Ga. Department of Natural Resources

A Civil War encampment at Franklin D. Roosevelt State Park will be hosted by the 30th Georgia Volunteer Infantry Regiment.

Both Confederate and Union encampments will be set up at FDR State Park at the ball field across from the Liberty Bell Pool on Highway 354 Saturday and Sunday from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m.

The trip, especially for the novice, is limited to 10 hikers 8 years of age or older. Those under 18 years of age must be accompanied by an adult. There is a fee for the trip and preregistration is required.

For registration requirements and forms, contact the park office at (706) 663-4858.

MPs en route to keep peace; 586th ready

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

One group of soldiers from Fort Benning is on its way to Haiti to assist in Operation Uphold Democracy, while another unit is waiting in the wings for deployment.

The 988th Military Police Company left Thursday at various times from Lawson Army Airfield for Haiti. Still waiting for a departure date is the 586th Engineer Company (Assault Float Bridge).

Post officials announced Sept. 14 that the 586th and the 988th were on alert for deployment. Both units will support the multinational forces already in Haiti.

Each unit will be responsible for missions unique to its specific jobs. The 988th's mission in Haiti will be "battlefield circulation and control, area security, detainee operations and law and order operations," according to Capt. David F. Lewis, company commander of the 988th.

"I anticipate performing all four of the Military Police missions," said Lewis. Those missions are:

- Battlefield circulation and control — the movement of traffic along the routes in an area the MPs control
- Area security — securing critical sites and things deemed important by the commander of the U.S. troops in Haiti
- Detainee operations — anyone who is detained will be interviewed by military intelligence to make sure detainees are not causing trouble
- Law and order operations — the same as on Fort Benning — maintaining law and order

While the 988th's mission revolves around security, the 586th's mission deals with getting troops from one place to another.

"Our mission as a unit is to build bridges," said Capt. Carol L. Anderson, commander of the 586th.

Anderson, who if deployed will be the first female engineer bridge company commander ever deployed, said the 586th mainly builds float bridges but is also able to build fixed bridges.

Soldiers in the 586th, which is part of the 36th Engineer Group, and the 988th, which is part of the Military Police Activity, have spent the last week preparing for their deployments.

Soldiers from both units prepared for deployment by going through soldiers readiness processing and arranging equipment to be transported.

SRP included getting new identification cards (if needed), receiving immunization shots, taking care of legal and financial matters and updating personal and family records.

Some of the 586th's equipment was loaded onto a train by the 63rd Engineer Company, and some was loaded onto trucks by the 586th and the 608th Ordnance Co. to be transported to an undisclosed location. The convoy of military trucks was driven by the 104th Transportation Company.

The 586th's bridge equipment, including transporters and bridge pieces, was loaded onto boats. Some pieces are already en route to Haiti, she said.

"Every single thing that we have in the unit, that we own, is at (the) port," Anderson said.

"The main focus of my job (since being on alert) has been to prepare for the deployment ... by getting load plans for the airplane," said 1st Lt. Catherine L. Rolling, movement officer for the 988th.

Rolling said a load plan is a list that describes everything the unit takes for its deployment. The list of equipment, the number of pallets used to hold the equipment and the weight of those pallets will determine the number and type of aircraft used to transport the equipment.

Even with all the activity going on, the morale level in both units is still high, according to both company commanders.

"Morale level has been very high, and they have done a super job in preparing the company to move out," Lewis said. "It's a great opportunity for Fort Benning," he continued. "It's a real good, positive opportunity for the company to go down there and do well."

"We should be able to accomplish our mission," said Spc. Aaron J. Berger, bridge crewman for the 586th.

Prescription procedures change at PRIMUS

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

People who receive medical care at the Primary Care for the Uniformed Services Clinic should review their prescriptions in light of some recent changes in prescription procedures at the clinic.

According to Col. Errol L. Moran, chief of the Pharmacy Service at Martin Army Community Hospital, PRIMUS patients will continue to receive most of their medications from the PRIMUS Pharmacy. However, patients may have to make other arrangements in the following cases:

- If a PRIMUS physician prescribes a medication not available at the PRIMUS Pharmacy, the patient may bring the prescription to the Main Pharmacy at MACH.
- If a prescription was originally filled at the PRIMUS Pharmacy, refills must also be filled there. If the medication is no longer available at the PRIMUS Pharmacy, the patient must get a new prescription from a PRIMUS physician to have the prescription filled at MACH.
- Some PRIMUS patients previously received prescriptions that were filled at Big B Drugs. Refills for these prescriptions will no longer be honored at Big B, and, by law, cannot be filled at the PRIMUS or MACH pharmacies. Patients with these prescriptions must return to PRIMUS for new prescriptions, which can then be filled at MACH.
- If a patient has a prescription for a medication that is not available at either PRIMUS or MACH, the patient must see a PRIMUS physician to get a prescription for an alternate medication. The new prescription may then be filled at PRIMUS or MACH, depending on the availability of the medication.

For more information, call the hospital pharmacy at 544-1379.

Annual CFC campaign to kick off

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

The Combined Federal Campaign will kick off its annual drive Thursday and continue through Nov. 15 on Fort Benning.

The CFC combines fund-raising drives of many health and welfare agencies into a single campaign.

"It's a one-time shot at donating to a particular charity that you want to donate to instead of having someone solicit you all through the year," said Marge D. Copland, CFC coordinator.

One of the main goals for this year's campaign is to get the post community involved, said Maj. Chuck Walls, garrison executive officer and co-chairman of the Fort Benning CFC campaign.

"We want to make sure that every soldier, every (Department of Defense) civilian has been approached and asked, 'Do you want to contribute?' " Walls said.

Soldiers and DoD civilians will be able to pledge their donations through designated people in their offices or units, Copland said.

A meeting was conducted Wednesday to brief project coordinators who will represent their units or directorates during the CFC drive, Walls said.

Walls said he discussed background information about CFC, technical aspects of filling out the pledge forms, the accounting sheets and the "rules of engagement" for soliciting.

Wall's "rules" consist of telling the people involved that they can solicit someone more than once only if that person has not already contributed. But, they are not allowed to harass anyone in any way.

The project coordinators are expected to select "key personnel" to help assist them in soliciting the people in their units and directorates, Copland said.

As the pamphlets are returned, the project coordinators are responsible for turning in the filled-out pamphlets to the CFC office, she said.

Copland said she is responsible for taking the pledge forms to the United Way office in Columbus and updating Walls about how the campaign is going.

Check 5001 to keep donations helping soldiers at Fort Benning

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

When the Combined Federal Campaign begins Sept. 30, so will the 5001 Fund drive.

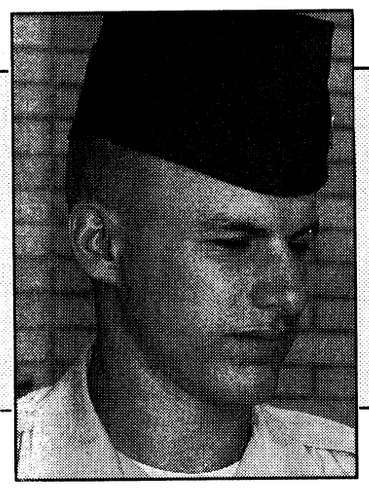
The 5001 Fund, named for the four-digit code used when filling out the CFC pledge form, is a fund that brings money back to the Fort Benning community, according to Brian Smith, marketing director for Directorate of Community Activities.

The fund helps supports post organizations, including volunteer services, Santa's Castle, youth services and child care, Smith said.

The 5001 Fund, for example, gives money to youth services so parents don't have to pay as much for services, according to Roy Barnes, vice president of the Soldiers' Family Support Association.

"I have personally seen this help soldiers on this installation through the Red Cross and the Army Community Service food locker," said Maj. Chuck Walls, garrison executive officer.

Last year, there were requests for money through the 5001 Fund totaling $460,000, Barnes said. The fund only had approximately $58,000 to spend.



The fund supports child care for parents who volunteer their time for on post organizations, according to Linda Scorgie, treasurer of Soldiers' Family Support Association.

Volunteers working, in 3,200 capacities on post saved more than $2 million in work hours last year alone, Barnes said.

"It (the 5001 Fund) really does work for our soldiers," Walls said.

VARIOUS VOICES

What do you think about the situation in Haiti?

Pfc. Stephen J. Stapp, 1st Battalion, 184th Infantry Regiment (Mechanized), Auburn, Calif. — "I don't think America should be involved in it, but if it turns out I have to go, I'll go willingly."

Jimmie Brown, retired — "I think they let it last too long. They should have gone in sooner and not let it build up."

Spc. Barron Cheek, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment — "I think it's a lot of money to spend just to go down there, turn around and come back."

Mary Russell, family member — "I hate it because we could lose some of our soldiers' lives going over there. I hate that the Haitian people are getting killed, but I don't want Americans to be killed."

1st Sgt. Larry Lepkowski, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 317th Engineer Battalion — "I support it. I think we ought to do things to help out third-world countries and support democracy."

Spc. Carl Swan, B Battery, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment — "I think it's a big mistake. It's not our business; just another internal conflict that we're sticking our noses into, another way to get soldiers killed with no military objective.."

Putting a face on tragedy

By Jim Garamone
American Forces Information Service

commentary

One death is a tragedy; a million, a statistic.

I had never really grasped the significance of this until I saw a photo from Zaire.

Like most Americans I clucked my tongue and thought it was terrible when the reports of massacres started coming out of Rwanda in April.

Stories said thousands were being killed throughout the country. Hutus were killing Tutsis, and the Rwanda Patriotic Front army, mostly Tutsis, was advancing on the capital of Kigali.

When millions of Rwandans fled to Zaire, again I clucked my tongue and thought it was terrible. See, it's tough to envision a million people, and even if you could see a million people at once, they would remain faceless.

Articles estimated between 500,000 and 750,000 people killed in the Rwandan civil war. Reporters tried to put it in perspective. Some said it was as if everyone in Indianapolis was killed.

Other reporters tried to describe the exodus of Rwandans by saying it was as if everyone in San Francisco packed his belongings and walked to Sacramento. But again, this is something I have a hard time envisioning.

Once the refugees arrived in Zaire, cholera and dysentery broke out. Reporters talked of thousands of refugees dying in the epidemic.

President Bill Clinton called on the U.S. military to "stop the dying." Airlift of critical water purification units began immediately, and American service members arrived in Zaire, Uganda and Rwanda.

Among the first to arrive was Air Force Master Sgt. Michael J. Haggerty, a photographer. He sent photos back to the Pentagon to the Joint Combat Camera Center, and I went through them to accompany an article on the humanitarian effort.

One of his photos hit me in a way that all the statistics in the world couldn't. It was a picture of a small, emaciated child in a fetal position lying dead by the side of a road.

This small child put a face on the tragedy. I have two sons. I can imagine the pain and helplessness the family and friends must have felt when they brought the lifeless little body to the road.

Since then, photographers have recorded the progress of the U.S. humanitarian mission in Zaire and Rwanda. While disease is still a problem, officials say a corner has been turned.

Photos now show young Rwandan refugees waiting for food and clean water provided by U.S. service members.

Soldiers, sailors, airmen, Marines and Department of Defense civilians are working together to put an end to conditions where a family has to stack a dead child by the road.

The citizens of the United States should be very proud of what these service members and civilians have accomplished.

I know I am proud to play a small part in the organization the world turns to when it's time to "stop the dying."

dial 545-boss

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for soldiers, family members and civilians to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere. While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies established to provide assistance, the line offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders.

The Bayonet features some of the calls that may benefit other members of the Fort Benning community.

☎ Call: In the last two weeks, three of my neighbors' dogs have died of parvo. My dog also died recently.

I think the disease is in the ground. I was told by a veterinarian that I couldn't have another dog for a year because my dog was in the house.

I believe that the disease is spreading from yard to yard because it takes three weeks to be seen by a vet in order to get an animal vaccinated.

I also believe the vet clinic needs more help in order to vaccinate animals more quickly or the parvo needs to be treated.

I was was told by Housing officials that there was nothing they could do. I requested to be moved somewhere else, but the request was denied.

Veterinary Services' response:

Canine parvovirus is a viral disease mainly affecting puppies 6 to 16 weeks of age. It causes a severe gastroenteritis that often leads to death in untreated cases.

The virus is shed in the feces, saliva and vomit. The virus can be transmitted among dogs by contaminated articles such as food bowls. It is common for entire litters to become infected.

The virus can remain in the environment for long periods, but is inactivated by sunlight and bleach solutions. Vaccinations may prevent the disease and should be started at 6 to 8 weeks of age.

We cannot confirm greater than normal number of cases of CPV in Fort Benning housing areas.

Our estimate is that we are seeing approximately the same number of cases as in previous years. In your case, we suspect that several labrador puppies from the same litter were affected.

We regret that your puppy could not be vaccinated in our facility. We attempt to provide the maximum number of appointments, using available resources.

For routine vaccination appointments, we can generally provide service within two weeks.

If unable to provide timely service, our personnel encourage the use of civilian veterinary care to prevent instances such as this. Also, during May , we provided two days of walk-in service for vaccinations to all animals at that time.

Recommendations vary for cleaning areas where CPV infected animals have been. Generally, we recommend cleaning inside areas, bowls, etc., with a 1:32 solution of bleach and water.

Also, it is best that no susceptible animals be introduced into these areas for at least 30 days.

To our knowledge, there is no practical way to disinfect outside yard areas. Sunlight inactivates the areas after a short period of time.

☎ Call: I am a sergeant and I have a complaint with large groups of civilians using the dining facility during the soldiers' lunch hour.

What can be done?

Directorate of Logistics' response:

The large group of civilians was actually a Junior ROTC youth group.

Such nonprofit youth groups are routinely hosted by the Public Affairs Office to promote public relations and to enhance recruiting possibilities.

Active duty soldiers will continue to be served ahead of guests.

Soldiers do a lot of great things

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

commentary

As soldiers, we are sometimes prone to doing dumb things.

We allow our buddies to drive home from the Hidden Door Club when they can barely find the club's front door.

We find ourselves standing outside some Columbus night club suffering from undue pressure on our bladders, so we do to the side of a building what we often do to the side of a tree in the field. Only now we catch the undivided attention of Columbus' finest.

Or we might even take munitions home from the field with us planning on having an exciting "Fourth," but never make it because something goes wrong and the dadburn thing blows up and either burns down a house trailer or singes the nose hairs.

We also do a lot of great things.

Every time I see someone lending a hand to a stranded motorist on I-185, it's usually a soldier. The other evening some lady was trying to force some money on a soldier for the help he provided. He laughed, he smiled and he kept saying, "No thank you."

Command Sgt. Maj. Eddie Roberts of the 11th Infantry Regiment has a platoon of soldiers who are helping students with their school work on Saturdays.

Not only do they tutor the students in school subjects, but they serve as a role model for these young men and women.

If we're going to get kids off the streets, keep them off the streets, this is certainly a large step in the right direction.

Not too long ago our single soldiers as part of the Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers program banded together to build a house for a homeless family, part of the Habitat for Humanity program.

Many of the soldier-carpenters had never held a hammer before and their thumbs were proof of that, but they pitched in and the house got built.

Of course, our soldiers also coach little league, walk and run for charity, are lay readers in churches, scout leaders and more.

On top of all that, our soldiers are "A Number One."

These are the firefighters of the Army. The balloon goes up so whom do you call? You call Fort Benning. You get the rangers, the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, the 36th Engineer Group or maybe even the 988th Military Police Company.

These are the guys and gals who make Fort Benning a premier force projection platform.

And how did they get to be so great? Training. And who are the premier trainers in the Army? In addition to the noncommissioned officers in the units, we've got the cadre in the 11th Infantry teaching NCOs and officers and paratroopers.

We've got the 29th Infantry teaching weapons systems and we've got the Ranger Training Brigade teaching hooah.

No wonder Fort Benning is the best post in the Army. Now, if we could just cut down on some of our bone-headed moves ...

Red Cross ends 1st phase of flood relief, gives supplies to charity

Shelby Carr

Pat Kelly, a Red Coss volunteer, loads a crateful of supplies onto a truck bound for a national Red Cross warehouse Sept. 6. The warehouse at Lawson Army Airfield supplied other warehouses in Albany, Bainbridge, Macon, Florida and other areas hit by Tropical Storm Alberta and the floods. The warehouse shut down Sept. 9 and relief supplies were placed in American Red Cross warehouses or donated to charities, such as Santa's Castle.

Santa's Castle benefits from giveaway with cleaning supplies

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

The Red Cross has completed the initial phase of flood relief in Georgia and has distributed excess cleaning supplies collected for that program to local charities including Santa's Castle, said Linda Scorgie, station manager of the Fort Benning Red Cross.

Santa's Castle is a charitable organization on post that provides Christmas toys for children in lower income families. Volunteers with Santa's Castle will use the cleaning supplies from the Red Cross, incluging sponges, cleaners, paper towels and soap, to prepare both new and second-hand toys for the winter holidays.

Santa's Castle is just one of several nonprofit local organizations to receive excess cleaning supply donations from the Red Cross, Scorgie said.

During flood relief efforts, the community united to raise funds for cleaning supplies needed to disinfect and sanitize areas ravaged by the swollen rivers, she said.

During the floods of July, the Red Cross mobilized to distribute "household kits" containing necessary living items such as linens and cleaners.

The 1st Battalion of the 29th Infantry Regiment and the members of the School of the Americas were instrumental in distributing up to 3,500 of the packets, she said.

In addition, fund-raisers contributed money and supplies to the Red Cross effort; Victoria's, a nightclub, raised $4,500 with musical bands donating their talents, and members of the SatoTravel office raised $1,200 for flood relief.

The Commissary also raised more than $3,000 worth of food and supplies for flood victims, Scorgie said.

The Red Cross will continue to work with families displaced by the flood in the next phase of relief efforts, she said.

CFC: raises funds

Each CFC packet comes with a listing of more than 1,000 organizations to donate to and a CFC pledge form.

Some organizations included in the listing are: the National Black United Fund, AIDS Research Foundation, Marine Mammal Center, Coast Guard Foundation and the 5001 Fund.

The 5001 fund is a fund that allows the Fort Benning community to give back to Fort Benning, said Roy Barnes, vice president of the Soldiers' Family Support Association.

"Any money donated to the 5001 fund comes back to Fort Benning (and is) used to support soldiers and family members," Barnes said.

The post's goal for the campaign, including the 5001 Fund, is $500,000, Copland said. "We expect to surpass that number," Copland said. Last year's total was $516,665.

Last year's fund was extended because many soldiers were in the field.

The campaign may be extended again this year because of Operation Uphold Democracy in Haiti, Copland said.

"Regardless of whatever (soldiers and civilians) contribute to, it really does help a charitable organization."

— Maj. Chuck Walls
Garrison executive officer

"When you have a major deployment, the chances (of extending the campaign) are really good," Walls said.

"Regardless of whatever (soldiers and civilians) contribute to, it really does help charitable organizations," Walls said.

Fort Benning pays tribute to POWs, MIAs

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

The U.S. Army Infantry Center recognized and paid tribute to all former American prisoners of war and those still missing in action in a ceremony Sept. 16 in Infantry Hall's Marshall Auditorium.

The ceremony also focused on the effect on family members of those service members still missing in action.

"We are here to honor those who returned to active duty after first surviving captivity," said Brig. Gen. John Maher, deputy commanding general. "We also want to focus this observance on those who are still missing in action — from all wars, and, very importantly, we want to recognize the families that have lived with uncertainty, fear and hope for their loved ones because they too have suffered the pains of war.

"We all know that American service members are prepared to fight anytime, anyplace and, if necessary, to give their lives for their country, but rarely are any of us prepared for being held in prison," he said. "Nevertheless, the collective experience of our POWs and of their families and loved ones speak volumes about the American spirit and the will and the guts to overcome adversity and to survive and serve as the witnesses of oppression. These heroes embody the essence of what we stand for as Americans."

The ceremony included a presentation by guest speaker Jo Anne Shirley of Dalton, Ga. Shirley's brother, Air Force flight surgeon Maj. Bobby M. Jones, was listed as missing in action in South Vietnam in November 1972.

Shirley served 11 years as the Georgia State coordinator for the National League of POW/MIA families and is currently vice chairwoman of the National League of Families Board of Directors.

Should we forget about the Vietnam conflict, which happened nearly a quarter of a century ago, Shirley asked, or should we focus instead on the future and give up the search for knowledge of the fates of those still missing?

"If you listen to the media and look at current government policy, you will see there is high praise for Vietnam and the cooperation they are giving us and the excellent and superb access they are giving us in regards to accountability," Shirley said. "Has Vietnam really done everything it can do to help us account for the 2,229 Americans who are still missing and unaccounted for in Southeast Asia? Have they cooperated to the fullest extent?"

According to Shirley, the answer two both questions is no.

"In 1973, Vietnam returned 591 prisoners and said they held no other Americans. It was documented fact that many other Americans were listed as POWs who have still not returned today. Where are they?" she asked.

In addition, Vietnam has not been cooperative in returning remains of missing servicemen, she said. In 1993, more than 67 remains were returned, but only three could be positively identified, and 65 percent of the returned remains show forensic evidence of storage, yet Vietnam claimed it stored no remains, Shirley added.

"Where are the full skeletal remains we were receiving under the Reagan administration when our priorities were high and when our expectation were tough?" Shirley asked.

More than 40,000 documents have been returned, but less than 2 percent can be linked to any MIAs, she said. In addition, Russian document reveal that more than 1,200 Americans were still alive and being held prisoner at the end of the war.

"Are they still alive and being held prisoner in underground systems as many believe, or have they died of disease, torture, malnutrition or old age? Whatever the answer might be, Vietnam holds the answer to every one of those cases. They know the fate of our missing men and we do not," Shirley said.

"The family members do not want to refight the war in Vietnam. That is not our objective," she said. "We simply want, and deserve, the fullest possible accounting of our missing loved ones. I firmly believe there are still live Americans being held against their will in Southeast Asia today."

Pay now or pay later at some commissaries

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Shoppers who prefer to pay with plastic rather than cash can now do so, during a credit card pilot program scheduled to begin at five commissaries in November.

MasterCard and VISA charges will be accepted at commissaries at Fort Belvoir, Va.; Camp Lejeune, N.C.; Keesler Air Force Base, Miss.; Quantico Marine Corps Base, Va.; and Mirimar Naval Air Station, Calif., according to Defense Commissary Agency officials.

These commissaries currently accept debit cards as payment — a method of instant, direct cash withdrawal from the customer's bank account.

Electronic debit card readers in these locations will be programmed to accept the credit cards, making the pilot program less expensive to start up, officials said.

"The process is quite simple," said project manager JoAnn Boutelle from the Directorate of Resource Management.

Customers who want to pay by credit card simply "swipe" the card through the reader during check-out; the transaction is then electronically validated against the customer's credit card account.

Credit card customers will receive a bill from MasterCard or VISA at the end of the billing period; if the customer uses a debit card, money is instantly transferred from the member's bank account, Boutelle said.

"It's a choice of paying now or later," she said.

After the pilot program is evaluated, it may be extended to other locations in Arkansas, California, Hawaii, Kentucky, Maryland and North Carolina.

Contest opens for authors of military history

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Army Center of Military History is seeking writers to compete in the 1994 Military History Writing Contest — open to all officer advanced course students and Sergeants Major Academy students during the 1994 calendar year.

A panel of military historians will judge each entry based on historical accuracy, originality, writing style and rhetoric.

First-, second- and third-place winners will receive cash awards of $500, $250 and $100, respectively. The top finisher will also have his or her entry published in "Army History," the Center for Military History's quarterly professional bulletin.

Contest officials said the essays must be previously unpublished and should be typed, double-spaced and limited to 2,500 words. Essays must be postmarked by the contest deadline — midnight Dec. 31.

Papers should develop a limited theme related to the history of the U.S. Army, for example: the Civil War, World War I, World War II; minority soldiers; leadership; training; unit cohesion and stress in combat; fighting outnumbered and winning; or logistics.

Authors should send two copies of the manuscript, along with accompanying photographs, maps or graphics, to: U.S. Army Center of Military History; Attn: Writing Contest; 1099 14th St. NW; Washington, D.C. 20005-3402. Also, authors must include their advanced officer course or Sergeants Major Academy course title and number, dates of attendance, current and forwarding address and telephone number.

Winners will be announced by April 30.

For more information on the contest, contact Billy Arthur at DSN 285-5368 or (202) 504-5368.

CRC ready to deploy troops anytime

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

With flights to Kuwait and Somalia, railheads to Fort Stewart, Ga., and Fort Irwin, Calif., and buses or convoys to Florida, deployments from Fort Benning have become almost routine.

As the Army shifts from maintaining large numbers of "forward deployed" troops stationed close to potential hostile areas to keeping a larger number of troops at home ready to deploy anywhere, anytime as a "force projection" Army, it seems that the trend will continue.

But what happens when the people deploying are not all in one unit? Or if they are not even soldiers?

The Fort Benning Continental United States Replacement Center, known as the "CRC," is designed expressly for that purpose.

"Our mission is to process Department of the Army civilians, contract civilians and other nonunit-related personnel for deployment to combatant areas," said Earl Brown, installation mobilization planner for the Directorate of Operations and Training and the project manager for CRC exercises.

> "Our mission is to process Department of the Army civilians, contract civilians and other nonunit-related personnel for deployment to combatant areas."
> — Earl Brown
> Installation mobilization planner
> Directorate of Operations and Training

The CRC processes individual replacements or "filler personnel," including Reservists, Individual Ready Reservists (former active duty soldiers serving in on-call status called onto active duty), Red Cross workers, DA, contract and other civilians from all over the United States for deployments.

When the individuals return, the process is reversed, and the CRC becomes a CDC — CONUS Demobilization Center.

There are six CRCs in the United States (five are located on Training and Doctrine Command installations), and all regularly conduct mobilization exercises.

"TRADOC has a dedicated U.S. Army Reserve battalion that mobilizes at Fort Benning to establish and operate the mobilization mission," Brown said.

Reservists from that battalion come to Fort Benning and coordinate with installation staff to support the logistical, operational, administrative, medical and dental requirements of moving individuals overseas.

In August, as part of the most recent CRC exercise, Fort Benning prepared 101 IRR, 67 active duty soldiers and two civilians for deployment to Korea for Operation Ulchi Focus Lens, a command post exercise conducted by the 8th Army.

In early September, Capt. David Weissman, commander of the 412th Adjutant General Company (Replacement) out of Pascagoula, Miss., and the group of 19 Reserve soldiers under him were here to receive the group returning from Korea and process them through Fort Benning to their various destinations.

"This is part of our annual training," Weissman said. The soldiers from his unit form the leadership of the group, acting as a headquarters detachment and serving as platoon sergeants for the individuals coming in.

To prepare for the exercise, Weissman said, "We actually practiced handling troops on paper, and we made sure we knew where the Central Issue Facility, dining facility and medical and dental facilities were."

Moving the large group through Fort Benning had its problems, though.

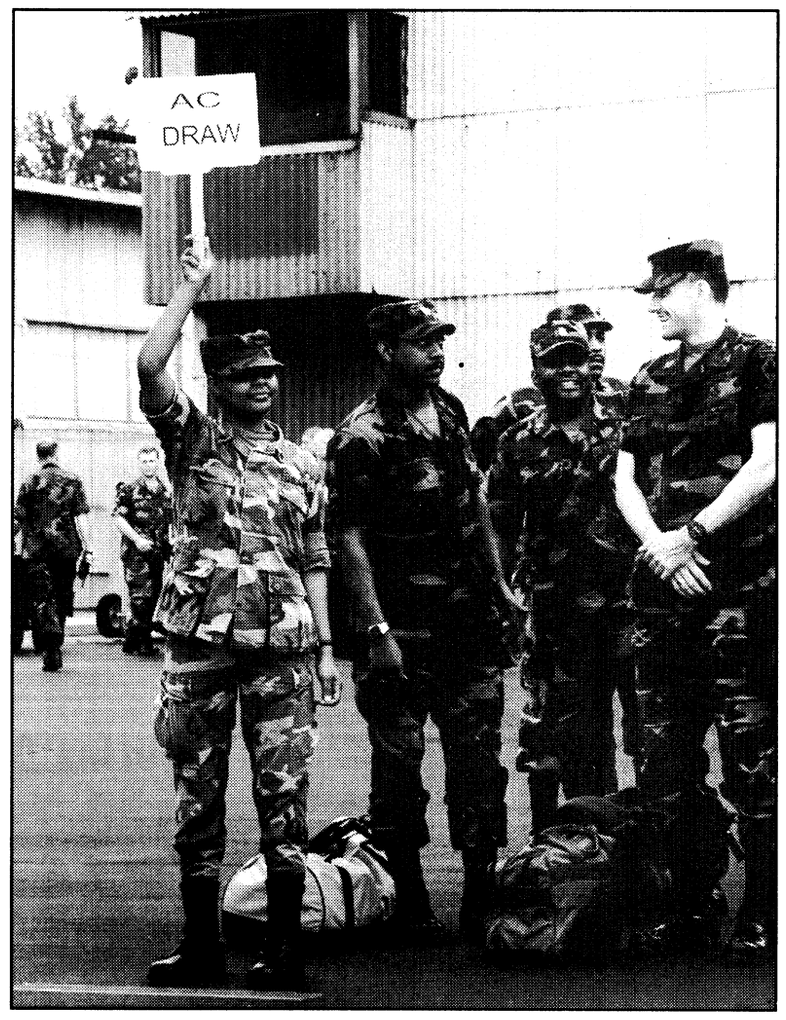
The return flight from Korea was delayed several times and took more than 20 hours, one Reservist said.

One person, Weissman said, told him that after such a long flight, "It wouldn't have mattered if we had had ice cream and dancing girls and dancing guys and everything else (waiting for them), we would have been wrong."

Given tasks like turning in , in 2 1/2 hours, every piece of equipment the group had been issued and reconfirming and rescheduling each individual's flight plans through post transportation, there were bound to be some "glitches," Weissman said.

Capt. Stacie Lenson, an IRR who works as a chemist in San Diego, Calif., said she deployed the same way for a similar exercise last year. For her, putting on the uniform again was "a nice break," but she thought things could have run more smoothly.

Maj. Anna Batha, who works in Manhattan as a computer consultant, has also deployed through CRCs before. She said she found the billeting here cleaner than at the other places she'd been and that she thought it was obvious that a lot of coordination had been done in advance with Fort Benning.



What she did find lacking, Batha said, was an introductory briefing when they initially deployed about what to expect upon arrival in Korea and some background on the country.

"Personally, I think the whole thing went quite well — there's always going to be minor glitches," Weissman said.

"The coordination here has been excellent," he said. "We've had coordination from DA (Department of the Army) on down. I've personally been at three different meetings here with civilian and military representatives from every office that was involved."

In the end, more than 165 people were processed through Fort Benning and on their way home within two days.

The lessons learned from this exercise will be put to the test again in October when the Fort Benning CRC will deploy more than 300 people to Germany to participate in an operation called "Retrograde Europe."

Family support : Group leaders, post resources prepare to help at home when soldiers deploy

Family Unit Network provides guidance for family members

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

The spouses and families of Fort Benning soldiers preparing to leave for Haiti are going through their own predeployment preparations.

Soldiers of the 988th Military Police Company deployed Thursday and the 586th Engineer Company (Assault Float Bridge) is currently on alert for deployment to Haiti as part of the multinational force participating in Operation Uphold Democracy.

While the soldiers are getting immunization shots, updating records and preparing equipment for deployment, their families are working to create a support network to help take care of any problems that may arise at home while the soldiers are away.

Both units have already designated support group leaders, created telephone rosters and conducted predeployment briefings, "so family members know where their 'safety nets' are," said Michelle Aldridge, the Family Unit Network coordinator.

Aldridge has been working with the support group leaders to help them gather and distribute current information on post resources such as Army Community Service, Army Emergency Relief, the American Red Cross, the Chaplains' Office, Finance and Legal Assistance.

The main purpose of establishing support groups is to pass out important information to family members and to provide support and assistance while the soldiers are away, according to the information packet distributed by the 988th support group.

Family members have been given lists of emergency phone numbers, important documents to keep on hand and post activities and the services they provide.

Aldridge said two important things to remember are the phone numbers of the rear detachment commander and the primary point of contact within the family support group.

Aldridge said the support groups are not there to solve every problem that may arise, but to direct people to the resources that can.

During Deployment

Keep in touch

✔ Letters — they're inexpensive, they allow you to think about what you'd like to share, and they can be "personalized" for individual family members

✔ Phone calls — They're more direct and personal, although they can be inconvenient and expensive

✔ Pictures — (Including photographs and artwork by children) they can be easily carried, proudly displayed and looked at often

✔ Audio and videocassettes — Offer realism and can be played repeatedly, although they require special equipment

Work through emotions

Strong feelings are most common immediately before and after separation and reunion, but they can occur at any time. To help maintain your emotional health:

✔ Try to understand and admit your doubts and fears — don't ignore or hide them.

✔ Talk about your feelings with a trusted friend, neighbor or co-worker.

✔ Seek professional help if you feel overwhelmed by your emotions, or if you suspect that someone in the family is having emotional difficulties.

Tips for spouses

✔ Take good care of yourself — eat right, get enough rest and exercise, treat yourself to a special dinner or night out once in a while, help manage stress by setting aside time every day to do something you enjoy

✔ Take good care of your children — Remember, they need proper rest, nutrition and exercise, too. Set aside some of your time for each individual child, as well as for family activities, and arrange for children to have time off with friends or an occasional special outing.

Faith to host 'super' Saturdays

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Have you ever thought of experimenting in geology by using a cupcake? Have you ever wanted to create and launch a hot air balloon? If you are a Faith School student or a Faith School parent, the opportunity for both is coming your way soon.

Super Saturdays: In Touch With Science and Math, a brand-new Saturday program for Faith School students and their parents, will take place Nov. 5 and 19.

The program is the result of a partnership between Faith School and the National Science Center in Augusta, Ga., at Fort Gordon. It will provide Faith School students and their parents the opportunity to team up to experience two mornings of math and science activities together.

"Our goal at Faith School is to provide as many meaningful opportunities for students as we can," said Beth Middlemiss, Faith School principal. "These Super Science and Math Saturdays are an opportunity for students to bring their parents to school and for them to team up for some fun-filled, interesting learning experiences.

"We're looking forward to this partnership with the National Science Center and are excited about the prospects for involving students and their parents in this process," she said.

To participate in the Super Saturdays, In Touch With Science and Math, parents and students must register. The program is for the parent and the middle school student only. Since this is a teaming of parent and middle school student, other members of the family will not be invited to participate. (If the parent has more than one middle school student, the team can be expanded so the parent is able to work with all of his or her middle school children.)

The activities will take both days, so registration for Super Science and Math Saturdays means that the parent and student team is registering for both days. Registration fee is $5 per family team.

Space in the program will be limited and registrations will be taken on a first-come, first-served basis. Registration forms will be distributed to Faith School students today. Completed forms should be submitted to the Faith School office. Registrations will be accepted until Oct. 14 or until the program is full.

The Santa's Castle golf tournament, hosted by the 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, Friday afternoon at the Follow Me Golf Course went off without a hitch, despite a torrential rain that delayed the start for about 30 minutes.

"We were going to play golf one way or the other," coordinator Capt. Andy McDonald said. "The rain slacked off and everyone made it through. This tournament is not about winning or losing, it's about helping the kids on this post come Christmas time. We were able to raise about $1,300 for Santa's Castle — that's what it's all about. # Summer biathlon set for Sunday

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The 1994 Summer Biathlon national race circuit comes to Fort Benning Sunday at English Range and Olive Field. The race is scheduled to start at 9 a.m.

With some of the nation's top summer biathletes located in the south, race organizers expect a highly competitive field. The Fort Benning event will be an important barometer for many of the region's top participants to gauge themselves against their chief rivals as the season heads for the national championships next month in St. Louis, Mo.

"The whole region is a hotbed of summer biathlon interest, so we have some of the best talent in the sport right at our doorstep," race director Jim Brown of the Physical Activities Branch said. "This race should be very competitive, were already attracting athletes from several states and hundreds of miles away. Our past record of putting on successful races also makes this race attractive."

Summer biathlon, which combines running and rifle marksmanship, originated in the United States seven years ago as a warm-weather version of the Winter Olympic biathlon, and now attracts more than 10,000 participating athletes throughout North America and Europe each year. Running distance is five kilometers or 3.1 miles and is split into three segments. Shooting distance is 25-meters and is set in two stops. The prone position is the first stop, and standing is second. Five shots are taken from each position with time deductions given for each target hit.

All first-time competitors are required to attend a pre-race clinic in order to participate. All equipment, both for the clinic and the race itself, is provided.

For more information, call Brown at 545-577[illegible].

Line can be used to control lure depth

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

commentary

Fishing line does much more than connect an angler's rod and reel to a lure. Just ask professional bass tournament angler Guy Eaker.

Eaker won a major national bass tournament on Sam Rayburn Reservoir in Texas recently, and he credits the win — worth $35,000 in cash and merchandise — to his fishing line, because it helped control his lure depth.

"I used a heavier-than-normal line to keep my lure from diving too deep," said the Evinrude Outboards Pro Staff angler. "The heavier line, has more water resistance and kept the lure just above the submerged grassbed I was fishing.

"A lighter line would have let the crankbait dive deeper into the vegetation where it would have been snagging constantly."

Eaker's heavier line also allowed him to retrieve his lure slower, which is how the bass wanted it. Lighter line would have forced him to retrieve much faster to avoid the snagging.

"Most bass fishermen know how to use lighter lines with crankbaits so they'll have better action and run deeper," said Eaker, "but not many think about using heavier lines to make a lure run shallow. I've been doing it for years, and this time it really paid off."

The Evinrude pro's three-day catch included 15 bass weighing an even 49 pounds.

"Another advantage many anglers don't think about is that using a heavier line on a crankbait allows you to retrieve the lure slower, which was really important during the Rayburn tournament," Eaker said. "The bass were extremely finicky and would not hit fast-moving lures.

"Normally, you want a fast-moving crankbait to dive as deep as you can get it, and often we change to lighter lines so the lure will do that. For example, changing from 14- or 17-pound test line to 12- or even 10-pound test line might add between one and two feet of depth to the lure.

"The lighter line will also give it much better action because there is not as much resistance in the water.

"When fish are not active, such as right after a cold front or when water conditions are changing rapidly, a slower retrieve is nearly always more productive.

"At Rayburn, when the fish are spooky, they tend to locate right above the underwater hydrilla beds, and the best way to catch them is with a slow-moving lure that runs right over the top of that vegetation. That's why using the heavier 20-pound test line was so important."

Army takes interservice rugby championship

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

For the first time since 1987, the U. S. Army Rugby select side won the U.S. Military Interservice rugby championship, which was Sept. 8 through 10 at Pensacola Naval Air Station, Fla.

The Army team won four matches in the three-day tournament, losing only once to the Marine Corps 18-10 in a quarterfinal match, then rebounded to defeat the Marine Corps in the championship 25-17.

Five soldiers from Fort Benning participated on the Army side: Capt. Roy Krueger and Capt. Mike Bowman of the Combined Arms and Tactics Division, Capt. Kevin Hyneman of the Ranger Training Brigade, Capt. Duke Moseley of the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, and Capt. Larry Perino of the Infantry Officer Advanced Course.

"Our morale was very high. We went down there with the expectation of winning rather than just to give a good accounting of ourselves," Bowman said. "It's been a long dry spell for the Army team."

This was Bowman's fourth trip to the interservice championship and according to Bowman the team came together and played like a team rather than a bunch of individuals.

"For a long time the tournament has been dominated by the Navy and the Air Force," Bowman said. "Last year the Marine Corps battled the Navy and lost a close match. This year the Marines were just as strong and gave us all we could handle. We stayed together as a team and were able to hold on for the win."

Bowman will also be playing for the Columbus/Fort Benning Rugby Football Club after he heals a busted ear drum suffered in the third match of the tournament.

The Army team was tied with the Marine Corps after the last match of the round robin tournament with 3-1 records.

Following are the results for the Army team from the three-day event.

Sept. 8
Army 23 vs. Air Force 0
Army 28 vs. Coast Guard 0
Sept. 9

SOA students learn to counter ambushes

By Devon Kerbow
School of the Americas

Most Americans have never had to face a crowd of armed strangers attacking a vehicle they're riding in.

But it happens in Central and South America, said Sgt. 1st Class Roberto Guandique, a guest instructor from El Salvador for the School of the America's Special Operations Department.

The police are frequently ambushed after receiving information about drugs — their enemies are ready for them. That's why counter-ambushing is taught in SOA's Counternarcotics Operations Course, Guandique said.

Counter-ambushing is reacting to an ambush, with each person involved knowing what position he or she will take as they evacuate the vehicle, said Sgt. 1st Class William Vesga, an SOD instructor.

The students are taught to react to ambushes from the left, right and front, said Staff Sgt. Antonio Guadalupe, an SOD instructor.

"The fundamental skills (are the same)," Guadalupe said, "but the people have different functions depending on where they're sitting in the car."

Guadalupe said the most important thing the students learned was to stay out of each others' line of fire, and that this could be difficult when they're backing quickly away from the vehicle.

He also stressed the importance of teamwork when reacting to an ambush.

"If one person is where they're not supposed to be, it limits the others' chances to withdraw from the vehicle," Guadalupe said.

He said the main reason for the students to fire their weapons as they left the vehicle was to keep the enemies' heads down, giving a better chance for all to leave the area unharmed.

"Some knew how to do this when they came here. Others don't, and they're learning it so it can be implemented in their own countries," Guandique said.

Inprocessing complex procedure for SOA cadets

By Devon Kerbow
School of the Americas

What do you do with 76 Colombian cadets who show up tired and hungry on a Sunday?

You feed them and give them a room and bed linen, if you're Staff Sgt. Luis Cruz, a supply sergeant at Company A at the School of the Americas, who said he's used to the chaos and irregular hours caused by students who arrive at night and on weekends.

The cadets will begin the week-long inprocessing for their classes Monday, but Cruz said the process actually starts 20 weeks before the students' arrival, when the training schedules are developed.

Ninety days before the students are expected, Cruz schedules appointments for them to receive equipment at the Central Issue Facility. Varying amounts of time are allotted for the appointments, depending on what courses the students are attending.

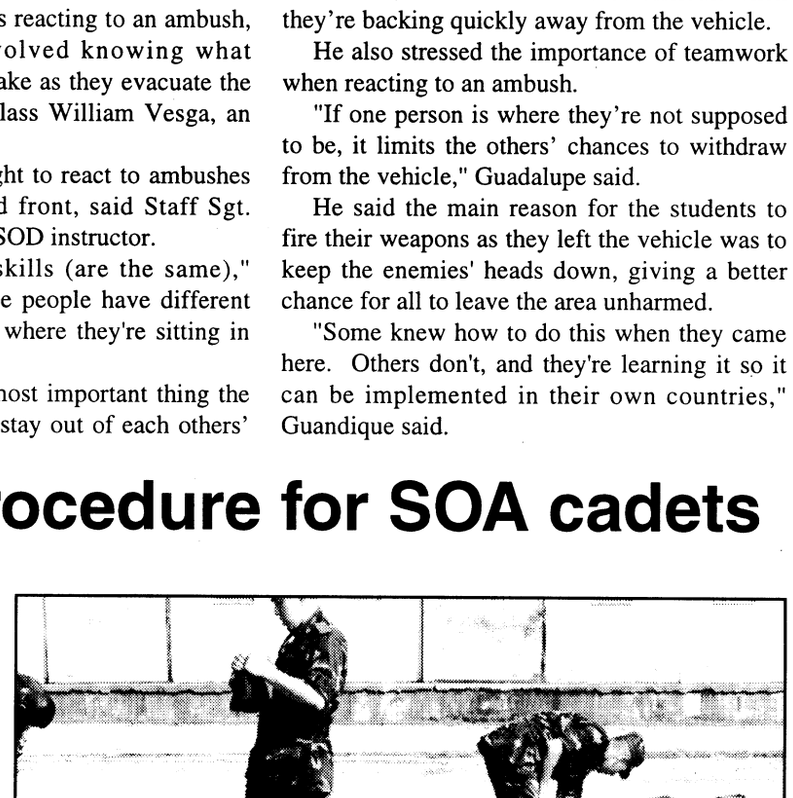
Cruz said he knows the students in the Cadet Leadership Development Logistics Course are going to be given very little equipment in comparison to students in the Cadet Leadership Development Cavalry Course and the Cadet Leadership Development Infantry Course, who will be given more than they can comfortably carry. Cruz said he consequently schedules two hours for the infantry course students to get their equipment, while the logistics students may only be allotted 30 minutes.

The cadets received their first briefing Monday morning, when Cruz talked to them about Columbus, Fort Benning and what's expected of them while they're here. Cruz talked with students about transportation, the laws on post and in Columbus, how to use the U.S. mail, sales taxes, where cadets are and are not allowed to go, recreational activities, safety and living conditions in the barracks.

Tuesday morning, the students were briefed by their company commander at SOA, the battalion commander, the chaplain, and others who welcomed them and addressed topics that will be important to the students during their stay at Fort Benning.

The students are then introduced to their instructors and given things they'll need, including books for the course and foot powder, according to Sgt. 1st Class Guillermo Colom, the Tactics Division's team three noncommissioned officer-in-charge.

Tuesday afternoon, the students got their physical training uniforms and meal cards, so they can use the dining facility.



Cruz said students at SOA have just started receiving meal cards, which should make it easier to keep track of who is using the facility.

Wednesday, the students started their day at CIF. After they got their equipment inside, they went outside to lay it all out so the instructors could make sure all the equipment was there and in good condition, Cruz said.

After receiving their equipment, the students attended their first class, Colom said. The students are also taken on a tour of Columbus Thursday.

The tours are arranged by Cecilia Alexander, SOA's international military student officer. The tour follows Department of Defense Informa-tional Program objectives, and is designed to give students the opportunity to obtain a balanced understanding of this country. DoD guidelines direct that students be given a chance for personal contact and observation of the people, government and cultural institutions of the United States.

The tour included a local television station, the city's historic district and the Columbus Museum. Many students said they liked the tour and found it interesting.

Devon Kerbow

Cadets lay out their gear for inspection after a visit to the Central Issue Facility.

Cruz said that another thing the students found interesting was that in the U.S. Army, all the training is coordinated and carried out by NCOs. He said students told him in Colombia, officers plan and oversee training.

One of the cadets' most common misconceptions, Colom said, was that all military members here make a lot of money.

The students were quickly informed that this isn't the case, but they seemed reluctant to reject the idea.

Colom said it was different dealing with men younger than the seasoned veterans who comprise most of the courses his team instructs.

They have more questions and they're interested in life in the United States, Colom said.

Answering their questions is all a part of inprocessing, Cruz said.

Selected commissioned, warrant officers eligible for early release, retirements

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — As part of a comprehensive strength management plan during the continuing force drawdown, personnel officials have approved the voluntary release or retirement of several categories of commissioned and warrant officers.

The fiscal 1995 Voluntary Early Release/Retirement Program is one element of the overall drawdown program that includes Selective Early Retirement Boards, Reduction-in-Force boards, the Voluntary Separation Incentive Program and the Early Retirement Program.

Officers electing to participate in the VERRP must separate or retire by Aug. 31. The 1995 VERRP is open to officers in the following categories.

Category A: First lieutenants in Army Competitive Categories who were previously not selected for promotion to captain, and who are not now on a promotion list. Category A officers may apply for early separation regardless of remaining active duty service obligation.

Category C: Lieutenants and captains with one year or less remaining on their ADSO as of the requested date of separation. These officers will qualify for early release if they obtain confirmation of an assignment to a Reserve or National Guard unit.

Category D: Promotable first lieutenants or above who wish to separate and who require a waiver of nonstatutory ADSO of any length. Category D requests will be considered on a case-by-case basis, but will generally be approved for ADSO waivers of one year or less. These officers will qualify for early release if they obtain confirmation of an assignment to a Reserve or National Guard unit.

Category E: PERSCOM-managed, basic-branch warrant officers — less Army Medical Department and Judge Advocate General branches. Category E requests will be managed on a case-by-case basis, but will generally be approved for ADSO waivers of one year or less.

These officers will qualify for early release if they obtain confirmation of an assignment to a Reserve or National Guard unit.

Warrant officer aviation specialties 152C, 152D, 152F, 152G, 153D and 154C are not eligible to apply for VERRP under Category E.

Category F: Retirement-eligible commissioned officers with at least 20 years' service who require a waiver of nonstatutory ADSO of any length. Majors and below may usually retire in-grade, provided they have completed six months in-grade as of the date of their retirement. Category F is not open to warrant officers.

Category G: Army Competitive Category lieutenants who have 24 to 36 months of active federal service by the date of their service separation, with the exception of:

- Company-grade commissioned aviators who have more than one year remaining on their ADSO
- Commissioned officer aviators rated in AH-64, UH-60, CH-47 and OH-58D aircraft
- Military intelligence officers and
- Signal Corps officers.

These officers will qualify for early release if they obtain confirmation of an assignment to a Reserve or National Guard unit.

With the exception of Category F, commissioned and warrant officers in the Medical Corps, Dental Corps, Army Medical Specialist Corps and Veterinary Corps may not participate in the fiscal 1995 VERRP. Medical Service Corps and Army Nurse Corps — less specialty 66F officers — may participate. Excluded Army Medical Department officers may request separation or retirement in cases of extreme hardship or exceptional or unusual circumstances.

Participation in the VERRP does not forgive or modify agreements to reimburse federal funding of advanced civil schooling programs; however, reimbursement waivers will be considered in documented cases of extreme hardship.

Officers who entered into written agreements that do not contain monetary reimbursement provisions will not be subject to recoupment for education expenses. Prior to approval of separation, the specific terms of an officer's agreement with the Army will be reviewed to determine obligations under the agreement. Reserve Officer Training Corps scholarship recipients and U.S. Military Academy graduates who have executed such agreements may request of waiver of reimbursement provisions but must provide a justification for the waiver.

Requests for early release or retirement must be submitted by Jan. 31. Approvals will be based on the needs of the service reflected by year group, grade, branch, functional area and competitive category.

world war II

50 years ago this week ...

- Since the beginning of Operation Market-Garden Sept. 17, Allied troops were reported to have suffered more than 17,000 casualties, more than the ten to 12,000 suffered on the first day of the Normandy invasion.
- More than 2,000 paratroopers of the British 1st Airborne Division withdrew from Arnhem, leaving behind about 7,000 dead, wounded or missing. The remnants of the division held a perimeter north of the Rhine, cut off from the rest of the 1st Allied Airborne Army. Polish paratroopers were dropped on the opposite side of the river, where they linked up with the British 43rd Division in an attempt to reach the besieged 1st Airborne. Eventually it was decided to evacuate as many as possible of the surviving paratroopers across the Rhine in small boats. A few paratroopers who could not get away were sheltered by Dutch families until the allies advanced again despite dreadful food shortages and the terrible danger of discovery. Arnhem remained in German hands until April 15, 1945.
- More than 1,100 U.S. bombers attacked railway and industrial targets in Germany at Cologne, Mainz, Ludwigshafen and Kassel.
- German forces evacuated Riga, Latvia as four Red Army columns converged on the city.
- Harvard University Medical School announced that women would be accepted as students beginning in the fall of 1945.
- At Fort Benning, Bette Davis made an appearance at the Combat Unit Soldier Show at the Children's School auditorium

Battle labs revolutionize today's Army

TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — In a little more than two years, Training and Doctrine Command battlefield laboratories have grown from conducting only materiel experiments to creating doctrine, training and force design for the future Army.

Battle labs have also revolutionized the process of acquiring and fielding modernized equipment.

Resources will now be turned to creating Force XXI, according to Col. Bill Hubbard, director of Battle Lab Integration, Technology and Concepts.

"Force XXI is the examination of the redesign of the force from the individual soldier all the way up to echelons above corps," he said. "We'll look across all the battlefield operating systems, not just maneuver.

"Everything we do will be fully integrated across doctrine, training, leader development, organizational design, materiel modernization and soldiers."

Beginning work on Force XXI was possible because of the lessons learned from the Advanced Warfighting Experiment (AWE) in April at the National Training Center (NTC), Fort Irwin, Calif.

In the NTC rotation 94-07, a brigade-level task force took on the NTC OPFOR (opposing force). The task force was made up of 3rd Battalion, 9th Infantry, Fort Lewis, Wash.; 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry, a mechanized unit from Fort Benning, Ga.; and Task Force 1-70, 194th Separate Armored Brigade from Fort Knox, Ky.

The brigade headquarters was 3rd Brigade, 24th Mechanized Division from Fort Benning.

Task Force 1-70 was equipped with digitized communications so all forces were receiving near real-time information on the NTC battlefield. Other elements of the brigade had limited digital capability.

"Except for a command post exercise, the brigade had never trained together in one place before it went to the NTC," Hubbard said. "For Task Force 1-70, soldiers had to get qualified on M1A2 Abrams tank — they are normally equipped with the basic M1 tank — plus train and experiment in virtual and constructive simulations and try to accomplish some field training.

> "Soldiers provide you great insights into requirements, particularly when you can do a lot of things in simulation before you actually build equipment."
> — Col. Bill Hubbard, director
> Battle Lab Integration, Technology and Concepts

Soldiers involved in future AWEs should be given sufficient time to learn to operate all the equipment in a field environment, the colonel said.

"Despite all this, the brigade's performance equaled or exceeded the baseline rotations in several key areas, he said."

Hubbard calls digitizing the force as much of a revolutionary change as putting wireless radios in tanks during the 1930s.

"With digital communication, coupled with laser designation systems and GPS (global positioning system), you have more sensors in the maneuver force than you do shooters," he said.

"Being able to get eight-digit grid coordinate accuracy from GPS, pass that in near real-time to another platform to take out a target with no words being spoken is pretty powerful stuff."

New information equipment will require a processing system to prevent information overload for its users. The colonel said the capability being designed for combat commanders can be compared to cable television.

"If you want the weather update, you push channel six. If you want to know the latest update on the enemy at the tactical level, you push channel four," Hubbard said.

"The point is to create a data base where commanders can retrieve data nearly instantaneously depending on their needs at the time."

When battle labs became operational in 1992, there were six of them. They were: Early Entry Lethality and Survivability Lab, Fort Monroe, Va.; Battle Command, Fort Leavenworth, Kan.; Dismounted Battlespace, Fort Benning, Ga.; Mounted Battlespace, Fort Knox; Combat Service Support, Fort Lee, Va.; and Depth and Simultaneous Attack, Fort Sill, Okla.

Since then, two offshoots of the Battle Command Battle Lab have been activated. The Fort Gordon, Ga., lab experiments with hardware needed for battle command. Intelligence, electronic warfare and information warfare operations are studied at Fort Huachuca, Ariz.

The AWE at NTC 94-07 is the largest experiment conducted by the Battle Labs to date. It involved a significant part of the Army and most of the labs.

Not only did AWE 94-07 prove the value of digitizing Army units, but the battle lab community learned how to properly conduct future experiments, design analytical systems to study the results, involve the testing community and how to train while experimenting at combat training centers.

Over the next 18 months, battle labs will conduct about 90 experiments. Nearly all of them will have a connection to Force XXI. Some of the larger experiments, or AWEs, will be further examination of digital communications and its impact on organizational design, tactics and training.

A major effort will involve infantry forces during a rotation to the Joint Readiness Training Center, Fort Polk, La., in November 1995. This AWE will explore digitization issues in a dismounted environment.

"We use real soldiers in real units in our experimentation," Hubbard said. "Soldiers provide you great insights into requirements, particularly when you can do a lot of things in simulation before you actually build equipment. You get the soldier impact up front in the requirements process rather than after the item has been fielded."

Soldiers also participate in virtual reality and constructive simulations, in addition to field exercises. Because of budget constraints, battle labs do not concentrate on developing major weapons systems.

"We're in the tech insertion business," Hubbard said, "which is a modification to an existing capability or an existing system. A tech insertion horizontally integrated across the force, or a portion of the force, enhances combat capability geometrically."

To keep the Army current in technological developments, TRADOC and Army Materiel Command are working in a close partnership.

"We have a full-time materiel developer from AMC in each of the labs," Hubbard said. "They provide technical advice, on-the-scene acquisition expertise and help with dealing with industry."

The battle lab experimental approach, coupled with AMC expertise, has greatly shortened the acquisition and fielding time for new capabilities.

crime watch

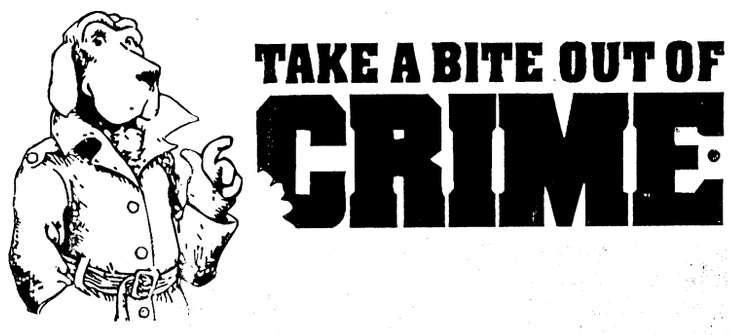
Military Police Activity

This week's hot topic concerns domestic disturbances. When a soldier and family member are involved in an argument or altercation in government quarters, they are subject to be charged with a domestic disturbance. When this occurs, the service member must leave the quarters for at least 12 hours. The soldier's unit is responsible for ensuring he or she does not return to the quarters before the required time expires.

Service members may be allowed to enter the quarters with a unit escort to get personal hygiene items or clothing. In many instances, family members telephone the MPs to complain about their spouse's behavior but do not wish to press charges once the MPs arrive. If there is evidence of a verbal or physical disturbance, the MPs escort the service member out of the quarters regardless of the family member's desire to press charges.

Keep in mind that alcoholic beverages are involved in most domestic disturbance situations.

The following entries are from the Fort Benning Military Police blotter from Sept. 7 to 14. Such entries may be incomplete and do not determine guilt or innocence.



• A first lieutenant was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol and crossing the center line He was observed by an MP patrol crossing the center line three tines, nearly causing an accident. The MP stopped him and smelled alcohol. He was administered a field sobriety test, which he failed The lieutenant was transported to the MP station, where he registered .11 percent of alcohol. He was processed, and released to his unit.

• A civilian was charged with simple battery, theft by taking, criminal trespass, obstruction or hindering of law enforcement officers, theft by conversion, and false military identification card manufacture, sale or possession.

The civilian removed one pair of blue champion shorts and one purple champion tank top from the display shelf and concealed them on his person, and left the store without paying. He was stopped and taken to the security office. The civilian was transported to the MP station, processed, and released to Muscogee County Sheriff 's Department.

Other activities included three cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, 15 traffic accidents, 20 cases of larcenies, and four cases of shoplifting reported at the exchange facilities. Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best - Give Crime Arrest."

Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5223 or 545-5224 or the crime in progress" line at 545-5222.

Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: I've recently heard that I can no longer put "by law" in the beneficiary column of my Servicemen's Group Life Insurance election. It's like getting hit in the head with a cinderblock. I want to leave a portion of my life insurance to my children. How can I leave my life insurance to my beneficiaries, or better yet to a trust fund, if I can't write "by law" on SGLV-8286?

A: There are a number of ways you can leave your life insurance. The first is to merely leave percentages to named individuals you have selected. To do this, list the individuals, their address, and their relation to you. This can be done for both the principal beneficiary and the contingent, or secondary, beneficiaries.

If multiple percentages are left to principal beneficiaries, and one of those principal beneficiaries predeceases you, that percentage will revert to whatever other beneficiaries are listed. If none of the beneficiaries survive you, SGLI passes your proceeds as follows: a) to the widow or widower; b) child or children in equal shares; c) parent or parents in equal shares; d) a duly appointed executor or administrator of the estate; or then to, e) other next of kin.

You can also list as a beneficiary "my estate." The problem with this is that any proceeds of your insurance will be involved in the probate process, which may take several months. During that time, the proceeds will not be given to the beneficiaries. The benefit of doing this is that you could have a complex will that would divide the proceeds among many beneficiaries, and you can change your election every time you change your will.

Some soldiers leave their children as beneficiaries on their SGLI. In many states, if the beneficiary of a life insurance policy is under the age of majority, the proceeds can only be passed to a court-appointed guardian. Once the guardian is appointed, that guardian must post bond before a check will be cut. Such bond can be thousands of dollars. Then, even after the check is received, the full cash value of the life insurance cannot be touched while the child is a minor. Only the interest can be spent, and this can only be done with court approval and an annual accounting.

The best way to avoid this drawn-out process is to create a trust for your children in your will. The designation is approved by SGLI is: "My trustee, (his/her) successors, to fund a trust established for the benefit of my children under my last will and testament." Other insurance companies may require different language and should be contacted. This method succeeds in passing the funds immediately upon your death to the trustee for the benefit of the trust beneficiary.

Your SGLI and your will should be updated regularly to ensure they are up to date. This will avoid problems when there is the potential for illness or deployments. Information about estate planning is available through appointments with the attorneys at the Legal Assistance Division of the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate. You can set up an appointment to discuss your situation by calling 545-3281.

Flood victims may get soaked in repair deals

By Alan F. Stewart
Director of Community Activities

In the wake of flooding in Georgia, Barry Reid, administrator of the Governor's Office of Consumer Affairs, Atlanta, is warning Georgia's flood victims to exercise extreme caution when dealing with strangers who solicit clean-up and repair work.

"These people may be hit-and-run artists who are in the business of traveling to disaster areas to prey upon the victims," Reid said.

In order to reduce the chances of becoming a victim of an unscrupulous person, Army Community Service's Consumer Affairs and Financial Assistance Program is providing the following information to protect residents from scam artists.

Home repairs

• Be wary of someone arriving at your door unsolicited.

• Don't be rushed.

• Get several bids on any projects.

• Be wary if someone wants payment up front.

• Check references.

• Check with your city or county business license department to verify that contractor has a business license.

• Report suspicious operators to the local police and to the Governor's Office of Consumer Affairs at (404) 651-8600 or (800) 869-1123.

• Check the records at the local Magistrate's Court and Superior Court to see if any claims have been filed against the contractor or company.

Water testing

• Be wary of fraudulent firms selling overpriced or useless water-treatment devices by offering to test your water for free.

• If you are on a public water system, your local water-utility office can tell you about water safety problems and what to do.

• The health department can answer questions about private wells.

• If you decide to buy a treatment device, you should know that no single device can resolve every water-quality problem.

Charitable solicitations

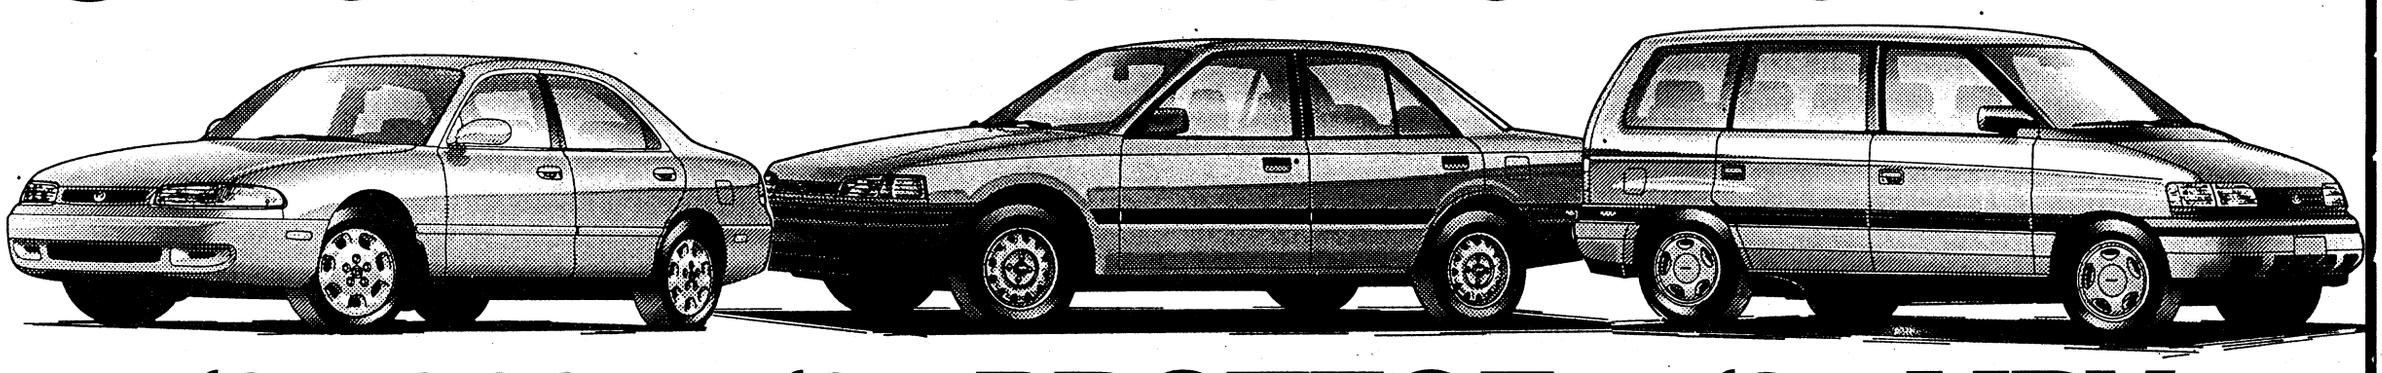
• Be wary of direct telemarketing campaigns. Give money only to those organizations you know.



• Be wary of out-of-state organizations, especially if their only address is a post office box.

• Legitimate charities will give you time to decide whether and how much to donate.

• Legitimate charities are required to register with the state. Call the Attorney General's office.

In the past, other states that have experienced natural disasters could have avoided many consumer complaints if they had known how to take preventive action.

Fiesta explores, promotes awareness of Hispanic culture

Event begins month-long observance

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning kicked off Hispanic Heritage Month with a ceremony and festivities Sept. 15 on Stillwell Field.

"Exploring our Culture" was a small "fiesta" celebrating the beginning of the month-long event. This year's theme for Hispanic Heritage Month is "Partners for Progress."

Children and adults, dressed in traditional attire, danced to and performed time-honored Latin songs and dances. The crowd clapped and sang along throughout the performances.

The ceremony began with the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner" by Carmen Flores, master of ceremonies, and remarks from Sgt. 1st Class Julius Young of the Equal Opportunity Office. The guest speaker for the day was Chaplain (Lt. Col.) James M. Coindreau, chaplain at the Main Post Catholic Chapel.

"(Hispanic Heritage Month) conveys to all of us in the U.S. Army the strength that we have. We respect all ethnic groups. We consider them equally American," Coindreau said.

Young said equal opportunity observances are designed to enhance cross-cultural awareness and promote harmony among soldiers.

Other activities for Hispanic Heritage Month are static displays inside the Military Police Station, Sand Hill Recreation Center and the Youth Activities Center.

The School of the Americas will have its Cena Tipica (traditional dinner) at the swimming pool and Supper Club of the Fort Benning Officers' Club Saturday from 4:30 p.m. to 2 a.m. It will include exhibits and traditional drinks, a parade of nations, buffet dinner and dancing. Tickets are $10. For more information, call Sgt. 1st Class Blanca Adams at 545-1830.

The Martin Army Community Hospital dining facility will have a "Taste of Spanish Delight" Oct. 6 at 2 p.m. For information, contact Capt. John Murphy at 544-1710.

The Hispanic Employment Program Committee will sponsor a luncheon at the Fort Benning Officers' Club Oct. 12 from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. The guest speaker will be Lt. Col. Ahmed E. Labault from the School of the Americas. For more information, call Julio Rivera at 545-3406.

vets gather for reunion

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

Members of the 3rd Infantry Division society gathered at the Infantry Museum Sept. 16 to dedicate a monument in memory of comrades in arms who were captured or lost their lives in past campaigns.

As part of the 75th reunion of the society, about 600 individuals assembled in the area Sept. 15 to Saturday for an agenda that included ceremonies, social gatherings and tours, but mostly remembering, said William Schlitz, president of the Fort Benning Outpost 60 organization.

"We never forget," said Schlitz, referring to those who were wounded or died in campaigns such as World Wars I and II, the Korean Conflict and, more recently, the Persian Gulf War.

Combat veteran John Shirley, national president of the Society of the 3rd Inf. Div., spoke on the symbolism of the monument and the history of the organization.

Veterans gathered in a light drizzle Sept. 16 to view the placement of a wreath and the unveiling of the monument, a stone structure featuring the division's insignia and the words "Nous Resterons La."

The monument's design reflected the division's rich history as one of the most decorated divisions in the Army.

The 3rd Inf. Div. carried the nickname "Rock of Marne" because of an invincible stand against the German's last major counteroffensive during World War I when the commanding officer, Maj. Gen. Joseph Dickman, stated "Nous resterons la" (we will stay there).

In addition to this quote, the monument featured a replica of the shoulder insignia, three diagonal white strips upon a blue background, which symbolizes the three major operations, or six separate campaigns, of World War I, in which the division participated. The background of blue represents the loyalty of soldiers who died in defense of their country.

Sometimes referred to as "The Fighting Third," this was the only American division to combat the enemy on every front in World War I, earning distinction on the battlefields in North Africa, Sicily, Italy, France and Germany.

During World War II, the 3rd Inf. Div. once again distinguished itself during battle, spearheading assaults on Algeria, Sicily, Southern France and Anzio. Members of the division were dubbed "Blue and White Devils" by the enemy at Anzio, and the nickname is immortalized as part of the division's distinctive insignia.

The distinctive insignia features a silver rock, a demon bearing the division's blue and white stripes on its wings, and the words "Nous resterons la."

Members of the division also fought in Tunisia, Naples, Rome, Ardennes, the Rhineland and in central Europe, and on V-E Day they were in Salzburg using as a mess hall the dining rooms of the Schloss Klessheim, a former guesthouse for Hitler's' important visitors.

