Entries must be on 8 x 10 inch paper, and should contain name, address, and a daytime phone number. Students should also include their school, grade and homeroom teacher.

The winning entry will be judged on creativity and the relevance to the post schools as well as the field of education, Wilson said. Entries may be drawn or created with computer graphics, she said.

The winner will receive a $50 gift certificate from Peachtree Mall as well as "The History of Fort Benning 75th Anniversary" courtesy of the Advertiser Company, printers of the Bayonet.

Among students, the first place winner in each school will receive a $10 gift certificate from the Army and Air Force Exchange Service and "The History of Fort Benning 75th Anniversary" book for their school.

Winners will be notified by March 15, Wilson said.

Teacher takes 'pride' in horseplay

By Jan Wesner Childs
Special to The Bayonet©

Janie Pride is one elementary school teacher who doesn't mind horsing around.

Pride, a first-grade teacher at White Elementary School, is an award-winning equestrian.

She and her two horses— Heart of Mine and Con Brio— compete in dressage, a form of competition where horses must move in figures. It's sort of like figure skating on horseback.

Dressage doesn't involve jumping or racing. It's a calmer sport, according to Pride.

"They say it's a sport for people who really like to think," Pride, 43, said recently. "I enjoy the communication with my horse. It's very subtle."

The concentration of both horse and rider are important, she said. The rider must make the horse go in certain directions, such as a figure eight.

"I can move my horse around just by shifting my weight," Pride said.

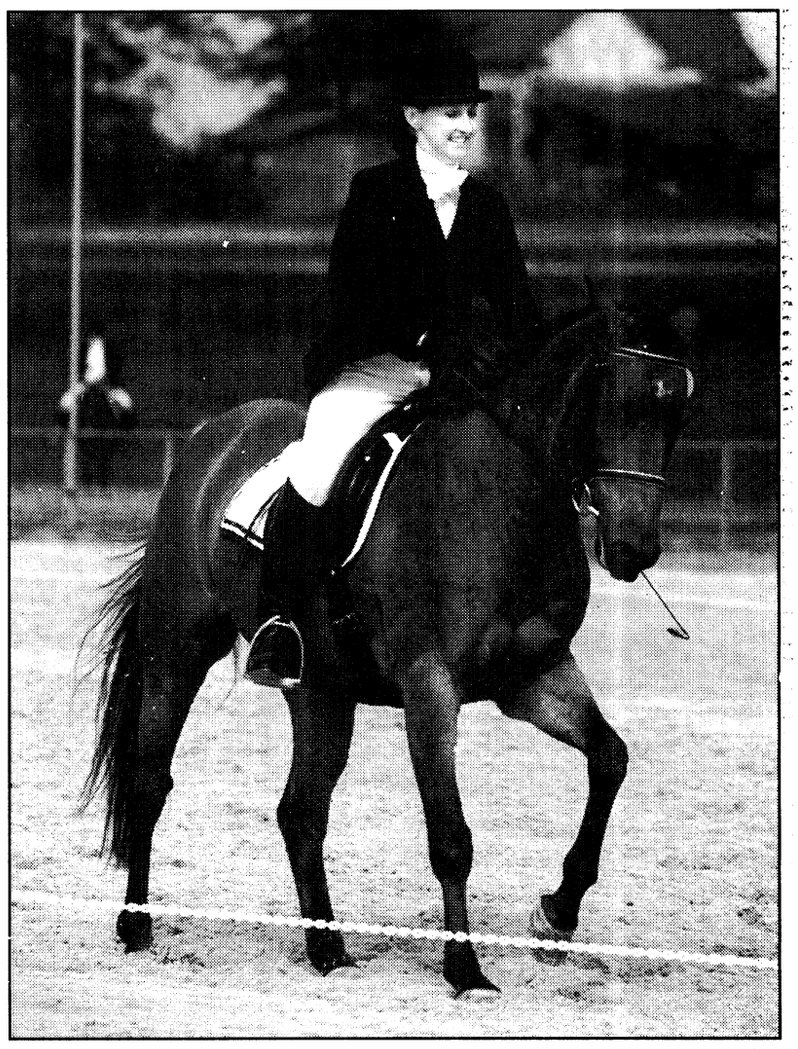
Among Pride's awards for 1994 are State Amateur Champion in the Georgia Dressage and Combined Training Association contest, Best Sportsman at the Georgia State Games and a Bronze Medal at the state games.

Pride also won four awards at the Birmingham Dressage.

She credits her horses with the accomplishments. Both Heart of Mine, nicknamed Bubba, and Con Brio are Pride's "babies."

Bubba is older and has been in her family longer; she even takes him to school for a visit every year.

He is a mixed-breed so he is registered as an American warmblood. Although Pride said Bubba is not a typical dressage horse because he is smaller than most, he was named the third best American warmblood in the country last year.



"I call Bubba my little blue light special, but I wouldn't sell him for a million bucks," Pride said.

She treats her horses so well that one of her friends told her, "When I die, I want to come back as your horse."

Pride has been a teacher off and on at White Elementary since 1975. Her husband retired from the Army a few years ago and they settled here permanently.

One of Pride's instructors, Billie Stewart, is also a White Elementary teacher.

Dressage is an Olympic sport, so Pride predicts more interest in it over the next couple of years.

Workshops teach parents about children's play

By Bettie S. Harris
Child Development Services

Parent education as well as parent involvement is very important at the child development centers on Fort Benning, according to officials.

Having a successful program is a mutual partnership between the parents and the center's staff.

Carolyn Fields, training and curriculum specialist at McGraw Child Development Center, recently gave an education workshop to the parents of children attending the McGraw Center titled "Learn Through Play." The purpose was to explain to the parents and show the parents what their children are doing daily through play.

Play helps children to learn about their world and helps them grow in four areas of development. The four areas of development include physical, cognitive, emotional and social.

Physical development is the body changes that children experience as they grow and mature. Play enables a child's small and large muscles to develop and enhances eye-hand coordination. Activities include running, jumping, climbing, lifting, pouring, drawing, pasting and many others.

Cognitive development is learning or the changes and growth in thinking that takes place inside children's minds. As children learn from experiences, their behavior and thinking change. Play fosters a child's language, reading and writing development. It expands a child's curiosity, creativity, thinking and skills. Play enables a child to explore cause and effect. It allows a child to solve problems.

Emotional development is the way children feel about themselves and their world change and mature. It is enhanced by play experiences that include being able to complete a task independently, having an adult acknowledge the child's success, feeling free to express feelings safely, but honestly (such as shouting rather than hitting when angry) and being given opportunities to take more responsibility for self.

Social development is the way a child learns how to get along with others. Play gives children opportunities to learn to do things together. Play sets the stage for social problem solving, sharing and resolving disagreements by talking. It helps the child to develop respect for others and helps the child to learn to see things from another person's point of view.

The child works out problems without adult interference, thinking about; "how it would feel if ..." Children can learn through play to consider whether an action is fair to others. When children play with the program assistants, they should have a chance to observe positive behaviors such as kindness, sharing and fairness.

Children learn through play, whether the play is self-directed or consists of developmentally appropriate activities provided by the program assistant.

Developmentally appropriate is used to describe activities and surroundings that are chosen because they are right for children of a certain age and take into account each child's individual needs.

To find out more about the importance of play, see the training and curriculum specialist at the child development center that your child attends.

Jennifer Williams, coordinator for Child Development services, provided a workshop Feb. 4 titled "Parent Education and Parent Involvement. More than 50 participants from Fort Benning child development centers, family child-care homes and Tot Town attended the workshop.

Williams concentrated her discussion on the child development associate's goal and objectives. She said a CDA's goal is to become knowledgeable and skillful in establishing positive and productive relationships with families. Associates establish and maintain open, friendly and cooperative relationships with each child's family and to encourage family involvement in the program.

At the beginning of the workshop, Williams conducted a pretraining assessment so participants could evaluate themselves and their skills used to work with families. A comparison was done with how families are different today than how things were when they were growing up. Many factors that affected the changes were given.

In the course of the workshop, Williams elaborated on why working with parents was so important, what parents can tell child development center personnel and what program assistants and caregivers and home providers can tell parents. She discussed the parent connection and explained the importance of the partnership between the parents and child development services.

She also presented tools for developing a partnership with parents. Some of the tools she discussed were orientations, bulletin boards, conferences and newsletters.

Helicopter Helicoptero

Training same in Spanish or English

By Judith Ginder
School of the Americas

With the grace and beauty of a ballerina, the UH-60 Blackhawk swiftly rose into the air. That probably is not the way most people would describe an Army helicopter taking off.

However, for the inexperienced helicopter passenger, even the thunderous noise of the blades whipping around and around can sound beautiful.

The members of the School of the Americas Helicopter School Battalion at Fort Rucker, Ala., don't seem to reference ballerinas when they describe what they do.

The mission of SOA's Helicopter School Battalion is to provide initial and advanced helicopter flight training to Latin American aviators and to provide helicopter maintenance and maintenance management instruction to Latin American mechanics, logisticians and aviators. All of the training, as with all training at SOA, is conducted in Spanish.

On Feb. 6, the HSB welcomed Col. Roy R. Trumble, SOA commandant, to the battalion. Trumble, who became SOA commandant Jan. 13, was making his first visit to HSB.

Upon arriving, it was easy to tell that this experienced group of aviators is quite proud of its accomplishments and what it does at HSB.

Safety is at the forefront of this unit. In April, the unit won the prestigious Daedalian Flight Safety Award. The award is presented annually to the Army aviation training unit judged by the commanding general of the Training and Doctrine Command to have the most effective aircraft accident prevention program for the preceding year.

"Safety is one of my biggest passions," said Lt. Col. Joseph E. Peraza, HSB commander. "One of the things I am trying to do here is to instill a sense of safety in our students. It's very critical to Army aviation; but, unfortunately, because of less than ideal conditions, sometimes safety is sacrificed in Latin America with the belief that they need to put safety aside to get the mission done.

"What I am trying to teach them is safety is a mission enhancer, not a mission detractor," Peraza continued. "By utilizing the principles of safety management they can accomplish not only today's mission but tomorrow's as well."

Peraza said he believes his biggest challenge at HSB is to ensure that the quality instruction provided to Latin American allies is the same high quality training American students receive.

"Hopefully what we teach them here will seep back into their own systems once they return home, so that their own internal controls improve," Peraza said.

"Aviation is a very demanding business," he said. "In my opinion, training standards, maintenance and safety are critical elements to aviation.

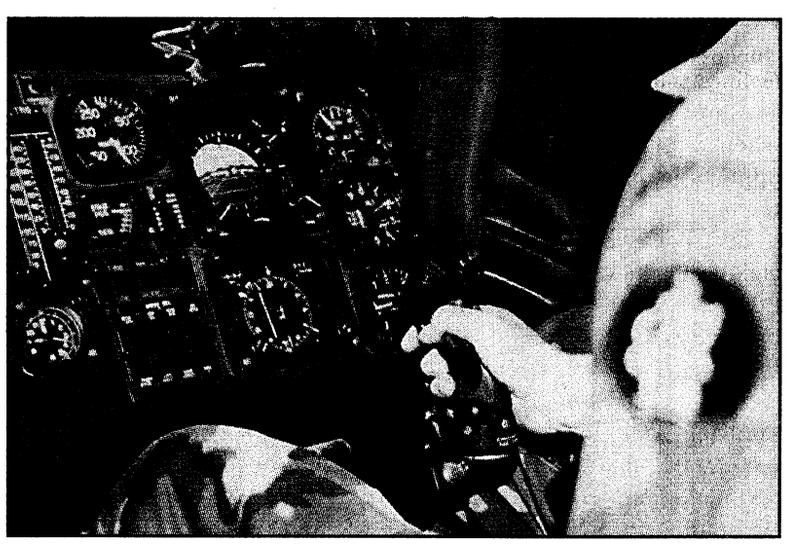
"By influencing the students now while they are impressionable, hopefully they will retain what we have taught so when they go through the ranks and inherit the leadership positions in their countries, they will apply some of the principles and techniques we apply in the U.S. Army," Peraza said.

Peraza and his staff said they believe their mission is very important.

"Not only to the countries that we provide services to, but it is also in our own best national interest to ensure these countries get adequate training," he said.

"My philosophy is if we can train them and provide them the know-how to accomplish the missions in their countries; then later we won't have to commit U.S. assets to do the job. I am not specifically talking about just war-fighting. There are also other things they accomplish with helicopters in Latin America such as disaster relief and medical support.

"If they can do that for themselves, then U.S. soldiers won't have to put their lives on the line to complete their missions," Peraza said.



While visiting HSB, Trumble viewed classroom instruction and received demonstrations on the types of training done at HSB.

Some of those demonstrations included experiencing the flight simulators at Fort Rucker and a class on the importance of training with and without night vision goggles.

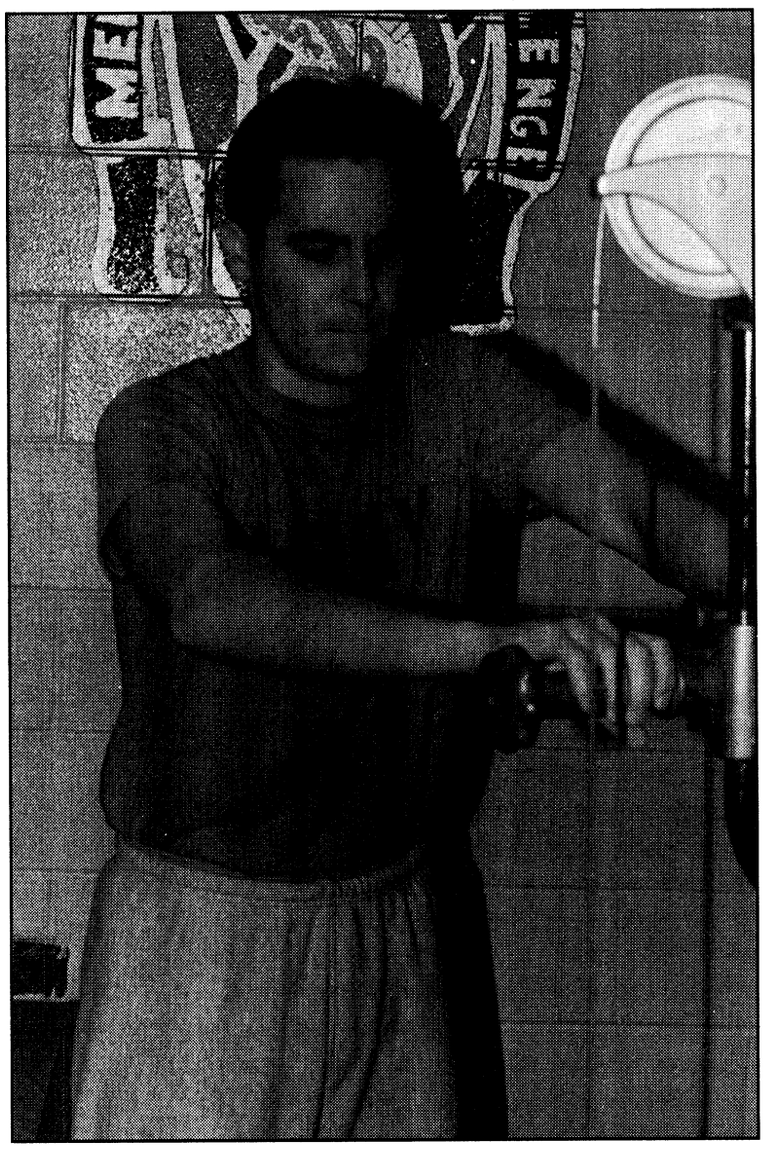
FITNESS TRAINING UNIT

Program strengthens, rehabilitates trainees

By Marc Belscamper and Robert Brockland
Infantry Training Brigade

The Fitness Training Unit of the 30th Adjutant General (Reception) Battalion, Infantry Training Brigade, has a twofold mission. FTU is responsible for both assessing receptees before they go down range to train, and now in its second year, rehabilitating injured trainees.



On the third day of a receptee's arrival at the reception battalion, each potential infantry soldier is given an initial physical training assessment. This assessment consists of 13 pushups, 25 situps and a one-mile run in 9 minutes or less. Those receptees who fail any one of these tasks are sent to FTU.

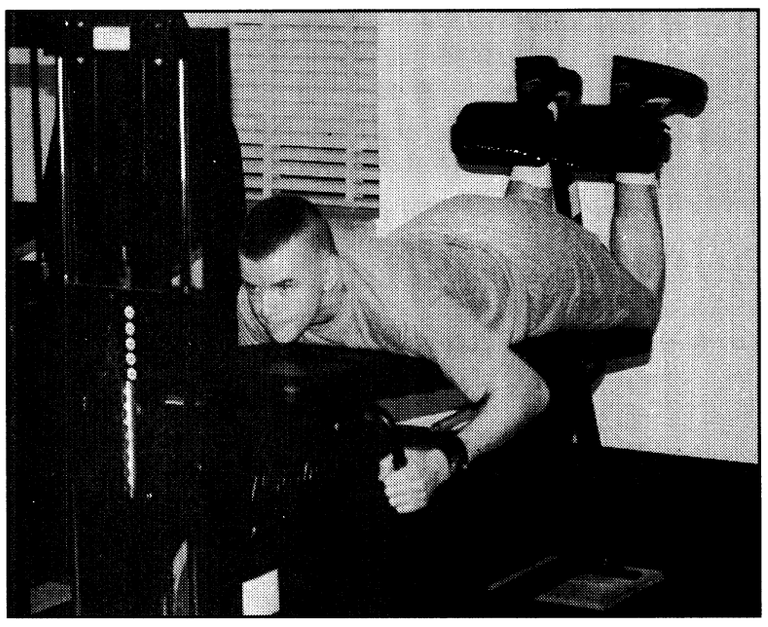
"The mission of FTU is to develop a soldier's level of physical fitness, sense of self-confidence, discipline and motivation necessary to succeed in one station unit training," said Commandant Master Sgt. Timothy J. Runkle.

This mission is accomplished through a four-week program of instruction, which varies from physical conditioning, diet and nutrition classes, to basic soldier knowledge. Runkle wants to see the trainees "leave not only physically fit, but have enough soldier training to go down range and be platoon guides (trainee leaders in basic training)."

Every morning, FTU receptees have a pushup, situp and one-mile run assessment. Monday mornings, FTU receptees can "assess out" of FTU and move on to a training battalion. However, the assessment for these receptees increases to 20 pushups, 40 situps and a one-mile run in eight minutes or less.

If these receptees do not assess out within four weeks or do not graduate from FTU at the end of four weeks, they are given an entry level separation out of the Army. At present, about 83 percent of FTU receptees graduate and "go down range" to train.

Rob A. Brockland



Pvt. 2 William Butler works to strengthen his broken hand doing wrist roller exercises in the weight room.

Since infantry training is so demanding, injuries are bound to happen. This is where the rehabilitation program of FTU goes to work.

"The mission of the rehabilitation platoon is to provide an atmosphere where injured trainees can recuperate from their injuries while maintaining the discipline, esprit, conditioning and knowledge to complete regular training" Runkle said.

Two years ago, OSUT trainees who got hurt while training and received profiles for longer than two weeks would have been discharged. Now a trainee is evaluated by a doctor and interviewed by a physical therapist to see if the trainee is motivated to rehabilitate his injury and return to training.

After the interview, the trainee is recommended for the rehabilitation platoon of FTU. After being recommended, the trainee is interviewed by Sgt. 1st Class Luis Navarrete, drill sergeant. Navarrete determines if the trainee is committed enough to heal and finish training.

Rob A. Brockland

Pvt. 1 Eric Lavrin works on rehabilitating a broken leg.

Each trainee is then put into a rehabilitation program based on his profile so he can recover and pick up training where he left off. The rehabilitating trainees do PT everyday, emphasizing the part of the body which is injured, but also continuing an all-round PT program. The rehabilitation platoon not only consists of physical fitness training, but also academic classes.

With motivating slogans on the walls of the FTU gym like, "It all begins with attitude" and "From crutches to rushes," it is easy to see why the FTU program is 60 percent encouragement and motivation and 40 percent actual PT improvement.

After the trainees' profiles are terminated, they must pass the Army Physical Fitness Test at 60 percent in each category to be able to return to regular training.

Pvt. 2 William Butler, who was in his 10th week of OSUT, broke his right hand and volunteered for the rehabilitation platoon.

"It's (the rehabilitation platoon) a good thing; a lot of people would be sent home if not for this program," Butler said. "Environment helps out. With other people in the same situation, you don't get as down," Butler said, emphasizing the attitude that exists at the rehabilitation platoon.

"I focus on PT, and that one day I will graduate," Pvt. 2 Francis Devan said. Having torn ligaments in his shoulder in week eight, Devan said, "I like it (the rehabilitation platoon); it allowed me to stay in the Army."

Pvt. 1 Eric Lavrin broke his leg on his last road march of OSUT. Having graduated and received his blue cord (an infantry symbol) already, he is rehabilitating his leg.

The rehabilitation platoon is "one of the better things the Army is doing," Lavrin said. "It retains soldiers who otherwise would be sent home." He also said he believes that the rehabilitation platoon will give him the opportunity to be somebody. Lavrin also said, "I signed a contract and have got to see it through."

If it wasn't for the rehabilitation platoon, Navarrete said that these trainees "wouldn't get a chance to be what they want to be — infantrymen."

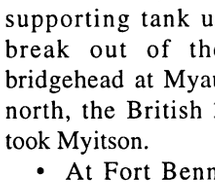
world war II

50 years ago this week ...

• After the longest preinvasion bombardment of the war, 30,000 U.S. Marines stormed ashore on the island of Iwo Jima. The 21,000 Japanese defenders had prepared exceptionally elaborate and tough defenses so that the eight square miles was completely fortified.

• The European director of the American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee estimated that only 1.5 million of 6 million Jews had survived the Holocaust.

• Soviet forces made gains on all fronts and battled to within 45 miles of Berlin. Stalin claimed that victory was near.



• As infantry units crossed the Saar River south of Saarburg, U.S. troops cleared the Germans from the triangle between the Saar and Moselle rivers.

• In Burma, the 17th Indian and supporting tank units began to break out of the IV Corps' bridgehead at Myaungu. Farther north, the British 36th Division took Myitson.

• At Fort Benning, the 37th Infantry, attached to the Parachute School, was inactivated. The officers and enlisted men were transferred to the 4th Infantry, where they continued to work at the Parachute School.

Refueling system allows more time in air

By Brian Shuster
Army Flyer

FORT RUCKER, Ala. — Although it's not pit row at the Indianapolis 50, a new refueling system has sped up the process of refueling and should give aviators more time in the skies.

The Pantograph Refueling Facility at Mollinelli Aerial Gunnery Range will enhance training at the range by allowing aviators to make only one stop to be both rearmed and refueled.

Before the Pantograph system, aviators firing on the range in OH-58D Kiowa Warriors, AH-1 Cobras and AH-64 Apaches who came in to refuel at Mollinelli needed to come in, shut down, get de-armed, crank backup, move to a different spot on the AGR, shut down again to be refueled, crank back up and then go through the same process to be rearmed, said Chief Warrant Officer 3 John Hawkins, senior officer in charge at Mollinelli.

The process previously took "between 20 to 30 minutes to do one aircraft," said Hawkins. "If you put more than seven or eight aircraft on the complex at one time needing to be rearmed and refueled, it would take about 45 minutes or longer."

According to Hawkins, the pantograph system has decreased the number of stops the aviator makes to one and allows crews to be rearmed and refueled without shutting down the aircraft. The process now takes less than 15 minutes, giving aviators less time on the ground waiting and more time in the air training.

The new system incorporates 11 refueling points that are fed from a remote tank farm to the pantograph system. The tank holds more than 100,000 gallons of fuel and is refilled every month or when needed.

Each point has a large swing away arm fitted with fuel nozzles which swing out to the aircraft for refueling.

In addition to saving valuable training time, the system also saves money as well as improves safety, said Tom Allen, Dyncorp Mollinelli Airfield manager.

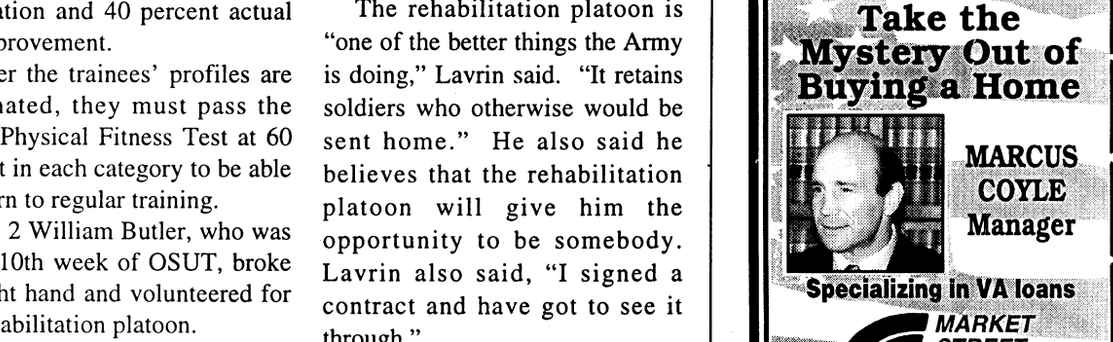
Two contractors are no longer needed for fueling and arming aircraft. Dyncorp now handles both jobs. Money is also saved because aircraft do not have to shut down during refueling and rearming process. This saves the aircraft from the wear and tear of being shut down and started up which saves money on aircraft maintenance, said Hawkins.

Safety is also enhanced with the new pantograph system. Because there is only one stop, there are fewer aircraft movements and less traffic, said Mike Reed, 1st Battalion, 14th Aviation Regiment, operations officer.

According to Allen, even though rearming and refueling occurs at one point, the crews still go through the separate steps of de-arming, refueling and rearming to ensure all the safety precautions are met.

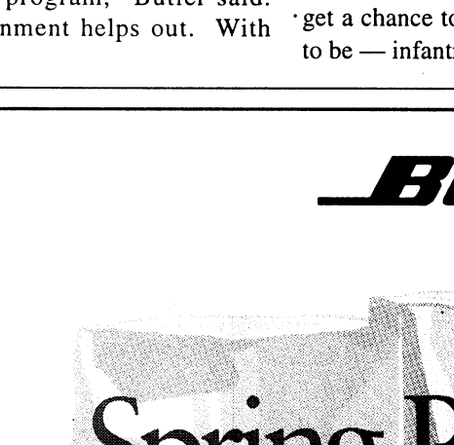
"Safety is still No. 1," said Allen. "We still have separate steps in the process of refueling and rearming the aircraft. None of the procedures overlap."

With the new system, tank trucks are no longer needed to travel from Lowe Army Airfield to transport fuel. This cuts down on traffic to and from the range site limiting exposure from possible accidents.



The system gives students more time in the aircraft training, said Chief Warrant Officer 4 Keith Turk, an instructor pilot for 1st Battalion, 14th Aviation Regiment.

The new system lets students and instructor pilots think about firing rounds downrange and not have to worry about down time for rearming.



"You can relax, take your time and shoot bullets and make each individual shot count," said Turk.

*Commandant's List

Married couple among top grads

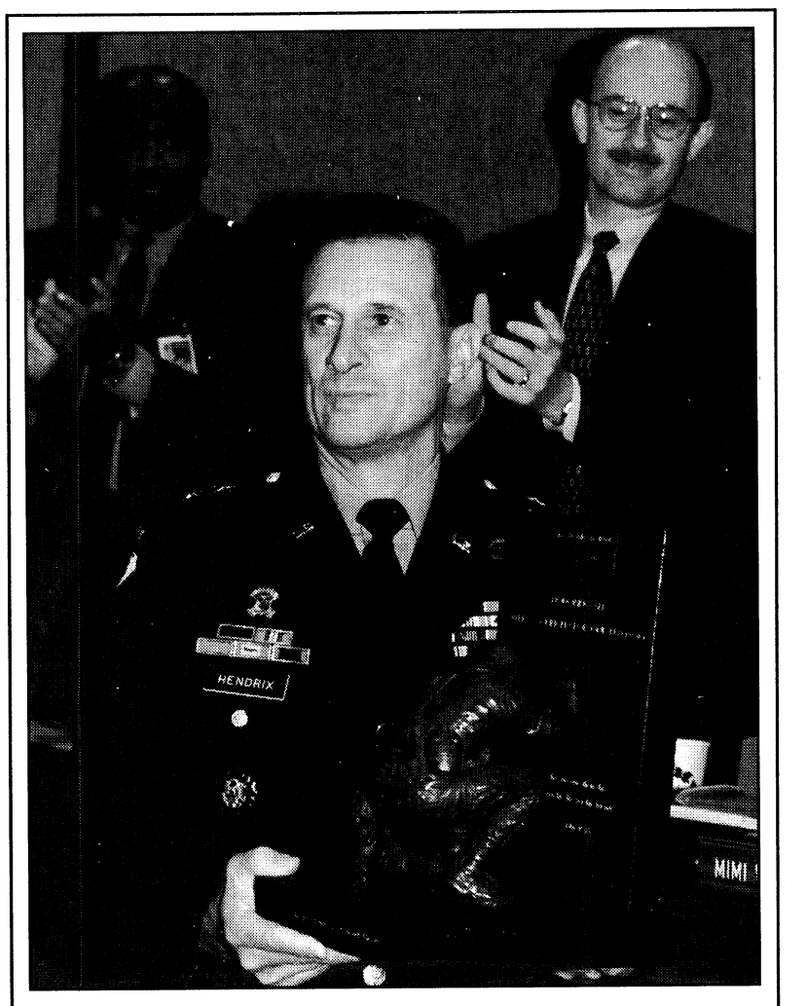
Henry Caro NCO Academy

A married Army couple attending the Primary Leadership Development Course together set a new standard when both graduated on the Commandant's List Feb. 17.

Spcs. Robert and Kristi Haynes, who came to the course from Fort Gordon, Ga., exceeded the Primary Leadership Development Course standards with Robert's academic average of 93 percent and Kristi's academic average of 95 percent.

Both soldiers are from Spokane, Wash., where they enlisted in the Army together after becoming engaged in early 1990.

Robert had served in the Reserves, so went directly to the 13th Engineer Battalion, 7th Infantry Division (Light), Fort Ord, Calif., as a combat engineer.



Kristi attended basic training at Fort Dix, N.J., and rejoined Robert in May, while assigned to the Defense Language Institute, Presidio of Monterey, Calif., for language training in Czechoslovakian. They were married Oct. 26, 1990.

After completing her language training, Kristi went to Fort Huachuca, Ariz., for advanced individual training as a military intelligence interrogator after which she was assigned to the 18th MI Bn. in Augsberg, Germany in October of 1991.

Robert followed in February of 1992, when, after re-enlisting as a counter intelligence agent, he was assigned to the 16th Engineer Bn. in Nuernberg, Germany.

Both Robert and Kristi proceeded to Fort Huachuca to attend military occupational specialty training and arrived at Fort Gordon, Ga., in November.

After making the cut-off scores for promotion to sergeant in their new military occupational specialty, they received orders to attend PLDC at Fort Benning simultaneously.

Commanding General Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix holds a statue given to him for all soldiers by Columbus Mayor Bobby Peters Feb. 14 at the Government Center. The statue's inscription reads in part, "Honoring all who sacrificed for our freedom."

profile in excellence

Name: Spc. James Clarence Williams III

Award or recognition: Post Soldier of the Quarter of the Second Quarter
Military Occupational Specialty: 73C (finance technician)
Unit: Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment
Years on the job: Three years

What were your reasons for joining the Army?
For the challenge and to see the world.

Define your style of leadership.
Participating — if you help your soldiers accomplish the task, they will respect you and perform to the best of their abilities.

What person has most influenced your career?
Master Sgt. Leroy Richard Dunlap, my noncommissioned officer in charge NCOIC of Military Pay and Exam at the 208th FB in Heidelberg, Germany.

If you were sergeant major of the Army for a day, what improvements would you make?
Although I live off post, I would improve single-soldier barracks.

What were your reasons for choosing your MOS?
I worked in finance for 10 years in Atlantic City casinos before I came in the Army.

Describe a memorable moment in your career.
Meeting my wife, Spc. Daidra A. Williams, in advanced individual training and my oldest son watching me graduate from basic training.

What are your future career plans?
To become the first sergeant major of the Army from a non-combat MOS.

What others have to say about you: "Spc. Williams is the most outstanding specialist I have encountered. He is focused, self-confident and extremely capable to achieve his goals."

Ash Wednesday focuses on penance, sin, conversion

By James M. Coindreau
USAIC Chaplain Office

reflections

"In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." Genesis 3:19.

Despite what a certain kind of psychology tries to suggest, evil exists in and around us. Humbly Christians admit that we do not always live up to the ideals that the Lord Jesus has taught us to go by. We are not as mature in Christ as we should be.

Authentic adulthood involves humble acknowledgement of what has remained infantile in ourselves, of our bondage to our own past and the fact of lust, egotism, cowardice and the like, which color and distort our picture of reality. Therefore constant penance, aversion from evil and conversion to God is a Christian imperative.

The message of Ash Wednesday is: "Remember, man." If conversion is a necessity, work on it now; don't wait until tomorrow, because you are dust and to dust you will return. And this can happen at the moment you least expect it.

"Works" of penance are useful, but only as "means to the end" — your inner conversion to love of God and neighbor. The ashes on your forehead have only as much meaning as you are giving them. Make this symbolism a meaningful beginning of a time of penance, preparing to celebrate the paschal mystery of our Lord's death and resurrection.

Penance is part of the Christian philosophy of life. The way it is done may change. The concept itself cannot be taken out of the Christian life. Penance has to do with sin and conversion. It is the inner aversion from evil in and around us and a generous conversion in love to God that are important.

The means to achieve this inner conversion, the traditional Lenten practices of prayer, charitable works and even fasting, should not be considered outdated. However, it is true that the importance of "works" of penance (fasting, abstinence from meat, candy, shows, etc.) during Lent may have been overemphasized in the past. They have little value in themselves.

What you give up during Lent is a personal decision, but it should be related to that inner conversion to God.

"More fervent in prayer, more generous in works of charity, more eager in celebrating the mysteries by which we are reborn may we come to the fullness of grace that belongs to the sons of God."

Divorce isn't always answer

By M. Peterson
USAIC Chaplain Office

reflections

In his article, "When Families Break Up: The Human Toll," Gary Richmond describes the pain of divorce in five areas of life — social, children, finances, lawyers and the aftermath.

Socially, divorce separates a person from one's spouse and one's former friends (who bring back painful memories).

Seventy percent of all divorces involve children who are at higher risk for suicide, homosexuality, immoral behavior, school problems, arrest and insecurity.

Financially, both parties struggle with smaller incomes, loss of credit and other worries.

In the legal realm, one lawyer confessed, "Everyone is out to get everyone. No one is ever satisfied. Kids are getting the shaft and everyone is lying about everything ... "("Focus On The Family" magazine, Dobson Foundation, August 1989)

After divorce, the problems don't end. Many live lonely lives and wish they were married to the same spouse again. Divorce involving children means planning visitation, vacations and holidays. Alimony is too little or too late.

Is there hope for marriage? Absolutely! But this requires a radical change in our convictions. We must see the folly of our present attitudes toward marriage and divorce, and take an uncompromising stand against such attitudes.

Gary Collins in his book, "Christian Counselling," (Word Inc., 1980), states we must stop viewing our marriage with a soap opera mentality. Television is shaping our present attitudes.

As one Cornell sociologist concludes, television portrays disposable, fly apart, throw-away marriages, mates and children. Today, immorality, illegitimacy and divorce are accepted as normal American life.

Couples today are wrongly committed to personal growth without one's mate. It's called self-realization or self-actualization. They enter marriage thinking, "I'll stay as long as I'm happy and can further my own interests." This attitude does not see one's mate as God's precious gift, designed to compliment and complete, (not compete with), one another.

Marriage is like the church or Army life. Those who come only to "get," leave unhappy, bitter and dissatisfied. Those who come to "give," receive abundantly. This is the law of the kingdom (Acts 20:35). Love is not on the take, it is giving (John 3:16; Luke:30, 35, 38). There are no "irreconcilable differences" when both partners are committed to honoring the other above oneself (Phil. 2:3).

Our nation today is engaged in an epic struggle for survival. Our families are disintegrating. Divorce is considered "My choice alone, my right." If we continue to choose our own self interests over our mate's, family's and nation's, America is finished.

Our Lord's attitude toward divorce is best (Matthew 19 and 1 Corinthians 7). God views marriage as sacred. It is his holy covenant given for our welfare. Those who treat it lightly pay a heavy price. For what God has joined together, let man not separate. (Matthew 19:6).

Lent is time to prepare for Easter, new life

By Bill Putman
USAIC Chaplain Office

reflections

There are two seasons that dominate the Christian year—Advent, leading to Christmas, and Lent, leading to Easter.

During Advent, we prepare for the celebration of the coming of Christ. Conversely, during Lent we prepare for the crucifixion and subsequent resurrection of Christ.

Having recently completed the Advent and Christmas season, we now look forward to the Lenten season beginning on Ash Wednesday, which is Wednesday.

Easter Sunday is not observed on a set date, but is the first Sunday after the first full moon that occurs on or after March 21. Therefore, Ash Wednesday is also on a varying date, which is 40 days, excluding Sundays prior to Easter Sunday.

The word Lent is derived from two words in other languages, one meaning spring, and the other meaning to lengthen, which pertains to the lengthening of days in the spring.

While Advent is a joyous season of decorating, caroling, buying and giving gifts, and preparing for the happy celebration of Jesus' birth, Lent is a quieter season of prayer, meditation and fasting preparing oneself for the Good Friday crucifixion and the Easter resurrection of Jesus — then on Easter there is joyful music and the celebration of our salvation and eternal life.

Actually, both Easter and spring are celebrations of new life. From the seasonal view, this relates to plants and trees springing to life and blooming, the lengthening of days and the end of the dead look of winter. From the religious view, Easter relates to new life provided to Christians through the resurrection of Christ.

Let us remember as we approach the season of Lent that it is not just about buying a new wardrobe to wear on Easter Sunday, but about Christ's sacrifice for the atonement of our sins and our subsequent salvation. Therefore we should examine our lives and meditate on how we can change our habits and align our lifestyles with the guidance and examples set by Christ.

Sunday School bus — The Sunday School bus is operating again. If you or your children need a ride to Sunday School, call the Religious Education Center at 545-4715 to schedule a pick up.

Kelley Hill Bible study — "High Noon Bible Study" is every Wednesday at the Kelley Hill Chapel annex at 11:30 a.m. A snack lunch will be provided.

For more information, call 544-1692.

Bible study — A new Bible study, "Genesis, The Book of Beginnings," is offered at Fort Benning Sunday School in the Religious Education Center. This study is designed for adults and taught by Lt. Col. Bobby Little. The class meets from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m.

Topics for discussion are the beginning of man, marriage, sin, science and history, music and the arts; the beginning of relationships of God to man, man to God, man to man, family relationships; and much more.

For information, call 685-1390 or 545-4715.

English classes — English language classes have begun at the Religious Education Center, Building 2522. Classes are from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m.

Classes are designed for foreign-born spouses of service members and personnel from the School of the Americas.

The goal is to give students the language skills necessary to function independently in the United Sates and do things like obtain a driver's license, go to the Commissary or hospital and communicate with friends and neighbors.

Classes are offered in four levels, and students are placed according to their proficiency in English. Classes are free and books are available for purchase at the classes.

CONGRATULATIONS

The judging for the 1995 TRADOC Journalism Competition was recently completed, and The Bayonet and its staff members placed in a number of categories. We are extremely proud that Fort Benning's The Bayonet, has again been recognized as one of the outstanding newspapers in TRADOC. The first and second place winners will compete in the Department of The Army Competition in March, and those winners will go on to compete in The Department of Defense Competition in May.

Category: Civilian Enterprise Metro Newspaper

The Bayonet - Second place

Category: Feature/News/Sports Photo In Support of Story

PFC Marc G. Turchin - Second place

SGT Ruth J. Spaller - Third place

TIPS FOR MAKING YOUR AD MORE EFFECTIVE

- Start Your ad with the item you are selling, service you are offering, or job title you are looking to hire.
- Be descriptive. The more information you provide to the reader, the better the responses will be to your ad.
- Use bold type, white space of decorative characters such as stars, to bring attention to your ad.
- Run your ad for an ample length of time. Remember, as soon as you get results, you can cancel at any time .
- Always include the price of your item.

Poitier leads 'Children of the Dust'

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

He isn't seen very often these day; but, in a new miniseries, an esteemed Oscar-winner literally rides tall in the saddle.

SPOTLIGHT

Sidney Poitier makes a now-rare appearance by heading the cast of "Children of the Dust," Sunday and Tuesday's new CBS western miniseries based on the novel by Clancy Carlile.

The actor stars as Gypsy Smith, a gunfighter of part-Cherokee descent who agrees to lead a wagon train of former slaves from Tennessee to Oklahoma, where they establish a town they aptly name Freedom. Appointed the site's marshal, he then runs up against the Ku Klux Klan, members of which ambush him and leave him to die ... but with the care and support of a Cheyenne-Arapaho reservation agent (played by "Law & Order" alumnus Michael Moriarty) and one of the settlers (Regina Taylor, formerly of "I'll Fly Away"), Gypsy survives and seeks revenge for his assault.

Running concurrently with that plot is the story of Corby White (Billy Wirth), a Cheyenne youth who finds shelter with the Moriarty character; the young man eventually falls for his host's daughter (Joanna Going, seen opposite Kevin Costner in last summer's "Wyatt Earp"), to the great concern of her parents, who react by sending her away to school; much of the drama then involves the complicated path to the lovers' possible reunion, which seems thwarted in part by her marriage to a wealthy Southerner (Hart Bochner) who secretly has connections to the Klan. Farrah Fawcett appears as Moriarty's wife, and Robert Guillaume, Shirley Knight and Grace Zabriskie also are featured in the saga, which marks the reteaming of executive producer Frank Konigsberg and writer Joyce Eliason ("Oldest Living Confederate Widow Tells All").

When: Sunday and Tuesday on CBS

"I look for certain things, and my values determine the direction I will search for those things," Poitier said about his decision to take "Children of the Dust's" leading role. "I suppose as an actor, I sort of migrate to those things that are closest to my values. I had been reading lots and lots of scripts. To go through a script of 120 pages that you're not particularly interested in is very tedious and boring, so I will read 12 to 15 pages. If I find the writing interesting, I will continue. If I find the character interesting, I will go to the last page. In this script, I got to page 30 and I said, 'This is too good to be true. It cannot last.' By page 40, it got better. By page 75, I hoped it would not disintegrate in the last 35 to 40 pages, and it did not. When I was through, I said (to Konigsberg), 'I would very much like to play this character.'"

SAVANNAH

to host 8-day music festival

Savannah Onstage

Music lovers should mark their calendars if they plan to attend the Savannah Onstage International Arts Festival scheduled for an eight-day run starting March 4.

Medal winners of prestigious international music competitions will entertain in the annual concert series, using picturesque churches and other historic buildings in Savannah as venues.

Artists from Finland, China, France, the Ukraine and the United States will perform in violin, voice, piano and jazz. Free public concerts also will be staged in the historic City Market area downtown.

In addition, the American Traditions Competition for vocalists will be conducted, featuring musical forms that are uniquely American in origin. The repertoire for the competition includes blues, jazz, gospel, spirituals and 20th century Broadway musical theater.

The panel of judges includes Della Reese, star of stage, screen and television; George Shirley, Metropolitan Opera star; and Charles Strouse, composer of Broadway hits "Annie" and "Bye Bye Birdie."

Throughout festival week, area arts groups will be joining in the festivities by presenting visual art shows, plays, concerts in the downtown area.

Festival-goers can get discounted prices in the DeSoto Hilton Hotel and in the Historic Inns of Savannah.

For more information, call Savannah Onstage at (912) 236-5745 or (800) 868-3378.

Springer presents 'Sophisticated Ladies'

Duke Ellington's music takes centerstage in the Springer Theatre's production of "Sophisticated Ladies."

Duke Ellington's granddaughter directs production

Springer Opera House

"Sophisticated Ladies," the musical spectacular based on the music of the late Duke Ellington, opened Thursday at the Springer Opera House, 103 10th St. in Columbus.

From the opening bars of the overture to the finish of the grand finale, this Tony Award winning song and dance revue lives up to its billing by the New York Times as "pure musical gold!"

The Duke wrote more than 3,000 original works ranging from such hits as "Take the 'A' Train" and "It Don't Mean A Thing" to more mellow standards such as "Mood Indigo" and "Satin Doll."

"Sophisticated Ladies" resounds with these numbers plus other greats such as "Hit Me With A Hot Note," "Don't Get Around Much Anymore" and "Sophisticated Lady."

Mercedes Ellington, granddaughter of the Duke, directs the Springer production.

Though music is centerstage, the Springer cast consists of Madeleine Bryan-Davis, a graduate of Columbus' Baker High School who has toured extensively in Europe with Englebert Humperdinck and Hoyt Axton; Julian Leake, music entrepreneur and entertainer from Memphis; and Barry Bruce, veteran of Broadway and regional theatres across the country.

Other principles include Darlene Simpson, who once toured extensively in Europe and now performs with the Atlanta Opera Chorus; Mark Evans, whose credits range from acting in national commercials to choreographing for MTV; Michael Bransford, veteran Disney performing artist and currently a part of the Nashville recording scene; Jeanne Arnold, veteran Springer dancer, singer and actress; and Celeste Mabry-Lee, a native of Phenix City and well-known vocal performer.

More than 200 sequined and spangled costumes have been designed by Dona Pierce. Set design by John Thigpen and lighting by Michael Roblee add to the show's glitz and glamour.

"Sophisticated Ladies,"which is sponsored by AT&T, runs today, Saturday, Thursday and March 3 and 4 at 8 p.m. with a 2:30 pm matinee Sunday.

Ticket prices are $15 for adults, $13 for seniors and military, and $8 for students. For reservations, call the Box Office at 327-3688.

College to present concerts

Columbus College

Recording artist George Winston will be in concert March 4 at 8 p.m. at Columbus College's Fine Arts Hall auditorium.

Those attending the concert can bring donations of nonperishable food in support of the House of Mercy.

Winston is best known for his rural folk piano style, and also performs stride piano, New Orleans rhythm and blues, blues and rock. He has released six solo piano albums including "Ballads and Blues," "Autumn," "Winter Into Spring," "December," "Summer" and "Forest."

The 8 p.m. concert is sponsored by the Woodruff Management Company.

Tickets are $15 for adults and $10 for students and are available in the Schwob Department of Music. For more information, contact Columbus College's Schwob Department of Music at 568-2049.

• Tuesday — Songs of Praise, Columbus College Civic Chorale and Symphonic Wind Ensemble, 8 p.m., Fine Arts Hall. Dr. William Bullock will conduct the chorale, and the symphonic wind ensemble will be under the direction of Dr. William E. Fry. Admission is free. For information call 569-3131.

Army cancels

NCO Self-Development Test

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

Some noncommissioned officers at Fort Benning may be breathing a sigh of relief — or exasperation — since hearing the news that the Self-Development Test has been canceled.

Army Chief of Staff Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan's decision to cancel the test came Feb. 2 in the wake of a study led by Training and Doctrine Command Sgt. Maj. Gilbert F. Paez.

The consensus of sergeants major from major commands was that the noncommissioned officer education system "has advanced to a point where it objectively measures soldier performance much better than the SDT," according to the Department of the Army message announcing the cancellation.

Paez was quoted in a TRADOC News Service article as saying that the two-hour test, designed to measure noncommissioned officers' knowledge of their specific military occupational skills and general leadership knowledge, was not an efficient tool to judge NCOs for promotion.

The SDT created problems for proponents in keeping it up to date, Paez said, and the NCO Evaluation Report, which monitors an NCO throughout the year, is a better indicator of performance.

Closer to home, Garrison Sgt. Maj. Steven G. Chittum said he thought it was a "good idea" to cancel the test because it had become an administrative burden rather than a tool.

Because the section of the test covering military occupational skills was written by each branch component, the results were always skewed, Chittum said.

Given 10 different MOSs, one MOS might have a high score of 100, another 80, Chittum said, so "you constantly had people trying to qualify results.

"They were not consistent across the board because they were not written by the same agency," he said, so the test "never really got off the ground."

Since the test has been canceled, Chittum said, he thinks the test results should be removed from soldiers' records. He said he does not think canceling the test will hurt NCOs, because it won't be counted against them.

But what of those who did well on the test?

Sgt. Marcus Carter of Headquarters, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, was among the last to take the SDT on Fort Benning.

"When I first found out it got canceled, I was a little disappointed, because I usually do pretty well," Carter said.

But, he said, "It won't hurt me personally, and it will probably be better in the end. There's some people I know that just don't test well."

For soldiers who took the test the week before it was canceled, it must have been disappointing for them to knock themselves out studying, said an official from the Fort Benning testing section.

But, the official said, the 1,800 soldiers scheduled to take the test in March "seemed a little relieved" not to have to take it.

Soldiers who tested prior to the elimination of the test will receive their results, but no other reports will be generated or distributed, according to the Department of the Army message.

The message also states:

- Commanders and local promotion boards will no longer use SDT results to assist in determining promotion points for either duty performance or board interviews and evaluations.
- Centralized promotion and school selection boards will cease using SDT results.
- Raters will no longer consider SDT results when completing the NCO Evaluation Report, and SDT results are not authorized to be recorded on the NCOER to support any bullet comments.

Remembering the rangers

Spc. Jason Murphy, a soldier with the 101st Airborne Division at Fort Campbell, Ky., accepts the Ranger Tab for Sgt. Norman Tillman, one of four Ranger School students who died on patrol during a training exercise Feb. 15. During the Feb. 24 graduation ceremony, Retired Col. Ralph Puckett pinned the tab on Murphy, who was Tillman's "Ranger Buddy."

SMOKING

to be eliminated at all AAFES facilities

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

A change in the post smoking policy to be implemented next week will decrease the number of areas where smoking is allowed.

Beginning Monday, smoking will not be allowed in any Army and Air Force Exchange facility, said Maj. Chuck Walls, garrison executive officer.

"In an effort to comply with Department of Defense policy and take care of our people (we are) completely eliminating smoking (inside these facilities)," Walls said.

DoD policy No. 1010.15, implemented March 7, 1994, leaves smoking in places such as restaurants, clubs and other morale, welfare and recreation facilities up to the discretion of the post commander.

Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, Fort Benning's commanding general, believes, according to Walls, that smoking and fumes inhaled by secondary smoke are bad for people's health and that it's in the best interest of everybody to eliminate smoking from these places.

As of now, Walls said, the morale, welfare and recreation areas are not affected by this policy. Those places include bowling facilities and post clubs, such as After Hours and Sledgehammer.

Walls said smokers will have places they can smoke outside of federal buildings.

For instance, at Building 4, Infantry Hall, designated smoking areas are outside on either side of Marshall Auditorium. Walls said picnic tables and benches for people to sit on while they smoke could be added to theses areas in the future.

Walls said the directors and commanders are responsible for making sure the information is given out to the people in their areas.

Questions concerning this policy can be referred to the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, Management-Employee Relations Division, at 545-7657 or 545-4483.

Female general talks about women in Army

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

One of the Army's three female generals visited Fort Benning Feb. 22 and took time to field questions from female officers and enlisted soldiers about opportunities for women in the Army.

Brig. Gen. Pat Hickerson, deputy commander, U.S. Army Recruiting Command, began her career in the Women's Army Corps in 1968 and was one of two women to attend the Infantry Officer Advanced Course here in 1973. (One of few women ever to attend.)

There have been a lot of changes in the 26 1/2 years since she came into the Army, Hickerson said.

"To appreciate what we have today and have a good perspective on where we need to go in the future, it's important to know how far we've come," Hickerson said, "because truly, we have come a long way."

When she came in, women made up only 2 percent of the Army, as opposed to 13 percent today.

The year before she joined, Hickerson said, President Lyndon B. Johnson signed a bill allowing women to be promoted beyond the rank of lieutenant colonel.

In 1970, the first woman (a member of the Women's Army Corps) was promoted to brigadier general, and soon after, women started attending the Army War College.

But the biggest changes started occurring in 1972 when the draft was abolished, Hickerson said. To fill up a volunteer force, it became essential to increase the number of women who volunteered, so the Army needed to open more fields to women and expand the opportunities for them.

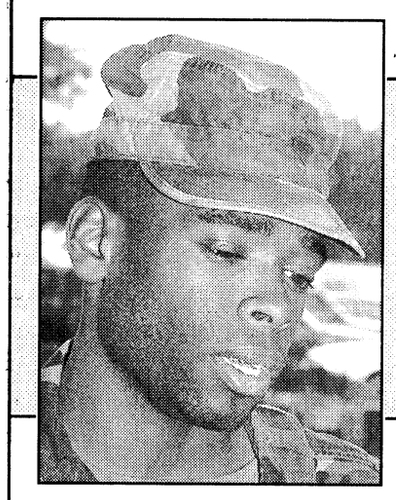
"To appreciate what we have today, it's important to know how far we've come — because truly, we have come a long way."

— Brig. Gen. Pat Hickerson
Deputy commander, U.S. Army Recruiting Command

After that, Hickerson said, 1973 saw the first women coming to Fort Benning for Airborne School, women started attending regular officer basic courses, the Training Center at Fort Jackson opened up, Officer Candidate School opened to women in 1975, and in 1976, women were admitted to the U.S. Military Academy, West Point, N.Y.

Today, things look pretty good for women, Hickerson said. Now, 91 percent of the job specialties in the Army are open to women. Only 67 percent of the positions are open, but 33 percent of those are dedicated to ground combat units, which are closed to women.

And the Army is continuing to change and open positions. "We just had 30,000 more positions open in the last several months, so opportunities continue. We've now got 14 women who are combat aviators, and that's been open only a little over a year — and that's real progress," Hickerson said.



As the Army has downsized, percentages of women have increased, she said.

"We gradually keep going up, and I think that

The Red Cross exists only through its volunteers, volunteers who have given of themselves and decided they want to make a difference in people's lives

Red Cross needs you!

By B.J. Scully
American Red Cross

Because it does care and because we must care, the American Red Cross at Fort Benning exists.

It will continue to exist only through a commitment from the military community to sustain it and provide the resources needed to ensure it can continue with the mission of presence in time of need.

This need, be it in wartime or peace, takes the form of soldiers and families requiring assistance not readily available through routine sources.

The Red Cross has met the mission of presence head on for decades, and it is we in the military who reap the benefits from caring and concerned individuals.

What's important to understand is that the single most critical resource we as a community can provide to the Red Cross is our time and individual effort.

Yes, what it really comes down to is a simple fact — the Red Cross exists only through its volunteers, volunteers who have given of themselves and decided they want to make a difference in the lives of those in need.

At Fort Benning, scores of volunteers work the halls of Martin Army Community Hospital filling a much-needed role in the overall care of soldiers and their families.

Although not generally involved in the direct medicinal side of the hospital, Red Cross volunteers nonetheless serve the community by handling numerous administrative actions in the hospital, thereby allowing medical personnel to concentrate on the hands-on care of the sick and injured.

No compensation is needed or sought, for the reward of seeing smiles instead of tears and hearing a heartfelt "thank you" is compensation enough.

Volunteers are truly a unique group, and this is a unique community.

You can be a part of the Red Cross volunteer community and see for yourself how vital such a group is to the community.

Volunteers are needed in numerous locations throughout the hospital, and your individual talents will be put to the best use.

There are no required hours to work, for any time you can contribute is both important and appreciated.

Child care is offered for those with very young children, and the experience gained from your volunteer work will broaden your view of both the health-care field as well as the military as a whole. All this can be yours if you really care enough to volunteer.

Remember, the Red Cross is there only because each and every one of us care enough to see it exist.

Give of your time and self in a fulfilling, worthwhile effort that goes toward both building our own community and taking care of our loved ones.

Demonstrate that you, too, desire to see the Red Cross continue in its critical mission. In one word, volunteer!

dial 545-boss

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for soldiers, family members and civilians to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere.

While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies that provide assistance, it offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders.

Call: My children's school, Loyd School, was moved to Sand Hill. I am concerned that the school bus runs at least 20 minutes late every day because it has to stop while the troops pass. I would like someone to look into this situation.

Fort Benning Schools' response: Each of the school buses makes two morning runs to Loyd. The first run transports students in grades three to five; the second run transports students in grades kindergarten to two.

Frequently the second run is approximately 20 minutes late to pick up students at their homes because the first run must wait for troops to pass.

In order to alleviate the problem, the Infantry Training Brigade has put out a memo stating that troops will use 11th Airborne Road when marching rather than the side roads at 2nd Infantry Division Road and 2nd Armored Division Road. This will prevent congestion with school buses making morning bus runs to the Loyd School Starship.

Also, buses are allowed to pass marching troops, but they must slow to 10 mph.

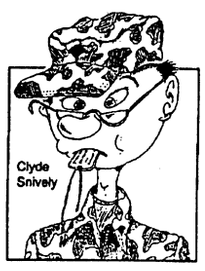
Call: I don't like the new pharmacy policy on no refills at the hospital. Why should I take up the time of the physician just to get a new prescription written because I can't get a refill at the hospital?



U.S. Army Medical Department Activity's response: The new refill pharmacy was created for the convenience of our increasing beneficiary population.

The number of prescriptions filled has tripled since the Primary Care for the Uniformed Services Clinic has relocated.

The refill pharmacy is set up to be mainly a call-in service; and, by taking advantage of this, patients would be taken first in line and avoid the wait and long lines.

Watch eating during March

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

Clyde Snively is no nutritionist, but promises to watch what he eats, at least during March.

commentary

March is National Nutrition Month. Apparently all those nutritionists out there think we Americans don't have a clue as to what's good for us and what's not.

And you know what — they're right. So they banded together to tell us by running a massive campaign during March.

I know you readers are a lot more savvy about nutrition than I am. I'm like the tourist in some fancy dancy European museum who says, "I don't know nothing about art, but I know what I like."

I know nothing about the nutritional values of food, but I know what I like. Unfortunately that approach to food — eat what you like — can kill you.

Apparently you eat too much of the bad stuff, which I think are mostly fats, but can include practically anything else you like, and things happen to you.

You get fat. That puts a strain on your heart. And the extra strain is being put on a heart that might not be getting the flow of blood it needs because not only are your stomach, hips and thighs getting fatter and flabbier, but so are your arteries.

In this case, the fat is forming and clinging to the interior walls of your blood vessels, making it harder and harder for the heart to move the blood around.

So the heart calls it quits and stops beating. We all know what happens next. We die.

That, unfortunately is about the extent of my knowledge of nutrition, fats and the like, although I do know studies are continually being published that tell us to avoid Italian food, then Mexican food, then Chinese, then pasta. Is this what's called a trade war?

What I want are more studies that tell me a glass of red wine with my French food (anyone know of a French restaurant?) keeps me living longer.

Or I want someone to come up and tell me I'm a direct descendent of those Italians who live forever despite what they eat.

In the meantime, I guess I'll go to one of those nutrition seminars, pick up some brochures and make myself smarter about what to eat during March.

Hey, who stole my bag of peanuts while I was out?

National Nutrition Month Proclamation

The benefits of good nutrition and healthy lifestyle habits are substantiated and well known for enhancing health.

National Nutrition Month is an opportunity to increase the emphasis on nutrition awareness and the positive aspects of a well-balanced diet. Along with other Americans, the military community has the opportunity to learn more about making healthy food choices.

During March, good nutrition is promoted throughout the country and on every military installation. This year's theme, "Discover Nutrition Anytime, Anywhere," emphasizes to consumers that through proper education, a healthful eating style can be possible whenever food is purchased or eaten.

During March, practical information on how to make healthy food choices will be available to our own community.

I strongly urge all of the Fort Benning community to take advantage of the many nutrition education opportunities available during National Nutrition Month and learn to "Discover Nutrition Anytime, Anywhere!"

Schools bag savings after school lunch changes

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet

Official affirmation of the quality of the Fort Benning schools and cost-cutting measures designed to improve the school lunch fund were topics of discussion at the regular school board meeting Monday.

Several recently-implemented, cost-cutting measures in school cafeterias have resulted in a marked improvement in the school lunch fund, reported Alice Skinner, director of logistics and support personnel for the Fort Benning Schools.

The total loss for January was $588, Skinner said. The loss for December was $7,101.

Changes in cafeteria programs such as controlling food costs, reducing inventory supplies, and employee training to reduce waste were implemented in January, she noted.

Skinner reported that Shirley Page, director of child nutrition, is continuing exploration of automation to cut costs in the food service management program.

The board voted to approve recommended changes in cafeteria programs such as offering choices of main dishes and side dishes, offering a la carte items and increasing the cost of ice cream from 25 cents to 35 cents.

In the superintendent's report, Dr. Dell Karr reported the positive evaluations of educational programs on post by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools accreditation team.

"The visit was fantastic and we could not have been happier with the feedback from the committee," Karr said.

Representatives from the SACs team "found it hard to make any recommendations," said Karr, adding that the team was impressed with facilities, equipment and materials while recognizing the outstanding people in the schools "make it work."

Karr said the team also noted:

• "Fort Benning has cornered the market on uniqueness."

• Parents believed their ideas were heard.

• The climate allows teachers to try innovative ideas and reach beyond expectations.

• Students are secure and cooperative. They feel personal pride in their schools and exhibit self-discipline and structure.

• Principals are open and share leadership, enabling them to develop cooperative relationships throughout the schools.

In other action:

• Col. Gregory Camp, school board president and post chief of staff, introduced Allan Day, newly appointed human resource site manager and labor relations liaison for the schools.

• The school board approved the adoption of a new curriculum guideline for the physical education program.

• Karr congratulated Vicki Rogers, principal of Dexter School, who was selected as one of six Concharty Council of Girl Scouts Women of Achievement.

• Karr announced three Fort Benning educators will present Fort Benning Schools' Renewal project at the SACS annual meeting in December: Glenn Hughes, Stowers principal; Phyllis Parker, Wilson principal; and Kelly Martin, Faith teacher.

• The board heard a report on the partnership between Faith Middle School and Spencer High School. As part of the partnership, the Spencer staff presented two sessions at the weekend Parent Academy, and high school educators will meet with teachers and parents of eighth-graders in April to discuss academic and athletic programs.

School board members present were Camp; Karr; Maj. Robert Thompson; Lt. Col. Andrew Stewart; and school representatives Sharon Marchant, Dexter; Lt. Col. Michael Bingham, Faith; Lisa Grover, Loyd; Adrienne Porter, White; Staff Sgt. Leroy Coronado, Wilson.

29th families now to use Martin clinic

U.S. Army Medical Department Activity

The active duty families of the 29th Infantry Regiment are changing family clinics from Winder to the Martin Family Practice Clinic, according to Lt. Col. Ken Franklin, chief of Martin Army Hospital's Community Care Service.

"This move is designed to improve quality and access for hundreds of families in the Fort Benning community," Franklin said. "Martin Army has been working closely with the leadership of the 29th to make this transition as smooth as possible."

Martin Army policy is to identify each major unit with a single family clinic on post. Previously, families of the 29th were generally assigned to the Winder Family Clinic on Sand Hill. Workload studies showed that the Martin Family Practice Clinic had room for active duty families, while Winder was at maximum capacity.

"By moving the entire unit's families, we can complement the unit's family support plan," Franklin said. "New families can learn how to get medical care from their neighbors, who use the same clinic."

Families of the 29th who are currently assigned to Victory Clinic or Aviation Family Clinic will be unaffected by this change. Such families usually started at another clinic because the soldier came to Fort Benning in another unit, then transferred to the 29th.

Franklin noted that each family is required to come in to the Martin Family Practice Clinic to confirm their address, phone and family data. The enrollment clerk uses this time to assign them a family doctor, orient the family on how to make appointments and explain how to get medical advice from the new clinic.

Active duty families of the 29th Regiment who have not changed their enrollment, can call 544-1710 for more information. Families can also walk in to enroll at Room 178 at Martin Army Community Hospital between 1 and 4 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays.

ACS to conduct youth job fair

Army Community Service

A youth job fair will be April 13 at Youth Services, Building 1056, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Sponsored by Army Community Service Family Member Employment Assistance Program and Youth Services, the job fair is designed to provide employment assistance and job referral services about vacancies on the installation and throughout Columbus and the Phenix City.

High school juniors, seniors and college students between the ages of 16 and 21 may attend the fair.

Local business representatives will be on site to receive applications, conduct on-the-spot screening and interviews. Those participating will have the opportunity to greet business representatives and obtain information on the various job vacancies.

Participants will also be able to obtain information and assistance on various career programs offered by local educational institutions and the military.

More than 100 area businesses have been invited to participate.

Interested businesses may contact the Family Member Employment Assistance Program in order to participate.

Any youth interested in participating can contact the ACS FMEAP, at Building 2643, Soldiers' Plaza or the Indianhead Youth Center for registration information.

During registration, youths will be briefed on proper job strategy techniques and receive a "Job Preparation Packet."

Corrections officer training to be offered

Florida Department of Corrections

The Florida Department of Corrections will establish a Basic Recruit Training Academy on post next month to train soldiers to be certified correctional officers in Florida.

Tuition will be $350, plus an additional $50 for the certification examination taken after successfully completing the basic training. There are no additional fees for books, uniforms or any other costs. Minimum age to be a correctional officer in Florida is 19; there is no maximum age.

The training academy will last 12 weeks. Classes will run 1 to 10 p.m., Monday through Friday. This program is also open to family members of military personnel as well as Department of the Army civilian employees.

After successfully completing the academy and certifying exam, students will become certified correctional officers in the state of Florida.

The Department of Corrections will offer a position to all who successfully meet all of the state's requirements and will make a good faith effort to honor students' requests for work location within Florida, based on available positions.

Correctional officers are responsible for the supervision, protection, care, custody and control of inmates. They supervise inmate activities, maintain order and discipline, patrol inmate cell blocks and conduct periodic inmate counts and inspections.

For more information, contact the Education Center at 545-6114 or Rick Maxey or Tammy Young at the Florida Department of Corrections at (904) 487-2875.

Auto crafts centers available for do-it-yourselfers

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

For most people, a motor vehicle is an indispensible part of their daily existence.

Keeping that car or truck in good working condition is just as indispensible to ensure things won't go wrong when you need transportation, said William Place, post Arts and Crafts manager.

Fort Benning has two auto crafts centers where those with a do-it-yourself inclination can do anything from changing oil to rebuilding an engine.

The Main Post center, Building 2483, is located on Way Street, and the Kelley Hill center, Building 9064, is located on Marne Road.

Those authorized to use the centers include active duty and retired military, their family members, Department of Defense and nonappropriated fund civilian employees, contract employees and members of the Reserve, Place said.

The centers offer hydraulic lift facilities, tools, work bays, technical assistance and instructional videos for those who wish to repair their own vehicles. Customers pay for parts, which can be ordered by the centers, and engine fluids plus $1 per hour for space rental while working on the car.

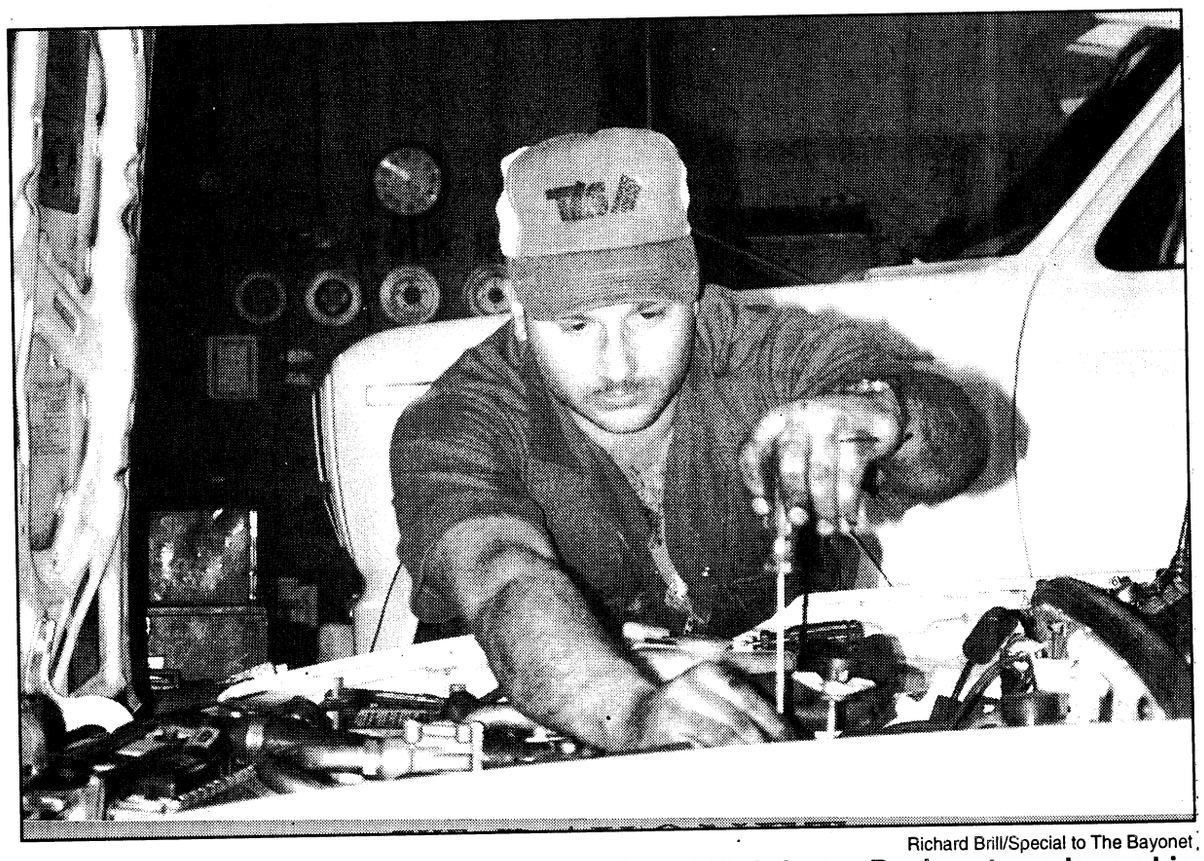
Each facility also offers an engine analysis service using one of the most sophisticated computerized analysis machine made, Place said.

"There are only three of these analyzers in Columbus. Two are here on post," he said.

There is a $25 fee for an engine analysis.

Authorized users can also take advantage of the engine and transmission exchange service.

"We can exchange a ruined engine or transmission for a newly rebuilt engine or transmission. Plus our mechanics can remove the old engine or transmission and install the new one," he said.



Place said by using the auto crafts centers, customers can drastically cut the amount of money they might otherwise spend on maintenance and repairs.

"The figures are astronomical in some cases," he said. "What's more, customers get valuable hands-on knowledge and experience."

Place suggested using the centers on weekdays to avoid the large weekend crowds.

The Main Post center is open Wednesday through Friday from 1:30 to 9 p.m. and weekends from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m and can be reached at 545-2337.

The Kelley Hill center is open Monday, Tuesday and Friday from 1:30 to 9 p.m. and weekends from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m and can be reached at 544-3101.

profile in excellence

Name: Spc. Andrew Gracia III

Position: Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers Program representative Unit: 4th Ranger Training Battalion
MOS: 92YIP
Job Title: Supply clerk
Years on the job: Three years
Hometown: Upland, Calif.

What were your reasons for joining the Army?
To try something new in life like jumping out of an airplane.

What were your reasons for choosing your MOS? It can always be used at any unit in the military and can be used in the civilian world.

What person has most influenced your military career? Warrant Officer 1 Eric Soliz, a supply sergeant with Company A, 4th Ranger Training Battalion. His attitude and his words of knowledge to attend schools encouraged me.

If you were the sergeant major of the Army for a day, what improvements would you make? Try to make communication between civilian and military personnel better.

What do you think about the BOSS program and why is it important? It works well for the soldiers as long as the issues are kept in the boundaries of BOSS. It helps level out the advantages that married or off-post soldiers have.

What have you accomplished as the BOSS representative for your unit? The soldiers know who the BOSS representative is and that they can talk to me anytime, anywhere, about anything.

In your opinion, how can the individual soldier get involved in the BOSS program? The soldier must be willing to give time first to be involved with BOSS.

What specifically has the BOSS program done to help the soldiers in your unit? It has made life in barracks for the soldiers easier to deal with. There is not as much to stress over as some other units have.

What others have to say about you: "Good worker; he puts 110 percent into every task he is assigned to do."

WOMEN: Army opportunities

speaks well of the quality of the women."

Some of the other topics Hickerson covered included:

Women's expanding role

"I think it helps soldiers to be able to deal with a coed Army as soon as they can in their career, regardless of what their specialty is," Hickerson said.

"We don't have a pure all-male Army anymore, anywhere. When the infantry goes to war, they're going to be supported by female troops — female medics, female vehicle support, female intelligence."

The Army Recruiting Command is aiming to recruit 20 percent women this year, she said, which means one out of every five new soldiers will be female.

Basic training at Forts Jackson, S.C., and Leonard Wood, Mo., is now integrated, she pointed out, as is advanced individual training in many locations.

"This is a coed Army and we must work together to have a cohesive Army," Hickerson said.

Negative stereotypes

Most people who don't want women to come work for them are those who have never had females work for them, Hickerson said.

"I find that the main concern of men about working with women is that they've never done it before. Once they are given the opportunity to work together side by side, the fears go away and they find that they are just fellow soldiers and co-workers."

Women in combat arms

"If you're talking about women in ground combat, I don't see that opening up any time soon. I think that at some point it may happen, but will it happen in the near future? You may see it; I won't," Hickerson said.

She pointed out that there are some NATO countries, like Canada and Denmark, where there are no restrictions, and women can go into the infantry.

And, she said, since women are now being assigned to all units surrounding ground combat, "If you ask 'Are women going to be in combat?' — They're already in combat."

What a lot of people don't realize, she said, is that "women don't join the Army to stay out of combat ... every job we have is subject to combat."

There is a perceived issue of strength, Hickerson said. Are women strong enough?

"There are women, I'm sure, who could do this, and there are women who could do it a lot better than the guys who are there."

PT standards

Physical training standards are based on equal effort for each task taking into account physiological differences, Hickerson said.

"I think it's logical — the Olympics are different, right?"

But when it comes to doing a job, she said, the standards should be the same. "I don't think female pilots should have any different standards than male aviators."

The same is true for schools, she said entrance requirements should be the same.

Promotions and quotas

There are a lot of misconceptions about women, minorities and promotions, Hickerson said.

"One of the really good things about the Army, I think, is that everybody has an equal chance for promotion based on their performance, and there are not quotas," she said.

But the Army is sensitive to whether women and minorities are promoted at the same rate as the Army at large, and "overall, particularly statistic wise, women show up equal to or better than the average promotion," she said.

Glass ceiling

"If there is a glass ceiling, it's combat exclusion," Hickerson said.

She is one of three female generals in the Army (a fourth has just been selected for promotion), as opposed to more than 370 male generals, she said.

Though that may seem out of proportion, she said, the majority of general officer positions are in branches such as infantry and armor.

Female generals have traditionally come from the Army Nurse Corps, or the Adjutant General or Military Police branches.

Now that more branches have opened up, she foresees many more female generals in the future, she said.

Also, she pointed out, you don't build a sergeant major, a colonel or a general overnight.

"It's 22 years average pin-on time, so women who came in '74 or '75 are just now hitting 20 years; so you're going to start seeing lots more women sergeants major and generals."

SDT: Over

• TRADOC will continue to develop, field and maintain soldier training publications to support individual task based training and self development requirements.

At Fort Benning, the Directorate of Training will continue to publish the soldiers' manuals, said Michael A. Tryon, chief of Manuals, Analysis and Test Branch, but the question remains as to whether actual test questions will be released to units for training purposes.

Right now the questions themselves are still classified because they may be used on exams such as those given at the NCO Academy, Tryon said.

All other existing SDT materials will be made available to units for training purposes.

THE NEXT TIME YOU DRIVE TO ATLANTA TO CATCH A FLIGHT... ATTACH THIS TO YOUR WINDOW!

Some folks think that to get the cheapest airfare or the best airline connection, it's necessary to drive to Atlanta. Leaving Columbus two hours early to make the 100 mile drive, parking their car in a suburb of Harris County, fighting the crowds, catching a train and finding any one of hundreds of departure gates, and then being faced with the same grim process on their return, doesn't seem to deter the cost-conscious traveller in his quest to find the absolute lowest fare.

Columbus Now Has
"THE HOMEFIELD ADVANTAGE"

There are now five air carriers serving Columbus, providing a total of 40 arrivals and departures daily, with more flights expected to be added as the traffic increases. More carriers and more flights also mean more destinations, improved service and more competitive fares.

So next time you make your travel plans, contact your travel agent and compare fares. Then think about that four hour round-trip drive to and from Atlanta and see if it's really worth the extra effort. Shop around, you'll soon realize that a Columbus departure gives you...

Stars shine bright with 4th straight win

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

Scott "Rudy" Alalof kicked field goals of 20, 25, 25 and 32 yards, and tailback Robert Williams had touchdown runs of 21 and one yard to propel the Columbus Stars to their fourth straight win without a loss Saturday night at Garrett Stadium 32-0 against the Dothan, Ala., Chiefs.

The win keeps the Stars tied for first place with the Albany Warriors in the Northern Division of the Americas Football League. Albany downed the St. Augustine, Fla., Tigers 38-0.

Alalof got his first field goal of the night after the Stars took the opening kickoff and drove down to the Chiefs' 11-yard line where the drive stalled. Alalof drilled the kick through the uprights for a 3-0 lead with 7:48 left in the first quarter.

Williams (six carries for 92 yards, two touchdowns) upped the lead to 9-0 with a 17-yard sweep around the right side for his first touchdown of the night after the Stars took over at the Chiefs' 17-yard line on a bad snap to Chiefs punter Jeremy Baggett. Alalof converted the extra-point attempt for the 10-0 lead with 13:18 to play in the first half.

The Stars' special teams used a second bad punt snap to set up a 1-yard touchdown run by fullback Jamon Smith with 5:24 left in the half after the Stars' offense took over on downs at the Chiefs own 28, Alalof missed the extra point attempt for a 16-0 lead at the break.

Quarterback Jeff McCarrie barks out signals to the offensive line Saturday night.

Terry K. Ray/Special to The Bayonet
Jeff McCarrie (left) talks to wingback Bennie Harris on the sideline during first half action.

"Every time I come onto the field to attempt a field goal or a conversion, I've already envisioned the ball going through the uprights," Alalof said. "If it were not for my snapper (center Sean McEndree, holder Matt Mayberry and the offensive line) I'm nothing. I'm just glad I can contribute to the team."

Alalof opened up the scoring for the Stars in the third quarter with his second field goal a 32-yarder to push the Stars' to 19-0 with 10 minutes left in the third quarter.

A fumble recovery by defensive end Robert Stroy of the Stars at the Chiefs' 28-yard line set up the Stars for another Alalof field goal this time from 25 yards out and a 22-0 bulge.

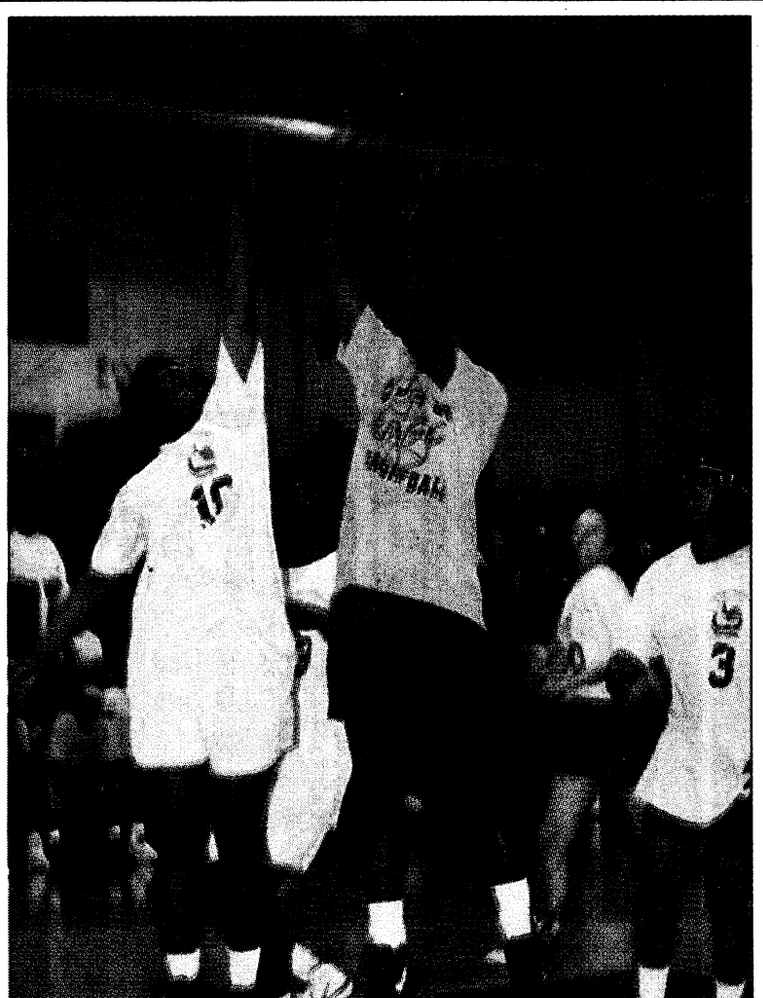
Williams got his second touchdown of the night midway through the fourth quarter when the Stars offense, with backup quarterback Dwight Washington (Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment) at the helm, moved the ball from their own 28 down to the Chiefs' one. On a third down play, Williams took a hand off from Washington and waltzed into the end zone. Alalof converted the attempt for the 29-0 spread.

"I want to give all the credit to the offensive line," Williams said. "I was just fortunate to be the recipient of some good runs due to their blocking."

Chiefs quarterback Clifton Sherrod's fumble at the Chief 20 - yard line was recovered by Stars linebacker Steve Crayton at the 16. Four plays later, Alalof came on and booted a 25-yarder for his fourth and final field goal of the night and a 32-0 final score.

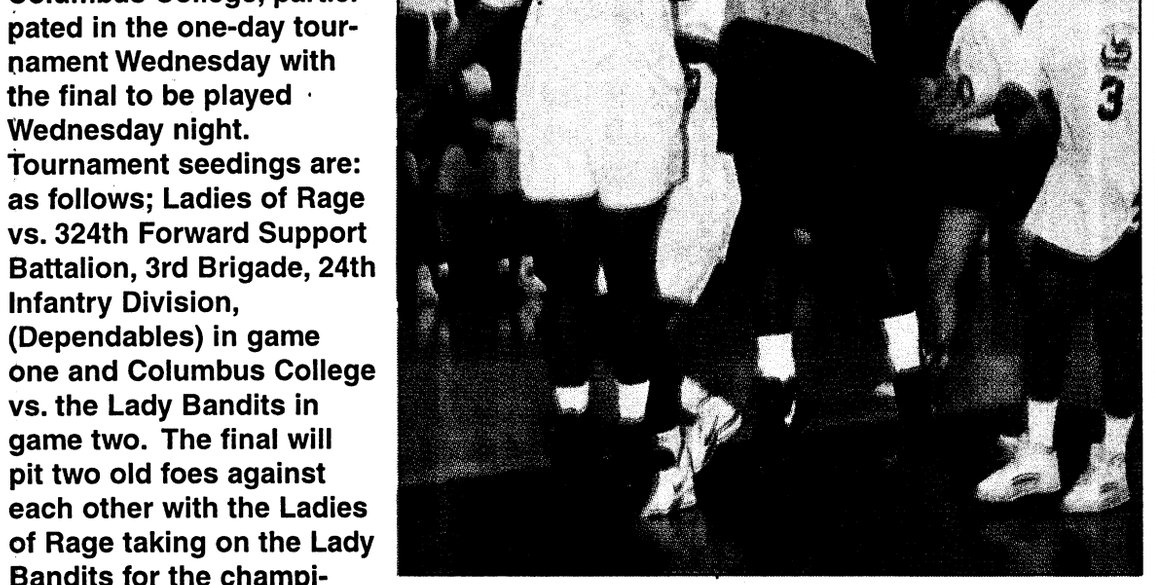
The Stars defense once again was true to form, shutting out its third straight opponent on the young season. "We have a young, very positive defense with one goal in mind," said linebacker Kevin Jordan (six tackles, two assists, one caused fumble and one sack). "We are improving every week. We still haven't played an ultimate game. Each week we have players who step up and make the plays."

The Stars simply dominated the game on both sides of the ball. The offense gained a total of 263 yards while the defense gave up only 31. Three turnovers (two fumbles, one interception by linebacker Frank Lewis) by the Chiefs led directly to Stars' points. The Stars' offense, which has had a problem holding onto the ball, coughed it up only once.



The Stars will travel to Albany, Ga., to take on the Warriors, who are tied with the Stars atop the Northern Division at 4-0. Head coach Tom Staton sees this game as a measuring stick for his team.

"This team plays every game as if it were the championship," Staton said. "If they can play like this against the Warriors, I believe they can make it to the championship."



Stars quarterback Jeff McCarrie (four for eight passing for 46 yards) concurs with Staton's assessment of the team. "This team was due to have a scoring output like this," McCarrie said. "The defense has done the job for us and it was time for the offense to put some points on the board. Saturday will be a big challenge for this team. If we can go over to Albany and come home with a win, it'll prove who is the best."

March madness ...

The Fort Benning intramural basketball season is heading for the post season tournament at Columbus College. Four teams, three from Fort Benning and one from Columbus College, participated in the one-day tournament Wednesday with the final to be played Wednesday night. Tournament seedings are: as follows; Ladies of Rage vs. 324th Forward Support Battalion, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, (Dependables) in game one and Columbus College vs. the Lady Bandits in game two. The final will pit two old foes against each other with the Ladies of Rage taking on the Lady Bandits for the championship Wednesday at 8 p.m. Admission is free.

AMU shooters teach college marksmen

By Marlene Tikal
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

Thanks in part to U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit International Pistol Team members, Ohio State University student Rebekah Southward handles a .22-caliber pistol like a pro.

A member of her university's varsity pistol team, Southward, along with 11 other college marksmen from both OSU and the Citadel, ventured to Fort Benning recently to participate in The College Grand Prix.

The College Grand Prix is an annual advanced training clinic hosted by the USAMU, said Sgt. 1st Class Robert Yates, non-commissioned officer in charge of the International Pistol Team. Its purpose is to provide college marksmen the advanced skills they need to improve their performance during air pistol, free pistol and standard pistol competitions, as well as women's sport pistol and air pistol events.

These skills were partially provided through a series of classes taught by International Pistol Team members. Topics ranged from trigger control to shooting fundamentals to proper sight alignment.

Since the USAMU marksmen are professionals who compete in a variety of international-level shooting competitions, including the Olympics, all classes were taught from a professional point of view, Yates said.

"What that means is we took the topics of the classes and used them to relate our real-life experiences — situations we came across while competing in the professional marksmanship arena," Sgt. Ronnie Watts said. For example, Watts once had a problem with trigger control. Breathing too rapidly caused him to press the trigger too rapidly, affecting his accuracy during competitions.

"I overcame this," Watts assures. "But not without a lot of training and hard work."

The hard work paid off. Not only did Watt's performance improve, but he used the experience of overcoming his problem area as a learning example for the students.

It's a lesson Southward doesn't take for granted. While she credits her college varsity coach for teaching her the basics of pistol shooting, she said the professional lessons begin with the Marksmanship Unit.

"These guys are the experts," Southward said. And as a college student with only two years shooting experience under her belt, Southward once could never imagine standing in a USAMU marksman's shoes.

"But my thinking on that has changed. They've proven that even at such a high level of shooting, they still have obstacles to overcome — and they do so on a daily basis," Southward said. "It's given me hope that maybe someday I can be competing on the same level as them."

Southward is not alone in her thinking. According to Margaret Schoap, manager of the National Rifle Association's Collegiate Shooting program, college students who participate in the Marksmanship Unit's advanced training clinic have shown a dramatic improvement in their performance.

"Students come out of the clinic more motivated, more competent than other college-level marksmen who didn't take advantage of what the Marksmanship Unit has to offer," Schoap said. Those students who participate in the clinic — and others like it, such as the annual marksmanship clinic at Quantico Marine Corps Base — are the ones who usually go on to the National Championships competition.

"Not only do they do that," Schoap said, "some even go so far as to title as national champions in their specific shooting discipline."

As for Southward, she hopes to go much further.

"I hope to one day shoot with the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit," she said. "That's my dream."

And, considering the way she shoots, Yates said, it's a dream that may someday become a reality.

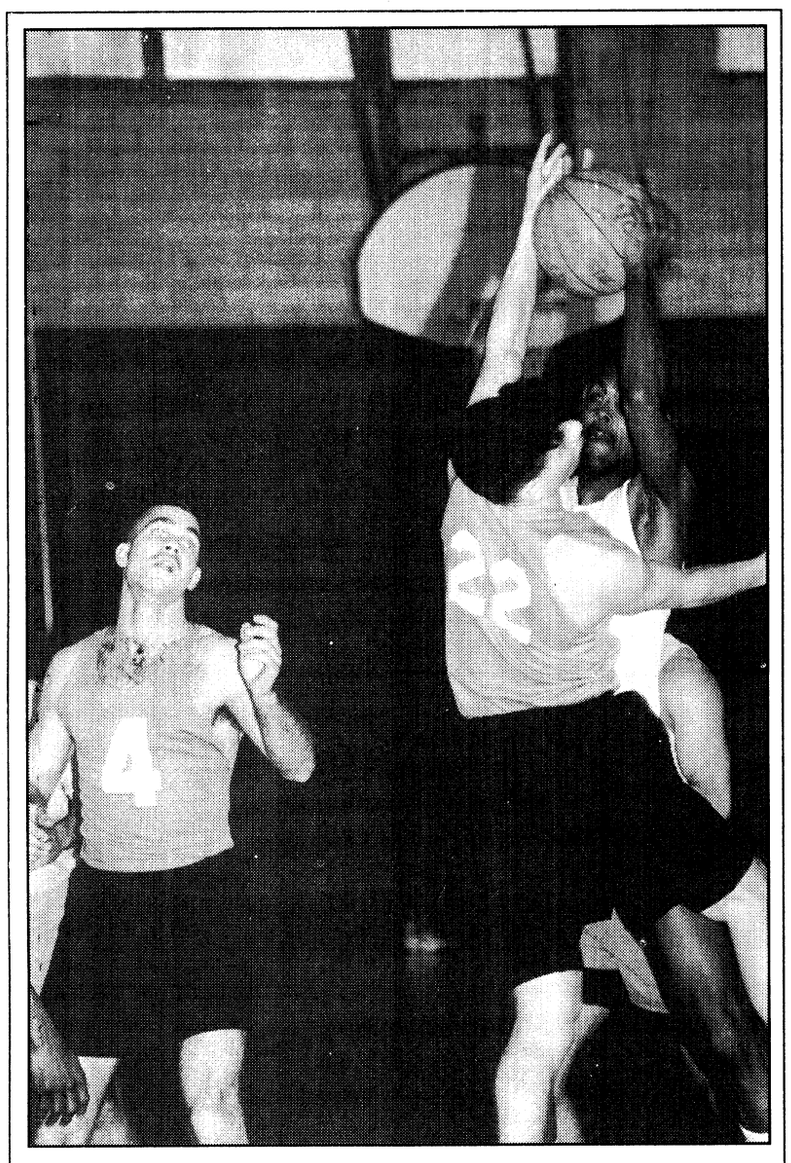
Cruise-matics split games in Mardi Gras tourney

By Joe Saffron
Cruise-matics Rugby Football Club

The Columbus-Fort Benning Cruise-matics Rugby Football Club traveled to Mobile, Ala., to participate in the annual Mardi Gras tournament Saturday.

Playing alongside Mobile Bay in the shadow of the battleship USS Alabama, the ruggers earned a split of their two, same-day matches.

In their opener against heavily favored Mobile Rugby Football Club, the 1992 national champions and perennial tournament favorite, the outmanned Cruisers lost a hard fought match to the tourney hosts, 10-5.



The well-skilled Mobile side led 10-0 at the half, but Columbus-Fort Benning dominated the second half, scoring the only try.

Despite coming up short, the Cruisers' physical play exacted a toll on Mobile, which, surprisingly, lost its second match to a side from Cleveland.

The Cruise-matics second match, against Gulf Coast Rugby Football Club, saw the Cruisers break out of their recent offensive slump and post their first win of the young season, 32-5.

After trailing early 5-3, they rallied to a 13-5 halftime lead. The second half was all Columbus, led offensively by fullback Jason Daffin and eight-man Darren Monaco.

The two-game split leaves last Fall's Division II champions at 1-3-1, with their next match tomorrow in Montgomery at 1 p.m. The next home game will be played against Fort Rucker, Ala., at Lakebottom Park, Columbus, March 11.

Bike ride rolls from Rome to Augusta

By Jerry Colley
Bicycle Ride Across Georgia

About 2,600 bicyclists will be heading for the hills of North Georgia when the 16th annual Bicycle Ride Across Georgia rolls June 11 to 17.

Riders and support personnel will spend the night June 10 at Rome High School before starting to pedal June 11, with overnight stops at Dalton, Ellijay, Dahlonega, Toccoa, Elberton and Clarks Hill Lake before the 345-mile ride ends with a festive, catered end-of-the-road party at Augusta's Riverwalk June 17.

"BRAG '95 will be our hilliest ride yet, but one of our most scenic," said ride director Jerry Colley.

As always, BRAG offers riders a way to get to know the history, terrain, sights and people of Georgia in a way that few other vacations ever will.

This year's ride will include stops at some of the Peach State's rivers and waterfalls, an ostrich farm, the Cabbage Patch Doll Hospital, Royston's Ty Cobb Museum, as well as tours of apple farms and country stores.

Entertainment will include panning for gold in Dahlonega, the fourth annual BRAG Talent Show, featuring the Kazoo Cycling Band and street dance in Elberton, and the shaggin' sounds of the Swingin' Medallions at the Fort Gordon Recreational Area.

BRAG is a family ride — some of the riders are still in elementary school, while others are drawing Social Security checks. Some parents tow their babies and toddlers behind their bikes in carriers. Many couples ride tandem bikes made for two riders.

Each day's ride ranges from 35 to 60 miles, with most riders camping each night in tents or recreational vehicles. Some riders stay in local motels. Past studies have shown that BRAG riders spend an average of $80,000 in each town in which they stop overnight.

Overnight camping sites are June 10 at Rome High School, June 11 at Dalton High School, June 12 at the Lion's Club Park on the Coosawatee River and Gilmer High School, June 13 at North Georgia College in Dahlonega, June 14 at Toccoa Falls College in Toccoa, June 15 at Elbert County High School in Elberton and June 16 at Fort Gordon Recreational area on Clarks Hill Lake.

To help riders get into shape, a BRAG Spring Tune-Up Ride is scheduled April 28 through May 1, at Arrowhead Park on Lake Tobesofkee near Macon. Riders will eat fried green tomatoes at the Whistle Stop Cafe, visit the Air Force Museum, and visit an antebellum plantation.

For an application, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to BRAG '95, P.O. Box 576, Stone Mountain, GA 30086-0576. For more information, call (404) 469-2091 and leave your name and address.

BRAG has named the Georgia chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society as its official recipient charity for the 1995 ride. The MS Society will provide rest stops and some lunches along the ride. Money raised from BRAG will provide support services for more than 4,000 Georgians with multiple sclerosis, a central nervous system disease that affects a third of a million Americans.

Those support services include information and referral, support groups, counseling, medical equipment and therapeutic recreation.

Other sponsors include REI, Coca-Cola, PowerAde, BellSouth, the Atlanta Journal-Constitution, Miller Brewing Company, DeKalb Tech, PowerBars, Sysco and Keebler Co.

The American Red Cross will provide first-aid services. Air-conditioned bus service, for about $35 per trip, will bring riders from Atlanta to Rome, and from Augusta to Rome, both June 10, and from Augusta to Atlanta June 17.

Registration for the ride is $70 for adults and $45 for children and seniors, which covers camping for seven nights, route maps, luggage transportation, a T-shirt, sag wagon support, rest stops stocked with water, fruit and food every 10 miles, street dances, and the final party.

Military Police Activity

This week's hot topic concerns Military Police jurisdiction. In recent weeks, several soldiers have made complaints to the Military Police regarding incidents that occurred off the installation.

When these individuals were informed that they would have to make their complaint through the local police, they said they believed that the Military Police were unconcerned about the incidents involving them. This has nothing to do with being concerned or not, it's merely a matter of jurisdiction.

When an incident occurs off the installation, the civilian authorities of that town, city or county have jurisdiction concerning the incident. If you are involved in an incident off post and wish to file a report, you must do so through the local authorities, not the Military Police. We will assist you in contacting the local authorities if you are unsure which agency is responsible, but we cannot assume investigational jurisdiction.

The following entries were extracted from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters. Such entries may be incomplete and do not determine the guilt or innocence of any person.

• A specialist was apprehended for larceny of government property and theft by deception. While a Criminal Investigation Division agent was conducting liaison at a local surplus store, the manager reported that a soldier had pawned a Gortex jacket for $25 and left his identification card in the pocket.

TAKE A BITE OUT OF CRIME®

The manager said this individual had pawned numerous items of field gear amounting to more than $1,000. While the agent was interviewing the manager, the soldier walked in and pawned various field gear items. The soldier was then detained and transported back to the installation where he was advised of his rights and interviewed. Investigation continues by CID.

