DENTAC

Some units face treatment facility changes

U.S. Army Dental Activity

Some military members are facing a change in where they will go for dental treatment. Reassignments will also occur for family members and retirees.

According to Col. Richard A. Nurnberg, commander, U.S. Army Dental Activity, there will be about a 20 percent decrease in general dentists assigned to Fort Benning and in order to more evenly distribute dental care, the following changes have been made:

Military members assigned to the U.S. Army Medical Department Activity and to DENTAC will be treated at Love Dental Clinic, Building 9240, Santa Fe Road.

Units assigned to Love Dental Clinic (11th Infantry Regiment, U.S. Army Trial Defense Service, U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Division, U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit and Henry Caro NCO Academy) will receive care at Bernheim Dental Clinic, Building 2828, Sightseeing Road.

Family members whose sponsors are not currently assigned to Fort Benning will receive care at Love Dental Clinic.

Also, all family members eligible to receive space available and emergency dental care will do so at the clinic to which their sponsor's unit is assigned.

Exceptions to the above policy are for orthodontic patients, who will remain at Salomon Dental Clinic and for pediatric patients and all other specialty care patients who will continue to receive care at Love Dental Clinic.

Retirees will no longer go to Salomon Dental Clinic for emergencies or standby, space available care. They will now be treated at Love Dental Clinic under the same conditions.

Medical Leave Act

Law gives workers options

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

The Family and Medical Leave Act was passed into law by the United States Congress in February.

The law went into effect Aug. 5 and impacts large employers including the Department of Defense and their civilian employees.

The new law mandates that employers provide 12 weeks of unpaid leave annually for employees with medical and family emergencies.

"It is a wonderful program for people who need it," said Mary Loudermilk, a labor relations specialist with the Directorate of Civilian Personnel. She said that while her office has had many inquiries about the new law from Fort Benning employees, only one employee has actually requested leave to care for an ill parent.

Loudermilk does not expect many requests under the leave act.

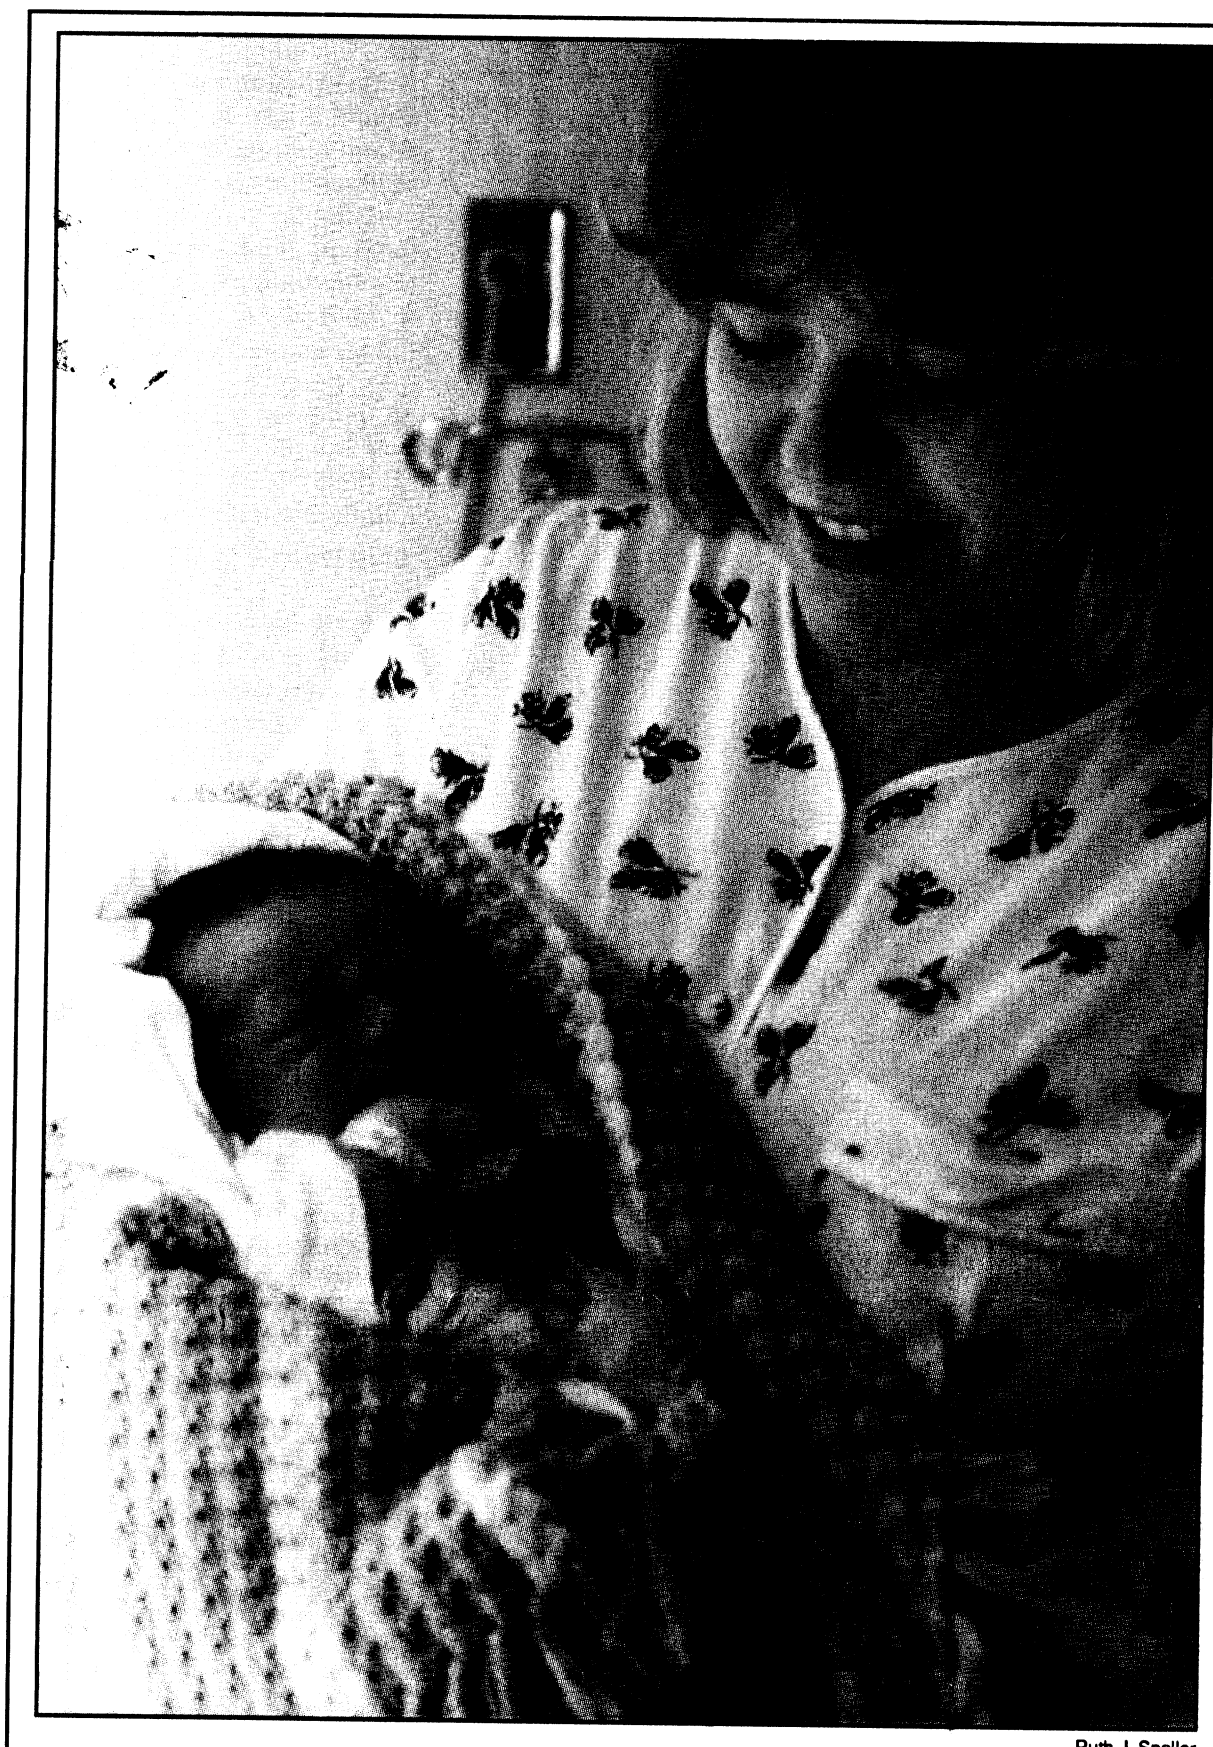
"(Employees) have so many other avenues (to use)," she said. "There are many paid leave categories like advanced sick leave or borrowed leave."

Guaranteed for employees under the law is 12 weeks unpaid leave following the birth of a child or to care for a newly adopted or foster-care child.

Also allowed is time to care for a seriously ill spouse, child or parent or time for the employee if the employee is seriously ill and has already used all paid sick leave.

Either parent is eligible to take leave to care for a child.

After returning from leave under the FMLA, the employee must be returned to his or her same or equivalent position with equal pay and benefits.



Ronald Sanders, principal director for civilian personnel policy at the Pentagon, said the main difference with the new legislation is that now family leave must be granted for reasons stipulated in the law. "Before, it was done at the supervisor's discretion."

Sanders also pointed out that employees are not required to take the 12 weeks of leave in full continuous days. They can work half days or short work weeks under what is called a "reduced leave schedule."

Employees may be required to provide medical certification when requesting leave because of illness. A 30-day notice should be given to supervisors in cases where leave is forseeable, like in cases of childbirth or adoption.

"Of course, that is not practical in an emergency," Sanders said. "We will have to find ways of working around the loss of a valued employee. We are going to make this law work."

Questions about the Family and Medical Leave Act or requests for leave from civilian employees should be directed to the Management and Employee Relations Division at the Directorate of Civilian Personnel.

Post to honor Martin Luther King Jr.

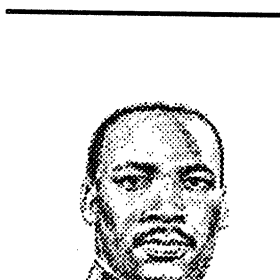
By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

There will be a commemorative ceremony honoring Martin Luther King Jr. at 11:30 a.m. Jan. 14 in Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall, Building 4.

The legal holiday honoring King's birthday will be observed Jan. 17, and many post units and activities will host events honoring King both the week before and the week following his birthday.



King, born in Atlanta Jan. 15, 1929, was a Baptist minister, scholar, author, Nobel Peace Prize recipient, founder of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, and leader of the Civil Rights Movement in the United States.

He believed strongly in universal peace and wanted all Americans to work together to create a more peaceful world.

He promoted human rights, fundamental freedoms and the elimination of all racial and religious discrimination.

Maj. Gen. Wallace C. Arnold, assistant deputy chief of staff for personnel, Department of the Army, will be the guest speaker at this year's commemoration ceremony.

Arnold was born in Washington, D.C., July 27, 1938, and spent the early years of his life in Virginia.

"...children will one day live in a nation where they will no longer be judged by the color of their skin but by the content of their character."

He earned his commission through the Reserve Officers' Training Corps and was awarded a bachelor of science degree in industrial education from Hampton Institute in Virginia.

He holds a master of arts degree in personnel management and administration from George Washington University in Washington, D.C., and has attended the Air Defense Artillery School, the U.S. Army Command and General Staff College and the Naval War College. Arnold served his initial tour in Korea as a battery officer in a missile battalion.

In 1969, Arnold went to Vietnam, where he served as chief of the Psychological Operations Division, XXIV Corps, in support of several Republic of Vietnam combat divisions and the Vietnamese Information Service.

Some of his most recent assignments include commanding the U.S. Army ROTC Cadet Command and serving as inspector general for VII Corps, U.S. Army Europe.

His awards include the Distinguished Service Medal, Defense Superior Service Medal, Legion of Merit with oak leaf cluster, Bronze Star with oak leaf cluster, Meritorious Service Medal with four oak leaf clusters, Army Commendation Medal with oak leaf cluster, Parachutist Badge and Army Staff Identification Badge.

Arnold and his wife, Earlene, have two children, Sheila and Stephanie.

So who's got the solutions?

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

COMMENTARY

The president announced his agenda for the American people for the new year, so madam editor decided to see what hopes the people of Fort Benning had for the coming year.

Reading the responses, I was impressed. Impressed by how altruistic our soldiers and civilians are.

They are seeking peace on earth, homes for the homeless, ridding our streets of crime and chilling out gangs.

Notably absent of course were solutions. Probably because there aren't any answers. At least not any politically correct ones.

Let's start with peace.

"You guys want to get along with one another, or do you want us to do it for you. Shape up or we nuke you back to the Stone Age."

Can you imagine recommending rounding up all the homeless people and institutionalizing them?

"Need a roof over your head, hey, no problem, we'll put you in our work camp here in the Imperial Valley and all you need do is pick our lettuce."

Criminals, hey no problem, just tell the cops to shoot first and ask questions later. Make a mistake and capture a wrong-doer, that's OK our prisons will take care of them.

Prisons, by the way will be all privatized — run by some business guy who not only won't charge the state for maintaining the prisons, but who will actually pay for the privilege of being able to run one, because he'll be putting the prisoners to work, making them earn money for him.

No more country club prisons, and forget phone calls, college classes, free medical care and television. No civil rights for prisoners. They're in jail because they committed a crime and will be treated as criminals.

Got a problem with gangs? Heck, give them all the weapons they need to kill themselves off, then get off the streets until they've succeeded.

Sound a little severe? Sound like something that Russian dude Vladimir Zhirinovsky might propose? Well, how different is this from a totalitarian government?

So instead of making wishes for the country, I'll just be thankful that we live in a democracy, have certain inalienable rights and that it's our privilege as members of the U.S. Army to defend them.

LETTERS

Guard situation concerns parent

Everyday I allow my 6-year-old son to walk home from Dexter Elementary School. I have never been worried about his safety because I believed the note I received from the school informing me that there should be a crossing guard in the morning and the afternoon to help him cross Ingersol Street.

I was confident that he was in good hands until recently when I was arriving home at exactly the time he was to get out of school. I pulled in to pick him up because I realized that there was no crossing guard at the intersection.

Of course I realized that it was the responsibility of the crossing guard to be there and she was obviously shirking her duties. However, I innocently believed that the school would be as upset about this as I was. Little did I know that the school was bitterly embroiled in a battle with the Military Police as to whose responsibility it was to ensure the safety of our children.

When I called Dexter School the only response I got was "Too bad — not our responsibility — call the Military Police." When I contacted the police, the response was basically "Sorry, it's a civil servant position — nothing we can do." Apparently nobody wants to take responsibility and no one — except the parents — is concerned about the children's welfare.

The biggest blow came when I contacted the school administration office. They were so sympathetic. They are concerned for the children but it is up to the Military Police to handle the situation. They do not pay their teachers and aides to be crossing guards. First of all, I learned that this is not the first time this has occurred. The person I talked to said she gets a call at least once a week from Dexter School. I've been letting my child walk to and from school everyday and I was never informed that there were any crossing guard problems.

I, of course, have a simple solution to this problem. Have an aide go out and make sure that the guards are in place at all main crossings before letting the children out. If one is missing, the aide can notify the Military Police and they can send someone over to fill the position before the children are sent home. The school felt that this solution was totally inappropriate because again — "its not their responsibility".

I realize that the crossing guard situation is ultimately the Military Police's responsibility. However, I resent the school administration telling me that they do not pay their aides and teachers to be crossing guards. They are right — they don't pay the teachers and aides — we, the taxpayers, do. I am paying them to teach my children and keep them safe at least until they cross the street after school. I think the school and the Military Police should stop playing these games about who is responsible and start doing what we pay them to do — ensure the safety of our children and ourselves.

I originally wrote this letter about three weeks ago when I first realized that there was a problem with the crossing guards. I had decided not to send it, feeling that I should give the parties involved at least one more chance. However, recently I witnessed the same situation again. Apparently it will take a child being hit by a car to make a difference to the police and the administration.

Provost marshal's response:

In response to the reader's letter, the Military Police Activity would like to make the following clarifications.

The Military Police Activity is not embroiled with Dexter School officials over the issue of school crossing guard responsibility. Whoever gave the reader this impression is uninformed. The Military Police Activity, garrison commander, Department of Defense Dependent Schools officials and the Community Life Office have worked diligently to find a solution to the problem of the impact of reduced funding on school crossing guards.

School crossing guards, like everyone else, occasionally have problems that make getting to work impossible. Illnesses, family issues and transportation failures are examples of the problems that are encountered.

The school crossing guards in question have been counseled on their responsibilities to notify the proper personnel in the event they cannot be present. Given that notification, the Military Police will find a replacement or man the position themselves. Public safety is our job and, like all parents, we are concerned for children's safety from a professional, as well as personal, point of view.

Community Activities expresses gratitude

On behalf of the Directorate of Community Activities, I would like to express our appreciation to several individuals and local organizations for their support in providing Christmas parties for the families of soldiers deployed to Somalia.

We would like to extend a very special thank you to the Association of the United States Army for providing the financial support to make these parties possible.

Thank you also to Robert Carter, AAFES Exchange manager, who provided the children with stuffed animals and a visit with Santa Claus.

We would also like to thank Southern Amusement Co., the Officers' Club, the Follow Me Golf Course, Destin Recreation Center, Gallman Foods, Golden Flakes, Colonial Baking, Jordan Sausage, Buffalo Rock Pepsi, Georgia Crown Distributors, B&B Beverage, Triangle Beverage and Dixie Beer Distributors.

The staff at the Sand Hill Club provided food and gifts for a special drawing for the children.

Jim Cantrell, Gene Riles and the staff at the Main Post Bowling Center deserve recognition for decorating the bowling center and providing giveaways for the children.

We hope that the support from those individuals and companies helped make the holidays a little brighter for the families of deployed soldiers. We know it was hard to look forward to the holidays with loved ones so far away from home and we're glad that they were able to make it home safely.

Sandy Helling
Directorate of Community Activities

ACS says thank you for holiday support

The Army Community Service wants to express sincere appreciation and thanks to all the members of the military community for their support of the emergency food program during the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays.

Donations made either through an organization, or individual donations delivered to the Food Locker building or contributions to the food baskets located in the Commissary were instrumental in assisting ACS in providing food baskets to soldiers during these holidays.

The initiative taken by the community confirms the fact that there are still people who care for others. This is especially true during this period of Army downsizing and frequent overseas deployments.

On behalf of future Food Locker recipients and the ACS staff, thank you for undertaking such a worthwhile event.

Roy B. Burns
Army Community Service

Education prevents injuries during season's cold weather

Our soldiers must be aware of the special precautions necessary to prevent cold-weather injuries. Through education of the early warning symptoms and application of common sense, injuries can be prevented.

Now is the time to educate leaders in the prevention, recognition and treatment of cold injuries. Pocket cards (Fort Benning Form 42, Cold Facts for Keeping Warm, and GTA 8-6-8, Adverse Effects of Cold, Cause and Symptoms) provide guidance for the prevention and treatment of cold injuries and are available from Post Publication, Building 2409.

Major unit commanders are tasked with ensuring all military personnel receive cold injury prevention training.

Cold weather injuries are preventable. The key is strong first-line leaders trained to recognize potential cold-weather injuries. I expect all commanders to make the prevention of cold-weather injuries a personal goal.

School'master': CSM stresses training for the changing Army

By Karen S. Morarle
Bayonet staff writer

After more than 24 years as an infantryman, he's used to traveling "light," but the bare office he currently inhabits is a little empty, even for him.

Miller

Command Sgt. Maj. Riley C. Miller, Infantry School command sergeant major since Oct. 29, is living out of boxes at work because he may soon be moving to a new office, but he seems to be settling in well to his command responsibilities at the school.

"My primary job," Miller said, "is to oversee and assist the entire spectrum of training we do. The emphasis is on technical competence. We want to make sure the soldiers we train are able to perform those tasks needed for battlefield survival."

"Our whole emphasis of training has changed from the massed-battle emphasis we trained for over a period of more than 40 years," he said. "Since the collapse of communism, our mission has been defined more as peace-making or peace-keeping. That means we'll be doing more of what the rangers call 'alley fighting' — combat operations other than war, with small-unit conflicts."

That mission, Miller said, demands that every soldier be trained in a variety of skills.

"We need to look at specific, individual tasks in every kind of training we do," he said, "from one station unit training to the Advanced Noncommissioned Officer Course. We're training soldiers to be successful leaders and troops, using the most modern, high-tech equipment available."

Miller said the lack of available resources creates a major challenge in training not only regular infantrymen but also airborne students, rangers, snipers and master gunners for today's Army.

"All over the school," he said, "people are trying to figure out how to train without dollars — how to train better, cheaper, and still turn out a quality product. We will reach a point where we'll have to say, 'We can't do more without more money.'

"We have less money, less equipment and fewer personnel available to us than we did a few years ago," he said. "It amazes me how well we've been able to keep our training to a very high standard.

"One of the things we do differently now," Miller said, "is spend more time on simulators. Even in basic rifle marksmanship, we train the soldiers to a level of proficiency on the simulators before they ever go to the range and fire a live round."

Miller said the Infantry School has a lot to offer not only students, but instructors as well.

"One of the charters I've been given," Miller said, "is to ensure that we get the best people from the field, to bring recent experience into the school and teach fieldcraft to the students. Only the best, most dynamic noncommissioned officers come back to the home of the infantry to teach."

What the instructors get in return, Miller said, is the chance to sharpen and improve their own skills and knowledge during their time at the school.

"We want to bring in the people from the (table of operations and equipment) units, rotate them through the school, and send them back to the field with new skills and knowledge," Miller said.

"We owe the infantry and the combined arms team the best quality of people — students and trainers," he said.

Miller has had plenty of experience in infantry training. His military education includes Ranger School, Airborne School, and the Air Force Senior Noncommissioned Officer Academy. Miller also served in the Republic of Panama as the command sergeant major of 5th Bn., 87th Inf. Regt. His most recent assignment was as command sergeant major of 1st Battalion, 29th Inf. Regt.

His decorations include the Bronze Star with three oak leaf clusters, Meritorious Service Medal with two oak leaf clusters, the Air Medal, Army Commendation Medal with "V" device and three oak leaf clusters, the Army Achievement Medal, U.S. Air Force Noncommissioned Officer Education Ribbon, Combat Infantryman Badge, Master Parachutist Badge, Pathfinder Badge and Ranger Tab.

Miller is married; his wife's name is Kim.

Memorial gets boost

Ranger Memorial Foundation

Six soldiers will be memorialized in stone at Fort Benning thanks to a contribution made in late December by James H. Smith of Montville, N.J.

Smith's son, Cpl. James E. "Jamie" Smith, was one of the six rangers from the 75th Ranger Regiment killed in Somalia.

In a letter to the Ranger Memorial Foundation, Smith requested that those six brave soldiers be honored with "memorial stones" at the Ranger Memorial now being developed for main post.

Besides Smith, included in the tribute are Sgt. James Casey Joyce, Sgt. Lorenzo M. Ruiz, Cpl. James M. Cavaco, Spc. Richard W. Kowaleski Jr. and Sgt. Dominick M. Pilla.

Smith, who was severely injured in Vietnam, said he understands what his son went through. He also said these soldiers fought brilliantly under very adverse circumstances.

Smith said he and his family are "proud of Jamie because he was a very enthusiastic ranger and loved serving his country."

Retired Maj. Gen. Ken Leuer, chairman of the Ranger Memorial Foundation, acknowledged Smith's gift and paid tribute to the rangers who served in Somalia. "They were the best, as rangers have been always," he said.

The foundation has raised nearly $400,000 of the $500,000 required to construct the memorial dedicated to rangers past, present and future.

The memorial, which will be located at Ranger Field in front of Infantry Hall, will consist of a plaza shaped like a spearhead symbolizing the strike operation conducted by rangers.

Prominent in the design is a cast bronze 24-foot commando knife and granite monuments to the various ranger associations. The memorial will include a "Ranger Memorial Walk" of cut and polished Georgia granite stones engraved with the names of rangers past and present.

Each granite stone costs $240 and may be purchased by check, credit card, money order or Army pay allotments. For more information on buying a stone or making an individual or corporate contribution, call 323-4461.

Recycling program benefits soldiers

USAIC Public Affairs Office

An aluminum recycling program managed by representatives of Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers began Tuesday.

The program was approved by representatives of the major subordinate commands, BOSS Council President Spc. James Shoemaker and Sgt. Maj. Allen D. Thrower, Directorate of Community Activities sergeant major, in a meeting earlier this week.

According to Thrower, the program will help reduce waste in the landfill and at the same time raise funds for single soldiers on Fort Benning.

Aluminum recycling containers will initially be located in Infantry Hall, Meloy Hall, Uchee Creek Campground and Marina, the Personnel Processing Center at Soldiers' Plaza and Briant Wells Field House.

If anyone has aluminum cans to recycle and would like to donate them to BOSS, call the Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers hot line at 545-7204.

CID seeks stolen truck

Criminal Investigation Division

A $500 reward is being offered for any information leading to the recovery of a stolen truck and the identification and conviction of the thief.

A 1993 green/blue Chevrolet Silverado MK III custom pick up truck with mag rims and leather interior, Georgia license number QF 22176, was stolen from Kessler Court in the Custer Terrace housing area at 6:04 a.m. Nov. 24.

Fort Benning Military Police are requesting the assistance of the community in identifying the perpetrator.

The MPs ask anyone who sees the truck to call 545-2222, and to attempt to get the license plate number and a description of the driver.

Board can mediate between soldiers, businesses

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Soldiers have been renting houses from a local realty company and finding holes in the walls, broken pipes, and other problems that hadn't been fixed, as they were supposed to be, before the soldiers and their families moved in.

Other soldiers, living in houses managed by the same company, found that repairs weren't being made in a timely manner. Often, when they were made, the landlord would send the bill to the occupants. When the occupants moved, they found their cleaning bills were somehow exactly the amount of their deposits — so no money back.

Several soldiers and their families have had problems with this company over a period of years. Fortunately, there is a place where they can take their complaints.

The Armed Forces Disciplinary Control Board for this region exists to solve problems that occur between soldiers' families and local businesses and agencies, according to Col. James Crockert, provost marshal, commander of the Military Police Activity and president of the board.

"We're here for the soldiers and families of Fort Benning, but we also serve military members in the surrounding area," Crockert said, "including Air Force, Marine Corps and Reserve members."

Crockert said the board, which usually meets quarterly, has five voting members, including himself, a Criminal Investigation Division representative, and one member each from Martin Army Community Hospital, the Naval Reserve Station in Columbus and the Warner Robins Air Logistics Center in Warner Robins, Ga.

The board also includes several nonvoting members, including representatives for the local Better Business Bureau and law enforcement agencies.

"We've had people report problems with auto repair places, auto dealers, nightclubs, restaurants, dog trainers, motels — you name it," Crockert said. "If the problem is purely legal, we'll refer them to the Legal Assistance Office at the Staff Judge Advocate. Most of the time, though, we can handle it."

Normally, Crockert said, the board will contact the person or business named in the complaint, and invite a representative to tell his or her side of the story.

"People are normally very anxious to resolve any complaints," Crockert said. "We have very good relationships with the local business community."

If the problem can't be resolved immediately, he said, the board will further investigate the charges.

"We will sometimes send investigators to the business in question, to re-enact the situation. If we find the accusations are substantiated, we'll notify the businesses in writing that we'd like them to attend a hearing."

While the board cannot require a civilian to attend a hearing, Crockert said, he's never had anyone refuse to attend.

"Sometimes we'll find that the problem is between ownership and management of the business," Crockert said. "Often the owner has no idea there was a problem, because it occurs in communication between middle management and the customer. Sometimes, it's just a matter of the owner clarifying his policy for his own management."

He said a hearing usually results in the business agreeing, in writing, to abide by certain guidelines set forth by the board.

"In one case we had recently against a repair shop, we had them agree to provide written estimates, get permission before doing extra work, and that sort of thing," Crockert said.

Normally, the board will place a business on probation for one year, he said, and if it abides by its agreements, the probation will be dropped.

"Most are more than willing to make restitution and abide by their agreements," Crockert said. "We very seldom have to place a business off limits."

One example of restitution, he said, is an auto repair business that returned a soldier's car with 500 extra miles on the odometer.

"We consulted with SJA, came up with a rental fee, and told the company that 500 miles would cost them $900. The company paid it," he said.

Crockert emphasized that for the most part, very good relations exist between military members and local businesses. "We don't just automatically assume they're wrong," he said. "We check things out carefully, and work with them to solve any problems. Most businesses here really do as much as they can for customer service."

In the case of the local realtor, Crockert said, the board was not able to resolve the problem.

"That one's gone to court," he said. "I'm confident we'll win, and then no one in the Department of Defense will do business with that company."

To file a complaint with the Armed Forces Disciplinary Control board, Crockert said, a soldier or family member can call or visit him directly, or contact the SJA Claims Office, post housing, the Equal Opportunity Office, the Inspector General or the appropriate chain of command.

"It can be expensive and time-consuming to go through the civilian court system," Crockert said. "We provide another avenue for soldiers and their families to get help when they need it."

POST BRIEFS

Runners have priority during PT hours

Formation running is not authorized on sidewalks throughout the installation. Units must use roadways and proper safety equipment must be worn and operational.

Individual runners and walkers may use the sidewalks and also are required to wear proper reflective clothing or road guard vests.

Formations and individual runners have priority of movement on Fort Benning during the established physical training hours of 6 to 7:30 a.m. Monday through Friday. Speed limit during PT hours is 15 mph and 10 mph when passing individuals and troop formations.

Publications to move

During Jan. 18 through 21, Post Publications will relocate from Building 2409, Lawson Army Airfield, to Building 1792, Upton Avenue, Main Post. Publications will be closed for all business during this period and will reopen Jan. 24. Emergency requests will be processed on a case-by-case basis.

Units and activities are requested to obtain an appropriate supply of required blank forms and U.S. Army administrative publications before the above period. For information, call Lee Lucas at 545-1466.

Luncheon to recognize outstanding civilians

The Civilian Awards Luncheon will be Jan. 27 from 11:30 a.m. to 1:15 p.m. in the Supper Club at the Fort Benning Officers' Club. The Directorate of Public Works will host the event.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland and range areas will take place Saturday through Jan. 17.

If weather permits, the following compartments may be affected: A-12, B-2, C-1, D-9, D-14, D-17, E-2, E-4, G-2, G-7, H-2, I-1, I-5, J-3, J-6, K-8, K-11, K-20, O-6, O-15, O-3, M-2, M-8, P-1, P-3, Q-4, S-1, T-2, T-4, V-1, W-2, X-5, Y-1, Z-2, U-3, BB-1 and CC-2.

Burning will occur in pine stands within these compartments to enhance endangered species habitat and training areas. People using these areas for recreation must vacate before 9:30 a.m. daily.

Training units using compartments adjacent to these areas may experience drift smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while traveling in these areas because of the potential for reduced visibility.

Military clothing to be sold today

A military clothing sale will be today from 7 a.m. to 2 p.m. in Building 224A on Warehouse Road. Numerous items will be for sale. For more information, call Charlie C. Wimmer at 545-1972.

Vehicle registration deadline nears

The deadline for 1994 vehicle registration in Chattahoochee County is as follows based on the owner's last name:

- Jan. 31 — A to D
- Feb. 28 — E to K
- March 31 — L to R
- May 2 — S to Z.

There is a $15 penalty per vehicle for failure to register by the deadline.

Payment must be made by cash or check, drawn on a local bank, which includes the soldier's work number and the company commander's name.

To avoid the ad valorem tax, Georgia nonresidents must bring to the office a complete serviceman's affidavit available from the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, a leave and earnings statement, proof of insurance and the registration fee ($20 for each car or truck and $12 for each trailer).

The vehicle registration office is located at the County Courthouse in Cusseta. Office hours are 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Discontinue sending mail to 'any soldier'

Mail to Somalia addressed to "Any Soldier" is no longer requested, according to post officials. Because units do not have the manpower to handle the volume of mail received, officials ask that individuals discontinue that practice.

TRADOC IG to visit

The inspector general for the Training and Doctrine Command, Col. Floyd Perry, will visit Fort Benning Jan. 24 to 28 for an assistance visit.

A team accompanying Perry will visit most directorates, the U.S. Army Infantry Center and the U.S. Army Infantry School, major support commands and tenant units. An itinerary will be provided when more information is available.

For information, call 545-3961.

Warehouse moves

The compressed gases and packaged petroleum, oil and lubricants warehouse, Building 1724, has moved to Building 13.

Compressed gases will be issued from 8 to 11 a.m. Monday, Wednesdays and Fridays. Packaged POL products will be issued from 12:30 to 4 p.m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

Thrift Savings Plan open season begins

Thrift Savings Plan open season will be through Jan. 31. TSP updates and TSP-1s have been issued to all administrative offices for distribution to all eligible employees. All elections must be reviewed in Civilian Personnel by close of business Jan. 31.

Soldiers must make appointments for AER

The Army Emergency Relief is processing clients' requests for assistance on appointment basis. Clients are requested to schedule an appointment and have all required paperwork when reporting to AER.

If you are unable to keep your scheduled appointment, a courtesy call is required. Call 545-2536, 545-7517, 545-4357 or 545-4043.

Museum needs WWII pieces

National Infantry Museum

As part of Fort Benning's observance of the 50th anniversary of World War II, the National Infantry Museum has plans to relocate a series of wooden World War II buildings to an area on post near the museum. When this long-range program is complete, the buildings will be open to the public.

The buildings include a two-story barracks, mess hall, orderly room and supply room. The plan also calls for saving and relocating a chapel and the Patton Headquarters which stands at Sand Hill.

When the project is complete, the buildings will be furnished and otherwise outfitted as a young soldier would have seen the buildings in the early days of World War II.

In order to complete this plan, the staff of the museum is looking for items that, over the years, have been sold through property disposal or have otherwise left the control of Uncle Sam. Cast-iron, potbellied stoves, big aluminum cook pots, baking pans and even 32-gallon galvanized garbage cans that may date from the war years are needed. Army folding cots and old mattresses for the cots are also needed. Condition or cleanliness of the mattresses is not important.

Also needed are a number of wooden or fiber footlockers that date to the early forties. Olive drab towels, large, handleless china cups, sugar bowls, and other crockery that is marked USQMC are needed for the display. Old wooden desks, wooden file cabinets and rifle racks are needed to help fill out the buildings.

While the museum may have many of the needed items in its collection, more of the same items are needed.

Anyone with old Army issue items of the type described and willing to give it to Fort Benning is asked to call the National Infantry Museum at 545-2958.

Alumni program offers seminar

Army Career and Alumni Program

A seminar about federal employment will be Jan. 20 from 8 to 10 a.m. in Infantry Hall, Classroom 30.

Sponsored by the Army Career and Alumni Program and the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, the seminar is designed to provide information on the opportunities of federal employment with primary emphasis on Fort Benning.

Available to soldiers who are retiring from the military and family members, the seminar will cover the basics of how the federal employment system functions, the various agencies, where to find job announcements and veteran's preference. Participants will be given a detailed explanation of the federal employment application, Standard Form 171.

James Fleming, a 20-year veteran of the Dirctorate of Civilian Personnel, and Cathy Murray, an instructor with Conwal Inc., will be available to answer questions.

Murray assists the Georgia Department of Labor with the ACAP Transition Assistance Program workshop, and she conducts personal assessments Thursday and Friday of each week from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the ACAP office in Soldiers' Plaza. The assessments include instruction in the use of an automated Standard Form 171.

To obtain an appointment, call 545-7073 or 545-4892 and ask for Judy McKibben or stop by Building 2617 in Soldiers' Plaza.

ACAP workshops: Classes designed for those getting out of the military

Army Career and Alumni Program

The following is the Army Career and Alumni Program Job Assistance Center calendar of events:

Job assistance workshop

Time: Wednesdays, 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Location: Infantry Hall, Building 4

The workshop is conducted every Wednesday at Infantry Hall. Topics discussed include objective setting, resume preparation, expanding opportunities, networking, interviewing, salary negotiating, stress management and financial planning. The workshop is for anyone in federal service (both military and Department of the Army civilians) and their family members, whether leaving voluntarily, involuntarily or retiring.

Education Opportunity Center

Time: Wednesdays, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

Participants will receive information from all over the country about college and university admissions requirements and proficiency exams. Education counselors can also discuss student loans and grants.

Mock Interview Practice

Time: Thursdays, 2 to 4 p.m.

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

Participants will learn how to interview effectively by rehearsing and practicing interview techniques with an experienced JAC counselor. The mock interview will be videotaped to provide the client with a visual learning tool.

Employers' Day

Time: Fridays, time varies

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

Employer day is scheduled each Friday at the Job Assistance Center. The program is designed to allow employers to recruit qualified candidates for their companies.

Employers normally will give presentations on their organizations and set up interviews with qualified candidates.

A variety of manufacturing and service companies take advantage of this opportunity. Public sector organizations are also represented.

Focus Hour

Time: Tuesdays, noon to 1 p.m.

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

Weekly video program that provides additional information on the key areas in the job search process — networking, dressing for success, interview process and negotiating techniques. Counselors will assist with any additional questions.

Small Business Development

Time: Monthly, 2 to 4:30 p.m.

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

A short, free, monthly seminar is offered by the Small Business Development Center of the University of Georgia. It is designed to provide assistance and training in starting a new business.

The seminar serves as a focal point for linking together resources of the federal, state, and local governments and the private sector.

For additional information and registration, call Army Career and Alumni Program Job Assistance Center, located in Building 2634, at 545-2308 or 545-2309.

AAFES envisions excellence

Exchange works toward being customer's choice

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

"To be our customers' first choice" is the vision of the Army and Air Force Exchange Service, said Mary Babbitt, post AAFES general manager.

Babbitt said she and her staff look forward to showing the Army-level Communities of Excellence team how that vision is a reality on Fort Benning.

The team, which is scheduled to visit post in April, will evaluate the quality of the post's services as part of the final phase of the ACOE competition.

This is the second year in a row that Fort Benning has been named a first-place winner in the extra large category of the Training and Doctrine Command COE competition.

Babbitt said the past several years have seen a tremendous upgrade in the quality of goods and services offered by AAFES and an increased sensitivity to customers' needs.

Fort Benning patrons have seen several improvements this past year, she said, including:

• Establishment of the Deferred Payment Plan in February. This special credit service allows soldiers to purchase big ticket items at a low annual percentage rate.

• Construction of a new Robin Hood Sandwich Shoppe, Burger King Express and Royal Chopstix in the Main Mall. Fort Benning is one of the first posts in the world to offer these establishments for the enjoyment of its customers, Babbitt said.

• Upgrade of the computer system at the Car Care Center to increase parts inventory to approximately $70,000.

• The opening of the new Mailing Center, so customers can shop and mail packages in one location.

Not an organization to become complacent, Babbitt said AAFES' future plans include the eventual addition of 30,000 square feet to the Main Exchange and a joint project with Fort Benning to completely renovate the historic Main Post Theatre.

"We are constantly looking at what our customers want. We work closely with the Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers Council and also have our own advisory council made up of soldier and civilian representatives of all ranks, active duty and retired," Babbitt said. The council directly influences merchandise selection, the need for additional services, pricing and hours of operation.

Extremely flexible customer-oriented hours of operation and the best price guarantee are two of the other ways AAFES strives to be the first choice for post personnel.

If patrons can find an item for less, AAFES will match the price and even refund the difference on items purchased at the regular price that were subsequently put on sale.

AAFES has also improved the quality of its service by improving the quality of its employee training programs, she said.

Innovative classes are being conducted to teach AAFES managers how to deal with the downsizing and accomplish more with less, and a service known as Business Television is broadcast in the break room to teach employees technical knowledge about new products.

"With the most up-to-date knowledge about products and promotions, our employees can better serve our customers," Babbitt said. "The attitude of our employees is reflected in the quality of customer service."

"Every day is a day for Total Army Quality at AAFES," she said. "For us, quality service is not just a beacon in the distance. It's something our customers can expect everyday."

Sgt. 1st Class Alan Buford, with daughters Sarah, 4, and Janelle, 6, and wife, Donna, try out their new canoe at Cooper Creek Park.

Sgt. 1st Class Scott Wallace works on his handmade cedar canoe.

Sgt. 1st Class Alan Buford took to the waters of Cooper Creek Park last month with his family to launch his new canoe. What made the event so special was that it signified the successful completion of a three-month project — Buford and his wife, Donna, built the wooden craft themselves by hand.

The 18-foot cypress and mahogany canoe was the result of months of sawing, gluing, stapling and sanding, all completed in the backyard of the Bufords' Fort Benning quarters.

The idea to build a canoe came in mid-summer during the 50th birthday party of the 75th Ranger Regiment. Buford is the non-commissioned officer in charge of the Ranger Orientation Program at Regimental Headquarters.

He and fellow ranger and neighbor Sgt. 1st Class Scott Wallace saw a co-worker's canoe strapped to the top of a truck at the celebration. They later learned the canoe had been handcrafted by him as a teen.

That afternoon, Wallace and Buford decided each would build his own canoe. "I never saw one like it before," said Buford. "When I found out he built it by hand, it got me motivated and I decided I had to have one."

His first step was to buy a magazine about canoes and from it he ordered a book and plans outlining how to build one. He and Wallace split the cost of some of the preliminaries like the plans, tools and some materials.

The Bufords began working on their canoe first. With the fast pace of life in the 75th Ranger Regiment, it gave the couple an opportunity to spend some quality time together, they said.

The first step in the project was to build a plywood frame, or "strongback," around which the canoe is formed. The couple then headed to the wood shop on post to cut boards of cypress wood into narrow strips. The flexible strips of wood are used to construct the hull of the canoe by forming them around the frame and gluing them together. Staples hold the strips together until the glue is dry, then they are removed.

One of the toughest parts of the project, according to the Bufords, was trying to keep the strips of wood even so that they fit together without gaps.

Once the hull of the canoe was completed, the next step was to sand it in preparation for fiberglassing. After the fiberglass was sealed in with epoxy, the craft was sanded again before a final finish of varnish was applied to seal the boat.

The final touches were to construct seats and trim the canoe with mahogany wood.

The Bufords estimate that the cost of the project reached between $400 and $600 and more than 200 hours of work. Alan Buford was quick to point out, however, that to buy a canoe made of wood can cost more than $2,000.

Wallace is now in the final stages of his project. Benefitting from the knowledge and help of the Bufords next door, his cedar canoe is near completion. Wallace also saved time by ordering cedar that was already pre-cut into strips.

"To buy a canoe like this would be extremely expensive," said Wallace. "Additionally, you wouldn't get this sense of accomplishment."

The Bufords have taken their canoe out several times since its completion. "There are no leaks and it steers true," Buford said.

One of the most fascinating aspects of the endeavor for both the Bufords and Wallace was that they have no prior woodworking experience.

"This is my first woodworking project," said Wallace, gesturing to the canoe spread across his living room. "I've never built anything before."

Donna Buford summed up the success story by adding, "If you're motivated, you can do it!"

No more 'dependents'

DoD official works to keep military 'family-friendly'

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

> "Not just mothers, but young fathers want to be there for their children. The answer is not that one or the other can't work."
> — Carolyn H. Becraft
> Department of Defense

Words are important to Carolyn H. Becraft. Eleven years ago, she got the Army to stop referring to spouses and children as "dependents."

"You wouldn't refer to the wife of the commander in chief as a dependent," she said. "I don't think modern military spouses deserve to be called dependents either. How people are called has an impact. I asked people recently when I gave a speech to clap if they agreed on that point, and everyone in the room put their hands together. It grates in this day and age."

Becraft, deputy assistant secretary of Defense for personnel support, families and education, is responsible for many things affecting service members and their families. But the word she uses to describe her role is "warrior."

"I still consider myself a warrior — a warrior who defends and promotes the quality of life programs that are so essential to a robust force," she recently told attendees at the Army Family Action Plan Planning Conference.

"This is a critical juncture — I'm coming on at the end of the Cold War," she said. "It's an extraordinary opportunity to help determine what the military's going to be like in the future. I want to ensure the military stays family-friendly ... that military communities are great places in which to live. They should be places where families can grow and thrive, whether they are in the military a few years or 30 years.

"I also want to ensure systems are in place so families can take care of the business of their lives — recognizing that the military adds extraordinary factors that complicate that business."

She said the military progressed in family issues because family advocates set priorities.

"They knew what they could fix at the local level and what had to be kicked up," she said. "In retrospect, one could say these were very wise people. As a result, military families kept up with developments in the civilian world. Early on, they identified issues like spouse employment. Now we have transition assistance — and wasn't that a good idea?"

The military responded to the need for dental care with the Delta Dental Plan, she noted. And while child care is still a burning issue in the civilian world, the military has an excellent day care system, she said.

One key issue for civilian and military employers is how to be family-friendly, commented Becraft. "Not just mothers, but young fathers want to be there for their children," she said. "The answer is not that one or the other can't work. The age group we're talking about doesn't have that choice — it's a high expense age.

"Research shows the attitude of the spouse is one of the most important determinants of whether the member stays. If the spouse has the tools to take care of life, the member will want to stay."

Because members of the Reserve components played such an important role in Desert Storm, she wants to ensure the military is prepared to adequately support their families.

"The most patriotic and loyal people in the world are military members and their families," she said. "They understand the mission, make extraordinary sacrifices and don't ask a lot in return."

Becraft has been fighting for military families since the late 1960s, when she was an Army dietitian. She developed a pioneering prenatal nutrition program for military spouses. Then, she married and left the Army as a captain in 1971.

"I became pregnant with our first son, Peter," she said, adding, "In those days, pregnant women couldn't stay in the service."

She continued to be active in the military community. She earned a master's in education from the University of Southern California and directed a learning resource center for soldiers that she started in Bad Kreuznach, Germany.

Consider retraining if looking for work

By Linda Lee
American Forces Information Service

Many people who find themselves without a job because of the military drawdown need to find work in the civilian sector. For many, this is the first time they have had to look.

Paula Davis, a transition specialist with the Defense Department, said service members need to keep a few things in mind when looking for work. Among these are changing career fields, retraining, networking and time limits.

This may be the time to think about changing career fields, said Davis. If you don't like what you have been doing or your military job doesn't translate into the civilian sector, this could be the time to move into something else.

Set a time limit for retraining if you don't have unlimited time, Davis said. You need to take the time limit into account because it may affect your career choice.

Networking is one of the best ways of finding a job. It is usually through personal contacts, knowing someone who knows someone who knows of a job, Davis said, that jobs are found and offered.

The more people who know you are looking, the better your chances are of getting one, she said. Family members, friends and their friends, co-workers and business associates are some of those who can make up a network.

Take a part-time or a flex-time job if you can't find that full-time job. It gives you some income to help pay the bills, offers networking opportunities and provides more work experience for the resume. Also, it can leave time for job hunting.

If you haven't found the job you want, you might consider volunteering, Davis said. This can provide more contacts for your network.

Don't rule out any opportunity to find work. To be successful in the job search, Davis said, talk to people, check out the leads, be realistic and don't give up.

Homeowners: Internal Revenue Service changes regs on deductions for mortgages

Georgia Society of CPAs

There's no question that owning a home can be costly, but home ownership is also replete with tax-saving opportunities.

To help you make the most of these opportunities, the Georgia Society of Certified Public Accountants points out how the tax law can impact your home ownership decisions.

Your tax savings begin with the points you pay to the mortgage lender to secure a mortgage. Points paid to acquire your principal residence are generally fully deductible in the year you pay them. Points paid for refinancing or purchasing a second home normally must be deducted over the life of the loan.

In a recent reversal, the Internal Revenue Service ruled that points paid from mortgage proceeds are deductible up front as long as the fees you pay at closing, such as those for attorneys, appraisals and abstracts, are at least equal to the amount of points withheld.

Deductions for mortgage interest and real estate taxes can also help to offset some of the high costs of home ownership. You may deduct interest paid on up to $1 million in acquisition debt as long as you use the loan proceeds to buy, construct or improve your principal or second residence.

Real estate taxes you pay on your property are generally tax deductible. If you buy or sell property during the year, the real estate tax deduction is allocated between the buyer and seller based on the part of the year you each owned the property.

However, this tax deduction, and certain other itemized deductions, are phased out for some high-income taxpayers.

The money you spend for home improvements provides another opportunity for tax savings. For tax purposes, an improvement is anything that adds value to your house, prolongs its life or adapts it to new uses.

The cost of improvements of a lasting nature, such as adding a bathroom, installing a new roof, or building a deck, add to your home's "basis" or total cost. When it comes time to sell your home, the higher your basis, the lower your gain — and the lower your taxes.

Be sure to save bills, canceled checks, and other documents that support the cost of the improvements you make.

If you sell your home and realize a profit, you can generally defer paying taxes on your gain by meeting two conditions:

- You purchase or build a new house within the period beginning two years before and ending two years after the sale date of the old residence; and
- The cost of the home you buy is equal to or greater than the adjusted selling price of your old home.

Your adjusted selling price is the amount realized on the sale, reduced by certain expenses of fixing up the old residence to sell it. The amount realized on the sale is the selling price, reduced by selling expenses, such as real estate commissions, advertising, legal and title fees.

Fixing-up costs are expenses you incur in preparing your home for sale, such as the cost of painting, carpet cleaning and general repairs. You must do the "fixing-up" during the 90 days before you sign the contract to sell your house and you must pay for the repairs within 30 days after the sale.

In addition, these expenses must not be capital expenses that add to the basis of the property sold. The Internal Revenue Service allows you to postpone taxes on the gain from the sale of your principal residence only. A vacation home doesn't qualify for this tax treatment.

If you are age 55 or older when you sell your home, you may be entitled to a special once-in-a-lifetime tax break that allows you to exclude from your taxable income up to $125,000 of the gain realized from the sale.

You qualify for the exclusion if you have owned and lived in the home for at least three of the five years leading up to the sale. CPAs point out that married couples can take only one exclusion between them.

Whether you owe, defer or exclude the taxes on the sale of your residence, you must report the sale on IRS Form 2119 in the year that you sell it. Since each sale affects the basis of your next home, retain these forms for future reference.

Santa comes through for 2/29 children

By Brad Leath
2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

A special request by the commander, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, went out to the North Pole Dec. 16 in hopes that Santa Claus would be able to augment his already busy schedule and appear to warm the hearts of some 350 deserving children of 2nd Bn. at a function in his honor Dec. 20.

Knowing full well that this request was sent well under the five week lock-in, the staff made the attempt all the same. Their parents believe the children worked hard this year to support their fathers and mothers as they trained some of the finest infantry soldiers in the world.

"Their efforts this busy year to ensure that mom and dad had a little less stress to accomplish the mission made us feel like we owed it to the kids to give them something special this year," said Lt. Col. Michael A. Bingham, battalion commander.

After sending the staff through a tough planning session; "Operation Santa" was put into operation with anticipation and confidence that Santa would approve this request. The commander settled down for the long trek his request would have to travel; through the Routing and Transmittal System set up by Infantry Hall, over the river and through the woods, through the fiber optic line straight to Santa via facsimile.

Dec. 20, with bells jingling and lights flashing, Santa showed up at the Ranger Recreation Center and Harmony Church Gymnasium. Santa seemed to be in great spirits and arrived with plenty of gifts for the youngsters. Games were played in the gymnasium and there was food galore for all to partake in. Even Santa got his fill of all the fixins'. The younger children each received a picture with Santa.

The commander thanked Santa for taking time out of his schedule on such short notice, five days early, to come and bring joy to the more than 350 children of the battalion.

COMMUNITY CARE

By Ken Franklin
Martin Army Community Hospital

The new year is beginning with health care prominent in the minds of us all. Competing federal reforms, rising costs and shrinking wallets have focused public attention on this complex issue.

Most of the discussions involve expensive and large-scale issues, such as delivery plans, insurance coverage and technology controls.

However, there are many simple things that individuals can do to reduce their health-care problems — by preventing problems from arising. These changes are inexpensive and easy, and can be applied today by every person. Here are some examples:

• Inspect the home for fall hazards. Loose throw rugs, cords and boards can cause falls, which each year result in thousands of hospitalizations and deaths from broken hips and head injuries. Stairs, archways and bathrooms are particular danger areas.

• Use safety belts and child restraints. These systems have already saved countless lives, as well as preventing lengthy admissions and long recoveries from broken bones. A fracture usually results in a cast for eight weeks; a seat belt is an inconvenience for five seconds.

• Immunize children. Immunizations are available free without an appointment at Martin Army Community Hospital Family Clinic and at the Allergy Clinic; call ahead to get clinic hours. These measures save weeks of lost school days, and can save a child's life. Immunizations are available for tetanus, polio, diphtheria, whooping cough, measles, mumps, rubella and some hepatitis and meningitis.

• Lock up or eliminate poisons and firearms. The mere presence of these items in the house raises the chance that a child will die. Children can climb, reach and move much more than we expect. Removing the threat is the best defense; failing that, a secure lock is a minimum.

• Stop smoking. Tobacco kills a population the size of Columbus every six months; more than 30,000 children of smokers die each year from second-hand smoke, according to the U.S. Surgeon General. A pack-a-day smoker will actually profit $500 a year from quitting, and will get improved health in six months — even if he or she has smoked for years.

There are many other examples. Implementing them all costs a typical family less than $20 a year, and can save huge amounts in hospital stays, clinic visits and deaths. That's the cheapest medical insurance around.

ASK THE JUDGE

Q: I adopted my wife's daughter through your office last year. The stories about "Baby Jessica" and all of the media coverage about it make me worried that the adoption is no good. Can you explain?

A: The "Baby Jessica" case you refer to involved an unwed mother who agreed to give up her newly born child to a childless couple. She had listed a man as being the natural father of the child, who, in truth, was not the father.

Later, when the real natural father found out about the adoption, he objected to it, and eventually, both he and the natural mother have (at this point) been successful in getting a court order for a return of the child from the adopting parents.

What makes the decision so heartrending is that the child has been in the care of the adoptive parents for the past two years while the legal battles have raged. As a result, the child does not really know her natural parents.

Your case, a stepparent adoption, is much different. One of the biggest differences is that the child remains with one of its natural parents — more often than not, the parent who has always had custody anyway.

Second, presumably you and your wife gave correct information about the natural father of the child. This would enable the attorney who handled your case to use the correct procedure to accomplish the adoption (different procedures are used depending on whether or not the child was born in or out of wedlock).

Most important of these procedures are those having to do with giving legal notice to the natural parent whose rights you are terminating of the fact that you are trying to terminate his or her rights. Thus, accurate information about the natural parent must be obtained, including identity and address.

Of course, there are cases where the location, and even the identity, of a natural parent is not known; however, there are still legal ways to give notice.

At this point in time, it would not do to worry about the impact of the "Baby Jessica" case. It is true that the case may be heard by the Supreme Court, but it would be improbable that the court would issue any ruling that would affect the majority of adoptions in this country. More likely, any ruling will be narrow and address the particular circumstances of that case.

If you have questions about this issue as it pertains to an adoption you have been through or are planning, contact the Legal Assistance Division for an appointment with one of the attorneys. Call 545-3281 or 545-3282.

Don't leave your car out in the cold

American Automobile Association

Motorists are more likely to experience car trouble during the winter driving season than at other times of the year.

This winter, AAA Auto Club South offers motorists some simple precautions to avoid being left out in the cold.

"Motorists must understand how to adapt their driving styles, as well as prepare their cars for winter's wet, cold and icy conditions," said Randy Bly, AAA's director of traffic safety.

Defensive driving

Motorists who learn to overcome winter's poor visibility, skids and braking difficulties greatly reduce their risk of involvement in weather-related collisions.

"Studies indicate stopping distances are increased three to nine times on ice or snow, and vehicles take twice as long to stop on melting ice or snow than on hard surfaces," Bly said. "This makes defensive driving techniques especially important in winter weather."

AAA offers the following tips to help motorists steer clear of winter driving trouble:

• Avoid sudden starts, stops and turns.

• Don't brake hard.

•Anticipate potential danger (ice on bridges, snow-covered lane markings, stalled cars and poor visibility).

• In a skid, don't slam on the brakes. Gently ease off the accelerator.

Car preparation

Before winter arrives, make sure your car is equipped with snow or all-season tires. Remember not to combine radial and nonradial tires and keep tires inflated properly.

Items to carry:

Some important items to carry in the car during winter are: a bag or bucket of sand, salt or cat litter; small snow shovel; combination ice scraper and snow brush; flashlight; blanket; flares and reflector triangles; rags or paper towels; first-aid kit; spray de-icer; extra set of car keys; and prescription medication and eyeglasses, if necessary.

Windows and headlights:

Danger must be seen to be avoided.

Clear windows, mirrors and lights with an ice scraper before traveling. Make certain windshield wipers and defrosters are in good working order and that washer reservoirs are filled with no-freeze windshield washer fluid.

Driving on streets covered with ice, slush, salt and mud can cover headlights and reduce lighting effectiveness by up to 90 percent.

Stop periodically during a long trip to clean your headlights. Keep low beam headlights on during periods of inclement weather.

Oil:

To protect your car from freeze-ups, change to a winter-grade oil recommended in the owner's manual. Summer weight oil is too thick and will not lubricate properly in winter.

Antifreeze:

Make certain cooling system antifreeze is mixed with an equal portion of water for maximum protection. Flush and refill the cooling system every two years.

Adding fuel system antifreeze to the gas tank will help prevent frozen gas lines. Keeping the gas tank half full also prevents freezing.

Door locks:

Frozen door locks can be overcome by carefully heating the end of a key with a match or lighter. Pouring heated water on a frozen lock is not recommended.

Air conditioner:

Using the air conditioner for a few minutes every week this winter will keep the unit lubricated and prevent vital parts from drying out.

Battery:

At zero degrees, a car's battery loses about 60 percent of its strength. At 32 degrees, a battery is 35 percent weaker. Keeping battery terminals clean helps, but a load test performed by a qualified technician will help determine whether a car's battery is strong enough for winter starts.

Starting car:

• Make certain all accessories are turned off, including heater, defroster, lights, wipers and radio.

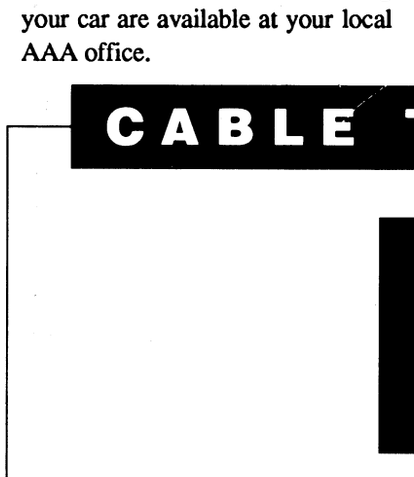
• Turn the ignition key to the start position and crank the engine for no more than 10 seconds. Do not pump the accelerator pedal.

• Once the engine starts, don't "gun" or "rev" the engine. When an engine is cold, lubricants do not flow freely. Hard accelerations on a cold engine can cause damage, while unnecessary idling wastes gasoline. The best advice is to take it easy until the car is warmed up.

• If the car doesn't start within 10 seconds, return the key to the off position, wait a few minutes and try again. If the car refuses to start, there may be battery or mechanical trouble.

• For safety's sake, never warm a car in a garage, whether closed or open. Carbon monoxide fumes could be lethal to occupants in the car garage or attached structures.

Last year AAA Auto Club South responded to approximately 900,000 calls from stranded motorists. The majority of these calls came during the winter months, and many could have been prevented by winterizing before cold weather.



Free brochures on winterizing your car are available at your local AAA office.

DR. FIT

Army Physical Fitness School

Q: I have had many problems with my back over the past few years. Is there any hope for relief from back problems?

A: Yes, there is hope. In most patients, specific injuries to the low back are difficult to find. However, you can identify specific exercises that provide rapid relief and possibly help avert recurrence. Initially, you must learn the cause of the pain. Some pain responds well to William's flexibility exercises. The exercises involve flexing one knee to the chest, then the other knee to the chest, then both knees to the chest.

Another form of back exercises are called the McKenzie Exercises. These six exercises are helpful in many low back problems. The six positions are: 1. Lying face down with arms at your side, 2. lying face down with hands under the shoulders and raising on the forearms, 3. lying face down with hands under the shoulders and extending the arms so the elbows are straight, 4. extension in standing with a back bend, 5. lying on the back, assume the knees to chest position, and 6. while sitting, bend forward and place the hands on the floor and reach back between the legs. As with most exercises, use common sense and do not exercise and aggravate the injury.

Q: My daughter likes to swim the backstroke in swimming. What are some good exercises for her to avoid straining the shoulder muscles?

A: The backstroke involves the deltoid and rotator calf muscles when the hand enters the water. Subsequently, during the power stroke, the "lats" and other underarm, pulling muscles are involved. Therefore, to strengthen these muscles through dryland training, use pulling activities such as different pull-ups, rowing pulls or pull-downs. It is important to remember that using the body, or rubber tubing, for resistance is as effective as using weights. Always take the joint through a full range of motion.

Venison low fat option

Nighthawk Publishing Company

If you have deer hunting friends who will share their venison, you can have tasty meals, eat healthier and be slimmer.

Venison —

• Has 1/2 as many grams of fat as turkey or chicken, 1/10 as many as lean ground chuck and 1/12 as many as lean cured ham

• Has fewer calories than the same size serving of roasted chicken or turkey and 1/2 the calories of ham or ground chuck

• Is comparable to chicken and turkey in cholesterol content

• Has more protein than freshwater or saltwater fish, beef liver, turkey or chicken and is a rich source of trace minerals including calcium, magnesium, zinc, potassium, phosphorus and iron

In Europe, venison has been the red meat of choice for kings and noblemen because of its taste and nutritious properties. Venison is raised on game farms throughout Europe and is found today on the menus of elegant restaurants in the Old World and the New World.

However, you can prepare venison easily at home in a wide variety of ways. Even if you aren't a successful hunter, you can lose weight and eat healthier by buying venison from suppliers.

John and Denise Phillips have combined their almost 60 years of experience in caring for and cooking venison into their Deer & Fixings Cookbook, which contains more than 100 of their family's favorite recipes for various cuts of venison and 100 side dishes to accompany venison.

To receive a free list of venison suppliers in the United States as well as two free venison recipes, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Night Hawk Publications, P.O. Drawer 375, Fairfield, Ala. 35064.

The Phillips' cookbook can also be ordered through the publication company for a fee.

David's jerkey

Venison jerky is a recipe our ancestors once ate that is fun to prepare. A delicious snack food, jerky can be put in your backpack to take camping and hiking or carried to school or work.

Trim all fat and muscle from the venison, and cut meat into 1/2- to one-inch wide strips. According to your personal preference, you can simply add salt and pepper to the meat before curing. Or, you can layer the strips in a glass dish and marinate them overnight in the refrigerator in either a steak sauce with a soybean, ginger and garlic base, worcestershire sauce or barbecue sauce.

You may prefer to sprinkle a mixture of three parts sugar, three parts seasoning salt and two parts black pepper and then liquid smoke on the venison strips.

Line the bottom of your oven with tinfoil, and remove all but one oven rack, placing that rack on the highest level. Stick a toothpick through one end of each strip of meat, and hang each strip from the oven rack by placing the toothpicks across the grates. Turn the oven on its lowest setting, and bake for 24 hours. Store in airtight container.

Venison can be a substitute for other traditional meats.

Venison roast

Pour a bottle of steak sauce over the entire roast that has had the outside fat and muscle removed from it. Wrap the roast with several bacon strips, securing with toothpicks.

Mix 1 package dry onion soup mix with 1 can cream of mushroom soup and 1 cup of water.

Pour over and around roast.

Wrap roast in foil, and bake for three hours at 300 degrees, checking for doneness. Or, cook eight hours in a crockpot.

Boxing

Post to host clinic, matches

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

For boxing enthusiasts, Jan. 13, 14 and 15 will be a boxer's paradise when Fort Benning hosts an officials' clinic, boxing matches and a youth boxing clinic on post.

A boxing officials' clinic will be conducted by USA Boxing instructor Al Robinson of Fort Gordon, Ga. at the Kelley Hill Fitness Center. Anyone attending this clinic will be allowed to officiate during the military bouts Jan. 14.

The Physical Activities Branch will host boxing at Kelley Hill Fitness Center Jan. 14 with weigh-ins beginning at 4 p.m. Sixteen bouts are set to go; the first eight in the novice class (10 matches or less), and the last eight in both novice and open class.

Jan. 15th's youth boxing clinic at Kelley Hill Fitness Center at 9:30 a.m. will be conducted by Robinson, former Olympic Gold Medalist Eddie Crook, 1992 Olympic boxing coach Joe Byrd and former World Boxing Organization light heavyweight champion and No. 1 heavyweight contender Michael Moorer.

Four junior Olympic matches will follow the clinic. Each bout will be three rounds lasting one minute.

Saturday evening boxing will get under way with weigh-ins at 4:30 p.m. and the first bell sounding at 7:20 with the first of two junior Olympic bouts. Bouts three through 14 will be novice class with the open class rounding out the night.

Admission for the bouts on Jan. 14 will be; $3 for adults, $2 for military and $1 for children. On Jan. 15, the charge will be $5 for adults, $3 for military and $1.50 for children.

For more information contact Jim Brown at 545-5777 or 545-4300. The Kelley Hill Fitness Center can also be reached for information at 544-1747 or 544-3578.

B-ball tourney starts Jan. 18

By Terry K Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Three-on-Three Schick Super Hoops basketball tournament will be conducted by the Physical Activities Branch Jan. 18 through 26.

The tournament will be open to active duty military only and will consist of a single-elimination tournament until the quarterfinals, which will be a single round robin.

Play will take place at Briant Wells Field House, Audie Murphy Fitness Center, Harmony Church Field House and Santiago Fitness Center on Sand Hill. Preliminaries will be conducted from noon to 1 p.m. daily, with the first eight teams to register competing in a self-officiated, single-elimination tournament. The top finisher for each day will qualify for the quarterfinals.

The teams that qualify for the quarterfinals will not be allowed to participate in any other preliminares including other facility tournaments. Those teams that did not qualify may continue to participate on the alternate preliminary dates, provided they are one of the first eight registrants at each facility.

The women's tournament will be from noon to 1:30 p.m. Jan. 26, with the semifinals at Audie Murphy Fitness Center Jan. 27.

To register and be considered for the preliminaries, an official Schick Super Hoops flyer must be completely filled out and turned into the facility where the team wishes to compete.

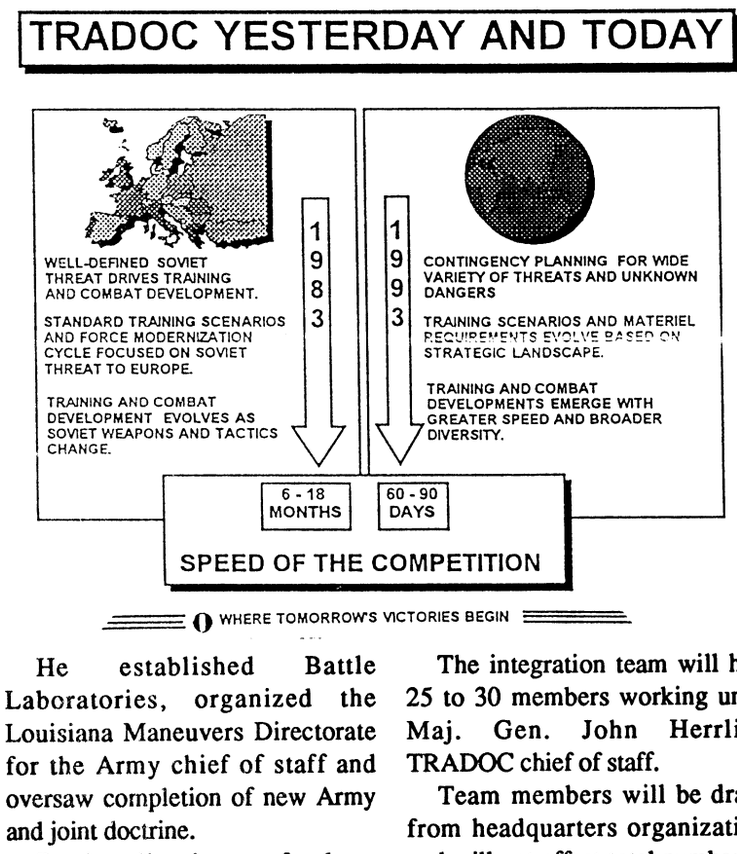
TRADOC re-engineering to make lean, competitive force

TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — A re-engineering of Training and Doctrine Command has begun that will result in "a lean, agile, flatter, more competitive, information-age organization ... not just a smaller version of what we presently have," according to Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr., TRADOC commander.



"I intend to sustain those core missions of TRADOC, the essence, but not necessarily the individual parts of the command. Sustain does not mean standing still. It means adapting methods to achieve the essence that are right to meet the Army's requirements for the changing times," he said.

Franks identified TRADOC's essence as a three-part core mission — to operate the Total Army's institution for training and leader development; be the architect for the future operational Army; and to achieve organizational excellence while accomplishing the first two.

The general said when he assumed command of TRADOC in August 1991, it was apparent to him that the command had to change to react more quickly to the Army's needs while adapting to diminishing resources.

However, the immediate task was to help the Army to adapt to a post Cold War-environment and to develop Field Manual 100-5, "Operations," and other joint doctrine and training programs.

Franks judged the command could not accomplish those tasks and re-engineer at the same time. His decision was to use "the command as if it had been changed."

He established Battle Laboratories, organized the Louisiana Maneuvers Directorate for the Army chief of staff and oversaw completion of new Army and joint doctrine.

Regionalization of base operations functions and partnerships were accomplished. "This ... delayed the resource drain from the essence, i.e., those who teach, train and educate future leaders and who produce battlefield requirements and actual capabilities," Franks said.

"It is time now to re-engineer the pieces of TRADOC while simultaneously sustaining the essence and the momentum of growth we have begun," he said.

As part of re-engineering, TRADOC headquarters will assume the integration mission across all doctrine, training, organizational design, leadership development, materiel requirements and soldier support.

The integration team will have 25 to 30 members working under Maj. Gen. John Herrling, TRADOC chief of staff.

Team members will be drawn from headquarters organizations and will not affect total numbers of personnel at the headquarters.

The integration team is expected to begin functioning this month.

Two other teams will be investigating mission support and education and training. The education and training team will begin by looking at officer training programs.

Later studies will include noncommissioned officer leader development and initial entry training.

Proposals for reorganizing TRADOC's two subordinate commands — Combined Arms Command, Fort Leavenworth, Kan., and Combined Arms Support Command, Fort Lee, Va. — have been submitted to the Department of the Army. A decision on the proposals is expected from Department of Defense in early 1994.

Until those reorganization plans are approved, TRADOC officials will not know how many civilian and military personnel will be affected.

"We're not looking at cutting people but at making the organization more effective," said Col. Jerry Sinn, chief of the Red Team which takes a different look at re-engineering initiatives. "However, re-engineering will place the command in a better position in the future to make those hard personnel decisions with a minimum of turbulence to our people."

Recently assigned to TRADOC, Sinn says this is a benefit that allows him "to take a fresh look" at ideas.

"Re-engineering means improving processes," he said. "We take a look at what we do, decide what we want as the output and then work backward to invent a process to accomplish that.

"If, in this new environment, you have a middle layer for which value is not added in a large sort of way, then it needs to go away or be applied to some other effort," Sinn said.

Sinn equates TRADOC to an industry with products like battlefield requirements, trained soldiers, officer and noncommissioned officer leaders, and published doctrine and training manuals.

The new way of looking at the organization extends to TRADOC's physical assets. The command has approximately 2 million acres of land and 190 million square feet of buildings.

Some of that can generate revenue for TRADOC, Sinn says. "We sell forestry products out of some of our timberlands, and we lease agricultural land for crops and grazing," he said.

He notes that until the current policy changes, much of the income from forestry and agriculture leases is paid to other agencies.

"The installations do all the work and receive very little of the benefits," Sinn said.

"In an era of declining resources, where we went from a $4 billion command in 1987 to $2 billion in '94, maybe we ought to get more interested in the revenue-generating functions."

That income could help offset effects of decreasing budgets and could possibly prevent future civilian personnel reductions.

"The cost of not re-engineering is that we would be forced to react to change, rather than manage change," Sinn said.

Franks said re-engineering must use the talents and vast experience of TRADOC's military and civilian personnel.

"This effort is much more than simply looking at consolidation, realignment, divestiture and reductions of missions, functions and positions.

It must be a long-term, corporate focus to evolve TRADOC into an organization continually able to meet and stay out in front of the rapidly changing requirements of a force-projection Army," Franks said.

Army curtails enlisted early separatioss

Army News Service

Some soldiers expecting an early separation may have to make other plans, since the Army has achieved most of its early-release targets for fiscal 1994.

Some of the Army's early-separation programs have been curtailed, based on the success of the program, and to keep the force from going below its congressionally mandated fiscal 1994 end-strength of 540,000.

The enlisted portion of that end strength is about 452,300, according to officials at the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel.

The following programs have been affected.

Voluntary Separation Incentive and Special Separation Benefit:

- Still open to corporals, specialists and privates in any specialty, with basic active service dates of Dec. 31, 1986, or earlier, provided they have not already passed their retention control point.
- Open to sergeants with BASD of Dec. 31, 1981, and earlier.
- Closed to promotable sergeants, including those who remove their names from the promotion list under paragraph 3-28C(3) of Army Regulation 600-8-19.

Fiscal 1995 separation dates will be granted to sergeants with BASD from Jan. 1 to Sept. 30, 1982, who were previously eligible for VSI/SSB, and who applied for the program before Dec. 10, 1993.

- Sergeants with BASD of Oct. 1, 1982, and later, who were previously eligible and who applied for VSI/SSB before Dec. 10, will be put on "reservation" status. These soldiers will be considered for approval against fiscal 1995, if the Army still offers the programs.
- Sergeants through sergeants first class, with nine or more years of service, in the following military occupational specialties are eligible for VSI/SSB — 23R, 24H, 24K, 24R, 27R, 27G, 27H, 27J, 27K and 55G.
- Soldiers qualified for retention, but denied re-enlistment under retention management provisions of AR 601-280, are eligible if they have more than six years of service upon separation date. This modifies the previous requirement of six-plus years by Dec. 5, 1991, as a result of a change in law.

Early retirement is now closed, except for two categories:

- Promotable sergeants with BASD between Oct. 1, 1978, and Dec. 31, 1979, are eligible for early retirement.
- Soldiers in the following military occupational specialties and grades, who will have at least 15 years of service at retirement, are eligible.

Chaplain assistant

MOS celebrates 84 years

By Jacqueline Feagin
USAIC Chaplains' Office

The 84th anniversary of the chaplain assistant's military occupational specialty was Dec. 28.

The specialty was established by General Orders No. 253, War Department, Dec. 28, 1909, which read: "One enlisted man will be detailed on special duty, by the com-manding officer of any organi-zation to which a chaplain is assigned for duty, for the purpose of assisting the chaplain in the performance of his official duties."

Assistants generally cared for the official property, helped with educational and religious programs and acted as clerk for the chaplain.

It wasn't until World War II that chaplain assistants were authorized by regulation and classified a clerk typists.

In 1965 Army Regulation 611-201 was revised and chaplain assistants were designated as 71M. They were given a definite job description and specific skill requirements.

The chaplains and the chaplain assistants make up the Unit Ministry Team. They are responsible for providing religious support to their units.

The chaplain assistant supervises and performs specified tasks of religious support in the field or garrison.

These include preparing the chapel for worship, preparing the bulletin, protecting the privacy of individuals, maintaining vestments for the chaplain and coordinating religious retreats. These are just some of the duties of an assistant as outlined in AR 611-201.

The chaplain assistant responds to distressed individuals and is sensitive to a soldier's need for pastoral and priestly care.

The assistant accompanies the chaplain throughout the area of operations.

The tasks of assistants may vary from one chapel to another, but together with the chaplains they fulfill the team's responsibility.

Army commissions Islamic chaplain

Army News Service

A former enlisted soldier-turned-chaplain embarked on a new mission Dec. 3 as the U.S. military's first-ever Muslim commissioned to serve as a chaplain.

Capt. Abdul-Rasheed Muhammad joined the Army Chaplain Corps with an oath of office concluding a special ceremony at the Pentagon.

Amid family, friends, dignitaries and other well-wishers, some of whom are Muslim service members, Muhammad prayed that "this day will be a symbol toward achieving peace and prosperity throughout the world among the great religions."

The occasion also reinforces the U.S. armed services' commitment to ensuring that service members "are not to be deprived of the opportunity to practice their faith," Muhammad said.

In delivering the affirmation, Chaplain (Col.) Herman Keizer Jr., executive director of the Armed Services Chaplain Board, said "This historic occasion marks the end of one era and the beginning of another."

Muhammad's new mission as "Islamic ambassador for us all" (as one celebrant put it) begins with his attendance at the Army Chaplain Officer Basic Course at Fort Monmouth, N.J.

Upon completing the course next April, he will perform chaplain duties at Fort Bragg, N.C.

The new chaplain's previous enlisted service, from 1982-1985, centered on counseling with the Army Drug and Alcohol Prevention and Control Program.

The holder of a master's degree in social work from the University of Michigan, Muhammad leaves his civilian position as chaplain for correctional facilities.

Post begins Spanish Protestant service

By Jacqueline Feagin
USAIC Chaplains' Office

There will be a Spanish Protestant service at Sightseeing Road Chapel beginning Sunday at 9 a.m.

The service, which will be entirely in Spanish, will be a general Protestant service. Chaplain (Capt.) Anibal Cruz-Baez, the School of the Americas' chaplain, will officiate at the service.

"The service is important to minister to the Fort Benning Spanish community," said Cruz-Baez.

"There are more than 100 Protestant Spanish speaking families here at Fort Benning. This service will help minister to them and students at the School of Americas," he said.

Cruz-Baez, a native of Puerto Rico, has been on active duty for six years. He served at Fort Buchanan, Puerto Rico before his assignment to Fort Benning. He also conducts a Spanish Bible study on Tuesdays at 11:45 a.m. in the conference room in Building 35.

The service and the Bible study are open to everyone. For information, call Cruz-Baez at 545-1832.

Santa Claus visits School of the Americas

By Pedro Constante
School of the Americas

The School of the Americas celebrated its first Christmas tree lighting ceremony based on the Biblical scriptures of the New Testament.

Included was a scene where a poor dysfunctional family worships Jesus when one of the boys gives a drum, his only toy, as a present.

The ceremony was hosted by the school's chaplain, Capt. Anibal Cruz-Baez. Christmas carols were sung in Spanish, and were accompanied by the music of the group Compania Tropical Latina under the direction of Carmen Flores, wife of Staff Sgt. Luis Flores, from the school. The group also played songs commonly known in Latin America.

There was also a live nativity scene in which the traditional Bible story of the birth of Jesus was presented by the Fort Benning Catholic Youth Group under the direction of Gloria Velez, director of the group.

The choir was provided by the Columbus Spanish Baptist Mission under the direction of the Rev. Jesus Martinez. Maj. Carlos and Julie Barbosa narrated in Spanish.

Col. Jose Alvarez, commandant of the school, officially began the Christmas season by lighting the Christmas tree. Immediately after, Santa Claus and the three wise men visited, giving candy to children under 12 years old.

Child-care employees earn credential

By Bettie S. Harris
Child Development Services

Seven Fort Benning child-care program assistants earned the Child Development Associate Credential by exhibiting developmentally appropriate practices in activities working with young children.

The credential was awarded by the Council for Early Childhood Professional Recognition in Washington D.C., which represents the early childhood profession.

The credential is the only major national effort to improve child care by evaluating and recognizing the skills of individuals providing child care.

Candidates must assemble a professional resource file consisting of an autobiography, statements of competence, resource collection and parent opinion questionnaires.

Each candidate is observed working with young children and is given a written test on Early Childhood Studies Review.

Each candidate is also interviewed by a CDA representative appointed by the CDA National Council.

Successful candidates demonstrate the ability to work with families to help develop children's physical and intellectual capabilities in a safe and healthy learning environment.

The seven program assistants who earned the credential are:

Janice Watkins

Watkins is the lead education technician in the pretoddler room at the Custer Terrace Child Development Center and oversees the infant room. She began working with children in 1978 after completing the Enrichment Service Center Training. Watkins' goals are to own a child-care center and become a director, she said.

Gloria McKissie

McKissie, who works at the Custer Terrace Child Development Center, received her CDA in preschool education.

Mona Thorington

Thorington is the lead education technician in the toddler room at the Custer Terrace Child Development Center. She and her husband, Carlo, have a 5-year-old daughter name Christin. Thorington has worked with young children for the past six years. Her CDA has made her very proud and more determined to continue to provide excellent child care, she said. Her goals are to increase parent involvement and return to school to earn a B.S. degree in childhood psychology.

Terri Johnson

Johnson was a family child-care provider in her home for two years before becoming a program assistant at the Custer Terrace Child Development Center. She is currently working on a psychology degree at Columbus College. She and her husband, Thomas, have two children.

Yolanda Jimenez

Jimenez was previously certified as a family care provider in both Texas and Germany. She is now a program assistant at the Custer Terrace Child Development Center, and also volunteers in some of the Youth Services sports programs. She and her husband, Juan, have two children.

Yvette Smith

Smith is employed at Main Post Child Development Center. She has many years of experience working with young children.

Cynthia Gray

Gray works at the McGraw Child Development Center. Her husband, Miles, is stationed in Germany.

Couple and their baby are 'Snowbound' on CBS

By Jay Bobbin
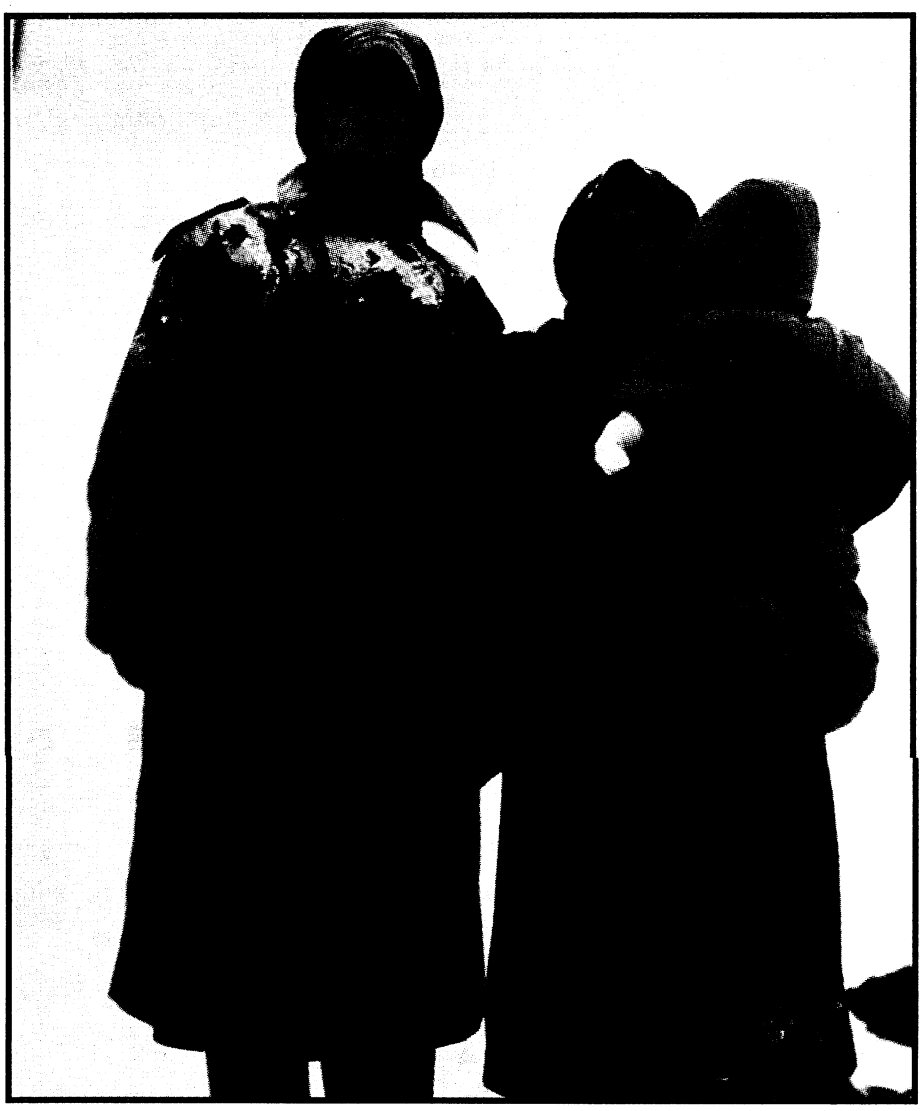
Tribune Media Services



It's one of the most celebrated true stories of survival of recent times, and it's being retold in a new TV-movie.

In December 1992, Jim and Jennifer Stolpa were driving with their infant son Clayton from California to Idaho, where they were to attend the funeral of Jim's grandmother. Trying to get around weather-hampered roads, they attempted to take a supposedly clearer route through Nevada, only to be stranded in a remote area of that state when their truck became buried in deep snow.

SPOTLIGHT

Hoping that help would arrive, they stayed in the vehicle for three days, but the exhaustion of their food supply ultimately forced them to set out on foot in a bid to save themselves. Eventually, Jennifer tended to Clayton inside a cave while Jim continued the trek alone, walking more than 70 miles before he found assistance.

Their grueling saga — much-covered by the media at the time — is recounted in Sunday's CBS drama "Snowbound: The Jim and Jennifer Stolpa Story," filmed partially in the Yukon, and casting "Doogie Howser, M.D." alumnus Neil Patrick Harris and Kelli Williams ("Lifepod") in the title roles. Directed by Christian Duguay ("Adrift"), the film also features Susan Clark ("Webster") as Jim's mother and Michael Gross ("Family Ties") as his stepfather.

The real-life Jim Stolpa still marvels at the virtual flood of offers that he and Jennifer received from movie producers wanting to tell the tale, a frenzy that began almost as soon as the couple was hospitalized after their nine-day ordeal.

What: 'Snowbound'
When: Sunday, 9 p.m. on CBS

"My stepfather works in the media, as a consultant to a syndicated radio sports-talk show," Jim explains, "so right from the start, he decided to help us by being a buffer. As all these (offers) came in for us, he would handle them. We then got an agent, and he and my stepfather went through the offers and slowly started to weed some out, picking the ones they thought were the better ones. They finally got the list down to about five, at which point they told us, 'We think any one of these (producers) would do just as good a job, so it's your decision from here.' We brought those producers into our hospital room, one at a time, and picked from among them."

According to Stolpa, that process took only "a couple of weeks" from the time he, Jennifer and Clayton were saved. "As soon as it was found that we were all fine (though the elder Stolpas both lost toes to frostbite), the movie offers just started coming in," Jim recalls. "In the first 24 hours, there were probably 70 offers to go through. We didn't understand the size of it until we were told, 'You guys really need an agent.'"

Though Howard Braunstein has executive-producer credit on the movie, he's listed as having done it in association with PMP Productions, Inc. ... which is the Stolpas' own firm, founded by them specifically to put their story on film.

Armed forces get deal at Disney World

By Rudi Williams
American Forces Information Service

Service members and their families have a vacation treat no one ever thought possible — an armed forces recreation center on the grounds of Walt Disney World in Orlando, Fla. Reservation lines opened Nov. 25 for service starting Feb. 1.

The Army, which serves as the Department of Defense executive agency for the Armed Forces Recreation Center program, garnered a 100-year lease for the Disney Inn. The hotel's new name is Shades of Green on Walt Disney World Resort. It is the first armed forces recreation center in the continental United States; others are in Germany, Korea and Hawaii.

No taxpayer dollars are involved in this project. "This is a good way to reinvest service members' money. Profits from nonappropriated fund activities — post exchanges, officers' and enlisted and NCO clubs, recreational machines and other sources — go into this," said Keith Craig, who oversees the centers.