Audie Murphy, the most decorated soldier of WWII, was a member of "The Fighting Third," the division that holds the record for most high combat citations and decorations as well as the most casualties of any other division.

Among the division's awards are 50 Medals of Honor, more than 400 Distinguished Service Crosses and over 6,000 Silver Stars.

One of the most decorated soldiers living today, retired Col. Charles P. Murray, attended the dedication and said, "This is an appropriate location for this monument which recognizes the great history of the 3rd Infantry Division."

Murray, who has long ties to Fort Benning and the 3rd Inf. Div., received the Medal of Honor, the Legion of Merit, four Silver Stars, two Bronze Stars, a Purple Heart, Combat Infantryman Badge and was recently awarded the French Legion of Honor for actions during World War II.

The division, which participated in the Korean Conflict and, more recently, the Persian Gulf War, was based at Fort Benning on two occasions, in 1948 and 1957, and was "adopted" in an honorary gesture by the city of Columbus.

Former Fort Benning commander and division veteran Lt. Gen. Robert (Sam) Wetzel joined fellow 3rd Inf. Div. veterans in honoring the memory of fallen comrades in the 30-minute ceremony, which included the playing of Taps, history of the division and a prayer.

Wetzel noted that the "Home of the Infantry," Fort Benning, is an appropriate location for the monument.

While dedicating the monument, speakers addressed a group of veterans, primarily from WWII, who were part of the "Marne Division."

Men who formerly served in this division also gathered to hear Maj. Gen. Leonard Holder present the reunion's keynote address Saturday night. Maj. Gen. Holder commands the 3rd Inf. Div., which is currently active in Germany with the NATO Forces, said Schlitz.

Next year, former members of "The Fighting Third" will gather again to remember comrades. The 1995 reunion will be in Tacoma, Wash., said Schlitz.

Past and present members of the 15th Infantry Regiment gathered Sept. 16 at the Chinese Arch monument to place a wreath in memory of fallen comrades and to honor present and future contributions by the "Can Do" soldiers.

In conjunction with the diamond anniversary of the Society of the 3rd Infantry Division, the 30-minute ceremony detailed the history of the 15th Inf. Regt. since its organization in July 1798 to its present-day deployment in points around the globe.

Brig. Gen. John J. Maher III, post deputy commanding general, said "It's nice to be able to recognize all three great regiments; the 7th, 15th and 18th."

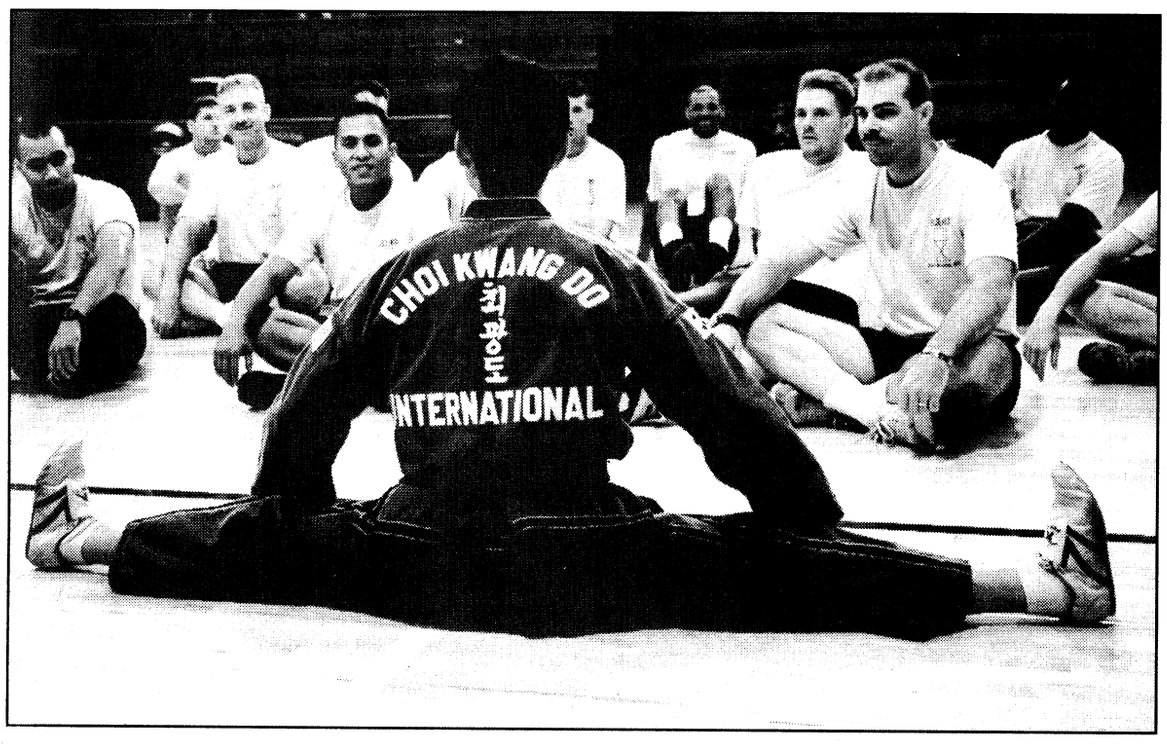
Addressing veterans and friends of the 15th Inf. Regt., part of the 3rd Inf. Div., retired Maj. Gen. Maurice W. Kendall spoke on the symbolism of placing a wreath near the Chinese Arch, a gift from the people of China to the regiment in 1938.

The Chinese gave the marble structure, inscribed with 1,000 English and Chinese characters, in appreciation for the regiment's service as a peacekeeping force following the violent Boxer Rebellion at the turn of the century.

By helping quell violence by some Chinese to rid their country of foreigners and foreign influences, the 15th Inf. Regt. was labeled the "Can Do" regiment, a term used today on the organization's flag. Also featured is a dragon, symbolic of the service in China.

Actions in the Civil War also contributed symbolism to the flag; four acorns represent the four major campaigns the unit fought in the war.

The regiment also served in the Phillipines and, during World War II, distinguished itself as part of the 3rd Inf. Div. By 1945, a total of 16 soldiers from the regiment had earned the Medal of Honor, and Audey Murphy, the most decorated American soldier of all time, served in the 15th.



During the Cold War, "The 15th stood toe to toe with the Russian Bear, and the Bear blinked," said Kendall.

More recently, the regiment participated in Desert Shield and Desert Storm and has deployed to Russia, Macedonia and Somalia where it continues to be first on the frontier of American interests, said Kendall.

As part of the ceremony, soldiers from the 15th Inf. Regt. joined Fort Benning soldiers in the colorful ceremony complete with honor guards, flags and campaign ribbons.

Capt. Jim Harrington of 3rd Battalion, 15th Inf. Div., of Fort Stewart, Ga., said "This ceremony brings us back to the importance of the 15th."

2, 4-year degrees available; classes begin Oct. 15

Special to The Bayonet©

Action-oriented courses designed to develop both body and mind are the focus of a unique off-duty education program currently offered by Upper Iowa University-Fort Benning.

The courses, which emphasize restorative and martial arts, are intended to produce fitness leaders who excel physically as well as intellectually, said Ed Thomas, program director.

"We offer an associate of arts and a bachelor of science in physical education," Thomas said. "But this curriculum is revolutionary, convenient and definitely physical. We study essential theory but emphasize hands-on and mission-related physical fitness leadership and management. Soldiers should be the ultimate athletes."

Restorative arts are techniques that bring the body toward its optimal state of readiness and include flexibility training, posture and relaxation, resistance exercise, first-aid, aquatics and aerobic training.

Martial arts are techniques that allow for appropriate responses to external aggression and include a variety of combative systems from both Eastern and Western traditions from grappling to traditional and field-expedient weapons.

The restorative and martial components are complemented by traditional core and theoretical courses such as Introduction to Restorative and Martial Arts, Foundations of Conditioning, Anatomy and Physiology, Exercise Physiology, Nutrition, Human Resource Development and Kinesiology, Thomas said.

"Thomas is ideally qualified to coordinate the program," said Master Sgt. John Shelly, noncommissioned officer in charge of the U.S. Army Physical Fitness School. "He holds four university degrees and has taught physical education for almost twenty years at numerous institutions including Emory University, the University of Iowa and Northern Illinois University. He served in the infantry from 1967 to 1969, received a prestigious Fulbright appointment to Southeast Asia in 1988 and was sports and activities director for the 2nd Infantry Division 1982-1983 where he first introduced the restorative and martial arts curriculum."

Our initial restorative and martial arts curriculum was a two-year program," Thomas said. "It was immediately successful throughout the division, but the delivering institution eventually lost its Korea contract. For the last ten years, the restorative and martial arts concept has been refined by literally hundreds of civilian and military personnel. There are now several colleges and universities in the civilian sector offering physical education degrees that emphasize martial arts, but the Army-based restorative and martial arts program was the first of its kind, and it remains second-to-none."

Thomas gave credit for development of the Fort Benning program to the U.S. Army Physical Fitness School, the Henry Caro Noncommissioned Officers Academy, Army Continuing Education System, Directorate of Community Activities and commanders and noncommissioned officers who support the initiative.

"I have simply collected some good ideas that took form because of the many civilian and military personnel who committed the time and energy to shape them," Thomas said.

Faculty members include cadre from the Fitness School. Steve Van Camp, director of the master fitness trainer course, teaches several subjects, including foundations of conditioning, which is modeled after the master fitness trainer course.

"The restorative and martial arts degree is a tremendous opportunity for the Fort Benning community," Van Camp said.

"The curriculum begins with current Army physical training doctrine. From there we study fitness concepts, old and new that may well become tomorrow's physical training methodologies. For their efforts, students earn a post-secondary degree and gain expertise in an area that is immediately mission-relevant regardless of their military occupational specialty."

Sgt. 1st Class Felix Davila, chief combatives instructor at the School of the Americas, has completed two restorative and martial arts courses and plans two take three more next term.

"I really appreciate the opportunity to study areas that are both personally and professionally relevant," Davila said. "Most of all, I am impressed with the top-quality instructors and students in this program."

Active duty military, family members, Department of Defense and Department of the Army personnel are eligible to enroll. Approval for veterans and Reserve component personnel is anticipated.

Fall term courses begin in mid-October and include introduction to restorative and martial arts, foundations of conditioning, close range/grappling, resistance exercise, aerobic training, aquatics, weapons (handguns), anatomy and physiology and German language.

Preregistration is now underway, and regular registration begins Oct. 3. Classes are flexibly scheduled and can even be tailored to fit the needs of specific units.

For more information concerning the RAMA program, call 685-9555, or visit the Upper Iowa University-Fort Benning office at Soldiers' Plaza, Building 2612.

Red Ribbon

campaign starts Oct. 23

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

The national Red Ribbon campaign, an annual, week-long celebration that emphasizes the importance of eliminating illegal drugs in schools, work places and communities, starts Oct. 23.

Al Curry, education coordinator of the post's Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Program, said that the campaign is the perfect time for Fort Benning residents to demonstrate their commitments to lifestyles free from drug abuse.

Post residents are invited, he said, to wear red ribbons as a symbol of their commitments to healthy, drug-free lifestyles and to participate in various drug awareness and prevention programs.

"We want the message to reach the children of Fort Benning in particular. Educational materials will be made available to room mothers at the post's elementary schools at Building 241," Curry said.

Curry said Fort Benning and South Columbus Boy Scouts are planning to go door to door in the housing areas to distribute information and get signatures for their own petition.

In addition, the Youth Activities Center and each of the post communities will feature its own programs and events.

The center will feature a Halloween dance with a "say boo to drugs" theme.

The public is also invited to attend a special ribbon-tying ceremony Oct. 24 at 8:30 a.m. at the grand staircase at the Riverwalk in Columbus.

The ceremony will symbolize the cooperation and dedication of the Columbus, Phenix City and Fort Benning communities in working to end drug abuse.

Curry said anyone desiring information, educational materials, red ribbons for wear or support for activities and programs can contact him at 545-4993 or 545-1138.

The Red Ribbon campaign will continue through Oct. 31.

2/69 soldiers clean playground

By Tommy Whitaker
Community Life Office

When residents of the Custer Terrace community complained that their children's playgrounds were overgrown with vines and brush, Col. Michael Deegan, commander of the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, decided to something about it.

As the sponsor unit commander for Custer Terrace, Deegan directed the Custer Terrace Community Life Office to clear the worst playground with help from the Support Platoon, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment.

Reginald T. Perkins, the support platoon sergeant, organized his unit's efforts. Even though most of his unit was on block leave following a National Training Center deployment, he found enough volunteers to complete the mission.

Perkins and 10 members of his platoon spent a day swinging axes and slingblades to clear the overgrowth from a playground in Kessler Court. In all, the soldiers cut, loaded and hauled away 2 1/2 truckloads of vegetation.

Next, the area coordinator, Staff Sgt. Leon Davis, and several area residents removed all trash and large debris from around the playground. The Support Platoon provided the transportation to remove the trash.

After the area had been cleared, a small emplacement excavator, supplied by Company A, 317th Engineer Company, arrived to scrape the ground to remove any remaining roots and vines. Then a load of sand was delivered to the playground by the Directorate of Public Works and spread by area residents.

Boy scout reaches out to veterans

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

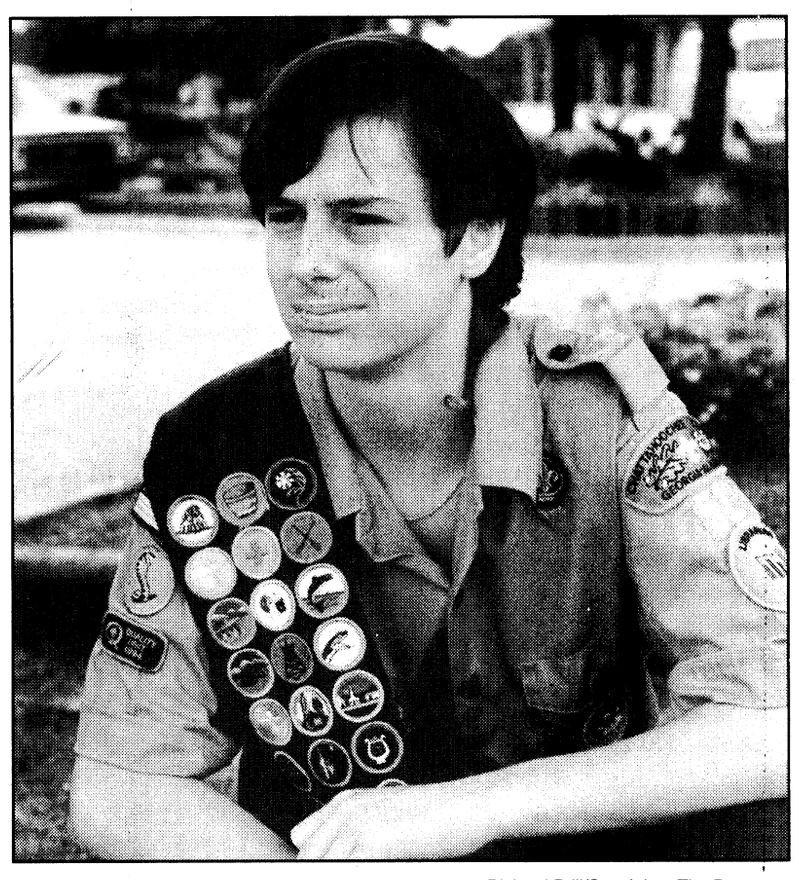
Eagle Scout candidate Jerome Welch will soon begin collecting personal supplies for former soldiers in the Veterans Medical Center in Tuskegee because "They gave their all for us; now it's time to give something back to them," he said.

Welch, a member of Troop 51 on Fort Benning, noticed the veterans were in dire need of personal hygiene items when he visited the facility with his parents, he said.

Due to budget cuts, there is a shortage of toothpaste, brushes, soap, toothbrushes, razors, combs, dental floss, shaving cream and deodorant.

Welch, a 14-year-old freshman at Columbus High School, will collect the items from Oct. 1 through Nov. 5 at the following locations: Main Post Exchange, Mini Mall, Commissary, Sand Hill Exchange and all community life centers.

He chose to help veterans in his Eagle Scout project because of his own experiences as a military family member and to honor those who served in the past, he said. Like other Boy Scouts, Welch has made a promise "to help other people" as part of the Boy Scout Oath.



Welch began his association with scouting as a fifth-grade Webelo Scout in Fort Benning's Pack 227.

During his years of scouting, Welch has risen in rank and has earned 35 merit badges, emblems which designate he has shown proficiency in various outdoor survival skills and community service.

Welch, who is challenged by attention deficit hyperactivity disorder, has managed to meet his scouting goals while honing outdoor skills despite the additional effort required for him to screen out distractions and focus his concentration, said his mother, Nancy Welch.

"He has worked hard at this. We are really proud of him," she said.

Welch's father, Sgt. 1st Class Julius Welch, recently retired from Company B, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment.

Chaplain retires after 23 years of ministry

By Jacqueline Feagin

Chaplain (Col.) Roy G. Plummer, installation chaplain of Fort Benning, will retire from the Army Sept. 30.

After 23 years active service in the chaplaincy, Plummer said his job here was the most rewarding.

"Seeing an installation like Benning with multiple tasks and diverse needs, in a multi-ethnic environment, come together as a Unit Ministry Team providing for the needs of soldiers, family members, retirees and civilians — making ministry happen — has been rewarding," he said.

Plummer began his career in the Army after listening to an announcement about the chaplaincy on WSB Channel 2 in Atlanta, where he was the booth announcer.

His inquiry into the chaplaincy led him to his first assignment at Fort Gordon, Ga., in a signal unit. He went on to Fort Lewis, Wash., where he had his first introduction to pastoral ministry and pastoral care.

From there he went on to Europe and worked for the Armed Forces Network as the radio coordinator and radio pastor. "The Word and The World" was a segment AFN produced during which he would read excerpts from the Bible each morning.

Some still remember Plummer closing the program with, "Smile. God loves you, something real good will happen to you today."

In Europe he also began the largest attended Gospel service at atterberry chapel in 1977. While serving as V Corp artillery chaplain in 1990, he was pastor at Atterberry for one year. This was his first time returning to the pastorate for 19 years.

At Benning, he has continued pastoring at Sightseeing Road Chapel to a congregation that has grown to more than 400.

Plummer said he "cannot leave this assignment without thanking Col. David Kershaw, the 36th Engineer Group commander, who supported the renovations at Sightseeing Road Chapel with the U-Do-It program.

He also thanked all the commanders and directorates of Fort Benning for supporting ministry, civilians who support the chapels each week and chaplains' assistants who leave their families to ensure ministry happens.

"Thanks to Barbara Vining, who keeps me out of trouble; Jackie Feagin, who makes sure the news of the chaplaincy reaches Benning; Bill Putman and Phil Reilly, who provide for the formation of our young people," Plummer said.

He thanked the 800 plus volunteers who serve the chapels and its programs, his wife, Mearian, and his children, without whose help and care his career would not have been successful, he said. He also thanked the chaplains here, who, he said, have made his assignment enjoyable.

To the mayors, the Pastoral Institute of Columbus, Columbus College and the ministers of Columbus, Plummer said thanks for systematically developing a way to make ministry happen by providing a way for him to bring the U.S. Army Family Life Ministry Training Program here.

He said he would like to be remembered as "the chaplain who cared enough to make a difference in the tri-cities area and the pastor of the largest congregation on post."

Plummer has accepted a position at Columbus College where he will work with graduate students and has made Columbus his home. He plans to continue pastoring at Faith Tabernacle Community Church in Columbus.

There will be a retirement ceremony for him Thursday at noon at the Fort Benning Officers' Club. For more information, call 545-4968.

Chaplain (Col.) Herbert E. Kitchens will be the new installation chaplain. He will begin his assignment here Sept. 30.

Common ideas, ideals are just common sense

reflections

By Johnny D. Messer
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Recently, a number of studies and polls have attempted to measure the status of American life in such areas as education, culture and sexual behavior.

All of these seem to share one thing in common — they announced as surprising or shocking certain things that Americans used to take for granted.

For instance, Parade Magazine announced that it had done a "comprehensive national survey" on sex in America.

Among the gigantic and shocking surprises in the survey results was the conclusion that people who are married are more satisfied with their sex life than singles.

Well, knock me down with a feather. Isn't that the sort of thing parents, teachers and religious leaders used to argue when they tried to teach us to wait until we were married to have sex and to have sex only with the person to whom we were married?

The papers and magazines often bless us with such "earth shaking" news as: smoking is bad for you (so did my mom); single parents and illegitimate children are, as a whole, poor substitutes for intact families (perhaps all those fathers with shotguns at weddings knew something after all); and that children who grow up with two loving parents and attend schools where they are taught to behave tend to end up being more productive citizens than those who do not.

It appears that a lot of the common ideas and ideals that we were taught (not so long ago) by parents, priests and pastors (and a whole lot of other regular, red-blooded Americans who loved their God, their families and their country) might not have been quite so dumb after all.

I am reminded of an open letter that professional baseball great George Herman "Babe" Ruth wrote at the end of his life.

He told of growing up as an incorrigible kid who was placed in a Catholic school (really an orphanage). When he left that school he wandered far from what he had been taught was right.

However, at the end of his life, he came to understand that what the priests and nuns who had labored in that orphanage had taught him was the truth and that all the "wild" life he had experienced was a tragic delusion. It had only brought him pain and heartache.

At the end of his earthly "game" the "Babe" wrote to encourage parents and other adults to live exemplary lives themselves and to teach kids to live by high standards and to value faith in God. At the end, Babe realized some of those "old ways" were best.

Maybe it's time for America's to listen to the Babe and others like him, to listen who have realized that there is a God and that there are standards to live by — that a godly, moral life is not only best, but right, makes sense. It is right, not because some baseball star says so, but because God says so — and because it just makes good sense. Maybe it is time to exercise a little

Dudley Moore raises 'Daddy's Girls' in new CBS comedy

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

In one of his top movie hits, Dudley Moore had the number "10" on his mind ... but now, his magic figure is three.

SPOTLIGHT

That's how many young ladies the veteran of such other films as "Arthur" and "Foul Play" has to deal with in "Daddy's Girls," the new CBS comedy series airing Wednesdays.

Moore appears as a hapless fellow — named, of all things, Dudley — whose wife has deserted him to run off with his business partner, leaving him not only to handle professional matters on his own, but also to raise his three daughters (played by former "Knots Landing" regular Stacy Galina, Meredith Scott Lynn and Keri Russell) by himself.

Since they're closer to adulthood than adolescence, with the Galina character set to marry a boring man he can't stand (Alan Ruck) and Russell's alter ego devoted to a beau known as Scar (Phil Buckman), the challenges facing Dudley are many; however, he often gets help on both the home and work fronts from a designer employed by him.

The latter role is portrayed by Tony Award-winning actor-playwright Harvey Fierstein ("Torch Song Trilogy," "Mrs. Doubtfire"), marking one of the few gay characters currently being depicted in prime-time network television. However, that's not a new situation for executive producers Paul Witt and Tony Thomas, since they stirred controversy in the late 1970s by featuring the homosexual named Jodie on "Soap."

Except for the music-documentary program "Orchestra!", Moore's first American series experience was the very short-lived 1993 CBS show called "Dudley." Though it wasn't embraced either by critics or audiences, he feels it was "just fine. A lot of shows are pretty well-cast, and it's just a matter of people getting familiar with them. I didn't feel curtailed by the writing of that show, no more than I do with this. I felt no sort of 'correctness' creeping in, no sort of conventional approach, which was great. I like the idea of doing television. I couldn't do what I did with Peter Cook (Moore's longtime performing partner) in the '60s, because that was sketch material, and we did six shows in six months. We did it very leisurely, but (the sitcom format is) a different way of working."

What: "Daddy's Girls"
When: Wednesdays on CBS

It certainly is that for "Daddy's Girls" co-star Fierstein as well, and he's pleased to have been cast in the part he's doing. "I speak for me, and not for CBS or Witt-Thomas or anybody but me," he stresses, "but I would rather see an openly gay person play an openly gay role, even in a stereotyped way, than what I had to grow up with ... watching a small, gay role played by some ex-football player. There are more gay roles around now, and no one casts a gay person to play them. It's almost like this fear, so I am very proud to be the first openly gay actor to be playing an openly gay role in the 'family hour'."

Magpie jays join zoo's bird collection

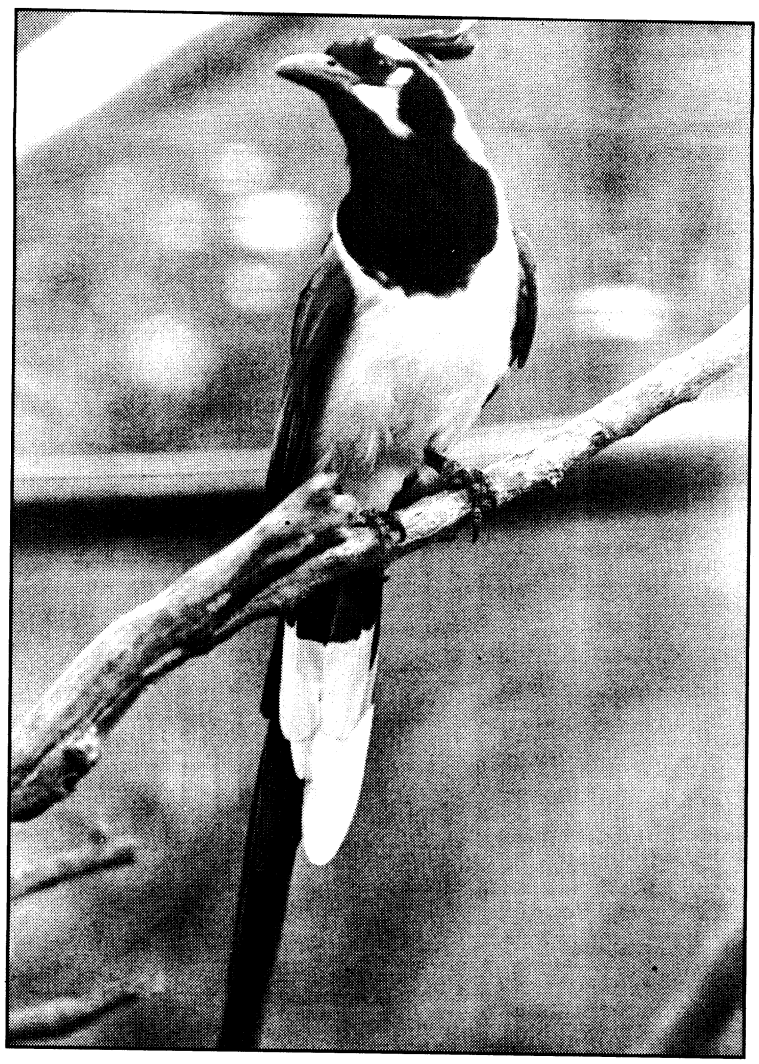
Zoo Atlanta

ATLANTA — Zoo Atlanta recently added a pair of colorful magpie jays to its collection of exotic birds.

Resembling a giant blue jay, these birds are blue with extremely long tails, tall-pointed, black crests, and white bellies.

The female magpie jay was hatched at the Houston Zoo and the male is from the Tracy Aviary in Utah.



If all goes well, officials said Zoo Atlanta will have little nesting magpie jay babies in the future.

Magpie jays are native to the Sonoran region of northwest Mexico where they inhabit the semiarid lowlands, looking for fruits, seeds, insects and small reptiles to eat.

Zoo Atlanta's new magpie jays can be seen Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. (Admission booths close one hour before zoo grounds close).

Admission rates are adults: $7.50, seniors: $6.50, children 3 to 11: $5, children under 3 and members: free.

The zoo is located in Atlanta off I-20 west. Take I-185 north to I-85 north to I-20 west and follow the signs. For more information, call (404) 624-5600.

586th, more MPs leave for Haiti

Engineers will join in Haiti peace-keeping mission

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

Soldiers from two units on post have deployed to Haiti to assist in Operation Uphold Democracy.

Thirty-eight members from the 586th Engineer Company (Assault Float Bridge) and 27 soldiers from the 988th Military Police Company departed in an Air Force C-5 Wednesday, and 40 additional soldiers left on three separate flights Thursday from Lawson Army Airfield.

The 988th was the first unit from Fort Benning to deploy when four separate flights left post Sept. 22 en route to Haiti.

Each unit will be responsible for missions unique to its specific jobs.

The 988th mission in Haiti will be "battlefield circulation and control, area security, detainee operations and law and order operations," according to Capt. David F. Lewis, company commander of the 988th.

"I anticipate performing all four of the military police missions," Lewis said.

While the 988th's mission revolves around security, the 586th's mission deals with getting troops from one place to another.

"Our mission as a unit is to build bridges," said Capt. Carol. L. Anderson, commander of the 586th.

Soldiers from the 586th and the 988th left Fort Benning after a farewell ceremony that included speeches from Col. Dean A. Kershaw, commander of the 36th Engineer Group, and Col. Gregory C. Camp, chief of staff for Fort Benning.

Camp said, "These soldiers are disciplined and are ready to do whatever it is (they are asked)."

> "The 586th is a well-trained unit, and I expect them to do especially well in (Haiti)."
> — Col. Dean A. Kershaw
> Commander, 36th Engineer Group

Camp concluded his speech by wishing the soldiers, "Godspeed and a safe, quick return to your families."

"Deployment to anywhere in the world is very familiar to the 36th Engineer Group," Kershaw later said. "The 586th is a well-trained unit and I expect them to do especially well in (Haiti)."

Kershaw described the 586th as a "one-of-a-kind" unit. "They're the only assault ribbon bridge company on the East Coast of the United States," he said.

Kershaw said he spoke with the company on three occasions during the past week. "I emphasized three things," he said. "Safety, safety and safety. Force protection was the major issue."

A ceremony was also conducted for the initial deployment of the 988th.

Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix Fort Benning's commanding general, Col. Ronnie D. Alton, post provost marshal, and friends and families of those deploying gathered to say goodbye.

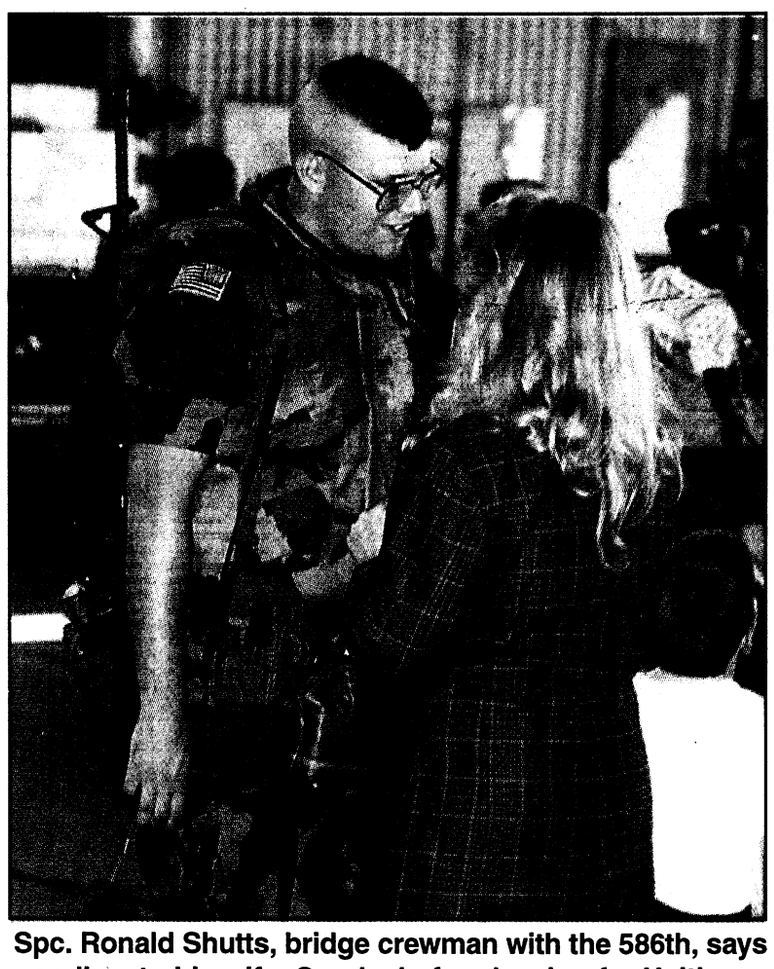
The Infantry Band played patriotic music just before the 988th marched in to cheers from the crowd.

During his remarks to the assembly, Alton told Hendrix that he didn't want to see the company go, but assured the commanding general they were ready to go.

"They will be able to complete any mission they are confronted with," Alton said.

Hendrix described the 988th as "well-rested, well-trained, well-motivated and well-equipped."

Pfc. Ricardo Barrera, a military policeman with the 988th, said, "We've been trained for all this for quite some time. What's the use of training if you don't use it?"



"As long as we have teamwork, everything should go pretty smooth," he said.

When the ceremony concluded, soldiers from the 988th were given time to spend with their friends and families before departing.

Soldiers will receive paychecks Today

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Active duty military members will receive their Oct. 1 pay and allowances today.

That's because Deputy Secretary of Defense John Deutch has exercised his authority to pay active duty military personnel for the October payday the preceding September.

Deutch also authorized a Sept. 29, 1995, payday for the Oct. 1, 1995, payday.

Earlier, there was some question about the payday because when a military payday falls on a weekend, military members are paid the preceding Friday.

However, this year the Friday payday meant a different fiscal year and officials had to decide whether to pay service members in the preceding fiscal year or the following fiscal year.

Deutch authorized the payday today and Sept. 29, 1995, respectively.

The two October paydays this year and next year fall on a Saturday and Sunday, respectively.

Title 37, Section 1006(h) of the U.S. Code authorizes the secretary of Defense to approve payment of pay and allowances to active duty military members on the preceding workday when their payday falls on a Saturday, Sunday or holiday.

This will prevent military members from receiving their pay late.

This action does not affect the pay of military retirees and annuitants.

Their accounts will be paid on the first working days of the month, Oct. 3 and Oct. 2, 1995, respectively.

Post spends ACOE $1 million award

Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning's selection as the best large installation in the Army two years ago may be receding into memory, but the $1 million the post won should be contributing to quality of life here for some time to come.

According to Maj. Chuck Walls, garrison operations officer, a lot of effort went into the allocation of the Army Communities of Excellence money.

Walls said a board composed of directorate chiefs and unit commanders oversaw the distribution and accounting of the money.

"We had two key concerns," Walls said. "First, we wanted to provide the most equitable distribution possible, from the many requests received from directorates and units.

"Once the projects were decided on," he said, "we wanted to provide an overwatch to make sure the dollars were being spent as allocated, so that at any time over the last four or five months, we could have told you precisely where the money was and what was being done with it."

Walls said all the projects that were approved for funding have been completed or contracted for completion, and all have been fully funded.

"We had to make sure all the money was allotted before the end of the fiscal year, which is Sept. 30," he said. "If the money wasn't spent by then, we would lose it."

Some of the facilities benefiting from the $1 million are:

- Audie Murphy Gym
- Sand Hill Recreation Center
- Soldiers' Plaza
- Carey Pool at the Main NCO Club
- playground equipment for family housing
- Phase I of the Riverwalk and Recreation Trail project.

> "We had to make sure all the money was spent before the end of the fiscal year ... (or) we would lose it."
> — Maj. Chuck Walls
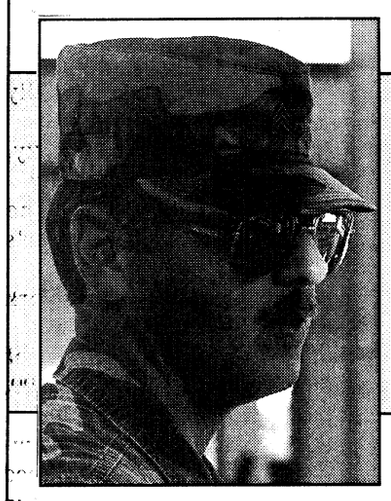
> Garrison operations officer

Walls said several other approved projects were also funded.

Once the already-approved projects had all been contracted, Walls said, the board found not all the money had been spent.

"Some of the projects ended up costing much less than we had expected, so we were within days of the end of the fiscal year with money still to allocate," he said. "So we made some deliberate decisions about how those 'extra' dollars could be best spent, quickly and to the maximum benefit of the soldiers."

Walls said one project that received the 'surplus' funding was air conditioning for the renovated Central Issue Facility.



"We believe the air conditioning will be appreciated by all the soldiers who stand in line to receive or return TA-50 (field gear)," he said.

Walls said he thinks distribution of the ACOE award money was "as equitable as you can get." Considerable deliberation went into every phase of the planning, he said, and the funding met a lot of needs across post.

All the experience the board gathered during the process, Walls said, should be valuable after the first of the year, when the time comes to spend the $1.5 million CINC award.

VARIOUS VOICES

When you become angry enough to become physical with a family member, what do you do to avoid abuse?

Sgt. William W. Russell, Company D, 1st Battalion, 186th Infantry Regiment (Medford, Ore.) — "I usually hit walls, myself. It works."

Staff Sgt. William J. Walker, Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, Henry Caro Noncommissioned Officers Academy — "I go running or do some kind of physical exercise or activity — go to the gym, play basketball, lift weights. It alleviates stress and tension."

Valinda A. Hall, X-ray technician, Martin Army Community Hospital — "I leave the room. You separate yourself from the situation, let it cool down."

Deborah F. Wilcox, family member— "Pray. And I remember the scripture that says 'Be angry and sin not.' It's not the anger that's wrong — it's what you do with it."

Capt. James C. Anderson, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division — "I go away from the person I'm angry at — go play with the computer or go outside until I can calm down enough to talk rationally."

Stacy M. Sprowl, family member — "I really don't know how to answer that. I don't get that angry, where I could physically harm anyone in my family."

Love stories don't always have happy endings

Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

commentary

She went to her parents for help, knocking at their door late one night, shaking and in tears. He had hit her — more than once, and this wasn't the first time. He was verbally abusive, calling her names, never satisfied with anything she did. And she was afraid he might hurt the baby.

This was really the first clue anyone had that the marriage was violent.

They met when they were both seniors in high school, and they seemed to fall in love in five minutes.

Colleen was beautiful — dark hair, blue eyes, and a slim-but-not-skinny build. Curtis was tall, dark, quiet and somewhat shy, but able to speak with conviction when he felt strongly about something.

They were almost never apart during that whole school year. When they finally danced together at the senior prom, he in a black tux and she in a floor-length, strapless white dress, their classmates were already predicting a marriage.

They were right. It was a part of the country where many people married right out of high school, and Colleen and Curtis joined that group before the summer was over.

Colleen reveled, for a while, in the role of a traditional wife. She wanted to take care of someone who would, in turn, take care of her. She had no great ambitions for a career, but didn't mind working. Her biggest goal, however, was to be a wife and mother.

The night she showed up at the front door was the first time anyone learned that something had gone unbelievably wrong on her way to that goal.

Her parents gave her, and the baby, a place to stay. But there had been tensions in the family before she left home, and some of those now reappeared. Also, her parents couldn't seem to stop criticizing Curtis, and although he had hurt her, Colleen wasn't ready to say he was all bad.

Within a few weeks, she had returned to him, in what we all later learned was a classic part of the abuse cycle. At the time, it seemed that she was making a decision that was foolish, at best. Her father, who had never hesitated to take a belt to his children if he thought they needed it, refused to have any contact with her for several months afterward, since he felt she had "thrown his help back in his face."

Colleen showed up at their doorstep again that Christmas, with gifts for everyone. She was not allowed into the house, and her sisters had to go outside to speak to her. Curtis waited in the car, and this time she went to him in tears.

The see-saw kept going for a few more years, with Curtis being both hero and villain. They never got counseling, and after a few more years and another baby, Colleen finally somehow found the courage to get away for good.

Years later, she's happy in her second marriage, to a man who doesn't "love" with his fists. Still, I think something in her is permanently changed. For the years of her first marriage she paid in bruises, tears, low self-esteem and continual fear. She never knew what would set Curtis off — and she'll never forget those feelings.

Colleen grew up knowing that if you do the wrong thing, you get hurt. When she left her father's house for her husband's, the rules remained the same. Somehow my sister Colleen found the strength to change those rules, but she had to do it on her own.

I don't know if she ever figured out how her background affected what happened in her marriage, or how it might affect her dealings with her own children. I don't know if she's ever understood that the whole thing wasn't her fault.

If someone close to you is a victim of abuse, don't close her (or him) out. And don't assume that abuse isn't happening just because you haven't seen it. Victims of abuse have little or no self-esteem — they need your help and support, not your doubt and rejection.

Don't assume that a person "chooses" to stay in an abusive situation. Offer support if you can, and encourage that person to get help. Don't turn your back, and don't give up. And if you're one who is abusive, or if you feel you might have that tendency, get help. There are other ways to handle your anger; ways that don't destroy the people you love.

Why does spouse abuse continue to occur?

Social Work Service

commentary

Why spouse abuse occurs and why it continues are questions that are often asked.

Abuse continues when either spouse, usually the victim, is afraid to talk about what is happening.

Financial problems, family isolation and children are some common reasons one may decide to remain in the marriage.

The abuse can also continue when friends, neighbors and supervisors have the attitude that what goes on with another family is nobody else's business, and they decide not to call the military police or they decide not to refer the victim to the appropriate service organizations for help.

Steps to prevent family violence are everybody's responsibility and require on-going community awareness; and, when there is suspicion of abuse, efforts must be made to report it.

Family violence is not a new phenomenon as it continues to deteriorate and eat away at the hearts and souls of millions of families.

For some families, violence is a way of life full of silent tears and fears until an injury that requires medical treatment occurs. Making the decision to get help is a difficult step, but many find the courage.

Just recently many counselors have begun looking at the newest victims of violence. These victims are the children, who sometimes carry lifetime scars after witnessing abuse in their homes.

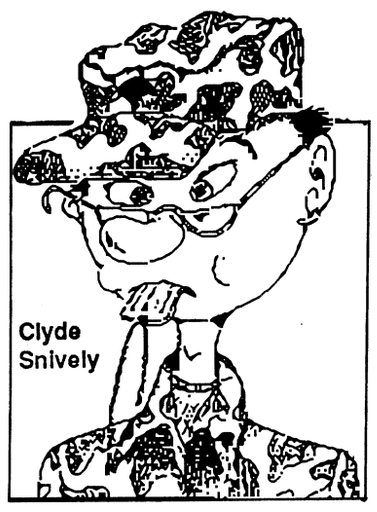
Some research shows that children who were exposed to family violence learn the behavior and carry this pattern of problem solving into marriages and parenting, frequently resulting in a cyclical effect. Still other children make an early decision not to use violence as a means of solving conflicts.

Why does the abuse happen? Several reasons may surface for different families.

Some common reasons are jealousy and control issues, financial difficulties, job-related stress and lack of more effective ways of solving conflicts.

Today's Army recognizes the importance of family and the importance of the family's well-being. At Fort Benning, social work services are available to assist families in recognizing, confronting and eliminating abuse. Counseling is offered for individuals, couples and groups.

Couples are encouraged to seek counseling before the abuse occurs. Education and training is available in areas of anger management, conflict resolution and appropriate parenting skills.



To make a report of family violence or find out more about the services available from Martin Army Community Hospital's Social Work Service, call 545-1661 or 545-7645.

To place a report after duty hours, call the hospital's Emergency Room at 544-1123.

The caller's name will not be revealed.

Domestic abuse demonstrates lack of self-control

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

commentary

Not a day goes by that the military police aren't called to come break up a fight between spouses.

He comes home grumpy from a tough day in the woods. The kids kept her tied in knots from the minute they woke up.

He says something she doesn't like. She snaps back. He slaps her. She hits him with the frying pan. He chokes her. She stabs him with the kitchen knife.

There are only 4,000 families living on post. If there's an assault every day of the year, and there are probably many that never get reported, that's nearly 10 percent of our post families resorting to physical violence to settle disputes.

Apologists point to the stress and strain placed on soldiers. They work long hours, often for bosses who're overbearing and domineering.

Too, they aren't sure if the Army's going to have a job for them as they approach mid-careers.

So what do they do? They come home to someone not as big, not as tough and without legal authority over them and they bust that person in the chops.

Sometimes the bustee hits back. Sometimes not. Oftentimes that assaulter gets carried away and can't stop himself until he's standing over the unconscious spouse.

Sometimes he's apologetic. Other times not.

You hear the talk in the motor pool. "Yeah man, I busted her a good one. But she deserved it. Refused to heat up my supper when I got home and couldn't get the kids to shut up. She was asking for it."

Often they'll blame this aggressiveness on their warrior training.

"Hey, they train us to kill in the field all day long. Kinda hard to just turn that aggressiveness off when you get home, ya know."

I think if they'd think about it, they see that true warriors don't go around beating up the defenseless. Instead, they consider it part of their code to stand up for and defend the downtrodden, the weak, the helpless.

After all, isn't that what Somalia started out to be all about? And Haiti too?

Sure the Army mirrors society. If society has some ailment, some flaw, then the Army will probably have it to some degree too.

But that's a copout. It's not an excuse. We in the Army have a higher standard than our civilian neighbors. We have a code of conduct. We are disciplined. We are trained to overcome adversity.

Spouse abuse is never nice. It's especially bad in the military when sometimes the only person we have to turn to for understanding and comfort is our spouse.

My opinion is if a person can't control his emotions at home, he can't be trusted on the battlefield with a loaded weapon. I know I don't want him leading me.

OFF-SITE CONFERENCE

Commanders gather

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning's new commanding general, Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, hosted an off-site conference at the Uchee Creek Lodge Sept. 23.

At the conference, the commanders of the post's major units and the staff directors of the U,S. Army Infantry Center and School gave short presentations outlining the key events and changes that have occurred within their units and agencies in the last 15 months, with emphasis on the impact these events will have on future training and operations.

The purpose of the conference was to bring Hendrix up to date on what has happened on post since he left his position here as deputy commanding general in July 1993.

"I know every one of you and the programs you run," Hendrix said. "I just need to hear where we are."

Hendrix told the unit commanders he did not expect to be making many changes, but that he plans to put more emphasis on training and leader development, which he said he thinks is important in today's Army.

The conference ended with a barbeque for the attendees and their spouses, hosted by the commanding general.

va q&a

Department of Veterans Affairs

Editor's Note: The following are representative questions answered daily by VA counselors. Full information is available at any VA office.

Q: I served in the Army Reserve for 25 years and retired as a lieutenant colonel, even though I never served on active duty except for training purposes. Am I eligible for burial in a national cemetery?

A: Public Law 103-240 recently authorized eligibility for members of reserve components who accumulate sufficient service time to be eligible for retirement pay. Many members of reserve components were already eligible by virtue of active duty service during a period such as the Persian Gulf War.

Depending on the circumstances of death, other reservists, members of the National Guard and ROTC personnel may also be eligible.

Q: Will VA replace a marker that has deteriorated from exposure to the weather or vandalism?

A: Vandalized, stolen or deteriorated headstones or markers, including those weather-worn to the extent they are no longer legible, will be replaced at government expense. Before approving replacement, VA's Office of Memorial Programs will need a photograph of the deteriorated marker, or a report of vandalism or theft. OMP will not replace headstones or markers solely for cemetery beautification purposes.

Q: Are the traditional, upright veterans headstones available in any material other than marble?

A: The traditional, upright headstone is now available in granite as well as marble for veterans who are buried in cemeteries other than national cemeteries. The granite is a light gray color and is exactly the same size as the marble headstone.

Teaching careers available for soldiers leaving military

By Elsie Jackson
Army Career and Alumni Program

Do you have what it takes to face a real challenge — the classroom of today?

If you have a bachelor's degree, especially in math, science, or a foreign language, but do not have a teaching certificate, it is still possible for you to transition almost directly from battles to blackboards.

A growing number of states have or are developing alternative teacher certification programs that may help you start a teaching career.

It may be possible for you to teach with a provisional certificate while earning the college credits required for certification in your state.

Just what is alternative certification? Alternative Certification refers to a program or procedure designed to put a college graduate who has appropriate subject-matter expertise and experience into teaching.

Typically, these programs combine a streamlined curriculum of education course work with some form of student teaching.

Generally, alternative certification candidates are required to hold at least a bachelor's degree with concentrated major in the subject to be taught, pass a comprehensive subject-matter test, have a grade-point average of at least 2.5, complete any prescribed courses, and complete an internship program at a local school.

Currently, 30 states have alternative teacher certification programs.

They are Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, New Jersey, New Mexico, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Virginia and West Virginia.

For soldiers who want to pursue a career in teaching, a new "Troops to Teachers" program is in the works.

For service members remaining in Georgia, a "Transition to Education" Program has been developed that will tie in to "Troops to Teachers."

For more information, call your Education Center or the ACAP office at 545-4892 or 545-4913.

BOSS program: New leader takes over responsibility of tackling single-soldier issues

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

Single soldiers have a new voice in the struggle for bettering their quality of life on post. The Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers council has elected a new president to head the program.

Spc. Christina L. Rape´ is the new BOSS president. She will fill that position for the next year.

Rape´, formerly of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 29th Infantry Regiment, said she'd like to see more involvement in the BOSS program from the soldiers.

The BOSS president's job consists of representing single soldiers and presenting their issues at various council meetings on post, according to Master Sgt. Lee A. Coate, sergeant major for Directorate of Community Activities.

Some of the councils include the commanding general's advisory council, the volunteer management council, the Post Exchange advisory council, the Directorate of Public Works design conference and the installation Morale, Welfare and Recreation council.

Coate said in addition to the meetings, the BOSS president is responsible for conducting the post-level, bimonthly BOSS meeting.

Making people more aware of what BOSS is doing by attending more meetings is Rape´'s plan to attract people to the BOSS program, she said.

"I see the BOSS program going nowhere but forward under her leadership, guidance and counsel," Coate said.

She is a great soldier and offers a lot to the appointment of BOSS president, he said.

> "I see the BOSS program going nowhere but forward under her leadership, guidance and counsel."
> — Master Sgt. Lee A. Coate
> Sergeant major for Directorate of Community Activities

Spc. Christina L. Rape' is the new Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers president.

Rape´ was elected president Sept. 8 by the representatives on the BOSS council. She and three other candidates were nominated for the position of BOSS president.

Names of candidates were submitted to the council from various units on post, Coate said.

"The elected BOSS president becomes the go-between for the single soldiers at the major subordinate commands level and the commanding general," Coate said.

The members of the council voted for the candidates by secret ballot and 15 minutes later Rape´ was notified of her new job, she said.

Within two days, Rape´ was reassigned to 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, to articulate the concerns and needs of single soldiers in a full-time job at DCA, Coate said.

Soldiers who want to know what the program is doing or has done for them can come to the BOSS council meetings and see what is really going on, Rape´ said.

She said she would like to know what the soldiers want from their BOSS program.

"Do they want more trips?" she said. "Do they want more things on post? I want to know."

Rape´ said that each unit has its own BOSS representative. To find out who this person is, Rape´ said, soldiers can ask their first sergeant or company commander.

For more information about BOSS or to suggest ideas, call Rape´ at 545-7204 or stop by the BOSS office inside Building 241.

Combined league teams fight tooth and nail

Games range from all-out to shutout

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

The combined league football teams have taken up residence at Engineer Fields No. 1 and No. 2.

Sept. 22, six teams went at it tooth and nail. Here's how it went.

Regulators clip Law Dogs

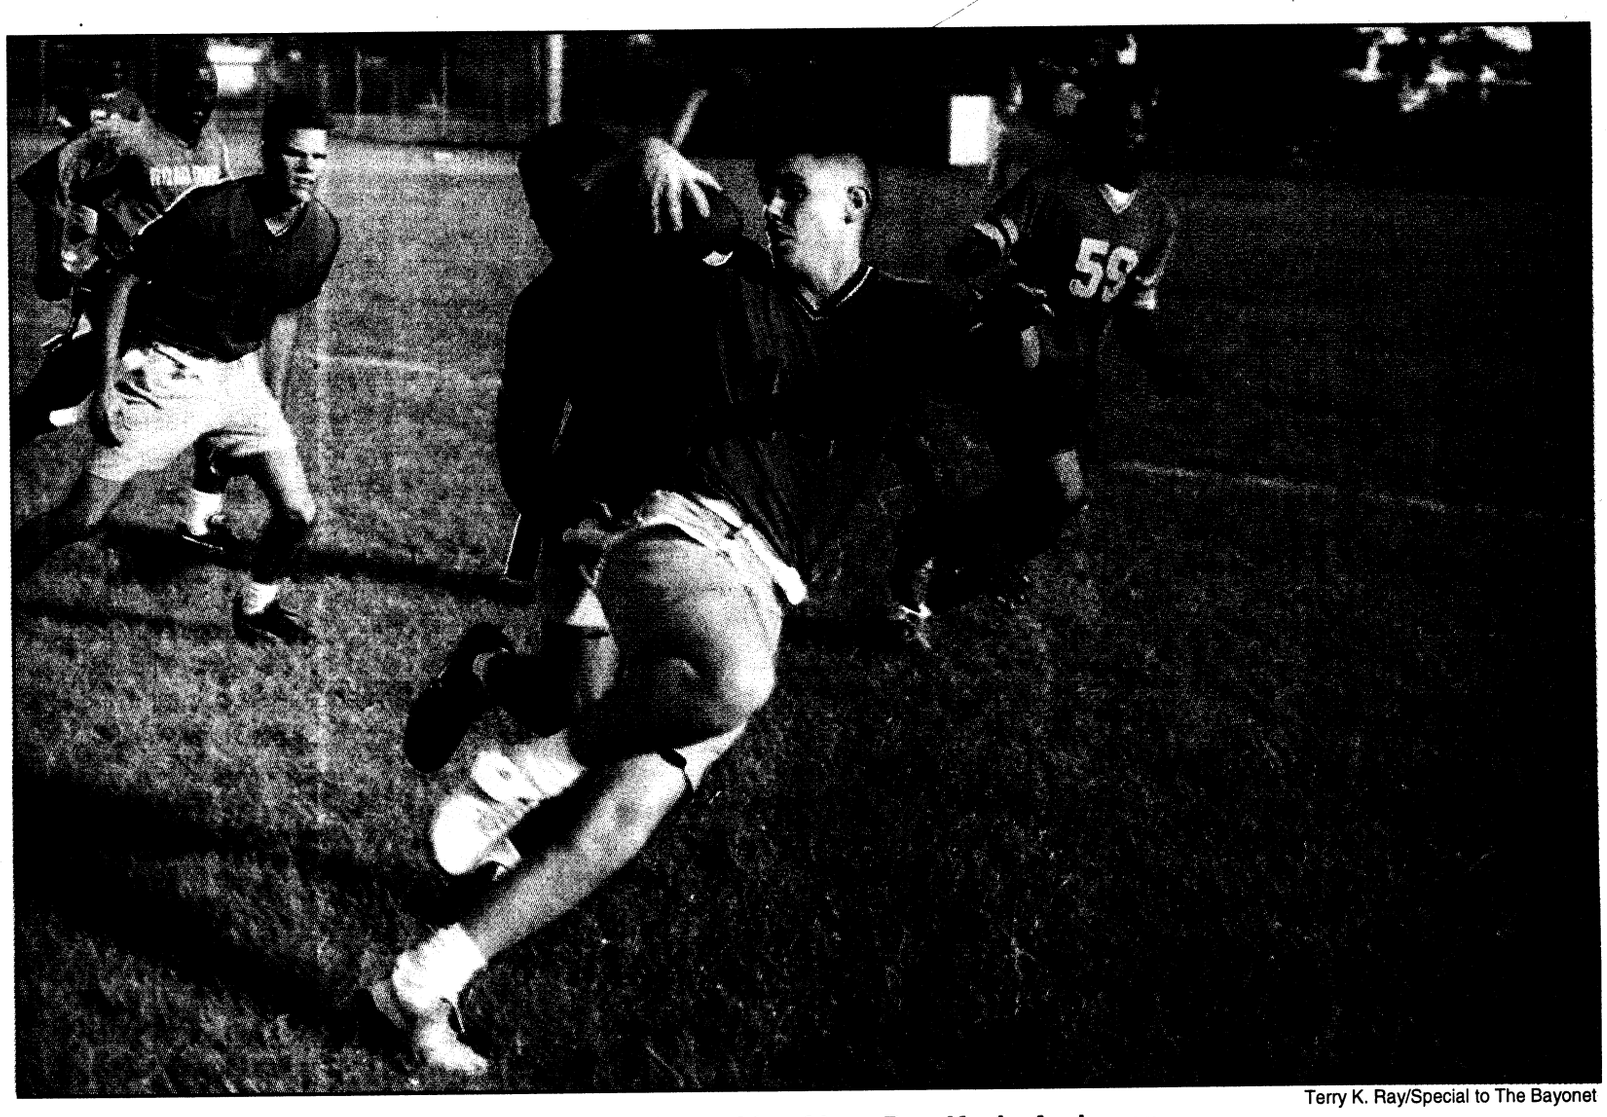
In the opening tilt of the evening, the Regulators of Company E, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment, clipped the Law Dogs of the Military Police Activity 13-12 in overtime.

The Law Dogs took the first bite with a 10-yard touchdown run from tailback Corey Cobb late in the first half to go up 6-0. The touchdown was set up off an interception by Law Dog defensive back Aaron Molenaar at the Regulator 22. Law Dog quarterback Thomas Smith hit wide out Robert Hoague with a 48-yard bomb on the next play from scrimmage, giving the Law Dogs first and goal at the Regulator 10. Cobb scored on a option pitch from Smith on the next play.

The Regulators tied the game 6-6 on their next possession going 38-yards in four plays. Regulator quarterback Rodney Roberts hit Brock Rogers with a 20-yard pass for the tying touchdown. The first half ended with score still tied at 6-6.



In the second half, neither team could sustain a drive. Untimely penalties and good defense stopped both offenses cold. Regulation time ended with the game still tied 6-6.

In the overtime period, each team was given the ball at the 10-yard line and given four downs to either score or get as close to the end zone as possible in four plays. The regulators got first shot, but were unable to come away with any points after safety Quenton Thompkins picked off a pass into the end zone stopping the drive.

The Law Dogs returned the favor on the very next play when Smith was intercepted in the end zone by Todd Kirkwood stopping the Law Dogs chance to end the game.

On the Regulators next chance back up quarterback and coach Cortez Frazier pitched to running back Elijah Acklin who scooted around the right side for the touchdown. Frazier hit Herschel Gillins for the extra point putting the Regulators up 13-6, with the Law Dogs getting the final shot.

Smith scored on a quarterback sneak cutting the lead to 13-12, but couldn't convert the extra point that would have tied the game.

Mustangs trample Falcons

The Mustang's of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, trampled the Falcons of the U.S. Air Force 28-0 in the second game of the night.

The Mustang's galloped out to 21-0 halftime lead on the arm of quarterback Dwight Washington. Washington threw two touchdowns one a 50-yard bomb to receiver Cory Campbell and a short strike to the other wide out Roy Marcum.

The Mustang defense picked off Falcon quarterback Jim Van De Velde twice in the first half Campbell and Wardell Jefferson accounted for the picks. The big defensive play came early in the game when the Falcons were driving the ball towards the Mustang end zone on their first possession of the game.

With the ball at the Mustang 22-yard line Van De Velde pitched the ball to running back Steve King, but the ball never got to King. Mustang defensive end Danny Black read the play stepped in and picked off th pitch and raced 68-yards for the score.

In the second half, the Mustang's mounted one scoring drive going 80-yards in four plays. A 55-yard bomb from Washington to Campbell set up the Mustangs with first and goal at the falcon 19.

Two plays later, back-up quarterback Jefferson raced into the end zone for the final score of the game.

Van De Velde threw two more interception's in the second half one by linebacker Julius Young and the other by defensive back Mark Hill.

Cornerback Keith Shipman also had a pick late in the game for the Falcons.

"Rock" falls on Seminoles

In the final tilt on the evening, the Rock of Company D, 1st Battalion (Abn), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment, fell on the Seminoles of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit 19-6.

The Seminoles drew first blood in the contest midway through the first half when quarterback Patrick Gray found wide receiver Burgess Burrell wide open down the sidelines for a 45-yard touchdown pass. and a 6-0 lead.

The Rock tied the game on the ensuing kickoff when deep back Darrell Baker took the kickoff, turned upfield and simply outran the coverage for a 70-yard touchdown return and a 6-6 tie.

The Rock took the lead for good with under two minutes to play in the second half when the Rock drove the ball 50-yards before Baker went in from 2-yards out. Quarterback Paul Warren hit Charles Johnson for the extra point and a 13-6 lead.

On the 'Noles final possession of the game, Gray was picked off by Johnson who streaked 28-yards to the end zone and a touchdown.

Biathlon winners take 2nd-year victories

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Doughboy Summer Biathlon held Sunday at Olive Field and English Range drew sixty competitors out for the second annual event.

The morning broke with fog settled on the grounds of Fort Benning, but by race time the fog was gone and competitors were preparing for the start of the running and shooting competition.

Last year's winner, Fort Benning's Scott Moore, made it two in a row, holding off Fort Benning newcomer Russell Miller by less than two minutes. Fifty-two-year-old Joe Waters of Social Circle, Ga., finished in the third spot overall just scant seconds behind Miller.

"This is probably one of the biggest biathlon's that I have been to," Miller said. "While I was stationed at Fort Drum, NY., I participated in quite a few sinee the U.S. Biathlon Association is headquartered at Lake Placid just around the corner from Fort Drum."

Miller has been at Fort Benning since June and was glad to see that the biathlon was also here.

"This should be one of the largest mecca's for the biathlon, this is the whole point (of competing in the biathlon)," Miller said. "Way back when; it was a military thing done by European armies, then it just developed into a winter sport. I hope it stays this way, this was a great event."

On the women's side, Amy Cox of Nashville, Tenn., also success-fully defended her title for the second straight year, holding off Oxford, Ga., native Patti Patterson by more than two minutes. Cherlina Monterio of Mobile, Ala., rounded out the top three spots on the women's side.

Since the biathlon is a timed event with staggered starts, just crossing the finish line first doesn't mean a competitor will win. The course is broken down into three running segments totaling five kilometers and two shooting stops, prone and standing.

For every target hit in the prone position 15 seconds are deducted from the shooters total time.

In the standing position 30 seconds are deducted from the time.

For the competitor who is stronger in shooting and weaker in the running portion, the time dropped by hitting the targets can conceivably put the participant in a position to win the event.

Listed below are the top ten male and female competitors with times.

| Males | Time |
|---|---|
| Scott Moore | 18:50 |
| Russell Miller | 20:45 |
| Joe Waters | 20:54 |

| Tony Cox | 22:00 |

ITB edges 1/18 in post soccer championship

By Shelby Carr
Infantry Training Brigade

Infantry Training Brigade's soccer team, Strike Force, defeated 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, during a penalty kick shoot-out to win Fort Benning's soccer championship by a score of 3 -2.

Bobby Baker, Strike Force's fifth shooter, put the ball in the net to give Strike Force a four-to-three lead in the shoot-out and the win after Tim Fanter, the Strike Force goalie, stopped two shots in the shoot-out.

Strike Force put early pressure on the 2nd Bn., 18th Inf. Regt., but was unable to get past the goalkeeping of Jonathan Mann.

Second Bn., 18th Inf. Regt., counterattacked and scored on a shot by David Garcia which dropped just beneath the crossbar to give 2nd Bn., 18th Inf. Regt., a one-to-nothing lead midway through the first half.

A few minutes later, Strike Force again pressured the goal and Brett Irwin was able to put the ball past Mann to tie the game.

The first half ended in a tie, despite pressure by Strike Force and fast breaks and counter-attacks by 2nd Bn., 18th Inf. Regt.

Midway through the second half 2nd Bn., 18th Inf. Regt., scored its second goal to take the lead and began to control the game.

With less than 10 minutes left in the game, Strike Force once again sent shot after shot at the goal, but Mann continued to stop all that came his way.

With less than two minutes left, Baker sent a shot towards the goal. The shot deflected off of the 2nd Bn., 18th Inf. Regt., fullback past Mann to tie the game.

Regulation time ended and the game went into overtime, two 10-minutes halves.

Strike Force continued to put pressure on the 2nd Bn., 18th Inf. Regt., goal, but was unable to score.

Second Bn., 18th Inf. Regt., tried to use its fast breaks, but was unable to get past the Strike Force defense.

Overtime ended and the game went to a shoot-out. A shoot-out is one shooter against the goalie. The ball is placed twelve yards away from the goal, and the goalie can not move until after the ball has been kicked. Five players on each team take shots, with the most goals determining the winner. Only the players on the field at the end of overtime are eligible to kick.

Michael Stewart of 2nd Bn., 18th Inf. Regt., put the first shot in the back of the net, followed by Mark Kegley of Strike Force. Both kickers in the second round also scored easily.

Fanter, the Strike Force keeper, got his hands on the shot of Garcia but was unable to stop it. Andre Sison, of Strike Force, placed his shot in the back of the net to keep the shoot-out tied 3-3.

Fanter was able to stop the fourth and fifth shots by 2nd Bn., 18th Inf. Regt., and Mann was able to stop the fourth shot of Strike Force.

Baker, Strike Force's fifth shooter, needed to score to win the game and was able to put the ball into the goal to give Strike Force the championship.

Psychologist hones athletes' 'mental edge'

By Terry K. Ray

The All-Army Wrestling Team has moved into the upper echelon of wrestling over the past few years, and now the Department of the Army Sports Branch is attempting to keep it and its team members as highly trained mentally as they are physically.

Dr. James Millhouse of Atlanta, a sports psychologist, worked with the team Sept. 19 through Sept. 27 to find the keys to unlock the doors to mental strength.

"The mental side of sports has been important and recognized since people started doing sports in early civilization," Millhouse said. "People have tried to be as mentally prepared as they need to be in sports, but the technology of how to be what you want to be in sports has not been there."

According to Millhouse, the sports psychology field has gained notoriety in the last 20 years in this country as a professional field. Millhouse knows of what he speaks, since he is one of only 28 clinical sports psychologists appointed to the U.S. Olympic Committee Registry of Providers. For the last 15 years, he has provided consultation and mental-skills training to athletes from the junior to the world championship level.

"I teach people mental skills, just like any specific skill you might use in hitting a forehand in tennis or specific wrestling skills," Millhouse said. He said the mental skills he teaches help athletes focus their minds, and mental imagery techniques help them achieve their purposes.

Dr. James Millhouse prepares the All-Army Wrestling Team for a mental skills session.

Millhouse said the use of mental imagery can help athletes run faster, remove bad habits from a technique or instill a new technique. Millhouse said it can also be used to build more power.

Some of the mental skills that can be used to help the athlete become more resourceful are relaxation and arousal control, concentration, mental focusing, mental rehearsal and reprogramming of habits.

According to Millhouse, performance training also assists athletes to most effectively utilize other important psychological principles, such as setting appropriate goals and maintaining the motivation to achieve their goals. "Each athlete has their own specific set of strengths, weaknesses and aspirations," Millhouse said. "Performance training can be individualized to help each person pursue their path to success."

One All-Army wrestler who concurs with Millhouses' conclusions is Spc. Rodney Smith, 1992 Olympic Bronze Medal winner in Greco-Roman wrestling.

"The tools that Dr. Millhouse has given me in the last ten days have already begun to open doors that have produced a change in the way I approach my individual training and as a person," Smith said. "When I'm training at home in Atlanta, there's a certain hill I have to go up. In the past I could never make it up the hill without having to stop. Now I can start up the hill, hit what's called an anchor, and feel a resurgence of strength that carries me up the hill."

Smith also feels that the mental skills are also helping him to strengthen his mind and become a more positive thinker as well as a more well-rounded person on and off the mat. "I tried to soak up everything (Millhouse) had to offer," Smith said. "I've always been a thinker, so this fits right into my style."

The better an athlete is in terms of commitment, discipline and experience the better they are able to use these skills, according to Millhouse. "I've worked with eight-year-old kids and taught them mental skills they can use to run faster, and get over things that they fear," Millhouse said. "With these guys, it's like giving a high-powered car to an expert driver — they can do more with it."

RENOVATION PROJECT

2/29 improves pistol range

By Brett M. Chamberlain
29th Infantry Regiment

After one hundred days of silence, the crackle of 9mm pistol fire was once again heard at Porter Range Sept. 21.

Porter Range, the sole combat pistol qualification range on Fort Benning, was reopened last Wednesday in a ceremony overseen by Col. Robert L. Jordan Jr., commander of the 29th Infantry Regiment, and Lt. Col. Michael A. Bingham, commander of 2nd Bn., 29th Inf. Regt.

In his remarks to members of the organizations assisting in the renovation, Jordan thanked all involved. He praised the teamwork between the military and civilian work force on the installation and emphasized the initiative, tenacity and determination displayed by the noncommissioned officers at the range.

Last used June 11, the range was renovated through a team effort, the core of which was formed by "Charlie Rock," Company C, 2nd Bn., 29th Inf. Regt., commanded by Capt. Shawn Marshall.

According to Sgt. 1st Class Willie P. Upshaw, non-commissioned officer in charge of the range, the renovation's groundwork was laid in April, after Marshall's unit took control of the range from the Military Police. At that time, Porter Range had battery-operated targets and no designated firing line.

Range cadre used sandbags to protect the target-operating positions and the range was run out of 30-year-old wooden buildings. With input from his soldiers, Upshaw drew up the range's upgrade plan and the ball started to roll.

Upshaw cited Master Sgt. Mallory Sump, Charlie Rock's executive officer, as the driving force behind a complex coordination effort to get the job done. The project was allocated no funding, Upshaw said, so the unit had to rely on the voluntary assistance of many outside agencies.

Renovation materials, supplies and equipment were obtained by the unit's supply personnel from decommissioned ranges and through other organizations on post.

Because there was funding, Upshaw said that contracting out the project was impossible, so the company's soldiers, with the help of Infantry Training Brigade troops and members of the 36th Engineer Group, provided the labor. Upshaw even enlisted the help of Reserve instructors from Companies A and B, 4th Bn., 104th Training Support Brigade here on annual training from Fort Lewis, Wash.