• A sergeant was charged with leaving a motor vehicle unattended and damage to government property. The soldier left his vehicle unattended and in gear with the engine running. While he went to check on something, the truck rolled approximately 350 feet and struck a building, causing serious damage to both vehicle and the building. The soldier was cited and released at the scene.

• A specialist and a civilian were charged with wrongful possession of a controlled substance (marijuana). The two were speeding. A traffic stop was initiated and the vehicle was found to have expired plates. When the driver got out of the vehicle, a suspected marijuana cigarette was seen on the console. A field test was conducted and the marijuana proved positive for tetrahydrocananibinol. The two individuals were taken to the Military Police Station where they were processed, and the soldier was released to his unit. The civilian was issued post ejection orders, escorted to the post boundaries and released.

• A civilian was charged with shoplifting at the Class VI store. Two individuals entered the store and one began to place various bottles of liquor in her coat and purse and then attempted to exit the store without paying for the items. One female was detained and the other person fled the area before the MPs could arrive. The individual was taken to the MP station, processed and issued post ejection orders and released.

Other activities include eight cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, 23 traffic accidents, 14 cases of larceny and five cases of shoplifting.

Remember to help "Make Our Post The Best — Give Crime Arrest. Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police at 545-5223 or 545-5224 or the "Crime In Progress" line at 545-5222.

Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: Two years ago my wife and I sold our home to a couple who assumed our Veterans Affairs guaranteed loan.

We got a letter from the Veterans Administration telling us that the bank was about to foreclose on the loan on this home and that we could be liable for the default.

How can this be? If the buyers assumed our loan, why aren't they liable for their default? What can we do now?

A. First of all, don't worry just yet. The letter you received from the VA is only a notification of possible default by the owners, your buyers. There may never actually be a default. However, it is true that you could find yourself liable for your buyers' default of the loan they assumed from you.

While the buyers assumed your VA guaranteed loan, you apparently did not get a release of your liability on the loan from the VA prior to closing the sale of the home. In other words, while the buyer assumed the payments of the loan, your name remains as primary obligor on the mortgage note to the bank. An assumption of the loan does not release this obligation.

The VA guarantees the bank that the loan will be repaid, so when your buyer defaults, the bank, or mortgagee, collects its money from the VA. The VA collects the money it had to pay the bank from the person whose loan was guaranteed, even though that person sold the home.

Your right of recourse is against your buyer. Of course, the buyer has no money, otherwise he or she would not have defaulted.

Since suing the buyer probably won't get you anywhere, what can you do now? VA regulations allow you to request to be relieved from your obligation on the loan when the following conditions are met:

• The buyer is legally liable to the VA also under a valid assumption

• Your loan was current at the time you sold the home to the buyer

• The buyer is found to have been a satisfactory credit risk at the time he or she acquired the property.

In other words, if you would have qualified for the release from liability at the time you sold your home, you can be relieved from liability if you apply within one year of the default. You may also request a waiver of your liability because of financial hardship.

Realtors often will not inform you that an assumption doesn't release your liability from the VA. You must tell your real estate agent that you will not approve any sale unless your loan is assumed and you get a release of liability.

Healthy habits easy to digest

By Sarah Flash
Nutrition Care Division

Have you ever become angry with yourself for devouring the first food item in sight when you come home from work because you are tired and hungry? You know you should be eating something nutritious, yet you routinely raid the refrigerator for junk food.

Or, do you often eat out in restaurants because you rationalize that you deserve a treat out after a long, tiring day?

The following tips can help plan for those munchie attacks and subsequent feelings of anger or guilt.

• Prevent yourself from arriving home hungry. If you skip lunch, this can contribute to destructive habits like gorging on the wrong foods. A hearty lunch or afternoon snack can help prevent hunger and high fat quick fixes after work.

• Plan time to shop for food. You are more likely to eat nutritiously if you have the kitchen stocked with wholesome, nutritious food choices, such as fruits, vegetables and whole grains. Never shop for food while you are hungry.

• Cooking in large quantities on the weekend or off days and freezing smaller portions to use during the week makes eating at home easier during a hectic schedule. For example, cooking pasta or rice ahead and placing small portions in a plastic bag makes reheating quick and easy. Frozen vegetables may be the answer to vegetables that spoil quickly before they can be prepared.

When dining out, choose meals wisely. Keep the following foods in mind when dining out.

• For appetizers, choose fruits and vegetables (not fried) or broth-based soups.

• Bread is great if it is unbuttered or buttered in moderation.

• Enjoy a salad, but avoid creamed cottage cheese, shredded cheese, bacon, olives and high-fat dressings. Always ask for dressing on the side.

• Request fish or poultry broiled or baked dry without extra butter. If you choose beef, order a small portion, or take half home with you.

• Be sure to cut off extra fat and avoid gravies or high fat sauces.

• Order pizza with veggie toppings instead of pepperoni or sausage.

• For dessert, sherbet, lowfat yogurt or fresh fruit are all excellent choices.

• Don't forget to drink plenty of water.

• Fast-food restaurants can mean meals loaded with fat.

1995 DRILL SERGEANT OF THE YEAR

Dream comes true for soldier on 'trail'

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

They wear a hat unlike any other in the Army. On the right chest pocket of their shirt is a symbol as unique as the job itself. Their job — to turn civilians into infantrymen in 13 weeks or less. They are drill sergeants.

Within the ranks of these soldiers is one who has distinguished himself above the rest. He is Sgt. 1st Class Thomas J. Zoch, Fort Benning's Drill Sergeant of the Year.

Zoch, 29, is assigned to Headquarters Service Company, Infantry Training Brigade. He learned about the honor Feb. 16 during an office presentation at ITB Headquarters, when Col. Johnny W. Brooks, ITB commander, made the announcement and presented him with a commander's coin.

As the Drill Sergeant of the Year, Zoch's new job requires him to report about the training inside the Infantry Training Brigade to the brigade's command sergeant major. He serves as a liaison between the brigade commander and brigade sergeant major and the brigade's drill sergeants.

"Everyone is not training in the exact same manner," Zoch said. "My feedback to (the brigade commander and the brigade sergeant major) is (what) works and (what) doesn't work."

What did work was the way Zoch performed during the competition for the award.

The competition for the title was broken down into three days of events. Competing against Zoch were four other drill sergeants from other battalions at ITB.

The first day consisted of a physical training test; the second day had the drill sergeants doing skills test, which consisted of teaching a period of instruction. One of the classes was basic rifle marksmanship; and on the third day, the competitors went to a formal board that consisted of sergeants major from battalion and brigade level.

Zoch has been "on the trail" for less than two years. His first assignment as a drill sergeant was with Company D, 3rd Battalion, 32nd Infantry Regiment, which is now inactivated. He spent more than 18 months with that unit.

His company commander at that time was Capt. Lawrence E. George, who is now the adjutant for ITB.

George describes Zoch as articulate, straightforward and resourceful.

"He'll go that extra 30 minutes or that extra mile to get things done," George said.

Zoch, who is 6 feet, 3 inches tall, weighs 190 pounds and wears his battle dress uniform like a poster-perfect soldier, has gotten a lot of things done in the 11 years he has been in the Army.

Before becoming a drill sergeant, Zoch served as a rifleman, team leader, dismounted squad leader, Bradley Fighting Vehicle gunner, Bradley commander and platoon sergeant.

He has served with the 8th, 3rd and 24th Infantry Divisions and the 197th Brigade, which is now 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized).

Zoch has been awarded the Expert Infantryman Badge, Overseas Service Ribbon, Army Achievement Medal, Army Commendation Medal, Noncommissioned Officer Professional Development Ribbon, the Airborne and Air Assault Badges and, of course, the Drill Sergeant Badge.

Zoch is also a member of the exclusive Sergeant Morales Club. This club is reserved for the top 10 percent of the noncommissioned officer corps in U.S. Army Europe. To get in, Zoch said, you first have to be recommended. After that, he went through seven or eight boards at different levels to test his knowledge.

"It's probably the most prestigious NCO organization in the Army," he said.

With everything Zoch has done, his attitude about his job hasn't changed.

"You get out of it what you put into it," Zoch said. "I used to tell my soldiers if you give me 110 percent, I'll give you 200 percent."

Zoch said he enjoys training soldiers and describes himself as hard, but fair. He said there would be times during training when a soldier would want to quit and get out of the Army before giving it a real chance.

"That wasn't acceptable with me," Zoch said. "I would really make him take a serious and honest evaluation of himself and get back to me." He said he wouldn't begin the paper work to get someone out until after that soldier got back with him.

George said that the "soldiers sense that they are important" when they are around Zoch. "(He) lets the soldiers get involved," George said.

Although born in Milford, Del., Zoch grew up 15 miles from Fort Jackson, S. C., in Eglin. His father was in the U.S. Navy and Zoch said his dad would take him to Fort Jackson as a child and he would see the soldiers and their weapons. Zoch said he liked the weapons as a child.

Zoch said he had an Army outfit as a child and when his father would take him to the post while he was wearing the outfit, he would tell people that he was a 25-year-old midget.

Sgt. 1st Class Thomas J. Zoch watches to make sure that Pvt. 1 John D. Ray, Company A, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, is doing everything correctly during basic rifle marksmanship training on a mock range at the Infantry Training Brigade.

In high school, Zoch was a part of the Junior ROTC.

"That's probably where I first got really active and involved in the military way of life," he said.

After growing up in a military family and seeing soldiers on a regular basis as a child, Zoch said becoming a drill sergeant was "a life-long dream."

He said the most rewarding aspect of being a drill sergeant is the transformation of the soldiers under his leadership.

He said the new soldiers come in and some "have no purpose, no direction and no motivation." Then, on family day, when the soldiers' parents come to see them, their mothers don't even recognize them, he said.

Zoch said that one mother told him that she could never get her son to do anything. During family day, she told Zoch that "he had done something to her son in eight or so weeks" that she couldn't do in 18 years.

"That's probably the most rewarding portion of being a drill sergeant — (seeing the soldier) marching across the parade field on graduation day," he said.

Drill sergeants don't get a lot of time away from the workplace; but when Zoch does get some time, he likes to spend it with his family.

Zoch has been married to his wife, Amanda, for 11 years. They have two sons, Joshua, 7, and Jonathan, 5.

He said he met Amanda at his old high school. They both went to the same high school, but at different times. He went back to the school to watch the JROTC drill team. Amanda was a part of the team.

Zoch said he and the family like to go to Lake Oliver and use their jet-ski. When he has time alone, Zoch said he likes to take rides on his Kawasaki Ninja 1,000 motorcycle. He also drives a Mitsubushi 3,000 GT.

Zoch describes being a drill sergeant as "the most fun" he's had in the military.

"If you're looking for a challenge, if you're looking for the best job in the Army, it's being a drill sergeant," he said.

The post will recognize Zoch during a ceremony April 10 at the Sand Hill Recreation Center beginning at 3:30 p.m

Also, Zoch will represent Fort Benning in the Training and Doctrine Command's Drill Sergeant of the Year competition May 8 through 12 at Fort Monroe, Va.

The runner-up in the post competition was Staff Sgt. Bryan S. Voisard, also of ITB.

Counternarcotics course students learn climbing techniques for urban ops

By Judith Ginder
School of the Americas

The counternarcotics course at the School of the Americas ended its seventh week Feb. 24 by learning building climbing techniques at McKenna Military Operations on Urbanized Terrain facility.

According to Sgt. 1st Class Stephen Davidson, special operations division, the types of building climbing techniques taught were:

- Spider drop technique
- One-man climbing technique
- Pyramid technique
- Window-basket technique

"The techniques used are determined by several factors. It depends on the building height and type of building, location of the building and the number of people you have with you," said Sgt. 1st Class William Vesga, special operations division instructor.

The spider drop technique is used to drop to the bottom of a smaller building with windows or a door. The soldier begins by lying at the top of the building with his firing side toward the edge of the building. While holding on to the building's edge with his nonfiring arm and foot, he begins to move the firing side of his body along the side of the building.

Once hanging to the side of the building, the soldier can draw his weapon to clear the window or door. After the entry is cleared, the soldier then jumps to the ground and proceeds with the mission.

According to Staff Sgt. Antonio Guadalupe, Special Operations Division, the purpose of the spider drop is to clear the side of the building with entries and still have firing capabilities while doing so. Guadalupe also added that because you are so close to the wall, you are perceived as a much smaller target.

> "In Bolivia, we don't have the facilities to do this type of training. Being able to learn the actual techniques will enable us to do our jobs at home more proficiently."
> — Bolivian Lt. Pereira Estavan
> Counternarcotics Course student

The one-man climbing technique is used for shorter buildings. One man stands with his back to the wall. He bends his knees slightly to provide a step for the other men. The next person steps on his thighs then to his shoulders. At this height, the climber is able to reach the top of the building with his upper-body to boost himself to the top of the building.

The pyramid technique allows a base of men to support and raise one man to the top of a building. After the lead man gets to the top, he clears the area and then helps the next man to the top of the building. One of the two men at the top then attach a rope to themselves while giving the other end of the rope to the men at the base of the building.

One man at the base attaches the rope around his waist and is raised to the top of the building by the two men above. This process is continued until all of the men are on top of the building.

In the window-basket technique, a six-man team starts at the bottom floor of a building. They climb from floor to floor until reaching the top floor. This is achieved by having a base man in the lower window frame who is used for support for the other men to hoist themselves to the next floor's window.

"In Bolivia, we don't have the facilities to do this type of training. Being able to learn the actual techniques will enable us to do our jobs at home more proficiently," said Bolivian Lt. Pereira Estavan, counternarcotics course student.

According to Staff Sgt. Jeff Fiorito, Special Operations Division, all of the techniques used in the building climbing require a great deal of teamwork. Conditions made the exercise somewhat more difficult, but not overwhelmingly so.

Before any of the students tried any of the actions, they were given demonstrations on all of the techniques by SOA instructors.

After the demonstrations, the students broke down into smaller groups and practiced all four of the techniques.

"Learning the correct way to position personnel for security while climbing the building will help me greatly upon returning to my country," said Dominican Republic Lt. Jose M. Hernandez, counternarcotics course student.

"This course builds self-confidence in areas that are important to our missions but that are hard for us to train in at home," Hernandez said.

1995 Sergeant First Class Board

What: Department of the Army promotion board to consider eligible staff sergeants for promotion to sergeant first class, and review for possible elimination under the Qualitative Management Program.

When: March 31

Zones of consideration: For promotion — all staff sergeants with a date of rank of June 30, 1993, and earlier with a basic active service date between Oct. 31, 1975, and May 31, 1989, (both dates inclusive). For QMP – All staff sergeants with a date of rank of May 31, 1994 and earlier.

Official photo: Those staff sergeants who meet eligibility criteria must have a current photo. To schedule an appointment, call 545-s4417.

Noncommissioned Officer Evaluation Reports: Complete-the-record evaluation reports are authorized. Eligibility criteria must be met. Those noncommissioned officers who meet eligibility criteria must review their personnel records and authenticate their personnel qualification record, which goes to the promotion board. Contact your personnel staff noncommissioned officer or call the Adjutant General Personnel Operations and Services Division at 545-2611 or 545-2602.

Memorandum: All personnel qualification records must be mailed to headquarters, Department of the Army by March 24.

Details change, but field life remains the same

By Stacy Wamble
Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.

Bivouac has long been a traditional part of Army basic training. Though the tradition has not changed, many parts of it have, according to soldiers of Company B, 3rd Battalion, 10th Infantry Regiment, Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.

One of the many changes is in the way hygiene is practiced in the field. In the past, an old-fashioned "steel pot" filled with water became a handy wash basin.

"When I was in basic training we used our steel pots to shave in. We had to "recamo" (reapply camouflage) every day and we had no showers, only a change of clothes," said Staff Sgt. John Gelinas, a drill sergeant with Company B, 2nd Battalion, 10th Infantry Regiment, who completed basic training at Fort Leonard Wood.

The same sentiment was voiced by another drill sergeant with the company, Staff Sgt. John Taylor, who completed basic training at Fort Benning.

The Kevlar helmet, with its integral liner, killed that tradition.

While things are slightly better for today's trainees, they are still far from the comforts of one's own bathroom.

"We had no field showers, just Porta-potties. We had a basin of water to use for personal hygiene. We used the water to wash our face and we brushed our teeth around the latrines," stated Spc. Kim Loepp, a trainee who graduated recently from basic training here.

"The personal discomfort didn't bother me. I took around a box of baby wipes. I got a chance to shave with cold water," said Pfc. Stewart Michelon, another basic training graduate from here.

In addition to the change in field hygiene, field food has also changed over the years.

"While in basic training, we ate canned food C-rations. The drill sergeants ate meals, ready-to-eat. We had "John Wayne" candy bars, which we appreciated and had one hot meal a day," said Taylor.

"We ate hot meals and one MRE a day. It was okay. I like it," said Gelinas.

Today's basic training soldiers have a much different menu from those in the past.

While food and hygiene may have changed a bit, the rigors of training have remained the same.

In the past, soldiers had to do such things as conduct tactical feeds, dig fighting positions, perform night patrols and establish a position, according to Taylor. Today's soldiers also build a hasty fighting position, conduct night patrols, establish a site and practice defense for nuclear, biological and chemical warfare, according to Loepp.

SFC board convenes

Adjutant General's Office

A Department of the Army promotion board will convene May 31 to consider soldiers for promotion to sergeant first class.

Also, the board will review records for possible elimination under the Qualitative Management Program.

All eligible staff sergeants must review their personnel qualification records.

Eligibility criteria for promotion consideration to sergeant first class includes all staff sergeants with a date of rank June 30, 1993, and earlier with a basic active service date between Oct. 31, 1975 and May 31, 1989 (both dates inclusive).

Eligibility criteria for Qualitative Management Program includes all staff sergeants with a date of rank May 31 and earlier.

Those staff sergeants who meet eligibility criteria must have a current photo. To schedule an appointment, call 545-4417.

Complete-the-record evaluation reports are authorized. Eligibility criteria must be met.

Those noncommissioned officers who meet eligibility criteria must review their personnel records and authenticate their personnel qualification record, which goes to the promotion board. Contact your personnel staff noncommissioned officer or call the Adjutant General Personnel Operations and Services Division at 545-2611 or 545-2602.

All personnel qualification records must be mailed to Headquarters, Department of the Army, by March 24.

50 years ago this week ...

• After bloody fighting, U.S. Marines on Iwo Jima took 550-foot Mount Suribachi, a heavily defended Japanese bastion at the southern tip of the island. The Marines raised a small American flag, which was later replaced when a larger flag was sent ashore. Five Marines and a Navy hospital corpsman raised it on a piece of Japanese pipe, and as they did Associated Press photographer Joe Rosenthal took the photograph that won him a Pulitzer Prize and that would become one of the most famous photos of all time. It is recreated at the U.S. Marine Memorial in Washington, D.C.

• The battle was far from over, however, and three of the flag-raisers died in combat on the island. It took until March 9 for the Marines to break through stiff Japanese defenses. On March 16, Iwo Jima was declared secured, but even then some fighting continued against diehard resistance in caves and pillboxes. Nearly all of Iwo Jima's 21,000 defenders were killed, as were 6,821 Americans, most of them Marines. Adm. Chester Nimitz said that on Iwo Jima "uncommon valor was a common virtue." 27 Medals of Honor were awarded to Marine and Navy heroes, the most for any single operation of the war.

• The fight for Manila ended with the complete destruction of the Japanese garrison, which had made a last stand in the fortress of Intramuros. Gen. Douglas MacArthur later turned over control of the civil government of the Philippines to President Sergio Osmena. MacArthur also reported that American soldiers had practically completed the destruction of about 6,000 Japanese troops on Corregidor Island.

• Marianas-based U.S. bombers attacked Tokyo, destroying 240 square blocks of the city.

• In the war against the Nazis, the Red Army completed the conquest of Posen, reporting that 84,000 German troops were killed there in the month-long siege. Russian troops also seized the Pomeranian rail center of Neustettin. After two days of fighting across the Roer River, the U.S. Army reported the capture of 21 towns and the taking of 4,000 prisoners. U.S. troops then cleared the Germans from the cites of Muenchen-Gladbach and Rheydt, 15 miles west of Duesseldorf.

• On the homefront, President Franklin D. Roosevelt told a joint session of Congress that the Yalta Conference was a success and that the United States would have to take responsibility for world collaboration or bear the responsibility for another world war. Elsewhere, the nationwide midnight curfew on entertainment went into effect for energy conservation purposes.

• At Fort Benning, a concert featuring the famed 43-piece band of the Parachute School, every member of which was a qualified parachutist, took place at the Main Post Theater. The concert was a benefit for the Red Cross Fund Campaign.

MACH doctor appointed as cancer liaison physician

American College of Surgeons

Dr. (Maj.) Darren Chapman of Fort Benning, recently received a three-year appointment as cancer liaison physician for the Hospital Cancer Program at Martin Army Community Hospital.

The Cancer Liaison Program is an integral part of the Commission on Cancer of the American College of Surgeons.

Chapman is among a national network of more than 2,000 volunteer cancer liaison physicians who provide leadership and support to the Approvals Program and other Commission on Cancer activities.

Chapman, who has a significant interest in the diagnosis and treatment of patients with malignant diseases, also provides local leadership for the annual national clinical goal of the Cancer Liaison Program.

This year's goal is a joint effort by the Commission on Cancer and the American Cancer Society to impact the prevention of tobacco-related cancer and other diseases in the childhood and young adult population.

Established in 1956, the Commission on Cancer, which is composed of Fellows of the College and liaison members representing more than 30 other cancer-related organizations, has approved more than 1,300 cancer programs in institutions across the country.

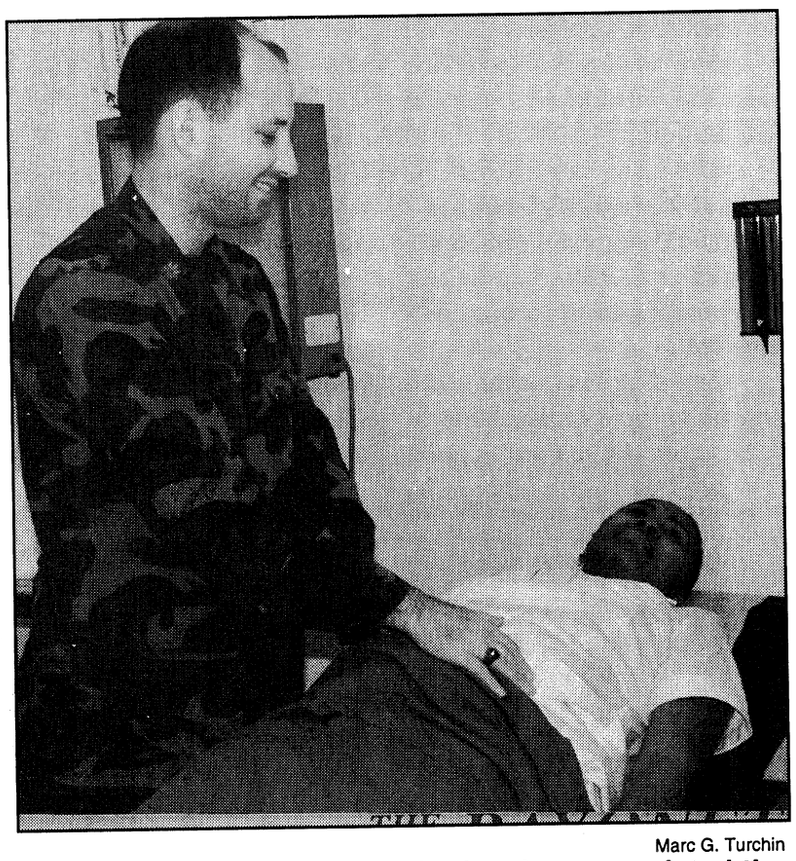
The commission reviews each institution's cancer program for conformity to high standards set by the commission, and encourages participating hospitals to equip and staff themselves so that they are able to provide the best in the diagnosis and treatment of cancer.

Recognizing that cancer is a complex group of diseases, the cancer liaison physician promotes extensive communication and consultation among family physicians, surgeons, medical oncologists, diagnostic radiologists, radiation oncologists, pathologists and other cancer specialists as a means of providing better patient care.

An integral part of an approved cancer program is its cancer registry. The cancer liaison physician provides support and technical expertise to the hospital's cancer registrar and encourages the medical staff to use data generated by the registry.

All patients who are diagnosed as having cancer or are being treated for the disease are listed in the registry so that the hospital can maintain contact with them and make sure that they receive continuing care and assistance with rehabilitation.

Information collected through the registry will allow Martin Army Community Hospital to participate in national studies that are designed to improve patient care. Each year since 1976, more than 800 hospital cancer programs have collaborated with the commission on these studies.



Some of the most extensive incidence and survival statistics in the world have been amassed through this nationwide effort, resulting in the publication of more than 70 manuscripts in professional journals.

Cancer liaison physicians have also provided encouragement to their institutions to participate in the data collection program of the commission, the national cancer data base. During the fourth call for data, cancer patient information was collected from more than 1,200 institutions and provides statistics on 400,000 cases for 1987 and 600,000 cases for 1992. The cancer liaison physician cooperates regularly with this program in the dissemination and interpretation of the resultant reports and subsequent requests for data.

The American Cancer Society estimates that 1,262,600 cases of cancer will be diagnosed during 1995 (1,252,000 in the United States and 10,600 in Puerto Rico).

Twenty-two percent of the hospitals in the United States have cancer programs approved by the Commission on Cancer and 80 percent of new cancer patients are treated in these institutions.

For more information on the Cancer Liaison Program or the approvals program of the Commission on Cancer, contact the Commission on Cancer at the American College of Surgeons, 55 East Erie St., Chicago, Ill. 60611, (312) 664-4050.

PARENT ACADEMY

Teach children to think for themselves, expert says

More than 400 attend school program

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet

Some of the most important tools parents can provide are teaching children how to think for themselves, how to solve their own problems and how to accept responsibility.

Speaking to a capacity crowd of more than 400 at the second annual Fort Benning Parent Academy Feb. 24, author and lecturer Barbara Coloroso discussed methods of parenting that best helped children develop their own inner sense of discipline.

"You can't make kids do something they do not want to do," said Coloroso, who writes about parenting styles and techniques in her book, "Kids Are Worth It!" "Instead, you invite them to make choices, you invite them to make decisions and you invite them to make mistakes."

She encouraged parents to begin when children are young and the stakes are still relatively cheap.

"If you allow kids to make choices and live with the consequences of those choices, you're teaching them to think for themselves," she said.

In a 90-minute lecture peppered with humor and illustrated with personal anecdotes, Coloroso discussed concerns spanning the spectrum of toddlers to teenagers and offered practical advice to create a home environment where children learn consequences, independent thinking and freedom of expression within limits.

For example, if a child dresses in what Coloroso defined as "charitably, a layered look, of green leotards, red knickers, socks and high-top shoes without laces," a parent should ask themselves three questions — is it immoral, is it illegal or is it life threatening? If the answers to these questions are no (offending parents sense of aesthetics doesn't count), parents should "let it go," she said. The child then gets the message, "In this family, I can be me."

Coloroso cited three kinds of parenting techniques and gave examples of how using the techniques helps or hinders a child from thinking for himself.

"Brick wall" parents are dictators who teach kids what to think, not how to think; once a decision is made, it is nonnegotiable despite the circumstances.

"Jellyfish" parents believe "anything goes," want to be friends instead of parents and are indecisive.

"Backbone" parents offer structure but are flexible. "There is a time when as a backbone parent, you bend," she said.

Backbone parents discipline with authority and are best able to help children develop buffers against problems that arise in adolescence, she said.

To help buffer children from sexual promiscuity, drug abuse and suicide, she said they need the following convictions:

- I like myself.
- I can think for myself.
- There is no problem so great it cannot be solved.

In addition, parents should give six critical life messages to their children:

- I believe in you.
- I trust in you.
- I know you can handle it.
- You are listened to.
- You are cared for.
- You are very important to me.

Also as part of the lecture, Coloroso touched on methods of promoting nonviolent conflict resolution and discussed the role of discipline and punishment.

Punishment involves fright, flight or fear, she said.

Punishment is adult oriented, imposes power from without, arouses anger and invites more conflict.

On the other hand, discipline shows children what they have done wrong, gives them ownership of the problem, shows ways to solve the problem they have created, and leaves their dignity intact.

In addition to effective discipline, communication is an important parenting tool, she said.

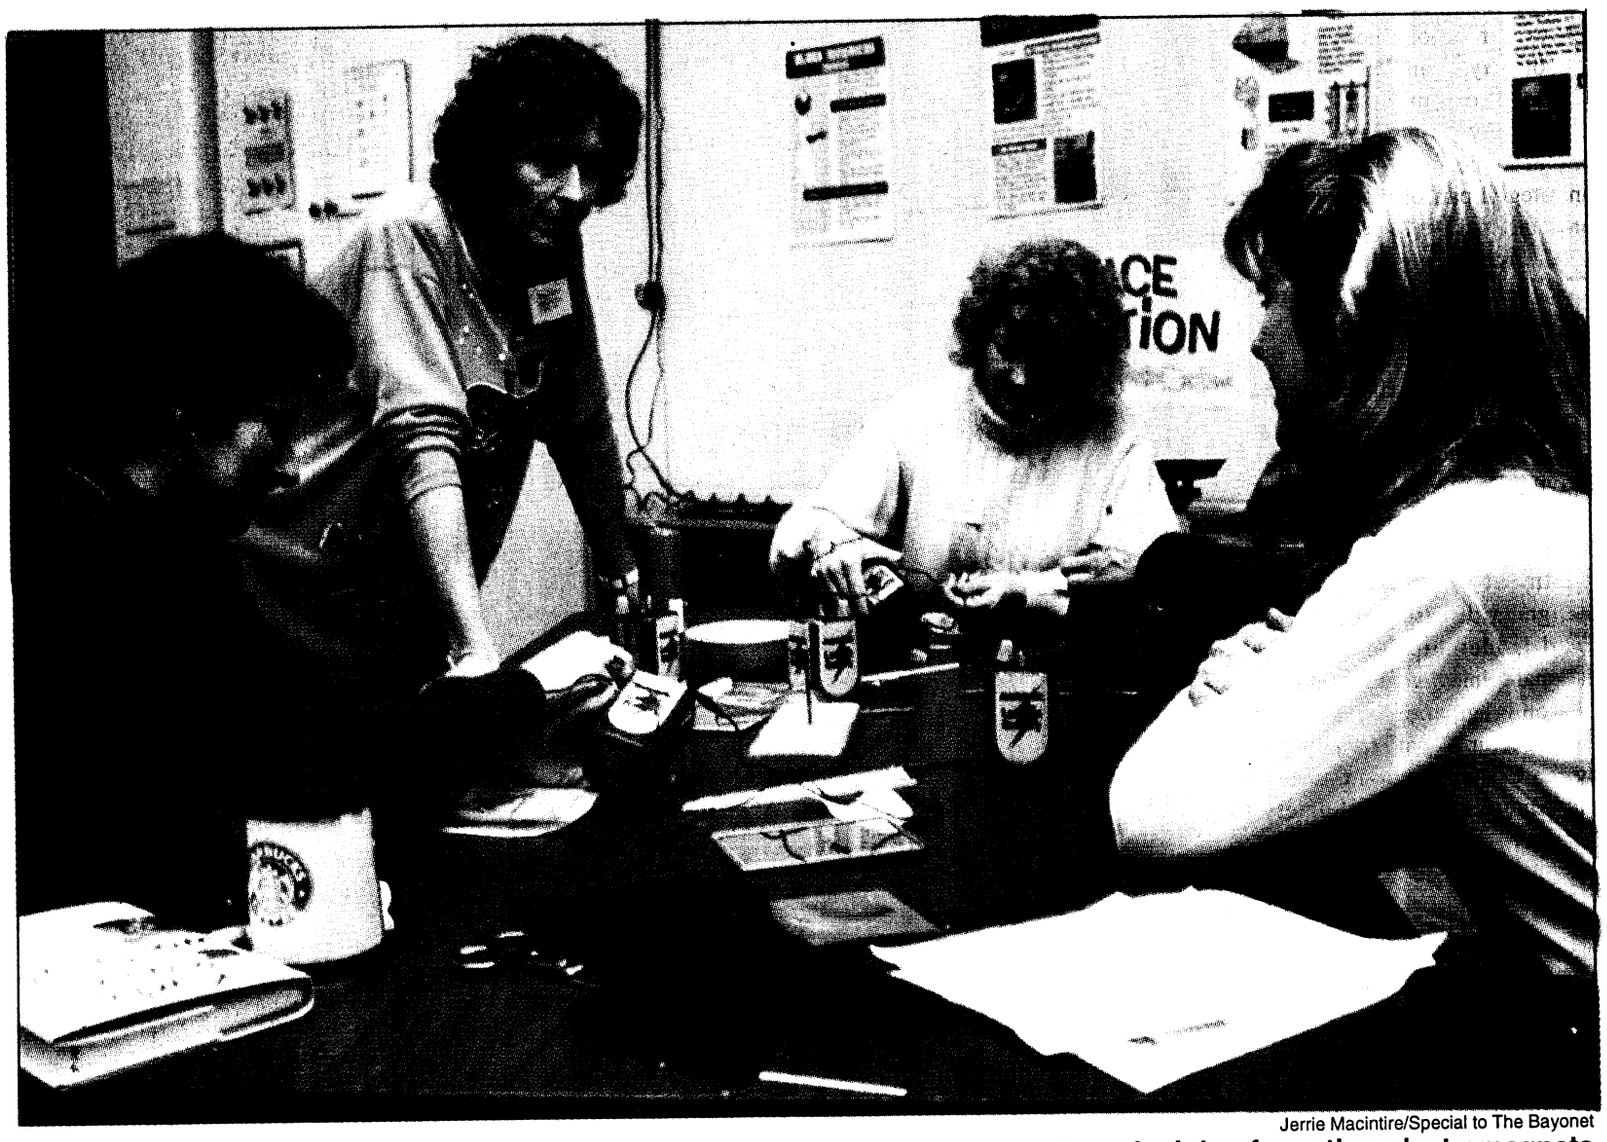
Coloroso cautioned parents to clearly communicate and "to say what you mean" overtly as well as covertly.

She said the actual words a parent uses are only one fifth of the message received. Body language, facial expression, eye contact and tone of voice account for 80 percent of any verbal message, she said.

In summary, she said the key to good parenting is treating children with respect, giving them a sense of positive power in their lives, giving them chances to make decisions as well as mistakes and to learn from it.

"After all, 'kids are worth it,'" she said, wrapping up her lecture with the title of her new parenting book, a bestseller in Canada and now available in the United States.

In addition to "Kids are Worth It!," Coloroso also authored the award winning videos "Winning at Parenting ... Without Beating Your Kids," and "Winning at Teaching ... Without Beating Your Kids."



Coloroso's lectures were part of the second annual "Parent Academy," a weekend of informational workshops covering school and home issues and concerns.

Some other highlights included mini-lectures on aspects of child-rearing requested by participants of last year's Parent Academy, said Gail Wilson, director of staff development for Fort Benning Schools.

In addition to learning new techniques for motivating children and helping them learn important skills, "This is confirmation of the good things parents are doing," Wilson said.

Some topics of the mini-lectures Saturday were technology in the schools, hands-on science projects, promoting creativity in children, gangs and their influence on youngsters, promoting and sharpening reading skills, preparing children for school, college and career planning and ways to give children the knowledge they are loved.

In addition to the small group parenting sessions, 37 vendors from child-care advocates to the YMCA offered information on child and family-related services in the area.

Given the chance, children will make the right decision

Years ago, when I was a teacher, I had an illuminating experience. I had just gone from secondary teaching to elementary crisis teaching, and I was immediately in crisis. Except that it was my crises, not the kids'.

I refused to tell my upper elementary students in Colorado to put their coats and mittens on when them went outside.

In spite of flak, I persisted. I didn't tell my kids to put on their coats and mittens; I taught them the real reason for dressing warmly and let them think it out for themselves and make their own decisions.

I brought a frozen steak to school and held it up to the class.

"Now look at this piece of meat, kids," I said. "It's kind of cold, isn't it? Now feel your bodies. They're kind of warm, aren't they?"

I dropped the frozen steak on the floor with a thud.

"Look at the meat. Is it moving? Do you think it's going anywhere? Now feel your heart. It's moving, isn't it? If you go out with your coat buttoned up, all the warm air stays in and there's a good chance your heart will keep moving. If you go out with it unbuttoned, or with no coat at all, there's a possibility that all the warm will go out, all the cold air will come in, and all your organs will freeze.

"But don't worry about it. Your body can take care of itself. It knows which are the most important parts. Your hands will go first."

Most of the kids left my class making their own decision on a regular basis not to let their organs freeze.

— Barbara Coloroso, at Fort Benning's Parent Academy Feb. 24 discussing one experience as a teacher in which students learned to think for themselves and accept the consequences of their own decisions.

'Tuskegee Airmen' flew to glory

By Jan Wesner Childs
Special to The Bayonet

Fifty years ago, hundreds of young black men across the United States volunteered to serve their country by joining the military.

They were offered jobs as truck drivers and stevedores, but were considered the "wrong color" to be officers.

Retired Air Force Lt. Col. Herbert Carter was one of those men. Carter spoke at a Feb. 21 Black History Month program sponsored by the Dental Activity.

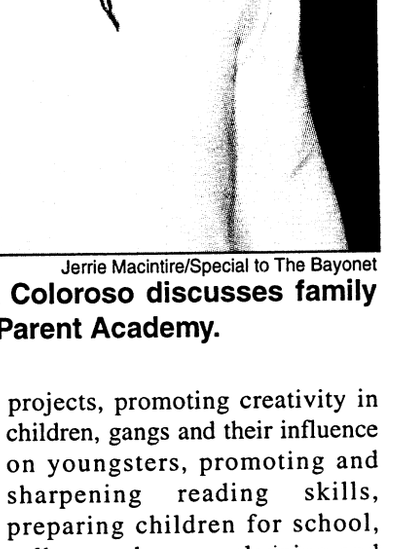
"(A government study) said that this particular group of individuals was not suitable for leadership ... that they were cowardly under fire, subservient," Carter said. "And therefore the best positions for them would be in noncombat areas."

But Carter, then a student at Tuskegee Institute in Alabama, and several other young black men refused to take no for an answer. A Harvard student sued. Eventually, the Army was forced by court order to allow black soldiers the same opportunities as white ones.

The group pushed on to become aviators and later became members of the 99th Fighter Squadron, known as the "Tuskegee Airmen."

Carter, now president of the Tuskegee Airmen Inc., was an original member of the unit. He later became an administrator at what is now Tuskegee University. Today he spends his time educating people on the Tuskegee Airmen.

Carter said the unit was segregated from the rest of the Army Air Corps in what the government considered "separate, but equal" conditions. They trained on a special airfield set up in Tuskegee.



The Army Air Corps would not put these officers in a "mixed situation" where they would be giving orders to white soldiers, Carter said.

"Here we were a nation at war, and here we were a nation of people divided by our color," he said.

Carter said thousands tried out for the unit. There were eventually 450 Tuskegee Airmen.

After months of training, the airmen were ready to go to the frontlines.

"The problem was," Carter said, "no commander — from Burma through the Pacific to England — no commander wanted this black squadron as part of his unit."

Carter

Finally, the Tuskegee Airmen were sent to fight in North Africa. Carter said the unit's mission was to fly less than 500 feet over enemy ammunition sites, convoys and other targets and destroy them.

"Here we were a nation at war and here we were a nation of people divided by our color."

— Retired Lt. Col. Herbert Carter
President, Tuskegee Airmen Inc.

"The men would bring those aircraft back sometimes with holes big enough to stick your hand or your head through," Carter said. "It was a dirty, hazardous and thankless job."

Later, the 99th Fighter Squadron was sent to Italy. But still there was no opportunity for direct combat with the Germans. That day finally came during the battle at Anzio Beach, Italy. In three days, the Tuskegee Airmen destroyed 17 German planes, according to Carter.

But the unit is most famous for its reputation as bomber escorts. Not a single bomber was lost in 200 missions, according to Carter.

Sixty-six of the Tuskegee Airmen were killed in the war.

"We're not here to glorify war ... what we intend to do is to glorify those men who in spite of all the adversity were there in combat ready to place their lives on the line for democracy," Carter said.

He said the lesson learned from the Tuskegee Airmen still applies today. "If you take ordinary people," he said, and "give them equal training and opportunity ... they'll do extraordinary things."

Forecasters help widow weather storm

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

For the members of C Flight (U.S. Air Force Weather Station), 17th Air Support Operations Squadron, weathering storms is a part of their daily job.

Perhaps that's why they decided to help a Columbus widow get out from under her own personal storm cloud by rebuilding her home, which burnt in a fire last May.

Tech. Sgt. Bill Malcomb heard about the 79-year-old woman's plight on the radio, and he began collecting clothing and household items to donate, he said.

Following his lead, Senior Airman Martine S. Dinkens got in touch with Beverly A. Baldwin of the Brighter Day Outreach Center Inc., the organization that has taken the woman, Charlie Mae Walker, "under its wing," to see what else they could do.

"I called and she (Baldwin) said they needed donations, but what they really needed is manpower," Dinkens said.

Walker, recently widowed, was unaware that her insurance had lapsed until she tried to collect on it after the fire, and she has been unable to do any repairs on the house since.

The house, a small five-room building on the corner of Dawson Street and 29th Avenue off Cusseta Road, was almost completely gutted by the fire, leaving Walker with no possessions and no place to live.

"She pretty much lost everything," Dinkens said. "The lady from the Brighter Day Foundation has taken her in, and she's been moving from house to house — anything we can do will be better than the last year has been."

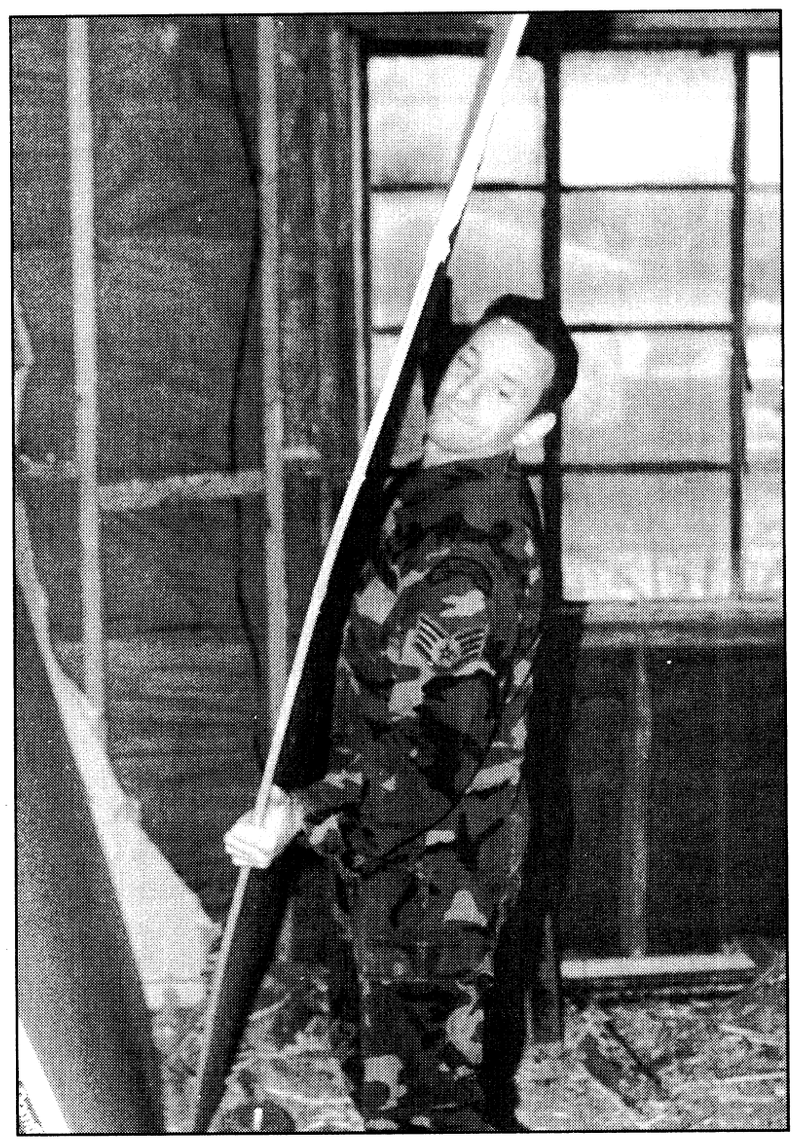
While the structure remains intact, only a few pieces of furniture remained undamaged, and the walls, ceilings and floors of all but one room were ruined.

"It was overwhelming the first time I saw it," Dinkens said. "But then I went outside and looked at it and realized, you know, it isn't a big house — it's just a matter of getting the people out there."

Dinkens, her husband, Michael, Malcomb and several other members of C Flight have rolled up their sleeves and devoted the last two weekends to cleaning out the damaged furniture and debris and knocking out the burnt walls and ceilings.

The Brighter Day Outreach Center got a $2,500 grant from the Columbus Housing Authority to help with the repairs, $2,000 of which will go to pay for an electrician to rewire the house, "which is important, because that's how the fire originally started," Dinkens said.

Once the electrician is finished, the group will put up sheetrock, have insulation installed, then paint, wallpaper and restore the wood floors.



"There's at least a month's worth of work," Dinkens said, and any helping hands would be welcome.

"What we really need is people to help — and supplies," Dinkens said. "We still need furniture, household goods, even clothing."

Some sheetrock, paint and wallpaper have already been pledged to the project, but more will be needed.

Anyone interested in helping with the project can call Dinkens at 545-5628.

Also, cash donations can be made to a trust fund in Walker's name at 1st Alabama Bank of Phenix City or Regions Bank of Columbus.

Students plant for the future

By Jerrie Macintire

Students at White School celebrated conservation and renewal of natural resources at an Arbor Day tree planting ceremony Feb. 24.

Under sunny skies on a 58-degree morning, essay winners from each grade level discussed the importance of stewardship of the earth through original poems and essays.

Planting and caring for trees was a familiar theme throughout the student essays as well as the remarks of keynote speaker Col. Joe Windle, chief of staff of the U.S. Army Infantry School.

"Arbor Day is a time to celebrate the Earth by sustaining it though tree planting," he said.

In addition to celebration, he cited renewal of resources and responsibility for the environment as key to the Arbor Day spirit.

"The Earth was here long before we were and will be here long after mankind is extinct. The Earth does not belong to us; we borrow it during the period we live on it," he said.

Later that day, students from each of the 16 classrooms at White School returned to the Earth white oak saplings, donated by the Alabama County Extension Service.

Each class has taken the responsibility of caring for and nurturing a tree as a group project, one aspect of White School's commitment to the environment, said Janet Wynn, principal.

For the past five years, the school has maintained a commitment to the environment through recycling programs, renewal projects such as the Arbor Day ceremony and Earth Day celebration, the schoolwide environmental fair and litter patrols, Wynn said.

"Our commitment was started as a curriculum objective, and it's gotten broader," she said. "We've gotten everyone involved, even our parents."

"This year's essay winners are: Andrew Grebe, first grade; Martell Shavers, second grade; Renee Jones, third grade; Ryan Roth, fourth grade; and Matt Peddy, fifth grade.

These students were part of a celebration that began in 1872 through the efforts of J. Sterling Morton.

The Nebraska editor, who later served as secretary of agriculture, proposed tree planting as a method to control erosion of rich soil from the farming fields of his home state. As the saplings took root and held the soil, so did the idea of a national holiday.

Arbor Day is now celebrated all over the United States and Canada; the day varies according to the proper planting times for various regions in the country.

It's traditionally celebrated in Georgia the third Friday in February.

Black History Month

Claudia Williams, an Army and Air Force Exchange Service employee, shows off traditional African garb Feb. 17 during a Black History Month event at the Post Exchange at the Main Mall. AAFES employees celebrated Black History Month by dressing in traditional African wear. Williams was the organizer of the event. The day was capped off with dinner, which consisted of traditional Afro-American dishes supplied by the employees. Williams said she encouraged employees of different nationalities to pick a month so that AAFES can celebrate the many different cultures and history.

Prayer interpreted in many ways

By Bill Putman
USAIC Chaplain Office

This article begins a series on prayer. During the course of this series, we will consider prayers in the Bible, prayers by famous people in history, types and specifics of prayers of various faith groups as well as reasons and conditions of prayers and those who pray them.

Today is designated World Day of Prayer. Recently at Fort Benning, we observed the National Prayer Breakfast.

From time to time the president of the United States or the secretary-general of the United Nations will call for a special day of prayer for a specific purpose.

What does all this mean? Why do we join together and pray?

Webster's Dictionary provides several meanings for prayer. Two are, "A reverent petition made to a deity or other object of worship," and "Any act of communion with God, such as a confession, praise or thanksgiving."

prayer

In the beginning (the Book of Genesis, Chapter 3), there is an account of Adam answering God's questions in the Garden of Eden. However, this seems to be a conversation rather than a prayer. In Genesis Chapter 4, verse 26, we are told 'Then began men to call upon the name of the Lord (NIV).' Although this may be interpreted as prayer, some scholars do not believe that this refers to prayer as we know it.

In subsequent chapters in Genesis, there are numerous accounts of communication between God and man — some in dreams — others in natural conversations. There are accounts of individuals building altars for worshipping God and to commemorate an event. There were occasions when a person called upon the name of the Lord.

However, in Chapter 20, God told Abimelech to make things right with Abraham and Abraham would pray for him. Abimelech made things right and in verse 17 Abraham prayed to God. This seems to be the first account where a person prays a prayer as we think of prayer.

How do we pray? By the definitions of prayer given above, there is no one correct way to pray. Various faith groups have distinctive characteristics in their methods of prayer. We will discuss some of these in future articles.

Luke, Chapter ll, verse 1, says that after Jesus finished praying, one of his disciples said, "Lord, teach us to pray, as John also taught his disciples" (KJV). Then follows the "Lord's Prayer." Matthew 6:5-15 provides specific instructions Jesus gave concerning prayer during the Sermon on the Mount, including the Lord's Prayer.

Several faith groups and denominations have formal written prayers that they use in their worship and also in their personal devotions. These are helpful and beautiful. On the other hand, many of us who have been in a crisis situation such as combat or an emergency have uttered short prayers at the moment. We believe these prayers helped us through the situation.

As you read this series of articles, we encourage you to consider some of the prayers you have prayed and what your prayer time means to you.

Actions illustrate many meanings of love

By Robert R. Davidson
USAIC Chaplain Office

Love is compassion.

Love is a verb.

An elderly lady crossing a busy intersection. Arms filled with groceries now on the ground. Cars screech to a halt. Traffic begins to build. A 10-year-old girl with a sympathetic heart, knees bending to the ground. Hands lifting the food placed back into the bags. A smile of gratitude. No more blaring horns. A grateful heart.

Love is affection.

An injured cry for help. Red, puffy eyes. A child's tear-stained face. Bruised and bleeding knees. A bicycle without training wheels. Tissues. A box of bandages. A parent's tender voice. Arms that embrace. Hands that wipe the tears away. Words that smooth the sorrow and encourage another try.

Love is sharing.

A white satin gown. A preacher. A beautiful bride. The handsome bridegroom. A chapel full of people. A couple repeating their vows. Commitment. Giving of the soul. For better or worse. A support in sickness. A refuge in sorrow. Sharing a life — no matter what comes. Two lives as one forever.

Love is devotion.

Chalkboards and dust. Three o'clock in the afternoon. A nearly empty classroom. One child. A blank piece of paper. A forlorn stare. A teacher's tender smile. A hand laid on the shoulder. Words of encouragement. An extra chair pulled up. Touseled hair. Math equations. Taking the time to care.

Love is competence.

reflections

A loyal servant. Bible studies. Sharing God's grace. Willing to go overseas. In a foreign land. In a different culture. A different lifestyle. New faces to cherish. New names to remember. Reaching out to others. Devoted.

Love is courage.

A camouflaged uniform. Sweat. Blood. Heat. Saudi Arabia. Haiti. A weary soldier. Fighting for freedom. Red, white and blue. Death's final words. An echo from the past. "Give me liberty or give me death."

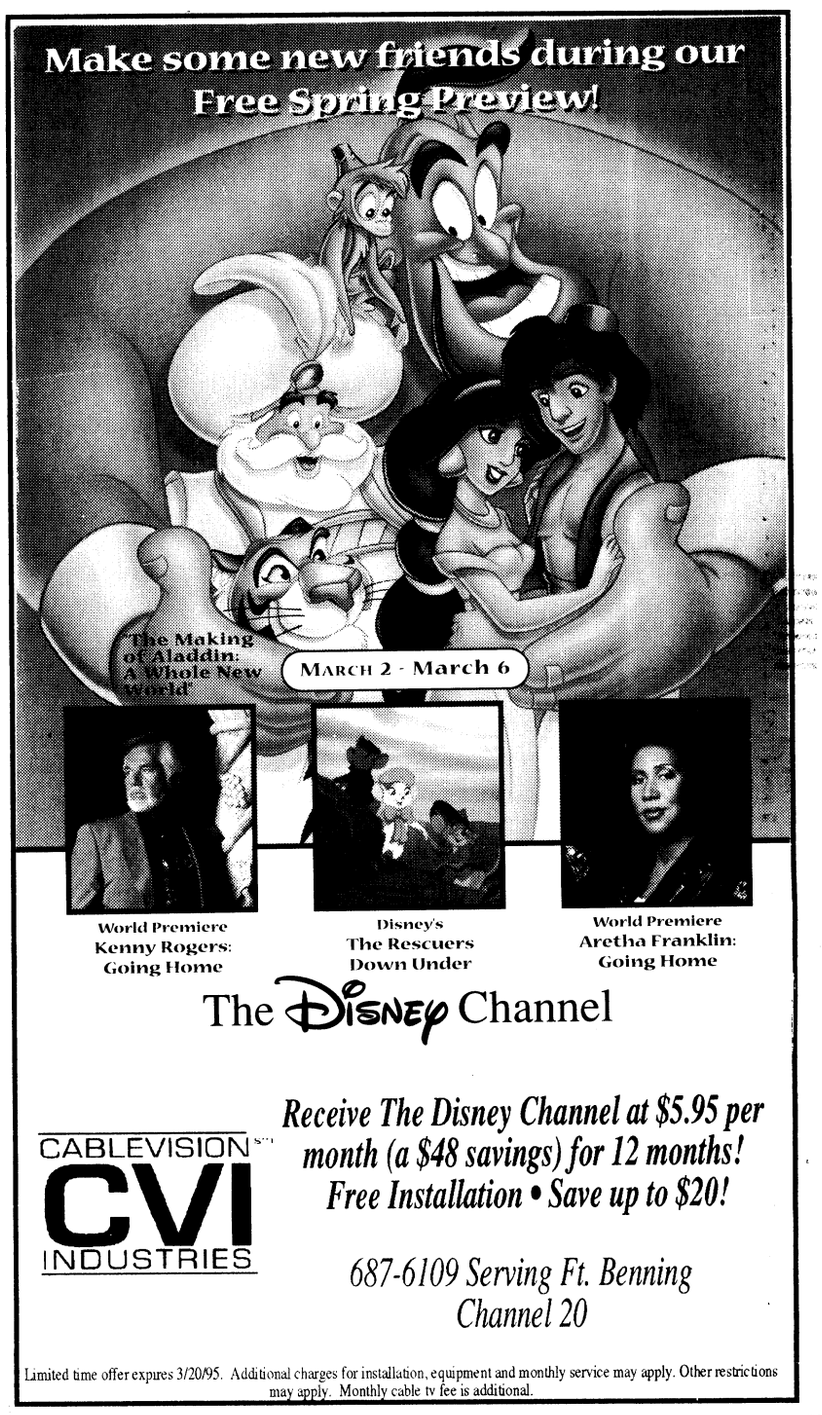
Love is forgiveness.

Rebellion. A wayward son. Mistake after mistake. Foolish choices. A life of pleasure turned to misery. Regret. A heart longing for home. Self put aside. Steps retraced. Familiar roads. A father's extended arms. A welcome embrace. All else forgotten.

Love is commitment.

Laughed at. Tormented. Ridiculed. Rejected. Ignored. Blood and tears. Hours in prayer. A cross of wood. A heart of grace. Nail-pierced hands. Words of salvation. "Father forgive them, for they know not what they do!"

Love is "an expression of one's affection."



Love is a verb.

Edward Asner, 'Thunder Alley' return

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

It's had a layoff of several months, but this week, "Thunder" rolls again for Edward Asner.

SPOTLIGHT

What: "Thunder Alley"
When: Tuesday on ABC

The veteran actor — a winner of seven Emmy Awards, five of them for his portrayal of Lou Grant in two series — and his latest show, the comedy "Thunder Alley" (produced by the team that developed "Home Improvement") return to the ABC lineup Tuesday after having started the season last fall and then taking some time for creative retooling.

Asner still plays Gil Jones, a former stock-car driver who was known in those days as "Wild Gil;" he now runs a garage, and though he's satisfied with that career, he has some adjustments to make in his personal life.

His divorced daughter Bobbi (Robin Riker) has moved in with her three children Harry (Haley Joel Osment), Jenny (Lindsay Felton) and Claudine (Kelly Vint). The two adults often clash over how the youngsters should be raised ... with Gil 1 taking a more traditional view, and Bobbi opting for a more-liberal approach.

Also continuing in his original role is Jim Beaver as Jones' chief mechanic, Leland DuParte, but a new cast addition is Andrew Keegan ("Camp Nowhere") as a teenager hired to help with odd jobs around the garage.

Explaining the missing-in-action status "Thunder Alley" has had for much of the season, executive producer Matt Williams said, "Our intent was to create a family show that kids could watch, and parents could watch with them, and both groups (could) enjoy. We got off to a great start. We had great kid appeal early in the season, and in trying to find that delicate balance, we said, 'The adult stuff, we've got to fix.' We've been off the air, and I think we've fixed that."

To that end, the episode scheduled for Tuesday focuses largely on Bobbi's severe case of jitters over going out on her first date since her divorce.

That also provides actress Riker with a somewhat necessary showcase, since she took over the role from another performer (Diane Venora) who had played it during "Thunder Alley's" maiden run last spring.

"We spent a lot of time with her character, trying to find her voice," Williams said, "and I feel that has clicked in. In this puzzle that's known as a sitcom, you keep adjusting the pieces. Then, finally, it clicks."

Asner claims that the cast and crew of "Thunder Alley" — which now includes Robby Benson, still an actor on occasion (as when he lent his voice to Disney's "Beauty and the Beast"), as the show's permanent director — form "a phenomenally effective company," and he also said that he has a certain background in garage work himself.

The 36th Engineer Group concluded Black History Month Feb. 28 with a special celebration in Infantry Hall's Marshall Auditorium.

The engineers' celebration included songs and poems all honoring black people of the past, present and future.

Watch "Fort Benning Today" to see highlights of the finale to black history celebrations on post.

USAIC-TV Schedule
USAIC-TV operates 24 hours a day on post cable Channel 3.

A new contract was recently awarded to a travel agency on post. Watch "Fort Benning Today" to learn about changes that may affect you.

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel announces post events and post movie listings, and it offers free classified advertisements on "Fort Benning Update," a community information service.

Anyone who lives on post and subscribes to Fort Benning Cable can watch USAIC-TV on Channel 3, 24 hours a day.

Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:25, 7:55, 8:25 and 8:55 on WLTZ-TV 38.

Columbus College

to present artists in concert today, Sat

Columbus College

As part of the anniversary of Columbus College's Schwob Department of Music, Carol Webber, formerly of the Metropolitan Opera, will be in concert in the college's Fine Arts Hall Auditorium today at 8 p.m.

The guest artist series features Webber, who is currently professor of voice at the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, New York, performing a new song cycle written especially for her by Benton Hess, her accompanist who is also professor of accompanying at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Webber's career spans opera, symphony, chamber music and solo recitals nationwide.

Tickets for the concert are $7 general admission and $4 for students.

• Recording artist George Winston will be in concert Saturday at 8 p.m. at the Fine Arts Hall auditorium.

Those attending the concert can bring donations of nonperishable food in support of the House of Mercy.

Winston is best known for his rural folk piano style, and also performs stride piano, New Orleans rhythm and blues, blues and rock. He has released six solo piano albums including "Ballads and Blues," "Autumn," "Winter Into Spring," "December," "Summer" and "Forest."

Tickets are available in the Schwob Department of Music, $15 for adults and $10 for students.

• March 14 — The Columbus College Student String Quartet will perform at the Warm Springs Institute for Rehabilitation. Admission is free.

For information call 569-3131.

Richie Rich — Macaulay Caulkin portrays the world's richest kid in this adaptation of the hallowed Harvey Comics series. John Larroquette is the villainous Laurence Van Dough. (Mild violence and language)

Houseguest — In his movie debut, Sinbad plays a scam artist on the run from his latest failed scheme. He falls into the company of a lawyer and starts up a new con, telling the man he's his long lost childhood buddy. (Language, double-entendre humor and some comic violence)

Nell — This is a drama about a young woman who has discovered living beyond the edge of civilization in a backwoods Tennessee cabin. She has grown up with no language other than an incomprehensible babble learned from her mother, whose speech was garbled by a series of strokes. (Nudity)

Mixed Nuts — Stars Steve Martin, Madeline Kahn. Along Los Angeles' Venice Beach, two neurotic good Samaritans work with phones at a financially strapped suicide prevention hot line. (Sex-related humor)

Drop Zone — A U.S. marshal taking a criminal to prison confronts a daring gang that kidnaps his man from him while flying in a Boeing 747. (Sex-related humor)

Demon Knight — A mysterious man defends some boardinghouse residents against a bad guy. The Crypt keeper is on hand to guide you through the story. (Gore, horror violence, sexuality and language)

Speechless — In this romantic comedy, two speechwriters from opposing political camps fall in love. (Strong language)

Exhibit to feature variety

The Columbus Museum

Variations on a Theme will be featured at the Columbus Museum through May 14.

The exhibit, serial images in 20th century American graphic arts, features modern lithographs, wood engravings, serigraphs, watercolors and photographs selected from the museum's permanent collection and a local private collection.

The exhibit is sponsored by Mead Coated Board Division as part of a three-year commitment to support the conservation of the museum's works on paper.

The 63 works in the exhibition will provide an opportunity for visitors to study the ways in which artists examine and rework favorite design schemes over the course of a career, as well as artists' exploration of series of related images as single expressive units.

Artists in the exhibition include Robert Indiana, Abraham Walkowitz, Alma Thomas, Leonard Baskin, William Christenberry, George Dudley, Seymour Lipton and Josef Albers.

The museum, located at 1251 Wynnton Road, features exhibitions of American art and regional history and includes a hands-on discovery gallery for children. Admission is free.

The museum is open from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday, and Sundays from 1 to 5 p.m.

For more information, call 649-0713.

Civilian Personnel: Post selected as site for new regional center

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

The drawdown is working in reverse at Fort Benning — at least in this case, because the installation will soon be adding more civilian employees to its ranks.

Since Fort Benning has been chosen as the site for a new Southeastern regional civilian personnel operations center, at least 165 new Department of the Army jobs will be phased in over the next two years, according to Theresa Gunter, director of Civilian Personnel.

Fort Benning's selection, which was announced March 3, "demonstrates the confidence the Army has in Fort Benning's ability to get things done and in the exemplary relationship that exists between the military and civilian communities here," said Commanding General Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix at a press conference Tuesday morning at the Columbus Government Center.

"Special thanks are in order to the installation staff, especially to Theresa Gunter ... and to the chamber of commerce and city officials who were instrumental in helping us solicit the support of congressmen and Department of the Army staffers," Hendrix said.

"This is a good news story for Fort Benning and the Columbus area," said Gary Burkhalter, senior personnel management specialist for the Directorate of Civilian Personnel.

"When it's all in place, the Army will save money, the local community will benefit and we'll be on the cutting edge of technology in personnel management," he said.

The regional office will serve as a hub for civilian personnel operations at Forts Jackson, S.C.; Gordon, Ga.; Rucker, Ala.; McClellan, Ala.; Stewart, Ga.; McPherson, Ga; and Anniston Army Depot, Ala., said Judy Pennington, chief of personnel management and systems support division.

Several of these installations also applied to have the regional center located there, she said.

Each installation will retain a small group of employees to continue local personnel servicing, Pennington said.

To job applicants at each location, everything will remain the same. What is going to change, she said, is what happens "behind the scenes."

They are looking toward automating staffing and personnel actions on a central computer system that can be accessed from each office, Pennington said.

The goal is to have the basics up and running from a centralized point by the end of this fiscal year, she said. The rest of the process will be implemented in three phases, the first to be completed by fiscal 1996, the rest within three to five years after that.

The new center, which will be located in Meloy Hall, will create 165 jobs initially, bringing an estimated income of $34,000 per employee into the community, and could create hundreds more as the process progresses, Pennington said.

The regionalization comes as part of a Department of the Army level plan to eliminate 185 jobs, totaling about $7 million in savings.

The Army took the initiative to regionalize ahead of the Department of Defense, and there is the possibility that since Fort Benning will already be set up as a regional office, DoD could regionalize here too, consolidating all services and becoming "purple," Burkhalter said.

Of the 64 people now employed at Fort Benning, about 20 will remain to provide personnel support services here, while the other slots will move to the regional office, Pennington said.

The displaced post employees will have the opportunity to move to the new positions at the regional center, as will the 185 other employees whose jobs were eliminated at other posts, Pennington said.

No more lead

Victor May, a laborer with the Directorate of Public Works, scrapes peeling lead paint from a garage on Stewart Avenue. The work is part of a larger, $1.3 million project to remove or "encapsulate" lead paint in all post housing units where it has been found. Air samples have shown very little concentration of lead "so it's not a dangerous operation," according to Chris Plummer, superintendent at the site, but residents around work areas are reminded to keep children out of the cordoned-off areas, where they may pick up or ingest dust or small paint chips.

AER campaign gets under way on post

The1995 Army Emergency Relief program is officially under way.

"This is a program that more than anything else we do really symbolizes the meaning 'We take care of our own' in the Army," Fort Benning Commanding General Maj. Gen. John Hendrix said during a March 1 kick-off program in Infantry Hall.

Hendrix addressed a meeting of the unit keypersons, responsible for soliciting AER donations.

"It really starts with making sure that every soldier, every person on this post, is contacted with the opportunity to contribute," Hendrix said.

Contributions can be made to AER by check, cash or monthly allotment.

AER officer Alphonso Deane said this year's fund-raising goal is $175,000.

Deane said that if every soldier and retiree in the area gave $1 a month for 12 months the goal would easily be reached.

AER provides emergency funds for soldiers in need. The money can be used for such things as utilities, rent, car repairs and emergency leave expenses.

Money is either loaned or given, depending on the soldier's circumstances.

More than $807,000 was handed out to nearly 1,400 Fort Benning families by AER last year, Hendrix said.

"If that's not taking care of people who need help, I don't know what is," he said.

"I hope we have a great successful AER drive."

Anyone wishing to contribute to AER can contact a unit keyperson.

Dependents Dental Plan may change contractors

Cost of service may decrease due to new carrier's prices

By Jan Wesner Childs
Special to The Bayonet©

A Pennsylvania insurance carrier recently underbid Delta Dental Plans and will probably take over the Dependents Dental Plan for active duty family members.

Delta is contesting the contract award and it's not clear when the change will go into effect.

Fort Benning Dental Activity commander Col. Richard Nurnberg said Monday that premiums under the new insurer, United Concordia Companies Inc., would be substantially lower.

"The premiums are scheduled to decrease by 15 percent for families and by 32 percent for individual family members," Nurnberg said.

The current monthly premium for family coverage is $19.30. That would go down to $16.92 under United Concordia, according to Nurnberg.

Coverage for a single family member is $9.65 a month under Delta. That would decrease to $6.77.

The level of coverage and the amount of co-payments would remain the same under United Concordia. Nurnberg said the change should go smoothly.

"When the transition occurs, the only thing patients should notice is a change in their premiums," he said.

Nurnberg said United Concordia plans to use the same providers as Delta, so patients should not have to change dentists.

Delta Dental has had the contract for Dependents Dental Plan since 1987, according to 1st Sgt. Charles Haworth of the Dental Activity. The plan was set up after the Army limited on-post dental care to family members.

Under the contract, the Department of Defense pays 60 percent of the care cost. Patient co-payments depend on the type of treatment.

United Concordia underbid Delta by $35.2 million for the first year of the contract. The total contract is worth $1.7 billion, according to Army DENTAC headquarters.

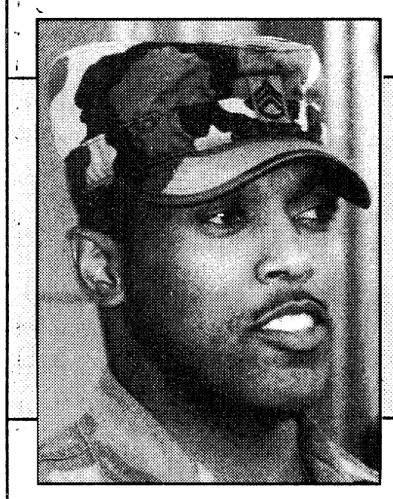
The General Accounting office is reviewing Delta's appeal of the contract. A decision is expected no later than June 23, and United Concordia would take over sometime after that.

Haworth and Nurnberg said DENTAC personnel will be available to answer any questions about the new contract with United Concordia. They will make presentations to on-post groups by request.

Community dental health nurse Kathy Hatfield can also answer questions. She can be reached at 544-1503.

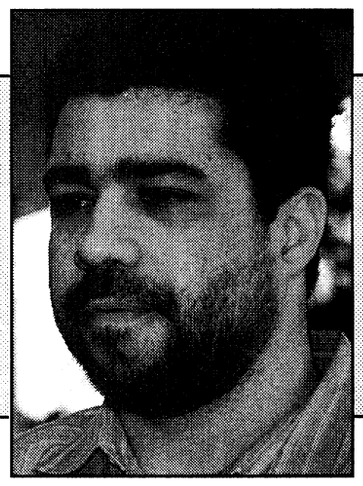
Dependents Dental Plan under new insurer at a glance

Q. Would the benefits change in any way?
A. No.



Q. Would the cost change?
A. Co-payments and maximums would remain the same. Monthly premiums would decrease by 32 percent for an individual family member and 15 percent for an entire family.

Q. Would I have to change dentists?
A. Probably not. The new insurer, United Concordia Inc., is working to recruit current Delta providers to continue coverage.



For more information, call the Dental Activity or Kathy Hatfield, community dental health nurse, at 544-1503.

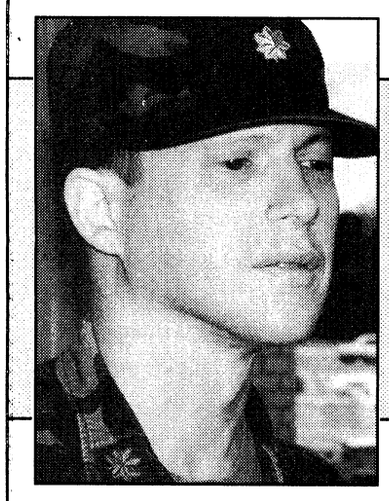
What woman in history do you admire and why?

Staff Sgt. William H. Dixon, Company D, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment — "I think Dr. Jocelyn Elders. She spoke up for what she believed. We, in America, need to speak up for what we believe."



Kyle P. Fortes, family member — "It's probably Mrs. (Jackie) Kennedy. Out of all the presidents wives, she had more class and did more for the country."

Christa M. Chapman, family member — "I think Margaret Thatcher because of the way she handled the British Parliament and the way she got along with the politicians of the rest of the world."

Robert Kropik, civilian employee with the Dismounted Battlespace Battle Lab — "I think Mary of Nazareth. I don't know any woman who has been able to repeat the virgin birth."

Maj. Karl N. Zeff, U.S. Army Medical Department Activity — "I guess the name that comes to mind is Golda Meir. She was the prime minister of Israel. She had a lot of ambition and intelligence."

Dawg-gone it!

Visiting dog's antics drive Snively crazy

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

Clyde Snively can't run with the big dawgs, but he ain't no wimp.

commentary

If you cain't run with the big dawgs, don't git off the porch.

I don't even run with the auxiliary dawgs, but I sho nuff larnt a thing or two about dawgs the past few weeks.

My brother and his wife came to live with us for a couple of months and brought their dawg with them. It's a cross between a malamute and a timber wolf.

It's also a wimp, but that's another story.

Anyway, I already got a dawg. Her name is Ralf, and she didn't like that young'un no how.

Fortunately for the young'un, Ralf's an old one and didn't kill the newcomer. In fact, she put up with the newcomer's antics unless the newcomer tried to come between me and Ralf. Then Ralf would bare her fangs and let Jody know, "Don't mess with my man, girl."

With Ralf, we'd kind of gotten into a routine, two scoops of dog food when the bowl was empty, that might be every night, it might be every three days, and keep the water dish filled and don't try and fool her by putting water in a different bowl.

She wanted it in the pink bowl, not the white one or the blue one. And if that pink one went dry and the other had water, too bad, not her water, she'll just get thirsty.

And of course we'd have to go out in the yard once a week and scoop up the poop.

Jody changed all that.

First, she tore up my yard. She dug in it, she pooped more than those Clydesdales, and she tore around in it so fast, there ain't barely a spot of turf left.

She also chewed everything in sight to include shower shoes, plastic buckets and a couple of saplings that had been making good progress until she showed up.

That dog needed a lot of attention and unfortunately Charles T. Snively and his wife, Jennie Mae, didn't have the time to devote to that dog, such as taking it on 15-mile forced marches to wear it out so it'd leave ol' Ralf alone.

I'm just glad I don't live on post. Like I said, that dog pooped so fast that if a military police officer had come by and checked up on those dogs, they or me woulda been run in for not being clean enough.

And I don't think the MP's woulda bought the argument that the dog house was for my dog — malamute-timber wolves don't need no shelter — that the hole she dug in the bushes was good enough shelter for her.

Managed care is not a dirty word

By Harry Noyes
Army News Service

WASHINGTON — It would be tragic if military families put too much credence in the hatchet job that some civilian news media have been doing on the term "managed care" lately.

By reporting that doctors dislike managed care, civilian media started turning the concept into a dirty word just as the Department of Defense introduced its TRICARE managed-care plan to improve care for military family members and retirees.

It's important for military families to understand that the media are talking about something quite different from TRICARE.

What the civilian doctors and news media are upset about is the "managed care" concept used by some health-insurance firms.

These firms used "managed care" to describe their own business practice of refusing to pay for tests and procedures they regard as inappropriate.

Often their decisions are made by reviewers with no medical background, who simply follow checklists of what the firm considers proper for a given diagnosis.

To the public, physicians and media, this looks like a case of inflexible, penny-pinching, medically ignorant bureaucrats second-guessing the professional decisions of qualified doctors.

As a result, Americans (including military families) get the impression that managed care is a greed-driven assault on the health of helpless families.

And meanwhile the military services are bragging about their new TRICARE managed-care system.

In fact, whether the media criticism is justified or not, it reflects unfairly on military medicine because the Defense Department's version of managed care it totally different from the bogeyman described in the media.

When the military says "managed care," it means it in the original Health Maintenance Organization sense of the term.

In TRICARE, care is managed not by financial "bean counters" but by the patients' own primary-care providers.

These are medical experts who know the patients personally and value quality care above all. Decisions on tests and procedures are made by hands-on caregivers for whom patient welfare comes first and cost-effectiveness (while important to conserve resources for other patients) is secondary.

Wherever possible, our care managers are military providers. In areas where the TRICARE civilian contractor provides primary care because the military hospitals don't have enough providers, the contract is carefully written to ensure that quality care remains the top priority in care-management decision-making.

Reader urges writer to make Dad proud

In reference to Marc Turchin's article that appeared in the Feb. 3 issue of The Bayonet, the person I admire the most is someone who can "rise again" after some hardship.

Turchin is an inspiration to other young adults who need to "get it together."

In reference to what he said about his father whom he "... loved deeply and ... never really told him that ...," his father knows, even now, that he is showing his love of him by succeeding in life's challenges. He is watching over Turchin's shoulder and showing him the way.

Turchin, don't let your Dad down; do your best and be an example to other young adults of what can be done in life if you have a guiding hand and determination.

Good luck in life. We'll all be proud of you.

Women's History Month Proclamation

In recognition of the numerous contributions of women to every aspect of our nation, March is proclaimed "Women's History Month." Public Law 100-9, enacted in 1987, designated March as National Women's History Month.

This year's theme is "Women's History: Promises to Keep." Women who preceded us contributed greatly to help shape this nation into what it is today, forging paths for women in many fields. Women today are keeping those promises alive by taking leadership roles in all areas of society.

The seeds that were planted long ago are what inspire women to continue striving in order to maintain a green pasture today. "Promises to Keep" is a reminder and a call to women to continue forging the land and opening new fields in all areas of society.

Employees desiring to attend one of the many worthwhile events may be excused without charge to leave consistent with mission requirements.

Ranger deaths: Five suspended

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Two officers and three noncommissioned officers assigned to the 6th Ranger Battalion at Camp James E. Rudder, Florida, were suspended from their duties Tuesday.

Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, Fort Benning's commanding general, took the action as part of an investigation into the hypothermia deaths of four ranger students.

Hendrix directed the suspensions as a temporary measure, which took effect before the arrival of students for the current phase of Florida ranger training.

Once Fort Benning's investigation of the accident is complete, Hendrix may either reinstate all or some of the cadre, or relieve them for cause.

Those suspended include the battalion commander, a company commander and three noncommissioned officer instructors.

There are four ongoing investigations into the ranger deaths. The Department of Army Inspector General, the Criminal Investigation Division and the Army Safety Office are all probing the accident for details. The internal investigation is being headed up Brig. Gen. John J. Maher III, Fort Benning's deputy commanding general.

The deaths happened during the ninth day of the final phase of Ranger School.

The students were operating in three, 34-man patrols and had been in the field since Feb. 12. The operation began when the students began boat training drills at 11 a.m. Feb. 15.

At about 3 p.m., they began patrolling in the water, which ranged from waist to chest level. When the water level got even deeper, the students began building rope bridges.

Around 5:30 p.m. the first ranger student was showing signs of hypothermia.

Eventually, seven rangers had to be evacuated from the swamps.

Of those evacuated, three died.

Another ranger got separated from his patrol during the confusion. His body was recovered early the next morning.

All four of the deceased ranger students were awarded their Ranger Tabs posthumously at an emotional March 24 graduation ceremony. Their ranger buddies accepted the tabs.

The deceased are:

- Capt Milton Palmer, 27, of Fishers, Ind., a Citadel graduate.
- 2nd Lt. Spencer D. Dodge, 25, of Stanley, N.Y., president of his U.S. Military Academy West Point class.
- 2nd Lt. Curt G. Sansoucie, 23, of Rochester, N.H., a 1994 West Point graduate.
- Sgt. Norman Tillman, a 28-year-old mortarman with the 82nd Airborne Division, Fort Bragg, N.C. He was posthumously promoted to staff sergeant.

The swamp patrol exercise in which the rangers died has been suspended until further notice. The current Ranger School class will still spend the same amount of time in Florida, but will undergo some different types of training.

U.S. continues investigation into missing service members

There are still some 2,214 American service members unaccounted for in Southeast Asia. About 505 are missing in Laos and 77 in Cambodia. Teams of Americans and specialists from Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia now travel throughout Southeast Asia every two or three months seeking firsthand information and physical evidence on missing Americans

By Rudi Williams
American Force Information Service

For years America's quest to account for prisoners of war and missing in action in Southeast Asia was stymied by the Vietnamese, Laotian and Cambodian governments. They refused to cooperate with America's efforts to determine the fate of unaccounted for U.S. service members.

U.S. officials were frustrated in their efforts to account for more than 2,000 missing service members after the repatriation of American POWs during Operation Homecoming in 1973. Department of Defense created the Joint Casualty Resolution Center in Hawaii that year to find out what happened to service members lost in Vietnam, Laos, Cambodia and over the South China Sea.

But it was impossible to find what became of Americans lost in the area due to upheavals — the Khmer Rouge's reign of terror from 1975 through 1979 and the Vietnamese occupation of Cambodia in the 1980s. All the United States could do was monitor occasional efforts of the nations in the region, officials noted.

A breakthrough didn't occur until 1988 when the Vietnamese agreed to permit Americans into their country to search for missing service members, said Joe Harvey of the Defense POW/MIA Office.

"The big field investigations started in September 1988 after the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff negotiated an agreement with the Vietnamese," said Harvey, who commanded the Joint Casualty Resolution Center then. "We did about 17 month-long joint field investigations which led to the creation of the Joint Task Force-Full Accounting in January 1992."

Staffed by more than 180 investigators, analysts, linguists and other specialists, the task force is five times the size of its predecessor.

The Vietnamese, Laotian and Cambodian governments also enhanced efforts to account for missing Americans. Those governments' increased willingness to share gave more U.S. access to files, records and witnesses.

Now, teams of Americans and specialists from Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia travel throughout Southeast Asia every two or three months seeking firsthand information and physical evidence on missing Americans, said Marine Corps Col. William Frizell, the task force's deputy commander.

The primarily Army staff also contains Air Force, Navy and Marine Corps personnel and 21 civilian employees.

"Our first priority is investigation and resolution of live sightings," Frizell continued. Over the years, numerous firsthand reports have surfaced concerning Americans alleged to be alive in Southeast Asia. Intelligence organizations have resolved most of the reports through correlation with accounted-for personnel. Other reports have been proven to be fabrications, Frizell noted.

No Americans listed as missing in action have been returned to the United States alive since 1973, Department of Defense officials emphasized.

Although the United States hasn't been able to prove that Americans are still detained, officials don't rule out that possibility, Frizell noted.

Casualty resolution specialists and anthropologists from the U.S. Army Central Identification Laboratory in Hawaii, representatives of the POW/MIA office in Washington and U.S. Pacific Command personnel support investigations and search and recovery operations.

The task force is divided into four detachments in Southeast Asia, and each detachment has a specific mission, Frizell noted. Detachment 1 in Bangkok, Thailand, provides logistical and administrative support for detachments in Hanoi, Vietnam; Vientiane, Laos; and Phnom Penh, Cambodia, he added.

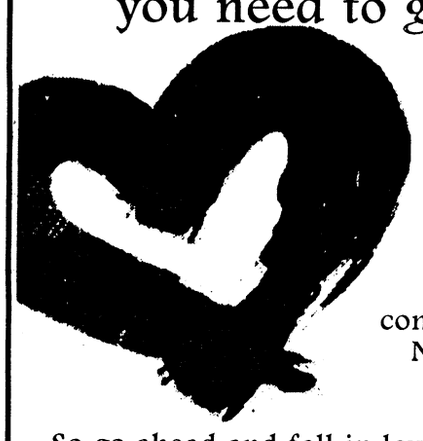
"We serve as the hub for all we do in Southeast Asia, logistically and administratively," said Air Force Lt. Col. David Geraldson, Detachment 1 commander. "We serve as the focal point for air operations, diplomatic overflight and landing clearances, supplies and equipment, travel arrange-ments, billeting, ground transportation, visas — you name it."

There are still some 2,214 service members unaccounted for in Southeast Asia. About 505 are missing in Laos and 77 in Cambodia, POW/MIA officials said.

The services provide us with perhaps the best candidates to join this organization," Frizell said. "They're highly screened. First, they have to be deployable because at least every 30 days or so, we send teams to Southeast Asia.

"They have to be in good health because some areas [where] we investigate and recover remains and other evidence are very arduous — very difficult to get to," Frizell said. "You can't just fly into many areas." Getting to some sites may require hiking, boat travel, rappelling, or riding an elephant or water buffalo.

"The conditions are very challenging, diseases are rampant. There are strains of malaria that can't be prevented nor can they be cured. They can get rabies and other diseases. This is above and beyond the snakes and other animals, plus all the unexploded ordnance at almost every site."



Each team travels with a doctor or a qualified medical assistant — Army special forces medic or Navy corpsman, Frizell said. "They often assist local villagers who have personal medical problems or with their animals," he noted.

"The airmen, sailors, Marines, soldiers and civilians are doing everything they can possibly do to satisfy the anxiety of the families of America's missing in action," he said. "We'll try to get the correct information to them. We lost that war and didn't get all the information we needed, but we're trying to do that now."

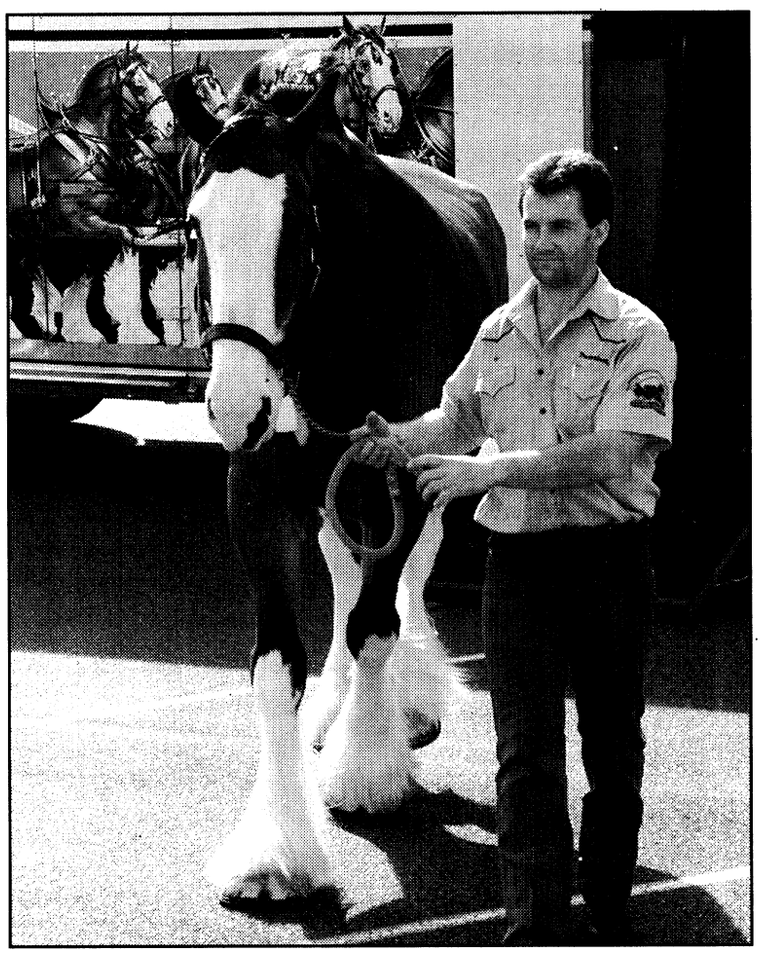
The Budweiser Clydesdale team takes a turn around the Meloy Hall parking lot.



Horsepower!

The Budweiser Clydesdale team performed at Fort Benning Monday, drawing the company's bright red brewery wagon around the Meloy Hall parking lot.

Bred for their strength and power, the performing horses each weigh more than 2,000 pounds and stand about six feet tall at the shoulder. The wagon weighs nearly four tons.

Clydesdales were brought to America from Europe in the 1800s and were used for delivery until the turn of the century, when they were replaced by trucks, "the new horsepower," according to Anheuser-Busch literature.

The team, which has been a Budweiser symbol since 1933, operates out of St. Louis, Mo.

Sec Def to add $2.7 billion to budget

By Stephen Barrett
American Forces Information Service

Defense Secretary William Perry announced plans recently to add $2.7 billion to support military quality of life issues over the next six years.

The program will increase housing allowances for service members living off military installations and create a cost of living allowance for members residing in high-cost stateside areas. It will also upgrade installation family housing, troop dormitories and day care centers.

Calling the decision a readiness issue, Perry said DoD would take funds from DoD's modernization account. "No weapon system is more important than the people who operate and maintain it," he said. He added he was not mortgaging DoD's future by taking money out of high-tech weapons development, saying he's prepared to "trade off" between modernization and readiness issues.

Perry said quality of life programs support troop readiness by helping to recruit and retain well-trained people and giving them the peace of mind to deploy without worrying about their family's welfare.

For the 700,000 service members living off base, DoD plans a gradual increase in basic allowance for quarters. Defense officials say many military families living off base are paying 20 percent of their own housing costs. Perry hopes increasing BAQ by up to $120 monthly over the next six years will reduce out-of-pocket spending to 15 percent.

Another initiative helps the 30,000 service members living in high-cost areas. These members will receive between $40 and $167 per month. These high-cost areas include New York and Long Island, N.Y.; Providence, R.I.; New Haven and Hartford, Conn.; Los Angeles; San Francisco, Oakland and Marin County, Calif., Detroit and Philadelphia.

The largest portion of the $2.7 billion will go to improve base housing and troop dormitories. At an annual cost of about $300 million over the next six years, DoD plans to renovate 10,000 homes and 5,000 dormitory spaces for single service members. The fiscal 1996 plan alone would refurbish 2,500 homes and 1,200 billet spaces.

The money would be used for increased housing allowances and to upgrade installation housing, among other things

DoD is also looking into leasing from home builders to expand government housing. Under this program, DoD would lease new homes and provide them to troops as "on-base" housing.

Besides housing improvements, the Perry initiative provides $94 million to child care and other family and community support projects in fiscal 1996.

DoD figures show over 300,000 family members eligible for child care. Perry's plan calls for a 20 percent boost in child care services, increasing benefits to 38,000 more families.

Remaining funds will go to improving community programs and facilities. The money also provides resources for family violence treatment and prevention programs at 300 high-population installations worldwide.

Besides allocating funds, Perry announced he'd formed two working groups to examine further quality of life issues.

The first group, headed by former Army Secretary John O. Marsh, will research "new, creative and cost-effective ways" to improve quality of life for the services. The panel, working through the Defense Science Board and consisting of outside experts experienced in military service issues, will focus on four missions. The first is to identify off-budget actions that will improve quality of life. "In particular, we're looking at initiatives for providing new base housing with nonappropriated funds," said Perry.

The group will also research ways to improve personnel use, such as assigning Reserve and National Guard assets to overextended military specialties. It will set DoD quality of life guidelines and identify high-precedence items for use of appropriated funds to improve community programs.

The second panel, an executive committee headed by Frederick Pang, assistant secretary of defense for force management, will serve to enact the task force recommendations. It will also carry out budget decisions and research other quality of life issues.

RIF-bound can get early start

American Forces Information Service

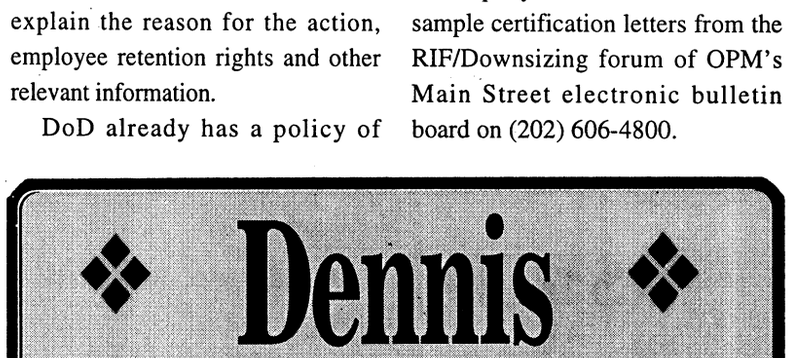
Federal employees who may lose their jobs in a reduction in force can get a six-month head start on job hunting or retraining under new Office of Personnel Management rules.

Agencies will be permitted to issue a "Certificate of Expected Separation" to employees likely to be separated by a reduction in force within six months. Not all potential RIFed employees will receive the certificate. Only those with limited job prospects qualify.

The certification will qualify employees for advanced registration in retraining or placement assistance programs such as the Department of Defense's Priority Placement Program and OPM's Interagency Placement Program.

It will also provide the opportunity to receive counseling, testing and other support. Through the Job Training Partnership Act, the U.S. Department of Labor provides funding for various types of retraining and readjustment assistance to displaced workers, such counseling, testing, placement assistance and other support activities.

Agencies will issue the certificates only if there is a good likelihood the employee will be separated by a reduction in force, if same or similar jobs in the local commuting area are limited or nonexistent, and if suitable jobs with the employee's own or other federal agencies in the local commuting area are limited or nonexistent. Also, if eligible for optional retirement, the employee must not have filed a retirement application or otherwise indicated in writing an intent to retire.



The Certification of Expected Separation is not a RIF notice. Agencies must still issue the notices at least 60 days before the effective date of the RIF. The notice must explain the reason for the action, employee retention rights and other relevant information.

DoD already has a policy of sending the certificates when a RIF is probable. DoD officials said giving other federal employees the same assistance is a positive move.

Employees can download sample certification letters from the RIF/Downsizing forum of OPM's Main Street electronic bulletin board on (202) 606-4800.

MPs help themselves to new look

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

The Fort Benning Information Center will soon have a new look.

Funded with Army Communities of Excellence monies, a $32,000 self-help project by members of the 988th Military Police Company and the U.S. Army Infantry Center Military Police Company will see newly planted trees, flower beds and shrubbery, as well as an extended entry ramp for persons with disabilities and a backlighted sign for easy night viewing.

An additional project by an independent contractor will see the construction of a Medal of Honor memorial grove with trees donated by the Georgia Power Company. The memorial will be located to the rear of the Information Center, near where the Riverwalk passes.

"First impressions are very important," said Sgt. 1st Class Frederick Robinson, platoon sergeant of the Community Police Platoon. "For many people who come to Fort Benning, the Information Center is the first thing they see. What they see there and how they are treated sets their impression for the entire post."

Visitors to the center, which is open 7 a.m. to 11 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Sunday, can receive detailed directions to any location on post, as well as have other questions answered about post facilities and activities.

"The confident, friendly face of a military police (officer) makes a big difference to a visitor," Robinson said. "The MP is a figure of authority that people can trust to help them."

In addition to the landscaping projects, Robinson said the exterior of the building will be steam cleaned.

Members of the Military Police, assisted by the Directorate of Public Works for certain technical details, will continue the project through April 13, the planned date of completion.

"The soldiers are having a good time," said Sgt. 1st Class Gregory Durant, noncommissioned officer in charge. "They get a break from their normal duties and a chance to be part of something they can be proud of for years to come."

Pvt. 2 Maurice Powell of the 988th Military Police Company said he welcomes the chance for some fresh air and a little hard work.

"I work in supply where a lot of what we do is often paperwork," he said. "This is a chance for a break from being cooped up in an office all day."

Unit: Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized)
Job title: Wire systems installer
Years on the job: 2 1/2 years
Hometown: Sacramento, Calif.

What were your reasons for joining the Army?
For the same reason chills run down my back when the "Star Spangled Banner" plays.

What were your reasons for choosing your MOS?
My brother works in the communication field and I found it interesting.

What person has most influenced your military career?
Maj. Roger P. Schatzel, 3rd Brigade signal officer

If you were the sergeant major of the Army for a day, what improvements would you make?
Soldiers in leadership positions switch with soldiers who aren't for a week, so both sides realize what it is like.

What are your future career plans?
Go to college and see what feels right.

What do you think about the BOSS program and why is it important?
It gives single soldiers a forum to better their lives and any program based on improvement is important.

What have you accomplished as the BOSS representative for your unit?
Improved knowledge of single soldier initiative brought the recycling program in.

In your opinion, how can the individual soldier get involved in the BOSS program?
Make sure you are informed and give your time.

What specifically has the BOSS program done to help the soldiers in your unit?
Informed noncommissioned officers working on the "old" system of the changes in the "new" Army.

What others have to say about you:
"Spc. Marshall just actively became involved with BOSS and in a month's time has been motivated enough to take the responsibility of all of 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, as far as being the BOSS representative for that group. She is hard working and works for herself and others to make things better for all."

Job center offers chance to practice interviews

Job Assistance Center

If you are getting out of the military soon and have an interview coming up, you can take advantage of the mock interview practice sessions, which are conducted periodically at the Job Assistance Center.

Individuals learn how to interview effectively by rehearsing and practicing interview techniques with an experienced career counselor.

The mock interviews are taped to provide individuals with a visual learning tool.

Interviewing tips

• Be able to explain your skills clearly and simply to others.

• Be able to explain your experience and achievements clearly and simply to others.

• Itemize your technical and professional skills as they parallel the requirements of the job, and think of an example to illustrate each one.

• If you have experience in an industry, such as warehousing, show your "industry sensibilities" or "how we do it here" knowledge.

• Show willingness to do what it takes to help the team excel.

• Demonstrate manageability and team work. Do not bring up political views. Do not give any reason for an employer to think you may not be tolerant toward other's views.

• Explain professional behavior by giving a short story. Give an example of when you showed that type of behavior.

• Think of several stories from your work experience that back up your character traits. Be able to relate them whenever a "tell me a time ..." question is asked.

• Be a problem solver. Every company wants a problem solver no matter what the job. Think of specific examples of problems you were faced with and how you solved them. Ask during the interview about problems, deadlines, challenges or projects that will be tackled in the first few months and try to use illustrations from your last job to help the interviewer picture you working on those projects and effectively dealing with them.

• Remember, all interview questions are really asking only four questions.

1. Why are you here? (Why are you looking for a job)

2. What can you do for us? (What are your skills and professional attributes)

3. What kind of person are you? (Are you a fit? manageable?)

4. Can we afford you? (salary)

• Every question is an opportunity to sell yourself. Don't give "yes" or "no" answers to any question or comment.