Nightly room rates are on a sliding scale based on rank. "We're focusing on junior enlisted service members because there is a direct link between morale, welfare and recreation, and readiness," Craig said. "And they're the ones who might not be able to afford a quality vacation.

"Of course, this is a bargain for everybody," he continued. The rate for junior enlisted service members — private through sergeant — is $49 per room per night. That's for up to two adults and three children with no added cost for cots and cribs. The rate for staff sergeants and sergeants first class, lieutenants and warrant officer 1 is $73. Captains through lieutenant colonels, chief warrant officers and master sergeants and sergeants major pay $85; colonels and above, $92.

That's compared to Disney's nightly rates, which run from $140 to $195, Craig noted. "In addition, we'll be offering discounted admission tickets, which are 8 to 23 percent off the regular price," he said. "We computed the cost of a four-night stay and four days' admission to Disney World attractions, and the savings to junior enlisted people with a spouse and two children is 55 percent for the whole package."

First priority goes to active duty and retired military personnel and their immediate family members, Craig said.

Ready and Selected Reserve component personnel, their family members and those retired without pay and their family members are also eligible. DoD civilian employees can stay on a space-available basis.

The hotel's quality is at least first class or better, Craig said. The three-story hotel features 288 spacious 300- to 450-square-foot rooms with two queen beds, a convertible couch and crib.

Other features include two heated swimming pools, two lighted tennis courts, a children's pool and play area, health and fitness center, two restaurants, a snack shop and cocktail lounge. The hotel is adjacent to two golf courses.

Craig said another big money-saving plus is that the hotel is close to the Disney monorail system, shuttle buses and boat transportation. "Guests recieve free parking and never have to touch them until they're ready to leave town," Craig said.

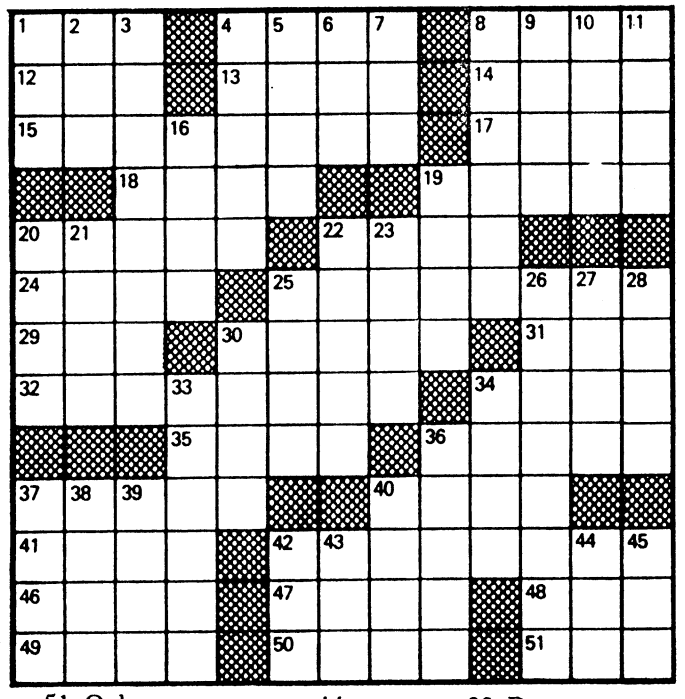
Establishing an armed forces recreation center in Florida is part of DoD's post-Cold War plan to base more service members stateside, Craig said.

Having a center at Walt Disney World is based on responses to a market survey of more than 7,000 active duty and retired military personnel.

Advertising for a hotel to lease in Orlando newspapers resulted in 40 proposals, but "we were completely surprised when Disney made an offer," Craig said.

Disney World spokeswoman Michelle Fisher said the company offered the hotel "because it gives us a chance to get into a completely different market. And we're happy to welcome members of the armed services and their families to Disney World.

This is an overall good business decision for all parties involved, and we're excited about it."



Service members can make reservations at (407) 824-3600 or fax requests to (407) 824-3665. Overseas members can write to:

HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You are ready to make your move now about an investment but in business, you meet with delays and mixed signals. Communications are not at their best.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You will be signing a contract or concluding a negotiation. You may need to rethink a travel plan.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Razor-sharp perceptions aid you on the job this week. You may invite others over on the spur of the moment.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Hobbies that engage you mentally appeal now. You may not get around to completing an unfinished task.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) A business appointment may be changed or canceled this week. You will be putting your best foot forward now. Domestic takes precedence over socializing now.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) Your mind works with lightning speed this week and judgment is sharp. Avoid being too critical. Romance comes unexpectedly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) It may be difficult to finalize plans about travel now but in money matters you are astute. A household task may be put off.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have keen perceptions this week but you must be careful not to antagonize others by being overly frank. Toward the end of the week, financial developments are positive.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) It's the perfect week for research projects. Important insights come now. Keep the lines of communication open between you and a close tie.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) Group interests are favored. A lecture stimulates you mentally. The pace is slow on the job and you may not accomplish as much as you would like.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) You will act on your ideas this week. New starts are favored in business and social interests may have to take a back seat for now.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20) People dropping by, errands and distractions may leave you with little time for family and domestic interests. Meetings with advisers are favored now. Property and financial interests are favored. You will attract romance this week.

PUZZLE ANSWERS

PET OF THE WEEK

This mixed-breed puppy is just one of many cats and dogs available for adoption on post. She is approximately 4-months old.

For more information, contact the Veterinary Services Office in Building 265 at 545-1127. Hours of operation are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:30 am. and 12:45 to 3 p.m. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

If you have lost a pet, check the stray impoundment facility in Building 283. Stray pets are given three working days to be claimed from the time they are picked up by animal control personnel. If the pets are not claimed, they become government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Veterinary Services urges personnel going on leave to place their pets in a boarding clinic rather than entrusting them to a neighbor. A pet's safety and proper care is ensured at a boarding clinic, said Sgt. James Cyree, veterinary technician.

SOAP UPDATE

ALL MY CHILDREN: Erica was stunned when Jackson told her Kendall's admission of deceit wouldn't exonerate her. Erica went to Dimitri's hospital room and begged him to believe she stabbed him believing he was Richard Fields. Dimitri dismissed her plea, calling it part of Jack's plan to dissuade him from testifying against her. Dixie was pleased when Maria asked her to be a bridesmaid at her wedding to Edmund. Tad was stunned when Brooke said she would leave Pine Valley with Jamie rather than share custody with him. Wait to see: Kendall has another surprise for Erica.

ANOTHER WORLD: When Rachel tried to end their budding relationship, Carl stunned her by admitting he was falling in love with her. Josie was upset to learn John had remarried. Jake told Paulina the tape of the New Year's Eve party had been erased. Kyle made a slip causing Morgan to believe his friend had lied to him. Later, Kyle threatened to sue if Lorna and Felicia aired a tape about the rape. Victor told Felicia he was sure Lorna still had her gun. Kyle called in to the show and told Lorna she got what she deserved. Wait to see: John wonders where he's seen Kate before.

AS THE WORLD TURNS: Margo arrested Connor for Linc's murder. Damian heard Lily call out Holden's name in her sleep. John realized Lucinda had overheard him talking about his cancer with Bob. Kirk and Cal agreed to work together to help clear Connor. Janice told her New York caller she intended to use the vial she got while she was there. Damian called Eduardo to tell him about Lily. Wait to see: It suddenly looks very bad for Connor.

BOLD AND THE BEAUTIFUL: Thorne told Macy he wanted a separation. Brooke accused Karen of betraying their professional and personal relationship by crashing the fashion show. When Karen said it was Sally's idea, Brooke ignored her and ordered Connor to make her leave his home. Instead, Connor shocked Brooke by saying he had chosen her as the woman in his life. At Bridget's birthday party, Ridge vowed to spend more time with his daughter. Taylor told James his mother died the day he was born. The "mother" he created was to protect him from his hate-filled father. Wait to see: James may not easily forget the kiss he shared with Taylor.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES: At the New Year's party, Laura fantasized about strangling Kate. An alarmed Vivian managed to get her to take her medication before disaster could strike. Vivian realized she had lost part of the beard she wore as a disguise to slip out of Pine Haven and into the party. Looking at a photo of the party, Kate wondered who the bearded man was. Tony was stunned when John admitted he's in love with Kristen. While listening to a piece of classical music, John flashed back to a sketch of a woman that had sent him into a trance in Stefano's room a few weeks earlier. After seeing the sketch again, he blurted out "the captured queen." Wait to see: Billie has another setback.

GENERAL HOSPITAL: Ryan tried to intercede between Mac and Felicia by goading Kevin into taking action. Ned feared his cover would be blown when Lois unexpectedly declared she would like to go on the road with him. Laura had her own plans to confront Frank Smith by making it very clear to him how he was affecting her family. Sean was determined to learn the truth about Ivan's murder on the docks. Wait to see: Sean discovers the truth can be painful.

GUIDING LIGHT: Nick saw Billy taking a drink. Ed ignored Holly's pleas not to report Roger to the police. He was livid at her for blaming Eve for incidents caused by Roger. At the firehouse, Roger frightened Jenna with his demands. Roger was stunned to overhear Billy confide in Nick that Peter is his grandson. Billy also told Nick he would take care of Peter and no one could stop him. Tangie tried to escape from Ray. Later, she found Bill tied and gagged at the Lighthouse. As the two negotiated with Ray, he double-crossed them and trapped them in the burning building. Wait to see: Vanessa and Alexandra each have reason to fear Roger's reactions.

LOVING: Ally shopped for her wedding gown but fantasized about marrying Casey, not Cooper. Meanwhile, Casey's memories of Ally kept him from making love to Steffi. At Ally's engagement party, Steffi saw her in an embrace with Casey and ran off. Casey went after her, and when Ally saw them embracing, she returned to the party and announced her engagement to Cooper. Later she told a priest that although she loves Casey, she will make a commitment to Cooper. Buck rejected Curtis' loan in exchange for getting Trucker out of town. Wait to see: Steffi makes a potentially dangerous decision.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE: Nora's eyesight was restored after surgery. Jason brought Beth to meet Andrew, who realized she's the mother of the baby Cassie found. Rebecca hid a sick Todd at the Tabernacle but suggested he turn himself in. Alex bet Asa he would propose to her by March 1. Dorian vowed to help Cassie adopt Beth's baby. Suede told Marty he's moving to New York to compose songs. Wait to see: Marty faces a vengeful Todd.

THE YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS: Victoria and Cole left for Las Vegas where Victoria called Nikki to say she was getting married. Nikki was hurt when she learned her daughter was marrying Cole, not Ryan as she expected. Meanwhile, Victor told Hope of his affair with Eve and how he regretted not acknowledging Cole as his son, but he would make up for that as soon as he could. Wait to see: Victor gets shocking news.

DPW remodels maintenance

By Karen S. Morarle
Bayonet staff writer

The Directorate of Public Works has changed the way it performs maintenance in family housing to improve service and reduce the time quarters remain empty between occupants.

According to Bill Scott, chief of Family Housing, the goal of the program is to provide the best possible customer service while reducing the cost to the Army.

"We've been through budget cuts and reductions in personnel just like everyone else has," Scott said. "The new program was developed to make the most of the workers and resources we have. Our goal is to reduce downtime so that we have as many sets of quarters occupied as possible and minimize the time they remain vacant for maintenance."

He said Family Housing would like to reduce vacancy time to between three and five working days.

"That may not be realistic for quarters that we need to paint, but for others there's no reason we shouldn't be able to do it," Scott said.

Scott said the reorganization won't affect maintenance procedures in Davis Hill or Bouton Heights, which are maintained by a civilian contractor. The work order number in those areas is 596-8313.

A key part of the plan, he said, is the U-Do-It/Self-Help program.

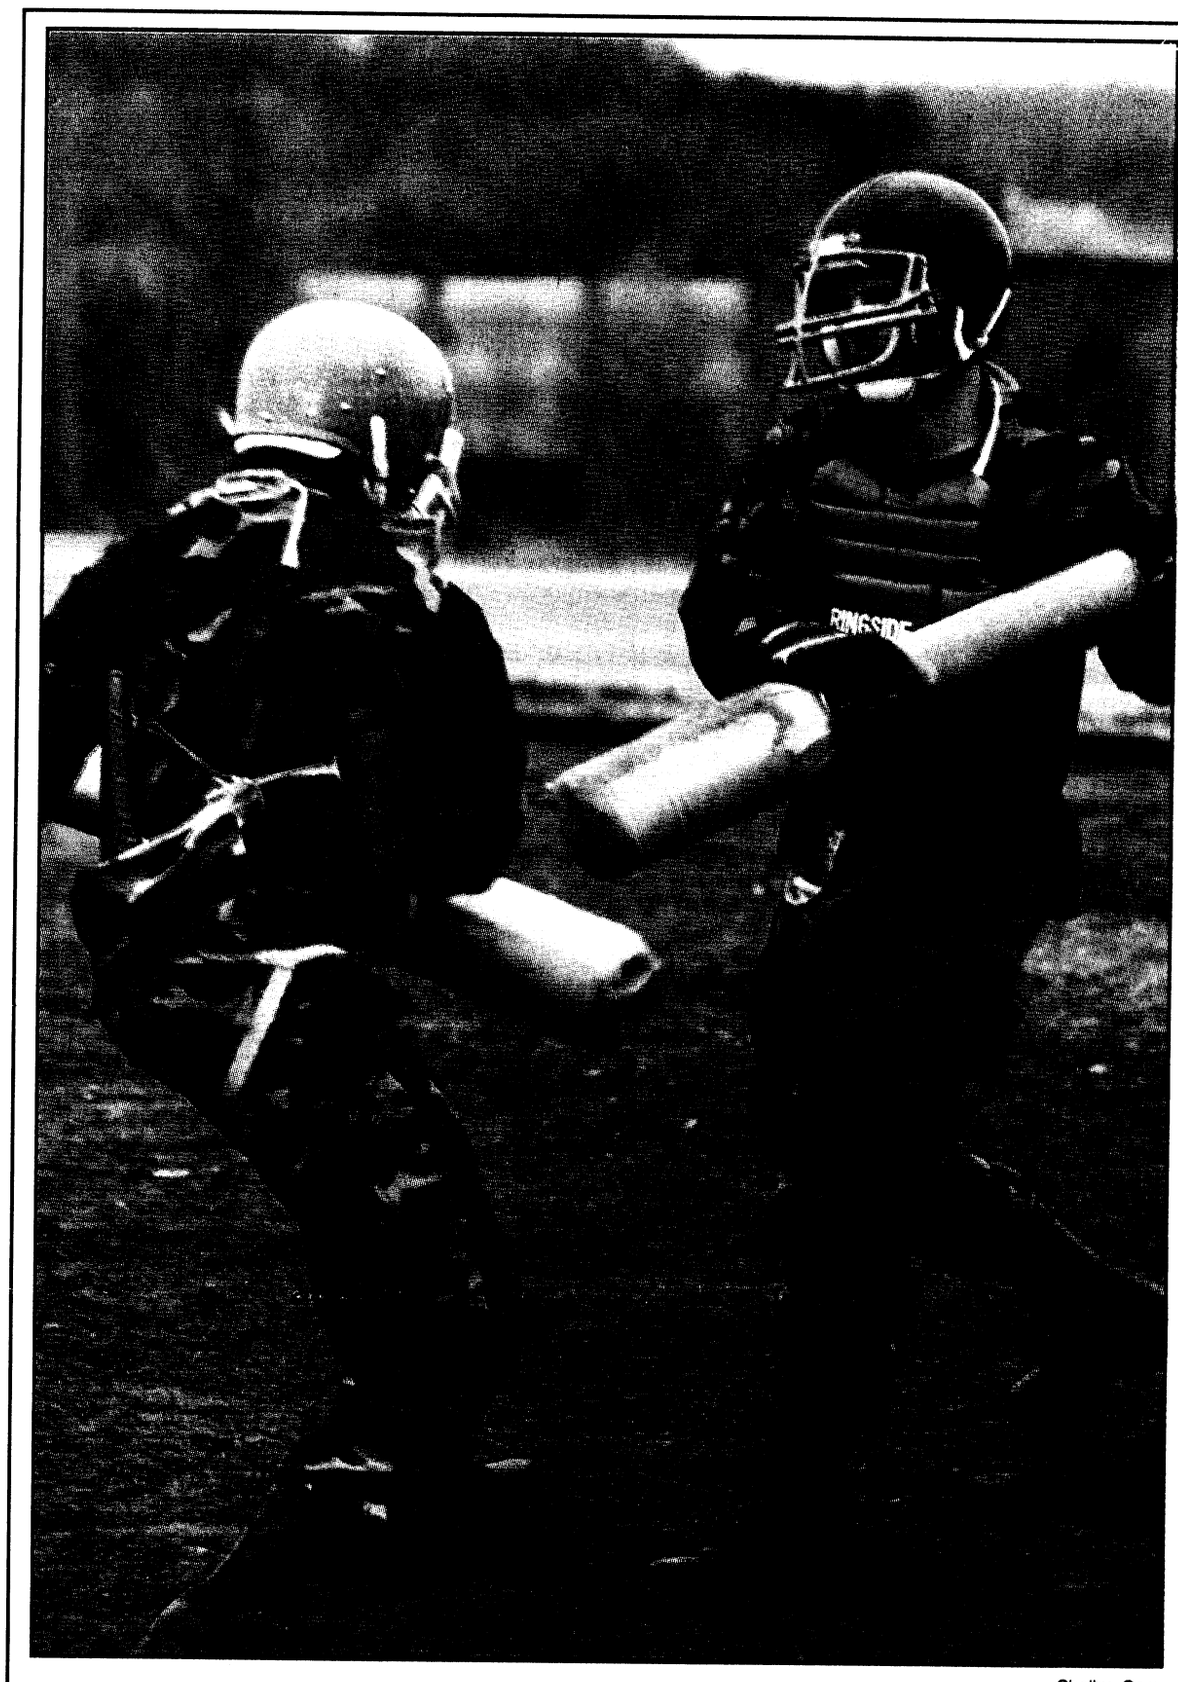
"The Army has provided free materials and equipment for housing occupants to maintain their own quarters," Scott said. "They can get tools for yard work, supplies and parts for minor repairs — almost everything they need, although they have to buy their own light bulbs. Mandatory classes are given to all family housing residents to explain the system to them."

Some things residents are responsible for, Scott said, are thorough cleaning, making sure all screens and light fixtures are in place, replacing furnace filters and patching nail holes in walls.

"The people at Self-Help can tell housing residents exactly what they're responsible for," Scott said. "It's very important that they keep up with those items during the time they're in housing, because if they wait until they're about to clear and try to fix everything then, or get maintenance to fix it, they could end up being delayed in their clearing or being billed for some repairs."

Scott said residents will be billed for repairs that are a result of negligence.

"Normal wear and tear is expected," he said, "but it's up to them to call in work orders before a small problem becomes a big, expensive problem."



Craig Taylor, chief of Buildings and Structures Branch, said the new system makes Preventive Maintenance the clearinghouse for all repairs in post quarters.

"Now, most family housing work orders called in to the regular number at 545-2135 will be routed to a single shop that includes plumbers, electricians, carpenters and multiskilled maintenance workers who can handle the vast majority of repairs needed," Taylor said.

This reorganization, Taylor said, has enabled DPW to decrease the work order backlog for family housing by more than 50 percent in less than three months.

"Our maintenance workers can handle pretty much anything that comes up," Taylor said, "except for kitchen appliances and heating and air conditioning. With those repairs, they'll call in the appropriate person to fix the problem."

Ceremony honoring MLK today

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

There will be a commemorative ceremony honoring Martin Luther King Jr. at 11:30 a.m. today in Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall, Building 4.

The legal holiday honoring King's birthday will be observed Monday, and many post units and activities will host events honoring King both the week before and the week following his birthday.

King, born in Atlanta, Jan. 15, 1929, was a Baptist minister, scholar, author, Nobel Peace Prize recipient, founder of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, and leader of the Civil Rights Movement in the United States.

He believed strongly in universal peace and wanted all Americans to work together to create a more peaceful world.

He promoted human rights, fundamental freedoms and the elimination of all racial and religious discrimination.

Maj. Gen. Wallace C. Arnold, assistant deputy chief of staff for personnel, Department of the Army, will be the guest speaker at this year's commemoration ceremony.

Arnold was born in Washington, D.C., July 27, 1938, and spent the early years of his life in Virginia.

He earned his commission through the Reserve Officers' Training Corps and was awarded a bachelor of science degree in industrial education from Hampton Institute in Virginia.

He holds a master of arts degree in personnel management and administration from George Washington University in Washington, D.C., and has attended the U.S. Army Command and General Staff College and the Naval War College.

BOSS has new focus after conference

By Barbara J. Ray
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Fort Benning Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers program has a new focus in 1994 as a result of ideas brought back by attendees of the 1993 BOSS training Conference in Colorado Springs, Colo.

Fort Benning was represented by BOSS Council President Spc. James Shoemaker and Sgt. Maj. Allen D. Thrower, Directorate of Community Activities sergeant major.

"The focus of BOSS will include working to save our environment and being involved with the community," Shoemaker said. "We started a BOSS aluminum can recycling program Jan. 5. Currently there are more than 100 recycling containers in place throughout post," he said. "The BOSS Council plans to place up to 400 recycling containers throughout single soldiers' living quarters."

A single soldier will be designated to monitor each location and arrange pick up of full containers, according to Shoemaker. The containers will be emptied, cleaned, worn labels replaced and returned. A BOSS representative will deliver recycling containers to any office or organization that requests them, he said.

"BOSS will earn 20 cents per pound and the money will be used initially to purchase T-shirts, sweatshirts and key chains," he said. "The key chains will be given to single soldiers when they inprocess and the T-shirts and sweatshirts will be used to recognize single soldiers for their contributions to the program. Some of the items will be given to unit BOSS representatives and major subordinate command sergeants major for them to award to single soldiers. In the future, the funds from recycling can be use to subsidize events for single soldiers."

Single soldiers are also being encouraged to get involved with Habitat for Humanity, a nonprofit organization that builds homes for the needy. The soldiers would not only be helping in the community but they would also learn skills needed to construct a house, said Shoemaker.

These additional changes to the BOSS program have already taken effect:

- All representatives will wear civilian clothes to the post-level BOSS meetings.
- The BOSS president position is now a full-time job; the BOSS president will attend major subordinate command BOSS meetings
- Shoemaker was re-elected president and there are now two vice presidents: Spc. Kenneth Howard, Military Police Activity and Spc. Dennis Pascual, Medical Department Activity.
- The BOSS office is set up in Room 108, Miller Hall, Building 241.
- A new hot line set up at 545-7204; the BOSS PROFS identification is BOSS

According to Shoemaker, the best part of the conference was the interaction with the people and the exchange of ideas. He said they also had training sessions on how to set up and conduct meetings, how to get people to work with you and how to market programs.

For this year's BOSS training, BOSS plans to send four representatives, said Shoemaker. "The soldiers will be selected by members of the BOSS Council based on their involvement with the program."

Both Shoemaker and Thrower stressed Fort Benning has a good BOSS program and that it's getting better everyday. "We need everyone involved and committed to the program from the top to the bottom to continue improving" said Thrower. "The council president is here to help commanders, sergeants major and first sergeants."

Anyone interested in a BOSS recycling container or more information on BOSS can contact the BOSS office at 545-7204, or their unit representative.

Trash pick up — right or privilege?

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

commentary

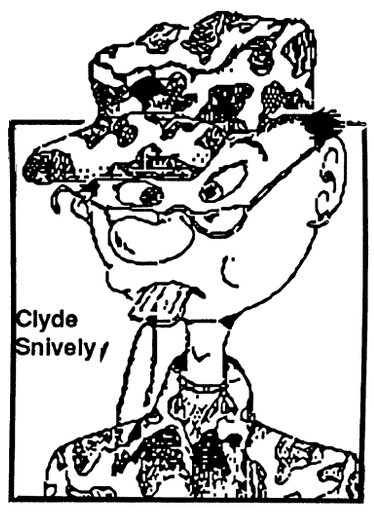
Soldiers who think curbside pickup of their trash is a right and not a privilege may soon have another think coming.

Post officials are discouraged about the lack of participation in the recycle program and are considering ways to encourage participation.

Since the carrot approach — the appeal to our nobler senses of wanting to do what's right — extend the life of landfills and provide money to Fort Benning coffers isn't working, the stick approach may be implemented.

This means that if housing dwellers don't use the recycle bins for household plastic, cans, paper etc., they could find their unemptied trash cans still sitting on the curb at the end of trash pickup day.

That could mean a traffic jam of vehicles heading out to the post landfill as right now only about 20 percent of the post housing residents are recycling.



Sure, there's one housing area where there's 80 percent participation, but most of the housing areas hover around the 10 to 20 percent range.

This is pretty pitiful.

So what's the reason people are avoiding doing what's right? I asked Spc. Joe Cretin, a denizen of one of the nonplaying housing areas what his reason was.

"Well, Clyde, you see it's this way. None of my neighbors are doing it, see, so if I did it, I'd be looked at as a do-gooder, an environment freak, or something and me and the wife, see, we wouldn't be invited over to our neighbors for beer drinking and football games anymore. It's a status thing, don't cha know."

"OK, so that's your excuse, but why do you think there's such apathy in the entire housing area. Someone's got to care."

"Oh you know. That means one more trip to the curb, it means finding a place to put your container in the house or out in the carport.

"And of course it means a few extra steps to toss your bottles and cans and stuff. Much easier to just put it all in one container that you keep under the kitchen sink.

"Besides, they made the containers too good. Some wives think they're ideal for handling laundry. Others seem to think they're perfect for storing children's toys."

With such solid reasoning on Cretin's part, I knew it wouldn't do any good to talk about the amount of money Fort Benning would get to help pay for various projects, the amount of money that would go into the Morale, Welfare and Recreation fund.

So I thanked him for his insight and made a mental note to come back should the post begin to play hardball and refuse to pick up trash cans unless the recycle containers were also present — and being used for what they were designed for.

Then we'd see how energetic people got about taking a couple of extra steps to use the recycle containers.

School superintendent responds to letter

In response to Francine Houchess' letter to the editor regarding crossing guards, the Fort Benning Schools wish to state that safety of youngsters is a paramount concern in all aspects of the school program.

Throughout the day, school personnel are vigilant to see that students exist in a safe and secure environment.

As part of this concern for safety, the Fort Benning Schools have maintained a consistent and positive dialogue with the Military Police Activity regarding crossing guard activity. At no time has the school system been "embroiled" with any agency on post and certainly not with the Military Police Activity.

The Fort Benning Schools work each day to maintain strong communication with parents. We regret that Houchens did not speak with a school administartor or her child's teacher regarding her concerns.

We also regret that she misinterpreted the accurate communication she had with secretaries in the Dexter School office and the administration office — namely that issues related to safety of children should be reported to proper authorities and that school officials would be following up with a referral and a closer look at the situation as well.

It is only through direct communication between school and home that concerns relating to students can be addressed. Working together, parents and school staffs are a powerful team for creating a nurturing, supportive atmosphere for youngsters.

Aide at Dexter says school got bad rap

I am writing this letter in response to the (letter that appeared recently in The Bayonet) about the crossing guard situation.

I am an aide at Dexter School and would like to say that we at Dexter do care about the children's safety. I have personally stood in for the crossing guard who was supposed to be at the intersection of Ingersoll and Yeager on several occasions.

Even though I am not paid to be a crossing guard, I helped children across (the street) on my own time since I get off at 2:30 p.m. I have also come to work at 7:30 a.m. and have seen that the crossing guard (who was supposed to be) at the intersection of South Lumpkin and Yeager was not there and reported it to the Military Police as soon as I got to work.

I am concerned that one of our parents feels that her child is not safe at Dexter, but I also feel Dexter is getting a bad rap.

Reader believes volunteering can help

This is in reference to (the letter to the editor in) last week's Bayonet pertaining to the crossing guard situation.

It's wonderful that there are so many people on this post who are ready to point out the problems. It is also wonderful that they can come up with solutions without knowing all the facts.

Just as in all of the other functions on this installation, the teachers' aide staff has been reduced. Their hours have been cut and their responsibilities have been multiplied. It is very easy for someone on the outside to think of ways to create more work for an already overtaxed work force.

It seems to me from the explanation of how diligently you investigated the problem of missing crossing guards, you must have a lot of free time.

Maybe with enough free time available to you, (you can) demonstrate your great concern for the children of our community with some volunteer crossing guard time.

We are all asked to tighten our belts in these times of cutbacks. Maybe volunteers extracted from all the concerned parents out there, like you, could save some money and put it back into the classrooms to enhance the education of our children.

Let's stop being so free with our ideas on how to make more problems with our poorly investigated solutions and get down to business and pitch in with actual support to meet our community's needs.

Name withheld

Board president praises post teachers

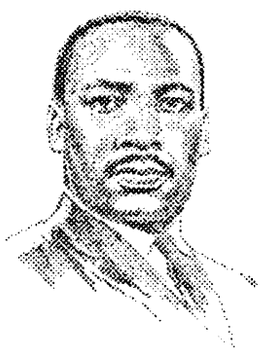
I would like to comment on a letter in last week's Bayonet by a concerned parent that the school crossing guard was absent when her child was returning from school.

Col. James Crockert, the provost marshal who is responsible for crossing guards, responded to her concern and is continuing to work that issue diligently.



As the Fort Benning School Board president, I'd like to address her comment, "I (the taxpayers) am paying them (the school administrators and teachers) to teach my children and keep them safe..."

From visiting every classroom and every teacher in Dexter School, I can assure her that our school administrators and teachers truly care for our children's education, safety and well-being.

If we taxpayers got as much value for our tax dollar in every area as we do in what we pay our teachers at Fort Benning, our biggest problem would be how to distribute the national surplus, not deficit, every year.

CG: King holiday time for rededication

Fort Benning will celebrate the anniversary of the birthday of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. today.

This day is set aside to commemorate not only the memory of a great American, but also to remind us of the lasting influence that King has had on American society.

It is a time to reflect on the past and to rededicate ourselves to the future, to the principles for which King lived and died — a dream of dignity for all.

In recognition of King's many lasting contributions to our great country, a commemorative service will be today in Marshall Auditorium at 11:30 a.m.

All members of the Fort Benning community and the surrounding area are encouraged to participate in this service.

The holiday, which will be observed Monday, provides the first long weekend for 1994.

With the chance of bad weather at this time of year and increased traffic associated with any long weekend, the potential for traffic accidents is great.

To compensate for this risk, I ask everyone to:

- Drive under the speed limit. Reduce speed during limited visibility or other adverse road conditions.
- Stay alert and sober. Take a rest break at least every two hours on long trips.
- Fasten your seat belt every time you get into a vehicle. Even the best driver cannot avoid an accident when another driver runs into him or her.
- Ensure a window is slightly open to combat fatigue and carbon monoxide poisoning. Carbon monoxide is odorless, colorless and deadly.

I encourage all soldiers and civilian employees to enjoy a safe holiday weekend.

DPW: Maintenance changes

Taylor said emergency calls receive priority. An emergency situation is defined as one that may threaten the safety, health, welfare and security of the occupants.

"Minor repairs are best saved for cyclic maintenance, which we try to perform twice a year," he said. "In cyclic maintenance, a worker will schedule individual appointments for each house in an entire housing section, so we keep the maintenance level in all units as equal as possible."

Danny Donahue, supervisor of Family Housing Maintenance, said customers may have a short wait when they call in work orders; but, if they remain on the line, their calls will be handled in the order in which they came in.

"In cases where there is a single parent in the home, or both adults work, we'll work with people to schedule a time that is convenient for them," Donahue said. "We can narrow it down to a particular morning or afternoon, whichever they need, as long as they let us know when they call the order in."

Taylor said residents close to clearing would be well-advised to make an appointment for prefinal inspection 30 to 45 days before they expect to clear.

"That gives Maintenance a chance to make whatever repairs are necessary, and it allows enough time for the residents to take care of what they need to do," Taylor said. "If they call us two or three weeks early, they can get out smoothly and on time; but, if they wait until a day or two before they're supposed to clear, we won't be able to schedule anyone."

Scott said that while the system may require a little extra effort from soldiers and their families, they're also the ones who will benefit.

"We want to make sure as many people as possible are in housing, and that they move into clean, well-maintained quarters," Scott said. "We're dedicated to doing the best job we can in providing maintenance and keeping our occupancy rate at the maximum."

Taylor agreed. "We want to help the soldiers, improve their quality of life and provide the best possible customer service," he said.

Recycle

Brown bins for glass, paper, plastic, metal

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Post housing residents may place recyclable materials in brown plastic bins for weekly curbside pickup.

Here is a list of the items that can and cannot be placed in the bin for recycling.

• Glass: Clear green or brown bottles and jars including soda, beer or liquor containers may be placed in the bin. All caps must be removed before placing the bottles in the bin. Glass items such as light bulbs, window or automobile glass, mirrors and drinking glasses cannot be placed in the bin.

• Metal: All metal cans (the labels do not have to be removed) can be placed in the bin after rinsing them. Metal foils, such as aluminum foil, cannot be placed in the bin.

• Plastic: Soda bottles, milk containers and water jugs can be recycled but the caps must be removed and the bottles crushed by stepping on them before placing them in the bin. Styrofoam, plastic bags and caps from recyclable bottles and containers cannot be placed in the bin.

• Paper: Newspaper can be placed in the bin if it is bundled or placed in a brown paper bag and placed to the side of the bin at the curb on collection day. All glossy paper, such as that used in catalogs, brochures and advertisements, cannot be recycled.

CID seeks information

Criminal Investigation Division

The Fort Benning Criminal Investigation Command is offering a $1,000 reward for information leading to the identification of the individual responsible for a crime connected with a burning vehicle.

A 1984 white Toyota pickup with a white camper shell with the license number QS-2699 (Georgia) was found burning along 3rd Infantry Division Road adjacent to Old Cusseta Road on Fort Benning between 9 and 10 p.m. Tuesday.

A body was found in the bed of the truck. No identification has been made, and forensic experts are conducting an investigation of the incident. An autopsy was scheduled for Thursday. However, officials said they are not sure when the results will be available.

If you have information, contact the Fort Benning Military Police at 545-5222 or 545-5223 or CID at 545-8912.

Resolutions: now is the time to tackle those personal problems

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

January is almost over, but it is not too late to make or renew your new year's resolution.

In fact, said Yvonne Wilbanks, civilian program coordinator for Civilian Counseling Services, the beginning of a new year is a perfect time for making a commitment to solving personal problems.

"With the new year, many people desire to make a fresh start and to live their lives differently," she said.

"Thoughts of new beginnings, whether they involve quitting smoking, losing weight, abstinence from alcohol and drugs or restoring damaged relationships seem possible in the new year," she added.

Wilbanks said serious problems, such as those involving drugs and alcohol, usually need more than just a personal commitment in order to be solved successfully.

"Once bad habits develop they are not easy to break, so will power is not always enough to overcome them," she said. "Sometimes the individual will also need professional counseling and a comprehensive, long-range plan in order to follow through with the good intentions of a new year's promise," said Wilbanks.

A sign that you may need professional help to overcome a personal problem is whether you have tried to overcome the problem before but failed.

"If you have tried repeatedly to quit smoking or drinking or to resolve any other problem but have continuously failed, then it is a sign that you need to seek professional help," she said.

Wilbanks said seeking outside help is not anything to be ashamed of.

"Many people are very independent-minded and feel they can solve anything themselves. Some personal problems, however, are just too serious and cannot be solved by the individual without outside help," Wilbanks said.

Where can you go if you need help?

Department of Defense and non-appropriated fund employees can find assistance right here on post.

"Civilian Counseling Services is an available resource for these employees to discuss plans to change their lives for the better regardless of the problem," Wilbanks said. "Confidential evaluations and a referral service are available at no cost to these employees and their families."

To make an appointment with Civilian Counseling Services, call 545-2475 or 545-2742.

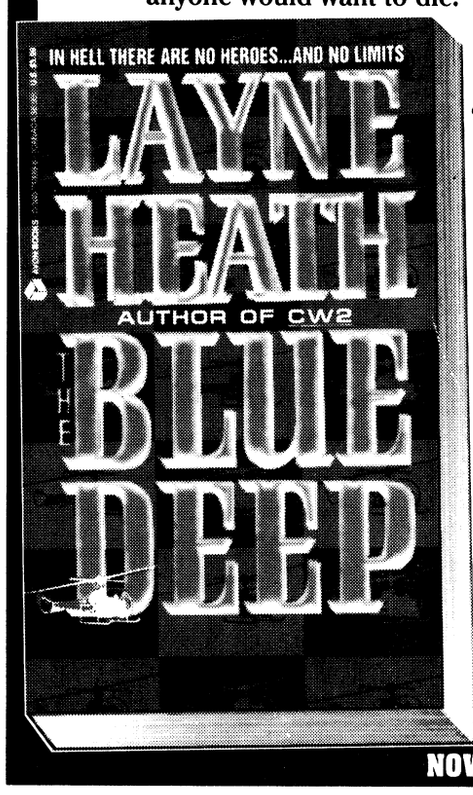
Here are some other useful phone numbers for help with various problems.

• Alcoholics Anonymous: (800) 344-2666.

• Alcohol and Drug Hot Line: (800) ALCOHOL.

• Drug Hot Line: (800) HELP.

• Cocaine Hot Line: (800) COCAINE.



• Local Veterans' Assistance Office: 649-7879.

• Alcohol Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Program: 545-4821.

"Remember," Wilbanks said, "a new year can be the start of developing a healthy lifestyle of daily exercise, plenty of fruits and vegetables and a positive attitude."

All military and civilians are invited to bid.

For information, call 545-1205.

Controlled burning set to continue until Jan. 23

Controlled burning of woodland and range areas will take place Monday through Jan. 23.

If weather permits, the following compartments may be affected: D-14, D-17, E-2, E-4, G-2, G-5, G-7, H-2, I-1, I-5, J-3, J-6, K-8, K-11, K-16, K-20, L-2, L-3, M-2, O-3, O-6, O-10, O-15, P-1, P-3, S-1, T-2, T-4, U-4, V-1, W-2, X-5, Y-1, Z-2, U-3, BB-1 and CC-2.

Burning will occur in pine stands within these compartments to enhance endangered species habitat and training areas.

People using these areas for recreation must vacate before 9:30 a.m. daily.

Training units using compartments adjacent to these areas may experience drift smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while traveling in these areas because of the potential for reduced visibility.

Self-Help Store to close for holiday

The Self-Help Store, Loan Equipment Section and Venetian Blind and Shade Shop will be closed Saturday and will reopen for business Tuesday at 8:30 a.m.

Retirement policies change

By Friede McDonald
Retirement Services Office

Several policy changes affecting voluntary retirement are in effect.

The Adjutant General is the approval authority for all voluntary nonwaiver officer, command sergeants major and sergeants major retirement requests.

Changes are:

Officers will submit their requests for retirement using memorandum sample of Army Regulation 635-100, Figure 4-1. A copy of the current service microfiche is also required to verify computation of service and speed up receipt of orders.

Retirement requests submitted within 120 days of requested retirement date will be processed as waiver requests and forwarded to the U.S. Total Army Personnel Command.

Retirement submission time requirements for sergeants major have been aligned with those of command sergeants major. This means that voluntary, nonwaiver retirement applications for sergeants major must be submitted nine months prior to requested retirement date.

Retirement requests of sergeants major selectees, submitted within 30 days of selection, will be processed as voluntary, nonwaiver requests and will be approved at Fort Benning.

Retirement requests submitted later than 30 days after selection will be processed as waiver requests and forwarded to the U.S. Total Army Personnel Command for approval.

For more information, call Patricia Harris or Martha Holloway at the Retirement Services Office at 545-3019 or 545-2541.

"Our innovative programs and hard-working personnel are what made us best in the Training and Doctrine Command," said Sam Harris, chief of the Engineering Division of the of the Directorate of Public Works. "We are all very proud of our accomplishments."

Harris said when the Army-level Communities of Excellence team visits next month, its members will encounter the same commitment to quality and improvement that made Fort Benning's engineering services and facilities the best in TRADOC for 1993 in the extra large category.

Among the innovative programs that have made DPW's engineering services the best are:

• A unique real property master plan that ensures the proper placement, expansion or reduction of the post's training zones by monitoring their impact on the surrounding communities and the on-post population.

• A space management program that has consolidated activities, reduced urban sprawl, removed facilities that require too much energy and maintenance, identified good facilities for upgrade and provided better working environment for post personnel.

• A World War II demolition program that has made Fort Benning the leader in TRADOC in the demolition of World War II buildings with 325 buildings destroyed since fiscal 1988. The demolition program removes old buildings that are too costly to maintain, improves the environment and returns grounds back to nature.

• An outstanding Self-Help/U-Do-It program that has helped numerous post organizations to complete needed projects at reduced cost. The U-Do-It Center has special engineer tools and tool kits for loan to units and directorates, as well as a large equipment inventory to loan to family housing occupants, including leaf blowers and small garden tillers.

• An aggressive energy management program that includes a computer-based energy management and control system. Because of its energy program, Fort Benning has met TRADOC's energy goals for seven consecutive years.

• A state-of-the-art pest control program that provides treatment within two days of a customer's call and meets the latest environmental regulatory requirements.

• Construction of a Material Recovery Facility for the recycling of cardboard, newspaper, glass, plastics and metal cans. A one-day-per-week curbside pickup of recyclables in family housing areas has also been implemented.

"We are also proud of our automated self-help network," Harris said. "We are able to track by computer all of the work materials issued to each family housing unit. For example, if a soldier comes in and needs an air conditioner filter but doesn't know what size he wants, we can look it up on the computer and see what size his or her unit takes."

Harris added that the personnel of DPW's engineering services strive to make Fort Benning a community of excellence everyday. "Striving to be the best is always a guiding philosophy for us," he said.

acap calendar

Army Career and Alumni Program

The following is the Army Career and Alumni Program Job Assistance Center calendar of events:

Tuesdays: noon to 1 p.m., Focus Hour, Interview Techniques and Dress for Success.

Wednesdays: 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Job Assistance Workshop; 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Education Opportunity Center.

Thursdays: 1 to 3 p.m., Mock Interview Practice Session

Fridays: Employers Day

Job assistance workshop

Time: Wednesdays, 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Location: Infantry Hall, Building 4

The workshop is conducted every Wednesday at Infantry Hall. Topics discussed include objective setting, resume preparation, expanding opportunities, networking, interviewing, salary negotiating, stress management and financial planning.

The workshop is for anyone in federal service (both military and Department of the Army civilians) and their family members, whether leaving voluntarily, involuntarily or retiring.

Education Opportunity Center

Time: Wednesdays, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

Participants will receive information from all over the country about college and university admissions requirements and proficiency exams. Education counselors can also discuss student loans and grants.

Mock Interview Practice

Time: Thursdays, 1 to 3 p.m.

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

Participants will learn how to interview effectively by rehearsing and practicing interview techniques with an experienced JAC counselor.

The mock interview will be videotaped to provide the client with a visual learning tool.

Employers' Day

Time: Varies

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

Employers' Day is scheduled each Friday at the Job Assistance Center. The program is designed to allow employers to recruit qualified candidates for their companies.

Employers normally will give presentations on their organizations and set up interviews with qualified candidates.

A variety of manufacturing and service companies take advantage of this opportunity. Public sector organizations are also represented.

Focus Hour

Time: Tuesdays, noon to 1 p.m.

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

This weekly video program provides additional information on the key areas in the job search process — networking, dressing for success, interview process and negotiating techniques. Counselors will assist with any additional questions.

Small Business Development

Time: Feb. 17, 2 to 4:30 p.m.

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

A short, free seminar is offered by the Small Business Development Center of the University of Georgia once a month. It is designed to provide assistance and training in starting a new business.

The seminar serves as a focal point for linking together resources of the federal, state, and local governments and the private sector.

For additional information and registration, call Army Career and Alumni Program Job Assistance Center, located in Building 2634, at 545-2308 or 545-2309 .

Soldiers, families leaving Army have help

Army Career and Alumni Program

All family members of personnel leaving the service — military or civilian (including retirees) — are eligible for more than $1,000 of free counseling and training to improve their personal image and job search skills.

The Army Career and Alumni Program is a program to help make the transition from the daily military lifestyle to the civilian alumni life.

Military spouses need to be within six months of leaving to begin that new career or, maybe just to relax for some time. If your spouse has already transitioned, ACAP still offers the service 60 days after separation.

ACAP provides a personal transition services specialist at the Transition Assistance Office to answer questions including transportation home, how finances are handled, VA benefits, when spouses start receiving retirement pay, and when must families clear post and how?

ACAP customers get written information and referrals, so they do not even have to take notes.

A transition services specialist will also provide customers with a referral to obtain training to improve or polish their job search skills.

The Georgia Department of Labor provides a training course every Tuesday and Wednesday — "The Basic Job Search Skills Training Course" — that provides the foundation for all other training to follow. The next step is the "advanced" course taught at the Job Assistance Center as a one-day workshop every Thursday.

The transition services specialist will guide each person through the process to meet the needs of the individual. In order for each person the maximize the services, the first stop should be the Transition Assistance Office, Building 2617.

The Job Assistance Center will provide additional one-on-one job search counseling.

All of these services are available to soldiers, their spouses and children if they are of working age.

ACAP is a whole family program, and customers do not have to be accompanied by their sponsors.

For more information or to make an appointment visit the Army Career and Alumni Program office in Soldiers' Plaza, Building 2617, or call 545-4892 or 545-4902.

ACAP to conduct workshop

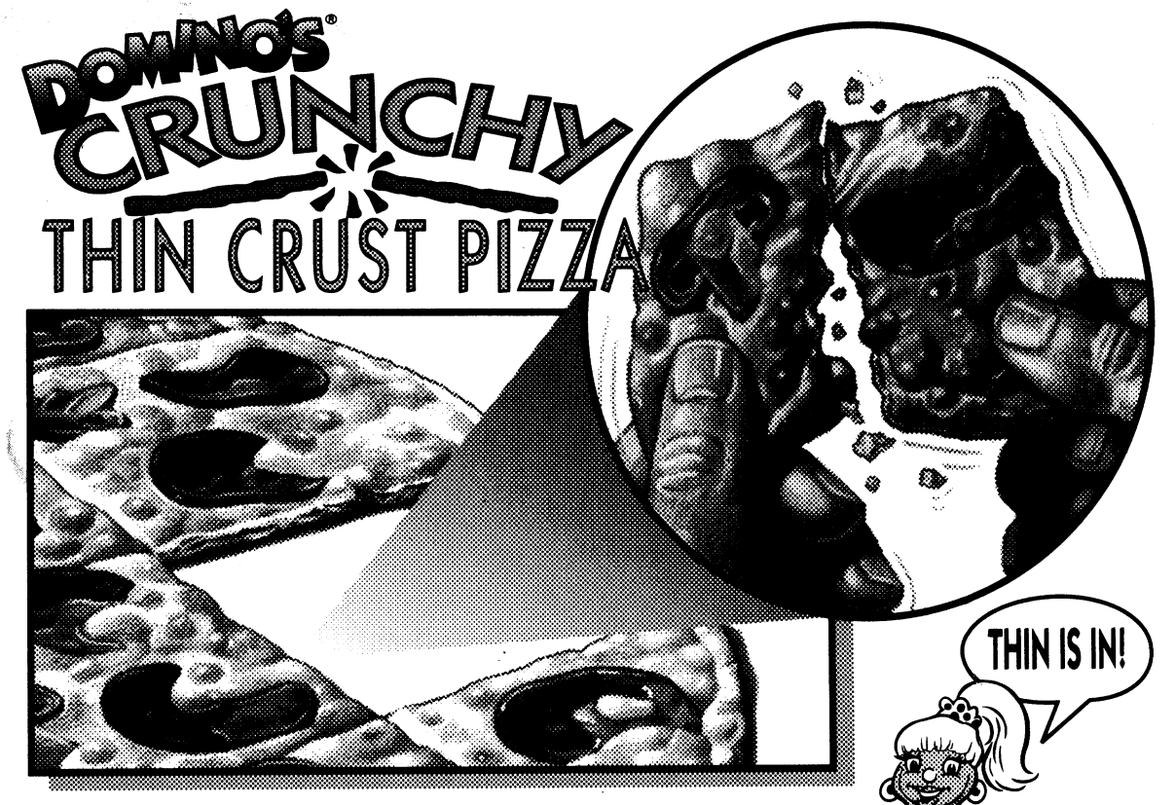
Army Career and Alumni Program

A seminar about federal employment will be Thursday from 8 to 10 a.m. in Infantry Hall, Classroom 30.

Sponsored by the Army Career and Alumni Program and the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, the seminar is designed to provide information on the opportunities of federal employment with primary emphasis on Fort Benning.

Available to soldiers who are retiring from the military and family members, the seminar will cover the basics of how the federal employment system functions, the various agencies, where to find job announcements and veteran's preference. Participants will be given a detailed explanation of the federal employment application, Standard Form 171.

James Fleming, a 20-year veteran of the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, and Cathy Murray, an instructor with Conwal Inc. will be available to answer questions.



Murray assists the Georgia Department of Labor with the ACAP Transition Assistance Program workshop, and conducts personal assessments Thursday and Friday of each week from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the ACAP office in Soldier's Plaza. The assessments include instruction in the use of an automated Standard Form 171.

To obtain an appointment, call 545-7073 or 545-4892.

ITB, 36th back on court for second half

By Terry K Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Infantry Training Brigade kicked off the second half of the basketball season Jan. 6 at Santiago Fitness Center on Sand Hill with three games.

The 36th Engineer Group also was back on the hardcourt Monday night at Audie Murphy Fitness Center with three games scheduled.

Audie Murphy Fitness Center

Game one

The 63rd Combat Support Engineers overcame a two-point halftime deficit to win a close game against River Rats of the 586th Engineer Company 47-43.

Michael Jackson led the 63rd with 16 points, and William Cochran chipped in 12 for the win.

The River Rats were led by Tyrone Mims' 18 points. Darrell Singleton added eight for the River Rats.

Game two

Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 36th Engineer Group, won on a forfeit when the team of the 690th Medical Company failed to show up for the game.

Game three

The 608th Ordnance Company's Rock Steady clipped the 43rd Engineer Battalion 54-47 in the final game of the evening.

Corey Long led Rock Steady with 19 points, 10 in the second half. Center Marvin Lancaster tipped in 17, and James McLain added nine.

Laneil Davenport scored 18 points, Noah McClinton tossed in 10 and David Crockett popped in nine for the 43rd.

Santiago Fitness Center

The Running Rebels of Headquarters Services Company ran roughshod over Rock Steady of 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, 74-56.

Eric Pickett tallied 20 points, 14 in the second half, to power the Rebels' fast attack offense. Teammates Lewis Hall scored 17, Gregory Ellersbee had 14 and Chuck Brown popped in 12 to round out the scoring for the Rebels.

Rock Steady was led by Tony Harris with 19 points, and Dwayne Mack and Ervin White each scored 12 points to keep the game close in the first half.

Game two

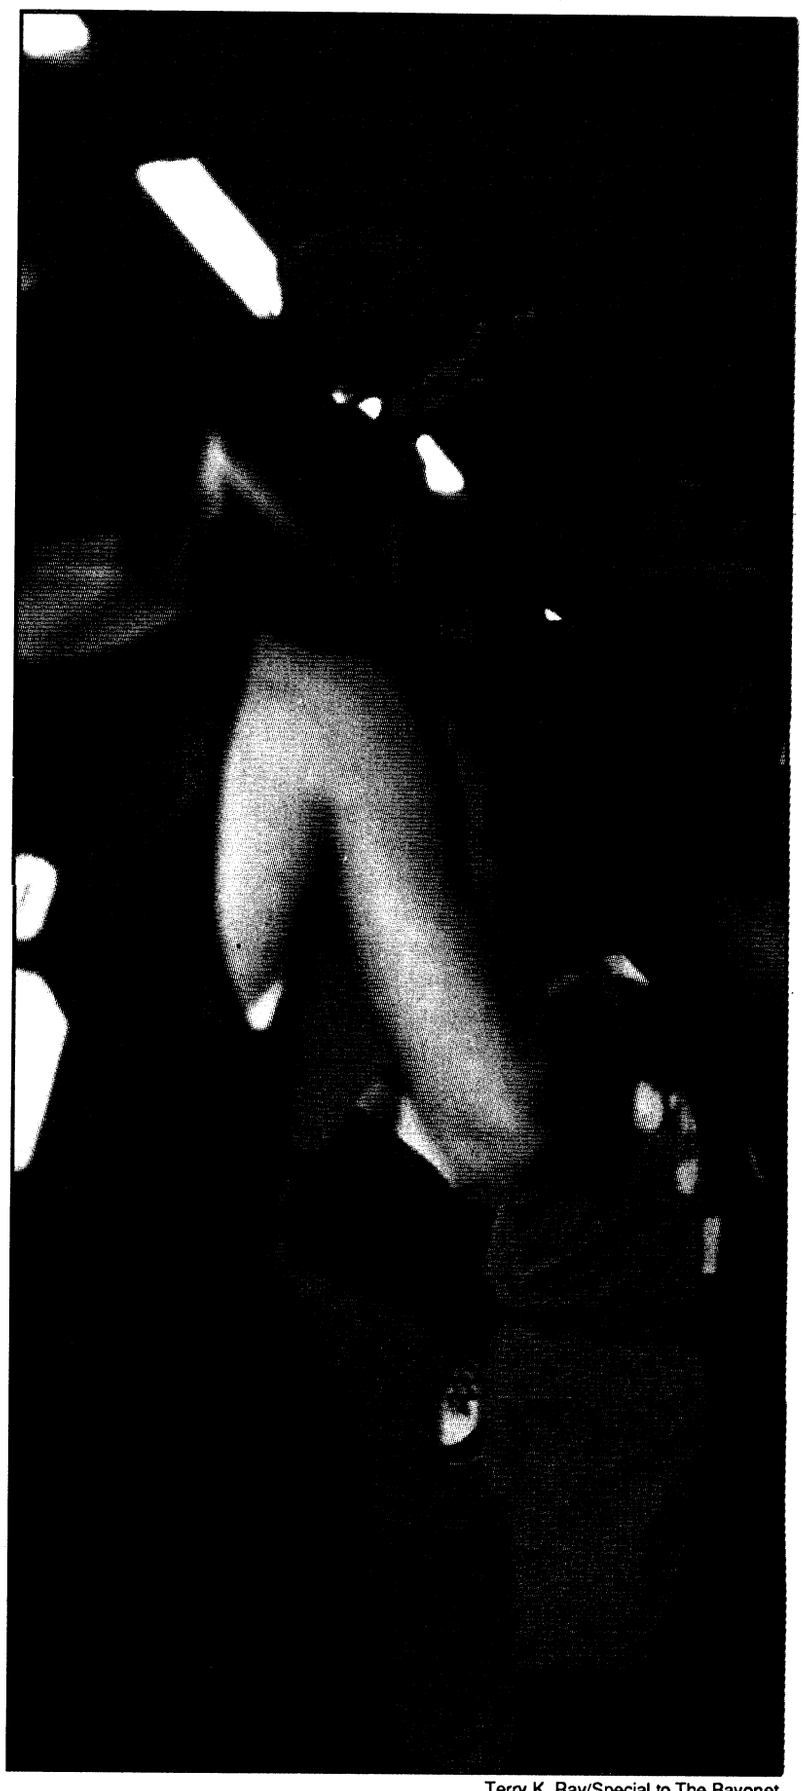
The Patriots of 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, stepped on the toes of Mailed Foot of 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, 48-46.

Michael Collins led the Patriots with 13 points. Michael Sampson knocked down 10 and Joseph Cohen added eight to hold off Mailed Foot down the stretch.



William Bush pumped in 13 points while teammates Henry Johnson tallied 11 and Jason Hickcock tapped in nine.

Game three

3rd Battalion, 32nd Infantry Regiment, (Queen's Own) held off a furious run by 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment, (Rock of the Marne) 62-58 in overtime. Chris Carr of the Rock hit a three-point shot at the buzzer to send the game into the extra period.

James Jones led Queen's Own with 24 points. Robert Amaker and Deon Brantley each rang up 13 points for Queen's Own.

Glen Wiltshire led all scorers with 25 points for Rock of the Marne while Derek Williams added 11 and Nate Zellner chipped in eight in the losing effort.

Rock Steady takes game down to the last minute

By Shelby Carr
Infantry Training Brigade

Rock Steady from 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, took Tuesday evening's basketball game down to the wire to beat the Bayonets of 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, 47-46.

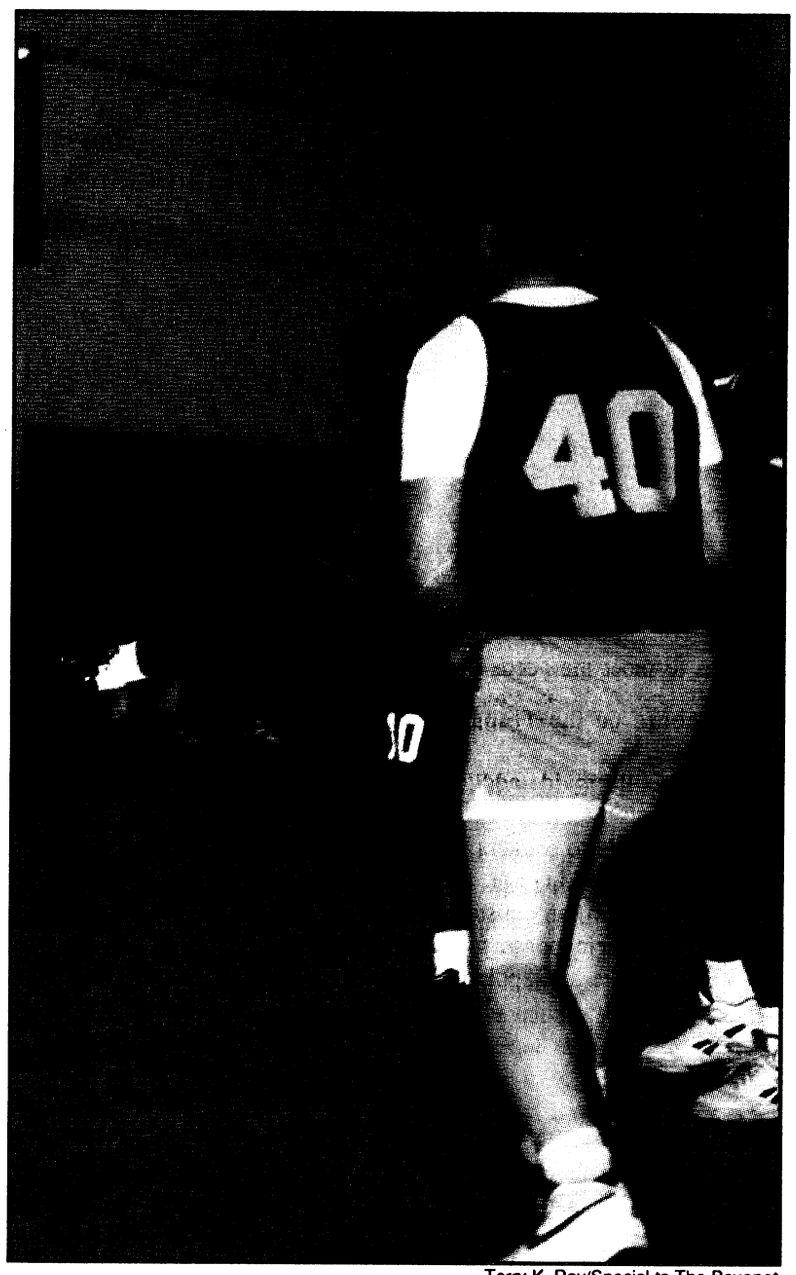
With the game tied at one minute and 11 seconds in the second half, an intentional foul was called against the Bayonets as Tony Harris of Rock Steady drove toward the basket. Harris hit the first of his two shots for the final point of the game, giving Rock Steady the game-winning point.

To begin the game, Rock Steady capitalized on fast breaks during a one-minute period to take an early 7-2 lead before being shut down for four minutes by the Bayonets' defense. A strong pressure defense shut down Rock Steady's passing game and a fast-break offense of its own allowed the Bayonets to go on an 11-0 run.

The last six minutes of the first half was back and forth with the Rock Steady passing offense trying to work through the full court pressure defense of the Bayonets. The Bayonets used fast breaks to maintain a four-point lead over the perimeter-passing offense of the Rock Steady team to take a 27-23 lead at halftime.

The second half began the same as the first half ended, with neither team able to dominate the game for the first eight minutes.

The Rock Steady defense, led by Erwin White with six steals in the game, shut down the Bayonets' fast breaks for two minutes, while the Bayonets' outside shooting game disappeared.



Rock Steady was able to tie the game at 36 with five minutes left behind the inside play of Paul Tate, who had 10 rebounds and Harris and White, who each had six rebounds. The Bayonets answered the challenge with Terrance Glover blocking shots and a pressure defense that yielded five steals in the second half.

The final five minutes of the game was up and down the court with Rock Steady trying to work inside and the Bayonets hitting from the outside.

With only three team fouls, the Bayonets fouled Harris intentionally and he scored the first free throw awarded to Rock Steady in the second half for the winning point. The Bayonets hit three of seven free throws in the second half, with none after Harris' shot, despite Rock Steady being in foul trouble.

The last full-court pass by the Bayonets missed the open man under the basket with 21 seconds left, and a steal by Andrew Lee and a missed shot with six seconds left ended the chance for a last-second, game-winning shot.

In other action during the evening, 3rd Battalion, 32nd Infantry, defeated the 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry, 62-50, and Headquarters and Service Company beat 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry, 84-50.

Deer kill cards — Deer kill cards must be returned within 15 days of the close of deer season, according to officials at the National Resources Management Branch.

The deer season ended Sunday in Georgia and will end Jan. 31 in Alabama. Kill cards may be placed in drop boxes located at the Outdoor Recreation Office, Building 1707, or the Natural Resources Management Branch Office, Building 5883, Harmony Church.

Individuals desiring a receipt for return should mail the permit by certified mail, return receipt requested, to the Outdoor Recreation Office, P.O. Box 53323, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905, or personally return the permit to the Outdoor Recreation Office.

All kill cards must be returned even if no deer are harvested, officials said. Failure to return kill cards or failure to provide a receipt for the return of the kill cards can result in revocation or suspension of hunting privileges for one year.

Appeals will not be accepted without a receipt for return of permit, officials said.

Golf tournament — The Martin Luther King Jr. three-person scramble golf tournament will be at the Follow Me Golf Course 9 a.m. Monday.

For more information, call 687-1940.

Racquetball clinic — A racquetball clinic and tournament will be conducted at Briant Wells Field House Feb. 18 and 19.

The clinic will be from 6 to 8 p.m. Feb. 18 and from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Feb. 19. The first 10 people to sign up will receive free Ektelon products.

For more information, contact Dennis Guaglianone at 545-6333 or 545-2737.

Rifle and pistol match — The Rifle and Pistol Club will host its monthly pistol match 1 p.m. Feb. 5.

Novice and inexperienced shooters are welcome. Glock Firearms will be sponsoring the match and will provide Glock model 17, 9mm pistols and ammunition for competitors who do not own their own weapon.

All entrants will receive a free Glock sweatshirt. Cost will be $12 if paid by Feb. 1, and $15 after that date.

For details, contact Jim Graham at 689-3371.

Basketball tourney — A three-on-three basketball tournament will be conducted by the Physical Activites Branch Tuesday through Jan. 26.

The tournament will be open to active duty military only. Competitors can sign up at their respective fitness center.

For more information, contact any fitness center or Chris Winterman, Physical Activites Branch, at 545-5777 or 545-4300.

Boxing extravaganza — The No. 1 contender for the heavyweight boxing title Michael Moorer will be on hand along with World Boxing Council middleweight champion Gerald "G-Man" McClellen for the Fort Benning boxing extravaganza today and Saturday at Kelley Hill Fitness Center.

Admission for tonight's bouts is $3 for adults, $2 for military and $1 for children. Saturday's bouts will cost $5 for adults, $3 for military and $1.50 for children.

For more information, contact Jim Brown at 545-5777 or 545-4300. The Kelley Hill Fitness Center can also be reached for information at 544-1747 or 544-3578.

Ski trials — The 1994 Cosseil International du Sport Militaire Ski Week Trials will be hosted by the National Guard Bureau International Athletics Events Office in Stowe and Jericho, Vt., Feb. 14 through 17.

Applications must be received no later than Thursday. For more information, call Steve Brown at Headquarters Department of the Army Sports at DSN 221-9715 or (703) 325-9715.

Deer season closing — Hunting season in Georgia ended Saturday. Deer season in Alabama contiues until Jan. 31.

Although active duty military members are allowed to hunt on both sides of the installation provided they have a license from either state, they may not bring a deer killed on the Alabama side to the Georgia side.

If a service member with a Georgia license kills a deer on the Alabama side of the post and brings the deer onto the Georgia side, he or she will be subject to severe penalties.

Ideas in action

Col. Burnet R. Quick, chief of staff (second from right), makes a point during the commanders and directors conference last week at Uchee Creek. The conference brought together major unit commanders and command sergeants major, directors and staff officers to review the post's missions and goals. The commanding general was briefed by each representative on what was going well or needed improving. Work groups were formed to address the issues and improvement suggestions brought up, then report back to the general membership. Recommendations will be used to assist in the continued improvement of Fort Benning. Sitting at the head table with Quick are Col. Gregory C. Camp, deputy assistant commandant (left), Brig. Gen. Jack P. Nix Jr., deputy commanding general, Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, commanding general, and Maj. James Walls, deputy garrison commander.

Soldiers aid in plane crash

By Denise Howell
36th Engineer Group

Seven soldiers of the 586th Engineer Company were awarded the Air Force Achievement Medal Jan. 6 for their part in the recovery of a downed plane.

Sgt. Samuel Dallas, Sgt. Reginald McKnight, Sgt. Robert E. Sutton (currently in Korea), Spc. Dwayne J. Cordier (currently in Germany), Spc. Mark C. Davis, Spc. Anthony G. Dunn and Spc. James D. Hill were commended for their actions during recovery of a C-130E aircraft that crashed April 28, 1992, killing nine U.S. Air Force airmen.

The plane had crashed into the middle of Blewett Falls Lake, some 70 miles outside of Fort Bragg, N.C.

For 18 days, under extreme weather conditions, these soldiers worked round the clock to salvage the underwater wreckage and to recover and identify the bodies of the victims, according to officials.

According to Air Force officials, the success of the recovery prevented contamination of the lake, a major source of water for central North Carolina.

Soldiers earn awards for service in Somalia

By Denise Howell
36th Engineer Group

Soldiers of the 43rd Engineer Battalion received awards Jan. 5 at a ceremony in Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall, Building 4.

The 43rd recently returned from deployment to Somalia, participating in Operation Continue Hope.

Thirty-eight soldiers were awarded the Army Commendation Medal for superior meritorious service and 99 received the Army Achievement Medal for meritorious achievement.

Also, a plaque was presented to Company A of the 43rd for its excellence in port support. Battalion Commander Lt. Col. Robert Davis hosted the ceremony.

"We are here to honor greatness," he said. "What you accomplished over there was nothing short of amazing, incredible, awesome."

A four-minute video highlighting the many deeds of the 43rd in Somalia, including completion of a 1,700-soldier base camp within the first two months of deployment, was shown.

Also awarded were the Battalion Certificate of Achievement to 12 Family Support Group leaders for their work with family members back in the states; and the 586th Engineer Company received the 20th Engineer Battalion Certificate of Achievement for outstanding support during training activities.

First Union National Bank

Ex-chief of staff becomes broker

First Union Corporation

A former Fort Benning chief of staff, now an employee of the First Union National Bank of Georgia, has successfully completed the licensing examination for the series 6 and Series 63 brokers' licenses to sell mutual funds.

Retired Col. John Fuller is now a dual employee of First Union and First Union Brokerage Services, Inc., one of the nation's oldest and largest bank-owned securities and firms, and he will continue to serve customer needs with the bank's full array of traditional bank products and services.

He is assistant vice president and manager of First Union's Fort Benning branch office, a position he has worked in since joining the bank in 1992.

The certification will allow Fuller to sell mutual funds, including the bank's private label funds, the First Union funds.

Fuller will now be able to offer mutual funds as an investment alternative to bank customers who are interested in diversifying their investments.

Licensing and registration are required by securities regulators including various state securities commissions.

King's dream gives us hope for future

By Carl Young
USAIC Chaplains' Office

The approaching celebration of the birthday of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. will cause a great deal of attention to his "I Have a Dream" speech.

This should cause us to pause and think about making this world a better place for all. It is a time for dreams, concentrating on the possibilities. This visualization of the abstract is essential if we are going to have any hope for tomorrow.

King's hope was for a time when children would not be judged by the color of their skin, but by their actions. Yes, we pray for our future — a world of love, hope and peace.

Unfortunately, too much interest is placed upon the dream, while not enough attention is given to making the dream a reality. King was not just a dreamer. He envisioned a world void of discrimination and prejudice. He encouraged us to get involved and work for positive change and the end of destructive, prejudiced behavior.

King was not a "behind the scenes" leader. He was extremely active. During his early days as the pastor of the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church in Montgomery, Ala., he did not shirk his responsibility. When in December 1955, Rosa Parks refused to give up her seat on a bus to a white passenger, he got involved.

King was later elected the leader of the Montgomery Improvement Association where he demonstrated his skills as an orator as well as a leader. For more than a year, he led the boycott of the Montgomery bus system, forcing the city to desegregate its public transportation system.

Unfortunately, too much interest is placed upon the dream, while not enough attention is given to making the dream a reality. King was not just a dreamer. He envisioned a world void of discrimination and prejudice. He encouraged us to get involved and work for positive change and the end of destructive, prejudiced behavior.

In 1957, King and other black leaders organized the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, which became the vanguard for the Civil Rights Movement and social protest by means of nonviolent demonstrations throughout the decade. This victory over segregation led to a new chapter in American history.

All over the South, nonviolent demonstrations began. Four black students marched into a Woolworth's store in Greensboro, N.C., and asked to be served. Black students came back to the store everyday — sitting quietly waiting to be served. They were beaten, spit upon and arrested; yet, they did not stop until the store was desegregated.

In April 1963, King took on the enormous task of desegregating what was described as the most segregated city in the world, Birmingham, Ala. He organized demonstrators to march at city hall, and demanded to talk to city leaders. Instead, they were arrested. While in jail, eight white clergymen characterized their efforts as unwise and untimely. Following their arrest, more than a 1,000 people demonstrated against segregation.

The demonstrators were met by police officers with fire hoses and trained attack dogs. I will never forget seeing people knocked over by the water from fire hoses, and attack dogs biting men, women and children while the officers beat them with their clubs. The most remarkable thing about this battle is the protesters did not respond with hate. Instead they turned to God and sang "Deep in my heart, I do believe that we shall overcome someday."

While in jail, over the Easter weekend, King replied to the white clergy with his famous letter from the Birmingham City Jail.

On April 3, 1967, King spoke at the Mason Temple Church of God In Christ in Memphis, Tenn., in support of sanitation worker's strike.

"I would like to live a long life," he said. "Longevity has its place. But I'm not concerned about that now. I just want to do God's will." The following day, King was assassinated.

King inspired others to dream and hope for a better place. At the same time, he described himself as a drum major for justice, peace and righteousness. He wanted to be remembered for his commitment.

Today, if you do not see yourself as a drum major, be a member of the band and be committed enough to take a stand for something positive.

Service to remember KING

By Jacqueline Feagin
USAIC Chaplains' Office

There will be a memorial service today at the Infantry Training Brigade in remembrance of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Chaplain (Col.) Roy G. Plummer, staff chaplain at Fort Benning, will be the guest speaker for the Martin Luther King Memorial Service at Regimental Chapel on Sand Hill.

Entertainment for the service will be provided by the Infantry Chorus and the Infantry Band Ensemble. Several trainees will read selections from speeches by King. The public is invited.

Plummer, a native of Jamaica, is a Methodist. He was awarded a bachelor of arts degree from Asuza Pacific College in California. He holds a master of arts degree in human relations from Pacific Lutheran University and in guidance and counseling from Long Island University.

Plummer was a newscaster and religious disc jockey for WAOK and WGUN in Atlanta. He entered active duty in 1971 at Fort Gordon, Ga. He has served in Europe and Korea.

For information, call 544-9287 or 544-9764.

New captains get earlier pin-on point

Army News Service

First lieutenants eligible for promotion and serving in the Army competitive category have a bit of good news in this era of force drawdown: the shortening of their time-in-grade requirement by four months.

"The pin-on-point for promotion to captain will gradually become four years," said Col. Charles Henning of the Army's Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel.

"This change coincides with the practice of the other services and helps us deal with the current shortfall in the captain population, especially branch-qualified captains," he said.

The change also comes at a time directly beneficial to those first lieutenants considered by the captain promotion board that convened Nov. 16.

"This board's selections — some 3,300 of them expected for fiscal 1994 — will begin promotions on March 1, with the entire group being completed in about eight months," Henning said.

Candidates for promotion should know that "the selection opportunity remains at least as good as last year," he said.

The resulting acceleration of promotions means that eligible first lieutenants will be going to their branch advance courses earlier than they had expected, and the class size for the courses will be slightly larger than usual.

In making the change, personnel officials considered such matters as the earlier advance-course attendance, permanent-change-of-station issues and pay policy.

They also said the special branches are being reviewed for coverage under the new pin-on-point policy.

Mogadishu-based soldiers unite Somali clans

By Rebecca Matanic
Army News Service

MODGADISHU, Somalia — Amid the dust, rubble and decay of what was once a vibrant city are new signs of emerging vitality.

A community center and camel market now bustle with activity next to Hunter Base in the Medina district in Mogadishu.

The market and surrounding area is controlled by a member of the Abgal clan — a Somali woman named Binti. The area in which Binti and her people live and work is known as Maka.

The community center houses a school in a three-story building across from Hunter's main gate and is led by Sheikh Mubarak Jibril of the Dir clan Jibril — a prominent figure in the community — is "nonpolitical," according to Capt. Andrew Rivas of the 96th Civil Affairs Team from Fort Bragg, N.C.

The relationship between the Abgals and Dirs has been plagued by distrust and dislike over the years. Until recently, Abgal children were not permitted to attend school at the community center.

A gap between the two clans has been bridged through the work of the 96th CAT along with a newly found cooperative spirit between Binti and Jibril.

"The last three years this town has been in civil war," Binti said. "The first step is to start to work together in our community.

"My religion tells me that everything I got, I have to call to my neighbors and share it with them. I believe she would let our children in her school," he said. "It is good to see Somali children gather in one place from different clans."

When the U.S.'s mission in Somalia began December 1992, such cooperation between clans or tribes in Mogadishu was virtually unheard of. Binti and Jibril credit not only the work of the civil affairs teams but American troops in general.

"Since they came here, we have been established. We've resolved a lot of problems. Every day our community gets better," Binti said.

"We are happy to have American troops here," Jibril said, "and we will never forget their effort and help."

The civil affairs team was instrumental in establishing the camel market next to Hunter Base. Binti said prior to the market opening, many Somalis were killed or robbed before they reached a makeshift market located behind a nearby factory.

"We lost a lot of people, so that is why we requested to have the market here," Binti said.

"The camel market serves mutual interests," Rivas said. "(Binti) makes sure no one threatening comes that side of Hunter. If a shot comes out of the camel market, it is closed for a week."

Binti said that businessmen from all over Somalia come to her camel market so they can export camels to the Middle East.

"They (U.S. soldiers) give us a big opportunity," Binti said. "You can see the difference between last year. Today, the Somali people are coming back to normal life."

Although Binti and Jibril are hopeful for a restoration of Somalia, they are apprehensive of a U.S. withdrawal, fearing that without the presence of American troops, the country will again be engulfed in civil war.

"The way to keep Somali peace is to first disarm all the factions and individuals. And after that, call on the leaders of the factions, clans and tribes to discuss their own problems, and then select a sovereign nation," Jibril said.

Binti agrees the Somalis will need to disarm in order to restore the country. She also feels that education is essential.

"The biggest problem we have had in the last three years has been uneducated teen-agers who have heavy weapons and machine guns. They need to be made to rehabilitate themselves. Also the elders need to rehabilitate their thinking," Binti said.

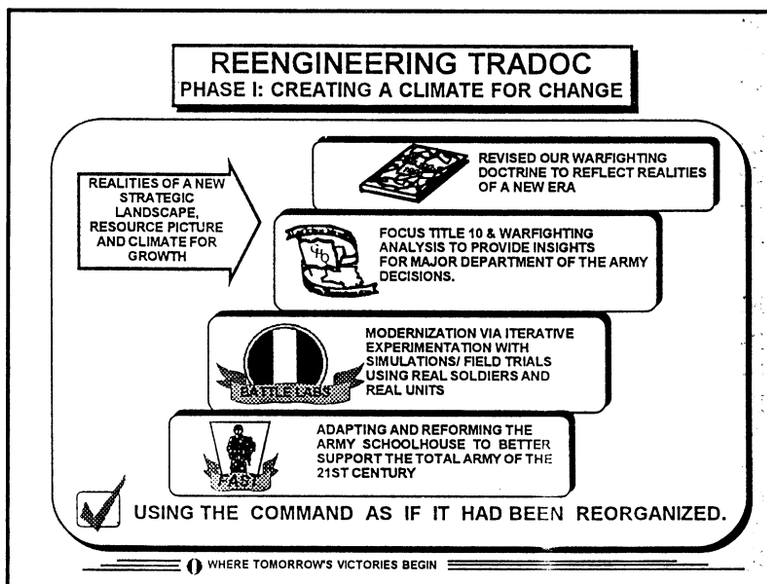
The school in the community center is a step in the right direction toward the restoration of Somalia as long as peace is maintained between the Somali people.

"The education and health of the Somalis is very important; but, as you know, without peace, you cannot make education or health," Binti said.

Jibril said the first step of "saving the Somali people" has essentially been completed by the United Nations.

"Now the Somali people are ready to start the second step, which is to restore the government," Jibril said.

Both Binti and Jibril believe that a democratic form of government would be the best type of government to install in Somalia.



"Every region must take care of their own local government as it is in the United States, but we need to restore with a federal government," Binti said. The building of a Somali government should involve all Somalis, including women, according to Binti.

"They have to give us (women) responsibility in the country this time. It is very important to participate in political reconciliation and reconstruction," she said.

Although the Somali people have a long road ahead to a full recovery, Jibril and Binti said they will not forget the sacrifices and efforts by the U.S. troops to help Somalia.

"The American troops have developed Somalia. The Somali people are grateful and are sorry for the families who lost their sons," Binti said.

integrates training, development

TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — A team that will serve as the "radar" for future combat developments and training will be activated at Training and Doctrine Command headquarters in January.

Called the Commander's Integration Group, its members will ensure all work across doctrine, training, organizational development, leader development, materiel and soldier support will be fully integrated.

The headquarters group is a product of a process action team organized to explore methods to better accomplish the integration function.

Creation of the group is also part of the re-engineering plan for TRADOC. Every function in the command is being studied to find ways to make each more efficient and responsive to the needs of the Army and the warfighting commanders in chief.

"Integration is the blending of all components to ensure that we don't have a piece of equipment showing up on some brigade commander's doorstep without trained soldiers to operate it and maintain it, the manuals on how to use it and maintain it and the doctrine for its employment throughout the Army," said Col. Rick Sills, chief of the team.

"That's an exaggerated example, but the CG (Commanding General Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr.) feels that developments in training, doctrine, materiel and noncommissioned officer and officer development must be better coordinated," he said.

When the group is formed, it will be made up of 25 to 30 military and civilian personnel drawn from headquarters organizations. It will not result in a change in the numbers of personnel assigned to the headquarters, according to Sills.

To develop its recommendations, team members visited TRADOC schools, battle laboratories, and Air Force, Navy and Marine Corps units and Department of the Army headquarters.

"We talked to people from general officer level down to the worker bees to see how integration was working out in the field, and how, if they were in charge, they would make it happen," Sills said.

After two months of gathering data, the team recommended the group concept to Franks, and he approved it.

"I think the Commander's Integration Group is going to be the radar, the organization that's searching the horizon to see what will be expected of the United States Army in the future," said Jim Christensen, the materiel specialist on the PAT.

"When it locks on something that needs to be done, then it causes action within TRADOC to achieve those kinds of capabilities."

A climate of reduced resources makes it imperative to integrate development activities, according to Lt. Col. Mike Gorecki, the team's combat development representative.

"We can't always throw money against a materiel solution," he said. "We've got to think of other ways to solve problems.

"Maybe it can be changing the way we train soldiers or a unit, or we might change our doctrine or tweak the organization.

"We've got to focus in on where the best return on investment is, in tune with what the warfighters' needs are. The group will help TRADOC do that better," Gorecki said.

world war II

Fifty years ago this week...

• In Italy, the Allies launched major offensives throughout the country, encountering fierce German resistance at every turn.

The 5th, 46th and 56th divisions of the British X Corps attacked German positions manned by the 94th Infantry Division of the XIV Panzer Corps along the Garigliano River.

Elsewhere, the U.S. II Corps assaulted into the heavily defended Rapido Valley, making only small, quickly countered gains. At the cost of a significant number of casualties, the effort did succeed in luring many German reserves from their positions in preparation for the upcoming Allied landing there.

• On the Eastern Front, the Soviets reported further gains, retaking Mozyr, Slavuta, Kalinkovichi and Novgorod in a swarming attack, and initiating an effort to relieve Leningrad that resulted in the capture of Krasnoye Selo, Popshaand Peterhof.

• In the world of administrative moves, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower officially assumed responsibility for the Allied Expeditionary Forces and began his formal duties as commander in chief.

• On New Guinea, the Australian forces operating on the north coast of the Huon Peninsula secured Sio but only after the Japanese evacuated the position.

• On New Britain, U.S. forces repelled a series of determined Japanese counterattacks toward Cape Gloucester, inflicting heavy casualties in the process.

• Fort Benning officials began preparing for the construction of a modern library with a 15,000 volume capacity after receiving word that the post had been awarded funding to build the facility.

Two things can get you 'busted' — in rank

U.S. Army Trial Defense Service

This article discusses administrative reductions in grade.

Chapter 6, Army Regulation 600-8-19, governs administrative reductions in grade for enlisted soldiers. Reductions in grade are authorized for basically two reasons: misconduct and inefficiency. This article will concentrate on reductions for misconduct.

Army policy requires that soldiers convicted of a criminal offense or adjudged juvenile offenders by any American or foreign court will be reduced or considered for reduction.

Once a commander receives written notice of conviction or sentence, the commander must commence or consider reduction proceedings. This action must be taken even if an appeal of the conviction is pending.

Reduction is also permitted for a civilian conviction separately from, or in conjunction with, separation for a civilian conviction.

Table 6-1, AR 600-8-19, contains a number of rules that govern who receives a reduction board and whether reduction is mandatory or discretionary. These rules focus on the soldier's rank, the type of sentence and whether the sentence is suspended.

There are three basic rules:

Rule 1: Any enlisted soldier convicted and sentenced to death or an unsuspended term of confinement for one year or more by a civilian court will be reduced to private 1 (regardless of current rank) without referral to a reduction board. The reduction is automatic and not discretionary.

Rule 2: Any soldier sentenced to confinement for more than 30 days but less than one year or to a suspended sentence of one year or more will:

• If corporal or below, be considered by the reduction authority for reduction of one or more grades;

• If sergeant or above, be referred to a reduction board for consideration of reduction of one or more grades. Although reduction must be considered with this type of sentence, it is not mandatory.

Rule 3: If a soldier is sentenced to less than 30 days, or a suspended sentence of less than one year, or any lesser sentence, the soldier may be reduced.

The reduction authority may reduce corporals and below one or more grades without a board and may refer sergeants and above to a reduction board for consideration of reduction of one or more grades. Reduction is discretionary with the reduction authority.

Reduction boards are similar to administrative separation boards, except that the board's sole purpose is to consider whether the soldier should be reduced. Procedures followed in reduction boards are found in Section IV, AR 600-8-19.

Reduction boards are composed of at least three officers and enlisted soldiers senior to the respondent. One voting member will be of the same sex as the respondent and a respondent from a minority group can request a minority member be appointed on the board. A nonvoting recorder (a person who presents the case) is also assigned.

The soldier can choose to appear before the board or waive appearance. The soldier is also entitled to representation and can request that a judge advocate be assigned to present the case. The soldier may retain a civilian counsel at no expense to the government.

As in other administrative boards, the soldier must be given advance notice of the hearing date. Board members can be challenged if they have prior knowledge of the case.

The soldier can also request copies of all documents relevant to the case, request available witnesses, present written statements and cross-examine all government witnesses. The soldier can also testify or remain silent.

After the hearing, the board may recommend no reduction, reduction of one or more grades, or reassignment in grade. If the soldier is on an approved promotion list, the board may recommend removal from the list.

In making these recommendations, the board must consider the factual allegations, the best interest of the Army, the obligations and qualities required of a soldier of that grade and experience, and the soldier's service record.

Upon receipt of the board's recommendation, the reduction authority can approve or disapprove any portion of the recommendation, except that the reduction authority cannot take action more severe than that recommended by the board. If the civilian conviction is later overturned, the reduced soldier is restored to his or her former rank.

community care

By Ken Franklin
Martin Army Community Hospital

Community Care Corner
by LTC Ken Franklin, MD

Climbing health-care costs don't have to relate to hospital stays. Most people can attest to these costs each month at the pharmacy window.

What many military beneficiaries don't know is that the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services can help with these costs.

When a drug is not available at Martin Army Community Hospital, patients can use CHAMPUS to pay the majority of the cost of that prescription. The deductible is not separate, so a family that has met the deductible at the doctor's office need not start over at the pharmacy window. The copayment share is the same as for other outpatient care.

Many local pharmacies will accept CHAMPUS prescriptions.

If the patient can demonstrate that he or she has met the deductible for that year, the store may only charge for the copayment. In most cases, the civilian pharmacy will complete the CHAMPUS paperwork for the patient.

Policies vary from pharmacy to pharmacy, even within a store chain. Patients should call and compare services.

Patients who are military beneficiaries and are seeing a CHAMPUS physician, can bring their civilian prescription to Martin Army Community Hospital. The hospital will only fill prescriptions that it carries on its formulary. A formulary is a list of approved medications.

Patients enrolled in Gateway To Care clinics (Martin Army's Family Practice Clinic, Winder, Aviation and Primary Care for the Uniformed Services) will get their medications when they see the provider at the clinic.

Outpatient medication is expensive; it's also valuable — to health as well as the pocketbook. Patients have many ways to reduce the financial burden of getting these valuable treatments.

Dietary changes may help arthritis

General Mills

Look at the facts before you head for the nearest health-food store in search of so-called "cures" for arthritis, suggests Karen Wilder, a registered dietitian.

There is no current proof of any dramatic cure for arthritis, she said. However, experts agree that there may be a dietary connection that can help you manage a healthy lifestyle. For example, simple changes like these:

• Maintain a healthful weight. According to some research, being overweight can increase the risk for arthritis and adds stress to arthritic joints.

• Include plenty of foods high in complex carbohydrates in your diet. They help provide energy, fiber, vitamins and minerals. Good sources are fresh fruits and vegetables plus pasta, rice, breads and cereals. At the same time, cut back on foods high in fat.

• Avoid excessive amounts of salt or sodium. Some drugs used in the treatment of arthritis can cause the body to retain sodium. This, coupled with a diet high in sodium, can be a concern for sodium-sensitive people who have high blood pressure.

• Drink alcohol only in moderation, if at all. Alcohol can affect how well some drugs for arthritis work.

If you think you have arthritis, talk to your physician or a registered dietitian before making changes in your diet. They can help you decide what types of dietary changes are best for you, Wilder said.

EIC provides tax break

Internal Revenue Service

Q. The president has been talking about a tax credit for people who work and have children. What is the credit?

A. The earned income credit has been in the news often the past year. If you had earned income in 1993 and had a child living with you for more than half the year, you may be able to claim the EIC. If you qualify, you can get a tax credit of up to $2,364. You can receive this credit even if you don't owe any tax or do not have to file a tax return.

