recreation team won both the 1992 and 1993 Training and Doctrine Command Communities of Excellence award for best MWR and family support, it's not hard to realize that the members take their pledge seriously.

"Everything we do is based on what our customers want," said Debbi Addison, DCA communities of excellence representative. "We received nearly 4,000 customer comment cards during the last fiscal year and many of the improvements we made, from changing the hours of operation at certain facilities to actually building new facilities, came about as a direct result of what our customers said they wanted."

Addison said DCA personnel are looking forward to showing the Army-level COE team how Fort Benning works to make the best even better.

"We will have the same evaluator this year so we have a real opportunity to show her all of the outstanding developments that have happened since her last visit."

The improvements and new programs the team will be shown include:

• Renovation of the Golf Pro Shop and the addition of lights to the driving range at the Follow Me Golf Course.

• The addition of new cabins at the Uchee Creek Recreation Area.

• The construction of new facilities planned for completion this year that include a new junior enlisted club, a 60-unit guest house, a youth outreach center for McGraw Manor, a recreation center for Sand Hill and a miniature golf course and batting cages for Main Post.

• Construction of a new lounge at the Main Post Bowling Center.

DCA Marketing Director Brian Smith said nothing is left to chance when it comes to planning the very best MWR and family support for its customers.

"Our soldiers and their families truly deserve the very best," he said. "Our strategies are the result of a dynamic blend of scientific marketing research data, industry trends, financial management, surveys, five-year and MWR strategic planning. All of these come together to enable us to reach our goal of providing the best MWR and family support in the Army."

Addison said MWR customers are treated to facilities and services that are every bit as equal or even better than the services and facilities found in the civilian community.

"This is possible because the principles of Total Army Quality are followed on a daily basis," Addison said. "We are constantly looking for ways to improve customer service, and we involve our employees in the process."

Army Career and Alumni Program

"Army Cares About People"

ACAP helps with ETS, retirement

Army Career and Alumni Program

On July 1, 1991, Fort Benning put to work seven new staff members in the Army Career and Alumni Program. With the current emphasis on "building down" the military, the Department of Army developed ACAP to assist soldiers, family members and Department of the Army civilians who are leaving the Army.

ACAP's goal is to provide services to individuals who are experiencing routine transition through retire-ment or expir-ation term of service and those who are being forced to leave because of the downsizing.

ACAP consists of two independent operations. One is the Transition Assistance Office and the other is the Job Assistance Center.

The TAO is the first stop for transitioning personnel. The transition services specialists, or counselors, are tasked with evaluating the client's needs and preparing individualized transition plans. They also attempt to eliminate any duplication of services among the many service providers found both on and off the installation. Each client is provided a guidebook that imparts valuable information on transition services and benefits.

The second part of ACAP, the JAC, is a contractor-operated facility. This facility provides ongoing job-search skills training, individual assistance and counseling, workshops and seminars, and one-stop job hunting activities.

While ACAP is not a job-placement program, referrals to employers via the Army Employer Network is one of its services. Individual counselors are available to provide personalized counseling as well as individual needs assessment. A reference library is also available.

An additional asset of the Fort Benning ACAP is the on-site location of a veterans benefits counselor from the Atlanta Department of Veterans Affairs. Peggy Morris has been working full time with the Transition Assistance Program and ACAP and has been busy taking care of soldiers since the word got out. She can be contacted at 545-4887

The "alumni" part of ACAP will be veterans and retirees who see the positive changes the Army is making to provide better services to those who have served and protected our country.

"We hope soldiers will leave the Army feeling good about their last days and pass on the advantages of serving in the military to other young men and women," said Morris. "ACAP promotes the ability to both recruit and retain a quality force in the years ahead by proving that ACAP cares about people."

If you are an employer and want to enroll in the Army Employer Alumni Network, contact the Army Career and Alumni Program at (800) 445-2049.

For more information about ACAP at Fort Benning, call 545-4892 or 545-4913 or stop by Building 2617, Soldiers' Plaza.

Counseling is available for family members

Army Career and Alumni Program

All family members of personnel leaving the service — military or civilian (including retirees) — are eligible for more than $1,000 of free counseling and training to improve their personal image and job-search skills.

The Army Career and Alumni Program is a program to help make the transition from the daily military lifestyle to the civilian alumni life.

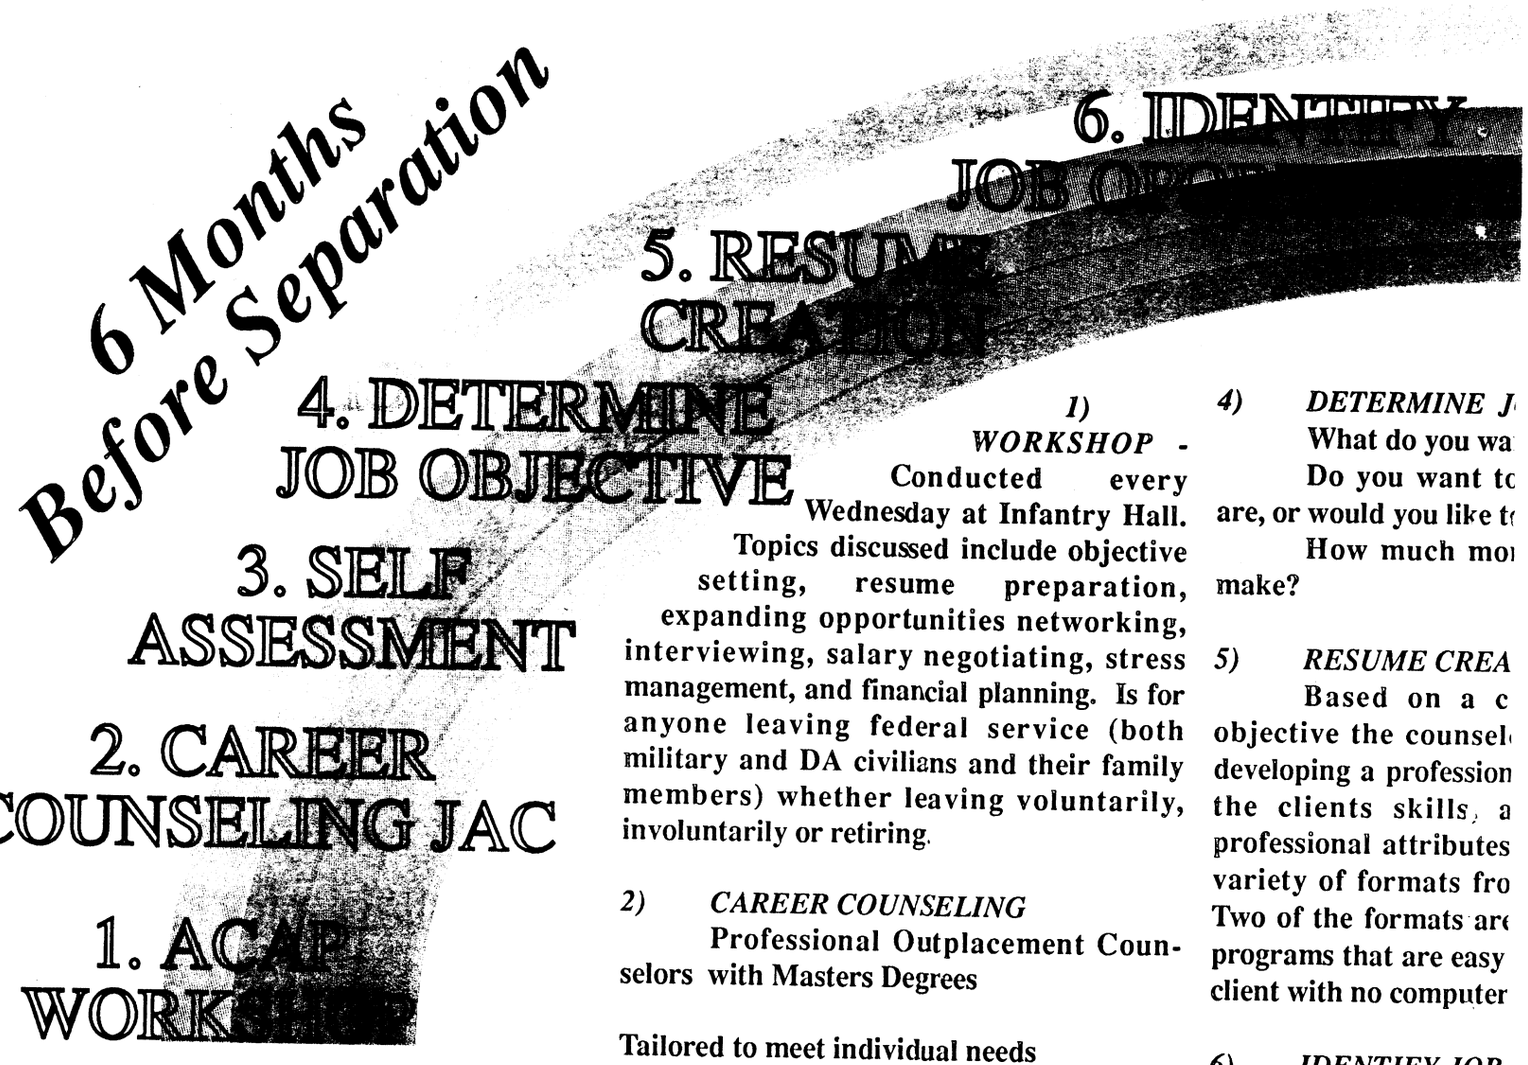
Military spouses need to be within six months of leaving to begin that new career or maybe just to relax for some time. If your spouse has already transitioned, ACAP still offers the service 60 days after separation.

ACAP provides a personal transition services specialist at the Transition Assistance Office to answer questions including those concerning transportation, home, how finances are handled, veterans' benefits, when spouses start receiving retirement pay, and when must families clear post and how?

ACAP customers get written information and referrals, so they do not even have to take notes.

A transition services specialist will also provide customers with a referral to obtain training to improve or polish their job-search skills.

The Georgia Department of Labor provides a training course every Tuesday and Wednesday — "The Basic Job Search Skills Training Course" — that provides the foundation for all other training to follow. The next step is the "advanced" course taught at the Job Assistance Center as a one-day workshop every Thursday.



The transition services specialist will guide each person through the process to meet the needs of the individual. In order for each person to maximize the services, the first stop should be the Transition Assistance Office, Building 2617. The Job Assistance Center will provide additional one-on-one job search counseling. All of these services are available to soldiers, their spouses and children if they are of working age.

ACAP is a whole-family program and customers do not have to be accompanied by their sponsors.

For information or to make an appointment, visit the Army Career and Alumni Program office in Soldiers' Plaza or call 545-4892 or 545-7009.

ACAP trains soldier to be police officer

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Will the Army really pay you to go to school? Just ask Staff Sgt. Michael J. Houlihan — he'll tell you yes.

Houlihan has spent the last few weeks of his 19-year Army career attending the Columbus College Regional Police Academy under the Job Retraining Program co-hosted by the Georgia Department of Labor and the Army Career and Alumni Program.

Houlihan, of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, had decided to take early retirement and was in the Job Assistance Office working on his resume, he said, when he heard about a job retraining seminar and decided to go to see what it was all about.

The Army Career and Alumni Program, Georgia Department of Labor and U.S. Department of Labor, with funding provided under the Job Partnership Training Act, have networked to provide additional-skills training for soldiers transitioning out of the service.

To be eligible, soldiers must normally be leaving the Army (or have left the Army) as a result of downsizing, said Ted Craig, ACAP Transition Services manager.

"Because of downsizing, a large number of soldiers with combat arms skills are getting out of the Army and finding their skills aren't transferable to civilian jobs," said John Lopez of the Georgia Department of Labor.

This was a worry for Houlihan. "As a scout, I am not trained for a civilian job," Houlihan said. "I knew I wanted to be a police officer. When they offered (to pay for) training, I jumped on it."

But, Houlihan admits, it was not quite that easy. Other soldiers in the program are training at Columbus Technical Institute, Alliance Tractor and Trailer Driving School and others', but, because he is the first soldier to go through the Police Academy under the retraining program, he had to do a lot of work.

"There were a bunch of requirements to meet. I spent a week running around like a chicken with my head cut off trying to get everything done," Houlihan said.

"It's a learning process," Craig said. "He was our guinea pig. When an individual soldier finds out how to get in, the next group can go in more prepared.

The whole thing takes work, Lopez said. "It takes the soldier's desire, the OK of his or her command, coordination with an ACAP counselor and finally approval by the Georgia Department of Labor to get into the program," he said.

"We cannot get them into school," he said. "They have to get themselves tested and accepted, then study and attend class."

Houlihan's unit helped by giving him the time he needed to get into and attend the academy.

"As a first sergeant, I have 325 soldiers," said Houlihan's first sergeant Michael Reidy. "Houlihan had 19 years in and I truly believe in helping soldiers get ready for the outside."

Reidy said he was proud that his unit was the first to send a soldier through the academy but he pointed out that all first sergeants give retiring soldiers time to go through the ACAP transition program.

Houlihan's advice to other soldiers leaving the Army is to involved in the Job Retraining Program.

"There are a lot more soldiers who could follow Houlihan's example," Craig said, "by taking advantage of the many other training options."

"There's hesitancy," Lopez said. "Soldiers ask themselves, 'Is this for real or is it another walk-through?'."

According to Houlihan, though, it works. "I could actually go out now and get a job as a police officer. I've even had a few offers," he said.

Houlihan's wife, Yon Im, and children Colleen, 9, and John, 7, are waiting for him in Tacoma, Wash., where he plans to join them after he retires Jan. 19.

He'll have to take two to four weeks of Washington state law once he gets there, he said, "Then I'll be ready to go."

For information about the Job Retraining Program, see an ACAP counselor in Building 2617, Soldiers' Plaza.

Army Career and Alumni Program

Here are some of the most frequently asked questions about the Army Career and Alumni Program. The answers to these questions reflect the most current policies and positions.

For information or clarification about ACAP, call 545-4892 or 545-4913 or stop by Building 2617.

What is ACAP?

The Army Career and Alumni Program is designed to provide services and counseling to assure soldiers, Department of Army civilians and family members quality transition from military life to civilian life.

Why does the Army and the nation need ACAP?

ACAP provides transition service to departing personnel. It creates a recruiting multiplier. It establishes strong partnerships with the private sector.

ACAP allows career soldiers to concentrate on the Army mission because they know that when they need services, they will be available. It reduces unemploy-ment and other associated costs.

What benefits do members of the Army family, employers and the nation at large derive from ACAP?

In addition to those above, the Army family leaves better pre-pared to make the transition into the civilian sector, employers receive a better trained and motivated employee with skills and abilities not generally available in the civilian sector and the nation receives individuals who will serve as role models and who are willing and able to contribute to the community at large.

Job Assistance Center has variety of job networks

Job Assistance Center

The Job Assistance Center provides convenient access to a variety of job search networks. Once resumes are prepared, clients can easily identify potential employers and review thousands of job announcements from throughout the country and in several overseas locations.

The following are some of the Army Career and Alumni Program's computerized job networks:

• Army Employer and Alumni Network:

Fort Benning has a local AEAN, which is considered one of the best Armywide. The AEAN contains 11,170 major employers throughout the nation that actively seek employees who are transitioning from the Army. The network allows clients immediate access to information on these companies. The member companies are cross-referenced by location (state) and occupational categories most frequently required.

• Defense Outplacement Referral System: A national employment referral system developed by the Department of Defense. Client information is entered into a computer at the JAC site and then sent to the Defense Manpower Data Center to be loaded into a mainframe computer where it is reformatted into a mini-resume. Employers from across the nation have signed up with DORS and have submitted requests for applicants, stating the type of position available and location. If the information matches, the mini-resume is sent to employers.

• Transition Bulletin Board: This electronic bulletin board provides the capability, through a modem, to electronically read and print classified employment ads, transition-related events and other transition relocation information. This bulletin board contains hot leads from AEAN and DORS.

• Georgia Department of Labor Job Bank: The Department of Labor has placed a computer in the Fort Benning JAC to allow post client access to the DOL National Job Data Bank. If traffic warrants, DOL plans to assign a full time counselor to the Fort Benning JAC.

• American Job Bank: Enhances the Department of Labor Job Bank and allows clients the opportunity to directly apply for jobs by using a 1-800 number.

• Office of Personnel Management: The Office of Personnel Management has a network of federal job information centers around the nation. FJIC is specifically designed to assist individuals identify job opportunities and to apply for employment. The JAC has computer access to this information.

• Employer/Career Day: Scheduled each Friday at the Job Assistance Center, this program is designed to allow employers to recruit qualified candidates for their companies. Employers normally will give presentations on their organization and set-up screening interviews with qualified candidates. A variety of manufacturing and service companies take advantage of this opportunity. Public sector organizations are also well represented.

'JAC in the Box' services the Southeast

Army Career and Alumni Program

Army Career and Alumni Program personnel have ben busy assisting soldiers in places where most people think soldiers don't work.

Soldiers — active Army, Reservists and National Guard personnel are assigned to Air Force bases and Naval stations, in the Carolinas, Florida, Puerto Rico, Tennessee, Mississippi and Louisiana.

The Fort Benning ACAP Office ensures that these soldiers and family members are given the same opportunities for transition services that are available at Fort Benning.

Soldiers and families at these "remote" sites are served by one of three ways. These personnel can come to Fort Benning on permissive temporary duty or they may obtain ACAP services at the nearest ACAP office.

Besides Fort Benning, ACAP offices in the Southeast United States are located at Fort Bragg, N.C., Fort Gordon, Ga., Fort Jackson, S.C., Fort Stewart, Ga., Fort McClellan, Ala., Fort Rucker, Ala., and at Redstone Arsenal, Ala. If neither one of these two options is feasible, a mobile team takes ACAP services to those soldiers and families.

The team usually consist of one transition services specialist from the Transition Assistance Office, two Job Assistance Center counselors and an administrative assistant.

The team packs the "JAC in the Box" (a mobile computer system) and heads for remote sites.

Using the mobile equipment, clients receive a personal transition plan, resume and a cover letter and have access to the Army Employer Network. These clients receive virtually the same basic seminars that are available at any ACAP Office, officials said.

The team began the regional visits in March 1991 with a trip to Puerto Rico and since then they have completed seven trips and assisted about 500 clients.

Transition services specialists have provided about 1,500 services such as counseling, needs assessment, individual transition plans and referrals to various service providers.

The Job Assistance Center counselors have provided about 1,875 services such as conducting seminars and workshops, job-search planning, resume writing, marketing and interviews. JAC counselors also conduct individual career counseling and assist clients in using the automated Army Employer Network.

Based on the feedback from these remote sites, ACAP is the best thing the Army has implemented because the focus is on the individual, the family and how people are treated, officials said.

All transitioning soldiers are processed in caring, disciplined, organized and dignified manner, ACAP officials said. The mobile team conducted about 30 regional trips for fiscal 1993 to serve soldiers and families all over the Southeastern United States.

Anyone leaving the Army — soldiers, civilians, and family members are eligible to participation in the Army Career and Alumni Program whether it is a voluntary or an involuntary transition.

Soldiers can contact their unit commanders for more information or call the ACAP Office at 545-4892 or 545-4913.

DPW helps families find homes

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Helping its residents find a home is one of the things that Fort Benning does better than any other post, said Ken Hankins, chief of the Directorate of Public Work's Housing Division.

According to Hankins, Fort Benning provides housing to more than 46,000 soldiers and family members plus accommodates an additional student and trainee population that averages 9,000 personnel a day.

"We are always willing to go the extra mile to provide quality customer service," Hankins said. "For example, the post has an excess of furniture because of the downsizing, so we have donated some of this surplus to charitable organizations and provide the rest for use not only in government housing on post but for use in off-post housing by those who are staff sergeant or below. This post is one of very few, if not the only one, that still provides furniture to residents of government housing."

Ray Wagner, chief of the division's Billeting Branch said the branch's Self-Help crew is another example of quality customer service. The 26-member team is on call to provide necessary maintenance on demand for students and trainees staying in post billeting.

"Total Army Quality is part of everything we do," Wagner said. "We encourage every employee to submit suggestions and we even publish an employee newsletter."

Among the Housing Division's recent accomplishments:

• Renovation of 292 sets of junior noncommissioned officers quarters in the Custer Terrace housing area to include larger, more modern kitchens, an additional bathroom off the master bedroom and carports. The Davis Hills housing area has new air conditioning units, aluminum siding and lighted walking paths that connect the various areas of the community to the new elementary school.

• Expansion of the Self-Help program to include additional tools and replacement parts, loaner air conditioners for family housing units whose central air conditioning is temporarily out of service and flower and garden materials for landscaping and yard improvement.

• Construction of a new 60-room guest house.

• Initiation of a recycling program that provides every post housing unit with a bin to replace recyclable materials in for weekly curbside pickup. Money raised from the recycling program goes back into improving the quality of life.

• The initiation of the Whole Barracks Revitalization Program with plans to renovate one of the battalion-sized barracks and several other post facilities with direct input from the Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers Council.

• Initiation of a program to provide one refrigerator for every sleeping area in every barracks on post. More than 3,700 refrigerators have been distributed. Family Housing Chief Billy Scott said the division has also helped foster better relations between Fort Benning and the civilian community by forming the Community Homefinding Relocation and Referral Services Office, whose members belong to several local real estate and apartment owners and managers associations and have heightened the awareness of local realtors to the needs of soldiers.

"The bottom line is helping soldiers and their families find adequate housing, whether on or off post," he said.

The division also has plans to build several new playgrounds and to purchase new playground equipment, he said.

Hankins said he looks forward to the COE evaluator's visit. She happens to be the same evaluator as last year.

"We aren't just going to bore her by repeating all the things we told her last year," Hankins said. "We are going to show her how we seek constant improvement."

AG aims high

Office won't rest on past honors, seeks constant improvement

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

An unceasing commitment to improvement has made Fort Benning's Adjutant General's Office the best in the Army in 1992 and the best in Training and Doctrine Command in 1993.

Adjutant General Jim Brinson said he wants to show the Army-level Communities of Excellence team that AG doesn't intend to rest on its past honors.

"When you believe in Total Army Quality, you focus on constant improvement," Brinson said. "At AG, our goal is to never tread water. We seek continual progress."

Some of the recent accomplishments at AG include:

• The development of personnel automation systems such as the Enhanced Inprocessing System and the AG Management Support System. EIP has reduced the inprocessing of soldiers to an average of two days with an average reduction of waiting times from three hours to 15 minutes. Both systems are scheduled for adoption throughout TRADOC in 1995.

• The creation of an installation orientation tour that acquaints new soldiers and their families with post Morale Welfare and Recreation facilities, unit locations and housing areas. In addition, a liaison officer is stationed at the Columbus Airport 24 hours a day to greet newly arriving soldiers and answer their questions; also the commanding general personally conducts a welcoming briefing to all newly assigned soldiers.

"We sincerely believe that the first impression a soldier gets of his or her new duty station sets the tone for the entire tour of duty," Brinson said. "We do everything we can to welcome soldiers and meet their needs in a timely, professional manner."

• The introduction of more soldier readiness elements into the inprocessing procedure so that soldiers can be identified as deployable or nondeployable before they even get to their units; also the unit commander is notified.

• The implementation of a joint project with the U.S. Army Physical Fitness School for a retiree physical fitness program that is the first in the Department of Defense. A pilot program with nearly 40 participants has already been conducted.

"Our services to retirees are greatly appreciated," Brinson said. "Our Retirement Services Office features one-stop service that has eliminated waiting time and greatly simplified the retirement process. Our recent retiree open house, which was a cooperative effort with Martin Army Community Hospital, devoted two days to health care and physical exams and was attended by 1,000 retirees — our best attendance ever."

• Expansion of the Army Career and Alumni Program to include many services that are the first in DoD. Through ACAP, soldiers can learn job-seeking skills, get information on thousands of college programs nationwide and even receive free job retraining, if qualified.

"Taking care of customers in the best way possible and making the best better are principles AG personnel live by every day," he said.

Brinson said AG personnel truly look forward to the visit by the ACOE team.

"ACOE is great because it gives us a chance to tell people about the things we do well," he said. "It's a chance to celebrate excellence and we look forward to it."

Post's DRM provides the best

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Fort Benning's Directorate of Resources Management has won the Training and Doctrine Command award for best resource management and financial services and facilities for the last two years.

Director Dave Flo said he and his personnel want to show the Army-level Communities of Excellence team that the best has been made even better.

Flo said the post's resources management and financial community has much to be proud of.

"We are particularly proud of our automation efforts across the whole installation," he said. "Because of the downsizing we have needed to find better ways to do things. Automated computer systems are making it possible for us to achieve a high level of output even though we have less personnel."

The directorate is also proud of its efforts to help other post directorates effectively use Total Army Quality principles to improve the way the do business.

"The Fort Benning TAQ handbook developed by DRM will go a long way and last a long time," Flo said.

Among the other accomplishments of the post's resource management and financial community:

• A close working relationship between the civilian banking institutions on post and post financial organizations so that customers' needs can be fully met. In the future, three additional automatic teller machines will be placed at Olson Hall, Harmony Church and Custer Terrace.

• Plans to be the first installation in the Department of Defense to open a banking facility inside the commissary.

• An Installation Finance Office that has improved customer service by sending its Travel Branch personnel to the classrooms of Temporary Duty students who need processing.

• A nonappropriated fund financial management program that has resulted in the most productive single fund morale welfare and recreation and family support programs in TRADOC.

Flo said ACOE is not something that post personnel should think about only when evaluating teams visit.

"ACOE is not an inspection," he said. "It's about commitment to quality customer service every day of the year."

"Fort Benning has always been committed to this kind of quality. Even without an ACOE program, we would excel," he said.

ACAP helps families with transition

Army Career and Alumni Program

If you are a family member of a soldier in transition, the Army Career and Alumni Program may have some answers for you.

According to Ted Craig, ACAP transition services manager, the free program can assist family members with information, job-search skills and resumes.

Some typical questions family members have, said Craig, include:

• How will my transportation home be handled?

• How will my finances be handled?

• When will my spouse's retirement pay start?

• How do I start receiving veteran benefits?

• When and how do I clear post?

"We don't have the answers to all of these questions," said Craig, "but we can provide written information and referrals so people know where to get the answers."

Craig said the Transition Assistance Office assigns transition services specialists to family members of transitioning soldiers.

"Once a specialist is assigned, he or she will assist the family member until all of his or her questions are answered," he said.

The office will also provide referrals, Craig said, for job training and job-search skills.

"There are two courses," he said. "One is the Basic Job Search Skills Training Course given at the Georgia Department of Labor every Tuesday and Thursday and the second is the advanced course taught at the Job Assistance Center."

Craig said the advanced course includes help in preparing a personal resume.

"This program is available not only to soldiers," said Craig, "but to spouses and children of working age."

For more information on the ACAP family program, call 545-4892 or 545-4913 or visit Building 2617 in Soldiers' Plaza.

Job Assistance Center enhances services

Job Assistance Center

Since activation in November 1991, the Job Assistance Center has continually sought ways to improve and increase level of service.

As the center has developed and grown, the following enhancements have been integrated into the Fort Benning JAC:

• Small Business Develop Center — A three-hour monthly seminar, at no cost, offered by the Small Business Development Center of the University of Georgia, designed to provide assistance and training in starting a new business. The seminar serves as a focal point for linking resources of the federal, state and local governments.

• Educational Opportunity Center — A weekly service provided each Wednesday to the clients by a representative from the Department of Education. Clients receive information about colleges and universities located throughout the country. The education counselor outlines student information about financial loans and grants, admission requirements and any additional information needed to select a college or university.

• Mock Interview Practice Session — Clients learn how to interview effectively by rehearsing and practicing interview techniques with an experienced JAC counselor. The mock interviews are taped by video to provide clients a visual learning tool. These sessions are scheduled each Thursday afternoon or as required.

• Focus Hour — A weekly video program that provides additional information on key areas in the job search process: networking, dressing for success, interview process and negotiating techniques. Counselors are available to assist with additional information or to answer questions.

• Expanded Library — Clients have access to files compiled by JAC from all 50 states. Files include information on employment rates, occupational opportunities and average salaries by occupation. States usually update information monthly.

• Star Boards — A Fort Benning initiative that recognizes successful clients. Star boards are updated monthly. The walls are covered with success stories. This system has created great interest and enthusiasm among clients and employers. Both enjoy seeing their name in "lights."

Specialist helps soldiers find colleges

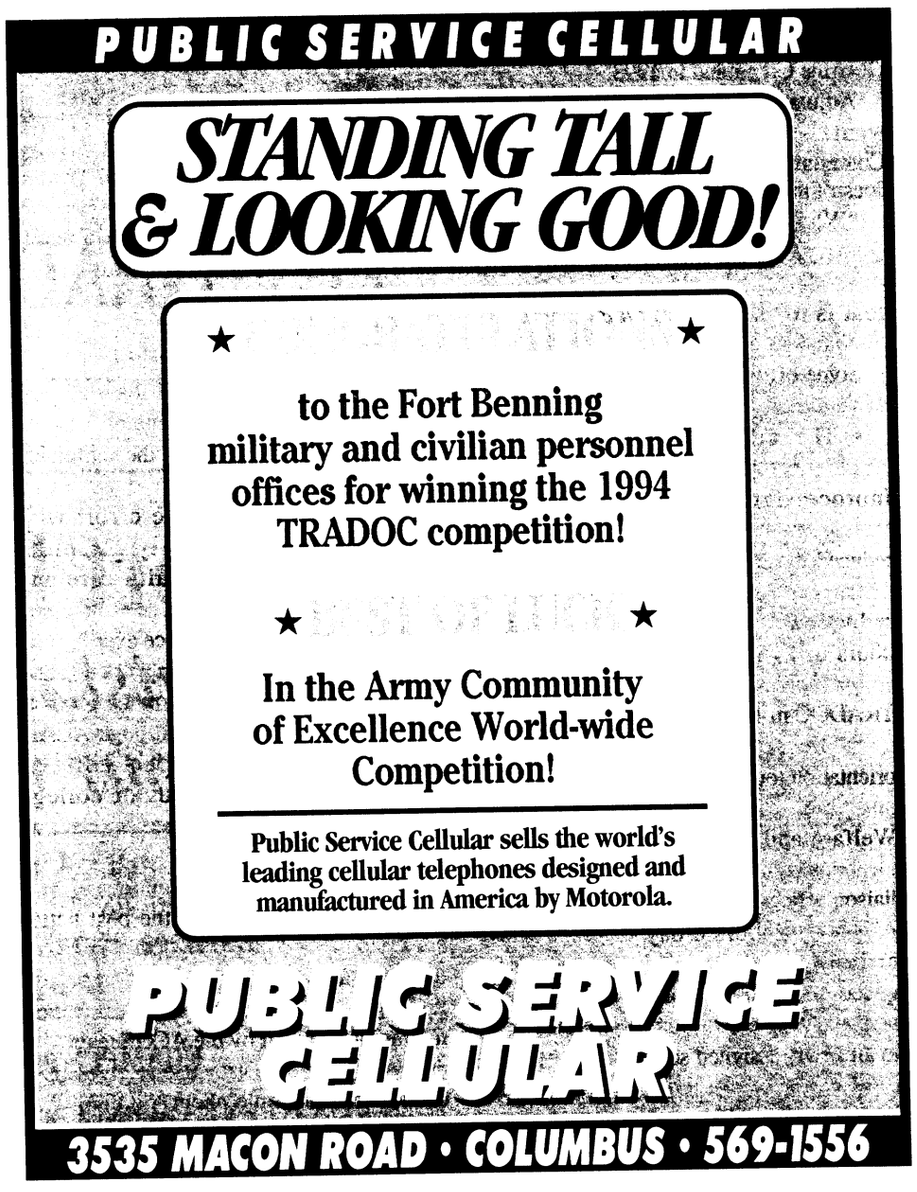
Educational Opportunity Center

Every Wednesday, Dave Sutcliffe of the Educational Opportunity Center's Columbus office, packs up his laptop computer, his reference books and his forms and heads for Fort Benning. Sutcliffe goes to the Army Career and Alumni Program on post where he spends the day serving soldiers who will soon be discharged.

Over the past 12 months, Sutcliffe has served 180 soldiers who want to go on to postsecondary school. That is an average of 15 per month.



According to Ted Craig, Southern Regional Transition Services and ACAP manager, he will be sending more soldiers to Sutcliffe next year — twice as many if Sutcliffe can handle them.

Sutcliffe spends an average of an hour with each soldier helping him or her select the right college. With Sutcliffe's computerized information, he can tell soldiers about anything they need to know — everything from which school offers water polo to which offers vegetarian meals. He also has available three different types of career assessments to assist those who are undecided as to which course of study to pursue.

The third major area that Sutcliffe covers is assistance with financial aid — grants, loans and forms. Finally, before the soldier leaves, Sutcliffe gives the phone number of the Veteran's Upward Bound or Educational Opportunity Center nearest to where he or she will be living. Armed with this information, the ex-soldier can get more help if needed in his or her post-Army location.

Craig has every soldier Sutcliffe sees to fill out evaluation. All have given Sutcliffe and his services top marks. They rate Sutcliffe "extremely knowledgeable" and "caring."

According to Sutcliffe, "It has been a real pleasure working with Ted Craig and the people at the base; I look forward to continuing to help all I can. Job Assistance Center

Post's EEO Office equals excellence

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Fort Benning's Equal Employment Opportunity Office helps make the post a community of excellence, said Ellis Dandy, EEO director.

The post EEO Office was recently awarded the Training and Doctrine Command Communities of Excellence Award for 1993.

"The TRADOC award is a good award because it speaks the idea of excellence," Dandy said. "Excellence is what we continuously strive for. The concept of 'doing it right the first time' is what we always try to live up to at EEO."

Dandy said EEO's tiny staff must work very hard to meet the needs of such a large installation.

"We are very fortunate to have such a dedicated staff," he said. "We are also fortunate to enjoy an excellent working relationship with the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, the commanding general and his staff and other post managers. Many of the things the EEO office gets credit for are the result of positive interaction and cooperation among all of these elements."

Because EEO follows set procedures under federal law, the office doesn't strive to do a lot of new things, said Dandy, but rather strives to do the things it does — like handling complaints and overseeing enforcement of affirmative action laws — absolutely right the first time.

"One of the unique aspects of our task is the necessity that we always remain neutral, especially in the complaints process," he said. "We must hear both sides, but we don't take a side."

Dandy said the post is doing well in the area of affirmative action, but certain areas still need attention.

"We need to place continual emphasis on higher level civilian positions where we are finding an underrepresentation of women and minorities in these positions."

Fort Benning leads TRADOC in terms of the number of complaints lodged, Dandy said, but at the same time leads the way in the number of complaints successfully resolved.

"Many people see complaints as a headache of sorts, but we see them as an opportunity to excel," he said. "The resolution of complaints has many unseen impacts that reverberate throughout the work force and that affect morale, efficiency and motivation."

Also important is the time and money saved as a result of the resolution of complaints. Last year, the EEO saved the post nearly $1.7 million by successfully resolving complaints.

"It's not always possible, but we like to see complaints resolved in which everyone wins," he said. "We want both sides to go away satisfied and ready to move beyond the issue and back to productive work."

The aspect of helping people is the most satisfying aspect of EEO, Dandy said.

"At Fort Benning, we take care of people. We view them as assets to the installation. If we can protect our assets and ensure that the needs of all are met, then we will have a more efficient work force," Dandy said.

"We are in the people business and we are serious about it," he said.

regs outline uniform wear

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Short-haired young men in Army dress green uniforms are not an unfamiliar sight in Columbus — especially around local malls, where trainees flock while on pass from one station unit training.

But before you decide to hit the mall in uniform, make sure you know the regulations.

All versions of the Army green uniform, the dress blue uniform and all other formal or semi-formal uniforms may be worn off post at any time in accordance with Army Regulation 670-1, "Wear and Appearance of Army Uniforms and Insignia."

Battle dress uniforms and other Class C uniforms such as aviation flight suits and food service or hospital duty uniforms may be worn off post to eat or run short errands, according to post policy.

However, the policy states that the Class A or B uniform is the appropriate uniform for any business, military or personal, that requires more time to complete.

Also, soldiers wearing BDUs or other Class C uniforms may not drink alcohol during duty hours on or off post and may not drink off post at any commercial establishment during nonduty hours.

The Army-issued physical fitness uniform, including sweatshirt, sweat pants, shorts and T-shirt, is to be worn for physical training or organized athletics only, according to the policy.

The policy also states that the PT uniform may be worn en route between quarters and the physical training site, but neither the PT uniform, nor individual parts of it should be worn as off-duty casual attire by military personnel.

The intent of the policy, according to the policy letter, is to allow soldiers to make necessary shopping trips conveniently, but not to treat utility uniforms as a substitute for civilian attire.

ARMY COMMUNITIES OF EXCELLENCE

Military, civilian leaders greet team

Evaluators search for excellence

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

The Army Community of Excellence evaluation team arrived at Fort Benning Sunday evening from Washington, D.C.

The first stop for the 11-person group was Riverside, home of Commanding General Maj. Gen Jerry A. White and his wife, Linda, for an outdoor reception where the group was greeted by both civilian and military leaders from the community.

Under the cover of tents to avoid the rainy weather, the team was treated to a barbecue dinner and musical entertainment provided by the Infantry Band and the Finance Choir.

Fort Benning is a finalist in the large installation category of the Department of the Army Community of Excellence competition. Other finalists include Fort Campbell, Ky., and Fort Sill, Okla.

The program gives monetary awards to military posts, in small, medium and large categories that exhibit excellence in 15 specified functional areas.

Last year, Fort Benning won the large post title and picked up a $1 million cash award.

The evaluators, led by team chief, Lt. Col. Stephen G. Trent, went to work Monday, beginning an intensive three-day "search for excellence" around post.

For their first full day at Fort Benning, the team participated in a myriad of activities, including leaping from the 34-foot jump towers in the morning to an evening stroll on the Columbus Riverwalk, where they received a briefing from "Christopher Columbus" on the history of the area. The day was topped off with dinner at the exclusive River Club.

Each member of the group was assigned to review one or two specific areas, concentrating on things like customer service, facility appearance and the practice of Total Army Quality.

Evaluators toured numerous facilities and met with soldiers during their visit.

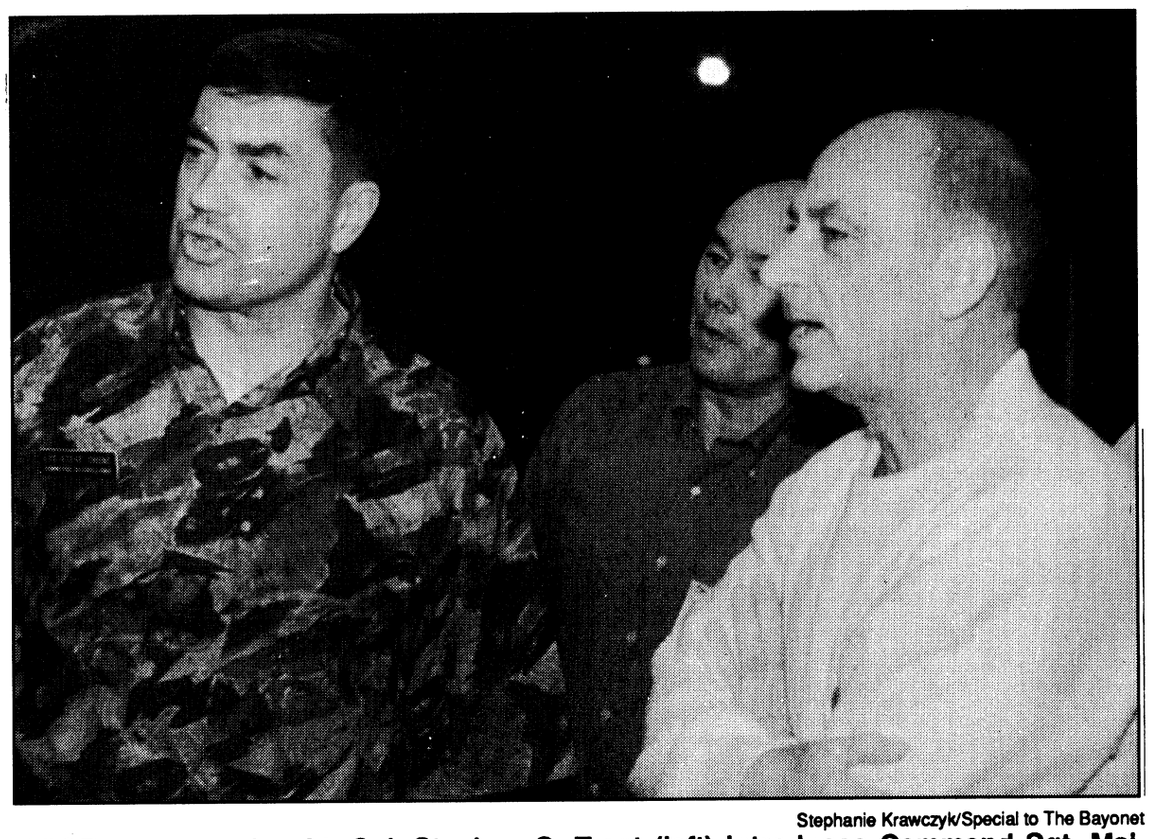
Highlights included tours of the National Infantry Museum, the Family Unit Network Center and the School of the Americas.

Winners of the ACOE awards will be announced later this month.

During the team's outbriefing Wednesday, Trent praised the Director of Community Activities, Alan Stewart, for the way his Morale Welfare and Recreation program was run, noting that funds generated by MWF activities were returned to the community.

He also noted the U-Do-It program was in a class by itself, adding that the 36th Engineer Group, while a tenant unit was certainly a part of the team.

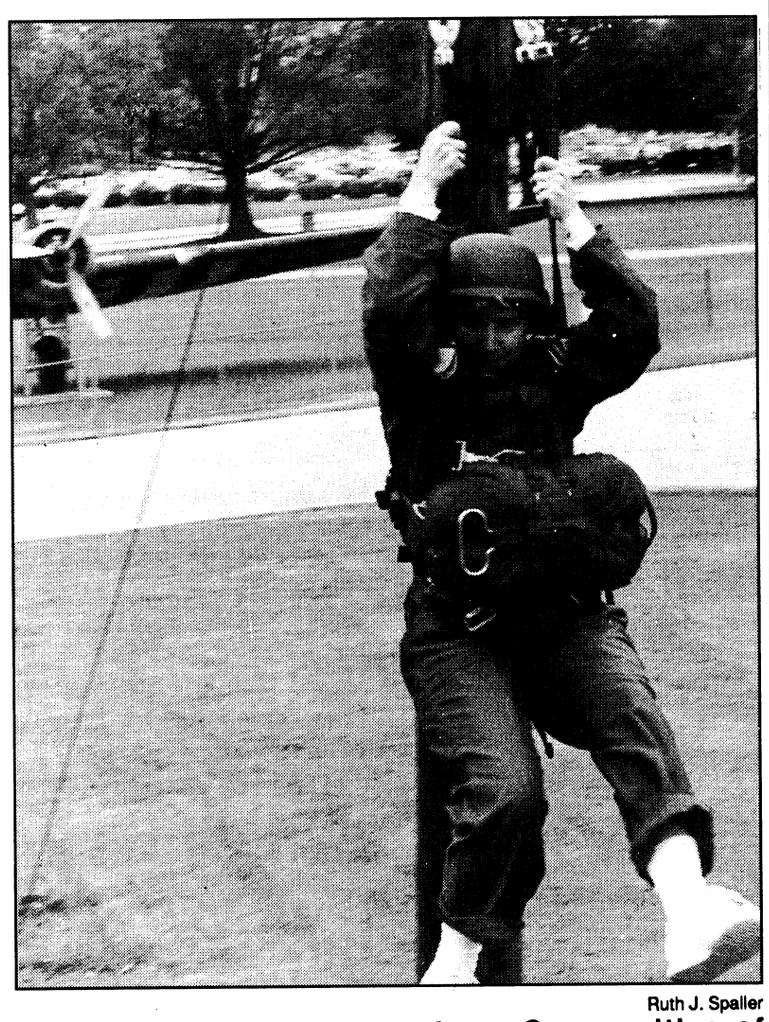
He said he liked the way the post used the Total Army Quality program to ensure customer service and satisfaction and to improve processes.



"It's a model program," he said.

Trent also praised the relationship between the post and the civilian community, "it's one big community."

At Wednesday's farewell dinner, White told the team members he appreciated their coming to Fort Benning.



He said the competition inspired by the ACOE program was good because people rose to the cause, thus making the posts the team visited better places to live, work and play.

"What you are doing is improving the quality of life for our soldiers," he said.

Housing halts pretermination inspections

Change should reduce time between occupants

Family Housing Office

Because of a shortage of funding and personnel, on-site pretermination housing inspections are no longer being conducted by the Family Housing Office.

Instead, a soldier will receive a thorough pretermination briefing at the Housing Office when he or she first notifies the office about terminating quarters, according to Bill Scott, director of Family Housing.

By implementing this change, the amount of time between occupants in quarters will be significantly reduced, Scott said.

"We are attempting to keep the vacant time of quarters to an absolute minimum," Scott said. "Our goal is a three- to four-day turn around between occupants in quarters."

During the pretermination briefing, a soldier can expect to receive a detailed explanation of how quarters must look at inspection.

Soldiers are also made aware that any self-help or work order repairs must be completed and that all systems in the quarters must be in working order, Scott said. This information is further reinforced by a handout given to each person.

By requiring each occupant to not only clean his or her quarters to standard and by ensuring that all maintenance is complete and each system is operating properly, the quarters can be reassigned to the next soldier without delay, he said.

Soldiers should plan to receive the briefing 30 to 45 days in advance of clearing quarters to allow time to repair any deficiencies themselves or coordinate with the housing maintenance shop, Scott said.

"It's a win-win situation for both soldiers and taxpayers," Scott said.

Retirees are aiming for fitness

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Providing retired soldiers with a program for maintaining and developing physical fitness is one of the goals of the Chattahoochee Valley Chapter of The Retired Officers Association.

The association, under the supervision of Fort Benning's U.S. Army Physical Fitness School, is developing a pilot retiree fitness program as part of "Total Fitness 2000," Training and Doctrine Command's program for improving the health and well being of soldiers, family members, Department of the Army civilians and retirees.

"At retirement, military personnel are more fit than personnel in most other professions, but many of them quit exercising when they get out because 20 years of forced physical training has made them develop a resentment," said retired Lt. Col. Art Osborne, program coordinator.

Retired Lt. Col Fred Clapp said the retiree program will not resemble Army

Weather is serious business for Det. 10

By Ruth J. Spaller
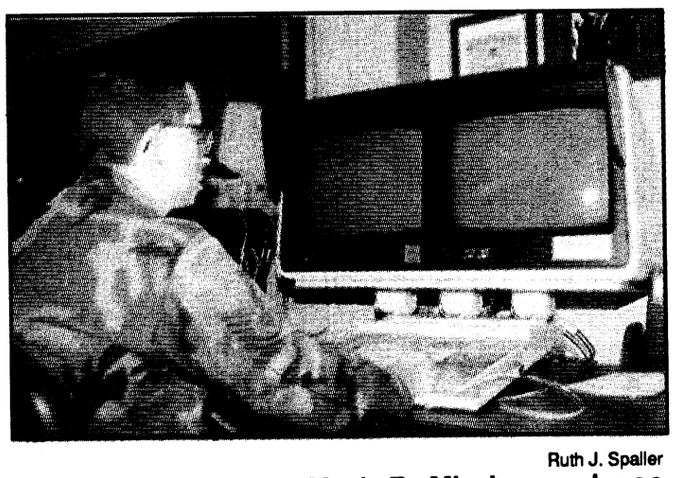
Bayonet staff writer

"Beautiful day isn't it?" or "Raining hard enough for you?" Many of us make small talk of Fort Benning's weather; but, at Detachment 10, 1st Weather Group, discussing the weather isn't small talk, it's business. Serious business.

"Every time there's bad weather and a pilot flies into it, it's a life or death situation," said Air Force Tech. Sgt. Robert E. Coleman, one of the detachment's forecasters.

That thought is never far from the minds of the forecasters and observers who make up the detachment as they go about their job.



The detachment, located in the Lawson Army Airfield operations building, is an Air Force unit providing weather support to the Army.

"We have observers on duty 24 hours a day, seven days a week, every day of the year," said Air Force Capt. Jeffrey L. Peters, detachment commander. The detachment puts out four forecasts a day, with hourly weather observations.

"We're heavy on the aviation aspects," Peters said. "Every pilot who leaves here gets a weather briefing, whether just for the local area on Fort Benning ... or for overseas flights to Germany or Somalia," he said.

But briefing pilots is not the detachment's sole mission. It also handles day-to-day support for the Airborne School and supports the 75th Ranger Regiment with a three-man team that deploys with the regiment on field and combat operations.

The detachment provided support for the 36th Engineer Group's deployments to Somalia in the form of information

'Hurry up and wait' on way out at Benning

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

commentary

When we are "reborn" (enter the Army), there are certain truths we learn.

We learn drill sergeants stand at the right hand of God.

We learn not to volunteer for nothing.

And we learn to hurry up and wait.

We hurry to the barbershop en masse, then hang around to wait our turn and hang around to wait to leave in formation ... that's the Army way of doing things.

We go to the chow hall in formation and stand in long lines waiting to get our food.

We even have to wait to take care of nature's basic functions since there are only so many commodes and sinks in the barracks and these things take time, doncha know.

When we're in basic training, we accept these things as a matter of course. We know we're not smart enough or clever enough to find the barbershop, the clothing issue place or the chow hall on our own.

But after we get out of basic, we think we're pretty hot stuff and are prepared to do things on our own, to act like and be treated like adults.

Still doesn't always work that way.

If a battalion commander calls for a battalion formation at 9 a.m. (zero nine hundred in Army talk), the company commander, not wanting to look bad by having people come late, calls his formation for 0845. The platoon leader, not wanting to look bad in the eyes of the company commander has his people fall out at 0830.

Naturally the squad leader doesn't want to be shown up by some late-arriving troop, so he holds his formation at 0815.

So there we are, waiting in formation for 45 minutes, wondering why the battalion commander is keeping us standing there.

This great tradition of hurry up and wait may be on the way out, at least here at Fort Benning.

No less than the commanding general was overheard telling officers he didn't want to see soldiers waiting in lines.

An example he used was sending a herd of Infantry Officer Basic Course lieutenants to the clothing issue facility to pick up or turn in gear.

He noted that as hard and as fast as the people at CIF worked, it still meant long lines.

The general wanted to know why small groups couldn't be sent there to reduce the wait time and allow more productive use of soldiers' time than waiting in lines.

Everyone nodded in agreement.

Now the challenge is to get this down to the sergeants who make it happen.

Who knows, they might relish this time honored tradition of hurry up and wait.

After all, it gives them a break because while the rest of us are shifting our weight from foot to foot as we shuffle along, they can hang back, smoking and joking.

After all, the pay's the same.

Leaders should stress off-the-job safety too

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Off-the-job safety is a problem every day. Management recognizes the necessity of keeping the worker at full efficiency on the job and has developed safety programs that are effective to this end. The problem is the worker is under the control of the safety program a comparatively small amount of the total time.

Off-the-job safety can be divided into three general groups — recreational, home and transportation-associated activities.

Transportation or motor vehicle accidents account for the greatest number of off-the-job deaths. Regardless of what school of thought is professed in this area, there is one fact that must be conceded — a driver is common to all accidents.

The driver must realize that in operating a motor vehicle, he or she has many responsibilities. At all times, the driver should know the vehicle and its condition. The driver must evaluate conditions and then drive within his or her limitations. The driver must also obey traffic laws and insist on their enforcement.

Recreational activities offer a multitude of exposure for off-the-job accidents. In this area, drowning is the leading cause of death.

The rules of water safety are very clear and should be followed. The Coast Guard and the Red Cross offer many programs in relation to water safety; participation in these programs by the water enthusiast should be encouraged.

The modern home can be riddled with hazards. Any one of a number of items in the home can cause serious injury or death.

Items such as medicine and cleaning materials can be poisonous to children if swallowed, and poisonous to adults if taken incorrectly or misused. A good example of this is taking barbiturates while consuming alcoholic beverages.

Cleaning materials will emit poisonous gases. The use of power tools can also create hazards if they are unguarded or improperly grounded. Yard tools, especially the lawn mower and edger, create other special problems.

Several practices will help limit these hazards — reading labels, proper storage procedures of flammable and toxic materials, proper use of equipment and analysis of the job to be done for hazards.

It should be kept in mind that safety is safety whether it is off or on the job. If the worker can grasp and apply those simple principles, his or her off-the-job activities can be just as safe as those on the job.

CG sends thanks for ACOE effort, accident reduction

Congratulations to the men and women of Fort Benning — the best work force in the entire Army.

You proved your mettle in spades during this week's Army Community of Excellence team's visit and in the months of preparation prior to the team's arrival.

Never have I seen a team that could devote so much time, effort and single-mindedness to proving you are the best. And in the process, our soldiers, family members and fellow workers came out the winners.

We all win because you made Fort Benning an even better place to live, to work, to play.

Thank you for your dedication and devotion; but, above all, thank you for caring.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White
Commanding general

Post continues to reduce accidents

Fort Benning continues to reduce accidental injuries and fatalities. Accomplishing this with ever-shrinking resources is indeed admirable.

Fort Benning has achieved an outstanding record in reducing vehicle fatalities.

During the 1980s, an average of nine Fort Benning soldiers were killed in privately owned and Army motor vehicles every year.

Efforts by all Fort Benning leaders reduced the average vehicle fatalities to less than five for the past four years.

The emphasis on seat belt use, driver training, vehicle inspections and safety briefings have paid dividends.

I want to personally commend each soldier and civilian employee at Fort Benning for promoting safe practices. As a reward for achieving more than 90 days without an accidental fatality (since before Thanksgiving), I am declaring May 13 as a training holiday.

Supervisors of civilian employees may grant a liberal leave policy where appropriate. Major subordinate commanders may choose another day if essential missions dictate.

Let's keep Fort Benning a safe place to work and live. Follow me, safely!

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White

letters

Army has three leadership styles

To the staff sergeant who was recognized as a trailblazer for women, I do hope you study Field Manual 22-100 a little more in depth before you take this year's Self-Development Test, which is going to be used this year in personnel decisions.

I am speaking of your choice of leadership styles, of course. FM 22-100 lists three styles — directing, participating and delegating.

No where do I find a mention of authoritarian (the style you said you use).

I am quite sure you are an outstanding noncommissioned officer; I just hope you refresh your memory a little before you go to an instructor's position.

Editor's note: The Bayonet questionnaire used for the trailblazer profiles asked the applicants to describe their leadership styles. A "book" answer was not necessarily required.

Team effort makes egg hunt big success

I would like to thank the many individuals and organizations involved with the Easter Egg Hunt at Riverside.

Without their assistance and support, the hunt would not have been the success it was.

Thank you to Maj. Gen. Jerry A. and Linda White for graciously opening their home to the thousands of children who gathered to find the eggs hidden all over the yard.

A big thank you to TIC Federal Credit Union and SatoTravel for providing financial support and to Coca Cola for providing free soft drinks to the children and families.

Thank you, also, to the following Commissary vendors: Supervalu for providing 4,320 eggs; H.J. Heinz Company for providing stuffed animals; and WEBCO Military Sales Company and Overseas Marketing Company for providing candy for more than 2,000 children.

Special thanks to Quinn Thorn, Linda Laine and Billie Smith from Youth Services and to all of the volunteers from the post child development centers and the housing area mayors for all of their hard work in making everything come together.

Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment also deserves recognition for its financial contribution.

It is this demonstrated support from the community that makes Fort Benning the community of excellence it is today.

The accident occurred when an F-16 collided with a C-130 at Polk Air Force Base. The C-130 landed safely, but the F-16 crashed on the runway after its two-man crew ejected.

Debris from the jet hit a C-141 on the tarmac, causing it to explode. The resulting fireball and shrapnel struck some 500 Fort Bragg soldiers who had been waiting to board the C-141.

One hundred soldiers were hurt in the accident. Thirty-six of them remain in hospitals in and around Fort Bragg, and 20 were evacuated to the burn unit at Brooke Army Medical Center, Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

A memorial service was conducted at Fort Bragg March 29.

Attendees included Secretary of Defense William J. Perry, Secretary of the Army Togo D. West and Army Chief of Staff Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan. Sullivan and West had also traveled to Fort Bragg, March 23 and 24, to visit injured soldiers at Womack Army Community Hospital.

Perry expressed his sorrow in his March 23 announcement of the disaster:

"I want to convey, on behalf of myself and the Department of Defense, our most profound sympathies and condolences to the families of those who have been killed or injured."

"All the men and women of the United States Air Force join us as we offer our prayers to the families and friends of our fellow warriors at this most difficult time."

The cause of the accident is still under investigation.

AUSA to host job fair May 19

Army Career and Alumni Program

A job fair will be May 19 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Main NCO Club, Building 2784.

The fair is hosted by the Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army.

Interested persons should bring approximately 20 copies of their resume for possible on-the-spot interviews.

Interested persons needing assistance in resume preparation can make an appointment with the Army Career and Alumni Program, Building 2617, or the Army Community Service Family Member Employment Assistance Program, Building 2643, located in Soldiers' Plaza.

For more information, call Pat Sneed at 561-2142 or Mary Allen at 545-4892.

WEATHER: serious business

about the weather they would encounter both in the country and en route and deployed two airmen during Operation Restore Hope.

Although the weather here is not as dynamic as it is in many places, the Fort Benning area "does have its share of weather," and because of the scope of their mission, detecting it can be tricky, Peters said.

"The jump school, for example, is very weather sensitive," Peters said. "Its mission depends on what kind of weather conditions are out there. They have to have the cloud heights at a certain level to jump, and wind speeds are critical."

While the National Weather Service, can just say "partly cloudy," he said, "we have specific criteria to meet, such as visibility and cloud heights for aviation.

"We have to distinguish clouds at 1,500 feet vs. clouds at 1,800 feet, and that can be difficult."

Also, each aircraft has its own sensitivities. Some aircraft do not have the radar to detect thunderstorms, which are a hazard because of the lightning and the winds associated with them, while others do not have the instrumentation needed to take off in the fog, Peters said. Hail can damage the wings of aircraft like the C-130, Coleman said.

Morning fog and low stratus clouds are a problem for all aircraft, and can be especially hard to forecast here because the Chattahoochee River is so close to the airfield, Peters said.

On their side, the forecasters and observers have some of the latest technology available to help them.

The forecasters use the Doppler radar system to detect and track precipitation and severe weather, satellite pictures to track changing cloud patterns, and computer generated models that take into account past weather patterns and seasonal changes to help them predict what will happen.

They gather all the information they can from these sources, put it together and analyze it.

"Basically, we take all the abstracts and make a concrete," said Air Force Staff Sgt. Richard A. Wooster.

Experience helps, Wooster said, but even with 30 years of weather history at their fingertips, mother nature always seems to find something new to try.

"Every day is different," Peters said. "That's the fun part of being a meteorologist — predicting nature and what it's going to do."

But it can also be frustrating, said Air Force Tech. Sgt. Mark E. Mireles. "I pull my hair out over the fog ... there's a lot on the line here."

For Wooster and the other forecasters, the cardinal sin in forecasting is "amending." That kind of committment shows in the fact that 73 percent of the thunderstorm advisories they issued last year were verified.

Two 36th Eng. Group soldiers receive awards

Cited for valor for rescue mission in Somalia

By Denise Howell
36th Engineer Group

Cited for extraordinary valor in action during the Oct. 3 ranger rescue mission in Somalia, two soldiers were honored March 4 at an awards ceremony at the Audie Murphy Gym.

Sgt. Diane Peterson and Sgt. Eddie Pardon, both of the 533rd Transportation Company, 13th Corps Support Battalion, were awarded the Army Commendation Medal with valor device.

At about 5:30 p.m., Oct. 3, a convoy consisting of soldiers from Company C, 2nd Battalion, 14th Infantry Regiment, and the 1st Squad of the 2nd (Truck) Platoon of the 533rd was assembled and assigned to rescue and evacuate rangers from two helicopters downed in Mogadishu.

Before reaching its objective, the convoy was ambushed and engaged in intense enemy crossfire. Shortly after dark two hours later, the convoy, though still battling continuous hostile fire, was ready to withdraw.

But Peterson found she was disabled. Loss of air pressure had caused the brakes on her vehicle to lock up.

Efforts to correct the pressure from inside failed. So, despite the barrage of bullets, she exited her vehicle.

"I was so scared I couldn't think straight," Peterson said. "I had about 20 soldiers on the back of my truck, and all I was really thinking about was getting us out of there. I just had an automatic reaction at that time."

Behind Peterson, Pardon was, as driver of the truck commander vehicle, under orders to complete area withdrawal and leave.

"We were the only two vehicles left," Pardon said. "But I thought there was no way we could just leave all those people while there was still a chance to get out safely."

So Pardon pulled his vehicle around, got out and stayed to render assistance and protection as Peterson drained the air tanks.

"We dealt with the situation at hand minute by minute," Pardon said. "And I put everything in God's hands."

About an hour later, Peterson's air pressure began to build and her vehicle was able to move forward slowly.

Pardon used his vehicle to push Peterson's out of enemy target range until it gained enough speed to continue on its own.

Lt. Col. Spike Rupert, the 13th's battalion commander, said, "During this mission, 13 American soldiers were killed in action, and more than 80 were wounded. Together, Peterson and Pardon retained more than 30 soldiers and (their) equipment. Today we honor them for their heroic efforts."

"I'm especially proud," said Col. Dean A. Kershaw, commander of the 36th Engineer Group, under which the 13th falls. "Today, we don't often see valor awards presented. (Their presentation) is scrutinized very carefully, and only under very special circumstances are they awarded.

"Clearly, what Sergeant Peterson and Sergeant Pardon did ... deserves the highest recognition," he continued.

"My vision for the group," Kershaw said, "is a group that is proud and ready. Proud of who they are, proud of what they've done, proud of their units, proud of the Army, proud of this nation, and ready to do whatever they have to do, 24 hours a day, whether in garrison or in Somalia ... wherever!"

Peterson, who will be completing 13 years of service and leaving the Army in June, attributed her part in the successful mission to the good working relationship she and Pardon shared "because what he did took guts.

"He was under orders to leave the area but didn't," she said. "If he had left us, I think I would have passed out. But if I had to go through it again, I know I'd do the same things."

This had been Pardon's first time in combat during his 10 years of Army service.

"I'm not a hero in my own eyes," Pardon said. "In a stressful situation, any given individual is capable of performing above even his or her own expectations.

I just did what had to be done. Any other soldier would have done the same thing."

Photographers wanted to capture Army life

Army News Service

A call is out to amateur and professional photographers who would like to see their work published in a magazine read around the world.

"SOLDIERS," the official U.S. Army magazine, is seeking military and civilian photographers to record a day of Army life for its third annual "This Is Our Army" photo feature.

Magazine officials have set aside the Army's 219th birthday — June 14 — as the day for photographers to set out with cameras and tripods in search of the perfect Army photo.

"We're looking for imagination and creativity," said Staff Sgt. Larry Lane, magazine photo editor. "Soldiers should look for what is unique to their installation —something they may see every day, but others may never get the opportunity to see. We need photos that tell a story and capture the faces of soldiers, families and Department of the Army civilians."

Officials stress this is not a contest.

- Pictures must be taken within the 24-hour period of June 14.
- Only processed color slides and 5x7- or 8x10-inch black and white prints will be considered.
- Photo submissions must credit the photographer; include full name, rank and service (if applicable).
- Entries must be captioned to include names of all identifiable people in the photos, location and a description of the action in the picture.

Captions must be individually attached to each photo or slide.

- Photos must be received at "SOLDIERS" no later than Aug. 31. Photos and slides cannot be returned.

Send entries to: SOLDIERS; 9325 Gunston Road; Suite S108; Fort Belvoir, Va. 22060-5581.

For more information, contact Lane or Staff Sgt. Doug Ide at DSN 284-6671 or (703) 274-6671.

VA releases analysis of '90 census data on nation's veterans

Department of Veterans Affairs

The Department of Veterans Affairs, in an analysis of 1990 census data, has found that while the total number of veterans declined between 1980 and 1990, the number of black and Hispanic veterans increased over the decade.

The analysis, by VA's National Center for Veterans Analysis and Statistics, presents a statistical portrait of the veteran population in the 50 states and the District of Columbia. Additional data are listed below.

Population

The total veteran population of 27.2 million is made up of 24.1 million whites; 2.3 million blacks; 246,000 Asian and Pacific Islanders; 190,000 American Indian, Aleut, Eskimo; and 310,000 veterans who did not classify themselves as members of a special racial group. Of these groups, 925,000 also identified themselves as of Hispanic origin.

If current trends continue, military separations data suggest that the white veteran population will continue to decline, while black (20 percent) and Hispanic (5.2 percent) veteran populations will continue to make up higher proportions of the veteran population.

The minority veteran populations are younger than the white veteran population.

Among male veterans, almost 1 of every 2 blacks and Hispanics was under age 45 compared to only 28 percent of white veterans. Among female veterans, nearly one-half of black and Hispanic veterans were under 35 years of age compared to 27 percent of white female veterans.

In 1990, female veterans numbered 1.1 million, or about 4 percent of all veterans. About 84 percent of the female veteran population was white, 12 percent black, and 4 percent self-identified as Hispanic. In contrast, male veterans were 89 percent white, 8 percent black, and 3 percent Hispanic origin.

Wartime service

Approximately 34 percent (9.2 million) of all veterans served in World War II, the largest segment of the veteran population.

Roughly one of every three white male and female veterans served during World War II.

Veterans from the Vietnam era (8.2 million) were the second largest period-of-service group. Among male veterans, both black and Hispanic, approximately 1 in 3 served in the Vietnam era.

More than one-half of the black female (58 percent) and Hispanic female veterans population (53 percent) served during the Post-Vietnam era.

Education

Some 54 percent of those who attended college earned a degree.

Female veterans were more likely to be college-educated. Approximately 60 percent of female veterans attended college compared to less than one-half of male veterans.

Some 80 percent of veterans have graduated from high school. Female veterans were more likely to have graduated from high school than their male counterparts.

Employment, income

Among male veterans ages 35 to 44, the group with the highest labor force participation rate, whites were 94 percent employed; Hispanics, 90 percent; and blacks, 84 percent. The same age group of female veterans' rates are whites, 81 percent; blacks, 84 percent; and Hispanics, 79 percent.

The unemployment rate for white males and females was 4.3 and 5.8 percent, respectively. Hispanic male veterans had the lowest unemployment rate (6.5 percent) among the minority groups of either gender.

Unemployment rates among black male and female veterans were 9.1 and 11.1 percent, respectively, and 8.9 percent for Hispanic female veterans.

The median incomes for women veterans were well below those of men, although the differential by sex was lower for blacks than for whites and Hispanics.

The median income of female veterans was highest among blacks ($12,900), followed by white females ($12,600) and Hispanic females ($11,700).

The median income of white male veterans ($25,600) was higher than the median income of black males ($16,800) and Hispanic males ($20,900).

Three Ways To Take A Bite Out Of Taxes.

Even though it's getting late in the tax season, there is still a chance that stopping by CB&T could give you a taste of what it's like to save money on your taxes. And don't forget, there's always next year. So the sooner you start saving, the greater the bite you may be able to take out of your taxes.

1. IRA: CB&T offers a variety of IRA types to meet your personal needs and goals. With an IRA from CB&T, all interest earned is tax deferred until withdrawal at retirement and contributions may qualify as federal income tax deductions. And, you still have until April 15th to qualify on your 1993 taxes.

2. SpeciaLine® Equity Line: With our SpeciaLine® Equity Line, you can use the equity in your home to secure an equity line of credit and, in many cases, your interest will be tax deductible. You may qualify for a revolving line of credit from $10,000 up, to use for whatever you need. And, there are no closing costs, which saves you even more.

3. Dual Collateral Auto Loan: With a dual collateral auto loan, the equity in your home plus your new car or boat as collateral may qualify you for this fixed rate, fixed term installment loan. And, the interest may also be tax deductible.

Of course, you should check with your personal tax advisor to be sure of any possible tax savings offered by these products. Just call or come by any CB&T office for more details. You may get a mouthful of savings.

Recreation Area to add $225,000 swimming pool

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

The latest addition to the Uchee Creek Recreation Area will be a $225,000 swimming pool complex scheduled for completion in the early summer.

Work on the 35 x 70 foot in-ground pool began in January and will feature a fountain and separate children's pool.

The idea for the project came from the triennial survey of soldiers conducted by the Directorate of Community Activities, Marketing Section.

"The number one improvement suggested for Uchee Creek was a swimming pool," said Howard Givens, manager of the recreation area. "It certainly is a well thought out and desired project."

Uchee Creek Recreation Area has been fully operational for three years and features 110 rental boats, 19 fully furnished cabins and 65 campsites.

The pool is scheduled for a June 8 completion but hopes are it will be finished a little early and in time for a Memorial Day weekend grand opening, according to Givens.

A pavilion at one end of the pool is also under construction and will be equipped with bathrooms and a veranda with chairs and tables.

Any guest staying at the facility will be allowed to swim for free. Others eligible to use Morale, Welfare and Recreation facilities will be expected to pay a nominal fee for use of the pool.

Also under construction are three large cabins situated along the Chattahoochee River and an enclosed video arcade.

Long-term plans include building a miniature golf course, open-air picnic area and a sand volleyball court.

Job assistance workshop

Time: Wednesdays, 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Location: Infantry Hall, Building 4

The workshop is conducted every Wednesday at Infantry Hall. Topics discussed include objective setting, resume preparation, expanding opportunities, networking, interviewing, salary negotiating, stress management and financial planning.

The workshop is for anyone leaving federal service (both military and Department of the Army civilians) and their family members, whether leaving voluntarily, involuntarily or retiring.

Education Opportunity Center

Time: Wednesdays, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

Participants will receive information from all over the country about college and university admissions requirements and proficiency exams. Education counselors can also discuss student loans and grants.

Employers' Day

Time: Varies

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

Employers' Day is scheduled each Friday at the Job Assistance Center.

The program is designed to allow employers to recruit qualified candidates for their companies.

Employers normally will give presentations on their organizations and set up interviews with qualified candidates.

A variety of manufacturing and service companies take advantage of this opportunity. Public sector organizations are also represented.

Mock Interview Practice

Time: Thursdays, 1 to 3 p.m.

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

Participants will learn how to interview effectively by rehearsing and practicing interview techniques with an experienced JAC counselor. The mock interview will be videotaped to provide the client with a visual learning tool.

Focus Hour

Time: Tuesdays, noon to 1 p.m.

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

This weekly video program provides additional information on the key areas in the job search process — networking, dressing for success, interview process and negotiating techniques. Counselors will assist with any additional questions.

va q & a

Department of Veterans Affairs

Q. Why does my Veterans Administration medical center ask if I have medical insurance when I go for treatment?

A. VA is required by law to bill insurance companies for the cost of medical care furnished to veterans, including service-connected veterans for nonservice-connected conditions covered by health insurance policies. This makes VA similar to other health providers.

Filing claims with insurers does not cost the insured veteran anything. The collection process is between VA and the veteran's insurance company only.

Q. Will I have to pay VA the difference if my insurance company does not reimburse the full amount of VA claims for my health care?

A. No. VA will not try to collect unpaid funds from a patient. This should not be confused with bills VA may send to veterans in a certain income category (discretionary) who make co-payments to VA for their medical care.

Q: I am submitting an application to the Department of Veterans Affairs for a headstone to mark my father's grave in our family plot. Do I need to include any documents regarding his service in the Army?

A: Any official document that verifies your father's honorable service in the armed forces should be submitted along with the application to assist in processing. Send only copies of documents. Department of Defense Form 214, Certificate of Release or Discharge from Active Duty, is the document most commonly used and accepted for this purpose.

Q: My father was cremated and his ashes were scattered. Is it possible to have a memorial marker placed in a VA national cemetery?

A: Yes. VA will provide, without charge, a memorial marker or headstone to commemorate any eligible veteran whose remains were cremated and the ashes scattered. The memorial may be erected, also at no cost, in the memorial section of a national cemetery. VA does not cover costs of a plot or placement of a memorial marker in a private cemetery.

Q: I have a $10,000 service-disabled veterans insurance policy. Can I increase my coverage?

A: Yes, if you meet certain criteria. Policyholders eligible for a waiver of premiums in the Service-Disabled Veterans Insurance program can purchase $20.000 in additional coverage at standard rates based on the insured's current age.

To be eligible for a waiver of premiums, policyholders must be totally disabled before their 65th birthday.

Eligible policyholders may increase their coverage amount in increments of $500, starting at $1,000 with a maximum of $20,000.

Policyholders must be under the age of 65. They have one year from the date of the waiver award letter to apply for the coverage.

However, all eligible current policyholders can now sign up for the additional insurance during open season which ends Oct.31.

Eligible policyholders interested in the increased coverage can call the Department of Veterans Affairs' Regional Office and Insurance Center in Philadelphia for more information. The number is (800) 669-8477.

Q: If a veteran served in more than one branch of service, may all branches be placed at government expense on a gravestone provided by the Department of Veterans Affairs ?

A: Space permitting, more than one rank and branch of service are authorized in the inscription. This is more easily accommodated on upright headstones than on flat markers.

The VA's National Cemetery System suggests listing the branches of service only, or the highest rank and its branch of service and other branches of service without the rank, where space is limited.

Q: May a nickname be placed on a gravestone at government expense if the veteran has no middle name?

A: A nickname may never be placed on the name line.

Nicknames, expressed in terms of endearment, such as "Lovingly Called Dutch," may be included as an additional item of inscription at private expense.

For additional information about VA's headstone and gravestone program, call (800) 697-6947 from 8 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. weekdays.

Editor's note: If you have a question about your veterans' benefits, call the Department of Veterans Affairs at (800) 827-1000.

DCP to offer briefings about employment in Korea

Directorate of Civilian Personnel

The Directorate of Civilian Personnel is sponsoring the following informational briefings and counseling sessions April 25 to potential candidates interested in employment in Korea.

The briefings will be conducted by the 8th U.S. Army Civilian Recruiting Office, Seattle, Wash.

Each session will consist of a video presentation followed by a question and answer period.

Briefings will be conducted in Building 2509 from 9 to 10:30 a.m., 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and 1 to 2:30 p.m.

The purpose of the briefings is to acquaint prospective candidates with living conditions in Korea, employment opportunities, overseas entitlements and allowances, and application procedures.

Recruiting sessions will be restricted only to current Department of the Army and Department of Defense employees with status (primarily in grades GS-9 and above) and family members (military or civilian) being assigned to Korea with their sponsor.

Reservations for the briefings will be made through activity training coordinators to the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, Training and Development Division, at 545-5580 or 545-5656.

Questions concerning applications and career program information should be directed to James Fleming, Personnel Management and Systems Support Division, DCP, at 545-4584.

FITNESS: Retirees exercise

physical training. Exercises will be dictated by the participants personal interests and abilities and will include group activities such as mall walking, nature trail hiking and either canoeing or road cycling. The program will also provide participants with nutritional information and the ability to continue with a fitness program of their own after the pilot program is completed.

"During the program, participants will also learn how everyday activities, like cutting grass, can contribute to cardiovascular fitness. Why pay money to go to a gym if you can get the same result at home," Osborne said.

The program uses a number system to rate various activities and exercises according to their fitness value. Participants are encouraged to earn 50 points each week: 32 points for working the heart and lungs, 12 points for working muscles and 6 points for moving body parts through a full range of motion.

"Our goal is simply functional fitness, not body building," he said. "We want retirees to do the kinds of exercise that will permit them to maintain an active lifestyle and accomplish daily chores. Even doing something as simple as lifting a gallon milk jug can pose a problem if muscles and bones have become weak from disuse."

The program will consist of five phases. The first two phases will include a medical screening to ensure each participant can safely participate in the planned activities and a physical assessment to determine each participant's level of fitness in four areas: cardiorespiratory, muscular strength and endurance, flexibility and body composition.

Phase three will consist of analyzing the results of each participant's assessments so that a personal fitness plan can be developed that will be tailored exactly to the individual's needs.

In phase four, participants will begin exercising, both individually and in group activities, and attend seminars on nutrition, stress and other health issues. Phase five will consist of another physical assessment, done six months after the first, to determine the progress of each participant.

Osborne and other program organizers are members of a process action team chaired by Freida McDonald, Retirement Services Officer. This team is designing and initiating the program, and is interested in what kinds of exercise are suitable for older adults.

"We have done a lot of preliminary research including experimenting with heart rate monitors on loan from the Physical Fitness School to see what kind of results various activities produce," Osborne said. "The individual differences in heart rates while performing the same activities are very interesting. An exercise that is a good aerobic conditioner for one person may not be good for another."

Col. David White, commandant of the Army Physical Fitness School, suggests mature adults participate in low-impact activities, which are defined as one foot maintaining contact with the floor. He also suggests that retirees exercise all major muscle groups two to three times each week for 20 to 30 minutes.

Retired Lt. Col. John Seddon said the Army can benefit financially from the establishment of a retiree fitness program.

"If retirees stay physically fit, it means they will probably make fewer visits to the hospital," he said.

The pilot program is being conducted with 43 retirees. Retired personnel of any rank and branch of service can participate in the program.

How To Recycle

Post housing residents may place recyclable materials in brown plastic bins for weekly curbside pickup.

Here is a list of the items that can and cannot be placed in the bin for recycling.

• Glass: Clear green or brown bottles and jars including soda, beer or liquor containers may be placed in the bin. All caps must be removed before placing the bottles in the bin. Glass items such as light bulbs, window or automobile glass, mirrors and drinking glasses cannot be placed in the bin.

• Metal: All metal cans (the labels do not have to be removed) can be placed in the bin after rinsing them. Metal foils, such as aluminum foil, cannot be placed in the bin.

• Plastic: Soda bottles, milk containers and water jugs can be recycled but the caps must be removed and the bottles crushed by stepping on them before placing them in the bin. Styrofoam, plastic bags and caps from recyclable bottles and containers cannot be placed in the bin.

• Paper: Newspaper can be placed in the bin if it is bundled or placed in a brown paper bag and placed beside the bin at the curb on collection day. All glossy paper, such as that used in catalogs, brochures and advertisements, cannot be recycled. Magazines are not acceptable at this time.

Trash and recycle pickup schedule

Household trash and recycling are collected once a week on the same day. If there is recyclable material mixed in with the trash, or if there is no recycling bin next to the trash can, the trash will not be picked up until the following week, or until recyclables are separated.

All-Army wrestlers win fifth straight title

All-Army team wins big in tourney

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

When you here the word dynasty, people think of the Pittsburgh Steelers or Dallas Cowboys with four Super Bowl rings or the Boston Celtics and the Chicago Bulls in basketball, along with the New York Yankees in baseball .

The black and gold of the All-Army wrestling team could, if it chose to be, fit in the dynasty category.

With the conclusion of the 1994 Armed Forces wrestling championships Sunday at the Naval Air Station, Pensacola, Fla., the Army won its fifth straight interservice title, crowning six champions in both freestyle and Greco-Roman wrestling.

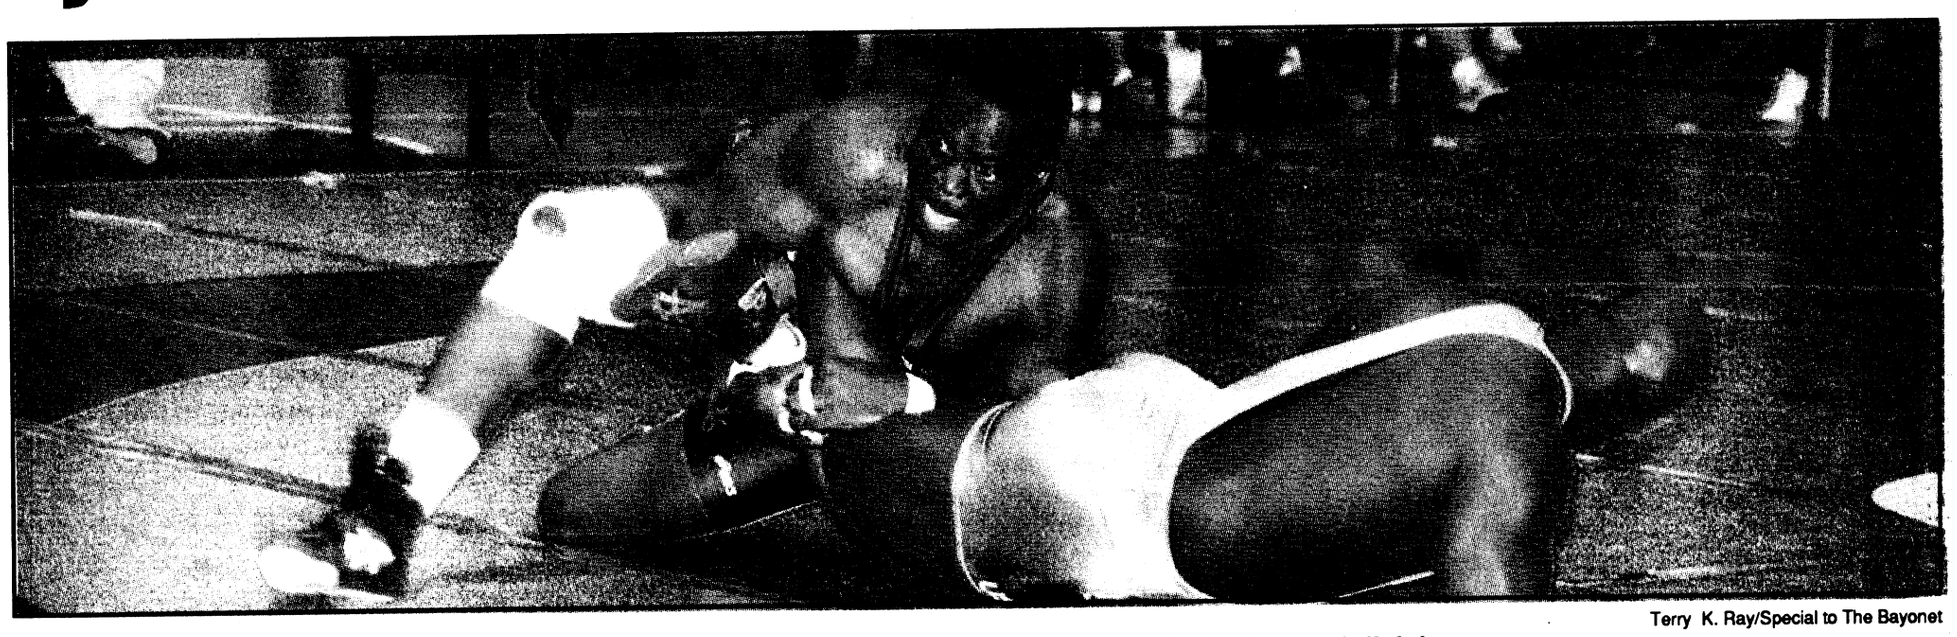
"This team fought through a lot of adversity in this tournament and for them to win the way they did shows how dedicated these guys are to being the best they can be," said All-Army wrestling coach Sgt. 1st Class Tony Thomas. "Having to fight through a double elimination tournament for the first time in interservice competition and maybe having to wrestle five times in one day showed to me who had the desire to win."

The Army scored 40 team points in freestyle and 37 in Greco-Roman for a team total of 77. The Marine Corps finished a distant second with 32 points in freestyle and 26 in Greco-Roman for a total of 58. The Navy claimed third place with a team total of 51 points, 21 in freestyle and 30 in Greco-Roman. The Air Force finished in fourth place with a total of 32 points 16 in each competition.

The Army finished with total of nine wrestlers in the finals for freestyle and another seven for Greco-Roman for a total of 16 wrestlers out of 20 going for the gold.

Two major upsets took place in the Greco-Roman portion of the tournament. At the 149.5-pound division, 1992 Olympic Bronze Medal winner Rodney Smith of the Army was defeated 5-1 and 3-0 by Keith Wilson of the Marine Corps. Jason Tolbert of the Army defeated Steven Mays 5-1 in overtime in the 125.5-pound class. Mays is considered one of the Navy's elite wrestlers and an Olympic hopeful.

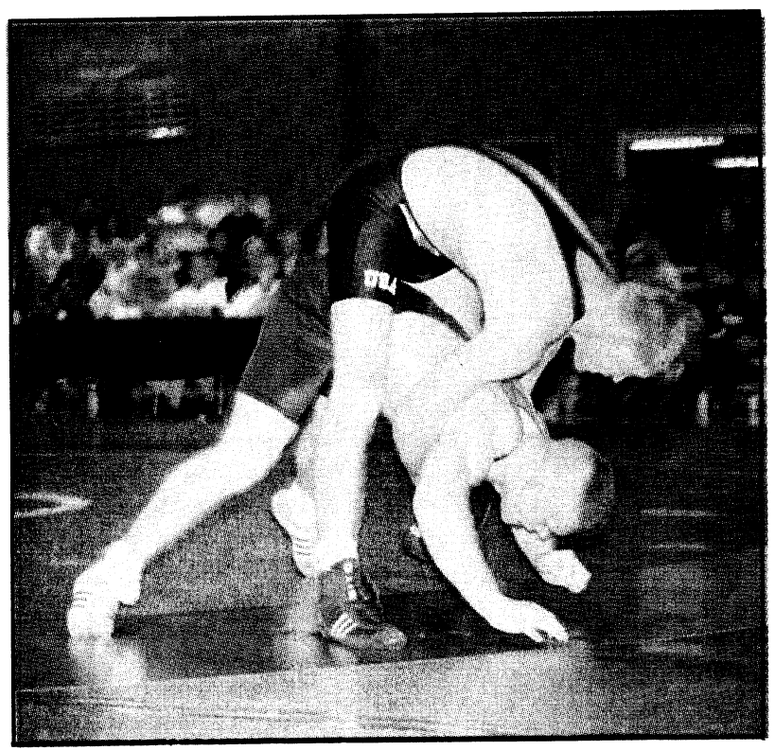
"The Greco-Roman competition was some of the most intense and exciting amateur wrestling I have seen in years," said Fort Benning Physical Activities Branch Director and wrestling fan Jim Brown.



The tournament itself was not without controversy. In a double elimination tournament, there is a winner's bracket and a loser's bracket. In the finals of a weight class, one wrestler will come from each bracket. If the wrestler from the winner's bracket loses to the wrestler from the loser's bracket, they must face each other again to decide the winner.

"Before the matches began, the other coaches, the service representatives and I met to discuss the tournament," said Thomas. "It was established that if the wrestlers had not faced each other before the finals that the match would be head-to-head."

"When the situation happened in a match between Humphrey of the Army and Walker of the Marine Corps and Humphrey won, they changed and said they would have to wrestle again. In any other sport, when you reach the finals it's win or go home. The same principle should have applied in this tournament."



The champions and runners-up in each weight class beginning with the freestyle competition April 1 are:

These services include collection of lifesaving blood, training people in cardiopulmonary resuscitation, first aid and water safety and providing emergency shelter, food and clothing to local disaster victims.

Somewhere between 250 to 500 runners from the surrounding counties as well as from out of state are expected to participate.

Also new this year is the participation in the 1994 Run and See Georgia Grand Prix program, a series of more than 70 races throughout the state that gets its more than 28,000 runners to travel around the state participating in quality running events while seeing some of the tourist attractions and cities in Georgia

Old South Classic set for April 23, 24

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club will host the Old South Classic pistol match April 23 and 24 at English Range.

Sponsored by the Glock Sports Shooting Foundation, the competition, which is designed for the inexperienced or novice shooter, is intended for Glock pistol owners who would not normally consider entering shooting competitions.

The competition is also open to military personnel and law enforcement agencies; each will compete for their own separate prizes and awards.

Up to $10,000 in Glock pistol prizes and cash will be available during the weekend competition, and civilian, law enforcement and military personnel may choose to compete on either day.

There will be an unlimited class for participants who have modified their Glock pistols or who are professional shooters.

There will also be separate class for Glock 17-L competition model owners.

All competitors must be current GSSF members and all firearms must be stock Glock pistols. GSSF memberships are available at the match for $15 and are good for a year. Shooters can preregister for $25 ($20 for military) with registration forms available from GSSF. Thirty-five dollars will cover the cost of registration on the day of the match ($25 for military).

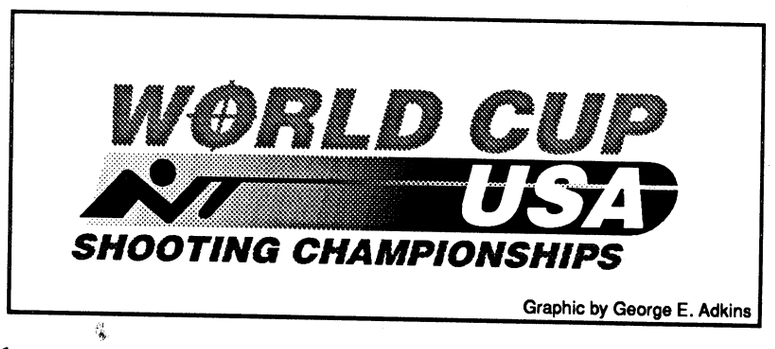
The match will also have prizes for high woman, high junior female and high junior male competitors.