• Listen and follow the lead of the interviewer.

Individuals interested in participating in a mock interview can call the Job Assistance Center at 545-2308 or 545-2309. The center is located in Building 2634 in Soldiers' Plaza.

New process in place for pest control

Organizations requesting pest control items only through the Unit and Housing Support Branch (U-Do-It Center) can now order supplies using a Department of Army Form 3161 (request for Issue or Turn-in) instead of a DA Form 4283 (Work Order Request).

The DA Form 3161 must identify which building the supplies will be used in and be signed by either the first sergeant or company commander. Personnel picking up the supplies must be listed on a signature card at the center.

For more information, call Nathaniel Goldwire at 545-3633.

GRE to be administered

The Graduate Record Examination will be administered April 12 at the education centers. The first examination is free, but the retest fee is $56.

For more information, call the Main Post Education Center, Building 2602, at 545-4863 or the Kelley Hill Education Center, Building 9027, at 544-3689.

OCS Senior Status Review this month

Officer Candidate School will conduct a Senior Status Review March 21 at 3 p.m. on York Field. Senior Status Review is conducted each cycle to allow officer candidates the opportunity to make their debut as they enter into the Senior Phase of training.

For more information, call 1st Lt. Gwendolyn Lee at 545-4711 or 545-4907.

Education services to be centralized

Effective April 1, Kelley Hill Education Center, Building 9027, will consolidate its services. All testing, tuition assistance, counseling and briefings will be centralized at the Main Post Education Center, Building 6, Soldiers' Plaza. Education records maintained at Kelley Hill Education Center will be transferred to Main Post.

Kelley Hill Education Center will remain open for the instruction of the Functional Academic Skills Training classes only.

For more information, call the Army Continuing Education System, Building 2602, Soldiers' Plaza, 545-6114.

Women's History Month Luncheon set

The Federal Women's Program and the Equal Opportunity Office will sponsor a Women's History Month Luncheon March 30 from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Fort Benning Officers' Club. The theme is "In Every Generation — Action Frees Our Dreams." Luncheon tickets are $5.75 per person.

The luncheon will feature various portrayals of women in history by members of the Federal Women's Program.

Top drill sergeants to be honored April 10

The Infantry Training Brigade will conduct a Drill Sergeant of the Year Ceremony honoring Sgt. 1st Class Thomas J. Zoch, Fort Benning's Drill Sergeant of the Year, and Staff Sgt. Bryan S. Voisard, Fort Benning's Drill Sergeant of the Year runner up April 10 at the Sand Hill Recreation Center.

For more information, contact Sgt. Rase Wiley at 544-9484.

ITB Eagle Run scheduled March 31

The Infantry Training Brigade Eagle Run will be March 31 from 1 to 2 p.m. in the Sand Hill cantonment area. The run is expected to draw approximately 4,000 participants.

For more information, call Capt. Lawrence E. George at 544-9590.

Instructors needed

The Henry Caro NCO Academy needs staff sergeants who maintain the high standards of the NCO corps as instructors for the primary leadership development course.

Applicants must:

- Want a challenging and demanding job
- Be physically fit
- Have military bearing and conduct, overall appearance above reproach
- Want to share knowledge and experience
- Develop junior leaders (lead by example)
- Work with other NCOs to build a cohesive team
- Have no profiles.

Only NCOs who are serious about working hard and giving 100 percent should inquire. Those interested can call Sgt. 1st Class Catherine P. Thomas at 545-3669 or 545-7381.

Nutrition class set

A "Follow Me to Weight Loss" program will be conducted from Wednesday to May 24 for 10 weeks Wednesdays from noon to 1 p.m. in Building 2506.

Topics will include basics for good nutrition, how to read labels, total body fitness, success for fitness and food display.

Interested employees can contact their training coordinator. Class limit is 25 participants.

Civilian training coordinators can make nominations by calling the Training and Development Division, Directorate of Civilian Personnel, at 545-5580 or 545-5656 no later than Wednesday.

Travel contractors to change March 27

Carlson-Wagonlit Travel has won the government contract for official and leisure travel at Fort Benning. The SatoTravel and Information Ticketing and Registration leisure travel office, located at the Main Mall, Building 9230, will close its doors March 24 at 2 p.m. and reopen as Carlson-Wagonlit Travel March 27.

Officials said Carlson will provide the same services provided by SatoTravel and ITR.

For more information, call the Community Recreation Division at 545-7357.

Civilian Awards Luncheon March 23

The Civilian Awards Luncheon will be March 23 from 11:30 a.m. to 1:15 p.m. at the Supper Club, Fort Benning Officers' Club. The Directorate of Operations and Training will serve as host.

ACAP office to close Wednesday to Mar 17

The Army Career and Alumni Program, Transition Assistance Office, Building 2617, Soldiers' Plaza, will be closed Wednesday to March 17 for conversion to a new automated system and to train staff members on the implementation of the program.

Tax help available

The Fort Benning Tax Office, located in Building 2640 at Soldiers' Plaza, is open to provide tax filing assistance. Office hours will be 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Electronic tax filing is available for most federal returns, and the office has many federal and state tax forms available.

Unit tax advisers have been appointed so soldiers can see their unit tax advisers first.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland and range areas will take place through March 19.

If weather permits, the following compartments may be affected: A-13, C-3, K-5, K-21, M-4, M-5, O-2, O-12, O-14, Q-2, Q-7, V-2, V-3, W-3, X-1, Z-3 and BB-2.

People using this area for recreation must leave before 9:30 a.m. daily.

Training units using compartments next to these areas may experience drift smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while traveling in these areas because of the potential for reduced visibility.

For more information, call 544-6206.

DoD to conduct survey on sexual harassment

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

Department of Defense officials want to know if policies intended to reduce sexual harassment are working.

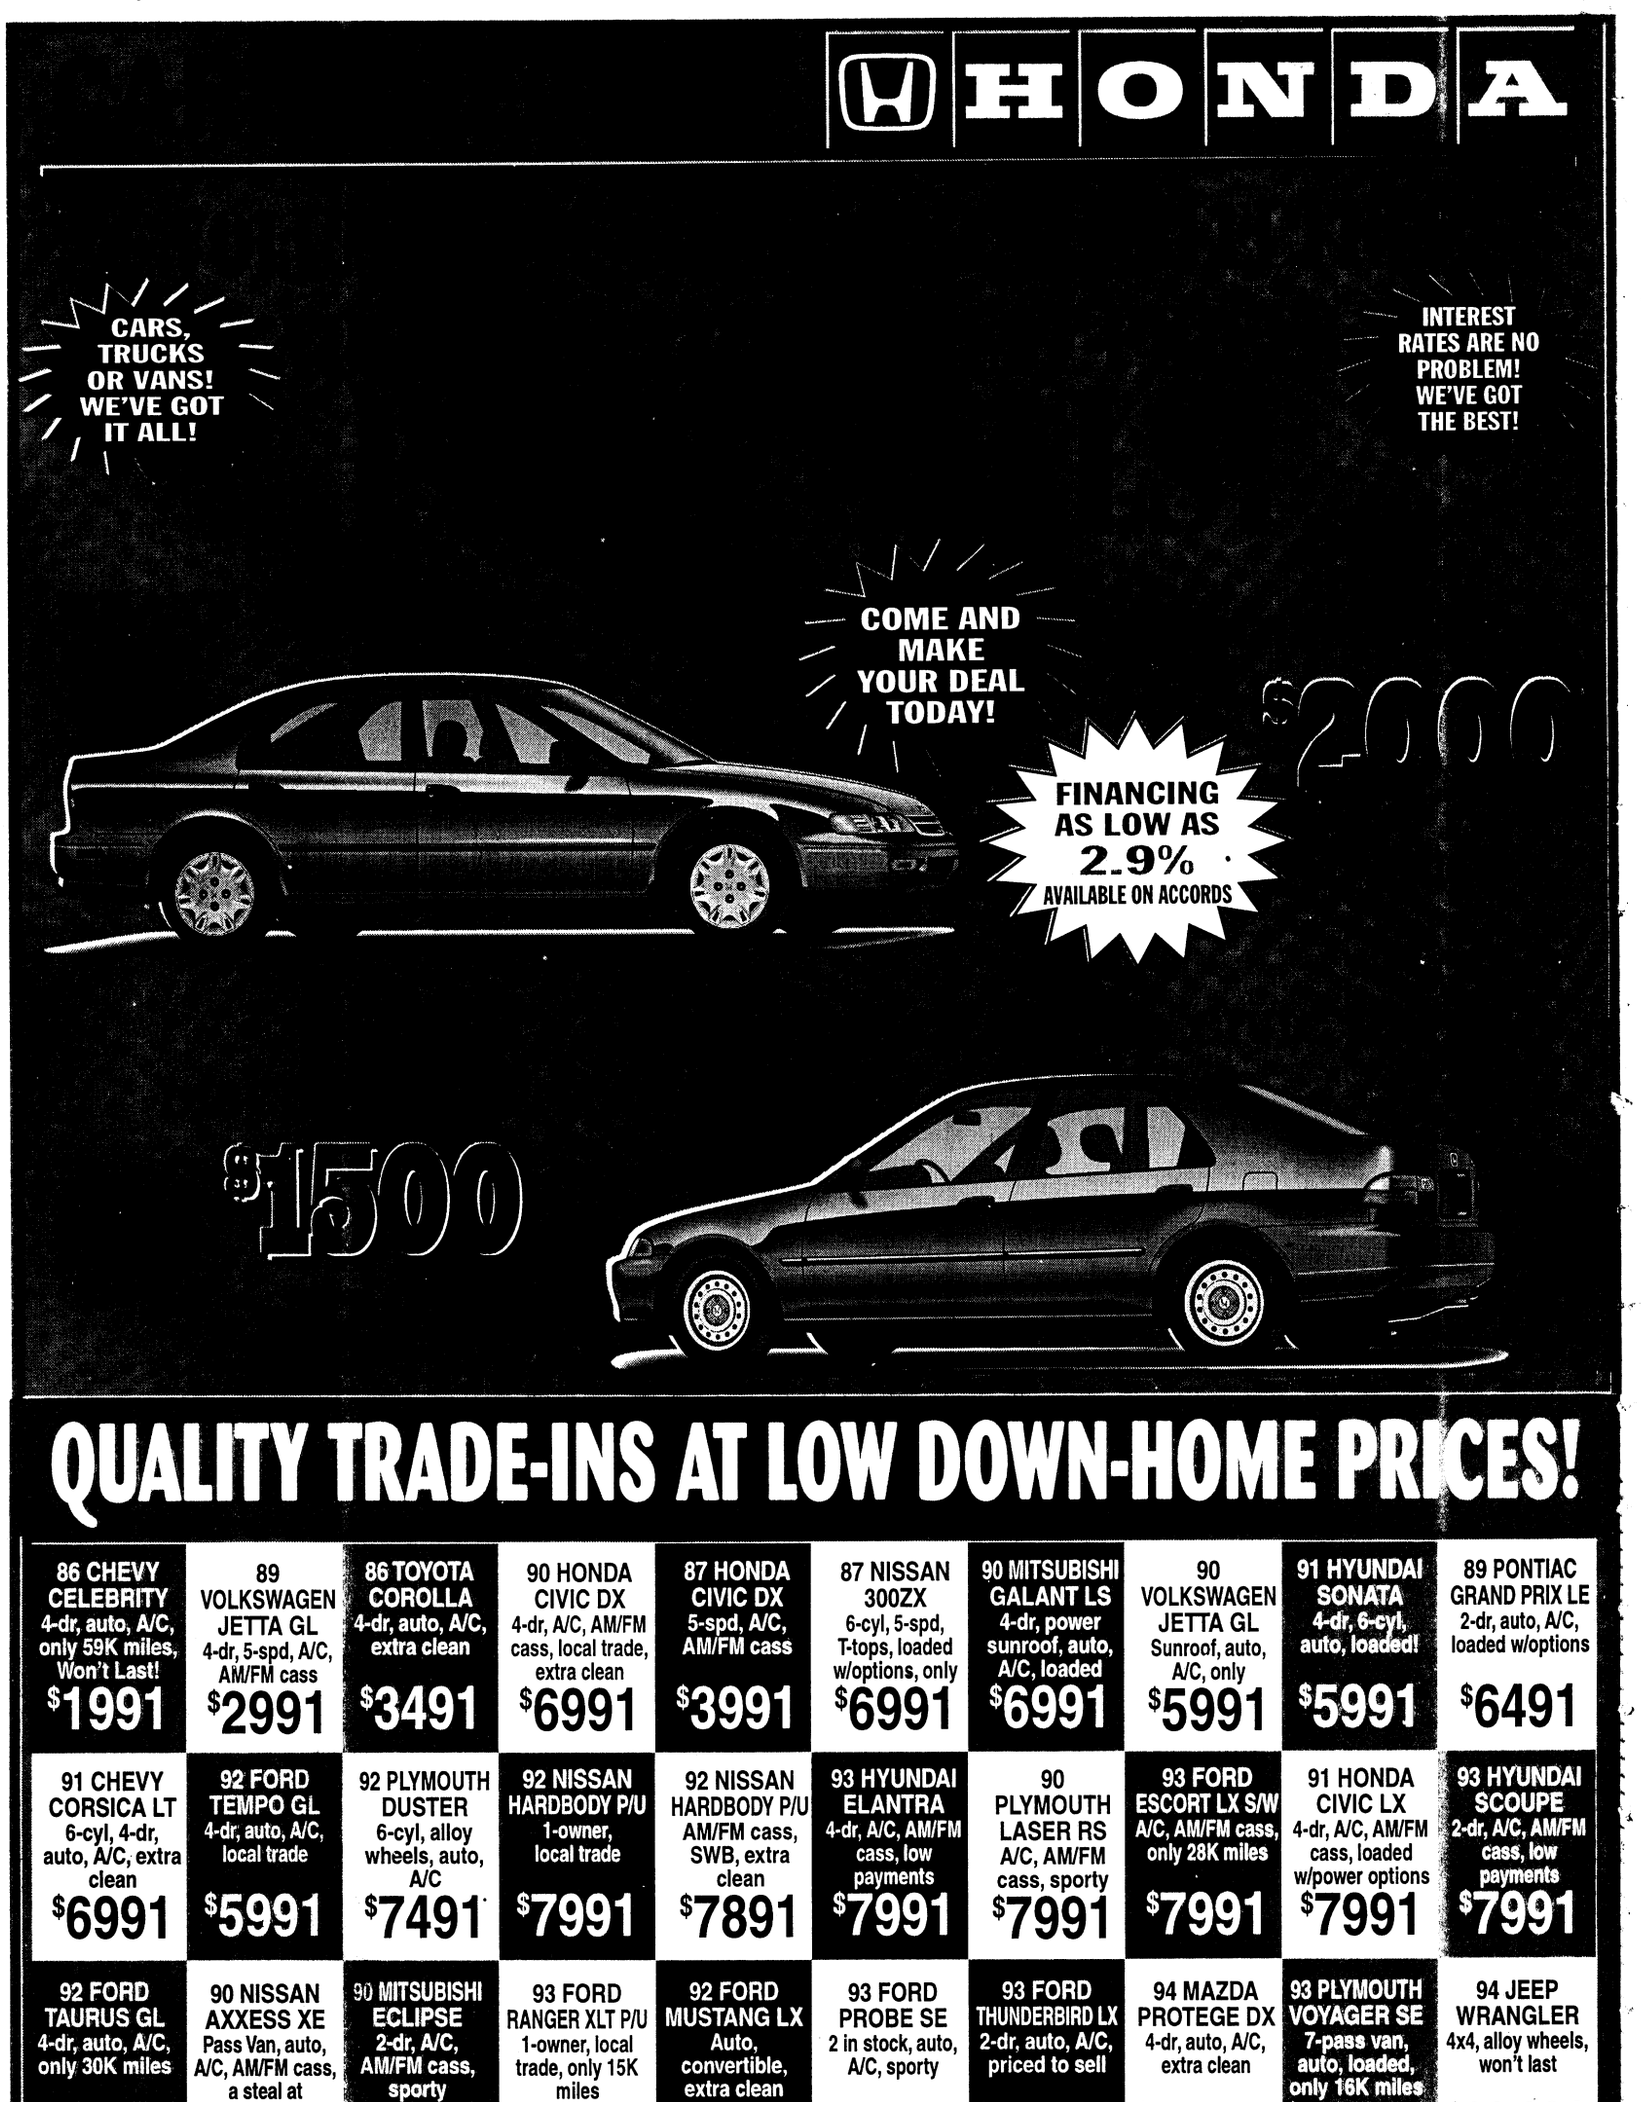
This spring the Defense Manpower Data Center will ask 90,000 active duty service members for their views on sexual harassment in the military.

"This will be the only current DoD-wide source of data officials can use to find out if efforts to educate people about sexual harassment and to prevent it are actually working," said Anita Lancaster, survey project manager. "For all we know, some policies may need fine tuning.

"This survey will formally document the prevalence of harassment in the military," said Lancaster, who holds a doctorate in counseling. "It does not duplicate the work of the Task Force on Sexual Harassment, which concentrated more on persons who filed complaints."

The survey will ask if service members have ever been subjected to harassing behavior. This behavior ranges from repeatedly being told offensive jokes of a sexual nature to being forced to have sex against their will, said Lancaster. It will ask if those who have been harassed filed a complaint and if so, whether the complaint was handled satisfactorily. The survey also includes questions designed to find out why some people who were harassed chose not to complain.

Other questions are directed at the quality of training on sexual harassment. The survey also asks whether military leaders are making reasonable efforts to stop sexual harassment, said Lancaster.



Respondents are assured of privacy. "Under no circumstances will any information about identifiable individuals be released," she said. "Responses will be combined with information from many other members to portray the experiences of the group."

"Every response counts," Lancaster said. "We carefully chose respondents so results will reflect the total active duty force. So if you're a female Navy E-4 or whatever, your views are important to get a picture of others in your group.

"Participation is important. Group statistics reported may result in policies that will benefit yourself and others like yourself," said Lancaster. "If you don't respond, your views and those of members like yourself won't be heard."

The only other DoD-wide sexual harassment survey was in 1988. It showed 22 percent of active duty military members felt they had been harassed. Females were almost four times as likely as males to have these experiences — 64 percent compared with 17 percent of males. Most common were sexual teasing, jokes or questions, sexually suggestive looks and body language, and physical touching. It also found 90 percent of those who thought they had been harassed did not file complaints.

DoD researchers are uncertain if the results of the 1995 survey will show an increase in harassment.

Cruise-matics shut out Montgomery 92-0

By Terry K. Ray

The Columbus Fort Benning Rugby Football Club, the Cruise-matics, unleashed an offensive barrage Saturday afternoon in Montgomery, Ala., defeating the Yellowhammers of the Montgomery Rugby Football Club 92-0. The win improved the Cruise-matics' record to 2-2-1 on the season.

Fly half Tim Butterfield led the Cruisers with four tries, but Duke Moseley led the team in scoring with 27 points, 22 on conversions and five on one try.

The Cruise-matics were unmerciful, scoring at will against the porous Yellowhammer defense. Eight different players got into the scoring column for the Cruise-matics. Winger Jason Daffin scored a hat trick with three tries, eight man Kevin Hyneman tacked on two and four players Darren Monaco, Joe Hyder, Luis Rodriguez and Joe Trawinski each had one try each.

Yellowhammer head coach Steve Long was very disappointed with the play of his team. "We lack discipline and direction," he said. "If we are to field a side that's going to be competitive, we need to come to practice and work hard to get into shape."

The onslaught began almost from the opening kick, with Monaco scoring off a five-meter scrum. Moments later, Daffin added another try with Mosely kicking the conversion for a quick 12-0 lead.

Butterfield would get his first try of the day off a five-meter scrum; and, with Moseley adding the conversion, the Cruise-matic lead had ballooned to 19-0 with less than 15 minutes gone by in the first half.

The carnage continued to grow with Hyder rambling from near midfield for his try leaving Yellowhammer defensemen strewn about like ragdolls. Moseley added the conversion pushing the lead to 26-0. "I kept waiting for someone to come up and stop my momentum, but no one showed until I was at the try zone so I took it on in for the try." Hyder said.

Two beautiful feeds, one from Hyneman to winger John "Pookie" Damico and from Damico to Butterfield set Butterfield in motion for his second try of the half. Moseley converted the kick for a 33-0 advantage.

With less than 12 minutes to play in the half, Butterfield connected on his third try for the hat trick, pushing the lead to 38-0. Moseley got his try then kicked the conversion with the half winding down, and the score going up to 45-0.

Butterfield got his fourth and final try of the day outrunning the defense to the try zone from 22-meters out. Moseley tacked on the conversion for a 52-0 bulge. Daffin tacked on a try for the final try of the half and a 57-0 lead.

The second half would be a mirror image of the first, except the faces were different for the Cruise-matics.

Trawinski came on to replace Joe Saffron at outside center to start the second half and promptly scored. Moseley booted the conversion boosting the lead to 64-0.

Rodriguez, subbing for Damico at wing, took a feed from Trawinski at the goal line and scored his try moments later. The kick by Moseley made the score 71-0.

Cruise-matic winger Jason Daffin pitches the ball away from the Yellowhammer defense.

Daffin got his hat trick late in the half when Tory Diciro passed the ball off to Daffin inside the Yellowhammer five-meter line and Daffin strolled into the try zone untouched. The conversion was good by Moseley for a 78-0 lead.

Hyneman would put the cap on the scoring for the Cruise-matics with two tries, one coming on a breakaway down the left sideline from midfield. Moseley converted both kicks for the final score of 92-0.

"I'm surprised we scored as much as we did," head coach Jim Muldoon said. "I didn't think we played all that well to begin with."

Fishing contest scheduled ...

For kids only

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Bass Angler Sportsman's Society Club of Fort Benning, in conjunction with the Dolphin Bass Club of Columbus, will conduct a Kids Casting Contest Saturday at the Phenix City Warehouse Foods parking lot.

Two winners from each age group, 7 through 10 and 11 through 14, will be crowned by the Alabama BASS federation and four winners, two from each age group, will be crowned by the Georgia BASS federation. Winners will qualify for competition at the state and national level if they win. Entry is free.

"All we're interested in is the kids," said Harry Hall director of the Georgia BASS federation. "We are encouraging kids from Fort Benning to come out and participate."

The contest will consist of three different fishing techniques; pitching, flipping and casting, at targets from various distances for each technique. Each contestant will get two tosses each with the highest score being used.

All rods and reels will be furnished by the clubs for competition use. To register, stop by Leon Jordan Marine and fill out the necessary forms.

Parents may want to bring along a birth certificate for 10 and 14-year olds who have their birthday after the middle of Aug. "If a child who is 10-years old turns 11 before the middle of Aug., he or she will be moved to the next age group," Hall said. "If a child who is 14 years old turns 15 before the middle of Aug., he or she will not be allowed to compete."

For more information, contact Leon Jordan Marine or listen to Kissin' 99.3 FM.

All-Army wrestling team 'slams' Navy in recent competition

The All-Army wrestling trial camp hopefuls took on the All-Navy wrestling team Monday afternoon at Santiago Fitness Center and promptly swabbed the mat with young sailors winning all 16 matches.

"Most of the guys we brought with us have little or no experience," Navy coach Tom Storey said. "This gives them some mat time against someone other than a teammate. Even though we didn't win a single match I still saw some things I was happy with."

All-Army wrestling coach Tony Thomas concurred with Story's assessment of the meet. "This was basically a tune up for the All-Army wrestle offs that begin (today)," Thomas said. Some of the guys showed me that all the training is starting to pay off."

The following are the winners from each weight class in both freestyle and Greco-Roman competition:

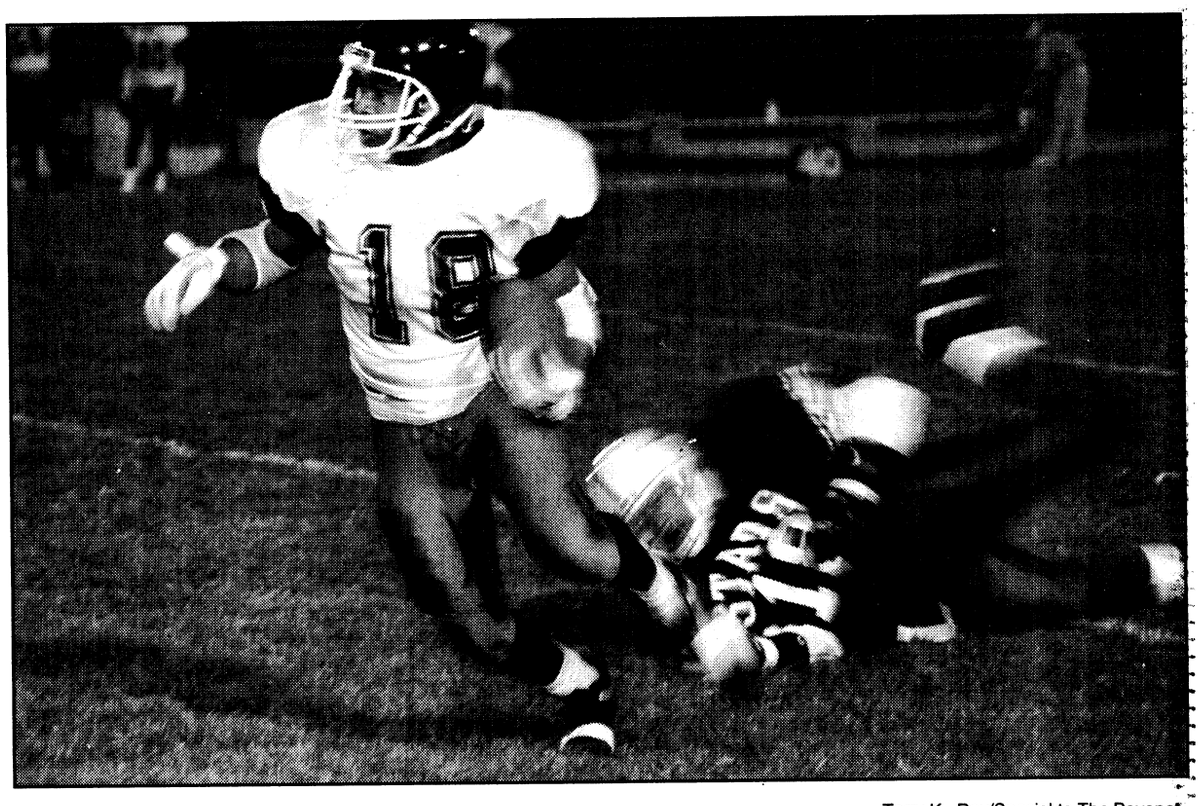
10K walk benefits MS

National Multiple Sclerosis Society

ATLANTA — The Georgia Chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society is preparing for another event for the weekend of March 25 and 26 and April 22 — the MS Walk.



This 10-kilometer walk (6.2 miles) will take place in 14 cities across Georgia, (Buckhead, Druid Hills, Lawrenceville, Jonesboro, Athens, Columbus, Marietta, Rome, Gainesville, Albany, Augusta, Valdosta, Savannah and Macon). The MS Society hopes to raise to $300,000 for the fight against multiple sclerosis. The Columbus walk is scheduled for March 25.

The MS Walk is a fund-raising event that supports the National Multiple Sclerosis Society's efforts to find the cause and cure for MS.

MS statewide sponsors are Lifetime Television for Woman, Wachovia Bank, Georgia Power Company, The Coca-Cola Company, Kroger, TWA, and Quaker Rice Cakes and Lockheed Bucks-of-the-Month Club.

Multiple sclerosis is a neurological disease with a wide variety of symptoms, ranging from blurred vision to complete paralysis. More than 6,000 Georgians have multiple sclerosis. The National Multiple Sclerosis Society, Georgia Chapter, funds biomedical research, provides programs and services to MS persons and their families, and educates the public about MS and its effects.

To register for the MS Walk, call the MS Society, Georgia Chapter at (800) 822-3379.

Stars suffer first loss of year

Columbus team fails to score as offense struggles

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Columbus Stars went down to defeat for the first time this season at the hands of their old nemesis the Albany Warriors 17-0 Saturday night at Hugh Mills Stadium in Albany, Ga.

The Stars were held to their lowest yardage output of the season with a grand total of 69 yards. Fullback Jamon Smith had 64 yards rushing on 18 carries to lead the Stars offense.

The Warriors, on the other hand, were held below their season average in points scored (35) and total yards (500), but they still managed 348 total yards of offense and 17 points.

"Every time we go up against Tom Staton and the Columbus Stars it turns out to be a dad gum dog fight," said Warriors head coach Roy Dale. "Coach Staton has a very good team, we knew going in it was going to be a very tough game."

A it was tough — the Stars defense gave almost as many yards and more points in one game (348 yards) and (17 points) than they had in their last three games combined (351 yards and 10 points).

"It was a hard-fought game," said Staton. "Every time we play this team, it's a battle and we come out on the short end of it. Their defense has improved from last season and their offense is a ball control type of offense that can eat up a clock quick. They're a good football team, but we are too. One loss isn't going to do it to us. We'll be back."

The Warriors, jumped to the early lead at 3-0 with a 26-yard field goal by former Stars kicker Tommy Amburgy early into the second quarter.

Both defense's would hang tough through the rest of the half with the Warriors clinging to the 3-0 lead at the half.

In the second half, the Warriors using tight end Tyrone Watson to the tune of four catches for 112 yards and one touchdown, and fullback Reginald Whitehead six carries for 67 yards and one touchdown moved the ball up and down the field

Warrior quarterback Nathaniel Curry, 6 for 13, 165 yards and one interception used misdirection runs and great ball faking to confuse the Stars' defense setting up the Warriors next score, a one yard run by Whitehead late in the third quarter Amburgy added the conversion for a 10-0 lead with time running out on the Stars.

A fumble recovery by free safety Troy Busby on a Stars punt set the Stars up with good field position at the Warriors 45. The Stars failed to move the ball and had to settle for a field goal attempt by Scott Alalof. The kick sailed wide left leaving the Stars with no points.

The Warriors sealed the game with 4:26 left to play when backup quarterback Tony Robinson found Watson in the corner of the end zone for a 22-yard touchdown strike. Amburgy drove home the extra point attempt for the final point of the night and another win for the Warriors who now sit atop the Northern Division with a 5-0 record.

The Stars hope to rebound from the loss with another road trip. They travel down to Tallahassee, Fla., for a rematch with the Tornados on Saturday. The next home game for the Stars will be March 18 against the Vipers of Mobile, Ala. Game time is 7 p.m.

FORT BENNING HISTORY BOOK

published to commemorate

FORT BENNING'S 75th ANNIVERSARY

Fort Benning recently celebrated its 75th Anniversary, and The Bayonet published a special edition to coincide with the celebration. Soon after the special edition of the paper was published, we began looking at the information about Fort Benning that we had collected and decided that it was simply too good to leave it just in newspaper form.

We knew the book would be interesting and informative. The next step was to make it as attractive as possible. An experienced layout and design firm was hired, and they have done an absolutely superb job. You will enjoy thumbing through its pages for years to come. You will also be proud to put in a prominent place at home for friends to enjoy, or at work for your customers to see. And, if you're looking for gift for a retiree, or a friend who may have served at Fort Benning and is no longer here, there's no better way to remind them of your lasting friendship.

Published by the contract printer of Fort Benning's authorized newspaper, The Bayonet, the hardcover book, protected by a beautiful full-color dust cover, has 168-pages and is filled with more than 200 photos. The book includes detailed timelines of significant events that have shaped Fort Benning, an overview of the post's involvement in World War II, Korea, Viet Nam, and Desert Shield/Storm, detailed information on the current major units, and a variety of stories that round out the post's interesting history.

It is the perfect "coffee table book" and is a 'must have' for anyone who has been stationed at Fort Benning. It's a book that will be a lasting memento of the winner of the 1994 Commander In Chief's Award signifying it as. . .

"The Best Army Installation in the World!"

Military Police Activity

This week's hot topic concerns larceny of private property.

Throughout the community, there has been an increase in the number of larcenies being committed. Radar detectors, car telephones and stereo equipment are common targets for thieves.

When property of this nature is stolen, it is necessary to provide the Military Police with basic information about the property that will aid in the investigation.

You, as the owner, should record all serial numbers, make, model numbers and brand names of each item of value in your home or car. Remember to keep this information in a safe place just in case you may need it.

Save receipts when purchasing valuable items, receipts help show proof of ownership, date of purchase and the value.

Taking these simple steps and having the right information available will aid investigators and could lead to the recovery of missing items and the apprehension of suspects.

The following entries are from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters. Such entries may be incomplete and do not determine the guilt or innocence of any person.

TAKE A BITE OUT OF CRIME

• A sergeant first class was charged with making a false official statement. The sergeant submitted claims indicating that he had completed two do-it-yourself moves to the state of Washington. On the first request, he received an advance of $3,956.40. The following month, he submitted another claim for an advance of $4,582.50. The total loss to the government was $8,538.90. Investigation on this matter was turned over to the FBI.

• A specialist was charged with failure to obey a written order or regulation. While conducting a safety checkpoint on Marne Road, an MP noticed a .22-caliber semi - automatic pistol in the glove compartment of the specialist's vehicle. The soldier was apprehended and transported to the Military Police station where he was processed and released to his unit.

• A sergeant was charged with disorderly conduct when he and his wife became involved in a verbal altercation. After the arrival of the MPs, the sergeant, who appeared intoxicated, remained belligerent. After several attempts to calm the individual down failed, he was physically restrained and handcuffed. He was transported to the Military Police station where he was processed and released to his unit.

Other activities included four cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, 15 traffic accidents, 11 cases of larceny and one case of shoplifting reported at the Post Exchange facilities.

Remember to help "Make Our Post The Best — Give Crime Arrest." Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police at 545-5223 or 545-5224 or the "Crime In Progress" line at 545-5222.

Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: My husband and I just arrived at Fort Benning.

Presently, there is no on-post housing available. However, we do believe that housing will be available in approximately four months. In the meantime, the only option available to us is to rent an apartment off post.

I do not believe many places will offer short-term leases. What are the consequences of breaking a lease before it has expired?

A: This is a very common scenario at Fort Benning. Fortunately, there are certain actions you can take to minimize the cost of terminating your lease prematurely. Also, there are several laws that protect the tenant's right to recover his or her security deposit.

When signing a lease under these circumstances, you should first attempt to negotiate a lease where its term coincides with your housing needs. If you do not have to, do not sign a lease for a time period greater than you actually need the apartment.

Unfortunately, this is easier said than done. Many apartment complexes do not afford you the opportunity to negotiate the term of the lease. But you will not know unless you ask.

Another aspect of the lease you may want to attempt to negotiate is the inclusion of a condition that permits you to terminate the lease immediately upon notification that on-post housing is available. As with the lease term, this is subject to negotiation and not required of the landlord.

Putting aside the negotiation, you have signed a six-month lease for your new apartment. Two months later, you have received notification that on-post housing is available for you in one month.

Under this scenario, your first step is to give the landlord your notice of termination. Most leases require that the tenant give a 30 day written notice stating that you intend to terminate your lease early. This is usually not a problem because the on-post housing is not ordinarily available for immediate occupation.

In addition to the 30-day notice requirement, most leases require you to pay one month's rent as a penalty for terminating the lease prematurely. Both the 30-day notice requirement and the one month's rent penalty are permissible under the law.

In the event a lease requires you to give more than 30 days' notice and to pay more than one month's rent as a penalty, do not sign that lease. Look around further because such a lease is more the exception than norm.

The following is applicable to cases of both normal termination and early termination.

Georgia law requires that the landlord conduct an inspection of the premises within three business days after the date of the termination of occupancy. The landlord is required to make a list of all damages done to the premises, which is the basis for any charge against the security deposit.

The tenant is then permitted to inspect the premises within five business days after the termination of the occupancy to ensure the landlord's list is accurate.

Georgia law requires that the landlord return the security deposit within one month after the termination of the lease, minus any damages that need to be fixed. It is important that you keep the landlord abreast of any changes of address during this period.

The law requires the landlord to mail only the balance of the security deposit to the last known address of the tenant. Thus, if your are moving around, you may not receive what is owed to you.

If you have any questions concerning your lease or have any problems involving your landlord, contact the Legal Assistance Division for an appointment. The telephone number is 545-3281 or 545-3282.

Boaters should lookout for signs of hypothermia

By Emerson E. Addington
Coast Guard Auxiliary

As the weather gets warmer, more and more people will be boating on local rivers and lakes.

Warm spring weather means better fishing conditions, but it also means rapid changing weather conditions, such as temperature changes, showers and thunder storms.

Boaters and fishers should always be on the lookout for and be aware of hypothermia. If a boat capsizes or someone falls overboard, getting back in the boat, being picked up by another boat or getting to shore does not always make the person safe. When a person is wet, for whatever reason, he or she is in danger of hypothermia.

Being in the water or getting wet from rainfall for even a very short time, even in water over 50 degrees, can drop the body temperature. Just wearing wet clothing from falling overboard or getting caught in the rain can lower the body temperature to dangerous levels.

While boating, don't forget that boat speed affects the "wind chill factor" by lowering the air temperature a person feels. Try to stay out of the wind flow.

To recognize hypothermia, you must know a few basic facts about how the human body works. Normal internal body temperature is 98.6 degrees Fahrenheit. The body automatically regulates itself to remain very close to this temperature. A minor deviation is OK, but a major change is another story.

You can estimate the body temperature of a hypothermia victim by noting the presence of the following symptoms:

• Above 95 degrees F — The victim is conscious and alert and may have vigorous shivering.

• 90 to 95 degrees F — The victim is conscious but has a mild to moderate clouding of mental facilities, impaired speech, poor coordination, numbness and disorientation. Shivering is present but diminished.

• 85 to 90 degrees F — The victim has severe clouding of consciousness or may be unconscious. Bluishness of the skin, collapse of the veins in the skin, enlargement of the pupils and muscle stiffness will take place.

• Below 85 degrees F — The victim is unconscious and breathing rate is diminished. Hearbeat becomes irregular and the pulse is barely detectable.

Besides the presence of symptoms that help you estimate body temperature, there are other observable signs that indicate a person is suffering from hypothermia.

In general appearance, the victim looks pale. If you touch the victim's skin, it will be very cold. The victim's pupils will be dilated and will not adjust properly when exposed to light. Other symptoms you may observe are poor coordination, slurred speech, incoherent thinking, unconsciousness, muscle stiffness, weak pulse, very slow breathing, and an irregular heart beat.

You may not be able to tell when a person is suffering from hypothermia. But, if any doubt exists, treat the person as a victim.

Once an individual has been moved from cold water or extended exposure to sereve wind chill, place the person in a sheltered warm environment and look for signs of hypothermia.

To be safe, start treating the victim for hypothermia. The same applies for you or any other person with you who may have gotten wet or cold.

Never postpone treatment, even if you or the other person is no longer exposed to cold air or water. A hypothermia victim's condition will continue to deteriorate.

Handle the victim gently, excessive movement may cause heart beat irregularities which can be fatal.

Keep the patient calm and quiet. Do not allow the person to perform any physical activity other than what is absolutely necessary. Exertion can use up large amounts of body heat that would otherwise be available for rising internal body temperature.

If possible, position an unconscious or semiconscious victim face up with head slightly lower than the rest of the body.

The treatment of hypothermia will, of course, depend on both the condition of the victim and facilities available. If dry clothing or blankets are available get the victim into them and into a warm environment. If these are not available do not remove wet clothing.

In all cases, contact should be made for medical evacuation. Request detailed information on care and handling of the victim. While waiting for medical instruction or evacuation, administer first aid. Be prepared to give cardiopulmonary resuscitation (if qualified) if necessary, treat for shock, use whatever is available to rewarm the victim but do not aggressively rewarm an unconscious victim, gentle rewarming techniques should be used. Your main goal in providing first aid is to prevent the victim from getting colder.

Hypothermia is a true medical emergency, therefore evacuation to a medical facility should be accomplished as soon as possible.

Boat safely and be prepared for an emergency.

Job title: Personnel Actions Center supervisor
Years on the job: Nine years

What were your reasons for joining the Army?
I enlisted in the Army to serve my country, gain experience and improve my education.

Define your style of leadership.
My leadership style depends on the situation, but I prefer using the participative leadership style because I enjoy working with soldiers.

What person has most influenced your career?
Command Sgt. Maj. Vincent Sampson of the School of the Americas. He was my first sergeant during my first term and had a direct impact on my re-enlisting.

If you were sergeant major of the Army for a day, what improvements would you make?
My improvement would be to change the promotion system. NCOs selected for senior NCO promotion should receive their promotion within 12 months after being selected.

What were your reasons for choosing your MOS?
I chose to be a personnel administrative specialist because the experience I would gain was in line with my civilian goal of obtaining and running my own business.

Describe a memorable moment in your career.
The most memorable moments in my career were the 2 1/2 years I served as a drill sergeant training soldiers.

What are your future career plans?
I plan to make the Army my first career and continue my education obtaining a master's degree in business.

What others have to say about you: "Staff Sgt. Blackmon is truly a team player, good listener, helpful and technically and tactically proficient."

What were your reasons for joining civil service?
I was under the impression that Fort Benning would be a good place where better job opportunities would exist.

Define your work ethic.
To be an honest, dependable and dedicated worker who takes considerable pride in the quality of my work.

What person has most influenced your career?
My grandparents.

If you were your supervisor for a day, what improvements would you make?
Implement fair incentive program to recognize employees who actually do the work and go the extra mile and who are sometimes overlooked.

Describe a memorable moment in your career.
My two-fold memorable moment was the day I received my bachelor of science degree and the day I received my license to market financial products.

Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, post commanding general, pins the Soldier's Medal onto Staff Sgt. Scott A. Jaeger.

CG recognizes those dedicated to excellence

2 soldiers receive awards for rescues, others for outstanding service, support

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

Soldiers and civilians from the tri-community were honored March 2 for outstanding achievements during a retreat ceremony on York Field.

Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, post commanding general, hosted the event. In attendance for the ceremony was a delegation from the Lithuanian army, which was visiting Fort Benning.

The recipients were:

• Capt. Timothy C. Ladouceur — received the Soldier's Medal for rescuing three people from a burning vehicle moments before it exploded July 10, 1994, on Interstate 270 in Washington, D.C.

• Staff Sgt. Scott A. Jaeger — received the Soldier's Medal for awakening residents during an apartment fire in Columbia, S.C. Sept. 25, 1993. Jaeger also summoned emergency help and freed occupants of the building by kicking in a door.

• Sgt. 1st Class Ray H. Woodard — was awarded Meritorious Service Medal for being selected as the Training and Doctrine Command's re-enlistment noncommissioned officer for 1994.

• Benjamin Wainwright — was awarded the Fort Benning Certificate of Appreciation for outstanding customer service to the post as the commissary manager.

• Peggy C. Jackson — was awarded the Fort Benning Certificate of Appreciation for being the volunteer of the month as the lead master trainer of the post's Army Family Team Building program.

• Joyce T. Livingston — was awarded the Department of the Army Certificate for being December's employee of the month. She completed the documentation of several reorganization efforts at the School of the Americas, in addition to her regular duties.

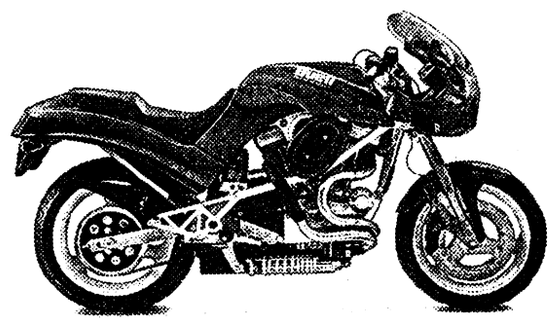
• The Training Support Center, Directorate of Operations and Training — received the Organization of Excellence for the month of February. The organization is credited for developing the first night fighting training facility.

• Columbus Mayor Pro-Tem A.J. McClung and B. Dayton Preston — members of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce, received special mementos of appreciation for their long-time contributions and support of the Fort Benning community.

After giving out the awards, Hendrix spoke about the kind of person who deserves these awards.

"You just have to be characterized as dedicated to excellence," Hendrix said.

He also talked about the soldiers who stood in retreat and represented all the units on post.



"You do your job so well everyday (and) we don't take enough time to stop and recognize that and say thank you," he said.

Following the ceremony, as with all the retreat ceremonies, snacks and drinks were available.

How To Recycle

Post housing residents may place recyclable materials in brown plastic bins for weekly curbside pickup.

Here is a list of the items that can and cannot be placed in the bin for recycling.

• Glass: Only the following can be recycled: soft drink, beer, juice, ketchup, wine, liquor and food containers. All caps and lids are to be removed and containers are to be rinsed out. Special care should be taken to avoid breaking glass when placing it in the recycling bin. Glass will be separated by color at the curb for processing at the Materials Recovery facility.

• Cans: Only aluminum and steel cans are accepted at this time. Cans must be rinsed out. Labels may remain on the cans.

• Plastic: All plastic materials containing the Recycling Triangle (Three Chasing Arrows) may be recycled. This includes soft drink bottles and milk jugs. Caps must be removed and may be placed in the recycling bin. All containers must be rinsed out.

• Paper: All paper products except used personal type materials may be recycled. These items should be placed in brown paper bags or bundled together and tied then placed beside the recycling bin.

NOTE: incidents whereby used personal items are placed for recycling is cause for rejection.

• Cardboard: Pick-up of cardboard from moving will be coordinated directly with the Materials Recovery Facility, at 544-6142. Ask for the manager or leave a message containing your address, housing area, name and phone number.

• Inert Waste: Tree limbs, grass clippings and leaves will be picked up on Mondays only. Clippings and leaves should be placed in a garbage bag and tied or in a trash can

Trash and recycle pickup schedule

Household trash and recycling will be collected once a week on the same day. If there is recyclable material mixed in with the trash can it will not be picked up until the following week, or until recyclables are separated.

Academically talented first- and second-graders sing about the merits of

'LOVIN' KINDNESS'

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet©

Sunnyside Park is a magical place, a place where all who know the password "kindness" are welcomed.

It's a place where individual differences are respected and where peace and harmony are the norm.

Sunnyside Park is imaginary, but young actors and actresses from the Fort Benning schools brought it to life March 3 through songs, dances and recitations.

Under the direction of teachers Marie Hand and Ellen Smith, first- and second-graders in the Academically Talented program presented a fast-paced 40-minute choral production to an audience of students, educators, parents and guests.

The performance of the play "Lovin' Kindness" featured students from each of the six Fort Benning elementary schools.

Hand and Smith, who travel to each school one day per week for the Academically Talented Program, have been working with students at Loyd, McBride, Dexter, White and Stowers Schools for the past five weeks. Although they worked individually with each school group, they integrated the various parts the day of the performance.

Smith and Hand said they relied heavily on parent volunteers who painted the colorful backdrop and helped fashion props such as top hats and gloves.

A black light emphasized the glowing white props and brought appreciative sighs from the audience as the performers danced and sang their way through several numbers.

"This was an excellent play for our program because of its presentability," Smith said.

The play, written by Michael and Jill Gallina, centered around a park filled with wildlife, walking paths, and a playground where children "all play together and get along together in perfect harmony."

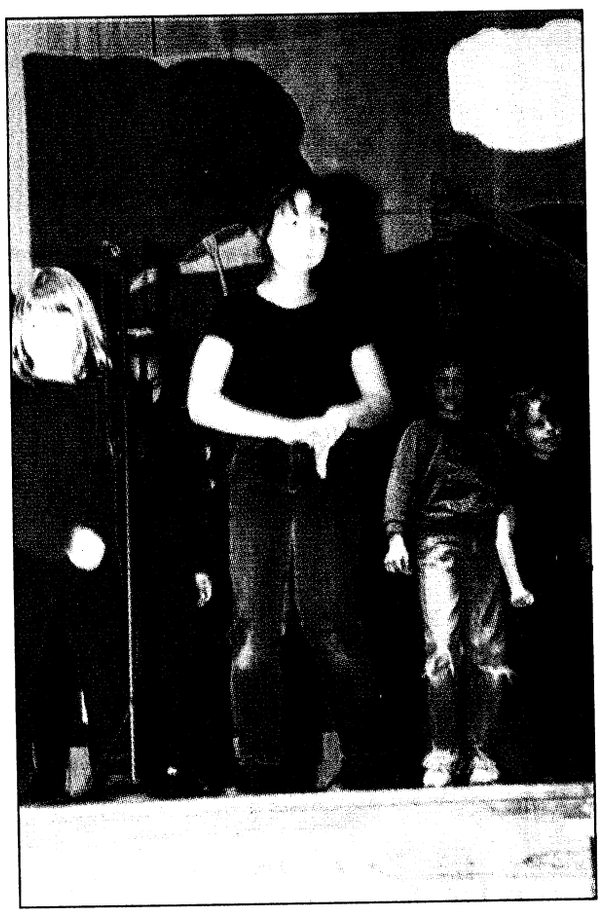
Kindness is the key, and children find fun and friends amid the rolling hills of this imaginary place, Hand said.

Even those like "Johnny" who are "a little different" find acceptance and friendship as the performers come to realize "he has feelings like you and me. He's just as good as you and me."

Another musical number touched on racial compatibility as the performers likened themselves to "A kaleidoscope of colors in perfect harmony."

The youngsters also sang about ways to make new children feel welcome in a group.

"Our students are continually in this situation since we are such a mobile community," Smith said.



Each year Hand and Smith direct a play focusing on one issue relevant to their first- and second-grade students. Last year, they presented a musical focusing on the environment.

"The plays focus on something we want to expose children to — it's part of their education," said Gail Wilson, director of staff development.

Nicole Kagee listens for her cue to deliver a speaking part at the annual play coordinated by teachers Marie Hand and Ellen Smith.

"You have to have heart," sing first- and second-graders as part of the play, "Lovin' Kindness." For special effects, students used the hearts under a black light to create a sea of glowing valentines.

Stowers School principal Glenn Hughes ensures students stay kneeling in the hallway as they participate in a tornado drill.

Pupils dodge 'tornado' at Stowers School

Drill prepares them for spring storm season

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet

At precisely 1:30 p.m. Monday, more than 600 students poured from their classrooms at Stowers School; and, within one minute, they were kneeling in the windowless hallways, curled into balls with their heads against the walls.

The students were participating in a seasonal tornado drill, an exercise to practice procedures in case a tornado warning is ever announced for Fort Benning during the school day.

"The drill was very successful," said Glenn Hughes, principal. "The students were in position in less than one minute, which is what we wanted."

If either the National Weather Service or Fort Benning's own weather watch system had announced a tornado warning, Hughes would announce via intercom that "conditions now are code black," and students would assume the safety position until danger was past, he said.

These drills are regularly scheduled in the spring when the weather conditions are receptive to tornados, he said.

Each school has a radio link with the national weather service which is always on. In the event of an emergency, schools would receive warnings from that radio link or from the schools' central office which would be informed by Fort Benning's own weather watch station at Lawson Army Airfield, Hughes said.

The tornado drill is part of an overall safety program in place at the Fort Benning Schools. Students also participate in monthly fire safety drills in which they exit the building, Hughes said.

"Drills and preparation are important to us," he said. "We want parents to know we are prepared to keep their children safe."

volunteers needed

Volunteer Resource Center

The Fort Benning Volunteer Resource Center promotes volunteerism by recruiting potential volunteers, by retaining active volunteers and by recognizing the contributions of volunteers to the quality of life of soldiers and families.

The Volunteer Resource Center is located in Building 359, Family Unit Network Center, and it is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p .m. Persons interested in volunteering can visit or call Olga MacLean, installation volunteer coordinator, at 545-5602.

There are many volunteer opportunities available through the center.

• Volunteers are needed at the Thrift Shop on Tuesdays and Thursdays between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. Individuals will gain retail experience while helping others. Free child care is provided for up to two children.

• Santa's Castle needs volunteers on Wednesdays from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. to help clean and refurbish toys. A volunteer is particularly needed to sew baby doll and Barbie clothes. Child care costs are provided.

• Sayers Memorial Library needs volunteers to assist with shelving books, data entry and story time for children. Also, volunteers with experience in activity program planning, dramatic reading and counseling are encouraged to participate in the Multiple Reading Program this summer. Child-care costs will be provided.

Volunteers are needed in each housing area to assist the community mayor. Persons interested can contact a community life center.

• The Public Affairs Office needs an editorial assistant to assist the print section in publishing The Bayonet.

This product supports Army families by disseminating community news and command information to all Fort Benning families. The Bayonet newspaper is delivered free to all on-post housing units and by subscription to those living off post.

Interested persons must have typing ability; knowledge of computer word processing systems is preferred but not required. Good communication skills and command of the English language are required. Education or experience in print journalism is preferred but not required. Also, the individual must be familiar with the Army and Fort Benning.

For more information, call 545-2201.

• The Rape Crisis Intervention Program is looking for volunteers. Training and child-care costs are provided.

• The First Steps Program needs volunteers to mentor and assist new mothers during the first few days or weeks after the birth of their children. Training and child-care costs are provided.

• Big Brothers and Big Sisters of Columbus needs adults to share love, support and time with children from single-parent families. For more information, call 327-3760.

• The Fish and Wildlife Management office needs sports-minded volunteers to work at the deer-check station, feed the catfish in Russ Pond and perform other duties.

Shaw students tour SOA

By Judith Ginder
School of the Americas

Students from Shaw High School toured the School of the Americas Wednesday morning.

The group of approximately 45 students were part of a Spanish language class at the high school.

During the visit, the students were first given a briefing about the School of the Americas from Maj. Gordon Martel, public affairs officer.

The students were informed of SOA's history, curriculum and its goals for the future.

After the briefing, the students were broken into smaller groups and given a tour of Ridgway Hall.

They visited Amos Library and the Language Service Division. The division translates both written works and verbally for SOA.

Martel said he felt that being in an environment where Spanish is spoken was beneficial to the students learning the language.

After the tour, the group was able to observe part of a combat medic course class in progress.

Purim: Let there be noise

By Timothy H. Atkinson
USAIC Chaplain Office

reflections

Have you ever found yourself in a situation where you had your back against the wall? Your emotions were in the survival mode? It was a temptation to feel life was a cruel joke? Then maybe the Jewish holiday Purim will inspire you.

The story of God's deliverance of the Jews from a diabolical villain, Haman, is what Purim is all about. Purim is the next Jewish holiday after Hanukkah. This year it starts Wednesday. Participants practice the fast of Esther.

On Thursday, the scroll of Esther is read in the synagogue. Whenever the name Haman is read, children will try to drown out his name with noise makers. In the afternoon, pastries in the form of Haman's hat (Hamantaschen) are eaten. In the late afternoon, they have a traditional feast.

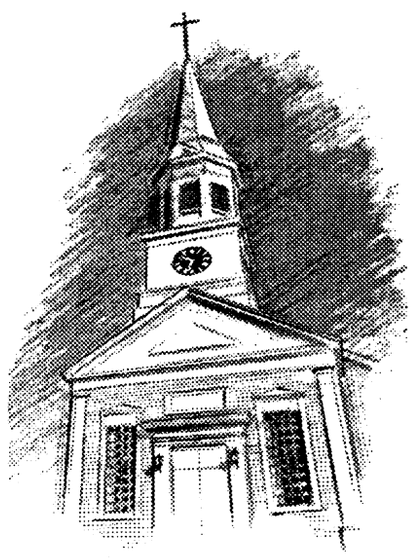
Purim means to cast lots. The lot seemed to roll wrong for the Jewish people in the book of Esther. When the lot fell to Haman, he used the opportunity to ask King Xerxes to destroy the Jews living in Persian captivity.

With his plan succeeding, he proceeded to build a gallows for his enemy Mordecai.

Naman's plot to destroy them seemed a sure thing. However, Mordecai, a Jew Haman especially hated, tried to persuade Queen Esther, who was also Jewish, to speak to the King on behalf of her people.

When she responded to him that to go before the king uninvited would be to risk her life, Mordecai sent back this answer to Esther: "Do not think that because you are in the king's house you alone of all the Jews will escape.

"For if you remain silent at this time, you and your father's family will perish. And who knows but that you have come to royal position for such a time as this?" (Esther 4:13 and 14 NIV)



What has God called you to do on behalf of others? Do you think that if you do not get involved, things will not hurt you either?

Once when talking to a Jewish Rabbi, I asked why the children make noise at Haman's name. He said it emphasizes the point that when you are in an unjust situation you might not always be able to make a big difference, but you can at least make some noise.

God is a good God and wants to helps us. There is truth in the saying: God helps those who help themselves. Read the book of Esther and see how the Lord helped Esther to use wisdom and gain the King's favor.

Esther spoke to the King about her people and in turn saved them. The King hung Haman on the gallows Haman had prepared for Mordecai.

God delivered the Jews, but he used obedient people. In this case

God used Esther, a woman of courage, beauty, and strength. She is a true Bible hero — one I hold up as an example this March (women's history month) for us all to emulate.

God will conquer our enemies. As we work with him, he can conquer the enemy: lust, confusion, loneliness, marital discord, depression, etc. Lord help us to obey you and be delivered from our trials even as you did the Jewish people in their deliverance from Haman.

Military leaders pray for our armed forces

By Bill Putman
USAIC Chaplain Office

prayer

There are many prayers recorded that were used by military leaders on special occasions or that have been written for use by military personnel.

The "Book of Worship for United States Forces," (Armed Forces Chaplains Board, 1974), is the current resource for hymns and worship for military personnel of the United States of America. It is the fourth in the succession of hymnals or worship books to be compiled for military use. All have contained a section of prayers.

"The Hymnal: Army and Navy," (A. S. Barnes and Company, 1941), was the second such book and provides several prayers not included in the current book. The historical prayers here are from this book.

While president, George Washington wrote a prayer at Newburg, N.Y., June 8, 1783, and sent it to the governors of all the states.

Washington's Prayer for the Nation

"Almighty God, we make our earnest prayer that thou wilt keep the United States in thy holy protection, that thou wilt incline the hearts of the citizens to cultivate a spirit of subordination and obedience to government, and entertain a brotherly affection and love for one another and for their fellow citizens of the United States at large.

"And finally that thou wilt most graciously be pleased to dispose us all to do justice, to love mercy, and to demean ourselves with that charity, humility, and pacific temper of mind which were the characteristics of the divine author of our blessed religion, and without an humble imitation of whose example in these things, we can never hope to be a happy nation.

"Grant our supplications, we beseech thee, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen."

Its words to the Lord ring as true today as they did for soldiers some six decades ago.

A Prayer for the Army

"Lord God of Hosts, whose power is from everlasting to everlasting, and whose name is above every name in heaven and earth: keep, we pray thee, under thy protecting care the Army of our country and all who serve therein. Defend them, amid violence on land or sea or in the heavens, and grant that they may be a sure defense and a safeguard for the people of the United States and a security for such as come and go in peaceful and lawful pursuit. In time of peace, keep them from evil, and in the day of conflict suffer not their courage to fail: that they may guard the American heritage against those who would destroy or straiten the liberties of government by the people, and to the end that the blessings of religion and law may be preserved to posterity. Through Christ our Lord. Amen."

On the inside fly page of the hymnal, is a prayer for the Army.

Follow 'way of the cross' during Lent

By Phil Reilly
USAIC Chaplain Office

reflections

The "way of the cross" is a pious devotion by Roman Catholics to honor the passion and death of Christ.

This devotion consists of prayer and meditation standing or kneeling before 14 stations.

Each station represents an event which supposedly occurred on Jesus' journey to Golgotha.

The devotion began with the early Christian practice of visiting the scenes of Christ's passion in the Holy Land.

Encouraged by the Order of St. Francis (Franciscans), it became common in the 15th Century. Through the years, the number and type of stations have varied. Graphic portrayals superimposed on or carved into a cross are used to represent the events.

These artistic representations are usually found indoors on the walls of the church or chapel.

However, there are stations of the cross found outdoors, such as at the Blessed Trinity Shrine Retreat in Holy Trinity, Ala. Canon Law provides specific procedures for erecting the stations of the cross.

Today we usually find the following events depicted:

1. Jesus is condemned to death.
2. Jesus carries his cross.
3. Jesus falls the first time.
4. Jesus meets his mother.
5. Simon of Cyrene helps Jesus carry the cross.
6. Veronica wipes the face of Jesus (Veronica's veil).
7. Jesus falls the second time.
8. Jesus speaks to the women of Jerusalem.
9. Jesus falls the third time.
10. Jesus is stripped of his garments.
11. Jesus is nailed to the cross.
12. Jesus dies on the cross.
13. Jesus is taken down from the cross.
14. Jesus is laid in the sepulcher.

The "way of the cross" is a popular devotion during Lent for Catholics. Most churches have a "communal way of the cross" on Fridays during Lent with the priest representing the congregation, walking the way and leading the prayers while the congregation remains in the pews.

Individuals or small groups may make the "way of the cross" any day at any time except during Mass time.

At Fort Benning, we will observe the "way of the cross" every Friday at 7 p.m. in the Main Post Catholic Chapel.

"Wait on the Lord ... and he shall strengthen thy heart."

LEAVING THE ARMY?
TAKE NOTE - THESE ARE REASONS THAT PEOPLE ARE NOT HIRED:

- Lack of planning for career - no purpose or goals
- Inadequate resume - does not communicate clearly
- Overbearing, overaggressive, conceited, "know-it-all"
- Lack of confidence & poise - nervousness
- Lack of "dressing for success"
- Lack of interest & enthusiasm - passive, indifferent
- Poor interviewing techniques - lack of selling ones' skills
- Uninformed about company
- Overemphasis on money - interest only in best dollar offer
- Asks no questions about the job

For more information on the job search process and how to increase your ability to get hired, please call the Job Assistance Center to meet with an Individual Career Counselor at 545-2308

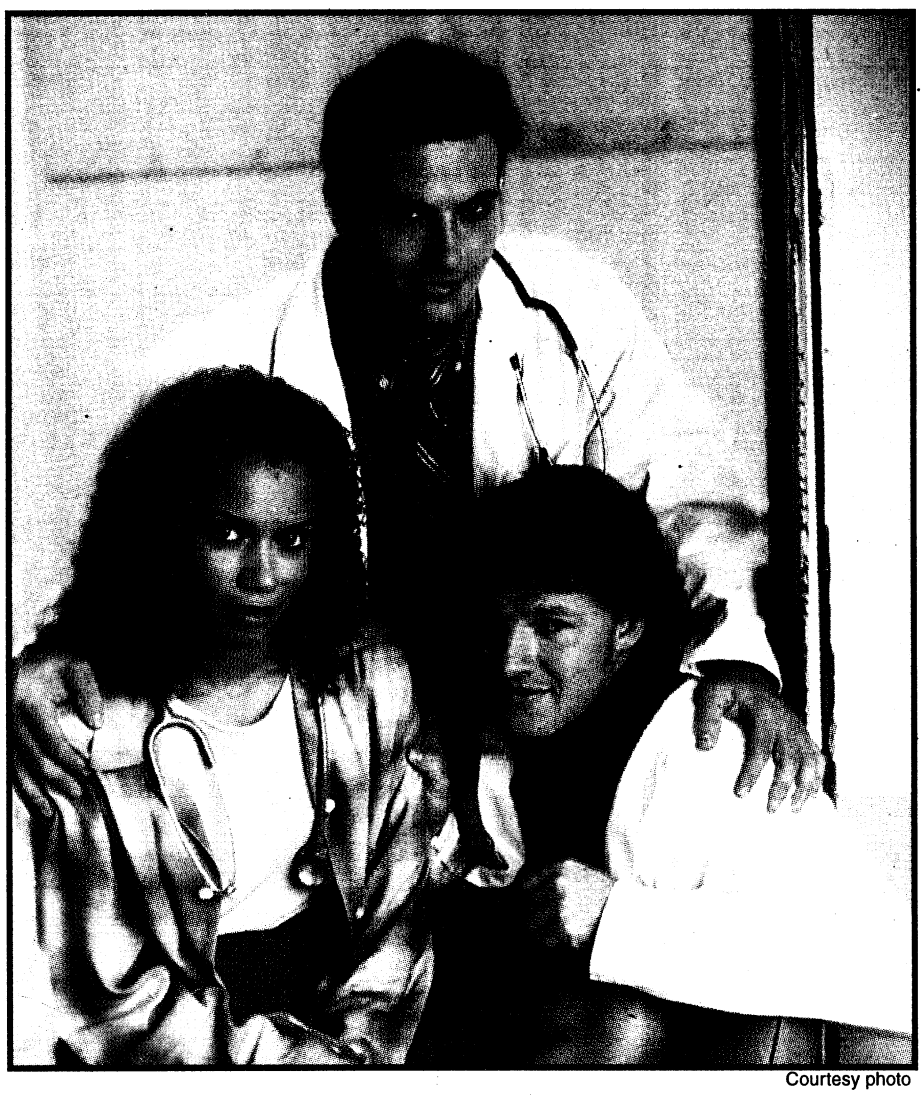
Hospital series 'Medicine Ball' to debut

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services



In a television season that has seen its share of new medical shows, it's time for another, and one that's easily the most irreverent of the bunch.

SPOTLIGHT

When it was on Thursdays last fall, CBS' "Chicago Hope" went directly against NBC's "ER," then it preceded the latter show by an hour before moving to Mondays. Starting this week, though, it won't have that night to itself any longer in hospital-series terms ... thanks to the arrival of the new FOX entry "Medicine Ball," the frequently dark-humored saga of first-year residents in a Seattle facility.

They're played by Jensen Daggett ("South Beach"), Darryl Fong, Terri Ivens, Donal Logue ("Disclosure," "And the Band Played On"), Harrison Pruett ("I Know My First Name Is Steven") and Kai Soremekun; also in the large ensemble cast are Jeffrey D. Sams (Broadway's "Five Guys Named Moe") and Vincent Ventresca as their supervisors, Timothy Omundson as an orderly with a deep belief in natural healing and Sam McMurray ("The Tracey Ullman Show," "Likely Suspects") as the director of the residency program.

The program involves a diverse team of executive producers: Robert Lieberman ("Under Suspicion," "Gabriel's Fire") and his wife, actress turned talk-show host Marilu Henner; John J. Sakmar and Kerry Lenhart, also the show's creators, who worked on the first year of "SeaQuest DSV"; and Mike Pavone and Dave Alan Johnson, the mentors of the critically acclaimed but short-lived "Against the Grain."

What: "Medicine Ball"
When: Mondays on FOX

"We knew that there were two other medical shows in development," said Lieberman when "Medicine Ball" was conceived. "That was no surprise to us whatsoever. FOX (execs) decided they would like to have something that dealt with the medical genre as well, and we sat down and discussed the kind of show it would be. We kind of had an inkling what the David Kelley show ('Chicago Hope') would be, and we kind of had an inkling what the Michael Crichton show ('ER') would be, and we wanted to be different."

Claiming to be "delighted" that those two series now have established themselves solidly with critics and viewers, Lieberman said, "It indicates that there are a lot of people out there who like medical shows. 'Ben Casey' was on at the same time as 'Dr. Kildare,' so if there's an interest in the genre, there's room for more."

Still, Lieberman said that FOX programmers waited until mid-season to unveil their hospital-oriented offering until the other two shows had been up and going for a while.

Post command sgt major makes final parachute jump

By Caejar A. Cox
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning's Command Sgt. Maj. William H. Acebes made his final parachute jump along with the post commanding general and deputy commanding general Monday.

Watch "Fort Benning Today" to see highlights of Acebes' final jump onto Fryar Drop Zone.

The change from winter to spring sometimes provides the perfect mix for severe weather. Watch "Fort Benning Today" to see how one Fort Benning school prepares and practices for emergencies like tornadoes.

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel announces post events and post movie listings, and it offers free classified advertisements on "Fort Benning Update," a community information service.

Springer holds over 'Sophisticated Ladies'

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

If you hurry, you can catch the "A Train" to Harlem without even leaving Columbus.

Let yourself be carried back in time to the heyday of the Cotton Club with "Sophisticated Ladies," a song and dance revue based on the music of Duke Ellington, which has been held over one more weekend at the Springer Opera House.

Get out your zoot suit, throw on your feather boa, and join the cast and crew for an energetic evening of fancy footwork and a few old favorites by "the Duke," including "Take the 'A' Train," "It Don't Mean a Thing (if it 'aint got that swing)," "Mood Indigo," and many others — you will be surprised how many you recognize.

review

One of the stars of the show is local actress Celeste Mabry-Lee, an education technician with the Staff Education and Training Branch of the Directorate of Operations and Training and a counselor with the Equal Employment Opportunity Office at Fort Benning.

Mabry-Lee's strong, silky voice may put you in a "Sentimental Mood" when she sings that number, and she fairly sizzles in sequins through "Don't Mean a Thing," "Mood Indigo" and "Take the 'A' Train."

Strong performances also come from Julian Leake who seems a natural for the role of the smooth raconteur, Madeleine Bryan-Davis who also sings up a storm, and tall and leggy dancer Janet Roddy, who gracefully leaps across the stage in three bounds.

Celeste Mabry-Lee's strong, silky voice lends itself well to Ellington tunes such as "Take the 'A' Train" and "It Don't Mean a Thing" in the Springer production "Sophisticated Ladies."

It must take a huge amount of energy to sing and dance nonstop through the two-hour show, but the spirited cast never wanes. Their zip is translated during the performance, but also in the witty repartee between songs, when the players often seem to be having as much fun as the audience.

The show is directed by Duke Ellington's granddaughter, Mercedes, and features the Columbus College Jazz Band.

The jazz musicians sport red carnations in their buttonholes during the first act, white tuxes in the second, and even chime in singing on a number or two.

Not to be outdone, the cast is costumed to the nines by Dona Pierce with sequins and satin galore. One steamy jungle number features Vegas chorus-girl style outfits complete with golden palm headdresses and bustles.

"Sophisticated Ladies," runs today and Saturday at 8 p.m.

Ticket prices are $15 for adults, $13 for seniors and military, and $8 for students. For reservations, call the Box Office at 327-3688.

The Springer Opera House is located at 103 10th St. in Uptown Columbus.

Post gets new travel company

By Jan Wesner Childs
Special to The Bayonet©

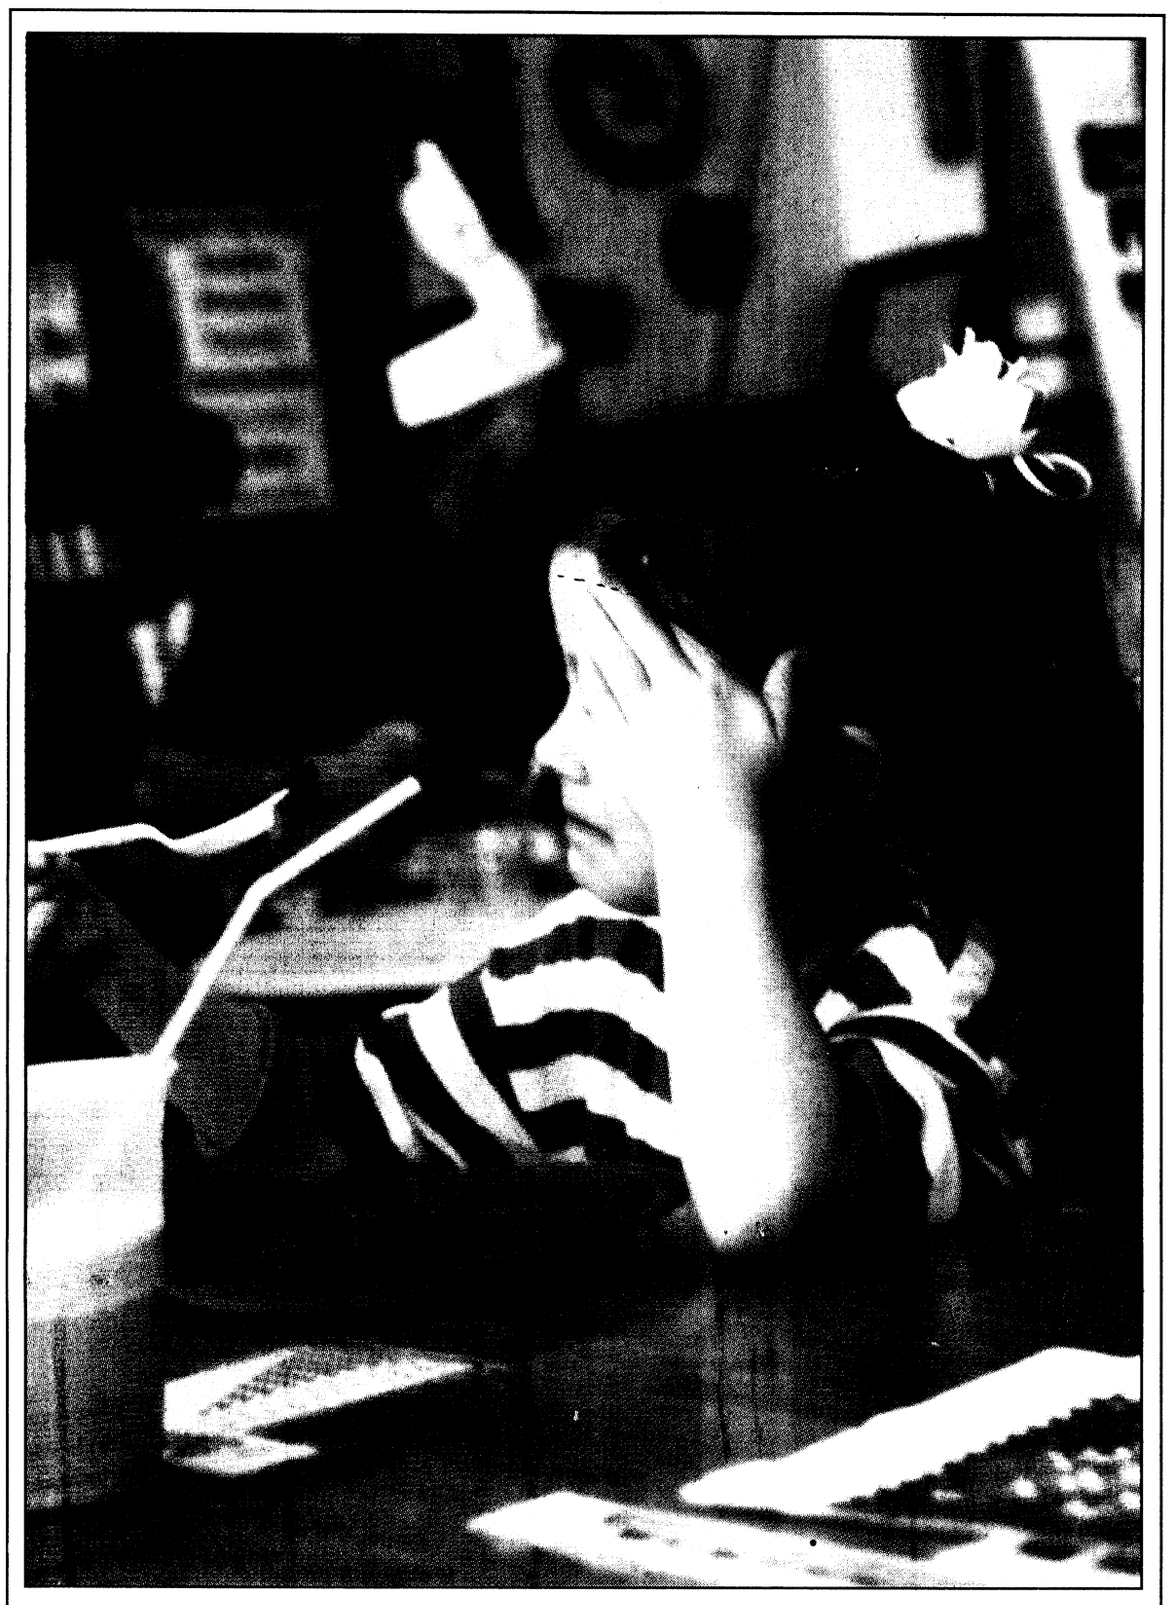
Carlson Wagonlit Travel is taking over operation of all Fort Benning travel and ticketing services.

Carlson replaces SatoTravel as the civilian contractor. Under the new contract, all travel and ticketing operations will be consolidated under one agency. Services will remain the same.

Sato operates the leisure travel office in the Main Mall and official travel offices at Sand Hill and Soldiers' Plaza. Carlson will take over those offices, as well as Information, Ticketing and Registration.

ITR, where customers can book tours and purchase discount tickets for theme parks and other attractions, is currently run by the Directorate of Community Activities.

"The customer should not see a whole lot of changes," Community Recreation Division Chief Tom Mull said Tuesday. "If anything, I would say they would see better service and probably more of a variety of tours.

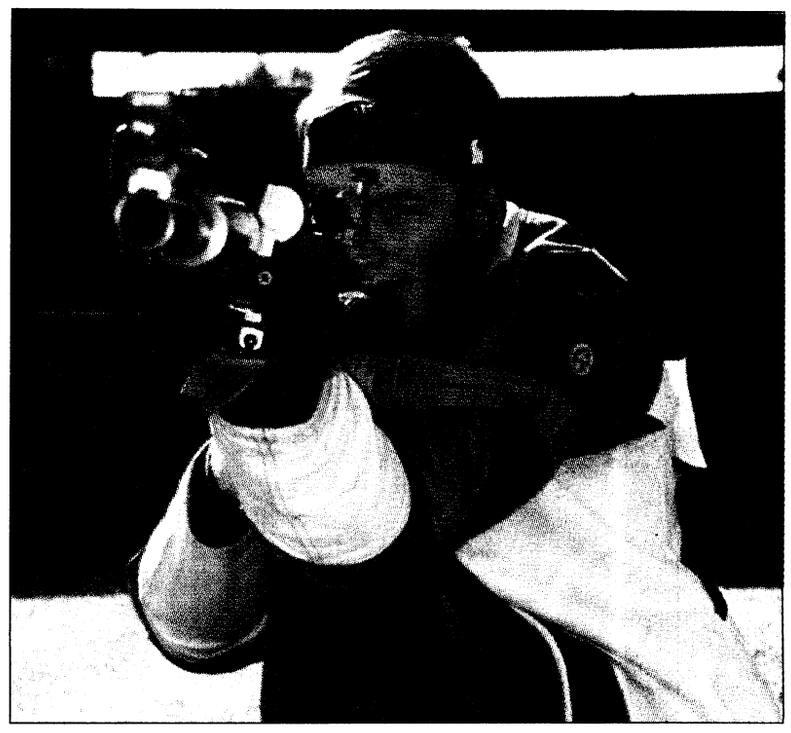


"I think it'll be more streamlined customer service."

Carlson Branch Manager Vicky Northington said the majority of Sato employees will be hired by the new contractor. Four new staff members are also being added, Northington said.

"Our goal is to provide quality customer service," she said.

The Sato and ITR offices in the Main Mall will close March 24 and reopen under Carlson, March 27. Office hours will be 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday.



The official travel offices at Sand Hill and Soldiers' Plaza will be open from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Green eggs and ham

Kindergartner Shelby Carter of White School seems reluctant to sample a St. Patrick's Day project of green eggs and ham. The cooking lesson tied literature and nutrition into one activity. The lesson was coordinated by teacher Carolyn Phillips and parent volunteers including Chief Warrant Officer 4 Darrell Carter, in the background, who was chef for the project based on the Dr. Seuss book.

Cpl. Kenneth Johnson has dedicated years of training to become an expert marksman. This week, he won his first Gold Medal in the Pan American Games in the Men's Air Rifle Competition.

AMU soldier wins Gold at Pan Am Games

By Rhonda Syler
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — A U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit soldier has taken the first Gold Medal at the Pan American Games venues Tuesday.

Cpl. Kenneth Johnson of the USAMU International Rifle Team captured the Gold Medal in men's air rifle, setting a new Pan American Games record.

Johnson, the 1994 national air rifle champion, was a close second going into the finals. But once the final began, there was no stopping him as he gained the lead and had it until the end.

"It was not an easy final," Johnson said. "I was only a point behind going into the final, and I was hoping for something big."

And something big he got.

"It's my first gold in major competition," Johnson said.

Johnson wasn't the only winner from the Marksmanship Unit Tuesday.

Capt. Glenn Dubis, also of the International Rifle Team, won the bronze in the same event.

The U.S. team, comprised entirely of USAMU shooters, won the team gold with a seven-point margin over Canada, and a 10-point spread over Cuba.

Going into the second day of competition, the United States holds the top three places in trap, one of three shotgun events.

Sgt. Bret Erickson of the USAMU Shotgun Team is holding a tight second.

Finals for Trap are Wednesday.

Shooting competition in the Pan American Games continues through Monday, with 11 USAMU shooters competing for the United States on the U.S. National Team.

Cashing checks for money advances can lead to more, expensive financial headaches

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Would you take out a loan if the annual interest were 650 percent?

Fort Benning soldiers do it all the time, though probably without realizing it, said Anne Pratcher, manager of the Consumer Affairs and Financial Assistance Program at Army Community Services.

Many post soldiers are finding out the hard way that using check-cashing establishments can be a very expensive venture if they are not careful, she said.

"It's not that these places are out to rip off soldiers," she said. "The businesses themselves operate legally and believe that they are providing a valuable service."

For a fee, check cashers allow customers to post-date a check to obtain a cash advance on their pay. Most check-cashing establishments charge a $25 fee for each $100 advanced and provide the customer with a $25 coupon that may be redeemed for merchandise in their store. In terms of the annual percentage rate, the interest on such a transaction works out to be 650 percent, she said.

Soldiers with financial problems often use such establishments as a quick fix from month to month when they need money. The problem, she said, is that many get caught up in the cycle and can't get out.

"Say, for example, that a soldier needs $100 for groceries so he writes a check for $125 to a check cashing institution. In two weeks when he gets paid, he has $125 less than normal but still has the same financial obligations to cover," she said. "He either has to do without the money, which may be needed for legitimate expenses, like feeding his family, or he has to use the check casher again to get another advance on his next pay. I know soldiers who have been doing this for months. It is extremely difficult to break the cycle."

If the soldier bounces a check written to a check casher because of insufficient funds when the check goes to clear, the problem is further compounded by additional fees from the casher and the soldier's bank.

Pratcher said that soldiers in financial trouble have more options than they might think.

Financial counseling is available on post, she said, by calling 545-7517. In Columbus, Consumer Credit Counseling offers help at 327-3239.

Other suggestions she gave for getting out of the check-cashing cycle include:

- Borrowing money from a family member
- Foregoing an unnecessary expense like cable or other entertainment expenses for a few months
- Having a spouse find employment to cover expenses
- Using an income tax refund to pay off the check cashier or other debts
- Seeking Army Emergency Relief assistance for unexpected emergencies.

"If soldiers are in financial trouble, they should consider very carefully what their options are," Pratcher said. "What seems like a quick fix now can turn out to be a very costly venture later."

Ways to break the check-cashing cycle

- ✔ Borrow money from a family member
- ✔ Forego any unnecessary expense like cable or other entertainment expenses for a few months
- ✔ Have a spouse find employment to cover expenses
- ✔ Use an income tax refund to pay off the check casher or other debts
- ✔ Use the Army Emergency Relief Fund for assistance in unexpected emergencies

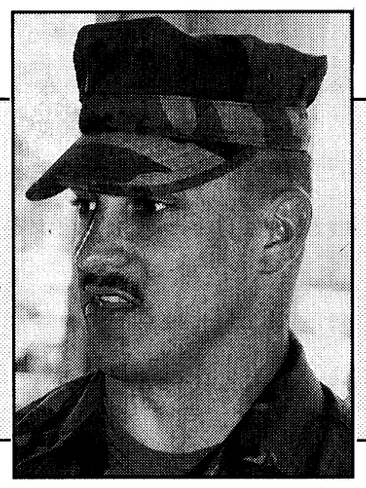
VARIOUS VOICES

What do you think of the new post policy prohibiting smoking in Army and Air Force Exchange Service facilities and restaurants?

Christine J. Johnson, AAFES employee — "I don't like the no smoking policy. I think they should have a smoking area and a non-smoking area."

Sgt. 1st Class Mark E. Gouveia, Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment Henry Caro Noncommissioned Officer Academy — "I don't think it's fair to smokers. Let them smoke where they want to smoke."



Jerry M. Pike, civilian employee with the Infantry School — "It's not just the restaurant, the entire building is off limits. They should have a designated smoking area inside."

Marine Pfc. Charles E. Anklam, Company C, 2nd Division Light Armor Reconnaissance Battalion, Camp Lejeune, N.C. — "I'm impartial. Those who want to smoke should be able to smoke; those who don't want to smoke shouldn't have to be around it. They should have designated smoking areas."

Rita D. Ghent, AAFES employee — "I hate it. I feel that we (smokers) have the same rights as everybody else."

Marine Lance Cpl. William R. Parsley, Company D, 2nd Division Light Armor Reconnaissance Battalion Camp Lejeune, N.C. — "I think it's good. We're in training and it's bad for your health. Smoking doesn't allow you to be combat ready."

We've found our nirvana

commentary

There is silence. There is no music. It led to the downfall of our society. It fostered violence, suicide, drug use and anarchy.

People are nondescript. There is no race, color, gender, sexual orientation, age, height or weight. It was not politically correct to recognize these differences.

There is no tobacco, liquor, caffeine, painkiller or any type of addictive substance. The government knows what's best for us.

Gone are the burgers, fries and shakes of our heritage. You can't get eggs over easy with bacon or fried chicken and country gravy. These foods could kill us. Our diet now consists of daily organic fiber pellets with protein supplements.

We do not wear fur, leather or the hides of any animal. Meat is murder.

There are no arts. Music, art, literature, poetry and theater offended us and cultivated immorality.

Pollution is under control. There are no more vehicles or factories to pollute the Earth.

Religion is not allowed. It caused war, hatred and intolerance.

People may not own pets. It is the exploitation of living beings.

To control world population, babies are only conceived through artificial means in government laboratories. They are assigned by lottery to families after government approval.

Fashion is extinct. It only exaggerated our class society and encouraged individualism and nonconformity. Everyone wears an androgynous uniform with no color or style.

We eliminated prejudice by removing everything that discriminated against people because of their color, race, creed, gender, age, height, weight, sexual orientation, marital status, or political affiliation. Nothing remained.

There are no political parties. There are no guns. No birthday cakes. No freedom of expression. No black or white — only a dull shade of gray.

We are all the same. There is total equality.

No one remembers how it started or who made these rules. But our search for utopia has come to an end.

We have found our nirvana. We are perfect. We are void.

dial 545-boss

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for soldiers, family members and civilians to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere.

While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies established to provide assistance, the line offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders.

The Bayonet features some of the calls that may benefit other members of the Fort Benning community.

Call: The garbage collectors are picking up items put out for the recycle collectors. Dollars for recycling are being lost because they are not distinguishing between garbage and recycle containers.

Construction Inspection Branch's response: The caller expressed that the refuse and recycle contractor picked up the recyclable items that she placed at curbside in a cardboard box next to her garbage container and dumped it as garbage.

If the trash collectors observed any garbage mixed with the item, they would probably include it in the garbage dump.

A Directorate of Public Works inspector met with the refuse contract manager and advised him of this particular incident.

The contract manager assured the inspector that his personnel would be properly admonished and more care would be taken to preclude this from happening.

Call: I was promoted in July but my paycheck has not been adjusted to reflect my new rank yet.

Soldier's unit's response:

The caller's pay problem followed him from his initial entry for training at Fort Gordon, Ga. His enlistment contract failed to indicate his correct entry grade (private 2).

This mistake was corrected by his basic training company commander who promoted him to private 2; however, the finance transaction was either not initiated or was not processed.

Upon his arrival at Fort Benning around Nov. 29, he was still being paid as a private 1.

He brought this matter to the attention of his section chief who took him to Finance to file an inquiry Dec. 11.

It is this action that can be defined as the source of this complaint.

His leave and earning statement for December did not show the grade change, which could likely be attributed to the fact that the inquiry was not filed until the middle of December.

Investigation of this complaint revealed a failure to file the correct paperwork for the inquiry.

The battalion's personnel actions center supervisor has advised him on the correct procedures to follow and ensured all paperwork and transactions related to his pay problem has been initiated and processed

He should have received the correct pay and allowances including any back pay for his grade by the end of January.

Smoker questions new post policy

This letter is in reference to the very recent adoption of the no-smoking policy in Infantry Hall.

We smokers have known for some time it was coming, but I have a few unanswered questions.

1. Will this policy take place in all other Army and Air Force Exchange Service facilities, club systems and recreational facilities in the near future?

2. Will this policy apply equally to other buildings on post?

3. Why was the smoking policy statement for Infantry Hall issued by the Directorate of Civilian personnel? Is this policy directed toward civilian personnel only?

4. Will the concern for the potential hazard to others extend to further restrictions of individual behaviors, such as drinking and driving on post?

It is true that smoking is bad for us. It is a personal choice I make to smoke.

Although I do smoke, I am still able to jump in my car and go home and not put others in danger. So why are people allowed to drink in an AAFES facility, club system or recreational facility, and jump in cars and drink and drive?

This is clearly against federal laws, yet Department of Defense regulations permit us to drink in government facilities. Of course you say, we must drink responsibly. Since one beer, drink or glass of wine is now above the legal limit, I seriously doubt this is the case.

I personally have been to the bowling centers, Officers' and NCO clubs and Uchee Creek and I have never in one instance seen anyone drink only one beer, much less call a cab.

If a person is naive enough to believe that the good people of Fort Benning call cabs every time they drink, cabs would be lined up outside the clubs and bowling centers. This is another sight I have never personally witnessed.

I do realize this is a battle I cannot win. But, I can demand that social behavior that is truly detrimental and lethal to others around me be stopped in government facilities on this installation also.

Let us not show disparate treatment to some and not to others. I request that the command group of this installation endeavor to eliminate the real dangers on this post.

— Karen Mutton
Directorate of Combat Development

Garrison Commander's Office's response:

The Department of Defense instructions with respect to smoking are quite specific, and apply to the workplace and everyone in the workplace — civilian, military and visitors. The DoD policy is based on the fact that a person's occupancy of a particular location in the workplace is not a matter of choice but a requirement. The instructions clearly recognize the issue of personal freedom to choose a personal lifestyle outside the workplace. That freedom is not extended to the workplace when there is a potential harm to others. It is DoD's intent to make the workplace as safe as possible to include eliminating second-hand smoke.

The DoD instructions specifically identify areas that are not part of the workplace. Included in this category are family quarters, clubs and bowling centers. Occupancy of these locations is voluntary. The instructions require a smoke-free area to be available in all club and restaurant facilities and this requirement is strictly enforced.

Clearly, consuming alcohol is a different issue. The generalization that "one beer, drink or glass of wine is above the legal limit" is incorrect. The legal limit is based on blood alcohol levels that are influenced by many factors and applies to the operation of motor vehicles and boats as a part of the Department of the Army Alcohol Deglamorization Program. A variety of aggressive programs are in effect at Fort Benning to encourage drinking in moderation and to discourage operation of motor vehicles by intoxicated people. This is not to downplay the seriousness of drunk drivers, but rather to acknowledge that some people consume alcoholic beverages and if they do at Fort Benning, there are very strong measures to control this and very severe penalties for those who disregard the law.

Again, the elimination of smoking in the workplace and subsequent reduction of smoking areas on the installation are not always popular but these measures ensure all military and civilian employees can work in a healthy environment.

Special Forces recruiters to visit

U.S. Army Special Operations Command

FORT BRAGG, N.C. — Special Forces recruiters will be at Fort Benning April 3 to 7 to brief interested soldiers, officer and enlisted, on the Special Forces career field.

Briefings will be take place each day in Infantry Hall, Building 4, Room 60, from 10:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Recruiters are currently looking for soldiers to attend the Special Forces Assessment and Selection Course scheduled for September.

SFAS is a 21-day program to evaluate candidates' physical, mental and teamwork potential to make it through the Special Forces Qualification Course.

Specialists and corporals who have not attended the Primary Leadership Development Course may still apply for the career field, according to SF recruiters.

Officers in Year-Group 88-92 are encouraged to attend the briefings.

All candidates must pass physical fitness and swim tests given by SF recruiters. Unit PT and swim tests are no longer valid. The uniform for the PT test is battledress and running shoes.

The minimum overall score for the PT test is 220.

The test consists of push-ups and a two-mile run, graded on the 17- to 21-year-old scale, regardless of age.

Candidates are also required to swim 50 meters in a pool wearing their uniform and boots, with no time limit imposed.

Soldiers are encouraged to have an SF physical scheduled before the recruiting team's arrival. Copies of DA forms 2A and 2-1 should be brought to the briefings.

Candidates must be U.S. citizens and have a high school diploma or GED.

All applicants must pass the SF physical, be airborne qualified or volunteer for airborne school and possess, or be eligible for, a secret security clearance.

A minimum score of 110 on the Army General Technical test battery is also required.

For further information or an application packet, applicants can call SF recruiters at (910) 432-1818 or DSN 239-1818.

Local businesses take part in youth job fair

Army Community Service

A youth job fair will be April 13 at Youth Services, Building 1056, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Sponsored by Army Community Service Family Member Employment Assistance Program and Youth Services, the job fair is designed to provide employment assistance and job referral services about vacancies on the installation and throughout Columbus and the Phenix City.

High school juniors, seniors and college students between the ages of 16 and 21 may attend the fair.

Local business representatives will be on site to receive applications, conduct on-the-spot screening and interviews.

Those participating will have the opportunity to greet business representatives and obtain information on the various job vacancies.

Participants will also be able to obtain information and assistance on various career programs offered by local educational institutions and the military.

More than 100 area businesses have been invited to participate.

Interested businesses may contact the Family Member Employment Assistance Program in order to participate.

Any youth interested in participating can contact the ACS FMEAP, at Building 2643, Soldiers' Plaza or the Indianhead Youth Center for registration information.

During registration, youths will be briefed on proper job strategy techniques and receive a "Job Preparation Packet."

Treat checks like cash to avoid fraud

TRADOC News Service

Check fraud incidents have increased in the United States and careless people contribute to criminals' success, according to a Fort Monroe, Va., crime prevention specialist.

"There are people very skilled at altering checks and forging signatures," said Jim Wright of Fort Monroe's Provost Marshal Directorate. "You have to be very careful to keep them from stealing your money through carelessness with the way you handle and use your checks."

Wright calls check fraud "robbery without a gun." But there are precautions people can take to lessen their chances of becoming victims.

He has suggestions that will make it harder for thieves to steal your money through your checks. Some of them are:

- Always write with ink, never pencil.
- Begin writing on the extreme left of lines, fill in all spaces so there is no room to alter figures and draw lines through unfinished lines.
- Write legibly. It's easier for crooks to forge sloppily written checks.
- Sign checks in the presence of a teller or cashier.
- Never let strangers see you writing checks.

It's important that you balance your checkbook with each statement so you know all deductions are correct. If your banking institution provides you copies of your canceled checks, check them to make sure they haven't been altered.

Protect canceled checks so no one can get a sample of your signature.

If your checks are lost or stolen, notify your bank. If you have to, you can stop payment on checks by telephone. But if you want stop-payment to be in effect for more than 14 days, you must put the request in writing.

"People should treat their checks like they would their cash," Wright said. "Don't make a forger's work easy."

Department of Veterans Affairs

Editor's note: If you have a question about your veterans benefits, call the Department of Veterans Affairs at (800) 827-1000.

Q: Does VA provide life insurance for military personnel?

A: Life insurance is available to all members of the military, regardless of where they serve, through the Servicemen's Group Life Insurance program. All active-duty members automatically have $100,000 in term life insurance unless they decline — in writing — some or all of the coverage. They may also elect up to an additional $100,000 in supplemental coverage for a total of $200,000. Reservists who drill once a month and participate in a two-week training camp are eligible for full-time SGLI.

More than 98 percent of all individuals currently serving on active duty in the military are covered by SGLI. More information on SGLI can be obtained by calling (800) 419-1473.

Q: How much are current premiums for SGLI?

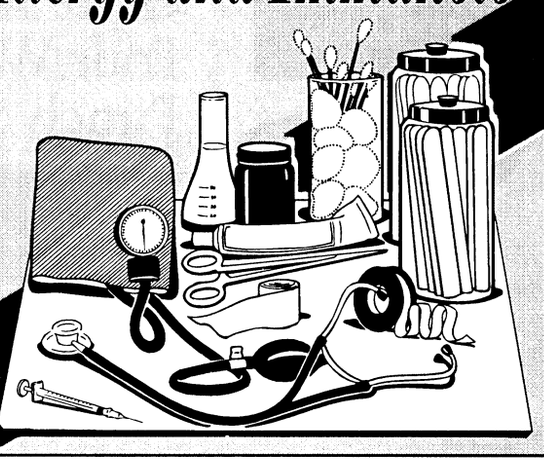
A: Ninety cents per month for each $10,000 unit of coverage.

Q: I will soon be retiring from the Army. I am concerned about providing life insurance for my family since I will no longer have coverage under SGLI. Can I convert my SGLI policy to some other coverage when I leave active-duty service? If so, how much coverage can I get?

A: SGLI may be converted by veterans separating from the military to a five-year term coverage under Veterans Group Life Insurance. Individuals released from active duty are eligible to apply for VGLI within 120 days, or one year with proof of good health. Members may choose to be covered in $10,000 increments up to the amount of SGLI they had while on active duty. VGLI is renewable for life.

Q: I know that the Department of Veterans Affairs pays disability compensation to veterans with certain conditions that have been linked to exposure to Agent Orange. What are those conditions?