Q. How do I qualify for the earned income credit?

A. In 1993, some of the requirements are: You must have income from a job or self-employment. Your income and adjusted gross income each must be less than $23,050. You must have a qualifying child living with you in your home in the United States for more than half the year.

Q. How much money will I receive from the earned income credit?

A. If you have one child, the basic credit may be worth up to $1,434. If you have more than one child the basic credit could be $1,511.

You may also get a health insurance credit of up to $465 if you paid health insurance premiums that covered at least one qualifying child. Finally, you can get an extra credit worth as much as $388 for a child born in 1993.

Q. Where can I get more information?

A. Call the Internal Revenue Service at (800) 829-3676 and ask for Publication 596, Earned Income Credit. You can also get free tax help from Volunteer Income Tax Assistance. Call (800) 829-1040 for locations.

Q. We don't get 1993 W-2s until Jan. 31. We are really short of money this year, and I should be due a tax refund of about $300, the same as last year. I see lots of signs advertising tax services that say the company will prepare your income tax using the Leave and Earnings Statement from December, and give me a "quick tax refund." I know the Army has some sort of tax help available. Why can't the Army do this?

A. To answer your question, three separate concepts need to be discussed — the tax preparation system, the Internal Revenue Service's electronic tax filing system and refund anticipation loans.

The Internal Revenue Service regulates all three of these areas. A tax preparer is a private business person who prepares taxes for a fee. These may be mailed after preparation, but this takes a period of about eight weeks.

To speed things up, the IRS set up a computer system nationwide, called electronic filing, to allow sending of completed tax returns to the IRS via computer modem.

This system is much faster, allowing the tax refund to arrive in about 15 days if it is sent directly to a bank account, and about 21 days if a check is cut by the IRS. The person who sends the return is allowed to charge a fee for the service.

American enterprise then entered the picture with the refund anticipation loan. A tax preparer and a bank enter into a contract. The bank agrees to loan money to the tax filer based on the security of his or her tax refund check.

The tax filer signs over the tax refund by power of attorney. The bank charges a fee and shares it with the tax preparer.

The advertisements you have seen combine all three of these things at once. The client comes in, fills out a questionnaire, and turns over the LES to the preparer.

The preparer has the client fill in a power of attorney and loan data at the same time. The client signs the tax and loan forms and is told to return in three days to pick up the money. All costs are taken out of the refund. The tax refund is then sent by the IRS directly to the bank.

The average cost of a refund anticipation loan is $100. On a $300 refund, this means the client will receive $200 after the three-day waiting period. This seems to be 33 percent interest, a little high. But the annual percentage rate of this cost if expressed as a loan for 21 days instead of charges is actually about 500 percent.

The Army does not offer this loan. However, it provides free tax preparation and electronic filing at no cost to military identification card holders.

The Army Community Service and Staff Judge Advocation Tax Assistance Office is located in Soldiers' Plaza in Building 2624. The office will be open from Jan. 31 until April 15, except holidays. Tax assistance and filing will be available Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. until 4 p.m.

This is a free country, and the choice is yours. See your unit tax adviser for information about electronic filing if you can wait for your money to get all of the refund.

Military Police Activity

The following entries are from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from Dec. 22 to 28. The entries may be incomplete and do not determine the guilt or innocence of any person.

This week's hot topic concerns child abuse. Child abuse is repeated mistreatment or neglect of a child by parents or other guardian resulting in injury or harm. Abuse does not occur in any certain type of household; it occurs in poor, middle-class, well-to-do and even military families.

Child abuse can take many forms including physical, emotional, verbal or sexual. Each form often results in emotional or physical trauma, "acting out" behavior and sometimes death.

One common sign of child abuse is a case of repeated injuries, such as bruises, welts or burns. An abused child may act in a passive or withdrawn behavior, being excessively shy or friendless. Neglected children are often badly nourished and inadequately clothed.

Child abuse can be prevented. Early detection and reporting are the first steps in preventing further abuse and "curing" the cause. Child abuse is a social and legal problem everyone should be concerned with; it's a problem that won't go away if ignored.

If you know of or suspect a child abuse case, report it immediately. Qualified personnel will evaluate the situation and determine the appropriate course of action.

Blotter entries include:

• A civilian was charged with failure to report an accident and theft after he became involved in a traffic accident with a stolen motorcycle from Alabama.

• A family member was charged with unattended children after entering the Post Exchange at the Main Mall and leaving three underaged children in her vehicle.

• A staff sergeant was charged with assault by civil authorities after he shot a civilian in the forearm with a .38-caliber pistol.

• A specialist was charged with simple battery by civil authorities after he pushed his wife into a wall during an altercation.

• A private first class was charged with criminal trespass by civil authorities after entering a club from which he was previously barred.

This week's booby prize goes to the specialist who left his quarters unsecured. A witness observed that the quarters were unsecured and notified the Military Police who arrived to clear and attempt to secure them.

While checking the quarters, Military Police observed a smoking device containing a brownish substance. The smoking device tested positive for marijuana. The specialist later returned to his quarters and was apprehended and charged with use and possession of a controlled substance.

Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best — Give Crime Arrest." Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5223 or the "Crime in Progress" line at 545-2222.

dr. fit

U.S. Army Physical Fitness School

Q: I have heard that women need more calcium than men. Is this true?

A: Yes, women do need more calcium than men. Calcium is used for building strong bones and teeth, helping the blood clot and to enhance nerve and muscle function.

Men need approximately 800 milligrams per day while women need almost double that amount, up to 1,500 milligrams per day.

The major sources of calcium are low-fat milk and low-fat milk by-products, sardines, dark green vegetables and nuts.

Q: What is the best treatment for common injuries?

A: The most common injuries associated with exercise programs are sprains, strains and fractures. Sprains are associated with ligaments surrounding a joint, while strains occur when muscles and tendons are stretched.

Fractures are associated with broken bones. The best treatment for an acute (new) injury is summed up by the acronym PRICE. "P" is for protection against further damage. "R" is for rest, do not try to "walk it off." "I" is for ice that is applied in a bag. "C" is for compression; hold the bag on the injured body part as well to minimize the swelling. "E" is for elevation of the body part.

Finally, remember to splint the fracture where the body part lies and splint the joints above and below the fracture site.

Children team up as educational Buddies

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

The seed of a program planted seven years ago has blossomed into a garden of activities affecting every child who attends Fort Benning's Dexter School.

Seven years ago, a pair of Dexter teachers started the "buddy program," which pairs older students with younger buddies in another grade for weekly activities. The program has been a complete success, according to teachers Marge Brasfield and Peggy Gindville.

Gindville, a kindergarten teacher, began thinking of the benefits a program like this would have for her young charges after reading a magazine article about a similar program.

Brasfield, at the same time, was trying to find a way of easing the first-day worries of younger children while providing her fourth-graders a chance to interact with another age group.

Thus began the buddy program at Dexter School. After implementing the first buddy classes in the school, these teachers began to see benefits to all the participants.

The program has served as a model for the rest of Dexter School as well as some other classes in the Fort Benning school system.

Each week the kindergartners and their fourth-grade friends gather for a variety of activities that have included cooking, writing, art, parties, gardening, science and math.

This program is good for the fourth-graders since it helps them "learn how to nurture other people," said Brasfield.

Typically, children in kindergarten and fourth grades don't interact, she said. This shows the fourth-graders they can still learn from and enjoy the company of younger children, Brasfield said.

"This also allows the kindergartners to do things they normally would not be a part of," said Gindville, citing a science and math nature trail the fourth-graders helped the youngsters work through.

While the fourth-graders feel a sense of accomplishment and satisfaction in helping their buddies, the younger students reap the benefits of friendship, individual attention and one-on-one tutoring from their colleagues.

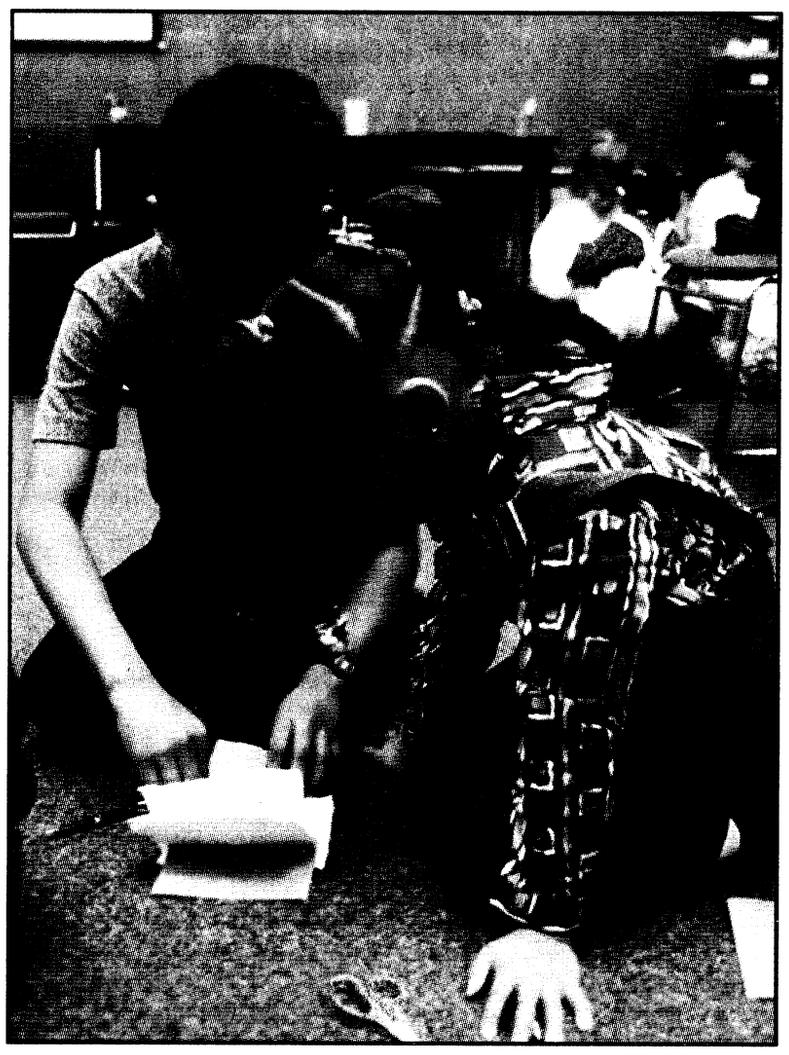
"By combining our classes, we get so much more," Gindville said.

The students are randomly paired by computer lists before the school year officially begins, the teachers said. The children remain buddies throughout the year, a procedure that enables them to bond as a team.

Some major benefits of the program occur the first week of school, both teachers said, when the older students help orient the kindergartners to new and potentially alarming school routines, such as going through the lunch line.

"The children really felt better that they had their buddies to help them," Gindville said. The buddy teams also attended a planetarium presentation together, which allayed the fears of the youngsters in the enclosed space of the portable planetarium, Starlab.

Jan. 6, a regular buddy day, the partners sat quietly listening to instructions on how to transform a paper lunch sack and two sheets of paper into a small booklet full of scenes from a winter theme.



Kindergartners studiously labored over letters, words and pictures with encouragement and spelling help from their buddies.

While scattered around in groups, these teams worked quietly in a manner that suggested this was routine for them. Although most teams consisted of two students, some had three.

When the number of students in the classes don't match, some buddy teams of three instead of two are formed, Gindville said.

While participating in field trips, cooking ethnic dishes or learning about gardening, Gindville said she believes this program enriches all the participants.

"I wish every school everywhere could know the benefits of this program," Gindville said.

Tournament lets soldiers 'rock 'em'

By Sandy Helling
Directorate of Community Activities

The "Rock 'em Sock 'em" boxing tournament started Wednesday at the Hidden Door Club and will run for three consecutive weeks at the post's clubs.

The competition uses hand-operated tabletop robots and is conducted by elimination. Participants and winners will receive a variety of prizes, including T-shirts and baseball caps.

Winners from each night will advance to the final round, which will be Jan. 26 at the Hidden Door Club and Jan. 28 at the Main NCO Club and Bradley's. The final-round winner from each club will receive a cash prize of $125.

Registration sheets are available at each club for up to 48 participants per night.

The tournament coincided with the launch of the Army's boxing training camp at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., Monday.

Class Six stores will be conducting promotions consisting of giveaways, drawings and the chance to win a new color television in conjunction with the tournament. The drawing for the television will be Jan. 28. Check the stores for more details and entry forms.

Canadian Mist, the sponsor of the tourney, provides funds for travel, equipment and other training expenses for the boxers who travel to Fort Huachuca to attend the Army Boxing Training Camp. There, athletes prepare for the Army Boxing Championship, which determines the 12-member Army Boxing Team.

The team then goes on to represent the Department of the Army at the Armed Forces Boxing Championship in mid-February and at the U.S. Amateur Boxing Federation Nationals in March.

What do you mean — miscellaneous itemized deductions?

Georgia Society of CPAs

With the passage of a new tax law and the arrival of tax season, taxes are on everyone's minds and lips. To help you better understand all that tax talk, the Georgia Society of Certified Public Accounts offers the following definitions of common terms.

Adjusted gross income — The amount of income used as the basis for determining your eligibility for certain deductions. Specifically, it refers to the balance you obtain after reducing your gross income by certain adjustments and deductions, such as contributions to individual retirement accounts .

Taxable income — For individuals, taxable income is adjusted gross income reduced by certain deductions, adjustments and personal exemptions. It is the amount you use as the base to calculate your tax liability.

Marginal tax rate — The tax rate at which each additional dollar of income over a specific ceiling is taxed. For example, under the new tax law, married individuals filing jointly are subject to a marginal tax rate of 36 percent on taxable income in excess of $140,000.

Capital gains tax — The tax paid on the gain realized on the sale or exchange of a capital asset, such as stocks and bonds.

Luxury tax — A 10 percent excise tax that applies to luxury cars valued at $30,000 or more for 1993. The new tax law repealed the luxury tax on equipment installed after 1990 to help disabled people operate a vehicle. It also did away with the luxury tax on big-ticket purchases of boats, aircraft, jewelry, and furs.

Casualty loss — Casualty losses result from a sudden, unexpected or unusual event, such as hurricane or flood. Within certain limits, personal casualty losses are deductible from your adjusted gross income.

Child and dependent care credit — A credit of up to 30 percent of the expenses you incur for care of a qualified dependent when the expenditures make it possible for you to work.

Dependent — For tax purposes, dependents are individuals whom you support financially and who meet certain other requirements, such as relationship, residency and income tests.

Dependency exemption — A fixed deduction that you may claim for any individual who qualifies as your dependent. For 1993, each exemption is worth $2,350.

Earned income credit— A credit of up to $3,370 is available to lower-income taxpayers. The 1993 tax law expanded the credit to include some childless couples as well as those with children.

Itemized deductions— Deductions from your adjusted gross income for such items as medical expenses, state and local taxes, charitable contributions, unreimbursed employee business expenses, moving expenses and casualty and theft losses. In most cases, taxpayers whose total itemized deductions exceed the standard deduction can itemize their deductions.

Miscellaneous itemized deductions — These include certain unreimbursed job and business expenses, expenses directly connected with the production of income and fees for tax preparation services.

Moving expense deduction— A deduction for certain expenses necessitated by an employment-related job transfer, provided that the distance between the taxpayer's new job and former home is at least 35 miles farther than the distance between the taxpayer's old job and the former residence. For tax years beginning in 1994, the distance test is increased from 35 to 50 miles.

Standard deduction — A deduction that may be claimed by those who choose not to itemize deductions on their tax return. For more information, consult an accountant or another tax adviser.

Avoid these common tax filing foul-ups

Internal Revenue Service

Q: I am preparing my income tax return and I don't want to make mistakes. What are some of the more common errors that I should double check for before I mail my return?

A: Some of the more common errors, plus tips for avoiding them, are:

✔ Math errors — Mistakes are sometimes made in figuring total income, taxable income, balance due or refund amounts. Double check your math. Rounding off amounts to the nearest dollar helps. See the tax instructions for rounding off.

✔ Omitting information — Processing a return is often held up when the Internal Revenue Service must ask for missing tax schedules or missing return information, such as a spouse's Social Security number.

After you complete your return, review each line and make sure that if a line applies to you, you have given all the information needed. Check to make sure you have attached all necessary schedules and forms to support your income, deductions and credits. Verify that the filer's name and Social Security number are correctly written on each form and schedule.

Check to be sure that the correct address appears on the first page of the return. Sign and date the return. On a joint return, both husband and wife must sign and date the return. Social Security number, daytime phone number, and tax year with the number of the form being filed ("1993 Form 1040") should be written on your check or money order if tax is owed.

✔ Overlooking the earned income credit — This credit can get you a refund, even if you owe no tax and had no income tax withheld from your pay. Generally, if you have earned income of less than $23,050 for 1993 and have one or more qualifying children, you may be able to claim the credit.

Check the instructions in your tax package and double check all entries on the earned income credit schedule. Be sure to attach the schedule to your tax return.

✔ Overlooking the age or blindness box on your return — If you or your spouse are filing a joint return, are age 65 or older or are blind, put a check in each box on your return that applies. Generally, if you use the standard deduction, you get an additional amount for each box you check.

✔ Taking an incorrect standard deduction — Remember that the standard deduction varies according to filing status, age and whether you are blind. Special rules apply if you can be claimed as someone's dependent. Check the instructions in your tax package.

Q: I may be moving soon. Do I need to do anything to get my refund forwarded to me?

A: Yes. In addition to notifying your post office, notify the IRS by sending in Form 8822, "Change of Address." As soon as you move, fill out the form and send it to the IRS center where you filed your return.

IRS gives income info

Internal Revenue Service

Q: I received unemployment for about three months in 1993. Do I have to report my unemployment compensation on my tax return?

A: Unemployment compensation is taxable and must be reported on either Form 1040 or 1040A, "U.S. Individual Income Tax Return." You cannot file Form 1040EZ, "Income Tax Return for Single Filers with No Dependents," if you received unemployment compensation during the tax year.

Q. In 1993, my husband contributed to a 401(k) plan at work. We were told that the wages that went into the plan would not be taxable. Where do we deduct his contribution on our tax return?

A: You do not need to deduct your husband's contributions. His employer has already taken them out of the taxable portion reported on Form W-2, "Wage and Tax Statement." The taxable portion of wages, tips and other compensation contained in box 10, does not include payments into a 401 (k) plan.

Q: Last year, I worked a regular job but on weekends and evenings I repaired cars for friends and made $3,700 in extra income. Do I have to report this extra income?

A: Yes. It is self-employment income and must be reported. You figure your taxable amount on Schedule C or C-EZ (Form 1040), "Profit or Loss from Business." Compute any self-employment Social Security tax on Schedule SE (Form 1040), "Self-Employment Tax." Both schedules are attached to Form 1040 when you file your income taxes.

CID 'on to' common fraudulent practices

Army News Service

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — John Wayne's face stares sternly from beneath a camouflaged Marine Corps helmet, the chin strap dangling loose. "Life is tough," reads the poster, "but it's tougher if you're stupid."

With the Army's drawdown, life sometimes can be tough for soldiers and family members. As bases close, families can suffer financial stress from permanent changes of station.

But this stress shouldn't lead soldiers to do something stupid, like stealing from the government.

The U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Command, in Falls Church, Va., revealed some ways soldiers have tried to defraud the government during do-it-yourself moves, known as DITY moves.

The information was released in a criminal intelligence report to CID offices Armywide to alert investigators to the soldiers' methods.

All the following cases resulted in a soldier's arrest. Each soldier thought he could get away with the crime. Names and places have been omitted.

A soldier received permanent change of station orders and presented them to the finance office to receive advance pay for a DITY move. The orders were later rescinded, but the soldier never paid back the money.

"Soldiers who receive money from the government for moves must understand that the funds are to be used only for allowable expenses related to that move," said Chief Warrant Office 3 Steven Gilbert, a special agent at CID Headquarters.

"There is no such thing as 'free money,' " he said. "Pay vouchers must be settled with the finance office within the time limit stated. Failure to do so can result in a criminal investigation."

Altered truck-rental agreements are a common ploy. One soldier altered the cargo weight ticket for his rental truck by changing the weight from less than 2 tons to more than 4 tons. But a transportation clerk got suspicious because the truck was a mini pick-up.

Altered truck-rental agreements are a common ploy. One soldier altered the cargo weight ticket for his rental truck by changing the weight from less than 2 tons to more than 4 tons.

Another soldier altered a friend's rental agreement and presented it as his own. He also altered the weight ticket and used tickets from a previous move instead of current tickets.

"Most alterations are very obvious," said Special Agent Nicholas Seibert of the Fort Stewart, Ga., CID office. "We find most of them simply by talking to DITY move clerks."

Since clerks review hundreds of forms each year, fraudulent documents are easily noticed.

"The U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Laboratory has a very advanced capability to examine documents for evidence of tampering," said Lt. Col. B.E. Pate, the laboratory's commander.

"We can uncover extremely sophisticated forgeries. The average soldier simply doesn't have the skills or tools to alter a document that will fool a professional examiner."

One soldier presented a DITY move claim showing he had moved his household goods more than 1,000 miles in only 16 hours. A review of the rental contract showed the actual distance was less than 200 miles.

"Cases such as these are easy to solve," Seibert said. "Another kind of offense we sometimes see is done by soldiers on their (discharge) move. They claim payment for a move clear across the country, but ask the finance office to mail the check to a local address."

As a civilian, a discharged soldier can be prosecuted by the Department of Justice for defrauding the government.

"Any soldier contemplating defrauding the government should consider that he almost certainly does not have an original idea that auditors and investigators haven't seen before," Gilbert said. "We apprehend soldiers for schemes that have been tried unsuccessfully many times. There are no new crimes, just new criminals."

Don't try to enrich yourself at the government's expense. It's stupid, and will make your life even tougher, officials said.

Kelly McGillis displays 'Pride and Madness'

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

In hit movies, she's been the leading lady to Tom Cruise and Harrison Ford ... but on TV this week, she's clearly the leading villainess.

SPOTLIGHT

Though Kelly McGillis made her name through such popular mid-1980s films as "Top Gun" and "Witness," she hasn't been a constant screen presence since, often opting to concentrate on her domestic life as a Key West, Fla.-based wife and mother instead.

However, she has the pivotal role in Sunday and Tuesday's fact-based new CBS drama "In the Best of Families: Marriage, Pride and Madness," based on Jerry Bledsoe's book "Bitter Blood."

The actress plays Susie Sharp Newsom, a spoiled Southern belle whose failed marriage to a gentle dentist (Keith Carradine) sends her into a potentially lethal furor upon their divorce.

While maintaining a public facade of what she deems to be "perfection," she vengefully determines to destroy his life, teaming with her moody cousin (Harry Hamlin) in her efforts to bring about his downfall. Directed by Emmy-winner Jeff Bleckner ("Hill Street Blues"), the miniseries also features Holland Taylor ("The Powers That Be"), Jayne Brook ("Sirens"), Ken Jenkins ("Homefront") and Elizabeth Wilson ("9 to 5").

"Part of why I did this was (for the chance) to play somebody awful," McGillis said, "and I also liked the moral of the tale. It's a story about taking responsibility, since everyone who knew these people knew that something was wrong, yet nobody stepped in and did anything about it. Thereby, this tragedy happened. On a social level, I think this is what's going on in the world that we live in now. We have to take responsibility for the quality of life; and, if we see something that needs changing, we have to get involved. Turning a blind eye is not right."

What: 'Pride and Madness'
When: Sunday and Tuesday at 9 p.m. on CBS

In researching the project, McGillis met a professor who had taught the real-life Susie. "He told me some very strange stories about her," McGillis said. "She would go in and rearrange the photographs in his office, and he'd tell her, 'That's really not right (to do).' She would pitch a fit and storm out, then come back five minutes later as if nothing happened."

To a degree, McGillis compares such actions to those of "Gone With the Wind" heroine Scarlett O'Hara, reporting that she watched that classic 1939 movie as part of her preparation for the miniseries.

"I also had to learn a lot about psychiatric disorders," she said, "especially narcissism and what that entails. For Susie, it became the need to have control. This was really fun to do because you could do anything and get away with it. I don't get to play villainesses, or whatever the appropriate word is, except in the theater. It's true that you get typecast in this business, and some people will see me as Amish (as in 'Witness') for the rest of my life."

Orchestra to perform 'Masterpiece Concert'

Columbus Symphony Orchestra

The Columbus Symphony will perform a Masterpiece Concert Saturday at 8 p.m. at the Three Arts Theatre in Columbus.

The concert will be conducted by Maestro George Del Gobbo.

The program will include the Concerto Grosso, Op. 3, No. 3 by Geminiani, the Sibelius Violin Concerto in D Minor featuring violinist Alexander Markov, and Brahms' Symphony No. 2.

Markov is "an artist who, even at the beginning of his career, is already at a point that many never reach." Markov combines technical command with interpretation in his performances as recitalist and orchestral soloist.

The winner of the Gold Medal at the 1982 Paganini International Violin Competition, his recording of the 24 Paganini Caprices, Op. 1 was released on compact disc in 1990 by Erato and has recently been released on a video disc.

The video disc is the first to be made of the complete opus and has been televised in France, Germany and Luxembourg and is scheduled to by televised in England, Switzerland and Italy.

Awarded a Avery Fisher Career Grant in 1987, Markov has conducted a number of performances in North America, including his New York debut recital at Carnegie Hall, appearances with Christoph Eschenbach conducting the Mostly Mozart Festival Orchestra at Avery Fisher Hall, and two recitals at the 92nd Street Y.

Highlights of recent seasons include a recital at the Ambassador Auditorium in Pasadena; performances at the Vienna Musikverein; a United States tour with the Jerusalem Symphony Orchestra; concerts with the symphony orchestras of Baltimore, Houston, San Diego, Cincinnati, Milwaukee, Edmonton and Seattle; a tour of the Far East; and concerts in France, Italy, Finland, Portugal and Germany.

Born in Moscow in 1963, Markov began violin studies with his father, concert violinist Albert Markov.

By the time he was 9 years old, he was already appearing as a soloist with orchestras and performing double concertos with his father.

Markov emigrated to the United States with his parents in 1976; he received his U.S. citizenship in 1982.

In addition to the Avery Fisher Grant and the Gold Medal in the Paganini Competition, Markov was the winner of the 1977 Juilliard Competition, the 1979 Waldo Mayo Award, and the 1980 Los Angeles National Debut Competition.

Tickets are $11.50 to $17.50 for adults and $5 to $9 for students and are available at the Columbus Symphony office located in the lower level of the Barnett Bank on First Avenue or at the Three Arts Theatre the day of the performance.

Special discounts are available for advanced purchases for groups of 10 or more. Tickets are also available over the phone at 323-5059.

Black-tie event kicks off gourmet dinner series

Columbus Symphony Women's Assoc.

The 1994 Gourmet Dinner Series, "A Taste of the Symphony," will kick off with a gala black tie dinner Jan. 28.

Sponsored by the Columbus Symphony Women's Association, the event features a wide array of dinners and parties for a broad spectrum of the community.

The dinner series will kick off with a gala black tie dinner Jan. 28 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Donald M. Leebern Jr., and the final dinner will be a progressive dinner party at the backwaters May 28, hosted by Mr. and Mrs. Mike Alexander, Mr. and Mrs. W. Reynolds Bickerstaff, and Dr. and Mrs. John Avant.

A number of special family-type events have been scheduled this year, including an afternoon at Glamour Shots, an "Easter Eggstravaganza, a Father-Daughter Game Day, and a Teddy Bear Tea for Grandmother and Me.

There will be dinners with Italian, Spanish, Cuban, Irish and Caribbean themes. Outdoor events will include Maine lobster by the lake, a walk in the Callaway Memorial Forest, a tennis tournament followed by lunch, dinner and a skeet shoot.

For more information, contact the Columbus Symphony Office at 323-5059.

Atlanta ballet presents benefit performance

Columbus Symphony Orchestra

The Atlanta Ballet will present a benefit performance for the Columbus Symphony Orchestra Jan. 22 at 8 p.m. in the Three Arts Theatre.

The company will present a repertoire of four one-act ballets in a two-hour program: Brahms Intermezzo, Minkus Pas de Trois from Paquita, Dvorak Winborne and Vivaldi-Corelli Square Dance.

Eliot Feld, a contemporary choreographer, set his signature piece Intermezzo to the music of Johannes Brahms. A series of duets and ensembles for six dancers, the ballet is characterized by lifts and just a hint of melancholy.

The Russian-born Balanchine takes an over-the-shoulder look at America's folk dance roots. Square Dance makes a series of witty parallels between the movements in classical ballet and the steps used in square dancing.

In addition to this performance, dance classes with Robert Barnett, artistic director, and Tim Cronin, ballet master, will be at the Three Arts Theatre on the day of the performance. A senior class (ages 14 and over) will be from 9 to 10:30 a.m. and a junior class (ages 11 to 13) will be from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

Enrollment for the master classes is limited. Parents and students may observe the classes for a nominal fee if they do not wish to actively participate. Registration forms and price information are available at all local dance schools.

Ticket prices for the performance are $20 and $15 for adults and $8 for children 12 and under, and are available at the CSO office located in the lower level of the Barnett Bank on First Avenue or at the Three Arts Theatre the day of the performance. You may also purchase tickets over the phone at 323-5059.

soap update

ALL MY CHILDREN: Derek realized Danielle was missing and accused Lucas, who expressed shock and insisted the police be called. Ruth defended Grace when Trevor interrogated her. Dixie wondered if Brooke was lying about her pregnancy. Palmer said as a patient's advocate she could check the files. Tad discussed Brooke with Dr. Khademy and later shared his knowledge with Dixie and Edmund. Wait to see: Brooke is startled by a revelation.

ANOTHER WORLD: Cass and Felicia found Kyle's body at KBAY. Ryan identified the four major suspects: Lorna, Victor, Morgan and Felicia. Later, he was upset when each of the four people had the same alibi. Paulina reluctantly agreed to let Jake help search for Rachel. Carl, meanwhile, took Rachel to an out-of-town art dealer whom he encouraged to put on a show of Rachel's works. Wait to see: Rachel and Carl make an emotional discovery.

AS THE WORLD TURNS: Duncan was shocked to see Shannon, the wife he thought had died. Holden rescued Lily after her car skidded into a snow drift. Later, Damian arrived at the farmhouse to find them together. Royce insisted on meeting with his alleged twin despite Craig's doubts. Lucinda, meanwhile, learned that her detective had located the real twin. Lisa fainted when she saw Shannon. After Duncan told Jessica about Shannon, she worried about the legal status of their marriage. Wait to see: Lily is startled by her confrontation with her stalker.

BOLD AND THE BEAUTIFUL: Thorne warned Ridge about spending too much time with Brooke and the children. In Scotland, Taylor told Damon he was wrong to blame James for Mary's death, pointing out that she chose to save the baby over her own life. She also explained James invented an imaginary mother to help him get through childhood, not to torment Damon. Father and son made up and embraced. Wait to see: Thorne pushes Macy into making a decision he may regret.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES: Tony told Kristen he had a dark side, but she assured him her love was unconditional. When Stefano refused to help, Tony told her he would do what he could himself. Stefano had Peter push up the blood tests for baby Isabelle, sending Sami into a panic. After recognizing Vivian as the bearded man in the photos, Kate called Pine Haven and anonymously tipped them off about Vivian getting out on New Year's Eve. Wait to see: Tony makes a discovery about John.

GENERAL HOSPITAL: Kevin wangled a job at General Hospital, while his twin, Ryan, faked a psychotic episode after learning about Felicia's impending marriage. Bobbie saw Tony's jealous reaction to her scheming flirtation with Damian. Brenda picked up the call Lois made to Ned, leaving Lois with a false impression of the situation. Jagger thrilled Karen with a heartfelt offer. Wait to see: Laura makes a decision about the house's previous owners.

GUIDING LIGHT: Billy and Vanessa were stunned when Ed revealed Roger was alive and that Jenna had lost her and Roger's baby. Henry assured a worried Vanessa that she was strong enough to deal with problems involving Billy's possible return to drinking and Roger's potential claim on Peter. Later, when Roger held a gun on Billy and demanded the return of Peter, Billy lunged for him, causing the gun to go off. Wait to see: Holly makes a desperate decision about Roger.

LOVING: Steffi realized Casey still loved Ally and she turned to food to ease her emotional pain. When she learned Egypt wouldn't divorce him, Ava broke her engagement to Alex. Gwyn quit Alden Enterprises when Clay insisted on financing Tess' advertising agency. Trucker said no to Curtis' bid to be a partner in the Rodeo Bar. Buck, however, managed to pressure Curtis into taking him on as a partner instead. Wait to see: Egypt creates more problems for Alex and Ava.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE: Viki and Sloan found Dorian's barely legible confession that she murdered Victor. They called Victor's former nurse, Ethel, and intimated they could prove she was an accessory. They then tapped her phone and heard her tell Dorian they needed to talk. Meanwhile, Blair told Dorian about Viki and Sloan's investigation. Wait to see: Dorian is about to have another bombshell explode around her.

YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS: With Hope becoming more important in Victor's life, Ashley suggested Jack push for closer ties with Nikki. When Victor was unable to find Cole to tell him he's his father, he met with Nikki and said that although he cared for her, he didn't love her. He also asked her to stay away from Hope. Jill was concerned when John voiced his fear that he might not have too many years with his new baby, Billy. Wait to see: Nikki gets upsetting news.

No representation is allowed about the quality of the legal service to be performed or the expertise of the lawyer performing such service. No fee unless claim won refers only to fees charged by the attorney. Such contingent fees are not permitted in all types of cases. Court costs and other additional expenses of legal action usually must be paid by the client.

pet of the week

This playful mixed-breed puppy is just one of many cats and dogs available for adoption on post.

For more information, contact the Veterinary Services Office in Building 265 at 545-1127. Hours of operation are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:30 am. and 12:45 to 3 p.m. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

If you have lost a pet, check the stray impoundment facility in Building 283.

Stray pets are given three working days to be claimed from the time they are picked up by animal control personnel.

If the pets are not claimed, they become government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Pet owners are reminded that they are required to register their pets and update their records when changes occur.

Veterinary Services also urges post personnel who are on leave or temporary duty to consider leaving their pet with a boarding kennel rather than entrusting the animal to the care of a neighbor.

A pet's safety and proper care can be ensured at a kennel. James Cyree, veterinary technician.

upcoming events

Columbus College — Columbus College will present a program featuring Maya Angelou Jan. 21 at 12:30 p.m. in the Fine Arts Hall auditorium.

Angelou is an author, poer, educator, actress, playwright, civil rights activist, producer and director.

Free tickets will be avavilable to the public Wednesday. For more information, call Columbus college's Student Union at 568-2404.

Indian Mounds — The museum at historic Etowah Indian Mounds will be closed Monday to Jan. 31 for renovations.

Etowah Indian Mounds is located south of Cartersville, Ga., off Interstate 75. From 1000 to 1500 A.D., Native Americans used the mounds as platforms for temples. Today, it is a registered state historic site operated by the Georgia Department of Natural Resources.

For more information about the mounds, call (404) 387-3747.

Team 162 reunion — Team 162, Red Markers and the society of the Vietnamese Airborne will have a reunion June 23 through 26. For information, write to retired Master Sgt. Otis Amick, 6060 Canterbury Drive, Columbus, Ga. 31902, or call 323-4028.

Club naming contest — The Hidden Door Enlisted Club is sponsoring a contest for all military members corporal and below to name the new enlisted club. The winner will receive a $100 Savings Bond. Suggestions should be submitted to the Junior Enlisted Advisory Club Council, the Community Operations Division or the Hidden Door Club manager.

Army aviators to meet — The Army Aviation Association of America's annual convention will be April 20 to 24 at the Cervantes Convention Center in St. Louis, Mo.

For more information, write to AAAA, 49 Richmondville Ave., Westport, Conn. 06880-2000, or call (203) 226-8184.

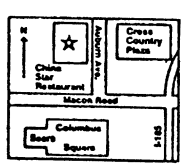
Timberwolf reunion — The sixth annual reunion of the Atlantic Timberwolf Association will be the weekend of May 13 in Raleigh, N.C.

These combat veterans are members of the 104th Infantry Timberwolf Division, which led the fight to defeat the German armies in 1945.

For information, contact Roger L. Pendleton, at 8909 Cromwell Drive, Springfield, Va. 22512.

101st Airborne Division Association — The 49th annual reunion of the 101st Airborne Division Association will be July 6 to 9 in Nashville, Tenn. The week will coincide with the "Week of the Eagles" at Fort Campbell, Ky.

Members of the association, their families and friends will have the opportunity to attend the division parade July 7.



On July 9, members will visit the 101st Airborne Division (Air Assault) and see demonstrations.

TRADOC creates task force to identify adverse effects of DOWNSIZING

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Training and Doctrine Command Headquarters has created a special task force to identify any adverse effects that downsizing may have on soldiers and their families.

Dubbed the Hawkeye Committee, it is made up of designated personnel from each TRADOC post who observe and report on soldiers' conditions and perceptions to headquarters. Garrison Sgt. Maj. Ireland D. Pulley is Fort Benning's "hawkeye."

"My job is to assess the impact of budget cuts and downsizing on soldiers at Fort Benning and report the results to the commanding general and to TRADOC headquarters," Pulley said. "Soldiers trust their leaders to provide them with the things they need, and we need to make sure we are doing our job by finding out what soldiers think."

Among the perceptions that Pulley has identified among soldiers on post is that they feel they will have to pull more details because of downsizing, and noncommissioned officers feel that valuable training time will be diverted to performing such details.

Concern over reduced tuition assistance is another issue with soldiers, he said.

"We can't afford to weaken the morale of our soldiers," Pulley said. Although the Hawkeye Committee itself only gathers information, the information is relayed to those who have the power to make changes: Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White and TRADOC Commander Gen. Frederick M. Franks.

In fact, Pulley said, Fort Benning is doing more for the quality of life of soldiers than ever before.

"Improving soldier quality of life is one of our top priorities," Pulley said.

Fort Benning has several programs in place that are helping to accomplish quality of life improvement including a network of advisory councils for Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers, the Post Exchange and Commissary, the enlisted, noncommissioned officers and officers' clubs and the commanding general.

Also, a needs assessment survey was conducted in 1992 and a single soldier living community advisory board was established to survey the post's living conditions and set goals for improvement.

"This is an installation where people at the top really care," Pulley said. "A lot of times there is a perception at the bottom of the chain of command that the top doesn't care, but I can honestly say, without any reservations, that soldiers at Fort Benning can trust their leaders to provide them with a high standard for the quality of life."

Benning honors civil rights leader

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

The event commemorated the anniversary of King's 64th birthday, and included performances by two choirs and a rendition of King's well known "I Have a Dream" speech.

"I am delighted to see such a great celebration in honor of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.," said guest speaker Maj. Gen. Wallace C. Arnold, assistant deputy chief of staff for personnel, Department of the Army.

"Martin Luther King personifies the best of America," he said. "He taught us the enduring power of love, and that justice, though it might be delayed, can never be denied.

"He had a constructive philosophy of hard work and hope, which sought to replace generations of hatred and distrust with cooperation and understanding," said Arnold, quoting President Bill Clinton.

"He believed that all people can work and live together in peace and he showed us ways of achieving those goals.

"We have to examine ourselves ... we have to recognize and manage biases," Arnold said.

"His dream is much more of a living reality today than it was in 1968, and that is because we have tried to make it that way.

"But we are being attacked by indifference. We have to counteract that indifference," Arnold said.

"Making King's dream a living reality and continuing his legacy is up to you and to me," Arnold said.

King's dream, as he outlined it in the speech he gave from the steps of the Lincoln Memorial in 1963, was brought to life in a rendition performed by Staff Sgt. Charles Dixon of the 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment.

As Dixon repeated the things King said in his "I Have a Dream" speech — things like, "We will speed up the day when all of God's children will be able to join hands together" and "Let freedom ring," — members of the audience cheered and gave a standing ovation.

Both the Canaan Baptist Church Choir, with soloists Ida Crowell and Sylvia DeLouch, and the Finance Choir, with soloists Gladys Daise and the Rev. J.W. Williams, had the audience clapping and singing along while they performed "I Feel Like Praising Him," "Showers of Blessing," "I Still Have Joy" and "Victory Is Mine."

CID identifies burned body

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Results of an autopsy, forensic investigation and comparison of dental records completed Jan. 14 have identified the body found in a burning truck in the Sand Hill area of post Jan. 11.

The victim was Helen S. Book, 69, of Columbus. She was the wife of deceased Master Sgt. Tillman Book.

An unknown motorist notified authorities of a vehicle on fire, parked along 3rd Infantry Division Road just north of 2nd Infantry Division Road at approximately 9:25 p.m. Jan. 11. Military Police and Fire Department personnel were dispatched to the scene.

After the Fire Department arrived, the vehicle fire was extinguished.

During the initial examination, apparent human remains were discovered in the bed of the burnt Toyota pickup truck.

The victim was pronounced dead at the scene at 11:05 p.m.

A joint homicide investigation is being conducted by the U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Division and the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

SOA to host open house for sponsors

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The School of the Americas is hosting an open house today at 6 p.m. for all current and prospective Hosts of Latin Americans, or HOLA, sponsors from the local community.

The open house, in appreciation of the support given to the school, will be at Pratt Hall, Building 35.

The sponsorship program is for new arrivals to the school and Fort Benning.

The program matches sponsors and Latin Americans students in an effort to provide the students with helping hands, a friendly face and assistance in getting settled in the United States.

Those interested in becoming a sponsor for the school can contact Cecilia Alexander at 545-1285.

Transportation assistant receives award

Employee gets recognized by Civilian Injury Reduction Team for safety during deployments

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

The Civilian Injury Reduction Team presented an award Wednesday afternoon to Jose L. Hernandez, transportation assistant for the Directorate of Logistics.

Chief of Staff Col. Burnet R. Quick presented the Commanding General's Safety Award to Hernandez for his duties during Operation Ocean Venture and Bright Star. He provided leadership for the safe deployment and redeployment of equipment at the port of Jacksonville in Florida.

The award is presented quarterly to a civilian employee who does his or her job safely and with a positive impact on others.

The mission required the movement of more than 1,100 pieces of equipment, 34 helicopters, 114 sea-land containers and 100 trucks. No injuries or property damage were incurred during the shipment phases of either exercise.

Stephanie Krawczyk/Special to The Bayonet

Jose L. Hernandez receives his award from Col. Burnet R. Quick.

"To do this (mission) without injury is hard," said Quick as he presented the award. "We are proud of you and all the things you did."

Hernandez has previously won awards for safety including two civilian achievement medals for his involvement in the movement of equipment and personnel to operations Desert Shield and Storm. "This is a great honor," said Hernandez of his most recent award.

The Civilian Injury Reduction Team was developed in 1991. The group is comprised of representatives from every major directorate on post with a goal to reduce workplace injury and its associated costs, according to Jim Ozley, Occupational Safety and Health professional and CIRT member.

Team representatives conduct safety assessment of Fort Benning organizations and advise managers of weaknesses and strengths found within their system.

Representatives for the CIRT approach their jobs as private consultants to organizations instead of as inspectors, according to Ozley. "Our mission is to fix problems, not to fix blame," he said.

The team was responsible for a savings of more than $1 million in medical and compensation costs in 1993, according to CIRT officials.

Too easy to 'drive' people crazy

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

commentary

It used to be that when you were in your car, you were pretty safe unless you got into an accident.

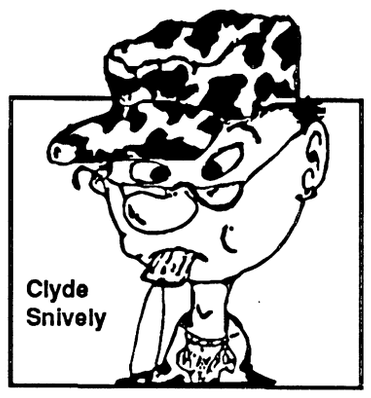
No more.

Now, depending on what kind of car you've got and what neighborhood you're in, you're subject to being a victim of a carjacking, car kidnapping, whatever they call it when a car is stolen out from under you.

Most of us on The Bayonet staff don't have that worry. In fact, the Professor would volunteer to have her car stolen. Only problem is the carjackers wouldn't get very far before the dumb thing died.

Short blonde lady would also like to get her fishbowl, er car nabbed. That thing fills up with water in the rain. She blows headlights because the headlights get submerged. Of course, she doesn't need the headlights because she can't see where she's going anyway since the windows get sopping wet on the inside and need to be wiped constantly with a towel.

No, we're talking nice cars, like the ones Madame Editor drives or the people in the front office. Not the clap traps we reporters run with the help of chewing gum and baling wire.



But, this isn't the only danger to drivers. Another danger is the crazies out on the road who also happen to be armed.

The other day some normally rational gent was driving along the highway with his girl friend. He got cut off.

This offended his male ego. "No one's going to cut me off with my date as a witness; she might think less of me."

So he took up pursuit of the offending car, pulled up alongside the other driver and expressed his admiration for the other driver's driving skills via the international sign language that clearly indicated that he thought the other driver was certainly a knight of the road and a blessing to humankind.

The other driver responded to the message by pulling out a handgun and blowing away the guy's girl. (Ladies, if your male friend wants to impress you with his machoness by pulling such a stunt, make sure he pulls up along the right side of the other driver so he can absorb the bullet instead of you).

These antics have a significant impact on the way we must act when we're on the road.

Remember how we used to enjoy tailgating and flashing drivers holding up traffic in the left lane?

Or what great delight we took in tapping the brake pedal to see what the reaction of the jerk who was tailgating us would be when he or she saw the brake light come on?

Remember how, at stop lights, we would playfully catch up to the idiot that couldn't find his or her turn signals or who pulled out in front of us only to practically park in the middle of the road and roll down our windows to give the offending cretin a piece of our minds?

Can't do that anymore. You never know when the young stud or even the grandma might be "packing."

Now we can't even rubber neck to check out the chick in the red sports car. Someone might take offense and blow our eyes out with a .44 magnum.

Now when we drive, we need to keep both hands on the steering wheel, look straight ahead, avoid making eye contact with anyone and make sure we drive submissively — -"you wanna pass, sure go ahead. I'm pulling over as fast as I can," "You want to hog the left lane, no problem; I've got until Christmas to get home."

Yep, life's no fun anymore. Too many deranged citizens out there with hair triggers on their emotions and no trigger guards on their guns.

Golfer says carts need protection too

Did you know you can pass on curves on post? Just check that part of 1st Division Road that runs through the golf course.

There is no yellow stripe to preclude passing on more than one curve.

Additionally, pedestrians and deer are protected by signs along the road, but no such protection is afforded golf carts (and passengers).

Even the pedestrian crossing stripes are illegible and all but invisible to car drivers and often ignored or simply not seen.

(Having played the golf course — Pineside — since 1962, it has been my observation that many more golf carts cross this road on this portion than deer.)

Norman L. Williamson
U.S. Army retired

Military Police response:

The Military Police Activity agrees in part with the writer. Crossing zones need to be repainted on 1st Division Road and the signing could be improved.

We will work through the Installation Traffic Safety Council to review this area to improve public safety.

No passing zones, however, are established based on sight distances prescribed by the "Uniform Traffic Control Devices" manual.

Passing on curves is permitted throughout this country when sufficient line of sight for oncoming vehicles is present.

Guest House visitor complains of service

This holiday season, someone crossed the United States to enjoy the change of year "Georgia style" with yours truly, arriving Dec. 31 to stay three days.

For the price and proximity, I bought three consecutive nights (space available) at Guest Housing, the Fort Benning Hotel.

(This turned out to be) my misfortune and my embarrassment.

Only on the third day was the room serviced by the employees. That happened as a knock on the door before checkout time waking me up.

The friendly faced employee, who I suppose has never stayed in a hotel, asked me for soiled towels. I complied, although at worst, it was an invasion of my privacy and, at best, an annoyance.

So, during my stay, linen, towels, coffee and garbage — which I may add attracted a baker's dozen or so roaches that I had the pleasure of destroying — had not been tended to.

I expect these things to be taken care of and included in the price.

Instead of a refund, I ask (that the problem with) management be resolved, although purchasing one night at a time should ensure a refurbished room.

Spc. Scott Bernabo

Fort Benning Billeting response:

We are sorry your stay with us was unpleasant and not as you would have expected.

You registered on a holiday, Dec. 31, at 10:58 p.m. The bottom of your registration form, which you signed, clearly states that maid service is only available on weekdays and to call the front desk if service is needed on weekends and holidays.

Our front desk staff is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week. To avoid any inconvenience to our guests, our housekeepers put additional towels and linen in the rooms for weekend arrivals.

Space-available guests are housed for a maximum of seven days at one time, with payment in advance. Upon checking in, you made a cash payment for three days. This is inconsistent with your statement of only being able to purchase one night at a time.

We are sorry you were inconvenienced by a knock on your door from one of our housekeepers. However, you did not have a "Do Not Disturb" sign on your door and our housekeeper was only doing his or her job.

We hope this clears up any misunderstandings you may have encountered. If we can be of any further assistance, please feel free to contact our customer service chief at 689-0067, Ext. 2506.

Army's chief congratulates post for being ACOE finalist

Congratulations on the selection of Fort Benning as a finalist in the 1994 Army Communities of Excellence awards competition.

Your community's ability to provide excellent services in excellent facilities embodies the essence of the ACOE program and Total Army Quality as well as uncompromising support to the men and women of America's Army.

Your hard work has created an environment in which soldiers, civilians and families attain their highest aspirations for personal growth and professional achievement.

Please convey to every member of the Fort Benning community my enormous pride in your collective accomplishments and in your success in this competition.

It has truly been a team effort, and I thank you for a job well done.

Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan
U.S. Army chief of staff

Environmentalists preserve

Wood Ducks

By Jeff Brooks
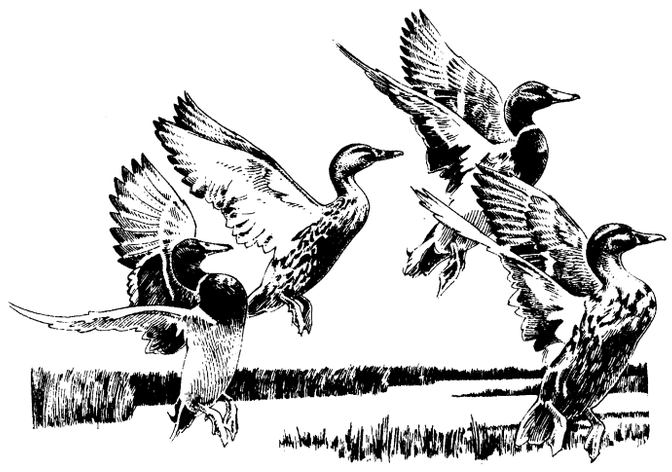
Natural Resources Management Branch

The Natural Resources Management Branch has placed more than 150 wood duck boxes in wetland areas throughout the installation in an effort to preserve wood ducks.

Boxes are evaluated annually to determine nesting success. Over the last 10 years, nesting success has varied from 15 to 48 percent.

By maintaining wetland areas and providing adequate nesting habitat, wildlife biologists can provide wood ducks for hunters and bird watchers alike.



Most ducks found wintering in the southern United States have migrated south from breeding areas in the northern United States and Canada.

The wood duck breeds and overwinters in the Southeast.

Often called, "the most beautiful duck in the world" the male (drake) wood duck is easily identified by the crested head, white throat and plumage of iridescent greens, blues and purple. The female (hen) wood duck is drab compared to the male, but she still has the characteristic crested head.

Wood ducks nest in natural tree cavities or in manmade nest boxes near beaver ponds or other wetland areas.

In Georgia, nesting may begin as early as February. However, the peak of nesting occurs in April and May. An average of 10 to 12 eggs are laid. The eggs hatch in about 30 days and young will leave the nest after 24 hours.

In the early 1900s, wood ducks were on the verge of extinction. Loss of habitat through draining wetlands and removal of the large hardwoods that served as nesting sites caused the greatest problems for the species.

Attempts to increase wood duck numbers began in the 1930s with the establishment of artificial nest cavities. Because few areas have sufficient natural cavities, the artificial cavities have been very successful.

Artificial cavities are made from wood (cypress or pine) and placed on a pole four or more feet above the water. Predator guards, conical sheets of metal inverted on the pole to prevent animals, primarily snakes and raccoons, from climbing up to the box and destroying the eggs, are attached to the pole.

Anyone interested in volunteering to assist with the wood duck program can call the Natural Resource Management Branch at 544-6120 or 544-6206.

Museum looks for World War II items

National Infantry Museum

As part of Fort Benning's observance of the 50th anniversary of World War II, the National Infantry Museum has plans to relocate a series of World War II wooden buildings to an area on post near the museum. When this long-range program is complete, the buildings will be open to the public.

The buildings include a two-story barracks, mess hall, orderly room and supply room. The plan also calls for saving and relocating a chapel and the famous Patton Headquarters, which stands at Sand Hill.

When the project is complete, the buildings will be furnished and otherwise outfitted as a young soldier would have seen the buildings in the early days of World War II.

In order to complete this plan, the staff of the museum is looking for items that, over the years, have been sold through Property Disposal or have otherwise left the control of Uncle Sam. Cast-iron, potbellied stoves, big aluminum cook pots, baking pans and even 32-gallon galvanized garbage cans, which may date from the war years, are needed. Army folding cots and old mattresses for the cotsare also needed. Condition or cleanliness of the mattresses is not important.

Also needed are a number of wooden or fiber footlockers that date to the early 40s. Olive drab towels, large, handleless china cups, sugar bowls and other crockery that is marked USQMC are needed for the display. Old wooden desks, wooden file cabinets and rifle racks are needed to help fill out the buildings.

While the museum may have many of the needed items in its collection, more of the same items are needed.

Anyone with old Army issue items of the type described and willing to give it to Fort Benning is asked to call the National Infantry Museum at 545-2958.

Use shops for repairs — not yard

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The auto craft shops are the proper places to make car repairs, according to U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 210-50.

Maintenance on motor vehicles is not to be done in housing areas; and, although soldiers receive a copy of housing area regulations when they move on post, there always seems to be infractions, said officials.

The USAIC Regulation 210-50 in section IV under General Housekeeping states, "Occupants are not permitted to perform major repairs and maintenance on motor vehicles within the housing areas."

This involves leaving "vehicles on jack stands or to leave component parts apart from the vehicle."

The consequences are that any vehicle found dismantled or abandoned will be impounded by the Military Police with the report of action forwarded to the owner's commander.

Also, inoperable and unlicensed vehicles are not to be parked in the family housing areas.

According to the regulation, no one should do maintenance on their cars in the housing areas.

There are two auto craft shops available for use by soldiers on post. One is on Main Post on Way Street just off Sightseeing Road behind the 75th Ranger Regiment and one is on Kelley Hill on Marne Road.

Two post auto craft shops available

Directorate of Community Activities

People who know how to fix their own cars but do not have the equipment can have all the repair work done or they can do it themselves at Fort Benning's two auto craft shops.

Both the Main Post and Kelley Hill shops have 34 bays for active duty and retired military personnel and their family members to try their hands at auto mechanics.

The Main Post shop is open Wednesday through Sunday while the Kelley Hill shop is open Monday, Tuesday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Each shop has state-of-the-art computerized engine analyzers that help pinpoint possible problems. The modular computer analyzers will make a printout of the status of the engine. The shops also have air conditioning repair and recycling systems as well as an antifreeze recycling system.

Engines and transmissions can be rebuilt through an exchange program with parts dealers in the Columbus area. The shop will contact the dealer and make a trade. The customer pays only for the cost of rebuilding.

For those who want to fix a scratch or a dent, the auto craft shops have a variety of body work equipment. Customers can weld or paint to repair their vehicles.

Instructors are available to help solve problems and provide assistance to those who wish to do their own repairs. Bay fees at the shops are $1 per hour, and equipment use is charged by the hour or by the use.

At Fort Benning, the auto craft shops allows eligible personnel to do the work themselves.

Defense personnel decreases

By Linda Lee
American Forces Information Service

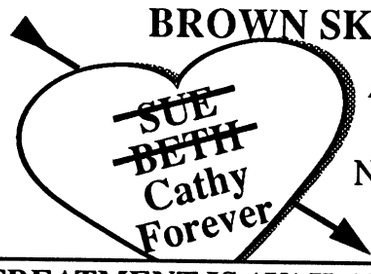
The Defense Department's recently released personnel figures show a continued downward trend begun a few years ago, said DoD personnel officials.

The figures represent the number of individuals on full-time active duty, including the Reserve components, and officer candidates at the three military academies, said DoD personnel officials.

The figures do not include about 70,000 full-time service members funded from Reserve component and Corps of Engineers appropriations.

End of fiscal 1993 figures showed 1,705,422 people on active duty. There were 1,807,177 service members at the end of fiscal 1992.

Army ranks at the end of fiscal 1993 were thinned to 572,423 service members, down from 610,450 last year.



On duty in the Navy at the end of fiscal 1993 were 510,269 people. At the end of fiscal 1992, there were 541,883 individuals serving in the Navy.

There were 178,379 Marines serving at the end of fiscal 1993, compared with 184,529 on active duty in fiscal 1992.

The Air Force ended fiscal 1993 with 444,351 people down from 470,315.

DoD personnel officials said the numbers continue to fall as people retire and voluntarily and involuntarily separate and as the services recruit fewer people.

TRADOC IG to visit

The inspector general for the Training and Doctrine Command, Col. Floyd Perry, will visit Fort Benning Monday to Jan. 28 for an assistance visit.

A team accompanying Perry will visit commanders, directors and activity chiefs and conduct sensing sessions in selected organizations. Soldiers, family members, retirees and civilians will be given the opportunity to file complaints or request assistance with the inspector general at the following locations and times:

• Soldiers and civilians— Wednesday from 3 to 4 p.m. and Thursday from noon to 1 p.m, Building 71, Room 7.

• Retirees — Thursday from 1:15 to 2:45 p.m., Infantry Hall, Room 33.

• Family members — Thursday from 7 to 8 p.m., Family Unit Network Center, Building 359 on Ingersoll Street.

For information, call 545-3961 or 545-6961.

Fort Benning's tax office gearing up for business

Fort Benning's Tax Office will open Jan. 31. The office will be located in Building 2624 in Soldiers' Plaza. Office hours will be 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

The office will have many federal and state tax forms available. Unit tax advisers have been appointed for units throughout post.

Persons having tax questions should see their unit tax advisers first.

Legal Assistance Office personnel will provide free assistance with tax form preparation Feb. 5 from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Post Exchange at the Main Mall. Persons needing assistance should bring all their paperwork and any tax forms they may have received with them, officials said.

Luncheon to recognize outstanding civilians

The Civilian Awards Luncheon will be Thursday from 11:30 a.m. to 1:15 p.m. in the Supper Club at the Fort Benning Officers' Club. The Directorate of Public Works will host the event.

The menu will be stir-fry chicken with noodles, rolls, butter, coffee and tea. The cost is $4.35 per person, and tickets should be obtained by today.

For more information, call Sue O'Dell at 545-2086 or Kathy Watts at 545-2108.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland and range areas will take place Monday through Jan. 30.

If weather permits, the following compartments may be affected: A-12, C-1, G-2, H-2, I-1, I-5, K-8, K-11, M-2, P-1, P-3, A-3, Q-4, Q-6, S-1, U-4, V-1, X-5, Y-1, Z-2 and CC-2.

Burning will occur in pine stands within these compartments to enhance endangered species habitat and training areas.

People using these areas for recreation must vacate before 9:30 a.m. daily.

Training units using compartments adjacent to these areas may experience drift smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while traveling in these areas because of the potential for reduced visibility.

Military clothing to be sold Feb. 4

A military clothing sale will be the first Friday of each month. The next one will be Feb. 4 from 7 a.m. to 2 p.m. in Building 224A on Warehouse Road. Numerous items will be for sale.

For more information, call Charlie C. Wimmer at 545-1972.

Military may apply for SSN on post Feb. 17

Military members who need Social Security numbers for family members may apply at the Main Post Chapel Center next to Doughboy Stadium Feb. 17 from 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

Personnel from the Social Security Administration will be available to receive applications. Documents needed are a certified copy of the person's birth certification and some other type of identification such as school records or shot records.

Legal Assistance Office personnel say every person age 1 or older must have a Social Security number before that person can be claimed as a dependent on a tax return.

Vehicle registration deadline nears

The deadline for 1994 vehicle registration in Chattahoochee County is as follows based on the owner's last name:

• Jan. 31 — A to D
• Feb. 28 — E to K
• March 31 — L to R
• May 2 — S to Z.

There is a $15 penalty per vehicle for failure to register by the deadline.

Payment must be made by cash or check, drawn on a local bank, which includes the soldier's work number and the company commander's name.

To avoid the ad valorem tax, Georgia nonresidents must bring to the office a complete affidavit available from the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, a leave and earnings statement, proof of insurance and the registration fee ($20 for each car or truck and $12 for each trailer).

The vehicle registration office is located at the County Courthouse in Cusseta. Office hours are 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Automotive exams to be administered

The Automotive Service Excellence Examination will be administered May 5, 10 and 12 at Fort Benning test centers.

Eligible soldiers may take three examinations free if they are taken for college credit. There is a $15 per test fee if tests are taken for certification or recertification.

All examinees must pay a $20 registration fee. The deadline to register is March 4 at any post education center.

Education center locations are:

• Main Post Education Center, Building 2602, 545-4863.
• Kelley Hill Education Center, Building 9027, 544-3689.
• Sand Hill Education Center, Building 3245, 544-9961.
• Harmony Church Education Center, Building 4635, 544-6311.

Warrant officer RIF board canceled

The warrant officer reduction in force selection board scheduled to convene in February has been canceled.

Individuals who have questions can call Klaus Bourne of the Adjutant General's Promotion Section at 545-4522.

Thrift Savings Plan open season begins

Thrift Savings Plan open season will be through Jan. 31. TSP updates and TSP-1s have been issued to all administrative offices for distribution to all eligible employees.

All elections must be reviewed in Civilian Personnel by close of business Jan. 31.

Soldiers must make appointments for AER

The Army Emergency Relief is processing clients' requests for assistance on appointment basis. Clients are requested to schedule an appointment and have all required paperwork when reporting to AER.

If you are unable to keep your scheduled appointment, a courtesy call is required. Call 545-2536, 545-7517, 545-4357 or 545-4043.

Legal Assistance outlines services

The Legal Assistance division provides a variety of services for soldiers, and appointments are necessary in many cases.

Estate planning, wills and probate assistance is provided by appointments on Mondays, Wednesdays and Thursdays. Call 545-3281 or 545-3282 for these matters.

All other legal problems, such as landlord, tenant, consumer and military administrative problems, are handled on Tuesdays and Fridays. Appointments are not necessary for these matters.

Clients will be assisted on a first-come, first-served basis, beginning at 8 a.m. on Tuesdays and Fridays. Appointments will not be made by telephone for these type cases, officials said.

Late arrivals may not be seen if the limited number of counseling slots have already been assigned. Legal Assistance personnel urge clients to arrive early to obtain a counseling slot.

Notary services and powers of attorney will continue to be handled on a walk-in basis from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday. No appointment is necessary.

For more information, call 545-3281 or 545-3282.

MPs seek information on excaped prisoner

At approximately 9 p.m. Jan. 18, a prisoner escaped from the U.S. Army Infantry Center detention facility.

The prisoner's name is Pvt. 1 Earnest J. Gill. He was last seen wearing battle dress uniform with no jacket or gloves. He is a black male, 6 feet, 1 inch, 180 pounds and 29 years old. He was placed in pre-trial confinement from Fort McClellan, Ala. for larceny, housebreaking and forgery.

'Legal eagles' offer range of services

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

"To provide professional services in a professional atmosphere is our pledge," said Lt. Col. Andrew Stewart, deputy staff judge advocate.

Stewart said SJA personnel are looking forward to demonstrating their pledge to the Army-level Communities of Excellence Team when it visits in April.

The team will evaluate the quality of Fort Benning's services for consideration for the Commander-in-Chief Award. This is the second year in a row that Fort Benning has been named a first-place winner in the extra large category of the Training and Doctrine Command COE competition.

Stewart said one of the first things the team will notice is the renovation of the courtroom and hallways of Winship Hall, Building 5.

"We want our clients to feel they have just walked into a genuine law office where the quality of the atmosphere is matched by the quality of the services," Stewart said.

The office's preventive law program is just one example of the quality legal service Fort Benning's SJA has to offer, he said. The program included an extensive campaign to educate soldiers on automobile purchasing and financing accomplished through "info-mercials" and newspaper articles.

"We would rather prevent legal problems from happening in the first place than to have to deal with them later," Stewart said. "Young, single soldiers in particular, many of whom have a regular income for the first time, need insight on spending their money wisely and protecting themselves from unscrupulous business practices.

Among the other quality services soldiers and their family members can expect from SJA:

• Fast service for personnel claims. With a backlog reduced to fewer than 33 cases, soldiers can expect to be paid within a few days of filing their claims, regardless of whether the claims are large or small.

• An Affirmative Claims Section recognized as one of the top ten worldwide by the U.S. Army Claims Service that recovered more than $252,000 by collecting money from insurance companies when soldiers were injured and were not at fault.

• A tax program that served more than 9,000 soldiers, family members and retirees in 1993. More than 2,100 returns were electronically filed with a savings to military personnel in excess of $125,000.

• An extensive in-court representation program that includes four Georgia licensed attorneys who represented clients in 146 proceedings in Federal District Court, Juvenile Court, Superior Court and Probate Court.

• A felony prosecution program that successfully prosecuted a murderer and a number of forgers last year.

Stewart said SJA's goal is to set the Army standard.

"We want to continue our quality services, including our facilities upgrade and our preventive law program," Stewart said. "SJA can help make Fort Benning a better place to work and live for all post personnel."

SCORE helps provide transition services

Army Career and Alumni Program

Army Career and Alumni Program representatives were recently invited to discuss the variety of services available to military personnel getting out of the Army and their families through the Service Corps of Retired Executives.

Although ACAP officials were familiar with SCORE, they said they learned a great deal more about the advantages of using their "free" expertise.

SCORE is a must for anyone in business for themselves or for anyone thinking about it, officials said.

SCORE is sponsored by the Small Business Administration and services are free. A nonprofit organization, SCORE has more than 10,000 volunteers nationwide, providing practical advice in a full range of technical and managerial fields.

More than 300,000 small-business people receive counseling or training annually from SCORE members or SCORE workshops — more than 2 1/2 million Americans have received assistance since SCORE was established in 1964. SCORE has more than 750 counseling sites nationwide

SCORE is also available for prebusiness consulting. Many new business owners are not prepared or informed enough to open their businesses, officials said. Motivation, desire and talent are not always enough.

Brains, ideas, skills and experience are all available to the small business owner at no charge.

For more information about SCORE, call the Columbus office at 596-8331 or the Small Business Administration office nearest you.

SCORE is committed to assisting personnel getting out of the military who are planning to open their own businesses.

ACAP officials said they strongly recommend military personnel take advantage of SCORE services.

Post holds home ground in Kelley Hill boxing tourney

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Fort Benning boxing team pounded out five straight wins to dominate the boxing venue Saturday night at Kelley Hill Fitness Center. The event was sponsored by the Canadian Mist company.

The boxing matches scheduled for Friday night were canceled when the doctor for the night failed to show.

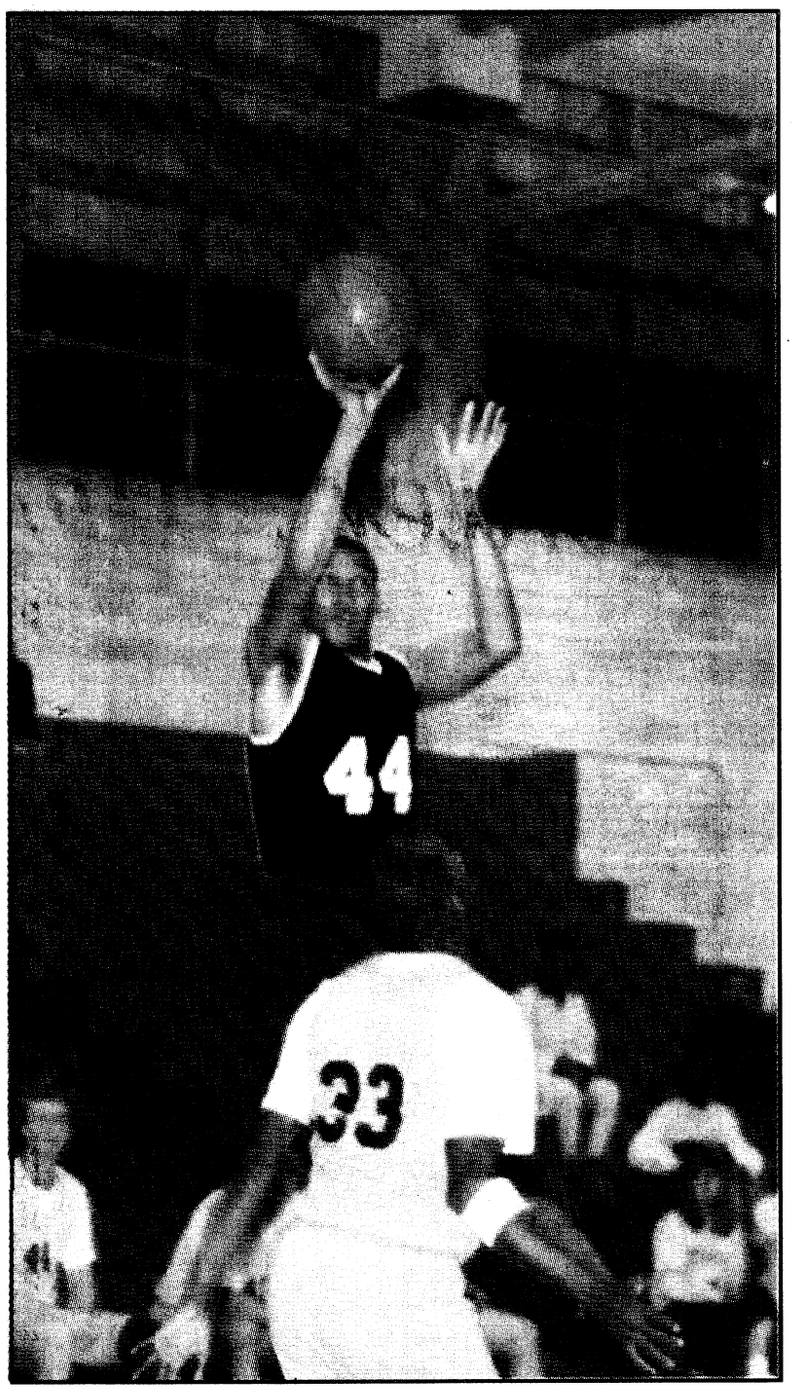
In the first bout of the evening, two Fort Benning boxers went head to head with Faustino Hernandez of Company B, 324th Forward Support Battalion, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, pulling out a split decision over Ricky Thompson of Company B, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment.

Anthony Allen pounded out a unanimous decision against Carlos Alarcon Jr. of the Columbus Gladiators.

David Williams of Service Battery, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment, 3rd Bde., 24th Inf. Div., downed Vincent Russell of the U.S. Marine Corps in the third bout of the night.

Brian Taylor won the fourth bout with a unanimous decision over Admiral Peay of the Gladiators.

In the final bout of the night, Yamar Resto Ferrer of Battery B, 4th Bn., 41st FA Regt., 3rd Bde., 24th Inf. Div., defeated Enrique Martinez of the U.S. Marine Corps with a unanimous decision.



Al Robinson of USA Boxing refereed all the bouts; and, according to Robinson, some of the fighters with time and work could be invited to the All-Army Boxing Trial Camp at Fort Huachuca, Ariz.

"These are novice boxers," Robinson said. "If they have the heart and drive and determination, the skills will improve. Coach (Charles) Kirkland knows his boxing and these (boxers) can learn a lot from him if they choose to."

Gentlemen, riggers win

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The 11th Infantry Regiment basketball league is heating up after the holiday break. Two games were played Tuesday night at Briant Wells Field House. Here's what happened:

The Gentlemen of Company B, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, downed the Hunters from the Sky of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment, 72-53, in game one action.

Alphonso Thomas led the Gentlemen with 21 points, while Odie Sheffield popped for 15, Mark Hannon drilled in 12 and Joe Reed added 11.

The Gentlemen jumped on the Hunters from the Sky in the first half and didn't let up, taking a 38-26 advantage at the break.

In the second half, the Gentlemen weren't so gentle taking leads of up to 21 points while stopping the Hunters' offense from putting together any kind of sustainable run.

Jamal Gibson poured in 17 points to take high-point honors for the Hunters.

In game two, the Riggers of Company E, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment, stuck the Tar Heels of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, 50-42.

Terrell Thomas ripped the nets for 12 points and teammates Michael Boone and Cortez Frazier each chipped in with 10 points. Alfred Brown scored nine points to close out the scoring book on the Riggers.

Up by 11 points at the half, 24-13, the Riggers pushed the lead to as many as 17 before the Tar Heels made a run to cut the advantage down to eight points at 48-40 with less than two minutes to play.

Fouls blunt Bayonets against HSC

By Shelby Carr
Infantry Training Brigade

The 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, Bayonets' got in foul trouble Tuesday night winding up with only four players on the court, which cost them the game against Headquarters and Service Company 59-50.

HSC dominated the first half of play with a perimeter passing game and working inside to score 29 points. HSC's defense held the Bayonets scoreless for the first four minutes of the game to take a 10-0 lead.

The Bayonets' outside shooting game stayed cold while HSC allowed the team only one offensive rebound during that time.

Driving to the basket and fast breakaways allowed the Bayonets to score eight points, but defense could not stop the inside game of HSC, which maintained a lead of 22- 8.

The first half ended with the Bayonets' players scoring most of their points driving to the basket while HSC scored from the inside and the outside, hitting three three-point shots and taking a lead of 29-15.

The Bayonets started the second half on a run of nine points before HSC scored its first basket. The Bayonets outside shooting began to work while HSC's defense could not stop the Bayonets from driving to the basket.

HSC players made many offensive errors and stopped playing their passing game while the Bayonets set the tempo with a fast-paced offense and cut the HSC lead to three points midway through the second half with a score of 37 to 34.

HSC's inside men took over the game and again dominated the boards led by Gary Spivey with 12 rebounds and Freddy Lee with 10 rebounds, while Gregory Ellerbee and Gerard Williams each had eight. With less than four minutes to go in the game, HSC led 47-38, and substituted its inside men and allowed the Bayonets to cut its lead back to three points with one minute left.

The Bayonets' foul trouble came back to haunt them as Terrance Glover, who had eight rebounds and one steal, fouled out leaving only five players on the team with 1:05 left on the clock, and Joseph Richardson followed him leaving only four players on the court. Two steals, two baskets and two free throws in the last 30 seconds of the game gave HSC a 59-50 victory.

The Bayonets had seven steals but made only two of eight free throws and had 25 rebounds, while HSC had five steals, made eight out of 22 free throws and had 55 rebounds.

The leading scorer for HSC was Spivey and Williams who each had 12 points, while Jeffery Murray had 18 points for the Bayonets and Michael Williams had 13 points.

In other action, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, beat 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment, 59-39 and 3rd Battalion, 32nd Infantry Regiment, beat 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, 75-37.

World-class wrestler grapples with basic training

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

His nickname in basic training is "Poppa Smurf" not because he is short and blue, but because he is 30 years of age and almost twice as old as any other trainee in Company D, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment.

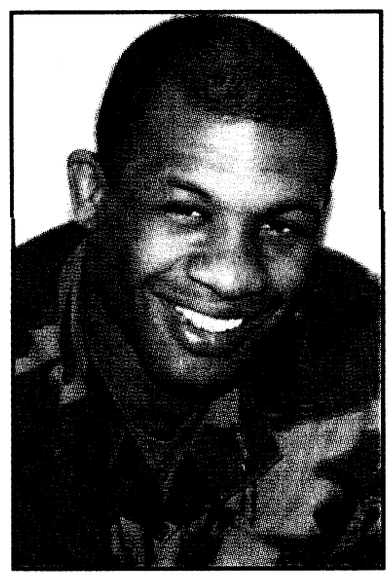
For Spc. Anthony Amado Jr., the Army may be the start of a second career.

Before joining the Army, Amado was one of the top-rated wrestlers in the nation at Portland State University in Portland, Ore. But, a blown-out knee in the 1990 season at PSU almost ended his career before he wanted it to.

"I had planned to wrestle through the 1992 season, then retire and go on with my life and get my family started, but the recovery from my knee surgery did not come along as well as I had anticipated," Amado said. "I decided to stay through the 1996 season. I was coaching and training while at PSU, but it was very hard to put all my energies into training and coaching someone else and work a part-time job to boot."

Amado tried to work with his sponsors to make ends meet while continuing to train, but his training partner at the 125-pound weight class decided to move to the Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs, Colo.

Amado didn't want to live at the center because he had been going to the center since 1980. The next move for Amado would have been to move to California, but it would have been too expensive to live on the West Coast.



Amado's best option turned out to be to join the Army. After talking with All-Army wrestlers Shon Lewis and Derrick Waldroup while training at the World Team training camp this past September, Amado realized the Army would provide him the opportunity to train with the top 136.5 pounder in the country along with the No. 2 and No. 3 114 pounders. That was the deciding factor for Amado to take the plunge into the U.S. Army.

Under the guidelines of the world-class athlete program, Amado would be able to come into the Army, finish his basic training and move right into the All-Army wrestling program here at Fort Benning, which just happens to start today with a welcome breakfast 8 a.m. at the Main NCO Club.

Amado should have no problem fitting into the All-Army wrestling trail camp. After almost 19 years of wrestling and a degree in administrative justice with a minor in psychology, Amado said he feels he can master the rigors of basic training.

"I'm in better shape than most of the people in my company," he said, "and with the age difference, I can help some of the others because I have experiences that match what they are dealing with now."

Amado's wrestling background reads like the who's who of wrestling. In 1984, Amado was chosen as an alternate on the Olympic wrestling team. In 1985, he won a national title and in 1986 he was runner up. Both years, he was a National Collegiate Athletic Association Division II All-American. Also in 1986, Amado placed third at the World Cup after placing ninth at the World championships. Amado won gold in 1986 at the Olympic sports festival.

Amado

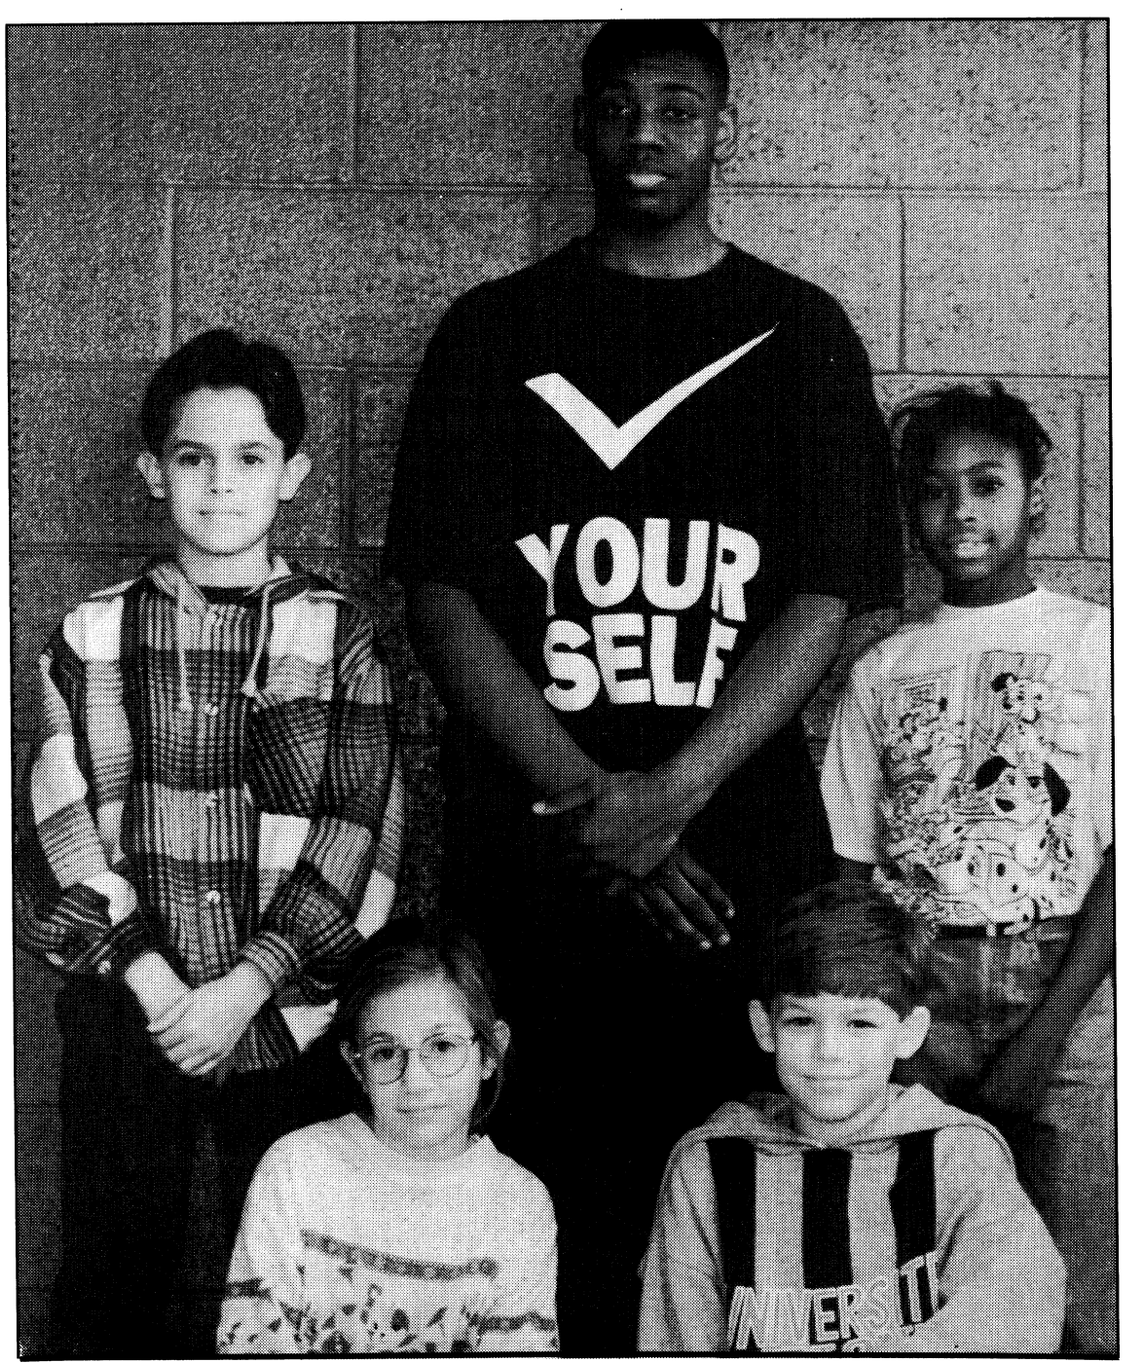
In 1987, Amado once again won gold at the Olympic Sports Festival, captured third at the Pan American games and placed fourth at the world championships. Amado also took third at the World Cup in 1987.

In 1988, Amado made the Olympic wrestling team and placed third at the World Cup. In 1989, Amado had planned to sit out a year, but that was the first year for the national team, which he made and placed second at nationals and second at the Olympic Festival.

In 1990, Amado moved up to 136.5 pounds for the nationals and placed fourth, then moved back down to 125 pounds for the World Team trials. That's when disaster struck for Amado.

"I should have stayed at 125 pounds at nationals like my father told me," he said. "Everyone said 'Anthony just (compete at 125 pounds) and get number one on the ladder and go from there.' I thought I could beat these guys at 136 pounds so I went for it and I lost 0-0 to 1988 Olympian Ike Anderson in my first match, which cost me a chance to wrestle in the finals.



"I moved down to 125 pounds for the World Team trials, but I had slightly injured my knee during a camp down in Florida three weeks before the trials. While at the team trials, I wrestled and won the mini-tournament. Then I wrestled the guy who is number one in my weight class right now, Dennis Hall, for number three on the ladder when I blew out my knee," Amado said.

Amado said he hopes to be at full strength by the time he gets to the All-Army wrestling camp in March after he graduates from basic training.

"All-Army wrestling coach Tony Thomas told me I would probably get my butt kicked the first few weeks into the camp," Amado said. "If I do, I hope I make them pay for it later on." he said jokingly.

Hopefully, Amado won't hurt himself or anyone else before he gets the chance to move his wife, Marla, to whom he has been married for 3 1/2 years, to Fort Benning from Portland so she can help him push on to his dream of making the 1996 Olympic team and a chance at gold in Atlanta before he retires.

"It's something that's been left open in my life that I need to close before I move on to other things," Amado said.

Ferrell won the 10- and 11-year-old division, Jones took the 12- and 13-year-old bracket, Johnson won the 10- and 11-year-old girls division, Wagner took the top spot in the 8- and 9-year-old bracket and McCall won the boys 8- to 9-year-old division. These youngsters will now move on to the local level and compete Saturday at Comer Gym in Columbus.

Cyclists to dust off wheels

Bicycle Ride Across Georgia

About 2,500 bicyclists will be dusting off their two-wheeled vehicles for the 15th annual Bicycle Ride Across Georgia June 11 to 18 through some of south Georgia's flattest country.

Riders and support personnel will spend June 11 at the Bainbridge YMCA before starting to pedal June 12, with overnight stops at Thomasville, Valdosta, Tifton, Douglas, Waycross and Jesup before the 400-mile ride ends with a festive, catered End-Of-The Road party on the beach at St. Simons Island June 18.

"If you're ever going to do BRAG, this is the year to do it because it's flat," said ride director Jerry Colley.

The 1994 BRAG will offer more than just pedaling. Entertainment includes street dances, visits to Civil War museums and lots of Georgia peaches and peanuts.

As in previous years, most riders will pedal about 60 miles each day, spending the night camping at local schools. Flat, shady campsites are planned in most locations.

Overnight camping sites are June 12 at Thomasville Middle School and McIntyre Park in the City of Roses; June 13 at Valdosta State University, where a side trip to Florida is planned; June 14 at Abraham Baldwin College in Tifton, where riders can tour the Agrirama; June 15 at South Georgia College in Douglas; June 16 at Waycross College, where the BRAG Talent show will be along with side trips to the Okefenokee Swamp Park; and June 17 at the Wayne County High School and Middle School in Jesup.

The Swingin' Medallions are scheduled June 17 and street dances are planned in Bainbridge, Valdosta, Tifton and Douglas.

BRAG has named the Georgia chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society as its official recipient charity for the 1994 ride.

The MS Society will provide rest stops and lunches on designated days along the ride. Money raised from BRAG will provide support services for more than 4,000 Georgians with multiple sclerosis, a central nervous system disease that affects a third of a million Americans.

Those support services include information and referral, support groups, counseling, medical equipment and therapeutic recreation.

Other sponsors include Coca-Cola, PowerAde, BellSouth, Atlanta Journal-Constitution, Miller Brewing Company, DeKalb Tech, PowerBars, Sysco and Keebler Company. The American Red Cross will provide first-aid services.

Air-conditioned bus service, for about $35 per trip will bring riders from Atlanta to Bainbridge and from St. Simons Island to Bainbridge June 11 and from St. Simons Island to Atlanta June 18 and June 19.

Registration for the ride is $60 for adults and $45 for children and seniors, which covers camping for seven nights, route maps, luggage transportation, a T-shirt, sag wagon support, rest stops stocked with water, fruit and food every 10 miles, street dances and the final party.

For an application, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to BRAG '94, P.O. Box 576, Stone Mountain, Ga. 30086-0576.

Applications will be mailed in mid-February.