After most of the plans were complete, ground was broken July 6, leveling the old Porter Range to make way for the new. Charlie Rock soldiers built the new firing positions, laid a gravel firing line, remodeled the range structures and upgraded the targets from battery-operated to 220-volt systems. Five-hundred pound concrete coffins replaced the sandbags as target system protection from direct fire.

Other upgrades include a remote-controlled target operating system in the range tower, which allows the controller to move around the tower and observe the entire firing line while continuing to operate the targets.

The targets now pop up at a person's height, rather than from ground level, as they had in the past, giving the shooter a more realistic target to engage.

Finally, the range can now be used to fire .22-caliber, .38-caliber and .45-caliber handguns, in addition to the 9mm pistol, formerly the only weapon allowed on the range.

Both Sump and Upshaw emphasized the team effort behind the project. They were quick to point out that while their company had provided the bulk of the effort, the job would never have been completed without the help of other organizations and individuals.

Upshaw said Lewis E. Warner and his employees at Range Maintenance located the concrete coffins. The Transportation Division supplied the gravel for the roads and grounds, in addition to the trucks and forklifts used in the renovation.

Mark S. Putz, target systems technician foreman, and his crew at Target Systems Branch, Range Division, converted the targets and operating systems from battery-operated to 220-volt. Marvin A. Jackson and Alastare J. Smith of Range Control helped in personnel and asset management during the project and Johnny C. Markham, chief of Operations Branch, Range Division, handled range scheduling conflicts, rescheduling units to use other ranges throughout the renovation.

Upshaw estimated that close to 5,000 hours of work were invested in the project, with his own 4th Platoon, Charlie Rock, investing the most time.

"Most people might come out here, look around and wonder what the big deal is," Upshaw said. "But if they had been here to see the sweat and time spent to make this range happen, then they would understand."

James Bolles, one of the civilian contractors who worked on the renovation project, is among the first on the firing line when the range is reopened.

Sec of Army talks about future

TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — During a recent visit to Training and Doctrine Command, Secretary of the Army Togo D. West Jr., said the command's training mission is going to assume increasing importance in the future.

"In this period of smart weapons and precision-guided munitions, the individual soldier is America's smartest weapon. TRADOC is the command that makes them smart," West said.

He said with fewer soldiers in the ranks because of downsizing, the biggest thing that continues to affect TRADOC is the need for soldiers every month, every year.

"To get them to the point that they become the quality soldiers to win wars, we've got to train them and train them well and carefully. That will always be the driving force behind TRADOC, along with its doctrine role."

Touching on budget cuts and the challenge of doing more with less, West said all the services are going to have to move toward more joint operations. He lauded TRADOC and the Army for being well ahead of the other services in this area.

"We already train not only ourselves, but many MOS (military occupational specialties) of the Marine Corps. We now provide not only our own logistics tail when we go into a theater, but a good part of the tail for the Air Force. We have a number of missions in which we are not redundant to anyone, but are complementary or are supporting more than one service."

The biggest and most exciting thing within TRADOC and something that will help TRADOC grow as a force within the Army and Department of Defense are the battle labs, West said. Battle labs were established in May 1992 to experiment with advances in battle command, combat service support, early entry lethality and survivability, battlespace and depth and simultaneous attack.

West said he is amazed at how far ahead the Army is in that area. "What we are doing in our battle labs is going to continue to be so important as we push the Army into the 21st Century and structure our 21st Century force," noted West.

Soldier translators aid Haitian refugees

By Patrick Swan
Army News Service

GUANTANAMO BAY, Cuba — Theirs may be the most dangerous of all jobs here dealing with Haitian refugees. When an angry mob gets restless, they rush into the fray to quell the disturbance — all without benefit of protective riot gear or weapons.

These "angels in combat boots" are the soldier translators whom military police contend they couldn't keep the peace without.

"We use the linguists to explain what is going on," said Pfc. Gerald Adcock, 411th Military Police Company, Fort Hood, Texas.

"One time we thought the Haitians were getting rowdy. In reality, the refugees were demonstrating a Haitian ritual we weren't aware of. The linguists solved the problem real quick so there wouldn't be any misunderstanding."

Or, as Spc. Yvette Richardson, also of the 411th MP Company, said, "The Haitians expect us to know Creole, but we don't. So they get impatient. That's where the translators come in."

"A translator's job is a combination of diplomat, priest, psychiatrist and all-around good guy."

— Sgt. 1st Class Gerard Laurent
Translator

Who are the translators? They are soldiers like Sgt. 1st Class Gerard Laurent, a 17-year veteran. Born in Haiti, he emigrated to the United States at age 8. Trained in aviation repair, he now helps younger soldiers train better — when he's not called to duty here for his linguistic skills.

"It is a difficult job," said Laurent, a Fort Eustis, Va., soldier from the 1st Staff and Faculty. "Sometimes the Haitians listen to you; sometimes they don't."

Ironically, while many might say their worst experiences deal with riot control, Laurent said those are his best.

"It is a special skill," he said. "I try to calm them down by building trust and rapport. Meanwhile, I'm often dodging rocks and thrown tent poles."

Laurent said his most uneasy experience came in 1992, when he was a translator in a camp populated by many Haitians with HIV.

"A translator's job is a combination of diplomat, priest, psychiatrist and all-around good guy," Laurent said. The worst job for a linguist, he said, is sitting around not doing anything.

"I want to be out there as part of the action," Laurent said. "My job is to educate the Haitians so they can better take care of themselves. I try to let them know that if they do go to the United States, they have to behave. I get most ticked off from those few who don't want to learn or improve themselves."

One of his soldier partners in translating (Marine linguists abound also) is Staff Sgt. Joseph Pierre-Louis, from the 21st Combat Support Hospital, 13th COSCOM, also of Fort Hood. Pierre-Louis spent 16 years in Haiti before arriving in the United States.

He joined the Army eight years ago and is a laundry and bath specialist. However, today, like Laurent, he acts as translator between the Army and the Haitians.

"The job can be stressful," Pierre-Louis said. "I find it hard when I try to help people who are unappreciative, who think I am the enemy even though I speak their language. Everyone wants to get you involved in a political discussion. The MPs, on the other hand, are very open to suggestions on handling things.

"I was briefed not to worry about diplomacy," Pierre-Louis said. "Just tell them the truth and don't hide anything from them."

world war II

50 years ago this week ...

• The brave resistance of the Patriot Forces in Warsaw came to an end as they were forced to surrender to the Germans. After 63 days of fighting more than 200,000 resistance fighters had been killed. Much of the central part of Warsaw was destroyed, and much more would be razed to the ground at Hitler's order. The Soviet Army had been in the suburbs for weeks and reportedly encouraged the uprising but then refused to aid it.

• In China, the U.S. 14th Army Air Force destroyed its base at Tanchuk, southeastern Kwangsi Province, before the advancing Japanese occupied it.

• American troops continued a slow advance through the Siegfried Line inside Germany. The Siegried Line, also known as the West Wall, was a line of defensive fortifications constructed along Germany's 1939 Western Border. Extending 35 miles deep in some areas, it consisted of mine fields, tank traps, pillboxes and fortresses.

• Russian troops entered Yugoslavia at two new points, outflanking Belgrade 38 miles to the north and at a point within 27 miles of the last railroad escape for the Germans.

• Winston S. Churchill, prime minister of Great Britain, told the House of Commons that several months of fighting in 1945 will be needed to defeat the Germans.

• The St. Louis Browns defeated the New York Yankees, 5-2, to win the American League Pennant on the last day of the season.

• At Fort Benning, the Infantry School played host to two groups of officers from the Cuban Army and Cuban Air Corps and a military mission representing the French Army.

1st Bn 18th Infantry Regt supports Florida exercise

1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment

Company A, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment recently deployed to Jacksonville, Fla., on Operation Dragon Team '94 in support of the 18th Airborne Corps' yearly Market Square exercise.

The company's primary mission was to upload the 101st Airborne (Air Assault) Division onto waiting ships, which then deployed to take part in various portions of the exercise.

The company also found time to conduct much of its yearly required common task training as well as specific training for Expert Infantry Badge testing in October.

The Dragon Team '94 was headed by Jim Newman of the Fort Benning Transportation Office. He coordinated Company A's efforts with the 1181st Transportation Company, a Reserve unit, as well as numerous civilian agencies. Preparation at Fort Benning began early in August with Sgt. Danny Mathis's effort to license every soldier in the unit on anything they might be required to drive during the deployment.

After accomplishing this, the company deployed to Jacksonville Aug. 10 and immediately began planning and setting up staging and fueling areas for the 101st vehicles and rotary wing aircraft.

The company split into two sections; one, led by 1st Lt. Jose Bracero and Sgt. 1st Class John Johnson, worked from 7 am. to 6:30 p.m. and the other, led by 2nd Lt. Marcus White and Sgt. 1st Class Dennis Criner, worked from 6 p.m. to 7 a.m. The company maintained continuous, 24-hour-a-day operations for the next 6 days.

The 101st vehicles and aircraft, over 900 strong, arrived at the Port of Jacksonville by train, were downloaded and staged, then were loaded onto the U.S. Naval Ship Anterres for shipment. All this was accomplished with no accidents or injuries.

The company fulfilled its bi-yearly CST training requirements with 96 percent of the company present for training. The soldiers also received EIB training, focusing on a medium anti-tank weapon, Dragon, Claymore and First Aid stations.

A large emphasis was placed on providing off-duty personnel with physical training and recreational activities. Due to the long hours worked this mostly consisted of utilizing the hotel's weight room and recreational facilities.

The company's soldiers exceeded the standard time for loading the ship and increased their knowledge of rail and sea deployment operations.

The training the company received directly applies to its mission as a part of the Rapid Deployment Force of the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized).

Colonels to see 1995 SERB

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Selective Early Retirement Boards will continue to be part of the the Army's plan to maintain readiness, yet meet officer strength reductions in fiscal 1995, according to Army personnel officials.

Current planning calls for the reduction of 156 Army competitive category colonels and 328 lieutenant colonels in fiscal 1995. If those numbers are not achieved through voluntary separations, the SERB will identify which officers will be involuntarily retired.

Eligible for SERB are colonels who have dates of rank from Nov. 2, 1991 to Oct. 17, 1992; served on active duty in-grade for at least two years; do not have approved voluntary retirements; do not have a mandatory retirement date in fiscal 1995 or 1996; and have not been previously considered for a colonel SERB.

Also eligible for SERB are lieutenant colonels who have a date of rank of Sept. 1, 1992 and earlier; are not on a colonel promotion list; do not have an approved voluntary or mandatory retirement date in fiscal 1995 or 1996 and have at least 19 years active federal service as of Sept. 29, 1994.

Officials said the Secretary of the Army is expected to act on SERB recommendations by Dec. 31. Officers selectively retired or retirement-eligible may request a retirement date on any date up to the mandatory retirement date specified by law, currently projected to be July 1.

Officers within the SERB zone of consideration who prefer voluntary retirements should submit their applications as soon as possible

Army policy encourages voluntary retirements; therefore, officers within the SERB zone of consideration who prefer voluntary retirements should submit their applications as soon as possible to: Commander: PERSCOM; TAPC-PDT-PM. Applications must be received by Oct. 11, and must have an effective date not later than Aug. 31, 1995.

Colonels and lieutenant colonels must complete at least three years in-grade to retire at that grade, unless they are approved for selective early retirement. Request for exception to policy for SERB consideration must fall into one of the following categories:

Category 1

Officers assigned to critical or sensitive national or international positions, under the supervision of a general officer or senior executive service-equivalent. The positions must require substantial training or other preassignment preparation and be considered necessary in the interest of national defense.

Category 2

Medal of Honor or Distinguished Service Cross recipients, and those who were held in captivity as a result of hostile action directed against the United States or its allies.

Category 3

Officers with personal skills that are unique and not readily available elsewhere in the Army, and in the judgement of PERSCOM commander, are irreplaceable during fiscal 1995.

Category 4

Officers with current or future personal or family hardships or situations that require humanitarian action that can be substantially alleviated by establishing a retirement date after Aug. 31, 1995.

Officials expect that the fiscal 1994 colonel promotion board results will be released in December. Officers who are selected for promotion may withdraw their retirement applications.

ask the judge

Staff Judge Advocate's Office

The Department of the Army established the Qualitative Management Program as a way of improving the enlisted career force.

This program requires noncommissioned officers to demonstrate their professional ability by their performance of duty and standards of conduct.

The bars to reenlistment imposed under the program are not intended to be rehabilitative in nature, but rather are designed to deny reenlistment to soldiers who fail to meet Army standards.

After a comprehensive review of a soldier's official military personnel file, the selection board determines whether a bar to reenlistment should be imposed.

A Qualitative Management Program bar can be appealed on the basis of improved performance, material error, or both. Most appeals are based on improved performance.

When material error is the basis of the appeal, the soldier must show that there is a "reasonable chance that had the error not existed, the soldier may not have been selected for the program."

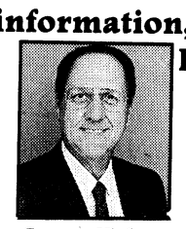
Some examples of conditions qualifying as material error are:

- adverse enlisted evaluation reports (or academic evaluation reports) subsequently declared invalid in whole or in part
- the adverse document considered by the board belonged to another soldier
- an Article 15 that was designated for filing in the military personnel records jacket only was erroneously filed in the performance fiche of the official military personnel file instead
- an academic transcript of 30 college semester hours or more existed that was not recorded on the performance microfiche or the qualification record (Department of the Army Form, 2A and DA Form 2-1).

Army Regulation 601-380, paragraph 10-8, contains a more complete listing of conditions qualifying as material errors.

If a soldier believes his or her battalion commander will favorably endorse the appeal, the soldier should ask the commander (lieutenant colonel or above) to initiate the appeal.

The commander can initiate the appeal to the bar if he or she believes the soldier's current manner of performance and potential for future service warrants retention. In making this determination, the commander evaluates the current manner of performance and potential for future service.



The success of the appeal depends greatly on the amount of documentation that the soldier can provide that demonstrates his or her improved performance or a material error in the personnel file.

The soldier should ask as many people as possible who have knowledge of his or her duty potential to write supporting statements.

The chain of command can assist in drafting, reviewing and typing the appeal. If the soldier's chain of command is not initiating an appeal on the soldier's behalf, the soldier's appeal should be forwarded through his or her chain of command no later than 45 days after notification.

A Legal Assistance attorney can review the final draft of the appeal and make recommendations to ensure the appeal meets the legal requirements contained in AR 601-280.

If you wish to speak with a Legal Assistance attorney, call the Legal Assistance Division at 545-3281 for an appointment.

Giving time to Saturday schooling

By Jerrie Macintire

Volunteers from the Fort Benning community are giving up their Saturday mornings for youngsters who are striving to develop stronger academic skills and increase test scores.

As part of a free tutoring program based at Eastway School on Buena Vista Road in Columbus, candidates in the Infantry Officer Basic Course are joining other volunteers who serve as tutors each Saturday from 10 a.m. to noon.

The program, coordinated by the Combined Communities of Southeast Columbus, emphasizes math, science and reading skills as well as other areas children may request help with, according to Lonnie Jackson of the CCSC.

Students from Columbus and Fort Benning schools participate in the program, said Jackson.

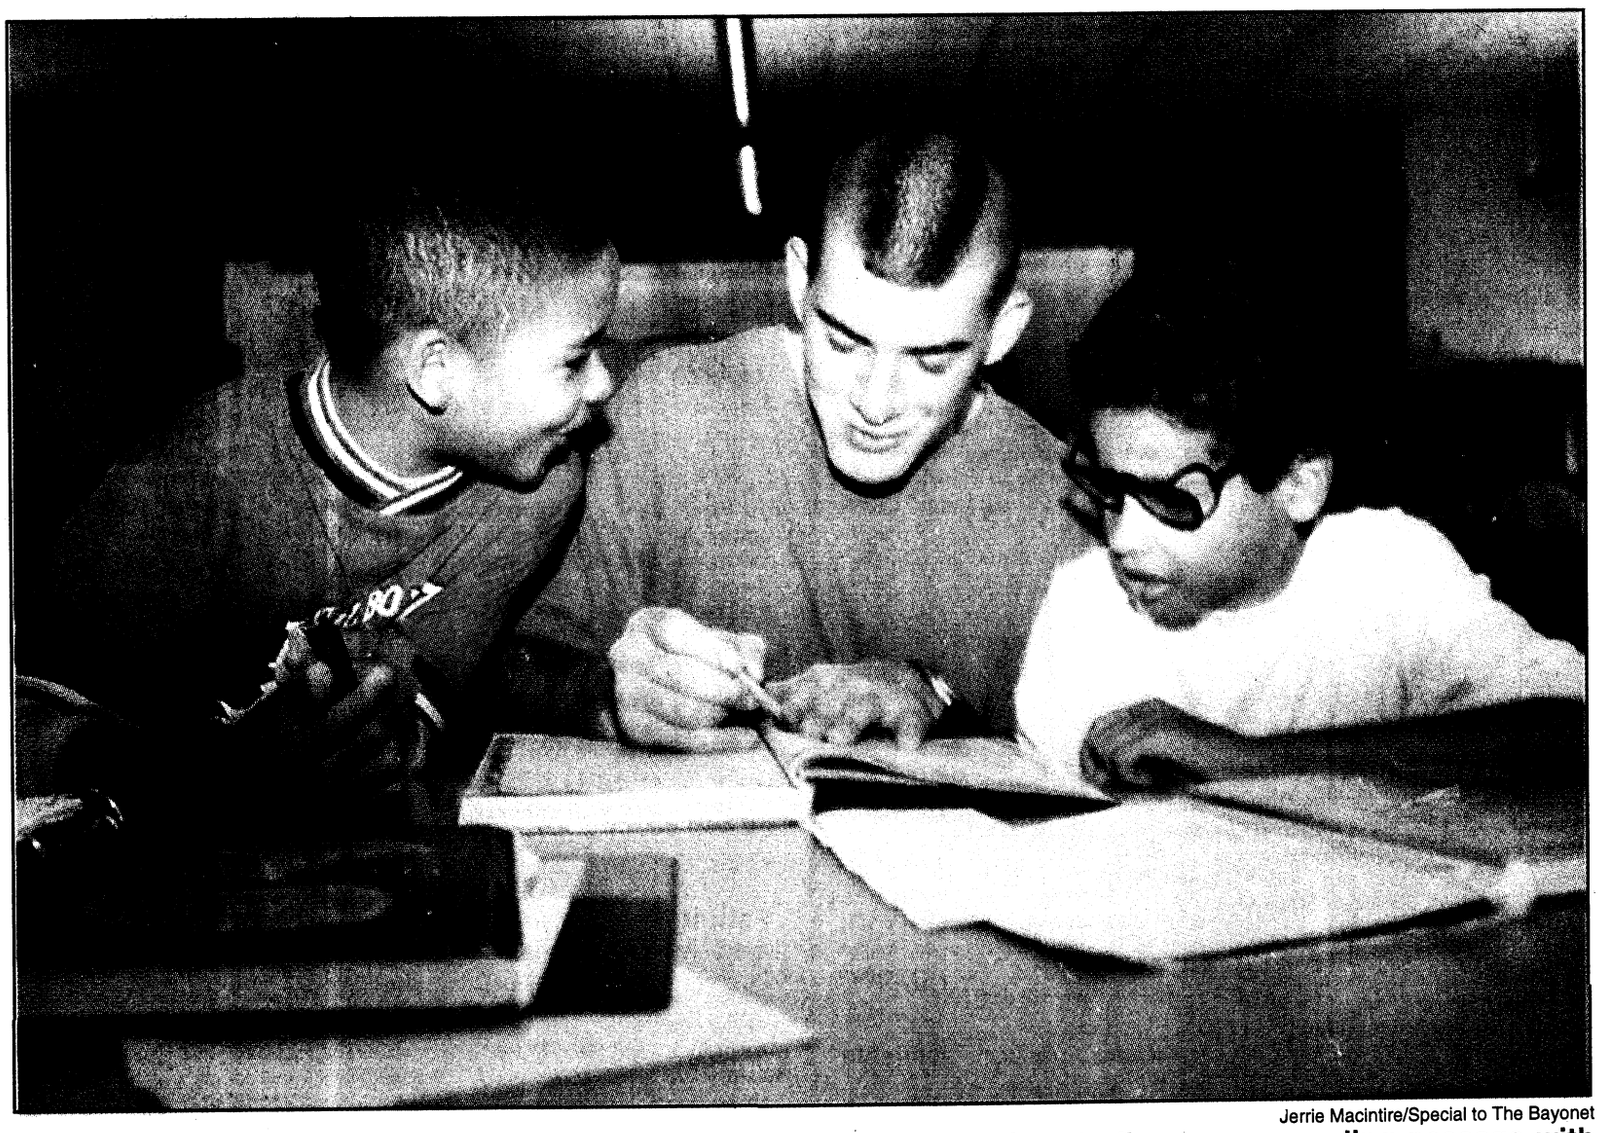
About 30 IOBC candidates currently volunteer to tutor youngsters individually as part of a company project. Pete Vutera, a second lieutenant who initially began tutoring a youngster in order to support his company's involvement with the CCSC program, now finds a great deal of personal satisfaction from the arrangement, he said.

Vutera, a member of Company B, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, said he enjoys the personal fulfillment he gets from watching students sharpen academic skills.

He is also gratified by the appreciation students seem to feel toward volunteers who help them, he said.

"These kids are the greatest," said Vutera.

"Once I met these kids, I really wanted to work with them," he said.



Vutera joins other concerned volunteers from the Columbus area who give time and effort to help students keep pace in their classrooms by working one-on-one in various academic areas.

A variety of books, many donated by Muscogee County, as well as math manipulatives and hands-on learning aids are available for student use each Saturday.

Students or parents target which materials are necessary to improve academic performance.

One 11-year-old youngster, who attends the program to boost reading speed and comprehension, expressed gratitude that his military mentor has helped make literature fun.

"Instead of reading long books, we do poems," he said. The boy enjoys poetry, and since his military tutor found the key to help stimulate an interest in reading, the boy has been steadily improving according to Daisy Honor, tutorial session principal and retired teacher.

The program, which targets students in grades 1 through 8, has been evolving for 13 years and grew out of a popular summer tutoring session designed to enhance reading and math skills, Jackson said.

Although the short-term program goals are to sharpen academic skills, officials believe long-term benefits include curbing the dropout rate as more students keep pace with their classes, Honor said.

Over the years, more than 7,000 students have benefited from this volunteer tutorial program and, in all cases, students have improved their academic skills, according to test scores and parent accounts, Honor said.

"This program really works. This is an avenue students can turn to to get help," she said.

"We are so happy to have the Army with us. The need is so great," Honor said.

"I would like to personally thank Fort Benning for the help with this program as well as help with our other (CCSC) programs," said Jackson, a Presidential Volunteer Award recipient and a 24-year Army veteran.

Middle schoolers 'join the club' in running

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

Twice each week, the grounds of Faith Middle School are transformed into a training camp of sorts, attracting individuals of various ages who share a common interest in running.

The Faith School Jogging Club, an intramural organization which currently draws about 40 middle schoolers from Faith as well as from other schools, meets Monday and Thursday afternoons from 3:15 to 4 p.m.

According to club sponsor Susan Emerson, physical education teacher, runners are developing endurance, strengthening sprinting proficiency and working toward faster times while getting plenty of aerobic and stretching exercise in the 45 minute workouts.

"We are also spending some time building up for the Faith Holiday race Dec. 3," said Emerson.

Though short-term goals include the annual Faith race, Emerson's long-range purpose is to peak interest and fortify physical skills, so when students reach high school they will be prepared to try out for the track and cross country teams if they are interested, she said.

An experienced runner who also enjoys triathlons — races with running, bicycling and swimming segments — Emerson organized the intramural club in 1979 to promote physical fitness in a fun way.

Her philosophy seems to be working, according to seventh-grader Toby Hill, who runs simply "because it's fun," but finds feeling energized afterward is an added benefit, he said.

Jerrie Macintire/Special to The Bayonet

Middle-school students, members of the Faith Jogging Club, practice in preparation for the Faith Race in December.

Marla McQueen, eighth-grader, said she was inspired by her father to join the club three years ago after she began observing how much he enjoyed the sport. She now looks forward to continuing to improve her times and hopes to earn a college scholarship in the future, she said.

Hopes for a running scholarship are also part of Anton Sumter's long-range goals, but a short-term goal includes continuing to outpace his younger siblings who, according to the sixth-grader, are pretty fast.

His six-year-old sister can run a mile in 8 minutes and 24 seconds. "My dad says one day she's going to catch up to us," he said with a smile.

Sumter was nine years old when he first joined the club through the recommendations of Fort Benning neighbors.

Unlike Sumter, this is Raul Cruz's first year in the club. Cruz, an eighth-grader who ran on a cross-country team in Puerto Rico, works toward personal best times while having fun. His current challenge is to run two miles in 15 minutes.

For Melissa Reyes, running is personally fulfilling and gives her a sport to share with her father, she said.

The seventh-grader was about five years old when she began accompanying her father on short runs down a beach.

The three-year veteran of the jogging club now runs more than a short beach jog while regularly participating in a variety of races in Columbus and the surrounding areas.

Reyes, who recently participated in a 5K (3.1-mile) race in Buena Vista, helps Emerson with log check-in and with recording times of club members.

Emerson strives to keep the intramural sport fun for participants, and dispenses prizes such as "Run for Your Life" patches.

Also, club participants can earn a Faith Jogging Club T-shirt by running one mile in 15 minutes or less.

Although the club is currently preparing for the Faith Race, Emerson also helps students prepare for other competitions. She said a 5K race was ideal for middle school students; she doesn't encourage longer runs for this age group.

As she continues helping students build the groundwork for a lifetime of physical fitness and enjoyment, Emerson is leading by example. The long distance running enthusiast, who has participated in both the Boston and New York City marathons (26 miles), is demonstrating that running can be a lifelong sport.

Contestants wheel in for car show

By Lois J. Olson
Special to the Bayonet

The Noncommissioned Officers Association hosted Fort Benning's second annual Custom Car Show Saturday.

Fifty-seven contestants presented their vehicles on Stewart Field. Trophies were given to the top three cars in 26 categories, ranging from muscle cars to early pickups.

According to 1st Sgt. James Prince, the event coordinator, a muscle car is one that comes off the production line with sporty trim or a higher-performance engine. Each category was judged in two classes: modified and restored.

"A modified car," said Prince, "is defined as having customized parts not part of the original vehicle, such as new mag wheels or a special steering wheel. A restored vehicle is defined as having all original factory parts like a car displayed on a showroom floor."

Contestants represented the Twin City, Boll Weevil, and Road Rebels car clubs. There were also independent participants.

Members of Company E, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment, made up the judging panel, ran the hot dog stand and played the '50s, '60s and '70s-style music, which lent to the lighthearted atmosphere.

Lois J. Olson/Special to The Bayonet

Some contestants took home one-of-a-kind awards. Leon Simms won the award for the longest distance traveled to the show. He drove his '66 Plymouth 120 miles from Alexander, Ala., for the competition.

The awards for the best paint job and the best interior went to Scott Simmons for his '55 Chevy 210.

Joey Prince took home the "People's Choice Award" for his '67 Chevelle.

The "Hard Luck Award" went to Bill Clark, who broke a leaf spring on his '57 Chevy on the way to the show.

"The leaf spring is part of the rear suspension of the car," Prince said. "It works with the shocks to absorb the bumps of the road, making the ride more comfortable."

Last year, 106 cars competed in Fort Benning's first annual Custom Car Show. According to Prince, the threat of rain and the Manchester Car Show conducted the same day were factors in the lower contestant turnout this year.

Voter registration deadlines approaching

Federal Voting Assistance Program

Various state deadlines for registering to vote in the Nov. 8 general election are approaching, and voters may want to make sure they are registered.

Electronic transmission (or faxing) of federal post card voting applications can be an effective method of making sure requests for registration are received in a timely manner, according to voting officials.

This alternative can be effective, since most states require receipt of registration requests from unregistered voters at least 30 days before the November elections.

"In 1992, electronic transmission was a real 'vote save' for many citizens, particularly those registering from overseas, where mail transit becomes an issue," said Phyllis Taylor, Federal Voting Assistance Program director.

According to the U.S. Postal Service, a reasonable benchmark worldwide for one-way transit time for international mail is 10 to 17 days and 20 to 34 days round trip, if the addressee responds on the day he or she receives the mailing.

The Postal Service has not established a service standard for international mail.

World Communion

'Celebrate unity with body of Christ'

By Gil Richardson
USAIC Chaplains' Office

reflections

"And He (Jesus) took bread, gave thanks and broke it and gave it to them saying, 'This is my body which is given for you; do this in remembrance of me.' Likewise He took also the cup after supper saying, 'This cup is the new covenant of my blood, which is shed for you.' " (Luke 22:19-20, NKJV)

In a simple act at his last meal with his disciples, Jesus instituted a practice which is an important worship event in the lives of Christians. This practice is called the Eucharist, communion, the Lord's Supper or the Last Supper.

To some churches, this event of reenacting Jesus's words and actions with bread and wine or grape juice (unfermented wine in some churches) is a sacrament.

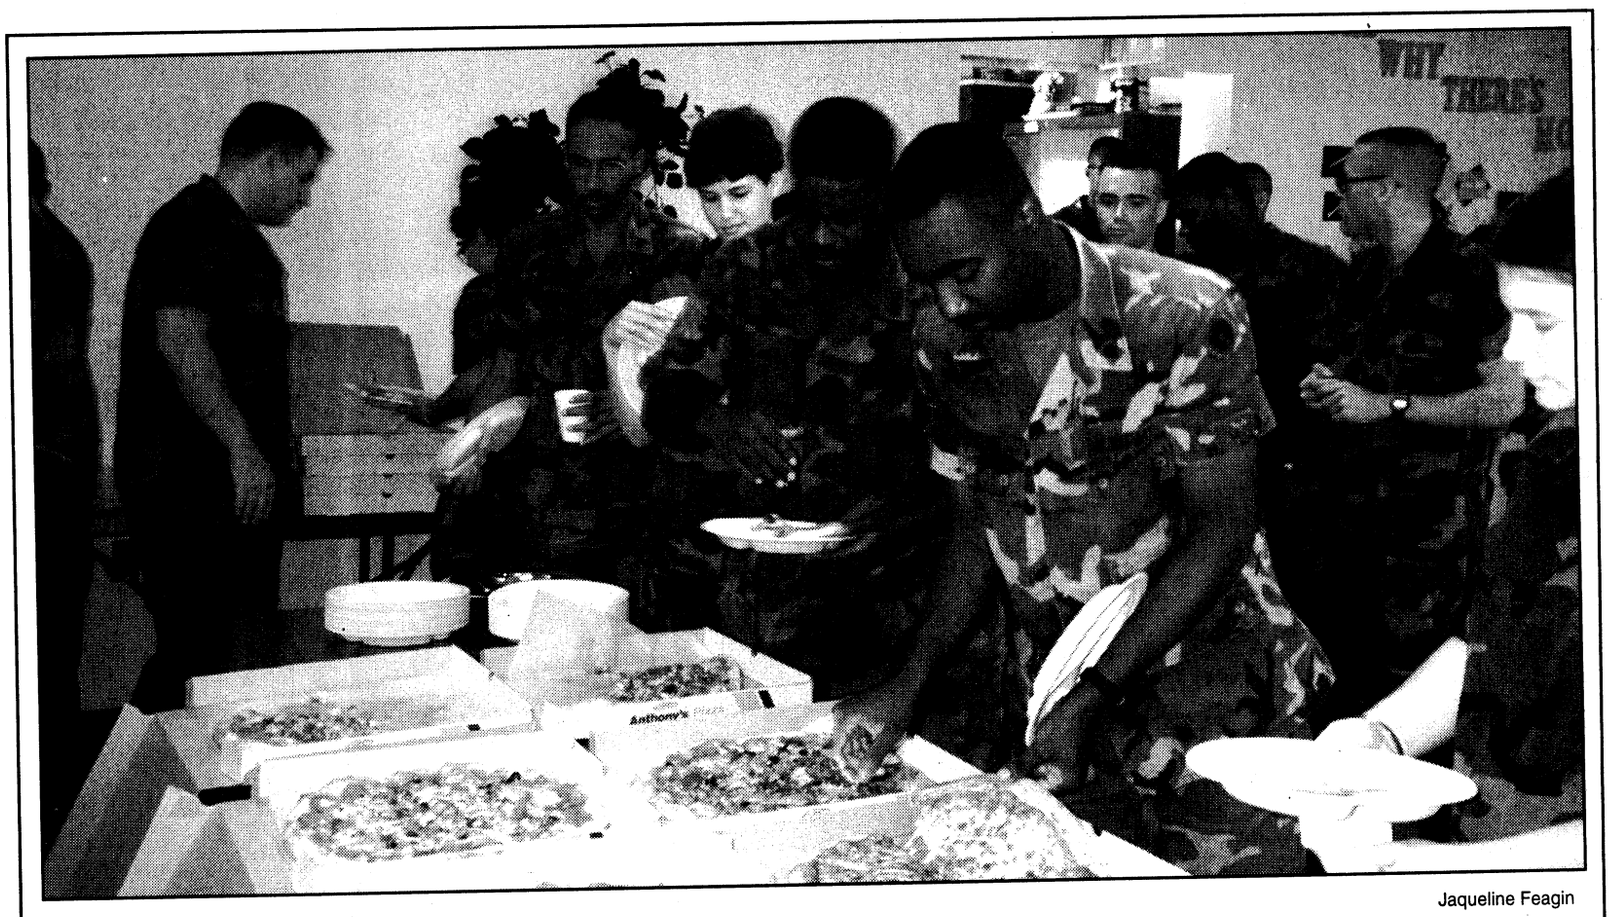
To others it is a rite or ordinance. In some churches (such as; Roman Catholic, Orthodox, Episcopalian), it is usually celebrated weekly. In other, mostly Protestant, churches it is commonly celebrated monthly, and some still observe it quarterly.

Some churches, such as Roman Catholic and Episcopalian, affirm that with the words of institution by the priest and through the power of the Holy Spirit and God's mysterious ways, the bread becomes the body of Christ and the wine becomes the blood of Christ, even though it looks and tastes like bread and wine. Ingesting Christ is vital to the life of the believer.

Lutheran churches teach, in the words of Martin Luther, that the "bread is bread and the wine is wine," but the Christ is "in, under, around and with" the elements so that the "presence of Christ is (mysteriously) real in the Eucharist."

Reformed or Calvinist churches affirm that in communion, there is a real presence of Christ through the Holy Spirit, but, as the Lutherans say, "the bread is bread and the wine is wine." John Calvin in his "Institutes of the Christian Religion" explained that "through the power of the Holy Spirit, we are lifted into the presence of Christ." This beautiful statement wreaks havoc on candidates for the ministry who have to explain what that statement means in a discussion question during ordination exams.

Many other churches affirm that communion is a purely memorial act. The activity of remembering the Lord's Supper causes believers to reverently reflect on the suffering and death of Jesus Christ.



Some churches focus on the suffering and death of Christ as an atonement or sacrifice for our sins. Others look to this meaning as well as to the imagery of Communion as a preview of the heavenly banquet (the fellowship with Christ) which all Christians will share in eternity.

With all these differences in the meaning of communion, it is not difficult to see why there are so many denominations. In spite of centuries of differences, we can still find a few similarities. Each church still uses bread and wine or grape juice.

Almost every church holds the communion act in such reverence that only ordained clergy can preside, consecrate, or celebrate the Eucharist. Most importantly, however, all churches focus on the great love of the Christ, who, in fulfillment of scripture, died for our sins on a cross.

For over thirty years, World Communion Sunday, the first Sunday in October, has been a day when virtually all churches, no matter which denomination, which theological interpretation or which frequency (weekly, monthly, quarterly), may celebrate communion the same day and affirm the one lord, Jesus Christ.

Within the great body of Christ, we celebrate our unity (with diversity) in Christ. This Sunday, rejoice with Christians worldwide when you participate in communion and affirm that Jesus is Lord.

These videos will try to promote discussion at home relating to the different subjects viewed. The Family Life center will be available to anyone needing further help with any of the subjects addressed.

The UMT plans to air a different video each Saturday morning. For more information, call Chaplain (Maj.) Robert Thompson at 545-1760 or check The Bayonet's TV section for further details.

Vince Gill to preside over CMA awards

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

He has five nominations, but however the competition turns out, a yearly ceremony is destined to yield another big night for Vince Gill.

What: Country Music Association Awards
When: Wednesday on CBS

SPOTLIGHT

The recipient of multiple accolades at last year's Country Music Association Awards, including the Entertainer of the Year honor (for which he's in the running again) as well as Album of the Year and Song of the Year, the popular singer-composer-guitarist will serve as sole host as CBS televises the 28th annual edition of that event Wednesday from — appropriately enough — Nashville's Grand Ole Opry House. While Gill is tied with Alan Jackson as the most-nominated individual among male performers, Reba McEntire leads the whole field with six CMA bids, the most ever for a female artist in a single year. Among those scheduled to render tunes during the show are Clint Black, Mary-Chapin Carpenter and Lyle Lovett, the latter teaming up with the group Asleep at the Wheel. A highlight of the three-hour broadcast, for fans and fellow stars alike, will be the induction of genre veteran Merle Haggard into the Country Music Hall of Fame.

Vince Gill

Though Gill has been an award-show co-host before, Wednesday's program will mark the first time he's flown solo, but the soft-spoken celebrity doesn't foresee a big difference. He recalls that in the past, "There were not a lot of hosting duties that were really done together. One person would come out, then the other one would, so it shouldn't feel foreign to me. There won't be anybody for me to hang out with, though, which will be a drag. During the show, it may get a little crazed, with everybody running around and trying to look good. I'm just thrilled that they think enough of me that they feel I can do it (alone), and I'll do it as best I can."

As used as he is to being a host, Gill also is quite familiar with the feeling of being a nominee ... as his current total of five Grammys, 11 Country Music Association honors, four Academy of Country Music citations and seven Music City News Awards attests. "I've gone (to award shows) ever since I've lived in Nashville, even when I wasn't nominated," he reflects. "It's fun and it's familiar, and the (Opry) building obviously is familiar to me, since I've played there on Saturday nights. There's really no reason to get too tense or too worked up about it." During the telecast, former Pure Prairie League member Gill plans to perform the title track from his latest album, "When Love Finds You."

One of Gill's biggest runs of success to date stemmed from his song "I Still Believe in You," inspired by his relationship with his wife Janis, one-half of country's Sweethearts of the Rodeo duo. Having won at least one award in virtually every major country-music competition during 1992 and 1993, that tune has been performed by Gill countless times. Still, he maintains, "I don't think there are songs that I grow tired of doing."

to kick off season Saturday

Columbus Symphony Orchestra

The Columbus Symphony will open its 1994-95 Masterpiece Season with a program Saturday at 8 p.m. at the Three Arts Theatre.

A free pre-concert discussion will be given by maestro George Del Gobbo at 7 p.m.

The concert will open with "A Short Ride in a Fast Machine," written by American composer Jon Adams, followed by Syzmanowski's "Violin Concerto No. 1."

The evening will culminate with the performance of Ravel's orchestration of Mussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition." This work describes, in music, ten of the paintings displayed at Russian painter Hartmann's exhibition in 1873.

Featured performer Chantal Juillet is recognized as one of Canada's most brilliant violinists. She came to the attention of American audiences after debuts in New York at the 92nd Y and in Washington, D.C., at the Kennedy Center.

Juillet performs regularly with Canadian symphonies, including the Montreal Symphony, the Toronto Symphony, and the Winnipeg Symphony among others. During the past two seasons, she has performed with the Boston Symphony, the New York Philharmonic, Concertgebouw Orchestral, the Orchestre National de Paris, the Philharmonic Orchestra of London and others.

Ticket prices for Saturday's program range from $11.50 to $17.50 for adults and $5 to $9 for students. Tickets are available at the CSO office located in the lower level of the Barnett Bank on First Avenue or at the Three Arts Theatre the day of performance. Special discounts are available for groups of 10 or more. Tickets may also be purchased over the phone at 323-5059.

The Saturday dress rehearsal from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at the Three Arts Theatre will be open to senior citizens for $3. Individuals who have a transportation problem or who need more information may call 323-5059.

This concert is sponsored by AFLAC, with additional funding provided by the Georgia Council for the Arts.

Take a weekend hiking adventure

Georgia State Parks

ATLANTA, Ga.— Experience the splendor of nature and the colors of fall in Georgia during the Back Country Weekend Adventures.

Offered by the Georgia State Parks and Historic Sites, the programs offer mountain adventures throughout October.

Back Country Weekend Adventures are offered at four parks in north Georgia, with each program designed to provide a safe and enjoyable experience for backpackers.

These two-day excursions are opportunities to get back to nature, meet new friends and explore the landscape.

Each trip begins at 10:30 a.m. Saturdays and ends at 3 p.m. Sundays. Hikers are accompanied by two experienced guides who lead participants safely along the trail at an easy-paced hike.

Guides also provide interpretation of natural and cultural features along the way, giving hikers a deeper appreciation of the trail's natural beauty.

The programs vary in length and degree of difficulty, making it possible for both the seasoned and the novice hiker to find a weekend trip perfect for their experience level.

The 1994 Back Country Weekend Adventure schedule is as follows:

Saturday and Sunday: Vogel State Park, Blairsville, Ga. Located in the Blue Ridge Mountains within the Chattahoochee National Forest, Vogel State Park is one of Georgia's oldest state parks. The 10-mile trail features exhibits of fall color in a mountain cove. Good physical conditioning before the trip is recommended, as hikers will cover approximately five miles each day.

Oct. 8 and 9: Cloudland Canyon State Park, Rising Fawn, Ga. Located on the western edge of Lookout Mountain, about 25 miles south of Chattanooga, Cloudland's terrain is characterized by deep canyons with steep vertical walls. This trip offers a hiking adventure through six miles of ridges and valleys in one of the most beautiful natural resources in the state.

Oct. 22 and 23: Fort Mountain State Park, Chatsworth, Ga. This 8.2-mile back-country trail encircles Fort Mountain State Park and traverses all types of mountain landscapes, including bridges, creeks, valleys and springs. Many views can be seen along the trail because of the dramatic change in topography. This trail is rated as mostly moderate, with some strenuous sections.

A $2 park pass fee per vehicle is charged for parking at the state parks; annual passes may be purchased for $25 at the sites or by calling the main parks office.

RIF employees land new jobs

By Shelby Carr
Bayonet staff writer

Fifty-one of Fort Benning's civilian employees began new jobs Monday, and none were separated involuntarily as a result of a recent reduction in force.

Letters were distributed in July notifying employees of the reduction of force and possible loss of jobs.

However, post civilian personnel officials managed to eliminate any loss of jobs by filling positions created by attrition and voluntary separation programs.

The low number of employees who received RIF letters was a direct result of 53 employees taking advantage of the voluntary early retirement and separation incentive programs, according to Gary Burkhalter, a personnel management specialist with the Directorate of Civilian Personnel.

"(Fort Benning) opened voluntary early retirement and voluntary separation incentive, making vacancies," Burkhalter said. "It left us with 51 employees who received letters."

Monday, those employees who received RIF letters were reassigned to other positions for which they were qualified, Burkhalter said. No employees were separated involuntarily, he said.

CFC gets started on post

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The annual Combined Federal Campaign kicked off Sept. 29 and will continue through Nov. 15 at Fort Benning.

The CFC combines fund-raising drives of many health and welfare charities into a single campaign.

"The honor is to give to an effort that helps so much," said Brig. Gen. John Maher, post deputy commanding general.

"(The CFC campaign is) a great thing, " said Bobby Gaylor, vice president and division general manager of United Cities Gas Company and United Way's 1994 general campaign chairman. "It again ties Fort Benning and Columbus together. This is the largest campaign we've ever attempted."

"I want to make sure everyone is contacted," Maher said. "Most Americans want to give, and we need to give people the opportunity to give."

Soldiers and Department of Defense civilians will be able to pledge their donations through designated people in their offices or units, said Marge Copland, CFC director.

A meeting was conducted Sept. 21 to brief project coordinators who represent their units or directorates during the CFC drive and give them

Mayoral candidates needed for housing areas

By Jennifer Chapman
Special to The Bayonet

Is there something about your housing area that you would like to change? Do you think you could make your community a better place to live if you were given the opportunity?

The Community Life Office has announced it is time for the annual election of housing area mayors.

There are a total of 12 elected positions opening up; six housing areas are in need of mayors and vice mayors.

Housing area mayors are the people responsible for seeing that Fort Benning housing is a nice place to live, according to Jennifer Morgan, Community Life officer.

The mayors are intermediaries between the people in the community and those people in charge whom residents may have trouble contacting. Mayors see that things run smoothly and the "citizens" of a specific area are aware of the issues facing them.

This position is a high-energy, satisfying way to see that your community is everything that it should be, Morgan said. People interested in running for the one-year term can pick up an application at their local Community Life Center before Oct. 17.

In order to qualify for this position, candidates must:

- Be willing to serve the community for the overall betterment of the community
- Reside in post family housing
- Authorize and pass a background clearance check in which neither the candidate nor any family member has a record of disqualifying offenses under the Uniform Code of Military Justice or the U. S. Criminal Code.

Elections will be by ballot in the Community Life Centers Oct. 26 and 27. Centers will be open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. to accommodate voters' schedules.

Morgan stresses this position is for those people willing to better their communities and themselves. Housing area mayors must also be willing and able to attend various meetings, she said.

For more information, contact a Community Life noncommissioned officer or Morgan at 545-5931 or 545-5246.

School of the Americas hosts 'Cena Tipica'

Event features traditional Latin American costumes, dancers, food from 12 countries

By Judith Ginder
School of the Americas

Dressed in costumes of their native land, dancers from more than a dozen Latin American countries highlighted the School of the Americas' Cena Tipica celebration Sept. 24 at the Officers' Club.

Cena Tipica translates generally into English as "traditional dinner." Latin American food was served to the more than 800 guests who attended the event.

Dancers of all ages performed to music unique to their country.

The SOA event began with an open house Sept. 23 with more than 1,000 local schoolchildren and other members of the community attending the event.

Booths from 18 countries filled the room displaying products typical of each country, such as crafts, artwork and costumes.

Also on hand were brochures, silver jewelry and crafts, videos about the countries, local currency, and in one booth a soldier in the full-dress uniform of his country.

The evening of Sept. 24 guests viewed the booths before the program began.

Once the music began, the native dancers arrived on stage, one country at a time. The music and dance varied from the traditional folksongs of Bolivia to the harvest dances of Ecuador.

After dinner, music played as guests danced into the night.

VARIOUS VOICES

What would you like to ask or tell the new commanding general?

1st Sgt. Douglas R. Hathaway, Headquarters Service Company, Infantry Training Brigade — "I'd say, 'You've got a good post, just trust the commanders to do the right thing,' because Fort Benning shows daily that we are the No. 1 post."

Sgt. Allen C. Straugh, Service Battery, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment — "I'd like to ask him to get rid of CQ (charge of quarters)."

John Cozart, retired Navy chief petty officer — "I'd like to tell him I very much appreciate the courteous service my family and I have received here at the hospital, the Post Exchange, the Commissary and all the other post activities."

Carol F. Smith, family member — "Soldiers should be paid more — especially lower ranking soldiers."

Pfc. Timothy Lewallen, Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Training Brigade — "I would ask when the budget for ITB is going to be established. It's been frozen, but now it's the new fiscal year."

Staff Sgt. Cornelius L. Richards, Company A, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment — "I'd like to ask what's his policy on Kelley Hill. I'd like to see the new commander do more for soldiers there."

commentary

Winter coats and Christmas ornaments are being advertised everywhere, and here in the sunny South, that can mean only one thing — we've still got some hot weather coming.

I've come to expect to see wool coats in the store windows while everyone around me is still in shorts, but there's a subtle psychological effect in this pressure to buy almost three months ahead of time — it makes me buggy.

Advertisers have apparently given up any pretense of tying their sales promotions into any real-world occurrence. In the land of ads, you can have end-of-summer clearance sales, back-to-school specials and holiday-season spectaculars all taking place at once.

I know I'm old-fashioned, but I think black cats, witches on broomsticks, jack-o-lanterns and ghosts provide enough "atmosphere" for October. They shouldn't have to compete with Santa Claus, and falling leaves should have their chance before fake snow takes hold.

My children are in heaven, of course. They can plan what they want to be for Halloween, and when they get tired of that, work on their Christmas lists. The drawings they bring home from school may be anything from bats to Pilgrims to snowmen.

I don't think it's a bad idea to start planning early for the holidays; I just don't want to be pressured into it.

Monday is a holiday — Columbus Day. A few weeks later, we have Halloween. Thanksgiving is nearly a month later, and Christmas a month after that. What's the hurry?

"To every thing there is a season," according to a best-selling book. Somehow we seem to have gotten away from that philosophy, and I think we suffer for it.

There's a commercial airing lately featuring a woman who has an "instant" life — phone in her purse, toast popping up out of her pocket, and so on. She talks a mile a minute and never stops for breath.

This woman is perfectly adapted to modern American life. She probably has a phone in her car, sends all her correspondence by fax, cooks all her meals by microwave and does her shopping by computer, with all her purchases express-mailed the next day.

I don't want to live like that. Efficiency is a wonderful thing, but in case you haven't noticed, being more efficient doesn't usually mean you have more time.

Not just the military, but many American companies have "down-sized" their work forces over the last few years. But companies have not lowered their production quotas to match — "more with less" has become the watchword of American business.

"To everything there is a season." "The laborer is worthy of his hire." "Many hands make light work." "Haste makes waste."

These old saws are seldom heard anymore. The modern motto, as quoted recently in Army Times, is, "We have done so much for so long with so little, we are qualified to do anything with nothing."

Some auto workers are rebelling against this overdrive work ethic. By all means, let's be efficient; certainly, let's cut waste. But don't ask us to work 60 hours a week, every week. Don't keep us from spending any time with our families, when we're working for their benefit.

I wish those auto workers luck, just as I hope local mill workers, who work seven days a week for months on end, get some time off before they drop.

For my part, I'm resisting the rush every chance I get. I don't own a fax machine or car phone. I don't care that there are only 87 shopping days until Christmas — I refuse to hang lights until well after the jack-o-lantern dies.

Be daring. Ignore the ads, shut your ears to carols in October, and tell your children you don't care what they want for Christmas — at least, not yet.

And I'll see you at the stores Dec. 23, which is when I plan to start my shopping. I always do my holiday shopping with my best friend, and that's her next day off.

dial 545-boss

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for soldiers, family members and civilians to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere. While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies established to provide assistance, the line offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders.

The Bayonet features some of the calls that may benefit other members of the Fort Benning community.

☎ Call: At King's Pond barbecue grills are rusted, picnic tables are torn up, bathrooms are in poor condition, and the grass is high.

I would like someone to do something about it.

Directorate of Public Works' response:

The 29th Infantry Regiment has been tasked with mowing the King's Pond area, so the grass at King's Pond will be cut on a regular basis. Natural Resources Management Branch volunteers will be directed to keep the area clean.

Outdoor Recreation was contacted regarding the grills and picnic tables.

The preliminary outdoor recreation plan for Fort Benning recommends five picnic areas with outdoor grills for the King's Pond Recreation Area; however, vandalism has been a persistent problem with both grills and picnic tables at King's Pond.

☎ Call: I have a question about the housing policy on Fort Benning.

I do not understand the lead and unleaded homes. I also do not understand why there are so many vacant homes on post for company and field grade officers.

Family Housing Branch's response:

Fort Benning's lead-based paint policy does not allow children 6 years and younger into older quarters that have been identified as having a high concentrate of lead-based paint.

All quarters that appear vacant and unassigned are either being assigned, are assigned and waiting movement of a soldier's household goods, or are on hold for maintenance.

Be safe this holiday weekend

Congratulations for the outstanding accident prevention effort for the Labor Day holiday.

The emphasis on seat belt use, sober-driving, vehicle inspections and safety briefings provided a safe holiday for all Fort Benning personnel.

Columbus Day, Monday, signals a special need to again alert all personnel to the ever present, real threat of traffic accidents.

Our most effective weapon against traffic accidents is our continual concern for the safety of every solder.

Pre-holiday orientations by commanders should stress these positive actions:

- Viewing vehicle operation as a hazardous activity
- Insisting that all occupants were seat belts
- Concentrating on alert and sober driving
- Traveling slower when weather or heavy traffic impairs driving
- Observing all traffic laws, including the posted speed limit
- Reviewing travel itinerary to avoid driver fatigue
- Yielding to the less proficient driver

Have an enjoyable, relaxing holiday and a safe return.

Hospital workers provide good care

The following events are noted to offer my personal appreciation for the fine employees here at Fort Benning, specifically Martin Army Community Hospital.

On July 19 at 11:45 a.m., I sustained an on-the-job injury, amputation of the first joint of the first and second finger on my right hand.

I arrived at Martin Army's Emergency Room at approximately noon. I was directed to Capt. Cassandra M. Kirkpatrick, who immediately took charge. From that moment on, I was treated with the best care a person could ask for.

Kirkpatrick took control of my situation in a most professional manner. Within 30 minutes, I had been examined by her and several members of her staff (privates first class, specialists, etc.)

I was then taken to the Orthopedic Department where Col. Francis K. Moll Jr. took over and examined me and ordered me to be prepped for surgery.

I was then taken to the Orthopedic Ward where Eula Hawkins and her staff took charge of my care. She was swift and most professional in getting me ready for surgery and also my stay in the hospital.

Moll and Dr. (Maj.) Kevin P. Murphy took over my care as though I had been his patient all along. He then turned me over to Maj. Rose Wright in Occupational Therapy. Wright and her staff are doing everything possible to get me as close to 100 percent.

I left Martin Army Community Hospital with the attitude that all personnel I came in contact with, civilian and military alike, had been the most professional and courteous I had dealt with in my 30 years of dealing with the government.

I wish to thank all the employees from Martin Army Community Hospital, but most of all the Emergency Room, Orthopedic Clinic, Orthopedic Ward and Occupational Therapy workers for all the care I have received and still receive from them.

Rangers remember comrades

Early-morning ceremony honors Somalia casualties

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

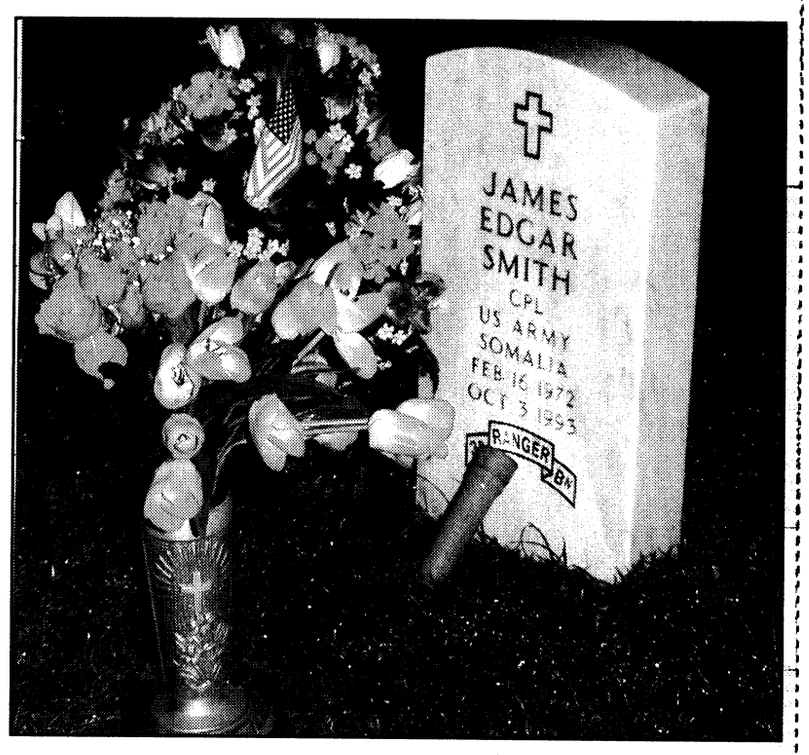
Six rangers who were killed in action near Mogadishu, Somalia, Oct. 3, 1993, were remembered Monday morning at the Main Post Cemetery, on the one-year anniversary of their deaths.

Upholding the part of the Ranger Creed that says, "... I will never leave a fallen comrade to fall into the hands of the enemy," the six rangers gave their lives while forming a defensive perimeter around the injured crew of a downed UH-60 Blackhawk helicopter in Somalia.

The six members of the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, killed in action near Mogadishu were Sgt. James C. Joyce, 24, of Denton, Texas; Cpl. James M. Cavaco, 26, of Forestdale, Mass; Sgt. Lorenzo M. Ruiz, 27, of El Paso, Texas; Cpl. James E. Smith, 21, of Long Valley, N.J.; Sgt. Dominick M. Pilla, 21, of Vineland, N.J.; and Spc. Richard W. Kowalewski Jr., 20, of Crucible, Pa.



Individual ceremonies for five of the rangers were also conducted at Arlington National Cemetery. The ceremony at the Fort Benning Cemetery focused on Smith since he is buried there.

Members of the 3rd Bn., 75th Ranger Regt., and Smith's family gathered near his grave for the ceremony.

Sgt. Scott A. Galentine, training noncommissioned officer for 3rd Bn., 75th Ranger Regt., was with Smith the day he was killed.

"Everytime we (the rangers) come out to the cemetery, it brings out more memories than we care to remember," Galentine said.

Smith's grave was saluted by each company in the 75th Ranger Regiment. Rangers were also given time to say their individual respects.

HOLA program matches students with sponsors

By Judith Ginder
School of the Americas

While traveling abroad, most people hope for two things — that they don't lose their passports and that they get a feel for the nation through the people they may meet.

Maybe a few friends will be made during the journey. At the very least, they hope to have the opportunity to learn more about the country, their people and some of their customs and traditions.

This is the concept behind the School of the Americas' Host of Latin Americans, or HOLA, program.

HOLA, which means "hello" in Spanish, is a nonprofit organization that places guest instructors and students at SOA with a sponsor.

Each year, about 1,600 Latin American guest instructors and students come to Fort Benning for military training. Many are here for a period of more than six months and bring their families with them. For most, this is their first and, maybe, only visit to the United States.

According to Cecilia Alexander, HOLA coordinator, this is why HOLA is so important. Sometimes the guest instructors and students have preconceived notions about the United States and by getting to know civilian sponsors, they can form a more accurate view of our country and citizens, she said.

Alexander said that sponsors do not have to speak Spanish, but that it is very helpful.

Once a sponsor is matched with an individual officer or an entire family, Alexander said that it is a good idea for the sponsor to learn as much as possible about the guests home country. She said by doing this, the sponsor shows the guest that they have a genuine interest in getting to know them.

After meeting one another, the host and guest can plan activities to do together.

Some activities HOLA recommends are picnics or barbecues, sporting events, school events or even shopping trips. Including your guests in community events throughout the year is another way to spend time together.

The biggest tip that HOLA gives its new sponsors is: Treat your guests the way you would want to be treated, or the way you would want your children to be treated, in a foreign land.

Although becoming a sponsor is voluntary, the rewards of sponsorship are vast, Alexander said. They come in the form of friendships and knowledge of another country and its customs. And, you don't have to worry about losing your passport.

For more information about becoming a sponsor, contact Alexander at 545-1285.

CFC: Fund drive kicks off

the "rules of engagement" for soliciting, said Maj. Chuck Walls, garrison executive officer and co-chairman of the Fort Benning CFC campaign.

Wall's "rules" consist of telling the people involved that they can solicit someone more than once only if that person has not already contributed. But, they are not allowed to harass anyone in any way.

The project coordinators are expected to select "key personnel" to help assist them in soliciting the people in their units and directorates, Copland said.

As the pamphlets are returned, the project coordinators are responsible for turning in the filled-out pamphlets to the CFC office, she said.

Copland said she is responsible for taking the pledge forms to the United Way office in Columbus and updating Walls about how the campaign is going.

Each CFC packet comes with a listing of more than 1,000 organizations to donate to and a CFC pledge form.

Some organizations included in the listing are: the National Black United Fund, AIDS Research Foundation, Marine Mammal Center, Coast Guard Foundation and the 5001 Fund.

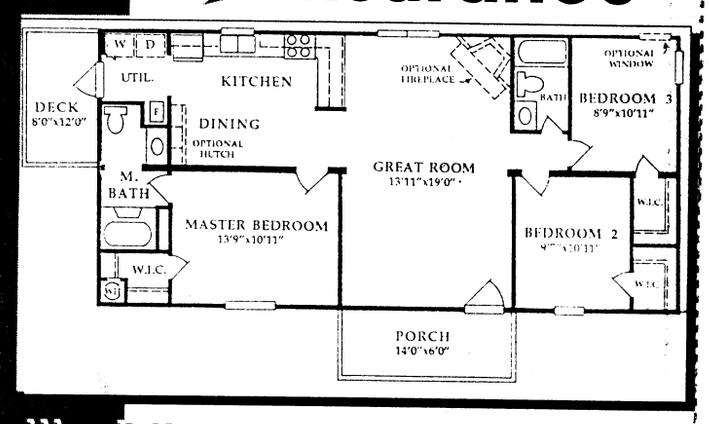
The 5001 fund is a fund that allows the Fort Benning community to give back to Fort Benning, said Roy Barnes, vice president of the Soldiers' Family Support Association.

"Any money donated to the 5001 fund comes back to Fort Benning (and is) used to support soldiers and family members," Barnes said.

The post's goal for the campaign, including the 5001 Fund, is $500,000, Copland said. "We expect to surpass that number," he said. Last year's total was $516,665.

Last year's fund was extended because many soldiers were in the field. The campaign may be extended again this year because of Operation Uphold Democracy, Copland said.

"When you have a major deployment, the chances (of extending the campaign) are really good," Walls said.



"Regardless of whatever (soldiers and civilians) contribute to, it really does help charitable organizations," Walls said.

Breast Cancer

Survival rates, number of cases both on increase

Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

With registered nurse's credentials and a master's degree in nursing, she was confident in her ability to educate and inform her patients as well as help them heal.

But when she became a breast cancer patient, she now says, she discovered how it felt to be uninformed and afraid in the face of a possibly deadly disease.

Pat Anderson, a colonel in the Army Reserve, was diagnosed with cancer in 1988. As she progressed from biopsy to surgery to recovery and reconstruction, she said, she met many people who treated her like a "tumor with legs."

"It was like I wasn't a person; I was just a cancer," she said. Anderson said cancer is still a "taboo" subject for many people, and people show their discomfort with the topic by not only avoiding the subject, but avoiding the people who have the disease as well.

Many researchers agree that despite increased funding for breast cancer research, many women remain unaware of the prevalence of the disease. And despite the fact that cure rates are higher with early detection, many women still do not perform self-exams or have mammograms.

"Women really need to be aware of how deadly it is," said Maj. Joann Hollandsworth, chief of Community Health Nursing.

"There has been a real increase in funding for breast cancer, but the disease is still alive and well," she said.

Experts agree a woman's best chance of surviving breast cancer depends on early diagnosis, and many researchers are concentrating on new ways to detect breast cancer.

"Mammography, clinical exams and breast self-exams are not fool-proof," Hollandsworth said, "but they're the best methods (of detection) we have right now."

Hollandsworth advised women on Fort Benning to contact their primary health-care providers if they have any questions about breast cancer testing.

Statistics compiled by the American Cancer Society show a 93 percent survival rate among women whose cancer was detected very early, while it was still localized. Later detection means decreased survival rates, down to 18 percent in cases where the cancer had spread, or metastasized, to distant locations in the body.

Although survival rates have increased, so have the number of cases. The incidence of breast cancer has increased about 25 percent each year since 1980. Early detection accounts for some, but not all, of the increase, and experts still are not sure what causes breast cancer, though they have identified some risk factors.

Identified risk factors include:

- Family history — the daughter or sister of a woman with breast cancer has a two- to three-times greater risk of developing cancer
- Age — more than 66 percent of women who develop breast cancer are older than 50 and more than 80 percent are older than 39
- Reproductive history — women at greater risk include those who began menstruating before age 11, never had a full-term pregnancy, were older than 30 at their first full-term pregnancy, or reached menopause after age 50
- Diet — a high-fat diet is suspected of being a risk factor for breast cancer.

Anderson said despite devoting her career to health care, she knew little of the available information on breast cancer until she herself was diagnosed.

Her own experiences throughout the course of her disease and treatment, she said, led her to a decision.

"Breast cancer was a career change for me," she said.

Anderson said she was just leaving active duty when she was diagnosed with the disease, and she went to Desert Storm as a Reservist after her surgery. On her return home, she became active in The American Cancer Society and started a book for breast cancer patients.

"It's a how-to guide for women with cancer," she said, "in which I tried to provide all the information I could so they could make informed decisions about their options."

The book, "Breast Cancer: A Patient Guide," is published by a company Anderson formed, Creative Health Services Inc.

The book focuses on each stage of breast cancer diagnosis and treatment. Topics addressed include:

- Emotions
- Breast cancer
- Breast surgery
- Personal appearance
- Breast reconstruction
- Chemotherapy
- Hormone therapy
- Radiation therapy
- Diet
- Research
- Follow-up

Each chapter includes a section called "questions to ask," which can help women gather information about their own cases from their doctors.

There are also two appendices to the book, listing medications commonly used and resources available for more information.

Anderson also produces a newsletter called Breast Cancer News: Information for Survivors. Her book is available through some local libraries.

Fort Benning Community Education

Preventive Medicine and Community Health Nursing will host community health outreach education classes on breast cancer at local housing areas. The classes will include demonstrations, with plastic models, of how to perform breast self-exams. Classes will be at:

Custer Terrace Chapel
Oct. 25, 6 to 7 p.m.

Indianhead Terrace & McDaniel Manor
Oct. 27, 6 to 7 p.m.

For more information, call the Health Screening Center at 545-1987 or Community Health Nursing at 545-4041.

Breast Self-Exam

1. Stand before a mirror. Inspect both breasts for anything unusual, such as any discharge from the nipples, puckering, dimpling or scaling of the skin.

The next two steps are designed to emphasize any change in the shape or contour of your breasts. As you do these steps, you should be able to feel your chest muscles tighten.

2. Press hands firmly on hips and bow slightly toward your mirror as you pull your shoulders and elbows forward.
3. Watching closely in the mirror, clasp hands behind your head and press hands forward.

Some women do the next part of the exam in the shower. Fingers glide over soapy skin, making it easy to concentrate on the texture underneath

4. Raise your left arm. Use three or four fingers of your right hand to explore your left breast firmly, carefully and thoroughly. Beginning at the outer edge, press the flat part of your fingers in small circles, moving the circles slowly around the breast. Gradually work toward the nipple. Be sure to cover the entire breast. Pay special attention to the area between the breast and the armpit, including the armpit itself. Feel for any unusual lump or mass under the skin.
5. Gently squeeze the nipple and look for a discharge. Repeat the exam on the other breast.
6. Repeat steps 4 and 5 lying down. Lie flat on your back, one arm over your head and a pillow or folded towel under that shoulder. This position flattens the breast and makes it easier to examine. Use the same circular motion described earlier. Repeat on the other side.

Early Detection

The American Cancer Society recommends the following steps for women without symptoms

Breast Self-Exam (age 20 and over)

- Should be done once a month
- Menstruating women should perform BSE two to three days after period ends

Clinical Exam

- See a doctor or nurse for a physical breast exam
- Age 20 to 40, every 3 years
- Over 40, every year.

Mammography

- Have your first, or baseline, mammogram by age 40. This will be used to measure changes that may appear in later mammograms
- Age 40 to 49, have a mammogram every one to two years
- Age 50 and above, have a mammogram every year.

First class graduates from law enforcement academy

Course equips soldiers with necessary skills for police officer, jailer positions

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

A new chapter in history was written Sept. 10 with the graduation of the first class of the Fort Benning Law Enforcement Academy.

The academy offers a nine-week program, sponsored by the Georgia Peace Officer Standards and Training Council, which trains soldiers leaving the military for positions in law enforcement.

The program is the result of what post Chief of Staff Col. Gregory C. Camp called a "tremendous cooperative effort" between the U.S. and state governments and agencies like the Army Career and Alumni Program, the Georgia Association of Chiefs of Police and the Georgia Peace Officer Standards and Training Council.

"That teamwork," Camp said, "forged in the spirit of providing opportunities for America's veterans, has overcome any and all red tape and allowed this project to reach its fruition ... in the first of what we all hope will be many classes to follow."

The graduates of the first class are:

Highest academic average:

Sgt. Timothy R. Balch, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

Highest firearms average :

Sgt. 1st Class Russ D. Thomas, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 29th Infantry Regiment

Honor graduates:

Spc. Adam B. McCoy, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment

Cpl. James N. Spahn, U.S. Army Infantry Center Military Police Company

Chief Warrant Officer 3 Randy F. Upton, 86th Military Police Detachment, Criminal Investigation Division

ACAP kicks off career days

Army Career and Alumni Program

The Fort Benning Army Career and Alumni Program and Job Assistance Center has kicked off a new career day season :

Career day at the JAC has been highly successful over the past 1 1/2 years with many participants landing good jobs, according to Harold Ericksen, JAC manager.

"The concept of weekly career days was adopted because of the dynamics of the job market, Ericksen said. "Jobs that are here today are quickly filled. Jobs that are not here today may very well exist tomorrow.

"Conducting job fairs on a semi-annual basis may not meet the needs of employers or job seekers," he continued. "Therefore, we conduct frequent Career Days at the Fort Benning Job Assistance Center.

"As you enter the 'Hall of Champions' at the center, you will see the wall full of stars representing examples of clients who have achieved success in the job search. Many of these success stories are a result of Career Day," he said.

During the season, career days will be scheduled according to themes. Employers with common needs and clients with common job search objectives will have the sole use of the JAC on that day.