A: VA makes disability payments based on a presumption that veterans who served in Vietnam were exposed to Agent Orange and other herbicides. The conditions VA recognizes on this basis are soft-tissue sarcoma, non-Hodgkin's lymphoma, chloracne, Hodgkin's disease, porphyria cutanea tarda (PCT), multiple myeloma (a cancer involving the bone marrow) and respiratory cancers lung, bronchus, larynx and trachea). Veterans or their survivors with potential claims based on these diseases can contact the nearest VA regional office by calling (800) 827-1000.



Q: I believe I am suffering from health problems related to my exposure to Agent Orange when I was in Vietnam. Can VA assist me in determining my current health status?

A: All VA medical centers provide a special examination to assist Vietnam veterans who were exposed to Agent Orange in determining their current health status. To date, more than 237,000 veterans have participated in the Agent Orange Registry examination program. In addition to the registry examination, you may be entitled to priority health care at a VA health care facility for conditions possibly related to your service in Vietnam and exposure to Agent Orange. Contact your nearest VA medical center to schedule an examination.

Health care improves for military women

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

Recent Department of Defense health initiatives mean military women can get longer-term prescriptions and faster test results. In addition, DoD will continue to fund research on breast cancer and other women's health issues.

Women headed for assignments on ships and in remote locations can now obtain up to a year's prescription for birth control pills, blood pressure medicine and other standard drugs. They only need to tell the pharmacist about their new assignment. The Defense Advisory Committee on Women in the Services had asked DoD for the longer prescriptions, said Army Dr. (Col.) Doris Browne, deputy director of professional affairs in DoD's Office of Health Affairs.

DACOWITS also asked for other improvements such as improved access to gynecological care. Browne, who also chairs the DoD Task Force on Women's Health, said military medical providers, particularly those on ships and in remote locations, are getting added training in female medical needs.

She said U.S. medical researchers often ignored women in the past but now recognize the need to include more women in clinical research trials for conditions such as cardiovascular disease. This trend and the increased number of women in the military are leading DoD to re-emphasize the importance of women's health care, especially primary and preventive care.

DoD's initiatives promise military women a complete physical every five years as well as annual Pap smears and pelvic and breast exams. Women over 50 will receive annual mammograms. DoD also promises routine Pap smear results within two weeks and abnormal results within five days.

Research on women's health issues is another area DoD has been increasing. In all, DoD devoted $210 million to breast cancer research grants and contracts in fiscal 1994, said Browne.

"We have a breast cancer research program and the Defense Women's Research Program," she said. "We deploy our women to areas where they may not have served before, so we'll study physical as well as psychological stressors in these areas.

"As women increasingly enter nontraditional careers formerly closed to them, they may face different health risks. There are a variety of specific factors that may effect military women, and researchers wouldn't have done anything on these areas." Because more military women are age 40 or older, the military is also giving more attention to menopause and premenopausal issues, she said.

"We look at hormone replacement therapy and suggest exercise and calcium supplements to minimize osteoporosis (bone loss). We consider hormonal replacement therapy, but we take into account the potential additional risk of breast cancer," Browne said.

"We also do cardiovascular screening. Cardiovascular disease is the No. 1 killer, not cancer like most people think. So we look for high blood pressure, high cholesterol and related conditions."

In addition, the 1994 DoD Annual Health Care Survey for DoD Beneficiaries is specifically addressing some women's health access issues, she said.

Military women and other military medical system beneficiaries who prefer to see a female health care provider are more likely to get their wish due to increased numbers of women physicians.

"We know some women still have problems getting an appointment for a mammogram or Pap smear, and we want to fix that. So we've already made an important step to address women's health issues, but we want to move ahead," said Browne.

"Our goal is quality health care delivered in a timely manner that's easily accessible to our female service members and other beneficiaries."

Used oil containers to be removed

The used oil collection containers are being removed from the Fort Benning Army and Air Force Exchange Service Stations. AAFES has requested the used oil containers be removed immediately.

Used oil can be taken to the following places:

- Recycling Center, Building 400, Villegas Street, Harmony Church. Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.
- Main Post Auto Craft Shop, Building 2843, Way Street. Hours are 1:30 to 9 p.m. Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.
- Kelly Hill Auto Craft Shop, Building 9064, Marne Road. Hours are 1:30 to 9 p.m. Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

The auto craft shops charge a fee to collect the used oil.

Post cleanup Apr 13

There will be a postwide spring cleanup of the post cantonment and housing areas April 13 and 14. Occupants are responsible for cleanup of their quarters. This includes yard maintenance and improperly parked privately owned vehicles.

Area coordinators will offer assistance in facilitating pickup of large debris and any bulk recyclable aluminum or large scrap aluminum. Area coordinators will conduct final inspections in each housing area April 14.

Civilian Awards Luncheon Thursday

The Civilian Awards Luncheon will be Thursday from 11:30 a.m. to 1:15 p.m. at the Supper Club, Fort Benning Officers' Club.

The Directorate of Operations and Training will serve as host, and the theme for March is "Training the Soldier."

The cost of the luncheon is $6. Advance tickets are required to ensure adequate seating and food are available for all attendees.

Attendees are encouraged to obtain tickets from their centralized activity point of contact. For more information, call 545-2132 or 545-3015.

ACAP office to close

The Army Career and Alumni Program, Transition Assistance Office, Building 2617, Soldiers' Plaza, will be closed today for conversion to a new automated system and to train staff members on the implementation of the program.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland and range areas will take place through Sunday.

If weather permits, the following compartments may be affected: A-13, B-4, D-6, D-8, D-11, D-13, E-6, F-3, F-5, G-6, K-21, M-4, M-5, M-7. O-5. O-11, Q-3, Q-4, Q-7, S-2, S-3, T-1, V-2, V-3, W-3, X-1 and Z-3

People using this area for recreation must leave before 9:30 a.m. daily.

Training units using compartments next to these areas may experience drift smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while traveling in these areas because of the potential for reduced visibility.

For more information, call 544-6206.

ACS to host youth job fair April 13

A youth job fair will be April 13 at Youth Services, Building 1056, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Sponsored by Army Community Service Family Member Employment Assistance Program and Youth Services, the job fair is designed to provide employment assistance and job referral services about vacancies on the installation and throughout Columbus and the Phenix City.

Any youth interested in participating can contact the ACS FMEAP, at Building 2643, Soldiers' Plaza or the Indianhead Youth Center for registration information.

New process in place for pest control

Organizations requesting pest control items only through the Unit and Housing Support Branch (U-Do-It Center) can now order supplies using a Department of Army Form 3161 (request for Issue or Turn-in) instead of a DA Form 4283 (Work Order Request).

The DA Form 3161 must identify which building the supplies will be used in and be signed by either the first sergeant or company commander. Personnel picking up the supplies must be listed on a signature card at the center.

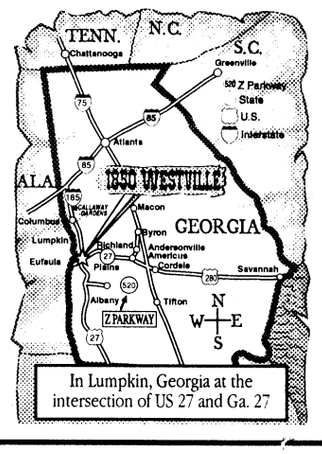
For more information, call Nathaniel Goldwire at 545-3633.

GRE to be administered

The Graduate Record Examination will be administered April 12 at the education centers. The first examination is free, but the retest fee is $56.

For more information, call the Main Post Education Center, Building 2602, at 545-4863 or the Kelley Hill Education Center, Building 9027, at 544-3689.

Education services to be centralized



Effective April 1, Kelley Hill Education Center, Building 9027, will consolidate its services. All testing, tuition assistance, counseling and briefings will be centralized at the Main Post Education Center, Building 6, Soldiers' Plaza. Education records maintained at Kelley Hill Education Center will be transferred to Main Post.

Kelley Hill Education Center will remain open for the instruction of the Functional Academic Skills Training classes only.

For more information, call the Army Continuing Education System, Building 2602, Soldiers' Plaza, 545-6114.

Military Police Activity

This week's hot topic concerns bicycle safety.

Spring is almost here and pretty soon school will be out for the summer. It's time to remind ourselves of a few safety tips when we see children playing outside.

Posted speed limits, especially in the housing areas, must be observed at all times. Children are often unpredictable, and it is your responsibility as the driver to expect the unexpected.

Parents should be aware that the Georgia Legislature has a law requiring children 16 years of age and under to wear a bicycle helmet while riding a bicycle, either on the road or in the backyard. As a parent, it is your responsibility to ensure that your children obey governing traffic laws and regulations.

Children should cross the street only at intersections, walk on sidewalks and ride their bicycles on the right side of the road with the flow of traffic. Adult bicyclists are also required to wear a helmet when traveling on a roadway with a speed limit of 35 mph or more. In addition, Fort Benning dictates the use of a reflective vest when the speed is 35 mph or more.

The following entries were extracted from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters. Such entries may be incomplete and are not meant to prove the guilt or innocence of any person.

• A private first class was charged with domestic assault. The soldier was involved in a verbal altercation with his wife that escalated into a physical altercation when he forcefully grabbed, pushed and threw her to the floor. Upon arrival of the military police, the wife was taken to the hospital and was treated and released for a twisted ankle. The soldier was apprehended and taken to the Military Police station where he was processed and released to his unit.

• A family member was charged with taking cash and shoplifting at the Community Center Shoppette. During a surveillance operation by Army and Air Force Exchange Service security it was determined that this employee was making open drawer sales and creating cash overages totaling $418.33, which she took. She was also observed taking various items of merchandise from the Shoppette with a total of $174.20 without rendering proper payment. Upon arrival of the Criminal Investigation Division, she was apprehended and transported to the CID office where she was processed and released.

• Two staff sergeants and two privates were charged with wrongful appropriation of government property. The four soldiers decided to use a military vehicle to visit a local night club. The soldiers were apprehended with the assistance of Columbus Police Department and transported to the military police station where they were processed and released to their unit.

Other activities include seven cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, 15 traffic accidents, six cases of larceny and four cases of shoplifting reported at the main exchange facilities.

Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best — Give Crime Arrest." Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the military police at 545-5223 or 545-5224 or the "Crime In Progress" line at 545-5222.

Seat belts important for children

Egleston Children's Hospital

Statistics from the National Institute on Disability and Rehabilitation Research show that 72.5 percent of children seriously injured due to a car crash were not properly restrained

Eleven-year-old Lindsey Skinner of Lilburn, Ga., knows the importance of properly wearing a seatbelt.

Last year, Lindsey and her family were driving home from a soccer game when another car lost control, swerved into their path, and collided with their car.

"I remember looking out the window and seeing a car spinning towards us. And I remember feeling butterflies in my tummy," Lindsey said.

Although Lindsey, her father, step-mother, and brother were all wearing seat-belts, Lindsey had put the shoulder strap behind her back.

With only the lap belt to restrain her, the impact of the crash went directly to her hips, resulting in a fractured pelvis. She also suffered from a broken left knuckle and broken right wrist when trying to brace herself with both hands.

And because Lindsey's chest and shoulders were unrestrained, she fell forward, cutting her forehead on a water bottle that was in her lap.

Lindsey's brother, Tyler, 10, was also sitting in the back seat of the car during the accident. But unlike Lindsey, Tyler had the shoulder strap and lap belt correctly buckled.

"Compared to his sister's injuries, Tyler's were far less serious," said their mother, Marsha Skinner.

Today, Lindsey is almost fully recovered with just a slight lean when she walks. Doctors say Lindsey will heal completely and will soon be able to resume normal physical activity.

"The situation with Lindsey and Tyler Skinner is a perfect example of just how important it is to not only wear a seat belt but to wear it properly," said Maryann Johnston, emergency center nurse at Egleston Children's Hospital at Emory University in Atlanta.

"At Egleston, 70 percent of the children sustaining injuries serious enough to require a hospital admission were neither properly buckled nor in a child safety seat. In comparison, children that are properly restrained are often treated and released that same day," the Egleston emergency nurse said.

The same holds true nationally.

Statistics from the National Institute on Disability and Rehabilitation Research show that 72.5 percent of children seriously injured due to a car crash were not properly restrained.

"I can't stress it enough. Wearing a seatbelt and wearing it properly needs to become habit for both children and adults every time they get into a vehicle," Johnston said.

But for many children, and as in Lindsey's case, wearing a seat belt properly (with the shoulder strap and lap belt going across the body) is uncomfortable because of their size.

"I knew I wasn't supposed to put the strap behind my back, but the strap rubbed across my neck," Lindsey said.

To compensate for the child's size, parents can now purchase a shoulder belt adjuster. The adjuster makes sure the shoulder belt fits snuggly across the child's chest and can be purchased at most child safety products stores.

"Ironically enough, we had just gotten the shoulder belt adjuster the day before the accident," said Skinner. "And I was planning to clip them onto the seat belts that very weekend."

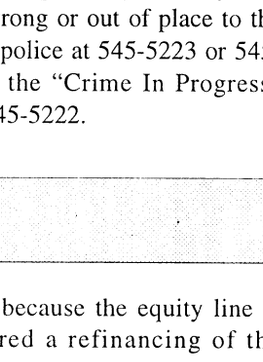
Egleston Children's Hospital at Emory University is part of Georgia's largest children's health care system. The Egleston system meets the total health care needs of children including preventive, primary, urgent, hospital, specialty and home care.

ask the judge

Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: I need to borrow some money to meet substantial unexpected expenses. I have heard that "home equity line of credit" loans are at low interest rates, and are tax deductible. Is this a good way to borrow?

A: A home equity line is a revolving credit in which your home serves as collateral for the money. You are approved for a specific amount of credit, your credit limit, which is the maximum amount you can borrow. This amount is usually based upon the unused equity in your home.



For example, if you have a $60,000 home and owe a $40,000 mortgage, you have $20,000 equity in the home. If as is the usual practice, the lender will lend only up to 80 percent of the value, $48,000 is the maximum amount of debt allowed on the house. In the example, you can borrow $8,000.

The interest rate is variable. For example, the rate might be quoted as "prime plus 2 percent." This indicates that the rate of interest will be the same as the published prime rate index that appears in financial sections of newspapers; plus 2 percent. The rate changes as the prime rate goes up or down. If prime is 6 percent, your loan rate would be 8 percent.

Comparing the line of credit to a second mortgage, the most significant difference is that the second mortgage offers a fixed rate of interest. Costs are a factor in any mortgage. You will be assessed certain charges in getting the equity line — a property appraisal fee, an up-front charge for the loan called "points," fees for attorneys, title search, mortgage preparation and filing, title insurance and perhaps an application fee. These costs will be substantial, sometimes 5 percent or more of the credit limit amount. As with any mortgage, the interest paid on most home equity credit lines is deductible, but points paid are not, because the equity line is considered a refinancing of the home.

If you are in the market for credit, a home equity plan may be best for you, but weigh the costs against the benefits carefully before committing yourself. Remember that failure to pay a home equity line may result in foreclosure and loss of your home, just as a first mortgage. Compare plans and select the one with the best combination of initial fees, interest rates and repayment terms.

Fun tricks convince kids to eat veggies

American Institute for Cancer Research

At mealtimes for young children, pretending the spoon is a choo-choo train or an airplane probably won't get them to eat their veggies after the 10th try. That's why it's handy to have a variety of "tricks" to make eating healthy food more fun.

Children ages 2 to 5 will probably like to eat healthful grains, fruits and vegetables more if they are cut into fun shapes with cookie cutters. You can make sandwiches on whole-wheat bread spread with low-fat cream cheese, grated carrot and raisins, for example, and cut them into star shapes. Or spread a rice cake with a tablespoon of peanut butter and help your child make a face with a slice of banana for a nose, raisins for eyes, and a strip of carrot for a mouth.

Asking your children to help you get meals ready by doing simple and safe tasks also can make them more interested in the food you're serving, and proud that they helped. Buy some small pans or bowls and give them small portions of a side dish or dessert you are going to make. Show them how to fill their pan with the ingredients and how to decorate the top with some cut-up fruit or vegetables. There are cookbooks designed for children to learn how to make simple dishes, with your supervision.

Vegetables are often thought of as the biggest challenge when it comes to good nutrition for small children. But you can get your children used to new vegetables they might resist (such as broccoli, Brussels sprouts or spinach) by serving them with others that are favorites, such as potatoes, peas, corn and carrots. Your children might have fun choosing differently colored vegetables for a salad, such as orange shredded carrots, red chopped beets, yellow corn and green chopped celery. They'll also find it easier to eat vegetables that are chopped.

Cooked vegetables may go down easier if you give them a creamy texture by using just a little low-fat cheese, nonfat cream cheese or sour cream or a spoonful of part-skim ricotta cheese. This also makes them good for stuffing into another type of vegetable, something your child might find fun. Mushroom caps, raw green pepper halves, raw halved scooped-out tomatoes and celery sticks are all good for stuffing with other fillings.

For example, make zucchini "boats" by cutting small zucchini length-wise, scooping out the pulp, sauteing it in a bit of chicken broth, mixing in a dash of parmesan cheese, a spoontul of tomato sauce, and some bread crumbs, stuffing the zucchini shells and baking them in a covered dish at 350 degrees for 15 minutes. Before serving, help your child top each one with a "sail" made from a triangular piece of cheese on a toothpick.

Fruit gives any dessert, breakfast cereal or snack an extra nutrition boost. It can be a topping or ingredient in puddings, cakes and gelatin desserts. Or make it part of a small skim-milk shake with low-fat vanilla yogurt, fresh fruit pieces and a bit of honey, quickly whirled up in the blender into a delicious, nutritious treat for your child.

A fruit salad can use favorite fruits and also introduce your children to some new fruits they haven't yet tried. Mix it with a bit of low-fat vanilla yogurt and sprinkle with a dash of colored sugar sprinkles to pique their interest.

When children resist new foods, childhood nutrition experts advise patience and not forcing your child to eat. Repeated exposure to new foods at mealtimes will encourage your children by seeing other people enjoying them.

Keep spring picnic foods safe

By Rudi Williams
American Forces Information Service

"With great weather, holidays and school vacations, picnics are in season. It's also the season when more people become ill from foodborne bacteria," said Susan Conley, Department of Agriculture Meat and Poultry Hotline director.

Conley said bacteria grow and multiply rapidly in the danger zone between 40 and 140 degrees Fahrenheit.

Anybody can contract a foodborne disease, but expectant mothers and young children are especially vulnerable to foodborne illness.

The following tips will protect everyone from contracting foodborne illnesses.

In the kitchen

- Cleanliness is essential.
- Wash hands, the work area and utensils before preparing food.
- Marinate foods in the refrigerator, not on the counter.
- Thaw frozen goods in the refrigerator, a microwave or in cold water changed every 30 minutes. Never thaw on the kitchen counter.

Menu planning

- Plan to take only the amounts of food you'll use.
- Salads with store-bought mayonnaise are safe if kept cold.
- Avoid creamy or custardy foods.
- If a cooler is not used, take fruit, vegetables, hard cheese, canned or dried meats, dry cereal, bread, peanut butter, crackers or other nonperishable foods.

Packing it up

- Start with cold food.
- Always use an insulated cooler.
- Include a cold source in the cooler — ice, ice packs, frozen drinks, frozen food such as hamburgers and ribs or cold fruit.
- Take along disposable washcloths.
- Plan to keep hot foods hot with a thermos or insulated container.
- Don't put the cooler in the trunk.
- Keep the cooler in the shade at the picnic.
- Replenish the ice as needed.

Heat and eat

- Keep food cold until ready to cook on the grill.
- Cook food completely at the picnic site — no partial or precooking.
- Cook thoroughly.
- Use a fresh plate for serving cooked food.
- Be careful that raw meat juices don't touch other food.

Come and get it

- In hot weather, food should never sit out more than an hour.
- Serve smaller portions so unneeded food stays in the cooler as long as possible.
- Keep the cooler closed; remove and replace food quickly.

Survey: Drug use on rise

Dept. of Health and Human Services

A new survey of more than 11,000 Oregon students shows a dramatic increase in the use of tobacco, alcohol, marijuana and inhalants between the sixth and eighth grades and indicates a need for greater education and prevention efforts at the elementary-school level.

The survey also analyzed risk factors such as peer use, parental attitudes and the perception of harmfulness.

The principal indicator of whether students used alcohol was the number of friends who used it.

For example, eighth graders were 50 times more likely to use marijuana if they had two close friends who used it, than if they had no close friends who used it.

The survey's findings also raise concerns about the hierarchy of substance abuse.

Officials say more prevention efforts need to focus on students in fifth, sixth and seventh grades, involve parents more closely in prevention and relate the dangers of "gateway' substances.

SGT Campbell wins cellular phone from Cellular One

Sgt. Birdel Campbell is the proud new owner of a cellular telephone, compliments of Cellular One and the Main NCO Club's Boss's Night Out program. Cellular One has co-sponsored Boss's Night Out with Gateway Lincoln Mercury for the past three months. Small prizes have been awarded on a weekly basis, and the grand prize was the cellular phone,

Linda Jackson and Carl Bland present cellular bag phone to SGT Birdel Campbell

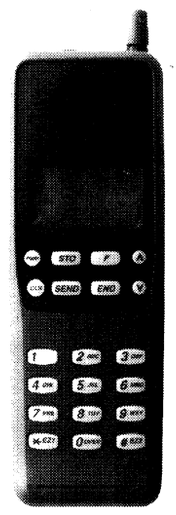
Boss's Night is held the second Friday of each month. Soldiers are encouraged to take their boss out to help ease the stress of daily military life, and to enhance the morale of the soldier and his superior.

Those attending Boss's Night Out are treated to a free buffet, disco music with a live DJ, and other weekly specials.

"We are pleased to be a part of Boss's Night," stated Cellular One representative Carl Bland. "The military market has been extremely good for Cellular One, and this is one way that we can turn the tables and lend our support to a worthwhile project."

Mary Lou Marth, also with Cellular One, went on to describe many of the other services the company provides to area soldiers. "One of the best examples is when we set up a phone bank at Lawson Army Airfield for the soldiers to use as they arrived back home from the Persian Gulf. The service was free, and soldiers were allowed to call friends and family."

Club manager Jimmy Stewart was quick to praise Cellular One to participating in Boss's Night Out. "We can put together the best programs anywhere, but without companies like Cellular One and Gateway to sponsor them, few would be successful."



Cellular One has been in business in Columbus since 1986, and serves Columbus and Fort Benning with a wide range of cellular telephones, service and accessories.

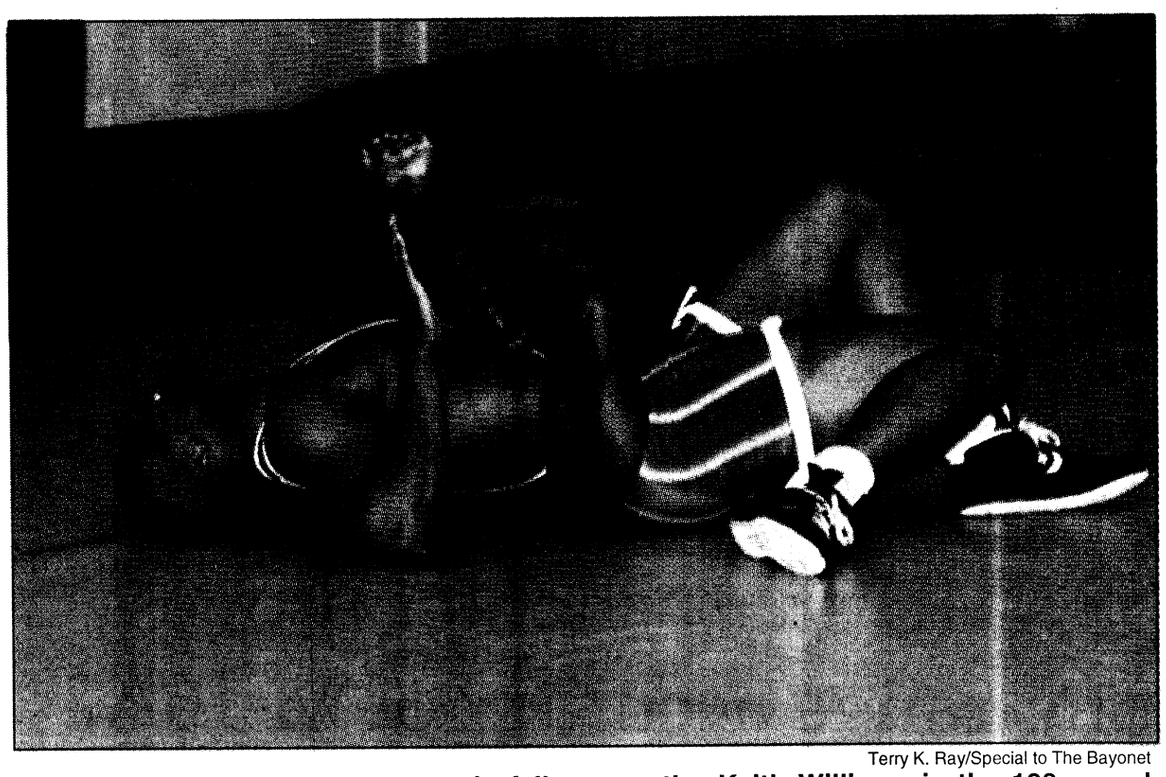
The 1995 All-Army wrestling team is virtually complete. With the All-Army wrestle offs March 10 and Saturday at the All-Army wrestling trial camp on Sand Hill, selections for the upcoming Armed Forces Championships at the Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs, Colo., April 1 are nearing completion.

According to All-Army wrestling coach Tony Thomas, only three spots are left to be filled.

In the 125-pound weight class, Greco-Roman competition, a wrestle off between Jason Tolbert and Anthony Amado will determine the spot.

Charles Spencer will take on 1992 Olympic Bronze Medal winner Rodney Smith for the final spot at the 149-pound weight division also in Greco-Roman competition. Both divisions will be decided today.



Alexander Porcelli will take on Jerry Jackson for the final spot in the 220-pound division when Jackson returns from the Pan American games.

Listed below are the final selections by weight class for freestyle and Greco-Roman competition.

Cruise-matics improve record against Rucker

By Terry K. Ray

The Columbus Fort Benning Cruise-matics downed the Fort Rucker, Ala., Rugby Football Club 56-7 Saturday afternoon at Columbus College boosting their record to 3-3-1 midway through the season.

The Cruisers wasted no time putting points on the board. On the opening kickoff, Cruise-matic outside center Jim Miller slipped between two Fort Rucker players, stole the pass and streaked to the try zone for the try just seconds into the match. Scrum half Duke Moseley converted the kick for a 7-0 lead.

The Cruise-matics put another try on the board when fullback Rich Hunt took a feed from fly half Tim Butterfield inside the Fort Rucker 5-meter line and rambled in for the try. Moseley converted for a 14-0 advantage.

Midway through the half, Moseley tacked on a penalty kick pushing the Cruise-matic lead up to 17-0. Minutes later Moseley kicked the score up to 20-0 on another penalty kick — this one coming from the Fort Rucker 22-meter line.

Winger Jason Daffin got the next score for the Cruise-matics on an up-and-under play by Butterfield. Daffin picked the ball up on one bounce inside the Fort Rucker 22-meter line and scooted to the try zone. Moseley booted the conversion for a 27-0 bulge.

> "Good fundamentals for 80 minutes won this match. We executed well on our feeds and the tackling on the defensive side of the ball was very good."
> — Jim Muldoon
> Cruise-matics head coach

Cruise-matic eight man Kevin Hyneman would get the final try of the half on a feed from Butterfield at the Fort Rucker 22-meter line. Hyneman put on a show of speed and strength, pushing his way past the defense, then speeding into the try zone for the score. Moseley converted the kick sending the Cruise-matics to the sidelines with a halftime lead of 34-0.

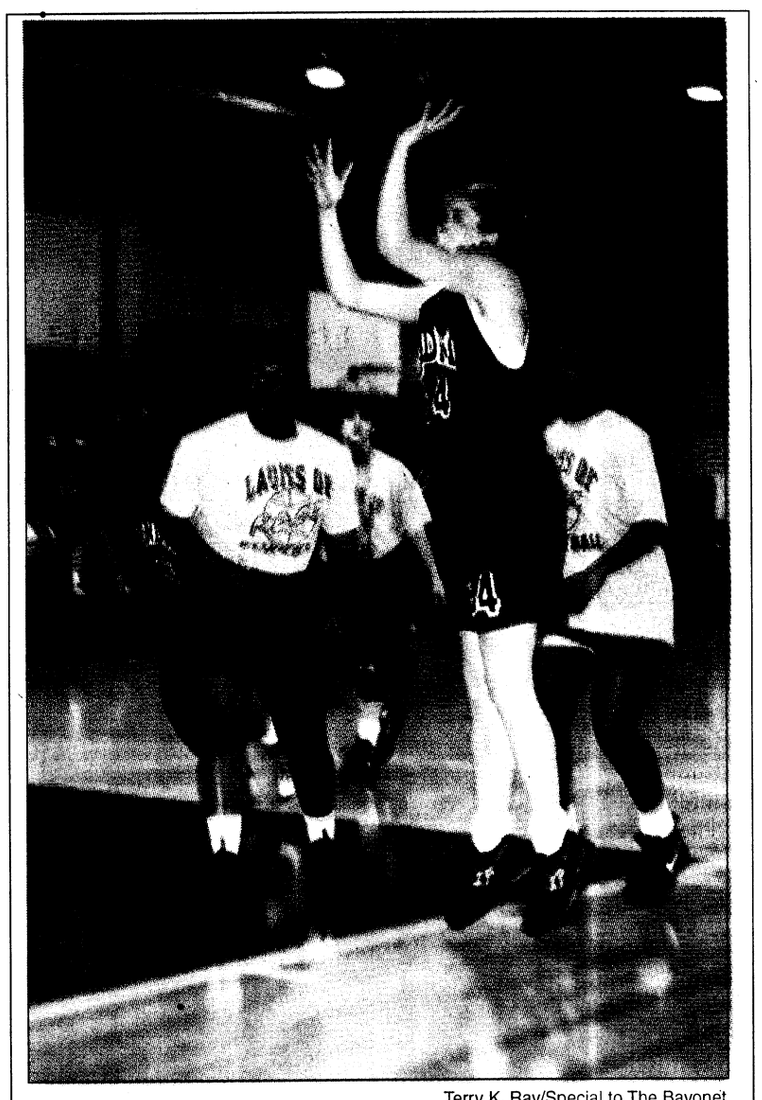
The second half would prove no better for the visiting side from Fort Rucker.

Good ball movement by the Cruise-matics led to their next score. Taking the ball from midfield, inside center Eric Magrum pitched to Miller who successfully passed to Hunt who then fed Daffin at the Rucker 5-meter line with a nice pass, sending Daffin into the try zone unscathed for his second try of the day.

Moseley's foot once again accounted for the conversion and a score of 39-0.

Moments later Hunt would record his second try of the afternoon on a feed from Miller. Moseley missed the conversion leaving the Cruise-matics up 44-0.

The score would rise to 49-0 on a try by hooker Roy Krueger who slipped into the try zone on a Fort Rucker line out that the Cruise-matics spoiled inside the Rucker 5-meter line.



Butterfield would add the coup de gras with little time left in the match. Moseley took the ball off a scrum outside the Fort Rucker 22 meter line and fed Butterfield a sharp pass going to the left. Butterfield was able to turn the corner on the Rucker defense and race downfield for the final score of the day. Magrum converted the kick for a 56-0 score.

Fort Rucker spoiled the shutout on a run from midfield by inside center Mike Johnson and the conversion by fullback Spencer Kympton with no time left in the match for a final score of 56-7.

The Cruise-matics also swept the B match by a score of 25-0.

"Good fundamentals for 80 minutes won this match," said head coach Jim Muldoon. "We executed well on our feeds and the tackling on the defensive side of the ball was very good."

Next up for the Cruise-matics will be a home match against Americus, Ga., March 25 at 2 p.m. at Columbus College.

Ladies of Rage top Lady Bandits in championship

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Ladies of Rage downed the Lady Bandits March 8 at Columbus College 50-33 to win the women's intramural basketball championship.

Rage, led by the inside work of Debra Temple (game high 17 points), screamed out to a 14-0 lead to start the game. Bonita Porch and Teresa Smoot each had 8 points to back up Temple's strong game.

"Our offense is geared for each individual on the floor; all five players have an option," Temple said. "It just depends on what the defense gives us. If they give us the inside, we'll take the inside shot. If they sag in the middle, we take the outside shot."

The Bandit defense didn't know which way to go at the start, but it settled down and slowly worked its way back into the ballgame. Lisa Gipson had nine of her team high 14 points in the first half and Darla Farr chipped in six of her 10 points to pull within 27-19 at the half.

In the second half, the Bandits got as close as five points at 31-26 with 13:30 left to play. Rage pushed the lead up to 40-26 with a 9-0 run while holding the Bandits without a basket for more than five minutes.

"We missed a lot of shots in the second half," said Bandit head coach Robert Jackson. "If we get some of those shots to go down we're in the ballgame. I'm proud of the way the girls played. They put everything they had into it. It just wasn't enough."

A second dry spell for the Bandits spelled doom. Up 43-31 with less than four minutes to play, the Ladies of Rage went on a 7-2 run to put the game away 50-33.

"We were a little too aggressive on defense in the first half, which got us in the penalty early," said Ladies of Rage head coach Loretta Cobb. "But we managed to cool back down and we got back into the flow of our type of ball we've been playing all year. We made a lot of key shots that kept us in the lead. This is the third meeting between these two teams this year and we knew they were not going to give up until it was over."

USAMU sharpshooter proves long-range accuracy of M-16A2

By Marlene Tikal
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

The consensus among marksmen was that it couldn't be done — firing a near-perfect score at a 600-yard target using an M-16A2.

Yet, one U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit service rifle shooter wasn't concentrating on popular opinion when he took his place on the 600-yard firing line during the Mini-Interservice Match at Okechobee, Fla., recently.

"To me it didn't matter that I was competing with an M-16," said Spc. Barry Coleman, who faced off against many of America's best service rifle shooters during the any rifle/any sight match. "I just went out there with the intention of doing the best I could."

And he did. Not only did Coleman's best — a 200 x 16X out of a perfect 200 x 20X — allow him to win the competition, his score also proved to be a marksmanship milestone.

"It's the first time anyone has shot that well with an M-16 during 600-yard competition," said David Boyd, USAMU chief of competition.

That's because most service rifle marksmen — including the 36 National Guard, Reservists and civilians who competed alongside Coleman — choose to fire the M-14, or magnum bolt rifles with telescopes, said Sgt. 1st Class Dewey Hardison, USAMU service rifle coach.

"The reason is they're higher-caliber rifles that fire a heavier round as opposed to the lighter-weight 5.6 round of the M-16," Hardison said.

Although it is the subject of age-old debate, many marksmen believe that the heavier the round, the greater the wind-bucking ability and the higher the accuracy at long-range competitions.

Since that's the case, many would probably wonder why Coleman would opt to compete with an M-16A2.

That was a decision made by Hardison, who viewed the competition as an opportunity to showcase the capability of USAMU shooters and their equipment.

"USAMU marksmen are already viewed as being some of the best marksmen in the world," Hardison said. Coleman performing as well as he did with the M-16 was the icing on the cake.

However, Coleman insists, it was a performance any one his USAMU team members could have pulled off. He bases that opinion not on modesty, but on fact, as Hardison puts all marksmen on the Service Rifle Team through rigorous training in preparation for competition.

During a typical day, service rifle marksmen can fire in excess of 200 rounds as they practice firing from any of three positions and different distances, Hardison said. They also participate in mental training and are allotted a couple of hours in the afternoon to fine-tune individual problem areas.

According to Coleman, it's hard work, but worth it.

"Sgt. 1st Class Hardison's coaching has really enhanced everyone's performance," he said. "He's brought the team up as a whole through positive reinforcement. And, he's never been afraid to notify us of our shortcomings."

If Coleman ever had any shortcomings, they surely evaporated the moment he took aim at that 600-yard target. Still, he admits to feeling nervous when the wind started to pick up after firing 15 out of 20 shots during the competition.

"It was one of those moments when I more or less had to force myself to relax," said Coleman, who didn't want to risk blowing his chance at making history. After all, it had been a long road to travel for the 20-year-old Chillicothe, Ill., native who has his father to thank for developing his interest in the sport of shooting.

"It all really started when my Dad didn't want me shooting at birds in the backyard with my BB gun," Coleman said. "He thought it would be best to take me to the range instead."

Coleman said he enjoyed honing his marksmanship skills at the range and soon he progressed to firing the M-l Garand and M-14. Eventually, he proved to be a strong competitor in various service rifle competitions. So much so, he was given the opportunity to earn a spot on the USAMU Service Rifle Team after he completed basic training in 1993.

"I've come a long way through the years," Coleman said.

And, there were times when several people in his life scoffed at his desire to become a professional marksman. Yet, for all those who said it couldn't be done, Coleman proved them wrong.

Junior anglers can hook $10,000

Plano Molding Company

Qualification for the 1995 Plano Big Bass Junior Championship is currently under way.

Now in its second year, the BBJC is a unique nationwide fishing competition in which young anglers age 10 through 17 fish anytime, anywhere in the 49 participating states (Alaska excluded).

The BBJC awards merchandise and cash prizes, including a $10,000 college scholarship, for largemouth bass caught during the competition. The 1995 qualification period began Jan. 1 and will continue until Aug. 15. An entry fee of $10 and a completed entry form are all that's required.

Every BBJC angler who certifies a catch in the competition receives an Instant-Winner Prize package, valued at $35. The package includes Stren fishing line, a Mann's Big Bass Bait Pack, a Bill Lewis Rat-L-Trap lure, a Blakemore Road Runner lure, a Coleman two-liter jug, Uncle Josh pork rind baits, Mustad hooks, a Gatco hook sharpener, Original Fish Formula attractant and a Zebco Hot Reel.

From Jan. 1 to Aug. 15, contestants who catch and certify the biggest largemouth bass among BBJC competitors in each of the participating states win $250 State Championship prizes and become eligible for the $10,000 scholarship.

State winners in the 1995 Quaker State Big Bass World Championship (a similar program for adults) represent the junior champions from their respective states at the 1995 BBWC Finals, to be conducted Nov. 10 and 11 at Grenelefe Resort near Orlando, Fla. The BBWC world champion wins nearly $100,000 in cash and merchandise and the $10,000 college scholarship for his or her state's BBJC Champion.

In 1994, 12-year-old Bo Middleton of Elgin, Okla., won the $10,000 college scholarship from Plano Molding when his state's BBWC champion captured the top prize in the 1994 Finals in Florida. Middleton caught a 5.09-pound largemouth bass while fishing with his dad on a local lake to earn his state's BBJC Championship and become one of 42 Junior State Champions to earn a $250 cash prize.

To enter the 1995 competition, call (800) 348-2642.

Title sponsor of the BBJC is Plano Molding, manufacturer of fishing tackle systems for more than 40 years. Other sponsors of the BBJC are Bill Lewis Lures, Blakemore, Coleman, Flow-Rite of Tennessee Fish Formula, Gatco Sharpeners, Mann's Bait Company, Mustad, Stren Fishing Lines, Uncle Josh and Zebco, Quantum and MotorGuide.

Stars lose second in Tallahassee 18-6

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Columbus Stars dropped their second straight game of the year Saturday night in Tallahassee, Fla., 18-6 at the hands of the Tallahassee Tornados.

The Stars (4-2) took the early lead on a seven-yard touchdown run by fullback Jamon Smith (15 carries for 64 yards and one TD) in the first quarter. Kicker Scott Alalof missed the extra point attempt leaving the Stars clinging to a 6-0 lead.

Tallahassee roared right back to reclaim the lead for good on a 28-yard strike from quarterback Eddie Williams (16 of 23 for 251 yards and two TD's) to wide receiver Greg Turner (7 catches for 121 yards and two TD's) in the second quarter. A two-point conversion gave the Tornados an 8-6 advantage at the half.

In the third quarter, field goal kicker Messner booted a 26-yard field goal boosting the Tornado lead to 11-6.

Williams found Turner once again for a score in the fourth quarter on a 15-yard pass play. Messner added the kick for the 18-6 lead.

The Stars had their chances to put points on the board but once again fell victim to the turnover bug. Four costly turnovers by the offense stopped potential scoring opportunities for the Stars.

Four defensive fumble recoveries by the Stars, two by free safety Troy Busby, and one each by cornerbacks Michael Prince and Alvin Humber kept the Stars in the game until the bitter end.

The Stars once again gave up more ground than they gained. With the Tornados using a powerful air attack (294 yards) and a meager ground assault (58 yards) against one of the best defenses in the league, the Tornados pounded out 10 first downs by controlling the ball and the clock.

The Stars on the other hand had seven first downs with a paltry 84 yards of rushing and 102 passing yards for a total of 186 yards of offense. Defensively the Stars were led by strong safety John Harris with four tackles and four assist. The Tornados were led by linebacker Paul Davis with six tackles, one assist and one interception.

"Their passing attack simply picked us apart," said Stars head coach Tom Staton. "We tried using a zone and man-to-man, but their quarterback audibled to another play and killed us. Every week you have to be ready to play. If not, any team in this league can beat you. We just played a terrible game."

The Stars return home for a rematch with the Vipers of Mobile, Ala., Saturday at Garrett Stadium. Kickoff is set for 7 p.m.

Own the night

Sgt. 1st Class Rodger A. Drill sergeant: 46 year-old soldier "on the trail" of defying people who doubt him

By Rhonda Marie Jones
Fort Knox, Ky.

FORT KNOX, Ky. — About 10 one station unit training trainees sit on a tank listening to an instructor talk about tank maintenance. It's impossible to know whether the novices find the lecture boring, since they don't dare show that sort of expression on their faces.

That's because, standing right behind the instructor, is their "father" for the remaining nine weeks of their 14-week course.

"Dad's" name is Staff Sgt. Tommy Franklin, but his soldiers know him as "Drill Sergeant." He watches over them with a stern look on his face, letting them know they'd better pay attention.

He appears to be like any other drill, but there's something very different about him — he's the oldest drill sergeant in the army.

Franklin, who has been a soldier for nine years and a drill sergeant for 18 months, is 46-years-old. And there's a lot of experience packed into those years.

Before joining the Army, Franklin served four years with the U.S. Navy. After leaving the Navy, he went to college and later started his own business. Then, in 1986, he finally decided to join the Army because he wanted to do something different.

"I thought about joining the Army for about five or six years, then I thought, "If I'm going to do it, do it before I get too old to retire," he explained.

He went through drill school at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., two years ago. He said he had heard horror stories about drill sergeant school, but Franklin found that he actually enjoyed it, saying that it wasn't as hard as he thought it would be.

"I met a lot of good NCOs (noncommissioned officers), and when you meet a lot of good NCOs, it makes it a lot easier," he said.

He added that the instructors looked at him the same as they did the younger candidates.

> "The privates know where they stand with me at all times ... I like to have a good time with them. I think that you have to make things as stressful as possible, but you have to enjoy the privates as well as teach them."
> — Staff Sgt. Tommy Franklin
> Army's oldest drill sergeant

"They were just as tough on me as they were on anybody else," Franklin recalled.

He added that not only did he surprise people when he entered drill sergeant school, he shocked them by graduating. Franklin said a plaque at the school honors him as the oldest drill sergeant to come through Fort Leonard Wood.

"I think I shocked most people when I actually made it through school," said Franklin, who plans on being a drill sergeant until September 1996. "There were a lot of people who didn't think I could do it because of my age. They've been telling me ever since I joined the Army that I was too old to do this and too old to that, and that just makes me want to do it that much more. I hate to be told I can't do something."

Franklin said he decided to become a drill sergeant for both "good and selfish" reasons.

"Basically, as a tank commander, I wasn't satisfied with the training the privates that I was getting were getting from here," he explained. "I thought that I'd come and make a difference."

He said that his proudest accomplishments haven't been earning Drill Sergeant of the Cycle accolades, or even training an honor platoon.

"I would say the thing I'm proudest of is, for two cycles in a row now, I had nobody flunk the final PT (physical training) test," he said. "Also, a member of my platoon won the marksmanship award in both cycles."

Franklin describes himself as "a tough drill sergeant, but fair.

"The privates know where they stand with me at all times," he explained. "I think if you ask the privates they would say the same thing, but I like to have a good time with them. I think that you have to make things as stressful as possible, but you have to enjoy the privates as well as teach them."

Franklin said he accomplishes that by getting them to laugh at themselves when they "know they're not as squared away as they should be." He added that he is still stern with his soldiers, but he tries "to get them to enjoy what they do."

Franklin, whose favorite part of the cycle is gunnery, also said he enjoys being a drill sergeant because he sees something new every day. He added that he also enjoys the challenge that comes along with the job.

"The challenge of turning young civilians — young kids — into tankers, not just soldiers," he explained. "To live up to what I thought it should be like when I was a tank commander.

"To watch a brand new private pull the trigger on that cannon for the first time, and to see his eyes and his face light up, that's my favorite part of (the cycle)."

Franklin and his wife, Jacyne, have a 5-year-old daughter, Lacey.

Paratroopers of today exist due to yesterday's test platoon volunteers

By Jeanine M. Dubnicka
82nd Airborne Division

In the summer of 1939, the fate of the U.S. Army's airborne rested in the hands of 50 soldiers. Two officers, five sergeants and 43 privates were recruited to fill the ranks of the airborne test platoon.

As an infantryman with Fort Benning's 29th Infantry Regiment, 29-year-old John Ward didn't want to miss his chance for excitement and a place in military history.

"The War Department decided to investigate the feasibility of jumping out of aircraft by parachute with Army combat gear, ready to go into combat. So they asked for volunteers to form a test platoon," said Ward, a farm boy from Watkinsville, Ga.

"I gave it about three minutes of thought," he said. "I had seen enough of walking in the infantry and dragging that machine-gun around my neck ... I knew this was the way to go."

Even though it meant a reduction in rank from specialist to private, Ward raised his hand and volunteered for six weeks of grueling training in Texas.

"We did a lot physical training," Ward said. "It was run here and run there, nobody walked anywhere. It felt like I was running half the night in my sleep. We learned about the parachute and how to pack them."

Each member of the platoon was issued two parachutes. The soldiers paid special attention to the care of those chutes, because as their six-week training came to an end, it was time for the volunteers to make their first jump. Ward remembers they drew numbers to see who would be first.

"I drew number eight," he said. "I offered the first man one month's pay to trade with me. And a month's pay was quite a bit at that time (about $17), but he wouldn't trade with me."

Feeling confident about what they learned, Ward and other soldiers were excited to test their knowledge and training. On the day of the jump, though the soldiers were anxious to board the aircraft, a wind test had to be done first.

"The aircraft members took a wind-dummy up and threw it out," Ward said. "Well, the chest strap on the — dummy came loose, the dummy fell out of the harness and hit the ground. The parachute opened just fine, but there were a lot of wide-eyes out on the field."

After a successful second wind test, the soon-to-be paratroopers boarded the plane and took off on their historic flight. After one jump refusal and one poor landing that delayed Ward's exit, he was ready to get out that plane.

"I think I would have jumped without a parachute at that time," he said. "Nobody could have kept me in that plane."

With four injury-free jumps, the soldiers were now the Army's first paratroopers. During the qualification jumps, Ward recalls another airborne first captured by the test platoon members.

"We did have a mass jump during this period. Gen. George C. Marshall brought his staff down from the District of Columbia to view what a mass attack would look like. We had three aircrafts, a C-33, a C-39 and a B-18. At the time, it was a big one.

"He was really impressed at how we took that field after landing," Ward said.

"After we got back he gave us a critique. He told us he was really pleased and was sure we were going to have airborne troops. What you see at Fort Bragg (N.C.) today is part of what came from the 50 men who formed the test platoon."

After leaving the test platoon, Ward went on for further training, becoming one of the Army's first riggers. He also became a part of, and helped establish, the Army's first airborne battalion, the 501st. Eventually he went on to serve with the 502nd and 504th Parachute Infantry Regiments.

During this time, Ward became the right-hand man to the famed Col. Reuben Tucker, the 504th PIR commander. When World War II broke out, the 504th was tasked to participate in Operation Avalanche in Salerno, Italy.

Upon returning from Europe, Ward stayed with the airborne throughout his active duty and civil service careers. He was active in testing and developing new jump equipment. Two of his claims to fame are the canopy quick release assemblies paratroopers use today and the net lining in the reserve parachutes that allows its tangle-free deployment.

Ward is also responsible for the lightweight ladder first used in Vietnam to extract soldiers by helicopters from hostile areas.

When Ward retired from the civil service in 1972, he had made 858 parachute jumps. Still living near Fort Bragg, Ward, one of the airborne pioneers, still keeps an eye on today's paratroopers.

"The 82nd is a fine outfit," he said. "We have a good solid Army out there. People can say how good the old Army was, but I still think the new Army is right there with them. I think when the chips are down, we still have a top notch Army out there."

Other highlights of Ward's Army career were driving for Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and assisting Maj. Gen. James Gavin, the 82nd Abn. Div. commander, through his first airborne operation.

Ward and his wife, Mary, were married for 41 years when she passed away in 1989. They have one daughter, Nancy.

Although his days of mass attacks and night combat operations have passed, Ward still thinks about his days in the airborne. He admits to dreaming of jumping and parachute landing falls. For a man who dedicated his life to the excitement of the jump and then the safety of future paratroopers, as is the case with John Ward, the saying "once a paratrooper, always a paratrooper," is more than fitting.

world war II

50 years ago this week ...

• U.S. bombers based in the Marianas dropped more than 1,650 tons of incendiaries in a devastating raid on Tokyo, the capital of imperial Japan. It was a new form of attack designed to take advantage of the wood and paper construction of many Japanese homes. A massive firestorm was raised and many thousands of homes were completely destroyed. The death toll was around 120,000 people, with 1 million people made homeless. It was the most damaging air attack of the war, including the atomic attacks on Hiroshima and Nagasaki. This was only the first of many such raids on Japanese cities.

• The German defense of Wesel, the last Nazi bridgehead west of the Rhine River, collapsed. U.S. soldiers expanded their bridgehead at Remagen up to 10 miles on the east bank of the Rhine. U.S. troops also made gains of up to three miles in new operations in the Saar Basin and the Palatinate.

• Russians drove from three directions toward the port city of Danzig, splitting the enemy's lines on the city's outskirts. The Red Army also captured Kuestrin, the Oder River fortress 38 miles east of Berlin. The German drive in the Lake Balaton area of Hungary was slowed by fierce Russian ground and air resistance, the atrocious muddy conditions and by a lack of fuel.

• In Burma, the 19th British Indian Division drove its way into Mandalay, breaking out of its bridgehead on the east bank of the Irrawaddy River. The Japanese put up fierce resistance.

• In the Philippines, most of the U.S. Army's 41st Infantry Division was landed at the southwest of Mindanao. The division pushed on from Zamboanga to capture the villages of Santa Maria, Canelar, Silnung and Pitogo. Soldiers also repulsed a Japanese attempt to land from barges northwest of Batangas, Luzon. Organized Japanese resistance on the island of Palawan came to an end.

• U.S. Marines stopped an unusually fierce Japanese suicide attack on Iwo Jima the night of March 9. Despite fanatical resistance, by the end of the week the Marines had driven the enemy into a small area in the northwest of the island.

MEDDAC soldier aces boards

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

Lisa M. Hibbert

Sgt. Sonia Nieves, a pharmacy technician, assists customers at the Refill Pharmacy. Nieves is the Southeast Region MEDDAC and DENTAC NCO of the Year.

She sat relaxed in her chair. The sunlight that streamed through the office window cast a warm glow on her neatly fixed auburn hair and her olive toned skin. In her lap was a white plastic bag containing one of the plaques that she had received.

Repositioning herself, she sat attentively and spoke with a slight Spanish accent about becoming the U.S. Army Medical Department and Dental activities Southeast regional Noncommissioned Officer of the Year.

Sgt. Sonia M. Nieves, a pharmacy technician at the Refill Pharmacy in the Main Mall, won a competition at Dwight D. Eisenhower Army Medical Center, Fort Gordon, Ga., Feb. 25.

Nieves said that she first became involved in the contest at its lowest level, MEDDAC NCO of the Month in April. Nieves, new to Fort Benning at the time, said she was eager to get promoted to staff sergeant and decided to go before the board to get some practice. After winning NCO of the Month, Nieves then competed for and won MEDDAC NCO of the Quarter in June.

Nieves said that she was constantly studying for these competitions. Each win brought rewards and new challenges for her.

The next board brought a little more diversity because Nieves was now competing against the top NCOs from the Dental Activity as well as the top MEDDAC NCOs. In November, she went for MEDDAC and DENTAC NCO of the Year. Again Nieves won.

Nieves said that she encourages everybody to go for NCO of the Month. "It's helped me to become a better NCO. I've studied the (regulations) so I know the answer when my soldiers ask questions."

After winning on the Martin Army Community Hospital level, the next step was regional at the Eisenhower Medical Center at Fort Gordon, where she was a winner once again.

The board is broken down into two phases. An oral phase and a Common Task Test phase. Nieves said that the hands on, CTT part of the contest was the hardest for her. For CTT you perform a task at a station.

"You don't know what is coming at the station until you get there, so you have to study everything," she said.

Being in a rear support position, Nieves said that these tasks are not something that she gets to practice on a regular basis.

Titles are not all the Nieves won. For winning MACH MEDDAC and DENTAC NCO of the Year, she received a $100 Savings Bond, a plaque from the Association of the United States Army, six months off the duty roster and a numbered MACH coin.

According to a MEDDAC official, the coin, given to her by MACH Commander Col. Michael J. Kussman, has only been given to three other enlisted soldiers.

At the Fort Gordon regionals, Nieves was presented with $800 in Savings Bonds, a certificate of achievement, a plaque from the signal sergeant major of Fort Gordon, and a plaque from the sergeant major of the Eisenhower Medical Center. She also received two coins, the Dwight D. Eisenhower coin and the U.S. Army Medical Command coin.

April 9, Nieves will go to San Antonio, Texas, for the week-long U.S. Army MEDCOM NCO of the Year competition.

According to Command Sgt. Major Hoyt L. Clark, Nieves is a motivated, dedicated, well-rounded NCO with a strong desire to excel.

"Everybody should try to excel in what they do. This is just one way of doing it," Nieves said.

Nieves plans to make a career of the Army and will soon begin working to complete her degree in biology at Columbus College.

Bayonet places 2nd in Army

Fort Benning's newspaper, The Bayonet, placed second in the Armywide Keith L. Ware Print Journalism Competition Metro Category last week.

The newspaper was able to compete in the competition by initially placing second in the Training and Doctrine Command's Print Journalism contest that concluded Feb. 13. The Bayonet came in second to Army defending champion, Inside the Turret from Fort Knox, Ky. But at the Department of the Army-level competition, The Bayonet ousted Inside the Turret, as the Fort Knox newspaper fell to third place Armywide. The Courier from Fort Campbell, Ky., took the first-place honors.

In the TRADOC contest, The Bayonet had three military staff writers and three contract writers place. In the category of feature, news, sports photo in support of a story, Pfc. Marc G. Turchin placed second, and Sgt. Ruth J. Spaller placed third. In the Information Graphics category, Spc. Karen S. Morarie placed second; she also received an honorable mention in the features category.

The Bayonet's contract writers, all employees of The Advertiser Company, printers of The Bayonet, swept the Contract Writer of the Year category by winning all three top spots. Jerrie Macintire placed first, Richard Brill took second and sports writer Terry K. Ray rounded out the trio in third.

The competition is named in memory of Maj. Gen. Keith L. Ware, former Army chief of Public Affairs. Ware received the Medal of Honor in World War II and was killed while commanding the 1st Infantry Division in Vietnam in 1968. Ware's Medal of Honor is on display in the National Infantry Museum.

Eat Healthy!

March is National Nutrition Month

The Food Guide Pyramid emphasizes food from the five food groups shown in the three lower sections of the Pyramid.

Each of theses food groups provides some, but not all, of the nutrients you need. Foods in one group can't replace those in another. No one food group is more important than another–for good health, you need them all.

The Pyramid is an outline of what to eat each day. It's not a rigid prescription, but a general guide that lets you choose a healthful diet that's right for you. The Pyramid calls for eating a variety of foods to get the nutrients you need and at the same time the right amount of calories to maintain a healthy weight.

Kindness a powerful gesture

By John Messer

reflections

Recently my wife, the three youngest of our eight children and I were in the Atlanta airport. As we stepped into the little train that takes you from concourse to concourse, a most unusual thing happened.

We entered the vehicle with the children in tow. My wife had the two 4-year-olds by the hand and I had the baby in my arms. Before we entered the car I told the children, "Maybe when we get on the train, we'll be able to sit down."

Well, as we entered the car, two of the three available seats were taken. Then as if on cue, the older white woman sitting on the right hand seat and the middle aged black gentleman sitting on the left hand seat rose and offered their seats to us.

Of course we are in the South where there is still a bit of that good old-fashioned Southern hospitality around, but it surprised us that such acts of thoughtfulness would happen so spontaneously and simultaneously.

As we thanked them both for their caring, it led to a little conversation about kindness. Surprisingly, the gentleman told me that far from being a native of the South, he had recently moved to Atlanta from New York City.

Now my idea of a native New Yorker doesn't exactly match up with such gracious act of random kindness. He went on to tell me that he had found the South a wonderful place to live because folks were friendlier and took time to care for others.

The woman who had given up the other seat chimed in to say that she too had lived much of her life in another part of the country, but that one of the great things about living in the South was that it was OK to be friendly with strangers.

Maybe you have seen those billboards that encourage the reader to practice "Random Acts of Kindness." I don't know that either of the persons I've told you about had seen those billboards, but I do know they both taught me a lesson — a lesson that I for one have to learn over and over again — the lesson of the power of kindness.

In my work as a chaplain, I do a lot of marriage and family counseling. Recently I showed an older friend of mine — a retired Army chaplain — a book about counseling couples. When he had taken time to read through the book I asked him what he thought of it. With a wry smile that only age and wisdom can yield, he said, " I think that a lot of marriage and family problems could be settled if people would take seriously the business of being kind to one another ..."

On the face of it, such a reply sounds awfully simplistic. But is it? Is it a simple matter to be patient and understanding to someone who doesn't return the favor — especially if that someone is your husband or your wife? Is it a simple matter to give care to others who may not appreciate just how much of a sacrifice you have made to give them a hot meal or a clean shirt or a steady income?

Wouldn't the world be a better place if each of us took seriously the issue of being truly kind — kind in our speech, kind in our attitudes, kind in our sharing of time, kind in our taking time to listen to others, kind in the use of our money?

I am in debt to those two folks on that train in the Atlanta airport. They caused me to think about the way I deal with total strangers. And more than that, they have helped me to think about the way I deal with those I am closest to — the folks I work with, the neighbors on my street, my wife and children.

I hope that I can practice unrehearsed kindness with as much grace as those two gentle people.

I am reminded of the words of the Apostle Paul in the epistle to the Ephesians in the New Testament — "Be kind to one another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another as God in Christ forgave you." (Ephesians 4:32 RSV)

May these words be my "works" as I put them into practice day by day. Perhaps you'll choose to join me.

prayer

In this article, we will provide additional prayers from The Hymnal: Army and Navy (A.S. Barnes and Company, 1941).

The Cadet Prayer

"O God our Father, thou Searcher of men's hearts, help us to draw near to thee in sincerity and truth. May our religion be filled with gladness and may our worship of thee be natural.

"Strengthen and increase our admiration for honest dealing and clean thinking, and suffer not our hatred for hypocrisy and pretense ever to diminish. Encourage us in our endeavor to live above the common level of life. Make us to choose the harder right instead of the easier wrong, and never to be content with a half truth when the whole can be won. Endow us with courage that is born of loyalty to all that is noble and worthy, that scorns to compromise with vice and injustice and knows no fear when truth and right are in jeopardy. Guard us against flippancy and irreverence in the sacred things of life. Grant us new ties of friendship and new opportunities of service. Kindle our hearts in fellowship with those of a cheerful countenance, and soften our hearts with sympathy for those who sorrow and suffer. May we find genuine pleasure in clean and wholesome mirth and feel inherent disgust for all coarse-minded humour. Help us, in our work and in our play, to keep ourselves physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight, that we may the better maintain the honor of the corps untarnished and unsullied, and acquit ourselves like men in our effort to realize the ideals of West Point in doing our duty to thee and to our country. All of which we ask in the name of the great friend and master of men. Amen."

Prayer at Taps

"Before we go to rest we commit ourselves to thy care, O God our Father, beseeching thee through Christ our Lord to keep alive thy grace in our hearts. Watch thou, O Heavenly Father, with those who wake, or watch, or weep tonight, and give thine angels charge over those who sleep. Tend those who are sick, rest those who are weary, soothe those who suffer, pity those in affliction; be near and bless those who are dying and keep under thy holy care those who are dear to us. Through Christ our Lord. Amen."

"Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me.

The Resurrection of Jesus Christ— fact or fiction?

By Ted W. Nichols
USAIC Chaplain Office

reflections

If you are like me, you anxiously await the evening news to hear what earth shattering events have happened during the day that will be recorded in tomorrow's history books.

There is an event that occurred in history nearly 2,000 years ago that continues to have universal impact.

Christianity stands or falls on the basis of the resurrection miracle. The bodily resurrection of Jesus Christ is one of the most wicked, vicious, heartless hoaxes ever pulled on mankind, or it is the most fantastic fact of all history.

Let's consider the evidence.

Christ regularly and emphatically predicted his impending death and subsequent resurrection. Now, if you or I should claim today that we expect within the next week to die but that we will come back from the dead, we would no doubt be quietly taken away for long-term therapy, and rightly so, for only a foolish or mentally unstable person would make such a claim — unless — he was divine. So by making such a claim before his death, Jesus was establishing the criteria by which his life and mission could be judged — fact or fiction. The historical evidence is overwhelming.

It is a fact that Jesus received the death penalty from the Roman official named Pilate. Jesus was hanged on a cross until he died, his side was pierced with a Roman sword and he was pronounced dead at the scene by the attending authorities. His body was then prepared for burial with approximately 75 pounds of spices and he was wrapped in burial cloths like a mummy.

As directed by the Roman authorities, a huge stone weighing perhaps a ton, was rolled down into a ditch in front of the tomb entrance. The official seal of the Roman empire was placed on the tomb providing the sentence of death for anyone tampering with it, and an elite force of Roman soldiers was positioned at the tomb to guard it around the clock.

All of the above events are chronicled in historical documents. Yet, three days after his death and burial, the huge stone was rolled up out of the ditch, the Roman soldiers fled the scene and later were paid "hush money" to claim that while they were sleeping, someone removed the body. The grave clothes remained undisturbed as if the body that had been so tightly wrapped, just vanished.

Now the standard Roman punishment for falling asleep at your post was not an Article 15, but execution. Yet, these guards somehow made money on the deal, and if, as many claim, the body was stolen, then why would anyone take the time to unwrap it and then painstakingly reposition the yards and yards of linen cloth?

More to the point, consider the relative cowardice of the disciples. These were the guys who ran away when Jesus was arrested and later denied even knowing him. It is just too hard to imagine that these characters somehow mustered the courage to take on a Roman guard force, break an official Roman seal and risk death in order to steal a corpse.

Yet, the most amazing evidence is the eye witness accounts that have been recorded. Jesus was seen alive by more than 500 people over a period of 40 days after his death and resurrection. Is it possible that this many people, otherwise unrelated, could have conspired to create such a story?

And again, look at the changed lives of those who witnessed this miracle. Each of those cowards who had previously abandoned Jesus eventually became martyrs. Such a supernatural change in devotion and loyalty cannot be explained by a contrived hoax or a stolen body, but only by the real thing.

Dr. Simon Greenleaf, the royal professor of law at Harvard University was declared by the chief justice of the Supreme Court of the United States to be the greatest authority on legal evidences who had ever lived. In 1847, Greenleaf determined to sift through the available evidence on the question of the resurrection.

He minutely examined each thread of evidence, produced a one volume treatise and concluded that in any unbiased courtroom in the world, if the evidence for the resurrection of Christ were presented, it would be adjudged an absolute historical fact. (An Examination of the Testimony of the Four Evangelists By The Rules of Evidence Administered In the Courts Of Justice; 1847, Dr. Simon Greenleaf).

As excitement mounts for the upcoming Olympic games in 1996, an exceptional group of athletes from around the world is preparing for the intense competition of the Paralympic games scheduled to begin in Atlanta two weeks after the close of the Olympics.

1996 Paralympic Games

The 1996 Paralympic Games will host 102 nations in 19 sports, 14 of which are official Olympic sports, during 10 days of competition, Aug. 16 to 27.

Though participating individuals will have a variety of disabilities, their drive for perfection and excellence is not diminished, according to Paralympic Medalist Ann Cody, who visited some post schools as part of Exceptional Children's Week.

Cody told the audience of her drive to pit her skill against others in the spirit of friendly competition fostered by the Olympic games.

Partially paralyzed by illness at age 16, Cody spoke of how the Paralympic games gave her an opportunity to realize a lifelong dream as she displayed her medals to the audience.

In the 1992 Paralympic Games in Barcelona, Cody won a Gold Medal as a member of the wheelchair relay and also won the bronze in the 10,000-meter race. She also competed in the marathon as well as 800-meter and 500-meter events.

Cody was joined by the Paralympic mascot Blaze, the 8-foot tall phoenix who left the Atlanta area for the first time to join Fort Benning students in celebrating Exceptional Children's Week.

Exceptional Children's Week

Exceptional Children's Week is a yearly celebration designed to increase awareness of children who live with disabilities, said Kathy Einhorn, assistant director of special education for the Fort Benning schools.

"We want to show that children, whether exceptional or not, are more alike than different," she said.

During this week, the Georgia Council for Exceptional Children focuses awareness on those with disabilities who make daily adjustments because of their unique challenges.

Legend of Blaze

As part of the Exceptional Children's Week program, Junior Miss Wheelchair Georgia Leslie Taylor spoke along with military and community leaders and local storyteller Mary Lisby, who recounted the legend of Blaze.

Blaze, a phoenix that rose from ashes in a mythological rebirth, sought refuge where he could participate in friendly competition, she said.

According to the legend, he found acceptance and friends in games which embodied the spirit of the modern day Paralympics.

Paralympic competitors are athletes with physical or visual impairments including the blind, partially paralyzed, people with cerebral palsy, amputees, dwarfs and others.

The philosophy is that athletes with disabilities should have opportunities to pursue goals in sport equivalents of those enjoyed by non-disabled athletes. Competitors are selected by their countries based upon performance, said retired Maj. Marcus Alexander of the Olympic Committee.

"Destiny is a matter of choice," Alexander told the students as they viewed tapes of Cody's races in the 1992 Paralympics.

Cody "is someone special we want to copy," he said, and led a thumbs-up applause for the paralympian.

The thumbs-up signal stands for the Fort Benning School's ACE program of attitude, commitment and excellence.

GEORGIA SPECIAL OLYMPICS

Post volunteers staff 'special' event

Even with chilly weather, approximately 450 school children participated in the Georgia Special Olympics March 9 at Spencer High School.

At the opening ceremonies, Col. Robert L. Jordan Jr., commander of the 29th Infantry Regiment, said, "Anyone can watch the events. It takes real courage however, to be a competitor."

More than 300 volunteers from Fort Benning contributed to the event. The volunteers included soldiers from the School of the Americas, the Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers program and other units.

"Making this day a reality for these kids is what makes it all worthwhile. I think it's very important to help the community anyway that we can," said Spc. Danielle Holliday, SOA volunteer for the Special Olympics.

Events at the Special Olympics included the 50-meter run, the 100-meter run, soccer events and wheelchair races.

With the Special Olympics everyone participating is a winner.

In the 100-meter run, for example, there were more than 15 heats with between three to eight people competing in each heat.

Everyone who ran the race was encouraged along the way. When they crossed the finish line, timers and huggers congratulated them.

Huggers then took all of the runners over to the awards platform for presentation of ribbons.

According to Vickie Carde, spokeswoman for the Special Olympics here, participants were male and female and ranged in age from five to adult.

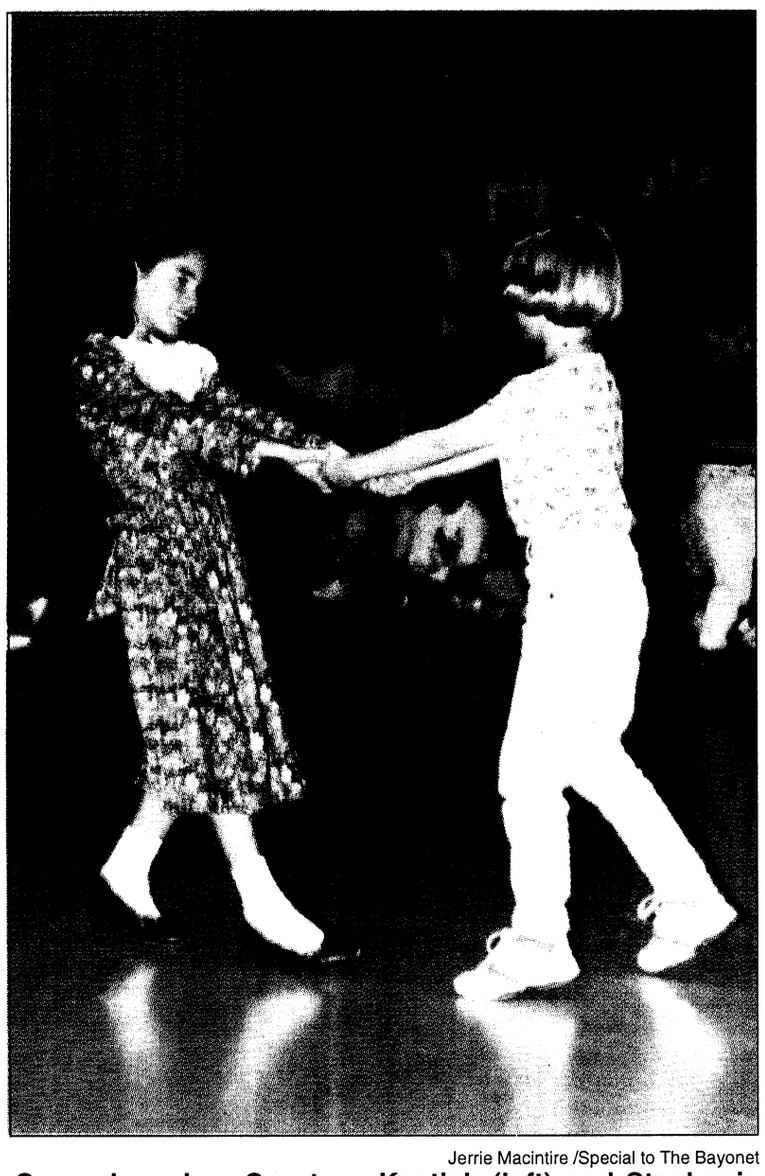
The Muscogee County Committee for Special Olympics has been coordinating competition for athletes with physical and mental disabilities for thirteen years, according to Myra Pfeiffer, vice chairwoman of the committee.

The games are designed to bolster self esteem and give the athletes an arena in which to compete, she said.



"Everyone is a winner in these olympics, no matter how they place," said Pfeiffer, who noted that each participant in each event received encouragement and ribbons.

Athletes will again have the opportunity to compete with peers in the area 10 games scheduled for March 31. Participants from eight counties are expected to compete, and volunteers are always welcome, she said.

"We had our biggest response ever from volunteers," said Pfeiffer, who noted "people are still calling to see if there is more they can do."

To volunteer for upcoming Special Olympics programs, or for more information on the Muscogee County Committee for Special Olympics, contact Pfeiffer at 687-7242.

Dexter students transformed their cafeteria into a ballroom March 8 and 9 as they swayed, clapped, twirled and jumped while performing native dances of various countries that will be participating in the 1996 Olympics based in Atlanta.

From the melodious strains of the waltz to the rhythmic beat of the limbo, students displayed their skills at the dances of their "adopted" Olympic countries, said physical education teacher Pamela Wright.

As part of a year long "Olympic Connection" theme, each class has adopted a different country, said Vicki Rogers, principal.

Throughout the year, teachers will weave various activities relating to their country into subjects such as math, social studies, science and language arts, she said.

As part of physical education, Wright will bring to life the culture and customs of various countries through lessons on dancing, games and sports, Rogers said.

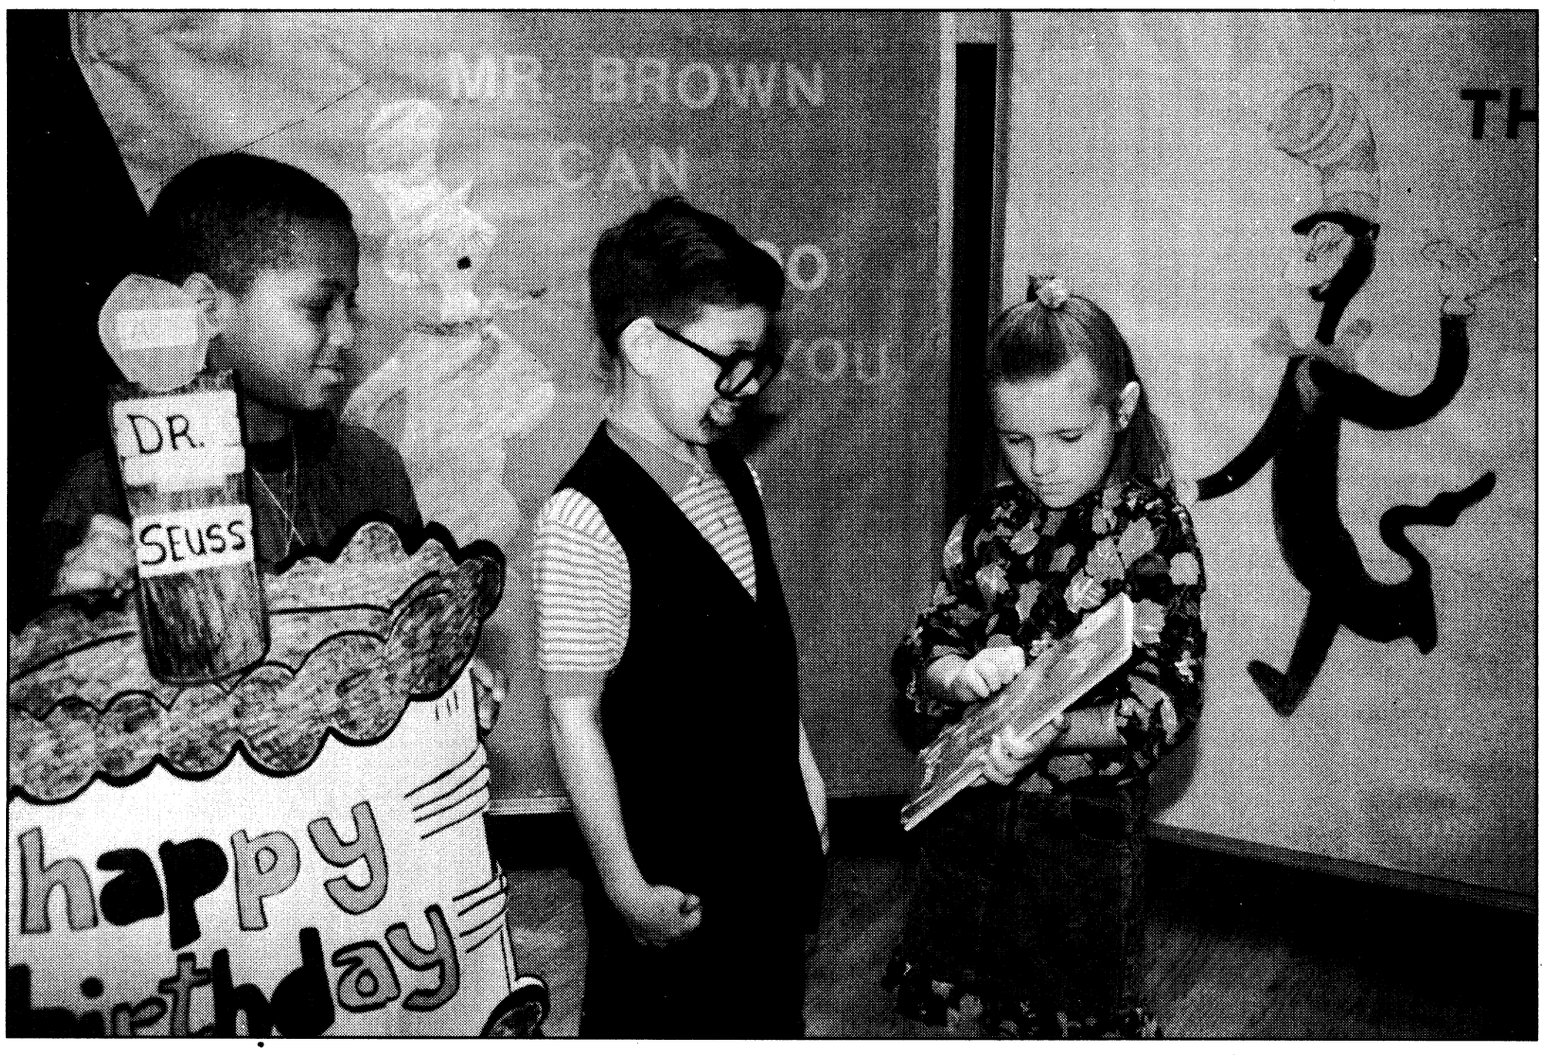
In addition, national flags are mounted in the corridors outside the classrooms.

Inside the classes, children are learning native languages, art techniques and music of their adopted countries, Rogers said.

Parent and community volunteers have helped the program and have served as guest lecturers.

Among the lecturers are Col. Gregory Camp, school board president and chief of staff, and Pfc. Ian Kidd, who will share stories about Australia and Ireland with classes who have adopted those countries, Rogers said.

In keeping with the Olympic tradition to give handmade quilts as official Olympic gifts, many classrooms have designed and made quilts to give to their adopted countries.



Parents are thrilled their children are learning academic lessons as well as dances from countries around the world, according to family member Joannie Bromund, who has three children at Dexter.

"Ms. Wright is more than just a PE teacher. The children love the dances," she said.

"Parents here at Dexter get real excited about programs like the Olympic Connections," she added.

The year-long program will culminate with an Olympic Days festival May 8 to 12.

At this time, visiting artist-in-residence Judy Leonard will present a music-based multi-cultural program to help children prepare for their Olympic Field Day celebration.

Post school celebrates Dr. Seuss' birthday

Back in the days when reading skills focused on Dick and Jane playing with the dog Spot, an imaginative author and illustrator set the literary world spinning with a nonsense book containing a handful of words about a cat in a hat.

Dr. Seuss' tangled tongue twisters began a literary movement toward using internal rhyme to emphasize syllable recognition, and added some fun to reading in the process, said longtime fan Barbara Culwell, third-grade teacher at Stowers School.

To commemorate the birth date of one of her favorite authors, Culwell wrote the play, "A Tribute to Dr. Seuss," which her students at Stowers School recently presented.

Seuss, who died in 1991, would have been 91 years old March 2. During his long career, the man born as Theodor Seuss Geisel wrote under a number of pen names including Theo Seuss, Dr. Theophrastis Seuss, H2SO4 and Theo Le Sieg.

Culwell said she grew up enjoying the antics of the well-known "Cat in the Hat" and also read other works such as "Horton Hatches the Egg" and "Mr. Brown Can Moo, Can You?"

Culwell said she loves the words of Seuss as well as the distinctive illustrations featuring numerous make-believe animals.

"His father was a zookeeper. Some say that's why he developed such an interest in animals," she said.

Using the same distinctive style employed by Seuss, Culwell's tribute consisted of rhyming verses emphasizing self-esteem and centering around the fictitious "Youville."

In Youville, everyone is a winner, Culwell said, and each group of students were able to discuss their own talents.

For example, the young artists in her class presented the rhyme,

"Some of us are very artistic,
We're talented with paper and pen,
Maybe someday we'll be famous,
Enter a contest and win."

As the students recited their parts in front of a stage set of colorful Seuss characters, parents and visitors joined students in other grades for the production.

Family member Sheila Long said her son Andrew had been looking forward to the production.

"He's really excited because he's Dr. Seuss," said Long, who regularly reads Seuss books aloud to her children.

Long grew up with Seuss, then began introducing her own children to the works of this prolific writer whose writing is timeless, she said.

In the words of Culwell,

"We love your books and the stories you've told,
And to us, Dr. Seuss,
You'll never grow old."

Nominations wanted for volunteer awards

Tri-Community Directors of Volunteer Services

Wanted: Generous hearts, helping hands and people who work for smiles. National Volunteer Week is on the way, and the Tri-Community Directors of Volunteer Services is going to award four people and organizations for their outstanding volunteer work.

This year, National Volunteer Week will be April 23 to 29. The Tri-Community Directors of Volunteer Services — representing Columbus, Fort Benning and Phenix City — will host a kick-off, with an awards ceremony and a fashion show ("Volunteers are in Fashion") at Gayfers' court in Peachtree Mall. This event will take place April 23 at 3 p.m. The mayors of both Columbus and Phenix City, as well as the commanding general of Fort Benning, are expected to attend. Members of the tri-community — Columbus, Fort Benning and Phenix City — are invited and can nominate some organization or someone for one of the following awards:

• Organization — This award will be presented to an organization within the tri-community area that has successfully provided consistent and effective volunteer service.

• Ocie Mae Harris Memorial Award— This award will be presented to an individual from the tri-community area who has provided volunteer service in a significant manner to one organization for 15 consecutive years. The individual must be actively involved at the present. This individual must be making a major contribution to improving the community and his or her volunteer organization.

• Youth Volunteer Service Award — This award will be presented to an individual from the tri-community area who has successfully promoted or supported volunteerism. The nominee must be a member of the tri-community. He or she must be a volunteer and must be 17 or older.

• Community Award — This award will be presented to an individual from the tri-community area who has successfully promoted or supported volunteerism. The nominee must be a member of the tri-community. He or she must be a volunteer or volunteer director. This individual cannot be a member of the Tri-Community Directors of Volunteer Services.

All nominations are welcome and the criteria for each award is on the back of the nomination form. Nomination forms may be obtained from The Medical Center or from the United Way. The deadline for submission of forms is today.

Parents better themselves with training

By Bettie S. Harris
Child Development Services

Feb. 9 and 10, several of the Child Development Services management staff and program assistants attended a training session at the Columbus Woodruff Activity Center. The session was "Strengthening Step Families" sponsored by the Pastoral Institute and the Bradley Center of St. Francis.

The program consisted of a full day of training with 10 management staff attending including Family Support Division Chief Rebecca Carrol and Child Development Services Coordinator Jennifer Williams. Elizabeth Einstein was the presenter for both days. Feb. 9 she took the group through "The Step Family Journey." Participants who attended the workshop were used as hands-on models to better understand the journey, which consisted of both positives and negatives of a step family.

During the workshop sessions, participants divided into groups and role modeled situations and presented feedback to the entire group. For some participants, the purpose was to gain a better insight to enhance what they already knew. This helped them in their daily job of working and dealing with step families at the Child Development Centers and working with family enrollment and education in forming a parent-staff relationship.

The CDS can offer information to parents who have remarried and can also offer skills from what was presented to help families with challenges and present skills to help them toward success, especially working with children.

Circus, symphony, special events tickets available from USO drawings

United Service Organizations

Service men and women can get tickets to events such as plays, the symphony, the circus and sporting events to military personnel through drawings conducted by the United Service Organizations.

In the case of a large number of tickets to an event, USO will also distribute the tickets to military installation liaisons on a rotating basis.

To be included in this ticket drawing, interested persons should enter on a four by six-inch postcard, one postcard per person (more than one entry or an entry with a larger postcard will result in disqualification).

On the postcard, type or print your name, rank, duty station and unit, and duty and home telephone numbers. In addition, date the postcard and include your signature for verification.

Winners of tickets will be notified as soon as possible prior to the event. Tickets must be picked up at location and by the time stated by the USO. Failure to do so will result in disqualification for future tickets. Personnel have the right to refuse tickets without disqualification for future tickets.

Mail postcard entries to: USO "Tickets 95," care of USO of Georgia, P.O. Box 20963, Atlanta, Ga. 30320.

The USO is a not-for-profit agency, supported by contributions from the public and donations through the United Way and Combined Federal Campaign.

RENTAL CAR NEWS
"Car makers worried that consumers are getting too much of a good thing are looking to curb the number of very-low mileage former rental cars sent to car lots."
WALL STREET JOURNAL
"Rental cars are new enough that they're still covered by warranties, and they're cheap, because the automakers give fleet buyers huge discounts," says David E. Davis, Jr., Automobile magazine's publishing director. "More and more in the past three months I hear people say, 'Gee, I can get last year's model with only a few thousand miles on it for thousands less."

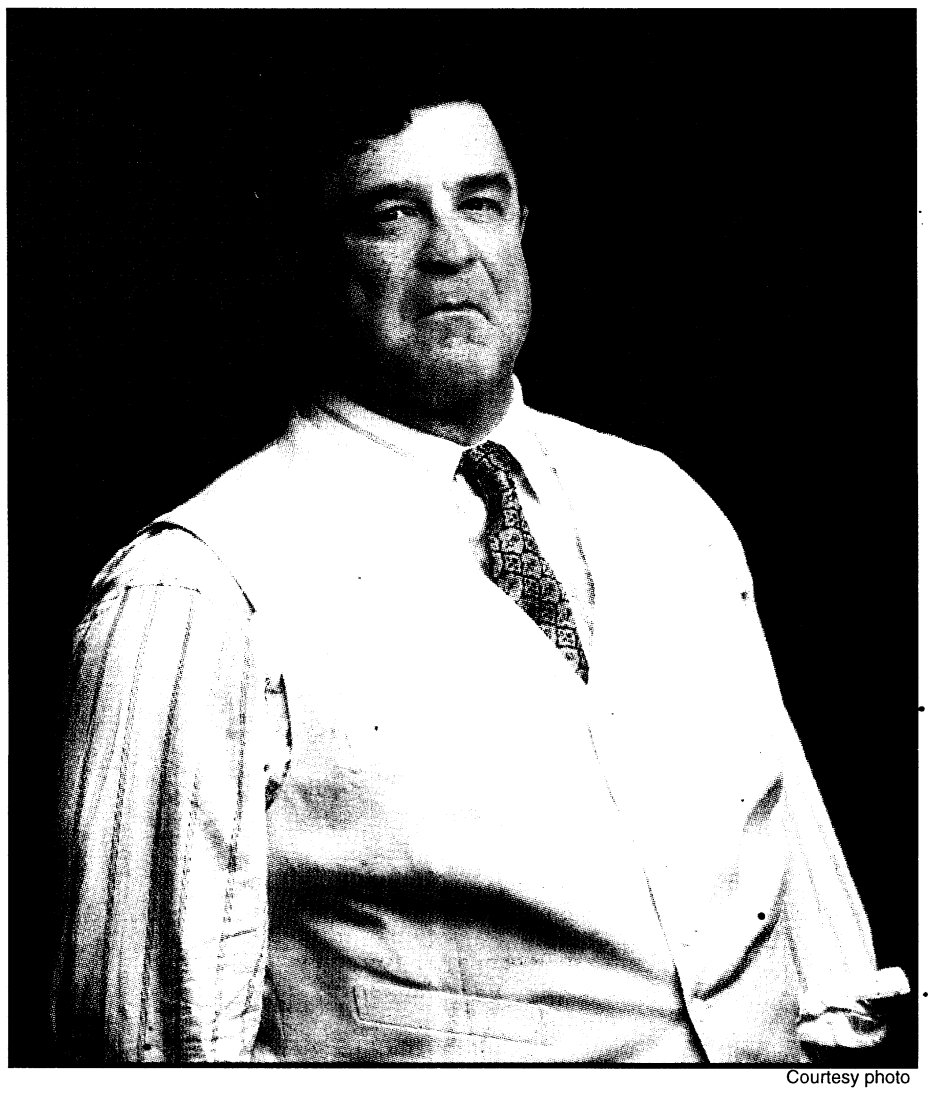
Your Guide to Prime-Time TV: Cable and Broadcast Schedules

John Goodman is politician Huey Long

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services



His movie roles have ranged from Babe Ruth to Fred Flintstone, and this week, John Goodman adds another colorful character to his resume.

SPOTLIGHT

Still seen weekly as "Roseanne's" husband, the actor is both the star and — for the first time in his career — one of the producers of "Kingfish: A Story of Huey P. Long," a new biographical drama about the powerful Depression-era politician that has its debut showing Sunday on cable's TNT.

Written by film veteran Paul Monash ("Stalin"), the teleplay examines the fierce loyalty that the Democratic and charismatic Long's populist stance generated among his followers, from the time he was elected governor of Louisiana in 1928 to his 1935 assassination. Though his "Share-the-Wealth Society" was received widely and warmly by those who invited having a minimum income guaranteed to every American family, it also made enemies for Long in the political and economic sectors ... some of whom challenged his 1932 election to the U.S. Senate, citing his alleged misuse of his home state's money.

Filmed largely on location, the profile also features Ann Dowd (as Long's wife Rose), Matt Craven ("K-2," "Indian Summer"), Bob Gunton ("The Shawshank Redemption," HBO's current "In Pursuit of Honor"), Anne Heche ("O, Pioneers!") and veteran singer-songwriter Hoyt Axton.

John Goodman

"It was decided on TNT's part that they wanted to do a movie about Long," the genial Goodman explains of his involvement in the project, "and they contacted me, but I felt I was not the right actor to cast in the role. When they offered me a producer's credit, I said, 'Well, maybe I'll help you find someone.' I had been interested in Huey Long for a while because of my love for all things Louisiana, so I suggested a couple of (performers') names, but (the TNT executives) weren't interested. Once we got the written script, I complied with their wishes (to star in the picture), but it was interesting to be on the end of hiring a director and other actors. I'd like to do it again sometime, on somebody else's dime."

What: "Kingfish: A Story of Huey P. Long"
When: Sunday on TNT

Goodman gives much credit for the way "Kingfish" has turned out to director Thomas Schlamme, husband of actress Christine Lahti (who starred for her spouse in an earlier TNT movie, "Crazy From the Heart"). "He just fired everybody up, right from the first meeting," Goodman claims. "After he walked out the door, we were just slack-jawed and decided, 'Let's call his agent now, before he gets home.'" Goodman feels that using actual New Orleans and Baton Rouge locations also was essential to the final product, though he reports, "They were talking about doing it in Georgia, which certainly is closer to (the headquarters of) the Turner organization (which owns TNT), but it wouldn't have saved them a dime. Huey Long was integral to Louisiana, and vice versa.

DoD finalizes plans, announces 10-division Army

By Caejar A. Cox
USAIC Public Affairs Office

First there were 18 divisions, then there were 12 ... and now the Army's ready to delete two more from the standing list.

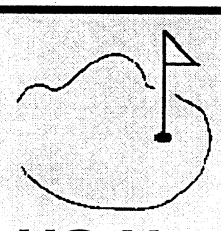
Watch "Fort Benning Today" to see a special report on what units will remain in the 10-division Army.

Some Military Police on Fort Benning are currently working on a project that will soon give the Fort Benning Information Center a facelift.

USAIC-TV Schedule
USAIC-TV operates 24 hours a day on post cable Channel 3.

Watch "Fort Benning Today" to find out more about the MP's self-help project.

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel announces post events and post movie listings, and it offers free classified advertisements on "Fort Benning Update," a community information service.



Anyone who lives on post and subscribes to Fort Benning Cable can watch USAIC-TV on Channel 3, 24 hours a day.

Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:25, 7:55, 8:25 and 8:55 on WLTZ-TV 38.

'Variations on a Theme'

Not your everyday stuff — Columbus Museum features early American graphics in new exhibit

The Columbus Museum

"Variations on a Theme" will be featured at the Columbus Museum through May 14.

The exhibit, serial images in 20th century American graphic arts, features modern lithographs, wood engravings, serigraphs, watercolors and photographs selected from the museum's permanent collection and a local private collection.

The exhibit is sponsored by Mead Coated Board Division as part of a three-year commitment to support the conservation of the museum's works on paper.

The 63 works in the exhibition will provide an opportunity for visitors to study the ways in which artists examine and rework favorite design schemes over the course of a career, as well as artists' exploration of series of related images as single expressive units.

Artists in the exhibition include Robert Indiana, Abraham Walkowitz, Alma Thomas, Leonard Baskin, William Christenberry, George Dudley, Seymour Lipton and Josef Albers.

Museum

movies

Dumb & Dumber — Jim Carrey portrays an inspired dimwit who with his equally slow friend is on a cross-country adventure to return a suitcase full of money to its rightful owner. (Off-color humor)

Ready To Wear — This star-studded comedy is about the French fashion industry shot on location in Paris during the 1994 fall fashion shows. (Language and nudity)

Little Women — A retelling of Louisa May Alcott's Classic novel of the March sisters growing up in New England during the 1860s. (Two uses of mild language)

IQ — In this romantic comedy, Albert Einstein tries to fix up his intellectual snob niece with a garage mechanic. (Some mild language)

Richie Rich — Macaulay Caulkin portrays the world's richest kid in this adaptation of the hallowed Harvey Comics series. (Mild violence and language)

Houseguest — In his movie debut, Sinbad plays a scam artist on the run from his latest failed scheme. He falls into the company of a lawyer and starts up a new con, telling the man he's his long lost childhood buddy. (Language, double-entendre humor and some comic violence)

Bad company — Laurence Fishburne is the CIA agent fallen from grace while Ellen Barkin is the seductive head of an industrial spy ring. (Some graphic shootings, strong sexuality and language)

Murder in the First — Based on a 1930s event, this courtroom drama follows an inexperienced public defender as he develops a radical defense for his client, who has committed murder while incarcerated in Alcatraz. (Strong images of prison brutalities, sexuality and language)

State parks offer opportunity for horsin' around

Georgia State Parks & Historic Sites

Franklin D. Roosevelt State Park has an idea for those who want to get away from the hustle and bustle of the city.

The "City Slickers Overnight Trail Ride" is a horseback riding and camping experience ideal for families, groups of friends or business retreats.

Horse lovers of all ages and abilities can trade in their cars for the night to take this guided trail ride across Pine Mountain, sleep next to a roaring camp fire, eat breakfast under a sunrise, and head back home later in the morning. The overnight trail rides are available seven days a week.

Experienced trail guides will answer questions along the way and point out different aspects of the trail.

This nature adventure costs $60 per person and includes horse rental and — if you don't want to sleep under the stars — shelter. Participants must arrive at the FDR riding stables by 3 p.m. and bring their own food.

Pots, pans, utensils and several grills are provided. Preregistration is required at least two weeks in advance.

Riders under the age of 18 must be accompanied by an adult.

For more information or to register, call the park at (706) 628-4533.

Hard Labor Creek State Park also has horseback riding specials. Horses can be rented for the day at a cost of $10 ($12 for an overnight trip).

The park has stables, 13 miles of riding trails and camping for riders and their horses.

Hard Labor Creek State Park is located off I-20 in Rutledge, Ga. Contact the site at (706) 557-3001 for more information.

Georgia State Parks and Historic Sites are operated by the Georgia Department of Natural Resources.

A $2 park pass fee is required for entrance into the state parks; annual passes can be purchased for $25 at the sites or by calling the main parks office at (404) 656-3530.

Pierce to join Berube in Springer's production of comedy 'Greater Tuna'

Springer Opera House

Springer director Paul R. Pierce will play Thurston Wheelis on the company's Southeastern tour of the comedy satire, "Greater Tuna." Rick Berube will play opposite Pierce as Arles Struvie.

The Springer Theatre On Tour hit the road March 2 for a six-week tour of 16 cities in Alabama, Georgia, Florida, North and South Carolina.

The Springer will return to Columbus Saturday for a special one-night stand on the Springer mainstage.

Pierce and Berube will be forced to be both actors and quick-change artists in this outrageous cult-comedy favorite that comprises a typical day in Tuna, Texas, the Lone Star state's "third-smallest city."

In fact, a team of lightning-fast "dressers," Megan Duckworth and Matt Bonaker, will help the actors transform into the 20 or so oddballs who represent the population of the "entire greater Tuna area" — men, women, children and farm animals.

Using as its framework the news reports from a low-power radio station (275 watts), this award-winning comedy covers a day in which the local judge dies under mysterious circumstances, the Smut Snatchers of the New Order meet to censor "Romeo and Juliet" and R.R. Snavely spots a UFO shaped like a burrito. While the Tuna Little Theatre tries to perform "My Fair Lady" with the scenery and costumes from "South Pacific," the one-man Humane Society launches a campaign to rescue homeless ducks.

"Greater Tuna" is the brainchild of Jason Williams and Joe Sears, who first performed the show and created the characters, and Ed Howard, who directed the New York production that took the theater world by storm 12 years ago and has broken box office records coast-to-coast ever since.

The trio originally wrote the show as a vehicle to create employment for themselves after they found their theatre careers sputtering in Austin, Texas. They performed "Greater Tuna" in an abandoned movie house and it soon became a cult favorite, attracting audiences from all over the state. Before long, it caught the attention of Houston's famous Alley Theatre, which produced the show in its studio theatre.

From there, "Greater Tuna" leapt to New York's Circle in the Square where it enjoyed sell-out houses for five years then toured extensively nationwide for the next five years. In 1991, Williams, Sears and Howard unveiled their sequel, "A Tuna Christmas," which has ignited a new firestorm of interest in "Greater Tuna"'s whacky population.