"We are happy to have the Old South Classic II here at Fort Benning for the second straight year," said match coordinator Jim Graham. "Last year's event was one of the biggest matches we have ever had, and we hope to have an even better turnout this year."

Shooters to gather on post for World Cup competition

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

Fort Benning will be the site of the 1994 World Cup USA and U.S. Grand Prix shooting competitions April 17 through 24.



More than 400 shooter athletes from approximately 46 nations will compete in the event, which will be conducted at the Tommy G. Pool International Shooting Complex.

Fort Benning was selected to host this year's competition largely because of its proximity to the 1996 Olympic site and its recently upgraded facilities, officials said.

The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit will host the event and has placed 14 shooters on the 1994 World Cup team.

International shooting complex dedication

The Tommy G. Pool International Shooting Complex will be formally dedicated by the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit at a 1 p.m. ceremony today.

Graphic by George E. Adkins

The complex, located on Alamo Road near Soldiers' Plaza, will serve as one of the ranges for the upcoming World Cup Shooting Championships April 17 to 24.

The late Lt. Col. Tommy G. Pool, former Olympic bronze medalist, was with the unit for more than two decades as a shooter and civilian employee. Pool died in 1990.

His widow and guest of honor, Nancy Pool, and Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, Fort Benning commanding general, will unveil a portrait at the ceremony of Pool that will hang in the complex.

Hall of fame

Seven former members of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit will be inducted in the unit's first hall of fame during a banquet ceremony April 15 at the Fort Benning Officers' Club.

The names of the distinguished shooters will be announced during the ceremony in which Gen. Dennis J. Reimer, Forces Command commander-in-chief, will be the guest speaker.

STARS

playoff dreams are dashed

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Columbus Stars lost all hope of a playoff berth with a 21-19 loss to the Tallahassee Tornados Saturday at Memorial Stadium.

The Stars needed to win their last two games and get some help to have a chance for a wild card spot. Neither one happened.

Trailing 21-6, the Stars pulled starting quarterback Mike Reese for Jeff McCarrie.

McCarrie responded to the challenge with two touchdown passes, one a 59-yard strike to tight end Tyrone Ivory and a 5-yard hit to receiver Rodney Simmons with less than a minute to play in the game.

Running back Eddie Mitchell gave the Stars their only lead of the game early in the second quarter on a 1-yard plunge up the middle for a 6-0 advantage.

McCarrie finished the game 5 for 16 for 105 yards and 2 touchdowns.

Fullback Jamon Smith had 73 yards on 12 carries while Mitchell finished with 67 yards on 16 carries and had one reception for 17 yards. Ivory had 3 catches for a total of 115 yards an 1 touchdown.

The Stars outgained the Tornados in total yards 295 to 291. In the turnover department the Stars lost the ball only once while the Tornados turned the ball over three times on fumbles.

Michael Bailey, Frank Lewis and Russell Saunders each recovered a fumble for the Stars. Linebacker Thomas Bryant led the Star's defense with nine tackles and six assists and one sack. Defensive end Robert Stroy also had seven tackles, five assists and a sack.

The Stars will finish out their inaugural season in the America's Football League on the road when they travel to Mobile, Ala., for a chance to finish the season with a winning record at 5-5 with a win over the Vipers.

Cruise-matics win

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Columbus-Fort Benning Rugby Football Club Cruise-matics came from behind to defeat the Atlanta Renegades 28-24 Saturday at Stilwell Field.

The first half of play was a seesaw affair with both clubs doing their share of scoring.

Cruise-matics eight man Kevin Hyneman put the Cruise-matics on the board at 5-0, five minutes into the match off a free kick by the Renegades. At the 10-minute mark, Cruise-matic fullback Mace Oswald fed outside center Rich Hunt for the second score of the half and a 10-0 lead.

The Renegades got the next three scores from wing forward Scott McKenzie, outside center John Bartz, inside center Rob Halcomb and kicker Tal Bert for a 19-10 advantage.

Oswald cut the deficit to 19-16 on two penalty kicks midway through the half, only to have McKenzie pick off an errant pass at the Cruise-matic 35-meter line and race untouched into the end zone for a 24-16 lead.

With the first half running out, Hyneman got his second try of the afternoon on a five-meter pushover srcum to trim the Renegade lead to 24-21 at the break.

In the second half of play, the Cruise-matics regained the lead early in the half, when hooker Roy Krueger took the ball into the end zone off a blocked kick at the Renegade 22-meter line. Oswald added the conversion for a 28-24 lead.

The Cruise-matic defense rose to the challenge in the second half stepping up their intensity down the line and denied the Renegades scoring opportunities on at least three different occasions, the last one coming with under three minutes to play in the match.

"This was a hard-fought match," said Cruise-matic head coach Jim Muldoon. "The Renegades gave us all we could handle."

The Cruise-matics pushed their record to 8-2-1 on the season with two matches to go. Saturday, the Cruise-matics put on their traveling shoes for a match at Auburn, Ala., then return home for the final match of the season against division rival Montgomery at 2 p.m. on Stilwell Field.

The club will be hosting for the second straight year the U.S. Military Rugby Championships April 22 through 24 and will defend its title in sevens play.

Youth Orioles wear out Red Sox 13-3

By Dan Callahan
YA Coach, Orioles

The Orioles beat the Red Sox 13 to 3 March 26 after five innings of play at Fort Benning's Norton Field. This is the second game for both teams.

Oriole's first batter Tony Dupree got on base with a walk and stole second and third. Jeremy Callahan hit a triple and drove in the first run of the game. Matt Kapinos singled and drove in the Oriole's second run. Chris Callahan also singled but was left on base when the Red Sox's defense shut down the drive.

The Red Soxs took the offensive and jumped out front in the bottom of the first. Red Sox's first batter William Colon started things off when he hit a double. He was followed with Charles Boeham who hit a single and Harlin Taylor who doubled, knocking in two runs. Two other Red Sox's batters got on base with walks, but were picked off trying to steal bases.

Both teams played tough defense in the second inning. Oriole batters Kiki Mister singled and was sent home by Tony Dupree's single. Red Sox Pitcher Casey Brenner struck out the next two batters leaving Dupree stranded on third. The Red Sox offense begin to falter as Oriole pitcher Jeremy Callahan struck out two and one base runner was picked off trying to steal second.

The Orioles took advantage of the momentum in the third inning with some solid hitting and crafty base running. Jeremy Callahan got on base with a single and stole second, third and home.

Dupree tripled driving in three runs.

Jeremy Callahan silenced the Red Sox's bats from the third inning through the remainder of the game by striking out the next nine consecutive batters.

The Orioles continued to run up the score in the fourth and fifth innings. In the fourth inning Jeremy Callahan tripled then stole home and Matt Kapinos walked and stole second, third and home.

The fifth brought more of the same as Dupree, Ty Mason and Michael Bill managed to get on base and steal second, third and home.

YOUNG AUTHORS

Students exercise their creativity

30 storytellers conduct sessions to inspire interest in language arts

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

Dexter School children stretched their imaginations in a variety of sessions highlighting language arts as part of the fourth annual Young Authors' Day March 31.

More than 30 guest speakers, including keynote storyteller and author Carmen Deedy, led children through exercises designed to inspire creativity and encourage an interest in language arts.

Deedy led workshops throughout the day, enthralling youngsters with stories such as the one about Alice, a bored child searching for adventure, but almost too frightened to find it. With facial expressions and a voice spanning the range of imagination, Deedy crafted the delightful tale of the timid girl and the slobbering, sinister wolf whom she soothed into safe slumber.

Deedy, author and guest speaker on National Public Radio's "All Things Considered," grew up in Decatur, Ga., after immigrating from Cuba as a child. Her books include "Agatha's Feather Bed: Not Just Another Wild Goose Story," and "Tree Men."

Deedy was one of about 30 presenters who led children through activities designed to stimulate interest in the various aspects of language arts.

For example, children heard a reminiscent tale by Dr. Sharon Nix of herself as a teen-ager anxious to make her midnight curfew by taking a shortcut through ... the cemetery.

Nix set the mood for her cooperative story with the haunting music of "Danse Macabre," then invited children to finish the scary tale through the use of props, scripts and backgrounds.

While the eerie melody drifted through the hallway, another presenter was using an entirely different type of music to establish a mood. A soft and soothing classical symphony provided background for children in Danny Funderburk's session encouraging ways to bring forth "the story within." He stated, "there are two subjects you can write about: things you know for fact and things that should be fact."

Photos by Jerrie Macintire/Special to The Bayonet

Carmen Deedy, keynote speaker, tells an interactive story about a girl named Alice who has fears about the world, but is bored at home and wants more adventure.

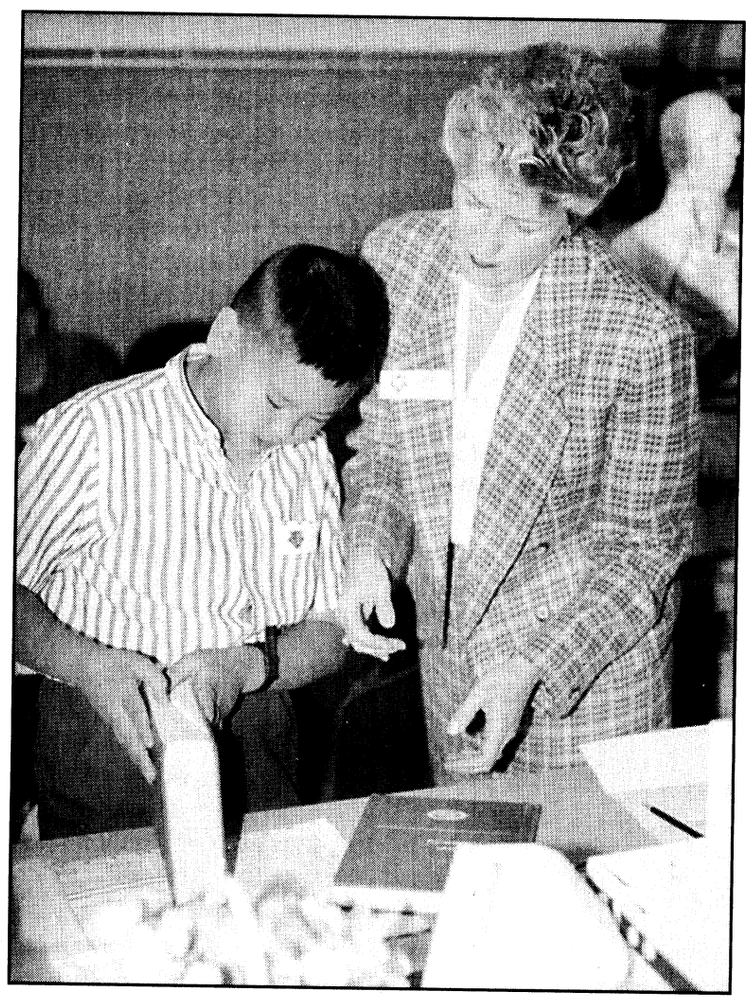
Citing the need for imagination, he reminded children of author Mark Twain's words, "When I was young I could remember anything, whether it happened or not."

Spoken language was only part of Young Authors' Day.



Children also explored the use of sign language for storytelling in a session by Joyce Windham, and also combined artistic exploration with imagination in sessions by Audrey Leanza and Dr. Dell Karr.

Leanza explored storytelling through drawing pictures, while Karr took liberties with the classic "The Emperor's New Clothes."

Karr's session, entitled "The Principal's New Clothes," led youngsters to stretch their ingenuity and designed creative outfits for their principal, Vicki Rogers.

Other sessions dealt with the exploration of character development, the role of television and storytelling, and relationships between literature and timely issues such as recycling and the legal system.

From poetry to postcards, Young Authors' Day spanned the spectrum of storytelling while encouraging participation in language arts.

Retired 1st Sgt. leads fight against drugs

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

What would you do if you heard about a new disease? A disease that could kill anyone who touches it. A disease that has no prejudice about race, religion or sex. A disease that you could catch without sleeping with someone or eating the wrong foods. What if you found out that you could catch it right outside your front door?

Now, if you knew that you would never catch this disease by doing one simple thing, you'd do it, right? Well, a lot of Americans are doing that one thing and they are getting away with it.

In this time of getting high and shooting up, there are some people who are standing up for the non-users and doing all they can to put a stop to drugs.

Retired 1st Sgt. Milton (Davey) Lockett, an audiovisual specialist with the Training Support Center, is the commander and co-founder of Carver Heights Against Drugs.

"I am trying to deter drug use and (sales) in the community," Lockett said.

Lockett and his co-founder, Mary Upshaw, a teacher with the board of education, Muskogee County, founded CHAD two years ago.

Since CHAD was formed, the flow of drugs has done an almost complete turn around in the Carver Heights area, Lockett said.

"When we first started, drug dealers sat on the corners selling drugs like ice cream cones, but right now it's hard to find drug dealers," Lockett said.

"I know drugs are still being sold, but in a smaller (amount) than before two years ago," he said.

The reaction from the neighborhood has been mixed, Lockett said. "Those who say, 'we have to live here after you're gone,' are the ones with the negative attitude," he said. "The drug dealer (is) going to be there whether you live there or not."

Lockett said his organization has only spent a fraction of what the Columbus Police spend doing the same sort of things detering drugs.

"He is very enthusiastic about cleaning up the community," said Capt. Richard L. Koller, in charge of Intelligence, Vice and Tact units for the Columbus Police Department.

"They are a very well organized organization," Koller said, "They are very easy to work with."

While CHAD is marching or camping in the community, the police set up road checks to check for illegal drugs or people driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs, Koller said.

Lockett

A lot of the time, the police will come up with a few arrests during these checks, Koller said.

During the week, CHAD will research certain areas of the neighborhood for drug activity. On Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights, CHAD and the Columbus Police Department will get together to formulate a plan against those areas researched earlier in the week, he said.

Lockett said CHAD does different things to get the drug dealers' attention. Taking pictures, keeping surveillance and marching in front of the drug dealers houses deters the dealers to close up shop, he said.

"Drug dealers are like any other merchant," he said. "They are trying to sell a product to those who need it. If you deter that individual, he or she has to do one of two things- go out of business or move," Lockett said.

CHAD has organized a national anti-drug conference in Columbus June 16 to 18 at the Columbus Trade Center. It is a three-day event that will teach communities and people alike how handle drugs in their community, Lockett said.

Classes will be given in anti-drug tools, community development and mobilization, law enforcement issues, youth groups and team building skills.

Anti-drug active communities have been invited from across the country. Communities such as the Greenville County Against Drugs, Greenville S.C.; Mantua Against Drugs, Philadelphia, Pa.; Cleburne Homes Against Drugs, Memphis Tenn.; and Boat Rock Against Drugs, Fulton County, Ga.

"I believe that every citizen has the right to walk the street of his or her choice in peace and safety," Lockett said, with fierce intensity, "when you have individuals trying to (prey) on these peoples lives, and change the way they are living, somebody has to take a positive stand."

Like the doctor searching for the miracle cure for a disease, Lockett continues to clean up his community through CHAD.

Volunteers wanted to help build family play park

U.S. Army Reserve Command

Volunteers are needed to assist volunteer citizens of Fayette County, Ga., just south of Forts McPherson and Gillim in Atlanta, in building a 20,000-square-foot family play park that will include a 13,000-square-foot wooden play structure.

All the materials are donated (or purchased with donated funds) and all the labor is volunteered.

Support and materials are coming from both the Fort McPherson garrison and the 335th Signal Command, a U.S.Army Reserve unit based in East Point, Ga. Many people assigned to the various military organizations in the area are also involved as individual volunteers.

The project is being built with nationally known architect Robert Leathers, affectionately crowned the "Playground Pied Piper."

All his projects are community built, with significant input from the children who will be using the play park. The children of Fayette County met in small groups with the architect and told him what they wanted to have in their playground. He drew a design and presented it to the community at a town hall meeting.

The final design will be 80 percent handicapped accessible (everything except the slide area, will hold 450 to 500 children and include picnic tables, a walking path and amphitheater area.

More than 1,500 volunteers will gather April 20 to 24 to construct the park. Tools, food, materials and child care for the constructors will all be provided by community-wide volunteer committees.

Construction volunteers are still needed. Shifts are from 8 a.m. to noon, 12:30 to 5:30 p.m. and 5:30 to quitting.

volunteers needed

Volunteer Resource Center

The Fort Benning Volunteer Resource Center promotes volunteerism by recruiting potential volunteers, by retaining active volunteers and by recognizing the contribution of volunteers to m quality of life of soldiers and families.

There are many volunteer opportunities available through the center as follow:

• Volunteers are needed at the Thrift Shop on Tuesdays and Thursdays between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. Individuals will gain retail experience while helping others. Free child care is provided for up to two children.

• Santa's Castle needs volunteers on Wednesdays from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. to help clean and refurbish toys. A volunteer is particularly needed to sew baby doll and Barbie clothes. Child care costs are provided.

• Fort Benning Schools is looking for a volunteer lifeguard and water safety instructor to assist in the Adaptive Aquatics Program for exceptional children to be Thursday and April 21 and 28 and May 4, 12, 19 and 26 from 12:15 to 3 p.m.

• Sayers Memorial Library needs volunteers to assist with shelving books, data entry and story time for children. Also, volunteers with experience in activity program planning, dramatic reading and counseling are encouraged to participate in the Multiple Reading Program this summer. Child-care costs will be provided.

Volunteers are needed in each housing area to assist the community mayor. Persons interested can contact a community life center.

• The Public Affairs Office needs an editorial assistant to assist the print section in publishing The Bayonet.

This product supports Army families through disseminating community news and command information to all Fort Benning families in The Bayonet newspaper, delivered free to all on-post housing units and by subscription to those living off post.

Interested persons must have typing ability, and knowledge of computer word processing systems is preferred but not required. Good communication skills and command of the English language are required. Education or experience in print journalism is preferred but not required. Also, the individual must be familiar with the Army and Fort Benning.

For more information, call 545-2201.

AAFES withdraws lollipops

Army and Air Force Exchange Service

The Army and Air Force Exchange Service and Confectionery World Inc. have withdrawn all Mrs. Flaherty's heart-shaped lollipops from store shelves. These lollipops may contain glass particles.

The lollipops were a seasonal, one-time buy for Valentine's Day, said AAFES Candy Buyer Kathy Lester. AAFES sold the lollipops in shoppettes and exchanges in the Continental United States only.

According to AAFES Staff Veterinarian Lt. Col. Paul L. Caron, a customer at Fort Devens, Mass., discovered the problem. Post veterinary inspectors examined the remaining lollipops and found particles in one additional one. Medical technicians from the U.S. Army Regional Laboratory, Fort Sam Houston, Texas, confirmed the particles were glass.

No other stores or customers have reported any problems with the lollipops.

Customers who bought the lollipops may return them to their nearest exchange for a full refund. They sold for 50 cents.

Students participate in interactive theater

By Jerrie Macintire

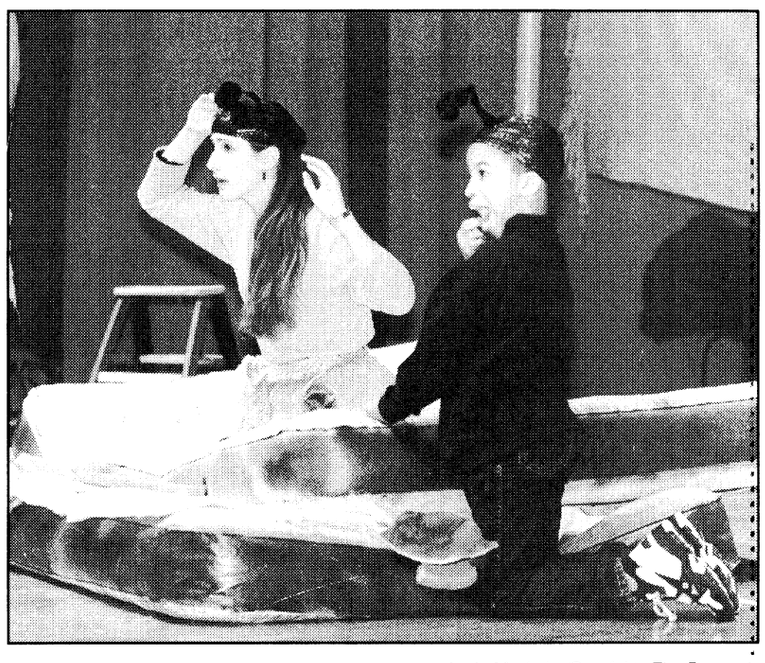
Stowers School students participated in an interactive theater workshop by a troupe canvassing the South in search of young playwrights.

In a visit to Stowers School March 31, the Florida Studio Theater performed "The Myth Makers," an audience participation workshop designed to "get children interested in creating plays," said actress Beth Cloe.

Cloe said she is encouraged by plays written by children.



"The children are so excited about this," said Gail Wilson, Stowers School principal. "We focus on writing across the curriculum. This is just a different form of writing," she said.

The troupe of four entertainers led children through various exercises designed to emphasize the important components in a play: setting, character development, dialogue, conflict and resolution.

In an effort to allow students to see theater is for everyone, the troupe highlighted real life problems.

The actors punctuated their workshop with lively music, colorful props, and a host of situations relevant to youngsters as they tried to stimulate an interest in playwriting.

From the approximately 6,000 plays garnered across the South, 40 will be chosen for performance at the Young Playwrights Festival in Florida in May.

Today's soldiers, tomorrow's officers

By Nancy Adams
Officer Candidate School

The sounds of boots hitting the concrete in unison and cadences resounding in the air usher forth the presence of another officer candidate class.

They come from all over the Army with one goal in mind — to become officers who will lead the Army's soldiers.

For most of the candidates in Class 2-94, the road to the U.S. Army Officer Candidate School had been traveled as an enlisted soldier and now they walk down a different path.

Following in the footsteps of the candidates who have passed underneath the archway before them, these soldiers learn what it takes to be a leader.

From day one, the candidate training is both mentally and physically challenging. With days that begin at 5 a.m. and end at 10:30 p.m., every minute is micromanaged to challenge the candidates' ability to manage their time wisely while completing the required tasks.

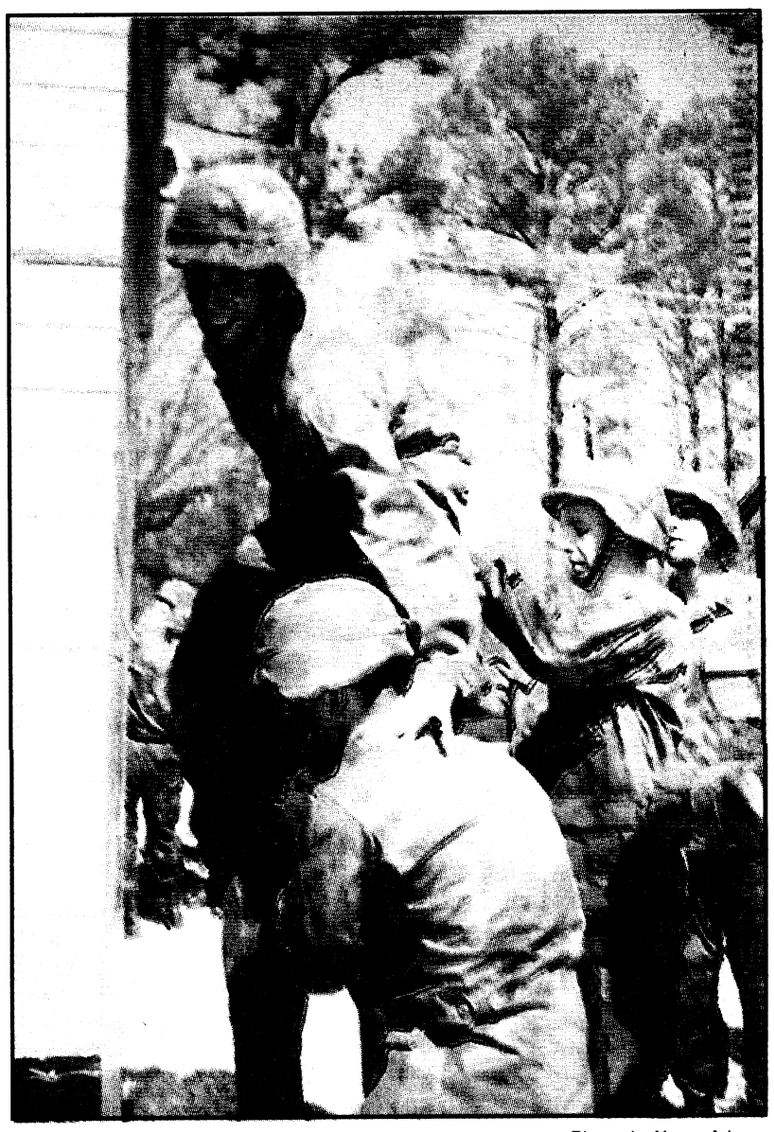
The 14-week course is divided into three phases. The basic phase focuses on basic military skills, and the intermediate phase concentrates on perfecting the skills learned in the basic phase and more in-depth studies dealing with tactics, patrolling and developing leadership skills. During the senior phase, the candidates polish up their leadership skills and must continue to show improvement with the privilege of receiving the courtesies as officers from the basic and intermediate candidates.

Third platoon teaching, assessing and counseling officer Capt. Carlos G. Berrios said he enjoys watching the candidates develop their leadership skills.

"I've seen a lot of people blossom into leaders, and it's important what we teach here because it's a leadership school that prepares you to become a commissioned officer," he said.

Berrios said the program not only focuses on infantry basics but by the four C's.

"We lead by four words: commitment, candor, competence and courage," he said. "You need to have the moral courage to correct what's wrong even if you're the lone ranger out there. You need to have the technical and tactical competence to lead your soldiers. You must have candor to be sensitive to others and to understand your soldiers. Finally you need commitment — commitment to your family, to your god and to your country. That's the important things that we strive for, and we hope that the new officers walk away with that in mind," Berrios said.



Senior Officer Candidate Winona Downing is a seasoned enlisted soldier. With 10 years of service, the former administrative assistant said she wants to share her experience and military knowledge with other soldiers.

"Becoming an officer will allow me to lead other soldiers," Downing said. "I've learned a lot here. Staying motivated has been really hard. Many times I thought I couldn't do one more thing, but you get through it and you get it done."

Straight out of basic training and straight into OCS, SOC Cynthia Mason said she joined the Army because she was bored with civilian life and wanted to be more involved with world affairs.

"The hardest thing for me was technical and tactical competency — having to learn the infantry fundamentals," she said. "But, if you have perseverance and you know why you are doing this, everything will fall into place."

Though their days are long and tasks many, the candidates of OCS Class 2-94 are near the end of their training. Soon they will travel to new ports of embarkation to become part of the select group of soldiers who were once followers, but now lead the way.

Standards will not be compromised — Franks

Commander speaks about training, battle labs, education systems, future of TRADOC

Editor's note: The following is an interview with Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr., the commanding general of the U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command. The interview was conducted by Crystal Stark, the assistant editor of the Huachuca Scout, Fort Huachuca, Ariz., during the TRADOC Commanders' Conference in Fort Monroe, Va., March 14 to 17.

TRADOC News Service

Q: How will the downsizing of the Army and the accompanying budget cuts affect training at TRADOC schools?

Franks: There are a lot of pressures and hard decisions we have to make as the Army gets smaller and as our budget is reduced, but one of the things we will absolutely not compromise is the excellence of our training.

We have seen, in past operations, that the excellence of our training is responsible for the Army being able to successfully accomplish missions the nation called on us to do in war and operations other than war.

While we do face hard decisions, our goal, in TRADOC, is to sustain the excellence in that training and leader development.

We will not compromise our standards, and we will see to it that we provide the quality instructors and resources to ensure our soldiers and leaders get quality, tough, hands-on, performance-oriented leadership development.

Q: What lessons learned on the battlefield in recent operations have an impact on the way TRADOC now conducts training?

Franks: That's a good question. What we want to do is continue to learn and grow as an Army. The requirements of our Army have changed.

We are called on to do a wide variety of things, so we have to be sure that in our programs of instruction and in our training we remain sensitive to changes and requirements for missions for our Army so our training remains.

In our doctrine, for example, we have a whole category of missions that we call operations other than war. These can range anywhere from disaster relief to actual, sharp combat operations as we saw in Somalia in early October.

We have a lessons learned feedback system; each of the schools has one, with strong links to the Army in the field and the mission requirements. We put those lessons learned back in the school.

I think what we've seen in combat operations is our scenarios need to be relevant to the world as we see it. Cold War scenarios are out and we have a variety of other scenarios.

We have tailored our threats at our combat training centers so they can portray the variety of opposing forces our soldiers might run into around the world.

Q: What role do the six TRADOC battle labs play in training for potential conflicts?

Franks: We invented our battle labs so we could provide the Army a means to experiment with changes in methods of warfare and we needed to start those experiments where the battles appeared to be changing.

We took a good look at Operations Just Cause and Desert Storm and we saw places where the battle appeared to be changing — we call those battle dynamics. It was there we started our experiments and formed battlefield laboratories devoted to experimenting. Those particular laboratories are centered at: Fort Monroe, Va. (Early Entry, Lethality and Survivability); Fort Benning, Ga. (Dismounted Battlespace); Fort Knox, Ky. (Mounted Battlespace); Fort Sill, Okla. (Depth and Simultaneous Attack); Fort Leavenworth, Kan. (Battle Command); and Fort Lee, Va. (Combat Service Support).

The other thing we wanted to do was capture the great wisdom and experience of our soldiers and noncommissioned officers in these experiments.

One of the bedrock principles is we want to do our experiments with normal soldier and leader behavior and get feedback.

The battlefield laboratories are essentially that — they are laboratories in changing methods of warfare. We see an enormous effort going on right here at Fort Huachuca and the Intelligence Center, and I was very pleased to see the demonstration (at the integrated field training exercise site) and be able to talk to the people involved.

Q: How do you think the Battle Focus Center here interfaces with the six battle labs?

Franks: They are doing a terrific job. I couldn't be more pleased with the job that (the commanding general of the Intelligence Center and Fort Huachuca) and the whole team here is doing with the Battle Focus Center.

Military intelligence is an integral part of each one of our battlefield laboratories, so the Battle Focus Center can provide the necessary ideas, input and interface with all our battle labs.

But, over and above that, they are changing the way we do military intelligence on the battlefield through a lot of innovative experiments, changes in procedures and processes, and taking advantage of information-age technology.

The most exciting thing to me was when I saw the enthusiasm of the noncommissioned officers. All of the explanations and demonstrations at the integrated field training exercise site were done by noncommissioned officers. When you get that level of commitment and understanding, you get a lot of initiative and creativity, and then the magic happens.

Q: How do you feel the Noncommissioned Officer and Officer Education systems meet the training needs of the soldiers of today and tomorrow?

Franks: I believe our Noncommissioned Officer Education System and our Officer Education System and the structure are very sound. First, we have to ensure that the education and the leader development and training are demanding enough and relevant to the quality of our officers and noncommissioned officers so it challenges them.

Second, we must ensure it s relevant to the set of operational circumstances that our noncommissioned officers and officers will find themselves in. It is drastically different than it was just a few years ago, so that means changes in the methods by which we train and the substance of the training.

Third, we must see to it that we leverage some new learning technologies that can speed the learning process we see going on around the country. We are concentrating on ensuring there is relevance so our leaders have the benefit of developing in a system that is tuned in and right up to date with current requirements for our Army.

Q: Who will feel the greatest impact resulting from the re-engineering of TRADOC? How will they be affected?

Franks: Our whole goal goes back to training and leader development. The core essence of TRADOC is to ensure that we operate the best training and leader development institution we can to meet the needs of the United States Army.

As we are able, through information-age technology, to manage the Training and Doctrine Command at all our installations and integrate doctrine and training and organizational design in a flatter, more internetted way, we can combine headquarters and eliminate headquarters.

We can ensure all those resources that are saved are available for the core essence of the command, which is training and leader development.

In a sense, it's a strategy in TRADOC to flatten the organization so we can keep the focus and the energy on excellence in training at places like Fort Huachuca.

Q: What is the most significant change expected with the re-engineering of TRADOC?

Franks: It is more of an attitudinal change for the command, which requires more internetting, crosstalk and teamwork so you don t have everything moving in a hierarchical way — from Fort Huachuca to some other headquarters and finally working its way to Department of the Army

I already see this in the battlefield laboratories and the Battle Focus Center that has been created here, in a teamwork sense.

We'll see information moving around the command, such as our electronic-mail system, which has 21,000 users in the command. We are probably the most electronically internetted major command in the United States Army.

We can move information around at a speed that allows us to make adjustments so we can continue to meet the requirements of our Army and this rapidly changing world.

Local students visit post

By Jerrie MacIntire
Special to The Bayonet ©

Approximately 25 area high-school students got a closer look at the workings of the Army during a youth leadership program on post April 1.

Fort Benning Day was just one of five field days scheduled as part of Youth Leadership Columbus, a cooperative program between the Columbus Chamber of Commerce's, Leadership Columbus alumni and Columbus public and private schools.

Youth Leadership Columbus is designed to develop leadership skills by heightening awareness of community issues, developing problem-solving abilities and honing effective communications skills, according to Dr. Dell Karr, assistant superintendent for curriculum at Fort Benning Schools.

As part of the day's activities, the 11th-graders visited the 69th Regiment, attended a ranger demonstration at Victory Pond, had lunch at the Follow Me Dining Facility, toured the National Infantry Museum and visited Lawson Army Airfield for a helicopter display.

Jerrie MacIntire/Special to The Bayonet

Capt. Neil Wheeler, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment, talks with a group of students.

Fort Benning Day "helped highlight the tremendous impact Fort Benning has on the local community," Karr said.

This group of high school juniors has been involved throughout the year in activities designed to increase awareness of community resources and needs while improving leadership skills, Karr said.

Hospital conducts women's game

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

Martin Army Community Hospital celebrated Women's History Month March 29 by playing a trivia game.

The event, sponsored by the hospital Equal Opportunity Office, included trivia questions about famous females like Sally Ride, Sandra Day O'Connor, Elizabeth Dole and many others.

Participating hospital staffers were divided into two teams and competed to answer correctly the most of 23 questions.

The winners received hospital pens and headbands and also prizes donated from local businesses.

The idea for the game was conceptualized by Maj. Brenda Forman, MACH EO officer and her staff.

"The trivia game was something different instead of just getting a speaker and having lunch," said Forman.

Prizes were also handed out to individuals who correctly identified 40 famous women whose pictures were displayed on a hospital bulletin board.

Stephanie Krawczyk/Special to The Bayonet

Contestants answer questions in the Women's History Month trivia game.

Col. Michael J. Kussman, commander of the U.S. Army Medical Department Activity, helped Forman pass out prizes to the winners.

"What we're celebrating is a very important part of our society," he said. "Society, in general, has not recognized women enough for their contributions."

Soldiers from Sand Hill were present at a ribbon-cutting ceremony for their new Sand Hill Recreation Center Monday at 11 a.m.

The ceremony coincided with the Army Community of Excellence team visit and opens the permanent home of the recreation center.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, commanding general, opened the recreation center by saying, "We have the model (recreation center) for the Army."

The new recreation center is 29,000 square feet. Among its facilities are three large-screen television and movie rooms, an auditorium that seats 400 and eight sound modules for musicians to play drums and guitars, which can be checked out, or other instruments.

A snack bar, which will be open for lunch and dinner, will serve soups and sandwiches for lunch, and hamburgers, hot dogs and pizza for dinner. Two lounge areas and a small side lobby with pay telephones are also part of the recreation center.

ITB completes HQs self-help project

By Shelby Carr
Infantry Training Brigade

A ribbon-cutting ceremony for the self-help renovation project of Ouellette Hall, the Infantry Training Brigade Headquarters building, was March 31.

The ceremony signified the end of a self-help project that began last summer and ended in February with a total cost of $30,000.

Sgt. 1st Class Roy Evans, noncommissioned officer in charge, and his crew of holdovers from ITB completed the project with assistance from Dominick DeCarlo, chief of Unit Housing Support Branch, and Staff Sgt. Thomas Washington, a technical adviser from the 36th Engineer Group.

"The Army always looks like it got here yesterday and is leaving tomorrow," said Col. Theodore R. Severn, brigade commander. "We wanted to take the lead in bringing the Army into the 90's and providing a pleasant place to work for our soldiers and civilian employees."

Army Learning Centers

The Army Learning Centers at Soldiers' Plaza (Building 2611, 545-4447 or 545-2318) and Kelley Hill (Building 9005, 544-2503 or 544-2282) now have the following free video-based self-paced courses:

• Computer Literacy — This course provides a comprehensive explanation of the hows, whys and whats of computer hardware, software and peripherals. This course will help develop an overall, general understanding of what makes computers work (four hours).

• WordPerfect 5.1 Training Series — This comprehensive guide to the effective use of WordPerfect 5.1 includes everything from basic document creating through desktop publishing features. The course requires no previous word-processing experience (nine hours).

• Fundamentals of Personal Computer Technology — This course offers concise, easy-to-understand instruction on the most important features of the PC's actual components. Effective visuals, colorful analogies, work-related examples and plenty of hands-on practice provide viewers with the necessary skills to understand the base components of a PC. This series was developed in conjunction with the Intel Corporation (12 hours).

• Network concepts — This five-part series offers concise, easy to understand instruction on all the most important features associated with networks including local area networks and wide area networks (six hours). Available only at Soldiers' Plaza.

• Harvard Graphics 2.3 — This series also provides disk training to ensure a thorough understanding of this popular graphics software package (six hours).

Hours of operation are 8 a.m. to noon, 1 to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Soldiers, Department of the Army civilians, Reserve Components, retirees, nonappropriated fund employees, Army and Air Force Exchange Services employees and family members are authorized to use Army Learning Centers.

Is there power in numbers?

By Kenneth V. Carpenter
USAIC Chaplains' Office

reflections

We are often fascinated with numbers, as if numbers guaranteed quality of success. We shop in stores that cater to the masses by their size and advertising. As a society we deal in mass production — cars, fast food, furniture, etc.

If there is a crowd, join it. If there is a line, stand in it, so the philosophy goes. Majority rules, right; but is right determined by the might of raw numbers? Is what's ethical discerned by a mere plurality?

Then, too, we often think that we must have great numbers of people to really accomplish something. This simply is not true. In fact, just the opposite is often true. Most of the great books, plays, inventions and discoveries have been made by individuals with great vision, purpose and determination.

What if Washington had given up at Valley Forge and complained, "I am only one?" What if Lincoln had said, in the face of the Union's disintegration, "I am only one — how can I change the status quo?" They had their doubts, but they knew the power of one person to change things, to make a difference in their world.

Don't adopt an "I'm only one" attitude. Don't dwell on yourself. Focus on the project, or better, a part that you can do today — one that is manageable. Mountains are moved — not overnight, but day-to-day, a shovel at a time. Have a sense of time — a historical consciousness — understand that great things take time.

William James wrote, "I am done with great things and big things, great institutions, and big success and I am for those tiny invisible molecular forces that work from individual to individual creeping through the crannies of the world like so many rootlets, or like the capillary oozing of water, yet which, if you give them time, will rend the hardest monuments of man's pride."

Sometimes we "fail our way to success," as Thomas Edison said. Failure is just a critical step toward success — if you don't give up. Winston Churchill said, "Success is going from failure to failure without loss of enthusiasm."

Who can truly say what is a success or failure in the long run? Some things that appear as failure are really leaps forward. In a small parish in England years ago, the pastor reported to his superiors that year the parish had only one addition, one new member — that of a 10-year-old boy — David Livingstone, the famous African explorer.

The best way to turn failure into success requires belief in God. God has placed you where you are with a job to do, as a spouse, parent, soldier, civilian. Trust and obey him. He has put you here for a purpose. The above examples show the power of perseverance in spite of setbacks and failures. These people bloomed where they were planted. God is with you. He makes no mistakes.

"If you cannot plant a garden, sow a seed.

If you cannot feed all the hungry, fill one need.

The seed you sow may someday blossom and spread,

And your loaf supply a multitude with bread."

Leave the end result of your work and life with God. It is God who gives the increase — we plant and water. Leave your mark — but don't micromanage the result. Let it be — with God. "I am but one, built I am one; I cannot do much but I can do something; what I can do I ought to do; and what I ought to do, by the grace of God I will do."

Easter season: A time to take a hard look at ourselves

By Robert Thompson
Family Life Center

reflections

Even though Easter just passed us, I keep seeing that gaping dark hole at the foot of a Jerusalem hillside cemetary.

Two of his followers ran to see it (John 20:1-9). "They have taken the Lord," the woman told them only minutes before. When the faster runner gazed into the hole, he saw the burial clothes inside.

He stayed outside. He posted himself as some kind of detached lookout. We don't know why. Was he fearing the dark of thinking he'd find out the woman was wrong? Was he freezing himself with indecision or hesitating to move from his comfortable spot? We don't know. The slower runner arrived and went straight in.

Maybe slower running has its advantages. Many of us feel a fast and sometimes frantic pace in our living. Society seems to encourage the faster runner. Is that why we stop outside the door of the unknown? Why is it hard for us to leave our outside lookouts to enter the fullness of that gaping hole?

One reason seems to be our disbelief that an event could break the laws of nature. This seems tough to swallow for a lot of us. The way many experts use science today encourages resistance. We want to believe only what our five senses tell us. We respond like the man later in the Gospel story who said. "Unless I see the nail marks in his hands ... and put my hand into his side, I will not believe it."

But modern science doesn't fully account for much of our human life. No one has ever seen, for instance, wind or feelings or attitudes, but we all assume they exist.

I think a deeper reason has to do with ego. It's the same reason that prompted the story that the religious leaders spread when the Roman guards told them of the gaping hole. They said to tell the people his followers stole the body by night. It didn't matter that such a likelihood was ridiculous or far-fetched. Those religious leaders were protecting their own little kingdoms and they couldn't see what they would gain. Staying outside as lookouts helps us maintain our own comfortable status quo (and egos).

This leads me to the deepest reason we stay on lookout. I am reminded of a story I heard more than 20 years ago. A missionary spent quite a while answering questions about the gaping dark hole from a curious young man. The young man said he was satisfied with the answers but he wasn't interested. Why? "Frankly, it would mess up the way I'm living."

Though I'm disappointed with the young man's rejection, I have always applauded his honesty. Psychologists would say that the challenge is not cognitive but volitional — not what we know but what we choose to do.

John's account tells us that after the slower runner entered the gaping darkness, the faster runner also went in. He saw the empty clothes and grasped their meaning. Easter asks us to be honest. It's not a matter of clearing the confusion of the mind; it's more a matter of clearing the resistance of the heart. We are not a totally cerebral society, anyway. When it comes to Easter's offer, I don't think we're a willing one, either.

The real darkness may not be so much that of an empty tomb as it is that of any empty heart. What keeps us as outside lookouts? Why do we turn from gazing into the gaping hole? Perhaps it is the fear that we'll see a gaping hole in our souls. The gap that he who emptied the hole promises to fill.

crime watch

Military Police Activity

The following entries were extracted from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from March 8 to 21. Such entries may be incomplete and do not determine the guilt or innocence of any person.

This month's hot topic concerns impounded vehicles. Privately owned vehicles are subject to being impounded on Fort Benning for numerous reasons. The most common are driver's license and vehicle registration violations.

A vehicle will be impounded if Military Police determine the operator of the vehicle has no driver's license or if the operator's license is suspended or revoked. Vehicles will also be impounded if the vehicle registration has expired or if the operator has no proof of insurance.

Military Police will make every attempt to verify the status of a driver's license or registration before impounding a vehicle. Violators will be cited for the appropriate offense and can expect to pay for all towing and storage fees.

Blotter entries include:

• A sergeant was charged with wrongful use of a controlled substance.

• A civilian was charged with improper lane change and driving under the influence of alcohol after colliding with a fuel truck on Victory Drive. The fuel truck jack-knifed, ruptured its tank and spilled fuel on the roadway. No one was injured in the accident. The civilian was administered a breathalyzer test with a result of .18.

• A specialist was charged with reckless driving after being observed traveling at an excessive speed (73mph in a 35 mph zone).

• A family member was charged with being at Wilson School after 10 p.m.

• An officer was charged with sodomy and conduct unbecoming an officer after an investigation revealed that he committed numerous acts of sodomy with a family member whose husband was stationed in Korea.

• A sergeant was charged with animal abuse after he was observed repeatedly kicking his dog.

• A staff sergeant was charged with failure to obey a lawful order and leaving a child unattended after his 7-year-old daughter dialed 911 and stated that she was home alone.

• A private first class was charged with aggravated assault after he hit a private in the head several times with a broomstick and a 22-ounce beer bottle. The private first class was also charged with drunken and disorderly conduct and underage drinking after testing .22 on the intoximeter.

• A specialist was charged with aggravated assault after she hit another specialist in the face and on the body with a wooden support beam while they were passengers on the back of a 2 1/2-ton truck.

• A specialist was charged with having a traffic accident, speed excessive for conditions, reckless driving, and driving under the influence of alcohol, after investigation revealed that he was traveling approximately 120 to 130 mph on Highway 27. He lost control of his vehicle, went airborne for 125 feet and struck several trees. The specialist was admitted to the hospital with extensive head and stomach injuries.

• A private first class was charged with bigamy after it was discovered that he married one woman while legally married to another woman.

There are two booby prize awards this week. The first one goes to the sergeant who was observed traveling at an excessive speed (68 mph in a 45 mph zone). Military Police initiated a traffic stop and detected an odor of alcohol emanating from the sergeant. The sergeant was administered a breathalyzer test with a result of .15. Further investigation revealed that the sergeant's driving privileges were revoked in December for a previous driving under the influence of alcohol conviction. The sergeant was charged with DUI, excessive speed and failure to obey a lawful order.

The second booby prize goes to the sergeant first class who was observed by a bank teller in the drive-through lane of a bank. The teller notified police that the sergeant first class appeared to be intoxicated.

Police made contact with the sergeant first class and observed two open cans of beer in the front seat of his vehicle. The sergeant first class registered a .26 on an alcohol sensor test, but he later refused to take a breathalyzer test. The sergeant first class was arrested and charged with driving under the influence of alcohol and having an open container.

There are three top cops this week. The first one is Investigator Roger Kirsopp from the Military Police Investigations Section. Through his investigative efforts, Kirsopp identified seven family member juveniles who were involved in the theft, unlawful possession and unlawful discharge of two pistols that were previously reported stolen from family quarters.

The other top cops are Cpl. Michael Ziemer and Spc. Lee Lamb.

While operating radar on Highway 27, Ziemer and Lamb observed a vehicle traveling 68 mph in a 55 mph zone. They initiated a traffic stop and, after making contact with the driver, determined that the driver provided false information about his driver's license and Social Security number.

Ziemer and Lamb discovered that the driver provided the false information to avoid arrest, since he was wanted on an outstanding warrant for parole violations. The driver was apprehended and later released to the State Board of Pardons and Parole.

Other activities included 27 traffic accidents and eight cases of driving under the influence of alcohol. There were six shoplifting cases reported at exchange facilities and five cases of larceny of private property.

Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best — Give Crime Arrest." Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5223 or the "Crime in Progress" line at 545-2222.

ask the judge

Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Q: I have been to several dealerships in the area trying to purchase a motorcycle.

However, I keep getting turned down when it comes to financing.

The last dealership I visited informed me that it would not finance the motorcycle because of an outstanding debt owed to GMAC on my credit report. I have never financed anything from GMAC. How do I go about correcting my credit history report?

A: If you find an erroneous entry in your credit report, the credit bureau must check it and correct it for you. Your first step is to obtain a copy of your credit report if you do not already have one. Because you have been denied credit, the credit bureau will give you a copy of your credit report free of charge.

Once you have confirmed that there is a mistake in your report, send a letter to the credit bureau requesting it to investigate the entry.

The credit bureau will then contact the company reporting the derogatory information and have it verify the information. If the company cannot verify the entry, the credit bureau must remove it.

However, correct information about late payments can stay on your record for seven years. More severe credit problems, for example, bankruptcy, can stay on your record for up to 10 years.

If a company verifies the debt but you still dispute the amount or its validity, you can send a 100-word statement of explanation for the credit problem. This will ensure that future creditors can read your side of the story when they request your credit history.

Based on your statement they may decide to extend you credit despite the derogatory information.

Remember, when you make a correction on your credit file, make sure the correction is made at all three major credit bureaus (TRW, Equifax and Trans Union). Expect the verification process to take up to 30 days. The length of time it takes should improve once more credit bureaus and creditors start using an electronic dispute system that reduces the verification time to 10 days or less and automatically transmits credit file changes to all three credit bureaus.

As a preventive measure, you should get a copy of your credit report about once a year or before major credit purchases, and check it for inaccuracies. TRW will give each person one free credit report once a year so take advantage of its offer.

If you need more information or assistance in correcting your credit report, call the Legal Assistance Office at 545-3281.

dr. fit

U.S. Army Physical Fitness School

Q: There are many people around me who discourage me from exercising. They say exercising is bad for you. Is this true and who should exercise?

A: Adults should exercise to relieve stress, to control weight, to protect against heart disease, cancer, to control diabetes, to increase the chances of a healthy pregnancy and to decrease the complications associated with other serious illnesses.

Children should exercise to constructively let off steam, to grow healthier bodies, to reduce blood cholesterol if necessary, and to establish good lifetime fitness habits.

Older adults need to exercise to retain mobility, to maintain flexibility in the joints and strength in the bones and to stay independent.

Anyone who suffered a heart attack or coronary bypass surgery should exercise under a doctor's supervision to help prevent future heart problems.

Everyone wants to look better, feel better and be healthier. You should exercise, too, unless you are one on the very few people who have medical problems that prevent physical activity.

Q: Is it true that the benefits of estrogen therapy (during menopause) in preventing bone fractures is wiped out for women who smoke?

A: Yes. In the Annals of Internal Medicine, 1992, a study confirmed that smoking blocks optimum bone mass by reducing production of bone-protecting estrogen.

Also, research shows that women who smoke start menopause earlier than nonsmoking women.

Q: Is the nicotine patch successful in reducing the will to smoke?

A: Yes. Combined with counseling, the patch can be about twice as effective as a placebo, allowing 22 to 42 percent of smokers to abstain from smoking for over six months.

If you want to quit smoking, speak to your doctor about the patch process.

Q: Is there any evidence linking body fat and the risk of breast cancer in women?

A: Yes. Evidence has confirmed that breast cancer is far less common in athletes and physically active women than it is among their sedentary peers.

The reasons are less body fat and leaner women produce less of the active form of estrogen that promotes abnormal cell division. Also, the protective effects of exercise appears to outweigh the existence of known risk factors, such as hormone use and age.

community care

By Ken Franklin
Martin Army Community Hospital

Q: I saw a civilian doctor who wrote a prescription for a medicine that Martin Army Hospital doesn't carry. Why do I have to pay for it? Is there another medicine I can take that I won't have to pay for?

A: Every hospital, including Martin Army Hospital, has a formulary of approved drugs. The physician staff looks at all drugs in use and selects a set that safely, effectively and economically treats all common medical problems.

A special committee of physicians and pharmacists, called the Pharmacy and Therapeutics Committee, reviews each new medicine to decide whether to include it.

Any physician can propose a new change in the formulary. Old medicines are replaced with better ones; new medicines that cost more, but don't treat better, are left off.

This formulary is published and distributed to all military and civilian physicians in the Columbus area. Your civilian physician can get one by calling 544-1379. Usually, a medicine on the formulary will work as well or better than the one your physician prescribed.

Martin Army Hospital cannot substitute medications without your doctor's permission. As mentioned in a previous column, the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services can help you pay for prescriptions through civilian pharmacies.

What happens when a patient needs an unusual medication? At Martin Army Hospital, the physician requests a special drug order for that patient.

The pharmacy orders just enough medicine for that patient, preventing inventory waste. The special order is reviewed later by the Pharmacy and Therapeutics Committee to verify the need and suggest alternatives if they exist.

Only credentialed physicians on the staff of Martin Army Hospital are authorized to make special orders. This enables quality control of both the physician and the pharmacy.

As in every part of '90s health care, the challenge is to provide the best care without wasting money. The formulary system at Martin Army Community Hospital accomplishes this task.

world war II

Fifty years ago this week...

• Russian forces continued to surge across the Eastern Front, making widespread advances throughout the region for the fourth consecutive week and establishing a 60-mile front along the Siret River.

The most significant battle of the offensive this week centered around Odessa, which fell to the Soviets after several days of intense combat.

Other noteworthy gains included Simferpool, the capital of the Crimea, the ports of Feodosia and Yevpatoria and more than 200 towns within Rumania. Furthermore, Russian elements reached the Czechoslovakian border.

All told, the Soviet onslaught inflicted massive casualties, forcing the evacuation of more than 90,000 enemy troops and the disorganized withdrawal of many more after five beleaguered German divisions became trapped north of Razdelnaya, 40 miles above Odessa.

• In Burma, British Gen. Sir William Slim decided upon the need for an Allied counteroffensive after a lengthy retreat necessitated by the recent strong Japanese advances.

As usual, he formulated his relief plans relying on the continued air resupply of the encircled troops at Imphal and Kohima and the guerrilla operations of the Chindits against enemy lines of communication and various additional targets of opportunity.

• Fort Benning announced that a study acknowledged the successful efforts of the post's Parachute School cadre in reducing training injuries to less than 1 percent during the course's rigorous jump week.

TIPS FOR MAKING YOUR AD MORE EFFECTIVE

- Start Your ad with the item you are selling, service you are offering, or job title you are looking to hire.
- Be descriptive. The more information you provide to the reader, the better the responses will be to your ad.
- Use bold type, white space of decorative characters such as stars, to bring attention to your ad.
- Run your ad for an ample length of time. Remember, as soon as you get results, you can cancel at any time .
- Always include the price of your item.

Alley is 'David's Mother' in CBS drama

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

Comedy was her mainstay during her years on "Cheers," but drama certainly isn't alien to Kirstie Alley.

In fact, she was an alien in her first major role, playing a Vulcan lieutenant in the 1982 movie "Star Trek II: The Wrath of Khan." She followed that with serious-themed projects as the first two "North and South" miniseries and a Los Angeles stage production of "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof," then became an Emmy-winner for her weekly role as Rebecca Howe, a fixture of the Boston bar "where everybody knows your name."

However, Alley returns to non-humorous turf with "David's Mother," Sunday's new CBS film in which she stars as the thoroughly devoted parent of a youth who has autism (portrayed as a child by Steve Ivany, who actually is autistic, and by Michael Goorjian in older years).

Though she projects a bright attitude, she is so totally committed to the boy that she either ignores the needs of others close to her, or makes demands on them that are near-impossible to meet. That is borne out by her troubled relationships with her ex-husband (Chris Sarandon) and daughter (sisters Amanda and Renessa Blitz, sharing the part at different ages), and she fails to see that she might be thwarting David's development through her overprotection. However, two people — a compassionate social worker (Phylicia Rashad) and a new romantic interest (Sam Waterston) — ultimately help her come to grips with David's life, as well as with her own.

What: 'David's Mother'
When: Sunday, 9 p.m on CBS

Adapted from his own play by stage veteran ("6 RMS RIV VU") and "Kate & Allie" alumnus Bob Randall, the tale also features recent Oscar nominee Stockard Channing ("Six Degrees of Separation") as the Alley character's sister.

Recalling all the dramas that she had done before she took the spot vacated in 1987 by Shelley Long's departure from "Cheers," the candid and spirited Alley says, "I would ask my agent to send me up on (auditions for) movies that were comedies, and the people involved would say, 'Why would we see her? She's not a funny person.' Now, that just makes me laugh. Whatever people saw you in last, that's who you are to them. I've only been doing this (acting) for about 12 years, so how can people really know everything I can do?"

Given that, Alley assesses "David's Mother" as "the biggest opportunity I've had in acting, period. It's a wonderful story, really well-told, and the director (Robert Allan Ackerman) was a dream to work with because he's so insightful. He knew exactly what he wanted and how to get it, and that was really refreshing. Also, this is a 'small' film, and for CBS to be brave enough to do it was pretty commendable. If I'd either killed the son or had an affair with him, that would be a typical TV-movie."

75th rangers receive final awards for Somalia

By Caejar A. Cox
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Rangers from the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, received their final awards for their actions in Somalia in a ceremony on Peden Field April 1. The rangers were engaged in their fiercest fighting since the Vietnam war Oct. 3 and 4 in Mogadishu, Somalia. Watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday for highlights of the event.

The Army Communitites of Excellence team arrived at Fort Benning Sunday night prepared to experience everything Fort Benning has to offer.

USAIC-TV Schedule

Choomba cradles her baby, Kudzu, born Feb. 8 in the Ford African Rain Forest at Zoo Atlanta.

Shower set for Willie B.'s baby

Zoo Atlanta

Zoo Atlanta will have a baby shower Sunday to celebrate the arrival of Willie B. and Choomba's new baby, Kudzu. Willie B. and Choomba are among the 19 gorillas living in the zoo's Ford African Rain Forest.

As part of the shower, the zoo will feature face painting, storytelling, musical entertainment and more.

Kudzu was the name selected by a zoo judging panel from more than 60,000 entries in the "Name the Gorilla" contest.

In the contest, Kudzu captured more votes than second place Kasima with 17,324 votes. Other runners-up were Bamboo, Atondu, Atlanta/Atlantis and Cameroon. In all more than 104,000 people participated in the contest.

The sex of the baby has not been determined.

"The birth of this gorilla is the fulfillment of our highest hopes and dreams for Willie B., but it is also much more than that," said Dr. Terry L. Maple, zoo director. "It is a high point for all Atlanta and another step toward the conservation of this magnificent endangered species."

Kudzu is the sixth gorilla baby born at Zoo Atlanta and is Choomba's second.

Discount admission for the baby shower will be offered to children and the winners from the naming contest will be introduced also.

To get to Zoo Atlanta, take I-85 to downtown Atlanta, then take I-20 East and take the first exit, which is Exit 26. Follow the Zoo Atlanta signs to Grant Park where there is free parking.

Admission is $7.50 for adults, $5 for children (3 to 11), children under 3 free. Senior citizens get a $1 discount. Discount tickets are available at ITR.

For more information, call (404) 624-5630.

Chehaw Park featuring River Days

Three-day event features arts, crafts, music and children's activities

Chehaw's River Days at a glance

When: Today through Sunday

Where: Chehaw Wild Animal Park, Albany, Ga.

Admission: $1 (children under 6 free)

For information: Call (912) 430-5168

The ninth annual River Days filled with arts and crafts, carnival rides and plenty of music will be at Chehaw Wild Animal Park today through Sunday.

The three-day event will also include clogging, 10 different musical groups, a youth drill team on horseback and children's activities.

The $1 admission fee (children under 6 free) includes entrance to the wild animal park and all the festival activities. "Friday in the Park" sponsored by Miller and WJAD will kick off the festival at 8 p.m. with a rock 'n' roll band.

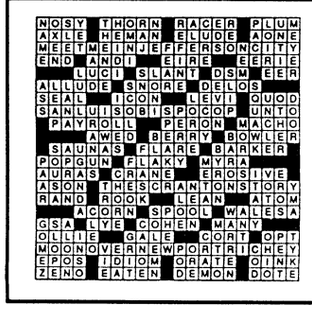
The Belk Diaper Derby will start off the activities at 10 a.m. Saturday as well as arts and crafts, clowns, face painting and food booths.

Geren Shows will provide carnival rides from until 6 p.m.

Music will highlight River Days at Chehaw. Music on Saturday will include contemporary country, oldies and rock. Sunday's bands include The Three Richards and Lawmaker all from Albany, plus Trinket from Athens who has had a music video on MTV, and The Circle from Atlanta.

River Days will have a father and son playing in two different bands. Russell Martin, lead singer for the oldies band Relapse, will perform at 4 p.m. Saturday, while his son, who plays for The Three Richards, will play on Sunday.

The city of Albany will provide transportation from the Albany James H. Gray Sr. Civic Center parking lot to Chehaw Park every 30 minutes during festival hours for $1 per person.



Applications for arts and crafts booths are still available. Booth rental rates are $50 to $90. Commercial booth rentals are $190 to $200.

Prices are based on the size and number of days the booth will be rented.

For information or booth application, call (912) 430-5168.

Chehaw Wild Animal Park is located in Albany, Ga. From U.S. 82 on the bypass in Albany, take U.S. 19 South to Jefferson Street and bear to the left. At stop sign, make right onto Philema Road and follow the Chehaw wild Animal Park signs.

Westville plans spring festival

Westville Historic Handicrafts Inc.

Westville has officially begun Spring Festival in the village. The activities will continue through Tuesday with special music and crafts demonstrations.

In the preindustrial South, with its basically agricultural society, the return of spring meant plowing, planting and preparing that year's crop.

At Westville, activities will be no different as mules plow ground to prepare the gardens for planting. There will also be demonstrations of other activities in addition to the regular demonstrations of blacksmithing, pottery, quilting, spinning, weaving, basketmaking and woodworking.

Spring in 1850 was not just a time for hard work but for celebrations as well as music played an important part in the various activities. Music will be heard during the weekend of the festival.

A carriage house sale will be Saturday in the Westville Court House.

Westville is open for special events, Mondays through Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and 1 to 5 p.m., Sundays.

For more information, write to Westville, P.O. Box 1850, Lumpkin, Ga. 31815, or call (912) 838-6310.

Benning now world champ

Top ACOE award brings post $1.5M

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

"We won it all!

"Fort Benning is the best militarv installation in the world. Every member of the team deserves credit. You clearly demonstrated that we are the Super Bowl champions. The entire community will benefit from your dedication, spirit and professionalism. Hooah!"

This was the message Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White sent to Fort Benning from the National Training Center at Fort Irwin, Calif., after learning that the post had won the Commander in Chief's Award as best Army installation in the world.

White was notified of the award Monday as he viewed training at NTC. Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan, Army chief of staff delivered the news to White by phone Monday.

Col. Burnet R. Quick, Fort Benning chief of staff, officially announced the win Tuesday at a press conference in Infantry Hall.

"We really want to thank civilians in the tri-community who assisted us," Quick said. "Support from the community was a major element in our winning this award."

His sentiments were echoed by Mayors Frank Martin of Columbus and Sonny Coulter of Phenix City, who stood with Quick in a show of solidarity at the conference.

Col. Stephen G. Trent, chief of the Army Communities of Excellence evaluation team, said, "Fort Benning was selected as the best out of 13 installations — the 13 best installations in the Army."

Fort Benning will be recognized as best of the best at two ceremonies at the Pentagon — the Army award will be presented May 19 and the Department of Defense's Commander in Chief Award, along with a trophy and a DoD installation of excellence flag, will be presented May 20.

Meanwhile, according to Sarah McLaney, ACOE coordinator, the packet for the next Training and Doctrine Command competition is almost ready to send.

"It's a year-round job when you're a winner," she said.

'Home of the Infantry's' history of excellence

- Installation: First place, Training and Doctrine Command, extra-large installation category.
- Activities: Best in TRADOC for strategic planning (directorates of Public works, Community Activities and Resource Management), Civilian Personnel, Equal Employment Opportunity, Adjutant General, staff Judge Advocate, Resource Management and Community Activities

- Installation: First place, TRADOC, extra-large installation category. First place, Department of the Army, large category, $1 million award.
- Activities: Best in TRADOC for DPW (engineering services), DCP, EEO, AG, Chaplains, Public Affairs, DRM and DCA Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel Awards, world titles for DCP, best civilian personnel services; AG, best military personnel services — additional $50,000 each.

1994

- BEST ARMY INSTALLATION in the WORLD — $1.5 MILLION

Last year's ACOE monies continue to improve post

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet

While Fort Benning revels in this year's ACOE win, the tangible benefits of the $1 million received in 1993 for being named Best Large Installation can be seen all around post.

All of the award money has been allocated for approximately 15 projects, some completed, others still in the preliminary stages.

Soldiers lounging on furniture at the newly opened Sand Hill Recreation Center or children using new playground equipment are enjoying the benefits of ACOE dollars.

Improvements are ongoing in post gymnasiums and Soldiers' Plaza. The Riverwalk Recreation Trail extension, which is currently under construction, is funded by $300,000 of last year's award money.

Allocation of the money from this year's win will be decided by the same process used for the 1993 award, according to Maj. Chuck Walls, garrison executive officer.

Fort Benning soldiers, civilians and family members will again be asked to complete a "wish list," prioritizing improvements they would like to see on post.

"The system used to allocate the (1993 ACOE money) was a fair, comprehensive and very deliberate process," said Walls.

"We plan to include all the people on the installation in the decision process, with a goal of benefiting the entire community," he said.

Income tax deadline today

Help available for late filers

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Free assistance with tax form preparation by Legal Assistance Office personnel will be available at the Main Post Post Office today from 6 p.m. to midnight.

Legal Assistance Office employees will be available to help prepare state and federal tax forms and answer questions for soldiers, retirees and family members.

Anyone needing assistance should bring along all necessary paperwork and any tax forms they may have received, officials said.

For more information, call 545-3281.

Extensions also available

People who need more time to get their tax data together beyond today's federal tax filing deadline can do so by filing for a four-month extension with the Internal Revenue Service today.

The IRS stresses, though, that the extension is only an extension of time to file a tax return and not an extension of time to pay any taxes owed.

Any due taxes should be estimated and paid at the time the extension request is filed.

The extension request is usually submitted on the one-page IRS Form 4868, "Application for Automatic Extension of Time To File U.S. Individual Income Tax Return." It is available at IRS offices, libraries, post offices and banks.

Information on extensions is available in the tax package with the 1040 tax forms or by calling (800) 829-1040.

School implements new type of test for officer candidates

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

The Officer Candidate School has introduced a new phase of training for its candidates. It's called the OCS challenge. The OCS challenge took place for only the second time April 4 to 6 at Fort Benning.

"This helps foster the spirit of competition between platoons," said TAC officer Capt. Carlos G. Berrios, 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, (Officer Candidate School).

For three straight days, candidates are tested and retested on specific skills they are taught over the cycle.

Candidates are tested on their training skills. Drill and ceremony, weapons inspection, five-mile run, military qualification standards one, a physical fitness test and day and night navigation, said Berrios.

"This gives the candidates the opportunity to work on those individual perishable skills like their common tasks," he said.

Common tasks include first-aid, putting on an M-17 protective mask, locating mines and setting up claymore mines.

These tasks were pulled from the prior class study of the OCS candidates, said Sgt. 1st Class Kevin R. Overman, operations sergeant for 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, (OCS).

"All we do is test the retention of the candidates by (challenging) them on everything they learn over the cycle," Overman said.

Overman said his task is to pick and choose from the different subjects the candidates learn over the cycle.

The candidates were informed of the tasks involved with the OCS challenge approximately two weeks before the challenge took place, Overman said.

The candidates are expected to train for those events.

Events are scored with the first-place platoon receiving five points, the second-place platoon netting two points and the third place platoon getting one point, Berrios said.

In the first OCS challenge, Berrios said, the point system was set up differently after the first

Conduct, not orientation, key to homosexual policy — Dorn

By Jim Garamone
American Forces Information Service

After a delay, the Department of Defense's new homosexual policy is now in effect.

Edwin Dorn, assistant secretary of Defense for personnel and readiness, believes it is a policy all service members can support. At the base is the "don't ask, don't tell, don't pursue" policy proposed in December by former Secretary of Defense Les Aspin and endorsed by President Bill Clinton.

"What we've tried to do is make it absolutely clear that what concerns us is a person's conduct," Dorn said. "We want every American to have an opportunity to serve in the military subject only to his or her willingness to abide by the military's standards of conduct."

Dorn said the policy supports unit cohesion and readiness. "What we've said is, if you conduct yourself badly, you're out," Dorn said. "If you conduct yourself according to our rules, we will respect your privacy and we expect you to respect the privacy of others.

"This policy is the kind all military personnel can respect," he said. "What it says is that we respect individual rights — including the right to privacy. But it also says we have standards we expect you to live up to.

"Military personnel want their individual rights respected, but they also know there is a code of conduct to which everyone has to adhere," he said. "I think this policy will go down well if seen in that light."

The new policy was supposed to be effective in early February. Dorn said there were many small details to work out.

"We fashioned department policy, then the (military) services had to respond with policies of their own," Dorn said.

"Whenever that process occurs there's a possibility of miscommunication or of some significant differences in interpretation, and that's what we were trying to work out," he said.

Some golfers should be flogged

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

commentary

Singapore is not the only place flogging is permitted. I should know. I flog every time I step onto the Follow Me Flog, er Golf Course.

All I can say is golf is a four-letter word.

I'll admit it. I play infantry golf. I spend my time in the woods. Wait-a-minute vines snare my clothes and hidden branches poke my eyes.

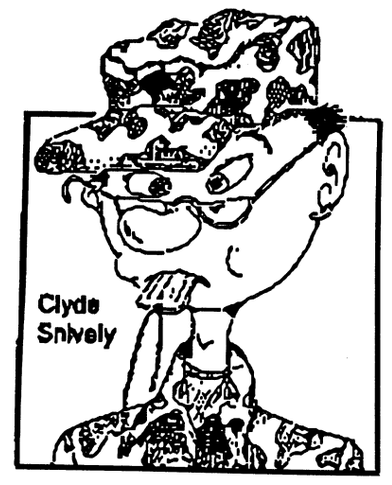
I do a lot of terrain association walks. Caejar once recommended that I carry a map and compass in my bag along with a machete.

Fairways are what I read about in golf magazines. I hear they consist of grass and are free of rocks, branches and other obstructions.

Unfortunately, just like my milieu, the deep woods, they aren't litter free.

I used to think one reason for playing golf was to become one with nature, to savor lush greens and fairways (that you didn't have to mow), catch sight of soaring hawks, the grazing deer and escape from the hustle and bustle of every day life.

Not so.



Too many people use it as an excuse to go on a drinking binge —"How many beers can I consume over an 18-hole period?"

They abuse the golf carts and the golf course. They toss their styrofoam cups and beer cans wherever they may be when the container reaches empty.

Even paper drinking cups at the water points lie strewn about the trash receptacles. It's hard to imagine why these keen-eyed, sure-handed, highly coordinated golfers can't manage to ring the basket with their cups. But granted the occasional miss, what prevents them from bending over, picking up their trash and putting it in the basket?

I know they can bend over. They have to in order to tee up the ball, or get it out of the cup.

I often marvel at the manners of some of our golfers. I've noted that some of them do not think rules pertain to them. They drive their carts on fairways they aren't supposed to be on. Some even practically park on the greens despite signs that tell them "no carts."

They forget, or don't care that here are other golfers on the course. Often other golfers who would like a modicum of silence while they are trying to strike the ball. Yes, voices, especially command voices, carry quite nicely on the golf course.

Some golfers either don't care or don't realize that they should allow faster groups to play through when they begin to lag more than a hole behind the group in front of them.

And you know those marks your balls make on the greens, there's a special tool designed to repair them. If you don't own one, a tee will serve the same purpose.

Oh yes, guess what. Just because range balls go onto the fairway, or get hit beyond the fence and lie along the road, doesn't mean they now become common property. They still belong to the golf course and taking them is stealing. And that even includes walkers, joggers and bicyclists who stop along First Division Road to help themselves to the balls.

Speaking of stealing, it's also stealing to pay cart fees for one person then have two ride. And don't beat up the marshal or starter who catches you. Instead, hang your head in shame and pay up or leave the course.

Golf is a great activity. It can be enjoyed by the duffer just as much as by the low-handicapper, but only as long as we show some considerations to the other golfers and take care of our course.

dial 545-boss

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for soldiers to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere. While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies established to provide assistance, the line offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders.

The Bayonet is now featuring some of the calls that may benefit other members of the Fort Benning community.

☎ Call: I would appreciate it if the roadside checks would be done during duty hours, not on people's off-duty time.

Some people have children to pick up, which costs them more if they're late, and some people have appointments to get to.

Military Police Activity response:

Checkpoints are conducted at the discretion of the installation commander. They are an integral part of the program to ensure a safe environment and good quality of life at Fort Benning.

The checkpoints are conducted in order to reduce the pilferage of government property, weapons being carried in automobiles and other actions that affect the welfare of families working and living on the installation.

☎ Call: I am a concerned cook.

Last year, Fort Benning sent a team of 12 to the culinary art competition. This year the post only sent four.

With this being a large installation that's won $1 million, I do not see why Fort Benning didn't send a team of 12.

The competition is the only time cooks can show their skills in their military occupational specialty.

It's a good competition and I believe the team should be 12.

Directorate of Logistics, Supply and Services Division, response:

Because of Fort Benning's deployment mission, a Culinary Arts Team was not formed during fiscal 1992 and 1993.

Fort Benning has never had 12 qualified personnel to send to the competition . Eight personnel did compete in fiscal 1991 and won a total of five medals.

Five personnel were qualified to be entered in the fiscal 1994 competition. Qualified candidates who could be released from their command for training were added to the list of competitors.

Grunge guru takes problems to the grave

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

commentary

Kurt Cobain, who shot himself a week ago, was the guru of "grunge"— a style of music, dress and attitude that's hard to define but easy to recognize.

The music is driving, droning and incomprehensibly compelling, with lyrics that are often repetitious and nearly always nearly impossible to understand.

The dress ranges from scruffy to ragged, with hair long and slightly greasy.

Attitude, though, is the essence of grunge, and the key to Cobain's impact. Cynical, pessimistic and obscure, Cobain's attitude, persona and reputation were all reflected in his dark, screaming music.

As songwriter, lead singer and prime mover of the rock band Nirvana, Cobain was one of the more jagged edges in the entertainment industry's mosaic of popular culture. He was notoriously uncomfortable with his glaring, life-in-the-headlines fame, and sought oblivion (or, as his wife said, "numbness,") in drugs and alcohol.

Some now speculate that his recent, much-publicized drug- and alcohol-induced coma was a suicide attempt. Cobain talked repeatedly about killing himself, even including suicide as a theme in his music:

Look on the bright side is suicide
and
I lie in the soil and fertilize mushrooms

are a few examples.

And while most people over 30 may never have heard of Cobain, Nirvana, Seattle bands or grunge, and couldn't care less, the singer had a semi-divine status with a large segment of the teen-to-20s population.

Suicide is a dangerous theme to present to this audience, as people in their teens and early 20s are more likely than any other age group to take their own lives. Unfortunately, their idols are often as ill-equipped to deal with life as they are.

Dealing with the death of an idol may be an almost inescapable part of growing up; certainly American teens, past and present, have had plenty of opportunity to practice. Accident, illness, overdose and suicide seem to claim a disproportionate percentage of our entertainers at an early age.

Talent — for music, acting or anything else — isn't necessarily accompanied by maturity, wisdom or the ability to cope. These are the things we must find a way to teach our teens, the things so many never seem to learn.

The most disturbing thing about suicide is also the most disturbing element of grunge — hopelessness. A state of mind that can see no way out, no way for things to get better, is all too literally a dead end. In the self-absorption and overwhelming ego that are typical of teen-agers (and rock stars) personal problems loom larger than anything else in the world.

Teen-agers historically simply won't believe anyone has ever suffered like they have. In Cobain's isolated death and despondent suicide note we may see a warning to those who can only see the dark side: get some perspective, reach out to the people around you, or you too may find death the only "nirvana" you ever reach.

Stand up for safety May 26

Fort Benning continues to save lives and preserve resources by fostering safe attitudes and implementing risk management. To further advance our goal of providing a safe and healthful place for us to work and live, I am designating May 26 as Stand Up for Safety Day. If essential training or critical events preclude participation on this day, commanders may designate an alternate date.

Commanders and directors will plan and conduct programs relevant to their mission. The program should include a review of accident causes and participation in a variety of safety related activities. A schedule of planned activities for this event must be submitted to this headquarters, ATTN: ATZB-SO by May 2.

We owe each soldier and employee our best effort in ensuring their safety. Follow me, safely!

Post names Bldg 35 Ridgway Hall

By Devon Kerbow
School of the Americas

The headquarters building of the School of the Americas, Building 35, was named Ridgway Hall after Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway April 8.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, commanding general, hosted the ceremony and commandant of the U.S. Army War College Maj. Gen. William A. Stofft was guest speaker.

The dedication was White's idea. He said he suggested Ridgway for a variety of reasons.

"He loved soldiers more than anyone else I know," White said. "He was a great soldier and that's the reason we're dedicating this building to him."

In White's introduction, he said Stofft's background as a combat leader and historian made him the right person to speak of the general who is listed so often in U.S. history.

"I came here today because I feel very much a part of this," Stofft said, noting that this was his third visit to the building.

Stofft related numerous anecdotes and biographical facts about Ridgway during the 30-minute ceremony.

"My image of General Ridgway — every inch a soldier," Stofft said. "A man with presence. The word legendary comes to mind," he added, noting that the word legendary seems to appear in all the biographies written on Ridgway.

Ridgway was no stranger to Central and South America, Stofft said. Some of his time there was spent with the 33rd Infantry in the Panama Canal Zone. In addition, Ridgway had also been on several advisory tours to Nicaragua and Panama. This made him a particularly appropriate choice for namesake of the School of the America's building, he said.

Stofft also spoke of how Ridgway assumed command of a demoralized U.S. Army during the Korean War, halted the Communists and restored the 38th parallel.

Ridgway's other notable commands and positions included the 82nd Airborne Division with which he parachuted into Normandy, France, in 1944; Army deputy chief of staff in 1949; supreme commander for the Allied Powers in Japan; and commander of U.S. forces in the Far East. In 1952, President Harry Truman appointed him as supreme commander of the Allied Powers in Europe. Ridgway became U.S. Army chief of staff in 1953 and held that position until his retirement in 1955.

Stofft commented how pleased Ridgway would have been at having this building dedicated to him because, "He was the consummate infantryman."

White and Stofft concluded the ceremony by unveiling the portrait of Ridgway that will be displayed inside the main entrance of Ridgway Hall.

Camp Merrill, 5th RTB to add museum

By Phil Rosso
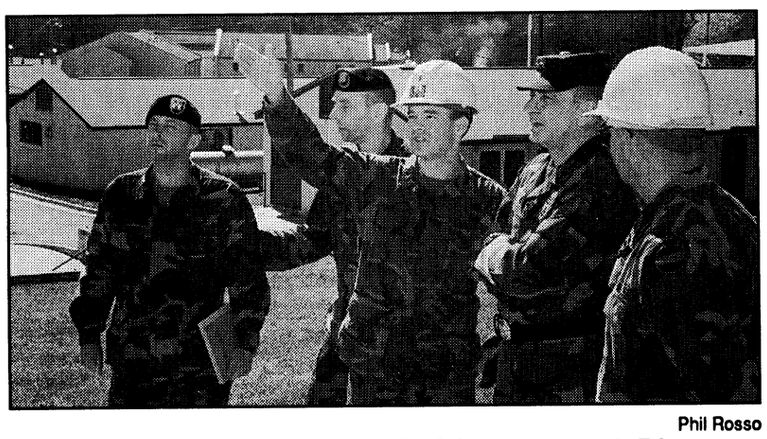
5th Ranger Training Battalion



Camp Frank D. Merrill, home of the 5th Ranger Training Battalion, is adding a museum.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, Fort Benning's commanding general, visited the construction site March 29.

Camp Merrill, which supports the mountain phase of Ranger School, is located in the Appalachian Mountains about an hour north of Atlanta.

The idea to build a museum that preserved the history of the camp and of mountain ranger training initially came from White in the spring of 1993.

"At first, the plan was to use one of the original 'green huts' that housed ranger students prior to 1989," said Lt. Col. Ralph D'Elousa, the battalion commander. "But because of their age, the best plan was to build a new replica using U-Do-It funds and give the troops something truly to be proud of," he said.

The expertise of 1st platoon, Company B, 43rd Engineer Battalion, was employed to construct the replica. Initial construction was completed by April 1; and, with the help of Dick Grube of the National Infantry Museum, work will soon begin on the exhibits.

Anyone who has any memorabilia that they wish to contribute to the Camp Frank D. Merrill Museum should contact Capt. Albert C. Stahl at 545-2415. The museum is expected to be officially be opened around July.

Post volunteers to be recognized

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

National Volunteer Week will be celebrated at Fort Benning with a recognition ceremony April 22 on the lawn of Riverside, home of the commanding general, Maj Gen. Jerry A. White and his wife, Linda.

The event is conducted annually to honor individuals who donate their time and service to various organizations and units on post and in Columbus.

Certificates of appreciation will be given to all volunteer agencies and units to be presented to their respective volunteers.

Several individuals will also be specially recognized for "going above and beyond the call of duty," according to Olga MacLean, installation volunteer coordinator.

White will present them with the Commander's Certificate of Appreciation for Patriotic Civilian Service.

"We want our volunteers to know that at the highest level we care about our volunteers and appreciate their efforts," said MacLean.

A symbolic check will also be presented to White representing the money saved through the service of volunteers in the community. Last year the amount topped $3 million.

The ceremony will begin at 4 p.m. In the event of inclement weather it will be moved to the Officers' Club.

Volunteerism benefits community

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

"Any definition of a successful life must include service to others," said former president George Bush.

At Fort Benning, there are a multitude of opportunities to serve others and the community through volunteerism.

Olga MacLean, installation volunteer coordinator, manages the recruitment and placement of personnel in the more than 3,000 volunteer positions at Fort Benning and in Columbus.

"The volunteer presence on Fort Benning has been critical in the success of all community and family support programs," said MacLean.

Volunteersim is not only beneficial to the community, but also to the person donating his or her time.

Frequent relocations, an integral part of the military lifestyle, often make it difficult to manage a career for many family members. Volunteer positions can provide an opportunity to maintain proficiency between paid positions and also to learn valuable new skills.

It's also a great way to meet people at a new duty station or provide an opportunity to get out of the house. In many cases, childcare costs are paid during the hours spent volunteering on post.

Experience gained through volunteerism can also benefit when searching for paid employment.

"Many employers view volunteer time as valuable experience," said MacLean. Her office will assist volunteers with writing up their experience to include in a resume.

For more information about volunteer opportunities, call the Volunteer Center at 545-5602.

volunteers needed

Volunteer Resource Center

The Fort Benning Volunteer Resource Center promotes volunteerism by recruiting potential volunteers, by retaining active volunteers and by recognizing the contribution of volunteers to the quality of life of soldiers and families.

There are many volunteer opportunities available through the center as follows:

• Volunteers are needed at the Thrift Shop on Tuesdays and Thursdays between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. Individuals will gain retail experience while helping others. Free child care is provided for up to two children.

• Santa's Castle needs volunteers on Wednesdays from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. to help clean and refurbish toys. A volunteer is particularly needed to sew baby doll and Barbie clothes. Child care costs are provided.

• Fort Benning Schools are looking for a volunteer lifeguard and water safety instructor to assist in the Adaptive Aquatics Program for exceptional children to be Thursday and April 28 and May 4, 12, 19 and 26 from 12:15 to 3 p.m.

• Sayers Memorial Library needs volunteers to assist with shelving books, data entry and story time for children.

Also, volunteers with experience in activity program planning, dramatic reading and counseling are encouraged to participate in the Multiple Reading Program this summer. Child-care costs will be provided.

Volunteers are needed in each housing area to assist the community mayor. Persons interested can contact a community life center.

• The Public Affairs Office needs an editorial assistant to assist the print section in publishing The Bayonet.

This product supports Army families through disseminating community news and command information to all Fort Benning families in The Bayonet newspaper, delivered free to all on-post housing units and by subscription to those living off post.

Interested persons must have typing ability, and knowledge of computer word processing systems is preferred but not required. Good communication skills and command of the English language are required.

Education or experience in print journalism is preferred but not required. Also, the individual must be familiar with the Army and Fort Benning.

For more information, call 545-2201.

Other volunteer announcements are as follows:

• The Rape Crisis Intervention Program is looking for volunteers. Training and child-care costs are provided.

• The First Steps Program needs volunteers to mentor and assist new mothers during the first few days or weeks after the birth of their children. Training and child-care costs are provided.

• Big Brothers and Big Sisters of Columbus needs adults to share love, support and time with children from single-parent families. For more information, call 327-3760.

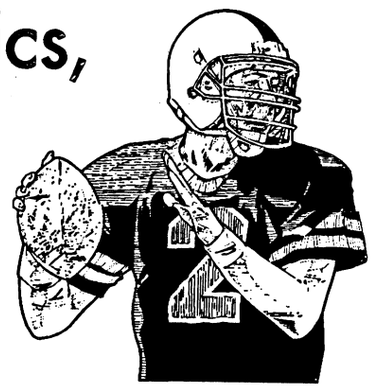
• Project Voice needs volunteers to serve as tutors, mentors and coaches to work with youths.

Individuals working in this program will serve as role models through their efforts in sports, educational and recreational programs. For more information, call Tony Adams at 571-4975 or 571-4976.

• The Fish and Wildlife Management office needs sports-minded volunteers to work at the deer-check station, feed the catfish in Russ Pond and perform other duties.

• The Combined Communities of Southeast Columbus is looking for volunteers for its tutorial program for Saturday mornings. Contact Lonnie Jackson at 687-5357.

• The Volunteer Resource Center is located in Building 359, Family Unit Network Center, and it is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p .m.



Persons interested in volunteering can visit or call Olga MacLean, installation volunteer coordinator, at 545-5602.

Hospital polls health care needs

Martin Army Community Hospital officials seek input for new program

Martin Army Community Hospital

More than 10,000 active duty and retired families residing within a 40-mile radius of Fort Benning have been selected at random to participate in a special survey being conducted on behalf of Martin Army Community Hospital.

The surveys were placed in the mail earlier this past week and include a cover letter, questionnaire, response form and a self-addressed reply envelope.

If you were identified to participate in this survey, but you did not receive a complete packet, call 544-3461 or 544-1347.

Hospital officials are asking those selected to follow the printed instructions and to disregard the suspense date printed on the questionnaire and return the response form as soon as possible.

The survey should take no more than 10 to15 minutes to complete.

The Department of Defense is in the process of establishing a legislature-directed contract to manage or provide health care for the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services and Medicare eligible beneficiaries in Georgia, South Carolina and Florida.

Much of the details of the new program, designated Tricare, are in the working phase.

Officials at MACH are interested in knowing what type of program its CHAMPUS-eligible population would prefer based upon the information currently available.

The Chattahoochee Valley area will be the only area surveyed in the three-state region.

Therefore, this survey is the best way beneficiaries can let their opinions be known to those individuals developing the Tricare Program, officials said.

Lawson Army Airfield paves the (run)way

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

Lawson Army Airfield has new pavement on an old runway.

The runway, said Richard W. Chancey, chief of the Construction Inspection Branch for the Directorate of Public Works, 8,200 feet in length.

"What usually takes a year, we did in six months," said W.R. Turner, project manager for Robinson Paving Company, which did the paving of the runway.

All parties seemed overjoyed about the final outcome of this project, said Stephen A. Magner, contract administrator for the Directorate of Contracting.

The beginning of the project had a bit of a rocky start, Magner said.

Within days of giving the contractor the go ahead for beginning work, Magner said, a problem under the old pavement was found.

Problems with the depth underneath the pavement, along with numerous temperature and rain delays, kept the contractor from beginning work on time, Magner said. "They (the contractor) were given the go ahead in October, but didn't get started until December."

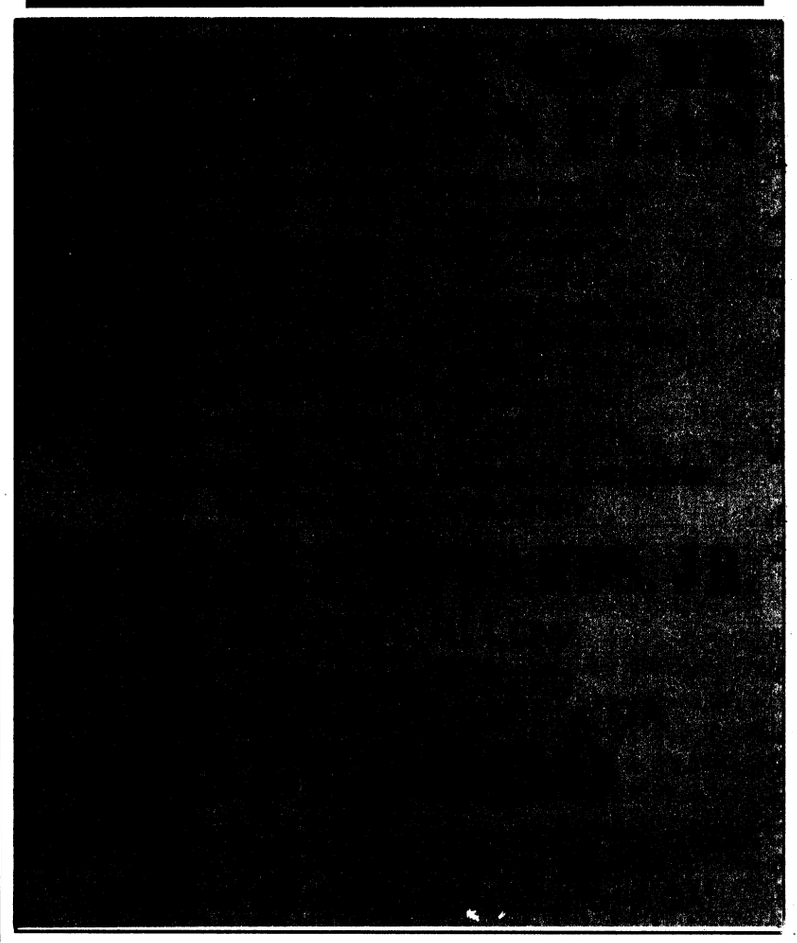
With the problems in the runway and the amount of delays rising, more funds had to be appropriated, Magner said.