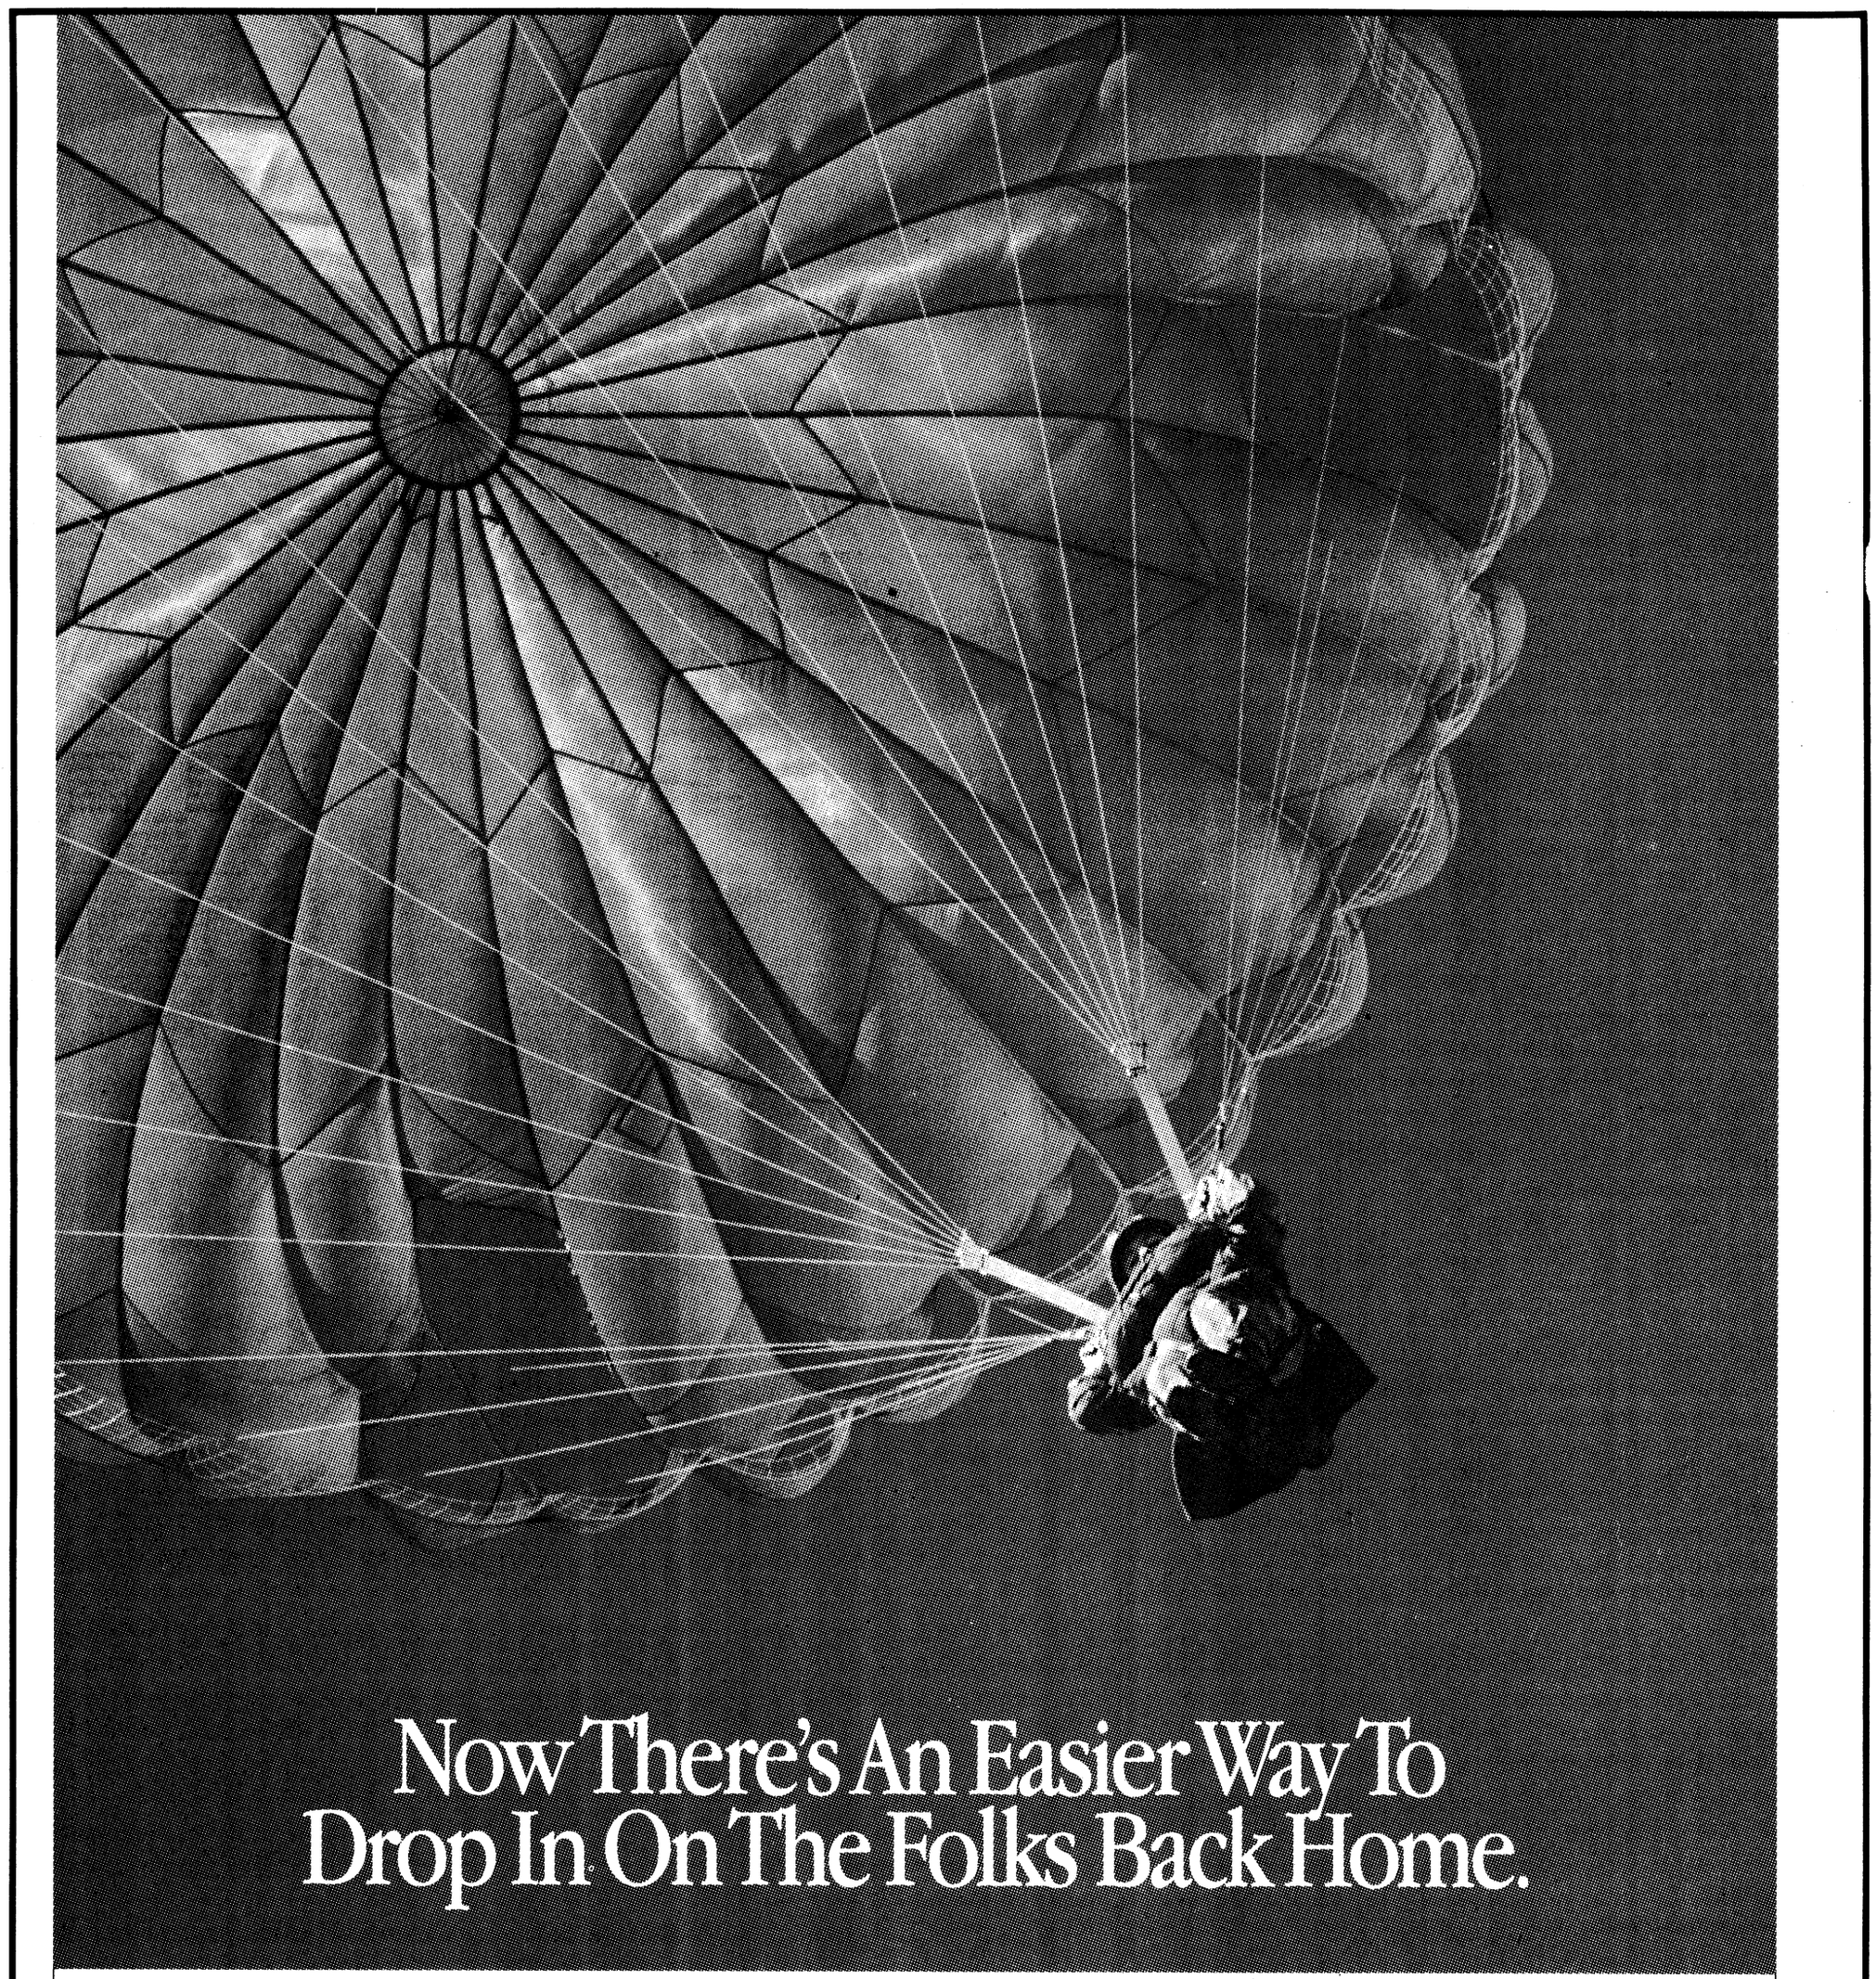
The first round of career days scheduled by themes are as follows:

Oct. 14 — Management Day

TBA — Corrections, Law Enforcement Day

TBA — Environmental Day

TBA — Food Service Day



TBA — Military Contractors.

The themes were selected as a result of past experience in dealing with employers and understanding of their requirements, Ericksen said. Employers scheduled for Career Day are in immediate need of employees, and they have jobs that need to be filled now.

Participants have an opportunity to practice marketing their skills, qualifications and experience. Before attending any job fair, participants should be prepared, Ericksen said. JAC counselors provide assistance in resume writing, researching companies and practice interviewing.

A monthly schedule will appear in Infantry Hall's Classroom 30, ACAP Building 2617 and at the Job Assistance Center, Building 2634. For more information, call 545-2308 or 545-2309.

DoD resists limiting public land use

DoD is sensitive to cooperating and working with other agencies and the public regarding military use of public lands and environmental issues

By F. Peter Wigginton
American Forces Information Service

The Department of Defense is committed to good environmental practices, but further restricting military training areas would severely hamper national defense, the department's top environmental official said.

Sherri Goodman, deputy undersecretary of Defense for environmental security, objected to proposed legislation that would limit public land and air use for critical military operations. She testified before the House Subcommittee on National Parks, Forests and Public Lands.

Goodman said DoD recognizes the public is concerned that both ground and air military operations may disturb the ecology in and over national forests and other federal lands.

However, she said, a key element of mission capability is well-disciplined and highly skilled pilots and soldiers who depend on adequate training under realistic conditions.

Presently the Engle Act of 1956 specifies Congress must approve withdrawal, reservation, restriction or use of more than 5,000 acres of public lands for military purposes. House Resolution 2080, Military Land Reform and Reassessment Act, would amend Engle and require DoD to provide an inventory of all public lands to be withdrawn for military use, provide information about lands' resources and values, and justify any continued withdrawal.

In effect, the act further regulates the way the national government decides how much and which federal lands and national airspace should be placed under military agency control.

The decision-making also would require analysis of the extent to which the actions will affect the natural and environmental values, fish and wildlife of these areas.

Before approval could be obtained to establish a military zone, the resolution would require opinions of various people be submitted to Congress six months prior. These viewpoints would include comments from the appropriate secretaries of Interior or Agriculture and the governor, Indian tribes and public of affected states.

For example, Section 4 of the resolution could prevent the Federal Aviation Administration from restricting, even temporarily, areas so that large-scale military training exercises could be conducted over public domain lands.

The amendment "would severely limit training flexibility for regular and Reserve aviation forces, including the Air National Guard. It would also hamper aircraft unit activation and modernization initiatives, most of which require airspace actions," she added.

In fact, despite downsizing, she said, larger land and air areas are needed to achieve operational readiness because of changes in tactics and weapon systems. Such restrictions and delays would cause loss of vital training capability and readiness would suffer, she stressed.

Goodman said DoD is sensitive to cooperating and working with other agencies and the public regarding military use of public lands and environmental issues.

The department recommends the size of land withdrawals not require congressional action even, for example, to allow for armored or heavy mechanized brigade-level exercises. The existing 5,000-acre limit is too restrictive for these exercises, even for dismounted infantry, she said.

Goodman said the department generally supports bill provisions for the transfer to the departments of Agriculture or Interior of withdrawn lands no longer used for military purposes.

Also, "we recommend requiring the appropriate secretary to determine what use is expected for the land so that the appropriate levels of decontamination can be determined consistent with current law. DoD would then be responsible for cleaning up contamination from DoD uses," she concluded.

Mike Johnson and Darrin Register teamed up to win the Uchee Creek bass tournament Sunday at Uchee Creek with a two-day total of eight fish and 21.80 points.

A cool front that came into the area Saturday night also brought rain-drenched clouds to the Chattahoochee River, changing the fishing strategy for Johnson and Register.

"The day before we fished the rocks; today we moved into the weeds and cover," Register said. "The only change we made in our fishing pattern was we fished slower. The fish were there; they just weren't biting, especially the big ones. The cold front brought on a case of lockjaw. We were lucky."

Lockjaw seems to be the right word for the occasion. Out of 31 boaters that fished Saturday, only 10 weighed in fish on Sunday.

The big fish of the tournament went to George Mendez who hauled in a 7-pound, 8-ounce largemouth Sunday.

29th suffers 'dog' days

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The 29th Infantry Regiment has combined 1st Battalion and 2nd Battalion to make one football league.

Thursday night, three games were scheduled at Gowdy Field; two were played and one was forfeited. Here's what happened.

Cats nip Dogs

The Cougars of Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, nipped the Dogs of Company D, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, by the score of 2-0.

The only score of the ballgame came late in the second half when Cougar defensive back Ken White sacked Dog quarterback Marvin Watts in the end zone for a safety.

The Dog offense missed a golden opportunity for a touchdown on its first possession of the game. Watts hooked up with Gerthart Lewis on a 75-yard touchdown pass, only to have the play called back for an illegal block. On the next play, Cougar safety James Davis intercepted Watt's next pass ending the drive.

The Dog's next possession ended when Cougar cornerback Anthony Butler picked off a fumbled ball in the air by Watts at the 40-yard line.

The Cougars, on the other hand, could not move the ball against the Dog defense. Two of the four possessions by the Cougars in the first half ended with the Cougars having to punt the ball away. The other two possessions ended on fourth down plays.

On the Dogs' third possession of the half, Davis came up with his second pick of the game, but hurt the offense with an unsportsman-like conduct penalty effectively killing the drive before it got started.

The half ended with both teams trying to figure out a way into the other's end zone.

After the Cougars took the 2-point advantage late in the half, the Dogs bared their fangs on their final possession of the game, driving the ball down to the Cougar two, with less than a minute to play.

Watts found wide out Ruby West in the end zone for the winning touchdown, only to have it called back on a penalty. Two plays later time ran out on the Dogs with the ball sitting at the Cougar 10-yard line.

Forfeit

Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, 7 vs. Company C, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, 0 (forfeit).

Brawlers maul Dogs

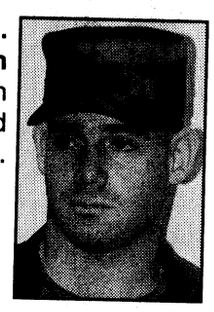
In the final matchup of the evening, the Brawlers of Company B, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, mauled the Dogs of Company D, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, 19-0 in the final matchup of the night.



The Brawlers opened the game with a 75-yard kick return setting the offense up at the Dogs' 3-yard line. One play later, running back Kevin Sanders slid into the end zone for the Brawlers, first score of the night. Sanders added the extra point for a 7-0 lead.

Midway through the first half, the Brawlers punched the score up to 13-0 on a 10-yard touchdown run by Sanders for his second touchdown of the game.

The Brawlers sent the Dogs to the dog pound late in the second half when quarterback Robert Frieberg scampered one yard for the final score of the night with less than two minutes left in the game.

commentary

October is upon us again and sports-lovers across the planet are juiced for upcoming events. Some of us.

With the absence of two major sports at the beginning of October, the sports enthusiasts, who are normally running on all cylinders watching every single strike, every hit, every walk and every steal of the World Series, are walking around with steam coming out of the top of their heads from being pi##*d off at the players and owners of baseball and hockey.

The bottom line is ... well, there is no bottom line.

Are the players wrong? Yes. Are the owners wrong? Yes. Are the fans wrong? Yes ... and no.

The players, in my mind, are already getting too much money. In the same respect, the owners are also making too much money and the fans are the fools for paying the outlandish ticket prices to support the players and the owners.

I understand that professional athletes are better at their sport than the average person. But these guys have been exploiting the public for far too long.

The players deserve their share. A share. Not Fort Knox. Players who are playing a game to make a living don't deserve any more revenues than some guy who works on a construction site eight to 10 hours a day, or someone who defends their country.

Why should someone who's only fear is becoming a piece of the outfield wall get paid more than people who are ready to give their life in defense of their country?

The players deserve theirs and so do the owners. I mean the owners have to negotiate contracts, hire and fire personnel, manage an organization and eat well, don't they? Must be a tough life.

I am a person who has not lived in a city that has baseball or hockey, so I have had to watch it on the boob tube just like the majority of us. I don't feel like I've been missing out on something either. I have had the pleasure of attending a live baseball and hockey game once or twice in my life. To me there is little difference between live and televised.

So in my mind, people who spend hundreds, even thousands, for regular season tickets need to re-examine their priorities. NBC, ESPN and all the other stations that carry these sports do an outstanding job of relaying what it is like to actually be in the park or arena.

Imagine this. If no one showed up to watch the games, if everyone stayed home to watch the game on television, then the players and owners wouldn't make as much and the fans wouldn't have to pay as much.

OK, reality check. Is that really going to happen? Don't answer that question.

Sports. To many of us it is a way of life, not just something we do to relax. To me, a lot of things can be learned from team sports. Trust. Loyalty. Honesty. Fairness. Those words come to mind when I think back to my years of playing team sports. But when it comes to baseball and hockey today, I think of sports as Slow-witted Personnel Of Regular Team Sports.

The month of October will still be filled with sports. This month's activities will have a few different venues of action. We'll see action on football fields, golf courses, race tracks, and in conference calls, inside the capitol building, conference rooms and bar rooms (where the fans will undoubtedly argue over who is right or wrong).

The baseball fields are shut down until at least spring training. Nothing can be done about that. The annual ('Fall Classic') isn't annual anymore. It only happens when the players and owners are getting along.

Let's hope the National Hockey League can get its act together and save the season. More talks are scheduled. As of now, the season has only been postponed, but that's how the baseball season ended.

The most important thing to remember about all of this is, it's just a game. Play it as such.

More than 70 shooters turned out for the competition at the Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club's monthly tactical pistol match at English Range Saturday.

In the competitor class, Charles Rolling fired an aggregate score of 2,461 for first place to holding off Lawrence Cox who fired a 2,160 for second.

George Morton finished in the third spot at 1,918. The scoring is done by taking the shooters' overall score and dividing it by the overall time for a hit factor, which determines the winner.

In the standard class; Trey Carmack had a hit factor of 2,362 narrowly outpointing Robert Moore who finished second with a hit factor of 2,348. Third place went to Rob Lewis at 2,314.

William Allensworth took top honors in the military class with a score of 2,492, while Jeff Dirkse finished in second at 1,988. Eric Spalding took third at 1,950.

In the law enforcement category, top cop went to Rob Garrett with a final score of 2,609. Kenneth Garrett finished second at 2,441 and John Cranfill rounded out the top three at 1,272.

High female shooter at 1,647 was Marsha Pittman, while high revolver went to John Hallahan at 1,063.

In the rifle side match, Ben Stahl took high iron sighted rifle. High scoped rifle went to Rob Lewis, and high bolt action rifle was won by Steve Kuni.

"This was great," David Wilson of Company B, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, said. "For my first match, I didn't do too bad.

"The Army needs to incorporate some type of training like this for the soldier who doesn't get that much hands on weapons training," Wilson said.

"Most soldiers on this post qualify with a weapon only twice a year. Matches or training of this type would improve the soldiers' shooting skills immensely. Besides, it's also fun," he said.

The next match at the Rifle and Pistol Club will be Sunday at English Range.

This match will be sponsored by the Chattahoochee Valley Sport Shooting Club and is sanctioned by the United States Pistol Shooting Association. Registration is from 8:30 to 11 a.m.; shooting starts at 9 a.m.

Entry fee is $12 for preregistered and CVSSC members and $15 for non-CVSSC members. For more information, contact Jim Graham or James McQuein at 689-3371 or stop by the Rifle and Pistol Club on English Range.

SOA names NCO, soldier of year

By Judith Ginder
School of the Americas

The School of the Americas Noncommissioned Officer and Soldier of the Year board was Sept. 6 at Ridgway Hall.

Staff Sgt. Johnny Rosario, special operations instructor, was named NCO of the year and Spc. Sharon Jones, unit mail clerk, was named soldier of the year.

Both have been assigned to SOA for approximately two years.

In addition to being named NCO and soldier of the year, the two will also have the opportunity to attend the Association of the United States Army Conference in Washington, D.C., this Month.

Rosario said that all of the soldiers going to the board are given a list of the tasks that may be asked of them in order to prepare.

"It's just basic military information that all soldiers should know," Rosario said.

"However, even if the information isn't known (to the soldier), the soldier has plenty of opportunities to study the guide that's given to them," Rosario said.

Rosario said it isn't necessarily the best soldier, but the best soldier on that given day who will receive the honor of winning the board.

Staff Sgt. Johnny Rosario is the School of the Americas' NCO of the year.

Spc. Sharon Jones is the School of the Americas' soldier of the year.

While most of the questions from the board came from the SOA study guide, several of the questions were on current events, Jones said.

The current events questions were the most difficult for her, she said, because of the obvious broadness of that category.

Jones said that going through the board process keeps her on her toes.

"I feel proud to be named soldier of the year. It keeps me motivated and makes me strive to do my best," Jones said.

Competition gives American soldiers chance to prove efficiency

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

Soldiers from across post competed for the German Armed Forces Efficiency Badge Sept. 26 through 30 at Fort Benning.

Fifty-one people competed for gold, silver or bronze badges in a variety of athletic events, including swimming 200 meters, shooting a 9mm handgun, running short-distance track races, performing the long and high jumps, throwing the shot put and participating in a forced road march.

To even out the competition, participants competed in four different age groups: 18 to 29, 30 to 39, 40 to 44 and 45 to 49.

According to Sgt. Maj. Karl H. Nickolaus, noncommissioned officer for the German Liaison Office, the competition is conducted annually to give American soldiers an opportunity to experience German soldiers' physical training.

"(The competition allows) the American soldiers to see what we do in our army," he said, "and (it) is a good thing to achieve camaraderie."

This year's competition saw its first-ever female participant. Sgt. 1st Class Jennifer K. Reynolds, Reserve Component Division of the U.S. Army Physical Fitness School, competed in the 18 to 29 age group and earned a silver badge.

"I did not think about being the only female," she said. "I was a little bit surprised to be the only one competing, but I think (there were not more female soldiers) because the competition is not that widely known.

"Initially, I didn't know what (the competition) would entail," she continued. "But, once I found out what it was about, I felt it would really be challenging."

Passing two of the events, the 200-meter swim and the 9mm handgun competition, was mandatory the first day, or the participants faced disqualification, Nikolaus said. Of the 51 people who entered the competition, only 36 remained after day one.

The 9mm handgun qualification determined whether the participant was competing for a gold, silver or bronze badge.

If a competitor shot three out of five, he or she would qualify for a bronze badge, Nickolaus said. Competitors who shot four out of five qualified for silver, and those with five out of five were eligible for a gold, he said.

At the end of the five-day competition, 14 gold, 14 silver and three bronze badges were awarded to the finishers.

Ranger School helps develop soldiers

By Topper Rush
3rd Battalion, 5th Cavalry

Are these the soldiers from the 75th Ranger Regiment or the 82nd Airborne Division?

No, they are from the 1st Armored Division. The 3rd Battalion, 5th Cavalry Regiment, a mechanized infantry battalion stationed at Kirchgoens, Germany, recently had 100 percent of the soldiers it sent to Ranger School graduate.

"Sending soldiers to Ranger School doesn't just make a unit better; it makes the Army better," said Maj. Gen. William G. Carter III, the 1st Armored Division commander.

Normally, a unit will graduate about 30 percent of the students it sends to Ranger School. The 5th Cavalry sent seven students and all seven returned with the black and gold Ranger Tab.

The group included Douglas Galuszka, Vincent Phillips, Aric Gray, Eric Emde, Ranger Chad James, and Adrian Ramirez.

Three of these soldiers, Emde, James and Ramirez, completed the training as privates first class.

> "Sending soldiers to Ranger School doesn't just make a unit better, it makes the Army better."
> — Maj. Gen. William G. Carter III
> Commander, 1st Armored Division

"The RIP (Ranger Indoctrination Program) class started with about 50 soldiers, but after our field training exercise and the selection board, only seven were picked to go. Luckily we all made it," said Gray.

The soldiers started out by volunteering for 5th Cavalry's indoctrination program. The program was based on the 75th Ranger Regiment's program and advice from Lt Col. Bill Ivey, the commander of the 4th Ranger Training Battalion at Fort Benning.

The 5th Cavalry's program was designed to simultaneously prepare soldiers for Ranger School and serve as a selection program to determine who was best qualified. It consisted of swim tests, a comprehensive physical training program, classes, a grueling four-day field training exercise, which gave every soldier the opportunity to serve as patrol leader, and finally a selection board.

"The training we received during RIP prepared us both physically and mentally," said Ramirez.

"The most important thing RIP taught us is teamwork," said Emde. "Because of my training with 3-5 Cav, I was able to make good decisions and perform well at Ranger School."

Rangers already assigned to the battalion, such as Sgt. James Lynch and Staff Sgt. Bradley Sutton, devoted many hours of their time to run this program.

Ranger School is viewed by some as one of the most difficult schools the Army has to offer and one of the toughest rites of passage in the world. Of those who make it through, some view it as the single-most difficult time of their life.

"I learned more about myself and my capabilities in the three months at Ranger School than I did during the last 10 years combined" said Galuszka.

The 5th Cavalry continues to run the indoctrination course, with Ranger School graduates serving as instructors.

"I enjoy passing my knowledge on while training the new ranger candidate," said RIP instructor Sgt. James Lynch.

"I remember what it was like, the train-up, being smoked and tired. The most satisfying part is when you train a candidate and he comes back with the tab."

• After fierce fighting, the American forces delivered a 24-hour surrender ultimatum to the Germans in Aachen. The Germans refused the ultimatum and the Americans began to fight their way into the city, which was 85 percent destroyed by Allied airplanes and artillery.

• Russian troops invaded Hungary on a 73-mile front taking nine major Hungarian towns and 300 other localities as they advanced from Gyula to Gyoma, within 83 miles of Budapest.

for the record

In the article "2/29 improves pistol range" on Page B-4 of the Sept. 30 Bayonet, the word "no" was omitted from a sentence about funding for the project.

In fact, there was no funding, and Porter Range was renovated by the voluntary efforts of the soldiers of Company C, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, with help from the Infantry Training Brigade, 36th Engineer Group and employees in Range Maintenance and the Transportation Division, among others.

crime watch

Military Police Activity

TAKE A BITE OUT OF CRIME

The following entries were taken from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from Sept. 22 to 28. Such entries may be incomplete and do not determine the guilt or innocence of any person.

• A sergeant was charged by Columbus Police Department for driving under the influence of alcohol, no state driver license and improper backing. The sergeant was observed driving down 4th Street adjacent to 2nd Avenue, and driving backward on the Olgethorpe Bridge in the west-bound lane. A traffic stop was initiated, and the officer smelled alcohol. The sergeant was arrested and transported to the Muscogee County Jail where he was administered a breathalyzer test on the intoximeter 3000 with a result of .22 percent alcohol. The sergeant was processed, pending release to his unit.

• A juvenile family member and a juvenile civilian were charged with larceny of non appropriated funds property and conspiracy to commit a crime. The family member removed a watch from the display shelf and placed it in his pocket, while the civilian acted as a look out. They both exited the store without rendering payment for the stolen item. They were apprehended and transported to the MP station, processed and released to their sponsors.

• Two juvenile family members were charged with assault, and the sponsor of one juvenile was charged with failure to register a weapon on post. The two juveniles were involved in a verbal altercation, which escalated into a physical altercation when one of the juveniles struck the other one with a closed fist to the back and shoulder. The juvenile who was struck, retaliated by hitting the other juvenile with a bag of unknown objects in the head, and using his sponsor's shotgun as a deterrence. Neither one of the two juveniles required medical attention. Both juveniles were transported to the MP station, processed and released to their sponsors. The sponsor with the unregistered weapon was processed and released to his unit.

Other activities included three cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, 18 traffic accidents, 15 cases of larceny, and three cases of shoplifting reported at the exchange facilities.

Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best — Give Crime Arrest." Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5223 or 545-5224 or the "Crime In Progress" line at 545-5222.

commissary corner

Fort Benning Commissary

Service Desk — The Commissary has established a Customer Service Desk in the lobby. The people who work at the desk will act as liaisons between patrons and the Commissary. They will handle returns, complaints, suggestions and any questions.

Child safety — The Commissary can be a dangerous place for children.

The Commissary has had incidents of children falling into the freezers, infants in infant carriers falling off checkout stands and children running through the aisles into fully loaded shopping carts. These accidents can cause serious injury.

A trip to the Commissary can be an enjoyable trip for the children and the parents if they practice safety.

Benefits of Commissary shopping — Commissary patrons buy at cost. When the Defense Commissary Agency buyers negotiate for merchandise prices, that merchandise is then sold at that price.

For example, an item bought by DeCA for 50 cents is then later sold to the customer for 50 cents. No markup (profit) is made and no taxes are charged — only the 5 percent surcharge is added, and that small percentage is used to construct, renovate and operate commissaries.

Studies show patrons save an average of 25 percent on their grocery shopping by making all their grocery purchases at the Commissary instead of a commercial grocery.

Suggestion boxes — The Commissary has a suggestion box and sometimes it gets lonely. With thousands of bright, energetic customers coming through the doors every day, the Defense Commissary Agency is sure they bring lots of good ideas in with them.

Unfortunately, they all too often leave with the same idea still tucked in their minds. Suggestions, comments, compliments and even complaints are all welcome input form the customer.

Store personnel take them very seriously and in many cases changes can be made as a result. Suggestion forms are available throughout the commissary and at the Customer Service Desk.

Plan-O-Gram — Did you know that you can make your shopping at the Commissary much easier and faster by using the Plan-O-Gram?

The Plan-O-Gram was developed by Commissary personnel and is basically a map of the store by aisle showing what is stocked in each aisle.

The reverse side of the Plan-O-Gram is an alphabetic listing of all major items and aisle location. It also has the store hours and a handy telephone reference for all departments within the Commissary.

To save time, a patron can make out his or her shopping list and put coupons in the same order as the Commissary.

Plan-O-Grams are available at the identification stand, the Customer Service Desk or just ask a member of the Commissary staff for one.

Nutrition key in preparing for ranger training

By Ruth Holje
Fort Lee, Va.

Ranger School is one of the most physically and mentally demanding experiences in the U.S. armed forces. The commander of the Ranger Training Brigade asked researchers at the U.S. Army Research Institute of Environmental Medicine out of Natick, Mass., to study the changes in soldier nutritional status and immune function during the course.

Researchers conducted the study July through September 1991. A second study one year later evaluated the results of following recommended changes. The following summary is not meant to discourage a future student, rather to better prepare soldiers for the course.

Prior to the course, students receive "The Ranger Course Pamphlet," detailing the physical and academic preparation standards. A student not meeting high physical fitness standards will not be successful. Also, starting the course well rested will be a benefit, as sleep averages 3.8 hours per night during the course.

Body weight

Over the course the average weight loss was 15.6 percent of original weight in the first study. The rangers averaged a 31 percent caloric deficit (expended 4,010 calories, ate 2,800 calories per day).

The ration in the first study was one meal, ready-to-eat, (1,300 calories) per day while in the field training exercise, with open eating between the four phases.

A six-month follow up found that all soldiers regained their weight plus an average of 10 pounds.

In the second ranger study, the ration was changed to a long-range patrol meal and pouch bread for an additional 15 percent calories. Weight dropped by only 12.5 percent

Body fat

Body fat dropped from an average of 14.6 percent to 5.8 percent. In the second study, final body fat was 8.4 percent. Soldiers who began the course between 10 to 15 percent body fat were more likely to be successful than fatter or leaner subjects.

This suggests that the average young soldier in the course who is physically fit and prepared for ranger training tends to fall in this range.

Others can successfully finish the course. However, the leaner soldiers (below 10 percent body fat), would be at a disadvantage with less reserves to draw upon.

Vitamins and minerals extensive testing found no deficiencies in vitamins or minerals.

The MRE and the LRP are well fortified and well consumed by the rangers. A multivitamin supplement is not needed.

Immune system

The caloric deficiency, physical demands and environmental conditions set the body up for increased infections and illness. The increased caloric intake in the second study made a notable improvement in the immune system to fight off disease.

Bottom line

Before going to Ranger School:

• Attain a percent body fat between 10 to 15 percent.

• Get into top physical shape.

• Talk to rangers to prepare for all the demands.

After the course, eat to regain weight. Food cravings will probably be high fat and sugar items which is fine for awhile. Strive for healthy eating and exercise habits shortly after the course ends.

SOLDIERS AGAINST DROPPING OUT

Program pairs teens with military mentors

Soldiers can devote time to positively influence local teens

By Jerrie Macintire
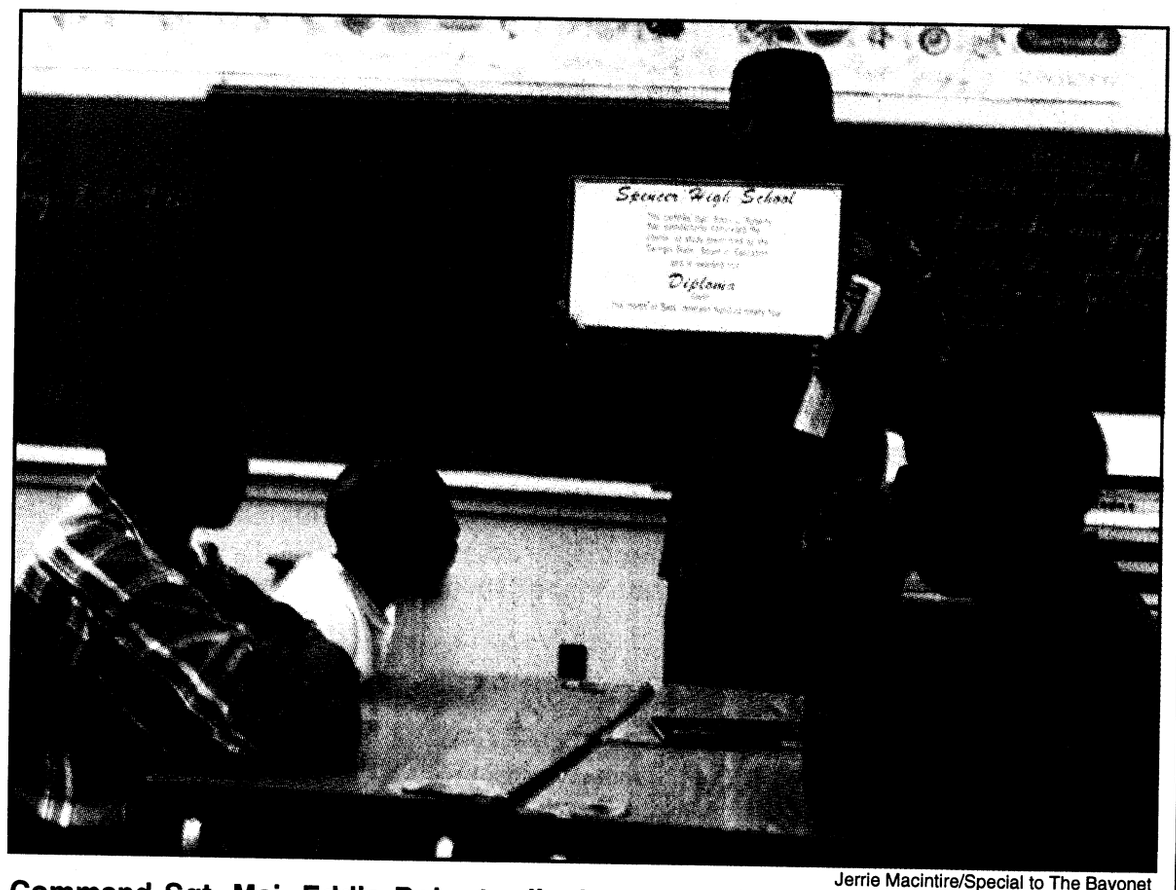
Special to The Bayonet ©

Fort Benning soldiers are hoping to have a positive influence on teen-agers at Baker Middle School through a program that pairs students with military mentors, said Command Sgt. Maj. Eddie Roberts, 11th Infantry Regiment command sergeant major.



The program, Soldiers Against Dropping Out, focuses on establishing positive role models, opening the lines of communication and encouraging a wider view of the world that will inspire the teens to set goals and get the education necessary to meet those goals, said Roberts.

SADO was piloted last year at Baker Middle School with excellent results, according to Ada Bell, eighth-grade teacher and director of a program called "It's OK (It's Opportunity Knocking). Previously known as Children Being Educated, Bell's program involves students targeted to receive nontraditional classroom interventions to encourage them to remain in school.

This alternate education strategy includes basic curriculum studies so students can keep pace academically. It also includes social support interventions, team building activities, training in social skills and peaceful conflict resolution, and opportunities to attend multicultural events in the area to broaden their view of the world outside their neighborhood, said Bell.

Students in the It's OK program are being encouraged to remain in school through a variety of strategies including the SADO program involving soldiers, Bell said.

At the initial SADO visit to the new class of eighth-graders, Roberts questioned the teen-agers on future goals. As hands went up around the room, students mentioned engineering, aircraft mechanics, truck driving and nursing as possible career choices.

Command Sgt. Maj. Eddie Roberts displays a mock high school diploma as an incentive to encourage students to remain in school, one goal of the SADO program.

"How would you like to meet someone in the Army who works as a nurse? I think that can be arranged," Roberts said to one student who responded, "Cool."

Through the SADO program, Roberts will match students with mentors who have similar interests, he said.

Plans this year include field trips to Fort Benning, regular quality time during some school days with mentors and students, and confidence-building activities such as instruction on the 34-foot airborne training tower.

By demonstrating someone cares about them and their futures, soldiers and educators are united in the desire to encourage students to stay in school, officials said.

Agnes Evans, supervisor for the Muscogee Country Mentor Program, said she believes the SADO mentor program is an excellent way to positively influence young people to become self-directed, productive, responsible students who will complete their educations.

Last year, Evans was instrumental in establishing the link between interested soldiers and Baker Middle schoolers. Led by Pfc. Terrence Page, who has since been transferred, soldiers expressed an interest in giving something back to the civilian community by working with teen-agers, said Roberts.

Page, himself a high school drop out, said he wanted to prevent others from encountering the many closed doors he confronted because of an incomplete education.

The soldiers chose to work with middle schoolers because "This is where we should focus our point. If we can get students through middle school, we can help them deal with the biggest threat to their educations — peer pressure," said Roberts.

Roberts, along with education officials, said the SADO mentor program is valuable for influencing young people to make healthy choices about their futures, and the Georgia Gov. Zell Miller, seems to agree.

At a Sept. 15 assembly focusing on the Muscogee County mentor program, news of the SADO program impressed Miller, who commented, "I like it," according to officials at the gathering.

"He was quite impressed with the program," Bell said.

"He liked the idea of soldiers being involved as mentors, especially since there are so many military bases in the state of Georgia and the program could be expanded," Roberts said.

By providing a solid academic foundation, role models with similar interests and educational trips and activities, officials believe the school district will increase the number of graduates and encourage productive futures for those graduates, they said.

Anyone interested in joining the SADO program can contact Roberts at 545-3121.

Students celebrate Hispanic heritage

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

As part of Hispanic Heritage Month, students in the Fort Benning Schools have been involved in a variety of learning activities that included a culminating festival Sept. 29 for kindergartners at White School.

The youngsters learned songs and dance steps, heard stories read in Spanish, sampled a variety of foods, and got a first-hand look at some authentic crafts as part of their festival.

Coordinated by parent volunteers under the direction of Sonya Carter, the festival featured several guests of Hispanic descent, most of them parents of students at the school.

White School registers children of Hispanic soldiers enrolled in the School of the Americas and is home to the English Speakers of Other Languages program on Fort Benning which is predominantly Hispanic, said Janet Wynn, principal.

"As a consequence, we are able to draw on the resources of our parents since we have a population of individuals with Hispanic heritages," said Wynn.

One focus of the festival was to introduce youngsters to Hispanic artifacts, building the foundation for an appreciation of different cultures, Wynn said.

Through songs and books in Spanish, group games and exposure to various crafts, parents helped heighten awareness of Hispanic culture and its influence, said parent volunteer Michelle Graber.

Other activities this month at White School included a walking field trip to the display at the School of the Americas, flag making exercises featuring Latin American countries, and creating a computer graphics program about various South American countries.

The festival and other activities at White School represented just some of several projects in the Fort Benning Schools celebrating Hispanic Heritage Month.

The annual postwide observance, which began Sept. 15, is designed to enhance awareness of different cultures while promoting understanding and harmony.

In addition to special learning experiences in the Fort Benning schools, other post activities in observance of Hispanic Heritage Month included exhibits, banquets, and cultural songs and dances.

1/38th invests honorary sergeant major

> Commander, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment

The investiture ceremony for the honorary sergeant major of 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment, was Sept. 29 at Leonard Barracks, headquarters of 1st Bn., 38th Inf. Regt., the "Rock of the Marne" battalion.

The honorary sergeant major of the regiment, retired Sgt. 1st Class Robert Hammersmith, is traditionally responsible for ensuring the history of the regiment is remembered by the soldiers now serving in the unit.

During the ceremony, the battle streamers earned by the Rock of the Marne battalion were presented to Hammersmith and retired Maj. Gen. Warren Hodges, honorary colonel of the regiment.

They passed the streamers on to Lt. Col. Charles Cardinal, commander of the battalion, and Command Sgt. Maj. Freddie Hines, the battalion sergeant major, who hung the streamers on the battalion colors.

Each battle streamer was carried by a soldier dressed in the uniform worn by the regiment when the streamer was earned.

"(Hammersmith) is a tough, gritty, hardnosed infantryman," Cardinal said, during the ceremony. "The regiment stood 'till the final hour (in the Korean War), and Sgt. 1st Class Hammersmith stood 'till his feet froze up."

"It was not a journalist who guaranteed freedom of the press; it was a soldier. It was not a poet who guaranteed freedom of expression; it was a soldier," Hammersmith quoted from the poem "A Soldier." During his speech, Hammersmith was so emotionally affected he had to stop several times before finishing.

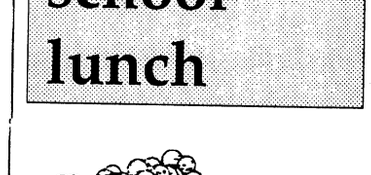
Hammersmith joined the Army in 1949 and served in Korea with Company C, 38th Infantry, in the Pusan perimeter. He fought with the regiment from Pusan to the Yalu River.

Hammersmith's feet froze in Korea in September 1951, after being wounded four times and surviving the battle of Kuni-Ri.

Hammersmith also served in Vietnam from October 1967 until October 1968. He was in combat and fought during the Tet Offensive in 1968.

Hammersmith retired Dec. 25, 1969, after serving 20 years in the Army.

His awards include the Combat Infantryman Badge, the Aircraft Crewman Badge, the Purple Heart with three clusters, the Presidential Unit Citation, the Korean Presidential Unit Citation, the National Defense Service Medal with oak leaf cluster, the Vietnam Service Medal with Bronze Star and the Army Commendation Medal.



He has a daughter, Anne, and two sons, Paul and Mike.

School ambassadors host visitors

Dexter students serve as ushers, greet parents at various activities

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

Dexter School students will have an added dimension to their regular curricular activities under the Dexter Ambassador's program, an enrichment exercise designed to encourage communication and public relations skills.

Under the program, selected student ambassadors will serve as hosts for various school functions as well as greet scheduled school visitors at the door and make them feel welcome, said Vicki Rogers, Dexter principal.

"School climate is very important to the staff and students at Dexter. This program provides an inviting school climate to visitors and teaches effective communications skills as well," she said.

Under the direction of Diane Oliver, teacher and program sponsor, 12 students from the fourth and fifth grades will serve as ambassadors each quarter. Two students from each fourth- and fifth-grade class will be selected each quarter, and the assignments will rotate.

Before serving as ambassadors, students undergo training under the direction of Libby Kurinec, a teacher and communication specialist at Faith Middle School.

Effective communication skills, appropriate social interactions and good manners are all part of the training, Oliver said.

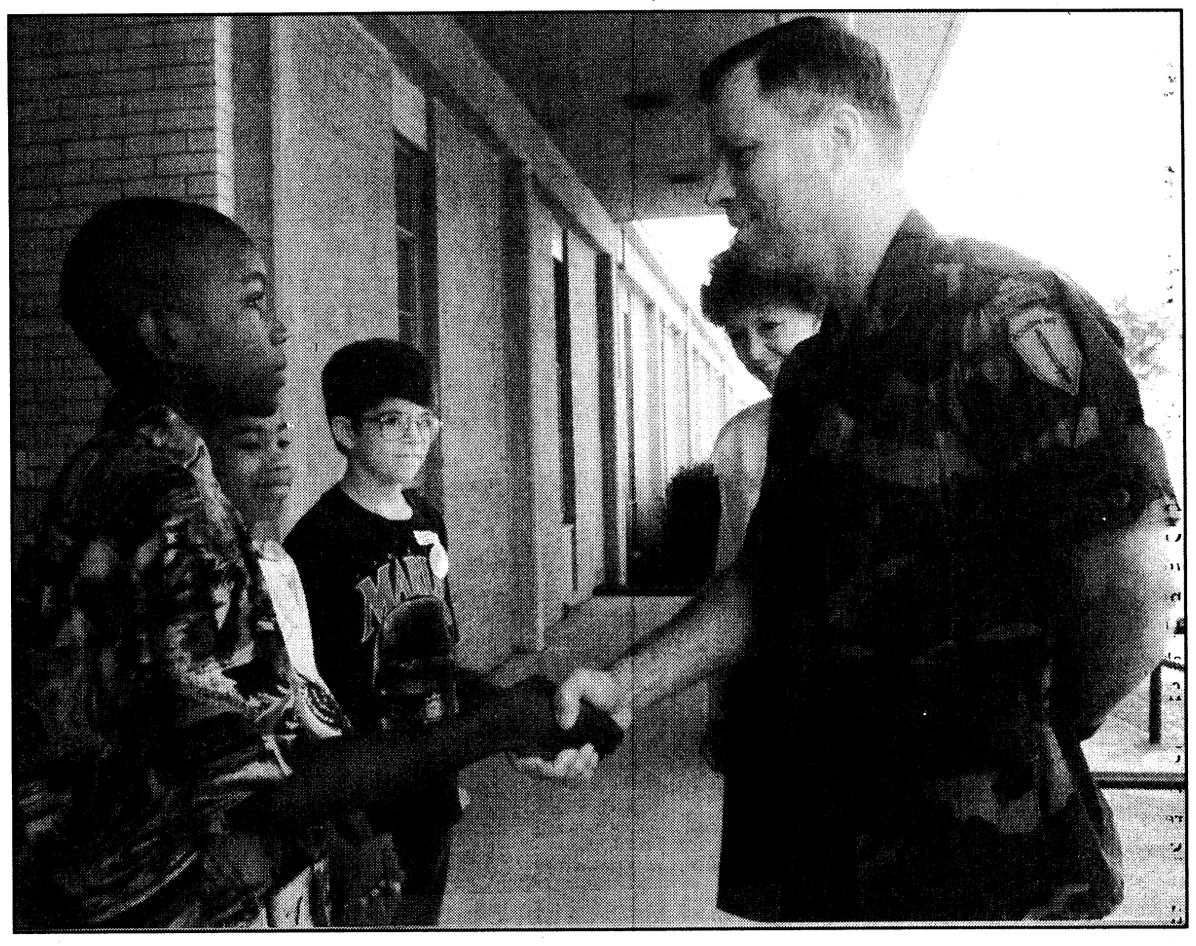
"We feel this program teaches children effective communication skills as they usher parents at school activities and make school visitors feel welcome," Oliver said.

In addition, the program helps build confidence and self-esteem, she added.

"Dealing with adults helps students feel more sure of themselves," Oliver said.

Ambassadors recently completed their first assignment of the year, and reported the task went well.

The students said they were prepared to greet the head of the School Board and the head of Fort Benning Schools, who arrived for a tour of Dexter, a designated School of Excellence that earned recognition across the state last year.



As Chief of Staff Col. Gregory Camp, School Board president, and Superintendent Dr. Dell Karr arrived, students greeted them at the door and ushered the visitors inside for a prearranged appointment with the principal.

"I was ready for the assignment," said Jasmine Wilkins, fourth-grader. "I would think of how to do it, and get confident. I also practiced greeting other people," she said.

Fifth-grader Jarrod Warrend agreed the first assignment went well, and said "I'd like to do it again."

Jawan Stevens said he enjoyed the task and thinks the program will help him in the future.

"Maybe when I get older, I will know how to greet important people and to be relaxed," he said.

Officials work to halt transfer of gypsy moths in household goods

By Rudi Williams
American Forces Information Service

A heavy infestation of flying Asian gypsy moths plaguing Germany has given military traffic management specialists a twofold headache: preventing delays in U.S.-bound personal property shipments and stopping the moths from "hitchhiking" to America.

In trying to solve both problems, U.S. European Command officials recently levied new inspection requirements called the Agriculture Selective Enforcement Program.

Military officials cut a deal with the Department of Agriculture that allows military rather than agriculture specialists to inspect for moths in Germany, according to Norman W. Kaucher, European Command's military customs staff coordinator.

The discovery of the moths in May halted shipment of privately owned vehicles, household goods and military equipment coming from Germany, said Donald Dette, a Military Traffic Management Command traffic management specialist in Falls Church, Va.

"Agriculture inspectors stopped everything for about two weeks. That's when we became concerned about household goods delivery delays," he said.

The delays occurred when agriculture inspectors took over inspections from the military. They unpacked containers and boxes, inspected the contents, fumigating when necessary, then repacked everything.

The 100 percent inspections ended in June when inspectors determined the moth egg hatch date had passed, Dette said.

"All the eggs that were laid last year had already hatched, and moths had either flown off in Germany or died in transit," he noted.

Three-week delivery delays went down to about one week. Normal delivery time from Germany to the United States is 45 days, a little longer for California. An additional 14 days was added to account for extra inspection time.

Now agriculture and military officials are worried about eggs laid this year causing shipment delays when they hatch next spring. Intensive moth inspections started again in early July, but this time military customs inspectors are inspecting items before they're packed and crated.

"The Department of Agriculture said anything coming out of Germany is considered suspect for the moth infestation," said Kaucher. "If Agriculture isn't satisfied with our inspections, they'll take over again, which would cause more shipment delays. We prefer not to have any delays, so we have to do our thing over here to prevent that."

Everybody returning from Germany is being interviewed as part of outprocessing, Kaucher said. "We ask questions like 'Do you own a swing set, barbecue grill, outdoor furniture, outdoor toys, bicycles or anything else that's been stored outside for long periods of time?' " he said.

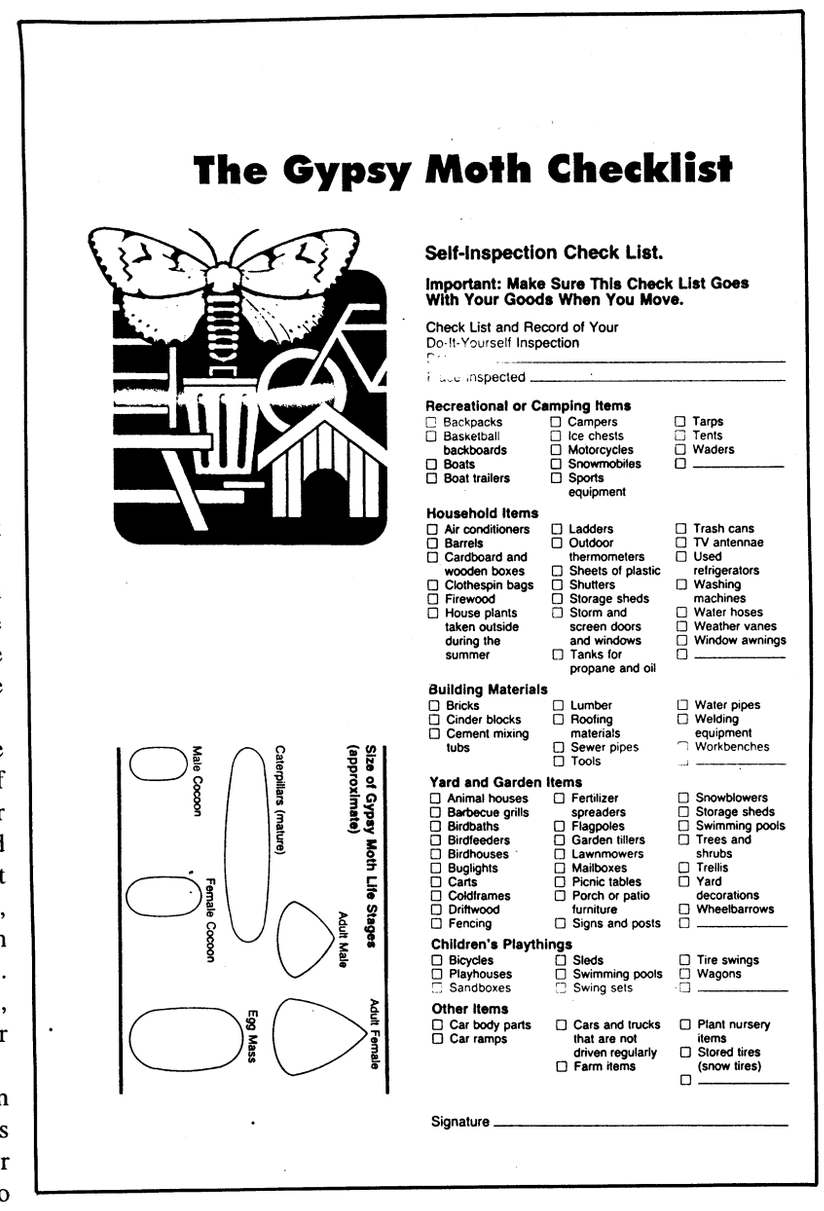
Answers determine whether their shipments must undergo moth inspections, Kaucher said. "Military inspectors will go to the person's home to verify items are free of moth contamination."

However, Kaucher emphasized service members, civilian employees and their families are responsible for ensuring their property is clean and free of moth infestation before packers arrive. These preventive measures are necessary to preclude longer shipment delays at U.S. ports of entry, he advised.

He said the infestation is like a shotgun pattern; some places don't have many moths while other areas, mostly in southern Germany, are densely populated with them. Flying Asian moths cause the greatest worry, Kaucher said, because some have mated with the European moth creating a hybrid with many of the bad points of each variety.

"European moths — the type in the United States — can fly only short distances, from tree to tree, for example," Kaucher explained. "The Asian variety can fly great distances. When we trap European moths, we know the female is close by laying her eggs. But the female Asian moth might be 20 miles away.

"The other problem is the European moth normally only eats hardwood trees or about 250 types of green plants," he continued. "The Asian moth eats hardwood, softwood, or more than 400 different plants." Therein lies a potentially catastrophic problem if the Asian moths reach the United States, he said.



"The first time a hardwood tree is defoliated, it will probably recover. But if it's defoliated more than once in a year, it normally dies," Kaucher said. "Softwood trees don't recover after being defoliated by moths."

In the United States, gypsy moths have defoliated up to 13 million acres of trees in one season. They cause untold annoyance — crawling on homes, littering lawn furniture and pools and making outdoor activities miserable, Agriculture officials said.

Kaucher said finding the little bugs and their larva (caterpillar) is a complicated, difficult task because they crawl inside tiny hard-to-see places. Automobiles, track and wheeled vehicles, sealed containers — anything outdoors — are potential hiding places.

Dette said traffic management officials are also concerned about Asian moths spreading from Germany to other European countries where American troops are stationed.

"This isn't a one-time problem that's going to be solved this year and never occur again," he emphasized.

in tax refunds await delivery

Internal Revenue Service

ATLANTA, Ga. — If you are a Georgia resident who never received your 1993 or prior year tax refund, the Internal Revenue Service is inviting you to step forward. The annual search for owners of unclaimed refunds is beginning now.

"Unfortunately, there are always refund checks returned by the U.S. Postal Service," said Nelson A. Brooke, IRS district director for Georgia. "If the handwriting on the tax return is illegible or the name, address or zip code is wrong, the refund probably was delivered to the wrong address."

There were 3,019 checks returned by the Postal Service as undeliverable in Georgia, ranging from as little as $1 to more than $58,000 and totaling $1,618,875.34. Some of these refunds are for years as far back as 1979.

The most common reason refund checks cannot be delivered is that taxpayers move after filing their return and do not give the IRS or the Postal Service a forwarding address. Taxpayers who change their names for any reason should also notify the IRS.

According to Brooke, taxpayers may claim an undelivered refund by establishing their identity and their right to receive a refund check.

This can be done by calling (800) 829-1040 or by addressing a letter to the IRS, Atlanta Service Center, Refund Inquiry Unit, Stop 112, Atlanta, Ga, 39901 with the following information:

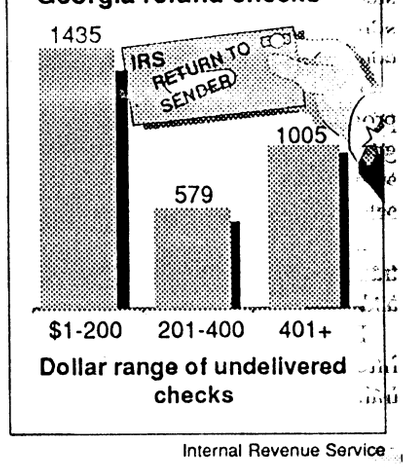
• Name and address exactly as shown on tax return;

• Present name and address if different from that shown on the return;

• Tax year for which refund is believed due;

• Social security number or number(s) of both spouses if the return is for a joint return;

• Amount of refund on the return;



• Signature (not printed or typed.)

One way to eliminate the possibility of a lost, stolen or undeliverable refund check for next year, is for taxpayers to file electronically and have their refunds deposited into their checking or savings accounts. For more information, call (800) 829-1040.

Refund checks still in the mail

More than $1,618,875 in federal tax refund checks remain undelivered to 3,019 Georgians.

God forgives all mistakes

By Paul Wright
USAIC Chaplains' Office

reflections

Many times we feel the mistakes we make have two terrible consequences.

First, everyone sees or knows about the mistakes. They show our ineptitude and everybody judges us by them. And that's the problem. Second, we believe our mistakes forever mark us; they are fatal.

There are many people in both the Old and New Testaments who might identify with those thoughts.

Jonah certainly felt he made a fatal mistake running from God (Jonah 1:3-17). Even after a great victory over the prophets of Baal (1 Kings 18:20-46), Elijah just knew he made a fatal error fleeing Jezebel (1 Kings 19). And how about Paul on the Damascus road on his way to persecute more Christians? (Acts 9) or Peter in the garden during Jesus' arrest as he denied Christ three times? (Mt 26:69-75).

Yet, God in his infinite mercy and grace provides for us. Listen to his words through the writer of Hebrews: "I will never desert you, nor will I ever forsake you." (Hebrews 13:5 NAA)

Please allow me to illustrate the timeless truth through a more modern true story. Maria and her daughter Christina lived in a small, dusty, one-room house on the outskirts of a Brazilian village. It was a modest house; but, with little touches here and there, Maria made it a warm home. Maria's husband died when Christina was an infant; and, although Maria could have, she chose not to remarry. Her job as a maid provided just enough for her and Christina to survive. Besides, now that Christina was 15, she could help by getting a job.

Christina wanted nothing to do with that lifestyle, or the small village she had lived in all of her life. She wanted to go the big city and really experience life. Imagine her mother's horror when she awoke one morning to find Christina's bed empty.

Maria knew exactly where her daughter was and what needed to happen. Maria collected all the money she could and headed for the bus terminal. She made one stop before she boarded the bus. At the local drug store, she sat in the photo booth and took as many pictures as she could afford. Then it was off to the big city of Rio de Janeiro.

Maria thought of the many discussions she had had with Christina about the city — about the kind of work available and about how mean the streets and people were. Christina would not listen; she was going to prove her mother wrong. Maria cried as she got off the bus in the red light district of the city.

She knew what would happen when her daughter's money ran out and she was hungry. Maria knew Christina would not give up, but that when her pride met her hunger, she would do things unthinkable before.

Maria went to every place prostitutes hung out, every bar and sleazy hotel and in every one she put up a picture of herself after writing a note on the back of each one. Finally, with tears running down her face, she boarded the bus back to her small village, her money and pictures gone.

It was a few weeks later that Christina first saw the picture. It was on a mirror at the bottom of the stairs of another bad nightmare. Her good looks and youthful bounce were gone. A thousand times over she dreamed of trading the countless beds for her secure pallet back home. Yet it seemed as if the little village was too far away.

But, now, her eyes were looking at a familiar face. She reached for the picture of her mother as her throat tightened. And she read the compelling invitation on the back.

"Whatever you have done, whatever you have become, it doesn't matter; come home."

This is the same invitation God offers us today. May you hear his call!

World Food Day

Helping the hungry

By Jacqueline Feagin
USAIC Chaplains' Office

reflections

World Food Day will be observed Oct. 16. The observance is coordinated in the United States by the National Committee for World Food Day.

World Food Day is a worldwide event to increase the awareness and understanding of the long-term action of the scarcity of food world wide.

Sunday, the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine students will discuss world hunger and poverty in the United States.

The students will have a liturgy at the 9 a.m. Mass at the Main Post Catholic Chapel focusing on hunger around the world.

Students and parishioners are asked to bring canned goods or nonperishables for distribution to the poor and hungry. This year the food collected will be donated to the House of Mercy in Columbus.

Today we have millions of Americans who live below the poverty line. To add to the tragedy, they have no control over the economy that impoverishes them.

The primary victims are children, who have no control over the society they were born into.

Hunger is a real and devastating taker of human lives. Thousands die everyday because of it; others die in many lands to protect their rights to have basic human needs.

In our land, where there is plenty, it is hard for us to understand the devastation that takes place because of hunger.

On this day we will take time out to think of those who are hungry. Our help can make a difference in their lives.

Emmy-winning 'NYPD Blue' begins year 2

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

It's just about the last season premiere of the fall, and it's definitely one of the most eagerly awaited.

What: "NYPD Blue"
When: Tuesday on ABC

SPOTLIGHT

Much has happened with "NYPD Blue" since producer Steven Bochco's controversial, widely acclaimed ABC police drama ended its first year last spring.

It made Emmy history by landing 26 nominations, the most ever for any program in its first season; it enjoyed several wins, including that of Dennis Franz for his portrayal of gruff but vulnerable detective Andy Sipowicz; and it found itself preparing for the exit of David Caruso, who is slated to leave his role as Detective John Kelly after the fourth new episode of the 1994-95 slate (with "L.A. Law" alumnus Jimmy Smits then joining the cast).

Indeed, there will be considerable subtext as the show launches its second year Tuesday ... but for any and all changes, certain elements will remain familiar to "Blue" viewers.

Recovering alcoholic Sipowicz still will be trying to get his relationship with attorney Sylvia Costas (Sharon Lawrence) back on track, while Kelly will be preoccupied with the trial of ex-flame Janice Licalsi (Amy Brenneman), arrested after confessing to the killings of two mobsters who had wanted her to do away with Kelly.

Actress Brenneman reportedly will depart from the show several weeks into the new season, too, while Sherry Stringfield — who played Kelly's ex-wife Laura — already has moved on, now co-starring in the new NBC medical drama "ER."

Nicholas Turturro, Gail O'Grady, Gordon Clapp and James McDaniel are among other returning regulars. As year two of "Blue" begins, though, the unofficial man of the hour among the performers is the friendly and Emmy-honored Franz.

Maintaining that he remains "a team player" despite his recent win, which saw him chosen over the heavily favored Caruso for the award, the alumnus of Bochco's "Hill Street Blues" is happy to resume the on-camera life of Sipowicz after having filled his summer hiatus with two other projects (the NBC film "Moment of Truth: Caught in the Crossfire," which aired last month, and the ABC miniseries "Texas Justice").

"I really was looking forward to coming back and getting into the same work mode we were in before, and to making comparisons," says Franz, who claims to have no worries about "NYPD Blue" being Caruso-less soon.

"I know that Steven Bochco and (fellow executive producer) David Milch want to maintain the integrity of the show," he states, "and also that of the character of John Kelly. They don't want to sensationalize anything just to draw attention or take a cheap shot, so I'm sure it'll be in keeping with the rest of the show as it's always been."

Franklin D. Roosevelt State Park has an idea for those who want to get away from the hustle and bustle of the city.

The "City Slickers Overnight Trail Ride" is a horseback riding and camping experience ideal for families, groups of friends or business retreats.

Horse lovers of all ages and abilities can trade in their cars for the night to take this guided trail ride across Pine Mountain, sleep next to a roaring camp fire, eat breakfast under a sunrise, and head back home later in the morning. The overnight trail rides are available seven days a week.

Undersecretary visits Fort Benning, tours training areas, facilities

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Joe R. Reeder is the principal civilian assistant and deputy to the secretary of the Army.

The undersecretary of the Army visited Fort Benning Oct. 6, touring post facilities and training areas and talking with unit commanders and soldiers.

Joe. R. Reeder is the principal civilian assistant and deputy to the secretary of the Army and acts with the full authority of the secretary in general management of the Army.

As undersecretary, Reeder is responsible for long-range planning, materiel requirements and support to local, state and federal agencies related to civilian law enforcement, civil disturbance, disaster relief and emergency planning.

During his visit, Reeder watched basic trainees doing squad tactical training, fired a Bradley Fighting Vehicle with help from students in the Bradley Leader's Course, observed students in the Infantry Officer Advanced Course performing military operations on urbanized terrain and discussed human rights with faculty and students at the School of the Americas.

He also took a quality-of-life tour of the post, during which Reeder said he saw "the good, the bad and the ugly."

"We tried to give him a good cross section of what goes on at Fort Benning," said Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, commanding general.

Reeder was shown some of the older barracks here as well as the latest training, and now that he has "seen firsthand where the needs are," he said, he will be able to make better decisions about resource allocation.

Reeder, a U.S. Military Academy graduate who completed Airborne and Ranger schools here in the '70s and went on to serve with the 82nd Airborne Division, said he never ceases to be impressed with soldiers today.

Though he was proud of the soldiers he served with in the 82nd, he said, "They didn't light a candle to the soldiers I see today in terms of brains, equipment, leadership, motivation and all-around ability."

What most impressed him, Reeder said, was the candor of soldiers involved in an after-action review of some of the training he observed. It was a very open and effective training process, he said.

That candor, Reeder said, "is something that just did not exist back when I served."