"Greater Tuna" is one of those shows that comes around once in lifetime," Pierce said. "There's nothing else like it. If you're a Southerner, or even a Texan, you can't help but laugh out loud at these characters. That's because you know them all. In fact, if you're not related to them, married to them or live next door to them, then you probably are one of them. This show is sure-fire crowd-pleaser."

Tickets for "Greater Tuna" are $13. 1994-95 Springer subscribers and Springer Society members receive a $2 discount.

Reservations may be made at the Springer Box Office at 327-3688 For group sales discount information, call 324-5714.

Hospital receives accreditation

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Martin Army Community Hospital has been approved by the American College of Radiology's Mammography Accreditation Program, certifying it met the highest requirements and was assessed by a panel of breast cancer detection experts.

The reviewers evaluated staff qualifications, equipment, quality control and quality assurance programs at MACH in order to accredit it. Accreditation must be renewed every three years.

Only 6,000 facilities have been accredited nationwide in the six-year history of the program.

It was started in response to concerns by radiologists, other medical organizations and the public.

Only qualified personnel perform and interpret mammograms and only equipment specifically designed for mammography is used.

The goal is to ensure women receive the best mammographic examination with the lowest possible risk.

Land of Oz

Three lead characters, the Lion, Tinman and Scarecrow, take a bow as Faith Middle School students took more than 500 guests for a visit down the yellow brick road to the land of Oz at a performance of the Wizard of Oz March 16 and 17. The play was the school's first dinner theater production, which was a coordinated effort among teachers in the elective department; students who were servers, actors, stage hands and musicians; and members of the cafeteria staff who catered the dinner.

Improvements on horizon at

Martin Army Comm Hospital

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Martin Army Community Hospital is switching to a computerized medical information system designed to provide significant improvements to the efficiency of post health care.

Designed and developed by the Science Applications International Corporation for the Department of Defense, the Composite Health Care System will connect all post medical facilities, including medical departments, hospital wards, clinics, laboratories and pharmacies to a single computer network.

From streamlining patient appointment bookings and hospital admissions to simplifying access to patient records to speeding up the filling of prescriptions, the new computer system will yield numerous improvements to post health care beneficiaries, said Carol Stallings, chief of the hospital's Patient Appointments Branch.

"This is the greatest thing I have ever seen in the 27 years I've worked in hospitals," Stallings said. "The new system offers so much more and is very flexible. We can customize the software specifically for Fort Benning's needs."

When the pharmacy goes on line in June, for example, patients will no longer have to carry a written prescription to the pharmacy to have it filled.

"Prescription information will be sent through computer directly to the pharmacy, thus reducing waiting time. Patients will still be given a written prescription as a backup, however," she said.

Other benefits of CHCS include:

- Immediate access to and secure maintenance of personal medical records
- Fewer repeated tests and examinations through improved reporting and data management
- Improved patient appointment scheduling and reduced overbooking
- Faster processing for labwork.

Not only will patients benefit from CHCS, Stallings said, but all hospital personnel will enjoy the benefit of improved efficiency in administrative procedures, from reduced paperwork to improved drug inventories, she said.

> "This is the greatest thing I have ever seen in the 27 years I've worked in hospitals. The new system offers so much more and is very flexible."
> — Carol Stallings
> Chief, Patient Appointments Branch

"Overall, CHCS means shorter waits for patients, faster reporting of test results and a significant improvement in the use of our medical resources and the quality of our patient care," she said.

Although many of the benefits should be immediate, Stallings said she anticipates a period of about a year to get the system completely functional and working correctly.

"This is a completely new system to all of us," she said. "Like anything new, it will take a while to work out the kinks and get used to it."

Implementation of the new system has been going on for nearly six months, she said, including the custom designing of computer templates that form the system by Fort Benning master schedulers who frequently worked overtime.

The hospital's Department of Medicine was the first to go online with the system Monday. Other departments and clinics will be gradually added through June 5.

"Our main focus is accessibility to care," Stalling said. "CHCS should significantly improve the quality of post health care. It is something we are extremely excited about and we want our customers to be just as excited because CHCS is for them."

Army halts payment for moves to post

By Jan Wesner Childs
Special to The Bayonet©

The Army will no longer foot the bill when personnel who live off post choose to move into government quarters.

The new rule went into effect March 3 and is an effort to enforce an existing Department of Defense policy, according to Fort Benning Housing Chief Ken Hankins.

"The joint travel policy regulation states that unless you're mandatorily assigned, the government cannot pay for your move," Hankins said Tuesday.

The new regulation states that "service members who reside off post and take possession of their furnishings but who still want to move to on-post government quarters must do so at their own expense."

The Army will still pay for the move if it's within 270 days of the permanent change of station and if the soldier has not taken possession of household goods. Goods can be stored at government expense for up to 270 days.

At most duty stations, soldiers are put on a waiting list for housing. The wait for quarters here ranges from 30 days or less for key and essential officers to 16 months for enlisted personnel.

The new rule applies whether professional movers are used or the soldier decides to do a "do-it-yourself" move. Hankins pointed out that U-Haul trailers and trucks are available for rent on post.

Also under the new policy, posts that have trouble filling housing units can no longer force soldiers to move on post. Only key people like battalion commanders can be required to live on post, Hankins said.

Although the new rules went into effect March 3, the Army will pay for moves scheduled before then.

The policy is in a six-month trial period and not all posts are enforcing it, Hankins said.

at a glance

What: Payment for moves to post halted. Service members who reside off post and take possession of their furnishings but who still want to move to on-post government quarters must do so at their own expense.

Effective: March 3

Questions? Call Housing at 545-3803

One reason for the changes is to save money. The policy will save Fort Benning about $200,000 a year, according to Hankins.

The new rules are also expected to reduce the housing waiting list and decrease repairs on quarters because there should be less turnover. Presumably, people who pay to move on post will stay there.

Post residents had mixed reactions to the new policy. Sgt. Dean Villanueva, a resident of Bouton Heights-Davis Hill, moved into quarters about nine months after coming here from California.

The government paid for his move, and he said it should continue to be that way.

"I think they should look out for their soldiers," Villanueva said.

Sgt. Chad Simmons, who lives in Ragin-Norton Court, said rules governing moves should be tightened to prevent people taking advantage. But, Simmons said, cutting funding for local moves is not the answer.

"Why put a guy deeper in debt?" he said. "We don't get paid enough as it is."

Laura Fray, another Ragin-Norton Court resident, said the new rules are a good idea.

"I think it's an expense that could be cut," Fray said. "The money helps out but it's not a big deal to move from Columbus to Fort Benning."

Budget calls for civilian cuts, 2.4 percent pay raise

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

The president's proposed fiscal 1996 Department of Defense budget calls for civil service employee rolls to drop to 828,600 by Sept. 30, 1996.

Civilian end strength for fiscal 1995 is set for 866,900.

The proposed budget would also fund a 2.4 percent pay increase for civilians.

By 2001, the department will employ about 729,400 civilians. For comparison, 1.1 million civilians worked for DoD at its post-Vietnam peak in 1987.

DoD is reducing its civilian and military work forces equally during this decade by about a third, according to Diane M. Disney, deputy assistant secretary of defense for civilian personnel.

However, military cuts were sharper in the early 1990s, while civilian cuts will dominate the latter part of the decade.

"Civilian cuts lagged behind the military at first," Disney said. "When you close a base you can send the military members elsewhere immediately, but some civilians must stay behind to turn off the lights.

> By 2001, the Department of Defense will employ about 729,400 civilians. For comparison, 1.1 million civilians worked for DoD at its post-Vietnam peak in 1987

Those civilians will be going during the next few years."

Disney said DoD will draw down supervisory and managerial positions more rapidly than others, although no numerical goals have been set.

To ease some pain from these cuts, Disney said, the fiscal 1996 budget includes $489 million for separation incentives to civilian personnel. The figure includes the cost of continued health benefits.

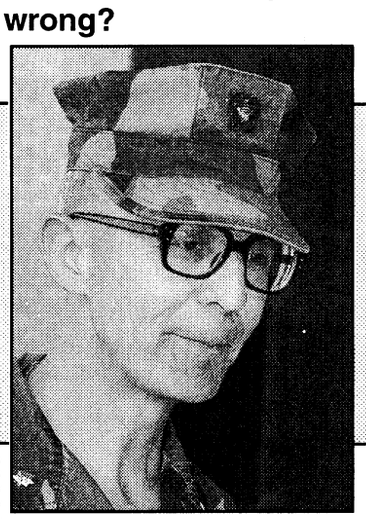
Under the Priority Placement Program DoD placed about 10,500 civilians in other jobs in 1994, saving them from involuntary separation.

To create placement opportunities and minimize involuntary separations, Disney said, DoD has been using voluntary separation incentives.

During fiscal 1994 the department offered buyouts worth up to $25,000 to some 22,000 employees in surplus skill categories or in areas facing a reduction in force.

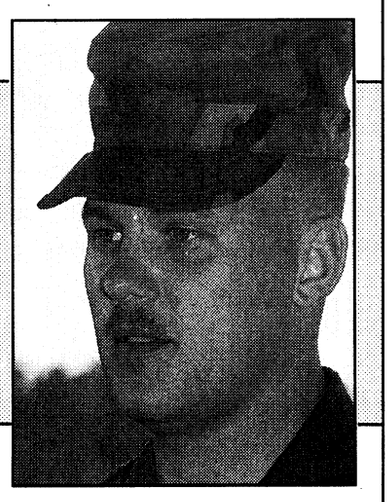
"Our No. 1 priority is to manage the drawdown as humanely as possible," said Disney. "That's why we work so hard to help people find new jobs, be trained for new jobs and enter retirement comfortably. We are also very much committed to examining how work is done so we can redesign activities to improve efficiency and effectiveness."

The proposed budget doesn't specify whether the 2.4 percent increase will fund a national general schedule increase, locality pay or a combination of the two.



The Clinton administration plans a 3.1 percent civilian pay raise in fiscal 1997. However, it would like to have congressional authority for reduced civilian pay increases after 1997.

Under current law, national general schedule raises must be .5 percent less than the Employment Cost Index, the increase in wages for private industry.



If Congress approves lower raises, the administration plans a 2.1 percent raise in 1998.

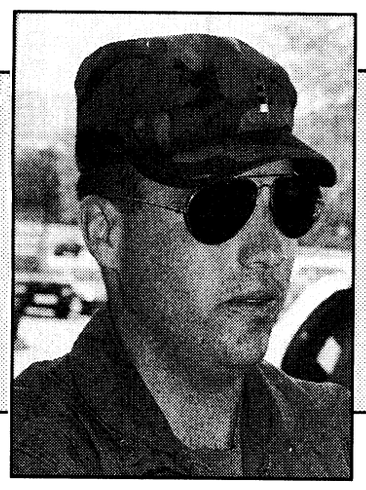
How would you handle an on-the-spot correction if the person giving the correction is wrong?

Maj. Larry D. Kalsow, U.S. Navy, 2nd Light Armor Reconnaissance Battalion, Camp Lejeune, N.C. — "I would tactfully, and I stress tactfully, point out my evidence for how I know he is wrong in private."



Staff Sgt. Michael A. Timm, Company D, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment — "I would inform that person that he was wrong. I would tell them the correct way."

Sgt. John L. Barnett, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 317th Engineer Battalion — "I would ask him to show it to me in the regulations. If it is not correct, I wouldn't do it."

Maj. John R. Houser, U.S. Medical Department Activity — "I would do what I was told because that person outranks me. I would later call the person's supervisor and let them know what happened."

Chief Warrant Officer 2 Joseph R. Rahn, 124th Aviation, Hunter Army Airfield, Fort Stewart, Ga. — "I would politely correct them and give them my phone number so they could call me if they had any questions."

Sgt. Ricky N. Paige, Headquarters and Headquarters Company — "I would ask the individuals where they got their information from. Then I would tell them that they need do some more research."

Corrections

Make sure you're right before calling soldiers on carpet

By Eric Farris
Fort Lewis, Wash.

commentary

No one likes to be wrong. This is one of life's not-so-secret secrets.

There is only one thing worse than being wrong yourself — to be corrected by a person of superior rank who is not correct.

This happens far too often, in my experience. I've been told my hair was too long (it met the standard), that I needed to shave off sideburns (they were within limits), that my cold-weather Matterhorn boots needed to be polished (polishing ruins them), and that there is no Army regulation against putting your hands in your pockets (need I say more?).

My superiors have offered me various other "fractured facts" in the course of my Army career — all incorrect.

Most recently, a sergeant I happened to meet decided the rank was not properly positioned on my collar. I nodded in submission to his suggestion. What else can a private first class do unless he happens to be carrying the appropriate regulation?

But I knew he was wrong. In fact, if I had repositioned the rank insignia, my own noncommissioned officer would have been upset at my ignorance of the military uniform.

I don't mind being corrected when I'm wrong and someone else is right. In fact, I often appreciate it. I like when someone points out that food is stuck in my teeth or whatever.

But it's very frustrating to be given erroneous information by someone of higher rank, someone I'm supposed to respect and admire, someone who is supposed to know more about soldiering than a private first class.

That incident made an impression on me, and not a good one. I wonder how many similar incidents happen to other soldiers. I wonder what effect they have on esprit de corps.

> "It's very frustrating to be given erroneous information by someone of higher rank, someone I'm supposed to respect and admire, someone who is supposed to know more about soldiering than a private first class."
> — Pfc. Eric Farris
> Fort Lewis, Wash.

It was a good lesson, though. It taught me that if you're going to make corrections, it's important to be right. Peons like me don't need to be ridden up one side by you because you think you are right ... then down the other by someone else, who is.

With all due respect, there is a saying for people who think they know it all but don't:

"It's better to remain silent and be thought a fool than to open your mouth and remove all doubt."

letters

What happened to respecting the flag?

What a disgrace personally, professionally and internationally to see families blatantly disregard and ignore the nightly retreat.

As I was walking home along Lumpkin Road, retreat sounded and I, as all people should, immediately assumed the position of attention. Did I do this because the regulation tells me to do it? No! I did this out of respect to those soldiers and friends who have fallen on our battlefields defending our freedom and values. I did this because I wanted to.

To take one to two minutes each day out of my schedule and to pay homage and respect to our dead comrades is not asking very much from us.

But, on this particular day on Lumpkin Road, while standing at attention, rendering a hand salute (along with two other soldiers out of uniform) there were families in their yards enjoying their conversations and having a grand ole time. As well, there were at least four cars that passed me. What a shame and shame on them!

I mentioned that this act of disrespect is an international disgrace as well. Because there are many international students on this post, some living along Lumpkin Road, who observe this tragic display of disrespect, I have been in Latin America and I can tell you that the people there take their flag, national anthem and respect to their country very seriously.

In Germany when I was there, the same respect existed. Why can't the people of the United States, especially soldiers and their families who should have the greatest concern for this demonstration of respect, render honors to the nation, the flag and our fallen comrades when they hear retreat? Is two minutes asking too much?

I suppose this is why I put my uniform on each day, to defend this great nation, so people of a free democratic nation can exercise their right to disrespect the very symbol that made them free.

— Thomas E. Barnes

Garrison Commander's Office's response:

Army Regulation 600-25 with change 9 is the governing regulation for actions to be taken when sounding reveille and retreat. AR 600-25 applies to military and civilians on Fort Benning.

The following guidance is taken from AR 600-25, Appendix A:

Reveille and Retreat: Military personnel in uniform (with or without headgear and in formation) — execute parade rest at the command of officer or NCO in charge, remain at parade rest until given attention by officer or NCO in charge, execute present arms at the command of the officer or noncommissioned officer in charge, execute order arms at the command of the officer or NCO in charge.

Military personnel in uniform (with or without headgear) not in formation, at the first note of music, face the flag (or music if flag is not in view) and render hand salute. End salute on the last note of music.

The same common sense approach applies to both military and civilians when in civilian attire (with or without headgear). When in civilian attire, the right hand should be placed over the heart. If headgear is being worn, it should be removed and placed in the left hand down to the side.

Personnel driving should stop their automobiles, applying appropriate safety precautions, then follow the procedures listed above.

Remember, not only are we showing respect to the flag, we are showing respect and honoring all the sacrifices of soldiers and civilians who have given the ultimate sacrifice in defense of their country.

Garrison operations sergeant

Open season for life insurance set

American Forces Information Service

The Office of Personnel Management will offer an open season May 22 to July 21 to give more federal employees access to new living benefits in the Federal Employees' Group Life Insurance program.

During the open season, enrollees can sign up only for basic coverage. They may not elect options increasing the value of their policies.

Only current employees are eligible to participate in the open season.

The living benefits feature, known in the insurance industry as an accelerated benefit, is an insurance payment to terminally ill policyholders prior to death.

A living benefits payment can be a financial lifeline for individuals and their families who incur large, uncovered expenses during illnesses, officials said.

The Living Benefits Act, Public Law 103409, authorizing the new feature becomes effective July 25. The law limits payment of benefits to workers diagnosed with a condition giving them a life expectancy of nine months or less. It authorizes payment of the basic benefit to these workers.

The dollar value of the basic benefit is equal to an employee's annual salary rounded to the next thousand dollars, plus $2,000. For example, the basic benefit for an employee earning $34,800 would be $37,000.

The basic benefit for retired employees is based on their salary at retirement and reduced over time to not less than 25 percent of their basic insurance when they retired.

Terminally ill federal employees or retirees will be able to receive their full basic benefit, minus only a nominal charge to replace lost interest to the life insurance program.

Current employees may elect a partial living benefit in multiples of $1,000, allowing survivors to receive the remainder at their death.

However, employees who elect a partial living benefit cannot receive future living payments.

The new law also allows employees and retirees to make an irrevocable assignment of all their life insurance coverage to any persons, firms or trusts.

Agencies will receive guidelines on conducting the open season in April.

What: Federal Employees' Group Life Insurance open season

When: May 22 to July 21

"By making a living benefit available, we can provide some measure of financial comfort to our friends and colleagues," said OPM Director Jim King. "At a time of great personal adjustment, individuals and their loved ones should have peace of mind and not be burdened with other concerns."

The federal government offers no-physical required life insurance to new employees.

OPM rarely offers opportunities for employees to change their minds once they decline the insurance.

Open seasons are offered only due to major changes in benefits or premiums.

Airborne Awards Festival to feature memorial svc

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning's participation in the four-day 18th annual Airborne Awards Festival will feature a 10. a.m. memorial service April 27 at the Airborne Walk on Eubanks Field.

The 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment, will host the service.

Guest speaker at the memorial service will be retired Lt. Gen. Richard J. Seitz, who joined the 517th Parachute Infantry Regiment at Camp Mackall, N.C., and deployed to Europe during World War II as a battalion commander. He later commanded the 82nd Airborne Division.

Members of the original Test Platoon of parachutists, formed at Fort Benning in 1940, will be on hand for a day of activities along with other distinguished guests and many airborne veterans from all wars. Fraternal members of the airborne community, both retired and active duty are invited.

While here, festival members will visit the Airborne School, attend the memorial service at the Airborne Walk, observe an 11:15 a.m. Airborne-in-Action demonstration, including a jump by Fort Benning's command exhibition parachute team, the Silver Wings, on Eubanks Field, and attend a 1:45 p.m. jump and 2:30 p.m. graduation of the Basic Airborne Course at Fryar Drop Zone.

During the memorial ceremony, the youngest officer and enlisted airborne graduates will participate in the "Carry the Flame" mission. It represents the continuing spirit of airborne.

The 18th Airborne Awards Festival at the Airport Sheraton Hotel in Columbus April 26 through 28 highlights the Allied victory in World War II.

Many veterans of the airborne assault 50 years ago will be present at the festival. Several Medal of Honor recipients and airborne veterans of more recent wars and peacetime service will also attend. Some of these veterans visited Normandy this past summer in commemoration of the D-Day invasion of June 6, 1944.

AUSA to host job fair

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army will host a job fair in conjunction with Armed Forces Day again this year.

The job fair, which is open to soldiers, Department of the Army civilians and their family members, will be May 18 at the Main NCO Club, Building 2784, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

At last year's job fair, more than 50 national and local businesses were represented and approximately 1,700 people attended. This year, more than 300 business have been invited.

Persons needing assistance with resume preparation can make an appointment with the Army Career and Alumni Program, Building 2617, or the Army Community Service Family Member Employment Assistance Program, Building 2643.

Representatives from the Georgia Department of Labor, Army Career and Alumni Program and the Family Member Employment Assistance Program are working with AUSA to put on this event.

For more information or to make an appointment, call Mary Allen of ACAP at 545-7020 or 545-4892 or Shirley Jarrett of FMEAP at 545-6969.

Army chief of staff slated to speak at AUSA meeting

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Army Chief of Staff Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan will be the guest speaker at the winter membership meeting of the Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army Thursday.

The meeting will be at the Officers' Club with a social hour beginning at 6:30 p.m. in the Regimental Room followed by dinner in the Supper Club at 7:30.

"This will be a really special event," said Jim Gallagher, chapter executive vice president. "It is not often that military personnel get a chance to see and hear the chief of staff of the Army. This is a great opportunity."

Tickets are $15 and can be purchased through the individual post units. The dress code is Class A uniform for soldiers and coat and tie for civilians. The menu includes stuffed chicken breast, rice pilaf and chocolate mousse.

Gallagher said Sullivan is expected to deliver a "state-of-the union" style address about the Army, including the subjects of downsizing and digitization.

In addition, Sullivan will hand out the quarterly AUSA awards.

"We are expecting a sellout for the dinner," Gallagher said. "Buy your tickets early to make sure you can get a seat."

Special Forces recruiters to visit Fort Benning

U.S. Army Special Operations Command

FORT BRAGG, N.C. — Special Forces recruiters will be at Fort Benning April 3 to 7 to brief interested soldiers, officer and enlisted, on the Special Forces career field.

Briefings will be daily in Infantry Hall, Building 4, Room 60, from 10:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Recruiters are currently looking for soldiers to attend the Special Forces Assessment and Selection Course scheduled for September.

SFAS is a 21-day program to evaluate candidates' physical, mental and teamwork potential to make it through the Special Forces Qualification Course.

Specialists and corporals who have not attended the Primary Leadership Development Course may still apply for the career field, according to SF recruiters.

All applicants must pass the SF physical, be airborne qualified or volunteer for airborne school and possess, or be eligible for, a secret security clearance.

For more information, call SF recruiters at (910) 432-1818 or DSN 239-1818.

AAFES to remove used oil containers

Directorate of Public Works

The used oil collection containers are being removed from the Fort Benning Army and Air Force Exchange Services service stations.

Used oil can be taken to one of the following:

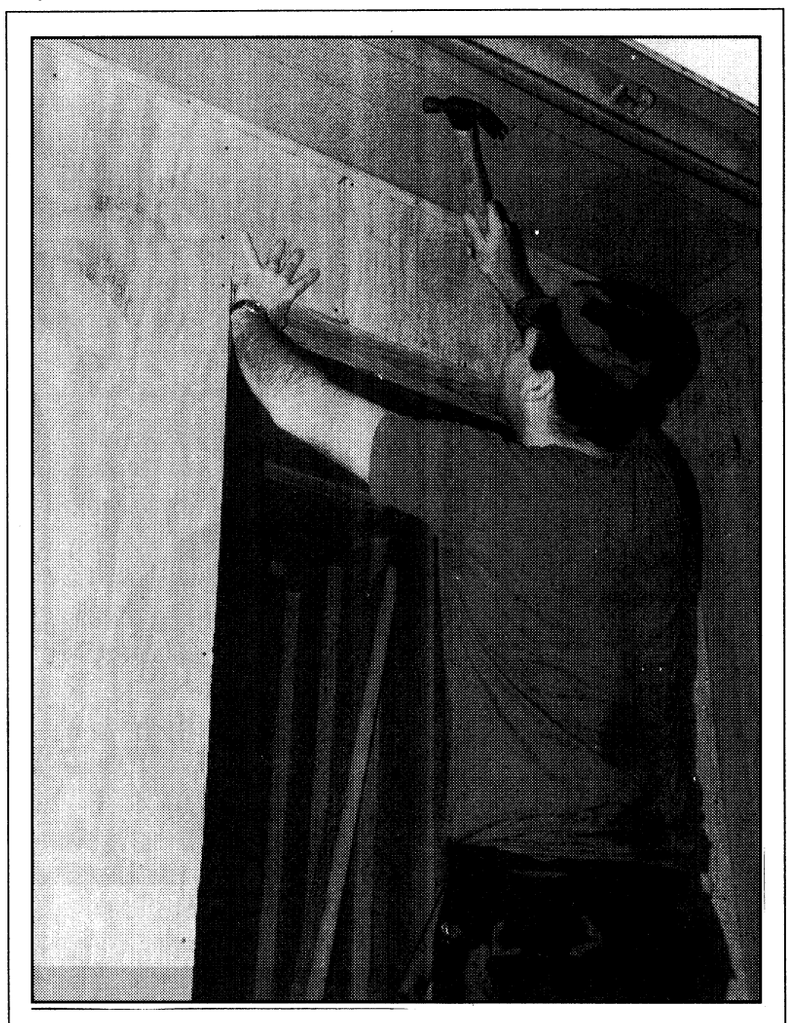
• Recycling Center, Building 4000, Villegas Street, Harmony Church. Operating hours are Monday through Friday 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. There is no charge for this service.

• Main Post Auto Crafts Shop, Building 2843, Way Street. Operating hours are Wednesday through Friday, 1:30 to 9 p.m., and Saturday and Sunday, 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. There is a fee for this service.

• Kelley Hill Auto Crafts Shop, Building 9064, Marne Road. Operating hours are Monday through Friday 1:30 to 9 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, holidays 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. There is a fee for this service.

AAFES has experienced severe problems with individuals leaving unauthorized waste in and around the containers, according to Mary Babbitt, general manager of AAFES.

"Improper management of waste oil can cause environmental problems and subject Fort Benning to large fines," said Walter Nichols, Solid Waste Program manager, Directorate of Public Works.



"Cooperation is needed by all individuals who change automobile oil to ensure proper oil recycling," Nichols said.

"It is very important that only used oil and filters be left at the collection containers," he continued. "Solvents, antifreeze, rags and batteries are not to be taken to these collection sites.

"Used oil must be poured into the used oil collection container." Nichols said. "The user's empty oil containers must be placed into a solid waste (garbage) container for disposal.

"Care should be taken to prevent oil spillage on the ground," he said.

Individuals changing oil in personal vehicles are required under U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 210-50, Installation Family Housing Management, to use the auto crafts facilities provided on post rather than changing the oil in parking lots, carports and yards of family housing.

Job fair for young people April 13 at Building 1056

Army Community Service

A youth job fair will be April 13 at Youth Services, Building 1056, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Sponsored by Army Community Service Family Member Employment Assistance Program and Youth Services, the job fair is designed to provide employment assistance and job referral services about vacancies on the installation and throughout Columbus and the Phenix City.

High school juniors, seniors and college students between the ages of 16 and 21 can attend the fair.

Local business representatives will be on site to receive applications, conduct on-the-spot screening and interviews.

Those participating will have the opportunity to greet business representatives and obtain information on the various job vacancies.

Participants will also be able to obtain information and assistance on various career programs offered by local educational institutions and the military.

More than 100 area businesses have been invited to participate.

Interested businesses may contact the Family Member Employment Assistance Program in order to participate.

Any youth interested in participating can contact the ACS FMEAP, at Building 2643, Soldiers' Plaza or the Indianhead Youth Center for registration information.

4th Battalion 41st Field Artillery to change commanders

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Command of the 4th Battalion, 41st Artillery Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized), will change hands March 31 during a 10 a.m. ceremony on Dickman Field in Harmony Church.

Lt. Col. Donald C. McGraw Jr., previously assigned as the operations officer, Division Artillery, 1st Infantry Division, Fort Riley, Kan., will take command from Lt. Col. William M. Bransford.

Bransford has commanded the 4th Battalion since April 1993. Under his command, the battalion underwent an. extensive modernization program, including the fielding of the M109A6 Paladin Howitzer, the initial fire support automation system, the palletized loading system and the new M992A2 field artillery ammunition supply vehicle.

Bransford was commissioned a second lieutenant of artillery from the U.S. Military Academy, West Point, N.Y., in 1974. He had previously been assigned as the director of the Department of Joint and Combined Operations, U.S. Army School of the Americas.

He has held a number of command and staff positions both in the United States and overseas, including command of an artillery battery at Fort Sill, Okla. He served as an instructor at the Artillery School and as a professor of English at the U.S. Military Academy. During Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm, he served as the deputy fire support coordinator of the 3rd Armored Division.

Bransford holds a master of arts degree from Emory University. His military schooling includes the Field Artillery Officer Basic and Advanced courses and the U.S. Army Command and Staff College.

Among his awards and decorations are the Bronze Star Medal, Meritorious Service Medal with one oak leaf cluster and the Army Commendation Medal with two oak leaf clusters.

He and his wife, Patricia Ann, have two children.

McGraw was commissioned in the field artillery from the U.S. Military Academy in 1979. He has had artillery assignments in Korea, Germany, Fort Stewart, Ga., and Fort Riley.

He is a graduate of the Field Artillery Basic and Advanced courses, the Amy Command and General Staff College and the School of Advanced Military Arts and Science from which he holds a master's degree in military arts and science.

His awards and decorations include the Meritorious Service Medal with three oak leaf clusters and Army Commendation Medal.

He has two sons, Patrick and Carl.

Video teletraining network honored

TRADOC News Service

FORT EUSTIS, Va. — The Army Training Support Center's Video Teletraining Network was recently recognized by the Society of Satellite Professionals International for its innovations in distance learning.

ATSC was awarded SSPIs Industry Innovator Award for 1995, the group's highest honor.

The Army started teletraining in 1982. One of the first schools to use VTT extensively was the Defense Language Institute, Monterey, Calif. DLI now has eight instructor sites broadcasting more than 15,000 hours of language training a year.

VTT capabilities are to the point where training can be delivered to soldiers while they are deployed overseas. Classes from the Infantry Officer Advanced Course and the Primary Leader Development Course are sent by satellite from Fort Benning and Fort Bliss, Texas.

What's new in Total Army Quality at Fort Benning? ...

A TAQ user group, that's what!

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

While the concept of Total Army Quality is not new at Fort Benning, a TAQ user group is.

Monday, the user group met at Building 1697 for the fourth time to promote TAQ across the installation by sharing information, ideas and success stories from participants. The group is comprised of TAQ users on post.

David L. Flo, Director of Resource Management, who shared his total commitment to quality, welcomed the attendees by saying, "We are still using TAQ principles— finding better ways to do the things that must be done on an everyday basis." Flo said that we are constantly improving our process because we believe in TAQ!

Col. Richard L. Rutledge, garrison commander, also shared his commitment to quality at Fort Benning with the attendees. "This is the way we are going to do business," he said. "These are exciting times. We must continue to push quality to attain the highest level of achievement and excellence in all activities, actions and decisions that we make."

Anita D. Langford, a safety and occupational health specialist at the Infantry Branch Safety Office and one of the speakers to share success stories, said, there are "keys to success," but TAQ users should first evaluate their work skills to see what changes are needed.

The Safety Office began by having commanders take ownership of situations, said Langford. Quality was integrated into the Safety Office and through teamwork they were better able to assist customers.

Customers became involved through process action teams and safety officers implemented encouraging rather than discouraging consultations, Langford said. Lastly, safety officers were empowered through quality training and TAQ, she said.

Helen Lenahan, supervisor of Officer Management Section/ Separations, Trainee Student Division talked about how her unit reduced its error rate.

In January 1993, the Trainee Student Division could not meet the 3 percent and below margin of error rate set by the Army. In fact, its margin of error was at 13 percent, its highest point.

By taking TAQ action to amend problems, Lenahan said they were able to reduce the division's error rate to 1.1 percent.

"TAQ works," Lenahan said.

The group is open to any unit on post that is a user of TAQ. The next meeting will be April 17 from 9 to 10 a.m. and will feature guest speaker Col. Robert L. Jordan, commander, 29th Infantry Regiment; location to be announced.

Free ACAP counseling available for military family members

By Mary Allen
Army Career and Alumni Program

The Army Career and Alumni Program's Transition Assistance Office conducts monthly scheduled preseparation briefings for soldiers who are getting out of the Army or retiring and transition counseling sessions to ease the stress related to the transition process.

All family members of personnel getting out of the military or retiring are eligible for more than approximately $1,000 of free counseling and training to improve self-esteem and build job seeking skills.

The ACAP TAO is designed to fulfill clients individual needs in order to assist them in making a smooth transition from the daily military lifestyle into the new civilian alumni community.

Transitioning services are available six months prior to getting out of the Army or retirement and extends to 60 days after separation. Military family members can take advantage of these services as needed on an individual basis and do not have to be accompanied by their sponsor.

At the TAO, a transition specialist is available to give each client personal attention in identification of needs and to answer questions regarding the transition process. ACAP clients receive an automated individual transition plan that enables them to make appointments with ease prior to separation.

Family members may also use the Georgia Department of Labor free course every Tuesday in Infantry Hall, Classroom 30, from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. This basic job search skills training course provides the foundation for job information. On Wednesday, the advanced course is taught as a one-day workshop on job search counseling by the Job Assistance Center.

For information or to schedule an appointment, call ACAP TAO, Building 2617, Soldiers' Plaza, at 545-4892 or 545-7009.

Post streetlights to be checked regularly

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

With 8,714 streetlights on post, changing the bulbs is not nearly as hard as keeping track of which ones need changing.

To promote better customer service and keep Fort Benning streets safely lighted at night, the Energy and Utilities Division of the Directorate of Public Works has implemented new measures to ensure that post streetlights are checked on a regular basis for needed repairs or bulb changings.

"In the past, we relied on calls from residents to inform us when a light needed to be repaired," said Roy Bethel, chief of the Energy and Utilities Division. "We still encourage calls but we are also now going to regularly and systematically check all post streetlights."

According to Bethel, Fort Benning has been divided into 12 areas. One area will be surveyed each week by the night emergency person.

"It's obviously more economical to conduct the inspection at night because it will be easy to spot lights that do not work," Bethel said. Nonfunctional lights will be marked with colored tape to assist the repair crews in finding them.

Bethel said a variety of disasters befall post street lights, from bulbs burning out to wires corroding to vandals shooting them out.

"In the interest of public safety, we want to make sure that the post's streetlights are always functioning correctly," Bethel said.

To report any problems with a streetlight, call DPW's service request number at 545-2135.

Faith History Club wins competition

The History Club form Faith Middle School at Fort Benning took first place in the district competition of National History Day. The theme of this year's competition is "Conflict and Compromise."

Team members Laura Cross, Hastings Galloway, James Wallace and Ami Wojdakowski presented a play based on research of President Jimmy Carter and his activities involving conflict resolution. Team advisers are Lee Strickland, Cindy Givens and Libbie Kurinec.

Two independent papers will go on to the state competition. Stephanie Fry won first place and Heather Ivey won second place for their papers on "Conflict and Compromise." Their teacher is Mary Barnette.

The Faith School winners will compete in the state competition at Clayton State College April 22.

Wilson to host Olympic program

On March 31 at 9:30 a.m., Wilson School students will be involved in an "Olympic Day in the School" kickoff program. Speakers will be retired Maj. Marcus Alexander from the Olympic Committee as well as an Olympian guest.

Other activities include a Parade f Flags and Parade of Sports which involve students at Wilson as well as an original rap on the Olympics done by a fifth grade class. The program will close with the song "We Are The World" sung by all classes.

School board to meet

The Fort Benning Schools' school board will meet Monday at noon in the Fort Benning Schools' administrative building conference room, 201 Custer Road, Building 2670. Copies of the agenda will be available at post schools today after noon.

Individuals wanting to attend this meeting can call 545-2500.

Used oil containers to be removed

The used oil collection containers are being removed from the Fort Benning Army and Air Force Exchange Stations. AAFES has requested the used oil containers be removed immediately.

Used oil can be taken to the following places:

Recycling Center, Building 4000, Villegas Street, Harmony Church. Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Main Post Auto Crafts Shop, Building 9064, Marine Road. Hours are 1:30 to 9 p.m. Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

The auto crafts shops charge a fee to collect the used oil.

Post cleanup April 13

There will be a postwide spring cleanup of the post cantonment and housing areas April 13 and 14. Occupants are responsible for cleanup of their quarters. This includes yard maintenance and improperly parked privately owned vehicles.

Area coordinators will offer assistance in facilitating pickup of large debris and any bulk recyclable aluminum or large scrap aluminum. Area coordinators will conduct final inspections in each housing area April 14.

Controlled burning set

Controlled burning of woodland and range areas will take place through April 1.

If weather permits, the following compartments may be affected: A-13, A-17, B-4, D-1, D-4, D-6, D-8, D-11, D-12, D-15, E-6, F-3, F-5, G-3, G-6, H-3, K-9, L-1, L-2, O-5, O-11, O-14, Q-2, T-1, V-3, W-3 and X-1.

People using these areas for recreation must leave before 9:30 a.m. daily.

Training units using compartments next to these areas may experience drift smoke and are reminded to exercise caution while traveling in these areas because of the potential for reduced visibility.

For more information, call 544-6206.

Travel contractors to change Monday

Carlson-Wagonlit Travel has won the government contract for official and leisure travel at Fort Benning.

The SatoTravel and Information Ticketing and Registration leisure travel office, located at the Main Mall, Building 9230, will close its doors today at 2 p.m. and reopen as Carlson-Wagonlit Travel Monday.

Officials said Carlson will provide the same services provided by SatoTravel and ITR.

For more information, call the Community Recreation Division at 545-7357.

Tax help available

The Fort Benning Tax Office, located in Building 2640 at Soldiers' Plaza, is open to provide tax filing assistance. Office hours will be 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Electronic tax filing is available for most federal returns, and the office has many federal and state tax forms available.

Unit tax advisers have been appointed so soldiers should see their unit tax advisers first.

Women's History Month Luncheon set

The Federal Women's Program and the Equal Opportunity Office will sponsor a Women's History Month Luncheon Thursday from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Fort Benning Officers' Club. The theme is "Promises to Keep." Luncheon tickets are $5.75 per person.

The luncheon will feature various portrayals of women in history by members of the Federal Women's Program.

New process in place for pest control

Organizations requesting pest control items only through the Unit and Housing Support Branch (U-Do-It Center) can now order supplies using a Department of Army Form 3161 (request for Issue or Turn-in) instead of a DA Form 4283 (Work Order Request).

The DA Form 3161 must identify which building the supplies will be used in and be signed by either the first sergeant or company commander. Personnel picking up the supplies must be listed on a signature card at the center.

For more information, call Nathaniel Goldwire at 545-3633.

GRE to be administered

The Graduate Record Examination will be administered April 12 at the education centers. The first examination is free, but the retest fee is $56.

For more information, call the Main Post Education Center, Building 2602, at 545-4863 or the Kelley Hill Education Center, Building 9027, at 544-3689.

ITB Eagle Run scheduled March 31

The Infantry Training Brigade Eagle Run will be March 31 from 1 to 2 p.m. in the Sand Hill cantonment area. The run is expected to draw approximately 4,000 participants.

For more information, call Capt. Lawrence E. George at 544-9590.

Attitude, nutrition key to weight loss

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

You're standing in line at the Commissary and you happen to glance at the magazine rack. On the covers are beautiful, healthy-looking people in swimsuits. As you look down at your own physique, you become depressed when you see that you are no where near being fit.

What do you do with only a few months left until summer? If you're a participant in the 10-week "Follow Me to Weight Loss" program, you already know what to do.

The class, scheduled for every Wednesday from March 15 to May 24, is designed to provide information on nutrition, healthy lifestyles and to promote exercise. The program motto, "Attitude is Everything," means that this is not a temporary diet. "It's a permanent attitude adjustment," said Patty Pfeiffer, chief of the Training and Development Division of the Directorate of Civilian Personnel.

Each class begins with a weigh in, a celebration of any weight loss, a participant sharing session and a varying main program agenda.

The March 15 class focused on "Nutrition — Getting Started for Weight Loss," and featured 1st Lt. Sarah Flash, chief of production and service, Nutrition Care Division of Martin Army Community Hospital as the guest speaker.

Flash showed a CNN video that discussed healthy recipes, food choices and exercise. One of the subtopics in the video was that people should not focus on temporary dieting, but on making changes to their lives.

According to a study shown in the film, people who do not follow a structured diet but exercise regularly do much better in the long run than those who do diet. Exercise increases control of eating habits and the self-esteem of the dieter, according to the video.

Flash recommended that participants abide by "The Ten Commandments of Nutrition," by Pamela Smith. The commandments are a basic formula for healthy food choice makers to follow.

Next time you're at the Commissary and you see all of the beautiful, healthy-looking people adorning the magazine covers, don't be blue. Just remember that "Attitude is Everything" and with a few lifestyle changes you will be looking and feeling great, too.

The Ten Commandments of Nutrition

- Thou shalt never skip breakfast.
- Thou shalt eat every three to four hours and have a healthy snack.
- Thou shalt always eat a carbohydrate with a protein.
- Thou shalt double thy fiber.
- Thou shalt trim the fat from thy diet.
- Thou shalt eat thy vegetables.
- Thou shalt get thy vitamins and minerals from food, not pills.
- Thou shalt drink at least eight glasses of water a day.
- Thou shalt consume a minimum of sugar, salt, caffeine and alcohol.
- Thou shalt never go on a fad diet.

Running Rebels crowned champion

Defeat Rock Steady 68-54

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Infantry Training Brigade crowned a new basketball champion March 16 at Santiago Fitness Center.

The Running Rebels of Headquarters and Services Company, ITB, downed Rock Steady of the 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, 68-54.

Running Rebel forward Charles Brown led all scorers with 23 points, 14 in the second half, to power the Rebel offense.

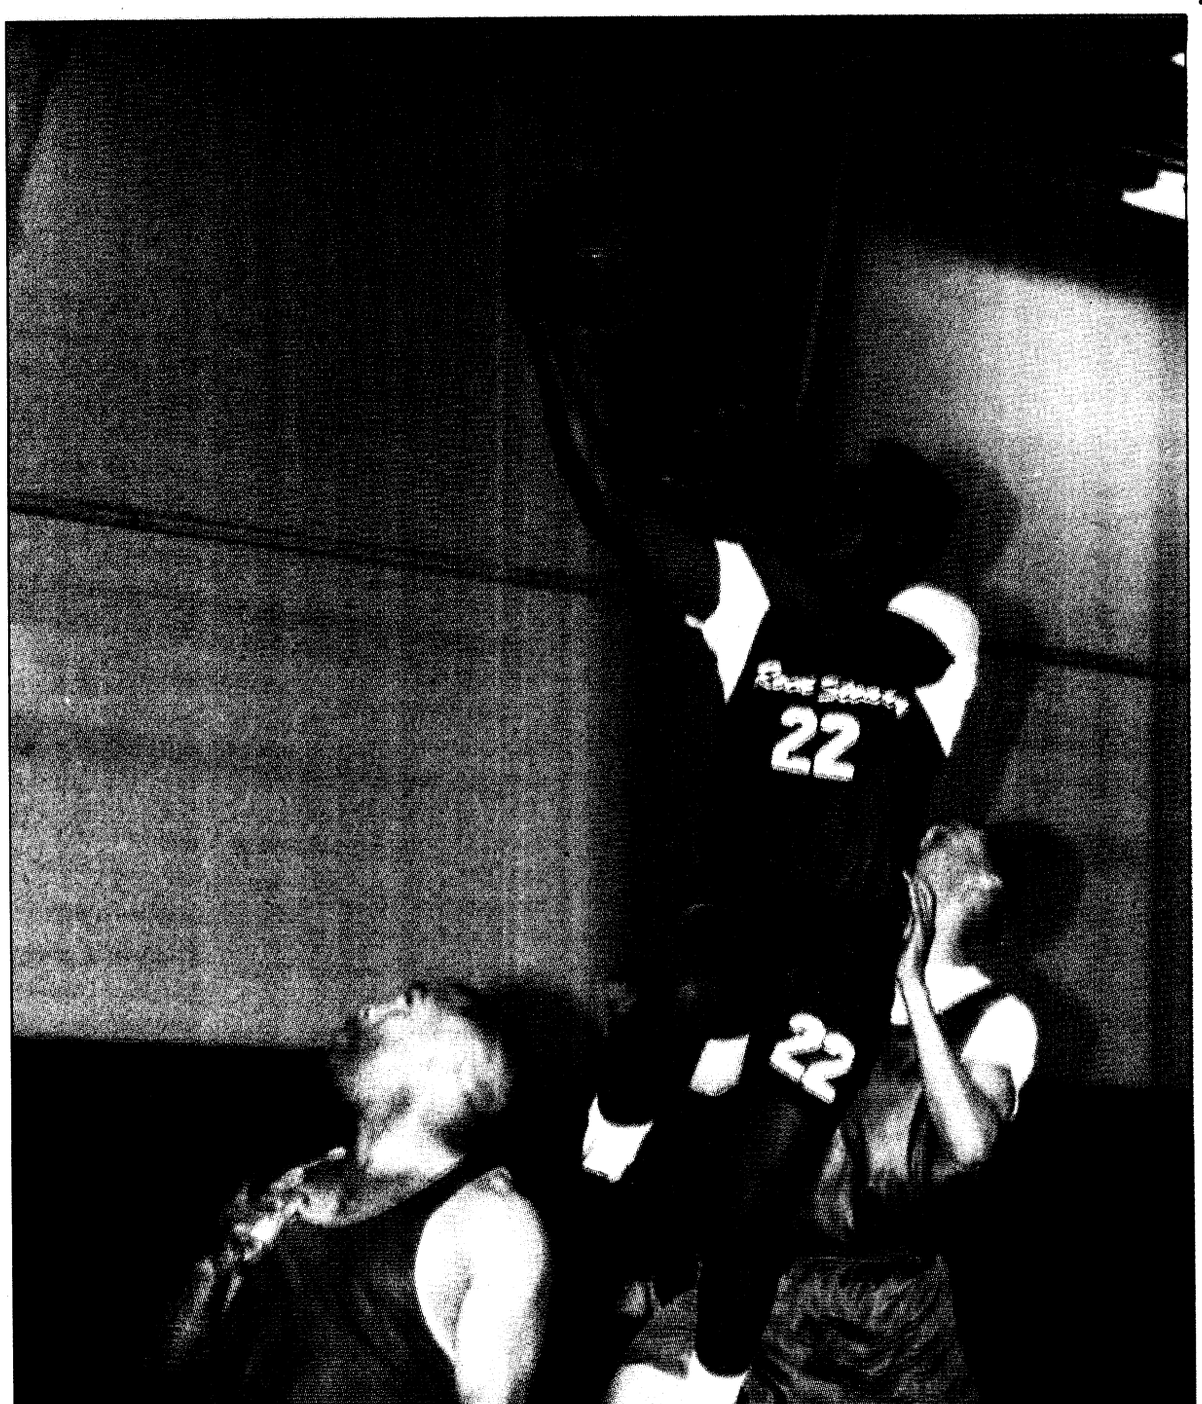
The Rebel offense ran out to a 28-19 lead with 4:37 left in the first half on a strong inside game from Brown and key three-point shooting from Michael Artis, who finished with 17 points (11 in the first half).

The Rebels rebounding game was the key to many of the Rebels fast break baskets. With Brown, Chris Graham, Gregory Ellerbee and Derek Williams cleaning the glass on both offense and defense, the Rebels were able to take a 36-30 lead at the break.

"We basically wanted to stay composed and get our inside game going," Artis said. "Then our outside shots started falling, giving us a good mixture for the game. We had a 20-point lead on a team the other night and they came back on us; we didn't want that to happen tonight."

But happen it did. Rock Steady opened up the second half with a 7-0 run keyed by Mark Walder (18 points) and Dwayne Mack (11 points) to take a 37-36 lead.

From that point on, the lead would swing back and forth with neither team holding more than a two point advantage.



With 4:53 to play, the Rebels went on an 8-0 run on two baskets by Brown and one basket and two free throws from Gerard Williams (eight points) to take a 58-50 lead in just over a minute.

Two free throws from Walder and a basket by Robert Henson (seven points) cut the Rebel advantage to 58-54.

The Rebels would use another run, this time 10-0, to put the game away in the final two minutes with Brown and Williams doing the damage for the 68-54 final.

"We wanted to work the ball inside to our big men in the post," Artis said. "Their zone went soft, giving our guys the inside shot. Now we have to get ourselves prepared for the post tournament, which will be a rougher game."

The post tournament is scheduled to begin April 3 and continue through April 12, climaxing with the championship game. Twenty teams from all major commands will be participating in this year's tournament.

Marksmanship team member grabs three golds at Pan Am Games

Rhonda Syler

Capt. Robert Harbison of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit won three Gold Medals during the Pan American Games marksmanship competition, March 14 through 20 in Buenos Aires, Argentina.

By Marlene Tikal
U..S. Army Marksmanship Unit

After earning three Gold Medals and setting a new world record during Pan American Games shooting competition March 14 through Monday in Buenos Aires, Argentina a U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit soldier has proven himself to be what a lot of people already knew he was — one of the finest marksmen on earth.

Capt. Robert Harbison, assigned to the USAMU International Rifle Team won individual Gold Medals in the Free Rifle, 50-meter prone event and the Standard Rifle, 300-meter three-position event — an event in which he also set a new world record with a score of 588 out of a possible 600 points.

If that isn't enough, Harbison was a member of the Gold Medal-winning Air Rifle team.

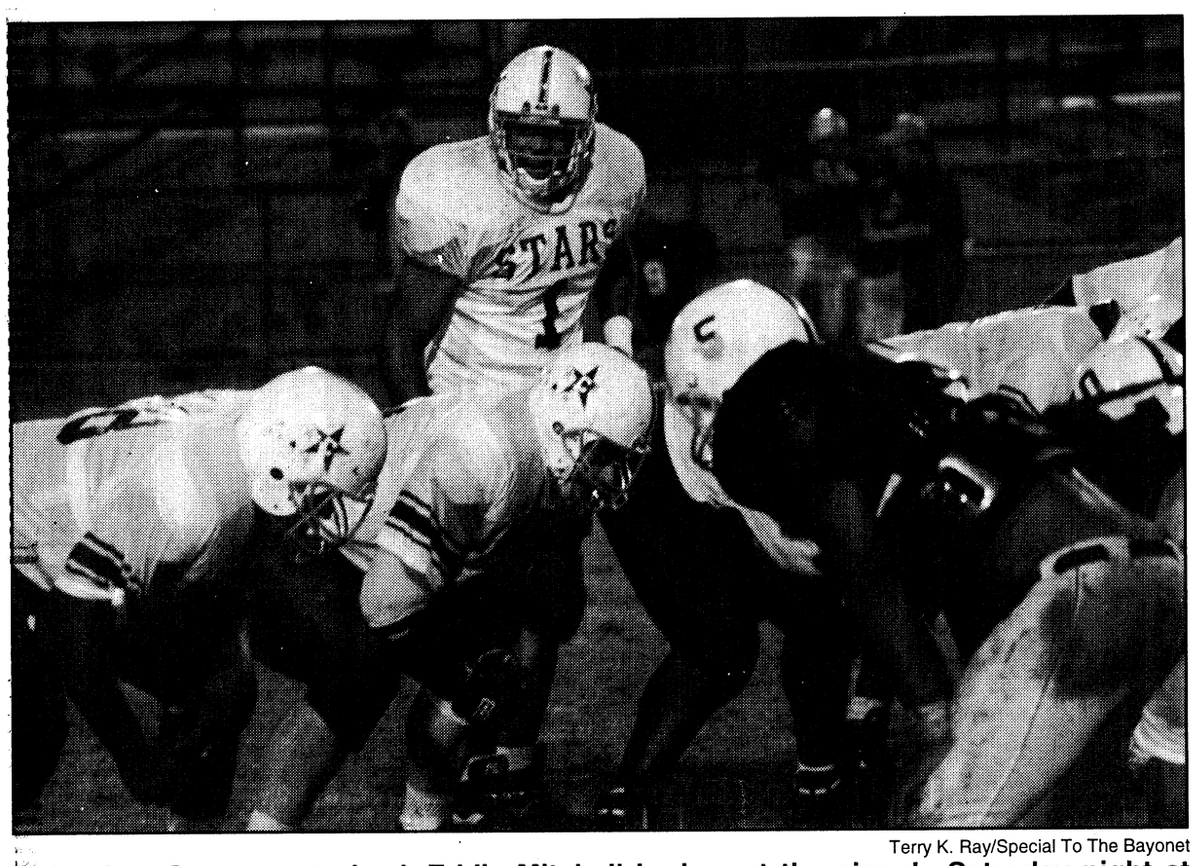
"I'm thrilled by my performance," said Harbison, who ventured to Argentina with 11 other USAMU marksmen to participate in the games — a prelude to the 1996 Olympic Games in Atlanta. "I'm just honored to have the chance to represent both the United States and the Army at this level of competition."

However, it's a level of competition Harbison did not reach overnight.

"As long as I've known him, Rob's always been good at what he does, competing in the marksmanship arena," Denise Loring, a former International Rifle Team member who now competes on the U.S. Army Reserve Team, said.

But, even though Harbison began shooting in 1978 when he picked the sport up as a hobby while still a boy in State College, Pa., he didn't reach his full potential as a professional competitive marksman until being assigned to USAMU International Rifle Team in January 1992. It was then that he was given a chance to really develop his skills, 1st Lt. Gary Hardy, Harbison's fellow team the International Rifle Team, said.

As an USAMU International Rifle Team member, Harbison was given the opportunity to train under coach Bill Krilling, who is widely regarded as one of the top shooting coaches in the world. A former noncommissioned officer who was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross during the Korean War, Krilling retired from active duty and returned to the unit as a civilian to coach the International Rifle Team in 1973.



"Mr. Krilling works with all of the shooters on an individual basis," Hardy said. Based on what Krilling sees of the shooters' day-to-day performances, he develops individual training programs to help each overcome and improve on their specific problem area. The training program is backed up with long hours spent on the range.

"I know Rob takes training extremely seriously," Loring said. "He puts a lot of effort into shooting and being the best he can be."

"It was dedication, talent and time spent training that made Harbison what he is today — a great shooter," Hardy said.

Harbison's other shooting accomplishments include being a World Cup Air Rifle Champion, a three-time Standard Rifle Champion and two-time National Free Rifle Champion. He is now aiming for the Olympics in 1996.

"It's a long road to hoe," Harbison said. "But I'm already more than halfway there."

Stars outshine Vipers 23-6

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Columbus Stars, after losing two road games, came home to Garrett Stadium Saturday night and won a 23-6 victory over the Mobile Vipers. The Stars' season record is now 5-2.

The Stars started slowly, but built to a roaring finale with a Scott Alalof 31-yard field goal for a 3-0 lead going into halftime.

The Vipers scored their only points of the game midway through the third quarter when defensive back Juan Draine picked up Stars starting quarterback Dwight Washington's fumbled pitch at the Viper 5-yard line and streaked 95 yards for the touchdown. Kicker James Reid missed the conversion giving the Vipers their first and last lead of the night at 6-3 with 7:56 left in the third quarter.

On the ensuing kickoff, Victor Howell took Reid's kick at the Stars 20-yard line and turned upfield. A hole opened up the middle and Howell found it, going 80 yards for the score.

Alalof missed the extra point attempt for a Stars 9-6 advantage. The Vipers' lead lasted exactly 19 seconds.

Defensive tackle Travis Perry recovered Vipers quarterback Michael Draine's fumble at the Viper 33 setting the Stars up for their next score.

New quarterback Eddie Mitchell came on for Washington and moved the ball down to the Viper 7. Fullback Jamon Smith (17 carries for 156 yards and one touchdown) went the final seven yards on a pitch to the left with five seconds left in the third quarter. Alalof tacked on the conversion pushing the lead to 16-6.

"Once I got in the game, coach told me to relax and just run the offense," Mitchell said. "Everything came together and we ran the offense the way it should be."

Another Viper mistake led to Stars points in the fourth quarter. With the ball on their own 48, Draine who was harried and harassed all night by the Stars defense, once again coughed up the ball which was recovered by linebacker Thomas Bryant.

The Stars went 48 yards in seven plays and used more than six minutes off the clock before Mitchell went in from four yards out. With the conversion by Alalof the Stars put their final points on the board for the night at 23-6.

The Stars defense returned to old form with linebacker Kevin Jordan (four tackles, four assist and one sack) doing the damage.

The defense gave up only 55 total yards to the Vipers while the offense piled up 267 yards of offense.

"We moved the ball in the first half between the 20s; we just couldn't get the ball into the end zone," said head coach Tom Staton. "Eddie is our quarterback. The offense feels comfortable with him at the helm. That's the way it is right now."

The Stars have an extra home game Saturday due to a field conflict for the St. Augustine, Fla., Tigers. Kickoff is set for 7 p.m.

Army shooters

aim to be the world's best

By Rhonda A. Syler
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

Imagine shooting a rifle and hitting a bull's-eye smaller than the period at the end of this sentence from 10 meters away, or from 50 meters, hitting a bull's-eye smaller than an eraser on a pencil. Try to envision hitting the center of an aspirin or hitting that period while it's moving, exposed for as little as 2.5 seconds or shooting one, two clays out of the sky in a split second.

That's precisely what members of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit shooting teams do everyday. And precise they are. Being the world's best at any shooting discipline takes near perfect precision, and that isn't easy to achieve.

It takes a lot of skill and determination to reach the level of excellence these world-class athletes strive for, according to Col. Lory M. Johnson Jr., USAMU commander. "They have a real fire in their gut."

And that fire has been burning bright for the USAMU since its inception in March 1956 when President Dwight D. Eisenhower was determined to raise the overall marksmanship proficiency within the Army. One of the unit's taskings was to train expert marksmen to compete and win in interservice, national, international and Olympic competition.

Today the unit continues to select and develop the Army's top marksmen to compete and serve as representatives of the U.S. Army and U.S. National shooting teams.

The unit's mission is three-fold:

• To select, equip and train soldiers to compete and win in interservice, national, international and Olympic marksmanship competition

• To promote the U.S. Army by fostering public confidence in Army marksmanship through an active public information and public relations program that focuses on the accomplishments and capabilities of USAMU competitive shooters

• To enhance Army combat readiness by providing lessons learned from competitive shooting to the various small arms proponents.

To accomplish this mission, the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit is composed of seven competitive shooting sections, a custom gun shop and a unit support staff. Service Pistol, Service Rifle, International Rifle, International Pistol, Action Shooting, Shotgun and Running Target comprise the shooting sections. International Pistol, International Rifle, Shotgun and Running Target are the Olympic-style sports. Support is provided to these soldier athletes through the Custom Firearms Shop and the support branches of supply, operations and administration.

The USAMU renders technical and advisory assistance in the development of military and match-type small arms, equipment and ammunition. The unit also makes or customizes its own small arms and much of its own ammunition. The unit's Custom Firearms Shop builds top-quality competition-grade rifles and pistols for the USAMU.

"The expert custom gun shop work performed at the USAMU coupled with world-class shooters has made the unit the only organization of its kind in the Army today," Johnson said. "The unit represents some of America's finest competitive shooters and the Army' s greatest marksmen.

"The USAMU is an organization dedicated to promoting marksmanship throughout the Army and has gained worldwide respect for its high standard of conduct, professional ethics, and the good sportsmanship its members manifest in each and every phase of competition."

The accomplishments of the USAMU, however, are best quantified by results from the competitive firing line. Since 1956, members of the USAMU have won hundreds of individual and team national titles, over 40 world championships, and 19 Olympic medals.

Many of the world's best and most renowned competitive shooters have served in the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, according to D.I. Boyd, USAMU chief of competition. For example, Lt. Col. Lones Wigger is a three-time Olympic medalist who brought home two golds and a silver from the Olympics during the course of his career.

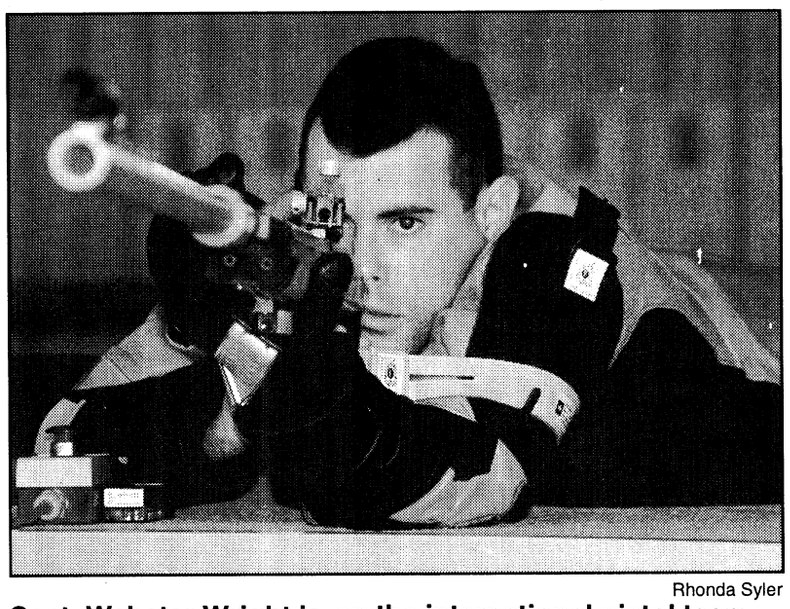
"He has dominated American competitive shooting like no one else in our nation's history, winning 111 medals in international shooting competition," Boyd said.

Wigger is just one of a long lineage of champions who once called USAMU home.

Others include Olympic silver medalist Maj. Margaret Murdock, six-time National Pistol Champion, Sgt. Maj. William Blankenship, six-time National Men's Service Rifle Champion, and many more.

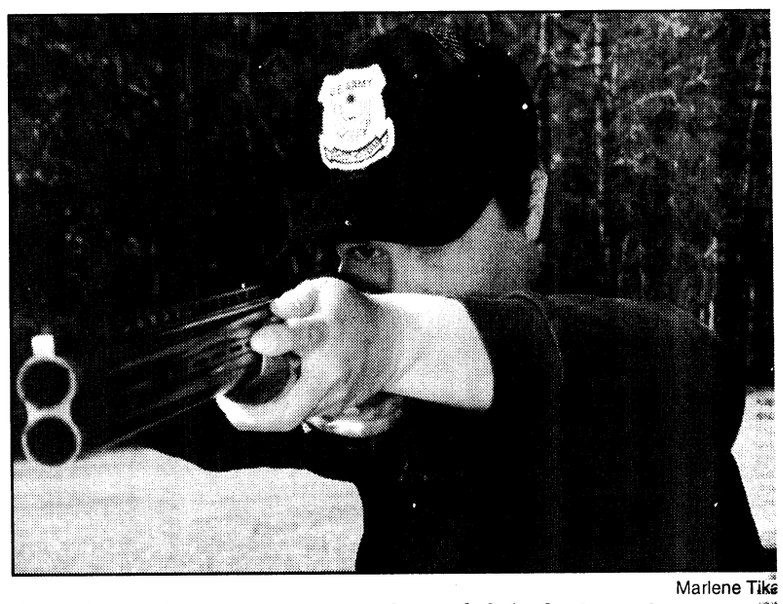
These individuals have long since retired or left active duty, but shooting still runs in their blood. After more than 30 years, Wigger still continues to participate in marksmanship.

The USAMU is home to many reigning champions. Sgt. 1st Class Merle Edington is the 1994 Practical Pistol National Champion — a title never before won by a member of the U.S. Army. Sgt. 1st Class Kenneth Gill made history in 1994 by winning the National Service Rifle Championship with an M-16 and Capt. Glenn Dubis is the 1994 World Champion in 300-meter Free Rifle and is the 1994 World Military Rifle Champion.



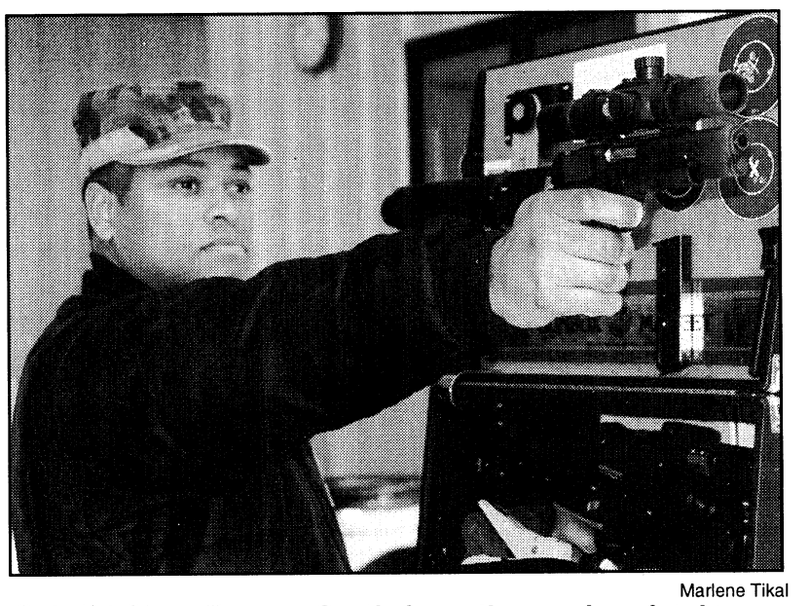
To achieve these outstanding accomplishments, USAMU shooters train at least five days a week often competing and training after hours and on weekends. In addition to training for competition, USAMU shooters participate in physical training five days a week and are encouraged to further their military and civilian education.

"The standards for shooters are high here," Boyd said. "The overall Army standard for the physical fitness test is to score a 180 out of 300 with a minimum of 60 in each of three areas. At the Army Marksmanship Unit, the requirement is 75 in all three areas for a total minimum of 225, and our average here is 256."



Shooters are expected to be soldiers first, Boyd said. "We encourage them to further their military and civilian education to maintain proficiency as a soldier."

"(This) rigorous training gives soldiers the edge and mental focus they need to be a soldier and be the best at what they do," Johnson said. "That's why the United States Army Marksmanship Unit is the home of champions."



The competitive shooting season has begun for USAMU shooters and the journey down the road to Atlanta in 1996 is well under way. And with skill and determination being their driving force, bringing home the gold is precisely what these soldiers aim to do.

COUNTERNARCOTICS COURSE

Students learn how to fight drug war

Training helps leaders develop, plan, execute counternarcotics operations

By Judith Ginder
School of the Americas

Students from the School of the Americas Counternarotics Course graduated Wednesday in a ceremony at Pratt Hall.

The course, which is 10 weeks long, is designed to provide selected leaders specialized training in the development of planning, leading and executing counter-narcotics operations, according to one of the course instructors.

The officers and noncommissioned officers taking the course receive hands-on training that isn't always available to them in their country because of insufficient training facilities, officials said.

Rappelling, fast-roping, water and boat operations, helocasting and building-climbing techniques are just some of the many topics covered in the course.

After spending a week in the field, the students took their final challenge March 17. Upon completion of a 10-mile road march, the students were split into four groups. They were given instructions from SOA instructors regarding the final "stress test."

Students were given a number of tasks for the day. These included a timed-boat inflation and deflation, radio operations and a six-man litter carry.

After all of the teams completed the tasks, they were then briefed about the live-fire exercises, which were about to take place.

According to Sgt. 1st Class William Vesga, SOA instructor, students fire an M-16A2 then change over to a 9mm weapon during a discriminating firing exercise. Discriminating firing is the process of determining whether or not a person is a military threat or a civilian.

The exercise continued with the teams infiltrating a building occupied with military personnel and civilians.

"This test shows what we have learned over the past few months," said Dominican Republic 1st Lt. Jose M. Rodriquez, Counter-narcotics Course student.

"When we return to our countries, we will be able to share this knowledge with our soldiers," he said.

world war II

50 years ago this week ...

• U.S. bombers based in the Marianas dropped more than 1,650 tons of incendiaries in a devastating raid on Tokyo, the capital of Imperial Japan. It was a new form of attack designed to take advantage of the wood and paper construction of many Japanese homes. A massive firestorm was raised and many thousands of homes were completely destroyed. The death toll was around 120,000 people, with 1 million people left homeless.

• The German defense of Wesel, the last Nazi bridgehead west of the Rhine River, collapsed. U.S. soldiers expanded their bridgehead at Remagen up to 10 miles on the east bank of the Rhine. U.S. troops also made gains of up to three miles in new operations in the Saar Basin and the Palatinate.

• Russians drove from three directions toward the port city of Danzig, splitting the enemy's lines on the city's outskirts. The Red Army also captured Kuestrin, the Oder River fortress 38 miles east of Berlin.

• In Burma, the 19th British Indian Division drove its way into Mandalay, breaking out of its bridgehead on the east bank of the Irrawaddy River. The Japanese put up fierce resistance.

• In the Philippines, most of the U.S. Army's 41st Infantry Division landed in the southwest of Mindanao. The division pushed on from Zamboanga to capture the villages of Santa Maria, Canelar, Silnung and Pitogo. Soldiers also repulsed a Japanese attempt to land from barges northwest of Batangas.

• U.S. Marines stopped an Japanese suicide attack on Iwo Jima the night of March 9 to 10. Despite resistance, the Marines had driven the enemy into a small area in the northwest of the island by the end of the week.

• The Pacific, Gen. Holland "Howlin' Mad" Smith announced that all organized Japanese resistance on the island of Iwo Jima had been defeated.

• The Saar Pocket fell to the combined forces of the Third and Seventh U.S. Armies. The U.S. forces launched coordinated assaults that split the remaining German defenses in the Saar Pocket into three isolated pockets, forcing the Germans to withdraw east of the Rhine.

• The Remagen Bridge collapsed after two weeks of constant use by Allied forces and heavy bombardment by German artillery and aircraft. The Allies succeeded in pushing five U.S. divisions over the bridge before it collapsed.

• On the home front, Going My Way was awarded the Academy Award for Best Picture of 1944. Bing Crosby and Ingrid Bergman received the best actor and actress awards from the academy.

TRADOC to enter superhighways

By A.J. Plunkett
TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — Instant information will be the Army's deadliest and perhaps most revolutionary weapon of the future, said the general in charge of leading the Army's march onto the information superhighway.

The computer and the ability to process and transmit information rapidly and accurately will transform the way the Army operates just as the tank did in World War I and the helicopter did in Vietnam, said Gen. William W. Hartzog, the new leader of the Army's Training and Doctrine Command.

The soldier of the future may be able to snap a face shield computer display down from his helmet, punch a miniature keypad on his breast pocket to get a weather update or position location while keeping an eye on the terrain around him, relaying the scene to his commander so they see the same thing at the same time.

In the future, Army commanders will be able to pinpoint precisely where every soldier is on a battlefield, Hartzog said. Crucial facts such as the amount of ammunition left to a platoon, the location of reinforcement fuel or water, or the precise arrival time of support air or naval forces will be a keyboard stroke away.

The technology and even some of the equipment exists today, said Hartzog, a 32-year Army veteran who took over as TRADOC's commanding general in October.

The computer and information industries' ability to gather, process and disseminate information has exploded in the last five years, said Hartzog. Part of his new job will be to integrate those abilities into the Army and, if necessary, reorganize how the Army trains, fights and operates.

"It's hard to understand and hard to absorb how revolutionary the information explosion really is," Hartzog said.

Just more than five years ago, Hartzog sat in the command headquarters overseeing the Army's participation in the invasion of Panama to arrest dictator Manuel Noriega.

The information gathering and control then was noisy and messy, he said. Groups of people were running in and out constantly, colored tape marked unit positions on acetate overlays on huge display maps.

"For years and years," Hartzog said, "the Army has been arranged hierarchically — that is, we had generals that knew about certain things and dealt with general things, and we had regimental commanders or brigade commanders that had a different body of knowledge exposed to them and systems to bring it to them.

"The battalion commander knew different stuff and the company commander knew different stuff, and if you were the point man down in the platoon, you knew what you could see," Hartzog said.

Today "we are getting pretty close to a point with the digital world where the same screen is in front of the tank commander that is in front of the battalion commander that is in front of the brigade commander that is in front of the general," Hartzog said. "So we are getting pretty close to a common view of the battlefield."

That could have revolutionary implications for how the Army both fights and is structured, Hartzog said. It is possible that certain levels of command and control could be simply eliminated.

Or it might be that the jobs are reorganized into different packages. Instead of having different commanders in charge of logistics or support or combat operations, perhaps one commander would control near-term events, another future events and another to organize information as it becomes available.

To get an idea of how to integrate the Army into the new information age, TRADOC is in the midst of running five advanced warfighting experiments to explore the possibilities.

Perhaps the most important challenge, Hartzog said, will be in keeping the changes human. Information should always be just another weapon, he said.

"We don't have cyborgs," Hartzog said. "We're not in the 'Star Trek' business; we haven't modified, in significant ways, the human brain and body's ability to do its work. So we need to make sure that as we head into this future that it isn't a future of machines where people just turn them on and off.

"It is a future of people who make use of the technology," Hartzog said. "We value human judgmental ability and being able to make decision."

The information-age Army may have to adjust its human factor as well, he said.

"I can't conceive a tank driver in the year 2010 — if we still have a tank then, and I think we probably will — I can't conceive him not being computer literate in certain ways. So either we have to make that a prerequisite in hiring people in the selection process or we have to accommodate training it in the Army."

Whatever all the new and future information technologies mean for the Army, for now it means there will certainly be TRADOC, Hartzog said.

TRADOC will continue to get slimmer as the rest of the Army does, but Hartzog said he does not look to drop much below TRADOC's current budget of $2.2 billion.

"I think it is important that TRADOC continue to be the primary trainer of the force for the present and the architect of the future. I know that the chief of staff of the Army sees it that way, and that's his guidance to me to fulfill those two functions," Hartzog said.

Despite the technology and equipment available now and in the future, the soldiers will remain at the heart of TRADOC's mission he said.

"What doesn't change is people," he said. "Quality people, well trained, well led, and well motivated are going to be as successful in 2010 as they were in '42 or 1776."

FORT BENNING HISTORY BOOK

published to commemorate

FORT BENNING'S 75th ANNIVERSARY

Fort Benning recently celebrated its 75th Anniversary, and The Bayonet published a special edition to coincide with the celebration. Soon after the special edition of the paper was published, we began looking at the information about Fort Benning that we had collected and decided that it was simply too good to leave it just in newspaper form.

We knew the book would be interesting and informative. The next step was to make it as attractive as possible. An experienced layout and design firm was hired, and they have done an absolutely superb job. You will enjoy thumbing through its pages for years to come. You will also be proud to put it in a prominent place at home for friends to enjoy, or at work for your customers to see. And , if you're looking for a gift for a retiree, or a friend who may have served at Fort Benning and is no longer here, there's no better way to remind them of your lasting friendship.

Published by the contract printer of Fort Benning's authorized newspaper, The Bayonet, the hardcover book, protected by a beautiful full-color dust cover, has 168-pages and is filled with more than 200 photos. The book includes detailed timelines of significant events that have shaped Fort Benning, and overview of the post's involvement in World War II, Korea, Viet Nam, and a variety of stories that round out the post's interesting history.

It is the perfect "coffee table" and is a 'must have' for anyone who has been stationed at Fort Benning. It's a book that will be a lasting memento of the winner of the 1994 Commander In Chief's Award signifying it as...

CSM moves on

By Marc Belscamper
Infantry Training Brigade

Command Sgt. Maj. Sylvan B. Bauer Jr. of the Infantry Training Brigade will retire today, after 27 years, five months and 24 days in the Army. Bauer enlisted in the Army in January 1968.

Bauer's first assignment was with the 82nd Airborne Division. He then went on to serve a combat tour with the 2nd Battalion, 173rd Airborne Brigade, in Vietnam as a team leader and squad leader.

After his return home, Bauer attended Drill Sergeant School in 1969 and was the distinguished graduate. He was then a staff sergeant in the Army after 21 months of service. He spent three years as a drill sergeant and then attended the Army Recruiters Course where once again, Bauer was the distinguished graduate. After 4 1/2 years on recruiting duty, Bauer was assigned to the Berlin Brigade.

Bauer served in Berlin, Germany, from 1976 to 1979 as a squad leader and platoon sergeant. One of the highlights of this assignment for Bauer was the guarding of prisoner Rudolph Hess, who was Adolf Hitler's second in command during World War II.

He served his second combat tour as a command sergeant major with the 7th Battalion, 6th Infantry, 1st Armored Division, in Southwest Asia.

Bauer said he "worked for three great commanders" who gave him the "ability to affect things" — the main focus always being to train the best infantrymen for the Army.

Bauer assisted former ITB Commander Col. Theodore Severn in formalizing assessment based training, which is now used at ITB.

"Everything that was once based on statistics is now based on how trainees are executing various tasks," Bauer said. "The training is a continual reinforcement of critical tasks. The goal is to train infantrymen to be able to survive in combat."

Bauer did a lot to change and improve the Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers program at ITB.

Command Sgt. Maj. Sylvan B. Bauer Jr. is retiring today after more than 27 years in the Army.

"He (designated) a BOSS representative for each training battalion, as well as a representative for the entire brigade," said Sgt. Ruse M. Wiley, Bauer's executive administrative assistant. "He also (established) a BOSS breakfast every other month to get suggestions as to how to improve life for single soldiers."

And one such example has been the remodeling of the bachelor enlisted quarters that has taken place in the battalions at ITB.

"Our goal was to treat single soldiers the same way married soldiers are treated," Bauer said.

Bauer is going to work for the Vinnell Corporation in Saudi Arabia, where he will teach tactics to the Saudi Arabian National Guard. His wife, Wenda, and son, Sean, will remain in the Fort Benning area.

Students journey to the land of Oz

By Jerrie Macintire

Faith Middle School students took more than 500 guests for a visit down the yellow brick road to the land of Oz in the first dinner theater production for post schools March 16 and 17.

The production was a coordinated effort among teachers in the elective department; students who were servers, actors, stage hands and musicians; and members of the cafeteria staff who catered the dinner.

While servers clad in tuxedo shirts and bow ties kept bread baskets and drinks refilled, formally-dressed patrons dined by candlelight to the strains of classical music.

"Both evenings surpassed our expectations," said Faith principal Dr. Beth Middlemiss. "Our elective department developed the project to have all elective subjects working together. What emerged were two evenings where those who worked on the production and those who came to see it thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

"The dinner theater was a wonderful learning experience for our students and our staff as we all worked together, " she said.

Ruby Rumley, home living teacher, coordinated the lasagna dinner in cooperation with Jan Smith, cafeteria director for the school.

"The students designed the table decorations and have been looking forward to serving this formal meal," Rumley said as the adolescents dressed in crisp white tuxedo shirts and black bow ties served the catered meal.

Gloria Loar, art teacher, supervised design and creative embellishment of props while students constructed the sets under the direction of Anne Shaw, industrial arts teacher.

"It was a big undertaking," said Loar, whose students stretched canvas, helped build props and designed and painted scenes.

"It was challenging, but the students are so excited," she said as her students worked backstage to change props between scenes. "We have all worked so hard on this production; it's truly a joint effort."

Lorri Blanchard, choral director, and Kimberly Green, band director, reworked some musical pieces and coordinated the live student orchestra, which provided accompaniment for solos and group songs.

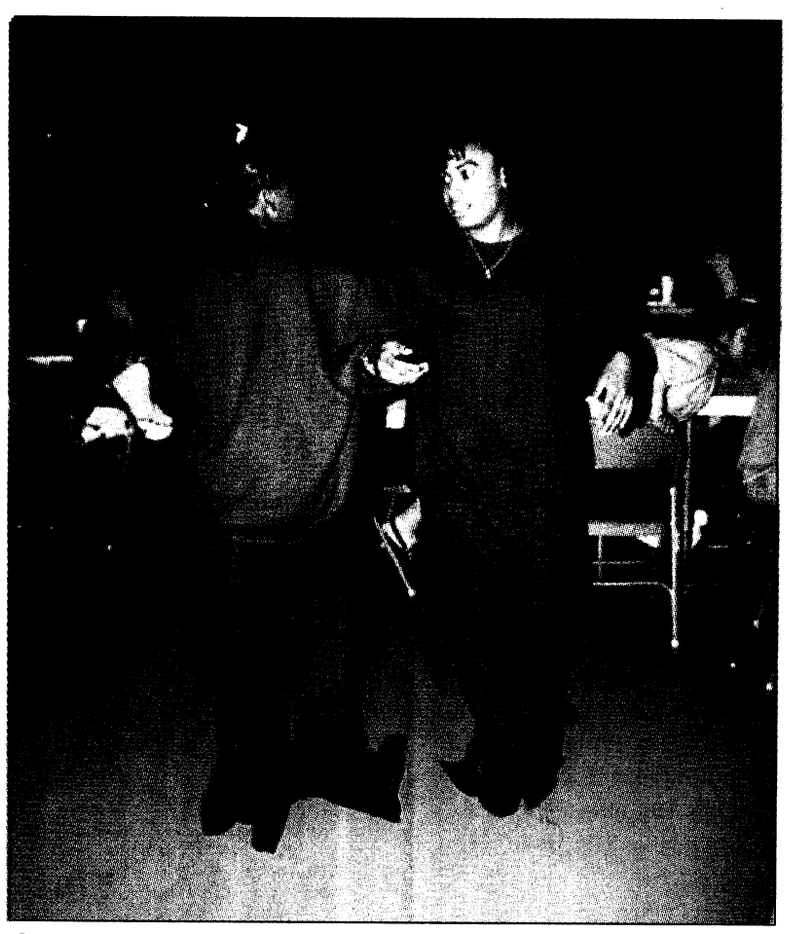
"We wanted to do something as a team. We scored this ourselves and wrote vocal parts, simplified and narrated from the original," Blanchard said.

Marie Prieto, Spanish teacher, coordinated the translation of the program, which students presented to each theater patron.

Consisting of five scenes, the play featured a streamlined script of favorite lines and music from the original production including "Munchkinland," "Ding Dong, the Witch is Dead," Lollipop Guild, Lullaby League" and "Merry Old Land of Oz."

In addition, lead performers presented the solos, "Somewhere Over the Rainbow," "If I Only Had a Brain," "If I Only Had a Heart" and "If I Only Had the Nerve."

A smoke machine hidden inside a wishing well prop provided drama as the wicked witch shrieked, "I'm melting; I'm shrinking!"



Other extras included a sea of munchkins, who walked on knees outfitted with mock elfin shoes, and groups of "Winkies" who left the stage to dance among the patrons.

Costumes followed the original play and included blue and white gingham checks for Dorothy, straw filled farmer's castoffs for the Scarecrow, shaggy lion's suit for the Cowardly Lion, silver theatrical makeup and suit for the Tin Man and ethereal costumes for both the good witch and the wicked witch.

Scouts to honor Dexter principal

Educator to be recognized as one of nine top 'Women of Achievement'

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet©

The Concharty Council of Girl Scouts will honor Vicki Rogers, principal at Dexter School, at the eighth annual Women of Achievement Program April 6 at the Columbus Iron Works Convention and Trade Center.

The program is designed to recognize those who have set a good example of excellence for Girl Scouts through their professions and through commitment to family, church and community.

Rogers is one of nine community leaders chosen from the 12-county region of the Concharty Council designated as Women of Achievement for this year.

"Vicki Rogers sets an example for her faculty and for her students, stressing to both that learning should be relevant and should be connected to real-life experiences," said Dr. Dell Karr, superintendent for Fort Benning Schools.

Rogers, an educator for 25 years, is active in community life in Buena Vista. Currently a volunteer at the historic Yesteryear Inn and an invested member of the Chamber of Commerce, Rogers said her interest in the growth of her community began with membership in the Marion Country Historic Preservation Society.

Over the years, she said she has enjoyed watching her community of Buena Vista evolve from a small town to a culturally and historically notable area that has been featured in Southern Living magazine, The Boston Globe newspaper, and various travel magazines and books.

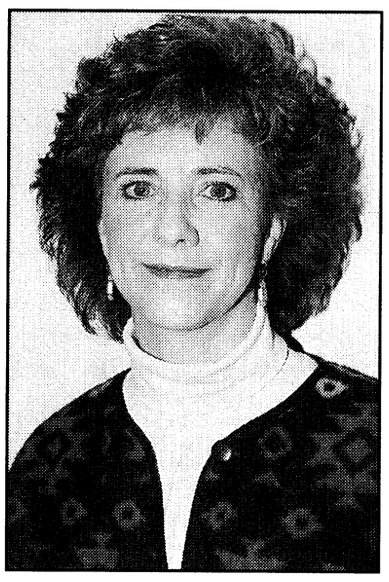
As part of her community involvement, she helped organize the first Southern Foods Festival.

Professionally, Rogers is an educator with 25 years of experience as a teacher, administrator and principal. Her school was designated a "Georgia School of Excellence" for the 1993 - 94 school year.

"Because of the influence and leadership of Ms. Rogers, Dexter School is a place that dares to dream, to risk, to care and to expect more than others think possible," Karr said." These are traits that begin with its leader."

As a principal, Rogers said she embraces hands-on experiences involving technology as a valuable teaching tool.

She supports writing experiences, quality literature and problem solving skills across all curriculum areas.



While promoting these goals, Rogers implemented "Project Greenthumb," an earth sciences program, and coordinated the first Young Authors Day conference to culminate a year-long focus on writing last year.

This year, Rogers is encouraging multi-cultural education through an "Olympic Connections" theme. In addition, she serves on the Tri-Communities Olympic Education Committee, which is preparing for the 1996 Olympic Games based in Atlanta.

Rogers, the mother of two sons received an associate of arts degree from Columbus College and bachelor of science and master's degrees from Georgia Southwestern College.

Also, she graduated magna cum laude from the University of Georgia with a specialist in educational administration degree.

She is the recipient of the Institute for Development of Educational Activities Distinguished Educator Award and is affiliated with Phi Delta Kappa and Delta Kappa Gamma.

Rogers

While discussing the Women of Achievement Award, Rogers offered the following advice to girls: "Assume responsibility for your success and happiness in life, be committed to your goals and act with enthusiasm."

In professional and personal matters, Rogers said she follows a creed tucked under the glass of her desktop: "Nothing worthwhile is ever achieved without that collective spark of enthusiasm."

Juanito Baranco, legal counsel, co-owner and executive vice president of an Atlanta business, will be keynote speaker at the Women of Achievement Luncheon.

Organizers need souped-up fund raising for playground

Family Child Care

Organizers have collected only about 2 percent of the 345,650 Campbell's Soup Company labels needed to purchase playground equipment to be placed at Russ Pond.

The drive is part of the Campbell's Labels for Education program and was launched in January by the Family Child Care providers at Fort Benning.

Labels from more than 1,000 Campbell's products can be redeemed for educational equipment and materials, according to Debbie Snoke, campaign organizer.

Campbell's products include: anything with the company's label, she said, including Marie's, Mrs. Paul's, Swanson, V-8, Early California, Franco-American, Vlasic, Pepperidge Farm, Sanwa Ramen Pride and Prego.

The goal is to collect enough labels to trade for the playground equipment.

Only 5,000 of the 345,650 labels needed have been collected. The drive ends March 1, 1996.

The new playground would be for children from toddler to school age. There are no playgrounds on post equipped for this varied age group.

The playground equipment will not only benefit the child-care providers, but it will provide a place for any Fort Benning family to come and play with their children, Snoke said.

"We have an opportunity to get some playground equipment for Fort Benning," she said. "The equipment we want to get for Russ Pond includes swings, a slide and more."

There are label drop-off points at all community life buildings and the post Commissary, she said.

The Family Child Care providers are also looking for volunteers to help with the campaign.

"We need people to help count, sort and bundle labels, remove them from the cans and distribute fliers," she said. "We need a lot of support to be able to have our playground by next summer." Any assistance will be greatly appreciated, she said.

Many of the child-care providers on post will accept labels, Snoke said. Their homes can be identified by the yellow rainbows in the windows.

For more information or to volunteer to help with this project, call Snoke at 687-6823.

Students explore music's past, future during concerts

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet©

Fort Benning students got a brief lesson on the past, present and future of music in a series of fine arts concerts at post schools last week.

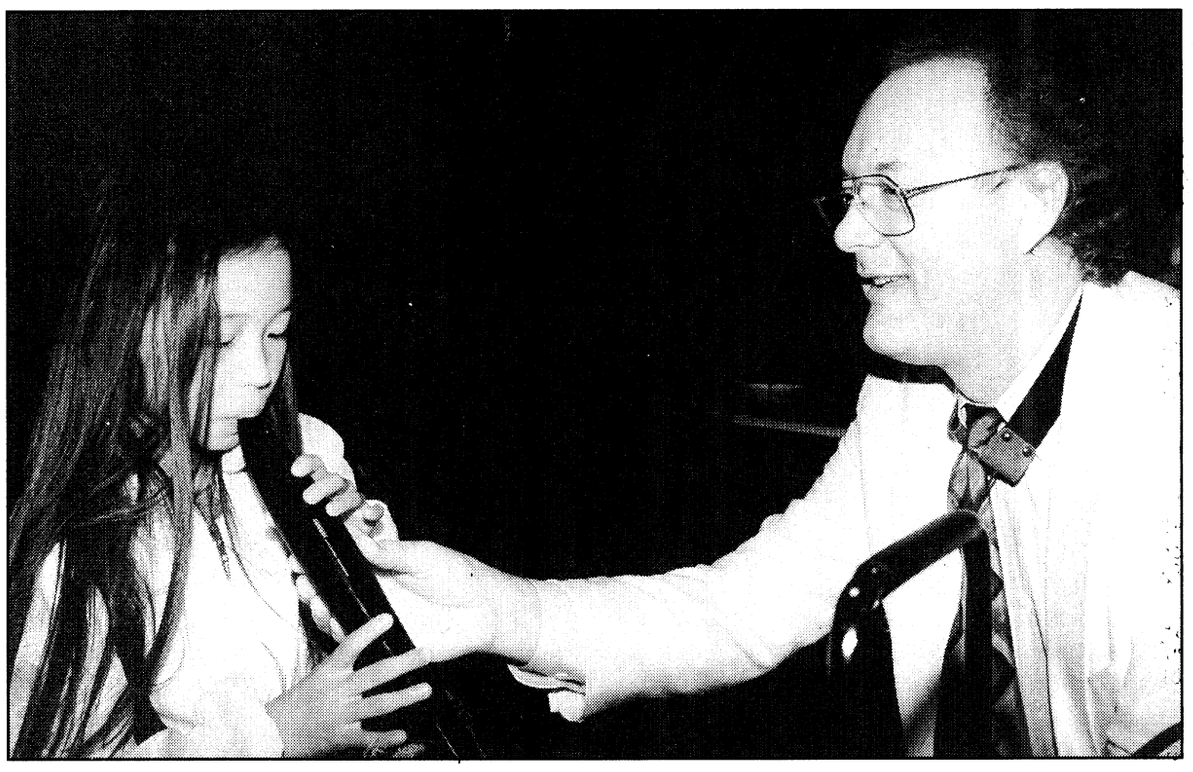
Presenting a medley of pieces on the saxophone was Dr. William Fry, director of bands at Columbus College.

Steve Clark, administrative head of the music conservatory at Columbus College, provided some piano accompaniment.

Fry discussed the saxophone, a wind instrument, and demonstrated the versatility of music by playing "Allegro," a 300 year-old piece by Giovanni Platti written before the saxophone was invented.

A modern piece, "Silhouette," by Kenny G, demonstrated popular saxophone music of today while exploring a range of notes.

The musicians also presented a demonstration of the "Windjammer," the electronic saxophone of the future, which can produce rich multi-dimensional notes — sounds from bells to electric bass to snare drums.



"The saxophone players of tomorrow will have great fun with new and creative ideas," Fry told the audience at Morris R. McBride School.

Fry and Clark ended the concert with the popular "Whole New World," from the Disney movie "Aladdin."

The fine arts concerts, a series of educational musical demonstrations, are presented in the schools each year to stimulate interest and help students learn to appreciate music, according to Del Hicks, McBride principal.

"The students also learn appropriate concert manners, which is important," Hicks said.

The concerts were sponsored by the Officers' Wives' Club.

Awards honor area volunteers

United Way

Wanted: Generous hearts, helping hands and people who work for smiles.

National Volunteer Week is April 23 to 29 and the Tri-community directors of volunteer services is going to recognize four people or organizations for their outstanding volunteer work.

Tri-community directors of volunteer services, representing Columbus, Fort Benning and Phenix City, will host a kick-off with an awards ceremony and fashion show at Gayfers Court in Peachtree Mall April 23 at 3 p.m.

The theme for this year's event is "Dress for Success — Volunteer." The mayors of both Columbus and Phenix City, as well as the commanding general of Fort Benning, are expected to attend.

The following awards will be presented:

Organization Award — This award will be presented to an organization within the tri-community area that has successfully provided continuous outstanding service as a volunteer agency in the community.

Ocie Mae Harris Memorial Award — This award will be presented to an individual from the tri-community area who has provided volunteer service in a significant manner to one organization for 15 consecutive years. The individual must be actively involved at the present. This individual must be making a contribution to improve the community and his or her volunteer organization.

Youth Volunteer Service Award — This award will be presented to an individual from the tri-community area who has successfully promoted or supported volunteerism. This individual must be 17 or under and be active as a volunteer.

Community Award — This award will be presented to an individual from the tri-community who has provided continuous outstanding service to one or more voluntary agencies. The individual must be a volunteer or director of volunteers. This individual cannot be a member of tri-community directors of volunteer services.

Any member of the community may nominate someone for the honor in any of the four categories. Nomination forms may be obtained from the Medical Center, United Way or the Peachtree Mall information desk. Deadline for nominations is March 31.

For more information, contact Nancy Williams, director of Volunteer Services for the Medical Center, at 571-1482 or Lisa Keeble, director of Community Resources for Untied Way, at 327-3255.

Child-care providers get training

By Bettie S. Harris
Child Development Services

More than 30 child-care program assistants, Family Child Care providers and management staff from Fort Benning Child Development Service attended the Early Childhood Institute at Columbus High School March 11.

The training was sponsored by the University of Georgia Cooperative Extension Service. The theme was "Helping Families Raise Our Kids for the 21st Century" and the keynote address was given by Dr. Sharon Nickols. The highlight of her address was the main ingredients that make a family work.

They are:

- Time — to be a parent, to spend with child
- Economic stability — to be able to be with family when needed
- Commitment — to being a family member and participating
- Professional enough to trust family members and people helping you take care of families.
- Recognizing the importance of a stable, caring family for the future of your children.

After the keynote address, participants had the opportunity to select four training session of their interest. Nickols basic session was on "Family Values." There were more than 65 training sessions from which to choose.

Linda Berry, the "Lead" early childhood training and curriculum specialist for Child Development Services, did a training session on "Strategies For Working with the Independent yet Dependent Toddler. "

During these training sessions, individuals also had the opportunity to meet other professionals from all over Georgia.

Nickols shared the following poem by Lillian Katz on children:

"Each of us must come to care about everyone else's children.

We must recognize that the welfare of our children and grandchildren is intimately linked to the welfare of all other people's children.

After all, when one of our children needs some lifesaving surgery, someone else's child will perform it.

If one of our children is threatened or harmed by violence, someone else's child will be responsible for the violent act.

The good life for our own children can be secured only if a good life is also secured for all other people's children."

Marine Corps launches essay contest

Naval Institute News

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — The seventh annual U.S. Marine Corps Essay Contest, sponsored by the U.S. Naval Institute, will award prizes of $1,000, $750 and $500 to the authors of the three winning essays, and will publish them in the monthly "Proceedings."

Some entries not awarded prizes may also be published and their authors compensated at regular rates.

Anyone may enter. Essays must be postmarked by May 1 and should explore current issues or new directions for the Marine Corps.

Entries must be original, no longer than 3,000 words, and typewritten, double-spaced, on 8 1/2 inch by 11 inch paper.

Entries must include address, telephone number, biographical sketch and Social Security number.

Mail to Editor-in-Chief, Proceedings (USMC Contest), Naval Institute, 118 Maryland Ave., Annapolis, Md. 21402-5035.

The Naval Institute Editorial Board judges the essays and will notify the three award winners by mail around July 1.

The Naval Institute is a 121-year-old professional society for the maritime and military services and is an independent, nonprofit association.

The 90,000-member Naval Institute receives no government funding and advances naval and sea knowledge through research archives, seminars and the publication of "Proceedings," "Naval History," the "Naval Review" and some 500 books.

Teachers win recognition

Fort Benning Schools

Joyce Flatt, fourth-grade teacher at Dexter Elementary School, and Judy Hanley, sixth-grade teacher at Faith Middle School, have been invited to attend the ninth annual Georgia Math-Science Roundtable Honors Seminar in Atlanta April 19 to 21.

Each year, the roundtable sponsors a three-day educational seminar for the top science and math teachers in the state. The seminar includes relevant tours, hands-on briefings on new technologies and interaction and idea-sharing among teachers and business leaders. Approximately 60 teachers attend the all-expense-paid seminar each year.

The roundtable's goals are to provide well-directed support for education from business and industry, to foster understanding between business and education and to reward and encourage exemplary teachers.

Members of the Georgia Math-Science Roundtable include representatives form business and industry, state and local education agencies and schools and education advocates. Membership is open to any group or individual with a strong interest in Georgia education.

LEAVING THE ARMY?
TAKE NOTE - THESE ARE REASONS THAT PEOPLE ARE NOT HIRED:

- Lack of planning for career - no purpose or goals
- Inadequate resume - does not communicate clearly
- Overbearing, overaggressive, conceited, "know-it-all"
- Lack of confidence & poise - nervousness
- Lack of "dressing for success"
- Lack of interest & enthusiasm - passive, indifferent
- Poor interviewing techniques - lack of selling ones' skills
- Uninformed about company
- Overemphasis on money - interest only in best dollar offer
- Asks no questions about the job

ON POST

Teen lock-in — Youth Services is sponsoring a teen lock-in from 4 p.m. April 29 to 8 a.m. April 30. The lock-in is open to teens ages 13 to 18. Registration is April 1 to 22. Cost is $10 per person.