"Since that time, the contractor layed $2 million worth of asphalt and concrete in under four months," said Magner.

This was done in part because of the partnering between all the parties involved, Magner said. Magner said partnering is, "the full cooperation and understanding by the government entities with the contractor in reaching the goal of completing the project with the least amount of delay and cost."

"I thought we did a good job," said John Campbell, Lawson Army Airfield manager.

Campbell went as far as to redirect air traffic so the paving company could continue to pave the runway, Magner said.



When the runway paving was done, and the dust settled, a check for $1.2 million dollars, a progress payment for the work done in the month of March, changed hands.

"I've been out here (Fort Benning) for seven years and I've never seen a check even remotely this size," Magner said.

"The partnering in this project has been exceptional," Magner said.

"This project," Magner said, "gives us a good basis for what we can expect from future contracts."

Going airborne is actually safe

'Recordable' injuries at lowest point in jump school's history

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Although it might seem otherwise, jumping out of perfectly good airplanes is actually one of the safest things to do on post.

Injuries occurring during training jumps have steadily decreased during the past three years, and could possibly be at the lowest point in the Airborne School's history, said Lt. Col. Michael M. Hawrylak, commander of the 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment.

"I don't have the data for the entire history of the school, so I can't really say for sure, but I'd bet that incidences of injuries during jumps are at an all-time low," he said.

From one injury per 1,000 in fiscal 1992 to .4 injuries per 1,000 jumps in fiscal 1994, recordable injuries have been declining. Recordable injuries are those in which a jumper must be removed from training for at least 24 hours and range from bruises to sprained ankles.

Hawrylak attributes the school's success in preventing injuries to mandatory ankle braces worn by all basic jumpers and to the professionalism of the school's instructors and parachute riggers.

"The single most important factor is the tremendous professionalism and dedication of the noncommissioned officers who are out training soldiers," he said. "Our parachute riggers, who safely packed 96,000 parachutes last year, also contribute to the confidence in the equipment that our jumpers and instructors enjoy. They know their chute is going to open."

"They deal with soldiers' lives every day so safety is paramount," said Sgt. Maj. Robert McCoy, battalion command sergeant major. "Even after they become seasoned instructors, they receive quarterly training to maintain their proficiency. Our instructors have a variety of military experience from duty with Table of Organization and Equipment units to combat experience."

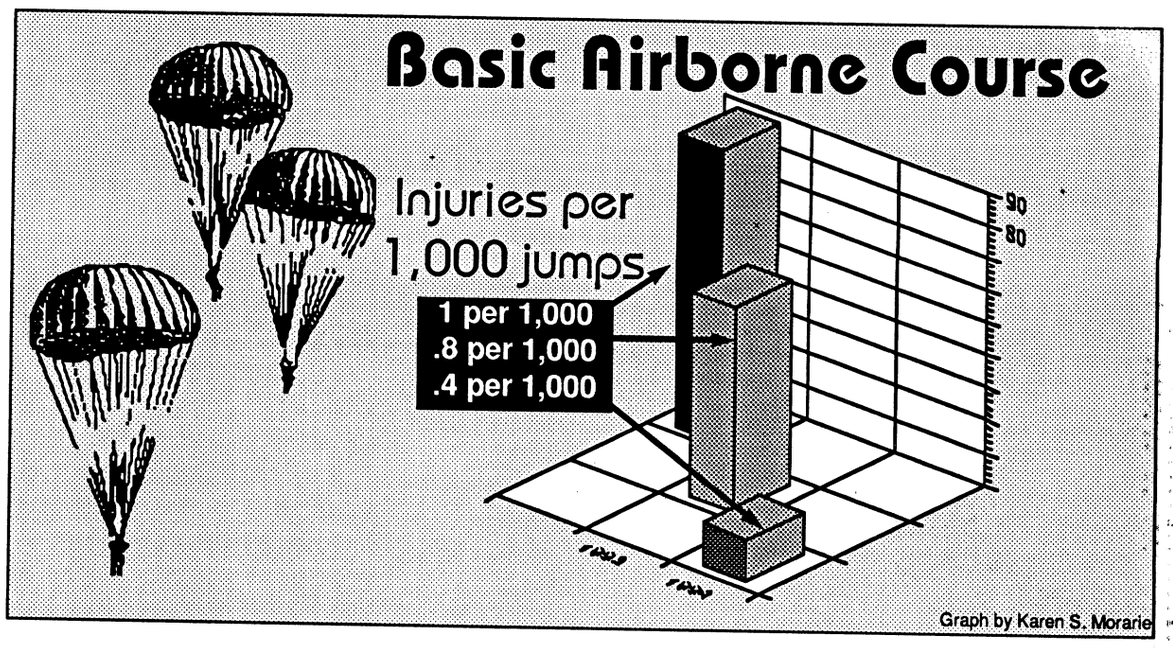
Sgt. 1st Class Kenneth Remines of Company A said the small number of soldiers in each training "stick" contributes greatly to the management of training and the safety of the jumpers. "There are only 20 soldiers in each stick, which means soldiers get more individual quality training and safety is enhanced," he said. First Sgt. Willy Peoples of Company A agreed.

"With only 20 jumpers, the squad leader can really get to know each jumper. He really knows the strengths and weaknesses of each one," he said.

Sgt. 1st Class David Parker of Company B said the standardization of all the training methods greatly enhances the quality of training and contributes to safety.

"We are all on the same sheet of music," he said. "I could go over to another company and take over training for an NCO and not miss a beat because everything is to the same standard."

Parker said the new approach to training, in which students are treated as individuals and calmly taught the correct procedures rather than simply get yelled at, also contributes to safety because students learn better.



"We have a system of risk assessment that has been 50 years in the making," said Sgt. 1st Class Greg Griffin of Company C. "The environment is one of constant safety awareness and every level of training has its own built in safety measures."

First Sgt. James Scanlon of Company C said the process of training NCOs to become airborne instructors ensures that only the best make it.

"It takes a special kind of NCO to work in this type of environment," he said. "Soldiers' lives depend on the quality of the training they receive and the instructors fulfill that responsibility with absolute professionalism."

"One of the best things about the way we do business is the fact that the entire chain of command is involved in the training process," said Sgt. 1st Class James Prince, chief, Ground Branch.

"You are trusted to do your job, but there is always supervision so that if a question comes up, an instructor can always go to someone for help with a question," he said. "The entire training framework is very supportive."

The Post Exchange at the Main Mall will be the site of the third annual health fair from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. April 23.

Approximately 30 booths will feature a variety of health screenings and educational information, according to Carmen Ramos, coordinator for the event.

Included in the exhibits will be vision, cholesterol and blood pressure screenings.

A fire truck and ambulance will be on hand for inspection, and balloons and door prizes will be given away.

The health fair is free and open to all members of the community.

OCS: Students 'challenged'

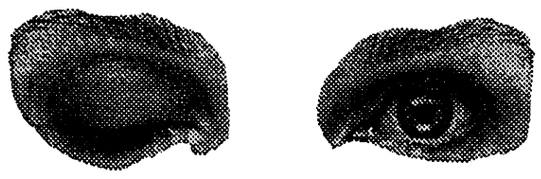
event, the five-mile run, the challenge was over because one platoon finished so far ahead of the other platoons that the other platoons had no chance of catching up. However, before this OCS challenge the point system was changed.

As far as the navigation scoring goes, each candidate must have at least six out of nine gos for land navigation and three out of five gos for night navigation, just to pass, Berrios said.

To score any points for the OCS challenge, candidates must score at least seven points on the day navigation test. If a candidate scores a seven, that individual gets seven points. The same goes for eight, nine and 10 scores.

Berrios said the same rule applies in the night navigation scoring using the numbers three, four and five.



The OCS challenge award ceremony was Monday afternoon honoring the winning platoon.

The OCS challenge is designed to challenge the OCS candidates and "build esprit de corps and competition within the platoons because it is a platoon event, not an individual event."

"It is also about building teamwork within (the candidates') element because that is what the Army is all about — working as a team," Overman said.

A demonstration showing the correct way of rescuing an accident victim was conducted by the 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital, the 498th Air Ambulance Company and the Fort Benning Fire Department April 8 at Roberts Field.

The demonstration was part of the Emergency Medical Technician class given at Fort Benning, said Staff Sgt. Michael R. Guthrie, noncommissioned officer in charge of the medical training for the 2nd MASH.

"The purpose was to show (the students) a true-life scenario," he said.

This was the first time that the 489th was included in the demonstration. It gives the exercises a worst-case scenario for the students to see, Guthrie said.

"It is excellent for us to get involved with the 2nd MASH," said Capt. Phillip D. Pemberton, operations officer for the 498th Air Ambulance Company.

This type of training helps the 498th better prepare for this type of scenario, Pemberton said.

The fire department is normally called in these situations to give more access to the victim for the EMTs, Guthrie said. The fire department's main tool for these type of accidents is the jaws of life.

The jaws of life, Guthrie said, are an emergency measure that the fire department uses if there is no other way to get to the victim inside the vehicle.

"The fire department utilized special equipment and we utilized our military EMTs to stabilize the patient and do emergency medical treatment," Guthrie said.

This is the extrication portion of the EMT training.

It is a mandatory part of the EMT class, Guthrie said.

Guthrie said the EMT class is given once a year by the 2nd MASH unit. It is a five-week course that covers 160 hours of class time.

"This class has 31 people in it, but the class usually has less," Guthrie said.

The 2nd MASH, Guthrie said, opens up a certain amount of slots per unit on post. Those slots are usually filled by 91B, or medical specialists, so they may get their national registry EMT certification.

Anyone can take the EMT course if there are any open slots, Guthrie said.

This demonstration is vital for the class.

"The students don't see (this) on paper; they don't hear it in the classroom. They get the hands-on portion (of the class)," Guthrie said.

Chief Warrant Officer 2 Thomas P. Shultz, evaluation pilot for the Air Ambulance Company said, "this (demonstration) benefits all. Both us and who we support."

IOBC students experience 'battlefield'

By Eric Burroughs
Company B, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry

Machine gun rounds snapped overhead and rifle fire echoed through the smoke-filled valley. However, the students of Company B, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment (Infantry Officer Basic Course), shrugged off their fear and assaulted through the enemy positions with the skill of a well- rehearsed platoon.

The future platoon leaders of Company B, commanded by Maj. Edward G. Gibbons Jr., spent the week of March 14 through 18 by conducting blank-fire rehearsals on Griswold Range.

These rehearsals culminated in a live-fire exercise that gave the students some realistic experience in the sounds, smells and emotions of the battlefield.

The exercise

Company B initiated the situational training exercise with an introduction to patrol base procedures and squad level battle drill rehearsals which evolved into platoon level rehearsals.

Second Lt. Richard Davenport, from Tuscaloosa, Ala., was the platoon leader for the live-fire exercise.

"I was nervous before the mission started, but as soon as we left the assembly area, that feeling disappeared," he said.

"I felt like I had become a different person. I was more concerned with how the men were doing and maintaining control than the fear of live rounds being fired."

Range control ops

Company B also received some on-the-job training in range control operations.

This training came in the form of multiple range fires that needed to be controlled.

"First Platoon was busy cleaning weapons when the order was issued," said 2nd Lt. Kevin Field.

"We were motivated to be tasked with a new mission and assaulted the fires with the same enthusiasm that we had assaulted the objective earlier that morning."

Advanced land nav

The company moved to Nininger Range March 17 to begin its advanced land navigation course.

This training required the students to move over land, in buddy teams, and find three of five points

However, the distances ranged between two and four kilometers and the roads were patrolled by cadre waiting to "kill" the students using multi-integrated laser engagement system.

If a student was "killed" the team would lose points from its overall score.

The students were given 19 hours to complete the course that started at 3:30 p.m. Most students finished by 11:30 p.m., after traveling between 15 and 25 kilometers.

Earning their pay

"We moved about 17 kilometers before finishing, but we had to fight "wait-a-minute" vines the entire way," said 2nd Lt. John Schwartz of 4th Platoon.

"We definitely earned our pay that night."

The students returned to their company area March 18, one step closer to becoming infantry platoon leaders.

1/18th sets Bradley gunnery record

David M. Harrell
1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment

The 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized), recently completed Bradley gunnery during the first week of March.

During this gunnery, the 1st Bn., 18th Inf. "Strikers" set a new Armywide standard. Currently, the 1st Bn., 18th Inf., is the premier shooting Bradley battalion in the U.S. Army, and has held the top position for the past year.

In setting the new Army Bradley qualification record (992 out of a possible 1,000 points), 1st Bn., 18th Inf., was competing only with itself to better the previous Army record it set in September (964 points) at Fort Stewart, Ga. During this gunnery, all 58 crews qualified distinguished.

Bradley Fighting Vehicle gunnery consists of preparation, training, practice and qualification tables for the Bradley crews. Firing Tables VI and VII are practice tables to prepare for qualification.

Targets consist of armored personnel carrier type targets, truck type targets and personnel type targets that are engaged in both the offense and defense. Bradley Table VIII is the qualification table or range and is the culmination and validation of all previous training.

The score is based on a 1,000-point scale. There are 10 individual tasks, each consisting of 100 points. There is a day-fire phase consisting of five target engagements.

Before gunnery begins, every crew is required to be certified at the UCOFT, which is a Bradley battle simulator that allows the Bradley crew to practice engaging targets in a variety of conditions and scenarios. It uses computer driven graphics on screens within a mockup of a Bradley Fighting Vehicle.

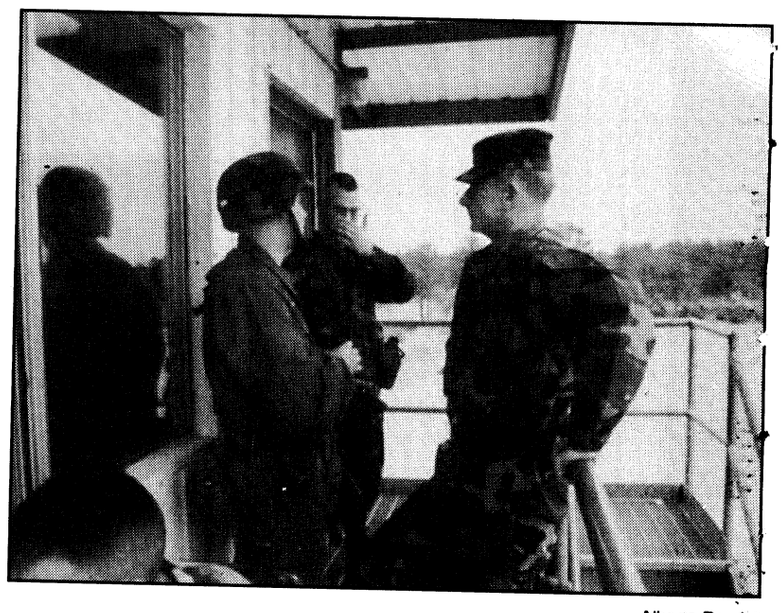
In the UCOFT, crews concentrate on developing team work, working on crew drills, practicing fire commands and engaging targets at increasingly more difficult levels of proficiency.

In addition to training in the UCOFT, a Bradley Fighting Vehicle crew is required to pass the Bradley Gunnery Skill Test before firing live rounds.

The test consists of 19 tasks, such as uploading and downloading ammunition, firing weapons, misfiring procedures, engagement techniques, and assembly and disassembly of all weapons systems in addition to other tasks.

According to Capt. Jerry A. White II, commander of Company B, 1st Bn., 18th Inf., the high scoring company of 1st Bn., 18th Inf., and much extra time working in the UCOFT, and a week and a half of BGST were key factors in the success of his company.

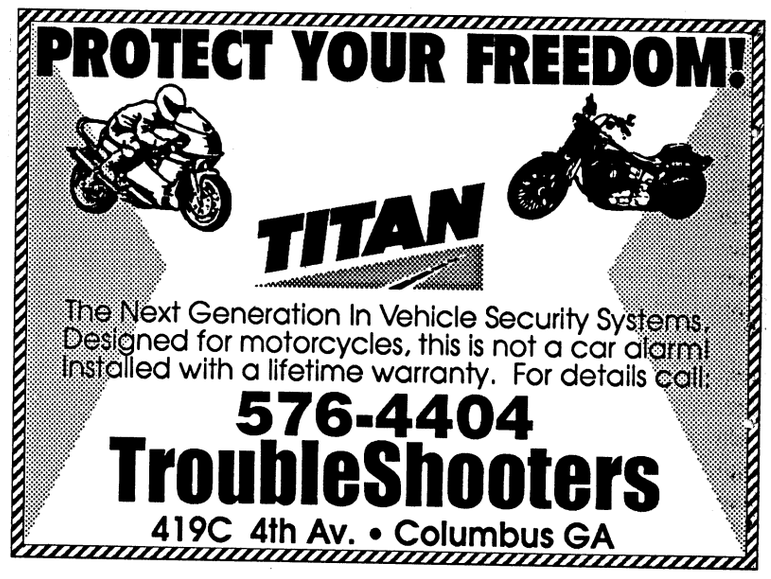
Gunner Spc. Steven Patrick Sellig states, "Properly trained crews shouldn't have any problems during gunnery."



"During gunnery, you have teamwork, which is the principal thing," Pfc. Aldris Castillo, a Bradley driver said. He added that he believes that paying attention to detail is extremely important for a driver in being a team player.

Although it was a close race, Company B, 1st Ban, 18th Inf., was the highest scoring company with a combined score of 999.6 points out of a possible 1,000 points.

As the "Top Gun" company for the current gunnery, Company B was awarded the Clark Trophy.



The Clark Trophy was established by Capt. Edward Clark of the 18th Infantry Regiment to stimulate and perpetuate interest in machine gunnery.

It was first awarded in 1927 and is now presented semi-annually to the top firing Bradley company in the 1st Bn., 18th Inf.

Chaplains get new crest

By Ford F. G'Segner
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Many members of the unit ministry team at Fort Benning have been asked the question, "Is it true chaplains can no longer wear on their uniforms the distinctive cross or tablets with the Star of David?"

The simple answer; "No! It is not true." Christian and Jewish chaplains will continue to wear their branch insignia and be recognized by the familiar cross or tablets.

Muslim chaplains will wear a crescent moon (a historic symbol for Islam). Buddhist chaplains (when we have them) will wear the eight-spoked wheel, symbol of the Noble Eightfold Path.

In a recent national newsletter, a well-known Christian leader reported that our country was moving away from its Judeo-Christian history. He cited as evidence the fact that Army chaplains could no longer wear the cross or tablets on their uniforms.

This article left unclear that the only change the Army made was to the chaplaincy regimental distinctive insignia, more popularly know as the "regimental crest."

This device is a symbolic representation used to identify a soldier's affiliation with a specific unit from the history of the Army. It is worn centered over the right breast pocket of the Army green uniform.

The regimental crest is worn by all members of the chaplaincy, chaplain or chaplain assistant, and identifies all of us as members of this distinctive organization. We are all represented regardless of faith, denomination, or group.

The chaplain's branch insignia (cross, tablets, crescent moon or eight-spoked wheel) is worn on the lapels of the green blouse, centered on the left of the green shirt, or worn on the collar of the battle dress uniform.

The chaplain assistant branch insignia is worn on the Army green uniform and is symbolic of the welcoming, open door of a place of worship with steps leading up to a higher calling. Surrounding it are open, caring hands to provide the assistance needed for people to affirm their religious heritage and strengthen their spiritual fitness.

The symbolism of the regimental crest remains the same with one exception. It still retains the shepherd's crook and the numerals, 1775.

The crook was the first symbol used to identify chaplains when we began our ministry back in 1775 with the American Revolution. They are surrounded by "palm branches" signifying spiritual victory.

Our distinctive insignia keeps the dove with an olive branch in its mouth and the Latin phrase "Pro Deo et Patria."

The dove and olive branch embodies the Army's mission and chaplain's calling to deter war and, if that fails, to achieve peace. The Latin phrase translates, "For God and Country."

The change noted by the newsletter only involves the book. The open book represents the sacred writings and religious documents that contain the belief systems of the faith groups represented by the soldiers we serve.

Formerly, the book only represented Judaism and Christianity. Today it applies to all who seek religious values and spirituality for their lives.

We, the chaplains and chaplain assistants at Fort Benning are committed to ensuring the free exercise of religion guaranteed by our constitution.

We still believe the faith we professed to the religious group that sent us into the Army.

We still serve the religion we were called to represent.

We still provide the spiritual nurturing for soldiers and family members that has long been our tradition.

We still proudly stand wearing our cross, tablet, crescent moon, eight-spoked wheel or "caring hands" as a symbol of who we are and what we stand for.

Editor's note: Chaplain Steve Fry and Master Sgt. Muriel Fish contributed to this article.

Life is short — pray hard

reflections

By Kwon Pyo
1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment

According to a Greek legend, on his death bed Alexander the Great summoned his generals and told them to make two holes in his coffin and pull his arms out through them. He wanted the whole world to see that he was not taking anything with him.

Alexander the Great spent most of his life conquering nation after nation. He obtained great wealth, honor and vast lands. Yet at his death bed, he left this world empty-handed, the same way he had come at birth.

Have you ever thought about where you came from and where you are going? As we climb the ladder of success and wealth, we often act and think like we will live in this world forever. Yet our lives are short and fragile. In the light of our mortality, it is imperative for us to have the right goals and priorities in order to make most of our lives. Your goals and priorities come from what you consider important.

What is the goal of your life? What are your priorities? What is the most important thing in your life?

King Solomon in the Bible thought about all these questions. In his old age, after having enjoyed more than 1,000 wives and concubines, great wealth, fame, honor and success, he wrote his thoughts down on paper. His philosophical and theological reflections on life led him to the conclusion that a life not centered on God is meaningless.

A God-centered life means putting God first in one's life and doing whatever pleases him. The two greatest commands God gave to man are to love God with all one's heart and to love one's neighbor as oneself. Man will find purpose and meaning in life by loving God and other people.

The sinful pleasures of this world are very deceptive. They are like drinking salty water to quench your thirst. The more you drink, the more thirsty you become. To quench their thirst for success and wealth, many people sacrifice more important things in their life, such as God and their families. More than 1,000 wives cannot satisfy a lustful man. Vast lands and great wealth are not enough for a greedy man. The more one has, the more one wants. The cycle is endless.

So focus on what really counts — loving God and loving people. Then remember the two holes in the coffin of Alexander the Great and remember you will leave empty handed.

Life, mind, will precious gifts

reflections

By James Colndreau
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Nobody designed himself. No one was given a catalog to choose his or her gender, nationality or the period of history to be lived.

The world did not ask, "When will he show up?" In other words, I was not necessary. I did not exist.

When I meditate on my "nothingness," I give health to my soul. These thoughts lead me to the one who has always been — the creator, the giver of life.

In the realm of life, the mineral world is the bottom level. Yet compared to being nothing, a speck of sand is gigantic. A stone, a rock, a gem is even greater.

When I am singled out of nothingness to be one of the billions of minerals, I should indeed be grateful.

Even more overwhelming is to belong to the botanical world. A blade of grass that sprouts and grows, in contrast to the inertness of minerals, indicates a higher life.

A plant, a shrub, a tree are loftier degrees of life with flowers and fruits as bonuses. To reach this level among the trillions of botanical things instead of "nothing," or merely a mineral, is a divine privilege.

To move and breathe like the thousands of species in the animal world is a stunning accomplishment. Even if I was visible only by microscope, I would really be something.

The zoological world populating the seas, the Earth and the skies with all their variety along with the mineral and botanical items exist to serve the top level of being — humanity.

Why should I, who once was nothing, be selected to this highest degree? To be given a mind and a will to think and freely decide my destiny is life at its fullest.

Thank you God for having created me in your image!

USAMU dedicates shooting complex

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

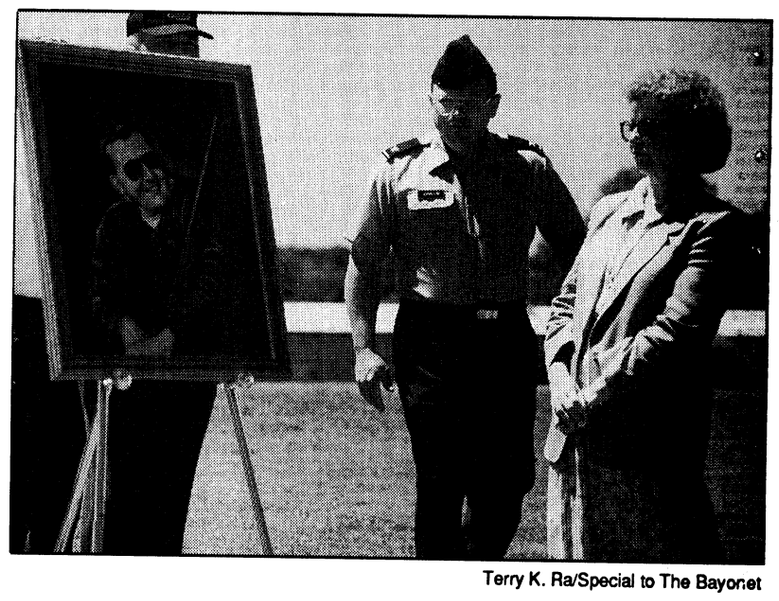
The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit formally dedicated the Tommy G. Pool International Shooting Complex April 8 with a hillside ceremony at the complex on Alamo Road.

In attendance were commanding general Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White and guest of honor Nancy Pool, Pool's widow.

White and Pool unveiled a portrait of Pool, which will hang just inside the main door to the complex.

Pool, a former Olympic Bronze Medal winner, served with USAMU for more than two decades as a shooter and as a civilian employee. Pool died in 1990.

"Pool was a great American, shooter and Olympic medalist who gave most of his life to the sport of shooting and to this unit." said USAMU Commander Col. Lory M. Johnson.



Pool served the Army from 1958 to 1973 when he retired from active duty, but continued to compete for the U.S. Army Reserve until 1986. Some of Pool's military highlights were two tours of duty in Vietnam, officer in charge of the USAMU international rifle section, commander of USAMU Europe, and commander of the 6th Army Marksmanship Unit, Fort Ord, Calif. Pool returned to USAMU in 1974 where he served as the Unit's Public Affairs Officer until 1990.

Pool competed in the 1964 Olympic games in Tokyo, Japan, and won a Bronze Medal in the 50 meter English Match Prone. Pool also won a Gold Medal and two Bronze Medals in the 1962 World Shooting Championships.

"Lt. Col. Tommy G. Pool epitomized the word excellence, he put the E in excellence," said White. "But more than that he symbolized everything that we find good in Americans. His goodness is what drew people to him and his knowledge of shooting is what captured their fascination."

The complex that will bear his name will serve as one of the ranges for the upcoming World Cup shooting championships Sunday through April 24.

"My husband was a very unpretentious person, so he would be extremely pleased and flattered that they would choose to honor him in this way," said Pool. "It is indeed and honor."

Officer Candidate School

Officer candidates of 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Officer Candidate School class 2-94 sponsored the first "OCS Open" golf tournament benefitting Santa's Castle March 29 at the Fort Benning Lakeside Golf Course.

More than 80 candidates, cadre and local businesses participated in the event, which raised $?60 for the charity and provides toys for needy Fort Benning children at Christmastime.

The tournament was the brainchild of Company A senior officer candidates Stephen Jaksec and Alan Stephens who began organizing the event as a class service project.

"We set a requirement that the event should reflect the personality of the Alpha Company chain of command and the OCS Open turned out to be perfect.

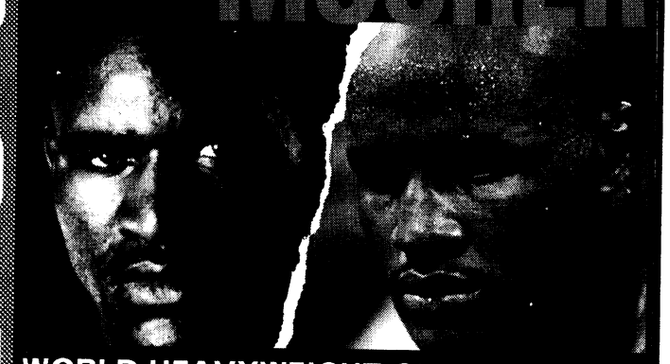
"The success of this tournament was due in large part to the great support we received from our cadre and Captain John Mitchell, Alpha Company commander," Jaksec said.

"We wanted to do something for the community and we're helping a great charity," Stephens said.

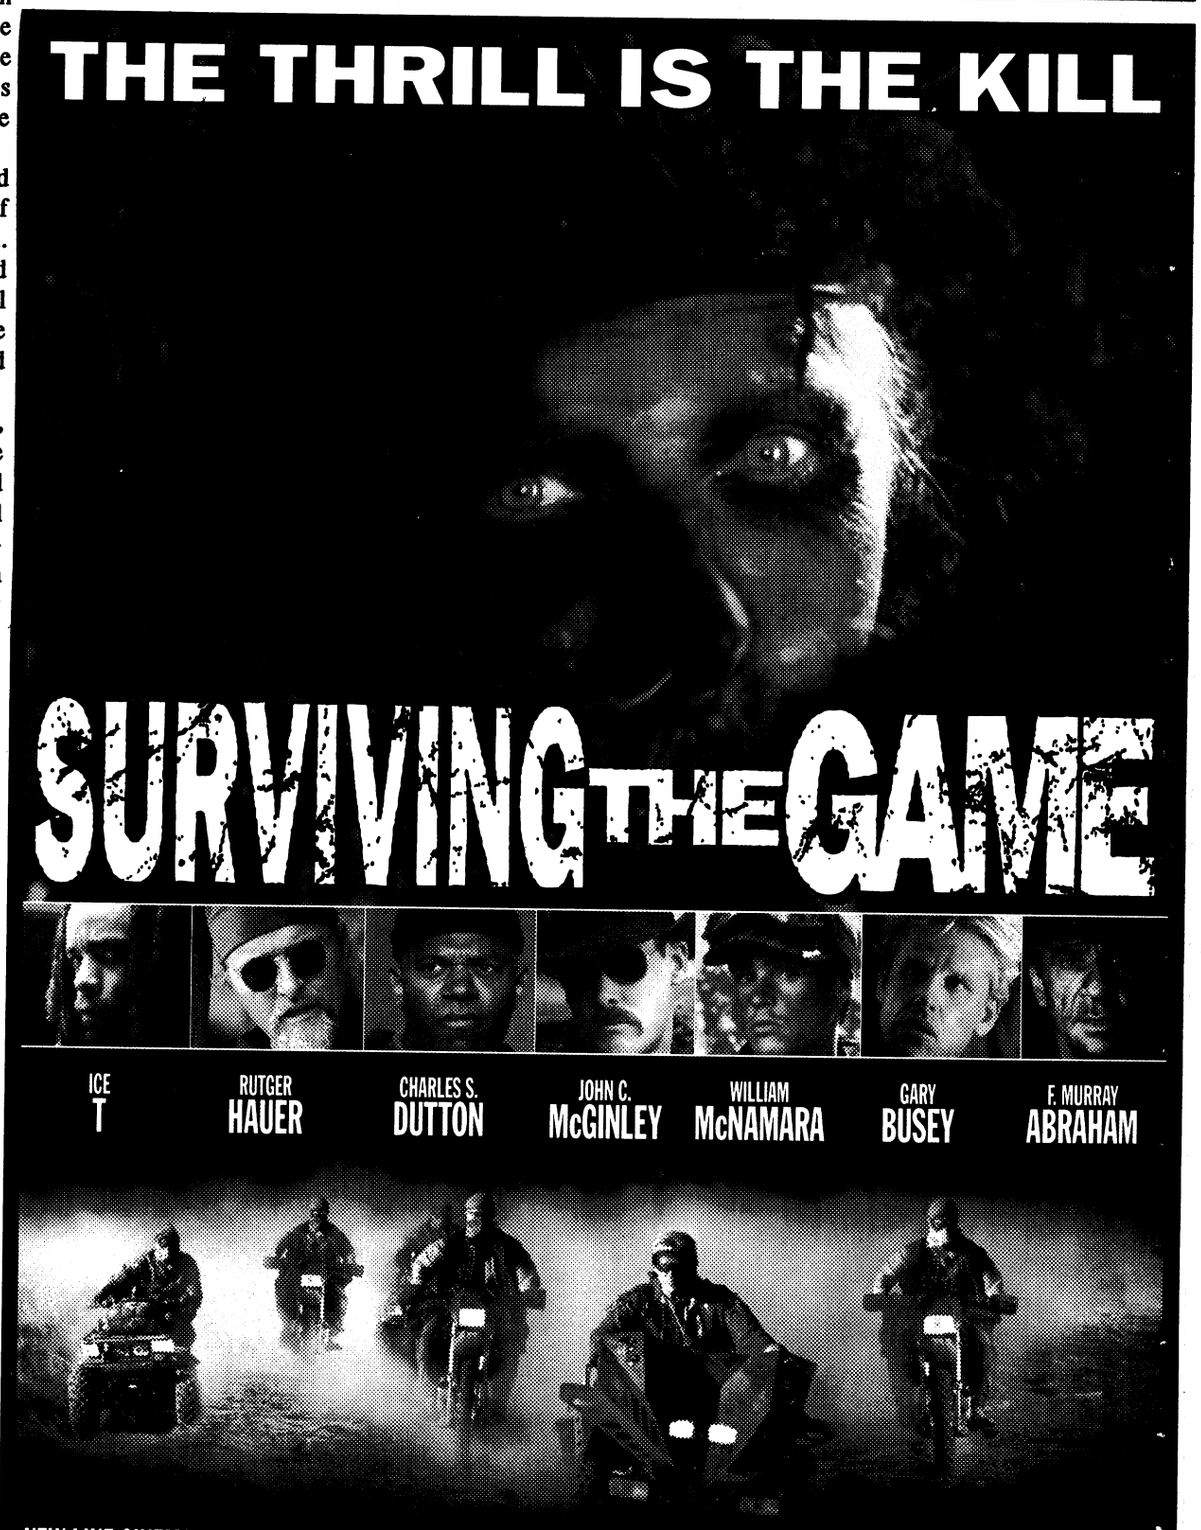
Approximately 65 candidates entered the tournament, "Which is surprising because a majority of them are nongolfers," said Stephens.

Candidates golfed for different reasons; some to enjoy the spring day, some to get away from the barracks and some to help charity.

Senior Officer Candidate John Lawrence, a former staff sergeant from Fort Riley, Kan., said he had worked on Santa's Helpers at his duty station and decided to golf for Fort Benning's Santa's Castle.



"As an officer you have to support a lot of charities and this was a good way for the candidates to prepare for future charity projects," Lawrence said.



Morale was the reason Senior Officer Candidate Cliff Vroonland, from Fort Lee, Va., decided to support Santa's Castle. "This was a good way to build camaraderie within the company and I had a good time. I'm not a golfer, but I've done it before," said Vroonland.

Senior Officer Candidate Mike Taylor golfed for charity to get away from the OCS stresses and ended up walking away with two round-trip tickets donated by Delta Airlines. Chaplain (Capt.) Gary Moore, OCS Chaplain, said he was proud of the candidates for organizing the event.

World Cup USA starts Sunday

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

Fort Benning will be the site of the 1994 World Cup USA and U.S. Grand Prix shooting competitions Sunday through April 24.

More than 400 shooter athletes from approximately 46 nations will compete in the event, which will be conducted at the Tommy G. Pool International Shooting Complex.

Fort Benning was selected to host this year's competition largely because of its proximity to the 1996 Olympic site and its recently upgraded facilities, officials said.

The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit will host the event and has placed 14 shooters on the 1994 World Cup team.

International shooting complex dedication

The Tommy G. Pool International Shooting Complex was formally dedicated by the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit at a 1 p.m. ceremony April 8.

The complex, located on Alamo Road near Soldiers' Plaza, will serve as one of the ranges for the upcoming World Cup Shooting Championships.

The late Lt. Col. Tommy G. Pool, former Olympic bronze medalist, was with the unit for more than two decades as a shooter and civilian employee. Pool died in 1990.

His widow and guest of honor, Nancy Pool, and Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, Fort Benning commanding general, unveiled a portrait of Pool at the ceremony that will hang in the complex.

Hall of fame

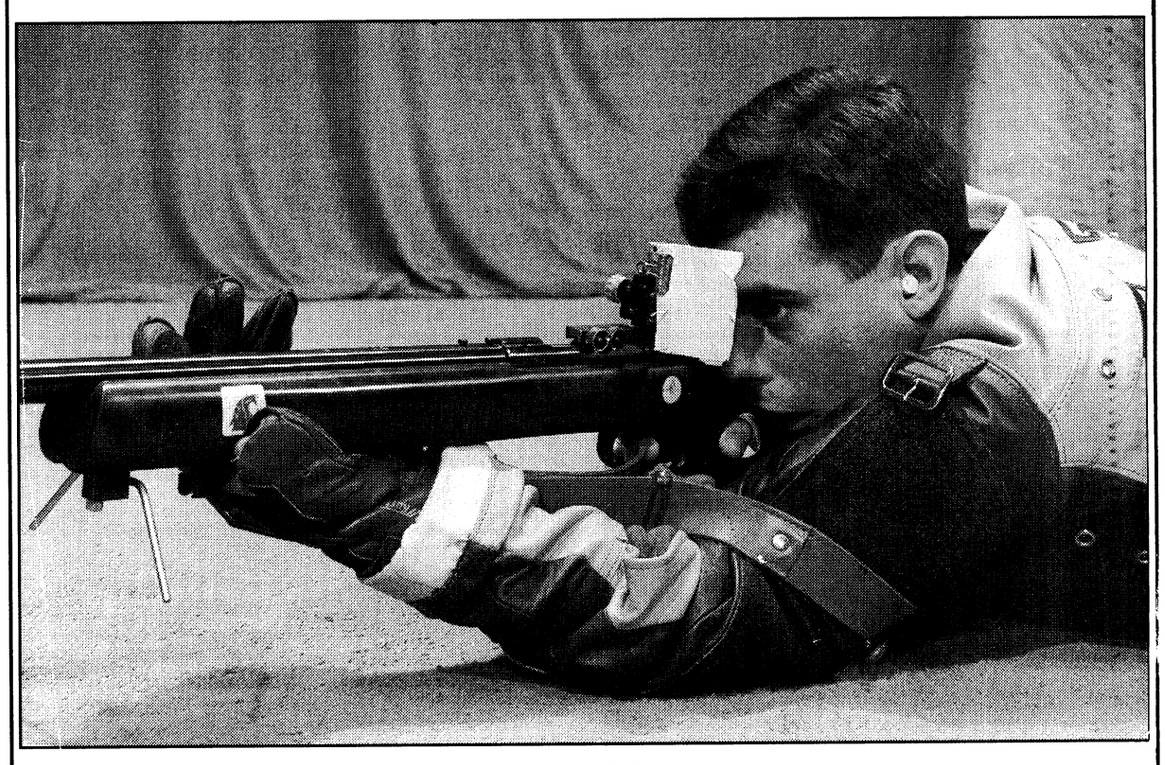
Seven former members of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit will be inducted in the unit's first hall of fame during a banquet ceremony today at the Fort Benning Officers' Club.



The names of the distinguished shooters will be announced during the ceremony in which Gen. Dennis J. Reimer, Forces Command commander-in-chief, will be the guest speaker.

Harbison receives honor

Army marksman Capt. Rob Harbison was recently honored at his college alma mater for his contributions to the sport of shooting.

Rob Harbison

The former United States Shooting Team rifle sport athlete of the year and national championship marksmanship record holder is assigned to the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit here.

Harbison, a 1988 graduate of the University of Tennessee at Martin was one of six former students inducted at his college athletic hall of fame in February.

"I think that as I get older and look back on my shooting career that this will be one of my most valuable awards sentimentally," said the 27-year-old captain.

Harbison became the first individual in the school history to win a National Collegiate Athletic Association individual title when he won the air rifle competition at the NCAA Championships in Cincinnati in 1987. Currently Harbison is training for the 1996 Summer Olympics.

Dr. Rolla Baumgartner, superintendent of the Fort Benning Schools, announced his retirement, effective July 31, to staff members of the post school system earlier this week.

Baumgartner, who has guided Fort Benning Schools for 11 years, has served military children and families for 27 years in various positions in the United States, Germany, England and Italy.

"The single most important element of an organization is the leader. Fort Benning by all accounts is a system of excellence because of Dr. Baumgartner's leadership," said Col. Greg Camp, school board president and deputy assistant commandant.

As head of a system serving about 3,300 military children, Baumgartner has stressed academic excellence as well as implemented programs to help students develop a healthy self-esteem needed as a buffer against the constant changes of a mobile lifestyle.

The Baumgartner administration has pioneered innovative academic techniques and was the first system in the state to implement the Reading Recovery Program for struggling students and the Drug Abuse Resistance Education program.

Baumgartmer

In addition to student enrichment, Baumgartner launched extensive staff development programs to help teachers sharpen their skills while keeping abreast of new advancements in the field of education.

While ushering in the age of computers and technology, the Baumgartner administration has upgraded and renovated five schools and replaced two others with new buildings.

A patron of the arts, Baumgartner served on the Symphony Board and has worked with the Youth Symphony in Columbus. In addition, he serves on the Literacy Board and is active with the Leadership Columbus program.

Baumgartner and his wife, Liliane, plan to settle in his home town of Niles, Mich.

AUSA to host job fair May 19

Army Career and Alumni Program

A job fair will be May 19 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Main NCO Club, Building 2784.

The job fair is being conducted in conjunction with Armed Forces Day, May 21. The job fair will be hosted by the Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army.

More than 1,000 soldiers, retirees, Department of the Army civilians and their family members are expected to attend this event.

More than 200 local and world-wide companies have been invited to participate.

Interested persons should bring approximately 20 copies of their resume for possible on-the-spot interviews. Duty uniform or other proper attire is recommended.

Persons needing assistance in resume preparation can make an appointment with the Army Career and Alumni Pro-gram, Building 2617, or the Army Community Service Family Member Employment Assistance Program, Building 2643. For more information, call 561-2142 or 545-4892.

Music lesson

Students discover the viola at fine arts concert

By Jerrie MacIntire

Guest musician Manuel Diaz presented a sampler of classical selections from European composers in a series of fine arts concerts in the Fort Benning Schools Monday and Wednesday.

Diaz, a native of Spain who was educated in Chile, played the viola to classical selections from Russian, French, Polish, German and Czech musicians. He was accompanied on the piano by Rexford Whiddon, chairman of the Music Department at Columbus College.

From sprightly to melancholy, Diaz' performance covered a range of moods as he highlighted works from Glazounov, Ravel, Chopin, Mendelssohn and Dvorak.

In addition to playing classical selections, Diaz gave students a brief music lesson on some differences in stringed instruments and also demonstrated a technique to soften the violas' volume as he performed a selection from a Spanish dance, "Piece en Forme de Habanera."

Demonstrating that music is an adaptable art, Diaz played the viola to Mendelssohn's "Song Without Words," a piece originally written for the piano.

Diaz, a faculty member of Columbus College who plays viola in the Columbus Symphony Orchestra, was the third guest performer in the fine arts concert program this year.

One aim of the program is to encourage students to enjoy a lifelong participation in music, said Olin Harp, principal at Faith Middle School.

"We hope to instill an appreciation of the different types of music and the different instruments through the fine arts concerts," he added.

The concerts are designed to stimulate an interest in music and to give students an opportunity to demonstrate appropriate concert behavior, he said.

Now in its 10th consecutive year at Fort Benning, the program features artists who are professional musicians, many associated with the Columbus College Department of Music.

This concert series was sponsored by the Enlisted Wives' Club.

AER

campaign at 50% of goal; more monies are needed

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet©

The 1994 Army Emergency Relief fund-raising campaign is currently at 51 percent of its $180,000 goal.

The drive has reached $92,820, according to Alphonso Deane, campaign officer.

"We appreciate all of the units who have turned in their contributions and encourage those who haven't to get them in as soon as possible," said Deane.

The campaign ends May 15.

AER provides monetary relief to soldiers needing help with food, rent, utilites, medical cost and other specified financial needs.

Assistance, available 24 hours a day, seven days a week, is given to soldiers under the recommendation of their company commander or first sergeant.

AER is a nonprofit organization that has been serving soldiers since 1942.

Last year the organization gave $32 million in aid to individuals worldwide.

Here at Fort Benning, 1,427 soldiers and their families received more than $789,227 in financial asssistance in 1993.

Donations to the fund can be made through a monthly allotment or in a lump-sum payment of cash or check.

Individuals interested in making a donation can see their unit project office or contact AER offices at 545-2536.

5th RTB soldiers come to city's rescue

By Roy Herman
5th Ranger Training Battalion

At least three tornadoes touched down within the Dahlonega city limits at approximately 4:30 p.m. March 27, according to officials.

For the 5th Ranger Training Battalion at Camp Frank D. Merrill in the North Georgia mountains, that changed the entire weekend.

March 26, the battalion had conducted its annual Easter picnic, which featured Easter egg hunts, a barbecue and raffles for prizes.

In less than 30 hours, all of that changed. "In a matter of minutes, 13 homes belonging to soldiers of the battalion were damaged, at least three severely," said Maj. Roy Herman, the battalion executive officer.

Camp Frank D. Merrill was not hit, but the camp lost all electrical power for a few days. Almost immediately, the battalion assessed the situation and developed a list of tasks that focused on assisting the battalion families, providing generator power for the camp and helping Dahlonega residents with disaster relief.

The battalion's family support group swung into action and assisted displaced families in finding shelter. The battalion formed wood-cutting teams to extract families from damaged homes and delivered water, clothing and other essential supplies in both Lumpkin and Hall counties.

"Last year, Camp Merrill suffered the worst storm in 50 years and the 5th RTB soldiers responded magnificently," said Lt. Col. Ralph D'Elosua, the battalion commander.

"These troops are a great asset to both the military and civilian communities in rendering emergency assistance," he said.

Read the label, set a better table

By Charlotte Broussard Pursell
Martin Army Community Hospital

If "a rose by any other name would still smell as sweet," would a food package label with any changes be easier to read and interpret?

The United States has supported food safety and food labeling since the turn of the century. Nutritional labeling, however, was strictly voluntary until the late 1970s. At that time nutritional labeling was required for products containing added vitamins or minerals, or those products making a health or nutrition claim.

During the 1980s, focus shifted to new areas of health and nutrition with respect to certain chronic health problems, such as obesity and heart disease. Guidelines for food labeling have since been hotly debated, as consumers became more proactive in demanding more easily read and understood food package labels.

As of May 8, all food labels for packaged products sold in the United States must be in compliance with the Nutrition Labeling and Education Act of 1993. Meat and poultry products must be in compliance by July 6. For the manufacturer, this means approximately 670,000 new labels will be redesigned.

The new title "Nutrition Facts" indicates to consumers that the new government guidelines have been met. Serving sizes are listed at the top of the label. The new regulations require similar serving sizes for similar products to facilitate comparison and ensure "truth in advertising."

The percent daily value column is a yardstick, used to measure how far a food goes in meeting certain nutrient needs. The percentages calculated in the daily value column are based on a 2,000-calorie a day diet. If the consumer is eating less than 2,000 calories per day, his or her total nutrient need will not equal 100 percent; if the consumer eats more than 2,000 calories per day, his or her total nutrient need will exceed 100 percent.

The calorie amounts were selected as easy benchmarks for consumers to use when interpreting their own nutrition needs. Some sedentary women may need to consume 1,600 to 1,800 calories a day to maintain or gradually lose weight. Active men or teen-agers may need 2,500 or more calories a day just to maintain their body weight.

With the new nutrition labels, the government has chosen to focus on the vitamins and minerals of greatest health concern: vitamins A and C, calcium and iron. Manufacturers have the option to list more nutrients if those nutrients are present in the food.

Nutrient content claims, such as "high in vitamin A" or "sugar-free" can only be made if the food meets strict definitions set by the government. Nutrition content claims are not usually included in the nutrition label, but are typically found in a prominent place on the main display panel of the package.

These attention-catching claims have historically been ofter misleading and sometimes even false and were the main reason for new specific regulatory language. For example, to be labeled "calorie-free" the product can contain no more than 5 calories per serving; "low-calorie," less than 40 calories per serving; "Lite," one-third fewer calories or 50 percent less fat; "low fat," 3 grams or less per serving.

Health claims often appear on a food label to describe the relationship between a nutrient or food component and a disease or health-related condition. Health claims can not state that the product (o any ingredients) will prevent a disease or health-related condition.

Government guidelines state that foods using health claims must not contain any nutrient or food substance in an amount tha increases the risk of disease or health condition.

Skin cancer screenings available

Martin Army Community Hospital

Skin cancer screenings will be April 26 and 27 at the Dermatology Clinic at Martin Army Community Hospital to coincide with National Melanoma/Skin Cancer Detection and Prevention Month, sponsored by the American Academy of Dermatology and the Dermatology Service.

The screenings are part of a national campaign to encourage early detection and teach prevention of skin cancer, the most common form of cancer in this country. More than 700,000 people will develop skin cancer in 1994 and the number is rising at a rate of 3 to 5 percent each year.

The academy's national detection and prevention program is in its 10th year. Since 1985, more than a half a million Americans have been screened free of charge.

Of these, more than 4,600 suspected cases of malignant melanoma, the most serious form of skin cancer, were discovered.

Though less common than other forms of skin cancer, its incidence has risen sharply. An estimated 6,800 people will die from melanoma this year, the majority of them men over the age of 50.

However, if detected early, malignant melanoma can usually be successfully treated.

Other forms of skin cancer — basal cell carcinoma and squamous cell carcinoma — are less serious but much more common and can cause damage and even disfigurement if left untreated.

"Your chances of getting skin cancer are one in six," said Dr. (Lt. Col.) Mark Crowe, chief of Dermatology at MACH. "Many people think of it as a disease of the elderly but we are seeing more and more skin cancers in younger people. They don't realize that suntanning is so unhealthy. They think of themselves as immune to skin cancer. It can take 10 to 20 years of accumulated sun exposure to cause the disease."

Crowe said that three-quarters of all skin cancers are preventable. He advised parents and teen-agers to follow simple sun protection rules, since one or more serious childhood or adolescent sunburns can double the chances of getting skin cancer, especially melanoma.

The members of the American Academy of Dermatology and the Dermatology Service at Martin Army Community Hospital invite all persons eligible for care at any military hospital to take advantage of the screenings.

To reduce waiting times, appointments are being scheduled at 544-2574. No consult or referral is required for this screening examination.

The American Academy of Dermatology represents physicians who specialize in the practice, diagnosis and treatment of diseases and disorders of the skin, hair and nails.

Skin cancer screenings

What: Skin cancer screenings to encourage the early detection and teach prevention of skin cancer

When: April 26 and 27

Where: In the Dermatology Clinic at Martin Army Community hospital

Why: As part of National Melanoma/Skin Cancer Detection Month

Skin categories

The FDA (Food and Drug Administration) and the American Academy of Dermatology recognize six skin categories:

Skin type I: Always burns easily, never tans, extremely sun sensitive skin (Red-headed, freckles , Celtic, Irish-Scots)

Skin type II: Always burns easily, tans minimally, very sun sensitive skin (Fair-skinned, fair-haired blue-eyed, Caucasians)

Skin type III: Sometimes burns, tans gradually to light brown, sun sensitive skin (Average skin)

Skin type IV: Burns minimally, always tans to moderate brown, minimally sun sensitive (Mediterranean-type Caucasians)

Skin type V: Rarely burns, tans well, sun insensitive skin (Middle Eastern, some Hispanics, some blacks)

Skin type VI: Never burns, deeply pigmented, sun insensitive skin (blacks)

The American Academy of Dermatology suggests that, regardless of skin type, a sunscreen with an SPF of at least 15 should be used.

Dermatologists recommend following precautions

American Academy of Dermatology

The American Academy of Dermatology recommends the following precautions to lessen the chances of developing skin cancer:

☼ Minimize sun exposure especially during the peak sun hours of 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. when the sun's rays are the most intense.

☼ Apply a sunscreen liberally and frequently and reapply every two hours when working, playing or exercising outdoors. A sunscreen with a sun protection factor of at least 15 is recommended for protection against skin cancer and premature aging of the skin, even on cloudy days when 80 percent of the sun's rays penetrate the clouds.

☼ Wear appropriate clothing during prolonged periods in the sun, including a wide-brimmed hat, long-sleeved shirt and pants.

☼ Beware of reflective surfaces. Sand, snow, concrete and water can reflect up to 85 percent of the sun's damaging rays.

☼ Avoid tanning parlors and sun lamps. The ultraviolet rays emitted by these artificial sources are similar to those in sunlight and can cause sunburn, premature aging of the skin and increase the risks of skin cancer.

☼ Protect children by keeping them out of the sun, especially those under the age of 6 months, or minimizing sun exposure. Apply sunscreens on children older than 6 months of age.

☼ Teach children to use sun protection, since skin damage from sun exposure accumulates over a lifetime.

The majority of damage from the sun occurs before the age of 20. One or more blistering childhood or adolescent sunburns can double the risks of developing malignant melanoma, a lethal form of skin cancer.

To detect skin cancer at an early and curable stage:

Examine your skin and that of your family members regularly for any changes in moles, freckles or skin discolorations.

Learn the early warning signs of skin cancer and at any sign of a change, or any new lesion that appears, see your dermatologist immediately.

Q: I purchased a Volvo in 1978 when I was stationed at Fort Ord, Calif. The California certificate of title was held by the loan company that gave me the funds to purchase the car. I paid the car off in 1981 while still in California and the loan company sent the certificate of title to me.

Unfortunately, I never told the loan company that I had moved to another apartment and I never received the title.

I was transferred to Korea, then Kentucky and now I am here at Fort Benning. I want to trade in the Volvo but looked through all of my papers and can't find the title.

I contacted the loan company and found out that it had sent the title to my old address and the title was never sent back. I wrote to the California Department of Motor Vehicles and was told that it does not keep title records for more than four years and has no record of my vehicle.

How can I sell my car?

A: The certificate of title to a motor vehicle is almost as important as the keys that allow you to start the vehicle.

Without the title in a state like Georgia, which requires such a document, you will have a hard time proving that you are the legal owner of the car. A title is required to initially register a car in Georgia. It is doubtful that anyone will purchase your car without a title, because they will not be able to register and drive it here.

Whenever you purchase a vehicle, you must make sure that you get the certificate of title either at the time of sale if you are paying cash, or at the time you pay off the car loan if the title was given to the loan company to hold.

In your particular situation, the state of Georgia will not issue you a new certificate of title because they have no record of your car. Although Georgia maintains its motor vehicle records on microfilm and does not destroy any of its records, California was the only state that had any title information on your car.

However, you can get a title from Georgia through the bonding process. Insurance companies throughout the state, perhaps even your automobile insurance carrier, will assist you in getting a bonded title from the Georgia Motor Vehicles Division. This insurance company will charge you a percentage of the book value of the vehicle, usually one to eight percent, for the bond. The purpose of the bond is to protect the true owner of the vehicle should it be determined later that you never had a legal claim of ownership to the vehicle.

Call the Legal Assistance Office at 545-3281 or 545-3282 to make an appointment to speak with one of the attorneys for more specific information.

Military Police Activity

The following entries were extracted from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from March 28. Such entries may be incomplete and do not determine the guilt or innocence of any person.

• A private first class was charged with drunk and disorderly conduct after he grabbed a sergeant and wrestled him to the ground, intending to cause bodily harm.

• A family member was charged with cruelty to children after he hit his 6-year-old child in the head with a fork.

• A private was charged with malingering after he shot himself with a M-16 rifle while at a range. The private was transported by air ambulance to the hospital where he was treated for a gunshot wound to his left shoulder.

• A private collapsed on a two-mile run during a diagnostic physical fitness test and was pronounced dead as a result of sudden cardiac arrest.

• A specialist was charged with unlawful acts, failure to obey an order, loaded firearm, and unregistered weapon when he was observed at a Military Police checkpoint with a .12 gauge sawed-off shotgun behind the seat in his vehicle. The shotgun, which was loaded, was not registered on post. The specialist was further charged with breach of arrest after he departed the Military Police Station without proper authorization.

This week's booby prize goes to the private who became disorderly at the enlisted club. The private was asked to leave by a Military Police investigator but refused. He then fled after being apprehended. After being caught and being placed under apprehension again, the private identified himself with a false name. After his true identity was determined, he was administered a breathalyzer test with a result of .09. Further investigation revealed that the private was under the legal age to consume alcohol. The private was charged with breach of arrest, false statement, drunk and disorderly conduct and failure to obey an order.

Other activities included 13 traffic accidents and six cases of driving under the influence of alcohol. There were three shoplifting cases reported at exchange facilities and 13 cases of larceny of private

Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best — Give Crime Arrest." Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5223 or the "Crime in Progress" line at 545-2222.

By Ken Franklin
Martin Army Community Hospital

This is a sample of this month's most frequent mail subject: compliments on care received at Martin Army Hospital.

• "I would like the time to make my appreciation known about Iris, Diane and Major Wright at Winder Clinic. They have helped me repeatedly on last-minute notice. They always do their best with a hello and a smile. Thank you ladies!"

• "I am a Navy man with over 16 years service, and I am happy to report that your staff has changed my opinion of military medical care from dismal, due to past experiences at other facilities, into total praise for the top-notch care that I received at Martin Army..."

• "From Lou and the gang at the orthopedic check-in station, to the kind folks at the lab, the outstanding staff at same-day surgery, the pros at admissions, the absolutely wonderful people in recovery, anesthesia and Ward 6B — my stay at your hospital was a totally enjoyable experience. Even the lady who took my money at the collections office was a joy."

• "In this hectic world of ours we are quick to condemn and all too slow to commend. In this case, thanks and commendations are in order for Doctor Fabrigar and the staff in the Emergency Room... I busted into the emergency room with the words 'I can't breathe.' Within seconds Doctor Fabrigar and the staff as a team helped clear up my anxiety and treated the problem. In a matter of minutes I was getting back to where I could manage on my own again."

• "Upon my arrival to Winder Clinic, I wanted my spouse and son to be checked out for flu symptoms. I had not previously been seen at this clinic because I am a new arrival at Fort Benning, and just married last month. I showed up at the clinic at noon. All of the personnel were very professional, and my spouse and son were seen. They now have records established and medical cards. Thanks!"

These are a few of the dozens of compliments received at Martin Army Hospital each month. They demonstrate two key points.

First, Martin Army Community Hospital does a great deal right every day.

Second, patient input — both in suggestions and in compliments — helps keep the improvements growing.

Seymour has 'A Passion for Justice'

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

Even in taking a slight break from "Dr. Quinn, Medicine Woman," Jane Seymour still is playing someone who carved a new frontier.

SPOTLIGHT

In Sunday's fact-based new ABC drama "A Passion for Justice: The Hazel Brannon Smith Story," the actress stars as a Mississippi newspaper publisher who became the object of ostracism and outright attacks in the mid-1950s, for maintaining and implementing her deemed-to-be-radical views on basic human rights.

Newly married — with D.W. Moffett, also seen recently in "The Counterfeit Contessa," playing her mate — and happily employed, Brannon literally risked everything by taking a stand against the abusive local sheriff (Brett Rice) and hiring a black man to supervise construction on her house, actions that opposed the deep-rooted beliefs of many of her neighbors and supposed friends. Ultimately, her spouse, her business and her home became targets of those who came to resent her ... but in the end, Brannon was awarded a Pulitzer Prize for her journalistic commitment in pressing forth to set right what she considered to be major wrongs.

Jane Seymour

What: 'A Passion for Justice'
When: Sunday, 9 p.m. on ABC

It might seem ingenuous in the wake of "Dr. Quinn's" huge success, but Seymour insists, "I never wanted to do a series, because I never wanted to be typecast as one particular character. I love being a transformational actress, someone completely different when I work. Whenever I've had a chance to do something different, I've taken it, and that's one of the reasons I chose 'The Hazel Brannon Smith Story.' I loved what it had to say, but also, the character was a big stretch for me and wonderful fun to play."

Thanks to such USA cable movies as "Praying Mantis" and "Sunstroke," Seymour has made her mark in what she bemusedly terms the "sexy-thriller" genre, and she and husband Keach (the brother of actor Stacy) had another such opportunity at the same time "A Passion for Justice" presented itself. "We know we can do those, and we know they sell," she reflects, "but we both feel very strongly about racism, as well as about those who don't know how they really feel about it. We felt this was a wonderful piece about Southerners; instead of damning them for racism, it understood why they had those feelings, and showed some of them coming around to realizing why things had to change."

DA names Fort Benning best installation in world

By Caejar A. Cox
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning can now say what we've known all along — it's the best large installation in the world. In a press conference Tuesday Chief of Staff Col. Burnet R. Quick announced the news along with post Command Sgt. Maj. William H. Acebes, Columbus Mayor Frank Martin and Phenix City Mayor Sonny Coulter.

Watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday to see why Fort Benning is the best in the world.

The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit recently opened its Tommy G. Pool International Shooting Complex. The facility will be the site of the upcoming World Cup, which will take place here next week.

USAIC-TV Schedule
Fort Benning Today: 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 1:30 to 2 p.m.
Specials: 2 to 4:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 4:30 p.m. to 8:30 a.m.

Watch "Fort Benning Today" to find out more about the U.S. Army Markmanship Unit, the World Cup and world-class shooting events taking place on post.

If you live on post and subscribe to Fort Benning Cable, you can watch USAIC-TV on Channel 3, 24 hours a day. Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:26, 7:56, 8:26 and 8:56 on WLTZ-TV 38.

For information or to make suggestions, write or call the Broadcast Section of the Public Affairs Office, Infantry Hall, Room 602, 545-5921.

State parks offer opportunity for # horsin' around

Georgia State Parks & Historic Sites

Franklin D. Roosevelt State Park has an idea for those who want to get away from the hustle and bustle of the city.

The "City Slickers Overnight Trail Ride" is a horseback riding and camping experience ideal for families, groups of friends or business retreats.

Horse lovers of all ages and abilities can trade in their cars for the night to take this guided trail ride across Pine Mountain, sleep next to a roaring camp fire, eat breakfast under a sunrise, and head back home later in the morning. The overnight trail rides are available seven days a week.

Experienced trail guides will answer questions along the way and point out different aspects of the trail.

This nature adventure costs $60 per person and includes horse rental and — if you don't want to sleep under the stars — shelter. Participants must arrive at the FDR riding stables by 3 p.m. and bring their own food.

Pots, pans, utensils and several grills are provided. Preregistration is required at least two weeks in advance.

Riders under the age of 18 must be accompanied by an adult. For more information or to register, call the park at (706) 628-4533.

Hard Labor Creek State Park also has horseback riding specials. Horses can be rented for the day at a cost of $10 ($12 for an overnight trip).

The park has stables, 13 miles of riding trails and camping for riders and their horses.

Hard Labor Creek State Park is located off I-20 in Rutledge, Ga. Contact the site at (706) 557-3001 for more information.

For a free 1994 special events brochure, call the main parks office at (404) 656-3530.

A $2 park pass fee is required for entrance into the state parks; annual passes can be purchased for $25 at the sites or by calling the main parks office at (404) 656-3530.

Florence marina, park to host special programs

Speakers to discuss Indian Mound sites April 23

Georgia Dept. of Natural Resources

Florence Marina State Park will host a special program April 23 at the Kirbo Center.

Representatives from five major Indian mound sites will take a close look at mounds and their significance to early American Indian tribes.

Each representative will be presenting information about their particular site with slides, artifacts, lecture and question and answer sessions.

Speakers will be as follows:

1 p.m. - John Bundy - Ocmulgee Mounds

2 p.m. - Sandy Madson - Lake Jackson Mound Site

3 p.m. - Billy Adams - Kolomoki Mounds

3:30 p.m. - Frank Schnell - Singer-Moye Mounds

4 p.m. - Frank Schnell - Guided tour of Rood Creek Indian Mounds

All activities are free and the public is invited to attend this special program.

There is a $2 parking fee for all vehicles.

For more information, contact the park at (912) 838-4706 or (912) 838-4244.

Florence Marina State Park is located 16 miles west of Lumpkin, Ga. on Highway 39.

Best Ranger

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

What does it take to be the best Army ranger in the world?

Soon the answer to that question will be available to everyone.

The David E. Grange Jr. Best Ranger Competition is scheduled for April 29 to May 2 at the Ranger Training Brigade.

This event has taken place yearly at Fort Benning since 1982.

Sixty-five teams from the Army, Army National Guard, Army Reserve, U.S. Marines, U.S. Navy, Canada and France have been invited to participate by sending two-man teams to compete in head-to-head competition for the title of "Best Ranger."

Between 30 to 60 days before the competition, teams begin to filter into the Fort Benning area to begin modifying their routines to the local terrain.

The competition will culminate May 2, when the Army chief of staff, Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan, will be here as the guest speaker for the Best Ranger Competition awards ceremony. Members of the winning team will receive engraved 9mm pistols and various awards.

Everyone throughout the tri-communities is encouraged to come out and watch the competition.

A welcome center will be located in Building 5024, the Ranger Training Brigade Headquarters at Harmony Church throughout the competition to assist visitors with directions, team standings and other information on events and test locations.

For more information, call Harry Ikner at 544-7212.

Post to celebrate Armed Forces Day

May 21 open house to cap community-sponsored Military Appreciation Week

USAIC Public Affairs Office

"Peace Through Readiness" is the theme for Fort Benning's 1994 Armed Forces Day Open House observance May 21, which is the grand finale of the local community-sponsored Military Appreciation Week.

Activities at Fort Benning are scheduled from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. in front of Infantry Hall, following the 9 a.m. second annual "Burn the General" run.

They include military equipment displays and demonstrations, kiddie rides, games, entertainment, a performance by the U.S. Army Infantry Center's Command Exhibition Parachute Team, the "Silver Wings," and the Valley Business Showcase.

Food and beverages will be on sale at the Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army picnic. There will also be an awards ceremony and crowning of Mr. and Ms. AUSAs.

A nominal fee will be charged for participation in selected entertainment and recreational activities. The public is invited to participate.

Activities for Military Appreciation Week, scheduled for May 15 to 21, include various sporting events. Some are for military members only; some are open to the public.

Events for soldiers include a kick-off relay, boxing and combat cross country. Wrestling will be open to active duty military and USA Wrestling affiliated clubs. An AUSA golf tournament will be open to individual and corporate AUSA members.

Events open to the public will include beach volleyball, cycling, track and field and a fishing tournament.

Individual and team participants in the above events are subject to rules and eligibility requirements.

Faith History Club to go to nationals

By Jerrie Macintire
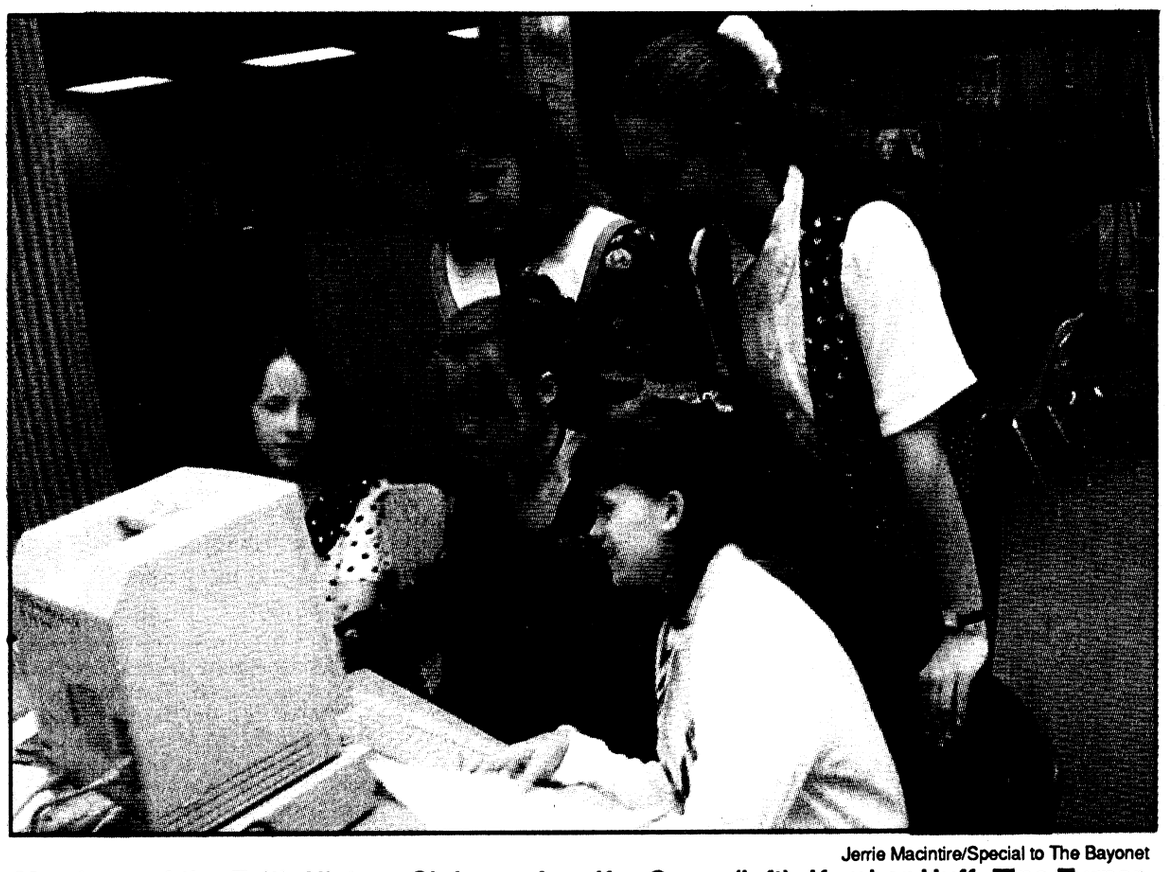
Special to The Bayonet ©

Students in the Faith Middle School History Club will advance to the national finals of History Day in June after winning the state competition Saturday at Agnes Scott College.

The five-member team earned first place in the Georgia state competition for its 10-minute video presentation titled "Fort Benning: Our Nation's Home of the Infantry."

Under the direction of club sponsors Mary Barnett and Lee Strickland, the team produced the winning video to reflect the theme of this year's competition, "Geography in History: People, Places, Ideas."



Entries in the annual contest may take the form of media, such as the winning video by the Faith Club, or may be staged performances or visual projects.

Teams members Lindsay Brooks, Jennifer Camp, Kymber Huff, Sarah Rhodes and Tina Turner will compete in the national finals of Junior Group Media at the University of Maryland in College Park June 12 to 16.

While compiling their video project, students interviewed both active duty and retired military individuals up and down the chain of command as well as local historians, politicians, librarians and others who could comment on the history of Fort Benning.

They spent about 200 extracurricular hours chronicling the history and impact Fort Benning has had on the region's growth, population and economy.

This is the ninth year Faith School has participated in the contest.

VARIOUS VOICES

Do you think the Unites States should use corporal punishment to deter crime?

Jesse L. Hardin, retired U.S. Air Force— "Yes, because (of) the crime on the streets now. If you had corporal punishment, do it immediately after."

2nd Lt. Barry Wiltcher, Company C, 2nd Battalion 11th Infantry Regiment — "Yes, absolutely. I think it would slow down (the) rate of crime and cut back on housing (overcrowding) in federal and local prisons."

Master Sgt. Leon Johnson, Readiness Group, Atlanta — "I don't think so. It's too degrading. If people do something (illegal), put them in jail. I think the rules we have in place now are sufficient."

Puddin Brooks, Army and Air Force Exchange Service employee — "No, because you can hurt people like that. Capital punishment I believe in though."

Michelle Young, family member — "Yes I do. Because obviously our system now isn't working well enough."

Spc. Lonnie Henton, Company E, 1st Battalion 29th Infantry Regiment — "Not for simple cases, but the punishment should fit the crime."

Rangers to 'invade' post

commanders' column

Church

The narrator begins, "The history of the American ranger is a long and colorful one ..." indeed. And no other event accessible by the general public goes further to highlight and underscore the unique confidence, commitment and competency of U.S. Army rangers than the annual David E. Grange Jr. Best Ranger Competition, held each spring at Fort Benning.

Begun in 1982 as a local, low-key competition among members of the Ranger Department, Best Ranger has greatly expanded and become a major focal point for the entire U.S. Army, sister services, allied armies and even the news and entertainment industries.

What once involved a few two-man teams has evolved into world-class competition that pits some 50 teams against a grueling set of standards requiring great strength, even greater endurance and unparalleled expertise in individual soldier skills.

Teams practice, at least informally, throughout the year and normally under the mentorship of a past Best Ranger competitor. Special training regimens peak somewhere in the last 30 to 60 days when teams begin to filter in to Fort Benning to begin modifying their routines to the local terrain and climate.

This year's field of superbly conditioned soldier-athletes promises to present perhaps the very best competition in the event's history. Teams from Hawaii, Alaska, Panama, Canada and other continental United States-based units have, by all accounts made no small investment in time, effort, sweat and blood to break the traditional lock on first place held by the Ranger Training Brigade and 75th Ranger Regiment.

Everyone throughout the tri-communities is encouraged to witness this premier event. The soldiers will need every bit of encouragement as they negotiate this extremely tasking, 72-hour endurathon.

A welcome center will be located in Building 5024, the Ranger Training Brigade Headquarters at Harmony Church, throughout the competition to assist visitors with directions, team standings and other information on events and test locations.

Conserving energy saves money

Directorate of Public Works

commentary

The Directorate of Public Works has many responsibilities ranging from wildlife management to fire protection. The Energy Conservation Program is also within its realm of responsibility

The Energy Conservation Program sets guidelines for establishing and maintaining energy goals set by the Training and Doctrine Command.

In 1985, TRADOC established a Fort Benning energy consumption reduction goal of 15 percent to achieve by 1995. Later, by executive order, President George Bush increased the reduction to 20 percent, however the goal is to be reached by the year 2000.

Just last month, President Bill Clinton signed an executive order to reduce energy consumption by 30 percent from the 1985 level by the year 2005. To date, we have achieved every reduction in energy usage. Since 1985, we have been below the goal by the following percentages: 3.2, .5, 1.5, 1.6, 5.6, 3.4, 2.9 and 4.4

This is a significant feat and Fort Benning stands ahead of the pack in accomplishing this mission.

The first step in any major effort to conserve energy is to ensure the right attitude toward energy consumption within the community. Conserving energy does not mean depriving yourself of comforts and conveniences. It simply means guarding against waste, being aware of the inefficient ways electricity, gas, and water can be used and doing something about it.

Fort Benning has approximately 4,082 family housing units, 3,428 buildings and 20 million square feet of heated and air-conditioned space. Electricity for heating and cooling family housing units can cost from $600 to $2,400 in a year, depending upon the type of equipment used, the construction of the house, and the amount of care your family takes to conserve energy.

Water heating accounts for about 20 percent of the energy used in a home. An electric water heater, for a family of four, costs about $315 a year. Because water heaters consume such a large percentage of household energy, they provide a great opportunity to cut energy waste. Water heated about 120 degrees F not only wastes energy but is also considered a safety hazard, in that it will burn or scald you. DPW Preventive Maintenance personnel can check the water temperature in your housing unit.

The largest use of hot water by households is in washing clothes.

Energy use can be cut substantially by using cold water when possible, along with energy-saving features on some models. Washing full loads and using short cycles save time and energy, as well as being easier on fabrics.

Dishwashers also use a lot of hot water, about 15 gallons per load.

Fill the dishwasher as full as possible without blocking the spray arm. Make sure you've scraped and rinsed the dishes well. This will avoid having to use the rinse and hold cycle, which uses about three to seven gallons of hot water. If you can get by, try to use your dishwasher once a day. This will generally use less hot water than it takes to wash dishes by hand three times a day.

Hot water used in the bathroom can also be lessened. Taking a shower rather than a bath is energy-efficient. Be aware of water running in the sink while you're shaving or brushing your teeth. Dripping facets and leaky pipes waste water. A faucet dripping at a rate of 90 drops per minute wastes about 1,000 gallons of water a year.

Usually this problem can be corrected by simply replacing a washer.

Washers are issued at Self Help, Building 385, on Vibbert Avenue. If this does not do the trick, let DPW Preventive Maintenance know about the problem. Broken water lines and water heaters should be reported to the Work Order Section at 545-2135.

These are only a few of the areas to consider when planning your new energy-saving strategies. Each of us living or working on the post has an obligation to practice energy-saving in our day-to-day activities. As a team, we can achieve our energy goals.

If you have any questions pertaining to this or any other energy-related subjects, contact the Energy Branch at 545-4652 or 545-SWAT.

Keep eagle eye out for national bird

By Gregory W. Lee
Directorate of Public Works

commentary

Our founding fathers made the choice to select the bald eagle as the symbol of our newly emerging nation.

The largest bird of prey in the eastern United States, the bald eagle is a majestic bird, easily identified by its gleaming white head and tail and its six-foot wingspan.

Seen in flight, the bald eagle is a thrilling sight, as it soars high in the sky or dives to Earth to capture prey in its long curved talons.

But sadly, few Americans have had the opportunity to watch bald eagles in the wild. Bald eagle populations have declined by as much as 50 percent in the last 30 years, primarily because of pesticides, but also because of habitat destruction and indiscriminate shooting of birds of prey.

Persistent pesticides such as DDT weakened the eagle's eggshells, and the adult eagles would actually crush the eggs when they attempted to incubate them. Many eagle populations experienced total reproductive failures because of pesticide contamination.

Although most of these persistent pesticides have been banned, eagle habitat is still being destroyed. Bald eagles prefer to live and nest along major river drainages, reservoirs, and coastal marshes, and these areas are being developed at an astounding rate. Therefore, we must protect what little eagle habitat we have left.

Indiscriminate shooting of eagles and other birds of prey has long been a problem. Most people now realize that eagles do not pose a threat to livestock or game animals since their diet is chiefly comprised of fish. However, five eagles were shot and killed in Georgia in 1992.

Despite all these threats to their well-being, the bald eagle has survived and is coming back.

In the early 1970s, there wasn't a single bald eagle nest in Georgia. Last year Georgia had 17 active nests, and 35 bald eagles were sighted during the mid-winter eagle survey.

During this year's survey, Directorate of Public Works wildlife biologists observed a pair of adult eagles and discovered a bald eagle nest on Fort Benning. The post's biologists are going to monitor the nest to see if the eagles will be able to produce offspring.

Bald eagles mate for life and generally return to the same nest every year to breed. The nesting season lasts from October through April. Eagles lay one to three eggs, which are incubated for about 35 days.

The eaglets will remain in the nest for up to three months, with both parents caring for them and bringing them food; a 10-day-old eaglet can consume 50 percent of its weight in food every day. Young eagles are dark brownish-black; they don't get the white head and tail until they are 4 to 5 years old.

If you see an eagle, report the observation to the Natural Resources Management Branch 544-6120 or 544-4545, along with any other important information, such as compartment, grid coordinate, nearby landmarks and the behavior of the eagle.

Since eagles will abandon nests if they are disturbed, be content watching it from the distance. Just be glad that you saw the symbol of our nation as it was meant to be seen — a free spirit, high soaring and courageous.

Post lauded for enforcing speed limit

I would like to say how wonderful it is to drive on Fort Benning where people respect the law.

When I leave my home in Phenix City, it is a challenge to try to stay in the right lane so I can get out of everyone's way. If I do change lanes for cars emerging from a ramp, I have to speed up to about 65 mph or get hit or an ugly look. I don't mind speeding up some but the speed limit is between 35 and 50 mph.

Maybe we should do away with speed limits for no one obeys them anymore.

So I say to Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, the Department of Defense Police and the Military Police, thank you, for when I reach Fort Benning, I draw a sigh of relief that I made it safely to where the speed law is enforced.

Rec Center gets $100K upgrade

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

A ribbon-cutting ceremony April 14 marked the opening of the newly renovated Kelley Hill Recreation Center.

Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White and Anne Honeycutt, manager of the facility, cut the ribbon.

White said the renovation, contracted by the Nonappropriated Funds Services Division, was an example of Fort Benning's commitment to soldiers' and families' quality of life.

"Two things become more and more important in the new, smaller Army," White said, "advanced, high technology equipment and quality of life for our soldiers and their families. Fort Benning has demonstrated its commitment to providing our soldiers the absolute best equipment in the field, and the absolute best facilities possible at home."

White said soldiers at Kelley Hill, as part of the Army's rapid deployment force, work long hours and sacrifice much of their personal and family time in the performance of their duties.

"These are some of the hardest-working soldiers in the world," White said, "and the leadership of this post, commanders and civilian directors, want to show them, and their families, that their welfare is our highest priority.

"This Recreation Center will give these soldiers a high-quality place to relax and enjoy themselves," White said.

The Recreation Center includes the Sledgehammer Sports Bar, opened Feb. 10. The sports bar features a jukebox, two televisions (including one wide-screen) tuned to sports events, a light menu and full-service bar.

White said further renovations, including barracks remodeling, are also planned for Kelley Hill.

Following the ribbon cutting, White invited the soldiers and civilians in attendance to tour the building and sample refreshments.

The building, now 28,000 square feet, was first opened in 1965. The original cost of construction was $500,000, while the price tag of the renovation totaled $100,000.

Equal Opportunity seeks command help

Office aims to increase interest, turnout for featured programs

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

The Equal Opportunity Office is looking for community and command assistance to increase turnout for featured programs.

According to EO Advisor Sgt. 1st Class Richard Franks, recent observances have had disappointingly small audiences.

"The installation invited guest speakers from Martin Army Community Hospital and Columbus College to speak for Women's History Month," Franks said, "and the audience only numbered about 20 people."

The closing ceremony for Hispanic Heritage month earlier in the year, he said, had a similar turnout.

"This ceremony took place in Marshall Auditorium," Franks said, "and there were about 69 people for that one."

The purpose of the program, he said, is to enhance cross-cultural awareness.

The goal of the program is to attract an audience from groups other that the group being celebrated, Franks said.

"We'd like to see more men at the Women's History programs, and non-Hispanics at the Hispanic Heritage programs," Franks said.

"We'd appreciate any input from commanders or the community on increasing turnout," he said. "It's apparent that we need to change something."

Questions or suggestions should be addressed to Franks through post distribution at EOO, Building 2515, ATTN: ATZB-EO, or by calling 545-3200 or 545-6665.

Equal Opportunity Observances

The Department of the Army has established a timetable for special and ethnic observances. (Found in Army Regulation 600-20.) The observances are:

- Martin Luther King Jr. birthday — celebrated the third Monday in January.
- Black History Month — celebrated in February.
- Women's History Month — celebrated during March.
- Days of Remembrance for Victims of the Holocaust — celebrated during April or May from Sunday to Sunday for the week incorporating Yom Hashoah
- Asian-American, Pacific-Islander Heritage Month — celebrated during May
- Women's Equality Day — celebrated Aug. 26
- National Hispanic Heritage Month — celebrated from Sept. 15 to Oct. 15

Adversity: Employees learn how to face life

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

The Civilian Counseling Services section of the Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Program presented the second in a series of workshops April 14 designed to help individuals overcome adversity.

Three speakers addressed an audience of approximately 90 civilian and military personnel during the three-hour program conducted at the Youth Activities Center.

After opening remarks by Yvonne Wilbanks, civilian program coordinator for ADAPCP, Jesse J. Reese, a social worker with ADAPCP, initiated the workshop by encouraging those in attendance to seek relief from adversity through spirituality.

After a short break, Thomas J. Thompson from the Army Research Institute and Lloyd Howell of Charter Woods Hospital, each with doctorates of philosophy in psychology, provided personal insights to overcoming adversity, citing examples from their own experiences of living through crisis.

Howell challenged participants to win at the game of life.

"Adversity is here to stay," he said. "What you do with adversity is a choice."

He emphasized to the audience that before people can successfully overcome adversity, they must work through it by changing the way in which they perceive or react to life's many challenges and misfortunes.

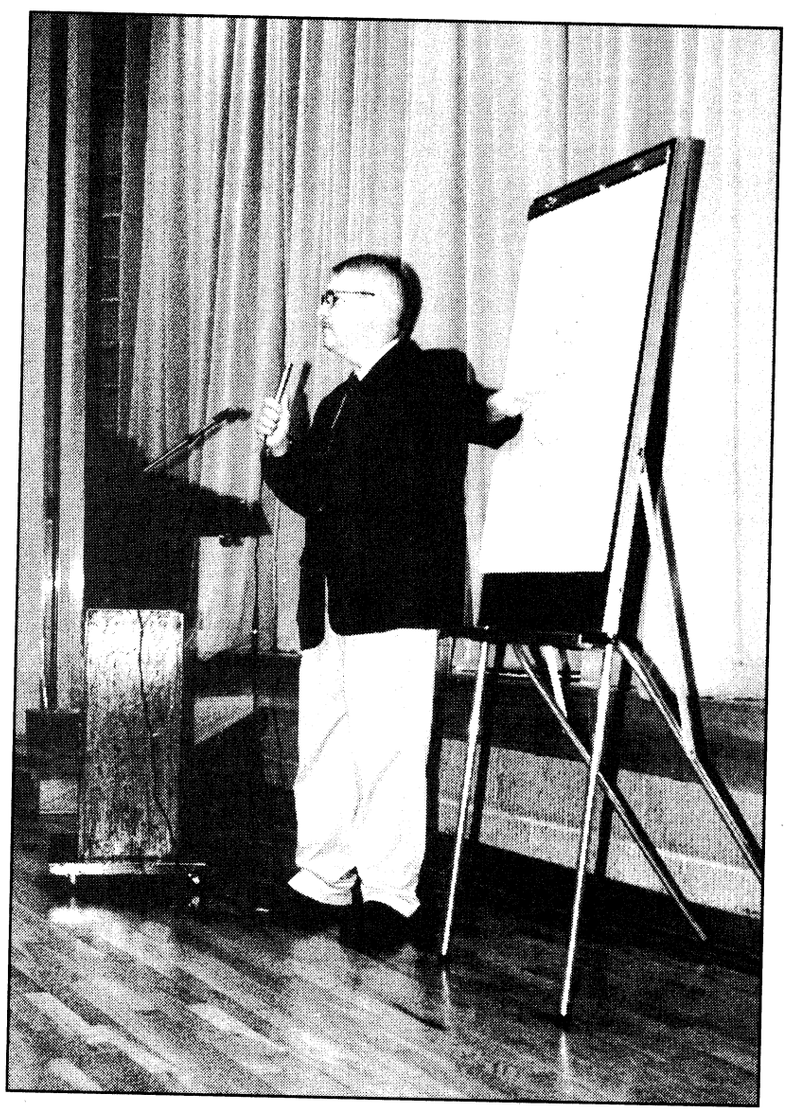
"Life is a journey, not a destination ... climb up the ladder of adversity and you will be on the path to happiness," he said.

Thompson, who is currently undergoing chemotherapy treatment for his second bout with cancer, said blame for misfortune is a waste of time.

"It's not what happens to you; it's how you deal with it — how you approach it (that matters)."

Thompson provided a framework for living a balanced lifestyle. According to Thompson, there are three integral components for success: physical behavior (diet and exercise), mental attitude (positive thinking) and spiritual beliefs and values (prayer and meditation).

"Be patient to all that is unsolved in yourself, learn to live with questions because you won't always get the answer right away, " he said.



Reese's spiritual message touched themes similar to Thompson's. He encouraged listeners to seek a relationship with a higher power. "Do what is right, do what is good to move from tragedy to triumph," he said.

Civilian employees do not have to face problems on their own. The Civilian Counseling Program offers assistance for a variety of difficulties ranging from substance abuse to family or marital stress.

Confidential short-term counseling and referral services for both civilian employees and their families are available.

"The program is designed to help people both before and after problems develop," said Wilbanks, who is a recently certified employee assistance professional. The program offers assessment, crisis intervention, short-term counseling, community referral information and supervisory consultation.

Civilian employees experiencing difficulties can contact Wilbanks for a confidential screening and referral services at 545-2475 or 545-2742.

Budget calls for civilian cuts, separation incentives

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

The president's proposed fiscal 1995 budget calls for Department of Defense civilian employee rolls to drop to 873,000 by Sept. 30, 1995.

By the end of fiscal 1999, only 793,900 civilians will be working for DoD under the proposal. This is about 10,000 employees below the 804,000 end-of-century goal set by the Bottom-up Review. For comparison, 1.133 million civilians worked for DoD in the post-Vietnam peak in fiscal 1987.

Managerial and supervisory positions will take a greater hit than rank-and-file positions. The plan calls for cutting high-grade positions by 9.6 percent, while rank and file positions will be cut 9 percent. This is in line with a presidential memorandum requiring DoD to halve its ratio of supervisors and managers to other employees by the end of fiscal 1999.