There was a lot more "yes sir" and saluting going on back then, he said.

The results of that kind of candor in training, Reeder said, we saw in the Persian Gulf and we are seeing now in Haiti.

Soldiers today, he said, are "real professionals."

Engineers return from Haiti

586th soldiers accomplish their mission

By Ruth J. Spaller
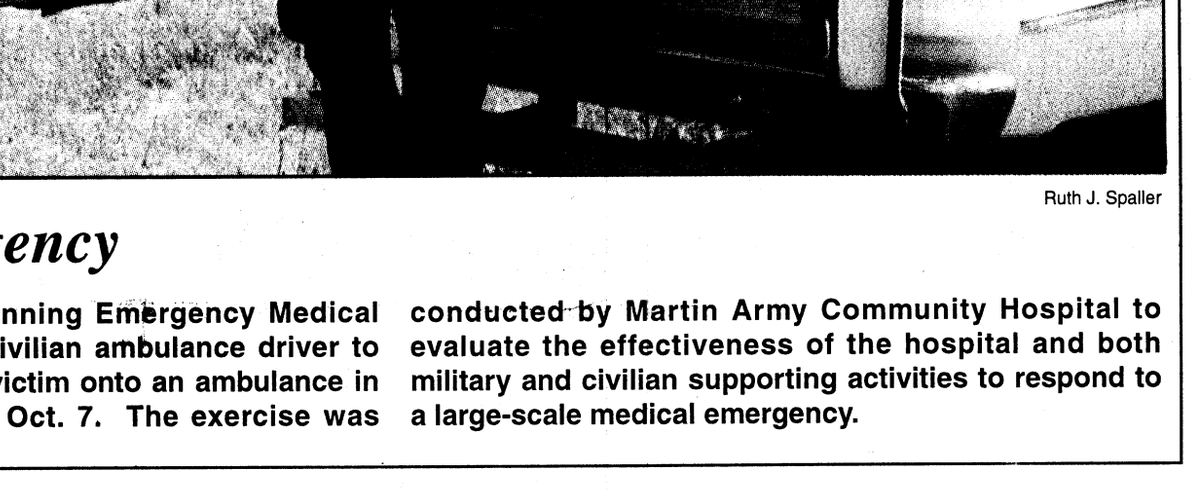
Bayonet staff writer

Twenty-nine soldiers from the 586th Engineer Company (Assault Float Bridge) returned home from Haiti Wednesday, leaving 14 to guard and return with the unit's equipment.



The engineers left for Haiti Sept. 29 and 30 to assist in Operation Uphold Democracy not knowing when they would return, but their short deployment was not an unsuccessful or uneventful one.

"Two weeks does not seem like a long time, unless you are eating MREs (meals, ready-to-eat) three times a day, going without showers and in harm's way," said Col. Dean A. Kershaw, commander of the 36th Engineer Group, who was at Lawson Army Airfield with Brig. Gen. John J. Maher III, deputy commanding general, to greet the returning troops.

"There was potential danger," said 1st Lt. Luis Fuentes, who led the group in Haiti. The engineers' main mission, he said, was to provide security and escort for night convoys of construction material from the port to the supply yard "Dragon Base" in Port-au-Prince.

The soldiers were trained and prepared for the threat of ambush, Fuentes said; and, on their first trip, a grenade was thrown at the head of the convoy.

Most of the 586th was farther back in the convoy and no soldiers were injured, Fuentes said, but five Haitians were killed and others wounded.

"We had to transport about 15 injured patients back to the light industrial park so they could receive first aid," Fuentes said.

Spc. Robert Deloach said he believed the environment was hostile as soon as they got off the airplane. "You could tell during the protests ... there was a lot of fighting," he said.

But when military leader Gen. Raoul Cedras stepped down, the mood changed, according to Fuentes.

"You could tell the difference because there were more people on the streets, more cars ... and the Haitians were actually trying to clean up the area of Port-au-Prince," Fuentes said.

Seeing the impoverishment of the people there — people bathing in the muddy streets and looking for food at the garbage dumps — really had an effect on him, Deloach said.

"Helping your fellow man" is what missions like these are about, he said.

The 174 members of the 988th Military Police Company, who deployed about the same time as the 586th, are still in Haiti.

The MPs have been working under the 519th Military Police Battalion, which is part of the 16th Military Police Brigade based at Fort Bragg, N.C., helping to control crowds and restore law and order in the capital.

Twenty-eight members of the 498th Medical Company (Air Ambulance) deployed to Haiti were scheduled to return Thursday.

VARIOUS VOICES

Two Army posts are now conducting coed basic training. Do you think this is a good idea?

Sgt. Alicia Wilson, 3rd Battalion, 32nd Infantry Regiment — "Yes and no. If they train together, they may be trying to mess with each other."

Sgt. Rickey Giles, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment — "Actually, people need to come to grips with the fact that the Army's integrated. Basic's as good a time as any."

1st Lt. Anne Morin, Reservist — "I think it's a good idea. We do coed training in ROTC, and you get a high standard of performance."

2nd Lt. Marc Wheeler, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment— "Having been to coed training as an MP (military police), I don't think it's a good idea."

Kris Holcombe, family member — "Not really. I was in the Army, and I wouldn't have wanted to go through basic with men."

Domestic violence

It is the most common, least reported crime in our nation

Directorate of Community Activities

Domestic violence occurs among all sectors of society. It happens to people of all racial, economic and religious groups.

In this country, a woman is more likely to be assaulted, injured, raped or killed by a male partner than by any other type of assailant.

Domestic violence is believed to be the most common, yet least reported crime in our nation. An estimated 3 to 4 million American women are beaten each year by their husbands or partners.

Domestic violence is indeed a serious national problem that affects not only individual victims, but the entire community as well.

October has been declared National Spouse Abuse Prevention Month to increase the community's awareness of domestic violence.

Do you know?

What effects does domestic violence have on children?

• In homes where domestic violence occurs, children are at high risk of suffering physical abuse themselves.

Regardless of whether children are physically abused, the emotional effects of witnessing domestic violence are very similar to the psychological trauma associated with being a victim of child abuse.

• Children may "indirectly" receive injuries when household items are thrown or weapons are used.

Infants may be injured if being held by their mother when the batterer strikes out.

• Children from violent homes have higher risks of alcohol or drug abuse and juvenile delinquency.

Possible signs of a batterer

• A batterer is often extremely jealous and possessive.

• A batterer's anger is frequently disproportionate to the problem that arises.

• The batterer's anger is often displaced and exaggerated, with the objects of violence often small animals and property as well as family members.

• The batterer often describes alcohol abuse as the cause of the battering.

• The batterer blames the battered women for the violence and for alcohol and other drug abuse.

• The batterer has ineffectively dealt with abuse as a child.

• The batterer has hit or been abusive with a partner in the past.

Possible signs of a battered woman

• She is frightened of her partner's temper.

• She is often compliant in order not to excite the batterer.

• She apologizes for her partner's behavior.

• She drinks heavily or uses other drugs to cope with the violent situation.

• She has visible bruises or other temporary or permanent injuries without appropriate explanation.

If you, or someone you know, is involved in a domestic violence situation, call for help. The violence rarely stops without outside intervention.

The Army Community Service Family Advocacy Office will have a display set up in Building 2643 during October with information on ways to prevent domestic violence and to strengthen relationships. Free T-shirts will be given out to promote awareness.

For more information, call Becky Welch, Family Advocacy Program manager, at 545-6969, 545-5516.

Chief of staff says be safe when working with duds

Recently a Fort Benning soldier was burned when he tried to ignite powder that had been emptied out of a "dud" grenade simulator. He did not recognize the danger involved.

Every year, soldiers are killed and injured because they mishandle simulators or duds they think are harmless.

When working with pyrotechnic simulators, soldiers should exercise the following precautions by:

• Wearing gloves, full helmet and combat boots when possible.

• Following specific instructions included with the simulator. Do not use simulators if instruction sheet is not available.

• Separating delayed fuse simulators from instantaneously detonated simulators.

• Inspecting to ensure no defective or altered items are present. Identify misfires or "duds" and report them through the chain of command. Any simulator that does not function should be returned to the Ammunition Supply Point.

• Ensuring all personnel remain a safe distance from the area in which simulators are being detonated.

• Removing dry grass and leaves around simulators before detonating.

• Never dismantling or modifying pyrotechnic simulators.

To prevent accidents and injuries, commanders should ensure soldiers receive adequate training in the proper handling of the particular simulator to be used. Since we must train as we will fight, commanders should also ensure simulators are treated as if they were the real thing.

Medical care better than rumored

I would like an opportunity to discredit all of the rumors that are floating around about military hospitals, Martin Army Community Hospital to be exact.

I recently left the hospital after an emergency surgery, and my stay was extremely pleasant.

When I was admitted, I was terrified not only because of my condition, but also because of the many bad things I had heard about the hospital.

As it turned out, they were all absolutely false. From the emergency room to the operating room to the recovery room and finally to my ward, Ward 8-B, everyone was kind and courteous.

They all expressed sincere concern as to my condition, and came to check on me often.

I felt as though I were in the best of hands, and I still feel that way.

I have told everyone I know that I had a great experience at Martin Army Community Hospital and would like for others who are hearing rumors to know that the staff and services are great!

I would like to say a special thanks to the following: Dr. Patrick Baldwin (Family Practice Clinic), Dr. Ruthann Rees and Dr. Richard Livingston (Obstetrics and Gynecology Clinic), Capt. Richard A. Sokoll, Capt. Gracie Manning and Sgt. April Cole (Operating Room), Karen Willie (Recovery Room), and all of the doctors, nurses and medical technicians of Ward 8-B.

I appreciate the care that was given to me, and I will be forever grateful.

DRMO auctions surplus property

By Jennifer Chapman
Special to The Bayonet©

Some of the best bargains in the area may be found at Fort Benning's Defense Reutilization and Marketing Office, Building 326.

The DRMO serves as a property disposal office and periodically auctions such items as military clothing, used military vehicles, and household items including refrigerators, stoves and furniture. DRMO workers also sell office furnishings including file cabinets, calculators, typewriters and computers.

The items are all surplus or unserviceable, according to Otis Denham, property disposal officer.

"We have some good property that goes through here at good prices," Denham said.

DRMO is a self-supporting office, Denham said, costing the U.S. government and taxpayers nothing.

All proceeds from the auctions are turned over to the U.S. Treasury to be appropriately redistributed, he said.

Denham coordinates an auction of surplus items every 30 days. The auctions are conducted by a trained and certified auctioneer, and anyone, military or civilian, is welcome to attend.

The next DRMO auction is scheduled for Nov. 17. People interested in seeing just what the DRMO is offering are welcome to stop by the DRMO up to three days before the sale to inspect the merchandise, according to Patsy Cline, administration officer.

The DRMO also maintains a catalog mailing list for prospective buyers who want a preview of items being offered in upcoming auctions.

To be placed on this mailing list, call Jim Moore or Dan Gibbs at 545-1205 or 545-1206.

Dental plan offers complete coverage

Delta Dental

The Uniformed Services Active Duty Dependents Dental Plan, better known as DDP, offers comprehensive dental coverage to the families of active duty service members.

Sponsored by the Department of Defense and your service branch, the plan was expanded in 1993 and is now comparable to group plans offered by civilian employers.

The plan covers crowns, bridges, dentures, braces, root canal treatment, gum surgery and extractions, as well as routine checkups, cleanings and fillings.

Each service branch pays 60 percent of the total premium amount, which makes your share of the cost $10 for one family member or $20 for two or more family members.

Also, members of the plan do not have to satisfy a deductible before being able to receive coverage.

The yearly maximum is $1,000 per patient for all covered services except orthodontics, which has a lifetime maximum of $1,200 per patient.

What is covered?

Most diagnostic and preventive services (checkups, x-rays, cleanings) are covered at 100 percent.

Sealants and basic restorative services such as fillings are covered at 80 percent.

Endodontics (root canals), periodontics (gum surgery) and oral surgery are covered at 60 percent and prosthodontics (crowns, bridges) at 50 percent.

Unlike many civilian group plans, the program covers orthodontics (braces) at 50 percent for family members through 18 years of age.

Choice of dentist

Under the plan, enrolled family members can make appointments with any licensed dentist they choose; there is no waiting for space-available care at installation clinics.

Since participating Delta dentists agree to preapproved fee schedules and submit claim forms for their patients, patients can save money, time and paperwork by going to one of the more than 115,500 Delta dentist offices nationwide.

The health benefits adviser at the Civilian Health and Medical Plan of the Uniformed Services office at Martin Army Community Hospital can help family members locate a Delta dentist in your area.

Enrollment is easy

To add your family to the more than 1.8 million family members currently enrolled in the plan, fill out Department of Defense Form 2494 at your installation personnel office.

Eligible family members must reside in the United States, Guam, Puerto Rico or the U.S. Virgin Islands and must participate in the plan for a minimum of 24 months.

The premium will be automatically deducted from your monthly paycheck and shown on your leave and earnings statement. Coverage is effective the first of the month after enrollment.

More questions?

See your health benefits adviser at Martin Army Community Hospital for additional information about how the dental plan can give your family access to comprehensive, affordable dental care. Or you can call a customer service representative at (810) 489-2240.

Post works to maintain environmental standards

Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning's brigade and battalion commanders, command sergeants major and directorate chiefs gathered Tuesday for briefings on the post's environmental programs and requirements.

In six sessions, post leaders were briefed on:

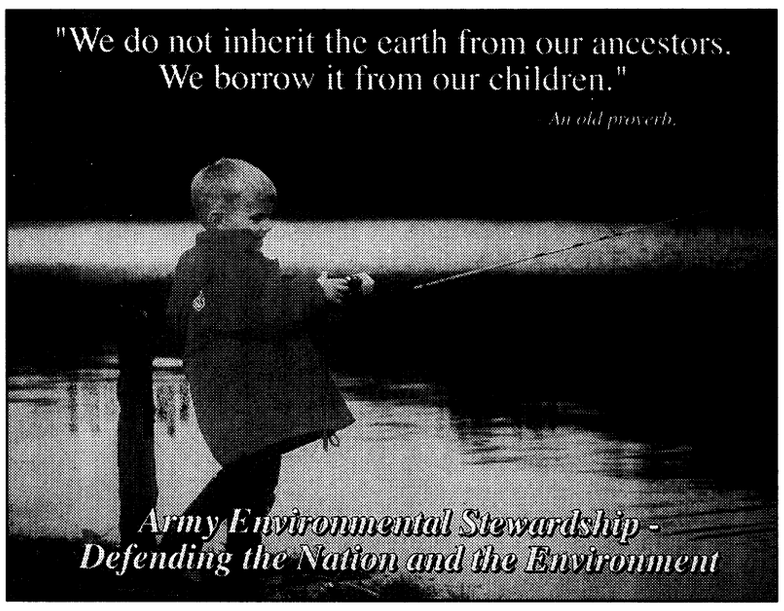
- Storage and management of hazardous wastes
- Spill contingency and cleanup
- Environmental inspections and regulators
- Jeopardy opinion on the red-cockaded woodpecker
- Preparation of hazardous waste and materials for Defense Reutilization and Marketing Office turn-in and transportation
- Environemtnal laws and the commander.

Tuesday's training reflected a new reality all branches of defense are dealing with — environmental concerns are here to stay. As pollution and hazardous waste regulations become more stringent, military installations are faced with the challenge of conducting training effectively while protecting the air, water, soil and endangered plants and animals.

According to Burrill McCoy, chief of the Environmental Management Branch, the four "pillars" of the Army environmental program are compliance, restoration, conservation and prevention. Since most state and federal regulations deal with the last three of these, he said, the Army's emphasis is on compliance with these regulations.

McCoy said besides federal regulations, including the Clean Air Act, the Safe Drinking Water Act and the Federal Facilities Compliance Act, there are also state and Army regulations to cover every area of environmental concern. Some of the major concerns at Fort Benning, he said, include:

- Handling, storage and disposal of hazardous and nonhazardous wastes, including oil, antifreeze and solvents, which are mostly used at the post's motor pools
- Testing for lead-based paint in older housing units. Although lead-based paint has not been manufactured since 1978, he said, it may still be present on the exteriors of some houses, where it can flake off into dust and be inhaled. Fort Benning, McCoy said, will be the test site for chemical treatments that are being developed to stabilize the lead in paint
- Testing of drinking water for metals, bacteria and other contaminants
- Protection of threatened or endangered species, including the red-cockaded woodpecker and gopher tortoise, and plants such as the relict trillium and sweet pitcherplant
- Protection of historic and cultural sites, including historic buildings and Native American burial sites
- Managing soil erosion and growth of vegetation.



"My office gets about 40 phone calls a day from the units, asking about hazardous waste disposal," McCoy said. "We send people out to the motor pools all the time to trainers in proper procedures."

McCoy said his office also conducts on-site inspections, to help prepare units for actual inspections, which may be done without warning by various state and federal agencies.

Staff Sgt. Dennis Thornton, environmental noncommissioned officer in charge for 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, coordinates environmental concerns for his unit.

"We work with the Directorate of Public Works and the people at Environmental Management to make sure we're doing what we're supposed to," he said.

Thornton said major jobs for 3rd Brigade soldiers include making sure vehicles have drip pans, so they don't contaminate the soil during exercises; testing materials like oil, solvents and antifreeze for metal contamination before they're turned in; and following the regulations that specify how the materials are to be contained, labeled and disposed of. "All of these things have to be accounted for," Thornton said. "The forms and procedures can get complicated for the soldiers in the motor pools to keep up with, so I'm here to help them out when they need it."

John Brent, chief of DPW's Environmental Division, said the environmental agencies on post work to help keep units in compliance with state and federal guidelines.

"The Natural Resources Management Branch has done a lot of work in identifying the habitats of the red-cockaded woodpecker and the gopher tortoise," he said.

Brent said the gopher tortoise take "significant effort" to locate, because they make burrows 30 to 40 feet long in deep, sandy soil.

Charles Ford, chief of the Natural Resources Management Branch, said branch employees have identified "clusters" of the red-cockaded woodpeckers, which tend to nest in small groups. The clusters have been mapped and the maps distributed to units, he said, so training can be planned to avoid the woodpecker sites.

"The maps have made it easier for trainers, and have reduced confusion about what activities can take place where," Ford said.

Brent said the Army's emphasis on compliance with environmental regulations will continue.

"We're under close scrutiny," he said. "The Department of Defense is expected to 'set the example,' and inspections are going to continue and keep getting tougher. Enforcement, by the EPA and other agencies, is very aggressive, and more and more they have the power to assess fines and penalties against the military — there's a stick out there now."

Brent said environmental appropriations have grown in proportion to the subject's increasing importance.

"There's been a significant increase in budgeting over the last several years," he said, "partly because with new regulations, we stand to lose a great deal of money in fines if we're not in compliance."

Bernie Pfeiffer, chief of Administrative Law for the Staff Judge Advocate's Office, emphasized the price of noncompliance at the officers' training Tuesday.

Most environmental laws, he said, carry civil and criminal penalties, so offenders may be subject to jail terms as well as fines.

Liability for violations, he said, is broken down into three types:

- Direct responsibility, or "you did it"
- Indirect responsibility, or "you knew about it;" and
- Responsible corporate officer, "you should have known about it."

According to these definitions of liability, Pfeiffer said, soldiers committing an environmental infraction would not be the only ones liable for the penalties. Each member of the soldiers' chain of command would be subject to punishment, as well.

Pfeiffer said avoiding liability is relatively simple. Military members, he said, must:

- Act in good faith
- Make compliance a priority
- Initiate internal mechanisms to recognize problems
- Be on good terms with regulators
- Conduct environmental training
- Check with post agencies when necessary
- Budget for compliance.

"Compliance costs money," Pfeiffer said, "but it's cheaper than correction."

EPA: Don't do the crime if you can't pay the fine

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Improperly managing waste and hazardous substances can lead to serious environmental and legal problems. But even a seemingly harmless violation of environmental law can still bring hefty fines.

Some of the most common violations found at Army installations under the 1992 Federal Facility Compliance Act include:

- Operating a waste facility without a permit
- Inadequate manifests for transportation of hazardous waste
- Improperly labeled containers
- No emergency contingency plans for the release of hazardous materials
- Inadequate training, or documentation of training, for people who handle hazardous waste
- Insufficient inspections
- Inadequate recordkeeping
- Violations of waste management safety practices.

The Environmental Protection Agency recently assessed $543,000 in fines against Schofield Barracks, Hawaii. Violations included failing to transport hazardous waste off-site within 90 days and failing to label waste properly. The post operates many motor pools and maintenance shops that generate waste paint, solvents and contaminated waste oils. The post has 30 days to respond to the EPA's findings.

The U.S. Army Garrison, Presidio of San Fransisco, Calif., is shutting down under the Base Realignment and Closure Commission. But it isn't immune from EPA inspectors, who recently proposed a penalty of $556,000 for violations.

Besides paying the penalty, the Army will have to inspect each Presidio building for wastes, and remove any stored wastes. The Presidio is required to correct the violations and bring the facilities into compliance within 30 days of citation.

The following are other examples of fines and penalties proposed by the EPA at Army installations in the past 18 months:

- EPA Region III assessed more than $2 million in fines against an Army installation for late filing of groundwater monitoring plans and failure to implement a mandated plan to keep the community informed of environmental cleanup efforts at the post.
- EPA Region VI assessed about $1.3 million against an installation in Texas. The post was cited for failure to maintain shipping manifests for hazardous materials, for storing hazardous waste in an above-ground tank without a permit or approval to store under "interim status," and for operating two hazardous-material treatment units without a permit or interim status.
- EPA Region VI also proposed $693,000 against another Texas post for open burning and open detonation of munitions from 1980 to 1987 without a permit. The Army is negotiating with the EPA, offering to pay a reduced amount and start a supplemental environmental project.
- The California Environmental Protection Agency issued an enforcement order assessing $42,000 against an installation for five violations, including a penalty for failure to install eyewash equipment and showers in an area where hazardous waste is handled.
- Indiana assessed $22,000 against a post for not taking measures to determine if a few pounds of shop rags should be managed as hazardous waste.

Coordinators will tailor ACS to unit needs

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Army Community Service is changing the way it does business to better meet the needs of the modern Army family.

ACS is now taking its services to individual post units with a program designed to prevent problems from happening before they occur.

"Our approach is now proactive rather than reactive," said Roy B. Burns, chief of ACS. "We want to prevent problems from occurring through education."

Each major command on post will be assigned an ACS representative, called a unit service coordinator, who will work within the unit to provide soldiers and their families with information on ACS programs.

Unit service coordinators will serve as points of contact for each unit to help commanders coordinate training classes and other services, he said.

"Our staff consists of trained professionals," Burns said. "Each coordinator has been briefed about the unique mission of his or her assigned unit so that programs can be specifically tailored to meet the needs of the soldiers in that unit."

> "Our approach is now proactive rather than reactive. We want to prevent problems from occurring through education."
> — Roy B. Burns
> Chief, Army Community Service

If a unit is experiencing a high number of soldiers bouncing checks, for example, the commander can coordinate with the USC to conduct classes on debt and checkbook management, Burns said. A unit that is frequently deployed may need more stress-management classes, he added.

Unit service coordinators will also have a wide range of knowledge about post services that fall outside the programs offered by ACS, he said. Coordinators will be able to confidently refer soldiers to the proper post agencies for help, Burns added.

According to Frances Howard, Exceptional Family Member Program coordinator, all post commanders, command sergeants major and first sergeants will be briefed on the ACS unit program. The next step, she said, will be to conduct a needs survey with each major command so that programs can be customized for each unit.

"The 36th Engineer Group has different concerns than the 75th Ranger Regiment," Howard said. "We want to tailor our programs to most effectively meet the needs of our soldiers and their families."

Burns said the new system should go far in increasing unit readiness by helping to prevent many of the problems soldiers and their families have when faced with deployment or relocation.

"This new way of doing business will reduce some of the frustrations that units have," he said. "Many times we get calls from people with problems who don't know where to find assistance. The USC program will give soldiers a name and a face of someone they can turn to when searching for answers.

"As the word gets out and awareness of the ACS services increases, we will have service members who are not only more knowledgeable, but who are also more self-reliant, stable and resilient," Burns said.

Free job search training available each Wed

Job Assistance Center

Job search training is essential in preparing soldiers for transition from the military into civilian life, according to Harold Ericksen, Job Assistance Center manager.

In most instances, soldiers have never searched for employment, having come into the military directly out of high school or college, he said.

"The job market today is extremely competitive and success depends on having a comprehensive understanding of the job search process and executing the process with great confidence and enthusiasm," Ericksen said.

This free training is provided by the Job Assistance Center. Each of the six counselors in the JAC have master's degrees in human resource related areas.

Also, they are certified counselors with human resource experience in both the public and private sectors.

Training begins with an eight-hour workshop conducted each Wednesday in Classroom 30, Infantry Hall, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., and is available for transitioning soldiers, spouses and Department of the Army civilians.

Reinforcement training is conducted through individual counseling in the Job Assistance Center using a variety of video, computer and library materials.

Ted Craig, Army Career and Alumni Transition Services manager, said he encourages all qualified individuals to participate in the JAC Job Search Training Program.

This program is designed to assist individuals in developing effective job search plans.

The training includes the following:

Personal assessment

• Identifying stress and using it to your advantage.

• Maximizing use of available time and money.

• Identifying transferrable skills.

Establishing job search objectives

Expanding opportunities

Networking

After completion of the workshop, individuals are assigned a career counselor at the JAC. Ericksen said he believes "individual career counseling is the cornerstone of the job search assistance."

For more information or to sign up for this training, call the Job Assistance Center at 545-2308 or 545-2309.

DoD releases family violence study

American Forces Information Service

The Department of Defense has released a study of the Family Advocacy Program and its services to victims of abuse. This study fulfills the requirement by Congress to report on disincentives to reporting child and spouse abuse.

"DoD is proud of its long-standing commitment to prevent and reduce family violence," Undersecretary of Defense Edwin Dorn said. "This study gave us an opportunity to determine how effective our programs are and how we can make them better.

"This study provided strong evidence of the value of transitional benefits to families where the active duty sponsor has been separated due to family abuse," he said.

DoD will implement transitional compensation for these families on Oct. 1, with coverage retroactive to April 1. Eligible family members can qualify for a maximum of three years' transitional support.

The study found that the overwhelming number of cases of spouse abuse reported in DoD are of mild to moderate severity

The study found that the overwhelming number of cases of spouse abuse reported in DoD are of mild to moderate severity.

Because spouse abuse cases come to the attention of the military when violence is less severe, the ability to prevent further abuse and the prognosis for rehabilitating the abuser is significantly improved.

"We feel this finding indicates that the military's efforts to intervene early in the cycle of violence are successful," Dorn said. The study revealed that most spouses who have been abused want help, not punishment, for their military spouse and that people are generally satisfied with the services they receive.

Other findings show there is a strong fear of reporting abuse out of concern for what the military may do to the active duty member. This fear appears to be based upon the wide discretion commanders have in their response to abuse. The study also found that though this fear is real, it is generally out of proportion to the reality of negative consequences for the military member.

Other findings indicate that there are limited treatment options for victims of abuse and that support services for victims are not well documented nor as available as services for the active duty abuser.

The study report notes that, "these findings raise concerns about the dilemmas confronting spouses of abusers in the military, but they also provide a basis for optimism about the potential to mitigate the negative consequences of reporting.

"DoD has significantly increased funding to the Family Advocacy Program increasing funding from $14.9 million in FY 1989 to $77.9 million in FY 1994. This is part of a steady effort to adequately resource the program," according to the report.

The study made recommendations that will assist DoD in program development. Under these recommendations, DoD will look to expand treatment options and improve service delivery to victims of abuse. Prevention programs will continue to be broadened.

"The benefits of this study will be an improved quality of life for all military families," Dorn said.

Copies of the study are available to news media, from Lt. Col. Doug Hart, in Room 2E765 of the Pentagon, (703) 695-0192. All other requests can contact DoD Public Correspondence at (703) 697-5737.

BACK TO THE WOODS

Hunting season to begin soon

Post officials urge hunting safety

Infantry Branch Safety Office

commentary

Cool weather is finally starting to make its way back into the South. Cooler weather also means that the hunting season has finally arrived.

Like any sport, hunting can be very rewarding and enjoyable — time to spend in the great outdoors and many stories to tell.

Hunting is enjoyed by millions of sportsman, but like one bad apple in a barrel, a few irresponsible hunters give a very bad public image to all hunters.

Some examples of their irresponsible behavior are poor firearm safety, ignorance of the laws and their consequences, or behavior that offends others.

Safe, responsible and knowledgeable firearm handling is the most important thing shooters and hunters must learn. Georgia Department of Natural Resource statistics show that firearm handling causes nearly 50 percent of all hunting accidents. Tree stand accidents account for the other 50 percent. Hunters being mistaken for game is the largest cause of accidents in turkey hunting. Safe firearms handling will eliminate most firearm accidents.

You are the most important factor in reducing firearm accidents. You can make a difference. Since hunter education was introduced by states and provinces, the firearm accident rate has been reduced in most of North America. Hunter education has reduced and will further decrease the number of firearm accidents.

The key to hunting or shooting safety is to always handle your firearm in a safe and responsible manner. To do this means you must:

• Always control the muzzle of your firearm, pointing it in a safe direction. Keep your finger off the trigger until you are ready to fire. Keep the action open when not actually hunting. Handle your firearm safely. Insist that all members of your hunting or shooting group handle their firearms safely. Real friends do not take chances with each other's lives.

• Treat each firearm as if it is loaded. Never accept a firearm from anyone else until you have checked personally to see that it is unloaded. For added safety, leave the action of a firearm open when it changes hands. "I didn't know it was loaded" is never an excuse for poor firearm handling.

• Be sure of your target and what is beyond it. A safe hunter never shoots at a flash of color, a sound or a shape in a tree. Responsible shooters fire only at what they want to hit. In most cases you must first identify the sex of the game before deciding to shoot. All responsible hunters are certain what is in the background, to ensure that people, buildings, livestock, vehicles or equipment cannot be hit.

There are no experts in firearm safety, just responsible firearm users who gain experience by following safe handling procedures. Human error is the cause of firearm accidents. Knowing this, we should always think about why, and not just how, accidents happen.

There should be no reason for hunters to be ignorant of local laws or hunting regulations. Yet, many people do not bother reading the state regulation, Fort Benning regulation, or circular, which is given to them free when they buy their post hunting permit.

It is all hunters' responsibility to make sure they and all hunters with them obey all laws.

Deer season dates

Hunting regulations change

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

For new and old hunters on the Fort Benning military reservation, there are some changes to the hunting regulations for the Georgia season.

For the bowhunter on Fort Benning, the hunting season began Sept. 17 and will end Oct. 21, the day before gun season.

On Oct. 22, the deer firearms season for Georgia will begin. A new wrinkle to the start of the season will be that only bucks can be harvested for the first week of the season. Oct. 29, either-sex hunting will start and continue until Nov. 27. From Nov. 28 through Dec. 25, bucks only will once again be in place. Dec. 26, either-sex hunting will resume and continue until the end of the season Jan. 8.

Active duty military hunters must remember that they can hunt the Alabama side of the reservation only when the hunting season for that area is open.

For example, the bowhunting season for Georgia opened Sept. 17, but the Alabama season doesn't open until Saturday. Active duty military cannot hunt on the Alabama side until then. Same with the gun season, which doesn't begin until Nov. 19, and ends Jan. 14. Either-sex hunting for the Alabama side doesn't start until Dec. 26, and runs through the end of the season. If you are an active duty soldier and have a Georgia license, you must stop hunting when the season ends Jan. 8.

For more information on the hunting regulations on Fort Benning, refer to the U.S. Army Infantry Center hunting regulation 210-2. Hunters can get the regulation at the Outdoor Recreation Office while getting their post hunting permit and license.

Fall harvest: It's deer hunting time again

By Pete Swiderek
Natural Resources Management

commentary

Lately, I've been noticing the days are getting shorter. Black gum and sweet gum leaves are turning various shades of purple. Persimmons are turning orange—looks like a bumper crop this year.

I seem to be walking around with a little more vigor in my step. I have a slight grin on my face and whistle a lot. Yes, the hint of fall is in the air. It won't be much longer before the dog days of summer will be replaced by the cool, crisp days of fall.

Yes — it's here! The time for football games, glorious colors, leaf looking, and of course, the fall harvest. It's time to combine corn, pick apples and go deer hunting.

Everything's better in the fall, from weather to my health. September is good, October is better, but November is fantastic! I often think of those days in November as golden days; it just doesn't get any better.

I remember one particular Thanksgiving morning. The day came clear, crisp and breezy. Leaves of every color and shape swirled all around me. A squirrel scurried up the tree next to me looking for just one more nut.

High up in my deer stand, I felt like part of the forest. Several hours of waiting and then a quick movement to my right. A doe came running down the deer trail and came directly under my deer stand and was gone in a flash. I knew something was up.

Several minutes passed and then I heard footsteps coming up the hill from below me. I looked behind and spotted a six-point buck moving at a fast trot. The doe was undoubtedly in heat and the buck was moving with a purpose. But it was not to be.

In what seemed like a millisecond, I raised my rifle and fired. Instead of climbing down out of the tree, I sat there for about 30 minutes admiring my buck, the fine weather and the beauty of the woods.

My father would be coming shortly. He would shake my hand and congratulate me and then we would drag the deer to the truck.

On the way home I would tell him about what had happened at least 10 times, remembering the smallest of details. Once we got home, Mom would come out and say, "Oh, what a nice, fat one."

After that we would hang the deer in the backyard and get ready for the Thanksgiving Day feast that Mom had been preparing for the last four hours. As I sat there, I thought how much I had to be thankful for.

• So, at the beginning of another hunting season, each hunter remembers some special moments afield and reflects on what the days ahead will bring.

Remember too, that hunting is a privilege that can be taken away.

Set the example — follow safety guidelines, obey hunting regulations, and abide by fair chase standards.

A great American tradition is at stake. Just like combining corn and picking apples, let's keep hunting an annual event. The fall harvest wouldn't be complete without it.

Cruise-matics cruise to 60-14 win

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

With the win, the Cruise-matics jumped to 3-2 after opening the season with four matches on the road.

The Columbus and Fort Benning Rugby Football Club, the Cruise-matics, tarnished the Montgomery Rugby Football Club Yellowhammers 60-14 for the first home game of the season.

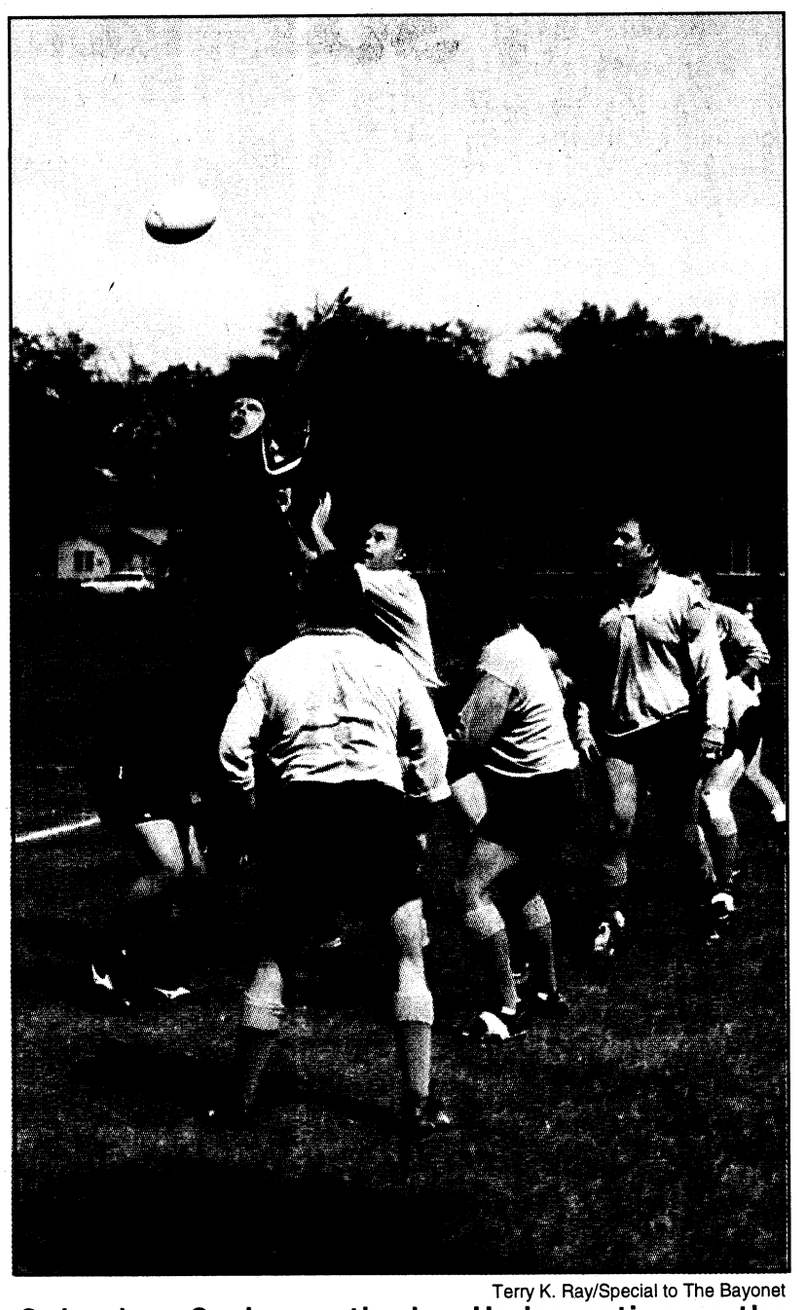
The Cruise-matics went on a scoring rampage from the opening kickoff. Minutes into the contest, fly half Tim Butterfield gave the Cruisers their first lead of the afternoon at 7-0.

Midway through the half, eight man Kevin Hyneman pushed the lead to 12-0 with his first try of the match.

Hyneman scored again moments later after the Cruise-matics took the ball away from the Yellowhammers and moved the ball smoothly toward the try zone and a 17-0 lead.

With less than six minutes left in the first half, Hyneman hit the hat trick with his third straight try of the half and a Cruise-matic lead of 22-0.

The Yellowhammers pounded out two scores late in the half to cut the Cruise-matic lead to 22-14 at the break.



It was all the Cruise-matics in the second half of play. Larry Perino, subbing for Butterfield at the fly half position, crossed into the try zone for the first points of the second half pushing the Cruise-matic lead to 27-14.

As quick as an eye blink the Cruise-matics scored again. This time fullback Josh Scherrey took a pass from Rich Hunt off the kickoff and rambled into the try zone for a 34-14 advantage.

Hunt added the next two tries of the game, giving the Cruise-matics an insurmountable lead at 46-14. Paul Oates added insult to injury with a try of his own late in the contest, pushing the lead to 53-14. Perino capped the scoring with his second try of the match.

With the win, the Cruise-matics jumped to 3-2 after opening the season with four matches on the road.

The next home match will be Oct. 22 at Stilwell Field against Okaloosa Rugby Football Club of Pensacola, Fla., at 2 p.m.

The Chattahoochee Valley Sport Shooting Club, in conjunction with the Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club, hosted an International Practical Shooting Confederation match Sunday at English Range.

The U.S. Practical Shooting Association is the U.S. representative for the IPSC and sanctioned the match.

"Shoot and move is the basic strategy for an IPSC match," said coordinator Darryl Powell. "One of the fastest-growing sports in the country, it involves the shooter having to move to engage a target or the target moving toward the shooter, making the shooter think which target should be dealt with first."

Thirty shooters registered for the match but only 27 participated.

Anyone wanting to find out more about USPSA or the Chattahoochee Valley Shooting Club can contact Powell at (205) 297-8748 or Robert Falco at (706) 989-0142. The next match is scheduled for Nov. 13.

ITB wins, loses

By Shelby Carr
Infantry Training Brigade

Infantry Training Brigade's Rock Steady beat the Patriots 14-6 Tuesday night. The game began with a 35-yard run and ended with three players being thrown out of the game.

The Rock Steady team moved the ball 45 yards in three plays before Michael Fowler, the Rock Steady quarterback, fooled the defense by faking a pass and charging across the goal line to take the lead. The extra point was missed.

The Patriots' drive to tie the game included three plays and four penalties against the Rock Steady defense, and it moved the ball to the Rock Steady 10-yard line. Pressure by the Patriot's defense forced an interception by David Beachman.

Beachman returned the interception for a touchdown and after the two-point conversion, a 14 to 0 lead.

A halfback option play allowed the Patriots to get on the scoreboard at the end of the first half when Steve Terrell caught the ball in the end zone, but the Patriots were unable to convert the extra point.

The rain and a strong defensive effort let the Patriots hold back the Rock Steady offense throughout the second half of the game.

On the Patriot's last drive, Michael Lindsey, the Patriot quarterback, threw a completion to his wide receiver close to the sideline. A block by one of the Patriots upset a Rock Steady player, and a shouting-and-pushing match began.

Both players were ejected from the game, and the Patriots tried one more time to move the ball down the field.

The last play of the game, Lindsey threw his second interception of the game to Beachman, who was then tackled as he was running for the end zone. The tackler was then ejected from the game, leaving the Patriots short two starters and eight points, as Rock Steady took the victory 14 to 6.

In other action 3rd Battalion, 32nd Infantry Regiment, beat Headquarter and Service Company, Infantry Training Brigade by a score of 20 to 0.

Saudi officers study Bradley tactics at Infantry School

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

The Middle East came West Sept. 6 when 25 officers from the Saudi Arabian Royal Land Forces arrived at Fort Benning to learn Bradley Fighting Vehicle tactics.

The course is called the Saudi Arabian Bradley Tactical Training Program and is being taught by Team Four, Tactics Division, Combined Arms and Tactics Division of the U.S. Army Infantry School.

The information the soldiers are learning will help develop their units back in Saudi Arabia, said Lt. Col. Abdullah Al-Gahtani, officer in charge of the delegation here.

"(We) want to establish a corps of Bradley-trained Saudi officers who can take these techniques to the Saudi Infantry School and eventually establish their own program of instruction," said Lt. Col. Eric T. Olson, chief of Tactics Division.

The overall mission of the course is to train the officers in Bradley platoon, company and battalion tactics in order to provide the Saudi Arabian Royal Land Forces Infantry School with tactically proficient instructors, said Capt. Scott E. Rutter, team chief, Team Four, Tactics Division.

The seven-week course includes classroom instruction and simulation and field exercises.

Capt. Anthony P. Rodriguez, small-group instructor for the Tactics Division, who normally teaches the Infantry Officer Advanced Course, teaches the officers, both in the classroom and in the field, about U.S. Army doctrine, he said.

"Doctrine is our approach to warfighting as clearly described in Field Manual 100-5," Rodriguez said.

After learning about U.S doctrine, the Saudi Arabians practiced what they had learned using a simulator.

The CATD Simulation Network, a computer-simulated battlefield in which multiple vehicles can maneuver at the same time, allowed the Saudi Arabian students to use their classroom study and act as if they were members of Bradley platoons.

During the two days spent at SIMNET, the officers learned about the employment of Bradleys in a platoon-level defense, said Staff Sgt. Ernie L. Gray, instructor for the Bradley Leadership Course.

"They executed a Bradley platoon mission," said Sgt. 1st Class Todd B. Hunter, noncommissioned officer in charge of the training program.

Hunter said the simulated mission had a desert-based scenario and included receiving operation orders, executing a tactical road march, reporting procedures, land navigation and the uploading of the Bradley weapon systems.

"Things here are new and (we've) come here to see that," Al-Gahtani said.

Everything from the SIMNET except the desert-based training scenario was used during the field training exercise, Hunter said.

The field training was conducted Oct. 4 through 7 at Rowan Hill training area.

The first two days of the FTX were spent preparing the Bradleys and themselves for an attack from an opposing force, Rodriguez said.

The attack they had prepared for came during the early morning of the third day of their FTX. The student platoon was successful in defending its perimeter, Rutter said.

The next morning, the Saudi Arabian student platoon attacked the same opposing force and accomplished its mission, he said.

After each operation, Rodriguez and Capt. Dave Blain, also an instructor with Team Four, conducted after-action reviews during which the students and instructors discussed lessons learned, Rodriguez said.

Various units on post helped the Saudi Arabians conduct their field training exercise, Rutter said.

Those units were Company C, 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment; the 63rd Engineer Company; Company D, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment; the 689th Medical Company; the 317th Engineer Battalion and the 36th Engineer Group.

In the coming weeks, the student officers will have classes covering company and battalion level Bradley tactics.

"We have gotten some good information in our class from Capt. Rodriguez, and it will be better in the coming days," said Capt. Tariq Al-Sarhan, who is one of the student officers taking part in the course.

The Saudi Arabians will finish their course Oct. 27 and graduate Nov. 3. The graduation ceremony is tentatively scheduled to be at the Officers' Club at 7 p.m.

SOA students become commandos

By Judith Ginder
School of the Americas

The U.S. Army School of the Americas' Commando Course began Oct. 1.

The Commando Course is comparable to the Ranger School with the exception of the desert training.

"There isn't really a need for a desert phase in this course because of the geographic position of the countries that send soldiers to be trained," said Capt. Joseph E. Osborne, special operations training officer.

During the first week of the course, the applicants complete the requirements needed for course enlistment.

According to Osborne, applicants:

Must be able to swim 15 meters in battle dress uniforms with rifle, boots and LCE.

Must walk off a three-meter diving board, blindfolded, with rifle and load carrying equipment.

Must meet the following physical requirements:

- Sixty-two sit-ups
- Two-mile run in less than 14:54 minutes
- Six chin-ups
- Eight-mile road march (in full gear) in less than two hours.

Osborne also said that it is helpful if the applicants are airborne qualified.

If, by the end of the first week, the applicant cannot meet any of the course prerequisites, the applicant will then be dropped from the course, Osborne said.

There are three phases in the Commando Course: the Benning phase, the mountain phase and the Florida phase.

During the Benning phase, the students prepare their body and mind for the challenges that lie ahead of them. Staff Sgt. Victor Felipe, special operations instructor, said he believes the Benning phase is the most difficult.

"During the Benning phase, the students are really put to the individual test of endurance — long hours, hard training.

"But, this is the fun stuff," Felipe said.

Students from the School the Americas prepare for an airborne exercise.

One of the "fun" things that the students do is rappel. — first from a 30-foot tower, then a 60-foot tower and finally out of a helicopter hovering approximately 90 feet in the air.

The students rappel from the 30-foot tower going down the wall and by free rappeling. Felipe said that if they are ready after the second time, they then go on to the 60-foot wall.

He said a lot of times you can tell just by looking into their eyes.

"If they look kind of scared, I'll have them do the 30-foot rappel one more time," he said.

Next, the Commando Course will move to Dahlonega, Ga., for the mountain phase of training.

world war II

50 years ago this week ...

• Greek and British troops liberated Athens after converging by sea and air on the city, which the Germans had held since April 1941. During the German occupation, the Soviet Union supported the Greek Communist guerrillas, who were aligned against insurgents backed by the British. As the Germans retreated from Greece, a bloody civil war ravaged the war-weakened country. To strengthen their hold on the country, the Communist-led guerrillas wiped out opposition by killing thousands of Greeks for alleged wartime collaboration. By the time the entire country was liberated, British troops were fighting Communist-backed Greeks.

• Suspected of complicity in the July 20th plot against Adolf Hitler, Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, the famous "Desert Fox" of the German Africa Corps, was visited at home by two of Hitler's staff. He was given the choice of a humiliating public trial or a suicide by poison with a state funeral and a guarantee of immunity from persecution for his wife and family. Rommel decided to commit suicide and it was announced in Germany that he had died of wounds.

• In the Pacific theater, Japanese soldiers reportedly killed the entire Chinese garrison in capturing Kweiping in southern Kwangsi Province. In the Philippines, the U.S. Navy began preliminary air attacks and fleet movements in preparation for the landings on Leyte Island. The small islands of Suluan and Dinagat at the entrance to Leyte Gulf were occupied by U.S. rangers. Elsewhere, the largest number of B-29 bombers ever used in a single raid struck Okayama on Formosa.

Warfare training center restructures

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — The Northern Warfare Training Center at Fort Greely, Alaska, will be realigned and reorganized because of budget constraints, Army officials announced recently.

The center, operated by the Army at an annual cost of about $2.7 million, trained about 1,400 students yearly in basic mountaineering and mountain leader development courses during both the winter and summer seasons.

The NWTC was transferred from the control of the U.S. Army Forces Command in Atlanta to U.S. Army Pacific, headquartered at Fort Shafter, Hawaii, Oct. 1.

The realignment will reduce the number of personnel at the center by more than half.

The center's mission will focus on training soldiers assigned primarily to U.S. Army Alaska and other USARPAC units, rather than FORSCOM units.

The center will also participate in the USARPAC expanded Asian-Pacific nations relations program, officials said.

Mountaineering and cold weather training for units based in the continental United States will be conducted by the Army National Guard Mountain Warfare School at Ethen Allen Firing Range, Vt.

The center's Army Military Mountaineering Team will remain at Fort Greely as a platoon-sized cadre of about 30 soldiers, responsible for performing high-altitude search and rescue missions.

The team will also reactivate the center's facilities if additional training requirements are later identified.

crime watch

Military Police Activity

This week's hot topic is reporting a crime in progress. In many instances, there is no way to stop a crime from occurring. There are, however, measures that can be taken to help deter criminal activity.

Employees and residents of Fort Benning can help "Give Crime Arrest" by maintaining proper information about their personal property and by keeping a watchful eye out for criminal activity.

There have been several larcenies on Fort Benning recently in which the victims had no serial numbers or photographs of the stolen items. This makes catching the suspects extremely difficult for the investigating officer.

In most larcenies (especially break-ins) the subjects are stealing the items for one reason — they intend to steal it from you and sell it to someone else. In some cases, the thief actually cruises the post looking for special items (usually stereo equipment) to steal because someone has made themselves an easy target.

Marking your property with your Social Security number or initials and maintaining a copy of the serial numbers makes it difficult to sell stolen items. If the item has no serial number, take a picture of it and keep the photograph on hand.

Reporting suspicious vehicles (license numbers if possible) and their occupants to the Military Police desk sergeant at 545-5222 will increase the chances of catching these individuals, possibly stopping them from making you or someone you know their next victim.

The following entries were taken from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from Sept. 29 to Oct. 4. Such entries do not determine the guilt or innocence of any person.

• A sergeant was charged by the Randolph County Police Department for possession of a dangerous weapon, carrying a concealed weapon and speeding. The sergeant was observed traveling north on Highway 27 at an excessive rate of speed, 98 mph in a 55-mph zone. He was stopped, and eight artillery simulators and one 9mm pistol was found during the search of his vehicle. The sergeant was arrested and transported to Randolph County Jail pending court.

• A staff sergeant was charged by the Columbus Police Department for speeding and driving under the influence of alcohol. He was traveling 93 mph in a 55-mph zone. The officer who stopped him smelled alcohol.

He was administered a field sobriety test, was arrested and transported to the Muscogee County Jail where he was given a breathalyzer test with a result of .10 percent of alcohol. The sergeant was processed pending released to his unit.

• A private was charged with housebreaking, larceny of private property and false swearing. He unlawfully entered a barracks room through an unsecured window and stole a diamond ring and keys to a car. He then drove the vehicle to Florida. Upon returning to Fort Benning, he was apprehended, processed and released to his unit.

Other activities included five cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, 16 traffic accidents, 19 cases of larcenies and two cases of shoplifting reported at the exchange facilities.

Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best — Give Crime Arrest." Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police at 545-5222 or 545-5224 or the "Crime In Progress" line at 545-5222.

Do some shopping to get fair deal on auto repairs

Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Sooner or later, any car needs at least routine repairs. For many people, finding good, fairly-priced service is a gamble, but there are some precautions that can help you get a fair deal.

According to the Better Business Bureau, some guidelines for car repair are:

• Read the manual — If something seems to be wrong with your car, first read the owner's manual. What might have appeared to be a major problem may be something you can correct yourself. Along with telling you the regular maintenance schedule, the manual will help you troubleshoot some common problems. If you don't have a manual, ask your dealer where you can get one.

• Check the warranty — Next, determine if your car is still under warranty. If it is, you must follow the manufacturer's requirements to keep the warranty in effect for the full term.

When repair work is done under warranty, it almost always must be done at an authorized dealership's service center. If there is no authorized dealership near you, call the manufacturer's nearest regional office for guidance.

• Shop around — If you can't fix the problem yourself and your car isn't under warranty, you may want to shop around for the best repair deal.

Depending on the type of work, you can have the work done at a service station or a more specialized repair shop. Work that can be handled by most service stations includes:

- Tuneup
- Oil change
- Lubrication.

Repair jobs that are more complicated should be handled by a specialist. Qualified mechanics can be found at auto dealership, some service stations, specialty shops or department store auto shops. Complicated repairs include:

- Front-end alignment
- Muffler replacement
- Major brake work
- Transmission repairs.

On-post repair facilities

Several routine maintenance and repair services are available at the service station at the Main Mall. Products and services include: tires, batteries, oil changes and other minor repairs.

The main post gas station offers the same services, and the Car Care Center next to it offers a full line of auto parts.

There are two Auto Crafts facilities on post, one on Kelley Hill and one on Main Post. They offer lift facilities, tools and instructional videos for people wishing to repair their own vehicles. Some repair services, including those funded by Army Emergency Relief grants and loans, can be performed by the staff of the centers, usually for less money than many civilian facilities charge.

For more information on the post Auto Crafts shops, call the Main Post shop at 545-2337 or the Kelley Hill shop at 544-3101.

Off-post — before repairs

It's important to check out a mechanic's credentials before work is done. The National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence has a voluntary certification program for eight categories of repair. If the mechanic isn't NAISE-certified, ask what other certification program he or she has completed.

Before any work is done, give the mechanic:

- A list of problems you're having with the car
- Your name and daytime phone number

Tell the mechanic you want an estimate listing costs of parts and labor before any work is done, and have the service manager write on the bottom of the repair order, "Make no repairs or replacements without owner's authorization."

If you're unhappy with a mechanic's diagnosis or repair estimate, remember that you can take your car somewhere else for a second opinion.

Protect yourself. To keep your car in good working order:

- Spend some time finding a good repair shop
- Make sure your car is in good condition before you start out on a trip.
- If your car starts to sound or operate strangely, don't just hope the problem will go away by itself. Take your car to be checked out while it's still running. If you are suspicious about a diagnosis, you'll still have time to take your car somewhere else.

If you feel you have not received competent or honest service, complain to the service manager, and, if necessary, to the owner of the repair facility.

If you do not receive satisfaction, contact the local Better Business Bureau where your car is serviced, the state attorney general's office or the office of the Staff Judge Advocate.

Buying a car? Do your homework

TIC Federal Credit Union

This month, new 1995 cars and trucks will be hitting dealerships throughout the country. Not far behind will be thousands of consumers looking for a great deal on remaining 1994 stock, and with auto sales down somewhat from a year ago, they just might find it.

But buying a car still ranks just ahead of visiting the dentist on the list of most fun things to do.

The car business is based on not giving the consumer time to compare prices, say many consumer advocates. They agree that taking your time and doing your homework are essential to getting a really good deal.

Start by finding out how much dealers actually pay for the models that interest you. As a rule, dealers expect to make about 5 or 6 percent profit over the invoice.

Dealers use about eight other profit centers to increase their profit on the vehicle, including fees, insurance, warranties and add-ons such as fabric protector and undercoating. Mark-up on dealer add-ons ranges from 50 to 1,000 percent. But if you have all the facts up front, you can drive a hard bargain and get a car for about 3 to 5 percent over invoice.

Many financial institutions now provide pricing on new vehicles, including the dealer cost of any options. Assuming you've decided to buy, the following step-by-step strategies will help you make a fair deal.

✔ Separate your transactions. Trading in or selling an old car is one deal. Financing is another. And negotiating the new car price is another. If you try to negotiate one or more of these transactions at once, you'll probably end up paying too much for the new car or getting too little for your trade-in.

✔ If you trade in a vehicle, get prices on it from several sources ahead of time. You may even choose to sell it yourself. Even though that's a little more bother, you'll probably get more for the car than if you traded it in.

✔ Get a preapproved loan from your financial institution ahead of time. That way, you'll have one less worry on your mind, and you'll be sure to have a car you can afford. Dealers and automakers trumpet their cut-rate financing, but their lowest rates are usually for loans that must be repaid in 18 to 24 months.

✔ Separate your emotions from the car-buying process. Otherwise, you could end up with a car you love, but can't afford.

✔ Don't buy on the first visit. Some dealerships use high-pressure tactics to induce you to buy on the spot. But you'll make better decisions if you've had time to think things through and shop around.

✔ Make as large a down payment as you can. Reducing the amount you finance will lower the total cost of the car.

✔ Finally, insist on being treated with respect. If you are uncomfortable or feel pressured, leave. There are plenty of other dealerships that will be more than happy to negotiate your way.

With the high price of new cars these days, the idea of stretching out the payments or putting down a minimum down payment may sound appealing, but that may end up hurting you rather than helping you.

Instead, save your money and make a larger down payment. That way, you'll still have affordable payments. (To make saving easier, have your employer deposit all or most of your paycheck into your savings or checking account.)

Finally, keep the term of your car loan as short as possible. Car buyers who finance vehicles for five or more years not only pay more in interest, but also may end up owing more on the old car than it's worth as a trade-in.

To minimize your monthly payments and keep the term of the loan short, save at least 20 percent of the price of the new car, and finance it for two to three years.

How much car can you afford?

Before you set foot on a dealer's lot, you need to decide ahead of time just how much you can afford to spend on a new car. This table shows you how much your monthly payment would be for a $16,000 loan, plus the finance charge (APR=annual percentage rate). You need to take both into consideration.

| | 6% APR | 7%APR | 8% APR |
|---|---|---|---|
| 4 years | | | |
| Monthly payment | $375.76 | $383.14 | $390.61 |
| Finance charge | $2,036.50 | $2,390.72 | $2,749.12 |
| Total cost | $18,036.50 | $18,390.72 | $18,749.12 |
| 5 years | | | |
| Monthly payment | $309.32 | $316.82 | $324.42 |
| Finance charge | $2,559.49 | $3,009.15 | $2,465.34 |
| Total cost | $18,559.49 | $19,009.15 | $19,465.34 |

Students sample foods in novel

Middle schoolers get literal taste of Great Depression

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet©

Students in Alice Martin's sixth- grade literature class don't just read a novel; they experience some of it.

As part of the study of "Queenie Peavy," the Faith middle schoolers got a literal taste of the Great Depression of the 1930s as they sampled staples from the main character's diet: sow belly and hand-rolled biscuits filled with sorghum syrup, which is similar to molasses.

While discussing the novel and its rural Georgia setting, students learned that the fictional Queenie wasn't alone in her struggle with deep poverty; many Southerners existed on a limited diet of sorghum syrup, biscuits and sow belly during the Great Depression.

The majority of the students had never tasted sorghum; and, as Martin recounted her own first-hand accounts of watching the sorghum-making process, their curiosity grew, she said.

Martin said she enjoyed plenty of sorghum as a child since her grandfather ran a sorghum mill and yearly harvested, ground and boiled the special cane, transforming it into thick, dark syrup.

To tie Southern traditions into literature while giving students some hands-on learning, Martin obtained home-made sorghum and Jan Smith, dietician at Faith, baked biscuits and prepared sow belly, a salty meat similar to bacon.

The students then spent literature class discussing the sorghum-making process and sampling the traditional Southern staple the way Queenie did; each student used a thumb to fashion a well in the top of the biscuit, then filled the hole with sorghum.

Reactions to the sorghum seemed universally positive, with many students commenting on the heavy, candied taste of the dark brown syrup.

"It's sweeter than I thought it would be," said one student, while another commented, "It's kind of like honey."

Students were divided in their opinions of the sow belly, with some pronouncing the small bit of pork "good," while others commenting "too salty."

Chad Register, who was among those sampling for the first time, said he enjoyed the tasting but "felt sorry for the people who only had this to eat. They couldn't afford anything else.

"The Depression was very hard for them," he said.

Mary Yancey agreed the Depression was difficult for many people, some of whom suffered from anemia because of poor diets, she said.

She also learned that some problems of adolescents are universal and transcend time. "Queenie was having trouble with a classmate," Yancy said. " She had to learn how to deal with it."

Although Queenie still struggled with poverty, an absent father and taunting classmates, she learned how to help herself and get help from others, Yancey said.

"Her principal talked to her and helped her," she said.

As they continue their literature studies, students said their first-hand taste of the Great Depression has left them with a better understanding of the difficulties Americans faced during that time in the nation's history.

Martin said she will continue studies relating to the Robert Burch novel and the depression era as students explore Franklin D. Roosevelt's economic recovery plan, the New Deal.

SOA hosts outing at Uchee Creek

By Judith Ginder
School of the Americas

The School of the Americas conducted its annual organizational day Sept. 30 at the Uchee Creek Recreation Area.

"The organizational day is a great way for the entire unit community to get together as one family and enjoy the activities that are a part of the day," said 1st Sgt. Rafael Colondres, coordinator of the event.

Colondres said not only cadre and their family members attended, but also SOA civilian employees and their family members as well as the Latin American students of the school.

The day began with a briefing of the day's events. Basketball, volleyball, softball and tug-of-war were in store for the sportsminded individuals. Also, boat rides along the Chattahoochee River were available for everyone attending.

Headquarters and Headquarters Company won the volleyball tournament while Company A captured all of the other events.

There were several tents set up around the area with tables and chairs inside them. People who chose not to participate in the sporting events sat under the tents talking and joking with friends. Some people just sat in the grass and enjoyed the sunny, warm weather.

A large, inflatable castle was set up for the children in a grassy area close to the other activities. The children crowded the inside of the castle, bouncing all around and singing songs as they played.

A dunking booth was also set up in the area. Guests tried their luck attempting to dunk various officers and senior noncommissioned officers from the unit.

Lunch was served from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., with barbecued chicken, hamburgers and hot dogs.

"It's good for everyone to have the chance to step away from the daily routine and do something different," Colondres said.

All in all, Colondres said, he thought everyone had a great time at the event.

Christmas helpers busy

By Brett Chamberlain
29th Infantry Regiment

> "No soldier's child should wake up Christmas morning without toys under the tree."
> — Kathy Sykes
> Acting chairwoman, Santa's Castle

Replacing a youngster's disappointment with a smile on Christmas morning — that's the mission of Santa's Castle.

Established in 1986 as a private, nonprofit, all-volunteer organization to help ensure that all Fort Benning children have that Christmas smile, Santa's Castle is a bustle of activity in preparation for the upcoming holiday season.

According to Kathy Sykes, acting chairwoman for Santa's Castle, nearly 1,100 children received close to 7,000 toys last year, an increase from the year before, part of a trend that she expects to continue. And with this trend comes a need for more donations and more volunteers to staff the Castle.

For families to be eligible to receive toys from Santa's Castle, they must be referred by their commander, first sergeant, chaplain, or Army Community Service, Sykes said.

Sykes suggested commanders and first sergeants take a close look at their soldiers to make sure that no one who can take advantage of the service misses out.

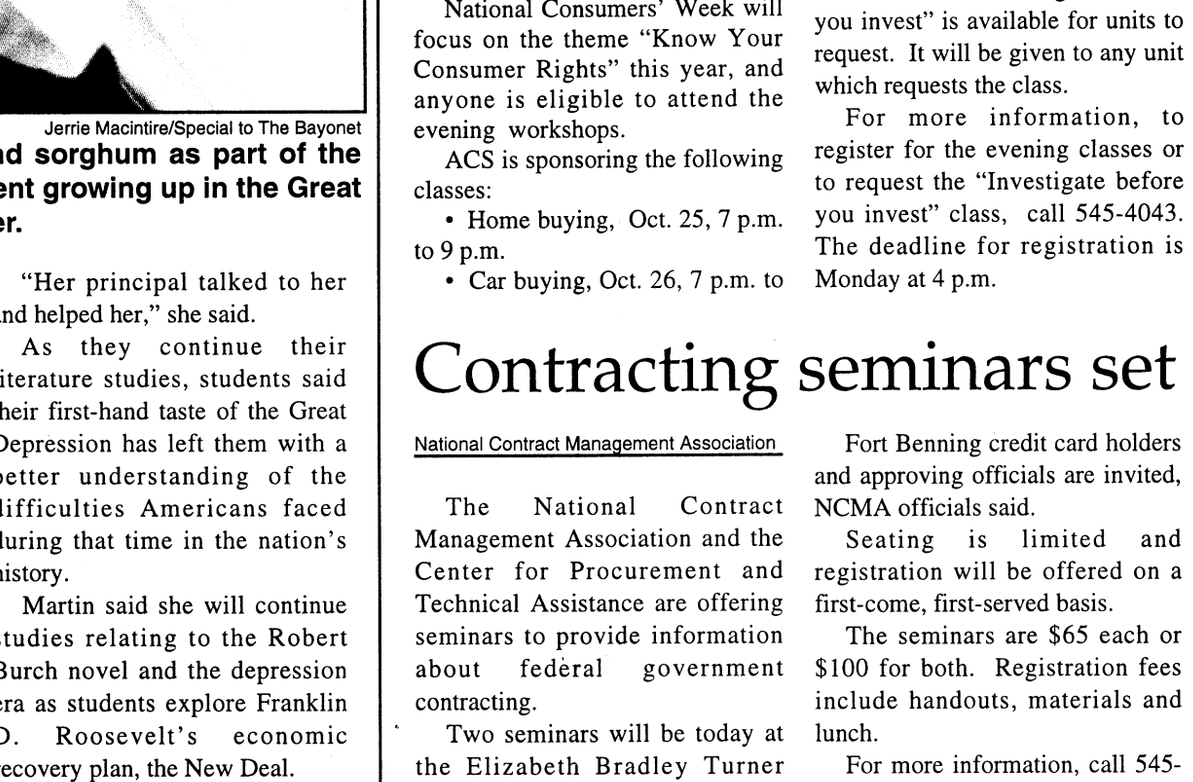
Referrals must be turned in to Santa's Castle by Nov. 14. After the soldiers are referred, the Castle will assign them an appointment between Dec. 5 and 16 to select toys for their children.

While every unit and agency on post has helped support the effort, Sykes cited the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, for supplying five volunteers for the past two Wednesdays.

Sgt. 1st Class Raul Munoz, the battalion's personnel sergeant, said that this will continue through Dec. 16.

Volunteers serve a variety of purposes at the castle, Sykes said, and there is much for them to do. There are stuffed animals to wash, toys to repair, briefings to give and inventories to conduct.

Santa's Castle, through funding provided by Soldiers and Family Support, will pay for certified child care for the volunteers for the time donated, she said.



Although the volume of activity at Santa's Castle increases in the months just before Christmas, Sykes emphasized that the effort is an ongoing one.

Santa's Castle accepts donations and works on toys from February through December and help any time of year is always welcome, she said.

Anyone interested in donating either time or toys can stop by Santa's Castle, located at Building 2639, Soldiers' Plaza. The hours of operation are 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., Mondays and Wednesdays. After Thanksgiving, operations will expand to five days a week through Dec 16.

For more information, call 545-1233. The Castle also has provided a drop box behind the building for toys to be dropped off.

"I hope that everybody gets the word," Sykes said. "Whether a person wants to donate, volunteer (his or her) time or is in need of our services, I would like everyone to know about Santa's Castle. No soldier's child should wake up Christmas morning without toys under the tree.

Graduating physician assistants, or PAs, were assured of their value as an important link in the military health care system at a graduation exercise Oct. 7. at Martin Army Community Hospital.

Col. Michael Kussman, commander of the hospital, discussed the important roles the newly graduated physician assistants will assume as they begin duties in military hospitals as well as outlying clinics serving soldiers and their families.

The four graduates who were commissioned as second lieutenants during the ceremony will join the medical specialist corps where they will function as "physician extenders," said Capt. Keith Barbagelott, student coordinator at the hospital who is himself a PA in orthopedics.

The graduates were 2nd Lts. Michael Myslenski, Dale Weaver, Faye Winder and Jacob Wortz.

They will join the ranks of other PAs in hospitals, clinics and clearing stations who provide a link between doctors and patients by supporting medical care givers, Barbagelott said.

The program is two years long, and individuals in training are considered Officer Candidate School students, making it one of the lengthiest OCS programs in the Army.

Training begins at the Academy of Health Sciences, Fort Sam Houston, Texas, where the students study academic disciplines such as anatomy, physiology, disease processes and clinical diagnostic skills.

During the second year of training, students get practical experience at military hospitals under the supervision and instruction of physicians, nurses and experienced physician assistants.

Rotating through different departments, the students study various disciplines from proper lab techniques to prescriptions.

When the Officer Candidate School training is complete, the physician assistants earn a bachelor of science degree from the University of Oklahoma. For further training, they may compete for positions in a fellowship program where they can specialize in one area of health care.

This year Martin Army had eight students as well as seven physician assistants stationed in the hospital, at troop clinics and with the Ranger Training Battalion in Dahlonega, Ga., and Eglin, Air Force Base, Fla.

Physician assistants have been part of the Army health-care team since the early 1970s when Duke University offered the first training program.

"The Army jumped on it right away. They could see the value of the program as they experienced a shortage of doctors," said Barbagelott.

Initially, physician assistants were designated chief warrant officers; the change to commissioned officers occurred in 1992 when graduates were commissioned and warrant officer physician assistants were transitioned to officer ranks from lieutenant to major.

Also at the graduation Oct. 7, students recognized the newly appointed physician assistant coordinator, Barbagelott, as well as Monika LaMountain, a hospital employee who provided encouragement and support for the program and the students.

EFMP adds 'pen pals'

Army Community Service

The Exceptional Family Member Program's resource library has a new addition, called the "pen-pal" program.

This program is part of the Children's Hopes and Dreams Foundation, which serves children with chronic and life-threatening illnesses.

The program is currently reaching children in more than 25 countries.