For more information, call (404) 279-9797 and leave your name and address. For more information about staying in motels each night, call (404) 879-8724.

Magazine to honor hometown fishing friends

Plano Molding Company

PLANO, Ill. — Throughout 1994, Bassin' magazine and Plano Molding will honor America's favorite hometown fishing friends by awarding prizes to those who have spent time and energy teaching youngsters about the great outdoors.

The Fishing Buddy Essay Contest will be published in all eight issues of Bassin.' Anyone can enter. Simply write a 500-word essay explaining how an adult in your community has volunteered to help teach youngsters about fishing and the great outdoors.

A photograph of the featured adult is requested, but it is not required. Entries should be sent to: Fishing Buddy Essay Contest, 15115 S. 76th E. Ave., Bixby, Okla. 74008.

If Bassin' publishes the essay, the featured adult will receive an honorary Fishing Buddy plaque, an embroidered Bassin' shirt and 12 Plano 1272 Stowaway tackle boxes to give away to his or her favorite young fishing friends.

The Fishing Buddy Essay Contest is organized in conjunction with the new Plano Big Bass Junior Championship, which offers a $10,000 College Scholarship to young anglers 10 through 17 years old.

Fishing seminar to feature Deion Sanders — The Fishing Georgia Seminar Sunday at Mama's Country Showcase in Decatur, Ga., will be from 1 to 7 p.m. and will feature all-pro defensive back for the Atlanta Falcons and "lead-off" batter for the Atlanta Braves Deion Sanders.

The event will feature 12 of the state's leading guides and fishing experts. Participants will learn how to catch fish on waters through the state from Lake Blue Ridge of the North Georgia mountains to Lake Seminole along the Florida border.

Tackle manufacturers will demonstrate the latest in fishing gear. There will be no selling at this event, just hands-on experience with the most modern tackle and fish-catching baits available.

Mama's Country Showcase is located at 3952 Covington Road in Decatur. For more information, call Gary Laden at (404) 993-3109 or "Boomer" at (404) 683-8680.

Free Nautilus class — A free Nautilus class for female members only of the Fort Benning Officers' Club Fitness Center will be Feb. 1 from 9 to 11 a.m. Interested persons may sign up at the Fitness Center. Class size is limited.

All-Army volleyball screening — An All-Army volleyball screening test will be conducted by the Fort Benning Physical Activities Branch from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Feb. 5 and 19 at Audie Murphy Fitness Center. The test will consist of a series of objective and subjective practical skills tests to evaluate the athletic abilities of potential All-Army athletes.

All active duty military members interested in submitting an application are encouraged to participate. For more information, call Robert Shelley at 545-1940.

Deer kill cards — Deer kill cards must be returned within 15 days of the close of deer season, according to officials at the National Resources Management Branch.

The deer season ended Jan. 9 in Georgia and will end Jan. 31 in Alabama. Kill cards may be placed in drop boxes located at the Outdoor Recreation Office, Building 1707, or the Natural Resources Management Branch Office, Building 5883, Harmony Church.

Individuals desiring a receipt for return should mail the permit by certified mail, return receipt requested, to the Outdoor Recreation Office, P.O. Box 53323, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905, or personally return the permit to the Outdoor Recreation Office.

All kill cards must be returned even if no deer are harvested, officials said. Failure to return kill cards or failure to provide a receipt for the return of the kill cards can result in revocation or suspension of hunting privileges for one year.

Appeals will not be accepted without a receipt for return of permit, officials said.

Racquetball clinic — A racquetball clinic and tournament will be conducted at Briant Wells Field House Feb. 18 and 19.

The clinic will be from 6 to 8 p.m. Feb. 18 and from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Feb. 19. The first 10 people to sign up will receive free Ektelon products.

For more information, contact Dennis Guaglianone at 545-6333 or 545-2737.

Rifle and pistol match — The Rifle and Pistol Club will host its monthly pistol match 1 p.m. Feb. 5.

Novice shooters are welcome. Glock Firearms will be sponsoring the match and will provide Glock model 17, 9mm pistols and ammunition for competitors who do not own their own weapon.

Cost will be $12 if paid by Feb. 1, and $15 after that date. For details, call Jim Graham at 689-3371.

Tu B'Shevat: Thank God for trees

By Andrew S. Zeller
11th Infantry Regiment

Thursday is a little known Jewish holiday called Tu B'Shevat, which means the New Year of Trees. It is remembered on the 15th day of the Hebrew month Shevat.

I love trees; I always have. I enjoy their beauty, their shade, the fruit and nuts they produce and their wood for lumber or the fireplace.

It is amazing to me that these large plants come from seeds the size of a coin. It's hard on me when I end up in places like Saudi Arabia or the Mojave Desert and can't find any trees around to enjoy.

Much of my daydreaming, in fact, centers around trees. I've spent many hours dreaming and reading of being a tree farmer in the Northwest growing fruit trees, nut trees or various trees for lumber.

I enjoyed logging and working in sawmills for a number of years in Colorado, and my daydreams of running a small sawmill again in the forested Rockies occupies some leisure time.

Trees play an important part in each of our lives. The fresh air we breath, the chairs we sit on, the paper you are holding and the apple you should have for lunch are all tree products. But don't waste any time thanking a tree — it won't hear you. Give thanks to the one who gave us the trees.

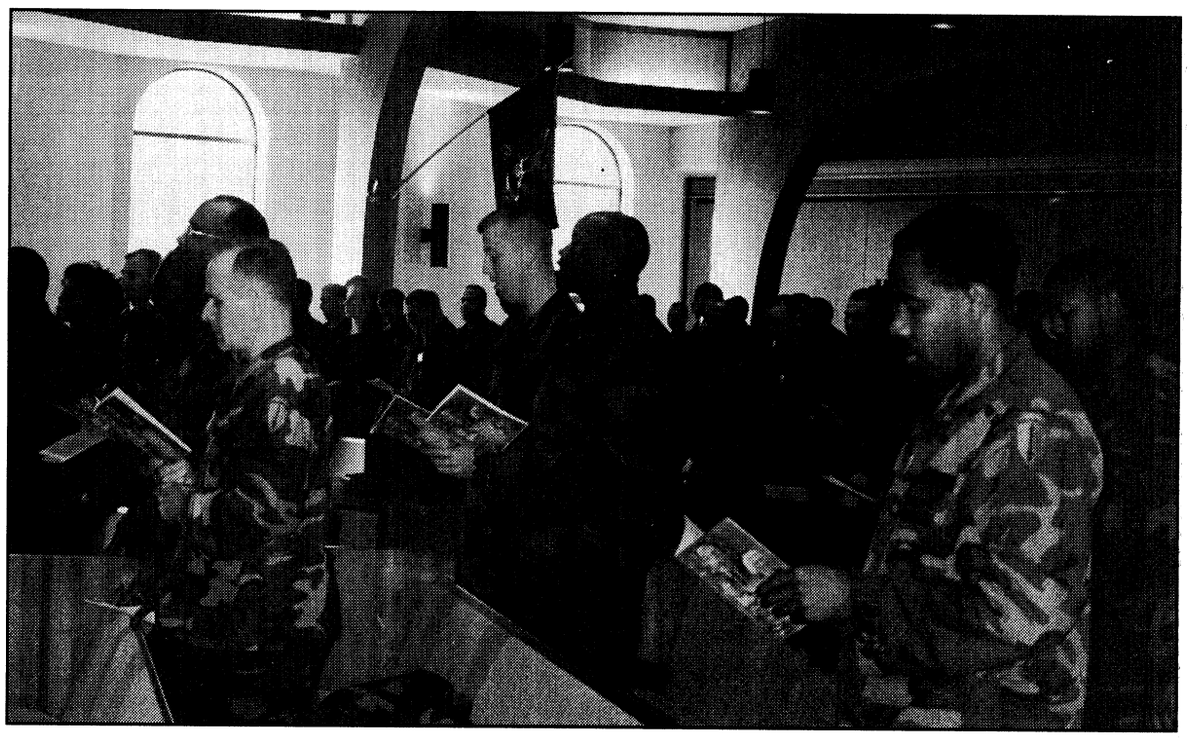
There is a Biblical principle to give those things that are important in our life to the Lord as an offering of thanks — symbolizing that everything we have belongs to him anyway.

In the Bible, we find that the first fruits of the harvest, the first-born child and the first 10 percent of one's income were to be dedicated to the Lord. In Leviticus 19:23 to 25, we also find that even the first useable harvest of the fruit trees, in their fourth year, is to be given to God. The farmer could not use the fruit for himself until the tree's fifth year of life.

This may not seem fair to the farmer who has worked for so many years. My father taught me that the laborer ought to enjoy his work first. The cook gets to try the cookies first, the bicycle repairer gets to ride the bike first. Shouldn't the farmer get to enjoy the first harvest?

The point of giving the first harvest to the Lord is to help the farmer remember who really made the tree produce the fruit.

Tu B'Shevat is the day used to mark the new year of a tree's life so the farmer will know when he or she can use the tree's produce, and even more importantly, so he or she will know when to thankfully give God his harvest.



These days, Tu B'Shevat is remembered by Jewish communities in a number of ways. In Israel, it is remembered by planting trees.

You can even have a tree planted in Israel today under your name by sending a donation to the Jewish National Fund.

Jews separated from Israel, the Diaspora, have remembered the day by having a ceremonial meal with a menu of dates, figs, olives, grapes and other foods from the trees of their homeland. In some communities, a special seder, or dinner service, is observed.

Our lives are not only enriched by trees, we are sustained by them. John Denver has helped Americans recognize the importance of trees by promoting Arbor Day, which has become popular in the past few years.

On this upcoming Tu B'Shevat, the Lord's arbor day, notice the trees and think about how much you benefit in the day from trees. Be thankful for them and show your thanks — but don't thank the trees.

ITB remembers Martin Luther King

By Jacqueline Feagin
USAIC Chaplains' Office

The Infantry Training Brigade, in celebration of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., had a memorial service at Regimental Chapel on Sand Hill Jan. 14.

Col. Theodore Severn, ITB commander, shared his memories of what it was like in the Army in 1967 when he first came to Georgia.

"I remember getting in a fight with an owner of a downtown restaurant because he would not allow a black lieutenant in," he said.

He also said he remembered when all soldiers had to take seminars where they talked about how everyone could all get along. "Do we live in the dream?" Severn said. "We are not there yet."

Chaplain (Col.) Roy G. Plummer, staff chaplain, was the guest speaker. He reminded the soldiers there were times when even in the house of God, they could not sit together.

"It is because of Dr. King that we can do this," Plummer said. "Living the dream is not a King thing; it is not an ITB thing. It is an us thing; it is a world thing," he said.

The Infantry Chorus and the Infantry Band provided music. ITB soldiers read selected passages from quotations by King.

Chaplain (Capt.) Jeffery Voyles provided the invocation, and Chaplain (Capt.) George Holston gave the benediction.

chapel notes

Symposium to highlight new info technologies

Army Public Affairs

Fort Benning will host a symposium the week of Feb. 14 to highlight the Army's efforts to harness 21st century information technologies.

The Individual Combatant Model and Simulation Symposium will be one of a series of Armywide events about the information age.

Togo D. West Jr., secretary of the Army, and Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan, chief of staff of the Army, announced the formation of the digitization special Task Force designed to harness the power of the information age.

"As we reshape America's Army to fight and win our nation's wars today, tomorrow and the day after tomorrow, we must stay at the cutting edge of our profession, Sullivan said.

"In the defense of America, second place is second best," he said. "The Digitization Special Task Force will keep us the best army in the world.

The Digitization Special Task Force will be headed by Brig. Gen. Joseph E. Oder, director of Requirements Horizontal Technology Integration Office. It will be composed of doctrinal experts from the Army's battle labs and procurement experts from the Army Materiel Command.

Creation of the Digitization Special Task Force is the first step toward harnessing the "information power" America's Army will need to win decisive victories in the 21st century.

Another Army project, the Louisiana Maneuvers, uses interactive simulations, state-of-the-art computers and high speed data links to test new ideas and methods, like digitization.

Battle labs, a third resource, are Army research laboratories that focus less on theory and more on practical applications.

Battle lab tests so far indicate that digitization can enhance every aspect of fighting and sustaining Army forces in the 21st century.

Digitization will bring together "cutting edge" expertise and technology in simulation, communications and analysis. It will combine the technologies to develop systems to automate tactical reporting and improve the Army's acquisition and surveillance capabilities.

For example, future tanks may be equipped with a display that shows all of the friendly and enemy vehicles in their area on the battlefield.

The Army is studying technologies currently in use in American businesses, industry, local government and educational institutions and applying those technologies to the Army's unique requirements.

Conversely, America as a whole benefits from Army research in this area. The entertainment industry uses motion-based, computer-driven theme rides and city planners and law enforcement personnel rely on simulation training programs that grew out of military research into computer image generation and high-fidelity cockpit representations.

The educational community is experimenting with concepts developed through Army distributed interactive simulation technology to create interactive electronic classrooms where geographically dispersed teachers and students can share knowledge.

Thus, Army research is a catalyst for state-of-the-art simulation and digitization techniques with private sector applications such as synthetic manufacturing, performance modeling for the auto industry, design engineering and designing disaster-proof building materials.

The Fort Benning symposium is one of two seminars about information technologies.

In February, the U.S. Army Material Command will present "Winning the Information War" at the Association of the United States Army's annual symposium in Orlando, Fla.

April will mark the debut of the Army's first digitized task force rotation at the National Training Center, Fort Irwin, Calif.

Marksmanship: 3rd Brigade takes first in division

By Emiciades Alcon
HHC, 2nd Bn., 18th Infantry Regiment

The 24th Infantry Division 1994 Marksmanship Competition saw the 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized), win top honors in the matches that took place Jan. 11 and 12 at Fort Stewart, Ga.

The team from the 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry, which is based on Fort Benning's Kelley Hill, faced teams representing all other units in the division in the four matches encompassing the competition:

- M-16 rifle
- M-24 sniper rifle
- M-9 pistol
- M-60 machine gun

Lt. Col. Alex B. McKindra, the battalion's commander, praised the team's accomplishments in winning the M-16 rifle and M-24 sniper rifle matches, taking second in the M-60 machine gun and third in the M-9 pistol.

Members of the team expressed concern about their initial chances to do well in the contest.

"We had very little time to prepare for this competition", said Spc. James Mang, adding that their training "consisted of only three days spent on Fort Benning ranges."

Staff Sgt. Charles Herlth, team coach, conceded that because of a busy training schedule, team members were not even sure they would attend until a few days before the match.

Likewise, Staff Sgt. Jim Thacker, captain for the M-24 sniper rifle team, said that they "all wanted to win," but at first thought "the minimal preparations did not give us (team members) a chance against the other teams."

The opponents made winning "an unimaginable task," according to some of the members. In the M-60 machine gun match, the team finished in a virtual tie for first, but the judges picked the winner on how close together they placed their shots, said Spc. Jason Clark, assistant gunner for the M-60 machine gun crew.

The team faced very tough competition," said the captain of the M-60 crew, Staff Sgt. Joseph Dorman.

"But winning against the odds made it so much sweeter," said Pvt. 2 Joshua Maguire, a member of the M-16 rifle team.

Appraising the team's success, the acting executive officer, Maj. Ralph V. Hardman, said, "This remarkable accomplishment is characteristic of the soldiers in this unit."

For his part, Command Sgt. Maj. Gerald E. Klein lauded the team expressing that "in spite of their demanding training schedule and the little time it left the team to prepare for this event, they (team members) excelled because of their discipline." He concluded, "That's the way our soldiers are."

For their achievements, the 20 members of the team were rewarded with a four-day pass and submissions for the Army Achievement Medal. Currently, the team is attached to the battalion headquarters section, pending possible use by the 24th Division for marksmanship exhibitions.

Next, the team expects to enter Fort Benning's marksmanship matches, before going to the XVIII Airborne Corps' competition.

2nd MASH provides support

By Denise Howell
36th Engineer Group

Soldiers from the 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital left Jan. 13 for the Joint Readiness Training Center at Fort Polk, La. Fort Benning troops commonly use the Fort Polk site for annual and semi-annual combat readiness training.

According to Sgt. 1st Class Javier Bermudez, first sergeant of the 2nd MASH, 62 soldiers left Jan. 10 to prepare for the arrival of the remaining troops.

The 2nd MASH will be providing medical support to the 75th Ranger Regiment and the 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment, also participating in JRTC training.

Sgt. Maj. Rick Cross of the 2nd MASH said the unit's main objective is construction of a 30-bed mobile surgical hospital, with a possible expansion to 50 beds, if needed.

The soldiers' mission, along with combat readiness training, is to provide surgical and preventive medical care. Personnel from special dental and veterinary units will also provide service.

Formal exercises for the troops began Saturday and will continue until Jan. 29. The MASH is expected to return to Fort Benning on Feb. 4.

This field training exercise is the first of many missions proposed for the MASH by its new commander, Capt. Richard Wells Jr., who assumed command from Capt. Lawrence V. Fulton Dec. 16.

"I intend to take care of the soldier," Wells said. But keeping the troops combat ready is not the whole point. Single soldier initiatives, family support programs, individual counseling and an open door policy will contribute to morale and keep the soldiers strong and on track," he said.

world war II

Fifty years ago this week...

- The Allies began a surprise landing at Anzio, spearheaded by the U.S. 3rd and the British 1st divisions, as Lt. Gen. Mark Clark's 5th Army secured a beachhead.

Allied forces numbering 50,000 sustained only 13 deaths during the first day largely because of a series of earlier attacks on the Gustav Line that had successfully lured the Germans into pulling many troops from their Anzio positions to serve as reinforcements.

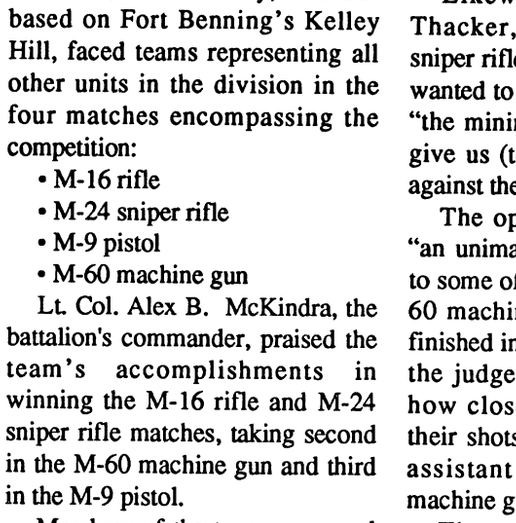
The Germans, however, quickly regrouped under the leadership of Field Marshal Albrecht Kesselring, who effectively utilized his reserves from north Italy to stall the Allied advance toward Rome.

By week's end, eight Allied and eight German divisions slugged it out in fierce, costly fighting.

- Elsewhere in Italy, the Germans repelled the French Corps advance from Colle Belvedere toward Monte Abate.

Just north of Cassino, the U.S. 34th Division of the II Corps captured Monte Maiola and Caira.

- On the Eastern Front, the Soviets pressed their efforts to relieve Leningrad from the German blockade cutting the rail line between Narva and Krasnogvardeisk and capturing Pushkin, Pashovsk and Mga.



Simultaneously, five Soviet armies initiated an offensive further south on both Ukraine Fronts, with the intention of encircling and crushing the 1st Panzer Army, which defended the German salient around Korsun-Sevchenovsky.

- In the Pacific, Australian forces on New Guinea, aided by marked Allied air superiority, secured Shaggy Ridge. On New Britain, U.S. Marines broadened the Cape Gloucester bridgehead a day after U.S. airplanes pummeled the Japanese base at Rabaul.

- Fort Benning welcomed the 4th Infantry Regiment, which arrived from Alaska to assume its duties as the demonstration unit for the Infantry School.

Georgia CPAs advise certain medical expenses may be deductible

Georgia Society of CPAs

Increasing costs of health care combined with high insurance deductibles mean that you may have to shell out more money each year for medical expenses.

However, the Georgia Society of Certified Public Accountants points out that you can still deduct unreimbursed medical expenses to the extent that they exceed 7.5 percent of your adjusted gross income for that year.

Although you need to incur substantial expenses to reach the 7.5 percent threshold, you may be surprised at the number and variety of qualified medical expenses that can enable you to exceed this threshold.

When tallying up your medical expenses for this year, keep in mind that you may deduct the payment of medical bills for you, your spouse and your children — even if you are divorced and your former spouse is entitled to claim the children as dependents.

Generally, you may also include the medical expenses you pay for any person you can claim as a dependent.

This can include not only your children, but it also includes other relatives such as parents, grandparents and brothers and sisters, as long as you provide more than half of their support and meet other requirements.

Qualified medical and dental expenses include amounts paid for the diagnosis, cure and treatment or prevention of disease. Generally, you cannot deduct expenses incurred for your general health improvement, such as vitamins and health club fees.

What's more, you cannot deduct costs for surgery that is strictly cosmetic. You may, however, deduct cosmetic or plastic surgery necessary to correct a personal injury or treat a disease.

In addition to the more obvious expenses, such as doctor, dentist and hospital bills, you may deduct the cost of transportation to and from the doctor, hospital or pharmacy; special items like eyeglasses, contact lenses, dentures and hearing aids; health, hospitalization and Medicare insurance premiums; wages paid for nursing services; and prescription drugs and insulin.

You may also deduct the cost of certain home improvements necessitated by a medical problem and recommended or prescribed by a physician for a specific medical condition.

For example, the cost of a swimming pool might be deductible if it is specifically required for a person who has polio. CPAs point out that generally you can take a medical deduction only to the extent that the cost of the improvement exceeds the increase in the value of the property.

If you make a medically-related capital improvement to your home, be sure to obtain a written appraisal from a real estate appraiser or a valuation expert so you can prove the extent to which the improvement affected the value of your property.

Calculating your medical expenses is an important year-end, tax-planning task. Since medical bills are deductible in the year you pay them, you may be able to maximize your deduction by controlling the timing of your payment.

Deferring payment of medical bills until next year may also be a good idea when you suspect that your adjusted gross income will be lower next year, therefore putting you in a better position to meet the threshold.

Keep in mind, too, that if you are married and one spouse has substantially higher medical expenses and a lower taxable income than the other, it may make sense to file separate tax returns.

Although married individuals filing separate tax returns are generally subject to higher tax rates, by filing separately, the 7.5 percent floor applies to the individual's adjusted gross income — not to your higher joint income.

As a result, you or your spouse may qualify for the medical deduction. Calculate your taxes this way to determine if the strategy will pay off for you.

Inefficiency can cost you a stripe

U.S. Army Trial Defense Service

Under Army Regulation 600-8-19, an enlisted soldier can be administratively reduced one grade for inefficiency.

Inefficiency is defined as behavior that indicates the soldier cannot perform the duties and responsibilities of the grade and military occupational specialty.

Inefficiency includes any acts or conduct that clearly shows the soldier lacks the abilities and qualities required or expected of the grade and experience. Despite this broad definition, a reduction for inefficiency can neither be based upon a single act of misconduct, nor can it be used in lieu of Article 15 or based upon misconduct for which a soldier was acquitted at a court-martial.

As in other administrative actions, the commander decides whether to pursue the reduction action, evaluating the soldier's performance after the soldier has been in the unit at least 90 days.

If the commander believes the soldier should be reduced, the commander gathers documents that demonstrate the inefficiency. The packet may include counseling statements, records of attempted rehabilitation, noncommissioned officer evaluation reports, records of misconduct, civilian court documents, correspondence from creditors and other documents that may indicate a pattern of inefficiency.

The soldier is informed in writing of the proposed reduction and the reasons for it. The soldier may, within a reasonable time, submit a written rebuttal. The packet is then forwarded through intermediate commanders to the reduction authority. The reduction authority may disapprove the action, approve the reduction if no reduction board is required or send the case to a board.

The reduction authority will be the same whether the reduction is based on misconduct or inefficiency. The reduction authority for specialists and below is the company commander. For sergeants and staff sergeants, it is the first lieutenant colonel in the chain of command.

Soldiers in the rank of corporal and below may be reduced without a board. In that case, the soldier's side is presented through rebutting the proposed reduction action in writing. Soldiers in the rank of sergeant and above are entitled to a reduction board.

A soldier facing a reduction board for inefficiency is afforded the same rights as a soldier before one for misconduct. One additional right at an inefficiency reduction board is that there must be at least one board member who is thoroughly familiar with the soldier's specialty.

After the hearing, the board votes on the proposed reduction. The board may recommend no reduction, reduction of one grade or reassignment in grade. As in a reduction for misconduct, the board may also recommend removal of a promotable soldier from a promotion list.

The reduction authority may approve or disapprove any portion of the board's recommendation. The reduction authority may not, however, increase the severity of the board's recommendation. Unlike reductions for misconduct, the reduction authority may, in an inefficiency case, direct suspension of a reduction for up to six months.

If a suspended reduction is not set aside, that is, if the soldier is not reduced, before the suspension period expires, the reduction can only be accomplished by sending the case to a new reduction board.

Except for reductions for misconduct where a soldier receives a civilian court sentence to death or confinement in excess of one year, all administrative reductions can be appealed to correct erroneous reductions or on fairness grounds.

A successful appeal based upon fairness must show that the restoration is in the best interests of the Army and the soldier. For staff sergeants and below, the appeal authority is the next higher commander above the reduction authority. For sergeants first class and above, the appeal authority is the first general officer in the chain above the reduction authority.

Appeals must be submitted through the chain of command within 30 duty days of the date of reduction. The soldier has the burden of proof on the appeal and will be informed in writing of the appellate authority's decision.

ask the judge

By Rick Parker
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: I just read that a law has been passed that would allow military pay to be garnished. What is garnishment, and why is this important?

A: Garnishment is a legal proceeding used by creditors to collect money owed to them on a judgement.

In a simple example, let's suppose that Mr. Smith claims that Mr. Jones owes him for something. For example, Jones borrowed money from Smith or Jones damaged Smith's property.

Just because Smith claims that Jones owes doesn't mean that Smith can start taking Jones' money or property.

First, Smith must sue Jones and obtain a judgment from the court (that is, a court declaration that Jones in fact owes Smith a specific dollar amount).

Once Smith obtains his judgment, he can then start what is called post-judgment collection procedures. One type of procedure for this is garnishment, which is attaching or seizing money owed to the debtor by a third party.

In the example, suppose that Jones works for ABC. ABC Company owes Jones wages, and Smith can seize those wages (or at least a portion of them but more about that later) by filing and serving a garnishment on ABC.

The law recently passed by Congress will allow judgment creditors to garnish military pay but subject to certain conditions.

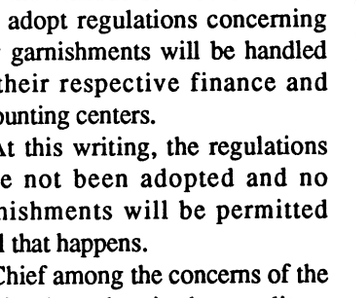
First, garnishment is not a federal procedure, but it is subject to state law. There are a number of states that have no laws permitting garnishment. Georgia does allow garnishment.

Second, the new law provides that the various service branches will adopt regulations concerning how garnishments will be handled by their respective finance and accounting centers.

At this writing, the regulations have not been adopted and no garnishments will be permitted until that happens.

Chief among the concerns of the service branches is that creditors getting judgments against service members comply with the Soldiers and Sailors Civil Relief Act, a law that provides a number of protections to soldiers who may not be able to defend themselves in lawsuits because of their military duties.

Also, there is some talk about limiting the number of garnishments that would be allowed at any one time (there are people out there who get in trouble with more than one creditor at a time).



Finally, there are limits on how much of a paycheck can be attached or seized in a garnishment. Generally, the creditor is limited to 25 percent of the disposable earnings — the amount of salary after deduction of taxes.

In the past, it has not been uncommon for service members to ignore lawsuits that eventually lead to judgments because of the inability of the creditor to do things like garnishing pay.

The harsh reality of a creditor's claim should no longer be ignored. If you are in a situation in which you may owe a debt and are facing lawsuit, you should consult with an attorney at the Legal Assistance Division. The telephone number is 545-3281 or 545-3282.

Graduates leave IOBC prepared to lead

By Richard Gordon
2nd Battalion, 11th Inf. Regt.

Class 9-93, Company C, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, completed the Infantry Officer Basic Course Wednesday.

The course is 16 weeks long and is a field-oriented, hands-on program of instruction designed to educate lieutenants and prepare them to lead rifle platoons in combat. Class 9-93 began Sept. 12.

The course includes instruction in squad- through company-level tactics, capabilities of modern weapons and supporting arms and leadership.

The student company is divided into five student platoons of approximately 30 lieutenants.

Each platoon is trained by a cadre consisting of one senior platoon trainer, a captain and two other platoon trainers — a sergeant first class and a staff sergeant.

The cadre are recruited from among the best noncommissioned officers and officers Fort Benning has to offer, officials said.

The class is composed of 140 U.S. officers commissioned through state and federal Officer Candidate School, ROTC and the U.S. Military Academy.

Two-thirds of the class will remain on active duty, most reporting to the U.S. Army Ranger School in the next month before going to their units. The remainder of the officers will return to their National Guard or Army Reserve units.

The class also consists of nine international military students from eight countries. These students must first complete language certification in San Antonio, Texas, before reporting to IOBC.

Class 9-93's lieutenants have been through the heat of the summer as well as the recent cold weather.

The students have participated in five major field training exercises including squad- and platoon-level maneuver live-fire exercises.

Second Lt. Kevin R. Mahoney was named the distinguished honor graduate.

Mahoney, 23, is from Pheonix, Ariz. He graduated from the University of Arizona in Tucson with a bachelor's degree in political science, and he earned his commission through the Wildcat Army ROTC Battalion there.

Of leadership, Mahoney said, "It is important to recognize your weaknesses and to have a plan for improving them. If you do not do this, you can never exceed your current limitations."

His father retired as a major in the Air Force. His next assignment will be at Fort Bragg, N.C.

ARTIST IN RESIDENCE

Students at White School are combining geography and art in a unique way while exploring sculpting with artist-in-residence Gregor Turk.

The artist hopes to raise the level of understanding and appreciation for the visual arts, he said, while at the same time focusing on map skills.

"I am looking forward to this residency because students this age have a lot of creative energy," Turk said.

The sculptor, who has served on post as an artist in residence twice before, said, "I enjoy working with Fort Benning students because of their international orientation."

Turk not only enhances awareness and appreciation for sculpting, but he also relates it to the current units of study within the school, said White School Principal Janet Wynn.

"He relates sculpture to life, and he relates it to the curriculum," Wynn said.

As part of their curriculum, some children have transformed firm lumps of clay into elaborate masks while others have crafted small sculptures. However, the major project is a group effort by third-graders featuring huge three-dimensional clay maps of the Fort Benning and Columbus areas.

The students used large sheets of paper with colorful felt markings to transfer the geographical data onto the table-sized sheets of clay. Next, students used a variety of tools to mark rivers and boundaries. The geographical features of the area will be added in subsequent sessions, Turk said.

As part of their curriculum, some children have transformed firm lumps of clay into elaborate masks while others have crafted small sculptures. However, the major project is a group effort by third-graders featuring huge three-dimensional clay maps of the Fort Benning and Columbus areas.

As they worked in groups, students discussed aspects of the region's geography.

"My dad works here at the ranger training area," said one child, marking the location with his finger.

"Where is my house?" said another as she searched the relief map.

Turk's love of mapping as an art form is seen in the themes of his own original sculptures, Wynn said after viewing a film clip of his work. Turk said he believes maps relate intriguing information about individuals and how geographic surroundings affect their lives.

Clay is Turk's primary medium, he said, although he works with a variety of additional natural materials.

His current work focuses on the 49th parallel in the area marked by the boundary between Canada and the United States.

He explored that area by foot and bicycle last year and is producing a documentary for public television and a series of pieces about how the border affects individuals and their lives.

A graduate of Rhodes College in Memphis, Tenn., Turk earned his master's of fine arts from Boston University. Between degrees, he served as a Peace Corps volunteer in Liberia, where, among other things, he taught the craft of fashioning cookstoves from clay. These cookstoves reduced the need for firewood, a scarce resource in many parts of the world.

Parents get hands dirty — too

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

From drama to original writing, Fort Benning school children have experienced a range of human creativity this school year through the artist-in-residence programs.

And, why should children have all the fun?

Sculptor Gregor Turk said he believes adults as well as their children can enjoy the arts; and, to prove it, he hosted a parent workshop exploring the creative possibilities of pottery.

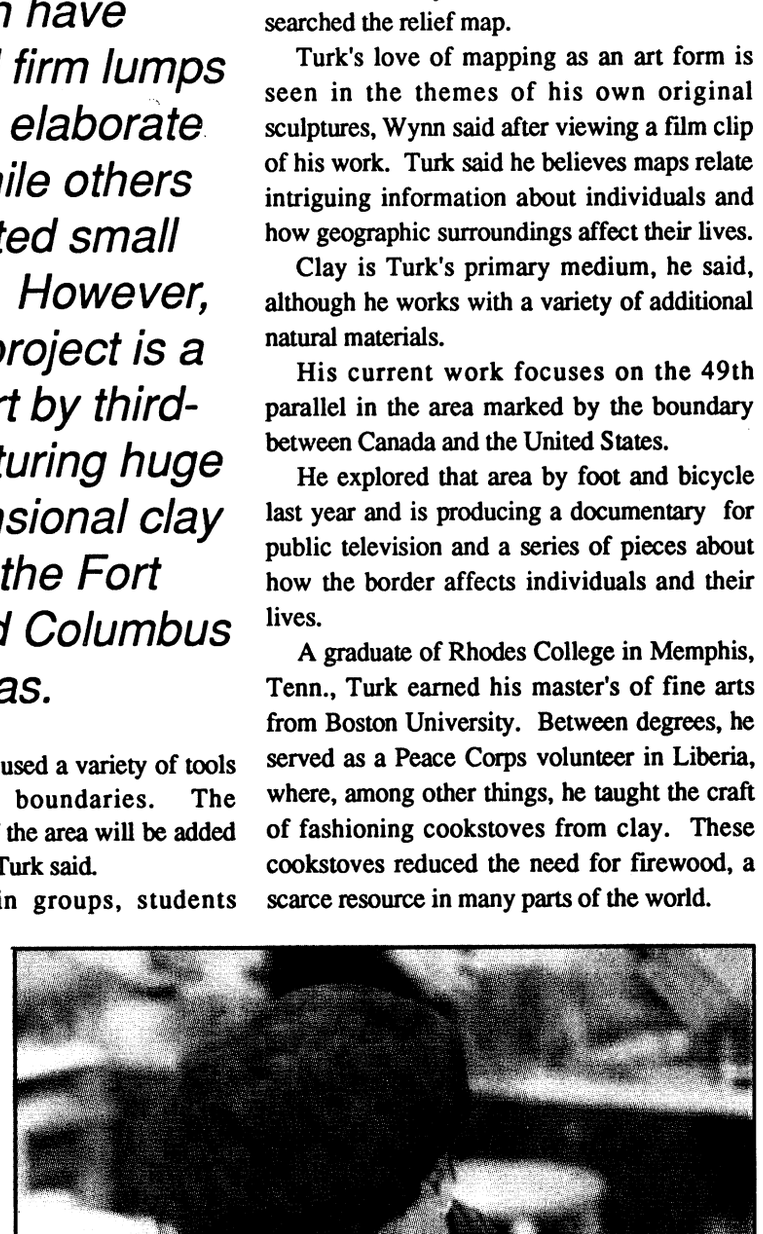
Last week, Turk gathered approximately 25 parents in the art room at White School to study the various expressions hidden in a lump of red Georgia clay.

Turk led parents through warm-up exercises designed to enhance the creative process of sculpting. Under the supervision of the artist, individuals used a tool in four entirely different ways to produce a variety of effects.

Turk instructed his class to "press, scrape, dig, drag or rub," as he walked among the parents offering encouragement. Different textures are created by using various parts of the same tool with different actions and levels of intensities, he said.

Following the introduction exercises, parents were ready to begin creating.

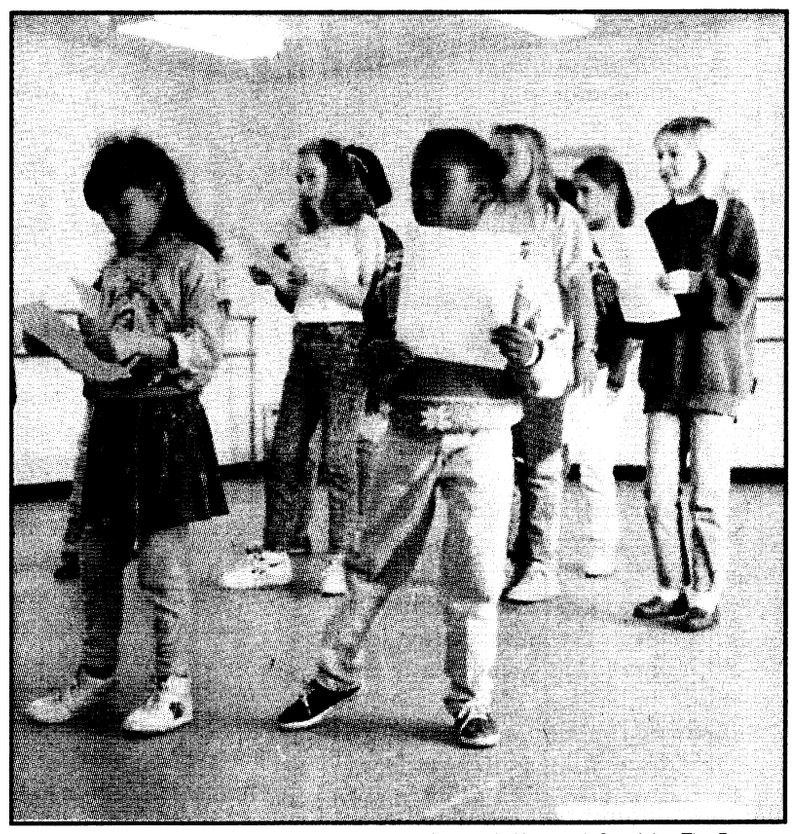
"You will make a container that reflects an occupation or vocation of yours, and you will disguise that container," Turk said as participants discussed their various interests.



Parents created a variety of earthenware containers including houses, fruit, boxes and basins. One shallow bowl, rimmed with a free-form dancing parent and child, reflected an interest in child rearing. Another creation featured a dwelling complete with tidy details that mirrored this parent's enjoyment of home life.

By including parents in the arts program at White School, Turk said he hopes to instill the same appreciation and enjoyment of sculpting he intends to develop in the children.

"He won't let anyone get by with the easy things," said White Principal Janet Wynn as parents began assembling their detailed containers by using a variety of sculpting tools.



"The best part of all this is that he relates it to life," she said.

Just as Turk planned, said Wynn, these parents were able to express a small bit of their own lives through the ancient art of sculpting.

OWC to offer classes

By Stephanie Krawczyk

The Fort Benning Officers' Wives' Club will conduct an activities sign-up Wednesday evening for anyone interested in participating in the wide range of classes being offered by the group this year.

The variety includes classes open to everyone and are for both adults and children, according to Sue Rutledge, OWC activity chairwoman.

Classes available for children include gymnastics, dance, piano, baton, modeling and many others.

The OWC is the only organization to offer a gymnastics class on post, according to Rutledge.

"We've got a great facility and teacher," said Rutledge about the gymnastics program. The club recently acquired a new facility on Yeager Avenue and is using it as a gymnasium.

Classes for adults include weight loss, aerobics, quilting, knitting and crocheting, rag basket making and other craft instruction.

Start-up dates will vary according to the class. Most of the activities will be taught in the OWC building, Building 229, located on the corner of Ingersoll Street and Dixie Road.

Individual class fees will vary, but a $5 activity card is required for non-OWC members. Only one card is required per family.

Anyone with a talent or skill interested in teaching a class or with a question can contact Rutledge at 689-0504.

Registration will run from 7 to 9 p.m. Wednesday at the OWC building.

Tournament lets soldiers 'rock 'em'

By Sandy Helling
Directorate of Community Activities

The Rock 'em Sock 'em tournament is under way at the Fort Benning clubs. The competition uses hand-operated tabletop robots and is conducted by elimination.

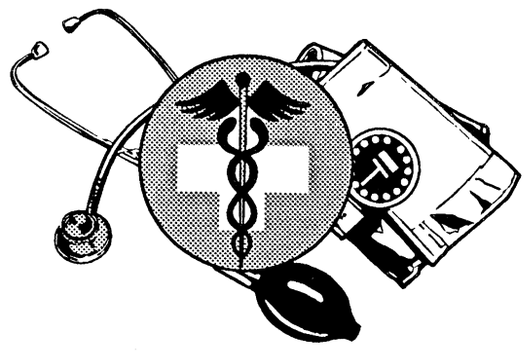
"Everyone who has entered has had a great time," said Brian Smith, marketing director for the Directorate of Community Activities. "They're really having fun."

The second night of the tournament, using tabletop boxers, is scheduled for tonight at Bradley's and the Main NCO Club and Sunday at the Hidden Door from 8 to 10 p.m. The finals will be conducted during the pre-Super Bowl party Jan. 30.

The hours for Bradley's have been moved back an hour and will now begin at 7 p.m. The Main NCO Club hours will remain the same.

Everyone who enters will receive a baseball-style hat. Semi-finalists win a T-shirt and the chance to compete for the $125 cash grand prize to be awarded at each club.

Participants may sign up for the chance to win a color television set and other giveaways. The drawing for the television will be Jan. 28. Check the Class VI stores for more details and entry forms.



Canadian Mist, the sponsor of the tourney, provides funds for travel, equipment and other training expenses for the boxers who travel to Fort Huachuca, Ariz. to attend the All-Army Boxing Training Camp.

Final Round

Finals night, scheduled for the weekend of Jan. 29 and 30, will culminate with full-size robotic boxing. Contestants box with life-size robots inside a ring with an announcer. This is a chance for those contestants who did not make it to the finals to come back and compete again.

Institute advises screenings for early detection

American Institute for Cancer Research

Recent news reports about cancer screenings may have you wondering what types of cancer tests your health checkup for 1994 should include. Three of the most common types of cancer to strike Americans are breast cancer, prostate cancer and colon cancer. However, the American Institute for Cancer Research reminds us that all three cancers can be curable if detected early through cancer screening.

The standards for breast cancer screening through mammograms were recently reviewed by both consumer groups and health professionals at a meeting sponsored by the National Cancer Institute. Debate focused on whether women ages 40 to 49 should get mammograms every year instead of every two years, as guidelines currently recommend. While some physicians believe more frequent screening will improve breast cancer detection, others feel that mammograms for women under 50 may either fail to detect tumors because of denser breast tissue in premenopausal women, or may mistake noncancerous fibrous masses for a tumor, causing unnecessary biopsies and anxiety for patients.

Although the current federal guidelines for breast cancer screening were judged to be adequate, women in their 40s who have had a family history of breast cancer are now advised to discuss mammography with their health-care providers. Otherwise, federal guidelines state that women 50 and older should have annual breast-cancer screenings; those age 40 to 49 should have mammograms every two years; women age 35 should have a base-line mammogram for comparison with later screenings; and all women over age 20 should conduct monthly breast self-exams and have physician exams as part of routine physicals.

Because early detection of breast cancer has resulted in very high five-year survival rates of 93 to 100 percent of patients, more women have become encouraged to follow the screening guidelines.

Screening men for prostate cancer has also gained more attention recently, especially with the recent prostate cancer deaths of several celebrities. The guidelines for prostate cancer testing don't change with age: all men over 40 are advised by health authorities to get a rectal exam as well as a newly available test called the "PSA" (prostate-specific antigen) test each year. This test is able to detect prostate tumors while they are still localized and have not spread, and it could drastically improve the survival rate for those who are diagnosed with prostate cancer.

Both men and women over 40 need a yearly rectal exam to detect colon cancer. Yearly occult blood tests are advised for people age 45 and over. Sigmoidoscopies (examinations of the rectum and lower colon using a flexible tube) are advised every three to five years beginning at age 50. Over the next several years, researchers will be developing a blood test that can help detect the likelihood of inherited colon cancer by identifying a defective gene.

Cancer screenings are an important part of preventing cancer and detecting it early enough to treat and possibly cure it. Improved rates of cancer screening among Americans are responsible in large part for the increase in rates of cancer survival beyond five years.

To learn more about eating for lower cancer risk, send a stamped (52 cents postage), self-addressed envelope to the American Institute for Cancer Research, Dept. DG, Washington, D.C. 20069.

36th hosts King celebration

By Denise Howell
36th Engineer Group

Headquarters and Headquarters Company of the 36th Engineer Group hosted a Martin Luther King Jr. birthday celebration Jan. 13 at the Sightseeing Road Chapel, Building 2820.

Group Equal Opportunity Non-commissioned Officer Sgt. 1st Class Abdur Hassan coordinated the program "to re-create the Civil Rights rallies (of the '60s) for the younger soldiers who may not know what they were all about." The program included poetry, prayer and song, along with excerpts from King's "I Have A Dream" speech.

Group Adjutant Capt.Glenn Kallgren described, through highlights of King's life, how the Civil Rights Movement changed lives.

"Because of Dr. King, we all can take advantage of the opportunities out there, not just whites. But we've still got a lot more work to do," he said.

Company Commander Capt. Debra Daniels, in reference to the mixed audience, said, "Some of you may not realize that not even 30 years ago, most of us wouldn't be sitting here, together. And I, an African-American female, surely wouldn't be standing here in front of this company, commanding."

Twenty-one year old Spc. Teresa Goodman of HHC was born after King's death, and says she only remembers him from Black History Month activities in grade school. Goodman said this program helped her understand "some of the feelings people had back then." She said the program helped her and others realize that the King holiday is not just for blacks only. "It's for everyone," she said. "We all have to come together as one."

In recognition of their participation in the King Day celebration, soldiers received the Group Coin from Group Commander Col. Dean Kershaw.

ACS to host free computer courses in Feb., March

Army Community Service

Two computer training courses were conducted in January by Army Community Service's Family Member Employment Assistance Program.

The courses were Introduction to Keyboard and Lotus 1-2-3.

The following military spouses, soldiers and soldiers getting out of the military received training.

• Introduction to Keyboard: Karen Drake, Barbara Lowe, Magda Lane, Hector-Rivera-Nieves, Brenda Thompson, Kenneth Lawson, Elba Casiano, Saundra Hunter, Patrizia Perez, Marta Diaz, Nancy Hadley, Clayton Hadley, Enriquie DeGracia, Emily Gaines, Vanessa Smith, Carlas Jones, Pamela Roberts, Carolina Morales, Monika Caballero and Anna Cruz.

• Lotus 1-2-3: Patricia Edwards, Samuel Padgett, Margaret Ashley, Rickey Ashley, Susie G'Segner, Jewel Curry, Estrellita Silva, Maria Lopez, Dalinda Roach, Linda Martinez, Angela Fontain, Debra Bertacini, Towanda Moore, Cindy Detnler, Susanne Globe, Laura Ford, Faamaneenee Ioana, Sue Lonsdale, Myra Dupra, Jari Lewis and Jeff Monroe.

The Family Member Employment Assistance Program will continue to provide skill development training during fiscal 1994.

A registration session will be conducted Feb. 1 at Building 359, Family Unit Network Center, from 9 a.m. until noon.

Military spouses, active duty soldiers and soldiers getting out of the military may register to receive training in WordPerfect 5.1.

Session dates and time are the following:

Session one: Feb. 14, 15, 17, 21, 22, 24 and 28 and March 1 (6 p.m. to 8:30 p.m.)

Session two: March 3, 7, 8, 10, 14, 15, 16 and 17 (6 to 8:30 p.m.)

Individuals interested in these courses must meet the following requirements: Must have at least two years of recent experience in word processing and type at least 40 words per minute.

There are only 10 slots available for each course so early registration is required. Registrations will be made on a first-come, first-served basis.

For additional information and assistance, visit FMEAP at Building 2643.

Injuries: More children hurt in winter, spring

Egleston Children's Hospital

The staff at Egleston Children's Hospital at Emory University can count on it like clockwork. They're going to treat more children with broken bones during the month after Christmas and during the year's first warming trend in late March than at any other time of year.

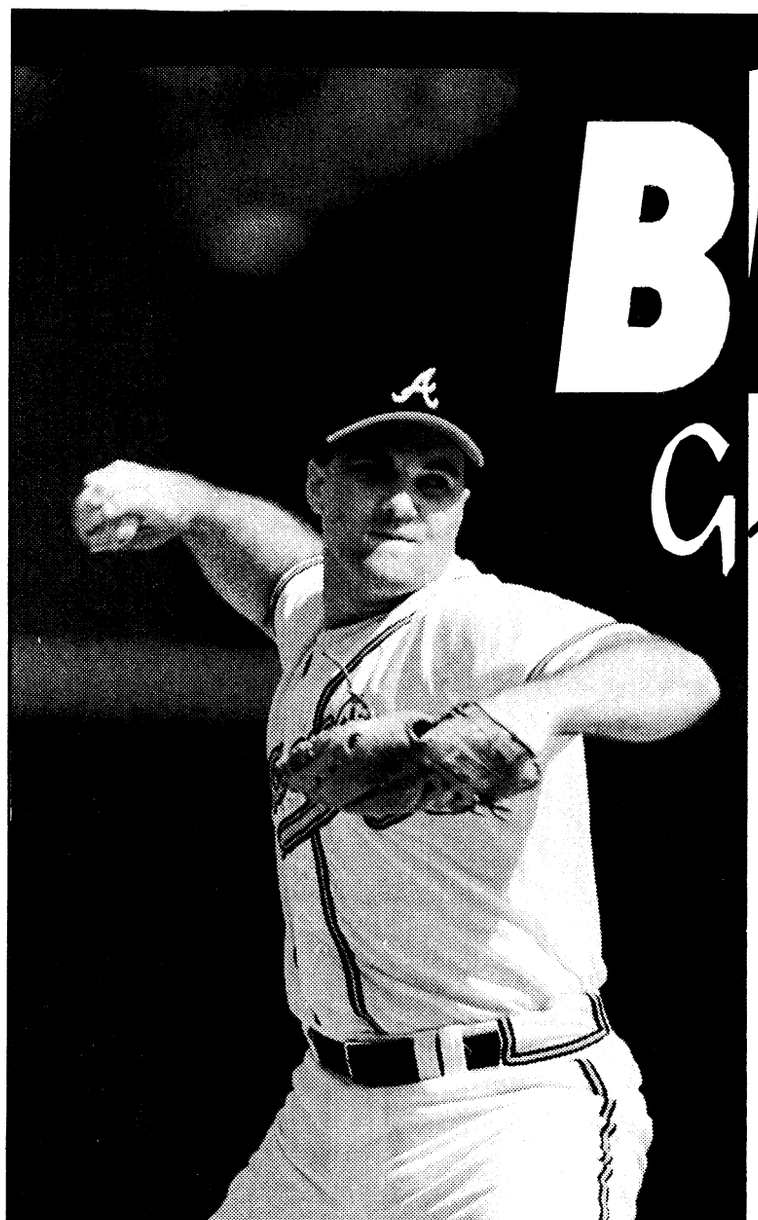
"We start seeing an increase in fracture injuries early on Christmas Day," said Dr. Mark F. Stegelman, physician coordinator of Egleston's pediatric urgent care centers. "Typically, broken bones happen as kids experiment with new bicycles, skateboards, in-line skates and other toys.

"In the spring, there is another increase in fractures — many occurring from the use of trampolines and from playground injuries involving forts and jungle gyms."

Parents are often surprised at what's changed in treating fractures over the past 10 to 20 years, Stegelman said. Chances are, for instance, their children probably won't see the heavy, bulky plaster of Paris casts of old. Those are usually replaced by lightweight fiberglass. The newer fiberglass casts are also likely to double as fashion statements for children, who can choose from a wide variety of decorative accents, from glow-in-the dark colors to rainbow designs to the camouflage effect.

Unlike the old casts, which would not hold up under moisture, the new fiberglass casts won't lose their strength if they get wet. The use of a waterproof cast cover is recommended, however, since they take quite a long time to dry.

Walking casts are more likely to be used for broken legs than they used to be, Stegelman said, adding that crutches are often still used with the walking casts to provide support and to protect the leg from being hit or bumped.



Even with all the changes, the basic principles of first aid and treatment of fractures have not changed. The goal of treatment is to make sure the bone is in the right position and is prevented from moving while it rebuilds itself, said Stegelman, who points out these facts:

• If you suspect your child may have a broken bone, keep the injured limb from moving around by tying a splint (anything straight and unbending, such as a board for an arm or leg or a Popsicle stick for a finger) above and below the break. Apply ice or some other cold source to the break area and get the child to a hospital emergency room or pediatric urgent care facility immediately.

• Take your child to an emergency facility if there is any suspicion of a fracture — even if it appears to be a "simple" break of a finger or toe. A break involving a bone's growth plate could affect normal growth of the limb.

• Likewise, don't assume that medical care is not needed for a broken nose just because a cast would not be used. A child with a broken nose may need to be referred to a plastic surgeon or ear, nose and throat specialist to reduce the chances of long-term problems.

• About 75 percent of children's fractures are minor. The doctor will splint the broken bone with a temporary cast and the child will be referred to an orthopedic surgeon for follow-up care and a permanent cast in a few weeks.

Thank You

We at Santa's Castle would like to say a heartfelt "Thank-You!" to the following for their generous support this year as well as the many people who wished to remain anonymous that made donations here or at one of the Fort Benning area schools, dental or medical facilities.

We would also like to say "Thank-You!" to the units, groups and individuals who generously donated many hours of their valuable time.

I hope that as the children have smiled on Christmas morning, that you to will be smiling, knowing that you have made it possible!

Walter Matthau is party to another 'Incident'

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

He claims that repeating a role isn't his favorite thing; but, nevertheless, an Oscar-caliber star is tackling a character again.

Walter Matthau previously portrayed 1940s lawyer Harmon Cobb in 1990s Emmy-winning "The Incident" and the 1992 sequel "Against Her Will: An Incident in Baltimore," and he revisits the part again in Sunday's new CBS drama "Incident in a Small Town."

Set in 1954, the case hits close to home for Cobb this time ... since the prime suspect in a murder case is his close friend and law partner, Judge Stoddard Bell ("M*A*S*H" alumnus Harry Morgan, also reprising his role from the past two "Incident" projects). The latter's long-estranged daughter (played by Stephanie Zimbalist) had been targeted for emotional terror by the homicide victim, the father of her child ... and after the slaying, circumstances are such that Cobb knows the only way he can save the judge from being convicted is to reveal a potentially explosive secret in the courtroom.

The new "Incident" film was produced and directed by Academy Award owner, Delbert Mann ("Marty"), who also filled the same jobs on "An Incident in Baltimore;" Nick Stahl, who appeared opposite star and director Mel Gibson in "The Man Without a Face," portrays Zimbalist's son.

Maintaining his lovably curmudgeonly image to a degree, Matthau — who also stars with longtime friend and fairly frequent co-star Jack Lemmon in the current theatrical comedy "Grumpy Old Men" — reveals that his main reason for doing another "Incident" tale is that he was "contracted for three (more) after the first one. Actually, this one is a whole different twist because the plot is just different. "You have to buy into that stuff, which sometimes means suspending your disbelief," he said. Though the setting of Sunday's saga reflects small-town Americana, it was made in Toronto.

What: 'Incident In a Small Town'
When: Sunday at 9 p.m. on CBS

"If you go out in the country up there," he reflects of the all-purpose atmosphere, "you could be in Connecticut or Illinois or even California."

Matthau readily admits that his preference is to play a different character every time. "I don't like series and I don't like sequels, but there are many nice people associated with (the 'Incident' franchise)," he said. "I get to keep working with Harry Morgan, and that's such a delight; I can't wait to go to dinner with him every night, which is something I insist upon. I simply tell him each time, 'I can't do this picture unless you come out to dinner with me.' "

Additionally, Matthau maintains, "It's a pleasure working for a guy like ('Incident' executive producer Robert) Halmi, who is interested in doing a good piece of work and doesn't shove anything down your throat."

Judy Collins to perform in 'blue jeans' concert

Columbus Symphony Orchestra

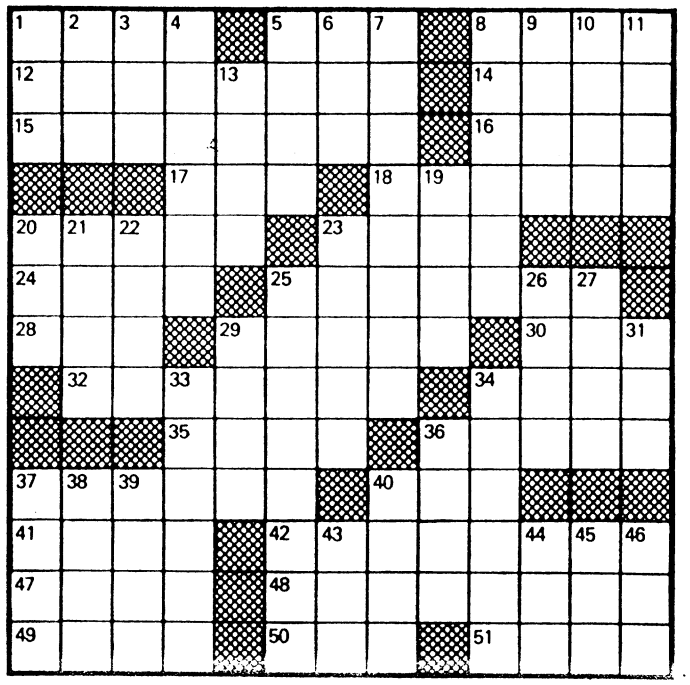
Judy Collins, a writer, performer, singer and songwriter, will join the Columbus Symphony for a "Blue Jeans" Pops concert under the direction of Maestro George Del Gobbo Jan. 29 at 8 p.m. in the Three Arts Theatre.

The concert is sponsored by Swift Textiles with additional funding provided by the Georgia Council for the Arts.

Members of the audience may wear jeans, along with any other '60s-style clothing, and kick back to sounds from "the decade."

The orchestra will perform music from Motown, "Jesus Christ Superstar," the Beach Boys, the Beatles and Collins.

Collins has released 26 albums including "Fires of Eden" and her most recent album of songs, "Judy sings Dylan, Just Like A Woman." She has also written an autobiography, "Trust Your Heart," which offers a glimpse into the generations to which she has contributed.



Tickets are $25 for adults and $10 for students and are available at the CSO office located in the lower level of the Barnett Bank on First Avenue or at the Three Arts Theatre the day of the performance.

Special discounts are available for advanced purchases for groups of 10 or more. Tickets are also available over the phone at 323-5059.

College to host musical events

Columbus College

The Columbus College Jazz Band will perform today at 8 p.m. in the Fine Arts Hall auditorium.

The band will be under the direction of Paul J. Vander Gheynst, professor of music and dean of the School of Arts and Letters.

Active as an arranger and clinician, Vander Gheynst specializes in jazz techniques and improvisations.

Also performing at the concert will be a jazz combo, directed by Dr. William Fry, assistant professor of music and director of the college's Symphonic Wind Ensemble.

Admission is free.

Russian pianist

Russian pianist Dimitriy Sokolov will present a concert Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the Davidson Student Center auditorium on campus.

A 15-year old virtuoso, Sokolov has studied piano since the age of 5 with Sergey Dzenvanovsky, one of Russia's leading pedagogues.

Complimentary tickets are available for the performance, and seating is limited.

The concert is funded by the Alma and Theo McGee Endowment for the Teaching and Performing Arts at Columbus College and through a grant from the Center for International Education, U.S. Department of Education.

For information about these concerts, contact Columbus College's Schwob Department of Music at 568-2049.

soap update

ALL MY CHILDREN: Alec told Gloria about Janine, the African-American woman in his past. Hayley and Charlie talked with Janine's sister, Celia Wilson. While reliving her stabbing of Dimitri at the hunting lodge, Erica came face to face with him. Wait to see: Dixie becomes concerned for Tad.

ANOTHER WORLD: Paulina found something that may prove Carl was involved with Rachel. Donna refused to tell Ryan she'd been with Matt the night Kyle was murdered. Brett told Morgan of Ryan's warning to be careful when she was around him (Morgan). Wait to see: Kate shows an unusual interest in John.

AS THE WORLD TURNS: Kirk rushed Connor to the hospital and stayed with her. Lily learned Damian hired her "stalker." Lucinda found Sam, Royce's missing twin. Later, Sam was startled when her father admitted she'd been adopted. Ned confessed to Emma that he had killed Linc. Wait to see: Lily gets some disturbing news about Damian.

BOLD AND THE BEAUTIFUL: Thorne refused to move back in with Macy. Macy then agreed to a date with Anthony. Anthony's plan to have Karen and Macy wear bikinis made of "disappearing cloth" (the fabric disintegrates in warm water) was foiled by Keith who had Saul make trunks for Anthony and Connor instead. Wait to see: James has plans of his own for Taylor's future.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES: Peter intercepted Isabella's blood samples so he could have them tested to determine her paternity. When Roman found Marlena in John's loft, he explained she'd come to borrow Brady's christening dress for Isabella. Wait to see: Stefano acts to thwart Tony's plans to help John recover his memory.

GENERAL HOSPITAL: Rhonda found the gift Jagger had given Karen. Ned thought he could romance Katherine into becoming an ally in his plans for ELQ. Meanwhile, Lucy was enjoying being the center of attention by Edward, Ned and Damian for the same purpose. Katherine swore she would have revenge on Damian because he had had her fired from ELQ. Wait to see: Alan and Monica are forced to face some upsetting facts.

GUIDING LIGHT: Roger made plans to get his grandson, Peter, away from the Lewises. Vanessa told Billy she wouldn't accept it if he started drinking again. Eve followed Bridget and Holly to the Jessup farm where she was discovered and forced by Roger to remove the bullet. Tipped off by Eve, Ed called the police to reveal where they could find Roger. Wait to see: Vanessa finds herself in another dilemma.

LOVING: When Ally turned down his bid for a weekend in the Caribbean, Cooper invited Tess instead. Later, when Ally changed her mind and decided to go, Cooper successfully persuaded her to change her mind again. Buck told Stacey his financial problems were a thing of the past. To Shana's relief, Leo drew emotionally closer to Patti. Wait to see: Buck's optimism for his future is challenged.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE: Afraid he might lose Cassie, a reluctant Andrew finally agreed to go ahead with the adoption of Beth's baby. Tina, Max and Asa were stunned to learn of Blair's return to Llanview. With Rebecca as his hostage, Todd stole a car and fled to his mother's summer home. Wait to see: Sloan runs into an unexpected development.

YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS: Jack told Nikki he would wait a week for her to say yes (or no) to a reconciliation. Later, Nikki was stunned by Victor's marriage to Cole. When Cole came to see him, Victor admitted to being his father and said Victoria needed to know the truth. Wait to see: April gets distressing news about Robert.

horoscope

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Though this is a good time for home decorating projects, guard against overspending. Business and pleasure mix this week. A work project goes wrong. Romance is a weekend plus.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) This week may not be the best for handling chores and job dealings, but it's a lovely time for enjoying life's pleasures. Feelings will deepen now in romance, and you will enjoy a special outing.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You will put the finishing touches on a job-related project now. Pleasure-seekers need to watch spending. Strain could exist with a meddlesome friend.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) This is a time when things go very much to your liking. Someone may not follow through on his or her word. Give and take are needed in relationships with close ties.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) You will want to shut out the world this week to enjoy family life and personal interests. Concentration is easily thrown off this week. The unexpected in business brings a change in plans.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) Try not to let little things irk you as the week begins. Dwelling on a business delay is not going to speed up things. You could be sold a bill of goods now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You will be devoting extra energy to a career-related project this week. You have wonderful stamina now and are capable of working long hours to reach your goals. Money could be a sore topic between you and a friend.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You could get hot under the collar about a business matter this week, but it's a poor time for confrontations. You shouldn't get paranoid but be aware that some you deal with now may not be telling the exact truth.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21 ) A social function may have business ramifications this week. Try to have good times now without going overboard in your use of credit. Job developments are favorable.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) Keep business aspirations realistic. You could become upset with one friend over a financial concern, yet another friend's deep loyalty becomes apparent.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) This is a week of intermittent progress in a work project. A great start may be followed by some goofing off. Be sensible regarding diet and exercise.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20) You could become agitated this week about a work concern. However, with patience, you will get the job done. It's a poor time to lend money. Don't let anyone play on your sympathies now.

upcoming events

Westville — Residents of the area who have wanted to see Westville Village but have been unable to do so recently or at all because they are limited in their ability to walk distances will have an opportunity to ride into the 1850 town Jan. 31.

The village will be open from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. to those who wish to drive into the area and view the houses.

Access to vehicles is by way of the employee parking lot off Martin Luther King Drive beyond the main gates of the museum.

For more information, write: Westville, P.O. Box 1850, Lumpkin, Ga. 31815; or call (912) 838-6310.

Columbus College — Maya Angelou — author, poet, educator, historian, civil rights activist, actress, playwright, producer and director — will present a program today at 12:30 p.m. in the Fine Arts Hall auditorium at Columbus College.

For more information, call Columbus College's Student Union at 568-2404.

Up With People — The international cast of "Up With People" will bring its stage production "World In Motion" to Hartley Auditorium in the Jekyll Island Convention Center Feb. 1 at 7:30 p.m.

Tickets are $9 for adults, $7 for children and free for seniors and children 4 and under. For tickets, call (912) 635-3400.

Team 162 reunion — Team 162, Red Markers and the society of the Vietnamese Airborne will have a reunion June 23 through 26. For information, write to retired Master Sgt. Otis Amick, 6060 Canterbury Drive, Columbus, Ga. 31902, or call 323-4028.

Club naming contest — The Hidden Door Enlisted Club is sponsoring a contest for all military members corporal and below to name the new enlisted club. The winner will receive a $100 Savings Bond.

Suggestions should be submitted to the Junior Enlisted Advisory Club Council, the Community Operations Division or the Hidden Door Club manager.

Army aviators to meet — The Army Aviation Association of America's annual convention will be April 20 to 24 at the Cervantes Convention Center in St. Louis, Mo.

For more information, write to AAAA, 49 Richmondville Ave., Westport, Conn. 06880-2000, or call (203) 226-8184.

Timberwolf reunion — The sixth annual reunion of the Atlantic Timberwolf Association will be the weekend of May 13 in Raleigh, N.C.

These combat veterans are members of the 104th Infantry Timberwolf Division, which led the fight to defeat the German armies in 1945.

For information, contact Roger L. Pendleton, at 8909 Cromwell Drive, Springfield, Va. 22512.

101st Airborne Division Association — The 49th annual reunion of the 101st Airborne Division Association will be July 6 to 9 in Nashville, Tenn. The week will coincide with the "Week of the Eagles" at Fort Campbell, Ky.

Members of the association, their families and friends will have the opportunity to attend the division parade July 7.

On July 9, members will visit the 101st Airborne Division (Air Assault) and see demonstrations.

For more information, call (615) 337-4103.

1/507 dedicates new 'mock doors'

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

The 1st Battalion (Airborne) 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment, officially dedicated its newest training tool at a ribbon-cutting ceremony Jan. 31.

Construction of three new mock airplane doors, used to run airborne students through the proper procedure for exiting an aircraft during a parachute jump, was begun in July and finished in December.

The structures, which look like concrete and metal aircraft skeletons, were built to the specifications of the C-141 and C-130 airplanes regularly used for jump missions and will be used to train more than 20,000 soldiers annually.

Where the wooden structures previously used for prejump training only accommodated eight to 10 soldiers at a time and had a limited number of static lines, these mock-ups will give airborne students the opportunity to rehearse the actions in the aircraft, according to battalion commander Lt. Col. Michael N. Hawrylak.

"The seats are there, the static lines are there so they actually do the hooking up and the movement inside the aircraft — putting the chairs up and things they will have to do in an aircraft that we would normally not train and rehearse," he said.

The construction of the doors was "the result of the hard work and effort of a lot of different people on Fort Benning," said Brig. Gen. Jack P. Nix Jr., Fort Benning's deputy commanding general

Members of the 507th, the Directorate of Operations and Training, the Directorate of Public Works, the 36th Engineer Group and the 43rd Engineer Battalion collaborated to build the mock-ups in what Nix called "a tremendous self-help effort."

Sgt. 1st Class William G. Reeves, the battalion's noncommissioned officer in charge of maintenance, did much of the welding and metal work himself.

At the ceremony, he was awarded the Army Commendation Medal for his efforts.

The Army Achievement Medal for Civilian Service was awarded to Albert A. Algood of the DOT Devices and Fabrication Branch, who dedicated more than 300 hours of work to completing the mock-ups

Lee R. Thomason, also of DOT, was presented a certificate of appreciation for his hard work assisting in the construction, and 1st Lt. Richard S. Elliot of 1st Platoon, Company B, 43rd Engineer Battalion, accepted a certificate of appreciation on behalf of his platoon for its work drawing up the plan for the mock-up and laying the concrete.

If the project had been undertaken by a civilian contractor, Nix said, it would have cost $50,000.

Instead, he said, "we have about $1,000 invested and, except for a little wood that will have to be replaced, these (mock-ups) will be here 25 years from now with very little maintenance required."

Post decides how to spend $1 million

USAIC Public Affairs Office

How Fort Benning will spend its $1 million Army Community of Excellence award was answered at Wednesday's Commanding General's Advisory Council meeting.

Maj. Chuck Walls, executive officer to the garrison commander, told attendees the decision on how to spend the money was based on feedback provided by soldiers, family members and Department of the Army civilians.

He said that since winning the award was a team effort, it was decided that as many people as possible should benefit.

Walls said the majority of respondents wanted improved barracks and more access to physical activities.

Projects voted for funding are:

- Enhance interiors and exteriors of buildings in Soldiers' Plaza that are high-traffic customer areas, $100,000.
- Completely upgrade Audie Murphy Gym, $195,000.
- Renovate Briant Wells Gym, $30,000, and Kelley Hill Gym, $20,000.
- Provide furnishings for the new Sand Hill Recreation Center, $101,500.
- Upgrade the Kelley Hill running track, $35,000.
- Purchase playground equipment for the housing areas, $70,000.
- Completely renovate Carey Pool, $100,000.
- Provide seed money for the Better Opportunity for Single Soldiers Council, $16,000.
- Provide for a picnic area in the vicinity of the Directorate of Information Management and Fire Station on Main Post, $3,500.
- Air condition the dining facility in the NCO Academy, $4,000.
- Provide assistance to the Chaplains' programs, $5,000.
- Purchase basketball backboards for Kelley Hill, $8,000.
- Build an auto craft shop at Camp Frank D. Merrill at Dahlonega, Ga., $12,000.
- Construct a recreation (biking, jogging, walking) trail along the Upatoi Creek that will tie in with the Riverwalk of Columbus, $300,000.

Ceremony marks beginning of Black History Month observance

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning kicked off Black History Month with an opening ceremony in Marshall Auditorium Tuesday.

"This year's theme, 'Empowering Afro-American Organizations: Present and Future,' is especially appropriate for Fort Benning," said Col. Richard L. Rutledge, garrison commander.

"Fort Benning knows what empowering organizations can do," he said, citing as evidence the Training and Doctrine Command and Army Communities of Excellence awards the post won last year.

Success, Rutledge said, is accomplished by "individuals coming together empowered by a vision of not only what could be, but what should be."

Guest speaker Kenneth B. M. Crooks, president of the Metro Columbus Urban League, echoed that thought in his speech, urging the audience to volunteer time to community organizations to help achieve that vision.

Crooks began by highlighting several individuals who have made a difference in black history, including A. Phillip Randolph, an organizer and activist who is credited with influencing Harry S. Truman in 1948 to pass Executive Order 9981, barring segregation in the armed forces.

Also among them was Ma Rainey, "Mother of the Blues," who made her first appearance at age 12 in the Springer Opera House.

"Having said all this about history," Crooks said, "I now ask you, what is being recorded now that our children and our children's children will read about in the future?"

Crooks pointed out that of 19 health districts in Georgia, Columbus ranks fourth in reported cases of AIDS. He talked about crime and violence being on the rise and asked, "Is what is happening today the way we want to be remembered?"

To make a difference, he said, "We must volunteer."

The answer to our problems, he said, is a "Benning Brigade," a team of seriously committed citizens working through one of the many church and community organizations to address some of the ills of this community.

He urged the audience to "get involved with empowering some of our programs," listing the Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Columbus Housing Authority, YMCA, YWCA, Columbus Volunteer Center and the Urban League as good places to start.

Crooks

Black History Month should be a time to remember those who have made a difference in the past, Crooks said. It is also an opportunity "to shoulder some of the responsibility ... so that when Black History Month comes around next year, you can say you have made a difference," he said.

"It should mean a renewed commitment to help the family, the community and to integrate a country."

OCS to host Patterson Award ceremony

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The 42nd annual Robert P. Patterson Memorial Award ceremony will be Feb. 11 at 9:30 a.m. in Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall, and hosted by the Officer Candidate School, 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment.

Second Lt. David W. Whitmire, 28, who graduated from Officer Candidate School last February, is this year's Patterson Award recipient.

The award goes to the officer selected as the outstanding infantry graduate of OCS during the previous year. It is based on qualities of leadership, academic effectiveness, aptitude and character.

Patterson, for whom the award is named, served as a captain in the U.S. Army during World War I. His battlefield exploits earned him the Distinguished Service Cross, Silver Star and Purple Heart. He later served as judge of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and as secretary of war in the President Harry Truman administration.

When Patterson died in 1952, a trust fund for the award was established with monetary contributions from several friends.

Before entering OCS, Whitmire served with the 10th Special Forces Group (Airborne), Fort Devens, Mass. He also served with the 10th Special Forces Group during operations Desert Storm and Desert Shield in Southwest Asia. He is currently serving as a rifle platoon leader with the 3rd Battalion, 7th Infantry Regiment, 24th Infantry Division, Fort Stewart, Ga.

He entered the Army in July 1983. His first assignment, after completion of initial entry infantry training and the Basic Airborne Course, was the 509th Parachute Infantry Regiment at Fort Rucker, Ala. He later served with the 1st Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, at Fort Stewart.

Whitmire graduated from Wyalusing Valley High School in Wyalusing, Pa., and he attended Mount Wachusett College, Mass., where he achieved a 4.0 grade point average.

He was named to the Commandant's List upon graduating from the Primary Leadership Development Course and has graduated from the Jumpmaster; Air Assault; Pathfinder; Rappel Master; Nuclear, Chemical and Biological; and Jungle Training courses. He was the distinguished honor graduate of the Officer Candidate Course and graduated from the Infantry Officer Basic Course at Fort Benning.

His military awards and decorations include the Meritorious Service Medal with one oak leaf cluster, Army Commendation Medal with four oak leaf clusters, Army Achievement Medal with three oak leaf clusters, two awards of the NCO Professional Development Ribbon, three awards of the Good Conduct Medal, Expert Infantryman Badge, Ranger Tab, Special Forces Tab, Master Parachutist Badge, Air Assault Badge, Pathfinder Badge, Combat Divers Badge, Marine Corps Expert Marksmanship Badge and Belgian Parachute Badge.

He and his wife, Katherine, and their son, reside in Savannah, Ga.

317th soldiers return from Somalia

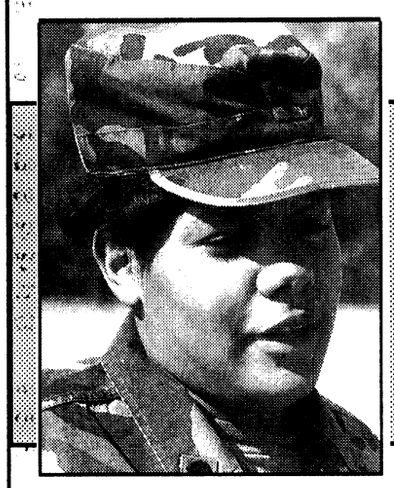
USAIC Public Affairs Office

A group of 37 shivering soldiers of the 317th Engineer and 324th Forward Support battalions, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized), stepped off two CH-47 helicopters into near freezing temperatures at Lawson Army Airfield late Wednesday night.



The soldiers were returning from a 4 1/2-month tour in Somalia where they cleared mines and roadblocks as part of a Quick Reaction Force in support of U.N. forces.

From Lawson Army Airfield, they were bused on the final leg of their journey to the Kelley Hill Gymnasium where they were greeted by the Infantry Band and a couple of hundred fellow soldiers and family members along with Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, commanding general, and Col. Michael Deegan, 3rd Brigade commander.

Their journey began with a three-day cruise from Mogadishu to Kenya.

VARIOUS VOICES

What would you change about television programming?

Spc. Monique Johnson, 519th Personnel Services Company — "I'd like better TV shows than what they have. They should bring back some of the old ones because the new ones are no good."

Maj. Timothy D. Reese, U.S. Army Medical Department Activity — "I would clean up programming in general and increase warnings in advertising for programs. There should be a better way to indicate to parents what the content is."

Sgt. David Gaines, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 29th Infantry Regiment — "I'd lower cable rates for Fort Benning."

1st Sgt. William A. Crowder, 608th Ordnance Company — "I'd like to see more educational programs for children and less violence."

Spc. Walter Rivera, Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "I'd change the language they use on some programs — it's too violent. You have to be careful what children are watching."

Staff Sgt. Darrell T. Simmons, U.S. Army Medical Department Activity — "I"d take some of the violence out and have more stories where families say 'I love you,' because I think we tend to repeat what we see."

Are we turning into TV drones?

By Karen S. Morarle
Bayonet staff writer

commentary

A short, unscientific quiz:

1. How do most Americans spend the majority of their leisure time?

2. What one form of entertainment cuts across almost all social and economic boundaries to reach the vast majority of the population?

3. Where do most Americans get the information they use to form their opinions on everything from taxes to toothpaste?

If you answered "TV" to all of the above questions, you're right. If you didn't, you've been living in a cave in Tibet for the last 50 years. Welcome back.

We love our televisions so much, we've expanded the ways we use them. In the last 15 years or so, we've added to the network programming that used to be the only thing TV had to offer.

Now we watch movies on our sets, click through hundreds of cable channels, play video games and even shop. And we are promised more bells and whistles all the time — movies on demand, tap dancing remote controls. Soon, we won't have to leave the house for any reason.

I suggest the TV manufacturers find a way to incorporate a microwave oven and small refrigerator into the set. That way, we'll hardly have to leave the couch.

I say "we," but I have a confession to make. I realize I'll be branded as un-American, but my children and I watch very little TV; we don't have cable (or a VCR), and we don't own a game system. Not one.

I don't pretend this state of affairs exists because I'm especially virtuous. Mostly, it's because I'm cheap. I hate commercials, and TV in general, I think, is incredibly stupid. There are some shows I absolutely love, mostly because they're fresh. But how often do you learn anything, or even see an original plot, on a situation comedy or prime-time drama?

"Real life" programs like "Cops" or "Unsolved Mysteries" allow us a chance to gawk at other's people's tragedies — murders, beatings, child abuse — between commercials for cars and snack foods. Is it any wonder our society is desensitized? It's too easy to be casual about human suffering when that's what your entertainment consists of.

Then, of course, there's the court channel ... "infomercials" ... the weird talk show channel ... the amateur bowling channel ...

How many of our children are overweight? How many of us are overweight? How many of us read more than a book a year? How many of us accept violence (as long as it involves other people) as an accepted fact of daily life? How many of us develop new abilities, learn new things, spend time talking with our families instead of staring at a screen with them?

Be selective. Watch at least one positive show for every negative one. Watch a nature show, watch a children's movie with your children, and then talk with them about it.

Then turn it off. There's a real world out there, and it's nowhere to be found on TV.

CG: Black History Month promotes harmony

In recognition of the numerous contributions of black Americans to America's diverse ethnic, racial, social, political and religious history, February is proclaimed Black History Month at Fort Benning.

The 1994 theme for Black History Month is "Empowering Afro-American Organizations — Present and Future."

Black History Month is a means to help increase awareness, promote harmony and improve understanding among all Americans.

I encourage all personnel at this installation and in surrounding communities to join with fellow soldiers and citizens in enjoying activities during Black History Month.

TRADOC cdr praises post for safe holidays

Congratulations on a successful holiday season. Leadership and dedication of members of your command made a difference and saved lives.

Fort Benning had the best holiday safety record in years; others did equally well. Your continued care and concern for soldiers, civilians and family members paid great dividends. Well done.

It is essential to keep force protection in sight. Maintain momentum, improve where you can, and carry your success forward through 1994.

The following areas of concern will help focus protection efforts:

• Privately-owned vehicle accidents remain the Army's and the Training and Doctrine Command's leading cause of soldier deaths; the trend is rising from fiscal 1993.

• Firearms-related incidents continue to cause unnecessary deaths and injuries.

• Acts of workplace violence are increasing. TRADOC suffered two deaths and one serious gunshot injury as result of two such incidents in 1993.

During 1993, live-fire training accidents caused one death and one serious injury, while recreational activity accidents, including drowning, caused four deaths.

Risk assessment and management implementation remains imperative. Keep emphasis on installation infrastructure safety. Plan now for your 1994 "Stand Up For Safety Day."

Commanders worked hard in 1993 to reduce military injuries and overall accident fatalities, but there is still room for improvement. Let's make 1994 the safest year in TRADOC's history.

Protecting the force is the commander's business.

Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr.
TRADOC commander

Scouts thank public for year's support

I want to thank everyone for their support of Scouting in 1993.

The past year was another great one for Fort Benning and the surrounding community in Scouting. We had our fifth consecutive year of growth in membership and Scout units, we reached our financial goals and we had many rewarding activities throughout the year.

If it were not for the volunteers and the support of the community, these things could not happen. More than 300 volunteers helped bring the Scouting program to more than 1,800 Scouts in 67 units in the Fort Benning District.

Thanks also to those who supported Scouting by either working or contributing to the "Friends of Scouting" finance campaign. Because of these accomplishments, the Fort Benning District was awarded the Quality District Award by the National Council of Boy Scouts of America. We were the only one (to receive this award) in the Chattahoochee Council, which serves 15 counties.

Thanks to all the military units and personnel who supported Scouting throughout the year. All major commands helped make "Friends of Scouting" successful. We received support for Cub Scout Day Camp, Boy Scout Summer Camp, the Council Fall Encampment, Scouting for Food and the Christmas tree sales from many units.

Also, thanks to the school system for its cooperation with Scouting. Special thanks go to the Office of the Army National Guard, which was involved in every project throughout the year.

I am using this venue to show my appreciation because The Bayonet and The Advertiser Company also helped promote Scouting throughout the year. There is no better way to get the word out. They are genuinely interested in this community.

Again, thanks to all for support of the Boy Scouts of America and the youth of our community. Fort Benning is truly a "Community of Excellence."

Why are we particular about color, nationality?

I am a German white woman who has noticed that black people go to black people, white people go to white people, Germans go to Germans and Americans go to Americans.I think that such prejudice should change. Why are we so particular about color or nationality? Are we not all the same? I don't have much knowledge of the causes of racism or of what went on in the past in the United States.

I accept people for who they are not for who they have been. It takes a lot of nerve to be yourself in modern times.

That is why I respect men such as the Rev. Vernon Jones. He took the first steps toward civil rights even before the Rev. Martin Luther King. As I watched a movie about Jones and his life, I began to feel ashamed for what others had done in the name of race.

I decided to write this letter and tell everybody that we are all the same We are all brothers and sisters, and with God there exists no skin color.

Lounge reopens

USAIC Public Affairs Office

A ribbon-cutting ceremony at Fort Benning Tuesday at 4 p.m. officially opened the newly renovated Main Post Bowling Center lounge.

Charlotte Jackson, chief of the Nonappropriated Services Division, and Gene Riles, manager of the Main Post Bowling Center, assisted Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, commanding general of Fort Benning, in cutting the ribbon.

The $112,000 lounge renovation was done by the Nonappropriated Fund Services Division Maintenance Team.

Money for the project came from Fort Benning's morale, welfare and recreation operations. Funds for MWR are generated by the post's various clubs and activities, such as the bowling program.

No appropriated funds were used in the renovation.

According to officials, profits from the post's bowling program have been among the highest of any Training and Doctrine Command installation bowling program.

All profits are returned to the installation in the form of improved facilities and services.

The renovation will provide a modern comfortable lounge where soldiers and their families can relax during off duty time.

Stephanie Krawczyk/Special to The Bayonet

Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White (left), Col. Dean Kershaw and Anne Galloway talk inside the new bowling center lounge.

It will seat 55 people and has a state-of-the-art laser jukebox and video system.

Construction is also under way to renovate the snack bar portion of the bowling center at a cost of $125,000. The center was originally constructed in 1963.

PT speed limit 15

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The speed limit on Main Post during the established physical training hours (6 to 7:30 a.m.) Monday through Friday is 15 mph.

The speed limit when passing individual runners or formations is 10 mph. Both have priority on post during the stated hours, according to a post policy. The following roads are exempt from the new speed limits because all running is banned on those roads.

Posted speed limits remain in effect on these roads:

- 10th Division Road
- Dixie Road, except the portion from Sightseeing Road (Sandy Patch) to Lawson Army Airfield
- Sunshine Road
- Lumpkin Road from Dixie Road to Custer Road
- Custer Road from Benning Road to Eisenhower Exchange

Also, the 82nd Airborne Division Road from Sunshine Road to Bradshaw Road will be closed to traffic from 6 to 7:30 a.m. Monday through Friday for use by formations and individual runners. Kelley Hill is completely closed to traffic during this time.

The 11th Airborne Division Road on Sand Hill is also closed to motorists from 5:30 to 7 a.m. Monday through Saturday.

USAIC to host symposium

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The U.S. Army Infantry School will host the Individual Combatant Modeling and Simulation Symposium 1994 Feb. 15 to 17.

INCOMSS-94 will provide a forum to share information and to focus Department of Defense, Department of Army, civilian academia and industry attention on the Land Warrior Test Bed examining soldier modeling and simulations.

It will further identify the Land Warrior Test Bed concept as the proponent for individual combatant and soldier system representations in virtual environments.

The conference will provide a forum for briefings, discussions and demonstrations in the rapidly expanding area of individual combatant modeling and simulations for training, analysis, concept and combat development.

The symposium will be conducted by the Dismounted Warfighting Battle Lab in the newly opened Warfighting Simulation Center (Buildings 2864 to 2871).

ADAPCP sponsors adversity workshop

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

Steps toward overcoming adversity

- Face the fact of your adversity
- Look at self-defeating attitudes
- Replace or develop new attitudes
- Be aware of emotional response to the adverse situation
- Develop specific workplan
- Stick to it!

The Civilian Counseling Services section of the Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Program sponsored a workshop Jan. 27 about overcoming adversity.

Three speakers addressed a group of more than 70 civilian and military participants during the three-hour program at the Youth Activities Center.

Richard N. Robertson, a licensed therapist; Norman Dunlap, a minister; and Patrick Valentine, who has a doctorate of philosophy in psychology; spoke about dealing with adversity in both a personal and professional setting.

Robertson, who is also a pastoral counselor, encouraged the group to "give up attitudes that foster helplessness and depression that can destroy us emotionally and sometimes physically." Changes in these attitudes, he pointed out, can empower individuals to cope better with adversity.

Among the several negative attitudes he highlighted were a belief that one must be flawless, feelings of helplessness and seeking approval from others.

Replacing feelings of negativity, encouraged Robertson, by developing new attitudes can help when faced with adversity.

He suggested developing a specific plan to deal with adverse situations and sticking to it. "Don't lose faith," he said. "Keep at your plan and remember it's one day at at time."

Norman Dunlap related his own personal experience with facing and overcoming adversity. His life was marked by tragedy with the death of two daughters, one from sudden infant death syndrome and one from leukemia.

Dunlap explained that nothing can protect you from adversity but "you can get better and not bitter."

Dunlap is now president of Leads Ministry in Columbus.

Valentine, who is a research psychologist with the Army Research Institute, pointed out that "we all have similar types of situations we must live through." He cited a loss of a job, spouse or income as major losses in life that many people face.