The most recent figures show DoD has 111,200 people in managerial and supervisory positions. These positions range from GS-5 clerical supervisors to GM-13 scientists who are classified as managers strictly for pay purposes. By the end of fiscal 1999, the plan calls for a reduction to 47,200 supervisors and managers. To achieve this target, DoD personnel officials will review supervisory positions and flatten organizational structures when necessary.

To ease some pain of the impact of these cuts, defense officials said the fiscal 1995 budget includes $1 billion for transition assistance for military and civilian personnel. This includes $302 million for civilian separation incentives and $72 million for transition and relocation assistance.

Under the Civilian Adjustment and Re-employment Program, DoD placed about 5,400 civilian employees in other jobs, saving them from involuntary separation. To create placement opportunities and minimize involuntary separations, officials said they have been using voluntary separation incentives aggressively. They offer these buyout incentives of up to $25,000 to employees in surplus skill categories or in areas undergoing a reduction in force.

In fiscal 1993, DoD gave incentives to 35,000 employees and had to lay off only 3,000 people.

April's focus is prevent child abuse

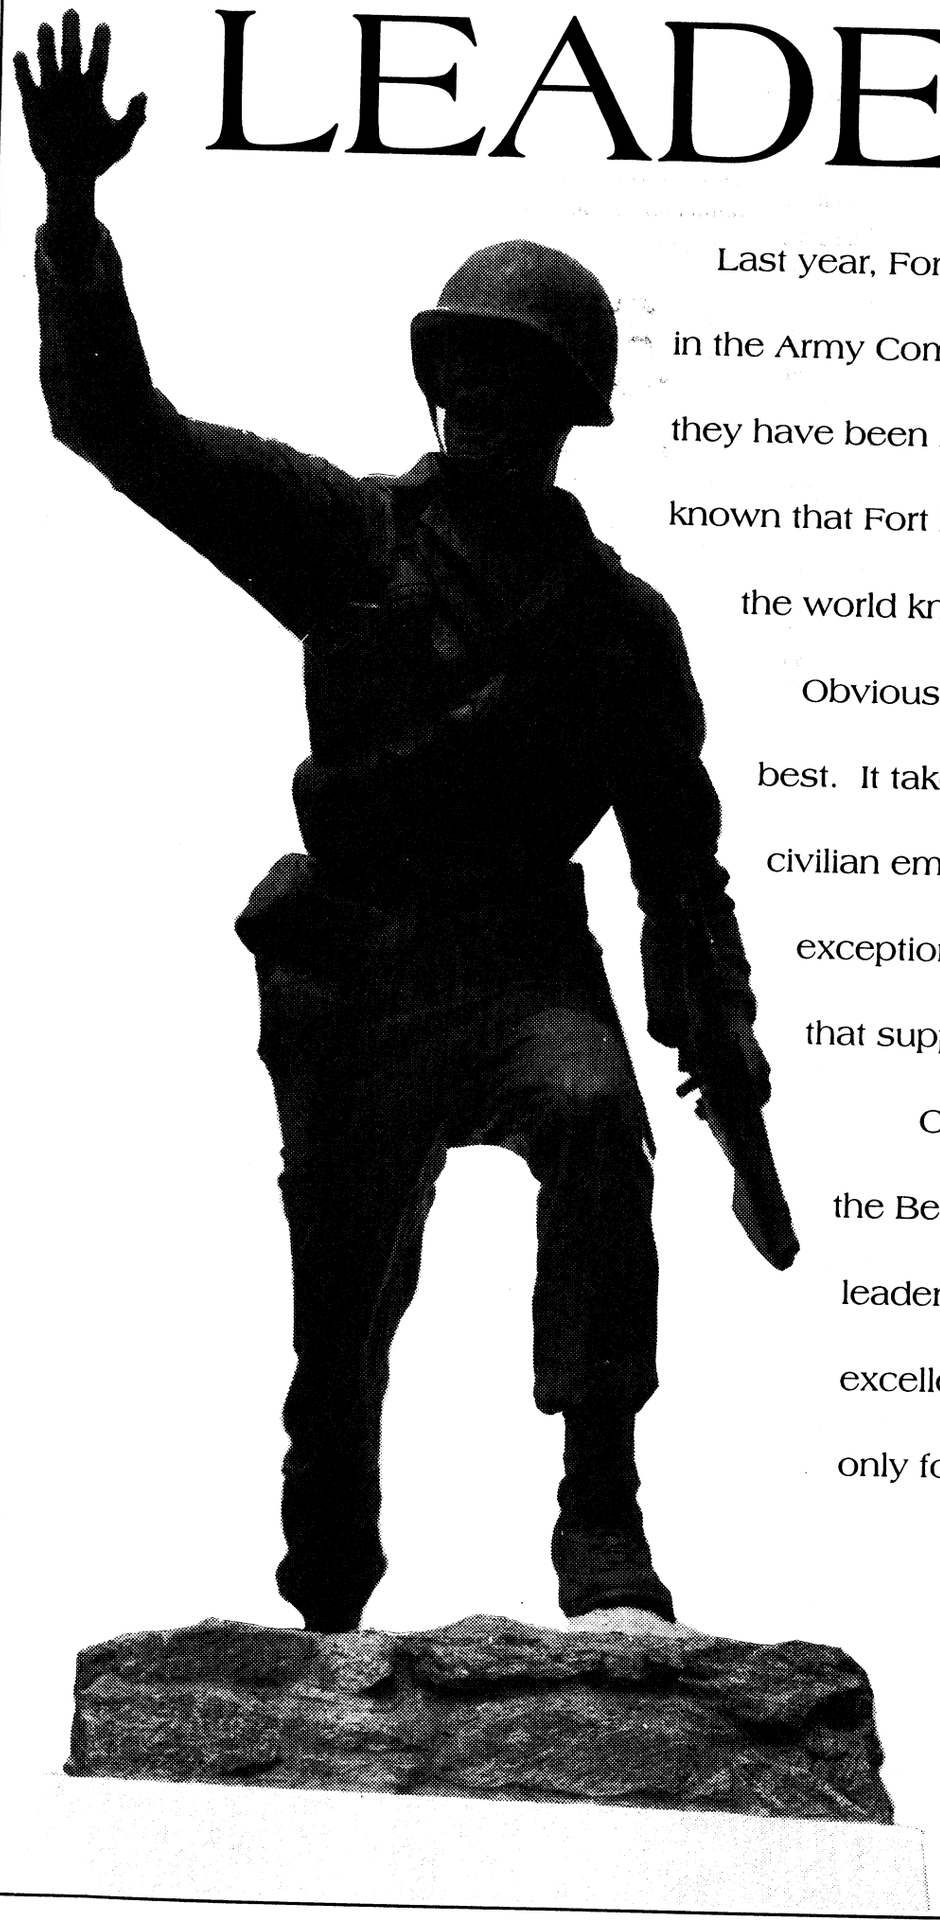
Army Community Service

April is National Child Abuse Prevention Month, and Fort Benning's Family Advocacy Program has planned several activities during the month.

• Through April 30 — The Directorate of Community Activities will have a Parent Survival Skills Display. The Family Advocacy Program will have a display set up at Army Community Service, Building 2643, with information for parents to learn more about available resources.



The display will contain free brochures and literature on effective parenting skills, services for young or first-time parents and other information.

Rebecca Welch, Family Advocacy Program, manager, Family Advocacy Program, Army Community Service, said child abuse is not an isolated problem because it affects each and every one of us, as citizens, neighbors and parents; and it is only through each of us, as a part of the community, that child abuse can be prevented.

Prevention of child abuse must begin at home, she said, and a "no hitting agreement" is a good place to start because it forces parents to look for alternative means of "discipline." There are various organizations that families can turn to for assistance when experiencing violence in their homes.

FORT BENNING

WORLD-CLASS LEADERSHIP

Last year, Fort Benning was named the Best Large Installation in the Army Communities of Excellence competition. This year they have been named "Best in the World." We have always known that Fort Benning was one of the Army's finest... now the world knows.

Obviously, it takes a lot of hard work to be named the best. It takes the efforts of many: dedicated soldiers, civilian employees, and families. It takes having an exceptional quality of life...on post and in the community that supports it. And it takes unparralleled teamwork.

Congratulations, Fort Benning, on being named the Best Army Installation in the World. With your leadership, you have set the standard for military excellence - a standard the rest of the world can only follow.

The public will be able to view and photograph the U.S. Army rangers in action. Demonstrations include combat raids, hand-to-hand combat, mountaineering, high altitude parachuting, helicopter operations, and snake handling.

Cadence calling prohibited in housing

There have been complaints from housing area residents about soldiers performing physical training in the early morning hours and singing cadences.

As stated in Policy Memorandum 93-13, cadence is not allowed to be called in or near the housing areas.

Formations running in or near housing areas cannot call cadence until they are clear of that area.

Marksmen to change commanders

Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, will conduct a change of command ceremony April 29 at 9 a.m. at Pool International Shooting Complex off Dixie Road near Soldiers' Plaza.

Capt. Catherine N. Wilson will relinquish command to Capt. Kevin T. Meadows.

For more information, call 545-1410.

Preretirement class set

The Retirement Services office will host a preretirement orientation in Marshall Auditorium in Infantry Hall May 18 from 1 to 4 p.m.

The keynote speaker will be retired Col. Judd Walton from the Army and Air Force Mutual Aid Association.

Personal affairs, financial and insurance planning, the Military Survivor Benefit Plan, health care, the Army Career and Alumni Program and Veterans' Affairs benefits will be discussed.

Preregistration is required. For more information and to preregister, call 545-2515 or 545-5369.

Italy to celebrate liberation of Rome

To celebrate the 50th anniversary of the liberation of Rome, the Italian Army is staging a parachute jump in September.

Participants must attend Italian army airborne training beforehand. The training and the jump will take place Sept. 18 to 25.

The cost is $1,400 and does not include transportation (Military Airlift Command flights are available).

For more information or to get an application, call Capt. John Chenery at DSN 635-6795.

Customer center opens

The Maintenance Division of the Directorate of Logistics has established a Customer Service Center to provide timely, accurate information to its customers.

All customers requiring information can direct their calls to the Customer Service Center at 545-1776.

Health fair Saturday

The Post Exchange at the Main Mall will be the site of the third annual health fair from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday.

Approximately 30 booths will feature a variety of health screenings and educational information, according to Carmen Ramos, coordinator for the event.

Included in the exhibits will be vision, cholesterol and blood pressure screenings and representatives from the Emergency Medical Service, Fort Benning's Fire Department, Dental Activity, Medical Department Activity, pharmacy, veterinary clinic and many others.

A fire truck and ambulance will be on hand for inspection and balloons and door prizes will be given away.

The health fair is free and open to all members of the community.

Uchee Creek bridge opened April 19

The 101st Airborne Road extension bridge opened April 19. The bridge will make traveling to Fryar Field much easier by going through Uchee Creek.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland and range areas will take place through April 30.

If weather permits, the following compartments may be affected: A-12, C-1, D-17, E-2, E-4, H-2, I-5, J-3, J-6, O-3, Q-3, Q-6, T-2, W-2 and X-5.

Burning will occur in pine stands within these compartments to enhance endangered species habitat and training areas.

People using these areas for recreation must vacate before 9:30 a.m. daily.

Training units using compartments adjacent to these areas may experience drift smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while traveling in these areas because of the potential for reduced visibility.

Asians, Pacific Islanders to be recognized

The opening ceremony for Asian, Pacific islander Heritage Month will be May 5 from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center. The public is invited.

For more information, call 545-3197 or 545-6665.

Soldiers must make appointments for AER

The Army Emergency Relief is processing clients' requests for assistance on appointment basis. Clients are requested to schedule an appointment and have all required paperwork when reporting to AER.

If you are unable to keep your scheduled appointment, a courtesy call is required. Call 545-2536, 545-7517, 545-4357 or 545-4043.

Runners have priority during PT hours

Formations and individual runners have priority of movement on Fort Benning during the established physical training hours of 6 to 7:30 a.m. Monday through Friday.

Formation running is not authorized on sidewalks throughout the installation. Units must use roadways and proper safety equipment must be worn and operational.

Individual runners and walkers may use the sidewalks and also are required to wear proper reflective clothing or road guard vests.

Speed limit during PT hours is 15 mph and 10 mph when passing individuals and troop formations.

Specialty, Jacket shops hours' change

The operating hours for the Specialty Shop and the Jacket Shop on Sand Hill, Building 3218, has been changed to Monday through Friday from 3 to 10 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday from 1 to 10 p.m.

New fish, wildlife manager to expand program

Directorate of Public Works

Fort Benning's new fish and wildlife administrator plans to develop and expand the post wildlife program.

Peter Swiderek, son of retired Master Sgt. and Mrs. Benedict J. Swiderek of Columbus, has been selected to fill the position on post. He will supervise all activities pertaining to the operation, development, management and protection of wildlife.

The red cockaded woodpecker, an endangered species, will be at the top of the priority list, he said.

"My goal is to make Fort Benning's Fish and Wildlife Unit the best in the Army," he said. "It won't happen overnight, but with the direction of Charles Ford, the chief of the Natural Resources Management Branch, and the hard work of my staff, it will happen. I'm looking forward to working with the military community at Fort Benning and I will do all I can to support the training mission."

He is working with his staff to develop and expand the wildlife management program for both game and nongame species.

The red cockaded woodpecker, an endangered species, will receive high priority. Fort Benning has the largest population of these woodpeckers in Georgia. The woodpecker is unique in that it requires pine trees at least 60 years old in which to build its cavity.

Tom Brooks, RCW coordinator, and several staff personnel are busy marking cavity trees, conducting habitat surveys, and assisting with five projects being conducted by the Nature Conservancy. One such project involves installing 200 nest boxes into pine trees for the birds to use.

In addition to the RCW, other species that are experiencing population declines, which include the gopher tortoise and migratory songbirds like the parula warbler, will receive attention.

Several surveys and studies are under way to learn more about these animals and their habitats. This information will be used to implement management plans to help their populations recover.

There are 15 fish ponds on Fort Benning and almost all of them need work, according to Swiderek.

This year, Kings and Twilight Ponds have been limed and fertilized. Hedleys Pond also has been fertilized. All three ponds will be fertilized several more times this spring and summer. Other pond projects that are being evaluated include: fertilizing and liming additional ponds, dam and water control structure repair, weed control and restocking.

Preparations are being made to plant 10 dove fields totalling 127 acres. These will be planted in browntop millet, sesame and Egyptian wheat. Fall plantings of wheat, clover and rye will be increased this year. During February and March, natural resources personnel and volunteers planted 4,000 sawtooth oak, crabapple and persimmon trees. All these plantings will be beneficial to deer, wild turkey, songbirds, and other wildlife, he said.

Swiderek

Swiderek graduated from the University of Georgia as an ROTC cadet with a regular Army commission.

Later he returned to the university and obtained a master's degree in wildlife biology. He has worked as a wildlife biologist for the Southeastern Cooperative Wildlife Disease Study, South Carolina Wildlife and Marine Resources Department, and Georgia Department of Natural Resources.

Post launches pilot program for civilians

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Fort Benning has launched a pilot program to encourage civilian employees to participate in regular physical fitness activities.

The program is part of the post's Total Fitness 2000 Program.

Civilian employees can extend their lunch period by 30 minutes to participate in a personal fitness program if they extend their tour of duty, either before or after work, to cover the additional time used for the fitness activity.

"Employees who actively participate in physical fitness programs are usually more productive and healthy," said Patty Pfeiffer, a member of the Quality Management Board for Fitness and Health Process Action Team for Civilian Fitness.

"They take less sick leave, have higher morale, spend less money on health care and look and feel better," she said. " Regular exercise is also an excellent way to combat stress."

In order to participate, employees must request permission from their supervisor by a written memorandum, which includes a list of the specific activities they will pursue and the requested change of their hours of duty. For example, if the present tour of duty is 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., the new tour of duty can be 7:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. or 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Supervisors have approval authority consistent with mission requirements.

"Employees who actively participate in physical fitness programs ... take less sick leave, have higher morale, spend less money on health care and look and feel better."

— Patty Pfeiffer
Process action team member

Participants must attach to the request a health release form or statement from a physician approving their participation in an aerobic physical fitness program and the following signed and dated statement of liability:

"In consideration for being allowed to participate in a lunch time physical fitness program, I hereby release the U.S. government, including all of its subdivisions, officers, military personnel, employees and agents from all liability for all personal injury that may result from my participation in the program. I agree that this release not only binds myself, but my family, heirs, assigns, administrators and executors. I have read this release from liability certification and fully understand it's contents."

Employees can exercise on their own or they can participate in organized activities that already exist, such as the aerobics class offered at the Infantry Hall Fitness Center.

Physical activities must be conducted between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. and can include aerobic fitness activities such as brisk walking, jogging, floor aerobics, lap swimming, singles tennis or any activity that uses large muscle groups in a rhythmic fashion and that is maintained for 20 to 60 minutes for three to five times per week.

Activities such as bowling, doubles tennis, golfing and other recreational activities are not permitted.

"We also encourage people to form groups of two or three people who can exercise together," said Sheryl Creek, process action team chairwoman. "People who are in a group will motivate each other and the companionship will give the participants incentive to keep exercising."

Creek suggested choosing an activity that can be conducted near the work site to maximize the amount of time spent exercising.

"If you work at Martin Army Community Hospital, for example, take a walk around the hospital a few times," she said.

Pfeiffer also reminded participants to always conduct their activities in a safe manner.

"Know the post safety regulations regarding physical activities," she said. "If you are running or walking, use existing tracks or trails and watch out for traffic. If you are using weights or exercise equipment for the first time, get help from the qualified instructors who work in the fitness centers."

Pfeiffer said the post's "Follow Me to Fitness" program, which is also part of the Total Fitness 2000 Program, is still being conducted as well.

The eight-week program consists of classroom instruction and organized physical activities three times each week.

The objective of the class is to encourage good health and fitness practices among the participants and motivate them to continue with a fitness program of their own when the formal program is over.

For more information, call Pfeiffer at 545-5580.

Military should plan now for life after Army

Army Career and Alumni Program

Most people leaving the military find themselves at a disadvantage when they start looking for a job, according to Ted Craig, Fort Benning's Army Career and Alumni Program transition services manager.

"It's important to think far ahead," Craig said. "We offer career guidance to people. It's never too early to begin thinking about what you may want to do after the military. We help people based on their individual needs."

ACAP offers:

• A three-day workshop within 180 days of separation that helps military members prepare for transition.

• A one-day "advanced course" dealing with resume writing and interview skills.

• The Defense Outplacement Referral System process that provides a free service to match a person's abilities to civilian employment positions and by sending a mini-resume to a data base used by hundreds of employers throughout the world.

• Career Day provides an opportunity for employers to meet, brief and interview soldiers.

• The Educational Opportunity Program makes it possible for a person to get help or information about tuition assistance, enrollment procedures, or data on any college or university.

• Referrals for separation benefits to include Special Separation Benefits, Voluntary Separation Incentive and retirement.

Below is a timetable for job hunting while still in the service.

12 months before leaving:

• Talk with local transition center personnel.

• Visit the Retirement Services Office if you are retiring.

• Discuss with your family, possible options, setting goals for the job and location search.

• Decide where you want to live after leaving the military.

• Decide what types of jobs you qualify for and the income you will need.

• Start subscriptions or check the local library for professional or trade journals.

• Make sure you have or can acquire any necessary license you need for your chosen profession.

• Check your financial status and make plans to have enough money to cover several months of expenses if you don't find a job immediately.

• Research job possibilities, job markets and the economic conditions in the area you want.

9 months before leaving:

• Decide what type of work you are going to look for.

• Do first drafts of your resume.

• If possible, visit the area where you plan to move to after leaving the military; if you can't visit, write the local chamber of commerce for information.

• For job and real estate information, subscribe to weekend newspapers from the area where you plan to move.

• Continue research.

• Keep in touch with the local transition point.

6 months before leaving:

• Attend an ACAP transition class whether retiring or getting out of the Army.

• Finalize your resume; decide if you need help in developing the best possible resume and if you need to hire a professional resume writer.

• Develop a list of employers in the field in which you are interested; also, determine any friends you might have in the private sector who may be able to help you.

• Contact an executive recruiter for assistance if you qualify and are looking for a job in this category.

• Begin developing a contingency plan for job and location in case your plan falls through.

3 months before leaving:

• Send out resumes and begin making telephone calls to check on their arrival.

• Begin replying to want ads in newspapers and magazines.

• Visit the state employment agency where you plan to live.

1994 federal voting campaign

Local elections important as national ones

By Steve Barrett
American Forces Information Service

With the spotlight on the 1994 federal voting campaign, many Department of Defense voters often forget local elections that may affect their families now and themselves later.

These elections include campaigns for mayors, state senators and assemblymen parish superintendents, county sheriffs, judges, coroners and clerks. Additional issues may range from local beautification campaigns to multimillion-dollar highway construction.

Workers in the Federal Voting Assistance Program are not only emphasizing the importance of the federal campaign. They are also encouraging voters to play their parts in state, county, city and district campaigns.

"I think state and local elections have just as much impact on the military as the national elections," said Phyllis Taylor, program director.

Taylor gives an example that occurred in Nevada last year. "The military absentee vote not only determined who won that election but which party controlled the Senate," she said. "The absentee ballots are making a difference."

She continued by saying local officials make daily decisions on education, local taxes and property taxes. "Many military families own property and intend to return to those locations where they are now voting absentee," she said. "Voting is the only process where they're able to voice themselves and have impact on their communities."

Unit voting assistance officers can offer some help, but Taylor said, they're not responsible for keeping up on candidates and issues. "Their responsibility is getting voters registered and to tell individuals where to get the information," she said. Voters may write to state political parties and contact the League of Women Voters for information. Local newspapers often provide voters balanced coverage of candidates, and family members back home often give absentees an "inside" look at how the election affects their home.

In 1988, Federal Voting Assistance Program officials created a new information channel. They established the Voting Information Center, a toll-free telephone service at the Pentagon providing election information and assistance to service members and DoD employees. Originally, the service provided congressional and gubernatorial candidates a channel to leave recorded messages on election issues.

Yet, Taylor said, it allows service members access to each state's secretary of state to get local election information. Callers may not get recorded information, but Taylor said voters could leave their requests with center personnel for forwarding to each state.

Taylor said voters can obtain the information they need any time, but it won't do much good if the voter doesn't register and vote. "The rules are different for each state," she said. "That is why members need to get with voting officer and apply for their ballot."

During Operation Desert Shield and Desert Storm, Taylor said, some states allowed military voters to fax voting applications from the Persian Gulf. Since then, 38 states have changed their voting laws to allow faxed absentee applications.

Election boards mail voters absentee ballots 30 to 45 days before the general election. Seventeen states will fax that ballot to absentee voters. Once received, the voter must promptly vote and return the ballot so that it arrives before Election Day.

Taylor said voting is not a legal obligation, but a civic responsibility. "I don't look at it like I have to convince people they have to vote," she said. "We try to point out the close elections that occur and the impact that they make. I don't think there is anything more motivating than to know you have that direct impact when you cast that ballot."

Primaries start election process

By Steve Barrett
American Forces Information Service

Nov. 8 marks the day Americans vote for federal, state and local candidates vying for public office.

Among the stakes this year are all seats in the U.S. House of Representatives, to include four House delegate positions; 35 U.S. Senate seats; 36 governors' positions; and the mayoral office in Washington, D.C.

Yet many voters will register only for the November election, not realizing the election process begins with primary elections.

Before November, each state holds preliminary elections, known commonly as primaries.

These elections "narrow the field" to one candidate in each political party. Once selected by the voters, party candidates then campaign for the available seat, decided by the general election in November.

Texas and Illinois held primaries in March, but no other primaries are slated until May. Indiana, Ohio and North Carolina hold primary elections May 3, the first of 10 primary elections that month.

June has 13 primaries slated, Georgia holds its primary in July, and eight states hold August elections.

The busiest month is September, when 15 states, the District of Columbia, Guam and the U.S. Virgin Islands hold elections. The Louisiana primary is Oct. 1.

The Federal Voting Assistance Program office in Washington is prepared to answer questions and help voters get involved in the primary process.

Phyllis Taylor, program director, said unit voting assistance officers can direct voters to agencies where information on candidates and issues is available.

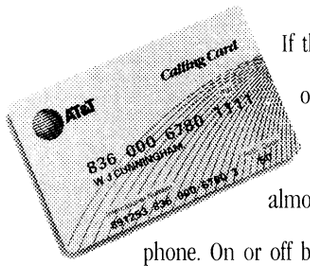
However, Taylor said the first step in the primary process is voter registration via federal post card application—the sooner, the better. "Each state has its own set of voting rules," she said.

"Voters need to get with their voting assistance officers early, find out what is required, when their primaries are held, and ensure their applications are mailed in time," she said.

Because of lengthy mailing times, Taylor said, voters overseas must ensure applications are accurate.

"I can't express how important that first step is in mailing that application," she said. "If completing the application is incorrectly done, that alone could disenfranchise an individual because of the delay that could occur."

Voters needing information should contact their unit voting assistance officer first.



The voting assistance officer processes voting applications and refers voters to agencies that answer questions on candidates and issues.

Voters may also call the Federal Voting Assistance Program's toll-free number, (800) 438-8683, for voting information assistance.

Tri-communities to salute military

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

Military Appreciation Week is scheduled for May 15 to 21 at Fort Benning and the surrounding areas. Military Appreciation Week is when Fort Benning, Columbus and Phenix City come together to celebrate military units, service members and their families. This year's event is approaching fast.

Military Appreciation Week is scheduled for May 15 to 21. Below are a few of the events scheduled to be held. For more information concerning the events, contact Lamar Caldwell at 545-7357.

Kick-off relay — Open to active duty military only. Teams will consist of six runners, one driver and one carryall. The course from Infantry Hall to Harmony Church is divided into eight one-mile legs. Each runner will run either one or two of the legs until the team reaches the field house. The event is scheduled to start at 5:15 a.m. May 16.

Beach volleyball — Open to the public. Eliminations will be conducted May 16 to narrow the field down to eight from Fort Benning and eight from Columbus and Phenix City. Tournament structure will depend on the number of entries. Match is one game played to 15 points and a point is awarded on every serve. The top three teams will receive awards immediately after competition. Preliminaries are scheduled to be held at Kelley Hill Recreational Center with the finals being held at Scooters in Columbus.

Boxing — Open to active duty military only. Each subchapter is required to provide one boxer in each of four weight classes; 145 to 154 pounds, 155 to 164 pounds, 165 to 174 pounds and 175 to 190 pounds. Participants cannot have any boxing experience or a maximum of one bout experience. After weigh-ins, a random draw will decide opponents. Bout winners will receive two points, while bout losers receive one point. Weigh-ins and physicals are May 16 at 2 p.m. at the Kelley Hill Fitness Center.

Bowling — Open to the public and will be conducted at the Main Post Bowling Center and Mall Bowling Center. Every individual or team will bowl three games. The winners, based on the teams best six game totals, will receive their awards May 21 at 9 a.m. at the Main Post Bowling Center.

Wrestling — Open to active duty military and USA Wrestling Affiliated Clubs. Each subchapter can enter an unlimited number of entries in each weight class: 114.5 pounds, 125.5 pounds, 136.5 pounds pounds, 149.5 pounds, 163.5 pounds,180 pounds, 198.5 pounds and 220 pounds. International freestyle rules govern. Weigh-ins and physicals will be May 17 at 1 p.m. and matches are scheduled to begin at 4 p.m. at Santiago Fitness Center.

Cycling — Open to the public May 18. The race format is criterium with competitors doing several laps around the 1.3 mile race course. The race course is Hall Street, Dilboy Street and Vibbert Street. Start and finish on Hall Street in front of Briant Wells Field House. Age groups are; 12 and under, 13 to 17, 18 to 29, 30 to 39, 40 to 49, 50 to 59 and 60 and over.

Track and field — Open to the public. Scheduled for May 19 at Doughboy Stadium at 4 p.m. Each subchapter will enter a minimum of two individuals into each individual event and one team into each relay. The events are normal track and field events.

AUSA golf tournament — Open to active duty military and corporate AUSA members only. Tournament is limited to the first 144 golfers. Entry fees are; staff sergeant and below, $7.50; sergeant first class and above, $15; club members, $15 and nonmembers, $25.

Swimming — Open to the public. Swimming events include; 50-yard freestyle, breaststroke, backstroke and butterfly; 100-yard freestyle; 100-yard individual medley and 200-yard medley and freestyle. Age groups are; 8 years and under, 9 to 10 years, 11to 12years, 13 to 14years, 15 to 18 years and masters. The youth and masters competitions take place on two different days — May 19 (youth) at 5 p.m. and May 20 (masters) at 5 p.m. Both meets are scheduled to be held at Briant Wells Field house.

Combat cross country — Open to active duty military only. Scheduled for May 20 at 2 p.m. Subchapters will enter a minimum of one seven-person team. Individuals will navigate a five- to eight-kilometer course wearing battle dress uniforms, load bearing equipment boots, soft cap and carrying an M-16. Team standings will be determined by the sum of the order of place for the first five finishers on each team. Course consists of open fields, water jumps, steep terrain navigation, logs and other field obstacles.

Fishing tournament — Open to the public. Scheduled for May 20. Tournament fish are bass (largemouth, spotted or redeye). Fishing limit is seven. All fish must be at least 16 inches long. Catches must be weighed in by 5 p.m. on the day of the tournament. Entry fee is $10.

"Burn the General" Run — Open to the public. The commanding general will start 30 meters in front of the participants. A member of the 29th Infantry Regiment will run with the general, carrying his two-star flag. This will keep the runners informed of his location. The object of the run is to beat the general on a three-mile course. Every finisher will receive an I "burned the general" or I was "burned by the general" certificate.

AUSA to host job fair May 19

Army Career and Alumni Program

A job fair will be May 19 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Main NCO Club, Building 2784.

The job fair is being conducted in conjunction with Armed Forces Day, May 21, and the job fair will be hosted by the Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army.

A target audience of soldiers, retirees, Department of the Army civilians and their family members in excess of 1,000 are expected to attend this event.

More than 200 local and world-wide companies have been invited to participate in this event.

Interested persons should bring approximately 20 copies of their resume for possible on-the-spot interviews. Duty uniform or other proper attire is recommended.

Interested persons needing assistance in resume preparation can make an appointment with the Army Career and Alumni Program, Building 2617, or the Army Community Service Family Member Employment Assistance Program, Building 2643, located in Soldiers' Plaza.

Transition assistance gets budget priority

By Steve Barrett
American Forces Information Service

Faced with reducing the nation's military strength to 1.526 million by September 1995, DoD requested more than $1 billion for transition assistance in its budget.

Transition initiatives include early retirements, separation allowances and educational programs.

Senior defense officials said about 85,000 service members will leave by the end of fiscal 1995. DoD would like to do this without involuntary separations.

DoD budgeted $700 million to fund the military's Special Separation Benefit program. This program provides lump-sum payments to service members with six to 19 years' service who voluntarily separate.

Payments are based on rank and time in service, with eligible members usually in overstrength skills.

Officials hope to separate nearly 21,000 service members through SSB and an additional 3,000 via the Voluntary Separation Incentive program.

This program pays a separation allowance in annual increments, based on the member's rank and longevity.

Nearly $400 million funds the services' early retirement programs. DoD anticipates 12,000 early retirements during fiscal 1995. The temporary program allows service members with 15 to 20 years' service to retire.

Early retirements are based on each service's requirements. Members offered early retirement are generally in overstrength or discontinued job specialties.

Although the VSI, SSB and retirement programs will help lower the numbers, they won't complete all necessary reductions. Officials hope reduced accessions and early releases will bring numbers down to established goals.

However, selective early retirement and reduction-in-force boards remain possible.

"We use these boards only if necessary," said one official. "If we can get the people out by using voluntary methods, we won't have to force people out."

The official said no RIF boards are scheduled for fiscal 1995 by any service, but early retirement boards for officers and NCOs may occur in some services.

To ensure departing military personnel are prepared for civilian life, DoD also budgeted $72 million for its 330 transition centers worldwide.

Bob Stein, DoD's director of transition support and services, said the budget covers routine operations, salaries and a variety of services designed to provide service members employment assistance before they separate.

These services include job fairs, computerized job networking and seminars on interviews and resume writing. They also include counseling on veteran benefits earned while serving on active duty.

Another budget item is $179 million allocated to education and training programs.

Veterans' Affairs publishes benefits handbook for vets

Department of Veterans Affairs

The latest edition of "Federal Benefits for Veterans and Dependents," a publication consistently on the government's best-seller list, is currently available from the U.S. Government Printing Office.

Published by the Department of Veterans Affairs, the 73-page handbook has been revised with the latest changes in law for 1994. It describes federal benefits for veterans and dependents, such as medical care, education, disability compensation, pension, life insurance, home loan guaranty, vocational rehabilitation and burial benefits.

It also explains requirements for eligibility and outlines claims procedures.

Listed in the book are addresses and telephone numbers of all VA offices, medical centers, national cemeteries, veterans counseling centers and other VA facilities. In addition, VA's toll-free number — (800) 827-1000 — is listed for veterans to reach the nearest benefits counselor.

The handbook also includes special sections on veterans benefits administered by other federal agencies.

"Federal Benefits for Veterans and Dependents" ranks third in total sales of publications by the U.S. Government Printing office. Including the 1993 edition, some 2,681,000 copies have been sold through December.

For copies, request GPO stock number 051-000-00202-4 from the Superintendent of Documents, P.O. Box 371954, Pittsburgh, Pa. 15220-7954, and enclose a check for $2.50 per copy or provide your VISA or MasterCard number and expiration date.

Memorial set for officer killed in Iraq

USAIC Public Affairs Office

A memorial mass followed by a graveside service for Capt. Patrick M. McKenna of Columbus will be held at Sightseeing Road Chapel on Way Street at noon Saturday.

McKenna was killed near Irbil, Iraq, April 14 when the UH-60 Blackhawk helicopter he was piloting was struck when fired upon by U.S. F-15C fighters.

Media representatives may record the service from a designated area near the parking lot of the Audie Murphy Gym next to the chapel and an area at the Main Post Cemetery.

Following the service at the chapel, media representatives will be escorted inside for photographs of the display of boots, helmet and weapon.

McKenna

Family members will not be available for interviews.

The McKenna family asks that expressions of sympathy be made to The Citadel, care of Robert Poydasheff, Trust Company of Columbus, P.O. Box 431, Columbus, Ga. 31902.

HOW TO RECYCLE

Post housing residents may place recyclable materials in brown plastic bins for weekly curbside pickup.

Here is a list of the items that can and cannot be placed in the bin for recycling.

- Glass: Clear green or brown bottles and jars including soda, beer or liquor containers may be placed in the bin. All caps must be removed before placing the bottles in the bin. Glass items such as light bulbs, window or automobile glass, mirrors and drinking glasses cannot be placed in the bin.
- Metal: All metal cans (the labels do not have to be removed) can be placed in the bin after rinsing them. Metal foils, such as aluminum foil, cannot be placed in the bin.
- Plastic: Soda bottles, milk containers and water jugs can be recycled but the caps must be removed and the bottles crushed by stepping on them before placing them in the bin. Styrofoam, plastic bags and caps from recyclable bottles and containers cannot be placed in the bin.
- Paper: Newspaper can be placed in the bin if it is bundled or placed in a brown paper bag and placed beside the bin at the curb on collection day. All glossy paper, such as that used in catalogs, brochures and advertisements, cannot be recycled. Magazines are not acceptable at this time.

Shooters going for gold in World Cup

14 USAMU marksmen trying to win spots on 1996 Olympic shooting team

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, currently hosting the 1994 World Cup USA and the U.S. Grand Prix shooting championships, hopes to see gold come its way before the final shot is fired.

More than 400 athletes from 43 countries are on the downhill end of the 10-day shooting competition, which will officially end on Saturday with the finals of skeet, rapid fire pistol, sport pistol and 300-meter rifle.

Columbus Mayor Frank Martin was on hand to wish the athletes well and said he hoped to see many of them again in the not too distant future.

"With the 1996 Olympic Games in Atlanta, it is my guess a lot of these shooters will be back this way very soon," Martin said.

"We have got some of the best athletes in the world right in our own backyard," said USAMU commander Col. Lory Johnson, who officially declared the World Cup USA open for competition. "This should be one of the best shooting competitions anyone will ever see."

Fourteen USAMU shooters are trying to win spots on the 1996 Olympic shooting team. By winning a gold medal the home nation will be awarded a quota slot.

This will guarantee that someone from that country will compete in the event, but not necessarily the athlete who earned the medal.

Shooters from more than 46 different countries are competing in the event, which is taking place at the Tommy G. Pool International Shooting Complex on Alamo Road on post.

Shooters will also be shooting for minimum qualifying scores that are established by the International Shooting Union for their respective team's Olympic tryouts.

Fort Benning is hosting its first World Cup due to the proximity to Atlanta for the 1996 Games and its recently upgraded facilities.

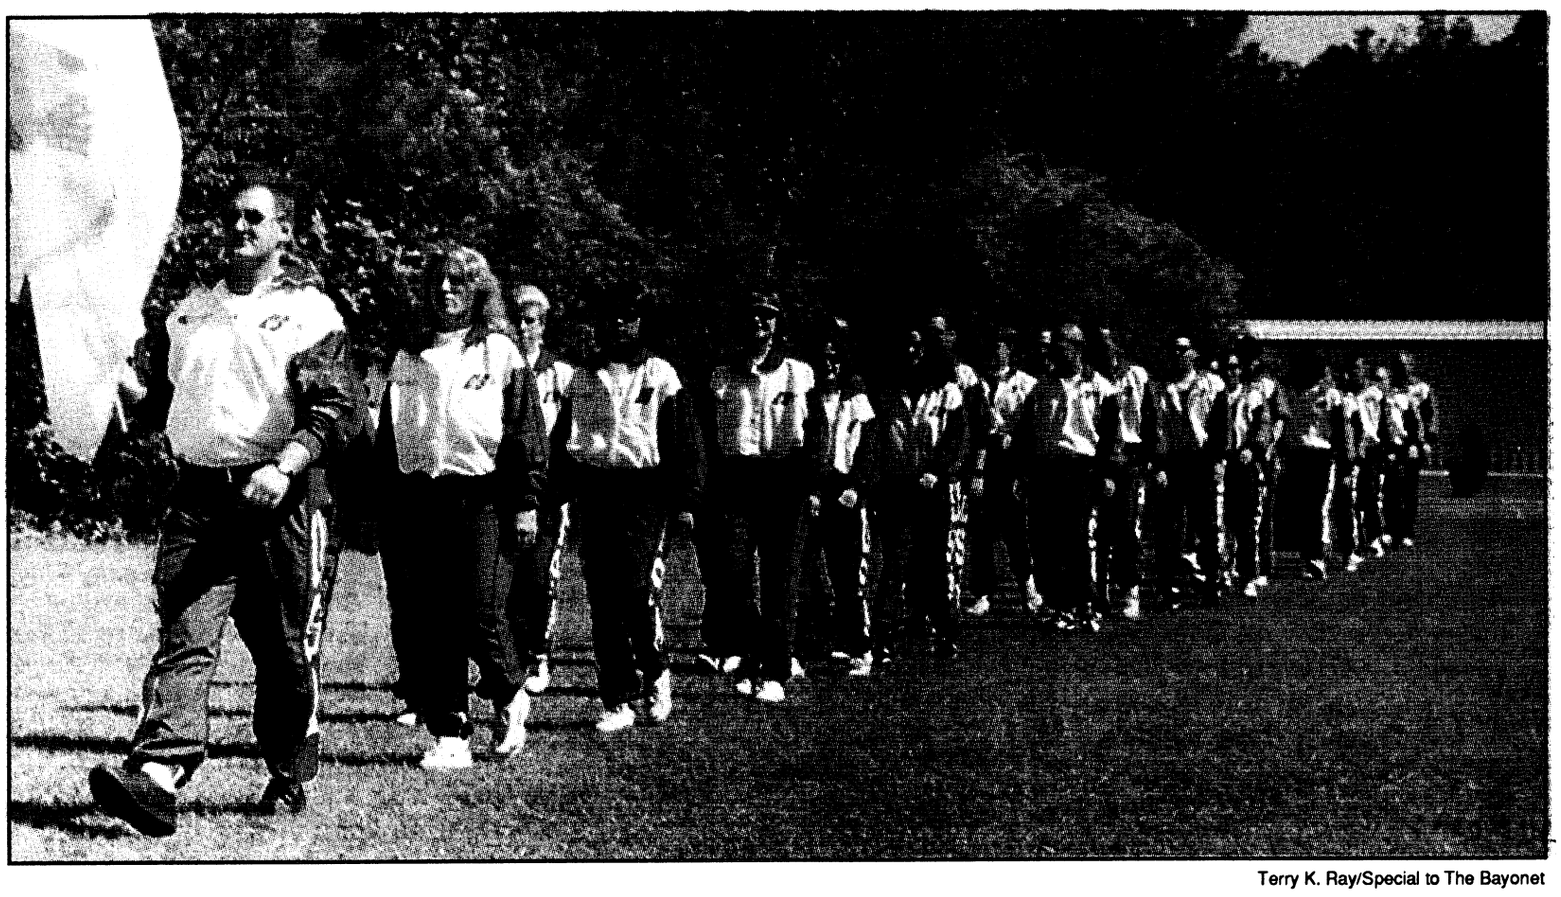
"More Olympic champions have shot on this hill than anywhere in the world," said USAMU spokesman Bob Aylward.

"To be right up front, Columbus is hosting the 1996 Olympic softball, but only so many people will be able to watch the softball, and they'll have to buy a ticket. I'd say two-thirds of the people shooting here this week have been or will be Olympians," stated Aylward.

"This is the closest a lot of people will get to having a chance to watch the Olympics, and it's free."

The U.S. Shooting Team captured its first two medals of the World Cup with Ann-Marie Pfiffner, 24. of Dubuque, Iowa, winning a Gold Medal in women's air rifle competition on Monday. Pfiffner won the Gold on her final shot of the match with a score of 10.9 to edge out Mladenka Malencia of Croatia.

Pam Stalzer of Sioux Falls, S.D., took the Silver Medal Tuesday in the women's three-position com-petition falling 0.8 points behind Gold Medal winner Lindey Hansen of Norway.



Standing in fourth place going into the finals Stalzer battled her way into second place and was within a half point from tying Hansen with three shots remaining, but a gust of wind kept Stalzer from the gold.

"I feel good, but I wish I could have shots eight and nine back. I was just nervous," said Stalzer. "It's hard to watch the wind, because you only have 75 seconds to shoot, so you pretty much have to just get a good hold and shoot the shot pretty quick."

In the men's Grand Prix trap, two Americans placed first and second in the finals. Brian Ballard of Coto De Caza, Calif., held off teammate and Army Marksmanship shooter Bret Erickson for top honors.

Competition will continue through Saturday with the closing ceremonies scheduled for later in the day.

Editor's note: Complete results will appear next week.

Dahlonega gears up for race

5th Ranger Training Battalion

DAHLONEGA, Ga. - Individual runners and teams from as far away as Illinois will be running through the hills of Dahlonega as 5th Ranger Training battalion hosts the competition of the sixth annual Mountain Ranger Run May 21.

In the team competition, the top three five-person teams with the lowest combined 10K time will win trophies and medallions. Awards will also be awarded to the top male and female finishes in eight different age groups.

This year's run will offer a 5K walk that will start fiveminutes after the 10K race. The first 15 walkers across the finish line will receive a pair of Sorbothane Ultrasoles.

Standard Telephone and McDonald's have volunteered to help run the water points along the route and McDonald's and Coca-Cola of Gainesville will provide refreshments at the finish line.

Dahlonega Massage Therapy will be treating tired muscled with free massages.

Door prizes will be given away to participants and a microwave toaster oven will be raffled away courtesy of Folger Gas.

The race is sponsored by Dr. Patrick Conarro, McDonald's, Powerade, Country Cupboard, Ranger Joe's of Columbus and North Georgia College.

Team competition this year is in five-person teams, with the winning team receiving limited edition, numbered Mountain Ranger Coins in addition to trophies.

The 5th Ranger Training Battalion will be defending its undefeated winning record in the team event.

Unit entry forms are available on request from Civil Affairs.

Limited billeting is available on a first-come, first-served basis. Units entering 30 or more runners can have their race T-shirts customized with their unit logo.

Contact the Officers' Association for more information.

The race will start and finish on the main campus of North Georgia College in Dahlonega.

The race is a nationally certified 10K course and is sanctioned by the U.S. Track and Field Association.

For more information, contact Jim Malachowski at (706) 864-3327 or 864-3367 Ext. 143 or DSN 797-5770.

Blue Jays nip Orioles 9-6

13- to 15-year-olds battle it out

By Dan Callahan
Fort Benning Youth Activities

The Blue Jays came out on top of a nine-inning struggle against the Orioles Saturday morning. Both teams are part of the Fort Benning Youth Activities 13- to 15-year-old baseball league. The final score of the three-hour game was Blue Jays 9, Orioles 6.

In the first inning, Blue Jay batters Rick Rhodes and Craig Nurnberg got on base with a walk. Rhodes stole third but was left stranded after Oriole pitcher Ty Mason struck out a Blue Jay batter for the third out.

Things looked good for the Orioles when they came to bat as Josh Trotter and Caleb Preston both were walked, then stole second, third and home.

Mason got on base with a walk and stole second base before he was hit in by Chris Callahan's single. Blue Jay pitcher Jason Cole got warmed up and brought the Orioles to a halt with a strikeout for the third out.

Both teams were held scoreless in the second as Blue Jay batter Sherman Henderson was walked then stole second and third but was left on base when Mason struck out the next two Blue Jays.

Blue Jays came on strong in the third when Tommy Henderson and Rhodes walked followed by Nurnberg who hit a double to drive Henderson in for their first run. Rhodes added to the score by stealing home.

Nurnberg stole home for the Blue Jays' third run. Tony Veneziani, 5, Henderson and Kara Orris all got on base with a walk. Veneziani stole third and Henderson stole second but all three runners were left stranded by the Orioles defense.

When the Orioles came to bat, lead batter Preston was walked and advanced to third on stolen bases. Blue Jay pitcher Cole shut down the Orioles in the remaining of the third and the fourth inning by striking out the next six consecutive batters.

The Blue Jays scored one in the fourth when T. Henderson and Rhodes walked and stole a base, putting runners on second and third. Nurnberg got his second RBI of the game as he hit Henderson in. The Orioles held them to a total of one run in both the fourth and fifth innings, as Oriole Shortstop Josh Trotter caught a fly ball and relief pitcher Caleb Preston struck out the Jay's next five batters.

Orioles tied the score in the fifth when Josh Trotter walked, stole second and third, then was awarded home by a balk.

Both teams played tough defense keeping the score tied in the sixth and seventh innings and forced the game into extra innings.

The Jays took the lead in the top of the eighth when Rhodes was walked and stole second, third and home. The Orioles refused to give up and tied the score, once again, when Josh Trotter hit a home run.

The Blue Jays appeared determined to bring things to a close in the ninth as they scored four runs. Morris started things off by getting on base with a walk and was later walked in for a score after Jeremy Walling, T. Henderson and Rhodes all were walked. Nurnberg came to bat and hit a single scoring the seventh run and his third RBI of the game.

Cole followed up with a double, hitting in two more runs making the score 9 to 5. The Orioles came to bat and had a glimmer of hope when John Trotter got on base with a single, stole second and was driven in by a double hit by Tony Dupree.

Their hopes came to an end when a hard fly ball hit to left field by Josh Trotter was caught by left fielder Tony Veneziani for the third and final out of the game.

Rugby championships to begin

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The 1994 US Military Rugby Club Championships begin today with seven competitions at Stewart Field. Approximately 30 teams from around the country including reigning champions Pensacola, Naval Air Station and Fort Benning in sevens play will be on hand for the three-day tournament.

"Matches will be on Stewart Field this year instead of Blue and French Fields from last year so as not to conflict with the Youth Activities soccer programs which are getting under way," said Columbus Fort Benning Rugby Football Club head coach Jim Muldoon. "We can play as many matches on Stewart Field as we could on the other fields and this way the kids don't have to give up any of their playing time."

The tournament will begin with sevens competition this afternoon, with regular match play to start Saturday morning. More than 400 athletes are expected to be on hand for the tournament, which is being hosted by Fort Benning for the second consecutive year.

Other teams scheduled to attend the tournament from around the country are: Camp Pendleton, Calif; Fort Rucker, Ala; Panama; Fort Carson, Colo; 29 Palms, Calif; Fort Hood, Texas; Camp LeJeune, N.C.; Eglin Air Force Base, Fla.; Quantico, Va.; Cherry Point, N.C.; Fort Leonardwood, Mo., Fort Bragg, N.C.; Fort Sill, Okla.; Monterey, Calif.; Parris Island, S.C.; and the Military Academy at West Point, N.Y.

crime watch

Military Police Activity

The following entries are from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from March 28 to April 4. Such entries may be incomplete and do not determine the guilt or innocence of any person.

• A specialist was charged with excessive speed, fleeing and eluding a police officer and reckless driving after he was observed traveling 66 mph in a 45 mph zone. While attempting to elude Military Police, the specialist failed to stop for a posted stop sign and passed a vehicle on a bridge.

• A sergeant first class was charged with wrongful use of a controlled substance after he tested positive for cocaine during a unit urinalysis.

• A private reported she was raped by another private while she was visiting him in his barracks room.

• A private first class was charged with theft of services after it was discovered he illegally connected several rooms in his barracks to a cable television box.

• A specialist was charged with domestic assault after he hit his wife in the face with a dog food container. He then grabbed her by the neck and forced her onto a sofa.

• Two family members were charged with truancy after being absent from school without their parent's permission.

• A staff sergeant was charged with aggravated assault after he pushed his wife to the floor and threatened to kill her with a knife.

• A private was charged with aggravated assault after he hit another private in the head with a flashlight.

• A civilian (former soldier) was charged with fraud and larceny of government property after he received approximately $20,000 in government funds after being discharged from the Army.

• A civilian was charged with child abuse after she left her two children unattended in her vehicle for more than two hours.

Other activities included nine traffic accidents and five cases of driving under the influence of alcohol.

Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5223.

community care

By Ken Franklin
Martin Army Community Hospital

Q: Having signed on with the Primary Care of the Uniformed Services Clinic, I have little or no need to seek civilian medical services.

When I did use this service, I did so under Medicare. To supplement the costs, I purchased supplement insurance that paid a small percentage that Medicare sometimes wouldn't cover or at least help out until my deductible was paid each year.

Is this insurance necessary or should I drop it? It is quite expensive for the amount of use that I got from it, even before I signed on with PRIMUS.

A: In today's rather bizarre health-care climate, there is no easy answer to your question. Even government employees are offered a chance to change insurance once a year — and many do, because of changing prices and circumstances.

Every family should consider some form of supplemental insurance, whether active duty or retired. However, not all insurance companies are equal; and after consideration, you may conclude that no supplement is your best option. Here's some points to consider in making your decision.

• Can I expect to stay this healthy? This is a difficult question, especially as one gets older. Remember, it's harder, and can be considerably more expensive, to get insurance after you become ill, and the chances of becoming seriously ill, increase as you get older.

• What is my financial situation? You must determine if you and your family can afford to pay for your medical bills. Then, you should evaluate your monthly expenses to determine how much insurance you can afford. Remember, medical costs, especially for serious illnesses, are rising faster than the rate of inflation.

• Will I always have access to military medicine? Eligible beneficiaries are entitled to military medical care if it is available. However, it is impossible to predict whether military medical care availability will change in the future.

• Are there cheaper alternatives? Compare the cost of your premiums and level of coverage. If you need help in evaluating a policy, you may contact the hospital's Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services Office at 544-3461.

Do you have a question about family care at Fort Benning? Send it to: Community Care Corner, Martin Army Community Hospital, ATTN: HSXB-F, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905-6100.

ask the judge

By Dinah Ralney Kirk
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

The Legal Assistance Office has received several complaints from individuals who have been duped into entering into high priced, but worthless, "free lifetime film" and "photo processing" contracts.

Many of these photography services companies induce consumers into signing contracts by promising high quality merchandise at a discounted price.

However, legal assistance clients have continuously complained about the substandard quality of the products and services provided by these companies. Clients have also complained about written contractual misrepresentations, such as promises of "free gifts," which are in many cases never received.

Additionally, sales representatives often make false oral promises to consumers concerning the type of services and products that are in many cases never received. Additionally, sales representatives often make false oral promises to consumers concerning the type of services and products that are provided under the contract.

Many of these photography services companies sell their products using door-to-door sales. A door-to-door sale is a sale, lease or rental of consumer goods or services with a purchase price of $25 or more in which the seller or a representative personally solicits the sale, and the buyer's agreement or offer to purchase is made at a place other than the place of business of the seller.

An example of such as a sale is where a salesperson comes to a potential buyer's home or place of business and sells products or services.

Sales resulting from presentations in rented hotel rooms or public halls are also considered door-to-door sales. This is also true for contracts entered into as a result of a salesperson approaching a potential buyer in a public place, such as a restaurant.

Some of these companies conduct door-to-door sales transactions on Fort Benning, even though they have not received approval from the installation to do so. Therefore, if you live on Fort Benning and are approached by someone who is selling photography services (or any products or services for that matter), you should obtain the salesperson's name, as well as the name, address and telephone number of the salesperson's business.

You should then contact Kay Kyle at the Family Support Division at 545-6811 to determine whether the company is authorized to conduct business on Fort Benning.

Consumers should further investigate the company by contacting the Better Business Bureau.

Many of these companies engage in high pressure sales techniques. However, you should not allow a salesperson to induce you into signing a contract before you have had the opportunity to investigate the company. Additionally, under no circumstances should you sign a contract before having the contract reviewed by an attorney.

If a salesperson is unwilling to give you the opportunity to take these steps, it is probably because he or she has something to hide.

Further, with door-to-door sales, federal law gives consumers the right to cancel the contract for any reason by providing written notice to the company within three business days after entering the contract. Despite this, many companies do not inform consumers of this three-day right to cancel.

The Legal Assistance Office can assist consumers who have been fraudulently induced into entering into these types of contracts.

If you have recently signed a photography services contract or have been approached by one of these companies, you should contact the Legal Assistance Office at 545-3281.

RK surgery

not always 'seen' as answer to eye problems

Eximer laser photorefractive keratotomy

There is a relatively new technique of changing the refractive status of the eye in which a special eximer laser beam is used to alter or flatten a localized area in the central cornea.

The technique is still investigational and is only available at certain eye centers. If this alternative treatment is approved, it may be more desirable than RK. This is because the procedure is less invasive with much less structural change to the eye.

Questions regarding eximer laser treatment will be answered as investigational studies are completed.

Martin Army Community Hospital

Radial keratotomy, or RK surgery, is an elective surgical procedure that attempts to eliminate or reduce a patient's need for glasses or contact lenses. Radial keratotomy is designed to correct nearsightedness (myopia) and astigmatism by making various incisions or cuts into the front part of the eye (cornea). The number, location, depth and shape of the cuts vary according to the patient's prescription. The incisions or cuts allow the front part of the eye to flatten. This flattening allows light that enters the eye to focus closer to the back of the eye ( retina), thus improving vision.

Although RK surgical techniques have improved over the past few years, the results of the surgery are still unpredictable. The results vary with the patient's prescription and generally speaking, the results of patients with higher prescriptions are not good as good as the results of patients with lower prescriptions. For example, the chances for a patient with a prescription of -1.00 to have 20/20 vision after RK surgery without glasses is much better than a patient with a prescription of -5.00. Even though a patient with -5.00 may have significantly improved vision, he or she may likely need to wear glasses or contacts to see 20/20. Patients should also be aware that additional surgery called enhancements must often be performed after the initial surgery. The enhancements try to improve vision if 20/20 is not reached with the first procedure. Because of the unpredictable results, many patients who were nearsighted prior to surgery become farsighted after surgery because the cornea flattens too much.

Recent studies indicate that approximately 1/3 of patients need glasses or contacts following the surgery. The most serious potential complication of RK surgery is the weakened structure of the eye due to the incisions. This weakened structure places the eye at risk to rupture i n event of a head or ocular trauma. This structural change is permanent.

Prospective patients should also keep in mind that even if the surgery is successful, most people over the age of 40 need reading glasses and RK has no effect on this need. RK is generally not performed on patients under the age of 21 since the eye may still be changing power.

Another limiting factor concerning RK surgery is cost. The average cost for RK surgery is between $800 to 1,400 per eye. As a general rule, RK is not covered by insurance since it is an elective surgical procedure for what is generally considered cosmetic surgery.

Military regulations are clear for personnel attempting to enter the military who have had RK surgery. AR 40-501 clearly states the "Keratorefractive surgery accomplished to modify refractive power of the eye" is disqualifying for military service.

For soldiers who are already in the military the regulations are less specific, however, RK surgery does have some adverse effects. Some facts concerning active duty military personnel who are considering radial keratotomy are:

- Patients with RK do not meet requirements for flight status. Army Regulations 40-501, 4-12
- They are not eligible for ranger, airborne, air assault, Special Forces or many other military schools.
- They may have to be reclassified into another military operation specialist
- Eye trauma that results in loss of vision may not be covered for veterans administration compensation under some circumstances since the weakened eye after RK is more susceptible to serious injury following trauma and the procedure is cosmetic or elective.

Radial keratotomy, or RK surgery, has been around since the early 1940s. In recent years it has enjoyed a large amount of publicity and has become an alternative to glasses and contact lenses for the nearly 70 million Americans who are nearsighted. However, the surgery is elective and potential patients should weigh all the risks and benefits before having radial keratotomy performed.

Check your resistance

U.S. Army Dental Activity

Am I falling apart? At some point in your life, you may have asked yourself this question. After having gone without dental problems for a period of time, perhaps you suddenly needed a large amount of care. To answer the question, you weren't falling apart, your "level of resistance" was.

Your body's natural resistance to disease is the most important factor in keeping your health, including your dental health. It is more valuable than the strongest medicines, the best doctors, or the most modern machines. When your health is stable, is the result of your resistance being strong. If you get ill suddenly, often it is because your resistance has weakened and can no longer defend you.

The agents that cause most illnesses are almost always around you For example:

- Cold viruses lurk everywhere ... why don't you always have a runny nose?
- Strep germs are always in you ... why is it that your throat only occasionally gets sore?
- Bacteria constantly cover your skin and digestive tract ...why don't you always have rashes or stomach aches?

The answer to all these questions is that your resistance is usually high enough to protect you. You get ill only when your resistance is reduced.

In your mouth, the various bacteria that cause tooth decay and gum infections are always present. But also present, hopefully, are strong, healthy teeth and gums which are bathed in protective saliva. The defenses of good teeth, gums and saliva usually balance the attack of the bacteria. Your mouth stays healthy until something reduces your resistance.

Often, the final straw is neglecting daily oral hygiene. If you don't thoroughly brush and floss, the bacterial plaque overwhelms your natural defenses and small infections begin. Decay and gum problems soon follow.

Other factors that can reduce your resistance are stress, poor nutrition, lack of rest, mental depression and other systemic diseases.

Preserving your health, then, is primarily the result of maintaining your natural level of resistance to diseases. For your dental health, that means close attention to your daily home care. Be good to yourself ... it pays.

New labels make nutritious food easier to find

American Inst. for Cancer Research

If you've ever wanted to buy more nutritious foods but found food package labels too complicated, you're in for a pleasant surprise. New labels are required by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration on all food packages by May, and they clearly show how well a food measures up to good nutrition standards.

For starters, the "Nutrition Facts" labels show standard serving sizes so you can compare similar products. The standard sizes are also more realistic, to prevent manufacturers from making claims for unreasonably small portions. On the old label, you may have read that one serving had only 90 calories — but that was for a tiny serving you would have to triple to satisfy a normal appetite.

The new labels list "percent Daily Value," which tells you how much of a nutrient a serving of the product will contribute to your total daily need or limit. For example, the label for a whole-grain bread may list dietary fiber as 3 grams per slice, which is 12 percent of the recommended amount of fiber for the day.

With sodium and fat, the percent daily value tells you how much fits into a limit that is reasonable for good health. Eating too much fat has been linked to a higher risk of cancer and heart disease. But how much fat is too much?

Health authorities like the American Institute for Cancer Research advise getting no more than 30 percent of your daily calories from fat. The new food labels follow this 30 percent limit to tell you how much fat is in a serving of a food product. They can also help you compare foods to find out which foods have less fat than others.

The rules for food labels also require honest wording. For example, not long ago, a jar of peanut butter labeled "light" might only have been lighter in color. Now, you can trust terms like "low," "free" and "high." If a product is labeled "high in vitamin A," legally it must provide at least 20 percent of your daily need for that nutrient per serving.

You can also find the daily values for cholesterol, protein, sugar and carbohydrates on the new food labels. However, if the numbers are too tedious, stick to the general guidelines of eating a diet that is low in fat and high in fiber from lots of fruits, vegetables and grain products, as recommended by health authorities like the American Institute for Cancer Research.

For a free brochure explaining the new food labels, send your name and address to AICR, Dept. RL, Washington, D.C. 20069.

U.S. Army Physical Fitness School

Q: What woman had the biggest influence in allowing women to run the marathon?

A: In 1966, Roberta Gibb traveled to Boston to fulfill her dream of running in the marathon. She could not officially enter so she ran it anyway.

Her time for 1966 was 3 hours and 21 minutes; her time for 1967 was 3:27 and she was barely recognized for the achievement.

She was well ahead of the official entry of K.V. Switzer, who entered the race under this name to avoid being recognized as a female. Katherine Switzer's time was 4:20.

Such were the new breed of distance runners who would be role models for the female runner of the 1970s.

Q: When was the first women's marathon in the Olympics?

A: Feb. 23, 1981, the Executive Committee of the International Olympic Committee met and approved the Los Angeles Olympic Committee's request to include the women's marathon in the 1984 Summer Olympics.

Q: I want to buy some home exercise equipment. What are your suggestions?

A: Look for equipment that does not support your weight and allows you to exercise the four limbs. For example, NordicTrack, Concept II rowers and the Airdyne cycle from Schwinn.

Q: Is a woman with small breasts in danger of not producing enough milk for her baby?

A: No. Breast size is largely a matter of how much fat tissue is present and fat tissue has nothing to do with milk production.

The parts of the body that affect milk-production are the milk-secreting glands in the breasts.

When women do not develop enlarged breasts after giving birth, they need to speak with a doctor.

Body shape may be linked to disease risk

General Mills

Body shape may be linked to the risk of certain diseases, according to the results of several recent studies.

Experts have long believed that several diseases, such as heart disease, diabetes, high blood pressure and certain types of cancer, can be complicated by excess weight, said Karen Wilder, registered dietitian.

Furthermore, people whose weight is concentrated in the abdominal area, a body shape sometimes referred to as an "apple," also may be at greater risk for developing diabetes and heart disease. "Pears," people whose weight is concentrated in the thighs and hips, seem to be at a lower risk for these diseases, according to researchers.

To determine whether you are an apple or a pear, follow these steps outlined by the "Report of the Dietary Guidelines Advisory Committee on the Dietary Guidelines for Americans, 1990" published by the U.S. Dietary Association:

- Measure around the smallest part of your waist, being sure not to pull in your stomach.
- Measure around the largest part of your hips.
- Divide the waist measurement by the hip measurement.
- Waist-to-hip ratios that are more than .80 for women and more than .95 for men are considered apples and may be at a greater health risk.

Pears have more favorable waist-to-hip measurements .

For example, a woman whose waist measures 35 inches and hips measure 41 inches would have a waist-to-hip ratio of .85.

Since this ratio is greater than .80, she may be at a greater risk for developing diabetes and heart disease.

If you think you may have an apple shape, Wilder recommends discussing your weight, as well as any family history of diabetes or heart disease, with your physician.

ITB receives 1st qtr re-enlistment award

By Shelby Carr
Infantry Training Brigade

The Commanding General's Re-enlistment Award for a small unit for the first quarter was presented March 31 by Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, commanding general of Fort Benning, to Col. Theodore R. Severn, commander of Infantry Training Brigade, and Master Sgt. Mary Brown, re-enlistment noncommissioned officer for ITB.

The award is given to the unit with the highest percentage of soldiers re-enlisting.

The 29th Infantry Regiment receiving the Commanding General's Re-enlistment Award for a large unit for the first quarter, and ITB received the small unit award.

In order to win the award, a unit must have at least 100 percent of initial term and mid-career goals accomplished for the quarter.

The award goes to the unit with the highest overall percentage in both categories.

"Because the climate (at ITB) is similar to a mother and daughter or father and son relationship, people feel it is like a family," said Brown. "This makes people want to re-enlist."

JAC personnel receive honors

Job Assistance Center

The civilian Job Assistance Center Star Award was presented to Fort Benning's Job Assistance Center counselors by Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White April 1 .

Each staff member was recognized nationally for sustained superior performance during 1993. The award was for their "achievement, dedication and professionalism for exceeding the high standards set for those entrusted with the critical mission of assisting soldiers and their families in the transitioning period form military to the civilian job market."

Recipients of JAC STAR are: Steve Barnard, Frank Casey, Harold Ericksen, Carl Hopp, Betty Johnson, Cindi Lacey and Theresa Margotta.

MUSIC APPRECIATION

Infantry Band performs at Dexter

Students clap, sing along through various numbers

By Jerrie MacIntire

The Infantry Band offered a diverse selection of musical favorites under the theme of "families" in a 45-minute concert at Dexter School last week.

The focus on families is part of April's celebration of "The Month of the Military Child," said Robert Tolton, first sergeant of the band.

Tolton said one aim of these school concerts is to help students develop an appreciation of music and demonstrate that they, too, can play an instrument.

"We hope to foster an interest in music, and how it is produced," he said.

The 36-member band, commanded by Chief Warrant Officer 3 Ronald Bucher, played a host of childhood favorites, military songs and popular music including the Georgia state song.

"A family encompasses a lot of different things," said Staff Sgt. Fred J. Catchings, conductor.

While highlighting musical families within the band, Catchings also paid tribute to an individual who had been part the Dexter School family.

During the concert, Catchings recognized Grant Miles, a Fort Benning employee for 23 years.

"We've been presenting these concerts here since 1985, and we want to recognize a familiar face as part of the Dexter family because we care about him so much," said Catchings as he presented Miles with a Medal of Appreciation from the Georgia Music Association.

Miles accepted the surprise recognition with grace, and walked a gauntlet of high fives from young well wishers in the Dexter School family in aisle seats of the audience.

Continuing his discussion of families, Catchings discussed the way instruments are classified in families, or groups, and asked band members to demonstrate each sound. In discussing the woodwind family, Catchings explained the instruments were made completely from wood in the past, and sound is produced by opening and closing holes.

Children enjoyed a brief selection from the clarinet, saxophone and the flute, but the piccolo, the baby brother of the family, was at the doctor (the repair shop) for an ailment, Catchings said.

Following the crowd pleasing "Muppet Show " theme, Catchings discussed the brass instruments and likened them to the loudest, most powerful members of a family that provide the melody.

Following a rendition of "Georgia on my Mind," musicians gave individual demonstrations of the French horn and trumpet before presenting the rousing Rocky's theme, "Gonna Fly Now."

The low brass family, represented by the trombone, the euphonium and the tuba, provided children a chance to compare the sounds of various brass instruments. As the tuba blasted a deep and powerful scale, the tubaist commented to children that other instruments "can't touch this."

Rhythm is the calling card of the percussion family, which is the heartbeat of the band, Catchings said. The theme to "Ghostbusters" demonstrated the illustration of the heartbeat and provided students a chance to interact with the band as they clapped and sang along at appropriate times encouraged by the conductor.

Miles

Students heard demonstrations from various percussion instruments including the snare drum, bass drum and cymbals before enjoying the stealthy "Pink Panther" melody.

"We've talked about all the instruments now, except the conductor's baton," said Catchings, said the baton provides the structure for the music and keeps the players together.

He said that hard work and practice, not magic, help produce a successful sound, and the band must watch the conductor's baton for instructions while performing.

Children enjoyed a first-hand demonstration of conducting as they wielded the baton, staying in rhythm so as not to "break the band," or cause disharmony.

Closing the concert in tribute to "The Month of the Military Child," the band's finale was the patriotic "Stars and Stripes Forever."

As part of the band's mission to bring music to family members, it has presented a host of spring concerts, in conjunction with "Music in our Schools Month" in March. For example, preschoolers from child development centers were treated to a recent concert in Marshall Auditorium, and the band has performed at other school and social functions.

LOYD-TV airs acts of kindness

By Jerrie MacIntire
Special to The Bayonet ©

Each day, news shows across the nation chronicle random acts of violence in what is usually the day's lead story.

Students with Fort Benning's LOYD-TV use national news shows as a template, but feature lead stories about random acts of kindness associated with the Kindness Club at their school.

Founded in September by Cy Dietrich, music teacher at Loyd, the K Club's mission is to promote kindness in a variety of ways, such as encouraging a spirit of cooperation, respecting the rights and feelings of others, supporting instead of discouraging others and promoting thoughtfulness on a daily basis.

By showing kindness to others, children gain personal fulfillment and greater self-esteem, which helps them understand the value of healthy friendships, according to the K Club philosophy.

Dietrich began the K Club after listening to a radio segment by nationally known commentator Paul Harvey.

Dietrich said as he was contemplating the state of confusion many children feel in today's rushed and often thoughtless world, Harvey was urging radio listeners to commit a random act of kindness. The idea for the K Club emerged.

When students choose to join the K Club by letter of request, they receive a pledge card reminding them to do kind things, a green club card and a lapel pin.

The teachers keep the club cards and reinforce considerate behavior by pasting green stars on the back. In addition to teachers, other individuals may recommend a child receive a green star for acts of kindness outside the classroom. When a child receives a predetermined number of stars, that student receives a K Club Kindness Certificate.

The K Club, with a membership of 389, serves as the focus for the half-hour, in-house television broadcast. Dietrich produces the live show each Wednesday, and each classroom in the school tunes in for relevant news, weather, sports and current examples of random acts of kindness.

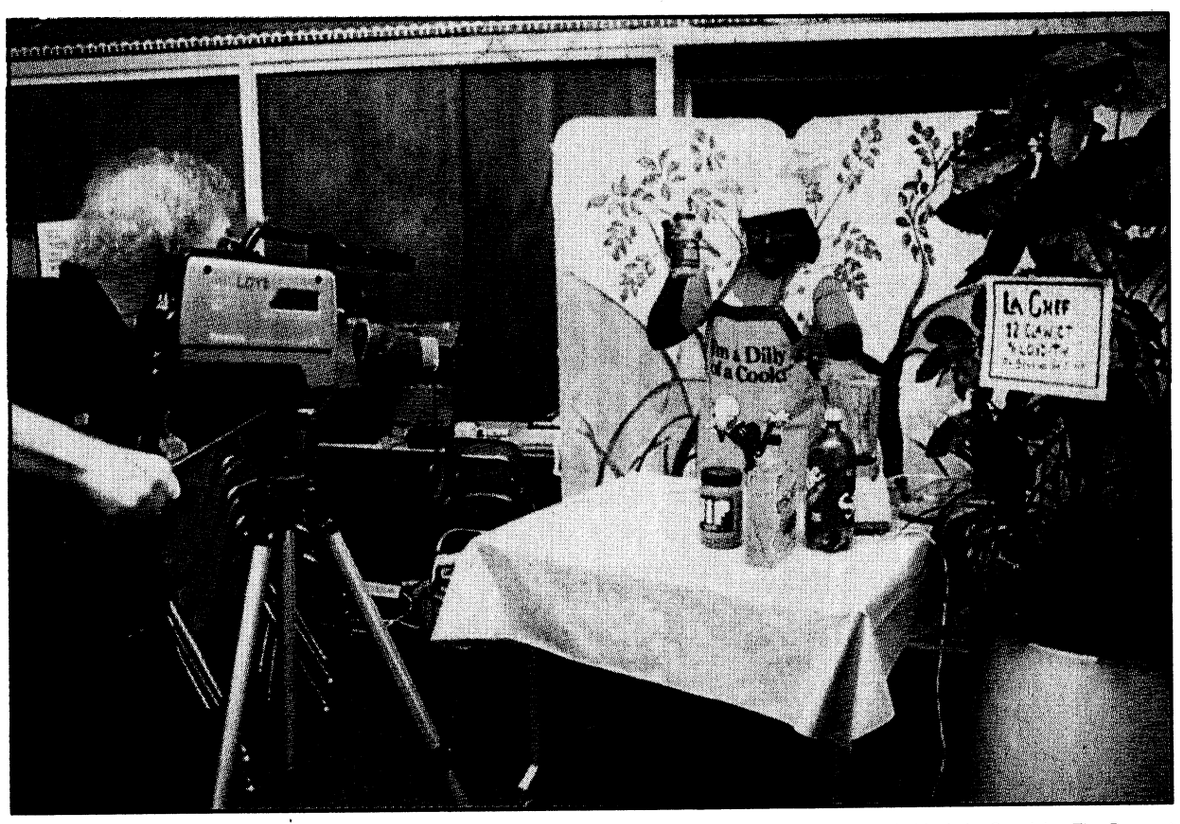
Following a format similar to professional news broadcasts, regular anchors and reporters host the show and bring their own brand of personality to each segment.

Other regular features of the show include challenging brain teasers, human interest items, announcement of birthdays and personal interviews or commentary by Dr. Judy Gilliam, principal.

Beginning with a professional opening complete with music and appropriate backdrops, student anchors recap the week's news, usually as it relates to the military community. The weather, complete with colorful graphics appropriate for that particular day, is followed by sports highlights.

Other features of the show include the informative and lively La Chef feature, in which tasty concoctions are created and then dispersed among the live audience, which is a visiting class within the school.

La Chef, using a lively method of preparation while making nutritious delicacies, often ad libs and brings subtle humor to cooking.



Anyone involved with the Loyd School family is eligible to be nominated for recognition. Recently, Vilmartiz Delerme was recognized for the help she provided by translating for Spanish-speaking parents enrolling their children in Loyd. Others recognized this school year include Casey Grover, Ann Moore, Michele Lefever, Tifiny Williams, Danny Santiago, John Johnson and Hector Lopez.

Those highlighted during the year have their photo exhibited in the large display case in the school's entryway, marked by a tasteful K Club neon sign.

The LOYD-TV staff includes editor and producer Dietrich, students Candice Lipham, soundbox; Jackie Tello, Class Focus and Loyd Challenge questions; Lauren Jones, La Chef and K Club Spotlight; Latoya Brantley, news; C.J. Smith, sports; Amanda McGowan, Loyd Challenge; Tiffany Williams, weather and K Club Spotlight.

Special guests may also be featured during the commentary by the principal.

Students serving on LOYD-TV staff are nominated by their teachers and compile and edit their materials.

Post to celebrate Earth Day today

By Jerrie MacIntire
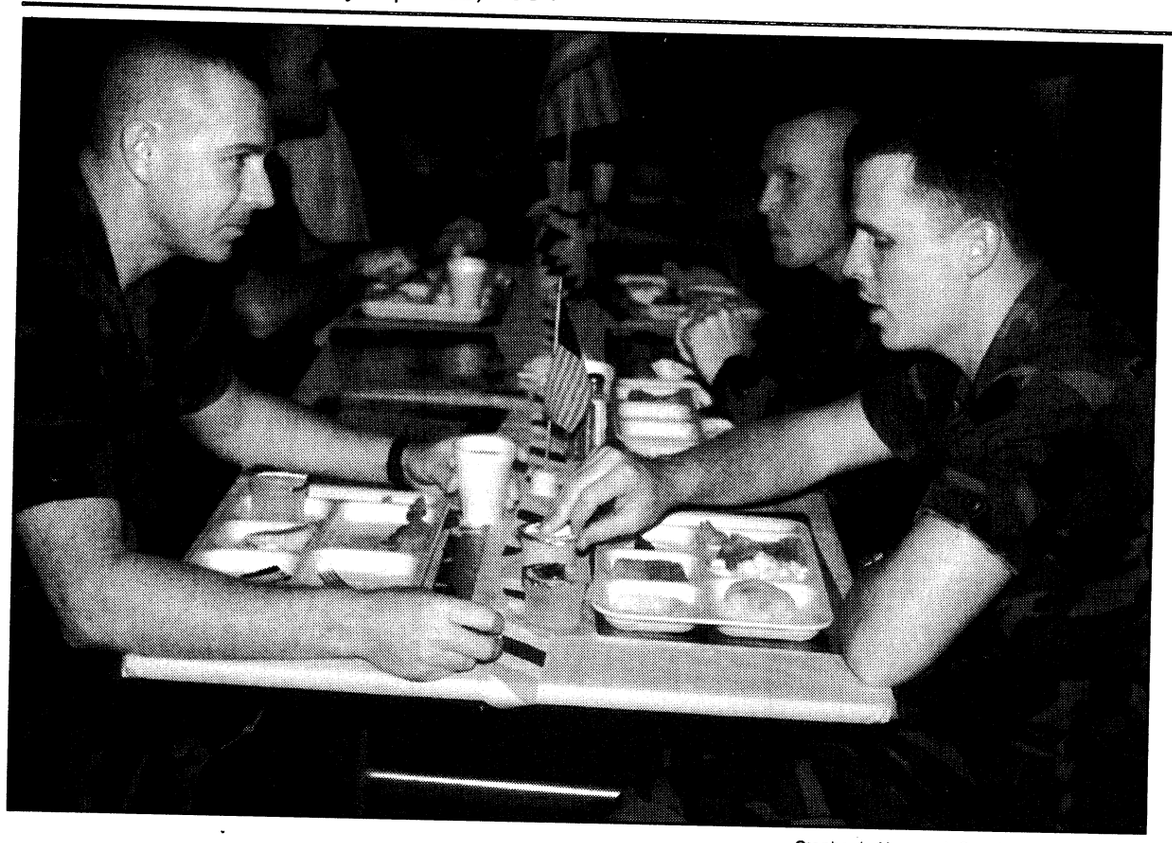
Special to The Bayonet ©

Fort Benning children and adults are joining others across the nation today in celebrating Earth Day, a time to reflect on the importance of a clean environment and wise use of natural resources.

"Earth Day is a time to recognize the Army's contribution to environmental stewardship," said Dr. Christine Hull, hazardous waste program manager at Fort Benning. "The Army is becoming a leader in stewardship of environmental and natural resources for present and future generations."

"Fort Benning is dedicated to becoming the leading installation in overall environmental stewardship and training and awareness. The goal is to implement environmental awareness and compliance into every aspect of the military mission without compromising the mission's success," she said.



Four programs reflect the Army's goal of helping lead the environmental movement. Through conservation programs, Fort Benning has preserved approximately 182,000 acres of land in relatively pristine conditions. Among other advantages, this acreage, the natural habitat for the red cockaded woodpecker, has served as a haven in Georgia for this endangered bird species.

Compliance programs at Fort Benning ensure that environmental laws and regulations are followed on a daily basis since the post is subject to the same laws as other industries, Hull said.

Restoration programs on post reflect Armywide policies of cleaning and restoring areas used in the past. One example is planting trees in areas where clear cutting was once permitted.

Programs in the post schools seek to encourage youngsters to begin thinking of the environment at a young age. Classrooms have focused on Earth Day within individual curriculums.

Also, environmental awareness seminars were conducted at Wilson School earlier this week, and a science fair with an environment focus is scheduled for White School this afternoon. Through postwide and school programs, post officials hope to foster wise stewardship of the planet, Hull said.

Loyd School hosts breakfast for parents

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

The cafeteria at Loyd Elementary School looked more like a mess hall the morning of April 15 as military parents gathered for a breakfast given in their honor.

The special meal has been served during April for the past six years to coincide with the month of the military child, according to school officials.

"We do so many things for the kids," said teacher and event coordinator Jane O'Hern. "It was time to honor the military parent with a special event."

Soldiers dined at tables adorned with American flags and on placemats hand decorated by students from Loyd School.

Special guest at the event was Commanding General Maj. Gen Jerry A. White.

He spoke about the importance of making family a priority, both personally and as a community.

"Families are a readiness issue," he said. "If we don't do a good job taking care of them, we can't expect soldiers to go out and train to standard if they have their mind on something else."

The breakfast wrapped up on a musical note when "Proud To Be An American," was performed for the soldiers by Faith Middle School Assistant Principal Glenn Hughes.

school lunch

Fort Benning Schools

Breakfasts and lunches at Fort Benning schools for the next week are as follows:

• Monday — Breakfast: Fruit juice, cereal, toast with jelly. Lunch: Pepperoni pizza, tossed salad with carrots, pineapple cubes almond cookie and milk.

Volunteers to be recognized today

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

National Volunteer Week will be celebrated at Fort Benning with a recognition ceremony today at 4 p.m. on the lawn of Riverside, home of Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White and his wife, Linda.

The event is conducted annually to honor individuals who donate their time and services to various organizations and units on post and in Columbus.

Certificates of appreciation will be given to all volunteer agencies and units to be presented to their respective volunteers.

Several individuals will also be specially recognized for "going above and beyond the call of duty," according to Olga MacLean, installation volunteer coordinator.

White will present them with the Commander's Certificate of Appreciation for Patriotic Civilian Service.

"We want our volunteers to know that at the highest level we care about our volunteers and appreciate their efforts," said MacLean.

A symbolic check will also be presented to White representing the money saved through the service of volunteers in the community. Last year the amount topped $3 million.

In the event of inclement weather it will be moved to the Officers' Club.

Volunteerism benefits Fort Benning community

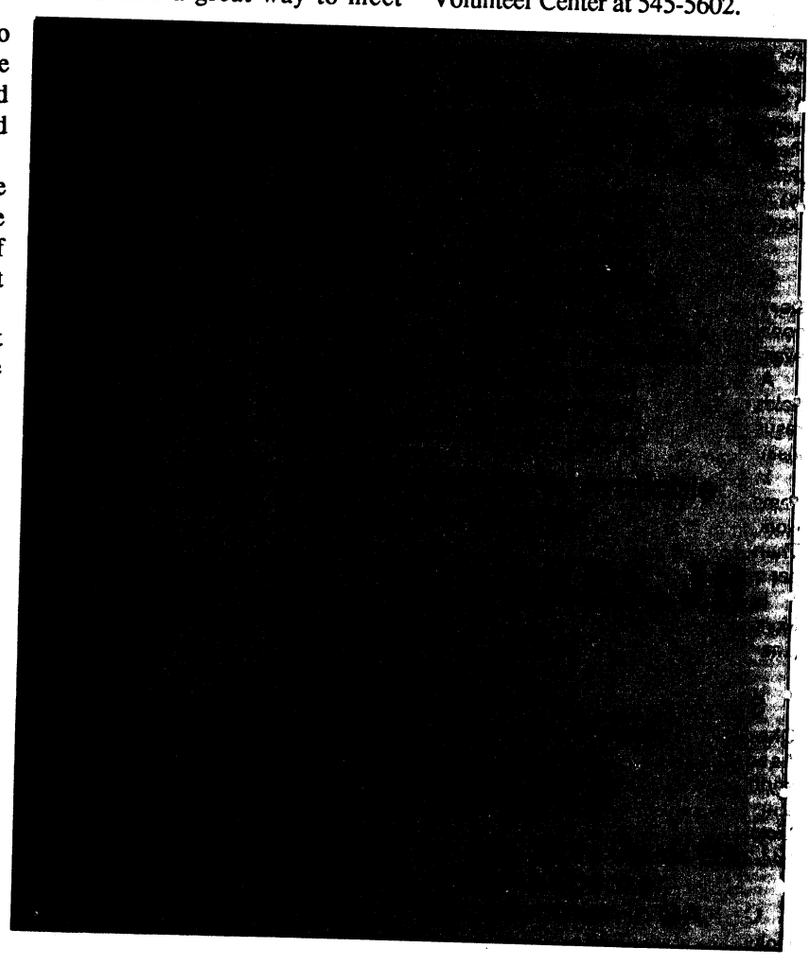
"Any definition of a successful life must include service to others," said former president George Bush.

At Fort Benning, there are a multitude of opportunities to serve others and the community through volunteerism.

Olga MacLean, installation volunteer coordinator, manages the recruitment and placement of personnel in the more than 3,000 volunteer positions at Fort Benning and in Columbus.

"The volunteer presence on Fort Benning has been critical in the success of all community and family support programs," said MacLean.

Volunteerism is not only beneficial to the community, but also to the person donating his or her time.



Frequent relocations, an integral part of the military lifestyle, often make it difficult to manage a career for many family members. Volunteer positions can provide an opportunity to maintain proficiency between paid positions and also to learn valuable new skills.

It's also a great way to meet people at a new duty station or provide an opportunity to get out of the house. In many cases, child-care costs are paid during the hours spent volunteering on post.

Experience gained through volunteerism can also benefit when searching for paid employment.

"Many employers view volunteer time as valuable experience," said MacLean. Her office will assist volunteers with writing up their experience to include in a resume.

For more information about volunteer opportunities, call the Volunteer Center at 545-5602.

How much do you know about child safety?

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Is your home a safety hazard? Do you know how to correct the problems? Do you know what the problems are?

"A child may not die from ingesting obvious hazards. Some preventable poisonings I've investigated were strawberry-scented shampoo and fiber-glass insulation, the pink stuff. The child thought it was cotton candy — looks just like it, too. But they're not the things you're looking for," Fort Belvoir, Va., Community Health Nurse Capt. Patricia A. Malley said in a recent interview.

Accidents are the leading cause of death in childhood, according to statistics provided in the booklet "What Everyone Should Know About Child Safety," published by the Channing L. Bete Company, Inc., South Deerfield, Mass.

The booklet lists safety precautions, as well as first aid, if such accidents should occur. Depending on the type of accident, a child could be crippled for life.

"People are careful to install outlet covers and put cleaning fluids out of reach, but they don't tend to realize the other hazards (which could threaten a child's safety)," said Malley.

For the growing child, a parent's job shifts from protection to education. Very young children do not have the experience or judgment to act safely. They are naturally curious. They want to do and learn about many things but they must be taught to do them safely.

"Young children are often accidently poisoned as a result of their curiosity — everything within their reach goes into their mouths. They cannot distinguish between poisonous and nonpoisonous items. To a child, pills look like candy. Mouthwash, cough medicine and furniture polish look like soft drinks," said Rose Ann G. Soloway, education and communications coordinator, National Capital Poison Center, Georgetown University hospital, at the 1992 National Poison Prevention Week news conference.

"Children can, and will, climb to reach items appealing to them. They learn by imitating adults. A child who watches an adult smoke is a child who will eat cigarettes. A child who watches an adult take medicine will reach for that same medicine."

The Consumer Product Safety Commission has put out a "safety alert" warning adults that medications containing iron can be deadly to a young child. Many adults do not realize the hazard of iron preparations.

Preventing poisonings

According to "What Everyone Should Know About Child Safety," there are several things that can be done to prevent child poisonings:

- Keep chemicals out of reach.
- Lock cabinets containing medicines and chemicals.
- Use original containers for chemicals.
- Select containers with childproof caps and close tightly after each use.
- Check for lead-based paint on cribs, toys, walls or any items children might chew or suck on.
- Be careful with medicines — never give them in the dark.
- Reread the labels on medicines each time you use them, and
- Don't call medicine "candy."

Protecting pets

Children aren't the only ones who need protection. Pets are susceptible to many of the same hazards that a child is.

"Supervise your pet like you'd supervise your child," Malley said. "Keep pets on a leash when outside," she said, "because plants can be poisonous to animals, too. Insects, like ticks and fleas, carry diseases and can cause problems."

Lt. Col. Fred E. Lyons, veterinarian at Fort Belvoir's Vet Clinic said, "You do the same kind of things for pets that you'd do for your children — put pesticides and chemicals out of reach. Where you put them and how you secure them — that's very important. Some house plants can cause problems, too. Some cats will eat or play around plants that will hurt them."

An animal care specialist at the Fort Belvoir's Vet Clinic, Spc. Gerald F. Lyons, said, "The biggest 'killers' of dogs (I've seen) are cars, chocolate (poison to an animal), poultry bones (causes choking) and heartworms."

He doesn't recommend giving a dog rawhide chewies. "The dogs can get them soft enough to swallow — and they mess with the intestines," said Spc. Lyons.

"As for heartworms," Spc. Lyons continued, "some people are told they may discontinue their dog's medication during the winter months, since heartworm is spread by mosquitoes — but that's not true. Mosquitoes move indoors during the winter and dogs can still become infected.

"Another big 'killer' of dogs is the heat build-up in cars," said Spc. Lyons. "The temperature in a car can hit 160 degrees (Fahrenheit) in 15 minutes on a normal summer day. The dog can get brain damage and die of heat stroke. Cracking your windows and parking in shaded areas isn't enough to save the dog's life. Also, leaving the dog in the car is against most post regulations."

"Dogs also love antifreeze because it's real sweet and real toxic," he said.

Other items that are poisonous to cats are apricots, avocados, chrysanthemums, tomatoes, potatoes, peaches and tobacco.

Watch your dryer — with their curiosity and love of hiding, cats will jump in the dryer when you throw in a load of clothes. "It's an awful way to die," Spc. Lyons said.