The program also arranges and finances for those children who are suffering from a life-threatening illness (such as leukemia, cancer or AIDS) a "last dream," which allows children to visit Disney World, meet a sports hero or spend time with a movie star.

One example is a young girl, an Army family member with acute lymphocytic leukemia who has been treated the last two years at Brook Army Center. This September, on her birthday, she had her "dream" come true at Walt Disney World.

The program matches children who are the same age, sex and classification of illness. The children who participate in this program find the understanding of another child who is facing the same obstacles.

Any child at least 5 years of age and under 18, diagnosed with a life-threatening or chronic illness can participate in the program.

There is no cost for this program other than the cost of stamps, envelopes and writing material the child requires to correspond with his or her new friend.

For additional information on this program and to obtain the free postage-paid registration form, contact Mark Mills or Frances Howard, Army Community Service, Exceptional Family Member Program, Building 2643, Soldiers' Plaza, or call 545-6969, 545-5516 or 545-3344.

Soldier qualifies for chess team

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

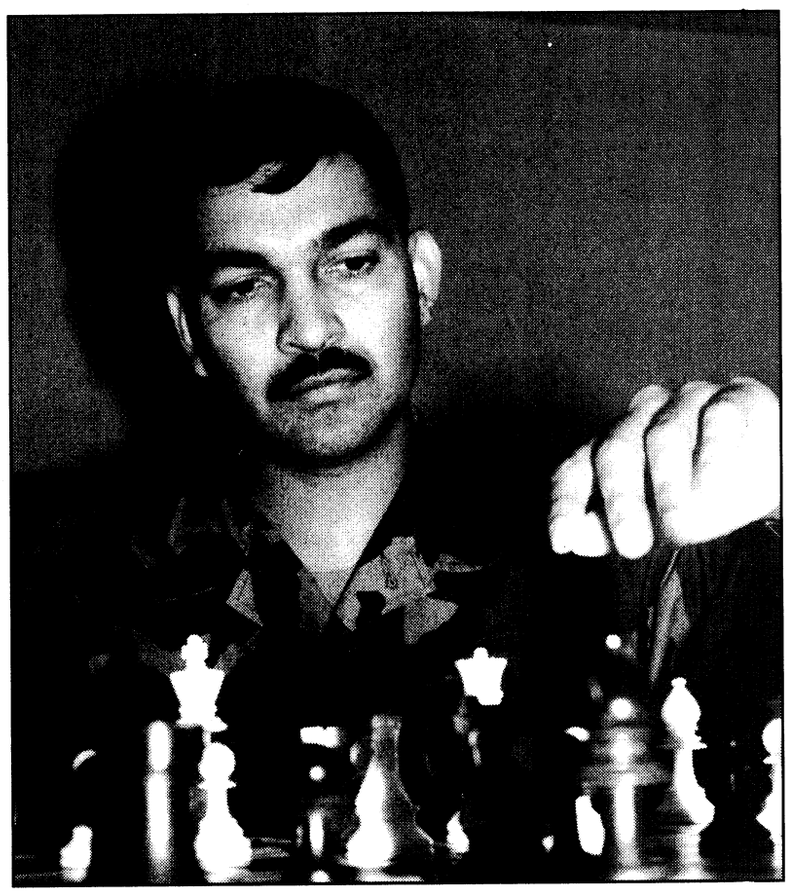
A soldier from Fort Benning has won a spot on the 1994 U.S. Army Chess Team.

Sgt. 1st Class Dhanukumar Ramroop, Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, competed in a 15-round, round-robin tournament Sept. 10 to 17 at Fort Belvoir, Va. Fifteen soldiers vied for the eight-man team, Ramroop said.

"This was my third year trying for it and I finally made it," Ramroop said.

Last year, Ramroop came within a half-point of making the team, he said.

"I was close last year so I knew I had a pretty good chance of making the team this year," he said.



To make the team, competitors had to score eight points, with a point earned for every win in the tournament. Out of 14 matches played, Ramroop won eight.

A preliminary round of matches was conducted at the post level during June. For the fifth consecutive time, Ramroop won Fort Benning's tournament, beating six others for the title.

The All-Army team will be competing in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization Championships in Holland Nov. 25 through Dec. 5. This is a change from the past years, when the team participated in the Armed Forces Chess Championships.

"I was close last year so I knew I had a pretty good chance of making the team this year."

Sgt. 1st Class Dhanukumar Ramroop, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, practices chess techniques after making the All-Army Chess Team.

Chess has been one of Ramroop's passions for nearly 15 years, he said. His interest in the game was sparked by watching his older brother play and seeing American Bobby Fisher win the World Chess Tournament in 1972.

"Watching his games on television and following his games in the newspaper, I think that is what probably kicked it off for me," Ramroop said.

Ramroop played his first competitive match in 1978 at Fort Riley, Kan. That tournament was the U.S. Amateur Tournament and he tied for third. More than 150 people competed in that tournament, he said.

Ramroop said he prepares for tournaments through monthly practice and by being well-rested and mentally alert. He also tries to run a few miles before a tournament to help energize him for what's to come and get in the right frame of mind.

Ramroop describes the game as relaxing. For him, he said, it has instilled discipline.

"I think it makes you a better-rounded person," Ramroop said.

"Once I sit down at a game, I focus 100 percent on what I am doing," he said. "I don't think about anything except what is going on in the game I am playing. It's just one game at a time."

Ambassador: Education is key

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

Ambassador Mari-Luci Jaramillo believes in education.

"My mother cared passionately about education. She knew it was a way out of poverty. She only got through the seventh grade herself, but all I heard from her growing up was 'education, education!' " said Jaramillo, ambassador to Honduras during the Carter administration and now deputy assistant secretary of Defense for inter-American affairs.

"As a result," she said with a chuckle, "I probably don't cook very well, but I'm well-educated."

Jaramillo said she grew up in the "original" Las Vegas — in New Mexico, not Nevada.

"My father was a talented man," she said. "He was a musician, he had a shoe shop, and he made beautiful boots. But he had to end his schooling in Mexico after completing fourth grade, and we grew up poor. Still it was a good life, because in the Hispanic community in my youth everyone looked out for one another.

"I also went to schools where the teachers cared. I won numerous awards — from the Daughters of the American Revolution, The Readers Digest, etc.— but in those days, these awards didn't come with money, only certificates. So I put myself through college working a semester, studying for a semester. I sewed parachutes in a factory, cleaned people's houses, worked as a waitress and in my father's shoe shop — I can do a mean spit shine!"

Despite being a working student, Jaramillo receive her bachelor's degree in 1955 magna cum laude and her master's degree in 1959 with honors. She earned both degrees in education from New Mexico Highlands University in Las Vegas. After working a decade as a classroom teacher in New Mexico, and getting special training in teaching English as a second language, Jaramillo became a professor of education at the University of New Mexico, Albuquerque.

While a professor, she made a point of traveling to as many elementary schools as possible, talking to parents about the importance of teaching children to read and encouraging education. She also persuaded businesses to help schools in poor Hispanic neighborhoods. For this, she received the New Mexico Distinguished Service Award. Even though she's since received over a dozen awards from prestigious universities like Harvard and Stanford and national organizations, this one meant the most, she said. "It was for citizenship, and no one taught me to be a model citizen. I was taught to be an educator."

Mari-Luci Jaramillo is now deputy assistant secretary of Defense for inter-American affairs.

She said the fields of diplomacy and education are closely linked. An American ambassador should help host country officials understand the views of the United States. Equally important, she said, is learning the views and needs of the host country as thoroughly as possible and helping U.S. policy-makers understand the host country.

"My years in Honduras were wonderful. I made a lot of friends, and I like to think I made friends for the United States," she said. Later, she was deputy assistant secretary of state for Latin America. Part of her role in this position was recruiting talented Hispanics to serve in the U.S. State Department. She made a lot of contacts in her diplomatic service that are serving her well in her DoD job.

"In my current job, I see myself as an educator as well," she said. "The Department of Defense, National Security Council and State Department officials educate each other about Latin America so we can create excellent policy."

The Office of Inter-American Affairs professional staff of 15 is fairly small, she said. "However, we do the work by working smarter," she added. "I strongly believe in Vice President (Al) Gore's plans to reinvent government."

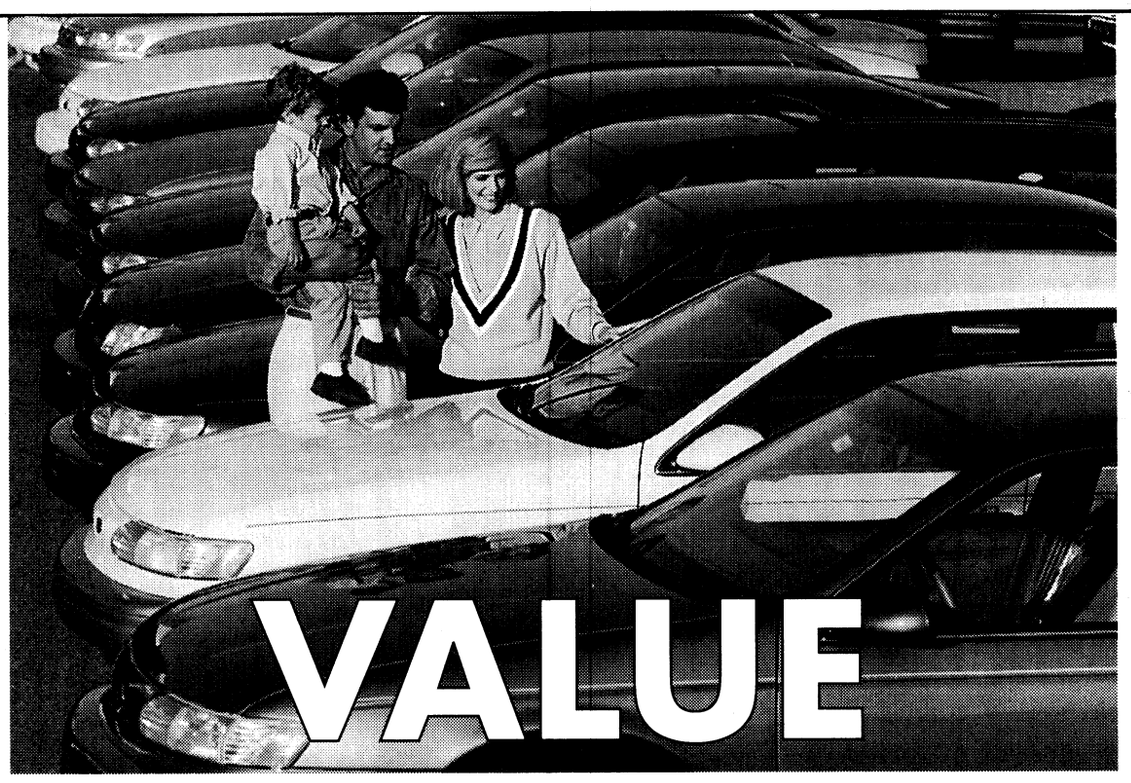
Because she believes education can promote understanding, she said the School of the Americas plays an important role. The school, based at Fort Benning, has taught American military ideas and skills in Spanish to 58,000 soldiers from 22 Latin American nations. Among the ideas stressed, she said, is respect for a citizen's right of peaceful protest. The school also trains Latin American medics in skills to benefit the civilian population. These include how to set up immunization and water purification programs and to provide basic medical care.

The school's alumni include many who have become service chiefs of staff, commanders of their nation's armed forces and a few presidents.

"Although there are a few graduates we aren't proud of, I think you would find that many respected educational institutions have alumni of whom they aren't proud," Jaramillo said. "Latin America is an important part of the world, we benefit from the positive attitude about the United States graduates take back to their countries. I just want to make the school even better."

If any young person asks her advice, she said she says the same thing: Get as good and as broad an education as possible and don't specialize too early.

"I do not believe we have too many educated people in this country. I don't think we need to just train people for jobs — education is important in itself. We need well-read people who think. People shouldn't say, 'You have more degrees than a thermometer, you don't have to go to school anymore.' Education should never end.



"I also don't like to hear people say it's not their job to educate children," she said.

"I believe it is everybody's job. It's like the African saying, 'It takes a whole village to raise a child.'"

As for getting a higher education, "It is so much easier than in my day," Jaramillo said. "There are more scholarships, more universities open nights and weekends, and other opportunities. But we have to get so many more of our people through the system.

"Once you go through, you should help others, show them the way," she said. People who are in the first generation in this country to be educated need people who care on the sidelines, cheering them on."

Toxic plants common at home, in the wild

3-year-old eats toxic mushroom

By Connie Smalls
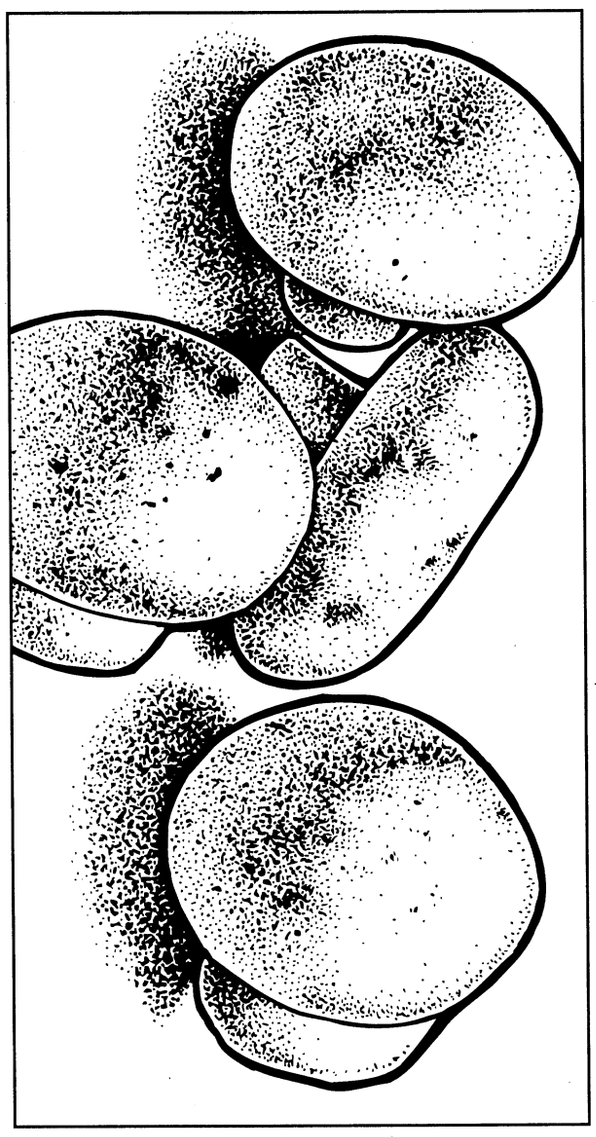
Fort Monroe CASEMATE

A recent incident at Fort Monroe, Va., involved a 3-year-old boy becoming sick after eating a piece of a poisonous mushroom.

His father, an active-duty officer stationed there, reported that on the evening of July 17, he called the poison control hotline after his son vomited repeatedly, and it was discovered that he had eaten a piece of mushroom outside earlier that day. The youngster had, according to the report, eaten a piece of mushroom that was growing by the playground area near the family's quarters.

The parents took the child and a sample of the mushroom to the hospital at Langley Air Force Base. The father said hospital personnel confirmed that the mushroom was toxic.



Treatment began immediately, and the boy was monitored until his vital signs returned to normal. The youngster is now fine, according to his father.

Although this potentially tragic accident turned out all right, poisonous mushrooms vary considerably in their effects when eaten. In some cases, a mushroom may cause a brief stomach upset; a short time later the afflicted person completely recovers. In other cases, a mushroom may be so toxic that eating one cap of the mushroom can cause death.

Most mushroom poisonings occur from a limited number of kinds, perhaps a hundred species, of which fewer than a dozen are considered deadly, according to Gary Lincoff and D.H. Mitchel, authors of Toxic and Hallucinogenic Mushroom Poisoning, a handbook for physicians and mushroom hunters.

Most mushroom deaths in this country are caused by eating the deadly amanitas, defined as "a group of tall, stately mushrooms that have a skirt-like ring on the stipe, white gills and a cup-like volva at the base."

There are no easy shortcuts for identifying poisonous vs. nonpoisonous mushrooms, said Peter A. Money, director of education at the Virginia Living Museum. Therefore, never eat any mushrooms found outside, unless you are trained to identify the individual species in an area.

Although most adults heed the advice of experts like Money, children, especially young children, don't know the dangers of sampling mushrooms or other poisonous plants in or around the home.

A spokesman at the National Clearinghouse for Poison Control Centers said most victims of poisonings from swallowing or being exposed to parts of poisonous plants are children under the age of 5. According to official sources there, about 1 percent of the roughly 35,000 cases of accidental poisonings in the United States reported each year is caused by mushrooms.

Dr. Guy Hartman of the Kaiser/Permanente Medical Center in Fontana, Calif., creator of the Sinister Garden of poisonous plants, believes that more than 40,000 poisonings from plants occur annually nationwide.

Some house plants are considered toxic. For example, the leaves on philodendrons are poisonous, but the species known as monstera is particularly harmful if ingested. Hyacinth contains an alkaloid poison in the bulb, and the seeds and leaves of delphiniums are also toxic.

Outdoor plants constitute the majority of poisonous plants. Horticulturalists and doctors recommend removing poisonous plants from gardens, especially where there are children.

Some plants around home dangerous to children

Fort Monroe Safety Office

FORT MONROE, Va. — Certain plants in or around the home can be poisonous when ingested.

In all, 91 plants are capable of causing problems ranging from vomiting and diarrhea to convulsions, paralysis and respiratory failure.

Dr. Guy Hartman of the Kaiser/Permanente Medical Center in Fontana, Calif., creator of the Sinister Garden of poisonous plants, said more than 40,000 poisonings from plants occur each year in the United States.

Some plants grown in homes are considered toxic.

A common-sense approach to plant poisons will eliminate most chances of the unexpected happening. If youngsters are in the home, remove all house plants that are known to be poisonous or place them well out of reach of children. In the outdoor garden, instruct young children not to touch the plants or to put leaves or berries in their mouths. Consider removing poisonous plants from the garden.

In an emergency, identification of the poisonous plants involved will assist hospital personnel in providing the proper medical attention. If you don't know the plant, bring a specimen to the hospital for quick identification.

Write down the telephone number of the nearest Poison Control Center before an emergency occurs.

What are the most prominent poisonous plants? Here are some plants to watch out for:

Azalea: All parts of the plants are poisonous. Ingestion of any parts will likely cause nausea, vomiting, weak spells, difficulty breathing, loss of balance and dizzy spells.

Castor beans: The seeds (beans) are poisonous. On ingestion, there will be severe vomiting, diarrhea, convulsions, kidney damage and possibly death.

Delphinium (larkspur): All parts of the plant are considered poisonous, especially the seeds. If swallowed, plant parts will cause burning sensations of the mouth, vomiting, low blood pressure, weak pulse and convulsions.

Foxglove: Only the leaves are poisonous. Symptoms include pains of the abdomen, irregular heartbeat, vomiting, tremors and convulsions.

Holly (illex): The berries occurring on female plants are the only parts to be avoided. Swallowing of the berries leads to diarrhea, vomiting and depression of the central nervous system.

Iris: Most plant parts are said to be toxic, including the bulb, leaves and flower stalk. Symptoms are blistering of the mouth and lips as well as diarrhea and vomiting.

Jerusalem cherry: Both the leaves and the berries are toxic. Ingestion would cause diarrhea, vomiting, depression of the nervous system, respiratory problems and convulsions.

Monstera (philodendron species): Only the leaves are harmful. Symptoms include diarrhea, vomiting and a burning sensation of the mouth.

Nightshade: All parts are toxic to humans. Effects of ingestion would be diarrhea, vomiting, convulsions and depression of the respiratory and central nervous systems.

Oleander: All parts are poisonous. Among the diverse symptoms are abdominal pains, dilation of the pupil, bloody diarrhea, vomiting, slow and irregular heartbeats and paralysis of the respiratory system.

Poison ivy: Only the leaves are considered poisonous. Symptoms are usually confined to blisters and itching.

Poison oak: Only the leaves should be avoided. Blisters and itching are common symptoms.

Privet (lingustrum): Leaves and berries are poisonous. Ill effects include diarrhea, low blood pressure, vomiting and kidney damage.

Yew (tazus): all parts of the plant are poisonous, especially the berries. If swallowed, dilated pupils, diarrhea, vomiting, weak spells and convulsions are likely to occur.

Don't wait until it's too late

By James Coindreau
USAIC Chaplains' Office

reflections

I cannot get up out of bed. My muscles cease to function. The gift of mobility ends.

It is too late to move to help others. It is too late to develop the agility required to be helpful by exercising. That is why a corpse is called a "stiff."

I cannot taste my food. The gift of appetite stops. My taste glands dry up. It is too late to thank God for the many years of hundreds of meals in this world of famines. It is too late to undo the abuse of food and drink.

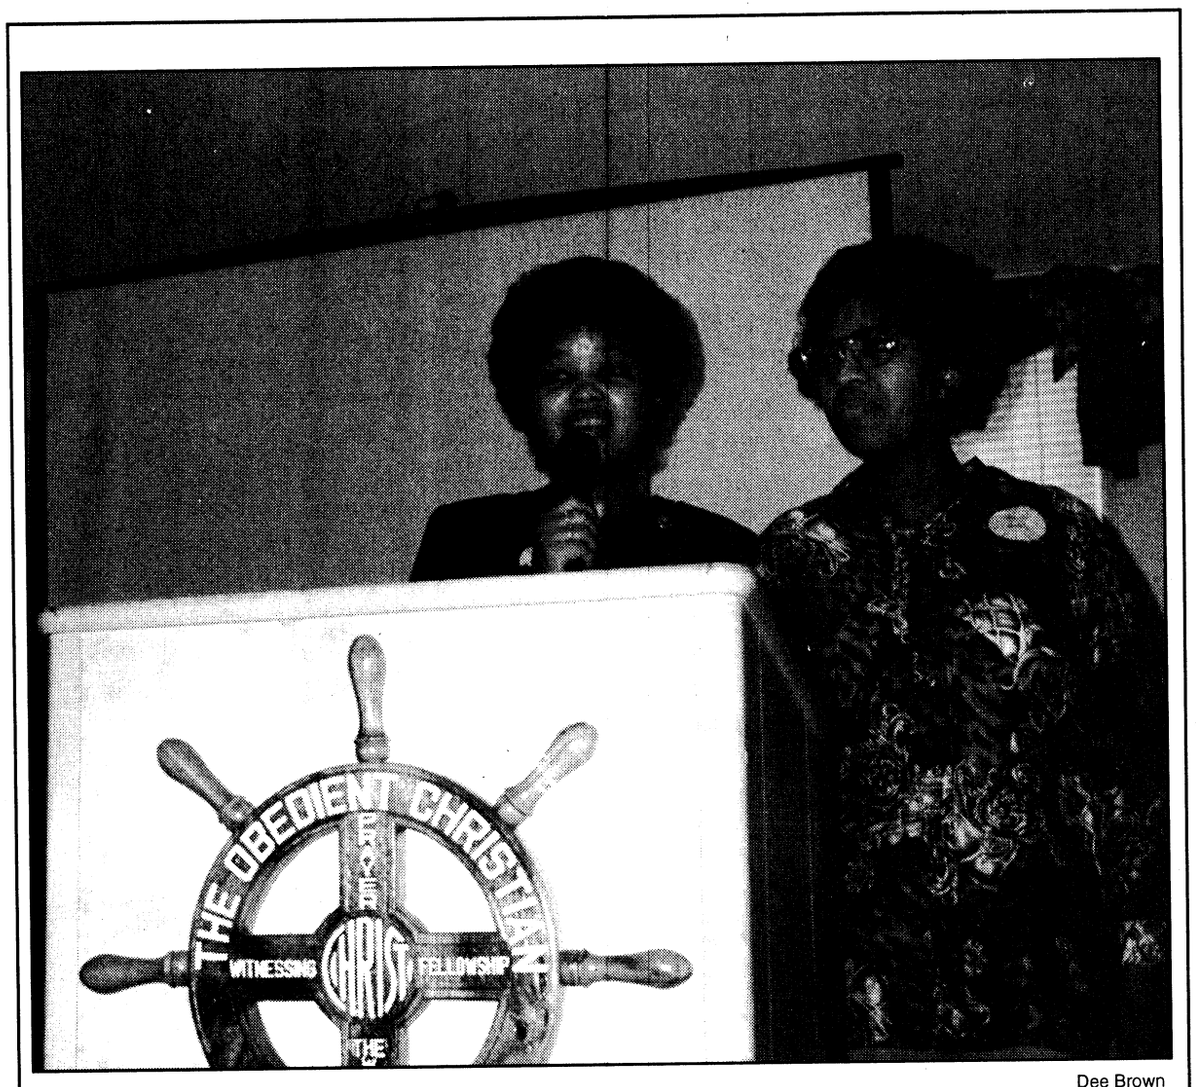
I cannot sense my skin. I am totally numb. The gift of touch has ended. The caresses of loved ones no longer soothe me. I cannot express to them with loving touch my affection. It is too late to develop the healing touch of a physician, or the creative touch of an artist.

I cannot hear anymore. The gift of hearing is taken away. Deafness has set in. It is too late to listen to my parents, teachers, minister or priest. It is too late to resist the spicy listening of gossip or smut. It is too late for thankful listening of nature's song in the woods or by the sea.

I cannot speak again. My vocal chords are paralyzed. The gift of speech has worn out. It is too late to sing and pray to God, to advise and teach, and to beg forgiveness. It is too late to silence sarcasm and blasphemy.

I cannot see. The night of blindness arrives with death. The gift of sight is over. My vacant stare signals the end. My eyelids are lowered forever. It is too late to read God's word and to discover his creation. It is too late to close my eyes to sin and to open them to science and research through study.

I no longer feel emotions. Total indifference prevails. The gift of feelings is empty. It is too late to react with tenderness and compassion instead of with anger and resentment. It is too late to control panic and bigotry and to foster serenity and openness.



I cannot imagine by projecting in the screen of my fantasy. The gift of imagination is turned off. It is too late to supplement my studies with this internal audiovisual system and to travel to places and periods of history physically unreachable. It is too late to recreate the narratives of the holy scriptures.

I cannot remember. Amnesia has set in. That wonderful filing system of past events shuts down. The gift of memory terminates. It is too late to enrich myself by recollection of God's message in the Bible. It is too late to stop harboring negative episodes. It is too late to stock my internal library with positive information on useful subjects.

I cannot love. My ability to show affection, to give of myself has been plugged. It is too late to funnel the attachments of my heart to God instead of to perishable material things. It is too late to bestow love on all God's creatures instead of falling prey to hatred and bigotry.

I cannot think. The gift of intelligence has stopped. The ability to learn, analyze and investigate has been stymied. It is too late to cultivate my mind with education. Death turns off the light of reason.

I cannot exercise my will. My ability to make decisions comes to an end. The gift of free will puts us on an equal footing with God. I am responsible for my life story. It is too late to develop character by will power. I am dead. The time of reckoning is here.

Family problems: Professionals are here to help

By Robert R. Davidson
USAIC Chaplains' Office

reflections

There's a crisis at home. Things are going badly. Your in-laws are telling you how to spend your money. Your spouse won't speak to you. Your children are more trouble than they're worth. The first sergeant won't give you time off to take care of these or other problems.

These are only a few in a long list of personal and family problems that can be helped if you find the right "helper."

Finding a good helper can be an overwhelming, even frightening task. Here at Fort Benning we have services that meet your needs.

The Fort Benning and Columbus professional counseling community comes with a variety of titles and degrees. They include psychiatrists, mental health nurse practitioners, social workers, marriage and family therapists, licensed professional counselors, chaplains or pastors and clinical psychologists.

Such an array of titles and degrees make it seem like hard work to find a good counselor. Yet, good counselors are relatively easy to find.

1. Ask for recommendations. People who have been helped by counselors often tell others.

Frequently they serve as a good counselor's best referral resource and your best source of information. So ask around! Your family practice doctor, nurses, chaplains or legal advisors are knowledgeable resources.

Their work regularly connects them with the mental health professionals. Frequently they find cause to refer to professional counselors. If you are concerned about confidentiality, be sure to ask them to maintain your confidential inquiry.

2. Ask direct questions. Good counselors appreciate questions about their training, license or certification, background of professional experience and the nature and type of care they provide.

Ask them if they respect and support your values. They should fully inform you about cost, diagnostic procedures, types and outcomes of therapy, probable length of treatment and confidentiality.

3. Whenever possible, be prepared to honestly identify and to briefly talk about your particular problem. Counselors are highly skilled listeners with the ability to efficiently and effectively help you clarify your problem.

The telephone is not a counseling tool, so don't plan to tell your whole story over the telephone. Share only enough to make an appointment with the right counselor. At your first appointment you will be able to go into details.

4. Find a comfortable setting. Since counseling can be hard work, choose a therapist with whom you feel comfortable and accepted.

The therapist should respect you, maintain confidentiality and have appropriate boundaries. You should be comfortable with the level of confidentiality and privacy.

5. You need not struggle alone. There is help out there. I know, because when I searched I found it. So have many others. You, too, can find help if you choose to look.

Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and He shall sustain thee.

— Psalm 55:22

'90210's' Garth committed 'Without Consent'

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

The success of "Beverly Hills, 90210" has given many of its stars other opportunities; and, this week, one of them becomes an executive producer.

SPOTLIGHT

Jennie Garth — alias Kelly Taylor on the popular Fox Broadcasting show, which launched its fifth season last month with its highest-rated episode to date — did two TV-movies last season ("Danielle Steel's Star," "Lies of the Heart: The Story of Laurie Kellogg"), but she was in more of a position to call the shots than ever while making "Without Consent," Sunday's new ABC drama in which she also stars as a young woman committed to a private psychiatric hospital by her well-intentioned parents ("L.A. Law" alumna Jill Eikenberry and Tom Irwin, who currently plays another father on ABC's "My So-Called Life").

When she seems to be rebelling against them in every way, they take the suggestion of a school official and have her admitted to the facility, where she soon discovers that many of the patients are being mistreated medically, mentally and physically ... a situation apparently condoned by the site's chief administrator (Paul Sorvino). As her unsuspecting mom and dad debate whether they've done the right thing, she tries to escape from the place, with outside aid from a children's-rights advocate (Helen Shaver) aware of what's happening. With Garth's manager Randy James among its other producers, the film also features Eric Close ("McKenna") as her character's family-outcast brother and Johnny Galecki ("Roseanne") as a patient she befriends.

Jennie Garth

What: "Without Consent"
When: Sunday on ABC

"It was a lot of hard work," the pleasant, soft-spoken Garth says of her dual "Without Consent" duties, "I always like having a little bit more creative power in the process, so this was the next natural step to take, and it just sort of fell into place. It was really exciting, and a great experience, and I hope to be able to do it again. I always have a great awareness of people's happiness on the set, of how they're being treated overall, and I try to keep everyone really comfortable. I was able to do that more as executive producer. I'm not saying everyone was thrilled to death and had a wonderful time, though, because it certainly was hard work. Still, it was nice to be able to say, 'We have to stop for the night, let's pick this up in the morning.'"

Acknowledging her enjoyment in working with "a wonderful cast," Garth adds that she was assisted in some of her producing duties by veterans in certain areas, with ABC's casting department helping to fill the movie's other roles. "I didn't go in on any of that," she reports, "just because I was uncomfortable doing it. It turned out to be a great cast of steady, working actors, and we had to cast a few parts locally." The film was made in Austin, Texas, in actual psychiatric hospitals.

Experience 1850s life at Westville

Westville Historic Handicrafts Inc.

To experience life as it was in the fall of 1850, there is no better time or place than Westville's "Fair of 1850."

Through Nov. 13, there will be special demonstrations and events planned to show life as it was 144 years ago.

Special demonstrations of broom- and soap-making will take place at various times and sugar cane will be ground for juice to make into syrup. Westville's mule-powered cotton gin will be in operation. This is one of the few animal-powered gins in existence.

Music groups will perform each Saturday, and some weekdays area children will be in the academy to portray education of the period.

In addition to special activities, there will be demonstrations of regular activities that take place throughout the year.

These include blacksmithing, potterymaking, candledipping, spinning, woodworking and weaving.

Westville is located one-half mile from the town square in Lumpkin, Ga.

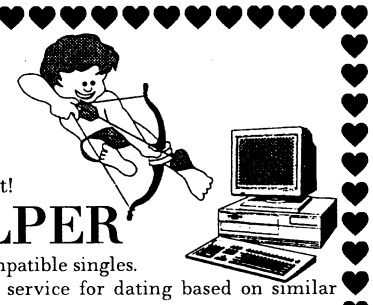
College's music department celebrating 25th anniversary

Columbus College

Columbus College's Schwob Department of Music is commemorating its 25th anniversary this year, celebrating its growth and recognition as one of the nation's preeminent training grounds for young musicians from all over the world.

A year-long celebration is planned that will include concerts and master classes presented by guest artists, as well as programs featuring the faculty and students of the department.

Opening the Guest Artist Series will be the renowned Ying Quartet. The group of four string players from the same family will present a master class today at 4 p.m., an open rehearsal Saturday at 2 p.m., and a formal concert at 8 p.m. Saturday evening in the college's Fine Arts Hall auditorium.



During the same weekend, the Schwob Department of Music will be hosting to the Georgia chapter of the American String Teacher's Association string quartet workshop.

Students from throughout the state will meet to rehearse, perform and take advantage of the offerings of the Ying Quartet.

Admission to the master classes is free, and tickets for the Ying concert are $7 for adults and $4 for students. Columbus College students, faculty, and staff are admitted free.

For more information on these and other events of the 25th anniversary year, contact Columbus College's Schwob Department of Music at 568-2049.

Directorate combines MP, emergency svcs

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

Col. Ronnie D. Alton is the commander of the new directorate.

A new directorate has been formed on post, consolidating the efforts of the organizations that help keep Fort Benning safe.

The Military Police Activity and the Fort Benning Fire Department combined Oct. 1 to form the Directorate of Public Safety.

In the next few months, the Infantry Branch Safety Office will also join the DPS, said Col. Ronnie D. Alton, provost marshal and head of the new directorate.

"The main goal of the directorate is to provide a safe and secure environment for people who work, live and play on Fort Benning," Alton said.

The directorate is tied to the unfinished enhanced 911 system, Alton said.

When the 911 system is completed, all emergency systems will be directed out of the Military Police Station, he said.

"My dispatcher will dispatch the Fire Department, the emergency medical services and all military police control," Alton said.

The enhanced 911 system is scheduled to be in operation in a few months, he said.

Because of possible deployments and permanent changes of station, only Department of Defense civilian officers are being trained to run the 911 system, Alton said.

Along with the officer who receives the calls, an automated system called the computer assisted dispatcher helps the officer dispatch the right units to the right places, said Bessie B. Tucker, system administrator of the 911 system.

"The CAD is the core of the 911 system," Tucker said.

The system has two wide color monitors placed next to each other.

3rd Brigade 24th ID to send more soldiers to SW Asia

By Ruth J. Spaller
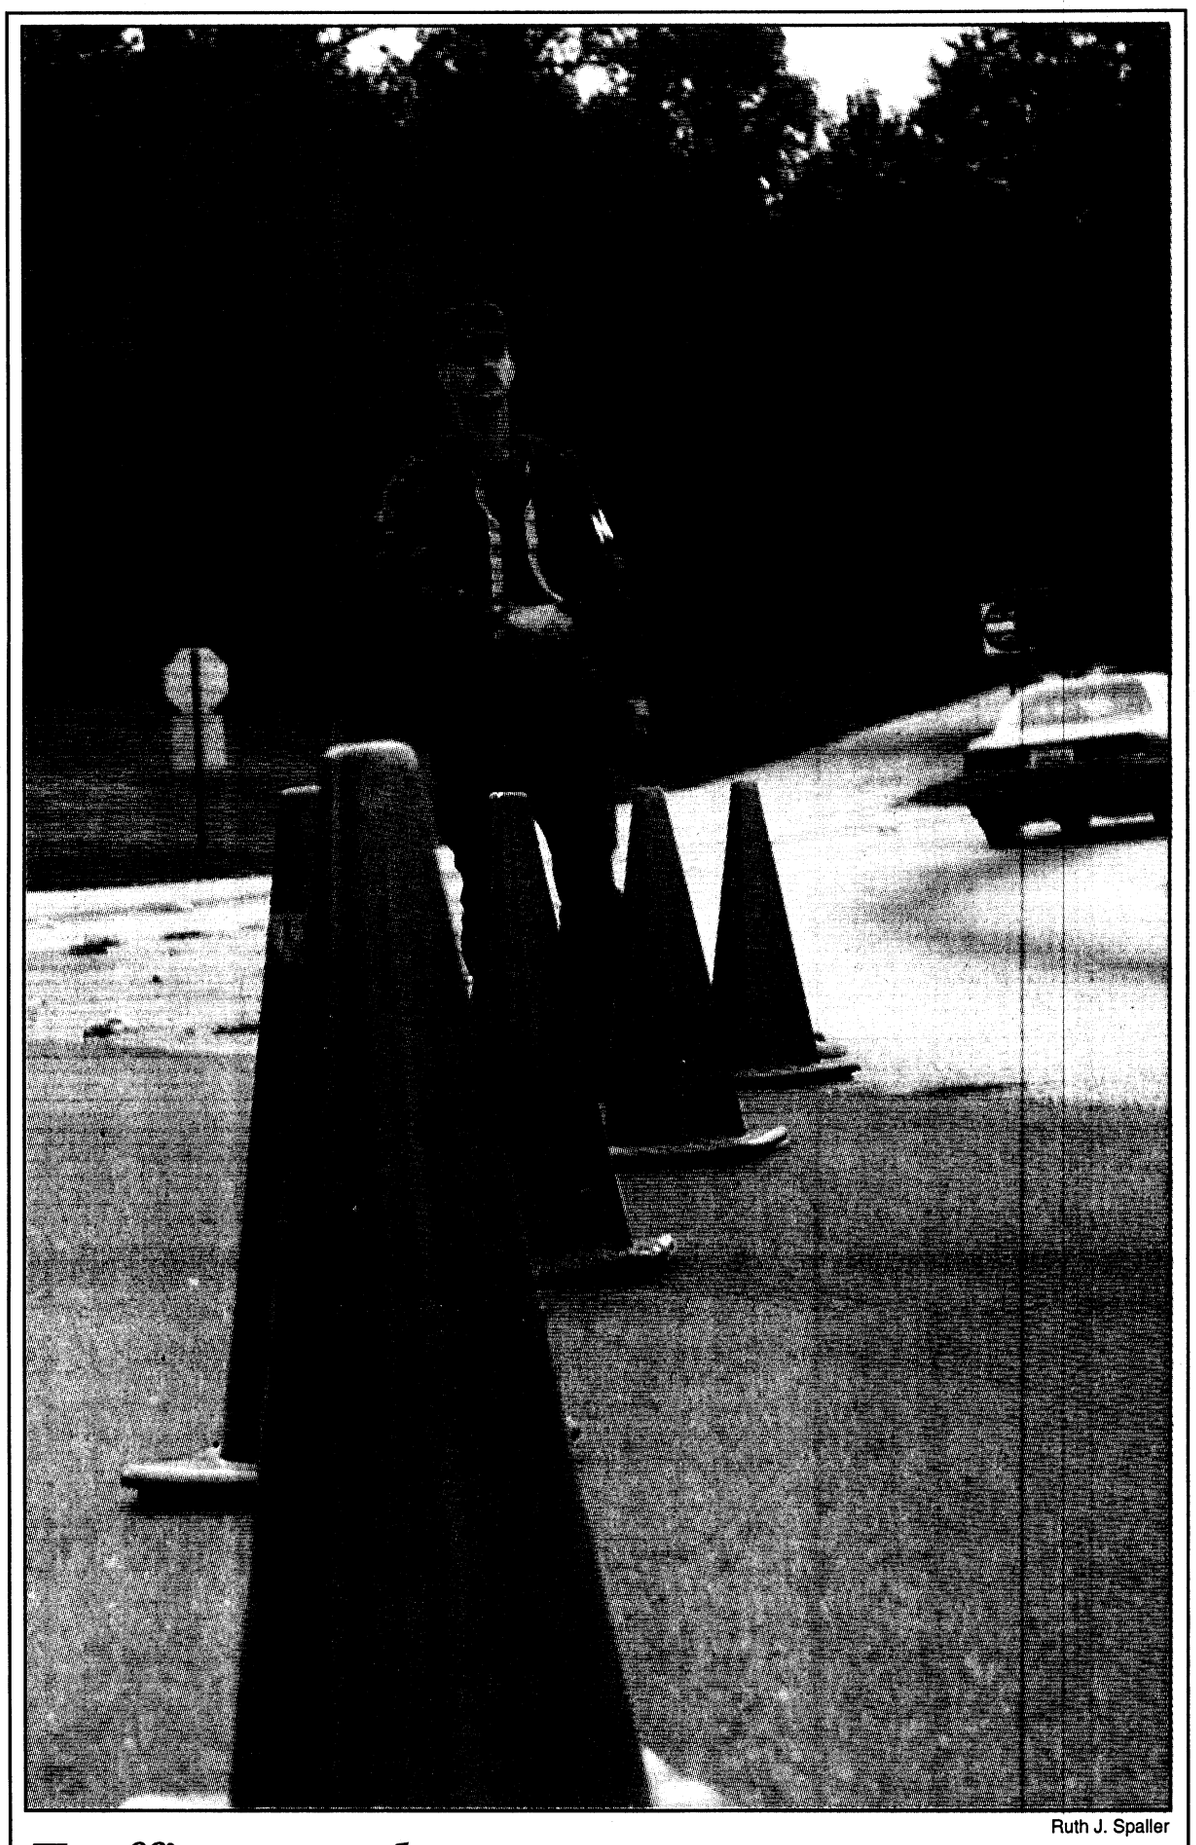
Bayonet staff writer

An advance party of 375 soldiers, representing a cross section of the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized), deployed for Southwest Asia Saturday and Sunday and more soldiers are now scheduled to leave.



Seventy soldiers from the 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment, are expected to leave this afternoon, and more soldiers from additional 3rd Brigade units may depart over the weekend, depending on aircraft availability, according to Monica Manganaro, Fort Benning Public Information officer.

The 3rd Brigade elements join more than 2,500 soldiers from the 24th ID who have already deployed from Fort Stewart, Ga., including elements of the division's 1st Brigade and various support elements.

The 24th ID, both here and at Fort Stewart, remains on alert status, which began Oct. 11, said Maj. Kelly Fitzpatrick, the 24th ID and Fort Stewart Public Affairs officer.

Upon their arrival, deploying units may draw vehicles and equipment from more than 12 ships prepositioned afloat in the Persian Gulf, Fitzpatrick said.

"We are still ready for anything, but a lot still remains to be decided, ... and those decisions rest with national command authorities," Fitzpatrick said.

Post events aim to focus attention on disability awareness

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

Fort Benning will observe National Disability Awareness Month with activities including an awards presentation to the post's Outstanding Army Employee with a Disability for 1994 and a seminar at Martin Army Community Hospital.

Focusing on this year's national theme, "Ability Plus Diversity Equals Economic Strength," the seminar is planned for Tuesday at 2 p.m. in the Baugh Conference Room at MACH. Mildred Watts, manager for the Individuals With Disabilities Program of the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, will speak.

Also as part of National Disabilities Awareness Month, the post will recognize Carl Justice, a Directorate of Public Works employee, as the Outstanding Army Employee with a Disability at the Civilian Awards Luncheon Thursday at 11:30 a.m. at the Officers' Club.

In addition, the Columbus Mayor's Committee for Persons with Disabilities will present awards Nov. 10 at noon at the Holiday Inn -Airport on Manchester Expressway at the Mayor's Awards Banquet. For tickets or information on the luncheon, call 571-4906 or 571-4950 (TDD).

The mayor's committee will present two awards: the Person with a Disability of the Year Award and the Largest Employer of the Year Award.

Fort Benning has been recognized by the committee and has won awards in both categories numerous times in the past. Watts said the post will submit nominations in both categories again this year.

The activities are designed to heighten awareness and sensitivity toward persons with disabilities and to focus on their achievements.

REPORT CARD

Superintendent grades schools

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

As the first grading period of the school year draws to a close, most parents will evaluate the ensuing report cards with a critical eye, pleased with evaluations in some areas while determined to improve performance in other areas.

The same can be said for Dell Karr, who is mentally writing a report card of sorts for the seven post schools as she completes her first quarter as superintendent of the Fort Benning system.

Karr, who was named head of the school system in late spring, brings with her an educational philosophy molded by 20 years experience as a teacher, principal and assistant superintendent.

While serving as an educator at every level, Karr saw the need for constant self diagnosis, she said.

Under her direction, the schools will continue evaluating programs in place and targeting areas for improvement based upon Karr's vision for the future that includes building basic skills while addressing individual needs.

"The vision I have is that every child and every adult in the Fort Benning Schools will have an opportunity to grow," she said.

"I envision a system where children are writers and thinkers. A system where their oral as well as written communication skills prepare them for the 21st century," Karr added.

Toward that goal, Karr said there is an inherent need to establish strong basic skills while developing problem solving and team-building techniques.

Science offers one way to meet all these goals, Karr said, because it ignites the natural curiosity of children and focuses their interest on related cross-curricular activities including written and oral communication, meaningful math applications and even social studies.

"As a teacher, I saw first hand how science can turn kids on. Kids

Would women defile the Citadel?

Appeals are still pending on the question of admitting females to the Corps of Cadets at the Citadel, South Carolina's publicly-funded military academy. Is the school practicing illegal discrimination or upholding essential traditions?

Males need, deserve last 'refuge'

By William Hall
Public Affairs Office

commentary

Maybe I'm just prejudiced. I was raised on the historic cobblestone streets of downtown Charleston, S.C. (South Cakalacky for you Alabama folks). I survived the tourism, the naval base closing, having one of the worst baseball farm teams in the league, and even THE BIG ONE — Hurricane Hugo. But now I have to make a stand as I see hundreds of years of tradition beginning to buckle under the close scrutiny of the world.

PRO

Shannon Faulkner should not be admitted to the Corps of Cadets at the Citadel — it's that simple.

El Cid, as it is called by people whose Bulldogs are dear to their hearts, has long been the finest all-male military college there is (sorry, VMI). The tradition carried on by the "West Point of the South" is the reason so many young American men decide to commit themselves to the pain, stress and harassment of being a knob (a freshman, for those people without a Citadel-to-English dictionary).

These cadets wanted an education separate from women. They wanted an alternative route, and Faulkner wants to take this away from them. They don't like all of this bad press they're getting, and believe me, they're mad and so is the alumni association — powerful alumni that go all the way to the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Faulkner says she wants to attend the Citadel for the same reasons men do: the outstanding education, the excellent military training and, above all, the tradition. If the courts admit her, then all that would be lost.

And just why has she put up with all the troubles when it would be so much easier to go to another college? Is it because she wants to make a stand for women all around the world who have been discriminated against? I don't think so. I think it may be the book and movie deals that have been promised to her but won't be final until she has been admitted.

What makes the Citadel different — what gives those cadets a sense of pride — is exactly what Faulkner would take away from them by attending.

As far as her haircut, it doesn't matter if she gets her head shaved or not. She would have already taken so much from the corps, why not let her have long hair? Why not let everyone have long hair? Why not let the cadets slide on their training? Then they can start having coed dorms and wild parties with beer-bong competitions. The Citadel can then regress into the disorganization of every other college campus.

We supporters are up in arms, so what shall we do? There is talk within the alumni of going private, maybe even setting up a separate training facility for the Corps of Female Cadets.

So come on Faulkner, give it up. The Citadel survived the Civil War, two World Wars, Vietnam and the '70s women's movement. It will survive this.

So write your congressman, contact the Citadel Alumni, and call Hillary Clinton and tell them — Save the Males!

Whatever happened to equality?

By Shelby Carr
Bayonet staff writer

commentary

Should women be allowed to go to college at the Citadel? Do males, in order to better prepare themselves for military service, need a college women are not allowed to attend? If a woman goes to the Citadel, should she be required to cut her hair, or, more correctly, shave her head?

CON

When a student is selected by a college, yet leaves the part of the application form about her sex blank, the school should not be allowed to take back her admission.

Shannon Faulkner meets the qualifications, and the Citadel is only refusing her admission to the Corps of Cadets because she is a woman.

This sexual discrimination is made worse because the Citadel is a public college and is paid for by taxes.

If men need a separate school away from women, a point I do not accept, that school should not be funded with money from the government.

The government has laws that prohibit discrimination in hiring people based upon age, sex, creed, race and country of birth. Why should a public school be allowed to discriminate in the selection of students?

The argument that women can't make it through the Citadel, or any source of commissioning, is false. The military academies of the United States have already had women successfully graduate and enter military service.

Some say that having the Citadel all male allows the students to develop in a manner that produces better officers for the Army.

Let us consider an officer who attends the Citadel and receives a commission in the infantry.

After four years of being in an all-male school, he attends the Infantry Officer Basic Course (all-male), Airborne School (coeducational), Ranger School (all-male), and leads a scout platoon in Korea.

Eventually, he commands a company at the training center at Fort Jackson, S.C., where his entire company is female. How can this officer relate to his troops, and when did he learn to deal with women?

The women he would command are much different from the women he would have known in high school, and he would not know how they thought or felt.

Instead of providing an opportunity to grow, the all-male environment inhibits the necessary experiences and relationships the students will need both as officers and in the civilian world.

The recent court decision, as I understand it, is that the Citadel must allow Faulkner to attend next year as a member of the Corps of Cadets, but the school can force her to wear the same haircut that the male soldiers must wear.

The Army has regulations on hair for hygiene purposes, yet it recognizes the difference between men and women and allows two standards. Is the Citadel aware of something the Army is not? Will the school force Faulkner to have her hair shaved for hygiene purposes, or is the Citadel trying to get revenge for the courts putting an end to its discrimination?

Co-ed basic wouldn't have worked in 'old' Army

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet staff writer

commentary

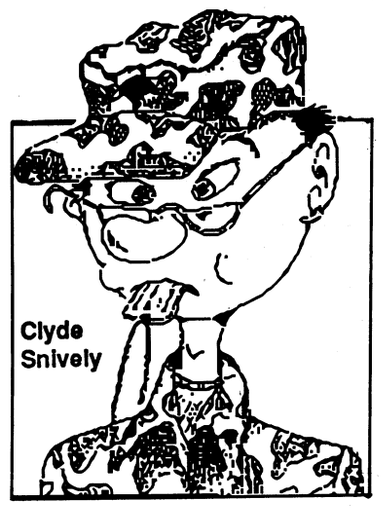
Sgt. 1st Class Burrell, where are you? Senior drill sergeant Burrell was the biggest, baddest drill sergeant to ever set size 12 boot on the sandy soil of Fort Jackson, S.C.

He could out march, out fight, out think any soldier or Marine who ever stepped foot on this planet. If he'd hadda, he coulda whipped a grizzly, stared down a motorcycle gang, and probably walked on water.

But his stock in trade was turning green recruits into the world's finest fighting men. And I emphasize the word "men."



T'weren't no womyn in Burrell's company. And I can tell you this, they wouldna lasted the long hot summer of '66.

I don't care if it was Airborne Annie, Hot Rock Spallman, or whoever, I can tell you, they wouldna made it.

Call me sexist. Call me a male chauvinist. Call me a bigoted male pig. Call me what you want, but I say again, no womyn woulda made it through Burrell's basic training.

There were a lot of male soldiers who didn't make it. Burrell reduced the son of a Marine two-star general to a withering mass of blubbering flesh.

He brought so much smoke on a New York tough, the kid broke down in formation.

Under Burrell, the gangstas from Philly and the Bronx made peace. They didn't like it, but it was that or spend some "counseling time" out back with Burrell.

Now Burrell didn't dislike womyn; there just wasn't any room for them in his Army. In his mind, the Army was about crawling through sand and mud on your belly, rifle cradled lovingly in the crooks of your arms.

Elbows and knees may have been bloodied, but the smoke pole came out in good shape.

Burrell's Army was about long, hot road marches as the summer sun cooked your brain under a steel pot. And it was platoon runs at Burrell's pace. There were no separate standards for the weak and malingering. They either kept up or got out.

Since those days when Burrell was king of Tank Hill and did his best to train soldiers to survive combat in Vietnam, the Army and basic training have undergone a lot of changes.

Swearing and harassment by drill sergeants are out. There is a more scientific approach to training.

We don't run in combat boots because it's not good for the feet and shins. We don't do full sit-ups because it's not good for our backs.

The five-station physical fitness test has given way to the three-event test. No more ripped and bloody palms from the horizontal ladder, no more cracked knees and elbows from the low crawl.

Now when we go through a training exercise we get after-action reviews and are encouraged to ask questions, instead of replying with a "Yes, drill sergeant."

And womyn are going through basic in droves. Often their scores are better than men's.

Should basic be made co-ed? Should the Citadel or VMI be forced into accepting women cadets?

The Army experimented with co-ed basic several years ago and discontinued it. Why?

Did we fix the problems that existed then?

On the other hand, the service academies, former bastions of male supremacy, were opened, grudgingly, to womyn and womyn have excelled.

Detractors of the co-ed idea say men's standards will be lowered. On the other hand, womyn might just push men to do better. And we know the womyn, out to make a name for themselves, will do better — either that or get discouraged and quit.

Fraternization is an issue. Under Burrell's leadership, that wouldn't have been an issue. No one would have had the energy nor the free time to fraternize.

People a lot smarter than I am will make the final decision about the efficacy of co-ed basic training. The courts will have to decide about the Citadel and VMI.

One thing I do know is we don't have to worry about it at Fort Benning since all we get here are infantryMEN.

But back at Fort Jackson, that Drill Sergeant concept will be put to the test and Burrell, wherever you are, I hope you don't hear about it.

498th returns from deployment

Shelby Carr

Staff Sgt. Ron Chapman, home from a deployment to Haiti, is reunited with his youngest son, Corey, 3.

By Shelby Carr
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning's soldiers from the 498th Medical Company (Air Ambulance) returned Oct. 13 after a 32-day deployment to Fort Bragg, N. C., and Haiti.

Family members and friends gathered at Lawson Army Airfield for a ceremony welcoming the 28 soldiers home. A few couples took advantage of the chance to dance to music provided by the Infantry Band before the ceremony got under way.

Col. Gregory C. Camp, Fort Benning's chief of staff, spoke at the ceremony.

"We're really proud of you," Camp said. "You were prepared to go at a moment's notice. We're forever grateful."

During their time in Haiti, the soldiers performed medical evacuation flights from Haiti International Airport. The UH-60 Blackhawk helicopters the 498th flew were six of the 15 Blackhawks deployed by the 56th Evacuation Battalion, the unit the 498th was under in Haiti.

During their time in Haiti, the soldiers performed medical evacuation flights from Haiti International Airport

The soldiers of the 498th were joined in Haiti by the 57th Medical Company (Air Ambulance), the only other medical company stationed in the United States to fly Blackhawks.

The 498th's primary mission was to support Operation Uphold Democracy with evacuation flights. The crews said they evacuated U.S. soldiers, Haitian nationals and Haitian soldiers.

Some of the patients were injured by U.S. military heavy equipment.

"(We were) evacing Haitians," said Sgt. George M. Mayers, a soldier of the 498th. "One guy almost lost his foot — a 13-year-old boy."

Mayers said the boy was hit by dump truck but survived without losing his foot.

The 498th flew patients from sites in Haiti to ships offshore and to hospital units in Haiti, said Camp.

"You appreciate America more every time (you return)," said Sgt. Joseph A. Brooks, a soldier from the 498th, who said Haiti was, "hot, very hot. People were really friendly. Even though we had a language barrier, they were really friendly."

The soldiers who deployed were in the air on the way to Fort Bragg about 21 hours after they received word to deploy. The 28 people and three helicopters then waited five days at Fort Bragg before deploying Sept. 16 with elements of the 57th Medical Company (Air Ambulance), finally arriving in Haiti Sept. 19.

The first group was joined by three more helicopters during the deployment.

During the deployment, the medical evacuation mission the 498th has on Fort Benning continued, although the 498th was only able to provide one helicopter for its mission, rather than the usual two.

DoD includes pay raise in Authorization Act

By Jim Garamone
American Forces Information Service

A 2.6 percent pay raise, force reductions in the active and Reserve Components and payment of cost-of-living allowance to stateside service members are among the highlights of the 1995 Defense Authorization Act recently passed by Congress.

The pay raise, up from the 1.6 percent President Bill Clinton requested, is effective Jan. 1.

The act gives DoD $263.6 billion in total budget authority, the level requested by the president for fiscal 1995, which started Oct. 1.

Congress used the authorization act to express its policy that the president should introduce a resolution to the U.N. Security Council to lift the arms embargo against Bosnia, if Bosnian Serbs have not acted on a peace proposal by Saturday.

The act calls for cuts of 85,484 active duty service members in fiscal 1995 and 44,753 in Reserve Component military strength. End strength for active duty is pegged at 1,525,692; for Reserve Components the number is 989,247.

The act also authorizes payment of a cost-of living allowance to service members stationed in some continental United States locations where nonhousing costs exceed the national average by a significant degree. The Department of Defense has wanted this authorization for years, but this is the first time Congress authorized such stateside COLA.

"The methodology and locations for stateside COLA will be worked out as we know more about the language of the authorization act," said Pentagon officials.

The act modifies the president's authority to call up reservists. Congress extended the initial call-up period from 90 to 270 days. Any extension will require congressional approval.

Other personnel aspects covered in the act include:

• Expands transition benefits to members of the Coast Guard;

• Allows limited pharmacy benefits for retired members who relied on a military pharmacy closed by the base closure process;

• Requires the secretary of Defense to develop a comprehensive policy on unlawful discrimination and sexual harassment by March 1.

"The equal opportunity and complaint procedures of each of the military departments ... must be substantially equivalent to the procedures of the Army on such matters," the act states.

• Adds money to specifically address health care issues affecting women in the military, $20 million for research into telemedicine and $20 million for continued research into the cause and treatment of Gulf War Syndrome;

• Directs DoD to establish a dental benefits program for military family members overseas; and

• Improves health care and housing benefits available to dependents of service members who die on active duty.

The act increases the recruiting budget request of $534 million by $72 million. Congressional officials said DoD needs the increase to ensure recruit quality remains high in an increasingly difficult recruiting environment.

The act also authorizes $5 million to accelerate modifications to Navy surface ships to accommodate women.

Congress also changed some funding priorities for weapon systems and equipment. The act calls for $125 million to preserve the bomber industrial base for a year. The act calls on the secretary of Defense to re-examine bomber requirements and capabilities. It also freezes current inventory of Air Force bombers at 95 B-52s and 95 B-1s.

Congress worked to preserve the industrial base in nuclear attack submarines, small arms, TOW missiles and tank engine production.

Congress continues to promote use of modeling and simulation in training, development of doctrine and acquisition.

In aircraft procurement the act authorizes $2.5 billion for development of the Air Force's F-22 and $1.4 billion for the Navy's F/A-18 E/F. Congress also called on Defense, the Air Force and the Navy to examine a derivative of the F-22 as a joint program and authorized $158.3 million to extend the life of Navy F-14s.

Congress continued funding for the C-17 transport aircraft. It authorized six new planes and added funds for long-lead items needed for eight more aircraft. For the Army, Congress added $72 million for six AH-64 Apache helicopters and $150 million to upgrade Kiowa Warrior helicopters. DoD is authorized $496.6 million for continued development of the V-22 tilt-rotor aircraft.

The budget authorizes $100 million to restore limited operational capability to SR-71 surveillance aircraft.

Congress delayed the president's request to field a shipboard version of the Hunter unmanned aerial vehicle and reduced the request of $604.2 million for the tri-service standoff attack missile by $298.9 million. Congress directed DoD to restructure the missile development program to include additional operational testing before proceeding to production.

The act funds $3.6 billion for a nuclear-powered aircraft carrier, $2.7 billion for three DDG-51 Aegis destroyers and $608.6 million for construction of strategic sealift vessels. Congress authorized procurement of M-1A2 Abrams tank upgrades and added $17.9 million to the request. Congress added another $108 million to the Army's budget request for M-1A2 tank upgrades so the Army could transfer a comparable number of M-1A1 tanks to the Marine Corps Reserve.

Congress authorized $510 million for Reserve Component equipment. The funds are in "generic" categories, and Reserve Component officials are to use them to purchase equipment that contributes most directly to their domestic missions.

The act continues the current allocation of depot maintenance workloads between DoD depots and the private sector. In addition, Congress allocated another $310 million to the administration's request of $7.2 billion for depot-level maintenance.

DPS: Post has new directorate

One screen is filled with application information such as name of person making the call, the location of the caller and the cross-streets of that location. The other screen displays a diagram map of Fort Benning showing streets and buildings.

Once the enhanced 911 system is operational, Tucker said, any telephone on post will be able to dial 911 and get a dispatcher. As it stands now, only post housing telephones can dial 911 and reach a dispatcher, she said.

"(The 911 system) is probably the primary reason that we've gone to the Directorate of Public Safety," Alton said. "It allows for one person to be responsible for all emergency-type services."

"We want to provide the best service we can as a team," said Arthur E. Simmons, Fort Benning's fire chief.

When the Fire Department was under the Directorate of Public Works, it was responsible for doing things other than fire control and prevention, Simmons said.

"We think we will be able to devote our attention strictly to the fire safety area for the post," he said.

The Fire Department does other things on post besides responding to fires, Simmons said.

The Fire Department checks fire codes in buildings, and has a rescue team, dive team and a hazardous material response team. The department also checks fire extinguishers on post, gives fire prevention classes to post students and supports Martin Army Community Hospital by filling in on the emergency medical service.

School's new commandant focused on fitness

Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

From her wiry, athletic build to her firm handshake and vigorous movements, she seems like a woman perfectly suited to the job as commandant of U.S. Army Physical Fitness School.

Lt. Col. Jeanne M. Picariello, who took command of the school Oct. 4, has not only worked with fitness and health promotion in her professional life but has had, she said, a lifelong appreciation and exposure to fitness.

"I come from a very athletic family," she said. "I have four younger brothers and we were always outside playing, involved in physical activities."

Picariello said the St. Louis school system, when she was growing up, stressed "heavy-duty playing" even outside of the regular sports program. The result of her home and school experiences, she said, was an enthusiasm and love for sports and "just being active."

Running and swimming are her particular favorites, she said, and she is a former member of the All-Army Track Team and, in 1975, became the first woman ever selected to the U.S. Modern Pentathlon Team.

One of her goals as commandant of the Fitness School, she said, is to get people "turned on" to the enjoyment of fitness. "Activity should be a natural part of your day," she said. "You should look forward to a good workout.

"What's happening in society is that we're becoming more sedentary. TV is a big factor, and schools seem to be scheduling less physical activity. It's just not emphasized as much as it used to be.

"I tell the staff we have to be available to the public," Picariello said. "You have to look the part, let people see you working out and enjoying it. If I'm out shopping or working out, I want people to feel they can come up to me with their questions. We never want to miss an opportunity to teach and make an impact."

Picariello said the cadre of the school has the same approach she does.

"The enthusiasm here is infectious," she said. "This is a good-natured staff, and they enjoy what they're doing."

The challenge in teaching fitness, she said, is to tailor programs to unit needs.

"One program won't work for everybody. Our approach now is toward more 'battle-focused' physical training," she said. "We zero in on a unit's METL (mission essential task list), analyze the physical tasks they'll be performing in combat, and try to tailor a program that will be fun and will reinforce those requirements.

"There's a lot of information out there," she said, "and you can buy a book on almost any aspect of fitness. One of the things we want to do is to streamline that information, put it in an easy, user-friendly, how-to-do-it format."

Picariello, who's been in the Army about 22 years, said she's seen a lot of changes in the way physical training is conducted.

"We've come a long way, and we're finally doing a lot of things right," she said. "In the old days, it was all the 'daily dozen,' running in combat boots and doing calisthenics that we now consider high risk.

"The philosophy now is that PT should make sense," Picariello said. "The master fitness trainer course emphasizes that point. We train junior leaders to go back to their units and develop creative fitness programs that are based on unit mission and METL."

Another of the school's mission is to conduct fitness research, which includes evaluating new training techniques and high-tech equipment.

Picariello said such equipment has its place in a training program, but that she would warn people not to be fooled by fast talk and gimmicks when it comes to technology and fitness.

"Units and individual soldiers have access to state-of-the-art treadmills, steppers and resistance training equipment when in garrison," she said. "We all know that when we go to the field or deploy, the high-tech equipment stays at home and traditional training techniques must be employed.

"The key isn't to have the latest high-tech equipment," Picariello said, "but to get up, get your body in motion, break a sweat, eat right and quit smoking. The bottom line is to exercise and practice healthy lifestyle habits."

One of her goals as commandant of the Fitness School, Picariello said, is to "maximize its contributions" to the Department of Defense.

"Other services don't have an equivalent to this school," she said. "We're working on coming up with exportable packages that we can get to other services and agencies, so they can use some of the programs we've developed."

Another task of the school, she said, is evaluating the PT test standards, especially the standards for women and upper-age groups.

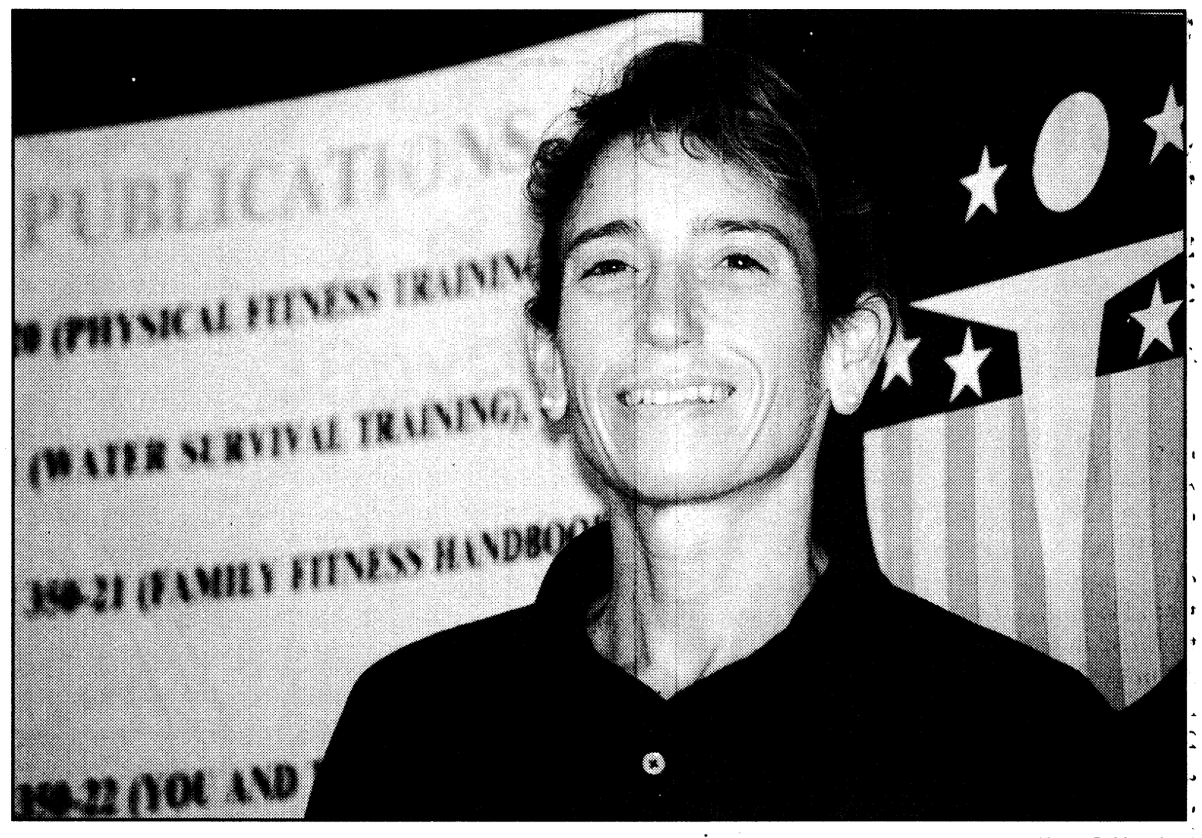
"A lot of our test units are deployed," she said, "so that process is going to take a little longer than we originally planned."

While she seems dedicated to her job, Picariello's interests don't end at the door of the Fitness School. She has traveled widely during her career, and said she's enjoyed the chance to get to know other cultures.

"I loved Panama and Europe," she said. "And I love cultural events, music, travel, reading, plays, restaurants and cooking. I'm not really a homebody; I've always been more the active type."

Picariello said food is one of her passions, and she found Spanish and Italian food to be very healthy.

"The Mediterranean diet is one of the best anywhere," she said. French food, on the other hand, with its tendency toward high fat and rich sauces, can be a challenge.



"It can be modified to be more healthy," she said, "and I have fun doing that when I cook at home. But when I go out, I sometimes let myself splurge. I'm not really a nutrition fanatic."

Before assuming command of the Fitness School, Picariello served as chief of Health Promotion for the U.S. Southern Command in Panama, with responsibilities for wellness programs for all American military members in Central and South America.

During that time, she traveled to more than 20 countries in the region to deliver programs on topics ranging from nutrition to suicide intervention for the DoD, State Department and other U.S. agencies.

Her experience also includes heading Army health and wellness programs in Germany, the Pentagon and the Army War College, and she served in Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and Iraq during and after the Gulf War.

Picariello said that while she loved Latin America and Europe, she's looking forward to seeing more of her native country now that she's back in the United States. While her job seems guaranteed to take up most of her time, it appears her energy level should be up to any amount of traveling.