He encouraged workshop participants to share personal stories of overcoming difficulties. Valentine said individuals should accept responsibility for adversity in their lives and then make a choice to do something about it.

Yvonne Wilbanks, civilian program coordinator for ADAPCP, coordinates various workshops for Fort Benning personnel .

Civilian employees experiencing difficulties can contact Wilbanks for confidential screening and referral services at 545-2475.

Time to update medical records

Martin Army Community Hospital

Military beneficiaries who are in the hospital's Gateway To Care program and receive their care from the Primary Care for the Uniformed Services Family Practice Clinic will receive a letter about updating their records.

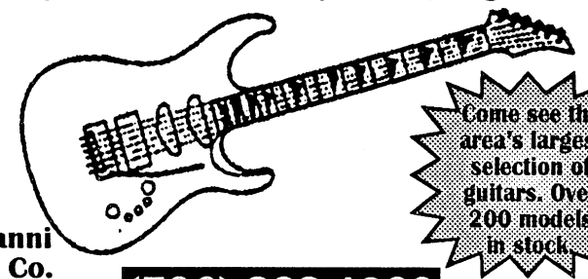
Approximately 12,000 letters are being sent out, hospital officials said.

An annual requirement, the record update is designed to ensure the hospital maintains as accurate of information as possible regarding those beneficiaries who are using the clinic, said Mark Holloway, chief of the hospital's Coordinated Care Division. The letter is made up of two separate sheets of paper and should be received by beneficiaries no later than Feb. 15, Holloway said.

Only one letter is being sent out per family, unless the family has indicated two separate mailing addresses. If a beneficiary doesn't receive a letter by the 15th, but is certain he or she belongs to the PRIMUS Family Practice Clinic, the Coordinated Care Division should be notified at 544-1428 or 544-1447.

Since February 1993 when the PRIMUS clinic became a family practice clinic, the volume of beneficiaries assigned to the clinic has continued to rise — from 16,000 patients, the number of patients initially assigned, to a total number now in excess of 21,000 beneficiaries.

By updating the hospital's records, those beneficiaries who have departed the area or those who no longer wish to use the clinic may be removed from the assigned roll. Beneficiaries who disenroll from the clinic are reminded that they should carefully consider their options for medical services.



Beneficiaries not in the hospital's Gateway To Care program either obtain civilian medical care at a substantial cost or they get their primary medical care from the hospital's Pediatric Clinic, Emergency Room, Obstetrics and Gynecology Clinic or the Outpatient Clinic, which cannot follow patients for long-term medical problems. In any case, it's not a coordinated system like that found in Gateway, Holloway said.

In addition to updating the hospital's records, a short questionnaire has been attached. The questionnaire is designed to ask beneficiaries what they think of the clinic and what it can do better, Holloway said.

Beneficiaries who received a letter in the mail should return it promptly to the hospital. By following the instructions in the letter, the beneficiary will ensure his or her medical care is not interrupted.

Beneficiaries may return the enrollment verification form to the hospital's Coordinated Care Division, Building 9204, Room 107, or mail it to the address noted, whichever is easier.

CID seeks information in on-post thefts

Criminal Investigation Division

The U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Division command is seeking information on two crimes recently committed on post.

Jan. 1, between 11 a.m. and 11 p.m., a person or persons broke a window from the rear door of the Directorate of Community Activities, Building 241, and stole four computers, a color monitor and two computer modems. The items were new and still in their original boxes.

One computer is an M-South, serial number 15064701; the other three are Zenith Data Systems models 24334, serial numbers 3PSBCG006743, 3PSBCG006744 and 3PSBCG006745. The monitor is a Mitsubishi, model number 710VX, serial number 20128.

A $1,000 reward will be paid to anyone providing information leading to the recovery of a stolen truck or the identification and conviction of the thief or thieves

The modems are Com-Link Computer modems, serial numbers CY26418 and CY28180.

Anyone having information that could help identify the thief or thieves and recover the stolen property may contact the CID Office at 545-7909 or the Military Police at 545-5222.

The CID resident agency is also seeking information on the theft of a blue 1993 Chevrolet Silverado pick-up truck, Georgia license tag QF-22176, stolen from Fort Benning Nov. 24.

A $1,000 reward will be paid to anyone providing information leading to the recovery of the truck or the identification and conviction of the thief or thieves.

Anyone with such information may contact Special Agent Robert S. Reid at 545-3257 or write the Fort Benning Resident Agency, USACIDC, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905. All information will be considered strictly confidential.

WWII vets may request ID badges from DoD

Department of Veterans Affairs

Identification badges to World War II veterans who plan to attend U.S.-sponsored events in June commemorating the D-Day invasion of Normandy, France, will be issued on request by the Department of Veterans Affairs and the Department of Defense.

A joint working group will issue the badges to World War II veterans until April. The badges will be issued only to veterans and will cover immediate family members planning to attend one or more of the following ceremonies:

June 5 — Airborne ceremony, St. Mere Eglise

June 6 — U.S. Army Ranger Assault, Point Du Hoc

Utah Beach Commemoration, Utah Beach, Normandy Omaha Beach Commemoration, Omaha Beach, Normandy U.S. National Ceremony, U.S. Cemetery, Colleville Sur Mer

Applications for the free badges are available by writing to World War II Commemoration Committee, ATTN: Veteran Identification Program, 5001 Eisenhower Ave., Alexandria, Va. 22333.

World War II veterans will be asked to provide rank at the time of D-Day, former unit or ship designation, the veteran's tour group or association they are traveling with, passport numbers of family members accompanying them and the events they wish to attend.

Veterans will be asked to return the completed application with a copy of the veteran's World War II service discharge papers (WD Form A-60, Department of Defense Form 214, or equivalent), or a statement why the document is unavailable.

In the event the veteran is deceased, family members may apply using the same documentation. Only one badge per qualifying family will be issued.

The badges are for identification and are neither tickets to the events, nor will they guarantee preferred or reserved seating. Viewing space at the events is on a first-come-first-served basis.

For more information regarding the Veteran Identification Program, contact Lt. Col. Alfred D. Lott or Staff Sgt. Jeff Fry at (703) 692-2096.

AER to celebrate birthday

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Army Emergency Relief will celebrate its 52nd birthday Saturday.

Fort Benning's AER section and the installation are celebrating the occasion today from 9 a.m. until noon at the post's Main Mall, where AER representatives will pass out literature, answer AER-related questions and serve birthday cake.

Coffee and doughnuts will be offered to clients at the AER office, Building 2643, today.

Army Emergency Relief, a nonprofit organization, has been the Army's emergency financial assistance organization since it was established Feb. 5, 1942. It is dedicated solely to helping the Army take care of its own.

Eligibility for assistance is limited to: soldiers on extended active duty and their family members; reserve component soldiers on continuous active duty for a period in excess of 30 days and their family members; soldiers retired for physical disability after 20 or more years of active duty; and reserve component soldiers after reaching age 60 and their families; and widows, widowers and orphans of soldiers who died while on active duty or after retirement.

This year's AER fund campaign kicks off March 1 at 2 p.m. in Classroom 5 of Infantry Hall. The theme for the campaign, which runs through May 15, is "Helping the Army Take Care of Its Own." AER is in Building 2643 of Soldiers' Plaza.

More than $775,000 in assistance was given to 1,395 active duty and retired soldiers and their families at Fort Benning during 1993.

USAIC TV seeks talented soldiers

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

The Public Affairs Office is seeking talented soldiers who are interested in working for the post television station.

"I encourage commanders and directors to notify interested soldiers," said Paula J. Randall, command information officer. Interviews will be conducted at the Public Affairs Office and soldiers can call to set up a time.

Duties will include news gathering, script writing and operating professional broadcast equipment.

According to Spc. Caejar A. Cox of USAIC-TV, experience is a plus but is not required.

"Training will be provided, but interested soldiers should at least have a good military appearance, a desire to work in the broadcasting field and have good communications skills, including strong English skills and a good speaking voice," Cox said.

"They should also have at least six months retainability at Fort Benning and be able to be released from their current positions in order to work for the station."

"This is an excellent opportunity for soldiers to gain valuable experience in public speaking, news gathering and communication skills," he said. "But, they must be willing to put in the work."

Soldiers will be selected through an interview-audition process. Those who are interested can call Randall at 545-2201 for more information or to schedule an interview.

The public is invited.

CG welcome Feb. 24

The commanding general's welcome briefing will be Feb. 24 at 3:30 p.m. in Marshall Auditorium in Building 4, Infantry Hall. Those attending must be seated by 3:10 p.m.

For information, call 545-4694 or 545-4630.

CID offering rewards for info on crimes

The Fort Benning Criminal Investigation Division is offering $500 rewards for information about two crimes:

• The first involves a stolen four-wheel all-terrain vehicle and the identification and apprehension of the perpetrator.

The vehicle, a red 1985 Yamaha 250cc all-terrain vehicle, identification number JY459V007GV016566, was stolen from Malone Range Dec. 26 or 27.

Anyone with information can call Special Agent Mark Howell at 545-7908 or 545-2414.

• The second crime involves a robbery.

At approximately 11:30 p.m. Jan. 16, an unidentified black male, approximately 6 feet tall, 220 pounds and wearing a ski jacket, robbed a family member at knife point as she exited her vehicle on Moon Street in the McGraw Manor housing area.

Anyone with information about this incident can call the Military Policy Activity at 545-5222. Your identity will be kept confidential.

MPs seek information on escaped prisoner

A prisoner escaped from the U.S. Army Infantry Center detention facility Jan. 18 at approximately 9 p.m.

The prisoner's name is Pvt. 1 Earnest J. Gill. He was last seen wearing battle dress uniform with no jacket or gloves. He is a black male, 6 feet, 1 inch, 180 pounds and 29 years old. He was placed in pretrial confinement from Fort McClellan, Ala., for larceny, housebreaking and forgery.

If any person matching this description is observed, contact the Military Police desk immediately at 545-5222.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland and range areas will take place Monday through Feb. 13.

If weather permits, the following compartments may be affected: A-12, B-2, C-1, H-2, K-3, K-8, K-11, K-16, L-6, M-2, M-6, M-8, P-1, P-3, Q-3, Q-4, Q-6, S-1, U-3, U-4, V-1, W-2, X-5 and Y-1.

Burning will occur in pine stands within these compartments to enhance endangered species habitat and training areas.

People using these areas for recreation must vacate before 9:30 a.m. daily.

Training units using compartments adjacent to these areas may experience drift smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while traveling in these areas because of the potential for reduced visibility.

CIF hours change

Beginning Monday, Central Issue Facility issue and turn-in hours for permanent party soldiers will be: issue, Mondays and Thursdays from 11:45 a.m. to 2:45 p.m.; turn-in, Wednesdays and Fridays, 11:45 a.m. to 2:45 p.m.

For more information, call 545-4146.

Military may apply for SSN on post Feb. 17

Military members who need Social Security numbers for family members may apply at the Main Post Chapel Center next to Doughboy Stadium Feb. 17 from 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

Personnel from the Social Security Administration will be available to receive applications. Documents needed are a certified copy of the person's birth certification and some other type of identification such as school records or shot records.

Legal Assistance Office personnel say every person age 1 or older must have a Social Security number before that person can be claimed as a dependent on a tax return.

Vehicle registration deadline nears

The deadline for 1994 vehicle registration in Chattahoochee County is as follows based on the owner's last name:

• Feb. 28 — E to K
• May 2 — S to Z.

There is a $15 penalty per vehicle for failure to register by the deadline. Payment must be made by cash or check, drawn on a local bank, which includes the soldier's work number and the company commander's name.

To avoid the ad valorem tax, Georgia nonresidents must bring to the office a complete affidavit available from the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, a leave and earnings statement, proof of insurance and the registration fee ($20 for each car or truck and $12 for each trailer).

The vehicle registration office is located at the County Courthouse in Cusseta. Office hours are 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

ACAP expands eligibility period

The Army Career and Alumni Program has expanded eligibility for transition services to include those who are otherwise eligible for the services to use them up to 90 days after separation.

For more information, call ACAP Division at (703) 325-7280, DSN 221-7280.

Automotive exams to be administered

The Automotive Service Excellence Examination will be administered May 5, 10 and 12 at Fort Benning test centers.

Eligible soldiers may take three examinations free if they are taken for college credit. There is a $15 per test fee if tests are taken for certification or recertification.

All examinees must pay a $20 registration fee. The deadline to register is March 4 at any post education center.

Education center locations are:

• Main Post Education Center, Building 2602, 545-4863.
• Kelley Hill Education Center, Building 9027, 544-3689.
• Sand Hill Education Center, Building 3245, 544-9961.
• Harmony Church Education Center, Building 4635, 544-6311.

Firewood sales halted

The sale of firewood cutting permits at Fort Benning has been halted until further notice, officials said. No firewood is available for cutting at this time. For information, call Dean Trawick, Savannah District Corps of Engineers Forest Resources Office, at 687-7305.

Soldiers must make appointments for AER

The Army Emergency Relief is processing clients' requests for assistance on appointment basis. Clients are requested to schedule an appointment and have all required paperwork when reporting to AER.

If you are unable to keep your scheduled appointment, a courtesy call is required. Call 545-2536, 545-7517, 545-4357 or 545-4043.

first at Community Activities

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Fort Benning's Directorate of Community Activities operates on the pledge that soldiers and their families deserve the best.

Given the fact the morale, welfare and recreation team won both the 1992 and 1993 Training and Doctrine Command Communities of Excellence award for best MWR and family support, it's not hard to realize that the members take their pledge seriously.

"Everything we do is based on what our customers want," said Debbi Addison, DCA communities of excellence representative. "We received nearly 4,000 customer comment cards during the last fiscal year and many of the improvements we made, from changing the hours of operation at certain facilities to actually building new facilities, came about as a direct result of what our customers said they wanted."

Addison said DCA personnel are looking forward to showing the Army-level COE team how Fort Benning works to make the best even better.

"We will have the same evaluator this year so we have a real opportunity to show her all of the outstanding developments that have happened since her last visit."

The improvements and new programs the team will be shown include:

• Renovation of the Golf Pro Shop and the addition of lights to the driving range at the Follow Me Golf Course.

• The addition of new cabins at the Uchee Creek Recreation Area.

• The completion of a comprehensive single soldiers living community survey that identified the concerns of post single soldiers and has already resulted in the addition of a neighborhood lounge and grill at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center, and upgrade of fitness facilities and equipment.

• The construction of new facilities planned for completion this year that include a new junior enlisted club, a 60-unit guest house, a youth outreach center for McGraw Manor, a recreation center for Sand Hill and a miniature golf course and batting cages for Main Post.

• Construction of a new lounge at the Main Post Bowling Center.

DCA Marketing Director Brian Smith said nothing is left to chance when it comes to planning the very best MWR and family support for its customers.

"Our soldiers and their families truly deserve the very best," he said. "Our strategies are the result of a dynamic blend of scientific marketing research data, industry trends, financial management, surveys, five-year and MWR strategic planning. All of these come together to enable us to reach our goal of providing the best MWR and family support in the Army."

Addison said MWR customers are treated to facilities and services that are every bit as equal or even better than the services and facilities found in the civilian community.

"This is possible because the principles of Total Army Quality are followed on a daily basis," Addison said. "We are constantly looking for ways to improve customer service, and we involve our employees in the process."

Plan now for life after Army

Army Career and Alumni Program

Most people leaving the military find themselves at a disadvantage when they start looking for a job, according to Ted Craig, Fort Benning's Army Career and Alumni Program transition services manager.

"It's important to think far ahead," Craig said. "We offer career guidance to people. It's never too early to begin thinking about what you may want to do after the military. We help people based on their individual needs."

Below is a timetable for job hunting while still in the service.

12 months before leaving:

• Talk with local transition center personnel.

• Visit the Retirement Services Office if you are retiring.

• Discuss with your family, possible options, setting goals for the job and location search.

• Decide where you want to live after leaving the military.

• Decide what types of jobs you qualify for and the income you will need.

• Start subscriptions or check the local library for professional or trade journals.

• Make sure you have or can acquire any necessary license you need for your chosen profession.

• Check your financial status and make plans to have enough money to cover several months of expenses if you don't find a job immediately.

• Research job possibilities, job markets and the economic conditions in the area you want.

9 months before leaving:

• Decide what type of work you are going to look for.

• Do first drafts of your resume.

• If possible, visit the area where you plan to move to after leaving the military; or write the local chamber of commerce for information.

• For job and real estate information, subscribe to weekend newspapers from the area where you plan to move.

• Continue research.

• Keep in touch with the local transition point.

6 months before leaving:

• Attend an ACAP transition class whether retiring or getting out of the Army.

• Finalize your resume; decide if you need help in developing the best possible resume and if you need to hire a professional resume writer.

• Develop a list of employers in the field in which you are interested; also, determine any friends you might have in the private sector who may be able to help you.

• Contact an executive recruiter for assistance if you qualify and are looking for a job in this category.

• Begin developing a contingency plan for job and location in case your plan falls through.

3 months before leaving:

• Send out resumes and begin making telephone calls to check on their arrival.

• Begin replying to want ads in newspapers and magazines.

• Visit the state employment agency where you plan to live.

• After each job interview, evaluate your performance and decide what you did right and what you need to improve.

• Keep in touch with your local transition office.

For information, call 545-4892 or 545-4902 or go by the office in Building 2617 in Soldiers' Plaza.

ACAP plans employment seminar

Army Career and Alumni Program

A seminar about federal employment will be Feb. 17 from 8 to 10 a.m. in Infantry Hall, Classroom 30.

Sponsored by the Army Career and Alumni Program and the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, the seminar is designed to provide information on the opportunities of federal employment with primary emphasis on Fort Benning.

Available to soldiers who are retiring from the military and family members, the seminar will cover the basics of how the federal employment system functions, the various agencies, where to find job announcements and veteran's preference.

Participants will be given a detailed explanation of the federal employment application, Standard Form 171.

James Fleming, a 20-year veteran of the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, and Cathy Murray, an instructor with Conwal Inc. will be available to answer questions.

Murray assists the Georgia Department of Labor with the ACAP Transition Assistance Program workshop, and she conducts personal assessments Thursday and Friday of each week from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the ACAP office in Soldier's Plaza. The assessments include instruction in the use of an automated Standard Form 171.

To obtain an appointment, call 545-7009, 545-4913 or 545-4892 and ask for Judy McKibben or stop by Building 2617 in Soldiers' Plaza.

Army Career and Alumni Program

Here are some of the most frequently asked questions about the Army Career and Alumni Program. The answers to these questions reflect the most current policies and positions.

For information or clarification about ACAP, call 545-4892 or 545-4902 or stop by Building 2617.

What is ACAP?

The Army Career and Alumni Program is designed to provide services and counseling to assure soldiers, Department of Army civilians and family members quality transition from military life to civilian life.

Why does the Army and the nation need ACAP?

ACAP provides transition service to departing personnel. It creates a recruiting multiplier. It establishes strong partnerships with the private sector.

ACAP allows career soldiers to concentrate on the Army mission because they know that when they need services, they will be available. It reduces unemployment and other associated costs.

What benefits do members of the Army family, employers and the nation at large derive from ACAP?

In addition to those above, the Army family leaves better prepared to make the transition into the civilian sector, employers receive a better trained and motivated employee with skills and abilities not generally available in the civilian sector and the nation receives individuals who will serve as role models and who are willing and able to contribute to the community at large.

Statistics say terrorist attacks target the military

By Linda Lee
American Forces Information Service

Almost all American citizens who died in terrorist attacks in the past two years had some connection to the U.S. military, either on active duty or under contract to the Defense Department.

Peter Burleigh recently briefed antiterrorism experts at a DoD worldwide terrorism conference at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

Seven Americans died in 1991 terrorist incidents, said Burleigh, counterterrorism coordinator for the Department of State. They died in Panama, the Philippines, El Salvador, Turkey and Greece. Ten Americans were killed in 1990 by terrorist acts.

What the United States considers terrorism is "premeditated, politically motivated violence perpetrated against noncombatant targets by subnational or clandestine agents, usually intended to influence an audience," Burleigh said.

"International terrorism means terrorism involving citizens or the territory of more than one country," he said. "The term 'terrorist group' means any group practicing, or that has significant subgroups that practice, terrorism."

The term noncombatant includes military members and other DoD workers who are unarmed or not on duty at the time of the incident.

Terrorism last year was marked by three specific points, said Burleigh, who based much of his discussion on the State Department's report, "Patterns of Global Terrorism: 1991." The points indicate 1991 was the second straight year in which no major terrorist incident took place and clear evidence emerged concerning state sponsorship of terrorist groups. Also, the number of international terrorist incidents jumped 22 percent, to 557 from 456 in 1990.

Incident numbers went up ramatically last year because of ne Persian Gulf crisis, he said. Many were minor attacks resulting only in property damage.

"War-related attacks brought the total number of international terrorist attacks in 1991 to 557. Fully half of the incidents in 1991 occurred during January and February, while Operation Desert Storm was under way," Burleigh said. "After the war, however, the number of terrorist incidents dropped sharply and actually fell below 1990 levels."

The United States continues to be a popular target for terrorists overseas, with more than half, 308 attacks, committed against U.S. concerns. However, most caused few injuries and little damage. U.S. banks and restaurants led the list of popular terrorist targets.

Among the numerous success stories in last year's fight against terrorists were the release of nine Western hostages, including six Americans, from Beirut and the determination that Libyans were responsible for several airplane bombings.

After several years of investigations, the U.S. and British governments issued indictments against several Libyans for the 1988 bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 over Locherbie, Scotland. A section of the report is devoted to this terrorist bombing that killed more than 270 people. The report documents the evidence used to obtain the indictments, as well as establishing links between the terrorists and senior Libyan government officials, said Burleigh.

Libya's involvement in state-supported terrorism rates an additional annex in the report. Information concerning the bombing of a French airliner over Africa and how French authorities tied it to the Libyans is one of the section's highlights, he added.

The report provides an overview of six regions and terrorist groups, with a discussion on specific countries and incidents. A 1991 chronology of terrorist activities, a discussion of state-sponsored terrorism and known terrorist organizations, both active and dormant, emphasize how widespread and international terrorism is, Burleigh said.

The State Department reported only three international terrorist incidents in Africa in 1991, down from 53 in 1990. Only two countries were spotlighted in the African overview, Zimbabwe and Sudan.

What worries the department, Burleigh said, was the appearance of many terrorist groups that seem to be receiving support from the government of Sudan. The country maintained its ties with Libya, Iraq and Iran all listed as state sponsors of terrorism by the United States.

Also, the fall of the Somali and Liberian governments leaves the future of these two African countries up in the air, he said.

International terrorism acts in Asia were cut almost in half, from 92 in 1990 to 47 in 1991. The Philippine government's fight against terrorists was partly responsible for the lower figures, said Burleigh. But the death toll continues to rise in India, with foreigners increasingly caught in the crossfire. Attacks against humanitarian aid workers continued to increase throughout Asia.

Highlighted Asian countries were Afghanistan, India, Sri Lanka, Pakistan, Philippines and Singapore.

The resurgence of left-wing terrorist groups in Western Europe contributed to the rise in attacks and was partly responsible for the death of four Americans. The future doesn't look too much better, said Burleigh, as "Western Europe may experience a growth in right-wing terrorism as European integration progresses and international migration increases."

Almost every country in Europe had some dealings with terrorism in 1991, whether it was actual incidents; legal dealings, such as international arrest warrants, prosecution, trials, appeals and extraditions; or domestic terrorism.

The State Department report highlighted the United Kingdom, Germany, Netherlands, Sweden, Spain, former Soviet Union, Ireland, Belgium and France. In Greece, the number of incidents jumped from four in 1990 to 29 in 1991; Italy, one to 32; and Turkey, 12 to 75.

Burleigh said the 75 incidents in Turkey is the highest number for any country.

"Propelling much of this dramatic rise was the renewed emphasis placed on U.S. targets by the leftist Turkish terrorist organization Devrimci Sol, the Revolutionary Left or Dev Sol," he said.

The Eastern European overview did not highlight any specific countries. Mention was made of Bulgaria's cooperation with Western countries in investigating several incidents that took place in the 1970s and 1980s, the Hungarian extradition of a terrorist to Greece and the rising problems in Yugoslavia.

According to the State Department report, police presence in Eastern Europe continued to decline due to budgetary and political reasons.

"Police cooperation was the subject of several bilateral agreements between Eastern and Western European countries," he said. In addition, "the United States and others sponsored training programs in antiterrorist techniques for law enforcement and other officials of several countries in the region."

There were 174 anti-American attacks in Latin America, up from 131 in 1990. Overall, a record number of international terrorist incidents, 224, took place in Latin America. Most occurred in South America, while Central America and the Caribbean were relatively quiet.

Much of the terrorism problem in Latin America, Burleigh said, is domestic, with the attacks by narcotic traffickers and guerrillas aimed at law enforcement personnel, politicians and government workers. Chile, Peru and Colombia head this list, he added.

Bolivia, Chile, Colombia, Ecuador, El Salvador, Guatemala, Mexico and Peru were discussed in the State Department terrorism report.

In the Middle East, the number of international terrorism incidents increased to 79 from 65 in 1990. Many of these attacks were attributable to the Persian Gulf war. Domestic terrorism continued to plague the region, especial]y in Lebanon, Israel and the occupied territories.

Middle East countries spotlighted by the State Department were Algeria, Egypt, Israel and the occupied territories, Jordan, Kuwait Lebanon, Saudi Arabia and Yemen.

Columbus Stars

finish exhibition season with a loss

By Terry K. Ray
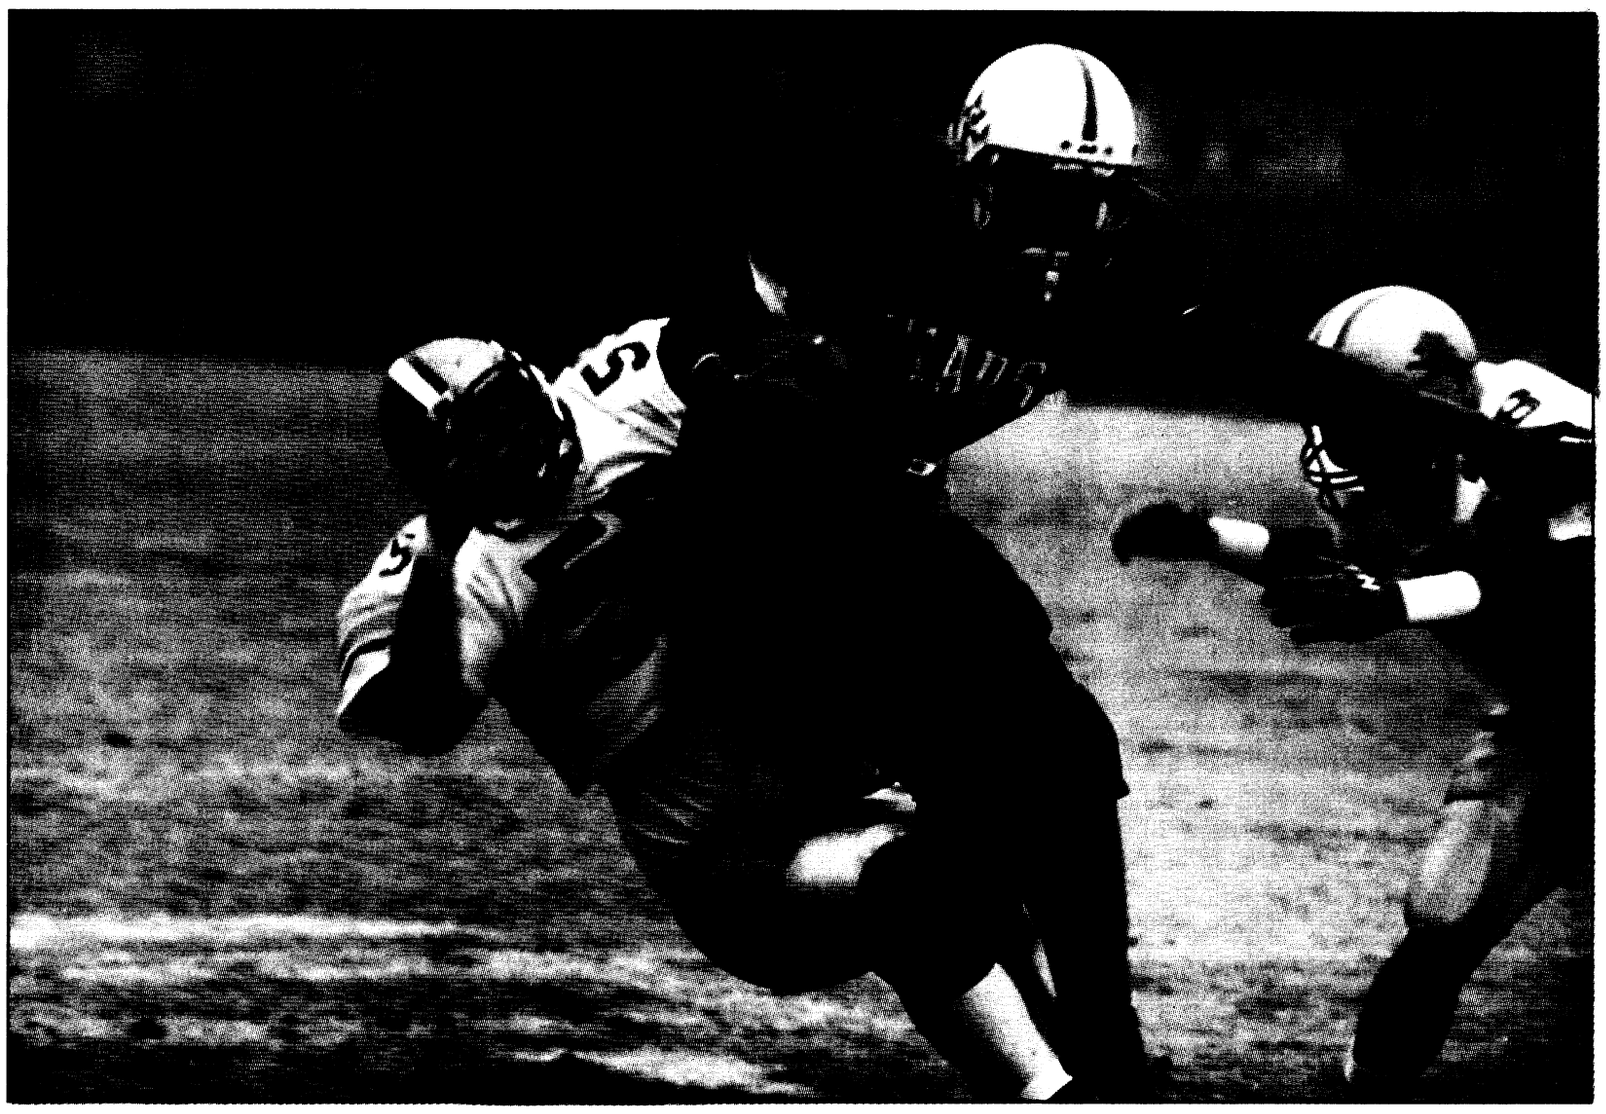
Special to The Bayonet©

The Columbus Stars finished off the exhibition season on a down note with a loss to the defending America's Football League champion Brevard Lions 13-12 at Memorial Stadium Saturday in a cold, steady drizzle:

"In an exhibition game, you look to see what the other team has and what your team needs," said Tom Staton, Stars head coach. "Without our starting quarterback and place-kicker, we gave the Lions everything they could handle and more. I'm very proud of these guys."

With starting quarterback Jeff McCurrie and place-kicker Rhett Owens on military commitment with the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, for Victory Focus, the Stars went with backup quarterback Mike Reese who was knocked out of the game with an ankle injury on the Stars' first possession of the game.

Eddie Mitchell came on for the Stars guiding the team to a total of 245 yards of offense.



The first half of play was a defensive struggle with both teams shutting the other out of the end zone. The half ended tied at 0-0.

In the second half, the Stars jumped on the board first when punt return specialist Alvin Humber took a Lions punt at the 50-yard line and, with some excellent blocking, weaved his way to the end zone for the touchdown at the 6:08 mark of the third quarter. The extra-point attempt failed leaving the Stars with a 6-0 advantage.

The Lions regained the lead early in the fourth quarter when quarterback Tony Bannister found wide receiver William Pritchard on a deep crossing pattern in the end zone for 17-yard touchdown. With the extra-point conversion, the Lions were up 7-6.

Not to be outdone, the Stars took the ball and drove the length of the field with fullback Jamon Smith doing the bulk of the work. Smith (17 carries for 115 yards and one touchdown) finished off the drive with an 11-yard touchdown rumble off the right side giving the Stars a 12-7 advantage with 12 minutes to play in the game.

With less than eight minutes to play and the Lions moving down the field, the Stars' defense came up with a big play when cornerback Kelvin Thomas picked off Bannister at the Stars' 32-yard line to kill the drive.

Terry K. Ray/Special to The Bayonet
Columbus Stars tight end Tyrone Ivory gets pulled down by Brevard Lion linebacker Derek Smith.

The Stars had to give up the ball late in the game and the Lions moved down field for what would prove to be the winning score. With less than a minute to play, Bannister found Pritchard standing all alone at the Stars' 1-yard line setting up a first-and-goal play for the Lions.

Bannister scored with 37 seconds left on a bootleg left; and, with the extra point failing, the Lions had scratched out a 13-12 lead.

Mitchell and the Stars gave it one last effort moving the ball to midfield before Lion's cornerback Kevin Mays ended the drive and the game on an interception.

The Stars will open the regular season Saturday against the Dothan Chiefs with a pep rally beginning at noon and kickoff at 2 p.m.

Girl Scouts sponsor Cookie Run

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The 14th annual Barnett Bank/Girl Scout Cookie Run Saturday morning at Lakebottom Park brought out more than 750 runners on a cold, dismal morning.

In the five-mile run, Daniel Cole who just happened to transfer from Hawaii to Fort Benning, took first place with a time of 25 minutes and 59 seconds. Pablo Sanchez of Columbus cruised into second place at 26:49 and another Fort Benning runner, Dave Millet, captured third place at 27:23.

On the female side, Jennifer Yancey of Columbus ran away from the field to win the five-mile run with a time of 32:26. Eliza Sacco finished in second at 36:26, and Smiths Station eighth-grader Jill Holland captured third place with a time of 37:09.

In the masters division 40 and over, Mike Stephens captured first place with a time of 29:27, while Marcia Herbst took top honors on the female side with a time of 40:35.

In the 1.5-mile run, Bobby Gardner, a soldier on leave from Germany and a former Shaw High School graduate, outdistanced his closest competitor by more than a full minute with a time of 7:50. Brad Parker outkicked Chad Cook for second place with a time of 8:54 while Cook came in at 8:55.

In the Cadet relay, Cadette Troop 188 with Misti-Dawn Curry, Margaret Dunn, Cassandra Hamilton and Latasha Howard, captured first place with a time of :56.

All proceeds from the day's events go toward providing programs and councilwide events for area Girl Scouts.

BASS Club drops its hooks

First tournament of the year bags 4-pound 8-ounce fish

Fort Benning B.A.S.S. Club

The Fort Benning Bass Anglers Sportsman Society Club's first tournament of the year was conducted at Lake Hardin Jan. 23.

The start of the new tournament year was cold with rain. A field of 19 fishers on 10 boats fought against the cold (34 to 60 degrees) and rain to net a total of six fish.

The big fish of the day was caught by Pat Reardon, who snagged one at 4 pounds, 8 ounces. This fish also secured first place for Reardon.

Second place went to Ken Jones, while Junior Tibbs came in third place.

Anyone interested in joining a company of sports persons interested in fishing may attend one of the club's meetings, which are the second and fourth Tuesday of the month at the Scout House on Main Post.

Individuals do not have to own a boat to join.

For more information, call Steve Ward at 569-5705 or David Moore at 298-5955.

Basketball: Post's season winds down

By Terry K. Ray
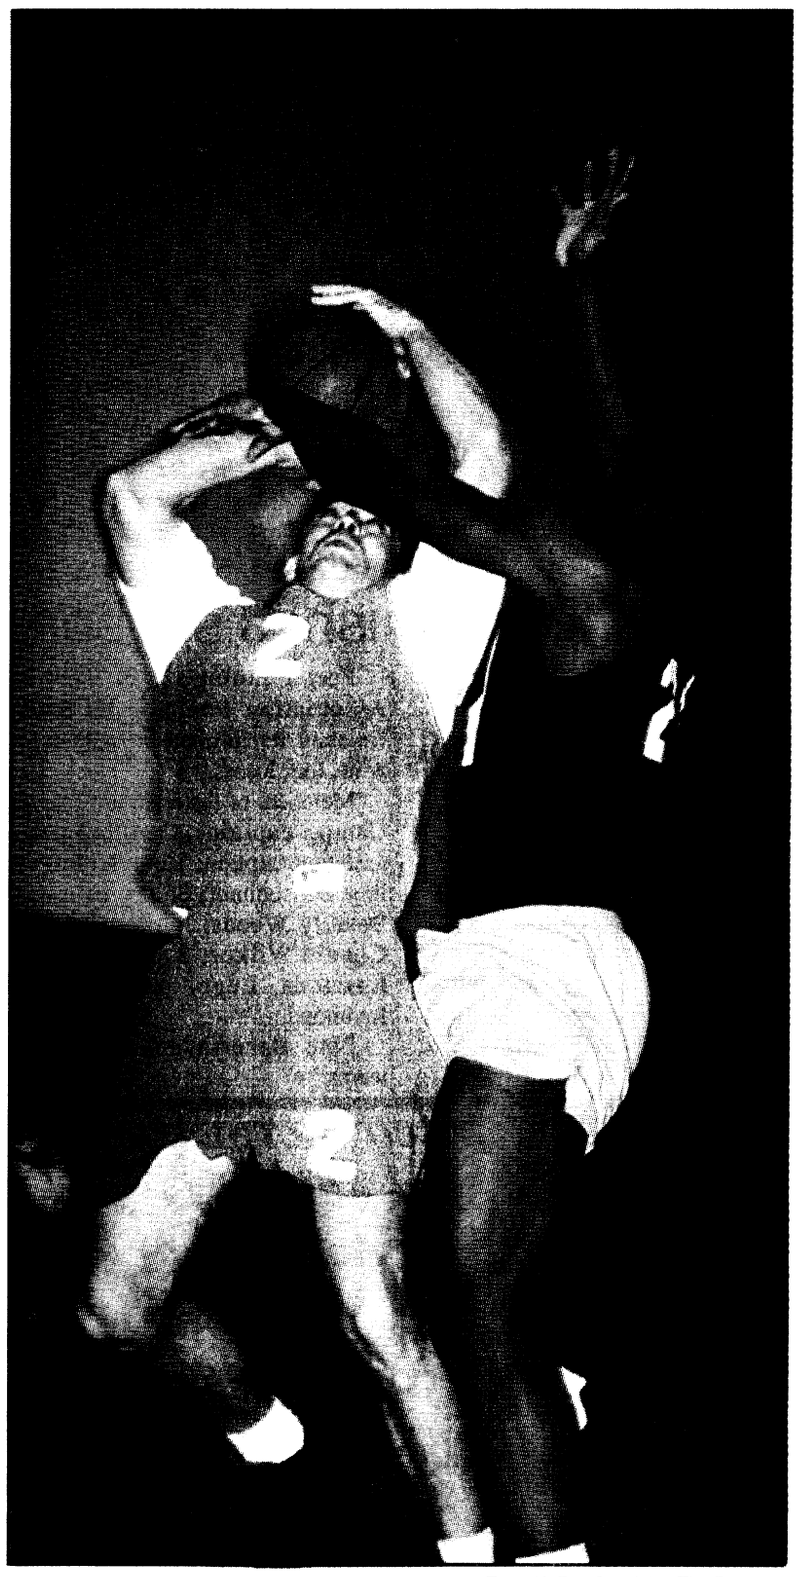
Special to The Bayonet©

With the intramural basketball season winding down, units of the 36th Engineer Group that returned from Somalia have joined in the fray for a trip to the post playoffs.

Four teams got together Jan. 27 at Audie Murphy Fitness Center for two games.

In game one, Rolling Thunder of the 533rd Transportation Company rolled over the Bad Boys of Company B, 43rd Engineer Battalion, 69-44.

Tony McKire rattled the rim for 29 points while teammate Aaron Jackson added 12 and Jeremiah White tipped in 10 for Rolling Thunder. Up by 17 at the break, Rolling Thunder put the petal to the metal and cruised to the 25-point win.



David Crockett scored 16 points while Willie Davis popped in 12 and William Cannon finished off the scoring with eight for the Bad Boys.

In game two, the Hit Squad of the 598th Maintenance Company squeezed the trigger on Big Red of Company A, 43rd Engineer Battalion, 61-53.

Up by 10 at the half 38-28, the Hit Squad watched as Big Red whittled the lead down to two at 49-47 midway through the second half. The Hit Squad weathered the storm climbing back to a 5-point lead at 57-52 with less than three minutes to play.

Willie Tucker led the Hit Squad with 12 points. Bobby Matthews added 11, Jomo Daniels 9 and Jermanio Carter and William Knight each chipped in 8.

Laneil Davenport led Big Red with 18 points, Otto Leone tipped in 12, Roney Reyter added 10 and Purdie Bur'es tallied 9.

Team names new manager

By Terry K. Ray
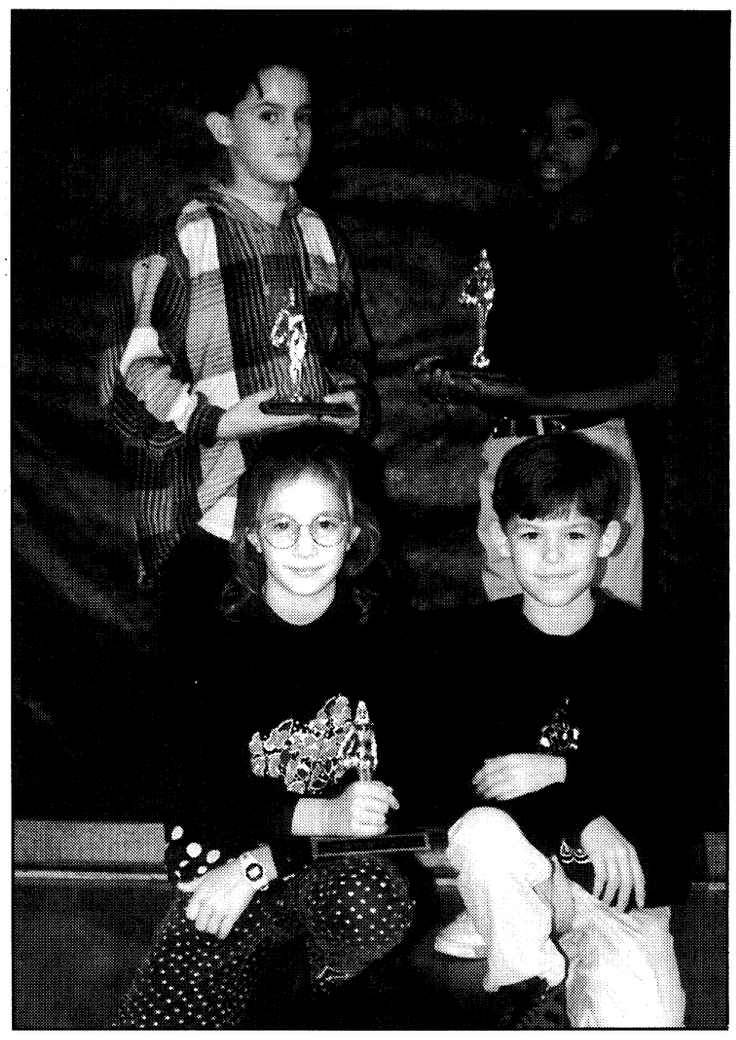
Special to The Bayonet©

The Columbus RedStixx organization has announced a new field manager for the upcoming season.

Mike Young formerly of the New York-Penn League was named field manager for the RedStixx by General Manager John Dietrich.

Young, a Chicago, native who now lives in Spooner, Wis., replaced former manager Mike Brown who was promoted to the Cleveland Indians double A, farm team in Canton, Ohio.

Young, 38, comes to the RedStixx, via the down under route. For more than 10 years, Young and his wife, Judy, who by the way was a world-class fast pitch softball player, lived in Australia, where Young coached the Australian Olympic baseball team at the 1988 Olympic games in Seoul, South Korea.



"As far as what this team is going to do this year, I don't know," Young said. "I can't tell you what we're going to do. I can tell you this. I expect a lot from the players. I expect them to give a lot off the field as well as on, and I expect them to act with class."

Young said he looks to bring the game back to the fans, especially to children. According to Young, the game revolves around children and the families who come to the games, and it's his obligation to these people to bring out the best his team has to offer to the community.

Young has also managed Wausau in the Midwest League, Bluefield in the Appalachian League and Medicine Hat of the Pioneer League. Before joining the Indians organization last year, Young coached the Triple-A Red Wings of Rochester in the International League.

ITB's Delta Dawgs roll to bowling win

By Robert Owens
2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment

After a year of plotting and practicing, the cadre and family members from the Patriots of the 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, gathered at the Main Bowling Center to participate in the second annual Patriot Bowling Tournament.

Approximately 100 drill sergeants, cadre and family members participated in an afternoon of competitive bowling away from their normal duties of training initial entry soldiers on Sand Hill.

All five companies and the Patriot headquarters section provided bowlers for three separate tournaments. Each winning team received a gold-colored bowling pin presented by Lt. Col. Bruce Grant, the Patriots' battalion commander.

The first tournament involved the commander of each unit along with his first sergeant, executive officer and two spouses. The Delta Company Dawgs, led by their commander, Capt. Don Walton, rolled to victory to win this tournament.

The mixed doubles competition occurred simultaneously with teams composed of two drill sergeants and their wives.

According to Grant, although every team bowled superbly, the Gators from Alpha Company skillfully managed to earn top honors.

In the team competition, composed of three drill sergeants and two spouses, the Delta Dawgs again toppled the most pins to earn a second tournament championship.

Grant also presented gold bowling pins to the male, female and child bowler with the highest and lowest score.

Sgt. 1st Class Alfredo Lezcano from Company C edged Sgt. 1st Class Bartt Tally from Company D by two points to win the top male bowler with a score of 199.

In the gutter was Sgt. 1st Class Billy Hogue representing the Echo Company Enforcers and bowling a 75 to win the honor of male low bowler.

For the women, Nanette Pigg, wife of Company D's Staff Sgt. Barry Pigg, earned the high female score of 155 to guarantee a Delta Dawg victory in the mixed doubles competition.

The child high bowler also came from Company D. Peter San Nicolas, 13, the son of 1st Sgt. Pedro San Nicolas, bowled a 125 to earn a golden bowling pin. The low bowler for the female and child categories was a family affair with, Regina Miller, wife of Maj. John Miller, battalion executive officer, and her son Johnny, 9, each received a gold bowling pin.

"Overall, the entire afternoon was a great success with everyone having a great time, said Capt. Alex Brown, the battalion chaplain. "The participation of so many soldiers and their families made the event a lot of fun."

LOVE

What does it mean?

By Kerry M. Steedley
USAIC Chaplains' Office

What is love? Valentine's Day is an appropriate time to ask and answer that question.

Perhaps, many of us agree and only a few of us would argue that the word is often overused, misused, abused and confused. When I say "I love you," what do I mean?

Couples frequently walk into chapel and say, "Chaplain, we're in love and want to get married." What are they saying?

When you share cards, flowers and candy, what are you showing to that special someone?

Love defined

Dictionaries list such synonyms as feelings of affection or emotional attractions. I prefer what Dr. John Henry Jowett says, "Love is not emotion but devotion."

The Apostle John simply declares, "God is love." (I John 4:8). "We love him, because he first loved us." (I John 4:19). Understanding who is love explains what is love.

Love described

George Matheson was a blind poet who lived from 1842 to 1906. Before he lost his sight, he was engaged to a young lady he dearly loved. Informed by his physician that in a short time his sight would be permanently gone, Matheson offered his fiancee a release from their engagement.

Feeling sure she would not accept, he was surprised when she returned the ring and told him she did not wish to be tied to a blind man the rest of her life. In this hour of despair and brokenness, he went to his room, poured out his heart to God and penned the following:

"O love that will not let me go, I rest my weary soul in thee; I give thee back the life I owe, that in thine ocean depths, its flow may richer, fuller be."

In the past year, I've observed several departure ceremonies here at Fort Benning. The soldiers I saw deploying to Somalia and their families illustrate this love that does not want to let go. The hearty hugs, the extra, emotional embraces, the abundance of tears and absence of talk and the lingering looks typify enduring love.

Such love is in I Corinthians 13, commonly called the love chapter of the Bible.

Love demonstrated

The Bible tells us of another story of love.

"For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life," (John 3:16).

"A sinner can go to hell unsaved, but he can not go to hell unloved," Dr. R.L. Moyer states.

There is an amazing truth in Deuteronomy 7:7-8: The Lord did not set his love upon you, nor choose you, because you were more in number than any people ... but because the Lord loved you."

The Lord loves you just because he loves you. How does God love you? You cannot count the ways.

In a world where love is often degraded, I invite you to discover God's love. Open God's word as a special-delivery valentine addressed to you. Read the Bible as God's personal love letter to you. Receive the gift of God's love.

Opportunity: Grab it while you can

By Pat Cote
19th Infantry Regiment

Have you ever thought about the saddest word in the dictionary? I think I may have found it, thanks to insight gained from a Texas preacher and writer named Max Lucado.

It's not a fancy word. It's not hard to spell or pronounce. In fact, it doesn't look impressive at all. The word is almost. It's a word that reeks of missed opportunities, aborted plans, blundered chances. It's second string and runner-up.

"Almost"... it conjures images of the one that got away, the gamble that almost paid off, the plans almost realized.

How many people do you know whose contribution to life is almost? "Did I ever tell you about the time I was almost selected as the Soldier of the Year? ... They say she almost made the cut-off score ... My wife and kids almost came back to me."

As long as there have been people, there have been almosts. There have been people who almost won the battle, who almost climbed the mountain, who almost reached the rainbow.

The Greeks have a statue called "Opportunity." When viewed from the front, it has long flowing hair. But seen from the rear, it is bald. It stands as a reminder that as long as opportunity was coming toward you, there was something to grab hold of. Once opportunity had passed you, though, there was nothing to grab.

Far from being outdated and archaic, the Bible is replete with relevant admonitions encouraging us to take advantage of opportunity while it is available.

One such text states, "Be very careful, then, how you live — not unwise but as wise, making the most of every opportunity." (Ephesians 5:15-16)

Do you know what it is that makes almost such a lethal word? It stands as a startling reminder of the tragedy of missed opportunities.

It reminds us of opportunities that were within our grasp but somehow slipped through our fingers, opportunities that we had the resources to obtain but not the diligence to pursue — the result of which is often a trail of despair and regret. "I almost made it ... We almost worked it out ... I almost made the right decision."

Almost doesn't have to be all gloom and doom because it is preventable. While opportunity is in front of us, the choice is still ours. Seizing the moment turns "I almost" into "I did." Diligence with the present will prevent regrets over the past.

As 1993 came to an end, I reflected on the scripture, "making the most of every opportunity." In retrospect, I offer you the following, which is adapted from an "Anonymous Friar."

"If I could relive last year once again, I would relax more, lighten up, be sillier than I have been this trip. I would take more trips. I would climb more mountains, swim more rivers and watch more sunsets. I would do more walking and looking. I would eat more ice cream and less broccoli. If I had to do it over again, I would listen more and talk less. I would send my husband more cards and pick more flowers with my girls. I would stare into the heavens and consider the one who has created it all, more often."

Army tests smart mortar round

Army Armament Research, Development & Engineering Center

The U.S. Army has completed live fire testing at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., of the 120mm Strix, a smart mortar round developed by Sweden's Saab Missiles and Bofors Weapons.

The round scored four out of five hits against stationary and moving targets, with and without decoys. A similar test using the 81mm Merlin, developed by British Aerospace, will be conducted at the end of February.

The tests are conducted by Picatinny's Fire Support Armaments Center for the Product Manager for Mortar Systems.

Both rounds are indirect fire and forget, designed to defeat the standard top layer of armor protection on enemy main battle tanks. They do not require an active designation system or special maintenance. Smart mortars give the front-line infantry commander an enhanced capability to defeat heavy armor from defensive and offensive positions.

The Strix seeks its target with a passive infrared seeker. Bofors will market the Strix in the United States through Martin Marietta. The Merlin scans with an active millimeter wave sensor. Alliant Tech Systems holds the license for production in the United States.

Both rounds search a large footprint, guide toward the center of a moving or stationary vehicle and fire a shaped charge warhead upon impact.

The Army will analyze both rounds' design maturity and applicability for use by the United States. Congressional budget language supports foreign comparative testing of nondevelopment, terminally guided, antiarmor projectiles and requests evaluation results. The U.S. Marine Corps has identified a need for a smart, indirect fire, tube-launched weapon capable of defeating heavy armor. A precision guided mortar munition advanced technology demon-stration is being solicited for contract in the United States as a key element of the Rapid Force Projection Initiative.

All analyses should be complete in March.

2nd MASH 'doctors up' JRTC

By Sylvia Lee
304th Public Affairs Detachment

FORT POLK, La. - Building a hospital is no easy task. It takes a lot of time and resources. But building a hospital in 24 hours is unheard of, unless you are the 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital from Fort Benning.

The 2nd MASH is at Folk Polk to participate in the Joint Readiness Training Center's January rotation. Its mission is to treat injuries, stabilize patients and evacuate them to a conventional hospital. Whether the injuries are part of the scenario or real, these medical soldiers take all of them seriously.

The 2nd MASH arrived at its field site at night with only the wind and the rain to greet them. Despite these challenges, within the first eight hours most of the emergency-related operations were in place. By the time 24 hours had passed, a full hospital had been set up, along with all the support needed to treat combat casualties with modern medical care.

The support needed is varied. The soldiers of the 565th Medical Company, stationed at Fort Polk, is on site to provide ambulance support. They bring wounded soldiers to and from the hospital.

The forward distribution team — in charge of supply and logistics — ensured the safe arrival of more than a ton of supplies to support the hospital, according to 1st Lt. J. Whisenhunt, the officer in charge.

A veterinarian unit, the 248th Medical Detachment, Camp Lejeune, N.C., is responsible for food and water inspection and perimeter security. Capt. Don Beckett, detachment commander, is also on hand to provide humanitarian aid if the host country requests it.

The 2nd MASH is certified just like any hospital in any town in the United States. The difference is that the hospital operates in the rain, mud and under fire if it has to. It has the facilities to perform surgery, administer preventive care, house patients and handle laboratory work.

"I can give you X-rays here just as good as any X-ray you can find in the United States." said Lt. Col. Jim Brooks, the executive officer of the MASH.

What makes this exercise so valuable for the soldiers is the realism. For Brooks, JRTC is "the most intensive and realistic tactical training I've ever encountered."

What is unique and makes the training so valuable is the fact that the MASH must operate as a full hospital, though most of the injuries of the patients are only simulated.

Brooks summed up the experience when he said JRTC will "doctor" up our training.

Rangers grasp battlefield picture in 'chess game' war

By Sylvia Lee
304th Public Affairs Detachment

FORT POLK, La. — "It's almost like chess," said Spc. Rufus Shumate, a forward observer.

For some participants, the recent command post exercise at the Joint Readiness Training Center at Fort Polk resembled the age-old board game.

The players were the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, from Fort Benning and the commander of the opposing force at Fort Polk. The chess board is a map board the size of a pingpong table.

Instead of going into the field, the rangers go into a room and execute their mission. They execute the mission as if the soldiers were on a notional battlefield.

Not going to the field does not mean an exercise is any easier then a field exercise.

"We don't have any preplanned operations so we have to fully plan before we can conduct it," said Capt. Jim Klingaman, the battalion operations officer.

They still have to consider all details involved — the enemy, the terrain, where the soldiers are and what they must do to fulfill the mission requirements.

"We've burned the midnight oil on several occasions," Klingaman said.

Going through a command post exercise helps develop numerous skills.

"It's tremendous training for us in terms of planning, making decisions, the decision making process and honing up on our skills in SOP (standard operation procedure)," said Lt. Col. Danny McKnight, commander of the 3rd Battalion,

Another unique aspect of a command post exercise is that only a small part of the battalion attends. The unit arrived with approximately 64 soldiers — a portion of the estimated 600 to 700 personnel in a ranger battalion. With fewer soldiers present, the junior enlisted and junior officers get the opportunity to function in different areas and tasks normally performed by higher-ranking soldiers.

Planning a mission is something new for the lower-enlisted soldiers who are involved. Normally they are out in the field.

According to Spc. Stanton Lewis, a battalion armorer, the exercise has allowed other rangers to observe and be involved in the planning process.

'Operations' disk: It's more than a game

By A. J. Plunkett
Daily Press

Editor's note: This article is reprinted with the permission of the author and newspaper.

FORT EUSTIS, Va. — The Army's latest compact disk release features tanks and armies, strategies and war maps, battle plans and special forces.

It's not a game, but developers of the Army Training and Doctrine Command's new "Operations" CD-ROM package say future editions may include simulated play to let soldiers test what they've just learned.

Field Manual 100-5 "Operations" is the most recently updated version of the Army's main warfighting bible. For just $3 a disk, the CD-ROM — a compact disk with read-only computer memory — is chock full of narration, graphics, page-through computer text and even music to give today's soldier everything he or she needs to know about the Army philosophy of fighting a war.

The disk includes not just the warfighting manual, but a whole reference library of related books, glossaries, maps, charts and teaching tutorials to make the single CD a complete training package worth hundreds of dollars, say TRADOC officials.

Because the CD-ROM can hold 250,000 pages of information, the equivalent of about 1,600 pounds of paper, it's cheaper to distribute the one disk than to mail out individual copies of the half-inch thick "Operations" manual and all the related books and training materials, Army officials say.

More importantly, the CD package makes learning easier and appeals to the growing number of soldiers who are just as — or in some cases more — familiar with personal computers as they are hard-bound books.

"It's the Nintendo generation," said James E. Larsen, chief of TRADOC's Army Training Information Management Program.

Although the warfighting manual is targeted for mid-level officers and up, the CD-ROM package was designed to be accessible to soldiers of all ranges of age and education, said Bobby L. Oller, a multimedia producer for the Multimedia Applications Division of TRADOC's Army Training Support Center at Fort Eustis.

Following simplified instructions on the computer screen, a soldier can be reading a chapter titled, "Combat Power," call up an animated color graphic showing a battle from Operation Desert Storm, check the meaning of a military term in the glossary, and go back to the original chapter in minutes.

And going back is just that easy — the command to return to one's original place is "back," Oller said. The whole program was designed so it could be used even if the soldier had little or no experience with computers, he said.

More than just a book or books on computer, the program also has a separate tutorial section so a soldier can choose to review his or her understanding of the major points taught in the section just finished, Oller said.

Because it's a read-only-memory disk, the soldier can't change the information in the package, but there are advanced tools programmed that can allow a user to copy paragraphs or entire chapters into the computer's main memory for use-in writing operational orders or research papers, Oller said.

The re-writing of FM 100-5, the manual on which all other Army doctrine and operations are based, took more than two years. In January 1993, as the re-writing entered its final stages, TRADOC officials began looking at ways to use emerging computer technology as another way to spread the new word.

The job was given to Oller and a team of three others who spent nine

world war II

Fifty years ago this week...

• U.S. forces operating in the Pacific Theater effectively eliminated the few remaining pockets of enemy resistance in the Kwajalein Atoll of the Marshall Islands.

In all, 41,000 Americans landed as part of the effort to overcome 8,700 characteristically determined Japanese defenders who fought until virtually the last man.

In the final count, more than 8,400 Japanese died as the American force suffered 370 killed and an additional 1,500 wounded while securing the position before moving on to capture Gugewe, Bigej and Eller islands.

• In Italy, the U.S. 34th Division attacked Colle Sant'Angelo and inched forward, recapturing hard-fought ground just north of Cassino.

Meanwhile, the Germans pressed their efforts to break the veritable stalemate at Anzio by renewing their attacks and successfully driving the British 1st Division out of Aprilia.

By week's end, the U.S. 45th and the British 56th divisions arrived to reinforce the Allied position in the area.

• On the Eastern Front, the Soviet armies of the First Ukraine Front secured Rovno and Lutsk as the Third Ukraine Front forces swept through Manganets and Nikopol, advancing to just west of Apostolovo.

• On New Guinea, Australian and American forces linked up near Saidor, thus signaling the almost complete capture of the Huon Peninsula.

Army safety ranks high in '93

Army News Service

The Army's emphasis on safety has paid off in fiscal 1993, with fewer total accidents, injuries and fatalities, according to Army safety officials.

The total number of ground accidents decreased by 17 percent for that period, which mirrors a reduction rate of 35 percent for the past three years, officials said. They credit "a strong emphasis on safety awareness, risk management and leadership responsibility" for the downward trend.

Highlights in accident categories for the period include:

• Total accident rate: down 8 percent.

• Privately owned vehicle fatalities: down 9 percent.

• POV accident rate: down 2 percent.

The trend shows a sharp reduction in the number of Army POV accidents that involved alcohol — 36 percent less than the previous year and 32 percent less than the average for the past three years.

The Army's ratio of alcohol-related fatalities to POV fatalities was 8 percent, compared to the national figure of 45 percent.

Officials said that low number is because of the Army's focus on seat belt use and education on the dangers of drinking and driving.

There were two more Class A aviation flight accidents than the previous year, but "strong efforts of aviation leaders and the efforts to focus aviation components on protection of the force" resulted in no aviation fatalities in the year's last quarter, officials said.

Army safety statistics are compiled each year in several categories to develop countermeasures to increase combat power and boost dollar savings.

COMPUTERS: Army goes CD

months designing the software, working with TRADOC officials on what else should be in the package, developing the maps and graphics and finally putting it all together in a prototype disk.

About 90 percent of the work was done at Fort Eustis, Va., Oller said. The only thing done by civilian contractors was the audio narration and mass production of disks.

The main concern in developing the package was making sure it could be used by all soldiers and on the majority of hardware available in the field, Oller said. Because of that, some things they could have done with the presentation, such as video illustrations, full-color animation and even the war games feature were left out because of fears that not all the Army's hardware could handle all those programs, Oller said.

Those features could be included in future editions, Oller said.

The 1,200 disks will go on limited release worldwide to division-level headquarters by the end of this month, Oller said. While it won't put a CD-ROM version of FM 100-5 in every soldier's hand, it will make it available to all mid-level officers and up, and to most soldiers, he said.

Developing the disk, producing it and sending it out will cost just under $100,000, Oller said. By comparison, the printing of just 176,000 paperback versions of FM 100-5 will cost about $130,000 and as much again to ship, TRADOC officials said.

The computerized program brings TRADOC to the forefront of information-age technology and is part of an Army goal to put all its paper on plastic, Larsen said.

There will be a day when soldiers will be able to carry hand-held CD-ROM players and have instant access to 10,000-page tank maintenance manuals or multi-volume aircraft manuals, Larsen said.

Within the next five years, Larsen predicted, all Army forms, publications, military specifications and standards will be available on CD-ROM.

"That's literally going to save billions," he said, not only in printing and storage costs, but in cutting down the time it takes to fill out paperwork and correct human errors.

For example, ordering ammunition for a division can take up to four hours of filling out paperwork that is subject to mistyped numbers and letters, Larsen said. Divisions in the field now are doing it error-free in 20 minutes, he said.

The Army is saving time and money just with the CD-ROM that has the FM 100-5 package on it, he said. It was only about half full, so Army officials also tacked on a copy of the Standard Army Training System, the uniform plan by which all Army training programs are written, Larsen said.

That program used to have to be loaded onto a unit's computer using 50 separate computer diskettes. Using the FM 100-5 CD-ROM, it can be copied onto a computer's hard drive within a few minutes, Oller said.

Schools to open 'Parent Academy'

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

Parents of preschoolers, grade schoolers or teens can hone their child management skills and learn educational and creative enrichment techniques at the Parent Academy seminar scheduled March 11 and 12 at Faith Middle School.

Registration for the weekend seminar, set for Friday night from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. and Saturday from 8 to 11:40 a.m., begins Monday at all post schools or the school administration office, Building 880A.

This weekend parenting seminar is in response to repeated requests for expansion of an annual series titled "Talks About Young Children" presented through the Fort Benning Schools.

To register for the Parent Academy, go to any school from 8:15 to 9:15 a.m. or the school administration building from 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. The seminar, which includes a spaghetti supper Friday and child care for both days, is free and open to Fort Benning parents and interested Fort Benning personnel.

Registration will continue until all spaces are filled, and no telephone reservations will be taken.

Nationally acclaimed speaker Dr. Barbara Coloroso will present Friday's program, "Kids are Worth It: Parenting With Heart and Humor," following the spaghetti supper.

Saturday, the academy is structured so parents may attend three separate sessions — one presented by guest lecturer Coloroso and two others of their choosing. Coloroso's presentations will cover a parent's role during the early years, the elementary grades or during middle school. In addition to one of Coloroso's discussions, parents can choose two other sessions on Saturday featuring local educators and community leaders.

"We have many volunteers who are working hard to make this parent academy possible," said Dr. Beth Middlemiss, director of staff development and a member of the steering committee of the Parent Academy. "We're very excited about the Parent Academy because we think that the academy presents a tremendous opportunity for Fort Benning parents and educators to work together to examine topics that are important to them."

The sessions on Saturday will cover a range of topics Fort Benning parents requested during a recent survey, said Vicki Rogers, principal at Dexter and steering committee member.

Classroom teachers, principals, administrators, school specialists and community leaders will present topics in their area of expertise, according to steering committee member Sharon Nix.

"The sessions cover a range of interests, abilities and age groups," she said. "There are a mix of topics targeting different age groups during each lecture session; parents should have such a variety that "they may have trouble choosing which ones to attend," she said.

When individuals register, they have reserved a space for the spaghetti supper and the main lecture Friday evening. For Saturday's sessions, participants may choose more specific topics based on their child's age, said Adrienne Porter, school board representative and steering committee member.

Each session offers various subjects within specific age groups; for example, parents of preschoolers may choose between "How to Prepare Your Child for Kindergarten," "What is a Preschooler? Stages of Development" or "Games, Activities and Places to Take Young Children," Porter said. If couples have children in more than one age group, each parent could choose to attend different lectures and then pool their information, she said. Some topics are covered more than once on Saturday to allow parents flexibility in scheduling the morning.

The Saturday sessions are designed for specific age groups since each stage of childhood is different, said Olin Harp, principal at Faith Middle School and steering committee member.

Children in middle school are quite different from grade schoolers, Harp said. "Parents need to be knowledgeable about the changes," he said.

For seminar participants, child care is provided for both days. At the time of registration, parents will be assigned a space for their child or children at one of three locations: Tot Town, Patch Preschool or the Youth Activities Center. Children ages 6 weeks to 11 may receive child care during the seminar.

About a week before the Parent Academy, registrants should receive a packet of information detailing child-care arrangements, meal tickets for the spaghetti supper and other pertinent data, Middlemiss said.

A waiting list will be maintained for individuals wishing to attend who did not register before the seminar was filled. Those individuals will be contacted if there are cancellations. Registration for the Parent Academy represents a commitment to attend, and those needing to cancel should do so as soon as possible by calling 545-2500 so someone on the waiting list can attend.

The Parent Seminar is sponsored by the Fort Benning Schools, the Enlisted Wives' Club, the Officers' Wives' Club, Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army, Columbus Bank and Trust, Daughters of the United States Army, First Union Bank and TIC Federal Credit Union.

Steering committee members for the Parent Academy include Harp, Porter, Nix, Rogers, Middlemiss, Ken Stettes, Earnestine Ezekiel and Judy Deeter.

Lecturer to conduct parenting seminars

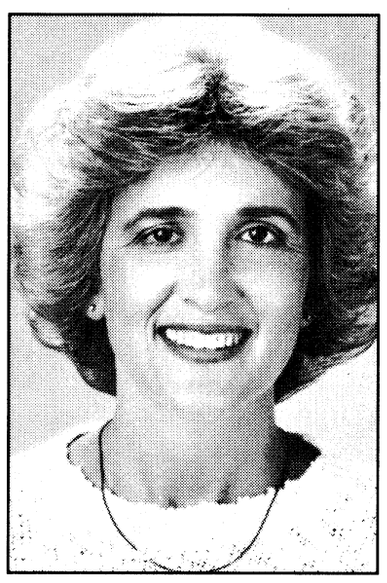
By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

Nationally acclaimed lecturer Dr. Barbara Coloroso will speak about how dignity and respect coupled with a healthy dose of humor can enhance parenting techniques at the Parent Academy weekend seminar scheduled March 11 and 12.

Her lecture on Friday, "Kids are Worth It! Parenting with Heart and Humor," will cover a variety of topics relevant to all age groups. Saturday, she will address parenting issues for different age groups: the early childhood years, children in the elementary grades and children in middle school.

Coloroso is a teacher, mother and internationally recognized speaker.



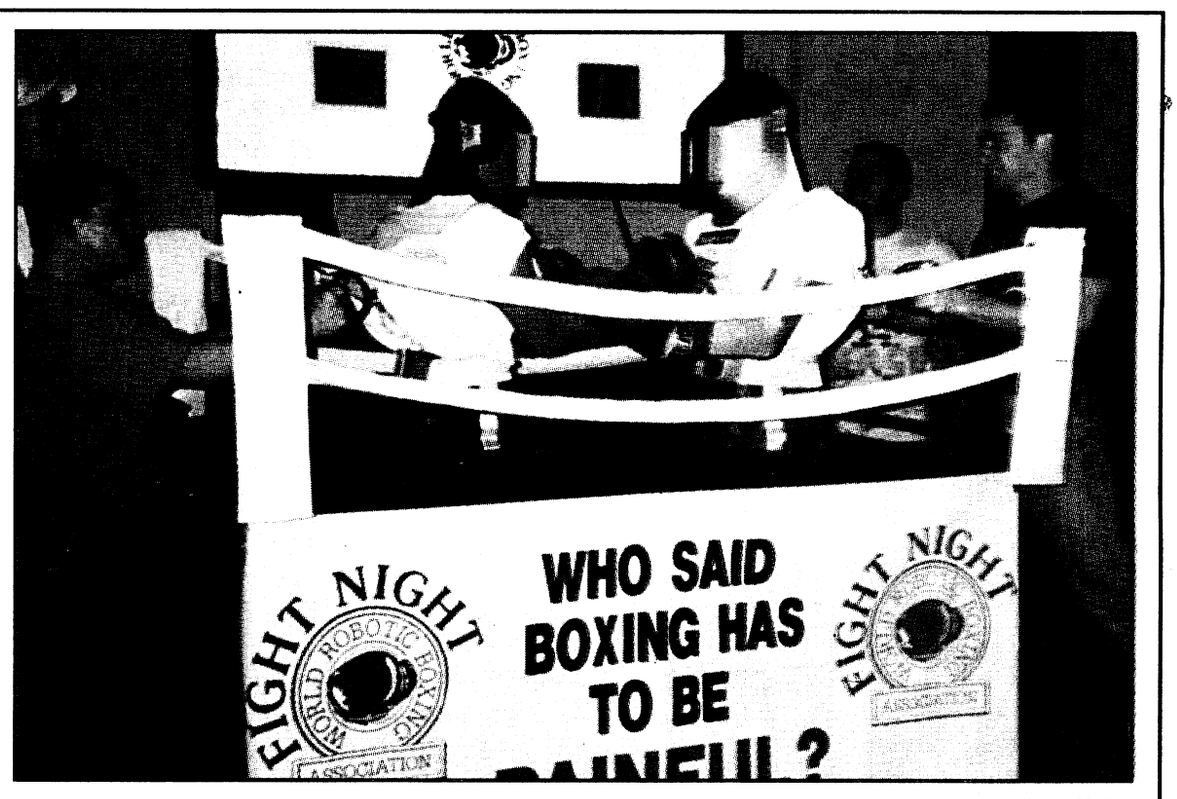
Her work includes writings and the critically acclaimed video programs "Winning at Parenting ... without beating your kids," and "Winning at Teaching ... without beating your kids."

As a former classroom teacher and university instructor, Coloroso is considered an expert specializing in discipline and excellence in education.

Coloroso draws her material from years of professional experience as well as at-home training. Known as a speaker who delivers parenting tips with humor, Coloroso typically addresses issues such as chores, fighting, bedtime, rebellion, discipline and thinking for oneself.

Coloroso said she believes children should learn to think for themselves so they can solve their own problems, and she urges parents to teach this skill while the stakes are still cheap in her video publication "Winning at Parenting ... without beating your kids."

Coloroso maintains that a child who has learned to make good choices about sleep, meals and exercise will become a teen who can make good choices about drugs, alcohol and sex.



Coloroso

From her messages on classroom discipline, she lists six things children need to hear:

- I believe in you
- I trust in you
- I know you can handle it
- You are listened to
- You are cared for
- You are very important to me.

To hear Coloroso's presentation, interested persons should register at any post school from 8:15 to 9:15 a.m. or at the school administration building from 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Registration begins Monday and will continue until the seminar is full.

DENTAC gives tips for children

U.S. Army Dental Activity

February is National Children's Dental Health Month, and the U.S. Army Dental Activity at Fort Benning offers the following tips for helping children maintain healthy smiles.

Only a few ingredients are needed to create the right conditions for tooth decay. One ingredient is plaque, a sticky film of bacteria that constantly forms on teeth.

The second ingredient is sugary or starchy food or liquid that remains on teeth or gums. The bacteria in plaque use the sugar and starch to produce an acid that attacks teeth. Repeated acid attacks can break down enamel, resulting in tooth decay and premature tooth loss.

What children eat and how often they eat affects the rate of tooth decay. For example, sugar is present in many foods, including items that are often thought of as healthy snacks, such as fruits vegetables milk and juice. Starches, too, are found in fruits and vegetables, as well as in cereal, cake, bread and in many processed foods. Although these foods may provide nutrients that children need, frequent between-meal snacking can be harmful.

Daily brushing and flossing are critical for maintaining healthy teeth and gums. Ask the dentist or hygienist about proper cleaning techniques. For brushing, a pea-sized amount of fluoride toothpaste is all a child needs.

Although children can generally brush their own teeth by age 4 or 5, flossing is a bit more difficult to master, and it may take a few years longer to perfect. Watching over children while they brush and floss will assure that the job is done properly.

To prevent injury to the gums, provide a child-sized toothbrush with soft, polished bristles. Replace it as soon as it wears out, usually every three to four months. Look for dental products that display the American Dental Association Seal of Acceptance, which means they are safe and effective.

Fluoride strengthens teeth and protects them from decay. Children who drink fluoridated water from birth have up to 40 percent fewer cavities than those who don't. Other sources include fluoride toothpaste and mouth rinses, prescribed supplements and fluoride applications in the dental office. Ask your dentist for advice on how to obtain the right level of fluoride for your children. If you live in a community with fluoridated water, your child may not require additional fluoride from some of these other sources supplements and mouth rinses.

DENTAC notes that regular dental checkups, beginning before the child's first birthday, and preventive dental care, such as cleanings and fluoride treatments, provide your child with "smile" insurance. Routine dental exams uncover problems that can be treated in the early stages, when tooth decay is less extensive and restorations may be small. When necessary, X-rays are taken to see how the teeth are developIng and to spot decay between the teeth.

As a child's permanent back teeth (premolars and molars) develop, depressions and grooves form in the chewing surfaces of the enamel. These grooves, called pits and fissures, collect plaque and microscopic bits of food. A dental sealant is a clear or shaded plastic material that the dentist paints on the chewing surfaces of the permanent teeth. The sealant adheres to the tooth and forms a thin protective cover that keeps plaque and food out.

Fort Benning family has 'model' child

Wilhelmina Models

A Fort Benning family member is a regional finalist in Kid Search '93, one of the nation's largest modeling contests.

Sasha Ector, 8, daughter of Staff Sgt. Willie, an instructor with the Bradley Fighting Vehicle's New Equipment Training Team of the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, and Robbie Ector, will now compete in the organization's national finals.

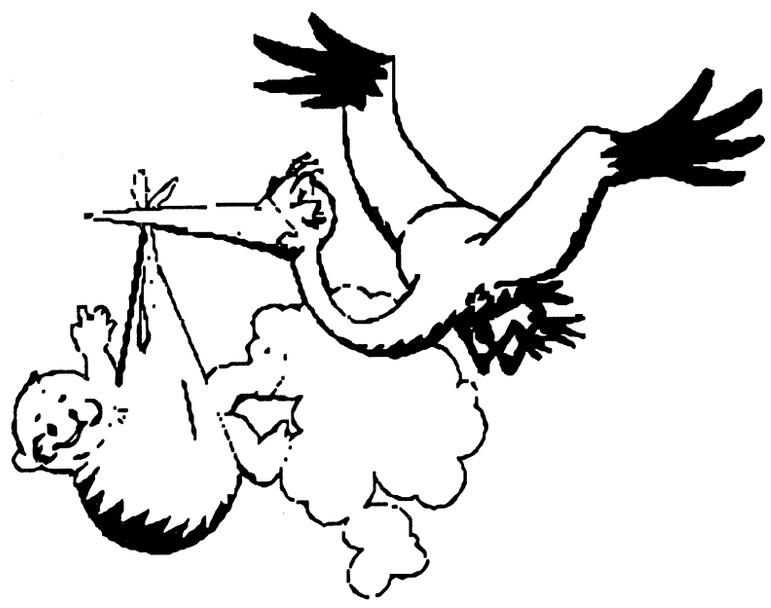
"The decision process, which was based on 50 percent personality and 50 percent appearance, was very difficult, said Natasha Esch, director of Wilhelmina Models agency.

"Nearly 60,000 parents entered their children, but it was Sasha's glamorous grin that was chosen as one of the top 1,400 children from across the United States," she said.

Sasha won a J.C. Penney portrait studio portrait package ($139 value) and the opportunity to charm the judges with her personality and looks in a personal interview with agents from Wilhelmina Models agency.

Ector

Wilhelmina Models has represented such famous faces as Kevin Costner, Whitney Houston, supermodels Kim Alexis, Beverly Peele, Beverly Johnson and Rebecca Gayheart.



Past winners have gone on to do television commercials for Cabbage Patch Bathtub Kids, Playskool, Berry Berry Kix, Tide and have appeared in advertisements for the Disney Catalog, Macy's, Vicks Formula 44, K-Mart, Guess and more.

A total of 100 regional finalists will be selected from across the country as national finalists.

The national finalists will win an all-expense-paid weekend for themselves and one parent for the national finals in New York City. The national finalists will compete for the top 50 prizes, which range from the grand prize of a $150,000 modeling contract and a $10,000 college scholarship to the seventh prize of a $500 college scholarship.

Kid Search '93 will award more than $1 million in prizes including modeling contracts and college scholarships for children ages newborn to 17 years. The contest is sponsored by the Wilhelmina Models and J.C. Penney Portrait Studio.

Military Police Activity

The following entries are from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters. Such entries may be incomplete and do not determine the guilt or innocence of any person.

This week's hot topic concerns Operation Slowdown. The speed limit on main post during physical training hours is 15 mph. The 15 mph speed limit is in effect between 6 and 7:30 a.m., Monday through Friday.

Also, the speed limit when passing troop formations or individual runners is 10 mph at all times. Drivers should use extreme caution when approaching unit formations.

Extra care should be taken during this time of the year because morning visibility is often reduced by fog or rain. Military Police patrols monitor several locations on Main Post during operation slowdown, and violators are subject to being stopped and cited.

• A sergeant reported that upon returning to her off-post quarters, she found someone waiting inside and they blindfolded her, handcuffed her to the bed and raped her.

• Two privates were charged with shoplifting after they were observed in the Post Exchange at the Main Mall replacing original price tags with less expensive price tags and then paying the lower price.

• A private first class was charged with larceny of private property after he used stolen credit cards to make several purchases.

• A family member was charged with assault after he struck his wife (specialist) in the stomach while she was sleeping. The specialist was also charged with assault after she retrieved a knife from the kitchen and advised the family member to leave.

• A family member was charged with aggravated assault and communicating a threat after threatening another family member with a carving knife.

This week's booby prize goes to the specialist who removed eight cases of meals, ready to eat from a food storage area. The specialist was apprehended and charged with larceny of government property.

Other activities included 11 traffic accidents and six cases of driving under the influence of alcohol. There were four shoplifting cases reported at exchange facilities and 15 cases of larceny of private property.

Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best — Give Crime Arrest." Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or the"Crime in Progress" line at 545-2222.

OCS graduates first class of '94

By Daniel Maloney
Officer Candidate School

Fort Benning's Officer Candidate School graduated and commissioned its first class of the year Jan. 27.

The graduation took place in Marshall Auditorium at Infantry Hall with the swearing-in ceremony at the battalion headquarters for 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, the unit responsible for training officer candidates.

Company B commissioned 106 second lieutenants in branches ranging from infantry to aviation during the ceremony.

The wide range of branches represented is indicative of the changing mission of OCS .

Originally conceived in June 1938 as a commissioning source for infantry officer candidates only, OCS at Fort Benning received its format and plan from Gen. Omar N. Bradley who was then commandant of the Infantry School.

In April 1973, the Branch Immaterial Officer Candidate Course was created to commission officers in all branches (except the Judge Advocate General Corps and the Chaplain Corps) and was the basis for the current 14-week course.

Among those graduates recognized for honors were:

Distinguished honor graduate: 2nd Lt. Daniel L. Runyon

Distinguished leadership graduate: 2nd Lt. Christopher M. Rizzo

Physical fitness award: 2nd Lt. Daniel L. Runyon

Flight evaluation board can judge officers' qualifications

US Army Trial Defense Service

A flight evaluation board is a board that is convened to examine the qualifications of an officer for aviation service, evaluate the officer's potential for aviation service and to make recommendations as to the qualifications and potential of the aviation officer.

There are several grounds on which to convene such a board. Among them are lack of proficiency, flagrant violation of flying regulations, undesirable habits or traits of character and insufficient motivation.

Undesirable habits or traits of character can include any act of misconduct such as illegal use of drugs and alcohol abuse. Because this board is administrative in nature, it is never used in a punitive manner or as a substitute for proceedings under the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

However, there is nothing that prohibits the convening of a board for the same actions that are also the subject of either UCMJ proceedings or civilian criminal proceedings.

Commanders of installations, divisions, brigades and detached battalions may convene a flight evaluation board. Each board is composed of an uneven number of rated aviation officers.

The officer against whom the board is convened is called the respondent. If the respondent is a warrant officer, one member of the board will be a warrant officer who is senior in grade to the respondent.

Once notified of the appointment of the board, the respondent has the right to representation by a judge advocate or may hire a civilian attorney.

When the board convenes, the board receives exhibits and hears testimony of witnesses under oath. The board also reviews the respondent's past performance, background and qualifications. The respondent, usually through a judge advocate, has the right to present evidence and call witnesses on his or her behalf as well as cross-examine witnesses called by the government. The members are also entitled to question all witnesses.

After presentation of all evidence, the respondent's counsel usually makes a closing statement.

After deliberations that are held in a closed session with only the board members present, the board may essentially make three recommendations to the appointing authority.

The recommendations may be:

- Restore the officer to aviation service.
- Disqualify the officer from aviation service.
- Permanently disqualify the officer from aviation service and that the officer no longer be authorized to wear the Army Aviation Badge.

The board only has the authority to make recommendations. The approving authority acts on the recommendations made by the board.

If the recommendation made by the board is not in the respondent's favor, an appeal may be undertaken. The appeal must be based on new evidence or on additional evidence not available when the board convened.

community care

By Ken Franklin
Martin Army Community Hospital

Q: I keep hearing commercials about Tylenol, ibuprofen and aspirin. Each manufacturer claims that doctors like its product better than the others. Which is really better? How do companies make these claims?

A: Acetaminophen, ibuprofen and aspirin are all better — at different things.

Knowing which medicine is better for what ailments can make you a better shopper and can make you better at caring for your family.

Acetaminophen is the generic name for Tylenol, as well as most "aspirin-free" pain relievers.

Tylenol is the safest pain reliever and fever stopper of the three. Allergies to it are very rare. Stomach upset from it is even rarer. The main danger is that large overdoses (15 to 30 tablets at once in an adult) can cause life-threatening liver damage.

Aspirin is also safe, in adults. Besides reducing pain and fever, it can reduce the swelling and stiffness of arthritis, bursitis and tendonitis.

Smaller doses can reduce the risk of heart attack and stroke in people with hardening of the arteries. Aspirin can cause Reye's syndrome in children and can cause stomach upset and even ulcers in adults (if taken over several weeks).

Allergic patients can get severe breathing problems or rashes from aspirin.

Ibuprofen fits in the middle. At over-the-counter doses, it acts much like acetaminophen. At prescription doses, it acts like aspirin and can also help symptoms of premenstrual syndrome.

Its benefits in in heart disease and stroke are unknown. Ibuprofen has all the same side effects as aspirin.

Generic versions of these three medications are identical to the brand name versions and usually cost much less.

Companies base their "doctor-recommended" claims on surveys. Since each of these three medicines is best at something, each does well in some surveys and each earns the label "doctor-recommended."

Whatever you pick, remember: more is not better. If taking the maximum recommended dose doesn't relieve the problem, don't take higher doses — call your doctor.

Do you have a question about family medical care? Send it to Community Care Corner, Martin Army Community Hospital, ATTN: HSXB-F, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905-6100.

Garner gets 'Breathing Lessons'

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

He's such a veteran of show business, it seems unlikely that James Garner would need any type of lesson at this point.

SPOTLIGHT

Nevertheless, the Emmy-winning actor gets such an education — figuratively, at least — in the new "Hallmark Hall of Fame" adaptation of "Accidental Tourist" author Anne Tyler's Pulitzer Prize-winning novel "Breathing Lessons," airing Sunday on CBS.

The production teams Garner with another celebrated talent, Oscar and Emmy recipient Joanne Woodward, in the story of a long-married couple who have a rather eventful journey while driving to and from the funeral of a friend's (Joyce Van Patten) husband. Ira and Maggie Moran have decidedly different approaches to life, given his trademark pragmatism and her unflagging optimism, and the events of their trip prompt them to re-evaluate the time they've spent together ... and to assess what the future may hold for them.

Produced and directed by John Erman ("Roots," "Queen"), the drama also features Kathryn Erbe ("What About Bob?") as the couple's ex-daughter-in-law, Eileen Heckart as a waitress they meet during their travels, and Paul Winfield as a homeless man they also encounter.

Generally genial, but also quite serious about his business affairs (as proven by past lawsuits involving two major studios, Warner Bros. and Universal), Garner muses that his only research for "Breathing Lessons" was provided by his own life. "I've been married for 37 years to, shall we say, an eccentric woman," he explains. "You know the patches of skin you have on the elbows? My wife Lois hates that, so she once asked a plastic surgeon, 'Can you get rid of those?' He said, 'Sure, if you want to walk around like (Frankenstein's monster, with arms permanently out-stretched).' She'd do it if she thought she could. I understand Ira and Maggie, then, and I like them. She doesn't think he appreciates her, and vice versa, though they love each other dearly. If either one of them gets in trouble, they're going to come to the other's defense, and that's pretty much the case with my wife and me."

Though "Breathing Lessons" was adapted for film by veteran TV writer Robert W. Lenski, who also did the script for Garner's earlier "Hall of Fame" venture "Decoration Day," the actor says he was drawn to it largely by novelist Tyler's reputation. "She's a wonderful writer," he states, "and my wife, who's an avid reader, has read many of her books. I don't ordinarily read a book that I've already read the script version of, but with this one, I had no trepidation of doing that. I thought it would be as good as the script, and it is. That's a difficult thing, because I feel that even if you have a good book, you may not make a good movie from it. It's hard to satisfy both the author and the screenwriter, because (they work in) two entirely different mediums."

Cypress to offer monthly garden themes through '94

Cypress Gardens

CYPRESS GARDENS, Fla. — Celebrating the park's botanical displays and America's passion for gardening, Cypress Gardens has designated 1994 as the "Year of the Garden," offering guests a new gardening theme to explore each month.