Another problem area for cats is the stove, Lt. Col. Lyons said. Cats can climb up on the stove and if the stove is on, their hair can catch on fire or they can cause a fire by darting from one spot to another.

If your animal is not good with children, stay away from areas where there are children. If your pet bites a child, you're responsible.

Spc. Lyons encourages tags and collars for both cats and dogs. "Inevitably, the animal ends up in the pound and no one can identify the owner," he said. He also added that tattooing pets can identify them. "Anything the owner can do to identify the pet helps," he said.

Fire can kill

Fire is another problem area for children and pets. They may become confused or scared during an emergency and it could cost them their lives.

Each year, fire kills more children than any other home accident and many more children are seriously burned, according to the booklet, "Are Your Children Safe From Fire and Burns?" also published by the Channing L. Bete Company, Inc., South Deerfield, Mass.

One of the most common causes of home fires is children playing with matches. They are often needless victims of fire because they don't know how to react.

The booklet offers some basic rules for fire safety:

- Keep children away from the stove.
- Teach them not to play with matches and to stay away from open fires.
- Teach them not to fool with electricity.
- Teach your children what "hot" means at an early age.

Safety checklists

Malley offers a home safety checklist, which covers every part of the home, from chemicals to trash to space heaters to house plants.

"No one item on the checklist is really more important than another one. The one that you miss is the problem," she said.

The following checklist is used to spot dangers in or outside your home. It is a series of yes or no questions. Each no answer shows a possible danger for you or your family:

✓ Is trash kept in tightly covered containers?

✓ Are walkways, stairs and railings in good repair?

✓ Are walkways and stairs free of toys, tools, etc?

✓ Are sandboxes, wading pools, etc., covered when not in use?

• Parents' bedroom

✓ Are space heaters kept away from curtains and flammable materials?

✓ Are cosmetics stored out of child's reach?

• Storage area

✓ Are pesticides, detergents, and other household chemicals kept out of child's reach?

✓ Are tools kept out of child's reach?

• General precautions

✓ Are stairways kept clear and uncluttered?

✓ Are stairs and hallways well lighted?

✓ Are safety gates installed at tops and bottoms of stairways?

✓ Are rugs and runners skidproof?

✓ Are guards installed around fireplaces, radiators or hot pipes, and wood-burning stoves?

✓ Are sharp edges of furniture cushioned with corner guards or other material?

✓ Are unused electric outlets covered with tape or safety covers?

✓ Are curtain cords and shade pulls kept out of child's reach?

✓ Are windows secured with window locks?

✓ Are plastic bags kept out of child's reach?

✓ Are fire extinguishers installed where they are most likely to be needed?

✓ Are smoke detectors in working order?

✓ Do you have an emergency exit plan to use in case of fire, and, if so, does your family practice using this emergency exit plan?

✓ Is thermostat on water heater set to 120 degrees Fahrenheit ?

✓ If you have a firearm, is it locked up where your child cannot get it?

✓ Are all handbags, including those of visitors, kept out of child's reach?

✓ Are all poisonous plants kept out of child's reach?

✓ Is a list of instructions and emergency phone numbers posted near the phone?

✓ Is a list of instructions posted near the phone for use by children who are home alone?

✓ Do you have syrup of ipecac in your home for use as directed in poisoning emergencies?

"When you have questions or concerns about safety, contact your post safety officer or the safety officer in a military hospital for information," said Malley.

"You can also check the pediatric clinic, the community health nurse, and the National Safety Council."

Vaccination clinics available during pet week May 1 to 7

Veterinary Treatment Facility

National Pet Week is May 1 to 7. Veterinary Services will be hosting two walk-in vaccination clinics that week.

Annual vaccinations can be given to dogs, cats, puppies or kittens at that time. Pet owners are asked not to bring in sick animals to avoid spreading of diseases.

If an animal's yearly vaccinations are due in late May or early June the owner can come to this walk-in clinic to avoid not getting an appointment at a later date.

The clinics are scheduled for May 3 and 5 from 8 to 10 a.m. and from 1 to 2 p.m. No appointments are required for these two days.

Vaccinations to include rabies, both canine and feline distemper, feline infectious peritonitis, feline leukemia and kennel cough can be given at that time. Heartworm tests, feline leukemia tests and deworming will also be done.

During National Pet Week, tours of the Veterinary Treatment Facility will be offered May 6. If one person or an organization would like to visit the facility, contact the office during normal duty hours for scheduling.

Children under 12 are not allowed in the clinic for safety reasons. Schools will be offered the opportunity to have children tour the facility.

The facility is located on Main Post Building 265, (right next door to CVI Cable.) Normal operating hours are from 8 to 11:30 a.m. and from 12:45 to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday.

The facility is closed the last working day of the month for physical inventory. Normal vaccination appointments are made Monday and will be scheduled two weeks alter. To make appointments, call 545-4444 or 545-1127.

'Days of Remembrance' mourn six million deaths

Arthur Rutberg
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Fifty-one years ago in April 1943, something unprecedented happened. Jewish people, long accustomed to suffering and persecution, gathered together and fought back against the Nazis.

The Jews in the Warsaw Ghetto fought back not out of bravery or courage but out of desperation. The ghetto was being destroyed.

The remaining Jews had seen thousands of their fellow Jews be put on the trains and sent to Treblinka, the death camp. They would not let that happen to themselves.

They decided to take out some Nazis before they were taken out. While the Warsaw Ghetto uprising became an inspiration for other ghettoes and concentration camps, it also became the focal point of Holocaust remembrance.

The Holocaust, the methodical murder of 6 million Jews, is difficult to comprehend. The numbers alone are overwhelming.

Six million! How can we understand that? The entire population of Columbus 24 times over! A thermonuclear explosion in New York City! So many people, it ceases to seem real, but it is a reality.

Six million lives, 6 million souls, 6 million stories. And perhaps the saddest part of this is that 1 1/2 million of the dead were children.

We must not forget. Let us light candles and say prayers to honor those unfinished lives. Let us make sure that nowhere in this world will it ever happen again.

It would be easy to forget, to pretend that it never happened. It is so disturbing to believe that human beings in the 20th century can be that inhuman toward others. This is why some people try to deny that it ever happened.

But the troubling fact, the nightmarish reality, is that it did happen. The ghettoes, the camps, the firing squads, the crematoria, the gas chambers; all of it happened. And we must never let the world forget.

The Department of Defense designated April 24 to 31 to be the national Days of Remembrance for the victims of the Holocaust.

To commemorate these days, there will be a presentation of a historical film plus discussion at Infantry Hall Monday at 11 a.m.

During Passover, we are commanded to view ourselves as if we came forth from slavery in Egypt.

During these Days of Remembrance, we must see ourselves as if we witnessed the horrors of the Holocaust.

In so doing, we can feel the loss, know the pain and never let those 6 million lives go unremembered.

Chief of chaplains to make final visit

USAIC Chaplains' Office

The chief of chaplains from the Department of the Army will visit Fort Benning for the post's second annual Commanders' Prayer Breakfast Thursday at 6:30 a.m. at the Main NCO Club.

This will be Chaplain (Maj. Gen.) Matthew A. Zimmerman's last official visit to the post. He will retire this summer after serving 27 years in the military on active duty. Zimmerman will be the guest speaker at the breakfast.

The breakfast will provide commanders an opportunity to discuss and exchange ideas about spiritual applications within the military, officials said.

Zimmerman has been the chief of chaplains since August 1990. He has served as deputy chief of chaplains for Forces Command and as staff chaplain and deputy staff chaplain for the Training and Doctrine Command.

Also, he has served as a staff chaplain for the 3rd Infantry Division and has held several other assignments.

The breakfast is open to all in command positions.

For more information, call Chaplain (Maj.) David Smith at 545-2288.

Top Dogs

Fort Benning's K-9s 'protect and serve'

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

With sharp, white teeth bared, the snarling dog hurls himself at the fence, barking loudly and menacingly at anyone who steps too close to his kennel.

This is Zorro, one of the military working dogs with the U.S. Army Infantry Center Military Police Company's K-9 unit.

Most of the dogs are Belgian malnois, a breed that looks much like the German shepherd, but tends to be smaller, more hyper and have a better sense of smell.

Zorro, however, does not look smaller than an average German shepherd. He looks like 80 pounds of big, angry dog — not a dog you would want to meet with no fence between you.

"Zorro is extremely aggressive," explains Sgt. Robert Benedon, one of the dog handlers. But, he points out, "These dogs are not pets; they are working animals."

Zorro and the other dogs are trained to go on routine patrols with the MPs or sniff out drugs or bombs at a Department of Defense school at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas.

Military Police handlers also go to a school there to learn how to best use the dogs' senses to their advantage.

At their "duty station," each dog is assigned to one handler. The team is then evaluated and certified before they go out on patrol.

"We work the road as a team and do everything a normal MP can do — only our partner is a dog," Benedon said.

The dogs are trained to back up patrols by protecting their handler, searching and clearing unsecured areas or buildings, looking for lost people, and sniffing out drugs or bombs.

The dogs are regularly used for night patrols, Benedon said, because of their excellent night vision and sense of smell, and they are often used to answer prowler calls.

Benedon, who has worked with dogs on different posts for seven years now, said there are a lot of advantages to having a dog as a partner rather than a human.

No matter how well you know a person, Benedon said, you never know how he or she will react in any given situation. "Personally, I like working with the dog," he said, "because you always know what that dog's going to do."

On top of that, he said, the dogs have a certain intimidation factor.

"I've seen a guy take on five MPs. But I show up with my dog and they say 'OK, I'll go with you; just don't let go of the dog.' It's psychological."

Probably the best thing about patrolling with a dog, he said, "is you can recall the dog before it gets to a suspect. You can't do that with a bullet."

Though all of the dogs are not as aggressive as Zorro, Benedon said, they are all trained to attack, with or without command. They respond to voice and hand signals to watch, guard, chase and attack a suspect or to let go of a suspect once they have attacked.

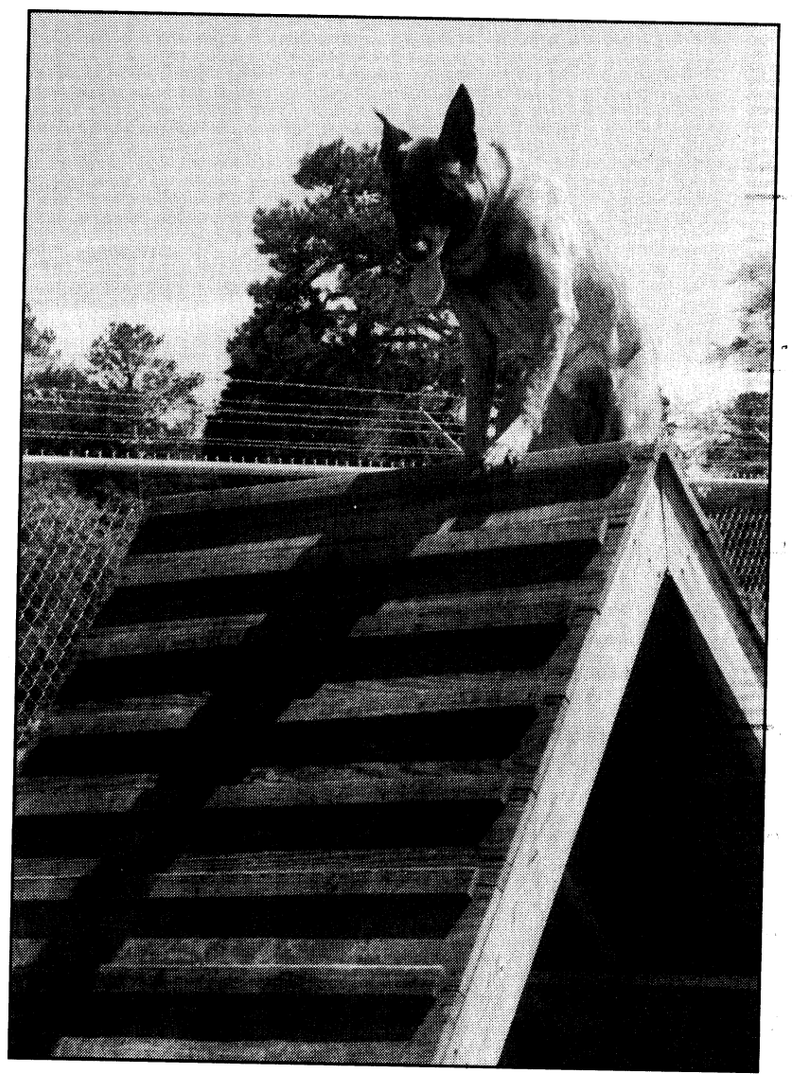
Running through a small obstacle course and the "six phases of aggression" are part of the dogs' daily routine, constantly reinforcing the training they received at Lackland.

The six phases of aggression consist of attack scenarios like the "false run," in which the dog is commanded to stay by the handler's side, instead of following its instinct to chase a suspect who approaches the team and then runs away.

In several of the scenarios, the dogs actually attack the "suspect," played by another MP wearing a thick protective arm covering or a "bite suit," which allows the dog to safely bite the "suspect" anywhere on the body.

The handlers call this "catching" a dog; and, though the dogs' teeth do not penetrate the covering, some of the MPs say their arms get sore from the pressure of the dogs' bites.

Not all of the training is that vigorous, though. Spc. Ricky L. Ferguson trains his dog, Tippo, to detect drugs by having someone hide a small, perforated metal box filled with marijuana.



With Ferguson's encouragement, Tippo slowly scans an area, sitting down when he smells the box. Tippo can detect several different types of drugs, and he routinely unearths drugs on health and welfare inspections, Ferguson said.

Tippo's reward for a job well done is to have Ferguson toss a rubber toy for him. Other dogs work for treats, depending on what that particular dog likes, Benedon said.

But "it's not always work," said Spc. Chris Walker, a new handler who is waiting to be certified with his dog, Tanja, before they start "working the road."

To build rapport with her, Walker said, he took her out a lot to play. But, for the dogs, playing and working are really indistinguishable, Benedon said.

"When we do training, the dog always wins," he said. "That's what keeps them doing their jobs."

1/19 appoints honorary leaders

By Shelby Carr
Infantry Training Brigade

The 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, ensured its history and honors will be remembered by appointing retired Gen. Sam S. Walker as the honorary colonel of the regiment and retired Command Sgt. Maj. James H. Davis as the honorary sergeant major of the regiment.

The investiture ceremony was at Wetherby Field April 1, 132 years after the regiment faced its baptism of fire at the Battle of Shiloh during the Civil War.

Walker and Davis trooped the line of assembled soldiers and Command Sgt. Maj. Okey Green, battalion command sergeant major, placed the battle streamers earned by the regiment on the regimental colors.

Walker, who commanded Company A, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, in Korea during the beginning campaigns in 1950, and Davis, who served as the battalion command sergeant major in 1984 at Sand Hill, were then presented plaques by Lt. Col. Warren D. Cate.

Walker and Davis then addressed the assembled troops.

"Training is the glue that holds the Army together," Walker said. "The cadre is placed with a sacred trust. You get all kinds of men, and your job is to turn out trained soldiers."

Walker continued by saying, "the infantryman is the ultimate weapon. You are joining a band of brothers that has no equal."

"This makes me proud," Davis said. "It is important you take, understand, and do what the cadre tells you to do."

Walker served with the 11th Airborne Division in Japan, the 7th Infantry Division in Japan and the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N.C., before joining the 19 Inf. Regt. in Korea. During his service in Korea, Walker earned the Silver Star for gallantry in action.

Walker then served with the 33rd Regiment Combat Team in Panama before graduating from the Command and General Staff College in 1957 and a subsequent assignment with the Joint Intelligence Group, Joint Chiefs of Staff. In 1959, Walker finished a tour as the aide-de-camp to Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, the Army chief of staff.

In 1964, Walker graduated from the National War College as an outstanding graduate and then assumed command of the 1st Battalion, 30th Infantry (Mechanized). He commanded the 2nd Brigade, 1st Infantry Division, before becoming the assistant division commander of the 82nd Airborne Division and then became the commandant of cadets at the U.S. Military Academy in 1969.

From 1972 to 1974 Walker was the commanding general of the 3rd Infantry Division, and from 1974 to 1975 he was the commander in Berlin. From 1977 to 1978, Walker was assigned as commander, Allied Land Forces Southeastern Europe.

Walker's awards include the Defense Department Distinguished Service Medal, the Distinguished Service Medal, the Silver Star with one oak leaf cluster, the Legion of Merit with two oak leaf clusters, Distinguished Flying Cross, Bronze Star medal, and the Air Medal (14 Awards).

Davis, born in 1943, joined the Army in 1961 and went to basic training at Fort Jackson S.C. Davis served with the 13th Infantry Regiment in Germany, the 18th Infantry Regiment in Germany, the 4th Armored Division in Germany and the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, at Fort Benning.

Davis served as a military advisor to the South Vietnamese infantry before returning to Fort Benning. In 1979, Davis was assigned to the 2nd Infantry Division in Korea as a first sergeant and in 1980 he was assigned to the 101st Air Assault Division.

Returning to Korea, Davis became a battalion command sergeant major until he was assigned to 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, as the battalion sergeant major in 1984. Before his retirement, Davis served as the brigade command sergeant major for the 1st Brigade, 3rd Armored Division, in Germany.

His awards include the Silver Star, the Bronze Star medal with V Device, the Bronze Star with four oak leaf clusters, the Purple Heart, the Legion of Merit and the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry with Bronze Star.

New soldiers' families join 'team building'

By James Brownlee
Infantry Training Brigade

The Army has recently expanded its formalized training in Army family team building to include initial entry training soldiers.

The integration of new soldiers' families has become a major concern for both the Army and Training and Doctrine Command. Company C, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, was one of the first units to receive this new training.

A standard training support package is provided by the Department of the Army to cover all initial entry training. This packet was modified by Chaplain (Capt.) George W. Holston, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment chaplain, to make it more relevant to the needs and concerns of one station unit training soldiers.

The program of instruction is designed to better assist and integrate new soldiers concerning the effect of the Army way of life on their families. It also addresses the myriad of services designed to meet the needs of the Army family.

The unique challenges involving moves, permanent changes of station, deployments and temporary duty never become routine, but to new families entering the Army, they are major obstacles that generate a lot of questions and associated anxieties. The AFTB program helps explain the programs within the Army designed to help with the hurdles associated with this way of life.

AFTB also addresses and stresses the need for and development of healthy family relationships. The development of a healthy family is one of the AFTB program's biggest concerns and projects. The definition of a healthy family is being able to communicate and listen to each other, and to affirm and support one another as often as possible.

The AFTB program also states that, "developing a sense of trust is one of the biggest things a marriage depends upon, and without trust a marriage is setting itself up for failure."

To assist with these problems and others, there is the battalion chaplain. The battalion chaplain helps in many ways, playing a vital role in the AFTB program. Not only is he or she a chaplain who performs religious services, but who is also a trained an certified counselor; however, not all chaplains are trained and certified to perform the proper counseling.

"I, as well as all chaplains, have the job of trying to remove the stigma that is associated with counseling," said Holston. He went on to say, "you do not need to have a problem to go to counseling, and counseling is a good way to talk about things that are bothering you, as well as relieving stress."

The AFTB program's main goal is for the soldiers and their families to assimilate into the Army. The Army has a responsibility to establish a partnership between members of the total Army family.

Studies indicate that soldier performance, readiness and retention relate directly to family satisfaction with Army life, as stated in the AFTB program.

The AFTB program outlines and details the services that are offered, the organizations that are available and how these services can be used. Its main goal is primarily focused upon the needs of the enlisted and the noncommissioned officers' spouses, which make up 85 percent of the military.

The AFTB branch's are all voluntary and are quality oriented rather than quantity orientated. Futhermore, these programs reach a wide variety of families, for example, working spouses, dual military, single parents and divorced, each of whom have different needs.

The AFTB program is now taking a new approach to the soldiers problems and their welfare.

"The AFTB program is trying to keep the good soldiers in today's Army rather than releasing the soldier from duty," said Holston. He went on to say that, "The Army is giving the soldier the necessary tools to ease some of the stress and anxiety that can accompany Army life. In doing this, the Army is spending now to save unnecessary costs in the future. The Army's AFTB program goes the extra mile by helping soldier's help themselves with these and other services, provided."

OSUT soldiers are not authorized to bring their spouses and families with them while they undergo training. This leaves their spouses at home for months wondering about what they and their families will be facing upon graduation. AFTB provides initial level information that the soldier is able to send home to answer many of the "unasked" questions.

"Upon entering the Army for OSUT training, I had many concerns about the length of time that I would have to be away from my wife and my son, and exactly how the benefits of my enlistment could assist them immediately," said Pvt.1 Stephen Edwards, a married soldier who underwent the training. "With the AFTB support package that was provided, most all my questions were answered, and it gave me peace of mind knowing that my family was going to be taken care of when I could not be there. Being separated is very difficult, but AFTB helps me to complete my training to the best of my abilities."

The training also had a positive impact on single soldiers.

"This is really good information. It's all you need to know before you get married. These are things that I would have never known or taken the time to find out on my own," said Pvt. 1 Joshua Margetts, a soldier from 2nd Bn., 54th Inf. Regt.

The soldier and his family may go through many stressful and difficult times during the soldiers military career, said Capt. Bill Macon Company B, 2nd Bn. 54th Inf. Regt. Some of these are separations, travel, duty in dangerous and remote locations, and the "no warning deployment".

Few occupations challenge the family as does today's Army; however, to help cope with these situations as they arise, the AFTB program offers the Family Care Plan as a whole or its separate branches, Macon said. For example, one on one family counseling, family support groups or community support groups.

While the soldier is in the field the AFTB has family support groups. A FSG is an organization of volunteer family members, and total Army personnel belonging to a unit.

"This is a chance to do things for my family and other families while their spouse is in the field or overseas," said Pvt. 2 Phillip Houser, a soldier from 2nd Bn., 54th Inf. Regt., when asked what he liked most about the program. "Therefore, while I'm in the field, I can have the sense of ease that my family is being watched out for."

The 2nd Bn., 54th Inf. Regt., also plans to follow up the formal instruction with a seminar for new spouses when they arrive for graduation.

"We want to reach out to brand-new Army spouses here in the training base and tell them that we care," said Lt. Col. Gary Dacey, commander of 2nd Bn., 54th Inf. Regt. "They have a lot of concerns and questions that we can answer here to make their first move and reception to their first unit much easier."

Reservist gets wings at 57

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

If you were 57 years old and retired, where would you be? On the golf course? Relaxing in a hammock in the backyard? Cruising to the Caribbean? Or going through Airborne School?

Army Reserve Chief Warrant Officer 4 Percy B. Hayes is 57, retired from his civilian job, and now the proud new owner of a maroon beret and a pair of Airborne wings.

"This is the absolute highlight of my (military) career," Hayes said, after completing his fifth and qualifying parachute jump April 13.

For Hayes, coming to Airborne School was not just an adventure, but "the culmination of almost half a century of playing Army," he said.

"I asked for Airborne School when I was drafted in '64," Hayes said. "I was a snot-nosed kid out of high school, and I still had that 'John Wayne' syndrome. I wanted to go to Korea."

He wanted, he said, the "special status that the paratroopers had. They were instantly recognizable as unique."

But he wasn't sent to Airborne School, he was sent to Germany as a medic instead, and after two years active duty, he got out of the Army.

In '75, he came back into the Army as a Reservist, and in '78 he became a warrant officer, still with the hope of someday going to Airborne School, he said.

"But I was a personnel warrant, and units would never approve a personnel officer going to jump school," he said.

Until last year, when Hayes joined the General Support Company of the 12th Special Forces in Arlington Heights, Ill., an airborne unit, and finally got his chance.

After all those years of waiting, Hayes came to Fort Benning for Airborne School in October, but it didn't turn out to be his dream come true.

He injured himself on the swing landing trainer in the second week; landing wrong and slipping a disk in the base of his neck. Knowing he'd be out of the school if he didn't make it to jump week, though, Hayes didn't tell his platoon sergeant and "just stuck with it."

He made it to the first jump, but, he said, "When the canopy popped, it shoved the disk farther into my spinal column and partially paralyzed my arm."

But Hayes did not give up there. He spent several months being treated by a sports injury professional to get a clean bill of health, and convinced his unit to let him come back to complete his four final jumps.

At any age, getting through Airborne School is no small challenge. But at 57, it's a landmark accomplishment, and Hayes said he came to the school "solely determined to take it to the limit."

"This is probably the most difficult single activity I have ever been engaged in," Hayes said.

There's the mental challenge of jumping out of an airplane and into the unknown, he said, and on top of that there are the physical demands.

"You are actually running about 20 miles the first week, 25 the second week," said Hayes, who is a marathon and long-distance runner, which he said helped him tremendously.

He trained to meet the 17 to 21-year-old physical training standard, he said, but; because he is a Reservist, he had to maintain a certain level of physical proficiency anyway and he just "continued to expand on that."

What's really physically demanding, Hayes said, "is you're taking a lot of bumps and bruises — getting dropped on your head, your back and everywhere else many times a day. Then you've got to be able to get up, get back in line and do it all again."

It wasn't easy, he said, "But I damn sure was not going to quit."

Some of the younger soldiers were surprised to have him in the course, he said, and some of them "were actually kind of pleased and motivated that somebody my age could do it, and would actually put out the effort."

Hayes' effort, in the end, earned him his wings; proving, as he said, that, "Age is a matter of attitude."

The one bittersweet note to his story is that Hayes won't be able to wear his wings and beret long; the 12th Special Forces is deactivating in September, and Hayes is planning to retire with the unit.

But he will retire with the personal gratification that comes with knowing he is now, at long last, "airborne."

2/58 hosts DS support seminar

By Alex Brown
Infantry Training Brigade

The 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, conducted a Drill Sergeant Support Seminar at Regimental Chapel on Sand Hill March 19.

The purpose of the seminar was to give drill sergeants and spouses an opportunity to discuss battalion-related issues that impact their work environment and home. In this seminar, the battalion also sought to improve communication in the unit and thereby work on reducing job-related stress.

Lt. Col. Bruce D. Grant, the battalion commander, welcomed the group and explained the intent of the seminar.

"The goal is to hear your (drill sergeants' and spouses') concerns, problems and suggestions in order to begin to find solutions at least on battalion-level issues," Grant said. "By working on those areas that impact the permanent-party soldier, we can improve our teamwork, your quality of life and the quality of training received by initial entry training soldiers."

Issues highlighted for discussion included professional development, command climate, cycle break, health care, family support groups, environmental concerns and unit sponsorship.

Participants divided into four groups to deliberate on two assigned topics and one topic of their choosing.

Facilitators for the group sessions were 2nd Bn., 58th Inf. Regt. company commanders; Capt. Clarence Butler, Company A commander, Capt. Dave Smith, Company B commander, Capt. Don Walton, Company C commander, and Capt. Bob Owens, Company D commander. They had to guide discussion about the topics including both the positive and negative aspects as well as concentrating on solutions to problems.

At the conclusion of the small-group sessions, each facilitator briefed all the participants on the discussion solutions arrived at by his small group.

"It was a good vehicle to obtain information about the battalion's working environment," said Butler. "The key is to implement feasible solutions to problems that were discussed."

The discussion group about sponsorship came up with ways to involve the family support group in the sponsorship process. They also suggested a better way to sponsor drill sergeants coming to Fort Benning from drill sergeant schools at other posts. This suggestion included identifying incoming drill sergeants sooner and providing them with sponsors and information before they graduate from drill sergeant school.

Cycle break, the period between training cycles, was a topic of discussion. During this period when trainees have graduated, drill sergeants' focus is on supply accountability and planning for the next cycle.

Both drill sergeants and spouses were protective of the break for family time and leave. Any command-driven activities beyond the absolutely necessary were highly discouraged.

Spouses expressed their concern about medical care. Problems centered around the availability and accessibility of medical care rather than quality of care.

Groups conducted discussions concerning the unit's command climate. Discussions centered on minimizing changes to the duty roster and improving the scheduling of battalion social activities.

The group noted that drill sergeants felt good about their job and appreciated the freedom to accomplish their mission of training without undue interference from higher-ups. Drill sergeants also noted that they thought the chain of command was not perfect, but at least listened to their input. Another positive aspect of the command climate was the emphasis on and participation in unit family activities.

Evaluations of the seminar by participants indicate that most gained a better understanding of the challenges facing the battalion.

"It gave a lot of information and helped wives to understand their husbands' work environment," said Staff Sgt. Johnny Hendrix, a drill sergeant from Co. A. "I think the chain of command has a better understanding of drill sergeants' concerns and outlook. My wife and I really feel it was a good seminar."

The most repeated response was an appreciation for the small-group format.

"I am concerned about taking care of the needs of permanent-party soldiers so that the battalion can better accomplish its mission to train soldiers," Grant said.

At the conclusion of the working sessions, the group fellowshipped over lunch provided through the U.S. Army Infantry Center Chaplains' Fund. Child care was provided and children of the participants had a morning of games and movies.

SFC selection board to convene in June

Adjutant General

The sergeant first class selection board is scheduled to convene June 2 to consider soldiers for promotion to sergeant first class and selection to attend advance noncommissioned officer course. In addition the board will review records for possible elimination under the qualitative management program.

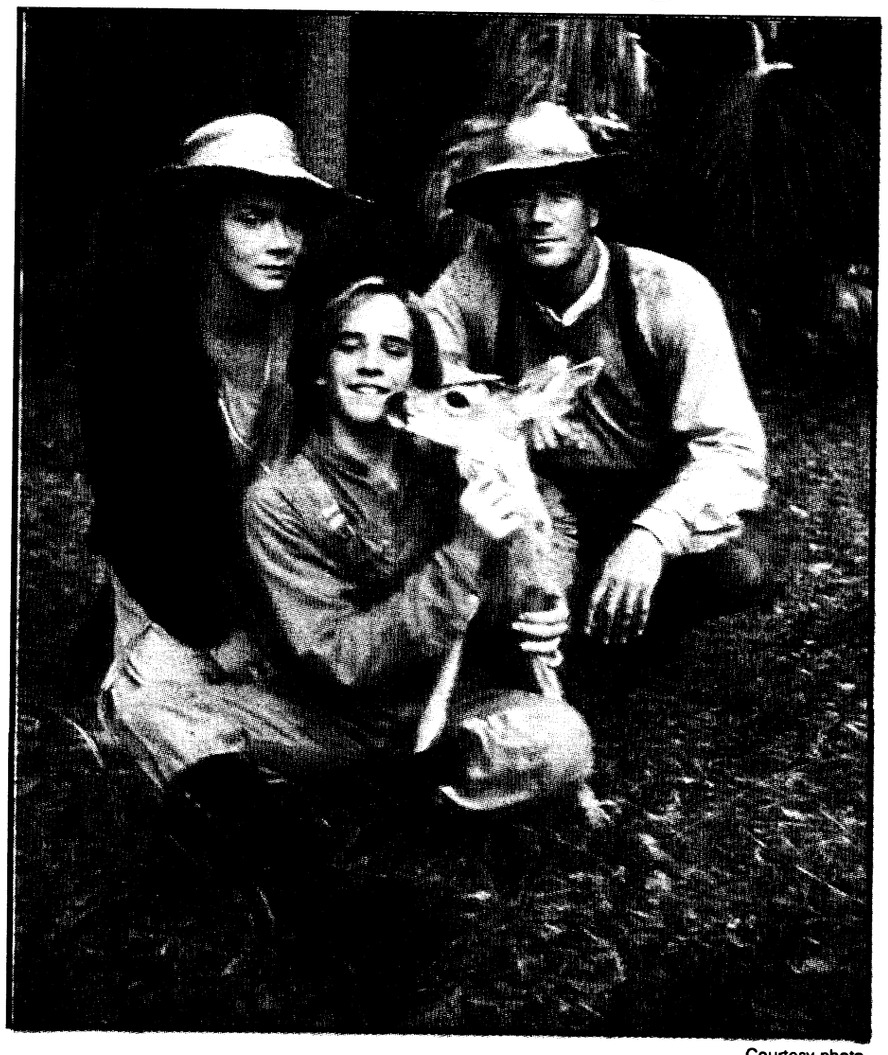
Classic saga of 'The Yearling' retold on CBS

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services



Initially filmed in 1946, a classic story is getting a new retelling on the home screen this week.

"The Yearling" has been a favorite book of several generations, and author Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings' Pulitzer Prize-winning tale of a youngster's devotion to a young deer has a rebirth of sorts in Sunday's CBS version that casts Wil Horneff (of last year's movie "The Sandlot") as adolescent Jody Baxter, and Peter Strauss and "Designing Women" alumna Jean Smart as his parents.

SPOTLIGHT

Those adults have very different views of their son's adoption of the fawn, his farmer father clearly being the more supportive of the two, since his mother has become emotionally withdrawn after losing several offspring at very young ages. Other tragedies have befallen the family in the course of their struggles while living in the swamplands of Florida in the 1930s, but their involvement with the orphaned animal known as "Flag" ultimately transforms all of them.

Adapted for television by Joe Wiesenfeld and co-produced by "Lonesome Dove" mentor Robert Halmi and his son Robert Jr., the remake was filmed on locations in and around Charleston, S.C., by director Rod Hardy ("Between Love and Hate").

Though he's also known for his more rugged portrayals in such ventures as "The Jericho Mile" (which earned him an Emmy) and "Masada," many of Strauss' roles of late — including the title character in another movie he did very recently for CBS, "Thicker Than Blood: The Larry McLinden Story" — have drawn on strongly paternal issues.

What: 'The Yearling'
When: Sunday on CBS

"I just keep trying to challenge myself," the father of two explains, "and there are few opportunities, really, for that. For me, 'The Yearling' was the first project in years that had such huge themes and such profound values. It was a respite from this plethora of films about neurotic people behaving neurotically, and it's something that I think television can do, which is to provide entertainment that an entire family can share and be touched by. I thought 'The Yearling' might, to some degree, crush those walls of silence that people have when they watch television."

Conceding that he's "not a great fan of redoing classics," though he did do a series sequel to "Rich Man, Poor Man" and a TV-movie update of "Peter Gunn," Strauss says that certain differences in the new "Yearling" lessened his reluctance.

He recalls the original film as being "1940s sentimental, and I think the version we've done is a little tougher, yet it's interesting to see (in it) that what we might foolishly label 'uncomplicated people' have contemporary dilemmas.

Officials complete largest search yet for POW/MIAs

By Caejar A. Cox
USAIC Public Affairs Office

U.S. and Vietnamese officials have completed their largest search yet for troops listed as missing in action in Indochina. While many troops have been accounted for, officials say there is a large body of evidence against finding live American MIAs in Vietnam.

Watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday for an update on searchés for prisoners of war and MIAs in Southeast Asia.

The Defense Department is helping schools in low-income areas find teachers and at the same time helping soldiers who are being separated from the military get financial aid to become those teachers.

Watch "Fort Benning Today" for more information on this new program.

USAIC-TV Schedule

Fort Benning Today: 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 1:30 to 2 p.m.
Specials: 2 to 4:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 4:30 p.m. to 8:30 a.m.

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel announces post events and post movie listings, and it offers free classified advertisements on "Fort Benning Update," a community information service.

Anyone who lives on post and subcribes to Fort Benning Cable can watch USAIC-TV on Channel 3, 24 hours a day. Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:26, 7:56, 8:26 and 8:56 on WLTZ-TV 38.

The Columbus Symphony to kick off new season

The Columbus Symphony Orchestra

The Columbus Symphony Orchestra's 1994-95 season will provide something for people of all ages, from the Masterpiece and Pops Series to the return of the Warren's Family Series.

Season ticket orders are being filled now for this season featuring new guest artists and musical programs that cover a wide range of styles.

The 94-95 Masterpiece Series features some of the favorite classics performed by new guest artists, such as pianist Awadagin Pratt, who will join the orchestra in a performance of the Grieg Piano Concerto. This series also features the return of soprano Lucy Shelton, singing the four Last Songs by Strauss, and the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2, performed by returning guest pianist Lee Luvisi.

The Pops Series serves up everything from blues and jazz to an evening of Broadway favorites. Sandra Reeves and her combo will take you back to the golden age of jazz with generous portions of Mahalia Jackson, Billie Holiday, and Columbus' own Ma Rainey. The Basin Brothers Cajun Band will take you on a trip through the Mississippi Delta with an evening of Dixieland, country, and cajun music.

The Symphony Sampler allows you to create a series of your choice. Simply select from a series of four or six Sampler vouchers that can be redeemed for tickets to any concert in any combination.

For a free brochure or to become a Columbus Symphony subscriber, call the Columbus Symphony Orchestra office at 323-5059 or come by the office in the lower level of the Barnett Bank on First Avenue. For more information, call Lisa Baumann at 323-5059.

Airborne

vets celebrate 54th anniversary

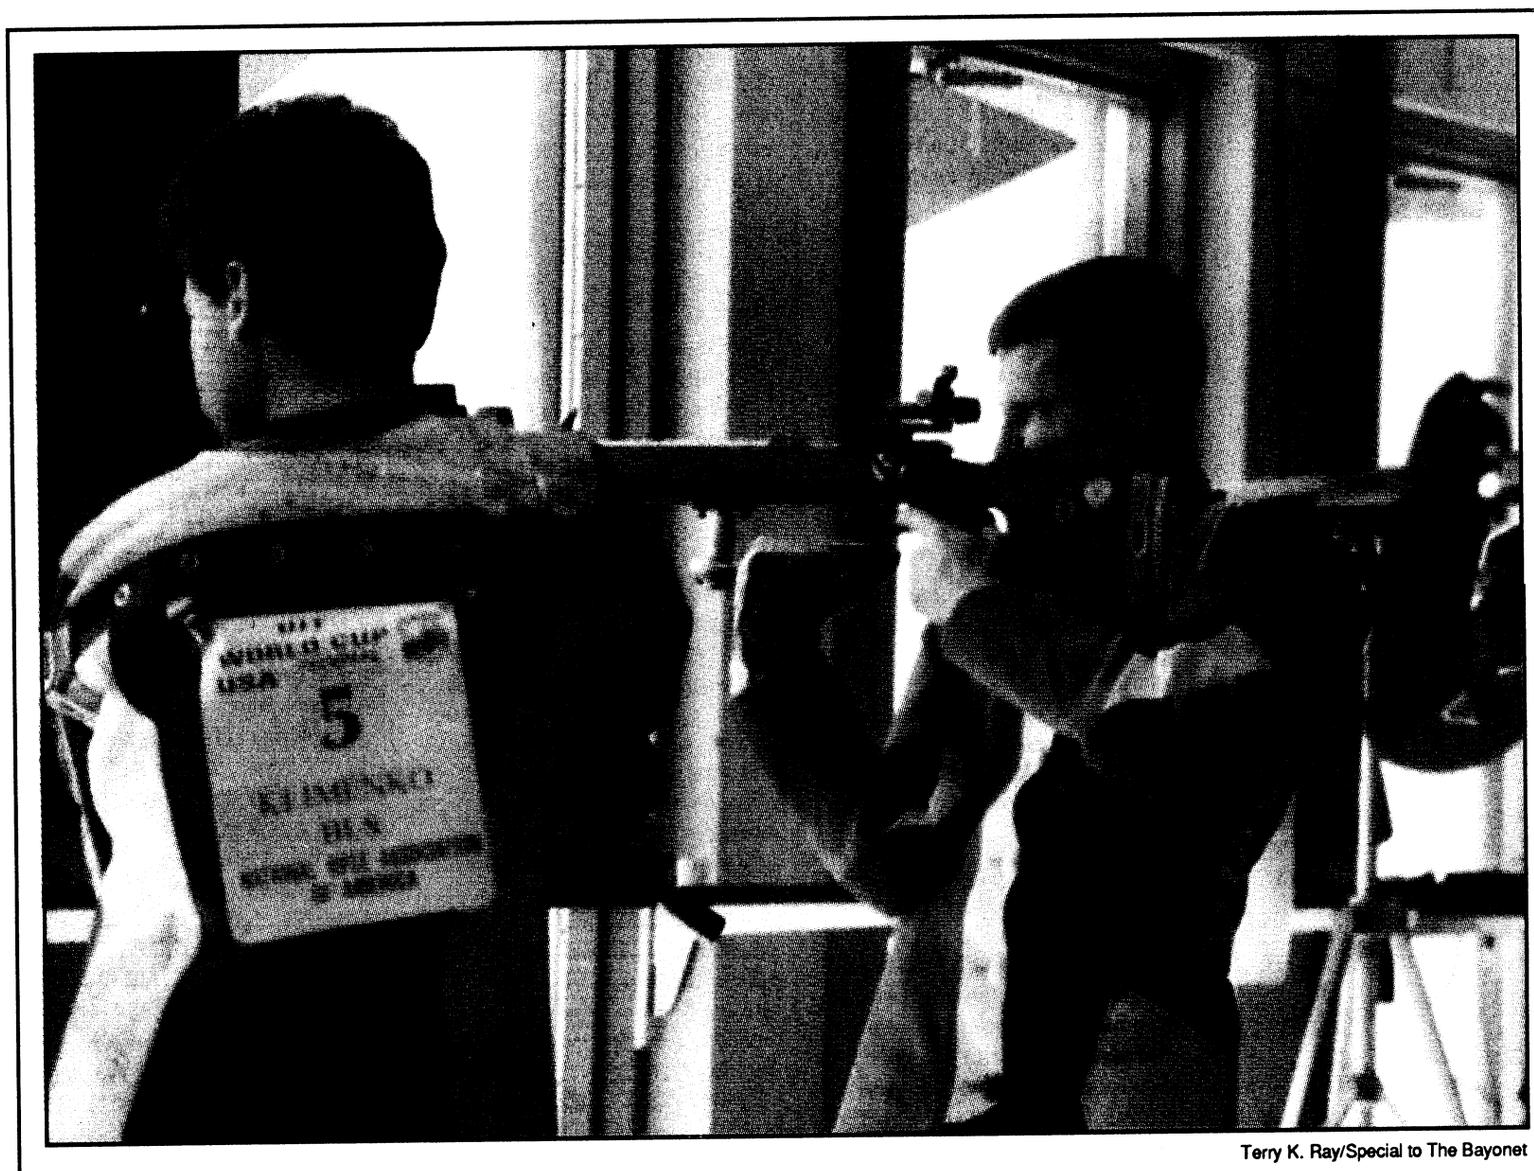
USAIC Public Affairs Office

This year marks the 54th anniversary of the birth of the U.S. airborne.



Fort Benning's 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment, hosted a memorial service Thursday at the Airborne Walk, Eubanks Field, as part of the four-day 17th annual Airborne Awards Festival taking place in Atlanta.

Members from the original test platoon of parachutists, formed at Fort Benning in 1940, were here for a day of activities along with other distinguished guests and many airborne veterans from all wars. Fraternal members of the airborne community, both retires and active duty, attended also.

While here, festival attendees visited the Airborne School, attended the memorial service at Airborne Walk, observed an 11:15 a.m. airborne-in-action demonstration, including a jump by the Fort Benning Command Exhibition Parachute Team, the Silver Wings, on Eubanks Field, and attended a 1:45 p.m. jump and 2:30 p.m. graduation of the Basic Airborne Course at Fryar Field Drop Zone.

During the memorial ceremony, the youngest officer and enlisted airborne graduates participated in the "carry the flame" mission. It represented the continuing spirit of airborne.

The 17th annual Airborne Awards Festival at the Airport Sheraton Hotel, Thursday to Saturday, highlights the 50th anniversary of the invasion of France during World War II. Many veterans of the airborne assault of 50 years ago will be present, as will airborne veterans of more recent wars and peacetime service.

Summer job workshop available

Youth Services

A job workshop for youths between the ages of 16 and 21 who want to get a job this summer will be May 7 from noon until 3 p.m. at the Youth Activities Center, Building 1056.

Sponsored by the Army Community Service Family Member Employment Assistance Program along with Youth Services, the workshop will be open to any post youth, officials said.

During the workshop, youths will be exposed to the current job market in Columbus, Fort Benning and surrounding area and briefed about how to apply for jobs, how to complete applications, how to be interviewed, how to dress for an interview and how to network the job market. The FMEAP coordinator will provide and assist individuals with employment application during the workshop.

Military, Department of Defense civilian personnel and contractors having employment needs are encouraged to contact the FMEAP office for a list of available applicants.

Youths interested in attending the workshop can visit one of the following activities to complete a registration application:

Indianhead Gym, Building 2592, 545-3607.

Bouton Heights Outreach Center, Building 9608.

Youth Services (Main Center), Building 1056.

McGraw Outreach Center, Building 11303, 544-2673

ACS Family Member Employment Program, Building 2643.

For more information, call 545-7945 or 545-3070.

School Board elections set for May 17

By Jerrie MacIntire
Special to The Bayonet

Parents and guardians of students enrolled in the Fort Benning school system will select peers as School Board representatives during elections May 17.

Parents or guardians of students attending Loyd, McBride and Wilson Schools are eligible to fill standard two-year terms on the School Board. Any parent or guardian of a Fort Benning student may run for the at-large seat of president, also a two-year position.

Parents or guardians of students at Faith and White Schools are eligible to fill one-year unexpired terms on the School Board.

To be eligible, candidates must have children enrolled in the schools they hope to represent and must not be employed by the school system or related to any employee of the school system.

Those interested in running for election can contact the principal of their child's school or Richard Skinner, assistant superintendent for budget and personnel services, at 545-2500, no later than Monday

The nine-member board includes representatives from each of the seven Fort Benning schools as well as an elected president and chaplain.

Ranger buddy teams compete for 'best' title

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

The waiting is over and the time is now. Today begins the three-day quest in search of the "Best Ranger."

The David E. Grange Jr. Best Ranger Competition is scheduled for today through Monday at various locations at the Ranger Training Brigade.

To become the "Best Ranger," the winning two-man team must fire weapons (both M-16A2 and 9mm), parachute from a helicopter, canoe, throw a grenade, administer first aid, rappel, maneuver over land obstacles and swim better than the rest of the entries.

Fifty-three teams from the Army, Army National Guard, Army Reserve, U.S. Marines, U.S. Navy, Canada and France will be competing by sending teams to compete in head-to-head competition for the title of "Best Ranger."

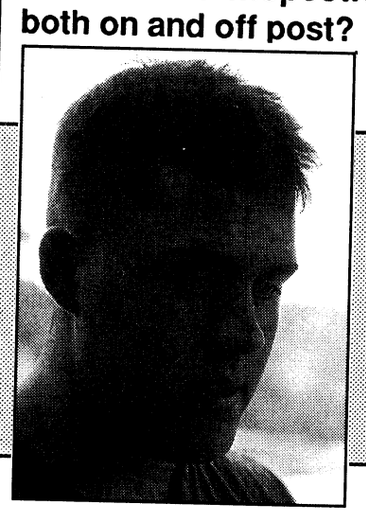
Between 30 to 60 days before the competition, teams begin to travel to Fort Benning area to begin modifying their routines to the local terrain.

The competition will culminate Monday, when Army Chief of Staff Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan, will be the guest speaker for the Best Ranger Competition awards ceremony. Members of the winning team will receive engraved 9mm pistols and various awards.

Everyone throughout the tri-communities is encouraged to come out and watch the events.

The match-up is nonstop competition with some events taking place at night.

A welcome center will be located in Building 5024, the Ranger Training Brigade Headquarters at Harmony Church, throughout the competition to assist visitors with directions, team standings and other information on events and test locations.



For more information, call Harry Ikner at the Ranger Training Brigade headquarters at 544-7212.

VARIOUS VOICES

Should the Army have unannounced health-and-welfare inspections for soldiers living both on and off post?

Pfc. Russel R. RuBedor, 586th Engineer Company, 36th Engineer Group— "They should announce (when) they are coming beforehand."

Pfc. Tammie S. Williams, 324th Forward Support Battalion, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division — "Yes. Because the urine tests are given to the same people and the system is not correct."

Spc. Brett M. Huff, Company C, 317th Engineer Battalion, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division — "It is a good idea because it keeps the barracks in good shape and the same rule (should) apply off post."

Staff Sgt. Jeffre B. Danielly, Bradley Fighting Vehicle, New Equipment Training Team, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment — "No. Off post needs a warning because of the fact that they may have civilians living with them. Too many accidents happen in the barracks because of accidents."

Spc. Walter Hudson, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment — "No. They have the right to privacy."

Sgt. 1st Class Ricky S. Webb, Fort Irwin, Calif. — "Yes, because everyone is an adult. Treating (people) like kids isn't going to help."

Loud music, vulgarity not tolerated

The following acts are prohibited on Fort Benning:

• The playing of hand-carried radios and electronic sound devices in any Post Exchange facility, Army Commissary, post movie theater or military buses.

• The playing of a radio or electronic sound device in a motor vehicle that emits sound outside the passenger or driver compartment of the motor vehicle at a volume that is audible to a person with normal hearing (not hypersensitive) at a distance of 15 feet from the motor vehicle on any public street, public parking area, or private driveway on the Fort Benning military reservation.

• The use of obscene, vulgar or profane language in any public area on the Fort Benning military reservation. Language is obscene, vulgar or profane when it would clearly offend a reasonable person's sense of decency.

• The consumption of alcoholic beverages in all public areas on Fort Benning except in facilities authorized by regulation to sell alcoholic beverages for on-premises consumption.

These facilities include Post Exchange snack bars or dining areas and nonappropriated fund activities (clubs, golf courses, bowling centers, Uchee Creek and Destin Recreation Center.)

Residential houses and the surrounding yard area are excluded from this prohibition.

• The use or consumption of alcoholic beverages in a boat or the passenger or driver compartment of any motor vehicle.

It is prohibited to transport or possess any alcoholic beverage in a boat or the passenger or driver compartment of any motor vehicle when the manufacturer's seal has been broken or the bottle, can or keg has otherwise been opened.

Operating a boat or driving while intoxicated is prohibited by USAIC Regulations 210-5 and 190-5, respectively, and state laws.

These prohibitions are not intended to curtail the individual liberties of any person.

Rather, these are set forth to ensure that the individual dignity of every person on this installation is protected and that all military personnel and family members may move freely about the installation without fear of threatening situations, real or perceived.

The prohibitions listed are punitive and violation of them may lead to prosecution under the Uniform Code of Military Justice, administrative action or sanctions.

dial 545-boss

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for soldiers to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere. While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies established to provide assistance, the line offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders.

The Bayonet is now featuring some of the calls that may benefit other members of the Fort Benning community.

☎ Call: I have a few requests for the Davis Hill Housing Area.

I would like to get full-size mail boxes and newspaper boxes installed. Currently, there are only letter size mail boxes and no newspaper boxes while other housing areas have full-size mail boxes and newspapers boxes.

Currently, there is only one speed limit sign posted at the lower entrance of Davis Hill; I would like more speed limit signs posted. Other housing areas have signs posted throughout and also Military Police patrols.

I would also like "children playing" signs posted in the housing area.

Any assistance provided will be appreciated.

Family Housing Office response:

Billy Scott, chief of family housing contacted the caller Feb. 28.

The caller stated that all that he was trying to do was get a post office letter drop box and a newspaper vending machine installed at the entrance to Davis Hill.

In addition, he wanted more speed limit signs and children playing signs erected in the housing area.

Scott contacted the Fort Benning Post Office. The Post Office agreed to place a letter drop box in the Davis Hills Housing Area.

The Columbus Ledger-Enquirer was also contacted and agreed to place a newspaper vending machine at the same location.

Scott contacted Lt. Col. Jack Heacock, Military Police Activity March 7. Heacock will conduct a drive-through in the area and recommend any required additional signs to the post traffic safety council.

☎ Call: I have a child in a wheelchair and want to get a sign posted for drivers to be cautious.

I was told that there are signs for the deaf and blind but none for wheelchairs.

My son is getting to an age where he's wanting to cross the street, but he can't because people speed excessively through the housing area.

Any help in this matter would be appreciated.

Directorate of Public Works response:

DPW fabricated and installed two customized handicap crossing signs on Englander Street March 1.

The caller said she was pleased with the placement of the signs and thanked us for helping to make the street safer for her son.

☎ Call: I recently received my February pay.

I was overpaid and went to Finance to take care of the problem. Finance officials told me to come back next Tuesday.

I would like to know why it takes so long to get these problems resolved.

I believe this will ultimately cause me problems with my finances.

Finance Office response:

Ray Winderweedle contacted the caller by phone. On the day that the caller attempted to have his pay explained, Feb. 28, the Military Pay Branch was seeing only "no pay due" soldiers.

The Military Pay Branch scheduled an appointment for him March 8.

On March 8, the caller came in, was appropriately seen and his pay account was fully explained. He understands that what he thought was an overpayment was actually an adjustment of his base pay longevity, retroactive to July 20.

The caller said he was completely satisfied with the service provided to him March 8.

MPs should enforce fishing rules

I am writing to you about the upkeep of the ponds and around them. There are two ponds that are used the most — Kings and Twilight Pond.

For more than a year, there has been no enforcement of rules or fishing laws on the ponds.

The Military Police do not check to see if someone does have a license or what they are fishing with or what kind of fish or how big the fish are.

People use illegal equipment and bait and no one tells them not to.

At Kings Pond, some men have built a shack where they gamble every day, and some of the men are Benning workers.

The working men spend about three to four hours a day playing cards or gambling.

The MPs know about this shack and they come out and spend time with them.

The recreation area at Bradley Landing has been built up, but no work has been done on the ponds on the Georgia side of Fort Benning.

Most people do not know what Fort Benning Regulation 210-2 is or what it is about. Why do the MPs not enforce it?

I have talked with the Military Police operation (office) but with no result.

William S. Gaines
Phenix City, Ala.

Military Police response

We recognize Mr. Gaines' frustration with illegal fishing on the reservation. The members of the Military Police Activity share his frustration with those who violate any laws.

The Fort Benning reservation covers more than 182,000 acres. Within the confines of the installation boundaries, a multitude of activities warrant enforcement.

Public safety is our first priority. All other demands are secondary to public safety.

Like all of the activities on post, the Military Police Activity has experienced reductions in personnel and budget, requiring a prioritization of services we provide. The enforcement of wildlife regulations vies for our attention with a host of other problems and issues.

However, without dedicated full-time game enforcement personnel, it is difficult to give this problem the attention it deserves.

We will try harder to provide more enforcement to wildlife regulations as we try to balance the demand for our services with our dwindling resources.

Lt. Col. Jack S. Heacock
Military Police Activity

BEST IN THE WORLD

Post takes 'tops'

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning has been named the world's best Army installation, and some of the directorates that helped the post achieve that status have also been recognized.

The post won Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel Awards for best-in-class in three major categories; Morale, Welfare and Recreation, the Adjutant General's military services and the Army Career and Alumni Program were each named best in category.

The personnel awards are judged and presented in conjunction with the Army Communities of Excellence awards and Commander in Chief Award.

With these awards comes a $50,000 cash prize for each of the three winners, meaning the post will collect a total of $1.65 million for its ACOE efforts.

The personnel awards focus on achievement in personnel customer service and quality of life issues.

• MWR contributes to soldiers' and family members' quality of life by providing recreational services without cost to the government. It operates the Officers' and NCO clubs, the bowling centers, golf course and both Uchee Creek and Destin recreation centers.

MWR is also responsible for craft shops, athletic facilities, child development facilities and the post taxi operation.

The division also serves family members during times of deployment by operating a network to assists families during their sponsors' absence.

Alan F. Stewart, director of Community Activities, said being recognized as the best MWR and family support in the Army confirms DCA's ongoing commitment to quality and excellence.

"It is also a tribute to our soldiers and their families, who deserve the best," Stewart said. "Listening to our customers and providing the MWR service and facilities they ask for is what makes us a success. My hat is off to all the DCA and other staff employees who made this recognition possible."

• Military services supports soldiers by maintaining their records, issuing identification cards and providing orders for awards, promotions and changes in assignment.

Military services operates both a welcome center and an out-processing center, giving active duty soldiers their first and last impression of Fort Benning.

Military services also supports more than 35,000 retirees through its Retirement Services Division.

Jim Brinson, director of AG, said his organization is a dedicated team of military and civilians.

"We believe in exceptional customer service for soldiers and their families," he said. "We are committed to Total Army Quality in all aspects of our operation — do it right the first time and take care of the customer."

Brinson credits AG's success to its dedicated workers, personnel automation initiatives that employ computer technology to speed service, and teamwork with other post staff members and commanders.

• ACAP is a program that, through counseling and training, assists soldiers and family members to find jobs in the civilian sector once they or their sponsors complete their Army service. It offers automated job referral services and teaches its customers how to prepare resumes and handle job interviews.

ACAP has ties with the civilian job sector as well as local, state and federal labor departments. The Fort Benning office is responsible for seven southeastern states and Puerto Rico.

Ted Craig, transition services manager for ACAP, said, "Several years ago, my mentor told me that success in anything one does is most often measured by the width and depth of one's effort. The success of ACAP rests in the variety of partnerships that have been created and the intensity of these partners in accomplishing their common goals — to take care of people. Attaining these goals, and setting more, is the major reason Fort Benning ACAP is the best in the world."

Law Day

Post to celebrate with trials, golf

By Jerrie MacIntire
Special to The Bayonet©

In celebration of Law Day Sunday, Fort Benning has planned a variety of activities including mock legal trials and guest speakers in the schools, poster and essay contests for students and a golf tournament.

Following the national theme, "Just Solutions," attorneys from the Staff Judge Advocate's Office have held sessions throughout the schools to discuss how the legal system operates to promote a greater understanding of the law.

Alternative means of punishment is the focus of the Law Day theme. Community service work instead of prisons for some offenders is one way the legal system is changing to meet the needs of the population.

Other changes children discussed are strong gun-control policy and victim-offender reconciliation.

"These classes help the students appreciate our current legal system and encourage them to consider ways the system could be improved," said Capt. Jill Brown, an attorney in the Staff Judge Advocate's Office and Law Day coordinator.

In addition to school seminars, students also participated in Law Day poster and essay contests. The winning entries will be displayed in the entryway of Building 4, Infantry Hall.

Highlighting a Law Day luncheon was the presence of James L. Wiggins, U.S. attorney from the Middle District of Georgia. Wiggins spoke April 26 at the Columbus Harmony Club.

Also in celebration of Law Day, the eighth annual golf tournament at the Follow Me Golf Course is today at 1 p.m.

OCS Hall of Fame set

Officer Candidate School

The 1994 Officer Candidate School Hall of Fame ceremony will be at 11 a.m. Sept. 9 in Marshall Auditorium, Building 4, Infantry Hall. This year, a dinner honoring the inductees will be the previous evening.

To be eligible for induction, retired or active duty officers must have been commissioned from the Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning or Ground General School at Fort Riley, Kan., and attained the rank of colonel or higher while serving in an active or Reserve status.

Graduates of OCS who were awarded the Medal of Honor are also eligible for induction regardless of rank, as are graduates who achieved a position of prominence in state or federal government.

For more information, call 545-4907 or 545-4711. The cutoff date for processing nomination packets is June 15.

Faith team takes fourth place

By Jerrie MacIntire
Special to The Bayonet©

Faith Middle School's Odyssey of the Mind Team placed fourth in state competition Saturday in Division II of the Furs, Fins and Feathers category.

The seven students, directed by advisors Cindy Givens and Libbie Kurinec, presented their original seven-minute theatrical performance depicting a humorous alternative to the accepted theory of the dodo bird's extinction.

The skit, performed with a colorful stage setting and innovative costumes (all crafted within a $75 budget), was just one portion of the annual competition; team members also competed in a spontaneous question-and-answer period.

Team members included Tom Wasner, John Davis, Jennifer Grant, Steven Wojdakowski, Shannon Goldsby, Meghan Ferriter and Correy Hudson.

Contest judges were volunteers, mostly from the field of education, who participated in special training seminars through the Odyssey of the Mind organization.

Designed to enhance thinking skills and encourage creativity, the Odyssey of the Mind competition is a worldwide, yearly event.

AAFES announces hazardous recall

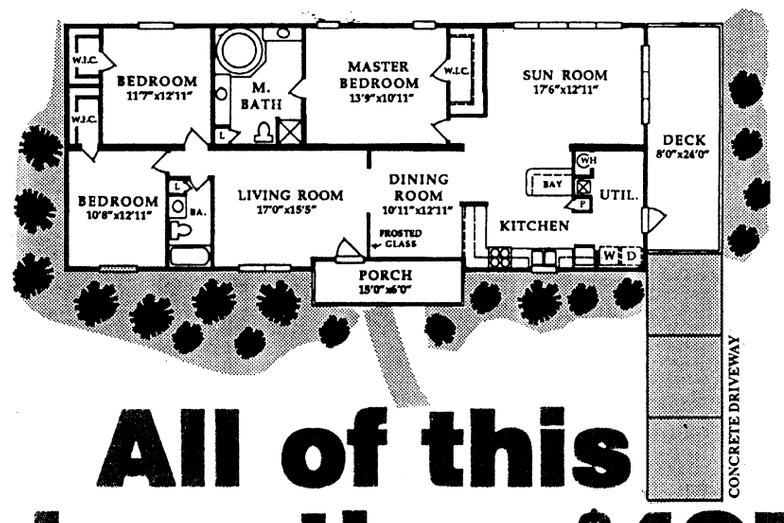
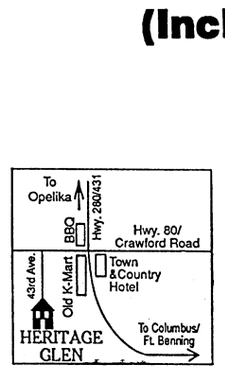
Army News Service

Army and Air Force Exchange Service officials have announced the recall of a product sold in exchange outlets between 1992 and 1994.

The STP automotive company has recalled "STP Flat-Tire Repair/Fixer," saying that "persons attempting permanent repairs to an inflated tire may be seriously injured if the (product) is inside the tire."



The company is removing the tire fixer from its product line, AAFES officials said.



Customers should stop using the product immediately, officials said. AAFES customers in the United States can call (800) 277-3766 for instructions on how to obtain a refund and dispose of the product.

AAFES customers in Europe and the Pacific should return the unused portion of the product to the nearest exchange for a refund, officials said.

The AAFES sale price for the fixer was $2.95.

DoD moves ahead in technology reinvestment

By Linda S. Lee
American Forces Information Service

The Department of Defense announced a third group of universities, companies and organizations chosen to take part in the Technology Reinvestment Project.

DoD officials said the 66 proposals will receive about $155 million, affecting 463 activities in 36 states and the District of Columbia. The 66 projects bring the overall total accepted to 162. More than 1,260 universities, companies and organizations are involved in 44 states and the District of Columbia.

Total DoD funding committed for the project so far is $415 million. About $50 million remains in fiscal 1993 funding, while $474 million has been appropriated for fiscal 1994.

Part of President Bill Clinton's defense reinvestment program, the project emphasizes technology with both military and civilian uses. This program requires participating activities to provide matching funds.

A major goal of Clinton's program is integrating military production into the U.S. commercial industrial base, DoD officials explained. Military needs and commercial industry must work together to meet the security requirements in today's world, they added.

"The Technology Reinvestment Project will advance our defense reinvestment and conversion efforts, bolster the national industrial base and put the defense industry's talents, skills and technology to best use," said a DoD official.

Most of the 66 selected proposals fall into one of several main categories. These are information infrastructure, vehicle technology, health-care technology, aeronautical technology and electronics design and manufacturing.

The proposals include a program to train defense engineers in the fields of biomedicine and biotechnology; a trauma care information management system that monitors and aids in the diagnosis and treatment of trauma care patients in both civilian and military settings; and an air quality monitoring system.

Among the third-round schools are Johns Hopkins, Louisiana State, North Dakota State, Carnegie Mellon, Washington, Stanford and Cornell universities. Businesses leading the efforts include Apple Computer, Johnson and Johnson, McDonnell Douglas Aerospace and Westinghouse Electric.

Local and state governments that have an active role in the projects include New York, Connecticut, Maryland and Vermont, said DoD officials.

In addition to DoD, federal agencies taking part in Clinton's program are the departments of Commerce, Energy and Transportation, the National Science Foundation and NASA.

volunteers needed

Volunteer Resource Center

The Fort Benning Volunteer Resource Center promotes volunteerism by recruiting potential volunteers, by retaining active volunteers and by recognizing the contribution of volunteers to the quality of life of soldiers and families.

There are many volunteer opportunities available through the center:

• Volunteers are needed at the Thrift Shop on Tuesdays and Thursdays between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. Individuals will gain retail experience while helping others. Free child care is provided for up to two children.

• Santa's Castle needs volunteers on Wednesdays from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. to help clean and refurbish toys. A volunteer is particularly needed to sew baby doll and Barbie clothes. Child care costs are provided.

• Fort Benning Schools is looking for a volunteer lifeguard and water safety instructor to assist in the Adaptive Aquatics Program for exceptional children to be Thursday and April 21 and 28 and May 4, 12, 19 and 26 from 12:15 to 3 p.m.

• Sayers Memorial Library needs volunteers to assist with shelving books, data entry and story time for children. Also, volunteers with experience in activity program planning, dramatic reading and counseling are encouraged to participate in the Multiple Reading Program this summer. Child-care costs will be provided.

Volunteers are needed in each housing area to assist the community mayor. Persons interested can contact a community life center.

• The Public Affairs Office needs an editorial assistant to assist the print section in publishing The Bayonet.

This product supports Army families through disseminating community news and command information to all Fort Benning families in The Bayonet newspaper, delivered free to all on-post housing units and by subscription to those living off post.

Interested persons must have typing ability, and knowledge of computer word processing systems is preferred but not required. Good communication skills and command of the English language are required. Education or experience in print journalism is preferred but not required. Also, the individual must be familiar with the Army and Fort Benning.

For more information, call 545-2201.

• The Volunteer Resource Center is located in Building 359, Family Unit Network Center, and it is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p .m. Persons interested in volunteering can visit or call Olga MacLean, installation volunteer coordinator, at 545-5602.

Other volunteer announcements are as follows:

• The Rape Crisis Intervention Program is looking for volunteers. Training and child-care costs are provided.

• The First Steps Program needs volunteers to mentor and assist new mothers during the first few days or weeks after the birth of their children. Training and child-care costs are provided.

• Big Brothers and Big Sisters of Columbus needs adults to share love, support and time with children from single-parent families. For more information, call 327-3760.

• Project Voice needs volunteers to serve as tutors, mentors and coaches to work with youths. Individuals working in this program will serve as role models through their efforts in sports, educational and recreational programs. For more information, call Tony Adams at 571-4975 or 571-4976.

• The Fish and Wildlife Management office needs sports-minded volunteers to work at the deer-check station, feed the catfish in Russ Pond and perform other duties.

• The Combined Communities of Southeast Columbus is looking for volunteers for its tutorial program for Saturday mornings. Contact Lonnie Jackson at 687-5357.

• The Volunteer Resource Center is located in Building 359, Family Unit Network Center, and it is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p .m. Persons interested in volunteering can visit or call Olga MacLean, installation volunteer coordinator, at 545-5602.

Capt. Catherine N. Wilson will relinquish command to Capt. Kevin T. Meadows.

For more information, call 545-1410.

Vehicle registration deadline nears

The deadline for 1994 vehicle registration in Chattahoochee County is as follows based on the owner's last name:

• Monday — S to Z.

There is a $15 penalty per vehicle for failure to register by the deadline. Payment must be made by cash or check, drawn on a local bank, which includes the soldier's work number and the company commander's name.

To avoid the ad valorem tax, Georgia nonresidents must bring to the office a complete affidavit available from the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, a leave and earnings statement, proof of insurance and the registration fee ($20 for each car or truck and $12 for each trailer).

The vehicle registration office is located at the County Courthouse in Cusseta. Office hours are 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Automotive exams to be administered

The Automotive Service Excellence Examination will be administered Thursday and May 10 and 12 at Fort Benning test centers.

Eligible soldiers may take three examinations free if they are taken for college credit. There is a $15 per test fee if tests are taken for certification or recertification.

All examinees must pay a $20 registration fee.

Education center locations are:

• Main Post Education Center, Building 2602, 545-4863.

• Kelley Hill Education Center, Building 9027, 544-3689.

• Sand Hill Education Center, Building 3245, 544-9961.

• Harmony Church Education Center, Building 4635, 544-6311.

Recruiters seek warrant officers

A U.S. Army Recruiting Commanding warrant officer recruiting team will visit Fort Benning May 17, 18 and 19 to recruit qualified enlisted soldiers for the warrant officers' program to include flight training.

The team will conduct briefings in Infantry Hall, Classroom 4, for all interested soldiers on the following dates and times: May 17, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.; May 18 , 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.; and May 19, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Rangers schedule open house July 30

The 5th Ranger Training Battalion, Dahlonega, Ga., will conduct its 29th annual Open House July 30 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The public is invited to view the numerous displays and demonstrations, along with the official opening of the new Frank D. Merrill Museum.

The public will be able to view and photograph the U.S. Army rangers in action. Demonstrations include combat raids, hand-to-hand combat, mountaineering, high altitude parachuting, helicopter operations, and snake handling.

Cadence calling prohibited in housing

There have been complaints from housing area residents about soldiers performing physical training in the early morning hours and singing cadences.

As stated in Policy Memorandum 93-13, cadence is not allowed to be called in or near the housing areas.

Formations running in or near housing areas cannot call cadence until they are clear of that area.

Preretirement class set

The Retirement Services office will host a preretirement orientation in Marshall Auditorium in Infantry Hall May 18 from 1 to 4 p.m.

The keynote speaker will be retired Col. Judd Walton from the Army and Air Force Mutual Aid Association.

Personal affairs, financial and insurance planning, the Military Survivor Benefit Plan, health care, the Army Career and Alumni Program and Veterans' Affairs benefits will be discussed.

Preregistration is required. For more information and to pre-register, call 545-2515 or 545-5369.

VA offers free exams for Gulf vets

Department of Veterans Affairs

The Department of Veterans Affairs is encouraging veterans of the Persian Gulf War who may be concerned about possible environmental exposures in the Gulf region to take advantage of VA's health monitoring program.

While an aggressive research program continues to clarify the nature of any ill health patterns in such veterans, services are being offered today, including a comprehensive physical examination and lab tests. These are free to any concerned Gulf veterans by appointment in every VA medical center.

In addition, a new law requested by VA simplifies high-priority access to follow-up care for veterans with any condition that VA physicians think could stem from the Gulf environment.

"I urge any Persian Gulf veterans with illness they think may be related to their service as well as any healthy veterans who would like to be part of our Persian Gulf Registry to call their local VA medical center to make an appointment if they have not already done so," VA Secretary Jesse Brown said. Already, 16,025 have taken part in the examination protocol.

Eighty-nine also have received evaluations at VA's Persian Gulf Referral Centers that have been operating since August 1992 in West Los Angeles, Houston, and Washington, D.C., to handle cases of unusual symptoms in Gulf veterans. The centers assist in cases that have evaded diagnoses locally by providing expertise in such areas as pulmonary and infectious disease, immunology, neuropsychology and toxicology.

While veterans often have described a wide variety of symptoms that are common in primary care medicine — including fatigue, muscle aches, joint pain and skin rashes — VA has not fully documented a specific illness or pattern of disease pointing to the cause or causes of these symptoms.

However, VA is taking the issue very seriously and has committed millions of dollars to research, including $2.5 million over 10 years to a National Academy of Sciences project, with matching funds from the Department of Defense.

In-house VA research has been focusing on evaluation of patients who may have been exposed to environmental factors such as depleted uranium used in armaments as well as neurological studies in veterans who have voiced concerns about possible nerve gas exposure.

In addition, VA's Medical Research Service recently provided supplemental funds for several VA medical centers to expand investigations in such areas as cognitive functioning and immunological status of Persian Gulf veterans.

VA also has asked its researchers throughout the country to develop new ideas for research projects aimed at Persian Gulf veterans and environmental hazards, with a request for proposals drawing more than two dozen submissions last month. The proposed projects will compete in peer review for scientific merit, with VA planning to fund up to three $500,000-a-year environmental hazard research centers later this year.

Meanwhile, VA and the departments of Defense and Health and Human Services conducted a technology assessment workshop on the Persian Gulf experience and health this week under the aegis of the national Institutes of Health. Outside experts will seek to develop a consensus on a case definition for unexplained illness in Persian Gulf veterans.

TRADOC process action team recommends mission tactics

TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — Command officials and individuals must work together to ensure that adequate mission support activities are carried out at the installation level.

That is one of the recommendations made by a Training and Doctrine Command process action team investigating ways to maintain adequate mission support as Army resources are cut.

"Realizing there will be no increase in money and the amount we have today is inadequate, how do we improve processes so the necessary mission support functions are accomplished?" said Ray Spunzo, chief of the mission support process action team.

The process action team is one of several formed by Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr., TRADOC commander, to help the command re-engineer and still accomplish its missions during downsizing and budget reductions.

"Individual soldiers and civilian employees play vital roles in maintaining high quality customer support and base operations support as resources are cut," Spunzo said.

"The command and the Army will work to eliminate embedded bureaucratic rules, regulations and processes that interfere with efficient, productive mission support."

The six members of the PAT identified several areas that must be changed to give installation commanders freedom to make the best decisions for their posts. Two of the team members were from TRADOC installations.

They talked with Hampton and Norfolk, Va., civic leaders and businessmen and college administrators in Virginia and Arizona.

"What we found has been suggested before, but never enacted, so why are we bringing them up again?" Spunzo asked.

"These changes must be made so that TRADOC and other major commands, and their installations, can continue to accomplish their missions as resources and people are cut. And there is now a bias for change in the federal government."

The PAT found that one thing that cities, universities and manufacturing plants have in common is that each operates on a single budget.

Post commanders must deal with appropriated and nonappropriated budgets, as well as those of tenant units and their parent commands.

Complicating the process, the operations and maintenance budget, the largest source of funds, is made up of various accounts .

"There is a labyrinth of rules and regulations for these accounts," Spunzo said. "They define whether projects are maintenance and repair, new work or construction. They also limit the amount of money a commander can approve in the accounts or require him to get approval from higher up."

"In the business world, a plant manager has the authority to spend the money in his budget in the way he sees best, without getting approval from corporate headquarters."

As a partial solution, the team proposed developing with installations a budget-building process that includes all mission support processes in a single budget. It will show easily understood descriptions of services or products being bought. After an installation commander approves a budget, it will be converted to a separate financial accounts-based budget to satisfy federal financial reporting requirements.

"That will allow a commander to more easily tell if the post is spending its limited resources on the right things and receiving fair value for the dollars being spent," he said.

Contracting is another area that needs to be more efficient.

"A more cooperative attitude must be established between those who need contracts and procurement professionals," Spunzo said. "Early identification of contracting needs will allow contracts to better meet expectations and dampen year-end spikes in workload.

"We will ask for a change in rules to allow simplified procurement procedures to be used for more of our installations' contracts. We will ask that installations be allowed to contract architect and engineer design services rather than be limited to Corps of Engineer district offices."

Automation systems within the Army must be compatible, Spunzo said. Now engineer and contracting organizations have different computer systems.

"An installation engineer organization spends more than 50 percent of its money in contracts. They must be electronically linked to reduce paperwork flow," Spunzo said.

He thinks TRADOC and its installations must act now to be positioned to take advantage of the Army's new fiber optics local area networks that will internet all installation systems.

Spunzo said none of these ideas are revolutionary. However, the team found several of them comparable to those reported by Vice President Al Gore's reinventing government task force.

va q & a

Department of Veterans Affairs

Q: I understand the Department of Veterans Affairs is required by law to recover costs from health insurers for nonservice-connected medical care provided to veterans covered by private insurance policies and plans. Since I don't have medical insurance, will I lose my eligibility to receive VA care?

A: No. Whether or not you have insurance does not affect your eligibility for VA care. Neither does it have a bearing on your income level that determines your category of eligibility under the means test. VA does not consider insurance as income.

Q: Will my insurance costs go up because VA bills my insurance for my medical care?

A: To date, there have been no instances reported of insurers premiums being raised because of claims being filed by the government. Health insurance is intended to cover medical services listed in your policy. The premiums you, your spouse or your employer pay are for those services. Since you are using your policy to allow VA to recover costs, the insurance is being used as intended.

Q: Do all veterans qualify for a Department of Veterans Affairs pension?

A: No. VA pension benefits are paid to wartime veterans who are totally and permanently disabled from circumstances unrelated to their military service and who are in financial need. Needy survivors of wartime veterans may also be eligible for pension benefits.

Veterans and family members with questions about eligibility for pension benefits can contact their local VA regional office or call (800) 827-1000.

Q: Are veterans of World War II automatically eligible for VA pension benefits at age 65?

A: No. All other pension requirements must be met. These include honorable wartime service, permanent and total disability, and income and net worth limitations.

Q: I am a Persian Gulf veteran. Do I qualify for burial in a Department of Veterans Affairs national cemetery?

A: Yes. Burial in a national cemetery is available to all members of the armed forces and veterans discharged under conditions other than dishonorable who completed their required period of service, as well as their spouses, minor children and, under certain conditions, unmarried adult children. Also eligible for burial are members of the Reserves and the Army or Air National Guard or the Reserve Officers' Training Corps of the Army, Navy or Air Force who die while on active duty for training.

Q: What benefits are included in veterans' rights to burial in a by national cemetery.

A: For eligible veterans and family members, VA provides a gravesite; handles gravesite preparation and burial; furnishes a headstone or marker, a Presidential Memorial Certificate and a flag; and provides perpetual care.

Q: I got married recently. Does my wife automatically become the beneficiary of my Department of Veterans Affairs insurance policy?

A: No. You must notify VA in writing that you wish to change your beneficiary and provide complete identification of the new beneficiary.

Q: Does VA provide life insurance for all military personnel?

A: Yes. Life insurance is available to all members of the military, regardless of where they serve, through the Servicemen's Group Life Insurance program. Military personnel receive up to $200,000 of life insurance protection under the SGLI program, which is supervised by VA. Coverage of $100,000 is automatically issued to all individuals entering active duty in the military, and they can apply for up to an additional $100,000. A member of the uniformed services can decline in writing if he or she does not want the coverage. More than 99.9 percent of all individuals currently serving on active duty in the military are covered by SGLI.

Q: I do not receive benefit payments from the Department of Veterans Affairs. If I die in a VA hospital, am I eligible for any burial benefits.

A: Yes. Those who pay the veteran's expenses would be entitled to a burial and funeral expense allowance of $300 and a plot or interment allowance of $150. In the case of veterans not buried in a cemetery under the jurisdiction of the U.S. government, the executors may be reimbursed for transportation of the remains to the place of burial.

Q: Can I reserve a gravesite at a national cemetery?

A: No. Gravesites in national cemeteries cannot be reserved. Funeral directors or others making burial arrangements must apply at the time of death. A weekend caller will be directed to one of three strategically located VA cemetery offices that remain open during weekends to schedule burial at the cemetery of the caller's choice during the upcoming week.

Editor's note: If you have a question about your veterans benefits, call the Department of Veterans Affairs at (800) 827-1000.

Military Appreciation Week is scheduled for May 15 to 21 at Fort Benning and the surrounding areas. Military Appreciation Week is when Fort Benning, Columbus and Phenix City come together to celebrate military units, service members and their families. This year's event is approaching fast.

Below are a few of the events scheduled. For more information concerning the events, contact Lamar Caldwell at 545-7357.

Kick-off relay — Open to active duty military only. Teams will consist of six runners, one driver and one carryall. The course, from Infantry Hall to Harmony Church, is divided into eight one-mile legs. Each runner will run either one or two of the legs until the team reaches the field house. The event is scheduled to start at 6:15 a.m. May 16.

Beach volleyball — Open to the public. Eliminations will be conducted May 16 to narrow the field down to eight from Fort Benning and eight from Columbus and Phenix City. Tournament structure will depend on the number of entries. Match is one game played to 15 points and a point is awarded on every serve. The top three teams will receive awards immediately after competition. Preliminaries are scheduled to be at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center, with the finals at Scooters in Columbus.

Boxing — Open to active duty military only. Each subchapter is required to provide one boxer in each of four weight classes; 145 to 154 pounds, 155 to 164 pounds, 165 to 174 pounds and 175 to 190 pounds. Participants must have either no boxing experience or a maximum of one bout experience. After weigh-ins, a random drawing will decide opponents. Bout winners will receive two points, while bout losers receive one point. Weigh-ins and physicals are May 16 at 2 p.m. at the Kelley Hill Fitness Center.

Bowling — Open to the public at the Main Post Bowling Center and Mall Bowling Center. Every individual or team will bowl three games. The winners, based on the teams' best six-game totals, will receive their awards May 21 at 9 a.m. at the Main Post Bowling Center.

Wrestling — Open to active duty military and USA Wrestling Affiliated Clubs. Each subchapter can enter an unlimited number of entries in each weight class: 114.5 pounds, 125.5 pounds, 136.5 pounds pounds, 149.5 pounds, 163.5 pounds,180 pounds, 198.5 pounds and 220 pounds. International freestyle rules govern. Weigh-ins and physicals will be May 17 at 1 p.m. and matches are scheduled to begin at 4 p.m. at Santiago Fitness Center.

Cycling — Open to the public May 18. Competitors will cycle several laps around the 1.3 mile race course. The race course is Hall Street, Dilboy Street and Vibbert Street, with start and finish on Hall Street in front of Briant Wells Field House. Age groups are; 12 and under, 13 to 17, 18 to 29, 30 to 39, 40 to 49, 50 to 59 and 60 and over.

Track and field — Open to the public. Scheduled for May 19 at Doughboy Stadium at 4 p.m. Each subchapter will enter a minimum of two individuals in each individual event and one team in each relay. The events are normal track and field events.

AUSA golf tournament — Open to active duty military and corporate AUSA members only. Tournament is limited to the first 144 golfers. Entry fees are: staff sergeant and below, $7.50; sergeant first class and above, $15; club members, $15 and nonmembers, $25.

Swimming — Open to the public. Swimming events include: 50-yard freestyle, breaststroke, backstroke and butterfly; 100-yard freestyle; 100-yard individual medley and 200-yard medley and freestyle. Age groups are; 8 years and under, 9 to 10 years, 11to 12 years, 13 to 14 years, 15 to 18 years and masters. The youth and masters competitions take place on two different days — May 19 (youth) at 5 p.m. and May 20 (masters) at 5 p.m. Both meets are scheduled for Briant Wells Field House.

Combat cross country — Open to active duty military only. Scheduled for May 20 at 2 p.m. Subchapters will enter a minimum of one seven-person team. Individuals will navigate a five- to eight-kilometer course wearing battle dress uniforms, load bearing equipment, boots, soft cap and carrying an M-16. Team standings will be determined by the sum of the order of place for the first five finishers on each team. Course consists of open fields, water jumps, steep terrain navigation, logs and other field obstacles.

Fishing tournament — Open to the public. Scheduled for May 20. Tournament fish are bass (largemouth, spotted or redeye). Fishing limit is seven. All fish must be at least 16 inches long. Catches must be weighed in by 5 p.m. on the day of the tournament. Entry fee is $10.

"Burn the General" Run — Open to the public. The commanding general will start 30 meters in front of the participants. A member of the 29th Infantry Regiment will run with the general, carrying his two-star flag. This will keep the runners informed of his location. The object of the run is to beat the general on a three-mile course. Every finisher will receive an "I burned the general" or "I was burned by the general" certificate.

world war II

Fifty years ago this week...

• In preparation for the upcoming invasion of Normandy, the Allies initiated an intensified air campaign against Axis targets within France. Within a month, the Royal Air Force Bomber Command launched 28,500 raids over storage, rail and training centers throughout the area while the Coastal Command continued to batter its usual channel targets.

During the same period of time, American heavy bombers dropped more than 63,000 tons of bombs on numerous oil production centers and aircraft manufacturing towns.

Meanwhile, the Ninth U.S. Air Force expended 20,000 tons of munitions as its medium and fighter-bombers engaged 13 bridges along the Seine River as well as several significant canal objectives.

• In the Caroline Islands, Task Force 58, of the Fast Carrier Force, launched a series of crippling attacks against the Japanese positions on Truk.

Under Adm. Marc Mitscher's leadership, only 11 of the original 104 enemy planes remained intact after just two days while Allied losses were relatively light at 35 aircraft and fewer pilots.

The success of the air attacks paved the way for subsequent naval actions against targets on Ponape and in the nearby Sawatan Islands.

• In Burma, British forces continued to protect Imphal, repelling yet another series of enemy attacks. The 20th Division's successful defense of the Shenam Ridge served as an indicator of the rapidly deteriorating Japanese position, which suffered the effects of crippling food shortages.

• In Washington, Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox died at the age of 70. Among his other achievements during a lifetime of public service, Knox had been instrumental in revitalizing the Navy since the devastating losses at Pearl Harbor.

• Fort Benning recognized 55-year-old Sgt. Charles "Pop" Burt as the world's oldest paratrooper. Burt was a veteran of the World War I era who volunteered to serve again in early 1942.

Personal finances: New soldiers learn value of good money management

By Robert J. Owens
Infantry Training Brigade

"Balance a what? A checkbook? Huh?" said Pfc. Michael Swartz, a soldier from Company E, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, during the Personal Financial Management class taught by Staff Sgt. Scott Rozell.

To assist new soldiers in the management of their pay, all entry-level soldiers receive instruction on writing checks and balancing a checkbook.

Upon receiving their first leave and earnings statement, with all the boxes, codes and numbers, soldiers must decide how to handle a large sum of money.

Drill sergeants stress the consequences of bouncing a check and not maintaining a proper balance.

"We learned how easy it is to get in trouble by not putting a check in our books," Swartz said. "Keeping organized helps you stay out of trouble. It is easy to do it a little at a time to avoid bouncing a check."

"I feel good knowing how to do it now and that it will be cheaper in the long run if I do what was taught," said Pvt. 1 Jason Laymon, a soldier from Co. E, 2nd Bn., 58th Inf. Regt.

Besides learning how to manage a checkbook, soldiers also learn how to interpret the LES, use allotments and enroll for Sure-Pay.

"The LES is real complex," said Spc. Richard Brown Jr., a soldier from Co. E, 2nd Bn., 58th Inf. Regt.

"The drill sergeants set guidelines for using the LES and the pay system for financial management. They explained how to set money aside and pay bills with an allotment. This gave us a good way to manage our money for the rest of our lives. I wish I had this class earlier in my life. It would have saved me some problems."

Begin groundwork now for transition to civilian life

By Elsie Jackson
Army Career and Alumni Program

"Going to the house." "Getting out." "ETSing." "Going home." Is this you? Don't add "Unemployed" to the list.

If you have a year or less until your separation, it is time to start laying the groundwork for a smooth transition from your military to civilian career.

Start your job search process by assembling the records and papers that you will need. Organize them into four files: military service, personal, work experience and education and training.

Your military papers should include certified copies of separation papers (Department of Defense Form 214) service record, honors and awards, medical records and benefits information.

As a minimum, your personal papers should include copies of your birth certificate, Social Security card, current passports and proof of citizenship.

Use your work experience file to document your work history (jobs, employers, duties and accomplishments), honors and citations, references, salary history and community activities.

If appropriate, include some samples of your work. Your education and training file should hold transcripts, diplomas, honors and activities lists.

In 1991, the Department of Defense was directed to provide military experience and training transcripts to all separating service members.

These transcripts not only document your military experience, but translates them to civilian terms.

Every soldier separating after Sept. 15, 1992, should automatically receive a Verification of Military Experience and Training statement about 120 days before expiration term of service date.

Soldiers who separated between Oct. 1, 1990, through Sept. 14, 1992, must request their VMET statements.

If you should have received your VMET statement and have not, call (800) 258-8638. Written requests can be addressed to. PRC Inc., ATTN. VMET G-3.03, 12001 Sunrise Valley Drive, Reston, Va. 22091.

Another document that you may want to add to your career file is your Army and American Council on Education Registry Transcript System record. AARTS transcripts can help you get college-level credit for Army training and experiences.

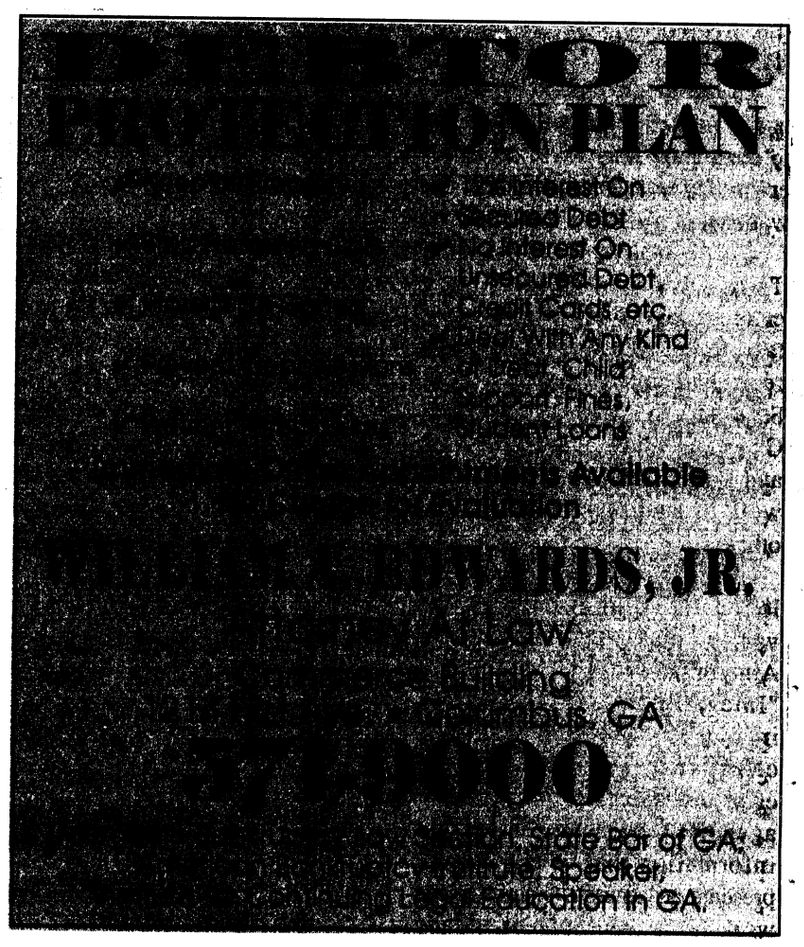
An AARTS transcript can also supplement your job resume, providing employers with a description of the scope of your Army responsibilities and the skills you acquired while on active duty.