Experts to survey Fort Benning's compliance with environmental laws

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

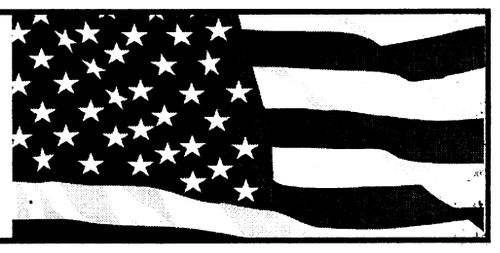
A team of 18 Army environmental experts arrived at Fort Benning Monday to survey how successfully the post complies with environmental laws.

The team, which consists of scientists and engineers from the provisional U.S. Army Center for Health Promotion and Preventive Medicine, Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., will stay on post through Oct. 28 to identify situations or operations on post that may be in violation of environmental laws.

While the purpose of the Environmental Compliance Assessment System survey will be to note deficiencies, said Burrill McCoy, chief of the Environmental Programs Management Branch of the Directorate of Public Works, the team will also help find solutions and target funds to fix any problems that might be found.

"This is not the type of inspection that is meant to punish," he said. "All Army posts undergo an environmental survey regularly. It's a great tool for helping us stay on track and avoid costly fines from state and federal environmental regulators."



Burrill said the team will perform a comprehensive survey of 22 areas, including management of air emissions, cultural resources, pesticides, solid waste, storage tanks, water quality, toxic substances and pollution.

"Obviously this is a big post and we can't show them every building or every foot of ground, but with their highly trained ears and eyes, the team members will really be able to put a finger on the installation's pulse and provide us with a valuable report," Burrill said.

All soldiers receive four days pay for one weekend's work. The average Reserve Component soldier will serve 38 days annually with his or her unit, but will receive almost double the money they received on active duty for that same time period.

Contact a Reserve Component career counselor for more information. Third Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, soldiers can call 544-3131; everyone else can call 545-6759.

are naturally curious, and we want to keep it alive and foster that curiosity," Karr said.

In addition to academic skills, science also fosters successful group interactions since students working in teams sharpen social and interpersonal skills while striving toward a common objective, she added.

In support of a strong science program, selected teachers at each school will lead science advocacy teams in an effort to "foster good science teaching throughout their school," Karr said.

Also in support of science, Fort Benning has tapped resources at Columbus College to enhance the curriculum by providing more opportunities for hands-on activities

Hands on techniques in all subjects are important at Fort Benning, Karr said, and to collect and exchange new strategies, more than 249 teachers participated in staff development courses over the summer and last school year.

"We have a staff that likes to learn and stay abreast of new ideas. They go far beyond what they have to do, and our teachers are supported when they try innovative methods," Karr said.

While new teaching ideas enhance education, parental involvement is also critical, Karr said.

"We have very active parent participation," she said, citing such programs as "Lunch and Learn," "Very Involved Parents," and "Parents as Partners" to illustrate how educators and parents unite to strengthen education.

Parental response to last year's Parent Academy was overwhelming, she said, and by popular demand the schools will once again host the weekend of seminars and small-group sessions focusing on education and effective parenting techniques.

Scheduled for February, the cademy will again feature Barbara Coloroso, author, teacher and nationally recognized parenting speaker.

In addition to parent involvement, technology also enhances education as students learn to apply what they have learned, said Karr.

Under Karr's leadership, the Fort Benning schools will continue to expand technology and emphasize programs already in place such as Project Atmosphere, the National Geographic explorers program and the International Arctic Project.

Also this year, plans are under way to expand the popular teleconferencing program piloted last year at Faith Middle School, Karr said.

Though technology is a valuable tool, Karr said it can't replace dedicated teachers as they work with children of variable and individual needs.

Students expressing a need for additional academic challenges are eligible for the academically talented and gifted programs, Karr said.

Students needing extra instruction to keep pace academically or work up to their potential have a special education program and various intervention programs designed for individual needs.

Karr said programs like Reading Recovery build the groundwork for future academic success.

Also with an eye to the future, Faith Middle School will join Spencer High School of Columbus in a partnership designed to prepare students for high school, Karr said.

The new program will also be helpful "to see if there are any areas of our (middle school) curriculum we need to emphasize," she said.

Also at Faith Middle School, a pilot program involving effective conflict resolution techniques will begin soon.

"We anticipate this will be a very helpful program," said Karr, who cited the need for team building and interpersonal skills as critical for the work force during the 21st century.

To prepare students for the work force, the schools use The Iowa Test of Basic Skills as one measurement of competence.

In general, Fort Benning students scored above the national average of 50 in a test administered in the spring. A score of 50 represents grade-level competence. In almost all of 15 areas tested, students scored above average with a 54 in reading and in math, 59 in language usage and 55 in problem solving. The area of vocabulary was an exception, with students slightly below average with a score of 48.

"Vocabulary is one area of interest this year," said Karr, who hopes to see an improvement as teachers incorporate more vocabulary into classroom curriculums.

Changing and implementing programs to target weak areas is one way Fort Benning strives to better serve the students and meet the high standards of the self-imposed "report card," Karr said.

Karr isn't alone in conducting self-evaluations. Just as she holds a vision for the school system, each school has its own individual improvement plan, she said.

After all, the goal is to provide a quality education for Fort Benning children — all 3,250 of them.

Free job search training available every Wed

Job Assistance Center

Job search training is essential in preparing soldiers for transition from the military into civilian life, according to Harold Ericksen, Job Assistance Center manager.

In most instances, soldiers have never searched for employment, having come into the military directly out of high school or college, he said.

"The job market today is extremely competitive and success depends on having a comprehensive understanding of the job search process and executing the process with great confidence and enthusiasm," Ericksen said.

This free training is provided by the Job Assistance Center. Each of the six counselors in the JAC have master's degrees in human resource related areas.

Also, they are certified counselors with human resource experience in both the public and private sectors.

Training begins with an eight-hour workshop conducted each Wednesday in Classroom 30, Infantry Hall, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., and is available for transitioning soldiers, spouses and Department of the Army civilians.

Reinforcement training is conducted through individual counseling in the Job Assistance Center using a variety of video, computer and library materials.

Ted Craig, Army Career and Alumni Transition Services manager, said he encourages all qualified individuals to participate in the JAC Job Search Training Program.

This program is designed to assist individuals in developing effective job search plans.

The training includes the following:

- Personal assessment

— Identifying stress and using it to your advantage.

— Maximizing use of available time and money.

— Identifying transferrable skills.

- Establishing job search objectives
- Expanding opportunities
- Networking

After completion of the workshop, individuals are assigned a career counselor at the JAC. Ericksen said he believes "individual career counseling is the cornerstone of the job search assistance."

For more information or to sign up for this training, call the Job Assistance Center at 545-2308 or 545-2309.

DISABILITY AWARENESS MONTH

Groundskeeper rides road to excellence

Named 'outstanding employee'

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

With the late afternoon sun casting his shadow far onto the lawn of Quarters 1, Carl Justice rode the mower, methodically crisscrossing the post commander's expansive yard at Riverside.

From removing the latest half inch of lawn growth to maintaining blossoming flower beds at the 12-acre property, Justice, who works for the Range, Roads and Grounds Branch of the Directorate of Public Works, has excelled at his work at Quarters 1 and 2 under the direction of friend and mentor, Thurston Rivers Jr., head gardener at Riverside.

For his 28 years of dedication to making the world more attractive, Fort Benning has named Justice the Outstanding Army Employee with a Disability for 1994, according to Mildred Watts, post manager of the Individuals With Disabilities Program.

Justice, a 49-year-old Alabama native who is mentally challenged, said he was pleased with the award.

Though grateful, Rivers said Justice does not seek recognition but considers his landscaping job to be a reflection of himself — an image that is neat and trim with everything groomed and in its proper place.

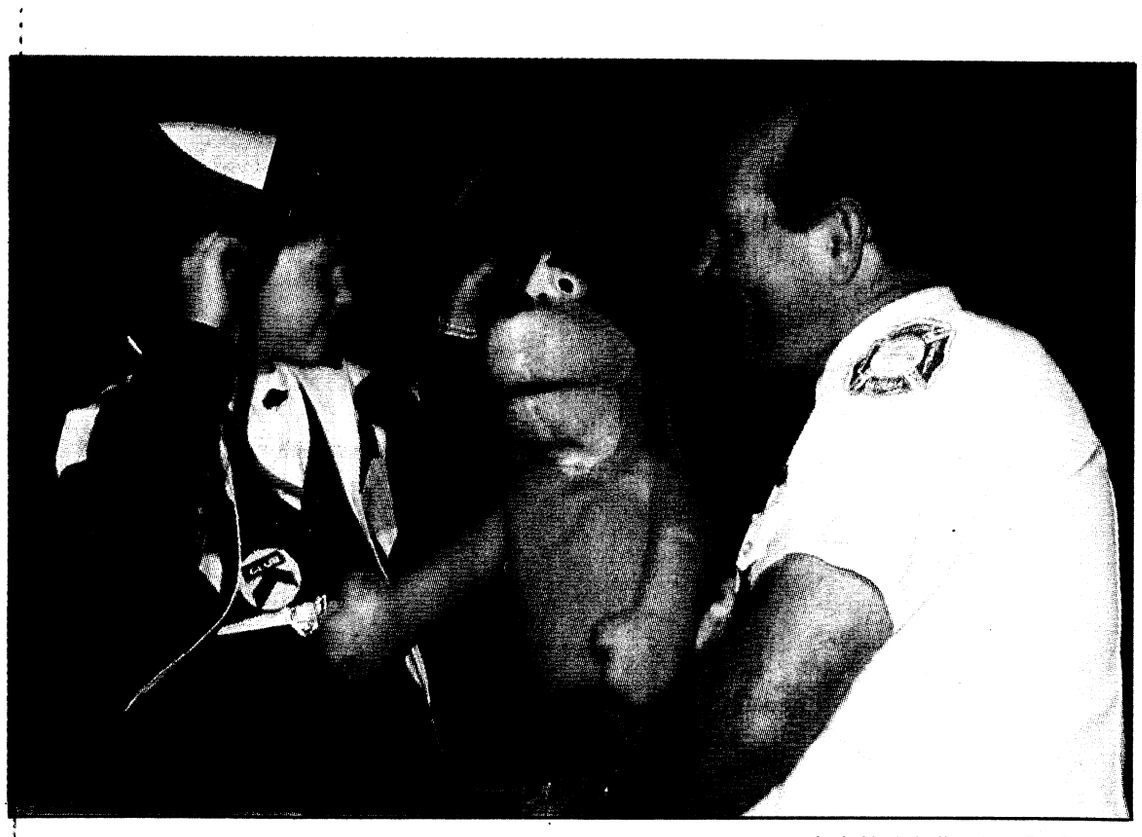
According to Bruce Sturkin, supervisor, Justice is tidy in his work. Co-workers who leave tools out will return to find Justice has replaced the items, said James Wilkinson, interim supervisor.

A quiet man by nature, this Southerner works easily with others but listens more than he talks, said Rivers, who has encouraged his friend to "open up more."

Justice, who worked as a road laborer prior to his Riverside assignment, attended vocational training after high school, then he joined the civil service in 1966.

Justice's award is one way disabled individuals are recognized for their contributions during National Disability Awareness Month, Watts said.

"We try to recognize those who have made significant contributions to the work force in spite of their disability," she said.



Justice is just one of 300 Fort Benning employees who succeed despite disabilities ranging from mild to severe, Watts said.

Downsizing has affected the work force, Watts said, but the program has continued success because of the support from the command group, managers and

In observance of Fire Prevention Week Oct. 8 through Saturday, Fort Benning students attended puppet shows, briefings and live-fire demonstrations all centered around the theme of protection and safety.

The purpose of Fire Prevention Week "is to teach children awareness of the dangers of fire, and instruct them what to do in case of an emergency," said Melanie Keating, assistant principal at Loyd and White schools.

The Fort Benning Fire Department, which visited the six post schools, discussed the well known emergency measure, "stop, drop and roll," with an added instruction, "and cover your eyes."

Fire Department officials also discussed other safety measures including the need to check the batteries in smoke alarms and procedures to follow in case of a fire.

In order to help contain a house fire, "Be sure to close the door if there is a fire in one part of the house and you can't get out. Air (in other parts of the house) makes a fire come alive," said Hollis Brown, fire inspector who fielded questions from Loyd School students Oct. 11.

The Loyd students were among those Fort Benning youngsters who watched a puppet show and discussed fire safety with officials. Some other Fort Benning students observed a demonstration with a fire truck while Faith Middle Schoolers observed a live fire demonstration to illustrate how quickly a blaze can spread.

Some basic fire safety tips were:

- Don't play with matches.
- Don't play with a stove.
- Fire will hurt you.
- Test the batteries in your smoke detector.
- Call 911 to report a fire.

MACH physical therapy open house to focus on ways to STRAIGHTEN UP

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

Members of the Fort Benning community will have a chance to examine and test state-of-the-art equipment designed for physical therapy at an open house Oct. 31 in the outpatient clinic of the Physical Therapy Department of Martin Army Community Hospital.

The open house, scheduled from 1 to 3 p.m., is part of National Physical Therapy Month, which this year focuses on "Posture Awareness," according to Lt. Col. Robert Bahr, chief of the Physical Therapy Clinic.

Posture improvement is important to good health and can prevent pain while reducing muscle strain and fatigue, Bahr said.

Also, proper posture, whether standing, sitting, walking or lifting, can help boost endurance and efficiency of movement, according to Bahr.

While promoting the importance of good posture, Bahr hopes the open house will educate the community on various types of interventions designed for rehabilitation and pain reduction to allow individuals to "function at their optimum," he said.

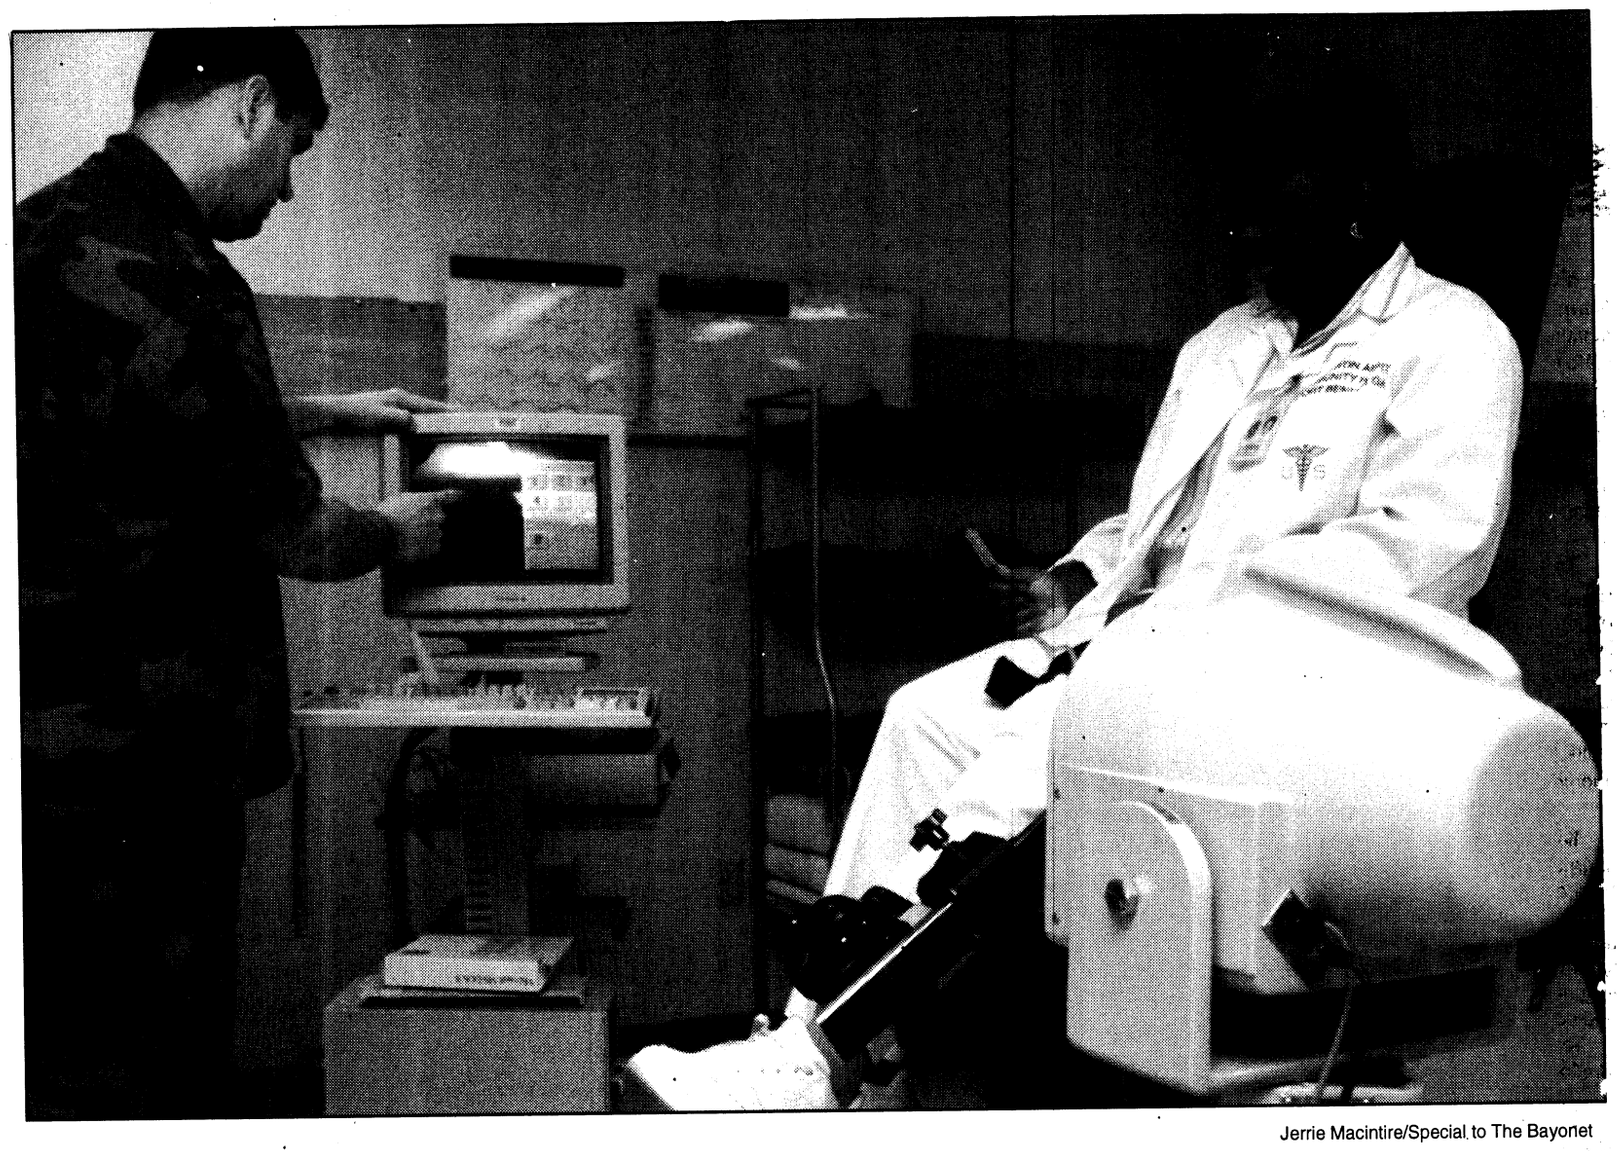
In support of that goal, the department has a staff of six support employees and four licensed physical therapists with another expected to arrive in January, said Bahr.

As part of the Army specialist corps, therapists prescribe limited medication and perform musculo-skeletal evaluations as well as X-rays, said Bahr.

"We also support the Orthopedic Department, preparing patients for surgery (with physical therapy) and then getting them rehabilitated afterward," he said.

"We see between 3,000 to 4,000 patients per month. We mainly see back, knee, shoulder and ankle problems," Bahr added.

Patients visiting the Physical Therapy Clinic include active duty soldiers and family members as well as retirees and civilians injured on the job, Bahr said.



In addition to working on pain reduction and with individuals needing surgery, the department also offers regular classes on pregnancy, diabetes and back pain to improve the quality of life for affected individuals.

The Physical Therapy Department has three clinics; inpatient and outpatient units at the hospital and a therapy services at Winder Health Clinic.

Physical therapy services in the military dates back to the World War I era when nutrition and physical conditioning was required by large numbers of soldiers.

President Harry Truman officially established the Army medical specialist corps in 1947, which today includes dieticians, physician assistants, and occupational and physical therapists.

For more information on the classes offered by the Physical Therapy Department or to test equipment such as ultrasound therapy for muscles and the Kin Com machine for joint problems, attend the open house Oct. 31 or call 544-3318.

36th's 'Monday night football' features gridiron drama

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

Despite sending units to Haiti, the 36th Engineer Group football league is well under way. With the post regular season winding its way to a conclusion, every game is now critical.

Monday night, two games were played on Engineer Fields No. 1 and No. 2.

Field No. 1

The 598th Maintenance Company, Get Some, downed the Road Dogs of the 104th Transportation Company in overtime 19-13.

The Road Dogs rumbled out to the early lead in the first half, when quarterback Jacob Knight rolled around the left side for a 7-yard touchdown run. Knight hit tailback Stephen Bush for the conversion and a 7-0 lead.

The drive was set up by the Road Dog defense when cornerback Gerald Austin picked off Get Some quarterback Homer Blake and returned the ball to the Get Some 12.

Blake threw his second interception of the half on Get Some's next possession when Bush stepped in front of the intended receiver Gerald Riley and picked off the pass.

The Get Some defense set up the offense for its first score of the game when Riley picked off Knight in the end zone giving the ball to the Get Some offense at its own 20.

Three plays later, Blake found tailback Wilmon Barber wide open in the corner of the end zone for a 36-yard touchdown strike. Blake tacked on the conversion for a 7-all tie at the half.

Both defenses started off the second half the same as the first. On the Road Dogs' second possession of the half, Riley came up with his second interception of the evening for Get Some.

On the very next play, Blake gave the ball right back when defensive back Andre Grace picked off Blake at midfield. The Road Dogs wasted no time in converting the turnover into points. On a third-down play, Knight hit tailback Gary Scott for 37 yards and the go-ahead touchdown and a 13-7 lead late in the half.

Get Some tied the score at 13 with less than two minutes to go, on a 43-yard bomb from Blake to Derrick Braswell, who had gotten behind the Road Dog secondary and was all alone in the end zone.

Regulation time ended with cornerback Ronald Penn picking off Blake for the third time.

In overtime, Get Some won the toss, getting the ball at the 10-yard line and four downs; It only needed one. Blake hit big tight end Derrick Sankfield for the go-ahead score and a 19-13 advantage.

The Road Dog comeback ended with Sankfield doing double duty on defense picking off Knight in the end zone to end the game.

Game 2

The River Rats of the 586th Engineer Company, (Assualt Float Bridge), sneaked past the Combat Medics of the 690th Medical Company,(Ambulance), 8-6.

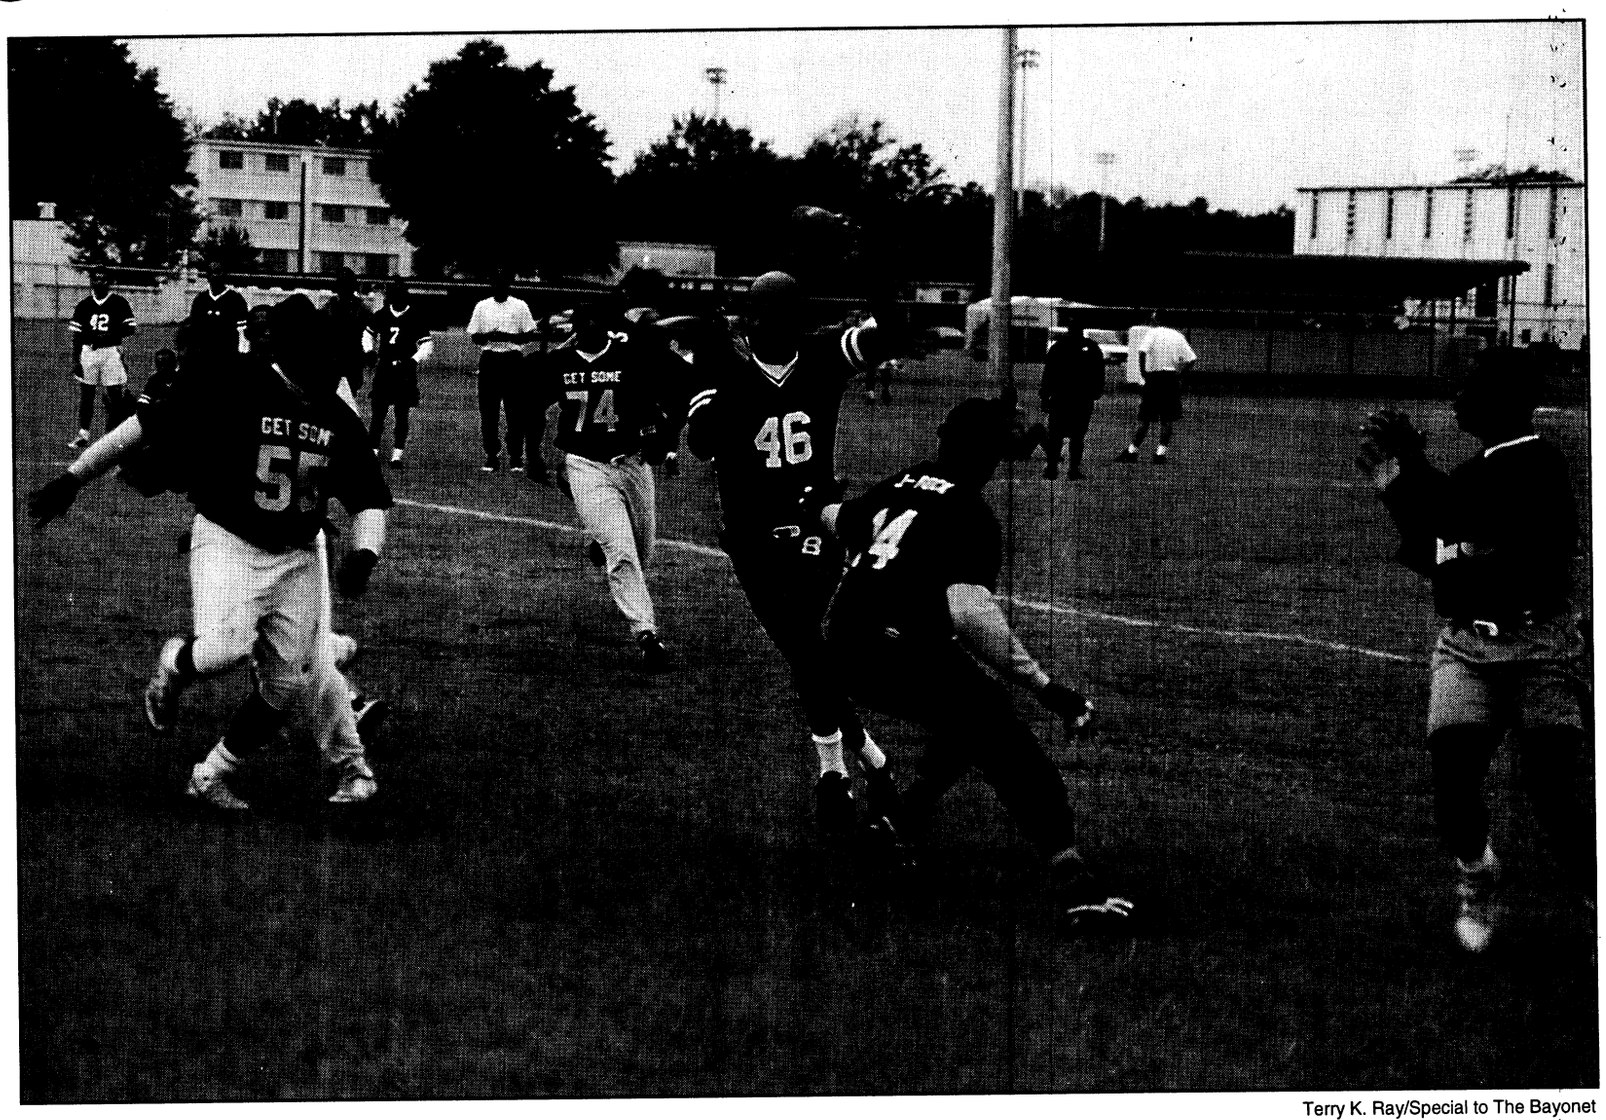
The River Rats climbed on the board in the first half, when Combat Medic quarterback Phillip Smith was sacked in the end zone for a safety and two points.

On the River Rats first possession of the game, the Rats went 42 yards in five plays with quarterback Michael Jordan hitting tight end Larry Walker with a 35 yard touchdown pass for an 8-0 advantage.

The half ended with River Rats clinging to a slim 8-0 lead.

The only score of the second half started from a turnover. Defensive back Tom Murphy of the Combat Medics kept the Medics' hopes alive when he picked off Jordan at the Medics' own 21-yard line.

A 42-yard dash by Smith and a personal foul penalty on the defense moved the ball down to the River Rats 2.



Due to penalties, five plays later the Medics crossed the goal line when Smith hit Michael Wood with a pass at the goal line cutting the lead to 8-6.

The Medics had a chance to tie the game by going for a two-point conversion but the conversion failed, giving the River Rats the win.

Field No. 2

Quarterback Rob McCaskell scored the winning touchdown in overtime for the Warriors of the 13th Combat Support Battalion, shutting out the 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital 6-0.

In the second game, Vincent Andrew threw touchdown passes to Kelvin Anderson and Quenton Thompkins to lead the Law Dogs of the Military Police Activity to a 12-0 shutout of the Falcons of the U.S. Air Force. Both teams are from the combined league.

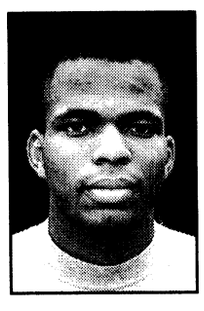
Special to The Bayonet©



The 10th annual Army 10-Miler "Run the River Bridges" Sunday in Washington D.C., brought a record 7,721 runners for the early morning event.

Four hundred and twenty-eight teams, both military and civilian (also a record), from around the world, competed for this year's top team honors.

The "Follow Me" team from Fort Benning finished fifth in the "active duty military men open" with Samuel Bobbitt leading the way with a time of 50 minutes and 45 seconds. Bobbitt also finished third overall.

Michael Raymond finished with a time of 53:10, Gerald DeGaetano came in at 54:58, Lloyd McDonald crossed the finish line at 55:25, Steve Lewis completed the race in 55:32 and Dave Millet rounded out the team with a time of 55:38.

Samuel Bobbitt finished third with a time of 50:45.

This year's finish follows 1993's team standing of third place. In 1991, the Fort Benning team was able to capture the Commander's Cup for the first time.

Bobbitt's time of 50:45 is the second best time by a Fort Benning ten-miler since a 49:53 time by Charles Dent in 1991. Bobbitt's third place finish overall also ties him with Dent for the best finish by a Fort Benning runner.

Vikings take Raiders

By John W. Peeler
Special to The Bayonet

The Vikings and Raiders met in the season opener of the Youth Services football program Saturday with both teams looking to open the season with a win, and the Vikings came away with a 28-0 victory.

The Raiders won the opening coin toss and controlled the ball for the entire first quarter of the game; however, on the last play of the first quarter, Vikings nose tackle Jerry Lawson and left tackle James Bell sacked the Raiders quarterback for a 3-yard loss causing the Raiders to turn the ball over to the Viking offense.

On the second play from scrimmage, Viking running back Tavaras Scoggin bounced outside the offensive line untouched and on his way to a 65-yard touchdown run. The two-point conversion failed and the Vikings led 6-0.

The Raiders' next possession ended on their first play following the kick-off when Viking left tackle James Bell broke through the line leveling the Raider quarterback causing the ball to be fumbled away.

Viking defensive end Jarrett Jonas came up with the ball for the Vikings and four plays later Viking wide receiver Jamaal Ruffin broke away on a 35-yard scamper resulting in a touchdown, and a Viking lead of 12-0.

Viking running back Edwin Jackson scored the two-point conversion giving the Vikings a 14-0 lead.

The Viking defense held the Raiders for the remainder of the quarter and went into the half leading 14-0.

The third quarter turned out to be a defensive struggle until the end, when the Vikings started to drive with an 8-yard pass completion from quarterback Michael Peeler to tight end Robert Williams.

Runs of 5 and 13 yards by running back Edwin Jackson and 19-yard touchdown run by quarterback Michael Peeler capped the quarter. The two-point conversion failed and the Vikings led 20-0.

The Vikings put together one more drive that resulted in a 17-yard touchdown run by Viking running back Tavaras Scoggin. Wide receiver Jamaal Ruffin added the two point conversion ending the scoring and a 28-0 Viking victory.

Stained water helps locate shallow bass

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

commentary

When bass tournament pro Mickey Bruce goes fishing this time of year, he doesn't want clear water. He wants dingy or stained conditions.

He's always looking for bass in shallow water, and in the early weeks of fall, nothing moves baitfish and bass into shallow water faster than stained water.

"Everyone believes the cooler water temperatures move bass shallow in the fall," says the Evinrude Outboards Pro Staff angler, "and it does. But it usually takes two or possibly even three cold fronts to really begin cooling the water.

"Rain is what really drops water temperature fast this time of year, and a good rain will also stain the water by washing in mud and debris from the surrounding countryside. That's what starts moving bait and bass shallow first."

Bruce says a 10-degree difference in water temperature is enough to move fish, and this can happen overnight with a good fall rain.

"The first areas to change are the shallow flats and the backs of the creeks on the upper end of a lake," he explains. "The harder and longer it rains the more the temperature will drop over other parts of the lake, as well."

When he finds stained water, Bruce then looks for baitfish. If he sees shad, he begins fishing. His lure choices include spinnerbaits, crankbaits and Carolina rigs, depending on the water depth.

Autumn rain can also work against bass fishermen, the Evinrude pro cautions. A heavy rain can turn a shallow lake very muddy in a hurry, and create high, cold, muddy water, which is one of the hardest times to catch bass.

The key to remember, he notes, is that when a lake is becoming muddy due to heavy rain, the lower end of the lake is usually the last part affected, and thus can produce the best fishing, especially if the water is only stained.

CID civilian's budget work pays off with top award

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Dianne Hatcher is CID's civilian employee of the year.

One look at her well-lighted office proves she's good with plants — there are leaves, fronds and trailing vines seemingly everywhere. But it's another talent with "green" that has gotten her recognized.

Dianne Hatcher's financial acumen has won her the Criminal Investigation Division's Civilian Employee of the Year Award for Clerical Support. Civilian clerical workers worldwide compete for the honor.

Hatcher works on the budget for the Criminal Investigation Division district that includes Fort Benning and nine subordinate offices in the Southeast and Puerto Rico. She has served in her current position of administrative assistant for office automation for 5 1/2 years, following 13 years of accounting experience.

"CID is very different from anything I've worked with before," she said. "You feel they're really doing a service for the community."

Hatcher said the hardest part of her job in this era of budget cuts is "stretching the money."

"We're actually getting more money than we used to, but it has to cover a lot more area," Hatcher said. "Many of the installations included in our budget now use a pay-as-you-go system, so if a sign needs repainting, for instance, we have to find the money for it."

Hatcher said she enjoys the challenge of her work and finds it a source of satisfaction that the mission always gets funded.

"It would be nice to be able to afford more, but we've all had to learn to do more with less," she said.

Hatcher's supervisor, Capt. Diane Hebler, said "several key things" made Hatcher the best choice for the award.

"She's conscientious and puts the job before herself," Hebler said. "She always ties up loose ends, and she shows a lot of initiative. If she can see a way to cut costs, she'll not only make the suggestion but write up a memo with all the details."

Hebler also said of the pleasant-mannered, soft-voiced Hatcher, "She's easy to work with, but very meticulous — she's never missed a suspense."

Hebler credits Hatcher not only with handling the budget, but also with the district's civilian personnel matters. "She stays until the work's done," Hebler said.

Hatcher gives her supervisors much of the credit for her award. "I'm sure there a lot of other employees who deserve to win, but there's a lot of paperwork involved in the nomination," she said. "They really pursued it for me."

Of her own performance, Hatcher said she "works hard, does what's expected, and always looks for a better way to do things."

Apart from growing plants and pruning the CID budget, Hatcher said she enjoys working with her church, singing in the choir, sewing and "all kinds of crafts — from cross-stitch to appliqued sweatshirts."

She and her husband, Chuck, have two children: a 17-year-old son, Jason, and a 13-year-old daughter, Lisa.

Hatcher and her husband visited Washington, D.C., during their trip to Bolling Air Force Base for the annual CID dinner and dance Sept. 30, where she received her award.

"I really enjoyed seeing Mount Vernon and the Vietnam Memorial," she said. "Both my children had already been to Washington, D.C., so it was my turn!"

MASS CASUALTY EXERCISE

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Wailing sirens and flashing ambulance lights brought rescue vehicles to a grisly scene at the corner of Davis Hill and 1st Cavalry Division roads Oct. 7.

Forty-nine people lay in the field there, victims of an accident involving a busload of soldiers and a privately owned vehicle.

Though some moaned with pain, they were only acting. Their wounds, and the accident, were simulated — a test of Fort Benning's ability to respond to a large-scale medical emergency.

Martin Army Community Hospital ran the mass casualty exercise with cooperation from both military and civilian agencies.

The hospital's Emergency Medical Services, the Military Police, the 498th Medical Company (Air Ambulance), the American Red Cross, the Fire Department and its Hazardous Material Team joined forces with civilian services such as the Lifestar Ambulance Company, the Columbus EMS and The Medical Center to successfully secure the accident scene and to transport and "treat" the victims.

Victims, played by Red Cross and civilian volunteers, soldiers from the 30th Adjutant General Battalion (Reception) and U.S. Army Medical Department Activity employees wore rubber moulage wounds representing everything from deep cuts to, in one case, an amputated leg. (The victim's real leg was bent back under the moulage cover).

Some victims wore ripped clothes, and others had wounds that dripped fake blood, but even those whose wounds were obvious wore cards pinned on their shirts identifying their blood pressure, pulse and the extent of their injuries, so they could be treated accordingly.

The first paramedics at the scene triaged the victims, separating them into groups according to the severity of their injuries.

Once identified, victims in the most critical condition were taken to the hospital, while firefighters, members of the emergency response team and crews of the gathering ambulances moved patients to designated areas and tied colored bands on the victims' wrists to indicate which group they belonged to — red for most critical, yellow for least, and so on.

Medical workers then began initial treatment, bandaging and splinting wounds and starting intravenous bags.

Though the victims were not actually injured, it was not hard to approach it like it was "the real thing," said Sgt. Geoff Smith, who acted as the treatment officer for the exercise.

Smith said he responded to a real mass casualty accident on his way back from Atlanta recently, when he was the first to arrive on the scene of a car wreck involving a family of five.

"I was there for about five minutes by myself," Smith said, "and that was in the back of my head during the exercise."

As treatment officer, Smith coordinated with the medical director and transportation officer on the scene to keep a running tally of how many victims were taken in each ambulance run and when they reached the hospital.

At the hospital, doctors met the incoming patients at the emergency room entrance, again triaging the patients and directing the litter bearers to take them to the proper place in the hospital, where they were diagnosed and handled as if their injuries were real.

With the movement of large groups of troops on post, an accident like this one could realistically happen, said Dr. Brian Baxter, director of pre-hospital care.

"We pretty much train as if it were real, so that when the real thing occurs it goes smoothly," Baxter said.

Success of the exercise was based on "how quickly and thoroughly we took care of all the patients," said Col. Michael J. Kussman, hospital commander.

The accident scene was cleared in about an hour and 10 minutes, Baxter said, which was very close to what they were aiming for. At the hospital, because the injuries were only simulated, things went more quickly than they would in a real situation, Kussman said.

The real point, he said, was "to learn from each experience, which will ultimately make us better at handling emergency situations."

ITB: 2nd Battalion 58th Infantry changes hands

By Shelby Carr
Infantry Training Brigade

During a change of command ceremony on Wetherby Field Oct. 12, the 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, received a new commander.

Lt. Col Michael A. Norton took command from Lt. Col. Bruce D. Grant, who has commanded the battalion for the past two years.

During his time in command, Grant was the driving force behind the move to make the defensive live-fire exercise of one station unit training a more realistic night event, and he had a rappelling tower built, said Col. Theodore R. Severn, commander of Infantry Training Brigade.

"He trained the heart, the soul, the basics of being an infantryman," Severn said.

Grant's next assignment will be at Vicenza, Italy, as part of the general staff for the Southern European Command.

"(Grant) trained the heart, the soul, the basics of being an infantryman."

— Col. Theodore R. Severn
Commander, Infantry Training Brigade

Norton started his military service in the Marine Corps in 1968 and served in Vietnam and Cuba.

He enlisted in the Army in 1975 and served with the 82nd Airborne Division until he went to officer candidate school in 1978.

Norton served with the Army in Korea, Panama, Fort Benning and the Pentagon.

As an enlisted soldier, Norton served as a rifleman and squad leader.

He has also served as a scout platoon leader, mechanized infantry company commander, a battalion operations officer and executive officer and a brigade operations officer.

His awards include the Bronze Star Medal with "V" device, Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry, Marine Combat Action Ribbon, Master Parachutist Badge, Ranger Tab and Pathfinder Badge.

world war II

50 years ago this week ...

• Gen. Douglas MacArthur's troops invaded the Philippines, landing on the east coast of Leyte Island. Four U.S. Army divisions met strong opposition at only one of the four beaches as an American armada of battleships, carriers, cruisers and destroyers pounded the area with shells before the landing and during its early stages.

The Japanese 16th Division retired to prepared positions inland to await reinforcements. By the end of the first day, 132,000 men were ashore. MacArthur landed a few hours after the assault troops and broadcast to the Philippine people, recalling his famous promise "I shall return."

• As the Japanese navy rushed reinforcements to the Philippines the U.S. Navy attacked. The furious Battle of Leyte Gulf was a shattering defeat for the Japanese. Four carriers were sunk, leaving the Japanese very few of their purpose-built carriers.

Of even more consequence was the serious damage done to their battleship and cruiser force. Three battleships and 10 cruisers had been lost, others had been damaged and all of the survivors had been forced to retire without ever coming to grips properly with the American forces. The Battle of Leyte Gulf has been called the greatest sea battle in history. The total number of participating ships was 282.

• U.S. troops captured Aachen, the first German city taken by Allied forces. The fighting was street by street, and the German defenders used the city sewer system to harass the U.S. invaders.

The Germans surrendered the heavily damaged city Oct. 21. Aachen Cathedral, where Charlemagne had been crowned, emerged unscathed.

• The 1944 Nobel Prize for literature went to Danish author Dr. Johannes Jensen for his novels "The Fall of the King" and "Long Journey."

• At Fort Benning, the Infantry School announced that the Sixth War Loan campaign would officially open on Nov. 20, with War Bond shows called "Here's Your Infantry" being staged in 18 states over the four-week drive. The goal was to sell 14 billion dollars worth of war bonds. The troops for the shows came from the 3rd and 4th Infantry Regiments.

ask the judge

By Rick Parker
Legal Assistance Division

The Legal Assistance Division sees a number of clients each week who have questions or problems concerning information reported by credit bureaus.

A credit bureau, or credit reporting agency, is a business that regularly assembles or evaluates credit information on people to furnish the information to third parties.

Although some small credit bureaus get and give information only on a local basis, for the most part, credit bureaus rely on information assembled by one of three major national credit databases — Equifax, TransUnion and TRW.

The credit bureau in Columbus gets its information from Equifax; as a result, a report obtained from the credit bureau in Columbus may not contain the same information that would appear in a report from TRW or TransUnion.

If you want to see what information might be reported on you to potentially anyone in the world, you would need to obtain copies of reports from all three databases.

It is a good idea to obtain a copy of your credit bureau report every few years. Occasionally, you will find that information being reported is inaccurate or outdated. Sometimes the inaccurate or outdated information may be of a nature that would prevent you from obtaining credit.

Given that it takes a while to get these errors corrected, it is best to try to start correction measures early. Under federal law, if you believe that your credit bureau report contains inaccurate information, you have the right to take action in two ways.

• You may, in writing, advise the credit bureau of the dispute. If you do so, it is best to quote the entire entry off the report that contains disputed information, and then identify the specific information in the entry you dispute.

The credit bureau must then, within a reasonable time, investigate the disputed information. This means that the bureau must contact the creditor reporting the information. If the creditor cannot verify the information or informs the bureau that the information is incorrect, the bureau must delete the inaccurate information.

If the creditor stands by its information, the bureau has no choice but to continue to report the information you dispute. The dispute is then between you and the creditor.

• You may also request that the bureau put a statement of dispute in your report regarding what you believe to be inaccurate information. The statement may be up to 100 words long. Once in place, anyone who requests a copy of your credit report will also receive a copy of the dispute statement.

Certain information, because of its age, is considered under federal law to be obsolete and should, therefore, not be a part of your credit bureau report. For the most part, adverse or bad information is considered obsolete after seven years; however, records of bankruptcy filings may be carried for up to 10 years.

The seven- and 10-year limits do not apply where a credit report is to be used in connection with a credit transaction involving $50,000 or more (most mortgage applications), an application for life insurance for $50,000 or more, or an employment application where the annual salary is expected to involve $20,000 or more.

As you can see, credit information is likely to be involved in many aspects of life other than just applications for car loans or credit cards. It is important that these reports be accurate and up-to-date, and ultimately, you must ensure that your credit reputation is being reported correctly.

You can obtain the addresses of the major credit databases, as well as advice and assistance regarding these problems at the Legal Assistance Division. Call to make an appointment to meet with an attorney at 545-3281.

voting news

Federal Voting Assistance Program

The Federal Voting Assistance Program will conduct a post-election survey to assess voting participation in the Nov. 8 election as well as to identify areas for improvement in the absentee voting process for citizens covered by the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act .

Groups surveyed

To provide a broad base of statistical information on absentee voting after the November election, six groups impacted by the act will be surveyed. They are:

- Members of all branches of the armed forces,
- Federally employed civilian personnel overseas,
- Unit voting assistance officers in the armed forces,
- Nonfederally employed civilian citizens overseas,
- Embassy and consulate members, and
- Local election officials in the United States.

Worldwide distribution

Survey forms will be distributed to a statistically random sample of the above groups the week of the Nov. 8 election.

Survey recipients are encouraged to complete the questionnaire and return it on a timely basis.

Participation in the survey is voluntary. Only persons involved in collecting or preparing the information for analysis will have access to completed questionnaires, and only group statistics will be reported in the formal report. At no point will names be associated with the demographic profile, reported voting behavior or any other information solicited from the questions on the survey.

Those participating in the survey respond to questions regarding voter participation, assistance provided to individuals attempting to vote, absentee voting procedures and other related subjects.

Overseas civilian citizens

The U.S. citizen address lists, maintained by the consular officer in each U.S. Embassy and Consulate and used for official purposes only, form the basis of the sampling list for distribution of the survey to private civilian citizens outside the United States.

These citizens are especially encouraged to ensure their overseas addresses are included on the registration lists of their local American embassies or consulates and that they are current and accurate. By doing so, they have the opportunity of being randomly selected and participating In the survey.

Give children rules for 'home alone' stays

Egleston Children's Hospital

Sooner or later your children may have to spend some time at home alone. You may have to go to the store or may be at work and cannot be there when your children come home from school.

The child safety experts at Egleston Children's Hospital recommend using the following to assure your children stay safe when they are home alone.

• Identify a safe neighbor for your children. A safe neighbor lives close by your home and will be able to assist your children if they need help.

• Review with your children the importance of checking the home before entering. Your home should look exactly the way it did when they left. If something is different, they should immediately go to a safe neighbor's home.

• Advise your children to keep their key with them at all times and in a safe place. If your child is wearing the key around his or her neck, it's best to tuck it inside his or her shirt.

• Teach your children not to show their key to anyone and not to give it to anyone to hold.

• Teach your children how to report emergencies to 911. Be sure they know their name, address and phone number.

• Examine your home and remove or lock up hazards. Maintain working smoke detectors.

• Teach your children to stop, drop and roll if their clothes catch on fire.

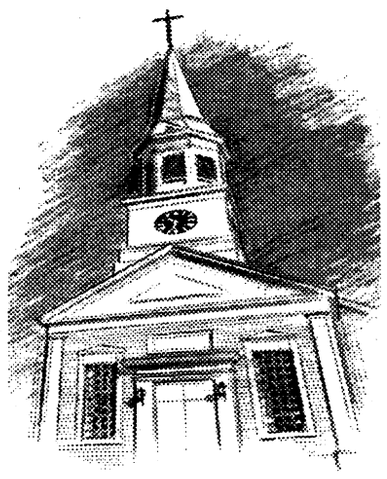
• Talk to your children about which appliances are safe to use and review with your children how to operate them.

• Provide healthy snacks for your children. They should not have to be cut or cooked, and should be easy to reach.

• Review with your children what to say to strangers on the telephone. Tell them to say their parents are busy and then offer to take a message.

• Let your children know that if the caller scares them, they should hang up and call you or a safe neighbor right away.

• Help your children respond if a stranger knocks on the door. Your children should never unlock the door. Teach your children to use the peephole and to always talk through the door. If it's a delivery, your children should tell the stranger to come back later.



If the stranger threatens your children, tell them to call 911.

• Provide safe, at-home activities and materials to occupy your children's time in a safe and creative way.

For more information about home alone safety or any other area of child safety, call Egleston Children's Hospital at 321-KIDS.

Change is not only seasonal

reflections

Only a short time ago there were buds on the branches. Now the are leaves, turning various shades and different colors as they prepare to die. They will fall off those branches, eventually be gathered up and thrown away.

The cycle is complete. It will start over after the winter. The changing leaves offer a spiritual message to those who want to pay attention. They speak to us of life and death, of living and dying, of growing and changing, and starting over.

We are created in the image and likeness of our God, but we are created with a human nature that remains a mystery and a body that grows and changes each day. Even our personalities grow and change with us as the days and years go by. We were never meant to be the same; we were created for growth. We are meant to change — to live and to die somehow in some way each day.

There are aspects of our personalities that are beautiful and positive and self-rewarding: the joy we find in love, the sense of gratitude in knowing each of us is special in the eyes of the creator, the fulfillment that comes when we find a way to enrich the life of another person. There are aspects that tend to be negative and sometimes even ugly: the desire to appear better than others, the reluctance to share what has been given to us, and the lack of concern for the hungry and the homeless people of our world.

The positive aspects are meant to be cherished and nurtured, not only for our own personal happiness and fulfillment, but also for the benefit of all God's people, specifically those who somehow touch our lives.

The negative aspects are meant to be changed, and that entails dying - dying to our selfishness, our pride, our self-centeredness, our blindness to the needs of others, our reluctance to address the spiritual dimension of this human existence.

There are parts of us that need to die. Only those who understand and address that fact find the happiness and peace that God promised. We need to die of whatever it is that conflicts with the will of God and the love to which we are called.

Those persons who never see or address the negative aspects of their personalities are not conscious of their need to grow and to change. They see only their good qualities and virtues, but miss those things that need to change in order for them to grow into the spiritual and psychological mature person that God created them to be.

The leaves have a gentle way of reminding us that this human life on Earth was never meant to last forever. We begin the process at the moment of conception and the growing and changing continue until the body finally quits.

Change is a necessary part of life. Not to change is to die. Growth is the way in which God planned for us to reach our fullest potential. Not to grow is to frustrate God's plan of creation.

Dying is a part of all this — dying in the sense of encouraging the negative aspects of our lives to disappear. That takes work. It involves pain. It cannot happen without a conscious effort. What is it that keeps you from being the spiritually mature person that God created you to be? What part or parts of your personality hinder your relationship with God?

What is it about you that needs to die in order for you to find the peace and happiness and fulfillment that God wants you to have?

Watch the leaves. They are beautiful and they have a way of proclaiming God's awesome plan of creation. They grow, they change, they tell the wonder of life, and then they die — so do we, each moment, each day, each year. We rejoice in the wonder of God's creation, we thank God for the joys that we have already experienced.

When we die of those things that interfere with God's plan for us, then and only then will we have lived.

Basic prayer means not forgetting the basics

By Richard D. King

reflections

The Falkland War, like every other military encounter, showed the armies of the world many lessons.

At great human expense, Britain and Argentina illustrated a valuable lesson: do not overlook or neglect the basics, the fundamentals of warfare.

Logistics for the British were continually a difficult struggle because they had to transport their supplies more than 8,000 miles.

Most of their problems stemmed from the lack of supplies. "The land forces fought all the way on shoestring resources" wrote Max Hasting, in "The Battle for the Falklands."

The British experienced significant misunderstandings between commanders afloat and those ashore. It was even worse between the different services.

The motto of the Falkland War was "You never know." The British troops adopted the motto because intelligence was "extremely skimpy concerning the organization, abilities and personalities of the Argentines" ("The Battle for the Falklands"). The chief enemies of the British were their own supply difficulties, the weather and Argentine air power.

The Argentines possessed better equipment and heavier firepower than the British in many areas. However, their tactics, fieldcraft and motivation were lacking. The Argentines never had strong morale or determination.

They possessed adequate stocks of ammunition and food but had immense difficulty distributing them to the soldiers on the hills. Poor Argentine leadership produced a high incidence of cold-weather injuries among their troops.

Britain did win the Falkland War by returning to the basics.

They traveled dozens of miles east toward Port Stanley by yomping, a word used to describe cross-country foot marches with full pack. The British won much of the battle with "rifle and bayonet, age-old infantry tactics of destroying the enemy," according to Bruce Watson in "Military Lessons of the Falkland Islands War: Views from the United States."

The world observed the unchanging, fundamental truth "that only ground forces possess the power to exercise direct, continuing and comprehensive control over land, its resources and its people..." ("Military Lessons of the Falkland Islands War: Views from the United States")

In a direct correlation, the daily spiritual battles of a believer must be fought using the basics — Bible reading, prayer and Christian fellowship.

"Therefore take up the whole armor of God, that you may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to stand" (Ephesians 6:13 NKJV).

God's goodness is manifested all around us

By Robert Pamala
USAIC Chaplains' Office

reflections

Many times we think that God is good. We pray that his goodness will be manifested in our daily living. We know that the goodness of God is expressed in the gift of his life.

It is sometimes very difficult to notice that in our busy world, trying to make the deadlines, keeping busy with various appointments, agendas and everyday events, we don't stop to appreciate what God has given us.

I remember the story of a soldier who used to get up every day at 6 a.m. and go for a walk. He was running, walking, singing and getting ready for a new day. He observed the birds, listened to their morning chirping and played with the squirrels and grasshoppers. When asked by his wife if he prayed, he used to answer that going out and watching the sky for the late moon and the sunrise was his prayer. He used to say that this is how he found out that God is good. "I pray on weekends in the church, study the scripture, but my yard is my daily Bible reading," he said.

He attributed the greatness of the world to God's goodness. His appreciation was his thankfulness. There are many ways we can thank God for his love. We can pray and offer him our gratitude as David did when he had won the battle — falling on his knees and singing in psalms and song full of the spirit.

A woman approached the chaplain in one of the military installations in Germany and said, "Pastor, I like to pray and worship. My husband even rigged a portable altar in our bedroom. I love my lord very much. Every night before I go to bed I bow before our altar, kiss the ground and thank God my creator for everything he has done for me. I praise him for every joy and disappointment, for in joys and sorrows the goodness of God speaks to us so powerfully.

The Bible tells us the story of another great woman of faith, the Virgin Mary, who was declared by Time Magazine "the most famous woman of all ages." Mary praises God for his goodness and love in one of the most wonderful prayers of the entire scripture. My soul proclaims the greatness of the Lord for he has looked with favor on his lowly servant ... He has come to the help of his servant Israel for he had remembered his promise of mercy to Abraham and his descendants for ever ... The goodness of God who is "good all the time."

To be thankful means also to worship with the community. We think many times about the blessings and graces being poured upon us where we gather to pray. In a variety of congregations, the spirit of his love and peace reveals to us his mysteries. That's why we come to be together in a place of worship to share and be reunited again in the spirit of love.

Come join us at the Kelley Hill chapel to share and be reunited again in the spirit of love at our upcoming Mass. Kindly pray for this intention.

High morals achieved by sacrifice

By Stephen Fry
USAIC Chaplains' Office

reflections

"I want it all, and I want it now" are the words to a rock song that was popular some time ago. These lyrics illustrate the self-centeredness in our culture.

Recently one of the television talk shows interviewed married couples who were living the swinging lifestyle. They were both openly committing adultery in each others' presence. These couples chose each other as husband and wife, yet they have disregarded the Lord's word about what it means to be husband and wife. They are living a contradictory lifestyle.

Our world is full of wrong examples for those who learn mainly by example — our children. We want them to be productive individuals and succeed in the world, but we do not teach them the skills and the commitment it takes to achieve success.

We teach them that if they play basketball until midnight, after the game they can get help to acquire job skills. How can they be productive after staying out all night?

It is only when they are willing to sacrifice fun for hard work that they can achieve their full potential. Fun and games must be secondary to hard work and education.

We are saddened to read about innocent children being killed in drive-by-shootings. We lament that they were in "the wrong place at the wrong time." These killings are often caused by self-centered individuals who want their vengeance or honor defended at all costs. They do not care about anyone other than themselves. These people are not willing to work out their problems or consider motive, reason and forgiveness.

The words of Jesus ring true, "Whoever wishes to save his life shall lose it..." (Matthew 16:25 NAS).

This points to the futility of being self-centered. The way to an enjoyable life is not by disobeying the law or by getting all that you want. The Biblical principle states that when you give to others you will receive much in return.

Through hard work we gain respect and provisions for our families and their future. Safer neighborhoods occur when we obey the moral and judicial laws of our society.

A return to Biblical principles of giving to others and working for the future will allow us to enjoy our God-given life.

Jaclyn Smith stars in 'Family Album'

By Jay Bobbin
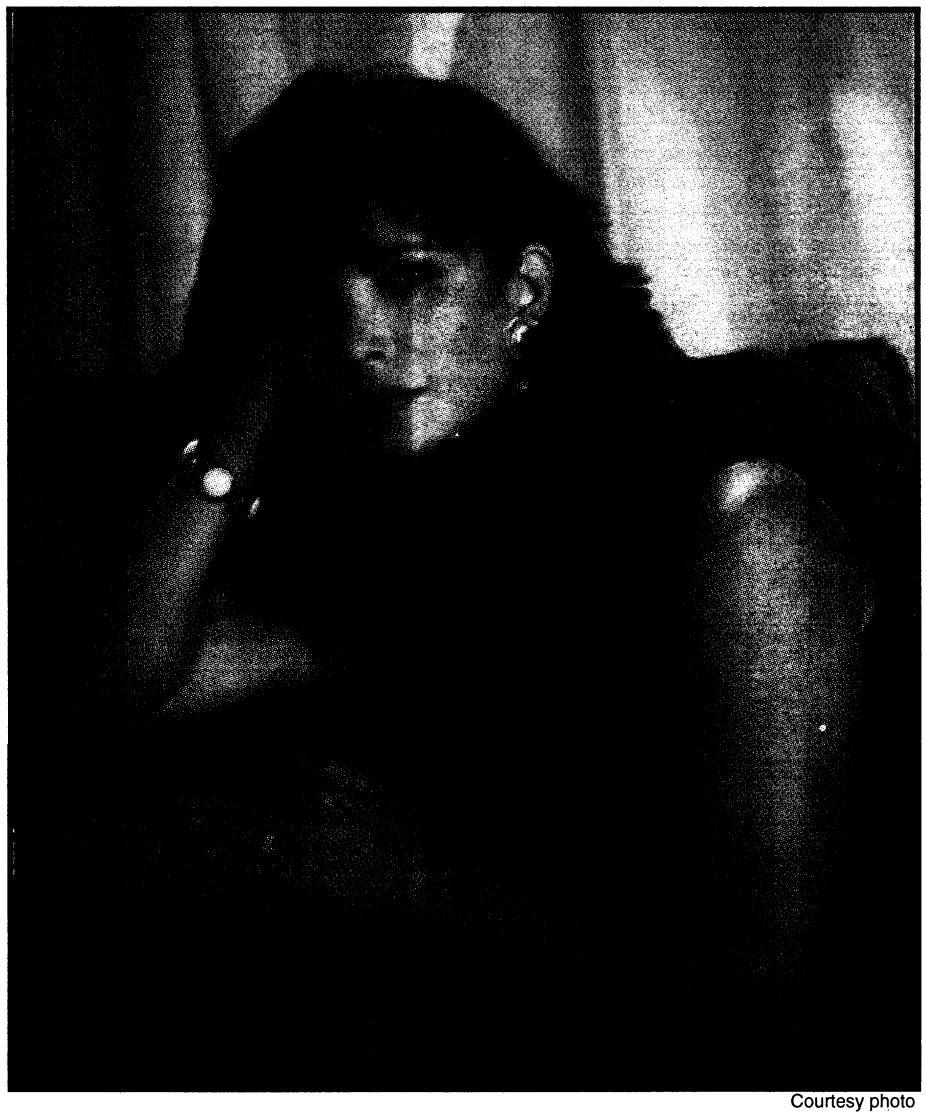
Tribune Media Services



If the work of a given author keeps providing meaty roles, once is not necessarily enough for Jaclyn Smith.

SPOTLIGHT

The popular home-screen staple already has proven that by starring in adaptations of two Sidney Sheldon works — "Rage of Angels" (and its sequel) and "Windmills of the Gods" — and she's now going a second round with another best-selling novelist. Having appeared in the 1990 version of Danielle Steel's "Kaleidoscope," Smith brings another of that writer's books to life in Sunday and Monday's new NBC miniseries "Family Album," the saga of one clan's tragedies and triumphs over four decades.

Smith plays a popular actress of the 1950s who gives up her career to marry a rich playboy ("Twin Peaks" alumnus Michael Ontkean) she meets while touring Korea, where he is stationed in the Air Force. They start a family that ultimately numbers four children, but despite their initial happiness, much heartbreak lies ahead ... with situations ranging from the husband's womanizing and the loss of the family fortune, to the various dilemmas experienced by the couple's two sons and two daughters.

As with all of NBC's Steel-inspired ventures of recent seasons, including last month's "A Perfect Stranger," the latest one is executive-produced by television veteran Douglas S. Cramer (who was partnered with Aaron Spelling on developing one of the first Steel projects ever done for TV).

Jaclyn Smith

"I just felt thrilled to do this," says the pleasant Smith, "because I'm a big Danielle Steel fan. I think that a lot of the time, they don't want to use the same (lead performer) twice, because there are quite a few actresses out there who can do these, so I feel honored to have been able to do this one. A four-hour production is certainly more ideal and suitable to her books, and 'Kaleidoscope' (which was a two-hour film) could have gone four hours easily. In that, we had to drop out the whole story of my character's childhood, but the networks do fewer miniseries today. There's more time and more money put into them, so here, we had the luxury of having the writer (Karol Ann Hoeffner, who turned the Steel novel into teleplay form) on the set a lot. That's something you don't always have with a two-hour movie."

What: "Family Album"
When: Sunday and Monday on NBC

Smith emphasizes that Steel herself "oversaw everything, every change" via telephone conversations and faxes, which was the same way it worked when Smith did "Kaleidoscope." The actress reports, "She does see dailies, and I know she is very happy with this. Every now and then, we were told that certain things were her wishes, like a favorite line of dialogue staying in. At one point, we were going to shorten the beginning of the miniseries, which is about the Korean War. She likes to write on a large canvas, though, and she didn't want that taken out. I don't blame her, since that's where my character and the man she's going to marry first meet."

Protect your family from unsafe houseplants

By Caejar Cox
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Most household chemicals are labeled "keep out of reach of children," but some houseplants are easily reached by children and can be just as deadly.

Watch "Fort Benning Today" to find out more about these seemingly innocent plants and what you can do to protect your family.

Motorists traveling on post in the morning or leaving at the end of the workday will no longer see military police officers conducting the traffic cut, the rerouting of traffic during peak hours.

USAIC-TV Schedule

USAIC-TV operates 24 hours a day on post cable Channel 3 and airs programming about Fort Benning and the surrounding communities.

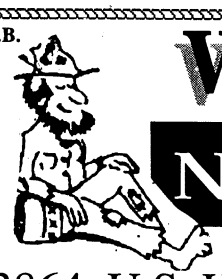
The traffic cut is temporarily ending because some military police officers are currently deployed to Haiti. Watch "Fort Benning Today" to find out how this may affect your travel times.

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel announces post events and post movie listings, and it offers free classified advertisements on "Fort Benning Update," a community information service.



Anyone who lives on post and subscribes to Fort Benning Cable can watch USAIC-TV on Channel 3, 24 hours a day.

Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:25, 7:55, 8:25 and 8:55 on WLTZ-TV 38.

Columbus Museum to feature 'Beauty in Beast'

The Columbus Museum

The Columbus Museum has an original exhibition, "The Beauty in the Beast: American Artists Observe the Horse," which will coincide with the 10th running of the Steeplechase at Callaway Gardens and will be on view through Jan. 8.

Comprised of paintings, sculptures, drawings and photographs borrowed from a variety of institutions across the nation, the exhibition includes such artists as Thomas Hart Benton, Theodore Robinson, Albert Bierstadt, George Catlin, John Singer Sargent, Reginald Marsh, Walter Anderson, Herbert Hasletine and Deborah Butterfield.

"This exhibition brings a tremendous selection of artworks lent by renowned institutions to this community just as the anticipation for the Steeplechase builds," said Tom Butler, museum director. "I think everyone, especially horse enthusiasts, will find "The Beauty in the Beast" to be a visual treat."

Educational programs featured in conjunction with the exhibition and made possible by the exhibition sponsors include a series of lectures by Eleanor Jones Harvey, associate curator of American art at the Dallas Museum of Art and noted art historian. Harvey will introduce the exhibition with a lecture at the Members' Preview Reception Saturday and give a public gallery talk Sunday.

There will also be special docent-led tours for school groups and individuals as well as fall Museum classes.

Other events planned for this exhibition include:

The Fourth Annual Family Fun Day: The Horse, Of Course! Sunday, 2 to 5 p.m. (sponsored by the Columbus Contemporaries and the Museum Guild) An afternoon of free family entertainment and art activities featuring the horse.

Film Presentation: The Black Stallion Nov. 7, 2:30 p.m. — Francis Ford Coppola's Academy Award-winning movie "The Black Stallion" comes to the museum's Patrick Theatre. Admission is free but call the museum to make reservations.

Video Presentations: Saturdays and Sundays in November — Two documentary films will be shown continuously in the museum's Turner Galleria on weekends throughout the month.

"Edward Muybridge: Motion Studies" profiles the 19th-century British photographer famous for his stop-action photographs of animal locomotion.

"The Iron Horse," produced by William VanDerKloot — creator of the Museum's popular Chattahoochee Legacy film — documents the fate of a public sculpture of a horse that caused a riot at the University of Georgia in 1954.

The Columbus Museum, located at 1251 Wynnton Road, features exhibitions of American art and regional history and includes a hands-on discovery gallery for children. Admission is free of charge.

The museum is open from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday and on Sundays from 1 until 5 p.m.

For more information, call the museum at 649-0713.

The exhibition is sponsored by Columbus Bank and Trust Company, Total System Services Inc., Synovus Financial Corporation, and the Columbus Museum Guild.

SOA to conduct conference on

Military Education

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Department of the Army and the School of the Americas will host the Training Military Education Conference Nov. 13 through 18 at the School of the Americas.

The conference is one of the seven specialized mandatory conferences of the American armies and is the only conference that is permanently hosted in the United States, according to Maj. Jesus E. Vazquez, Training Military Education Conference chief.

The conference, a biennial meeting initiated in 1960 in Panama by the United States, provides a forum for commanders of American armies to discuss security issues of mutual interest and serves to promote cohesion, improve hemisphere security and strengthen American friendships, Vazquez said.

The purpose of the conference is to provide a forum in which chiefs of training of the conference of American armies, observer nations and other organizations with Latin American interests, meet and discuss positions on a wide range of training and education issues, he said.

Also, seminars about countering subversive threats to democratic systems and training of the armed forces in operations other than war will be conducted.

This year's conference is the fifth consecutive at the School of the Americas, Vazquez said.

The conference will be conducted in English, Spanish and Portuguese for the 25 countries represented this year.

1,300 have left, more on way

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

More than 1,300 soldiers from the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized), have deployed to Southwest Asia since Oct. 15, and more are expected to follow soon.

The brigade is deploying as part of a U.S. deterrence mission, called Operation Vigilant Warrior, meant to display U.S. resolve and deter Iraqi aggression in the region, according to Col. Michael Deegan, brigade commander.

Deegan departed with the first group of the main party Oct. 21, saying the flight was the first of many that would carry up to 3,500 soldiers into Southwest Asia over the next few weeks.

Three more flights followed Saturday and Monday, adding about 1,000 soldiers to the advance party of 375.

Several more groups are expected to depart on flights tonight and Monday, with a final task force scheduled to leave on flights Thursday and Nov. 4.

The brigade will be drawing vehicles and equipment from ships pre-positioned afloat in the Persian Gulf, Deegan said, pointing out that "This is the first time the U.S. Army has done this."

But this is not the first time many of these soldiers have deployed to the region — some of them were in the Persian Gulf during operations Desert Shield and Storm, and some have returned to Kuwait since then for yearly training exercises.

And, as members of the 3rd Brigade, this is not the first time these soldiers have been on alert.

"It is not unusual or strange to the 'Victory Division' (24th ID) soldiers to go to strange places to carry out a mission," said Brig. Gen. John J. Maher III, Fort Benning's deputy commanding general.

But what is unusual for the division, which has been on alert status since Oct. 11, is the uncertainty that has preceded this deployment.

"We have had, as the situation in Iraq has changed over the last couple of weeks, a lot of uncertainty, a lot of back and forth," Deegan said before he departed.