Inspired by gardens in Holland, Cypress Gardens will delve into "monochromatic madness" in February, planting full gardens in single colors — fire engine red, sky blue, sunburst yellow, petal pink and blazing white.

Also, Cypress Gardens will premiere a rare tulip garden in February. The result of an exchange program between Cypress Gardens and Holland's Efteling Gardens, this tulip display challenges the myth that tulips can not be grown in Florida soil.

Acres of pink and snowy white azaleas will herald the arrival of spring at Cypress Gardens. The Year of the Garden Celebration continues throughout 1994. Upcoming featured gardens include:

Spring Flower Festival — April

Herb and Scent Gardens — May

Rose Gardens — June

Victorian Garden Party — July

French Garden — August

Plantation Gardens — September

Oriental Garden — October

Sculpture Garden — November

Garden of Lights — December

Cypress Gardens is located near Winter Haven, Fla., just 40 minutes southwest of Sea World in Orlando, one hour from Busch Gardens in Tampa Bay. Take Interstate 4 to U.S. 27 south to state road 540 west.

Museum to offer 'graphic' classes

Columbus Museum

The Columbus Museum offers a variety of classes. Class registrations are accepted on a first-come, first-served basis until the week prior to the beginning of the class or until maximum enrollment is reached.

Classes are limited in size so early registration is suggested.

Color your world

Feb. 26 — 10:30 a.m. to noon for children grades four to six Teacher: Fran Spencer. Museum members, $5; nonmembers, $6

In celebration of the exhibition People, Places and Animals: American Traditions in the Graphic Arts Selected from the Permanent Collection, the museum has designed three independent workshops for adults.

Planned for Saturdays in February, the workshops will feature:

Papermaking

Feb. 12 — 10:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Teacher: Norman Wagner. Museum members, $45; nonmembers, $50.

Supplies are included in the registration fee.

"Bas-Relief"

Feb. 19 — 10:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Teacher: Norman Wagner. Museum members, $45; nonmembers, $50.

Using "bas-relief," an embossing print technique, participants will create hand-embossed stationery or a print of their own design. All supplies included in registration fee.

Marbleize paper

Feb. 26 — 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Teacher: Tara Lewis. Museum members, $15; nonmembers, $18; supplies included in registration fee. For information, call 649-0713.

soap update

ALL MY CHILDREN: Tad learned Brooke disappeared with Jamie, and she might die if not found in time. Hoping to find a safer hiding place, Brooke left the bus with Jamie and collapsed in the snow. Hayley and Charlie gave Tad a lead on Brooke. Danielle's paternity tests came back. Wait to see: Gloria makes a disturbing discovery.

ANOTHER WORLD: Frankie gave birth to a daughter moments after Cass entered the hospital elevator where she, Brett and Morgan had been stuck. Ian and Paulina realized his father's notes were stolen. Kate hocked her wedding ring to raise money for a school trip for Tomas. Learning of a second autopsy, Morgan asked to view Kyle's body. Wait to see: Carl makes the decision that could change his life.

AS THE WORLD TURNS: After meeting Samantha, Royce was glad Lucinda persisted in trying to find his twin. Lily told Holden they had to meet to discuss the decision she came to. Shannon surprised John with a visit. Courtney spotted Hans in Andy's proof sheets from the Venetian Ball. Wait to see: Shannon has another surprise for Duncan.

BOLD AND THE BEAUTIFUL: Sally encouraged Anthony to pursue Macy. Connor showed Karen proof he passed his AIDS test. That evening, he arrived with condoms and expectations. Taylor told Ridge she confronted Brooke because she always felt threatened by her. Later, to Ridge's dismay, she agreed to give James an appointment. Wait to see: Brooke's decision sparks a turning point in her and James' lives.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES: Marlena was crushed when Roman ordered her out of their home and revealed he planned to take custody of the children. Stefano was cleared of all charges. Peter warned John if he didn't lay off DiMera, next time it won't be the adults who will suffer. Kristen was upset when she saw the glee on Stefano's face after Marlena dropped to her knees to beg him not to hurt her children. Wait to see: Marlena makes a tough decision.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES: Bo and Billie were shipwrecked on a lovely island where Billie found a seashell that looked familiar. Carrie and Austin learned their room at the ski resort had only one bed. Lucas came to the lodge believing Carrie was there alone. Ivan returned and rushed to save his Madame when a fire erupted. Wait to see: Ivan faces a horrifying choice.

GENERAL HOSPITAL: Luke was in a tight spot when A.J. hired him to investigate in behalf of Alan. Mary Mae was struck by memories when she visited Laura at her former home. Ryan, posing as Kevin, crashed Mac's bachelor party. Brenda learned Jagger and Karen were engaged. Jenny and Paul announced they'd wed on Valentine's Day. Wait to see: Lucy forces Damian to act, causing Bobbie to react.

GUIDING LIGHT: Nick found a hole in the framing of Billy for shooting Roger. Upset over Eleni's birthday gift, Frank started an argument which was overheard by Julie. Roger was concerned when he learned Eve reluctantly helped Nick find the second bullet at the Jessup farm. Wait to see: Tangie has new reason to worry about Roger.

LOVING: Buck told Stacey about his past with Egypt. Tess told Casey it would be best for Ally if he left town. To keep Casey from moving to Paris, Steffi told Ally how Cooper plotted to keep her and Casey apart. Ally canceled her wedding to Cooper and rushed to the airport where she reunited with Casey. Alex was sure Egypt created the threats on her life. Buck's loan shark called. Wait to see: Dante finalizes his new plan of revenge.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE: Charges against Rebecca for harboring a fugitive were dropped. The body in the morgue was not Todd's. Cassie became more emotionally unstable when Beth changed her mind about the adoption and tried to flee the country with the baby. Todd regained consciousness on the side of a river bank. Wait to see: Viki makes a disturbing discovery.

YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS: Victor told Hope Eve's unfinished deathbed note convinced him he was Cole's father. After learning from Victor (through Cole) that the marriage had been consummated, Nikki worried that Victoria might be pregnant. Later, after taking a home pregnancy test, Victoria cried when she saw the results. Wait to see: Cole and Victoria make a desperate decision.

horoscope

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Cooperative efforts in business aren't especially favored. You and a co-worker don't quite mesh this week. This week and the coming months should be very favorable for a partnership interest. The weekend accents romance.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Though this week is likely to bring you new opportunities in business, you may have trouble staying on top of immediate tasks. You could easily fall behind now. A new assignment will be right up your alley. Romance may also come through work situations.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) The week brings opportunities for fun, yet there may be some last-minute changes in plans. In romance, keep your feet on the ground. Also, guard against foolish expenditure. A cycle begins this week that promises more fun outings in the coming months.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Family celebrations are favored, yet staying on top of household duties may be difficult now. There may be some confusion because of a mix-up in communications. In the coming months, you will be entertaining guests more often at home. This is good if you are looking to move.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) Good news comes by phone or letter and weekend plans fall into place now. However, the unexpected could throw you off course where job interests are concerned. Partners are a great help to each other this week.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) Money opportunities are certainly present this week, yet you must guard against careless expenditures. Extra expenses may arise in connection with parenting. You are efficient and industrious on the job this week. Income improves in the coming months.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Though you are optimistic and in a happy frame of mind this week, others could keep you waiting. Mix-ups in signals could occur between family members as well. You will enjoy a visit to a familiar haunt this weekend where you renew some friendships.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You may get a confidential tip this week that will benefit you financially. However, interruptions could make it difficult to accomplish as much as you would like now. Romance will be rewarding.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Though you are sought after socially now, friends who can't make up their minds make it difficult for you to put your own plans in final shape. Others seem to be unreliable. You will do an old friend a favor this weekend.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) You may have a minor disagreement with a friend this week. Business prospects look good at the moment, yet your independent attitude may not sit well with some you deal with. Many of your ambitions are soon to be realized.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) You will receive conflicting advice this week, so you might as well rely on your own judgment. Last-minute changes make it difficult for you to make up your mind about plans for travel. You will be expanding your horizons soon.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20) Though this week brings welcome financial developments, it's not the best time to make decisions involving the use of joint assets.

Infantry School to host

Simulation Symposium

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The U.S. Army Infantry School will host the Individual Combatant Modeling and Simulation Symposium 1994 Tuesday through Thursday.

This symposium will provide a forum for the sharing of information and focusing the attention of Department of Defense, Department of the Army, academia and industry on the Land Warrior Test Bed the vehicle for soldier modeling and simulations.

It consists of both discussions and demonstrations f training of individual dismounted soldiers in several environments.

Five technologies will be displayed for the first time together:

• Individuals Portal (I-Ports) — The soldier will be able to view and interact with computer-generated enemy and manned simulators as if they were present, either using helmet mounted displays or being in a room with rear projection screens and wired to a computer that senses the individual's movement and changes the scene accordingly.

This virtual reality world is much more sophisticated than "arcade games" as it integrates manned vehicular simulators and computer-generated enemy into one training event.

• Infoscope — This modified laser rangefinder allows the soldier, upon looking through it, to receive computer-generated images from the virtual world. This inserts the soldier into a virtual environment allowing him to interact with other manned simulators and personnel.

• Rapid Terrain Data Generation — The generation of high-resolution terrain data used in simulations. Using information collected from satellites, three-dimensional terrain features can be generated for use in simulations.

• Personnel Status Monitor — A device worn on the wrist enabling the tracking of personnel on the battlefield and providing their health status to a computer.

It would allow medics to find an individual when injured, reducing the time until treatment and decreasing the chance of soldiers being missing in action on the battlefield. In simulations, it will allow pinpointing locations of individuals on the virtual battlefield.

• Global Grid Communications System — This worldwide system of satellites and fiber-optic cables allows for high-speed transmission of data.

Attendees include Walter W. Hollis, deputy under secretary of the Army for operations research (the keynote speaker), Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan, chief of staff of the Army, Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr. commanding general of the Training and Doctrine Command, and retired Gen. Paul F. Gorman.

Victory Focus

Bde exercise winds down

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

The motor pool parking lots on Kelley Hill, empty of military vehicles since Jan. 25, are filling up again as "Victory Focus," the biannual field training exercise conducted by the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized), comes to a close.

On the first day of the exercise, Col. Michael Deegan, brigade commander, said it would be successful "if we return with all our soldiers, no major injuries, accidents or fuel spills and all our equipment intact."

With only three days to go, it looks as if the exercise will earn that title.

"Victory Focus is what we got into the Army to do — to go out and train," said Maj. Robert H. Vasse, the brigade adjutant.

That training has been accomplished with no cold weather injuries, even with the recent wet weather, "which means sergeants and leaders have been doing their jobs," Vasse said.

"Also, the brigade has gone to great lengths to prevent fuel spills and to protect the environment in general. All of our refueling areas are dug in with plastic lining and gravel, and all of our vehicles are required to place a plastic-lined box underneath to catch any oil that might drip," Vasse said.

The unit training portion of the exercise ended Thursday and many of the soldiers returned from the field, with only battalion staffs and support units remaining.

They will be conducting a command post exercise through Monday on the computerized BBS or brigade and battalion battle simulation system.

This system allows computers at Fort Stewart, Ga., where the rest of 24th Infantry Division is located, to create battle scenarios and send them via microwave links to a simulation center at the field site where staffs and units execute them.

But this is only one of the high-tech systems the brigade has been working with during Victory Focus.

"We were testing, at last count, more than 10 digital information sharing systems for the Army to improve seeing and decision making on the battlefield," he said.

One of these is the Enhanced Position Location Recording System, a computer-based system using synchronized radio transmissions to provide information on the location, identification and movement of friendly forces.

Also on-line now, Vasse said, is the B2C2, or Brigade and Below Command and Control, a digitized information sharing between brigade and battalion commanders that shows a whole battlefield on a color computer screen.

"It tracks vehicles real-time to 10 significant digits on a map so you know where you are down to a 10th

Fort Benning's water supply tests clean, safe

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

Fort Benning's water supply exceeds federal standards for clean, safe drinking water, according to a state regulated test conducted on samples collected Jan. 11.

The Federal Safe Drinking Water Act requires public water system operators to test water supplies yearly for pollutants, known as volatile synthetic organic chemicals, or VOCs, according to Jack Hodges, chief of the water treatment plant.

Fort Benning submitted 60 water samples from various sites on post, including schools and housing areas, and the test results met the federal standards for traces of lead or other contaminants in 51 of the 53 categories. Although the water on post contained almost no traces of pollutants, federal law allows water systems to have a specific "safe amount" of VOCs.

The safe level for each chemical varies, Hodges said. For example, the post water supply could have as many as 700 parts per million of ethylbenzene. The amount of ethylbenzene in the water was too small to measure and was designated "ND," or nondetectible, parts per million, according to the official test results.

Jerrie Macintire/Special to The Bayonet

Jack Hodges checks the amount of water in the system for proper treatment.

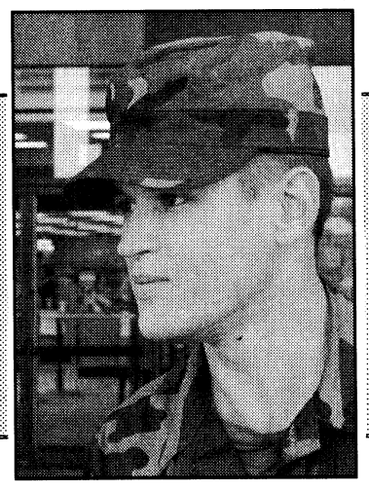
Two chemicals out of 53 were found in minute amounts, but these traces were well under the amount declared safe by federal law, the official results showed.

"We try to keep ahead of the regulations," Hodges said, as he attributed the post's clean water to the diligence of the staff, the attention to equipment upkeep and repair and the source of the water on post, Upatoi Creek.

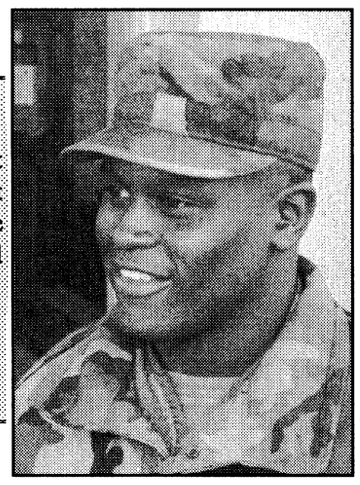
"Fort Benning has one of the cleanest water sources in the state," in part because there is no industrial plants or sewer systems upstream, he said.

Personnel at the water treatment facility monitor the tap water every hour, around the clock, a procedure that ensures consistently safe and clean water.



Each day, 4.5 to 12 million gallons of water are pumped from Upatoi Creek via three large water mains, where sand and silt are removed by screens. Pumps force the water through a cleansing procedure that involves a process called "flocing" where particles clump together and are removed. The water is then filtered over layered beds of large rock, gravel, sand and charcoal. Finished water is measured for cleanliness and pH balance, which is between 7 and 7.5, and is pumped into holding tanks. Excess treated water is stored in lagoons on site at the treatment facility; no treated water is pumped back into the creek, Hodges said.

From creek to the kitchen tap, the process requires about 24 hours, he said.



The test results of the VOCs sampling are available at the plant, Building 244 off Marne Road or by calling 545-2916.

SJA may be best deal in town

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

commentary

There's an adage, "you get what you pay for." We are also cautioned about deals that seem too good to be true.

The Staff Judge Advocate's Office believes both those saws year-round, but especially during tax season.

Every working day of the year, the SJA folks assist with claims and wills and do a quite creditable job prosecuting the alleged bad guys or defending clients.

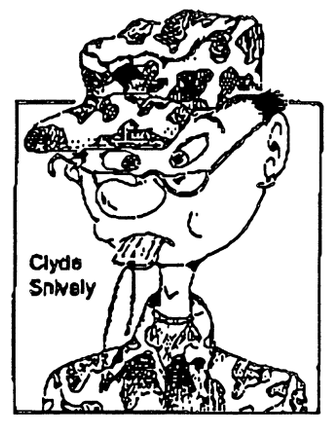
But from January to April, they get heavily involved in helping us with our income tax returns.

And the cost is zero, nil, nix.

So how good is this service? Well, one of the tax counselors has a degree in all that stuff from Harvard. And the other advisers go through an extensive training program. Even the unit representatives, our fellow soldiers, get thoroughly trained before they are sprung loose on us.

But even though we have an Army of tax experts right here on post, there's still a steady stream of soldiers heading out to find tax outfits to pay for the same services they can get here for free.

William O'Riley is one.



"Sure the folks on post can tell me how to fill out the forms and what forms I need, but can they get me a refund?"

"Are you due a refund?"

"That's what I want to find out from the tax experts. What are the loopholes, how much can I write off to business expenses, medical care and charity without raising suspicions and getting audited?"

"Ahh, you want to cheat and find out how much cheating you can get away with. And you think the folks who charge a fee will help you? Their signatures go on the return along with yours. Do you think they want to go out of business just to help you get a few extra dollars cut from you tax bill? I don't think so, Tim."

"Well, not really cheat, I just want to make sure I get all the breaks I deserve. The freebie guys might not be as in tune to all that as the tax firms."

"I got a news flash for you, Billy boy. Many of the counselors you see at tax firms were hired just for the tax season. In their normal lives, they are domestic engineers, retirees, out-of-work ice skaters looking for a way to make a few extra dollars, just like those helping out here on post."

"Yeah, but they still got all those experts they can turn to if a question comes up," he pouted.

"And so can the people helping us right here at Fort Benning. Also, just like the folks downtown, they've got the secret phone number to IRS they can call to get help — again realizing that many of the people working for IRS are also just temps, hired for the tax season."

"You're starting to depress me, Snively," he sniffed.

"It's a dog-eat-dog world out there," I muttered.

Billy finally did take my advice. He went to SJA, had his taxes done and found out he owed nearly $100.

Then he decided to get a second opinion. He went downtown. Had his taxes done, found he owed nearly $100 and, "oh, by the way, that'll be $50 for our services."

I wonder how many tax firms he'll hit before he finally realizes that a $100 tax bill is a $100 tax bill, no matter who helps with the return.

By the way, Willy how did a single specialist who lives in the barracks come up owing money? You into gun running or something?

PX Courtesy Patrol wouldn't let soldier in

I was recently denied access to the Post Exchange at the Main Mall by a Courtesy Patrol noncommissioned officer. The incident took place Dec. 7 at approximately 2 p.m.

I was told I could not enter the PX because I was wearing open-toed sandals —$70 Teva's to be exact.

The Courtesy Patrol NCO told me I could get in if I had on socks. He did, however, have no problem with my standing inside the gallery part of the Exchange, as if that part of the building somehow made me invisible to the rest of the world.

When the Courtesy Patrol program originally began, a staff writer of this paper and I had the opportunity to interview Fort Benning's Command Sgt. Maj. William H. Acebes. My interview was for part of a story for the television station on post. I had hoped the story would help eliminate a lot of confusion that had been happening from the new program. It's been months since the interview, and I guess the Courtesy Patrol NCOs had been here so long, I'd forgotten they were here. But I didn't forget how to dress properly.

I'm not complaining about the fact I have to comply with a dress code, but the problem is that people seem to interpret what they think the code means. I haven't been in the Army as long as some staff sergeants, but I have been in long enough to know what shower shoes are.

When staff sergeants report for Courtesy Patrol duty, they are briefed and told that sometime during their tour of duty, they might have to use their own judgment.

I'm here to tell you that if your wardrobe is anything like mine, it isn't large enough to please all of the people all of the time. We all have different tastes. The judgment call should not be needed.

This situation makes me think that the noncommissioned officers on this post are afraid to do on-the-spot corrections. I originally came through basic training here and they taught us about military courtesy. If you see someone of higher rank out of uniform you should tell him or her; he or she should appreciate it. I've also found out the higher the rank, the more they usually appreciate it. A leader wants to look "perfect" to soldiers.

Spc. Caejar A. Cox
USAIC Public Affairs

Garrison Commander's Office response:

Our Courtesy Patrol (soldiers) were trying to do their job to the best of their ability and apparently believed your shoes were not appropriate attire.

You were correct regarding U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 600-5, which states that shower shoes will not be worn into facilities. The regulation also states that civilian attire worn by personnel will be in good taste and repair. Evidently the soldiers serving on Courtesy Patrol thought your sandals didn't meet that criteria.

Your question about the Army and Air Force Exchange Service enforcing the dress code is a good one and is frequently asked. It is not AAFES' responsibility to enforce Fort Benning's dress code; and, as a matter of fact, AAFES personnel are forbidden by Exchange Operation Policy 1-4.

From a practical standpoint, we would consider it inappropriate to place AAFES employees in the position of making decisions on matters related to good order and discipline of the installation.

Our Courtesy Patrol program has been very successful. We have established and we enforce a standard of appearance of which all our patrons can be proud.

We started the Courtesy Patrol program because of numerous violations of the dress code policy. As violations decrease, we will seriously consider eliminating the Courtesy Patrol.

I will ensure that the Courtesy Patrol soldiers in-briefing is concise so we avoid misinterpretation of the regulation.

Reader says we can ask more of ourselves

We are all aware of the magnitude of cutting costs wherever possible. If we were all honest brokers, we would admit there are many ways to do this.

Too often the phrase "Not on My Watch" is heard. I would suggest this is a Navy term.

As a retired soldier and current nonappropriated fund employee, allow me to go back a few years when Fort Benning was still a great place to train and work.

There was still a draft in effect and those entering the Army received training, clothing, shelter and food, plus $78 per month, now $770.10. The country was probably a safer place to live since young people were given positive guidance and standards to follow.

The highest graded civilian at Fort Benning was a GS-13. I am afraid to ask how many we have now with minimum increase in scope of work requirements.

The "objective" of war is to kill, capture or destroy the enemy and his will to fight. This requires leaders to focus on mission first and welfare second.

Too often the term "quality of life" is heard before mission requirements. War or conflict is not fun, and we should all be prepared for the hardships required if called upon.

Soldiers and leaders should not consider details as degrading. A retired command sergeant major reminded me of opportunity training, (police call using squad formation, mowing grass with protective masks on).

For those of us who pulled details, there was the added incentive to be promoted so your name was removed from the detail roster. One of the most expensive outlay of dollars is the food service contract. Can we do better?

Changing President John F. Kennedy's famous remark a little, I suggest, "Ask not what your Army can do for you but what can we do for our Army."

Common sense can ensure road safety

The combination of runners and vehicles on roadways creates a serious hazard. Several close calls between runners and vehicles have been reported recently.

To prevent injuries and possible fatalities, the following precautions will be strictly enforced:

Commanders will choose routes with the lightest vehicular traffic.

Troop formations will not block more than one traffic lane at a time. This includes anyone running to the left of the formation.

Vehicles will not exceed 10 mph when meeting or passing a troop formation.

Stragglers will be provided with cadre and road guards.

Integration of vehicles into troop formations must be avoided.

Road guards with reflective vests (NSN 8415-00-177-4974) will be posted 50 feet to the front and rear of formations. During darkness, road guards will carry flashlights.

Individual joggers will jog or run on the sidewalk or shoulder of the road facing traffic and wear reflective vests and high-visibility clothing.

Joggers will not wear radio or tape headphones.

Courtesy, cooperation and common sense on the roadways of Fort Benning can ensure the safety of everyone.

on a map so you know where you are down to a 10th of a meter on the ground," Vasse said, "and it does that automatically every few seconds.

"It's exactly like a computer simulation game, except it's dealing with real people and real units," he said.

The biggest, and perhaps most impressive, system being used during Victory Focus is the Battle Command Vehicle.

Worth more than $2.5 million, the extra-large armored vehicle contains everything needed to track and control a battle, according to Maj. John F. D'Agostino, brigade operations officer.

Designed to carry the brigade commander, intelligence officer, operations officer and fire-support coordination officer, everything in the vehicle is digitized for faster tracking and communication.

"It paints a picture of the battlefield that has never been available to a brigade commander before," D'Agostino said.

The vehicle is one of only two prototypes; the other is being used by Task Force 1-70 from Fort Knox, Ky., which will join the brigade at its next rotation at the National Training Center, Fort Irwin, Calif.

"It will be the first rotation at NTC where there will be a digital headquarters talking to a digital battalion."

13th CSB reopens dining hall

By Denise Howell
36th Engineer Group

The newly renovated 13th Corps Support Battalion dining facility reopened Feb. 3.

According to Sgt. 1st Class Raymond Hoock, dining facility manager, the renovations took three months to complete. The money for the renovations, he said, came from a $5,000 allocation from the 36th Engineer Group. Materials were supplied by the Department of Public Works, while the work itself was done by soldiers working in the operations construction department of the 43rd Engineer Battalion.

The new decor features green pastel wallpaper and matching floor tiles, ceiling fans and elaborate silk floral arrangements on each table.

"We wanted to create a brighter, airier and more relaxed atmosphere," said Staff Sgt. Claudia Ible, dining facility secretary. "We want soldiers to enjoy themselves here, as well as enjoy their meals."

Hoock said the color scheme was chosen by representatives of the Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers program.

"I think it certainly created the desired effect," he said. "Everyone who commented has liked it. You'd better believe they'd let us know if they didn't."

According to Ible, future menus will be based upon the newly implemented Army Food Management Information System, but the menus can be changed at the discretion of dining facility managers for special occasions.

TRADOC safety officer visits post

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

The Training and Doctrine Command's safety officer visited Fort Benning Monday to introduce a newly formed directorate that will become operational March 1.

During the visit, George W. Morgan, toured several facilities including the fire stations, recycling center and the Provost Marshal's Office. He termed the visit as a "get to know you" tour and said he found great teamwork among Fort Benning's organizations.

The newly formed directorate will be called SAFE and stands for the consolidated areas of safety, fire protection and the environment.

The consolidation will not affect any jobs at Fort Benning, according to Morgan. He said the change was made to eliminate the overlapping of procedures like inspections between the different areas.

The question of whether something is a safety issue or an environment issue sometimes arises, he said. "Now there is no question (about it); we now know it's a SAFE issue."

Morgan also stressed the importance of environmental issues during his visit.

"General (Frederick M.) Franks" (TRADOC commander) has said that the environment is one of his major issues," Morgan said. "Not because we have to, but because it's our responsibility."

He pointed out that environmental groups and the military are working well together to solve mutual concerns.

CID: Be alert for mailed drugs

Criminal Investigation Division

The Criminal Investigation Division is investigating a drug-related crime that it received notification of from the Heidelberg Resident Agency, 5th Military Police Detachment, Jan. 18.

The Heidelberg office initiated a report of investigation Nov. 29, involving the smuggling of illicit drugs, based on information it received about marijuana being sent through the U.S. Postal Service.

Its examination of an envelope determined that the sender had packaged marijuana inside wax paper packets, placed them inside a film canister filled with peanut butter, and then affixed the top. The film canister was then wrapped with a dryer sheet to further prevent detection.

The CID recommends that close attention be paid to the type of mail soldiers receive in their units. Mail room supervisors should be notified and they should contact their commanders if they suspect this is occurring.

Special attention should be paid to anyone who has large quantities of film canisters, as this is a means in which marijuana is carried in small quantities by users of the substance.

Anyone with any information concerning this procedure, can notify the nearest law enforcement agency, or call the CID office.

For more information, call Gerrard W. Williams at 545-2143 or 545-1726.

Georgia to issue new refund checks

Georgia Department of Revenue

ATLANTA — The Georgia Department of Revenue will issue a new, laser printed, "perforated-style" income tax refund check in 1994, and wants to alert all taxpayers expecting a refund to take note of the change, Commissioner Marcus E. Collins Sr. said.

The new-style income tax refund checks differ from the "see-through-window" envelope style used in previous years in several respects — first, its physical size is slightly smaller; second, both envelope and check are laser printed; third, the check is light green in color as opposed to the yellow-colored checks of previous years.

New definition will open jobs to women

By Jim Garamone
American Forces Information Service

Redefining ground combat and rescinding the "risk rule" should open thousands of jobs to women in the military, said former Defense Secretary Les Aspin.

Women will still be barred from direct ground combat, but many jobs in combat service and combat service support units will be opened.

The new definition of ground combat has three parts, Aspin said. First, direct ground combat means engaging an enemy on the ground with individual or crew-served weapons. Second, personnel must be exposed to hostile fighting. Third, there must be a high probability of hand-to-hand fighting.

All three elements of the definition must be present before women can be excluded from that unit.

The services will use this definition to look at the missions of various combat service and combat service support units to see if women can be assigned.

"The risk rule explicitly banned women from combat service and combat service support units if the risk of combat was the same for the support unit as for the direct combat unit," Aspin said. "The risk rule was really overcome by events."

He said the rule won't be rescinded until Oct. 1 to give Congress a chance to examine the implications.

"The bottom line is we're using people where they can be used most effectively," said Edwin Dorn, assistant secretary of defense for personnel and readiness. "We're no longer saying women have a specific role to play and men have a specific role to play. The point is we're looking at individuals.

Aspin called for the services to respond by May 1. This report will include a list of all units and positions closed to women and changes this policy will mean.

"It will have three columns: jobs to remain closed, jobs to be opened and a justification for each entry," Aspin said.

An implementation committee, under Dorn's direction, will examine the proposed changes.

Women will still be barred from direct ground combat, but many jobs in combat service and combat service support units will be opened

Women can be excluded from units for other reasons such as the prohibitive cost of changing berthing requirements to allow privacy. They can also be barred from units required to spend long periods of time with direct ground combat units.

Women will not be assigned to units engaged in long-range reconnaissance missions or anything behind enemy lines. Finally, they can be banned from units where job-related physical requirements would necessarily exclude the vast majority of females.

Aspin listed some areas the services will specifically review. In the Army, officials will look at maneuver brigade headquarters, divisional forward support battalions, engineer companies, divisional military police companies and air defense artillery, among others.

In the Marine Corps, officials will examine whether women can be assigned to Hawk missile battalions and batteries and Marine air-ground task forces.

In the Navy, officials will look at construction battalions and small boats.

Finally, in the Air Force officials will ponder assigning women to tactical air command and control teams at Army brigade level and as air liaison officers at Army brigades.

Study says first-termers ready — married or not

By Steve Barett
American Forces Information Service

A recent Department of Defense study found no relationship between marital status and readiness in first-term service members.

The same study also found most service members, regardless of marital status or family members, deploy when ordered and a strong marriage is key to successful military careers.

However, the study found DoD can do a better job helping service members with spouses, children and other family members deal with challenges of the military.

The joint-service study, conducted by DoD's assistant secretary of defense for personnel and readiness, found married service members tend to have fewer performance and behavior problems. But the problems they have are more complex and time-consuming for unit commanders. These problems often distract from performing the unit's mission and lead to the perception that marital status significantly impacts readiness.

"Our first concern is readiness," said former Defense Secretary Les Aspin. "This study shows us we can do a better job helping our first-term service members stay ready. The agenda for immediate action that grew from this study should go a long way toward that goal."

Aspin directed the study after Marine Corps Commandant Gen. Carl Mundy outlined his concerns that married first-term members had trouble deploying. Those problems might compromise readiness, he said.

The DoD-wide study addresses such items as marriage, stress, pregnancy, divorce, finance, family services and substance abuse. The study shows how these topics affect individual enlistees, retention rates, force quality and readiness.

Prior to 1973, the military was composed mostly of single men. But with the volunteer force, the enlisted force changed from a single male society to one where more than half the active force is married.

According to the study, few recruits are married when they enter the service. The 1992 numbers range from 3 percent in the Marine Corps to 10 percent in the Army and Air Force. However, by the end of a four-year first enlistment, 42 percent of those service members are married. Of those males who remain in service for a full career, nearly 87 percent are married.

The study recommended the services provide a series of programs designed to aid first-term soldiers. These recommendations are:

- Orient service members and spouses to military life.
- Include family issues in the military education curriculum at all levels.
- Provide financial planning assistance that addresses the needs of first-term families.
- Establish marketing efforts to provide education and orientation information at unit orderly rooms, recreation centers, libraries and other points.
- Create premarital education programs within each service carefully designed to ensure credibility, timeliness and relevance.
- Provide information and move counseling for first termers before they depart their training assignments for their first duty assignments.
- Establish a "settling-in" policy, giving first termers time to orient themselves to their first duty assignment. This includes house hunting, installation orientation and exemption from training or exercise deployment.
- Promote community partnerships among the military, civilian and business communities to address employment opportunities, rental policies, business financial practices and other issues.

The study found it difficult to establish a firm connection between readiness and family member status of first termers. Most married service members can deploy when called to do so, two-thirds report problems in responding to such deployments, while only a third of single members report such problems.

Child-care obligations also add to deployment problems.

The survey determined members and spouses who take advantage of military support programs are satisfied with those services. However, not all members take advantage of them.

Many problems generate around the couple's lack of basic life skills; they lack life experience and the knowledge on how to maintain a household.

Another major issue is family housing, particularly in areas with high off-base housing costs. The survey found current basic allowance for quarters and variable housing allowance don't provide enough money for many junior enlisted to obtain "adequate" housing.

In most cases, on-base quarters are assigned to married career service members, where they forfeit BAQ and VHA, but have no rent or utility costs. Lower enlisted members are low priority for on-base housing, forcing nearly 75 percent of first-term couples into off-base commercial homes and apartments.

The study also found existing policies provide tangible benefits for marriage, prompting many couples to decide on "when, rather than whether to marry."

The study noted married service members receive special consideration in pay, housing and duty and work assignments.

Recommendations to aid first-term soldiers

- Orient service members and spouses to military life.
- Include family issues in the military education curriculum at all levels.
- Provide financial planning assistance
- Provide education and orientation information at unit orderly rooms, recreation centers, libraries and other points.
- Create premarital education programs
- Provide information and move counseling for first termers before they depart their training assignments
- Establish a "settling-in" policy, giving first termers time to orient themselves to their first duty assignment.
- Promote community partnerships among the military, civilian and business communities

African Americans

comprise about 20% of the military

By Linda Lee
American Forces Information Service

Recent Department of Defense personnel figures show the percentage of African Americans in the military is higher than the percentage in the overall U.S. population.

DoD personnel officials said about 20 percent of the military force is African American. Of the almost 1.7 million personnel in uniform, DoD reported about 330,000 are African American. This compares to the latest Census Bureau figures, which show about 31 million blacks in the United States, or about 12.4 percent of the population.

Army figures show 157,046 people, or 27.6 percent of the overall force, are African American. The numbers break down to 8,353 officers, or 11.1 percent of the service's officers; 1,390 warrant officers, 10.6 percent; and 147,303 enlisted, 30.7 percent.

In the Navy, 16.1 percent are black. DoD figures indicate of the 81,262 blacks in the Navy, there are 2,860 officers, 4.5 percent of the total number of officers; 270 warrant officers, 9.7 percent; and 78,132 enlisted members, 17.8 percent.

A total of 16.6 percent of the Marine Corps, or 29,701 people, are African American. Of these, there are 764 officers, 4.6 percent of the officers; 208 warrant officers, 10.8 percent; and 28,729 enlisted members, 17.9 percent.

The total number of black officers in the Air Force is 4,738, or 5.6 percent of the officer corps, while there are 59,900 black enlisted members. This equals 16.8 percent of the enlisted corps. Overall, blacks account for 14.7 percent of the Air Force.

African-American women play a major role in DoD, said personnel officials. In the Army, there are 31,001 black women, 43.8 percent of the 70,797 women in uniform; Navy, 13,148 black women, 24.3 percent of 54,190; Marine Corps, 2,012 black women, 25.6 percent of 7,864; and Air Force, 14,103 black women, 21.3 percent of 66,192.

Indoor smoking lights go out for DoD workers

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

The indoor smoking light went out for Department of Defense employees Jan. 31. Smokers must go outside to light up.

Army Lt. Col. Hugh Wolfe of DoD's Occupational Safety and Health office said indoor smoking is banned in all DoD-owned or leased buildings. Outdoor smoking areas must be reasonably protected from the elements but cannot be near building entrances or exits, he said.

"The rule applies to private offices, hallways, restrooms and phone booths," he said. "Second-hand smoke has been classified by government agencies as a potential cancer causing agent. The new policy is designed to protect employees as much as possible from that risk."

The new smoking policy applies to all employees, visitors and contract personnel, said Wolfe. Family housing, bachelor quarters and prison living areas are exempt.

Restaurants, clubs and recreational facilities such as bowling alleys can allow smoking in designated areas, but must have no-smoking areas. Commanders can make their own policies more, but not less, stringent, said Wolfe.

The Pentagon banned smoking in restaurants and snack bars Nov. 1 but still permitted smoking in designated restrooms until the Jan. 31 deadline. Most federal government workplaces, including the White House, banned indoor smoking last year.

Troops may pay more to fund retirement homes

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

To keep the military's two retirement homes from going broke, active duty members may have another $1.50 taken out of their monthly pay starting next January.

Service secretaries recently approved a proposal to increase the current 50 cents per month to $2. Congress must approve the increase.

"There have been other proposals for alternative funding of the homes that did not pass," said Kerri Childress, public affairs officer for the Soldiers' and Airmen's Home.

Last year, the Soldiers' and Airmen's Home's budget was $43 million, but the home took in only $35 million. The Naval Home did better, spending $11 million and taking in about $20 million. Still, said officials, with downsizing of the active force, both homes will go broke by 1999 without the increase.

Childress said she's been deluded with calls about the proposed increase. "I wish I could get them all to come to the home and visit, said Childress. "After a visit, most service members say they're happy to pay more."

Ironically, the homes have been hurt by service members' good behavior, since fines and forfeited pay go to support the homes. Fewer service members pay fines or forfeit pay as a result of courts-martial or administrative discipline these days. In 1983, a total of $25 million in fines and forfeited pay helped out the Soldiers' and Airmen's Home. In 1993, fines and forfeitures netted $13 million.

Residents also pay 25 percent of their retired pay and Social Security benefits to live in the homes. However, many residents served during World War II or before, and their retired pay is low.

The Soldiers' and Airmen's Home has 1,760 residents. The Naval Home, built in 1975, has 550. In 1991, the two homes merged into the Armed Forces Retirement Home. They have separate trust funds, which will merge in 1995. The Naval Home trust fund is worth $21 million, and the Soldiers' and Airmen's Home trust fund is $139 million.

Post's EEO Office equals EXCELLENCE

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Fort Benning's Equal Employment Opportunity Office helps make the post a community of excellence, said Ellis Dandy, EEO director.

The post EEO Office was recently awarded the Training and Doctrine Command Communities of Excellence Award for 1993.

"The TRADOC award is a good award because it speaks the idea of excellence," Dandy said. "Excellence is what we continuously strive for. The concept of 'doing it right the first time' is what we always try to live up to at EEO."

Dandy said EEO's tiny staff must work very hard to meet the needs of such a large installation.

"We are very fortunate to have such a dedicated staff," he said. "We are also fortunate to enjoy an excellent working relationship with the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, the commanding general and his staff and other post managers. Many of the things the EEO office gets credit for are the result of positive interaction and cooperation among all of these elements."

Because EEO follows set procedures under federal law, the office doesn't strive to do a lot of new things, said Dandy, but rather strives to do the things it does — like handling complaints and overseeing enforcement of affirmative action laws — absolutely right the first time.

"One of the unique aspects of our task is the necessity that we always remain neutral, especially in the complaints process," he said. "We must hear both sides, but we don't take a side."

Dandy said the post is doing well in the area of affirmative action, but certain areas still need attention.

"We need to place continual emphasis on higher level civilian positions where we are finding an underrepresentation of women and minorities in these positions."

Fort Benning leads TRADOC in terms of the number of complaints lodged, Dandy said, but at the same time leads the way in the number of complaints successfully resolved.

"Many people see complaints as a headache of sorts, but we see them as an opportunity to excel," he said. "The resolution of complaints has many unseen impacts that reverberate throughout the work force and that affect morale, efficiency and motivation."

Also important is the time and money saved as a result of the resolution of complaints. Last year, the EEO saved the post nearly $1.7 million by successfully resolving complaints.

"It's not always possible, but we like to see complaints resolved in which everyone wins," he said. "We want both sides to go away satisfied and ready to move beyond the issue and back to productive work."

The aspect of helping people is the most satisfying aspect of EEO, Dandy said.

"At Fort Benning, we take care of people. We view them as assets to the installation. If we can protect our assets and ensure that the needs of all are met, then we will have a more efficient work force," Dandy said.

"We are in the people business and we are serious about it," he said.

Pediatric Clinic appointments join hospital's computer system

By John Wynn
Martin Army Community Hospital

The Pediatric Clinic at Martin Army Community Hospital has just been added to the hospital's computerized patient appointment system.

With the availability of some new computer equipment, the Pediatric Clinic will now be able to maintain its appointment schedule on the same system as the rest of the hospital.

"The clinic staff is working hard to make this transition as simple as possible, but the new system does require us to obtain a fair amount of administrative and patient information prior to scheduling the patient's appointment," Sgt. Theresa Cole, Pediatric Clinic noncommissioned officer in charge, said.

Once a patient has been added into the system, the time required on the telephone should be considerably less for future appointments, Cole said.

The new system allows the clinic to easily keep track of patients and complete administrative reports with considerably less trouble than the previous paper and pencil system.

"We will have a great deal more information at our disposal in a moment's notice with the new computer," Cole said. Patients are asked to be patient with the new system during these first few months of implementation, she added.

In addition to the Pediatric Clinic, appointments for the newly established Adolescent Medicine Clinic may be made by calling the Pediatric Clinic.

Adolescents ages 13 to 18 who require medical care, developmental counseling or socialization assistance can receive care from this new service.

Parents or adolescents needing to schedule an appointment may call weekdays between 8:30 and 11:45 a.m. or from 1 to 3 p.m. at 544-1086, 544-1087 or 544-1088.

ACAP plans employment seminar

Army Career and Alumni Program

A seminar about federal employment will be Thursday from 8 to 10 a.m. in Infantry Hall, Classroom 30.

Sponsored by the Army Career and Alumni Program and the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, the seminar is designed to provide information on the opportunities of federal employment with primary emphasis on Fort Benning.

Available to soldiers who are retiring from the military and family members, the seminar will cover the basics of how the federal employment system functions, the various agencies, where to find job announcements and veteran's preference. Participants will be given a detailed explanation of the federal employment application, Standard Form 171.

James Fleming, a 20-year veteran of the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, and Cathy Murray, an instructor with Conwal Inc. will be available to answer questions.

Murray assists the Georgia Department of Labor with the ACAP Transition Assistance Program workshop, and she conducts personal assessments Thursday and Friday of each week from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the ACAP office in Soldier's Plaza. The assessments include instruction in the use of an automated Standard Form 171.

To obtain an appointment, call 545-7009, 545-4913 or 545-4892 and ask for Judy McKibben or stop by Building 2617 in Soldiers' Plaza.

acap q & a

Army Career and Alumni Program

The downsizing is projected to end in fiscal 1995. What are the plans for ACAP after it completes that mission?

ACAP is an enduring program; it has an important mission that will survive after the downsizing is completed. It adds an important dimension to an individual's productivity life cycle — to the Army, future employers and the nation.

What services are provided?

Every individual who visits ACAP first receives a needs assessment and an individual transition plan. Based on this appraisal, clients are then sent to the appropriate service providers who will assist them in their transition.

If they need job assistance, they will be sent to the Job Assistance Center where they will receive job search workshops and seminars, individual assistance and counseling, assistance with writing resumes and cover letters, and access to various job data base — including the Army Employer and Alumni Network.

post briefs

Engineers to visit

Representatives of the Engineer Officers' Branch will be visiting Fort Benning from Tuesday through Thursday. They will present a briefing on the latest changes and current trends in the engineer branch Tuesday at 1 p.m. at the Sightseeing Road chapel.

Interviews will include future assignments and promotion opportunities. Interested officers should contact their battalion adjutant or call Capt Glenn Kallgren at 545-1219.

CID offers reward

The Criminal Investigation Division is offering a $500 reward for information concerning a robbery that occurred at approximately 7:50 p.m. Jan. 30 adjacent to the quarters on Arrowhead Road in the McGraw Manor Housing area.

An unidentified black male using an unidentified weapon robbed a female family member and fled the scene. A reward will be paid to anyone providing information that leads to identification of the individual(s) responsible for the crime.

All information is confidential. Contact Reginald Ray, 86th Military Police Detachment (CID) at 545-5389 or the Military Police desk sergeant at 545-5222.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland and range areas will take place Monday through Feb. 21.

If weather permits, the following compartments may be affected: A-12, B-2, C-1, D-14, D-17, E-4, H-2, J-6, K-3, K-8, K-11, K-12, K-15, K-16, K-18, K-12, L-2, L-3, L-6, M-2, M-8, O-10, O-15, Q-3, Q-4, Q-6, S-1, T-2, T-4, U-3, V-1, W-2, X-5, Y-1, Z-2 and CC-2.

Burning will occur in pine stands within these compartments to enhance endangered species habitat and training areas.

People using these areas for recreation must vacate before 9:30 a.m. daily.

Training units using compartments adjacent to these areas may experience drift smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while traveling in these areas because of the potential for reduced visibility.

Trash, recycle pickup to change for holiday

There will be no trash collection at Fort Benning Feb. 21. Housing areas scheduled for trash pick up that day will be picked up Feb. 22. Areas regularly scheduled for Feb. 22 will be picked up Feb. 23.

There also will be no recycle pick up Feb. 21. Family housing areas' recycling materials will be picked up as follows:

Feb. 24: Norton Court, Indianhead Terrace, Custer Terrace, McDaniel Manor, Bouton Heights and Davis Hill.

Feb. 25: Austin Loop, Miller Loop, Perkins Place, McIver Street, Upatoi Terrace, East Main Post and McGraw Manor.

For more information, call the Construction Inspection Branch of the Directorate of Public Works at 545-4749.

Get tax help at PX

Free assistance with tax form preparation by members of the Legal Assistance Office will be available at the Post Exchange at the Main Mall March 5 and April 9 from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Those wishing to make use of the assistance should bring all paperwork and tax forms received.

For more information, call Jane Winand at 545-3281 or 545-3282.

CG welcome Feb. 24

The commanding general's welcome briefing will be Feb. 24 at 3:30 p.m. in Marshall Auditorium in Building 4, Infantry Hall. Those attending must be seated by 3:10 p.m. For information, call 545-4694 or 545-4630.

AUSA to sponsor Eye-Opener Breakfast

The Columbus Chamber of Commerce's Eye-Opener Breakfast, sponsored by the Association of the United States Army, will be Feb. 24 at the Columbus Iron Works Convention and Trade Center, starting at 6:50 a.m.

The guest speaker will be Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, and the Infantry Band and Chorus will perform.

For more information, call the Fort Benning AUSA office at 545-5921.

ACAP changes policy

Army personnel are eligible to use Army Career and Alumni Program services up to 90 days after transition.

All individuals should begin ACAP services 180 days before separation. To set an appointment or if you have any questions, call the Transition Assistance Office, Building 2617, at 545-4892 or 545-4913.

Preseparation counseling is required no later than 90 days prior to separation.

Knoxville police seeking soldiers leaving service

The Knoxville, Tenn., Police Department will be at the Fort Benning Job Assistance Center Wednesday to recruit soldiers getting out of the Army to fill 75 law enforcement officer positions.

Briefings will be conducted at 10 a.m. and noon, and personal interviews will be conducted as time permits.

The Job Assistance Center is located in Building 2634 in Soldiers' Plaza. Interested soldiers can stop by as soon as possible to sign-up for an interview. Seating is limited.

Fort Benning's tax office ready for business

Fort Benning's Tax Office opened Jan. 31. The office will be located in Building 2624 in Soldiers' Plaza. Office hours will be 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

The office will have many federal and state tax forms available. Unit tax advisers have been appointed for units throughout post, and persons having tax questions should see their unit tax advisers first.

For information, call 545-4267.

For the convenience of Bayonet customers, anyone who needs to turn in stories, film, letters, etc., to The Bayonet may now use a new drop box located in the Information Office, Room 111, Infantry Hall, Building 4.

Material being dropped off should be placed in an envelope with a point of contact and a phone number annotated on the envelope.

Customers can still fax material to The Bayonet at 682-0095, send information through PROFS (ID is Bayonet), mail material to: The Bayonet, Infantry Hall, Room 601, send material through distribution or hand carry it to The Bayonet's office, Room 601, whichever is most convenient.

The deadline is noon Friday for the following week's issue.

PAO seeks soldiers to work on post TV

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

The Public Affairs Office is seeking talented soldiers who are interested in working for the post television station.

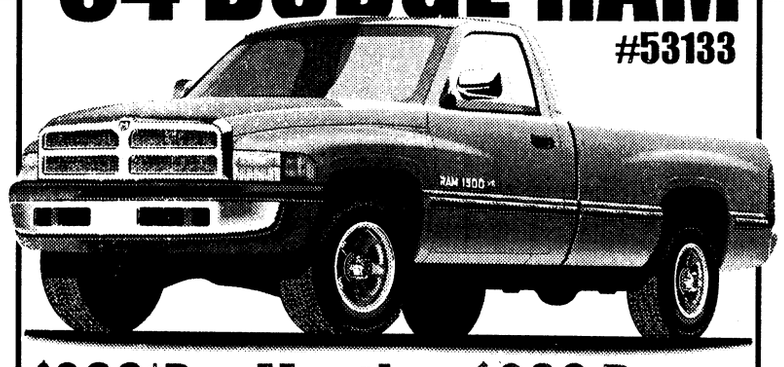
"I encourage commanders and directors to notify interested soldiers," said Paula J. Randall, command information officer. Interviews will be conducted at the Public Affairs Office and soldiers can call to set up a time.

Duties will include news gathering, script writing and operating professional broadcast equipment.

According to Spc. Caejar A. Cox of USAIC-TV, experience is a plus but is not required.

"Training will be provided, but interested soldiers should at least have a good military appearance, a desire to work in the broadcasting field and have good communications skills, including strong English skills and a good speaking voice," Cox said. "They should also have at least six months retainability at Fort Benning and be able to be released from their current positions in order to work for the station."

"This is an excellent opportunity for soldiers to gain valuable experience in public speaking, news gathering and communication skills," he said. "But, they must be willing to put in the work."



Soldiers will be selected through an interview-audition process. Those who are interested can call Randall at 545-2201 for more information or to schedule an interview.

Cruise-matics win opener

Post rugby team trounces Florida State University Saturday at Stilwell Field

By Terry K. Ray
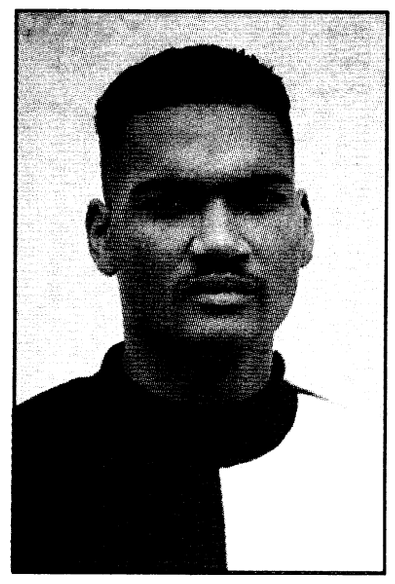
Special to The Bayonet©

The Columbus-Fort Benning Rugby Football Club Cruise-matics opened the 1994 rugby season with a 25-0 pounding of the Seminoles of Florida State University Saturday at Stilwell Field on a wet and dreary day.

Winger Jason Daffin put the Cruise-matics on the board early in the first half on a sprint to the goal for his first try of the match and a 5-0 Cruise-matic lead.

Minutes later, wing forward John Newman took a pass from teammate John Collins at the Seminole goal line and punched across for the try and a 10-0 advantage.

In the second half, Daffin once again opened the scoring when he took the ball off a missed penalty kick by fly half Tim Butterfield down the left side line into the end zone for his second try of the day and a 15-0 lead.



Inside center Lee Rysewyk pushed the score to 20-0 late in the match when the Cruise-matics moved the ball on a line with good passing and hard running.

Butterfield drove home the stake with the final try of the day with no time left on the clock and the Cruisers up 25-0. The Cruise-matics missed out on 10 extra points by missing on all their extra-point kicks.

Two to go to trial camp

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

Childress

Williams

Fort Benning will be sending two basketball players to the All-Army trial camps, which are set to begin Tuesday at Fort Indiantown Gap, Pa., for the women, and at Fort Lee, Va., for the men.

Pfc. Lena Williams of the 63rd Combat Support Equipment, 36th Engineer Group, has been selected to attend the trial camp for the women, while Spc. Mark Childress of Company A, 317th Engineer Battalion, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, has been tabbed for the men's side of the camp. Both are set to depart for their respective camps Tuesday.

Williams, 22, hails from Anahuac, Texas, where she started playing ball in the sixth grade and moved up rapidly through school.

"I always seemed to be a level ahead of everyone from grade school on," said Williams. "I hope to continue that level of play at the trial camp especially on defense.

"I had a teammate who was selected last year, and she told me to go up there with a lot of confidence because the competition will be on a higher level than most people are prepared to deal with," Williams said.

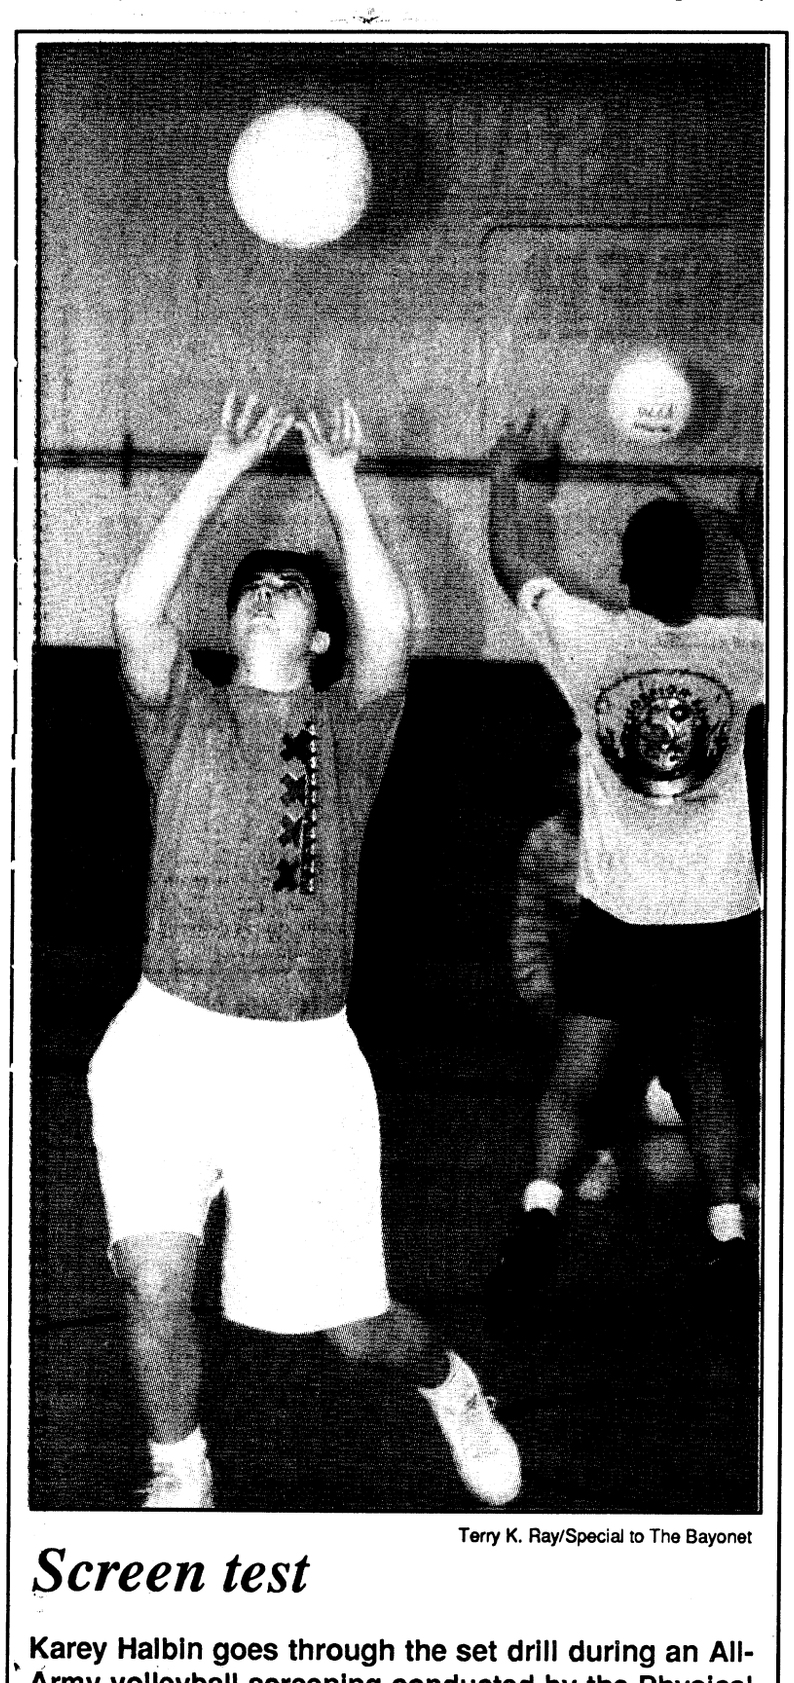
For Williams, who had just returned from a 6 1/2-month tour in Somalia in May, it was a rush to get into shape and start playing on the consolidated team.

"It was a last-minute thing for me," Williams said. "I didn't think I was going to make it back in time first of all. I kept calling Mr. Winterman; and, finally on the last day to submit the paperwork, he got everything together and faxed it all up to the Department of the Army."

Both Williams and Childress went through the Physical Activities Branch basketball screening; and, according to Sports Chris Winterman, director, both showed good skills and ability.

"I was mildly surprised when DA picked up both of them," Winterman said. "Fort Benning has done very well. When it comes to the All-Army trial camp, (Williams and Childress) are very capable of competing at that level.

"We sent in two applications and they picked up two, which is unusual for All-Army sports."



Childress began his basketball playing in the ninth grade in Hopkinsville, Ky., where he grew up. After graduating from high school, he joined the Army and picked up the ball again while stationed in Frankfurt, Germany, playing at company level. When he arrived at Fort Benning, he continued to play company-level ball until he made the consolidated team.

"My coach encouraged me to try out, and a teammate told me go there and play hard and try not to be something I'm not," Childress said. "He also said for me to play my game and let the coaches see what I've got to offer."

Childress said he believes going through the basketball screening may have helped him to be selected by DA.

"When (DA) got the application with the recommendation by the Physical Activities Branch, they could see if we were going to be what they were looking for," Childress said. "I hope to prove them right in every aspect."

Childress and Williams will continue to practice and play with the consolidated team until their departure for the camp. They will then have approximately a month to show their stuff before the Armed Forces Championships in mid-March.

Stars slide through mud to 19-7 victory

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

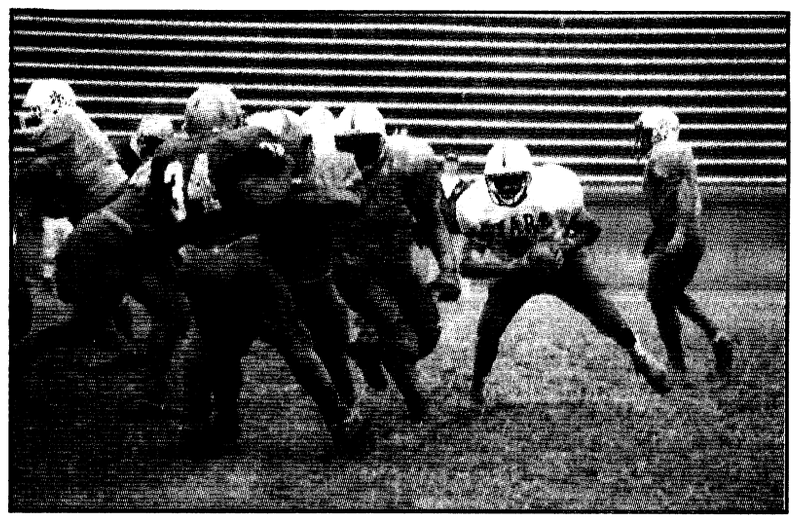
The Columbus Stars successfully opened their season in the Americas Football League with a 19-7 clubbing of the Dothan Chiefs Saturday afternoon in the mud and muck of Memorial Stadium.

Tailback Michael Bailey scored two touchdowns and rushed for 56 yards on 10 carries to power the Stars' offense, and quarterback Eddie Mitchell tacked on the other score and rushed for 45 yards on 11 carries for the Stars.

The Chiefs got their only points of the day in the first quarter when quarterback Kelvin Calhoun hit wide receiver Adam Gamble on a 40-yard strike to give the Chiefs their only lead of the game at 7-0.

The Stars' defense would bend but not break the rest of the afternoon giving up ground but no points and causing four Chiefs' turnovers.

A trio of Stars came to the forefront when defensive ends Carold Jenkins and Eric Williams and linebacker Terrance Perry combined for 18 tackles, 10 assists and one fumble recovery. The Stars allowed the Chiefs 197 total yards on six first downs for the game.



Down 7-0 after the first quarter, the Stars cut the lead to 7-6 when Bailey went in from 15 yards out. Late in the second quarter, Mitchell capped a drive with a 6-yard run giving the Stars the lead for good at 12-7.

With the score still 12-7 after three quarters, the Stars remembering what happened the week before, (losing on a late score) drove down the field with Bailey streaking into the end zone from 27 yards out untouched. Kelvin Thomas added the point-after attempt to give the Stars a 12-point cushion with less than seven minutes left in the game.

"We just had to take care of the ball and play a mistake-free game," said fullback Jamon Smith, who gained 58 yards on 15 carries.

The Stars rushed the ball 48 times for 194 yards behind the offensive front line, affectionately known as "the Hogs."

"When it's time, we get down and dirty with the best of them," said offensive guard Russell Saunders. "That's our environment; we open the hole and the backs are through it. I think we have the best backs in the league."

Columbus Stars back up quarterback Benny Harris looks for running room in fourth quarter action.

Mitchell, for the second straight game, replaced starter Jeff McCurrie, who is still participating in Victory Focus with the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division.

"My backs make it easy for me; all I have to do is get the ball to them," Mitchell said. "With the Hogs up front doing their job, we can move the ball."

Head Coach Tom Staton said he liked what he saw this week and hopes it will continue from week to week.

"These guys played a helluva ball game; with the weather turning nasty, it was good to see a ball-control offense like this," Staton said.

The Stars host the Jayhawks of Jackson, Miss., Saturday at Memorial Stadium with the kickoff set for 2 p.m.

Glock Firearms hosts tactical pistol match

By Terry K. Ray
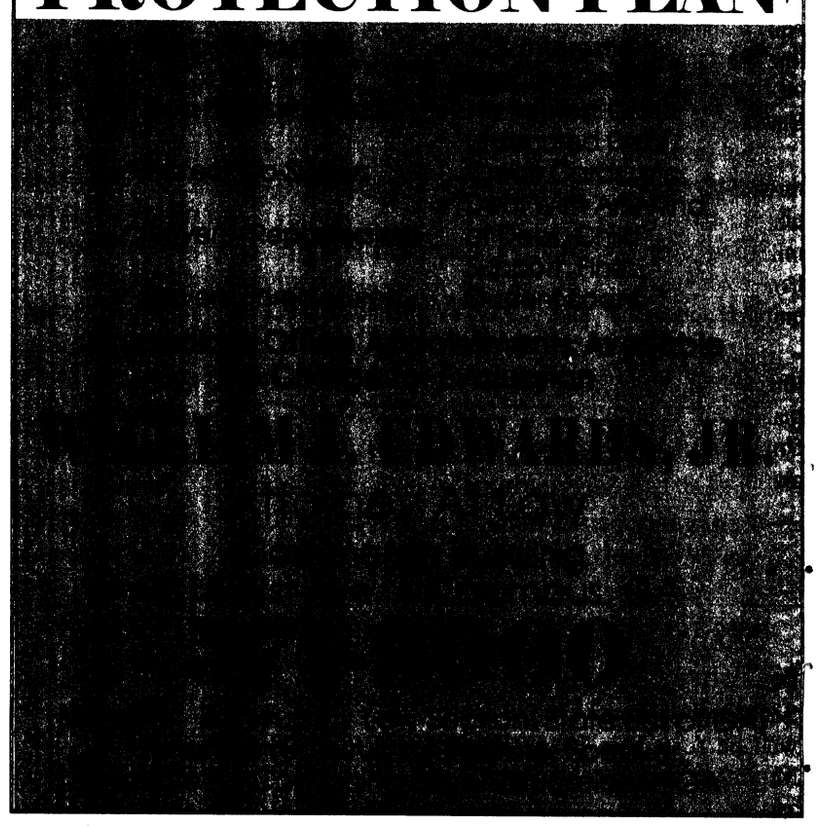
Special to The Bayonet©

The Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club had to postpone its tactical pistol match at English Range from Saturday to Sunday because of inclement weather on Saturday.

More than 100 shooters turned out for the Glock Firearms-sponsored match on Sunday even with fog rolling across the range and the threat of even more rain hanging in the air.

In the competitor class, James Kotto fired a score of 100 percent to take first place. Darryl Powell finished second at 80 percent, and Eric Woodson rounded out the top three with a score of 61 percent.

In the standard class, Charles Rolling fired 74 percent with Barry Flood shooting a 66 for second and Robert Lewis hitting 64 percent for third.



The military competition saw Sgt. Lawrence Cox of Company B, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, shoot 61 percent while Capt. Jay Shebuski of Company B, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, claimed second with 58 percent. Kevin McMahon finished in the third spot with 56 percent.

Mike Steele, a captain with 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, took the high service revolver at 55 percent, and high law enforcement went to Sgt. Alan Kaiser of the U.S. Army Infantry Center Military Police Company with a score of 39 percent. Marsha Pittman won the high female award with a score of 35 percent.

"We are very pleased to have Glock Firearms choose Fort Benning as one of the locations for this match and and the Glock Sport Shooting Federation match in April," said match coordinator Jim Graham. "If it weren't for the volunteers we have at these matches, it would be really hard to conduct these matches."

The next match will be March 5 at English Range. For information, call Jim Graham at 689-3371.

Sixth annual Mountain Ranger Run

Dahlonega gears up for yearly race

5th Ranger Training Battalion

The Officers' Association with volunteers from the 5th Ranger Training Battalion at Camp Frank D. Merrill in Dahlonega, Ga., are hosting the sixth annual Mountain Rangers Run May 21.

Team competition this year is in five-person teams, with the winning team receiving limited edition, numbered Mountain Ranger Coins in addition to trophies.

The 5th Ranger Training Battalion will be defending its undefeated winning record in the team event. Unit entry forms are available on request from Civil Affairs.

Limited billeting is available on a first-come, first-served basis. Units entering 30 or more runners can have their race T-shirts customized with their unit logo. Contact the Officers' Association for more information.

The race will start and finish on the main campus of North Georgia College in Dahlonega. The race is a nationally certified 10K course and is sanctioned by the U.S. Track and Field Association.

Awards will be given to the top male and female winners as well as the top three runners in each age group. Every runner will receive a T-shirt showing the skyline of Dahlonega.

Money raised by the run will be donated to the American Red Cross. The last race raised more than $2,300 to support the community in preventing, preparing for, and coping with emergencies of all kinds.

These services include collection of lifesaving blood, training people in cardiopulmonary resuscitation, first aid and water safety and providing emergency shelter, food and clothing to local disaster victims.

Somewhere between 250 to 500 runners from the surrounding counties as well as from out of state are expected to participate.

Also new this year is the participation in the 1994 Run and See Georgia Grand Prix program, a series of more than 70 races throughout the state that gets its more than 28,000 runners to travel around the state participating in quality running events while seeing some of the tourist attractions and cities in Georgia.

Post to host prayer breakfast

USAIC Chaplains' Office

The Fort Benning annual National Prayer Breakfast will be at the Main NCO Club Feb. 25 at 6:30 a.m.

The Prayer Breakfast is conducted in conjunction with the annual National Prayer Breakfast in Washington, D.C.

It is designated as a time of spiritual reflection for post leadership and is a reminder of our country's roots.

The National Prayer Breakfast, which is sponsored by the U.S. Senate and House prayer groups, was established with President Dwight D. Eisenhower in 1953.

The first National Prayer Breakfast, formerly known as the Presidential Prayer Breakfast, was designed to seek divine guidance for the nation's leadership and to declare its dependence on God and faith in him.

Every year thereafter, the prayer breakfast has gathered the president, members of the U.S. House and Senate, members of the Cabinet, the Supreme Court and the military leadership of the armed forces.

The guest speaker for this year's post gathering will be Chaplain (Col.) David P. Peterson, U.S. Forces Command chaplain, Fort McPherson, Ga.

Peterson is a native of South Dakota. He has served at installations throughout the United States and Vietnam. In 1990, he was assigned as command staff chaplain for all Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force chaplains in the Persian Gulf.

Peterson entered active duty as a chaplain in November 1965. He was awarded a master's degree in divinity from Covenant Theological Seminary in St. Louis, Mo., and a master of science degree in counseling and guidance from Long Island University, Brooklyn, N.Y. He is a graduate of the Army War College.

Tickets for the prayer breakfast must be obtained in advance. The USAIC Chaplains' office is asking for a donation of $3 to defray the cost of the breakfast.

For more information or tickets, contact your unit chaplain or Chaplain (Maj.) David Smith at the USAIC Chaplains' Office at 545-4965.

Ash Wednesday

Day of fasting marks start of Lent

By George W. Holston
1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment

"Remember that you are dust, and to dust you shall return," says the Book of Common Prayer (1979, page 265).

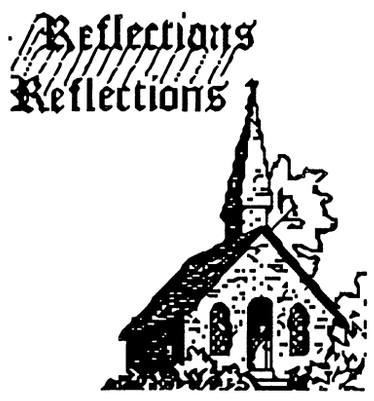
Ash Wednesday is this Wednesday. This day of fasting, self- examination and prayer marks the beginning of Lent, a period of 40 days excluding Sundays before Easter.

I believe that Lent, at best, is misunderstood. The usual characterization is that Lent is a miserable time when we feel guilty for everything that we have enjoyed during the year.

Certainly repentance is a part of this annual observance but only a part. Lent is intended to be a time for self-examination and exploration — a chance to deepen our awareness of God's forgiving presence and grace in human life.

Throughout history, dust and ashes have been used as symbols of repentance. There are numerous accounts in Scripture of torn clothing and people covering themselves with dust and ashes.

This outward sign points to an inward desire for humility, for pardon, for reconciliation and peace. These are all desirable goals for Ash Wednesday and are part of the parcel for observing a holy Lent.



Yet, there is another image conveyed by dust and ashes that is equally important. The ashes remind us of our mortality. That our time on earth is limited to that brief span of years between birth and death. No matter how hard we strive to deny the reality of death, there is no escaping it.

Lent is surrounded by death. The season begins by reminding us that everyone will die. It ends with the death of Christ on the cross.

This is not intended to be morbid. Quite the contrary, it is within our awareness of death that we are able to fashion a sense of meaning and purpose for our lives.

We understand that life is transitory, at best. We in the military grasp this truth on a much deeper level than most others. Our friends and co-workers move on and life continues.

The Psalmist writes, "So teach us to number our days that we may apply our hearts to wisdom." (Psalm 90:12). The task of finding meaning and purpose for our own lives is our responsibility. We are called to live abundantly (John 10:10). In order to do that, we must come to grips with our own limitations, which includes our mortality.

In the midst of the changes and chances of human life, we turn to God's gracious presence as the only permanence. Here is an anchor to hold us in the process of transition. Here is a point of reference that holds to the permanence of God's life and love in the presence of death.

This gives us the freedom to keep the lenten fast with joy, knowing that we are loved and accepted as God's own children. Thus we remain forever.

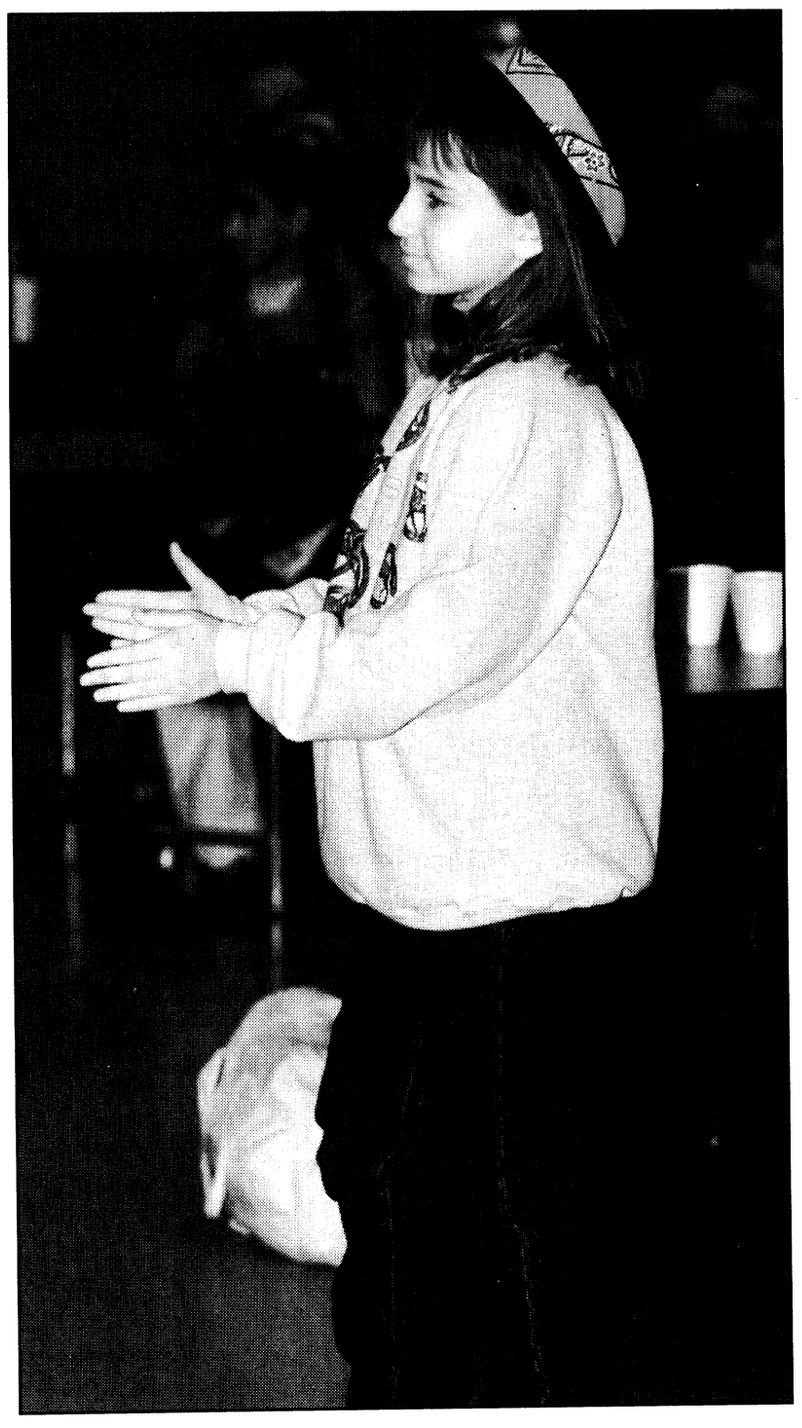
Stowers School goes west with Family Roundup

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

Around 600 people gathered for a family night of down home country and western cuisine, culture and camaraderie at the Stowers School Family Roundup Feb. 3 .

The roundup was designed to give parents, students, faculty and staff a chance to socialize, said Gail Wilson, Stowers School principal.

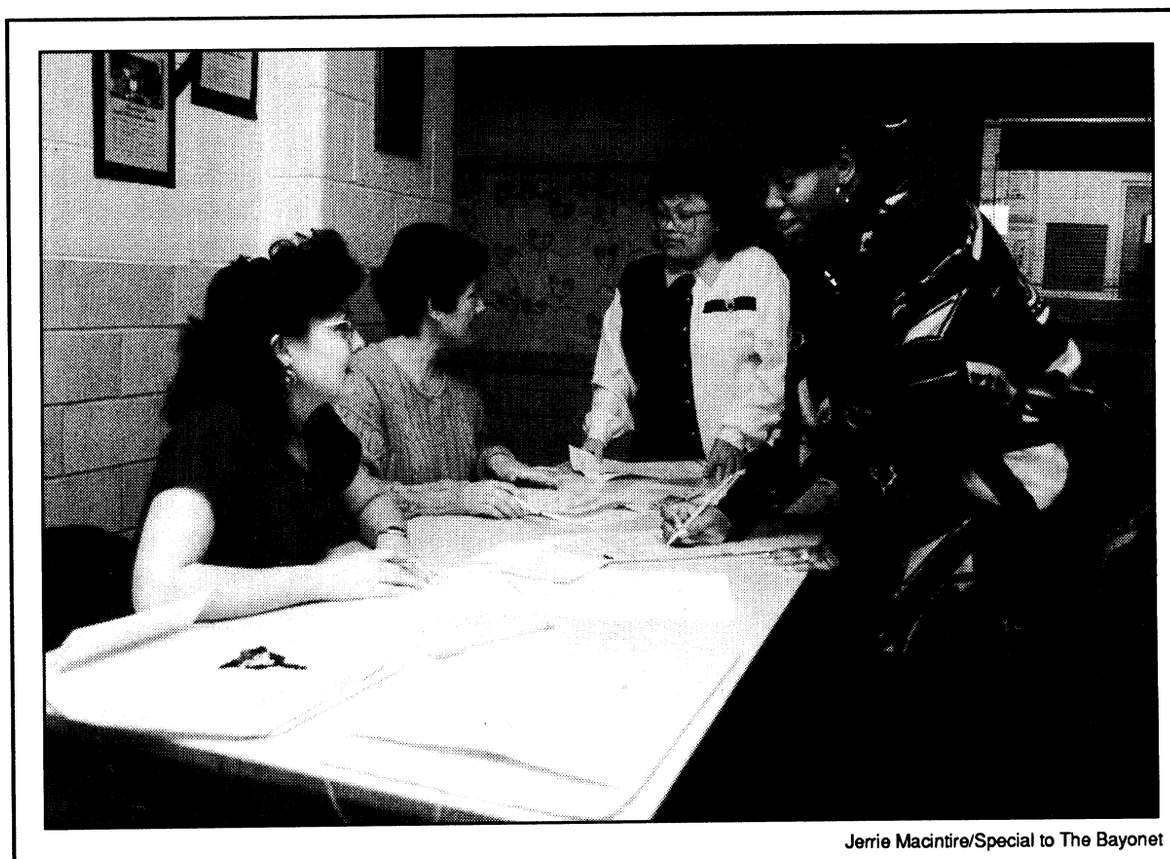
Since the school and students are all new this year, "this was a wonderful opportunity for us to know our parents and families better," Wilson said .



Attire for the informal evening was western jeans, cowboy boots and hats and colorful bandannas.

Sponsored and arranged by the Parent-Teacher Association, this family night included a chili and nachos meal and informal country dancing classes. The Sierra Rose Dance Club provided the evening's highlight with a 30-minute foot-stomping, hand-clapping line dance program featuring crowd-pleasing favorites such as "Chattahoochee," "God Bless Texas" and "Achy Breaky Heart."

The entertainers, clad in pristine white jeans and cowboy boots, clapped, stomped and swayed in unison as the the crowd kept time and shouted encouragement.



Adults and children alike got into the spirit of the roundup as a caller for the Sierra Rose Dance Club encouraged crowd participation in the line dances.

The turnout for the evening was excellent, and plans are to make the roundup an annual event, Wilson said.

Trumpeter performs

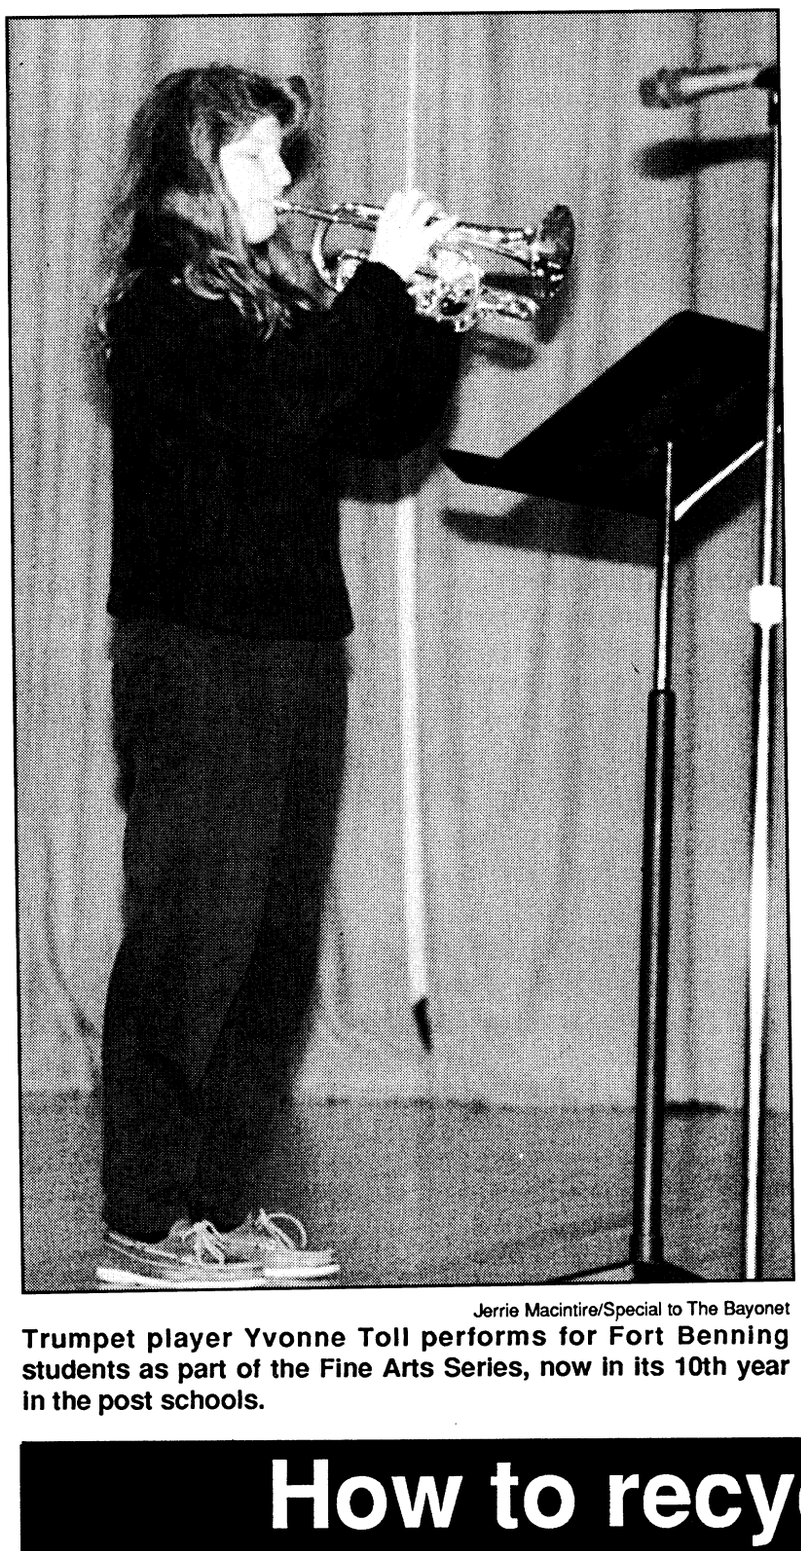
By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

Fort Benning students got more than they bargained for in the first of the series of annual Fine Arts Concerts conducted at the schools this past week.

In addition to a sampling of classical pieces, the students received a brief history lesson on the role of music in military battles, and a short explanation of the physical science involved with wind instruments.



Guest performer Yvonne Toll, a trumpet player, explained to Fort Benning children the origins of the well known reveille wake up call; and the bugle charge used in past military conflicts.

"The Army used drums and bugles to communicate before the existence of the radio," she said.

Toll also demonstrated the physics of how sound travels through a hose and is amplified into recognizable melodies by using several feet of clear tubing and a funnel.

In addition to the short lectures, Toll played solos as well as several classical selections while accompanied by pianist Rexford Whiddon, chairman of the Department of Music at Columbus College. The major featured piece was the lighthearted and lilting "Carnival of Venice."

The concert was sponsored by the Enlisted Wives' Club.

Teacher still blazing trails

Master sgt. turned math teacher wins Golden Static Line award

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

Greenfield

Blazing new trails is a specialty of former Fort Benning pathfinder instructor Bob Greenfield.

Years ago, the retired master sergeant was training his camouflage-clad classes to scout ahead and arrange aircraft landing zones where there were none; today he is still forging new paths. But, the setting has changed from remote areas to a modern classroom, and his students are no longer soldiers, but are soldiers' children.

Greenfield, a math teacher at Faith Middle School, was honored last week for his contributions to Fort Benning with a symbolic Golden Static Line award and a souvenir "Black Hat" instructor's cap. The static line, which is used by military parachutists, symbolizes the airborne aspect of the pathfinders, and the hat represents his excellence as an instructor. Static lines bearing the names of past and present instructors of excellence are traditionally displayed in the Pathfinder School.

As his middle school students looked on, the surprised former soldier accepted the awards from Lt. Col. Michael Hawrylak, commander of the 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment, and Command Sgt. Maj. Robert "Bulldog" McCoy.

In presenting Greenfield with this "highest accolade of the pathfinders," Hawrylak said the former master trainer and key instructor had "contributed something significant to the airborne process."

"We like to take care of instructors who belonged to us who did a good job," he said.

Hawrylak explained that Greenfield served as the chief instructor at the school in the early 1970s, a position very difficult to earn.

As a former aviator, Greenfield was very much aware of the operational coordination necessary between pilots and airborne troops to set up landing zones, according to Hawrylak.

"He did an outstanding job," Hawrylak said.

McCoy confirmed this statement with some personal reminiscing.

As a student under Greenfield in about 1973, McCoy recalled one day of mass chaos "with aircraft going everywhere."

While trying to call in a variety of aircraft to a landing zone, McCoy remembers a confused pilot complaining that he was circling over Cusseta, Ga., by mistake, while another aviator radioed for a quick landing because his 747 was low on fuel. Meanwhile, aircraft buzzed overhead preparing to drop students while a helicopter hovered nearby waiting for instructions to land.

"I just knew I was going to fail the course, but I at least wanted to call in that one helicopter," McCoy said.

In the midst of the disorder, Greenfield approached McCoy with an encouraging pat on the shoulder; "Sergeant McCoy, settle down. You're going to make it," he said.

After that, McCoy said things got better; he coordinated the helicopter landing, the aviator lost over Cusseta returned to post, the 747 he had put on standby landed without incident, and McCoy elatedly discovered he did not fail the three-week course.

McCoy remembered the incident with appreciation and said that day as well as all other times Greenfield "served as a role model for enlisted soldiers in the Pathfinder Course."

Today Greenfield is still serving as a role model and giving encouraging pats on the back to his students, according to Dr. Rolla W. Baumgartner, superintendent of Fort Benning schools who joined Principal Olin Harp and other school personnel for the presentation.

Baumgartner said Greenfield confirms his personal belief that "retired soldiers make excellent teachers."

"We need more soldiers like him," Baumgartner said. "It's a perfect job for retired soldiers."

Baumgartner said those soldiers who make the transition into teaching traditionally handle classroom settings with ease, and they have little trouble maintaining discipline because of their military backgrounds. Greenfield uses his military background as soldier and aviator to enrich his present position as middle school teacher, and his students have responded to him enthusiastically for the past 12 years, said Harp, who has observed many teachers as principal of Faith Middle School.

"My son just loves him," said one mother. "This is the first year my son has really enjoyed math."