To request a copy of your AARTS record, visit your Education Center. There is no charge for this service.

It's not too early to start drafting your resume, either. Take advantage of the free resume writing classes available.

Ask your ACAP counselor about these and other free job search-skills workshops and classes that are available.

These classes and workshops are offered through the Job Assistance Center and Army Community Service. Family members are also eligible for many of these services.



Put the attention-to-detail you learned on active duty to use for you. Triple check your spelling and grammar. If your skills in this department are lacking, have someone more proficient proof your resume for you.

When you are ready to turn that draft resume into a final version, computers and a laser printer are available for clients' use at the Job Assistance Center in Building 2634.

For more information, call the ACAP office at 545-4913 or 545-4892.

TRADOC leads way in preventing workplace violence

By Susan Pledfort
TRADOC Public Affairs Office

A civilian employee, apparently angry that he was passed over for a promotion, opens fire at his Fort Knox, Ky., office, killing one and injuring two others. He later dies after shooting himself.

A former warrant officer who blames a Fort Rucker, Ala., colonel for his dismissal from the Army shoots the colonel in the hip at close range outside the colonel's office. The colonel survives when a second round jams in the automatic shotgun.

A growing problem outside military installations, these recent events show that soldiers, civilians and contractors working on Army posts are not immune to the dangers of violence in the workplace.

Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr., commander of Training and Doctrine Command, has taken an important step toward protecting the members of the TRADOC "family."

He has formed a task force that has developed a long-term strategy to reduce the risk of violence and ensure the well-being of TRADOC workers.

Col. Richard Pomager, TRADOC's director of law enforcement and security, heads the task force, which is made up of representatives from TRADOC's Safety, Civilian Personnel, Chaplain, Staff Judge Advocate and Equal Opportunity offices, as well as employee unions and others.

"This task force represents a long-term effort to integrate the various disciplines existing on Army installations," Pomager said. "Integration and teamwork increases the power and effectiveness of our corporate effort exponentially. These key agencies possess important information that, when shared, presents an accurate picture of the work force environment. Many factors can cause friction or frustration. The task force allows us to diffuse potential problems."

The task force has identified several job-related factors that may contribute to workplace violence, including downsizing, constant workloads, productivity demands, technological advances and employee relationships.

Personal factors include marital or financial problems, deaths in the family, divorce, child custody disputes and substance abuse. Personal problems are multiplied by the sociological factors of a violent society, availability of guns, media violence and unemployment.

An open dialogue among various TRADOC departments has alerted task force members to different problem areas. For example, the task force is examining how technology affects the way TRADOC workers communicate with each other.

The professional office system — called PROFS — a widely-used electronic mail system, links employees throughout the command.

"PROFS removes us from one-on-one communication; it is one-way communication and it is very impersonal," Pomager said. "We have to look at how electronic mail is used and how we relate to each other. Employees need personal contact, recognition and support from their supervisors to maintain a healthy and viable workplace. We have to make sure this technology does not isolate management from employees."

Alternative work schedules is another example of how easily friction can arise. Flex time may be used in one department, while supervisors in a nearby office do not allow it.

Soldiers, civilians and contractors working on Army posts are not immune to the dangers of violence in the workplace

"A subtle change in policy like this can cause a great deal of frustration and anger," Pomager said.

"Supervisors may be unaware of the impact a change in working hours in another division creates on their personnel. One change does not require all supervisors to change. The important point is that the supervisor is aware of the increased frustration and addresses the issue with the employees. Interpersonal communication can go a long way to relieving stress."

Current budget reductions and mandatory downsizing directly affect work force stability. Job stability issues are a feeding ground for rumors, evoking a high stress situation.

"Most employees can deal with 'bad news' if given ample time to work solutions or alternatives. The problem comes when they are confronted with drastic events such as job termination, layoffs or reductions without the time or ability to resolve the impact," Pomager said.

An employee may not know 150 jobs at the local post are being cut until it makes the news or the water cooler grapevine.

"We have to consider the timeliness of these announcements. Have we informed our own people and told them exactly how they'll be affected by possible manpower cuts? Have we afforded them the time and given the assistance in training or job hunting to support the transition period?

"If you manage stress and change, the payback is in continued productivity, loyalty and understanding on the part of the employees. But most important is the reduction of friction, discontent and violent actions in the workplace. We are all in this together," Pomager said.

To help installation task forces confront the challenges of reducing violence, a TRADOC plan established four basic pillars. First is ensuring the entire work force is aware of the command policy that sets a zero tolerance for violence, regardless of severity. The policy also makes every employee responsible for reporting incidents of violence for resolution.

The second pillar is educating supervisors and managers on team building, employee counseling, confrontation management and reducing stress. Coupled with education is open communication, the third pillar.

Uncertainty breeds stress; accurate information about future changes helps reduce pressures associated with change. Improving communications means passing information to employees job stability as well as listening and responding to their concerns.

The fourth pillar deals with ensuring employee support services are adequate and prepared to assist individuals with such problems as substance abuse, financial management, legal services, spiritual guidance and family counseling.

Again, employees and supervisors must know assistance is available and that attending counseling will not jeopardize job security.

The TRADOC task force plan includes a menu of initiatives that local managers and commanders may implement to reduce the risk of workplace violence. Leaders can adapt the list to fit local environments.

"The good news is knowing that both management and workers are concerned about the issue and want to cooperate in ensuring a safe work environment. Total resolution takes time, but the process is well on the way within TRADOC," Pomager said.

VA offering scholarship

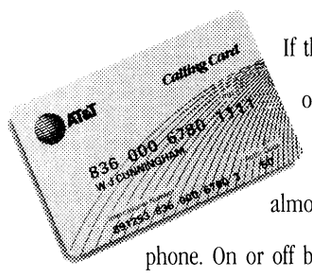
Department of Veterans Affairs

The Department of Veterans Affairs announces the availability of two programs of financial assistance for training in certain health occupations in return for service as a full-time professional in a VA medical center for two years.

First, applications are being accepted for the 1994-95 school year under a scholarship program that pays tuition, educational expenses and a monthly stipend of $621.



The second program for which VA is soliciting applications is for members of the Selected Reserve who are eligible for the Montgomery GI Bill and who have scored above the 50th percentile on the Armed Forces Qualification Test. The Reserve Member Stipend Program provides a $400 monthly stipend.

Both programs are designed for students in the final year of an associate degree in nursing or respiratory therapy, as well as students in their final two years of a nursing, occupational therapy, physical therapy or respiratory therapy program.

Master's degree awards are available to students in nursing, nurse anesthesia, occupational therapy and physical therapy.

For more information, write to the VA Health Professional Scholarship Program (143B), 810 Vermont Ave. NW, Washington, D.C. 20420.

U.S. takes Gold, Silver medals in World Cup

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit and Fort Benning closed the book on the 1994 World Cup USA and U.S. Grand Prix shooting competition Saturday at Phillips Range.

The 10-day event drew 417 athletes from 45 countries and allowed 10 Olympic country quota slots to be earned for the 1996 Olympics.

In the men's events, six slots were awarded to the Gold Medal winner for each country. In the women's events, four slots were awarded.

The United States finished with two medals, a Gold won by Ann-Marie Pfiffner of Dubuque, Iowa, in the women's air rifle and a Silver in the women's three-position won by Sioux Falls, S.D., native Pamela Stalzer.

Pensacola trounces Bragg to take rugby title

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

Three-time defending champion Pensacola, Naval Air Station, Fla., trounced Fort Bragg, N.C., 34-7, for its fourth straight U.S. Military Rugby Club championship Sunday at Stewart Field.

Twenty-three teams and close to 400 players from as far away as Panama attended the three-day event with more than 100 matches played.

The club division consolation winner went to Cherry Point, N.C., with a 45-10 drubbing of Panama.

In sevens play, Cherry Point One, edged Cherry Point Two in a close match for the title 10-7.

The open division went to the President's XV for the second straight year as they rolled over Uniformed Services University of Health Sciences 32-0.

In the veterans game, the Cruise-matics vets downed the combined services vets 27-7. The Cruisers were led by old rugby vets Tim Butterfield and Ed Heartley with a try each.

Host team and sentimental favorite the Fort Benning Cruise-matics, runners-up in the club division for the last two years, made it as far as the quarterfinals before being knocked off by the Cadets of West Point 39-0.

In the championship match, Pensacola jumped out to an early 13-0 advantage on a try from inside center Pat Hullohan and penalty kicks by fullback Keith Takabyoshi.

Late in the first half, hooker Jes Randall scored a try on a pushover and Takabyashi added the conversion for a 20-0 halftime lead.

Bill Bensch of Pensacola goes up for the ball on a line out.

"We were a little worried about their fly half Rob Schuster and his ability to kick the ball behind our defense," said Takabyashi. "Once we controlled him we were able to slip outside and move the ball downfield. Our pack did an outstanding job of presenting the ball to our backs and we won all our scrums to take away any advantage Bragg may have had."

The second half would bode no better for Bragg. Early in the half, fly half Marcus Michaels dropped a pop kick behind the Bragg defense, scooped up the ball on the run and scampered for the end zone and a try. Takabyashi added the conversion for a 27-0 bulge.

With under 10 minutes to play, Pensacola got its final score of the day on a try by wing forward Rob Linder. Takabyashi made the conversion, giving Pensacola a 34-0 lead with time running out.

Bragg avoided the shutout with less than a minute left in the match on a try and conversion by Shuster for a final score of 34-7.

"I thought going into the match we would be able to stay with Pensacola, but getting down early put us into a whole we couldn't climb out of," said scrum half Lew Boone. "It was a tough match with no quit on both sides, and once Pensecola got the lead Michels turned up the heat another notch. They're a very smart and fundamentally sound team."

Giants sneak past Orioles 13-12

By Dan Callahan
Fort Benning Youth Activities

The Giants' defense held fast to beat the Orioles 13 to 12 Saturday at Fort Benning's Norton Field. The two teams are part of the Fort Benning Youth Activities 13- to 15-year-old baseball league.

The Giants came out swinging as their first batter, Joel Driskill, hit a single and then stole second. Luis Pizarro followed with a home run that drove in Driskill. Chico Vasquez hit a single, then stole second and third. Thomas Craig let rip with a triple that brought Vasquez in. Oshea Smith got on with a single and attempted to steal third but was picked off by Oriole catcher Josh Trotter and third baseman Tony Dupree.

The Orioles got the second out with a strikeout. Arron Iturralde got on base when he got hit by a pitch. The Orioles finally stopped the drive when Trotter and shortstop Caleb Preston picked off a runner attempting to steal second.

Oriole batter Michael Bills got on base with a walk and stole second. Preston advanced Bills to third with a hit, but was put out by Giant first baseman Craig.

Jeremy Callahan doubled to drive the Bills in and then stole home for their first and second runs. Tony Dupree walked and stole second, third and home. Josh Trotter doubled then stole third.

Ty Mason walloped a triple, driving Trotter in for the Orioles' 4th run. Chris Callahan got on base when he got hit by a pitch, then stole second and third. Ceylona Chamberlain got to first with a walk. A balk by the Giant pitcher sent Callahan home and Chamberlain to second. The Orioles were up by one when Giant pitcher Vasquez struck out the next two batters.

The second inning went a little faster. Jeff Henley walked and stole second and third. Following a Giant strikeout, Pizarro was walked. A balk by the Orioles pitcher sent Henley home for a score and Pizarro to second. Vasquez walked and stole second.

Craig drove in his second RBI but was thrown out at first for the second out. Scott Bertacina got a solid hit to third, but Oriole third baseman Dupree came up with it and threw out the runner trying to force the run at home.

The Giants' infield stopped the Orioles cold with three good defensive plays to send the Orioles back out to the field with three up and three down.

The Orioles' defense also held tough in the third. One Giant got on base but was picked off on third base. The Orioles managed to score one in the third as Josh Trotter singled and stole second and third and was driven in by C. Callahan. Chamberlain got on first with a walk but was left on base as the Giants got the third out.

Iturralde singled and stole second and third for the Giants at the top of the fourth. The Orioles made a double play when a hit by the next batter was stopped in the infield, the runner on third was tagged out at home trying to force the score and catcher Trotter fired to Mason to get the forced out on first. Driskill put the Giants in the lead when he singled and stole all the bases for the Giants' eighth run. Pizarro walked and stole second and third.

Vasquez came to bat and slammed a hard fly ball to centerfield, but it was caught by centerfielder Kiki Mister for the third out. The Orioles managed to get one run in the bottom of the fourth when J. Callahan doubled and stole second, third and home.

The Giants came back swinging in the fifth. Craig started off with a double and then stole third. Bertacina singled to drive Craig in. Oshea Smith hit a fly ball over centerfield for a home run and made the score 11 to 8. Oriole pitcher J. Callahan struck out two batters and threw the third batter out at first.

There was no time for the Giants to relax, as the determined Orioles came back strong. Trotter knocked a home run, followed by Mason who walked and then scored when he stole second, third and home.

John
tie the score at 11. Mister walked and stole second. Preston singled to advance Mister to third. The Orioles tried to take the lead but were foiled when pitcher Vasquez and catcher Bertacina picked off a runner trying to steal home.

Driskill put the Giants in the lead again in the sixth by hitting a double and stealing third and home. The next Giant struck out but was followed by Vasquez who walked, stole second and third. Craig followed with a single to drive Vasquez in. Bertacina and Smith both walked to load the bases. Oriole relief pitcher Trotter struck out the next two Giants to end the drive leaving the bases loaded.

The Orioles came up for the last time in the bottom of the sixth, but the Giants' defense held, allowing only Trotter to score with a triple and steal at home. Final score was Giants 13, Orioles 12.

FESTIVAL OF RUNNING

5k, 10k, fun run set for May 14

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The 1994 Officers' Wives' Club Festival of Running is just around the corner. May 14 is the day, and Infantry Hall is the place to be. This year's events include a 10 and 5K run as well as a one-mile fun run.

"This is one of the ways we raise funds for our many projects," said Dusty Severn, chairwoman of the event. "The funds provide needed monies to a number of post and tri-community charities such as the Salvation Army, the Boy and Girl Scouts of America and Santa's Castle, to name a few."

Activities are set to get under way at 8 a.m. with the 5K race. The 10K run will begin at 9 a.m., to be followed by the one-mile fun run at 10:30.

Preregistration will run through May 9, with a cost of $10. After May 9, the cost is $12.

Registration forms can be picked up at the OWC Office, Building 229, at the corner of Ingersoll Street and Dixie Road. The office is open Monday through Thursday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Race packets, including T-shirts, may be picked up May 13 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Race day registration and check-in will be from 6:30 p.m. until 30 minutes before the event entered. For information, call 687-3537 or 683-4321.

Blue Jays take wing over Red Sox

By Richard Rhodes
Youth Activities

In a hard-fought game, the Blue Jays scored six runs in the last two innings to edge out a 10-9 win over the Red Sox.

The game started out as a pitchers' duel. The Blue Jays scored in the first inning on a single by Craig Nurnberg, followed by a two-out double by Jason Cole. The 1-0 score held out until the Red Sox erupted for four runs in the third inning.

The third inning began as Mike Hawrylak got a base hit to right field, Damian Orton struck out, Sedack Coleman walked and Marlin Taylor doubled to right, scoring Hawrylak and Coleman. Charles Boem then homered to left field, scoring Taylor, for a total of four runs.

When the Jays came up, Cole hit a single and Jeremy Walley walked. Both scored on a ground out by Angela Lawson. After the third inning, the score was Red Sox 4, Blue Jays 3.

In the fourth inning, the Red Sox scored a run on a walk to Hawrylak who stole second and third base and scored on a passed ball.

The Red Sox were active in the fifth inning; they scored two runs when Coleman was hit by the pitch, stole second and scored on a hit by Taylor. Taylor then stole second and was thrown out trying to steal third.

Matt Figley then beat out a two-hopper to third base for a hit, stole second and scored when Arturo Diaz struck out and reached first on a passed ball. The Blue Jays countered when Mike Richert scored on a base hit and two Red Sox errors

The Red Sox were silent in the sixth and the Blue Jays scored three runs when Rick Rhodes walked, stole second and scored when Nurnberg hit to center and took second on the throw to the plate. Nurnberg scored on Cole's third hit of the game. Cole stole second and scored on Richert's second hit of the game.

In the seventh inning, the Red Sox started with a walk to Taylor, who then stole second and went to third when Boehm reached first on a passed third strike and stole second.

With runners on second and third, the Blue Jays tried a trick play that backfired as Taylor scored from third.

Boehm then stole third and scored on a wild pitch. The Red Sox were up 9-7 as the Blue Jays came up for their last at-bat. Sherman Henderson walked and stole second and scored on Tony Veneziani's base hit.

Tommy Henderson struck out and Veneziani stole second and third. Rhodes walked and Veneziani scored on a wild pitch with Rhodes taking third. Nurnberg walked and Cole knocked in Rhodes with the winning run on a hit to center field, Blue Jays 1, Red Sox 9.

Bodybuilders to strike a pose in June contest

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The 11th annual Mr. and Ms. Fort Benning Bodybuilding contest will be June 18 at the Main NCO Club. The contest is designed to choose the best bodybuilders on post.

Prejudging will begin with the women at noon and the men at 12:30 p.m. The finals will start promptly at 7:30 p.m. All armed forces personnel are eligible to participate in the four men's divisions and the two women's classes.

Awards will be presented to the top three in all classes, plus the top two in the 35 and over age group. Trophies will be given to the top two finishers.

Entry fee is $20 and another $10 for crossover. Entry deadline is June 10. Contestants must supply their own music on a cassette tape.

Music must be no more than 90 seconds in length and must start at the beginning of the tape with no other music on the tape.

For more information, call 1st Sgt. Leon Johnson at 545-3435 or Carol Gearheart at 545-1435.

crime watch

Military Police Activity

TAKE A BITE OUT OF CRIME

The following entries were taken from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from April 5 to 11. Such entries may be incomplete and do not determine the guilt or innocence of any person.

• A specialist was charged by civilian authorities with driving under the influence and driving with a suspended license after he was observed sleeping behind the wheel of his vehicle in a parking lot.

• A civilian was observed traveling 46 mph in a 35 mph zone after a traffic stop was initiated, Military Police discovered that his license was revoked. While searching the vehicle for impoundment, Military Police found a bag of marijuana in the glove compartment. The civilian was charged with wrongful possession of a controlled substance and driving while his license was revoked.

• A sergeant was charged with larceny of government property and making a false claim after completing a Do-It-Yourself move. He filed a dependent travel voucher even though he wasn't married. The sergeant received more than $2,000 for the move and dependent travel.

• A civilian was observed shoplifting several items in the Post Exchange at the Main Mall and was escorted to the security office. She refused to remain in the security office and await Military Police, fled to her vehicle and in the process of leaving the scene, struck two security personnel with her vehicle.

The Military Police pursued her off post where she was apprehended by Columbus Police, returned to the Military Police station and charged with shoplifting, fleeing and eluding, aggravated assault and reckless driving.

• A sergeant first class was charged by civil authorities with aggravated stalking and aggravated assault after he intentionally rammed his vehicle into his wife's vehicle, forcing her off the road.

This week's booby prize goes to the specialist and his wife who reported that persons unknown stole $2,815 worth of jewelry and recording equipment from their quarters. Further investigation revealed that they had pawned the items in pawn shops; then they made the false report in order to file a claim. The specialist was charged with conspiracy and false official statement. His wife was charged with conspiracy and false swearing in an official statement.

Other activities included eight traffic accidents and eight cases of driving under the influence of alcohol.

There were five shoplifting cases reported at exchange facilities and two cases of larceny of private property.

Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best — Give Crime Arrest."

Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5223 or the "Crime in Progress" line at 545-2222.

Safety quiz

Test your survival IQ

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Take this quick true-false quiz to test your safety knowledge.

1. More than 50 percent of all accidents occur on long trips.

2. Half of all accidents occur at speeds greater than 55 mph.

3. At least 25 percent of all crashes involve fire or submersion in water.

4. In a crash, it's better to be thrown from the car.

5. The lap belt should be worn across the stomach area for best results.

6. Shoulder belts work fine by themselves.

7. When you wear your shoulder belt, it should be loose to prevent constriction.

8. Pregnant women should not wear lap belts.

The answer to each of the above is false. Not knowing one of the above could result in death, or permanent disability for you, your friends or family.

1. Surveys show people are more likely to use seat belts on long trips. In reality the chance for an accident is more likely to occur within 26 miles of your home than on an unfamiliar highway.

2. Almost 80 percent of all accidents occur in residential areas where the speed limit is much less than 55 mph. There have been instances where people have been killed going 12 mph. That's about how fast you drive in a parking lot.

3. In Hollywood this may be true. In the real world less than one-half of 1 percent of all accidents involve fire or water submersion.

4. Your chances of surviving a crash are 25 times greater if you are buckled up than if you are thrown from a moving vehicle.

5. The lap belt is designed to be worn across the hip bones. This allows these strong bones to absorb the force of a crash. Wearing your seat belt across the abdomen could cause major injuries to soft tissues and organs.

6. The shoulder belt is designed to be worn in conjunction with the lap belt. Wearing only the shoulder belt could allow you to slip underneath it in a crash, causing serious injury.

7. The shoulder belt is there to keep the torso from jack knifing into the dashboard or steering wheel with the chest and face. The latching mechanism within the belt locks the belt into place upon sudden deceleration.

8. The number one cause of fetal death in auto accidents is the death of the mother. The lap belt should be worn below the "bulge" and the shoulder belt above, to give mother and fetus the best chance for survival.

Barbecue — but don't get burned

Infantry Branch Safety Office

With the onset of warm weather in the air, it's time to get out the old grill for backyard barbecues and picnics at the park. Barbecues are a popular form of outdoor activity — but don't let them make you an accident statistic. Know the rules of safety. The following are a few safety tips to help you enjoy these cookouts:

• Line the bottom of a clean grill with an inch of ash, gravel or commercial charcoal base to absorb dripping grease and reduce flare-ups.

• Set the grill on a level surface away from low branches, dry bush or other combustibles, including the house or garage.

• To start a charcoal fire safely, use wood shavings or charcoal lighter fluid. Follow package directions when using charcoal lighter fluid. Never substitute gasoline or other combustible liquids. Never add charcoal lighter fluid after the charcoal begins to burn.

• Never use the grill indoors. Burning charcoal produces carbon monoxide, an odorless, tasteless, lethal gas.

• Keep pets and children away from charcoal grills to eliminate the danger of their touching the grill or accidentally pushing it over on someone.

• Keep sharp instruments out of reach of small children. When passing knives and forks to other persons, keep the point turned away from them.

• Use proper equipment to prevent burns: a pair of heavy-type potholders, a long handled spatula or fork, and a pair of long tongs.

• Wear safe clothing. Avoid dangling ties and shirttails that could easily brush against the fire. Keep other combustibles away from the grill.

• Keep garden hose ready for use in case of fires outside the grill. After cookouts, drench fire with water and promptly dispose of soaked ashes in a metal trash container.

Time out: Follow the rules for children's sports injuries

Egleston Children's Hospital

Whether your children play sports through an organized league or with a group of friends in the neighbor's backyard, the possibility of injury always exists.

The type of injury they are most likely to sustain depends on the sport they are playing. However, you can respond to almost any type of sports injury if you understand some basic first aid principles, according to pediatric orthopedic nurse Katie Hart, who presents a sports injury clinic for coaches periodically with Emory-Egleston orthopedist Dr. Jack Eldridge.

Eldridge and Hart offer the following guidelines for responding to children's sports injuries:

• If a fracture is suspected, keep the limb still by attaching a splint above and below the break and get the child to a hospital emergency room or pediatric urgent care center. If there's any doubt, an X-ray is in order.

• For sprains and strains, remember the RICE method: Rest, Ice on the injured area (put the ice in a plastic bag or towel to prevent freeze burns to the skin), Compression with an ace bandage, and Elevation.

• The following circumstances could indicate a neck or back injury: inability to move the arms or legs on command, numbness or tingling in the arms or legs, pain in the neck or back, loss of consciousness or inability to answer simple questions, which could indicate a concussion. If you suspect a neck or back injury, do not move the child, unless he or she is nauseated, in which case you should turn the child on his or her left side to prevent choking if he or she vomits. Make sure the child is breathing, perform CPR if necessary, and call for emergency assistance.

• Disorientation, nausea, vomiting, enlarged pupils, sluggishness or extreme sleepiness may indicate a head injury. If you suspect a head injury, make sure the child's airway is clear and that he or she is breathing (perform CPR if necessary) and call for emergency assistance. If you suspect a head injury in a child who is wearing a football helmet, do not remove the helmet. You could cause further injury.

• Black eyes and "fat" lips should be treated with ice — again, the ice shouldn't touch the skin directly. Any cut around the eye should receive medical attention, as should a deep cut on the lip, which may need stitches.

• Seek medical care for severe bleeding. You can treat minor or moderate bleeding by applying direct pressure to the wound. If the cut is on an arm or leg, elevate the limb above the level of the heart. If in doubt about the severity of a cut, see a doctor.

• If your child has a tooth knocked out, try to find the tooth. Place it in a zip-lock bag containing enough water, milk or saliva to cover it, and take the child and the tooth to a dentist or oral surgeon right away.

You may not be able to prevent your children from ever suffering a sports injury, but Hart and Eldridge stress that you can help make your children's sports activities safer by making sure that:

• Your children wear proper gear for the sport they are playing, which may include helmets, padding, mouthpieces, shin guards, elbow and knee pads or other safety items.

• Any equipment used is safe and in good repair.

• Playing fields are level and free of glass, rocks and other debris.

Children may be feeling the pressure

Egleston Children's Hospital

With the media's constant focus on peer influence as the cause of teen-age gangs, drugs and violence, it's no wonder many parents are frightened about peer pressure.

But parents needn't feel paralyzed about this normal developmental phenomenon, according to Dr. Mary Lynn Dell, medical director of Egleston Children's Hospital at Emory University's 16-bed medical psychiatric unit, an open, home-like program that addresses the complex factors affecting mental and physical illness in children and adolescents.

"Around the age of 8 or 9 and to a much greater degree in later adolescence, children begin developing a strong sense that they need to behave a certain way, participate in certain activities, have certain friends and have certain possessions in order to be accepted by others their age," Dell said.

"They develop a strong need to conform and the idea of sticking out or being different may cause a great deal of anxiety," she said. "This is a natural part of growing up."

It is how adolescents express the normal need to conform that typically leads to problems between teen-agers and parents.

"Parents tend to respond on an emotional level and can easily get hung up on what kind of shoelaces or jeans the teen will wear, rather than the real issues — the child's fear of being different and the parents' fears of the child's transition to independence."

During adolescence, children are going through a transition from total dependence on parents to more independent thinking and behavior. As they get older, they are exposed to values and beliefs different from those held in their own homes.

Parents often see their children becoming less influenced by family, church and other systems that once reinforced the parents' values. That, says Dell, can be very scary for parents.

A number of factors, such as biological and medical makeup, personal temperament, family dynamics and home environment can make children more vulnerable to problems with depression, anxiety, substance dependence or violence during this time.

But most children and most parents are able to get through this developmental phase in a positive way, says Dell, who offers parents the following tips:

• Begin early in your child's life to convey your values. A strong value system will help your teen-ager use good judgment when faced with important decisions.

• Always be consistent about your values. For example, don't teach that honesty is important and then lie to your friends.

• Make clear to your children exactly what behavior you expect from them. Don't assume they know what rules you want them to follow.

• Pick your battles. If you are always reprimanding your children for every little thing they do, they may simply tune you out.

• Decide which issues are negotiable and which are not and clearly define those issues. Children are less likely to rebel if they have the freedom of making some choices for themselves.

• Make sure they understand the consequences of their behavior, then allow your children to experience the natural consequences when they make the wrong decision. Provide an atmosphere in the home where your children are free to talk about behaviors and social pressures even if you don't approve of them. You can keep the lines of communication open without sacrificing your beliefs or expectations about right and wrong.

• When you're at odds with your children, make it clear that you love them even though you may not like their behavior.

Teens won't suffer if they can't do or have everything, but when possible, allow them to participate in some of the activities that will allow them to feel accepted.

Parents who can focus on the developmental process of peer pressure, rather than on the specific expressions of conforming, can help their children through this phase.

It's a good idea to talk to your children about peer pressure, giving them guidance about when peer influence is OK and when family values should outweigh the influence of friends and peers.

"If you maintain open communication with your teen and provide good, consistent parenting through the years when peer pressure is so strong," Dell said, "chances are when your child reaches late adolescence and young adulthood, he or she will retain and readily claim the limits and priorities grown up with, while adding and incorporating his or her own experiences and priorities."

ask the judge

By Dinah Rainey Kirk
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

The Legal Assistance Office has received several complaints from individuals who have been duped into entering into high-priced, but worthless, "free lifetime film" and "photo processing" contracts. Many of these photography services companies induce consumers into signing contracts by promising high quality merchandise at a discounted price.

However, legal assistance clients have continuously complained about the substandard quality of the products and services provided by these companies. Clients have also complained about written contractual misrepresentations, such as promises of "free gifts," which are in many cases never received. Additionally, sales consumers concerning the type of services and products that are provided under the contract.

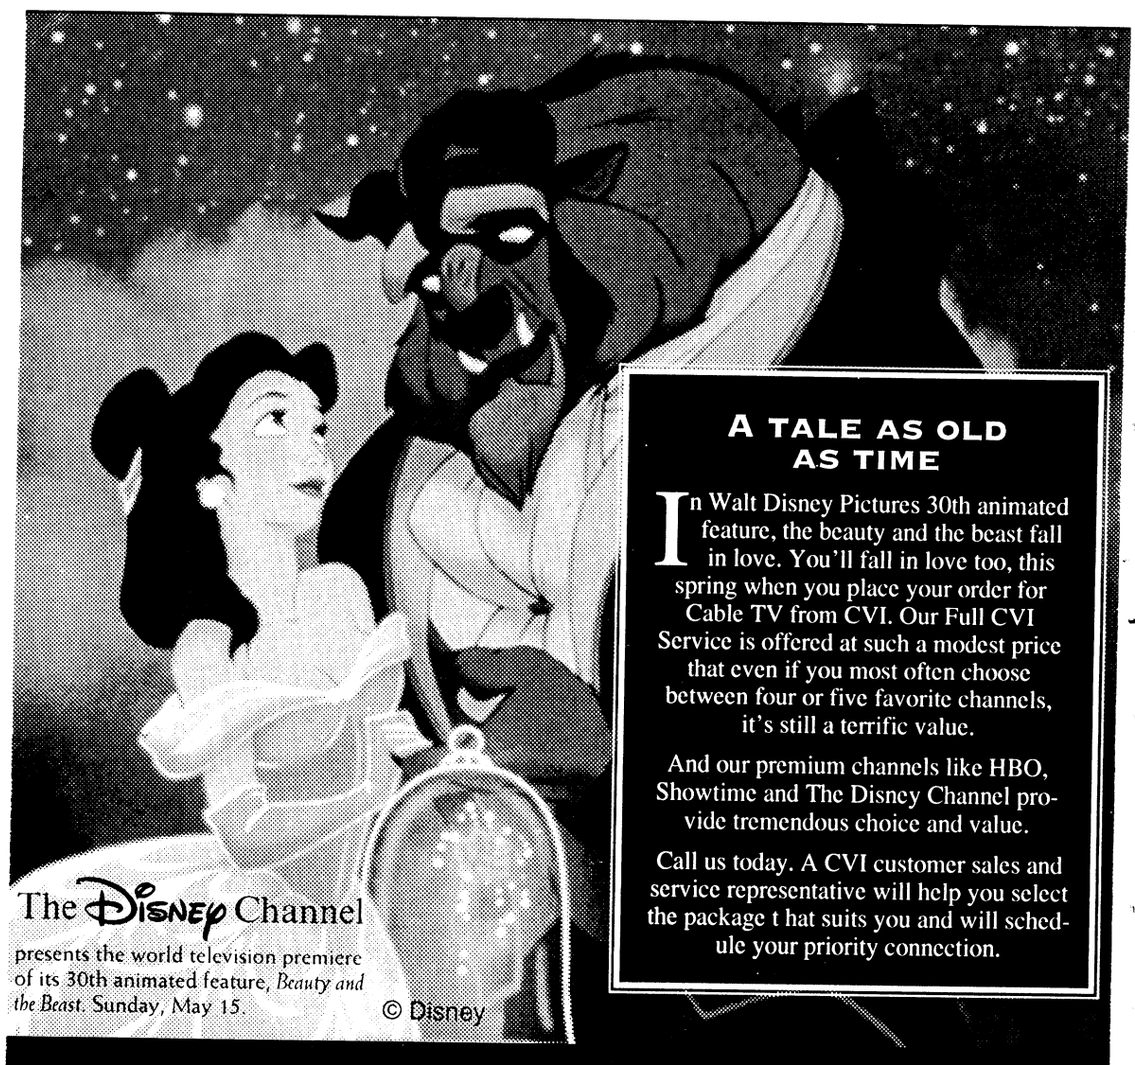
Many of these photography services companies sell their products using door-to-door sales. A door-to-door sale is a sale, lease or rental of consumer goods or services with a purchase price of $25 or more in which the seller or his or her representative personally solicits the sale, and the buyer's agreement or offer to purchase is made at a place other than the place of business of the seller.

An example of such a sale is where a salesperson comes to a potential buyer's home or place of business and sells products or services. Sales resulting from presentations in rented hotel rooms or public halls are also considered door-to-door sales. This is also true for contracts entered into as a result of a salesperson approaching a potential buyer in a public place, such as a restaurant.



Some of these companies conduct door-to-door sales transactions on Fort Benning, even though they have not received approval from the installation to do so. Therefore, if you live on Fort Benning and are approached by someone who is selling any products or services, you should obtain the salesperson's name, as well as the name, address and telephone number of the salesperson's business. You should then contact Kay Kyle at the Family Support Division (545-6811) to determine whether the company is authorized to conduct business on Fort Benning.

Consumers who are approached while off of the installation should contact the Provost Marshal's Office to determine whether the company has been placed off-limits to military personnel due to the company's misconduct. Consumers should further investigate the company by contacting the Better Business Bureau.

Many of these companies engage in high pressure sales techniques. However, you should not allow a salesperson to induce you into signing a contract before you have had the opportunity to investigate the company. Additionally, under no circumstances should you sign a contract before having the contract reviewed by an attorney. If a salesperson is unwilling to give you the opportunity to take these steps, it is probably because he or she has something to hide.

Further, with door-to-door sales, federal law gives consumers the right to cancel the contract for any reason by providing written notice to the company within three business days after entering into the contract. Despite this, many companies do do not inform consumers of this three-day right to cancel.

The Legal Assistance Office can assist consumers who have been fraudulently induced into entering into these types of contracts. If you have recently signed a photography services contract or have been approached by one of these companies, call the Legal Assistance Office at 545-3281.

*Offer expires 4/30/94. Offer good on first outlet only at wired serviceable addresses. Additional charges for installation, equipment and monthly service may apply. # Jumpmasters

Making skies safe for parachuters

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

> "The biggest responsibility is the life you have in your hands when you are dealing with that jumper."
> — Staff Sgt. Alfredo J. Marrero
> Jumpmaster Course instructor

Being a jumpmaster is a heavy responsibility.

It means being responsible for every aspect of a parachute jump operation, said Capt. Joe Arata, commander of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment, which runs the school.

The jumpmaster is responsible for everything from loading the aircraft to putting all the jumpers out safely, Arata said.

"The biggest responsibility," said Staff Sgt. Alfredo J. Marrero, a Jumpmaster Course instructor, "is the life you have in your hands when you are dealing with that jumper.

"If you don't inspect that equipment properly and you're not able to find a deficiency, that could cause a death. That's a great responsibility," he said.

Because of that responsibility, a large part of the course focuses on the jumpmaster personnel inspection, better known as the JMPI.

The JMPI is a systematic inspection of all jumpers, their parachute and equipment, starting from the jumper's helmet and working down through the parachute and static line to make sure there are no deficiencies.

"Probably the most difficult part of the course is the JMPI," said Sgt. 1st Class Joe E. Prince, the Jumpmaster Branch chief.

The students spend about 35 hours practicing the JMPI, Prince said. They start out running through the inspection on jumpers rigged correctly, and deficiencies are gradually added once the students learn what to look for.

The inspections are also timed, Prince said. The students begin with three minutes to inspect one jumper. As the training progresses, the time is gradually decreased until the students are able to inspect three jumpers within five minutes.

For the test, the students are given five minutes to inspect three jumpers, Prince said.

They must go through the inspection in the proper order, identifying and calling off deficiencies as they find them.

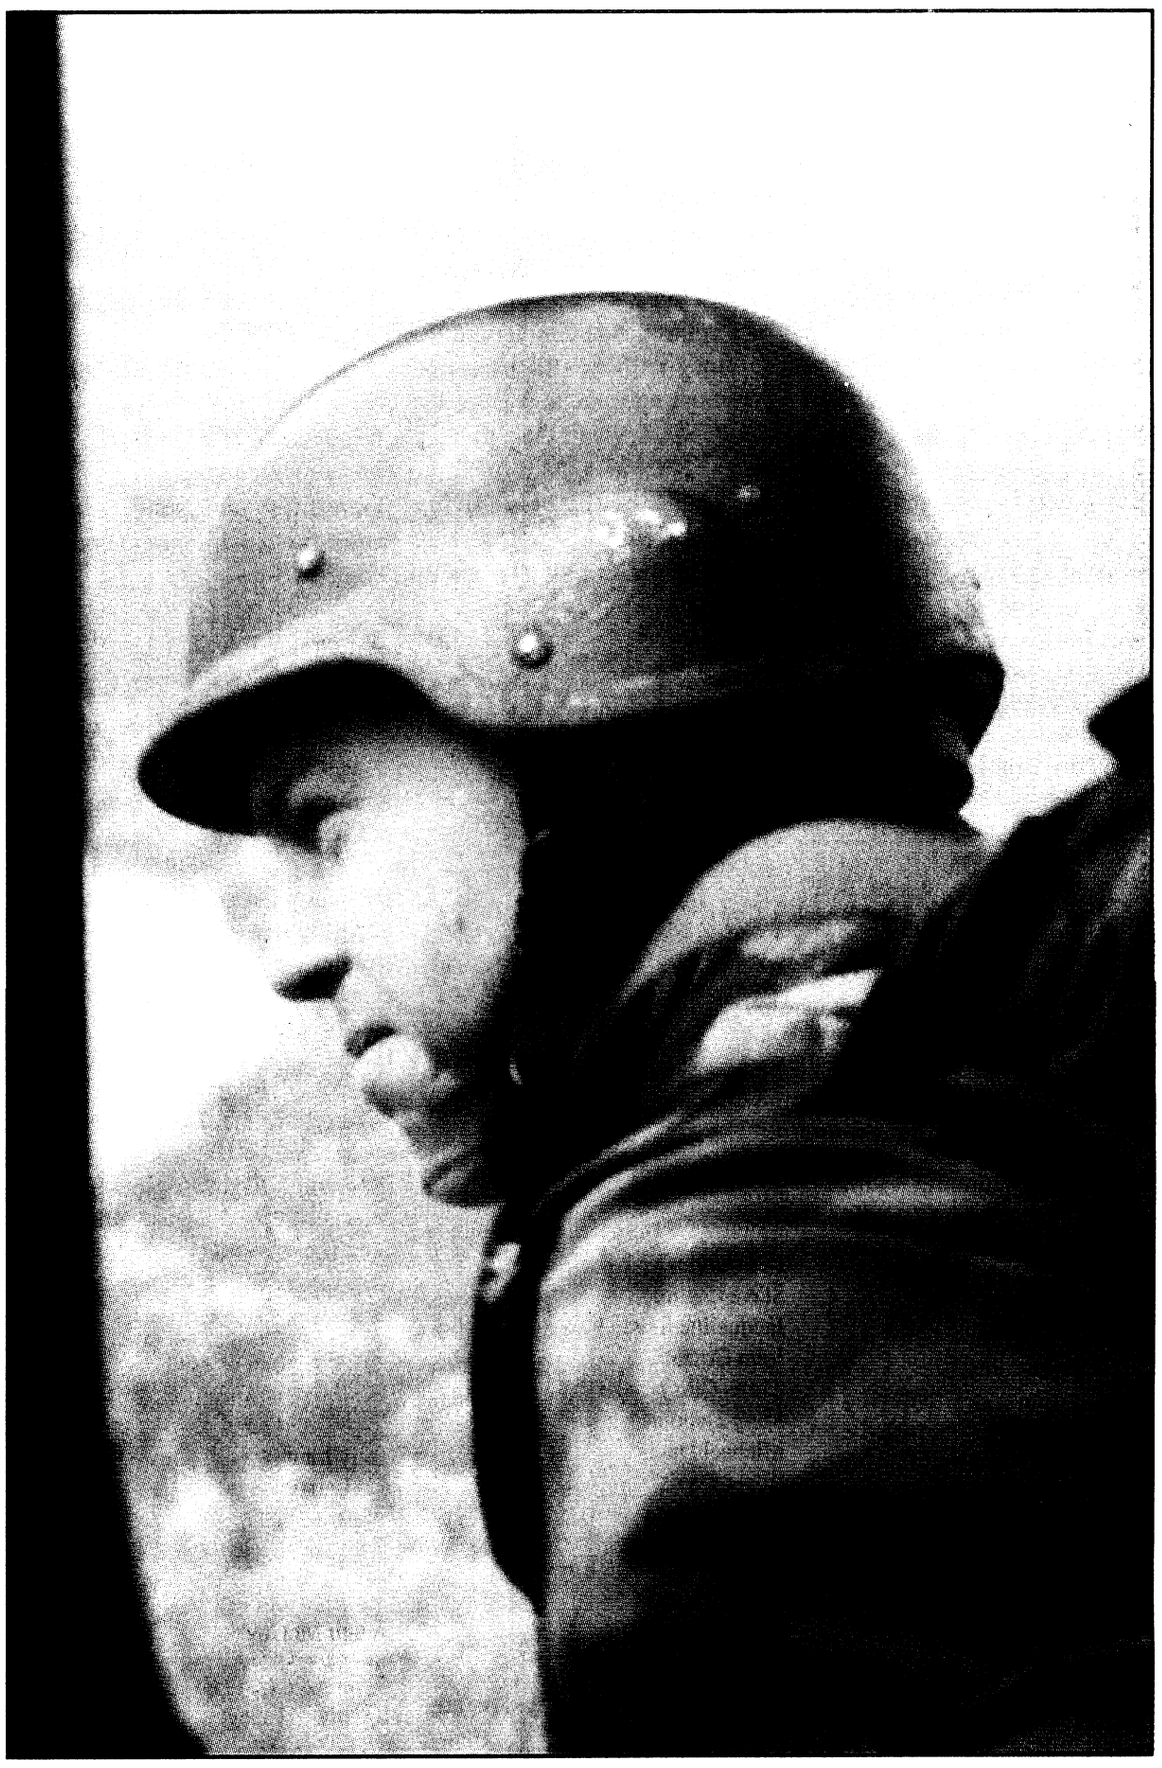
"We teach them to look at what they are touching and touch what they are looking at," Marrero said. "If they're looking at something else, they won't see the deficiency."

The time pressure, Marrero said, is there because once the students get back to their units, they may find themselves possibly one of four jumpmasters who must inspect 64 jumpers and still meet a certain aircraft load time.

"They're going to have to stay on their toes, be able to do it fast and still find all deficiencies," Marrero said.

It is not easy, but passing the JMPI exam is definitely a relief, said Sgt. John C. Belman. There's a lot to remember under the time pressure, he said.

But the JMPI is only a portion of the course. Jumpmaster students also learn the duties and responsibilities of a drop zone safety officer, and learn to conduct prejump briefings and training.



Prejump training is conducted before every airborne operation to refresh basic jump techniques and remind jumpers what to do in case of a malfunction or emergency.

Once they have all of that behind them, the jumpmaster students are tested on the procedures inside the aircraft.

They must inspect the aircraft and paratroop door and platform, give the appropriate time warnings to the jumpers, look out of the door to make sure they are over the drop zone, and, finally, signal each jumper when it is time to go out the door.

Overall, the jumpmaster course is "basically a very detail-oriented course," Marrero said.

But, he said, "the standard is high because we can't afford to lose a life."

Preventive medicine helps teach soldiers health

By Clarence D. Butler
Infantry Training Brigade

Company A, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, recently conducted its personal health and hygiene training, with help from the nurses of Fort Benning's Community Health Preventive Medicine.

The purpose of this training is to make the soldiers aware of individual measures to employ for improving personal health and hygiene in garrison and field stations, and to provide an increased awareness of acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

The Army's system of health care is designed to improve and maintain military readiness as well as the individual soldier's quality of life. Good health is largely a personal responsibility.

Correct cleanliness habits, regular exercise and good nutrition have a strong impact on soldiers' well being. Our history has often demonstrated that the course of battle may be influenced more by the health of the troops than by strategy or tactics.

The instructors familiarized the soldiers with health care and preventive measures to practice and develop throughout their training here.

Because of the close living quarters frequently found in an Army environment, disease or illness can rapidly spread and affect large groups of soldiers.

The instructors highlighted the importance of immunization, foot and body care, hearing conservation, individual field sanitation measures and self-examination for testicle cancer.

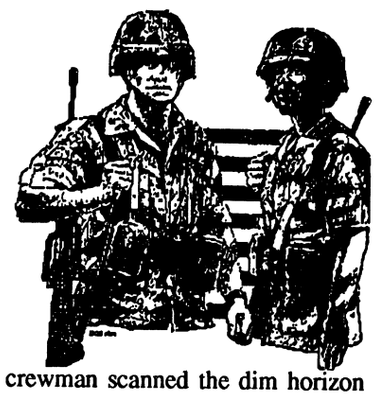
"I didn't know what testicular cancer was before I was given the class here," said Pvt. 1 Edward Sellars, a soldier from Co. A, 2nd Bn., 58th Inf. Regt. "It made me aware of the signs and effects of the cancer so that I can detect it and take immediate action. The class on health and hygiene is very important and may prevent unnecessary deaths due to testicular cancer."

Sherry Kellman, AIDS/HIV program coordinator and educator for Fort Benning's Community Health Nursing, spoke for 45 minutes about AIDS.

"I find it so odd that you can participate in something but you can't talk about it," Kellman said.

"When my drill sergeant informed the platoon that we were going to receive a health and hygiene class, I expected it to be a boring and wasteful class," said Pvt. 1 Charlie Treit, a soldier from Co. A, 2nd Bn., 58th Inf. Regt. "But at the end of the class, my mind was completely changed. I learned a lot about AIDS, testicular cancer and how to protect myself. The class was meaningful, interesting, humorous, but most of all it was serious."

"We seasoned soldiers think that we know everything about ourselves," said Staff Sgt. Anthony Griffin, a drill sergeant from Co. A, 2nd Bn., 58th Inf. Regt.



"I was really surprised to find out that I didn't know as much as I know now about testicle cancer," he said. "Giving classes of this type should be integrated into all early phases of training because it provides teaching and learning points that individuals will remember throughout their career in the service. A healthy soldier is a proud and fighting soldier."

'Vanguards' take on enemy

By Mark A. Viney
18th Infantry Regiment

The Vanguard soldiers of Task Force 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, are currently deployed to the National Training Center at Fort Irwin, Calif. As part of last week's combined arms live fire training, the Vanguards pitted themselves against an aggressive enemy motorized rifle regiment. A computer-operated target system replicated this enemy regiment.

The night of April 13, bloodied but undefeated from an enemy attack earlier that day, the Vanguards faced their next assailants with determination.

From dug-in positions, Bradley Fighting Vehicle and M-1A1 tank crewman scanned the dim horizon through their night sights. Mortarmen prepared their rounds and rechecked their firing data. Scouts reported enemy movements to the Task Force commander. Support personnel stood by their trucks, ready to bring up more ammunition to the front-line positions.

At approximately 9 p.m., the peaceful night erupted into flashes and thunder as the Vanguards Bradleys and tanks tore into the enemy's lead ranks. Tank ditches, wire obstacles, and live mine fields further impeded the enemy advance.

Caught in the Vanguards' well-orchestrated trap, the enemy Motorized Rifle Regiment was decimated. The Vanguards did not escape without taking heavy casualties of their own, however.

Total control

Sand Hill builds infantry

By James Brownlee
Infantry Training Brigade

Every week on Sand Hill, trucks resembling cattle cars stop in front of a training battalion building, referred to as a Starship. Off of that vehicle, under the watchful eyes of drill sergeants, new trainees arrive to begin infantry training.

Fort Benning is known as the "Home of the Infantry." It is also the birthplace of infantrymen; and they are born only on Sand Hill.

Company B, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment was recently filled with 220 new soldiers desiring to become infantrymen.

"For these soldiers, the next 15 weeks are going to be the hardest yet most rewarding weeks of their lives," said Capt. Bill Mason, commander Co. B, 2nd Bn., 54th Inf. Regt.

These soldiers are slotted in the 11M or mechanized infantry military occupation specialty and will begin training for their MOS after the basic phase of One Station Unit Training is complete.

"To these men, joining the Army was the most important move they have ever made in their lives," Mason said.

The first weeks are labelled as "total control" weeks, because each soldier's actions and even thoughts are totally controlled by his drill sergeants. During this period they begin the soldierization process; transitioning from civilians to soldiers.

Following this stage the drill sergeants then begin the process of building first class infantrymen. Initially, the procedure is slow but the soldiers learn fast.

"Right now I am pretty apprehensive about all of this, but I'm ready to go. As long as I keep my head on straight I shouldn't have any problems," said Pvt. 1 Tiwan Smith, a soldier of Co. B, 2nd Bn., 54th Inf. Regt., from Brooksville, S.C.

"I'm really impressed by the professionalism of the first sergeant and the drill sergeants of B Company," said Chaplain (Capt.) Mark Penfold, an Army Reserve chaplain attached to 2nd Bn., 54th Inf. Regt. "These new soldiers are experiencing more stress than they ever have before. In a week or two, they'll settle down and be amazed at how far they've come from being civilians to becoming soldiers."

"I'm pretty nervous about all of this right now, but I am ready mentally and physically for the hard challenges that await me at Bravo Company," said Pvt. 1 Jeffery Washington, a soldier of Co. B, 2nd Bn., 54th Inf. Regt., from Texas.

The wide eyes and frightened looks that accompanied these new volunteers will soon be replaced by the confident stare of an infantryman, trained to standards, self-disciplined, physically fit, and highly motivated. Some say this process is magic, but to the cadre of Co. B, 2nd Bn., 54th Inf. Regt., it is the start of another cycle of hard work.

sdt question of the week

By Alfredo Lezcano
2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment

Editor's note: To assist noncommissioned officers in preparing for their Self-Development Test, The Bayonet will publish a series of questions weekly. The answers will appear upside down and will include the appropriate field manual where the answer may be found.

Question: How often should training meetings be conducted for active component units?

A. Quarterly, B. Weekly, C. Monthly.

Answer: B. Weekly. The answer can be found in FM 25-101, pages 1 and 2.

Fort Benning honors its volunteers

3,500 volunteers contribute services valued at $4 million

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning's volunteers were honored April 22 at the Volunteer Recognition Ceremony at the Officers' Club.

Hundreds of the post's volunteers attended the ceremony, which is conducted annually to honor individuals who donate their time and services to various organizations and units on post and in Columbus.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, Fort Benning's commanding general, received a symbolic "check" for $4 million, which represented the money saved through the service of volunteers in the community.

More than 3,500 post volunteers will receive in separate ceremonies a Certificate of Achievement signed by the commanding general.

"What you (volunteers) do to take care of soldiers, to take care of soldiers' families, is absolutely critical to everything we stand for here, and that is to create a quality of life second to none," White said.

A quartet from the Infantry Band and the Infantry Chorus performed before the awards presentation.

The following seven volunteers received the Patriotic Civilian Service Award at the ceremony. Individual citations read as follows:

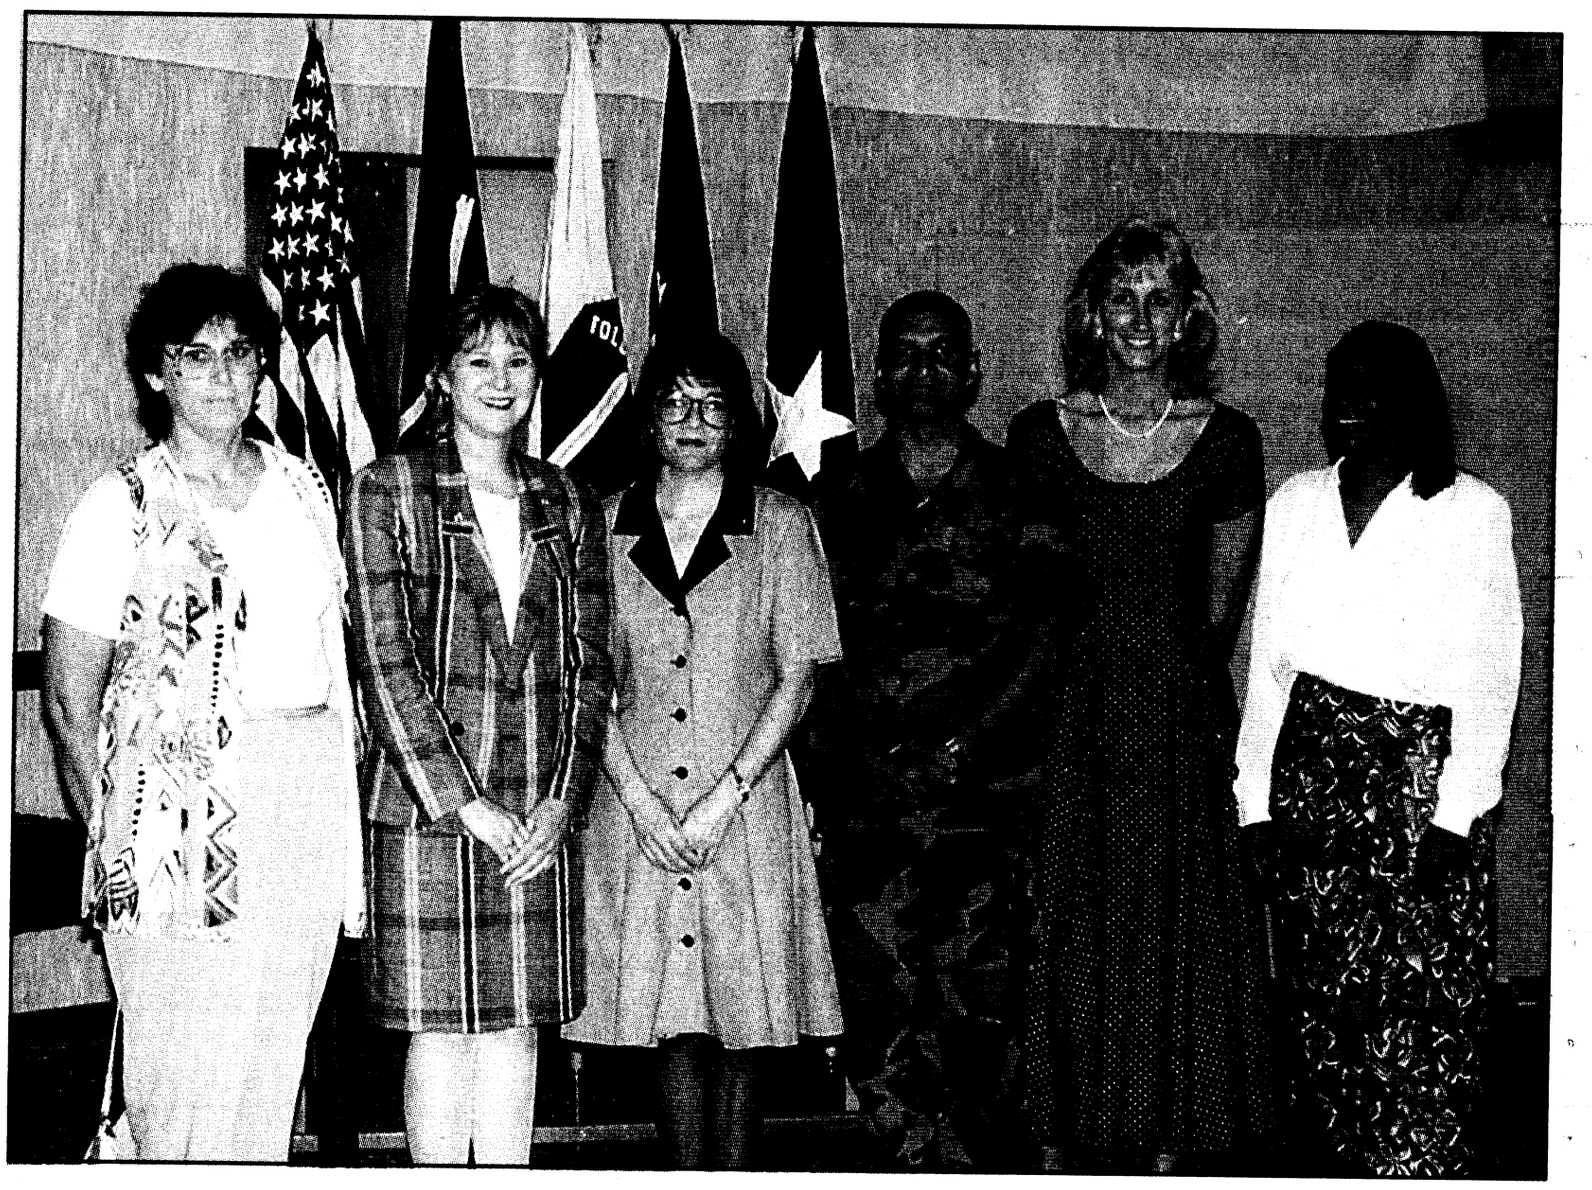
• Kathy S. Dykes — Dykes has been the sole inventory person at Santa's Castle since 1991. She has inventoried thousands of items each year, using pen and paper.

Her efforts were a factor in the smooth operation and preparation of the facility during the time soldiers and spouses have come in to pick up toys for their children.

As a direct result of Dykes' efforts, 1,087 children received toys from Santa's Castle in 1993.

• Ramona Edwards — Edwards donated more than 1,000 hours of service to the chapel programs at Fort Benning in 1993.

Edwards gave her talent as a teacher to the post Sunday School. She gave her time to lead the youth of the Sightseeing Road Chapel.



In addition to her work with youth, she actively participated in the choir program and on the Parish Council at Sightseeing Road Chapel.

• Thomas S. Lytle — Lytle has served as the District Commissioner for the Fort Benning District Boy Scouts of America for two years.

In each of those two years, he has served more than 1,800 youths and 60 scout units through Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts and Explorers.

Under Lytle, the Fort Benning District Scout program has consistently increased the number of youths served and volunteers recruited and trained and has consistently provided quality programs.

Lytle has earned many awards in scouting including the Scouter's Key, Commissioner's Arrowhead Honor, District Award of Merit and the Silver Beaver Award, which is the highest award a council can bestow on a volunteer.

Marc G. Turchin

• Doris Willis — Willis has been the volunteer chairwoman of the Health and Safety Program since May 1990. During this time, Willis has made contributions to the delivery of all the health and safety courses.

She has been directly responsible for teaching more than 500 students a year.

Willis has upgraded the quality of several courses, including swimming, cardiopulmonary resuscitation, first aid, baby-sitting and emergency response for first responders.

In addition to working at Fort Benning, Willis has helped upgrade Red Cross offices throughout Georgia and Alabama.

• Lynda Payne — Payne has donated hundreds of hours to the Fort Benning community while working as a volunteer supervisor, the acting installation volunteer coordinator, a member of a family unit network and income tax specialist preparing tax refunds for soldiers and their families.

She has served as the Army Community Service volunteer supervisor since September 1992.

Since that time, she has trained more than 70 volunteers to perform duties as receptionists, automation clerks and financial counselors.

One of her major contributions to Army Community Service was organizing the volunteer staff to support the Family Assistance Center, which was established to support the 75th Ranger Regiment's participation in Operation Restore Hope in Somalia.

• Lani Longarzo — Longarzo, as vice president and chairwoman for Daughters of the U.S. Army, has donated hundreds of hours to the Fort Benning Community Life Program.

She works to improve the Tot Town facility and the service it provides to the Fort Benning Community.

Because of Longarzo's efforts, Tot Town provides effective child care for Fort Benning families.

She also heads the Officers' Wives' Club Welfare Committee and she dedicates much of her time to running the Family Unit Network for Battery B, 41st Field Artillery.

• William Cote — Cote has been the catalyst of 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, Family Unit Network since he arrived in October.

He is responsible for the revitalization of the battalion quarterly FUN newsletter, including editing, formatting and typing.

Cote is the focal point of communication within the battalion FUN and the company network.

As a volunteer, Cote has organized child care and children's activities for all FUN functions.

He has dedicated a significant amount of personal time and effort into ensuring all FUN activities were planned and executed to the highest standards.

Students learn about environment

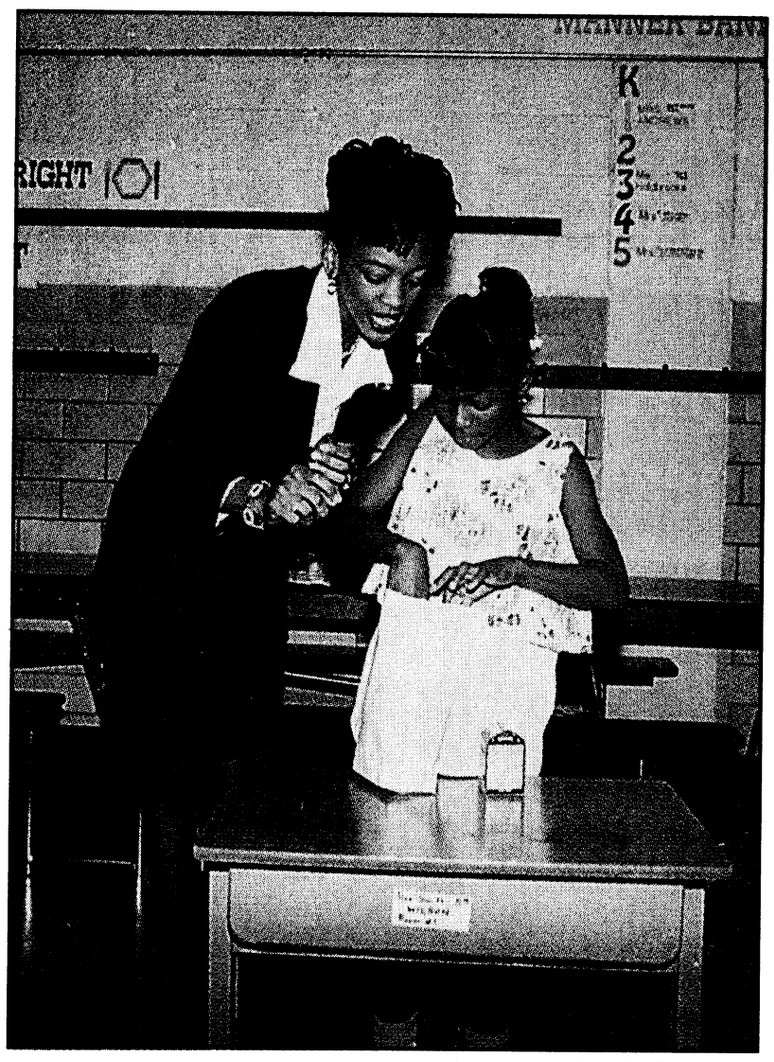
By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

In celebration of Earth Day April 22, Wilson School students learned several ways they could help the environment, such as packing "Earth-friendly" lunches.

One purpose of the assembly was to "show children what they could do at their young age to protect the environment," said Phyllis Parker, principal.

"This culminates our study of recycling," Parker said.

Hoping to show children how to improve the quality of life through better health and a cleaner environment, Sheila Johnson spoke on ways to promote an "Earth-friendly" lifestyle.



Recycling is one major way people can reduce volume in landfills and conserve natural resources, she said.

Johnson illustrated her speech with demonstrations of appropriate lunches, young environmentalists can pack.

Noting that aluminum foil is reusable and recyclable, she urged students to use this for packing sandwiches.

Fruit is a good choice for lunches, since it is nutritious and the leftovers are completely bio-degradable, she said.

Milk in recyclable cartons is a nutritious choice of beverage, or children can bring drinks from home in a reusable thermos, she said.

Another way of showing environmental responsibility is by purchasing biodegradable, phosphate-free laundry products, she said.

"Remember to be Earth friendly, and use products that won't harm the Earth," Johnson said.

Fort Benning student places third with her Poetry

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

How many of us have entered a contest and won something the first time? Not many.

Lisa J. Fry, a fourth-grader at Dexter Elementary School, has done just that.

Fry received third prize in the January 1994 Cricket Magazine League international writing competition for her poem entitled "Super Swimmer."

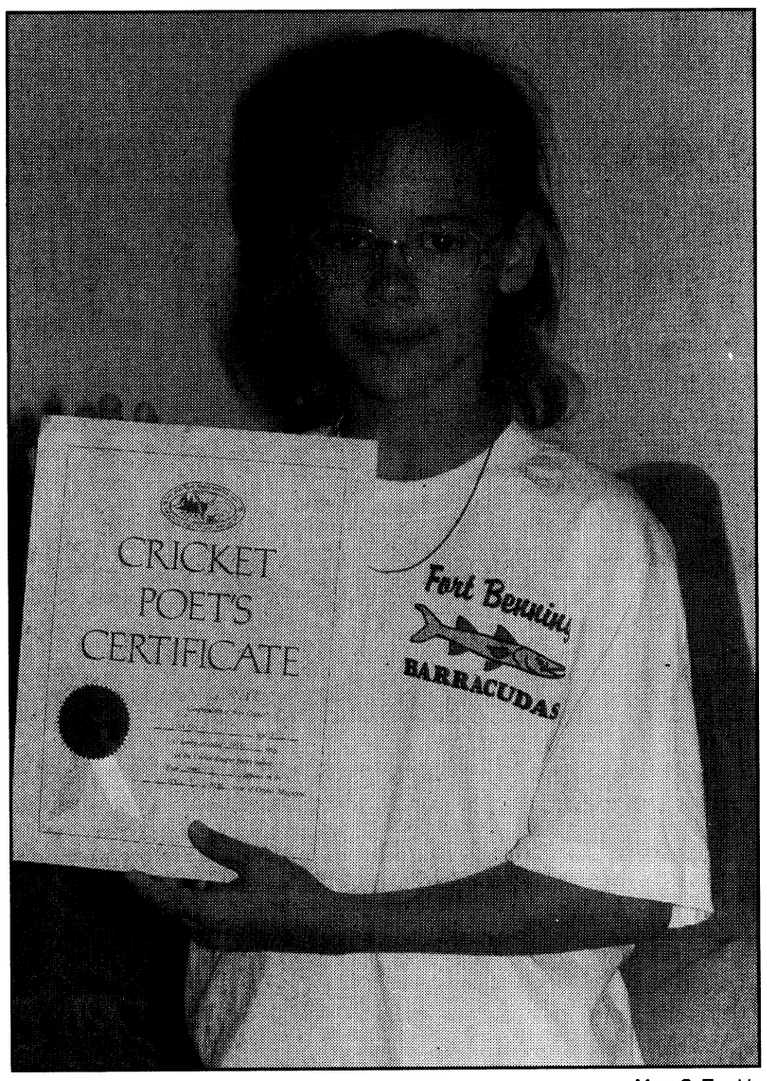
"My teacher made this a writing assignment," Fry said.

Her teacher, Marjory Brasfield, a fourth-grade teacher at Herbert J. Dexter Elementary School, said she asked her students to write on subjects they know about.

For this contest, entrants were asked to write a poem about a special passion, Brasfield said.

Fry seems to have quite a passion for swimming, since her wall at her home is covered with 1st, 2nd and 3rd place ribbons from swim meets.

Fry swims for the Youth Activities Barracudas Swim Team.



"I chose (to write about) swimming," she said, "because I like to swim."

"It's not like I come home (from school) and sit down and write," Fry said.

Brasfield said during class, Fry does her writing on a computer in a class called Writing Workshop.

"Lisa is a creative writer and a talented student," Brasfield said. "She is a very active student, both academically and athletically."

Fry said she will continue to write as long as her teacher keeps giving her writing assignments.

Students celebrate Earth Day

By Jerrie MacIntire
Special to The Bayonet ©

Students at White School gathered for a science fair April 22 and celebrated Earth Day while marking the end of a study program focusing on the environment.

In a month-long unit of study, teacher Kris Keske coordinated activities designed to heighten awareness of environmental issues while promoting conservation of natural resources, reduction of landfill debris and recycling efforts.

Inspired to consider creative solutions to environmental problems, students fashioned a variety of projects including a water purification filter.

One student demonstrated a process to remold old bits of crayons into useful new art tools while another illustrated an innovative way to reuse aluminum cans in the form of a toy airplane.

These students were just three participants in the fair that drew entries from every class. Other projects included a study of how the Army maintains motor pools and recycles used oil, a study of the effect of noise pollution on plants, and an informative chart announcing that that body parts are recyclable and offering organ donor cards.

Another display showed safe alternatives to many common household cleaners that contain polluting phosphates.

"Through these exercises, the students are becoming aware that the environment affects everything. It's a more complex issue than just recycling cans," said Keske, noting that her curriculum emphasized reduction and reuse of items as well as recycling.

"Anyone who has a child or works with children can't help but emphasize this issue because it is the future; these children are worried about their future," said Melanie Bas, assistant principal at White School.

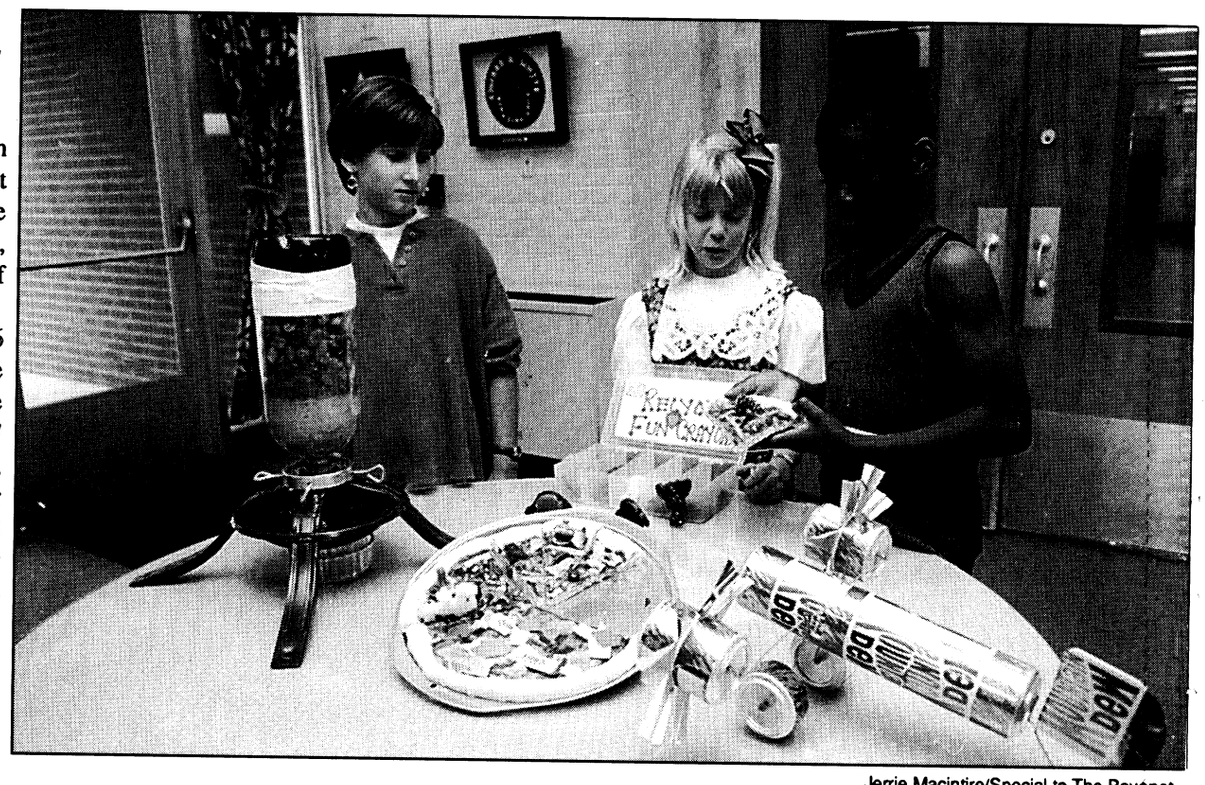
Both educators fully support recycling, but they said reducing trash is also necessary for environmental health. As part of the study of reduction, Keske's students documented several cases of gross overpackaging such as in cereals, medicines and convenience snacks. As part of language arts, they wrote letters to companies urging more conservative packaging methods.

Reusing items is another way to help the environment, she said. To emphasize the point, children held a toy swap where they exchanged old toys with classmates; the students all gained different toys and saw the value of reusing items instead of contributing to the current "throw away society."

Other ways to reuse items included imaginative jewelry fashioned from plastic six ring can holders and from the bottoms of glass bottles.

These crafts represent ways to reduce landfill space by reusing items over again, she explained. Landfill space is becoming scarce in some areas as debris is continually discarded, much of which could be recycled or reused, she said.

To illustrate what goes in a landfill, Keske coordinated a class project called "garbage pizza," a ingenious alternative to the standard pie chart.



Through this craft project, students created a pizza dough crust and topped each of seven slices with items that represent landfill debris. The largest slice was topped with paper scraps, which comprise 40 percent of landfill debris.

Yard waste takes up 17.6 percent of landfill space, while food waste, metals and glass make up 7.4 percent, 8.5 percent and 7 percent respectively. Plastic, which is often targeted as the major source of debris, takes up only 8 percent of landfill space. Other miscellaneous waste products make up 11 percent.

"The pizza also represents everything that is found in the Earth," said Keske. All the items on the pizza come from the Earth, a fact the children had not fully realized.

Another imaginative activity included a bead find, in which Keske hid colorful beads around the room to represent natural resources. Children, representing nations of the Earth, had one minute to discover the beads, or natural resources, of their countries.

"This carried over into a social studies lesson. They learned that if they only had iron ore in their country, and needed bauxite, they would have to trade for it," she said.

Jerrie Macintire/Special to The Bayonet

Lorenzo Davis displays one slice of "garbage pizza" representing the amount of landfill space devoted to yard waste. Katie Corsette (left) and Ryan Roth looks on.

From crafts to science and social studies, the students revelled in their study of recycling while gaining a better understanding of environmental issues that will affect their future, Keske said.

The overall winner in the science fair was Ryan Roth. Other winners were Corbin Nix, second grade; Allison Dixon, third grade; Meghan McQueery, fourth grade; and Katie Corsette, fifth grade.

pet tips

Fort Benning Veterinary Services

What happens to pets that are allowed to roam free on Fort Benning? They end up at the pound.

The Fort Benning Stray Impoundment Facility, Building 283, is located next to the Veterinary Treatment Facility.

Animals that are picked up running loose on the reservation are brought to the facility. Once an animal has been picked up, it remains in the kennels for three full working days and on the fourth working day it can be adopted or killed.

There is a $2 a day charge to retrieve pets from the facility. The owner must also provide valid proof of a rabies vaccination within the last year, (a rabies certificate signed by a licensed veterinarian).

To adopt a pet, the new owner is required to pay fees associated with vaccinating an animal, according to post standards.

The cost for a puppy averages $10.60 to include the distemper vaccination and deworming. Kittens are tested for feline leukemia before being adopted and cost approximately $28.

If an animal is older than 12 weeks, it will need a rabies vaccination.

Animals older than 6 months of age are required more vaccinations; often the cost varies depending on age and species.

Animals on post are required to meet the standards of USAIC Regulation 40-905, Pet and Animal Disease Control, which includes a current rabies vaccination and a yearly distemper vaccination.

All dogs on Fort Benning are required to have a yearly heartworm test and be on a year-round heartworm prevention medication.

Purchasing heartworm prevention medication at the clinic requires proof of a negative heartworm test within the last year, continuous heartworm prevention, and Veterinary Services must have seen the animal within the last year.

Heartworm disease is a deadly disease that has been diagnosed in all 50 states and poses a potentially fatal year-round threat to all dogs.

The clinic also supports the local youth groups with pet education and tours of the entire facility.

For more information, call 545-1127 or 545-4444.

French teen-agers seek host families to live with in U.S.

French Army Liaison Office

American families interested in a summer exchange with a French family are being sought.

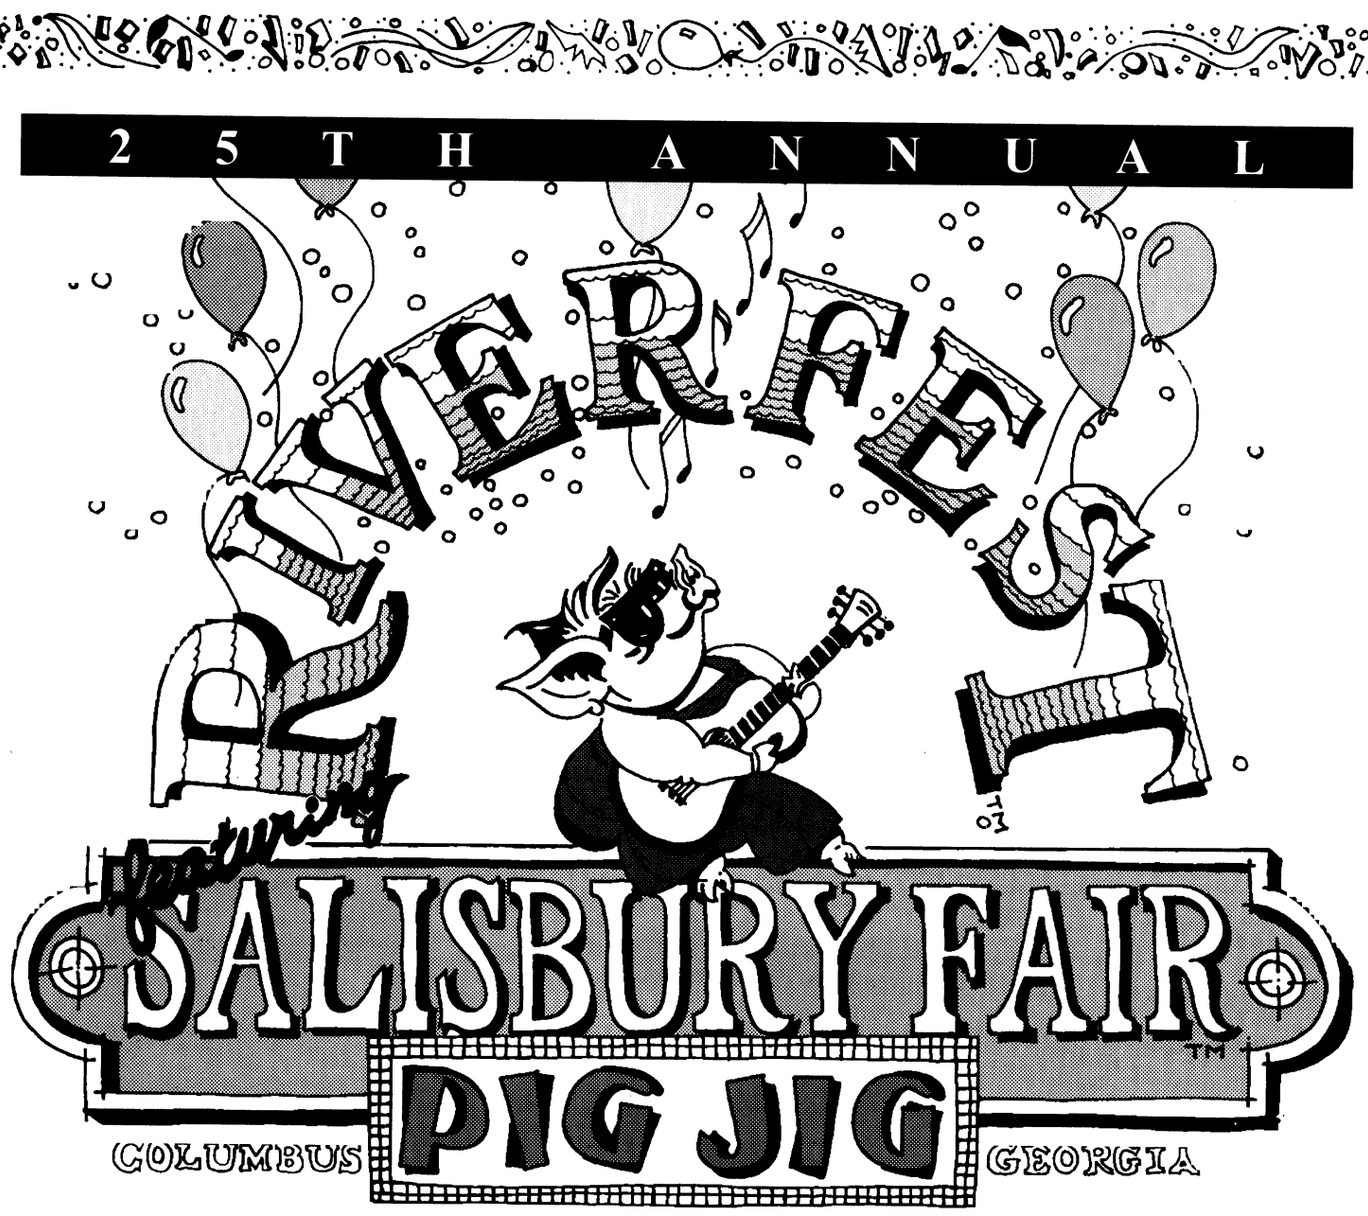
The following four French teen-agers would like to stay with an American family this July or August, with the intent to learn to speak English and to discover the American way of life.

- Nicolas Germain is 17 and has three sisters (8, 12 and 14 years old).

His father is a lieutenant colonel in the French Foreign Legion and the family is living in Marseille (Riviera), France.

- Xavier Santos is 18 and has one brother and three sisters. His father is retired and now is the manager of several businesses.

The family is living in a house in the country with horses in Vendee (west coast), France. Santos likes to ride horses.



- Helene Cochin is 15 and has one brother and three sisters.

Her father is a French colonel in the army and they are living in Paris.

- Clotilde Pelletier is 16. He came twice in Metz (east of France).

Love: It's more than a word; it's a force

By Geoffrey and Melinda Alleyne
13th Corps Support Battalion

reflections

What is love? What do we mean when we say "I love you" to a person of the opposite sex? Many people would agree that the word love is often overused, misused, often abused and certainly many of us are confused by it.

Couples so often walk into the chaplain's office and say, "Chaplain, we love each other so much, we want to get married." What are these couples saying to the chaplain and to each other?

Many people would agree that the sending of cards and flowers to that special someone is definitely a way of saying "I love you" or "You are special to me; I care about you."

Webster's dictionary defines love as "an affectionate concern for the well-being of others." Soldiers in premarital counseling often say love is "a warm, nice feeling" or a special feeling inside." Love is definitely more than words. It's a commitment.

Words are cheap and meaningless unless backed up by action. One can give without loving, but it's impossible to love without giving.

John 3:16 points to the real essence of what love is. "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son..." Love is giving your very best; anything less is not true love.

In our relationship with our spouse, we are often demanding and impatient. The example of true love from God is that we constantly give and overwhelmingly desire to meet and fulfill the needs of each other.

True love is more than words. It's a total commitment to your partner — regardless. In the midst of a storm, when the smiles have passed and the honeymoon is over, during the hard and difficult times, true love stands fast because it's more than words. It's a commitment to each other.

Statistics tell us that every year the divorce rate keeps climbing. They also tell us that there are nearly as many divorces as marriages each year in the United States.

Every wedding where I officiate I always read 1 Corinthians 13. During the counseling sessions the couple should read 1 Corinthians 13, once or twice. The words of the Apostle Paul should ring in our ears, "love never fails."

True love really never fails because it's commitment and devotion, not emotion and feeling, to each other.

This commitment even when there is no work, no money, no possibility of having children or no remaining physical beauty or attractiveness.

True love and commitment will stand the test of time. The Lord illustrated true love and commitment when he went to the cross. Because of his love for us, he gave his life. He was also committed to the will of God.

Through your love and commitment to Christ, you can truly love and commit yourself to your spouse. True love has always been and always will be a commitment, because true love, comes from God.

The Apostle Paul stated in Ephesians 5:25, "Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ loved the church, and gave himself for it."

reflections

God bless the ants! They resurfaced by the thousands during our recent springtime weather. Wherever a gap exists in or near the sidewalk, the ants might come marching to rearrange the earth beneath our feet.

It's easy not to notice them and to conclude that their busyness amounts to nothing important. I admit, I haven't paid attention to them since I was a child.

Recently, however, I keep noticing their work. Some of it is puckered round piles the diameter of a quarter up to a tennis ball. Others are slithering trails between the cement. Still others sit like castles amid a heavy forest of grass.

What impresses me is that their work is all done one crumb at a time. They don't flail the earth with padded paws, dashing clouds of clods back between their hind legs as dogs do. They don't scoop gallons of it and deposit elsewhere with massive, noisy machines. They work neatly, one piece at a time.

They also stick with it. Often their work is accidentally smashed by a human pedestrian whose step lands on their well-placed collection. This tragedy, however, does not deter them. It slows them down, yes, but they keep at it.

As I watch them, I wonder — wonder about times when I need to do that. There are times when I'm tempted to flail and to scoop, to gouge my way through a task or challenge.

I also think about what other persons face. When wives and husbands feel stepped on, for instance, do they stay squashed or do they rebuild? When poor health or work pressures or strained relationships smash people's lives, what do they do? Give up or build again?

I think that working in the military teaches us the ants' tactic. Each career soldier advances slowly and carefully from one rank to the next. Each promotion involves specialized training and specific performance demands. Our usefulness to the military grows one step at a time.

Sure, there are times when we need to flail, scoop and gouge. Not every task or challenge is best completed or met through such dogged perseverance.

But in this world of fast food, fast cars, fast computers and fast marriages, a picture of the ants working away at the home — piece by piece, slowly but surely — reminds me that there's much in life that shouldn't be sped up or shortened. Things like family and friends and community take time to build well.

Yes, God bless the ants! And God bless any of us who build our lives one step at a time.

chapel notes

Protestant women of the chapel — Members of Protestant Women of the Chapel will hold their general meeting Thursday at 9:30 a.m. in the Religious Education Center. The theme for the day is "Sheep are Sheep."

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Kerry Steedley will be the guest speaker. He will commission the new officers for the 94-95 season. Brunch will follow the meeting.

The following Thursdays PWOC will continue its series of spring Bible studies. The studies include: "Lord, Is it Warfare" by Kay Arthur, "The Joy of Hospitality" by Dee Brestin, Philippians (Joy!) by Nav Press, and God's Word and How to Use It.

PWOC invites and encourages new members at all meetings.

PWOC meets 9:30 to 11:45 a.m. each Thursday in Building 2521. Free child care is provided in the adjacent building, Building 2517. These buildings are located off Indianhead Road and Thorson Street.

For more information, call Cindy Russell at 561-3348.

Knights of Columbus — The Knights of Columbus is a Catholic, family-service, fraternal organization open to all practicing Catholic males 18 years and older. Our Lady of Lourdes Council 11145 is seeking new members. For information, call 687-8981, evenings.

Vacation Bible School — "Come to the Party and Celebrate Jesus" is the theme for this year's Vacation Bible School. Classes will be June 24 and 27 to 30 at Edward A. White School.

The program includes Bible study, music, crafts, recreation and refreshments. All positions are available for volunteers.

To register or volunteer, call 545-4715 or visit the Religious Education Center in Building 2518.

Muslim community — Koranic reading classes are every Monday at the Religious Education Center at 7 p.m. in Building 2522. Classes can help provide a better understanding of the Koran. For more information, contact Imam Yahya Ansar Islam at 689-6922.

Spanish Protestant service — Sightseeing Chapel is now conducting a general Protestant service entirely in Spanish Sundays at 9 a.m.