Warrant Officer Auxiliary — The U.S. Army Warrant Officer Spouses Auxiliary will meet April 6 at 7 p.m. at the Fort Benning Officers' Club. Membership is open to all spouses of active duty, retired, reserve and National Guard warrant officers.

The meeting dates for the rest of the year are May 4 and June 1. For more information, call Carole Pfander at 596-8733 or Josie Arroyo at 685-1305.

AG Ball set — The Adjutant General Ball is scheduled for May 12 from 6 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. at the Fort Benning Officers' Club. For more information, call Spc. Michael Perry at 544-9819 or 544-8844.

Free skin cancer screening — Skin cancer screening will be Wednesday and Thursday at the Dermatology Clinic at Martin Army Community Hospital to coincide with National Melanoma/Skin Cancer Detection and Prevention Month.

The screenings are part of a national campaign to encourage early detection and teach prevention of skin cancer, the most common form of cancer in this country . More than 700,000 people will develop skin cancer this year and the number is rising at a rate of three to five percent each year.

An estimated 6,800 people will die from melanoma this year. The majority of them men over the age of 50. However, if detected early, malignant melanoma can usually be successfully treated.

Other forms of skin cancer — basal cell carcinoma and squamous cell carcinoma — are less serious but much more common and can cause damage and even disfigurement if left untreated.

In order to minimize waiting times appointments are being scheduled at 544-2574. No consultation or referral is required for this screening examination. For more information, call 544-2574.

Schedule changes — Winder Health Clinic will not be available to complete referral forms for the Women, Infantry and Children Program April 10 to 14. Interested persons can make arrangements to have forms completed before or after this week. Winder Health Clinic will continue regular Clinic beginning the week of April 17.

Clinic needs help — Volunteers are needed at the Fort Benning Office and Satellite Clinic of the Women, Infantry and Children's Program to pass out and collect surveys during the week of April 10 to 13 from 8:30 a.m. to 3:45 p.m. If interested, call Mary Stewart at 682-8455 by March 31.

Support group for spouses — A waiting spouses' support group is now being formed. The group is open to all spouses whose sponsors have departed for unaccompanied tours. The first meeting will be April 6 at the FUN Center, Building 359 at 7 p.m. For more information or to register, contact Michelle Aldridge, Family Support Group coordinator, at 545-5602.

Volunteers needed to help with label campaign — The Family Child Care Providers need volunteers to help count Campbell's Soup Company labels as part of its campaign to purchase new playground equipment. Help is also needed passing out flyers and removing labels from cans.

Foster parents wanted — The Department of Children and Youth Services is in need of foster parents for youth between the ages of eight and 17 who, for various reasons, cannot return to their homes, have no approved relative's home or other approved placement available, and are in need of temporary residential care.

Home providers are paid a daily per diem and are reimbursed for incidental expenses pertaining to the youth in placement, to include weekly allowance, travel, school expenses and telephone calls. Insurance is paid by the Department of Children and Youth Services on behalf of the home providers.

Interested persons can contact Dean Wilson at 571-4823.

Casting for play — Auditions for Columbus College Theatre's "Boys' Life" by Howard Korder will be Wednesday and Thursday at 7 p.m. in Room 109 of the Fine Arts Hall. A cast of three men, ages 18 to 30 is needed.

"Boys' Life" is a fast-paced, satirical comedy which was produced to great critical acclaim at New York's prestigious Lincoln Center. A bitingly funny postmodern comedy of manners, "Boys' Life" portrays three former college friends seeking to make their way in the Big Apple. Contains adult material and language.

Performance dates are May 11, 12, 13, 14, 18, 19, 20 and 21.

For more information, call 568-2048.

Spring break celebration — Columbus College's first spring break celebration will feature the carnival rides of the James Drew Exposition throughout the week. The main activities April 7 and 8 will include arts and crafts, food, performances by local bands and dance companies, exhibitions of roller blading, Fort Benning's Silver Wings parachute team and college baseball and softball games.

Admission will be $4 adults and $2 for children. Free children's tickets, ages 5 to 12, available at area Burger Kings.

Volunteers needed — Help prevent dropouts — volunteer as teacher and teachers aides. Teachers are needed in reading, math and other fields. Aides are defined as high school graduates, seniors, juniors and college students.

Volunteers are needed at Eastway School, 4601 Buena Vista Road (across from Wal-Mart) Columbus — with an emphasis in core-type education in grades one through eight; and at Davis School, 1822 Shepherd Drive, Columbus — with an emphasis in core-type education in grades one through five.

Classes are from 10 a.m. to noon.

For more information, call 687-5357 or 687-8808 or come by Eastway School or Davis School on Saturday.

Special Forces ball — The commander of the U.S. Army John F. Kennedy Special Warfare Center and School invites all active duty and retired Special Forces soldiers to the Annual Special Forces Ball April 7.

This year's ball, celebrating the eighth birthday of the Special Forces Branch, begins at 6 p.m. at the Fort Bragg Officers' Club, Fort Bragg, N.C.

Tickets are $22 for captains and above and $20 for all other ranks, including retirees. The military uniform for the ball is dress blues or whites, mess dress or class-A with white shirt and black bow ie. Civilian attire is a dark suit or tuxedo.

Dinner will be a choice of chicken cordon blue or sirloin brochette mignon.

Persons who would like to attend can respond by today and make checks payable to the "Special Forces Branch Ball." Space is limited to 550 people.

For information, call Capt. Glen Shepler at (910) 432-6001 or DSN 239-6001.

Reservations can be mailed to Headquarters and Headquarters Company, U.S. Army J.F.K. Special Warfare Center and School, Attn.: AOJK-HC (Capt. Shepler), Fort Bragg, N.C. 28307-5200.

Challenger baseball league — For those who have children that are moderately to severely handicapped and are ages 5 to 21, the Columbus Parks and Recreation Department runs a "Challenger" baseball league.

This league is nationwide and is sanctioned by the Little League. For those who may be interested in enrolling children or participating as a coach or aide, contact Mark Mills, Army Community Service, 545-6969, 545-5516 or 545-3344.

Reunion — A reunion of the 31st Infantry "Dixie' Division World War II and its attached units will convene in Orlando, Fla., Aug. 24 through 26 to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the end of World War II.

The Clarion Plaza Hotel, International Drive in Orlando has been designated reunion headquarters.

The bricks, inscribed with buyer's names, will be placed on the walkway of South Commons, site of the 1996 Olympic Softball competition. Bricks are sold for $30 a piece, and order forms are available at Columbus College, area banks and local radio stations.

For information, call the Columbus '96 office at 660-1996.

Fort Benning host families needed for foreign teens

Pacific Intercultural Exchange

Foreign high school students are scheduled to arrive into the Fort Benning area for academic program homestays and the sponsoring organization needs a few more local host families.

According to John Doty, Pacific Intercultural Exchange executive director, the students are all between the ages of 15 and 18 years, are English-speaking, have their own spending money, carry accident and health insurance, and are anxious to share their cultural experiences with their new American families.

The organization currently has programs to match almost every family's needs, ranging in length from a semester to a full academic year, where the students attend local high schools.

Area representatives match students with host families by finding common interests and lifestyles through an informal in-home meeting. Prospective host families are able to review student applications and select the perfect match. As there are no "typical" host families, the organization can fit a student into just about any situation, whether it be a single parent, a childless couple, a retired couple or a large family.

Families who host for PIE are also eligible to claim a $50 per month charitable contribution deduction on their itemized tax returns for each month they host a sponsored student.

For the upcoming programs, the organization has students from Spain, Germany, Poland, Russia, Finland, Argentina, Brazil, Colombia, Paraguay, Australia, New Zealand, Croatia and many other countries.

The organization has also been invited to participate in a special government-funded program to bring scholarship students from the newly independent states of the former Soviet Union to the United States. The organization is a nonprofit educational organization that has sponsored more than 18,000 students from 40 countries since its founding in 1975.

Doty encourages families to contact the program immediately, as it will allow the proper time for the students and hosts to get to know one another before they actually meet for the first time.

The agency also has travel or study program opportunities available for American high school students as well as possibilities for community volunteers to assist and work with area host families, students and schools.

Fort Benning area families interested in learning more about student exchangecan call (800) 631-1818.

crime watch

Military Police Activity

Spring is almost upon us, which means summer can't be far behind. That brings cookouts, parties and trips to the lake or beach.

During these months, driving accidents increase. Annually, 57,000 people die in traffic accidents on our nation's highways. More than half of these accidents involve alcohol.

Use a designated driver or call a taxi; even your unit will assist if it will help keep you off the road.

The following entries were taken from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters. Such entries may be incomplete and are not intended to prove the guilt or innocence of any person.

• A civilian was charged with shoplifting and criminal trespassing at the Post Exchange. The subject was seen placing 12 cartons of cigarettes into a hand basket and then placing Army and Air Force Exchange Services fliers over them and walking out of the store without paying. The individual was apprehended by the Military Police and transported to the station where he was further processed and issued post ejection orders; he was then taken to the post boundary and released.

• A private first class was charged with possession and use of marijuana. While his commander was making a check of the company area, he observed a wallet on top of a soda machine. In an attempt to identify the owner he discovered a small plastic bag containing marijuana in the wallet.

Upon arrival of the Military Police, the subject was apprehended and taken to the station where he admitted to the offense. The soldier was further processed and released to his unit.

• A former soldier was charged with larceny of government property. Government records showed that the individual had been discharged for approximately 10 months but continued to receive his service pay in the amount of $14,786.86. Efforts to locate and question the individual have been unsuccessful.

• A private first class was charged with shoplifting at the Post Exchange. The soldier was observed removing two compact discs from the display shelf and placed them under his shirt. He then left the store without paying. Upon arrival of the Military Police, the soldier was taken to the station where he was further processed and issued identification card confiscation orders, suspension of Post Exchange privileges and was released to his unit.

Other activities include four cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, 19 traffic accidents and seven cases of shoplifting reported at Post Exchange facilities.

Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police at 545-5223 or 545-5224 or the "Crime In Progress" line at 545-5222.

Votes count during off-year elections

Service members reminded to cast votes in state primaries, general elections

By Stephen Barrett
American Forces Information Service

Federal elections occur every two years. Last year, millions of Americans voted for the 104th Congress, which convened in January.

Yet voting responsibilities don't end at the federal level. Elections also occur at the village, town, city, county and state levels, and elections happen every year.

Federal Voting Assistance Program officials urge service members to learn their local issues and vote in 1995 off-year elections.

This year 36 states and the District of Columbia will have elections. Kentucky, Louisiana and Mississippi residents will vote for governors.

However, most elections this year will select mayors, county sheriffs, school board members and county council representatives.

"I believe the local elections are equally as important as the federal elections," said Phyllis Taylor, Federal Voting Assistance Program director. "These elections have a direct impact on the daily life of service members and their families back home."

Taylor said local elections decide a variety of issues.

Elections determine how schools educate youth.

Voters approve budgets for road improvements, construction projects, social programs and curfews.

It's these issues, she said, that affect family and friends back home, as well as service members returning from their military duties.

To learn about the issues affecting service members and their hometowns, Taylor is encouraging use of DoD's Voting Information Center.

Unlike federal elections where issues and candidate positions receive much publicity, Taylor said there are thousands of issues at local levels that don't get visibility outside local voting district.

By calling the Voting Information Center hot line at (703) 693-6500 or DSN 223-6500, service members interested in local issues can leave messages with their state's secretary of state.

Those messages then go to local election officials, who can answer specific questions and send election information.

Knowing the issues is important, but, Taylor said, knowing issues won't help if service members don't vote.

That's why, she said, it's important to apply for an absentee ballot by submitting a completed Federal Post Card Application, Standard Form76.

Although some states require separate applications for each election, others need only one request per calendar year. In addition, certain states have specific voting requirements.

Therefore, it's important that service members check with their unit voting assistance officers, the 1994-95 Voting Assistance Guide for state procedures, or call the post Voting Assistance Office at 545-3881.

Media campaign targets children, drugs

Dept. of Health and Human Services

Responding to recent surveys indicating an increase in self-reported use of marijuana and the inflated perceptions that exist about peer use, The Partnership for a Drug-Free America has launched a powerful media campaign aimed at school-aged youth.

Thirteen 30-second spots have been sent to national television networks and affiliate stations in the 40 largest media markets.

The campaign's approach is heavy on peer influence, aiming at the misperceptions of youth that all of their friends smoke marijuana.

The ads show that the nonuser is not so different from many of his or her peers.

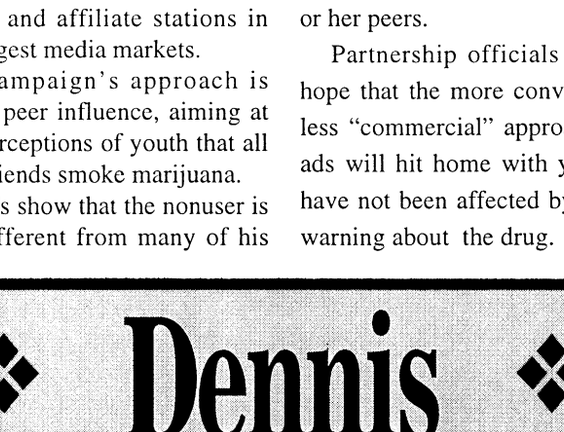
Partnership officials said they hope that the more conversational, less "commercial" approach of the ads will hit home with youth who have not been affected by previous warning about the drug.

Food advice dished out

American Institute for Cancer Research

March is National Nutrition Month, and if you have questions about the food you eat, food reports you read about in the news — or if you just want to find out how to eat for better health and lower cancer risk — answers from a registered dietitian are just a toll-free telephone call away.

Dial (800) 843-8114, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays, and you'll reach the nationwide nutrition hot line of the American Institute for Cancer Research.



The hot line is a place to get answers to any nutrition questions you may have, as well as a reliable information source about how diet affects cancer risk.

Hot line callers often call for advice on questions such as how much fat they can safely eat for good health or how nutrients in fruits and vegetables can help protect their health.

Food safety questions are also answered, and hot line callers can request a list of free AICR pamphlets and recipe booklets on how to eat for lower cancer risk.

The American Institute for Cancer Research is the only major national cancer charity focusing exclusively on the link between diet, nutrition and cancer. Researchers estimate that 40 to 60 percent of all cancers are linked to our diets.

Don't get caught in 'critical parent' trap

By Randall Holmes
USAIC Chaplain Office

One day, a father complained to a friend, "I've got a TV, cable, two phone lines, a phone in my car, a fax — and my kids tell me I'm still out of touch."

We live in a world drowning in up-to-date information. Yet, many times as parents, we are completely out of touch with our children. We have computers that we program to talk to other computers, but we find it complicated and frustrating just trying to talk with our children. Ironically, we find it easier to communicate with a machine than with our own flesh and blood.

Jason and his father set aside Saturday afternoon to build a doghouse for Fred, the latest addition to the family. Will the afternoon be a happy time of sharing and emotional growth? Let's listen in. See if you hear yourself in what is said.

"You're holding the hammer wrong, " Jason's father cautions. "Don't put that two-by-four there. If you weren't so careless, you wouldn't have dumped the nails."

If Jason's father continues his stream of criticism, the afternoon will be a failure. Both father and son will grow frustrated and angry. Jason may start telling himself that he really is stupid, clumsy and incapable of doing anything right.

Does this describe how family talk goes on in your home?

The next time you spend an uninterrupted hour with your children, make a mental note of the times you give your child a negative comment and compare it to the number of positive comments you give.

At the end of the hour, multiply the number of negative comments by three since negative comments carry three times more power in the effect on the receiver than positive comments. Now compare the number of negative and positive comments. Does the label "critical parent" apply to you?

At times, we all fall into the critical parent trap. What can we do to stay out of the trap? How do we keep channels of nurturing communication open?

First, decide if the situation merits criticism. Criticism can be an effective teaching tool. But to criticize a 2-year-old for spilling a glass of milk may not be warranted.

Second, change negative comments into positive or neutral ones whenever possible. Jason's father could have said, "Try holding the hammer this way," rather than telling his son he was doing it wrong.

reflections

Third, refrain from comparing your children. Similarly, never criticize your child in the presence of others. I have heard parents telling an adult friend how terrible their children are while the children are hearing every word that is being said. Those publicly made critical remarks negates a child's sense of self-worth.

Finally, look for opportunities to compliment your children. Your children are God's gift to you. He has given each of them unique and wonderful gifts. He holds us responsible for helping our children identify those gifts and encouraging their use in building our children's self-esteem.

By following these guidelines, you will fulfill Paul's admonition, "Do not exasperate your children; instead, bring them up in the training and instruction of the Lord." (Ephesians 6:4, NIV)

Patton promoted power of prayer

USAIC Chaplain Office

Gen. George S. Patton Jr. was a larger than life leader and hero during his colorful and victorious World War II campaigns.

Everyone who knew him or who has studied his tactics and his life, agrees that he was a brilliant life-long student. He memorized a vast amount of material and regularly used what he learned. He studied not only the great warriors of the past, but also other great thinkers, philosophers and writers.

While his three children were growing up, Patton influenced them to memorize many of his favorite writing. One of these was Achilles' prayer at Troy, which Patton learned from "The Iliad" "O Father Zeus; save us from this fog and give us a clear sky so that we can use our eyes. Kill us in daylight if you must." ("The Patton Mind," Roger H. Nye, Avery Publishing Group Inc. Garden City Park, N.Y., 1993).

Another of these was a prayer by Socrates: "All-knowing Zeus; give me what is best for me. Avert evil from me though it be the thing I prayed for; and give me the good, for which, from ignorance, I did not ask."

Patton often instructed his subordinates to read their Bible and to keep their feet clean. He also encouraged them to pray. His personal diary contains numerous

prayer

references to his praying. One entry during 1942 states: 'I have been doing some extra praying. I hope that whatever comes up, I shall be able to do my full duty. If I can do that, I have nothing more to ask. Fate will determine whatever success I shall attain ..."

Another entry in 1943 read, "I pray daily to do my duty, retain my self-confidence and accomplish my destiny. No one can live under the awful responsibility I have without divine help. Frequently I feel that I don't rate it.'

In 1943 Patton wrote the following prayer-poem.

God of Battles

From pride and foolish confidence. From every weakening creed. From the dread fear of fearing. Protect us, Lord and lead. Great God, who through the ages hast braced the bloodstained hand, As Saturn, Jove or Woden Bast led our warrior band, again we seek thy counsel, but not in cringing guise. We whine not for thy mercy — to slay: God make us wise. For slaves who shun the issue we do not ask thy aid. To thee we trust our spirits, our bodies unafraid. From doubt and fearsome boding, Still thou our spirits guard. Make strong our souls to conquer. Give us the victory, Lord.

The weather was particularly bad before the Battle of Bastogne. There were clouds, fog, and rain. The allied bombers could not see their targets, so were unable to be effective.

Patton designed his Christmas 1944 card with one side containing a prayer by Chaplain James O'Neill, asking for better weather in which to fight. The other side contained a greeting to each officer and soldier. He sent out 250,000 of these cards.

Just before time for the battle to begin, the skies cleared and the allies were able to find their targets.

"Almighty and most merciful Father, we humbly beseech thee, of thy great goodness, to restrain these immoderate rains with which we have had to contend. Grant us fair weather for battle. Graciously hearken to us as soldiers who call upon thee that armed with thy power, we may advance from victory to victory and crush the oppression and wickedness of our enemies, and establish thy justice among men and nations. Amen."

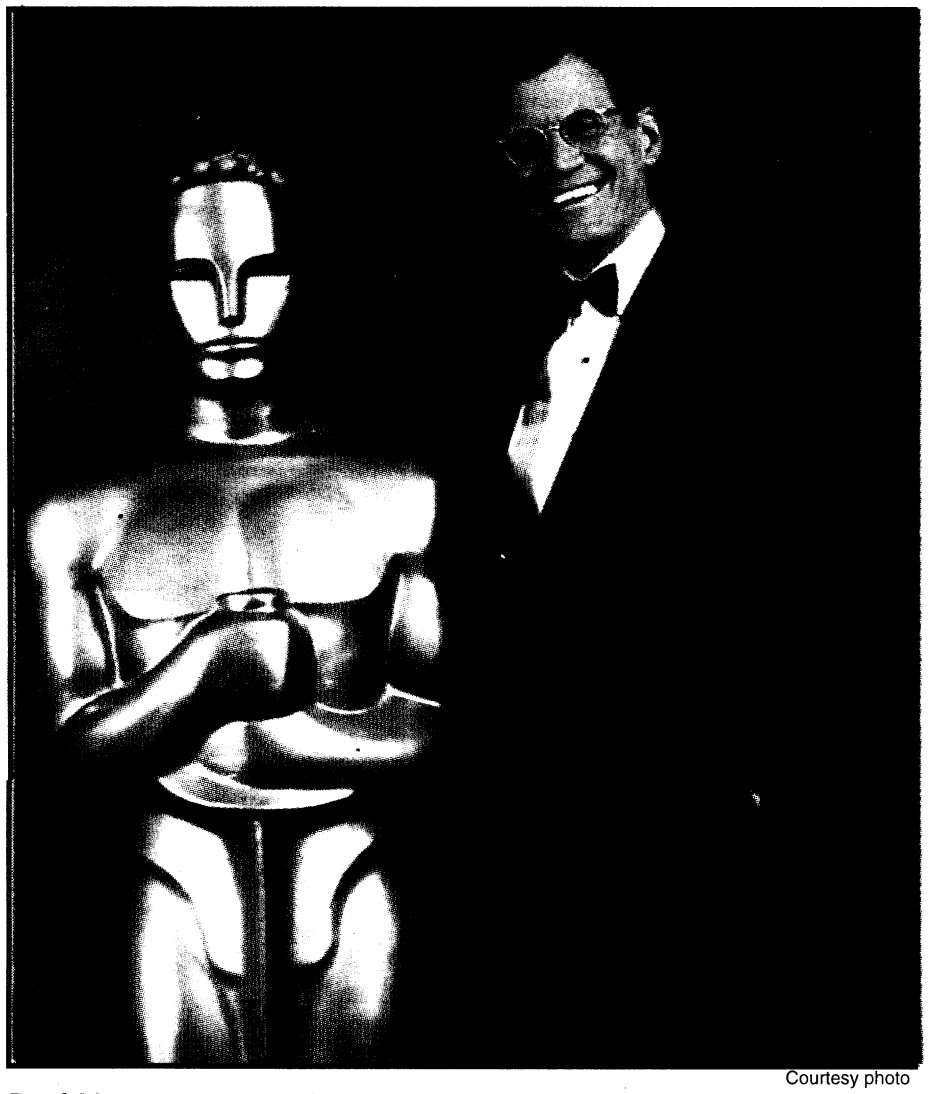
Letterman to host 'Academy Awards'

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services



Expect an Oscar show like no other this week, thanks to one person likely to dominate the evening ... and he's not even a nominee.

SPOTLIGHT

David Letterman will make a rare foray away from his CBS late-night program into the prime-time hours Monday, as he serves as host of ABC's telecast of the 67th annual Academy Awards ceremony, originating from Los Angeles' Shrine Auditorium.

He becomes the latest of the comedy stars who have presided over the American motion-picture industry's top event — ranging from Bob Hope and Johnny Carson to Billy Crystal and Whoopi Goldberg — but given Letterman's particular brand of barbs, the humor in his monologue and subsequent introductions of celebrity presenters could be among the most pointed ever delivered during an Oscar show. His presence also supports the theme of this year's program, a tribute to comedy throughout the history of the movies.

Traditional elements of the scheduled three-hour broadcast will include the bestowing of several special trophies: Composer-producer Quincy Jones will receive the Jean Hersholt Humanitarian Award, Clint Eastwood will be given the Irving G. Thalberg Award for career achievement and veteran Italian filmmaker Michelangelo Antonioni will be acknowledged with an honorary Oscar.

Stitching, woodcarving available at Unicoi Park

Georgia State Parks & Historic Sites

Unicoi State Park and Lodge in Atlanta has a four-day getaway for folks with a creative streak. Workshops on stitching and woodcarving will be offered April 2 to 5.

Stitchers may choose from two workshops. "A Sampling of Tiny Treasures" will allow students to learn different stitchery techniques and complete their project during the class. Woven ribbons, embroidery, lace and entredeaux will be used to make a needle case or small pin cushion. The cost is $215.

During the "Sylvan Glade" workshop, metallic and opalescent threads mixed with flat and textured stitches will be used to catch sunlight. Students must provide some supplies for the "Sylvan Glade" workshop. The cost is $220.

The woodcarving workshop will concentrate on beginning and intermediate "round" carving, such as birds or animals. Students will learn both basic and advanced carving techniques. The cost is $181.

Registration fees include three nights in a modern lodge room, nine meals in the lodge's restaurant and workshop supplies.

All prices are based on double occupancy. Roommates or spouses not participating in a workshop pay $146 for lodging and meals.

For information, call (706) 878-2201.

movies

Bad company — Laurence Fishburne is a CIA agent fallen from grace while Ellen Barkin is the seductive head of an industrial spy ring. (Some graphic shootings, strong sexuality and language)

Murder in the First — Based on a 1930s event, this courtroom drama follows an inexperienced public defender as he develops a radical defense for his client, who has committed murder while incarcerated in Alcatraz. (Strong images of prison brutalities, sexuality and language)

Nell — This is a drama about a young woman who has discovered living beyond the edge of civilization in a backwoods Tennessee cabin. She has grown up with no language other than an incomprehensible babble. (Nudity)

Little Women — A retelling of Louisa May Alcott's Classic novel of the March sisters growing up in New England during the 1860s. (Mild language)

Demon Knight — A mysterious man defends some boardinghouse residents against a bad guy. The Crypt keeper is on hand to guide you through the story. (Gore, horror violence, sexuality and language)

Houseguest — In his movie debut, Sinbad plays a scam artist on the run from his latest failed scheme. He falls into the company of a lawyer and starts up a new con, telling the man he's his long lost childhood buddy. (Language, double-entendre humor and some comic violence)

Higher Learning — This drama centers around three freshmen at fictitious Columbus University confronted with college life while dealing with escalating racial tension on campus. (Violence, sexuality and strong language)

Pianist, composer to present workshop at Cols college

Columbus College

Renowned Israeli pianist and composer Liz Magnes will present a free workshop and concert at Columbus College April 3 in the Davidson Student Center auditorium on campus.

The workshop will be presented at 4 p.m. and the concert at 8 p.m.

The workshop will explore improvisational music of the Middle Eastern, Jewish and Arabic scales and makam as well as Yiddish and Ladino melody lines and rhythms.

Several Israeli songs will also be analyzed in relation to Magnes' jazz interpretations of the pieces.

The concert will include her own original compositions, influenced by Yiddish folk songs.

The concert will also feature music that combines Israeli, Jewish and Middle Eastern elements in which she blends ancient tradition with her personal jazz interpretations.

Magnes is touring under the sponsorship of the Consulate General of Israel for the Southeastern United States, and her performance at Columbus College is presented by the college's Schwob Department of Music and the Center for International Education.

For information, contact the Schwob Department of Music at 568-2049.

Pharmacy service to improve

By Jan Wesner Childs
Special to The Bayonet©

Martin Army Community Hospital Pharmacy customers should expect delays over the next several weeks while the facility converts to an improved computer system.

Eventually, though, the new system will mean faster service.

Chief of pharmacy Col. Errol Moran said Monday that patients' demographics have to be entered into the new system. The records include a patient's address, phone number, date of birth and drug allergies.

"Anybody that comes to get a prescription, we have to make sure not only that they are in the system but that their sponsor is in the system," Moran said.

A patient whose records have not been entered into the computer may have to wait at the pharmacy while a clerk inputs the records.

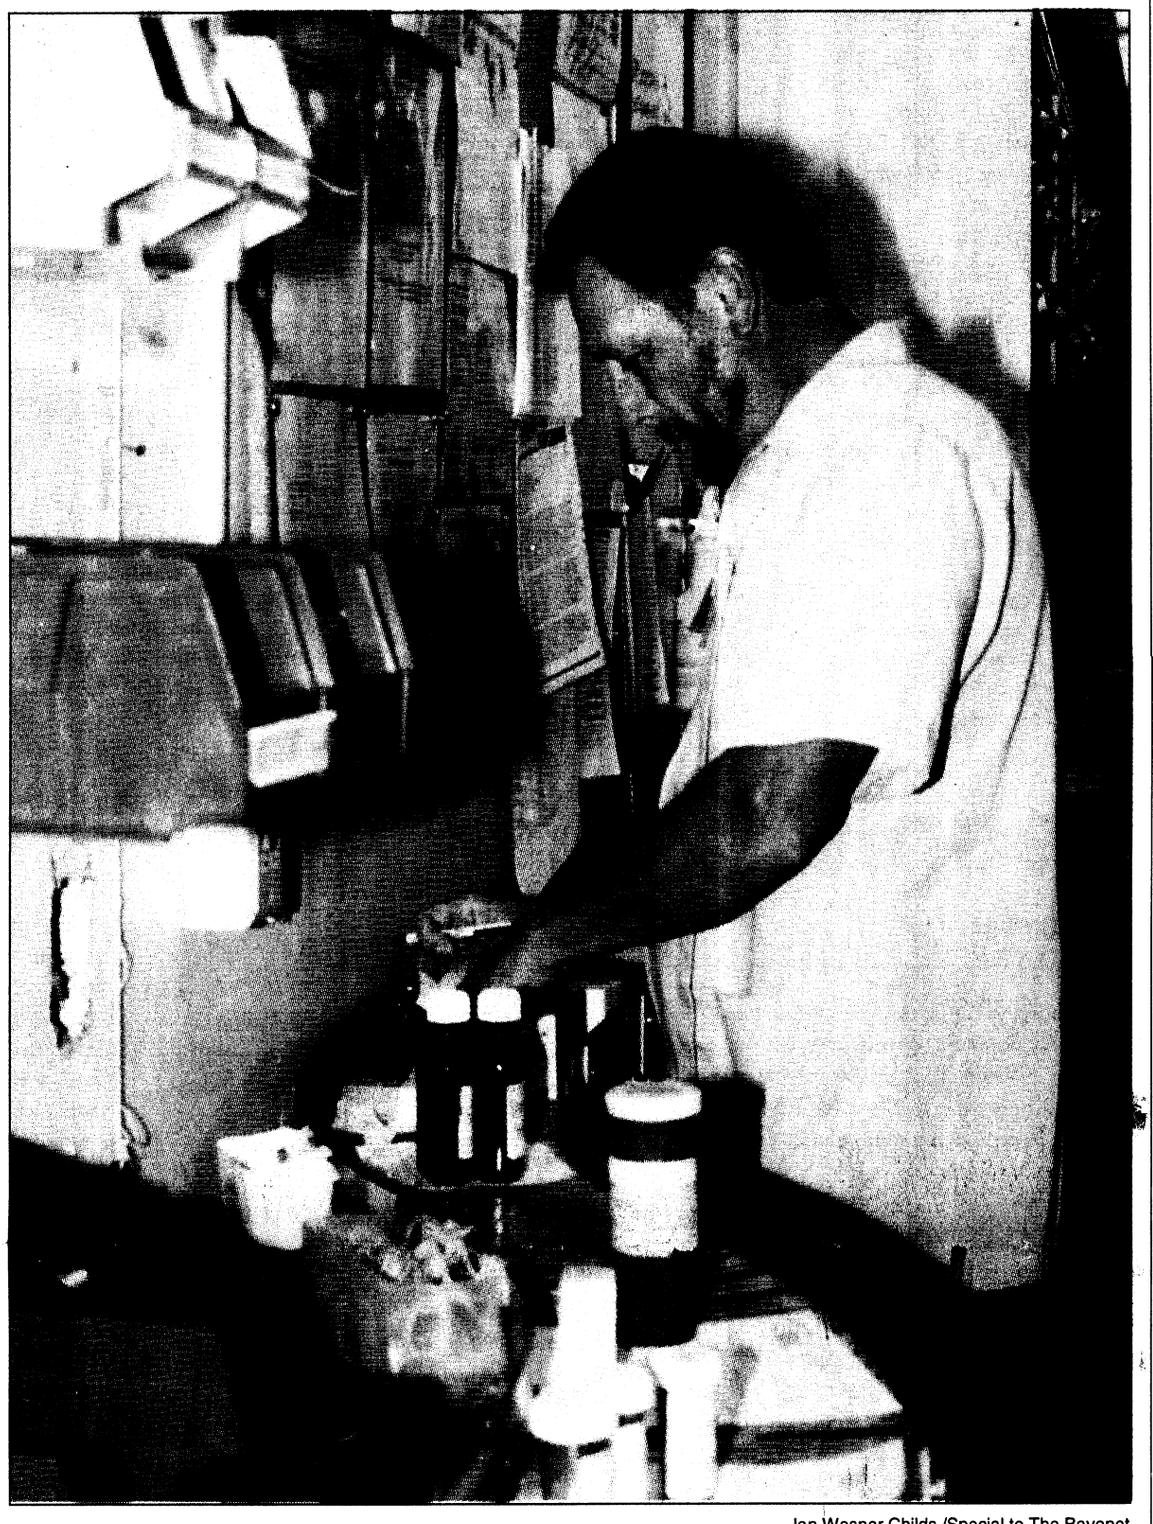
The system is part of the Composite Health Care System being installed throughout the hospital.

It will link all post medical facilities, including pharmacies, clinics, hospital wards and laboratories.

Since it will link all the medical facilities together, Moran said doctors will be able to input prescriptions while a patient is still in the office. That means no more carrying a hand-written prescription to the pharmacy and waiting for it to be filled.

"While the doctor's finishing up with the patient, we can be filling the prescription so that the prescription will be ready when the patient comes to the pharmacy," Moran said.

Maj. Antonio Reyes, chief of the Outpatient Pharmacy, said there will be greater communication between doctors and the pharmacy.



Reyes said doctors will be able to look up what medications the patient is taking. Pharmacists, in turn, will be able to check a patient's medical history.

He said the system will help to alert pharmacists as to any possible drug interactions and/or duplicate therapies.

"That way we can contact the prescriber for appropriate changes," Reyes said.

He said the new system will also streamline the refill process because all the information will be waiting on file in the computer.

The pharmacy handles about 2,200 prescriptions and refills a day, Reyes said.

Post makes ACOE history

Back to back!

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning is the best post in the Army for the second year in a row.

Army Chief of Staff Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan made this announcement Thursday night to some 300 soldiers and civilians gathered at the Association of the United States Army general membership meeting at the Officers' Club.

Today, he is scheduled to speak to the Fort Benning work force in Marshall Auditorium in Infantry Hall, Building 4, at 8:30 a.m.

Never before has an Army installation won the Commander-in-Chief's award two years running.

Post Commanding General Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix said winning the award "shows people at Fort Benning care enough and take pride enough to go the extra mile to be the best there is.

"These are the kind of people it takes to win, and these are the people we have here at Fort Benning," he said.

"It's difficult to articulate how incredibly tough it is to win the award," Hendrix continued. "There are thousands of posts out there competing for this honor."

Hendrix said the post's challenge after winning two years in a row is to continue to find new ways to do things better.

With this latest win, Fort Benning caps an Army Communities of Excellence first-place run that began in 1992, when it was named best extra-large installation in Training and Doctrine Command.

The post continued to top TRADOC in 1993 and 1994, and took DA honors as best large installation in the continental United States, large category, in those two years as well.

The climb to the top culminated last year when Fort Benning received the CINC award, which was presented, along with $1.5 million, in ceremonies conducted at the Pentagon May 20.

According to Dave Flo, director of Resource Management, the award is a reflection of what goes on day in and day out at Fort Benning.

"We won the award two years' running because we are the best and will continue to provide quality training, quality services and a quality lifestyle to our soldiers, who deserve nothing less," he said.

Ranger deaths result in admin actions

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet assistant editor

The conclusion of an internal investigation into the deaths of four ranger students during the final phase of Ranger School has resulted in administrative disciplinary action against nine ranger cadre members.

Ranger students 2nd Lt. Spencer Dodge, 25, Stanley, N.Y.; Capt. Milton Palmer, 27, Fishers, Ind.; 2nd Lt. Curt Sansoucie, 23, Rochester, N.H.; and Sgt. Norman Tillman, 28, Grenada, Miss., died of hypothermia after extended exposure to 50- to 59-degree water during training in the Florida swamps Feb. 15 and 16.

The six-week investigation, headed by Fort Benning's deputy commander Brig. Gen. John J. Maher III at the request of Commanding General Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, found "human judgment errors" and "a flawed decision making process" to be the causes of a situation that led to the four training deaths, Hendrix said.

Fluctuating water levels and temperatures in the swamp were not accurately and thoroughly reported, Hendrix said, which resulted in the ranger students conducting operations in chest- and neck-deep water rather than the expected calf- to waist-deep water.

Ranger instructors, once they realized they were in trouble, forged ahead through the swamps rather than turning around, believing high ground was not far ahead, he said.

It was errors in judgment like these, Hendrix said, that "got a unit into a situation that it could not handle."

The names of the individuals and specifics of the actions being taken against them are protected under the Privacy Act of 1974, but disciplinary actions may range from counseling and letters of reprimand to relief from duty and command

The investigation report concludes that failure in supervision and judgment, lack of situational awareness and lack of control placed ranger students "in water which was too deep and too cold for the length of time of immersion," Hendrix said.

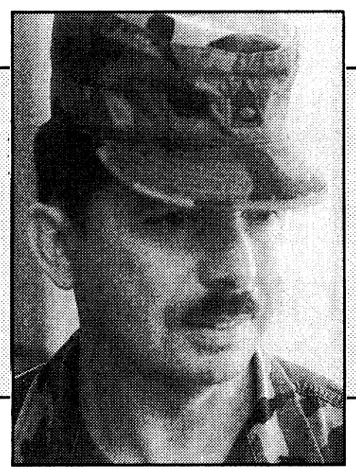
"As preparation for a waterborne operation of this sort, the Ranger Training Battalion chain of command must determine the water depths and temperatures in the training areas and make appropriate decisions based on those measurements in order to ensure a safe operation," Hendrix said. "That process failed for this operation."

The names of the individuals and specifics of the actions being taken against them are protected under the Privacy Act of 1974, Hendrix said, but disciplinary actions may range from counseling and letters of reprimand to relief from duty and command.

"They are extremely significant actions and have a significant potential impact on the careers of all the people involved," Hendrix said.

There is no basis for criminal action such as court martial in this case, Hendrix said, because human error is not a basis for negligent homicide.

Several initiatives based on the investigation's findings have already been put into place to prevent this kind of accident from happening again. These include validating the Army's water exposure guidance tables, establishing an on-site refuel capability for rescue helicopters and updating battalion standard operating and risk assessment procedures.



Waterborne operations have been suspended in Florida since the accident, and students there will be performing dry-land operations until a plan to set up specific training "lanes" through the swamp is finalized, Hendrix said.

"We will not restart until we're all convinced that we have fixed everything that there is to fix and that it's completely safe to resume training," Hendrix said.

There have been two other investigations into the accident. The Army Safety Center also recently completed an investigation with similar findings, Hendrix said. Another, being conducted by the Army Criminal Investigation Division Command, is still under way.

Primary Leadership Development Course. You can always tell a recent graduate — this former ragbag specialist comes back to his or her unit and starts making on-the-spot corrections to everyone. (Excuse me, sergeant major, your unit patch is 1/16 inch off-center.)

Well, I haven't done that — everyone around here is at least as squared away as I am — but I did, finally, get through PLDC, the 30-day course that seems to last a lifetime.

PLDC is supposed to prepare specialists and corporals to become sergeants, and I think in a lot of ways it succeeds. But what it also does is produce culture shock in the students.

Most of these students have been in the Army at least two or three years, have become good at their jobs and are used to a certain level of responsibility — and freedom.

Suddenly, there are rules to obey. Lots of them — when to go to bed, when to get up, when you can — or can't — use the telephone, how to set up your wall locker (fingers of the gloves facing left, or right?) and so on.

Once you get used to shutting up and doing what you're told, you start to stress over the course requirements. Some of the hurdles: three written exams, covering everything from wear of the uniform to counseling to soldier team building to map reading; marching troops through a set routine in drill and ceremony; conducting physical training and completing a land navigation course.

It was a real experience, for me, to take a map, a compass, a protractor, and grid coordinates and actually use them to get to where I was supposed to be. And the field training exercise was a lot of fun, after we got through the first cold, rainy, miserable night.

The most interesting part, though, was working with my squad. There were 16 of us, and we did all the course work together. We had two pathfinders, a chaplain assistant, a military police person, a food inspector, a band member, a few infantrymen, one supply person and one accounting person, among others.

The group discussions among the 16 of us brought out some interesting viewpoints. The MP's answer to everything was, "Smoke 'em!"

"What's the first thing you should do for a soldier inprocessing your unit?"

"Smoke 'em!"

"How would you counsel a soldier having family problems?"

"Smoke 'em!"

By the end of the course, a couple of our infantrymen were willing to admit that females weren't totally useless, our band member had played a few tunes on an M-60 machine gun, our chaplain assistant almost cussed, and the food inspector ate an MRE.

This mix of soldiers, I think, is what makes PLDC interesting. I learned a lot from the classroom instruction, but I learned about how the Army works from the people around me. Everyone has valuable knowledge, and everyone has something to learn.

I think I did learn the basics of leadership. I also learned that shaving cream will take the carbon off an M-16, that rangers make the best coffee when you're in the field, that oven cleaner will take the soap scum off any shower, and that you never know when you're going to need some 550 cord.

'People first' in Army's next era

By Pete Durban
Army News Service

commentary

In October, in remarks to the American Logistics Association's annual convention in San Antonio, Texas, the undersecretary of Defense for personnel and readiness addressed the group about how the Pentagon is maintaining readiness during the current DoD restructuring.

Edwin Dorn's bottom line? "Basically, the key to our success is putting people first."

Dorn's "people first" statement is one being echoed throughout DoD and the Army. "Quality of life" is now a common buzz-phrase everywhere. Sure, "people" issues share the spotlight with readiness concerns, Force XXI, peacekeeping and other important concerns that will shape our Army for the next century. But if you listen to the defense leadership today the message is clear — people issues count, and count in a major way.

Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan is leading our Army into our next era. The Army's chief of staff recognizes that a new vision is necessary as our Army faces untold situations and challenges. Quite frankly, these situations and challenges are upon us. As a warfighter, Sullivan has seen, and overseen, a whole new set of situations that face us. "In Panama and the Gulf," the chief has said, "but more importantly in operations since then, such as Haiti, Rwanda, Macedonia and so on, we also see the demands of new and different missions." And certainly, these missions have had a profound effect on thousands of individual soldiers and their family members.

While many have Sullivan's attention in a myriad of issues, one individual acts as a special set of extra eyes and ears for the chief.

University of Maryland Professor of Sociology David R. Segal meets with Sullivan on a regular basis. Segal and his graduate students have spent years studying the military and the demands set upon soldiers and their families. Segal is a "deployable" scholar, studying the Army from the Multinational Force and Observers operations in the Sinai to Patriot battalion deployments to Korea.

Segal observes soldiers and units "deployment and operation tempo," such as the 10th Mountain Division's "busy" recent few years. He then reports back to the chief about how the unit and its soldiers are coping.

Segal says the chief "is using me as an extra eyes and ears to look at our Army."

Recently Segal discovered that a major complaint among soldiers and family members was the loss of the basic allowance for subsistence whenever soldiers were sent on deployments. His observation of this complaint came during a Patriot battalion's deployment from Fort Bliss, Texas, to Korea. According to Segal, many junior enlisted families were "taking a beating," and this situation was something the "chief can fix."

And fixed it was. Segal uncovered the problem in June, the Army chief of staff "fixed" it in July, and President Bill Clinton signed an executive order in late October that changed the definition of field duty that allows enlisted soldiers and officers to keep their monthly food allowance while deployed.

Call it a major victory in the battle for quality of life. Call it listening and caring for the troops and families constantly facing the challenges the nation asks its soldiers to accept.

For the common soldier, it's good to know the Army leadership cares about you, your future, your family. It's great to hear the Sgt. Maj. of the Army Richard Kidd say in regards to Defense Secretary William Perry's press conference announcing his $2.7 billion quality of life initiative, "In my 30-plus years in the Army, I've never heard of a secretary (of defense) call a press conference to talk quality of life."

For the common soldier, it's good to have Professor Segal on our side as well.

dial 545-boss

Dial 545-BOSS is the commander's action line for soldiers, family members and civilians to call when they have problems or complaints that can't be resolved elsewhere.

While it is not a substitute for the chain of command or for agencies that provide assistance, it offers another means of communication between Fort Benning's community and commanders. The Bayonet features some of the calls that may benefit other members of the Fort Benning community.

Call: My neighbor in Indianhead Terrace has three vehicles in the quarters parking lot and one has been broken down for months. I believe this vehicle is an eyesore, is taking up much needed space and should be removed.

Family Housing Branch response:

The chief of quarters management contacted the Community Life Center and asked if someone would check the housing area for the broken down car in or around the reported area.

The Community Life Center reported back to the Housing Office that a 1967 Ford Fairlane with a flat tire had been located, which was legally parked; and, since there is no designated parking in the housing area there is no reason to have the car removed.

However, the Military Police said that they will put a ticket on the car.

Call: Anyone with an identification card can sign a guest into the Post Exchange and then leave the PX with the person they signed in still in there.

I believe PX privileges should only be allowed for the military and their family members and should not be extended to civilians.

Army and Air Force Exchange Service response:

The sign-in policy enforced by the exchange is directed by the commanding general. Authorized patrons are allowed to sign in guests. Guests are not authorized to make purchases or cash checks. Signature of the authorized patron certifies that he or she will accompany guests and guests will not purchase merchandise.

Schools face unexpected expenses

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet©

Budgeting triumphs and unexpected expenses dominated the monthly school board meeting March 27.

The net income for the school lunch fund for the month of February was $2,841, a turnaround from recent losses in that fund, reported Alice Skinner, director of logistics and support services.

Cost-cutting measures implemented recently have resulted in big savings for the fund, and more savings are expected next month as additional proposed changes are activated, Skinner said.

"That is certainly a glowing report," said Lt. Col. Michael Bingham, Faith School representative who presided over the meeting in the absence of Col. Gregory Camp, school board president and post chief of staff.

Although the school lunch fund has made money, several unexpected expenses have surfaced, many resulting from the temporary housing of Loyd School in an Army "Starship," or self-contained building.

"We have about $224,000 in extra costs that we couldn't have anticipated," said Dr. Dell Karr in the superintendent's report.

Additional costs associated with the move include overtime expenses for personnel who worked weekends and holidays to streamline the process, portable blackboards and partitions, and extra utility costs for air conditioning the starship, Karr said.

Other unexpected expenses in the school system include repairing an air conditioning panel at McBride School that was struck by lightning, repairing the McBride School roof, repairing an erosion problem at the old Loyd School playground, mandatory travel and training for school personnel, and environmental testing of the school bus motor pool area.

Environmental issues at the motor pool could prove expensive, Karr said, estimating that testing and evaluation of the site could be as much as $35,000. Clean-up costs for the site, located on Gaudette St. on main post, would be more, she said.

"We should pay our fair share, but the costs should be divided (among previous tenants)" said Lt. Col. Andrew Stewart, attorney advisor for the board. Fort Benning has used the site for the past five years; previously; local contractors as well as the Army Air Force Exchange Service used the area for motor pools.

In an effort to cut costs, Karr announced the administration had saved $70,000 from the budget by reducing summer help.

Normally, individual school systems are expected to absorb the expense for each problem that costs less than $50,000, according to guidelines established for Department of Defense schools, commonly called Section 6 schools.

However, the Board will appeal for financial help to Dr. Hector Nevaras, director of DOD domestic dependents' elementary and secondary schools. The various expenses, which are less than $50,000 individually, total $224,000.

In other action:

• Karr announced the History Club at Faith Middle School placed first in district competition. Members will compete for the state title April 22.

• The Board congratulated two students who attended the meeting and are planning to compete at the World Special Olympics in Connecticut this July.

Joselyn Nieves of Faith Middle School will compete in artistic gymnastics, and Latise Reed of Loyd will swim.

• The Faith School Odyssey of the Mind Team placed second in the spontaneous category and fourth overall at the district competition March 18.

• Other students who were recognized include young artists who displayed work at the Columbus Museum, students selected to play with the All City Band, and middle schoolers selected to sing with the All State Chorus in April.

• The Army Federation of Government Employees is now certified to act as the exclusive bargaining agent for teacher's aides on Fort Benning, according to Richard Skinner, assistant superintendent for budget and personnel.

• Karr said Spencer High School personnel will hold an orientation on academic and athletic programs for students in eighth grade April 6 and 7 at Faith Middle School.

• Karr said fine arts programs in the schools have been successful and have included saxophone concerts and artist-in-residence Matthew Shelton, who plays the harmonica. Also, Faith School hosted a dinner theater on Thursday and Friday, March 16 and 17. Approximately 500 parents and friends attended the 'Wizard of Oz' in which every eighth grade student had a part, Karr said.

• Bingham appointed a three-person committee to review the salary of the superintendent and assistant superintendents as compared with other school systems of similar size, and to make recommendations for changes. Committee members are Mary Renn, Stowers School representative, Staff Sgt. John Perdue, McBride School representative, and Lisa Grover, Loyd School representative, who will chair the group.

Board members present at the meeting include Bingham, Karr, Stewart, Renn, Perdue, Grover, Major Robert Thompson, Karen Marchant, and Staff Sgt. Leroy Coronado.

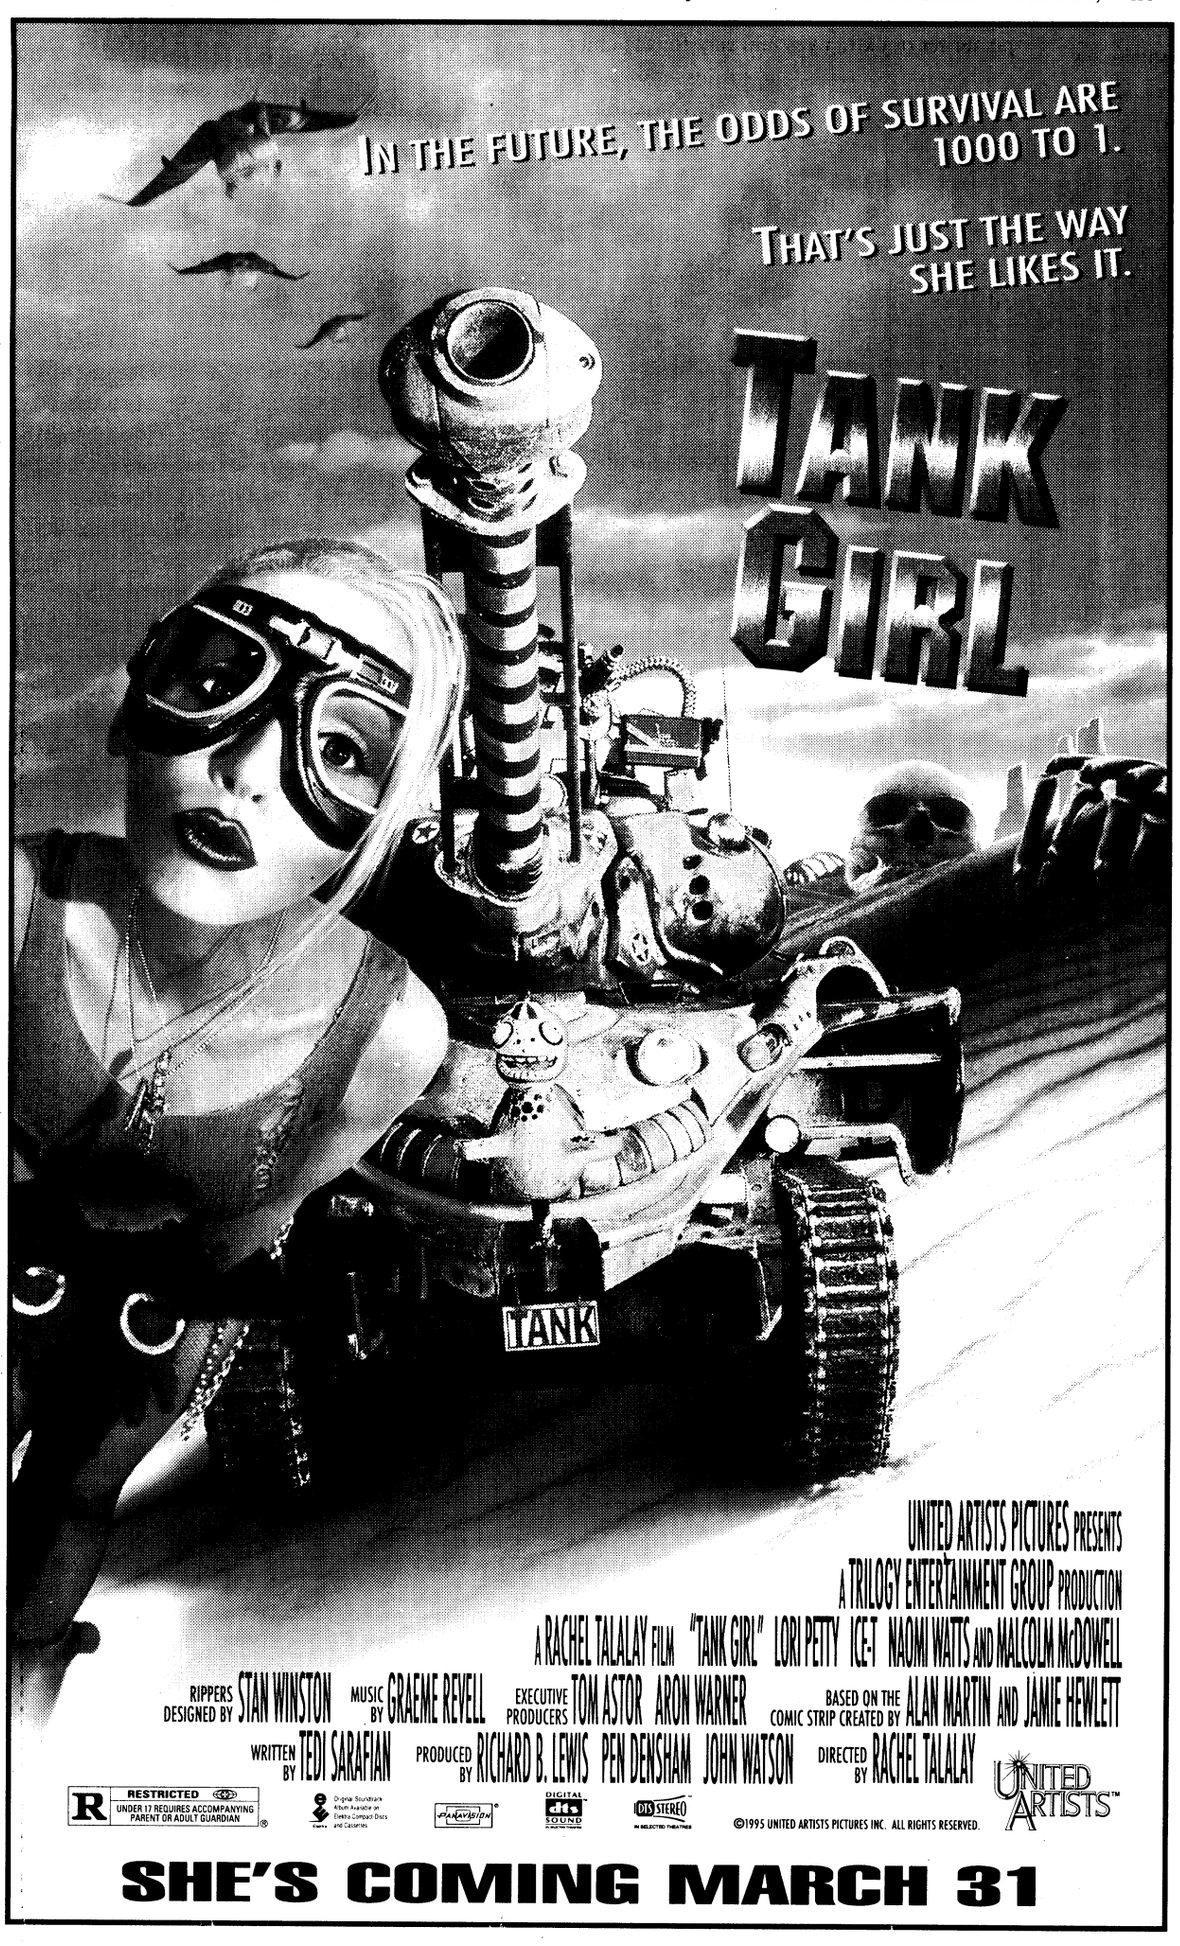
AUSA job fair May 18

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army will host a job fair in conjunction with Armed Forces Day again this year.

The job fair, which is open to soldiers, Department of the Army civilians and their family members, will be May 18 at the Main NCO Club, Building 2784, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

At last year's job fair, more than 50 national and local businesses were represented and approximately 1,700 people attended. This year, more than 300 business have been invited.



Persons needing assistance with resume preparation can make an appointment with the Army Career and Alumni Program, Building 2617, or the Army Community Service Family Member Employment Assistance Program, Building 2643.

Representatives from the Georgia Department of Labor, Army Career and Alumni Program and the Family Member Employment Assistance Program are working with AUSA to put on this event.

For more information or to make an appointment, call Mary Allen of ACAP at 545-7020 or 545-4892 or Shirley Jarrett of FMEAP at 545-6969.

va q&a

Department of Veterans Affairs

Editor's note: If you have a question about your veterans benefits, call the Department of Veterans Affairs at (800) 827-1000.

Q: For what purposes can I use a VA-guaranteed home loan?

A: Veterans can get a VA-guaranteed loan to buy a home, including a townhouse or condominium unit; build a home; repair, alter or improve a home; refinance an existing home loan; buy a manufactured home with or without a lot; buy and improve a manufactured home lot on which to place a unit owned and occupied by the veteran; improve a home through installation of a solar heating or cooling system or other energy-conserving measures; and refinance a manufactured home loan to acquire a lot.

Q: What is the current interest rate on VA-guaranteed home loans?

A: VA stopped administering the interest rate on VA-guaranteed loans in late 1992 when legislation was passed that permitted veterans to negotiate the rate with lenders. Veterans also can negotiate the number of discount points the lender charges and whether the veteran or seller will pay them.

The program is in effect through Dec. 31. Also approved in the 1992 law is a three-year program allowing VA-guaranteed adjustable rate mortgages. The rate may be adjusted no more than 1 percent annually and 5 percent for the life of the loan. ARMS can be used to refinance existing loans.

Nov. 2, the president signed the Veterans' Benefits Improvement Act of 1994 that allowed veterans who obtained a VA-guaranteed ARM to refinance to a fixed-rate loan under VA's interest rate reduction refinancing loan program, even if the fixed rate is higher than the current rate of the ARM.

Q: I served on active duty and qualified for education assistance benefits under the Montgomery GI Bill-Active Duty.

However, I will soon complete my 36 months of entitlement. I also am in the reserves and qualify for education benefits under the Montgomery GI Bill-Selected Reserves. Can I use both entitlements?

A: Yes. While you cannot receive benefits from both at the same time, you may qualify for an additional 12 months of educational assistance by electing to participate under the Montgomery GI Bill-Selected Reserves after you have exhausted your active duty entitlement.

Q: Can I get VA educational benefits for repeating a course in which I previously received a passing grade?

A: Yes, in certain circumstances, such as if a particular subject requires at least a "C" for credit toward graduation and it is so stated in the official catalog. Subjects cannot be repeated solely to raise a grade-point average.

Accreditation team to visit hospital

Martin Army Community Hospital

The Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations will visit Martin Army Community Hospital April 24 to conduct a four-day survey of the facility.

The Hospital Accreditation Program of the Joint Commission has been accrediting hospitals since 1953. Routinely, hospitals that subscribe for accreditation are surveyed every three years and Martin Army Community Hospital was last surveyed in 1992.

The military has a long-standing relationship with the Joint Commission Accreditation Program and Martin Army Community Hospital was accredited with commendation. The Army Medical Department relationship with JCAHO enhances graduate medical education and other health-care provider training programs. The military has also used the results of accreditation surveys to objectively demonstrate that military health care achieves high marks when compared to recognized civilian standards.

The purpose of the survey will be to evaluate the hospital's compliance with nationally established Joint Commission standards. The survey results will be used to determine whether, and the conditions under which accreditation should be awarded the organization.

Joint Commission standards deal with organizational quality of care issues and the safety of the environment in which care is provided. Anyone believing that he or she has pertinent and valid information about such matters may request a public information interview with the Joint Commission's field representative at the time of the survey. Information presented at the interview will be carefully evaluated for relevance to the accreditation process.

Requests for a public information interview must be made in writing and should be sent to the Joint Commission no later than five working days before the survey begins. The request must also indicate the nature of the information to be provided at the interview. Such requests should be addressed to:

Survey Operations and Support Department Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations One Renaissance Boulevard Oakbrook Terrace, Ill. 60181

The Joint Commission will acknowledge such requests in writing or by telephone and will inform the organization of the request for any interview. The organization will, in turn, notify the interviewee of the date, time and place of the meeting.

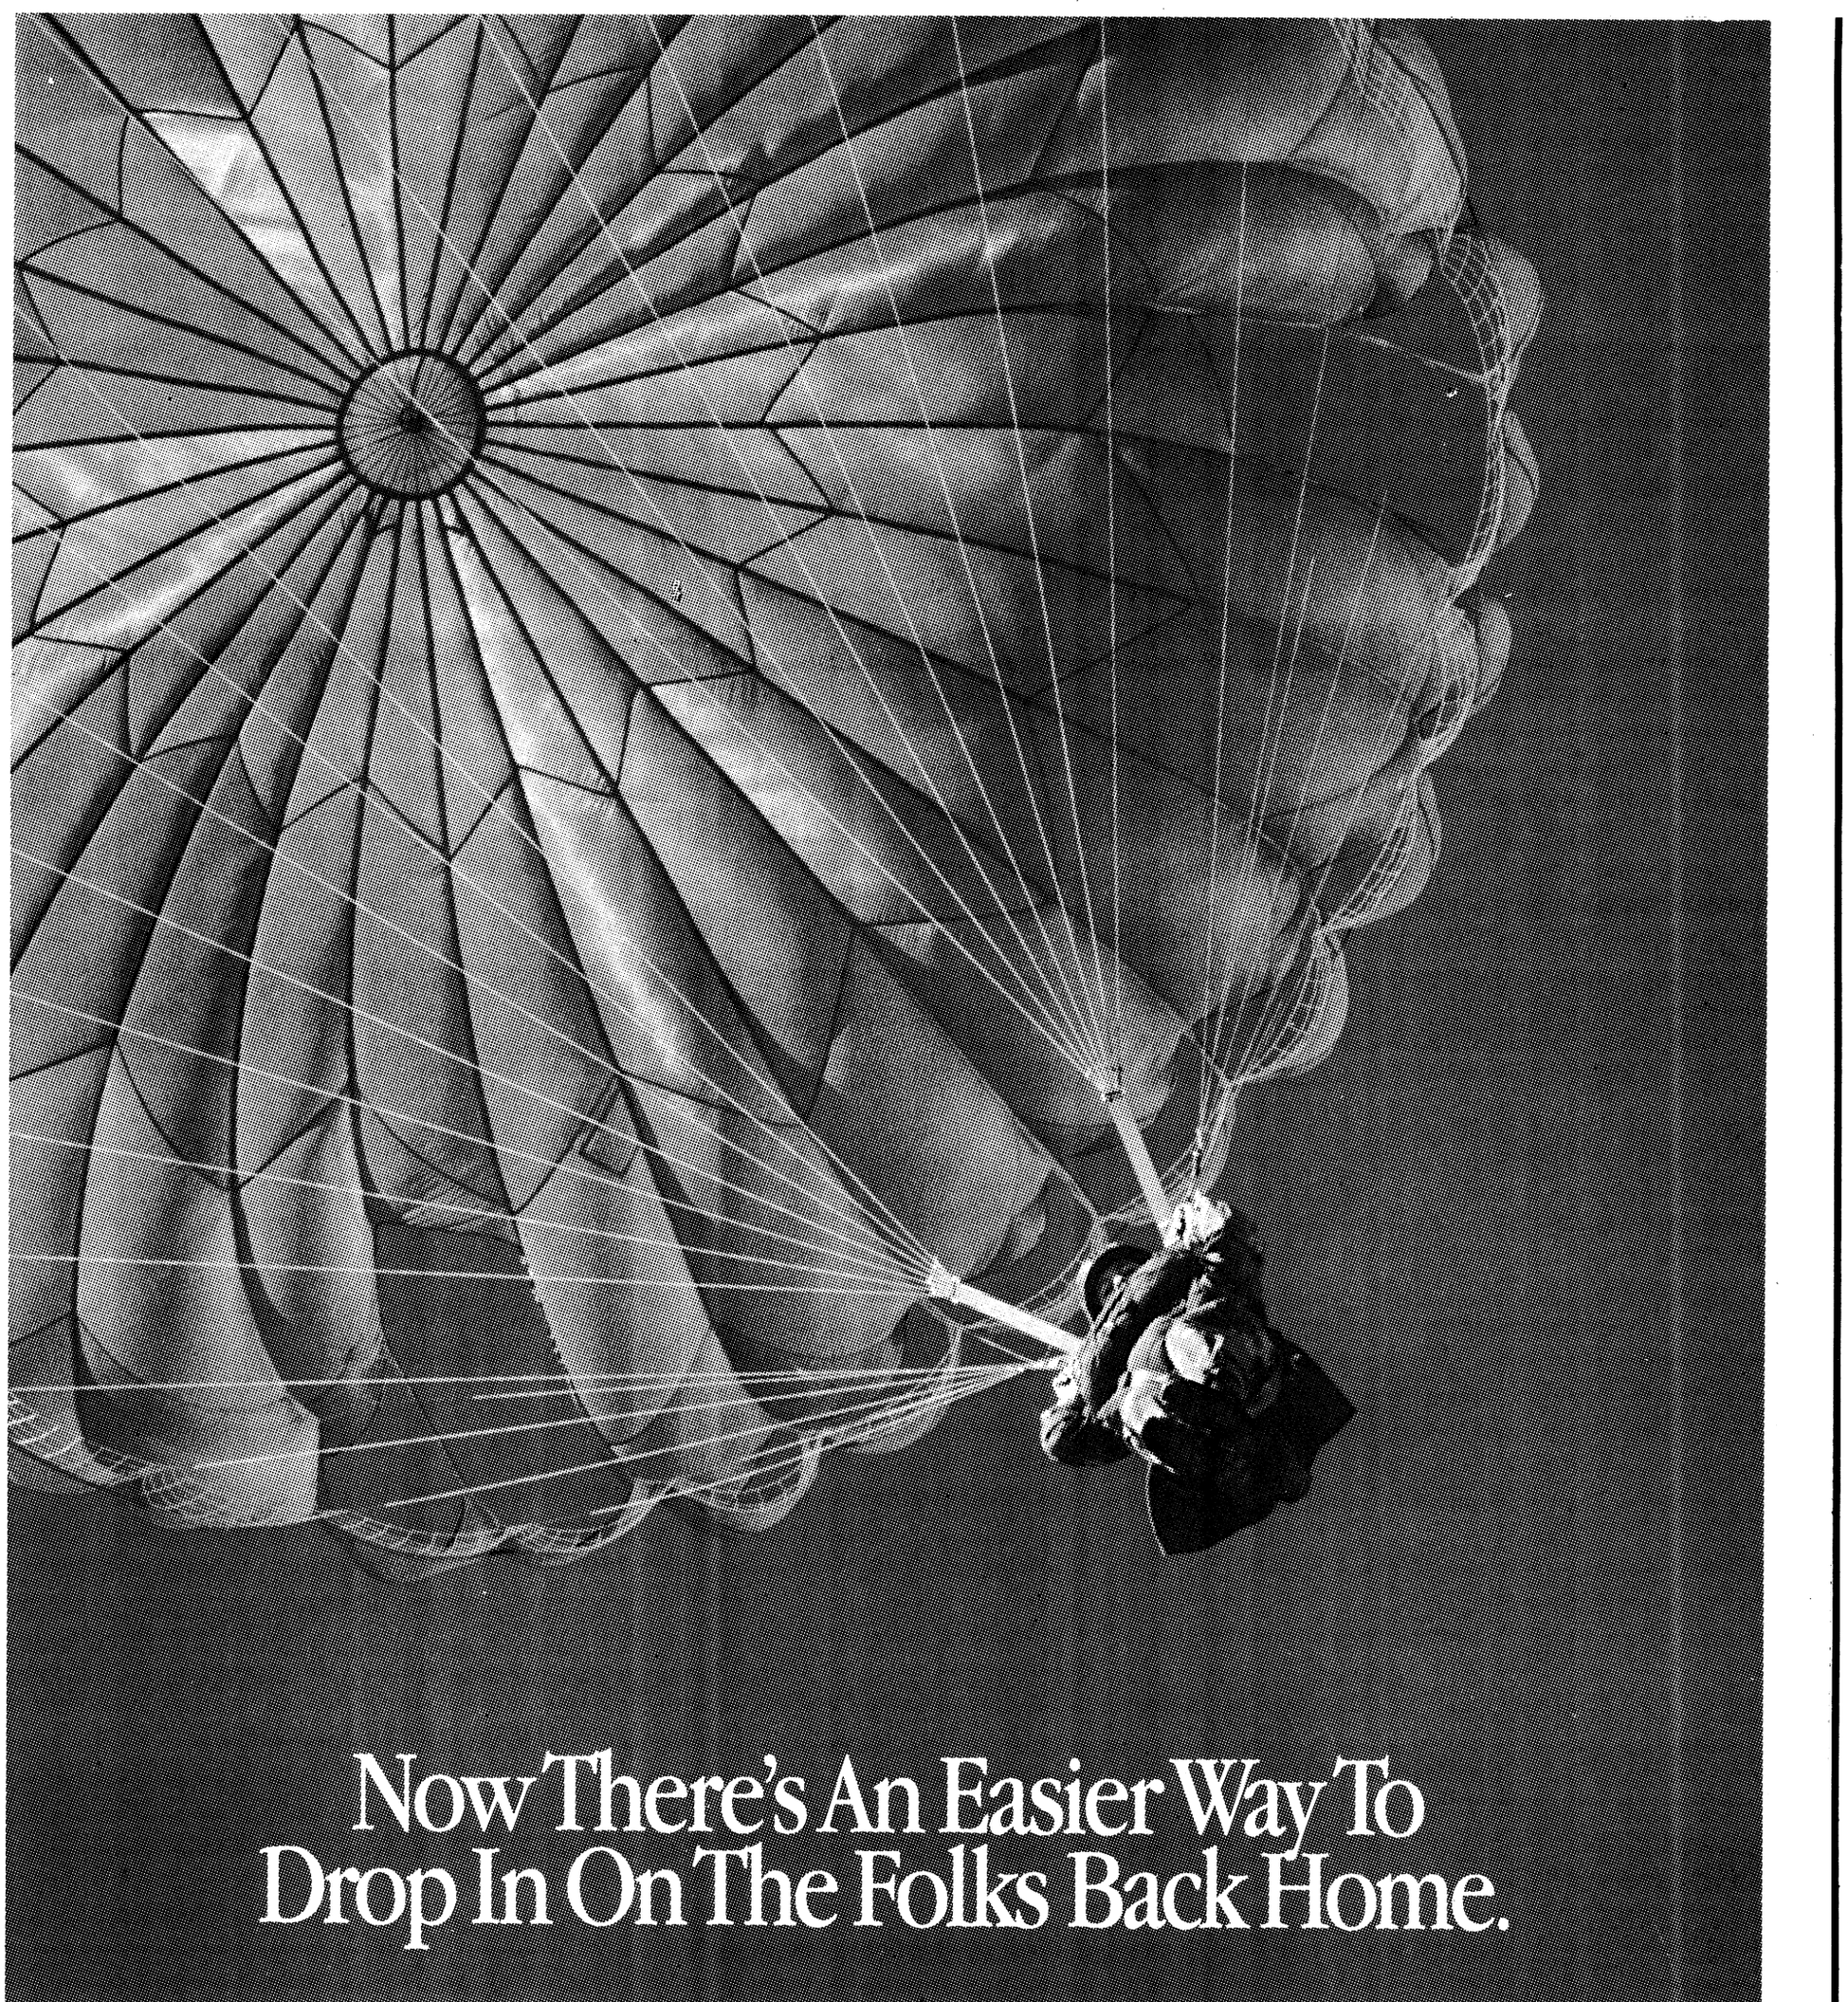
VA benefits spelled out

Department of Veterans Affairs

The latest edition of one of the federal government's best-selling publications is now available from the U.S. Government Printing Office.

Published by the Department of Veterans Affairs, "Federal Benefits for Veterans and Dependents" has been revised to include changes in law for 1995.

The 111-page handbook describes federal benefits for veterans and their family members such as medical care, education, disability compensation, pension, life insurance, home loan guaranty, vocational rehabilitation and burial assistance. It also explains requirements for eligibility and outlines claims procedures.



The handbook, which sells for $3.25 a copy, also includes the latest information on disability compensation for Persian Gulf Veterans who suffer from chronic disabilities resulting from undiagnosed illnesses.

Listed by state are addresses and phone numbers of all VA benefits offices, medical centers, national cemeteries, counseling centers and other facilities.

In addition, the number, (800) 827-1000, is listed to connect callers to the nearest benefits counselor. For those with computers, a world wide net home page server address is listed.

"Federal Benefits for Veterans and Dependents" now ranks second in total sales at the U.S. Government Printing Office. Including the 1994 edition, nearly 3 million copies have been sold through January .

For copies, ask for GPO stock number 051-000-00205-9 from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402-9325. To order with VISA or Mastercard, call (202) 512-1800.

ACAP offers ways to ease transition

By Elsie Jackson
Army Career and Alumni Program

ACAP services do not end when soldiers leave the ACAP classroom or offices. Soldiers are entitled to transition services, which include the Job Assistance Center, for up to 120 days past their separation date

What is the Army Career and Alumni Program? For too many soldiers, it's just another station to clear on the way toward civilian life.

However, all service members who are leaving active duty must go through some form of transition services because it's the law.

At Fort Benning, transition services are commonly referred to as ACAP, an acronym for Army Career and Alumni Program. For soldiers separating at Fort Benning, it is a three-part process.

Counseling session

Part one of ACAP is a one-on-one counseling session with an ACAP transition services specialist who is sometimes called an ACAP Counselor.

During the counseling session, the separating soldier and a counselor will prepare a preseparation counseling checklist. This checklist will eventually become a part of each soldier's permanent file.

Soldiers will need a copy of this checklist to clear Fort Benning, regardless of the circumstances of separation.

The counselor will also prepare an individual transition plan for each soldier.

The plan consists of referral sheets to agencies, including Job Assistance Center, Finance, Transportation and Reserve Components, which have services available to soldiers and families during transition.

A plan may have as few as one or two, or as many as a a dozen referral sheets. The referral sheets are not mandatory appointments and the appointments are set by the clearing soldier at his or her convenience.

Additionally, information sheets detailing states' veterans' benefits, verification of military experience and training, temporary early retirement authority, public and community service and pay and bonus estimates are available.

Except for retirees, all ACAP appointments are made through personnel action centers. Retirees can make their own ACAP appointments once they have applied for retirement.

If soldiers are being separated because of legal action, they should still go through their personnel administration center for appointments.

Walk-ins for individual counseling sessions are seen on an emergency basis only. To be considered an emergency, a soldier must have clearing papers in hand.

Both the three-day workshop and the one-on-one counseling session should take place about six months from the separation date.

The "separation minus six-months" milestone is of special significance to early (15-year) retirees because of the requirements for public and community service registration. A 20-year retiree can start the transition process six to 12 months from his or her actual retirement date.

If soldiers will be taking 60 days of terminal leave (or 60 days of terminal leave combined with permissive temporary duty), they may want to get an appointment based on when terminal leave starts instead of the actual separation date.

Three-day workshop

Part two at ACAP is spread over a three-day workshop.

Conducted weekly in Infantry Hall, the workshop covers military subjects (required by Army Regulation 635-10), a block of instruction on veterans' benefits, and job search skills training.

One workshop each month is devoted to retirees. Soldiers are encouraged to wear civilian clothes when attending the three-day workshops.

Soldiers may wear civilian clothes to one-on-one sessions with ACAP counselors if it will not interfere with regular duties before and after the session.

Clearing process

ACAP part three is a quick stop at Building 2617 as part of the clearing process.

ACAP services do not end when soldiers leave the ACAP classroom or offices.

Soldiers are entitled to transition services, which include the Job Assistance Center, for up to 120 days past their separation date.

For more information about ACAP or to schedule an appointment, call 545-4892 or 545-4913.

Nominations open for Franks award

The Frederick M. Franks Jr. Award will be awarded to an active duty or reserve armor or infantry officer or noncommissioned officer or a Department of the Army civilian who has demonstrated a long-time contribution to the ground warfighting capabilities of the U.S. Army.

Nominations will be made in the form of a letter to the president of the panel detailing the achievements of the nominee according to the criteria listed above.

Nominations must be submitted to the U.S. Army Armor School, ATTN: ATSB-DAS, Fort Knox, Ky. 40121 between Jan. 1 and April 14. Note date change from March 31 to April 14. Recommendation of an awardee will be made by the Franks Award Panel and forwarded to the chief of Armor for final approval. The winner will be presented his or her award at the annual armor conference. Cost of TDY will be paid by the U.S. Army Armor School.

Voter slogan contest open through July 14

The Federal Voting Assistance Program announces the start of its 1995 voter slogan contest to increase voter awareness and participation by military members, their families and U.S. citizens overseas. Anyone may submit an entry.

All military members and their families and other citizens are encouraged to participate in the contest. Enter as many slogans and as often as you wish.

Slogans should be submitted on letter size, 8 1/2 x 11 paper, and each page must include your full name, service if military, mailing address, fax number or E-mail, if available, and daytime phone number.

Send your slogans to: The Federal Voting Assistance Program, Room 1B457, The Pentagon, Washington, D.C. 20301. All slogans must be received by July 14.

The originator of the winning slogan will receive a certificate of recognition from the Secretary of Defense. Second through fifth place, honorable mentions and the military service with the highest participation rate will also receive a certificate of recognition from the Secretary of Defense.

Ceremony set to honor volunteers

A volunteer recognition ceremony will be April 24 from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. at Riverside. Call 545-5602 for more information.

Recruiters to visit

Special Forces recruiters will be at Fort Benning April 3 to 7 to brief interested soldiers, officer and enlisted, on the Special Forces career field.

Briefings will be each day in Infantry Hall, Building 4, Room 60, from 10 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

Recruiters are currently looking for soldiers to attend the Special Forces Assessment and Selection Course scheduled for September.

Specialists and corporals who have not attended the Primary Leadership Development Course may still apply for the career field, according to SF recruiters.

All applicants must pass the SF physical, be airborne qualified or volunteer for airborne school and possess, or be eligible for, a secret security clearance.

For more information, call SF recruiters at (910) 432-1818 or DSN 239-1818.

ACS to host youth job fair April 13

A youth job fair will be April 13 at Youth Services, Building 1056, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Sponsored by the Army Community Service Family Member Employment Assistance Program and Youth Services, the job fair is designed to provide employment assistance and job referral services about vacancies on the installation and throughout Columbus and the Phenix City.

Any youth interested in participating can contact the ACS FMEAP, at Building 2643, Soldiers' Plaza or the Indianhead Youth Center for registration information.

Post cleanup April 13

There will be a postwide spring cleanup of the post cantonment and housing areas April 13 and 14. Occupants are responsible for cleanup of their quarters. This includes yard maintenance and improperly parked privately owned vehicles.

Area coordinators will offer assistance in facilitating pickup of large debris and any bulk recyclable aluminum or large scrap aluminum. Area coordinators will conduct final inspections in each housing area April 14.

Change of command ceremony April 7

Company C, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, will have a change of command ceremony April 7 at 5 p.m. The outgoing commander is Capt. Troy P. Krause, and the incoming commander is Capt. Michael P. Ryan.

Wilson to host Olympic program

Today at 9:30 a.m., Wilson School students will be involved in an "Olympic Day in the School" kickoff program. Speakers will be retired Maj. Marcus Alexander from the Olympic Committee as well as an Olympian guest.

Other activities include a Parade of Flags and Parade of Sports which involve students at Wilson as well as an original rap on the Olympics done by a fifth grade class.

ITB Eagle Run scheduled today

The Infantry Training Brigade Eagle Run will be today from 1 to 2 p.m. in the Sand Hill cantonment area. The run is expected to draw approximately 4,000 participants.

For information, call 544-9590.

Airborne Festival set for April 27

USAIC Public Affairs Office

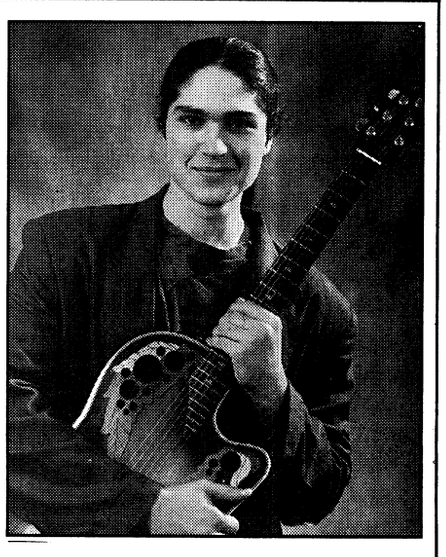
Fort Benning's participation in the four-day 18th annual Airborne Awards Festival will feature a 10 a.m. memorial service April 27 at the Airborne Walk on Eubanks Field.

The 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment, will host the service.

Guest speaker at the memorial service will be retired Lt. Gen. Richard J. Seitz, who joined the 517th Parachute Infantry Regiment at Camp Mackall, N.C., and deployed to Europe during World War II as a battalion commander. He later commanded the 82nd Airborne Division.

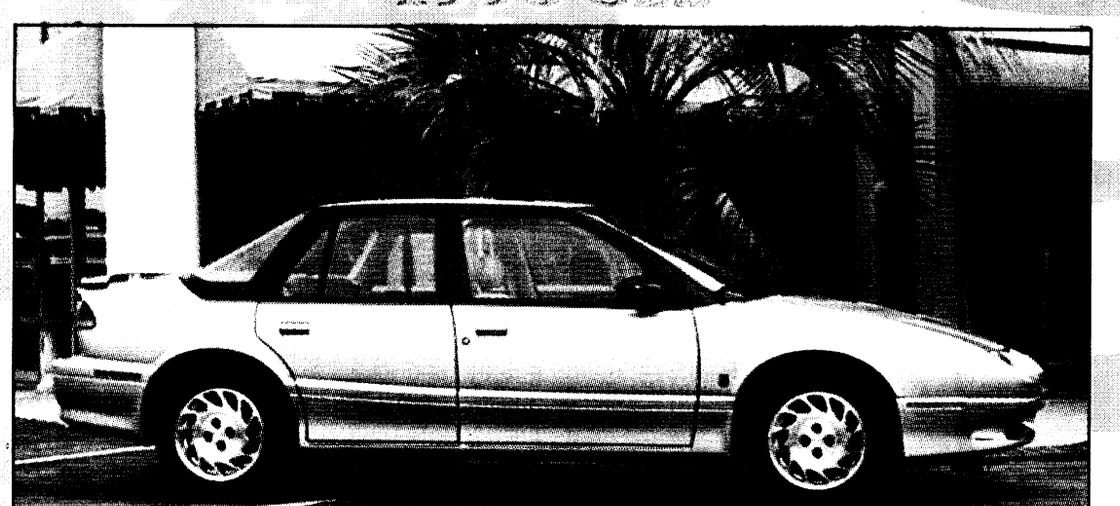
Members of the original Test Platoon of parachutists, formed at Fort Benning in 1940, will be on hand for a day of activities along with other distinguished guests and many airborne veterans from all wars. Fraternal members of the airborne community, both retired and active duty are invited.

While here, festival members will visit the Airborne School, attend the memorial service at the Airborne Walk, observe an 11:15 a.m. Airborne-in-Action demonstration, including a jump by Fort Benning's command exhibition parachute team, the Silver Wings, on Eubanks Field, and attend a 1:45 p.m. jump and 2:30 p.m. graduation of the Basic Airborne Course at Fryar Drop Zone.



During the memorial ceremony, the youngest officer and enlisted airborne graduates will participate in the "Carry the Flame" mission. It represents the continuing spirit of airborne.

The 18th Airborne Awards Festival at the Airport Sheraton Hotel in Columbus April 26 through 28 highlights the Allied victory in World War II.



Many veterans of the airborne assault 50 years ago will be present at the festival. Several Medal of Honor recipients and airborne veterans of more recent wars and peacetime service will also attend. Some of these veterans visited Normandy this past summer in commemoration of the D-Day invasion of June 6, 1944.

'Cruise' control crashes Cadillacs

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Columbus Fort Benning Rugby Football Club Cruise-matics won their fourth straight match to improve to 4-3-1 with a 62-0 drubbing of the Cadillacs of Central Georgia Saturday afternoon at Columbus College.

"We had some players playing in different positions so the early part of the match was a little bit scrappy to begin with," head coach Jim Muldoon said. "But then they went back to the fundamentals and consolidated and were able to execute the basics. That provided us with the margin of victory. The younger players also stepped to the mark."

Fly half Jim Miller got the scoring started for the Cruise-matics with a try off a Cruise-matic scrum inside the Cadillac 22-meter line barely 10 minutes into the match. Duke Moseley added the conversion for the 7-0 advantage.

Midway through the half, Moseley converted a penalty kick, also inside the Cadillac 22, for a 10-0 lead.

Fullback Jason Daffin took a feed from winger Luis Rodriguez and outraced the Cadillac defenders to the try zone for his first try of the day with less than six minutes to play in the half. Moseley missed the conversion leaving the Cruise-matics up by the score of 15-0.

Moments later winger Joe Saffron took an over-the-shoulder pass from outside center Tory Diciro on the far sideline and sprinted into the try zone for the score. Another failed conversion by Moseley kept the score at 20-0 with only minutes left in the half.

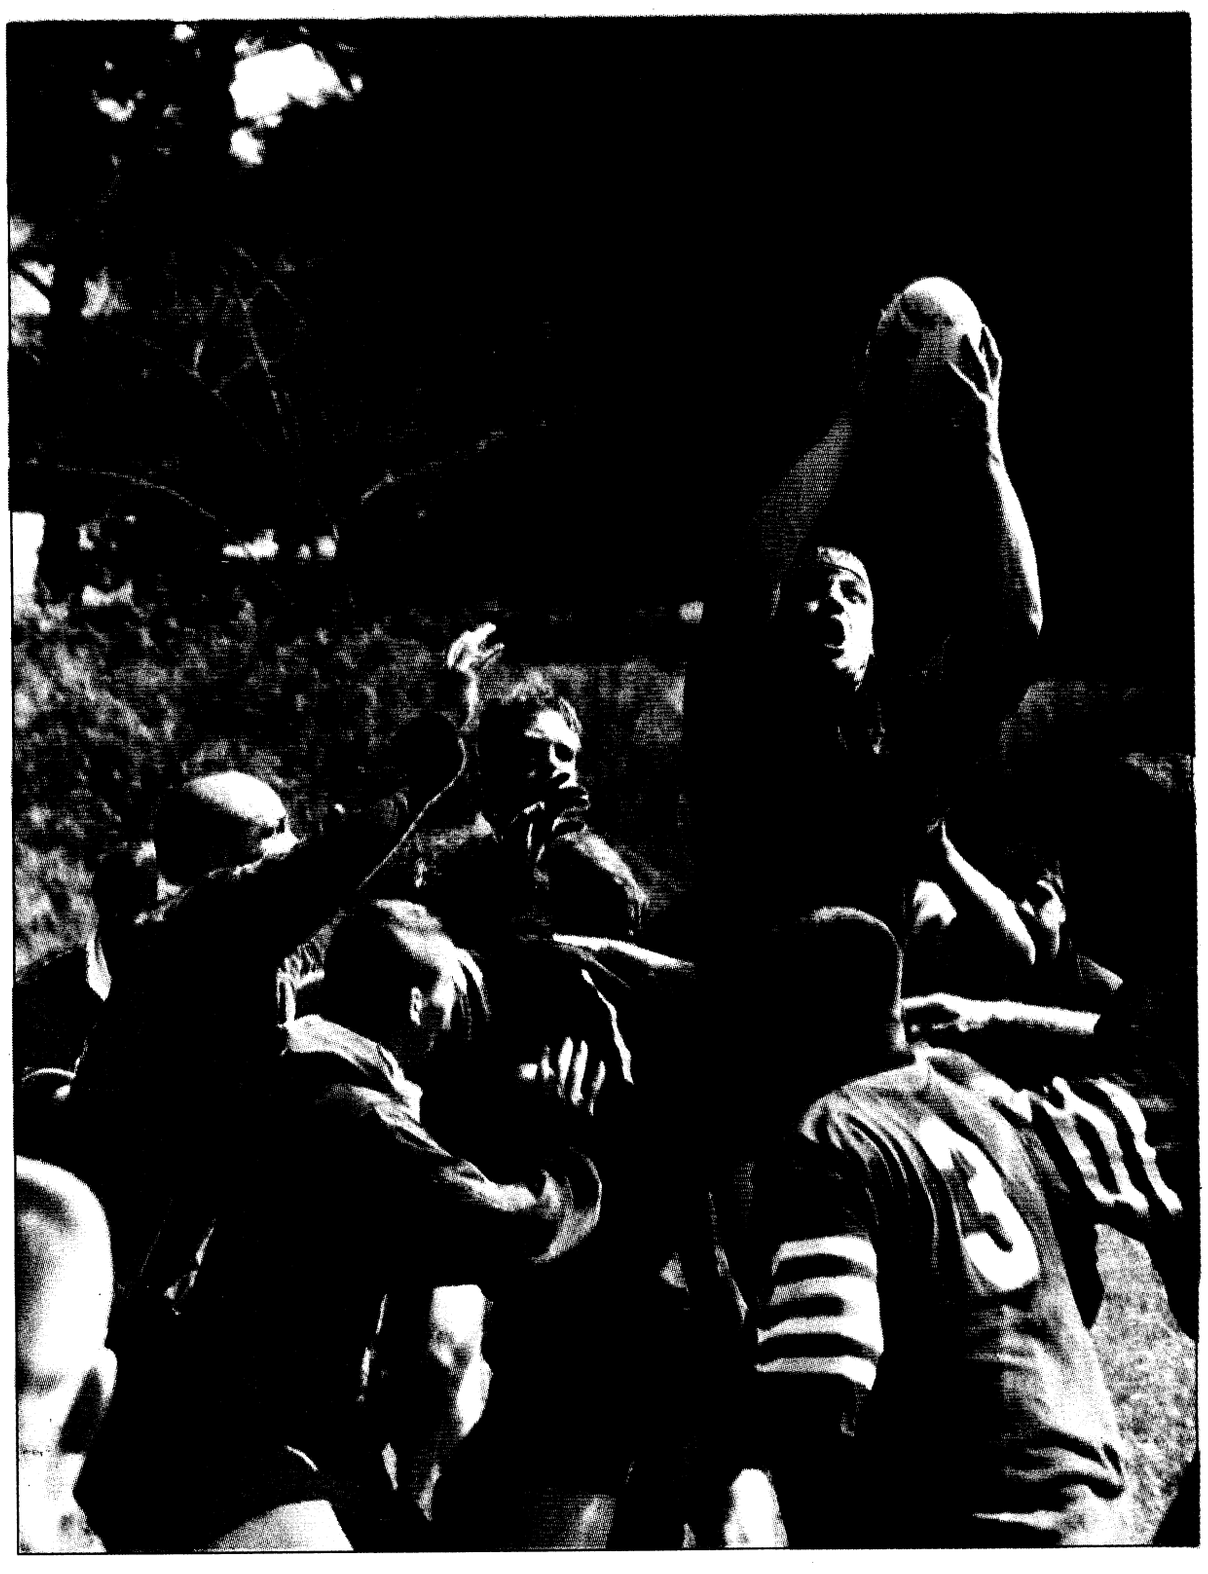
Cruise-matics Rugby Schedule

Saturday	Birmingham RFC	Birmingham
April 8	Auburn	Auburn.
April 22	U.S. Military Nationals	Scott AFB, Ill.
June 17	Cruise-A-Matics "Hotter Than Hell" 7's Rugby Tournament	Columbus College

But the Cruise-matics weren't quite done scoring yet. Daffin got his second try of the afternoon with no time left in the half when inside center Joe Trawinski fed Daffin a pass at the Cadillac 5-meter line. Daffin took the pass and dove for the try zone as the Cadillac defenders closed in. Moseley converted the kick for a 27-0 lead at the half.

The Cruise-matic offense would continue the dismantling of the Cadillacs in the second half of play.

Paul Oakes, who came on to replace Rodriguez at wing, opened up the scoring with his first try off of a scrum and a pass from Diciro. Eric Magrum, who replaced Trawinski but moved to fly half, booted the lead to 34-0.



Kevin Hyneman came on at the half for Rich Hunt at wing forward and got into the scoring column off a 5-meter scrum. Magrum tacked on the conversion for a 41-0 Cruise-matic lead midway through the match.

Oakes later took a feed from Daffin just outside the Cadillac try zone. The unselfish play by Daffin (it would have been his third try of the match) gave Oakes his second try of the match and a 48-0 advantage following the conversion.

A bungled line out by the Cadillac offense at their own 5-meter line ended up in the hands of Hyneman, who plunged into the try zone for his second score of the day. Magrum booted the conversion through the uprights, boosting the Cruiser lead to 55-0 and time on the short side for the Cadillacs.

Moseley closed out the scoring for the Cruise-matics with a try as the whistle sounded, ending the match. Magrum converted the kick for a final score of 62-0.

Next up for the Cruise-matics is a road match Saturday at 1 p.m. in Birmingham.

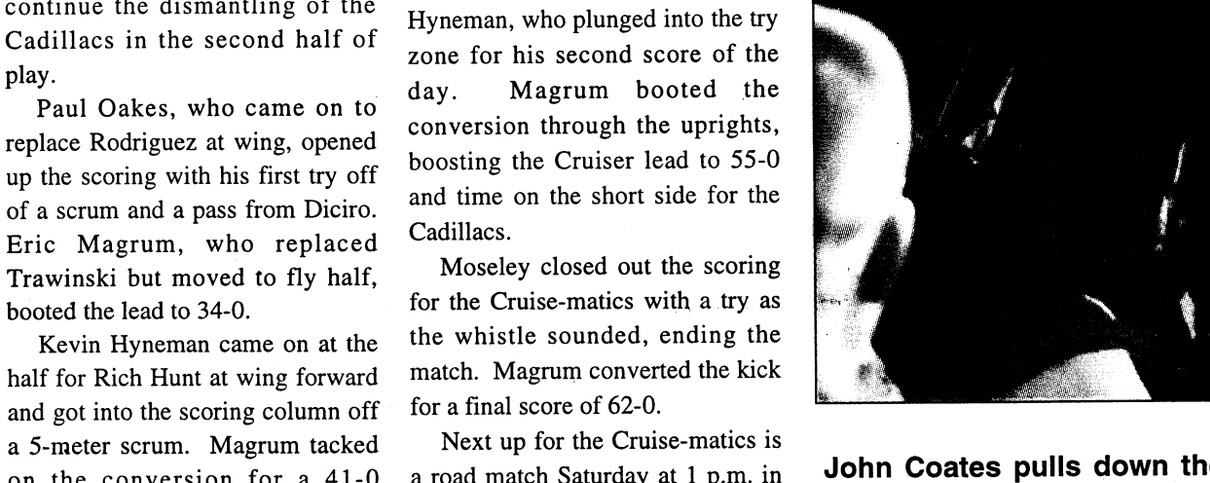
'Crunch Bunch' Stars crush Tigers 33-11

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

The Columbus Stars trounced the St. Augustine Tigers 33-11 at Garrett Stadium Saturday night.

The Tigers, who got off to a good start even though half the team never made it to the game, kicked a 27-yard field goal with 8:07 remaining on the clock in the first quarter, but the Stars were quick to recover.



Moving 45 yards in seven plays, Stars fullback Jamon Smith scored the first touchdown with 2:41 remaining in the first quarter. Tiger Willie Robinson blocked the Stars' extra point kick, making the score Stars 6, Tigers 3.

The Stars maintained control of the game and scored on a 2-yard dive by quarterback Eddie Mitchell after linebacker Frank Lewis recovered a fumble by Tiger quarterback Keith Atkins with 13:30 left in the first half.

Other first-half action included an interception by Stars' defensive end Marcus Mahone, who ran 50 yards to the Tigers 15. Fullback Terrence Hollis scored on a one-yard run three plays later. The Tigers frustrated the Stars by blocking their third kick attempt. The score stood at Stars 18, Tigers 3 at the close of the first half.

In the third quarter, the Tigers held off the Stars for seven minutes, but that was just too long for fullback Albert Tate, who zigzagged for a 4-yard touchdown run. Kicker Scott Alalof whizzed the extra-point kick over the heads of the Tigers.