As Greenfield accepted the symbolic awards in front of his classroom, he spoke of his military career with fondness.

"I loved every minute of it," he said. "Join the Army!"

How to recycle

Post housing residents may place recyclable materials in brown plastic bins for weekly curbside pickup.

Here is a list of the items that can and cannot be placed in the bin for recycling.

• Glass: Clear green or brown bottles and jars including soda, beer or liquor containers may be placed in the bin. All caps must be removed before placing the bottles in the bin. Glass items such as light bulbs, window or automobile glass, mirrors and drinking glasses cannot be placed in the bin.

• Metal: All metal cans (the labels do not have to be removed) can be placed in the bin after rinsing them. Metal foils, such as aluminum foil, cannot be placed in the bin.

• Plastic: Soda bottles, milk containers and water jugs can be recycled but the caps must be removed and the bottles crushed by stepping on them before placing them in the bin. Styrofoam, plastic bags and caps from recyclable bottles and containers cannot be placed in the bin.

• Paper: Newspaper can be placed in the bin if it is bundled or placed in a brown paper bag and placed beside the bin at the curb on collection day. Glossy paper cannot be recycled Magazines are not acceptable at this time.

Watch children for signs of STRESS

HEALTHY LIVING

Egleston Children's Hospital

Modern medicine has developed vaccines to protect children from measles, mumps, rubella. Unfortunately, the same isn't true for stress, which affects all children to varying degrees from youth through adulthood.

Stress is a reality of everyday life. For children, the question is not if they experience stress but how they cope when they do. The challenge is teaching children how to cope with stress in a positive manner so they grow up leading healthy, happy lives and learn the skills to deal with the stresses of adulthood.

Look for causes

What causes stress in children? Like adults, children experience stress as a direct result of changes in their lives. These changes can be big or small, anything that can alter one's equilibrium.

Parents inherently understand that traumatic events such as divorce, a move or a death in the family can be stressful for a child, but we tend to overlook the stress that can result from the little things that happen daily — a new baby-sitter, for example, taking a test or learning a new sport.

Any unfamiliar situation or change in routine can be stressful for your child. The impact of the change depends on the age and the personality of the child involved.

A 2-year-old may have a strong reaction if you rearrange the bedroom furniture, whereas a teenager wouldn't be disturbed by the change at all.

Know the symptoms

Your child may exhibit stress any number of ways. Symptoms may be strictly behavioral or emotional in nature. Regression, in which a child loses a skill he or she previously mastered, is a common behavior symptom of stress. Bed-wetting is a classic example of regression in a young child. Emotional examples abound, ranging from tantrums and unexplained crying to withdrawal.

Stress may also manifest itself in physical symptoms. Young patients come to Egleston Children's Hospital's Medical Psychiatric Unit with symptoms such as headaches and stomachaches that are unrelated to physical illnesses and can be attributed to stress.

For these children, changes need to be made so that they have new coping skills for dealing with stress.

While any persistent or severe physical complaint should be discussed with your pediatrician, children frequently complain of pains that might be related to changes in their life.

As a parent, the challenge is to understand what your child is communicating. What might be different in the family or house? How are Mom and Dad dealing with stress in their lives? As parents explore these questions they might learn more about their child's discomforts.

Increase resistance

What can parents do to immunize their child against stress? The best way is to provide a loving, nurturing environment in which a child can flourish emotionally. Healthy communication is critical to building self-esteem.

For a parent, this means listening without judging. It's important to validate feelings even if you think your child is overreacting. Remember, what may not be a big deal to you, may be a big deal to your child.

Anticipate stress and prepare your child for it when possible. If you know a stressful event is going to occur, such as a friend moving away, talk to your child about it. It won't make your lives stress-free, but by anticipating the event, he or she may cope better. Your child will also learn that it is all right to talk about what bothers him or her.

Know your child's personality so you can steer her away from unnecessary stress. For a young child, this can be as simple as limiting television viewing to filter out information that is potentially stressful.

Keep in mind that what's stress-producing for one child may not be for another. You can enroll two 5-year-olds in preschool soccer; one will thrive in the mildly competitive environment; the other will dissolve in tears every time he or she shows up for a game. There are no rules. Every child has a different threshold for stress.

Stress is a family affair. If parents are stressed, their children are likely to feel it and vice versa. Parents of stressed children may need to take a close look at how they deal with change.

It's time to ask for help

Georgia Society of Certified Public Accountants Inc.

If you are considering hiring a tax preparer, the Georgia Society of Certified Public Accountants recommends that you begin your search for the right help now.

Not all tax preparers are created equal, and those that may be the most qualified to prepare your return could be unavailable if you wait until your tax return is due.

Among those who can help you prepare your return are certified public accountants, tax attorneys, and enrolled agents (individuals certified by the U.S. Treasury Department).

These are the only professionals who can represent you legally before the Internal Revenue Service in the event your tax return is audited.

Determine your needs

To ensure that you hire the right kind of professional, consider the complexity of your tax return. Do you have a home-based business? Have you had large capital gains or losses in the last year? Did you experience a large casualty loss in the past year? Do you have rental property? If so, try to retain a tax professional who has had experience dealing with these kinds

Even if your needs are not complex, you may still find the help of a tax preparer to be cost effective if you have experienced a major lifestyle change, such as retiring, divorcing or assuming full-time care for a relative.

Additionally, if you think the new tax law will result in significant changes to your tax liability, it may benefit you to obtain assistance from a tax professional.

Shop around

If you've never hired a tax preparer before, you can start searching for one by contacting friends and associates who may have similar incomes or be involved in similar lines of work.

You can also check with your local chamber of commerce, as will as civic and church groups for homes of qualified tax professionals. Finally, ask other professionals you know, such as bankers and insurance agents, for referrals.

Once you've obtained a few names, try to call or personally interview at least three different tax preparers. This will enable you to assess differences in style, capabilities and fee structures.

Check backgrounds

During the interview process, you'll want to learn as much as possible about the preparer's professional background. Find out whether the individual works as a tax preparer full time or part time, the number of years of experience, level of education and whether he or she participates in continuing professional education. You'll also want to ask about their memberships in professional tax associations.

Also don't be shy about asking a prospective tax preparer for the names of clients you can contact. Find out from past clients how satisfied they were with the work performed and whether it was done in a timely manner.

You may also want to ask such clients how aggressive the tax professional is and consider whether you will be comfortable with his or her style.

Discuss fees

The cost for preparing your tax return can range anywhere from under $100 for a short-form return to thousands of dollars for a complicated return. Find out whether the tax preparer charges on an hourly basis, uses a lump sum, or bases the fee on the number of tax forms that need to be completed.

To assist your tax preparer in determining a fee, you may want to provide him or her with a copy of your tax return from last year, pointing out any differences in your financial or tax situation.

Beware of tax preparers who say they will base their fee on the refund they obtain for you. Chances are these individuals may be acting improperly.

Prepare for the preparer

The Georgia Society of CPAs emphasizes that any good tax preparer will want to find out how much you can contribute to the tax preparation process. If you can identify the tax issues that need to be addressed and have well organized tax records, a preparer can work more efficiently and cost-effectively.

2nd MASH runs field hospital in JRTC exercise

By Denise Howell
36th Engineer Group

The 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital recently returned from four weeks of annual field training at the Joint Readiness Training Center in Fort Polk, La.

The MASH left for JRTC Jan. 14. and returned Feb. 4.

Joining the MASH at JRTC in their own separate exercises were soldiers from the 75th Ranger Regiment; 3rd Battalion, 325th Infantry Airborne Combat Team from Vincenza, Italy; and the 1st Battalion, 2nd Army Cavalry Regiment.

Members from military police and medical logistics units based at Fort Bragg, N.C., as well as a military police unit from Fort Polk participated as part of the MASH team.

According to JRTC guidelines, the program is designed to provide a logical sequence for the performance of tasks that are critical in wartime combat situations through simulated exercises in a realistic setting.

Sgt. 1st Class James Johnson, chief wardmaster, said the MASH featured a fully stocked pharmacy, a laboratory, an X-ray clinic, an operating room, an emergency room, two intensive care units, a central material section for sterilization of surgical instruments, two sick call areas and two morgues.

The MASH had to relocate from the garrison at Fort Benning to the field at Fort Polk, establish operations, perform support and medical services and defend its areas, according to Johnson. In support of the other JRTC participants, the 50-bed MASH provided hospitalization, surgical and preventive medical treatment for simulated and real-life injuries.

"We even sent a 12-person team to the maneuver box (combat site) to provide far-forward support," Johnson said. "(The field hospital) was fully operational. We received an average of about 100 patients per 24-hour period."

"We tried to make it like the real world out there," said Staff Sgt. Warren Day, a wardmaster. "Even down to the paperwork, everything was the same (as if treatment had taken place at Martin Army Community Hospital). We really functioned as a hospital. If we got a patient in for surgery (real or simulated), we kept them until they stabilized."

"It was a great experience," Spc. Mariel Thomas said. This was her first time at JRTC. "We learned how to protect ourselves better, in all ways. For one, we had to set up in the rain, in the middle of a thunderstorm."

Most soldiers in the MASH occupy combat support military occupational specialties. This means they don't usually see much fighting. But, during their first night, the troops got a taste of the real thing.

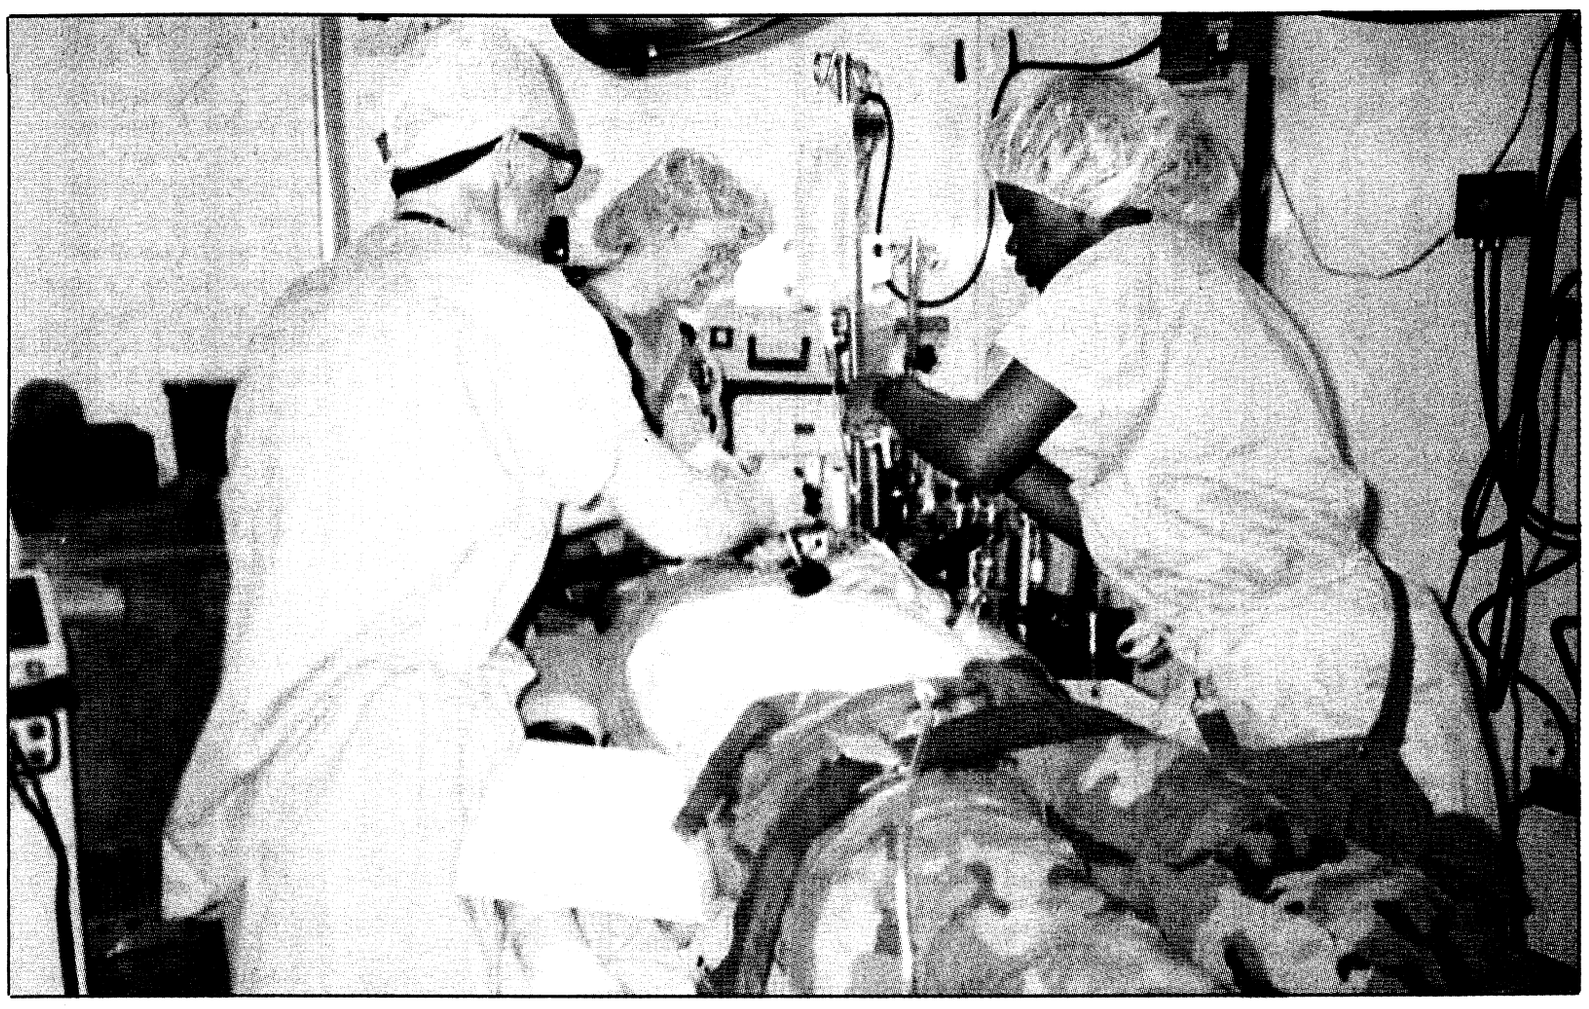
According to Sgt. Alan Marinoff, laboratory noncommissioned officer for the MASH, the Security Reaction Force, which he led, had its hands full protecting the perimeter.

"There was an attack on the tents, and we had to retaliate. We 'killed' eight of the opposing forces and 'wounded' 20."

These "deaths" and other "casualties" were marked by the multiple integrated laser engagement system. The MILES receptors were worn on strips around the headgear and on the front and back of the load-bearing equipment vest. JRTC participants had to wear the MILES at all times, including operating room personnel.

When a laser "shot" is fired and the laser reaches its target, the MILES beeps, indicating a hit.

Observers and controllers kept score and were supposed to be neutral; but, Marinoff said, they could "kill," too.



A soldier who was "hit" would get a card describing the nature and severity of his or her injuries.

Generator specialist Spc. Judith Stark "died" when, according to her card, someone shot her generator, and it blew up. "I was toe-tagged and placed in a bodybag," she said. "It was labeled KIA (killed in action). I really didn't think we'd see so much action. But it was great."

On Jan. 18, its first day as a fully functioning hospital, the MASH treated 27 real casualties. The wounded were troops from the 325th. They had been making a night jump. The injuries ranged from bruises and sprained ankles to a compression fracture of the cervical spine, a shoulder dislocation and hypothermia, when one of the soldiers landed in freezing water.

Sgt. 1st Class Derrick Green of the Headquarters Company of the 325th also came in for real treatment. He came in for sick call services, which was also provided by the MASH. He had a cyst behind his right ear drained.

"Exercises like these not only help train personnel, but also help soldiers understand and appreciate a mash in the combat environment," Green said. "I received surprisingly good treatment, and the level of cleanliness (in the hospital) was excellent."

The operating room team provides post-operational care to a patient with multiple simulated bullet wounds to the chest and abdomen.

Not all soldiers from the MASH worked in the hospital, and not all participants were from the MASH.

MASH motor sergeant Staff Sgt. Cleveland Davidson and others were kept busy with the maintenance and recovery of stalled and "destroyed" vehicles. "We also sent litter carriers to and from the maneuver box to evacuate and restore wounded personnel," he said. "We provided maintenance support for the other units out there, too."

Sgt. Terleasha Small worked with the tactical operations center at the hospital headquarters.

"I coordinated with the MP and ambulance units, the security reaction forces and the tactical operations center to determine movement on and off the compound," she said.

When a satellite computer interface was needed, the MASH teamed up with the medical logistics unit from Fort Bragg. Staff Sgt. Melvin Peterson of the 2nd MASH and medical logistics specialist Spc. Maxwell Olukwu combined efforts.

They set up an interface in case the system was destroyed or damaged, they would not have lost all their data.

Spc. Maxwell Olukwu (left) of the 32nd Medical Logistics Unit at Fort Bragg, N.C., and Staff Sgt. Melvin Peterson of 2nd MASH collaborate to make a satellite contact in order to connect the field computer to the Fort Bragg medical computer.

As always, there was classroom training. Sgt. Mark Young stole time between mass casualty runs to demonstrate the impact ventilator, a type of mechanical respiration apparatus for nonbreathing conscious or unconscious patients.

Command Sgt. Maj. James Gardner of the 36th Engineer Group visited the site.

"This kind of training points out to us the good things, and the things we have to work on," he said. "I thought (everyone) did a great job."

world war II

Fifty years ago this week...

• In Italy, the Allied position grew more tenuous in a week of heavy fighting. The U.S. 34th Division launched its last, unsuccessful attempt to capture Cassino, before falling back.

The New Zealand Corps then replaced the U.S. II Corps and achieved little success in its own efforts to take the city.

The Allies hampered their own diplomatic and strategic causes by bombing and destroying the city's ancient monastery, believed to be occupied by the Germans, creating a more easily defended enemy position.

• Elsewhere in Italy, the Germans pressed their efforts to drive the Allies from their Anzio beachhead, launching strong attacks led by infantry aided by heavy air support from the Luftwaffe.

• On the Eastern Front, the Soviets retook Luga, Polna and Lyady, on their way to securing the entire Korsun Pocket. Soviet advances forced the embattled Germans to abandon much of their equipment and conduct a desperate withdrawal of the area.

Though many of the individual soldiers managed to escape with their lives, all six German divisions involved were effectively rendered combat ineffective for the time being.

• In the Marshall Islands, the United States conducted its first landings on Eniwetok Atoll after days of American carrier attacks had pummeled the nearby Japanese airfield on Engebi.

• On Fort Benning, 16 Americans became the first Negroes to earn the Parachutist Badge after completing the course and graduating from the Parachute School.

Battle lab

Warfighting experiment to assess mortar system

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Dismounted Warfighting Battle Lab is conducting an advanced warfighting experiment to assess the operational effectiveness and suitability of the 120mm mortar system in light infantry battalions at Fort Bragg, N.C., through Feb. 18.

Paratroopers from 3rd Battalion, 504th Parachute Infantry Regiment's Mortar Platoon were selected to participate in Operation Blue Steel, an operation that will give the mortarmen hands-on training with the 120mm mortar system. The soldiers received classroom instruction at the battle lab and will have the opportunity to fire this mortar system early this month.

The purpose of the operation is to access the effectiveness and capability of the 120mm mortar system in a light infantry battalion. Currently, the light infantry battalions at Fort Bragg carry only the 60mm and 81mm mortar systems in their inventory. The larger 120mm mortar system has some considerable advantages on the modern-day battlefield.

"The big advantage of the 120mm mortar is you can shoot farther, and it's more lethal when the round impacts."

— 2nd Lt. Scott Halstead
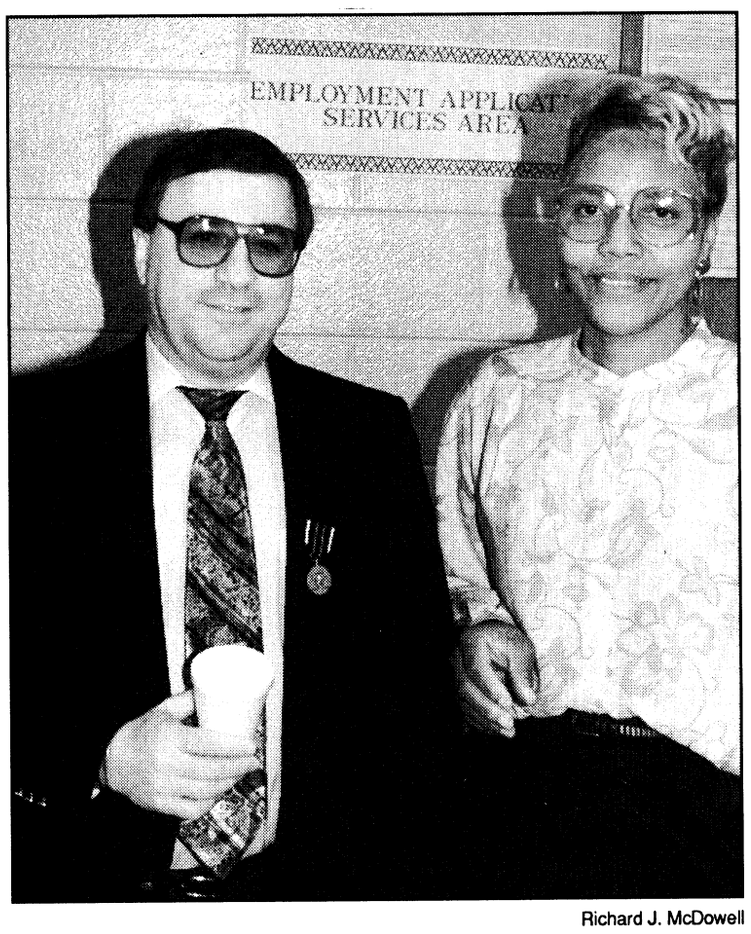
Mortar platoon leader

The 120mm mortar system yields greater range and increased lethality over existing systems while remaining a part of the infantry battalion.

"The big advantage of the 120mm mortar is you can shoot farther, and it's more lethal when the round impacts," said 2nd Lt. Scott Halstead, mortar platoon leader.

Compared to the 60mm and 81mm mortar systems, the 120mm mortar has a greater range and a larger bursting radius. The 60mm mortars, which are used at company level in each infantry battalion, has a maximum effective range of 3,500 meters and a bursting radius of 35 meters.



The 120mm mortar system has a maximum range up to 7,200 meters and can produce a bursting radius of 75 meters.

Although the 120mm mortar has a greater range and bursting radius, there is one disadvantage when using it in a light infantry battalion. It's heavy. Weighing in at 316 pounds, it can only be moved by trailer or carried in the back of a high-mobility, multipurpose wheeled vehicle.

Data gathered from this experiment, to include advantages and disadvantages, will provide the lab battle lab the necessary information to support further evaluations and support of senior leadership decisions.

The objective of the battle lab experiment is to enhance the lethality of dismounted forces with improvements to the battalion's indirect fire weapons and to evaluate the employment capabilities of the 120mm mortar in support of the light infantry battalion.

By working with the equipment training team from the battle lab, the mortarmen of 3rd Battalion, 504th Parachute Infantry Regiment, will receive experience that may come in handy when they possibly jump this mortar system in someday and set it up for live fire.

Richard J. McDowell

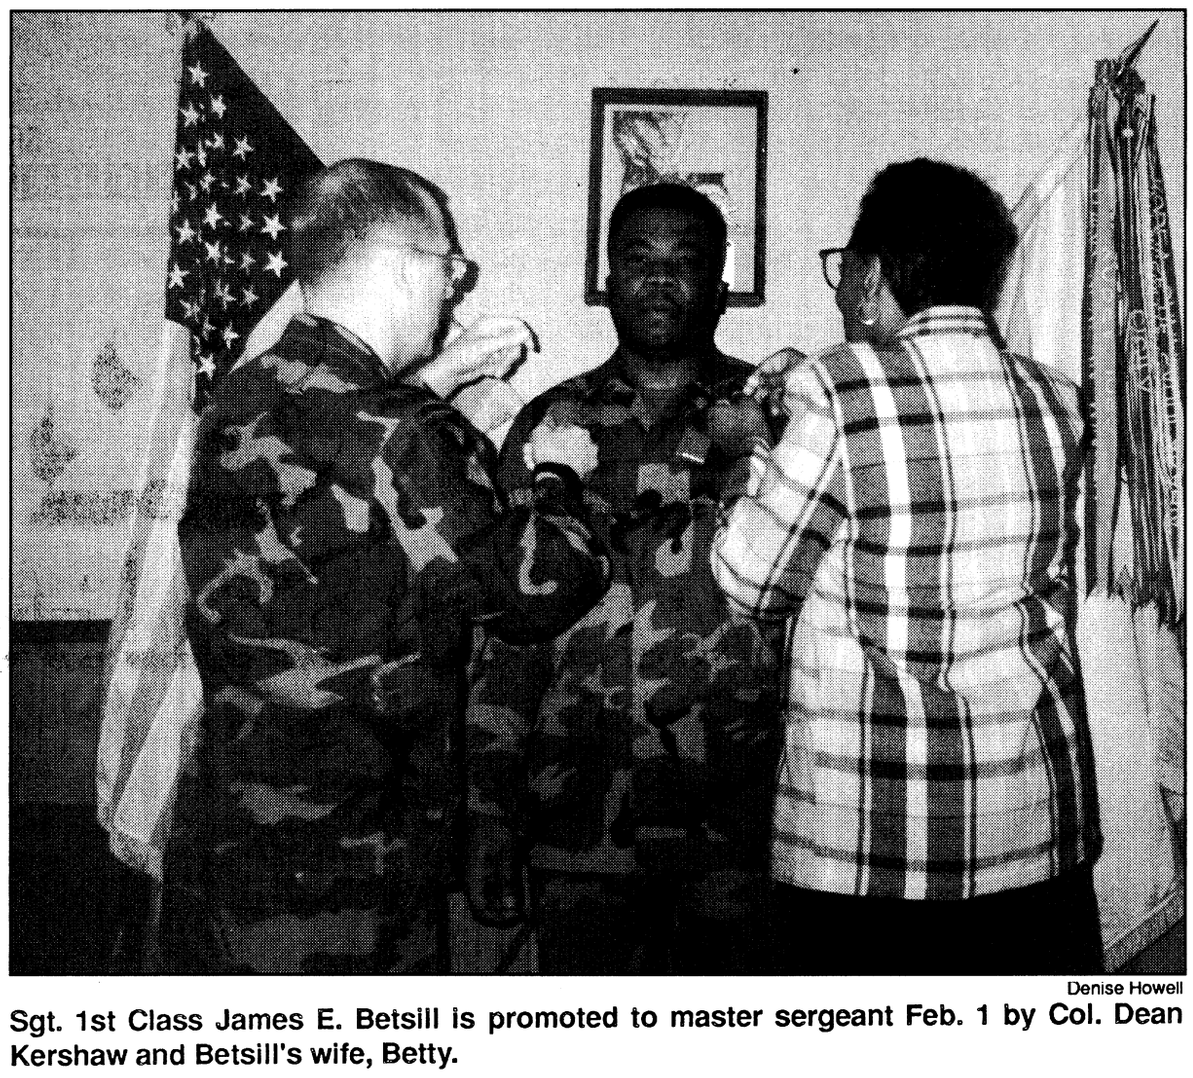
36th Engineer Group promotes food service adviser

By Denise Howell
36th Engineer Group

A sergeant first class was promoted to master sergeant in a ceremony Feb. 1 in the conference room at the 36th Engineer Group Headquarters, Building 2827.

Sgt. 1st Class James E. Betsill was promoted to master sergeant in a ceremony with Col. Dean Kershaw, the 36th's commander, presiding.



"It's always a pleasure to promote a noncommissioned officer to a more senior rank," Kershaw said.

"But this (promotion) is not a reward. Sergeant First Class Betsill is being promoted because the Army has recognized that he has the potential to do even more."

The order said Betsill's promotion was based upon, among other qualities, his professional excellence, leadership potential and dedicated service.

Betsill entered the Army in 1972 as a transportation specialist. After two years, he left the Army. He re-enlisted in August 1976 under his present specialty, food service. He came to Fort Benning Nov. 16 after a year as a dining facility manager at Camp Humphreys in Korea.

Betsill is currently food service adviser to the 36th Engineer Group.

Sgt. 1st Class James E. Betsill is promoted to master sergeant Feb. 1 by Col. Dean Kershaw and Betsill's wife, Betty.

"My goal is to make the group's food service program the best on Fort Benning," he said.

His latest projects have been the 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital dining facility and the newly renovated 13th Combat Support Equipment dining facility, which reopened Feb. 3.

Mouth protectors promote

Dental Safety

U.S. Dental Activity

February is National Children's Dental Health Month. The Fort Benning Dental Activity notes that it is easy to prevent many injuries to the mouth that occur during play.

Recreation experts have long recommended the mouth protector as an important piece of safety equipment. Without one, an athlete on the playing field runs the risk of acquiring a toothless grin.

You've probably seen mouth protectors used in contact sports, such as hockey, football and boxing. Coaches and team members know that mouth protectors cushion blows that would otherwise cause broken teeth, injuries to the lips and face, and sometimes even jaw fractures.

DENTAC officials said you don't have to be a football player, however, to benefit from wearing a mouth protector. Any adult or child involved in a recreational injury to the mouth can obtain smile protection with this important safety device.

Mouth protectors are available in sporting goods and department stores. Your dentist can also create a special mouth protector just for you or your child — one that will provide comfort and proper fit. A custom-made mouth protector is individually designed and constructed in the dental office or professional laboratory.

First, the dentist makes an impression of the patient's teeth. Using a special material, the dentist then constructs the mouth protector over a model of the teeth.

Generally, a mouth protector covers only the upper teeth. Some special circumstances, such as a protruding jaw or the presence of braces, may require covering the lower teeth also. Your dentist can advise you if this is necessary.

Here are some cautions and reminders from the Fort Benning Dental Activity:

• A mouth protector should be worn at all times during contact sports, in practice as well as during games.

• Never wear removable appliances, such as an orthodontic retainer when participating in contact sports.

• Those who wear fixed dental appliances, such as orthodontic "braces," should wear a mouth protector that has been fitted by a dentist.

Mishaps on the playing field, the basketball court and while riding a bicycle or skateboard often involve blows to the head, face and mouth.

Besides creating a painful emergency, injuries to the mouth can result in chopped or fractured teeth, nerve damage and tooth loss. Wearing a mouth protector is a simple way to prevent many of these painful, costly injuries.

Protect children; buckle up

Egleston Children's Hospital

Celebrate National Child Passenger Safety Awareness Week, and Valentine's Day this month by committing to buckle up your child all year.

Car crashes are the leading cause of death in children and 70 percent of these deaths are preventable with the proper use of child safety seats and safety belts.

Follow these guidelines to protect your child.

Child safety seats

• Only select child safety seats that meet U.S. Department of Transportation requirements. Look for a label stating: "This child restraint system conforms to all applicable federal motor vehicle safety standards," with the date of manufacture after Jan. 1, 1981.

• The center of the back seat is the safest place for your child to ride.

• Fasten all types of safety seats with your vehicle's lap belt, properly routing the belt through the safety seat frame. A locking clip is necessary for continuous lap shoulder belt systems to keep the seat secure. Never secure a safety seat to a belt that is attached to the door (automatic belts).

• Follow the manufacturer's instructions carefully.

Infant safety seat

• Use infant seats for babies up to 20 pounds.

• Infants should ride facing the rear to protect the neck.

• Provide extra support by placing a rolled towel or blanket around the infant's head and neck.

Convertible safety seat

• A convertible seat is appropriate for infants from birth to 40 pounds.

• Use it in a reclined, rear-facing position from birth to 20 pounds. Very small babies (less than 7 pounds) should use an infant safety seat initially.

• When your child reaches 20 pounds, turn the convertible seat forward and secure in a semi-reclined or upright position.

Safety belts

• Once children reach 40 pounds and will not tolerate their safety seats, they are ready to use the vehicle's lap and shoulder belt. If the shoulder strap crosses at their face or neck, use a booster seat to raise them to a level where the vehicle's lap belt fits properly across their hips and the shoulder belts fit comfortably across their shoulder and chest or buy a shoulder belt adjuster (sold in stores that carry child safety products).

• If your vehicle does not have a lap and shoulder belt combination, use a shield-type booster seat with your vehicle's lap belt.

• When children outgrow their safety seats, they must wear safety belts. Georgia law states all children under 18 must wear a safety belt in both the front and back seats.

• The lap and shoulder belt combination is best. The shoulder belt should cross the shoulder, never the face or neck.

• The lap belt should fit low and snug, over the hips not the stomach.

For more information on child passenger safety or any other area of child safety, call Egleston Children's Hospital at (404) 321-KIDS.

ask the judge

By Dinah Rainey Kirk
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q. I recently received a letter from my ex-girlfriend demanding that I increase my child support payments for our 2-year-old daughter. My ex-girlfriend and I had orally agreed upon the amount of support that I would give her, and I've been sticking to my end of the deal. I know that the child is mine, but I just can't afford to pay more child support. Can I be forced to pay more?

A. The Army requires soldiers to support their family members. This support requirement extends to children born out of wedlock when the soldier either acknowledges paternity or where a court order of paternity and support has been issued.

If a court order of paternity and support has been issued, a soldier must comply with the court order. Refusal to comply with a support order could result in garnishment or involuntary allotment of the soldier's pay. A soldier could also be held in contempt of court.

Additionally, the soldier's commander could take administrative or punitive action against the soldier.

Without a support order, soldiers must pay in accordance with any written or oral support agreement entered into. In situations where there is no support order or written agreement specifying the amount of support or where there is a dispute regarding an oral agreement, then at a minimum a soldier must pay support in accordance with the Army's interim support requirement.

In a situation like yours where a soldier is supporting only one family member and that family member is not residing in government quarters, the soldier must provide an amount equal to the soldier's basic allowance for quarters at the with-dependents rate. The soldier must provide this amount of support regardless of whether he or she is actually receiving basic allowance for quarters or residing in government quarters.

The Army's interim support requirements are not intended to be a permanent substitute for a agreed-upon amount of support or a court order.

However, if you and your ex-girlfriend cannot agree upon an amount of support, you are required to comply with the Army's interim support requirement until a court order has been issued.

Q. What happens if I get married and have other children?

A. In multifamily situations where a soldier's family members do not all live at the same location, each supported family member gets a pro-rate share of an amount equal to the soldier's BAQ at the with-family members rate.

This share is determined by dividing an amount equal to the BAQ at the with- family members rate for the soldier's rank by the total number of supported family members.

For example, a soldier has one child from a a previous relationship. This child does not reside with the soldier.

There is no court order for child support. The soldier gets married and must now provide for two family members (spouse and child from a previous relationship).

The spouse and child are each entitled to an amount equal to 50 percent of the soldier's BAQ at the with-family members rate.

If you have any questions concerning your obligation to provide support to your family members, attorneys at the Legal Assistance Division can advise you. Clients are seen on a first-come, first-served basis at 8 a.m. on Tuesdays and Fridays.

Scalding can be as dangerous as fire burns

Egleston Children's Hospital

If you're like most people, when you think of burn injuries, you think of burns caused by the flames of fire or by contact with extremely hot objects.

When you set out to protect your child from burn injuries, you probably focus on such dangers as the fireplace, the space heater, the iron, the stove, lighters and matches.

That's good, advises Dr. Jean A. Wright, medical director of critical care medicine at Egleston Children's Hospital, but don't stop.

"All types of burns can be severe, but scalds are of special concern because many parents and caregivers don't realize the dangers of hot liquids and foods and tap water," Wright said. "About 100 children are treated in emergency rooms in this country every day for scalds. "

Last year, about 32,000 children were scalded by hot liquids and foods and another 5,000 were treated for hot tap water scalds, some of which were fatal. Almost half of those injured were under the age of 5.

"Burns are among the most painful and devastating injuries," said Wright. "Patients can face extended and painful hospitalization, disfigurement and lifelong disability, as well as painful emotional scars."

Most scald injuries occur in the kitchen and bathtub, according to Wright, who offers the following tips in recognition of National Burn Awareness Week.

In the bathtub

■ Never leave a young child alone in the bathtub

■ Test the water before you put your child in the bathtub.

■ Run cold water first, then add hot water to adjust the temperature.

■ Face your child away from the bathroom fixtures. Children are less likely to manipulate faucets that are out of sight.

■ If you have access to your home's water heater, lower the thermostat to 120 degrees.

other multifamily building, install inexpensive mechanical safety valves on your bathtub and shower fixtures, or talk to your landlord about installing them. The valve instantly reduces the water flow to a trickle if it "senses" scalding water.

In the kitchen

■ Keep young children out of the kitchen when cooking is taking place.

■ Keep appliance cords out of reach so young children can't pull

■ Many injuries occur when young children pull on tablecloth or place mat edges and pull hot foods or drinks down on themselves. If young children are in your home, avoid place mats and tablecloths. Keep hot food away from table edges.

■ Place pots on back burners and turn all pot handles toward the back of the stove.

IRA withdrawals should be carefully planned

Georgia Society of CPAs

How and when you withdraw money from your individual retirement account affects just how much you can benefit from your hard-earned savings.

The Georgia Society of CPAs points out that by making your IRA withdrawals in an organized and orderly way, you can avoid unnecessary penalties and obtain the maximum return on your investment.

By making your IRA withdrawals in an organized and orderly way, you can avoid unnecessary penalties and obtain the maximum return on your investment.

Withdrawals

Generally, you can withdraw as much or as little money as you need from your IRA without incurring any penalties when you are between the ages of 59 1/2 and 70 1/2.

Amounts withdrawn are taxable at your current tax rate. For this reason, if you or your spouse are still working, you may want to wait until you are retired to begin withdrawing the money. With less income, the tax on your IRA distribution is likely to be lower.

The law requires you to make your first IRA withdrawal by April 1 of the year after which you reach age 70 1/2, even if you are still working. That means taxpayers who reached age 70 1/2 in 1993 have until April 1 to make the withdrawal.

Keep in mind that withdrawals for subsequent years, however, must be made by year end. Thus, if you choose to defer your initial 1993 withdrawal until 1994, two withdrawals will have to be reported on the 1994 tax return, possibly pushing you into a higher tax bracket.

Be aware that waiting until the last minute to cash in on your IRA subjects you to strict Internal Revenue Service rules. The IRS has established timetables that show how much money you must take out each year based upon the life expectancies of you and your beneficiaries.

Both your age and the amount of money in your IRA accounts are used to calculate a minimum annual withdrawal.

Failing to make this minimum withdrawal subjects you to a stiff penalty of 50 percent of the difference between the minimum required amount and what you actually withdrew.

Interest and Penalties

In most instances, you are subject to a 10-percent penalty on any IRA withdrawals taken before you are age 59 1/2. However, there are some exceptions.

You can withdraw money from your IRA at any age without incurring the 10 percent penalty if you take the money out in the form of an annuity — a scheduled series of substantially equal periodic payments spread over your lifetime.

These payments must be made at least annually and should be paid over your life or life expectancy, or the joint life or life expectancy of you and your beneficiary.

Be aware, however, that if you opt for an annuity, you can't change the payout method for at least five years or until you reach age 59 1/2, whichever comes later.

IRA

What if you're having a cash flow problem and want to tap into your IRA for a short period of tim before you reach age 59 1/2 According to CPAs, you will no suffer a penalty or any ta consequences as long as you rol over the distribution into anothe IRA within 60 days.

The new rules calling for 2( percent withholding on payout from pension plans to participant applies to qualified retiremen plans and not to IRAs.

Of course, you also can avoic the 20 percent tax by having a qualified plan distribution rollec over directly into an IRA o another qualified plan.

Be aware that you are allowec only one rollover per year for each IRA account if the distribution is provided directly to you.

Chewing tobacco — spit it out

U.S. Army Dental Activity

The Fort Benning Dental Activity has some advice for people who use spit tobacco — don't do it!

If you're not convinced that spit tobacco is bad for you, just read the labels: "This product is not a safe alternative to cigarettes. This product may cause gum disease and tooth loss. This product may cause mouth cancer."

Spit tobacco (snuff) is definitely harmful. Consider the facts:

- One can of snuff per day delivers as much as 60 cigarettes.
- Spit tobacco users become dependent on continued use because nicotine, an addictive drug, gives them a "buzz."
- When the supply runs out or the users try to quit, they may become moody, develop headaches and have trouble sleeping or concentrating.
- Some users become so addicted that they keep a pinch of snuff in place all day and during the night when they are asleep.
- Many users find that when they want to quit they can't. Smokeless tobacco is more difficult to give up than cigarettes.

If you or a family member uses spit tobacco, the Fort Benning DENTAC encourages you to talk to your dentist about it. Users can benefit by quitting, nonusers by never starting.

BURN FAT NOW with THERMOGENICS
Can't seem to lose fat no matter how hard you try? The concept of "Thermogenics" is the most exciting news to come out of weight management research in 50 years. Thermogenics, like digestion, is a normal physiological process that burns calories. It serves two functions:
1. It prevents dietary fats from being stored as white fat, and
2. It converts white fat back into soluble lipids that may be burned off. IT PREVENTS FAT AND REDUCES FAT IN HUMANS. Increased energy and appetite suppression are other benefits. What makes THERMOGENICS better than other products like it on the market? It has adrenal support built into the product. The extended use of Thermogenic compounds that do not contain adrenal support hormones. By Silver Sage - Accept no Substitutions.

Your Guide to Prime-Time TV: Cable and Broadcast Schedules

Stories abound at 1994 Winter Games

By Jim Gaffney
Tribune Media Services

The folks at CBS have to be loving it.

Long viewed as the ugly stepchild to its summer counterpart, the Winter Olympics have arrived big time in 1994.

SPOTLIGHT

From the Nancy Kerrigan saga to the comebacks of Brian Boitano and Katarina Witt, the games in Lillehammer are overflowing with great sports stories ... and with almost 120 hours of coverage by CBS (and another 45 by cable's TNT) over the next 15 days; viewers will get to watch them all.

When last seen two years ago, the Winter Games had just finished a successful stay in Albertville, France. Despite good ratings, CBS knew there were areas in which it could improve, beginning with a change in prime time. Goodbye, Tim McCarver and Paula Zahn; hello, Greg Gumbel.

"(Back in 1992), we went with co-hosts, and the fit was never quite right," said CBS senior vice president Rick Gentile. "The way that the Albertville studio shows were structured just wasn't comfortable."

A better fit is expected with Gumbel, who most viewers have come to know through his work on the network's now-defunct "NFL Today" football pregame show. "He's an easy look and listen for the viewer," Gentile said. "He's a good traffic cop when that's required, and he's a good storyteller when that's required."

For Gumbel, who admits he didn't become a fan of the Winter Games until he saw them firsthand in Albertville, the job requirements are simple. "Because I'm on every night," he said, "I have to make sure I don't make people throw up on a regular basis." Actually, he sees his task as one to "welcome people and give them an idea of what they are going to see and, after they've seen it, tell them what they've seen and thank them for coming."

Downhill skier Tommy Moe will compete in the Winter Olympics.

What: 1994 Winter Olympics
When: Beginning Saturday on CBS

What people will see could turn out to be the most successful, and certainly the most interesting, U.S. team ever:

- Speedskaters Dan Jansen and Bonnie Blair, with vastly different Olympic pasts, are favored for two Gold Medals each. Teammate Kristen Talbot will also compete, despite donating bone marrow to her brother just last month.
- Figure skater Kerrigan, fully healed from last month's assault, will battle Surya Bonaly of France, Oksana Baiul of Ukraine and Witt of Germany.
- Figure skaters Scott Davis and Boitano take on the Ukraine's Viktor Petrenko and Canada's Kurt Browning and Elvis Stojko.
- Driver Brian Shimer will try for the USA's first bobsled medal since 1956.
- Coach Tim Taylor's hockey team, fresh off an impressive pre-Olympic schedule, is a legitimate medal contender.

"I've gotten to know many of the athletes we'll be sending over," Gumbel said, "such as Shimer and Boitano and (skier) Picabo Street, and I'll admit that I'm very interested in seeing how well they'll do. I may not be allowed to cheer on the air, but inside, you can bet I'll be pulling for them."

'SAFE' is on minds of Fort Benning's safety officials

By Cathy E. Alston
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Training and Doctrine Command's safety director visited Fort Benning Monday in connection with Safety, Fire Protection and Environment or "SAFE." George Morgan briefed safety officials during his visit. Watch "Fort Benning Today" for an interview with Morgan.

A Fort Benning soldier recently tutored students at Eastway School as part of the Combined Communities of Southeast Columbus. Capt. Don Brown of the 11th Infantry Regiment worked with Lonnie Jackson, founder of CCSC. Watch "Fort Benning Today" featuring an interview with Brown.

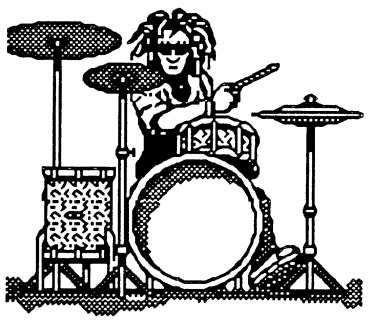
Three Arts Theatre to host symphony with beat

Columbus Symphony Orchestra



The Percussion Group will join the Columbus Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Maestro George Del Gobbo for a Masterpiece Concert Saturday at 8 p.m in the Three Arts Theatre.

The program will include "Remembering Gatsby — A Fox-Trot for Orchestra" by Harbison, "The Glory and the Grandeur," featuring The Percussion Group and "La Mer" by Debussy.

Composer Russell Peck will be at the performance and will participate in the preconcert discussion with Maestro Del Gobbo in the Three Arts Theatre at 7 p.m.

This concert is sponsored by Mead Coated Board with additional funding provided by the Georgia Council for the Arts.

The Percussion Group, formed in 1979, consists of "master musicians," Al Otte, Jim Culley and Rusty Burge. They are faculty and ensemble-in-residence at the College Conservatory of the University of Cincinnati where their daily rehearsal schedule is supplemented with teaching and coaching young musicians, many of whom have gone on to careers in teaching and performing with major symphony orchestras.

Recent appearances in their schedule of national and international tours have included Alice Tully Hall, Lincoln Center, the Kennedy Center, the summer festivals at Blossom, Ravinia and Bydgoszcz, Poland, as well as community concerns, children's programs and concerto appearances with major orchestras throughout North America. The group has recorded for numerous independent record labels and for radio stations throughout Europe.

Among his honors are the Koussevitsky Prize, two Ford Foundation Fellowships, grants from the National Endowment for the Arts and several states' arts councils and commissions from major symphony orchestras. Peck is a cum laude graduate of the University of Michigan, where he also earned master and doctoral degrees in composition.

The concert will begin with Harbison's "Remembering Gatsby — A Fox-Trot for Orchestra." The Percussion Group will be featured in "The Glory and the Grandeur. "

Tickets range from $11.50 to $17.50 for adults and $5 to $9 for students and are available at the symphony's office located in the lower level of the Barnett Bank on First Avenue or at the Three Arts Theatre the day of the performance.

Special discounts are available for advanced purchases for groups of 10 or more. Tickets are also available over the phone by calling 323-5059.

horoscope

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) New business moves are favored but guard against an impulsive use of credit. You have a fresh approach now to a nagging problem. You will also renew an old friendship.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A business delay is now over and you are more than ready to act on your plan. An unusual inspiration comes to you this week. Someone you met at a social event will prove to be helpful in business.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A new creative interest or hobby gives you a fresh perspective on life. A flash of insight will cause you to devote extra time now to a work-related project. Your intuition is an asset in business and personal affairs in the coming weeks.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A money shortage or delay is over now. Adventurous in spirit this week, you will seek new ways of having fun. You are liable to make pleasure plans on the spur of the moment. Be sure to keep your feet on the ground.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) By speaking from the heart, you will reach a better understanding with a close tie this week. Home changes may include the purchase of something electronic. Family discussions are favored now. The weekend is made for romance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) Spontaneous travel may be on your agenda for the week. A free-lance project will mean extra money for some of you. A child surprises you in a delightful way. A job-related endeavor may seem boring, but you will be alive with creative energy.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You will enjoy a visit to a favorite entertainment spot this week. A child will respect what you have to say now. Delightful times come this weekend through travel, shopping and home-based pursuits.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) This week favors new beginnings but guard against too much ego in your dealings with others. A home concern is now resolved. You are charismatic this week and will have an inspiring effect on others.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You will be tackling an unfinished project this week. A visit with an old friend puts you in a contented frame of mind. New money-making ideas come to you later in the week. Creative work, studying and research are favored.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) There are financial advantages to this week's business developments. A talk with a friend gives you a new way of seeing things. Group activities are favored now.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) Some are enthusiastic about a work venture. You are independent now and will be doing your own thing. Business interests preoccupy you early in the week. A hunch you have is on the money. The weekend accents romance.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20) Extra money at your disposal will allow you to take a project off the back burner. Weekend getaways are favored. You will be hearing from friends at a distance. Some feel replenished by a religious service. Social life has business ramifications.

Conference showcases technology

Laser rangefinders, virtual reality top list

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

The future of infantry training may no longer lie on the world's battlefields, but it may lie in the world of virtual reality.

Some of the newest technologies in combat simulation were demonstrated at Fort Benning during the 1994 Individual Combatant Modeling and Simulation Symposium Tuesday through Thursday.

The symposium, sponsored by the Dismounted Battle Space Battle Laboratory and hosted by the Land Warrior Test Bed, focused on using new technologies with individual soldiers.

"This is monumental because this is the first time in history that we have been able to use technology to replicate one of the most difficult points on the battlefield — the individual soldier," said Col. Arnold J. Canada, chief of the Dismounted Battle Space Battle Laboratory.

"It is much easier to put a vehicle into the virtual environment than it is an individual," said Jim Madden, a consultant for the symposium.

Put monitors in front of the periscopes and gun sight of a tank and suddenly the crew members feel like they are in a virtual environment, Madden said, but that does not work with an individual.

Individuals are placed in the virtual world through individual portals, or I-PORTS, which allow them to view and interact with computer-generated enemies, manned simulators and the environment as if they were all real and present.

This can be done with a helmet-mounted display or a "walk in synthetic environment," a room

Post changes policy on juvenile offenders

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Juveniles who commit crimes on Fort Benning, and the parents of those juveniles, will be affected by a recent policy change.

According to Jennifer Morgan, acting community life officer, the procedures affecting juvenile crimes have undergone "drastic" revision.

Morgan said the policy change targets two aspects of the program: increasing parental involvement and reducing the time spent on very minor offenses.

"The Adolescent Advisory Council, now renamed the Juvenile Review Board," Morgan said, "used to spend time on every case that involved a juvenile, even if it was an 8-year-old who took a 60-cent pack of gum."

Since the policy change, she said, cases are reviewed by the Garrison Commander's Office before being forwarded to the board for action.

"This allows some of the minor charges to be screened out," Morgan said.

"Any juvenile who commits an offense of that nature has his or her identification card overstamped by the Military Police anyway," Morgan said, "so they lose shopping privileges for six months. Minor offenses like that aren't really what the board is set up to deal with."

The other major change, according to Morgan, is that juveniles and their sponsors are now required to attend board sessions.

"We'll send a letter of notification to the sponsor when a case is scheduled to come up," she said. "Sponsors are required to appear at the sessions, unless they're actually on deployment, in which case their spouses may attend. Witnesses may also attend, and as always, any case may be appealed."

The changes, Morgan said, are the result of concerns of Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White.

"He wanted more parental involvement," Morgan said, "and he wanted to streamline the process, so the Staff Judge Advocate's Office suggested changes to the regulation to include his ideas."

The changes occur in Appendix E of USAIC Regulation 210-1, which deals with the Community Life Program.

Another change is the method of assigning penalties for each offense, Morgan said.

"Formerly, there was a 'Schedule of Equity,' a standardized list of penalties to be assigned for each category of offense," she said, "but that's been done away with. Now, the board will have more leeway to use its judgment in recommending penalties based on the circumstances of the case."

The regulation does still include types of punishments that can be assigned, she said.

The board has not met since the changes were incorporated, Morgan said, but she hopes to see the new policy result in more attention being paid to serious cases.

Of the cases involving juveniles that have occurred in the recent past, Morgan estimates that only 15 percent of them were "of a serious nature."

"If we can weed out the very minor incidents, we can spend more time and attention on serious offenses, those that feature weapons or aggravated assault, for example," she said. "And the parental involvement should help in making the board more effective."

The board is scheduled to meet the first and third Tuesdays of each month.

Prayer breakfast

Leaders to gather

USAIC Chaplains' Office

The Fort Benning annual National Prayer Breakfast will be at the Main NCO Club Feb. 25 at 6:30 a.m.

The prayer breakfast is conducted in conjunction with the annual National Prayer Breakfast in Washington, D.C.

It is designated as a time of spiritual reflection for post leadership and is a reminder of our country's roots.

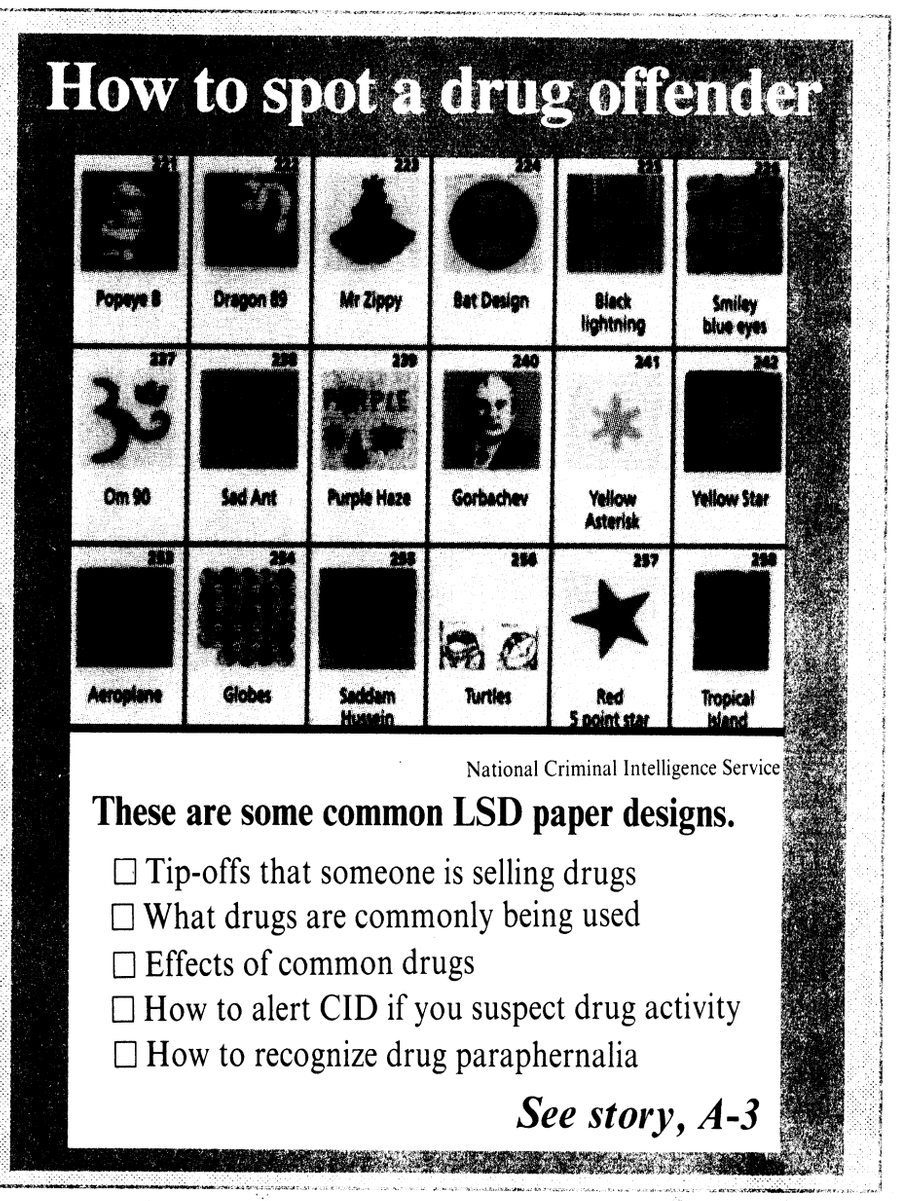
The National Prayer Breakfast, which is sponsored by the U.S. Senate and House prayer groups, was established with President Dwight D. Eisenhower in 1953.

The first National Prayer Breakfast, formerly known as the Presidential Prayer Breakfast, was designed to seek divine guidance for the nation's leadership and to declare its dependence on God and faith in him.

Every year thereafter, the prayer breakfast has gathered the president, members of the U.S. House and Senate, members of the Cabinet, the Supreme Court and the military leadership of the armed forces.

The guest speaker for this year's post gathering will be Chaplain (Col.) David P. Peterson, U.S. Forces Command chaplain, Fort McPherson, Ga.

Peterson is a native of South Dakota. He has served at installations throughout the United States and Vietnam.



In 1990, he was assigned as command staff chaplain for all Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force chaplains in the Persian Gulf.

Peterson entered active duty as a chaplain in November 1965. He was awarded a master's degree in divinity from Covenant Theological Seminary in St. Louis, Mo., and a master of science degree in counseling and guidance from Long Island University, Brooklyn, N.Y.

He is a graduate of the Army War College.

Tickets for the prayer breakfast must be obtained in advance. The USAIC Chaplains' office is asking for a donation of $3 to defray the cost of the breakfast.

For more information or tickets, contact your unit chaplain or Chaplain (Maj.) David Smith at the USAIC Chaplains' Office at 545-4965.

Yes this line is unsecure

commentary

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Don't let this get out, but I think I've found a missing link in the chain of Army training.

Of course, we're all trained in individual weapons, first aid and how to react in a variety of combat situations. Some of us (hello rangers) are trained to survive if put down in the desert with nothing but a pocket knife and a box of toothpicks.

But let's face it, we just can't use a telephone properly.

If you call most units, you'll get a fast, unintelligible mumble that goes something like: Pvt. soandsoalphacomp'nythislineisunsecurehelpyousir?

If this were slowed down to a speed within the range of human hearing, it wouldn't be so bad. But this is the only "scripted" part of the conversation, and some of the variations that occur after the greeting are startling.

Take a call my editor, Agatha Debrow, made last week. She was trying to track down the location of a "stringer," a soldier from another unit who writes stories for the paper.

Her call was answered by a specialist, and the resulting dialogue went something like this:

"This is Ms. Debrow with The Bayonet. I'm calling for Spc. (censored)."

"Who?"

"Spc. (censored). I need to get in touch with her about a story."

"Oh, her. Hang loose."

long pause ...

"Little lady, check this out — she's not around, nobody's seen her, we don't know where she is."

"Well, could you take a message and ask her to call me?" (leaves name and number.) "Thank you. Goodbye."

"Peace."

Madame Editor was less than impressed with this specialist's style of conversation.

Karen S. Morarie

Another Bayonet staffer reported that her husband, apparently a fairly even-tempered person, called his unit to get some information. It was late at night, and the person who answered had apparently lost the fine edge of alertness (we'll skip the greeting):

"This is Captain Squared Away. I need to know such-and-such."

"Wha?"

"I need to know such-and-such."

"Oh ... I dunno ... (yawn) ... lemme see ..."

Long pause, followed by soft snores, at which point Capt. Squared Away became a little less even-tempered.

"LISTEN, COWBOY! You need to wake up and ..." (Following suggestions are classified AND censored.)

The point is, when you answer the phone at your unit or office (or home, for that matter), you don't know who's on the other end of the line. It could be your best friend, or it could be someone with the power to put you on police call every Saturday for the rest of your life.

Not only that, but the impression a caller gets on the phone is not just of you, but your whole organization. If you are helpful, polite, friendly and speak clearly, they'll be favorably impressed.

If you're surly, unhelpful, rude or disrespectful, your caller may just make another phone call. To your supervisor.

MP checkpoints are inconvenient, irritating

Would you like to know what I think about these #!## no-notice, roadside Military Police checkpoints conducted every so often?

Well, I'm going to tell you anyway. I feel as though I must get this off my chest or I'll go ballistic.

First of all, I understand why there must be random, unscheduled roadside checks. What I don't understand is why they can't be conducted off the main routes — perhaps in or near the parking lots where the employees and soldiers work. Meet (drivers) in the parking lots as they park or as they leave. Do it in a few different lots until all get checked.

The next thing I want to know is why must this be done as people are going home after work? Is it assumed that we can simply change our after-work plans without notice? Let me enlighten you as to the inconvenience caused by a slip in time.

Baby sitters and child development centers charge more for that extra 30 minutes. Sitters may not work for you again if you cause them to be late for their rides, etc. Some of them don't drive yet.

If you happen to be the parent picking up children who have been involved in after-school activities, they will really appreciate your punctuality.

Do you know what happens if you get your children to their after-school sports location late? Coaches tend to play those who get to practice on time.

Of course, nothing is worse than showing up late for any type of medical or dental appointment. You are aware that not everyone can or does use the medical facilities on post, right?

Now I feel I must mention just how much sitting in very slow moving bumper-to-bumper traffic improves my quality of life. Sure, I know I can always blame my lateness on the MPs when I get to my destination, but, for the life of me, I can't answer their question of "Why after work." Why not during the duty day? Does anyone have an intelligent answer to that?

The next thing I would like to know is how much gas is wasted every time they capture the incoming or outgoing work force? Do we really have to do it this way? Isn't there another way to accomplish the same task with less irritation to the work force ?

Yes, I know I will get over this. This is not the first time this has happened. Venting my considerable anger by writing this letter has been good therapy, and it is preferable to some other action that crossed my mind while I sat in traffic and did a slow burn.

Name withheld

Military Police response:

In response to the reader's letter (about checkpoints), the Military Police Activity would like to set the record straight.

Roadside vehicle checkpoints are conducted at the direction of the installation commanding general. Recently, vehicle checkpoints have been directed by the Training and Doctrine Command commanding general.

Locations for roadside checks are selected by the provost marshal based on manpower, and (we try) to cover the main routes.

The main routes are utilized so the random selection of the installation personnel can be ensured. Without specific cause, selection of parking lots would not meet the criteria for random checks.

The Military Police Activity is aware of time delays caused by checkpoints; the average delay in the recent checkpoint was seven minutes.

All unions were notified and civilian employees are aware that a condition of employment on a military installation includes security checks as directed by the commanding general.

For general information, the Military Police also conduct checkpoints during the duty day and through the evening hours for the safety of our community.

While the delay and use of extra petroleum is regrettable, the checkpoints resulted in the identification of concealed weapons, drivers under the influence, drivers consuming alcohol and drugs, theft of government property and violations of post safety and vehicle regulations.

The Fort Benning community needs to answer a few questions. How much do you value families' safety and security? How much is a life the Military Police may have saved worth?

Military Police objectives are to protect, defend and serve the Fort Benning community, and I believe we do it very well.

Post soldiers deserve better cable service

I am very disappointed with the post cable company service.

I called the first week of January requesting the "Super Fight" on Pay Per View — three weeks in advance of the fight. The company told me it was not going to show it.

The week of the fight, a friend of mine called the cable company about it and was told the company needed at least 100 people to sign up for it to able to show it.

In the last few weeks I have read about the cable service. I never bet, but if the post did a survey, (post officials) would find out how bad post cable service is.

First, not only does the company charge more for less in comparison to off-post companies, but you also have to pay a deposit for requesting Pay Per View. Off post, you only have to call a 1-800 number.

I can't even watch Fort Benning's Command Information Channel in my housing area.

I've been at Fort Benning two years, and CVI has never conducted a survey about how to improve its service.

I think it's because the company knows soldiers only have two choices for on-post cable — take it or leave it.

The soldiers of Fort Benning deserve more than the poor service we are receiving now.

Post's goal is zero accidents Presidents Day weekend

Fort Benning personnel will have an extended weekend beginning Saturday to celebrate Presidents Day.

Long weekends increase the potential for serious injury or death in traffic accidents. However, my goal for Fort Benning is to be accident free.

The key to this prevention effort is the involvement of first-line leaders. They know their personnel and can make safety briefings effective. Leaders will emphasize the following:

• Consider commercial transportation instead of driving.

• Check your car for sufficient tire tread, operational lights, good windshield wipers and nonleaking exhaust system.

• Check the weather forecast for the area you will be traveling in.

• Take frequent breaks (at least every two hours) on long trips.

• Drive defensively, sober and alert.

• Wear your seat belt.

I wish all personnel, military and civilian, a safe and enjoyable holiday.

Criminal Investigation Division targets on-post drug traffic

Agents work to educate public on how to identify drug users, traffickers

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Since April, Fort Benning's Criminal Investigation Division has changed its focus in drug investigations to concentrate on activity taking place on the installation.

According to Special Agent in Charge Randy Upton, the majority of drug trafficking on Fort Benning is done by civilians, including family members, with a small number of military members involved as well.

"We'd like commanders and the general public to be aware of how to identify a drug user or trafficker," Upton said. "We rely on them to keep us informed of what's going on in the community. They're our eyes and ears."

Upton said some of the warning signs that soldiers may be involved in the selling of illegal drugs are:

❑ Living beyond their means.

"All soldiers run out of money a few days before payday," Upton said. "If a soldier always has money, or you have a specialist driving a Porsche, it's time to be suspicious. The commander or supervisor should check out the source of that soldier's income."

❑ Constantly being paged, or receiving an unusual number of phone calls.

❑ Having an unusual number of visitors, at the barracks or in quarters.

❑ Possession of drug paraphernalia, including pipes, dugouts (wooden containers holding a small supply of marijuana and a small, baseball-shaped pipe for smoking), cigarette papers, roach clips, and "bongs" or water pipes.

"These are things to look for during a health-and-welfare inspection," Upton said.

❑ Possession of containers often used to hold drugs: 35mm film canisters; "camouflage" containers, including soft drink cans and aerosol cans, with screw-off tops or bottoms and hollowed-out interiors.

"If we receive a call from a commander or community member," Upton said, "we'll put the individual under surveillance, and if necessary bring someone in undercover to attempt a series of purchases from the suspect. If we can establish a pattern of distribution, the person can't go to court and say that was the one and only time (he or she) ever sold illegal drugs."

A recent case, Upton said, involved a civilian working at the Commissary.

"We had the individual under surveillance for quite some time, and ended up making three purchases of crack cocaine from him," he said, adding that the arrest resulted in a grand jury indictment with a trial pending.

Special Agent Gerard Williams, who is involved in drug investigations and gives briefings to unit commanders and community members, said controlling drug trafficking is a continuous process.

"We can apprehend one person, but there'll be another to take (his or her) place," Williams said. "The key for us is for the community to keep us informed of what's going on. The majority of our cases come through sources, and we protect their identities."

The reason the problem is constant, Williams said, is the ready availability of drugs. "They're sold everywhere from the surrounding communities to, in some cases, quarters on post," he said.

Upton said the local communities are riddled with "Stop and cops," where buyers can drive up and buy drugs on the street corner.

Williams said the "drug of choice" for traffickers is crack cocaine.

"Crack use is abundant, and the drug takes up relatively little space," Williams said. "Marijuana is also popular, but it's bulky to transport and store in large quantities.

"We want to not only make the community aware of what to look for, but to warn drug traffickers to stop what they're doing," Williams said. "The class I give to commanders is one that I would be glad to give to wives' clubs, schools or any group that expresses an interest. Our goal is to raise the public's awareness, and hopefully make some of the dealers decide it's not worth the risk."

Upton agreed. "If people are aware, they'll be more careful," he said. "Our goal is not just to solve crime, but to prevent it.

"We ask that everyone get involved in making our community drug and crime free," Upton said. "Anyone with information concerning drug or criminal activity on Fort Benning can contact CID at 545-2414."

Upton said at the request of the caller, his or her identity can be kept anonymous.

Correction to smoking policy ban

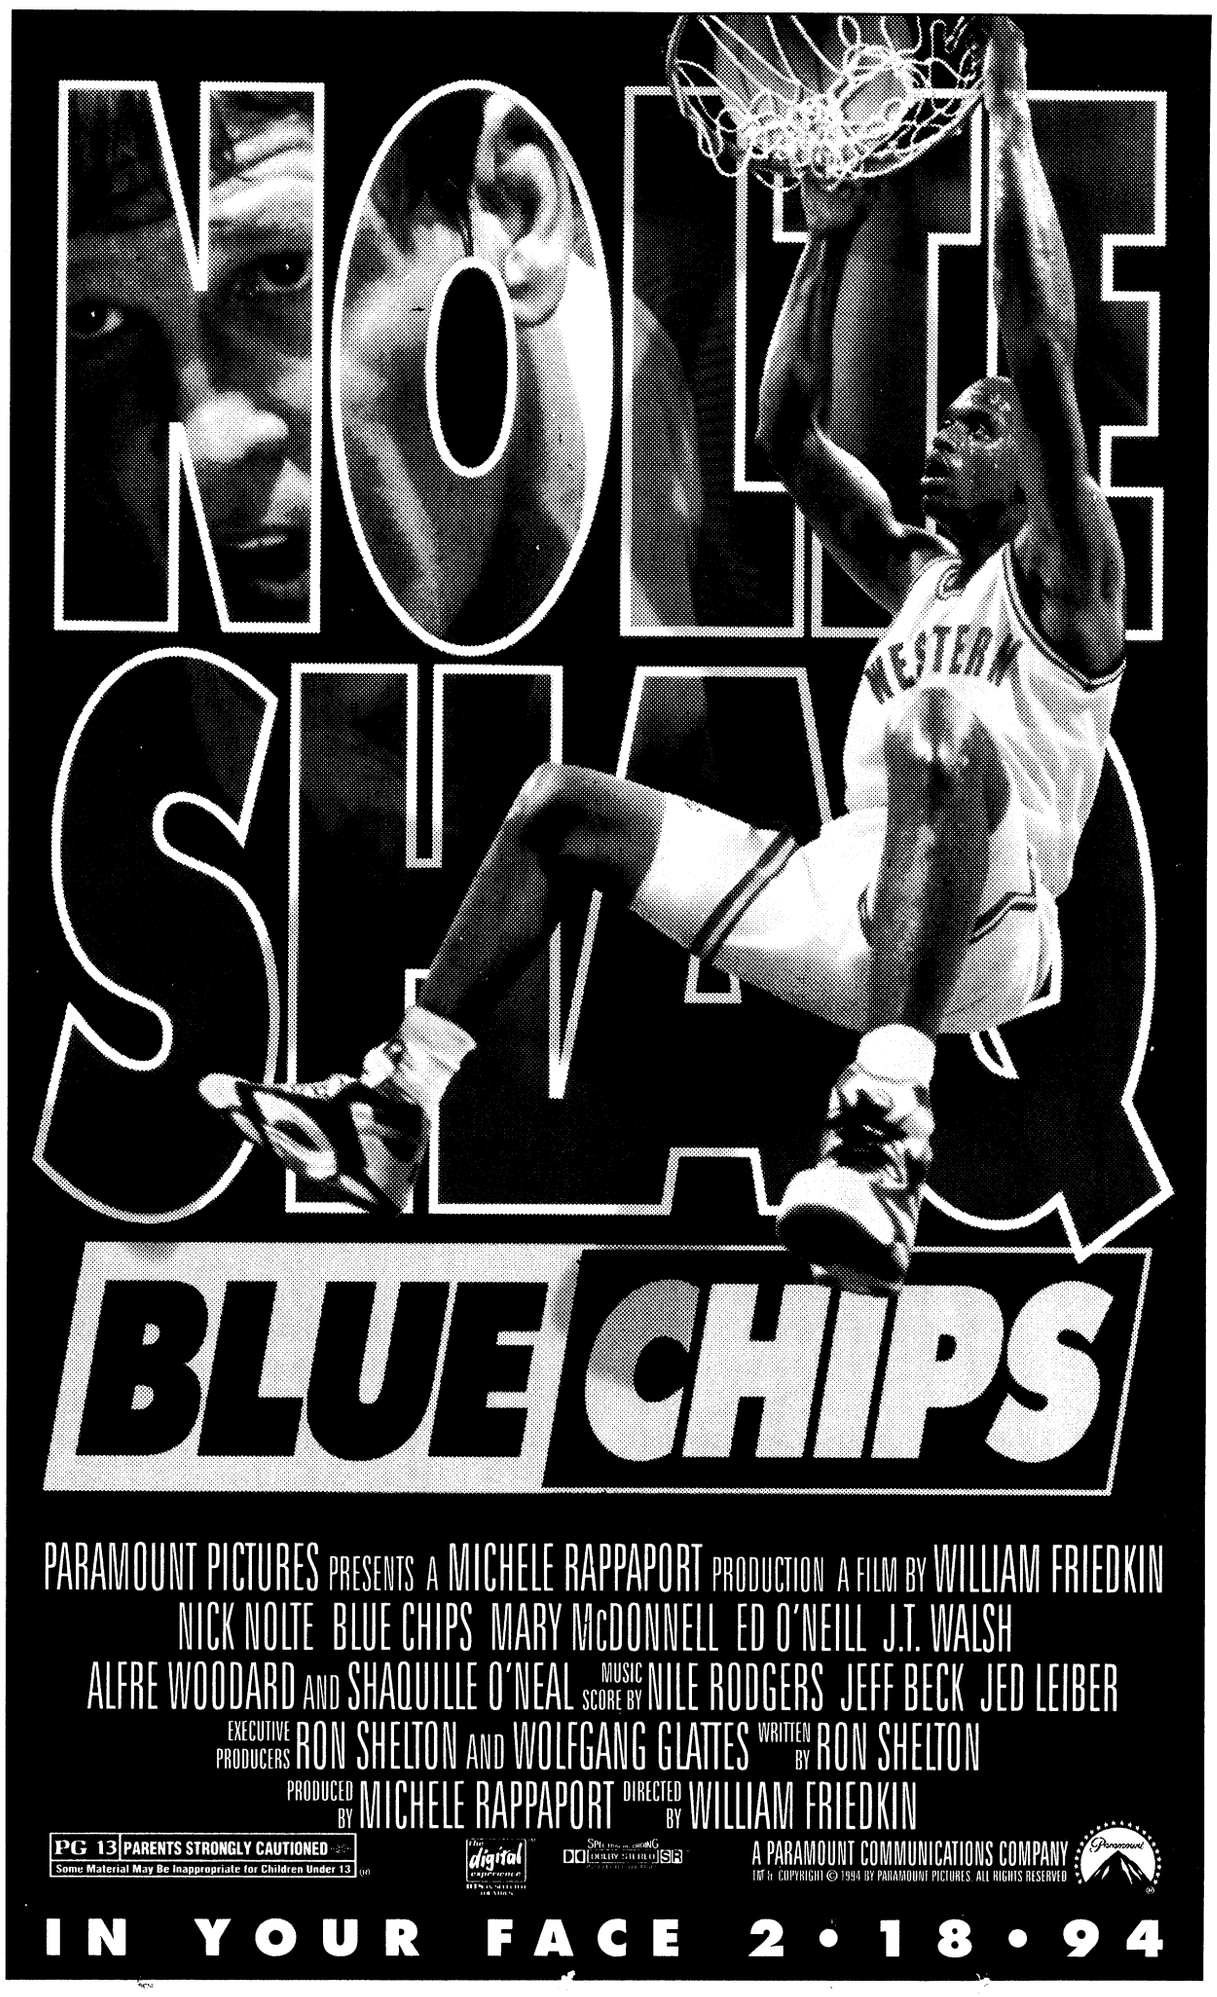
The article that appeared in the Feb. 11 issue of The Bayonet, titled "Indoor smoking lights go out for DoD workers" has been rescinded.



According to the American Forces Information Service, a Department of Defense public affairs agency that released the smoking policy ban update, "the DoD instruction implementing the policy banning smoking in DoD-owned or leased building has not been signed. DoD officials said the policy will go into effect 30 days after the instruction is signed."

The Bayonet will publish the updated story once the instruction is signed.

BURN FAT NOW with THERMOGENICS
Can't seem to lose fat no matter how hard you try? The concept of "Thermogenics" is the most exciting news to come out of weight management research in 50 years. Thermogenics, like digestion, is a normal physiological process that burns calories. It serves two functions:
1. It prevents dietary fats from being stored as white fat, and
2. It converts white fat back into soluble lipids that may be burned off. IT PREVENTS FAT AND REDUCES FAT IN HUMANS. Increased energy and appetite suppression are other benefits. What makes THERMOGENICS better than other products like it on the market? It has adrenal support built into the product. The extended use of Thermogenic compounds that do not contain adrenal support hormones. By Silver Sage - Accept no Substitutions.

BOSS to team up with Habitat for Humanity

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Better Opportunity for Single Soldiers has a goal — build a house for Habitat for Humanity in Columbus, and build it in a week.

BOSS Council President Spc. James Shoemaker said he's been working with the local Habitat for Humanity organization and with post Command Sgt. Maj. William H. Acebes to organize the week-long building "blitz," scheduled to take place from May 6 to 15.

"Sergeant Major Acebes has given his approval for us to recruit soldiers to volunteer for the project," Shoemaker said. "We'll need at least 20 to 30 people who can commit for the entire week."

Some soldiers have already volunteered for Habitat on other projects, Shoemaker said, but the mid-May "blitz" will be an all-soldier effort from beginning to end.

"This isn't just for single soldiers, although BOSS is organizing it," he said. "There are a lot of married soldiers out there who can help us out with their skills."

Volunteers will be organized into teams, Shoemaker said, including groups to frame, roof, drywall, wire, plumb, side and paint the house.

"We need to get at least two volunteers who are experienced in each area," Shoemaker said. "They can lead the teams, and show the inexperienced volunteers how things should be done."

Shoemaker said each volunteer could expect to work on several teams during the course of construction. "We'll have some teams working at the same time," he said, "but with people working all week, they may end up framing, siding and painting."

James Shoemaker

Pfc. Troy Orth (left) and Pfc. Michael Kane, both of the 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, stack blocks for a foundation at a Habitat for Humanity construction site.

Shoemaker said the project would start with a briefing on a Friday, and continue through the weekend and the following week.

"We may have a few things to finish up over the second weekend," he said, "but we hope to have the construction pretty well wrapped up by then."

Shoemaker said in accordance with Habitat for Humanity guidelines, the house will be built for a Columbus family.

According to a Habitat spokesman, each house is sold on a no-profit, no-interest basis, with payments used to finance the building of more houses. Homeowners are required to contribute 500 hours of "sweat equity" toward the construction of their own home and others, and must make a $500 down payment.

Shoemaker said other organizations, including church and college groups, have built houses, but a one-week "blitz" has not yet taken place in Columbus.

"I think Fort Benning can do it," Shoemaker said.

The BOSS president will be soliciting donations to cover the cost of food and drinks during the time of construction, he said.

"I hope we can get the Fort Benning organizations to help out," he said. "We could get sponsorship from the local area, but we want this project to be entirely a Fort Benning effort."

For information, or to volunteer, call Shoemaker at 545-7204.

Bill requires VA to treat vets with Persian Gulf syndrome

By Rudi Williams
American Forces Information Service

President Bill Clinton signed a bill requiring the Department of Veterans Affairs to treat Persian Gulf veterans for diseases that may have resulted from exposure to toxic substances or environmental hazards.

"Over the past 2 1/2 years, Persian Gulf veterans have experienced a wide range of health care problems that have eluded diagnosis and cure," Clinton said in a Dec. 21 statement. Symptoms have included fatigue, painful muscles and joints, bleeding gums, skin rashes, short-term memory loss and hair loss.

"With this legislation, the VA will have the authority to provide these veterans both inpatient and outpatient care on a priority basis," Clinton said. "Thus, we can help make certain that these veterans' health-care needs are met as fully as possible while important research into their problems goes forward."

The legislation also allows VA to reimburse veterans for any co-payments they may have made, Clinton added.

Also, the law extends VA's authority to:

- Furnish Vietnam veterans with care that may be related to their exposure to Agent Orange;
- Furnish veterans who participated in nuclear weapons tests or in the occupation of Hiroshima or Nagasaki with care that may be related to exposure to ionizing radiation;
- Provide women veterans with sexual trauma counseling; and
- Maintain its regional office in the Philippines.

Before he sent the legislation to the president's desk on Nov. 22, Georgia Rep. J. Roy Rowland, chairman of the Veterans Affairs Subcommittee on Hospitals and Health Care, said, "The impetus of this bill was to help ease the anxieties of these veterans and their families by requiring our veterans medical facilities to place a priority on providing them the health care they need and deserve."

VA, DoD and the scientific community in general have not been able to determine the cause or causes of the Persian Gulf illnesses. The act authorizes VA to provide health care to the veterans on the presumption their conditions are related to their military service in the gulf region.

"No one questions that these individuals are sick," said Mississippi Rep. Sonny Montgomery, who chairs the Veterans Affairs Committee. "We've had a number of them and their spouses testify before our committee. With this bill, we're responding to the immediate problems: access to health care. But we must follow up with the right kind of research to get to the bottom of this."

VA is examining areas of emerging science, including theories that some cases of fatigue, headache and joint pain actually may reflect multiple chemical sensitivity syndrome, a little understood medical condition.

"Our first priority must be the treatment of any veterans who are suffering today," Brown said. "We are committed to an active research program as well, but veterans cannot wait years for help."

INCOMSS: Hi-tech show

with projection screens wired to a computer that senses the individual's movement and changes the scene accordingly.

Other technologies demonstrated at the symposium include:

- The "INFOSCOPE," which allows the soldier looking through it to receive computer-generated images from the virtual world;
- Rapid Terrain Data Generation, which uses data collected from satellites to generate high- resolution, three-dimensional images on a computer screen;
- A Personnel Status Monitor, a watch-like device worn on the wrist which transmits selected vital signs to a remote computer, allowing medics to find injured soldiers and to monitor the physical status of soldiers in both a battlefield and training environment;
- A Global Grid Communications System, or world-wide system of satellites and fiber-optic cables that allows high speed transmission of data.

Department of Veterans Affairs

Q: I am not a veteran, but I am interested in purchasing a home repossessed by the Department of Veterans Affairs. Can I do this?

A: Yes. The general public can purchase VA-repossessed homes. A list of these properties is available at your local VA regional office. You can reach the one nearest you by calling (800) 827-1000.

Q: Can I use my VA-guaranteed home loan to buy land I plan to build a house on in the future?

A: A VA-guaranteed loan cannot be used to buy undeveloped land unless it is part of a package that includes building a home.

Q: I have a fairly high interest rate on my VA-guaranteed home loan. Can I refinance this loan to reduce the interest rate?

A: Yes. VA recently initiated a campaign urging veterans to refinance loans with interest rates at 8.5 percent or higher with an interest rate reduction refinancing loan, which is used strictly to reduce the interest rate on an existing VA-guaranteed loan and requires no out-of-pocket cost to the veteran homeowner. The potential individual and collective savings to veterans are substantial.

Call your local VA regional office for a list of private lenders that grant the loans in your area.

Q: The Board of Veterans' Appeals recently denied my husband's claim for service-connected compensation from the Department of Veterans Affairs. We strongly disagree with this decision. Can we appeal it?

A: Yes, a decision of the Board of Veterans' Appeals may be appealed to the Court of Veterans Appeals. You must file a notice of appeal with the court within 120 days after the Board of Veterans' Appeals mailed you its final decision. This will start the final appeal process.

Q: What is the Court of Veterans Appeals?

A: A veteran may make an appeal of a decision by the Board of Veterans' Appeals to the seven-judge court, which is separate from VA.

The court's responsibility is to review decisions made by the board and, if it deems necessary, order correcting action by VA.

The court's one chief judge and six associate judges are appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate. The court does not hold trials or receive new evidence. It reviews only the record which was considered by VA and was available to the Board of Veterans' Appeals.

For more information about the court's rules and procedures, contact the clerk's office at 625 Indiana Ave. N.W., Suite 900, Washington, D.C. 20004, or call (800) 869-8654.

Q : When may a military veteran draw a pension from the Department of Veterans Affairs?

A: Only veterans with at least 90 days active duty, at least one day of which was during a period of war, and who were discharged under conditions other than dishonorable may be considered for a VA pension.

Eligible veterans must be permanently and totally disabled and meet established income requirements. Disabilities do not have to be related to their time of service.

Q: Will my VA pension be adversely affected because I received compensation to repair my home damaged by Hurricane Andrew?

A: Generally, no. If you receive benefits under the Improved Pension program, compensation for damages to your home is not considered income for pension purposes as long as it is not more than repair costs.

If you started receiving a pension before 1979, however, the payments might be considered income and should be reported to VA.

Contest offers $1,000 prize

Army News Service

Association of the United States Army officials are looking for writers to participate in the first-ever ARMY Magazine Essay Contest.

Anyone, except employees of AUSA, is welcome to enter. Essays must address important issues concerning the U.S. Army in the 21st century.

Some examples of appropriate focus are: lessons of the past applied to the future Army; the Army in peacetime operations; controlling change while shaping the future; and exercising initiative and leadership.

The author of the best essay will receive a cash prize of $1,000. Second- and third-place entries will receive $500 and $250, respectively. Winning essays will be published in ARMY Magazine.

The review of the essay will measure overall quality, scholarship and analysis of the subject.

Essays must stress analysis and interpretation — not exposition, personal narrative or report.

Entry rules:

1. Essays must be original and must not exceed 2,500 words.
2. All entries should be sent to: Editor, Army Magazine; Attn: Essay Contest; 2425 Wilson Blvd.; Arlington, Va. 22201.
3. Essays must be postmarked no later than May 31.
4. The author's name will not appear on the essay. Each author will write a two- or three-sentence synopsis of the essay on a cover sheet. A sealed envelope will accompany the entry. Inside the envelope will be the author's name, brief biographical sketch, Social Security number, address, day and evening commercial telephone numbers, and the same two- or three-sentence synopsis that appears on the cover sheet.
5. All essays must be typewritten and double-spaced on 8 1/2 by 11-inch paper. Three copies must be submitted.
6. Winners will be notified by letter in August.
7. The authors of prize-winning essays must transfer all rights, including the copyright, to AUSA before publication.
8. The editor of ARMY Magazine will also review essays not selected for cash awards for publication in the magazine. Writers will be compensated at the established rate and must transfer all rights, including the copyright, to AUSA before publication.
9. ARMY Magazine reserves the right to edit published essays for style, accuracy or space limitations.

Total Army Quality

Program challenges leaders

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Office of Personnel Management and the Total Army Quality program concluded a four-day leadership training course with a practical application challenge at Audie Murphy Fitness Center Feb 11.

The fitness center offered participants a chance to put the tools and skills to work they had learned in the classrooms.

Under the guidance of Dr. Ted Anders of Organizational Development Services and Beverly Fisher of Fisher and Associates, both of Atlanta, Ga., the team was given a mission, such as how to evacuate a burning ship without falling into shark infested waters before the ship blew up or moving the team through a high voltage fence bordering Bosnia and Serbia using each section of the fence only twice.

The team then discussed options and came up with the best possible plan to accomplish the mission.

According to Anders, this would help them to work more as a team than as a group of individuals.

"When applied in the workplace, this will help the people to make continuous improvements from within their section or branch," Anders said. "Specifically, we're helping them build what we call a self-winding mechanism for improvement — not relying on someone to tell them how to improve or wait for someone's approval all the time, but beginning to see proactively a vision for their section or branch or division and learning specifically what tools and techniques will take them in that direction."

According to Anders, workers have a culture in a lot of work places in the United States that suppresses cooperation and collaboration and consensus.

"We have inherited a work place culture that's more focused on the individual, on me, rather than we," Anders said. "We have got to create high performance teams that value diversity and value the need for collaboration and what's called systemic thinking.

"(We want employees to look at each) directorate as a system; which means a collection of processes, Anders continued. "(We want them to) think about the key critical processes that are core to the mission of that particular directorate and make sure those processes are focused on by specific natural work teams.

"We're trying to encourage people not to wait to be formed on a process action team only," Anders said. "We need a natural spontaneous workplace set of teams that get their hands on their specific critical processes. Then they need to begin to organize all their activities around the process — not by hierarchy, but by process, focusing on their customers and clearing up every obstacle."