For information, call Chaplain (Capt.) Anibal Cruz-Baez at 545-1832.

Sissy Spacek finds 'A Place for Annie' on ABC

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

She hasn't done much television since the early stages of her career, but a very emotional story has drawn Sissy Spacek back to the home screen.

SPOTLIGHT

What: 'A Place for Annie'
When: Sunday on ABC

An Oscar-winner (for her portrayal of country singer Loretta Lynn in "Coal Miner's Daughter"), the actress stars in Sunday's fact-inspired ABC drama "A Place for Annie," the newest presentation in the "Hallmark Hall of Fame" series.

Spacek plays a pediatrics nurse who wants to adopt Annie, an HIV-positive child for whom she has been caring in a neonatal unit, but the child's natural mother (Mary-Louise Parker, of "Fried Green Tomatoes" and "Grand Canyon") — who is dying of AIDS, and who has been deemed by social workers to be an unfit parent — wages a court battle to retain her parental rights. Ultimately, the nurse tries to solve the dilemma by opening her home to both the mother and the youngster, resulting in an intense and often-confusing situation centered around the best interests of the little girl.

Executive-produced by longtime partners Marcy Gross and Ann Weston, the film also features veteran British performer Joan Plowright ("Avalon"), S. Epatha Merkerson ("Law & Order") and Wendy Robie ("Twin Peaks"); twin siblings Kathy and Leslie Anderson share the pivotal role of Annie.

"I guess the issue in this film is AIDS," says the sincere and candid Spacek, "but I was mostly touched by the human element of the project, certainly not the political one. I've always been attracted to meaty roles, and I've been real fortunate. There's some real good writers working in television, and more good parts written for women in television. There are a lot of us in my age range these days, so it's a mad scramble for the parts."

As a parent herself, Spacek admits that found a special chord in the theme of "A Place for Annie," reflecting that "Anyone who has children knows that a subject like this is completely, totally heartwrenching. I did try to push (the subject matter) away a little bit, and the last thing in the world we wanted to do was to sentimentalize it ... but when a person is experiencing deep emotions like that, you have to fill them deeply (as a performer). It's tricky when you have something this emotional."

To prepare for her part, Spacek spent several days in a hospital's neonatal unit, where she observed "babies that were born with all kinds of addictions. When I first went there, I had great trepidation, and I was just so overwhelmed that I wanted to weep. It's not that you distance yourself, but as I spent more time there, I saw that the nurses and doctors were really incredible. I felt a lot of anger coming from them when a baby was delivered with problems, and I just have new and heightened respect for them. It's so intense, and there are buzzers going off all the time; it's a high-high-stress job, probably right up there with the people in the towers who land airplanes."

Post honors its volunteers; MEDDAC hosts health fair

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning's volunteers were honored April 22 at the post Volunteer Recognition Ceremony at the Officers' Club. Hundreds of the post's volunteers attended the ceremony, which is conducted annually to honor individuals who donate their time and service to various organizations and units on post and in Columbus.

Watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday for more on the ceremony.

Fort Benning's third annual health fair was conducted at the Main Mall Post Exchange Saturday. Cholesterol and blood pressure screenings by post medical representatives were part of the health fair.

Watch "Fort Benning Today" for more information on the fair.

Stone Mountain to smoke with barbecue, bargains

'Salute to spring' includes cooking competitions

Georgia's Stone Mountain Park

The annual salute to spring at Georgia's Stone Mountain Park will include two cooking competitions May 7 and 8.

The 11th annual BBQ Pork Cookoff will feature professional and amateur teams battling it out for best barbecue honors. Judging categories include best barbecue, ribs, whole hog, sauce and showmanship. Cash and prizes will total more than $15,000.

Backyard gourmets will take the park by storm May 8 at the Grill-Off, an event where participants will bring their favorite recipes along with all sorts of trusty cooking devices and secret ingredients to produce mouth-watering beef, pork, fish, fowl, game, stew and vegetable dishes. Cash prizes and medals salute the winning entries.

In addition to the Cookoff and Grill-Off, Springfest '94 includes the South's Largest Garage Sale with 200 garage sale booths featuring traditional garage sale items such as old books, household items, clothing and furniture.

In addition to both cookoffs and the garage sale, the Georgia Department of Industry, Trade and Tourism will feature "Stay and See Georgia" with regionalized exhibits displaying Georgia tourism possibilities, from the racing Chattahoochee River boats in Columbus, visiting the golf courses of Augusta or touring the Antebellum Homes of Macon.

Springfest '94 brings the sounds of "new country" and "classic country" together for one weekend. New singer Larry Stewart will perform country music hits May 7. Waylon Jennings will also perform.

Admission into Springfest is free. Park entry requires a valid parking permit — $5 one-time, $20 annual. Festival hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. No animals are allowed on festival grounds.

Columbus Museum unveils sculpture

The Columbus Museum

Ida Kohlmeyer's monumental sculpture "Slanted No. 3" has been unveiled at the Columbus Museum.

Recently purchased to mark the occasion of the museum's fifth anniversary in its new building, the sculpture is in the reflecting pool at the museum's front entrance.

Kohlmeyer said her monumental abstract sculptures, "relate to the signs and symbols of abstract paintings, brightly colored blue, orange, fuschia and green configurations of basic shapes with triangles, rods, lines and crescents."

Slanted No. 3 is more than 10 feet tall and is composed of a colorful column of cubes, pyramids and abstract forms.

Outdoor sculpture has been Kohlmeyer's special interest for the past several years, and she has received numerous public and private commissions.

Born in 1912 in New Orleans, Kohlmeyer studied at Newcomb College and holds a master of fine arts degree from Newcomb Art School, Tulane University.

She has taught drawing and painting at Tulane University and at the University of New Orleans.

Throughout her career, Kohlmeyer has exhibited nationwide, most notably in a retrospective exhibition, "Ida Kohlmeyer: 30 Years," organized by the Mint Museum, Charlotte, N.C., from 1983 to 1985. One of her first solo exhibitions was hosted by the Columbus Museum in 1962.

"Slanted No. 3" joins an abstract oil painting by Kohlmeyer, "Passage No. 2," in the museum's permanent collection.

Purchase of this piece was made possible by contributions from the Bowers Acquisition Fund in memory of Lucy Hill and Lloyd Guyton Bowers, the Edward Swift Shorter Bequest Fund, and the Richard Florsheim Art Fund.

Additional support was provided by the artist and the Arthur Roger Gallery, New Orleans.

The Columbus Museum, located at 1251 Wynnton Road, features exhibitions of American art and regional history and includes a hands-on discovery gallery for children. Admission is free of charge.

The museum is open from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday, and Sundays from 1 until 5 p.m. For more information, call the museum at 649-0713.

Cotton Pickin' Country Fair is May 7, 8 in Gay

Cotton Pickin' Country Fair

The pounding of the blacksmith's hammer, the hushed conversation of women working on a quilt, the whirl of the potter's wheel and the sound of country music are all part of the Cotton Pickin' Country Fair in Gay, Ga.

The spring edition of the fair is May 7 and 8 from 9 a.m. until 6 p.m. The two days are full of sights, sounds and smells that remind visitors of a slower, quieter time.

Conducted twice yearly on the grounds of the old cotton mill in Gay, Ga., the fair gives nearly 300 exhibitors the opportunity to show their wares.

Each participant is hand picked scores of applicants from throughout the Southeast.

The nonstop entertainment will feature bands, line dancing, clogging, banjo picking, dulcimer playing from the front of "Grandpa's porch" and plenty of entertainment for the children in the special children's corner.

Admission to the fair is $4 for adults, $3 for senior citizens, $2 for children and under 3 is free.

Gay is located 39 miles south of the Atlanta Airport on state roads 74 and 85.

For more information, call (706) 538-6814.

SCHOOL BOARD

reps to be elected

Fort Benning Schools

Fort Benning parents will be heading to the polls May 17 from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. to elect school board representatives for Faith, Loyd, McBride, White and Wilson schools as well as the "at large" seat for president.

School board representatives are elected for two-year terms.

Two schools, Faith and White, will be electing a representative for only one year to fill an unexpired term. The Dexter and Stowers schools representatives have one more year remaining in their two-year terms of office.

Parents or guardians who live in the student's immediate household are eligible to vote for the school representative in each school where they have a child in attendance. Votes for the "at large" seat may be cast by each sponsor only once.

Absentee ballots for eligible voters who are unable to vote on election day can be obtained if the parent has a legitimate and prior commitment preventing voting from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. on election day.

Applications for absentee ballots can be obtained by visiting the school's office until close of business May 16.

Voting will take place at each school, where a sealed box will be placed in a centralized location. When the ballots are counted, no fewer than three eligible voters will be present.

There are six candidates running in the upcoming election. All of these candidates will run on uncontested ballots. They are:

At large:

President: Col. Gregory Camp, election for two years

School representatives:

Faith — Lt. Col. Michael Bingham, election for one year

Loyd — Lisa Grover, election for two years

McBride — Staff Sgt. John Perdue, election for two years

White — Adrienne Port, election for one year

Wilson — Staff Sgt. Leroy Corondado, election for two years.

RANGERS COMPETE

Team from Fort Bragg wins 'Best Ranger' title

By Karen S. Morarie
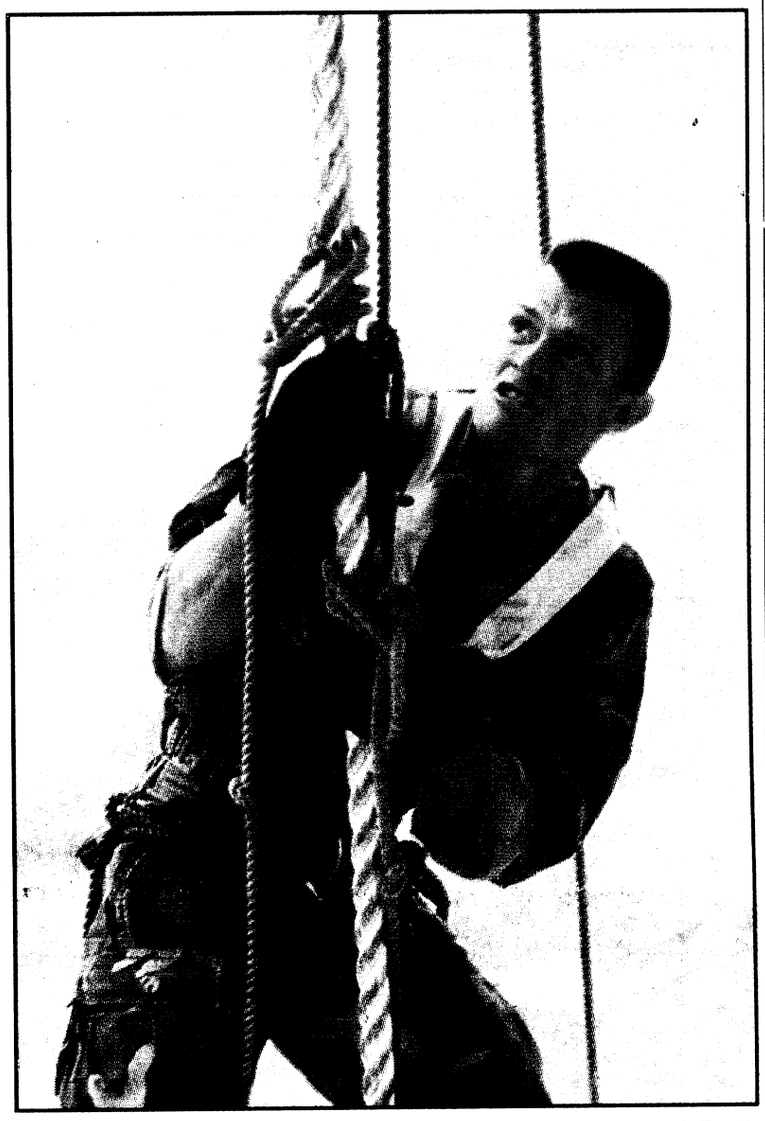
Bayonet staff writer

This year, for the first time, the "Best Ranger" title was won by a team not assigned to a ranger unit. This is also the first time two officers have won the title.



Capt. Edward Garcia and 1st Lt. Michael Richardson, both of the 82nd Airborne Division, outscored all other participants to win the 12th Annual David E. Grange Best Ranger Competition, which began April 29 and ended with an awards ceremony Monday.

The competition attracted a field of 53 two-man teams from the Army, Army National Guard, Army Reserve, Marine Corps, Navy, Canada and France.

Of the original 106 entrants, 34 (17 teams) met all standards and completed the three-day contest. By the end of the last event Sunday evening, successful teams had completed these tasks:

- Army physical fitness test
- Weapons fire
- Spot jump — from a UH-60 Blackhawk helicopter using MC1-1B parachutes
- Canoe event
- Forced road march (approximately 20 miles)
- Ranger stakes — day and night event measuring 13 basic ranger and infantry skills, including weapons assembly, knot tying, first aid and radio communications
- Prusik climb and rappel — a timed, 60-foot vertical rope climb, using Prusik rope climbing procedures, and descent by rappel
- Land navigation — a timed event in which teams move during darkness to checkpoints between 2,000 and 4,000 meters apart over a 20- to 25-kilometer course
- Darby Queen obstacle course
- Water confidence tests
- Helocast swim — teams jump from a low-flying helicopter into Victory Pond with a poncho raft, swim to shore and carry the raft with equipment (weighing about 200 pounds dry) intact to the finish line
- Buddy team run — rangers run a 2.7-mile loop with fatigues, combat boots, load carrying equipment and M-16 rifle.

Powell to receive Doughboy Award

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff will be this year's recipient of the Doughboy Award.

Retired Gen. Colin L. Powell will receive the award at a future ceremony.

The Doughboy Award is a chrome-plated doughboy helmet worn by soldiers in the American Expeditionary Force during World War I and in the early days of World War II.

It is presented annually to a person who made a significant contribution to the infantry force, and it is presented on behalf of infantrymen, past, present and future.

The original award can be seen in the foyer of Infantry Hall.

Past recipients include Bob Hope, H. Ross Perot, Bill Mauldin, John O. Marsh Jr., Sens. John G. Tower, Warren B. Rudman and Robert J. Dole, and retired Gens. Frederick Kroesen, Aubrey Newman, Matthew B. Ridgway, William E. DePuy and retired Lt. Gen. David E. Grange Jr.

The term "doughboy" originated from the practice of rushing raw recruits to Europe in World War I. The term was originally used during the border conflicts prior to World War I in Texas, where soldiers trained along the Rio Grande and became covered in white dust of the adobe soil.

Mounted troops called them "adobes." This degenerated to "dobies," which became "doughboys."

Powell was appointed the 12th Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Department of Defense, Oct. 1, 1989, by President George Bush. He was reappointed for a second term in October 1991.

He was born in New York City April 5, 1937, and was raised in the South Bronx section of New York. He graduated from the City College of New York in 1958 and was commissioned a second lieutenant in the regular Army through the Reserve Officer Training Corps program.

Powell and his wife, Alma, have three children: Michael, Linda, and Annemarie.

Conference to focus on future

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet®

Fort Benning will be the rallying point for infantry leaders from around the world when they arrive Monday for the 1994 Infantry Commander's Conference.

According to Capt. Arthur Hall, conference operations officer, this year's conference will be unlike any previous conferences because the focus will be on actual demonstrations of the latest warfighting technology rather than classroom discussion.

"Warrior Future Operational Capabilities for U.S. Infantry" will be the theme of the two-day conference, which provides an annual opportunity for Army leaders to discuss the latest developments in infantry doctrine, materiel requirements and other aspects of the infantry's mission.

Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White will kick off the conference with his "State of the Infantry" address at 8:30 a.m. Tuesday in Infantry Hall's Marshall Auditorium.

According to Hall, the conference will focus on three main areas: the latest advances in night-fighting technology that allows U.S. combat forces to "own the night;" the use of sophisticated computer systems that will "digitize" the infantry soldier and enhance his ability to gather and pass on information on the battlefield; and an examination of other technological advances that will transform the Army into smaller, rapidly deployable, yet lethal force envisioned by its leaders.

The highlight of the conference will include a special advanced warfighting exercise, consisting of a day and night phase, conducted by the Dismounted Battlespace Battle Lab at the McKenna Military

PX implements new smoking policy

Karen S. Morarie
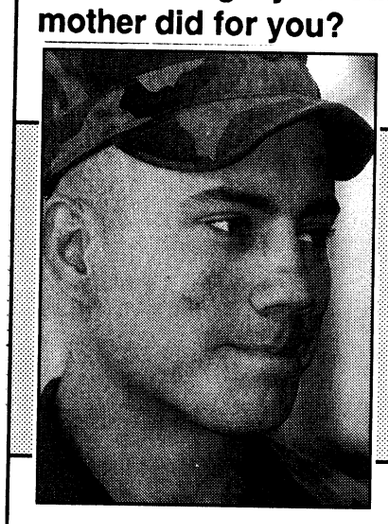
Bayonet staff writer

If you're planning a trip to the Post Exchange at the main mall, you might as well leave your smokes at home.

The PX is now smoke-free, in accordance with recently instituted Department of Defense guidelines.

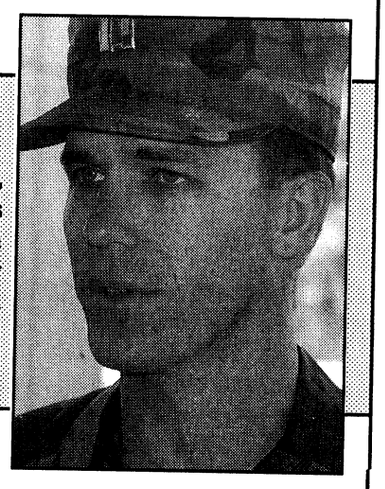
The guidelines prohibit smoking in all DoD workplaces, but allow some exceptions for pre-existing designated smoking areas in restaurants and recreational facilities.

According to Mary Babbitt, PX general manager, the new mall policy was handed down by the post command group.



"It wasn't a decision for (the Army and Air Force Exchange Service) to make," she said. "But we'll certainly abide by the decision the commander and the Department of Defense made."

In accordance with DoD policy, Babbitt said, a pre-existing smoking area inside the mall Burger King will still be available to the restaurant's patrons, but no other smoking will be permitted in the mall area.



Most other facilities on post have already made changes in smoking policy to comply with the new DoD guidelines.

Senior mentors: An Infantry School initiative

11th Infantry Regiment

commentary

The 11th Infantry Regiment recently instituted a program in which the most junior officers in the Army, second lieutenants in the Infantry Office Basic Course, receive instruction from men who have stood in their boots and served successfully as rifle platoon leaders.

These are no ordinary instructors, however, as they are no less than the assistant commandant Brig. Gen. Jack Nix, several hand-picked infantry colonels; Col. Craig Peterson, chief, Tactics Division, Combined Arms and Tactics Directorate; Col. Robert Tesdahl, Training and Doctrine Command System Manager — Soldier; and Col. Walter Wojdakowski, commander of the 11th Infantry Regiment.

In close cooperation with the Infantry School, IOBC now includes dedicated time when senior infantry officers in the grade of colonel and above meet with basic course students on both a formal and informal basis.

The topics of instruction vary widely and are based more on the concerns of the junior officers than on doctrine or tactics. In fact, to call the learning process that occurs "instruction" is perhaps a misnomer; what occurs is mentoring in its purest form.

The mentors meet with their understudies in both classroom and field environments. Discussions range form changes in the Army during the careers of the senior mentors to soldier survival skills.

At times, the mentors tutor their students on how to execute difficult operations; other times the conversations delve into more intangible items such as "How do you know when you have truly succeeded as an infantry rifle platoon leader?"

In each mentoring session, the conversations are free-flowing; colonels listen intently as lieutenants dissect a particular problem.

More often than not, the mentor does not offer a solution to a problem, but he does impart his personal experience and how he solved a similar problem.

"The senior mentor allows you to distance yourself from the training event and provide some perspective," said Peterson, mentor for 3rd Platoon, Company D, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment.

"The real benefit (of the senior mentor program) is you get a perspective from a senior officer that relates their training to the environment of the lieutenants."

One of the Army's reference texts on this subject is Field Manual 25-101, Battle Focused Training. Discussing leader development and in support of the senior mentor program, it states: "Leader development occurs in the formal school system; it occurs in METL(mission essential task list)-based training in operational assignments, and it occurs in the individual leader's self-development programs."

The senior mentor initiative is an extension of both the formal schooling received in IOBC as well as the referenced self-development program.

Regardless of present or future assignment, there is always a more seasoned senior officer present who will provide sage advice and counseling to subordinates. Not surprisingly, this is precisely the description given of the man, Mentor, in greek mythology. He was the loyal friend and adviser of Odysseus, a wise teacher and a coach.

Appropriately, these senior officers reflect the attributes that represent Mentor at IOBC today.

The senior mentors also offer the type of encouraging and sound advice that an infantry second lieutenant vitally needs. One aspect of this deals with Ranger School.

As Peterson and his senior mentor counterparts acknowledge, completion of Ranger School is ultimately important because it teaches you about yourself. Knowing yourself is a critical part of leadership.

It is hard, challenging, uncomfortable and life-threatening. Based on that knowledge of yourself and successful completion of Ranger School, you've developed additional competence and subsequently confidence that is essential to successful leaders.

The senior mentor program allows an informal exchange of ideas and experiences. While seemingly social in nature, this additional professional development of the basic course lieutenants provides a fresh perspective of their future roles in the Army.

Yes, this last initiative does place even more of a demand on the senior mentors time.

"We must spare no expense to make them successful, because the cost of failure is too great," Peterson said.

Bad service? Speak to the person in charge

I want to draw everyone in the Fort Benning community's attention to how important it is that we let people know when we have been treated badly. We can do this by writing a letter to the people in charge. It does help and can even change things sometimes.

I have two very good examples as to why we need to write letters if we aren't happy about something.

My husband was treated very rudely by a service representative on post. He went in to give her some paperwork that she needed and was treated badly by her from the initial meeting. We called her supervisor and wrote him a letter.

As a result of the letter we wrote, he put a statement on his door that if anyone should have a problem with anyone in his office, they need to contact him. The letter we wrote explaining the situation will remain in her employment file.

The other situation was one concerning an illegal tactic practiced by a car dealership in Columbus. We saw an advertisement stating that the dealership had a large selection with many colors from which to choose of conversion vans equipped with color televisions, video cassette recorders, air bags, power windows and locks, etc., for $18,995.

We went in and the salesman didn't know of any that the dealer had for that price. He did, however, have a used van he thought we might like. When we brought the ad to his attention, he checked on it and told us that they did have one, (only one), van for that price but without a TV or VCR.

This is an illegal practice referred to as "bait and switch." The dealer lures the consumer into the dealership with an outstanding buy, then when the customer gets there there aren't any and the dealership tries to sell you something else.

Because of this, I wrote a letter to the Better Business Bureau.

I believe I need to let everyone know why it is so important to write to or contact the appropriate person if you are not satisfied with the service you receive from someone.

You can make a difference.

In the car dealership circumstance, dealerships rely on a heavy volume of business from the military to stay in business; so it would behoove them to treat us with the utmost respect and legality.

And I am sure that, at sometime, everyone has been treated rudely by people who are there to serve us. Without us, they wouldn't have a job. If everyone brought it to the attention of their supervisors every time something like this occurs, it would happen less often.

In closing, I just want to stress that everyone can make a difference if they are willing to do something about it.

What they don't tell you, if you don't ask

On a recent trip to the post laundry, I was told that I could no longer turn in a mixture of my wife's and my clothing in the same bundle. The bundle rate is 12 pieces for $7.75.

I was told by the clerk, the contract states that only one person's clothing may be included in a bundle. I felt that if the contractor had agreed to do 12 pieces for $7.75, it should not matter to whom the pieces belonged.

When I asked the person in charge to show me the contract or something from the contracting office in writing, I was told that the contracting office at Fort Rucker, Ala., had just made a ruling on that matter.

As of Sunday, authorized patrons may now combine family members' clothing in a bundle and turn in 12 pieces for $7.75. This will save me and many other soldiers money in laundry cost.

But I wonder, if I hadn't asked, would the person in charge have told me?

I encourage soldiers not to just take someone's word for what the policy, contract or the regulation says, but research it themselves — especially if it will save you and your family money.

TRADOC cdr congratulates post

Great news about the selection of Fort Benning as the Commander in Chief Award winner for large continental United States installations in the Army Communities of Excellence competition — a splendid reward for the untiring efforts of the entire Fort Benning team.

I know the amount of hard work involved in coming out on top in such a spirited competition.

I want to pass along my congratulations to all the great soldiers, civilians and families at Fort Benning — organizational excellence at its best.

TRADOC — Where tomorrow's victories begin!

Airborne celebrates 54th anniversary

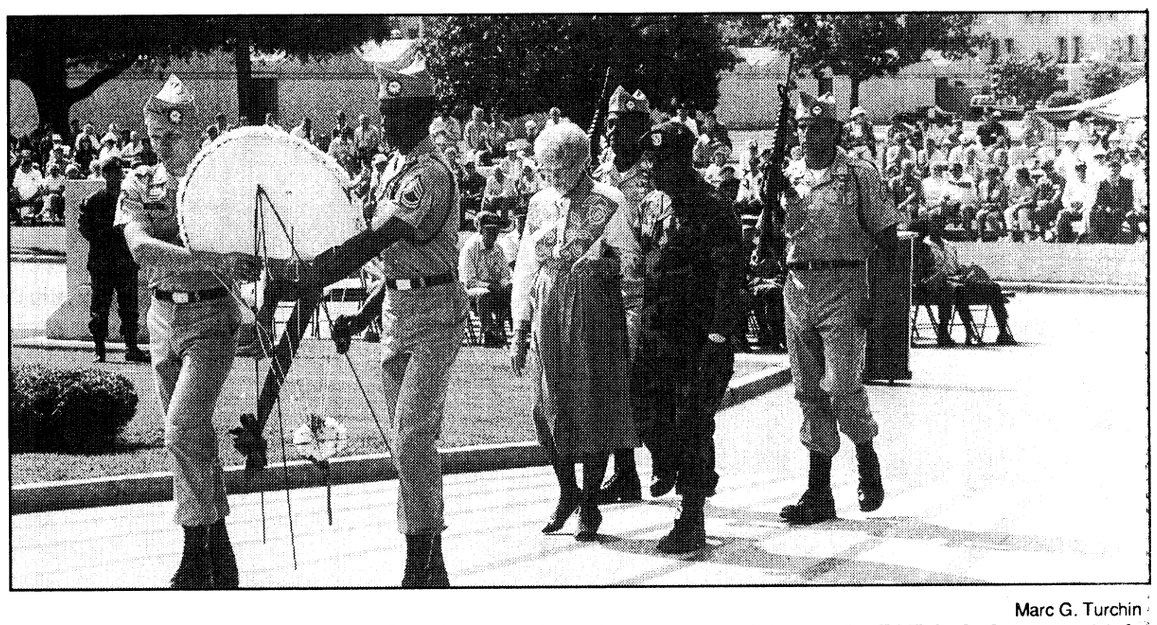
By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

The 54th anniversary of the U.S. airborne was celebrated in a ceremony at the Airborne Walk, Eubanks Field, April 28.

The "All-Americans," the "Screaming Eagles" and the "Devils in Baggy Pants" represent only three airborne units that were honored. Representatives from all the U.S. airborne units were in attendance.



"The very word airborne evokes images of courage, daring, dedication and great professionalism," said Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, Fort Benning's commanding general, while speaking to a crowd of active and retired airborne soldiers and their families.

During the ceremony, the youngest enlisted and officer airborne graduates participated in the "carry the flame" mission representing the continuing spirit of the airborne.

Command Sgt. Maj. Robert A. McCoy, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment, and Leslie Ivey, widow of one of the members of the test platoon, were escorted by the silent guard to the Airborne Memorial where they placed a wreath in the shape of a parachute in memory of the airborne soldiers who have died.

Fort Benning's 1st Battalion, 507th Infantry, hosted the event, as part of the four-day, 17th Annual Airborne Awards Festival, which took place in Atlanta.

Other festival activities included a visit to the Airborne School; an Airborne-in-Action demonstration (featuring the Silver Wings Command Exhibition Parachute Team) and a graduation ceremony of the Basic Airborne Course at Fryar Field Drop Zone.

Military courtesies

Learn when, how to face the music

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

One thing that has always accompanied military life is ceremony — the formal, traditional recognition of changes of command, promotion and other events. Even the raising and lowering of the flag involves ceremony.

According to Lt. Col. Timothy Bosse, director of Operations and Training, some soldiers and civilians on Fort Benning are not rendering the proper courtesies when they attend these ceremonies.

Command Sgt. Maj. William H. Acebes, post command sergeant major, said he has observed some uncertainty about proper courtesies among those attending ceremonies.

"Everybody's watching to see what the senior officers and noncommissioned officers are going to do," Acebes said. "If we salute, they salute, half a second behind us."

Acebes said sergeants major and NCOs who are planning training schedules should include classes on proper conduct of ceremonies as part of their professional development.

"Rendering proper courtesy is part of military tradition and history, and should be maintained," Acebes said.

The following courtesies should be observed when the National Anthem, Reveille and "To The Colors" are played:

Outdoors — At the first note of music, people on foot and in uniform will face the flag if it's in view, or face the direction of the music, and salute until the last note is played. Men not in uniform should hold their right hands over their hearts. If wearing hats, they should remove them and hold them at the left shoulder with their hands over their hearts. Women not in uniform need not remove hats, but should place their right hands over their hearts.

Indoors — All present, military and civilian, should stand at attention.

When personal honors are rendered, officers and enlisted soldiers not in formation should salute at the first note of music and hold the salute until the completion of the ruffles, flourishes and march. When indoors, they should stand at attention.

During promotion ceremonies, ribbon cuttings and other events, the phrase "attention to orders" should not be used unless an order is being published in a military formation. The narrator or announcer should say, "Headquarters, Department of the Army ..." or other command level; the audience should remain seated during the event.

Anyone having questions about the proper conduct of ceremonies can contact DOT at 545-1615.

Budget: '95 to bring civilian RIF

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning has received the fiscal 1995 budget guidance, which is less than fiscal 1994.

The budget reduction is currently being assessed to determine the impact on the civilian work force.

At this time, it appears that a small number (fewer than 50) of reductions in force will be required.

The actual number and positions affected are currently not known.

In an attempt to lessen the impact on civilian employees, Fort Benning will offer Voluntary Early Retirement Authority and the Voluntary Separation Incentive Pay.

The window for these programs will run from Monday to June 10 and only applies to retirements. Individuals approved for these programs must retire by June 30.

These programs are in place to lessen impact on civilian employees.

To be approved, the individual retiring must save one employee from involuntary separation.

RANGERS: Bragg team gets win

Garcia and Richardson received several prizes, including two H&K USP 9mm pistols, engraved with their names.

Prizes for the top finishers, including prizes for top finishers in some events, were donated the Chairborne Rangers Association, Wickham's Outdoor World, Randolph Engineering, Inc., DuPont, Ranger Joe's, Pinnacle Corporation, Firearm Training Simulator Inc. and the U.S. Army Ranger Association.

CONFERENCE: Leaders to meet

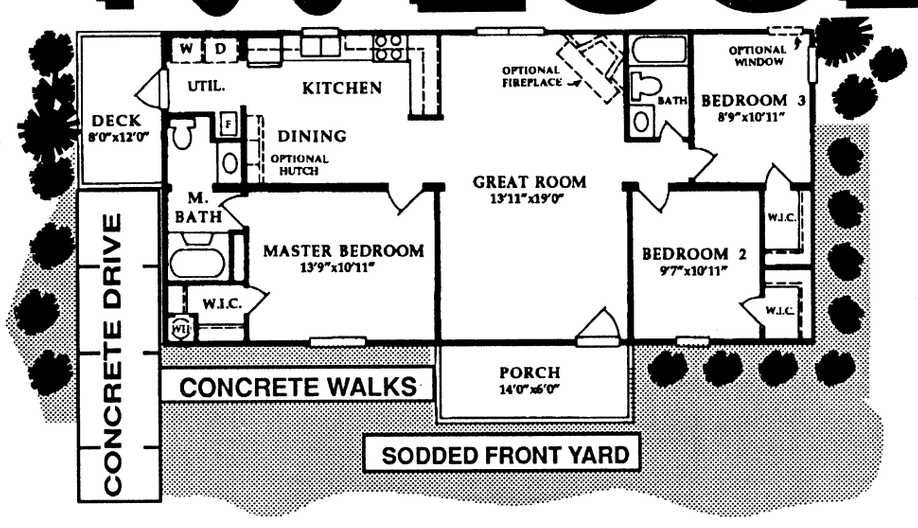
Operations in Urban Terrain site with the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry Regimental Combat Team from Fort Lewis, Wash., and Fort Benning's 29th Infantry Regiment. One airborne infantry platoon from the Canadian Airborne Regiment, Patawawa, Ontario, Canada, will act as the opposing force.

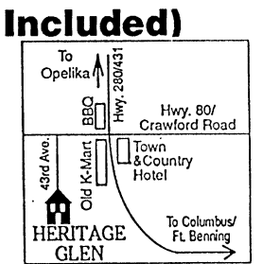
"These demonstrations will be far more than just a capabilities exercise," Hall said. "This will be a real demonstration of the newest capabilities that will allow our forces to own the night and have the decisive technological edge on the battlefield."

The scenario will also incorporate demonstrations at the Leader's Reaction Course and Red Cloud Range, where attendees will witness demonstrations of the M-2A3 Bradley Fighting Vehicle, the latest mortar systems, the explosive foxhole digger, a firing of the Javelin anti-armor weapons system, and remote sensing devices like the unmanned ground vehicle — a remote controlled intelligence gathering device.

Of the few slated classroom discussions, lessons learned in Somalia and operations other than war will be the major topics of discussion.



Conference attendees, who are expected to number more than 400, will include general officers from the active and Reserve component, as well as retired general officers and officers of other ranks.



Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr., Training and Doctrine Command commander, is expected to attend.

The conference will also include static displays on the first floor of Infantry Hall by some of the America's largest defense contractors. Weapons, vehicles and equipment that represent the cutting edge of warfighting capabilities will be displayed.

SOA hosts All-Ranks Ball

250 students, staff members, faculty attend gala affair

School of the Americas

The School of the Americas' All-Ranks Ball was April 29 at the Iron Works Trade and Convention Center in Columbus.

Approximately 250 Latin American students, SOA faculty and staff and invited guests attended the affair.

The ball is the seminal social event of the School of the America's annual calendar. It brings together officers, noncommissioned officers and junior enlisted of many nations to both showcase individual national identities with short — often humorous — speeches during the punch ceremony, and to commemorate the school's commitment to fraternal support among almost all armies and nations of North and South America.

"I have never had the experience of being associated with NCOs from other Latin American nations in an environment such as this," said Master Sgt. "Primero" Carlos Romero, an infantryman from Honduras who was assigned just two months ago to the school as an instructor in the Tactics Department.

"The school is a real 'centro de fraternidad' (center of brotherhood)," he said. "I enjoy meeting with soldiers from countries like Colombia, Ecuador and Chile, and I find I have an immediate bond with them because they are soldiers and we share being soldiers. It is like being at a music festival where many 'conjuntos' (bands) are playing and people are gathering to the conjuntos they like. Those who gather to a particular kind of music share something important in common. Here in the school, we who have gathered are those who like the sound of military music."

Romero is dressed in a short sleeved khaki uniform with the golden stripes of a first sergeant. He has spent a lot of time doing what American soldiers term "real world OPs (operations)."

"I find that the doctrine in the school here is very similar to what I am used to in my own country," he said. "So it has been easy to adjust. It is the same doctrine and the same tactics. We approach it in the same way for the same ends."

"For me, the most important lesson of the School of the Americas is that it teaches one the 'reality of the United States,'" said Lt. Col. Enrique Graff, a guest instructor from the Argentinean Gendarme who has become director of Course Three in the School of the Americas.

"My friends and associates in my country sometimes express concern about my being here when I talk to them," he said. "'But what about the drugs and the violence and all the problems?' they ask.

"And I tell them, 'Wait. Wait. The United States is not what you see on the television or read in the newspapers.' It is much more complex and diverse."

"Living with Americans, making the effort to participate in their community activities, I told them these things have enriched my family," he said. "My wife has become quite involved in the community (while she has been here) and though she is not perfect in English, she gets by pretty well. My children have participated in sports and other activities at Spencer High School. They have made friends and have learned to speak English. My son even joined ROTC — with the uniform and all the badges and all that. These things have allowed us to understand why Americans act as they do — what motivates them to do what they do and think what they think. This to me has been the most important aspect of the school."

Graff's son has graduated from Spencer High School and has returned to Argentina for university studies. The Graffs still have a son in a local high school.

"My experience at the school has been very important," said Lt. Col. Rene Santacruz, an officer from El Salvador who was probably attending his last All Ranks Ball. He is just finishing his two-year tour at the School of the Americas as a guest instructor and reminisced on his experiences.

"Being at the school has been valuable in understanding members of other armies in Latin America," he said. "I find that you in America sometimes look at Latin American countries as if they were all the same. But, even though we are of the same 'raza hispana' (Hispanic race), there are many idiosyncracies and differences country to country. In many cases, (there are) as many differences between us and our neighbors as there is between us and the United States.

However, "the most important aspect of the school is that it teaches one how to understand Americans", he said. "In order to understand an army, you must understand the people (who make up) the army. And for me, this has been the most important part of my experience here. I have come to appreciate that we do not always see things the same. What for you may seem inappropriate may for us seem irrelevant. And to us what might seem extremely important is to you sometimes of no consequence. It is living among you, having traveled and visited your cultural spots and having learned how you think that has been most important (to me)."

Santacruz will be promoted to colonel at the end of December, he said. Upon his return to El Salvador, he said he would like to command a brigade "or lead a school of (higher military) instruction."

"Those who attend this school are generally selected by the army for positions of important responsibility," he said. "Attendance at this school or serving as an instructor here is regarded very highly by our Army."

"The main thing I like most about my experience in the school has been associating with the NCOs and officers from different countries," said Capt. Luis Calvo, a Special Forces engineer officer from Costa Rica, who has been serving for 16 months as a guest instructor at the school.

William Darley

Staff Sgt. Luis Enrique Gonzalez Sepulveda, Chile, instructor, Special Operations; Sgt. 1st Class Lopes Hudson, instructor, Special Operations, Brazil; Master Sgt. Carlos Romero, Honduras, Tactics Department; Master Sgt. Ramon P. Martinez, battalion sergeant major; Command Sgt. Maj. Vincent C. Sampson, school command sergeant major, were some of the attendees at the All-Ranks Ball.

"An important aspect of my experience has been getting to know and socializing with people from different cultures," he said in perfect English.

"A very important part of my training has been done in this country," he said. He said he has taken some kind of course at least once every two years since he was commissioned either sponsored by the Defense Department or some other U.S. agencies providing military-type courses.

"What bothers me the most about my experience here is that a lot of people who criticize the school don't have any idea what even goes on over here," he said. "I was surprised when I was going through jump school just on the other side of post, that many people living in the barracks over there — our neighbors — knew practically nothing about what goes on at the school."

"This is something I think we need to work on," he said. "Projecting what it is we really do in the school and how really important it is not only for Latin America but for all America."

community care

By Ken Franklin
Martin Army Community Hospital

This week's letter is an answer instead of a question. Dr. Edna Daniels, the medical director of the Primary Medical Care of the Uniformed Services Clinic, outlines some of the new policies in the clinic.

Daniels is a board-certified family physician who previously worked at St. Francis Emergency Room. Her new project manager, retired Lt. Col. Randy Backman was previously stationed at Fort Benning.

Daniels writes:

"One of the changes we have adopted is a new appointment system. This will decrease the waiting time and give you better continuity of care. It will also help us establish each of our patients with the same doctor. Although our extended clinic hours make it impossible for you to always see the same face, our goal is for you and 'your' doctor to get to know each other. When scheduling an appointment, ask for your doctor and we will do our best to accommodate you.

Community Care Corner
by LTC Ken Franklin, MD

"We have remodeled our pharmacy area to improve access and shorten lines.

"We have had some telephone problems, which we are working on; please be patient with us. You can help by calling between 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. for your appointment, when the lines are less busy.

"Please arrive 15 minutes before your appointment time; late patients may need to be rescheduled. If you cancel an appointment, please call; this frees up time for someone else.

"If you feel you must be seen the same day, a nurse will speak with you. Based on established guidelines, the nurse will determine how quickly you must be seen. If your symptoms do not require a same-day appointment, another time will be scheduled. We ask your cooperation in this regard. For true emergencies, please go to the nearest emergency room."

According to Daniels, PRIMUS is now offering:

• Immunizations and well baby clinics on the first and third Tuesday and Thursday afternoon of each month. Well baby checks and immunizations for anyone under 14 need an appointment four or more days in advance. Parents need to come early to fill out a lead screening questionnaire.

• Diabetic classes on the second and fourth Tuesday and Thursday of each month from 8 to 9:30 a.m. Call for an appointment with nurse Leslie Childers.

"We want to provide you with outstanding care in a pleasant environment," Daniels said. "To this end, we welcome your comments, suggestions and compliments. Please call Mr. Backman or myself at 561-7066."

OCS to induct officers to its hall of fame

The 1994 Officer Candidate School Hall of Fame ceremony will be at 11 a.m. Sept. 9 in Marshall Auditorium, Building 4, Infantry Hall. This year, a dinner honoring the inductees will be the previous evening, Sept. 8.

To be eligible for induction, retired or active duty officers must have been commissioned from the Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning or Ground General School School at Fort Riley, Kan., and attained the rank of colonel or higher while serving in an active or reserve status.

Graduates of OCS who were awarded the Medal of Honor are also eligible for induction regardless of rank as well as graduates who achieved a position of prominence in state or federal government. For information, call 545-4907 or 545-4711. The cutoff date for processing nomination packets is June 15.

Italy to celebrate liberation of Rome

To celebrate the 50th anniversary of the liberation of Rome, the Italian army is staging a parachute jump in September.

Participants must attend Italian army airborne training beforehand. The training and the jump will take place Sept. 18 to 25.

The cost is $1,400 and does not include transportation (Military Airlift Command flights are available).

For information or to get an application, call Capt. John Chenery at DSN 635-6795 or (502) 798-6795.

Thrift Savings Plan sets open season

Open season for the Thrift Savings Plan will be May 15 through July 31. TSP updates and TSP-1s have been issued to all administrative offices for distribution to eligible employees. All elections must be received in civilian personnel by close of business July 31.

Rangers schedule open house July 30

The 5th Ranger Training Battalion, Dahlonega, Ga., will conduct its 29th annual Open House July 30 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The public is invited to view the numerous displays and demonstrations, along with the official opening of the new Frank D. Merrill Museum.

The public will be able to view and photograph the U.S. Army rangers in action. Demonstrations include combat raids, hand-to-hand combat, mountaineering, high altitude parachuting, helicopter operations, and snake handling.

VA office to close

The Veterans Affairs office in the Soldiers' Plaza, Building 2617, will be closed Monday through May 13. During this week, persons can call the Department of Army Veterans Affairs at (800) 827-1000.

AER campaign at 82%

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet

The Army Emergency Relief campaign has achieved 82 percent of its $180,000 goal, having collected a total of $148,100 as of April 29, according to Alphonso Deane, campaign officer.

"I am extremely proud and satisfied with the response," said Deane. "However, since we have only 10 more days to go before the campaign concludes, contributions will now be accepted until the 31st of May." AER is a nonprofit organiztion that has been serving soldiers since 1942 and last year gave $32 million in aid to individuals worldwide.

The organization provides monetary relief to soldiers needing help with food, rent, utilities, medical costs and other specified financial needs.

Donations can be made through a monthly allotment or in a lump-sum payment of cash or check.

Individuals interested in making a donation can see their unit project officer or contact AER offices at 545-2536, 545-7517, 545-4043 or 545-4357.

Recycling guidelines change

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet

Based on survey results showing initially high incidents of noncompliance in the Fort Benning recycling program, the Directorate of Public Works is re-publicizing guidelines to aid residents of quarters on post.

Numerous Fort Benning residents found recently that their household trash was not collected because refuse and recyclables were not separated properly and in accordance with previously released information.

The guidelines detail specifically the types of materials that can be recycled and the requirements (listed below) for preparing the items for collection.

"We want to encourage everyone to participate," said Richard Chancey, chief of the Construction and Inspection Branch of DPW. "The installation can see a benefit."

The recent change to a one-day-a-week trash collection and a stricter recycling program was driven by budget constraints and changes in state regulations, according to Chancey.

"We are required to decrease the volume of refuse by 25 percent of what was going into our landfill," he said.

The state recently imposed the requirement on all Georgia communities.

Several types of materials are prohibited from being collected as trash or recyclables. Tires, liquid wastes, like oil or paint and auto batteries will not be collected at any time.

Violations of the recycling guidelines will result in materials not being collected and a notice of noncompliance will be placed on the recycling container.

"We've got to have 100 percent participation," said Chancey. "The program is worthwhile and must continue to work."

How To Recycle

Post housing residents may place recyclable materials in brown plastic bins for weekly curbside pickup.

Here is a list of the items that can and cannot be placed in the bin for recycling.

• Glass: Only the following can be recycled: soft drink, beer, juice, ketchup, wine, liquor and food containers. All caps and lids are to be removed and containers are to be rinsed out. Special care should be taken to avoid breaking glass when placing it in the recycling bin. Glass will be separated by color at the curb for processing at the Materials Recovery facility.

• Cans: Only aluminum and steel cans are accepted at this time. Cans must be rinsed out. Labels may remain on the cans.

• Plastic: All plastic materials containing the Recycling Triangle (Three Chasing Arrows) may be recycled. This includes soft drink bottles and milk jugs. Caps must be removed and may be placed in the recycling bin. All containers must be rinsed out.

•Paper: All paper products except used personal type materials may be recycled. These items should be placed in brown paper bags or bundled together and tied then placed beside the recycling bin.

NOTE: incidents whereby used personal items are placed for recycling is cause for rejection.

Cardboard: Pick-up of cardboard from moving will be coordinated directly with the Materials Recovery Facility, at 544-6142. Ask for the manager or leave a message containing your address, housing area, name and phone number.

Inert Waste: Tree limbs, grass clippings and leaves will be picked up on Mondays only for all areas. Clippings and leaves should be placed in a garbage bag and tied or in a trash can with a lid.

PROCEDURES

a. Separate recyclable materials from household trash and place these materials into your recycling container. Only those materials listed as recyclables may be placed in the recycling container.

b. Place your recycling and trash containers at curbside before 7:30 a.m. on your pick-up day. Recyclable items will be collected on the same days as solid waste in all the housing areas. There is not a requirement to have a recycle container placed beside the solid waste container in order to get a pick-up; however, if recyclable items are found mixed in with the solid waste, the container will not be emptied. The trash will not be picked up until your next scheduled pick-up date and until recyclables are properly separated.

Retirement Services Office helps veterans

Retirement Services Offices

The Retirement Services Office is the focal point for providing support to 40,000 Army retirees, spouses, widows and widowers and to 25,000 sister service personnel (Air Force, Navy, Marines and Coast Guard).

Support is provided within an 82 county area to include parts of Georgia, Florida and Alabama.

The office is a "one-stop" retirement processing center. From applying for retirement though the ceremony and getting the DD Form 214 to help after retirement, the office stands ready to assist the soldier.

All retirement orders are provided by the office. Orders for enlisted soldiers are usually available within 45 minutes of application for retirement. Ceremony support is also provided. Attendees in the monthly retirement ceremony are given invitations for friends and family to attend the ceremony.

Mandatory monthly retirement briefings are held in conjunction with the Army Career and Alumni Program. Each year, more than 1,500 soldiers and spouses receive counseling on the military Survivor Benefit Plan.

During the year-long SBP Open Season, which ended in March, 1,600 retirees received individual counseling on the available options. Invitations are given to spouses to attend the monthly briefing.

Attendance has improved greatly as spouses feel that they are a part of the retirement process.

The Fiscal 1994 Military Retiree Open House was held in October and was a success. Attendance exceeded 1,000 as retirees, spouses, and surviving spouses participated in physical examinations and a health fair provided by Martin Army Community Hospital.

At the "County Fair" 25 different agencies and veterans groups assisted attendees with a wide variety of information. Special activities and demonstrations were held in conjunction with the Fort Benning "Diamond Jubilee." The Fort Benning Retiree Council provided much of the support for the open house.

Fort Benning has an active Military Retiree Council. The officer co-chairman is the vice president for Military Affairs with the Columbus Chamber of Commerce. The enlisted co-chairman is a member of the Chief of Staff of the Army's Retiree Council, which meets yearly in Alexandria, Va.

Many of the members volunteer their time at the Retirement Services Office and other agencies on post. Others are involved in the "Fitness 2000" program for retirees.

With the downsizing of the services, the need to be informed about benefits is at the top of the list. With this in mind, the RSO office has identified 2,400 soldiers assigned to Fort Benning as having 15 or more years of active service.

A preretirement orientation will be May 18 at 1 p.m. in Marshall auditorium, Building 4, Infantry Hall, during Military Appreciation Week. Speakers will inform soldiers and spouses on military benefits available to them after retirement.

Support for the soldier, retiree and spouses are provided by the RSO. Presentations on benefits are available to any unit or group, both on and off post. After death, the RSO provides an individual benefits briefing to the casualty assistance officer assigned to assist the family.

Assistance is offered to surviving spouses and family members in filing for benefits. Survivors of retirees of other services are also offered assistanee in filing claim for benefits.

- Information on other services available to guests, such as cribs, minibars, refrigerators, microwaves and room service.
- Credit cards accepted by the lodging operation.
- Availability of nonsmoking rooms.

The next time you travel, call (800) GO-ARMY-1, where one call does it all for your lodging needs.

ACAP to sponsor workshop May 19

Army Career and Alumni Program

A seminar about federal employment will be May 19 from 9 to 11 a.m. in Infantry Hall, Classroom 30.

Sponsored by the Army Career and Alumni Program and the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, the seminar is designed to provide information on the opportunities of federal employment with primary emphasis on Fort Benning.

Available to soldiers who are retiring from the military and family members, the seminar will cover the basics of how the federal employment system functions, the various agencies, where to find job announcements and veteran's preference. Participants will be given a detailed explanation of the federal employment application, Standard Form 171.

James Fleming, a 20-year veteran of the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, and Cathy Murray, an instructor with Conwal Inc., will be available to answer questions.

Murray assists the Georgia Department of Labor with the ACAP Transition Assistance Program workshop, and she conducts personal assessments Thursday and Friday of each week from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the ACAP office in Soldiers' Plaza. The assessments include instruction in the use of an automated Standard Form 171.

To obtain an appointment, call 545-7009, 545-4913 or 545-4892 or stop by Building 2617 in Soldiers' Plaza.

Class covers steps of car buying

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

Looking for a new or used car? Scared that the dealers are going to take all your money? Having anxieties about the interest rates charged by the 'buy here-pay here' places in town? These are concerns of people shopping for new means of transportation.

A class on how to deal with car dealers was April 26 at the National Infantry Museum and was presented by TIC Federal Credit Union.

"How can I (the buyer) get a car and not feel like I've been taken, " asked J. Doug Putnam, vice president of TIC Federal Credit Union and class lecturer, "That is what this class is going to cover."

Putnam begins the class by asking questions of someone in the audience in order to prove a point, listen to what you are being told.

From there Putnam dives deep into the act of car buying.

He started by defining terms he will be using throughout the class. Terms such as fees, dealer add-ons, warranties, hold backs and the manufacturers suggested retail price.

After that, Putnam discussed the salesperson point of view.

"The salesperson is not the bad he bad guy," Putnam said.

Putnam pointed out that the salesperson is just a "go between guy" for the sales manager and the buyer. He (the salesperson) doesn't set the prices of the car and technically is unemployed between car sales.

Another important thing to know when buying a car, Putnam said, is to know yourself.

You should know what kind of automobile you want, what kind you need and what kind you can afford. The three don't always go together.

For example, there is a difference between wanting a Jaguar and being able to afford a Jaguar, Putnam said.

"I strongly recommend researching the car you want to buy, Putnam said.

Places to look for information are Consumer Reports and Motor Trend magazines.

Also, talk to owners of the same model auto and research the resale value of the car you are interested in purchasing.

Remember to take what the car sales person says with a grain of salt.

"They'll tell you that no one has ever had trouble with the cars they sell, they never have any repair problems," Putnam said.

Instead of using your car as a trade in, Putnam said to try and sell your car on your own.

By selling your vehicle on your own, you are likely to get more for your car. Dealers can only give you trade in value, which is lower than the car's real worth.

Then after you sell your car, shop around for the right financing.

Putnam said the best way to get a car is to already know how much you can finance. By getting pre-approved for a car loan, you know how much you can spend. It also lets the salesperson know that you are a serious buyer.

"I felt the class was pretty interesting," said Sgt. Maj. Harvey L. Milner, garrison sergeant major.

"(The class) dealt with a lot of subjects that soldiers get caught up in. It brought out some of the hidden costs in buying a car."

The class can be offered to individual units if requested. Putnam said all he needs is a place to hold the class and electricity.

For more information on getting the class for your unit, contact Putnam at TIC Federal Credit Union at 682-0830.

Georgia superintendent names Dexter a school of EXCELLENCE

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

Dexter School's celebration as a Georgia School of Excellence was highlighted Tuesday by remarks about teamwork from Fort Benning Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White.

White, one of several speakers to emphasize the importance of working together toward tomorrow, said, "Fort Benning is all about excellence" as he stood next to the School of Excellence flag displayed for the first time.

Presented to Fort Benning officials in April by Gov. Zell Miller and Dr. Werner Rogers, state superintendent of school , the flag represents Dexter's commitment to a program of excellence through leadership, quality of teaching and curriculum, student environment, parent and community support and organizational vitality.

"All together as a team, we proved we could be world champs," said White while discussing Dexter School as well as Fort Benning's recent award as the best Army installation in the world.

"It's everyone working together as a team. That's what made Dexter School one of the top schools in Georgia," he said, citing effective team work between Dr. Rolla Baumgartner, superintendent of post schools, Vicki Rogers, principal, the School Board and Dexter parents and students.

Following remarks by the commanding general as well as their principal, students in the third, fourth and fifth grades contributed their own thoughts about the Dexter School family.

"Dexter feels like home to me," said fourth-grader Danielle Parks, while fifth-grader Josh Forrester added, "It gets better every year. I love this place."

Fifth-graders also joined with the Faith Middle School band for a musical flag installation.

Other highlights included Glenn Hughes, assistant principal at Faith Middle School who sang "God Bless the U.S.A.," and the school song "Walking Together toward Tomorrow," directed by Cy Dietrich, music teacher.

Kindergartners and first-graders led the pledge of allegiance, while second-graders joined their principal in closing the ceremony honoring their school.

Brig. Gen. Jack Nix, assistant commandant, visited the school earlier in the day to extend personal congratulations for the prestigious award, presented to 31 schools across the state of Georgia

Also attending the ceremony were Col. Gregory Camp, School Board president and deputy assistant commandant U.S. Army Infantry School, as well as parents, school administrators, principals and staff from the seven schools around post.

Sixth-grader gives drugs 'bad rap'

By Jerrie Macintire
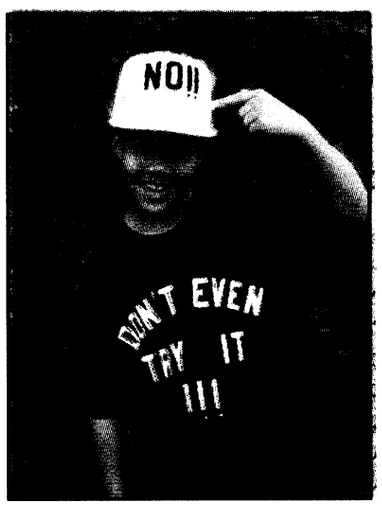
Special to The Bayonet ©



Fort Benning sixth-grader Walter Watkins III is hitting the road with his original rap song about the dangers of drugs.

Watkins, who first performed "If Drugs Could Talk" at Faith Middle School during a drug abuse awareness assembly, has performed for audiences during Black History Month and is slated to present his song at the state capitol building in Atlanta in June as part of a graduation of Drug Abuse Resistance Education.

Watkins has enhanced his song since first creating it in the fourth grade; he has choreographed various moves with professional rapper Vince Goffney and is currently adding background music.

Writing rap songs is nothing new to this 12-year-old. Watkins, who enjoys the beat of rap but appreciates all different types of music, won acclaim for his educational song, "Read My Rap," presented in third grade in Kentucky. Watkins performed the rap as part of a program highlighting reading and earned second place in the contest.

Song writing is part of the Watkins' family tradition. The youngster has long followed his mother and grandfather in their careers as singers and songwriters.

Watkins

Watkins said he was inspired to pen "If Drugs Could Talk" because of the problems associated with drug abuse. "It's just the wrong thing to do," he said. His lyrics reflect his feelings on the danger of drugs.

Watkins, who mailed his song to Hillary Rodham Clinton, received a personal reply from the first lady thanking him for his stand against drug abuse.

Watkins is the son of Staff Sgt. Walter Watkins Jr. and Yvonne Denise Watkins of Custer Terrace.

Post housing areas start new program, seek mayors

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

In an effort to reward children who demonstrate conscientious behavior, the mayors and vice mayors of post housing areas implemented a program beginning Sunday to recognize good citizenship.

Children "caught being good" will receive a prize and a certificate from the mayor of their housing area, according to Marla Jewell, president of the Community Life Mayor's Association and mayor of Indianhead Terrace.

Each month, a list of the children recognized by mayors will be printed in The Bayonet.

Examples of "caught being good" include such behaviors as wearing a bike helmet, helping pick up litter, looking both ways when crossing a street and taking turns at the playground.

To nominate a child for recognition, contact the mayor of the child's housing area or contact the nearest community life office.

Mayors are Regina Posavec, Bouton Heights and Davis Hill; Lynnette Blakeney, West Main Post; and Marla Jewell, Indianhead Terrace.

Mayoral openings available

Post housing areas have several appointments available for mayors and vice mayors, positions that allow individuals a voice in community life activities and programs.

Mayor and vice mayor positions are open for the following housing areas: McGraw Manor, East Main Post and Custer Terrace (including Upatoi Terrace and Battle Park Homes).

"These positions provide lots of opportunities to voice opinions and to reach the decision makers," said Jewell, president of the Community Life Mayor's Association .

For example, mayors and vice mayors help make budgetary decisions on such items as playground equipment, they attend monthly meetings with the garrison commander and quarterly meetings of the Commanding General's Advisory Council.

They also attend council meetings for the Post Exchange and Martin Army Community Hospital.

Housing area mayors were involved in the implementation of the "Community Cop" program in which the Military Police conduct regular patrol beats in the same housing area.

To apply for a position, contact Jewell at 689-3629.

Baseball great to visit post Commissary

By Cathy E. Alston.
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Military personnel and their families will have the opportunity to meet Bobby Thomson when he arrives at Fort Benning Thursday.

Thomson will be at the Commissary between 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. to sign autographs for Commissary patrons and their families.

Thomson is best known for his "Shot Heard 'Round the World," the home run hit that capped New York's historic comeback to win the National League pennant during the 1951 World Series. His career spans two decades whose game stats include, 1,779 games with an average of .270, 1,705 hits, 264 home runs 1,026 runs batted in and 38 stolen bases.

Thomson is appearing courtesy of Campbell Soup Company in conjunction with its Legends of Baseball Tour Sweepstakes.

"The worldwide autograph sessions will provide not only a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity for patrons to meet a baseball legend, but also a convenient opportunity to enter the Sweepstakes," said Fran DiRubbo, director of Military Sales and Marketing for Campbell Soup Company.

There will be entry forms available at the Commissary.

The winner will be awarded an American Family cruise for two hosted by two Major League Baseball legends.

White School 'bubbles' with creative learning

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

Blowing bubbles has long been a favorite childhood pastime, but teachers at White School have found a way to make it educational as well as fun.

First-grade teachers kicked off a cross-curricular unit on bubbles Monday with a foamy fair featuring eight stations and a variety of activities including creating tiny bubbles through a sieve to making giant bubbles as large as some children.

The bubble activity is just one more way White School teachers educate through hands-on exercises, according to Janet Wynn, principal.

"Students learn by hands-on activities," agreed Cynthia Kenimer, who created the curriculum along with other first-grade teachers Janie Pride and Ann Lucas.

The educators said they hope to teach such disciplines as language arts, math and science.

"Students learn by these kinds of activities," Kenimer said. "Instead of listening to lectures, they can experiment with liquids and gases."

In addition to seeing and feeling the differences in liquids and gases, students will also use science to predict results of various bubble experiments.

While testing their hypothesis, students will either prove or disprove hypothesis, and they will use language arts skills in the process, she said.

In addition, math skills are necessary to chart the various experiment results and during the bubble mixing phase.

Parents joining children for the bubble fair received a clear idea of the topics planned for the next few weeks, according to Kenimer.

By making learning activities fun, children get practical experience with applying math, science and language arts to daily activities, Kenimer said.

2 Benning staffers attend university women's meet

Columbus Branch of the American Association of University Women

Two Fort Benning women recently attended the American Association of University Women's annual state convention in Valdosta, Ga.

Lavonda Forbes, a computer systems programmer with the Directorate of Information Management, and Pat Myres, an editorial clerk in the Public Affairs Office, attended the convention along with Dr. Nemia Chai, June Livesey and Susie Rheault of Columbus.

The Columbus Branch of the American Association of University Women took top honors in several state competitions.

At the convention, the Columbus AAUW was the only branch in Georgia to receive seven stars in the state five-star Competition.

The chapter won first place in creativity in membership recruitment, first place in membership and first for the largest percentage increase in educational foundation giving.

Columbus member Rheault was presented with the first ever AAUW of Georgia 1994 Emerging Leader Award.

Rheault, a graduate of Columbus College, is currently serving as president-elect of the Columbus Branch and has served as the 1992-93 director of the Daniel Dreamers (an AAUW organization for preteen and teen girls).

She has also published the "Daniel Dreamers" Resource Directory (1991), a list of agencies and organizations that can help young girls with specific needs and problems.

Rheault has been "in the middle" of planning and producing the Columbus AAUW teen conferences for the past three years and has also represented the AAUW at community meetings and on local television talk shows. She is employed with the Georgia Department of Families and Children Service.

AAUW members from the Columbus area joined members from across Georgia to renew their commitment to achieving gender equity for women and girls in education, fighting sexual harassment in schools and the work place, and reproductive choice.

The Columbus Branch of the American Association of University Women is holding its annual membership luncheon, "A Celebration of Success," May 21, from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

In an effort to expand local representation, the branch invites any woman with a college degree from Fort Benning to the luncheon.

Founded in 1881, the AAUW is the oldest and largest national organization working for the advancement of women with branches in every state.

AAUW promotes equity for women, education, long-term self-development, and promotes positive societal changes.

Membership is not by invitation and is open to all graduates who hold a baccalaureate or higher degree from a accredited educational institution.

Student affiliate membership is available for women currently attending an accredited college or university. For more information or luncheon reservations, call Chai at 568-2054 or 327-0678.

Armed forces wrestlers pin down opposition

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The U.S. Armed Forces Wrestling Team captured the National Greco-Roman Wrestling team championship April 20 through 24 at Las Vegas, Nev., with a total point score of 160 points. The closest competition came from the Sunkist Kids team with 114 points.

The Army led the scoring with 90 points, while the Marine Corps had 39, the Navy, 21, and the Air Force, 10. The Army had five wrestlers in the finals along with team Sunkist.

Three-time national champion Derrick Waldroup of the Army won his fourth title in nine years at 198 pounds despite wrestling with a hernia and a ripped abductor muscle.

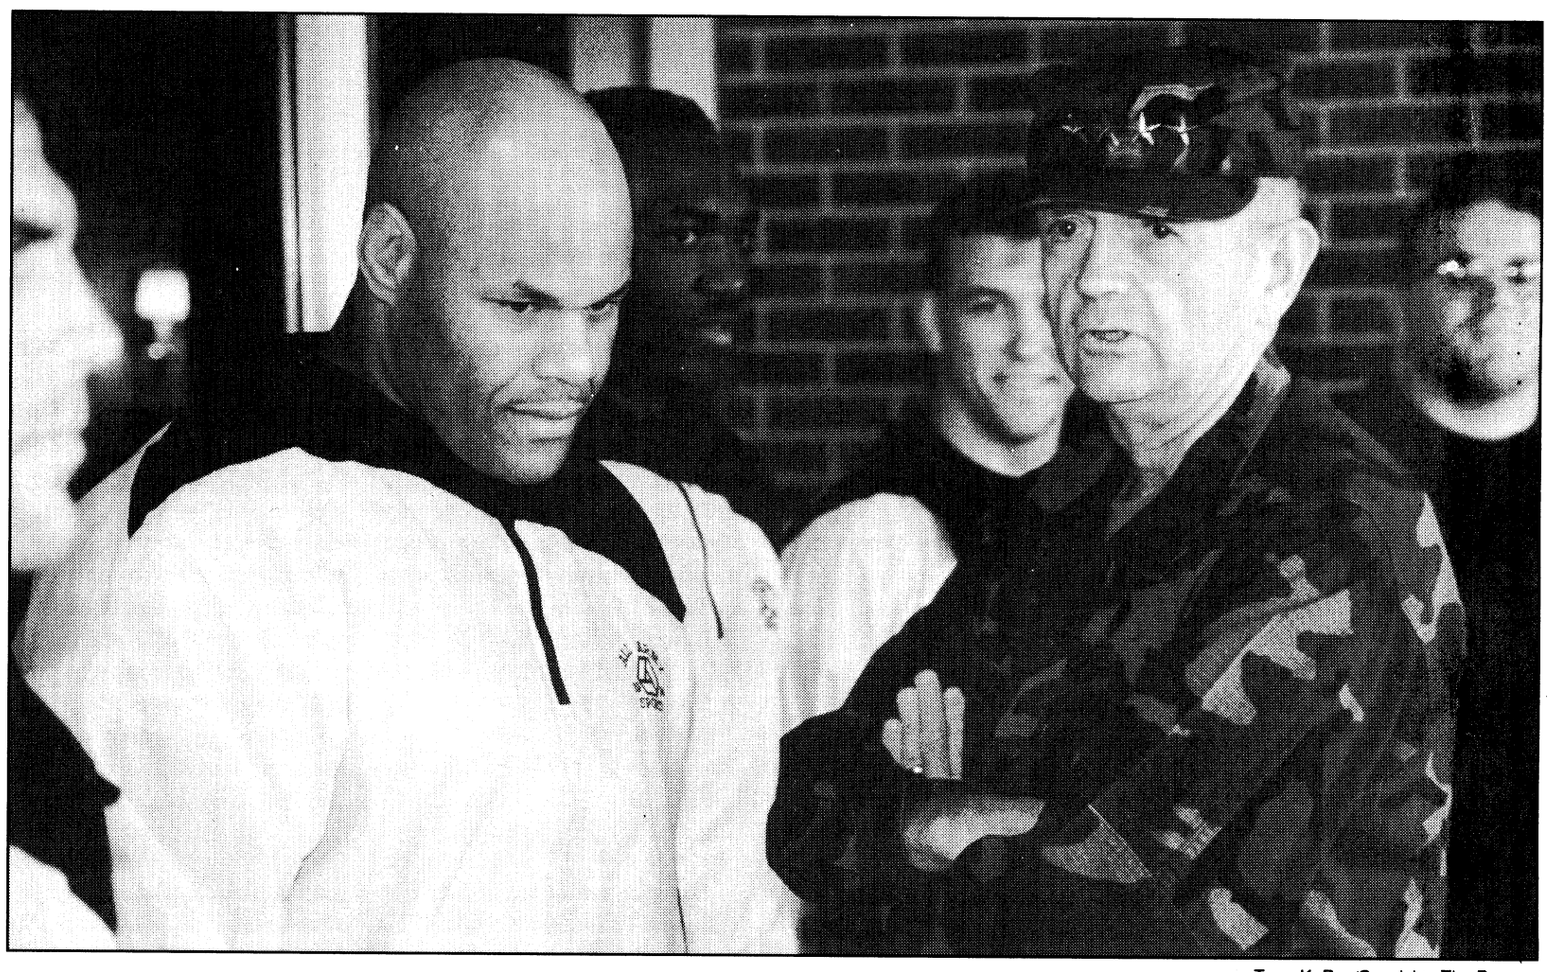
"If it had not been for Doctor Kevin P. Murphy (Martin Army Community Hospital), I would not have made it through the tournament," said Waldroup. "This was one of the toughest competitions at the nationals that I have been involved in. Now I hope to be ready for the U.S. World Team Trials June 13 through 15 at LaCrosse, Wisconsin."

Defending national champion Shon Lewis also of the All Army Wrestling Team successfully defended his crown at the 136.5-pound weight class for the second straight year.

"This tournament beat me up," said Lewis. "I had to wrestle one of our own guys (Giles Almeida) and in doing so, I tore the medial collateral ligament of my knee and I thought I was done for the tournament.

"But Doctor Murphy was able to keep me on my feet and in my third match I busted my left eye and took five stitches," he added. "It was a tough weekend."

The top eight wrestlers in each weight class qualified for the U.S. World Team Trials in June, and the winners will qualify for the 1994 World Team Championships in Finland and the 1995 Pan American Games.



Twelve other Army wrestlers qualified for the U.S. World Team trials along with Waldroup and Lewis, here they are by weight class and place.

105.5 pounds
Rafeal Mejia, seventh
125.5 pounds
Anthony Amado, second (1988 Olympian)
Jason Tolbert, fifth, (Tolbert won the University Nationals April 8.)
136.5 pounds
Shon Lewis, first
Giles Almedia, eighth
149.5 pounds
Rodney Smith, second, (1992 Olympic Bronze Medal winner)
163.5 pounds
Keith Sieracki, fifth, (Sieracki also won At University Nationals April 8.)
Kenny Owens, seventh
180.5 pounds
E.J. Pasteur, seventh
198 pounds
Derrick Waldroup, first
220 pounds
Jerry Jackson, second
Alex Porcelli, seventh
286 pounds
Jeffery Green, sixth
Edward Mitchell, seventh.

All Army Wrestling Coach Sgt. 1st Class Tony Thomas was also honored at the tournament by being named the 1993 U.S. Wrestling Association Greco-Roman Coach of the Year.

The next competition for the Army will be the Concord International at Concord, Calif., May 22 through 30.

This competition will feature teams from Italy, Japan, Cuba, France, Sweden and two teams from the Soviet Republics.

Post golfers hit links for Law Day, spring

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The eighth annual Law Day Golf Tournament, which was April 29 at Follow Me Golf Course, drew 104 players to the Lakeside Course on a payday activities afternoon.

Slats Henderson, Nick Lozenich, Dan Mims and Scott Manderville beat out Matt Margotta, Jerry White, Walter Wojdakowski and Galen Jackman along with the team of George Binns, Roy Rogerson, Victor Tireman and Larry Shears for the top spot with a round of 63.

The other two teams also finished with rounds of 63 but Henderson's team had the low score on the back nine for the tie breaker. Margotta's team finished in the second spot with Binn's team third.

A tie breaker was used for the fourth- and fifth-place teams with James Crockert, David Flo, Firman Sowers and Paul Anderson beating out Marc Calder, Jim Kobeck, Mike Ryan and Charlie Bynem. Both teams finished with a score of 64..

The sixth and final spot went to the team of Fred Swope, Harry Brown, James Meister and David Hirsch with a score of 65.

"We had a beautiful day for golf," said George Cliff, tournament coordinator. "Participation for the tournament was excellent and the golfers had a good time."

Close-to-the-hole winners were Bob Malinowski on No. 6, Robert Weekly on No. 8, Vada King on No. 13 and Henderson on No. 16.

Volleyball down to final four

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The 1994 Intramural Volleyball Tournament is down to the final four teams, after Monday night's action at Audie Murphy Fitness Center.

Headquarters Services Company, 43rd Engineer Battalion, moved up in the loser's bracket with a 2-0, 2-0 forfeit and elimination of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, in the first matchup of the night.

In the second tilt, the School of the Americas downed the U.S. Army Medical Department Activity 16-14 and 15-0 to jump into the finals Wednesday night, MEDDAC will move to the loser's bracket.

The final matchup of the evening saw 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Training Brigade, slip past the 598th Maintenance Company, 15-12 and 15-9, eliminating the 598th from the tournament.

In Tuesday night action at Audie Murphy Fitness Center, Headquarters Services Company, 43rd Engineers, nipped 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Training Brigade, in a three-game set, losing the first game 17-15, then winning the next two 16-14 and 15-8.

HSC then went up against MEDDAC for the final spot in the championship against the School of the Americas Wednesday and were bounced from the tournament 15-10 and 15-12, setting up a rematch between MEDDAC and SOA for the title.

FESTIVAL OF RUNNING

5k, 10k, fun run set for May 14

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The 1994 Officers' Wives' Club Festival of Running is just around the corner. May 14 is the day, and Infantry Hall is the place to be. This year's events include a 10 and 5K run as well as a one-mile fun run.

"This is one of the ways we raise funds for our many projects," said Dusty Severn, chairwoman of the event. "The funds provide needed monies to a number of post and tri-community charities such as the Salvation Army, the Boy and Girl Scouts of America and Santa's Castle, to name a few."

Activities are set to get under way at 8 a.m. with the 5K race. The 10K run will begin at 9 a.m., to be followed by the one-mile fun run at 10:30.

Preregistration will run through Monday, with a cost of $10. After Monday, the cost is $12.

Registration forms can be picked up at the OWC Office, Building 229, at the corner of Ingersoll Street and Dixie Road. The office is open Monday through Thursday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Race packets, including T-shirts, may be picked up May 13 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Race day registration and check-in will be from 6:30 p.m. until 30 minutes before the event entered. For information, call 687-3537 or 683-4321.

Youth Activities Orioles wash Red Sox 13 to 4

By Dan Callahan
Orioles coach

The Orioles' bats were hot as they beat the Red Soxs 13 to 4 Saturday at Fort Benning's Norton Field. The two teams are part of the Fort Benning Youth Activities 13-to 15-year-old Baseball League.

The first Soxs batter struckout and was followed by Marlon Taylor who made contact but could not beat the throw to first. The third batter also struck out and the Orioles came to bat.

Orioles Matt Kapinos was walked, and he managed to steal second and third.

Ty Mason singled, but Kapinos was picked off coming home by a good play from Sox's pitcher Casey Brennan to catcher Mike Hawrylak.

The next batter struck out and Jeremy Callahan followed with a single, but the Soxs made a play on the runner going to third for the final out of the inning.

In the second, the Soxs got on the board when Jed Forrester was hit by a pitch and stole second.

Hawrylak hit to advance Forrester to third but was put out at first. Matt Figley sacrificed for a run batted in bringing Forrester in for the first score of the game. The Soxs were held to one when the next batter struckout.

The Orioles tied the score when Josh Trotter hit a double and stole third and home.

The next Oriole battlestruck out followed by John Trotter who hit a fly ball that was caught by Sox's second baseman Damien Orton for the second out.

The Orioles had a chance to go ahead when Josephine Lore'e walked and stole second. They were stopped cold when Sox's pitcher Brennan struckout the next batter for the third out.

The Red Soxs couldn't get going in the third. The Orioles pitcher Josh Trotter struck out two and threw one out at first to retire all three batters.

The Orioles' bats were hot when they came to the plate. Kapinos doubled and stole third. Mason also doubled and hit Kapinos in to put the Orioles ahead. Mason stole third and Tony Dupree walked and stole second.

Callahan came out to hit the third double of the inning and score both Mason and Dupree. Callahan stole third and home to bring the score to 5 to 1. Josh Trotter added one more when he singled, stole second, third, and home.

The Red Sox put the next two Orioles out with a strikeout and John Trotter's fly ball to second. Lore got on first with a walk but was left on first when Ceylona Chamberlain hit a fly ball to Sox's second baseman Orton for the third out.

The Red Soxs put one more on the scoreboard in the fourth.

Charles Boehm hit a single and stole second and third and was driven in by Forrester's sacrifice. Forrester almost beat the throw to first as Oriole first baseman Michael Bills had to make a diving stretch and barely kept his toe on the base.

Hawrylak hit a smash to short but could not beat the throw to first to end the Red Sox fourth.

The Oriole's bats had not cooled down when they came to bat in the bottom of the fourth. Kapinos singled and stole second, then was advanced to third with Bills double.

Daniel Bonilla walked to first followed by Callahan who hit a double driving in both Kapinos and Bills. Josh Trotter singled to drive in Callahan and Dupree.

Trotter stole second, third, and home as Caleb Preston walked and also stole second, third and home.

Hector Rodriguez got on base with a walk and stole second. The Sox's defense stopped the drive as Sox's pitcher Brennan struck out two and catcher Hawrylak picked off a runner trying to steal third.

Red Sox's batters had no trouble getting on base in the fifth but were caught off guard by the throwing accuracy of Oriole catcher Kapinos.

Figley and Brennan both got on base by a single but were picked off by Kapinos and shortstop Callahan trying to steal second. Pete Moreno got on first with a walk but was left on base as Trotter struckout the next Red Sox for the third out.

It looked like it was going to be another long inning for the Sox when Oriole batter Bills hit an inside-the-park home run past the rightfielder. Bonilla got on with a walk and stole second and third but was left on base as the Sox's defense shut down the drive.

Taylor added another run for the Sox as he walked and stole second and third and scored on Forrester's single. Forrester stole second and third giving the Sox's another scoring chance. But, Hawrylak hit a hard ground ball to third baseman Bonilla who came up with the ball and threw out the runner at home.

The Orioles were stopped cold in the bottom of the sixth as Kiki Mister hit to shortstop Boehm but was thrown out. Rodriguez walked but was left on base as Taylor struck out one and threw another out at first.

The Red Sox were not about to give in and came back fighting in the top of the seventh. Figley singled and stole second, third and home.

Brennan walked and stole second and third and was ready to add one more to their score, but the Oriole pitcher ended their hopes when he struck out the next three Red Sox to end the game with a final score of 13 to 4.

SUPER SOLDIERS BATTLE TO BE THE BEST RANGER

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

The Best Ranger Competition is over for another year. The heavyweight championship of heavy-duty soldiers has come and gone, leaving the competitors with some lingering aches and bruises and leaving the spectators with a freshly renewed sense of awe.

"I'm constantly amazed at these men," said Col. Michael V. Church, Ranger Training Brigade commander. "When you see these guys after the (20-mile) road march, or at 3 a.m. at the night land navigation, you wonder how they can go on. Then, 30 minutes later, they act like they haven't done anything. They're phenomenal."

The competition, too, is phenomenal. Day one started April 29 at 6:30 a.m. with a physical training test, continued through rifle range, spot jump and canoe events, and concluded with a road march from 8 p.m. to 2 a.m. Saturday.

The schedule allowed a half-hour break before day two started with the night ranger stakes, followed by the day ranger stakes, and wrapped up with night land navigation from 8:30 p.m. to 8:30 a.m. Sunday.

The final day started with the Darby Queen obstacle course, continued through a water confidence test, the helocast swim, and the final event, the 2.7- mile buddy run.

Part of what kept the competitiors going may have been the support and encouragement of their friends and families. During some events, there was barely enough room for teams to move through the throngs of well-wishers.

Jacqueline Dotson, who videotaped her husband, Staff Sgt. Timothy Dotson of the 6th Ranger Training Battalion, throughout the competition, was drooping a bit by the second day as she also kept up with their 2-year-old son, Timothy.

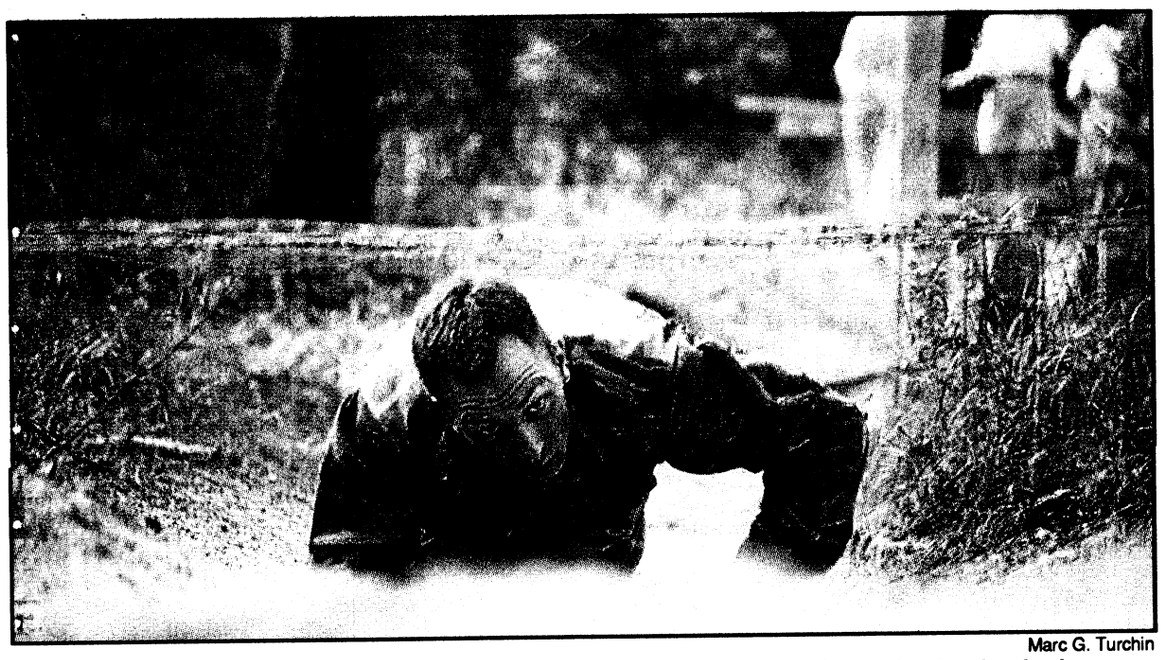
"If I'm tired, I know they (the team) are smoked," she said. "But he's headstrong — if it kills him, he'll finish it."

Dotson said her husband's buddy helped him through, as well. "The team was always motivated and hung together," she said.

Staff Sgt. John Breach and his partner, Staff Sgt. Eric Riley, both of the 82nd Airborne Division, were in their second and third year, respectively, of the competition.

"That 9mm pistol keeps bringing us back," Breach said. "We want to see how we measure up against the rest of the world."

Capt. Edward Garcia, part of this year's winning 82nd Airborne Division team that also included 1st Lt. Michael Richardson, placed sixth in the competition last year with another partner.



"It's finally starting to sink in," he said the day of the awards ceremony. "It feels great."

Garcia's plans now, he said, are to take the company command he's been "putting off" to train for the competition. "It's time to put my expertise to work for the Army," he said.

TRADOC uses parafoils, hang gliders to improve aerial resupply

TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — Training and Doctrine Command is turning to parafoils and hang gliders to improve accuracy and security of aerial resupply.

The project is managed by the Early Entry Lethality and Survivability Battle Laboratory. EELS is one of six battle labs in the command working to prepare the Army for future battlefields. The EELS mission is to enhance the capabilities of forces inserted into a combat arena to inflict great damage on an enemy while minimizing casualties.

"Conventional airdrop as it is now is at the mercy of the winds," said Ken Foley, senior requirements analyst with EELS.

The most accurate airdrop is to come in fast and at low altitude and drop the load right over the drop zone. In a high-threat environment, that's very risky for aircrews."

Parafoils or gliders, equipped with guidance systems connected to Global Positioning Satellites, will increase the safety factor as well as accuracy of the drop.

"Aircraft can release cargo on either parafoils or gliders from 25,000 feet altitude 10 to 40 miles away from the drop zone," Foley said.

As the cargo descends, an onboard guidance system picks up the GPS signal. Ground coordinates have been loaded into the system while it was in the aircraft. The system activates servos to guide the parafoil or glider to each navigational reference point on the way to the drop zone.

"In demonstrations, parafoils capable of carrying 1,200 pounds are routinely hitting the ground within 100 meters of the target," Foley said.

Yuma (Ariz.) Proving Ground. Parafoils can carry greater weights, but gliders can maneuver more easily against winds.

A large-capacity parafoil is equipped with a braking parachute and reefing system. The chute slows the drop as the foil is gradually extended, or reefed, to its full size. If the foil opened immediately, forces created by dropping 20 tons from 25,000 feet would destroy it.

"When you have a covert force deployed, these systems will be ideal resupply methods, Foley said.

Drops can be done at night. Parafoils and gliders have low radar signatures, so they can drop undetected. Loads detectable by radar can be covered with newly created stealth blankets.

Cargo aircraft do not have to fly in large formations as is now required for sizable airdrops. Since planes can be a long distance from the drop zone, locations of covert teams will not be compromised.

A possible disadvantage to an onboard GPS guidance system is that it requires four satellites on which to orient. Loss of signal from even one satellite will make it useless.

Foley said an internal navigation system could eliminate reliance on satellites. However, INS packages cost more.

"The extra cost would be justified when you've got an isolated, covert force out there and their survival depends on being resupplied," he said.

A beacon guidance system has been tested, as well. Under ideal conditions, a beacon ensures an accurate drop. The drawback is that radio transmissions can throw it off course. The enemy can also detect a ground team's beacon.

The capability of the SPS guidance system was shown in a recent demonstration at Fort Bragg, N.C. A parafoil with a 1,200-pound load was released from a C-130 "Provider" at 8,000 feet. At the same time paratroopers also using parafoils exited another aircraft. Wind speed at ground level was 10 knots gusting to 50 knots. The jumpers were blown completely off course, but not the cargo.

"The GPS was so good, it made adjustments ahead of time and hit within 100 meters of its target, even with the wind," Foley said.

75th rangers test new night vision sets

By Joe Davies
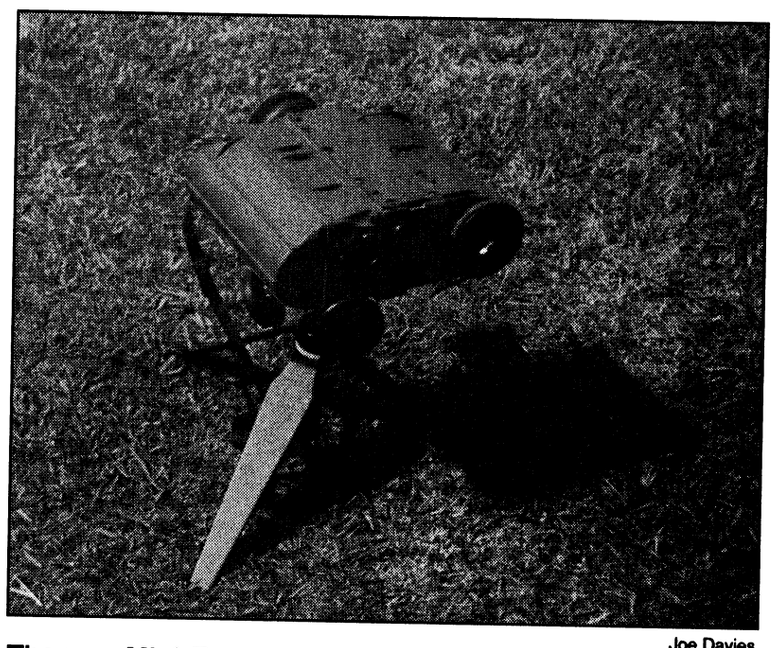
Directorate of Combat Development

Members of the 75th Ranger Regiment are the first in the Army to receive the new Mini-Eyesafe Laser Infrared Observation Sets, or MELIOS.

Representatives of the Project Manager, Night Vision ElectroOptics, Fort Belvoir, Va., issued the new night vision equipment to the 75th rangers April 27. Additional sets will be issued to rangers located at Hunter Army Airfield, Savannah, Ga., and Fort Lewis, Wash.

Continued fielding will take place over the next two years until all systems are fielded.



The MELIOS, AN/PVS-6, is a lightweight (4 pounds, 2 ounces), handheld, manportable distance measuring system. The device is approximately the size and shape of a pair of binoculars, and will provide accurate ranges to targets at distances between 50 and 9,995 meters with a plus 5 meter accuracy.

The MELIOS will be employed worldwide in fire planning and adjustment, land navigation, reconnaissance, observation, information collection and other related activities requiring rapid, accurate range and direction information.

A Compass/Vertical Angle Measurement module is being developed for integration into the MELIOS at a later date. The C/VAM, operated in conjunction with the MELIOS, will be used by individual soldiers to accurately determine the direction and elevation of the lased target). The C/VAM module is an electronic measuring device that is capable of measuring the Earth's magnetic field at a specific location within plus 10 mills.

Power and signal controls are fed from the MELIOS to C/VAM, and azimuth and elevation readings are returned to the MELIOS to be displayed within the MELIOS eyepiece.

The MELIOS and the MELIOS with C/VAM will be a combat multiplier for combat and combat support units and will enhance their operational effectiveness on the modern battlefield. Additionally, with its eyesafe laser capability, MELIOS significantly enhances training opportunities over currently fielded laser range finders.

Chief of chaplains visits Fort Benning

By Jacqueline Feagin
USAIC Chaplains' Office

The chief of Army chaplains was the guest speaker at the Fort Benning Command Prayer Breakfast April 28.