But the situation finally crystallized, he said, "and we understand (now) what it is we're going to do, our deployment and what our involvement is."

"It's been frustrating, with the mission and the time changing every day," said Capt. Denton Knapp, commander of Company A, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, who left with some of his company on the flight Oct. 21.

But not deploying right away gave them time to get soldiers to the range to qualify with their weapons and to have family support meetings and get a support network set in place before they left, he said.

The units of the 3rd Brigade deploying include the 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment; 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment; 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment; 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment; 324th Forward Support Battalion; 317th Engineer Battalion; and Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Brigade.

The brigade may be deployed for up to six months.

Ribbon campaign begins

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet®

The 1994 Red Ribbon Campaign, a national anti-drug effort, kicked off Monday at the grand staircase of the Columbus Riverwalk with a ribbon-tying ceremony.

The event, sponsored in part by Fort Benning's Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Program, was attended by members of the Military Police Activity as well as ADAPCP.

McGruff the Crime Dog and Blinky, the remote control military police car, attended the kick off also. They were provided as a courtesy by the Military Police Activity.

Maj. Ricky Drury provided greetings from the post on behalf of post Provost Marshal Col. Ronnie D. Alton.

"We want to continue to support this program at Fort Benning and to continue working closely with the local communities as much as we can in trying to keep America drug-free for our youth," Drury said.

The ceremony culminated with the symbolic joining of Columbus and Phenix City with a red ribbon across the Chattahoochee River to symbolize the combined community effort.

Red Ribbon week runs through Monday. The goal of the ceremony is the promotion of healthy lifestyles for individuals, families and communities, said Al Curry, ADAPCP education coordinator.

The Red Ribbon campaign began in 1985 after Enrique Camerena, an agent with the U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency, was tortured to death by drug traffickers in Mexico.

"We are proud that Fort Benning can work closely with Columbus and Phenix City to fight substance abuse," Curry said. "This is the perfect opportunity for post residents to demonstrate their commitments to lifestyles free from drug abuse."

Contracting to sponsor breakfast for small business customers

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The post's Directorate of Contracting is sponsoring a small business breakfast at the Fort Benning Officers' Club Nov. 15 at 7:30 a.m.

Registration forms with a return deadline of Nov. 4 were sent to businesses earlier this month. The registration fee is $5 per business representative and includes breakfast.

The purpose of the breakfast is to develop and maintain a partnering relationship between Fort Benning and its small business customers, and provide contractors and prospective bidders with a better understanding of the acquisition process, contract functions and responsibilities, according to Robert Battle of the Directorate of Contracting.

Fort Benning's Tri-Community Action Plan Committee, headed by Col. Richard L. Rutledge, post garrison commander, has endorsed the event.

For more information, call Battle at 545-1013 or 545-5173.

'Twas 63 nights before Christmas ...

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

commentary

'Twas 63 nights before Christmas, when all through the cafeteria,
Not a creature was stirring, not even a roach;
The napkin holders were placed on the tables with care,
In hopes that customers soon would be there;
The AAFES employees were nestled all snug in their beds,
While visions of breakfast tortillas danced in their heads;
The cashier in her kerchief, the cook in his cap,
Had just settled their brains for an eight-hour nap;
When over the fax there arose such a clatter,
The supervisor sprang from his bed to see what was the matter.
Away to the office he flew like a flash,
Tore open the shutters and spilt all the cash.
The fluorescent lights on the fax paper did glow,
Gave the lustre of mid-day to objects below,
When, what to his wondering eyes should appear,
But a message from higher written so clear,
With its cryptic instructions, so lively and quick;
He knew in a moment it must be the boss playing St. Nick.
More rapid than eagles his workers they came,
And he whistled, and shouted, and called them by name,
"Now, Carter! now Paula! now, Jennifer and Nathan!
On Judy! on Maria! on, Betty and Lena!
To the top of the porch! To the top of the wall!
Now decorate, decorate, decorate all!"
As dry leaves that before the wild hurricane fly,
When they meet with an obstacle mount to the sky;
So up on the walls and ceilings they flew,
With arms full of greenery and red ribbons too.
And then, in a twinkling, he heard at the door.
The prancing and pawing of customers galore —

As he drew in his head, and was turning around,
Through the doors they came with a bound.
They were dressed all in cammie, from their heads to their feet;
And their hands were filled with map cases and books;
Then an Infantry Hall civilian came in from the back,
He look'd like a peddler just opening his pack.
His eyes — how they twinkled! His dimples — how merry!
His cheeks were like roses, his nose like a cherry!
His droll little mouth was drawn up like a bow,
And the beard of his chin was as white as the snow;
The stump of a pipe he held tight in his teeth,
And the smoke it encircled his head like a wreath;
He had a broad face and a little round belly,
That shook, when he laughed, like a bowl full of jelly.
He was chubby and plump, a right jolly old elf,
And the supervisor laughed in spite of himself;
A wink of his eye and a twist of his head,
Soon gave the supe to know he had nothing to dread;
He spoke not a word, but went straight to his work,
Taking down stockings and wreaths, he went quite berserk,
And laying his finger aside of his nose,
And giving a nod and a last look around, off he goes;
But the supe heard him exclaim, as he walked out of sight,
"Next time, save holiday decorations for Christmas eve night."

dial 545-boss

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for soldiers, family members and civilians to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere.

While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies established to provide assistance, the line offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders.

The Bayonet features some of the calls that may benefit other members of the Fort Benning community.

☎ Caller: I am concerned about the frequent interruption in the cable service on post.

I tried to call the cable company to fix it, but the line was busy for four hours.

I would also like to know why the cable company refuses to carry normal cable services, such as Arts and Entertainment and the Discovery Channel.

Directorate of Community Activities response:

The caller did not specify the days he experienced cable interruptions. A check of the caller's cable history shows no record of any trouble calls from him. Cable Vision Industries documents all service call requests and the conclusion.

CVI officials stated the only interruption they were aware of was an electric power outage for about half an hour Aug. 27. This was not a cable outage.

The caller's request for Arts and Entertainment and the Discovery Channel has not been ignored by CVI. Presently, under its current configuration and with equipment now in place, maximum channel capacity is 33. There are 33 channels on cable at this time. There is no room on the system for Arts and Entertainment or the Discovery Channel.

DCA is working to rectify this problem. Fort Benning is now in negotiations for a new cable contract. One of the important points of this new contract is to increase the numbers of channels from the present 33 to 42.

This will be accomplished by the cable contractor being required to rewire Fort Benning as necessary with fiber optic cable and the installation of state-of-the-art equipment.

☎ Caller: I have a complaint that there is only one cable company on post and you can't have a satellite dish on post.

I believe the services provided are not that good and the prices are high.

Family Housing Division response:

It is the command's decision to discontinue the installation of satellite dishes as they are unsightly and not in accordance with Army Communities of Excellence policy.

The management of CVI was contacted about the caller's concerns. CVI is to begin work in January on the rebuilding of its cable plant. Upon completion of the rebuilding, its capacity will be increased to accommodate 78 channels. The project is to be completed in the third quarter of 1995.

The caller was also informed that cable companies are regulated by Federal Communications Commission. Specifications, to include rate charges and CVI management maintains that the company is in compliance with all FCC specifications.

Citadel vs. Faulkner case is a study of power, prejudice

I am not necessarily against single gender education, but I am against discrimination. The case of The Citadel vs. Shannon Faulkner is not only a case of discrimination, but it is also a study of power and prejudice.

I acknowledge this is a touchy issue, and I have hesitated to respond, but I feel that most of the coverage that it has received has missed the true point of the case.

Over the past months I have read many pro and con articles in newspapers on the subject of Faulkner's attempts to gain entrance into The Citadel. Most of these articles I have noted were written by men.

William Hall's viewpoint is, at best, narrow and naive. He may have lived near The Citadel, but he obviously has no idea of the influence the name of The Citadel exerts in the military.

As a former soldier and the wife of a senior noncommissioned officer, I have had considerable exposure to Army life. I served in the Army for almost 12 years and have been married to a soldier for nearly 19. Between us, we have experienced most of what the Army has to offer.

During the early part of my Army career, I found myself stationed at the Pentagon. I can tell you that being stationed in Washington, D.C., and at the Pentagon was an education unto itself. Living and working there, I got a close and sometimes personal look at the political internal workings of the Army, something I am sure Hall has not.

Now, whether or not Faulkner gets into The Citadel may not really be the point. The real point is that graduates of The Citadel enjoy a certain status achieved by virtue of having graduated from The Citadel, and in many cases this is manifested in their civilian or miliary careers. I believe that it is not merely Faulkner's entrance into The Citadel that people are trying to stop; it is also access to this status, and its accompanying power that they wish to deny her.

To further explain, the public should understand that a degree from The Citadel is in no way more specialized than a degree from a state university or a local college.

So why, you may ask, is The Citadel unique? Over the years, and because of their so-called traditions, graduates of The Citadel and the Virginia Military Institute have established an impressive alumni network. Because of these alumni connections, graduates often get the first shot at jobs or promotions they need to advance in their civilian or military careers.

This then is the problem — access to the network. If Faulkner went to another school, even one set up to teach the same subjects as The Citadel, it still would not be The Citadel.

The Citadel did discriminate against Faulkner, there is no question about that. It has clearly been discriminating against women for a long time. Hall says The Citadel is a male's last refuge, but he makes it sound more like the good old boy's last night out.

If The Citadel really is so afraid of female contamination, I suggest that it tap its alumni network for the funds to make the school private. That way all their little boys can continue to play together uninterrupted by the real world.

As I stated earlier, I am not necessarily against single gender education. Single gender schools do a wonderful job, and so long as their educational degrees are treated with equal weight, I have no problems, but in the case of The Citadel this is not so.

I must say that in some ways I feel sorry for Faulkner. I hope she wins her case and I applaud her efforts, but as a realist, I know that even if she does win and manages to enter the cadet corps, and even if she does graduate from The Citadel, she still may not have truly won.

Why? Because, and I am sorry to say this, but I think that The Citadel's alumni network that will be there for all her male classmates, will most likely never be there for her.

Pediatric Clinic relocates

By John S. Wynn
Martin Army Community Hospital

Martin Army Community Hospital's Pediatric Clinic relocated to the third floor of the hospital Monday.

Pediatrics, formerly situated in the basement of the clinic wing of the hospital, has opened its doors for services in the A Wing on the third floor.

"We don't expect our move will cause any disruption in care, and the same top quality medical care patients have relied upon in the past will continue," said Lt. Col. Jose A. Valez-Borras, chief of the clinic. He asked hospital beneficiaries to be patient with the staff as they make the transition to the new location.

The clinic's personnel and equipment, including the Well Baby Clinic, have been relocated.

Appointments for the Pediatric Clinic can be scheduled from 8 to 11:45 a.m. and 1 to 4 p.m. by calling 544-1086 or 544-1087. This includes all routine, follow-up and well-baby appointments.

"Suggestions are very valuable to us," said Maj. Zobeida Hernandez, the clinic's head nurse. "(People) can just let us know how our staff can best serve (them)."

The clinic will offer the best specialized pediatric care for young military family members, Valez-Borras said. People who have problems or concerns or are in need of any medical advice can call the clinic at its new location, he said.

Routine calls, messages or requests for information can be made by calling 544-4408 or 544-4409. The clinic's hours of operation are 8 a.m. to noon and 1 to 4 p.m.

Federal health insurance premiums going down

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

During the 1995 open season, Nov. 14 through Dec. 12, federal employees will be able to choose from more than 350 health plans

Premiums for many federal employees' Health Benefits Program plans will be lower in 1995.

During the 1995 open season, Nov. 14 through Dec. 12, employees should also find benefit brochures easier to use in comparing plans, said Office of Personnel Management officials.

350 plans available

Employees will be able to choose from more than 350 health plans. Premiums will go down or remain stable for 58 percent of nonpostal employees; 27 percent of employees will see modest premium increases of less than 5 percent. Less than 15 percent will see increases of 5 percent or more.

Fee-for-service plans have eliminated lifetime maximum limits on mental health benefits. However, enrollees will still be subject to annual limits on mental health services.

Improved benefits include complete coverage of childhood immunizations, not subject to deductibles or co-payments. Associated office visits may be subject to cost-sharing.

All plans, both prepaid and fee-for-service, will cover high-dose chemotherapy with autologous bone-marrow transplants for cancer treatment. This is in addition to other conditions for which each plan currently provides coverage.

Employees will have 45 new prepaid plans to choose from — more than twice the number of health maintenance organizations that entered the program in 1994. Many prepaid plans have expanded their enrollment areas. Many prepaid plans will now allow individuals who live outside service areas to join the plans if they work in service areas.

Several prepaid plans will offer "opt-out" benefits. Employees may obtain treatment outside of the plan's network and still receive reimbursement for a percentage of the cost.

Brochures user-friendly

OPM officials said these benefits will remain stable through 1996. They also said plan brochures are more user-friendly. Simpler terms are used where possible, benefits are grouped for easier reference and tables of contents are more comprehensive to improve readability.

The 1995 nonpostal premiums for the largest fee-for-service plans follow. Employees pay premiums biweekly; retirees pay on a monthly basis. Prepaid plans are local, so are not included. Personnel offices will have complete information during open season.

Blue Cross-Blue Shield's high-option, single-employee plan will cost $69.03 per pay period, a decrease of $4.99 from 1994. High-option family coverage will cost $144.68, a decrease of $13.74. Standard coverage will cost a single enrollee $20.33 biweekly; family enrollment will cost $47.15.

Mail Handlers Benefit Plan's high-option single coverage will cost $18.83, down 48 cents. Family high-option will cost $41.90, down $1.07. Standard single coverage is $14.35, and standard family is $31.14. Both are the same as 1994.

GEHA plan self-only is $23.91, down $1.60; family is $45.37, down $6.27.

National Association of Letter Carriers self-only plan is $24.61, up $2.56; family option $49.57, up $2.46.

American Postal Workers' Union Plan is $22.64 self-only for nonpostal workers, down 76 cents; family coverage is $45.65, down $1.18.

Alliance self-only is $34.36, down $5.82; family option is $68.80, down $15.31.

Health fair

A health fair will be Nov. 2 and 3 in Room 132 at Meloy Hall, Building 6, from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Representatives from some of the health insurance carriers will be available to answer questions, and brochures about each plan and Health Benefits Registration Forms, SF 2809, will also be available.

For information or registration forms for the Federal Employees Health Benefits Plan, see your unit or activity administrative personnel or call the Directorate of Civilian Personnel's Personnel Service Center at 545-3374.

Museum celebrates 35 years of honoring infantrymen

Collection includes 20,000 items representing history of infantry

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

The National Infantry Museum, has just one mission — to honor the infantryman and his more than two centuries of service to this nation.

This month, the museum celebrates 35 years of doing just that, according to Dick Grube, its director.

Established Oct. 19, 1959, by then post commander Maj. Gen. Paul Freeman, the museum occupied wooden World War II barracks on Ingersoll Street for 18 years before moving to its present and permanent home, Building 396 on Baltzell Avenue.

"The museum's early efforts were commendable, but not always particularly professional," said Frank Hanner, museum curator. "The museum seemed more like a junkstore."

The permanent home of the museum was opened by Gen. of the Army Omar Nelson Bradley July 1, 1977. The museum is housed in an historic building that had served as the post's hospital for 50 years and occupies 50,000 square feet, 30,000 of which are open to the public.

Grube said the museum's inventory of more than 20,000 items is much more than just a collection of things painted olive drab.

"We have a very broad collection of infantry-related materials, but we also have military-related paintings, sculpture, sterling silver, Oriental rugs, Victorian furniture and many other items that add special interest and value to the museum," he said.

"The most impressive aspect of the collection is its truly comprehensive coverage of the entire time span that comprises the history of the infantry," Hanner said.

"More than 200 years of history are represented, and there is not a single significant aspect of that history that is not represented by an actual object, not a reproduction, but an actual object that was worn, carried or used by a living human being in often very extraordinary or difficult circumstances."

Grube said the museum also houses a significant representation of the weapons, uniforms and personal equipment of America's former enemies as well.

"We want the entire story to be told," Grube said. "We are not here to change history, but to reflect it. We might not always be politically correct, but the story must be told."

Grube said the museum has several important projects in mind for the future, including the relocation to museum grounds and restoration of several World War II buildings that were used on post, including a chapel, mess hall, orderly room, barracks and Gen. George S. Patton's Sand Hill headquarters building.

Also planned is the addition of a museum annex that will honor the ranger, airborne, mechanized and air assault infantry.

Also, Grube hopes to expand the museum to include some of the other surrounding buildings.

"There are literally thousands of items we cannot display because we simply do not have enough room," he said.

Hanner said that visitors to the museum should come away with the knowledge that the U.S. infantryman was a living human being who defended this country in situations where others would have turned aside.

"He didn't turn his back," Hanner said. "He was there defending his home and family and the ideals of his nation."

General's widow donates items to museum

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Some uniforms and personal items that belonged to one of the Army's distinguished World War II generals were recently donated to the National Infantry Museum.

Irma Gavin, the wife of the late Maj. Gen. James M. Gavin, donated her husband's 1925 U.S. Military Academy cadet uniform and the dress uniform he wore as grand marshal of President John F. Kennedy's inaugural parade to the museum's collection.

"We are extremely proud that Mrs. Gavin chose the National Infantry Museum as the home for these valuable items," said Dick Grube, museum director.

Fort Benning's new guest house, Gavin Hall, is named for the general.

In addition to the uniforms, the museum received a map carried by Gavin during the Allied campaign in Sicily in 1943 as well as his airborne jump wings with four stars, denoting four combat jumps.

Gavin graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, Ñ.Y., in 1929. He attended the Parachute School at Fort Benning in 1941. He later became commanding officer of the 505th Parachute Infantry in 1942 and remained with the regiment when it was assigned to the 82nd Airborne Division the following year.

Under Col. Gavin's command, the 505th Parachute Combat Team spearheaded the assault on Sicily with a parachute landing on July 9, 1943, and commanded the regiment's parachute landing on Salerno Bay on Sept. 14.

Brig. Gen. Gavin commanded the parachute assault echelon, consisting of the 505th, 507th and 508th parachute infantry regiments, of the 82nd Airborne Division during the invasion of Normandy, June 6, 1994.

He then assumed command of the 82nd, making him the youngest division commander of the war and participated in the Battle of the Bulge and the spring offensive that saw the surrender of the German Army.

"Gavin was a real fighter and was instrumental in molding the concepts of airborne warfare," Grube said.

The museum already has a display dedicated to Gavin located in the airborne section of the museum. The uniforms and other items will be added sometime in the near future, he said.

"Mrs. Gavin's generous donation is representative of the way the museum has acquired more than 80 percent of its collection," Grube added. "Personal donations of any items relating to the history of the infantry are always appreciated and important if we are to accurately preserve and tell the infantry story."

Post ready to help families

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

With almost 1,500 Fort Benning soldiers either deployed or in the process of deploying to Haiti and Southwest Asia, many spouses are preparing to "go it alone."

But post officials want spouses to know that they are not alone; there are agencies here to help.

At one of the recent departure ceremonies, Deputy Commanding General Brig. Gen. John J. Maher III assured the departing soldiers that their families would be well cared for.

"We here at Fort Benning will take care of your families and your loved ones," he said.

The strength behind that promise comes from community resources and family unit networks, said Michelle Aldridge, Family Unit Network coordinator.

"The agencies are in place, the staff members are concerned and they're sincerely willing to help the family members," she said.

Also, Aldridge said, the leaders and contact people in the family unit networks are all "caring" people.

"They've got the support of the command, they've got the support of DCA (Directorate of Community Activities) and they've got the support of the community," she said.

Family members who encounter problems are encouraged to let their family unit network be the primary point of contact, Aldridge said; but, she added, the Family Unit Network Center can provide referral assistance to anyone who does not want to go through the network.

The main problem she encounters, Aldridge said, is that when family members come to her, "They just don't know the resources that are available to them.

"They may have a problem but they may not necessarily know where to go to get the assistance that they need," she said.

The following is a list of some of the major agencies available to help family members of deployed soldiers and some of the services they offer.

American Red cross

• Rapid communications — Messages regarding birth, death, critical illness, requests concerning soldiers' health and welfare, reports of financial or other family problems. Requests can be initiated through the Fort Benning Red Cross office, 545-5194, or, after duty hours, weekends or holidays, 545-2218.

• Emergency financial assistance — Provided in the form of an interest-free loan for emergencies involving the immediate family of the soldier or spouse.

• Health and safety courses — Courses are offered in first aid, cardiopulmonary resuscitation, baby sitting and other areas.

Army Community Service

• Emergency food locker — Provides families with one to three days supply of food until other arrangements can be made. For information, call 545-4485.

• Exceptional Family Member Program — Provides assistance in obtaining medical appointments or proper school placement for exceptional family members. For information, call 545-6969.

• Family Member Employment — Provides assistance to family members seeking jobs and writing resumes. For information, call 545-6969.

• Family Advocacy Program — Provides help in dealing with stress, conflict, anger control and stress in children. For information, call 545-3344.

• Financial Assistance Program — Offers counseling in personal financial and family budget matters and consumer education. For information, call 545-7517.

During Deployment

Keep in touch

✔ Letters — They're inexpensive, they allow you to think about what you'd like to share, and they can be "personalized" for individual family members

✔ Phone calls — They're more direct and personal, although they can be inconvenient and expensive

✔ Pictures — (Including photographs and artwork by children) they can be easily carried, proudly displayed and looked at often

✔ Audio and videocassettes — Offer realism and can be played repeatedly, although they require special equipment

Work through emotions

Strong feelings are most common immediately before and after separation and reunion, but they can occur at any time. To help maintain your emotional health:

✔ Try to understand and admit your doubts and fears — don't ignore or hide them

✔ Talk about your feelings with a trusted friend, neighbor or co-worker

✔ Seek professional help if you feel overwhelmed by your emotions, or if you suspect that someone in the family is having emotional difficulties

Tips for spouses

✔ Take good care of yourself — eat right, get enough rest and exercise, treat yourself to a special dinner or night out once in a while, help manage stress by setting aside time every day to do something you enjoy

✔ Take good care of your children — Remember, they need proper rest, nutrition and exercise, too. Set aside some of your time for each individual child, as well as for family activities, and arrange for children to have time off with friends or an occasional special outing

✔ Seek help when you need it — Don't try to do everything yourself

Army Emergency Relief

• Monetary assistance — Provides financial assistance when a family member has an emergency requiring funds for rent, utilities, food, emergency travel or vehicle repair. Family members must complete an application for Army Emergency Relief financial assistance (DA Form 1103) available from the sponsor's unit commander (or from the rear detachment commander).

Chaplains' Office

• Counseling — Chaplains are assigned to each unit and are available for confidential individual or family counseling on marriage or family problems, work-related problems, emergency financial problems or issues related to separation and deployment.

Cruise-matics sink Islanders

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Columbus Fort Benning Rugby Football Club Cruise-matics sunk the Islanders of the Oakaloosa Rugby Football Club 55-7 Saturday afternoon at Stilwell Field.

The sun cleared the cloudy rain soaked heavens long enough for the match to be played, then returned to the drizzly, dreary day that delayed the Islanders arrival from Florida by more than an hour.

Cruise-matic winger Paul Oakes scored four tries to lead the scoring assault for the Cruise-matics. Oakes opened up the scoring with the first two tries of the match with kicker Tim Butterfield adding the conversions for a quick 14-0 advantage.

Wing forward Darren Monaco slipped into the Islander try zone when the Islanders lost control of the ball at their own goal. Monaco snatched up the ball and leaped into the zone for the try and a 19-0 lead. Butterfield increased the lead to 24-0 on a scrum from the Islander 22-meter line. Second row Nathan Davis scored the final try of the half from the five-meter line off a Cruise-matic maul. Davis took the pitch from scrum half Larry Perino and powered his way into the try zone. Butterfield added the conversion for a halftime lead of 31-0.

The Cruise-matics widened the margin to 36-0 on a try by eight man Kevin Hyneman to start the second half. Minutes later inside center Duke Mosely took a pitch from Josh Scherrey at the Islander five-meter line and scampered into the try zone for his first try of the day and a 41-0 bulge.

Oakes hit the hat trick midway through the second half with his third try of the match, Mosely added the conversion boosting the Cruise-matic lead to a whopping 48-0.

The Islanders chipped the ice off the scoreboard late in the match when fullback Don Dawson scored the only try of the day for the Islanders. Dave Cook tacked on the conversion trimming the Cruise-matic lead to 48-7.

Oakes put the final nail in the coffin then kicked the sand into the hole effectively burying the Islanders with his fourth and final try. Mosely kicked the conversion giving the Cruise-matics the final score of 55-7.

The Cruise-matics will play host to the Birmingham Rugby Football Club Saturday at 2 p.m. at Stilwell Field for their final home game of the season.

Army is rugby champ

By Stephen Barrett
American Forces Information Service

Army Capt. Mike Legg's score in the closing minutes, combined with 1st Lt. Bill Marshall's two-point conversion, helped Army clinch the 1994 Armed Forces Rugby Championships recently.

Legg's second try of the day led Army to a 25-17 victory over the Marine Corps at Pensacola Naval Air Station, Fla. Defending champion Navy captured third by beating Air Force 17-0 in the consolation game. The Coast Guard finished fifth.

Similar to football, rugby consists of two 40-minute periods. Rugby's touchdown, known as a try, awards five points for crossing the goal line and physically "touching" the ball into the end zone. Penalty kicks and drop kicks are worth three points, while successful conversion attempts following trys are two points.

Missed opportunities cost the Marines the title. Master Sgt. W.F. Clapp of Cherry Point Marine Corps Air Station, N.C., said the corps outran the Army throughout the final but lost due to four missed scoring chances and Army's size.

"We had one chance where (Capt.) Kenny Wynn crossed the line," said Clapp, "But he got hit across the face, and the ball got stripped before he could down it. That took a lot out of us."

Army battled in the final minutes of the first period to take a 12-10 halftime lead. Legg tied the contest at 10, then watched as Marshall's conversion gave Army its two-point lead.

In the second half, Marshall increased Army's lead to 15-10 on a 40-yard penalty kick 18 minutes into the period. He added another three-pointer seven minutes later, giving Army an 18-10 margin.

The Marines battled back, closing to 18-17 on Sgt. Ellis Graves' try and 1st Lt. Keith Takabayashi's conversion. However, Army clinched victory and the title when Legg took a lateral pitch and tumbled into the end zone.

Military Police Activity

This week's hot topic is safeguarding government and private property. Recently Fort Benning has been experiencing a surge of larcenies. Everyone throughout the installation should make it his or her responsibility to do whatever they can to protect and safeguard property.

High dollar value items such as video and computer hardware have become a popular item for these individuals. Commanders as well as others who are responsible for property should store and evaluate how their property is protected when the last person closes the door at the end of the day.

Those individuals who continue to leave laptops and video cameras out on their desks at the end of the day may be surprised to find there's nothing to work with come morning.

For further information concerning security of government property, contact the Physical Security Office at 545-7115 or 545-7154.

The following entries were extracted from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from Oct. 12 to 18. Such entries may be incomplete and are not a judgement of the guilt or innocence of any person.

• A specialist was charged with driving under the influence and excessive speed. He was traveling 56 mph in a 35 mph zone. He was stopped by a Military Police officer who detected the smell of alcohol. He was administered a field sobriety test, which he failed.

He was apprehended and transported to the Military Police Station where he was administered a breathalyzer test on the intoximeter with a result of .23 percent. The specialist was cited and his on-post driving privileges were suspended.

• A private was charged with assault. He and his wife were involved in a verbal altercation that escalated into a physical altercation when he struck her in the face. Upon arrival of the Military Police, the private was apprehended and transported to the Military Police Station where he was processed and released to his unit.

• A person or persons unknown, by unknown means, entered a classroom at Loyd School and removed several pieces of electronic and video equipment.

Other activities include five cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, 25 traffic accidents and 22 cases of larceny.

Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best — Give Crime Arrest." Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police at 545-5223 or 545-5224 or other "Crime in Progress" line at 545-5222.

Air bags in cars unsafe for babies

Egleston Children's Hospital

Air bags in cars save lives and prevent serious injuries. But they are meant to be used with safety belts or forward-facing child safety seats — never with the rear-facing safety car seats in which babies should ride until they weigh at least 20 pounds.

According to the child safety experts at Egleston Children's Hospital at Emory University, a baby less than 20 pounds who rides in the front seat of a car with a passenger-side air bag could be in danger in a crash or even in a low-speed collision.

Most air bags inflate in any head-on collision that occurs at speeds over 12 mph. Opening from the dashboard with tremendous force, the air bag could strike the back of a rear-facing seat, causing serious injury to the baby's head and brain. After the crash impact, the air bag could throw the safety seat — and the baby — into the headrest.

These guidelines are recommended for safely transporting babies and children in cars with air bags:

• All babies should ride in the back seat, in rear-facing car seats, until they are old enough and large enough to face forward (weighing at least 20 pounds or reaching the age of 1 year).

Babies under 20 pounds could suffer neck injuries in a crash if they were facing forward.

• If they're available for your vehicle, use mirror accessories to help you see your infant in the back seat while you are driving.

• If your baby is very young or has special medical problems, and you are nervous about not being able to see and comfort him or her during the drive, try to have another adult ride in the back seat with the baby.

• When your children are big enough to ride in a forward-facing safety seat, they can ride in the front seat. If the car has a passenger-side air bag, slide the passenger seat of the vehicle back as far as it will go. In the event of a crash, the child will be cushioned when the air bag fully opens up.

Read the car's owner's manual for further instructions about children and air bags.

For more information on air bags or child safety seats, call Egleston's Child Safety Department at (404) 315-2005.

EXPERT INFANTRYMAN BADGE

Infantry soldiers competed Oct. 11 through 21 at Burroughs Range for one of the highest honors an infantryman can obtain.

In testing for the Expert Infantryman Badge, only 23 soldiers out of 272 registered from on and off post achieve the standards to receive the award.

The EIB is the mark of an infantryman who attains a high degree of professional skills, expertise and excellence, said Sgt. 1st Class Alan R. Bowser, noncommissioned officer in charge of the EIB site.

The percentage of soldiers who earn a badge is normally 8 to 15 percent of those who start the testing, Bowser said.

To be eligible for the badge, a list of requirements must be met.

Soldiers must have qualified expert on an M-16A1 or A2 rifle, meaning they must shoot at least 36 of 40 targets.

Soldiers must also have a primary military occupational speciality in an infantry-related field, be recommended for the training by their unit commander and volunteer for EIB testing.

All applicants must score at least 70 percent on their first task — the Army Physical Fitness Test.

Then, for five days, candidates complete 20 stations and 28 tasks, ranging from throwing grenades to successfully completing a night land-navigation course. Many of the tasks are timed.

The rules of the competition allow little room for mistakes.

Bowser said soldiers are allowed to fail and retest at two stations. If more "no-gos" are received, the soldier is disqualified.

"If he fails the initial test and fails the retest, he is dropped also," Bowser said.

"The stations are all by the book. (You've) just got to use your brain and keep a mental note about the time standards," said Spc. Daniel M. McCullough, 5th Ranger Training Battalion, Dahlonega, Ga.

The stations were maintained by soldiers from units across post.

Bowser said the NCOIC of each station must have already earned his EIB or Combat Infantryman Badge. All soldiers who work the station must be able to complete the tasks at the station, he said.

The units in support roles were the 11th Infantry Regiment, the 29th Infantry Regiment, the Infantry Training Brigade and Ranger Training Brigade.

Here is a list of the soldiers who earned the Expert Infantry Badge:

• Staff Sgt. Angel Marrero — School of the Americas

• Sgt. Jasper Johnson — 29th Infantry Regiment

Staff Sgt. Rodney Nilles — 29th Infantry Regiment

Airborne : Blackhat chosen as Instructor of the Year

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

They are the Airborne School elite. The instructors, called blackhats, are able to teach any part of the course. But there is one who stands alone.

The 1994 Blackhat of the Year is Staff Sgt. Alton A. Smoak, who is now the standards noncommissioned officer for the Tower Branch, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment. Smoak received the title in August.

Smoak worked as a line instructor for Company C, 1st Bn., 507th Inf., when 1st Sgt. James Prince, nominated him for the award, he said.

Being an instructor for only a year, Smoak said he was surprised he won the title.

"There are a lot of good instructors in the battalion and every instructor that was chosen to be (in competition for) Blackhat of the Year, any one of them could have won it," he said.

Sgt. 1st Class Harold L. Hunt, who was Smoak's platoon sergeant, said Smoak is an outstanding soldier.

"He's a take-charge kind of guy," Hunt said.

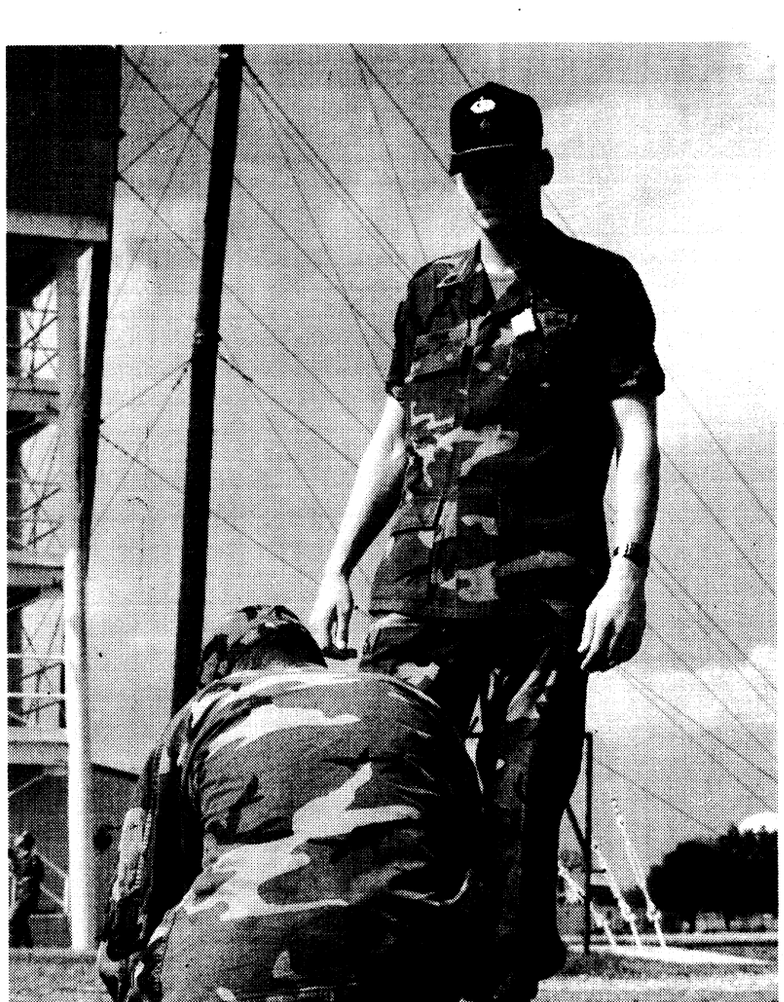
The competition had five instructors from each of the companies of Airborne School.

Each of the competitors must take a physical training test and teach a basic airborne or pathfinder class to students. The branch chiefs, senior NCOs in charge of the jump, tower and ground branches, grade the competitors in how well the class is taught, Smoak said.

Each person going for blackhat of the year must also go through the jumpmaster procedures, and perform a jumpmaster personnel inspection, Hunt said.

Three soldiers are checked from head to toe, including all of their equipment, parachute and rucksack, he said. Each blackhat has six minutes to check all three soldiers. The grading team, the jump branch, set up deficiencies on the soldiers' harnesses and equipment and the blackhat must find them in the allotted time.

The two things that separated Smoak from the other competitors, he said, were that he maxed his PT test and had the highest score on the jumpmaster procedures.



Before coming to the Airborne School, Smoak spent time in another airborne unit. He was a squad leader for 1st Battalion (Airborne), 508th Infantry, 193rd Infantry Brigade, at Fort Kobbe, Panama.

This is Smoak's second tour at Fort Benning. From 1988 to 1990, Smoak was a patrolling instructor for 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment.

Smoak will not teach any more classes for the next year, he said. He will spend the next year ensuring other blackhats are teaching students to the standard.

Smoak's idea of the model blackhat is, "someone who understands the training, the safety,who understands soldiers in general and someone who respects himself enough to put off an image that someone else would want to emulate."

"With (Staff) Sgt. Smoak's attitude, he could do anything. Anything he does, he is going to make the best of it," Hunt said.

• Bulgaria signed an armistice with the Allies, which included provisions that Bulgaria give up portions of Greece and Yugoslavia acquired in 1941. Bulgarian troops now come officially under Soviet command, which had already been the unofficial policy.

• The Royal Air Force dropped a record 4,000 tons of explosives on Cologne, Germany. Also, in Aarhus, Denmark, the RAF destroyed Gestapo headquarters in a precision raid designed to help the resistance movement by destroying Nazi records.

• The Allies announce that they had taken 637,544 German prisoners since D-Day, June.

• On Leyte, the U.S. Army pushed a spearhead across the northern end of the island. With two-thirds of the island in U.S. hands, the Japanese began escape operations. Offshore one U.S. destroyer is sunk and five badly hit in suicide and conventional bombing attacks.

• At Fort Benning, new rules for the sale of cigarettes through the Commissary were announced. Under the new rules, married soldiers were authorized to purchase seven cartons a month, while single soldiers were authorized four cartons a month.

Leadership Reaction Course

By Brett Chamberlain
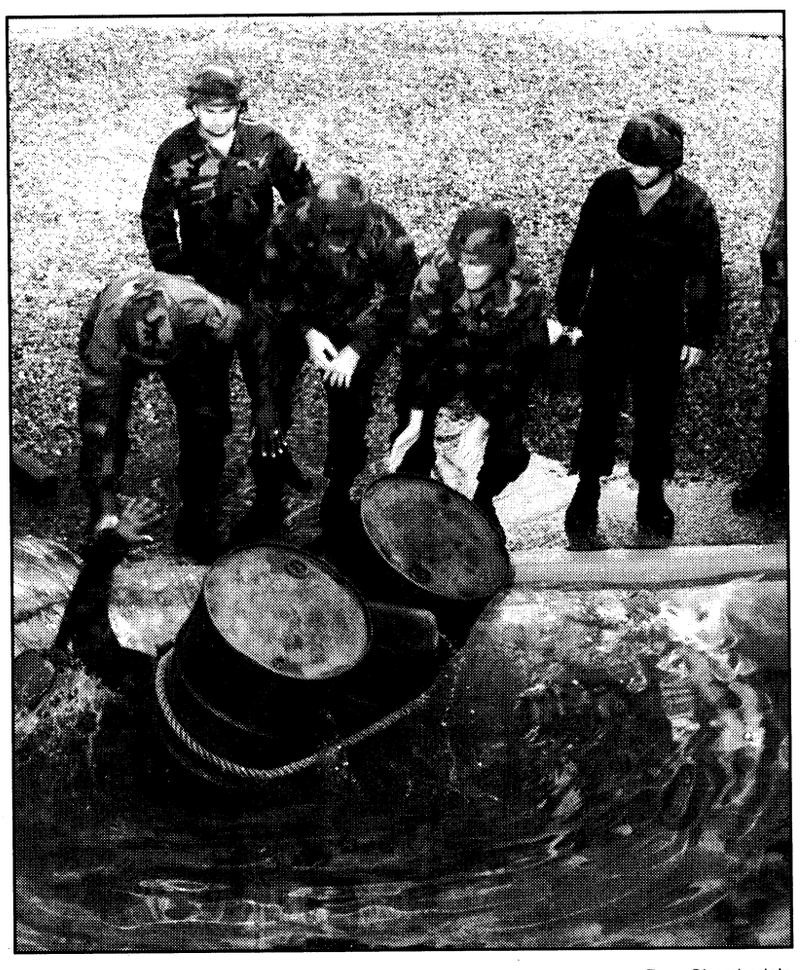
29th Infantry Regiment

The bridge before you has been blown, with only the foundation posts left standing in a 30-foot-wide river of contaminated water.

You're the leader of an eight-person squad, equipped with eight 12-foot boards, a wheeled cart and two crates of ammunition.

Your mission is to cross the river, with all of your troops and equipment, without ever touching the water. You have 12 minutes to successfully execute your mission. What do you do?

The mission described above was one of 10 stations the Pioneers of the 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, attempted to negotiate during their training at the Leadership Reaction Course Oct 19.



Each station presented the soldiers with its own unique challenges — not to mention opportunities to get drenched.

Seven eight-man teams, one from each company and one representing the battalion staff, attacked the course, never giving up, regardless of the setbacks encountered along the way.

"It's good stuff," Capt. Michael B. Ryan, of Company D, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment's commander said of the course. "It builds camaraderie, esprit de corps and teamwork. The key is to never quit."

Teamwork seemed to be the buzzword at the course, and the employment of common sense was also stressed.

"If you don't work as a team, you're going nowhere," 1st Sgt. Walter J. Smith of Company E, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, said.

GHOSTS AND GOBLINS

Post, family members prepare for trick or treaters

Hours are 6 to 8 for children under 13

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

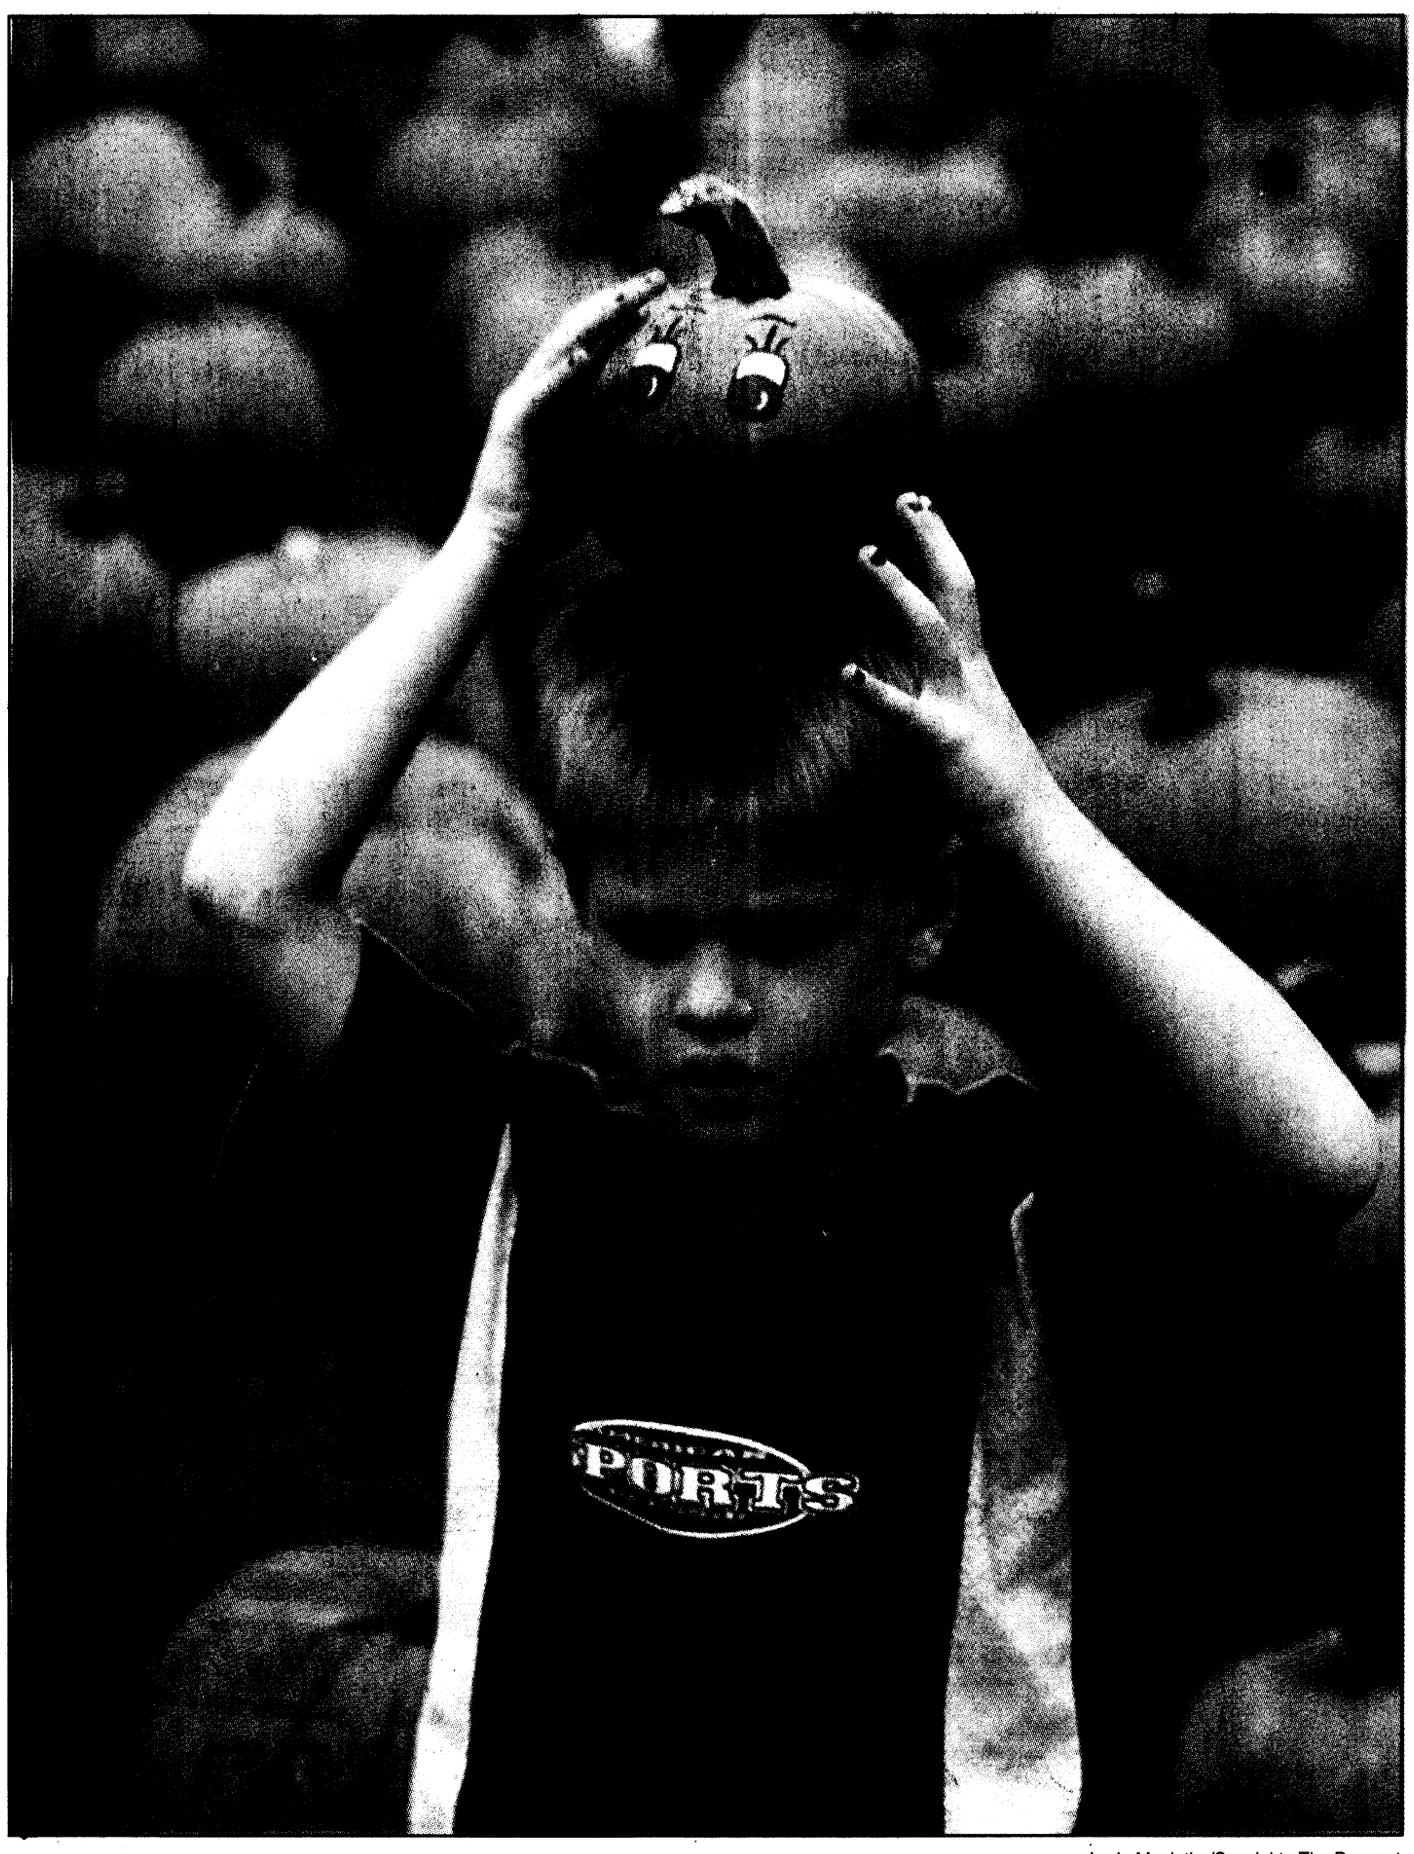
Dracula adjusted her plastic fangs, a gift from her dentist for a good checkup, and joined her brother, Simba the Lion King, in perusing the candy selection at the commissary.

While the children discussed the merits of hard versus chewy, their mother sighed and joined other shoppers in choosing treats. Nobody was looking at nutrition labels. After all, it's Halloween.

Dracula and Simba were conducting a dress rehearsal for Monday's trick or treating, scheduled for 6 to 8 p.m. in post housing areas.

Toy store managers say Simba, the hero of the popular new Disney film, should have plenty of company this Halloween as prides of look alike cubs prowl their neighborhoods for treats; however, the Power Rangers seem to have the lion's share of approval from youngsters.

Although residents should see plenty of standard trick or treaters from princesses to witches, managers say the top selling costumes this year are the Power Rangers, television's multi-colored masked masters of karate.



"Power Rangers are the most popular costume this year, and we can't seem to keep it in," said a Toys R Us spokesman at the Columbus store.

As children dress up and stream through their neighborhoods for the annual observance of Halloween, officials at the Infantry Branch Safety Office are advising motorists to be especially careful when driving through housing areas during trick or treating hours.

Children under 13 years old are eligible to participate in trick or treating on post this year, safety officials stated.

Also, preschool children must be accompanied by a companion 14 years or older and should restrict their trick or treating to their assigned housing area.

Children should only approach houses with a lighted entry way, and should use sidewalks instead of cutting through yards.

ON-POST GUIDELINES FOR TRICK OR TREATERS

The Infantry Branch Safety Office at Fort Benning issued the following regulations and some tips to help keep children safe this Halloween.

✔ Trick or treating on post will be Monday from 6 to 8 p.m. in the post housing areas. It is limited to children under 13 years.

✔ Preschool children must be accompanied by a companion 14 years or older.

✔ Trick or treaters should carry flashlights and observe all safety precautions when crossing streets.

✔ Fastening reflective tape to costumes and treat bags is also a good idea.

✔ Children should trick or treat in their assigned housing areas, and should only approach residences with lighted entry ways.

✔ Costumes should be enhanced by make up or face paint instead of loose fitting or bulky masks which present safety hazards.

✔ Other safety hazards include bulky costumes which make walking difficult as well as costumes which drag the ground, making it easier for children to trip.

✔ Parents or guardians should inspect all treats before children eat them.

✔ Pet owners should prevent animals from becoming a menace to children. It is best to confine animals inside the house during trick or treating hours.

✔ Motorist should be especially cautious when driving on post from 6 to 8 p.m.

✔ Use a flashlight instead of a candle to illuminate a jack o lantern, reducing the risk of fire hazard.

Specialist has something special

Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

From his spit shine to his high-and-tight, he looks like he stepped out of an Army recruiting poster, but Fort Benning's soldier of the year does more than look the part.

Spc. Michael Bivolcic (bi-VOL-sik), 25, a motor platoon squad leader with Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, seems determined to set a record in reaching his goal of becoming a sergeant major.

After 2 1/2 years in the Marine Corps and four in the Army, Bivolcic sports an Expert Infantryman Badge and Parachutist Badge. An injury in Ranger School kept him from getting his tab, but he said he's determined to try again.

"I'm trying to get in (Ranger School) before I go on levy to Korea," he said, "But that's supposed to be in January, and my unit's also slated to go to Kuwait, so we'll have to see what happens."

If Bivolcic has a problem in his military career, it seems to be "so much to do, so little time." A competition pistol shooter, he was invited to join the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, but couldn't get released from his unit. That doesn't really bother him, he said, because he'd rather go Special Forces anyway — he was scheduled for selection once, but broke his ankle right before he was supposed to leave.

Oh, and he'd like to fit Pathfinder School in there somewhere, too, he said.

Bivolcic said one reason he joined the Army after becoming a Marine was the training and career development opportunities are better in the Army. He seems determined to take advantage of those opportunities, but the Marine Corps did teach him valuable discipline, he said.

"One of the things that helps me now is having a broad range of experience to fall back on," he said. "As a (noncommissioned officer) in the Marine Corps, I learned to take my skills, be confident and use them."

Bivolcic and his wife, Victoria, both plan to go back to school as soon as possible, he said, but for now he's busy with the Army and she's "very busy being a mom" to their three daughters, Katherine, 4, Kristina, 2, and Beverly, 1.

Survey gives information on family issues

By Stephen Barrett
American Forces Information Service

Pentagon officials say a 1992 survey released recently still provides valuable information on today's family issues and their effects on military readiness.

Officials add that commanders are now using the survey information to improve and enhance quality of life programs for family members before and during troop deployments.

The Department of Defense conducts periodic quality of life surveys to solicit the concerns of service members and their families. The 1992 project surveyed nearly 100,000 military members and their spouses on a variety of issues.

These questions dealt with deployments, lifestyle changes, retention and career intentions, military benefits and entitlements, family programs and job experience.

Air Force Col. John Nelson, DoD's associate director for family policy support and services, said the survey provides accurate and vital information on caring for service members and their families.

"The survey was initially planned during early 1991 and was delayed because of Operation Desert Storm," said Nelson. "It was again delayed until we felt we had stability following redeployment." He said DoD mailed the survey in March 1992, and it was in the field until September.

Nelson explained that many survey responses related to concerns service members had following the war.

The 1992 project surveyed nearly 100,000 military members and their spouses on a variety of issues. These questions dealt with deployments, lifestyle changes, retention and career intentions, military benefits and entitlements, family programs and job experience

"The questions on the military have to be understood under the context of the time," he said. "We were in the middle of the drawdown, and there was probably more uncertainty at that point then there was at any other."

Much of that uncertainty came in DoD's efforts to cut forces, using selective early retirement, reduction-in-force boards and separation incentives. Nearly 90 percent of those surveyed expressed concerns about military careers — most focusing on future promotion and assignment possibilities.

Still, 55 percent expressed their intentions to remain in the military 20 years or more. Although service members believe they will receive fewer retirement benefits, they value the job experience and see it as helpful in getting a civilian job after retirement.

Results show family issues exert a powerful influence, but do not hinder personnel deployments. However, a third of all participants said they had at least one problem where they needed assistance before deployment. Nearly 37 percent of those surveyed claimed family concerns affect their ability to deploy for extended periods.

"We looked at what happened during Desert Shield and Desert Storm," said Nelson. "Although we've been building a family support structure for almost 25 years, it (family programs) was tested really for the first time during the Persian Gulf War."

The survey found family care plans, making sure that single and dual military parents have prearranged child care in case of deployment, a major concern. The services require single and dual military parents to have family care plans in place, yet survey statistics show only a third do.

"We identified this in postwar conferences as an issue that needed work," said Nelson. "Since then, the services have been extremely diligent in building a large range of family readiness programs. Our members in deployable units and those overseas attend to this more carefully and tend to be better prepared. Overall, there was a high percentage of families who successfully managed their family responsibilities."

Nelson added both active duty and Reserve components have taken huge steps for educating their families about wills, powers of attorney and family care plans. "We suspect the numbers would be different today than in 1992," he said.

Contributing to those differences are family support services, which played a vital role during the Persian Gulf conflict. "Clearly, military officials are aware of separations and the effects on the family," said Nelson. "That is why family support services are here. We're working hard to provide services, support and education so a member can deploy confidently and the family has resources to fall back on."

Although family matters topped the list, Nelson said there were other problems affecting a member's deployment. Those include telephone notification, transportation arrangements, distance from duty station and school attendance during off-duty hours. He said unit commanders are handling these issues.

The survey also found service members remaining positive about military life in spite of frequent separations. Members had extreme confidence in their spouses' handling of health matters, child care, home maintenance and finances.

Post works to prevent SUICIDE

Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

In response to three on-post suicides and one soldier's off-post suicide, all occurring this year, post commanders are conducting chain teaching in suicide prevention.

At the direction of Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, commanding general, all soldiers and civilians will attend classes covering common myths about suicides, how to assess the warning signs and how to identify people at risk.

The class outline, which was distributed by the USAIC Chaplains' Office, was put together from "Suicide Awareness and Prevention: A Resource Manual for Military Chaplains," published by the Menninger Clinic in Kansas, where many chaplains receive training.

Chaplain (Capt.) Gary Moore, a leadership instructor at the Infantry School, said the purpose of the training is to help people learn to "catch the signals" others send out when they need help.

Those signals may be hard to pick up, Moore said, because people who are considering suicide often isolate themselves.

"What we have to do is learn to listen, to be aware," he said. With the approach of the holidays, when suicides tend to increase, he said, "We look for people who are loners, who aren't going home for Thanksgiving or Christmas. People in isolation from others, or who are using alcohol or drugs, are a danger."

Moore said while the goal of intervention is to get trained medical professionals to help those who are at risk for suicide, it's usually friends, family members or co-workers who first notice there's a problem.

The acronym SAM, he said, spells out what to do if you feel someone is dangerously depressed:

- Stay with the person
- Accept the person — listen and show concern
- Mobilize outside help — see that a chaplain, commander or other appropriate help is contacted.

Causes of suicide

The root cause of most suicides is an inability to deal with loss, according to Thomas J. Thompson, a doctor of educational psychology and counseling who is acting chief of the U.S. Army Research Institute Infantry Forces Research Unit.

Thompson said the loss may be of a loved one, a job, economic security or self-esteem, leading to a loss of hope.

"We all deal with loss," he said, "but someone who commits suicide experiences a loss he can't cope with."

Sidney Levine, a clinical psychologist who is clinical director of the post's Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Program, said the biggest risk factors for suicide can be found in an individual's personality.

"It's not unusual to think about suicide," he said. "It probably crosses everyone's mind at some point. But most of us find a way to cope."

What suicide victims often have in common, Levine said, are loss of hope, the inability to adjust to new circumstances, and a certain "fragility."

It's this fragility, Levine said, that leaves some people hopeless in the face of change or loss.

"They don't view their problems as temporary," he said. "They think their situation will never change; they can't see any hope — or help."

After a suicide

Thompson conducts psychological autopsies on victims of suicide at Fort Benning. A psychological autopsy, which consists of interviewing friends, family members, and the circumstances surrounding a suicide, usually gives a clearer picture of the person's problems and state of mind, he said.

The process serves two purposes, he said.

"It helps us gather information, so that if the system's broken, we can fix it. If we (people in the victim's community) have missed something, can we do it better?"

The second function of a psychological autopsy, he said, is to help answer the survivors' questions, help them come to an understanding about the death and enter the grieving process.

Moore said chaplains counsel family members in the wake of a suicide.

"They usually feel a mixture of emotions," he said. "They feel angry, and there may be guilt because they didn't expect (the suicide) and couldn't stop it. Taking care of the family is part of taking care of the soldier."

Signs of suicide

The Criminal Investigation Division is also involved in investigating suicides or possible suicides.

CID research, according to Fort Benning's Special Agent in Charge Randy Upton, shows two aspects of suicide plans that indicate the person's motivation — lethality and intent.

Lethality, Upton said, describes the means of injury. A gunshot wound to the head is considered high lethality, while swallowing a bottle of aspirin is relatively low lethality.

Intent hinges on the opportunity for rescue, Upton said. Little chance for rescue, such as a suicide attempted in an isolated area, translates into high intent.

Some suicide attempts are really "cries for help," according to Thompson. The person doesn't really intend to die, but can't find any other way to reach out to those around them. Such an attempt may be carried out in front of witnesses, or where rescue is likely.

In other cases of suicide, Thompson said, it seems as though the person tries hard not to attract attention. Although such people may drop a few hints to friends or family members, Thompson said, they don't tell any one person enough to set off an alarm. According to CID, such people are also likely to "self-medicate" with drugs or alcohol.

Thompson, CID research and the chaplains' class outline all point out that around 80 percent of all those who attempt suicide do give some verbal warning, even if it seems joking or casual.

Other clues include:

- Beginning or increasing life insurance
- Giving away possessions
- Careless or self-abusive acts

Contributing factors

Most current research indicates alcohol or drug use is a factor in nearly 20 percent of "completed" suicides, and even more attempted suicides.

The use of drugs and alcohol contributes to suicide in several ways, Levine said. First, substance abuse may lead to the very circumstances that cause depression — loss of job, family and self-esteem.

Second, Levine said, abusing substances that act as depressants, as alcohol does, contributes to the feelings of hopelessness.

Thompson agreed. "We'd have a lot fewer suicides if people didn't mix alcohol and firearms," he said.

Thompson said the use of alcohol also contributes to "impulsive" suicides, since it lessens people's inhibitions.

"If someone's drunk, they're going to be much more careless than usual," he said. "They may just be playing with a gun, not really meaning to hurt themselves, and they end up dead."

Research indicates some common characteristics of people who attempt or commit suicide are:

- Mental illness— some 50 percent of victims have some mental disorder
- Physical illness — 40 percent suffer a significant illness
- Living alone
- Suffering from insomnia
- Previous suicide attempts — "Once you cross that line between thinking about it and trying it," Levine said, "it's a lot easier to try it again."
- Age, race and sex — Suicide rates are higher among Native Americans and adult white males. Studies show while women may attempt suicide more often, men more often complete their attempts. This is partly because men tend to hang or shoot themselves — highly lethal methods — while women tend to overdose on medication, which is statistically less lethal
- Family history — 11 percent of those who commit suicide have a relative who did, also.

Statistics from the National Institute of Health show that since 1991, suicides in the military have outnumbered those in the civilian world by 1 to 2 percent yearly. Experts suggest this may partly result from frequent deployments and uncertainty resulting from the drawdown.

Army statistics indicate soldiers who most commonly commit suicide are white males in the ranks of specialist to staff sergeant, who have recently had a failed relationship with a wife or girlfriend, with money problems or alcohol abuse as contributing factors.

Program to assist family members

By Jennifer Chapman
Special to The Bayonet©

Army Family Team Building is a new program designed to help Army spouses learn about military life.

AFTB was designed primarily to help smooth out some of the bumps that occur as part of modern Army life, according to Peggy Jackson, team leader of the Army Family Team Building Executive Board. Most Army family members can cope when the service member deploys, but there have been times when things could have been made simpler if the family members had known what to expect, Jackson said.

AFTB is divided into levels of instruction that are appropriate to different stages of military life. Level one is primarily concerned with introducing spouses to the basics of the military lifestyle.

It covers potentially confusing areas such as rank structure, benefits, military terms, customs, courtesies and the definition of commonly used acronyms.

Level two elaborates on military living with courses like adapting to change, time management, family support groups and enhancing relationship building.

Level three covers more advanced problems such as personality types, motivation, group conflict management and understanding political issues and the Army.

Change can be positive factor in Christianity

By John Houser
USAIC Chaplains' Office

On Oct. 31, 1517, an event occurred in Wittenberg, Germany, that changed the course of Christianity. A devout Roman Catholic monk and German scholar published a document calling for change within the church. Brother Martin Luther listed 95 topics he wanted discussed for the good of Christianity.

History records that the church rejected Luther's efforts and excommunicated him from the priesthood. This rejection of efforts to "reform" the church led to the creation of a new religious group and the birth of Protestantism. Five problems within society and the church of that day led to this confrontation.

First, the focus of religious worship was on outward appearance and performance of ritual. The church was "works" oriented. Money could buy forgiveness. What, could be seen with the eyes was more important than what could be felt with the heart.

Second, the spirit of God was moving in the lives of common men and women. This spiritual revival manifested itself in individuals wanting to read the scriptures. They also felt the need for personal repentance for the forgiveness of their sins.

Third, there was oppressive government taxation coupled with religious insistence on the tithe. Members of the church were angry with the high class living of political and religious leaders while they were forced to exist in near-poverty.

Fourth, the church did not follow its first century example in the book of Acts. In the first century church, those called by God shared the hardship and provided a common witness to the saving grace of Christ — a common occurrence as God took care of his people.

Fifth, the religious leaders tolerated no criticism of their behavior and brutally rejected attempts to change the religious system.

Today, many Christian churches see similar problems. To some, ritual and tradition have become a block to God's moving in the hearts of his people. In others, monies are used for non-Christian purposes and cause deep concern. In still others, strange interpretations of Scripture and claims of divine inspiration cause hard and divisive, nonloving behavior.

The Christian church has lasted almost 2000 years and has seen vast technological and cultural change. It has survived due to its ability to use the example church and continuously reform its methods to meet the needs of the age.

It has survived due to its willingness to consider the needs of God's people and reform its structure and respond to the world's needs.

Christianity celebrates Reformation Day Monday. As we celebrate this day, let us remind ourselves of two lessons from church history.

First, change can be a positive factor in Christianity. Second, God is in charge of our lives and the world in which we live. Let us turn to him in prayer and supplication, seeking to help him make his church "a glorious church, without spot nor wrinkle, washed in the blood of the lamb."

All Saints Day

Celebrate with feast Tuesday

By David Moran
USAIC Chaplains' Office

reflections

Tuesday many in the Christian world will celebrate All Saints Day, or the Feast of All Saints.

The concept of "Holy Ones" or saints, has been with the Christian church from its very beginning. The term was first used in a collective sense for the righteous ones. The Apostle Paul frequently addressed his epistles, "To the saints ..."

This concept finds its roots in Judaism, which teaches redemption of the whole people of God and not just of individuals who are worthy of separate honor and veneration.

Early Christian martyrs willingly gave up their lives rather than renounce their faith in Christ Jesus. These men and women were referred to as saints. Their holiness seems to be a combination of being "in Christ Jesus" and persevering through severe persecution.

Early saints included the original disciples, Mary the mother of Jesus, and Stephen, the church's first martyr. The list quickly grew to include men and women of high spiritual life. After the first century this honor was reserved for martyrs only, but was later expanded to include local, national and universally recognized saints following their death.

About 610 A.D. the dedication of the Roman Pantheon as a Christian basilica was done using the title of Saint Maria and (all) martyrs. Some historians regard this as the original feast of all saints (martyrs). It was initially celebrated May 13. Others hold the event to be no more than an annual observance of the dedication of the Pantheon.

Another possible origin of the feast of All Saints is in a fourth century feast celebrated in the Eastern (Orthodox) Christian church since 321 A.D. The feast originally commemorated martyrs but later was expanded to honor nonmartyrs as well. This feast was commonly observed on the Sunday following Pentecost.

Still other scholars trace the feast we celebrate Nov. 1 to a Celtic feast.

It was observed among the Irish and later carried through Britain to the European continent and then to Rome. Of special interest to us is the spread of the Celtic influence of dressing up as evil spirits to please Saman through Irish potato farmer immigrants to 19th century America. This celebration led to the traditions that today we call Halloween, or All Hallows (Saints) Eve.

For Roman Catholics, All Saints Day is a Holy Day of Obligation in which they attend a special Mass honoring the communion of spirits to include those canonized by the church as well as the living community of believers.

"If God be for us, who can be against us?
— Romans 8:31

Your Guide to Prime-Time TV: Cable and Broadcast Schedules

Light among 'Women in Prison'

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

Whether or not she has a comedy series on the air at the given time, Judith Light always likes to retain her ties to drama.

The winner of two Daytime Emmy Awards during her five-year stint as Karen Wolek on "One Life to Live," the actress is known to prime-time viewers for her more-humorous work on the long-running "Who's the Boss?" and last season's "Phenom."

However, she's also worked consistently in often-serious TV movies, and she adds another such title to her credits with Sunday's fact-inspired ABC film "Against Their Will: Women in Prison." Light plays a recovering addict who is reunited with her three children after a jail term ... only to be separated from them again when she's arrested for a crime she didn't commit and returned to a cell.

While serving her new sentence, she learns that the guards are insisting on very personal "favors" from the female inmates. When she refuses to submit, Light's character is mistreated; then she is eventually released in an effort to ensure her silence about what she's observed. Instead, she gets a lawyer (played by Stacy Keach) and files a class-action suit to expose the wrongdoing of the prison hierarchy.

Judith Light

Directed by Emmy recipient Karen Arthur ("Cagney & Lacey," "The Rape of Richard Beck"), the film also features yet another Emmy victor — Kay Lenz ("Midnight Caller") — as well as Tony Award-owner Tonya Pinkins ("Jelly's Last Jam"), Michael Woods ("Private Eye") and Giuliana Santini ("Homefront").

"It was a very intense and difficult shoot," Light says of "Women in Prison's" filming in a men's maximum-security facility near Toronto, "not because of the people involved, but because of the subject matter."

"This woman I play is a five-timer in jail, and the last time, she swore that she would just take care of her kids and not get into trouble," Light says. "She gets set up and thrown back in prison, and she sees a real difference between the time she was last there and now. The women are being abused, and she decides she's going to do something with her life ... even if it's behind bars."

Light now has played roles on both sides of the legal system, since she was cast as an attorney in "In Defense of a Married Man" (1990), but she doesn't see a vast distinction.

"A character is a character is a character," she says, "and each person is different, with a different set of circumstances and her own unique experiences in life."