Anders and Fisher will be visiting Fort Benning about every other week for the next few months while they train facilitators who will go to the directorates and keep the culture change moving.

For the employees themselves, they came away from the classes with a different viewpoint on how to make changes in their workplace, and many said they came away with a feeling of accomplishment.

"Teamwork is very important to the Total Army Quality concept and ideas, and I think it will give us a good start to take back and expand it into our areas where we work." said Mary Burt, TAQ instructor who works in the Directorate of Civilian Personnel in the Training and Development Division.

ACAP seminars: classes designed for those getting out of the military

Army Career and Alumni Program

The following is the Army Career and Alumni Program Job Assistance Center calendar of events:

Tuesdays: noon to 1 p.m., Focus Hour, Interview Techniques and Dress for Success.

Wednesdays: 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Job Assistance Workshop; 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Education Opportunity Center.

Thursdays: 1 to 3 p.m., Mock Interview Practice Session

Fridays: Employers Day

Job assistance workshop

Time: Wednesdays, 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Location: Infantry Hall, Building 4

The workshop is conducted every Wednesday at Infantry Hall. Topics discussed include objective setting, resume preparation, expanding opportunities, networking, interviewing, salary negotiating, stress management and financial planning.

The workshop is for anyone leaving federal service (both military and Department of the Army civilians) and their family members, whether leaving voluntarily, involuntarily or retiring.

Education Opportunity Center

Time: Wednesdays, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

Participants will receive information from all over the country about college and university admissions requirements and proficiency exams. Education counselors can also discuss student loans and grants.

Mock Interview Practice

Time: Thursdays, 1 to 3 p.m.

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

Participants will learn how to interview effectively by rehearsing and practicing interview techniques with an experienced JAC counselor. The mock interview will be videotaped to provide the client with a visual learning tool.

Employers' Day

Time: Varies

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

Employers' Day is scheduled each Friday at the Job Assistance Center. The program is designed to allow employers to recruit qualified candidates for their companies.

Employers normally will give presentations on their organizations and set up interviews with qualified candidates.

A variety of manufacturing and service companies take advantage of this opportunity. Public sector organizations are also represented.

Focus Hour

Time: Tuesdays, noon to 1 p.m.

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

This weekly video program provides additional information on the key areas in the job search process — networking, dressing for success, interview process and negotiating techniques. Counselors will assist with any additional questions.

Small Business Development

Time: Thursdays, 2 to 4 p.m.

Location: JAC Office, Building 2634, Soldiers' Plaza

A short, free seminar is offered by the Small Business Development Center of the University of Georgia once a month. It is designed to provide assistance and training in starting a new business.

The seminar serves as a focal point for linking together resources of the federal, state, and local governments and the private sector.

Some of the employers scheduled to participate include Vinnell Corporation, Watkins Motor Lines, Georgia Dept of Labor, Temporary Alternatives, Schneider National and Primerica.

For additional information and registration, call Army Career and Alumni Program Job Assistance Center, located in Building 2634, at 545-2308 or 545-2309 .

Crime stoppers conduct fund-raiser

The Columbus Crime Stoppers program is conducting its 1994 "Jail and Bail" fund-raiser Tuesday through Thursday at the Peachtree Mall on Manchester Expressway.

The fund-raiser allows people to have their boss or co-workers arrested for crimes such as wearing a blue tie or dress or being the best boss.

An officer will arrive to arrest them and escort them to the "jail" at the mall, where they will have to post a pre-arranged bail or appear before a magistrate to have a reasonable bond set. ($100 minimum donation.)

Money raised will be used to pay rewards to individuals who provide anonymous tips that result in arrests.

Bayonet drop box available to customers

For the convenience of Bayonet customers, anyone who needs to turn in stories, film, letters, etc., to The Bayonet may now use a new drop box located in the Information Office, Room 111, Infantry Hall, Building 4.

Material being dropped off should be placed in an envelope with a point of contact and a phone number annotated on the envelope.

Customers can still fax material to The Bayonet at 682-0095, send information through PROFS (ID is Bayonet), mail material to: The Bayonet, Infantry Hall, Room 601, send material through distribution or hand carry it to The Bayonet's office, Room 601, whichever is most convenient.

The deadline is noon Friday for the following week's issue.

BOSS Council to meet

The next post Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers Council meeting will be March 10 at 12:30 p.m. at the Main NCO Club. Civilian attire is required.

OCS board June 22-24

An officer board is scheduled for June 22 to 24. The cutoff date for applications to arrive at Personnel Command is June 10.

Applications are expected to arrive at the Adjutant General's Personnel Operations Division, Building 2619, no later than April 29.

For more information, call Marie Lee at 545- 3341, 545-4341 or 545-4702 .

2nd Armored Div. Road closes for repairs

The 2nd Armored Division is closed from the Wildcat intersection road to the Red Arrow Road.

Local traffic can use 2nd Armored Division Road up to Branch Creek. For through traffic, use detour by way of Wildcat Road, Buena Vista Road and Red Arrow Road.

For more information, call Bill Bunt at 545-3725.

Self-Help Store to close for holiday

The Self-Help Store will close Saturday in observance of Presidents Day. This includes the Loan Equipment Section and the Venetian Blind and Shade Shop. The store will reopen for normal business Tuesday at 8:30 a.m.

CID offering rewards

The Criminal Investigation Division is offering a $500 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person who entered the Range Maintenance building Jan. 14 between 3:20 p.m. and 6:30 a.m. and stole a Compuadd computer, monitor, keyboard and GE handheld radio with charger.

Anyone having information concerning this incident can contact the Military Police at 545-5222 or the CID office at 545-2414. Information provided will be kept to the strictest confidence.

The Criminal Investigation Division is also offering a $500 reward for information concerning a robbery that occurred at approximately 7:50 p.m. Jan. 30 adjacent to the quarters on Arrowhead Road in the McGraw Manor Housing area.

An unidentified black male using an unidentified weapon robbed a female family member and fled the scene. A reward will be paid to anyone providing information that leads to identification of the individual(s) responsible for the crime.

All information is confidential. Contact Reginald Ray, 86th Military Police Detachment (CID) at 545-5389 or the Military Police desk sergeant at 545-5222.

Ad valorem tax change affects soldiers

Muscogee and Chattahoochee counties have changed their ad valorem tax requirements affecting soldiers.

The new requirements state that service members' ad valorem tax exemption be notarized only by the Staff Judge Advocate's Office. The SJA requires soldiers who need exemptions to present their identification cards and leave and earning statements of the past 90 days.

Soldiers' spouses must present powers of attorney and soldiers' oversees orders if applicable. Soldiers' names must appear on car titles as the owner or co-owner in order to be eligible for exemption.

For more information, contact the Legal Assistance Office at 545-3281.

Post Laundry closes for renovation

The Post Laundry counter service closes Saturday for renovation. Regular service resumes Tuesday at 6:30 a m.

For more information, call Linda Lawrence, Laundry Branch at 545-1431 or 545-3119.

Controlled burning set

Columbus Stars fullback Jamon Smith breaks across the line of scrimmage.

Stars clip Jayhawks' wings

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Columbus Stars clipped the wings of the Jackson, Miss., Jayhawks Saturday at Memorial Stadium 36-6 to push their record to 2-0 early in the season.

The Stars forced six Jayhawk turnovers and converted them into points, four on interceptions and two fumbles. Cornerback Kelvin Thomas had two picks while counterpart Calvin Adams had one, and linebacker Terrance Perry came up with an interception. Linebacker Thomas Bryant and cornerback Troy Busby pounced on the two loose fumbles.

The Stars took the lead in the second quarter when Jayhawk punter Terry Harper let a bad snap from center get into the end zone where defensive tackle Frank Larson recovered for a safety and two points.

Late in the quarter, fullback Jamon Smith (10 carries for 68 yards and one touchdown) scored the first touchdown of the game with the extra-point kick the Stars went into the locker room at the half up 9-0.

Tailback Eddie Mitchell (10 carries for 67 yards) pushed the lead to 16-0 early in the third quarter on a 5-yard run. The Jayhawks got their only points of the day on the ensuing kickoff when kick returner Rod Borne took the ball at his own 15-yard line and raced up the left sideline for an 85-yard touchdown run. The extra point was blocked leaving the Stars up 16-6.

The Stars' next drive ended in a 19-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Jeff McCurrie to wide out Kelvin Baker who shook off one defender on his way to the end zone for a 23-6 lead late in the third quarter.

In the fourth and final quarter, Michael Bailey replacing injured Alvin Humber as punt return specialist and returned a short Jayhawk punt 27 yards for a touchdown to push the Stars' lead to 29-6.

Fullback Brian Spikes pounded home the final spike late in the game on a 3-yard rumble giving the Stars their final touchdown and a 36-6 win.

The Stars' offense put up 276 total yards with 207 coming via the ground attack while the defense limited the Jayhawks to a total of 72 yards and none in the fourth quarter. Perry led the defense with six tackles and four assists while linebacker Connie Burnham had five tackles and seven assists.

McCurrie who replaced Benny Harris at the quarterback spot early in the second quarter for the Stars was five for 15 passing for 69 yards and one touchdown and was glad to be back on the field instead of in it.

"I missed playing the last two weeks because of Victory Focus," said McCurrie. "It's good to be back. We were a little sluggish early; but, in the second half, everything came together and the defense was awesome. Now we have to prove we can win on the road."

The Stars will hit the road for their next two games. Saturday, the Stars will travel to Albany, Ga., for a matchup with the undefeated Albany Warriors; and; the following Saturday, the Stars will be in Tallahassee, Fla., for a whirlwind affair with the Tornados.

The Stars' next home game will be March 5 at 2 p.m. against the Vipers of Mobile, Ala., at Memorial Stadium.

Euphoria: A 70-mile, 2-day bike trek

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

"A Strange Sense of Euphoria" will fill the air March 5 and 6 from Columbus to Pine Mountain, Ga.

The 70-mile, two-day bicycle trek will take place starting from the Georgia Welcome Center at Exit 8 off Highway 185 and leading to Franklin Delano Roosevelt State Park in Pine Mountain for an overnight stay before returning to Columbus the following day.

Rest points will be set up at the 13-, 23-, 31-, 55- and 70-mile marks throughout the trek, which is designed to be ridden at each cyclist's own pace to enjoy the scenery. It is not a race.

While at FDR State Park, trekkers will be served a free pasta dinner with dessert while listening to the sounds of Kodac Harrison and Luckie Street from Atlanta.

Those trekkers not wishing to stay at the outdoor shelter can opt for the lakeside cabins at an additional cost to the rider.

A free pancake breakfast will start the morning before the return ride, which will start at 9 a.m.

The return to Columbus only overlaps Saturday's ride in Hamilton, Ga., and has a little surprise in store for all participants as the ride nears its end.

Registration forms are available in all gyms and banks on post.

Multiple sclerosis

Poker Run set

National Multiple Sclerosis Society

The National Multiple Sclerosis Society-Georgia Chapter will host its first two-day Poker Run April 23 and 24.

The event will travel from Atlanta to Camp Bareny Mendintz in Cleveland, Ga.

A $15 registration fee and $300 minimum pledge per registered bike is required. For an additional $10 registration, participants can carry a passenger. Riders can work as a team or raise pledges individually. Prizes will be awarded to riders on different levels for raising pledges on the tour.

The MS Society will provide all that is needed for the weekend — food, beverages, lodging in mountain cabins, entertainment, a safe ride with an escort to the overnight from the Atlanta Sheriff's Posse Commission and door prizes.

Multiple sclerosis is a disease of the central nervous system. Symptoms of multiple sclerosis include: numbness, slurred speech, blurred vision, muscle weakness, poor coordination, fatigue, spasms, sexual dysfunction and paralysis.

MS most often strikes young adults who are in their 20s and 30s. Money raised through the motorcycle event will fund research to find the cause and cure for MS and provide support services for the 4,200 Georgians with MS including: information and referral, support groups, counseling, medical equipment, medical research and therapeutic recreation.

For more information on the two-day motorcycle event, call (404) 984-9080 (in Atlanta) or (800) 822-3379.

Intramural program offers sports galore

Directorate of Community Activities

Fort Benning's intramural sports program gives anyone the opportunity to play softball, basketball, volleyball, flag football or any one of 15 other sports.

Team members do not have to be experts to participate in the intramural sports program. They only need some spare time and a drive for competition.

At Fort Benning, 19 intramural sports operate throughout the year with unit teams competing against each other to win the Commander's Cup. But before the championship trophy is awarded, the teams meet each other on a regular basis to determine which four teams will compete at Audie Murphy Fitness Center for the right to call themselves champions.

Intramural sports give both men and women the opportunity to participate in all sports. Because of popularity, most men's teams are open to active duty personnel only; a few, however, are open to civilian employees and retirees. The women's teams are open to family members, civilian employees and retirees.

The program has a variety of sports to keep everyone active throughout the year. Basketball, volleyball, softball and flag football are always favorites, but interested athletes can become active in soccer, track and field, bowling, golf, boxing, racquetball, tennis, weightlifting, bodybuilding, swimming, wrestling, cycling, beach volleyball, small games and a biathlon.

Participation in the intramural sports program is often only the beginning of athletic recognition. Athletes who feel they are at the top of their game can apply to become an All-Army candidate and possibly represent the Army while competing against teams in all branches of the service.

Fort Benning conducts screening tests for some sports in order to determine who will be able to try out for the All-Army team. Anyone interested can attend the screenings.

At Fort Benning, intramural teams are open to anyone no matter how well they know the game or how well they play.

Mountain Ranger Run

Dahlonega gears up for yearly race

5th Ranger Training Battalion

The Officers' Association with volunteers from the 5th Ranger Training Battalion at Camp Frank D. Merrill in Dahlonega, Ga., are hosting the sixth annual Mountain Rangers Run May 21.

Team competition this year is in five-person teams, with the winning team receiving limited edition, numbered Mountain Ranger Coins in addition to trophies.

The 5th Ranger Training Battalion will be defending its undefeated winning record in the team event. Unit entry forms are available from Civil Affairs.

Limited billeting is available on a first-come, first-served basis. Units entering 30 or more runners can have their race T-shirts customized with their unit logo. Contact the Officers' Association for more information.

The race will start and finish on the main campus of North Georgia College in Dahlonega. The race is a nationally certified 10K course and is sanctioned by the U.S. Track and Field Association.

Awards will be given to the top male and female winners as well as the top three runners in each age group. Every runner will receive a T-shirt showing the skyline of Dahlonega.

Money raised by the run will be donated to the American Red Cross. The last race raised more than $2,300 to support the community in preventing, preparing for and coping with emergencies of all kinds.

These services include collection of lifesaving blood, training people in cardiopulmonary resuscitation, first aid and water safety and providing emergency shelter, food and clothing to local disaster victims.

Between 250 to 500 runners from the surrounding counties as well as from out of state are expected to participate.

Also new this year is the participation in the 1994 Run and See Georgia Grand Prix program, a series of more than 70 races throughout the state that gets its more than 28,000 runners to travel around the state participating in quality running events while seeing tourist attractions and cities in Georgia.

Junior bass championship offers $10,000 scholarship

Plano Molding Company

BIXBY, Okla. — Plano Molding and Bassin' magazine recently announced the 1994 introduction of the Plano Big Bass Junior Championship.

In this nationwide competition, young anglers 10 through 17 years old can fish anytime, anywhere with the chance of winning $10,000.

After paying the one-time $5 entry fee, each angler is provided a contestant's packet, which includes a Big Bass Certification Form, rules and regulations and minimum weights for each state. Competitors simply fish in their favorite lake, river, stream or pond, trying to catch and certify a bass that exceeds the minimum weight requirements.

Anglers certify the catch of a largemouth bass by recording the information on a Big Bass Certification Form and mailing it, along with a photograph of the catch. Instant-winner prizes will be awarded to everyone entering a bass.

Those who catch and certify the heaviest largemouth bass among the competitors in each of the 49 participating states (Alaska, D.C., U.S. possessions and territories excluded) before the Aug. 15 deadline receive $250 state championship prizes.

State winners in the Big Bass World Championship (an identical program for adults) will represent the junior champions from their respective states at the 1994 finals, to be Nov. 4 to 5 at Grenelefe Resort near Orlando, Fla.

The world champion wins a $100,000 prize and a $10,000 college scholarship for the junior championship state winner.

Title sponsor of the Big Bass Junior Championship is Plano Molding, manufacturer of fishing-tackle storage systems for more than 40 years.

The competition is organized and managed by Bassin', official magazine for the weekend bass angler.

To obtain an entry form, write to: Big Bass Junior Championship, 15115 S. 76th E. Ave., Bixby, Okla. 74008, or call (800) 883-2292.

Uniforms that change in the works

Army News Service

Army researchers are developing the ultimate in camouflage uniforms — ones that change color to match the background environment.

Efforts continue at the U.S. Army Natick Research, Development and Engineering Center, Natick, Mass., to improve this type of camouflage capability. The challenge is to produce a "background adaptive," or "chameleon-like," uniform that would allow soldiers to blend in with their surroundings at all times.

Camouflage designs the Army now uses are based on seasonal averages of geographic regions in which soldiers may be expected to conduct operations. The Integrated Camouflage Protection Team at Natick is looking at several far-term technologies to improve camouflage properties of soldiers' clothing.

The use of commercially available heat- and light-sensitive colorants is being studied, and both types offer limited adaptive camouflage properties. Uniforms using these materials could adapt from day to night camouflage or to subtle terrain changes. Though these technologies have limited applications in novelty items, their use in the military requires further study.

The use of electrochromatic colorants is also undergoing study. Ideally, miniaturized spectrophotometers would gather information from surrounding terrain. Then, the data would then be processed through a matrix effect, sending electrical signals and translating the information into a specific color system. A spectrographic image of the soldier's background would then appear on the uniform creating the desired camouflage effect.

Dynamic visual camouflage is a biotechnological approach that uses active proteins to continually change colors to match the surroundings. Technically, DVC is the transfer of colored light through receptors connected to conductive polymers for electronic signalling.

The two main objectives of the DVC project are to make the technology flexible enough for use in clothing, and to make the color changes quickly and effectively.

Bradley Leaders Course students complete preparations for firing at Carmouche Range.

Bradley leaders

Course teaches sergeants and above how to command crews

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

A dust-covered Bradley Fighting Vehicle sits quietly on the cement baseline of Fort Benning's Carmouche Range.

To an observer, there is no indication of the frenzied instructions being given inside the turret, just the sudden flash of a round being fired and the startling boom that breaks the silence.

Inside the vehicle, the Bradley commander makes adjustments using the fire commands he has learned. The gunner fires again; then they wait for the grader's comments.

This Bradley crew, live-firing the turret weapons systems for the first time, is made up of soldiers attending the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment's Bradley Leaders Course.

The six-week course is designed to train promotable sergeants through lieutenant colonels to command Bradleys at platoon, company or battalion levels, said Sgt. 1st Class Stillman B. Maxwell, the Leaders Course branch chief.

"We take them from no knowledge of the Bradley through the operation, maintenance and firing of the weapons systems," Maxwell said.

In the first phase of the course, students learn to perform maintenance on the hull of the vehicle and to drive and perform swim operations on the Bradley.

In the second phase, they learn to perform maintenance on the turret and operate the controls and weapons of the vehicle.

Phase three is made up of gunnery tables one through seven, Bradley firing ranges where students learn the full operation of the vehicle and perform both day- and night-fire exercises in a realistic threat environment.

The fourth phase covers tactics and how to employ the Bradley tactically in both the offense and the defense.

Much of the tactical and gunnery training is done on the "SIMNET," a computer simulation that puts the driver, gunner and commander in a computer simulation of a Bradley, Maxwell said.

"It allows you to look left and right and practice platoon maneuvers like the bounding overwatch and wedge formation," he said.

In the SIMNET, crews can play out scenarios against an opposing force.

"You can have three platoons out there going against a Soviet motorized rifle regiment, and it's your job, as a company, to engage and fight a battle with these guys; you have to work together to make the operation work," Maxwell said.

Staff Sgt. Leeroy C. Bennett Jr., who came to the course from the 4th Infantry Division at Fort Carson, Colo., said he found it to be very informative.

"Now that I have the hands-on experience, I will know how to give commands when I get in a Bradley," he said.

"The subject matter for the course definitely covered what needs to be covered," said Capt. William Michaud, another Leaders Course student.

"I feel like I will be well prepared when I get to (my next duty station)."

world war II

Fifty years ago this week...

The Allied forces on Anzio relied on heavy artillery support and held off a strong German attack spearheaded by the 26th Panzer and 29th Panzer grenadier divisions.

The successful defense convinced German Field Marshal Albrecht Kesselring that his forces would not be able to break the Allied hold of the beachhead.

As such, the Germans pulled back and the fighting on the front stabilized with neither side planning any significant actions in the area for the time being.

❑ Elsewhere in Italy, Indian and New Zealand units launched several unsuccessful attacks against enemy positions in the hills north of Cassino, in the face of overwhelming fire from the well-coordinated German resistance.

❑ In the Pacific Theater, a U.S. naval task force, consisting of nine carriers, six battleships, and a wealth of cruisers and destroyers, completed a massive two-day attack on the Japanese base on Truk in the Caroline Islands.

The effort successfully produced considerable enemy losses, including 19 ships and 140,000 tons of shipping, as well as more than 200 planes at the relatively low cost of 30 American planes.

❑ On the Eastern Front, the Soviets drove farther on the Second Baltic Front, taking Shimsk, Kholm and Soltsky, forcing the Germans to abandon their positions in Krivoy Rog, while also capturing Strugi Krasnyye and Dno, and Rogachev in the northern and central sectors, respectively.

❑ In the foreign world of diplomatic affairs, Joseph Stalin laid to rest those sneaky Western suspicions by giving heartfelt assurances that his Russia would not expand into central or western Europe.

❑ Fort Benning officials received word that 2,600 coastal artillery officers had been named to attend an eight-week officers' special basic course.

Army, Navy, Marines official songs have varied histories

By F. Peter Wigginton
American Forces Information Service

It took a half century before the Army rolled out its official song, which is based on "The Caisson Song," composed by Brig. Gen. Edmund L. "Snitz" Gruber (1879-1941)

The Army's official song was once used by the Hoover Vacuum Cleaner Company as part of its radio advertising campaign. The Navy's official marching song was launched the day Navy's football team beat Army the first time in six years. "The Marines' Hymn" was taken from an opera. And the Air Force song was rejected continuously until it won a best-entry cash award from a civilian magazine.

Service historians and Library of Congress archivists have uncovered these and other little-known stories about official service songs, hymns and marches.

For example, it took a half century before the Army rolled out its official song, which is based on "The Caisson Song," composed by Brig. Gen. Edmund L. "Snitz" Gruber (1879-1941).

Gruber, an artillery officer whose relative, Franz, composed "Silent Night," was a lieutenant stationed with the 2nd Battalion, 5th Field Artillery, at Fort Stotsenburg in the Philippines. After dinner one evening in March 1908, while waiting for the 1st Battalion to relieve them, six young lieutenants — including William Bryden and Robert Danford — gathered in Gruber's thatch hut and decided they needed a song for the field artillery.

Danford, who retired as a major general, recalled, "A guitar was produced and tuned and — in what seemed to us but a few moments — as if suddenly inspired, Snitz fingered the melody of the now famous song. Danford and Bryden helped complete the lyrics.

After their arrival, Gruber taught the song to officers of the 1st Battalion. Wrote Danford: "A few evenings later at the post reception for the new unit and adieu to the old, 'The Caisson Song' was given its first public rendition. Its popularity was instantaneous, and almost in no time all six of the regiments then composing the U.S. Field Artillery adopted it.

Gruber got the idea for the song during a difficult march across the Zambales Mountains the previous year. He said he led a small detachment to select a route. From the top of a hill watching the main body approach, Gruber overheard a section chief call to his drivers, "Come on! Keep 'em rolling!"

During the last days of World War I, senior artillery leaders wanted an official marching song. An artillery officer, who did not know Gruber and thought "The Caisson Song" dated back to the Civil War, gave the piece to noted composer and bandmaster John Philip Sousa (1854-1932) and asked him to fix it up.

Sousa incorporated Gruber's piece into his composition, which he titled "The U.S. Field Artillery March" — a few beginning measures being his own and the balance from Gruber. The song became a blockbuster record during World War I, selling about 750,000 copies. Gruber heard of it and asked Sousa, "How about some money, since I wrote the song?" Embarrassed, the innocent Sousa made certain Gruber got his royalties.

However, because the march was never copyrighted, many stole the song. For example, during the early 1940s, the Hoover Vacuum Cleaner Co. changed the words to "for it beats as it sweeps as it cleans" and used the melody for its radio advertising.

In 1948, the Army conducted a nationwide contest to come up with its own official song. None of the five winners achieved any notable popularity. In 1952, the secretary of the Army appealed to the music industry for a composition. Composers submitted an avalanche of more than 800 songs.

No submission sparkled enough to be accepted. So a soldier music adviser in the Special Services Division of the Adjutant General's Office was asked to try his hand at it. As a result H.W. Arberg adapted "The Caisson Song" to become the official U.S. Army song, "The Army Goes Rolling Along." The service copyrighted the piece in 1956.

Lt. Charles A. Zimmerman (1862-1916), conductor of the Naval Academy band, composed "Anchors Aweigh." The piece, with words added by Midshipman Albert Hart Miles, premiered December 1906 when Navy won its first football game over Army in six years. Zimmerman, who wrote a march for each graduating class, dedicated this piece to the Class of 1907.

The original march, which over the years has gone through several revisions, had two minutes of introduction before the principal theme began.

The Navy's official hymn, "Eternal Father," dates back to 1861. Surviving a furious storm in the Mediterranean inspired the Rev. William Whiting, a Church of England clergyman and schoolmaster, to write the words to "Eternal Father" in 1860.

The following year, the Rev. John Dykes, another English clergyman, adapted the words to music he had composed with the title "Melita," the ancient name for the Mediterranean island of Malta.

In 1879, when he was a lieutenant commander stationed at the Naval Academy in charge of the midshipmen's choir, Rear Adm. Charles Jackson Train inaugurated the practice of concluding each Sunday's service with the singing of the hymn. Verses over the years have varied to reflect a changing culture and the invention of the automobile and airplane.

A great deal of confusion surrounded the Marines' Hymn until John Philip Sousa — then conductor of the Marine Corps Band — dug up some answers. Popular opinion had assumed the hymn had existed since the time the Marine band started in 1797. Sousa determined it came into being about 1867.

Sousa was a great one for research. Before foreign diplomats visited Washington, he would go to the Library of Congress in search of the anthems and music of the guests' country so he could arrange the pieces for the corps' band. During one such study, he researched the Marines' hymn because its origin was uncertain.

He discovered that "the melody of the 'Halls of Montezuma' is taken from [Jacques] Offenbach's comic opera, 'Genevieve de Brabant,' wherein two police officers talk about protecting the queen." The wife of a band member at the time questioned this, since she said she heard her grandmother singing the same tune in Spain during her childhood.

Nevertheless, there is no adequate proof that Offenbach adopted the folk song into his opera. It is just as likely the popular opera spread to Spain as it did to this country.

Verses have varied over the years. Each time they fought a war or were involved in some other activity, such as guarding coal for the Navy, the Marines changed the lines to commemorate that engagement. Today, the three-verse ballad starts with Mexico and winds up in heaven, where it is presumed all good Marines go when they die.

Sousa, of course, also wrote "Semper Fidelis," one of the world's most stirring marches.

Officer Candidate School honors its 'best' infantry graduate

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

The most outstanding infantry officer graduate of Officer Candidate School was honored in the 1994 Patterson Award ceremony Feb. 11 in Infantry Hall's Marshall Auditorium.

Second Lt. David W. Whitmire, who was the distinguished honor graduate of his OCS class and the distinguished leadership graduate of his Infantry Officer Basic Course, was this year's recipient.

The award, based on the qualities of leadership, academic effectiveness, aptitude and character, is named for Robert P. Patterson, whose battlefield exploits while serving as an Army captain in World War I earned him the Distinguished Service Cross, Silver Star and Purple Heart.

Patterson served as a judge of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and as secretary of War under President Harry Truman. When he died in 1952, a trust for the award was established with contributions from several friends.

"This year's award winner, second lieutenant David Whitmire, personifies the tenacity and gallantry of the namesake of this award," said Lt. Col. Donald B. Chung, commander of the 3rd Battalion (OCS), 11th Infantry Regiment, at the ceremony.

"Whitmire has been singled out as the best," said Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, post commanding general.

"He is a tough, competitive leader who is willing to stand up and be counted, (who is) willing to be out front (and) is willing to say 'Follow me.' "

Whitmire, 28, is the 42nd recipient of the Patterson Award. He graduated from OCS last February and is currently serving as a rifle platoon leader with the 3rd Battalion, 7th Infantry Regiment, 24th Infantry Division, at Fort Stewart, Ga. His platoon accompanied him to Fort Benning to attend the ceremony.

Whitmire joined the Army at age 17 and spent 10 years working his way up from private to sergeant first class before attending OCS.

The personal significance of winning this award, he said, is that it allows him to give something back to the noncommissioned officer corps and to the Army.

Whitmire served previously with the 10th Special Forces Group (Airborne) at Fort Devens, Mass.; the 1st Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, at Hunter Army Airfield, Ga.; and the 509th Parachute Infantry Regiment at Fort Rucker, Ala.

His awards and decorations include the Meritorious Service Medal, Army Commendation Medal, Army Achievement Medal, Humanitarian Service Medal and Southwest Asia Service Medal.

He holds a Ranger Tab, Special Forces Tab, Master Parachutist Badge, Combat Diver Badge, Expert Infantryman Badge, Pathfinder Badge and Air Assault Badge.

Whitmire, his wife, Mary, and their son, Alexander, reside in Savannah, Ga.

community care

By Ken Franklin
Martin Army Community Hospital

Q: I seem to be having much more trouble getting through to my clinic lately. The phones are busy, and appointments are harder to get. What's the deal?

A: The deal is winter. Every hospital, military and civilian, goes through this problem every winter.

Despite the best efforts of medical staffs, patient workloads, admissions and waiting times all get worse during the winter months.

At Fort Benning in 1994, several special factors have contributed to the problem:

• The flu season. This winter's cold and flu season is notably worse than average. People, including medical staffs, are getting sick more often, with more complications and for longer periods of time.

• The weather. This is the coldest winter in recent memory for Columbus. In an area where people don't expect the cold, preparations may be lacking, and the body's immune system suffers as a result.

• The drawdown. The medical system, as part of the military, has gone down by more than 10 percent; but, Martin Army's patient population has held steady.

Early retirees remain part of the hospital's responsibility. The result is that the military health-care system has lost the small "slack" it could call on in years past.

Despite these issues, patients deserve top-quality care. The way to get it is simple. State your needs and worries up front.

Tell the person on the phone, or at the desk, whether you want to leave a message for the doctor, get a same-day appointment or a routine appointment.

This allows the staff to sort out the requests and take care of as many people as possible.

Do you have a question about family care at Fort Benning? Send it to Community Care Corner, Martin Army Community Hospital, Attn: HSXB-F, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905-6100.

crime watch

Military Police Activity

The following entries are from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from Jan. 26 to Feb. 1. Such entries may be incomplete and do not determine the guilt or innocence of any person.

This week's hot topic concerns curfew violations. U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 210-5 (Garrison Regulations) requires that all family members under the age of 18 to be in their quarters from 10 p.m. to 5 a.m. unless accompanied by a parent or guardian.

Exceptions are made for certain social functions, emergencies or other occasions deemed appropriate by the parent or guardian.

Family members found in violation of the curfew will be escorted to the Military Police station.

The sponsor will be notified and will be required to escort the family member from the Military Police station back to quarters.

A repeat in curfew violations is evidence of misconduct and may be cause for the family to be ejected from family housing. The post curfew also applies to nonfamily member juveniles.

The Military Police will take all necessary action to identify these juveniles and ensure that they are removed from post.

• A retired sergeant first class was charged with dumping, depositing or littering after being observed dumping yard debris on post.

• A private first class was charged by civil authorities for loitering after he interfered with police officers during an accident investigation.

• A civilian was charged with carrying a concealed weapon after a pistol was found in his vehicle at a Military Police checkpoint.

• A private was charged with larceny by false pretense after he wrongfully signed for meals at a dining facility while receiving separate rations.

• This week's booby prize goes to the sergeant first class who purchased a boat for $500; then he later reported it stolen. The sergeant first class then altered the sales receipt to show that he paid $1,200 for the boat and submitted a claim against the U.S. government. The sergeant was charged with making and presenting a false claim.

Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5223 or the "Crime in Progress" line at 545-2222.

Whole grains contribute to diet

General Mills

Most of the attention to whole grains is focused on the fiber provided by the bran portion of grain.

Beyond bran, however, whole-grain foods contribute positively to the diet in many other ways as well, said Karen Wilder, a registered dietitian.

Currently being studied extensively are the antioxidant nutrients found in whole grains.

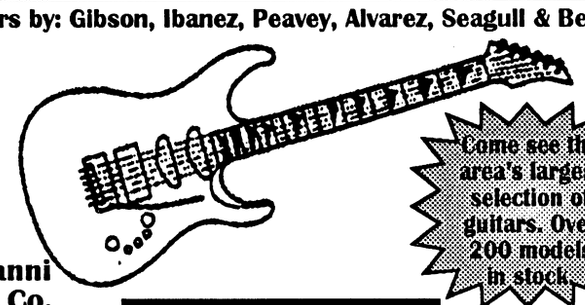
They include selenium, vitamin E, beta carotene and, to a lesser extent, vitamin C.

Antioxidants are believed to protect against cell damage caused by free radicals. This term, free radicals, refers to chemical compounds that may play a role in causing or promoting certain diseases, such as cancer, heart disease and cataracts.

Whole grains also are important sources of several of the B vitamins, which break down protein, carbohydrates and fat for effective use by the body.

In fact, B-complex vitamins are necessary for almost every reaction in every cell of the body.

Among minerals found in whole grains is iron, well known for its role in helping to build and maintain healthy blood.



Trace minerals supplied by whole grains, such as zinc, copper and magnesium, also are essential for normal growth and health.

Whole grains also provide proteins, although they are considered incomplete proteins, which means that certain essential amino acids are missing.

However, when the proteins of whole grains and vegetables are combined, they become complete proteins comparable in quality to those from animal sources.

Finally, whole grains do indeed provide fat, which is often a surprise to the label reader. However, it is a small amount of fat and is primarily of the unsaturated types, Wilder said.

Blacks have served with valor

Fought for centuries in America before officially serving with white soldiers

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

Black soldiers fought in every major American conflict with distinction and valor for centuries before they were allowed to serve side by side with white soldiers in the same units.

Pre-American Revolution

Crispus Attucks was one of first black men to lay down his life for the freedom of this nation.

During the Boston Massacre, which was one of the key pivotal events leading up to the American Revolution, Attucks lost his life along with four other colonists.

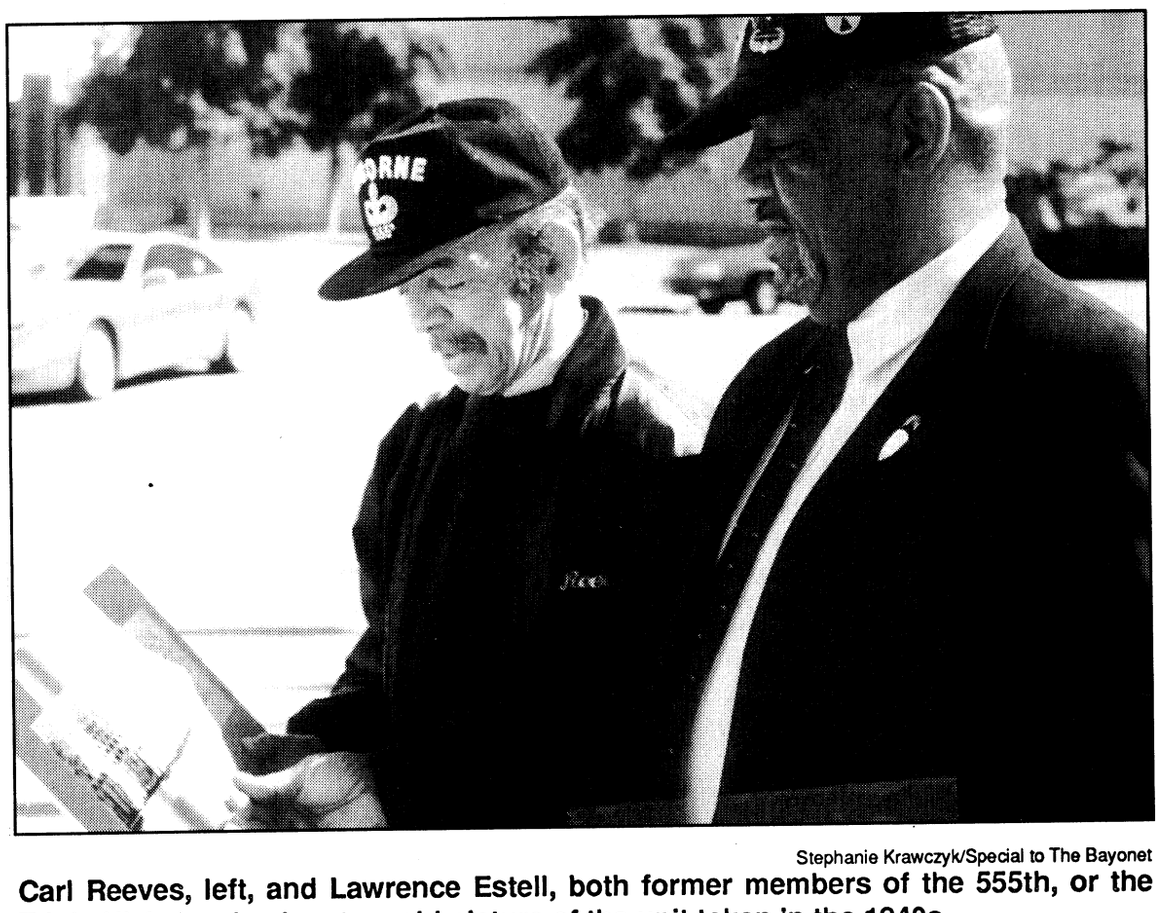
On that snowy March night in the Boston Commons, a conflict between colonists and British soldiers quickly escalated from a snowball being thrown to bullets flying. In the end, five colonists lay dead.

John Adams would later describe one of the dead (Attucks), who was involved in the massacre.

"He undertook to be the hero of the night," Adams said, and "had hardiness enough to fall upon the (British soldier), and with one hand took hold of the bayonet and with the other knocked the man down."

A monument to Attucks reads, "On that night, the foundation of American independence was laid."

Ironically, during the early years of this nation, before independence was declared, war conditions were too dire to segregate men in the field.



However, in May 1775, black soldiers were found to be "inconsistent with the principles" of the country and they were excluded from enlisting in the Army. But when the Army had difficulty filling up the ranks with white soldiers, it allowed blacks to fill the places of men who could buy their way out of military service.

Black American soldiers fought and died at Concord bridge, Lexington and as members of Ethan Allen's Green Mountain Boys when they captured Fort Ticonderoga.

Civil War

During the early days of the Civil War, President Abraham Lincoln urged blacks to join the cause of the North by enlisting in the Union Army.

Former slave Frederick Douglass also helped the cause by saying, "Once let the black man get upon his person the brass letters 'US,' let him get an eagle on his button and a musket on his shoulder and bullets in his pockets and there is no power on earth which can deny that he has earned the right to citizenship in the United States."

Stephanie Krawczyk/Special to The Bayonet

Carl Reeves, left, and Lawrence Estell, both former members of the 555th, or the Triple Nickels, check out an old picture of the unit taken in the 1940s.

> "... there is no power on earth which can deny that (the black man) has earned the right to citizenship in the United States."
> — Frederick Douglass
> Former slave

As a result, black units were formed in New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Illinois, Ohio, Louisiana and Virginia making up a force 190,000 strong, which was 10 percent of the Union Army. Aside from the notable service of blacks in traditional Civil War units, they also served as guerrilla fighters, spies and scouts. By war's end, 23 blacks had earned the Medal of Honor.

Late 1800s

Undaunted by barriers placed on them during the Civil War, black soldiers continued to valiantly serve in the U.S. military. In the late 1800s, the focus of the military turned to the frontier and blacks filled the ranks of four units — two cavalry and two infantry — to patrol Texas and the Southwest.

The group quickly became known as the Buffalo Soldiers as they fought in the Indian Wars, patrolled the Mexican border and escorted settlers to the West. They fought side by side with then Col. Theodore Roosevelt at San Juan Hill and during their service earned 12 Medals of Honor.

World War I

World War I found black soldiers enlisting in large numbers to units that were mainly used as a labor force both in Europe and the United States.

An exception to the rule was the 369th U.S. Infantry Regiment. The famous Harlem Hellfighters were formed from the 15th New York Regiment in 1916. The group drilled in a dance hall and Central Park using broomsticks and wooden rifles as practice weapons.

The group arrived in France in December 1917 still with its New York State designation. After serving two months as laborers, the group was sent to serve with French units and as the officially designated 369th.

The Hellfighters learned the use of French weapons and in April 1918 went into combat with the 16th French Division.

Members of the 369th began to distinguish themselves almost immediately. They fought in the second battle of the Marne; and, in the Champagne sector, they remained on the front lines for 191 consecutive days without retreating an inch or surrendering a prisoner. They captured the village of Sechault and were also the first Allied unit to reach the banks of the Rhine in 1918 during the closing days of the war.

The unit emerged from the trenches having earned numerous awards including several Distinguished Service Crosses. Pvt. Henry Johnson was the first American soldier to receive one of France's highest decorations — the Croix de Guerre. The French government also bestowed the same honor on the 369th when the commander of the French 161st Division pinned the Croix de Guerre with a silver star onto the unit colors in December 1918.

Triple Nickels

Another milestone in black military history came in 1944 at Fort Benning with the formation of the all-black 555th Parachute Infantry Company, or the Triple Nickels. Although the unit never saw action in World War II, which was then raging overseas, it did succeed in writing a unique chapter of military history.

The unit was originally formed as a company, but the large number of volunteers caused it to be redesignated as a battalion in late 1944.

Parent Academy

registration still under way at schools

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet ©

Response to the upcoming Parent Academy has been tremendous, Fort Benning Schools officials said, but there are still a few seats available for the two-part weekend seminar scheduled for March 11 and 12 at Faith Middle School.

"At this time we are still accepting registrations, and we would encourage any Fort Benning parents who are interested in participating to visit one of our registration sites," said Dr. Beth Middlemiss, director of staff development and a member of the steering committee for the Parent Academy.

This weekend parenting seminar will feature nationally recognized lecturer Dr. Barbara Coloroso as well as local educators and community leaders.

The seminar format will include one main lecture Friday evening following a spaghetti supper at Faith Middle School. Saturday's format will feature three sessions covering a variety of parenting topics.

Participants may choose from topics including parenting techniques for children of various ages, an inside look at some special programs in the schools such as computer labs and the Starlab planetarium, ways to enhance creativity in children, standardized test score interpretation and how parents can encourage good homework habits.

According to parent volunteers helping with registration, "Focus on Children" sessions for three broad age groups is very popular.

"Everyone wants to hear the guest speaker," said Yolie Coronado.

Another appealing session is "Gangs and their Influence on Youngsters," said Frances Ortega.

"People want to sign up for this so they can learn how to avoid problems before they begin," said Ortega as she noted the moderators for this session would be the Gang Task Force of the Columbus Police Department.

All Fort Benning military and civilian personnel are eligible to attend the Parent Academy. There is no charge for the academy and child care is provided.

To register, go to any school from 8:15 to 9:15 a.m. or to the school administration building from 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

A waiting list will be established after all available seats are filled, Middlemiss said. For more information, call 545-2500.

The Parent Academy is sponsored by the Fort Benning Schools, the Enlisted Wives' Club, the Officers' Wives' Club, the Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army, Columbus Bank and Trust, Daughters of the United States Army, First Union Bank and TIC Federal Credit Union.

Enrollees to pay more for VIP health insurance

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

New enrollees in the U.S. VIP health insurance program will have to meet a higher deductible this year, while current enrollees will pay 25 percent higher premiums.

U.S. VIP is the conversion insurance program for separated service members and certain family members who lose eligibility for military care. The Department of Defense negotiated with Mutual of Omaha to provide U.S. VIP, which offers comprehensive coverage with costs borne by the polic holders.

By congressional direction, [illegible] VIP will end Sept. 30. No new policy will be written after that date, but policies will remain in full effect until they expire. DoD will replace U.S. VIP with insurance administered through the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services.

Those eligible to enroll in U.S. VIP include separating members, their families, former spouses and children reaching age 21, or 23 if students. Premium rates for policies written after Oct. 1 remain the same as in the 1992 to 1993 brochure. However, the deductible for new policies has increased from $250 to $500.

People who purchased their policies before Oct. 1 will continue to have a $250 deductible. However, their premiums have increased by 25 percent. The increased costs are based on Mutual of Omaha's claims experience and are allowable under DoD's agreement with the company.

U.S. VIP insurance is now available to most beneficiaries for up to 18 months instead of one year. Children losing eligibility for military medical benefits because they reach the age limit will be able to renew for up to 24 months. Unremarried former spouses of members or former members of the armed forces can also renew for up to 24 months.

Military personnel offices should have both the 1992-93 (blue) brochure and the 1993-94 (green) brochure outlining the premiums. For full program nformation, call Mutual of Omaha at (402) 342-7600, or write to: Mutual of Omaha (Home Office), U.S. VIP Department, Mutual of Omaha Plaza, Omaha, Neb. 68175.

The Continued Health Care Benefit Program will replace U.S. VIP Oct. 1. Enrollees will be entitled to benefits of standard CHAMPUS and will use existing provider and claims processing networks for care. Former active duty members and their dependents will pay co-payments and deductibles at the same CHAMPUS rates as active duty dependents, while others will pay the same as retirees.

Congress required that the new program not charge premiums exceeding those for a comparable federal civilian health insurance program, plus 10 percent for administration. Enrollees will pay at least market rates for insurance, but they will not be rejected on the basis of poor health.

DoD health officials said they will provide more information about the new plan as it becomes available.

school lunch

The lunch at Fort Benning schools for next week is as follows:

Monday — School holiday.

Tuesday — Dinosaur-shaped chicken nuggets, green beans, carrots, whole wheat rolls, orange half and milk.

Wednesday — Beef stew with carrots and potatoes, pear salad on lettuce, oatmeal cookie, corn muffin and milk.

Thursday — Pizza with cheese, lettuce and tomato salad, whole kernel corn, applesauce and milk.

Feb. 25 — Roasted turkey, steamed rice, broccoli, mixed fruit, roll and milk.

Kelley Hill gets new sports bar

Facility features big screen TV, dance floor

The Kelley Hill Recreation Center unveiled its newest addition to the center Feb. 10 — the Sledgehammer Sports Bar.

Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White was on hand to officially open the establishment at a ribbon-cutting ceremony, inviting everyone to come and see what the Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers program had put together in a short period of time.

"The soldiers on Kelley Hill often feel like they have been ignored, and I vowed some time ago that I would fix that," White said. "You are here today because of a great staff. A lot of dedicated people have taken the challenge to fix Kelley Hill; this is step one. There are other things in the works."

The sports bar came about through the input of soldiers on Kelley Hill and the BOSS Council, which is made up of enlisted soldiers throughout Fort Benning.

"Members of the BOSS Council from each major unit on Fort Benning meet on a regular basis and come up with things they want to do," said John Bush, chief of Community of Operations Division of the Directorate of Community Activities.

"It ensures that single soldier gets a say in what they want on Fort Benning, and this is what they wanted on Kelley Hill."

With the renovation of the recreation center still under way at approximately $100,000, the cost of the sports bar was fairly cheap at $35,000, said Paul Lawrence, a recreation assistant at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center.

The bar features a fully stocked bar and short order grill along with a big screen television with cable service and a dance floor.

The bar will be able to seat approximately 90 people.

"We don't have much of anything up here, said Pvt. 2 Tiffany Johnson of the 519th Personnel Services Company, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division.

"For the soldiers who live in the barracks, this will give them a place to go and enjoy themselves. I think it's a step in the right direction as far as improvements go on Kelley Hill."

BLACKS: Military history valorous

The 555th underwent rigorous airborne training in anticipation of being sent to fight in World War II. But the war was reaching it's end and the unit was ordered to drawdown in size and moved to Pendelton Air Force Base, Ore., to participate in Operation Firefly.

The Triple Nickels had a dual mission during the operation. One was to become the Army's only airborne firefighters, also known as smoke jumpers, and battle forest fires in Oregon and California.

Their second mission was to intercept and dispose of incendiary balloons launched by the Japanese. The devices landed in areas of the Pacific Northwest causing fires and explosions.

Carl Reeves, a Fort Benning retiree and Columbus resident, was an original member of the Triple Nickels and a veteran smoke jumper.

One crucial reason to extinguish any fires caused by the balloons, according to Reeves, was so the Japanese wouldn't realize they were actually reaching American soil. "If they found out they were working good," said Reeves, "they could have sent biologically harmful balloons over here."

Reeves also participated in another part of airborne pioneering by the 555th. He was among the first group of soldiers to jump from Army gliders. The jumps were conducted to test the feasibility of the technique for possible use at the impending Normandy invasion.

The initial tests had the troopers ride as passengers as the fragile gliders were snatched up by a C- 46 or 47 plane already in flight and released at a certain altitude. "These were training pilots," laughed Reeves, "(The landing) was alright if he found a good place to land."

At the end of the war in 1945 the 555th was moved to Fort Bragg, N.C., with the 82nd Airborne Division. The division was commanded by Maj. Gen. James M. Gavin, who was ahead of his white peers when it came to the fair treatment of black soldiers.

Gavin brought the 555th to New York City with the rest of the 82nd and, with Carl Reeves carrying the guidon, they marched in the victory parade down Fifth Avenue.

In December of 1947, the Triple Nickel was assigned to the 82nd and designated as 3rd Battalion, 505th Airborne Infantry Regiment.

It was members of the 505th who were selected to become one of the last all black units and the only all black ranger unit. The group fought in the Korean conflict and was the first and last all black unit to jump into combat.

Lawrence Estell was a member of that distinguished group of rangers. He had been a smoke jumper with the triple nickels and readily volunteered when ranger recruiters came looking for volunteers.

The trainees were sent to Fort Benning for nine weeks of ranger training. "It was actually 10 weeks, plus for us," Estell said. Black soldiers were required to train an extra week and had to spend weekends cleaning weapons when white soldiers were out on pass.

On Oct. 6, 1950, the all black 2nd Ranger Company was activated and soon left along with two all white ranger companies for combat in Korea.

Estell and other members of 2nd company were attached to and fought with the 7th Infantry Division. Their single combat jump was into Musan-ni in March of 1951.

Estell received a Bronze Star with a "V" Device and three Purple Hearts for his service with the rangers in Korea and Vietnam.

555th to celebrate 50th anniversary

By Stephanie Krawczyk
Special to The Bayonet ©

The 555th Parachute Infantry Association will have its 50th anniversary reunion this summer at Fort Benning and Columbus.

The reunion will begin Aug. 3 and continue for five days. Events include ceremonies at the Airborne Walk and the National Infantry Museum. The veteran troopers will also be honored guests at a airborne school graduation.

The group has asked Gen. Wayne A. Downing, commander of U.S. Special Operations Command and Maj. Gen. F. A. Gordon, Commander of the Military District of Washington, to be special guests at the event.

Individuals interested in more information about the reunion can contact McClelland Williams, president of Richard W. Williams chapter of the 555th P.I.A. Association, at 689-3146.

The number 100 has always held a certain magic for children and counting to this milestone represents one rite of passage in the journey through childhood.

Students at Stowers School celebrated this number as the doors opened for the 100th day of classes in their new facility Feb. 11.

Each classroom hosted events centering around the number 100. Science, social studies, math and spatial relationships were all topics for Kitty Rice's third-grade students as they built four-sided structures with doors, roofs and windows by using 100 craft sticks.

They used math to plan the number of sticks needed for each side and the roof; the structure style represented their social studies curriculum, and building a standing edifice with proper architectural techniques reflected an aspect of science.

"They come up with some really creative products," said Rice, who has used this exercise in the past.

First-graders carefully constructed a lengthy paper chain of 100 loops; each unit of 10 was represented by a contrasting color so the students could visualize the mathematical concepts of the numbers one, 10 and 100, teacher Miriam Aiken said.

Fann Woody's first-graders practiced counting in unison as they filled a grid with 100 "snowflakes," while third-graders in Laura McDonough's class enjoyed a tasty and colorful lesson in math through candy coated chocolate bits.

Other third-graders in Deborah Dionne's class worked in pairs on building communities with themes of 100 while Carolyn Timmons' fourth-graders combined literature and math in a project where letters of the alphabet were given a numeric value. The students created words that equaled 100.

Helping younger students create placemats containing 100 objects occupied Krystyna Lubelski's fifth- graders as they worked with their younger buddies.

Whether working as a class or individually, Stowers' students incorporated learning while celebrating their new school.

Soldier returns to company as XO

By James Brownlee
2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment

The 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, welcomed a new company executive officer this month. However, this XO was no stranger to the cadre of Company D; he was one of their own.

Second Lt. Tim Versprille, 27 years old, graduated from Officer Candidate School Jan. 27. Before that, he was a one station unit training soldier at Company D. He will act as the company's XO until the end of February, when his Infantry Officer Basic Course begins.

Versprille's transition from civilian to soldier to infantryman to officer candidate to commissioned officer is one to be commended, said Lt. Col. Gary G. Darcy, battalion commander.

Throughout his OSUT training, according to Company D 1st Sgt. Charles A. Steiner Jr., Versprille maintained the level of excellence required to successfully complete the course. Steiner said Versprille remained platoon guide the entire cycle, and he scored a perfect 300 on his Army Physical Fitness Test.

Versprille originally enlisted in the Army for the personal challenge, he said. He got that and then some, he said; but, when he went to OCS, a whole new challenge began.

"Things were really different in OCS," Versprille said. I had to put myself in a whole new state of mind, both mentally and physically. In our first week, we were doing five-mile runs, compared to only one five-mile run at the end of OSUT."

Versprille said the main things he learned at OCS included handling stress related to daily in-ranks inspections, personal and platoon time management and adjusting to lack of sleep. He said he was most comfortable in paying attention to detail.

"I learned to do that at (2nd Bn., 54th Inf. Regt.) and now it's second nature to me," he said.

After serving in many leadership positions in both OSUT and OCS, he said he favored a proactive leadership style.

"Seeing that I have a great rapport already built with the cadre, it's been easy for me to carry out my duties as a second lieutenant."

— Tim Versprille
2nd Bn., 54th Inf. Regt.

"I like to lead by example," he said, "using the input and knowledge of those around me and going on from there." Versprille said he was glad of the chance to return to 2nd Bn., 54th Inf. Regt.

"This gave me a chance to get my feet wet, so to speak, in friendly waters," he said. "Seeing that I have a great rapport already built with the cadre, it's been easy for me to carry out my duties as a second lieutenant. Now I have a chance to learn the paperwork and the correct channels to go through when things need to be done."

"He led the company the whole way," Steiner said. "He was always on top of things. He'll do a fine job as an officer."

Versprille graduated from OCS as the distinguished military graduate for Class 1-94. He said his goals are to obtain his master's degree in education, have a family and become a battalion commander.

Cub Scouts conduct pinewood derby

By Lee Oliver
Cub Scouts, Pack 271

Cub Scout Pack 271 of E.A. White School conducted its inaugural pinewood derby on a brand new track at the school Jan. 29.

Working with mothers and fathers, 37 Cub Scouts constructed race cars from small wooden blocks of pine wood and then competed for both speed and looks in this annual pack event.

The big winner of the day was Jonathan Rutledge, a third-grader, who was awarded the first-place trophy and winner's jersey.

Second- and third-place trophies were awarded in a close contest with Andy Morrison coming in second followed by Chris Bailey, both third-grade students. Jonathan Pignato, a fifth-grader, closed out the top four finishers.

Competitors for best in show for car design and paint scheme were also judged. Johnny Miller, second grade, had the best paint design, and Dane Steele, first grade, developed the best car design.

Presidents Day

Washington had his faults

By Bill Richardson
11th Infantry Regiment

Reflections

Call me "old fashioned" or just "older," but I cannot adjust to this term "Presidents Day" weekend.

When I was a school child in Texas and Louisiana in the 1960s, we did not have a school day off in February. Later, after I joined the Army in the 1970s, we did get a three-day weekend in February, and we called it "Washington's Birthday."

Its greatest significance to us young soldiers was that this weekend was our last federally recognized three-day weekend until late May (Memorial Day).

The government changed the holiday's title to "Presidents Day." Maybe the intent of this change was to be more inclusive of all presidents who have served.

Perhaps we acknowledged the fact that the "father of our country" had his faults, such as owning slaves. This point really causes us to writhe in embarrassment as we recall that February is also Black History Month.

If we set aside "chopping down a cherry tree," "I cannot tell a lie," "he could throw a silver dollar across the Rappahanock River" and "he had a set of wooden false teeth crafted by Paul Revere" stories (and other school child icons of American history), then we can read about a young Virginian.

Washington was an adventurer who became a surveyor exploring the far reaches of the Virginia colony in his teens. As a teen-ager, he nearly died from smallpox on a trip to the West Indies.

In his early 20s, he set out with a small force of colonial militia to build a fort in the wilderness in western Pennsylvania (near present day Pittsburgh).

His actions as a young frontier militia officer indirectly started the first battles of what became known as the French and Indian War. In those campaigns, he distinguished himself through valor and cool-headedness under fire.

An ambitious young hero, he married a wealthy young widow with two children and a great tract of prime farmland in northern Virginia and 150 slaves. His ambition and war record led to his easy election to the house of Burgesses, the colonial equivalent of a state legislature.

If we continue to look at his record of achievements, we recall his involvement with the first Continental Congress, his leadership as commander-in-chief of the Continental Army, his decisive victory at Yorktown and his election as our first president.

As a young man, I saw the cracks in Washington's picture, cracks that innocent school children were not allowed to see. He was a slave owner, and no amount of explanation "in that time and day it was acceptable" can excuse him from this evil. He was rumored to be a womanizer, a scandal we pray was not true but fear it might have been.

Amid these charges, something happened to a middle-aged Washington in his spiritual life. As a general in the Continental Army, he demanded chaplains for the spiritual welfare of his men (and himself). He instituted a day of Thanksgiving — not a feast (there was no surplus of rations), but a day of prayer in thanks to God amid the harvest of winter conditions. He was not a deist, but a Christian and a practicing Anglican.

In private in his later years, he denounced slavery. He did not abolish it. Perhaps he felt powerless to abolish the practice. He did, however, provide in his will that all men and women on his estate who were held in slavery be freed upon the death of his wife. This decree was a start toward public admission of the evil of slavery. This action was a start toward the end of slavery in this young nation.

I believe we should look at the whole picture of Washington — adventure, warrior, ambitious land owner, slave owner, politician, a general, president, sinner in need of God's grace, man changed by God's grace — and see part of America. We may even see part of ourselves.

Until we acknowledge our human condition — sinful, broken (despite secular signs of success) but willing — and accept God's grace and transforming power, we will not walk in Washington's shoes.

We share a common bond and a noble one as we seek with Washington, father of our country, and with other people on this "Presidents Day" weekend," the saving grace of God.

Ramadan is time for study

USAIC Chaplains' Office

During Ramadan and fasting, recreational or free time is given to Qur'anic study and serious reflection on the principles of Al-Islam and how Muslims have managed them in their daily lives.

Believing Muslims do not set aside their study of their religion until Ramadan comes around, but they do give special attention to this duty during this month.

Prayer and reflection should be the forethought throughout the day even as Muslims continue to perform responsibilities to jobs, to homes and to communities.

The following is a daily reading schedule for the A. Yusuf Ali and Marmaduke Pickthall English translations of the Holy Qur'an.

This schedule permits the reading of the entire Qur'an within the month of Ramadan.

Non-Arabic speaking readers can read only the English translation of the Qur'anic script to facilitate the reading of the whole Qur'an thereby omitting all introductions, footnotes and commentaries.

Remember to say these words before each day's reading: "I seek refuge in Allah against the rejected enemy."

'Good Morning America' to go to Hong Kong

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

If it's another network "sweeps" period, "Good Morning America" must be on the road again.

The principal personnel of ABC's weekday program traditionally find their way out of their New York City headquarters at some point during the particularly ratings-conscious months of February, May and November. As the coming week will prove, there's no exception this time.

SPOTLIGHT

Hosts Charles Gibson and Joan Lunden, weatherman Spencer Christian and many of the show's correspondents will be on location in Hong Kong Monday through Friday, presenting reports on various facets of the social, political and economic elements of that city.

The trip comes at an intriguing time in the country's history, since its ownership will revert back to China July 1, 1997, after what will have been 99 years of British rule. In addition to the segments concerning the weightier issues related to that, entertainment critic Joel Siegel will examine the region's movie and music industries, financial correspondent Tyler Mathisen will trace the exchange of goods between America and the Pacific Rim, science reporter Michael Guillen will probe fung shui — a revered Chinese spiritualism believed to be a major influence on fate — and Steve Fox will profile legends, professions and unusual sights along the back roads of the area.

Charles Gibson and Joan Lunden

"We've known that we were going to do this for a long time," Lunden said about this week's event, which marks a return to Hong Kong for her. "When I was in World Campus Afloat, that was one of my stops, on a New Year's Eve. Of course, we went in and tried to shop 'til we dropped, since that's what Hong Kong is famous for."

What: 'Good Morning America'
When: Monday through Friday on ABC

Actually, last week, Lunden went over a day earlier than most of her comrades to work on a segment about that shopping syndrome.

"When you get over there," she said, "everything is available, but you have to have the knowledge as to what are the good buys, what are the rip-offs and what's inferior or fake. Suzy Gershman is a shopping expert we've used on a couple of pieces on the show, and she's meeting with me over there to do that story. Once Charlie and Spencer get there, we're all going to go and get fitted for custom suits; by the end of the week, we'll have our garments and we'll see how they look. Since those are the kinds of things that everybody does over there, we'll make sure to do them, too. We're definitely going to be looking for goodies."

In that same spirit of fun, Lunden reveals that she has initiated a competition: "I have personally challenged Charlie Gibson to a karaoke contest. He says he's not going to do it, but I said, 'Wait a minute. I challenged you to bungee jump (during last spring's trek to Australia and New Zealand), and I now challenge you to karaoke.' "

Conference unveils new technologies for soldiers

By Caejar A. Cox
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Individual Combatant Modeling and Simulation Symposium 1994, hosted by the U.S. Army Infantry School, was conducted Tuesday through Thursday at the Land Warrior Test Bed simulation facility on Way Street. New, warfighting simulations based on virtual reality and real field training was shown for the first time. Watch "Fort Benning Today" for highlights and to see how individual soldiers will be trained in the future.

The Officer Candidate School hosted the Patterson Award ceremony Feb. 11. This year's winner, 2nd Lt. David Whitmire, was presented with various awards by Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, commanding general. Watch "Fort Benning Today" to see highlights of the event.

USAIC-TV Schedule
Fort Benning Today: 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 1:30 to 2 p.m.
Specials: 2 to 4:30 p.m.
Fort Benning Update: 4:30 p.m. to 8:30 a.m.

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel announces post events, post movie listings, and offers free classified advertisements on "Fort Benning Update," a community information service.

If you live on post and subscribe to cable television, you can watch USAIC-TV on Channel 3, 24 hours a day. Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:26, 7:56, 8:26 and 8:56 on WLTZ-TV 38.

'The Who's Tommy' coming to Atlanta's Fox Theater

Theater League of Atlanta

"The Who's Tommy," 1993's five-time Tony Award-winning Broadway play, is coming to Atlanta's Fox Theater for one week March 15 to 20.

The show features music and lyrics by Pete Townshend and Tony Award-winning director Des McAnuff.

The production will feature former MTV video jockey Steve Isaacs as Tommy, the "Pinball Wizard."

For Isaacs, a singer-songwriter from Sunnyvale, Calif., playing Tommy is the culmination of a life-long love affair with music.

"Pete Townshend's writing has had a great influence on my musical education and style," he said. "I'm very honored to be a part of what I think is the first successful combination of musical theater and rock 'n' roll. Tommy and I both turn 25 next year, which says a lot for how timeless this piece is."

Also featured are Roger Bart as evil Cousin Kevin; Jason Workman as Captain Walker, Tommy's father; Jessica Molaskey as Mrs. Walker, Tommy's mother; Kennya Ramsey as The Gypsy, "Acid Queen;" William Youmans as wicked Uncle Ernie; and Robert Mann Kayser as Tommy, age 10.

Tommy opened on Broadway in 1993 and received historic critical acclaim. The day following the show's opening, it broke box office records selling $494,897 in tickets, beating the previous day-after-opening record held by "Guys and Dolls."

The show received five Tony Awards for best score (Pete Townshend), best director (Des McAnuff), best choreography (Wayne Cilento), best scenic design (John Arnone), and best lighting design (Chris Parry). Also to its credit are six Drama Desk Awards and three Outer Critics' Circle Awards, including Outstanding Musical.

Set in Britain between the end of World War II and the late 1960s, "Tommy" chronicles the adventures of young Tommy Walker. Following a traumatic childhood experience that causes him to withdraw from the world, Tommy emerges an unwilling hero — the Pinball Wizard — who must live up to the expectations of his demanding followers.

Tickets are on sale at all Ticketmaster outlets including Turtles, Coconuts, Tower Records, Publix and Marshalls and the Fox Theater box office. To charge tickets, call (404) 817-8700 or (404) 249-6400.

Showtimes are Tuesday through Friday evenings at 8 p.m., Saturday at 2 and 8 p.m. and Sunday at 1 and 5 p.m.

Ticket prices are: Friday and Saturday evenings $36.50, $34.50, $27.50 and $11; all other performances are $34.50, $32.50, $25.50 and $10. Discounts are available to groups of 20 or more by calling (404) 873-4300.

Columbus College to present the comedy
'Ring Round the Moon'

Columbus College

"Ring Round the Moon," a romantic comedy by Jean Anouilh, is being presented at Columbus College's Fine Arts Hall Auditorium today and Saturday and Feb. 25 and 26 at 8 p.m. and Feb. 27 at 2 p.m.

The play revolves around twin brothers, Hugo and Frederic, both played by James E. Hensley. Hugo is seeking to break up the engagement of his brother to Diana (Jennifer Motos) because he feels it would be a disaster and for another ulterior motive. To do this, he introduces Frederic to Isabelle, a beautiful ballet dancer played by Crystal Davis.

General admission is $5 for adults and $3 for children under 12. Columbus College students, faculty and staff are admitted free with current identification card. For ticket information or reservations, call 563-3801 or 568-2048.

Box office hours are: Monday to Friday, 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.; Saturday, 1:30 to 5:30 p.m.; and 30 minutes before each performance. The box office is located in the lobby of the Fine Arts Hall.

horoscope

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Good advice comes from an old friend. Success comes through collaborative efforts. Two heads are better than one. You may have to cope with someone's moody disposition on the job this week.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Advice you receive this week may be contradictory, and you will need more time before you will be able to make the right decision. Distinguish between fact and fiction. New business opportunities are right up your alley.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Together, you and your loved one will also find a solution for a long-standing concern. Creative interests and dealings with children are favored now. It's best to play it safe where investments are concerned.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Concentrative powers are excellent now, and you will be pleased with what you accomplish this week. A tendency to be moody and to lay too much importance on little things can interfere with relationship harmony. You may have guests for the weekend.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) You are a big help to a child this week. Creative interests and leisure events are highlighted now. You will receive an invitation to a swell party or for travel. There's a danger of getting bogged down in details on the job.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) You will be making purchases for the home this week. Buying and selling are pluses now. Good news affects the family circle. Real estate dealings are favored. It won't take much to throw you off course later in the week.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You are quite effective now at getting your views across to others. Better take notes or a tape measure with you if shopping. Otherwise, you could purchase something that simply doesn't fit in the space for it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Household chores will take up part of your week. You will be stocking up on necessities. Happy news this week brightens your financial picture. You could overreact to a situation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You will be sharing jovial times with friends this week. You will also be enjoying success with a mental project. You are both serious-minded and light-hearted now. Money could easily slip away without realizing it; use caution.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) You will be busy with behind-the-scenes work on a career-related project. A contact has valuable information to share with you. Progress is steady. Friends find many ways to waste your time now.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) Visiting with friends this week will provide you with a pleasant respite from worry and taking yourself too seriously. A travel invitation comes now. You won't have any peace if you dwell upon inconsequentials.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20) It's a good week to seek a loan of financial backing for a project. New business opportunities come now. Be conservative with money this weekend.

Carter Library displays WW II exhibit

Jimmy Carter Library

"World War II: Personal Accounts — Pearl Harbor to V-J Day" opened at the Jimmy Carter Library in Atlanta Jan. 26, and it will be on display until March 22.

This will be the only opportunity for the public to view this major World War II exhibition in the Southeast.

"Personal Accounts" is the centerpiece of the National Archives nationwide commemoration of the 50th anniversary of the U.S. participation in World War II.

The exhibition brings to life the drama of the war from the personal perspective of the soldiers who served, as well as from the official perspective of Gens. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Douglas MacArthur, George Patton, Bernard Montgomery, Erwin Rommel and others.

Drawing on rare and unique materials, the majority of which have never been on display before, "Personal Accounts" recalls the human experience of one of history's most devastating war. This multimedia exhibition includes music, documentary film and sounds of World War II, as well as diaries, letters, personal effects and photographs from participants and witnesses.

Among the nearly 250 items on display are:

- A rare six-minute film depicting the actual Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor;
- Letters and diaries from soldiers, sailors and Marines, recounting Pearl Harbor, Guadalcanal, Coral Sea, the Normandy Invasion, Iwo Jima and other major episodes of the war.

Secretary West visits Columbus

Guest speaker at black history observance reminds community of black contributions

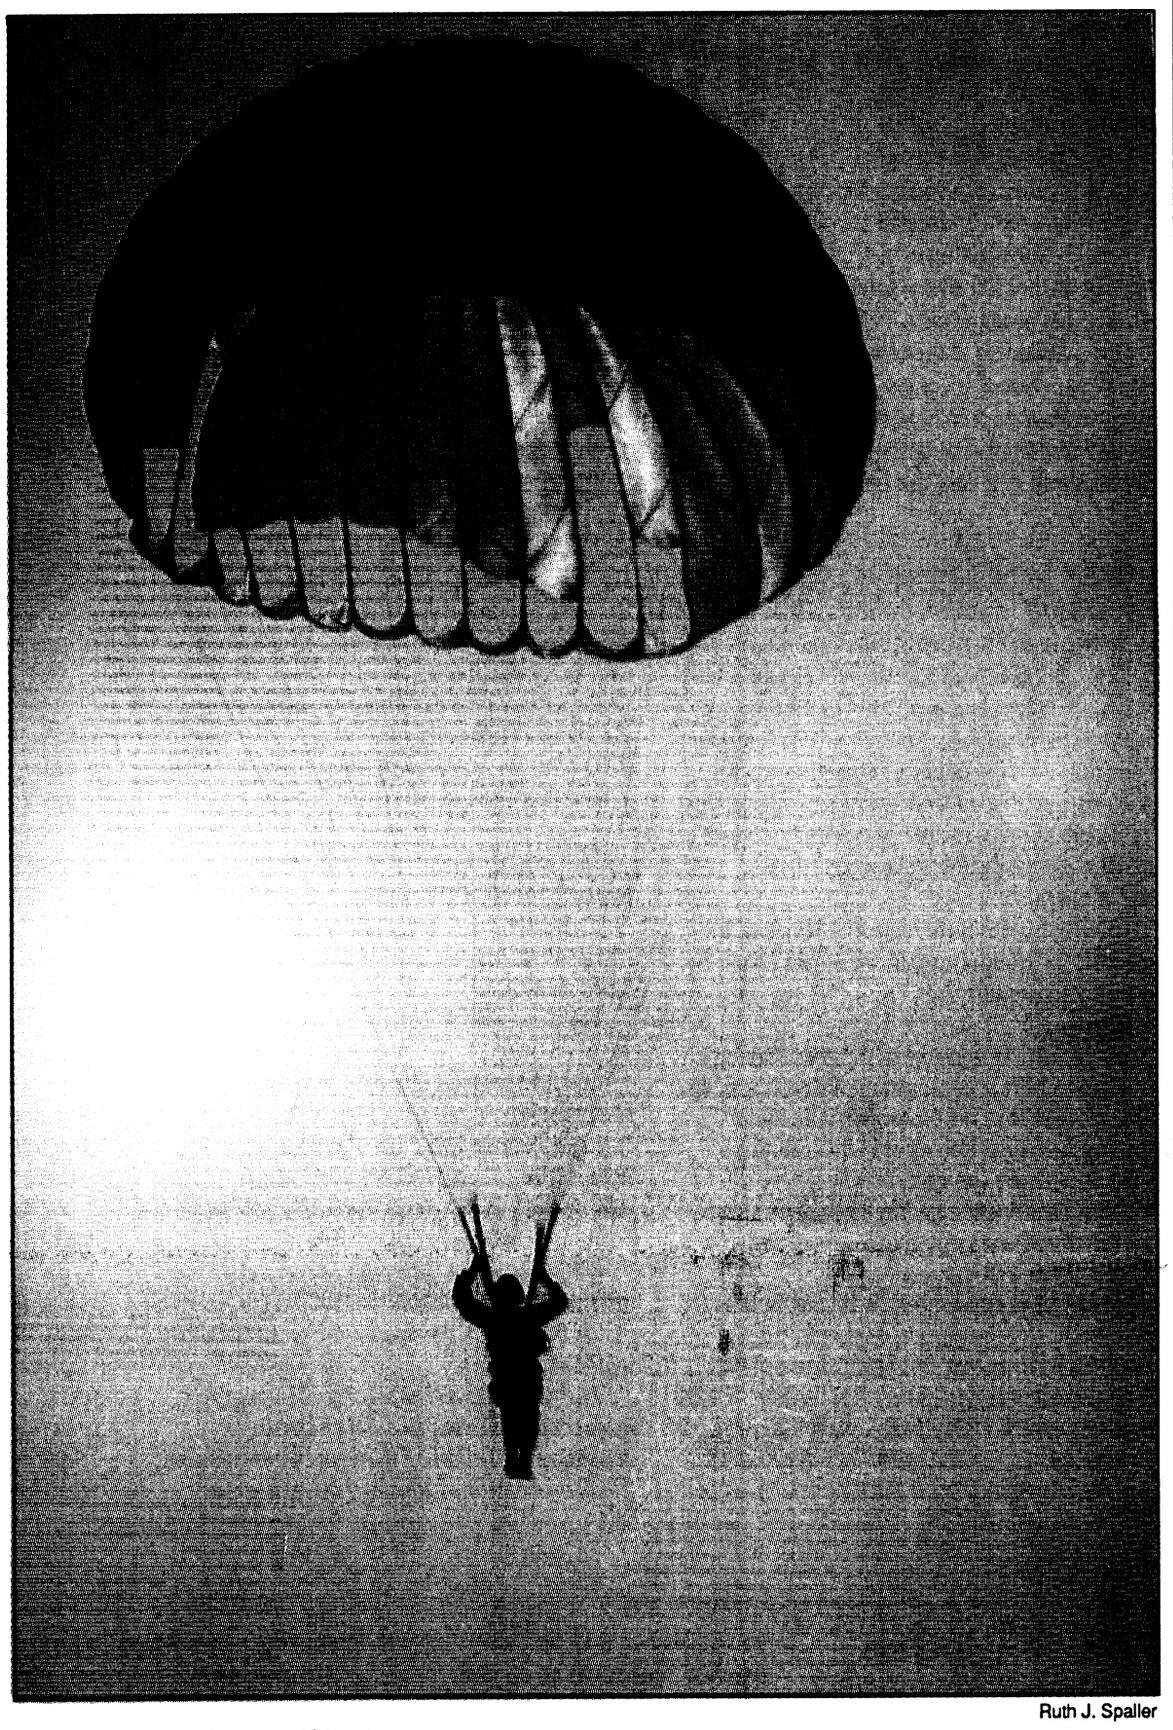
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Secretary of the Army Togo D. West Jr. was the guest speaker at Columbus' seventh annual black history observance Monday at the Iron Works Trade and Convention Center.

Speaking before 400 civic leaders, businessmen and school children, West noted the accomplishments of Fort Benning's soldiers and reminded the community of that.

"We're proud of what they've done and what they're doing, and we need to look out for them — they earned it," he said.

West then traced the contributions of black soldiers through this nation's history, beginning with Crispus Attucks in the Revolutionary War, through World War II, noting that, "this service and sacrifice came as a class apart."



"This is an integral part of our history," he said. "Black soldiers died to preserve our country, our institutions, our society," he said.

West said that much of what America became can be traced to the 250 years blacks were held in bondage.

"That's more than the number of years this country's been officially established," he said.

West praised today's soldiers and noted that Operation Desert Shield and Operation Desert Storm "burnished the image of our Armed Forces."

West attended a get together at the Fort Benning Officers' Club Sunday night before speaking at Monday's event.

Fort Benning prepares to kick off AER campaign

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

"The Army takes care of its own, so the saying goes, and the Army Emergency Relief program is a perfect example of Army people helping Army people," said Alfonso J. Deane, AER officer.

The program, which provided more than $32 million in emergency money to active duty soldiers, retirees and their families last year, kicks off its annual fund drive Tuesday.

Deane encouraged soldiers to consider making a contribution during the campaign, which will be conducted through May 15.

"One of the reasons we have the annual fund drive is to help put money back into the AER fund so other soldiers who need assistance won't have to be turned away," he said.

"It's important that soldiers contribute to the fund drive so that we can continue to meet the needs of soldiers and their families when faced with financial emergencies," he said.

Loans and grants

Deane said the program is unique because soldiers can get financial aid without worrying about the additional charges or interest that would come with a loan from a civilian bank.

In addition, soldiers may be given a grant depending on the ability to pay back a loan.

AER, located in Building 2643, Soldiers' Plaza, is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week, Deane said. From 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., the office handles scheduled appointments.

Extreme emergencies can be called in between 5 p.m. and 8 a.m. by calling the post staff duty officer at 545-2218.

Deane added that AER can only help soldiers whose financial need falls into certain categories, which include nonreceipt of pay, loss of funds, medical expenses, travel expenses, funeral expenses, rent or mortgage payments, food, utilities and car repairs.

"We cannot help soldiers with credit problems or similar problems. AER is designed to help soldiers in emergency situations," he said.

Eligibility for assistance

Eligibility for assistance is limited to:

- soldiers on extended active duty and their family members;
- reserve component soldiers on continuous active duty for a period in excess of 30 days and their family members;
- soldiers retired for physical disability after 20 or more years of active duty; and reserve component soldiers after reaching age 60 and their families;
- and widows, widowers and orphans of soldiers who died while on active duty or after retirement.

Last year AER provided 1,427 Fort Benning personnel with $789,227.43 in financial assistance.

Deane said the campaign's goal is $180,000. Of the money donated, 93 cents of every dollar goes into the fund to help soldiers. Only 7 cents is kept to cover AER's administrative expenses, he said.

"Fort Benning personnel have been very responsive during past fund drives and we really appreciate their help," Deane said. "Here is another opportunity for them to show they support an organization that exists solely to help them in time of need."

Army announces FY '95 proposed budget

Funding for personnel down $700 million from fiscal '94

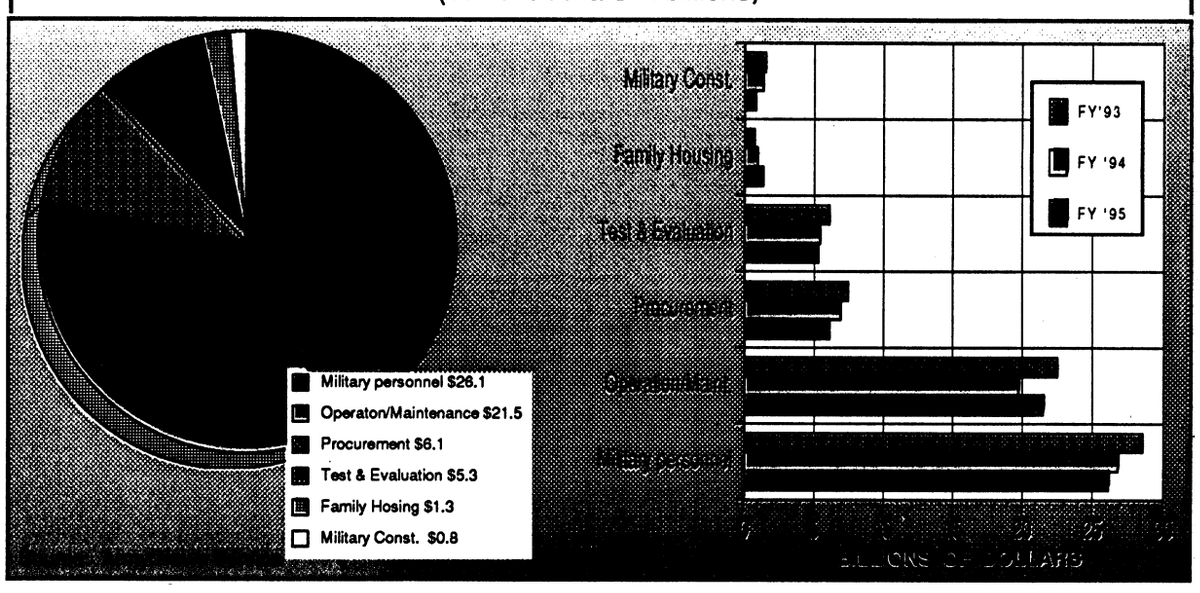
Army News Service

WASHINGTON — The Army released its budget for fiscal 1995, following a similar Defense Department announcement at the Pentagon Feb. 5. The proposals must now clear Congress.

The Army is asking for a $60.8 billion budget authority ($61.1 billion Total Obligation Authority), nearly a quarter of DoD's $252.2 billion.

Of DoD's other dollars, the Navy and Marine Corps combine for $78.4 billion; the Air Force draws $74.5 billion; and defensewide operations capture $38.5 billion.

"This budget reflects more than just our plans for a single year, as America's Army reshapes into a smaller, power-projection force for the 21st century," said an Army spokesman.



He said the budget takes care of near-term readiness by increasing operation and maintenance funds, with training a priority. And the future is protected with continuing funds for modernization and research.

Operation and maintenance, which mainly runs readiness, is the only Army appropriation that gets a raise, logging in at $21.5 billion — $1.8 billion more than in 1994.

The largest Army account is Military Personnel, at $26.1 billion — but this is a $700 million decrease from 1994.

"Although the fiscal 1995 budget represents a dollar increase over the FY '94 budget, the fact is that buying power — 'real growth' — actually decreases," the spokesman said.

Army Budget Total Obligation Authority
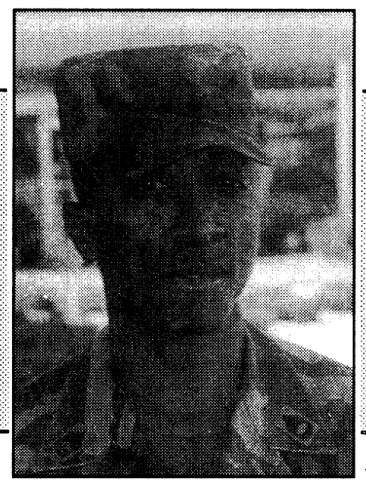
(current dollars in billions)

However, since the number of soldiers has also decreased, officials said the budget can still provide for a powerful, mobile Army while also investing in future technology.

The fiscal 1995 budget will reduce the active force to 510,000 — 30,000 less than 1994's end strength. In two years, DoD plans to see the Army at the Bottom-Up Review's end strength of 495,000.

The 1995 force structure remains at the 1994 level of 12 active divisions. But by 1999, two of those must go, because the review calls for 10 active divisions.



While the drawdown keeps cutting the Army's size, it also continues to shape the force. To do that, the Army must attract and retain quality people — through bonuses, upward mobility and quality of life, said the Army spokesman. A 1.6 percent pay raise is figured into the DoD's 1995 budget.

"The fiscal 1995 budget represents a carefully crafted balance of resources that will sustain the continued transition to a future force — an Army ready to project its power anywhere in the world, anytime, under any conditions," the Army spokesman said.

"America's Army continues to make major contributions, serving the nation at home and abroad, while at the same time restructuring for the 21st century."

VARIOUS VOICES

If you could change one thing about the promotion process, what would it be and why?

Sgt. 1st Class D.C. Stancil, Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "They could speed the process up some."

Spc. Jeffrey Pack, Company B, 317th Engineer Battalion — "Eliminate the 90-day waiting period. If you've got the points and have been recommended, you should not have to wait for promotion."

Sgt. Mark Mc Pherson, Company E, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment —"The biggest thing I'm an advocate of is that the skill qualification test should be incorporated into the system. The value of MOS (military occupational specialty) knowledge should be increased and other areas decreased."

Pvt. 2 Charles Collado, Company C, 317th Engineer Battalion — "It's unfair that some people have to wait so long and some get a waiver. Everyone should have to wait the same amount of time."

1st Sgt. Jimmy Armstrong, International Student Training Detachment — "The promotion system today in the U.S. Army is a fair and equal one. But I feel you should not have to wait so many months to find out if you were recommended for promotion."

Spc. Paul Rosemond, Headquarters Service Company, 43rd Engineer Battalion— "I feel the Army system should change to what the Air Force does. You take a test; if you pass it , you're promoted. When the cut-off points never drop, it makes young soldiers lose their initiative."

Promotions are not 'in the bag'

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

commentary

If you want to get soldiers talking, ask them how they feel about the promotion system. Then step back, because you're likely to get blasted with a stream of steam a mile wide.

I've heard what sounded to me like legitimate gripes at every level from private to master sergeant. I could make this very short and say that promotion is determined by the needs of the Army and that's that, end of discussion, but let's take a closer look at what's bugging people.

Every soldier wants to get promoted, and every soldier wants to be recognized for excellence on the job. But the reality of the situation is that not every soldier will get that recognition.

One problem is, depending on your occupational specialty, your rank and your circumstances, you can be more high-speed than a sunbeam and still stall out on the promotion track.

Say you max your physical training test, qualify as expert with your M16, go to all the right schools, and take night classes and correspondence courses. Say that you also invest in a new, perfect uniform, and you answer every question put to you by the members of the board.

All of that is what we're told it takes to get promoted, and it does take all of that. The catch is, even that might not be enough. If you're a 71L, a 95B or a soldier in about a million other MOSs, judging by the latest Army Times, you might as well get the sew-on rank for your current grade right now, because chances are it won't be changing very soon.

The frustration for those who are in these jobs is immense. In the civilian sector, if you're passed over for a promotion you feel you deserve, you can always quit. Not so the Army. And in the Army, more than anywhere, you are what you wear — on your collar. Rank determines where you live, what you're called, how much money you make and, to a large degree, how people treat you.

I know a senior NCO who's usually good for some sound advice. She said what concerns her is that soldiers who don't get promoted feel that they're not good soldiers.

"It hurts to see someone in another field, whose work doesn't compare with yours, get promoted ahead of you," she said. She pointed out that some factors that enter into promotion are out of the control of the individual.

From a clerical error in your paperwork, to a board member who only likes expert shooters, to equipment problems or a bad print on a DA photo, any number of things can happen to prevent you getting promoted, even if you've pushed all the right buttons.

(Something else to consider— with the time it takes to push all those buttons, how do you balance the point chase with mission requirements, especially now that there are fewer and fewer soldiers and resources to get the job done?)

What's the solution? Unfortunately, there doesn't seem to be a quick fix. If you do your best to be all you can be, and your rank still isn't what you think it should be, don't take it personally. Yes, you deserve more, and no, it's not fair.