The Stars managed to score a two-point safety when the Tigers' punt-snap slipped out of bounds, changing the score to Stars 27, Tigers 3.

The Tigers intercepted the ball with 56 seconds left in the third quarter. With 14:53 left in the fourth quarter, streaking Tigers running back Rodney Lovett flew 33 yards to score. The Tigers, aiming high, went for a two-point conversion, closing the gap by eight to Stars 27, Tigers 11.

The Stars clinched the game with 5:24 left in the fourth when Tate breezed 19 yards to the end zone making the final score. The win brought the Stars' season record to 6-2.

The Stars led the way with 230 rushing yards while the Tigers led with 243 receiving yards. The Stars' total yardage was 280 while the Tigers racked up 252.

Stars tailback Robert Williams reigned supreme with 99 yards on just 11 carries, and Lovett paved a path for the Tigers offense with 132 receiving yards from the back field.

High scorer Tate talked about the Stars game plan. "Coach set us up to run and to try to keep the ball on the ground because we knew we could outrun these guys (the Tigers)," he said. "We tried to keep the ball out of the air. Last time we played them, all we did was run on them so that's what we focused on."

Stars coach Tom Staton talked about his game plan and how the plays worked. "We lost Jamon Smith (he was injured) but hopefully he will be back soon," said Staton.

"Our game plan was to run at them," he said. "We ran the option, the off tackles and the sweeps. We knew that we could sweep them and we did. We're a running team. We have a running quarterback, and that's what we have to go with."

The Stars' game against the Dothan Chiefs, scheduled for Saturday, has been cancelled. The Stars vs. Dothan exhibition game will count as a regular season game.

Georgia State Parks to host fishing tournaments

Georgia Department of Natural Resources

ATLANTA — To kick off the fishing season, Georgia State Parks have scheduled several events to keep serious anglers as well as beginning youngsters reeling them in. Some events offer families a chance to spend time together in the warm spring sunshine, while others challenge seasoned anglers to land their largest bass yet. All tournaments and rodeos are free unless otherwise noted. This year's events include:

Family Bank Fishing Tournament — Mistletoe State Park, Appling, (706) 541-0321, April 8, 6 a.m. to 5 p.m. Parents and their children can fish in this tournament from the banks of Clarks Hill Lake. Prizes will be awarded, including a three-day getaway in one of the park's cottages.

Children's Fishing Rodeo — John Tanner State Park, Carrollton, (404) 830-2222 April 15, 8:30 to 11 a.m. The lake will be stocked with plenty of catfish for children 15 and under to try their luck at fishing.

Spring Bass Tournament — Florence Marina State Park, Omaha, (912) 838-4706, April 29, 7a.m.to 3p.m. Bass fishermen can reel them in on Lake Walter F. George. Prizes will be awarded in several categories.

Junior Fishing Rodeo — Black Rock Mountain State Park, Mountain City, (706) 746-2141 May 6, 8 a.m. to noon. The lake will be stocked with trout and catfish for children 15 and under. This rodeo includes a fishing and casting contest, refreshments, prizes and trophies.

George Perry Wiggle Fish Festival — Little Ocmulgee State Park and Lodge, McRae, (912) 868-7474 May 6, 9a.m. to 5 p.m. This fishing tournament will honor George Perry, the world record holder of large mouth bass (22 lbs., 4 oz.). Activities include an arts and crafts show. Admission fee.

Trout Fishing Weekend — Unicoi State Park and Lodge, Helen, (706) 878-2201, May 12, 8 p.m. and May 13, 9 a.m. Fishermen can attend seminars on trout fishing equipment, bait, tactics, fly tying and stream reading. Unicoi State Park has a lodge with hotel-type accommodations and a buffet restaurant.

Most state parks have boating ramps and docks, and many rent boats and sell bait. Event participants may wish to stay overnight at a campsite or in a fully equipped cottage. Since facilities vary from park to park, visitors can call first if they have a particular need. A $2 park pass fee is charged per vehicle.

Fishing tournaments are just some of the many events hosted by state parks and historic sites throughout the year.

For a free special events brochure, contact the Georgia Department of Natural Resources, 205 Butler Street, Suite 1352 East, Atlanta, Ga. 30334, (404) 656-3530 (TDD) (404) 657-8385.

Batting cages open — The batting cages located next to CB&T Bank on Main Post are now open. Buy ten balls for 50 cents. If you bat two sets, get one set free. This special applies Mondays to Fridays only.

Hours are Monday through Friday noon to 7 p.m. and weekends and holidays 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.

For more information, call Tim Brown at 545-7978 or 545-3504.

5K run/walk and one mile fun run/walk— Mountain Magic, in Manchester, Ga., is hosting its annual Spring Festival April 22. The start times are 8 a.m. for the one-mile fun run/walk, 8:15 a.m. for a five-kilometer wheelchair race and 8:30 a.m. for the five-kilometer run/walk.

Prizes will be awarded to the top three male and female finishers of the six age brackets.

There is a $12 pre-registration fee or a $15 registration fee after April 13 for the 5K run/walk. The one mile fun run/walk is free.

For more information call (706) 846-2135 or (706) 846-8401.

Scuba Club meeting — The Kelley Hill Scuba Club will have its first meeting of the year April 12 at 6 p.m. in Building 9049, Kelley Hill. The club offers scuba instruction from basic open water to assistant instructor certifications. The club also sponsors scuba trips and can offer advice on scuba purchases and equipment repairs. Divers and nondivers are invited to attend. For more information, contact Staff Sgt. Sitton at 544-2765.

Tactical pistol match — The Rifle and Pistol Club of Fort Benning will conduct a tactical pistol match Saturday at 10 a.m. on English Range.

Entry fee is $12 if paid by Wednesday, $16 after that date. Glock Model 17, 9mm pistols will be provided for those shooters who have no pistol. All entrants will receive a T-shirt.

For more information, call Jim Graham at 689-3371.

Free Nautilus class — Free Nautilus classes will be given in the Fort Benning Officers' Club Family Fitness Center.

Participants can learn how to use the Nautilus equipment, how to work with the free weights and how to monitor their heart rate. Instructors will touch on exercises to do for those specific problem areas. The class will be given by a qualified fitness instructor from the Master Fitness School. For information, call 687-0871 or 545-4162.

Bowling roll-off — There will be a roll-off to select men's and women's teams to represent Fort Benning in the Training and Doctrine Command Bowling Tournament.

Retired, active, Reserve, family members and Fort Benning employees age 18 and over may enter.

Entrants can bowl any time lanes are available today. Bowlers will bowl six games on a pair of lanes.

A $1 operation expense fee will be charged for each game. The total operation expense of $6 will be paid when the entry is turned in. All events will be bowled April 15 through 17.

All entries will be turned in, paid for, and bowled at the Main Post Bowling Center.

Deadline for entries is March 31. For more information, call 545-4272.

Military Police Activity

This week's hot topic concerns unattended children. U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 210-5 (Garrison Regulation) holds parents and sponsors responsible for their children and family members at all times while on Fort Benning.

Parents and sponsors are reminded that children are prohibited from playing in streets, construction areas, troop billeting areas, golf courses, or public buildings (except those designated for this purpose).

When playing outside, children should always be under the supervision of the parent, sponsor or another responsible adult. Children under 8 years of age cannot be left unattended in a parked vehicle, and children under 12 are not allowed to be left alone in government quarters.

If you observe a lost or unattended child, report it to the Military Police at once.

The following entries are from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters. Such entries may be incomplete and are not intended to prove the guilt or innocence of any person.

• A private first class was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol, excessive speeding, altering a driver's license, no proof of insurance and no post decal. The soldier was traveling 76 mph in a 55 mph zone. After the soldier was stopped, the MP detected alcohol. The soldier was apprehended and taken to the Military Police station where he was administered a breathalyzer test with results of .17. The soldier was processed and issued post driving privilege suspension orders and released to his unit.

• A private was charged with shoplifting at the Post Exchange at the Main Mall. The soldier removed two compact discs from a stereo on the display shelf and placed these items in his personal CD case. He departed the exchange without rendering proper payment. The soldier was apprehended and transported to the MP station where he was processed and issued identification card confiscation orders, suspension of Post Exchange privileges and released to his unit.

• A sergeant was charged with inattentive driving, while operating a government vehicle. The investigation showed that while operating the vehicle, the soldier was attempting to secure his seatbelt and he drove into a ditch causing minor damage. Because of his injuries, he was taken by ambulance to Martin Army Community Hospital where he was treated and released.

Other activities include three cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, 22 traffic accidents, 22 cases of larceny, and two cases of shoplifting.

Remember to help "Make Our Post The Best — Give Crime Arrest." Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the military police at 545-5223 or 545-5224 or the "Crime In Progress" line at 545-5222.

Eat right, avoid supplements

By Shelly L. Neith
Martin Army Community Hospital

Many conversations among weight lifters and other athletes involve consumption of high protein diets and protein supplements.

Many athletes regularly consume large servings of high protein food items and spend money on pills, powders and liquid protein supplements that claim to aid in increased performance. Many believe that diets high in protein promote increased strength and muscle mass.

Despite all of the advertisement hype and product claims, the fact remains that increased muscle bulk is a result of exercise, not increased protein. Muscle mass and strength are increased by including resistance exercise, such as weight lifting, in workout programs.

To ensure that the body has adequate energy for muscle building, the best sports nutrition diet should be made up of approximately 60 percent carbohydrate and 15 percent protein. This means that for a person who consumes 2,500 calories per day, 375 of those calories should come from protein.

The carbohydrates are necessary because they are stored in the liver and muscles and used for energy during workouts. If the diet does not include adequate carbohydrates needed for energy, athletic performance can be hindered.

The best recommendation to athletes is to consume a diet that is adequate in protein and to avoid excessive supplementation. Any excess protein that comes from food or supplements is stored in the body as fat. Most athletes will consume adequate amounts of protein by including moderate portions of protein-rich food sources on a daily basis. Protein-rich food sources include: meats, fish, poultry, eggs, dried beans and peas and dairy products. The exact amount of protein needed by athletes has yet to be defined.

The following are some safe general guidelines to follow for grams of protein per pound of body weight:

- Sedentary adult — 0.4
- Active adult — 0.4 to 0.6
- Muscle building adult — 0.6 to 0.9.

Individual protein needs may be calculated by multiplying body weight by the guidelines above. For example, an athlete weighing 175 pounds and involved in muscle and strength building would require approximately 105 grams of protein per day.

To get a rough estimate of daily protein consumption one can keep a 24-hour food record by recording all foods and amounts eaten during that time period and totaling up the total grams of protein. Meat, fish and poultry contains about seven grams of protein per ounce, while vegetables provide only two grams per one-half cup serving. The protein content of food items is also found on the nutrition label.

It is not only important to focus on protein and carbohydrates in sports diets, but also to regularly consume well balanced meals to round out the requirements for other necessary nutrients.

For more information regarding sports nutrition, call the Nutrition Care Division at Martin Army Community Hospital at 544-1542.

Hey what's eating you?

Read the label and find out

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

One way to get into shape is by becoming a label reader. When eating at home or on the go, knowing the nutritional content in food can help.

According to the American Heart Association and the Food and Drug Administration, reading labels can help in choosing foods that are healthy.

Knowing the basics is important, said Dr. Louis F. Tomasi, research physiologist, Army Physical Fitness School. The average person needs about 2,000 to 2,500 calories per day. One pound of fat is equal to 3,500 calories. One gram of fat (butter, oil, etc.) equals nine calories, one gram of carbohydrates (bread, pasta, rice, etc.) equals four calories and one gram of protein (meat, nuts, beans, etc.) equals four calories.

Of the daily 2,000 to 2,500 calories, the average person should consume no more than 65 grams of fat, 300 milligrams of cholesterol, 2,400 milligrams of sodium, 300 grams of carbohydrates and 54 grams of protein, according to the AHA and FDA.

While 65 grams of fat may not seem like a lot, multiply it by nine and you get 585 calories, a little more than a quarter of the daily allowance.

Tomasi said the things to look for when reading labels are the fat content, the sodium content and the calories.

According to FDA and AHA, most people need to cut back on fat because too much fat may contribute to heart disease and cancer.

For a healthy heart, choose foods with a big difference between the number of calories and the number of calories from fat.

Tomasi said sodium, or what is commonly known as salt, encourages the body to retain water. According to AHA and FDA, sodium causes heart disease and high blood pressure.

If nutritional information is not available, Tomasi suggests choosing drier foods, foods without sauces or extra fats. The AHA and FDA suggests broiled, boiled, baked, steamed or grilled foods.

Also, Tomasi said processed foods should be avoided. When eating cheese, lighter (in color) cheeses tend to be lower in fat than darker cheeses because they contain less added fat.

Serving size — Is your serving the same as the one on the label? If you eat double the serving size listed, you need to double the nutrient and calorie values.

Calories — Are you overweight? Cut back a little on calories! Look here to see how a serving of the food adds to your daily total. A 5'4", 138-lb. active woman needs about 2,200 calories each day. A 5'10", 174-lb. active man needs about 2,900.

Total carbohydrates — When you cut down on fat, you can eat more carbohydrates: foods like bread, potatoes, fruits and vegetables. Choose these often!

Total fat — Aim low: Most people need to cut back on fat! Too much fat may contribute to heart disease and cancer. For a healthy start, choose foods with a big difference between the total number of calories and the number of calories from fat.

Sodium — You call it "salt," the label calls it "sodium." Either way, it may add up to high blood pressure in some people. So, keep your sodium intake low — 2,400 to 3,000 mg or less each.

Protein — Most Americans get more protein than they need. Where there is animal protein, there is also fat and cholesterol. East small servings of lean meat, fish and poultry. Use skim or low-fat milk, yogurt and cheese. Try vegetable proteins like beans, grains and cereals.

Tie good nutrition to teens' goals

American Institute for Cancer Research

When your children were little, it may have taken a funny face or a "let's pretend" game to get them to eat their vegetables. Now that they're older and more independent, it may seem impossible to get them to eat nutritious foods — especially when "all" their friends are eating high-fat, sugary foods.

But social reasons and other goals can also motivate them to eat healthy foods.

"What's important to many middle-schoolers is looks and fitness," Melanie Polk, director of Nutrition Education for the American Institute for Cancer Research, said. "So many are worried about their complexions, about clothes, about getting chosen for the team and about going to the prom. Healthy eating can help them meet these goals and parents can help by stocking the shelves with nutritious, low-fat foods. You may see a big improvement in their eating habits and better health in the long run."

Polk recommends taking a tip from this year's National Nutrition Month Theme: "Discover Good Nutrition Anytime, Anywhere." When your teen-agers come home from school, let them select snacks from a kitchen stocked with foods that are lower in fat and sugar than regular chips, sweets and baked goods. Keep those less healthful items out of the way or buy them only occasionally in small amounts for a special treat.

Fill your shelves with healthful, low-fat grains such as no-salt pretzels, graham crackers, baked tortilla chips with salsa, rice cakes and whole-grain cereals. Whole-grain breads, bagels and rolls are also good choices, perhaps with a fat-free or reduced-fat spread, such as low-sugar preserves.

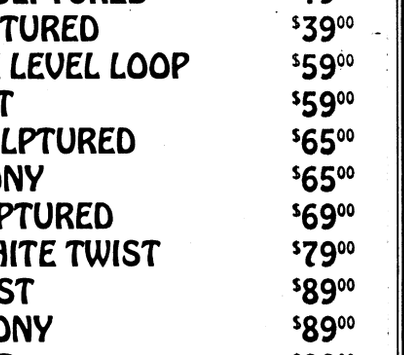
Fresh fruit is always good to give busy high school teens, because it's easy to eat an apple, peach, pear or other peel-free fruit on the run. Fruit tastes good and provides vitamins, minerals, fiber and other health-protecting substances. Also, cut-up raw vegetables can be a handy snack while doing homework or watching television. They'll keep for a couple of days in cold water covered with plastic wrap in the refrigerator. Use low- or non-fat salad dressings for dips.

If your children look forward to going to quick-service restaurants with their friends after school, help them out by giving them nutrition information guides that are available from their favorite fast-food restaurants. Show them which items are lower in fat and have more nutrients. When they make a trip to the grocery store for you, ask them to stop at the salad bar and buy fresh fruit and vegetables already cut up and ready to eat.

Buying low-fat milk instead of whole milk will also cut the fat in your teens' diets, and switching to skim milk is even better. Skim milk and other reduced- or nonfat dairy products are especially good for teen-aged girls, who, surveys find, are the most enthusiastic weight-loss dieters around. Studies show that girls this age especially need to fortify their bones with plenty of calcium in order to avoid osteoporosis later in life.

It's important that your whole family takes aim for healthier eating so that your adolescent or teen-ager doesn't feel unfairly singled out. Make small changes gradually; buy low-fat versions of regular products and add more fruit, vegetables and grains to meals while cutting back on meat portions. And offer your teen-agers low-fat snacks to eat mid-morning and mid-afternoon to help fend off cravings for tempting fast-food meals and treats later in the day.

Let them know it's smart to eat a healthy diet and keep up the positive reinforcement — teen-agers usually need it more than anyone, and it can help them meet their goals and be the person they want to be.



To receive a free brochure of easy tips on eating for better health, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the American Institute for Cancer Research, Dept. TT, Washington, D.C. 20069.

Rangers from 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, exit a C-130 aircraft during an airborne operation at Fort Gordon's Preston Drop Zone.

Rangers

Jump into Fort Gordon

By Nicholas A. Minecci
Fort Gordon Public Affairs Office

The 75th Ranger regiment is the U.S. Army's premiere light-infantry unit. Trained to the highest standards and maintained at razor sharpness, the rangers can deploy anywhere in the world with 11 hours' notice.

March 6, 26 rangers from the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regt., conducted an airborne operation at Fort Gordon, Ga., to train with and tell the ranger story to soldiers of the Regimental Noncommissioned Officer Academy.

The trip began when the rangers donned their parachutes and equipment at Lawson Army Airfield and loaded onto a C-130 Hercules aircraft. From there, they flew to Fort Gordon, where they entered the post in ranger fashion: by parachute.

After forming up on the drop zone, the rangers conducted a tactical road march to the RNCOA.

All rangers are three-time volunteers. First, they volunteered to join the Army, then for Airborne School and finally for ranger training.

Training includes an emphasis on safety, tough standards, live-fire exercises, night operations, operating during adverse weather and on difficult terrain.

Soldiers who meet the requirements and are assigned to the Ranger Regiment go through the Ranger Indoctrination Program, which assesses the incoming soldiers on their physical qualifications and indoctrinates them with basic regimental standards.

Officers and senior NCOs, who attend the Ranger Orientation Program, are integrated into the regiment and are familiarized with regimental policies, procedures and standards.

world war II

50 years ago this week ...

• In the Western European Theater, the U.S. Third Army swept 27 miles east of the Rhine and seized key bridge heads along the Main river. The Third Army's rapid penetration of German defenses along the eastern bank of the Rhine allowed similar breakouts in the north for the U.S. First Army and British forces on the Westphalian front.

• Soviet forces launched a renewed campaign in Hungary aimed at seizing the Austrian capital of Vienna. Within five days, the Soviets penetrated 100 miles and had come within 52 miles of Vienna. Along the Baltic Sea, Soviet forces seized the key port cities of Danzig and Gdynia, splitting the defending German forces.

• In the Pacific, U.S. forces continued the Philippine campaign with operations in southern Luzon of the Philippines and landings on the island groups of Cabu and Visayan Islands.

• On the homefront, the U.S. State Department announced that more than 47 countries had accepted the invitation to attend the San Francisco Conference where the creation of an international organization, later the United Nations, would be discussed.

• In local news, The Bayonet reported that the largest Easter Mass ever at Fort Benning was expected to number more than 10,000 soldiers and family members.

Soldiers in Sinai continue education in wall-less classrooms

TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — Soldiers have taken instruction broadcast by satellite before, but soldiers on peacekeeping duties in the Sinai Desert are the first to receive professional development training delivered by telecast while in the middle of a deployment.

Officers of the 4th Battalion, 505th Infantry Regiment, are receiving instruction in the Infantry Officer Advanced Course while enlisted soldiers are attending the Primary Leadership Development Course. Other soldiers are receiving language training to help the unit carry out its mission.

"What we have done is literally open up the whole TRADOC institution to those guys over there," said Paul McCarthy, Training and Doctrine Command's project officer for "Education in the Sinai."

Instructors are based at Fort Benning; at the Sergeants Major Academy, Fort Bliss, Texas; and at the Defense Language Institute, Presidio of Monterey, Monterey, Calif.

Their classes are beamed live to a satellite over the United States, then transmitted to another satellite and downlinked to the Sinai.

Classes are not simply of the "talking head" variety, McCarthy said. Instructors and students talk to each other and use video and graphics.

Students will be tested and graded without the presence of a test proctor in the Sinai.

"The instructor at Fort Benning, using the video teletraining pipe, can send the test datalinked down to the Sinai and load it into a file server," McCarthy said. "The soldier in the Sinai can access that file server. The test comes on his screen, he completes the test, signs ou,t and results go back to the Infantry School."

When the student finishes the test, the test is automatically erased from the file server so confidentiality of tests is preserved.

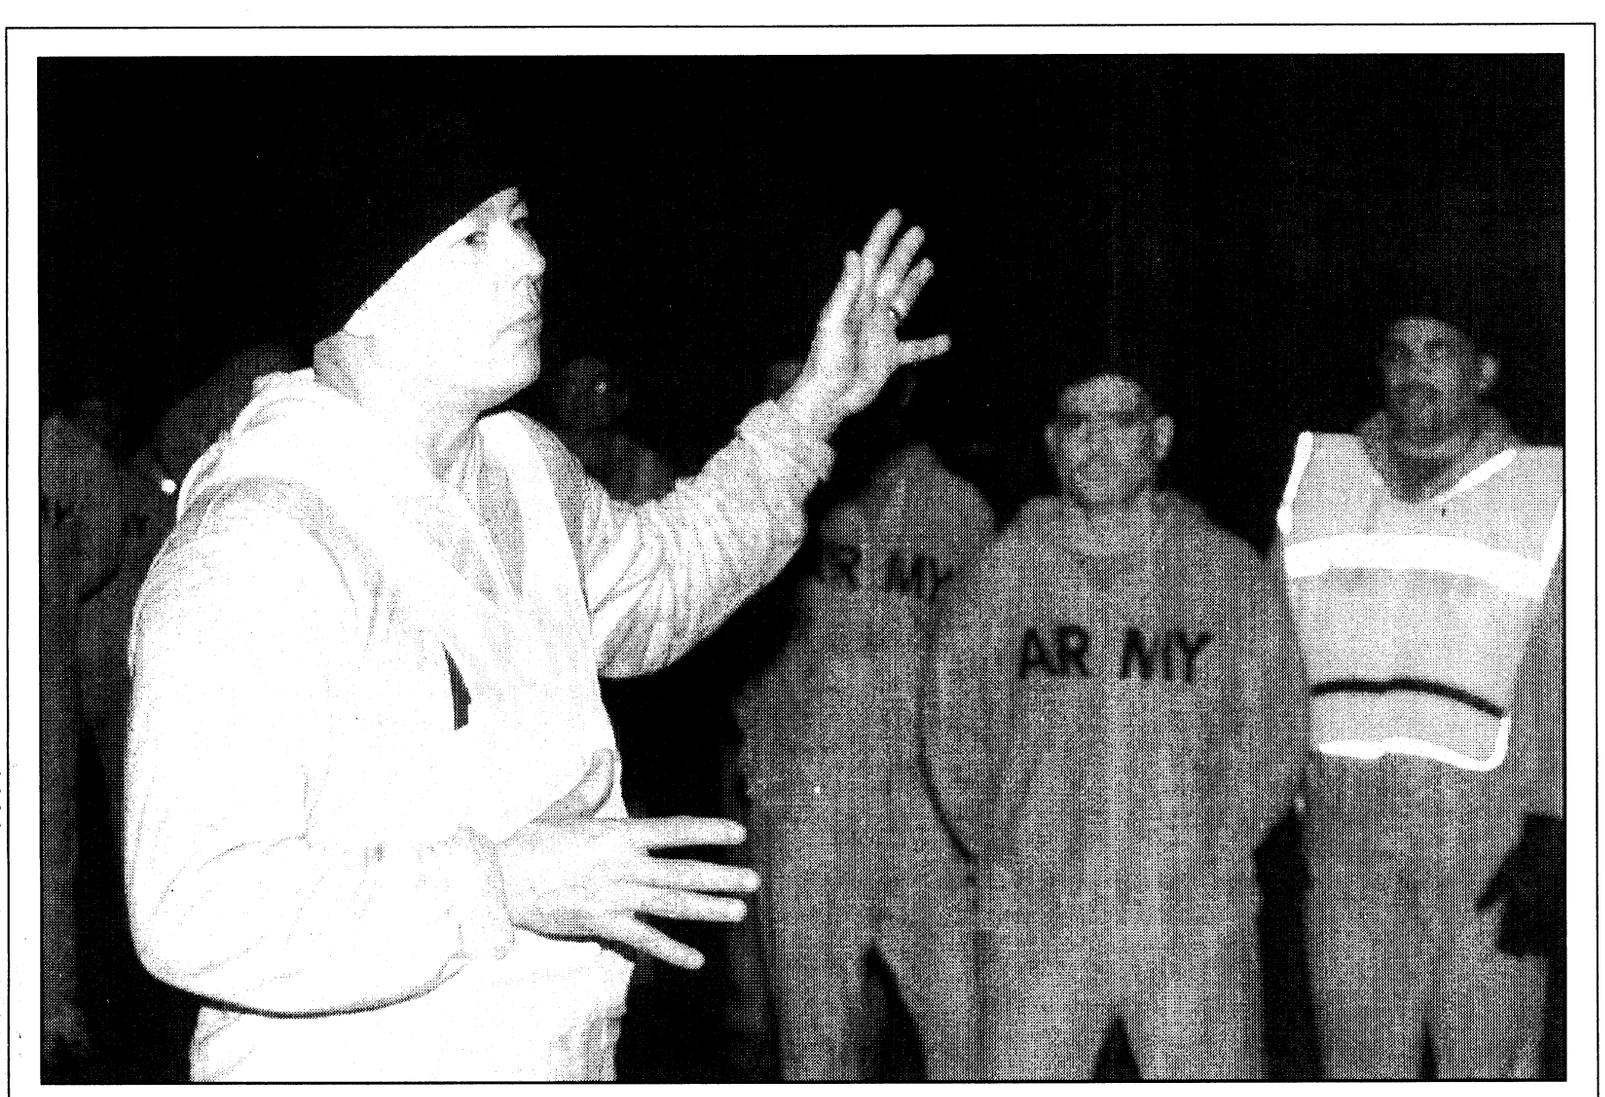
"We can go even further," McCarthy said. "We can have randomly-generated test questions out of Fort Benning or Fort Bliss so you can pipe different questions to different students."

"That is certainly a classroom without walls," said Gen. William W. Hartzog, TRADOC commander. "The technologies that we have today are so radically better than they were five years ago that we're working hard to optimize their use."

Several TRADOC training centers are using video teletraining, McCarthy said. The Armor Center, Fort Knox, Ky., and the Field Artillery Center, Fort Sill, Okla., currently train Army Reserve noncommissioned officers in Vermont, Idaho and Kentucky via satellite.

TRADOC's Deputy Chief of Staff for Training Maj. Gen. Carl Ernst, who directed his organization to set up the Sinai training, envisions adding simulation capability to video teletraining, according to McCarthy.

Trainers will use the Variable Intensity Computerized Training System. VICTORS is a simulation which exercises brigade and battalion staffs in battle command and control. The system will also enable forces to simulate peacekeeping operations.



"What we're saying is that we're able to teach by simulation, or have units use simulation to train their staffs and to train elements of movements, fire and control," McCarthy said.

Satellite training is part of TRADOC's Force XXI Training Campaign Plan.

"The institution has to be prepared to take instruction directly to where soldiers live and work," Hartzog said. "We're putting a lot of effort into trying to make that happen in the near term."

Responses from soldiers are positive. They were surprised at the quality of the training, McCarthy said.

TRADOC's trainers are now preparing to transmit college classes to off-duty deployed soldiers there.

LTC, SGM welcome new IOBC students

By Philip J. McGovern
2nd Bn., 11th Infantry Regiment

Class 4-95 of the Infantry Officer Basic Course began March 6 with welcomes from Lt. Col. Levi R. Martin, commander, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, and Sgt. Maj. Walter E. Rakow.

At IOBC, recently commissioned active and Reserve Army lieutenants train for sixteen weeks to assume duty as infantry platoon leaders.

The commander's speech focused on the obligations and privileges associated with infantry leadership. Quoting the maxim that "credit belongs to the man actually in the arena," he mapped a course where officers earn the right to lead soldiers on the armed services' most fundamental missions.

The key to achieving success in the infantry, he said, is to strive for the highest levels of proficiency and spiritual direction. The commander credited all lieutenants present with taking the first step by striving to lead infantrymen — "soldiers who fight at the heart of the arena." He urged each to achieve success by maintaining motivation in the face of adversity and exceeding standards of technical and tactical proficiency.

Martin also told the class that an officer can lead only by working effectively with the non-commissioned officers under his command. As an example, he cited the essential role of noncommissioned officer trainers within the 2nd Bn., 11th Inf. Regt., and the indispensability of Rakow to his command.

In his address to the class, Rakow emphasized how important credibility, respect, and trust are for effective infantry leadership. A leader can only gain the respect and trust of his troops by consistently demonstrating credibility, he said.

Rakow said the primary way a platoon leader demonstrates credibility is by ensuring troop welfare is taken care of. A troubled soldier is distracted and ineffective, he said, recommending the lieutenants always make troop welfare a top priority.

EDUCATION

College courses teach safety

Skills, knowledge, hands-on training are class objectives

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

Upper Iowa University at Fort Benning offers a course to develop knowledge and skills in the use of handguns in deadly force encounters as well as ammunition manufacturing, maintenance and "gun-proofing" for children.

The university offers an associate of arts and bachelor of science degrees in physical education with a challenging, but relevant fitness and leadership emphasis.

Enrollment into the program is limited to active duty military, family members, Department of the Army and Department of Defense personnel.

The weapons course, HPER 277, is winding up its second semester of classes that are conducted at English Range under the tutelage of Jim Graham, a former sergeant first class who retired in 1990 after serving 26 years on active duty.

Graham's military background includes several combat tours in Vietnam, airborne instructor, drill instructor and the noncommissioned officer in charge (instructor group) for the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit.

The course objective, according to Graham, will give a student the ability to:

• Safely and effectively design a dry fire regimen.

• Correctly employ a live fire training sustainment program.

• Manufacture low-cost training ammunition.

• Demonstrate realistic standards of speed and accuracy that do not break down under combat conditions.

• Display knowledge of the legal, ethical and moral considerations of deadly force employment.

• Compete at entry level in combat type shooting sports.

• Demonstrate effective target engagement at night with or without artificial light.

• Display knowledge of both revolvers and automatic pistols and make an informed decision on personal weapon choice.

• Display knowledge of "gun-proofing" children and home firearm safety.

"This is really unique, to the best of my knowledge," Graham said. "It may exist somewhere else that I don't know about. This is the only firearms marksmanship course offered at the academic level that stresses the use of a full service caliber pistol and teaches reloading techniques."

All students will make and shoot their own ammunition through the course of instruction.

The restorative and martial arts curriculum, according to Dr. Ed Thomas, is designed to produce leaders who excel physically as well as intellectually. "We offer action-oriented courses that develop both the body and mind by focusing on physical training and combatives."

"This program takes military-oriented subjects and teaches them at an expanded level or slightly different aspect as far as the program goes," Graham said. "And that subject actually earns credit; you're not given credit. The individual earns it and learns at the same time. I don't think this is done anywhere else in the world."

The students who are going through this course, Graham said, are highly motivated professional soldiers who are not just looking to get their ticket punched but are looking to better themselves as soldiers.

A smaller class allows Graham the opportunity to give more hands-on training to each student. With more hands-on instruction from Graham and his assistant instructor, the students learn more at a less strenuous pace over an eight-week period.

Sgt. 1st Class Garvin Terrell of the Noncommissioned Officers Academy said he likes the way the class structure is set up.

"This course is designed with the soldier in mind," Terrell said. "If you're in the field or have to pull duty and miss a class, you can make it up. It's great. I've told other guys at work about it because they're looking to go to college, also. This would be the way to go."

The spring course will be Sundays from 1 to 5 p.m. Registration is now under way at Upper Iowa University's Fort Benning office at Soldiers' Plaza, Building 2612, or call 685-9555 for more information.

WOMEN'S HISTORY MONTH

1st lady addresses Pentagon conference

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

First lady Hillary Rodham Clinton said the military is far ahead of much of the rest of the country in making full use of the talents of all people.

Clinton was keynote speaker at the Pentagon observance of Women's History Month on March 1.

"I am honored and privileged to learn I am the first first lady to have an opportunity to speak in the Pentagon," Clinton said.

She was impressed with the seriousness of purpose the military and civilian defense leaders have shown since World War II "to ensure that all Americans regardless of ethnicity, race or gender were given a chance to serve. And I want to commend all of you in leadership positions for not only carrying that on but moving it forward. We need your example and we're grateful for it," she said.

The first lady is honorary chair of the Women in Military Service for America Memorial Project. She said working on it has deepened her appreciation for the roles women have always played in the nation's defense.

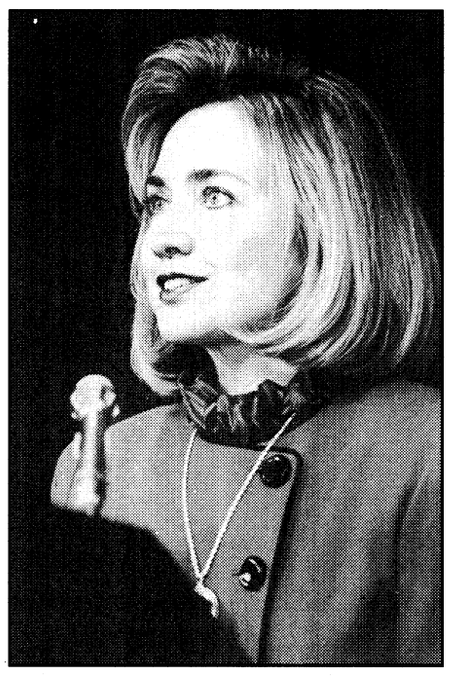
She said women have served in every conflict starting with the American Revolution, and in the Civil War they served not only as cooks and nurses but as saboteurs, scouts and couriers.

She said the Persian Gulf War had so many female participants it was called the "Moms' War." She said 35,000 women served as pilots, mechanics, intelligence specialists and in other roles. "And for this, our whole nation must thank them again and again with grateful awe for their sacrifice.

"The military has shown that no matter what obstacles might be thrown in someone's way," said Clinton, "women have the ability to defend our nation and to blaze the way for other women."

For her, she said, the highlight of a recent salute to African-American World War II veterans was a brief talk by retired Lt. Col. Charity Adams Early, who commanded a group of African-American women in Europe in World War II. Her postal battalion, based in England and France, broke all records for distribution of mail to front-line troops, said Clinton.

Early had the Clintons and much of the rest of the audience laughing and crying, said the first lady. The veteran said she believed it had taken a long time for African-American female war veterans to be recognized.



Clinton said she was moved to tears when Early said, "'That war was the opportunity for all us to realize what it is like to be defending democracy against fascism. We remember the small battlefields of World War II. The battle of the sexes, the battle of the races and the common enemy we all fought. In spite of these battles, what mattered most was this: We won the war.'

"That is what matters most now, both abroad and at home," Clinton said. People must continue to fight the small battles because of a larger purpose, she said.

Clinton praised Secretary of Defense William J. Perry for expanding opportunities for women in the military.

"Women are flying fighter planes and combat helicopters and serving on ships," she said. "We have to continue to make opportunities available for women who choose to make those contributions."

She said the United States should be fighting for both men and women to be able to make choices, whether to be in business, to teach, be a homemaker, whatever is right for them at different times of their lives.

Hillary Clinton

Women are individuals, said Clinton. "Today and the rest of this month, we will recognize women for the many contributions to this country. Not only those done by generals but those by mothers, sisters, daughters, all of us. But we will also look to the future when our daughters and granddaughters will have greater choices for success, happiness and fulfillment."

She said that she is confident that would happen thanks to the paths blazed by women in the Pentagon and the military today.

"They have set standards of dedication and commitment that redound to the glory of this country," Clinton said. "I am confident with leadership like we have here, we will continue to win at home and abroad, the big and the little battles for human dignity, democracy and a better future."

Veterans to gather in Atlanta for national wheelchair games

Department of Veterans Affairs

More than 500 veterans from across the nation, Puerto Rico and Great Britain are expected to compete in the largest wheelchair sports event in the United States, the 15th National Veterans Wheelchair Games, June 13 to 17 in Atlanta.

The event, co-presented by the Department of Veterans Affairs and the Paralyzed Veterans of America, is open to all U.S. military veterans who use wheelchairs due to spinal-cord injury, certain neurological conditions, amputations or other mobility impairments.

Eligible veterans who have never competed in the Games or in wheelchair sports are especially encouraged to participate.

While this event has produced world-class wheelchair athletes, for many newly injured veterans, it is an introduction to wheelchair sports.

"Recreation therapy plays a key role in the rehabilitation of disabled veterans in VA medical centers throughout the country," said VA Secretary Jesse Brown. "These Games, which are a showcase for that therapy, attract veterans of many eras, from World War II to Vietnam to Somalia.

"Each year, these veterans prove to us and to themselves that physical limitations need not be insurmountable obstacles to enjoying active and fulfilling lives.

"They are the men and women who put their lives on the line for our freedom," Brown said. "Now we want to give them their freedom back by introducing them to the exiting world of sports that is still available to them."

"The Games serve dual purposes to the participants," said Richard Grant, PVA national president. "They are undertaken to speed the rehabilitation process and to encourage newly injured veterans to become more aware of their abilities and potential.

"But, equally important, the games encourage veterans to strive to reach their full potential — not only in sports but also in the many other challenges they will face in life," Grant said.

This year's events include track and field, swimming, basketball, quad rugby, weightlifting, slalom, air guns, bowling, table tennis and archery. VA is a recognized leader in rehabilitation, with recreational therapy programs at each of its 172 medical centers.

PVA, a veterans' service organization chartered by Congress, has for almost 50 years served the needs of its members, all of whom have catastrophic paralysis caused by spinal-cord injury or disease.

The VA Medical Center in Atlanta will host the events this year, to be held on the campus of Emory University. The deadline for registration is April 14.

For more information or to request a registration package, contact the Paralyzed Veterans of America at (800) 424-8200, Ext. 752 or 687; or the VA National Recreation Therapy Events office at (410) 605-7377.

Dentists celebrate 84th year

By David G. Dickerhoft
U.S. Army Dental Activity

Members of Fort Benning's Dental Activity gathered at a dinner on the anniversary of the formation of the U. S. Army Dental Corps to recall some of the corps' traditions and accomplishments over the past 84 years.

The tripartite unit, referred to as "Trident," includes units from Fort Rucker and Fort McClellan, Ala., and is headquartered and commanded at Fort Benning by Col. Richard Nurnberg. The dinner celebration was at the Fort Benning Officers' Club and was conducted in the military style of a "Dining In," a traditional military gathering that stresses tradition, protocol, camaraderie and the promotion of esprit de corps. One hundred and fifty guests attended and were treated to an evening of great entertainment, sophisticated debate and spirited repartee.

The head table included Nurnberg, who was the president of the mess, and his wife, Karen; the commanders of the Fort Rucker and Fort McClellan Dental Clinic Commands, Col. Joseph A. Britton and his wife, Nancy, and Lt. Col. Albert Hollmann and his wife, Elisa; 1st Sgt. Charles W. Haworth, the DENTAC senior dental non-commissioned officer; and Capt. William Smith, the DENTAC chaplain.

The evening's entertainment was directed by Capt. Ty Sumner, a one-year resident in general dentistry, who performed duties as "Mr. Vice." After the posting of the colors and welcoming comments by Nurnberg, Sumner presided over the creation of the grog.

At the completion of the evening's dinner, the birthday cake was cut to the combined singing of the assembled mess. The cake-cutting ceremony was presided over by the president of the mess who presented the first cut pieces to Col. Ray Berringer, the oldest dental officer present, Capt. Randy Nartea, the junior dental officer and Spc. Rebecca Rector, the DENTAC/MEDDAC Soldier of the Year. Entertainment during the evening included skits presented by members of the Fort Rucker and Fort McClellan Dental Clinic Commands, which poked fun at the recent downsizing being accomplished by the Department of Defense.

David G. Dickerhoft

Spc. Rebecca Rector (left), Col. Ray Berringer, Col. Richard Nurnberg and Capt. Randy Nartea cut the Army Dental Corps' birthday cake at a recent ceremony.

Today's Army Dental Corps still encompasses more than 1,200 dental officers that are commanded by Maj. Gen. John J. Cuddy, headquartered at Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

The training program at Fort Benning is one of three being operated at Army installations in the United States.

Many dental officers within the Army complete postgraduate residencies anywhere from one year to four years long.

Every one of these training programs is certified by the American Dental Association and can lead to diplomate standing within the officer's desired specialty after he completes a rigorous testing program that measures his competency and mastership of that specialty.

Today's Army Dental corps provides state-of-the-art dental care to soldiers and their families and space available care to retirees. It is prepared to deploy anywhere in the world in support of the Army's dental health needs.

Labels can help build playground

Family Child Care

Organizers have collected only 2 percent of the 345,650 Campbell's Soup Company labels needed to purchase playground equipment for Russ Pond.

The drive is part of the Campbell's Labels for Education program and was launched in January by the Family Child Care providers at Fort Benning.

Labels from more than 1,000 Campbell's products can be redeemed for educational equipment and materials.

Campbell's products include: anything with the company's label, Marie's, Mrs. Paul's, Swanson, V-8, Early California, Franco-American, Vlasic, Pepperidge Farm and Prego.

The goal is to collect enough labels to trade for the playground equipment.

Only 5,000 of the 345,650 labels needed have been collected. The drive ends March 1, 1996.

The new playground would be for children from toddler to school age. There are no playgrounds on post equipped for this varied age group.

The playground equipment will not only benefit the child-care providers, but it will provide a place for any Fort Benning family to come and play with their children.

There are label drop-off points at all community of life buildings and the post commissary.

Many of the child care providers will accept labels. Their homes can be identified by the yellow rainbows in the windows.

The Family Child Care Providers are also looking for volunteers to help distribute fliers about the program, trim and remove labels from cans, and count and sort labels.

Call Debbie Snoke at 687-6823 for more information.

Prayer in Judaism is spiritual apex

By Chaplain Arthur Rutberg
USAIC Chaplain Office

reflections

Prayer in Judaism is not a means to an end but an end itself. Praying is a mitzvah, a requirement, a spiritual obligation. Prayer is not only a way to reach God; it is one of the ways that Jewish people fulfill God's law.

Prayer in Judaism is both a private (kavanah) and a public (keva) affair embodying a paradox of fixed ritual and personal expression. One may feel more rewarding than the other, yet both are vitally important.

The rabbis in the Talmud saw the beginnings of Jewish prayer in the actions of our patriarchs. We learn from our forefathers, whose actions are recorded in the book of Genesis, that it is customary to pray in the morning, afternoon and evening.

Abraham set off for the holy site of Mount Moriah early in the morning; Isaac was out walking in the fields in the afternoon; Jacob stopped by the holy site of Beth-El in the evening. All were dedicated to pray to God. When the holy temple stood in Jerusalem, these prayer times were fixed, and they remain times to pray to this day.

What the priests and Levites at the temple did not determine was the content of these prayers. Since the worship of God in the days of the first and second temple was through the sacrifice of animals, the words of prayer were not that important.

After the second temple was destroyed by the Romans in the year 70 CE, the sacrifices ended and prayer became the only mode of worship. The rabbis at the Sandhedrin and at the rabbinic academy regulated the prayers.

Because of the personal nature of prayer, each rabbi, priest and Levite had his own form. After all, how does one fix an outpouring of a person's spirit to God? How could they block this avenue of personal expression by restricting it to set standards? Yet, if they did not, the worship of God, if not Judaism itself, would be doomed.

Through endless discussions and debates over many years, the rabbis finally came to a decision. There would be three regular daily worship services with an extra one on the Sabbath, i.e., Saturday, in keeping with the extra sacrifice formerly offered on the Sabbath.

Every service had to include words from the Bible, particularly the passage in Deuteronomy, chapter 6, "Hear O Israel, the Lord, our God is one!"

This was and still is the essence of Jewish theology and faith. This statement of faith is said again and again — on waking up and on going to sleep — in life and at the moment of death.

Around this kernel of Torah, the rabbis framed prayers extolling God's wonders of creation, revelation and redemption. But aside from praise, the rabbis reasoned that prayers should include some kind of supplication to God.

To this end, the rabbis composed a series of 18 prayers requesting among other things, God's protection, strength, holiness, sustenance, rain, deliverance from evil, good health and most of all peace.

Yet a problem still remained. The paradox still existed between keva and kavanah, the fixed vs. the spiritual prayer. To solve this dilemma, the rabbis instituted the silent prayer.

Following the 18 supplications, the participant in prayer has an opportunity to reflect and express his or her deepest personal and spiritual feelings.

The congregation stands in silent meditation and the worship service does not continue until the last person is finished and sits down.

In Judaism, the silent prayer is the apex of spiritual life. The silent prayer following the supplications provides the opportunity for both the public and the private aspects of Jewish worship.

chapel notes

Good Friday service — The chaplains of the Infantry Training Brigade will present a Good Friday Service April 14 at the Sand Hill Theater, titled "Were You There?"

It is a dramatic and illustrated presentation of the events leading to and culminating in the crucifixion, which will leave you at the foot of the cross. Include spiritual closet in spring cleaning

By Brenda Steedley
USAIC Chaplain Office

reflections

Spring has come! That means time for spring cleaning ... putting away old winter things and bringing out cooler spring clothing. Perhaps even more exciting, it is an opportunity to completely clean out the closet, take things to the thrift shop and buy new spring clothes.

Recently, a Protestant Women of the Chapel "Precepts" Bible Study class, titled "Covenant," focused on spiritual "spring cleaning."

In the Bible when a covenant was made between two parties, the two exchanged robes. This exchange of robes symbolized the "putting on of one another" — exchanging identities.

Our covenant partner, Jesus Christ, put on our robe of humanity. We, as Christians, put on his robe, the Holy Spirit. The exchanging of robes with Jesus means that we put on a completely new wardrobe and throw away the old.

Clothes do make a difference. However, Christians require a unique wardrobe.

Colossians 3:12-14 describes our dress: "Therefore, as God's chosen people, holy and dearly loved, clothe yourselves with compassion, kindness, humility, gentleness and patience. Bear with each other and forgive whatever grievance you may have against one another. And over all these virtues put on love, which binds them all together in perfect unity." (NIV)

What do you do if there is no room in your spiritual closet for this new wardrobe? That's where the spring cleaning comes in.

In the third chapter of Colossians, there is also a list of characteristics we should put off and throw away. These include anger, wrath, malice, slander, abusive speech, lying, sexual immorality, impurity, lust, evil desires and greed. These take up so much room that we're left with little space for the beautiful clothes God wants us to wear. So throw them away.

How do you do that? You must relinquish control of your life to God and exchange this unsightly wardrobe for the new garments he desires to give you.

His clothing will never go out of style. People will never tire of seeing you wear them. You will not be overdressed by wearing them all.

Each morning as you put on your outer clothing, tell the Lord that you also desire to wear his robe of compassion, kindness, humility, gentleness, patience, peace, thankfulness, tolerance, and love.

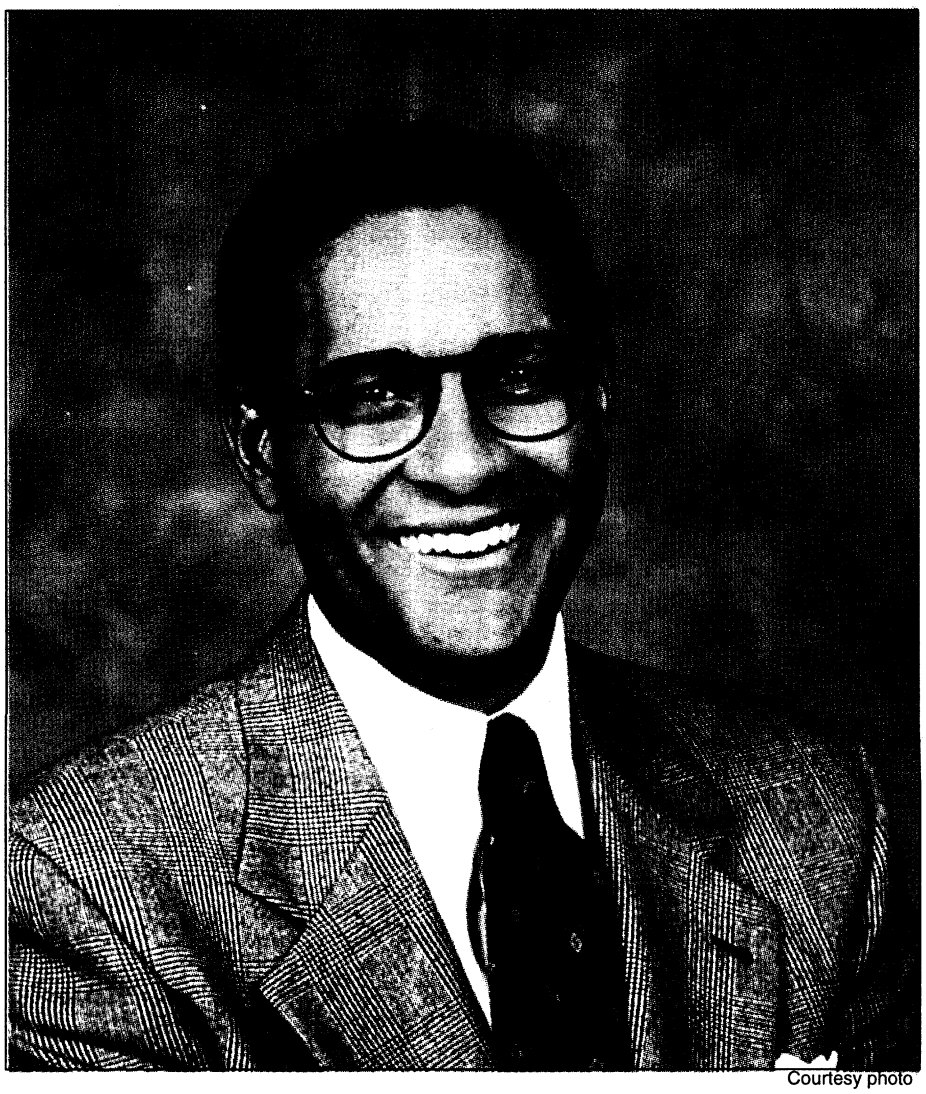
Bryant Gumbel to host new sports magazine

By Matt Meachem
Tribune Media Services

What: "Real Sports with Bryant Gumbel"
When: Sunday on HBO



SPOTLIGHT

For the last 13 years, he has been the host of the "Today" show, but sports fans haven't forgotten that Bryant Gumbel began his network career with NBC Sports in 1975 as host of its NFL pregame show. He was the sole host of virtually all NBC Sports programming when he left in 1982 to anchor "Today."

Now, he's back as the host of "Real Sports With Bryant Gumbel," an hour-long sports magazine that premieres Sunday night on HBO. The show promises to examine the world of sports beyond the box scores and statistics, offering provocative stories that rarely are seen in sports television today.

Why would Gumbel, whose 13-year tenure as a "Today" anchor is longer than anyone else's in the show's history, want to return to the sporting arena?

"The opportunity to do something that has a chance to be really different and exciting," he said. "I've never been a huge fan of magazine shows, either the long-standing sports variety or the newsmagazine shows. Shows like ABC's 'Wide World of Sports' or NBC's ' Sports World' weren't my kind of thing, because I thought that a lot of times, they're filled with pseudo-sports ... diving, ice skating and things like that. Nor was I a big fan of newsmagazine shows because there is a sameness to them and, in many instances, a softness to them that I didn't really care for.

"This show, on the other hand, was free of the regular pressures that prohibit such a venture on regular network television," Gumbel continued. "It's free of ratings pressure. It's free of sponsor pressure. It's free of contractual pressure with leagues and the like, so when it was outlined to me, it was something that I found very attractive."

HBO has assembled an impressive lineup of talent for "Real Sports." In addition to Gumbel, the show includes on-air personalities Jim Lampley, James Brown, Frank Deford, Larry Merchant and Sonja Steptoe, with contributions from writers Ira Berkow and William Rhoden and editorial consultant Gary Myers.

"The fact that it has a lot of people engaged with it who I respect, and who I think can bring a kind of serious journalism to sports that has not been seen before, makes it an exciting project," adds Gumbel.

HBO Sports has scheduled four editions of "Real Sports" for 1995. The premiere show looks at Major League Baseball's labor troubles, profiles basketball 'bad boy' Dennis Rodman, and takes a critical look at Augusta (Ga.) National Golf Club, home of this week's Masters tournament. Future shows are slated for July, September and December.

While previous attempts at sports journalism on television have struggled, "Real Sports" has one advantage over its predecessors. With no commercial sponsors and no contract with any major sports league, HBO has the opportunity to provide an in-depth look at some of the most controversial topics in sports today.

Martin Army Community Hospital making improvements

By Caejar A. Cox
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Martin Army Community Hospital is making changes to improve services to its patients. Last week, the hospital went online with a new computer system that will eventually connect all medical facilities on post.

Watch "Fort Benning Today" to learn more about the new system and how the improvements will affect you.

Around Fort Benning, many fields and buildings are dedicated to great military heroes. Watch "Fort Benning Today" to see highlights of the latest dedication, the Whittington Maintenance Complex, which is located in Harmony Church.

USAIC-TV Schedule
USAIC-TV operates 24 hours a day on post cable Channel 3.

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel announces post events and post movie listings, and it offers free classified advertisements on "Fort Benning Update," a community information service.

Anyone who lives on post and subscribes to Fort Benning Cable can watch USAIC-TV on Channel 3, 24 hours a day.

Anyone living off post can watch "Fort Benning Today" Monday mornings at 7:25, 7:55, 8:25 and 8:55 on WLTZ-TV 38.

Westville's Spring Festival to continue through April 9

Westville Historic Handicrafts Inc.

Westville's Spring Festival is under way. The activities will continue through April 9 with special music and crafts demonstrations.

In the preindustrial south, with its basically agricultural society, the return of spring meant plowing, planting and preparing that year's crop. At Westville, activities will be no different as mules plow ground to prepare the gardens for planting.

There will be demonstrations of other activities as well as the regular demonstrations of blacksmithing, pottery, quilting, spinning, weaving, basketmaking and woodworking.

Saturday, Westville will feature the Jasper family of Columbus. Westville's music features will be David Woolf and Les Scott from Atlanta on the hammered dulcimer and Appalachian style April 8.

April 7, activities begin at 2 p.m. with a carnival and food and craft booths. The battle of the bands with four local bands will be from 7 to 11 p.m. at the Main Stage. Back Roads kicks it off, followed by Steel Pillows at 8, Madd Max at 9 and Jagged Edge at 10.

April 8, a one-mile fun run and walk kicks off the activities at 8:30 a.m. followed by the Shannon Hosiery 5K race at 9:30; call Brian Luedtke at 568-2058 to register.

Starting at 10 a.m., there will be an antique car show, carnival and food and craft booths. It's the faculty vs. the students on the softball field at 11 a.m.

The college's 25th anniversary reunion luncheon for 1970 baseball players will be at the Alumni Conference Center at 12:30 p.m. followed by the 25th anniversary reunion reception for the Class of 1970, which was the first four-year graduating class, at 1:30.

Judy's Superstars from the Cottrell Dance Studio will perform at 1 p.m. and the Gayle Humphries Dancers will perform at 2 p.m. There will be a Gymnastics Unlimited exhibition at 2:30 p.m. followed by an in-line skating exhibition at 3.

The Fort Benning Command Exhibition Parachute Team, the Silver Wings, will jump in at 2:45 p.m. and the Fort Benning Jazz Band will perform at 4:30 p.m.

Musical entertainment continues from 5:30 to 9:30 p.m. immediately followed by a fireworks display.

All activities are open to the community. Admission is $4 for adults and $2 for students and children. Columbus College students get in free; free children's tickets for ages 5 to 12 are available at area Burger King restaurants.

For more information, call 568-2280.

Army chief provides words of praise, encouragement to post

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

Army Chief of Staff Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan, while visiting Fort Benning March 30 and 31, offered words of praise and encouragement to the post for winning the Commander-in-Chief's Award two years in a row.

Sullivan, here to be the guest speaker at the Association of the United States Army general membership meeting and dinner, also spoke at an officer professional development class at Marshall Auditorium in Infantry Hall, Building 4, as well as at the Army Community of Excellence rally, also in Marshall Auditorium.

Sullivan

"We exist to fight and win the nation's wars," said Sullivan at the OPD March 30. "The American people have ... told us what to do and we have produced."

Sullivan talked to the officers about his expectations of them.

"I expect officers to stay focused, to promote a set of values and to encourage professional reading," Sullivan said. "When in charge, take charge. Make things happen the way they are supposed to — to standard."

Sharing some of his values, Sullivan stressed the importance of loyalty, competence, honesty, a sense of humor, critical thinking and soldiers who like to soldier. Sullivan said he believes questions are good because disagreement is not disrespect.

Also, Sullivan talked about the impact improvements in the infantry — such as the night vision lab on post — will have on the Army as well as the effects of downsizing — doing more with fewer people. Sullivan reminded the audience of the challenge to maintain a great, but smaller Army and the challenge to respond to "the world as it is — not as we wish it to be."

Working as a team was the theme Sullivan maintained at the OPD and the AUSA dinner March 30.

At the dinner, he was serenaded by the Infantry Band and the Infantry Chorus, which combined on one number to perform a song titled 'Force XXI.' It seemed appropriate for the occasion, since Sullivan had spoken at the OPD about the Army's need to prepare for the future by building a 'Force XXI.'

At the ACOE rally, he commended Fort Benning for being the only post in the Army to win the CINC Award two years back to back.

"I am proud of you, and I am proud to have soldiered with you," he said. "What you (Fort Benning) have done is a real accomplishment, made possible by men and women working to standard. I appreciate it and Army leadership appreciates what you have done."

At the end of the rally, the audience cheered and waved banners while the band played "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

Next, Sullivan made a brief stop at the Ranger Memorial before heading off to Lawson Army Airfield where he met with members of the Army Marksmanship Unit and the All -Army wrestlers.

As Sullivan sat in the red, white and blue C-20 jet preparing for take off, Fort Benning Commanding General Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix rendered what may have been his last salute to him as Army chief of staff since Sullivan is planning to retire in June.

Ceremony to honor volunteers

By Jan Wesner Childs
Special to The Bayonet©

Fort Benning's 3,000 volunteers will be recognized at a special ceremony April 21 at Riverside.

"We like to recognize each volunteer for contributing service service to our installation and to our community," installation volunteer coordinator Olga MacLean said Monday. The event coincides with National Volunteer Week, April 23 to 29.

Eleven volunteers will be singled out for their contributions.

Certificates signed by the commanding general will be forwarded to each agency and family support group to be presented to their volunteers at their discretion.

More than 3,000 volunteers work at various agencies including Special Olympics, Meals on Wheels, Santa's Castle and the Thrift Shop, MacLean said.

The volunteer recognition ceremony will be from 4 to 6 p.m. at Riverside — the home of Commanding General Maj. Gen. John Hendrix, and his wife, Cheri — located at 100 Vibbert Ave.

Reservations for the ceremony must be made by April 14. Call 545-5602 for more information.

Post CSM reflects on his career, Army's future

Editor's note: Fort Benning's Command Sgt. Maj. William H. Acebes' retirement ceremony will be Thursday. The Bayonet asked Acebes his views about the future of the Army and the noncommissioned officer corps, his plans for retirement and his advice to new soldiers.

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

Q. Where do you see the Army of the future headed?

With all the new technology, the Army is headed toward soldiers having to be better educated. Along with that education, there is going to have to be greater computer literacy, because the whole world seems to revolve around everything that's going on with computers.

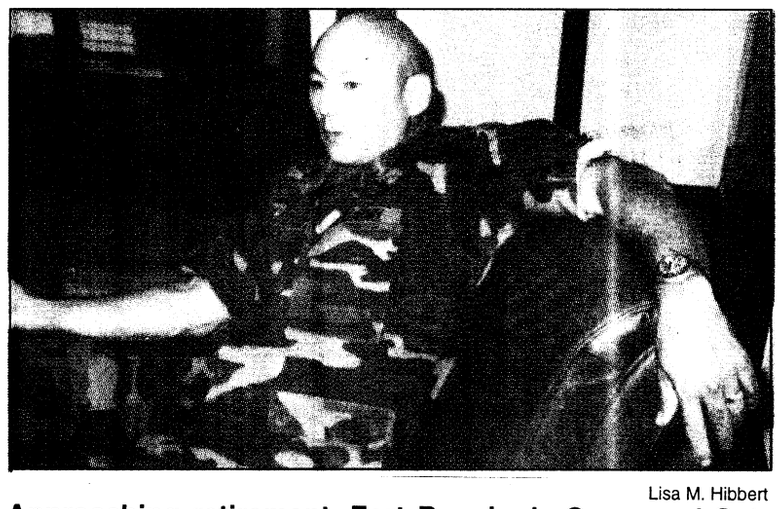
No matter how bright the future looks technology-wise, the soldier must still be physically fit and mentally tough. Future battles are going to be like those that evolved from Panama and Somalia.

There will be a lot more stress on the soldier, especially in operations other than war. It is going to be different and fluid. Nowadays, like in Somalia and Haiti, soldiers are intermingling with noncombatants more, just as we were in Vietnam. You have to be accurate and disciplined to know the rules of engagement.

Q. What advice do you have for the new soldiers in the Army or those contemplating joining the Army?

The Army is still a good place for soldiers to gain knowledge and to compete for promotion fairly.

The Army is the greatest employer on Earth. What other employer will allow you to compete for promotion against your peers and pay a good part of your education?



Soldiers can come into the Army and become career soldiers. They can travel and see the world; the opportunities are still there.

Soldiers are more respected by the nation now because of the media's portrayal of them — not just as killers but protectors of peace worldwide.

'Best Ranger' to begin April 28; 120 expected

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The 13th annual David E. Grange Jr. Best Ranger Competition will be conducted at Fort Benning April 28 to May 1.

The three-day, nonstop event begins April 28 at 7 a.m. with a physical training test, and it will conclude nearly 60 hours later April 30 at about 5 p.m. with a 2.7-mile buddy run from Victory Pond to the Ranger Training Brigade headquarters.

As many as 60 teams from across the country are expected to participate by sending two-man teams to compete in head-to-head competition for the title of "Best Ranger."

Competitors will take on other events during the competition to include marksmanship, a parachute spot jump, a 20-mile plus forced foot march, ranger stakes, the 60-foot Prusik climb and rappel, a canoe course, night land navigation, the Darby Queen obstacle course, the water confidence test and a helocast and swim. Awards will be presented May 1.

The competition consists of 12 events:

- Physical Fitness Test
- Weapons Firing
- Spot Parachute Jump
- Forced Foot March
- Ranger Stakes
- Prusik Climb and Rappel
- Land Navigation Course
- Darby Queen Obstacle Course

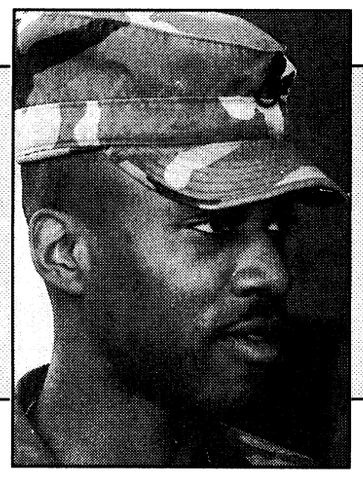
Deputy CG selected to command 25th ID

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning's deputy commanding general and assistant commandant of the U.S. Army Infantry School has been selected to assume command of the 25th Infantry Division (Light) .

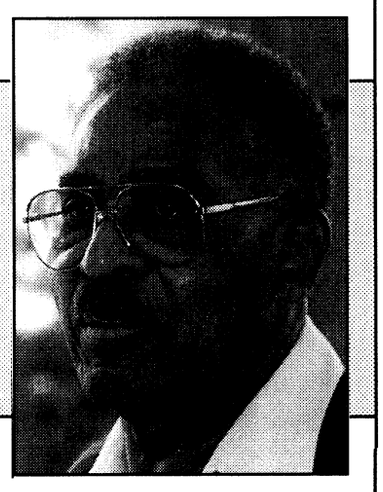
Brig. Gen. John J. Maher III, Fort Benning's deputy commanding general and assistant commandant was named this week to assume command of the division, which is headquartered in Schofield Barracks, Hawaii.

No date for the new assignment was announced.



Maher assumed his current duties at Fort Benning last July after a tour as assistant division commander of the 24th Infantry Division at Fort Stewart.

His most recent assignments include command of the 2nd Battalion, 327th Infantry at Fort Campbell, Ky., and command of the 2nd Ranger Battalion at Fort Lewis, Wash.



An Atlanta native, he was a distinguished military graduate of the University of Georgia. He and his wife Cynthia have two sons, Jay and Peter.

Underage drinking leads to deaths

National Council on Alcoholism and Drug Dependence Inc.

A single shocking statistic makes it impossible to deny the tragic consequences of underage drinking: a 16-year-old is more likely to die from an alcohol-related problem than any other cause

commentary

It's time to get serious about underage drinking.

Youths under the age of 21 who go out drinking with their friends on the weekend, or even those whose parents allow them to drink in a supervised setting, are doing drugs. It's that simple.

Of course that's not the message most of us parents want to hear because it means that if we're having a cocktail to unwind after work, or a glass of wine with dinner, or a few beers during the football game, then we're doing drugs too.

Well, yes.

The difference is that we're adults who can consume alcohol legally and presumably we know how to handle it: And usually we're drinking in an environment where other adults can recognize when we've had more than we can handle. This just isn't the case with most youths.

But as parents, we've simply got to stop looking at underage drinking as a "rite of passage" or sometimes ignoring it altogether so we can avoid having to face some uncomfortable truths about our own behavior. Surveys of youths show that their drinking habits are the kind that get adults in trouble: more than half say they drink when they're upset and nearly 40 percent admit that they drink alone. Even more disturbing — and potentially destructive — is their tendency to "binge" or consume five or more drinks at a single sitting.

A single shocking statistic makes it impossible to deny the tragic consequences of underage drinking: a 16-year-old is more likely to die from an alcohol-related problem than any other cause. That's because alcohol is associated with the leading causes of death among teen-agers, including car crashes, suicide and murder.

Yet, astonishingly, two-thirds of teen-agers who drink report that they can buy their own alcoholic beverages. How can this be? After all, isn't 21 the legal drinking age in every state in the country?

A 1991 report released by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services demonstrated that most states have a long way to go before the minimum drinking age — which technically means only that it is illegal to sell alcohol to minors — has any real impact on underage drinking. For example, in 35 states no laws prohibit minors from possessing alcohol and 21 states don't even prohibit them from consuming it.

The President's Commission on Model State Drug Laws addressed this problem last year and has proposed an Underage Alcohol Consumption Reduction Act which, if enacted by all 50 states, would eliminate many of the legal loopholes that foster an environment where nearly one in every five tenth-graders can get drunk at least once a month. Developed with the assistance of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, this model act, now in the hands of our state legislators, establishes a comprehensive legal strategy to prevent the purchase, possession and consumption of alcohol by our kids.

Among its many provisions, the act would hit youths and adults equally hard where underage drinking is concerned. Children might think twice about drinking if they knew that they would be faced with a $250 fine, 24 hours of community service and the loss of their driver's license for 90 days just for getting caught the first time. Adults who provide kids with alcohol also would be faced with misdemeanor charges and a $250 fine. Licensed establishments that sell alcohol to minors — or who knowingly allow it to be consumed on their premises — would be fined $1,000.

We all know that laws alone will not stop youths from drinking. Establishing good relationships with our children and honestly examining our own drinking habits are critical if we are to solve a problem that affects nearly all of us. Just as important are educational programs, the policies of our schools and colleges, campaigns conducted through the mass media and strategies developed by the entire community.

But laws express community values and set community standards in strong unambiguous terms. Laws help shift personal attitudes and direct social influences toward behaviors that eventually become the norm.

By passing an Underage Alcohol Consumption Reduction Act in Georgia we can not only address a serious problem in the most effective legal manner available, but we also can accentuate those community values of health, safety, and the welfare of young people, both now and in the future.

Editor's note: While the article doesn't specifically address soldiers, it does apply to those who are under 21.

Child Abuse Prevention Month Proclamation

Whereas, child abuse is a community problem and finding solutions depends on involvement among people throughout the community;

Whereas, statistics of children who are abused and neglected escalate each year;

Whereas, the effects of child abuse are felt by whole communities and need to be addressed by the entire community;

Whereas, effective child abuse prevention programs succeed because of partnerships created among social service agencies, schools, religious organizations, law enforcement agencies and the business community;

Whereas, youth-serving prevention programs offer positive alternatives for young people and encourage youth to develop strong ties to their community;

Whereas, all citizens should become more aware of child abuse and its prevention within the community and to become involved in supporting parents to raise their children in a safe, nurturing environment;

Now, therefore, I, Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix, do hereby proclaim April as Child Abuse Prevention Month and call upon all citizens, community agencies, religious organizations, medical facilities and businesses to increase their participation in our efforts to prevent child abuse, thereby strengthening the communities in which we live.

— Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix

CSM sends thanks

I won't get a chance to thank everybody before I leave, but I want the following people to know they are appreciated.

I would like to thank:

• The secretaries of Infantry Hall for allowing me to taste all the great food they prepared. I am glad they felt comfortable coming to me if they needed to.

• Ed Fuller, Elmer Robbins, Dominick DeCarlo and his staff at the Directorate of Public Works for caring about Fort Benning and for their efforts to make soldiers' lives so much better

• Ted Craig and Rochelle Bautista of the Army Career and Alumni Program for all of their assistance

• All the people in Phenix City and Columbus for allowing me to be a part of your community. If you had a beach with salt water I would be retiring here.

• Retired Col. Biff Hadden and retired Col. Bernie Quick for letting me help feed the ammunition belt of victory.

• Ed Burkhalter of the Directorate of Operations and Training for keeping me and the ceremonies straight and for being a friend.

• Peggy Morris of Veterans Affairs, who knows how to take care of soldiers.

• The Public Affairs Office — especially Sgt. 1st Class Barbara J. Ray, for being a great confidante — for getting the right information and for being great soldiers and civilians.

• Veterinary Services and Protocol for taking care of us (my staff and me).

• The hospital staff for all of your professionalism during the time of my wife's illness.

• All commanders and directors for allowing me into your areas so that I could perform my mission and thank you for having confidence in me.

• The Military Police, for keeping law, order and safety paramount at Fort Benning.

• All command sergeants major and sergeants major for being my professional confidants and friends whether you like it or not.

Thank you for your professionalism during my tour. No words can express my feelings for you because words will never be enough.

And these are just a few of the people I want to thank. To list them all would be impossible; these are just some of the people I had fun with.

I want to say thank you even to the sergeant who teaches on the loneliest range on the most remote part of Fort Benning; I want to say thanks for helping to make this the best Army in the world.

— Command Sgt. Maj. William H. Acebes
Post command sergeant major

Laundry washes anything

By Marc G. Turchin
Bayonet staff writer

The post laundry facility offers the Fort Benning community a relatively inexpensive escape from "washday blues."

The facility provides organizational laundry and dry cleaning services as well as individual services, according to William C. Daniel, chief, Laundry Branch, Supply and Services Division, Directorate of Logistics.

The organizational laundry service includes laundering linen, sleeping bags and dry cleaning drapes for Fort Benning units, while individuals may have anything from towels to battle dress uniforms laundered.

"I want to provide the best service at the lowest cost," Daniel said.

Some of the prices offered at the post laundry are:

- BDU trousers — $1.40 for three-day or $1.85 for 24-hour service
- BDU shirt — $1.40 for three-day or $1.80 for 24-hour service
- Civilian trousers — $1.40 for three-day or $2.25 for 24-hour service.

The laundry facility offers three-day as well as 24-hour service on laundry, and offers a bundle rate as well as per-item pricing.

Patrons can have 12 items, ranging from civilian clothes to BDUs to bath towels, laundered for $7.75. Starch can be added for no extra cost, Daniel said. The only requirement, he said, is that articles belong to the soldier or family member.

"The bundle service has been offered for some time," Daniel said. "It really replaced the old payroll deduction that was offered years ago."

It doesn't matter if one or 12 items are turned in, all three-day service items go to the same place.

Items turned in for laundering are transported to Fort Rucker, Ala. While there, they are laundered and put on hangers, if needed, Daniel said. Two days later the items are returned to Fort Benning in the late afternoon and can be picked up the next day from either Building 2747, near the Airborne School on Main Post, or at Building 3245 in Sand Hill.

Marc G. Turchin

First Sgt. Earl W. McLean (in BDUs), Company E, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, picks up a set of BDUs from the post laundry facility in Sand Hill. Retired 1st Sgt. James A. Cousins waits for his chance to retrieve his items from the facility.

Claudette Shelton is the laundry manager of the Main Post facility and is responsible for day-to-day operations.

"You name it, we do it," Shelton said. She describes her work as "steady."

"You have good days and bad days," she said, but added the best part of her job is the people she works for. "There is a lot of honesty and trust."

Shelton is an employee of Broad Avenue Laundry and Tailoring, Incorporated, of Fort Rucker, Ala. — one of three contracting companies servicing the post laundry facility.

Daniel said Broad Avenue handles most of the laundering of personal items and unit linen and equipment, while Sparkle Dry Cleaning of Columbus handles all dry cleaning services and laundry that has to be done in 24 hours. Wade Textile Rental is responsible for the washing of all types of linen from Martin Army Community Hospital.

The laundry facility offers a payroll deduction to Infantry Training Brigade trainees and Officer Candidate School students.

In the case of ITB, each trainee has the option of using the deduction system, Daniel said.

Each week, he said, the contractor from post laundry goes to each of the companies in ITB for a direct exchange of sheets and pillowcases. The contractor will also visit Sand Hill to pick up laundry from the companies participating in payroll deduction, he said.

Wilma Morales, a laundry worker at the newly-remodeled Sand Hill pick-up point, said most of the people who come in leave satisfied.

"They tell me our service is good," Morales said. "They say we're better than the outside because of our prices."

First Sgt. Earl W. McLean, Company E, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, said he comes to Sand Hill from Harmony Church to get his items laundered because of the service.

"I think the prices are better and it's usually not backed up," McLean said. "They do a good job on the uniforms."

The Main Post facility is open Monday through Friday from 6:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m., and Saturdays from 8 a.m. to noon. The Sand Hill location is open Monday through Friday from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m.

For more information, call the Main Post facility at 545-1371 or Sand Hill at 544-8937.

Use 911 only for emergencies

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

When trouble breaks out at Fort Benning, the E-911 system, the only system of its kind in the Department of Defense, is ready to respond. However, officials say, this system, like any other 911 system can be misused.

According to Fay B. Tucker, E-911 system administrator, since the number is so easy to remember, it often receives prank calls.

"A child can remember a simple number like 911," Tucker said. "This sometimes results in that number being dialed when a child, usually alone, starts playing with the telephone."

In addition to children playing, the E-911 system is experiencing other problems as well.

One such problem is callers hanging up. The enhanced system identifies the address and number of the caller, Tucker said, however, this can sometime present problems since the Military Police respond to the call even if the caller has hung up.

Another problem Tucker cited is the use of 911 for nonlife-threatening situations. People call 911 when their neighbors are playing music too loudly or when they see a dead squirrel in the street, she said. These types of incidents should be reported to the Military Police Desk at 545-5223, she said.

Tucker said only callers who have bonafide life-threatening emergencies should call 911, and they should stay on the line and provide their name, address, telephone number and the nature and location of the problem.

That way, operators will know what is wrong and what needs to be done, Tucker said. The more information the caller can give, the better the service will be.

Don't like to rake? Mulching is better

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

If raking is one of those lawn-care chores you could just as well do without, rejoice — the landfill can just as well do without it, too.

According to Walter P. Nichols, solid waste program manager for the Directorate of Public Works' Environmental Branch, mulching grass clippings rather than raking and bagging them can produce a number of benefits.

"You can reduce waste, save landfill space and improve soil conditions by mulching grass clippings," Nichols said.

The key to successful mulching, he said, is to keep the clippings short, so they will fall through the grass and recycle nutrients to the soil.

Nichols said other tips for good mulching are:

- Mow lawn before grass gets too high; or, raise the mower blade to reduce the length of the clipped grass
- Never remove more then 1/3 of the grass when mowing
- Remove clippings from high-maintenance lawns, such as those planted with hybrid bermuda or zoysia grass
- If your lawnmower is not designed for mulching, it can be modified by installing a baffle on the exit chute.

Mulching, besides saving landfill space and eliminating hours of raking, will also make your lawn healthier, Nichols said.

"The extra nutrients (from the clippings) will improve the physical condition of the soil and make the lawn more drought-tolerant," he said.

Robin and I would like to express our sincere appreciation to everyone that has helped during the death of our son, John Chaffin Ward. All calls, cards, flowers and food will be cherished forever. May God bless each and every one of you in the community.
Sincerely,
Jess & Robin Ward

Big Brothers and Big Sisters and the Metro Columbus Urban League are looking for a few good black men.

The two groups have launched a program called the Mentoring Collaborative.

"The objective of this program is to recruit and identify potential African-American males to serve as mentors to black male children ages 6 to 12," Program Director Donald Beall said.

Big Brothers and Big Sisters Director Frank M. Brannon said another 50 to 60 volunteers are needed. Big Brothers and Big Sisters currently serves about 100 children, he said.

Requirements to become a Big Brother include reliable transportation, be older than 18 and be able to spend three hours to five hours a week with the youngster.

The program asks for a one-year commitment, but Beall said exceptions are made for soldiers who want to get involved.

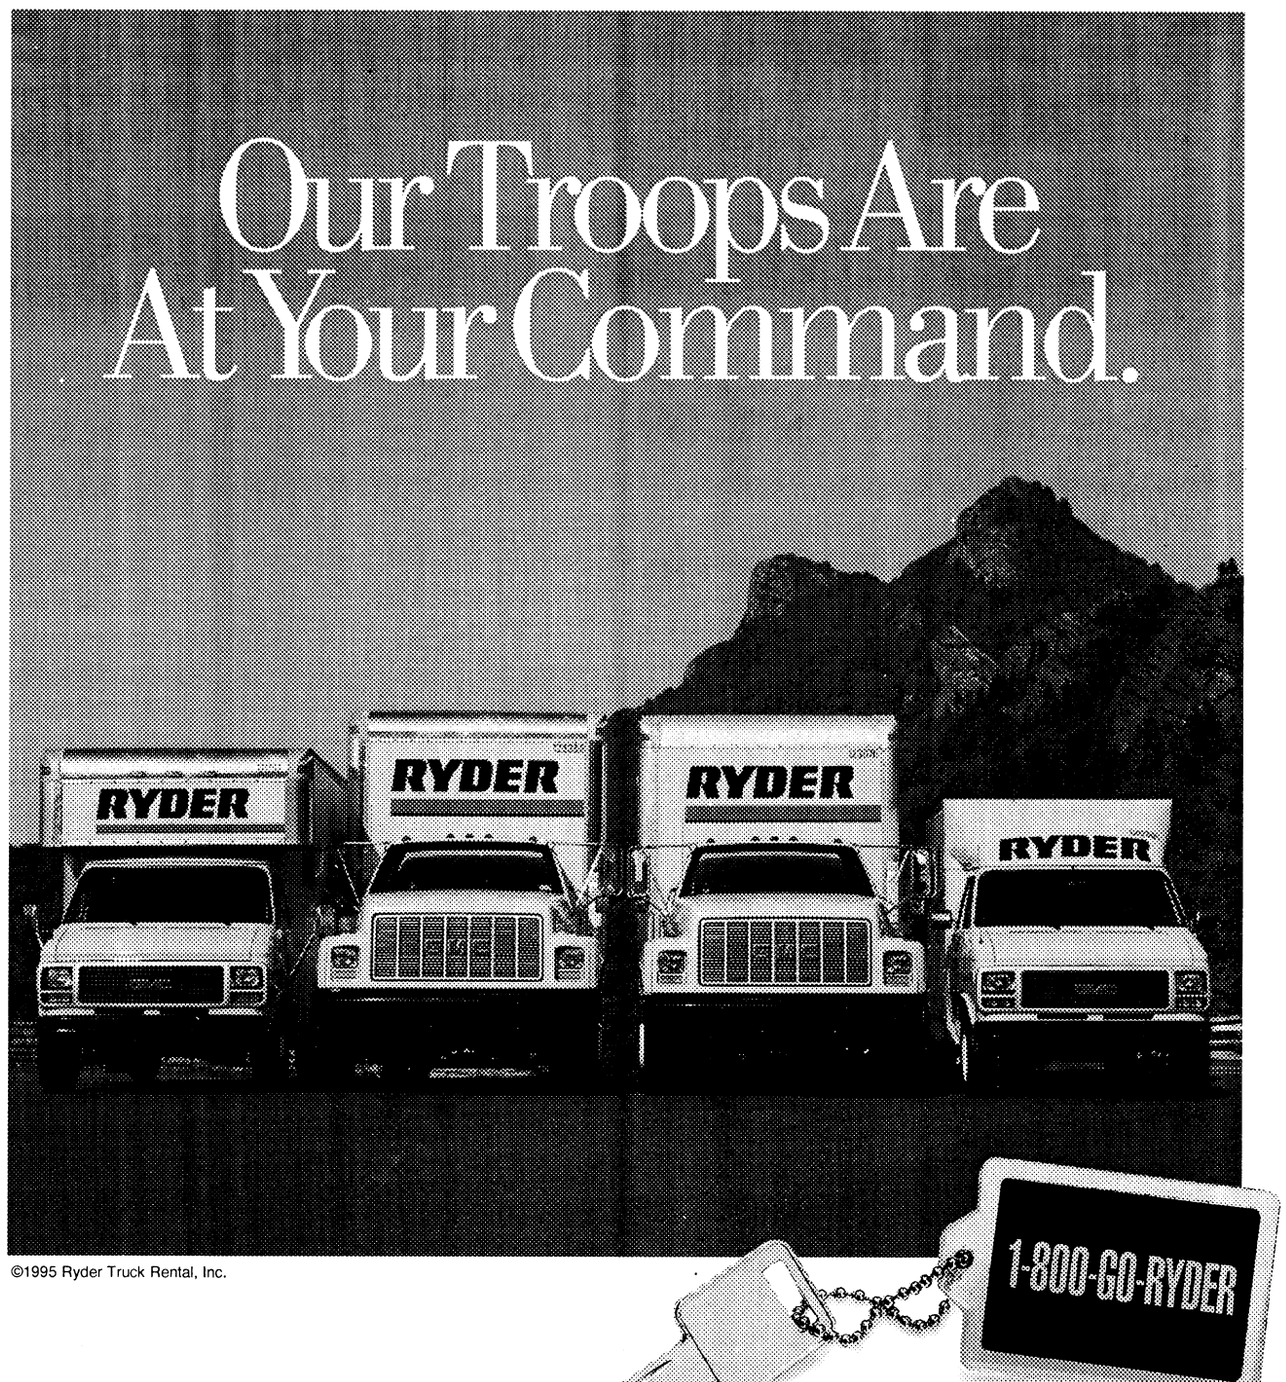
He said a soldier who is only going to be around for six months or so might still be a good mentor.

"That six months can be as productive as a 12-month commitment and it's better than no commitment at all," Beall said.

And the mentor and youngster can maintain their relationship if they want by writing after the soldier leaves.

Beall said writing letters "extends a youngster's horizons beyond what is going on here in Columbus."

"There are all kinds of good things that can happen once the seed of a good relationship has been planted," he said.



Also, the amount of time required for the security check is less because many soldiers have already been cleared by the Army, he said. This lets the soldier start the program as soon as possible.

The Big Brothers can choose what activities to share with their youngster. "We're not looking for them to spend money," Brannon said. "We just want them to spend quality time with the kids."

Brannon said soldiers make good mentors because they are enthusiastic.

"They don't make it through basic training if they don't have some kind of inner motivation," he said.

For more information, call Beall at 323-3687.

Building renamed for vet

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

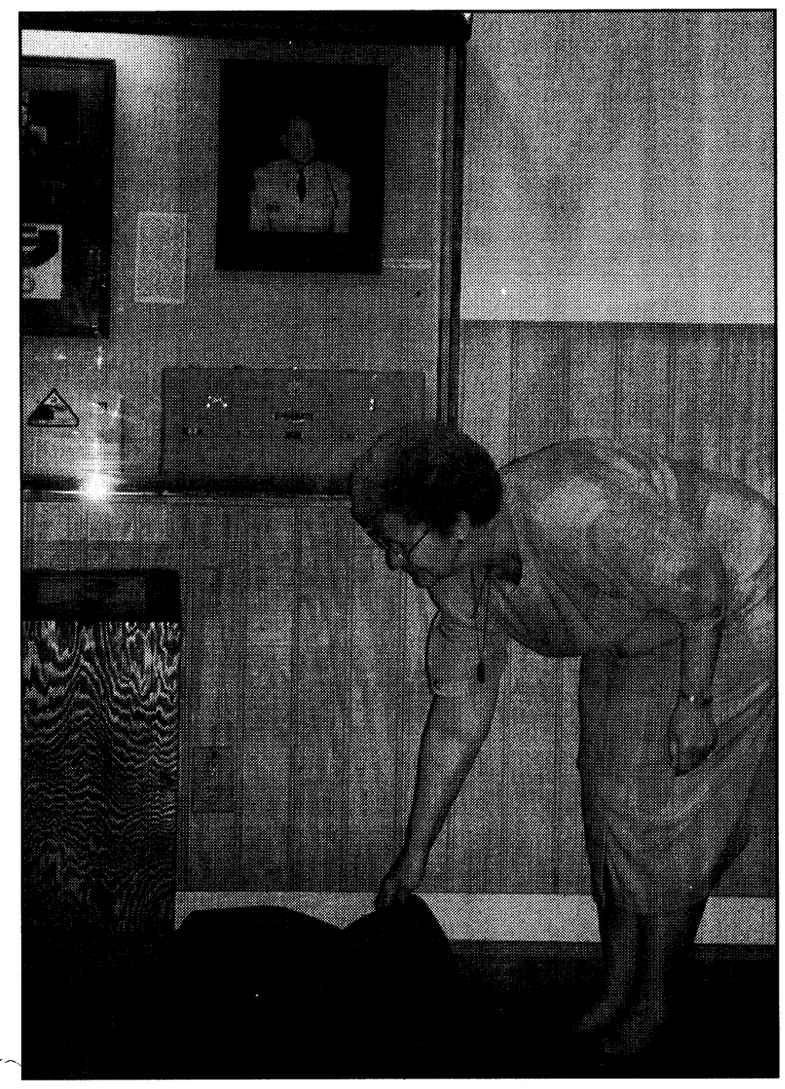
A building in Harmony Church was dedicated March 27 in honor of a World War II Medal of Honor recipient.

The 29th Infantry Regiment's maintenance management facility was renamed the Whittington Maintenance Complex in honor of Maj. Hulon Brocke Whittington, who received the Medal of Honor for actions he performed in July 1944 as a sergeant with the 41st Armored Infantry, 2nd Armored Division, near Grimesnil, France.

Whittington assumed command of his platoon when the platoon leader and platoon sergeant became missing in action during an enemy armored attack.

According to his citation, Whittington "reorganized the defense and, under fire, courageously crawled between gun positions to check the actions of his men. When the advancing enemy attempted to penetrate a road block, Whittington, completely disregarding intense enemy action, mounted a tank and, by shouting through the turret, directed it into position to fire point-blank at the leading Mark V German tank. The destruction of this vehicle blocked all movement of the remaining enemy column, consisting of more than 100 vehicles of a Panzer unit. The blocked vehicles were then destroyed by hand grenades, bazooka, tank and artillery fire, and large numbers of enemy personnel were wiped out by a bold and resolute bayonet charge inspired by Whittington."

Whittington was commissioned in 1949, retired in 1963 and died in 1969 at the age of 47.



Retired Col. Robert B. Nett, himself a Medal of Honor recipient, was guest speaker at the ceremony.

"We dedicate this building to a great warrior," Nett said. "He was a great man and a great patriot, who loved and served his country like few others."

Following Nett's remarks, Deputy Commanding General Brig. Gen. John J. Maher III and Whittington's widow, Nola, unveiled a display case containing pictures and memorabilia of his career.

The case will remain on display at the building, which houses the Maintenance Management Division of the 29th Inf. Regt., and where Infantry Officer Basic Course, Infantry Officer Advanced Course, Advanced Noncommissioned Officer Course and Infantry Precommand Course students receive maintenance instruction.

The ceremony was also attended by Whittington's son, Scott, and daughters, Nancy, Roxanne, Terry, Lisa and Michelle.

Top drill to be honored

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning's top drill sergeant will be honored during a ceremony Monday at the Sand Hill Recreation Center at 3:30 p.m.

Sgt. 1st Class Thomas J. Zoch will receive Fort Benning's Drill Sergeant of the Year Award at the ceremony.

Retired 1st Sgt. James A. Clark of Macon, Ga., the keynote speaker for the ceremony, was the first recipient of the Drill Sergeant of the Year Award 16 years ago.

Zoch was born in Milford, Del., and raised in Elgin, S.C. He enlisted in the Army in September 1983 on the delayed entry program, came on active duty in January 1984 and received his one station unit training at Sand Hill.

Zoch was a Drill Sergeant School leader before his current assignment at the Infantry Training Brigade's Headquarters Service Company and served as a drill sergeant with Company D, 3rd Battalion, 32nd Infantry Regiment, for 18 months before its inactivation late last year.

Before becoming a drill sergeant, Zoch served as a rifleman, team leader, dismounted squad leader, Bradley Fighting Vehicle gunner, Bradley commander and platoon sergeant with the 3rd, 8th and 24th Infantry Divisions and the 197th Infantry Brigade at Kelley Hill, which is now the 3rd Brigade of the 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized).

Zoch's awards include the Expert Infantryman Badge, Overseas Service Ribbon, Army Achievement Medal, Army Commendation Medal, Noncommissioned Officer Professional Development Ribbon, the Airborne and Air Assault badges and the Drill Sergeant Badge.

Zoch is also a member of the exclusive Sergeant Morales Club, which is reserved for the top 10 percent of the noncommissioned officer corps in U.S. Army Europe. To become a member of the club, an NCO must be recommended and go before several boards to be tested for different levels of knowledge.

The Infantry Training Brigade and the Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the U.S. Army are co-sponsoring the Drill Sergeant of the Year Award Ceremony.

Zoch will receive a 9mm Beretta pistol in an engraved wooden case, a plaque, a three-year AUSA membership and an Army dress blue uniform from AUSA; an engraved saber and plaque from the Noncommissioned Officers' Association; and a drill sergeant hat stand from Names and Frames.

The award was originated at the request of Florida businessman Richard A. Leandri.

Zoch will represent Fort Benning in the Training and Doctrine Command's Drill Sergeant of the Year competition May 8 through 12 at Fort Monroe, Va.

CG to host Easter Egg Hunt and Spring Festival

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

The annual easter egg hunt and spring festival will be April 15, from 10 a.m. to noon at Riverside, home of Post Commander Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix and his wife, Cheri.

Two prizes will be given out to children who collect the most eggs in each of the four age groups. The age groups are:

- 18 months — 36 months
- 4-years-old — 5-years-old
- 6-years-old — 8-years-old
- 9-years-old—10-years-old

An "astro jump" and an "American Legion Train" will be available for the children to ride.

Vendors will be giving out free cola and cotton candy.

Festivities are open to the children of active and retired military and Department of Defense employees.

Spring Cleanup to sweep housing areas

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

The annual Spring Cleanup for post housing areas is scheduled for Thursday and April 14.

Designed to bring post cantonment and housing areas to an outstanding state of police, the yearly ritual requires residents to clean up their yards and quarters, said Jennifer Morgan, community life officer.

"All units, directorates and family housing area residents will be required to ensure the installation is cleaned up in accordance with prescribed standards," she said.

The prescribed standards are listed in a flier that is being distributed to post residents.

"We especially encourage residents to recycle any large or bulk recyclable items," Morgan said.

For assistance with removal of large debris such as scrap aluminum, tree limbs or bulk recyclable items, contact your area coordinator.

Residents can also pick up pine straw and fertilizer at the Self-Help and U-Do-It Center, Building 385.

Area coordinators and community life officers will be making area inspections and issuing deficiency notices. Residents must correct any deficiencies by Thursday, she said. The final inspection will take place April 14.

Residents can call their community life officers at the following numbers for more information:

- Bouton Heights and Davis Hill: 544-1195
- Custer Terrace, Upatoi Creek and Battle Park: 689-1058
- Indianhead Terrace: 545-5940
- East Main Post: 682-4723
- West Main Post: 682-4724
- McGraw Manor: 544-1168

Transition Assistance Classes

Army Career and Alumni Program

If you're getting out the military, the Army Career and Alumni Program is available to help you make the transition.

All service members getting out of or retiring from the military must process through the Army Career and Alumni Program's Transition Assistance Office, Building 2617, Soldiers' Plaza, before attending a Transition Assistance Program class in Infantry Hall.

The National Defense Authorization Act Fiscal 1991, Public Law 101-510 states that soldiers within 180 days of expiration term of service are required to attend a Transition Assistance Program class.

Classes are given in three-day blocks and are scheduled throughout the year.

Classes are in Classroom 30, Infantry Hall, from 7:45 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

For more information, call 545-7020 or 545-7009.

Date	Type of Class

Classes are conducted in Classroom 30, Infantry Hall, from 7:45 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

ACAP staff shows up in unexpected places

By Mary Allen
Army Career and Alumni Office

The Army Career and Alumni Program staff is diversified in the many facets of serving soldiers. They show up in the most unexpected places.

The Fort Benning ACAP staff serves soldiers in the active Army, as well as Reservists and National Guard personnel assigned in Louisiana, Mississippi, Tennessee, Florida, Puerto Rico and the Carolinas.

A trained staff of ACAP counselors provides customer service to transitioning soldiers and family members residing in local and remote areas. Those living in remote areas can obtain ACAP services at the nearest ACAP office or travel to Fort Benning on permissive temporary duty.

Besides Fort Benning, ACAP offices in the Southeast United States are located at Fort Bragg, N.C., Fort Gordon, Ga., Fort Jackson, S.C., Fort Stewart, Ga., Fort McClellan, Ala., Fort Rucker, Ala., and at Redstone Arsenal, Ala.

If none of these options is feasible, a mobile team takes ACAP services to soldiers and families.

The team usually consists of one transition services specialist from the Transition Assistance Office, two Job Assistance Center counselors, and an administrative assistant.

Feedback from remote sites has labeled ACAP as the best thing the Army has implemented because the focus is on the individual, the family and how people are treated. All transitioning soldiers are processed in a caring, disciplined organized and dignified manner, officials said.

Anyone leaving the Army — soldiers, civilians and family members — is eligible to participate in the Army Career and Alumni Program whether it is a voluntary or an involuntary transition.

Soldiers can contact their unit personnel noncommissioned officer for an ACAP appointment or the ACAP office, Building 2617, at 545-4913, 545-4892 for more information.

Excellence Appreciation Breakfast April 19

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

The Quarterly Excellence Appreciation Breakfast and Quality Awards Ceremony will be April 19 at 8 a.m. at the Supper Club, Fort Benning's Officers' Club.

Commanding General Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix will host the event and present awards at the ceremony.

At the breakfast, Fort Benning's employees, both military and civilian, will be honored.

Employees from all directorates will be recognized for superior job accomplishment, contributions to customer service, product quality over and above normal expectations and the best self-help project.

The menu will include bacon or sausage, scrambled eggs, grits, biscuits, coffee and juice.

Tickets for the breakfast are $4.50 and may be purchased from the Directorate of Resource Management in the Parrish Building (Building 66) after Monday.

WOMEN'S HISTORY MONTH

Performers 'educate, entertain' at luncheon

Lisa M. Hibbert

Sgt. 1st Class Rosalie Mascoe portrays astronaut Mae Jemison.

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning's National Women's History month celebration and luncheon was March 30 at the Supper Club in the Officers' Club.

This year's theme, "Women's History Month: Promises to Keep," featured portrayals of omen in history by members of the Federal Women's Program Committee.

Post Commanding General Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix opened the program with remarks about Women's History Month.

"An increasing amount of institutions are rightfully striving to achieve an accurate historical portrayal of the lives of American women," Hendrix said. "As a master's degree holder in history, I can readily appreciate that. We cannot know where we are headed as a people unless we first know where we have been as a people. That means all people, women and men."

Winnie Torain, FWP manager, introduced the performers slated to educate and entertain the audience with their portrayals.