Chaplain (Maj. Gen.) Matthew A. Zimmerman, on his last official visit to Fort Benning, reminded commanders that "Bad things happen when good people refuse to speak up."

He spoke of all the wrongs that are going on in society today and encouraged the "good people to speak up."

Zimmerman plans to retire in August.

"I have seen many good changes in the Army in my 27 years," he said. "The quality of life for soldiers has been a welcome change. The intellectual, social and moral qualities of the soldier has increased greatly."

He said in the past six years, commanders are turning more to chaplains for guidance on leadership, suicide prevention and the the quality of life.

The chaplains and assistants have followed the Unit Ministry Team Doctrine that has created a better ministry.

Right now Zimmerman said he has no definite plan on what he plans to do after retirement, although he said he plans to continue ministering or do some administrative work.

Bible is specific about wife's responsibility in family

By Roger D. Criner
USAIC Chaplains' Office

No job in the Army takes more physical, mental, social, emotional and spiritual strength than being a good Army wife and mother.

The wife has a part in the family if it is to be in a harmony of joy, peace and happiness. She holds in her hands precious interests, sacred destinies and holy responsibilities.

The growth of the family spiritually rests also upon her shoulders, as she is the queen. The character and influence of the home will be built by her loving hands.

It is not something lifted above the common experiences of life. There are ideals of womanhood that are very lovely and full of charm, but too delicate and frail for the actual world we live in.

The poets, novelists and movies gave us the romantic view of the wife. One day of actual experience would shatter and destroy that frail loveliness.

We need to seek ideals that will not be soiled by everyday experiences nor blown away by a stiff breeze of reality but will grow lovelier as they move through life's paths of submission, service and sacrifice.

The true wife needs to be no mere dream of some poet, artist or writer, but strong and industrious with her heart set on fulfilling her God-given role in the family. It is that role we desire to study and know as children of God.

reflections

Loyalty to her husband

Her first early loyalty is to her husband (Genesis 2:24; 3:16; Matthew 19:6).

What has been said about the husband's first loyalty applies in like measure to the wife. Her loyalty to her husband is only surpassed by her loyalty to God. In describing a good wife, Solomon states, "The heart of her husband doth safely trust in her" (Proverbs 31:11). A shadow of doubt destroys the peace of married life. He has confidence in her affection; he knows that her heart is unalterably true to him.

Love her husband

The older women are to teach and train "the younger women to love their husbands" (Titus 2:4). This is also a bilateral and mutual principle that belongs to both the husband and wife. No home can flourish as God intended unless love exists. Love consists not in gazing at each other, but in looking and working outward in the same direction" (Anne Morrow Lindbergh).

A companion and helper

God saw it was not good for man to live alone, and created woman to be with man. "And Jehovah God said, It is not good that the man should be alone; I will make him a help meet for him" (Genesis 2:18). Hellen Mattox Young has written: She was created to be a helper, one who is able to help.

This is her essential role. She is not man; she is different physiologically, emotionally, and mentally. This is a complementary relationship; it is equality through complement. She is to be the aider and nurturer of life.

From the standpoint of companionship, it has been said: She was not made from his head that he should tyrannize her, nor from his feet that he should walk on her, but from under his arm that he should protect her and from near his heart that he should love and cherish her.

Living in fellowship shows faith, strengthens faith

By Greg Lewis
USAIC Chaplains' Office

In a society with confused family values, a loss of personal identity, persecution of those who hold firm their beliefs, the assembly, fellowship and church provides a place of refuge in the world.

The writer in the Book of Hebrews in the New Testament says, "Let us not give up meeting together, as some are in the habit of doing, but let us encourage one another and so much more as you see the day approaching. (Hebrews 10:25) One translation says, "Do not forsake the assembling of yourselves together."

The advantages to going to church are many, but some of the best reasons are to get to know other people of like faith, to encourage one another through the difficult times and strengthen one another.

reflections

Our faith in God is not supposed to be lived in isolation, but in community with other believers. The church with all its strengths and weaknesses is ordained by God to reach out and give life and hope through Jesus Christ.

Our fellowship with God is reflected in our fellowship with other people. Christianity is not meant to be a religion of individualist, but a cooperate group of people worshipping and serving God.

When the difficult times do come, other believers will be there to encourage and strengthen you in your faith. So I challenge you to get involved in a chapel or church that you may find the fullness and happiness of serving a great and wonderful God.

Military Police Activity

TAKE A BITE OUT OF CRIME®

The following entries were taken from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from April 12 to 18.

Such entries may be incomplete and do not determine the guilt or innocence of any person.

• A civilian was charged with unlawful possession of a firearm when Military Police discovered a sawed-off 12-gauge shotgun in his vehicle during a traffic stop.

• Three family members were charged with assault after becoming involved in a fight. Another family member was charged with aggravated assault after he hit one family member with a pool stick.

• A staff sergeant was charged with shoplifting after he was observed removing the price tag ($5.70) off a pair of sunglasses and placing it on another pair of sunglasses valued at $22. He paid the lower price and left the store.

• A sergeant first class was charged with domestic assault after he hit his wife in the face with a telephone.

• A private was charged by Columbus Police for disorderly conduct while intoxicated after using profane language

• Two privates were charged with assaulting each other. During the fight, one private fell back and hit his head on the floor. He was transported to the hospital and admitted for further treatment.

• A specialist was charged by Columbus Police with cruelty to children after he poked and punched his 2-year-old son in the stomach, causing internal bleeding. After the child was admitted to the hospital, other marks were discovered that indicated previous child abuse.

• A civilian, who is divorced and no longer a family member, used her dependent identification card to gain access to the Commissary and make purchases. She was charged with theft of services, criminal trespass, theft by deception and false passes.

This week's booby prize goes to the specialist who removed a candy bar from a display shelf at the Main Post Exchange.

He ate part of the candy bar and placed the remainder back on the shelf; then he left the store without paying for it.

The specialist was apprehended and charged with larceny of nonappropriated fund property (shoplifting).

Other activities included 10 traffic accidents and 12 cases of driving under the influence of alcohol.

There were seven shoplifting cases reported at exchange facilities and five cases of larceny of private property.

Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best — Give Crime Arrest."

Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5223 or the "Crime in Progress" line at 545-2222.

ask the judge

By Rick Parker
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

The Legal Assistance Division of the Staff Judge Advocate's Office continues to see cases in which the central issue revolves around a promise or contract that was not put in writing. Thus, once again, SJA offers the following advice on this matter: Get it in writing!

Ponder the following scenarios in which the lack of a writing had such a adverse impact:

• Sgt. Smith enters into an agreement to buy a vehicle in which he agrees to pay $2,000 down. The only problem is, it's the middle of the month and he won't have the money in his account until the end of month.

No problem, says the salesman. Go ahead and write a check and we'll hold it until the end of the month. What happens? Of course, the dealership tries to cash the check now and it bounces for insufficient funds. Result: Sergeant Smith faces possible criminal charges on a bad check.

• Lt. Green, recently assigned to Fort Benning, gets on the housing list, but faces up to a nine-month wait for quarters. He decides to rent an apartment in the meantime. The apartment complex offers a six-month lease at $400 a month, and a 12-month lease at $325 a month.

Of course, he wants the lower rate, but doesn't want to get stuck in the apartment if his housing number comes up. No problem, says the resident manager. Just tell us if you get quarters and we'll let you out of the lease (which contains a provision that requires a 30-day notice, an additional penalty of one month's rent and forfeiture of security deposit to terminate early).

Three months later, Lieutenant Green is notified of availability of quarters. What happens? Of course, the apartment complex insists on full compliance with the terms of the lease.

• Pvt. Smart is visited by a door-to-door salesman offering a really great deal - a photography club package for $1,700 that includes a videocassette recorder, a 35 mm camera, film development (for a fee equal to or greater than most local film processors each time you send in a roll of film) and a free roll of film every time you have film developed through the company.

Pvt. Smart believes he knows a good deal when he sees one, but being cautious, asks the salesman about canceling at a later date. No problem, says the salesman. All you have to do is either call me or write to the company, and it will be canceled.

Six months later, Pvt. Smart decides that he can't really afford the payments of $65 a month. He tries to call the salesman, only to discover that the number has been disconnected. He writes the company to notify of cancellation. Will they let him out? Not! The written contract Pvt. Smith signed only allows cancellation within seven days of signing.
within seven days of signing.

The list of scenarios is endless. In each case, a written confirmation of the oral promise, signed by the parties and dated, would have prevented the problem. Oral promises are simply too hard to prove. With everything in writing, both parties are clear on the terms of the contract and there is no chance of misunderstanding.

If you have a question or problem concerning a contract, call the Legal Assistance Division for an appointment at 545-3281.

Dear friend:

It was a year ago on Good Friday that Karen Heard died in an automobile accident. Since then, many people have wanted to remember her in an appropriate and lasting manner.

Therefore, friends and faculty at Brookstone School are sponsoring a perpetual award to be given in Karen's memory. This award will be presented at closing exercises to a graduating senior as a commemorative recognition for his or her exceptional work in the field of community service.

Karen's vitality and enthusiasm were her trademarks. She tirelessly gave of herself whether on the softball field, as head of the Social Committee, in the community projects or as a friend to others. It is with these characteristics in mind that we propose awarding the Martha Karen Heard Community Service Award.

As a friend, classmate, family member or friend of the family, we hope you will join us in honoring Karen by sending your memorial for this award to:

Stephen King's 'The Stand' is 4-part miniseries

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

He's used to having his writing adapted for the screen, but with a new miniseries, Stephen King has more direct involvement than usual.

Many devotees of the horror-and-suspense icon consider "The Stand" to be one of his best works — in both its original edition and the restored, expanded version that followed a number of years later — and he had an active hand in turning it into an ABC drama, since he served as both screenwriter and co-executive producer.

Airing in two-hour installments Sunday, Monday, Wednesday and Thursday, the saga focuses on the relative handful of survivors of a lethal plague that was released accidentally from a secret government laboratory. Those still alive are split between two factions: those who are following their visions of a benevolent woman named Mother Abagail (played by Ruby Dee), and those who have decided to fall in with the sinister Randall Flagg (Jamey Sheridan, of "Shannon's Deal"), also known as the story's "darkman."

Among the more heroic characters are Stu Redman (Gary Sinise, director and star of the 1992 remake of "Of Mice and Men"), pregnant Fran Goldsmith (Molly Ringwald), deaf-mute Nick Andros (Rob Lowe) and rock singer Larry Underwood (Adam Storke).

Meanwhile, on Flagg's side are the so-called "Trashcan Man" (Matt Frewer) and Nadine Cross (Laura San Giacomo, of "Pretty Woman" and "sex, lies and videotape"), with the latter dispatched to infiltrate Mother Abagail's group and destroy it from within. Directed by Mick Garris, the tale also features Bill Fagerbakke ("Coach"), Corin Nemec ("Parker Lewis"), co-star Dee's husband Ossie Davis and Ray Walston ("Picket Fences").

Though ABC also has made miniseries from King's books "It" and "The Tommyknockers," they were developed for television by other writers. He explains that in "The Stand's" case, "I decided to do the adaptation (myself) because I wanted to carry through all the way. I wanted to end up in a situation where people could look at me and say, 'I really like what you did,' and I would be able to feel that I had a direct hand in that. If I really screwed it up big-time, they would be able to come directly to me and say, 'You really messed up,' and I'd be able to take the rap for that."

King says he approved of the "It" miniseries, claiming that it was "largely instrumental in my decision to go ahead and run with ABC with 'The Stand.' I liked 'The Tommyknockers' a little bit less, but I thought they did a pretty decent job with a book that wasn't top-drawer to begin with."

A screen version of "The Stand" had been planned for some time, dating back to 1979 (the year after it was first published), according to King's longtime film-production partner Richard P. Rubinstein.

However, he reflects, "There was really no satisfactory way, from a creative standpoint, to take 1,300 pages of book and put it into a 2 1/2 hour feature film. Over all this period of time, television grew up, and there was a point when ABC offered us a home; we felt that ('The Stand') could be adapted for television and not be compromised."

Adds King, "My question to ABC was, 'Can we do the book, or are you going to make this deal and then say there's stuff you can't do?' They said, 'Yes, we will stand away and let you do the book that you wrote.' For years, when people asked me about doing this for TV, I said, 'Hey, you can't do the end of the world and then break in with a word from (a brand of) toilet tissue. It can't happen.'

What: 'The Stand'
When: Sunday on ABC

The miniseries format did grow up, I think, with 'Lonesome Dove' and — to a large extent — with 'It' as well, in my field."

The Maine-based King also has a cameo role in "The Stand," playing a character he describes as "the country idiot, somebody whose IQ and pant size are pretty much interchangeable."

For nearly two decades, since the release of "Carrie" in 1976, even King's slimmest thought has been sought (and usually bought) by movie or TV producers ... yielding features from "Creepshow" and "Firestarter" to "Misery" and "Needful Things," and such home-screen efforts as "Golden Years" and "Sometimes They Come Back."

For all of those film treatments, King maintains, "I think that the written word always has been the best for me, because I have the ability to control all the aspects of the story myself. I think one of the reasons so many films have been made out of my stuff is the readers respond to the idea of 'There's a movie here,' and a lot of times, they find out that's maybe not quite as easy as it seems at first. However, I've never had a problem with rolling the dice and seeing if various people could make a really good movie out of my work."

That didn't happen with "Graveyard Shift" or "Children of the Corn," two pictures that King claims are "not going to stand in film history. You have to start with the idea that things are going to change if you let them out of your own backyard, the same way your kids are going to change when you send them off to school. My view is that books are long-distance runners, and they're there long after the films are forgotten."

With that conviction, King concludes that he plans to keep doing what he does in the way he does it. "I just think up stories that I'd really like to tell," he says, "and I try to think up ways to get readers to be really upset, and lock their doors, and worry, and not be able to go to sleep. I like that. That gives me a feeling of power, because I'm twisted and strange."

Curator of birds, John Fowler, uses an eagle hand puppet to feed a newly hatched bald eagle chick at Zoo Atlanta.

Bald eagle egg hatches at zoo

Zoo Atlanta

Zoo Atlanta announces the hatching of a bald eagle egg recently.

The egg was one of three given to the zoo by Chehaw Wild Animal Park in Albany, Ga., to incubate; the other two were unfertile.

Like Zoo Atlanta, Chehaw Park has a pair of nesting eagles that have laid eggs each year but have been unable to successfully rear them.

On March 11, the three eggs were transported from Albany to Atlanta to be placed in an incubator at the zoo. Keepers discovered the hatchling at approximately 5:30 a.m. The chick appears to be healthy, zoo officials said.

Keepers are using an eagle hand puppet to feed it so that the chick will not imprint on humans. The chick will therefore be suitable for release to the wild as part of Georgia's Bald Eagle Recovery Program.

The bald eagle is currently listed as endangered in the United States in 43 states, including Georgia, and is threatened in five states. The demise of bald eagle populations was primarily a result of contamination of the environment with pesticides.

Zoo Atlanta and Chehaw Wild Animal Park are working together to raise captive-bred eagles.

Zoo Atlanta's own eagles have laid three eggs that are incubating and due to hatch this month.

'Odd Couple' is coming to Fox Theatre

Tony Randall, Jack Klugman to be reunited on stage

Atlanta Broadway Series

The odd couple of the television series, still popular around the world, are to be reunited on stage.

Tony Randall and Jack Klugman will again be Felix and Oscar in a rare theatrical event. They will be returning to Neil Simon's original Broadway play "The Odd Couple," for a one-week-only Atlanta engagement at the Fox Theatre May 24 through 29.

The engagement is part of an eight-city tour to benefit The National Actors Theatre. The repertory company, which has been Randall's dream, has just completed its third successful season on Broadway.

"The Odd Couple" is being directed by Harvey Medlinsky.

The National Actors Theatre is a not-for-profit, subscription-based company formed to bring the great classical repertoire of the world, with the finest actors, to a theater that is within reach of all.

The theater opened its first season with Martin Sheen, Maryann Plunkett and Michael York in "The Crucible," "A Little Hotel on the Side" with Tony Randall, Lynn Redgrave, Maryann Plunkett and Rob Lowe and 'The Master Builder" with Earl Hyman, Lynn Redgrave and Madeline Potter.

Tickets for "The Odd Couple" are on sale at all Ticketmaster outlets including Turtles, Publix and Marshalls and the Fox Theatre Box Office, or to charge, call (404) 817-8700 or (404) 249-6400.

Showtimes are: Tuesdays through Fridays at 8 p.m., Saturday at 2 p.m. and 8 p.m., and Sunday at 2 p.m. and 7:30 p.m.

Ticket prices are Friday and Saturday evenings, $37.50, $35.50, $27.50 and $11; all other performances, $35.50, $33.50, $25.50 and $10. Discounts are available to groups of 20 or more by calling (404) 873-4300.

Columbus Museum adds three major paintings

The Columbus Museum

The Columbus Museum has added three major paintings to the permanent collection in the last few months.

The acquisition of a double portrait of a mother and child, "Mrs. Caleb Newbold and Her Son Thomas," by Thomas Sully (1783-1872), was made possible by the Edward Swift Shorter bequest fund.

South Carolina painter Tarleton Blackwell's dramatic oil, "Hog Series LXV: Wolf Prince 1," was purchased from the museum's recent exhibition Hogs, Dragons and the Big Bad Wolf: Myth and Reality in the Art of Tarleton Blackwell, in honor of acting director, Hugh Landrum, by his friends.

Dr. Philip Brewer, a long-time member of the museum's Board of Trustees, recently gave the painting "Contentment" by Thomas Hovenden to the museum in honor of Dr. Delmar Edwards.

The Columbus Museum, located at 1251 Wynnton Road, features exhibitions of American art and regional history and includes a hands-on discovery gallery for children. Admission is free of charge.

The museum is open from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday, and on Sundays from 1 until 5 p.m. For information, call 649-0713.

Atlanta to welcome Caribbean art, music, entertainment

Georgia Department of Industry, Trade and Tourism

In May, Atlanta will welcome the Caribbean's most vibrant kaleidoscope of culture, art, music and entertainment.

The Folkloric Dancers of Curacao will perform its rich blend of Spanish, Dutch and West African dance. The Folkloric Dancers of Curacao, a dance troupe, is comprised of "artistic greats" who retell the islands story through dance during the Peach Carnival.

June 22 to 26, the renown voices of the Ben Hill Sanctuary Choir will perform at the International Trade Center in Curacao before an audience of more than 7,000 people. Ben Hill United Methodist Church is a landmark in the Atlanta community and is one of the fastest growing united methodist churches in the region.

This exchange is the first of its kind in Atlanta or Curacao, seeking to bridge ties of two very distinct but familiar cultures into the '90s verge of tourism.

During the 1800s, merchants traveled from the Caribbean to the Southeastern United States establishing centers of trade, thereby linking cultures.

provides focus for 1994 Commander's Conference

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

The 1994 U.S. Army Infantry Commander's Conference, which began Tuesday and concluded Wednesday, brought high-ranking infantryman from around the world to Fort Benning.

The theme of the conference, hosted by Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, was "Warrior Future Operational Capabilities for the U.S. Infantry."

The conference schedule included several symposiums, a live-fire demonstration at Red Cloud Range, contractor displays and numerous social events.

During his opening remarks Tuesday at Marshall Auditorium, White said, "When we discussed this year's conference, we decided to move primarily to the field, to show what we've been up to (in battle lab experiments and training) over the last couple of years."

The centerpiece of the conference was an advanced warfighting demonstration planned and executed by the Dismounted Battlespace Battle Lab.

"This demonstration," White said, "gives us the capability of working directly with individual soldiers, giving them experience through hands-on training."

The demonstration allowed visitors to see several experimental systems in action in an integrated combined arms and joint service environment.

The demonstration included much of the same technology that was tested in April during the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division's rotation at the National Training Center, Fort Irwin, Calif.

Technologies involved in the AWD and live-fire demonstration included both individual soldier equipment and weapons systems modifications.

Conference attendees were given a chance to examine much of the equipment during an extended briefing at the Leadership Reaction Course.

The Digitized Soldier System, demonstrated by Pfc. Chad Wahinekapu at the course and at NTC, includes several pieces of digitized equipment:

Helmet-mounted device — a video display terminal mounted on a tube that extends from the helmet to face the soldier's right eye. The display is linked to a combination computer, battery and Global Positioning System receiver carried in the soldier's rucksack, and to a keypad attached to the web gear.

Video camera — also attached to the helmet, the camera takes still video pictures that the soldier can relay through the computer to a Bradley Fighting Vehicle in less than a minute.

The computer is also used to relay silent messages to the Bradley, allowing scouts to monitor the enemy at very close range and in complete silence.

GPS — the Global Positioning System allows the soldier to monitor his own location, specifying his grid coordinates to within 10 meters.

Night vision devices — two types are included in the digitized Soldier System: an image intensifier, which works with available light much as night vision goggles do, and a thermal sight mounted on the soldier's rifle.

Wahinekapu said the equipment worked extremely well, although it was somewhat heavy.

Karen S. Morarie

Sgt. Elijah Morish, a Javelin instructor, prepares to fire the weapon during the live-fire demonstration at Red Cloud Range Tuesday.

"I like the thermal sight best," he said. "Nothing can hide from it, at night, in smoke or in fog. I can pick up a heat image from anything."

The "forward-looking infrared" or FLIR technology has been applied to the Bradley Fighting Vehicle, Javelin antitank weapon and various other weapons systems in the form of advanced sights and tracking devices. The results, according to White, are a 100 percent increase in squad target hits, 1,000 percent increase in M-16A2 individual target hits, the ability to identify targets at greater ranges, and increased lethality and survivability.

All of the equipment advances the infantry to two of its stated goals in improving the lethality and survivability of infantrymen: "owning the night" and managing information on the battlefield.

"Combat power follows information," said Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr., commander of Training and Doctrine Command. "The better we are at moving information around the battlefield, the faster we can react to any given situation."

A Holistic Review of the Infantry

"I want to look at the wide range of threats our infantry is likely to face in the near future, from operations other than war through mid-intensity warfare. Then, I want to take all the known technologies being worked on now that will impact on us in the next 10 years. Finally, I will analyze the tactical lessons learned and extrapolate from those future lessons. I am looking for the synergy of yet-unfielded equipment and untested doctrine to help me determine the right structure, weapons and tactics for our infantry. This is a major study effort that brings together my concepts, doctrine, threat, training and simulations guys. The results of this effort may be the biggest change to our infantry in decades."

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White
Chief of Infantry

MPs to participate in Torch Run

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet®

The Fort Benning Military Police will be putting their best feet forward May 26 for the benefit of the Georgia Special Olympics.

Approximately 150 MP runners will participate in the Law Enforcement Torch Run, an international fund-raising event involving law enforcement personnel across the United States and in more than 12 foreign countries.

Special Olympics is a sports program that provides a forum for training and competition for handicapped children and adults.

Police officers raise money for the program through the sponsorship of each runner by area businesses, groups and individuals.

In Georgia, participants will run four different routes starting May 21, all heading toward Atlanta's Emory University Stadium, the site of the state summer Special Olympics games scheduled to begin May 27.

The MP runners will carry the torch on a 10-mile portion of the southwest route, from Fort Benning to the Columbus Government Center, where they will hand off the torch to Columbus police officers.

"People can support the Fort Benning law enforcement personnel by cheering us on along our portion of the route," said Master Sgt. John Craddock, coordinator for this year's event.

Individuals can also lend their support by sponsoring a runner with a minimum suggested donation of $100, according to Craddock.

The MPs will begin their trek at 9 a.m., leaving post on Benning Boulevard and continuing along Victory Drive to uptown Columbus.

Groups or individuals interested in sponsoring a runner should call Craddock at 545-3306.

Post honors Asian Americans, Pacific Islanders

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning kicked off a month-long celebration of Asian American/Pacific Islander Heritage Month May 5 at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center.

The theme for this year's observance is "Pride, Partnership, Progress."

The program featured the Korean choir, which performed "Amazing Grace" and "God Bless America," dances performed by members of the Filipino American Association and Korean Community Entertainment Program, sponsored by the Army and Air Force Exchange Service, and food prepared by Asian volunteers.

Lt. Col. Donald B. Chung, commander of 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, was the guest speaker.

Chung was born in Honolulu, Hawaii, son of a World War II veteran and grandson of a Korean immigrant.

Chung spoke of the challenges faced by immigrants from Asian and Pacific countries.

"It was not until 1965 that Chinese and Japanese exclusionary laws and immigration quotas were abolished," Chung said. "Only then were Asians really able to share in the American dream."

Chung pointed out the diversity of the people classified as Asian Americans.

"Koreans, Japanese, Chinese, Vietnamese, Samoans, Fijians, Hawaiians, and other peoples with very different cultures are classed as Asian Americans or Pacific Islanders," Chung said.

"The challenge for all of us," Chung said, "is to maintain unity and harmony among these groups, as well as with American society at large.

"We've made a lot of progress, but there is still progress to be made for all Americans," she said.

Other events scheduled for Asian Pacific Heritage Month include:

Saturday — Korean Dance Group will perform at the Post Exchange at the Main Mall during lunch hour. For information, contact Francis Givens at 682-0944.

May 20 — Employees at the Post Exchange will have Asian Pacific Islander cultural dress day. For information, call Givens.

May 21 — The Polynesian Dance Group will perform at the PX during lunch hour. For information, call Givens.

May 25 — Asian Pacific Islander Awareness program, Infantry Hall, time to be announced. For information, call Sgt. 1st Class Barbra Walker at 545-2900.

May 26 — A martial arts demonstration will take place in the dining room of Martin Army Community Hospital at 2 p.m. The event is open to the public.

For more information, call 1st Lt. John Murphy at 544-1710.

May 26 — Asian Pacific luncheon and display, Building 2808. For information, call Sgt. 1st Class Abdur Hassan at 545-5338.

May 28 — a Filipino dance group will perform during lunch hour at the Post Exchange. For information, call Givens.

Riverside concert Sunday

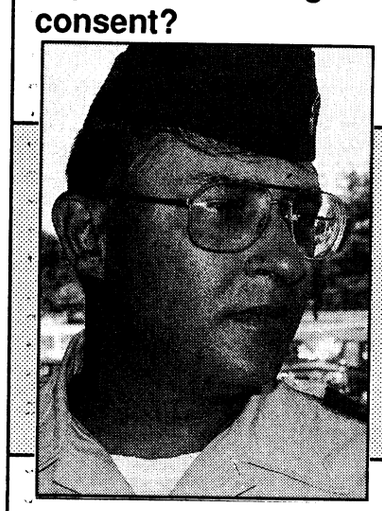
USAIC Public Affairs Office



The Infantry Band and the Infantry Chorus will perform a concert Sunday from 5 to 6 p.m. on the lawn of Riverside, the home of Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, post commanding general, and his wife, Linda. The public is invited.

The concert is in conjunction with Military Appreciation Week, which kicks off Sunday.

Attendees may bring lawn chairs, blankets and refreshments.

VARIOUS VOICES

Should the military be allowed to use experimental drugs on soldiers without their consent?

Sgt. 1st Class Benjamin F. Harris, U.S. Army Medical Department Activity— "I don't think so. When things start to go wrong with the soldier, they have a hard time getting relief and the government doesn't want to face up to what it did."

Pfc. Scott C. Wendt, Company A, F & S GME, Marine Corps Logistics Base, Albany— "It should be up to the person; otherwise it's not right."

George Ross, civilian employee — "No, I wouldn't want to be tested without knowledge of what they were doing. I don't want to be a guinea pig."

Dr. Peg Goodman, family member — "I think they can with the consent of the soldier, as long as they understand the ramifications."

Chief Warrant Officer 2 Clifford D. Allen, 608th Ordnance Company--- No, it's an invasion of privacy. Soldiers wouldn't know what happened to them. I totally disagree with it."

2nd Lt. Edward A. Kovaleski, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment— "No, it's an invasion of privacy. It promotes distrust in the government and in the military."

Officer thanks military for 22 years

commentary

As I retire from the U.S. Army I would like to thank the men and women who served during the 1970s, 1980s and 1990s.

We endured many changes and are still changing. Who could have dreamed of the end of the Cold War in 1969? The Iron Curtain is down and I have met with my Russian counterparts. Yet, there is one constant — when our country needed us, we were there.

A song about volunteers reminds us that it was not always easy, and it wasn't always fair; but, when freedom called, we answered, we were ready, we were there.

During the past 22 years, we sweated and froze together as we prepared for war. We patrolled the demilitarized zone in Korea. We sat on Green Ramp waiting to go. When we were needed in Grenada, Panama, the Gulf and Somalia, trained soldiers accomplished the mission.

I also saw selfless service under other difficult conditions around the globe. We assisted in the cleanup following Hurricane Iniki and the eruption of the volcano Nevado Del Ruiz in Colombia. Our comrades fought fires out West as well as assisted counterdrug officers along the U.S. and Mexico border. No headlines, only excellent work on behalf of our nation.

Some of our numbers paid the ultimate sacrifice. Sgt. 1st Class Greg Fronius is representative of those who died serving our country. He was killed in El Salvador during a guerrilla attack on his camp. I still remember his memorial service and the refrain of Ballad of the Green Beret, "Put silver wings on my son's chest . ." He left a wife and a son who wore his dad's green beret to the service.

A countless number of noncommissioned officers and infantrymen helped me along my way. From my first platoon sergeant, Kirk Cheney, to the most recent arrival in my organization, Jose Matute, our soldiers made impossible missions look like everyday tasks.

Despite all the external changes, their professionalism has not changed. The motto "Duty, Honor, Country" is more than words; it is a way of life requiring selfless service to the mission and to the welfare of our soldiers.

I remember with pride as our units executed our assigned tasks professionally. I still remember with pride tough field training exercises, Expert Infantryman Badge stakes, an 18-hour forced march in Greece and an equally grueling one in Florida following one of the largest deployment exercises ever conducted.

But it was not all work. In no other profession could I have skied Mount Olympus, walked across the Bridge over the River Kwai, or toured the temples in Korea. I enjoyed boxing smokers during jump school and unit picnics on Waikiki Beach.

We ran relay races from the Atlantic Ocean to the Pacific and around the island of Oahu. We celebrated our unit heritage with formal dining-ins. We played as hard as we worked and executed every event with gusto.

I could not end this note without thanking my God for watching over me during my time in the profession of arms. Chaplain Knox Herndon, the airborne chaplain in 1977, said it best when he stated that we jump into God's sky, his air fills our parachutes, his protection watches over us during descent, we land on his ground and his love covers us all the time.

I would also be remiss if I did not thank my wife who endured the Panmunjom Axe Murder shortly after we were married, gave birth to both of our children during battalion Army Training and Evaluation Programs, lived overseas for nearly half of our married life, and moved more times than I care to count. I love her dearly and will be happy to stay with her in one place for a long time.

As you can tell, I truly enjoyed my time in the profession of arms. I hope and pray that you will continue to work in a professional manner and give yourselves and others the same satisfaction that I have had.

dial 545-boss

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for soldiers, family members and civilians to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere.

While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies established to provide assistance, the line offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders.

The Bayonet is now featuring some of the calls that may benefit other members of the Fort Benning community.

☎ Call: I live at Harmony Church. There are no exit markers for any of the exits in this area. They have delivery people who are not familiar with this area and need the exits clearly marked.

I would like someone to check into this matter.

Directorate of Public Works response:

The caller is concerned that there is no sign that shows which exit to use to get from Highways 27 and 280 to the 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment.

A sign is being made that will clearly denote that the proper exit for 2nd Bn., 29th Inf. Regt., is the one nearest Building 4702.

☎ Call: I have been working at Fort Benning for 15 years.

I am wondering why the Post Exchange isn't available to civilian employees during duty days — just to buy food for lunches, not cigarettes or alcohol.

It's an inconvenience to go out of my work area to a snack bar or Burger King when I just work across the creek in McGraw Manor.

I would like to know if anything can be done about this; can the Army and Air Force Exchange Service work with civilian employees on this?

I realize I haven't spent 20 years in the service, but I have been a loyal civilian worker for 15 years and believe that I deserve something for that.

AAFES response:

AAFES does not determine the qualifications under which individuals are granted exchange privileges; Congress does.

Federal employees working on a military installation, such as Fort Benning, are not authorized exchange privileges.

Exchange privileges are authorized for active duty military, retirees, Reservists and National Guardsmen and members of their families, plus other categories of individuals affiliated with the armed services.

The regulations pertaining to privileges are applicable to all retail services — both directly provided by AAFES and by concessionaires, food, gasoline, sales, etc.

The fact that concessions are operated by local businesses has no bearing on patronage.

Concessions are required to provide merchandise and services only to authorized customers.

Provisions do exist in the regulations for providing privileges to civilians on an exception basis, upon request of command through the Department of the Army and upon demonstration of a hardship.

As a convenience, civilian employees can be authorized by the installation commander to eat in all AAFES food facilities.

This authorization does not routinely extend to the same civilians for the purchase of goods and services from concessions.

☎ Call: I have a complaint about the garbage pickup days on post. I would like to know why it has been cut down to one day a week and it is not picked up until after 3 p.m. The garbage really smells bad by this time.

Directorate of Public Works response:

Richard Chancey, chief, Construction Inspection Branch, DPW, talked with the caller regarding her complaint.

The refuse collection was changed April 11 from two days per week pickup to one day per week pickup.

This was done because of budget reductions in family housing.

This is strictly in accordance with Army Regulation 420-47.

It also puts the Fort Benning community in a compatible service to the surrounding communities.

Picking up her refuse at 4 p.m. is merely a process of schedule. Someone is first and someone is last.

It is a fact that since recycling material is now processed in this same pickup, it does take a little longer.

The caller was told to put a spoonful of household ammonia in her garbage bag or can. This will deter bugs, rodents and animals from getting into the garbage until it is picked up.

NCO Creed's origin a mystery

Fort Bliss, Texas, Monitor

The words have changed ever so slightly over the years. It is often printed in various formats and designs.

However, the meaning and intent of its words fathers the heartbeat of every noncommissioned officer.

Noncommissioned officers throughout our Army have the NCO Creed framed and hanging on the walls of their offices, barracks rooms and day rooms and certainly, the truly dedicated have committed it to memory.

However, not until recently, have we paid attention to its birth. Soldiers and leaders have been calling the U.S. Army Sergeants Major Academy historian, Dr. Robert Bouilly and the Academy's NCO Museum staff asking for the author and when it was written.

Bouilly, in turn, began his own research into the matter, but to no avail. Even the Center for Military History lacks clues.

The call for help is now out among the active and retired NCO community to help USASMA in its efforts to find the origin of these words that fuel the fire in NCOs' souls.

Anyone who can provide information on when and where they first saw or read this creed should call or write to Bouilly.

The information provided might help him find the author and publication date.

Send your comments or information to Commandant, USASMA, ATTN: ATSS-CMH (Dr. Robert Bouilly), 11291 Sgt. E. Churchill St., Fort Bliss, Texas 79918-8002, or call (915) 568-8815 or DSN 978-8815.

TRADOC commander shares views

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Editor's note: During the Infantry Commander's Conference, The Bayonet was given the opportunity to interview Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr., commander of Training and Doctrine Command. The Following are excerpts from that interview.

Q: Following the recent advanced warfighting experiment at the National Training Center (involving elements of the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division) what results did you find significant at the individual, platoon and brigade level?

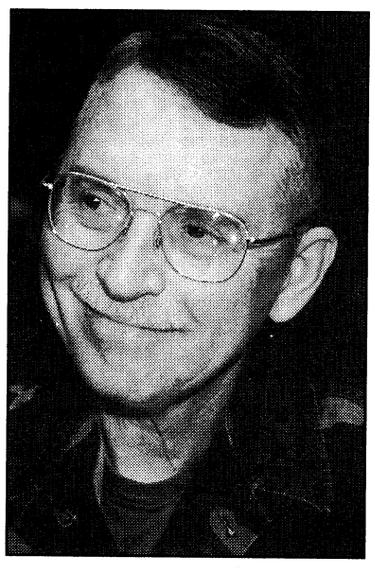
A: First of all, we achieved our objective of experimenting with the insertion of digital communications to see their effect on increasing lethality and survivability.



From a large perspective, we demonstrated the value of the experimental method of determining change. In other words, experimenting with real soldiers and real units, using real soldier behavior, in a competitive environment like NTC.

Secondly, our great quality soldiers have absolutely no problems with incorporation of advanced capabilities. So, really, our job is not to hold them back.

Q: So you don't think this (digital) equipment would distract soldiers in the performance of their mission?

A: We want the experiment to maintain the edge. We want to give the next generation of leaders and soldiers the same battlefield edge that we saw recently in Just Cause and Desert Shield. So we want to experiment using the same leaders and soldiers who are going to end up executing the answers we come to.

On the specific level, with the warfighting experiment, I think we saw the power of position location equipment, the power to rapidly transmit orders and graphics, the power of rapid movement of information. What we need to do is build on this in future experiments.

Franks

Q: You've been quoted as saying you wanted to get this equipment in the hands of the soldiers because their feedback is essential. Have any adjustments or modifications been made based on that feedback?

A: Yes. For example, in the enhanced land warrior system, the soldiers' initial comments were that the equipment was too heavy and bulky. We reduced the size of it so the soldiers were much more mobile.

In the tanks and Bradleys, there were a number of suggestion from soldiers a year ago, concerning changes in software to control different functions they wanted to see, and we put them into the system.

This is a back-and-forth effort. As soldiers use the equipment and as we listen to them, then we can make immediate changes.

By the time we settle on a requirement and go build it, we'll be sure we got what we want.

On the other hand, there are some things the soldiers tell us they don't like — it doesn't work, or it's too bulky, or it catches on the trees — either we can make modifications, or we may not want to bother with it. It's important to know what ideas are not good ideas.

Q: Have you found any specific pieces of equipment like that — technology that sounded good, but didn't work out so well?

A: No, I don't think so. For example, though, at the company and battalion level, we have seen that what we don't want to do is complicate the life of the leaders by having too many digital systems. What they tell us is, O.K., we need probably one system.

Q: When you're relying heavily on digital technology, how vulnerable is the equipment? What happens to the soldier who's out there and his equipment dies?

A: These experiments are not only involving the technology. What we're looking for is how to expand the mounted and dismounted battlespace that we can dominate. You do that through technology, through organizational changes, through different tactics and doctrines, or changes in training and leader development.

There's more to it than technology. What we want to do is provide the leaders and soldiers with a range of options available to them, so there's always a backup if something fails or something doesn't go right.

You never run yourself out of options — that's really the secret of tactical success. Run the enemy out of options, don't run yourself out of options.

Q: What battle scenarios do you see the infantry being involved in over the next few years?

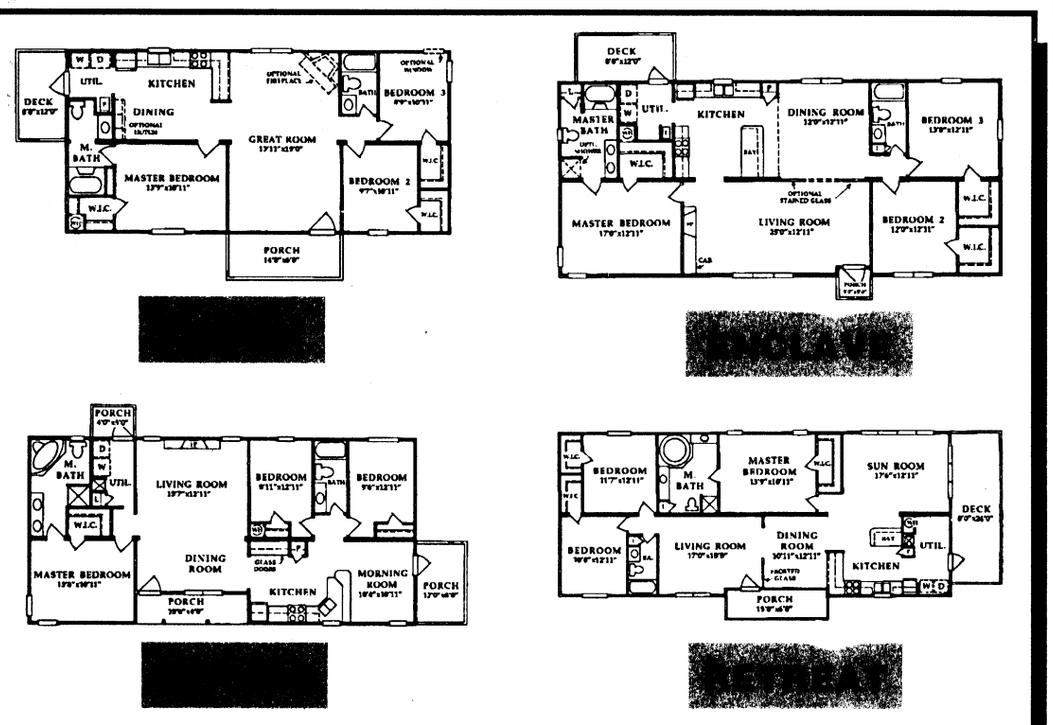
A: First of all, the United States Army will always fight joint, most of the time in the center of a joint team, at least in operations on land, and usually with combined forces.



We have to have a range of warfighting skills, so we can operate under a variety of conditions of terrain and enemy situations. That's why we have the Jungle Operations Training Center down in Panama, we have more temperate climate training at Fort Polk (La.), we go to the desert ... because the scenarios are so difficult to predict, what we must do is see to it that we develop leaders and soldiers who can quickly adapt.

It's adaptive, intuitive, decisive leaders and soldiers, who are skilled in a broad array of scenarios, and different types of forces, that we want to focus on developing.

Job fair: Teens learn to succeed in today's job market

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

For teens across Fort Benning, the month of May means summer is near, school is almost out and there is a possibility of getting a summer job.

With the summertime coming up, it's about time to start hunting for those summer jobs.

A teen job fair was Saturday at the Youth Activities Center. Hosting the job fair was Shirley Jarrett, coordinator of Army Community Service Family Member Employment Assistance Program.

Approximately 40 teen-agers showed up at noon to learn the fundamentals of jobs and job hunting.

"Let everyone you come in contact with know you are looking for a job," Jarrett said. By doing this, "you will have more opportunities to choose from."

One of the things Jarrett stressed about getting a job was, "to be flexible for hours."

"Don't be picky, and you'll go to work."

She advised everyone not to expect to make $6 an hour. "Because of your age and experience, (you are) probably going to be offered minimum wage."

Minimum wage is $4.25 an hour.

The best way to get a job is to impress the boss or the manager.

"If you are filling out an application, even if there are no jobs available, try to meet with the manager," Jarrett said.

Jarrett had plenty of tips for success.

- Make sure you are neat in appearance. That means, be well dressed and look as professional as possible.
- If an appointment was arranged to fill out the application or an interview, don't be late.
- Be polite.
- Do not smoke cigarettes or chew gum.
- Carry letters of recommendation and high school transcripts.

For example, "if applying for a retail job (cashier, sales person), and you are good in math, put down your math grades as a good example of your job skills," Jarrett said.

Jobs are not the only thing to do over the summer.

Jarrett spoke about volunteering in order to work in a special area of interest.

When she asked what areas some of the students were interested in, a whole spectrum of employment ideas opened.

Jobs such as: a social worker, psychologist, police officer, engineer, real estate broker and infantry officer.

"It's good to try to work with your field of choice to make sure that you want that field. You may end up not wanting to be in that field," Jarrett said.

Jarrett explained to the teens that she had wanted to work in the dental field at one time, only to find out after working in that field over the summer that she really didn't like it.

The job fair ended with the teens filling out actual job applications while Jarrett and Justine Boone, facility manager for Indianhead Recreation Center, helped and answered questions.

AFGE union to conduct luncheon

By Willie D. Varner
Directorate of Civilian Personnel

Local 54, American Federation of Government Employees, will sponsor a four-day lunch and learn session.

These sessions will be at the union office of Local 54, Building 235, May 23, 24, 25 and 26 from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

A representative from AFGE's fifth district (Atlanta area) will conduct these sessions, which are part of a membership drive to educate nonunion members regarding AFGE, its benefits and other current items of interest.

Special emphasis will be focused on labor and management partnerships, in support of President Bill Clinton's Executive Order 12871.

Lunch and beverage will be provided to attendees. The point of contact is Regis E. Blair, president, Local 54, AFGE, 545-5379 or 687-8740.

Educator receives recognition

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Joyce Flatt, fourth-grade teacher at Fort Benning's Dexter School, was named Columbus Gateways Educator of the Year by the Keep Columbus Beautiful Commission May 5.

Flatt

As the award was presented at a ceremony at the Columbus Iron Works Convention and Trade Center, Flatt was commended for her work in leading students as they landscaped the school campus, planted vegetable and flower gardens, conducted campus cleanups, coordinated school recycling, and shared with colleagues ideas gleaned from the "Waste in Place Workshops" that were presented through Keep Columbus Beautiful.

Flatt was also recognized for her work in designing and implementing a winning project proposal for a greenhouse and a fourth- and fifth-grade earth science curriculum that uses the greenhouse.

"Through Flatt's efforts, Dexter has not only become an environmentally conscious school, we've become an environmentally conscious community," said Dexter School Principal Vicki Rogers.

post briefs

CID offers $1,000 reward

The Fort Benning Criminal Investigation Department is offering $1,000 for information about individual(s) responsible for the following thefts:

Between Jan. 10 and March 17, someone forcibly entered 12 privately owned vehicles at the 4th Ranger Training Battalion.

On Jan. 26, someone forcibly entered 17 privately owned vehicles on Kelley Hill.

On Jan. 27, someone forcibly entered eight privately owned vehicles on Sand Hill.

On each occasion, the perpetrator stole several car stereo systems, compact disc players, radar detectors, cellular telephones and other items of personal property. It is believed the same individual is responsible for all three thefts.

Anyone with information can contact Special Agent Robert A. Reid, 86th Military Police Detective (CID), Fort Benning, Ga. 31905, 545-7909 or the Military Police desk sergeant at 545-5222.

All information will be considered strictly confidential.

Tuition aid available

While funds are available, the Army Continuing Education System will allow soldiers using tuition assistance for the summer quarter to take two undergraduate courses provided they do not exceed more than 20 quarter hours or 13 semester hours for fiscal 1994.

MACH celebrates Nurse Week 1994

From May 6 to Thursday, members of Martin Army Community Hospital celebrated Nurse Week 1994. This year's event included several activities that supported the theme "Helping People: Preparation For The Year 2000."

The nurses visited Loyd Elementary School Wednesday. Throughout the week, nurses conducted a volleyball tournament with a championship game Thursday at 4:30 p.m.

There was also a cookout Thursday with many fair-like activities taking place.

Force Protection Awareness Day set

The Fort Benning Fire Department will display and demonstrate a 100-foot ladder truck, surface and underwater rescue equipment, and hazardous material first responder equipment May 26 at Stilwell Field from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Demonstrations will be throughout the day. For information, call 545-2484 or 545-2482.

Retirement ceremony time changes

The monthly retirement ceremony scheduled for July 19 has been changed from 9 a.m. to 10 a.m. For more information, call Sgt. 1st Class Bartolome Vigo at 545-4258.

Post celebrates fitness

1,200 gather on York Field to work out

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

Approximately 1,200 individuals, most of them school children, gathered on York Field May 5 for an hour of low intensity aerobics to celebrate National Fitness Month.

Supported by the President's Council on Physical Fitness, National Fitness Month in May is a time to focus on health and well-being, according to Maj. Marcus Alexander, director of training at the Physical Fitness School.

"You don't have to be an athlete to be fit," said Alexander as 1,005 Fort Benning school children and about 80 civilians joined the Fitness School staff for light workout and a brown bag lunch on a sunny 75-degree day.

"We are trying to make people aware of fitness. They need to begin now," said Alexander as he led the total body workout, which exercised muscles, including the heart, and focused on endurance.

The staff of the Directorate of Resource Management turned out in full force with 42 participants, all clad in matching green shirts emblazoned with "World Champs," a reference to Fort Benning's recent award as Best Installation in the World.

DRM staff joined other civilians for a group stretch and a brisk walk around the one-mile track at Stewart Field.

"We did this last year with a smaller group. It was fun, and we talked it up and got wonderful participation this year," said Sandy Babb, management analyst.

> "We want them to get the message that fitness really is important. We want to teach it at an early age so it will carry over into adulthood."

> Fort Benning Schools

School children from Fort Benning also turned out in force, with 1,005 participating, according to Dr. Dell Karr, assistant superintendent.

"We want them to get the message that fitness really is important. We want to teach it at an early age so it will carry over into adulthood," said Karr.

"The Army Fitness School is a great support for us," she said, citing its involvement with field days, nutrition classes and enrichment programs in the post schools.

The entire student body from Wilson School began the workout with a walk of about a mile from their classrooms to York Field.

Following the group workout, participants gathered on the grounds in front of Infantry Hall for a brown bag lunch and drinks provided by the Fitness School.

The refreshments provided included water as well as an electrolyte beverage to replace lost moisture and add glucose and carbohydrates according to Dr. Louis Tomasi, research physiologist with the Fitness School. After exercising, this fluid provides additional energy, he said.

Staff from the school dubbed the mass exercise "a complete success" as individuals enjoyed the picture perfect day while toning muscles and building endurance.

ACAP program certifies teachers

By Elsie Jackson
Army Career and Alumni Program

"I touch the future," said Christa McAuliffe, "I teach."

The Challenger astronaut was rightfully proud of her profession. All of us can look back and point at teachers who have made a profound difference in our lives. Now, more than ever, there is a need for strong role models in our schools.

Do you have what it takes to face a real challenge — the classroom of today?

If you have a bachelor's degree, especially in math, science, or a foreign language, but do not have a teaching certificate, it is still possible for you to transition almost directly from battles to blackboards.

A growing number of states have or are developing alternative teacher certification programs that may help you start a teaching career. It may be possible for you to teach with a provisional certificate while earning the college credits required for certification in your state.

Just what is alternative certification? Alternative Certification refers to a program or procedure designed to put a college graduate who has appropriate subject matter expertise and experience into teaching. Typically, these programs combine a streamlined curriculum of education course work with some form of student teaching.

Generally, alternative certification candidates are required to hold at least a bachelor's degree with concentrated major in the subject to be taught, pass a comprehensive subject-matter test, have a grade-point average of at least 2.5, complete any prescribed courses, and complete an internship program at a local school.

Currently, 30 states have alternative teacher certification programs. They are Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, California. Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, New Jersey, New Mexico, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Virginia and West Virginia.

For soldiers who want to pursue a career in teaching, a new "Troops to Teachers" program is in the works.

For service members remaining in Georgia, a "Transition to Education" Program has been developed that will tie in to "Troops to Teachers."

For more information, call your Education Center or the ACAP office at 545-4892 or 545-4913.

Post gets new garrison SGM

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning has a new garrison sergeant major.

Sgt. Maj. Harvey L. Milner has filled the vacant garrison sergeant major spot.

Milner comes to Fort Benning from Fort Gillem, Ga., where he was the operations non-commissioned officer for the Operational Readiness Evaluation Team, 2nd U.S. Army.

Milner's hometown is McDonough Ga., which is 20 miles south of Atlanta.

He has been married to his wife, Glendon, for six years. The Milners have one son, Harvey Jr., who is 3 years old.

Milner received his associate's degree from Central Texas College in Killeen, Texas in May 1983. He is also a graduate of the Sergeants Major Academy.

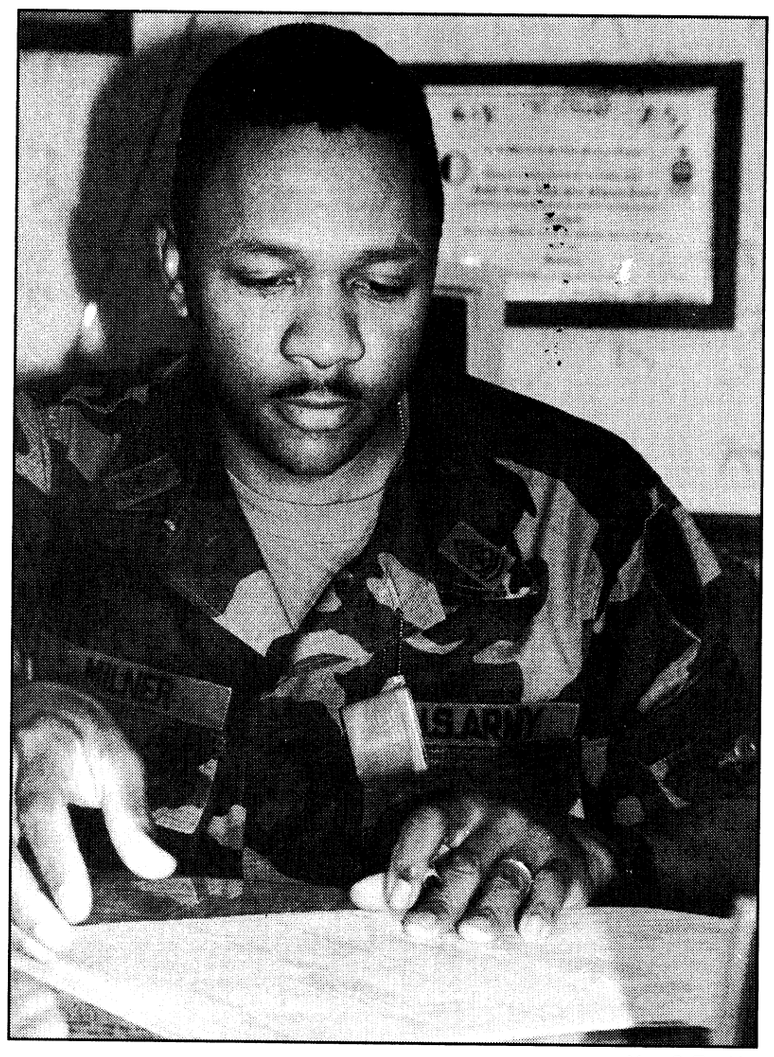
Milner said he didn't show up at Fort Benning to fill the garrison sergeant major job.

"I didn't actually come to Fort Benning to be the garrison sergeant major," he said. "I came to Fort Benning to fill an engineer slot. I am an engineer by trade."

The original slot, a 12 Zulu, will be open sometime in 1995, Milner said.

"When that slot becomes open, I will be filling that spot," he said. Until then, Milner has some plans of his own for improving the post.

"I would like to improve the quality of life for the soldiers and the family members here at Fort Benning," Milner said.



"The key thing is to make a difference in the quality of life," he continued. "If there is a problem, I want to fix it."

Making a difference in the community means getting involved with the community of life meetings and being involved with the mayors' meetings, he said.

Being involved with fixing problems and with the community, also includes the post operations, he said.

Being the garrison sergeant major, Milner said, he sees himself more active in the post's operations, or the running of the installation.

"The jobs I have had in the past have never put me in the position to oversee all aspects of the post's functions," Milner said.

Marc G. Turchin
Sgt. Major Harvey L. Milner is the new garrison sergeant major.

Milner admits that from his level of command, a lot of things can and do get done; but, he said the most challenging thing about his job is not being too critical of himself.

"I have to remember that everything can't be fixed in one day."

Fixing things in the post's community is a high priority on Milner's list, he said, but one person cannot do everything.

"My idea of an ideal living community is a (place) where the people have pride in their community, a community that has people who are involved in how (its functions) are run," Milner said.

When the people in the community are involved and expressing their own ideas, the community can be whatever they want it to be, he said.

"Fort Benning is that community. Winning the (Army Community of Excellence) award proves it," Milner said.

To make sure Fort Benning wins the award again next year Milner said, "We (Fort Benning) have got to spend the money that we won this year wisely."

"As long as everyone continues to work hard, as they have done in the past, and the money is spent wisely, I can see us winning again next year."

Task force to explore downsizing

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Training and Doctrine Command Headquarters has created a special task force to identify any adverse effects that downsizing may have on soldiers and their families.

Dubbed Task Force Hawkeye, it consists of a committee of designated personnel from each TRADOC post who observe and report soldiers' perceptions of their quality of life to headquarters. Garrison Sgt. Maj. Harvey L. Milner is Fort Benning's "Hawkeye."

His job is to assess the impact of budget cuts and downsizing on post soldiers and report the results to the commanding general and TRADOC headquarters.

"TRADOC headquarters provides me with a list of concerns to monitor, such as finding out if soldiers feel that their medical benefits are decreasing because of budget cuts," Milner said. "We also add to the list any concerns that are particular to Fort Benning."

Among the perceptions that have been identified among soldiers on post is they believe they have to pull more details because of downsizing and noncommissioned officers believe that valuable training time is being diverted to performs such details. Concern over reduced tuition assistance is another issue.

> "At Fort Benning, it is not a case where the issues concerning soldiers have to be forced from the bottom up to be heard."
> — Sgt. Major Harvey L. Milner
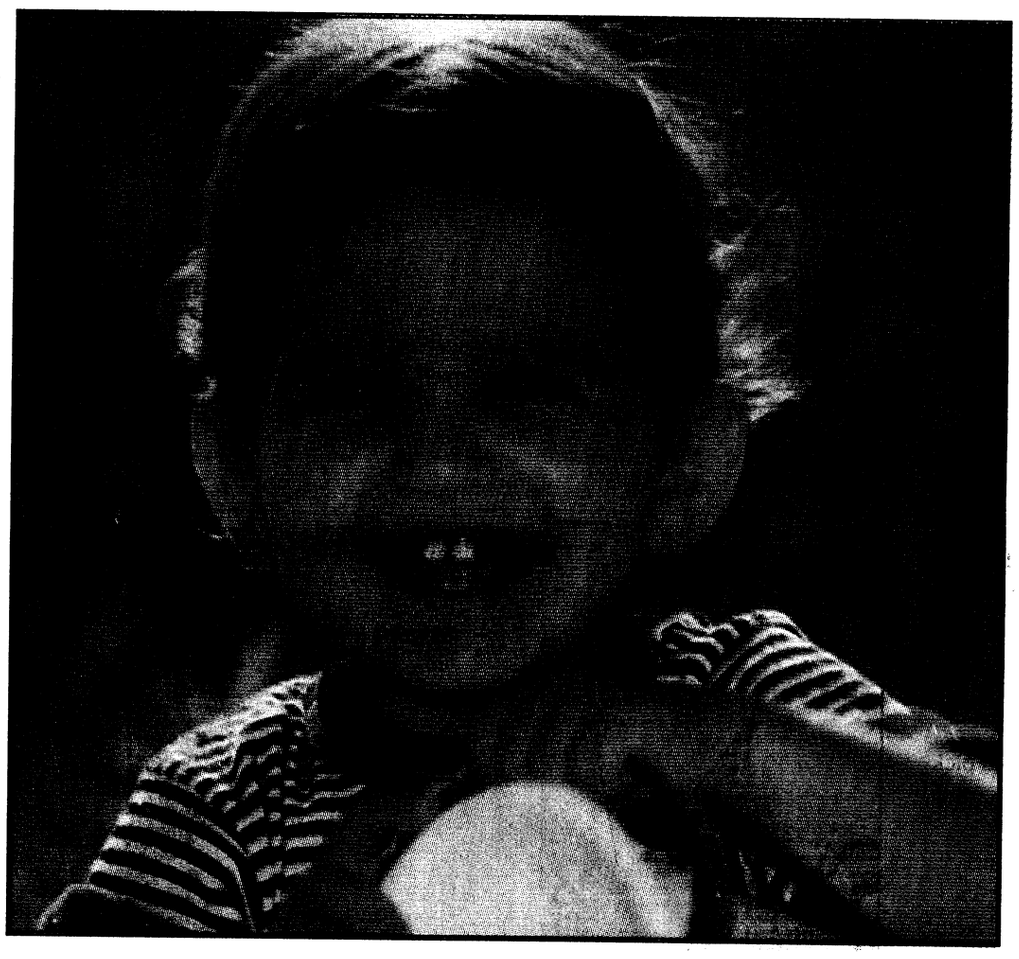
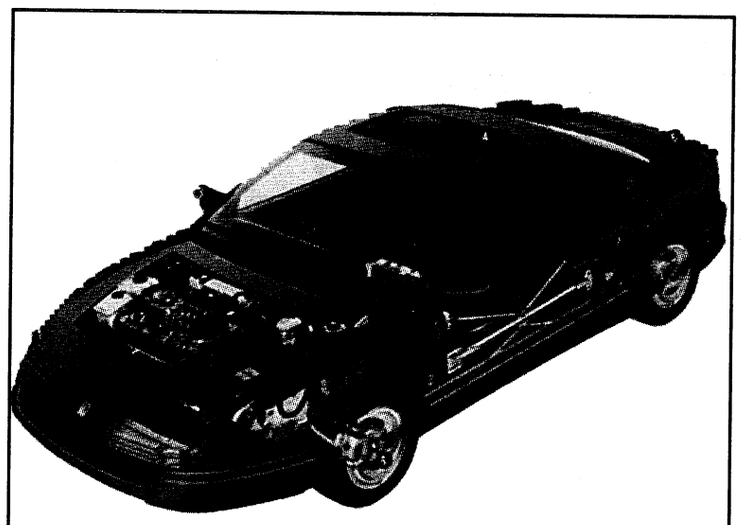
> Garrison sergeant major



Although the Hawkeye committee itself only gathers information, the information is then relayed to those who have the power to make changes.

"Fort Benning soldiers honestly see an improvement in the quality of life on post. The money we received from the Communities of Excellence competition will be used for even further improvements for soldiers and their families."



Fort Benning has several programs in place that are helping to accomplish quality of life improvement, including a network of advisory councils for Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers, the Post Exchange and Commissary, the enlisted, NCO and Officers' clubs and the commanding general.

"The commanding general is very concerned with the quality of life of Fort Benning soldiers," Milner added. "At Fort Benning, it is not a case where the issues concerning soldiers have to be forced from the bottom up to be heard. Those on top are truly concerned with the quality of life of our soldiers and are pushing the issues down to the bottom."

Pathfinders

Leading the way — accurately

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Pinpoint accuracy. That is what is required to be a pathfinder, the person who acts as a liaison between a ground unit and Army or Air Force aviation units, according to Sgt. 1st Class Nick Caisse, Pathfinder Branch chief.

Pathfinders are the link between aviation units and units being lifted out, or units parachuting into a drop zone the pathfinders have set up.

In three weeks, students in the Pathfinder Course learn how to prepare, rig and inspect everything from crates of supplies to high-mobility multi-purpose wheeled vehicles for slingloading; how to direct aircraft using hand and arm signals and radio communications; and how to set up and run helicopter landing zones and pick-up zones for resupply or inserting troops.

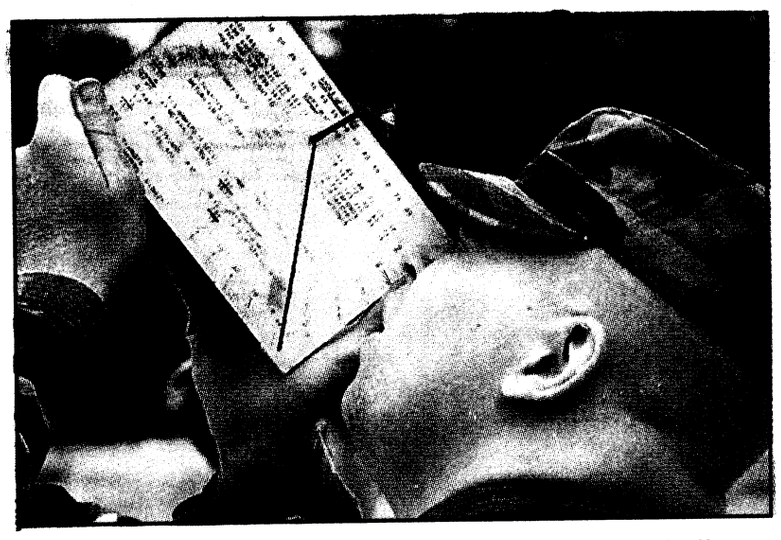
"Whether an aircraft is just taking out loads or bringing in loads, there are a myriad of factors that go into how a site has to be set up, based on the mission," Caisse said.

For a landing zone, pathfinders must take into consideration not only the size of the site and the number of bundles or jumpers being dropped, but the wind speed, drift and forward throw of the aircraft, among other things.

"They have to plan right down to the umpteenth factor," Caisse said. It's a lot of information, he said, but it has to be perfect.

"There is no margin for error, because you're dealing with multi-million dollar aircraft ... and even more important, human lives," Caisse said.

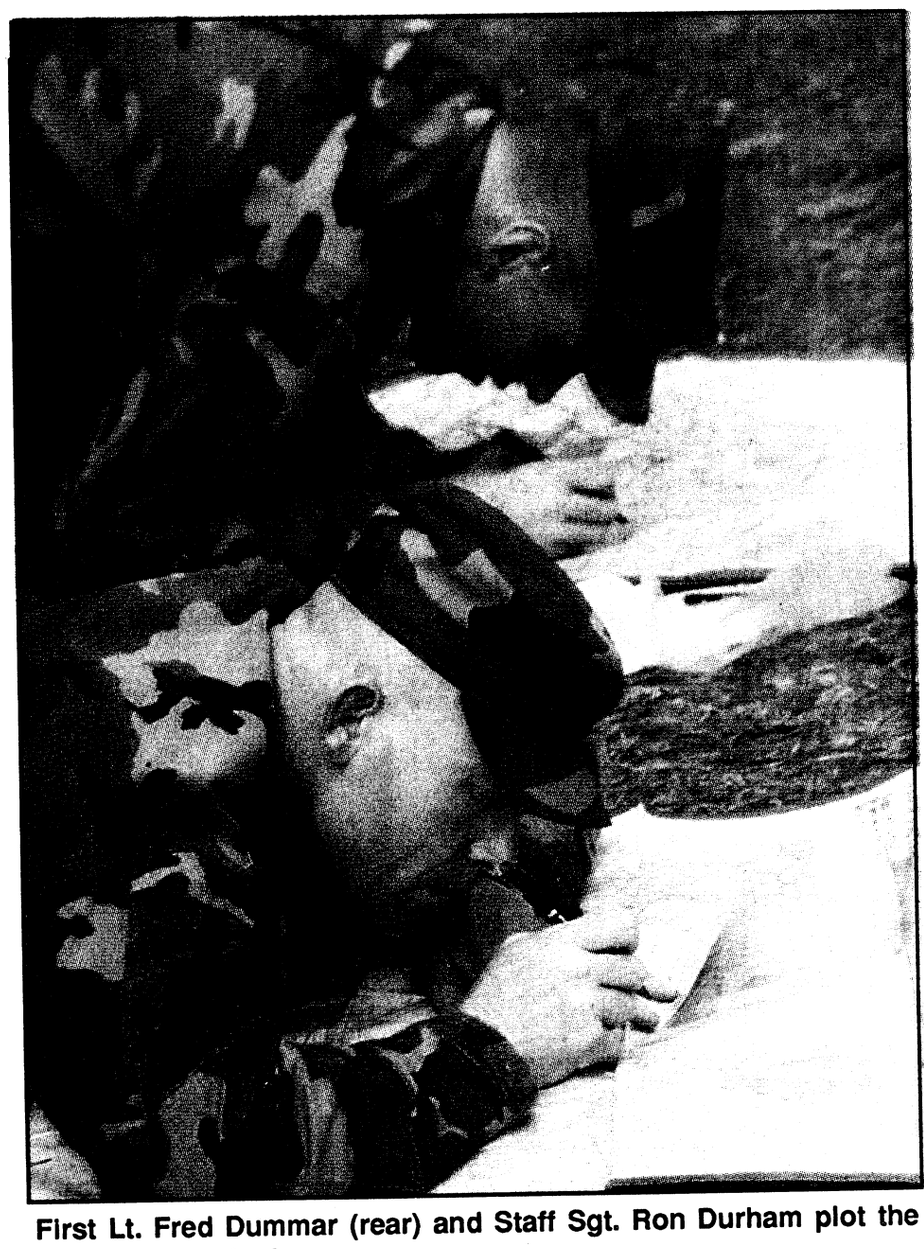
"We can't afford to have equipment damaged in a drop, or land in a position where the guy who needs it can't get at it because it's up in a tree somewhere.



"Our standards are extremely high ... but it's got to be that way, because people's lives depend on what we do."

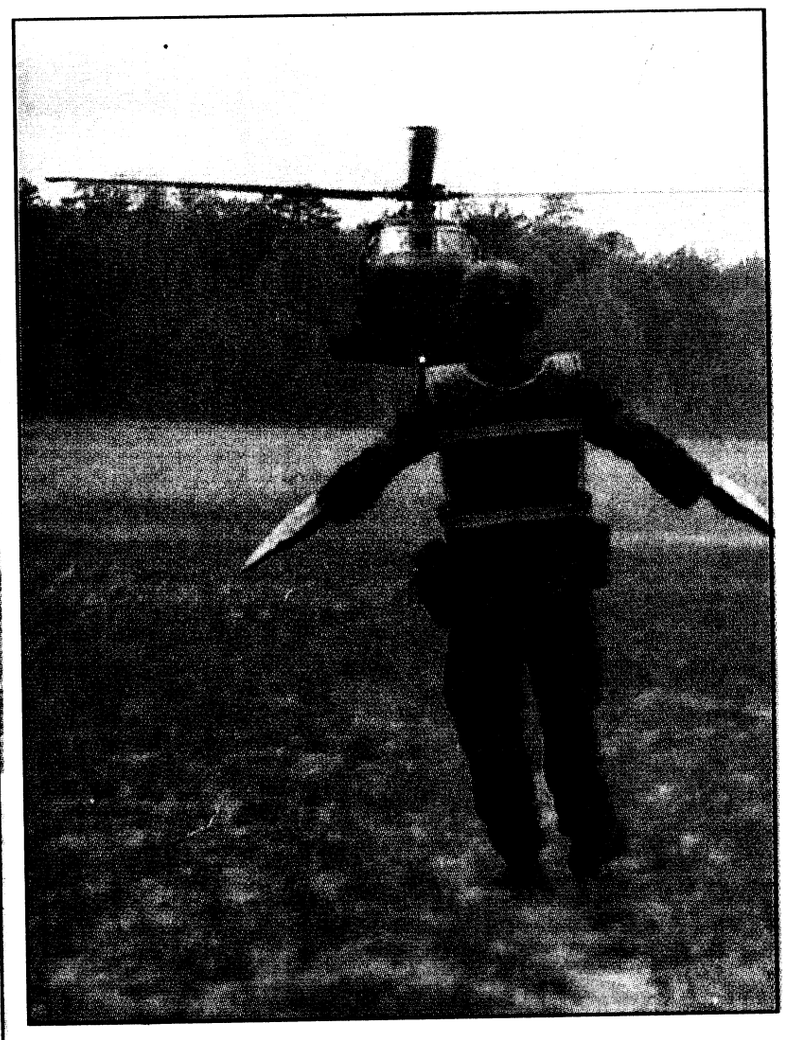
"It's a difficult procedure to set up a drop zone," said Capt. Patrick Fetterman, one of the Pathfinder Course students.

"You've got to do some calculations, use geometry and mathematical formulas," Fetterman said.



"You have panels marking where the jumper is supposed to land, and far panels for the aircraft to line up on. Those have to be on the appropriate azimuth and at the correct distance, and there's not much margin for error. You have to have the exact alignment — (the instructors) use a compass to check it."

"Whenever the students complain about the high standards," Caisse said, "I say, 'put yourself in the jumper's shoes.' When they think about that, they stop complaining."



Second Lt. Tim Stiansen checks the angle of a balloon sent up to determine how the wind will affect parachute drift.

Tactics

OSUT soldiers learn basics

By David R. Smith
2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment

Company B, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment conducted four periods of individual tactical training March 14 and 15.

ITT is an introduction for Infantry One Station Unit Training soldiers to learn individual movement techniques, camouflage, flares, the night infiltration course and how to move as a buddy team.

The first day of training is the first time most of the soldiers have learned how to camouflage themselves and their equipment, how to use hand and arm signals, how to perform individual movement techniques and how to move as a member of a buddy team.

"ITT was like basic rifle marksmanship in that the training the soldier received was the foundation of tactical training that the soldier needed to be an infantryman," said Staff Sgt. James T. Fielding, a drill sergeant from Co. B, 2nd Bn., 58th Inf. Regt.

The night of March 14 was the first time the soldiers bivouac and the drill sergeants instructed the soldiers in noise and light discipline and how to react to flares.

"ITT periods 1 and 2 provide excellent training because it is the soldiers first lesson in a tactical environment where he really starts to learn about field discipline," said Staff Sgt. Ronald E. Cline, a drill sergeant from 4th Platoon.

The second day of training, the soldiers receive their first introduction to the multiple integrated laser engagement system. Soldiers wear the MILES while negotiating a fire and maneuver lane, where he practices the techniques he learned the day before.

A soldiers faces both opposing forces with MILES and drill sergeants and instructors from the 29th Infantry Regiment who are able to set off his MILES if he does not perform the movement techniques correctly. "I learned a lot and the training here is better than what I received at Fort Dix, N.J., because the cadre were more thorough in teaching the tasks," said Pvt. 1 Donald Whitehouse.

ITT training culminates in the night infiltration course. A soldier must low crawl over 50 yards while M-60 machine gun rounds are fired over his head and explosions are going off around him. The live fire is a new experience for most of the soldiers, and some said they were nervous and scared before, but they were excited afterwards.

Correctly taught, ITT provides a foundation to build upon later in the training cycle during squad tactical training and the final field training exercise.

courts martial

By Janet Wilkins Charvat
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

The following are the results of recent courts-martial from February to April.

At a special court-martial, March 2, Sgt. Teresa Copeland, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, was convicted of larceny of military property in excess of $100, making a false claim and presenting a false claim. She was sentenced to a reprimand, reduction to specialist and forfeiture of $200 pay per month for six months.

At a special court-martial, March 4, Pvt. 2 Allen M. Hubbard, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, was convicted of striking a superior officer, disobeying a superior commissioned officer, communicating a threat, disobeying a noncommissioned officer, disrespect to a noncommissioned officer and two specifications of failure to repair. He was sentenced to a bad conduct discharge, confinement for five months, reduction to private 1 and forfeiture of $554 for five months.

At a general court-martial, March 11, Staff Sgt. Ibrahin Robles-Ramos, Headquarters and Service Company, 43d Engineer Battalion, 36th Engineer Group, was convicted of assault consummated by a battery, assault with intent to inflict grievous bodily harm, two specifications of making a false official statement and disobeying a superior commissioned officer. He was sentenced to a bad conduct discharge, confinement for six years and reduction to private 1.

BNCOC, ITB conduct training exercise

By Mike Crawford
1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment

The Basic Noncommissioned Officer Course and the Infantry Training Brigade recently completed a field training exercise that emphasized shared training, and gave both groups insight into what future assignments would be like for them.

The noncommissioned officers from BNCOC acted as team and squad leaders, while the soldiers going through basic training acted as squad members.

From April 25 to 29, the soldiers from both schools negotiated a series of situational training exercise lanes.

The schools ensured that the NCOs were teamed with soldiers of the same military occupational specialty, so that all 11B, 11C and 11M soldiers trained in their specific MOS.

The training allowed the NCOs to see what kind of soldiers would be coming to their future units, and it gave the trainees an opportunity to see their future squad and team leaders.

It also provided the trainees a chance to ask questions about the regular Army since their exposure has been limited to that of their drill sergeants up to that point.

2/69 to change commanders

USIAC Public Affairs Office

The 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized), will change command today at 9 a.m. on Dickman Field, Harmony Church.

Lt. Col. Mike Davis will assume command of the Panther Battalion from Lt. Col. James E. Bessler.

Davis, from Anderson, S.C., graduated with a bachelor of science degree from the University of Tennessee in 1978 and was commissioned an armor second lieutenant. He has previously served in Germany, Fort Hood and Fort Bliss, Texas, and with the 197th Infantry Brigade and 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment.

Bessler, who has commanded the 2nd Battalion for the last two years, is a native of Battle Creek, Mich.

He was commissioned an armor second lieutenant upon graduation from the U.S. Military Academy in 1973. His previous assignments include Fort Carson, Colo., Germany, Australia and Korea.

SOA 'nets' MEDDAC

By Terry K. Ray
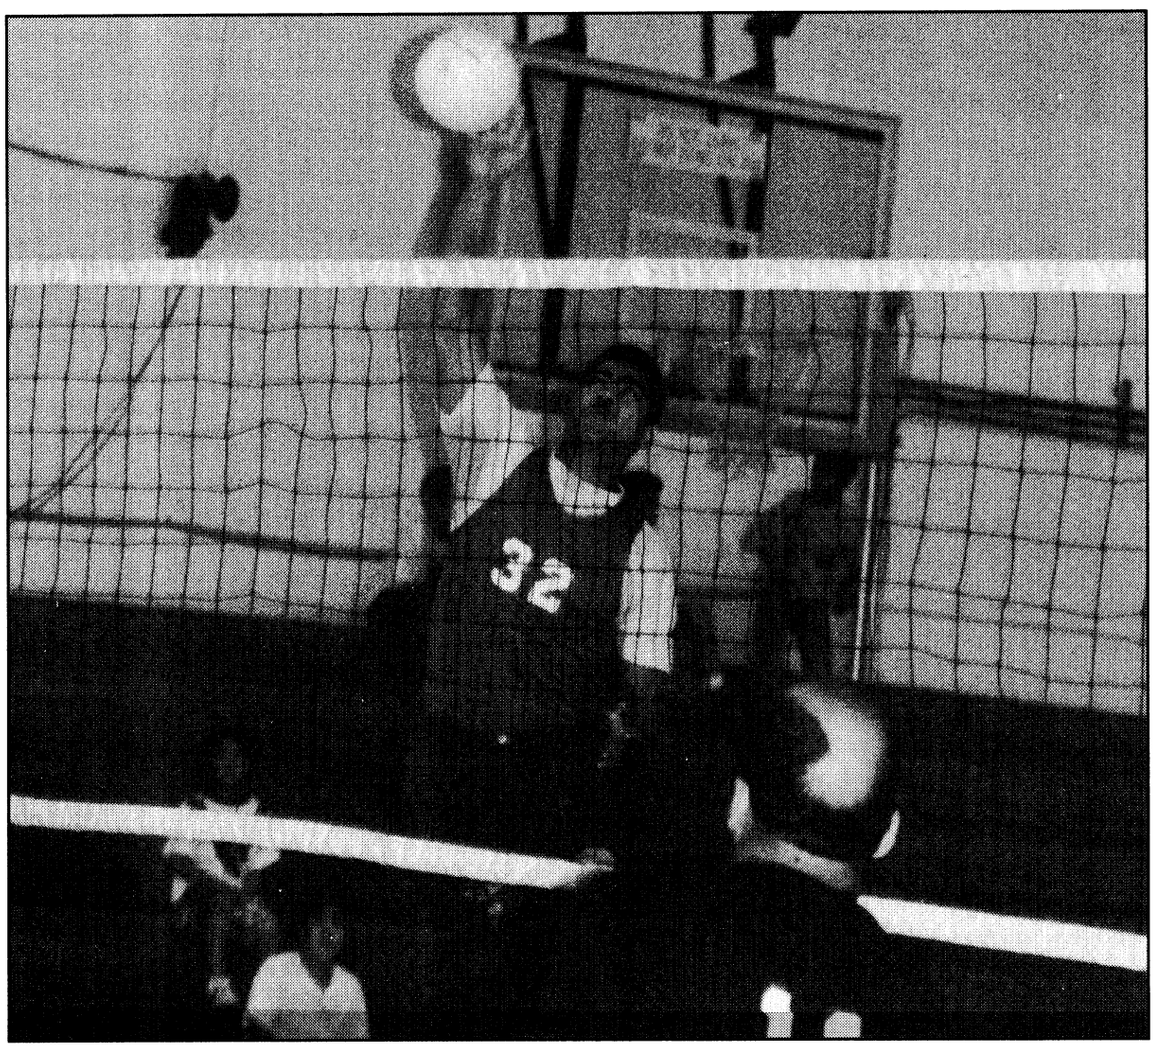
Special to The Bayonet©



The 1994 U.S. Army Infantry Center Intramural Volleyball Championship May 4 at Audie Murphy Fitness Center ended with the crowning of the School of the Americas after they downed the U.S. Army Medical Department Activity two games to none, 15-5 and 17-16.

In game one, SOA opened the game with 3 straight points only to have MEDDAC come back and score the next 5 points for a 5-3 lead. SOA turned up the heat, scoring the final 12 points behind the serve of Jenaro Canales, sets by Miguel Mora and kills from Manolo Rodriguez.

MEDDAC struggled to get its game under control, and the first game was by the boards before MEDDAC could mount any type of a comeback.

The second game of the match turned into a seesaw battle with both teams looking to take control and set the pace, but good team defense by both sides kept the offenses from gaining any ground on each other.

Late in the match and up 14-13, MEDDAC failed time and time again to put SOA away for the win to tie the match at one game apiece.

Marc G. Turchin

U.S. Army Medical Department Activity team player Semisi Niusulu gets set to spike the ball on School of the Americas.

SOA finally tied the game at 15, then MEDDAC once again took a 1-point lead at 16-15 and again failed to drive the spike home to win the game.

SOA tied the game at 16, and after several side outs won the game on a little dink at the net by SOA netter Emilio Alvarado that the MEDDAC front line couldn't handle.

"We felt comfortable going up against MEDDAC, since we had defeated them earlier in the tournament," said Canales. "The only thing we didn't know was how they would come to play, scared or out for revenge. It was a very exciting match."

MEDDAC was led by power hitters Kris Johnson and Semisi Niusulu at the net with Leigh Ann Haines doing the setting.

Ken Berry and Trent Collins kept MEDDAC in the game with strong defense on the net.

ITB drill sergeant snags second in bodybuilding

By James Brownlee
Infantry Training Brigade

A drill sergeant from 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, recently placed second in the overall competition and first in the posing portion of the Southeastern Military Muscle Classic in Panama City, Fla.

Staff Sgt. Coley M. Reaves added the honor to his other titles, including a first-place win in the 1985 Mr. Fort Bragg competition, heavyweight division and appearing in the Italian Muscle and Fitness Magazine's December 1989 issue.

Reaves began lifting at the age of 15 and became interested in bodybuilding after reading Muscle and Fitness Magazine.

"It (bodybuilding) enhances my self-esteem and self-confidence," Reaves said. "It is a healthy lifestyle, and I enjoy doing it."

The long hours required as a drill sergeant and service in the Army present Reaves with a busy schedule to work around.

"I usually work out about six times a week in addition to doing regular physical training with my trainees," Reaves said. "Being a drill sergeant is very time constraining, and it is hard to find the time to work out like I want to, especially during the first four or five weeks of a new cycle; however, my fellow drill sergeants are real good about working out the schedule with me so that I can get my workout time in most every day."

Self-motivation and support from others are elements needed for bodybuilding, he said.

"My motivation comes from working hard and seeing the results from what I have done," Reaves said.

"Besides inner or self-motivation, my wife, Trish, gives me all of the encouragement and support I need," he said. "It also helps in being a good role model for my son, Bryan, who is 3 years old."

Reaves, who follows a strict regimen of intensive workouts and a nutritional diet, tries to emphasize his hardest and most massive and rippled muscles during the posing portion of a competition. He concentrates his workouts mostly on the sides of his chest, back lats, legs and abdominals.

His diet is a low-sodium, high-protein, high-carbohydrate diet with four or five meals a day, in which he eats one gram of protein for every pound he weighs.

Two weeks prior to a competition, he begins eating seven small meals a day, increasing his protein intake and decreasing his carbohydrate intake by half, and drinks two to three gallons of water a day.

Reaves said the most difficult part of getting ready for a competition begins five days out. He hits the sauna for 10 to 15 minutes a day to reduce his water gain and begins to decrease his water intake to two gallons a day and his meals to three small meals a day, the day of competition.

"Body-building is just not a frame of mind; it is a way of life," Reaves said. "This is the lifestyle that suits me best, both physically and mentally."

Youth Orioles defeat Blue Jays 15 to 7

Youth Activities

The Orioles beat the Blue Jays to avenge their loss to the Blue Jays several weeks ago. Both teams belong to the Fort Benning Youth Activities 13- to 15-Year-Old Baseball League.

The Orioles batted first. Matt Kapinos hit a double and scored the first run when Ty Mason hit a sacrifice for the RBI.

The Blue Jays failed to score in the first as Oriole pitcher Ty Mason struck out two Blue Jays and Rick Rhodes got a solid hit, but it was fielded by Ceylona Chamberlain on second, who threw the runner out at first.

The Oriole were stopped cold by the Jay's defense in the second. The first Oriole batter hit to shortstop Rick Rhodes who made the play and threw the runner out at first. Chris Callahan got on base with a third strike dropped ball by the catcher. Then, he stole second and third. He was left stranded as Nurnberg struck out the next two Orioles.

The Blue Jays racked up the runs when they came to bat in the bottom of the second. Craig Nurnberg walked and stole second and third. Tony Veneziani walked and stole second. Mason struck out the next Blue Jay for the first out. Steve Wojdakowski also walked to load up the bases for the Jays.

Kara Morris came to bat and walked to bring Nurnberg in for the Jay's first run. Sarah Rhodes also walked to bring in Veneziani for another run.

The Orioles put in relief pitcher Jeremy Callahan as Tommy Henderson came to bat. Henderson was hit by a pitch and awarded first to bring in Wojdakowski for yet another Blue Jay score.

Callahan struck out the next batter for out two. Mike Richert hit a double and brought in Morris and Sarah Rhodes. Nurnberg came to bat for the second time in the inning and hit a single which drove in two RBI as Henderson and Richert both scored.

Veneziani also got another at bat in the second and hit it to first baseman Michael Bills who fielded it and put the runner out at first for the third out.

The Orioles didn't have much luck in the third. Tony Dupree got on base with a walk and stole second and third. Nurnberg struck out two before Mason came up and singled to drive in Dupree for the Orioles' second run.

J. Callahan came to bat and hit it straight back to Nurnberg, who made the play and threw the runner out at first. The Blue Jays could not rejuvenate their drive when they came to the plate as Oriole pitcher Callahan struck out three in a row.

Michael Bills came up to bat first for the Orioles in the top of the fourth and added another run with an in-the-park home run. C. Callahan hit a fly ball which was caught by third baseman Wojdakowski. Kiki Mister walked and stole second and third. Nurnberg pitched himself out of trouble by striking out the next batter for the third out. The Jays were disappointed at the plate again as J. Callahan again struck out three consecutive batters.

Bats started to crack as the Orioles came up in the fifth. Mason walked ad was driven in by J. Callahan's triple. Bills came up to bring Callahan in as he hit his second home run of the game, bouncing the ball off th left field fence.

C. Callahan singled and stole second, third and home. Kiki Mister walked and also stole second, third and home bringing the score to 8 to 7, putting the Orioles ahead. Nurnberg struck out the next two batters and was looking to end the drive but walked Calob Preston who stole second, third and home.

Kapinos hit a double but was left on base as Mason hit a fly ball to center field that was caught by Sherman Henderson for the third out. The Orioles defense kept the Jay at bay in the bottom of the fifth.

Richert hit to Oriole pitcher J. Callahan who made the play for the first out. Nurnberg got to second with a double. Veneziani hit a fly ball to second base that was caught by Daniel Bonilla for the second out. Jeremy Walley hit a hard ground ball to pitcher Callahan but was thrown out on first.

When the Orioles came to bat in the sixth, J. Callahan singled and scored when he stole second, third and home. Nurnberg struck out the next Oriole. C. Callahan doubled but was picked off by Jays' catcher Richert and third baseman Wojdakowski trying to steal third.

The Orioles came on strong in the seventh as Bonilla started things rolling when he walked and stole second, third and home.

The next batter was struck out by Nurnberg. Dupree got on base with a third strike drop from the catcher and scored when he too, stole second, third and home. Nurnberg got the second out with a strike out.

The Orioles came back with back-to-back home runs when both Ty Mason and Jeremy Callahan both hit in-the-park home runs. Bills came to bat and doubled. C. Callahan singled to drive in Bills and the got to third with a steal.

He was left stranded when Nurnberg struck out the next batter. The Blue Jays could not come back in the bottom of the seventh as Callahan struck out two and Richert's hit to third was fielded by Mason who threw the runner out for the final out of the game leaving the final score Orioles 15, Blue Jays 7.

OWC Festival of Running ready, set, go for Saturday

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The 1994 Officers' Wives' Club Festival of Running is just around the corner. Saturday is the day, and Infantry Hall is the place to be.

This year's events include a 10 and 5K run as well as a one-mile fun run.

"This is one of the ways we raise funds for our many projects," said Dusty Severn, chairwoman of the event. "The funds provide needed monies to a number of post and tri-community charities such as the Salvation Army, the Boy and Girl Scouts of America and Santa's Castle, to name a few."

Activities are set to get under way at 8 a.m. with the 5K race. The 10K run will begin at 9 a.m., to be followed by the one-mile fun run at 10:30.

Preregistration will run through Monday, with a cost of $10. After Monday, the cost is $12.

Registration forms can be picked up at the OWC Office, Building 229, at the corner of Ingersoll Street and Dixie Road. The office is open Monday through Thursday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.