The women in history and their performers were:

• Actress Helen Hayes, portrayed by Marie Roop of the Directorate of Logistics

• U.S. Rep. Nadia Valazqye, portrayed by Sylvia Trecochie of the School of the Americas

• Women's rights advocate Margaret Senger, portrayed by Lavonda Forbes of the Directorate of Information Management

• Retired Brig. Gen. Sharon Grace Cadoria, U.S. Army, portrayed by Sarahann Lights of the Directorate of Civilian Personnel

• Astronaut Mae Jemison, portrayed by Sgt. 1st Class Rosalie Mascoe of the Equal Opportunity Office

• U.S. Attorney General Janet Reno, portrayed by Eddie James of the Army Physical Fitness School

Torain concluded the program by presenting awards to Sarah McLaney, Gary Burkhalter and Elva Shoemaker for their contributions to the FWP and to Lights for selling the most luncheon tickets.

The program and its relation to the military was best demonstrated in the portrayal of Cadoria, performed by Lights:

"By an act of Congress, male officers are gentlemen, but by an act of God we are ladies," Lights said portraying Cadoria.

"We don't have to try to be masculine and use obscene language to be respected. From my training as a law enforcement officer I can physically subdue most men. However, you would never know this from my appearance, mannerism, body language or speech. That's because I conduct myself as an officer and a lady; unless the situation dictates otherwise — and believe me, I can rise to the occasion."

The program was sponsored by the Equal Opportunity Office and the FWP.

ACEBES: Post CSM reflects on career

There are checks and balances in the Army. While not everything is fair — no matter what your sex, race or creed is — you are protected in the Army. The only ones who are not protected are the ones who don't use this protection to see that their rights are taken care of.

Q. What can be done to strengthen the NCO corps?

As a smaller Army, I think it's going to be a more competitive Army. If you don't do anything to enhance your career, I think it's going to be short-lived.

The soldiers today don't do enough reading. By reading books, they can get information from them. We used to have required readings that were unit specific. That's a part of this Army; it's our heritage, our history. It hasn't been cut out; some units still do that (have required readings), but we just don't do it enough. That's what we need, required readings.

When soldiers are preparing to go before a board, they study checklists. If a soldier studies just for promotions, the chain of command recognizes that. One question on the board is what services are available to soldiers having some problems. Well, the books mention things like Army Emergency Relief and Army Community Services. I make the soldiers who come before my board go to these places and sit with these people for a half a day. The reason for that is so they'll know what they're referring a soldier to.

We need to make sure that soldiers don't become checklist oriented for boards. They should be well-learned and well-mentored.

I also think it's important to join professional organizations.

I try to treat soldiers like I want to be treated. If you talk to people like human beings and rely on their sense of pride and their sense of responsibility, they'll respond in kind. Find those who don't. We have all of these regulations — we can put them out of the Army.

The noncommissioned officer corps needs to understand that the Army is not a job, it's a profession and should be fun.

Q. Will there ever be a female sergeant major of the Army?

There should be. If she is the best qualified noncommissioned officer at the time of the selection process, she should be the one to represent the enlisted force.

If you look at everybody in a biased way, there will never be anyone good. You should look at everybody and just respect them for who they are.

Q. What are your plans for retirement? Will you be an active retiree in an Army community?

I'm moving to Florida to start a new adventure. I'm going to repair marine engines, take a heating and air conditioning and an electrician's course with my GI Bill and I'm going to buy an answering machine.

My new mission as an inactive service member is to get out and tell the true story of the Army (and to try to) change the mindset of those who retired a long time ago, who remember only yelling and hollering. I want them to know the Army today is a lot better because we've seen that we need to do more to take care of soldiers. I want them to know the Army is still a great place for soldiers to grow.

Q. When looking back over your military career, what is your greatest accomplishment?

Finding a spouse willing to live with a professional soldier. My second greatest accomplishment is being selected as the senior enlisted infantryman in the Army.

Q. Do you have any regrets or was there anything that you wanted to do but weren't able to?

The opportunity to make a combat jump. Everybody knows I don't have any combat stars on my wings.

When I left Vietnam, they told me that if I stayed another month or two, they would be doing a combat jump. I said 'yeah, that's what you told me before.' Two months after I left, they made a combat jump.

Going into Grenada, the only company not to jump was Company C. Although our mission was great, I still didn't get to make a combat jump. In Panama, there was a trade off. I could either make a combat jump or be the 2nd Division sergeant major; the two didn't coincide.

This is my biggest regret. Making a combat jump would have been the ultimate roller coaster ride for me.

THE NEXT TIME YOU DRIVE TO ATLANTA TO CATCH A FLIGHT. . .
ATTACH THIS TO YOUR WINDOW!

Some folks think that to get the cheapest airfare or the best airline connection, it's necessary to drive to Atlanta. Leaving Columbus two hours early to make the 100 mile drive, parking their car in a suburb of Harris County, fighting the crowds, catching a train and finding any one of hundreds of departure gates, and then being faced with the same grim process on their return, doesn't seem to deter the cost-conscious traveller in his quest to find the absolute lowest fare.

Pistol match draws 90 shooters

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

More than 90 shooters turned out for the April tactical pistol match hosted by the Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club Saturday at English Range.

Charles W. Rolling Jr. took top honors in the competitor class with a final score of 2.704.

Gregg Long finished second at 1.849 and Steve Bowen placed third firing a 1.810.

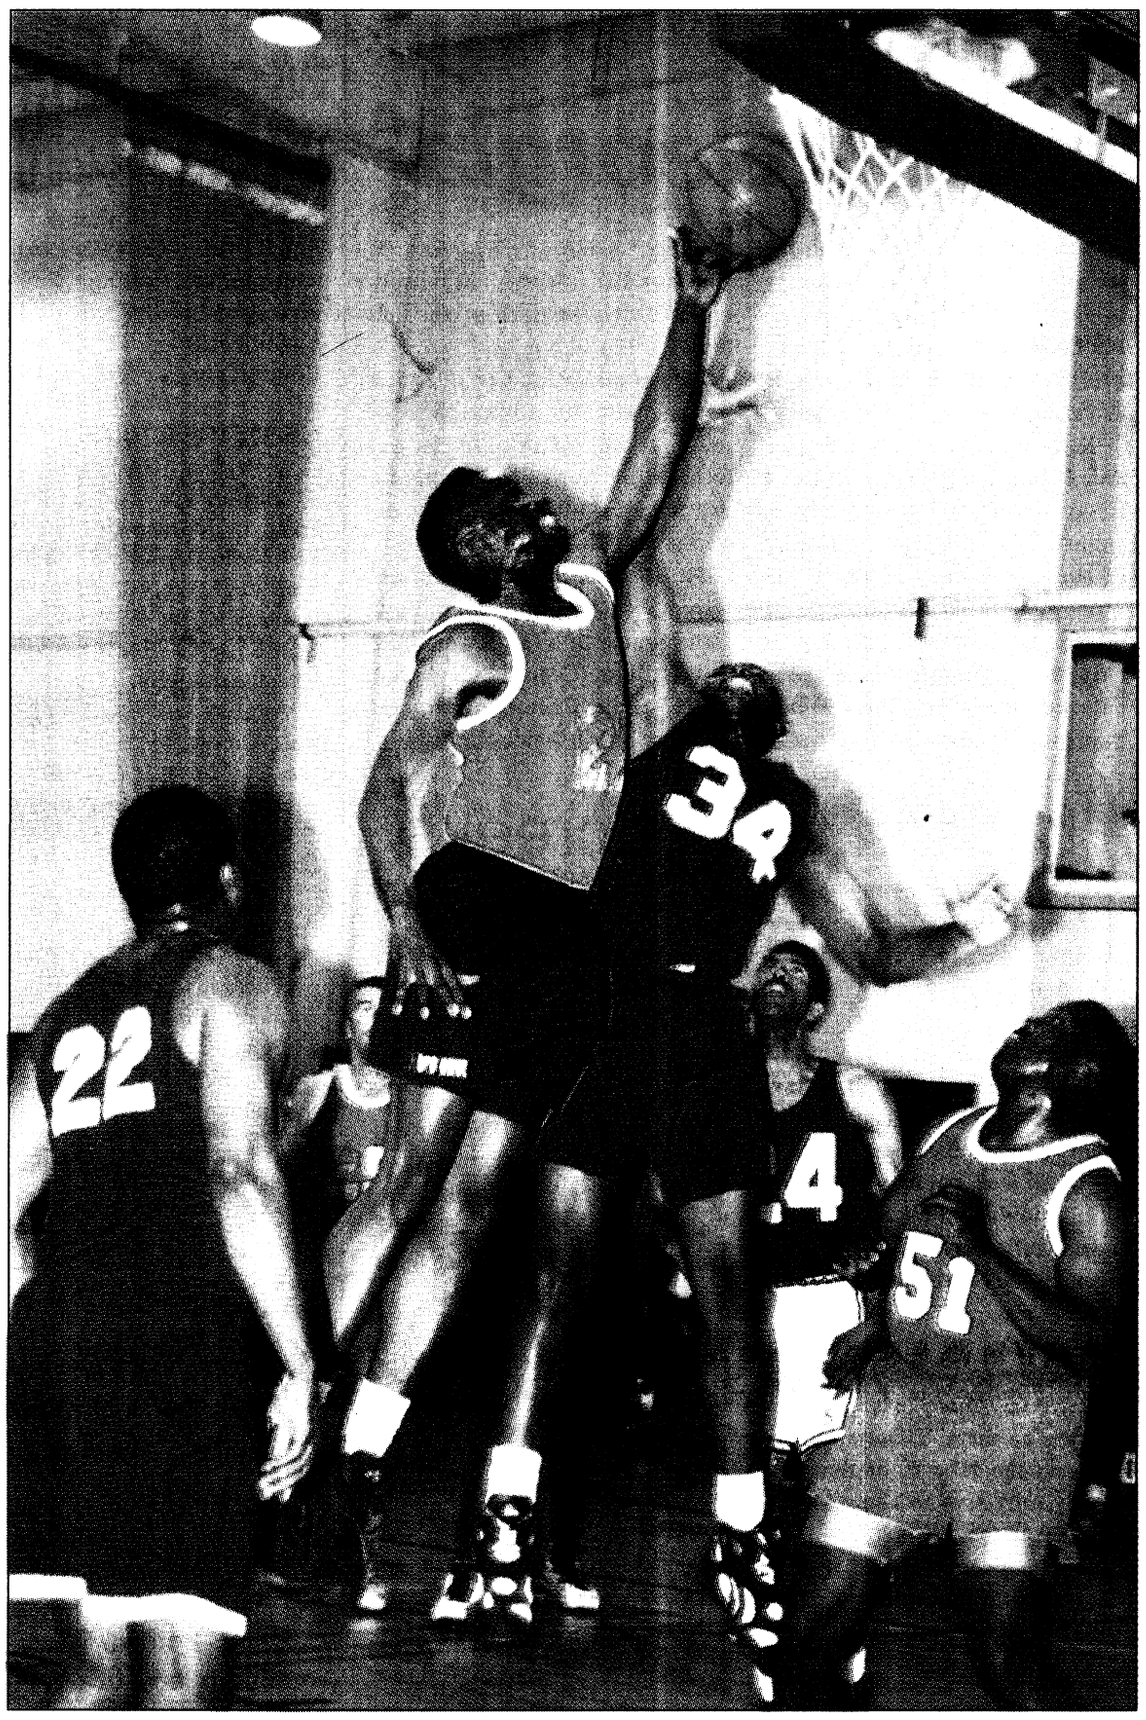
In the standard class, Dennis Cavender fired a 2.074 for first place, Jimmy Stinson took second with a score of 2.033 and J.F. Kersey finished in third at 2.003.

Charles Miller won the military class with a score of 1.959. Paul H. Ford finished second at 1.741 and Joseph M. Bird took third with a score of 1.725.

In the law enforcement class, Ricky Phifer Sr. captured the top spot with a round of 1.436. Jessie Parks finished in second with a score of 1.241, and John Cranfill rounded out the third position at .936.

Paulette Driskell fired a 1.123 to take first in the female class. Ethel Russell finished second at .553 and Lauren Dowd took third with a score of .521.

In the revolver class, George Garvin narrowly slipped past Michael Silva for the win at 1.703.



Silva fired a score of 1.364 to beat out Fred Grigsby's .966 for second.

The next tactical match at English Range will be May 6. Entry fee is $12.

The 1995 U.S. Army Infantry Center basketball tournament, which began April 3, is headed for a finish.

Twenty teams battled it out at four sites, (Briant Wells Field House, Harmony Church Field House, Santiago Fitness Center and Kelley Hill Fitness Center) through Thursday for the right to become one of the final four teams to move on to the semifinals Tuesday night at Briant Wells Field House.

Semifinal action will begin at 6 p.m. with the first game. Tip off for the second game will follow immediately after game one.

The consolation game (third and fourth place) and the championship will take place on Wednesday beginning with the consolation game at 1 p.m. The championship game is scheduled to start at 2 p.m. Both games will be played at Briant Wells Field House.

USAMU marksmen secure top-ranked regional positions

By Marlene Tikal
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit Service Rifle Team members secured top-ranked positions during the Georgia Regional Highpower Championships at Fort Benning April 1 and 2.

Eighty marksmen from Georgia, Florida and Alabama competed against the USAMU service riflemen in the three events that comprised the championships — the national match course, individual match and team match.

The following is a list of USAMU marksmen and their accomplishments during the championships:

Sgt. 1st Class Steven Armstrong finished first on the national match course. He was followed by Staff Sgt. Charles Herlth, who finished third. Their respective scores were 482-13X and 470-10X out of 500 points.

In the individual match, Cpl. Grant Singley finished first with 790-23X out of 800 points, Sgt. 1st Class Kenneth Gill finished second with 789-35X, Sgt. Lance Dement finished third with 786-23X and Cpl. Kevin McMahon finished fourth with 785-28X.

In the team match, three USAMU four-man teams headed by Staff Sgts. Carl Dooley and Gary Estes and Sgt. 1st Class Richard Remily secured the top three places.

Thirteen four-man teams, including an Air Force Service Rifle Team, participated in the team portion of the championships.

3 selected for world championship

By Marlene Tikal
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

Three U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit soldiers have been selected for world championship competition June 12 through 20 in Nicosia, Cyprus, during the final selection match, which took place recently on Fort Benning.

Sgts. Shawn C. Dulohery, Bret Erickson and Theresa Wentzel, all of the USAMU shotgun team, outshot most of the 47 marksmen who came from locations nationwide to participate in the final, said Sgt. 1st Class Richard Haynie, noncommissioned officer in charge of the shotgun team.

Dulohery placed second in both the individual and selection skeet matches, Erickson placed first in the men's double trap and Wentzel finished first in the women's double trap.

Cruisers win fifth straight, beat Birmingham 12-0

By Jim Muldoon
Columbus/Fort Benning RFC

The Columbus Fort Benning Rugby Football Club Cruise-matics won their fifth straight match defeating deep South rival Birmingham 12-0 Saturday in Birmingham.

The two evenly matched clubs battled back and forth for 70 minutes with no score before Cruise-matics wing forward Bill Gilmore crashed through a Birmingham line out and covered the ball in goal for a 5-0 lead.

Minutes later, the Cruise-matics were back again, when outside center Tory Diciro initiated the attack with a pitch to wing Luis Rodriguez, who cut back to the inside and dived across the line for a 10-0 lead. Fly half Eric Magrum converted the kick for the final score of 12-0.

The Cruise-matic offense had numerous opportunities to score in the match only to be stuffed short by the Birmingham defense.

"Our back line played solidly," head coach Jim Muldoon said. "They were able to cover the Birmingham attacks each and every time."

Next up for the Cruise-matics are the Tigers of Auburn University Saturday in Auburn, Ala., before heading to Scott Air Force Base in Illinois, for the U.S. Military Rugby championships April 22.

BASS club fishes Lake Seminole

By Stephen Ward
Fort Benning BASS Club

commentary

Spring is the time all bass anglers dream of and part of that dream is Lake Seminole, Fla. The anglers of the Fort Benning BASS Club are no different. The latest tournament was March 18 and 19. Club members enjoyed staying at the newly renovated cabins at Lake Seminole State Park.

The fishing was difficult despite the comfortable climate. Due to the flood of 1994, the normal fishery was just being re-established. Recent rains in the northern portion of Georgia had muddied both the Flint River and the Chattahoochee River, changing the fishing pattern.

The results of the two-day tournament were as follows: first place boat went to Larry Jones and Bo Terry, with a total of 26 pounds, 10 ounces; second place boat went to Bob Billman, with 21 pounds, 4 ounces; third place boat went to David Moore and Tom Day, with 21 pounds, 4 ounces. The big bass of the tournament was 5 pounds, 4 ounces.

The Fort Benning BASS Club is open to all armed forces members, all retired armed forces members and all their dependents (active and retired). Membership is also open to various Department of Defense civilians and their dependents.

Membership is open to boat owners and nonowners alike. If you are interested in bass fishing and want to learn more about this organization, call Stephen Ward at 569-5705 or David Moore at 298-5955.

Bike trek to tour scenic Georgia

Pine Mountain Challenge Bicycle Trek

The Pine Mountain Challenge Bicycle Trek is an annual event that welcomes hundreds of bicyclists of all ages and ability levels from around the country to pedal either the 58-mile route or the more challenging 104-mile route.

The ride begins at Shaw High School, off Schomburg Road in Columbus at 8 a.m. April 23 and finishes at the same location. Check-in will take place from 6:45 to 7:45 a.m., with late check-in available on site.

Both the long and short routes provide some of the most awe-inspiring, majestic views in Georgia.

Riders will tour Ellerslie, Waverly Hall, Shiloh, Durand, Warm Springs, the Pine Mountain Ridge and Franklin Delano Roosevelt State Park with its overlooks of Pine Mountain Valley and Callaway Gardens.

Though many experienced bicyclists choose to time themselves; this is not a race. In fact, it is encouraged that participants take time along the ride to take photos, talk with the locals, and enjoy the country cooking available at several cafes. It's been designed to be a family event and social gathering where all can enjoy the great outdoors.

Each participant will receive a Pine Mountain Challenge T-shirt, a European-style cycling cap, a photo of him or herself in the midst of the Challenge, a Pine Cone Trophy, water, fruit and rest points at regular intervals, an all-you-care-to-eat Country's barbecue catered meal at the finish, motivational music, a free sports therapy massage by Anna's Therapeutic Body Massage, opportunity for door prizes and more.

The registration fee is $25 if postmarked by today, $30 if postmarked after today but received by April 21, $35 on trek day from 6:45 to 7:45 a.m. at the start area at Shaw High School.

Registration forms or additional information are available through Dan Bennett at 576-5768 or from Mike's Bikes, Country's Barbecue, World Gym, Columbus Natural Foods or Play It Again Sports.

Start looking for prespawn bass in feeder creeks

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

commentary

Depending on weather and water conditions, largemouth bass should begin moving shallow in preparation for spawning within the next few weeks, and, says former professional guide David Wharton, it can be the best or worst time of your life.

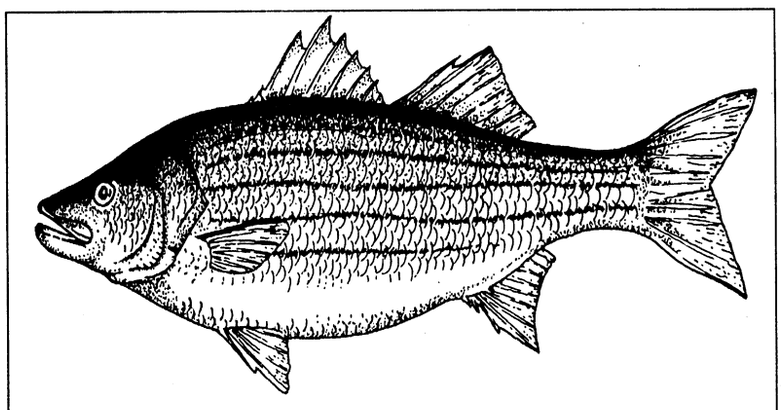
"Spring bass are not always as easy to locate as fishermen may think, especially early in the spring," said Wharton. "Water temperature is the primary key that determines what the bass will be doing, and it can vary considerably from one end of a lake to the other.

"Not all bass spawn at the same time. Some fish are moving shallow while others are still deep and still others are somewhere in between. Locating them isn't always that easy."

When Wharton begins looking for bass this time of year, he starts first by fishing smaller tributaries in the upper end of a lake. He doesn't fish major creek channels, but instead, smaller creeks that feed into the larger ones.

"Concentrate on whatever cover is available," he said. "Get in the channel itself and fish both edges. Normally, a good starting depth will be between 10 and 15 feet, and your best lure will probably be a 1/2 or 3/4 ounce tandem willow leaf spinnerbait retrieved through the cover and over the channel edge."

Wharton's second choice when looking for early spring bass is along grasslines, providing the lake has vegetation like hydrilla or milfoil. He prefers to concentrate in places where the edge of the grass meets a creek channel.



"Most of the time this will be a very small area, but bass will move up and down the channel to the vegetation," said the pro. "I've won two national tournaments fishing spots like this."

Wharton will also fish underwater ridges or humps that do not have any moss or vegetation growing on them. These are high spots on the lake floor that are usually only five to about seven feet deep on top.

"These places are best if they are surrounded by vegetation," said Wharton. "They're like little bare islands the bass can come to. You don't have to find humps with sharp depth changes all around, either. All they have to be is bare high spots."

In addition to spinnerbaits, Wharton suggests anglers consider jigs and crankbaits as possible lure choices. Jigs tend to produce quality bass while the diving lures can be used to cover a lot of water quickly.

"If the weather suddenly turns cold after the bass have begun to move shallow," Wharton said, "I suggest flipping jigs into thick cover. The bass do not necessarily move back to deep water, but instead, move tight to cover and become inactive."

Go bass fishin' with Moby-in-the-Morning

United Cerebral Palsy

ATLANTA — Fisherpeople from as far away as Kentucky and Alabama are gearing up for the third annual Moby-in-the-Morning Bass Tournament to benefit United Cerebral Palsy of Greater Atlanta April 29 at Allatoona Landing Marine Resort.

Moby, a disc jockey of Atlanta's morning drive time, will chair the tournament. Last year, 169 boats registered. With the support of corporate sponsors and participants, the event raised more than $50,000, doubling income from the first year.

Anglers will be casting their rods hoping to reel in the first place prize, a 367 Javelin Boat with a 90hp Johnson Motor, compliments of Cartersville Marine.

The tournament will pay back the top 20 places, which will be another $10,000. The total prize package, including big fish, will be more than $25,000. Sponsored by Cartersville Marine, the Dugout and KICKS 101.5 FM, the tournament takes place on Lake Allatoona at Allatoona Landing Marine Resort from 6 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Along with the fishing tournament, it will be a day for the whole family. A festival will begin at noon, including a country concert with surprise guests, food, games and lots of prizes to give away. Friends and families of the competing anglers are invited to join in the festival, along with the general public.

Proceeds from the bass tournament and festival will help United Cerebral Palsy of greater Atlanta ensure the continuation of the program services offered to the community. UCP strives to advance the independence of individuals with disabilities. Here in Georgia, the amount of money spent on services to children and adults with disabilities is 88.5 percent of the total operating budget.

To register for the third annual Moby-in-the-Morning Bass Tournament, or for more information about the festival, call Connie Dorris at (404) 892-3667.

Women's softball coaches — The sports department is seeking four active duty coaches (two coaches and two assistant coaches) for the 1995 USAIC women's softball league.

This year the sports department will fund the entry fee for two 100 percent active duty softball teams to participate in the Columbus Parks and Recreation fall softball league.

The first meeting of the fall league will be Aug. 2. The starting date will be Aug. 29. This program is being initiated by the department in support of a dwindling women's program.

For more information, call Christopher Winterman at 545-5777 or 545-4300.

Female softball players needed — Female softball players are needed for a co-ed tournament team. If you have played high school or college level softball and are interested, call Capt. Paul Warren at 682-8112 after 6 p.m.

Scuba Club meeting — The Kelley Hill Scuba Club will have its first meeting of the year Wednesday at 6 p.m. in Building 9049, Kelley Hill. The club offers scuba instruction from basic open water to assistant instructor certifications. The club also sponsors scuba trips and can offer advice on scuba purchases and equipment repairs. Divers and nondivers are invited to attend. For information, call 544-2765.

Batting cages open — The batting cages located next to CB&T Bank on Main Post are now open. Buy 10 balls for 50 cents. If you bat two sets, get one set free. This special applies Mondays to Fridays only.

Hours are Monday through Friday noon to 7 p.m. and weekends and holidays 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.

For more information, call 545-7978 or 545-3504.

crime watch

TAKE A BITE OUT OF CRIME

Military Police Activity

This week's hot topic concerns crime prevention at home. Everyone has the right to be safe; this is especially true in the privacy of your own home. There is nothing more frightening than waking up to the sound of an intruder, or returning home and knowing that a stranger has been inside.

Take the following precautions:

• Always keep doors and windows locked, whether at home or away.

• Change old locks when moving into a new house or apartment.

• Don't rely on just chain locks; always use the door lock along with a chain lock.

• Use a peephole to identify a person before opening the door.

• Never admit anyone unless you know who it is. Make sure children understand and follow this rule.

• Don't give personal information to a stranger on the telephone.

• Notify the police or telephone company of any obscene or threatening calls.

• Always leave a light on when you go out, and never leave notes saying when you'll return.

• If you return home and suspect that an intruder is inside, do not enter. Go to a neighbor's house and notify the police immediately.

The following entries were taken from the Fort Benning Military Police Blotters. Such entries may be incomplete and are not intended to prove guilt or innocence of any person.

• A family member was charged with possession of a controlled substance (marijuana). A written consent to search the quarters was obtained from her sponsor and a small amount of marijuana was found underneath the bed. She was then apprehended and transported to the MP station where she was advised of her rights, admitting to the ownership of the marijuana.

• A sergeant was charged with failure to drive on the right of the roadway and driving under the influence of alcohol. During the traffic stop, the MP detected alcohol. The driver was administered a breathalyzer test with results of .148. The sergeant was issued post driving privilege suspension orders.

Other activities included 26 traffic accidents and four cases of driving under the influence of alcohol. There was one shoplifting case reported at the exchange facility, and 15 cases of larceny of private property.

Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best — Give Crime Arrest." Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5223, or the "Crime in Progress" line at 545-5222.

ask the judge

By George R. Smawley
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

A government-sponsored move can be one of the most difficult and frustrating aspects of military service. It is never an easy process. There are, however, important steps that soldiers can take in order to make the move and the claims process that follows easier and more efficient.

On the day household goods are delivered, the mover is required to provide the service member with a pink form, Department of Defense Form 1840. The first rule is to document damaged and missing items on the DD Form 1840 while the movers are unpacking your household goods.

The mover must sign the front of the DD Form 1840 once all the goods are delivered, and by documenting damages at the time of delivery the mover is forced to acknowledge the loss and immediately begin to try and locate any missing items.

Additional damages or lost items, discovered after the movers have left the home, should be noted on the reverse side of the pink form — DD Form 1840R.

The second and most important rule is the requirement for service members to submit the DD Form 1840 and 1840R to the Claims Office within 70 days after the property is delivered.

Failure to provide the Claims Office with the DD Form 1840 and 1840R within the 70-day time frame may preclude recovery for all or much of a member's lost or damaged property.

The third rule concerns the right of the Claims Office to inspect damages to property. Claims personnel have the right to inspect and document, if necessary, their observations regarding damaged property.

The inspection will be coordinated between the Claims Office and the service member, and will be at a time that is convenient for both. Consequently, it is important for service members to hold on to damaged property from the date of delivery until the claim is finally settled.

The fourth rule is the requirement that completed claims be filed within two years from the date of delivery. A claim is filed by submitting DD Form 1842 to the Claims Office, detailing the specific amount of the loss. Failure to file a claim within two years from the date of delivery will bar a service member from recovering his or her loss.

The fifth rule is to submit accurate estimates of the replacement or repair cost for missing or damaged property. Items with a replacement or repair cost of less than $50 do not require estimates. Claims examiners may also use their experience and expertise to determine a reasonable allowance for repair or replacement of property.

The sixth rule is to remember that the burden of proving ownership of property is on the service member. The strongest proof of ownership is a specific listing on the inventory (Zenith TV, Sony VCR, etc.). Beyond that claimants may need to show proof of purchase, such as receipts or photographs or home movies made of the property taken before the move.

A service member's greatest protection against missing items is to make certain that the movers list all high-value items on the inventory before shipping.

Finally, the last rule is for a situation in which the Claims Office pays a service member for the replacement of severely damaged property. The government is essentially "buying" this property from the service member, and therefore has a right to claim it for salvage value or recover the cost from the carrier responsible for the damage who, in turn, may also claim it for salvage value.

If you have further questions concerning the claims process, call the Fort Benning Claims Office at 545-2285.

Fat without guilt — can it be?

By Charlotte Pursell
Martin Army Community Hospital

Here's the verdict on fat: you need it. The body can't live without it, requiring a minimum of 15 to 25 grams of fat, about three to five teaspoons per day. This amount can be found naturally since almost all foods contain some fat.

Fat performs several important functions for your body. It carries and distributes fat-soluble vitamins (A, D, E and K), helps keep cells healthy and provides essential fatty acids.

Fat stores energy quite efficiently. It slows down digestion and keeps you from feeling hungry. Fat also provides insulation to maintain your body temperature and it cushions and protects vital organs.

Too much fat, though, has been linked to health problems — heart disease, cancer, obesity and diabetes.

An adult can eat more than 15 to 25 grams of fat per day and still stay healthy. The U.S. Dietary Guidelines echo recommendations of many health organizations, advising people to limit fat to 30 percent of our daily caloric intake.

For example, a person eating 2,000 calories per day would aim for no more than 65 grams of fat per day; 80 grams of fat would be consumed in a healthy 2,500 calorie daily intake.

Most fruits, vegetables and starches have little or no fat; it is more obviously present in foods like whole milk, ice cream, peanut butter, egg yolks, meat, pizza and gravy. Desserts like doughnuts or cake, snacks like chips or nuts and food preparation methods such as frying or stewing can provide enough calorie-rich fat to meet your body's dietary fat needs for several days.

So should a person feel guilty every time he or she savors a french fry or bites into a sour cream potato chip? On the contrary, with a little moderation, modification and experimentation, a person can keep the flavor while losing much excess dietary fat.

For example, try a bagel instead of a doughnut, an English muffin instead of a Danish, fig bars or ginger snaps instead of butter cookies and pretzels instead of chips. There are many low- or fat-free products available as well, that have removed the fat but kept the flavor.

That juicy eight-ounce broiled ribeye steak has the fat equivalent of nine pats of butter (47 grams of fat or 425 calories).

A little fat goes a long way. People don't need to avoid it, but rather make some healthy choices, so they can enjoy eating healthy — and guilt-free.

For more information, call the Martin Army Community Hospital Nutrition Clinic at 544-1542.

Alcohol and boating a fatal mix

U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary

Alcohol use has long been associated with recreation and boating, especially during the spring and summer. Fishing and water sports are relaxing and fun; however, some recreational boaters believe alcohol is as essential as fuel.

With the usage of alcohol, the combined effects of sun or cold, wind, waves and boat motion tend to sneak up on a person. Boaters become less aware of serious boating problems such as speed, other boaters' wakes and weather. Judgment and stability are seriously affected.

Boaters using alcohol tend to stand up and move around. This may be OK in a large boat, but it is extremely dangerous in smaller boats, resulting in falls overboard or capsizing.

In the winter or cold spring periods falling overboard can lead to another deadly event, hypothermia, even if the boater gets back aboard the boat.

The odds of becoming a boating fatality are high. Falls overboard and capsizing make up 65 percent of common causes of boating fatalities; add to that the use of alcohol, which is a contributing factor in about 50 percent. In more than 86 percent of all fatalities, the victims were not wearing life jackets.

Can you have alcohol on a boat? The answer, sadly, is yes. Georgia and Alabama allow open containers of alcohol on a boat even while it is in operation.

Can you be charged with driving (boating) under the influence of alcohol when operating a boat? The answer is yes. Basic federal and state alcohol usage laws still apply as to age and to operating a vessel under the influence.

Who can be charged with driving (boating) under the influence? Basically, anyone who is responsible for operating the boat or controlling boating activities.

If an individual is the operator (driver), he or she can be charged with boating under the influence. Also, where state law requires an observer when towing a skier, the observer or the skier can be charged if either of them has a blood alcohol content of .10 percent (.08 in Georgia).

Almost 50 percent of 1994 boating fatalities involved alcohol, and at least 86 percent of the victims were not wearing a life jacket.

Boat smart — if you use a boat, take a safe boating course, wear your life jacket and remember that alcohol can kill.

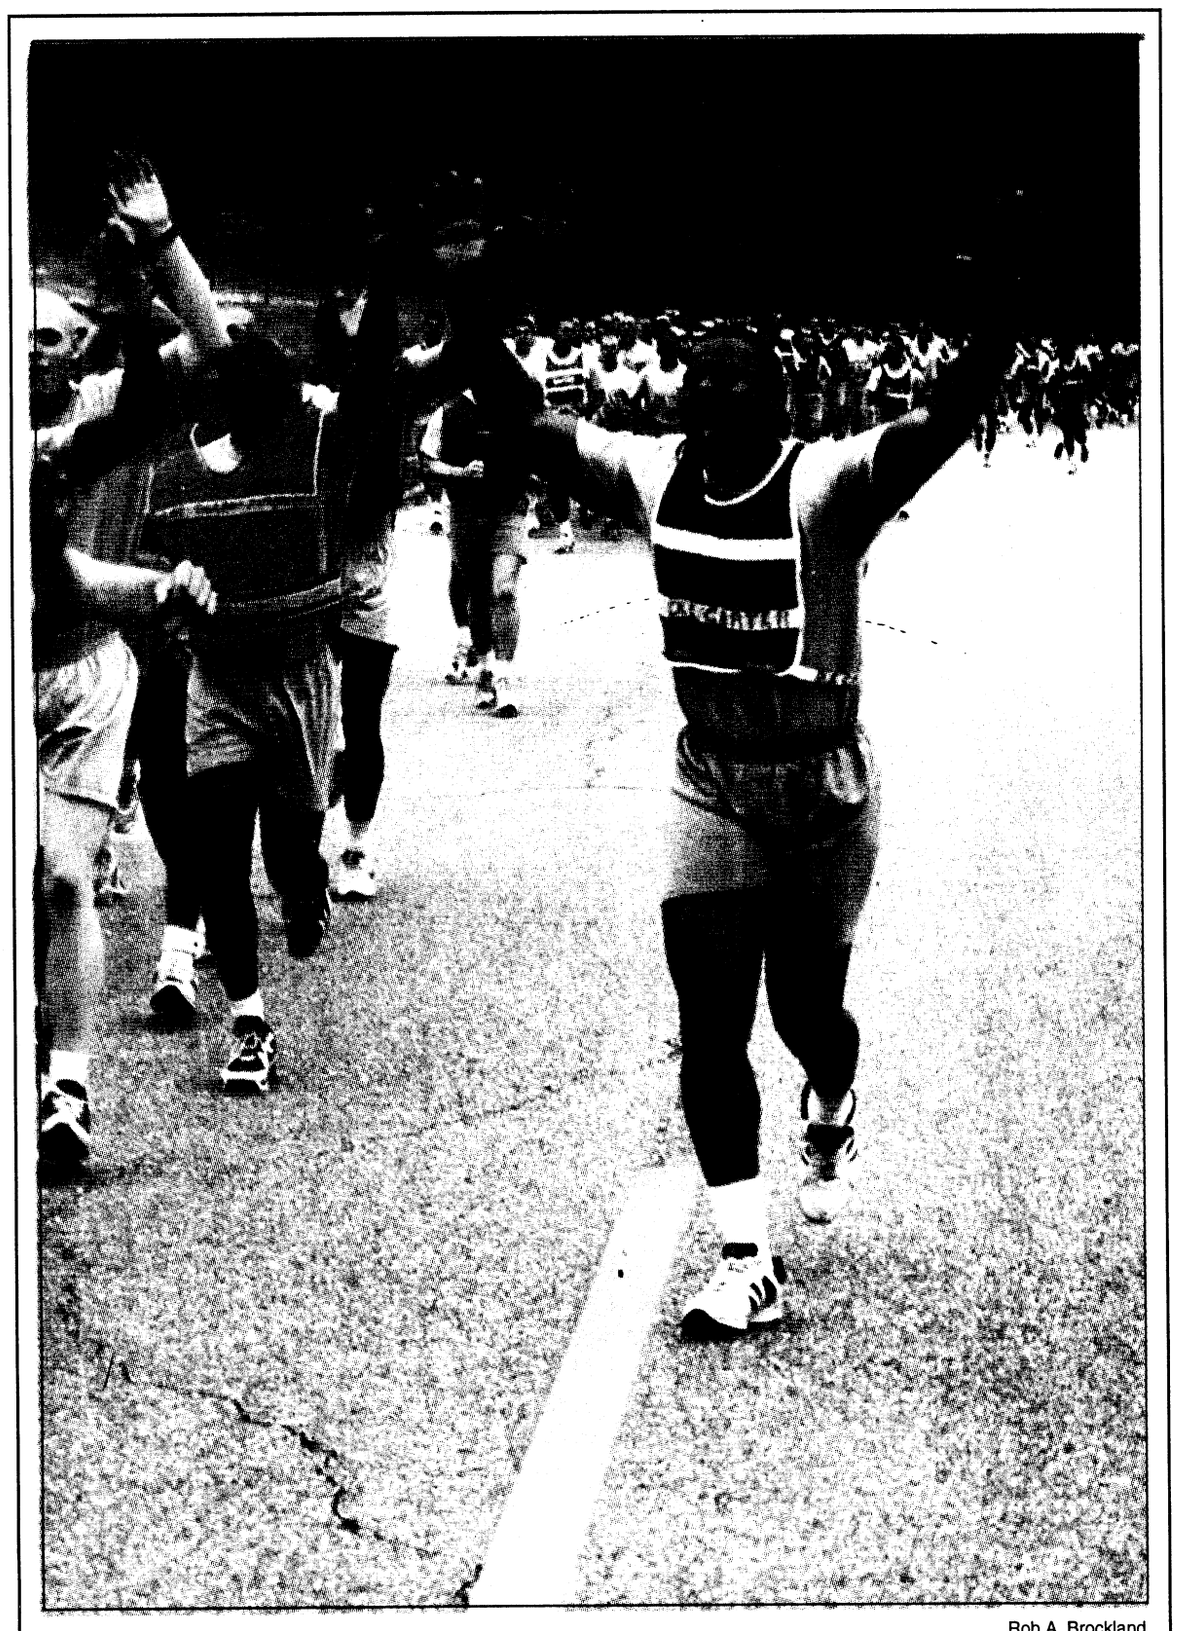
2/18 dismounts conduct squad qualification

By Preston Howard
2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment.

The 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, conducted squad qualification training from March 6 to 11.

During this week-long training exercise, emphasis was put on the dismounted squads (the infantry squads carried in the back of Bradley Fighting Vehicles) and their ability to conduct dismounted tactics.



Squads must successfully complete six specific missions to qualify. In addition, each squad member must execute all 14 Expert Infantryman Badge tasks. Each squad receives a score based on its performance on each event.

The squads conducted a live-fire exercise, an area reconnaissance, an anti-armor ambush, knocked out a bunker and finished with a 12-mile road march on the last day of training. At least 70 percent of the squad had to complete the road march within the three-hour EIB standard time limit. Immediately following the road march, the squads were tested on weapons proficiency on every weapon in the squad. This was also a graded, timed event.

The squad scores were added up after the completion of the weapons proficiency test. An awards ceremony took place after training was complete to recognize the top three squads in the battalion.

First Squad of 2nd Platoon, Company C, finished as the top squad in the battalion. First Squad of 2nd Platoon, Company B, finished in second place, and 1st Squad of 2nd Platoon, Company D, was the third top squad in the battalion.

Lt. Col. Brian Zahn, commander of 2nd Bn., 18th Infantry Regiment, and Command Sgt. Maj. Gerald Klein presented the awards to the three top squads.

Eagles soar

Drill Sgt. (Staff Sgt.) Ronald Carter of Company C, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, leads his troops during the Infantry Training Brigade's quarterly "Eagle Run" March 31. More than 2,500 soldiers, permanent party personnel as well as trainees, participated in a three-mile run around the Sand Hill perimeter.

IOBC lieutenants soak up water survival skills

By Philip J. McGovern
2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment

The lieutenants of the Infantry Officer Basic Course Class 4-95 were soaked from head to toe as they tested their combat water survival skills during an exercise at the Leadership Reaction Course March 10.

While running the course, participants led small units of their peers through a cycle of challenging missions. Most missions involved crossing men and material across water obstacles.

Each participant had the opportunity to lead and be evaluated on his performance. The course requires leaders to successfully accomplish these missions.

The lieutenants then moved on to the Combat Water Survival Test. One of the instructors said the test is an important step for all IOBC students because it is a fundamental requirement for admission to Ranger School, which many students attend upon completion of IOBC.

The exercise tested the students' ability to survive sudden immersion while in full uniform with load carrying equipment and an M-16 rifle. It consisted of three stations requiring swimming skills unique to the combat environment.

Because of the importance attached to the ability to survive in the water under combat conditions, all students are required to pass the standard a second time before graduating.

OCS candidates start paths to new Army careers

Army Aviation

Ten Officer Candidate School candidates will branch Army aviation, five OCS candidates will branch air defense artillery and 10 OCS candidates will branch field artillery during a noon ceremony today at Wigle Hall.

The aviation candidates are:
Todd Brattmiller
Charles Byrd Jr.
Charles Forman
Frank Holmes
Kerry McCauley
Brent McDonald
Michael Premo
Richard Sweet II
Paul White
Raymond Williams.

The field artillery candidates are:
Timothy Boraas
George Glass III
Eric Isper
Christopher Jay
Franklin Lewis Jr.
Robert Mason
Julio Morales III
Roberto Perez
Brian Robinson
John Williams Jr.

The air defense artillery candidates are:
Shane Cook
Timothy Gillen
Trevor Gordon
William Patrowicz
James Young.

Lt. Col. William S. Bowers, chief of Aviation Proponency, U.S. Army Aviation Center, Fort Rucker, Ala., will speak to the candidates and present them with their first set of branch insignia.

Each candidate also will receive a branch letter of welcome from the commanding general of their respective branches.

The candidates will graduate April 13 and will continue their Army careers as second lieutenants by attending the Aviation Officer Basic Course and Initial Entry Rotor Wing Course at Fort Rucker, the Air Defense Artillery Officer Basic Course at Fort Bliss, Texas, or the Field Artillery Officer Basic Course at Fort Sill, Okla.

Engineers not burning daylight

By April N. Olsen
586th Engineer Company

The bridging company, which is a corps asset, must be able to perform its missions in darkness as well as light. And the reverse cycle training gave the unit the opportunity to practice at night what it regularly practices during the normal work day

The 586th Engineer Company (Assault Float Bridge) recently took 10 days off.

There were no zero-dark-30 physical training formations. There were no early-bird-catches-the-worm work call formations. Most of the members of the company did not work for days. They worked at night.

The company spent two weeks in reverse cycle training. Soldiers traded their day time work hours for night time hours in order to take advantage of nighttime training. The company soldiers came to physical training at 3:55 p.m. and worked until 2 a.m. the next day.

The company did have a few soldiers working the day shift during the two-week training to maintain communications with other units. There was a day crew for the company operations and a day maintenance crew operating in the motor pool.

During the reverse cycle, the company conducted night rafting and bridging operations at which bridge crew members and boat operators must be proficient.

The bridging company, which is a corps asset, must be able to perform its missions in darkness as well as light. And the reverse cycle training gave the unit the opportunity to practice at night what it regularly practices during the normal work day.

After a recent field training exercise, Capt. Carol Anderson, the company commander, said she believed the unit needed to improve its tactical proficiency.

"We're the best in the business during daylight hours, but we have problems when you turn off the lights," she said.

In addition to rafting and bridging, the two bridging platoons practiced other tasks such as setting up infrared marking systems, engineer equipment parks, engineer regulating points and various waterborne engineer drills, including a "man overboard" drill the unit developed.

Other sections of the company trained on company-related tasks such as supply operations and setting up and operating a company jump tactical operations center.

"Reverse cycle training has high payoffs," Anderson said. "Aside from the obvious benefit of improving our tactical skills, I didn't have to worry about sick call, appointments, meetings or other distractors. I finally had a chance to see my company at actual strength; I loved it."

Working two crews during the training gave the maintenance platoon extra time for equipment repair and services.

Anderson said she liked the results.

"You get a lot more services done than during the day," Spc. Kevin Jones said. "There is a lot of distractors during the day."

Several noncommissioned officers in the maintenance platoon said they agreed.

Staff Sgt. Ross Schliephake said that many soldiers get in the mind set that close of business is at a certain time, but reverse cycle training made them realize that COB is when the work is done.

"Plus things come up during the day," Schliephake said of appointments.

Some soldiers said they agreed that working at night cuts down on time taken off for personal and military-related appointments.

"I'm going to be PCSing (transferring to another post), so I can get started on my stuff during the day like getting my shots," Pfc. Donald Huffman said.

He added that taking care of personal matters has been easier during the reverse cycle.

"Everything's open so you don't have to try to get off work early," he said.

Many of the the soldiers in the 586th said the training was a success.

Staff Sgt. Garrett Jr. said that the reverse cycle was good training, and that in 19 years of service, this is the first unit he has been in that participated in the training. Garrett added that having days free gives soldiers the chance to take care of personal business that can't be done during their normal lunch time.

"I think everybody comes together more," Huffman said. "I feel everybody helps out more to get stuff done."

Spc. Jason Derrico said he enjoyed the change. "It (reverse cycle) keeps things from getting monotonous," he said.

Derrico said that the difficult part surfaces when you try to adjust to the new sleeping schedule.

"You sleep in until noon and then you're watching the clock until you have to go to work or PT," he said.

With any change in schedule, adjustments have to be made.

"The only problem with reverse cycle was that I worried about soldiers falling asleep at the wheel or encountering a drunk driver en route home," Anderson said.

"Some soldiers never adjusted to the schedule because they have small kids at home to keep them awake when they should be asleep," Anderson said. Some of the soldiers had more personal concerns.

"The down side to it," said Garrett, " is the TV programs (missed), but you got a VCR for that."

world war II

50 years ago this week ...

• In what would become the last amphibious landing of the war, the U.S. Tenth Army landed on Okinawa. By the end of the first day, more than 50,000 soldiers and Marines had been put ashore, occupying an eight mile by two mile stretch of the island. Initially the force met with weak resistance, but on the fourth day U.S. forces reached the main Japanese defenses along Shuri ridge, which would take more than two months of hard fighting to breach.

• On the Eastern European front, two Russian Army Groups, one attacking from the south and one along the Danube, stalled a counterattack by the German Sixth Panzer Army near the Austrian capital of Vienna. Soviet forces seized the suburbs of Vienna April 2 and by April 5 all opposition in the southern front had ceased, leaving the southern approach to Germany open. .

• On the Western Front, the U.S. First and Ninth Armies completed the encirclement of the Ruhr pocket. The Allies captured more than 30,000 defenders of the Fifth and 15th Panzer Armies, and elements of the First Parachute Army, a total of 21 of the 60 divisions defending the Western Front. The separation of Germany from the Ruhr and its resources crippled German War production for the remainder of the war.

• In the United States, the Mississippi River swelled its banks, causing the worst flood in Louisiana history. More than 10,000 people were forced from their homes.

• In local news, the post intelligence officer of Fort Benning requested that all persons on or around Fort Benning that had photographs of Japanese controlled territory to lend them to the government to assist in planning bombing missions and areas best suited for invasion.

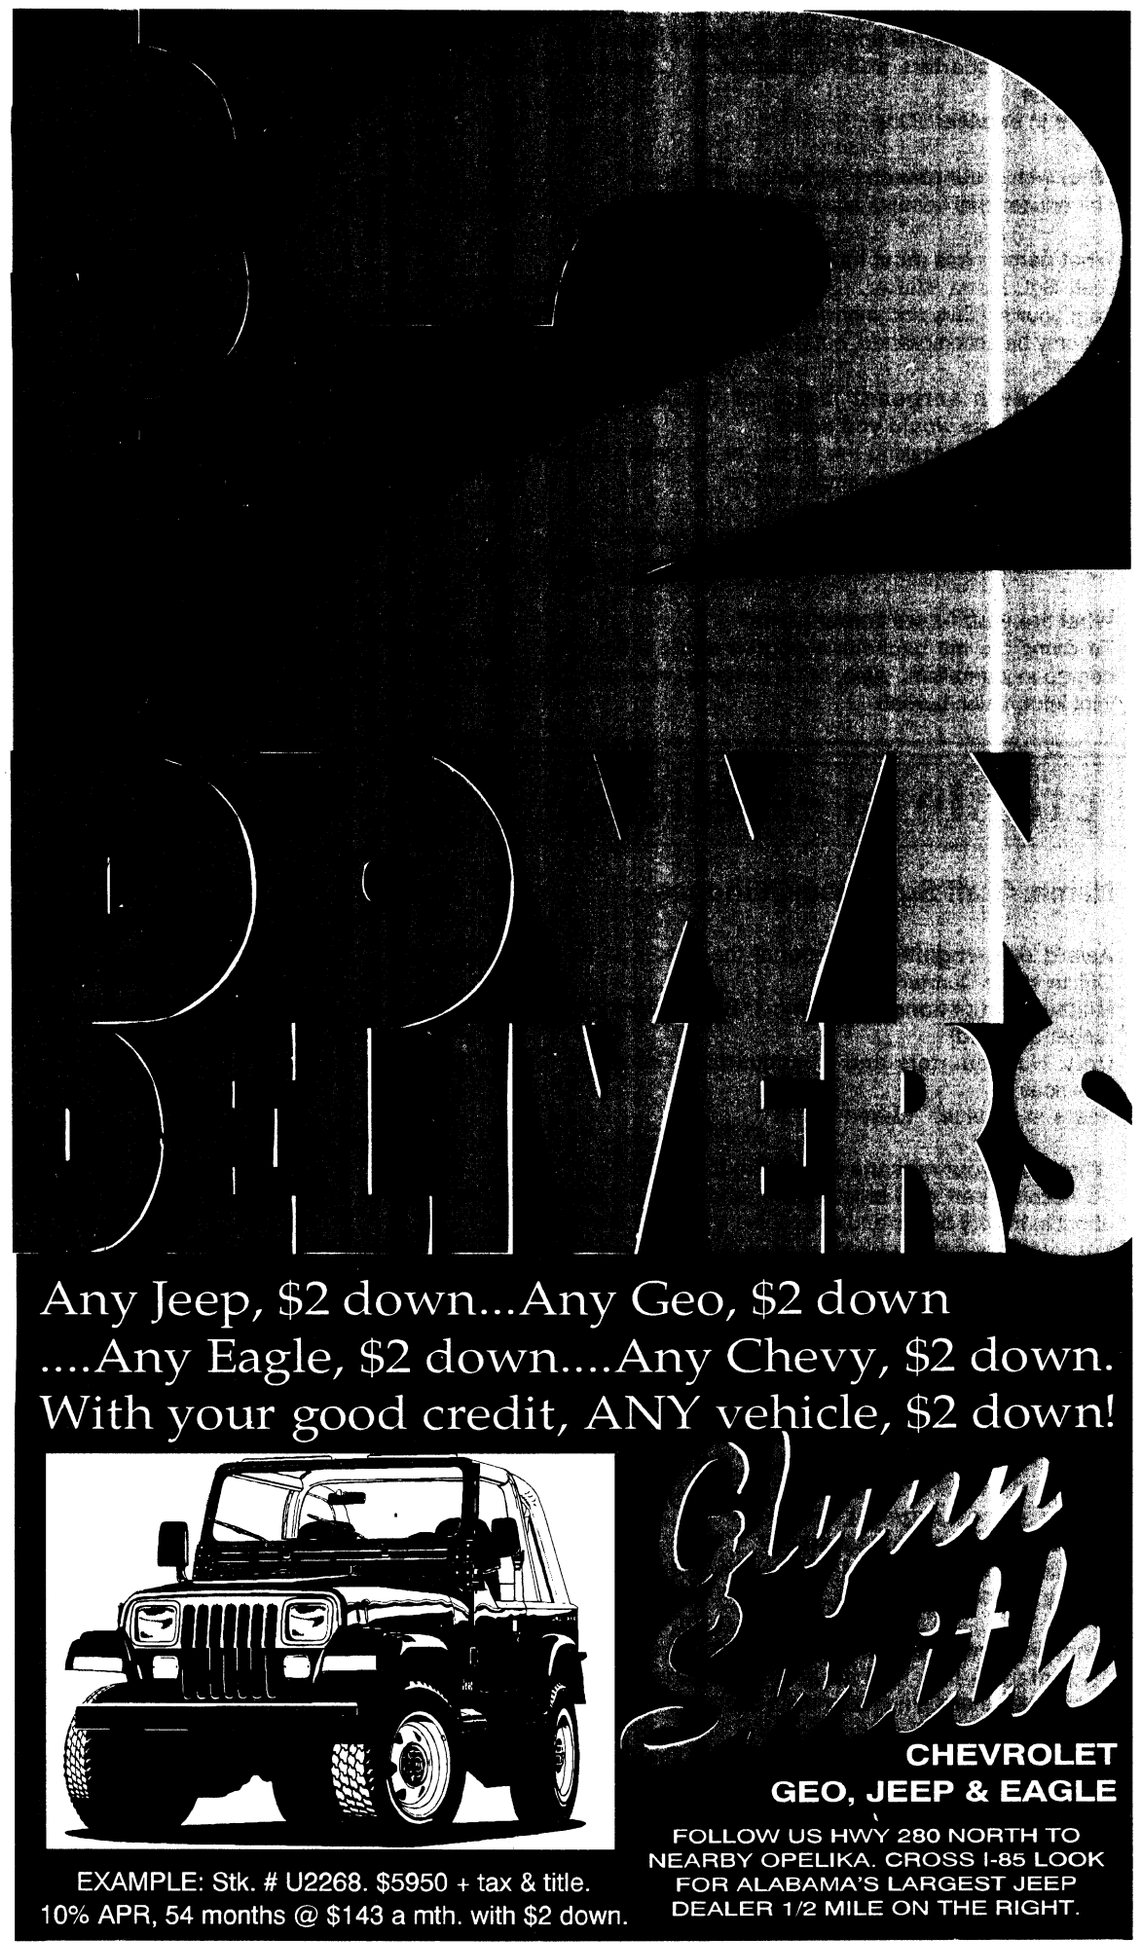
FAMILY CHILD CARE NEEDS YOUR SUPPORT

Thanks to Campbell's® Labels for Education Program, our Post can obtain much needed playground equipment FREE OF CHARGE. However, we need your help in achieving this goal which will benefit all Fort Benning children.

The Program, sponsored by Campbell Soup Company, is actually quite simple: From now until March 1, 1996, Fort Benning will be collecting labels from over 1000 Campbell-made products.



Our goals is to collect 345,650 labels during this program. We are looking to obtain the playground set pictured below. We have been collecting since January, 1995 and at this point are only at about 2% of the way to our goal. We need a lot of support to be able to have our playground by next summer. The projected location to build the playground is Russ Pond.

We're asking everyone to help by saving the labels and proofs of purchase on Campbell products. Please join us in this worthwhile effort.

There are label drop-off points at all the Community of Life buildings as well as the Post Commissary. Thank you in advance for your support and cooperation.

Students take first place with timely look at history

By Jan Wesner Childs
Special to The Bayonet©

Faith Middle School History Club members took a cue from today's headlines to interpret the past.

The effort earned a first place in district National History Day competition March 10 in LaGrange.

Club members Laura Cross, Hastings Galloway, James Wallace and Ami Wojdakowski presented a skit based on the competition theme, "conflict and compromise."

"In the newspaper we found out that (former President Jimmy Carter) had been helping many countries in conflict and compromise and since that was the theme, we thought he would be a good subject," Galloway, a seventh-grader, said.

Galloway and Wojdakowski were the performers, while Cross and Wallace worked as researchers.

The skit depicted two "WCNN News" broadcasters announcing that Carter had won the Nobel Peace Prize.

Two other club members, Stephanie Fry and Heather Ivey, won first place for their independent research papers.

All the winning students are first-year members of the History Club.

Team advisers are Lee Strickland, Cindy Givens, Libbie Kurinec and Mary Barnette. The teachers work together to emphasize different academic disciplines.

Members of the history team said they joined for different reasons. Some wanted the chance to perform. Others wanted to learn more about the past.

"I'm just really interested in what has gone on in different wars in the past and how our country has come to be what it is today," Wallace, an eighth-grader, said.

The team will go on to state competition April 22 at Clayton State College in Morrow, Ga.

profile in excellence

Name: Pfc. Judith Ginder

Award or recognition: School of the Americas Soldier of the Quarter
Military occupational specialty: 46Q (print journalist)
Unit: Headquarters and Headquarters Company, School of the Americas
Years in service: One

What were your reasons for joining the Army?
The educational benefits and on-the-job training in my career field.

What person has most influenced your career?
Staff Sgt. Marta Walker. She truly believes if you expect the most from your soldiers and motivate them to do their best, the mission will not only be accomplished, but accomplished well.

If you were sergeant major of the Army for a day, what improvements would you make?
I would work on making the quality of life better for everyone, paying particular attention to the single soldier.

Describe a memorable moment in your career.
My first full-blown, all-out interview with a very important person.

What are your future career plans?
To complete my bachelor's degree and continue with a master's degree in journalism. Also, to be assigned at some future point with a joint information bureau.

profile in excellence

Name: Staff Sgt. José Quiñones

Award or recognition: School of the Americas Noncommissioned Officer of the Quarter
Military occupational specialty: 11B 3V (infantryman, airborne- and ranger-qualified)
Unit: Headquarters and Headquarters Company, School of the Americas
Years in service: Eleven

What were your reasons for joining the Army?
To become part of a bigger team, and to do all the things I've read about in history books and to become a part of history.

Define your style of leadership.
I am strong-willed, hard but fair. I am afraid of no one, high-ranking or not.

What person has most influenced your career?
A command sergeant major from my previous unit — he is very motivated, and he is always involved with the NCOs and soldiers in his unit.

If you were sergeant major of the Army for a day, what improvements would you make?
I would work on quality of life for all soldiers, especially putting more money into building housing.

What were your reasons for choosing your MOS?
The infantry has had its grubby fingers in every conflict, and historically, there is no matching it to other branches.

Describe a memorable moment in your career.
My graduation from Ranger School.

What are your future career plans?
Go to and complete the Special Forces Assessment and Selection Course and the qualification course and become a physical therapist.

Look, listen, touch and 'go' — post educators find success in reaching all their students by targeting individual

Learning styles

... some people are visual learners while others need audio reinforcement. Some are tactile learners who enjoy hands-on activities, while students who are always "on the move" learn best kinesthetically

It's early afternoon at Stowers School, and children gather in small groups to manipulate colored clay, listen to tapes via headphones and to play interactive games like floor checkers or tic tac toe.

Though it may seem otherwise, these students in Deborah Dionne's class are on task as they focus on the day's language arts lesson — study of contractions.

These students are proving the theory that individual learning styles differ; children and adults learn best in one of four ways, according to Judy Archer, curriculum coordinator for the Fort Benning Schools.

Archer, who has researched learning styles since 1979 and later wrote a thesis on the subject, said some people are visual learners while others need audio reinforcement. Some are tactile learners who enjoy hands-on activities, while students who are always "on the move" learn best kinesthetically, she said.

Some of Dionne's students say molding clay into words helps them remember the contractions better, while others say hearing the sounds over and over via tapes or computers is best for them.

Still others find the physical movement associated with interactive games helpful as they quiz each other on words like "couldn't" and "won't" to earn the chance to maneuver large bean bags shaped like checkers into place.

Among this group, there are also "traditional" students like the youngster in wire-rim glasses who always finds a desk and pulls out pencils and books to reinforce the day's lesson, Dionne said.

Researchers, who sometimes lump kinesthetic and tactile learners into one category, say people learn primarily in one way while also having a secondary preference. The key to successful teaching is to offer the material in various ways so that students of all styles can understand and remember it, Archer said.

"We usually teach the way we learn. When we are aware of this, we can implement more balanced instruction to present information in new ways and to accommodate all students," said Archer, who has led training sessions in learning styles for Fort Benning educators.

Teacher training combined with hands-on learning and an emphasis on technology in the schools helps post educators present information in several ways so all students can experience classroom success, said Gail Wilson, director of staff development and a learning styles advocate.

"We are always looking for ways to help students succeed. After all, success breeds success," said Wilson, who as an education administrator and a former principal, encourages methods of fostering healthy self-esteem in all children.

Typically, schools in America have been structured for the traditional learners like the child in the wire rim-glasses who prefer a desk and a book over a game, Archer said.

However, research has shown people process information differently, and all students can learn given the right environment, according to Wilson.

Mary Matthews, sixth-grade science teacher at Faith Middle School, agrees.

Matthews, an advocate of learning styles education, presents information in more than one way so all students comprehend the lesson, she said.

For example, a recent study of space resulted in Matthews discussing the information, previewing it with an overhead projector, then turning her room into a giant solar system with students portraying planets and moons as they rotated around an imaginary sun.

"I bring in as many senses as I can," said Matthews. "The more ways I give information, the more likely they are to remember. I try to reach everybody's strengths."

"Our teachers are very accommodating to present information in new ways," Archer agreed. All post teachers have been trained in learning styles theory, and they implement the training in various ways that mesh with their individual teaching styles.

An emphasis on hands on teaching methods and technology in post schools covers all four learning styles, though some teachers have chosen to take it a step further, Wilson said.

For example, veteran teacher Sue Ann Dixon last year transformed her classroom into a comfortable lounge for learning.

"I told the students, 'If you like your desk, keep it,"' Dixon said.

She said all 25 students immediately cleared out their desks in favor of storage cubicles, and traded in notebooks for clipboards to more easily write while relaxing.

"I just love this, and so do they," she said as the youngsters lounged on aging sofas, rockers and bean bag chairs. One student found a large pillow and settled into an ancient claw-foot bathtub lined with soft carpet.

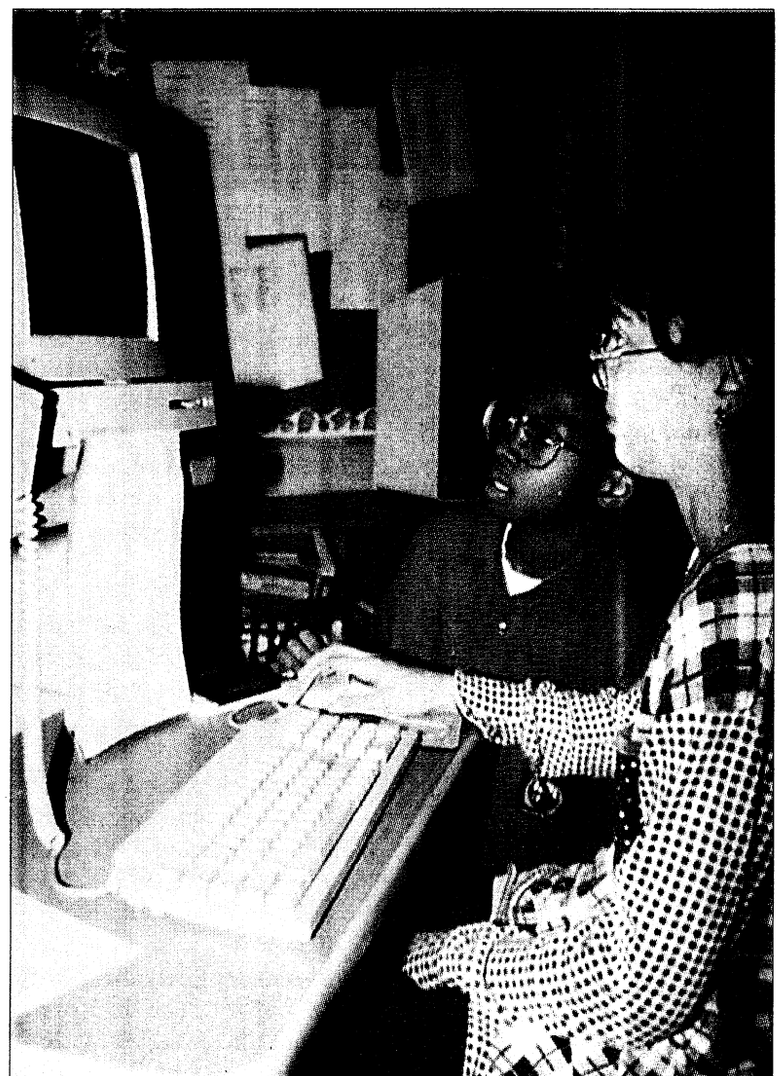
Though seemingly relaxed, these students were attentive as Dixon discussed an upcoming exam. Hands went up around the room as she quizzed them on math problems involving the cost of baseballs vs. footballs, and the trains that forever speed toward one another from opposite coasts of America while crossing various time zones.

Dixon said the proof this teaching style works is in the results; she saw an increase in national test scores after implementing the program, and sees higher classroom grades even though she is teaching from the same materials and using the same grading scale she has used for years.

Dionne agreed, saying her students are more focused on the lessons as they are given the opportunity to make choices.

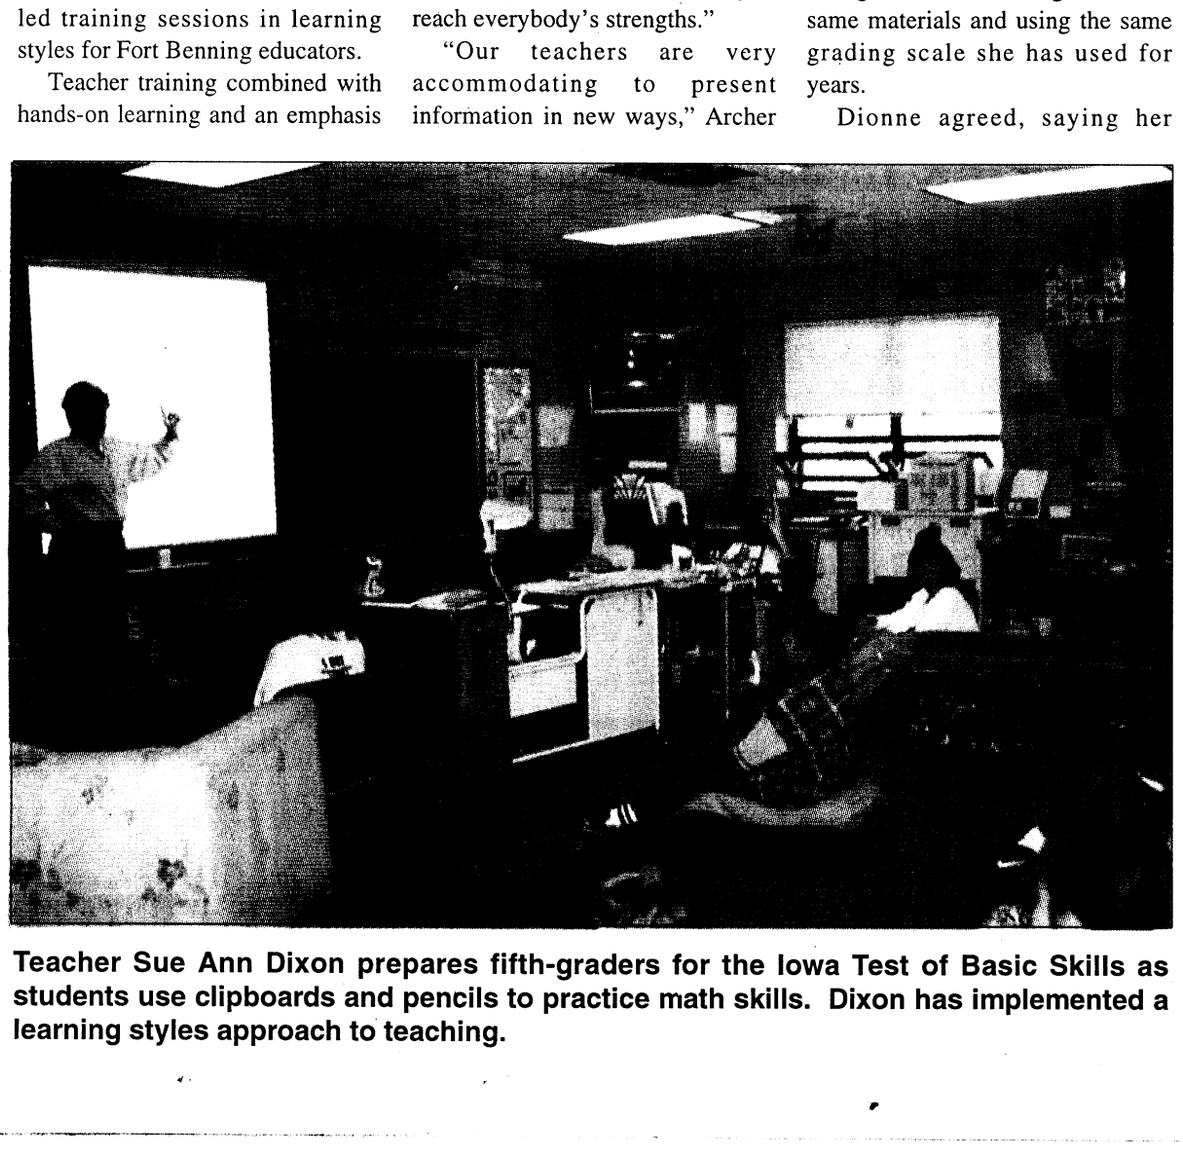
"They like having a choice in how they will reinforce instruction," she said as the students worked independently in small groups on that day's lesson.

Though the atmosphere is relaxed, it is actually structured and requires planning and organization, Dionne said.



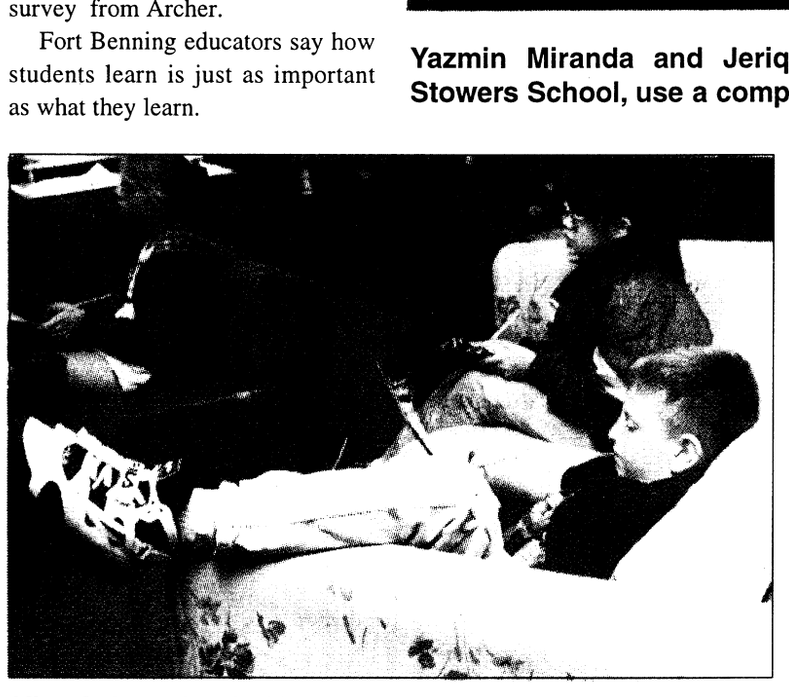
A side benefit is there are fewer discipline problems; students "don't want to lose the privilege of making their choices," she said.

Children as well as adults learn best when they are able to control the way material is presented, said Archer, who became interested in learning styles after noticing the high school dropout rate was exactly the same as the percentage of kinesthetic learners in the population. Schools were just not meeting the needs of these individuals, Archer said.

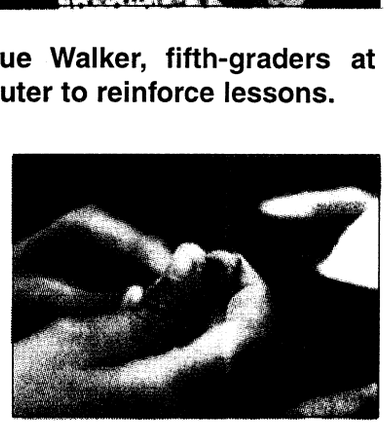


"We all have different strengths and some weaknesses. Learning styles helps us become aware of what those are so we can know our weak areas and build on our strengths, " she said.

To see just how many of each style are in a particular class, teachers sometimes request a survey from Archer.



Fort Benning educators say how students learn is just as important as what they learn.



Yazmin Miranda and Jerique Walker, fifth-graders at Stowers School, use a computer to reinforce lessons.

Teacher Sue Ann Dixon prepares fifth-graders for the Iowa Test of Basic Skills as students use clipboards and pencils to practice math skills. Dixon has implemented a learning styles approach to teaching.

Kim Schroeder (left), Lucas Mountain (foreground) and Ada Vasquez choose nontraditional seating as they prepare for a lesson.

Students who prefer kinesthetic and tactile learning often choose to reinforce classroom lessons by using modeling clay.

Cub Scouts conduct Pinewood Derby

By John H. Miller
Cub Scout Pack 271

Cub Scout Pack 271 from White Elementary School had its annual Pinewood Derby Jan. 28.

It began with Scouts registering and weighing their cars. Scouts earned ribbons by den for appearance and by pack for overall best car design and best pain design.

The Scouts raced their cars in a double elimination race. Forty-eight cars started the race. Two hours later only four remained.

Scouts received trophies for first, second, third and fourth place at the winner's circle. The smell of fuel and burning rubber permeated the building.

The following Scouts received trophies:

First place: Gary Baine, Tiger Cubs (first grade)

Second place: Jon Rutledge, Webelos I (fourth grade)

Third place: Joshua Napier, Wolf (second grade)

Fourth place: Jason Byrne, Bears (third grade)

Labels can help build playground

Family Child Care

Organizers need soup labels to purchase playground equipment for Russ Pond.

Only 2 percent of the 345,650 Campbell's Soup Company labels needed have been collected.

The drive is part of the Campbell's Labels for Education program and was launched in January by the Family Child Care providers at Fort Benning.

Labels from more than 1,000 Campbell's products can be redeemed for educational equipment and materials.

Campbell's products include: anything with the company's label, Marie's, Mrs. Paul's, Swanson, V-8, Early California, Franco-American, Vlasic, Pepperidge Farm and Prego.

The goal is to collect enough labels to trade for the playground equipment.

Only 5,000 of the 345,650 labels needed have been collected. The drive ends March 1.

There are label drop-off points at all community of life buildings and the Commissary.

Many of the child-care providers will accept labels. Their homes can be identified by the yellow rainbows in the windows.

The Family Child Care providers are also looking for volunteers to help distribute fliers about the program, trim and remove labels from cans, and count and sort labels.

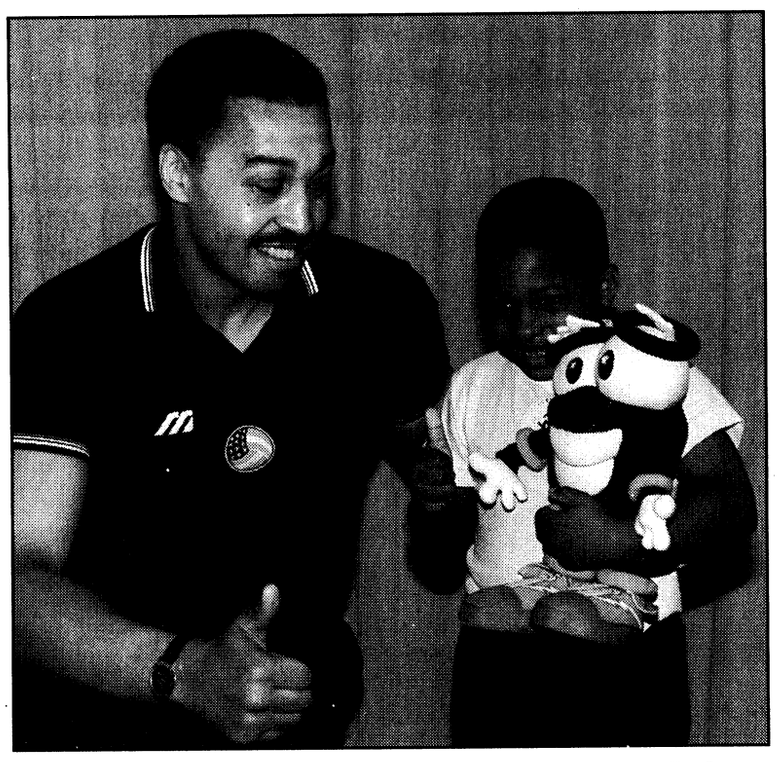
Be ACE students, kids told

By Jerrie Macintire
Special to The Bayonet©



Wilson students got a dose of Olympic spirit March 31 as speakers involved with the 1996 games encouraged them to embrace the post school's "ACE" program of Attitude, Commitment and Excellence.

Amid a stage decorated with the five colored interlocking Olympic rings, students hosted a parade of nations and also displayed flags depicting the various Olympic sports.

Coordinated by Ann Spencer, the program included all classes in the school, many of which sang, introduced speakers, or participated in the parade.

Retired Maj. Marcus Alexander and champion wrestler Sgt. Shon Lewis discussed the upcoming Olympic and Paralympic games in Atlanta scheduled for 1996, and encouraged students to develop discipline and excellence in their own daily lives.

Lewis, a soldier with HHC, 29th Infantry Regt., spoke of how his early discipline led him to two national wrestling championships in a row and landed him a position on the Olympic wrestling team.

Jerrie Macintire/Special to The Bayonet

Retired Maj. Marcus Alexander and 5-year-old D.J. Jackson give a thumbs up for the Olympics Day .

The Fort Benning soldier, who is also the Army Athlete of the Year, discussed how his short- and long- term goals as a child helped him in his career as an infantryman and a champion wrestler.

Alexander, wearing the official polo shirt of the 1984 United States gold medal volleyball team, discussed how motivation and enthusiasm can overcome seemingly insurmountable odds.

"Attitude is everything. These players were willing to be bold," he said of the 1984 team, which edged out the favorites to win the gold medal in an upset victory.

He spoke of how players embraced the Olympic spirit of "swifter, higher, stronger," and of how Wilson students "can bring this magic to your everyday life."

"The magic is already there," he said as students gave the thumbs up signal for their "ACE" program.

Borrowing a line from a wealthy businessman, Alexander said, "Since you're going to be thinking anyway, think big."

5th-grader designs schools logo

The Fort Benning School System will soon have a new logo as a result of a Design A Logo contest sponsored by the system.

A panel of judges selected one overall winner and one winner from each of the seven Fort Benning Schools.

"We have been talking about having a new logo for the school system, and decided that the best way to come up with ideas was to ask for as many ideas as possible," said Gail Wilson, director of staff development. "When it was time for the judging, we had more than 100 entries from students and adults."

The panel of judges were given specific instructions to look through the entries for ideas, to pick the best entry from each school, and to pick an overall winner for a grand prize.

The winner from each school had a copy of The History of Fort Benning placed in the school library in her honor. Each book, donated by The Advertiser Company, contract printer of The Bayonet, has a label on the inside cover recognizing the school's winner, her parents and teachers. The overall winner also received a $50 gift certificate from Peachtree Mall.

Hannah McCarthy, a fifth-grade student at Dexter School was the overall winner. Her parents are first Lt. Daniel and Becky McCarthy, and her teachers are Audrey Leanza and Carroll Thebaud.

Toni Snincsak, a third-grade student, was the winner from Loyd School. Her parents are Sgt. Anthony and Deborah Snincsak, and her teachers are Audrey Leanza and Katherine Walker.

Katie Duke was the winner from White School. She is in the fifth-grade. Her parents are Lt. Col. William and Deborah Duke, and her teacher is Wanda Person.

Laura Cross and Jennifer Byrne created the winning drawing at Faith School. They are both eighth-grade students. Their parents are Col. Gerald and Barbara Cross and Lt. Col. Jay and Lanita Byrne.

Faith Hessenius was the winner at Stowers School. She is in Susan Lapp's fourth-grade class. Her parents are Capt. William and Deborah Hessenius.

Jessica Richards was the winner from McBride School. She is in Branda Lynem's third-grade class. Her parents are Staff Sgt. Michael and Marian Richards.

Along with the entries from students, several adults turned in drawings and ideas. Receiving special recognition for their ideas were Elaine Parker, Marcus Alexander, Staff Sgt. John Howard and Anne Shaw.

Jesus

Jerusalem entry had air of parade

USAIC Chaplain Office

"Daddy, make 'em run faster; I like to hear their canteens rattle!"

"It was 35 degrees, but we marched in the snow for the Christmas parade."

"The confetti was six inches deep on the parade route, and it will take the sanitation department all day tomorrow to clean up the mess."

reflections

Everyone who has been involved in parades has a story to tell, and most of us enjoy watching or participating in a parade or a military review.

Although it was not officially a parade, Jesus' public entry into Jerusalem on the Sunday preceding his crucifixion had the air of a parade — a time of celebration.

On the Sabbath, Jesus had commanded two of his disciples to go into the village and obtain for him the colt of an ass that was tied at a certain house. This colt had never been sat upon. They did as he said. When they brought the colt back to Jesus, they put some of their clothes on the colt. Jesus then sat upon it and began his entry into Jerusalem.

As Jesus rode, great crowds joined the procession. They cut branches off trees and spread the branches and their clothes along the road. "And the multitudes that went before (Jesus) and that followed cried, 'Hosanna, to the Son of David: Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord; Hosanna in the highest." (Matthew 21:9, KJV) All Jerusalem was moved by this entry and wanted to know who Jesus was. Many members of the crowd said that he was Jesus the prophet of Nazareth.

This joyous and festive event was the beginning of Palm Sunday as we call it. This marked the beginning of the last week of Jesus' earthly life, or what we know as Holy Week. Only four days later, after a busy week of teaching, Jesus was betrayed, tried and crucified on the fifth day.

On that lonely and difficult Thursday night, which we call Maundy Thursday, and during the crucifixion on Friday, where were the parade-goers? Where was the crowd that had been so joyous on Sunday? No doubt, many of the same people who were "in the parade" on Sunday were in the crowd at the trial. They cried "Crucify him!" They were, no doubt, at the crucifixion on Friday, muttering to themselves about "law and order" and "just desserts" and "people who make a spectacle of themselves."

What can we learn from this? Very often we are quick to jump on the band wagon and enjoy the celebration. However, when the going gets tough and there are religious principles that we need to stand up for, we bail out and become part of the crowd. We stand by and watch the action. We fail to stand up for what we know is the right thing.

As we approach Holy Week, let us reflect on the things we celebrate and what we do following the celebrations. Let us resolve to be steadfast, stand by our principles and do the things we know are right.

Female rabbi joins community

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Fort Benning is now home to the Army's only active duty female rabbi.

Determined to "be all she can be," Chaplain (Capt.) Chana Timoner of the 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, says she is crazy about the Army.

"There is no other job like it," she said. "It is both physically and mentally challenging, and it is never the same from day to day."

Although her mother was in the Womens' Army Corps in World War II, a life in the military was not Timoner's choice from the beginning.

"I have always been a very spiritual person, so deciding to dedicate my life to my religion was just an outcropping of my natural inclinations," she said.

"I'm very proud of my 5,000-year-old heritage and I take the greatest pleasure in serving God and Judaism. I want to spread that joy to other Jews."

After serving a term in the Army Reserve, she joined the Army Jan. 13, 1993, to try three years of active duty to see what it would be like.

"I love the Army," she said. "It is intellectually challenging because I must draw upon all my knowledge. But best of all, it is personally very, very enriching because of all the different people I get to meet from various religious, social and economic backgrounds. It is wonderful to be able to meet and talk to all of these people."

Timoner said she also enjoys the chance to continue educating herself with different courses and hopes to attend the Army Marriage Ministry Program.

"Education has always been important to me," Timoner said. "My father, who encouraged me to go to college, used to always tell me that what I didn't carry in my head I would carry on my shoulders."

She earned her bachelor's degree in psychology from South Connecticut State University and is currently working on her doctoral dissertation from the New York Theological seminary.

Timoner became a rabbi in 1989 after completing a five-year program at the Academy for Jewish Religion in Manhattan.

"It is unusual for a female to be a rabbi, and people were suspicious of me at first," she said. "People come to know you after awhile and they see your level of competence. That's not something you can fake or hide. It was my dedication that carried me through."

Timoner ministers to students in the Infantry Officer Basic Course and Officer Basic Course as well as the small group of Jewish soldiers on post.

The weekly Bible study session she conducts at the 11th Regimental Chapel Sundays at 9:30 a.m. is a good way for soldiers to come together for faith and fellowship, she said.

"It's kind of a refuge from the storm, especially for the trainees who have to put up with a hard routine during the week," she said. "It's a place where they can relax and just learn and have fun. I don't wear a uniform because rank is not important in such a setting. We are all equal before God.

"I encourage everyone to go to a house of prayer and to make God a part of their lives in whatever way they wish."

Married for 25 years to Julian, a chiropractor and kinesthesiologist, Timoner has two children, Aviva, 23, and Samson, 20.

Passover Seder — The Fort Benning Jewish community will have its Passover Seder April 14 at 7:30 p.m. at Regimental Chapel, Building 3220, on Sand Hill. Reservations are required.

A $7 donation to the Fort Benning Consolidated Chaplains Fund is requested to cover the cost of the Seder.

Call Rabbi Arthur Rutberg at 545-1314 or 568-6154 no later than Tuesday for reservations.

Maundy Thursday Worship Service — There will be a program of choral music and scripture readings and a service of Holy Communion at the Infantry Center Chapel Thursday at 7 p.m.

Good Friday worship service — There will be a memorial service for Jesus of Nazareth at Sightseeing Road Chapel April 14 at noon.

For more information, contact Chaplain Steedley, 545-2050 or Chaplain Brown, 545-2169.

Good Friday service — The chaplains of the Infantry Training Brigade will present a Good Friday Service April 14 at the Sand Hill Theater, titled "Were You There?"

It is a dramatic and illustrated presentation of the events leading to and culminating in the crucifixion, which will leave you at the foot of the cross. Special features will include local Christian recording artists Denise Daniels and Jonathan Moore, plus the ITB Soldiers Choir. Service times are 7 and 8:15 p.m.

Easter Sunrise Service — The annual postwide Easter Sunrise Service will be at Doughboy Stadium Easter Sunday, April 16 at 7 a.m.

The speaker will be Chaplain Herbert E. Kitchens, the U.S. Army Infantry Center chaplain. The Infantry Band, the Infantry Chorus and the Infantry Center Chapel Choir will provide special music. The public is invited.

Easter Sunday worship services — In addition to the Easter Sunrise Service, Easter worship services at the Infantry Center Chapel will be at 9:30 and 11 a.m.

Vacation Bible School — Vacation Bible School will be conducted at Wilson School from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. June 19 to 23. Parents can make plans now for children to attend. Volunteers are needed.

To volunteer, call Bill Putman at the Religious Education Center,

Sunrise service at 7 a.m. Sunday

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The postwide Easter Sunrise Service will be at Doughboy Stadium Sunday at 7 a.m.

An annual event, the sunrise service is a Christian community celebration of the resurrection of Jesus Christ, according to Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Kerry Steedley, chief of Chapel Centers and Religious Activities.

The speaker will be Chaplain (Col.) Herbert E. Kitchens, the U.S. Army Infantry Center chaplain.

During Desert Storm, Kitchens became known as the "singing chaplain," Steedley said. While assigned as the division chaplain for the 101st Airborne Division, Kitchens sang and played guitar during worship services in the combat setting.

Chaplain (Col.) Herbert E. Kitchens will be the speaker at the Easter Sunrise Service.

The Infantry Band and the Infantry Chorus will provide special music during the sunrise service.

Also, soloist Vangy Bibb will perform "Because He Lives," and Capt. Steve Russell, vocalist and guitarist and a small-group instructor with the 1st Battalion (Infantry Officer Advanced Course), 11th Infantry Regiment, will perform "He's Alive."

The public is invited. In case of inclement weather, the service will be moved to the Infantry Center Chapel, Building 101.

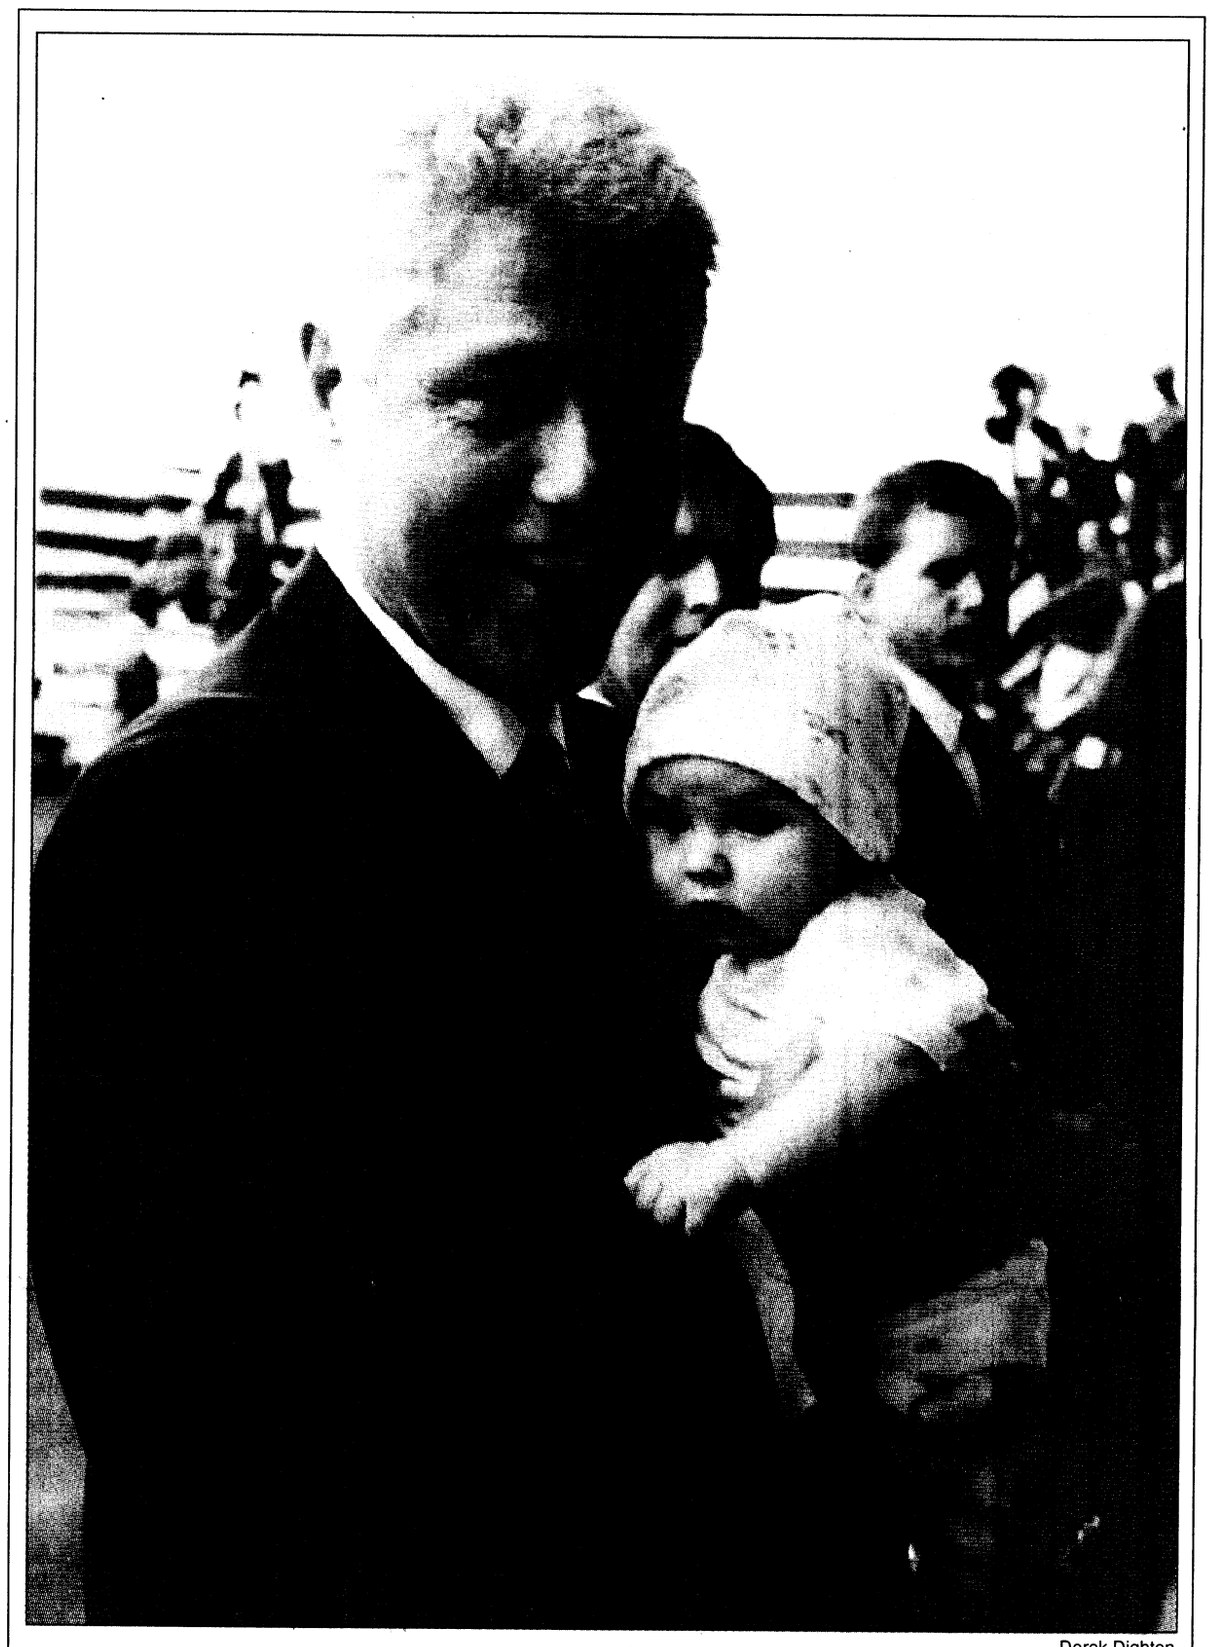
CG to host Easter egg hunt, spring festival

By Lisa M. Hibbert
Bayonet staff writer

The annual Easter egg hunt and spring festival will be Saturday from 10 a.m. to noon at Riverside, home of Fort Benning Commanding General Maj. Gen. John W. Hendrix and his wife, Cheri.

Two prizes will be given out to children who collect the most eggs in each of the four age groups. The age groups are:

- 18 months to 36 months
- 4 years old to 5 years old
- 6 years old to 8 years old
- 9 years old to 10 years old



The annual event will kick off the Month of the Military Child at Fort Benning. McGruff, the crime dog, and Blinky, the talking car, will be on hand to educate children.

An "astro jump" and an "American Legion Train" will be available for the children to ride.

There will also be a puppet show and clowns performing balloon tricks.

Vendors will be giving out free cola and cotton candy.

Festivities are open to the children of active and retired military and Department of Defense employees.

Presidential visit

During a visit to Fort Benning Wednesday, President Bill Clinton holds Joseph Phillip King, 8-week-old son of Spc. Joseph D. King of Company E, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment, and his wife, Mindy. Clinton landed at Lawson Army Air Field, greeted post and city officials and soldiers and civilians, then headed to Warm Springs, Ga., to pay tribute to Franklin Delano Roosevelt on the 50th anniversary of Roosevelt's death.

Tot Town needs a sponsor

Private child-care facility is looking for new contractor

Child Development Services

Tot Town, a private organization authorized to provided child care on post, is looking for a new sponsor.

Daughters of the United States Army recently announced it will stop sponsoring the Tot Town Child Development Center this summer.

Child Development Services Coordinator Jennifer Williams said Tuesday that the Directorate of Community Activities is looking for a new sponsor for the facility. A private contractor might be brought in, Williams said.

She said the plan is for a new sponsor to take over before June 15. Williams said child care will continue to be provided.

"Patrons need not panic," she said. "The only thing that would change would be sponsorship. Every attempt will be made to ensure a minimum of disruption for patrons."

The Fort Benning installation command is well aware of the need for hourly child care, Williams said, and is committed to providing such care for families.

Tot Town has provided child-care services to soldiers' families for 37 years, Williams said.

Patrons with questions or concerns about Tot Town or alternative care options can call the CDS Central Registration Office at 544-1623 or the CDS Coordinator Office at 545-5246.

AUSA ready to kick off Military Appreciation Week

By Ruth J. Spaller
Bayonet staff writer

The Association of the United States Army will get an early start on Military Appreciation Week this year by sponsoring a kick-off breakfast at 7:30 a.m. May 15 at the Main NCO Club.

The breakfast will be the first in a week-long series of events and activities that will lead up to Armed Forces Day May 20.

Traditionally, AUSA and local businesses and community organizations join together during Military Appreciation Week to sponsor activities and events designed to enhance morale and share the spirit of cooperation enjoyed between Fort Benning and the local communities.

This year, AUSA will be providing the overall support for most of the sports competitions that will take place throughout the week.
